22 ¶ Of the children of Simeon, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, those that were numbered of them, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

23 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Simeon, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

24 ¶ Of the children of Gad, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

25 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Gad, were forty and five thousand six hundred and fifty.

26 ¶ Of the children of Judah, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

27 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Judah, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

Far more than any other tribe, in accomplishing of Jacob's prophecy, Gen. xlix.

28 ¶ Of the children of Issachar, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

29 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Issachar, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 ¶ Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the children of Ephraim, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

Above eight thousand more than Manasseh, towards the accomplishment of that promise, Gen. xlviii. 20, which the devil in vain attempted to defeat by stirring up the men of Gath against them, 1 Chron. vii. 21, 22.

34 ¶ Of the children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

35 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

36 ¶ Of the children of Benjamin, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

37 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Benjamin, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

The smallest number, except one, though Benjamin had more immediate children than any of his brethren, Gen. xlii. 21 ; whereas Dan had but one immediate son, Gen. xlii. 23, yet now his number is the biggest but one of all the tribes, and is almost double to that of Benjamin. Such great and strange changes God easily can, and frequently doth, make in families, 1 Sam. ii. 5. And therefore let none boast or please themselves too much in their numerous offspring.

38 ¶ Of the children of Dan, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

39 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Dan, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

40 ¶ Of the children of Asher, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

41 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Asher, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

42 ¶ Of the children of Naphtali, throughout their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

44 ¶ These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men : each one was for the house of his fathers.

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel ;

46 Even all they that were numbered were ^{h Ex. 26. 26. Nov Ex. 17. 37. ch. 2. 32. & 26. 51.} six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But ^{i ch. 2. 33. See ch. 3. & 4. & 26. 37. 1 Chron. 6. & 21. 6.} the Levites after the tribe of their fathers were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 ^{k ch. 7. 33. & 26. 62.} Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel :

Because they were not generally to go out to war, which was the thing principally eyed in this muster, ver. 3, 20, 45, but were to attend upon the service of the tabernacle, and therefore are reserved to another distinct muster, Numb. iii. 15 ; iv. 2, &c. And lest this should be thought to be designed and done through Moses's ambition to give his own tribe the pre-eminence, he assures them it was done by God's express command.

50 ^{l Ex. 26. 21. ch. 3. 7, 8. & 4. 15, 25. 26, 37, 38.} But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it : they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof ; and they shall minister unto it, ^{m ch. 3. 23. 29, 35, 38.} and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

The tabernacle of testimony ; so called here, and Exod. xxxviii. 21, because it was made chiefly for the sake of the ark of the testimony, 2 Sam. vii. 2, which is oft called the testimony, as hath been observed before.

51 ^{n ch. 16. 17. 21.} And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down : and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up : ^{o ch. 3. 16. 28. & 16. 22.} and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

The stranger elsewhere is one of another nation, here one of another tribe, one no Levite. That cometh nigh, so as to do the offices mentioned ver. 50.

52 And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, ^{p ch. 2. 2, 34.} every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

No wrath, to wit, from God, who is very tender of his worship, and will not suffer the profaners of it to go unpunished ; whose wrath is called simply wrath by way of eminency, as the most terrible kind of wrath. Shall keep the charge, i. e. shall suffer no stranger to approach through curiosity, or any other motive.

54 And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

CHAP. II.

Order for the marches and camping of the tribes, 1, 2. Judah on the east side, with Issachar and Zebulun, who led the van, 3—9. Reuben on the south side, with Simeon and Gad; then the tabernacle was to follow, the Levites camping round it, 10—17. Ephraim on the west side, with Manasseh and Benjamin, 18—24. Dan on the north quarter, with Asher and Naphtali, 25—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

^a ch. 1. 52. 2^a Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: †^b far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

By his own standard, or ensign, by that to which he is allotted by the following order. It is manifest that there were four great standards or ensigns, which here follow, distinguished by their colours or figures, or otherwise; also that there were other particular ensigns belonging to each of their father's houses or families, as is here said. Far off; partly out of reverence to God and his worship, and the portion allotted to it, and partly for caution, lest their vicinity to it might tempt them to make too near approaches to it. It is supposed they were at two thousand cubits distance from it, which was the space between the people and the ark, Josh. iii. 4, and it is not improbable, because the Levites encamped round about it between them and the tabernacle.

3 And on the east side toward the rising of the sun shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch throughout their armies: and ^c Nahshon the son of Amminadab shall be captain of the children of Judah.

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.
Issachar and Zebulun were Leah's two youngest sons, and therefore would more contentedly submit to Judah.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 Then the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

8 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand and fourscore thousand and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies.

^d ch. 10. 14. ^d These shall first set forth.

This was the most numerous camp, because they marched first, as being placed on the east and going towards the east, and because they guarded the sanctuary.

10 ¶ On the south side shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben according to their armies: and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be Elizur the son of Shedeur.

Reuben being the first-born, was the leader of the second camp.

11 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

12 And those which pitch by him shall be the tribe of Simeon: and the captain of the children of Simeon shall be Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

13 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

14 Then the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph the son of Reuel.

^{ch. 1. 14. & 7. 42. & 10. 20.}
Called Deuel, Numb. i. 14, the Hebrew letters daleth and resh being very like, and oft changed, as appears by comparing Gen. x. 3, with 1 Chron. i. 6; Gen. xxxvi. 26, 38, with 1 Chron. i. 41, 50.

15 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were an hundred thousand and fifty and one thousand and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies. ^e And they shall set forth in the second rank.

17 ¶ Then the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward with the camp of the Levites in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place by their standards.

In the midst of the camp, which is not to be understood strictly or exactly, but largely; for in their march they were divided, and part of that tribe marched next after Judah, Numb. x. 17, and the other part exactly in the midst of the camp.

18 ¶ On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Amminud.

Ephraim is here preferred before his brother, according to the prophecy, Gen. xlviii. 19, 20.

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And by him shall be the tribe of Manasse: and the captain of the children of Manasse shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

21 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

22 Then the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideon.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies. ^g And they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 ¶ The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Abiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran.

28 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

29 ¶ Then the tribe of Naphtali: and the captain of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan.

30 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

31 All they that were numbered in the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred. ^h They shall go hindmost with their standards.

The strongest camp next after Judah, and therefore he comes in the rear, as Judah marched in the front, that the tabernacle might be best guarded where there was most danger.

32 ¶ These are those which were numbered of the children of Israel by the house of their fathers: 'all those that were numbered of the camps throughout their hosts were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

33 But ^k the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; 'as the LORD commanded Moses.

Because their warfare was of another kind.

34 And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses: 'so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

By their standards, i. e. each of them under his principal standard.

CHAP. III.

The genealogy of Moses, Aaron, and his sons, Nadab and Abihu, 1—4. The Levites are joined with them in the administration of the tabernacle, 5—10, instead of all the first-born, 11—13. The three families of the Levites numbered, 14—39. The first-born numbered, 40—43. Being more than the Levites, some of them are redeemed, and the money given to Aaron and his sons, 44—51.

1491. THESE also are the generations of Aaron and Moses in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

These which follow in this chapter are the generations. i. e. either, 1. The things done by them; as the word generation is sometimes used, as Gen. vi. 9; xxv. 19; xxxvii. 2. Or rather, 2. The kindred or family, for that is the subject of this chapter, and not their events or actions. Object. Aaron's family indeed is here mentioned, but not Moses's family. Ans. Moses's family and children are here included under the general name of the Amramite, ver. 27, which includes all the children and grandchildren of Amram, the persons only of Aaron and Moses being excepted. And the generations of Moses are thus obscurely mentioned, because they were but common Levites, the priesthood being given solely to Aaron's posterity, whence Aaron is here put before Moses, who elsewhere is commonly named after him. In the day that the Lord spake with Moses in Mount Sinai: this seems to be added, because Nadab and Abihu, mentioned ver. 2, were then alive, though dead at the time of taking this account.

2 And these are the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the ^a firstborn, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, ^b the priests which were anointed, [†] whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 ^c And Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office in the sight of Aaron their father.

In the time of Aaron's life, as this phrase is taken, Numb. iii. 4; see also P'sal. lxxii. 5, 17; and under their father's inspection and direction, and as their father's servants or ministers in the priest's office; for servants are oft described by this phrase of being, or standing, or serving in the sight or presence of their master.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 ^d Bring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

Present them; offer them to the Lord for his special service. This was promised to them before, and now actually conferred upon them.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do ^e the service of the tabernacle.

His charge, i. e. Aaron's charge, or those things which are committed principally to Aaron's care and oversight, and under him and his direction to the Levites. Of the whole congregation, i. e. of all the sacrifices and services which are due to the Lord from all the people, and because all the people could not and might not perform them, or at least divers of them, in their own persons, therefore they were to be performed by some particular persons in their name and stead; formerly by the first-born, Numb. viii. 16, and now by the Levites. See Numb. i. 53; xvi. 9. Before the tabernacle, emphatically; not within the tabernacle, for the care of these things within the holy place was appropriated to the priests, as the care of the most holy place was peculiar to the high priest.

8 And they shall keep all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

The charge of the children of Israel; those things which all the children of Israel are in their several places and stations obliged to take care of, though not in their persons, yet by others in their stead.

9 And 'thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

Given unto him, to attend upon him and observe his orders, and ease him of part of his burden in things hereafter mention'd.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, ^g and they shall wait on their priest's office: ^h and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

They shall wait, in their own persons, not by the Levites. The stranger, i. e. every one who is of another family than Aaron's, yea, though he be a Levite. See Numb. i. 53; xvi. 40. That cometh nigh, to wit, to execute any part of the priest's office.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, ⁱ I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

Instead of all the first-born, who were God's propriety by right of redemption, Exod. xiii. 12, and to whom the administration of holy things was formerly committed, which now was taken away from them, either because they had forfeited this privilege by joining with the rest of their brethren in the idolatrous worship of the calf, or because they were to be mainly concerned in the distribution and management of the inheritances which now they were going to possess, and therefore could not be at leisure to attend upon the service of the sanctuary; which made it fit that this work should be committed to other hands. And God would not commit it to some other persons in each tribe, which might be an occasion of idolatry, confusion, division, and contempt of sacred things, but to one distinct tribe, which might be entirely devoted to that service, and particularly to the tribe of Levi; partly, out of his respect to Moses and Aaron, branches of this tribe; partly, as a recompence of their zeal for God and against idolaters; see Exod. xxxii. 26, 29; Deut. xxxiii. 9; and partly, because it was the smallest of the tribes, and therefore most likely to find both employment in and maintenance for the work.

13 Because ^kall the firstborn are mine; ^lfor on the day that I smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be: I am the LORD.

Who may appoint whom I please for my service.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying, 15 Number the children of Levi after the house of their fathers, by their families: ^mevery male from a month old and upward shalt thou number them.

From a month old, because at that time the first-born, in whose stead the Levites came, Numb. viii. 16, were offered to God, Luke ii. 22, and to be redeemed, Numb. xviii. 16. And from that time the Levites were consecrated to God, and were, as soon as they were capable, to be instructed in their work. Elsewhere they are numbered from twenty-five years old, when they were entered as novices to part of their work, Numb. viii. 24; and from thirty years old, when they were completely admitted to their whole office.

16 And Moses numbered them according to the ⁿword of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 ^oAnd these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; ^pLibni, and Shimei.

19 And the sons of Kohath by their families; ^qAmram, and Izechar, Hebron, and Uzziel.

20 ^rAnd the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli, and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites according to the house of their fathers.

21 Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 ^rThe families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

25 And ^sthe charge of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation shall be 'the tabernacle, and ^tthe tent, ^uthe covering thereof, and ^vthe hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

The tabernacle; not the boards, which belonged to Merari, ver. 36, but the ten curtains mentioned Exod. xxvi. 1. The tent, to wit, the curtains of goats' hair. The covering thereof, i. e. the coverings of rams' skins and badgers' skins. See Numb. iv. 25.

26 And ^wthe hangings of the court, and ^xthe curtain for the door of the court, ^ywhich is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and ^zthe cords of it for all the service thereof.

The cords, by which the tabernacle was fastened to the pins, and stretched out, Exod. xxxv. 18.

27 ¶ And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izecharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

This family had many privileges above the others; of that were Moses and Aaron, and all the priests; they had the chief place about the tabernacle, and the care of the most holy things here below, ver. 31; and in the land of Canaan they had twenty-three cities, which were almost as many as both their brethren received. See Josh. xxi.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

Keeping, or keepers, &c., i. e. appointed for that work, as soon as they were capable of it. Of the sanctuary, i. e. of those holy things contained in or nearly belonging to the sanctuary, expressed ver. 31.

29 ^aThe families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And ^btheir charge shall be 'the ark, and ^cthe table, and ^dthe candlestick, and ^ethe altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and ^fthe hanging, and all the service thereof.

The hanging, which covered the most holy place, for all other hangings belonged to the Gershonites. All the service thereof, i. e. all the other furniture belonging to it, of which see Numb. iv. 7, 9, 14.

32 And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

Eleazar shall be chief, next under the high priest; whence he is called the second priest, 2 Kings xxv. 18; and in case of the high priest's absence by sickness or other necessary occasions, he was to perform his work, 1 Kings iv. 4; and he had a superiority over all the rest of the priests and Levites. Over the chief of the Levites, i. e. over those three persons, who were each the chief of their several families; of whom see here, ver. 24, 31, 35.

33 ¶ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

38 ¶ ^aBut those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, ^{even} before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, ^okeeping the charge of the sanctuary ^pfor the charge of the children of Israel; and ^qthe stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

q ver. 10.

For the charge of the children of Israel; either in their stead, that charge which they were obliged to keep either by themselves, or by others appointed by them, if God had not committed it to those; or for their good, and service, and benefit; for their preservation, as the word may be rendered.

39 ^rAll that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand.

Object. But if the particular numbers, mentioned ver. 22, 28, 34, be put together, they make exactly 22,300. Answer. The odd 300 are omitted here, either according to the use of the Holy Scripture, where in so great numbers small sums are commonly neglected, or because they were the first-born of the Levites, and therefore belonged to God already, and so could not be given to him again instead of the other first-born. See Lev. xxvii. 26. If this number of first-born seem very small to come from 22,000 Levites, it must be considered, that only such first-born are here named as were males, and such as continued in their parents' families, not such as had erected new families of their own. Add to this, that God so ordered things by his wise providence for divers weighty reasons, that this tribe should be much the least of all the tribes, as is evident by comparing the numbers of the other tribes from twenty years old, Numb. i., with the number of this from a month old; and therefore it is not strange if the number of their first-born be less than in other tribes. Although if the other tribes had been computed from a month old, as this was, their number of 600,000 had probably been double or treble to that; and consequently the number of their first-born being 22,273 ver. 43, would have been as unproportionable to their whole sum, as this of 300 first-born Levites seems to their whole number. And some add, that only those first-born are numbered, both in this and in the other tribes, which were born since they came out of Egypt, when God challenged all the first-born to be his.

40 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^sNumber all the firstborn of the males of the children of Israel from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

That they may be compared with the number of the Levites for the reason here following.

41 ^tAnd thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

Instead of all the first-born, to wit, such are now alive of them, but those which should be born of them hereafter are otherwise disposed. The cattle of the Levites; not that they were to be taken from the Levites, or to be sacrificed to God, any more than the Levites themselves were, but that they together with the Levites were to be presented before the Lord by way of acknowledgment, that the Levites might be set apart for God's service, and their cattle for themselves as God's ministers, and for their support in God's work.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the firstborn among the children of Israel.

43 And all the firstborn males by the number of names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 45 ^uTake the Levites instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

Take the Levites, to wit, the 22,000 reckoned up ver. 39, of which see the notes there.

46 And for those that are to be ^xre- deemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the firstborn of the children of Israel, ^ywhich are more than the Levites;

47 Thou shalt even take ^zfive shekels apiece by the poll, after the shekel of the sanctuary shalt thou take ^athem: (^bthe shekel is twenty gerahs:)

Five shekels apiece was the price to be paid for the redemption of a first-born a month old, Numb. xviii. 15, 16; but this money, though paid for these 273 persons, was probably paid out of the common stock of all, except lots were cast who should pay, which is not probable in so small a concern accompanied with so much trouble.

48 And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron and to his sons.

To whom all the Levites were given, and therefore the money which came in their stead.

49 And Moses took the redemption money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites:

50 Of the firstborn of the children of Israel took he the money; ^ba thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

51 And Moses ^cgave the money of them that were redeemed unto Aaron and to his sons, according to the word of the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. IV.

God commands the Levites to be numbered from thirty till fifty years old, fit for the service of the tabernacle; their charge, 1—16. Of the Kohathites, 17—20. Of the Gershomites, 21—23. Of the sons of Merari, 29—33. The number of each, 34—45. Of all in general, 46—49.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers, 3 ^aFrom thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, all that enter into the host, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

From thirty years old: this age was prescribed, as the age of full strength of body, and therefore most proper for their present laborious work of carrying the parts and vessels of the tabernacle; and of maturity of judgment, which is necessary for the right management of holy services; whence even John and Christ entered not upon their ministry till that age. And it may still seem to be the fittest season for men's undertaking the ministry of the gospel, except in case of extraordinary abilities, or the church's pressing necessity. Object. They might enter upon this work at their twenty-fifth year, Numb. viii. 24, and in David's time and afterward at their twentieth year. Ans. 1. Their first entrance upon their work was at their twenty-fifth year, when they began as learners, and acted only under the inspection and direction of their brethren; but in their thirtieth year they were completely admitted to a full discharge of their whole office. 2. David, being a prophet, and particularly directed by God in the affairs of the temple, might and did make a change in this matter, which he might the better do, both because it was but a change in a circumstance, and because the magnificence of the temple, and the great multitude of sacred utensils and sacrifices, required a greater number of attendants than formerly was necessary. Until fifty years old, when they were exempted from the toilsome work of carrying burdens, but not discharged from the honourable and easy work done within the tabernacle, Numb. viii. 26. All that enter, i. e. that do and may enter, having no defect, Lev. xxi. 17, nor other impediment. The society of sacred ministers he calls a host, because of that excellent order which was among them, as to persons, place, time, the matter and manner of their services.

b ver. 15. 4 ^bThis shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about ^cthe most holy things:

Hereafter mentioned, as the ark, table, altar, &c. Compare Numb. iii. 31.

5 ¶ And when the camp setteth forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down ^dthe covering vail, and cover the ^eark of testimony with it:

For upon this necessary occasion the inferior priests are allowed to come into the holy of holies, which otherwise was peculiar to the high priest, Heb. ix. 7. The covering veil; the second veil; of which see Exod. xxvi. 31, &c. Lev. iv. 6; Heb. ix. 3; wherewith the ark was covered while the tabernacle stood, Exod. xl. 3. And cover the ark; because the Levites, who were to carry the ark, might neither see nor immediately touch it.

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall put in ^fthe staves thereof.

By the covering of badgers' skins the ark was secured from the injuries of the weather.

Object. How could these staves be put in, when they were never to be taken out, Exod. xxv. 15, compared with 1 Kings viii. 8. Ans. 1. These places may speak of the staves while the ark and tabernacle stood, but when they were to be removed the posture of all things was altered. 2. The Hebrew verb doth not signify putting in, but barely putting, or placing, or disposing, and may be understood not of putting the staves into the rings, wherein they constantly remained, but of the putting of them either upon their shoulders to try and fit them for carriage, or into the holes or receptacles which probably were made in these coverings for the receiving and covering of these gilded staves, to keep them both from the touch of the Levites, and from the inconveniences of bad weather.

7 And upon the ^gtable of shewbread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to cover withal: and the continual bread shall be thereon:

Of shew-bread, Heb. of faces or presence, for of the bread of faces or presence, i. e. of the bread which was continually standing in the presence of the Lord. The dishes, upon which the shew-bread was put. The continual bread, i. e. shew-bread; so called because it was continually to be there, even in the wilderness; where though they had only manna for themselves, yet they reserved corn for the weekly making of these loaves, which they might with no great difficulty procure from some of the people bordering upon the wilderness in the innermost parts whereof they were.

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the ^hcandlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuffdishes, and all the oil vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it:

10 And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.

So contrived that this cloth containing the candlestick, &c., might be either laid upon it, or some other way fastened to it.

11 And upon ^kthe golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof:

The golden altar; all covered with plates of gold.

12 And they shall take all the instruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put them in a cloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put them on a bar:

The instruments of ministry; the sacred garments used by the priests in their holy ministrations. See Exod. xxxi. 10.

13 And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon:

From the altar of burnt-offerings; whereby it may seem probable, though it be denied by most, that they did offer some sacrifices in the wilderness, though it may not be so frequently nor orderly as afterwards they did. Whence else were these ashes? And there are some undeniable instances of their sacrificing there, as Exod. xviii. 12; xxiv. 4; Numb. vii. &c.; from which it seems rational to conclude that they did offer sacrifices at other times, though not so constantly and diligently as they did in Canaan. And for the argument against it from Amos v. 25, that may be easily dissolved, as we shall there see, if the Lord please. Moreover the taking away of the ashes only doth sufficiently imply that the fire was preserved, which as it came down from heaven, Lev. ix., so it was by God's command to be continually fed and kept burning, and therefore doubtless was put into some vessel, which might be either fastened to the altar and put within this covering, or carried by some person appointed thereunto.

14 And they shall put upon it all the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the fleshhooks, and the shovels, and the basons, all the vessels of the altar; and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it.

Amongst all these vessels here and above named there is no mention of the brazen laver, though that be elsewhere reckoned among the holy things, as Exod. xxxv. 16; xxxviii. 8; xxxix. 39; xl. 30, whereof possibly the reason may be because it was not covered, as not being capable of much hurt by the weather; though some ancient translations of the Bible do here add these words, They shall take a purple covering, and cover the laver, &c.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward; after that, ¹the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it: ^mbut they shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die. ⁿThese things are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.

The sons of Kohath shall bear it, to wit, upon their shoulders, not upon carts or waggons, as appears from Numb. vii. 9, the neglect of which order did provoke the Lord, 2 Sam. vi. 6, 7; 1 Chron. xiii. 7; xv. 12, &c. Afterward the priests themselves, being multiplied, carried these things, as appears from Deut. xxxi. 9; Josh. iii. 6; viii. 33; 1 Sam. iv. 4, though the Levites also were not excluded, 2 Chron. v. 5. They shall not touch any holy thing; immediately, or before they be covered. Lest they die, as some did for that sin. See 1 Sam. vi. 19; 2 Sam. vi. 6, 7.

16 ¶ And to the office of Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest pertaineth ^othe oil for the light, and the ^psweet incense, and ^qthe daily meat offering, and the ^ranointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

i. e. He himself is to carry these things, and not to commit them to the sons of Kohath. The daily meat-offering of fine flour, which was to be offered every morning and evening with the daily burnt-offering. See Exod. xxix. 38, 39. The oversight of all the tabernacle, i. e. the care that all the things above mentioned be carried by the persons and in the manner expressed.

17 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

18 Cut ye not off the tribe of the families of the Kohathites from among the Levites:

i. e. Do not by your neglect provoke God to cut them off for touching the holy things.

19 But thus do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto ^sthe most holy things: Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service and to his burden:

To his service; to that which is peculiarly allotted to him, the services and burdens being equally distributed among them.

20 ^tBut they shall not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die.

21 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

22 Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families;

23 ^uFrom thirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them; all that enter in ^vto perform the service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

24 This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for ^wburdens:

25 And ^xthey shall bear the curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

The curtains of the tabernacle, i. e. the curtains or covering of goats' hair. The tabernacle of the congregation, i. e. the ten curious curtains which covered the boards of the tabernacle; for the boards themselves were carried by the Merarites. His covering, i. e. the covering of rams' skins which was put next over those ten curtains.

26 And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them: so shall they serve.

The gate of the court, i. e. which court compassed both the tabernacle and the altar, Exod. xxvii. 16.

27 At the ^yappointment of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens, and in all their service: and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens.

28 This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation: and their charge shall be under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

Under his conduct and direction. Thus the hand of Hege, Esth. ii. 3, is his care and custody.

29 ¶ As for the sons of Merari, thou shalt number them after their families, by the house of their fathers;

30 ^zFrom thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old shalt thou number them, every one that entereth into the ^{aa}service, to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation.

31 And ^{ab}this is the charge of their burden, according to all their service in the tabernacle of the congregation; ^{ac}the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and sockets thereof,

Which were as the feet upon which the pillars stood; of which see Exod. xxxviii. 27.

32 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords, with all their instruments, and with all their service: and by name ye shall ^{ad}reckon the instruments of the charge of their burden.

Every part and parcel therefore shall be put in an inventory; which is required here rather than in the foregoing particulars, partly, because these were much more numerous than the former; partly, because being meaner things, and such as might easily be supplied, they might otherwise have been neglected; and partly, to teach us that God esteems nothing small in his worship and service, and that he expects his will should be observed in the minutest circumstances.

33 This is the service of the families of the sons of Merari, according to all their service, in the tabernacle of the congregation, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

34 ¶ ^{ae}And Moses and Aaron and the chief of the congregation numbered the sons of the Kohathites after their families, and after the house of their fathers, unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation :

38 And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon, throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers,

39 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

40 Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, were two thousand and six hundred and thirty.

d ver. 22. 41 ^d These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD.

42 ¶ And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers,

43 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

44 Even those that were numbered of them after their families, were three thousand and two hundred.

Here appears the wisdom of Divine Providence, that whereas in the Kohathites and Gershonites, whose burdens were fewer and easier, there were but about a third part of them which were fit for service, the Merarites, whose burdens were more and heavier, had above one half of them fit for this work.

f ver. 3, 23, 30. 47 ^f From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that came to do the service of the ministry, and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation, 48 Even those that were numbered of them, were eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.

Which number was much inferior to any other tribe, for the reasons mentioned on Numb. iii. 39.

g ver 15, 24, 31. 49 According to the commandment of the LORD they were numbered by the hand of Moses, ^g every one according to his service, and according to his burden :

thus were they numbered of him, ^h as the h ver. 1, 21 LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. V.

God commands to put away all unclean persons from the camp; it is executed, 1—4. Restitution commanded, and an offering, especially of hallowed things, which belong to the priest, 5—10. Laws in case of jealousy, bitter water ordained, 11—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, that they put out of the camp every ^a leper, and every one that hath an ^b issue, and whosoever is defiled by the ^c dead :

Out of the camp, in which the people dwelt; as afterward out of the cities and towns, that they might not converse with others, and infect them. An issue, to wit, of genital seed in men, or of blood in women in their seasons. By the dead, i. e. by the touch of the dead. See Lev. xxi. 1; Numb. vi. 6.

3 Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, ^d in the midst whereof I dwell.

By which caution God would intimate the possibility and danger of men's being made guilty by other men's sins, and the necessary duty of avoiding intimate converse with wicked men. In the midst whereof I dwell, by my special and gracious presence; and therefore the permission of such impurities is the greater injury and provocation to me, as being done in my sight, and reflecting dishonour upon my name.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp: as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Speak unto the children of Israel, ^e When a man or woman shall commit any sin that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty;

Any sin that men commit, Heb. any sins of men, i. e. either, 1. Of common infirmity, or such sins as men commit through human frailty; for if this were done knowingly and willingly, a greater punishment was appointed. See Lev. vi. 5, 6. Or rather, 2. Sins against men, or belonging to men, to wit, deceits or wrongs, whereby other men are injured, of which he manifestly speaks, as appears from ver. 7, 8; so this is a genitive case of the object, as Matt. xiii. 31, blasphemy of the Spirit (for so it is in the Greek) is blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, as it is called Mark iii. 29; Luke xii. 10; and power of all flesh, John xvii. 2, is power over all flesh; and power of spirits, Matt. x. 1, is power over or against spirits, Luke ix. 1; and prayer of God, Luke vi. 12, is prayer directed unto God; and the spoil of the poor, Isa. iii. 14, is the spoil taken from the poor; and violence of the children of Judah, Joel iii. 19, is violence against them, as we translate it. To do a trespass against the Lord; which words may be added, either, 1. To express a new sin, of prevaricating or dealing falsely with God, either by a false oath, which is a special injury to God, or by a lie or simple denial that he hath taken any thing of his neighbour's, which also God takes as a sin especially concerning himself, who in such cases is the only judge of what is falsely said or sworn. See Acts v. 3, 4. Or, 2. To aggravate the former sin, and to show that such injuries done to men are also sins against God, who hath commended justice to men as well as religion to himself. But the former is more probable, both because here is a ram of atonement to be offered to God for the special injury done to him, as well as satisfaction is to be made to the man whom he injured; and especially by comparing this with the parallel place, Lev. vi. 2, &c. And that person be guilty, i. e. shall be sensible of his guilt, or be convicted in his conscience of his sin; for otherwise this might seem a mere tautology, if it were only meant of being really guilty of sin, which was expressed before in those words, when one shall commit any sin, i. e. be guilty of any sin.

^f Lev. 5. 5. ^g Lev. 6. 5. ^h Ex. 28. 41. ⁱ Josh. 7. 19. 7 'Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass ⁵ with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.

They shall not continue in the denial of the fact, as such persons oft do, but shall give glory to God, and take shame to themselves, by acknowledging their sin with grief and remorse. See Lev. v. 5; vi. 4. With the principal thereof, i. e. the thing he took away, or what is equivalent to it. The fifth part thereof is added both as a compensation to the injured person for the want of his goods so long, and for his trouble for the supposed utter loss of them, and as a penalty upon the injurious dealer to discourage others from such attempts. Quest. How doth this agree with that law, Exod. xxii. 1? Ans. That law was made against notorious and obstinate thieves, who were legally convicted of their crime, and this against more modest thieves, whose necessities might induce them to steal, and whose consciences are affected with their sin.

8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the Lord, even to the priest; beside ^h the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

^h Lev. 6. 5. ⁱ 7. & 7. 7. If the man have no kinsman, which might be the case commonly with proselytes, if not with Israelites. This also supposeth the person injured to be dead or gone away into some unknown place, and the person injured to be known to the injurer.

God appointed the priest as his deputy to receive his dues, and take them to his own use, that so he might more cheerfully and entirely devote himself to the ministration of holy things. This is an additional explication to that law, Lev. vi. 2, and for the sake thereof it seems here to be repeated.

9 And every ⁱ offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.

ⁱ Or, heave offering. ¹ Ex. 28. 28. ² Lev. 6. 17. ³ 18. 26. & 7. 6, 7, 9, 10, 14. ⁴ ch. 18. 8, 9, 19. ⁵ Deut. 18. 3, 4. ⁶ Ezek. 44. 29, 30. Heb. every heave-offering, the heave-offering being here taken largely, so as to comprehend also the wave-offering, for both these were Aaron's portion. See Exod. xxix. 26—28. Unto the priest, to wit, to offer unto the Lord by his hands. Shall be his, i. e. the priest's. See Lev. vi. 16.

10 And every man's hallowed things shall be his: whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be ^h his.

^h Lev. 10. 13. Every man's hallowed things; understand this not of the sacrifices, no, not of such of them as were voluntary or vowed, as most understand it, because these were not the priest's peculiar, but a good part of them was offered to God, and the remainder was eaten by the offerer as well as by the priest, as is manifest; but of such other things as were devoted to God, and were such as could not be offered in sacrifice; as suppose a man consecrated a house, or rent of it, to the Lord, this was to be the priest's. And this restriction may be easily collected from the nature of the thing, because he speaketh in this and the other branches here of such things as were appropriated to the priest as his portion, which none of the sacrifices were.

11 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him,

This law was given partly to deter wives from adulterous practices, and partly to secure wives against the rage of their hard-hearted husbands, who otherwise might upon mere suspicions destroy them, or at least put them away. Quest. Why was there not the same law for the trial of the husband, when the wife was jealous of him? Ans. This might be either, 1. Because the woman's sin is greater, because there is not only filthiness and falseness in it, which is also in the man's sin, but also peculiar unrighteousness in dishonouring his name and family, and transferring his estate to strangers and other men's children. Or, 2. Because there was not like fear of inconveniences to the husband from the jealousy of the wife, who had not that authority, and power, and opportunity for the putting away or killing of the husband as the husband had over the wife. Or, 3. Because being the inferior and the weaker sex, and more subject to jealousies and groundless suspicions, it was not thought expedient to trust them with such a power or privilege. Go aside, from the way of religion and justice, or from her faith given to her husband, or to the by-paths of falsehood and filthiness, and that either in truth, or in appearance, and in her husband's opinion.

13 And a man ¹ lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner;

She utterly denying it, Prov. xxx. 20, and none being able and willing to discover it; for if it was witnessed, she was to die for it, Lev. xx. 10; Deut. xxii. 22.

14 And the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled: or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled:

The spirit of jealousy, i. e. a strong opinion or suggestion or inward motion of that kind, whether from a good or evil spirit. Thus we read of the spirit of wisdom, Isa. xi. 2, of perverseness, Isa. xix. 14, of fornication, Hos. iv. 12, of fear, 2 Tim. i. 7, of slumber, Rom. xi. 8.

15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley meal; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, ^m bringing iniquity to remembrance.

^m 1 Kings 17. 14. ⁿ Ezek. 29. 16. Then, she persisting in her denial, and her husband requiring her submission to this way of trial. Her offering was partly because none were to appear before God empty, Exod. xxiii. 15; partly, by way of solemn appeal to God, whom hereby she desired to judge between her and her husband; and partly, by way of atonement to appease God, who had for her sins stirred up her husband against her, and sent an evil spirit between them. See 1 Sam. xxvi. 19. No oil nor frankincense, both because it was a kind of sin-offering, from which these were excluded, Lev. v. 11, and to testify her sorrowful sense of the hand of God, and of her husband's displeasure, and because she came thither as a delinquent, or one suspected of delinquency, and under an ill fame, and displeasing both to God and men; as one that wanted that grace and amiableness and joy which oil signified, and that acceptance with God which frankincense signified, Psal. cxli. 2. Bringing iniquity to remembrance; both to God, before whom she appeared as a sinner, and to her own conscience, if she were guilty, and, if she were not guilty of this, yet it reminded her of her other sins, for which this might be a punishment.

16 And the priest shall bring her near, and set her before the Lord:

i. e. the woman; but of her he speaks, ver. 18; or it, i. e. the offering, which is last spoken of, so the feminine gender is put for the masculine or the neuter, of both which we have instances. Before the Lord, i. e. before the sanctuary where the ark was.

17 And the priest shall take holy water in an earthen vessel; and of the dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water:

Holy water; either water out of the holy laver, Exod.

xxx. 18, or rather the water of purification appointed for such kind of uses, Numb. xix. 9. This was used, that if she were guilty, she might be afraid to add profaneness and the pollution of holy things to her other crime. In an earthen vessel; either to signify that frailty and vileness of which she stood accused, or express her sorrowful and shameful condition, or because, after this use, it was to be broken in pieces, that the remembrance of it might be blotted out as far as possible. Compare Lev. vi. 28; xi. 33; xv. 12. And of the dust; an emblem of vileness and misery, as appears from Job ii. 12; Psal. xxii. 15; Lam. iii. 29; and the serpent's food, Gen. iii. 14; very proper for her who had been seduced to folly by the serpent's instigation. In the floor of the tabernacle; which made it holy dust, and struck the greater terror into the woman, if she were guilty. Put it into the water, to make it more unpleasant and bitter, which was suitable to one in that sorrowful state.

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy offering: and the priest shall have in his hand the bitter water that causeth the curse:

Before the Lord; before the tabernacle, with her face towards the ark. Uncover the woman's head; partly, that she might be made sensible how manifest she and all her ways were to God, and that she might be more visible to the congregation, that her shame might be greater if she were guilty; partly, in token of her sorrow either for her sin, or at least for any cause of suspicion which she had given; partly, as a sign that she was after a sort deprived of the help and protection of her husband, which the covering of the woman's head signified, 1 Cor. xi. 5-7, 10, and that she was neither virgin nor loyal wife, for the heads of both these used to be covered. In her hands, that she herself might offer it, and therefore call God to be witness of her innocency. Bitter; so called either from the bitter taste which the dust gave it, or from the bitter effects of it upon her if she were guilty. Compare Exod. xxxii. 20. That causeth the curse; not by any natural power, but by a supernatural efficacy ordained and wrought by God for her punishment, and for the terror and caution of others.

19 And the priest shall charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness || †with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse:

|| Or, being in the power of thy husband.
Rom. 7. 2.
† Heb. under thy husband.

Charge her by an oath, to answer truly to his question, or to declare by oath whether she be guilty or no, and after such oath shall say as follows. If no man, to wit, except thy husband, as is manifest from the whole context; or no other man, the word another being understood here, as it is thought to be also Gen. xiv. 1; xxxvi. 6; Exod. xxii. 20. With another, or, with him, i. e. the man now mentioned. So it is an ellipsis easily supplied out of the text.

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband:

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, °The LORD make thee a curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth make thy thigh to †rot, and thy belly to swell;

An oath, i. e. a form of cursing or imprecatory oaths, that when they would curse a person, they may wish that they may be as cursed and miserable as thou wast upon this occasion. See the phrase Isa. lxxv. 15; Jer. xxix. 22; and compare Gen. xlviii. 20; Ruth iv. 11, 12. Thy thigh; a modest signification of the genital parts, used both in Scripture, as Gen. xlv. 26; Exod. i. 5, and other authors, that the sin might be evident in the punishment. To rot, Heb. to fall, i. e. to die or waste away, as the word is used, 1 Chron. xxi. 14, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 15. To swell, suddenly and violently till it burst, which the Jews note was frequent in this and like cases, as Exod. xxxii. 20. And it was a clear evidence of the truth of their religion.

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot:

¶ And the woman shall say, Amen, amen. ¶ So let it be if I be guilty. The word is doubled by her as an evidence of her innocency, and ardent desire that God would deal with her according to her desert.

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and he shall blot them out with the bitter water:

These curses, wherewith she cursed herself, to which peradventure her name was added. In a book, i. e. in a scroll of parchment, which the Hebrews commonly call a book, as Deut. xxiv. 1; 2 Sam. xi. 14; Isa. xxxix. 1. Blot them out with the bitter water, or, rase or scrape them out, and cast them into the bitter water. Whereby it was signified, that if she was innocent, the curses should be blotted out and come to nothing, and if she were guilty, she should find in her the effects of this water which she drunk, after the words of this curse had been scraped and put in.

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse: and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

To drink, to wit, after the jealousy-offering was offered, as is affirmed, ver. 26.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy offering out of the woman's hand, and shall wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar:

26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

The memorial thereof, of which see Lev. ii. 2.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that, if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, that the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be a curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean; then she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

She shall be free, to wit, from these bitter curses and miseries. Shall conceive seed, i. e. shall bring forth children, as the Jews say, in case of her innocency, infallibly she did, yea, though she was barren before; or shall be as capable of bearing children as other women.

29 This is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another instead of her husband, and is defiled;

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be guiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall bear her iniquity.

Guiltless from iniquity; which he should not have been, if he had either dissembled or indulged her in so great a wickedness, and not endeavoured to bring her either to repentance or punishment; see Matt. i. 19; or cherished suspicions in his breast, and thereupon proceeded to hate her or cast her off. Whereas now, whatsoever the consequent is, the husband shall not be blamed or censured, either for bringing such curses and mischiefs upon her, or for defaming her, if she appear to be innocent. Her iniquity, i. e. the punishment of her iniquity, whether she was false to her husband, or by any light and foolish carriage gave him occasion to suspect her to be so.

CHAP. VI.

The law of the Nazarites; from what they should abstain; how, becoming unclean, they were to be purified, 1—12. The vow of separation being fulfilled, the ceremonies to be observed, 13—21. The form of blessing to be used by the priest in the congregation, 22—27.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall || *separate themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the LORD :

Either man or woman; for both sexes might make this vow, if they were free and at their own dispose, for otherwise their parents or husbands could disannul the vow, Numb. xxx. 5, and in that case they sinned in taking God's name in vain, and vowing what they could not perform. A vow of a Nazarite; whereby they did sequester themselves in a great part from worldly employments and enjoyments, that they might entirely consecrate themselves to God's service; and this either for their whole lifetime, of which see Judg. xiii. 5; xvi. 17; 1 Sam. i. 11; Luke i. 15; or for a less and limited space of time, of which in this chapter.

3 ^b He shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

Lest they should either inflame or dispose him to luxury, and consequently to the breaking of his vow; or cloud his reason, and thereby occasion some mistake or miscarriage in the rules to which he had bound himself. Compare Lev. x. 9. Nor eat moist grapes, or dried; which was forbidden him for greater caution to keep him at the further distance from wine.

4 All the days of his || separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the † vine tree, from the kernels even to the husk.

The days were sometimes more, sometimes fewer, as he thought fit to appoint.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no ^c razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

No razor, nor scissors, or other instrument to cut off any part of his hair. This was appointed, partly, as a sign of his mortification to worldly delights, and vain affectation of outward beauty, which is promoted by the polling or cutting off the hair; partly, as a testimony of that purity which hereby he professed, because the cutting off the hair was a sign of uncleanness, as appears from ver. 9, and Lev. xiv. 8, 9; partly, that by the notorious length of his hair he might be constantly minded of his vow, and the exquisite holiness it required, and that others might thereby be admonished and stirred up to the imitation of his holy example; and partly, that he might reserve his hair entirely for God, to whom it was to be offered, ver. 18. He shall be holy, i. e. wholly consecrated to God and his service, whereby he shows that inward and substantial holiness was the great thing which God required and valued in these, and consequently in other rites and ceremonies.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD ^d he shall come at no dead body.

7 ^e He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die: because the † consecration of his God is upon his head.

For his father, or for his mother; wherein he was equal to the high priest, Lev. xxi. 11, being, in some sort, as sacred a person, and as eminent a type of Christ, Heb. vii. 26, and therefore justly required to prefer the service of God, to which he had so fully and peculiarly given himself, before the expressions of his affections to his dearest and nearest relations. The consecration, i. e. the token of his consecration, to wit, his long hair. Of his God, i. e. whereby he hath devoted himself to his God in an eminent manner. The genitive case of the object.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall ^f shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

He shall shave his head, because his whole body, and especially his hair, was defiled by such an accident, which he ought to impute either to his own heedlessness, or at least to God's providence, so ordering the matter possibly for the punishment of his other sins, or for the quickening of him to more caution and purity, and detestation of all dead works whereby he would be defiled. On the seventh day, to be reckoned from the time of his pollution; for uncleanness contracted by the dead continued for seven days, and the seventh day was the day of cleansing for it, Lev. xv. 13; Numb. xix. 11, 12.

10 And ^g on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

As in the case of him that had a running issue, Lev. xv. 14.

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

Shall offer, Heb. make, which is oft put for sacrificing or offering, as Exod. xxix. 36; 1 Chron. xxi. 23, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 22. For a sin-offering, because such a pollution was, though not his sin, yet the chastisement of his sin, and had an appearance of sin, to wit, of negligence in not standing sufficiently upon his guard, which in such persons was in a manner equivalent to a sin. For that he sinned, i. e. contracted a ceremonial uncleanness, which is called sinning, because it was a type of sin, and a violation of a law, though through ignorance and inadvertency, as many other sins were. Shall hallow; begin again to hallow or consecrate it.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year ^h for a trespass offering: but the days that were before shall † be lost, because his separation was defiled.

The days of his separation; as many days as he had before separated or vowed unto God. Lost, i. e. not reckoned or imputed to him. Heb. fall, to wit, to the ground, i. e. be void or of none effect.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite, ⁱ when the days of his separation are fulfilled: he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

By the priest's appointment and direction.

14 And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt offering, and one ewe lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin offering, and one ram without blemish for peace offerings,

For a sin-offering, whereby he confessed and bewailed his frailties and miscarriages, notwithstanding the strictness of his vow and all the diligence and care which he could use, and consequently acknowledged his need of the grace of God in Christ Jesus the true Nazarite. For peace-offerings; for thankfulness to God, who had given him grace to make and in some measure to keep such a vow. So he offered all the three sorts of offerings, that he might so far fulfil all righteousness, and profess his obligation to observe the will of God in all things.

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread anointed with oil, and their meat offering, and their drink offerings.

Such as did generally accompany the sacrifices; of which see Lev. ii. 1; Numb. xxviii.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin offering, and his burnt offering:

17 And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat offering, and his drink offering.

18 And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace offerings.

Of his separation; or, of his Nazariteship, i. e. in which the chief of his Nazariteship or separation to God consisted. At the door of the tabernacle; publicly, that it might be known that his vow was ended; and therefore he was at liberty as to those things from which he had restrained himself for a season, otherwise some might have been scandalized at his use of his liberty. See Acts xxi. 26. In the fire; either, 1. The fire of the altar. But why then is this restrained to the peace-offerings, seeing it was common to the burnt-offerings and to the sin-offerings? Or rather, 2. To the fire of the kitchen, upon which the flesh of the peace-offerings was boiled.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven:

The sodden shoulder; the left shoulder, as it appears from ver. 20, where this is joined with the heave-shoulder, which was the right shoulder, and which was the priest's due in all sacrifices, Lev. vii. 32, and in this also. But here the other shoulder was added to it, as a special token of thankfulness from the Nazarites for God's singular favours vouchsafed unto them. Upon the hands of the Nazarite, that he may give them to the priest, as his peculiar gift.

20 And the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD: this is holy for the priest, with the wave breast and heave shoulder: and after that the Nazarite may drink wine.

And return to his former freedom and manner of living;

he is discharged from his vow. Of the wave-offering and heave-offering, see Lev. vii. 30, 32.

21 This is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, beside that that his hand shall get: according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

Besides that that his hand shall get, i. e. besides what he shall voluntarily promise and give according to his ability.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

On this wise, Heb. Thus, in this manner, or in these words; yet so as that they were not tied to these very words, because after this we have examples of Moses and David and Solomon and others blessing the people in other words. Ye shall bless the children of Israel, to wit, in the public assembly.

24 The LORD bless thee, and keep thee:

Bless thee, i. e. bestow upon you all manner of blessings, temporal and spiritual. Compare Gen. xii. 2. Keep thee, i. e. continue his blessings to thee, and preserve thee in and to the use of them; keep thee from sin and its bitter effects.

25 The LORD make his face shine upon thee,

i. e. Smile upon thee: this is opposed to the hiding of his face, and to the covering himself or his face with a cloud; and it is explained by the following words, be gracious unto thee. Others expound it of illumination or direction, and the revelation of himself and of his will to them.

—and be gracious unto thee:

26 The LORD lift up his countenance upon thee,

i. e. Look upon thee with a cheerful and pleasant countenance, as one that is reconciled to thee, and well pleased with thee and thy offerings and services. See of this phrase Psal. iv. 6; Prov. xvi. 15. To this is opposed the falling and the casting down of the countenance, of which see Gen. iv. 5, 6; Job xxix. 24. Or, regard, protect, and help thee. Compare Psal. xxxiii. 18.

Peace with God, and with thy own conscience, and with all men, and all prosperity, which is comprehended under this word.

27 And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel; and I will bless them.

i. e. Shall call them by my name, shall recommend them to me as my own people, and bless them and pray unto me for them as such; which is a powerful argument to prevail with God for them, and therefore hath been oft used by the prophets interceding for them, as Jer. xiv. 9; Dan. ix. 18, 19; compare 1 Sam. xii. 22. I will bless them; I will ratify their blessings, and give those blessings to the people which the priests pray for.

CHAP. VII.

The tabernacle being fully finished, the twelve princes offer gifts; which are delivered to the Gershonites and the Merarites, 1—11. What they offered in particular of silver, gold, vessels, and beasts, 12—83. The sum thereof, 84—88. God spake to Moses from the mercy-seat, 89.

AND it came to pass on the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle, and had anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified them;

On the day; either, 1. Precisely; and so this history, as many others, is put out of its proper place, and this chapter, and the 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th, should follow next after Exod. xl., and this day is the same on which the tabernacle was erected, which was the first day of the first month of the second year, Exod. xl. 17, 18. Or, 2. Largely, day being put for time, and on the day for about the time, or, a little after the time. And thus it seems to be taken here, because all the princes did not offer these things upon one and the same day, but on several days, as here it follows. And so there is no disorder in the history, and this chapter comes in its proper place, and those things were done in the second month of the second year after the tabernacle, and altar, and all other instruments thereof were anointed, as is here expressed; and after the Levites were separated to the service of the tabernacle, and appointed to their several works, as is manifest from ver. 5—9, which was done about a month after the tabernacle was erected, &c.; and after the numbering of the people, Numb. i., when the princes here employed in the offerings were first constituted; and after the disposal of the tribes about the tabernacle, the order of which is here observed in the time of their offerings. Anointed it, Lev. viii. 10.

b ch. 1.4, &c. 2 That ^b the princes of Israel, heads of the house of their fathers, who were the princes of the tribes, †and were over them that were numbered, offered:

To wit, in the manner and days hereafter mentioned.

3 And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered wagons, and twelve oxen; a wagon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.

Covered wagons, for the more convenient and safe carriage of such things as were most cumbersome.

4 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

5 Take it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.

i. e. More or fewer of them, as the nature of their service and of the things to be carried required.

6 And Moses took the wagons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

c ch. 4. 25. 7 Two wagons and four oxen ^ehe gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service:

d ch. 4. 31. 8 ^dAnd four wagons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service, ^eunder the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

e ch. 4. 26, 33. i. e. Under his care and inspection. See Gen. xxxix. 22. And it must be noted that these words belong both to the Merarites here, and to the Gershonites, ver. 7, because both of them were under his hands, as is affirmed, Numb. iv. 28, 33.

f ch. 4. 15. 9 But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none: because ^fthe service of the sanctuary belonging unto them ^gwas that they should bear upon their shoulders.

g ch. 4. 6, 8, 10, 12, 14. 2 Sam. 8. 13. Because of the greater worth and holiness of the things which they carried. See Numb. iv. 6, 8, 10, 12, 14; 2 Sam. vi. 6, 13.

h See Dent. 20. 5. 1 Kin. 8. 63. 2 Chr. 7. 5, 9. Ezra 6. 16. Neh. 12. 27. Ps. 30. title. 10 ¶ And the princes offered for ^hdedicating of the altar in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar.

The altar, to wit, of burnt-offerings, and incense too, as appears from the matter of their offerings. The singular number for the plural. Not for the first dedication of them, for it is apparent they were dedicated or consecrated before this time by Moses and Aaron for divers days together, Lev. viii., ix.; but for a further dedication of them, these being the first offerings that were made for any particular persons or tribes. In the day, i. e. about the time, as soon as it was anointed. See on ver. 1.

11 And the LORD said unto Moses, They shall offer their offering, each prince on his day, for the dedicating of the altar.

As well for the greater solemnity and splendour of the work, as for the prevention of confusion. And in this offering they follow the order of their camp, and not of their birth.

12 ¶ And he that offered his offering the first day was ⁱNahshon the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah:

i ch. 2. 3. In whose name and behalf this offering was made, and so in the rest.

13 And his offering was one silver charger, the weight thereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after ^kthe shekel of the sanctuary; both of them were full of fine flour mingled with oil for a ^lmeat offering:

k Ex. 30. 13. l Lev. 2. 1. One silver charger, a large dish or platter; of which see Exod. xxv. 29, to be employed about the altar of burnt-offering, or in the court, not in the sanctuary, for all its vessels were of gold.

14 One spoon of ten shekels of gold, full of ^mincense:

m Ex. 30. 34. Ten shekels of gold, and therefore belonging to the altar of incense.

15 ⁿOne young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

n Lev. 1. 2. 16 One kid of the goats for a ^osin offering:

o Lev. 4. 23. 17 And for ^pa sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

p Lev. 3. 1. Peace-offerings are more numerous, because the princes and priests, and some of the people, did make a feast before the Lord out of them, and celebrated it with great rejoicing.

18 ¶ On the second day Nethaneel the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer:

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

20 One spoon of gold of ten shekels, full of incense:

21 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

22 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

23 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

24 ¶ On the third day Eliab the son of Helon, prince of the children of Zebulun, did offer:

25 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

26 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

27 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

28 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

29 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Eliab the son of Helon.

30 ¶ On the fourth day Elizur the son of She-deur, prince of the children of Reuben, did offer:

31 His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

32 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

33 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

34 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

35 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Elizur the son of Shedeur.

36 ¶ On the fifth day Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai, prince of the children of Simeon, did offer:

37 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

38 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

39 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

40 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

41 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

42 ¶ On the sixth day Eliasaph the son of Deuel, prince of the children of Gad, offered:

43 His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, a silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

44 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

45 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

46 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

47 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

48 ¶ On the seventh day Elishama the son of Ammihud, prince of the children of Ephraim, offered:

49 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

50 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

51 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

52 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

53 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Elishama the son of Ammihud.

54 ¶ On the eighth day offered Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur, prince of the children of Manassch:

55 His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

56 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

57 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

58 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

59 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

60 ¶ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gideoni, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered:

61 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

62 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

63 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

64 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

65 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Abidan the son of Gideoni.

66 ¶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince of the children of Dan, offered:

67 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

68 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

69 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

70 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

71 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

72 ¶ On the eleventh day Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered:

73 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

74 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

75 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

76 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

CHAP. VIII.

77 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Pagiel the son of Ocran.

78 ¶ On the twelfth day Ahira the son of Enan, prince of the children of Naphtali, offered:

79 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

80 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

81 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

82 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

83 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Ahira the son of Enan.

84 This was the dedication of the altar, in the day when it was anointed, by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold:

When it was anointed: this is again repeated, to show why it is called the dedication of the altar, because it was the first offering made by any particular persons or tribes.

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

87 All the oxen for the burnt offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat offering: and the kids of the goats for sin offering twelve.

The meat-offering was not mentioned before, because it was sufficiently understood from the law which required it, Numb. xv. 3—5, but for greater assurance is here expressed.

88 And all the oxen for the sacrifice of the peace offerings were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

Which words are very conveniently added to explain in what sense he had so oft said that this was done in the day when it was anointed, to wit, not exactly, but in a latitude, to wit, a little after that it was anointed, as is here said.

89 And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with him, then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he spake unto him.

Into the tabernacle of the congregation; into which Moses, though no priest, was permitted to enter by God's special licence. To speak with him, i. e. to consult God upon occasion. From off the mercy-seat, which Moses standing without the veil could easily hear. And this seems to be added in this place, to show that when men had done their part in the dedication of the tabernacle, altars, &c., God was not wanting in the performance of his part, and promise made, Exod. xxv. 22.

How the lamps are to be lighted, 1—4. God commands the Levites to be cleansed, 5—15; that they may serve with Aaron and his sons instead of the first-born, 16—22. Their age and service, 23—26.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.

a Ex. 25. 37. & 40. 25.

i. e. Either, 1. On every side of the candlestick. So the candlestick is here put for the bulk or shaft of the candlestick, as Exod. xxv. 34, 35, and the lamps, when they were lighted, were put into the branches of the candlestick, and taken out upon occasion. Thus the meaning is, that all the lamps were to be lighted on that part which was towards the middle, looking that way whence they had their light; for the middle lamp was lighted with the fire of the altar, and from that the other lamps received light. But against this sense it is objected, that the lamps could not be otherwise ordered, but that they must give light round about the candlestick, and therefore that sense seems to make this direction idle and frivolous. Or, 2. On that part which is before the candlestick, Heb. over against the face of the candlestick, i. e. in that place towards which the candlestick looked, or where the candlestick stood in full view, i. e. upon the north side, where the table of shewbread stood, as appears from hence, because the candlestick stood close to the boards of the sanctuary on the south side, Exod. xxvi. 35. And thus the lights were on both sides of the sanctuary, which was fit and necessary, because it was wholly dark in itself, and had no window in it.

3 And Aaron did so; he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick, as the LORD commanded Moses.

4 And this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold, unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

d Ex. 25. 40.

Beaten gold, not hollow, but solid and massive gold, beaten out of one piece, and not of several pieces joined or soldered together. See Exod. xxv. 18, 31; xxxvii. 17.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 6 Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and cleanse them.

Or, wash or purify them, which was also done with the priests and others when they were to approach to God and his service. See Exod. xix. 10, 14; Lev. xiv. 9.

7 And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: Sprinkle water of purifying upon them, and let them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean.

e ch. 19. 9, 17, 18. + Heb. let them cause a razor to pass over, &c. f Lev. 14. 8, 9.

Of purifying, Heb. of sin, i. e. for the expiation of sin. This water was mixed with the ashes of a red heifer, Numb. xix. 9, which therefore may seem to have been prescribed before, though it be mentioned after; such kind of transplacings of passages being frequent in Scripture. Shave all their flesh; which external rite signified the cutting off their inordinate concupiscences of earthly things, and that singular purity of heart and life which is required in the ministers of God. See Isa. lii. 11; 2 Tim. ii. 21.

8 Then let them take a young bullock with his meat offering, even fine flour mingled with oil, and another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin offering.

g Lev. 2. 1.

The same sacrifice which was offered for a sin-offering for the whole congregation, Lev. iv., because the Levites came in the stead of all the first-born, which did in a manner represent the whole congregation.

9^b And thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt gather the whole assembly of the children of Israel together:
10 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD: and the children of Israel shall put their hands upon the Levites:
The children of Israel; not all of them, which was impossible, but some in the name and stead, and by the appointment of all, to wit, either the first-born, or rather the princes or chiefs of each tribe, who used to transact things in the name of their tribes. Put their hands upon the Levites; whereby they signified their transferring of that right of ministering to God from the first-born, in whose hands it formerly was, unto the Levites, and their renouncing of their interest in the Levites, from whom they might otherwise have expected help by their persons or purses, as they did from other tribes, in their common concerns, and their entire resignation and dedication of them to God's service; as the person offering, by laying his hand upon the head of his sacrifice, Lev. i. 4, signified his translation of his guilt upon the beast, and his dedication of it unto God.

Not that Aaron did so wave them, which he could not do, but that he caused or commanded them to imitate that motion, and to wave themselves towards the several parts of the world; whereby they might signify their readiness to serve God according to their capacity wheresoever they should be; though the word may be taken more generally for any offering made to God, as Exod. xxxv. 22.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron, and before his sons, and offer them for an offering unto the LORD.

Before Aaron and his sons, i. e. put them into the power of Aaron and his sons, to employ them in holy ministrations; for so that phrase is sometimes used, as Gen. xiii. 9, the land is before thee, i. e. in thy power, to use or enjoy it. Or setting the Levites before them did signify the giving the Levites to them, or to their service. For an offering unto the Lord; for to him they were first properly offered, and by him given to the priests in order to his service.

14 Thus shalt thou separate the Levites from among the children of Israel: and the Levites shall be ^m mine.

20 And Moses, and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them.

CHAP. IX.

The passover kept in the wilderness on the fourteenth day of the first month, 1—5. By those who were then unclean or journeying, the fourteenth day of the second month, 6—12. They who otherwise neglect it to be put to death, 13. Prosltytes are to observe the same, 14. AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

In the first month; and therefore before the numbering of the people, which was not till the second month, Numb. i. 1, 2. But it is placed after it, because of a special case relating to the passover, which happened after it, and which is here related, upon occasion whereof he mentions the command of God for the keeping of the passover in the wilderness, which was done but once, and without this command they had not been obliged to keep it at all till they came to the land of Canaan. See Exod. xii. 25.

So far as concerned the lamb and the unleavened bread, &c., for there were some things peculiar to the first passover in Egypt, as that they were to eat it in haste, with their loins girded, their shoes on their feet, and their staff in their hand, which were not properly rites or ceremonies of the passover, but circumstances of their present condition, being their travellers and ready to depart, &c. Quest. Whence had they meal to make unleavened bread? Ans. They were not now in haste, and so had time enough to procure it out of the land of Midian by the help of Moses's father-in-law, who lived there, which land was not far from Horeb or Sinai, as appears from Exod. iii. 1.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover.

6 ¶ And there were certain men, who were defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day: and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day:

By the dead body of a man; by the touch of a dead body, or something belonging to it; (see Numb. xix. 11;) because unclean persons were prohibited to eat of holy things. See Lev. vii. 20; xxii. 3. They came before Moses, for resolution of their difficulty.

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

Which if we neglect, we must be cut off; and if we keep it in these circumstances, we must also be cut off. What shall we do? The passover is called an offering of the Lord, because it was both killed and eaten in obedience to God's command, and to God's honour, and as a thank-offering to God for his great mercies.

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

God having promised to answer and direct him upon his address to him in difficult cases.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

Under these two instances the Hebrews think that other hindrances of like nature are comprehended; as if one be hindered by a disease, or by any other such kind of uncleanness; which may seem probable both from the nature of the thing, and the reason of the law, which is the same in other cases, and from the application of this rule to other cases, 2 Chron. xxx. Afar off; in some remote country, whence he cannot return sooner.

This was an evident token of God's special presence with and providence over them. See Exod. xiv. 20, 24; Psal. cv. 39. And this cloud was easily distinguished from other clouds, both by its peculiar figure and by its constant residence in that place. The appearance of fire; that they might better discern it, and direct themselves and their journeys or stations by it.

16 So it was alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.

r Ex. 40. 36. ch. 10. 11, 33.

34. P. c. 90. l.

Was taken up, or, ascended on high, above its ordinary place, by which it became more visible to all the camp.

18 At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: ^aas long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

The motion or stay of the cloud is fitly called the command of God, because it was a signification of God's will and their duty, which a command properly is.

19 And when the cloud † carried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel † kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

The charge of the LORD, i. e. the command of God mentioned before, that they should stay as long as the cloud staid, as the same phrase is manifestly taken below, ver. 23. And this, saith he, they did, though it were long in one place, which was tedious to them, who desired to change places, and to make haste to Canaan, yet they obeyed God herein against their own inclinations; which because it was remarkable in so obstinate a people, it is so largely and particularly mentioned here, as an instance of their obedience, and as an aggravation of the many following instances of their apostacy and disobedience.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud † abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel ^uabode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.

23 At the commandment of the LORD they rested in the tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed: they ^xkept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. X.

Two trumpets of silver commanded to be made; with a direction to what end, when, how, by whom, and with what success they should be used, 1—10. The Israelites remove to Paran: the order in which they go, 11—28. Moses endeavours to get Hobab his father-in-law along with him, 29—32. Moses's prayer and blessing when the ark was removed and set down again, 33—36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Make thee two trumpets of silver; of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the ^acalling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

Two trumpets, for Aaron's two sons; though afterwards the number of the trumpets was much increased, as the number of the priests also was. See 2 Chron. v. 12. These trumpets were ordained, both for signification of the great duty of ministers, to wit, to preach the word; and for use, as here follows. Silver is a metal pure and precious, and giving a clear sound. A whole piece. See Exod. xxv. 31; Numb. viii. 4.

3 And when ^bthey shall blow with them, all the assembly shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

When they, i. e. the priests, by comparing this with ver. 8, shall blow with them, i. e. with both of them, by comparing this with the next verse.

4 And if they blow but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are ^cheads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.

5 When ye blow an alarm, then ^dthe camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.

To wit, when ye blow once, as appears from ver. 6. 6 When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the camps that lie ^eon the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys.

As a sign for them to march forward, and consequently for the rest to follow them, which is easily understood out of these words.

7 But when the congregation is to be gathered together, ^fye shall blow, but ye shall not ^gsound an alarm.

8 ^hAnd the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations.

The sons of Aaron shall blow, to oblige them to the greater regard and observance, as if God himself had called them. 9 And ⁱif ye go to war in your land against the enemy that ^joppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be ^kremembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

Which was practised accordingly. See Numb. xxxi. 6; 2 Chron. xiii. 12. Ye shall be saved from your enemies, if you use this ordinance of God with trust and dependence upon God for help, which condition is necessarily to be understood from divers others scriptures, where it is expressed.

10 Also ^min the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace offerings; that they may be to you ⁿfor a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

Days of your gladness, i. e. days appointed for rejoicing and thanksgiving to God, either for former mercies, or for succeeding deliverances, as Esth. ix. 18, &c. Compare Hos. ii. 11. Your solemn days; your stated and constant festivals. The beginnings of months, of which see Psal. lxxxi. 3. A memorial before your God; that God may remember you for good to accept and bless you; as that phrase oft signifies.

11 ¶ And it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud ^owas taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel took ^ptheir journeys out of the ^qwilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the ^rwilderness of Paran.

From which they travelled to other places, and then returned into it again, Numb. xii. 16.

13 And they first took their journey according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 ¶ In the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah according to their armies: and over his host was Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And the tabernacle was taken down; and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, bearing the tabernacle.

18 ¶ And the standard of the camp of Reuben set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

20 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

21 And the Kohathites set forward, bearing the sanctuary: and the other did set up the tabernacle against they came.

The other, i. e. the Gershonites and Merarites, as is evident both from their work and office, which was to take down and set up the tabernacle, Numb. iii. 25, 26; iv. 22—33; and from ver. 17, who therefore marched after the first camp, a good distance from and before the Kohathites, that they might prepare the tabernacle for the reception of its utensils, which the Kohathites brought some time after them.

22 ¶ And the standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasseh was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideoni.

25 ¶ And the standard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, which was the reward of all the camps throughout their hosts: and over his host was Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Asher was Pagiel the son of Ocran.

27 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Naphtali was Ahira the son of Enan.

28 † Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel according to their armies, when they set forward.

Thus, i. e. in this manner and order they marched.

29 ¶ And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father in law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.

Raguel, called also Reuel, Exod. ii. 18, who seems to be the same who is called Jethro, Exod. iii. 1, it being usual in Scripture for one person to have two or three names. And therefore this Hobab is not Jethro, but his son, which may seem more probable, because Jethro was old and unfit for travel, and desirous, as may well be thought, to die in his own country, whither he returned, Exod. xviii. 27; but Hobab was young and fitter for these journeys, and therefore entreated by Moses to stay and bear them company. Moses's father-in-law; which words are ambiguous, but seem to belong to Raguel, or Reuel, not to Hobab, though others are of another mind.

30 And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.

So he might truly and sincerely say, though after this speech he was overcome by the entreaties and persuasions of Moses. Or he did go and settle his affairs, and afterwards return; for we find his posterity settled among the Israelites. See Judg. i. 16; iv. 11, 18, &c.

31 And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.

To direct and guide us; for though the cloud determined them to a general place, yet many particulars might be uncertain and unknown to Moses, wherein Hobab, having long lived in those parts, might be able to advise him, as concerning the conveniences of water for their cattle, concerning the safety or danger of the several parts by reason of serpents or wild beasts, or enemies, in the parts adjoining to them, that so they might guard themselves better against them. Or this is to be understood of his directing them not so much in their way, as about great and difficult matters, wherein the counsel he had from God did not exclude the advice of men, as we see in Hobab's father Jethro, Exod. xviii. And it is probable this was the wise son of a wise father.

32 And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

33 ¶ And they departed from the mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them in the three days' journey, to search out a resting place for them.

Three days' journey, with continued journeys, only it seems most probable that the cloud made little pauses, that they might have time for sleep and necessary refreshments, which their natures required. And thus all writers, when they relate the continued journeys of persons for many days together, are to be understood with this exception. Before them; not so much in place, say some, for so it went in the midst, or at least after the first camp, as may seem from ver. 21, as in office and authority, as a general who is said to go before or lead his army, though he do not go in the very first place. But others more probably think that the ark, which indeed is not mentioned ver. 21, albeit in their stations it was in the middle, where also the cloud was, yet in their marches it went before them, as also the cloud did, and so the cloud was constantly over the ark, whether it stood or went; and therefore the ark is said to go before and direct them, not as if the ark could be seen of all the camps, which being carried only upon men's shoulders was impossible, but because the cloud, which always attended upon the ark, and did together with the ark constitute in a manner one sign of God's presence, did lead and direct them. To search out a resting-place, where they might safely and commodiously rest. But this is a metaphorical expression for discovering to them; for otherwise the ark could not search, and God, who knew all places and things, needed not to search.

34 And the cloud of the LORD was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.

And by night too, as was expressed before. So we must learn to compare places of Scripture, and to supply the defects of one out of another, as we do in all authors.

35 And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, °Rise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee.

36 And when it rested, he said, Return, O LORD, unto the † many thousands of Israel.

Or, give rest, i. e. a safe and quiet place, free from enemies and dangers.

CHAP. XI.

The murmuring of the people, for which the fire breaketh in upon them, 1. Moses prayeth to God; the fire is quenched, 2. The name of the place, and why called, 3. The people murmur again, and lust after flesh, 4—6. Manna described, 7—9. Moses's complaint and prayer, 10—15. God commandeth him to gather seventy of the elders of Israel to help him, 16, 17; promising them flesh to eat, 18—20. Moses' unbelief, 21, 22. God is angry with him, 23. Moses having gathered seventy of the elders of Israel together, rehearseth the words of the Lord to them, 24. God coming down in a cloud, taketh of Moses's spirit and giveth to the seventy; the effects thereof, 25. Eldad and Medad prophesy in the camp, 26—29. God giveth them quails to eat, 30—32; and smiteth the people with a very great plague, 33, 34.

AND ^a when the people || complained, † it displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it: ^b and his anger was kindled; and the °fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the uttermost parts of the camp.

Complained, or, murmured; the occasion whereof seems to be their last three days' journey in a vast howling wilderness, without any benefit; and thereupon the remembrance of their long abode in the wilderness, and the prospect and fear of many other tedious, and fruitless, and dangerous journeys, whereby they were like to be long delayed from coming to that rest, that land of milk and honey, which God had promised them, and which they thirsted after. The fire of the Lord, i. e. a fire sent from God in an extraordinary manner, possibly from the pillar of cloud and fire, or from heaven, as 2 Kings i. 12. In the uttermost parts of the camp; either because the sin began there among the mixt multitude, who probably had their place there; or amongst those who were feeble and weary with their last journey, and therefore hindmost in the march; or in mercy to the people, whom he would rather awaken to repentance than utterly destroy, and therefore he sent it into the skirts, and not the heart and midst of the camp.

2 And the people cried unto Moses; and when Moses ^d prayed unto the LORD, the fire † was quenched.

The people, the murmurers, being penitent; or others for fear. Unto Moses, whom they knew to be very prevalent with God.

3 And he called the name of the place || Taberah: because the fire of the LORD burnt among them.

Taberah, from this fire; as it was called Kibroth-hattavah from another occasion, ver. 34, 35; Numb. xxxiii. 16; as it is no new thing in Scripture for persons and places to have two names. Both these names were imposed as monuments of the people's sin, and of God's just judgment. See Deut. ix. 7, 22, 24.

4 ¶ And the °mixt multitude that was among them † fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also † wept again, and said, † Who shall give us flesh to eat?

The mixt multitude, consisting of Egyptians or other people, which being affected with God's miraculous works in Egypt, and thereupon believing the promise of God to carry them to a land of milk and honey, for their own advantage joined themselves to the Israelites, Exod. xii. 38, and now finding themselves sadly disappointed, they discover their evil minds. The children of Israel, whose special relation and obligation to God should have restrained them from such carriages. Wept again: this word relates either to their former murmuring upon this occasion a twelvemonth before, Exod. xvi. 2, or rather to their complaining mentioned ver. 1, to note the aggravation of their sin, that having just now sinned in the same kind, and sorely smarted for their sin, and being but newly delivered from their fears and dangers caused thereby, they forthwith return to their vomit and murmur again, and that more passionately than before, expressing themselves in tears and bitter words. Flesh: this word is here taken generally, so as to include fish, as the next words show, and as it is used 1 Cor. xv. 39. They had indeed flesh and cattle which they brought with them out of Egypt, but these were reserved for breed to be carried into Canaan, and were so few that they would scarce have served them for a month, as may be gathered from ver. 20—22.

5 ^e We remember the fish, which we ^g ex. 16. 3. did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons; and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

Freely; either without price, for fish was very plentiful, and fishing was there free; or with a very small price; for nothing is sometimes put for a little, as John xviii. 20; Acts xxvii. 33; and none for few, as Jer. viii. 6; 1 Cor. ii. 8. And this is the more probable, because the Egyptians might not taste of fish, nor of the leeks and onions, which they worshipped for gods, and therefore the Israelites, who speak these words, might have them there upon cheaper terms.

6 But now ^h our soul is dried away: ^h ch. 21. 5. there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.

Our soul; either, 1. Our life, as the soul signifies, Gen. ix. 5; Psal. xxxiii. 19; Job xxxvi. 14; or, 2. Our body, which is oft signified by the soul, as Psal. xvi. 10; xxxv. 12; cv. 18. So Lev. xix. 28; xxi. 1; Numb. v. 2. Is dried away; is withered, and pines away; which possibly might be true through envy and discontent, and inordinate appetite, as 2 Sam. xiii. 4; Prov. xiv. 30. Before our eyes; Heb. our eyes see or look to nothing but this manna. They speak as if the manna were only useful to please their eyes with its fine colour and shape, but not to satisfy their appetites, or sustain their natures.

7 And ⁱ the manna was as coriander ⁱ Ex. 16. 14, seed, and the † colour thereof as the ⁺ Heb. eye of it as the colour of ^k bdellium. ^k Gen. 2. 12.

As coriander seed; not for colour, for that is black, but for shape and figure. Bdellium is either, 1. The gum of a tree, of a white and bright colour; or rather, 2. A gem or precious stone, as the Hebrew doctors take it; and particularly a pearl, as some render it, wherewith the manna doth manifestly agree both in its colour, which is white, Exod. xvi. 14, and in its figure, which is round. See more on Gen. ii. 12.

8 And the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and ^l the taste of it was ^l Ex. 16. 31. as the taste of fresh oil.

Or, of the most excellent oil; or, of the flour of oil; or, as others, of cakes or paste made with the best oil, the word cakes being easily supplied out of the foregoing member of the verse; or, which is not much differing, like wafers made with honey, as it is said Exod. xvi. 31. The nature and use of manna is here thus particularly described, to show the greatness of their sin in despising such excellent food as this was.

9 And ^m when the dew fell upon the ^m Ex. 16. 13, camp in the night, the manna fell upon it. ^{14.}

And then the dew fell again upon it and covered it, as we 10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and ⁿ the anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

In the door of his tent; to note, that they were not ashamed of their sin. Moses was displeased; partly, for their great unthankfulness; partly, foreseeing the dreadful judgments coming upon them, and partly, for his own burden expressed in the following verses.

11 ° And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

Why didst thou not hear my prayer, when I desired thou wouldst excuse me, and commit the care and government of this unruly people to some other person? See Exod. iii. 11; iv. 10.

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, ^p Carry them in thy bosom, as a ^q nursing father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou ^r swarest unto their fathers?

Have I begotten them; are they my children, that I should be obliged to provide food and all things for their necessity and desire? As a nursing-father beareth the sucking-child; which expression shows the tender care and affection that governors by the command of God ought to have towards their people.

13 ° Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 ° I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

All this people, i. e. the burden of providing for and satisfying of them. Object. How was he alone, when there were others added to help him, Exod. xviii. 21, 24? Answer. Those were only assistant to him in civil causes and smaller matters, but the harder and greater affairs, such as this unquestionably was, were brought to Moses and determined by him alone, Exod. xviii. 22.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, ^s kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not ^t see my wretchedness.

Heb. my evil, i. e. my intolerable anguish and torment, arising from the insuperable difficulty of my office and work of ruling this people, and from the dread of their utter extirpation which they will bring upon themselves, and the dishonour which thence will accrue to God and to religion; as if not I only, but God also, were an impostor. Seeing is here put for feeling, as to see death, Psal. lxxxix. 48; Luke ii. 26, is to suffer it; and to see the salvation of God, Psal. l. 23; xci. 16, is to enjoy it.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me ^v seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and ^w officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.

Of whom see Exod. iii. 16; v. 6; Lev. iv. 15; Deut. xvi. 18. Whom thou knowest to be the elders; whom thou by experience discernest to be elders not only in years, and name, and place, but also in wisdom, and gravity, and authority with the people.

17 And I will ^a come down and talk with thee there: and ^b I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

I will come down, not by local motion, but by my powerful presence and operation. See Gen. xi. 5; Exod. xxxiv. 5. Will put it upon them, i. e. I will give the same Spirit to them which I have given to thee. But as the Spirit was not conveyed to them from or through Moses, but immediately from God, so the Spirit or its gifts were not by this means impaired in Moses. The Spirit is here put for the gifts of the Spirit, as it is Numb. xxvii. 18; Joel ii. 28; John vii. 39; Acts xix. 2, 6; 1 Cor. xiv. 12, 32; and particularly for the Spirit of prophecy, ver. 25, whereby they were enabled, as Moses had been and still was, to discern hidden and future things, and resolve doubtful and difficult cases, which made them fit for government. It is observable, that God would not, and therefore men should not, call any persons to any office for which they were not sufficiently fit and qualified.

18 And say thou unto the people, ^c Sanctify yourselves against to morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept ^d in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? ^e for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

Sanctify yourselves, i. e. prepare yourselves, either to receive the miraculous blessings of God, the flesh you desire; or rather, Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel, in the way of his judgments, and to receive the punishment which God will inflict upon you; for it is evident, from ver. 20, that God answered them with a curse instead of a blessing. Prepare yourselves by true repentance, that you may either obtain some mitigation of the plague, or, whilst your bodies are destroyed by the flesh you desire and eat, ver. 33, 34, your souls may be saved from the wrath of God. Sanctifying is oft used for preparing, as Jer. vi. 4; xii. 3; li. 28. In the ears of the Lord; not secretly in your closets, but openly and impudently in the doors of your tents, ver. 10, calling heaven and earth to witness your cries and complaints.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 ^f But even a ^g whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, ^h Why came we forth out of Egypt?

Till it come out at your nostrils; which meat loathed and violently vomited up frequently doth; and it be loathsome unto you, being glutted with the abundance of it. Thus God destroys them by granting their desires, and turns even their blessings into curses; whilst he deals much more favourably with Moses, though he also fell into the same sin with the people, i. e. impatience and murmuring. But God will make a great difference between persons and persons, and between Moses's sins of infirmity and the people's presumptuous and oft-repeated provocations. Ye have despised the Lord, i. e. you have lightly esteemed his bounty and manifold blessings in manna and other things, and have preferred the leeks, onions, &c. of Egypt before them all; you have slighted and distrusted his promises and providence after so long and large experience of it. Which is among you; who is present and resident with you to observe all your carriages, and to punish your offences. This is added as a great aggravation of the crime, to sin in the presence of the Judge. Why came we forth out of Egypt? Why did God do us such an injury? Why did we so foolishly follow and obey him in coming forth?

21 And Moses said, ⁱ The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said,

I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

Six hundred thousand footmen, fit for war, Exod. xii. 37, besides women, children, &c. That Moses speaks this as doubting or distrusting God's words is evident enough from ver. 22, 23. And that Moses was not remarkably punished for this as he was afterward for the same sin, Numb. xx., next to God's good pleasure may be imputed to the different circumstances of this and that sin: this was the first great offence of this kind, and therefore more easily passed by; that was after warning, and against more light and experience. This seems to have been spoken secretly in Moses's breast; that openly and publicly before the people, and to their scandal, and therefore it was fit to be openly and severely punished to prevent the contagion of that example.

22 ¹ Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?

Will they be sufficient for them? or where shall they have more?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^k Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether ^l my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

Waxed short, i. e. less able to work such great and glorious miracles as I have done.

24 ¶ And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and ^m gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

Moses went out of the tabernacle, into which he entered to receive God's answers from the mercy-seat, Numb. vii. 89. The seventy men: either they are called seventy from the stated number, though two of them were lacking, ver. 26, as the apostles are called the twelve, Matt. xxvii. 20, when one of that number was absent; or he is said to have gathered them, when he gave command to gather them. Round about the tabernacle; partly, that the awe of God might be imprinted upon their hearts, that they might more seriously undertake and more faithfully manage their high employment; partly, to gain them the more authority and respect from the people; and principally, because that was the place where God manifested himself, and gave his blessings, and therefore there he would bestow his Spirit upon them.

25 And the LORD ⁿ came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, ^o when the spirit rested upon them, ^p they prophesied, and did not cease.

Rested upon them, i. e. not only moved them for a time, but took up his settled abode with them, because the use and end of this gift was not temporary, but perpetual; they prophesied, i. e. discoursed of the word and works of God in a singular and marvellous manner, as the prophets did. So this word is used 1 Sam. x. 5, 6; Joel ii. 28; Acts ii. 17; 1 Cor. xiv. 3. Yet were they not hereby constituted prophets or teachers, but civil magistrates and rulers, who together with the Spirit of government, which is here sufficiently implied, received also the Spirit of prophecy, as a sign and seal, both to themselves and to the people, that God had called them to that employment, and would be with them in it, as it was with Saul upon the same occasion, 1 Sam. x. 10. Did not cease, either for that day; they continued in that exercise all that day, and, it may be, all the night too, as it is said of Saul, 1 Sam. xix. 24; or afterwards also, to note that this was a continued gift conferred upon them, to enable them the better to discharge their magistracy; which was more expedient for them than for the rulers of other people, because the Jews were under a theocracy, or the government of God, and even their civil controversies were decided out of that word of God which the prophets expounded; and in their wilderness condition they had frequent occasions of seeking counsel from God, which was the work of prophets, and they were to determine all things agreeably to the mind and will of God, which therefore they were obliged to study. Others translate the words, and they added not; so the sense is, They prophesied only this day for an assurance of vocation to and due qualification for their work, but afterwards they prophesied no more; the gift of prophecy ceased in them, and only the Spirit of government rested upon them.

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them; and they were of them that were written, but ^q went not out unto the tabernacle: and they prophesied in the camp.

In the camp; not going to the tabernacle, as the rest did; either modestly declining that high employment from a humble sense of their own insufficiency, as Saul did, 1 Sam. x. 22; or not having sufficient or seasonable notice to repair thither; or, being detained in the camp and in their dwellings, whether by uncleanness, or sickness, or some urgent occasion, not without God's special providence, that so the miracle might be more evident, and their call and authority more unquestionable, to all the people. Were written, to wit, in a book or paper, by Moses, who by God's direction nominated the fittest and worthiest persons.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

Fearing lest his authority should be diminished by their prophesying; and thereby, as by the signal given at this time, taking authority to themselves without his knowledge and consent.

28 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, ^r forbid them.

One of his young men, or one of his choice ministers, a chosen or excellent person; which may be emphatically added, to note that even great and good men may mistake and misjudge about the works of God. Or, from his youth, as the words will bear, and the Chaldee, Syriac, &c. render it. So it may be added as a reason why Joshua above others were concerned for Moses's honour and authority. He feared either schism or sedition, or that by their usurpation of authority independently upon Moses, and separately from him, his power and esteem might be lessened, as the next words show.

29 And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? ^s would God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and that the LORD would put his spirit upon them!

Enviest thou; art thou grieved because the gifts and graces of God are imparted to others besides me? Compare John iii. 26. He saith prophets, not rulers, for that he knew was absurd and impossible.

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

Among the people, to exercise the gifts and authority now or formerly received.

31 ¶ And there went forth a 'wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, ^t as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

A wind from the Lord, i. e. an extraordinary and miraculous wind, both for its vehemency and for its effects ⁺ Heb. as it were the way of a day.

Quails; a delicious and very nourishing food, which, considering their greedy appetite, and the newness and plenty of it, disposed them to surfeits and other distempers of body, and prepared the way for the following plague. God gave them quails once before, Exod. xvi. 13, but neither in the same quantity, nor with the same design and effect as now. From the sea; principally from the Red Sea, and both sides of it; where, by the report of ancient heathen writers, they were then in great numbers, and, no doubt, were wonderfully increased by God's special providence for this very occasion. Two cubits high; not as if the quails did cover all the ground two cubits high for a day's journey on each side of the camp, for then there had been no place left where they could spread them all abroad round about the camp, as it is said they did, ver. 32; but the meaning is, that the quails came and fell down round about the camp for a whole day's journey on each side of it, and that in all that space they lay here and there in great heaps, which were oftentimes two cubits high.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten "homers: and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

Stood up, or rather rose up, which word is oft used for attempting or beginning to do any business. All night; some at one time, and some at the other, and some, through their greediness or diffidence, at both times. Ten homers, i. e. ten ass loads; which if it seem incredible, you must consider, 1. That the gatherers here were not all the people, which could not be without great confusion and other inconveniences; but some on the behalf of all, possibly one for each family, or the like, while the rest were exercised about other necessary things. So the meaning is not that every Israelite had so much for his share, but that every collector gathered so much for the family or others by whom he was intrusted. 2. That the people did not gather for their present use only, but for a good while to come, as we shall see; and being greedy and distrustful of God's goodness, it is not strange if they gathered much more than they needed. 3. That the word rendered homers may signify heaps, as it doth Exod. viii. 14; Judg. xv. 16; Hab. iii. 15, and ten is oft put for many; and so the sense is, that every one gathered several heaps. If yet the number seems incredible, it must be further known, 4. That heathen and other authors affirm, that in those eastern and southern countries quails are innumerable, so that in one part of Italy, within the compass of five miles, there were taken about a hundred thousand of them every day for a month together; and that sometimes they fly so thick over the sea, that being weary they fall into ships, sometimes in such numbers that they sink them with their weight, as Varro and Solinus affirm. And Athenæus relates, that in Egypt, a country prodigiously populous, as all agree, they were in such plenty, that all those vast numbers of people could not consume them, but were forced to salt and keep them for their future use. So that there is no need at all that God should create innumerable quails for this purpose; which yet if it were affirmed he did, atheists and anti-scripturists have no occasion of triumph, since they must either own the creation of the world, which is a far greater miracle, or ascribe the production of the world to a casual jumble of atoms, which is more senseless and ridiculous than all the fables of the poets. Spread them all abroad, that so they may dry them, and salt them, and preserve them for their future use, according to what they had seen and learned in Egypt.

x Ps. 78. 30; 31. 33 And while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people, and the LORD smote the people with a very great plague.

Chewed, Heb. cut off, to wit, from their mouths, which is here understood, and expressed Joel i. 5, i. e. ere it was taken away, as the flocks are said to be cut off from the fold, Hab. iii. 17, when they are lost and perished. The sense is, before they had done eating their quails, which lasted for a month, as appears from ver. 20. A very great plague; whether it was leanness sent into them, Psal. cvi. 15, whereby the food was deprived of its nourishing power, which it hath only from God's blessing; or surfeit, a punishment most suitable to their sin, and most likely to follow their intemperate desire and use of this food; or the pestilence; it is not much material: but a great and sore plague unquestionably it was. Quest. Why did God so sorely punish the people's murmuring and complaining for lack of flesh here, when he spared them after the same sin, Exod. xvi.? Ans. Because this sin was a far greater sin than that, and aggravated with worse circumstances; as proceeding not from necessity, as that did, when as yet they had no food, but from mere lust and wantonness, when they had manna constantly given them; as committed after large experience of God's care and kindness, after God had pardoned their former sins, and after God had in a solemn and terrible manner made known his laws and duty to them.

34 And he called the name of that place ||Kibroth-hattaavah: because there they buried the people that lusted.

|| That is, The graves of lust. Deut. 9. 22.

Kibroth-hattaavah, Heb. The graves of lust, i. e. of the men that lusted, as it here follows. The abstract for the concrete, which is frequent; as poverty, 2 Kings xxiv. 14, pride, Psal. xxxvi. 11, deceit, sins, Prov. xiii. 6, &c., dreams, Jer. xxvii. 9, are put for men who are poor, or proud, or deceitful, or sinful, or dreamers. And it notes that this plague did not seize upon all that did eat of the quails, for then all had been destroyed, but only upon those who were inordinate both in the desire and use of them.

35 And the people journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah unto Hazeroth; and †abode at Hazeroth.

† Heb. they were in, &c.

CHAP. XII.

Miriam and Aaron murmur against Moses, 1—3. God commandeth him, Aaron, and Miriam to come to the tabernacle, which they did, 4, 5. God rebuketh Aaron and Miriam, 6—9. Miriam becometh leprous, 10. Aaron humbling himself before Moses, 11, 12; he intercedeth for him, 13. Miriam remains without the camp seven days, 14, 15.

AND Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses because of the ||Ethiopian woman whom he had married: for he had †married an Ethiopian woman.

|| Or, Cushite. a Ex. 2. 21. † Heb. taken.

God permitted Miriam and Aaron to murmur against their brother, partly to exercise and discover his admirable meekness and patience for the instruction of after-ages; and partly, that by this shaking Moses's authority might take the deeper root, and the people might be deterred from all sedition and rebellion against him by this example. Miriam seems to be first named, because she was the chief instigator or first mover of the sedition; wherefore she also is more eminently punished. The Ethiopian woman was either, 1. Zipporah, who is here called an Ethiopian, in the Hebrew a Cushite, because she was a Midianite; the word Cush being generally used in Scripture, not for Ethiopia properly so called below Egypt, but for Arabia, as some late learned men have evidently proved from 2 Kings xix. 9; 2 Chron. xxi. 16; Ezek. xxix. 10; xxx. 8, 9; Hab. iii. 7, and other places. If she be meant, as it is commonly conceived, I suppose they did not quarrel with him for marrying her, because that was done long since, but for indulging her too much, and being swayed by her and her relations, by whom they might think he was persuaded to make this innovation, and to choose seventy rulers, as he had been formerly, Exod. xviii.; by which copartnership in government they thought their authority and reputation much diminished, especially when no notice was taken nor use made of them in the choice, but all was done by the direction of Moses, and for his assistance in the government. And because they durst not accuse God, who was the chief Agent in it, they charge Moses, his instrument, as the manner of men is.

Or, 2. Some other woman, though not named in Scripture, whom he married either whilst Zipporah lived, or rather because she was now dead, though that, as many other things, be not recorded. For as the quarrel seems to be about his marrying a stranger, so it is probable it was a late and fresh occasion about which they contended, and not a thing done forty years ago. And it was lawful for him as well as any other to marry an Ethiopian or Arabian woman, provided she were, as doubtless this woman was, a sincere proselyte, which were by the law of God admitted to the same privileges with the Israelites, Exod. xii. 48; so there might be many reasons why Moses might choose to marry such a person rather than an Israelite, or why God so ordered it by his providence, either because she was a person of eminent worth and virtue, or because God intended that the government should not be continued in the hands of Moses's children, and therefore would have some political blemish to be upon the family, as being strangers by one parent. And this they here urge as a blemish to Moses also.

2 And they said, Hath the LORD indeed spoken only by Moses? ^bhath he not spoken also by us? And the LORD ^cheard it.

Are not we prophets as well as he? so Aaron was made, Exod. iv. 15, 16, and so Miriam is called, Exod. xv. 20. See also Micah vi. 4. And Moses hath debased and mixed the holy seed, which we have not done. Why then should he take all power to himself, and make rulers as he pleaseth, without consulting us in the case? The Lord heard it, i. e. observed their words and carriage to Moses.

3 (Now the man Moses ^dwas ^every meek, above all the men which ^fwere upon the face of the earth.)

This is added as the reason why Moses took no notice of their reproach, but was one that heard it not, and why God did so speedily and severely plead Moses's cause, because he did not avenge himself. Quest. 1. Did it become Moses thus to commend himself? Ans. 1. The holy penmen of Scripture are not to be measured or censured by other profane writers, because they are guided by special instinct in every thing they write; and as they oftentimes publish their own and their near relations' greatest faults, where it may be useful to the honour of God, and the edification of the church in after-ages; so it is not strange if for the same reasons sometimes they commend themselves, especially when they are forced to it by the insolence and contempt of their adversaries, which was Moses's case here, in which case St. Paul also commends himself, 2 Cor. xi. 5, &c.; xii. 11, 12; which they might the better do, because all their writings and carriage made it evident to all men that they did not this out of vain-glory, and that they were exalted above the affectation of men's praises, and the dread of men's reproaches. 2. This might be added, as some other clauses were, by some succeeding prophet, which was no disparagement to the authority of the Holy Scriptures, seeing it is all written by one hand, though divers pens be used by it. Quest. 2. How was Moses so meek, when we oftentimes read of his anger, as Exod. xi. 8; xvi. 20; xxxii. 19; Lev. x. 16; Numb. xvi. 15; xx. 10, 11, compared with Psal. cvi. 32, 33? Ans. 1. The meekest men upon earth are provoked sometimes, yea, oftener than Moses was. 2. True meekness doth not exclude all anger, but only such as is unjust, or immoderate, or implacable. Moses was and ought to be angry where God was offended and dishonoured, as he was in almost all the places alleged.

4 ^eAnd the LORD spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam, Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out.

Suddenly; partly to show his great respect unto Moses, and unto the grace of meekness; and partly to stifle the beginnings of the sedition, that this example might not spread amongst the people, who had too much of that leaven among them. Come out, to wit, out of your private dwellings, and from amongst the people, both that they may not infect them by such scandalous words, and partly that you may know my pleasure and your own doom.

5 ^fAnd the LORD came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood ^gin the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth.

In the door of the tabernacle, where they stood without, not being admitted into the tabernacle, as Aaron used to be; which is noted as a sign of God's displeasure.

6 And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, ^hI the LORD will make myself known unto him ⁱin a vision, and will speak unto him ^jin a dream.

If you be prophets, as you pretend, yet know there is a difference among prophets, nor do I put equal authority and honour upon all of them. By a vision God represents things to the mind of a prophet when he is awake, as Gen. xv. 1; xvi. 2; Dan. viii. 18; x. 8. By a dream God manifests his mind to them when asleep, as Gen. xx. 3; xxxviii. 12.

7 ^kMy servant Moses is not so, ^lwho is faithful in all ^mmine house.

i. e. Whom I have set over all my house, i. e. my church and people, and therefore over you, and who hath discharged his office faithfully, and not partially and self-seekingly, as you falsely accuse him.

8 With him will I speak ⁿmouth to mouth, even ^oapparently, and not in dark speeches; and ^pthe similitude of the LORD shall he behold: wherefore then ^qwere ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

Mouth to mouth, i. e. distinctly, by an articulate voice; immediately, not by an interpreter, nor by shadows and representations in his fancy, as it is in visions and dreams; and familiarly. This is called speaking face to face, 2 Epist. of John, ver. 12, and 3 Epist. ver. 14. Apparently; plainly and certainly. Not in dark speeches; not in parables, similitudes, riddles, dark resemblances; as by showing a boiling pot, an almond tree, &c. to Jeremia, a chariot with wheels, &c. to Ezekiel. The similitude of the Lord; not the face or essence of God, which no man can see and live, Exod. xxxiii. 20; it being invisible, Col. i. 15, and never seen by man, John i. 18; but some singular manifestation of his glorious presence, as Exod. xxxiii. 11, 20, &c.; xxxiv. 5, &c.; Deut. xxxiv. 10. Yea, the Son of God appeared to him in a human shape, which he took up for a time, that he might give him a foretaste of his future incarnation. My servant; who is so in such an eminent and extraordinary manner.

9 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against them; and he departed.

From the door of the tabernacle, in token of his great displeasure, not waiting for their answer, and judging them unworthy of any further discourse.

10 And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and, ^rbehold, Miriam ^sbecame ^tleprous, ^uwhite as snow; and Aaron looked upon Miriam, and, behold, ^vshe was leprous.

From off the tabernacle; not from the whole tabernacle, for then they must have removed, but from that part of the tabernacle whither it was come, to that part which was directly over the mercy-seat, where it constantly abode. Miriam became leprous; she, and not Aaron, either because she was first or chief in the transgression, or because God would not have his worship either interrupted or dishonoured, which it must have been if Aaron had been leprous. White as snow: this kind of leprosy was the most virulent and incurable of all. See Exod. iv. 6; 2 Kings v. 27. It is true, when the leprosy began in a particular part, and thence spread itself over all the flesh by degrees, and at last made it all white, that was an evidence of the cure of the leprosy, Lev. xiii. 12, 13; but it was otherwise when one was suddenly and extraordinarily smitten with this universal whiteness, which showed the great corruption of the whole mass of blood, as it was here.

11 And Aaron said unto Moses, Alas, my lord, I beseech thee, *lay not the sin upon us, wherein we have done foolishly, and wherein we have sinned.

Let not the guilt and punishment of this sin rest upon us, upon her in this kind, upon me in any other kind, but pray to God for the pardon and removal of it.

12 Let her not be *as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh out of his mother's womb.

As one dead; either naturally, because part of her flesh was putrefied and dead, and not to be restored but by the mighty power of God; or morally, because she was cut off from all converse with others, Lev. xiii. 46. When he cometh out of his mother's womb; like an untimely birth, without due shape and proportion, or like a still-born child that hath been for some time dead in the womb, which when it comes forth is white and putrefied, and part of it consumed.

13 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, "If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days? let her be *shut out from the camp seven days, and after that let her be received in again.

Spit in her face, i. e. expressed some eminent token of indignation and contempt, which this was, Job xxx 10; Isa. i. 6. Should she not be ashamed, and withdraw herself from her father's presence? as Jonathan did upon a like occasion, 1 Sam. xx. 34. So though God healed her according to Moses's request, yet he would have her publicly bear the shame of her sin, and be a warning to others to keep them from the same transgression. Seven days, the time appointed for cleansing the unclean. See Numb. vi. 9; xxxi. 19.

15 ¶ And Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days: and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again.

Which was a testimony of respect to her both from God and from the people, God so ordering it, partly lest she should be overwhelmed by such a public rebuke from God, and partly lest, she being a prophetess, together with her person, the gift of prophecy should come into contempt.

16 And afterward the people removed from *Hazeroth, and pitched in the wilderness of Paran.

Hazeroth, where they abode, as is said, Numb. xi. 35, for Miriam's sake. In the wilderness of Paran, i. e. in another part of the same wilderness, as may be gathered from Numb. x. 12: see also Deut. xxxiii. 2. It is possible they might have removed out of one part of that wilderness into another wilderness, and then returned again into another part of it, as we know the Israelites had many strange windings and turnings in their wilderness travels. And this part was more especially called Rithmah, Numb. xxxiii. 18, and Kadesh-barnea, Numb. xiii. 26; Deut. i. 19, which were two noted places in that part, both which seem to be comprehended within their camp, or near adjoining to it.

CHAP. XIII.

God commandeth Moses to send spies to search out the land of Canaan, 1—3. Their names, 4—16. Moses's commandment where to go, and what to do, 17—20. Their return with the fruits of the land, and their report, 23—29. They are encouraged by Caleb, 30; but ten others dishearten them by their false report, 31—33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

In answer to the people's petition about it, as is evident from Deut. i. 22. And it is probable from the following story, that the people desired it out of diffidence of God's promise and providence, though Moses liked of it as a prudent course to learn where or how to make the first invasion. And God granted their desire for their trial and punishment, as well knowing from what root it came.

2 *Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them.

Do as the people press thee to do. Of every tribe of their fathers, i. e. which comes from their several parents or patriarchs. A ruler; a person of wisdom and authority, which might make his witness more considerable with the people.

3 And Moses by the commandment of the LORD sent them ^bfrom the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 °Of the tribe of Judah, °Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim, °Oshea the son of Nun.

Called also Joshua, ver. 16. 9 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu.

10 Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Susi.

i. e. Of that part of the tribe of Joseph which is peculiarly called the tribe of Manasseh, as the other part of it was called the tribe of Ephraim, ver. 8. The name of Joseph is elsewhere appropriated to Ephraim, as Ezek. xxxvii. 16, 19; Rev. vii. 8; here to Manasseh; possibly to aggravate the sin of the ruler of this tribe, who did so basely degenerate from his noble ancestor, Joseph.

12 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land.

And Moses called °Oshea the son of Nun ^fJehoshua.

Oshea notes a desire of salvation, signifying, Save, we pray thee, but Jehoshua, or Joshua, includes a promise of salvation, that he should save, or that God by his hands should save the people. So this was a prophecy of his succession to Moses in the government, and of the success of his arms.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way ^esouthward, and go up into ^hthe mountain:

Southward, i. e. into the southern part of Canaan, which was the nearest part, and the worst too, being dry and desert, Josh. xv. 1, 3; Judg. i. 15; Psal. cxxvi. 4, and therefore fittest for them to enter and pass through with less observation. Into the mountain, i. e. into the mountainous country, and thence into the valleys, and so take an exact survey of the whole land.

18 And see the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

What it is, both for largeness, and for nature and quality; as is more particularly expressed, ver. 19, 20.

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds;

Good or bad, healthful or unwholesome, fruitful or barren. In tents, as the Arabians did; or in unwall'd villages, which, like tents, are exposed to an enemy.

20 And what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein, or not. And be ye of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. Now the time was the time of the firstripe grapes.

Fat; rich and fertile. Be ye of good courage; doubt not but God will preserve you in this dangerous journey, and be not dismayed nor discouraged if you find the people numerous, potent, and well fortified.

21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land from the wilderness of Zin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

The wilderness of Zin, in the south of Canaan, Numb. xxxiv. 3; Josh. xv. 3; differing from the wilderness of Sin, which was nigh unto Egypt, Exod. xvi. 1. To Hamath; i. e. from the south they passed through the whole land even to the northern parts of it, Rehob, a city in the north-west part, Josh. xix. 28; Judg. i. 31; and Hamath, a city in the north-east part, Josh. xix. 35; Ezek. xlvi. 17. And that they might more expeditiously and securely perform this office, it is probable that they divided themselves into several small parties, and informed themselves not only by their eye, but also by their ear, and the information of persons, of whom they inquired about the nature and condition of their land.

22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto Hebron; where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, ° the children of Anak, were. (Now Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt.)

Here Moses having generally described their progress and course from south to north, now returns more particularly to relate some memorable places and passages, as that having entered the land in the southern parts, they travelled then till they came to Hebron. Came, Heb. he came, to wit, Caleb, as appears from Josh. xiv. 9, 12, 14; for, as was now intimated, the spies distributed their work among them, and went either severally, or by pairs; and, it seems, the survey of this part was left to Caleb. Anak; a famous giant so called, whose children these are called, either more generally, as all giants sometimes were, or rather more specially, because Arba, from whom Hebron was called Kirjath-arba, was the father of Anak, Josh. xv. 13. And this circumstance is mentioned as an evidence of the goodness of that land and soil, because the giants chose it for their habitation. Before Zoan in Egypt: this seems to be noted to confront the Egyptians, who vainly boasted of the antiquity of their city Zoan above all places.

23 ¶ And they came unto the brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

Upon a staff; either for the weight of it, considering the length of the way they were to carry it, or for the preservation of it whole and entire. In those eastern and southern countries there are vines and grapes of an extraordinary bigness, as Strabo and Pliny affirm.

24 The place was called the brook of Eshcol, because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after forty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and shewed them the fruit of the land.

Kadesh; so called by way of abbreviation, which is frequent in Hebrew names, for Kadesh-barnea, Deut. i. 19, which some rashly confound with Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin, Numb. xx. 1; xxvii. 14; xxxiii. 36; into which they came not till the fortieth year after their coming out of Egypt, as appears from Numb. xxxiii. 37, 38; whereas they were in this Kadesh in the second year, and before they received the sentence of their forty years' abode in the wilderness.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

They told him in the audience of the people, as appears from ver. 30. They craftily begin their relation with commendations, that their following slanders might be more easily believed.

28 Nevertheless the people be strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great: and moreover we saw the children of Anak there.

Strong; potent for the strength of their body, and the valour of their minds.

29 The Amalekites dwell in the land of the south: and the Hittites, and the Jebusites, and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains: and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan.

The south, where we are to enter the land; and they who were so eager and fierce against us that they came into the wilderness to fight with us, will without doubt oppose us when we come close by their land, and are about to settle in their neighbourhood, the rath, to revenge themselves for their former loss and shame received by us. Therefore they mention them, though they were no Canaanites. In the mountains, i. e. in the mountainous country in the south-east part of the land; so that you cannot enter there without great difficulty, both because of the noted strength and valour of those people, and because of the advantage they have from the mountains. By the sea; not the midland sea, which is commonly understood by that expression, but the Salt or Dead Sea, as appears, 1. Because it is that sea which is next to Jordan, as here follows. 2. Because the Canaanites dwelt principally in those parts, and not near the midland sea. So these guard the entrance on the east side, as the others do on the south.

30 And Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

Caleb, together with Joshua, as is manifest from Numb. xiv. 6, 7, 30; but Caleb alone is here mentioned, possibly because he spake first and most, which he might better do, because he might be presumed to be more impartial than Joshua, who being Moses's minister might be thought to speak only what he knew his master would like. Stilled the people; which implies either that they had begun to murmur, or that by their looks and carriage they discovered that grief and anger which boiled in their breasts. Before Moses, or towards Moses, against whom they were incensed, as the man who had brought them into such sad Against Moses and against Aaron, as the instruments and occasions of their present calamity. That we had died in this wilderness: it was not long before they had their desire, and did die in the wilderness.

3 And wherefore hath the Lord brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

From the instruments they rise higher, and strike at God the chief cause and author of their journey; by which we see the prodigious growth and progress of sin when it is not resisted. Should be a prey to the Canaanites, whose land we were made to believe we should possess.

A captain, instead of Moses, one who will be more faithful to our interest than he. This was but a purpose or a desire, and yet it is imputed to them as if they had done it, Neh. ix. 16, 17, they appointed a captain, &c., even as Abraham's purpose to offer up Isaac is reckoned for the deed, Heb. xi. 17. Let us return into Egypt. Stupendous madness! Whence should they have protection against the many hazards, and provision against all the wants of the wilderness? Could they expect either God's cloud to cover and guide them, or manna from heaven to feed them? Who should conduct them over the Red Sea? or, if they went another way, who should defend them against those nations whose borders they were to pass? What entertainment could they expect from the Egyptians, whom they had deserted and brought to so much ruin?

stone them with stones. And ⁹ the glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

Now in the extremity of danger, to rescue his faithful servants, and to stop the rage of the people. In the tabernacle, i. e. upon or above the tabernacle, where the cloud usually resided, in which the glory of God did appear upon occasion, and now in a more illustrious manner, as the state of things required.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, How long will this people ¹ provoke me? and how long will it be ere they ² believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them?

12 I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and ³ will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they.

This was not an absolute determination, as the event showed, but only a commination, like that of Nineveh's destruction within forty days, with a condition implied, except there be speedy repentance, or powerful intercession.

13 ¶ And ⁴ Moses said unto the LORD, Then the Egyptians shall hear it, (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

Then, i. e. in case thou dost utterly destroy them. Thou broughtest up this people, whereby thou didst get great honour to thyself, which now thou wilt certainly lose.

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: ⁵ for they have heard that thou LORD art among this people, that thou LORD art seen face to face, and that ⁶ thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

To the inhabitants of this land, for there was much intercession between these two nations.

15 ¶ Now if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying,

As one man, i. e. altogether, or to a man; and suddenly as it were by one blow, as if all had but one neck.

16 Because the LORD was not ⁷ able to bring this people into the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

His power was quite spent in bringing them out of Egypt, and could not finish the work he had begun and had sworn to do.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my LORD be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

Be great, i. e. appear to be great, discover its greatness; a real verb put for a declarative, or the thing for the manifestation of the thing. And this may be understood either, 1. Of God's power in preserving the people, and carrying them on into Canaan, which sense may seem to be favoured by the foregoing verse, where the Egyptians deny that God had power to do so. And according to that sense he adds the following words, not as an explication of this power, but as an argument to move him to show forth his power for his people notwithstanding their sins, according as, or rather because, (as the Hebrew word is oft rendered,) he had spoken, saying, &c., and so he should maintain the honour and the truth of his own name, or of those titles which he had ascribed to himself. Or, 2. The power of his grace and mercy, or the greatness of his mercy, as he calls it, ver. 19, in pardoning of this and their other sins; for to this the following words manifestly restrain it, according as thou hast spoken, &c., where the pardon of their sins is the only instance of this power both described in God's titles, ver.

18, and prayed for by Moses, ver. 19, pardon, I beseech thee, &c., and granted by God in answer to him, ver. 20, I have pardoned, &c. Nor is it strange that the pardon of sin, especially of such great sins, be spoken of as an act of power in God, because undoubtedly it is an act of omnipotent and infinite goodness; whence despairing sinners sometimes cry out that their sins are greater than God can pardon, as some translate Cain's words, Gen. iv. 13. And since power is applied to God's wrath in punishing sin, Rom. ix. 22, why may it not as well be attributed to God's mercy in forgiving it? especially if it be considered that even in men revenge is an act of impotency, and consequently it must needs be an act of power to conquer their passions and inclinations to revenge, and to pardon those enemies whom they could destroy.

18 The LORD is ⁸ longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, ⁹ visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

These words may seem to be very improperly mentioned, as being a powerful argument to move God to destroy this wicked people, and not to pardon them. It may be answered, that Moses useth these words together with the rest, partly because he would not sever what God had put together, and partly to show that he did not desire a full and absolute pardon, (but was willing that God should execute his vengeance upon the principal authors of this rebellion, and leave some character of his displeasure upon all the people, as God did,) but only that God would not disinherit them, ver. 12, nor kill all the people as one man, ver. 15, nor destroy them both root and branch, because he had promised not to extend his wrath against them in punishing their sins beyond the third and fourth generation. But the truer answer seems to be, that these words are to be translated otherwise, and in destroying he will not utterly destroy, though he visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation. Of which see the notes on Exod. xxxiv. 7, where all this verse is explained.

19 ¹⁰ Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people ¹¹ according to the greatness of thy mercy, and ¹² as thou hast forgiven this people, from Egypt even until now.

After many and great provocations; show thyself still to be the same sin-pardoning God.

20 And the LORD said, I have pardoned according to thy word:

So far as not utterly to destroy them, as I threatened, ver. 12, and thou didst fear, and beg the prevention of it, ver. 15.

21 But as truly as I live, ¹³ all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

i. e. With the report of the glorious and righteous acts of God in punishing this rebellious people in manner following. That this is the true sense, appears both from the particle of opposition, and the solemn introduction of them, But truly as I live, and from the following verses, because all these men, &c., which come in without any note of opposition, and have a manifest relation to and connexion with this verse.

22 ¹⁴ Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, have tempted me now ¹⁵ these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice;

My glory, i. e. my glorious appearances in the cloud, and in the tabernacle. Ten times, i. e. many times. A certain number for an uncertain, as Gen. xxxi. 7; Lev. xxvi. 8; Job xix. 3. Though some reckon ten times precisely, wherein they did eminently provoke God.

Joshua is not here named, because he was not now among the people, but a constant attendant upon Moses; nor was he to be reckoned as one of them, any more than Moses and Aaron were, because he was to be their chief commander. Another spirit with him, i. e. was a man of another temper and carriage, faithful and courageous, not acted by that evil spirit of cowardice, unbelief, unthankfulness, disobedience, which ruled in his brethren, but by the Spirit of God. Fully, i. e. universally and constantly, in and through difficulties and dangers, which made his partners halt. The land wherinto he went; in general, Canaan, and particularly Hebron, and the adjacent parts, Josh. xiv. 9. Shall possess it, or, shall expel it, i. e. its inhabitants, the land being oft put for the people of it. Compare Josh. viii. 7; xiv. 12.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.) To-morrow turn you, ⁿ and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

In the valley; beyond the mountain at the foot whereof they now were, ver. 40. And this clause is added, either, 1. As an aggravation of Israel's misery and punishment, that being now ready to enter and take possession of the land, they are forced to go back into the wilderness; or, 2. As an argument to oblige them more willingly to obey the following command of returning into the wilderness, because their enemies were very near them, and severed from them only by that Idumean mountain, and if they did not speedily depart, their enemies would hear of them and fall upon them, and so the evil which before they causelessly feared would come upon them; they, their wives, and their children would become a prey to the Amalekites and Canaanites, because God had forsaken them, and would not assist nor defend them. The verse may be rendered thus, And, or But, for the present, the Amalekite and the Canaanite dwell in the valley; therefore (which particle is here understood, as it is in other places) to-morrow turn ye, &c. Though some knit these words to the former, and read the place thus, Caleb—and his seed shall possess it, to wit, the land near Hebron, and also the land of the Amalekites and of the Canaanites that dwell in the valley. Quest. But how are the Canaanites said to dwell in the valley here, when they dwell in the hill, ver. 45, and by the sea-coasts, Numb. xxi. 1? Ans. 1. Part of them dwelt in one place, and part in other places. 2. The word Canaanite may here be understood more generally of all the inhabitants of Canaan. By the way of the Red Sea, i. e. that leadeth to the Red Sea, and to Egypt, the place whither you desire to return, ver. 3, 4.

Of meat and drink offerings. 1—16. The law of the first of the dough for a heave-offering, 17—21. AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, n ver. 18.

Lev. 23. 10.
Deut. 7. 1.

2 ⁿ Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

i. e. Will certainly give you, notwithstanding this great provocation, and my unchangeable commination. And for their better assurance hereof, he repeats and amplifies the laws of sacrifices, whereby through Christ he was or would be reconciled to them and theirs upon their repentance.

3 And ^b will make an offering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, or a sacrifice ^c in ^d performing a vow, or in a freewill offering, or ^e in your solemn feasts, to make a ^f sweet savour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock:

A sacrifice, i. e. a peace-offering, as appears, 1. Because that word put by itself is oft so taken, as Exod. xviii. 12; Lev. xvii. 5, 8; xxiii. 37; Deut. xii. 27. 2. Because the offerings for sins and trespasses had no meat-offerings and drink-offerings attending upon them, excepting only the case of the leper's cleansing, Lev. xiv. 10. 3. Because this is explained by and called peace-offerings, ver. 8. 4. From the words here following, because peace-offerings were commonly offered either in performance of a vow, or freely, or by God's command in their solemn feasts, all which are here expressed.

4 Then ^g shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring ^h a meat offering of a tenth deal of flour mingled ⁱ with the fourth ^j part of an hin of oil.

A tenth deal, or tenth part, to wit, of an ephah, i. e. an omer, Exod. xvi. 36. Mingled with oil; wherein it seems to differ from such meat-offerings as were solitary, and not accessories to other sacrifices.

5 ^k And the fourth ^l part of an hin of wine for a drink offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt offering or sacrifice, for one lamb.

6 ^m Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare ⁿ for a meat offering two tenth deals of flour mingled with the third ^o part of an hin of oil.

Two tenth deals; because this belonged to a better sacrifice than the former; and therefore in the next sacrifice of a bullock there are three tenth deals. So the accessory sacrifice grows proportionably with the principal.

7 And for a drink offering thou shalt offer the third ^p part of an hin of wine, ^q for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

8 And when thou preparest a bullock ^r for a burnt offering, or ^s for a sacrifice in performing a vow, or ^t peace offerings unto the LORD:

i. e. Or any other peace-offerings, to wit, such as were offered either freely or by command, which may be called peace-offerings or thank-offerings, by way of eminency, because such are offered purely by way of gratitude to God, and with single respect to his command and honour; whereas the peace-offerings made in performance of a vow were made and offered by way of contract, and with design of getting some advantage by them.

9 Then shall he bring ^u with a bullock a meat offering of three tenth deals of flour mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink offering half an hin of wine, ^v for an offering made by fire, ^w of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

11 ^x Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one according to your number.

i. e. As many cattle as ye sacrifice, so many meat and drink offerings ye shall offer.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 And if a stranger sojourn with you, or who-soever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

A stranger, to wit, proselyte, for such offerings were not accepted from others.

15 ^{p ver. 20. Ex. 12. 49. ch. 9. 14.} One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

i. e. As to the worship of God; his sacrifices shall be offered in the same manner, and accepted by God upon the same terms, as yours; which was a presage of the future calling of the Gentiles. And this is added by way of caution and distinction, to show that strangers were not upon this pretence to partake of their civil privileges.

16 One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 ^{g ver. 2. Deut. 26. 1.} Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you, 19 Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of ^{r Josh. 5. 11, 12.} the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD.

When ye eat, i. e. when you are about to eat it; for before they did eat it, they were to offer this offering to God. Of the bread, i. e. the bread-corn, as that word is used, Job xxviii. 5; Psal. civ. 15; Isa. xxviii. 28. Unto the Lord, i. e. to the priest of the Lord, as appears from Ezek. xlv. 30.

i. e. Of the corn in the threshing-floor, as Deut. xvi. 13, when you have gathered in your corn. So shall ye heave it, i. e. you shall offer this in the same proportion, to the same persons, i. e. the priests, and with the same rites.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And ^{u Lev. 4. 2.} if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

To wit, those now spoken of, those which concern the outward worship and service of God, or the rites or ceremonies belonging to it. And herein principally this law may seem to differ from that Lev. iv. 13, which speaks of some positive miscarriage, or doing that which ought not to have been done about the holy things of God, whereas this speaks only of an omission of something which ought to have been done about holy ceremonies. But besides this, that law, Lev. iv. 13, concerns the whole congregation of Israel, as it is there expressed, but this concerns only the congregation, or a congregation, as it is here expressed, ver. 24, i. e. any particular congregation of Israelites, whether of a whole tribe meeting together by their representatives, or a lesser congregation, such as there were to be many in Canaan; and the words rendered all the congregation may be, and are by some here, rendered every congregation. And by virtue of this law, as some suppose, the Israelites newly after their return from the captivity offered twelve bullocks, one for each tribe, Ezra viii. 35.

23 Even all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations:

24 Then it shall be, ^{x Lev. 4. 13.} if ought be committed by ignorance ^{+ Heb. from the eyes.} without the knowledge of the congregation, that all the congregation shall offer one young bullock for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour unto the LORD, ^{y ver. 8, 9, 10.} with his meat offering, and his drink offering, according to the ^{z See Lev. 4. 23, ch. 28. 15. Ezra 6. 17. & 8. 25.} manner, and ^{1 Chr. ordinance.} one kid of the goats for a sin offering.

In Lev. iv. the bullock is for a sin-offering, here it is for a burnt-offering, either because they are different laws, as hath been said; or because here is added a new penalty, to breed the greater caution and diligence in the Israelites, who had given many instances, and now a fresh and eminent instance, of their heedlessness in observing the commands of God; and so, besides that bullock for a sin-offering, which he leaves to be gathered out of Lev. iv. 14, he now requires another bullock for a burnt-offering.

25 ^{a Lev. 4. 20.} And the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

27 ¶ And ^{b Lev. 4. 27, 28.} if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she goat of the first year for a sin offering.

28 ^{c Lev. 4. 35.} And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 ^{d ver. 15.} Ye shall have one law for him that ^{+ Heb. doth.} sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ ^{e Dent. 17. 12. Ps. 10. 13. Heb. 10. 26. 1 Pet. 2. 10. + Heb. with an high hand.} But the soul that doeth ought ^{f 2 Sam. 12. 9. Prov. 13. 13.} presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

Ought; understand such things as ought not to be done, and things relating to the worship of God; presumptuously, Heb. with a high, or lifted up hand, i. e. knowingly, wilfully, boldly, resolvedly, deliberately, designedly. So this phrase is elsewhere used. See Exod. xiv. 8; Lev. xxvi. 21; Numb. xxxiii. 3; Job xv. 26; Psal. xix. 13. Reproacheth the Lord, i. e. he sets God at defiance, and exposeth him to contempt, as if he were unworthy of any regard, and unable to punish transgressors.

31 Because he hath ^{g Lev. 5. 1. Ex. 18. 20.} despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off; ^{h Ex. 31. 14. 15. & 35. 2, 3.} his iniquity shall be upon him.

i. e. The punishment shall be confined to himself, and not fall upon the congregation, as it will do, if they neglect to cut him off.

32 ¶ And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, ^{h Ex. 31. 14. 15. & 35. 2, 3.} they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath day.

This seems to be added as an example of a presumptuous sin; for as the law of the sabbath was plain and positive, so this transgression of it must needs be a known and wilful sin.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

i. e. To the rulers of the congregation, who, as they represented and governed the congregation, are called by the name of the congregation.

¹ Lev. 24. 12. 34 And they put him ⁱ in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.

i. e. Moses and Aaron, and the seventy rulers last mentioned. What should be done to him, i. e. in what manner he was to be cut off, or by what kind of death he was to die, which therefore God here particularly determines; otherwise it was known in general that sabbath-breakers were to be put to death, from Exod. xxxi. 14; xxxv. 2.

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^k The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall ^l stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid ^m them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue:

Fringes were certain threads or ends of their garments, standing out a little further than the rest of their garments, left there for this use. In the borders, i. e. in the four borders or quarters, as it is Deut. xxii. 12. Heb. wings, which is oft used for borders or ends, as Ruth iii. 9; 1 Sam. xv. 27; xxiv. 5, &c. Of their garments, i. e. of their upper garment, or that wherewith they covered themselves, as is expressed Deut. xxii. 12. This was practised by the Pharisees in Christ's time, who are noted for making their borders larger than ordinary, Matt. xxiii. 5; and by Christ himself, as may gathered from Luke viii. 44. A ribband, to make it more obvious to the sight, and consequently more serviceable to the use here mentioned. Of blue, or, of a purple colour, as the Jewish writers agree, whose opinion is the more considerable, because it was matter of constant practice among them.

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them; and that ye ⁿ seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use ^o to go a whoring:

It, i. e. the ribband, shall be unto you, i. e. shall serve you for the fringe, to wit, to render it more visible and notorious by its certain, and remarkable, and distinct colour, whereas the fringe without this was of the same piece and colour with the garment, and therefore less observable. Or, it, i. e. the ribband, shall be in your fringes, or, put to your fringes, fastened to them, that by looking upon it you may remember, that your eye may affect your mind and heart. That ye seek not, or, inquire not, for other rules or ways of serving me than I have prescribed you. After your own heart, and your own eyes, i. e. neither after the devices and inventions of your own minds or hearts, as Nadab and Abihu did when they offered strange fire, and as you now did, when you pretended to serve and please me by going up the hill and towards Canaan without and against my command; nor after the examples or inventions of others which your eyes see, as you did when you were set upon worshipping a calf after the manner of Egypt. To go a whoring, i. e. to depart from me, and to prefer your own fancies before my commands, and to live only by present sight or sense, and not at all by faith in my promises.

40 That ye may remember, and do all my commandments, and be ^p holy unto your God.

41 I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD your God.

Though I am justly displeased with you for your frequent and horrid rebellions, for which also I will keep you forty years in the wilderness, yet I will not utterly cast you off, but will continue to be your God, to preserve and provide for you there, and after that time to bring you into Canaan.

CHAP. XVI.

Korah, Dathan, and Abiram raise sedition against Moses and Aaron, 1—3. Moses reproving them, 4—11, sends for Dathan and Abiram; their refusal and answer, 12—14. The manner of their punishment, 15—35. Their performing censers are kept for a memorial and warning, 36—40. The people murmur against Moses and Aaron, for which they are consumed by the plague, which Aaron by Moses's order stays, 41—50.

NOW ^q Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took ^r men:

Korah, the first and chief author of this rebellion, ver. 11; Jude 11. Izhar was Amram's brother, Exod. vi. 18, therefore Moses and he were cousin-germans. Moreover Izhar was the second son of Kohath, whereas Elizaphan, whom Moses had preferred before him, and made prince or ruler of the Kohathites, Numb. iii. 30, was the son of Uzziel, the fourth son of Kohath. This, the Jewish writers say, made him malcontent, which at last broke forth into sedition. Sons of Reuben: these are drawn into confederacy with Korah, partly because they were his next neighbours, both being encamped on the south side, and therefore could easily communicate counsels; partly in hopes to recover their rights of primogeniture, in which the priesthood was comprehended, which was given away from their father. Took men, to wit, those two hundred and fifty mentioned ver. 2. In the Hebrew there is nothing but took, and the Hebrew words are placed and may well be rendered thus, Now Korah—took both Dathan and Abiram, &c., or took Dathan, &c., the particle vau being here superfluous, as it is Gen. viii. 6, and elsewhere.

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, ^s famous in the congregation, men of ^t renown:

They, i. e. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, last mentioned. Rose up, i. e. conspired together, and put their seditious design in execution. Before Moses; not privily and obscurely, but openly and boldly, not fearing nor regarding the presence of Moses, who was an eye-witness of their conspiracy. Famous, for place and birth.

3 And ^u they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, ^v Ye take too much upon you, seeing ^w all the congregation are holy, every one of them, ^x and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

They, i. e. either Korah, and the two hundred and fifty princes, which may seem probable by comparing this with ver. 12, 25, 27, where we find Dathan and Abiram in another place, even in their tents, whither it is likely they were gone by consent to form and strengthen their party there, while Korah and the rest went to Moses. Or, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and the rest, who were all together when Moses spake those words, ver. 5—7; but after that Dathan and Abiram retired to their tents, and then Moses sent for Korah and the Levites, who had more special and more colourable pretences to the priesthood, and treats with them apart, and speaks what is mentioned ver. 8—11; and then having despatched them, he sends for Dathan and Abiram, ver. 12, that he might reason the case with them also apart.

Against Aaron, to whom the priesthood was confined, and against Moses, both because this was done by his order, and because before Aaron's consecration Moses appropriated it to himself. For whatever they intended, they seem not now directly to strike at Moses for his supreme civil government, but only for his interest and influence in the disposal of the priesthood, as may appear by the whole context, and particularly by ver. 5, 10, 15, &c. Ye take too much upon you, by perpetuating the priesthood in yourselves and family, with the exclusion of all others from it. Are holy; a kingdom of priests, a holy nation, as they are called Exod. xix. 6; a people separated to the service of God, and therefore no less fit to present themselves before God, and to offer sacrifice and incense for themselves, than you are. The Lord is among them, by his tabernacle and cloud, the tokens of his special and gracious presence, and therefore ready to receive all their sacrifices and services from their own hands. Wherefore lift ye up yourselves; thou, Moses, by prescribing what laws thou pleasest about the priesthood, and confining it to thy brother; and thou, Aaron, by usurping it as thy peculiar privilege?

f ch. 14. 5. & 20. 6. 4 And when Moses heard it, 'he fell upon his face :

Humbly begging that God would direct him, and defend and vindicate him from this false and odious imputation. See Numb. xiv. 5. Accordingly God answers his prayers, and inspires him with this following answer to Korah, and strengthens him with new courage, and confidence of good success.

5 And he spake unto Korah and unto all his company, saying, Even to morrow the LORD will shew who are his, and who is ^s holy; and will cause him to come near unto him: even him whom he hath ^h chosen will he cause to ⁱ come near unto him.

To-morrow, Heb. in the morning, the time appointed by men for administering justice, Psal. ci. 8; Jer. xxi. 12; and chosen by God for that work, Psal. lxxiii. 14; Isa. xlvii. 11; Zeph. iii. 5. Some time is allowed, partly that Korah and his company might prepare themselves and their censers; and partly to give them space for consideration and repentance. And will cause him, or, and whom he will cause. To come near unto him, i. e. he will by some evident and miraculous token declare his approbation of him and his ministry.

6 This do; Take you censers, Korah, and all his company;

Since ye will be priests, take your censers, and act as priests, at your peril.

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to-morrow: and it shall be that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

Doth choose, i. e. declare his choice and appointment of them for that work.

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi:

Consider what I say before it be too late, and repent of your great wickedness.

9 Seemeth it but ^a a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath ^s separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

Near to himself; nearer than the other tribes, though not so near as the priests. Unto them, i. e. in their stead and for their good. So they were the servants both of God and of the church, which was a high dignity, though not sufficient for their ambitious minds.

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

There being at this time but very few priests, and the profits and privileges belonging to them being many and great, they thought it but fit and reasonable that they, or some of the chief of them, should be admitted to share in their work and advantages.

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the LORD: ^m and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

m Ex. 16. 8. 1 Cor. 3. 5.

Against the Lord, whose minister and chosen servant Aaron is. You strike at God through Aaron's sides. Compare 1 Sam. viii. 7; Luke x. 16; John xiii. 20.

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab: which said, We will not come up:

Moses sent, to treat with them, and give them, as he had done Korah and his company, a timely admonition. Which said unto the messengers sent to them by Moses, We will not come up, to Moses's tabernacle, whither the people used to go up for judgment. Men are said in Scripture phrase to go up to places of judgment. See Deut. xxv. 7; Ruth iv. 1; Ezra x. 7, 8. But because they would not now go up, therefore they went down quick into the pit, ver. 33.

13 ⁿ Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou ^o make thyself altogether a prince over us?

o Ex. 2. 14. Acts 7. 27, 36.

i. e. Out of Egypt, a place indeed of great plenty, but to them a place of torment and intolerable slavery. They invidiously and scoffingly use the same words wherewith God by Moses commended the land of Canaan.

14 Moreover thou hast not brought us into ^p a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou [†] put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

p Exod. 3. 8. Lev. 20. 24.

Of these men, i. e. of those who are confederate with us, and of all the people who are of our mind. Wilt thou make them blind, or persuade them that they are blind, and that they do not see what is visible to all that have eyes, to wit, that thou hast deceived them, and broken thy faith and promise given to them? or wilt thou lead them about like blind men whither thou pleasest, one time towards Canaan, another time towards Egypt again? We will not come up; we will not obey thy summons, nor own thy authority.

15 And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the LORD, ^q Respect not thou their offering: ^r I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

q Gen. 4. 4, 5.

r 1 Sam. 12. 3. Acts 20. 33. 2 Cor. 7. 2.

Moses was very wroth, not so much for his own sake, for he had learnt to bear indignities, Numb. xii., as for God's sake, who was highly dishonoured, blasphemed, and provoked by these speeches and carriages, in which case he ought to be angry, as Christ was, Mark iii. 5. Respect not thou their offering, i. e. accept not their incense which they are now going to offer, but show some eminent dislike of it. He calls it their offering, though it was offered by Korah and his companions, because it was offered in the name and by the consent of all the conspirators, for the decision of the present controversy between them and Moses. Not one ass, i. e. not any thing of the smallest value, as an ass was; (see 1 Sam. xii. 3.); neither have I injured them, nor used my power to defraud or oppress them, as I might have done; but, which is here implied, I have done them many good offices, but no hurt; therefore their crime is inexcusable, because without any cause or provocation on my part.

^a ver. 6, 7. 16 And Moses said unto Korah, ^a Be thou and all thy company ^b before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow :

Not in the tabernacle, which was not capable of so many persons severally offering incense, but at the door of the tabernacle, ver. 18, which place is oft said to be before the Lord, as Exod. xxix. 42; Lev. i. 11, &c.; where they might now lawfully offer it by Moses's direction upon this extraordinary occasion and necessity, because this work could not be done in that place, which alone was allowed for the offering up of incense, not only for its smallness, but also because none but priests might enter to do this work. Here also the people, who were to be instructed by this experiment, might see the proof and success of it.

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

They could easily make censers in a slight manner, which would suffice for the present purpose. The fire was taken from the altar which stood in that place, Lev. i. 3, 5, for Aaron might not use other fire, Lev. x. 1. And it is likely the remembrance of the death of Nadab and Abihu deterred them from offering any strange fire.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and ^a the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

Korah gathered the congregation, that they might be witnesses of the event, and upon their success, which they doubted not of, might fall upon Moses and Aaron with popular rage, and destroy them. And it seems by this that the people were generally incensed against Moses, and inclined to Korah's side. The glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud, which then shone with greater brightness and majesty, as a token of God's approach and presence. See Exod. xvi. 7, 10; Lev. ix. 6, 23; Numb. xx. 6.

20 And the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Aaron, saying,

21 ^a Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may ^b consume them in a moment.

To wit, Korah and his two hundred and fifty men, and the people whom he gathered against Moses and Aaron, ver. 19.

22 And they ^a fell upon their faces, and said, O God, ^a the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

Of the spirits, i. e. of souls, as the word spirit in Scripture is oft used, as Psal. xxxi. 5; lxxvii. 3; Prov. xvii. 22; Eccl. xii. 7; Luke xxiii. 46; Acts vii. 59. And this is no empty title here, but very emphatical and argumentative, thus, Thou art the Maker of spirits, Zech. xii. 1, destroy not thy own workmanship, Isa. lxiv. 8. O thou who art the Preserver of men, and of their spirits; the Lord of spirits, Job xii. 10; who as thou mayst justly destroy this people, so thou canst preserve whom thou pleasest: the Father of spirits, Heb. xii. 9; O deal mercifully with thy own children: the Searcher of spirits, thou canst distinguish between those who have maliciously raised this tumult, and those whose ignorance and simple credulity hath made them a prey to crafty seducers. Of all flesh, i. e. of all mankind: the word flesh is put for men, as Gen. vi. 13;

Job xii. 10; Isa. xl. 5, 6; Ezek. xx. 48; xxi. 4, 5. One man, to wit, Korah, the ringleader of this sedition.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

Speak unto the congregation, whom for your sakes I will spare upon the condition here following. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram; and On too, who is mentioned ver. 1, though some think he desisted and repented, and therefore is not now mentioned.

25 And Moses rose up and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

Because they refused to come to him, he goes to them to their cost. The elders of Israel; the seventy rulers, whom he carried with him for the greater solemnity of the action, and for his own better vindication, because he lay under such calumnies, and to encourage them in their work, notwithstanding the obstinate and intractable nature of the people they were to govern.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, ^b Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of their's, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

Show your dislike of them and their wicked ways by a speedy removal of your persons and tents from about them. Touch nothing of theirs; because they and all that was theirs was under a curse, and therefore not to be touched. See Deut. xiii. 16, 17. In all their sins; lest, being guilty of their sins, you perish together with them.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

Their tents were not far asunder, being both on the south side of the tabernacle, as appears from Numb. ii. 10; iii. 29. Stood in the door of their tents; an argument of their foolish confidence, pride, and impudence, obstinacy, and impenitency, whereby they declared that they neither feared God nor revered man, and made themselves ripe for the approaching judgment.

28 And Moses said, ^a Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; for I have not done them ^a of mine own mind.

All these works, to wit, which I have done, and for which I am traduced by these and such like wicked men, as the bringing of the people out of Egypt; the conducting of them through, and the keeping of them so long in, the wilderness; the exercising of power and authority among and over them; giving of laws to them, as about other things, so concerning the priesthood, which is the ground of the present quarrel; and, that which vexeth them most, that when they were upon the borders of Canaan, and ready to enter in, I should cause them to go back into this vast howling wilderness, and fix them there for forty years. Of mine own mind; by pretending or usurping an authority which God gave me not; by feigning words or messages from God to establish my own inventions, and to comply with my own will or lust or interest, as I am now accused to have done. For this phrase, see Numb. xxiv. 13; Ezek. xiii. 2.

29 If these men die † the common death of all men, or if they be ^e visited after the visitation of all men; then the LORD hath not sent me.

i. e. If these men die by a natural death, or by plague, or sword, or some usual judgment, I am content that you take me for an impostor, falsely pretending to be sent of God. This he might well say, because he was inspired by God to say this, and infallibly assured by God that this should be done.

22. 37.

i. e. All his family which were there, women, children, and servants; but his sons, who were spared, Numb. xxvi. 11, 58; 1 Chron. vi. 22, 37, were absent, either upon some service of the tabernacle, or upon some other occasion; God so ordering it by his providence, either because they disliked their father's act, or upon Moses's intercession for them, or for some other reason. This expression may seem to intimate that Korah himself was not here, but that he continued with his two hundred and fifty men before the Lord, ver. 18, 19, where they were waiting for God's decision of the controversy; nor is it probable that their chief captain would desert them, and leave them standing there without a head, especially when Aaron, his great adversary, abode there still, and did not go with Moses to Dathan, &c., ver. 25. And Korah may seem to have been consumed with those two hundred and fifty, ver. 35, though he be not mentioned there, but is easily understood by comparing that verse with ver. 16—18, and from the nature of the thing itself, there being no cause of doubt but that destruction which befell the accessaries did much more involve the principal. And so much is intimated ver. 40, that no stranger come near to offer incense before the Lord, that he be not as Korah, and as his company, i. e. destroyed, as they were, by fire from the Lord. And when the psalmist relates this history, Psal. cvi., the earth's swallowing them up is confined to Dathan and Abiram, ver. 17; and for all the rest of that conspiracy, it is added, ver. 18, and a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burnt up the wicked. As for Numb. xxvi. 10, which seems to oppose this opinion, we shall see more on that place, if God permit.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

Into the pit, i. e. into the earth, which first opened itself to receive them, and then shut itself to destroy them, and transmit them to further punishment.

34 And all Israel that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there ^k came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed ^l the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

From the Lord; i. e. from the cloud, wherein the glory of the Lord appeared, ver. 19, to give sentence in this cause.

36 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for ^m they are hallowed.

Unto Eleazar, rather than to Aaron, partly because the troublesome part of the work was more proper for him, and partly lest Aaron should be polluted by going amongst those dead carcasses; for it is probable this fire consumed them, as lightning sometimes doth others, by taking away their lives, and leaving their bodies dead upon the place. Out of the burning, i. e. from among the dead bodies of those men who were burnt. Burning put for those who are burnt, as captivity for the captives, Numb. xxi. 1, and poverty for the poor, 2 Kings xxiv. 14. The fire, i. e. the cinders or ashes which are left in or near their censers. Yonder, i. e. far from the altar and sanctuary, into an unclean place, where the ashes were wont to be cast; by which God shows his rejection of their services. They are hallowed; either, 1. By God's appointment, because they were presented before the Lord by his express order, ver. 16, 17. Or, 2. By God's just judgment, because they, together with the persons that used them, were accursed and devoted by God, and therefore were the Lord's, and not to be employed in any profane or common use, as appears from Lev. xxvii. 28. But the first reason is the chief, and is rendered by God himself, ver. 38.

38 The censers of these ⁿ sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: ^o and they shall be a sign unto the children of Israel.

n Prov. 20. 2.
Hab. 2. 10.

Against their own souls, i. e. their own lives; who were the authors of their own death and destruction. Compare 1 Kings ii. 23; Prov. xx. 2. This he saith for the vindication of God's justice and his own ministry in this severe dispensation. The altar, to wit, of burnt-offerings, which was made of wood, but covered with brass before this time, Exod. xxvii. 1, 2, to which this other covering was added for further ornament and security against the fire, which was continually burning upon it. A sign; a monument or warning to all strangers to take heed of invading the priesthood, as it follows, ver. 40.

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brasen censers, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar :

40 To be a memorial unto the children of Israel, ^p that no stranger, which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD; that he be not as Korah, and as his company: as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

18.

As Korah, and as his company, i. e. that he do not imitate them in their sin, and therefore bring upon himself the same plague. To him, i. e. to Eleazar. These words belong to ver. 38; the meaning is, that Eleazar did as God bade him.

41 ¶ But on the morrow ^q all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

Ps. 106. 25.

Prodigious wickedness and madness, so soon to forget such a terrible instance of Divine vengeance! Ye have killed; you, who should have preserved them, and interceded for them, have pulled down God's wrath upon them, for the maintenance of your own authority and interest. The people of the Lord; so they call those wicked wretches, and rebels against God; which shows the power of passion and prejudice to corrupt men's judgment.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, ^r the cloud covered it, and ^s the glory of the LORD appeared.

r Ex. 40. 34.

They looked, i. e. Moses and Aaron, who in all their distresses made God their refuge.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
t ver. 21, 24. 45 'Get thee up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they fell upon their faces.

To beg pardon and mercy for the people, as they oft did; thus rendering good to them for evil, which the people requited with evil for their kindness.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

z Lev. 10, 6. ch. 1, 53, & 8, 19, & 11, 33, & 16, 5. 1 Chr. 27, 24. Ps. 106, 29.
Put on incense; which was a sign of intercession, Psal. cxli. 2, and was to be accompanied with it, Luke i. 9, 10. Go quickly unto the congregation, with the incense, to stir up the people to repentance and prayer to prevent their utter ruin. This he might do upon this extraordinary occasion, having God's command for his warrant, though ordinarily incense was to be offered only in the tabernacle. The plague is begun, in cutting off the people by a sudden and miraculous stroke.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

Ran into the midst of the congregation; hazarding his own life to obey God, and to do this wicked people good.

48 And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

Whereby it may seem that this plague, like that fire, Numb. xi. 1, began in the uttermost parts of the congregation, and so proceeded, destroying one after another in an orderly manner, which gave Aaron occasion and direction so to place himself as a mediator to God on their behalf.

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, beside them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron returned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

CHAP. XVII.

God confirming Aaron's calling by the budding and the blossoming of his rod, 1—9, commandeth it to be laid up for a memorial and terror to rebels, 10. The people being terrified thereby, seek to Moses for succour, 11—13.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according to the house of their fathers, of all their princes according to the house of their fathers twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

Speak unto the children of Israel, that I may fully and finally satisfy all their scruples, and take away all pretence and cause of murmuring. Of every one of them; not of every person, but of every tribe, as it follows. A rod; either an ordinary walking staff; or rather, that staff or rod which the princes carried in their hand as tokens of their dignity and authority, as may be gathered from Numb. xxi. 18, compared with Psal. cx. 2; Jer. xlviii. 16, 17. According to the house of their fathers, i. e. according to each family proceeding from the patriarch or father of that tribe. Every man's name, i. e. every prince's; for they being the first-born, and the chief of their tribes, might above all others pretend to the priesthood, if it was communicable to any of their tribes, and besides each prince represented and acted for all his tribe; so that this was a full decision of the whole question. And this place seems to confirm what was before observed, that not only Korah and the Levites, but also those of other tribes, contested with Moses and Aaron about the priesthood, as that which belonged to all the congregation, they being all holy, as they said, Numb. xvi. 3.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

Aaron's rather than Levi's name, for that would have left the controversy undecided between Aaron and the other Levites, whereas this would justify the appropriation of the priesthood to Aaron's family. For the head of the house of their fathers; i. e. there shall be in this, as there is in all the other tribes, only one rod, and that for the head of their tribe, who is Aaron in this tribe; whereas it might have been expected that there should have been two rods, one for Aaron, and another for his competitors of the same tribe. But Aaron's name was sufficient to determine both the tribe, and that branch or family of the tribe, to whom this dignity should be affixed.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, where I will meet with you.

Before the testimony, i. e. before the ark of the testimony; either mediately, close by the veil behind which the ark stood; or rather immediately, within the veil in the most holy place, close by the ark, as may be gathered by comparing this place with ver. 10, and with Heb. ix. 4. I will meet with you, and manifest my mind to you for the ending of this dispute.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, whom I shall choose, shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, where by they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their fathers' houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

i. e. Was laid up with the rest, being either one of the twelve, as the Hebrews affirm, or the thirteenth, as others think.

7 And Moses laid up the rods before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.

Into the tabernacle of witness; into the most holy place, which he might safely do under the protection of God's command, though otherwise none but the high priest might enter there, and that once in a year. Yielded almonds; this being, as Josephus with great probability affirms, a staff of an almond tree, as the rest also were.

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

For if after all these warnings and prohibitions, backed with such miracles and judgments, they shall usurp the priesthood, they shall assuredly die for it.

11 And Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

Words of consternation arising, partly, from the remembrance of these severe and repeated judgments; partly, from the threatening of death upon any succeeding murmurings; partly, from the sense of their own guilt and weakness, which made them fear lest they should relapse into the same miscarriages, and thereby bring the vengeance of God upon themselves.

13 ^hWhosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

Any thing near, i. e. nearer than he should do; an error which we may easily commit. Shall we be consumed? will God proceed with us in these severe courses, according to his strict justice? will he show us no mercy nor pity, till all the people be cut off and destroyed with dying one after another.

CHAP. XVIII.

God showing to Aaron, his sons, and the Levites their office, 1—7; appointeth to Aaron and his sons their maintenance, 8—20; and also to the Levites, 21—24. He commandeth them by Moses to give tenths of their tenths to the chief priests, 25—32.

^a ch. 17. 13. AND THE LORD said unto Aaron, ^aThou and thy sons and thy father's house with thee shall ^bbear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

The iniquity of the sanctuary, i. e. shall suffer the punishment of all the usurpations or pollutions of the sanctuary, or the holy things, by the Levites or any of the people, because you have authority and power from me to keep them all within their bounds, and I expect you use it to that end. Thus the people are in good measure secured against their fears expressed Numb. xvii. 12, 13. Also they are informed that Aaron's high dignity was attended with great burdens, having not only his own, but the people's sins to answer for; and therefore they had no such reason to envy him as they might think, if the benefits and encumbrances and dangers were equally considered. Of your priesthood, i. e. of all the errors committed by yourselves, or by you permitted in others in things belonging to your priesthood.

2 And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be ^cjoined unto thee, and ^dminister unto thee: but ^ethou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of wisdom.

Minister unto thee, about sacrifices and offerings and other things, according to the rules and limits I have prescribed them. The Levites are said to minister to Aaron here, to the church, Numb. xvi. 9, and to God, Deut. x. 8. They shall not contend with thee for superiority, as they have done, but they shall be subordinate and servants to thee. Thou and thy sons with thee, or, both to thee, and to thy sons with thee; which translation may seem to be favoured by the following words, before the tabernacle, which was the proper place where the Levites ministered, whereas the priests did minister to God both before and in the tabernacle. Besides, both the foregoing words, and the two following verses, do entirely speak of the ministry of the Levites, and the ministry of the priests is distinctly spoken of ver. 5.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and ^fthe charge of all the tabernacle: ^gonly they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, ^hthat neither they, nor ye also, die.

Thy charge, i. e. that which thou shalt command them and commit unto them. Of all the tabernacle, i. e. of the boards and hangings and utensils of the tabernacle, to take them down, and carry them, and set them up again. The vessels, which therefore were to be covered by the priests before the Levites might meddle with them. They, nor ye, they for presuming to touch them, and you for your negligence in not covering them well, or not looking to them.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: ⁱand a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ye shall keep ^kthe charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar: ^lthat there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

Of the sanctuary, i. e. of the holy, and of the most holy, place. Upon the children of Israel, for coming too near the holy place, or for usurping any part of your sacred function, or for any other miscarriage which they may be guilty of through your carelessness or remissness, in which case they shall perish for their error, but their blood will I require at your hands, who should have advised them better, or overruled them.

6 And I, behold, I have ^mtaken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: ⁿto you they are given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

For the Lord, i. e. for the service of the Lord, to assist you therein, in the servile and troublesome parts of it.

7 Therefore ^othou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and ^pwithin the veil; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

The altar, to wit, of burnt-offering, as appears from the following words. Within the veil. This phrase elsewhere signifies the inward or second veil, but here it signifies either the outward veil only, or rather both the veils, the singular number being put for the plural, as when the altar is put for both the altars, as hath been noted; and so this phrase comprehends both the holy and the most holy place. As a service of gift; as a gift which I have freely conferred upon you, and upon you alone; and therefore let no man henceforth dare either to charge you with arrogance and usurpation in appropriating this to yourselves, or to invade your office.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, ^qI also have given thee the charge of mine heave offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them ^rby reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

Unto thee have I given them; not only the charge of them, but the use of them for thyself and family, in such manner as I have elsewhere expressed. The anointing, to wit, to the priestly office, i. e. because thou art priest, and art to devote thyself wholly to my service; which, that thou mayst perform more diligently and cheerfully, I give thee this recompence.

9 This shall be thine of the most holy things, ^sreserved from the fire: every oblation of their's, every ^tmeat offering of their's, and every ^usin offering of their's, and every ^vtrespass offering of their's, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee and for thy sons.

The most holy things; such as were to be eaten only by the priests, and that in the sanctuary. How these differ from the holy things, see on Lev. vi. 17. Reserved from the fire, i. e. such sacrifices or such parts of sacrifices as were not burnt in the fire. Every oblation; which may be understood either, 1. Of the wave-loaves, Lev. xxiii. 17, and the shew-bread, which were most holy things, Lev. xxiii. 20; xxiv. 9, and which did belong to the priest; nor was there any other such oblation besides what is here particularly expressed; for the peace-offerings were not most holy, and the burnt-offerings were not the priest's. Or, 2. Of oblations in general; and so the following particulars are mentioned by way of explication and restriction of that general word, to show what oblations are here meant, and to exclude peace-offerings and burnt-offerings. Which they shall render unto me, by way of compensation for a trespass committed against me, in which case a ram was to be offered, Lev. vi. 2, 6, which was a most holy thing, and may be particularly designed here. Shall be most holy; thou shalt esteem it a most holy thing, and shalt use it accordingly, in manner following. Or, these are most holy, and therefore shall be for thee, and for thy sons, to wit, exclusively, none else may eat them.

x Lev. 6. 16, 18, 26, 29, & 7. 6. 10 ^{*}In the most holy place shalt thou eat it; every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee.

In the most holy place, to wit, in the court of the priests, where there were places for this use; see Lev. vi. 16, 17, 26; vii. 6; viii. 31; xiv. 13; Neh. xiii. 5, 9; Ezek. xlii. 13; which is called the most holy place, not simply and absolutely, as the place within the veil was, but in respect of the thing he speaks of, because this was the most holy of all the places appointed for eating of holy things, whereof some might be eaten in any clean place in the camp, Lev. x. 14, or in their own houses. And as the most holy place is sometimes called simply holy, so it is not strange if a holy place be called most holy, especially this place which was near to the altar of burnt-offerings, which is called most holy, and made all that touched it holy, Exod. xxix. 37. And God would have these things eaten by them in a holy place, as in God's presence, that they might be obliged to the greater caution, and not to abuse God's good creatures, and especially holy things, to intemperance; and that they might learn to eat this and their other food with thankfulness to God the giver of it, and with respect to his service and glory, which was afterward prescribed to Christians, 1 Cor. x. 31; 1 Tim. iv. 3. Every male, and they only; whereas of peace-offerings the females might eat their share, Deut. xii. 18.

y Ex. 29. 27, 28, Lev. 7. 30, 34. z Lev. 10. 14, Deut. 18. 3. a Lev. 22. 2, 3, 11, 12, 13. 11 And this is thine; ⁷the heave offering of their gift, with all the wave offerings of the children of Israel: I have given them unto ²thee, and to thy sons and to thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: ⁴every one that is clean in thy house shall eat of it.

The heave-offering, i. e. the right shoulder, which was the priest's. Of their gift, to wit, of their peace-offerings, as may appear, because here is an enumeration of all that belonged to the priest in the several oblations, and therefore it is not likely that he would omit the peace-offerings, wherein the priest had a share, and the very share here spoken of and called a heave-offering, which was the right shoulder, Lev. vii. 32, which also might be eaten by the daughters, Lev. vii. 34; x. 14, as is here said. See Numb. vi. 17, &c. The wave-offerings, to wit, the breasts of the peace-offerings, which were waved, Lev. vii. 30, 31, 34. With thee, i. e. who are with thee in thy house; for if they were married to strangers, they might not eat of them, Lev. xxii. 12, 13. In thy house, to wit, as fixed members of thy house, though they be bond-slaves; for strangers and hired servants were excepted, Lev. xxii. 10, 11.

b Ex. 23. 19, Deut. 18. 4, Neh. 10. 35, 36. + Heb. fat. ver. 29. c Ex. 22. 29. 12 ^bAll the [†]best of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, ^cthe firstfruits of them which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee.

The best, Heb. the fat for the best: the fat of wheat is the best of it, Deut. xxxii. 14; Psal. lxxxii. 16; cxlvii. 14. The first-fruits of them; as well those which were offered in the name and behalf of the body of the people at the solemn feasts, Lev. xxiii. 10, 17, as those which were required of particular persons, Exod. xxii. 29; xxiii. 19; whereof the precise quantity is not determined, but left free to the giver, as an exercise for his piety and charity, only they are enjoined to give the first and the best of them.

13 And whatsoever is first ripe in the land, ^dwhich they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine; ^eevery one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

i. e. Not only the first-fruits of the oil, and wine, and wheat now mentioned, but all other first-fruits of all other grains, and all fruit-trees, &c. Every one that is clean; and none else, because these were first offered to God, and by consequent given to the priests; but for those which were directly and immediately given to the priests, the clean and unclean might eat of them.

14 ^fEvery thing devoted in Israel shall be thine.

Dedicated to God by vow or otherwise, provided it be such a thing as might be eaten or consumed by use; for the vessels or treasures of gold and silver which were devoted or dedicated by Joshua, David, or others, were not the priests' but were appropriated to the uses of the temple.

15 Every thing that openeth ^gthe matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine: nevertheless ^hthe firstborn of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.

Whether it be of men, which were offered to God in his temple, Exod. xiii. 12; Luke ii. 22, and to his service and disposal.

16 And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, ⁱaccording to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, ^kwhich is twenty gerahs.

Those that are to be redeemed, to wit, of men only, not of unclean beasts last mentioned, as is manifest from the time and price of redemption here mentioned, both which agree to men; the time, Numb. xviii. 16; the price, Numb. iii. 46, 47; but neither agree to unclean beasts, which were to be redeemed with a sheep, Exod. xiii. 13, and that after it was eight days old. According to thine estimation: this belongs either, 1. To the foregoing clause, to this purpose, that whereas women newly delivered of a child continued in their uncleanness either a longer or shorter time, according to the quality of the birth, as it was male or female, Lev. xii. 4, 5, and the temper of the mother, the priest was to take that time when he judged the mother to be clean, that so the mother might be purified and the child redeemed at the same time. Or rather, 2. To the following clause, to wit, the price which was to be paid, as appears by comparing this place with Lev. xxvii. 2, 3. And both there and here it is said to be done according to the priest's estimation, though a certain rule be added to guide his estimation, and a certain price set, because the priest was to apply that general rule to each person, and to put that price upon him.

17 ^lBut the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: ^mthou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

They are holy, to wit, in a peculiar manner, and higher degree than other beasts, consecrated to a holy use, even to be sacrificed unto God, and not to be redeemed nor alienated to any other use. Compare Deut. xv. 19.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the ⁿwave breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

A covenant of salt, i. e. a durable and perpetual covenant; so called here and 2 Chron. xiii. 5, either because salt is a sign of incorruption, as being of singular use to preserve things from corruption; or because it is confirmed and ratified on their part by salt, which is therefore called the salt of the covenant, for which the priests were obliged to take care that it should never be lacking from any meat-offering, Lev. ii. 13. And this promise or privilege conferred upon the priests is called a covenant because it is given them conditionally, upon condition of their service, and care about the worship of God, and sacrifices, which were commonly accompanied with meat-offerings, and therefore with salt.

Ezek. 44. 28. 20 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: [^]I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

In their land, i. e. in the land of the children of Israel, mentioned ver. 13. You shall not have a distinct and separate portion of land, as the other tribes shall. The reason of this law was, partly, because God would have them wholly devoted to and employed in his service, and therefore free from worldly encumbrances and businesses; partly, because God had abundantly provided for them otherwise by tithes and first-fruits and oblations of all sorts; partly, because God would have their worldly comfort and happiness depend singly upon him and his service, and so would oblige them to use more zeal and diligence in the advancement of piety, even for their own interest, which was either better or worse as true religion flourished or decayed; see Judg. xvii. 9, 10; xix. 18; 2 Chron. xiii. 9; xxx. 22; xxxi. 4; partly, that this might be a firm bond of hearty love and affection between the people and their teachers, the Levites, who, as they performed religious services for the people, so they received their subsistence from them; and partly, that by this means being dispersed among the several tribes, they might have the better opportunity for teaching and watching over the people, which was their duty, Deut. xxxiii. 10; 2 Chron. xxx. 22; Mal. ii. 4—7. I am thy part, i. e. I have appointed thee a liberal maintenance out of my oblations.

For the tithes were all given to the Levites, and out of their tithes the tenth was given to the priests, here ver. 26, &c., and Neh. x. 37, 38.

^t ch. 1. 51. 22 [^]Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, [^]lest they bear sin, [^]and die.

i. e. So nigh as to do any act proper to the priests or Levites.

^x ch. 3. 7. 23 [^]But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

Their iniquity, i. e. the punishment due not only for their own, but also for the people's miscarriage, if it be committed through their connivance or negligence. And this was the reason why the priests withstood king Uzziah, when he would have burnt incense to the Lord, 2 Chron. xxvi. 17, 18.

24 [^]But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, [^]Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

As an heave-offering unto the Lord, i. e. as a rent charge or an acknowledgment that they have and hold all their lands, and the fruits of it, from God's bounty. Note that the word heave-offering, which is for the most part understood of a particular kind of offerings heaved or lifted up to the Lord, is here used for any offering in general, as before, ver. 8.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD, even [^]a tenth part of the tithe.

27 [^]And this your heave offering shall be reckoned unto you, as though it were the corn of the threshingfloor, and as the fulness of the winepress.

It shall be accepted of you as much as if you offered it out of your own lands and labours.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave offering unto the LORD of all your tithes, which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave offering to Aaron the priest.

And to his children, which were one with him, and were all to have their share herein.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave offering of the LORD, of all the [^]best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof out of it.

Out of all your gifts; not only out of your tithes, but out of the other gifts which you receive from the people, and out of those fields which shall belong to your cities. Ye shall offer, to wit, to the priest. Every heave-offering, i. e. as many gifts, so many heave-offerings; you shall reserve a part out of each of them for the priest. The hallowed part thereof: this may describe either, 1. The nature and proportion of this offering, and so peradventure he means the tenth part, which was the part or proportion that God hallowed or sanctified to himself as his proper portion, both here and elsewhere; or, 2. The reason or ground of this offering, because it is a thing hallowed or appropriated by God to himself, and given by him to the priest, and because the payment of this due doth hallow all the rest, so as they may use it with comfort and good conscience, as it follows, ver. 31, 32.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, [^]then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshingfloor, and as the increase of the winepress.

31 And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is [^]your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

In every place, i. e. in every clean place, and not in the holy place only.

32 And ye shall [^]bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the

The manner of making the water of separation, and of what, 1—10. The use of it, wherewith the unclean are to be purified, 11—13. Laws concerning despisers of cleansing, 14—22.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which never came yoke:

a Deut. 21, 3. 1 Sam. 6, 7. The ordinance of the law, or, the constitution of the law, i. e. that which God hath ordained or established by law. That they bring thee, at their common charge, because it was for the common good. Red; a fit colour to shadow forth both the bloody nature and complexion of sin, Isa. i. 8, and the human nature, and especially the blood, of Christ, from which this water and all other rites had their purifying virtue. Wherein is no blemish; a fit type of Christ, who was such, Heb. vii. 26; 1 Pet. i. 19. Upon which never came yoke; whereby may be signified, either that Christ in himself was free from all the yoke or obligation of God's command, till for our sakes he took up our yoke, and put himself under the law; or that Christ was not drawn or forced to undertake our burden and cross, but that he did voluntarily choose it. See John x. 17, 18.

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her b forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face:

b Lev. 4, 12, 21, & 16, 27. Heb. 13, 11. Unto Eleazar, who was the second priest, and, in some cases, the vicegerent or deputy of the high priest. To him, not to Aaron, because this service made him unclean for a season, ver. 7, and consequently unfit for holy ministrations; whereas the high priest was, as far as possibly he could, to be preserved from all sorts of defilement, and constantly fit for his high and holy work. Without the camp; partly because it was reputed an unclean and accursed thing, being ceremoniously laden with the sins of all the people; and partly to signify that Christ should suffer without the camp, as he did, Heb. xiii. 12, in the place where malefactors suffered, Lev. xxiv. 14. One; a person appointed by Eleazar for this work.

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and c sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times:

c Lev. 4, 6, & 16, 14, 19. Heb. 9, 13. Directly before the tabernacle, or, towards or over against the tabernacle; either, 1. Near to it; and so we must suppose that he took some of the blood in a basin, and carried it from without the camp to the tabernacle, and then returned to this place again; which might be done, though it be not here expressed. And this seems to agree best with other places, where this sprinkling seven times was performed in or near the tabernacle, as Lev. iv. 17. Or, 2. Standing at a good distance from it, even without the camp, yet turning and looking towards it. For here is no intimation that he went into the camp before this work was done, but rather the contrary is implied, ver. 7. And because being defiled by this work he could not come near to the tabernacle, it was sufficient for him to turn and look towards it. Either way this posture signified his presenting of this blood before the Lord by way of atonement and satisfaction for his and the people's sins, and his expectation of acceptance and pardon only from God, and from his mercy-seat in the tabernacle.

5 And one shall burn the heifer in his sight; d her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn:

d Ex. 29, 14. Lev. 4, 11, 12. To signify the sharp and grievous sufferings of Christ for our sins. Her blood; all of it but what was spent in sprinkling.

6 And the priest shall take e cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

e Lev. 14, 4, 6, 49. All which are here burnt, and as it were offered to God, that they might be sanctified to this holy use for the future; for of these kinds of things was the sprinkle made wherewith the unclean were sprinkled, Lev. xiv. 4.

7 Then the priest shall wash his f clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.

f Lev. 11, 25. & 15, 5. Partly to teach us the imperfection of the Levitical priesthood, in which the priest himself was defiled by some parts of his work, and the absolute necessity of a better and holier priesthood; and partly to show that Christ himself, though he had no sin of his own, yet was reputed by men, and judged by God, as an unclean and sinful person, by reason of our sins which were laid upon him, Isa. liii. 12; 2 Cor. v. 21.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up g the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel h for a water of separation: it is a purification for sin.

g Heb. 9, 13. h ver. 13, 20, 21, ch. 31, 23. For the congregation of the children of Israel, i. e. for their use, and therefore in a fit place or places, whence any of them might easily procure it. For a water, or, to the water, i. e. to be put to the water, or mixed with it. Of separation, i. e. appointed for the cleansing of them that are in a state of separation, who for their uncleanness are separated from the congregation. Either the heifer thus managed, or the water thus made and sprinkled, is a purification for sin, Heb. a sin, i. e. a kind of an offering for sin, or rather a mean for the expiation or cleansing of sin. The name of sin is sometimes given to the punishment of sin, and sometimes to the sacrifice or offering for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

The stranger that sojourneth, to wit, a proselyte, not any stranger, as some understand it. For since it is confessed all the other ceremonial laws do not oblige them, and that where the name of stranger is put, as here it is, it generally speaks of a proselyte, it is more reasonable to take it so here, than without any reason or evidence to make this a particular exception from the general rule.

11 ¶ He that toucheth the dead body of any † man shall be unclean seven days.

i ver. 16. Lev. 21, 1. ch. 5, 2, & 9, 6, 10, & 31. Ps. lxxviii, 4. 14. Hag. 2, 13. † Heb. word of man. Whereas the touch of a dead beast made a man unclean only till even, Lev. xi. 24.

12 He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

With it, i. e. with the water of separation. On the third day, to typify Christ's resurrection on that day, by which we are cleansed or sanctified. On the seventh day he shall be clean, to teach us that our purification in this life is gradual, and not perfect till we come to that eternal sabbath, which the seventh day respected. He shall not be clean; but was first to purify himself, and four days after that to be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, ¹defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because ^mthe water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; ⁿhis uncleanness is yet upon him.

Whosoever toucheth, to wit, if this transgression be done presumptuously; for if it was done ignorantly, he was only to offer sacrifice, Lev. v. 3, 6, 17. Defileth the tabernacle of the Lord, by approaching to it in his uncleanness; for holy things or places were ceremonially defiled with the touch of any unclean person or thing. See Lev. xv. 31; xvi. 16; Hag. ii. 13. His uncleanness is yet upon him; he continues in his guilt and filth, not now to be washed away by this water, but to be punished by cutting off.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent: all that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days.

15 And every ^oopen vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

Every open vessel, because it receives the air of the tent, by which it is ceremonially polluted. Compare Lev. xi. 32, 33.

16 And ^pwhosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

With a sword, or by any other violent way.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the [†]ashes of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and [†]running water shall be put thereto in a vessel:

Running water, i. e. waters flowing from a spring or river, which are the purest. These manifestly signify God's Spirit, which is oft compared to water, John vii. 38, 39, and by which alone true purification is obtained. In a vessel, where they were to be mixed, and then the water was to be strained out and kept for this use.

18 And a clean person shall take ^rhyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

A clean person, to wit, a priest; for to such the work of cleansing was appropriated. See Lev. xiii. Upon all the vessels; even those which were in part purified by the fire. See Numb. xxxi. 23.

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day: ^sand on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath ^tdefiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

Shall not purify himself, i. e. shall contemptuously refuse to submit to this way of purification.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

Shall wash his clothes, because he is unclean, as it here follows. It is strange that the same water should cleanse one person, and defile another; but God would have it so, partly, to teach us that it did not cleanse by any virtue in itself, or in the work done, but only by virtue of God's appointment; partly, to mind the Jews of the imperfection of their priesthood, and their ritual purifications and expiations, and consequently of the necessity of a better priest and sacrifice and way of purifying, which these outward rites did point at; and partly, to show that the efficacy of God's ordinances doth not depend upon the person or quality of his ministers, because the same person who was polluted himself could and did cleanse others. He that toucheth the water of separation; either by sprinkling of it, or by being sprinkled with it; for even he that was cleansed by it, was not fully cleansed as soon as he was sprinkled, but only at the even of that day, as is said here and above, ver. 19.

22 And ^uwhatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean; and ^xthe soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

The unclean person; not he who is so only by touching the water of separation, ver. 21, but he who is so by the greater sort of uncleanness, which lasted seven days, of which ver. 11, 16, and which was not removed without the use of this water of purification, as is manifest from the context and other places of Scripture, and from the nature of the thing; for the lesser sort of uncleanness, mentioned in the foregoing verse, lasted only till even, and was cleansed by the sole washing of his clothes and flesh in water, ver. 7, without any use of this water of purification, which, if it had been necessary, must have been used on the third and on the seventh day, according to the rule, ver. 12, 19, and so the uncleanness of one day had been made an uncleanness of seven days, which is a contradiction. Besides it is unreasonable, that he who immediately touched the defiling thing, should be no more and longer unclean than he who touched that person only; and it was contrary to other rules in like cases, as Lev. xv., where the man or woman having an issue, are thereby made unclean for seven days, ver. 13, 28, but he who toucheth them is made unclean only till even, ver. 7, 27. And therefore this cannot be meant of him who was unclean by touching this water, who himself was unclean only till even, ver. 21, as also he who toucheth him is in this place. Shall be unclean, to signify to us the very infectious nature of sin and of sinful company. Until even, because as his defilement was less, so it was fit the duration of it should be shorter.

CHAP. XX.

The people journey in the wilderness of Zin; they murmur against Moses for want of water, 2—5. God commandeth Moses to speak to the rock, that it might yield water, 7, 8. Moses striking the rock twice, 9—11, displeaseth God, 12. Moses desiring passage through Edom, 14—17, is denied, 18—21. Aaron by God's command delivering up his office to Eleazar his son, dieth, 21—28. All the congregation bemoan him, 29.

THEN ^acame the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and ^bMiriam died there, and was buried there.

Then, to wit, after many other stations and long journeys here omitted, but particularly described Numb. xxxiii. The desert of Zin; a place near the land of Edom, distinct and distant from that Sin, Exod. xvi. 1. In the first month, to wit, of the fortieth year, as is evident, because the next station to this was in Mount Hor, where Aaron died, ver. 22, 23, &c., who died in the fifth month of the fortieth year, Numb. xxxiii. 38. Moses doth not give us an exact journal of all their occurrences in the wilderness, but only of those which were most remarkable, and especially of those which happened in the first and second, and in the fortieth year. Kadesh; whether the same place called Kadesh-barnea, where they were long since, Numb. xiii. 26, and to which they now return after thirty-eight years' tedious travels and wanderings in the desert, Deut. ii. 14, or another place more southerly, it is not material. Miriam died four months before Aaron, and but a few more before Moses.

c Ex. 17. 1. 2 °And there was no water for the congregation: °and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

The water having followed them through all their former journeys, began now to fail them here, because they were now come near Canaan and other countries, where waters might be had by ordinary means, and therefore God would not use extraordinary, lest he should seem to prostitute the honour of miracles. This story, though like that Exod. xvii., is different from it, as appears by divers circumstances.

ch. Ex. 17. 2. 3 And the people °chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died 'when our brethren died before the LORD!

i. e. Suddenly, rather than to die such a lingering and painful death. Their sin was much greater than their parents' in like case, because they should have taken warning by their miscarriages, and by the terrible effects of them, which their eyes had seen.

g Ex. 17. 3. 4 And °why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and °they fell upon their faces: and °the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly; partly to avoid the growing rage of the people, for God's singular protection of them did not exclude the use of ordinary means; and partly to go to God for relief and redress.

7 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, k Ex. 17. 5. 8 °Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and °thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

The rod; that rod which was laid up before the Lord in the tabernacle, as appears from ver. 9. But whether it was Aaron's rod, which was undoubtedly laid up there, Numb. xvii. 10, or Moses's rod, by which he wrought so many miracles, it is not considerable; or whether it was not one and the same rod, which was commonly called Moses's rod, as here, ver. 11, and elsewhere, and sometimes Aaron's rod, as Exod. vii. 12, which may seem most probable. For it is likely, though not related elsewhere in Scripture, that wonder-working rod, called the rod of God, Exod. iv. 20, was laid up in some part of the tabernacle, though not in or near the ark, where Aaron's blossoming rod for a particular reason was put. Speak ye unto the rock, which will sooner hear and obey my commands than these sottish and stubborn people.

9 And Moses took the rod ° from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

i. e. Out of the tabernacle.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, °Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and °the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

To the men it was a sacrament, 1 Cor. x. 3, 4, but to the beasts it was no holy, but a common thing. So that the elements in the sacraments have no inherent and inseparable holiness, but only a relative holiness with respect to their use, out of which they are unholy and common.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because °ye believed me not, and °sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

Ye believed me not, but showed your infidelity; which they did either by their looks and gestures, or rather by the matter and manner of their expressions and actions; either, 1. By smiting the rock, and that twice, which is emphatically noted, as if he doubted whether once smiting would have done it, whereas he was not commanded to smite so much as once, but only to speak to it; or, 2. By the doubtfulness of these words, ver. 10, Must we fetch water out of the rock? which implies a suspicion of it, as the like words do, Gen. xviii. 13, whereas they should have spoken positively and confidently to the rock to give forth waters. And yet they did not doubt of the power of God, but of his will, whether he would gratify these rebels with this further miracle, after so many of the like kind. And besides the words themselves, it is considerable, both with what mind they were spoken, which God saw to be distrustful, and in what manner they were delivered, which the people might discern to come from misbelief or doubt. And there might be divers other unbelieving words used by them at this time and place, though they be not here recorded, it being usual in Scripture to give only the sum or principal heads of discourses or events, leaving the rest to be gathered out of them. See Psal. cvi. 32, 33. To sanctify me, i. e. to give me glory of my power in doing this miracle, and of my truth in punctually fulfilling my promise so to do, and of my goodness in doing it notwithstanding the people's perverseness. In the eyes of the children of Israel: this made their sin scandalous to the Israelites, who of themselves were too prone to infidelity, and little needed such an ill example; to prevent the contagion whereof God leaves a monument of his great displeasure upon them, and inflicts a punishment as public and manifest as their sin was.

13 °This is the water of ¶ Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was sanctified in them.

Meribah, called Meribah Kadesh, to distinguish it from another Meribah, Exod. xvii. 7. Sanctified in them, or, among them, to wit, the children of Israel last mentioned, by the demonstration of his omnipotency, veracity, and clemency towards the Israelites, and of his impartial holiness and severity against sin even in his greatest friends and favourites, as Moses was.

u Gen. 46. 6. 15 "How our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; *and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And ^vwhen we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and ^wsent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt: and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border:

An angel, to wit, the Angel of the covenant, Christ Jesus, who first appeared to Moses in the bush, Exod. iii. 2, and afterward in the cloudy pillar, who conducted Moses and the people out of Egypt, and through the wilderness, as appears from Exod. xiv. 19; xxxiii. 20; xxxiii. 14; 1 Cor. x. 4. For though Moses may be called an angel or messenger, a title given to Phinehas, Judg. ii. 1; and to the prophets, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16; and to Haggai, Hag. i. 13; yet it is not probable that he is meant, partly, because Moses was the person that sent this message; partly, because there was no reason why he should express himself by such a dark and doubtful title to them; and partly, because another Angel besides and above Moses did conduct them, and the mention hereof to the Edomites was likely to give more authority and efficacy to their present message. In Kadesh, i. e. near the city Kadesh, the particle in being oft so used, as we have showed.

17 ^aLet us pass, I pray thee, through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

Wells, or pits, which any of you have digged for your private use, to wit, without paying for it, ver. 19; Deut. ii. 6; but only of the waters of common rivers, which are free to all passengers, and will not be prejudicial to thee.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

i. e. Through my country, as thou desirest; I will not suffer thee to do so: which was an act of common policy to secure themselves from so numerous a host.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high way: and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, ^bthen I will pay for it: I will only, without doing any thing else, go through on my feet.

Children of Israel said unto him, i. e. their messengers replied unto them what here follows. I will pay for it; for water was a scarce commodity in those parts.

20 And he said, ^cThou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom ^drefused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore ^eIsrael ^fturned away from him.

Through his border, but permitted them to go by their border, Deut. ii. 4, 8; Judg. xi. 18, and furnished them with victuals for their money, Deut. ii. 29. Israel turned away, according to God's command, Deut. ii. 5.

22 ¶ And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, ^gand came unto mount Hor.

Whose inhabitants were then called Horims, Deut. ii. 12, and Esau the Horite, Gen. xxxvi. 20.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be ^hgathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ⁱye rebelled against my ^jword at the water of Meribah.

This was one, but not the only reason. God would not have Moses and Aaron to carry the people into Canaan, for this reason also, to signify the insufficiency of the Mosaic and Aaronical priesthood to make them happy, and the necessity of a better, and so to keep the Israelites from resting in them so as to be taken off from their expectation of Christ, and from the entertainment of him when he should come.

25 ^kTake Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

Of his garments, to wit, of his priestly garments, Exod. xxviii. 2; Lev. viii. 7—9, in token of his resignation of his office. See the like Isa. xxii. 15, 19—21. Put them upon Eleazar, by way of admission and inauguration of him to his office.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

That their hearts might be more affected with their loss of so great a pillar, and that they all might be witnesses of the translation of the priesthood from Aaron to Eleazar, and therefore might give him the honour due to him.

28 ^lAnd Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and ^mAaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

Aaron died there, to wit, in Mount Hor. Object. He died in Mosera, Deut. x. 6. Answ. Mosera was the general name of the place where that station was, and Mount Hor is a particular place in it, where he died, and was buried also, Deut. x. 6.

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron ⁿthirty days, even all the house of Israel.

i. e. When the congregation understood by the relation of Moses and Eleazar, and by other signs. So seeing is used Gen. xlii. 1; Acts vii. 12. Thirty days; the time of public and solemn mourning for great persons. See Deut. xxxiv. 8.

to be called a Canaanite in a general sense, as the Amorites and others sometimes are. In the south, to wit, of Canaan, as appears from Numb. xxxiii. 40, towards the east, and near the Dead Sea. By the way of the spies; not of those spies which Moses sent to spy the land, Numb. xiii. 17, for that was done thirty-eight years before this, and they went so privately, that the Canaanites took no notice of them, nor knew which way they came or went; but of the spies which he himself sent out to observe the marches and motions of the Israelites. But the words may be otherwise rendered; either thus, in the manner of spies, so the sense is, when he heard that divers of the Israelites came into or towards his country in the nature of spies, to prepare the way for the rest; or thus, by the way of Atharim, a place so called, as the seventy interpreters here take it, and it seems not improbable. Took some of them prisoners; which God permitted for Israel's humiliation and punishment, and to teach them not to expect the conquest of that land from their own wisdom or valour, but wholly from God's favour and assistance. See Deut. ix. 4; Psal. xlv. 3, 4.

2 ° And Israel vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people unto my hand, then ^d I will utterly destroy their cities.

Being sensible of their own weakness, they endeavour to engage God to help them in the war, which they intended to renew. I will utterly destroy their cities; I will reserve no person nor thing for my own use, but devote them all to total destruction, which was the consequent of such vows. See Lev. xxvii. 29; Deut. xiii. 15.

3 And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place ^{||} Hormah.

They utterly destroyed them: when? Ans. Either, 1. Some time after this, under Joshua, who subdued, among others, the king of Arad, Josh. xii. 14. And so this is mentioned here by anticipation, that the vow being now made and mentioned, the effect or performance of it might be recorded, though out of its place; and so this verse must be supposed to be added by some of the prophets, and inserted into Moses's history, as some other passages seem to be. Or, 2. At this time; and so this is not the same Arad with that, Josh. xii. 14, nor this the same Hormah with that there mentioned, but another of the same name, which is most frequent in persons and places in Scripture. And this is the more probable, because that Arad and Hormah, Josh. xii. 14, are two distinct places, and had divers kings, whereas here the same place is called both Arad and Hormah; and because that Arad seems to be at some good distance from this, and more within the country, and more northward, as may be gathered from the other places joined with it, Josh. xii. whereas this Arad was near Edom, ver. 4, and in the south, ver. 1. Quest. 1. How could this be done in the land of Canaan, when Moses neither entered himself, nor led the people into that land? Ans. Neither Moses nor the whole body of the people did this exploit, but a select number sent out for this purpose to punish that king and people, who were so fierce and malicious that they came out of their own country to fight with the Israelites in the wilderness; and these, when they had done this work, returned to their brethren into the wilderness. Quest. 2. Why did they not all now go into Canaan, when some of them had once entered it, and pursue this victory? Ans. Because God would not permit it, there being several works yet to be done, other people must be conquered, the Israelites must be further humbled and tried and purged, Moses must die, and then they shall enter, and that in a more glorious manner, even over Jordan, which shall be miraculously dried up, and give them passage.

4 ¶ And ° they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red sea, to [†] compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much ^{||} † discouraged because of the way.

By the way of the Red Sea, i. e. which leadeth to the Red Sea, as they must needs do to compass the land of Edom. Because of the way; by reason of this journey, which was long, and troublesome, and preposterous, (for they were now going towards Egypt,) and unexpected, either because they doubted not but their brethren the Edomites would grant them their reasonable request of passing through their land, which disappointment made it worse; or because the successful entrance and victorious progress which some of them had made in the borders of Canaan, made them think they might have speedily gone in and taken possession of it, and so have saved their tedious travels and further difficulties, into which Moses had again brought them.

5 And the people [°] spake against God, ^h and against Moses, ^h Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and ⁱ our soul loatheth this light bread.

Against God; against Christ, their chief Conductor, whom they tempted, 1 Cor. x. 9. This light bread, i. e. of small substance and virtue. Thus contemptuously do they speak of manna, whereas it appears it yielded excellent nourishment, because in the strength of it they were able to go so many and such tedious journeys.

6 And ^h the LORD sent ^h fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

Such there were many in this wilderness, Deut. viii. 15, which having been hitherto restrained by God, are now let loose and sent among them. They are called fiery from their effects, because their poison caused an intolerable heat, and burning, and thirst in the bodies of the Israelites, which was aggravated with this circumstance of the place, that here was no water, ver. 5.

7 ¶ ^m Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for ⁿ we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee; ^o pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

A fiery serpent, i. e. the figure of a serpent in brass, which is of a fiery colour. This would require some time: God would not speedily take off the judgment, because he saw they were not thoroughly humbled. Set it upon a pole, that the people might see it from all parts of the camp; and therefore the pole must be high, and the serpent large.

This method of cure was prescribed, partly that it might appear to be God's own work, and not the effect of nature or art; and partly that it might be an eminent type of our salvation by Christ. See John iii. 14, 15. The serpent signified Christ, who was in the likeness of sinful flesh, Rom. viii. 3, though without sin, as this brazen serpent had the outward shape, but not the inward poison of the other serpents: the pole resembled the cross upon which Christ was lifted up for our salvation; and looking up to it designed our believing in Christ.

9 And ^p Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

He was delivered from death, and cured of his disease.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel set forward, and ^q pitched in Oboth. Not immediately, but after two other stations, mentioned Numb. xxxiii.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and ^r pitched at ^r Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which ^r is before Moab, toward the sunrising.

¶ Or, before

of Abarim.

Moab is called the wilderness of Moab, Deut. ii. 8.

Deut. 2. 13. 12 ¶ From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared.

Or rather, by the torrent or brook of Zared, as we render it, Deut. ii. 13; which ran into the Dead Sea, and from which the valley also might be so called.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

On the other side of Arnon, or rather, on this side of Arnon, for so it now was to the Israelites, who had not yet passed over it, as appears from Deut. ii. 24. But the same words, Judg. xi. 18, are to be rendered on the other side of Arnon, for so it was to Jephthah; and the same preposition signifieth on this side, or beyond, according to the circumstances of the place. Between Moab and the Amorite, i. e. though formerly it and the land beyond it belonged to Moab, yet afterwards it had been taken from them by Sihon, ver. 26, 28. This is added to reconcile two seemingly contrary commands of God, the one that of not meddling with the land of the Moabites, Deut. ii. 9, the other that of going over Arnon and taking possession of the land beyond it, Deut. ii. 24, because, saith he, it is not now the land of the Moabites, but of the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the LORD, ¶ What he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon,

¶ Or, Vahab in Suphah. The book of the wars of the Lord seems to have been some poem or narration of the wars and victories of the Lord, either by or relating to the Israelites; which may be asserted without any prejudice to the integrity of the Holy Scripture, because this book doth not appear to have been written by a prophet, or to be designed for a part of the canon, but by some other ingenious person, who intended only to write an historical relation of these matters, which yet Moses might quote, as St. Paul doth some of the heathen poets. And as St. Luke assures us that many did write a history of the things done and said by Christ, Luke i. 1, whose writings were never received as canonical, the like may be justly conceived concerning this and some few other books mentioned in the Old Testament; though the words may be thus rendered, Wherefore it shall be said in the relation or narration (for so the Hebrew sepher is confessed to signify) of the wars of the Lord. In the Red Sea; or, at Vahab in Suphah, or in the land of Suph. Vahab seems to be the name not of a man, but of a city or place, and Suphah the name of the country where it was; and the Hebrew particle eth is oft rendered at. And whereas the sense seems to be imperfect, it must be noted, that he quotes only a fragment or piece of the book, and that principally to prove the situation of Arnon, which he had asserted ver. 13, for which end the passage quoted is sufficient. And the sense is easily to be understood, for it is plain enough that this poet or writer is describing the wars and works of God by the several places where they were done; and having begun the sentence before, and mentioned other places, he comes to these here mentioned, at Vahab in Suphah, and at the brooks of Arnon, &c. And it seems probable that the war here designed was that of Sihon against the Moabites, mentioned below, ver. 26, which is fitly ascribed to the Lord, because it was undertaken and perfected by the singular direction and assistance of God, and that for the sake of the Israelites, that by this means that country might be invaded and possessed by them, without taking it away from the Moabites, which they were forbidden to meddle with or to disturb, Deut. ii. 9, and so their title to it might be more just and unquestionable. See Judg. xi. 12, 13, 27. In the brooks of Arnon, i. e. the brook, the plural number for the singular, as the plural number rivers is used concerning Jordan, Psal. lxxiv. 15, and concerning Tigris, Nah. ii. 6, and concerning Euphrates, Psal. cxxxvii. 1, and concerning Thermoodon in Virgil, all which may be so called because of the several little streams into which they were divided.

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and ¶ lieth upon the border of Moab.

Ar; a chief city in Moab, as appears from Isa. xv. 1, of which ver. 28.

16 And from thence they went to Beer: that is the well whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

Beer, and Mattanah, Nahaliel, and Bamoth named here, ver. 19, are not mentioned among those places where they pitched or encamped, Numb. xxxiii. Either therefore they did not pitch or encamp in these places, but only pass by or through them, nor indeed is it here said they pitched or encamped in these places, which is said of those places, Numb. xxxiii., but only that they went to them, ver. 18; or, these are stations omitted there, and to be supplied from hence; for though it be there said they went from such a place, and pitched in such a place, yet it is not said they went immediately from the one place to the other, and therefore they might take these places in their way. Will give them water, to wit, in a miraculous manner.

17 ¶ Then Israel sang this song, ¶ Spring up, O well; ¶ sing ye unto it:

Israel sang this song, to praise God for giving them such a seasonable blessing, before they asked it, or complained for the want of it. Spring up; give forth thy waters that we may drink. Heb. Ascend, i. e. let thy waters, which now lie hid below in the earth, ascend for thy use. It is either a prediction that it should spring up, or a prayer that it might, or a command in the name of God directed to the well, by a usual prosopepæia, as when God bids the heavens hear, and the earth give ear, Isa. i. 2. Any of these ways it shows their faith. Sing ye unto it; or, sing ye of it; or, answer to it or concerning it; it being the manner of the Jewish singers that one should answer to another, of which see Exod. xv. 21; 1 Sam. xviii. 7.

18 The princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the lawgiver, with their staves. And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah:

The princes digged; either by themselves, or by others whom they commanded to do it. By the direction of the lawgiver, or, with the lawgiver, i. e. Moses; they together with Moses, or they by Moses's direction and appointment, which is signified ver. 16. Their staves are here mentioned, either, 1. As the ensigns of their authority, Judg. v. 14, by which they gave this command of digging. 2. As the instruments of their work; not that they did formally and effectually dig the well or receptacle for the water, for which spades were more proper than staves, but that as Moses smote the rock with his rod, so they struck the earth with their staves, making only some small impression for form sake, or as a sign that God would cause the water to flow forth out of the earth where they smote it, as he did before out of the rock.

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel: and from Nahaliel to Bamoth:

See the notes on ver. 16.

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country of Moab, to the top of Pisgah, which looketh toward Jeshimon.

In the valley; or, the valley, which might be called Bamoth, not because it was a place naturally high, but from divers other reasons, which may be easily guessed. Or, to the valley, or to that valley, that famous or rather infamous valley, to wit, of Abel-shittim, Numb. xxxiii. 49, where they committed those foul abominations recorded Numb. xxv. Pisgah was the top of those high hills of Abarim; of which see Deut. iii. 17, 27; xxxii. 49; xxxiv. 1, 6.

21 ¶ And Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

By God's allowance, that so Sihon's malice might be the more evident and inexcusable, and that their title to his

They spoke what they seriously intended and would have done, if he had given them quiet passage ; but withal they knew that Sihon would not do it, and that he would withstand them, and that they should subdue him and take his land, as God had told them before they sent this message, as appears from Deut. ii. 21, 26, 27 ; and accordingly God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, for this end, that he might deliver him into Israel's hand there, ver. 30. And no wonder, for he and his people were Amorites, and therefore devoted to destruction, as all that people were.

From Arnon ; or, which reached from Arnon, &c. ; such supplements being very usual ; and so here is contained a description or limitation of Sihon's conquest and kingdom, that it extended only from Arnon—unto the children of Ammon ; and then the following words, for the border of the children of Ammon was strong, come in very fitly, not as a reason why the Israelites did not or could not conquer the Ammonites, for they were absolutely forbidden to meddle with them, Deut. iii. 8 ; but as a reason why Sihon could not enlarge his conquests and empire to the Ammonites, as he had done to the Moabites. Jabbok ; a river by which the countries of Ammon and Moab were in part bounded and divided. Was strong ; either by the advantage of the river, or by their strong holds in their frontiers.

25 And Israel took all these cities : and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the [†] villages thereof.

+ Heb. daughters.

Having destroyed the ancient inhabitants, Deut. ii. 34.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.

The city of Sihon : this is added as a reason why Israel took possession of this land, notwithstanding God's prohibition of meddling with them or their land, Deut. ii. 9, because it was not now the land of the Moabites, but had been some time since taken from them, and in the possession of the Amorites. The former king of Moab, i. e. the predecessor of Balak, who was the present king.

27 Wherefore they that speak in proverbs say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared :

That speak in proverbs ; the poets, or other ingenious persons, to wit, of the Amorites or Canaanites, who made this following song of triumph over the vanquished Moabites ; which is here brought in partly as a proof that this was now Sihon's land, and partly as an evidence of the just judgment of God in spoiling the spoilers, and subduing those who insulted over their conquered enemies. Come into Heshbon : these are the words either of Sihon speaking thus to his people, or of the people exhorting one another to come and possess and repair the city which they had taken. The city of Sihon ; that which once was the royal city of the king of Moab, but now is the city of Sihon.

28 For there is ^g a fire gone out of ^g Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon : it hath consumed ^h Ar of Moab, and ^h the lords of the high places of Arnon.

A fire, i. e. the fury of war, which is oft and fitly compared to fire here, as Isa. xlvii. 14 ; Amos i. 7, 10, 12, 14 ; ii. 2, 5. Heshbon ; that city which before was a refuge and defence to all the country, now is turned into a great annoyance and a public mischief. Ar of Moab. Quest. How can this be, since Ar was yet in the hands of the Moabites, Deut. ii. 9, 18, 29 ? Answe. 1. This may be understood not of the city Ar, but of the people or the country subject or belonging to that great and royal city, as the Chaldee understands it. 2. Possibly Ar was taken by Sihon of the Moabites, but afterwards was either recovered by the Moabites, or upon the Israelites' approach quitted by Sihon, gathering all his forces together that he might fight with the Israelites, and so repossessed by the Moabites. 3. This place may be thus rendered, It shall consume Ar of Moab, the past tense being put for the future, as is usual in prophetic passages ; and so this may be the Amorites' prediction or presage, that having taken Heshbon and its territories, they should now extend their victories to Ar of Moab, though they fell short of that hope, as ordinarily men do. The lords of the high places ; either, 1. The princes or governors of the strong holds, which were frequently in high places, especially in that mountainous country, and which were in divers parts all along the river of Arnon ; and having taken some of these, they promised to themselves that they should take all the rest, and so proceed further and further, till they had taken Ar itself. Or rather, 2. The priests and people that worshipped their god in their high places ; which may seem more probable, 1. Because as the Israelites worshipped God, so the heathens worshipped Baal, in high places. Numb. xxii. 41, and particularly the Moabites are noted for so doing, Jer. xlviii. 35. 2. Because amongst the eminent places of Moab there is mention of Bamoth-baal, or, of the high places of Baal, Josh. xiii. 17.

29 Woe to thee, Moab ! thou art undone, O people of ⁱ Chemosh : he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

48. 7, 13.

Alas, poor Moab ! thou couldst not save thyself from Sihon's sword. People of Chemosh, i. e. the worshippers of Chemosh : so the god of the Moabites was called, 1 Kings xi. 7, 33 ; 2 Kings xxiii. 13 ; Jer. xlviii. 46. He, i. e. their god, hath delivered up his own people to his and their enemies ; he could not defend them, but suffered many of them to be killed ; nor could he secure even those that had escaped the sword, but suffered them to fall into their enemies' hands, and by them to be carried into captivity. Unto Sihon king of the Amorites. Now the words of this and the following verse seem to be not a part of that triumphant song or poem made, as I suppose, by some Amoritish bard or poet, which seems to be concluded, ver. 28 ; but of the Israelites making their observation upon it. And here they scoff at the impotency not only of the Moabites, but of their god also, who could not save his people from the sword of Sihon and the Amorites.

30 We have shot at them ; Heshbon is perished even ^k unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto ^l Medeba.

l Is. 15. 2.

Though you feeble Moabites, and your god too, could not resist Sihon, we Israelites, by the help of our God, have shot, to wit, with success and victory, as the following words show, at them, to wit, at Sihon and his Amorites ; which is easily and plainly understood, both from the foregoing and following words. Heshbon, the royal city of Sihon, and by him lately repaired, is perished, is taken away from Sihon, and so is all his territory or country, even as far as Dibon, which, as some think, is called Dibon-gad, Numb. xxxiii. 45. Which reached unto Medeba, i. e. whose territory extendeth to Medeba. Or, yea, even to Medeba; for the Hebrew word asher is sometimes used for yea, or moreover, as 1 Sam. xv. 20; Psal. x. 6; xcv. 11. The sense is, the whole country of Sihon, taken by him from the Moabites, is wasted and perished.

31 ¶ Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out ^m Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

Jaazer; one of the cities of Moab, formerly taken from them by Sihon, and now taken from him by the Israelites, Numb. xxxii. 1, 3, 35; and after the decay or destruction of the kingdom of the ten tribes, repossessed by the Moabites, Jer. xlvi. 32.

33 ¶ "And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle ^a at Adrei.

Og also was a king of the Amorites, of whom see Deut. iii. 1, 11. And it may seem that Sihon and Og were the leaders or captains of two great colonies which came out of Canaan, and drove out the former inhabitants of these places. Bashan, a rich country, famous for its pastures and breed of cattle, Deut. xxxii. 14; Psal. xxii. 12; Jer. l. 19, and for its oaks, Ezek. xxvii. 6.

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^p Fear him not: for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and ^q thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

Fear him not; a necessary caution, for he was a great giant, Deut. iii. 11, likely to strike them with terror.

35 ^r So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

CHAP. XXII.

The Israelites pitch in the plains of Moab, 1. Balak the king sends for Balaam to curse Israel, 2—8. He inquires of the Lord, who forbids him to go: he goes not, 9—14. Balak sends again: the Lord permits Balaam to go, 15—21. An angel stands in the way; which his ass perceives: his eyes are at length opened to see the angel, who rebukes him, 22—33. He confesses his fault, and offers to go back; he is commanded to go on, and speak as should be revealed to him, 34, 35. Balak comes to meet him; receives him; expostulates with him; he declares he has no power but to speak the word which God should put into his mouth, 36—41.

AND ^a the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab on this side Jordan by Jericho.

The plains of Moab still retained their ancient title, though they had been taken away from the Moabites by Sihon, and from him by the Israelites. By Jericho, i. e. over against Jericho; or, near the passage over Jordan to Jericho, or its territories.

2 ¶ And ^b Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

Balak, the son or successor of him whom Sihon had spoiled of part of his kingdom, Numb. xxi. 26. Of him see Judg. xi. 25; Micah vi. 5.

3 And ^c Moab was sore afraid of the people, because there were many: and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

As it was foretold both in general of all nations, Deut. ii. 25, and particularly concerning Moab, Exod. xv. 15.

4 And Moab said unto ^d the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

The elders of Midian, called the kings of Midian, Numb. xxxi. 8, and princes of Midian, Josh. xiii. 21; who though divided into their kingdoms, yet were now united upon the approach of the Israelites their common enemy; and being, as it seems, a potent and crafty people, and neighbours to the Moabites, these seek confederacy with them. We read of Midianites near Mount Sinai, Exod. ii., iii., which seem to have been a part or colony of this people that went out to seek new quarters, as the manner of those times was, but the body of that people were seated in those parts, as is evident from many scriptures. Lick up, i. e. consume and utterly destroy, in which sense the fire is said to lick up the water and sacrifices, 1 Kings xviii. 38. The meaning is, we can expect no mercy from them, they will utterly root us out as they did the Amorites, if we do not make a stout and timely opposition. All that are round about us, i. e. all our people, who lived in the country and territory adjoining to each city, where the princes resided.

5 ^e He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor to ^f Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the ^g face of the earth, and they abide over against me:

Balaam is called a prophet, 2 Pet. ii. 16, because God was pleased to inspire and direct him to speak the following prophecy, as he did inspire Caiaphas to speak those words, John xi. 51, 52, and as sometimes he did for a time inspire other wicked men; but in truth he was a soothsayer, as he is called, Josh. xiii. 22. See Numb. xxiv. 1. Beor, or Bosor, 2 Pet. ii. 15; for he had two names, as many others had. Pethor; a city in Mesopotamia or Aram: see Numb. xxiii. 7; Deut. xxiii. 4. By the river, i. e. by Euphrates, which is oft called the river, by way of eminency, as Gen. xv. 18; Josh. xxiv. 2, 15, and here the river of Balaam's land or country, to wit, of Mesopotamia or Aram, Numb. xxiii. 7. They abide over against me; they are encamped in my neighbourhood, ready to invade my kingdom.

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, ^h curse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blessest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

Curse me this people, i. e. curse them for my sake and benefit; use thy utmost power, which thou hast with thy gods or infernal spirits, to blast and ruin them. That we may smite them; thou by thy magical imprecations, and I by my sword joined with them. He had some experience of, or, at least, a great confidence in, Balaam's skill and power in these matters.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with ⁱ the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

With the rewards of divination, Heb. with divinations; by which he understands not the instruments of divination, which it was needless and absurd to bring to so eminent a diviner, who doubtless was thoroughly furnished for his own trade; but the rewards of it, as it is explained 2 Pet. ii. 15, and as in the Hebrew, 2 Sam. iv. 10, good tidings is put for the reward of good tidings. Nor is it probable they would go to, or could expect to prevail with such a person, especially being noted for his covetousness, as appears from the story, without that powerful engine.

^{i ver. 19.} 8 And he said unto them, ⁱ Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me: and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

The night was the time when God used to reveal his mind by dreams. Here is the first discovery of his wickedness, that he takes time to consider, and doth his endeavour to effect that wicked motion of cursing the Israelites, which he should have rejected, and abhorred at the first mention of it. As the Lord shall speak, Heb. Jehovah, the true God, whom he here mentions, either for his own greater reputation, as if he consulted not with inferior spirits, as other soothsayers did, but with the supreme God; or rather because this was Israel's God, and the only possible way of ruining them was by engaging their God against them; as the known way of the Romans and other heathens, when they went to besiege any city, they used enchantments to call forth that god under whose peculiar protection they were. The princes of Moab, and of Midian too, as is manifest from ver. 7, which was needless to repeat here.

^{k Gen. 20. 3. ver. 20.} 9 ^k And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee?

God came unto Balaam, not to gratify his covetous desire, but to advance his own honour and service, even by the counsels of his enemies. He asketh not for his own information, but partly that Balaam by repeating the thing in God's presence might be convinced and ashamed of his sin and folly in offering his service in such a cursed business; and partly for a foundation to the following answer.

10 And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying,

11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure † I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out.

^{† Heb. I shall prevail in fighting against him.}

12 And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for ^l they are blessed.

God revealeth his mind to Balaam, not for any love to him, but for the sake of his people concerned in it, as he did to Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 25, and to Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. ii. 45. They are blessed by my irrevocable decree and sentence, and therefore it is in vain for men to curse them.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

He counts the principal things, to wit, the reason of God's prohibition, which might have given a stop to their further course and counsels in this matter, and secretly intimates his own good will and readiness to comply with them, if God had not hindered him.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

Thus they lay the blame upon Balaam, which he imputed to God.

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, † Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me:

No counsel nor suggestion either of God or man.

^{m ver. 6.} 17 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: ⁿ come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

Before he wrought upon his covetousness, now upon his ambition.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, ⁿ If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, ^o I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

You desire and expect that from me which is out of my power, to resist the will of the great God. He slyly insinuates, that he wanted not will, but power only. The Lord my God; so he calls him, partly, to magnify himself as the servant of the great Jehovah; partly, that by professing this respect unto God he might the sooner induce him to grant his desire; and partly, because he worshipped the true God, together with idols, as many in those times and places did.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, ^p tarry ^{p ver. 8.} ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

Possibly he may change his mind, or yield to my renewed suit. Thus he sought to make God and his conscience stoop to the service of his pride and covetousness, which was abominable.

20 ^q And God came unto Balaam at ^{q ver. 9.} night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but ^r yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

^{r ver. 35. ch. 23. 12, 26. & 24. 13.}

Go with them, since this is thy great desire and purpose; as far as thou canst, take thy course; I will, according to thy wish, withdraw my restraint, and leave thee to thyself and thy own choice. Compare Psal. lxxxii. 11, 12. That shalt thou do: these words signify not so much his duty as the event and his disappointment, Thou shalt not do what thou desirest, to wit, curse my people, and so enrich and advance thyself; but I will so overrule thy mind, and bridle thy tongue, that thou shalt speak nothing but what is contrary to thy desire and interest; and therefore though I permit thee to go, thou shalt lose thy design in it.

21 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled because he went: ^s and the angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.

God's anger was kindled; either, 1. Because he went of his own accord with the princes of Moab, and did not wait till they came to call him, i. e. urged him to go, which was the sign and condition of God's permission, ver. 20, but rather himself rose and called them, as it may seem from ver. 21. Or, 2. Because those words, ver. 20, did contain no approbation nor licence, but a bare permission, and that in anger, as Balaam might easily have understood, if he had considered his own heart, or the circumstances of his concession. This was no more an approbation than that passage of Christ to Judas, John xiii. 27, That thou doest, do quickly. Or, 3. Because he went with ill design, and desire to do contrary to what God had charged him, to wit, to curse the people, as plainly appears from the following story, and from Deut. xxiii. 5; for God hath been oft and justly angry with those who have done what God bade them, when they did it in evil manner, or for evil ends, as appears from Isa. x. 6, 7, and many other places. The Lord stood in the way, i. e. to oppose and terrify, if not to kill him. His two servants were with him; the rest of the company being probably gone before them. For in those ancient times there was more of simplicity, and less of ceremony; and therefore it is not strange that Balaam came at some distance after the rest, and attended only by his own servants.

23 And ^t the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

Balaam saw not the angel because God withheld his eyes, as he did the eyes of Daniel's companions, Dan. x. 7. It is a truth, which mere philosophers own, that when God withdraws his concurrence or help from any of his creatures, they cannot perform their natural acts and offices; the eye cannot see, as Gen. xix., nor the ear hear, nor the fire burn, as Dan. iii.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD "opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

i. e. The Lord conferred upon the ass the power of speech and reasoning for that time. Impudent are those heathens that disbelieve and scoff at the Scripture for this and some such relations contained in it, when there are examples of the same kind of prodigies, to wit, of oxen and other brute creatures speaking some few words, in the greatest and most approved writers of the Roman history, as Plutarch, Polybius, Livy, and others. See the particulars in my Latin Synopsis on this place.

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, ²for now would I kill thee.

Balaam was not much terrified with the ass's speaking, because he was much accustomed to converse with evil spirits, which oft appeared to him and discoursed with him in the shape of such creatures.

30 ²And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, [†]upon which thou hast ridden || ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the LORD ²opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he ³bowed down his head, and || fell flat on his face.

In token of reverence and submission.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out [†]to withstand thee, because thy way is ^bperverse before me:

Howsoever thou mayst deceive thyself or others, I see the perverseness of thy heart and way, the wickedness of thy design and desires in this journey, which thou hast undertaken, not to please me, but to gratify Balak, and, if it be possible, to curse my people.

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

I had slain thee alone, and not her: and therefore her turning aside and falling down was wholly for thy sake and benefit, not for her own, and thy anger against her was unjust and unreasonable.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, ^cI have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it [†]displease thee, I will get me back again.

A frivolous supposition; for it was apparently displeasing to God, who had now said that his way was perverse, and had therefore opposed him and sought to slay him: but hereby he shows how loth he was to go back and lose the hopes he had conceived; and besides he speaks of desisting from the outward action, but shows no sense of the plague of his heart, his vile affections, which were the root of this ill-designed journey.

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, Go with the men: ^dbut only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

Go with the men: this may be either, 1. A mere permission; Since neither the convictions of thy own conscience, nor the experience of thy danger, have weakened thee from thy base designs and inclinations, I shall no further restrain thee; my angel shall give thee no more disturbance; go on and prosper. Or, 2. A concession; I allow thee to go upon the following terms; for the words here are more absolute and unconditional than those ver. 20. That thou shalt speak: these words may express either, 1. The event; or, 2. His duty. See above on ver. 20.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, ^ehe went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, ^fwhich is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

That by this great honour he might give him a taste and earnest of those great rewards he designed him, and thereby oblige him to use his utmost skill and interest for him. The utmost coast; not far from the camp of the Israelites, whom he desired him to curse.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am I not able indeed ^gto promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? ^hthe word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

Any thing, to wit, agreeable to thy expectation or my own inclination. That shall I speak; I am forced to do so by his superior power, and therefore be not offended with me, if I speak things displeasing to thee.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto || Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

Or, killed, either for sacrifice, or rather for a feast; for the sacrifices were offered after this, Numb. xxiii. 1, 2. Sent to Balaam, to invite him to the feast. The king had left the princes to accompany him and attend upon him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the ⁱhigh places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

The high places of Baal, i. e. consecrated to the worship of Baal, i. e. of Baal-peor, who was their Baal or god, Numb. xxv. 2, 3, or of Chemosh. The utmost part of the people, i. e. all that people, even to the utmost and remotest of them, as appears by comparing this with Numb. xxiii. 13. He hoped that the sight of such a numerous host ready to break in upon his country would stir up his passion and further his charms.

CHAP. XXIII.

Balak and Balaam sacrifice: God meets him, and he blesses Israel, 1—10. Balak is troubled: they go to another place to curse them: they sacrifice again: Balaam consults God, who meets him, and he again blesses Israel, 11—21. They go to a third place, and sacrifice again, 27—30.

a ver. 20. AND Balaam said unto Balak, ^a Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven oxen and seven rams.

The altars were either, 1. To Baal, in whose high places this was done, and to whom alone Balak used to sacrifice. Or rather, 2. To the true God, otherwise he would not have mentioned it to God as an argument why he should grant his requests, as he doth, ver. 4. And though Balak was averse from God and his worship, yet he would be easily overruled by Balaam, who doubtless told him that it was in vain to make an address to any other than the God of Israel, who alone was able either to bless or curse them, as he pleased. And therefore when Balaam lost his design this way, he tried it another way with greater success, but still used the same method, in provoking their own God to destroy the Israelites, Numb. xxv. But though he direct his sacrifices to a right object, he chooseth a wrong place, and, to comply with Balak's desire, makes use of the high places of Baal for this end, and mingles his own superstitions with the worship of God, in erecting divers altars, according to the manner of heathens and idolaters, 2 Kings xviii. 22; Isa. xvii. 8; Jer. xi. 13; Hos. viii. 11; x. 1; xii. 11; whereas God appointed and holy men used but one altar, though many sacrifices were to be offered upon it, Gen. viii. 20; Exod. xvii. 15; xxiv. 4. Seven was the solemn and usual number in sacrifices, 1 Chron. xv. 26; 2 Chron. xxix. 21; Job xlii. 8.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken; b ver. 14; 20. and Balak and Balaam ^b offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

Balak by procuring them, and Balaam by offering them; though in ancient times kings were priests also, and so might perform a priestly work, as this was.

c ver. 15. 3 And Balaam said unto Balak, ^c Stand by thy burnt offering, and I will go: per-d ch. 24. 1. adventure the LORD will come ^d to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And ^e he went to an high place.

|| Or, he went solitary.
By thy burnt-offering; as in God's presence, as one that offers thyself as well as thy sacrifices to obtain his favour. I will go to some solitary and convenient place, where I may by my enchantments prevail with God to appear to me, and to answer thy and my desires in cursing this people. Whatsoever he sheweth me, i. e. reveals to me, either by word or sign. To an high place; or, into the plain, as that word properly signifies, for he was now in a high place, Numb. xxii. 41. But this is not material, it was doubtless some solitary place, where he might use some gestures and ceremonies which he would not have others see, and where he might more reasonably expect to meet with God; for both good and evil spirits most commonly appeared to persons in such places.

e ver. 16. 4 ^e And God met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

God met Balaam, not to comply with Balaam's charms, nor to gratify, but to oppose, his wicked desires, and to force him against his own inclination and interest to utter the following words. A bullock and a ram, which I pray thee accept, and give me leave to curse thy people, as their abundant wickedness deserves.

5 And the LORD ^f put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

He suggested what he should say, even those words, ver. 8—10.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab.

7 And he ^g took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, ^h Come, curse me Jacob, and come, ⁱ defy Israel.

He took up, to wit, into his mouth; he expressed or spoke. His parable, i. e. his oracular and prophetic speech; which he calls a parable, because of the weightiness of the matter, and the majesty and smartness of the expressions which is usual in parables. From Aram; from Aram, Naharain, or Mesopotamia, Deut. xxiii. 4. See Gen. x. 22. Aram lay towards the mountains of the east: the east was infamous for charmers or soothsayers, Isa. ii. 6. Jacob; the posterity of Jacob, i. e. Israel, as it here follows.

8 ^k How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

God hath not cursed, but blessed Israel, and therefore it is a vain and ridiculous attempt for me to curse them in spite of God.

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, ^l the people shall dwell alone, and ^m shall not be reckoned among the nations.

From the top of the rocks, upon which I now stand, I see the people, according to thy desire, chap. xxii. 41, but cannot improve that sight to the end for which thou didst design it, to wit, to curse them. This people are of a distinct kind from others, God's peculiar people, separated from all other nations, as in religion and laws, so also in Divine protection; and therefore my enchantments cannot have that power against them which they have against other persons and people. See Exod. xix. 5; Lev. xx. 24, 26.

10 ⁿ Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let ^o me die ^p the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

n Gen. 13. 16. & 22. 17.
o Heb. my soul, or my life.
p Ps. 116. 15.
The dust of Jacob, i. e. the numberless people of Jacob or Israel, who, according to God's promise, Gen. xiii. 16; xxviii. 14, are now become as the dust of the earth. Of the fourth part of Israel, i. e. of one of the camps of Israel; for they were divided into four camps, Numb. ii., which Balaam from this height could easily discover; much less can any man number all their host. Of the righteous, i. e. of this righteous and holy people, the Israelites, called Jeshurun, Deut. xxxii. 15, which word signifies upright or righteous. The sense is, they are not only happy above other nations in this life, as I have said, and therefore in vain should I curse them, but they have this peculiar privilege, that they are happy after death; their happiness begins where the happiness of other people ends; and therefore I heartily wish that my soul may have its portion with theirs when I die. But it was a vain wish: for as he would not live as God's people did, so he died by the sword, as others of God's enemies did, Numb. xxxi. 8; Josh. xiii. 22. My last end, i. e. my death, as the word is used. Or, my posterity, as this Hebrew word signifies, Psal. cix. 13; Dan. xi. 4; Amos iv. 2. And as the covenant and blessing of God given to Abraham did reach to his posterity, so this might not be unknown to Balaam, which might give him occasion for this wish. Or, my reward, as the word is taken, Prov. xxiii. 18; xxiv. 20. But the first sense seems the most true, because it agrees best with the usage of Scripture to repeat the same thing in other words, and this includes the third sense, to wit, the reward, which is here supposed to follow death; and for posterity, it doth not appear that he had any, or, if he had, that he was so very solicitous for them; or that he knew the tenor of God's covenant with Abraham and his posterity. Nay, he rather seems to have had some hope of ruining Abraham's posterity, which he attempted both here and afterwards.

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? ^{p ch. 22. 11, 17. & 24. 10.} I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, ^{q ch. 22. 38} Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

I speak not these words by my own choice, but by the constraint of a higher power, which I cannot resist.

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all: and curse me them from thence.

He thought the sight of the people necessary both to excite Balaam's passions, and to strengthen and direct his conjurations; but he would now have him see but a part of the people, and not all, because the sight of all of them might dismay and discourage him, and, as it did before, raise his fancy to an admiration of the multitude and of the felicity of the people, ver. 9, 10.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the ^{¶ Or, the hill.} field of Zophim, to the top of ^{r ver. 1, 2.} Pisgah, and built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

Zophim, a place so called from the spies and watches which were kept there. Pisgah, a high hill in the land of Moab, so called Deut. iii. 27; xxxiv. 1.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

To consult him, and to receive an answer from him, if peradventure those renewed sacrifices will melt him into some compliance with our desires.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and ^{s ver. 5. ch. 22. 35.} put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

See above on ver. 4, and Numb. xxii. 35.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 And he took up his parable, and ^{t Judg. 3. 20.} said, Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

Rise up: this word implies, either, 1. The reverence wherewith he should hear and receive God's message, as Eglon did, Judg. iii. 20, which might have been probable, if Balak had been now sitting, as Ehud there was; but he was standing, ver. 15: or rather, 2. The diligent attention required; Rouse up thyself, and carefully mind what I say.

19 ^{u 1 Sam. 15. 29. Mat. 3. 6. Rom. 11. 29. James 1. 17. Tit. 1. 2.} God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

That he should lie, i. e. break his faith and promises made to his people for their preservation and benediction. That he should repent, i. e. change his counsels or purposes; which men do, either because they are not able to execute them, or because they are better informed and their minds changed by some unexpected occurrence, or by their lusts and passions, none of which have place in God. And therefore I plainly see that all our endeavours and repeated sacrifices are to no purpose, and can make no impression in God, nor induce him to curse those whom he hath purposed, and solemnly and frequently promised, to bless. Shall he not do it? is he like a man that oft speaks and promises what he either never intends, or cannot or will not perform?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and ^{x Gen. 12. 2. & 22. 17. Num. 22. 12.} he hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it.

Or, I have received a blessing, to wit, a sentence of blessing, which God hath put into my mind and mouth, and which I cannot forbear to utter. Heb. I have received to bless. The infinitive put for the noun, as is frequent.

21 ^{y Rom. 4. 7.} He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: ^{z Ex. 13. 21. & 29. 45, 46. & 33. 14. & Ps. 89. 15.} the LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king is among them.

He, i. e. God, understood ver. 20, and expressed ver. 19, hath not or doth not behold or see iniquity or perverseness, i. e. any sin, in Jacob or Israel; which cannot be meant of a simple seeing or knowing of him, for so God did see and observe, yea, and chastise their sins, as is manifest, Exod. xxxii. 9; Deut. ix. 13; but of such a sight of their sins as should provoke God utterly to forsake and curse and destroy them, which was Balak's desire, and Balaam's hope and design. For as Balaam knew that none but Israel's God could curse or destroy Israel, so he knew that nothing but their sin could move him so to do; and therefore he took a right, though wicked, course afterwards to tempt them to sin, and thereby to expose them to ruin, Numb. xxv. And Balaam had now hoped that God was incensed against Israel for their sins, and therefore would be prevailed with to give them up to the curse and spoil. But, saith he, I was mistaken, I see God hath a singular favour to this people, and though he sees and punisheth sin in other persons and people with utter destruction, as he hath now done in Sihon and Og and the Amorites, yet he will not do so with Israel; he winks at their sins, forgets and forgives them, and will not punish them as their iniquities deserve. In this sense God is said not to see sins, as elsewhere he is said to forget them, Isa. xliii. 25; Jer. xxxi. 34, and to cover them, Psal. xxxiii. 1, which keeps them out of sight, and so out of mind; and to blot them out, Psal. li. 1, 9, and to cast them behind his back, Isa. xxxviii. 17, or into the depth of the sea, Micah vii. 19, in which cases they cannot be seen nor read. And men are oft said not to know or see those sins in their children or others, which they do not take notice of so as to punish them. And this sense best agrees with the context; God hath decreed and promised to bless this people, and he hath blessed them, and I cannot reverse it, ver. 20, and he will not reverse it, though provoked to do so by their sins, which he will take no notice of. Others thus, He hath not beheld, as hitherto he hath not, so for the future he will not behold, i. e. so as to approve it, as that word is oft used, as Gen. vii. 1; Isa. lxvi. 2; Hab. i. 13, or so as to suffer it, injury against Jacob, &c. For aven, here rendered iniquity, is oft used in that sense, as Job v. 6, 7; Prov. xii. 21; xxii. 8. And the other word, amal, rendered perverseness, oft notes vexation and trouble, as Job v. 6, 7; Psal. xxv. 17; xxxvi. 4; and the particle beth, rendered in, is oft used for against, as Exod. xiv. 25; xx. 16; Numb. xii. 1. So the sense is, God will not see them wronged or ruined by any of their adversaries, whereof the following words may be a good reason, for God is with him, &c. The Lord his God is with him, i. e. he hath a favour for this people, and will defend and save them. So the phrase of God's being with a person or people signifies, as Judg. vi. 13; Psal. xlvi. 7; Isa. viii. 10. The shout of a king is among them, i. e. such joyful and triumphant shouts as those wherewith a people congratulate the approach and presence of their king when he appears among them upon some solemn occasion, or when he returns from battle with victory and spoils. The expression implies God's being their King and Ruler, and their abundant security and just confidence in him as such. And here is an allusion to the silver trumpets which were made by God's command, and used upon great solemnities, in which God their King was present in a special manner, Numb. x. 9; Josh. vi. 16, 20; 1 Sam. iv. 5; 2 Chron. xiii. 12.

God brought them out of Egypt, to wit, by a strong hand, and in spite of all their enemies, and therefore it is in vain to seek or hope to overcome them. He; either, 1. God, last mentioned. But so the comparison is mean and unbecoming. Or rather, 2. Israel, whom God brought out of Egypt; such change of numbers being very common in the Hebrew language. The sense is, Israel is not now what he was in Egypt, a poor, weak, dispirited, unarmed people, but high, and strong, and invincible. The great strength and fierceness of a unicorn is celebrated in Scripture, Numb. xxiv. 8; Deut. xxxiii. 17; Job xxxix. 9; Psal. xxii. 21; xcii. 10. But whether it be a unicorn, or a rhinoceros, or a strong and fierce kind of wild goat, which is here called reem, it is not needful here to determine.

According to this time; not only in succeeding times and ages, of which he speaks, chap. xxiv. 17, &c., but even now, in this time and age, and so forward. What hath God wrought! i. e. how wonderful and glorious are those works which God is now about to do for Israel, by drying up Jordan, by subduing the Canaanites, &c.! These things will be matter of discourse and admiration to all ages.

e Gen. 49. 9. 24 Behold, the people shall rise up "as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: "he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

Peor, a high place called Beth-peor, Deut. iii. 29, i. e. the house or temple of Peor, because there they worshipped Baal-peor.

k ver. 1. 29 And Balaam said unto Balak, "Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

CHAP. XXIV.

Dalaam lays aside his sorceries, and the Spirit of God comes upon him; his eyes are open; hears the words of God, and sees the vision of the Almighty, 1—4; prophecies of Israel's prosperity, 5—9. Balak is angry; commands him to flee; his answer, 10—14. He prophecies of the Messias the King, and of the destruction of the nations, 15—24. He returns to his place; and Balak goes his way, 25.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at "other times, †to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

To seek for enchantments, i. e. to use enchantments, which he is said to have done, either because when he consulted and sacrificed to God, he did also use enchantments and consult with the devil, that if one would not, the other might help him; or because he consulted God in a magical and superstitious way, by using such postures or instruments or forms of words as enchanters used. To ward the wilderness, where Israel lay encamped, either with intent to curse Israel without God's leave; or rather, expecting what God of his own accord would suggest to him concerning this matter.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel "abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and "the spirit of God came upon him.

According to their tribes; in the order appointed, Numb. ii. Came upon him, i. e. inspired him to speak the following words, and so constrained him again to bless those whom he desired to curse.

3 "And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man †whose eyes are open hath said:

The eyes, either, 1. Of his body, as in the following verse; or, 2. Of his mind, which God had opened in a peculiar and prophetic manner, whence prophets are called seers, 1 Sam. ix. 9. He implies that before he was blind and stupid, having eyes, but not seeing nor understanding. Some render the words having his eyes shut, as the Hebrew verb satham signifies, the letters schin and samech being frequently exchanged; and so the meaning is, that he received this revelation either in a dream, when men's eyes are simply shut; or in an ecstasy or trance, when men's eyes, though open, are in a manner shut, to wit, as to the use and exercise of them.

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, "falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

The vision; so called either strictly and properly, because he was awake when this was revealed to him; or largely and improperly, for any extraordinary discovery of God's mind to him, whether sleeping or waking. A trance, or ecstasy, fainting and falling upon the ground, as the prophets used to do. See 1 Sam. xix. 24; Ezck. i. 28; iii. 23; xliiii. 3; Dan. viii. 17, 18; x. 15; Rev. i. 17. Others, falling suddenly into a sleep, as the prophets sometimes did, as Gen. xv. 12; Dan. viii. 18.

5 How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river's side, "as the trees of lign aloes "which the LORD hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters.

Valleys oftentimes from a small beginning are spread forth far and wide. Others, as the brooks, or rivers, as the word signifies, which stretch out and disperse their waters into several channels, and sometimes farther. Are they spread forth, i. e. the Israelites last mentioned. As gardens by the river's side; pleasant and fruitful, and secured by a fence. Trees of lign-aloes; an Arabian and Indian tree, of a sweet smell, yielding good shade and shelter both to man and beast; such is Israel, famous among the nations, and not only safe themselves, but yielding shelter to all that join themselves to them. Which the Lord hath planted; which are the best of the kind; such as not man, but God, might seem to have planted, as the best of all sorts are ascribed to God, as the trees, hills, cities, of God, &c. for growth, and height, and strength, and durability, whence Solomon's temple was built of this wood, 1 Kings vi. 9, 10. Beside the waters, where trees thrive best.

7 He shall pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be ^h in many waters, and his king shall be higher than Agag, and his ^k kingdom shall be exalted.

He, i. e. God, will abundantly water the valleys, gardens, and trees, which represent the Israelites, ver. 6, i. e. he will wonderfully bless his people, not only with outward blessings, of which a chief one in those parts was plenty of water, but also with higher gifts and graces, with his word and Spirit, which are often signified by waters, John iii. 5; iv. 10; vii. 38, 39, and at last with eternal life, the contemplation whereof made Balaam desire to die the death of the righteous. Others thus, God shall make his posterity numerous; for the procreation of children is oft signified by waters, fountains, cisterns, &c., as Psal. lxxviii. 26; Prov. v. 15, 18; ix. 17; Isa. xlvi. 1. But there is no necessity of flying to metaphors here, and therefore the other being the literal and proper sense, is by the laws of good interpretation to be preferred before it. In many waters: this also may be literally understood of their seed, which shall be sown in waterish ground, and therefore bring forth a better increase, Isa. xxxii. 20. Others thus, His seed shall be so numerous, that it shall branch forth into many people, the several tribes being reckoned and sometimes called several people. Or, his seed shall rule over many people or nations, which are sometimes signified by many waters, as Psal. cxlv. 7; Isa. lvii. 20; Jer. xlvii. 2; Rev. xvii. 15. But here also the literal sense seems best. His king, i. e. the king of Israel; either God, who was in a peculiar manner their King or Ruler, Numb. xxxiii. 21; Judg. vi. 13; 1 Sam. viii. 7; Isa. xxxiii. 22; or their chief governor or governors, whether king or others; for Moses is called their king, Deut. xxxiii. 5, and the judges were in a manner kings. Than Agag, i. e. than the king of the Amalekites, which king and people were famous and potent in that age, ver. 20, as may be guessed by their bold attempt upon so numerous a people as Israel was. And it is probably thought by the Jewish and other interpreters, that Agag was the common name of the Amalekites, as Abimelech was of the Philistines, and Pharaoh of the Egyptians, and Cæsar of the Romans. But though this king only be instanced in, yet other kings, to wit, such as did or should border upon the Israelites, are doubtless to be understood, above whom the kings and people of Israel sometimes were advanced, and oftener should have been, if they had not been their own hinderance by their sins. Some make this a prophecy of Saul's conquering Agag and his people, 1 Sam. xv. 7, 8. But the words seem to be more general, and to signify a greater honour and advantage to Israel than that was.

8 God brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he shall ^m eat up the nations his enemies, and shall ⁿ break their bones, and ^o pierce them through with his arrows.

Shall break their bones, or, unbone, or, take out, i. e. shall eat the flesh to the very bones, and then break them also.

9 He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion: who shall stir him up? ^q Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

Having conquered his enemies the Canaanites, and their land, he shall quietly and securely rest and settle himself there. Stir him up, i. e. awake or provoke him.

10 And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and he ^r smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, ^s I called thee to curse mine enemies, and behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

He smote his hands together; a sign of great anger, Ezek. xxi. 17; xxii. 13.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place: ^t I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath kept thee back from honour.

Flee thou to thy place, whence I sent for thee, Numb. xxii. 5. The Lord, whose commands thou hast preferred before my desires and interest; and therefore seek thy recompence from him, and not from me.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying, 13 ^u If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my people: come therefore, and ^v I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people ^w in the latter days.

Advertise thee, or, inform thee, to wit, concerning future things, as it here follows, for this word seems inseparably joined with the following. Others, give thee counsel, and tell thee what this people, &c. So it is a short and defective speech, such as we have Exod. iv. 5; xiii. 8. And by counsel they understand that which is related Numb. xxv. 1, 2; which was done by Balaam's counsel, Numb. xxxi. 16; Rev. ii. 14. But the former sense is more enforced and agreeable to the following words as they lie. In the latter days: not in thy time, therefore thou hast no reason to fear, but in succeeding ages, as 2 Sam. viii. 2, &c.

15 ^x And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said:

16 He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

17 ^y I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come ^a a Star out of Jacob, and ^b a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall ^c smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.

I shall see, or, I have seen, or do see, for the future is oft put for other times or tenses: he speaks of a prophetic vision, like that of Abraham's, who saw Christ's day, John viii. 56. Him, to wit, the Star and Sceptre, as it here follows, i. e. a great and eminent prince, which was to come out of Israel's loins; either, 1. David, who first did the things here spoken of, 2 Sam. viii. 2; Psal. lx. 8; cviii. 9, and some of the kings of Judah and Israel after him, for it is not necessarily understood of one particular person; or, 2. The Messiah, as both Jewish and Christian interpreters expound it, who most eminently and fully performed what is here said, in destroying the enemies of Israel, or of God's church, who are here described under the names of the nearest and fiercest enemies of Israel; which he doth partly by himself, by his word and Spirit, and spiritual plagues; and partly by his ministers, those princes whom he makes nursing fathers to his church, and scourges to his enemies. And to him alone agrees the foregoing verb properly, I shall see him, to wit, in my own person, or with the eyes of my own body, as every eye shall see him, Rev. i. 7, when he comes to judgment. Nor can it seem strange that Balaam should speak of such high and remote things, seeing he foresaw and foretold these things by the revelation of the Spirit of God, by which also he foresaw the great felicity of good men, and the miserable state of bad men, after death and judgment, Numb. xxiii. 10. But not now; not yet, but after many ages. A Star; a title oft given to princes and eminent and illustrious persons, and particularly to the Messiah, Rev. ii. 28; xxii. 16. A Sceptre, i. e. a sceptre-bearer, a king or ruler, even that sceptre mentioned Gen. xlix. 10. The corners; either, 1. Metaphorically, to wit, princes and rulers, who are sometimes compared to corners, as Zech. x. 4, and Christ himself is called a corner-stone, because he unites and supports the building. But I prefer the former sense. Sheih seems to be the name of some then eminent, though now unknown, place or prince in Moab, where there were many princes, as appears from Numb. xxiii. 6; Amos ii. 3; there being innumerable instances of such places or persons sometimes famous, but now utterly lost as to all monuments and remembrances of them.

e Gen. 49. 10. 19 ^eOut of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

Out of Jacob; out of Jacob's loins. He that shall have dominion; David, and especially Christ. Of the city, or, from or out of this city, i. e. the cities, the singular number for the plural, which hath been oft noted before. The sense is, He shall not only subdue those Moabites and Edomites which meet him in the field, but he shall pursue them even to their strongest holds and cities, and shall pull them out thence. Possibly he may note some eminent city in which they confided most, their metropolis or royal city, as may be guessed from Psal. lx. 9.

|| Or, the first of the nations that warred against Israel, Ex. 17. 8. || Or, shall be even to destruction. Ex. 17. 14. 1 Sam. 15. 3, 8. 20 ¶ And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was ^{||} the first of the nations; but his latter end ^{||} shall be that he perish for ever.

He looked from the top of Pisgah, which was exceeding high, and gave him the prospect of parts of all these kingdoms. The first, Heb. the first-fruits; so called either, 1. Because they were the first of all the neighbouring nations which were embodied together in one government. Or, 2. Because they were the most powerful and eminent of them, as is implied above, ver. 7, the best things in each kind being oft signified by the name of first-fruits. Or, 3. Because he was the first who fought against Israel, and was vanquished by them, in that famous battle Exod. xvii., which victory was an earnest and first-fruits of that large harvest of victories which the Israelites should in due time get over all their enemies, and, among others, over Amalek himself, 1 Sam. xv. 3. That he perish for ever: he began with God and with Israel. but God will end with him; and the firm purpose and will of God is, that he shall be utterly destroyed, Exod. xvii. 14; so that Saul lost his kingdom for not executing this decree and God's command pursuant thereunto, 1 Sam. xv.

21 And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his parable, and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock.

The Kenite; the posterity or kindred of Jethro; not that part of them which dwelt among the Israelites, to whom the following words do not agree, but those of them who were mingled with the Amalekites and Midianites. See Exod. iii. 1; Judg. i. 16; iv. 11; 1 Sam. xv. 6. Thy nest, i. e. thy dwelling-place, so called, either because it was in a high place, as nests commonly are; or from their security and confidence of continuing long and safe in it; see Job xxix. 18; or in allusion to their name, for ken in Hebrew signifies a nest.

22 Nevertheless † the Kenite shall be † Heb. Kain. Gen. 15. 19. wasted, † until Asshur shall carry thee † Or, how long shall it be away captive. ^{ere Asshur carry thee away captive?}

Kenite, Heb. Kain, i. e. the Kenite; so called, either by a transposition of letters, which is very usual in the Hebrew tongue; or from the name of some eminent place where they lived, or person from whom they were descended, though now the memory of them be utterly lost, as it hath fared with innumerable other places and persons famous in their generations mentioned in ancient heathen writers. Shall be wasted, i. e. shall be by degrees diminished and wasted by the incursions of divers enemies, till at last the Assyrian comes to complete the work, and carries them into captivity. For the Kenites lived partly among the ten tribes, Josh. xix. 33, compared with Judg. iv. 11, and partly with the two tribes, Judg. i. 16; iv. 16, 17, and were carried captive with them, part by Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, 2 Kings xvii. 6, and part by Nebuchadnezzar, who also is called an Assyrian, Ezra vi. 22; Isa. lii. 4. The words may be rendered thus, shall be wasted. How long? to wit, shall they be thus wasted? (these particles being oft used abruptly and pathetically in the same manner, Psal. vi. 3; xc. 13; Isa. vi. 11;) till Asshur comes, Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas, who shall live when God doeth this!

How calamitous and miserable will the state of the world be, when the Assyrian, and after him the Chaldean, shall overrun and overturn all these parts of the world! who will be able to live and keep his heart from fainting under such grievous pressures? how few will then escape the destroying sword!

24 And ships shall come from the coast of ^fChittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict ^gEber, and he also shall perish ^g for ever. ^{f Gen. 10. 4. Dan. 11. 30. g Gen. 10. 21, 25.}

Chittim; a place or people so called from Chittim the son of Javan, Gen. x. 4, whose posterity were very numerous, and were first seated in the Lesser Asia, and from thence sent forth colonies into the islands of the Ægean Sea, and into Cyprus, and afterwards into Macedonia, and other parts of Greece, and then into Italy. Whence it comes to pass that by this name is understood sometimes Macedonia, as appears from 1 Mac. i. 1; viii. 5; and sometimes Italy, as is manifest from Dan. xi. 29, 30; and sometimes both, as in this place; for he speaks here of the scourge that God hath appointed for the Assyrian after he had done God's work in punishing of his people and the bordering nations. Now although the Assyrian and Chaldean empire was subdued by the Medes and Persians, yet the chief afflictions and calamities of that people came from two hands, both beyond the sea, and brought to them by ships, as is here expressed; first from the Grecians under Alexander and his successors, by whom that people were grievously oppressed and wasted; then from the Romans, who subdued all the Grecian empire, one great part whereof were the Assyrians largely so called, and after many bloody wars made them a colony. Eber, i. e. the posterity of Eber, Gen. x. 24, the Hebrews, who were the chief and flower of Eber's children, and therefore are here designed by that general name, such general expressions being oft used concerning one particular and the most eminent of its kind. And it pleased God to express it thus darkly here, because though he would foretell this for the comfort and instruction of his people in after-ages, yet he would not have Balak, nor Balaam neither, understand or utter any thing which might seem to thwart that happy estate of Israel, which Balaam clearly saw and openly applauded. He also; not the Hebrews, as some understand, for his affliction was now mentioned before, and other scriptures tell us they shall have a better end, and that all Israel shall be saved, and therefore not perish for ever; but the afflictor or scourge of Asshur and Eber, to wit, the Grecian and Roman empire.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and ^hreturned to his place: and Balak also ^h went his way. ^{h See ch. 31.}

To his place, i. e. to Mesopotamia. Object. He went only to Midian, where he was slain, Numb. xxxi. 8. Ans. 1. He is said to return home, because he intended and began to do so, though he was diverted by the Midianites; for men in Scripture are oft said to do what they design or attempt to do, as Exod. viii. 18; Numb. xiv. 40. Ans. 2. He did go home first, though afterwards he returned to the Midianites, either because they sent for him, or to recover his lost credit, and to do that by policy which he could not do by charms, to which purpose he gave them that devilish counsel which was put in practice, Numb. xxv., and that by his advice, Numb. xxxi. 16; Rev. ii. 14.

The Israelites' whoredom and idolatry: God commands the guilty to be put to death, 1—5. A plague: Phinehas's zeal; for which God promises him the priesthood, 6—15. God commands the Midianites to be slain for their treachery in drawing the people to sin, 16—18.

AND Israel abode in ^aShittim, and ^bthe people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.

Shittim; a place called more largely Abel-shittim, Numb. xxxiii. 49, it being usual with the Hebrews to abbreviate long proper names, as Hermon is put for Baal-hermon, Judg. iii. 3, Tholad for El-tholad, Josh. xix. 4, Nimrim, Isa. xv. 6, for Beth-nimrim, Numb. xxxii. 36. And this was their last station, from whence they passed immediately into Canaan. So this is here noted as a great aggravation of their sin, that they committed it when God was going to put them into the possession of their long-expected and much-desired land. The people; not all, but many of them, as appears from Deut. iv. 3, 4; 1 Cor. x. 8. To commit whoredom, both corporally and spiritually, either because they prostituted themselves to them upon condition of worshipping their god; or because their filthy god was worshipped by such filthy acts, as Priapus and Venus were. Of Moab, and of Midian too, as is evident from ver. 6, 17, 18; Numb. xxxi. 16; for both these people being confederated in this wicked design, the one is put for the other; and the daughters of Moab may be named, either because they began the transgression, or because they were the chief persons, possibly, the relations or courtiers of Balak king of Moab.

2 And ^cthey called the people unto ^dthe sacrifices of their gods: and the people did eat, and ^ebowed down to their gods.

They called the people: this may be noted, either, 1. As the consequent of their whoredom, an invitation to further society in their sacred feasts; or rather, 2. As the cause or occasion of their whoredom, the Hebrew vau here signifying for, as it oft doth. The Moabites being now neighbours to the Israelites, and finding themselves unable to effect their design against Israel by war and witchcraft, they now fell another way to work, by contracting familiarity with them; and perceiving their evil and lustful inclinations, they, i. e. their daughters, last mentioned, invited them to their feasts. Unto the sacrifices, i. e. unto the feasts which were made of their parts of their sacrifices, after the manner of the Jews and Gentiles too, the participation whereof was reckoned a participation in the worship of that god to whom the sacrifices were offered, 1 Cor. x. 18, and therefore was forbidden to the Israelites upon such feasts and sacrifices belonged to a false god, Exod. xxxiv. 15. Yet this was a less and more modest kind of idolatry, and therefore is fitly used to usher in what was more gross and impious. Of their gods, i. e. of their god, Baal-peor, the plural elohim being here used, as commonly it is, for one god. Bowed down; which properly notes the outward act of worship, which here consisting in or being accompanied with filthy actions, may either signify or connote them. To their gods; before their gods, or, to the honour and worship of their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor:

and 'the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

Joined himself; the word implies a forsaking of God, to whom they were and should have been joined, and a turning to, embracing of, strict conjunction with, and fervent affection after, this false god. Compare Hos. ix. 10; 2 Cor. vi. 14. Baal-peor, called Baal, by the name common to many false gods, and especially to those that represented any of the heavenly bodies; and Peor, either from the hill Peor, where he was worshipped, Numb. xxiii. 28, or rather from a verb signifying to open and uncover, either because of the obscene posture in which possibly the idol was set, as Priapus was, or because of the filthiness which was exercised in his worship. Was kindled, i. e. discovered itself in a dreadful plague, Psal. cvi. 29.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^gTake all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, ^hthat the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

The sense is, either, 1. Take, to wit, to thyself and thy assistance, all the heads, i. e. the judges, as they are called ver. 5, or rulers, of the people; and in their presence, and by their help, hang them, i. e. the people, now mentioned, to wit, such of them as were guilty, as was said ver. 1. And this sense seems to be favoured by the next verse, where the execution of this command is mentioned, Moses said unto the judges of Israel, whom he had taken to himself and called together, Slay ye every one his man, i. e. each of you execute this command of God, and hang up the delinquents under your several jurisdictions. Or, 2. Take, i. e. apprehend, all the heads, i. e. the chief, of the people, such as were chief, either in this transgression, or rather in place and power, who are singled out to this exemplary punishment either for their neglect in not preventing, restraining, or punishing the offenders according to their power and duty, or for their concurrence with others in this wickedness, which was more odious and mischievous in them than in others. And then this must be necessarily limited to such heads as were guilty, which is evident from the nature of the thing, and from the words of the verse. And so these heads of the people differ, as in name and title, so in place and dignity, from the judges of the people, ver. 5, which may seem to note the superior magistrates, even the seventy elders, which, being persons of great worth and piety, chosen by God, and endowed with his Spirit, most probably kept themselves from this contagion, and therefore were fitter to punish others; and the heads of the people seem to be the inferior magistrates, the rulers of tens or hundreds, or the like, who as they did many of them partake with the people in other rebellions, so probably were involved in this guilt. Now these are to be hanged up as other malefactors and condemned persons were, Deut. xxi. 23; 2 Sam. xxi. 6. Before the Lord; to the vindication of God's honour and justice. Against the sun, i. e. publicly, as their sin was public and scandalous; and speedily, before the sun go down. But withal this phrase may signify, that these also must be taken down about sun-setting, as other malefactors were, Deut. xxi. 23.

5 And Moses said unto the judges of Israel, ⁱSlay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

Every one his men, i. e. those under his charge; for as these seventy were chosen to assist Moses in the government, so doubtless the care and management of the people was distributed among them by just and equal proportions.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, ^jwho were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

This was done, either, 1. Before God's command to Moses, and by him to the judges, ver. 4, 5, such transpositions and disorders being not unusual in sacred story. Or rather, 2. In the order it is related, to wit, when Moses had given the charge to the judges, and, as it may seem, before the execution of it, otherwise it is probable he would not have been so bold and foolish to have run upon present and certain ruin, when the examples were fresh and frequent before his eyes. Unto his brethren, i. e. into the camp of the Israelites, or to his friends and relations in his tent, whither he carried her, ver. 8, for his or their fleshly satisfaction. In the sight of Moses; an argument of intolerable impudence and contempt of God and of Moses. All the congregation, i. e. the rulers of the congregation with divers of the people. Weeping; bewailing the abominable wickedness of the people, and the dreadful judgments of God, and imploring God's mercy and favour.

7 And ^m when Phinehas, ^a the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So ^o the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

Into the tent, or brothel house; for since they gave way to such low practices, no doubt they singled out convenient places for their wickedness. Thrust both of them through; which is no warrant for private persons to take upon them the execution of justice upon any, though the greatest malefactors, because Phinehas was himself a man in great authority and power, and did this after the command given by Moses to the rulers to slay these transgressors, and in the very sight, and no doubt by the consent of Moses himself, and also by the special instinct and direction of God's Spirit. Through her belly, or in her brothel house, for the word is the same before used, and translated tent, and it may be called hers, because she chose or used that place for her wicked purposes, as the rest doubtless did other places of like nature. The plague; either the pestilence, or some other sudden and grievous mortality.

9 And ^p those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

Object. They were but 23,000, 1 Cor. x. 8. Answer. The odd thousand here added were slain by the judges according to the order of Moses, the rest by the immediate hand of God, but both sorts died of the plague, the word being used, as oft it is, for the sword, or hand, or stroke of God.

10 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

11 ^q Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous [†] for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in ^r my jealousy.

He was zealous, fervent and resolute and valiant, for my sake, for my satisfaction and vindication.

12 Wherefore say, ^s Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

i. e. The covenant of an everlasting priesthood, as it is expounded, ver. 13, which is called a covenant of peace, partly with respect to the happy effect of this heroic action of his, whereby he made peace between God and his people; and partly with regard to the principal end and use of the priestly office, which was constantly to do that which Phinehas now did, even to mediate between God and men, to obtain and preserve his own and Israel's peace and reconciliation with God, by offering up sacrifices, and incense, and prayers to God on their behalf, Numb. xvi. 47, 48, as also by turning them away from iniquity, which is the only peace-breaker, and by teaching and pressing the observation of that law, which is the only bond of their peace, Mal. ii. 5—7.

13 And he shall have it, and ^t his seed after him, even the covenant of ^u an everlasting priesthood; because he was ^v zealous for his God, and ^w made an atonement for the children of Israel.

And his seed after him. Quest. What advantage had he by this promise, seeing the thing here promised was due to him by birth? Answer. 1. The same blessing may be oftentimes promised, as the kingdom was to David; and the renewing of this promise might seem convenient here, to signify that bloodshed was so far from polluting him, and thereby casting him out of the priesthood, that it was a mean to confirm him in it. 2. This promise secured him and his against divers contingences, which otherwise might have befallen him or them; as that he should live longer than his father, else he could not have been the high priest; that he should be preserved from those blemishes which might have rendered him incapable of the priesthood, which were many; that he should have a seed, and they such as were fit for that office. An everlasting priesthood, i. e. to continue as long as the law and commonwealth of the Jews did. Quest. How was this verified, seeing the priesthood went from Eleazar's to Ithamar's line in Eli and three or four of his successors? Answer. 1. This promise, as others of the like nature, was conditional, and therefore might be made void, and of none effect, by the miscarriages of Phinehas's sons, as it seems it was; and thereupon a like promise was made to Eli of the line of Ithamar, that he and his should walk before the Lord, to wit, in the office of high priest, for ever, which also for his and their sins was made void, 1 Sam. ii. 30. Answer. 2. That was but a short interruption, and not considerable in so long a succession, for the priesthood returned to Phinehas's line in the time of Solomon, 1 Kings ii. 26, 27, 35; 1 Chron. xxiv. 3; and continued in that line till the captivity of Babylon, as is evident, and afterward too, 1 Chron. vi. 4; Ezra vii. 1, 5, even until Christ's time, for any thing which appears to the contrary.

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of a [†] chief house among the Simeonites.

A prince: this is added as a proof of Phinehas's zeal, that he durst venture upon so great a person, who was likely to have many avengers of his blood. Of a chief house, Heb. of the house of his father. Every tribe was divided into great households, called the houses of their fathers, Numb. i. 2, and he was the prince or chief of one of these, though not of the whole tribe. Among the Simeonites; of the tribe of Simeon, which seems to have been too much influenced by his and other such examples, so that for 59,300, which were numbered, Numb. i. 22, 23, there were now only 22,200, Numb. xxvi. 14.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of ^x Zur; he was head over a ^z people, and of a chief house in Midian.

Zur; one of the kings or princes or Midian, Numb. xxxi. 8; Josh. xiii. 21. Of a chief house, or, and over her father's house.

16 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

17 ^a Vex the Midianites, and smite ^b them:

And why not the Moabites, who were as guilty, ver. 1? Answer. 1. Because God will reserve to himself a liberty of punishing or sparing, according to his own good pleasure. 2. God had a kindness for the Moabites for Lot's sake, Deut. ii. 9. 3. God punished the Moabites in another manner, partly, by his own immediate hand, whereby it is probable he cut off those Moabitish women that were guilty of this fact; partly, by a particular and dreadful kind of execommunication, Deut. xxiii. 3; and partly, by impunity, which in its consequences is commonly worse and more pernicious than any or all temporal punishments, which none that believes the Bible can deny. 4. It is probable the Midianites were most guilty, as in persuading Balak to send for Balaam, as may be gathered from Numb. xxii. 4, 7; so in the reception of Balaam after Balak had dismissed him, Numb. xxxi. 8, and in further consultation with him, and in contriving the means for the executing of this wicked plot. Smite them, i. e. kill them; in which words, as there is a command to war against them, so there is a promise of success.

For under pretence of kindred, and friendship, and leagues, yea, and marriages, which they offered to them, instead of that war which the Israelites expected from them, they sought only an opportunity to insinuate themselves into their familiarity, and execute their hellish plot of bringing that curse upon the Israelites, which they had in vain attempted to bring another way. In the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi; by drawing you both to spiritual and corporal whoredom. Their sister, in a large sense, to wit, their countrywoman.

Israel numbered, such as were fit for war, of every tribe; Levi excepted: their number, 1—51. The land to be distributed according to their number, 52—56. The Levites numbered by themselves, because they had no inheritance, 57—62. All that were numbered by Moses and Aaron at Sinai, save only Caleb and Joshua, died in the wilderness, 63—65.

AND it came to pass after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,

After the plague, last mentioned, chap. xxv. 8, 9. Eleazar, his father being dead, was high priest.

They were numbered twice before, Exod. xxx. 11, 12, and Numb. i. 1, 2. Now they are numbered a third time, partly to demonstrate the faithfulness of God, both in cutting all those off whom he had threatened to cut off, Numb. xiv. 29, and in a stupendous increase and multiplication of the people according to his promise, notwithstanding all their sins, and the sweeping judgments inflicted upon them; and partly to prepare the way for the equal division of the land which they were now going to possess.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them ^cin the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

In the plains of Moab: see Numb. xxii. 1; xxxiii. 48.

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD ^dcommanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.

Take the sum of the people: these words are easily supplied and necessarily to be understood from ver. 2.

5 ¶ ^eReuben, the eldest son of Israel: the children of Reuben; Hanoth, of whom cometh the family of the Hanothites: of Pallu, the family of the Palluites:

6 Of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Carmi, the family of the Carmites.

7 These are the families of the Reubenites:

and they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty.

The families, i. e. the chief houses, which were subdivided into divers lesser families. Forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty; whereas in their last numbering they were 46,500, Numb. i. 21; for Korah's conspiracy, as well as other provocations of theirs, had cut off many of them.

8 And the sons of Pallu; Eliab.

Sons for son, of which change of the number see Gen. xxi. 7; xlvii. 7.

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram, which were famous ^fin the congregation, who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

10 *And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: ^gand they became a sign.

Swallowed them up together with Korah: according to this translation Korah was not consumed by fire with his two hundred and fifty men, Numb. xvi., but swallowed up by the earth. But others rather think he was devoured by the fire, of which see on Numb. xvi. 32, 35, and render these words, and the things of Korah, or belonging to Korah, to wit, his tent, and goods, and family, children excepted, as here follows; which interpretation receives strength by comparing this place with Numb. xvi. 32, And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them (to wit, Dathan and Abiram, as is manifest from ver. 24, 25, 27) up, and their houses, and all the men that appertained unto Korah; which variation of the phrase plainly shows that Korah himself was not swallowed up with them, but only his men and his tabernacle, which is mentioned there together with the tabernacles of Dathan and Abiram, ver. 24, 27, but his person is not there mentioned with their persons. Nor is it unusual both in sacred and profane authors, by the name of a man who is the head and master, to understand only his house and family, though himself be not included. But this difficulty may be cleared another way. The Hebrew particle eth may be here the note of a nominative case, as it is 2 Kings vi. 5; Neh. ix. 19; Jer. xxxviii. 16; Ezek. xxxix. 14; xliii. 7, and there may be a defect of a verb, which is most frequent; and so the place may be rendered thus, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, to wit, Dathan and Abiram, ver. 9, and Korah, or, and as for Korah, he died (which verb is easily understood out of the following noun, of which ellipsis there are many instances in Scripture, some whereof have been given before, and more will follow in their places) in the death of that company, or when that company died, what time the fire devoured the two hundred and fifty men. And so this place, and Numb. xvi. 35, explain one another; and whereas there is mention only of two hundred and fifty men consumed by that fire, Korah is here added to the number. They became a sign, i. e. God made them a monument or example, to warn others not to rebel against God nor against magistracy, nor to usurp the priestly office.

11 Notwithstanding ⁱthe children of Korah died not.

God being pleased to spare them, either because they disowned their father's fact, and thereupon separated themselves both from his tent and company, or because Moses interceded for them, or because God would glorify his own free mercy in sparing some, while he punished others, according to his declaration in a like case, Exod. xxxiii. 19. Hence the sons of Korah are mentioned 1 Chron. vi. 22, 37, and oft in the book of Psalms.

14 These are the families of the Simeonites, twenty and two thousand and two hundred.

Whereas there were 35,400 in Numb. i. 23. It is thought the example of Zimri, one of their princes, Numb. xxv., and some others among them, did infect the generality of the tribe, and so caused this great diminution in their numbers.

15 ¶ The children of Gad after their families: of ⁿZephon, the family of the Zephonites: of Haggi, the family of the Haggites: of Shuni, the family of the Shunites:

Gad is placed next, because he was joined with Reuben and Simeon in the same camp and quarters, Numb. ii. 10, 14. Zephon, called Ziphion, Gen. xvi. 16.

Arod, called Arodi, Gen. xvi. 16.

18 These are the families of the children of Gad according to those that were numbered of them, forty thousand and five hundred.

Fewer by above five thousand than there were in their last numbering, Numb. ii. 15.

19 ¶ ^pThe sons of Judah were Er and Onan: and Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan.

20 And ^qthe sons of Judah after their families were; of Shelah, the family of the Shelanites: of Pharez, the family of the Pharzites: of Zerah, the family of the Zarhites.

21 And the sons of Pharez were; of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Hamul, the family of the Hamulites.

The sons of Pharez, though Judah's grandchildren, are here mentioned among his sons, because they are put in the stead of Er and Onan, which died before.

22 These are the families of Judah according to those that were numbered of them, threescore and sixteen thousand and five hundred.

About two thousand more than they were Numb. i. 27; whereas the foregoing tribes were all diminished, this tribe was now increased, and the blessing promised to that tribe above the rest, Gen. xlix. 8, doth herein begin to show itself.

23 ¶ ^rOf the sons of Issachar after their families: of Tola, the family of the Tolaites: of ¶Pua, the family of the Punites:

Pua, called also Phuvah, Gen. xvi. 13; as his brother Jashub, ver. 24, is called Job, Gen. xvi. 13.

¶ Or, Job. 24 Of ¶Jashub, the family of the Jashubites: of Shimron, the family of the Shimronites.

25 These are the families of Issachar according to those that were numbered of them, threescore and four thousand and three hundred.

A great increase. Compare Numb. ii. 6.

26 ¶ ^sOf the sons of Zebulun after their families: of Sered, the family of the Sardites: of Elon, the family of the Elonites: of Jahleel, the family of the Jahleelites.

27 These are the families of the Zebulunites according to those that were numbered of them, threescore thousand and five hundred.

Whereas before they were but 57,400 in Numb. i. 31; ii. 8. So that Judah's camp was much increased, as Reuben's was much diminished.

28 ¶ ^tThe sons of Joseph after their families were Manasseh and Ephraim.

29 Of the sons of Manasseh: of ^uMachir, the family of the Machirites: and Machir begat Gilead: of Gilead come the family of the Gileadites.

Gilead is here mentioned as Machir's only son, and therefore some conceive that the family of the Machirites, and of the Gileadites, are one and the same family, only called by two names, first Machirites, but afterwards Gileadites. Others make them distinct families, because Machir had other children, Gen. l. 23; 1 Chron. vii. 14—16, which are called by their father's name, Machirites, whereas the children of his eldest son Gilead are called by his name, Gileadites. But though Machir had other children, it seems they and their posterity were extinct at this time, and that Machir alone was left and his posterity, as may be gathered by comparing this and the following verses with Josh. xvii. 1—3; 1 Chron. vii. 14—19.

30 These are the sons of Gilead: of ^xJeezer, the family of the Jeezerites: of Helek, the family of the Helekites:

Jeezer, called also Abiezer, Josh. xvii. 2; Judg. vi. 11, 34; 1 Chron. vii. 18.

31 And ^yof Asriel, the family of the Asrielites: and ^zof Shechem, the family of the Shechemites:

32 And ^{aa}of Shemida, the family of the Shemidaites: and ^{ab}of Hephher, the family of the Hephherites.

33 ¶ And ^{ac}Zelophehad the son of Hephher had no sons, but daughters: and the names of the daughters of Zelophehad were Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

34 These are the families of Manasseh, and those that were numbered of them, fifty and two thousand and seven hundred.

Whereas they were but 32,200 in Numb. i. 35. So they are now increased above 20,000, according to that prophecy, Gen. xlix. 22.

Eran, called Edan or Laadan, 1 Chron. vii. 26; the letters daleth and resh being alike in the Hebrew tongue, and therefore oft changed, as is evident from Scripture instances.

37 These are the families of the sons of Ephraim according to those that were numbered of them, thirty and two thousand and five hundred. These are the sons of Joseph after their families.

43 All the families of the Shuhamites, according to those that were numbered of them, were threescore and four thousand and four hundred.

All from one son and family ; whereas of Benjamin, who had ten sons, and here five families, there were only 45,600, to show that the increase of families depends singly upon God's blessing and good pleasure.

50 These are the families of Naphtali according to their families : and they that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and four hundred.

ⁱ See ch. 1. 46. 51 ⁱThese were the numbered of the children of Israel, six hundred thousand and a thousand seven hundred and thirty.

Very nigh as many as there were before, Numb. i. 46.

So wisely and marvellously did God at the same time manifest his justice in cutting off so vast a number, and his mercy in giving such a speedy and numerous supply, and his truth in both.

52 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 53 ^kUnto these the land shall be divided for an inheritance according to the number of names.

Unto these ; to these families now mentioned. The land shall be divided, by lot, ver. 55. The land was divided into nine parts and a half, respect being had in such division to the goodness as well as to the largeness of the several portions, and the lot gave each tribe their part. Of names, i. e. of the persons, names being oft put for persons, as Acts i. 15 ; Phil. ii. 9 ; Rev. iii. 4 ; xi. 13. The meaning is, that the share of each tribe was divided amongst the several families, to some more, to some less, according to the number of the persons of each family, Numb. xxxiii. 54. And withal, if one of the lots or portions proved too large or too little for all the families and persons of that tribe, in this case they might either give part of their portion to another tribe, as Simeon and Dan had parts of Judah's share, Josh. xix. 1, 40, or take away a part from the portion belonging to another tribe.

54 ^lTo many thou shalt give the more inheritance, and to few thou shalt give the less inheritance : to every one shall his inheritance be given according to those that were numbered of him.

Thou shalt give ; thou, Moses, partly by thyself, for he divided the land beyond Jordan to the two tribes and a half ; and partly by thy successor Joshua, whom thou shalt empower and command to do it. According to those that were numbered of him ; according to the number of the families and persons now numbered, and being twenty years old, no regard being to be had either to any increase of the number by those who came up to that age between this time and the division of the land, or to the diminution of this number by the sword of Canaanites or otherwise.

55 Notwithstanding the land shall be divided by lot : according to the names of the tribes of their fathers they shall inherit.

By lot ; which lots seem to have been cast only for the tribes, not, as some would have it, for the several families, for the distribution of it to them was left to the ruler's wisdom, according to the rule now given, ver. 54. Yet if any lot was too large for the tribe, they might give up part of their right to others, with the ruler's consent, as Judah gave a share to Simeon and to Dan within his lot. According to the names of the tribes, i. e. the lots shall go under the names of each tribe or each patriarch.

56 According to the lot shall the possession thereof be divided between many and few.

i. e. That share which shall by lot fall to each tribe, shall be distributed to the several families and persons in such proportions as their numbers shall require.

57 ¶ And these are they that were numbered of the Levites after their families : of Gershon, the family of the Gershonites : of Kohath, the family of the Kohathites : of Merari, the family of the Merarites.

58 These are the families of the Levites : the family of the Libnites, the family of the Hebronites, the family of the Mahlites, the family of the Mushites, the family of the Korathites. And Kohath begat Amram.

The families of the Levites are here numbered by themselves, because they were not to have a distinct share of the land, whence it is that they are not so distinctly and exactly mentioned as the other tribes, but confusedly and imperfectly, some of them being wholly omitted here. See Exod. vi. 17—19.

59 And the name of Amram's wife was ^{o Ex. 2. 1, 2. & 6. 20.} ° Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt: and she bare unto Amram Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their sister.

Her mother, to wit, Levi's wife, which must necessarily be understood.

60 ^{p ch. 3. 2.} P And unto Aaron was born Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

61 And ° Nadab and Abihu died, when they offered strange fire before the LORD.

62 ^{r See ch. 3. 39.} ° And those that were numbered of them were twenty and three thousand, all males from a month old and upward: ^{q ch. 1. 49.} ° for they were not numbered among the children of Israel, because there was ° no inheritance given them among the children of Israel.

Twenty and three thousand; one thousand more than they were Numb. iii. 39. The reason of which different way of numbering, see on Numb. iii. 15.

63 ¶ These are they that were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the children of Israel ° in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

64 ^{u ver. 3.} ° But among these there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered, when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sinai.

65 For the LORD had said of them, They ° shall surely die in the wilderness. And there was not left a man of them, ^{v ch. 14. 29, 29, 1 Cor. 10. 5, 6.} ° save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

There was not left a man of them, to wit, of those who then murmured and rebelled against God, as plainly appears, both because this threatening and punishment is confined to those transgressors, and because otherwise this had not been true; for of those that were then numbered there were now left Eleazar and Ithamar, and possibly many of the Levites, and some others, who being not guilty of that sin, did not partake of their judgment. Caleb and Joshua are mentioned here, as also Numb. xiv., not by way of exception, as if these were murmurers, which is utterly denied, Numb. xiv. 24, but by way of opposition, to signify that they, though they were two of the spies, and companions of them who were the chief authors and ringleaders of that mutiny, yet they kept themselves from their sin, and therefore God kept them from their plague and destruction, as also he did some others for the same reason.

CHAP. XXVII.

The law of inheritance: for daughters on defect of sons; and on defect of them to the brother; and if there be none, to the next kinsman, 1—11. God commands Moses to go up into a mountain to view the land of Canaan, and die there: the reason, 12—14. Moses prays to the Lord to appoint an able successor, 15—17. Joshua chose, and confirmed in his office by imposition of hands before all the people, 18—23.

^{a ch. 26. 33. & 36. 1, 11. Josh. 17. 3.} THEN came the daughters of ° Zelophehad, the son of Hopher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph: and these are the names of his daughters; Mahlah, Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

Perceiving that the males only were numbered, and that the land was to be divided to them only, they put in their claim for a share in their father's inheritance.

2 And they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

Nigh unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation it seems was the place where Moses and the chief rulers assembled for the administration of public affairs, which also was very convenient, because they had frequent occasion of recourse to God for his assistance and direction therein.

3 Our father ° died in the wilderness, ^{b ch. 14. 35. & 26. 64, 65.} and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD ° in the company of Korah; but ^{c ch. 16. 1, 2.} died in his own sin, and had no sons.

He was not in the company of Korah, nor in any other rebellion of the people, which must be understood, because all of them are opposed to his own sin, in which alone he is said to die. But they mention this only either, 1. Because he might possibly be accused to be guilty of this. Or, 2. Because he, being an eminent person, might be thought guilty of that rather than of any other, because the great and famous men were more concerned in that rebellion than others. Or, 3. To gain the favour of Moses, against whom that rebellion was more particularly directed, and more desperately prosecuted than any other. Or, 4. Because peradventure he died about that time, and therefore might be presumed guilty of that crime. Or rather, 5. Because that sin, and, as it may seem, that only of all the sins committed in the wilderness, was of such a flagitious nature, that God thought fit to extend the punishment not only to the persons of those rebels, but also to their children and families, Numb. xvi. 27, 32, as was usual in like cases, as Deut. xiii. 15; Josh. vii. 24; whence it is noted as a singular privilege granted to the children of Korah, that they died not, Numb. xxvi. 11, whereas the children of their confederates died with them. And this makes their argument here more proper and powerful, that he did not die in that sin for which his posterity were to be cut off, and to lose either their lives or their inheritances, and therefore their claim was more just. In his own sin; either, 1. For that sin mentioned Numb. xiv., which they call his own sin, in opposition not to the rest of the people, for it was a common sin, but to his children, i. e. the sin for which he alone was to suffer in his person and not in his posterity, as God had appointed, Numb. xiv. 33. Or rather, 2. For his own personal sin; for, 1. These were more properly his own sins. 2. It was a truth, and that believed by the Jews, that death was a punishment for men's own sins. 3. The punishment of that common sin was not directly and properly death, but exclusion from the land of Canaan, and death only by way of consequence upon that.

4 Why should the name of our father be † done away from among his family, ^{+ Heb. diminished. d Josh. 17. 4.} because he hath no son? ° Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

Be done away; as it will be, if it be not preserved by an inheritance given to us in his name and for his sake. Hence some gather that the first son of each of these heiresses was called by their father's name, by virtue of that law, Deut. xxv. 6, whereby the brother's first son was to bear the name of his elder brother, whose widow he married. A possession in the land of Canaan upon the division of it, which, though not yet conquered, they concluded would certainly be so, and thereby gave glory to God by believing.

5 And Moses ° brought their cause be- ^{e Ex. 18. 15, 16.} fore the LORD.

i. e. Into the tabernacle, where God was pleased to speak with Moses upon occasions, Exod. xxv. 22; Numb. vii. 89. For it was a hard case; and though their plea seemed reasonable, yet Moses showed his humility and modesty, that he would not determine it himself without God's particular direction.

6 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: 'thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

Give them: in Hebrew it is of the masculine gender, to show that women in this case should enjoy the man's privilege, and that the heavenly Canaan, whereof this was a type, did belong no less to women than to men, Gal. iii. 28. The inheritance of their fathers, i. e. which belonged to their fathers in case they had lived.

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

9 And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

10 And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

No brethren, nor sisters, as appears from ver. 8.

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel a statute of judgment, as the LORD commanded Moses.

A statute of judgment; a statute or rule by which the magistrate shall give judgment in such cases.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel.

The whole tract of mountains was called Abarim, Numb. xxxiii. 47, whereof one of the highest was called Nebo, Deut. xxxii. 49, and the top of that, Pisgah, Deut. xxxiv. 1.

13 And when thou hast seen it, thou also shalt be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered.

Gathered unto thy people; of which phrase see Gen. xv. 15; xxv. 8.

14 For ye rebelled against my commandment in the desert of Zin, in the strife of the congregation, to sanctify me at the water before their eyes: that is the water of Meribah in Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin.

In Kadesh: this is added to distinguish this miscarriage of Moses from that of the people in Rephidim, Exod. xvii. 7.

15 ¶ And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying, The words here following, and others too, which are recorded, Deut. iii. 24, 25.

16 Let the LORD, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation,

All flesh, i. e. of all men; the Searcher of spirits, that knowest who is fit for this great employment; the Father, and Giver, and Governor of spirits, who canst raise and suit the spirits of men to the highest and hardest works, as thou didst those Numb. xi. 16, 17. See Numb. xvi. 22.

17 Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not as sheep which have no shepherd.

i. e. Which may wisely conduct them in all their affairs, both when they go forth to war, or upon other occasions, and when they return home and live in peace. A metaphor from shepherds, as it here follows, which in those places used not to go behind their sheep, as ours now do, but before them, and to lead them forth to their pasture, and in due time to lead them home again. Of this phrase see Deut. xxviii. 6; Acts i. 21.

18 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him;

The spirit; the spirit of government, of wisdom, and of the fear of the Lord, &c. Lay thine hand upon him; by which ceremony Moses did both design the person and confer the power, and by his prayers, which accompanied that rite, obtain from God all the spiritual gifts and graces necessary for his future employment, as appears from Deut. xxxiv. 9. See of this custom Gen. xlviii. 14; Lev. i. 4; Numb. viii. 10; 1 Tim. iv. 14.

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation; and give him a charge in their sight.

That they may be witnesses of the whole action, and may acknowledge him for their supreme ruler. Give him a charge: thou shalt command him in my name to undertake the government of my people, which otherwise he will be afraid and unwilling to do, and thou shalt give him counsels and instructions for the right management of that great trust.

20 And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient.

Thou shalt not now use him as a servant, as thou hast done, but as a brother and thy partner in the government, showing respect to him, and causing others to do so, and thou shalt impart to him the ensigns and evidences of thy own authority, whatsoever they be. Some understand this honour of those spiritual endowments which did adorn Moses, which Moses was now to confer upon him. But this Joshua had before, for in him was the spirit, ver. 18; and he received a further measure of the spirit by Moses's laying on of hands, from both which this honour is distinguished; and, had he meant this, he would not have expressed it in so dark and doubtful a phrase, but have called it a putting not of honour, but of the spirit, upon him, as it is called, Numb. xi. 17. And seeing the word honour here may very well be properly understood, why should we run to figurative significations?

21 And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the LORD: at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation.

Who shall ask counsel for him, when he requires him to do so, and in important and difficult matters. See Josh. ix. 14; Judg. i. 1; xx. 18; 1 Sam. xxiii. 9. After the judgment, or, by or from the judgment, i. e. by seeking and receiving and communicating to him the judgment or sentence thereby given: or, by the judgment is here put defectively for by the breast-plate of judgment, as it is called Exod. xxviii. 30, as the testimony is oft put for the ark of the testimony. Or, concerning the judgment, or sentence, i. e. what the mind and will of God is in the matter. Or, after the manner or rite, for so the Hebrew word mishpat here used oft signifies. Urim, understand, and of Thummim, for these two generally go together; only here, as also 1 Sam. xxviii. 6, Urim is synecdochically put for both Urim and Thummim. For the manner of this inquiry and answer, see on Exod. xxviii. 30. Before the Lord; ordinarily in the tabernacle near the second veil, setting his face to the ark, or otherwise presenting himself as in God's presence, as Abiathar did by David's direction, 1 Sam. xxiii. 9, when they were both banished from the CHAP. XXVIII.

Offerings to be observed at set times: the daily burnt-offering in the morning, together with its meat and drink offering; and at evening, 1—8. The sabbath offering, 9, 10. The burnt-offering of the new moons, with its meat, drink, and sin offering, 11—15. The passover, 16—18. Its sacrifices; their continuance, 19—25. The pentecost and the sacrifices thereof, 26—31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, My offering, and ^ameat offering, for my sacrifices made by fire, for [†]a sweet savour unto me, shall ye observe to offer unto me in their due season.

^a Lev. 3. 11. & 21. 6, 8. Mal. 1. 7, 12.

[†] Heb. a savour of my rest.

God here repeats some of the former laws about sacrifices, not without great reason, partly, because they had been generally discontinued for thirty-eight years together; partly, because the generation to which the former laws had been given about these things was wholly dead, and it was fit the new generation should be instructed about them, as their parents were; partly, to renew the testimonies of God's grace and mercy, notwithstanding their frequent forfeitures thereof by their horrid apostacies and rebellions; and principally, because they were now ready to enter into that land, in which they were obliged to put these things in practice, Deut. xii. 8, &c. Made by fire. According to this translation the sense is, My offering, i. e. my offering or sacrifices, and my bread, i. e. either my shew-bread, or rather my meat-offering made of bread or meal, for my sacrifices made by fire, i. e. which is to accompany my burnt-offerings. Or thus, My offering, to wit, my bread, i. e. my meat-offering, which was made of bread or meal, which is oft expressed by this very name of corban or offering, as Lev. ii. 1; vi. 20; but because corban signifies not only a meat-offering, but other offerings also, as Lev. vii. 37, 38, therefore he limits that general word by adding my bread with (so the Hebrew lamed is oft used, as Gen. xlvii. 26; Ezra i. 5; ii. 63, &c.) my sacrifices made by fire, which may be understood either, 1. Generally for all the sacrifices, as that phrase is sometimes taken, as 1 Sam. ii. 28, where it must needs be so meant, because the burnt-offerings properly so called were not given to the priest, but reserved to God himself, and the priest's portion lay in the other sacrifices only; or, 2. Specially and properly for burnt-offerings; and so under them, as the most eminent kind, are contained all other sacrifices; as under the meat-offering here is contained the drink-offering. And according to this translation and explication these words contain a full and general rule, comprehending all the particulars following in this chapter, as in reason they ought to do, and which otherwise they do not.

^b Ex. 29. 38.

Ordained, or, prescribed, instituted by God. Or, made, i. e. offered at that place, though since omitted for thirty-eight years.

See Exod. xxix. 42; 2 Chron. xxix. 7. Strong wine, Heb. shecar, which though it signify in the general all kinds of strong drink, yet is here put for the most famous of that kind, to wit, for wine, which alone was used in offerings, as appears below, ver. 14; Exod. xxix. 40.

8 And the other lamb shalt thou offer at even: as the meat offering of the morning, and as the drink offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

Thou shalt offer it, or, thou shalt offer with it. Or, with the meat offering of the morning, and with the drink offering thereof, thou shalt offer it; the letter caph being put for beth, which are alike in Hebrew, and the words are said to be read with beth in some copies.

9 ¶ And on the sabbath day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and the drink offering thereof:

Two lambs, besides that for the daily sacrifice, ver. 10.

10 This is ^hthe burnt offering of every sabbath, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

11 ¶ And in the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot;

In the beginnings of your months, which though not reckon among the solemn feasts, Lev. xxiii., yet were celebrated as such, by the sound of trumpets, Numb. x. 10, by extraordinary sacrifices, by abstinence from servile works, Amos viii. 5, and by attendance upon the ministry of God's word, 2 Kings iv. 23. And God ordained it thus, partly that by giving God the first-fruits of every month they should acknowledge him as the Lord of all their time, and own his providence, by which all times and seasons, and all the fruits and blessings of them, and actions done in them, are ordered; and partly that it might be a type of the future renovation of the world by Christ.

12 And ^kthree tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one ram;

^k ch. 15. 4. —12.

13 And a several tenth deal of flour mingled with oil for a meat offering unto one lamb; for a burnt offering of a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

14 And their drink offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt offering of every month throughout the months of the year.

i. e. To be offered in the beginning of every month.

ch. 15. 24.

15 And ¹one kid of the goats for a sin offering unto the LORD shall be offered, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

One kid of the goats; a he-goat. See Numb. xv. 24. Unto the Lord; not unto the moon, to which the Gentiles offered it.

16 ^mAnd in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the LORD.

Instituted by him, and to his honour and service: See on Lev. xxiii. 5.

17 ⁿAnd in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

The feast, to wit, of unleavened bread; of which see on Lev. xxiii. 6.

18 In the ^ofirst day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein:

19 But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire for a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: ^pthey shall be unto you without blemish:

20 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil: three tenth deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram;

21 A several tenth deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs:

22 And ^qone goat for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you.

23 Ye shall offer these beside the burnt offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt offering.

And that in the evening too, as is evident from the nature of the thing, and from other scriptures; but the morning sacrifice alone is mentioned, partly because the celebration of the feast began with it, and principally because this alone was doubtful, whether this might not be omitted when so many other sacrifices were offered in that morning, whereas there was no question but the evening sacrifice should be offered, when there were none other besides it to be offered.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

i. e. The sacrifice made by fire, which is as it were my meat or food; for as God is said to smell the sacrifices, to wit, metaphorically, i. e. to accept of them; so is he said to eat them, i. e. to devour or consume them, and to be satisfied with them: such things spoken of God after the manner of men are to be understood so as to agree with the majesty of God.

25 And ^ron the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work.

26 ¶ Also ^sin the day of the firstfruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the LORD, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work:

In the day of the first-fruits; in the feast of pentecost, Acts ii. 1. A new meat-offering; new fruits, two loaves made of your new corn, Lev. xxiii. 16. Your weeks, i. e. the seven weeks which you are to number from the pass-over, Lev. xxiii. 15. Heb. in the weeks, in being put for after, as it is Isa. xx. 1; Luke ix. 36; xi. 37.

27 But ye shall offer the burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; ^ttwo young bullocks, one ram, seven lambs of the first year;

The burnt-offering, for the celebration of the feast, over and besides that other offering which was joined with the first-fruits, Lev. xxiii. 18: so here is a new additional sacrifice prescribed, which doth not destroy the former.

28 And their meat offering of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto one bullock, two tenth deals unto one ram,

29 A several tenth deal unto one lamb, throughout the seven lambs;

30 And one kid of the goats, to make an atonement for you.

31 Ye shall offer them beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, (^uthey shall be unto you without blemish) and their drink offerings.

CHAP. XXIX.

The sacrifice at the feast of the trumpets; its burnt-offering, and sin-offering, 1—4. Of the feast of atonement; its offerings, 5—11. Of the feast of tabernacles, during seven days; their offerings; the eighth day a great holiday 12—38.

AND in the seventh month, on the first day of the month, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work: ^ait is a day of blowing the trumpets unto you.

In the seventh month; so it was in their ecclesiastical account, in which the month Abib was the first; but as to civil matters, this was the first month. A day of blowing the trumpets; whereby the people were admonished solemnly to prepare themselves for the feasts, which were as many in this month as in all the year besides.

2 And ye shall offer a burnt offering for a sweet savour unto the LORD; one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year without blemish:

A burnt-offering, besides the offerings of every month and day, as is expressed, ver. 6.

3 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram,

4 And one tenth deal for one lamb, throughout the seven lambs:

5 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you:

6 Beside ^bthe burnt offering of the month, and his meat offering, and ^cthe daily burnt offering, and his meat offering, and their drink offerings, ^daccording unto their manner, for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

Of the month; belonging to every new moon, of which see Numb. xxviii. 11, 12; 2 Chron. ii. 4. According to their manner; according to the order, rites, and ceremonies appointed by God.

7 ¶ And ^eye shall have on the tenth day of this seventh month an holy convocation; and ye shall ^fafflict your souls: ye shall not do any work therein:

Your souls, i. e. yourselves, by fasting and abstinence from all delightful things, and by compunction and bitter sorrow for your sins, and the judgments of God either deserved by you or inflicted upon you for your sins. See Lev. xvi. 29, 30; xxiii. 27.

The sin-offering of atonement, by which the high priest made atonement; of which see Lev. xvi. 9, 29, 30.

12 ¶ And ⁱ on the fifteenth day of the seventh month ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work, and ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days:

The feast of booths; of which see Lev. xxiii. 34, 35; Deut. xvi. 13. Seven days; not by abstaining so long from all servile works, but by offering extraordinary sacrifices each day.

13 And ^k ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD; thirteen young bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year; they shall be without blemish:

Thirteen young bullocks; more sacrifices than at any other feast, partly because this feast was in the close of the year, when it was meet to supply the defects of the year past, and when they had gathered in all their fruits, Deut. xvi. 13, 15, and therefore ought to make the larger returns and acknowledgment to God; partly because it was God's pleasure so to order it, for reasons known to himself, in whose will we ought to acquiesce. And the same reason holds why these sacrifices grew fewer and fewer every day.

14 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto every bullock of the thirteen bullocks, two tenth deals to each ram of the two rams,

15 And a several tenth deal to each lamb of the fourteen lambs:

16 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

17 ¶ And on the second day ye shall offer twelve young bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without spot:

18 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, ^l after the manner:

Of which see for meat-offerings, ver. 3, 4, 9, 10; and for drink-offerings, Numb. xxviii. 7, 14.

19 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and the meat offering thereof, and their drink offerings.

20 ¶ And on the third day eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish;

21 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, ^m after the manner:

22 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

23 ¶ And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

24 Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

25 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

26 ¶ And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without spot:

27 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

28 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

29 ¶ And on the sixth day eight bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

30 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

31 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

32 ¶ And on the seventh day seven bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

33 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

34 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

35 ¶ On the eighth day ye shall have a ⁿ solemn assembly: ye shall do no servile work therein:

36 But ye shall offer a burnt offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: one bullock, one ram, seven lambs of the first year without blemish:

This was the last and great day of the feast, as it is called John vii. 37, and yet the sacrifices were fewer than any other day, to teach them not to trust to the multitude of their sacrifices, nor to expect remission of sins from them, but from the one and only sacrifice of Christ.

37 Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullock, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

38 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

39 These things ye shall ^o do unto the LORD in your ^p set feasts, beside your ^q vows, and your freewill offerings, for your burnt offerings, and for your meat offerings, and for your drink offerings, and for your peace offerings.

CHAP. XXX.

Vows not to be broke: if a man vow, he must perform, 1, 2. If a daughter living with her father vow, and he disapprove thereof, she is free, 3-5. If a married woman vow, and her husband disapprove thereof, she is free, 6-8. A widow or divorced woman's vow binding, 9; but not those of a married woman, unless her husband consent or be silent, 10-15.

a ch. 1. 4, 16. & 7. 2. AND Moses spake unto * the heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

The heads of the tribes; the chief rulers of each tribe, who were to communicate it to the rest.

2 ^b If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or ^c swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not ^d break his word, he shall ^d do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

Heb. profane. Ps. 55. 20. d Job 22. 27. Ps. 22. 25. & 50. 14. & 66. 13, 14. & 116. 14, 18. Nah. 1. 15.

A man; which notes both the sex, as appears by ver. 3, and the age, that he be grown up; for none can be so weak as to think the vow of a young child would bind it. A vow, i. e. a simple vow to do something possible and lawful. Unto the LORD; to the honour and service of God. Or swear an oath; confirm his vow by an oath. To bind his soul with a bond; to restrain himself from something otherwise lawful, as suppose from such a sort of meat or drink; or to oblige himself to the performance of something otherwise not necessary, as to observe a private day of fasting. He shall not break his word, Heb. not pollute or profane his word, as the same phrase is used, Psal. lv. 20; lxxxix. 34, i. e. not render his word, and consequently himself, profane, or vile and contemptible in the eyes of others. According to all that proceedeth out of his own mouth; and that without delay, Deut. xxiii. 21; Eccl. v. 4, provided the thing be not unlawful and forbidden by God, Acts xxiii. 14; for it is an idle conceit that a man can give away God's right, or that he can make void God's commands by his own vows, which was the dotage of the Pharisees, Mark vi. 23, 26.

3 If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;

If a woman, or a man in the same circumstances, a son or a servant, as plainly appears from hence, because the reason of this law is perfectly the same in both sexes, which is, that such persons have given away what was not their own, but another's, even their superior's right, which is against the rule and law of natural reason, and against the word of God, which binds all persons to give to every one their due. He instanceth only in the woman, because that sex is both by creation and sin put into a state of subjection, but under the chief and most unquestionable kind all other subjects in like circumstances are comprehended, as is very usual. Being in her father's house, i. e. under his care, power, and government, which she is whilst she continues in her father's house, being a virgin, as appears by the opposition of a married woman, ver. 6, and of a widow, and divorced woman, ver. 9, and by this phrase of being in her father's house, for when she marries, she is removed into her husband's house, Ruth i. 9. Or, being in, or of her father's family, the word house being commonly used for family; for when she marries, she is translated and removed into another family. In her youth; when not only her sex, but her age, disenables her for vowing; and this clause is added not by way of restriction, as if virgins in their riper years were freed from their parents' jurisdiction, and at their own disposal, (which undoubtedly they are not,) but by way of addition, or amplification, q. d. especially (which particle is here to be understood, such defects of particles being frequent in the Hebrew tongue) in her youth, which is commonly reckoned about her twelfth or thirteenth year.

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

Her father; under which title seem to be comprehended, as in other places of Scripture, masters, magistrates, and all other superiors, in such cases wherein their right is given away by the inferior's vow; as for instance, when a servant vows to go a long journey for his friend, and his master will not permit him to do so; but not in other cases; as if a servant vows to do something for another in that time which his master alloweth to his own use and disposal, in this case his vow binds him, but not in the former. And her father shall hold his peace; his silence being an interpretative consent, and much more if he declares his approbation of it. Shall stand, i. e. be established, or confirmed, or be in force.

5 But if her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand: and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

In the day that he heareth, i. e. speedily, or without delay, allowing only necessary and convenient time for deliberation. And it is hereby intimated, that the day or time he had for disallowing her vow was not to be reckoned from her vowing, but from his hearing or knowledge of her vow. Shall forgive her; or, will forgive either her rashness of making such vows, or rather her not performing of it. But this is to be understood only of such vows which could not be performed without invading the father's or superior's right; for if one should vow to forbear such or such a sin, and all unnecessary occasions or means leading to it, and to perform such or such duties, when he had opportunity, no father nor superior can discharge him from such vows.

6 And if she had at all an husband, when she vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

An husband, to whose will and authority she was thereby made subject. When she vowed, to wit, when she was in her father's house, as is evident by comparing ver. 10; and this clause seems to be added by way of exception to that which was said ver. 3, 4, to signify, that though she were in her father's house, yet if she were married, her husband only, and not her father, could disoblige her from her vow. Or uttered ought; either, 1. By way of vow, and so this clause explains and determines the former, i. e. if she express her vow in words. Or, 2. By way of oath, concerning which this same phrase is used Lev. v. 4, and so this clause is distinct from the former, which the disjunctive particle or implies.

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it: then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

Though she be in her father's house, whither such persons oft returned; which limitation may be gathered both from the opposition of her being in her husband's house, ver. 10, and from hence, that this was the only doubtful case; for if such a person was not in her father's house, she was unquestionably bound by it, but being now freed from her husband, and returned to her father, it was doubtful whether she was not returned to the same state of subjection in which she was before, and consequently unable to make or perform a vow without her father's consent, as she was before, which is here denied.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

In her husband's house, i. e. if she that now is a widow, or divorced, made that vow whilst her husband lived with her; as suppose she then vowed, that if she was a widow, she would give such a proportion of her estate to pious or charitable uses, of which vow she might repent when she came to be a widow, and might believe or pretend she was free from it, because that vow was made in her husband's lifetime, which is here granted, in case her husband then disallowed it, but denied, in case by silence or otherwise he consented to it. And thus this law is sufficiently distinguished from that above, ver. 6—8.

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

Afflict the soul, i. e. herself by fasting, which oft goes under that name, as Lev. xvi. 29, 31; xxiii. 27, 32; Isa. lviii. 5, by watching, or the like. And these words are added not for limitation, for it is manifest from ver. 5, 8, 10, 12, that the power of parents and husbands was more general and large; but for amplification, to show that the husband had this power not only in those vows which concerned himself or his estate, but also in those which might seem only to concern her own person or body. And the reason hereof is, because the wife's person or body being the husband's right, she might not do any thing to the injury of her body without his consent.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall bear her iniquity.

After that he hath heard them, and approved them by his silence from day to day; if now after that time spent, he shall upon further thoughts dislike and hinder it, which he ought not to do, her iniquity, her nonperformance of her vow, shall be imputed to him, not to her.

16 These are the statutes, which the LORD commanded Moses, between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

CHAP. XXXI.

God commands Moses, before he die, to avenge Israel of the Midianites, 1, 2. He chooses twelve thousand men, and Phinehas: the kings of Midian and Balaam slain, 3—8. Their women and cattle taken; and cities burnt: they bring the spoil to Moses and Eleazar, 9—12. Moses is wroth with the officers for saving the women alive; commands them to kill every male child, and woman that had known man; the rest saved alive; and to purify themselves and the captives. 13—24. A law for dividing the booty; executed; and the sum of the booty, 25—40. The tribute-offering of the Lord given to the priests and Levites, 41—47. The captains make an offering to the Lord; which is laid up in the tabernacle for a memorial, 48—54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 *Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy people. a ch. 25. 17. b ch. 27. 13.

Of the Midianites, for their malicious designs and practices against Israel, both by hiring Balaam to curse them, and by sending their women to insnare them. The Moabites also were guilty, but God out of his own good pleasure, and in kindness to Lot, was pleased to spare them, the rather, because the measure of their iniquity was not yet full.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian.

For the affront and injury which they offered to God, partly by their own idolatry and lewdness, and partly by seducing God's people into rebellion against him. God's great care was to avenge the Israelites, ver. 2, and Moses's chief desire was to avenge God rather than himself or the people. Withal he doth hereby insinuate, that God and his people have the same cause, the same friends and enemies.

4 † Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war. † Heb. A thousand of a tribe, a thousand of a tribe.

5 So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

A thousand of every tribe, to prevent emulations or divisions. God would send no more, though it is apparent that the Midianites were numerous and strong, because he would try and exercise their trust in him, and because he would hereby give them an earnest of their Canaanitish conquests.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand. e ch. 10. 9.

Phinehas had the charge not of the army, as general, (an office never committed to any priest in all the Old Testament,) but of the holy instruments, &c., as is here expressed, and was also sent to encourage, and quicken, and confirm them in their good enterprise. It is not here mentioned who was the general, whether Joshua, as some think, because he is not named amongst those who went out to meet the returning host, though that might be for other reasons, or some other prince, nor is it worth while to determine. The holy instruments; either, 1. The ark, with the things belonging to it, which before the building of the temple they did sometimes carry into the war for the encouragement of their army. See Numb. xiv. 44; Josh. vi. 9; 1 Sam. iv. 4; xiv. 18. But why then is it thus ambiguously expressed, seeing in all the other places it is called by its proper name? Nor is the ark ever so called in Scripture. Or, 2. The trumpets, as it here follows, the words being thus to be read, the holy instruments, that is, the trumpets; for and is oftentimes put expecially for that is, or to wit, as Gen. xiii. 15; 1 Chron. xxi. 12, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 13; Zech. i. 4; ix. 9, &c. Or rather, 3. The holy breastplate, wherein was the Urim and Thummim, which was easily carried and used, and very useful in war upon many emergent occasions. See 1 Sam. xxiii. 9; xxx. 7. And the trumpets, which were to be used in war as well as in the service of the tabernacle. See Numb. x. 9; 2 Chron. xiii. 12.

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males. d Deu. 20. 13. Judg. 21. 11. 1 Sam. 27. 9. 1 Kings 11. 15, 16.

e See Judg. 6. 1, 2, 33. Namely, all whom they took in that war, or all who lived in those parts; for it is probable (and was then very usual) some colonies of them were sent forth to remoter places, which therefore had no hand either in their former sin, or in this present ruin, of whom we read after this, Judg. vi. And herein they did according to God's own order concerning such people, Deut. xx. 13; only their fault was, that they did not consider the special reason and great obligation which they had to involve the women in the destruction, for which reason Moses blames them afterward, ver. 15, 16.

8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; ^fJosh. 13. 21. namely, 'Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: ^gJosh. 13. 22. ⁵Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

The kings, called dukes or princes of Sihon, Josh. xiii. 21, because they were subject to him while he lived, but upon his death they resumed their kingly power. Zur, the father of Cozbi, Numb. xxv. 15. Balaam also. Object. He was gone and returned to his own place, Numb. xxiv. 25, which was Aram or Mesopotamia, Numb. xxiii. 7. Answ. Either he did go thitherward, but in his journey made some stay in Midian, where he was overtaken by Divine vengeance; or understanding the success of his wicked counsel left with Balaam, in the sin and slaughter of the Israelites, he returned, partly to enjoy the reputation and reward of his counsel which he had lost before, and partly to employ his hellish arts against Israel, now they were, as he thought, forsaken by their God, and exposed to his malice. Here Balaam dies the death of the wicked, and not of the righteous, as he desired, Numb. xxiii. 10.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

Partly, to blot out the name and memory of so lewd and vile a people; partly, lest any of the Israelites should be tempted to settle there, and so be discouraged in their progress to Canaan; and partly, lest they should be possessed by other people who might prove as bad neighbours to them as these would have been.

^hDeu. 20. 14. 11 And ^hthey took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp.

Partly to put respect upon them, and congratulate with them for their happy success; and partly to prevent the pollution of the camp by the untimely entrance of the warriors into it.

14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the † battle.

Because they had spared those who were most criminal, and who by the law of God and of nature were worthy of death.

15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved ⁱall the women alive?

16 Behold, ^kthese caused the children of Israel, through the ^lcounsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of Peor, and ^mthere was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.

17 Now therefore ⁿkill every male ⁿJudg. 21. 11. among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with † him. ^{+ Heb. a male.}

Among the little ones, which they were forbidden to do to other people, Deut. xx. 14, except the Canaanites, to whom this people had equalled themselves by their horrid crimes; and therefore it is not strange, nor unjust, that God, the supreme Lord of all men's lives, who as he gives them, so may take them away when he pleaseth, did equal them in the punishment. Every woman that hath known man; partly for punishment, because the guilt was general, and though some of them only did prostitute themselves to the Israelites, yet the rest made themselves accessory by their consent, or concurrence, or approbation; and partly for prevention of the like mischief from such an adulterous generation.

18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

Not known a man, to wit, carnally: see on Gen. iv. 1; xix. 8; Lev. xviii. 22. Keep alive for yourselves; either to sell them as slaves to others, or to use them as servants to yourselves, or to marry them, when you have prepared and instructed them.

19 And ^odo ye abide without the camp ^och. 5. 2 seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and ^pwhosoever hath touched any ^pch. 19. 11, &c. slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

Seven days; according to the law, Lev. xv. 13; Numb. xix. 11, 12. Purify with the water of sprinkling, Numb. xix. 9.

20 And purify all your raiment, and all † that is made of skins, and all work of ^{+ Heb. instrument, or, vessel of skins.} goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

All your raiment, to wit, your spoil and prey. See Lev. viii. 15; xiv. 49. All these things had contracted some ceremonial uncleanness, either from the dead bodies which wore them, or the tents or houses where they were, in which such dead bodies lay, or from the touch of the Israelitish soldiers, who were legally defiled by the slaughters they made.

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead, 23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless it shall be purified ^qwith the water of separation: ^qch. 19. 9, 17. and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water.

24 ^rAnd ye shall wash your clothes on ^rLev. 11. 25. the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey † that was ^{+ Heb. of the captivity.} taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:

27 And ^sdivide the prey into two ^sJosh. 22. 8. 1 Sam. 30. 4. parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

The congregation hath some share, because the warriors went in the name of all, and because all having been injured by the Midianites, all were to have some share in the reparations; but the warriors, who were but 12,000, have a far greater share than others of their brethren, because they underwent greater pains and dangers.

One soul, i. e. one person, as it follows here and ver. 30.

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave offering of the LORD.

In thankfulness to God for their preservation and good success.

30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take ^uone portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the ^{||}flocks, of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, ^{*}which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

^u See ver. 42, 47.

^{*} ch. 3, 7, 8, 23, 31, 36; & 18, 3, 4.

One portion of fifty; whereas the former part was one of five hundred: the reason of the difference is, partly because this was taken out of the people's portion, whose hazards being less than the others, their gains also in all reason were to be less; partly because this was to be distributed into more hands, the Levites being now numerous, when the priests were but few.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep,

The rest of the prey; all which was now left of the prey. It is so expressed because they took more, but some of the persons were since killed, ver. 17, and some of the cattle was spent for the necessary provisions of the army.

33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,

34 And threescore and one thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep :

37 And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand; of which the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave offering, unto Eleazar the priest, [']as the LORD commanded Moses.

['] See ch. 18, 8, 19.

Either now upon his consulting of God in the case, or formerly in general rules and laws for such occasions, such as Numb. xviii. 8.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, 43 (Now the half that pertained unto the congregation was three hundred thousand and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

44 And thirty and six thousand beeves,

45 And thirty thousand asses and five hundred,

46 And sixteen thousand persons;)

47 Even ²of the children of Israel's ^z ^{ver. 30.} half, Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, which kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 ¶ And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses :

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our [†]charge, and [†]there lacketh not one man of us.

50 We have therefore brought an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath [†]gotten, of jewels of gold, chains, [†]and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, ^ato make an atonement for our souls before the LORD.

^a Exod. 30, 12, 16.

For their error, noted, ver. 14—16, and withal for a memorial, as it is said ver. 54, or by way of gratitude for such a stupendous assistance and deliverance, as appears from the word therefore in the beginning of this verse, and from ver. 49.

51 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the [†]offering that they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 (For ^uthe men of war had taken ^b ^{Deu. 20. 14.} spoil, every man for himself.)

CHAP. XXXII.

The Reubenites and Gadites sue for their inheritance on that side Jordan, as being fit for cattle, 1—5. Moses reproves them as discouraging the people, and herein following their fathers' ill example, 6—15. They promise to leave their children and cattle there, and go armed before their brethren till Canaan should be subdued, 16—19; on which condition they, together with the half-tribe of Manasseh, obtain their desire, 20—42.

NOW the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of ^{*}Jazer, and the land of Gilead, that, behold, the place was a place for cattle;

^{*} Jazer; a city and country taken from the Amorites, Numb. xxi. 32. Gilead; a mountainous country, famous for pasturage, Jer. i. 19; Micah vii. 14.

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and ^b ^{ver. 36, Beth-nimrah.} Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and ^c ^{ver. 38, Sibmah.} Shebam, and Nebo, and ^d ^{ver. 38, Haal-meeon.} Beon, ^d ^{ver. 38, Haal-meeon.} Ataroth; different from that Ataroth, Josh. xvi. 2, 7, which was on the other side of Jordan. Nimrah, called Beth-nimrah, ver. 36; Josh. xiii. 27; and the waters of Nimrim, Isa. xv. 6. Shebam, called Shibmah, ver. 38. Neon, which is thought to be the same place called Baal-meon, ver. 38, and Beth-moon, Jer. xviii. 23.

^e cit. 21. 24. 34. 4 Even the country ^e which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle :

Which the LORD smote before the congregation, and gave to them for a possession, in the same manner as he will give the land of Canaan.

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

To wit, to give us our possession there, but let this land on this side Jordan be our whole possession.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here ?

In case and peace, whilst your brethren are engaged in a bloody war. Their words were ambiguous, and Moses thought this to be an act of unbelief and sloth, and self-love and policy.

⁺ Heb. break. 7 And wherefore † discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them ?

8 Thus did your fathers, ^f when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea ^g to see the land.

9 For ^h when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

That they should not attempt to go, but rather return to Egypt, Numb. xiv. 4.

10 ⁱ And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, ^k from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob; because ^l they have not † wholly followed me :

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun : ^m for they have wholly followed the LORD.

The Kenezite; so called from Kenez, his grandfather, or one of his eminent ancestors, Josh. xv. 17; 1 Chron. iv. 13—15.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them ⁿ wander in the wilderness forty years, until ^o all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the LORD, was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the ^p fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

Succeeding your fathers, as in their places and estates, so also in their sins.

15 For if ye ^q turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness; and ye shall destroy all this people.

Who being moved by your counsel and example, will refuse to go over Jordan, and to possess the land of Canaan.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones :

17 But ^r we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place : and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities because of the inhabitants of the land.

We ourselves; either all, or as many of us as shall be thought necessary, leaving only so many as may be necessary to provide for the sustenance and defence of our wives and children here. See Josh. iv. 12, 13. The inhabitants of the land; the Moabites and Edomites, or other bordering people.

18 ^s We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance.

19 For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; ^t because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And ^u Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

Before the LORD; either, 1. Sincerely and heartily, as in God's presence. Or rather, 2. Before the ark, which was the token of God's presence. He alludes either to the order of the tribes in their march, whereby Reuben and Gad marched next and immediately before the ark, as appears from Numb. ii. 10, 14, 16, 17; or to the manner of their passage over Jordan, wherein the ark went first into Jordan, and stood there whilst all the tribes marched over Jordan by and before it, Josh. iii. iv., and these amongst the rest, as is expressly noted in these very words, that they passed over before the LORD, Josh. iv. 13.

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him, 22 And ^x the land be subdued before the LORD: then afterward ^y ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and ^z this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

Before the LORD, i. e. by his presence, and gracious and powerful assistance.

23 But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure ^a your sin will find you out.

i. e. The punishment of your sin; as that word is very oft used.

24 ^b Build you cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

Which you have uttered and promised to do. See this or the like phrase Numb. xxx. 2; Matt. xv. 18.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 ^c Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead :

Largely so called, as that word is oft used, for that whole country beyond Jordan, as in other places it is taken more strictly for a part of it, as here below, ver. 39, 40, and elsewhere.

27 ^d But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

They shall forfeit and lose their possessions in Gilead, and shall be constrained to go over Jordan, and to seek possessions there among their brethren.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

As the Lord hath said ; either at this time by thy mouth ; or formerly, where he commandeth us as well as our brethren to go into Canaan and possess it.

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be our's.

33 And ^fMoses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, ^gthe kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

Half the tribe of Manasseh are here added to the tribes of Reuben and Gad, either because upon the good success of the two tribes of Reuben and Gad, they were encouraged to make the same request for themselves, as having much cattle as well as they ; or because upon further consideration it was found that this portion of land was more than sufficient for those two tribes ; and it was given by Moses to these rather than to any other, because they fought against the Amorites with great courage and success, here ver. 39, and Josh. xvii. 1.

Nebo ; of which city see Deut. xxxiv. 1 ; Jer. xlviii. 1. Their names being changed ; either because conquerors of places use to do so ; or because the names of other gods (which Nebo and Baal-meon unquestionably were) were not to be mentioned, Exod. xxiii. 13, especially at the first settling of the Israelites there, that the very remembrance of the idols might be blotted out, and so the temptation to idolatry removed, though afterwards, when that danger was over, they were called by their old names again, Josh. xiii. 17, 20.

^r Gen. 50. 23 39 And the children of ^wMachir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

Took it, i. e. part of it ; or Gilead is here taken more strictly. See above on ver. 29 ; Gen. xxxi. 21 ; Deut. iii. 12, 13.

40 And Moses ^sgave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh ; and he dwelt therein.

Unto Machir, i. e. not to Machir himself, who doubtless was long since dead ; see Gen. 1. 23 ; but the family or posterity of Machir, which are called by their father's name ; as the names of Abraham, Acts vii. 16 ; of Isaac, Amos vii. 9 ; of Jacob or Israel frequently ; of Judah and Simeon, Judg. i. 3 ; of David, 1 Kings xii. 16 ; are manifestly put for their posterity.

41 And ^tJair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them "Havoth-jair."

Jair is called here the son of Manasseh, partly because he was so by his mother, 1 Chron. ii. 21, 22 ; and partly because he joined himself with the Manassites in this expedition, and settled himself among them.

42 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

Nobah, who though not elsewhere named, was doubtless an eminent person of the tribe of Manasseh.

CHAP. XXXIII.

A relation of the marches and campings of the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan, 1—49. They are commended to drive out the Canaanites, and destroy their pictures, molten images, and high places, and to divide the land by lot, 50—54. The Canaanites, if not dispossessed, should trouble and vex them ; and God would do to them as he thought to do to the others, 55, 56.

THESE are the journeys of the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt with their armies under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

With their armies, i. e. in great number and exact order, as armies march, and they did, Exod. xii. 37, 38 ; xiii. 18.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys by the commandment of the LORD : and these are their journeys according to their goings out.

Moses would have this done, partly to evince the truth of the history, partly to preserve the remembrance of God's glorious and miraculous works both of judgment and mercy towards his people, and thereby to confirm their faith in their present difficult undertaking.

3 And they ^adeparted from Rameses in ^bthe first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month ; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out ^cwith an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

They all repaired to Rameses by Moses's order from all parts of the land. In the sight of all the Egyptians. See Exod. xiv. 8 ; Numb. xv. 30.

4 For the Egyptians buried all their firstborn, ^dwhich the LORD had smitten among them : ^eupon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.

Upon their gods ; either, 1. Their princes and rulers, who are sometimes called gods in Scripture ; and so this is added by way of amplification, God slew their first-born, not only of the meaner sort, but even of their king and princes. Or, 2. Their false gods, to wit, those beasts which the brutish Egyptians worshipped as gods, which were killed with the rest, for the first-born both of men and beasts were then killed, Exod. xiii. 15. See more on Exod. xii. 12 ; xviii. 11.

5 ^fAnd the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

Rithmah; a place in the wilderness of Paran, near Kadesh-barnea.

19 And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez.

20 And they departed from Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah.

21 And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah.

22 And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah.

23 And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in mount Shapher.

24 And they removed from mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah.

25 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.

26 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath.

27 And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah.

28 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.

29 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched in Hashmonah.

^r Deut. 10. 6. 30 And they departed from Hashmonah, and ^rencamped at Moseroth.

31 And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched in Bene-jaakan.

Called more fully Beeroth-bene-jaacan, Deut. x. 6.

32 And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and ^sencamped at Hor-hagidgad.

Called Gudgodah, as Jotbathah is called Jotbath, Deut. x. 7.

33 And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathah.

34 And they removed from Jotbathah, and encamped at Ebronah.

35 And they departed from Ebronah, and encamped at Ezion-gaber.

A place upon the Red Sea, as appears from ^s Kings ix. 26; xxii. 48.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the ^twilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they removed from ^tKadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And ^uAaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

40 And ^vking Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

41 And they departed from mount ^vHor, and pitched in Zalmonah.

42 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.

43 And they departed from Punon, and pitched in Oboth.

44 And ^wthey departed from Oboth, and pitched in || ^wIje-abarim, in the border of Moab.

45 And they departed from Iim, and pitched ^xin Dibon-gad.

Iim, rather Ijim, i. e. the heaps, as the word signifies, even the heaps of Abarim, last mentioned; the Hebrew word is the same with Ije, ver. 44, only there it is in the construed, and here in the absolute, form. Dibon-gad; so called partly by way of distinction of this from another Dibon, in the portion of Reuben, Josh. xiii. 17, and partly, because it was rebuilt by the tribe of Gad.

46 And they removed from Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon^y-diblathaim.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.

Of which see Numb. xxvii. 12; Deut. xxxii. 49, 50; xxxiv. 1.

48 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and ^zpitched in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

49 And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto || ^zAbel-shittim in the plains of Moab.

Abel-shittim; called Shittim, Numb. xxv. 1, and here Abel-shittim, for the grievous mourning which there was both for the heinous crimes committed, and horrible judgments there inflicted.

^k Deut. 7. 1, 2, & 9. 1. J Josh. 3. 17. unto them, ¹When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

52 ¹Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places:

Ye shall drive out; not by banishing, but by destroying them, as it is explained, Deut. vii. 1, 2, and elsewhere. Their pictures seem to have been stones curiously engraven, and set up for worship. See Deut. xvi. 22. Molten images. See Exod. xxiii. 24, 32; Deut. vii. 5. High places, i. e. by a metonymy, the chapels, altars, groves, or other means of worship there set up, for the hills themselves could not be destroyed by them. See on Deut. xii. 2.

53 And ye shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the land to possess it.*

54 And ^mye shall divide the land by lot for an inheritance among your families: and to the more ye shall †give the more inheritance, and to the fewer ye shall †give the less inheritance: every man's inheritance shall be in the place where his lot falleth; according to the tribes of your fathers ye shall inherit.

55 But if ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you; then it shall come to pass, that those which ye let remain of them shall be ⁿpricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell.

Pricks in your eyes, i. e. both vexatious and pernicious, for the eye is a tender part, and a wound there is very mischievous.

56 Moreover it shall come to pass, that I shall do unto you, as I thought to do unto them.

CHAP. XXXIV.

God describes the borders of Canaan, 1—15; and names those who should divide the same among the children of Israel, 16—29.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into ^athe land of Canaan; (this is the land that shall fall unto you for an inheritance, even the land of Canaan with the coasts thereof:)

Or, limits, or bounds, to wit, of the land beyond Jordan; which are here particularly described, 1. To direct and bound them in their wars and conquests, that they might not seek the enlargement of their empire, after the manner of other nations, but be contented with their own portion. 2. To encourage them in their attempt upon Canaan, and assure them of their success. 3. To guide them in the approaching distribution of the land.

3 Then ^byour south quarter shall be from the wilderness of Zin along by the coast of Edom, and your south border shall be the outmost coast of ^cthe salt sea eastward:

The south quarter is here described from east to west by divers windings and turnings, by reason of the mountains, rivers, &c. By the coast of Edom, bordering all along upon the Edomites. The Salt Sea, so called from the salt and sulphurous taste of its waters. Eastward, i. e. at the eastern part of that sea, where the eastern and southern borders meet.

4 And your border shall turn from the south ^dto the ascent of Akkrabbim, and pass on to Zin: and the going forth thereof shall be from the south ^eto Kadesh-barnea, and shall go on to ^fHazar-addar, and pass on to Azmon:

Akrabbim, called Maaleh-acrabbim, Josh. xv. 3, which was at the south end of the Salt or Dead Sea. From the south, or, on the south, i. e. proceeding onward towards the south. Kadesh-barnea was on the southern part of Canaan, Numb. xiii. 17. Hazar-addar, in Josh. xv. 3, may seem distinguished into two places, Hezron and Adar, which here are united, because peradventure they were contiguous, or joined together. Or, the village of Addar; and so this is the same place called Adar, Josh. xv. 3; and for Hezron, that may be another place here omitted, and there supplied for more exactness. Azmon is at the west end of the Mount of Edom.

5 And the border shall fetch a compass ^gfrom Azmon ^hunto the river of Egypt, and the goings out of it shall be at the sea.

The river of Egypt, called Sihor, Josh. xiii. 3, which divided Egypt from Canaan. See Gen. xv. 18. The sea; the midland sea, called the sea emphatically; whereas the other seas there, as they are called, are indeed but lakes.

6 And as for the western border, ye shall even have the great sea for a border: this shall be your west border.

The great sea; the midland sea from the south to the north so far as runs parallel with Mount Libanus.

7 And this shall be your north border: from the great sea ye shall point out for you ⁱmount Hor:

Not that Hor where Aaron died, Numb. xx. 23, which was southward, and bordering upon Edom, Numb. xxxiii. 37, 38, and therefore could not be their northern border; but another mountain, and, as it is conceived, the mountain of Libanus, which is elsewhere mentioned as the northern border of the land, and which, in regard of divers parts, or by divers people, is called by divers names, as Sirion and Shenir, Deut. iii. 9, and Sion, Deut. iv. 48, and Hermon, Josh. xiii. 5, and here Hor, which signifies a mountain, and this may be called so by way of eminency. Certain it is, that as Hor here, so Hermon, Josh. xiii. 5, is joined with the entrance of Hamath, which makes it probable they are one and the same place.

8 From mount Hor ye shall point out your border ^junto the entrance of Hamath; and the goings forth of the border shall be to ^kZedad:

Hamath, called Hamath the great, Amos vi. 2, which is among the northern borders, Ezek. xlvi. 16, 17. See Gen. x. 15, 18; Numb. xiii. 21; Judg. iii. 3; 1 Kings viii. 65.

9 ¶ And the border shall go on to Ziphron, and the goings out of it shall be at ^lHazar-enan: this shall be your north border.

10 And ye shall point out your east border from Hazar-enan to Shepham:

11 And the coast shall go down from Shepham ^mto Riblah, on the east side of Ain; and the border shall descend, and shall reach unto the ⁿside of the sea ^oof Chinnereth eastward:

Chinnereth; of this name we have a city, Josh. xix. 35, and a country, Josh. xi. 2; 1 Kings xv. 20, and a sea or lake, here and Josh. xii. 3; xiii. 27, which in the New Testament is called the sea of Gennesaret, Luke v. 1, and of Galilee, and of Tiberias, John vi. 1.

12 And the border shall go down to Jordan, and the goings out of it shall be at ^pthe salt sea: this shall be your land ^qwith the coasts thereof round about.

Down to Jordan, i. e. all along the river of Jordan, even to the end of it, which is the eastern border.

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, ^pThis is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half tribe :

14 ^qFor the tribe of the children of Reuben according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance ; and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance :

15 The two tribes and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sunrising.

16 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you :
^rEleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun.

Eleazar was to act in God's name, to cast lots, to prevent differences and contentions, to consult with God in cases of difficulty, to transact the whole business in a solemn and religious manner.

18 And ye shall take one ^sprince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

19 And the names of the men are these : Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

The order of the tribes is here differing from that Numb. i. 7, 26, and in other places, being here, as also Josh. xvii., xviii., xix., conformed to the order of their several inheritances, which afterwards fell to them by lot; which is an evident demonstration of the infinite wisdom of God's providence, and of his exact and peculiar care over his people.

20 And of the tribe of the children of Simeon, Shemuel the son of Ammihud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad the son of Chislon.

22 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bukki the son of Jogli.

23 The prince of the children of Joseph, for the tribe of the children of Manasseh, Hanniel the son of Ephod.

24 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, Kemuel the son of Shiphtan.

25 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Zebulun, Elizaphan the son of Parnach.

26 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Issachar, Paltiel the son of Azzan.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

CHAP. XXXV.

Eight and forty cities given to the Levites, together with their suburbs; among which six cities of refuge, for an Israelite or stranger who had killed another unawares, 1—15. Wilful murder decided, and the murderer to be put to death, 16—21. The man-slayer must abide in the city of refuge till the death of the high priest; and if caught out of it, might be killed, 25—29. Two witnesses required to condemn a man to die, 30. No satisfaction to be taken for the life of a murderer, 31, nor that any one might return from a city of refuge before the time, 32; that the land be not defiled and polluted, and not cleansed of the blood shed in it, 33, 34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

2 ^aCommand the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

For their cattle; for pasturage for their cattle; where they might not build houses, nor plant gardens, orchards, or vineyards, no, nor sow corn, for which they were abundantly provided out of the first-fruits and tithes. And these suburbs did not belong to the Levites in common, but were distributed to them in convenient proportions, as may appear from Josh. xxi. 18; 1 Chron. vi. 60.

4 And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about.

Object. In the next verse it is two thousand. How do these agree? Ans. 1. LXX. interpreters read both here and ver. 5 two thousand cubits, whence some suppose this to be an error in the Hebrew text, which, being in a matter neither concerning faith nor good manners, is not prejudicial to the authority of the Holy Scriptures. Ans. 2. The one thousand cubits may be in length from the city, and the two thousand cubits in breadth on each side of the city, and so they well agree; for a line of a thousand cubits being draw in length eastward, and another westward, and another northward, and another southward, a line drawn at a thousand cubits distance from the city, from east to west, must needs contain two thousand cubits, and so must the other line from north to south, and so on every side of the city there must be two thousand cubits. Ans. 3. This verse and the next do not speak to the same thing: this speaks of the space or place from whence the suburbs shall be measured, the next verse speaks of the space unto which that measure shall be extended; and the words may very well be read thus, And the suburbs—shall be (so it is only an ellipsis of the verb substantive, which is most frequent, and the meaning is, shall be taken or accounted) from the wall of the city, and from (that particle being supplied or understood from the foregoing words, which is very usual) without it, or, from the outward parts of it, (which being a general and indefinite expression is limited and explained by the following words,) even from a thousand cubits round about; which are mentioned not as the thing measured, for as yet there is not a word of measuring, but as the term or space from which the measuring line should begin. And then it follows, ver. 5, And ye shall measure from without the city (not from the wall of the city, as was said before, ver. 4, but from without it, i. e. from the said outward part or space of a thousand cubits without the wall of the city round about) on the east side two thousand cubits, &c. So in truth there were three thousand cubits from the wall of the city, whereof one thousand probably were for out-houses, stalls for cattle, gardens, vineyards, and olive-yards, and the like, and the other two thousand for pasture, which are therefore called the field of the suburbs, Lev. xxv. 34, by way of distinction from the suburbs themselves, which consist of the first thousand cubits from the wall of the city.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be ^b six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and † to them ye shall add forty and two cities.

For refuge, or, of receipt, or escape, or resort, to wit, for man-slayers; and these cities are assigned among the Levites, partly, because they might be presumed to be the most proper and impartial judges between man-slayers and wilful murderers; partly, because their presence, and counsel, and authority would more effectually bridle the passions of the avenger of blood who might pursue him thither; and partly, to signify that it is only in Christ (whom the Levitical priests did represent) that sinners find refuge and safety from the destroyer. The names of these cities we have Deut. iv. 41, 43; Josh. xx. 8. For the manslayer, such as is here described, ver. 11, 15, 22, 23.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be ^c forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be ^d of the possession of the children of Israel: ^e from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which † he inheriteth.

Ye shall give many: compare Numb. xxxiii. 54; Josh. xx. 2.

9 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, 'When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

11 Then ^g ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person † at unawares.

i. e. Not wilfully, designedly, or maliciously, but inconsiderately, through mistake, or indiscretion, or carelessness. See Lev. iv. 2.

12 ^h And they shall be unto you cities for refuge from the avenger; that the manslayer die not, until he stand before the congregation in judgment.

The avenger, to wit, of the party slain, or, of blood, as it is fully expressed below, ver. 19, 25; Heb. from the redeemer, or, from the next kinsman, to whom by the law belonged the right of redemption of the lands of, and vindication of the injury done to, the person deceased. Die not, i. e. be not killed by the avenger meeting him in some other place. Before the congregation, i. e. before the society or convention of judges or elders, who were appointed in every city for the decision of criminal causes, who were twenty-three, who were to examine the matter, and that publicly before the people, whether the murder was wilful or casual. Quest. In what city was this cause to be tried? Answ. Some say in the city of refuge, others say in the city in or near which the fact was committed. It seems to me it was done in both, at first in the city of refuge, as is manifest in Josh. xx. 4; but if that trial and sentence did not satisfy the avenger of blood, it was fully and finally determined in the other city, as is sufficiently evident both by comparing this place with ver. 25; Josh. xx. 6, and from the usual and most reasonable course of justice, which is that facts should be examined, as far as may be, in or near the places where they were committed, and where the witnesses and evidences were at hand. In judgment, or, for judgment, i. e. to receive sentence there according to the nature of the fact.

13 And of these cities which ye shall give ⁱ six cities shall ye have for refuge. ^{i ver. 6.}

14 ^k Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge. ^{k Deut. 4.41. Josh. 20. 8.}

On this side Jordan; because that land was as long as Canaan, though not so broad, and besides these might be convenient for many of them that lived in Canaan.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, both for the children of Israel, and ^l for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them: that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither. ^{l ch. 15. 16.}

For the stranger; not the proselyte only, but all strangers, this being no matter of religious privilege, but of common right, and agreeable to the law of nature and practice of wise heathens.

16 ^m And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death. ^{m Exod. 21. 12, 14. Lev. 24. 17. Deut. 19. 11, 12.}

If he smite him, wittingly and wilfully, though not with premeditated malice or design, as appears by comparing this with ver. 20—23. So that he die, to wit, suddenly, not so if he walked abroad afterward. Exod. xxi. 19, 20. Shall surely be put to death; yea, though he were fled into the city of refuge.

17 And if he smite him † with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death. ^{† Heb. with a stone of the hand.}

With throwing a stone, Heb. with the stone of the hand, i. e. cast by the hand, and that knowingly, as appears by ver. 23.

18 Or if he smite him with an hand weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 ⁿ The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him. ^{n ver. 21, 24. 27. Deut. 19. 6, 12. Josh. 20. 3, 5.}

Either, 1. By himself, as the following words show: so it is only a permission, that he may do it without offence to God or danger to himself. Or, 2. By the magistrate, from whom he shall demand justice: so it is a command, as may appear by comparing this with ver. 31; Deut. xix. 12, 13.

20 But ^o if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him ^p by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him. ^{o Gen. 4. 8. 2 Sam. 3. 27. & 20. 10. 1 Kings 2. 31, 32. p Ex. 21. 14. Deut. 19. 11.}

22 But if he thrust him suddenly ^q without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait,

Suddenly; through sudden passion or provocation. Or, by chance, or unawares.

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm:

24 Then ^r the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments: ^{r ver. 12. Josh. 20. 6.}
If the man-slayer flee to the city of refuge.

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled : and ^ahe shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, ^bwhich was anointed with the holy oil.

t Ex. 29. 7.
& 21. 10.

He shall abide in it, be confined to it, partly to show the hatefulness of wilful murder in God's account by so severe a punishment, as this in many cases might prove, inflicted upon the very appearance of it; and partly for the security of the man-slayer, lest the presence of such a person, and his conversation among the kindred of the deceased, might occasion reproach and bloodshed. Unto the death of the high priest; partly because the public grief for the loss of so public a person was likely to assuage the private griefs and passions of men, the rather, because by this example they were minded of their own mortality, and thereby withheld from taking vengeance; and principally to show that the death of Christ (the true High Priest, whom the others did evidently and eminently represent and typify) is the only mean whereby sins are pardoned, and sinners are set at liberty.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; †he shall not be guilty of blood:

+ Heb. no blood shall be to him.
Ex. 22. 2.

i. e. Not liable to punishment from men, though not free from guilt before God, because he kills an innocent person, as appears from Deut. xix. 10. This God ordained to oblige the man-slayer to abide in his city of refuge. See ver. 32.

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

u ch. 27. 11. 29 So these things shall be for ^aa statute of judgment unto you throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the ^amouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.

31 Moreover ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is †guilty of death: but he shall be surely put to death.

No intercession nor ransom shall be accepted to save his life, or procure him a pardon.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest.

Whereby God would signify the absolute and indispensable necessity of Christ's death to expiate sin, and to redeem the sinner.

33 So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are: for blood ^ait defileth the land: and †the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but ^bby the blood of him that shed it.

z Gen. 9. 6.

These words are added as a reason not of the last law, ver. 32, for in that case the land was cleansed without the blood of the man-slayer. but of the law next foregoing that, ver. 31, in which case it holds; and the sense is, If you shall spare the murderer, or take any satisfaction for him, you do together with yourselves involve your land and people in guilt, and will certainly bring down God's vengeance upon yourselves and them.

34 ^aDefile not therefore the land which ye shall inhabit, wherein I dwell: for ^bthe LORD dwell among the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXXVI.

The inconvenience of daughters inheriting is remedied by a general command that all such marry in the tribe of their fathers, to which of them they shall think best, 1—9. They obey, 10—12. These commands God gave by Moses to Israel in the plains of Moab, 13.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the ^achildren of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel:

a ch. 26. 29.

The chief fathers of the families, who had the care and management of the public affairs of that tribe committed to them.

2 And they said, ^bThe LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and ^cmy lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

b ch. 26. 55. & 33. 54.
Josh. 17. 3.

c ch. 27. 1, 7.
Josh. 17. 3, 4.

Our brother, i. e. our kinsman, one of our tribe, Josh. xvii. 2, 3.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe †whereunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

+ Heb. unto whom they shall be.

For their inheritance will pass to their children, who will be of another tribe by their father's side, which alone is considered in this place.

4 And when ^dthe jubile of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

d Lev. 25. 10.

Which God appointed principally for this end, to preserve the inheritance in the hands of the tribes and families to which they were first given.

5 And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the LORD, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph ^ehath said well.

Their plea is just and reasonable. God did not take particular care about every occurrence that happened, or might happen, but left divers things to be found out by human prudence, which being his own gift, it was meet there should be opportunities left for the exercise of it; and God thought fit to approve and ratify the prudent and profitable inventions of men by his own law or sanction; as in the case of Jethro, Exod. xviii., of Zelophehad's daughter, Numb. xxvii., and here of their brethren. But it is observable, that God allowed this only in civil affairs, but never in the matters of his worship, where he utterly forbids it.

6 This is the thing which the LORD doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them † marry to whom they think best; † only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry.

They seem hereby to be confined not only to the same tribe, but also to the family of their tribe, as appears from the reason of the law, for God would have the inheritance of families as well as tribes kept entire and unmixed; and this was one reason of that law of marrying the brother's wife, Deut. xxv. And although the next verse may seem to thwart this interpretation, the reason of this law being there given that inheritances might not go from tribe to tribe, yet ver. 8 confirms it, where the very same phrase is repeated, and that more emphatically, that such shall marry one of the family of the tribe of her father; and this further reason and restriction is added, that they may enjoy every man the inheritance (not only of his tribe, but) of his fathers, to wit, belonging to his father's family.

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall †^g keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 And^h every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

By which clause it seems that this law was not general to forbid every woman to marry into another tribe, (as may be reasonably concluded from the practice of so many patriarchs, kings, priests, and other holy men, who have married women of other tribes, yea, sometimes of other nations, which it is not likely they would have done, if this had been a transgression of God's law,) but restrained to heiresses, or such as were likely to be so. See 1 Chron. xxiii. 22. But if they had brethren, it is probable they were free to marry into any tribe, yet so that, if their brethren died, their punishment was, that the inheritance went from them to the next akin of their father's tribe and family. And the principal reason why God was solicitous to preserve tribes and families unmixed was, that the tribe and family too out of which the Messiah was to come, and by which he should be known, might be evident and unquestionable.

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

10 Even as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad:

11ⁱ For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, ^{i ch. 27. 1.} and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons:

It is uncertain whether brothers or sons be taken strictly and properly, or more large, as those words are oft used in Scripture.

12 And they were married † into the families of the sons of Manasseh the son of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

13 These are the commandments and the judgments, which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses unto the children of Israel^k in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

DEUTERONOMY.

THE ARGUMENT.

MOSES, in the two last months of his life, rehearseth what God had done for them, and their frequent murmurings, rebellions, and constant ingratitude. He begs to enter into the land, but is permitted only to see it. He forbiddeth any communion with the nations for several reasons, chap. vii. He gives a short repetition of those sundry laws, moral, ceremonial, judicial, and military, which he had given them, from whence this book is called DEUTERONOMY. Then, after many exhortations, he prophesieth of Christ; afterwards he shows how matters of war are to be managed, and, giving many other particular directions with reference to duties, conditions, and persons of both sexes, he pronounceth blessings on the obedient, and curses on the disobedient: he then gives a charge for laying up and reading of the law at certain times, and every seven years to be solemnly read before all the people; he composeth a song for common use, comprising the wonderful things here mentioned: he prophesieth of Christ's coming, and the calling of the Gentiles, seeth the land, and dieth, leaving Joshua, after he had consecrated him, to succeed.

CHAP. I.

A rehearsal of what had befallen Israel in their forty years' march; as, God's command to depart, 1—8. Moses's inability to judge alone, 9—12. Other judges and officers appointed, 13—16. Charge given the judges, 17, 18. Their passage to Kadesh-barnea, 19—21. Spies sent to search the land of the Amorites, 22—24. Their return and report, 25. The disobedience of the people, 26—33. God's wrath, 34—40. They smitten by the Amorites, 44. Their complaint to God, which the Lord regards not, 45.

THESE be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel^a on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against || the Red sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

These are the laws, counsels, and admonitions delivered by Moses from God to Israel, which are here repeated for the instruction and obligation of those who by reason of their tender years were incapable either of understanding them, or of entering into covenant with God. Unto all

Israel, to wit, by the heads or elders of the several tribes, or others, who were to communicate these discourses to all the people in several assemblies. In the plain; either, 1. In the vast desert of Arabia. But that is no where called a plain. Or rather, 2. In the plain of Moab, as may appear by comparing this with ver. 5; Numb. xxii. 1; Deut. xxxiv. 8. Object. That was far from the Red Sea here mentioned. Ans. The word suph here used doth not signify the Red Sea, which is commonly called jam suph, and which was at too great a distance; but some other place now unknown to us, (as also most of the following places are,) so called from the reeds, or flags, or rushes (which that word signifies) that grew in or near it; which reason of the name being common to other places with the Red Sea, it is not strange if they got the same name. Compare Numb. xxi. 14. Paran; not that Numb. x. 12, which there and elsewhere is called the wilderness of Paran, and which was too remote; but some other place called by the same name, than which nothing more usual. Tophel and Laban; places not mentioned elsewhere. Hazeroth; of which see Numb. xi. 35; xxxiii. 17, 18. And these places seem to be the several bounds and limits not of the whole country of Moab, but of the plain of Moab, where Moses now was, and spake these words.

2 (There are eleven days' journey from Horeb by the way of mount Seir unto Kadesh-barnea.)

This is added to show that the reason why the Israelites in so many years were advanced no further from Horeb than to these plains, was not the great distance of the places or length of the way, which was but a journey of eleven days at most, but because of their rebellions, as is mentioned before and repeated in this book. Horeb, or Sinai, the place where the law was given, which is promiscuously called by both those names. Mount Seir, or Mount Edom, i. e. the mountainous country of Seir, which was first possessed by the Horims, and afterwards by the Edomites, Deut. ii. 12. Kadesh-barnea was not far from the borders of Canaan. See Gen. xvi. 14; Numb. xiii. 26.

3 And it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

This was but a little before his death.

4 After he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth in Edrei:

His palace or mansion-house was at Astaroth, and he was slain at Edrei, Numb. xxi. 33; of both these places, see Gen. xiv. 5; Josh. xiii. 31.

5 On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

6 The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount:

Of Horeb, where they continued about a year's space, Exod. xix. 1; Numb. x. 11, 12.

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

To the mount of the Amorite, i. e. to the mountainous country where the Amorites dwelt, which is opposed to the plain here following, where others of them dwelt. And this is the first mentioned, because it was in the borders of the land: see below, ver. 19, 20. The divers parts or bounds of the land are here mentioned.

8 Behold, I have set the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

Before you, Heb. before your faces; it is open to your view, and to your possession; there is no impediment in the way. See of this phrase Gen. xiii. 9; xxxiv. 10.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

At that time, i. e. about that time, to wit, a little before their coming to Horeb, Exod. xviii. 18.

10 The LORD your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

Your burden; the trouble of ruling and managing so perverse a people. Your strife; either your quarrellings with God; or rather your contentions among yourselves, for the determination whereof the elders were appointed.

13 Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

Persons of knowledge, wisdom, and experience, men famous, and had in reputation, for ability and integrity; for to such they would more readily submit.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

The chief, not in authority, which yet they had not, but in endowments for good government. And officers; inferior officers, that were to attend upon the superior magistrates, and to execute their decrees.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

That converseth or dealth with him. To such God would have justice equally administered as to his own people, partly for the honour of religion, and partly for the interest which every man hath in matters of common right.

17 Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for the judgment is God's: and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

Not respect persons, Heb. not know or acknowledge faces, i. e. not give sentence according to the outward qualities of the person, as he is poor or rich, your friend or enemy, but purely according to the merits of the cause. For which reason some of the Grecian lawgivers ordered that the judges should give sentence in the dark, where they could not see men's faces. See the same or the like phrase Deut. x. 17; 2 Chron. xix. 6, 7; Job xiii. 8; James ii. 1, 9. The small; persons of the meanest rank. The judgment is God's, i. e. it is passed in the name of God, and by commission from him, by you as representing his person, and doing his work, who therefore will own and defend you therein against all your enemies, and to whom you must give an exact account.

18 And I commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.

I delivered unto you, and especially unto your judges, all the laws, statutes, and judgments revealed unto me by the Lord in Horeb.

1490. 19 ¶ And when we departed from Horeb, ^z we went through all that great and terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the LORD our God commanded us; and ^y we came to Kadesh-barnea.

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites, which the LORD our God doth give unto us.

21 Behold, the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; ^z fear not, neither be discouraged.

22 ¶ And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come.

1490. 23 And the saying pleased me well: ^a and ^a I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe:

The saying pleased me well; for there seemed to be some prudence and good policy in it: but Moses could not see into their hearts, nor from what root this desire grew; but God saw it, and therefore in just judgment complied with their desire, and permitted them to do so for their trial and exercise, Numb. xiii. 1—3.

^b 24 And ^b they turned and went up into the mountain, and came unto the valley of Eshcol, and searched it out.

The valley, or, the brook: the word signifies both, for brooks commonly run in valleys. Of Eshcol, i. e. of grapes, so called from the goodly cluster of grapes which they brought from thence, Numb. xiii. 23.

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, ^c It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.

The fruit; grapes, pomegranates, and figs, Numb. xiii. 23. It is a good land; which acknowledgment, coming from its enemies, should have prevailed with you to go in, more than their discouraging words should have beat you off, because the Lord who had given you this land, was unquestionably able to settle you in it in spite of all opposition.

^d 26 ^d Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God:

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said, Because the LORD ^e hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

Because the Lord hated us, and therefore designed to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have ⁺ discouraged our heart, saying, 'The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great and walled up to heaven; and moreover we have seen the sons of the ^g Anakims there.

The people is greater, in number and strength and valour.

Up to heaven, i. e. to a great height. A common hyperbole, as Gen. xi. 4; Psal. cvii. 26. The Anakims; the children of Anak or Enak. See Judg. i. 10, 20.

29 Then I said unto you, Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

30 ^h The LORD your God which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

Where you were weak, dispirited, divided, raw, and unexperienced, and in a great measure unarmed, and able to do nothing against your numerous, potent, united enemies, but to stand still and see the salvation of God. And therefore now your distrust is highly unreasonable, when you have been hardened and fitted for military service by your travels, disciplined and experienced in some degree as to martial affairs, encouraged by frequent and glorious miracles for forty years together, and you are going into a country divided into several nations and kingdoms.

31 And in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God ⁱ bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

God bare thee, or, carried thee, as a father carries his weak and tender child in his arms, as Isa. xlix. 22; or as upon eagles' wings, as it is Exod. xix. 4, through difficulties and dangers, gently leading you according as you were able to go, and sustaining you by his power and goodness. See of this or the like phrase Numb. xi. 12; Deut. xxxii. 10, 11; Psal. xci. 12; Isa. xli. 3, 4.

32 Yet in this thing ^k ye did not believe the LORD your God,

In this matter which God commanded and encouraged you to do, to wit, in going in confidently to possess the land. Or, in this word, whereby God promised to fight for you, and assured you of good success.

33 ^l Who went in the way before you, ^m to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to shew you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, ⁿ and sware, saying,

The voice of your words, to wit, your murmurings, your unthankful, impatient, distrustful, and rebellious speeches and carriages.

35 ^o Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers, 36 ^p Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because, ^q he hath ⁺ wholly followed the LORD.

Caleb, under whom Joshua is comprehended, as is manifest from ver. 38, and Numb. xiv. 30, though not here expressed, because he was not now to be one of the people, but to be set over them as chief governor. The land; that particular part of the land: compare Josh. xiv. 9.

37 ^r Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

For your sakes; upon occasion of your wickedness and perverseness, by which you provoked me to speak unadvisedly, Psal. cvi. 32, 33.

38 ^s But Joshua the son of Nun, ^t which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: ^u encourage him: for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

Had no knowledge between good and evil; a common description of the state of childhood, as Jonah iv. 11.

^{a Num. 14. 25.} 40 ^aBut as for you, turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

^{b Num. 14. 40.} 41 Then ye answered and said unto me, ^bWe have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

Or, ye offered yourselves, or you began, or you earnestly resolved and attempted.

^{c Num. 14. 42.} 42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, ^cGo not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

I am not among you, with my powerful presence and assistance.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and [†]went presumptuously up into the hill.

^{c Ps. 118. 12.} 44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and chased you, ^eas bees do, and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

As bees do; as bees which being provoked come out of their hives in great numbers, and with great fury pursue and sting their adversary and disturber, Psal. cxviii. 12.

45 And ye returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

^{f Num. 13. 25.} ^{g 26. 1.} ^{h 22. Judg. 11. 17.} 46 ^fSo ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

i. e. As you abode in Kadesh many, even forty days, until the spies which you sent returned to give you an account; so you also abode there many days, or a long time after, and were not now permitted to make any further progress towards Canaan.

CHAP. II.

Their march from Kadesh-barnea, 1—3. A charge that they trouble not the Edomites, 4, 5; nor the Moabites, 9; nor the Ammonites, 19. But are encouraged to fight the Amorites: they put them to flight, and take possession of their lands, 24—37.

THEN we turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, ^aas the LORD spake unto me: and we compassed mount Seir many days.

The mountainous country of Seir or Edom. Many days, or, many years, even for thirty-eight years.

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain long enough: turn you northward.

^{b See ver. 7. 14.}

Towards the land of the Amorites and Canaanites.

4 And command thou the people, saying, ^cYe are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir; and they shall be afraid of you: take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore:

Through the coast, or, by or near the coast or border; for they did not pass through their borders, as it is said, Numb. xx. 21. And the particle both doth oft signify by or near, as Gen. xxxvii. 13; Josh. v. 13; Judg. viii. 5; Jer. xxxii. 7. Thus that difference may be reconciled, which others reconcile thus, that they at first denied it, but afterwards granted it. Which dwell in Seir: these words restrain the prohibition to these particular children of Esau, for there were another sort or branch of Esau's children, which were to be meddled with and destroyed, even the Amalekites, Exod. xvii. 14; Deut. xxv. 17, who were Esau's posterity, Gen. xxxvi. 12. They shall be afraid of you; but I charge you take no advantage of their fears, which you will be very apt to do.

5 Meddle not with them; for I will not give you of their land, [†]no, not so much as a foot breadth; ^dbecause I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

Meddle not with them, to wit, in battle at this time.

6 Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

Buy meat of them; for though the manna did yet rain upon them, they were not forbidden to buy other meats when they had opportunity, but only were forbidden greedily to hunger after them when they could not obtain them. Buy water of them; for water in those parts was scarce, and therefore private persons did severally dig pits for their particular use. See Gen. xxvi. 18; Numb. xxi. 18.

7 For the LORD thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: ^ethese forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

By God's blessing thou art able to buy thy conveniences, and therefore thy theft and rapine will be inexcusable, because without any pretence of necessity. He knoweth, Heb. he hath known, i. e. observed, or regarded with care and kindness, which that word oft notes, as Psal. i. 6; xxxi. 7; which experience of God's singular goodness to thee, should make thee trust him still, and not use any indirect and unjust practices to procure what thou wantest or desirest.

8 ^fAnd when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, through the way of the plain from ^gElath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

Ezion-gaber; of which see Numb. xxxiii. 35, which may be either that place upon the Red Sea, 1 Kings ix. 26, or another of the same name. We turned, to wit, from our direct road which lay through Edom's land.

9 And the LORD said unto me, ^{||}Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given ^hAr unto ⁱthe children of Lot for a possession.

Ar, the chief city of the Moabites, Numb. xxi. 15, 28, here put for the whole country, which depended upon it. The children of Lot; so called to signify that this preservation was not for their sakes, for they were a wicked people; but for Lot's sake, whose memory God yet honours.

1. The past tense is here put for the future, will give, after the manner of the prophets. 2. Things are oft said to be done when they are only resolved, or decreed, or attempted to be done, in which sense Reuben is said to deliver Joseph, Gen. xxxvii. 21; Balak to fight against Israel, Josh. xxiv. 9; Abraham to have offered his son, Heb. xi. 17. 3. God may well be said to have given it, not only because he had purposed and promised to give it, but also because he was now about to give it, and had already given them some part of it, and that as an earnest of the whole. 4. This may be particularly understood of that part of Israel's possession which was beyond Jordan, which God had actually given to them, that is, to some of them, for even the land of Canaan on this side Jordan was not given to all of them, but only to some of the tribes.

Of the Horims, see Gen. xiv. 6; xxxvi. 20.

See Jer. xvii. 4; Amos ix. 7. Caphtor is by the learned thought to be Cappadocia; whither these people might make an expedition out of Egypt, either because of the report of the great riches of part of that country, which drew others thither from places equally remote, or after the manner of those ancient times, or for some other reason now unknown.

Object. The king of Edom, i. e. of the children of Esau, did not grant them passage, Numb. xx. Ans. They did permit them to pass quietly by the borders, though not through the heart of their land; and in their passage the people sold them meat and drink, being, it seems, more kind to them than their king would have had them; and therefore they here ascribe this favour not to the king, though they are now treating with a king, but to the people, the children of Esau.

30 ⁱ But Sihon king of Heshbon will not let us pass by him: for ^k the LORD thy God ^l hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.

By him, i. e. by his borders. Obstinate; unmovable and inexorable to our desires.

31 And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to ^m give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.

32 ⁿ Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.

33 And ^o the LORD our God delivered him before us; and ^p we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.

34 And we took all his cities at that time, and ^q utterly destroyed ^r the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain:

By God's command, these being a part of those people who were devoted by the Lord of life and death to utter destruction for their abominable wickedness. See Deut. vii. 2; xx. 16.

35 Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.

36 ^r From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us:

^s the LORD our God delivered all unto us:

Aroer was in the border of Moab, but now in the hands of the Amorites. By the river, Heb. in the river, wherewith it was encompassed, Numb. xxi. 15, 28; Josh. xii. 2; xiii. 9. He speaks exclusively, for this was Ar, which now was in the Moabites' jurisdiction, above, ver. 9.

37 Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river ^t Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto ^u whatsoever the LORD our God forbade us.

Of the river Jabbok, i. e. beyond Jabbok; for that was the border of the Ammonites, Josh. xii. 2. Object. Half the land of the Ammonites is said to be given to the tribe of Gad, Josh. xiii. 25. Answer. This is true of that half of it which the Amorites had taken from them, but not of the other half, which yet was in the possession of the Ammonites. In the mountains; the mountainous country of the Ammonites. Forbade us, Heb. commanded us: commanding is put for forbidding here, as Gen. ii. 16; iii. 11; Lev. iv. 2; Deut. iv. 23. The words may be thus rendered, concerning which the Lord gave us command or charge, to wit, that we should not meddle with them, as was said before. So it is only an ellipsis of the preposition, which is very frequent.

CHAP. III.

Their march to Bashan, 1. Og its king is put to flight; they possess his land, 2—11; which is distributed to two tribes and half, 12—17; who are commanded to assist their brethren to possess the land beyond Jordan, 18—20. Moses encourages Joshua, 21, 22. His prayer to go into the promised land, 23—25. God grants not his request, 26. He gives him a prospect of it, 27; and bids him encourage Joshua, 28.

THEN we turned, and went up the way to Bashan: and ^a Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle ^b at Edrei.

2 And the LORD said unto me, Fear him not: for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto ^c Sihon king of the Amorites, which ^d dwelt at Heshbon.

Fear him not, though he be of so frightful a look and stature, ver. 11.

3 So the LORD our God delivered into our hands ^e Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: ^f and we smote him until none was left to him remaining.

4 And we took all his cities at that time, there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, ^g all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

Argob; a province within Bashan, or at least subject and belonging to Bashan, as appears from ver. 13; 1 Kings iv. 13; called Argob possibly from the name of a man, its former lord and owner.

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars; beside unwalled towns a great many.

High walls, gates, and bars; which may encourage you in your attempt upon Canaan, notwithstanding the fenced cities which the spies told you of, and you must expect to find.

6 And we utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king ^h of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city.

7 But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves.

8 And we took at that time out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites the land that was on this side Jordan, from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon;

On this side Jordan; so it was when Moses wrote this book, but afterward, when Israel passed over Jordan, it was called the land beyond Jordan.

9 (Which ⁱ Hermon the Sidonians call ^j Sirion; and the Amorites call it ^k Shenir;)

Elsewhere called Mount Gilead, and Libanus or Lebanon, and here Shenir, and Sirion, and, by abbreviation, Sion, Deut. iv. 48; which several names are given to this one mountain, partly by several people, and partly in regard of several tops and parts of it, whence Shenir and Hermon are mentioned as distinct places, Cant. iv. 8.

10 ^l All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and ^m all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

Gilead is sometimes taken largely for all the Israelites' possessions beyond Jordan, and so it comprehends Bashan, but here more strictly for that part of it which lies in and near Mount Gilead, and so it is distinguished from Bashan and Argob.

11 ⁿ For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of ^o giants; behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron; is it not in ^p Rabbath of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.

The other giants of Bashan were destroyed before; and therefore when Og was killed, the Israelites' work was done. In Rabbath of the children of Ammon; where it might now be, either because the Ammonites in some former battle with Og had taken it as a spoil; or because after Og's death the Ammonites desired to have this monument of his greatness, and the Israelites permitted them to carry it away to their chief city. After the cubit of a man, to wit, of ordinary stature. So his bed was four yards and a half long, and two yards broad.

12 And this land, which we possessed at that time, °from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and ° the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites and to the Gadites.

13 ° And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 ° Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob ° unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi; and ° called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.

Geshuri, or Geshurites, a people towards the north of Canaan, 2 Sam. iii. 3; xv. 8. See also Josh. xiii. 13. Maachathi; of whom see 2 Sam. iii. 3; x. 6. Unto this day: this must be put among those other passages which were not written by Moses, but added by those holy men who digested the books of Moses into this order, and inserted some very few passages to accommodate things to their own time and people.

15 ° And I gave Gilead unto Machir.

i. e. The half part of Gilead, as appears from ver. 12, 13. See on Numb. xxxii. 40. Unto Machir, i. e. unto the children of Machir son of Manasseh, for Machir was now dead.

16 And unto the Reubenites ° and unto the Gadites I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon half the valley, and the border even unto the river Jabbok, ° which is the border of the children of Ammon;

Half the valley, or rather to the middle of the river; for the word rendered half signifies commonly middle; and the same Hebrew word signifying both a valley and a brook or river, it seems more reasonable to understand it of a river, as the same word is here rendered in the next foregoing clause of this verse, than of a valley, which was not mentioned before, especially seeing there is here an article added which seems to be emphatical, and to note that river, to wit, now mentioned. Add to this, that there was no such valley, much less any half valley, belonging both unto the Reubenites and Gadites. But according to the other translation the sense is plain and agreeable to the truth, that their land extended from Gilead unto Arnon, and, to speak exactly, to the middle of that river; for as that river was the border between them and others, so one half of it belonged to them, as the other half did to others. And that this is no subtle device, as some may think it, but the truth of the thing, and the real meaning of the place, will appear by comparing this place with two others: 1. With Josh. xii. 2, where the same thing is expressed in the same words in the Hebrew which are here, though our translators render the selfsame words there from the middle of the river, which here they render half of the valley; and where the bounds of Sihon's kingdom, which was the same portion here mentioned as given to Reuben and Gad, are thus described, from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river of Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half Gilead, even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon. 2. With Deut. ii. 36, From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, or rather, as the Hebrew hath it, in the river, i. e. from Ar, which was the chief city of the Moabites, and therefore denied to the Israelites, as is here implied, and more fully expressed, Deut. ii. 9, which city was seated in an island in the middle of the river. So that here we have a just and full reason why the border of this land given to Reuben and Gad is so nicely and critically described here, even to the middle of a river, which although in truth and strictness it be the bound of those lands which are divided by a river, yet is not usually expressed in the description of borders, either in Scripture or other authors, because here was an eminent city of the Moabites in the middle of this river, which by this curious and exact description is excepted from their possession, as God would have it to be. And the border even unto the river Jabbok: the meaning seems to be this, and the border, to wit, of their land, was, which verb substantive is commonly understood, or went forth, (as the phrase is, Josh. xv. 6, 7, &c.,) from thence, to wit, from the river Arnon, even unto the river Jabbok, for so indeed their border did proceed. Which is the border of the children of Ammon. Object. This was the border between them and the Manassites, as is evident, and therefore not the border of the Ammonites. Answer. It bordered upon the Manassites in one part, and upon the Ammonites in another part, to wit, in that part which is remoter from Jordan, and so both are true.

17 The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from ° Chinnereth ° even unto the sea of the plain, ° even the salt sea, || under Ashdoth-pisgah eastward.

The plain; the low country towards Jordan. Chinnereth; of which see on Numb. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xii. 3. The sea of the plain, i. e. that salt sea, as it here follows, which before that dreadful conflagration was a goodly plain, called the plain of Jordan, Gen. xiii. 10. Ashdoth-pisgah; the proper name of a city, of which Josh. xiii. 20.

18 ¶ And I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you this land to possess it: ° ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are † meet for the war.

I commanded you, to wit, the Reubenites and Gadites, mentioned ver. 16, to whom he now turns his speech by an apostrophe. Meet for the war; in such number as your brethren shall judge necessary. See Josh. i. 14; iv. 13.

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle,) shall abide in your cities which I have given you;

20 Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye ° return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

Rest; a peaceable and fixed possession. 21 ¶ And ° I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye shall not fear them: for ° the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

23 And ° I besought the LORD at that time, saying,

24 O LORD God, thou hast begun to shew thy servant ° thy greatness, and thy mighty hand: for ° what God is there in heaven or in earth, that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee, let me go over, and see ° the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.

For he supposed God's threatening might be conditional and reversible, as many others were. That goodly mountain, or, that blessed mountain, which the Jews not improbably understand of that mountain on which the temple was to be built. For as Moses desired and determined to prepare an habitation for God, Exod. xv. 2, and knew very well that God would choose a certain place for his habitation, and to put his name there, Deut. xii. 5; so he also knew that it was the manner both of the true worshippers of God and of idolaters to worship their God in high places, and particularly that Abraham did worship God in the mount of Moriah, Gen. xxii. 2, and therefore did either reasonably conjecture that God would choose some certain mountain for the place of his habitation, or possibly understood by revelation that in that very mount of Moriah, where Abraham performed that eminent and glorious act of worship, there also the children of Abraham should have their place of constant and settled worship. This he seems to call that mountain, emphatically and eminently, that which was much in Moses's thoughts, though not in his eye, and the blessed (as the Hebrew to oft signifies) or the goodly mountain. Or, the mountain may be here put for the mountainous countries, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xxxvi. 9; Numb. xiii. 29; xxxiii. 7; Deut. i. 7; Josh. x. 6; xi. 16, 21, &c. And it is known that a great part of the glory and beauty and profit of this country lay in its hills or mountains. See Deut. xi. 11; xxxiii. 15. And that goodly mountain may by an enallage of the number be put for those goodly mountains in Canaan, which were many. Thus also he proceeds gradually in this desire and description, and prays that he may see in general the good land that is beyond Jordan, and then particularly the goodly mountains of it, and especially that famous mount of Lebanon, which was so celebrated for its tall and large cedars, and other trees and excellent plants. See Psal. xxix. 5; civ. 16; Isa. ii. 13; xiv. 8.

26 But the LORD ^kwas wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

For your sakes; by occasion of your sins, which provoked me to unadvised words and carriage, Psal. cvi. 32, 33. See Numb. xx. 12; Deut. xxxi. 2; xxxiv. 4. Let it suffice thee that this is my pleasure and unalterable resolution. Compare 2 Cor. xii. 8, 9.

27 ^lGet thee up into the top of || Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

Pisgah; of which see on Numb. xxvii. 12. Lift up thine eyes towards the land of Canaan and its several quarters.

28 But ^mcharge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

Charge Joshua; give him commission and authority, and a command to execute his trust, and conduct the people. Strengthen him with exhortations and promises, and assurances of my presence and help, and of good success. He shall go over: it was not Moses, but Joshua or Jesus, that was to give the people rest, Heb. iv. 8.

29 So we abode in ⁿthe valley over against Beth-peor.

The house or temple of Peor, or of Baal-peor, of which see Numb. xxv. 3, whence this place or city had its name.

CHAP. IV.

An exhortation to obey the law, 1—13; and warning against idolatry, 14—24; from the mischief of it upon themselves and children, 25—28; God's promise upon their repentance, 29—31; and from God's wonders towards them, 32—40. Cities of refuge are appointed, 41—43.

NOW therefore hearken, O Israel, unto ^athe statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

The statutes; the laws which concern the worship and service of God. The judgments; the laws concerning your duties to men. So these two comprehend both tables, and the whole law of God.

2 ^bYe shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

Ye shall not add, by devising other doctrines or ways of worship than what I have taught or prescribed; see Numb. xv. 39, 40; Deut. xii. 8, 32; 1 Kings xii. 33; Prov. xxx. 6; Matt. xv. 9; for this were to accuse me of want of wisdom or care or faithfulness in not giving you sufficient instructions for my own service. Neither shall ye diminish, by rejecting or neglecting any thing which I have commanded, though it seem never so small.

3 Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of ^cBaal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for this ^dis your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

For though the generality of heathen people in the latter and degenerate ages of the world, did, through inveterate prejudices, and for their own lusts and interest, condemn the laws of the Hebrews as foolish and absurd, yet it is most certain that divers of the wisest heathens did highly approve of them, so far that they made use of divers of them, and translated them into their own laws and constitutions; and Moses, the giver of these laws, hath been mentioned with great honour for his wisdom and learning by many of them. And particularly the old heathen oracle expressly said, that the Chaldeans or Hebrews, who worshipped the uncreated God, were the only wise men.

7 For ^ewhat nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

God nigh unto them, by glorious miracles, by the pledges of his special presence, by the operations of his grace, and particularly, as it here follows, by his readiness to hear our prayers, and to give us those succours which we call upon him for.

8 And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

Whereby he implies that the true greatness of a nation doth not consist in pomp or power, or largeness of empire, as commonly men think, but in the righteousness of its laws.

9 Only take heed to thyself, and ^gkeep thy soul diligently, ^hlest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but ⁱteach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons;

10 Specially ^h the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

Some of them stood in Horeb in their own persons, though then they were but young; the rest stood then in the loins of their parents, in whom they may well be said to stand there, because they are said to have entered into covenant with God, because their parents did so in their name and for their use.

11 And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the ^l mountain burned with fire unto the ^m midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

Flaming up into the air, which is oft called heaven; and the midst or the heart of it is not only that which is strictly and properly the middle part, but that which is within it, though but a little way, in which sense places or persons or things are said to be in the heart of the sea, Exod. xv. 8; Prov. xxiii. 34; Ezek. xxviii. 2; and Christ in the heart of the earth, Matt. xii. 40.

12 ⁿ And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ^o ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; ^p only ye heard a voice.

i. e. No resemblance or representation of God, whereby either his essence or properties or actions were represented, such as were usual among the heathens.

13 ^q And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ^r ten commandments; and ^s he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 ¶ And ^t the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

Statutes and judgments, i. e. the ceremonial and judicial laws, which are here distinguished from the moral, or the ten commandments, ver. 13.

15 ^u Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of ^v similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire:

By which caution he insinuates man's great proneness to the worship of images.

God, who in other places and times did appear in a similitude, in the fashion of a man, now in this most solemn appearance, when he comes to give eternal laws for the regulation and direction of the Israelites in the worship of God, and in their duty to men, he purposely avoids all such representations, to show that he abhors all worship of images, or of himself by images of what kind soever, as it here follows, ver. 16—19, because he is the invisible God, and cannot be represented by any visible image. See Isa. xl. 18; Acts xvii. 29.

16 Lest ye ^w corrupt yourselves, and ^x make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, ^y the likeness of male or female,

i. e. Lest ye corrupt your minds with mean and carnal thoughts of God. Or, corrupt your ways or courses, by worshipping God in a corrupt manner, or by falling into idolatry. A graven image, to wit, for worship, or for the representation of God, as it is explained ver. 19, for otherwise it was not simply unlawful to draw the picture or make a figure of a man or a beast.

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

Whereby the heathen nations did represent and worship God, some by an ox, some by a goat, or a hen, or a serpent, or a fish, &c.

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:

19 And lest thou ^z lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even ^{aa} all the host of heaven, shouldst be driven to ^{ab} worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath ^{ac} divided unto ^{ad} all nations under the whole heaven.

Driven to worship them, i. e. strongly inclined, and in a manner constrained, partly by the glory of these heavenly bodies, which may seem to be made for higher purposes than to enlighten this lump of earth; partly from that natural propensity which is in men to idolatry. Or, shouldst be driven or thrust, to wit, out of the way of the LORD, (as it is more fully expressed, Deut. xiii. 5,) or be seduced, or led aside, as silly sheep easily are, and worship them. Or, shouldst be cast down, or throw down thyself and worship them, i. e. worship them by falling down before them.

Unto all nations, which are not gods, but creatures, made not for the worship, but for the use of men, yea, of the meanest and most barbarous people under heaven, and therefore cannot without great absurdity be worshipped, especially by you who are so much advanced above other nations in wisdom and knowledge, and in this, that you are my peculiar people.

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and ^{ae} brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even ^{af} out of Egypt, ^{ag} to be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

i. e. The furnace wherein iron and other metals are melted, to which Egypt is fitly compared, not only for the torment and misery which they there endured, but also because they were thoroughly tried and purged thereby, as metals are by the fire. A people of inheritance; his peculiar possession from generation to generation. See Exod. xix. 5; Deut. vii. 6; Tit. ii. 14. And therefore for you to forsake God, and worship idols, will be not only wickedness and madness, but most abominable ingratitude.

21 Furthermore ^{ah} the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance:

God hath granted you the favour which he denied to me, which greatly increaseth your obligation to God.

22 But ^{ai} I must die in this land, but ye shall go over, and possess ^{aj} that good land.

23 Take heed unto yourselves, ^{ak} lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, ^{al} and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

Or, commanded thee, to wit, not to do, which is easily understood by comparing this place with Exod. xx. 4, 5, and with Gen. iii. 11, where this phrase is fully expressed. See more on Lev. iv. 2; Deut. ii. 37.

24 For ^{am} the LORD thy God is a consuming fire, even ^{an} a jealous God.

A consuming fire; a just and terrible God, who, notwithstanding his special relation to thee, will severely punish and destroy thee, if thou provokest him by idolatry, or other ways. A jealous God, who being espoused to thee, will be highly incensed against thee, (if thou followest after other lovers, or committest whoredom with idols,) and will bear no rival or partner.

25 ¶ When thou shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and °shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and shall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger :

In the sight of the Lord: these words are here added, either, 1. As a caution. Your idolatry, though possibly secretly and cunningly managed, will not be hid from him; he sees it, and he will punish it. Or, 2. To aggravate their spiritual whoredom, as being committed in the sight and presence of their Lord and Husband, whose eye is more peculiarly upon them in all their ways, than it is upon other people. Or, 3. By way of opposition unto men's judgment. Idolatry oftentimes seems good, and reasonable, and religious in the eyes of men, but, saith he, it is evil in the eyes of the Lord, whose judgment is most considerable.

26 ¶ I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

Heaven and earth; either, 1. Figuratively, i. e. God, and angels, and men. Or rather, 2. Properly; it being usual in Scripture to call in the senseless creatures as witnesses in such cases, as Deut. xxxii. 1; Isa. i. 2; Jer. ii. 12.

27 And the LORD shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the LORD shall lead you.

28 And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

i. e. Idols. You shall be compelled by men, and given up by me to idolatry. So that very thing which was your choice shall be your punishment; it being just and usual for God to punish one sin by giving them up to another, as is manifest from Rom. i. 24, 25.

29 ¶ But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

If thou seek him; if thou desirest his help and favour. See Deut. xxx. 2; Isa. lv. 6. With all thy heart, i. e. sincerely and fervently.

30 When thou art in tribulation, and all these things †are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice;

In the latter days; either in general, in succeeding ages and generations; or particularly, in the days of the Messias, which are commonly called in Scripture the latter, or last days, as Isa. ii. 2; Hos. iii. 5; Micah iv. 1; Dan. ii. 44; Heb. i. 2; ix. 26. And so this may respect the conversion and redemption of the Jewish nation even in those times when their case seems most desperate, when they have forsaken their God and rejected their Messias for many ages, to wit, towards the end of the world.

31 (For the LORD thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them.

i. e. Made with thy fathers, including their posterity, as Gen. xvii. 7.

32 For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

From the one side of heaven, i. e. of the earth under heaven. Ask all the inhabitants of the world. Compare Matt. xxiv. 31, with Mark xiii. 27.

33 Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

i. e. And was not overwhelmed and consumed by such a glorious appearance. See Exod. xxiv. 11; xxxiii. 20

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

By temptations; by tribulations and persecutions, which are commonly called temptations, which are here fitly mentioned as one great occasion first of their cries unto God, and then of God's coming for their rescue. Or, temptations is the general title, which is explained by the following particulars, signs and wonders, &c., which are called temptations, because they were trials both to the Egyptians and Israelites, whether thereby they would be induced to believe and obey God or no. Great terrors, raised in the minds of the Egyptians, as the history sheweth; compare Deut. ii. 25; xxxiv. 12; or by terrible things done among them.

35 Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him.

36 Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire; and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

Out of heaven, i. e. out of the air, above Mount Sinai. See Exod. xix. 9; xx. 18, 22. Upon earth; at the top of Mount Sinai.

37 And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt;

In his sight; keeping his eye fixed upon him, as the father doth on his beloved child. Or, with his presence, i. e. he did not send them forth by Moses, but he himself was present with them, and as it were marched along with them, in the pillar of cloud and fire.

38 To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

40 Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.

made with all that are now alive, which is most true, for it was made with the elder sort of them in their own persons, and with the rest in their parents, who did covenant for them; for this phrase, with us, is put exclusively as to their fathers, but not as to their posterity, as is evident from the nature of the covenant, Acts ii. 39, and course of the story.

Not in a visible shape, which was utterly denied, Deut. iv. 12, 15; but personally and immediately, not by the mouth or ministry of Moses; plainly and certainly, as when two men talk face to face; freely and familiarly, so as not to overwhelm and confound you. The ten commandments, delivered Exod. xx., are here repeated with some small difference of words, but the sense is perfectly the same, and therefore the explication of them must be fetched thence.

7 ^g Thou shalt have none other gods before me. g Ex. 20. 3.

8 ^h Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth: h Ex. 20. 4.

9 Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, ⁱ visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, i Ex. 34. 7.

10 ^k And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments. k Jer. 32. 18. Dan. 9. 4.

11 ^l Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain: for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. l Ex. 20. 7. Lev. 19. 12. Matt. 5. 33.

12 ^m Keep the sabbath day to sanctify it, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee. m Ex. 20. 8.

Keep the sabbath day, to wit, in mind and memory, as it is Exod. xx. 8. As God hath commanded thee, to wit, in Exod. xx., whither he directs them, and therefore he here omits the argument of the creation, which is urged there.

13 ⁿ Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work: n Ex. 23. 12. & 35. 2. Ezek. 20. 12.

14 But the seventh day is the ^o sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou. o Gen. 2. 2. Ex. 16. 29. 30. Heb. 4. 4.

CHAP. V.

God, upon Mount Horeb, makes a covenant with Israel, 1—5. The covenant or ten commandments is delivered to Moses in two tables, 6—22. The Israelites desire that not God, but Moses, may speak to them, 23—27; which God approves of, 28—31. Moses exhorts them to obedience, with a promise of life, 32, 33.

AND Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and ⁺ keep, and do them.

Moses called all Israel, to wit, by their elders, who were to impart it to the rest.

2 ^a The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD ^b made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.

With our fathers; either, 1. Not only with them, the word only being here understood, as it is Gen. xxxii. 28; xxxv. 10; 1 Sam. viii. 7; Jer. vii. 19; xxxi. 34; Matt. ix. 13. Or, 2. Not at all with them. But then the word covenant is not here to be taken for the covenant of grace in general, for so it was made with their fathers, Exod. ii. 24, but for this particular and mixed dispensation of the covenant at Sinai, as appears both by the foregoing and following words. All of us here alive this day: he saith not, that all who made that covenant at Sinai are now alive, for many of them were dead, but that this covenant was

These words the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And ^ahe wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

CHAP. VI.

The end of the commandment, obedience, 1, 2. He exhorts them thereto, 3. The unity of the Divine essence asserted, 4. The duty required of the Israelites, 5; to love God, 5, 6; and teach their children, 7; to use signs, as memorials of it, 8, 9. Not to forget God in prosperity, 10—12. Not to worship other gods, 13—15. Not to tempt God, 16; but keep his commandments, 17; and to transmit the knowledge of God's works to their posterity, 20—25.

NOW these are ^athe commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye ^bgo to possess it:

the days of thy life; *and that thy days may be prolonged.

That thou mightest fear the Lord, which he hereby implies to be the first principle of true obedience.

3 ¶ Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it: that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, ^das the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in * the land that floweth with milk and honey.

4 'Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD:

One in essence, and the only object of our worship.

5 And ^ethou shalt love the LORD thy God *with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

Now he shows another spring or principle of sincere obedience to God, even hearty love to God, which will make his work and service easy; and that the fear he mentioned before, ver. 2, was such as would consist with love to God, and not that slavish fear and honour which produceth hatred.

6 And ⁱthese words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

i. e. In thy mind to remember them, and meditate upon them, and in thy affection to love and pursue them.

7 And *thou shalt †teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

Teach them diligently, Heb. whet, or sharpen them, so as they may pierce deep into their hearts. This metaphor signifies the manner of instructing them, that it is to be done diligently, earnestly, frequently, discreetly, and dexterously.

8 ⁱAnd thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

Thou shalt give all diligence, and use all means, to keep them in thy remembrance, as men oftentimes bind something upon their hands, or put it before their eyes, to prevent forgetfulness of a thing which they much desire to remember: compare Prov. iii. 3; vi. 21; vii. 3. See the notes on Exod. xiii. 16.

9 ^mAnd thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

10 And it shall be, when the LORD thy God shall have brought thee into the land which he sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, ⁿwhich thou buildedst not,

11 And houses full of all good things, which thou filledst not, and wells digged, which thou diggedst not, vineyards and olive trees, which thou plantedst not; ^owhen thou shalt have eaten and be full;

12 Then beware lest thou forget the LORD, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of †bondage.

13 Thou shalt ^pfear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and ^qshalt swear by his name.

When thou hast a call and just cause to swear. By his name, understand only, as Deut. v. 2, not by idols, or any creatures.

14 Ye shall not ^rgo after other gods, *of the gods of the people which are round about you;

15 (For 'the LORD thy God is a jealous God among you) ^tlest the anger of the LORD thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth.

Among you, Heb. in the midst of you, to see and observe all your ways and your turnings aside to other gods.

16 ¶ ^uYe shall not tempt the LORD your God, ^vas ye tempted him in Massah.

i. e. Not provoke him, as the following instance explains. Sinners, especially presumptuous sinners, are oft said to tempt God, i. e. to make a trial of God, whether he be what he pretends to be, so wise as to see their sins, so just and true and powerful as to take vengeance on them for their sins, concerning which they are very apt to doubt because of the present impunity and prosperity of many such persons. See Numb. xiv. 22; Psal. lxxviii. 18; Matt. iv. 7; Acts v. 9.

17 Ye shall ^wdiligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee.

18 And thou ^xshalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the LORD: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers,

Not that which is right in thine own eyes, as many superstitious and sinful practices seem right and good to evil-minded men. Let God's will and word, and not thine own fancy or invention, be thy rule in God's service. Good actions are oft said to be right in God's sight, as Jer. xxxiv. 15; Acts iv. 19; and evil actions are oft said to be right in our own eyes, as Deut. xii. 8; Judg. xvii. 6.

19 ^yTo cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.

20 ^zAnd ^{aa}when thy son asketh thee †in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD our God hath commanded you?

21 Then thou shalt say unto thy son, We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt; and the LORD brought us out of Egypt ^{ab}with a mighty hand:

22 ^{ac}And the LORD shewed signs and wonders, great and †sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes:

23 And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.

24 And the LORD commanded us to do all these statutes, ^{ad}'to fear the LORD our God, ^{ae}for our good always, that ^{af}he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day.

The benefit of obedience is ours, not God's, Job xxxv. 7, and therefore our obedience is highly reasonable, and absolutely necessary.

25 And ^{ag}'it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

Heb. righteousness shall be to us. We shall be owned and pronounced by God to be truly righteous and holy persons, if we sincerely obey him, otherwise we shall be declared to be unrighteous and ungodly persons, and all our profession of religion will appear to be in hypocrisy. Or, mercy shall be to us, or with us. For as the Hebrew word rendered righteousness is very oft put for mercy, as Psal. xxiv. 5; xxxvi. 10; li. 14; Prov. x. 2; xi. 4; Dan. ix. 16, &c.; so this sense seems best to agree both with the Scripture use of this phrase, in which righteousness, seldom or never, to my remembrance, but grace or mercy frequently, is said to be to us or with us, as 2 Sam. xv. 20; Psal. lxxxix. 24; Prov. xiv. 22; Gal. vi. 16; 2 John 3; and with the foregoing verse and argument, God, saith he, ver. 24, commanded these things for our good, that he might preserve us alive, as it is this day. And, saith he in this verse, this is not all; for as he hath done us good, so he will go on to do us more and more good, and God's mercy shall be to us, or with us, in the remainder of our lives, and for ever, if we observe, &c.

CHAP. VII.

Israel is commanded to cast out the Hittites, the Perizzites, &c., 1. All communion with them forbidden, 2, 3, for fear of idolatry, 4. They must ruin the places of idolatry, 5. The Israelites' holiness and relation to God, 6. His faithfulness to the obedient, 9; and vengeance on them that hate him, 10. The advantages of obedience, 12—16. God encourages them, and promises to drive out the nations before them, 17—24. They are commanded to destroy their images, 25; and keep themselves clean from their cursed things, 26.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Gishgites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;

There were ten in Gen. xv. 19—21; but this being some hundreds of years after that, it is not strange if three of them were either destroyed by foreign or domestic wars, or by cohabitation and marriage united with and swallowed up in some of the rest.

2 And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them:

No covenant with them, to spare them, or permit them to dwell with thee in the land. Other nations had more favour, but these were for their great wickedness, and for the good of Israel, devoted to utter destruction.

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

i. e. There is manifest danger of apostacy and idolatry from such matches; which reason doth both limit the law to such of these as were unconverted, otherwise Salmon married Rahab, Matt. i. 5, and enlarge it to other idolatrous nations, as appears from 1 Kings xi. 2; Ezra ix. 2; Neh. xiii. 23.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

Idolaters planted groves about the temples and altars of their gods. Hereby God designed to take away whatsoever might bring their idolatry to remembrance, or occasion the reviving of it.

6 For thou art a holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people:

To wit, at that time when God first declared his love to you, and choice of you for his peculiar people, which was done to Abraham. For Abraham had but one son concerned in this choice and covenant, to wit, Isaac, and that was in his hundredth year; and Isaac was sixty years old ere he had a child, and then they had only two children; and though Jacob had twelve sons, yet it was a long time ere they made any considerable increase. Nor do we read of any great multiplication of them till after Joseph's death, Exod. i. 6, 7.

8 But because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

Because the LORD loved you, i. e. because it pleased him to love you; it was his free choice, without any cause or motive on your part. Compare Deut. x. 15; 1 Sam. xii. 22; Psal. xlii. 3.

9 Know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments to a thousand generations;

The faithful God; true to his word, and constant in performing all his promises.

10 And repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

Them that hate him; not only those who hate him directly and properly, (forso did few or none of the Israelites, to whom he here speaks,) but those who hate him by construction and consequence; those who hate and oppose his people, and word, and image, those who presumptuously and wilfully persist in the breach of God's commandments, as appears from ver. 9, where the love of God, to which this hatred is opposite, is described and expressed by the keeping of his commandments. To their face, i. e. openly, and so as they shall see it, and not be able to avoid it. He will not be slack, to wit, so as some men count slackness, 2 Pet. iii. 9, so as to delay it beyond the fit time or season for vengeance; yet without he is long-suffering, and slow to anger, as that and other places inform us.

11 Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he sware unto thy fathers:

i. e. The covenant of mercy or grace, which he out of 13 And he will [†]love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: [‡]he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

He will love thee; he will continue to love thee, and to manifest his love to thee, he will not repent of his love to thee.

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: ^athere shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the ^bevil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

The evil diseases of Egypt; such as the Egyptians were infested with, either commonly, as that botch, Deut. xxviii. 27; or miraculously and extraordinarily, from the hand of the Lord, as Exod. ix. 10, 15. Compare Exod. xxiii. 25; Psal. cv. 37.

16 And ^cthou shalt consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; ^dthine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be ^ea snare unto thee.

An occasion of sin and utter destruction. See Exod. xxiii. 33; xxxiv. 12; Judg. ii. 3.

17 If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I ^fdispossess them?

18 ^gThou shalt not be afraid of them: ^hbut shalt well ⁱremember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt;

Well remember, Heb. remembering remember, i. e. remember it frequently, considerably, practically, and for thy encouragement; for men are said to forget those things which they do not remember to good purpose.

19 ^jThe great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out: so shall the LORD thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

The great temptations; the trials and exercises of thy faith and obedience to my call and commands. So shall the Lord do; so as he did to Pharaoh and his people, mentioned ver. 18.

20 ^kMoreover the LORD thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

The hornet; of which see on Exod. xxiii. 28.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is ^lamong you, ^ma mighty God and terrible.

22 ⁿAnd the LORD thy God will [†]put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

Or, thou shalt not be able to consume them at once, i. e.

in an instant. I will not assist thee with my omnipotency, to crush them in a moment, but will bless thee in the use of ordinary means, and destroy them successively by several battles.

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them [†]unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

Where are mines of iron in a manner as plentiful as stones, and upon which travellers must tread, as in other parts they do upon stones; and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass, to wit, in great plenty. These are mentioned, because they had none such in Egypt whence they came.

i. e. Solemnly praise him for thy food; which is a debt both of gratitude and justice, because it is from his providence and favour that thou receivest both thy food and refreshment and strength by it. The more unworthy and absurd is that too common profaneness of them, who, professing to believe a God and his providence, from whom all their comforts come, grudge to own him at their meals, either by desiring his blessing before them, or by offering due praise to God after them.

11 Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

That he might humble thee, by keeping thee in a constant dependence upon him for every day's food, and convincing thee what an impotent, helpless, and beggarly creature thou art in thyself, having nothing whereon to subsist, but from hand to mouth, and being supported wholly by the alms of Divine goodness given to thee from day to day. The mercies of God, if duly considered, are as powerful an argument or mean to humble us as the greatest afflictions, because they increase our debts to God, and manifest our dependence upon him, and insufficiency without him; and by making God great, they make us little in our own eyes; though this clause, as well as that which follows, may have respect to their afflictions, mentioned ver. 15. At thy latter end, i. e. that after he hath purged and prepared thee by afflictions, he may give thee, and thou mayst receive and enjoy, his blessings with less disadvantage, whilst by the remembrance of former afflictions thou art made thankful for them, and more cautious not to abuse and forfeit them again.

CHAP. IX.

Israel's march over Jordan to possess Canaan, 1—3. But must not ascribe it to their own righteousness, 4—6. A rehearsal of their manifold provocations at Horeb, 8, at Taberah, 22, and at Kadesh-barnea, 23.

HEAR, O Israel: Thou art to ^apass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations ^bgreater and mightier than thyself, cities great and ^cfenced up to heaven,

This day, i. e. shortly, within a little time, the word day being oft put for time, as John viii. 56; 1 Cor. iv. 5; Rev. xvi. 14, within two months; for Moses spake this on the first day of the eleventh month, Deut. i. 3, and they passed over Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, Josh. iv. 19. Nations, i. e. the land of those nations; for that only they were to possess, but as for the nations or people they were not to possess, but to destroy them. Thus they are said to inherit God, Jer. xlix. 1, i. e. the country and cities of God, as it is there explained. Greater and mightier than thyself: this he adds, partly that they might not be surprised when they find them to be such; partly that they might not trust to their own strength, but wholly rely upon God's help, for the destroying of them, and, after the work was done, might ascribe the praise and glory of it to God alone, and not to themselves. Fenced up to heaven, as the spies reported, Deut. i. 28. See on Gen. xi. 4.

2 A people great and tall, ^d the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak!

Either from the spies, or rather from common fame, for this seems to be a proverb used in those times.

3 Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which ^e goeth over before thee; as a ^f consuming fire ^g he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: ^h so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

Quickly; without great difficulty or long wars.

4 ⁱ Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land: but ^k for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 ^l Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform ^m the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Neither for thy upright heart, nor holy life, which are the two things which God above all things regards, 1 Chron. xxix. 17; Psal. xv. 1, 2; and consequently he excludes all merit. And surely they who did not deserve this earthly Canaan, could not merit the kingdom of glory. That he may perform the word which he sware; to show my faithfulness in accomplishing that promise which I graciously made and confirmed with my oath. By which words it is implied, that this land was not given to them for the righteousness of their fathers, though they were righteous and holy persons, and much less for their own righteousness, which they had not, as it follows.

6 Understand therefore, that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art ⁿ a stiffnecked people.

Rebellious and perverse, and so destitute of all pretence of righteousness; such were the people, but there were divers particular persons amongst them truly righteous and holy, and yet even their righteousness is denied to be the procuring cause of this land.

7 ¶ Remember, and forget not, how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: ^o from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also ^p in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you to have destroyed you.

When your miraculous deliverance out of Egypt was fresh in memory; when God had but newly manifested himself to you in so stupendous and dreadful a manner, and had taken you into covenant with himself; when God was actually conferring further mercies upon you.

9 ^q When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then ^r I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water:

i. e. I wholly abstained from all meat and drink. Compare 1 Kings xiii. 8, 9, 17; 2 Kings vi. 22.

10 ^s And the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words, which the LORD spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire ^t in the day of the assembly.

Immediately and miraculously, which was done not only to procure the greater reverence to the law, but also to signify that it was the work of God alone to write this law upon the tables of men's hearts. See Jer. xxxi. 33; 2 Cor. iii. 3, 7. In the day of the assembly, i. e. when the people were gathered by God's command to the bottom of Mount Sinai, to hear and receive God's ten commandments from his own mouth.

11 And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, ^u Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are ^x quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore ^y the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and behold, ^z it is a stiffnecked people:

14 ^a Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and ^b blot out their name from under heaven: ^c and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

Let me alone; stop not the course of my fury by thy intervention.

15 ^d So I turned and came down from the mount, and ^e the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And ^f I looked, and behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.

Not by an unbridled passion, but in zeal for God's honour, and by the direction of God's Spirit, to signify to the people, that the covenant between God and them contained in those tables was broken and made void, and they were now quite cast out of God's favour, and could expect nothing from him but fiery indignation and severe justice. See on Exod. xxxii. 19.

18 And I ^g fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread, nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

I fell down, in way of humiliation and supplication, on your behalf.

19 ^hFor I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you. ⁱBut the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

The Lord was very angry with Aaron, though he was only accessory, as being persuaded, and in a manner compelled, to comply with your desire.

21 And ^kI took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust: and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

Your sin, i. e. the object and matter of your sin, as sin is taken Isa. xxxi. 7. I cast the dust thereof into the brook, that there might be no monument or remembrance of it left.

22 And at ^lTaberah, and ^mat Massah, and at ⁿKibroth-hattaavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath.

23 Likewise ^owhen the LORD sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ^pye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 ^qYe have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

25 ^rThus I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

Forty days and forty nights; the same mentioned before, ver. 18, as appears, 1. By comparing this with Exodus, where this history is more fully related, and where this is said to be done twice only. 2. By the occasion and matter of Moses's prayer here following, which is the same with the former. 3. By the words here following, as I fell down at first, which show that this was the second time of his so doing.

26 ^sI prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

Through thy greatness, i. e. through the greatness of thy power, which appeared most eminently in that work, as is noted, ver. 29.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin:

Thy servants, i. e. the promise made and sworn to thy servants, which was mentioned above, ver. 5.

28 Lest ^tthe land whence thou broughtest us out say, "Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 ^xYet they are thy people and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm.

Thy people, whom thou hast chosen to thyself out of all mankind, and publicly owned them for thine, and hast purchased and redeemed them from the Egyptians.

CHAP. X.

Moses repeats God's mercies in restoring the two tables, 1—5. Aaron's death. Eleazar his son officiates in his stead, 6. The tribe of Levi is separated for the priesthood, 8, 9. God hearkening to Moses not to destroy them, 10; he is commanded to lead them towards Canaan, 11. God requires their obedience, 12—15. To circumcise their hearts, 16, 17. To help the fatherless and widow, 18. To love strangers, 19. To fear and serve the Lord for his mercies towards them, 20—22.

AT that time the LORD said unto me, ^{1491.} ^aHew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and ^bmake thee an ark of wood.

At that time, when God was newly appeased by my intercession. An ark of wood; either a temporary ark for this use, till the other was finished; or the famous ark, as may seem by comparing this with ver. 5. It is not evident in what order these things were done, nor is it strange if Moses in this short and general relation neglect the order of time, as being nothing to his present purpose.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest, and ^cthou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And I made an ark of ^dshittim wood, and ^ehewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And ^fhe wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten [†]commandments, ^gwhich the LORD spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire ^hin the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And I turned myself and ⁱcame down from the mount, and ^kput the tables in the ark which I had made; ^land there they be, as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth ^mof the children of Jaakan to ⁿMosera: ^othere Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

This following history comes in manifestly by way of parenthesis, as may appear from ver. 10, where he returns to his former discourse; and it seems to be here inserted, either, 1. Because the priests and Levites here mentioned were the guardians and keepers of the ark and tables here mentioned. Or rather, 2. As an evidence of God's gracious answer to Moses's prayers, and of his reconciliation to the people, notwithstanding their late and great provocation. For, saith he, after this they proceeded by God's guidance in their journeys, some eminent stages whereof he names for all; and though Aaron died in one of them, yet God made up that breach, and Eleazar came in his place, and ministered as priest, one branch of which office was to intercede for the people. Then, saith he, God brought them from the barren parts of the wilderness to a land of rivers of waters, ver. 7, a pleasant and fruitful soil. Then he adds, God separated the Levites, &c., ver. 8. Mosera. Object. This place seems directly contrary to that, Numb. xxxiii.

31, where their journey is quite contrary to this, even from Moseroth to Bene-jaakan. This indeed is a great difficulty, and profane wits take occasion to cavil. And if a satisfactory answer be not yet given to it by interpreters, it ought not therefore to be concluded unanswerable, because many things formerly thought unanswerable have been since fully cleared, and therefore the like may be presumed concerning other doubts yet remaining. And it were much more reasonable to acknowledge here a transposition of the words through the scribe's mistake, than upon such a pretence to reject the Divine authority of those sacred books, which hath been confirmed by such irresistible arguments. But there is no need of these general pleas, seeing particular answers are and may be given to this difficulty sufficient to satisfy modest and impartial inquirers. Answo. 1. The places here mentioned are differing from those, Numb. xxxiii., it being very frequent in Scripture for diverse persons and places to be called by the same names, and yet the names are not wholly the same; for there it is Bene-jaakan, and here Beeroth bene-jaakan, or Beeroth of the children of Jaakan; there Moseroth, here Mosera; there Hor-hagidgad, here Gudgodah; there Jotbathah, here Jotbath. If the places were the same, it may justly seem strange why Moses should so industriously make a change in every one of the names. And therefore these may be other stations, which being omitted in Numb. xxxiii., are supplied here, it being usual in sacred Scripture to supply the defects of one place out of another. Answo. 2. Admitting these two places to be the same with those Numb. xxxiii. 31, yet the journeys are diverse. They went from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera, which is omitted in Numbers, and therefore here supplied; and then back again from Mosera or Moseroth to Bene-jaakan, as is there said; for which return there might then be some sufficient reason, though now unknown to us, as the reasons of many such like things are: or God might order it so for his own pleasure, and it is not impossible he might do it for this reason, that by this seeming contradiction, as well as some others, he might in just judgment do what he threatened to the Jews, Jer. vi. 21, even lay stumbling-blocks before profane and proud wits, and give them that occasion of deceiving and ruining themselves, which they so greedily seek and gladly embrace; which is the reason given by some of the ancients why God hath left so many difficulties in Scripture. Answo. 3. The words may be otherwise rendered, from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan, and from Mosera; where the order of the places is not observed, as was noted before of the order of time, ver. 1, because it was nothing to the purpose here, and because that might be easily fetched from Numb. xxxiii., where those journeys are more particularly and exactly described. For the conjunction and, that may be here wanting, and to be supplied, as it is Exod. vi. 23; 1 Sam. iv. 7; Psal. cxxxiii. 3; Isa. lxiii. 11; Hab. iii. 11. And the preposition from is easily supplied from the foregoing words, as is most usual. Nor seems there to be any more reason to render it to Mosera, than from Mosera, seeing the Hebrew letter he in the end is made a part of the proper name, and therefore is not local. There Aaron died. Quest. How is this true? when Aaron died not in Mosera, but in Mount Hor, Numb. xxxiii. 38. Answo. 1. Mosera may be a different place from Moseroth, and that may be the name of a town or region in which Mount Hor was, or to which it belonged. Or, the same mountain, in respect of diverse parts and opposite sides of it, might be called by diverse names, here Mosera, and there Hor. And it is possible they might go several journeys, and pass to divers stations, and by fetching a compass (which they oft did in their wilderness travels) come to the other side of the same mountain. Answo. 2. The Hebrew particle sacham may here note the time, and not the place of Aaron's death, and may be rendered then, as it is taken, Gen. xlix. 24; Psal. xiv. 5; Eccles. iii. 17; Zeph. i. 14. And then is not to be taken precisely, but with some latitude, as it is oft used in Scripture; that is, about that time, after a few removes more; as the words, at that time, ver. 8, must necessarily be understood.

32, 33.

7 ¶ From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

Either, 1. From that place, and that either from Mosera, last mentioned, or from Bene-jaakan; for relatives many times in Scripture belong to the remoter antecedent. Or, 2. From that time; for this particle sometimes notes not place, but time, as 2 Kings ii. 21; Isa. lxxv. 20. So the meaning is, at, or about that time, as it is ver. 8, which being considered, may serve to clear the great difficulty discoursed upon the last verse concerning the seeming contradiction of this place and Numb. xxxiii. 31, 32.

8 ¶ At that time ^a the LORD separated the tribe of Levi, ^b to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, ^c to stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and ^d to bless in his name, unto this day.

At that time, about that time, i. e. when I was come down from the mount, as was said ver. 5; for these words manifestly look to that verse, the sixth and seventh verses being put in by way of parenthesis, as was said before. Or, if it relate to the words immediately foregoing, this may be meant of a second separation of them upon Aaron's death; and having mentioned the separation of Eleazar to the office of the high priest in his father's stead, ver. 6, he now repeats it, that the Levites who were his, as they had been his father's servants, were separated as before, or were confirmed in their office. To stand before the Lord; a phrase used concerning the prophets, 1 Kings xvii. 1; xviii. 15, this being the posture of ministers. Hence the angels are said to stand, 2 Chron. xviii. 18; Luke i. 19. To bless in his name; either, 1. Particularly, to pronounce the solemn blessing of God upon the congregation, which was done in God's name, of which see Lev. ix. 23; Numb. vi. 23, &c. But that work was peculiar to the priests, not common to all the Levites. Or, more generally, to bless, either, 1. God, i. e. to praise him, which being a considerable part of the Levites' work, 1 Chron. xvi., it is not probable it would be omitted here, where their office is so particularly described. Or, 2. The people, whom they did bless by performance of those holy ministrations for the people, and giving those instructions to them, to which God's blessing was promised and usually given; and this they did in God's name, i. e. by command and commission from him.

Ps. 24. 1.

The heaven; the airy and starry heaven. The heaven of heavens; the highest or third heaven, 1 Kings viii. 27; 2 Cor. xii. 2, called the heaven of heavens for its eminency, as the song of songs, king of kings, holy of holies, &c. The earth also, with all creatures and all men, which being all his, he might have chosen what nation he pleased to be his people.

h ch. 4. 37. 15 ^hOnly the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day.

He shows that God had no particular reason nor obligation to their fathers any more than to other persons or people, all being equally his creatures, and that his choice of them out of and above all others proceeded only from God's good pleasure and free love.

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more ^bstiffnecked.

Rest not in your bodily circumcision, but seriously set upon that substantial work which is signified and signified thereby: cleanse your hearts from all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, which is fitly compared to the foreskin, which if not cut off, made persons profane, unclean, and odious in the sight of God. Compare Deut. xxx. 6; Jer. iv. 4; ix. 25; Rom. ii. 28, 29; Col. ii. 11.

17 For the LORD your God is ¹God of gods, and ^mLord of lords, a great God, ⁿa mighty, and a terrible, which ^oregardeth not persons, nor taketh reward:

Regardeth not persons, whether Jews or Gentiles, but deals justly and equally with all sorts of men; and as whosoever fears and obeys him shall be accepted of him, so all incorrigible transgressors shall be severely punished, and you no less than other people; therefore do not flatter yourselves as if God would bear with your sins because of his particular kindness to you or to your fathers.

18 ^pHe doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment.

Execute the judgment, i. e. plead their cause, and give them right against their more potent adversaries, and therefore he expects you should do so too.

19 ^qLove ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 ^rThou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou ^scleave, ^tand swear by his name.

To him shalt thou cleave, with firm confidence, true affection, and constant attendance and obedience.

21 ^uHe is thy praise, and he is thy God, ^vthat hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen.

Thy praise; either, 1. The object and matter of thy praise, as Exod. xv. 2, whom thou shouldst ever praise. Or rather, 2. The ground of thy praise, i. e. of thy praiseworthy; he who makes thee honourable and glorious above those people whose God he is not.

THEREFORE thou shalt ^alove the LORD thy God, and ^bkeep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, always.

2 And know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen ^cthe chastisement of the LORD your God, ^dhis greatness, ^ehis mighty hand, and his stretched out arm, Know ye, i. e. acknowledge and consider it with diligence and thankfulness.

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; ^ghow he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

The effect of which destruction continueth to this day, in their weakness and fear, and our safety from all their further attempts against us.

5 And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place;

6 And ^hwhat he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the ⁱsubstance that ^jwas in their possession, in the midst of all Israel:

In their possession, Heb. at their feet, i. e. under their power, Psal. viii. 6, which followed them, or belonged to them.

7 But ^kyour eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did.

All of them had seen some, and some of them had seen all the great things done in Egypt, and at the Red Sea, and in the wilderness.

8 Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may ^lbe strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it;

9 And ^mthat ye may prolong your days in the land, ⁿwhich the LORD sware unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, ^oa land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 ¶ For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, ^pwhere thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs:

i. e. With great pains and labour of thy feet, partly by going up and down to fetch water and disperse it, and partly by digging furrows with thy foot, and using engines for distributing the water, which engines they thrust with their feet. For though the river Nilus did once in a year overflow the grounds, and made them fruitful, yet oftentimes it failed or scanted them, and then they were put to great pains about their ground; and when it did overflow suffi-

CHAP. XI.

Moses exhorts them to obedience by rehearsing God's works, 1—9, and by the excellency of the land they were to possess, 10—12. A promise of blessings to their obedience, 13—15. They are warned against idolatry, 16, 17. To teach it ciently, and left its mud upon the earth, yet that mud was in a little time hardened, and needed another watering and much digging and labour both of the hands and feet, especially in places something higher or more remote from that river; which inconvenience Canaan was free from.

p ch. 5. 7. 11 ^p But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven :

A land of hills and valleys; and therefore much more healthful than Egypt was, which as it was enriched, so it was annoyed with Nilus, which overflowed the land in summer time, and thereby made the country both unpleasant and, which is much worse, unhealthful. And health being the greatest of all outward blessings, Canaan must therefore needs be a more desirable habitation than Egypt, which is the thing here implied. Drinketh water of the rain of heaven; which is more honourable, because this comes not from man's art or industry, but immediately from God's power and goodness; more easy, being given thee without thy charge or pains; more sweet and pleasant, not hindering thy going abroad upon thy occasions, as the overflow of Nilus did, whereby the Egyptians were confined in a great measure to their several houses; more safe and healthful, being free from that mud which attends upon the waters of Nilus; and more certain too, the former and the latter rain being promised to be given to them in their several seasons, upon condition of their obedience, which condition, though it may seem a clog and inconvenience, yet indeed was a great benefit, that by their own necessities and worldly interest they should be obliged to that obedience, upon which their happiness depended both for this life and for the next.

12 A land which the LORD thy God [†] careth for: [†] the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

Land which the Lord careth for, to wit, in a special manner, watering it immediately as it were by his own hand, without man's help, and giving peculiar blessings to it, which Egypt enjoys not. The eyes of the Lord are always upon it, to give it the rain and other blessings proper to the several seasons. But all these mercies, and the fruitfulness of the land consequent upon them, were suspended upon their disobedience, as it here follows. And therefore it is not at all strange that some later writers decry the land of Canaan as in great part a barren soil, which is so far from affording any ground to question the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures, in which its fruitfulness is declared, that it doth much more confirm it, this being but an effect of that threatening that God would turn a fruitful land into barrenness for the wickedness of those that dwell in it, Psal. cvii. 34, and elsewhere; and the wickedness of the Israelites in succeeding ages being notorious, it is but just and fit that the barrenness of their land should be as evident and infamous.

13 ¶ And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken ^r diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, ^s to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, 14 That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

The rain of your land, i. e. which is needful and sufficient for your land; or which is proper to your land, not common to Egypt, where, as all authors agree, there is little or no rain. The first rain and the latter rain; the first fell in seed time, to make the corn spring, the other a little before harvest, to ripen it. See Jer. v. 24; Joel ii. 23; Amos iv. 7; James v. 7.

15 ^{*} And I will [†] send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.

16 Take heed to yourselves, ^{} that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and ^{} serve other gods, and worship them;

That your heart be not deceived by the specious pretences of idolaters, who will plead the general consent of all nations, except yours, in the worship of creatures, and that they worship the creatures only for God's sake, and as they are glorious works of God, whom they worship in and by them; which, and the like arguments, being commonly alleged by heathens for their idolatries, as their own writers declare, might possibly seduce an unwary Israelite; and therefore they are here cautioned against such deceit, and withal it is implied, that if a man's mind be corrupted and deceived, so as he believes idolatry to be lawful, this will not excuse him in the sight of God.

17 And then ^b the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he ^o shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ^d ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

Heaven is compared sometimes to a bottle, Job xxxviii. 37, which may be either stopped or opened; sometimes to a great storehouse, wherein God lays up his treasures of rain, Job xxxviii. 22; Psal. xxxiii. 7, the doors whereof God is said to open when he gives rain, and to shut when he withhold it. See 1 Kings viii. 35; 2 Chron. vi. 26; vii. 13.

18 ¶ Therefore ^e shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and ^f bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 ^e And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 ^b And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

21 That ⁱ your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, ^k as the days of heaven upon the earth.

i. e. As long as this visible world lasts, whilst the heaven keeps its place and continues its influences upon earth, until all these things be dissolved. Compare Psal. lxxii. 5; lxxx. 15; lxxxix. 29; Jer. xxxiii. 25.

22 ¶ For if ^l ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and ^m to cleave unto him;

23 Then will the LORD ⁿ drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall ^o possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 ^p Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be your's: ^q from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea shall your coast be.

Every place; not absolutely, as if the Jews should be lords of all the world, as the rabbins fondly conceit; but in the Promised Land, as it is restrained in the following words. Shall be yours, either by possession, or by dominion, to wit, upon condition of your obedience. From the

CHAP. XII.

They are commanded to destroy all the places of idolatry, 1—3; and must worship God in his own place, and after his will, 4—15. The eating of blood prohibited, 16. Where and how they should eat the tithe, 17, 18. The Levite not to be forsaken, 19. They may eat flesh clean or unclean any where, 20—22; but not the blood, 23—25. Holy things to be eaten at the altar of the Lord, 26—28. They are forbidden to inquire after the heathen worship, 29, 30; or to worship the true God as they, 31; but to keep to the law in their worship, 32.

^aTHESE are the statutes and judgments, a ch. 6. 1. which ye shall observe to do in the land, which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, ^ball the days that ye live upon the earth. b ch. 4. 10. 1 Kin. 8. 40.

2 ^rYe shall utterly destroy all the places, wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, ^dupon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree:

All the places; temples, chapels, altars, groves, as appears from other scriptures. The Gentiles used to employ the high mountains for their idolatry; (see Isa. lvii. 5, 7; Ezek. vi. 13; Hos. iv. 13;) and as they consecrated divers trees to their false gods, so they worshipped these under them:

3 And ^rye shall ^roverthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them out of that place.

Their pillars, upon which their images were set. The names of them, i. e. all the memorials of them, and the very names given to the places from the idols.

4 ^rYe shall not do so unto the LORD your God. f ver. 31.

i. e. Not worship him in several places, mountains, groves, &c., which sense is evident from the following opposition.

5 But unto the place which the LORD your God shall ^rchoose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

To put his name there, i. e. to set up his worship there, or which he shall call by his name, as his house, or dwelling-place, &c., to wit, where the ark should be, the tabernacle, or temple; which was first Shiloh, Josh. xviii. 1, next and especially Jerusalem.

6 And ^rthither ye shall bring your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, and your ^rtithes, and heave offerings of your hand, and your vows, and your freewill offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks:

The sacrifices were wisely appropriated to that one and public place, partly for the security of the true religion, and for the prevention of idolatry and superstition, which otherwise might more easily have crept in; and partly to signify that their sacrifices were not accepted for their own worth, but by God's gracious appointment, and for the sake of God's altar, by which they were sanctified, and for the sake of Christ, whom the altar did manifestly represent. Of tithes, see below on ver. 17. Heave-offerings, i. e. your first-fruits, to wit, of the earth, as of corn and wine and oil and other fruits, as plainly appears by comparing this place with Deut. xviii. 4; xxvi. 2, where these are commanded to be brought thither; and seeing here is an exact and particular enumeration of all such things, and these cannot be put under any of the other branches, these must needs be intended here, the rather because the other kind of first-fruits, to wit, of the herds and flocks, are here expressly mentioned. And these are called here the heave-offerings of their hand, because the offerer was first to take these into his hands, and to heave them before the Lord, (as other places tell us,) and then to give them to the priest, as appears from Deut. xviii. 3, 4; xxvi. 4. Your free-will offerings; even for your voluntary oblations, which were not due by my prescription, but only by your own choice and voluntary engagement: you may choose what kind of offering you please to vow and offer, but not the place where you shall offer them. The firstlings of your herds and of your flocks; either, 1. The holy firstlings or first-born, as appears by Numb. xviii., where they are commanded to be brought to this one place here designed, and to be offered upon God's altar, ver. 17. It is objected by some, that those were given to the priests, Numb. xviii. 18, but these were to be eaten by the people here, ver. 7. But that the next verse doth not say, but only in general, there shall ye eat, to wit, such of the offerings mentioned ver. 6 as they were allowed to eat, but not such as were the priest's peculiar, for these they might not eat, nor all there expressed; for it is evident they might not eat any of the burnt-offerings, nor some parts of the other sacrifices, which are here mentioned. Or, 2. The second births, which were the people's first-born, or the first which they could eat of, which they were to eat before the Lord by way of acknowledgment of his favour in giving them to them and all their succeeding births. See more on ver. 17.

7 And ^k there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and ^l ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

There; not in the most holy place, wherein only the priests might eat, Numb. xviii. 10, but more generally in places allowed to the people for this end in the holy city. Ye shall eat, to wit, your part of the things mentioned ver. 6. Before the Lord, i. e. in the place of God's presence, where God's sanctuary shall be. All that ye put your hand unto; either to bestow your pains and labour upon it; or, to take and use or enjoy it. The sense is, You thus doing shall be blessed and enabled to rejoice, or to take comfort in all your labours and enjoyments, which otherwise would be accursed to you. We have the same phrase below, ver. 18; Deut. xv. 10.

8 Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, ^m every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

Here; where the inconveniency of the place, and the uncertainty of our abode in and removal from several places, would not permit exact order in sacrifices, and feasts, and ceremonies, which therefore God was pleased then to dispense with; but, saith he, he will not do so there. Every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes; not that universal liberty was given to all persons to worship whom and how they listed, but that in many things their unsettled condition gave every one opportunity to do so if he thought good.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance, which the LORD your God giveth you.

10 But when ⁿ ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety;

11 Then there shall be ^o a place which the LORD your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there; thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave offering of your hand, and all ^p your choice vows which ye vow unto the LORD:

His name, i. e. his majesty and glory, his worship and service, his special and gracious presence, and the tokens of it. All your choice vows, Heb. the choice of your vows, i. e. your select or chosen vows; so called, because things offered for vows were to be perfect, whereas superfluous or defective creatures were to be accepted in free-will offerings, as appears from Lev. xxii. 21—23.

12 And ^p ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God, ye, and your sons, and your daughters, and your menservants, and your maidservants, and the Levite that is within your gates; forasmuch as ^q he hath no part nor inheritance with you.

Hence it appears, that though the males only were obliged to appear before God in their solemn feasts, Exod. xxiii.

17, yet the women also were permitted to come, as they did. See Judg. xxi. 19, 21; 1 Sam. i. 3, 7, 21—23.

13 ^r Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt offerings in every place that thou seest:

Nor the other things mentioned above, this one and most eminent kind being put for all the rest, as is usual; for being all expressed before, it was needless to repeat them again. In every place that thou seest, to wit, with complacency and approbation, which thou thinkest very fit and proper for such a work, as one might possibly judge of some high places, or groves, or gardens.

14 ^s But in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 Notwithstanding ^t thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: ^u the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, ^x as of the roebuck, and as of the hart.

Thou mayest kill and eat flesh, to wit, for thy common use and food. In all thy gates, i. e. thy cities or dwellings. Whatsoever thy soul lusteth after; what you shall desire either for quantity or quality, provided always you observe the laws given you elsewhere about avoiding excess and uncleanness in the things you eat. Which he hath given thee, according to thy quality and estate; whereby he manifestly condemns those who profusely and riotously spend other men's money, and live at a rate which their consciences know to be much above their ability; which certainly is an ungodly and unrighteous, though too common, practice. The unclean, who is forbidden to eat of holy meats, Lev. vii. 20. May eat thereof, to wit, of any sort of creatures, even of those sorts which are offered to God in sacrifices, which are as free to your use as the roebuck and the hart, which were not accepted in sacrifice, Lev. xxii. 19, yet were clean beasts, Deut. xiv. 5; and therefore here is a tacit exception of unclean beasts.

16 ^y Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 ¶ Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithes of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy freewill offerings, or heave offering of thine hand:

Thou; either, 1. Thou, O Levite; or rather, 2. Thou, O Israelite, whom he distinguisheth from the Levite, ver. 18, accordingly as the following particulars agree to the one or to the other of you. Within thy gates, i. e. in your private habitations, here opposed to the place of God's worship, ver. 18. The tithes of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil. Here seems to be a great difficulty, not yet sufficiently observed nor cleared by interpreters. There were divers kinds of tithes: 1. The tithes given to the Levites out of all, of which Numb. xviii. 21, 24; Deut. xiv. 22; Neh. x. 37. 2. The tithes of those tithes, which were to be given by the Levites to the priests, of which Numb. xviii. 26, 28; Neh. x. 38. 3. The third year's tithes, of which Deut. xiv. 28. To which some add another tithes, which they call the second tithes, which they say was taken after the Levites' tithes was laid by. Now each of these hath its difficulty. It seems this place cannot be understood, 1. Of the Levites' tithes; partly, because it might seem a great and wholly superfluous trouble to carry all their tithes up to Jerusalem, and to carry them back to their several habitations for their use; partly, because those were holy to the Lord, Lev. xxvii. 30, and not to be eaten by the people, ver. 31; whereas these belonged principally to the people, the Levites being only taken in as accessories to eat with them, as it is here, ver. 18; and partly, because those might be eaten in every place, as it is expressly affirmed, Numb. xviii. 31. Nor, 2. Of the tithe of the tithe, which was the priest's; and neither Levites nor others might eat of it, except they were of or in the priest's household. Nor, 3. Of the third year's tithe, because that was to be eaten within their gates, Deut. xiv. 28, 29, as this was not. I do therefore humbly conceive that this is meant of the second tithe, spoken of Deut. xiv. 22; and that this was the very same tithe with that third year's tithe, with this only difference, that in the third year they were to eat them together with the Levites within their gates, Deut. xiv. 28, 29, but in the two first years they were to eat them, together with the Levites also, in the place of God's worship, as it is prescribed here and Deut. xiv. 23. And that it is one and the same tithe which is spoken of Deut. xiv. 22, and ver. 28, seems more than probable, both because they are called by the same name, all the tithe of their increase, and because that ver. 23 manifestly looks back to that ver. 22, and because otherwise every third year the Israelites were to pay three several tithes one after another, which Scripture no where affirms, and it seems to make the people's burdens and the Levites' provisions too great. For the objection taken from Deut. xxvi. 12, 13, it shall be considered in its place. And the reason of that difference of place, and why the same tithes were eaten for two years together in Jerusalem, and the third in their own gates, seems to be this, that in the two first years there was a more special regard had to the Levites, who were very much conversant in Jerusalem, where those tithes were then eaten, and in the third year there is a respect had to the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, who are mentioned as joint sharers with the Levites in this third year's tithe, whose occasions and obligations of coming to Jerusalem were not so many nor strong as those of the Levites, and therefore they were to be found generally within their gates, where these were to be eaten. And whereas the objection made before against the chargeable and useless carrying of the first tithes to Jerusalem might be applied here, it is answered there, and it is provided, that when they lived at a great distance from Jerusalem they might turn it into money and bestow it there, Deut. xiv. 24—26, which both confirms the objection as to the first tithe, for which no such provision was made, and answers it as to this, where such a remedy is expressed. And whereas it may be pleaded on the behalf of the first, or the Levitical tithe, that those tithes were brought to Jerusalem, and that there were store-houses or chambers in the temple appointed for the receiving of the tithes, 2 Chron. xxxi. 5, 6, 11, 12; Neh. x. 37, 38; xii. 44, it may be answered, that those chambers, being only thirty-eight in number, and each of them, except two, but six cubits broad and twelve cubits long, were altogether incapable of all those tithes, and seem principally, if not solely, appointed for the priests' tithes, and not for all them neither, but only for so much of them as would serve for the use and necessity of those priests and Levites too that were in the actual ministrations. The firstlings of thy herds, or of thy flock. As the tithes now mentioned were not the Levitical, but second tithes, as hath been discoursed; so these firstlings do not seem to be the first firstlings, which being appropriated to the Levites were not to be eaten by any of the people, except those of or in the Levites' families, but the second firstlings, which were the first which the owner could dispose of, and which, in conformity to the second tithes, he is required to set apart for this use.

18 *But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 *Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite †as long as thou livest upon the earth.

Take heed lest a worldly mind and self-love make thee rob the Levites of their dues, as afterwards the ungodly Jews did. See Mal. iii. 8.

20 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, ^bas he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh, because thy soul longeth to eat flesh; thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

When the Lord shall enlarge thy border, which will make it inconvenient and impossible to do what now thou dost, and because of the narrow bounds of thy camp canst conveniently do, to wit, to bring all the cattle thou usest to the tabernacle, which it seems probable they did, to prevent their eating of blood. Compare Lev. xvii. 3; 1 Sam. xiv. 34.

21 If the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

Be too far from thee; in which case, being obliged to carry their sacrifice to the place of worship, that the blood might be there poured forth, &c., they might think themselves obliged, for the same reason, to carry their other cattle thither to be killed. They are therefore released from all such obligations, and left at liberty to kill them at home, whether they lived nearer to that place, or further from it; only the latter is here mentioned, as being the matter of the scruple, and as containing the former in it. As I have commanded thee; in such manner as the blood may be poured forth, as above, ver. 16, and below, ver. 24.

22 *Even as the roebuck and the hart ^cis eaten, so thou shalt eat them: the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.

As the roebuck and the hart; as common or unallowed food, though they be of the same kind with the sacrifices which are offered to God. The unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike, because there was no holiness in such meat for which the unclean might be excluded from it.

23 †Only †be sure that thou eat not the blood: *for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh. The blood is the life; of which see on Gen. ix. 4; Lev. xvii. 11. The animal life depends upon the blood.

24 Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it; †that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, †when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

26 Only thy ^hholy things which thou hast, and ⁱthy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose:

The holy things, mentioned before, ver. 6, 11, 17, which thou hast consecrated to God.

27 And †thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

Excepting what shall be burned to God's honour, and given to the priest according to his appointment.

28 Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, †that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

Enticers to idolatry, being permitted by God to try Israel, were to be stoned to death, 1—5, though near of kin, 6—

11. A city found guilty of idolatry to be burnt and utterly destroyed, 12—16. They were not to take any of its cursed things, but to obey God's command, that his mercy might be upon them, 17, 18.

IF there arise among you a prophet, or a ^a'dreamer of dreams, ^band giveth thee a sign or a wonder,

Among you, i. e. one of your nation, for such might be both seduced and afterwards seducers. A dreamer of dreams; one that pretends himself to be one to whom God hath revealed himself, either by visions or dreams. See Numb. xii. 6. Giveth thee a sign or a wonder, i. e. shall foretell some strange and wonderful thing to come, as appears from ver. 2, as the true prophets used to do, as 1 Sam. x.

low or come to pass, it was a sign of a false prophet, as is said, Deut. xviii. 22, yet when it did come to pass, it was no sufficient or infallible sign of a true one, especially in such a case when he brings in new gods. The reason of the difference is, because many causes must concur to make a thing good and true, but any one failure is sufficient to make a thing bad or false. And particularly there are many signs, yea, such as men may think to be wonders, which may be wrought by evil spirits, God so permitting it for divers wise and just reasons, not only for the trial of the good, as it here follows, but also for the punishment of ungodly men, who would not receive Divine truths, though attested by many evident and unquestionable miracles, and therefore are most justly exposed to these temptations to believe lies. Proveth you, i. e. trieth your faith, and love, and obedience, examineth your sincerity by your constancy. See Matt. xxiv. 24; 2 Thess. ii. 11; Rev. xiii. 14. See on Gen. xxii. 1; Deut. viii. 2, 7. To know; that he may know it, to wit, judicially, or in a public manner, so as both you and others may know and see it, that so the justice of his judgments upon you may be more evident and glorious.

4 Ye shall ^ewalk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and ^fcleave unto him.

Ye shall serve him, to wit, only, as appears from the opposition. Compare Deut. vi. 13, with Matt. iv. 10.

5 And ^gthat prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death; because he hath ^hspoken to turn you away from the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in. ⁱSo shalt thou put the evil away from the midst of thee.

He hath spoken, i. e. taught or persuaded you. To turn you away from the Lord; to forsake God and his worship. He shows that the chiefest and most certain character of a true prophet, is to be taken from his doctrine rather than from his miracles. To thrust thee out of the way: this phrase denotes the great force and power of seducers to corrupt men's minds. Compare Deut. iv. 19; 2 Kings xvii. 21; Matt. xxiv. 2, 14. The evil; either 1. That evil thing, that wicked doctrine and practice. Or, 2. That wicked and scandalous man, that idolater and seducer.

6 ¶ ^jIf thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or ^kthe wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, ^lwhich is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which thou hast not known, thou, nor thy fathers;

The son of thy mother: this is added to restrain the signification of the word brother, which is oft used generally for one near akin, and to express the nearness of the relation, the mother's side being the surest, and usually the ground of the truest and most fervent affection. See Gen. xx. 22. Or thy daughter; thy piety must overcome both thy affection to thy nearest relation, and thy compassion to the weaker sex. The wife of thy bosom; either, 1. That is near to thy heart, that hath thy dearest love. Or rather, 2. That lieth in thy bosom, as it is expressed, Micah vii. 5. Compare Gen. xvi. 5; Prov. v. 20; Deut. xxviii. 54. So we read of the husband of her bosom, Deut. xxviii. 56. As thine own soul; as dear to thee as thyself. The father and mother are here omitted, not, as some fancy, because children might not in this nor in any case accuse their parents, for certainly they owe more reverence and duty to God, who is injured in this case, than to their parents, and Levi is commended for neglecting his father and mother in this case; but because they are sufficiently contained in the former examples; for since men's love doth usually descend more strongly than it ascends, and the relation of a wife is and ought to be nearer and dearer than of a parent, that favour which is denied to wives and children cannot be thought fit to be allowed to parents. Entice thee, though it be without success, because the very attempt of such an abominable crime deserved death, as it is judged in case of treason. Other gods; unknown and obscure and new gods; which greatly aggravates the crime, to forsake a God whom thou and thy fathers have long known, and had great and good experience of, for such upstarts.

7 Namely, of the gods of the people which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee, from the one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth;

He arms against the pretence of the universality of this idol worship, wherewith they were like to be oft assaulted.

8 Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him:

i. e. Smother his fault, hide or protect his person, but shalt accuse him to the magistrate, and demand justice upon him, which was not to be done in most other criminal causes; and no wonder, this crime being of a far higher nature than others.

9 But thou shalt surely kill him; ° thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people.

Thou shalt surely kill him; not privately, which pretence would have opened the door to innumerable murders, but by procuring his death by the sentence of the magistrate; and thou shalt cast the first stone at him, as the witness was to do. See Deut. xvii. 7; Acts vii. 58.

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of † bondage.

11 And all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 ¶ If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known;

The children of Belial; a title oft used in Scripture, as Judg. xix. 22; 1 Sam. i. 16; xxv. 25; 2 Sam. xvi. 7. It signifies properly persons without yoke, vile and wretched miscreants, lawless and rebellious, that will suffer no restraint, that neither fear God nor reverence man. From among you, i. e. from your church and religion. It notes a separation or departure from them, not in place, (as appears by their partnership with their fellow citizens both in the sin and punishment, as it here follows,) but in heart, doctrine, and worship, as the same phrase is used, 1 John ii. 19.

14 Then shalt thou enquire, and make search, and ask diligently; and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

Then shalt thou inquire: this is meant of the magistrate, to whose office this properly belongs, and of whom he continues to speak in the same manner, thou, ver. 15, 16.

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, ° destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

The inhabitants of that city, to wit, all that are guilty, not the innocent part, such as disowned this apostacy, who doubtless by choice and interest, at least upon warning, would come out of so wicked and cursed a place. Destroying it utterly; the very same punishment which was inflicted upon the cities of the cursed Canaanites, to whom having made themselves equal in sin, it is but fit and just that God should equal them in punishment.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God: and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

For the LORD thy God, i. e. for the satisfaction of God's justice, the maintenance of his honour and authority and laws, and the pacification of his offended majesty. It shall be an heap for ever; it shall be an eternal monument of God's justice, and terror to after-ages, who may be tempted to like practices.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing to thine hand: that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and shew thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;

Of the cursed thing, i. e. of the goods of that accursed city. And multiply thee; so thou shalt have no loss of thy numbers by cutting off so many people.

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, ° to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

Heathenish rites of mourning prohibited, 1, 2; and the eating of any abominable thing, 3. All unclean beasts, 4—8, fish, 9, 10, and birds, prohibited, 11—20. True tithing commanded, 22; and where it was to be eaten, 23—27. A command about the third year's tithing, 28; and who should eat it, 29.

YE are the children of the LORD your God: ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead.

Of the LORD your God; whom therefore you must not disparage by unworthy or unbecoming practices, such as here follow, and whom you must not disobey. Ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes, which were the practices of idolaters, both in the worship of their idols, as 1 Kings xviii. 28; or in their funerals, as here, and Jer. xvi. 6; or upon occasion of public calamities, as Jer. xli. 5; xlvii. 5. See more on Lev. xix. 27, 28; xxi. 5. For the dead; through excessive sorrow for your dead friends, as if you had no hope of their happiness after death, 1 Thess. iv. 13.

Latin Synopsis. For others, they may well enough want the knowledge of them, both because these are the smaller matters of the law, and because this distinction of clean and unclean beasts is now out of date.

5 The hart, and the roebuck, and the fallow deer, and the wild goat, and the wild ox, and the chamois.

6 And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcase.

9 ¶ These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters: all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

11 ¶ Of all clean birds ye shall eat.

12 ^h But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray,

13 And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind,

14 And every raven after his kind,

15 And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind,

16 The little owl, and the great owl, and the swan,

17 And the pelican, and the gier eagle, and the cormorant,

18 And the stork, and the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

19 And every creeping thing that flieth is unclean unto you: they shall not be eaten.

20 But of all clean fowls ye may eat.

21 ¶ Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it into an alien: ^m for thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God. ⁿ Thou shalt not see the kid in his mother's milk.

Unto the stranger; not to the proselyte, for such were obliged by this law, Lev. xvii. 15, but to such as were strangers in religion as well as in nation.

22 ^o Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year.

This is to be understood of the second tithes, which seem to be the same with the tithes of the third year, mentioned here below, ver. 28, and Deut. xxvi. 12, on which see above, on chap. xii. 17. And to confirm this opinion, (though I would not lay too great a stress upon criticisms,) yet I cannot but observe that this tithing is spoken of only as the people's act here, and Deut. xxvi. 12, and the Levites are not at all mentioned in either place as receivers or takers of them, but only as partakers of them together with the owners, and therefore they are so severely charged here upon their consciences, thou shalt truly tithe all thine increase, because the execution of this was left wholly to themselves, whereas the first tithes were received by the Levites, who therefore are said to take or receive those tithes, Numb. xviii. 26; Neh. x. 38; Heb. vii. 5.

23 ^p And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and ^q the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always.

See on Deut. xii. 6, 17.

24 And if the way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it; or ^r if the place be too far from thee, which the LORD thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

25 Then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose:

Bind up the money in thine hand, i. e. in a bag to be taken into thy hand and carried with thee.

26 And thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul desireth: ^s and thou shalt eat there before the LORD thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou, and thine household, 27 And ^t the Levite that is within thy gates; thou shalt not forsake him; for ^u he hath no part nor inheritance with thee.

Thou shalt not forsake him; thou shalt give him a share in such tithes, or in the product of them.

28 ¶ At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates:

At the end of three years, i. e. in the third year, as it is expressed, Deut. xxvi. 12. So, in the end of three years, or of seven years, is the same with in the third or seventh year, as appears by comparing Deut. xxxi. 10; Josh. ix. 16, 17; 2 Kings xviii. 9, 10; xvii. 6. All the tithe of thine increase. I join with those expositors who make this the same tithe with the former, ver. 22, as being called by the same title without any distinction between them, save only as to the place of eating them. See above on ver. 22, and Deut. xii. 17. The same year: this is added to show that he speaks of the third year, and not of the fourth year, as some might conjecture from the phrase, at the end of three years.

29 ^v And the Levite, (because ^w he hath no part nor inheritance with thee,) and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that ^x the LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.

CHAP. XV.

The seventh year a year of release, 1, to their brethren only, 2, 3. God promiseth to bless them in the land of Canaan, 4-6; and commandeth them to lend freely to the poor, 7-18. The firstlings to be sanctified and eaten before the Lord, 19-23.

^a Ex. 21. 2.
^b & 23. 10, 11.
^c Lev. 25. 2, 4.
^d ch. 31. 10.
^e Jer. 34. 14.

AT the end of ^a every seven years thou shalt make a release.

i. e. In the last year of the seven, as is most evident from ver. 9; Exod. xxi. 2; Jer. xxxiv. 14. So the like phrase is oft used, as Deut. xiv. 28; Josh. iii. 2; Jer. xxv. 12; Luke ii. 21; Acts ii. 1. And this year of release, as it is called below, ver. 9, is the same with the sabbatical year, Exod. xxiii. 11; Lev. xxv. 4.

2 And this is the manner of the release: Every † creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

Shall release it; not absolutely and finally forgive it, but forbear it for that year, as may appear, 1. Because the word doth not signify a total dismission or acquitting, but an intermission for a time, as Exod. xxiii. 11. He shall not exact it, as it here follows, i. e. force it from him by course of law or otherwise, to wit, that year, which is easily understood out of the whole context. 2. Because the person releasing is called a creditor, and his communicating to him what he desires and needs is called lending here and ver. 8; whereas it were giving, and the person giving it were no creditor, but a donor, if it were to be wholly forgiven to him. 3. Because the reason of this law is temporary and peculiar to that year, wherein there being no sowing nor reaping, they were not in a capacity to pay their debts. 4. Because it seems unjust and unreasonable, and contrary to other scriptures, which require men to pay what they borrow, as Psal. xxxvii. 21. Yet I deny not that in case of poverty the debt was to be forgiven; but that was not by virtue of this law, but of other commands of God. Or of his brother: this is added to explain and limit the word neighbour, which is more general, unto a brother, to wit, in nation and religion; to an Israelite, who is opposed to a foreigner, ver. 3. Heb. and a brother, for that is a brother, the particle and being oft so used, as Gen. xiii. 15, &c. The Lord's release; or, a release to or for the Lord, in obedience to his command, for his honour, and as an acknowledgment of his right in your estates, and of his kindness in giving and continuing them to you. If you are unwilling to release this for your brother's sake, yet do it for God's sake, your Lord and the chief Creditor.

3 ^b Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

A foreigner, or stranger, yea, though a proselyte. For, 1. They are oft called by this name, as Gen. xvii. 12; Ruth ii. 10. 2. Though proselytes were admitted to the church privileges of the Israelites, yet they were not admitted to all their civil immunities or privileges. See 1 Chron. xxii. 2; 2 Chron. ii. 17. 3. Such were not then freed from their personal debt, to wit, of their service, Lev. xxv. 44; Deut. xv. 12; Jer. xxxiv. 14, therefore not from their real debt. That which is thine, to wit, by right, though lent to him.

4 || Save when there shall be no poor among you; ^c for the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it:

When there shall be no poor: so the words are an exception to the foregoing clause, which they restrain to the poor, and imply that if his brother was rich, he might exact his debt of him in that year. And indeed this law seems to be chiefly, if not wholly, designed and given in favour to the poor and to the borrower, as is manifest from ver. 6—11. But the words are and may be rendered thus, as in the margin of our Bibles, To the end that there be no poor among you. And so they contain a reason of this law, to wit, that none be impoverished and ruined by a rigid and unseasonable exaction of debts. They may also be translated thus, Nevertheless of a truth, or assuredly, (as the particle chi is oft used,) there shall be no poor among you; and the sense may be this, Though I impose this law upon you, which may seem hard and grievous, yet the truth is, supposing your performance of the conditions of God's covenant, you shall not have any great occasion to exercise your charity and kindness in this matter, for God will greatly bless you, &c., so as you shall be in a capacity of lending, and few or none of you will have need to borrow, and thereby to, expose his brethren to the inconvenience and burden of this law. Thus the connexion is plain and easy, both with the foregoing and following words. Object. It is said, the poor should never cease, ver. 11. Answ. That also is true, and affirmed by God, because he foresaw they would not perform their duty, and therefore would bereave themselves of the promised blessing. The Lord shall greatly bless thee; and, therefore this will be no great inconvenience nor burden to thee.

5 Only ^d if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day.

6 For the LORD thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and ^e thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and ^f thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

Thou shalt lend unto many; thou shalt be rich and able to lend not only to thy poor brother, but even to strangers of other nations, yea, to many of them.

7 ¶ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, ^g thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother:

8 ^h But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

Open thine hand wide unto him, i. e. deal bountifully and liberally with him, giving him as it were by handfuls.

9 Beware that there be not a † thought in thy † wicked heart, saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand; and thine ⁱ eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought; and ^k he cry unto the LORD against thee, and ^l it be sin unto thee.

Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart; suppress the first risings and inward motions of such uncharitableness. Thine eye be evil, i. e. envious, unmerciful, unkind, as this phrase is used, Prov. xxiii. 6; Matt. xx. 15; as a good eye notes the contrary disposition, Prov. xxii. 9. It be sin, i. e. it be charged upon thee as a sin, and as a great sin, as the word sin sometimes signifies, as Prov. xxiv. 9; John xv. 24; James iv. 17.

10 Thou shalt surely give him, and ^m thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that ⁿ for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.

Thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him, i. e. thou shalt give not only with an open hand, but with a willing and cheerful mind and heart, Rom. xii. 8; 2 Cor. ix. 9, without which thy very charity is uncharitable, and not accepted by God, who requires the heart in all his services. In all that thou puttest thine hand unto, i. e. in all thy works, as before, for the hand is the great instrument of action.

11 For ^o the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand

Lev. 25. 39.
Jer. 34. 14.</sup> 12 ¶ And ^p if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years; then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

If thy brother be sold unto thee. See on Exod. xxii. 3. Six years; to be computed, either, 1. From the year of release; as they gather from hence that personal and real debts were both released together. But that seems to be supposed rather than proved; nay, there is a manifest difference between them, for the release of real debts is expressly mentioned and required in the year of release, but so is not the release of the personal debt of servitude, either here or elsewhere. Or rather, 2. From the beginning of this servitude, which is every where limited unto the space of six years, as here and below, ver. 18; Exod. xxi. 2; Jer. xxxiv. 14. And it seems a strange and forced exposition, to take these six years for so much of the six years as remains until the year of release, which possibly might not be one quarter of a year, whereas a hired servant serves for a far longer time, and this is said to be worth a double-hired servant, in regard of the longer time of his service, ver. 18. Add to this, that it is mentioned as the peculiar privilege of the year of jubilee, that such servants were then freed, though their six years of service were not expired.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy winepress: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath ^a blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

^r ch. 5. 15. & 16. 12. 15 And ^a thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to day.

And the Lord thy God redeemed thee, and brought thee out with triumph and with riches, which because they would not, God did, give to thee as a just recompence for thy service, and therefore thou shalt follow his example, and send out thy servant furnished with all convenient provisions.

^s Ex. 21. 5, 6. 16 And it shall be, ^a if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee;

Because he is sensible that he fares well with thee. Or, because it is good, i. e. acceptable in his eyes, or pleasing to him, to be with thee.

17 Then thou shalt take an aul, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever. And also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.

For ever, i. e. all the time of his life, or, at least, till the year of jubilee. See on Exod. xxi. 6. Unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise, i. e. either dismiss her honourably, and with plenty of provisions; or engage her to perpetual servitude in the same manner, and by the same rites; whence it appears that this case differs from that Exod. xxi. 7, and that the maid-servant there was taken in upon other and better terms than this here.

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth ^a a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

He hath been worth a double-hired servant to thee; or, he deserves double wages to an hired servant, because he served thee upon better terms, both without wages, which hired servants require, and for a longer time, even for six years, as it here follows, whereas servants were ordinarily hired but from year to year, Lev. xxv. 53, or at most but for three years, as they gather from this place and Isa. xvi. 14.

19 ¶ ^a All the firstling males that come of thy herd and of thy flock thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep.

^v Lev. 27. 26.

With the firstling of thy bullock: this is meant, either, 1. Of the male firstlings; which, they say, is forbidden here, because some did plough with the firstlings of their oxen, and shear the firstlings of their sheep, before they were offered. But this seems absurd and incredible, because they were to be offered on the eighth day, Exod. xxii. 30, when they were very unfit for such uses. Or rather, 2. The second firstlings, of which see on Deut. xii. 17.

20 ^a Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

Thou shalt eat; either, 1. Thou, O priest. Or rather, 2. Thou, O Israelite. For it is evident that the same person who was forbidden to work with these, ver. 19, is here commanded to eat them, &c. Thou shalt eat it, together with the Levites, as it is to be understood from Deut. xii. 18; xiv. 27, 29, where that is expressed in like cases. Year by year, to wit, in the solemn feasts which returned upon them every year. See Deut. xvi. 11, 14.

They came out of Egypt by day, and in the morning, as appears from Exod. xii. 22; xiii. 3; Numb. xxxiii. 3. Ans. They are said to be brought out by night, because in the night Pharaoh was forced to give them leave to depart, and accordingly they made preparation for their departure, and in the morning they perfected the work.

2 Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and ^a the herd, in the ^a place which the LORD shall choose to place his name there.

^d Num. 23. 19. e ch. 12. 5. 26.

The passover, i. e. either, 1. Properly and strictly so called, which was the paschal lamb, and so the sheep and oxen, which here follow, are mentioned only as additional sacrifices, which were to be offered in the seven days of the paschal solemnity, Numb. xxviii. 18, 19, &c. Or, 2. Largely, to wit, for the passover-offerings, to wit, which were offered after the lamb in the seven days, and so this very word is used 2 Chron. xxxv. 8, 9. And this signification seems necessary here, partly because it is here said to consist of the flock and of the herd, or of sheep and oxen, and partly because it follows, ver. 3, Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it, seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, i. e. with the passover, which could not be done with the passover strictly so called, which was to be wholly spent in one day. Or, 3. The feast of the passover, and so the place may be rendered, Thou shalt therefore observe or keep the feast of the passover (as those same Hebrew words are taken, Numb. ix. 5; Josh. v. 10; 2 Chron. xxxv. 1, 17, 18, 19) unto the Lord thy God, with sheep and with oxen, as is prescribed, Numb. xxviii. 18, &c.

f Ex. 12. 15, 19, 30, & 19. 3, 6, 7, & 34. 18.

3 'Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste: that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

With it, to wit, with the passover, in the sense delivered; or, in it, i. e. during the time of the feast of the passover. The bread of affliction, i. e. bread which is not usual nor pleasant, but unsavoury and unwholesome, to put thee in mind both of thy miseries endured in Egypt, and of thy hasty coming out of it, which allowed thee no time to leaven or to prepare thy bread.

g Ex. 13. 7.

4 'And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; ^hneither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.

h Ex. 12. 10. & 34. 25.

At even, i. e. of the passover properly so called, and by these words plainly described; which circumlocution may seem to insinuate that the word passover, ver. 1, was improperly used, and therefore he chose rather to describe it than to name it, lest the ambiguity of the word should occasion some mistake.

i Or, kill.

5 Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the Lord thy God giveth thee:

Within any of thy gates, i. e. of thy cities, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xxii. 17. xxiv. 60; Deut. xvii. 2; Ruth iv. 10.

6 But at the place which the Lord thy God shall choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover ¹at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.

i Ex. 12. 6.

There thou shalt sacrifice the passover, to wit, in the court of the tabernacle or temple. This he prescribed, partly, that this great work might be done with more solemnity and care, in such manner as God required; partly, because it was not only a sacrament, but also a sacrifice, as appears because it is so called, Exod. xii. 27; xxiii. 18; xxxiv. 25; Numb. ix. 7, and because here was the sprinkling of blood, which is the essential part and character of a sacrifice; and partly, to design the place where Christ, the true Passover or Lamb of God, was to be slain. At the season; understand this with some latitude, as such phrases are commonly taken, about that season, when you had received command from me to go out of Egypt, and were preparing yourselves for the journey.

k Ex. 12. 8, 9. 2 Chr. 34. 13.

7 And thou shalt roast and eat it in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose: and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents.

l 2 Kings 23. John 2. 18, 23. & 11. 55.

Thou shalt roast; so that word is used also 2 Chron. xxxv. 13. In the morning; either, 1. The morning after the seventh day, as appears, partly, by the following verse, which is added to explain and limit this ambiguous word; partly, by the express command of God that the people should come to Jerusalem to keep this feast, which by God's appointment lasted for seven days; partly, from the examples of the people staying there the whole time of the feast, 2 Chron. xxx. 21; xxxv. 17; and partly, from the nature and business of this feast, wherein there being so many extraordinary sacrifices to be offered, and feasts made by the people upon the sacrifices, and two days of solemn assemblies, it is not probable that they would absent themselves from these solemn services, for the performance whereof they came purposely to Jerusalem. Or, 2. The morning after the first day, and so they were permitted to go then, and possibly some that lived near Jerusalem might go and return again to the last day of the solemn assembly. But the former seems more probable. Thy tents, i. e. thy dwellings, which he calls tents, as respecting their present state, and withal to put them in mind afterwards when they were settled in better habitations, that there was a time when they dwelt in tents.

8 Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread: and ^mon the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly to the Lord thy God: thou shalt do no work therein.

m Ex. 12. 16. & 13. 6. Lev. 23. 8. Heb. yeastraist. Lev. 23. 36.

Six days, to wit, besides the first day, on which the passover was killed; or rather besides the seventh and the last day, which is here mentioned apart, not as if leavened bread might be eaten then, for the contrary was evident from many places, but because there was something more to be done, to wit, a solemn assembly to be kept. So in all there were seven days, as it is said, Exod. xii. 15; Lev. xxiii. 6; Numb. xxviii. 17.

9 ¶ Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

n Ex. 23. 16. & 34. 22. Lev. 23. 15. Num. 28. 26. Acts 2. 1.

Seven weeks; of which see on Exod. xxxiv. 22; Lev. xxiii. 10, 15. To put the sickle to the corn, i. e. to reap thy corn, thy barley, when the first-fruits were offered, Lev. xxiii. 10, 11.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the Lord thy God with ^{||}a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the Lord thy God, [°]according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee:

thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates.

^t Lev. 23. 39. 40. 15 'Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.

To wit, in God and the effects of his favour, praising him with glad heart.

^u Ex. 23. 14, 17. & 34. 23. 16 ¶ "Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and *they shall not appear before the LORD empty:

All thy males; not the women, partly, because of their infirmity and unfitness for many journeys; partly, because the care of their children and families lay upon them; and partly, because they were sufficiently represented in the men.

17 Every man shall give † as he is able, † according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee.

18 ¶ "Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment.

Judges; chief magistrates to examine and determine causes and differences. Officers, who were inferior and subordinate to the other, to bring causes and persons before them, to acquaint people with the mind and sentence of the judges, and to execute their sentence, Deut. xx. 5., 9; Josh. i. 10, 11; iii. 2, 3. In all thy gates, i. e. thy cities, which he here calls gates, because there were seats of judgment set. Compare 1 Chron. xxxiii. 4.

19 "Thou shalt not wrest judgment; † thou shalt not respect persons, ° neither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the || words of the righteous.

Not wrest judgment, i. e. not give a perverse, forced, and unjust sentence. See on Exod. xxiii. 8. Not respect persons, i. e. not give sentence according to the quality of the person, his riches or poverty, friendship or enmity, but according to the justice of the cause. A gift doth blind the eyes of the wise; corrupts and biasset his mind, that as he will not, so ofttimes he cannot, discern between right and wrong. The words of the righteous; either, 1. The words, i. e. the sentence, of those judges who are inclined and used to do righteous things, and have the repute of righteous men, it makes them give wrong judgment. Or, 2. The words, i. e. the matters, or causes, (as word oft signifies,) of righteous persons, or of them whose cause is just.

20 † That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest ^d live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

That which is altogether just, Heb. righteousness, righteousness, i. e. nothing but righteousness in all causes and times, and to all persons equally. Compare Isa. xxvi. 7.

21 ¶ "Thou shalt not plant thee a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the LORD thy God, which thou shalt make thee.

Because this was the practice of idolaters, 1 Kings xv.

13, and might be an occasion of reviving idolatry. See Judg. iii. 7; 1 Kings xiv. 23; xvi. 33; xviii. 19.

22 'Neither shalt thou set thee up ^f Lev. 26. 1. any || image; which the LORD thy God ^g Or, statue, or, pillar. hateth.

Heb. statue, whether with a picture or representation, or without it, as the idolaters used to worship smoothed and polished stones or pillars without any image upon them.

CHAP. XVII.

They are not to offer blemished sacrifices, 1. Idolaters are to be put to death, 2—7. Doubts in difficult matters to be resolved by priests and judges, 8—13. To choose a king of their own brethren, and not a stranger, 14, 15. The duty of their king, 16—20.

THOU "shalt not sacrifice unto the LORD ^a ch. 15. 21. thy God any bullock, or || sheep, where- ^b Mal. i. 8, 13, 14. in is blemish, or any evilfavouredness: ^c Or, goat. for that is an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

Any bullock or sheep, i. e. either greater or smaller sacrifices, all being comprehended under the two most eminent kinds. See Lev. xxii. 20, 21. An abomination, i. e. abominable, as Deut. xviii. 12.

2 ¶ ^b If there be found among you, ^b ch. 13. 6. within any of thy gates which the LORD thy God giveth thee, man or woman, that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the LORD thy God, ° in transgressing his covenant, Man or woman; the weakness and tenderness of that sex shall not excuse her sin, nor prevent her punishment. In transgressing his covenant, i. e. in idolatry, as it is explained ver. 3, which is called a transgression of God's covenant made with Israel, partly because it is a breach of their faith given to God, and of that law which they covenanted to keep; and principally because it is a dissolution of their matrimonial covenant with God, a renouncing of God and his worship and service, and a choosing other gods.

3 And hath gone and served other gods, and worshipped them, either ^d the ^d ch. 4. 19. sun, or moon, or any of the host of heaven, ° which I have not commanded; ^e Job 31. 25, 26, 31. & 19. 5. & 32. 35.

Those glorious creatures, which are to be admired as the wonderful works of God, but not to be set up in God's stead, nor worshipped as gods: see Job xxxi. 26. By condemning the most specious and reasonable of all idolaters, he intimates how absurd a thing it is to worship stocks and stones, the works of men's hands. Which I have not commanded, i. e. I have forbidden, to wit, Exod. xx. Such negative expressions are oft emphatical, and imply the contrary, as Prov. x. 2; xvii. 21; xxiv. 23.

4 'And it be told thee, and thou hast ^f ch. 13. 12. heard of it, and enquired diligently, and, ¹⁴ behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel:

Told thee by any person, thou shalt not slight so much as a rumour or flying report of so gross a crime. Inquired diligently, by sending messengers, examining witnesses, &c.

5 Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and *shalt stone them with stones, till they die.

6 ^h At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death. ^g Lev. 24. 14, 16. ch. 13. 10. Josh. 7. 25. ^h Num. 35. 30. ch. 19. 15. Matt. 19. 16. John 8. 17. 2 Cor. 13. 1. 1 Tim. 5. 19. Heb. 10. 28.

At the mouth, i. e. upon the testimony delivered upon oath before the magistrates. Three witnesses, to wit, credible and competent witnesses. The Jews rejected the testimonies of madmen, children, women, servants, familiar friends, or enemies, persons of dissolute lives and evil fame.

7 The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So thou shalt put the evil away from among you.

Shall be first upon him; either laid upon his head to design the person, or stretched out to throw the first stone at him. God thus ordered it, partly for the caution of witnesses, that if they had through malice or wrath accused him falsely, they might now be afraid to imbrue their hands in innocent blood; partly for the security and satisfaction of the people in the execution of this punishment. The hand of all the people, who, being all highly and particularly obliged to God, are bound to express their zeal for his honour and service, and their detestation of all persons and things so highly dishonourable and abominable to him.

8 ¶ If there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates: then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the place which the LORD thy God shall choose;

Too hard for thee; he speaks to the inferior magistrates, who were erected in several cities, as appears by the opposition of these to them at Jerusalem. If, saith he, thou hast not skill or confidence to determine so weighty and difficult a cause. Between blood and blood, i. e. in capital causes in matter of bloodshed, whether it be wilful or casual murder, whether punishable or pardonable by those laws, Exod. xxi. 13, 20, 22, 28; xxii. 2; Numb. xxxv. 11, 16, 19; Deut. xix. 4, 10. Between plea and plea; in civil causes or suits between plaintiffs and defendants about words or estates. Between stroke and stroke, i. e. either first in ceremonial causes, between plague and plague, between the true leprosy, which is oftentimes called the plague, and the seeming and counterfeit leprosy, which was oftentimes hard to determine. And under this, as the most eminent of the kind, may seem to be contained all ceremonial uncleannesses. But this seems not probable, 1. Because the final determination of the matter of leprosy is manifestly left to any particular priest, Lev. xiii. xiv. 2. Because the person suspected of leprosy was not to be brought to Jerusalem, to be tried there, but was to be shut up in his own city and house, Lev. xiii. 4, 5; and the judges at Jerusalem neither could nor would determine his case without once seeing the person. 3. Because the case of leprosy was not hard or difficult, as those causes are said to be, but plain and evident, and so particularly and punctually described, that the priest needed only eyes to decide it. Or rather, 2. In criminal causes, concerning blows or wounds inflicted by one man upon another, and to be required to him by the sentence of the magistrate according to that law, Exod. xxi. 23–25, wherein there might be many cases of great difficulty and doubt, about which see the annotations there. Matters of controversy, i. e. such things or matters of blood and pleas and strokes being doubtful, and the magistrates divided in their opinions about it; for if it was a clear case, this was not to be done. Some make this an additional clause to comprehend these and all other things, thus as if he had said, and in general, any words or matters of strifes or contentions. Which the Lord shall choose, to wit, to set up his worship and tabernacle or temple there; because there was the abode, both of their sanhedrim, or chief council, which was constituted of priests and civil magistrates, who were most able to determine all controversies, and of the high priests, who were to consult God by Urim, Numb. xxvii. 21, in great matters, which could not be decided otherwise.

9 And thou shalt come unto the priests the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and enquire; and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgment:

Unto the priests the Levites, i. e. unto the great council, which it is here denominated from, because it consisted chiefly of the priests and Levites, as being the best expositors of the laws of God, by which all those controversies mentioned ver. 8 were to be decided. And the high priest was commonly one of that number, and may seem to be understood here under the priests, whereof he was the chief. Unto the judge: this judge here is either, 1. The supreme civil magistrate, who was made by God the keeper of both tables, and was by his office to take care of the right administration both of justice and of religion, who was to determine causes and suits by his own skill and authority in civil matters, and by the priests' direction in spiritual or sacred causes. But this seems obnoxious to some difficulties, because, 1. This judge was obliged to dwell in the place of God's worship, which the civil magistrate was not, and oftentimes did not. 2. This judge was one whose office it was to expound and teach others the law of God, as it here follows, ver. 11, therefore not the civil magistrate. Or, 2. The high priest, who was obliged to live in this place, to whom it belonged to determine some at least of those controversies mentioned ver. 8, and to teach and expound the law of God. And he may be distinctly named, though he be one of the priests, partly because of his eminency and superiority over the rest of them, as after all David's enemies Saul is particularly mentioned, Psal. xviii. title; and partly to show that amongst the priests he especially was to be consulted in such cases. But this also seems liable to objections. 1. That he seems to be included under that general expression of the priests and Levites. 2. That the high priest is never in all the Scripture called simply the judge, but generally called the priest, or the high priest, or chief priest, or the like; and it is most probable if Moses had meant him here, he would have expressed him by some of his usual names and titles, and not by a strange title which was not likely to be understood. 3. That divers controversies between blood and blood, plea and plea, stroke and stroke, were not to be determined by the high priest, but by other persons, as appears by Exod. xviii. 22; Deut. i. 16, 17. Or, 3. The sanhedrim or supreme council, which, as was said before, consisted partly of priests, and partly of wise and learned persons of other tribes, as is confessed by all the Jewish and most other writers. And so this is added by way of explication, partly to show that the priests and Levites here mentioned, as the persons to whom all hard controversies are to be referred, are not all the priests and Levites which should reside in Jerusalem, but only such of them as were or should be members of that great council by whom, together with their fellow-members of other tribes, these causes were to be decided; partly to intimate that that great council, which had the chief and final determination of all the above-said controversies, was a mixed assembly, consisting of wise and good men, some ecclesiastical, and some secular; as it was most meet it should be, because many of the causes which were brought unto them were mixed causes. As for the conjunctive particle and, that may be taken either disjunctively for or, as it is Exod. xxi. 15, 17, compared with Matt. xv. 4; and Numb. xxxv. 5, 6, compared with Matt. xii. 37; and Lev. vi. 3, 5; 2 Sam. ii. 19, 21; or exegetically, for that is, or to wit, as Judg. vii. 24; 1 Sam. xvii. 40; xxviii. 3; 2 Chron. xxxv. 14; and so the sense may be, the priests, the Levites, or the judge, as it is ver. 12; or, the priests, the Levites, that is, the judge, or the judges appointed for this work. And though the word judge be in the singular number, and may seem to denote one person, yet it is only an enallage, or change of the number, the singular for the plural, judges, which is most frequent, as Gen. iii. 2, 7; xlix. 6; 1 Sam. xxxi. 1; 1 Kings x. 22; 2 Kings xi. 10, compared with 2 Chron. ix. 21; xxiii. 9; and in the Hebrew, 1 Chron. iv. 42, where divers officers are called one head. And so it is most probably here, 1. Because the following words which belong to this run altogether in the plural number, they, they, they, &c., here and ver. 10, 11. 2. Because here is the same enallage in the other branch, the same person or persons being called the priests here, and the priest ver. 12. 3. Because for the judge here is put the judges, Deut. xix. 17, where we have the same phrase used upon the same or a like occasion, the men between whom the controversy is shall stand before the Lord, before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days. Nor is it strange, but very fit and reasonable, that so many persons being all united in one body, and to give judgment or sentence by the consent of all, or the greatest part, should be here called by the name of one judge, as indeed they were; and for that reason the priests are spoken of in the plural number, because they were many, as also the other members of that assembly were, and the judge in the singular number, because they all constituted but one judge. The sentence of judgment, Heb. the word or matter of judgment, i. e. the true state and right of the cause, and what judgment or sentence ought to be given in it.

10 And thou shalt do according to the sentence, which they of that place which the LORD shall choose shall shew thee; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee:

Thou shalt, i. e. thou shalt pass sentence; for he speaks to the inferior magistrates, as was before noted, who were to give sentence, and came hither to be advised about it. Thou shalt observe to do. It is very observable that this place doth not speak of all controversies of faith, as if they were to believe every thing which they should teach; but only of some particular matters of practice and strife between man and man, to which it is plainly limited, ver. 8. And they are not here commanded to believe, but only to do, which is thrice repeated.

11 According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do: thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left.

According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee: these words are a manifest limitation of the foregoing assertion, that they were to do according to all that the judge or judges informed him. And they seem to limit and regulate, 1. The judges in their sentence, that they shall not, upon pretence of this supreme authority put into their hands, presume to teach or direct otherwise than the law prescribes. 2. The people in their obedience; that they shall not simply obey them in all things, but so far forth as their sentence is according to the law and word of God, but not when their commands are evidently contrary to God's laws, for then, say even popish commentators on this place, they must obey God rather than man. And this cannot be denied by any man of sense, upon supposition that this place speaks of, and this power given to the priest or judge reacheth to, all controversies or questions of faith and manners, as the papists would extend it: for put case these priests or judges should give a sentence directly contrary to the express words of God's law, Thou shalt worship a graven image, as Aaron did in the case of the calf, thou shalt profane the sabbath, thou shalt dishonour thy father and mother, thou shalt murder, steal, commit adultery, &c., I ask, were the people in this case bound to do as the judge determined, or not? If any say they were, such a bold and wicked assertion must need strike all sober Christians with horror; and if they say they were not, then this must needs be taken for a limitation. But this place speaks only of particular suits between man and man, as is apparent from the notes on ver. 8. And in all such cases, although the judge be hereby confined and tied to his rule in giving the sentence, yet it seems but fit and reasonable that people should be bound simply to acquiesce in the sentence of their last and highest judge, or else there would have been no end of strife.

12 And ^r the man that will do presumptuously, ^s and will not hearken unto the priest ^t that standeth to minister there before the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die: and ^u thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

That will do presumptuously, i. e. that will proudly and obstinately oppose the sentence given against him. This is opposite to ignorance and error, Exod. xxi. 13, 14. The evil; either, 1. The evil thing, that scandal, that pernicious example. Or, 2. That evil, refractory, pernicious person, whose practice herein tends to the dissolution of all government, and the ruin of the commonwealth of Israel.

13 ^u And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 ¶ When thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, ^x I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

He only foresees and foretells what they would do, but doth not seem to approve of it, because when they did this thing for this very reason here alleged, he declares his utter dislike of it, 1 Sam. viii. 7.

15 Thou shalt in any wise set ^y him king over thee, ^z whom the LORD thy God shall choose: ^a one ^b from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

Thou shalt set him, i. e. appoint, or install. If you will choose a king, which I shall suffer you to do, I command you to mind this in your choice. Whom the Lord shall choose, approve of, or appoint. So it was in Saul, and in David. God reserved to himself the nomination both of the family and of the person. See 1 Sam. ix. 15; x. 24; xvi. 12; 1 Chron. xxviii. 4, 5. From among thy brethren; of the same nation and religion; partly because such a person was most likely to maintain true religion, and to rule with righteousness, gentleness, and kindness to his subjects; and partly that he might be a fit type of Christ, their supreme King, who was to be one of their brethren. Mayest not set a stranger over thee, to wit, by thy own choice and consent; but if God by his providence and for their sins should set a stranger over them, they might submit to him, as appears from Jer. xxxviii. 17; Ezek. xvii. 12; Matt. xxii. 17.

16 But he shall not multiply ^c horses to himself, nor cause the people ^d to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as ^e the LORD hath said unto you, ^f Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.

He shall not multiply horses to himself, to wit, excessively, beyond what the state and majesty of his place required. Hereby God would prevent many sins and mischiefs, as, 1. Pride of heart, and contempt of his people. 2. Oppression and tyranny, and the imposition of unnecessary burdens upon his people. 3. Carnal confidence, which by this means would be promoted. See Psal. xxxiii. 17; Prov. xxi. 31. 4. Much commerce with Egypt, as it here follows, which was famous for horses, as appears from Exod. xiv. 23; 1 Kings x. 26, 28; 2 Chron. i. 16; ix. 28; Isa. xxxi. 1, 3; Ezek. xvii. 15. Nor cause the people to return to Egypt; either for habitation, or for trade. This God forbade to prevent, 1. Their unthankfulness for their deliverance out of Egypt. 2. Their confederacies with the Egyptians, their trusting to them for aid, which they were very prone to, and their infection by the idolatry and other manifold wickednesses for which Egypt was infamous. 3. Their multiplication of horses, as it here follows. The Lord hath said: when or where? Answo. Either implicitly, when he showed his dislike of their return to Egypt, as Exod. xiii. 17; Numb. xiv. 3, 4; or expressly at this time, The Lord hath now said it to me, and I in his name, and by his command, declare it to you. That way; in the way that leads to that place.

17 Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that ^g his heart turn not away: neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold.

Neither shall he multiply wives, as the manner of other kings was. That his heart turn not away, to wit, from God and his law; either, 1. To idolatry and superstition, to which women are oftentimes prone, and especially such women as he was likely to choose, even the daughters of neighbouring and idolatrous kings and princes, as Solomon did; or, 2. To other manifold sins and violations of his duty to his people, either by neglect and contempt of his business, through effeminacy and sloth, or by oppressing his people, and perverting justice, to comply with the vast and exorbitant desires of his wives. Neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold, lest this should lift up his heart in confidence and pride, which God abhors, and beget in him a contempt of his people; and lest it should incline, or engage, or enable him to burden his people with immoderate exactions. They are not simply forbidden to be rich, if God made them so either by the voluntary gifts of their subjects, or by the spoils of their enemies, which was the case of David, and Solomon, and Jehoshaphat, &c.; but they are forbidden either inordinately to desire, or irregularly to procure, great riches by grinding the faces of their poor people, or by other wicked arts and courses, as the manner of their neighbouring kings was.

18 And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of ^gthat which is before the priests the Levites:

He shall write; either with his own hand, as the Jews say; or, at least, by his command and procurement. Out of that which is before the priests the Levites, i. e. out of the original, which was carefully kept by the priests in the sanctuary, Deut. xxxi. 26; 2 Kings xxii. 8, partly that it might be a true and perfect copy, and partly that it might have the greater authority and influence upon him, coming to him as from the hand and presence of God.

19 And ^hit shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them:

All the days of his life, i. e. diligently and constantly; neither the greatness of his place, nor the weight and multitude of his business, shall excuse or hinder him.

20 That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he ⁱturn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

That his heart be not lifted up; he intimates, that the Scriptures, diligently read and studied, are a powerful and probable means to keep him humble, because they show him that, though a king, he is subject to a higher Monarch, to whom he must give an account of all his administrations and actions, and receive from him his sentence and doom agreeable to their quality, which is sufficient to abate the pride of the haughtiest person in the world, if he duly consider it.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Lord is the priests' and Levites' inheritance, 1, 2. Their due from the people, 3-5. A Levite's portion that came to serve voluntarily, 6-8. All unlawful arts prohibited, 9-14. Christ is promised, whom they must hearken to, 15-19. False prophets threatened, 20. The mark of a false prophet, 21, 22.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, ^ashall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they ^bshall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

The offerings of the Lord made by fire; by which phrase we here manifestly see that he means not burnt-offerings, which were wholly consumed by fire, and no part of them eaten by the priests; but other sacrifices, whereof part was offered to the Lord by fire, and part was allotted to the priests for their food. His inheritance, i. e. the Lord's portion or inheritance, which God had reserved to himself, as tithes and first-fruits, and other oblations distinct from those which were made by fire; and so these two branches make up the whole of that which belonged to God, and was by him given to the Levites.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren: the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

i. e. The Lord's part and right, as was now said.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

A sacrifice, to wit, a sacrifice of thanksgiving, or a peace-offering, as appears from Lev. vii. 31, 33, which is oftentimes called simply a sacrifice, as Exod. xviii. 12; Lev. xvii. 5, 8; Numb. xv. 3; Deut. xii. 27. The shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw. Quest. How doth this agree with other texts, in which the shoulder and the breast, and those parts only, are the priest's due, not the cheeks and maw? Answ. 1. Who shall tie God's hands? what if he now makes an addition, and enlargeth the priest's commons? Nothing more usual than for one scripture to supply what is lacking in another, and for a latter law of God to add to a former. 2. The breast may be here omitted, because it is comprehended under the shoulder, to which it is commonly joined, and with which it was waved before the Lord. 3. The Hebrew word here rendered maw or stomach, which was reckoned among dainties by the ancients, is not to my remembrance used elsewhere, and therefore it may have another signification, and some render it the breast, others take it for the uppermost part of the stomach, which lies under the breast.

4 ^dThe firstfruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For ^ethe LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, ^fto stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

To minister in the name of the Lord, i. e. either by authority and commission from him, or for his honour, worship, or service.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he ^gsojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind ^hunto the place which the LORD shall choose;

Either for any private occasions, or to sojourn there for a season, or rather with full purpose to fix his abode, and to spend his whole time and strength in the service of God, as appears by the sale of his patrimony, mentioned ver. 8. It seems probable that the several priests were to come from their cities to the temple by turns before David's time, and it is certain they did so after it. But if any of them were not contented with this seldom attendance upon God in his tabernacle or temple, and desired more entirely and constantly to devote himself to God's service there, he was permitted so to do, because this was an eminent act of piety joined with self-denial to part with those great conveniences which he could and did enjoy in the city of his possession, and to oblige himself to more constant and laborious work about the sacrifices, &c.

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, ⁱas all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

8 They shall have like ^kportions to eat, beside ^lthat which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

Like portions, to wit, with their brethren who were in actual ministration; as they share with them in the work, so shall they also in the encouragements. Beside that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony; though he have an estate whereby he may subsist raised by the sale of his house in his city, and his cattle, and other movables, yet you shall not upon this ground either deny or diminish their part of your maintenance. The reason of this law was, partly because he that waited on the altar ought to live by the altar; and partly because it was fit he should keep his money, wherewith he might redeem what he sold, if afterwards he saw occasion for it. Heb. besides his sales by the fathers, i. e. of that which came to him by his fathers, or, according to his fathers, or, his father's house; and these words may be joined not with the word immediately foregoing, but with the former part of the verse, the next word coming in by a kind of parenthesis, in this manner and order, Besides that which cometh by the sale of their goods, they shall have like portions to eat to what their brethren have, each of them eating according to his father's house, i. e. a Gershonite shall eat with his brethren the Gershonites who are then ministering, and a Merarite with the Merarites, &c., and so there shall be no disturbance nor change in the appointed courses by their accession to the number.

Or, an observer of the clouds or heavens, i. e. one that divineth by the motions of the clouds, by the stars, or by the flying or chattering of birds, all which heathens used to observe. An enchanter, or, a conjurer, that discovers hidden things by a superstitious use of words or ceremonies, by observation of water or smoke, or any contingencies, as the meeting of a hare, &c. See on Lev. xix. 26. A witch; one that is in covenant with the devil, and by his help deludes their senses, or hurts their persons. See Exod. vii. 11; xxii. 18.

See more on Lev. xix. 31; xx. 6. A consulter with familiar spirits, whom they call upon by certain words or rites to engage them in evil designs. A wizard, Heb. a knowing or cunning man, who by any superstitious or forbidden ways undertakes the revelation of secret things. A necromancer; one that calleth up and inquireth of the dead, 1 Sam. xxviii. 8; Isa. viii. 19.

Sincerely and wholly his, seeking him and cleaving to him and to his word alone, and therefore abhorring all commerce and conversations with devils or their agents, such as were now mentioned.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

Hath not suffered thee to follow thy own vain mind, and these superstitious and diabolical practices, as he hath suffered other nations to do, Acts xiv. 16, but hath instructed thee better by his word and Spirit, and thereby kept thee from such courses, and will more fully instruct thee by a great Prophet, &c. Or, hath not given to thee, to wit, such persons to consult with, but hath given thee prophets to instruct thee, and will in due time give thee an eminent Prophet, as it here follows.

John 1. 45.
7. 37.

Will raise up, i. e. will produce and send into the world in due time. A Prophet: those words may be understood secondarily concerning the succession of prophets which God would raise for the instruction of his church, both because this is alleged as an argument why they need not consult with diviners, &c., because they should have prophets at hand whensoever it was needful to advise them, and because this Prophet is opposed to the false prophet; and a general rule is hereupon given for the discovery of all succeeding prophets, whether they be true or false, ver. 20—22; but they are chiefly to be understood of Christ, as the following words show, which do not truly and fully agree to any other; particularly where he is said to be like unto Moses, which is simply denied concerning all other prophets, Deut. xxxiv. 10, and therefore it is not probable that it should be simply affirmed concerning all true prophets succeeding him. But Christ was truly, and in all commendable parts, like him, in being both a Prophet and a King, and a Priest and Mediator, as Moses was, in the excellency of his ministry and work, in the glory of his miracles, in his familiar and intimate converse with God, &c. And this place is expounded of Christ alone by God himself in the New Testament, Acts iii. 22; vii. 37. See also John i. 45; vi. 14.

If the thing follow not ; which he gives as a sign of the truth of his prophecy. He means the prediction of some strange and wonderful event, as appears by comparing this with Deut. xiii. 1, 2. The Lord hath not spoken : the falsehood of his prediction shows him to be a false prophet, though the truth and accomplishment of his prediction had not proved him to be a true prophet, as is evident from Deut. xiii. 2, 3. Presumptuously ; impudently ascribing his own vain and lying fancies to the God of truth. Thou shalt not be afraid of him, i. e. of his predictions or threatenings, so as to be scared from doing thy duty in bringing him to deserved punishment.

In the midst of thy land, to wit, beyond Jordan, as there were three already appointed on this side Jordan, Numb. xxxv. 14. He saith, in the midst of the land, either for in the land, as in the midst of the city, Jer. lii. 25, is the same with that in the city, 2 Kings xxv. 19, or to design the places, that they should be situated in the midst of the several parts of their land, to which they might conveniently and speedily flee from all the parts of the land.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

Thou shalt prepare thee a way ; distinguish it by evident marks, and make it plain and convenient, to prevent mistakes and delays. Into three parts ; not into more, because it was fit that these places should, as far as it was possible, be at some considerable distance from the friends of the slain person, lest the sight of the manslayer might have provoked their passion, and occasioned his ruin.

^{c Num. 35.} ^{15. ch. 4. 42.} 4 ¶ And °this is the case of the slayer, which shall flee thither, that he may live : Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not †in time past ;

6 ^aLest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and †slay him ; whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not †in time past.

This verse is to be joined with ver. 3, as is evident, the 4th and 5th verses coming in as a parenthesis, which is usual in Scripture and other authors. And slay him ; which is supposed, but not allowed, as appears from the following words. But the avenger of blood is not to be punished with death for killing the manslayer, in case he found him without the borders of the city of refuge after he had been received there, Numb. xxxv. 26, 27, because then he was guilty of a new crime, to wit, a contempt of God's ordinance, and a gross neglect of the duty of self-preservation, and therefore deserved death from God, who might permit it to be inflicted by the avenger of blood.

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God °enlarge ^{e Gen. 15.} ^{18. ch. 12.} ^{20.} thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers ;

Enlarge thy coast, as far as Euphrates. See Gen. xv. 18 ; Exod. xxiii. 31 ; Deut. i. 7.

9 If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways ; †then ^{f Josh. 20.} ^{7, 8.} shalt thou add three cities more for thee, beside these three :

10 That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But °if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him †mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities :

12 Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

The elders of his city ; either of the slain person, who were most likely to prosecute the murderer ; or of the murderer, because God would oblige even his own fellow citizens to prosecute him to death, that it might appear how hateful murder and the murderer is to God, and ought to be to all men. Fetch him thence ; demand him of the elders of the city of refuge, who upon the hearing of the cause and the evidence of the murder were obliged to deliver the offender to justice.

Those which remain, i. e. the rest of the people. See Deut. xiii. 11; xvii. 13.

21 ° And thine eye shall not pity; but ^q life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

What punishment he intended or the law allotted to the accused, if he had been convicted, the same shall the false accuser bear. Of this law see on Exod. xxi. 24; Lev. xxiv. 20.

CHAP. XX.

The priest's exhortation to encourage the people to fight their enemies, 1—4. The officers' proclamation who are to be dismissed from the war, 5—9. A proclamation of peace to be made to besieged cities, 10, and to deal with them as they accept or refuse it, 11—18. What trees were to be cut down for the siege, and what not, 19, 20.

WHEN thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest ^a horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them: for the LORD thy God is ^b with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

When thou goest out to battle, upon a just and necessary cause, as upon great provocation, or for thy own defence.

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

The priest; an eminent priest appointed for this work, and to blow with the holy trumpets, Numb. x. 9; xxxi. 6. Speak unto the people; either successively to one regiment of the army after another, or to some by himself, to others by his brethren or deputies, which accompanied him for that end.

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel, ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts ^c faint, fear not, and do not ^d tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them;

Faint, Heb. be soft or tender. Softness or tenderness of heart towards God is commended, 2 Kings xxii. 19, but towards enemies it is condemned, here and ver. 8; Lev. xxvi. 36; 2 Chron. xiii. 7; Isa. vii. 4.

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, ° to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

^e ch. i. 30, & 3. 22. Josh. 23. 10.

5 ¶ And the officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not ^e dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

^d See Neh. 12. 27. 1^a 30, title.

Houses were dedicated by feasting and thanksgiving to God. See the title of Psal. xxx., and Neh. xii. 27. Heb. hath initiated it, i. e. entered upon it, taken possession of it, dwelt in it. Let him return to his house, lest his heart be set upon it, and thereby he be negligent or timorous in the battle, to the scandal and prejudice of others. Another man dedicate it; and so he should lose and another get the fruit of his labours, which might seem unjust or hard. And God provides even for men's infirmities. But this and the following exceptions are to be understood only of a war allowed by God, not in a war commanded by God, not in the approaching war with the Canaanites, from which even the bridegroom was not exempted, as the Jewish writers note.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not ^f yet eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

^h Heb. made it common: See Lev. 19. 23, 24. ch. 28. 30.

This and the former dispensation were generally convenient, but more necessary in the beginning of their settlement in Canaan, for the encouragement of those who should build houses or plant vineyards, which was chargeable to them, and beneficial to the commonwealth. Eaten of it, Heb. made it common, to wit, for the use of himself and family and friends, which it was not till the fifth year, Lev. xix. 23, &c.; Jer. xxxi. 5.

7 ° And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her.

^e ch. 24. 5.

Betrothing was done by a solemn and mutual promise, but not by an actual contract. See Gen. xix. 14; Deut. xxii. 23.

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, 'What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart ^g faint as well as his heart.

^f Judg. 7. 3.

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make captains of the armies ^h to lead the people.

^h Heb. to be in the head of the people.

Or rather, as the Hebrew hath it, they shall set or place the captains of the armies in the head or front of the people under their charge, that they may conduct and manage them, and by their example encourage their soldiers. But it is not likely they had their captains to make or choose when they were just going to battle.

10 ¶ When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, ° then proclaim peace unto it.

^g 2 Sam. 20. 18, 20.

This seems to be understood not of the cities of the Canaanites, as is manifest from ver. 16—18, who were under an absolute sentence of utter destruction, Exod. xxiii. 32, 33; Deut. vii. 1, 2; whence they are blamed that made any league or peace with them, Judg. ii. 2; but of the cities either of other nations who injured or disturbed them, or commenced war against them, or aided their enemies, or oppressed their friends and allies; or of the Hebrews themselves, if they were guilty or abettors of idolatry or apostasy from God, or of sedition or rebellion against authority, or of giving protection and defence to capital offenders. See Gen. xiv.; Judg. xx.; 2 Sam. xx., &c.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

By their purses, and by their labours too, as appears from 1 Kings ix. 15; 2 Chron. viii. 7, 8.

12 And if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it :

13 And when the LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, ^hthou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword :

A just punishment of their obstinate refusal of peace offered.

14 But the women, and the little ones, and ⁱthe cattle, and all that is in the city, ^{+ Heb. spoil.} even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou [†]take unto thyself; and ^hthou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

The little ones, excused by their sex or age, as not involved in the guilt, nor being likely to revenge their quarrel.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 But ⁱof the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth :

Heb. no soul, i. e. no man, as that word is oft used. Compare Josh. x. 40, with xi. 14. For the beasts, some few excepted as being under a special curse, were given them for a prey.

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them; nameiy, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee :

18 That ^mthey teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye ⁿsin against the LORD your God.

19 ¶ When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an ax against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (¶ for the tree of the field is man's life) [†]to employ them in the siege :

The trees thereof, to wit, the fruit trees, as appears from the following words; which is to be understood of a general destruction of them, not of the cutting down of some few of them, as the conveniency of the siege might require. Man's life, i. e. the sustenance or support of his life, as life is taken Deut. xxiv. 6. But this place may be otherwise translated, as it is in the margin of our English Bibles: For, O man, (the Hebrew letter he being here the note of a vocative case, as it is Psal. ix. 7.) the tree (or trees, the singular number for the plural, as is common) of the field is (or ought, as the Hebrew lamed is used Esth. ix. 1; Psal. lxii. 10) to be employed in the siege; or, as it is in the Hebrew, to go before thy face, i. e. to make fences for thy security, in the siege. The trees of the field: I here understand not its general signification of all trees, including fruit-bearing trees, as that phrase is commonly used, but in its more special and distinct signification, for unfruitful trees, as it is taken Isa. lv. 12; or such as grow only in open fields, such as are elsewhere called the trees of the wood, 1 Chron. xvi. 33; Isa. vii. 2, or the trees of the forest, Cant. ii. 3; Isa. x. 19, which are opposed to the trees of the gardens, Gen. iii. 2, 8; Eccl. ii. 5; Ezek. xxxi. 9; as the flower of the field, Psal. ciii. 15; Isa. xl. 6, and the lilies of the field, Matt. vi. 28, are opposed to those that grow in gardens, and are preserved and cultivated by the gardener's art and care. And so it is a very proper argument to dissuade from the destroying of fruit trees, because the wild and unfruitful trees were sufficient for the use of the siege. And this sense fitly agrees with the following words, where the concession or grant, which here is delivered in more ambiguous terms, of the tree of the field, is repeated and explained concerning the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat.

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down; and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until [†]it be subdued.

CHAP. XXI.

How to expiate an uncertain murder, 1—9. The usage of a captive taken to wife, 10—14. The first-born, though the son of the hated, is not to be disinherited, 15—17. The punishment of a stubborn son, viz. death, 18—21. The cursed death of them that are hanged, 22, 23.

IF one be found slain in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him :

In the field; or, in the city, or any place; only the field is named, as the place where such murders are most commonly committed, and most easily concealed.

2 Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain :

Thy elders and thy judges; those of thy elders who are judges; for the latter word explains and restrains the former, the judges or rulers of all the neighbouring cities, who were all concerned in this inquiry. They shall measure, unless it be evident and confessed which city is nearest, for then measuring was superfluous.

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke ;

A fit vicegerent and representative of the murderer, in whose stead it was killed, who by this act hath shown himself to be a son of Belial, who would not bear the yoke of God's law. A type also of Christ, who was obliged to no work, and under no yoke, but what he had voluntarily taken upon himself.

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley :

Neither eared nor sown; partly to represent the hard and unprofitable and untutored heart of the murderer; and partly that such a desert and horrid place might beget a horror of murder and of the murderer. Strike off the heifer's neck, to show what they would and should have done to the murderer if they had found him.

5 And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near; for ^athem the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD; and ^bby their [†]word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried :

^a ch. 10. 8.

^{+ Heb. mouth.}

The priests shall come near, both to direct them in all the circumstances of action and to see that the law was observed, and to bless them in God's name, by praying for them, and absolving or pronouncing them guiltless in this matter. Every controversy; not absolutely all manner of controversies that could possibly arise, as if their word were to determine whether there were a God or providence or no, whether God should be worshipped, and his commands observed, or no, whether Moses was a true prophet or an impostor, whether apostate and idolatrous Israelites should be punished or no, which is apparently absurd and ridiculous; but every such controversy as might arise about the matter here spoken of; nothing being more usual than to understand universal expressions in a limited sense; and indeed this is limited and explained by the following words, and every stroke, the particle and being put expositively, of which instances have been formerly given, i. e. every controversy which shall arise about any stroke, whether such a mortal stroke as is here spoken of, a murder, which may well be called a stroke, as to smite is oft used for to kill, as Gen. iv. 15; Lev. xxiv. 17, &c., or any other stroke or wound given by one man to another.

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley:

In testimony of their innocency. See on Matt. xxvii. 24.

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

They shall answer, to wit, to the priests who shall examine them and determine this controversy. This blood; this about which the present inquiry is made; or this which is here present; for it is thought the corpse of the slain man was brought into the same place where the heifer was slain. Neither have our eyes seen it; nor have we seen or understood how or by whom this was done.

8 Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, and lay not innocent blood †unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.

i. e. Not imputed to them, nor punished in them; for God is sometimes said to forgive when he doth not punish, as Psal. lxxviii. 38. Besides, though there was no mortal guilt in this people, yet there was a ceremonial uncleanness in the land, which was to be expiated and forgiven.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive, Thine enemies, of other nations, but not of the Canaanites, for they might not spare their women, and much less marry them, Exod. xxxiv. 16; Deut. vii. 3.

11 And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife;

Hast a desire unto her; or, hast cleaved to her, to wit, in love; or, hast taken delight in her; which may be a modest expression for lying with her, and seems probable, because it is said, ver. 14, that he had humbled her, to wit, by military insolence, when he took her captive, not after he had married her, for then he would have expressed it thus, because thou hast married her, which had been more emphatical than to say, because thou hast humbled her. And here seem to be two cases supposed, and direction given what to do in both of them: 1. That he did desire to marry her, of which he speaks ver. 11—13. 2. That he did not desire this, or not delight in her, of which he speaks ver. 14.

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house; and she shall shave her head, and †pare her nails;

Either, 1. To take off his affections from her by rendering her uncomely and deformed; but then the last words must not be rendered shall pare her nails, but shall nourish them, or suffer them to grow, as the Chaldee, Arabic, and divers of the learned Jews and other interpreters render it. Or, 2. To express her sorrow for the loss of her father and mother, as it follows, ver. 13, it being the ancient custom of mourners in most nations to shave themselves, and in some to pare their nails, in others to suffer them to grow. Or rather, 3. In token of her renouncing her heathenish idolatry and superstition, and of her becoming a new woman, and embracing the true religion; which her captive condition and subjection to his will would make her inclinable to do in profession.

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and †bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.

The raiment of her captivity, i. e. either, 1. Those goodly raiments in which she was when she was taken captive, instead of which she now must put on a servile habit, as this is generally understood; or rather, 2. Those servile and sordid raiments which were put upon her when she was taken captive, as the manner was to do with captives, as the phrase itself seems to intimate; as prison garments (Jer. lii. 33) are such garments as prisoners use to wear; and garments of praise are praiseworthy or glorious garments; and it seems harsh to call those garments of captivity, which are made for and generally worn by free persons only, and which are usually taken away from persons when they come into captivity. Add, that this doth not seem to be any part or token of her sorrow, but rather a mending of her condition, and exchanging her servile habit for a better and more decent one, which might be, though this were a mourning habit. Her father and mother; either their death, or, which was in effect the same, her final separation from them. Withal this signified her alienation from them or from their superstitious and idolatrous courses, and her translation of her love from all other persons to her husband and to the true religion. Compare Psal. xlv. 11. She shall be thy wife; supposing what might very rationally be supposed of one in her circumstances, and what she signified by the foregoing rites, that she should submit to her husband's religion, in which case the marriage might be tolerable. Or this was a permission and indulgence given to them for the hardness of their hearts, as in the case of divorce, Deut. xxiv. 1; Matt. xix. 8.

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast †humbled her.

If thou have no delight in her; either, 1. After thou hast married her; and so this is a permission of a divorce, which being indulged towards an Israelitish woman, was not likely to be denied towards a stranger. Or rather, 2. Before thy marriage; for it is not probable, that God having given him competent time for the trial of his affections to her before he was permitted to marry her, would suffer him upon so slight an occasion, within a day or two after so solemn a contract, to send her away; nor is there a word spoken here of any divorce. Thou shalt not make merchandise of her, i. e. make gain of her, either by using her to thy own servile works, or by prostituting her to the lusts or to the service of others. Humbled her, i. e. lain with her, as this phrase is oft used, as Gen. xxxiv. 2; Deut. xxii. 24, 29; Judg. xix. 24; Ezek. xxiii. 10, 11.

15 ¶ If a man have two wives, one beloved, and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the firstborn son be her's that was hated:

Two wives; either, 1. Both together; which practice, though tolerated, is not hereby made lawful, but only provision is made for the children in that case. Or, 2. One after another. Hated, comparatively, i. e. less loved, as Gen. xxix. 31; Matt. vi. 24; Luke xiv. 26.

16 Then it shall be, ⁱ when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved firstborn before the son of the hated, which is indeed the firstborn :

He may not; it is not lawful, because contrary to the rights and law of nature. Before the son, or, before the face of the son, i. e. in his lifetime, as this phrase is understood, Gen. xi. 28; xvi. 12; xxv. 18. And when this phrase is rendered before another, it signifies only in the presence of another, but never notes the preference of one person to another, which the Hebrews express in another manner. And this may be added to intimate, that if the eldest son were dead, and had left a child, the father was free to give the right of his first-born unto his second son, rather than to the child of the eldest. Or this phrase may be an aggravation of the fact, whereby his father did in a manner spit in his face, and fasten a reproach upon him in his very sight and presence.

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the firstborn, ^k by giving him a double portion of all [†] that he hath : for he is ^l the beginning of his strength ; ^m the right of the firstborn is his.

Acknowledge, i. e. make it appear that he owns him. Double portion; for the phrase, see 2 Kings ii. 9; Zech. xiii. 8; and for the thing, see Gen. xxv. 31; 1 Chron. v. 1. The beginning of his strength, i. e. the first evidence of his manly strength and ability for procreation.

18 ¶ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them :

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place ;

The consent of both father and mother is required to prevent the abuse of this law to cruelty. And it cannot reasonably be supposed that both would agree without manifest necessity, and the son's abominable and incorrigible wickedness, in which case it seems a fit and righteous law, because the crime of rebellion against his own parents was so high in itself, and did so fully signify what a pernicious member and son of Belial he would be in the commonwealth of Israel, who had dissolved all his natural obligations. Yet the Jews say this law was never put in practice, and therefore it might be made for terror and prevention, and to render the authority of parents more sacred and powerful. Bring him out unto the elders of his city; which was a sufficient caution to preserve children from the malice of any hard-hearted parents, because these elders were first to examine the cause with all exactness, and then to pronounce the sentence.

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton, and a drunkard.

Stubborn and rebellious, adds incorrigibility to all his wickedness. A glutton and a drunkard; under which two offences others of a like or worse nature are comprehended by a synecdoche.

21 And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die : ⁿ so shalt thou put evil away from among you ; ^o and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

Stoning was the punishment appointed for blasphemers and idolaters; which if it seem severe, it is to be considered that parents are in God's stead, and intrusted in good measure with his authority over their children; and that families are the matter and foundation of the church and commonwealth, and they who are naughty members and rebellious children in them, do commonly prove the bane and plague of these; and therefore no wonder if they are nipped in the bud.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin ^p worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree :

Which was done after the malefactor was put to death some other way, this public shame being added to his former punishment. See Josh. vii. 25; viii. 29; x. 26; 2 Sam. iv. 12.

23 ^q His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day ; (for ^r he that is hanged is [†] accursed of God ;) that ^s thy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

Is accursed of God, i. e. he is in a singular manner cursed and punished by God's appointment with a most shameful kind of punishment, as this was held among the Jews and all nations; and therefore this punishment may suffice for him, and there shall not be added to it that of lying unburied, which was another great calamity, Jer. xvi. 4. And this curse is here appropriated to those that are hanged, partly because this punishment was inflicted only upon the most notorious and public offenders, and such as brought the curse of God upon the community, as Numb. xxv. 4; 2 Sam. xxi. 6; and principally to forewarn that Christ should undergo this execrable punishment, and be made a curse for us, Gal. iii. 13, which though it was yet to come in respect to men, yet was present unto God, and in his eye at this time. And so this is delivered with respect unto Christ, as many other passages of Scripture manifestly are. Be not defiled, to wit, morally; either by inhumanity towards the dead; or rather by suffering the monument or memorial of the man's great wickedness, and of God's curse, to remain public and visible a longer time than God would have it, whereas it should be put out of sight, and buried in oblivion.

Laws about stray cattle, 1—3. About thy neighbour's ox fallen in the way, 4. Woman's wearing of apparel distinct from man's, 5. Of birds caught, 6, 7. Of batlements for houses, 8. Of divers seeds sown, 9. Of ploughing with an ox and ass, 10. Of garments of divers colours, 11. Of fringes upon the four quarters of a garment, 12. The punishment of him that slandereth his wife, 13—19. Her punishment if the scandal be true, 20, 21. The punishment of adultery, 22—24; of rape, 25—27; of fornication, 28, 29. Against incest, 30.

THOU ^a shalt not see thy brother's ox or ^b his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them : thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother.

Thy brother; so called by communion not of religion, but of nature, as having one Father, even God, Mal. ii. 10; as appears, 1. Because the same law is given about their enemy's ox, &c., Exod. xxiii. 4. 2. Because else the obligation of this law had been uncertain, seeing men could not ordinarily tell whether the straying ox or sheep belonged to a Jew or to a stranger. 3. Because this was a duty of common justice and charity, which the law of nature taught even heathens, and it is absurd to think that the law of God delivered to the Jews should have less charity in it than the law of nature given to the Gentiles. Hide thyself from them, i. e. dissemble or pretend that thou dost not see them; or neglect or pass them by as if thou hadst not seen them.

2 And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again.

If thy brother be not nigh unto thee, which may make the duty more troublesome or chargeable. If thou know him not; which implies, that if they did know the owner, they should restore it to him. Thou shalt bring it unto

a Ex. 23. 4.

thine own house, to be used like thine own cattle. Thou shalt restore it to him again, the owner, as it may be presumed, paying the charges.

3 In like manner shalt thou do with his ass; and so shalt thou do with his raiment; and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself.

i. e. Dissemble that thou hast found it. Or, hide it, i. e. conceal the thing lost.

b Ex. 23. 5. 4 ¶^b Thou shalt not see thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

Help him, i. e. thy brother, the owner. Compare Exod. xxxiii. 5.

5 ¶ The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God.

This shall not be done ordinarily or unnecessarily, for in some cases it may be lawful, as to make an escape for one's life. Now this is forbidden, partly for decency sake, that men might not confound, nor seem to confound, those sexes which God hath distinguished, that all appearance of evil might be avoided, such change of garments carrying a manifest umbrage or sign of softness and effeminacy in the man, of arrogance and impudency in the woman, of lightness and petulancy in both; and partly to cut off all suspicions and occasions of evil, which this practice opens a wide door unto.

6 ¶ If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young:

7 But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

Let the dam go; partly for the bird's sake, which suffered enough by the loss of its young; for God would not have cruelty exercised towards the brute creatures; and partly for men's sake, to restrain their greediness and covetousness, that they should not monopolize all to themselves, but might leave the hopes of a future seed for others.

8 ¶ When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence.

A battlement, i. e. a fence or breastwork, because the roofs of their houses were made flat or plain, that men might walk on them. See Judg. xvii. 27; 1 Sam. ix. 25; 2 Sam. xi. 2; Neh. viii. 16; Matt. x. 27. Blood, i. e. the guilt of blood, by a man's fall from the top of thy house, through thy neglect of this necessary provision.

e Lev. 19. 19. 9 ¶ Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest the fruit of thy seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of thy vineyard, be defiled.

With divers seeds; either, 1. With divers kinds of seed mixed and sowed together between the rows of vines in thy vineyard; which was forbidden to be done in the field, Lev. xix. 19, and here in the vineyard. Or, 2. With any kind of seed differing from that of the vine, which would produce either herbs, or corn, or fruit-bearing trees, whose fruit might be mingled with the fruit of the vines. Now this and the two following precepts, though in themselves small and trivial, are given, according to that time and state of the church, for documents or instructions in greater matters, and particularly to commend to them simplicity and sincerity in all their carriages towards God and men, and to forbid all mixture of their inventions with God's institutions, in doctrine or worship. The fruit of thy seed, Heb. the fulness of thy seed, i. e. that seed when it is ripe and full. See Exod. xxii. 29; Numb. xviii. 27. Defiled; either, 1. Naturally corrupted or marred, whilst one seed draws away the fat and nourishment of the earth from the other, and so both are starved and spoiled. Or rather, 2. Legally and morally, as being prohibited by God's law, and thereby made unclean; as, on the contrary, things are sanctified by God's word allowing and approving them, 1 Tim. iv. 5. Heb. be sanctified, or, be as a sanctified thing, by an ellipsis of the particle as, i. e. unlawful for the owner's use, as things sanctified were. Or, sanctifying is put for polluting, by a figure called euphemismus, which is frequent in Scripture, as when blessing is put for cursing, as Job ii. 9, and in other authors, as when they use sacred for execrable.

10 ¶ Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together.

Either, 1. Because the one was a clean beast, the other unclean; whereby God would teach men to avoid polluting themselves by the touch of unclean persons or things, 2 Cor. vi. 14. Or, 2. Because of their unequal strength, whereby the weaker, the ass, would be oppressed and overwrought. Or, 3. For mystical reasons, of which see on ver. 9; Lev. xix. 19.

11 ¶ Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.

12 ¶ Thou shalt make thee fringes upon the four quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

Fringes, or laces, or strings; partly to bring the commands of God to their remembrance, as it is expressed, Numb. xv. 38; and partly as a public profession of their nation and religion, whereby they might be discerned and distinguished from strangers, that so they might be more circumspect to behave themselves as became the people of God, and that they should not be ashamed to own their God and religion before all the world. Wherewith thou coverest thyself: these words are either restrictive to the upper garment, wherewith the rest were covered; or argumentative, why they should use these things, because herewith they might possibly fasten their garments, and prevent the uncovering themselves, as might easily happen, when they wore no breeches, but only loose garments.

13 ¶ If any man take a wife, and go in unto her, and hate her,

Go in unto her, i. e. hath had carnal knowledge of her.

14 And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say, I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid:

Of speech, Heb. of words, i. e. of discourses or defamations.

15 Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother, take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate:

i. e. The linen cloth or sheet, as is expressed, ver. 17, which in the first congress was infected with blood, as is natural and usual. But because this is not now constant, the enemies of Scripture take occasion to quarrel with this law, as unreasonable and unjust, and such as might oppress the innocent, and hence take occasion to reject the Holy Scriptures. It were much more reasonable for these men either to expound this place metaphorically, of producing those proofs and testimonies of her virginity which should be as satisfactory as if that cloth were produced, as some of the Jews understand it; or modestly to acknowledge their own ignorance in this, as they are forced to do in many other things, and not impudently to conclude it is insoluble, because they cannot resolve it. But there is no need of such general answers, many things may be particularly said for the vindication of this law. 1. That it was necessary for that people, because of their hard-heartedness towards their wives, and their levity and desire of change of wives. 2. That either this trial, or at least the proof of her virginity, was to be taken presently after the day of marriage, and that proof was to be admitted afterwards upon occasion. 3. That this law was seldom or never put in execution, as the Jews note, and seems to be made for terror and caution to husbands and wives, as many other laws have been in like cases. 4. That that God who gave this law did by his providence govern all affairs, and rule the tongues and hearts of men, and therefore would doubtless take care so to order matters that the innocent should not suffer by this means, which he could prevent many ways. 5. That there is a great difference in times and climates. Who knows not that there are many things now by our moderns thought uncertain or false, which by the ancient physicians were thought and affirmed to be true, and certain in their times and countries, and that many signs of diseases and other things do generally hold true in those more southerly and warmer parts of the world, which are many times deceitful in our northern and colder climates? 6. That this very way of trial of virginity hath been used not only by the Jews, but also by the Arabians and Egyptians, as is affirmed by divers learned writers, among whom yet it was more doubtful and hazardous than among the Jews, who might promise to themselves that God would guide the execution of his own law to a just and good issue. 7. That this sign, if it were uncertain in persons of riper years, yet it may be reasonably thought certain and constant in virgins of young and tender age, and that the Jews did ordinarily marry their daughters when they were about twelve or thirteen years old, as is confessed; as making haste to roll away that reproach which they thought to be in an unmarried state.

16 And the damsel's father shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her;

17 And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid; and yet these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city.

18 And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him;

Either, 1. By the following mulet. Or, 2. By severe reproofs, which that word oft signifies. Or, 3. By stripes, as is expressed, Deut. xxv. 2, 3. Which is not strange, considering how precious a thing one's good name is, of which he endeavoured to deprive his wife.

19 And they shall amerce him in an hundred shekels of silver, and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel: and she shall be his wife; he may not put her away all his days.

Unto the father of the damsel; because this was a reproach to his family, and to himself, because such a miscarriage of his daughter would have been ascribed to his evil education. He may not put her away all his days; which seems to have been his design in this false accusation, and therefore that liberty of a divorce which is permitted to others, Deut. xxiv. 1, shall be denied to him.

20 But if this thing be true, and the tokens of virginity be not found for the damsel:

21 Then they shall bring out the damsel to the door of her father's house, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones that she die: because she hath wrought folly in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: so shalt thou put evil away from among you.

Quest. Why should she die when her crime was only fornication, which was not punished in a woman with death, Exod. xxii. 16, 17? Ans. Because there was not only fornication in this case, as Exod. xxii. 16, but this was accompanied with deep dissimulation and injury to her husband in the false profession of virginity, and it might be presumed that she committed this folly after she was betrothed to him, and therefore so obstinately denied it, as knowing the danger of it in that case; or God ordered it thus for the honour and custody of the matrimonial bed from all defilement, that she, who being defiled before she was married or betrothed, and therefore not punishable by death, yet if she should presume to carry her defilement into the married estate with a pretence of virginity, she should then be put to death.

22 ¶ If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them die, both the man that lay with the woman, and the woman: so shalt thou put away evil from Israel.

If a man be found; if he be convicted of this fault, though not taken in the very act.

23 ¶ If a damsel that is a virgin be betrothed unto an husband, and a man find her in the city, and lie with her;

By this betrothing she had actually engaged herself to another man, and was in some sort his wife, and therefore is sometimes so called, as Gen. xxix. 21; Matt. i. 20.

24 Then ye shall bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city; and the man, because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife: so thou shalt put away evil from among you.

Because she cried not; and therefore is justly presumed to have consented to it.

25 ¶ But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man force her, and lie with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die:

The man force her; which was to be examined and determined by the consideration of all the circumstances.

26 But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death: for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter:

Not an act of choice, but of force and constraint.

27 For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel cried, and there was none to save her.

The damsel cried; which is in that case to be presumed; charity obliging us to believe the best till the contrary be manifest.

28 ¶ If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found;

i. e. An unmarried man, as appears, 1. From his obligation to marry the person he abused, which it is not probable would have been imposed upon him, had he been married. 2. Because if the man had been married, this had been adultery, and so had been punished with death. Lay hold on her; which notes some kind of force or artifice, whereby she was overpowered; whereas Exod. xxii. 16, she was enticed, which implies consent, and therefore the man doth here receive a greater punishment, because he used hostile violence towards her, which was the greater sin.

29 Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall be his wife; because he hath humbled her, he may not put her away all his days.

Fifty shekels of silver, besides the dowry, as Philo the learned Jew notes, which is here omitted, because that was common and customary, and because it might easily be gathered out of Exod. xxii. 16, it being sufficient here to mention what was peculiar to this case. She shall be his wife, to wit, if her father consent to it, which is to be supposed out of Exod. xxii. 16, it being not likely that the father should lose his paternal right of disposing his child when she was in some sort forced, rather than when she was enticed. He may not put her away all his days, which others were suffered to do, Deut. xxiv. 1, and he who enticed the maid (Exod. xxii. 16) was not prohibited to do.

^c See Ruth 3. 9. Ezek. 16. 8. Shall not take to wife. So this respects the state, and the next branch speaks of the act only. His father's wife; his mother-in-law. See Lev. xviii. 8; xx. 11; 1 Cor. v. 1. His father's skirt, i. e. the skirt of the mother's garment, i. e. the nakedness, which is here called his father's skirt, because his father and mother were one flesh, or because his father alone had the right to uncover it. The phrase is taken from the ancient custom or ceremony of the bridegroom's spreading the skirt of his garment over the bride, to signify his right to her, and authority over her, and his obligation to the marriage duty. See Ruth iii. 9; Ezek. xvi. 8.

CHAP. XXIII.

Who are to be excluded from the congregation, 1—6. An Edomite and Egyptian not to be abhorred, and why, 7. 8. No uncleanness to be in the camp, 9—14. No filthiness, 17. No abominable sacrifice must be, 18. No usury, but to strangers, 19, 20. Vows must be kept, 21—23. The liberty that was lawful in their neighbour's field or vineyard, 24, 25.

HE that is wounded in the stones, or hath his privy member cut off, shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

Heb. wounded by compression, or attrition, or contusion, to wit, of the stones, which was the course the Gentiles took with infants to make them eunuchs. And these eunuchs and bastards, ver. 2, seem to be not only those of other nations, as some understand it, without any foundation for such restriction, but also of the Israelites; the reason of this law being the same in all, to wit, that God would bring into disgrace those heathenish practices of making eunuchs, and getting bastards, which doubtless he would especially do among his own people. Shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord; which phrase cannot be understood so that they might not come into the church, or holy assemblies, to worship God, to pray, or hear, &c., because proselytes of any nation, being admitted to common church privileges, no less than the Jews, (as is evident from Exod. xii. 48; Lev. xxii. 18; Numb. ix. 14; xv. 15,) it were absurd to think that any of the Israelites, for such a natural or involuntary defect, should be shut out from all God's ordinances; nor so that they were to be put out of the muster-roll of God's people, or to lose the privileges common to all Israelites, to wit, the benefit of the year of release or jubilee, which it is not probable the Israelites were to forfeit merely for this unculpable imperfection; but either, 1. That they should not be incorporated into the body of Israel by marriage; for so this phrase may seem to have been understood by the whole congregation of Israel, Neh. xiii. 1—3, 23—25; although at that time the government was in part in the hands of such persons as are here mentioned, ver. 3, or of their children, seeing it is apparent from Ezra x. that many priests and Levites and other officers and rulers of Israel were married to strange women, whose issue are by this law excluded from all share in the government, and for that, among other reasons, Nehemiah separated them from Israel by virtue of the law here following. Or, 2. That they should not be admitted to honours and offices either in the church or commonwealth of Israel; and so the congregation of the Lord doth not here signify, as commonly it doth, the body of the people, but the society of the elders or rulers of the people, who, as they represent the whole congregation, and act in their name, and for their service and good, so they are sometimes called by the name of the congregation, as Numb. xxxv. 12, 24, 25; Josh. xx. 6, 9; 1 Kings viii. 5, compared with ver. 1—3; and 1 Chron. xiii. 1, 2, 4; xxix. 1, 10, 20, compared with 1 Chron. xxviii. 1; xxix. 6; and of the congregation of God, as it is in the Hebrew of Psal. lxxxiii. 1. Howsoever, seeing they are oft called the congregation, they may very well be called in a special manner the congregation of the Lord, because they were appointed by God, and act in his name and stead, and for his work and service, and did also oft assemble near the tabernacle, where God was eminently present. Add to this, that the Hebrew word kahal generally signifies a congregation or company of men met together; and therefore this cannot so conveniently be meant of all the body of the people, which could never meet in one place, but of the chief rulers, which frequently did so. Nor is it strange that eunuchs are excluded from government, partly because such persons are commonly observed to want that courage which is necessary for a governor, Exod. xviii. 21; and partly because as such persons ordinarily were despicable, so the office and authority in their hands was likely to be exposed to the same contempt.

2 A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

A bastard; so the word is commonly rendered, and so it notes a person base-born, or born in fornication or adultery, or by incestuous or any prohibited mixtures of man and woman. Object. 1. This law seems harsh, and too severe for the innocent bastard. Ans. 1. It was only an exclusion from government, which was a tolerable burden. 2. It was a necessary caution to prevent and brand the sin of uncleanness, to which the Jews were more than ordinarily prone. Object. 2. Pharez and Jephthah were both bastards, yet advanced to great honour and authority. Ans. God gives laws to us, and not to himself; and therefore he might, when he saw fit, confer what favour or power he pleased upon any such person, as he did to these. But some add, that the Hebrew word mamzer signifies not every bastard, but a bastard born of any strange woman, as the word may seem to intimate, and as such persons generally seem to have been, because of that special provision, that there should be no whore of the daughters of Israel, as it is here below, ver. 17. To his tenth generation; or, his tenth generation, as it is in the Hebrew, and so in the following verses.

3 * An Ammonite or Moabite shall not ^a enter into the congregation of the LORD; ² even to their tenth generation shall they not enter into the congregation of the LORD for ever:

This may be understood either, 1. Of the males only, or the children of such fathers, as interpreters commonly take it. Or rather, 2. Of females also, or of all that were born either of such fathers or mothers, as may be gathered from Ezra x.; Neh. xiii., where the children of strange wives were separated from Israel no less than the children of strange fathers. And it is an allowed maxim, that the birth follows the belly. And whereas the children of Rahab and Ruth are produced to the contrary, it may be said as it was before, that these were extraordinary instances, and that God when he pleased might exempt any particular person of them from this curse, though the Israelites might not do so. For ever; so it seems to note the immutability and perpetuity of this law, that it should be inviolably observed in all succeeding ages, and not dispensed with for any merit in the persons, or any pretence whatsoever. But why then should this clause be added only here, seeing the foregoing laws are as inviolable as this? It seems therefore to extend the duration of this exclusion of them from the congregation of the Lord beyond what was said at first, and to be added by way of aggravation, even to their tenth generation shall they not enter—yea, even for ever, i. e. they shall never enter, as it is expressed, without any mention of the tenth generation, Neh. xiii. 1, that they shall not come into the congregation of God for ever.

4 ^b Because they met you not with ²⁹ bread and with water in the way, when ye came forth out of Egypt; and ^c because they hired against thee Balaam the son of Beor of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee.

^c Numb. 22. 5, 6.

They met you not, as the manner of those times was to wait and provide for strangers and travellers; see Gen. xiv. 17; xviii. 2, 3; xix. 1, 2; Judg. xix. 17—21; which was the more necessary, because in those times and countries there were no such public houses of entertainment, as now there are among us. Their fault then was unmercifulness to strangers and pilgrims, and afflicted persons, which was aggravated both by their relation to the Israelites, as being the children of Lot, and by the special kindness of God and of the Israelites to them, in not fighting against them, as they had just occasion to do, and as they did by others, Deut. ii. Object. Quest. How doth this agree with Deut. ii. 28, 29, where the Moabites which dwell in Ar are said to have sold them meat and drink? Ans. 1. It is one thing voluntarily to meet them, and kindly to relieve them with bread and water, which they are here denied to have done, and a quite differing thing to sell them bread and water when they are upon their very borders, and their own interest forced them to do so. 2. It may seem that it was only those Moabites that dwell in Ar did so, as is said Deut. ii. 29, and that all the rest of the people neglected or refused to do it; and therefore the sin being so general and national, no wonder if the punishment be so too. 3. These and the following words, both here and Neh. xiii. 1, are to be taken distributively; and this first member of the verse belongs to the Ammonites, who did not meet them with bread, &c., and the latter part to the Moabites, who, together with the Midianites, but not with the Ammonites, hired Balaam, &c.

5 Nevertheless the LORD thy God would not hearken unto Balaam; but the LORD thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because the LORD thy God loved thee.

i. e. Forced Balaam to bless thee, who was hired and inclined to curse thee, if possibly he could.

^d Ezra 9. 12. 6 ^d Thou shalt not seek their peace nor [†] Heb. good. their [†] prosperity all thy days for ever.

i. e. Make no contracts, either by marriages, or leagues, or commerce with them, but rather shalt constantly keep a jealous eye over them, as enemies who will watch every opportunity to insnare or disturb thee. This counsel was now the more necessary, because a great part of the Israelites lived beyond Jordan in the borders of those people, and therefore God sets up this wall of partition betwixt them, as well knowing the mischief of bad neighbours, and Israel's proneness to receive infection from them. Each particular Israelite is not hereby forbidden to perform any office of humanity to them, but the body of the nation are forbidden all friendly and familiar conversation with them.

^e Gen. 25. 24, 25, 26. [†] Heb. good. 7 ¶ Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite; * for he is thy brother: thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian; because [†] thou wast a stranger in his land.

An Edomite; the children of Edom; only the Amalekites are excepted by God's particular order, and upon special reason, Deut. xxv. 17—19. Thy brother, by Esau, Jacob's brother. Thou wast a stranger in his land, and didst receive habitation, protection, and provision from them a long time, which kindness thou must not forget for their following persecution. It is ordinary with great men and others, that one injury or offence blots out the remembrance of twenty courtesies; but God doth not deal so with us, nor will he have us to deal so with others, but commands us to overlook and forget injuries, and to remember kindnesses.

8 The children that are begotten of them shall enter into the congregation of the LORD in their third generation.

Supposing their grandfather or great grandfather turned proselyte, and the children continue in that faith received by such ancestors.

9 ¶ When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing.

Then especially take heed, because that is a time and state of confusion and licentiousness, when, as one said, the laws of God and man cannot be heard for the noise of arms; and because the success of thy arms and enterprises depends upon God's blessing, which wicked men have no reason to expect; and because thou dost then carry thy life in thy hand, and therefore hast need to be well prepared for death and judgment.

10 ¶ [†] If there be among you any ^g Lev. 15. 16. man, that is not clean by reason of uncleanness that chanceth him by night, then shall he go abroad out of the camp, he shall not come within the camp:

Of which uncleanness see Lev. xv. 4, 16, 17; or by uncleanness of any like kind; one kind being here, as oft, put for all. He shall go out of the camp. Quest. Why doth this uncleanness oblige a man to go out of the camp, when it did not oblige him to such a removal, Lev. xv. ? Ans. 1. It is not unreasonable if they were obliged to greater strictness and purity when they were undertaking so difficult and dangerous a work. 2. There is a manifest reason of the difference, because in their houses they had private chambers, where they could in such cases keep themselves from converse with others; whereas in the camp their conveniences were so small, and their occasions of action so many, that it was very hard for his fellow soldiers that continued with him in the same tent, or part of the camp, to avoid the touching of him, which yet was infectious, Lev. xv. 7, 22.

11 But it shall be, when evening [†] cometh on, ^h he shall wash himself with water: and when the sun is down, he shall come into the camp again.

12 ¶ Thou shalt have a place also without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad:

To wit, to ease thyself, as it follows, ver. 13.

13 And thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon; and it shall be, when thou [†] wilt ease thyself abroad, thou shalt dig [†] therewith, and shalt turn back and cover that which cometh from thee:

A paddle; the nature of which may be known from the use, which here follows. Cover that which cometh from thee; partly, to prevent the annoyance of ourselves or others; partly, to preserve and exercise modesty and natural honesty; and principally, that by such outward rites they might be inured to the greater reverence of the Divine Majesty, and the greater caution to avoid all real and moral uncleanness, especially now when it was most necessary so to do.

14 For the LORD thy God ⁱ Lev. 26. 12. walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee; therefore shall thy camp be holy: that he see no [†] unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee.

In the midst of thy camp; either because the ark was commonly present with them, or at least some of the holy instruments, which were pledges of God's presence; or because God had promised to go forth with them when they engaged in a just and necessary war.

15 ¶ ^k Thou shalt not deliver unto his ^k 1 Sam. 30. 15. master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee:

This is not to be understood universally, as if all servants that flee from their masters, though without any sufficient cause or colour of justice, might be detained from them by any person to whom they fled for refuge, for this is apparently contrary to all the laws of religion, and justice, and charity, and would open a door to infinite disorders and mischiefs; but it is to be understood, 1. Of the servants of strangers, because it follows, ver. 16, he shall dwell with thee, even among you, which shows that he had dwelt with and belonged to another people. 2. Of such as belonged to the Canaanites, or other neighbouring nations, because if he had lived in remote countries, it is not probable that he would flee so far to avoid his master, or that his master would follow him so far to recover him. And for the Canaanites this sentence was most just, because both they and theirs were all forfeited to God and to Israel, and whatsoever they enjoyed was by special indulgence. And for the other neighbours it may seem just also, partly, because some of them were within the larger limits of the land belonging to Israel by God's grant or deed of gift, Gen. xv. 18; Josh. i. 4; partly, because by their hostile carriages they had given Israel a right to much more of theirs than a few servants that might possibly run away from their masters; and especially, because both masters and servants of these and other nations are unquestionably at the dispose of the Lord their Maker and sovereign Ruler. 3. Of such as upon inquiry appear to have been unjustly oppressed by their masters, as is implied by that phrase of his, making an escape, which supposeth a deliverance from danger or vexation. Now it is not strange nor unjust, if the great God, who hates all tyranny, and styles himself the refuge of the oppressed, doth interpose his authority, and help to rescue such persons from their cruel masters, who otherwise would be too strong for them. 4. Of such as came to them out of a desire to embrace the true religion, which possibly his master perceiving endeavoured by force to restrain him from, as it may be probably thought from his choosing and liking to live among the Israelites, expressed ver. 16. Now if this great and supreme Master, to whom all other masters are but servants, and they and theirs are absolutely in his power, shall receive and protect one that gives up himself to his service against the will of the under-master, who in this case rebels against his sovereign Lord, what shadow is there of injustice in the case?

16 He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it †liketh him best: 'thou shalt not oppress him.

+ Heb. is good for him.
1 Es. 22. 21.

Taking advantage from his low and afflicted condition to be unreasonable or injurious to him.

17 ¶ There shall be no || whore ^m of the daughters of Israel, nor ⁿ a sodomite of the sons of Israel.

¶ Or, sodomite.
m Lev. 19. 29. See Prov. 2. 16. n Gen. 19. 5. 2 Kings 23. 7.

No common prostitute, such as were tolerated and encouraged by the Gentiles, and used even in their religious worship. Of the daughters of Israel; not that such practices were allowed to the strangers among them, as is evident from many scriptures and reasons, but that it was in a peculiar manner, and upon special reasons, forbidden to them, as being much more odious in them than in strangers; though the words may be rendered among the daughters, and so in the following clause, among the sons, for the Hebrew mem is sometimes used in that sense, as Numb. xxxii. 22; Psal. xxxi. 12, and so it notes that none of that sort should be permitted among them, whether Jews or strangers. A sodomite; who defileth or suffereth himself to be defiled with mankind. See Gen. xix. 5; Lev. xviii. 12; 1 Kings xiv. 24; xxii. 46; Rom. i. 27.

18 Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the LORD thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the LORD thy God.

This is opposed to the practice of the Gentiles, who allowed both such persons and their oblations they made out of their wicked and infamous gains; and some of them kept lewd women, who prostituted themselves in the temples, and to the honour of their false gods, and offered part of their profit to them. See Micah i. 7; Baruch vi. 43; Herodotus in the end of his first book, and Strabo in his eighth book. The price of a dog; either, 1. Properly; the dog being a vile and contemptible creature in those eastern parts, 1 Sam. xvii. 43; xxiv. 14; 2 Sam. iii. 8; Eccles. ix. 4, and unclean by God's designation, which yet should have been redeemed by virtue of that law, Numb. xviii. 15, had it not been for this prohibition. And this may be here prohibited, either, 1. That by this one instance, put for all others of the like kind, they might be taught not to offer to God what cost them nothing, or was worth nothing. Or, 2. To bring contempt upon the creature, which divers of the Gentiles offered up to their gods, and the Egyptians worshipped as gods. Or, 3. That by comparing whores and dogs together, and equalling the prices of them, he might expose whores to the highest disgrace and infamy. Or, II. Metaphorically, as that word is oft used in Scripture, as

1 Sam. xxiv. 14; Psal. xxii. 16, 20; Isa. lvi. 10, 11; Matt. vii. 6; Phil. iii. 2; and particularly it is used for unclean or filthy persons, 2 Pct. ii. 22; Rev. xxii. 15; as Horace also calls whores bitches; which name doth most properly agree to them in respect of that impudence, and filthiness, and insatiableness, for which both of them are branded. And this sense may seem most proper in this place, because it agrees with all the other expressions; and as the hire of a whore answers to the whore, ver. 17, so the price of a dog may seem to answer to the sodomite, ver. 17, and so all concern the same thing, whereas the price of a dog, properly so called, may seem to be quite incongruous, and foreign to the place. It is true which is objected, that lawgivers use to deliver their laws in proper, and not in metaphorical terms, to prevent mistake and ambiguity; but there seems to be no great danger of mistake here, where the metaphor is so clearly explained and determined by so many words joined with it. For any vow; and much less in other sacrifices, which being of a higher nature, and prescribed by God, must needs require more exactness than those which depended much upon a man's will and choice, as vows and free-will offerings did. Both these, i. e. the whore and the dog, and therefore the price of either of them cannot be acceptable. And this may seem to favour the latter opinion, that the dog is here taken metaphorically rather than properly, because there is no mention in the law (save in this place which is in question) of any abominableness of a dog unto God, more than of an ass, or any other unclean creature; but how abominable sodomites are to God is sufficiently evident from other scriptures, and from undeniable reasons.

19 ¶ 'Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of any thing that is lent upon usury:

o Ex. 22. 23. Lev. 25. 36. 37. Neh. 5. 2. 7. Ps. 15. 6. Luke 6. 34, 35.

i. e. So as to receive thy principal money or thing lent with such increase or improvement of it, as was usual and allowed among the Gentiles. But whether all usury be unlawful to Christians is too great a question to be determined in a work of this nature. See Exod. xxii. 25; Deut. xv. 3; Psal. xv. 5; Neh. v. 2; Luke vi. 34.

20 ^pUnto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: 'that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

q ch. 15. 10.

Unto a stranger, i. e. to a person of any other nation, for so that word is generally used, and therefore they who restrain it to the cursed Canaanitish nations seem to do so without any solid or sufficient grounds. And though the word brother is oftentimes used in a general sense for every man, yet I think I may affirm that whosoever the words brother and stranger are opposed in the Jewish law, the brother signifies the Israelite only, and the stranger signifies any person of what nation or religion soever, whether proselyted to the Jewish religion or not, and so it seems to be meant here. And the reason why usury is permitted to a stranger, not to an Israelite, may seem to be this, because the Israelites generally employed themselves in the management of land and cattle, and therefore could not make any advantage of borrowed money to balance the use they should pay for it; and consequently it may be presumed that they would not borrow money upon use, but for want and poverty, and in that case, and principally for that reason, usury seems to be forbidden to them, as may be thought from Lev. xxv. 35, 36. But the strangers made use of their money in way of trade and traffic with the Israelites, which was more gainful, and could much better bear the burden of usury, and reap advantage from money so borrowed; and these strangers here spoken of are supposed to be competently rich, and not poor, as may plainly appear by comparing this place with Lev. xxv. 35, 36, where they are no less forbidden to take usury of a stranger than of a brother, in case of poverty.

21 ¶ 'When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will r Num. 30. 2. Eccles. 5. 4.

surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee.

Thou shalt not slack to pay it, to wit, if the matter of it be lawful, and in thy own power. See Numb. xxx. 2. Not slack or delay, because delays may make thee both unable to pay it, and unwilling too, the sense of one's obligation growing every day weaker than other, &c. It would be sin in thee, i. e. it would be laid to thy charge as a sin, and bring judgment upon thee.

22 But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee.

23 *That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a freewill offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the LORD thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth.

A free-will offering; which though thou didst freely make, yet being made, thou art no longer free, but obliged to perform it.

24 ¶ When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.

Thou mayest eat grapes thy fill; which was allowed in those parts, because of the great plenty and fruitfulness of vines there.

25 When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbour, then thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of the woman that was dismissed by her husband with a bill of divorcement, 1—4. The liberty of the new-married man, 5. Parons and pledges, 6. Man-stealers, 7. Leprosy, 8. And again of parons or pledges, 10—13. Of day wages, 14, 15. None to be punished for another's offence, 16. Of justice and love towards widows, fatherless, and strangers, 17—22.

WHEN a *man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found †some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of †divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

That she find no favour in his eyes, i. e. he dislike and loathe her. It is a figure called meiosis, whereby more is understood than is expressed, as Prov. x. 2; xvii. 21; xxiv. 23. Uncleanness; Heb. nakedness, or shameful, or filthiness of a thing, i. e. some filthy or hateful thing, some loathsome distemper of body or quality of mind, not observed before marriage; or some light and unchaste carriage, as this or the like phrase commonly signifies, but not amounting to adultery, which was not punished with divorce, but with death. Send her out of his house; which is not a command to divorce them, as some of the Jews understood it, nor an allowance and approbation, as plainly appears, not only from the New Testament, Matt. v. 31, 32; xix. 8, 9, but also from the Old Testament, Gen. ii. 24; Mal. ii. 16; but merely a permission or toleration of that practice for prevention of greater mischiefs and cruelties of that hard-hearted people towards their wives, and this only for a season, even until the time of reformation, as it is called Heb. ix. 10, i. e. till the coming of the Messias, when things were to return to their first institution and purest condition. The husband is not here commanded to put her away, but if he do put her away, he is commanded to write and give her a bill of divorcement, before he send her out of his house. And though it be true, as our Saviour observes, that Moses did suffer these divorces, to wit, without punishing them, which also is here implied, yet it must be acknowledged, that if we consult the Hebrew words, those three first verses may seem to be only a supposition, and the words rendered, then let him write her, in the Hebrew run thus, and hath written her, and so it follows, ver. 2, And she be departed out of his house, and be gone and become another man's wife; then follows ver. 3, which even according to our translation carries on the supposition, And if the latter husband hate her, &c. Then follows the position or prohibition, ver. 4.

2 And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife.

For although he could not causelessly put her away without sin, yet she being put away, and forsaken by her husband, might marry another without sin, as is determined in the same or a like case, 1 Cor. vii. 15.

3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife;

4 ^b Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the LORD: and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

This is the punishment of his levity and injustice in putting her away without sufficient cause, which by this offer he now acknowledgeth. After that she is defiled; not simply and absolutely, as if her second marriage were a sin, but respectively, or as to her first husband, to whom she is as a defiled or unclean woman, that is, forbidden; for things forbidden are accounted and called unclean, Judg. xiii. 7, because they may no more be touched or used than an unclean thing. Thou shalt not cause the land to sin, i. e. thou shalt not suffer such abominable lightness and lewdness to be practised, lest the people be polluted, and the land defiled and accursed by that means.

5 ¶ When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, † neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall ^d cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

Any business, i. e. any public office or employment, which may cause an absence from or neglect of his wife. He shall be free at home one year, that their affections newly engaged may be firmly settled, so as there may be no occasions for the divorces last mentioned.

6 ¶ No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's life to pledge.

The nether or the upper millstone, used in their hand-mills; of which see Exod. xi. 5; Numb. xi. 8; Jer. xxv. 10. Under this one kind he understands all other things necessary to get a livelihood, the taking away whereof is against the laws both of charity and prudence, seeing by those things alone he can be enabled both to subsist and to pay his debts. A man's life, i. e. his livelihood, or the necessary supports of his life.

7 ¶ If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die; and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

8 ¶ Take heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you: as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

and especially unto the word and command of God, and that if the Levites' sentence were manifestly contrary to the command of God, it were not to be obeyed. As now if a Levite or priest should, for fear, or favour, or gain, pronounce a person to be clean, who were really and manifestly unclean, and had the unquestionable marks of leprosy upon him, I suppose no man in his wits will question but every man that saw and knew this were bound to avoid the touching of him, and that if he did touch him he should be defiled by it.

See Isa. i. 23; Jer. v. 28. A widow's raiment, to wit, such a one as she hath daily and necessary use of, as being poor, as may appear by comparing this with ver. 12, 13, and with other places. Judges must do justly, 1, 2. Stripes not to exceed forty, 3. The threshing ox not to be muzzled, 4. The duty of raising seed unto a brother, 5—10. The punishment of an immodest woman, 11, 12. A just weight and measure, 13—16. The memory of Amalek is to be blotted out, 17—19.

IF there be a^a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them; then they^b shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked.

^a ch. 19. 17.
⁺ Ezek. 44. 24.

^b See Prov. 17. 15.

A controversy about criminal matters, as it follows. They shall justify, i. e. acquit him from guilt and false accusations, and free him from punishment. Condemn the wicked; declare him guilty, and pass sentence of condemnation to suitable punishments upon him.

2 And it shall be, if the wicked man be ^cworthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down, ^dand to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number.

Worthy to be beaten; which the Jews say was the case of all those crimes which the law commands to be punished, without expressing the kind or degree of the punishment. Before his face; that the punishment may be duly inflicted, without excess or defect, which otherwise might easily happen through the executioner's passion or partiality.

3 ^eForty stripes he may give him, and not exceed: lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should ^fseem vile unto thee.

Not exceed: it seems not superstition, but prudent caution, when the Jews would not exceed thirty-nine stripes, 2 Cor. xi. 24, lest through mistake or forgetfulness or eagerness they should go beyond their bounds, which they were commanded to keep, but they were not obliged to go to the utmost extent of them. Thy brother, who, though faulty and chastised, yet still is thy brother by nation, and probably by religion too. Should seem vile unto thee, i. e. should be made contemptible to his brethren, either by this cruel usage of him, as if he were a slave or brute beast; or by the deformity or infirmity of body which excessive beating might produce.

4 ¶ ^gThou shalt not muzzle the ox when he ^htreadeth out the corn.

As the Gentiles used to do, having divers devices to keep them from eating when they trod out the corn, which they did in those parts and times by oxen, Hos. x. 11, either immediately by their hoofs, Isa. xxviii. 28; Micah iv. 13, or by drawing carts or other instruments over the corn, Isa. xxv. 10; xxviii. 27; xli. 15; Amos i. 3. Hereby God taught them humanity and kindness, even to their beasts that served them, Prov. xii. 10, and much more to their servants or other men who laboured for them, and especially to their ministers, 1 Cor. ix. 9.

5 ¶ ⁱIf brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her ^jhusband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her.

Brethren; strictly so called, as is evident from ver. 7; Gen. xxxviii. 8; Ruth i. 13; Matt. xxii. 24, 25. Dwell together; either, 1. Strictly, in the same house or family; which is not probable, because the married brother may be presumed to have left his father's house, and set up a family of his own. Or, 2. More largely, in the same town or city, or, at least, country. This is added for a relief of their consciences, that if the next brother had removed his habitation into remote parts, or were carried thither into captivity, which God foresaw would be their case, then the wife of the dead had her liberty to marry to the next kinsman that lived in the same place with her. One of them; either, 1. The first and eldest of them, as it was practised, Gen. xxxviii. 6, &c., and expounded, Matt. xxii. 25; one being oft put for the first, as Gen. i. 5; ii. 11; Hag. i. 1; Mark xvi. 2. And the chief care was about the first-born, who were invested with singular privileges, and were types of Christ. Or, 2. Any of them, for the words are general, and so the practice may seem to have been, Ruth iii.; and the reason of the law may seem to be in a great measure the same, which was to keep up the distinction, as of tribes and families, that so the Messias might be discovered by the family from which he was appointed to proceed, so also of inheritances, which were divided among all the brethren, the first-born having only a double portion. Have no child, Heb. no son. But son is oft put for any child, male or female, both in Scripture and other authors; and therefore the Hebrew no son is rendered no child here, as it is in effect, Matt. xxii. 24; Mark xii. 19; Luke xx. 28. And indeed this caution was not necessary when there was a daughter, whose child might be adopted into the name and family of its grandfather. Unto a stranger, i. e. to one of another family, as that word is oft used. Her husband's brother shall go in unto her, except he was married himself, as may appear by other scriptures, and by the reason of the thing, and, as some add, from the phrase of dwelling together, to wit, in their father's family.

6 And it shall be, that the firstborn which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israel.

In the name of his brother; shall be called and reputed his son. See Ruth iv. 17. That his name be not put out of Israel; that a family be not lost. So this was a provision that the number of their families might not be diminished.

7 And if the man like not to take his ^kbrother's wife, then let his brother's wife go up to the ^lgate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel, he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.

To raise up unto his brother a name; to revive his brother's name and memory.

8 Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him: and ^mif he stand to it, and say, ⁿI like not to take her;

Speak unto him, to convince him of the duty, and persuade him to it. If he stand to it; if he obstinately refuse it.

9 Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and ^oloose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his face, and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that man that will not build up his brother's house.

Loose his shoe; partly as a sign of his resignation of all his right to the woman, and to her husband's inheritance; for as the shoe was a sign of one's power and right, Psal. lx. 8; cviii. 9; so the parting with the shoe was a token of the alienation of such right, and that he would not, and henceforth might not, enter upon his brother's land; and partly as a note of infamy, to signify that by this unnatural and disingenuous action he was unworthy to be amongst free-men, and fit to be reduced to the condition of the meanest servants or captives, who used to go barefoot, Isa. xx. 2, 4. Spit in his face, as a return of his contempt upon himself. See Numb. xii. 14; Isa. i. 6; Matt. xxvi. 67; xxvii. 30. This was not done, Ruth iv., either because he was not a brother, but a remoter kinsman, and so deserved less shame; or because Ruth did not prosecute him to the utmost, but freely consented to this exchange. Build up; a phrase oft used for the procreation of children, and the increase of a family. See Gen. xvi. 2; Exod. i. 21; 1 Kings xi. 38; 1 Chron. xvii. 25.

10 And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

i. e. His person, names being oft put for persons, and his posterity also. So it was a lasting blot.

11 ¶ When men strive together one with another, and the wife of the one draweth near for to deliver her husband out of the hand of him that smiteth him, and putteth forth her hand, and taketh him by the secrets:

12 Then thou shalt cut off her hand, ^pthine eye shall not pity her.

Which circumstance greatly aggravates their sin, that they should do thus to a people, who had been long exercised with sore afflictions, to whom pity and help was due by the laws of nature and humanity, and for whose rescue God had in so glorious a manner appeared, which they could not be ignorant of. So this was barbarousness to Israel, and setting the great Jehovah at defiance.

This seems to be required of each particular master of a family, either upon his first settlement, or once every year at one of their three feasts, when they were obliged to go up to Jerusalem, as here they are. Of all the fruit of the earth; either of their corn, or of the fruit of trees.

12. 18. & 16.

11 And thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

Thou shalt rejoice; i. e. either, 1. Thou shalt hereby be enabled to rejoice and take comfort in all thy enjoyments, when thou hast sanctified them by giving God his portion. Or, 2. Thou shalt feast (which is oft expressed by rejoicing) with the Levites and strangers upon the oblations which at these solemn times were offered; which exposition is confirmed by comparing Deut. xvi. 10, 11, 14, 15.

12 ¶ When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithes of thine increase the third year, which is the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled;

n Lev. 27. 50.
Num. 18. 24.
o ch. 14. 28,
29.

Of the tithes, see on Deut. xiv. 28. The year of tithing,

Heb. the year of that tithe; so called, either, 1. Because these tithes were gathered only in that year. Or rather, 2. Because then only they were so bestowed or used; and whereas these second tithes for two years together were eaten only by the owners and Levites, and that in Jerusalem, in the third year they were eaten also by the strangers, fatherless, and widows, and that in their own dwellings. The LXX. join these words with the following, and for shenath, the year, read shenith, the second, and take rau for redundant, as sometimes it is, and read the place thus, The second tithe thou shalt give to the Levite, &c.

13 Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow; according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them:

Before the Lord, i. e. either before the tabernacle or temple; or rather, in thy private and domestic addresses to God; for this is to be said presently upon the distribution of these tithes, which was not done at Jerusalem, but in their own private gates or dwellings; except we will suppose that after he had given away these tithes at home he should go up to Jerusalem merely to make this acknowledgment, which seems improbable. And this is to be spoken before the Lord, i. e. solemnly, seriously, and in a religious manner, with due respect to God's presence and will and glory, which is a sufficient ground for that phrase. I have brought away, or, separated, or, removed, to wit, from my own proper and private fruits. The hallowed things, i. e. the tithes which have been sanctified and set apart for these uses.

14 I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.

In my mourning, i. e. either, 1. In my funeral solemnities for the dead. But this falls in with the last branch. Or, 2. In my distress or poverty, or upon pretence of my own want, in which case men are tempted and inclined to fall upon sacred or forbidden things. Or, 3. In sorrow, or grieving that I was to give away so much of my profits to the poor, but I have cheerfully eaten and feasted with them, as I was obliged to do. For though it be taken for granted by some learned expositors, from Deut. xiv. 28, 29, that the owner was not to eat any part of the third year's tithe, but to give it all away to the stranger and fatherless, &c., the contrary seems to me more probable from that very place, where it is said, thou shalt lay it up within thy gates, and then it follows, that the Levite, stranger, &c. shall come, to wit, to thy gates, and shall eat, to wit, there, as is expressed ver. 12, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled; which implies that these tithes, or some part of them, were eaten in the owner's gates or dwelling, with holy rejoicing and feasting, wherein it is most probable the owner had his share, though it be not there expressed, because it was evident in itself from the foregoing passage, Deut. xiv. 23, &c., where the owner is allowed and commanded to eat those tithes together with the Levites. And howsoever some think the third year's tithes, ver. 28, were not the same with those ver. 23, yet it cannot with any colour of reason be thought that those tithes which were to be eaten, not only by the Levites, but also by the strangers, ver. 29, were more sacred than those that were to be eaten by none but the Levites and the owners, ver. 23, 27, or that the owner might eat of the one, and not of the other. For any unclean use, i. e. for any common use; the words common and unclean being off indifferently used one for the other, or for any other use than that which thou hast appointed, which would have been a pollution of them. For the dead,

i. e. for any funeral pomp, or service, or feast; for the Jews used to send in provisions to feast with the nearest relations of the party deceased, of which see Jer. xvi. 7; Ezek. xxiv. 17; Hos. ix. 4; and in that case both the guests and food were legally polluted, Numb. xix. 11, 14, and therefore the use of these tithes in such cases had been a double fault, both the defiling of sacred food, and the employing of those provisions upon sorrowful occasions, which by God's express command were to be eaten with rejoicing, Deut. xiv. 26; xxvi. 11.

15 Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

CHAP. XXVII.

A command to set up stones for a remembrance, and to write the law upon them: they must build the altar of the Lord with whole stones, 1—8. To pronounce the blessing on Gerizim, and the curse on Ebal, 9—26.

AND Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be on the day when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaister them with plaister:

a Josh. 4. 1.

b Josh. 8. 32.

On that day, i. e. about that time, for it was not done till some days after their passing over. Day is oft put for time, as hath been noted before. Plaister them with plaister, for conveniency of writing upon them.

3 And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over, that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

All the words of this law; either, 1. All the words of this Book of Deuteronomy. But that seems too large for this place. Or, 2. The blessings and curses here following. But they are mentioned as a different thing. Or, 3. The law properly so called, i. e. the sum and substance of the precepts or laws of Moses, especially such as were moral and general, as may be guessed from the following part of the chapter, where the curses pronounced against all that confirm not all the words of this law to do them are particularly applied unto the transgressors of moral laws only, ver. 15, 16, &c. And especially the decalogue, which oft goes under that name. Compare Josh. viii. 32, &c.

4 Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaister them with plaister.

Josh. 8. 30.

Mount Ebal; the mount of cursing. Here the law is written, to signify that a curse was due to the violators of it, and that no man could expect justification or blessing from the works of the law, by the sentence whereof all men are justly accused, as being all guilty of the transgression of it in one kind and degree or other. Here the sacrifices are to be offered, to show that there is no way to be delivered from this curse but by the blood of Christ, which all these sacrifices did typify, and by Christ's being made a curse for us, Gal. iii. 13.

5 And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones:

^d Ex. 20. 25.
Josh. 8. 31.

thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD thy God:

Whole stones, i. e. rough, not hewed nor polished.

7 And thou shalt offer peace offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.

So as to be easily read by all.

9 ¶ And Moses and the priests the Levites spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God, ^e ch. 26. 18.

By thy solemn renewing of thy covenant with him.

10 Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

^f ch. 11. 29.
Josh. 8. 33.
Judg. 9. 7.

12 These shall stand upon mount Gerizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan; Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin:

Object. In Josh. viii. 33, they stood over against Mount Gerizim. Answ. 1. Both are true; they who stood upon the one mount, stood over against the other. 2. These words may be rendered beside or near to (as the Hebrew al oft signifies) Mount Gerizim, which might be over against it. To bless the people; whence it appears that the blessings also were pronounced as well as the curses, though they be not here mentioned. See Josh. viii. 33. Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin were the children of the free-women, Leah and Rachel, to show both the dignity of the blessings above the curses, and that the blessings belong only to those as are evangelically such, as this is expounded and applied, Gal. iv. 22, &c., even to those that receive the Spirit of adoption and liberty. Joseph is here put for both his sons and tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim, which are here reckoned as one tribe, because Levi is here numbered; but when Levi is omitted, as it is where the division of the land is made, there Manasseh and Ephraim pass for two tribes.

13 And these shall stand upon mount Ebal to curse; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali.

^g ch. 11. 29.
Josh. 8. 33.
+ Heb. for a cursing.

To curse; he saith to bless the people, ver. 12, but here only to curse, not expressing whom, either because he was loth to mention the people as objects of the curse; or because he presumed and hoped that though some particular persons might deserve the curse, yet the generality of the people would keep out of the reach of it; or to intimate, that though the blessing was peculiar to the people of Israel, yet the curse was indefinite and common to all nations, as may appear from the particular sins here numbered, which are such as made the Gentiles guilty and abominable to God, as is elsewhere affirmed. See Lev. xviii. 28. Gad and Asher, Dan and Naphtali, are the children of the bond-women, to show that the curse belongs to those of servile and disingenuous spirits and carriages to God. With these are joined Reuben, who by his shameful sin fell from his dignity, Gen. xlix. 4, and Zebulun, as the youngest of Leah's children, who was necessary to be joined with those, that the numbers might be equal.

The Levites, i. e. some of the Levites, to wit, the priests, which bare the ark, as it is expressed, Josh. viii. 33, for the body of the Levites stood upon Mount Gerizim, ver. 12; but these stood in the valley between Gerizim and Ebal, looking towards the one or the other mountain as they pronounced either the blessings or the curses, as may be gathered from Josh. viii. 33. With a loud voice; so as they might be heard by a great number of the people, by whom the rest were informed and directed by some signal when they should answer.

15 Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the LORD, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. And all the people shall answer and say, Amen.

And putteth it, or although, as that particle sometimes signifies. In a secret place; he takes special notice of such, partly to show the folly of those men who think to hide their sins by this means; and partly to deter men from such practices, which men could not see nor punish, by making them their own condemners and executioners. 5 Blessed shall be thy basket and thy ^g store.

i. e. It shall always be well replenished, and the provision thou hast there shall be preserved for, and in due time brought forth to, thy use and service. See Deut. xxvi. 2, 10.

6 ^g Blessed shalt thou be when thou ^h comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

i. e. In all thy affairs and administrations, which are oft expressed by this phrase, as Numb. xxvii. 17; Deut. xxxi. 2; 2 Sam. iii. 25; 2 Chron. i. 10; Acts i. 21; ix. 28.

7 The LORD ^h shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

i. e. Many ways, as is usual when an army is totally overthrown and dissipated.

8 The LORD shall ⁱ command the blessing upon thee in thy ^j storehouses, and in all that thou ^k settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

Shall command, i. e. shall by his sovereign and powerful providence give it, even when it seems furthest from thee, and not likely to come to thee without a word of command from God himself.

9 The LORD shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

Shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, i. e. shall confirm and establish his covenant with thee, by which he separated thee to himself as a holy and peculiar people, and shall publicly own thee for such, as it follows, ver. 10.

10 And all people of the earth shall see that thou art ^m called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be ⁿ afraid of thee.

i. e. That you are in deed and truth his people and children: see Deut. xiv. 1; xxvi. 18. For to be called oft-times signifies to be, as Isa. xlvii. 1, 5; lvi. 7; Matt. v. 9, 19; xxi. 13.

11 And ^o the LORD shall make thee plenteous ^p in goods, in the fruit of thy ^q body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

The same things which were said before are repeated, to show that God would repeat and multiply his blessings upon them.

12 The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven ^r to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and ^s to bless all the work of thine hand: and ^t thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

His good treasure, to wit, the heaven or the air, as it here follows, which is God's storehouse, where he treasures up rain or wind or other things for man's use. See Job xxxviii. 22; Psal. xxxiii. 7.

13 And the LORD shall make thee ^u the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

The head; the chief of all people in power, or at least in dignity and privileges; so that even they that are not under thine authority shall reverence thy greatness and excellency. So it was in David's and Solomon's time, and so it should have been much oftener and much more, if they 14 ^tAnd thou shalt not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, ^{to} the right hand, or ^{to} the left, to go after other gods to serve them.

15 ¶ But it shall come to pass, ^uif thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee, and ^vovertake thee:

So as thou shalt not be able to escape them, as thou shalt vainly hope and endeavour to do.

16 Cursed shalt thou be ^win the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field.

17 Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 Cursed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 The LORD shall send upon thee ^xcursing, ^yvexation, and ^zrebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto [†]for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

Vexation, or, disturbance. This seems chiefly to concern the mind, and its torment arising from the disappointment of hopes, and the presages of its approaching miseries. Rebuke, to wit, from God, not so much in words as by his actions, by cross providences, by sharp and sore afflictions, which are oft called rebukes, as 2 Kings xix. 3; Psal. xviii. 15; xxxix. 11; lxxx. 16; Isa. li. 20; lxvi. 15; Ezek. v. 15; xxv. 17.

21 The LORD shall make ^cthe pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 ^dThe LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, and with the ^esword, and with ^fblasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

With blasting, and with mildew; two plagues or evil affections of corn. See 1 Kings viii. 37; 2 Chron. vi. 28; Amos iv. 9; Hag. ii. 17.

23 And ^fthy heaven that is over thy head shall be brass, and the earth that is under thee shall be iron.

Be brass, i. e. like brass, hard and dry, and shut up from giving rain. See Lev. xxvi. 19. Be iron, hard, and chapt, and barren.

24 The LORD shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

Either, 1. Thy rain shall be as unprofitable to thy ground and seed as if it were only so much dust. Or, 2. Instead of rain, shall come nothing but dust from heaven, which being raised and carried up by the wind in great abundance, doth return and fall upon the earth as it were in clouds or showers. Until thou be destroyed, to wit, by famine, following these great droughts.

25 ^gThe LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them: and ^hshalt be [†]removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

Removed. Heb. for a removing; to be tossed like a football from place to place, and from people to people.

26 And ⁱthy carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray ^jthem away.

27 The LORD will smite thee with ^kthe botch of Egypt, and with ^lthe emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.

28 The LORD shall smite thee with madness, and blindness, and ^mastonishment of heart:

Blindness, to wit, of mind, so that they shall not know what to do; see Job v. 13, 14; so as they shall commonly choose and follow the worst counsels and courses, to their own ruin. Astonishment of heart; they shall be filled with wonder and horror, because of the strangeness and soreness of their calamities.

29 And thou shalt ⁿgrope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways: and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save ^othee.

At noon-day, i. e. in the most clear and evident matters thou shalt grossly mistake and miss thy way. Thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; thy counsels and enterprises shall be frustrated, and turn to thy destruction.

30 ^pThou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: ^qthou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: ^rthou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not [†]gather the grapes thereof.

Another man shall lie with her before thou canst consummate thy marriage, and enjoy her as thy wife. And so in the following branches.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and [†]shall not be restored to thee: thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue ^sthem.

32 Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and ^tfail with longing for them all the day long: and ^uthere shall be no might in thine hand.

Shall be given unto another people, by those who have conquered them, and taken them captives, who shall give or sell them to other persons, as the manner was. Fail, or, be consumed, partly with grief and plentiful tears shed for them; and partly with earnest desire, and vain and long expectation of their return. See Psal. cxix. 82. No might, i. e. no power to rescue them, nor money to ransom them.

33 ^vThe fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed ^waway:

Which thou knowest not; which shall come from a far country, which thou didst not at all expect or fear, and therefore will be the more dreadful when they come; a nation whose language thou understandest not, and therefore canst not plead with them for mercy, nor expect any favour from them. Oppressed and crushed away; not sometimes conquered, and sometimes conquering, as the course of war

There shalt thou serve other gods; either being corrupted by their examples and counsels, or compelled to it by their tyranny. So what formerly was their choice and delight now becomes their plague and misery. And this doubtless was the condition of many Israelites under the Assyrian and Babylonish captivities, as we may gather from Jer. xlv. 17—19, and other places, though many of them kept themselves free from that infection.

h Is. 8. 18. Ezek. 14. 8. 46 And they shall be upon thee ^hfor a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever.

They shall be, i. e. these curses now mentioned. For a wonder, i. e. signal and wonderful to all that hear of them.

47 ⁱBecause thou servedst not the LORD thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, ^kfor the abundance of all things;

Or, in the abundance of all things; for this is opposed to in hunger, in thirst, &c., ver. 48. And the Hebrew mem oft signifies in, as Exod. xxv. 18; Job xix. 26; P'sal. lxxii. 16.

48 Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things; and he ^lshall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee.

A yoke of iron, which thou canst neither well bear, nor break. See Jer. xxviii. 13, 14.

49 ^mThe LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, ⁿas swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not [†]understand;

As the eagle flieth, Heb. as the eagle flies, i. e. not only swiftly, as is expressed in our translation, for which the Babylonian is noted and compared to an eagle, Jer. iv. 13; Ezek. xvii. 3; Dan. vii. 4; but also fiercely and greedily, as the eagle to its prey; also strongly and irresistibly. Possibly this may be understood of the Romans, who did come from far, from the end of the earth, more truly and literally than the Chaldeans, whose country was not far from Judea, and this may allude to the eagle, which was in their ensigns.

50 A nation [†]of fierce countenance, ^owhich shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young:

Of fierce countenance, Heb. strong of face or countenance, i. e. bold and impudent, hardy and undaunted, cruel and uncompassionate and inflexible, sparing no age nor sex, &c.

51 And he shall ^peat the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed: which also shall not leave thee either corn, wine, or oil, or the increase of thy kine, or flocks of thy sheep, until he have destroyed thee.

52 And he shall ^qbesiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land: and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

58 If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in ^{y Exod. 6. 3.} this book, that thou mayest fear [†] this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD;

Name, i. e. thing or person, to wit, this glorious God. Names are oft put for things, as 1 Kings v. 3; Psal. xx. 1; cxv. 1; Acts iv. 12; Eph. i. 21; and for persons, as Acts i. 15; Rev. iii. 4.

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the LORD † bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

^{b ch. 4. 27.} 62 And ye ^b shall be left few in number, whereas ye were ^c as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldst not obey the voice of the LORD thy God.

Rejoice over you to destroy you; his just indignation against you will be so great, that it will be a pleasure to him to take vengeance on you. For though he doth not delight in the death of a sinner in itself, yet he doth doubtless delight in the glorifying of his justice upon incorrigible sinners, seeing the exercise of all his attributes must needs please him, else he were not perfectly happy. The land whither thou goest to possess it; which was no ordinary land, but a most pleasant land, a land of promise, a token of God's favour, and a pledge of their eternal inheritance, which was a great aggravation of their loss of it.

^{f Lev. 26. 33. ch. 4. 27. 28. Neh. 1. 6. Jer. 16. 13.} 64 And the LORD ^f shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the

65 And ^h among these nations shalt ^{h Amos 9. 4.} thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: ⁱ but the LORD shall ^{i Lev. 26. 36.} give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and ^k sorrow of mind: ^{k Lev. 26. 16.}

Neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest; ye shall have no settlement in the land whither you are banished, but there you shall be tossed about from place to place, and sold from person to person, or, Cain-like, wander about like a vagabond.

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life:

Either because thou art in the hands of thy enemies, that have power, and want not will, to destroy thee; or because of the terrors of thy own mind, and the guilt of thy conscience, making thee to fear, even where no great cause to fear is.

^{l Job 7. 4.} 67 ^l In the morning thou shalt say, ^l Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, ^l Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and ^m for the sight of thine ^{m ver. 34.} eyes which thou shalt see.

68 And the LORD ⁿ shall bring thee ^{n Jer. 44. 7. Hos. 8. 13. & 9. 3.} into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof ^o I spake unto thee, ^{o ch. 17. 16.} Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen, and no man shall buy you.

Into Egypt again, whence he hath now so gloriously delivered thee, as repenting of all his kindness to thee, and resolved to undo what he hath done for thee. And the remembrance of what they endured in Egypt could not but make the thoughts of returning thither again very terrible to them. With ships; which was literally fulfilled under Titus, when multitudes of them were carried thither in ships, and sold there for slaves, as Josephus relates. And this expression seems to mind them of that time when they went over the sea without ships, God miraculously drying up the sea before them, &c., which now they would have occasion sadly to remember. By the way, or, to the way; the Hebrew both here signifying to, as it doth Gen. xi. 4; Lev. xvi. 22; Psal. xix. 5; xci. 12; Isa. ix. 8. And the way seems not to be meant here of the usual road-way from Canaan to Egypt, which was wholly by land, but to be put for the end of the way or journey, even the land of Egypt; for to this, and not to the road-way between Canaan and Egypt, agree the words here following, whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it (i. e. Egypt) no more again. And so that way is put for that land in a place parallel to this, where the very same words are used, Deut. xvii. 16, to which this place palpably alludes. No man shall buy you; either because the number of you captives shall be so great, that the market shall be glutted with you; or because you shall be so loathsome and contemptible that men shall not be willing to have you for slaves. And this was the condition of the Jews after the destruction of Jerusalem, as Josephus the Jew hath left upon record.

The manifold works and mercies of God a motive to obedience, 1—9. Moses solemnly engageth them to keep covenant with God, 10—17. Unbelief, careless contempt, and breach of covenant shall be severely punished, 18—28. The end and use of the revealed will of God, 29.

These are the words of the covenant; these are the terms or conditions upon which God hath made, i. e. renewed covenant with you. Beside the covenant, i. e. that entering into or striking of covenant. The covenant was but one in substance, but various in the time and manner of its dispensation.

4 Yet ^dthe LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day.

This verse comes in by way of correction or exception to the foregoing clause in this manner, I said indeed, Ye have seen, &c., ver. 2, and thine eyes have seen, &c., but I must recall my words, for in truth you have not seen them; in seeing you have not seen, and perceiving you have not perceived them: you have perceived and seen them with the eyes of your body, but not with your minds and hearts; you have not seen them to any purpose; you have not yet learned rightly to understand the word and works of God, so as to know them for your good, and to make a right use of them, and to comply with them; which he expresseth thus, the Lord hath not given you, &c., not to excuse their wickedness, but partly to direct them what course to take, and to whom they must have recourse for the amending of their former errors, and for a good understanding and improvement of God's works; and partly to aggravate their sin, and to intimate that although the hearing ear, and the seeing eye, and the understanding heart, be the workmanship of God, Prov. xx. 12, and the effects of his special grace, Deut. xxx. 6; Jer. xxxi. 33; xxxii. 39, &c., yet their want of this grace was their own fault, and the just punishment of their former sins; their present case being like theirs in Isaiah's time, who first shut their eyes and ears that they might not see and hear, and would not understand, and then by the tremendous, but righteous judgment of God, had their hearts made fat, and their eyes and ears closed, that they should not be able to see, and hear, and understand, as is manifest from the history of their carriage in the wilderness.

5 ^eAnd I have led you forty years in the wilderness: your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot.

You have subsisted without bread, the staff of life. Neither wine or strong drink, but only water out of the rock. The Lord your God; the Lord omnipotent and all-sufficient for your provision, without the help of any creatures, and your God in covenant with you, who hath a true affection to you, and fatherly care of you, even when ordinary means fail.

i. e. With your posterity; for so the covenant was made at first with Abraham and his seed, by which, as God engaged himself to continue the blessing of Abraham upon his posterity, so he also engaged them to the same duties and conditions which were required of Abraham. So it is even among men, where a king confers an estate upon a subject and his heirs for ever, upon some certain conditions, all his heirs who enjoy that benefit are obliged to the same conditions. But whatsoever becomes of man's right, God the Creator and sovereign Lord of all men and things hath an unquestionable right and power to oblige all persons that are or shall be to such conditions as he pleaseth, and especially to such conditions as are for their own benefit, which is the present case.

16 (For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt; and how we came through the nations which ye passed by;

In the land of Egypt, where you have seen their idolatries, and learned too much of them, as the golden calf showed, and therefore need to renew your covenant with God; where also we were in dreadful bondage, whence God alone hath delivered us, to whom therefore we are deeply obliged, and have all reason to renew our covenant with him. How we came through the nations, i. e. with what hazards, if God had not appeared for us.

17 And ye have seen their abominations, and their idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them:)

^v Heb. dungy gods.

What sorry tools they are, what senseless and ridiculous deities; so that you have great reason to value your God, and to cleave to him in covenant, and to take heed of such abominable idolatries.

18 Lest there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; ^ulest there should be among you a root that beareth ||†gall and wormwood;

Lest there should be; or take heed or beware lest there be; for it seems to be an ellipsis, or defect of a verb, which is usual in Scripture, and which we have in a case parallel to this. Gen. iii. 22. And now we must take care lest he put forth, &c. Or this particle lest may be joined with ver. 14, 15, to this purpose, I now renew the covenant with you, and with your posterity, lest any of you or yours should be tempted to depart from God, &c. Whose heart turneth away, i. e. who turneth away from God to idols, not by constraint, but by choice, and the inclination of his own heart. By this phrase he leads them to the spring of their sin and ruin, even their own hearts, which he admonisheth them hereby to look to above all things. A root; either, 1. An evil heart inclining you to such cursed idolatry, and bringing forth bitter fruits. Or rather, 2. Some secret and subtle apostate, who lurks and works like a root under ground, and slyly conveys his poison to the infection of others; for both the foregoing and following words speak of some particular person. Gall and wormwood, i. e. which though for the present it may please your fancy, yet in the end, assure yourselves, will produce bitter fruits, not only distasteful to God, but also poisonous and destructive to yourselves.

19 And it come to pass, when he heareth the words of this curse, that he bless himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk *in the ||imagination of mine heart, ^zto add †drunkenness to thirst:

When he, i. e. that root or that man mentioned ver. 18. Of this curse, i. e. of that oath mentioned ver. 12, wherein he swore that he would keep covenant with God, and that with a curse pronounced against himself if he did not perform it. Now if when he reads this again, or hears of it from others. Bless himself in his heart, i. e. flatter himself in his own eyes, as Psal. xxxvi. 2, with vain conceits and hopes, as if God did not mind such things, and either could not or would not punish them. Compare Psal. xlix. 18; Jer. ii. 20; Zech. xi. 5. Peace, i. e. safety and prosperity. Though I walk in the imagination of mine heart; though in my practices and worship I do not follow God's command, but my own devices, and whatsoever my fancy best liketh, minding nothing but the gratifying of mine own fancy and humour. To add drunkenness to thirst; i. e. not only to satisfy his thirst, i. e. his concupiscence and inclination to wickedness, but even to exceed it, as drunkards take oftentimes more than their appetite desires, and drink out of mere wantonness, or from a desire to be drunk; and as filthy persons commit lewdness with others more than their natural inclinations desire, or their strength can well bear, merely from a wicked mind, and from contempt of God, and because they will do so. The words may be rendered, to add thirst to drunkenness, the particle eth, which is a note of the accusative case, being joined with thirst, and not with drunkenness; and so the sense may be this, that when he hath multiplied his sins, and made himself as it were drunk with them, yet he is not satisfied therewith, but still whets his appetite, and provokes his thirst after more, as drunkards commonly will use means and temptations to make themselves thirst after more drink, that they may drink more abundantly. Or thus, to add the moist or moistening to the thirsty, i. e. instead of restraining and mortifying, as he ought to do, fully and greedily to satisfy his idolatrous or wicked inclinations, and resolved to give up himself to all the desires of his own heart. Compare Job xxxiv. 7; Prov. xxiii. 35; Isa. xxx. 1; lvi. 12; Eph. iv. 19.

20 ^yThe LORD will not spare him, but then ^zthe anger of the LORD and ^ahis jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD shall blot out his name from under heaven.

Shall smoke, i. e. shall burn and break forth with flame and smoke as it were from a furnace. Compare Psal. xviii. 8. Blot out his name from under heaven, i. e. destroy his person and memory from amongst men.

21 And the LORD shall separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that †are written in this book of the law:

Unto evil, i. e. unto some peculiar and exemplary plague; he will make him a monument of his displeasure to the whole land. According to all the curses of the covenant; he intimates that the covenant of grace, which God made with them, hath not only blessings belonging to it, as this foolish person imagined, but curses also to the transgressors of it.

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses †which the LORD hath laid upon it;

The words following, ver. 24, 25, &c.

23 And that the whole land thereof is brimstone, ^dand salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, ^elike the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zebboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath:

Is brimstone, and salt, and burning, i. e. is burnt up and made barren, as with brimstone and salt. See Judg. ix. 45; Psal. cvii. 34; Jer. xvii. 6; Ezek. xlvii. 11.

24 Even all nations shall say, ^fWherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this land? what meaneth the heat of this great anger?

25 Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and †whom he had not †given unto them:

i. e. Whom God had not given or divided to them, as their portion, or for their worship, but hath divided them unto all nations, as it is said, Deut. iv. 19, not for their worship, but for their use and service. So he speaks here of the sun and moon and stars, which were the principal gods worshipped by the neighbouring nations. Or, to whom none hath given this, i. e. that they should be worshipped, or, to whom no worship belongs. So this is an argument against idolatry. Or, who had not given unto them, to wit, any thing: it is an ellipsis of the accusative, which is very frequent: gods known to them by no benefits received from them, as they had from their God, whom therefore it was the greater folly and ingratitude to forsake.

27 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, ^gto bring upon it all the curses that are written in this book:

28 And the LORD ^hrooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day.

29 The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

Having now mentioned the dreadful and amazing judgments of God upon the whole land and people of Israel, and foreseeing by the Spirit of prophecy the utter extirpation and destruction which would come upon them for their wickedness, he breaks out into this pathological exclamation, either to bridle their curiosity, who hearing this, would be apt to inquire into the time and manner of so great an event; or to quiet his own mind, and satisfy the scruples of others, who perceiving God to deal so severely with his own people, when in the mean time he suffered those nations which were guilty of grosser atheism, and idolatry, and impiety than the generality of the Jewish people were, to live and prosper in the world, might thence take occasion to deny or reproach his providence, or question the equity of his proceedings. To this he answers, that the ways and judgments of God, though never unjust, are oftentimes secret and hidden from us, and unsearchable by our shallow capacities, and are matter for our admiration, not for our inquiry. Unto us and to our children: but the things which are revealed by God and his word, these are the proper object of our inquiries and studies, that thereby we may come to the knowledge of our duty, by the practice whereof we may be kept from such terrible punishments and calamities as these now mentioned.

6 And ^hthe LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

*The Lord will circumcise thine heart, or, for the Lord will circumcise thine heart, i. e. will by his word and Spirit change and purge thy heart from all thine idolatry, and superstition, and wickedness, and incline thy heart to love him, as it here follows. See Deut. x. 16. And so this is produced to show why and how those great things should be accomplished; God would first convert and sanctify them, the fruit whereof should be this, that they should return and obey God's commandments, ver. 8, and then should prosper in all things, ver. 9. The Hebrew van is oft rendered for, and notes the reason of a thing, as 1 Kings i. 21; xviii. 3, 4; Psal. i. 3; v. 12; Isa. xvi. 2; lxiv. 5. And this promise principally respects the times of the gospel, and the grace which was to be then imparted to all God's Israel by Christ, by whom alone this circumcision is obtained, Col. ii. 11. And so having fully described to them the law of God, the rule of their obedience, here and in foregoing chapters, and considering their great instability in the performance of their obedience to it, he now seasonably adds a glorious gospel promise, and directs their faith to the Messiah, by whom alone they could expect or receive the establishment of their hearts in the ways of God against apostacy.*

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day.

9 ⁱAnd the LORD thy God will make ⁱ thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again ^krejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers:

Jer. 32. 41

Whereas thou didst formerly receive and enjoy these mercies for thy hurt, through thy own wicked and foolish heart, when thou wast full and fat, forgetting God, and kicking against him, Deut. xxxi. 20; xxxii. 15, now thou shalt have them for thy good; thy heart shall be so changed by the grace of the gospel that thou shalt not now abuse them, but employ them to the more cheerful and faithful service of God, the giver of them. Rejoice over thee for good, i. e. to do thee good; as he did rejoice to destroy thee, Deut. xxviii. 63.

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

This caution and condition is added to warn them that they should not receive the grace of God in vain, and to teach them that the grace of God doth not discharge man's obligation to his duty, nor excuse him for the neglect of it, and that conversion and sanctification, though it be God's work, yet it is man's duty.

11 ¶ For this commandment which I command thee this day, ^lit is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off.

l Is. 45. 19.

He seems to speak of the law, or of that great command of loving and obeying God, mentioned here ver. 2, 6, 10, 16, which is the sum of the law, of which yet he doth not here speak simply, or as it is in itself, but as it is mollified and accompanied with the grace of the gospel, whereby God circumciseth men's hearts to do this, as is expressed ver. 6. The meaning is, that although the practice of God's law strictly and severely be now far from us, and above our strength, yet, considering the advantage of gospel grace, whereby God enables us in some measure to our duty, and accepts of our sincere endeavours instead of perfection, and imputes Christ's perfect righteousness unto us that believe, now it is near and easy to us. And so this place well agrees with Rom. x. 6, &c., where St. Paul expounds or applies this place to the righteousness of faith, by which alone the law is such as it is here described. It is not hidden from thee, Heb. is not too wonderful for thee, as Deut. xvii. 8; Prov. xxx. 18; Jer. xxxii. 17, i. e. not too hard for thee to know and do: the will of God, which is but darkly manifested to other nations, Acts xvii. 27, is clearly and fully revealed unto thee; thou canst not pretend ignorance or invincible difficulty. Far off, i. e. out of thy reach.

^{in Rom. 10. 6, &c.} 12 ^mIt is not in heaven, that thou shouldst say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

In heaven, i. e. shut up there; but it hath been thence delivered and published in thy hearing.

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldst say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

Neither is it beyond the sea: the knowledge of this commandment is not to be fetched from far distant places, to which divers of the wise heathens travelled for their wisdom, but it was brought to thy very doors and ears, and declared to thee in this wilderness.

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

In thy mouth; thou knowest it so well, that it is the matter of thy common discourse; thou professest thy knowledge and belief of it: or, in the mouths of thy priests and Levites, who are daily preaching of it, and instructing thee in it. In thy heart, i. e. in thy mind, (as the heart is very commonly taken,) to understand and believe it.

^{n ver. 1. 19. ch. 11. 26.} 15 ¶ See, ^aI have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

Life and good, i. e. a good or a happy life; a figure called hendiaduo: or, life, and all the blessings of life, as good is oft used, as Job vii. 7; Psal. iv. 6; cxxviii. 5; Eccles. ii. 24; iv. 8; vi. 3.

16 In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

Drawn away, either by thy own evil mind, or by the examples or persuasions of others.

^{o ch. 4. 26. & 8. 19.} 18 ^oI denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land, whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

20 That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for he is thy ^rlife, and the length of thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

^r Ps. 27. 1. & 66. 9. John 11. 25.

He is thy life, i. e. the cause or author of thy life, as life is used John xiv. 6; xvii. 3.

CHAP. XXXI.

Moses declares to the people his approaching death, and encourageth them, and Joshua, 1—8. He delivereth the law unto the priests to read it every seventh year to the people, 9—13. God putteth Joshua into his office; foretelleth to Moses and him the future disobedience and misery of the people; enjoineth Moses a song to testify against the people, 14—23. Moses chargeth the Levites to lay up the book of the law beside the ark of the covenant, 24—27; assembleth all the people to hear his song, 28—30.

AND Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel.

Went and spake, i. e. proceeded or continued to speak, a usual Hebrew phrase. Or, went to the place where he had assembled the people, that he might speak to them.

2 And he said unto them, I ^aam an hundred and twenty years old this day; I can no more ^bgo out and come in: also the LORD hath said unto me, ^cThou shalt not go over this Jordan.

Go out and come in, i. e. perform the office of a leader or governor, either because I now find a decay of my mind and body, which seems not well to agree with Deut. xxxiv. 7, or because I foresee the time of my death approaches.

3 The LORD thy God, ^dhe will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them: and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, ^eas the LORD hath said.

8 And the LORD, ^ohe it is that doth go before thee; ^phe will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

9 ¶ And Moses wrote this law, ^qand delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, ^rwhich bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and unto all the elders of Israel.

This law, largely so called, the whole law or doctrine delivered unto Moses contained in these five books. Delivered it unto the priests, that they might keep it carefully and religiously, and bring it forth upon occasion, and read it, and instruct the people out of it. Which bare the ark, to wit, sometimes in great solemnities, as Josh. iii. 13, 17; vi. 12; 1 Kings viii. 3; though the Levites also might bear it, as appears from Numb. iii. iv. x.; 1 Chron. xv. 2. The elders of Israel were assistants to the priests, and overseers to take care that the law should be kept, and read, and observed.

10 And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles,

The year of release; when they were freed from debts and troubles, and cares of worldly matters, and thereby fitter to attend upon God and his service.

11 When all Israel is come to appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.

Thyself in part, for the Jews tell us that the king was in person to read some part of it; or, at least, thou shalt cause it to be read by the priests or Levites, for he could not read it himself in the hearing of all Israel, but this was to be done by several persons, and to the people met in several congregations. See Neh. viii. 1, &c.

12 Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law:

Gather the people together; not into one place, where all could not hear, but into divers assemblies or synagogues. Women hereby are required to go to Jerusalem at this solemnity, as they were permitted to do in other solemnities, when the males only were enjoined to go, Exod. xxiii. 17. Children, to wit, such of them as could understand, as appears from Neh. viii. 2, 3. Thy stranger, i. e. the proselytes, though others also were admitted. That they may learn; that they may then certainly and constantly do so, though they had also other opportunities to do so, as upon the sabbath days, Acts xv. 21, and other solemn feasts, yea, even in their private houses.

13 And that their children, which have not known any thing, may hear, and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourself in the tabernacle of the congregation, that I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

In the tabernacle; either properly so called, for though the priests only might ordinarily enter there, yet others might go in upon a call and command from God, which here they had; or in the court of the tabernacle, at the door of which God stood in the cloudy pillar, ver. 15, the court coming here under the name of the tabernacle, as elsewhere it comes under the name of the temple. That I may give him a charge, immediately from myself, for his greater encouragement, and to gain him more authority with the people.

15 And the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

The death of men, both good and bad, is oft called a sleep, because they shall certainly awake out of it by resurrection. See Psal. lxxvi. 5; Dan. xii. 2; 1 Thess. iv. 13, &c.; 2 Pet. iii. 4. This people will go a whoring: God certainly foresees all things to come, yea, even those which depend upon the wills of men, or contingencies of the things, as this unquestionably did. Of the strangers of the land, i. e. of the Canaanites, who now are possessors, but shortly will be turned out of their possessions, and become as strangers in their own land. This aggravates their folly, to worship such gods as could neither preserve their friends, nor annoy their enemies.

17 Then my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall them; so that they will say in that day, Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is not among us?

Hide my face, i. e. withdraw my favour and help.

18 And I will surely hide my face in that day for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.

This song, which is contained Deut. xxxii., and is put into a song that it may be better learned, and more fixed in their minds and memories. Put it in their mouths; cause them to learn it, and sing it one to another, to oblige them to more circumspection and watchfulness. A witness for me; of my kindness in giving them so many blessings, of my patience in bearing so long with them, of my clemency in giving them such fair and plain warnings, and my justice in punishing such an unthankful, perverse, and incorrigible people.

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I swear unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey; and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify against them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for I know their imagination which they go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swear.

It shall not be forgotten: this seems not to be a precept that they should remember it, but a prediction, that God would give them sad occasion to remember it, by bringing upon them the dreadful calamities mentioned in it. Their imagination which they go about, even now; either their inward inclinations to idolatry, which they do not check, as they ought, but rather entertain with delight; and some of them do not only cherish it in their hearts, but as far as they can and dare secretly practise it, as may be gathered from Amos v. 26; Acts vii. 43; or their secret purposes to allow themselves therein, when they are settled in their land, which were clearly known to God, though it may be not fully evident to themselves.

22 ¶ Moses therefore wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.

u ver. 14. 23 ^u And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, ^x Be strong and of a good courage: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them: and I will be with thee.

This wickedness of theirs which I now foresee and foretell shall not hinder me from bringing them into Canaan.

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of ^ywriting the words of this law in a book, until they were finished, 25 That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, The Levites, i. e. the priests, ver. 9, who also were Levites.

26 Take this book of the law, ^z and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there ^a for a witness against thee.

In the side, i. e. in the outside, in a little chest fixed to it, for nothing but the tables of stone were contained in the ark, 1 Kings viii. 9. Here it was kept for greater security and reverence. A witness against thee, i. e. against thy people, to whom he turns his speech, that they might be more affected with it.

27 ^b For I know thy rebellion, and thy ^c stiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD; and how much more after my death?

28 ¶ Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, ^d and call heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that after my death ye will utterly ^e corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and ^f evil will befall you ^g in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

CHAP. XXXII.

The Divine song, in which God's power, mercy to his people, and vengeance on his enemies is exalted, their ingratitude is rebuked, 1—18. God's wrath and future judgments, 19—26. Yet the idolatrous nations to be destroyed, and they at last to be enlarged, 27—43. He exhorts them to set their hearts on these words for their good, 44—47. God sendeth him up to Mount Nebo, there to see the promised land and die, 48—52.

120 a ch. 4. 26. & 30. 19. & 31. 28. 16. 50. 4. 16. 1. 2. Jer. 2. 12. & 6. 19. GIVE ^a ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

O ye heavens, and, O earth: either, 1. Angels and men; or, 2. You lifeless and senseless creatures, heaven and earth, which he calls upon partly to accuse the stupidity of Israel, that were more dull of hearing than these; and partly as witnesses of the truth of his sayings, and the justice of God's proceedings against them.

2 ^b My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, ^c as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:

Look what effect rain and dew have upon herbs and grass, which they make fresh and fragrant and growing, the same effect I may justly expect and hope that my discourse will have upon your hearts, i. e. to make them soft and pliable and fruitful. Or this may be a prayer, Let my doctrine drop, &c. Oh that it might do so, that my discourse might not be lost upon you, but be profitable to you! the future tense of the indicative mood being put for the imperative mood, as is usual.

3 Because I will publish the name of the LORD: ^d ascribe ye greatness unto our God.

The name of the Lord, i. e. his glorious excellencies and righteous and worthy actions, by which he hath made himself known, as a man is known by his name, and by which it will appear both that there is no blame to be laid upon him, whatsoever befalls you, and that it is gross madness to forsake such a God for dumb idols and mere vanities.

As I am about to publish the great power and majesty and glory of God, so do you also own and acknowledge it, as you have reason to do; or, do you attend to the words which God hath commanded me to speak to you in his name with that diligence, reverence, and godly fear which the presence of so great and glorious a Majesty calls for.

4 He is ^e the Rock, ^f his work is perfect: for ^g all his ways are judgment: ^h a God of truth and ⁱ without iniquity, just and right is he.

The rock, or, a rock, as for the stability and everlastingness of his nature, and invincibleness of his power, so also for his fixedness and immutability in his counsels and promises and ways; so that if there shall be a sad change in your affairs from a high and prosperous to a calamitous and deplorable condition, as there will be, remember that this proceeds from yourselves, and from the change of your ways and carriages towards God, and not from God, in whom there is no variableness nor shadow of change, James i. 17. His work is perfect; all his works and actions are unblamable, as being perfect, wise, and righteous, as it follows. All his ways are judgment; all his administrations in the world, and particularly all his dealings with you, are managed with judgment and justice. A God of truth, constant to his promises: you cannot accuse him of any levity or unfaithfulness towards you to this day.

5 [†] They have corrupted themselves, [‡] their spot is not the spot of his children: [§] they are a ^{||} perverse and crooked generation.

They, i. e. the Israelites, as the following words manifest. Corrupted themselves: this phrase sometimes in Scripture notes sin, and sometimes destruction. And so the sense may be either, 1. Their wickedness is not from God, but from themselves, and their own choice; they have wilfully and industriously depraved themselves, and sold themselves to sin. Or rather, 2. Their destruction is not from God, who is just and true, &c., as was now said, but wholly and solely from themselves, and from their own wickedness, as it here follows. Their spot is not the spot of his children, i. e. their blemishes or sins are not committed through ignorance, or frailty, or surprisal, as good men sometimes sin, but they proceed from design and deliberation, are accompanied with malice, and wilfulness, and contempt, and followed with obstinacy, impenitency, and incorrigibleness. So that they carry themselves not like my children and people, as they seem to be and profess to be, but like mine enemies. They are a perverse and crooked generation; not only some few of them, but the whole body or generation of them, are perverse, i. e. froward and untractable, and crooked, i. e. irregular and disorderly, not agreeing with the straight and righteous nature of God and of his law. Compare Isa. xlii. 16.

foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, and established thee?

Hath bought thee; that hath redeemed and rescued thee from Egyptian bondage. Made thee, i. e. advanced thee, as that word is used, 1 Sam. xii. 6; Esth. vi. 6; Psal. xc. 6; cxli. 2; Isa. xliii. 7. Made thee, not only in a general and common way, by creation or production; but in a peculiar manner, by adoption, or making thee his peculiar people and children. Established thee, i. e. renewed and confirmed his grace and favour to thee, and not taken it away from thee, which thou hast provoked him to do.

7 ¶ Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations: ask thy father, and he will shew thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

The days of old, i. e. the history and events of ancient days or former ages, and thou wilt find that I had a respect unto thee, not only in Abraham's time, but long before it. Compare Jer. ii. 20.

8 When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

When God by his providence did allot the several parts of the world to several people, which was done Gen. x., xi. See Deut. ii. 5, 9; Amos ix. 7; Acts xvii. 26, 27. Separated the sons of Adam, i. e. divided them in their languages and habitations according to their families. He set the bounds of the people, i. e. he disposed of the several lands and limits of the people, so as he did reserve a convenient and sufficient place for the great numbers of the people of Israel, whom he designed to make as numerous as the stars of heaven. And therefore he so guided the hearts of several people, that the posterity of Canaan, which was accursed of God, Gen. ix. 25—27, and devoted to ruin, should be seated in that country which God intended for the children of Israel, that so when their iniquities were ripe, and God's time came, they might be rooted out, and the Israelites might come in their stead.

9 For the LORD's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance.

It is no wonder God had so great a regard to this people, for he chose them out of all mankind to be his peculiar portion and treasure.

10 He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye.

He found him, not by chance, but as it were looking out and seeking for him, he met with him there. He did indeed manifest himself to him in Egypt, but it was in the wilderness at Sinai, where he found God, and God found him in an eminent manner, and revealed his mind and will to him, and entered into covenant with him, and imparted himself and his grace and blessing to him, that being the place appointed in Egypt for God and Israel to meet together, Exod. iii. 12. By this word he also signifies both their lost condition in themselves, and that their recovery was not from themselves, but only from God, who sought and found them out by his grace. In a desert land; in a place destitute of all the necessaries and comforts of life, which also was a type of that desolate and comfortless condition in which all men are before the grace of God finds them out. See Cant. iii. 6; viii. 5; Ezek. xvi. 4; Hos. ix. 10; xiii. 9. In the waste howling wilderness, where instead of the voices of men, is nothing heard but the howlings, and yellings, and screeches of ravenous birds and beasts. See Isa. xliii. 20; Micah i. 8. He led him about; he conducted them from place to place by his cloudy pillar and providence. See Exod. xiii. 18, &c. Or, he compassed him about, by his provident care over him, watching over him and preserving him on every side. Compare Psal. xxxii. 7. As the apple of his eye; as men use to keep the apple of their eye, i. e. with singular care and diligence, this being, as a most tender, so a most useful part. Compare Psal. xvii. 8; Prov. vii. 2; Zech. ii. 8.

11 As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings; taketh them, beareth them on her wings:

Her nest, i. e. her young ones in the nest, by a common metonymy; which she by her cry and motion provoketh to fly by her example. Spreadeth abroad her wings, as preparing herself to fly. On her wings, or, as on her wings, i. e. gently, and tenderly, and safely too, as if she carried them not in her claws for fear of hurting them, but upon her wings. So it is only an ellipsis of the particle as, which is frequent, as hath been showed. Though some say the eagle doth usually carry her young ones upon her wings.

12 So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him.

i. e. When they were shut up in Egypt, as in their nest, whence they durst not venture to fly nor stir, he taught, and encouraged, and enabled them to fly out and free themselves from that bondage, and brought them into a state of liberty and safety; he dealt tenderly with them, bearing with their infirmities, keeping them from all harms. No strange god with him, to wit, to assist him at that work, or to deliver them. The more unworthy they in giving to idols a share in that worship and service which they owe to God only.

13 He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock;

On the high places of the earth, i. e. to conquer their strongest holds, which oftentimes are in the mountains, and their cities fenced with walls of greatest height and strength, Deut. i. 28; ii. 36; xxxiii. 29; Isa. lviii. 14. To ride upon in Scripture phrase is to subdue or conquer, as Psal. xlv. 4; lxvi. 12; Rev. vi. 2; xix. 11, 14. To suck honey out of the rock; this being a land flowing with honey, Exod. iii. 8, 17, where the bees made honey even in woods, as 1 Sam. xiv., or in the holes of rocks, or in the trees that grew upon or among rocks. Oil out of the flinty rock: the olive trees grow and fructify most in rocky or hilly places.

14 Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape.

With fat of lambs; for though the fat wherewith the inward parts were covered was not to be eaten by them, but offered to God, Lev. iii. 9, 10, yet that fat which was fast joined to and mixed with the flesh they might eat, as the Jewish doctors note. Bashan; a place famous for excellent cattle, Numb. xxxii. 4, 33. With the fat of kidneys of wheat, i. e. with the finest of the grains or kernels of wheat, compared to kidneys for their shape, and plumpness, and largeness. Compare Psal. lxxxi. 16; cxlvii. 14. The pure blood of the grape; wine not mixed with water, but pure as it comes from the grape, which was of a red or bloody colour. See Psal. lxxv. 8; Isa. xxvii. 2.

15 ¶ But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness; then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation.

Jeshurun, i. e. Israel, as is agreed by Christian and Jewish interpreters, whom he calls right, or upright, or righteous, (as the word signifies,) not that they were so indeed, but partly by way of instruction, to mind them what they professed, and promised, and ought to be; and partly by way of exprobration, to show them how unlike they were to the people of God, which they pretended to be, and what a shame it was to them to degenerate so much from their their name and profession. Waxed fat, and kicked, as well-

22. 1 Cor. 10.
22. 16 ¹They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

To jealousy, i. e. to anger and fury, for jealousy is the rage of a man, Prov. vi. 34. And withal it implies the ground of his anger, to wit, their falseness to God, whom they had owned and accepted as their Husband, and their spiritual whoredom with other gods.

17 ^mThey sacrificed unto devils, || not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

Unto devils, i. e. unto idols, which the devils brought into the world in opposition to God, in and by which the devils oftentimes manifested themselves unto men, and gave them answers, and received their worship. Compare 1 Cor. x. 20. The Gentiles pretended to worship God in those idols, and the devils which inspired them deluded the nations with false pretences that they were a sort of lower gods. Moses therefore takes off this mask, and shows the Israelites that these pretended gods were really devils, those great enemies of mankind, and therefore that it was the height of madness to honour or worship them. Not to God: this he saith, either because though at first they joined God and idols together in worship, yet at last they quite forsook God, and adhered to idols only; or because God utterly rejected those sacrifices which they offered to him together with idols, and took them for no sacrifices. See 1 Cor. x. 21. Whom they knew not, or, who never knew them, i. e. never showed any kindness to them, or did them any good; for so words of knowledge are oft used, as Psal. i. 6; Hos. xiii. 5. That came newly up; not simply or absolutely, for some of these gods had been worshipped for many generations, and had a fair pretence of long antiquity, but comparatively to the true God, who is the Ancient of days, Dan. vii. 9, and who was worshipped from the beginning of the world. To this original and first antiquity Moses recalls them; as also our Saviour doth recall the Jews to the first institution, Matt. xix. 8. And therefore we may safely follow both their patterns in despising all pretences of antiquity, which are contrary to God's first institutions contained (as all confess) in the Holy Scriptures. Whom your fathers feared not, i. e. served not, worshipped not, but justly despised and abhorred them. n Is. 17. 10.

18 ⁿOf the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast ^o forgotten God that formed thee.

Of the Rock, i. e. of God, one of whose titles this is, above, ver. 4; Isa. xlv. 8; or of Christ, who is called the Rock, 1 Cor. x. 4, whom the Israelites are said to have tempted, there, ver. 9. That begat thee, i. e. who hath adopted you to be his people, and hath showed as much care and kindness to you as if he had begotten you.

19 ^pAnd when the LORD saw it, he || abhorred them, ^q because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters.

Because of their sins, whereby they provoked him to anger. Or, by reason of his great and just anger against them he abhorred, or reprobated, or cast off his sons and his daughters, for such they were by calling and profession, but not in truth and reality, ver. 5.

20 And he said, ^r I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, ^s children in whom is no faith.

I will see what their end shall be; I will see and observe what will be the issue of all this, what will become of them at last; but this God doth not see only by way of speculation, but practically, i. e. considers with himself what he shall do with them, and how he shall punish them, and sees what he wills or purposes to do. A speech after the manner of men. Or I will see is put for I will make them and others to see, what the fruit of such actions shall be. Hebrew verbs in cal do oftentimes take the signification of hiphil. In whom there is no faith; perfidious, that have broken their covenant so solemnly made with me.

21 ^tThey have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger ^u with their vanities: and ^v I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

With those which are not a people, i. e. with the Gentile or heathenish nations, who are none of my people, who scarce deserve the name of a people, as being without yoke, without the knowledge and fear of God, which is the foundation of all true policy and government, and without righteous and necessary laws; and many of them are destitute of all government, and laws, and order, barbarous, and rude, and savage, and brutish in their manners. And yet these people I will prefer before you, and take in your stead; receive them, and reject you; which when it came to pass, how desperately it provoked the Jews to jealousy, may be gathered from Matt. xxi. 43, &c.; Acts xi. 2, 3; xxii. 21—23; 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16. A foolish nation; so the Gentiles were both in the opinion of the Jews, and in truth and reality, notwithstanding all their pretences to wisdom, Rom. i. 22, there being nothing more foolish or brutish than the worship of idols. See Jer. x. 8; 1 Cor. xii. 2.

22 For ^y a fire is kindled in mine anger, and || shall burn unto the lowest hell, and || shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

A fire is kindled, i. e. great and grievous judgments shall be inflicted, which oft come under the name of fire, &c. See Deut. iv. 24; Ezek. xxx. 8; Amos ii. 2, 5. Unto the lowest hell, or, unto hell, or the graves beneath. The sense is, it shall not only burn up all the corn and fruits and buildings which appear above ground, but it shall reach to the inwards and depths of the earth, and burn up the very roots and hopes of future increase.

23 I will ^z heap mischiefs upon them; ^a I will spend mine arrows upon them.

i. e. Even empty my quiver, and send upon them all my plagues, which, like arrows shot by a skilful and strong hand, shall speedily reach, and certainly hit, and mortally wound them. Compare Zech. ix. 14.

24 They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with ^b burning heat, and with bitter destruction: I will also send ^b the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.

With hunger; with famine, which burneth and parcheth the inward parts, and makes the face black as a coal, Lam. iv. 8. With burning heat; from fevers or carbuncles, or other inflaming distempers. Serpents of the dust, who feed upon the dust, Gen. iii. 14, and lurk in it, that they may surprise unwary passengers, Gen. xlix. 17.

25 ^c The sword without, and terror ^d within, shall ^d destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs.

26 ^e I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men:

27 Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries ^f should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should ^f say, || Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this.

The wrath of the enemy, i. e. their rage against me, as it is expressed Isa. xxxvii. 28, 29; their insolent and furious reproaches against my name, as if I were unnatural and cruel to my people, or unable to deliver them. Compare Exod.

xxxii. 12; Numb. xiv. 13; Deut. ix. 28; Josh. vii. 9. The fear hereof is ascribed to God after the manner of men. Strangely, i. e. insolently and arrogantly, above what they used to do. Or, make themselves strangers, i. e. either really not acknowledge, or pretend they did not know, that which I had publicly declared, and they either did or easily might have known, to wit, that this judgment was inflicted upon them by my hand for their sins.

28 For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

They; either, 1. The enemies last mentioned, who are foolish people, and therefore make so false and foolish a judgment upon things. Or rather, 2. The Israelites themselves, of whom he speaks both in the foregoing ver. 26, and in the whole foregoing chapter, and in the next ver. 29, and afterwards. Void of counsel; that have not wisdom to direct themselves, nor discretion to desire and receive counsel from others, but rashly and madly go on in those courses which will certainly ruin them.

29 O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

What their end will be; and that although God spare them long, yet at last judgment will certainly overtake them.

30 How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the LORD had shut them up?

How should one chase a thousand? whence should this miraculous change come, that whereas God had promised that five Israelites should chase an hundred of their enemies, &c., Lev. xxvi. 8, now, on the contrary, one enemy should chase a thousand Israelites? Their Rock, i. e. their God, as before, ver. 4, 18, who was their only refuge and defence; had sold them, to wit, for bond-slaves, had quitted his right and relation to them, and given them up into their enemies' hands. Shut them up, as it were, in the net which their enemies had laid for them.

31 For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

Who by their dear-bought experience have been forced to acknowledge that our God was far stronger than they and their false gods together. See Exod. xiv. 25; Numb. xxiii. 1; 1 Sam. iv. 8; Jer. xl. 3.

32 For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter:

For, or but; for these words seem to contain an answer to that question, ver. 30, How should, &c. To this he answers, 1. Negatively; It was not from impotency in God, for if he had not forsaken and delivered them up, they could not have been so easily chased. 2. Positively; But, saith he, the true reason was this, their vine, &c. Of the vine of Sodom: The people of Israel, which I planted and brought up as a choice vine, are now degenerated and become like the vine of Sodom; their principles and practices are all corrupt and abominable. Compare Isa. i. 10. Their clusters are bitter; their fruits or actions are most loathsome to me, malicious and mischievous to others, and at last will be pernicious to themselves.

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps.

The poison of dragons; for although some write that the dragons of Greece have no poison in them, yet that the African and Arabian dragons, of which Moses here writes, have poison in them, is confessed by ancient heathen authors. The cruel venom of asps; whose poison kills certainly and speedily, as Aristotle and others write.

34 Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

i. e. All their wickedness mentioned before. My long-suffering towards them may make them and others think that I have forgotten their sins, but I remember them punctually, they are sealed up as in a bag, Job xiv. 17, and as men seal up their treasures that nothing be lost; and I shall bring them to their remembrance also.

35 To me belongeth vengeance, and recompense; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.

It is my office to punish sin, and therefore as I know their sins, so I will assuredly punish them. Their feet shall slide; they who now think they stand fast and unmovable, they shall fall into utter destruction. In due time; though not so soon as some may expect it, yet in that time when it shall be most proper and seasonable, when they have filled up the measure of their sins. This due time may be the same with that fulness of time, Gal. iv. 4, when Christ came into the world, whom this people by wicked hands crucified and slew, Acts ii. 23, for which wrath came upon them to the uttermost, 1 Thess. ii. 15, 16. Is at hand, Heb. is near. So the Scripture oft speaks of those things which are at many hundred years' distance, to meet with objections arising in men's minds from the delays of them, and to signify, that though they may be afar off as to our measures of time and expectation of the things, yet in God's account they are near, they are as near as may be; as soon as ever the fit and the full time is come, they come instantly, they are nearer than sinners would have them; when the measure of their sins is once full, the judgment shall not be deferred.

36 For the LORD shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that their power is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

For, or, nevertheless, or, but yet, as the particle chi is sometimes used, as Job v. 7; Isa. ix. 1; xlix. 25. Having spoken of the dreadful calamity which would come upon his people, he now turns his discourse into a more comfortable strain, according to the usual method of the prophets, and here begins to show that after God had humbled and sorely chastised his people, yet at last he would have mercy upon them, and turn their captivity, as it here follows. Shall judge his people, i. e. shall plead their cause, shall protect and deliver them, as that phrase is oft used. See Psal. vii. 8; x. 18; Isa. i. 17; xi. 4; Jer. v. 28; xxii. 16. Repent himself for his servants, i. e. repent of the evils he hath brought upon them, will change his course and carriage towards them. None shut up, or left: none shut up, either in their strong cities or castles, or other hiding-places, or in the enemy's hands or prisons, whence there might be some hope or possibility of redemption; and none left, as the poor and contemptible people are neglected and usually left by the conquerors in the conquered land, as 2 Kings xxv. 12, but all seem to be cut off, and the people quite destroyed. So this phrase is used 1 Kings xiv. 10; xxi. 21; 2 Kings ix. 8; xiv. 26.

37 And he shall say, Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted,

He shall say: the Lord, before he deliver his people, will first convince them of their former folly in forsaking him and following idols; he will find an occasion from that miserable and hopeless condition into which their idols have brought them, to upbraid them with it.

38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, and drank the wine of their drink offerings? let them rise up and help you, and be your protection.

i. e. To whom you offered sacrifices and oblations after the manner of the Gentiles. See Exod. xxxiv. 13; Psal. cvi. 28; 1 Cor. x. 20. Let them help you, if they can do it. Compare Judg. x. 14; Jer. ii. 28.

39 See now that I, even I, am he, and there is no god with me: I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

See now; learn now by your own sad experience what vain and impotent things idols are, and what a silly thing it was in you to put your trust in them, as they did ver. 37. I am he, i. e. the only true, and omnipotent, and irresistible God, as it here follows.

40^d For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.

I lift up my hand to heaven, i. e. I solemnly swear that I will do what here follows, that as I will deliver my people, so I will fully avenge myself upon all mine enemies, whom I have used as rods to scourge my people. I live for ever, i. e. As sure as I live. Compare Jer. iv. 2; Heb. vi. 13; Rev. x. 5, 6.

41^e If I whet my glittering sword, and mine hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.

If once I begin to prepare for war, and for the execution of my sentence. Take hold on judgment, i. e. of the instruments of judgment, of the weapons of war. A metaphor from warriors that take their weapons into their hand when they intend to fight.

42^f I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain and of the captives, from the beginning of h revenges upon the enemy.

Of the captives; whom my sword hath sorely wounded, though not utterly killed. From the beginning of revenges upon the enemy, i. e. when once I begin to revenge myself and my people upon mine and their enemies, I will go on and make a full end. Or, with the head, or with the blood of the head, i. e. of the chief or chiefs, of the revenges of the enemy, i. e. of the revengeful or malicious enemy of God and of his people. The noun substantive is oft put for the adjective; as Gen. xvii. 5, a multitude of nations is put for many nations, Rom. iv. 17; and Gen. xlv. 22, changes of raiment, i. e. changeable raiment; and Psal. xcix. 4, the king's strength, i. e. the strong and mighty king; and so here, the revenges of the enemy, i. e. the revengeful enemy. And by the head may be here understood either the devil, or the heads and rulers of those empires which were enemies to God's people. Or, of the head shall be the revenges upon the enemies, i. e. I will take vengeance upon all mine enemies, yea, upon the head or heads of them.

43 || Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people: for he will ^gavenge the blood of his servants, and ^hwill render vengeance to his adversaries, and ⁱwill be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

With his people. This translation is justified by St. Paul, Rom. xv. 10, the participle with being oft understood, as Lev. xxvi. 42. He calls upon the nations to rejoice and bless God for his favours, and especially for the last wonderful deliverance which shall be given to the Jews when they shall be converted unto the gospel in the last days, which they have all reason to do, not only from that duty of sympathy which they owe to all people, and especially to God's ancient people, whereby they are to rejoice with them that rejoice, but because of that singular advantage and happiness which all nations will have at that time, and upon that occasion. Or, Rejoice, O ye Gentiles, his people; i. e. O you Gentiles, who once were not God's people, but now are his people, do you rejoice for God's mercies to the Jews his ancient people, bless God for their conversion and salvation.

44 ¶ And Moses came and spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he, and Hoshea the son of Nun.

Hoshea, or Joshua, who is here joined with Moses in this action, because though Moses only spake the words, yet Joshua consented to them; and, it may be, afterwards repeated them; this being not a song to be sung once for all, but a standing monument, which was written and kept for future use, Deut. xxxi. 22, &c., and to be repeated again and again upon solemn occasions, which Joshua and other succeeding magistrates were to take care of.

45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel:

46 And he said unto them, ⁿSet your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.

47 For it is not a vain thing for you; ^obecause it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

It is not an unprofitable or contemptible work I advise you to, but well worthy of your most serious care, oft to remember and diligently to consider it.

48 ^pAnd the Lord spake unto Moses that selfsame day, saying,

49 Get thee up into this ^qmountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho; and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession:

Nebo was a ridge or top of the mountains of Abarim. See on Numb. xxvii. 12; Deut. iii. 27.

50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people:

51 Because ye trespassed against me among the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah-Kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin; because ye sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

52 ^uYet thou shalt see the land before thee: but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The majesty of God, 1-5. Blessings prophesied of the twelve tribes, 6-25. The excellency of Israel, 26-29.

AND this is the blessing, wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

He is said to bless them ministerially, partly by praying to God with faith for his blessing upon them; partly by foretelling the blessings which God would confer upon them, for the prophets are oft said to do what they foretell should be done, as Gen. xlix. 7; Jer. i. 10; Ezek. xliii. 3; Hos. vi. 5. And Moses calls himself here the man of God, i. e. the servant, or prophet, or minister of God, as this phrase signifies, 1 Sam. ix. 6, 7; 1 Tim. vi. 11, to acquaint them that the following prophecies were not his own inventions, but Divine inspirations. The children of Israel, i. e. the several tribes; only Simeon is omitted, either, 1. In detestation of their parent Simeon's bloody and wicked carriage, for which Jacob also gives that tribe a curse rather than a blessing, in Gen. xlix. But as for Levi, who is joined with him in that censure and curse, Gen. xlix. 5-7, he is here separated from him, and exempted from that curse, and blessed with an eminent blessing for a singular and valuable reason expressed here, ver. 8, 9; whereas Simeon's tribe had been so far from expiating their father's crime, that they added new ones, their prince being guilty of another notorious crime, Numb. xxv. 6, 14, and his tribe too much concurring with him in such actions, as interpreters gather from the great diminution of the numbers of † Heb. a fire of law.

2 And he said, 'The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came with ^dten thousands of saints: from his right hand went † a fiery law for them.

The Lord came, to wit, to the Israelites, i. e. manifested graciously and gloriously among them. From Sinai, i. e. beginning at Sinai, where the first and most glorious appearance of God was, and so going on with them to Seir and Paran. Or, to Sinai, the particle mem oft signifying to, as is evident by comparing Isa. lix. 20, with Rom. xi. 26; 1 Kings viii. 30, with 2 Chron. vi. 21; 2 Sam. vi. 2, with 1 Chron. xiii. 6. See also Gen. ii. 8; xi. 2; xiii. 11; 1 Sam. xiv. 15. Or, in Sinai; mem being put for beth, in, as Exod. xxv. 18; Deut. xv. 1; Job xix. 26; Psal. lxxviii. 29; lxxii. 16. Rose up; he appeared or showed himself, as the sun doth when it riseth. From Seir, i. e. from the mountain or land of Edom, which is called Seir, Gen. xxxiii. 3; xxxv. 8; Deut. ii. 4, to which place the Israelites came, Numb. xx. 14, &c.; and from thence God led them on towards the Land of Promise, and then gloriously appeared for them in subduing Sihon and Og before them, and giving their countries unto them; which glorious work of God's is particularly celebrated Judg. v. 4. But because the land of Seir or Edom is sometimes taken more largely, and so reacheth even to the Red Sea, as appears from 1 Kings ix. 26, and therefore Mount Sinai was near to it; and because Paran, which here follows, was also near Sinai, as being the next station into which they came from the wilderness of Sinai, Numb. x. 12; all this verse may belong to God's appearance in Mount Sinai, where that glorious light which shone upon Mount Sinai directly did in all probability scatter its beams into adjacent parts, such as Seir and Paran were; and so this is only a poetical and prophetic variation of the phrase and expression of the same thing in divers words, and God coming, or rising, or shining from or to or in Sinai, and Seir, and Paran note one and the same illustrious action of God appearing there with ten thousands of his saints or holy angels, and there giving a fiery law to them, as it here follows. And this interpretation may receive some strength from Hab. iii. 3, where this glorious march of God before his people is remembered; only teman, which signifies the south, is put for Seir, which is here, possibly to signify that that Seir which is here mentioned was to be understood of the southern part of the country of Seir or Edom, which was that part adjoining to the Red Sea. Others refer this of Seir to the brazen serpent, that eminent type of Christ, which was erected in this place. Mount Paran; a place where God eminently manifested his presence and goodness, both in giving the people flesh which they desired, and in appointing the seventy elders, and pouring forth his Spirit upon them, Numb. xi.; though the exposition mentioned in the foregoing branch may seem more probable. With ten thousands of saints, i. e. with a great company of holy angels, Psal. lxxviii. 17; Dan. vii. 10, which attended upon him in this great and glorious work of giving the law, as may be gathered from Acts vii. 53; Gal. iii. 19; Heb. ii. 2; xii. 22. From his right hand; which both wrote the law and gave it to men; an allusion to men, who ordinarily write and give gifts with their right, and not with their left hand. A fiery law. The law is called fiery, partly, because it is of a fiery nature, purging, and searching, and inflaming, for which reasons God's word is compared to fire, Jer. xxiii. 29; partly, to signify that fiery wrath and curse which it inflicteth upon sinners for the violation of it, 2 Cor. iii. 7, 9; and principally, because it was delivered out of the midst of the fire, Exod. xix. 16, 18; Deut. iv. 11; v. 22, 23.

down at thy feet; every one shall ^hreceive ^hProv. 2, 1. of thy words.

The people, i. e. the tribes of Israel, which are called people, Gen. xlviii. 19; Judg. v. 14; Acts iv. 27. The sense is, This law, though delivered with fire, and smoke, and thunder, which might seem to portend nothing but hatred and terror, yet in truth it was given to Israel in great love, as being the great mean of their temporal and eternal salvation. And although God shows a general and common kindness to all men, yet he loved this people in a singular and peculiar manner. All his saints; all God's saints or holy ones, i. e. his people, as they are now called, the people of Israel, who are all called holy, Exod. xix. 6; Numb. xvi. 3; Deut. vii. 6; Dan. vii. 25; viii. 24; xii. 7, because they all professed to be so, and were obliged to be so, and many of them were such; though some appropriate this to the true saints in Israel. Are in thy hand, or were in thy hand, i. e. under God's care, to protect, and direct, and govern them, as that phrase signifies, Numb. iv. 28, 33; John x. 28, 29. These words are spoken to God; and for the change of persons, his and thy, that is most frequent in the Hebrew tongue. See Dan. ix. 4. This clause may further note God's kindness to Israel in upholding and preserving them when the fiery law was delivered, which was done with so much dread and terror, that not only the people trembled and were ready to sink under it, Exod. xx. 18, 19, but even Moses himself did exceedingly fear and quake, Heb. xii. 21. But in this fright God sustained both Moses and the people in or by his hand, whereby he in a manner hid and covered them, that no harm might come to them by this terrible apparition. They sat down at thy feet, like scholars, to receive instructions and counsels from thee. He alludes either, 1. To the manner of disciples among the Jews, who used to sit at their masters' feet, Luke x. 39; Acts xxii. 3. See also Gen. xlix. 10; 2 Kings iv. 38. But it is doubtful whether this custom was so ancient as Moses. Or, 2. To the place where the people waited when the law was delivered, which was at the foot of the mount. Shall receive of thy words; the people, easily understood from the foregoing words, did or will receive or submit to thy instructions and commands. This may respect either, 1. The people's promise when they heard the law, that they would hear and do all that was commanded, Deut. v. 27. Or, 2. The people's duty to do so. 3. The people's privilege, that they were admitted to receive so great a privilege as the words and laws of God were.

4 'Moses commanded us a law, ^keven ⁱ John 1, 17. the inheritance of the congregation of ^l 7, 19. ^m Ps. 119. ⁿ 111. Jacob.

Moses speaks this of himself in the third person, which is very usual in the Hebrew language. The law is called their inheritance, partly because the obligation of it was hereditary, passing from parents to their children, and partly because this was the best part of all their inheritance and possessions, the greatest of all those gifts and favours which God bestowed upon them.

5 And he was ^oking in ^pJeshurun, ^qSee Gen. 36, 31. Judg. 9, 2. & 17, 6. in ch. 32, 15. when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

Moses was their king, not in title, but in reality, being under God their supreme and uncontrollable governor and lawgiver: though the word oft signifies only a prince or chief ruler, as Judg. xix. 1; Jer. xix. 3; xlv. 25. In Jeshurun, i. e. in Israel, so called Deut. xxxii. 15. When the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together: when the princes and people met together for the management of public affairs, Moses was owned by them as their king and lawgiver, and he directed and ruled them as their superior. This he saith to show that the people approved and consented to the authority and law of Moses.

6 ¶ Let Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

Though Reuben deserve to be cut off, or greatly diminished and obscured, according to Jacob's prediction, Gen. xlix. 4; yet God will spare them, and give them a name and portion among the tribes of Israel, and bless them with increase of their numbers.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah : and he said, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people :

ⁿ Gen. 49. 8. "let his hands be sufficient for him; and ^o Ps. 146. 5. be thou ° an help to him from his enemies.

Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, i. e. God will hear his prayer for the accomplishment of those great things promised to that tribe, Gen. xlix. 8—11. This implies the delays and difficulties Judah would meet with herein, which would drive him to his prayers, and that those prayers should be crowned with success. Bring him unto his people; either, 1. When he shall go forth to battle against God's and his enemies, and shall fall fiercely upon them, as was foretold Gen. xlix. 8, 9, bring him back with honour, and victory, and safety to his people, i. e. either to the rest of his tribe, who were left at home when their brethren went to battle, or to his brethren the other tribes of Israel. Or, 2. When that tribe shall go into captivity, let them not always be kept in captivity, as the ten tribes are like to be, but do thou bring him again to his people. Or, 3. As thou hast promised the gathering of the people to him, even to the Shiloh, who was to come out of his loins, Gen. xlix. 10; so do thou bring him, i. e. the Messiah, who may be understood out of that parallel prophecy, and who may be here called Judah, because he was to come from him, as he is for that reason called David in divers places, to his people, i. e. to that people which thou hast given to him. Or, 4. Bring him in, to wit, as a prince and governor, as thou hast promised, Gen. xlix., to his people, i. e. to thy people of Israel, now to be reckoned as his people, because of their subjection to him. Or rather, 5. Bring him in to his people, to that people which thou hast promised and given to him, i. e. to that portion of land which thou hast allotted to him, settle him in his possession; the people or inhabitants being here put for the land inhabited by them, as the Israelites are told they should possess the nations or people of Canaan, Deut. xi. 23; xii. 2. i. e. their land, as it is explained, Deut. xvii. 14; xxx. 18; for the people they were not to possess, but to dispossess, and to root out. Let his hands be sufficient for him: this tribe shall be so numerous, and potent, and valiant, that it shall suffice to defend itself without any aid, either from foreign nations or from other tribes; as appeared when this tribe alone was able to grapple with nine or ten of the other tribes. Be thou an help to him from his enemies; thou wilt preserve this tribe in a special manner, so as his enemies shall not be able to ruin it, as they will do other tribes, and that for the sake of Messias, who shall spring out of it.

^p Ex. 28. 30. 8 ¶ And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, ° whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

They Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one; the Thummim and the Urim, which are thine, O Lord, by special institution and consecration; by which he understands the ephod, in which they were put, Exod. xxviii. 30, by a synecdoche, and the high priesthood, to which they were appropriated, by a metonymy; and withal the gifts and graces signified by the Urim and Thummim, and necessary for the discharge of that high office, shall be with thy holy one, i. e. with that Levite, that priest, which thou hast consecrated to thyself, and which is holy in a more peculiar manner than all the people were, i. e. the priesthood shall be confined to and continued in Aaron's family. Whom thou didst prove: this seems added by way of anticipation; although thou didst try him, and rebuke him, and shut him out of Canaan for his miscarriage about fetching water out of the rock, yet thou didst not therefore take away the priesthood from him. At Massah; not at that Massah mentioned Exod. xvii., which is also called Meribah, where neither Moses nor Aaron are reprov'd, nor is Aaron so much as named, but at that other Meribah, Numb. xx., where this is expressed, which as it is called by one of the names of that place, Exod. xvii., to wit, Meribah, Numb. xx., so it may be here called by its other name, Massah; and well may the same names be given to those two places, because the occasion of them was in a great measure one and the same. Though this place may be otherwise rendered, whom thou didst try in trying, or with trial, i. e. whom thou didst exactly and thoroughly try, such repetitions being very frequent and elegant in the Hebrew language. And it may be observed, that in the Hebrew text here are two several prepositions, though the English translation render them both by at, here beth, in or with, and in the next branch al, at, or near, or concerning the waters of Meribah; which may seem to intimate that the former is not the name of the place, as the latter is: why else should they not have been expressed by the same preposition? With whom thou didst strive, or, contend, i. e. whom thou didst reprove and chastise, as that phrase signifies, Isa. xlix. 25; Jer. ii. 9.

9 Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not seen him; neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children: for they have observed thy word, and kept thy covenant.

I have not seen him, i. e. I have no respect unto them, for so knowledge is oft used, as Job ix. 21; Prov. xii. 10, 11; 1 Thess. v. 12. The sense is, who followed God and his command fully, and executed the judgment enjoined by God without any respect of persons, Exod. xxxiii. 26, 27. This seems better than to refer it either to their not mourning for their next kindred, for that was allowed to all but the high priest in case of the death of father or mother, and that was only a ceremonial rite, and no matter of great commendation; or to their impartiality in executing the judgments committed to them, Deut. xvii. 9, of which they had as yet given no considerable proof. Kept thy covenant, i. e. when the rest broke their covenant with God by that foul sin of idolatry with the calf, that tribe kept themselves more pure from that infection, and adhered to God and his worship and service, as appears from Exod. xxxii. 26, 28. Compare Mal. ii. 6, 7.

10 ¶ They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law: they shall put incense † before thee, ° and whole burnt sacrifice upon thine altar.

They, i. e. the priests and Levites. Before thee, i. e. upon thine altar of incense, which stood before the ark, the place of God's special presence.

11 Bless, LORD, his substance, and accept the work of his hands: smite through the loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

His substance, i. e. his outward estate, as Deut. viii. 18, because he hath no inheritance of his own, and therefore wholly depends upon thy blessing. Or, his host or army, as the word is used Ezek. xxxvii. 10. The priests that attended upon God's service in the tabernacle or temple are oft compared to an host or army in regard of their exquisite order and courses and constant watches there. See Numb. iv. 3. The work of his hands, i. e. all his holy administrations, which he fitly calls the works of his hands; either more largely, the hand, one great instrument of action being put for all the rest; or because a great part of the service of the Levites and priests was done by the labour of their hand and body, whereas the service of evangelical ministers is more spiritual and heavenly. Smite through the loins of them that rise against him: he prays thus earnestly for them, partly because he foresaw they who were to teach, and admonish, and reprove, and chastise others would have many enemies, Jer. xv. 10; Amos v. 10; and partly because they were, under God, the great preservers and upholders of religion, and their enemies were the enemies of religion itself, as is evident from the history of the Old Testament.

12 ¶ And of Benjamin he said, The beloved of the LORD shall dwell in safety by him; and the LORD shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders.

^r Gen. 29. 32. 1 Chr. 17. 17. Job 37. 24. s. Ex. 32. 26. 27, 28. 1 Sam. Jer. 18. 18. Mal. 2. 5, 6.

¶ Or, let them put incense. † Lev. 1. 9, 13, 17. Ps. 51. 19. Ezek. 43. 27.

z 2 Sam. 24. 23. 1's. 20. 3. Ezek. 20. 40, 41. & 43. 27.

The beloved of the Lord, i. e. this beloved tribe: so called partly in allusion to their father Benjamin, who was the beloved of his father Jacob; and partly because of the love and kindness of God towards this tribe, which appeared both in this, that they dwell in the fattest and best part of the land, as Joseph affirms, and especially in the following privilege. Shall dwell in safety by him, i. e. shall have his lot nigh unto God's temple, which was both a singular comfort and safeguard to him. The Lord may well be understood here, because he was expressed in the former member. Shall cover him all the day long; shall protect that tribe continually while they cleave to him. He shall dwell between his shoulders; the Lord shall dwell, i. e. his temple shall be placed, between his shoulders, i. e. in his portion, or between his borders, or sides, as the word shoulder is oft used, as Exod. xxviii. 7; Numb. xxxiv. 11; Josh. xv. 8, 10; Ezek. xlvi. 1, 2. And this was truly the situation of the temple, on both sides whereof was Benjamin's portion; and though Mount Sion was in the tribe of Judah, yet Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built, was in the tribe of Benjamin.

^a Gen. 49. 25. 13 ¶ And of Joseph he said, ^a Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for ^b the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

His portion shall be excellent, and endowed with choice blessings from God, as it here follows. For the precious things of heaven, i. e. the precious fruits of the earth brought forth by the influences of heaven, the warmth of the sun, and the rain which God will send from heaven. For the deep that coucheth beneath; the springs of water bubbling out of the earth.

14 And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things † put forth by the † moon,

By the sun, which opens and warms the earth, cherisheth and improveth, and in due time ripeneth the seeds and fruits of the earth. By the moon, which by its moisture refreshes and promotes them. Heb. of the moons, or months, i. e. which it bringeth forth in the several months or seasons of the year.

^c Gen. 49. 26. 15 And for the chief things of ^c the ancient mountains, and for the precious things ^d of the lasting hills,

i. e. The excellent fruits, as grapes, olives, figs, &c., which delight in mountains, growing upon, or the precious minerals contained in, their mountains and hills, called ancient and lasting, i. e. such as have been from the beginning of the world, and likely to continue to the end of it, in opposition to those hills or mounts which have been cast up by the wit of man.

16 And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of ^e him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing ^f come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

For the precious things of the earth; and in general for all the choice fruits which the land produceth in all the parts of it, whether hills or valleys. Fulness thereof, i. e. the plants and cattle, and all creatures that grow, increase, and flourish in it. For the good will of him that dwelt in the bush; for all other effects of the good will and kindness of God, who not long since did for a time dwell or appear in the bush to me in order to the relief of his people, Exod. iii. 2. Of Joseph, i. e. of Joseph's posterity.

^g 1 Chr. 5. 1. 17 His glory is like the ^h firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like ⁱ the horns of † unicorns: with them ^j he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and ^k they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.

The firstling of his bullock; in whose countenance there is a kind of awful majesty and comely generosity, as Tully, Ælian, &c. observe. This seems to note the kingdom which Ephraim should obtain in Jeroboam and his successors. His horns are like the horns of unicorns; his strength and power shall be very great. He shall push the people, i. e. all that shall oppose him, and particularly the Canaanites. To the ends of the earth, i. e. of the land of Canaan. They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh; though Manasseh be now more numerous, yet Ephraim shall shortly outstrip him, as was foretold, Gen. xlviii. 19.

18 ¶ And of Zebulun he said, ^l Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out; and, Issachar, in thy tents.

Thou shalt prosper, and have cause of rejoicing. In thy going out; either, 1. To war, as this phrase is oft used, as Gen. xiv. 17, which was in part verified, Judg. v. 18. Or, 2. To sea, in way of traffic, because their portion lay near the sea. Or both may be joined; and in both respects his course is opposite to that of Issachar, who was a lover of peace and pasturage. See Gen. xlix. 14, 15. Issachar is here joined with Zebulun, both because they were brethren by father and mother too, and because their possessions lay near together. In thy tents, i. e. thou shalt give thyself to the management of land and cattle, living quietly in thy own possessions, disliking the troubles of war and of merchandise. So the phrase is used Gen. xxv. 27; Josh. xxii. 4; Judg. v. 24; vii. 8.

19 They shall ^m call the people unto ⁿ the mountain; there ^o they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness: for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand.

They; either, 1. Zebulun and Issachar. Or rather, 2. Zebulun only, as the following matter shows; and it was Zebulun that Moses takes more special notice of, ver. 18, bringing in Issachar only by the by, in conjunction with him, or in opposition to him. And so having despatched Issachar in two words, he returns to Zebulun, a more active tribe. The people, i. e. the Gentiles; either those of Galilee, which was called Galilee of the Gentiles, who were their neighbours; or people of other nations, with whom they had commerce, which they endeavoured to improve in persuading them to the true God, and his worship and service. Unto the mountain, i. e. to the temple, which Moses knew was to be seated upon a mountain. Sacrifices of righteousness, i. e. such as God requires and righteousness obligeth them to offer. Their trafficking abroad with heathen nations shall not make them forget or neglect their duty at home, nor shall their distance from the place of sacrifice hinder them from coming to it to discharge that duty. They shall suck of the abundance of the seas; they shall grow rich by the traffic of the sea; and their riches shall not make them the worse, as they do others, but they shall consecrate themselves and their riches to the service of God. Treasures hid in the sand; such precious things as either, 1. Are contained in the sand of the sea and rivers, in which sometimes there is mixed a considerable quantity of gold and silver. Or, 2. Such as grow in the sea, or are fetched from the sandy bottom of it, as pearls, coral, ambergris, &c. Or, 3. Such as being cast into the sea by shipwreck are cast upon the shore by the workings of the sea, and thence taken either by merchants, or by the people that live upon the sea-coast.

20 ¶ And of Gad he said, Blessed be he that ^o enlargeth Gad: he dwelleth as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.

By praising God for enlarging Gad he supposeth the ground of these praises, that God would enlarge Gad, i. e. either, 1. Enlarge his territories; which seems needless, because they had a very large portion now when Moses uttered these words. Or, 2. Bring him out of his straits and troubles, which he was likely to be oft engaged in, because he was encompassed with potent enemies. And in this sense the phrase is used Psal. iv. 1: compare Psal. xxxi. 8; cxviii. 5. One instance of the fulfilling hereof we have Judg. xi. He dwelleth as a lion, i. e. safe and secure from his enemies, and terrible to them when they rouse and 21 And ^p he provided the first part for himself, because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he † seated; and ^h he came with the heads of the people, he executed the justice of the LORD, and his judgments with Israel.

The first part; the first-fruits of the Land of Promise, the country of Sihon, which was first conquered, which he is said to provide for himself, because he desired and so obtained it of Moses, Numb. xxxiii. A portion of the lawgiver, i. e. of Moses, whose portion this is called, either because this part of the land beyond Jordan was the only part of the land which Moses was permitted to enter upon; or because it was given to him by Moses; whereas the portions beyond Jordan were given to the several tribes by Joshua, according to the direction of the lot. Was he seated, Heb. hid or protected; for their wives and children were secured in their cities, whilst many of their men went over to the war in Canaan. He came with the heads of the people, i. e. he went, or he will go, (the preter tense being put for the future, after the manner of the prophets,) to wit, to the war in Canaan, with the princes, or captains, or rulers of the people of Israel, i. e. under their command and conduct, as indeed they did; or with the first of the people; or, in the front of the people, as the Syriac renders it; for this tribe and their brethren, whose lot fell beyond Jordan, were to march, and did march, into Canaan before their brethren, as it is expressed, Josh. i. 14. And the Hebrew word rosch oft signifies the beginning or first of a thing. He executed the justice of the Lord, and his judgments with Israel, i. e. he did or will execute the just judgment of God against the Canaanites, as the rest of the Israelites did; he will join in the war against them, as he promised to do, Numb. xxxii. 27, &c., and actually did, Josh. i. 14.

22 ¶ And of Dan he said, Dan is a lion's whelp: ^h he shall leap from Bashan.

Lion's whelp, i. e. courageous, and generous, and strong, and successful against his enemies. He shall leap from Bashan, or, which leapeth from Bashan; for this clause seems not to belong to the tribe of Dan, which was at a great distance from Bashan, even at the other end of the land, and therefore this seems too great a leap for him; and if he did leap so far, he should rather be said to take his leap from his own lot in the south of Canaan, and thence to leap not from Bashan, but to Bashan, to fall upon his enemies there: but it rather is a continuation of the metaphor, and belongs to the lion, which is said to leap from Bashan, because there were many and fierce lions in those parts; see Judg. xiv. 5; whence they used to come forth to prey, and their manner was to leap upon the prey.

23 ¶ And of Naphtali he said, O Naphtali, ^s satisfied with favour, and full with the blessing of the LORD: ^t possess thou the west and the south.

With favour; either, 1. With God's favour, as it follows; or, 2. With men's favour or good-will, his carriage being peaceable, courteous, and obliging, as is intimated, Gen. xlix. 21, according to the common translation: see the notes there. Full with the blessing of the Lord, i. e. seated in a pleasant, and fertile, and happy soil; such as Galilee (in which their share lay) eminently was, as Josephus and others report. The west and the south, or, the sea and the south. This is not to be understood of the places, that his lot should fall there, for he was rather in the east and north of the land; but of the pleasures and commodities of the west, or of the sea, which were conveyed to him from his neighbour Zebulun; and of the south, i. e. from the southern tribes and parts of Canaan, which were brought to him down the river Jordan, and both sorts of commodities were given him in exchange for the fruits of his rich soil, which he had in great abundance.

24 ¶ And of Asher he said, ^u Let Asher be blessed with children; let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him ^x dip his foot in oil. u Gen. 49. 20. x See Job 29. 6.

He shall have numerous, and those strong, and healthful, and comely, children. Or, shall be blessed or praised of or above the sons, i. e. the other sons of Israel, or his brethren, as it here follows, i. e. his portion shall fall in an excellent part, where he may have the benefits both of his own fat soil, and of the sea, by his neighbours Tyrus and Sidon. Acceptable to his brethren; by his sweet disposition and winning carriage, and communication of his excellent commodities to his brethren, he shall gain their affections. Let him dip his foot in oil; he shall have such plenty of oil, that he may not only wash his face, but his feet also, in it. Or, the fatness and fertility of his country may be expressed by oil, as Job xxix. 6. And so it agrees with Jacob's blessing of him, Gen. xlix. 20.

25 ¶ Thy shoes shall be ^y iron and brass; and as thy days, ^z so shall thy strength be. y Or, Under thy shoes shall be iron. y ch. 8. 9.

Thy shoes shall be iron and brass: this may note either, 1. Their great strength, by which they should be able to tread down and crush their enemies, as Christ's feet for this very reason are said to be of brass, Rev. i. 15. Or, 2. The mines of iron and copper, which were in their portion, whence Sidon their neighbour was famous among the heathens for its plenty of brass and iron, and Sarepta is thought to have its name from the brass and iron, which were melted there in great quantity. Compare Deut. viii. 9. Or, 3. The strength of its situation; and so some ancients and moderns render the words, thy habitation or thy enclosure shall be iron and brass, i. e. fortified as it were with walls and gates of iron and brass, being defended by the sea on one side, by their brethren on other sides, as also by mountains and rivers. So shall thy strength be, i. e. thy strength shall not be diminished with thine age, but thou shalt have the vigour of youth even in thine old age; thy tribe shall grow stronger and stronger.

Upon the heaven, i. e. upon the clouds, to succour thee from thence, by sending thunder and lightning upon thine enemies. See Psal. xviii. 7, &c.; lxviii. 34, &c. In his excellency, or, in his magnificence, i. e. magnificently, gloriously, and with great majesty as well as power.

27 The eternal God is ^e thy refuge, and underneath ^f are the everlasting arms: and ^g he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee; and shall say, Destroy them. e Ps. 90. 1. f ch. 9. 3, 4. g 5.

Thy refuge, or, thy dwelling-place. Compare Psal. xcii. 1. Underneath, i. e. under thy arms to hold thee up, as my hands were once held up by Aaron and Hur. He will support and defend thee. Or the meaning is, Though he dwelleth on high, yet he comes down to the earth beneath to assist and deliver thee. Shall say, Destroy them, i. e. shall give thee not only command and commission, but also power, to destroy them; for God's saying is doing, his word comes with power.

28 ^h Israel then shall dwell in safety alone: ⁱ the fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine; also his ^j heavens shall drop down dew. h Num. 23. 9. Jer. 23. 6. & 33. 16. i ch. 8. 7, 8. j Gen. 27. 28. ch. 11. 11.

Alone; either, 1. Though they be alone, and have no confederates to defend them, but have all the world against them, yet my single protection shall be sufficient for them. Or, 2. Distinct and separated from all other nations, with whom I will not have them to mingle themselves. See Numb. xxiii. 9; Ezra ix. 1, 2. The fountain of Jacob, i. e. the posterity of Jacob, which flowed from him as waters from a fountain, in great abundance. Compare Psal. lxviii. 26; Isa. xlvi. 1. The fountain is here put for the river or streams which flow from it, as Psal. civ. 10; as the root is put for the branch, 2 Chron. xxii. 10; Isa. xi. 10; Rev. v. 5; and as Jacob or Israel, who is the fountain, is oft put for the children of Israel. Or, the eye (for so the Hebrew word of signifies) of Jacob, i. e. of the people of Israel; and so the sense is, They who now only hear of the land of promise shall shortly see it, which I am not suffered to do, and shall enjoy it, which is oft signified by seeing, as Psal. iv. 6; xxvii. 13; xxxiv. 12; Eccles. ii. 1; iii. 13. His heavens, i. e. those heavens or that air which hangs over his land.

29 ^h Happy art thou, O Israel: 'who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, ^k unto the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies ^l shall be found liars unto thee; and ^m thou shalt tread upon their high places.

Saved by the Lord, the giver and preserver of all that excellency, that glory, safety, and happiness, which thou hast above all other people, which thou dost not obtain either by or for thy own wisdom, or strength, or goodness. The sword of thy excellency, or, thy most excellent sword, i. e. thy strength and the author of all thy past or approaching victories. Shall be found liars unto thee, i. e. shall be deceived, as to all their vain hopes and confidences of destroying thee or saving themselves, whether grounded upon their own numbers, and valour, and strong holds, or upon old prophecies and predictions of success, or upon their idols. Or, shall lie unto thee, i. e. shall submit themselves to thee, though it be done but feignedly and by constraint, as this phrase is used, Psal. xviii. 44; lxxvi. 3; lxxxii. 15. Possibly this may design the lies and frauds which the Gibeonites would use to deceive thee, Josh. ix. 4. Thou shalt tread upon their high places, i. e. thou shalt subdue their greatest princes, and their strongest holds, Deut. xxxii. 13, and their idols, temples, and worship.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Moses from Mount Nebo vieweth the land, 1—4. He dieth there, 5. His burial, 6. His age, 7. Thirty days' mourning for him, 8. Joshua succeedeth him, 9. The praises of Moses, 10—12.

AND Moses went up from the plains of Moab ^a unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of ^b Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the Lord ^c shewed him all the land of Gilead, ^d unto Dan, Moses went up, in compliance with God's will, that he should then and there resign up his soul to God. Of the mountain of Nebo, see Numb. xxvii. 12; xxxii. 38; Deut. xxxii. 49. Of the land of Gilead Moses had as yet seen and enjoyed but a small part. Of this land, see Gen. xxxi. 21; Numb. xxxii. 1, 19, &c. Unto Dan; to that city which after Moses's death was called Dan, Josh. xix. 47; Judg. xviii. 29. So that here is an anticipation. But it seems most probable, and is commonly believed, that this chapter was not written by Moses, but by Eleazar, or Joshua, or Ezra, or some other man of God, directed herein by the Holy Ghost; this being no more impeachment to the Divine authority of this chapter, that the penman is unknown, which also is the lot of some other books of Scripture, than it is to the authority of the acts of the king or parliament, that they are written or printed by some unknown person.

2 And all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, ^e unto the utmost sea,

All Naphtali, i. e. the land of Naphtali, which, together with Dan, was in the north of Canaan, as Ephraim and Manasseh were in the midland parts, and Judah on the south, and the sea on the west. So these parts lying in the several quarters are put for all the rest. He stood in the east, and saw also Gilead, which was in the eastern part of the land, and thence he saw the north, and south, and west. The utmost sea, i. e. the midland sea, which was the utmost bound of the Land of Promise on the west.

3 And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, ^f the city of palm trees, unto Zoar.

i. e. The south quarter of the land of Judah, which is towards the Salt Sea, which is described Numb. xxxiv. 3—5; Josh. xv. 1—4, as the western quarter of Judah was described in the words next foregoing. The plain of the valley of Jericho; or, in which lies Jericho; which was in the tribe of Benjamin. The city of palm trees, i. e. Jericho, so called both here and Judg. i. 16; iii. 13; 2 Chron. xxviii. 15, from the multitude of palm trees which were in those parts, as Josephus and Strabo write; from whence and the balm there growing it was called Jericho, which signifies odoriferous, or sweet-smelling.

4 And the Lord said unto him, 'This is the land which I swore unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed: ^g I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither.

With thine eyes, to wit, by a miraculous power strengthening thy sight, or making a clear representation of all these parts to thy view.

5 ¶ ^h So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord.

i. e. In the land which Israel took from the Amorites, which anciently was the land of Moab.

6 And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor: but ⁱ no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

He, i. e. the Lord, last mentioned, buried him either immediately, or by the ministry of angels, whereof Michael was the chief or prince, Jude 9. No man knoweth of his sepulchre, i. e. of the particular place of the valley where he was buried; which God hid from the Israelites, to prevent their superstition and idolatry, to which he knew their great proneness. And for this very reason the devil endeavoured to have it known, and contended with Michael about it, Jude 9. And seeing God would not endure the worship of the relics or tomb of so eminent a person as Moses was, it is ridiculous to think God would permit this honour to be given to any of the succeeding saints, who were so far inferior to him.

7 ¶ ^k And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died: ^l his eye was not dim, nor his ^m natural force ⁿ abated.

By a miraculous work of God in mercy to his church and people.

8 ¶ And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab ^o thirty days: so the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.

Thirty days was the usual time of mourning for persons of high place and eminency. See Gen. l. 3, 10; Numb. xx. 29. For others seven days sufficed.

9 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the ^p spirit of wisdom; for ^q Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses.

The spirit of wisdom; and other gifts and graces too, as appears from the history; but wisdom is mentioned as being most necessary for the government, to which he was now called. Moses had laid his hands upon him; which God had appointed as a sign to Moses, and Joshua, and the Israelites, that this was the person whom he had appointed and qualified for his great work. See Numb. xxvii. 18, &c. Compare Gen. xlviii. 10; Numb. viii. 10.

10 ¶ And there ^r arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, ^s whom the Lord knew face to face,

Like unto Moses, in the privileges here following. Whom the Lord knew face to face, i. e. whom God did 11 In all the signs and the wonders, which the LORD sent him to do in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all his servants, and to all his land,

In all the signs: this is to be joined, either, 1. With the words immediately foregoing, as an eminent instance wherein God did know or acknowledge and own or converse so familiarly with Moses, namely, in the working of all his signs and wonders in Egypt, where God spake to him so oft, and sometimes even in Pharaoh's presence, and answered his requests so particularly and punctually, whether he called for vengeance or for deliverance. Or, 2 With the more remote words, there was none like unto Moses in regard of all the signs, &c., the words, whom the Lord knew face to face, coming in by way of parenthesis.

12 And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses shewed in the sight of all Israel.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

THE ARGUMENT.

It is not material to know who was the penman of this book, whether Joshua, as seems most probable from chap. xxiv. 26, or some other holy prophet. It is sufficient that this book was a part of the Holy Scriptures, or oracles of God, committed to and carefully kept by the Jews, and by them faithfully delivered to us, as appears by the concurring testimony of Christ and his apostles, who owned and approved of the same Holy Scriptures which the church of the Jews did. But this is certain, that divers passages in this book were put into it after Joshua's death, as Josh. x. 13, compared with 2 Sam. i. 18; and Josh. xix. 47, compared with Judg. xviii. 1; and Josh. xxiv. 29, 30. And such like insertions have been observed in the five books of Moses.

CHAP. I.

God commands Joshua to lead the people unto the land of Canaan, 1—3. Its borders, 4. God promises to assist him, 5, 6; commanding him to observe the law, 7—9. He prepares the people to pass over Jordan, 10, 11. Reminds the Reubenites, Gadites, and half tribe of Manasseh of their promise to Moses, 12—15; which they are ready to do, and all promise to obey, 16—18.

B. C. 1451. NOW after the death of Moses the servant of the LORD it came to pass, that the LORD spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying, a Ex. 24. 13.

Deut. 1. 38.

After the death of Moses; either immediately after it, or when the days of mourning for Moses were expired. Joshua was appointed and declared Moses's successor in the government before this time, and therefore doubtless entered upon the government instantly after his death; and here he receives confirmation from God therein. The servant of the Lord: this title is given to Moses here and ver. 2, as also Deut. xxxiv. 5, and is oft repeated, not without cause; partly, to reflect honour upon him; partly, to give authority to his laws and writings, in publishing whereof he only acted as God's servant, in his name and stead; and partly, that the Israelites might not think of Moses above what was meet, remembering that he was not the Lord himself, but only the Lord's servant; and therefore not to be worshipped, nor yet to be too pertinaciously followed in all his institutions, when the Lord himself should come and abolish part of the Mosaical dispensation; it being but reasonable that he who was only a servant in God's house, should give place to him who was the Son, and Heir, and Lord of it, as Christ was. See Heb. iii. 3, 5, 6. The Lord spake; either in a dream or vision, or by Urim, Numb. xxvii. 21. Moses's minister, i. e. who had waited upon Moses in his great employments, and thereby been privy to his managery of the government, and so fitted and prepared for it.

b Deu. 34. 5.

2^b Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

This Jordan; this which is now near thee, which is the only obstacle in thy way to Canaan. Which I do give, i. e. am now about to give the actual possession of it, as I formerly gave a right to it by promise.

3^c Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

c Deu. 11. 24.
ch. 14. 9.

Every place, to wit, within the following bounds.

4^d From the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

This Lebanon; this emphatically, as being the most eminent mountain in Syria, and the northern border of the land: or this which is within my view; as if the Lord appeared to him in the form of a man, and pointed to it. Of the Hittites, i. e. of the Canaanites, who elsewhere are all called Amorites, as Gen. xv. 16, and here Hittites, by a synecdoche; the Hittites being the most considerable and formidable of all, as may appear from Numb. xiii. 33; xiv. 1; 2 Kings vii. 6; and many of them being of the race of the giants, dwelling about Hebron. See Gen. xxv. 9, 10; xxvi. 34; xxvii. 46. The great sea; the midland sea, great in itself, and especially compared with those lesser collections of waters, which the Jews called seas.

Object. The Israelites never possessed all this land. Answ. 1. That was from their own sloth and cowardice, and disobedience to God, and breach of those conditions upon which this promise was suspended. See Judg. ii. 20. 2. This land was not all to be possessed by them at once, but by degrees, as their numbers and necessities increased; but Canaan being fully sufficient for them, and many of the Israelites being from time to time either cut off or carried captive for their sins, there was never any need of enlarging their possessions. 3. Though their possessions extended not to Euphrates, yet their dominion did, and all those lands were tributary to them in David's and Solomon's time.

As I was with Moses, to assist him against all his enemies, and in all the difficulties of governing this stiff-necked people, which Joshua might justly fear no less than the Canaanites. I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee; I will not leave thee destitute either of inward support, or of outward assistance.

i Deut. 31. 7. 23. ^{||} Or, thou shalt cause this people to inherit the land, &c. 6 ⁱ Be strong and of a good courage: for ^{||} unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I swear unto their fathers to give them.

Joshua, though a person of great courage and resolution, whereof he had given sufficient proof, yet needs these exhortations, partly because his work was great, and difficult, and long, and in a great measure new; partly because he had a very mean opinion of himself, especially if compared with Moses; and remembering how perverse and ungovernable that people were, even under Moses, he might very well suspect the burden of ruling them would be too heavy for his shoulders. Thou shalt divide the land; which supposeth the full conquest of the land. That honour and assistance which I denied to Moses I will give to thee.

7 Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, ^k which Moses my servant commanded thee: ^l turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest ^{||} prosper whithersoever thou goest.

Remember that though thou art the captain and commander of my people, yet thou art my subject, and obliged to observe all my commands. To the right hand or to the left, i. e. in any kind, or upon any pretence. That thou mayest prosper, or, that thou mayest do wisely; whereby he instructs him in the true art of government; and that his greatest wisdom will lie in the observation of all God's commands, and not in that pretended reason of state which other princes govern all their affairs by. And this plainly shows that God's assistance promised to him and to the Israelites was conditional, and might justly be withdrawn upon their breach of the conditions. Whithersoever thou goest, i. e. whatsoever thou doest. Men's actions are oft compared to ways, or journeys, or steps, by which they come to the end they aim at.

m Deut. 17. 18, 19. n Ps. 1. 2. 8 ^m This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but ⁿ thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt ^{||} have good success.

Shall not depart out of thy mouth, i. e. thou shalt constantly read it, and upon occasion discourse of it, and the sentence which shall come out of thy mouth shall in all things be given according to this rule. Meditate therein, i. e. diligently study, and frequently and upon all occasions consider what is God's will and thy duty. The greatness of thy place and employments shall not hinder thee from this work, because this is the only rule of all thy private actions and public administrations. According to all that is written therein; whereby he teacheth him that it is his duty to see with his own eyes, and to understand the mind and law of God himself, and not blindly to follow what any other should advise him to.

o Deut. 31. 7, 8, 23. p Ps. 27. 1. Jer. 1. 8. 9 ^o Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; ^p be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

Have not I commanded thee; I whom thou art obliged to obey; I who can carry thee through every thing I put thee upon; I of whose faithfulness and almightiness thou hast had large experience?

10 ^q Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

11 Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals; for ^q within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which the LORD your God giveth you to possess it.

Prepare you victuals; for although manna was given them to supply their want of ordinary provisions in the wilderness; yet they were allowed, when they had opportunity, to purchase other provisions, and did so, Deut. ii. 6, 28. And now having been some time in the land of the Amorites, and together with manna used themselves to other food which that country plentifully supplied them with, they are warned to furnish themselves therewith for their approaching march. Within three days. Quest. How can this be, when the spies, who were not yet sent away, continued three days hid in the mountains, Josh. ii. 22, and the people passed not over till three days after the spies returned? Josh. iii. 2. Ans. These words, though placed here, seem not to have been delivered by Joshua till after the return of the spies; such transpositions being so frequent in Scripture, that interpreters have formed this general rule, that there is no certain order, no former nor latter, in the histories of the Scripture. And hence it comes that these three days mentioned here below, after the history of the spies, are again repeated, Josh. iii. 2. Besides, the Septuagint render the words yet three days; and the Chaldee, in the end of three days; others, after three days, as it is Josh. iii. 2. Or these three days may be the same with those Josh. ii. 22, and the matter may be conceived thus: Joshua gives the people notice of their passage over Jordan within three days here, and at the same time sends away the spies, who return ere those three days be ended. For the three days, Josh. ii. 22, may be understood of one whole day, and part of two other days, as it is in that famous instance, Matt. xxvii. 63, of which see more on that place, and on Matt. xii. 40. The spies came to Jericho in the evening of the first day, and intended to lie there, Josh. ii. 8; but being disturbed and affrighted by the search made after them, they go away that night into the mountains, and there abide the time mentioned. Joshua having delivered this message from God to the Israelites, and sent away the spies, removes from Shittim to Jordan, Josh. iii. 1, being sufficiently assured of his safe passage over Jordan, whatsoever became of the spies; and after those three days mentioned here were past, Josh. iii. 2, he sends the officers to the people with a second message about the manner of their actual passing over.

12 ^q And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying, 13 Remember ^r the word which Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

Remember his charge to you, and your promise to him, which they were obliged to keep; and Joshua was to see that they did so. Rest, i. e. a place of rest, as that word signifies: see on Gen. xlix. 15.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan; but ye shall pass before your brethren [†] armed, all the mighty men of valour, and help them;

Ye shall pass, to wit, over Jordan. Before your brethren; either, 1. In their presence. Or, 2. In the front of all of them; which was but reasonable; partly, because they had the advantage of their brethren, having actually received their portion, which their brethren had only in hope, and therefore were obliged to more service, the rather to prevent the envy of the other tribes; partly, because they were freed from those impediments which the rest were exposed to, their wives, and children, and estates being safely lodged; and partly, to prevent their retreat and withdrawing themselves from the present service, which they otherwise should have had opportunity and temptation to do, because of the nearness of their habitations. Armed; for by this time they were well furnished with arms, which they had either from the Egyptians, or Amalekites, or Amorites, from whom they had taken them; or by purchase from those people by whose borders they passed. Or, in military order. See on Exod. xiii. 18. The mighty men of valour; all such were obliged to go over if occasion required it, but Joshua took only some of them, partly because they were sufficient for his purpose, and partly because some were fit to be left, both to secure their own wives, children, and possessions, and to prevent their enemies on that side from giving them disturbance or hinderance in their enterprise upon Canaan.

15 Until the LORD have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which the LORD your God giveth them: * then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses the LORD's servant gave you on this side Jordan toward the sunrising.

16 ¶ And they answered Joshua, saying, All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go.

They answered, i. e. the Reubenites, &c., mentioned ver. 12, to whom Joshua's discourse is confined, ver. 13—15. No doubt the other tribes expressed the same thing; but this is only recorded concerning these, because that might seem most doubtful, and the obedience of the rest was unquestionable.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: only the LORD thy God * be with thee, as he was with Moses.

The same obedience which we owed, and those of us who are now alive generally performed, to Moses, we promise unto thee. Only the Lord thy God be with thee: this is not a limitation of their obedience, as if they would not obey him any further or longer than he was prosperous or successful; but an additional prayer for him. As we have hereby promised thee our obedience, so our prayer shall be, that God would bless and prosper thee, as he did Moses.

18 Whosoever he be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only be strong and of a good courage.

In all that thou commandest him, not repugnant to God's commands; for none can be so foolish to think, that if he had commanded the people to blaspheme God, or worship idols, the people were obliged to obey him therein.

CHAP. II.

Joshua sends two spies to Jericho; they are sought after; Rahab hides them; deceives the messengers, 1—7. She acknowledges that God had given them the land; her reasons, 8—11. The covenant between her and them, 12—21. Their return and relation, 22—24.

¶ Or, And sent. a Num. 23. 1.

c Matt. 1. 5.
† Heb. lay.
AND Joshua the son of Nun ¶ sent * out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and ^b came into an harlot's house, named * Rahab, and † lodged there.

Sent; or, had sent, as that tense is oft used. See on Josh. i. 11. Shittim; called also Abel-shittim, Numb. xxxiii. 49. Two men; not twelve, as Moses did, partly because the people of Canaan were now more alarmed than in Moses's time, and more suspicious of all strangers; and partly because those were to view the whole land, these but a small parcel of it. To spy, i. e. to learn the state of the land and people, and what way and method they should proceed in. It is evident enough that Joshua did not this out of distrust, as the people did, Deut. i.; and it is most probable he had God's command and direction in it, for the encouragement of himself and his army in their present enterprise. Secretly; with reference not to his enemies, which being the constant and necessary practice of all spies, was needless to be mentioned; but to the Israelites, without their knowledge or desire. And this seems added by way of opposition unto the like action, Deut. i., where it was done with the people's privity, and upon their motion; and therefore an account was given, not only to Moses, but also to the congregation; whereas here it was given to Joshua only, ver. 23, which was a good caution to prevent the inconvenience which possibly might have arisen, if their report had been doubtful or discouraging. The land, even Jericho, i. e. the land about Jericho, together with the city. Heb. the land and Jericho, i. e. especially Jericho. So and is used 2 Sam. ii. 30; 1 Kings xi. 1; Psal. xviii. 1. They obeyed Joshua's command, even with the hazard of their own lives, considering that they were under the protection of Divine Providence, which could very easily many ways secure them; or being willing to sacrifice their lives in their country's service. An harlot's house; so the Hebrew word is used, Judg. xi. 1; xvi. 1; 1 Kings iii. 16; Ezek. xxxiii. 44, and so it is rendered by two apostles, Heb. xi. 31; James ii. 25; such she either now was, or formerly had been; and such a person's house they might come to with less observation than to an hostess, as some render it, or to a public victualling-house. And such a course of life was very common among the Gentiles, who esteemed fornication to be either no sin, or a very small and trivial one. Lodged there, or, lay down, as the same word is rendered, ver. 8, intended and composed themselves to rest; but they were disturbed and hindered from their intentions upon the following discovery.

2 And * it was told the king of Jericho, ^{d Ps. 127. 1.} Behold, there came men in hither ^{Prov. 21. 30.} to night of the children of Israel to search out the country.

To-night; this evening, by comparing this with ver. 5.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 * And the woman took the two men, ^{e See 2 Sam. 17. 19, 20.} and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but I wist not whence they were:

Or, But the woman had taken—and had hid them, to wit, before the messengers came from the king; as soon as she understood from her neighbours, or common rumour, that there was a suspicion of the matter, and guessed that search would be made. And this is justly mentioned as a great and generous act of faith, Heb. xi. 31, for she did apparently venture her life upon a steadfast persuasion of the truth of God's word and promise given to the Israelites. I wist not whence they were: her answer, contained in these and the following words, was palpably false, and therefore unquestionably sinful; howsoever, her intention was good therein: see Rom. iii. 8. But it is very probable, she being a heathen, might think, what some Christians have thought and said, that an officious lie is not unlawful. Or, at worst, this was her infirmity, which was graciously pardoned by God, and her faith was amply rewarded.

5 And it came to pass about the time of shutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went I wot not: pursue after them quickly; for ye shall overtake them.

The time of shutting of the gate; either of her house, or rather of the city, which was shut at a certain time.

6 But * she had brought them up to the ^{f See Ex. 1. 17. 2 Sam. 17. 19.} roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

Up to the roof, which was plain, after the manner. See Deut. xxii. 8; Matt. x. 27; Mark ii. 4; Acts x. 9. Laid in order upon the roof, that they may be dried by the heat of the sun.

7 And the men pursued after them the way to Jordan unto the fords: and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they shut the gate.

Fords, or passages, i. e. the usual places where people used to pass over Jordan, whether by boats or bridges; or rather, because of the shallowness of the river, which a little after this swelled higher, as the history will tell us, and as it is very usual for rivers to do. They shut the gate of the city, partly for their security against their approaching enemies; and partly to prevent the escape of the spies, if peradventure Rahab was mistaken, and they yet lurked in the city.

8 ¶ And before they were laid down, she came up unto them upon the roof;

Before they were laid down to rest or sleep, as they intended, being now, after the departure of their searchers, come from their hiding-place to their resting-place.

9 And she said unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land † faint because of you.

Quest. How could they understand one the other? Ans. 1. The Hebrew and the Canaan or Phœnician languages have a very great resemblance, and are thought to be but differing dialects of one and the same tongue, as the learned prove by a multitude of words, which are common to both of them. Or, 2. Some of the Hebrews had either out of curiosity, or by Joshua's order and direction, learnt that language for this or other such like occasions. Your terror, i. e. the dread of you. See Exod. xxiii. 27; xxxiv. 24; Deut. xi. 25; xxviii. 7.

10 For we have heard how the LORD † dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and † what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had † heard these things, † our hearts did melt, neither † did there remain any more courage in any man, because of you: for † the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.

Did melt, i. e. were dissolved, lost all consistency and courage. This phrase is oft used, as Deut. i. 28; xx. 8; Josh. v. 1; vii. 5. He is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath; he can do whatsoever he pleaseth in heaven and earth; whereas our gods are enclosed in heaven, and can do nothing to us upon earth.

12 Now therefore, I pray you, † swear unto me by the LORD, since I have shewed you kindness, that ye will also shew kindness unto † my father's house, and † give me a true token:

By the Lord; by your God, who is the only true God: so she shows her conversion to God, and owns his worship, one eminent act whereof is swearing by his name. My father's house; my near kindred, which she particularly names, ver. 13. Husband and children it seems she had none. And for herself, it was needless to speak, it being a plain and undeniable duty to save their preserver. A true token; either an assurance that you will preserve me and mine from the common ruin; or a token which I may produce as a witness of this agreement, and a mean of my security.

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

All that they have, i. e. their children, as appears from Josh. vi. 23.

14 And the men answered her, Our life † for your's, if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the LORD hath given us the land, that † we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

Our life for yours; we pawn and will venture our lives for the security of yours. Or, may we perish, if you be not preserved. This our business, i. e. this agreement of ours, and the way and condition of it, lest others under this pretence secure themselves. By which they show both their piety and prudence in managing their oath with so much circumspection and caution, that neither their own consciences might be insnared, nor the public justice obstructed.

15 Then she † let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.

Which gave her the opportunity of dismissing them when the gates were shut. She dwelt upon the wall; her particular dwelling was there; which may possibly be added, because the other part of her house was reserved for the entertainment of strangers.

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain, lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

To the mountain, i. e. to some of the mountains where-with Jericho was encompassed, in which also there were many caves where they might lurk. Three days; not three whole days, but one whole day, and parts of two days: see on Josh. i. 11.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be † blameless of this thine oath which † thou hast made us swear.

The men said, or, had said; namely, before she let them down; it being very improbable, either that she would dismiss them before the condition was expressed and agreed; or that she would discourse with them, or they with her, about such secret and weighty things after they were let down, when others might overhear them; or that she should begin her discourse in her chamber, and not finish it till they were gone out of her house. Object. They spoke this after they were let down; for it follows, ver. 18, this thread—which thou didst let us down by. Ans. Those words may be thus rendered, which thou dost let us down by, i. e. art about to do it; it being frequent for the preter tense to be used of a thing about to be done, by an enallage of tenses, as Josh. x. 15. Blameless of this thine oath, i. e. free from guilt or reproach if it be violated, namely, if the following condition be not observed.

18 † Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread in the window which thou didst let us down by: † and thou shalt † bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

Into the land, i. e. over Jordan, and near the city. Bind this line of scarlet thread in the window, that it may be easily discerned by our soldiers.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be upon his head, and we will be guiltless: and whosoever shall be with thee in the house, † his blood shall be on our head, if any hand be upon him.

20 And if thou utter this our business, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou hast made us to swear.

21 And she said, According unto your words, so be it. And she sent them away, and they departed: and she bound the scarlet line in the window.

Forthwith, partly, that the spies might see it hung out before their departure, and so the better know it at some distance; partly, lest some accident might occasion a mistake or neglect about it; and partly, for her own comfort, it being pleasant and encouraging to her to have in her eye the pledge of her deliverance.

22 And they went, and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the pursuers were returned: and the pursuers sought them throughout all the way, but found them not.

Abode there three days; supporting themselves there with the provisions, which after the manner of those times and places they carried with them, which Rahab furnished them with. Throughout all the way, i. e. in the road to Jordan, and the places near it, but not in the mountains.

23 ¶ So the two men returned, and descended from the mountain, and passed over, and came to Joshua the son of Nun, and told him all things that befell them:

And passed over, to wit, Jordan unto Joshua. Him alone, not the people, as they did Numb. xiii.

24 And they said unto Joshua, Truly the LORD hath delivered into our hands all the land; for even all the inhabitants of the country do faint because of us.

CHAP. III.

Joshua comes with the Israelites to Jordan, 1. The officers instruct the people and priests for the passage, 2—6. God encourages Joshua, and he encourages the people, giving them for a sign the dividing the waters of Jordan till the ark and people should pass over, 7—13. The people pass over, the priests standing all the time in the midst of Jordan, 14—17.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning; and they removed ^afrom Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

In the morning; not after the return of the spies, as may seem at first view; but after the three days, as it follows, ver. 2. Lodged there that night, that they might go over in the day time; partly that the miracle might be more evident and unquestionable; and partly to strike the greater terror into their enemies.

2 And it came to pass ^bafter three days, that the officers went through the host;

After three days; either, 1. At the end of the three days mentioned Josh. i. 11, or upon the last of them, as this phrase is used. See on Deut. xv. 1. Or, 2. After those days were expired. See on Josh. i. 11. The officers went through the host the second time to give them more particular directions, as they had given them a general notice, Josh. i. 10, 11.

3 And they commanded the people, saying, ^cWhen ye see the ark of the coc See Num.

10. 33.

venant of the LORD your God, ^dand the priests the Levites bearing it, then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

They commanded the people, in Joshua's name, and by his authority. The priests the Levites, who were not only Levites, but priests also. For although the Levites were to carry the ark, Numb. iv., yet the priests might perform that office, and did so upon some solemn occasions, as here, and Josh. vi. 6. Go after it towards Jordan, to go over it in such manner as I am about to describe. Till this time the ark went in the middle of the cloudy pillar, probably being now vanished, now it goes in the front.

4 *Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way † heretofore.

Two thousand cubits make a thousand yards, and at which distance from it the Israelites seem to have been encamped in the wilderness. And because they generally went from their tents to the ark to worship God, especially on the sabbath days, hence it hath been conceived that a sabbath day's journey reached only to two thousand cubits. But that may be doubted; for those who encamped nearest the ark were at that distance from it, and came so far; but the most were farther from it, and their sabbath day's journey was considerably longer. Come not near unto it; partly from the reverent respect they should bear to the ark; and partly for the following reason. That ye may know the way by which ye must go; that the ark marching so far before you into the river, and standing still there till you pass over, may give you the greater assurance of your safe passage.

5 And Joshua said unto the people, † Sanctify yourselves: for to morrow the LORD will do wonders among you.

Joshua said, or rather had said, to wit, the day before their passage; for it follows, to-morrow. Sanctify yourselves, both in soul and body, that you may be meet to receive such a favour, and with more attention and reverence observe and ponder this great work, and fix it in your hearts and memories. See on Exod. xix. 10; Lev. xx. 7.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, ^eTake up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

Take up the ark, to wit, upon your shoulders; for so they were to carry it, Numb. vii. 9. Before the people; not in the middle of them, as you used to do.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to ^hmagnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, ⁱas I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

i. c. To gain thee authority and reputation among them, as the person whom I have set in Moses's stead, and by whom I will conduct them to the possession of the promised land.

8 And thou shalt command ^kthe priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ^lye shall stand still in Jordan.

To the brink, Heb. to the extremity; so far as the river then spread itself, which was now more than ordinary, ver. 15. In Jordan; within the waters of Jordan, in the first entrance into the river; where they stood for a season, till the river was divided, and then they went into the midst of it, as it is implied, ver. 17, and there abode till all the people were passed over, as it follows in the history.

9 ¶ And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither, and hear the words of the LORD your God.

Come hither, to the ark or tabernacle, the place of public assemblies, and hear the words of the Lord your God; who is now about to give a proof that he is both the Lord, the omnipotent Governor of heaven and earth, and all creatures; and your God, in covenant with you, having a tender care and true affection for you.

10 And Joshua said, Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you, and that he will without fail drive out before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

Hereby ye shall know, to wit, by experience and sensible evidence. The living God; not a dull, dead, senseless, and unactive god, such as the gods of the nations are; but a God of life, and power, and activity, to watch over you, and work for you. Is among you; is present with you to strengthen and help you, as the phrase signifies, Exod. xvii. 7; Deut. xxxi. 17; Josh. xxii. 31.

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan.

Into part of the river.

12 Now therefore take you twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man.

Take you twelve men, for the work described, Josh. iv. 2, 3.

13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the Lord, the Lord of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above; and they shall stand upon an heap.

As soon as the soles of the feet of the priests shall rest in the waters of Jordan; that so it may appear that this is the Lord's doing, and that in pursuance and for the accomplishment of his covenant made with Israel. The Lord of all the earth; the Lord of all this terrestrial globe made of earth and water, who therefore can dispose of this river and the adjoining land as he pleaseth.

The waters which now are united shall be divided, and part shall flow down the channel towards the Dead Sea, and the other part, that is nearer the spring or rise of the river, and flows down from it, shall stand still. They shall stand upon an heap, being as it were congealed, as the Red Sea was, Exod. xv. 8, and so kept from overflowing all the country.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan, and the priests bearing the ark of the covenant before the people;

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest,)

Which is also noted 1 Chron. xii. 15; Eccles. xxiv. 26, and by Aristæus in the History of the LXX. Interpreters. This is meant not of the wheat harvest, but of the barley harvest, (which was before it, Ruth i. 22; 2 Sam. xxi. 9,) as is manifest from their keeping of the passover at their first entrance, Josh. v. 10, which feast was kept on the fourteenth day of their first month, when they were to bring a sheaf of their first-fruits, Lev. xxiii. 10; Deut. xvi. 9, 10, which were of barley, as Josephus affirms, and is evident from the thing itself. So that this harvest in those hot countries fell very early in the spring, when rivers used to swell most, partly because of the rains which have fallen all the winter, and partly because of the snows, which then melt into water and come into the rivers; for which reasons the same overflowing of water which is here ascribed to Jordan, is by other authors ascribed to Euphrates, and Tigris, and the Rhine, and Maine, &c. And this time God chose for this work, partly that the miracle might be more glorious in itself, more obliging to the Israelites, and more amazing and terrible to the Canaanites; and partly that the Israelites might be entertained at their first entrance with more plentiful and comfortable provisions.

16 That the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap very far from the city Adam, that is beside Zaretan: and those that came down toward the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and were cut off: and the people passed over right against Jericho.

The waters rose up upon an heap; which having been affirmed by heathen writers to have been done by magicians, it is great impudence to disbelieve or doubt of God's power to do it. Adam, that is beside Zaretan: the city Adam being more obscure, is described by its nearness to a more known place, Zaretan, or Zarthan, which some think is the same place mentioned 1 Kings iv. 12; vii. 46; but it rather seems to have been another place then eminent, but now unknown, as many thousands are. The meaning is, that the waters were stopped in their course at that place, and so kept at a due distance from the Israelites whilst they passed over. Right against Jericho; here God carried them over, because this part was, 1. The strongest, as having in its neighbourhood an eminent city, a potent king, and a stout and warlike people. 2. The most pleasant and fruitful, and therefore more convenient both for the refreshment of the Israelites after their long and tedious marches, and for their encouragement to their present expedition.

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan.

Stood firm, i. e. in one and the same place and posture; their feet neither moved by any waters flowing in upon them, nor sinking into any mire, which one might think was at the bottom of the river. And this may be opposed unto their other standing in the brink of the water when they came to it, commanded ver. 8, which was but for a while, till the waters were divided and gone away; and then they were to go farther, even into the midst of Jordan, as is here said, where they are to stand constantly and fixedly, as this Hebrew word signifies, until all were passed over. If it be said that what is prescribed ver. 8, is here said to be executed, and therefore the midst of Jordan here is the same place with the brink of the water of Jordan, ver. 8; it may be answered, that the manifest variation of the phrase shows that it is not absolutely the same thing or place which is spoken of there and here; but what is there enjoined is here executed with advantage; for when it is said that they stood firm—in the midst of Jordan, it must needs be supposed that they first came to the brink of the water, and that they stood there for a season, till the waters were cut off and dried up, as appears from the nature of the thing; and that then they went farther, even into the midst of Jordan. In the midst of Jordan: either, 1. Within Jordan, as it is expressed above, ver. 8; for that phrase doth not always signify the exact middle of a place, but any part within it, as appears from Gen. xiv. 6; Exod. viii. 22; xxiv. 18; Josh. vii. 13; x. 13; Prov. xxx. 19. Or rather, 2. In the middle and deepest part of the river. For, 1. Words should be taken properly, where they may without any inconueniency, which is the case here. 2. The ark went before them to direct, and encourage, and secure them in the dangers of their passages, for which ends the middle was the fittest place. 3. In this sense the same phrase is used, Josh. iv. 3, 8; for certainly those stones which were to be witnesses and monuments of their passage over Jordan should not be taken from the brink or brim of the river, or from the shore which Jordan overflowed only at that season, but from the most inward and deepest parts of the river; and ver. 16—18, where the priests are said to ascend or come up out of Jordan, and out of the midst of Jordan unto the dry land; whereas had this been meant only of the first entrance into the river, they must have been said first to go down into Jordan, and then to go up to the land.

CHAP. IV.

God commands them to carry twelve stones for a memorial out of Jordan; Joshua orders it; the people perform, 1—8. Twelve other stones set up for a memorial in the midst of Jordan, 9. The people pass over: the order they observe, 10—13. God magnifies Joshua, 14. The priests with the ark are commanded to come up out of Jordan, 15—17. The waters return, 18. The time of this passage, 19. Twelve stones set up in Gilgal; to what purpose declared, 20—24.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed ^a over Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

This was commanded before, Josh. iii. 12, and is here repeated with enlargement, as being now to be put in execution.

^b ch. 3. 12. 2 ^b Take you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man,

For the greater evidence and certainty, and the more effectual spreading of the report of this marvellous work among all the tribes.

^c ch. 3. 13. 3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where ^c the priests' feet stood firm, twelve stones, and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them in ^d the lodging place, where ye shall lodge this night.

Out of the midst of Jordan; of which see on Josh. iii. 17. Where ye shall lodge this night, i. e. in Gilgal, as is expressed below, ver. 19, 20.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man:

Prepared, i. e. appointed or chosen for that work, and commanded them to be ready for it.

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel:

Pass over before the ark, i. e. go back again to the place where the ark stands.

^e ver. 21. ^f Ex. 12. 26. ^g & 13. 14. ^h Dent. 6. 20. ⁱ Ps. 44. 1. & 78. 3, 4, 5, 6. ^j Heb. ^k to morrow. 6 That this may be a sign among you, that ^e when your children ask their fathers † in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?

A sign; a monument or memorial of this day's work.

^f ch. 3. 13, 16. 7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for ^g a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

Before the ark; as it were at the sight and approach of the ark, to give it and the Israelites a safe passage.

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan, in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.

In the midst of Jordan; properly so called, as Josh. iii. 17. Quest. How could these stones be a monument of this work, when they were not seen, but generally covered with the waters of Jordan? Answ. These stones are not the same with those which a man could carry upon his shoulders, ver. 5, and therefore might be very much larger; and being set up in two rows one above another, they might possibly be seen, at least sometimes when the water was low, and especially where the water was commonly more shallow, as it might be ordinarily in this place, though not at this time, when Jordan overflowed all its banks. Add to this, that the waters of Jordan are said to be very pure and clear; and therefore these stones, though they did not appear above it, might be seen in it, either by those who stood upon the shore, because that river was not broad; or at least by those that passed in boats upon the river, who could easily discern them by the peculiar noise and motion of the water occasioned by that heap of stones. And this was sufficient, especially considering that there was another more distinct and visible monument of this miracle set up in Gilgal. They are there unto this day: this might be written, either, 1. By Joshua, who wrote this book near twenty years after this was done; or, 2. By some other holy man, divinely inspired and approved of by the whole Jewish church, who inserted this and some such passages, both in this book, and in the writings of Moses.

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, until every thing was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses commanded Joshua: and the people hastened and passed over.

To speak unto the people, i. e. to command the people to do. According to all that Moses commanded Joshua; which he did not particularly, but in the general, because he commanded Joshua to observe and do all that God had commanded him by Moses, and all that he should command him any other way. Hastened and passed over, i. e. passed over with haste; which is noted as an argument of their fear, or weakness of their faith; as, on the contrary, the priests are commended that they stood firm, and fixed, and settled in their minds, as well as in the posture of their bodies.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

The people looking on, and beholding this wonderful work of God with attention and admiration.

12 And ^h the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them:

13 About forty thousand ¶ prepared ⁱ for war passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

Either, 1. Before the ark, by which they, as well as the rest, passed when they went over Jordan. Or, 2. In the presence of God, who diligently observed whether they would keep their promise and covenant made with their brethren, or not.

14 ¶ On that day the LORD ^j magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

^a Ex. 25. 16, 22. 16 Command the priests that bare ^a the ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

For being now in the middle, and lowest, and deepest place of the river, (of which see on Josh. iii. 17,) they are most properly said to ascend or go up to the land; which word is thrice used in this and the two next following verses.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, Come ye up out of Jordan.

The priests staid contentedly in the river, till God by Joshua called them out.

18 And it came to pass, when the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD were come up out of the midst of Jordan, and the soles of the priests' feet were † lifted up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, ^a and † flowed over all his banks, as they did before.

m ch. 5. 9.

The first month, to wit, of Nisan, which wanted but five days of forty years from the time of their coming out of Egypt, which was on the fifteenth day of this month; so punctual is God in the performing of his word, whether promised or threatened. And this day was very seasonable for the taking up of the lambs, which were to be used four days after, according to the law, Exod. xii. 3, 6. Gilgal; a place so called hereafter upon a following occasion, Josh. v. 9. So here it is an anticipation.

The Amorites and the Canaanites are mentioned for all the rest, as being the chief of them for number, and power, and courage. Westward: this is added to distinguish them from the other Amorites, eastward from Jordan, whom Moses had subdued. All the kings of the Canaanites; so the proper place of this nation was on both sides of Jordan. By the sea; the midland sea, all along the coast of it, which was the chief seat of that people, though divers colonies of them were come into and settled in other places. Jordan was their bulwark on the east side, where the Israelites were; for it is very probable they had taken away all bridges near those parts; and the Israelites having been so long in that neighbouring country, and yet not making any attempt upon them, they were grown secure; especially now, when Jordan swelled beyond its ordinary bounds; and therefore they did not endeavour to hinder their passage. Their heart melted; they lost all their courage, and durst attempt nothing upon the Israelites; not without God's special providence, that the Israelites might quietly participate of the two great sacraments of their church, circumcision and the passover, and thereby be prepared for their high and hard work, and for the possession of the holy and promised land, which would have been defiled by an uncircumcised people.

2 ¶ At that time the LORD said unto Joshua, Make thee ^{||} sharp knives, and ^{||} circumcise again the children of Israel ^d the second time.

d Or, knives of flints. Ex. 4. 25.

At that time; as soon as ever they were come to Gilgal, which was on the tenth day; and so this might be executed the next, or the eleventh day, and that in the morning: on the thirteenth day they were sore of their wounds, and on the fourteenth day they recovered, and at the even of that day kept the passover. Make thee sharp knives; or, prepare, or make ready, as this word is sometimes used. As it was not necessary for those who had such knives already to make others for that use; so it is not probable that such were commanded to do so, but only to make them sharp and fit for that work. They are called in Hebrew knives of flints, not as if they were all necessarily to be made of flints, but because such were commonly used, especially in those parts, where there was but little iron; and because such knives were oft used in this work, as the Jewish doctors note, and in such like works, as the heathen writers relate. Thus we call that an ink-horn which is made of silver, because those utensils are commonly made of horn. Circumcise again; he calleth this a second circumcision, not as if these same persons had been circumcised once before, either by Joshua, or by any other, for the contrary is affirmed below, ver. 7; but with respect unto the body of the people, whereof one part had been circumcised before, and the other at this time, which is called a second time, in relation to some former time wherein they were circumcised; either, 1. In Egypt, when many of the people, who possibly for fear or favour of the Egyptians had neglected this duty, were by the command of Moses (who had been awakened by the remembrance of his own neglect and danger thereupon) circumcised; which during the ten plagues, and the grievous confusion and consternation of the Egyptians, they might easily find opportunity to do. Or, 2. At Sinai, when they received the passover, Numb. ix. 5, which no uncircumcised person might do, Exod. xii. 48; and therefore it may not seem improbable, that all the children born in that first year after their coming out of Egypt, and all they who peradventure might come out of Egypt in their uncircumcision, were now circumcised. Object. 1. All that came out of Egypt were circumcised, ver. 5. Ans. 1. This may be true, but he doth not say when and where they were circumcised; nor doth he deny that this was done to some of them, either in time of the plagues in Egypt, or at Sinai. 2. All is very oft used of the greatest part, as is confessed. Object. 2. All the people that were born in the wilderness were not circumcised, ver. 5. Ans. 1. Understand this also of the greatest part. 2. This is limited to them that were born by the way, as it is said there, and emphatically repeated, ver. 7, i. e. in their journeys and travellings; which insinuates the reason why they were not circumcised, because they were always uncertain of their stay in any place, and were constantly to be in a readiness for a removal when God took up the cloud: but this reason ceased at Sinai, where they knew they were to abide for a considerable time; and seeing they took that opportunity for the celebration of the passover, it is likely they would improve it also to the circumcision of their children or others, which they ought to prize highly, and to embrace all occasions offered for it; which though the people might, it is not likely that Moses would neglect. Object. 3. They are said to have remained uncircumcised forty whole years in the wilderness, ver. 6. Ans. i. e. For almost forty years; as the same phrase is used Numb. xiv. 33, 34; xxxii. 13, when there was above one year of that number past and gone. Or, 3. In Abraham; and so the sense may be, The first circumcision conferred upon Abraham, and continued in his posterity, hath been for many years neglected or omitted; and so that great and solemn pledge of my covenant with you is in a manner wholly lost, and therefore it is but fit and necessary to have this long-interrupted practice of circumcision revived, and to have Abraham's posterity circumcised a second time for the renewing of the covenant between them and me again.

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.

i. e. He caused this to be done; and because it was to be done speedily, the passover approaching, it was necessary to use many hands in it, either priests and Levites, or other circumcised persons, who, at least in those circumstances, were permitted to do it. The children of Israel, i. e. such of them as were uncircumcised. And though it be not mentioned, it is more than probable, that the Israelites beyond Jordan were circumcised at the same time.

4 And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: All the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

This is to be restrained to such as were then above twenty years old, and such as were guilty of that rebellion, Numb. xiv., as it is expressed below, ver. 6.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised: but all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised.

They; either their parents, or the rulers of Israel, whose omission hercof was not through neglect; for then God, who had ordered the neglect of circumcision to be cut off, Gen. xvii. 14, would not have left so gross a fault unpunished; but by Divine permission and indulgence; partly because they were now in a journey, in which case the passover also might be neglected, Numb. ix. 10, 13, and in that journey the passover was but once observed; and partly because there was not so great a necessity of this note of circumcision to distinguish them from other nations, whilst they dwelt alone and unmixed in the wilderness, as there was afterwards.

6 For the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord:

f Num. 14. 33. Deut. 1. 3. & 2. 7, 14. Ps. 95. 10.

unto whom the LORD swore that he would not shew them the land, which the LORD swore unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

g Num. 14. 23. Ps. 95. 11. Heb. 3. 11.

h Exod. 3. 8.

All the people; the Hebrew word commonly signifies the Gentiles; so he calls them, to note that they were unworthy of the name and privileges of Israelites. He would not show them, i. e. not give them so much as a sight of it, which he granted to Moses, much less the possession and enjoyment of it. Or showing is put for giving, as it is Psal. iv. 6; lx. 3; Eccles. ii. 24.

7 And their children, whom he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

i Num. 14. 31. Deut. 1. 39.

Them Joshua circumcised; which God would have now done, 1. As a testimony of God's reconciliation to the people, of which circumcision was a sign, and that God would not further impute their parents' rebellions to them. 2. Because the great impediment of circumcision was now removed, to wit, their continued travels, and frequent and uncertain removal. 3. To prepare them for the approaching passover. 4. To distinguish them from the Canaanites, into whose land they were now come. 5. To ratify the covenant between God and them, whereof circumcision was a sign and seal, to assure them that God would now make good his covenant, in giving them this land; and to oblige them to perform all the duties and services to which that covenant bound them, of which circumcision was the beginning and foundation, all which they were expressly enjoined to do, as soon as ever they came into Canaan, Exod. xii. 25; Lev. xxiii. 10; Numb. xv. 2.

8 And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people, that they abode in their places in the camp, till they were whole.

+ Heb. when the people had made an end to be circumcised. k See Gen. 34. 26.

Free from that pain and sore which circumcision caused, Gen. xxxiv. 25. It was indeed an act of great faith to expose themselves to so much pain and danger too in this place, where they were hemmed in by Jordan and their enemies; but they had many considerations to support their faith, and suppress their fears: the fresh experience of God's power and readiness to work miracles for their preservation; the great consternation of all their enemies, which they might observe and rationally presume; the considerable number of the people who were above forty years old, and therefore circumcised before this time, their great general being one of this number; the time it would require for their enemies to bring together a force sufficient to oppose them.

9 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you. Wherefore the name of the place is called Gilgal unto this day.

l Gen. 34. 14. 1 Sam. 14. 6. See Lev. 18. 3. ch. 24. 14. Ezek. 20. 7. & 23. 3, 8. 1 Mac. 4. 58. || That is, rolling. m ch. 4. 19.

The reproach of Egypt, i. e. uncircumcision, which was both in truth, and in the opinion of the Jews, a matter of great reproach, Gen. xxxiv. 14; 1 Sam. xiv. 6; xvii. 26. And although this was a reproach common to most nations of the world, yet it is particularly called the reproach of Egypt; either, 1. Because the other neighbouring nations, being the children of Abraham by the concubines, are supposed to have been circumcised, which the Egyptians at this time were not, as may be gathered from Exod. ii. 6, where they knew the child to be an Hebrew by this mark. Or, 2. Because they came out of Egypt, and were esteemed to be a sort of Egyptians, Numb. xxii. 5, which they justly thought a great reproach; but by their circumcision they were now distinguished from them, and manifested to be another kind of people. Or, 3. Because many of them lay under this reproach in Egypt, having wickedly neglected this duty there for worldly reasons; and others of them continued in the same shameful condition for many years in the wilderness.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho.

n Ex. 12. 6.
Num. 9. 5.

This was their third passover: the first was in Egypt, Exod. xii.; the second at Mount Sinai, Numb. ix.; the third here; for in their wilderness travels these and all other sacrifices were neglected, Amos v. 25.

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, unleavened cakes, and parched corn in the selfsame day.

The old corn; the corn of the last year, which the inhabitants of those parts had left in their barns, being doubtless fled for fear of the Israelites into their strong cities, or other remoter and safer parts. On the morrow after the passover, i. e. on the sixteenth day; for the passover was killed between the two evenings of the fourteenth day, and was eaten in that evening or night, which, according to the Jewish computation, whereby they begin their days at the evening, was a part of the fifteenth day, all which was the feast of the passover; and so the morrow of the sixteenth day was the morrow after the passover, when they were obliged to offer unto God the first sheaf, and then were allowed to eat of the rest. Parched corn; of that year's corn, which was most proper and customary for that use. In the selfsame day; having an eager desire to enjoy the fruits of the land.

o Ex. 16. 36.

12 ¶ And the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.

God now withheld the manna, 1. To show that it was not an ordinary production of nature, as by the long and constant enjoyment of it they might be prone to think; but an extraordinary and special gift of God to supply their necessity. 2. Because God would not be prodigal of his favours, nor expose them to contempt by giving them superfluously, or by working miracles where ordinary means were sufficient. On the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn, i. e. on the seventeenth day.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there stood a man over against him with his sword drawn in his hand: and Joshua went unto him, and said unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?

And this appears, 1. By his acceptance of adoration here, which a created angel durst not admit of, Rev. xxii. 8, 9. 2. Because the place was made holy by his presence, ver. 15, which was God's prerogative, Exod. iii. 5. 3. Because he is called the Lord, Heb. Jehovah, Josh. vi. 2. What saith my lord unto his servant? I acknowledge thee for my Lord and Captain, and therefore wait for thy commands, which I am ready to obey.

CHAP. VI.

Jericho is shut up by the Israelites, 1. The people and seven priests with the ark go round it six days, 2—14. On the seventh day they go round seven times; the priests blow the trumpets; the people shout; the city accursed; nothing to be taken, but all consecrated; the walls fall down; men, women, and cattle destroyed, 15—21. Rahab and her kindred are saved, 22—25. Joshua curseth the man who should rebuild Jericho, 26.

Who are in it, resolved and ready to defend it with their utmost strength.

3 And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

Go round about the city once, at convenient distance, out of the reach of their arrows; thus shalt thou do six days, every day once. This and the following course might seem ridiculous and absurd, and is therefore prescribed and used by God, that they might learn to take new measures of things, and to expect success not from their own valour or skill, or probable means, but merely from God's appointment and blessing; and in general, not to judge of any of God's institutions by mere carnal reason, to which divers of their ceremonies would seem no less foolish than this action; and that they might have a full demonstration of the all-sufficiency of that God who can do what he pleaseth, even by the most contemptible means.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark seven trumpets of rams' horns: and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

See Judg. 7. 18, 22.

d Num. 10. 8.

Of rams' horns, or, of the jubilees, i. e. such trumpets wherewith they were to sound in the years of jubilee, Lev. xxv. 9. Either this, or one of the other six, was certainly a sabbath day; and it is not material which was it, for the command of the Lord of the sabbath was sufficient to legitimate any action.

5 And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the ram's horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall down flat, and the people shall ascend up every man straight before him.

† Heb. under it.

When they make a long blast, as is usual in the close of musical sounds. The wall of the city; not all of it, which was not only unnecessary, but inconvenient, and might have given the people better opportunity of escaping; but only a considerable part of it, where the Israelites might fitly enter; for Rahab's house was not overthrown, ver. 22. Flat, Heb. under it, i. e. below the place they stood in; or, in its place: it was not battered down with engines, which would have made part of it fall out of its place; but it fell out without any force, and of its own accord, and therefore in the place it did formerly stand in.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant, and let seven priests bear seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD.

7 And he said unto the people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD.

God would have them armed, both for the defence of themselves and the ark, in case the enemies should make a sally upon them, and for the execution of the Lord's vengeance upon that city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests bearing the seven trumpets of rams' horns passed on before the LORD, and blew with the trumpets: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them.

9 ¶ And the armed men went before the priests that blew with the trumpets, and the †rereward came after the ark, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

^e Num. 10. 25.
† Heb. gathering host.

The rereward being opposed to the armed men, may seem to note the unarmed people, who were desirous to be spectators of this wonderful work. The priests; which is rightly supplied here from ver. 4.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor †make any noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, until the day I bid you shout; then shall ye shout.

† Heb. make your voice to be heard.

Ye shall not shout; because shouting before the time appointed would be ineffectual, and so might give them some discouragement, and their enemies matter of insulting.

11 So the ark of the LORD compassed the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

12 ¶ And Joshua rose early in the morning, and the priests took up the ark of the LORD.

13 And seven priests bearing seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD went on continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them; but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp: so they did six days.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they rose early about the dawning of the day, and compassed the city after the same manner seven times: only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city.

Shout, to testify your faith in God's promise, and thankfulness for this glorious mercy, and to encourage yourselves and brethren, and to strike a terror into your enemies.

17 ¶ And the city shall be †accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent.

Make the camp of Israel a curse, by provoking God to punish them for your sin, in which they may be one way or other involved; or at least upon the occasion of your sin: for, to speak properly, God will not (the case of Adam's sin only excepted) punish one man for the sin of another, as he hath oft declared; but the whole camp having sins of their own, God might take what occasion he saw fit to inflict this punishment.

19 But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are †consecrated unto the LORD: they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.

20 So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down †flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

Being commanded to do so by the sovereign Lord of every man's life; and being informed by God before that the Canaanites were abominably wicked, and deserved the severest punishments. As for the infants, they were guilty of original sin, and otherwise at the disposal of their Creator, as the clay is in the hands of the potter; but if they had been wholly innocent, it was a great favour to them to take them away in infancy, rather than reserve them to those dreadful calamities which those who survived them were liable to.

22 But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, as ye swear unto her.

^m ch. 2. 14. ⁿ Heb. 11. 31.

The harlot's house, together with the wall upon which it leaned, was left standing, either by a special favour of God to her, or for the reason alleged upon ver. 5.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her †kindred, and left them without the camp of Israel.

† Heb. families.

Till they were cleansed from the impurities of their Gentile state, and instructed in the Jewish religion, and solemnly admitted into that church in the usual way, to which Rahab's good counsel and example had doubtless very much prepared them; and this stupendous work of God confirmed their purposes.

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: °only the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

o ver. 10.

25 And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and †she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day; because she hid the messengers, which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

† See Matt. 1. 5.

For that general command of rooting out the Canaanites seems to have had some exception, in case any of them had sincerely and seasonably cast off their idolatry and wickedness, and submitted themselves to the Israelites, as we shall see hereafter.

26 ¶ And Joshua adjured them at that time, saying, 'Cursed be the man before the LORD, that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his firstborn, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

g 1 Kin. 18. 34.

Adjured them; or, made them to swear; caused the people, or some in the name of all, to swear for the present and succeeding generations, and to confirm their oath by a curse. Before the LORD, i. e. from God's presence, and by his sentence, as they are said to cast lots before the LORD, Josh. xviii. 8, 10, i. e. expecting the decision from God. He intimates, that he doth not utter this in a passion, or upon a particular dislike of that place, but by Divine inspiration, as appears from 1 Kings xvi. 34. God would have the ruins of this city remain as a standing monument of God's justice against this wicked and idolatrous people, and of his almighty power in destroying so great and strong a city by such contemptible means. That riseth up and buildeth, i. e. that shall attempt or endeavour to build it. So this curse is restrained to the builder, but no way belongs to those who should inhabit it after it was built, as is evident from 2 Kings ii. 18; Luke xix. 1. 5. The builder shall lose all his children in the work, the first at the beginning, others in the progress of it by degrees, and the youngest in the close of it, when the gates use to be set up. This was fulfilled, 1 Kings xvi. 34.

27 'So the LORD was with Joshua; and °his fame was noised throughout all the country.

CHAP. VII.

Achan takes of the accursed and devoted thing: God is angry with Israel, 1. Joshua sends three thousand men against Ai; they flee, and thirty-six are slain, 2—5. Joshua complains to God; who discovers the cause, and enjoins a lot, 6—15. Achan is found guilty: Joshua's advice, and his confession, 16—21. He and his are stoned and burnt: the place named The valley of Achor, 22—26.

BUT the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing: for* ¶ Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of ¶ Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel.

a ch. 22. 20.
1 Chr. 2. 7.
Achan.
1 Or, Zimri,
1 Chro. 2. 6.

The children of Israel, i. e. one of them, by a very usual synecdoche or enallage, as Gen. viii. 4; xix. 29; Matt. xxvi. 8, where that is ascribed to the disciples, which belonged to Judas only, John xii. 4. In the accursed thing, i. e. in taking some of the forbidden and accursed goods. Zabdi; called also Zimri, 1 Chron. ii. 6. Zerah, or, Zarah, who was Judah's immediate son, Gen. xxxviii. 30, who went with Judah into Egypt; and so for the filling up the two hundred and fifty-six years that are supposed to come between that and this time, we must allow Achan to be now an old man, and his three ancestors to have begotten each his son at about sixty years of age, which at that time was not incredible nor unusual. Against the children of Israel. Why did God punish the whole society for this one man's sin? Answ. All of them were punished for their own sins, whereof each had a sufficient proportion; but God took this occasion to inflict the punishment upon the society, partly, because divers of them might be guilty of this sin, either by coveting what he actually did, or by concealing of his fault, which it is probable could not be unknown to others, or by not sorrowing for it, and endeavouring to purge themselves from it; partly, to make sin the more hateful, as being the cause of such dreadful and public judgments; and partly, to oblige all the members of every society to be both more circumspect in the ordering of their own actions, and more diligent to watch over one another, and to prevent the miscarriages of their brethren, which is a great benefit and blessing to them, and to the whole society, and worthy to be purchased by a sharp affliction upon the society.

2 And Joshua sent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beside Beth-aven, on the east side of Beth-el, and spake unto them, saying, Go up and view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai.

Ai, called Hai, Gen. xii. 8, and Aija, Neh. xi. 31. They were not to go into the city of Ai, but into the country bordering and belonging to it, and there to understand the state and quality of the place and people. Beside; so the Hebrew im is used, Gen. xxv. 11; xxxv. 4; Judg. ix. 6; xviii. 3; xix. 11. Beth-aven; a city or town distinct from, but nigh unto Beth-el, though Beth-el was afterwards by allusion called Beth-aven, Hos. iv. 15; x. 5. Compare Josh. xviii. 12. On the east side of Beth-el: compare Gen. xii. 8; Josh. viii. 9, 12.

3 And they returned to Joshua, and said unto him, Let not all the people go up; but let † about two or three thousand men go up and smite Ai; and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.

† Heb. about 3000 men, or about 3000 men.

This was done by the wise contrivance of Divine Providence, that their sin might be punished, and they awakened and reformed, with as little hazard, and mischief, and reproach as might be; for if the defeat of these caused so great a consternation in Joshua, it is easy to guess what dread, and confusion, and despair it would have caused in the people, if a great host had been defeated.

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men: °and they fled before the men of Ai.

b Lev. 25. 17. Deut. 28. 25.

Not having their usual courage to strike a stroke, which was a plain evidence that God had forsaken them; and a useful instruction, to show them what weak and inconsiderable creatures they were when God left them; and that it was God, not their own valour, that gave the Canaanites and their land into their hands.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them ¶ in the going down: wherefore °the hearts of the people melted, and became as water.

† Or, in Merad. c ch. 2. 9, 11. Lev. 26. 34. Ps. 72. 14.

About thirty and six men; a dear victory to them, whereby Israel was awakened, and reformed, and reconciled to their God and Shield, and they hardened to their own ruin. In the going down; by which it seems it was a downhill way to Jericho, which was nearer Jordan. As water; soft and weak, and full of fluctuation and trembling.

^d Gen. 37. 29, 34. 6 ¶ And Joshua ^d rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD until the eventide, and the elders of Israel, and ^e put dust upon their heads.

Joshua rent his clothes, in testimony of great sorrow, as Gen. xxxvii. 34; xlv. 13, for the loss felt, the consequent mischief feared, and the sin which he suspected. Fell to the earth upon his face, in deep humiliation and fervent supplication. Until the eventide; continuing the whole day in fasting and prayer. Put dust upon their heads; as was usual in case of grief and astonishment, 1 Sam. iv. 12; 2 Sam. i. 2; xiii. 19; Jonah iii. 6; Micah i. 10.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O LORD GOD, ^f wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

These clauses, though well intended, and offered to God only by way of expostulation and argument, yet do savour of human infirmity, and fall short of that reverence, and modesty, and submission which he owed to God; and are mentioned as instances that the holy men of God were subject to like passions and infirmities with other men.

8 O LORD, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their †backs before their enemies!

What shall I say, in answer to the reproaches cast by our insulting enemies upon us, and upon thy name? Israel; God's own people, which he hath singled out of all nations for his own peculiar.

9 For the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land shall hear of it, and shall environ us round, and ^g cut off our name from the earth: and ^h what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

Which will upon this occasion be blasphemed and charged with inconstancy, unkindness, and unfaithfulness to thine own people, and with inability to resist them, or to do thy people that good thou didst intend them. Compare Exod. xxxii. 12; Numb. xiv. 13; Deut. xxxiii. 27; Joel ii. 17.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; and therefore †liest thou thus upon thy face?

This business is not to be done by unactive supplication, but by vigorous endeavours for reformation.

ⁱ ver. 1. 11 ⁱ Israel hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: ^k for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and ^l dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

Israel; some or one of them, as before on ver. 1. Transgressed my covenant, i. e. broken the conditions of my covenant which I have commanded them, and they have promised to perform, viz. obedience to all my commands, Exod. xix. 8; xxiv. 7, whereof this was one, not to meddle with the accursed thing. Of the accursed thing, which I charged them not to meddle with. And have also stolen, i. e. taken my portion which I had reserved, Josh. vi. 19. Dissembled; covered the fact with deep dissimulation, and a real, if not verbal, profession of their innocency. Possibly Achan might be suspected; and being accused, had denied it, or was resolved to deny it. Put it even among their own stuff; converted it to their own use, and added obstinacy and resolvedness to the crime; thus he loads this sin with divers aggravations.

^m See Num. 14. 45. Judg. 2. 14. 12 ^m Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because ⁿ they were accursed: neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you. ⁿ Deu. 7. 24. ch. 6. 16.

Because they were accursed, as I warned and threatened them, Josh. vi. 18, they have put themselves out of my protection and blessing, and therefore are liable to the same destruction which belongs to this accursed people.

13 Up, ^o sanctify the people, and say, ^o Ex. 19. 10. ¶ Sanctify yourselves against to morrow: ^p ch. 3. 5. for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

Sanctify yourselves; purify yourselves from that defilement which you have all in some sort contracted by this accursed fact, and prepare yourselves to appear before the LORD, as it is most probable they were required to do; as imploring and expecting the sentence of God for the discovery and punishment of the sin, and that the guilty person might hereby be awakened and terrified, and brought to a free and reasonable confession of his fault. And it is a marvellous thing that Achan did not on this occasion acknowledge his crime; but this is to be imputed to the heart-hardening power of sin, which makes men grow worse and worse; partly, to his pride, being loth to take to himself the shame of such a mischievous and infamous action; partly, to his self-flattering and vain conceit, whereby he might think many others were guilty as well as he, and some of them might be taken, and he escape; and partly, to the just judgment of God, whereby he blinds and hardens sinners to their own ruin. See a like instance, Matt. xxvi. 21, 22, 25.

14 In the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be, that the tribe which ^q the LORD taketh shall come according to the families thereof; and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

Which the Lord taketh; which shall be discovered or declared guilty by the lot, which is disposed by the Lord, Prov. xvi. 33, and which was to be cast in the Lord's presence before the ark. Of such use of lots, see 1 Sam. xiv. 41, 42; Jonah i. 7; Acts i. 26.

15 ^r And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing shall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath: because he hath ^s transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he ^s hath wrought || folly in Israel.

Burnt with fire, as persons and things accursed were to be. See Numb. xv. 30, 35; Deut. xiii. 16. All that he hath; his children and goods, as is noted, ver. 24, according to the law, Deut. xiii. 16. He hath wrought folly; so sin is oft called in Scripture, as Gen. xxxiv. 7; Judg. xx. 6, &c., in opposition to the idle opinion of sinners, who commonly esteem it to be their wisdom and interest. In Israel, i. e. among the church and people of God, who had such excellent laws to direct them, and such an all-sufficient and gracious God to provide for them, without any such indirect and unworthy practices.

16 ¶ So Joshua rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of Judah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarahites: and he brought the family of the Zarahites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

The family of Judah; either, 1. The tribe or people, as the word family sometimes signifies, as Judg. xiii. 2; Zech. xii. 13; Amos iii. 1; Acts iii. 25, compared with Rev. i. 7. Or, 2. The families, as ver. 14, the singular number for the plural, the chief of each of their five families, Numb. xxvi. 20, 21. Man by man; not every individual person, as is evident from ver. 18, but every head of the several houses or lesser families of that greater family of the Zarahites, of which see 1 Chron. ii. 6.

18 And he brought his household man by man; and Achan, the son of Zarmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, ^u was taken.

19 And Joshua said unto Achan, My son, ^z give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel, ^y and make confession unto him; and ^x tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me.

He calls him my son, to show that this severe inquisition and sentence did not proceed from any hatred to his person, which he loved as a father doth his son, and as a prince ought to do each of his subjects. Give glory to the Lord God of Israel; as thou hast highly dishonoured him, now take the shame and blame to thyself, and ascribe unto God the glory of his omniscience in knowing thy sin; of his justice in punishing it in thee, and others for thy sake; of his omnipotency, which was obstructed by thee; and of his kindness and faithfulness to his people, which was eclipsed by thy wickedness; all which will now be evident by thy sin confessed and punished.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, Indeed I have sinned against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done:

He seems to make a sincere and ingenuous confession, and loads his sin with all just aggravations. Against the Lord; against his express command, and just rights, and glorious attributes. The Lord God of Israel; the true God, who hath chosen me and all Israel to be the people of his peculiar love and care.

21 When I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a † wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

† Heb. tongue.

He accurately describes the progress of his sin, which began at his eye, which he permitted to gaze and fix upon them, which inflamed his desire, and made him covet them; and that desire put him upon action, and made him take them; and having taken, resolve to keep them, and to that end hide them in his tent. Babylonish garments were composed with great art with divers colours, and of great price, as appears both from Scripture, Ezek. xxiii. 15, and from divers heathen authors. [See my Latin Synopsis.] Two hundred shekels, to wit, in weight, not in coin; for as yet they received and paid money by weight. Under it, i. e. under the Babylonish garment; covered with it, or wrapt up in it.

22 ¶ So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent; and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

Joshua sent messengers, that the truth of his confession might be evident and unquestionable, which some peradventure might think was forced from him. They ran; partly longing to free themselves and all the people from the curse under which they lay; and partly that none of Achan's relations or others might get thither before them, and take away those things. It was hid, i. e. the parcel of things mentioned ver. 21, 24.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and † laid them out before the LORD.

† Heb. poured.

Where Joshua and the elders continued yet in their assembly, waiting for the issue of this business.

24 And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had: and they brought them unto ^a the valley of Achor.

^a ver. 26. ch. 15. 7.

His sons and his daughters; but this seems hard and unjust, and therefore forbidden by God himself, Deut. xxiv. 16. Ans. 1. That law was given to men, not to God, who certainly hath a more absolute right and sovereignty over men than one man hath over another. 2. Their death was a debt they owed to nature and to their own sins, which debt God may require when he pleaseth; and he could not take it in more honourable and excellent circumstances than these, that the death of a very few in the beginning of a new empire, and of their settlement in the land, might be useful to prevent the death of many thousands, who took warning by this dreadful example, whom, if the fear of God did not, yet the love of their own and of their dear children's lives would, restrain from such dangerous and pernicious practices. 3. It is very probable they were conscious of the fact, as the Jewish doctors affirm. If it be pretended that some of them were infants, the text doth not say so, but only calls them sons and daughters. And considering that Achan was an old man, as is most probable, because he was the fifth person from Judah, (of which see on ver. 1.) it seems most likely that the children were grown up, and so capable of knowing, and concealing or discovering this fact. Nor doth it follow that they were not guilty because it is not said so; for it is apparent that many circumstances are omitted in divers historical relations in Scripture, which sometimes are supplied in other places. His oxen, and his asses, and his sheep; which, though not capable of sin, nor of punishment properly so called, yet, as they were made for man's use, so they are rightly destroyed for man's good; and being daily killed for our bodily food, it cannot seem strange to kill them for the instruction of our minds, that hereby we might learn the detestable and contagious nature of sin, which involves innocent creatures in its plagues; and how much sorer punishments are reserved for man, who having a law given to him, and that excellent gift of reason and will to restrain him from the transgressions of it, his guilt must needs be unspeakably greater, and therefore his sufferings more severe and terrible. Further, by this enumeration it appears that he had no colour of necessity to induce him to this fact, but was wholly inexcusable.

25 And Joshua said, ^b Why hast thou troubled us? the LORD shall trouble thee this day. ^c And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.

^b ch. 6. 18. ^c 2 Sam. 15. 17. Gal. 5. 12. ^c Deut. 17. 6.

Stoned him with stones, and burned him with fire; which is easily understood, both out of the following words, and from God's command to do so, ver. 15, which doubtless was here executed.

Quest. How could both these deaths be inflicted upon them? Ans. It seems they were stoned to death, which was the punishment of such offenders, Lev. xxiv. 14; Numb. xv. 35, and not burned to death; and therefore the stoning only of Achan is mentioned here, and not his burning; and God would have their dead carcasses burned to show his utmost detestation of such persons as break forth into sins of such a public scandal and mischief. And for the burning of Achan, commanded ver. 15, it seems not likely to be meant of his burning alive, because that burning is common to him, and all that he hath, as is there expressed; but of the burning of his dead carcass, and other lifeless things, as the manner was with accursed things, Deut. xiii. 16.

26 And they ^d raised over him a great heap of stones unto this day. So ^e the LORD turned from the fierceness of his anger. Wherefore the name of that place

CHAP. VIII.

God puts new courage into Joshua; commands him to go and besiege Ai, promising he should take it, 1, 2. The stratagem whereby it is taken; it is burnt, 3—22. The king is taken prisoner; the inhabitants are put to the sword; the cattle and goods spoiled; the king is hanged, 23—29. Joshua builds an altar, 30; offers thereon, 31; writes the law on stones, 32. It and its blessings and curses are read before the people, 33—35.

a Deut. 1. 21. AND the LORD said unto Joshua, ^a Fear & 7. 18. & 31. not, neither be thou dismayed: take all b ch. 6. 2. up to Ai: see, ^b I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land:

Take all the people of war with thee; partly to strengthen them against those fears which their late defeat had wrought in them; and partly that all of them might be partakers of this first spoil, and thereby be encouraged to proceed in their work. The weak multitude were not to go, because they might have hindered them in the following stratagem; and it was but fit that the military men who run the greatest hazards, should have the precedency and privilege in the spoils.

c ch. 6. 21. 2 And thou shalt do to Ai and her d Deu. 20. 14. king as thou didst unto ^c Jericho and her king: only ^d the spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves: lay thee an ambush for the city behind it.

To Ai, i. e. the city and people of Ai. As thou didst unto Jericho and her king, i. e. overcome and destroy them. This was enjoined, partly to chastise their last insolence, and the triumphs and blasphemies which doubtless their success produced; and partly to revive the dread and terror which had been impressed upon the Canaanites by Jericho's ruin, and had been much abated by the late success of Ai, and their confidence and expectation of further and greater success much raised.

3 ¶ So Joshua arose, and all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty men of valour, and sent them away by night.

To go up against Ai, i. e. to consider and conclude about this expedition of going against Ai; not as if all the people of war did actually go up, which was both unnecessary and burdensome, and might hinder their following design; but it seems to be resolved by Joshua and all the council of war, that the thirty thousand here following should be selected for the enterprise. Either, 1. The thirty thousand now mentioned; or, 2. Part of them, to wit, such as were to lie in wait, as seems most probable, both from the next verse, which limits it to those who were to lie in wait, and from ver. 9, where what is here mentioned only by anticipation is actually put in execution; and it is said of them that were sent forth, that they went to lie in ambush, and did so; and these were only five thousand men, as is expressed, ver. 12. And the only inconvenience of this exposition is, that the pronoun relative them is put without, or before its antecedent, which is left to be gathered out of the following words, which is not unusual in the Hebrew tongue, as plainly appears from Exod. xiv. 19; Numb. xviii. 9; xxiv. 17; Psal. lxxxvii. 1; cv. 19; cxiv. 2; Prov. vii. 8; xiv. 26.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ^e ye shall lie in wait against the city, even behind the city: go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

He commanded them; the same party last spoken of, ver. 3, even the five thousand mentioned ver. 12. This historical narration seems obscure and intricate, and at first view to make three parties, one of thirty thousand, ver. 3; one of five thousand, ver. 12, which may seem to be two several ambushes; and a third of all the people, ver. 5, 11. But if it be more narrowly and considerably observed, it will appear that there are only two parties engaged in the taking of Ai, and but one ambush, as plainly appears by comparing ver. 9 (which manifestly speaks of that party which is mentioned ver. 3) with ver. 12, which speaks only of five thousand, which is justly supposed to be a part of those thirty thousand named ver. 3, and that part which was to lie in ambush; unless we will suppose that there were two ambushes, one of thirty thousand, and the other of five thousand, both lying in wait in the same quarter, even between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai, the only place where the ambush lay, as is said both ver. 9, and 12, 13, which seems absurd and incredible. And besides, in the execution of this command, there is mention but of one ambush, ver. 12—14, 19, and they are said to consist only of five thousand, ver. 12, and they only take and burn the city, ver. 19; so that the other supposed ambush of thirty thousand is perfectly vanished and lost, and did nothing in this work; which also is very improbable. And therefore that thirty thousand, ver. 3, are the same who are called the people, and the people of war that were with Joshua, ver. 5, 11, which is pitched on the north side of Ai, ver. 11, 13, as the ambush did on the west side; but for any other side of the city, or a third party placed elsewhere about Ai, we read not one word; and therefore it may well be presumed there were no more employed to take it.

5 And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city: and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, that ^f we will flee before them,

That are, or, that shall be; for at present he sent them away, ver. 9, but he next morning followed them, and joined himself with them, ver. 10, 31. We will flee; I and the twenty-five thousand with me.

6 (For they will come out after us) till we have [†] drawn them from the city; for they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

7 Then ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

Ye shall rise up from the ambush, to wit, upon the signal given, of which ver. 18.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall set the city on fire: according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. ^g See, I have commanded you.

Ye shall set the city on fire, to wit, part of it, as a sign to their brethren of their success; for the whole city was not burnt now, but afterwards, as is said ver. 28.

9 ¶ Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.

Sent them forth; the same party designed by the pronoun them, ver. 3, of which see the notes there. Among the people, Heb. that people, to wit, the people of war, as they are called, ver. 11, to wit, the main body of that host, consisting of thirty thousand.

10 And Joshua rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel, before the people to Ai.

The people, Heb. that people, not all the people of Israel, which was needless, and required more time than could now be spared; but the rest of that host of thirty thousand, whereof five thousand were sent away; and now the remainder are numbered, partly to see whether some of them had not withdrawn themselves, taking the advantage of the night, and of the design of laying an ambush; and partly that it might be evident that this work was done without any loss of men, and thereby they might be encouraged to trust in God, and to proceed vigorously and resolutely in their work. The elders of Israel; either, 1. The military elders, the chief commanders of his army. But they seem to be included in the thirty thousand, ver. 3, which are supposed to be furnished and led by their several commanders; and such persons are scarce ever called the elders of Israel. Or rather, 2. The chief magistrates and rulers of Israel under Joshua, who are commonly so called; and these, I suppose, went with Joshua, and with the army, to take care that the cattle and the spoil of the city, which was given by God to all Israel for a prey, ver. 2, 27, might be justly and equally divided between those that went to battle, and the rest of the people, according to the example and prescript, Numb. xxxi. 27; and that they who were present and assistant in the taking of that city, might not engross the whole to themselves, as is usual for soldiers in those cases to do.

11 ^h And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

The people of war that were with him, to wit, the thirty thousand mentioned ver. 3, or the most of them.

12 And he took about five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side || of the city.

And he took, or rather, but he had taken, to wit, out of the said number of thirty thousand, for this is added by way of recapitulation and further explication of what is said in general, ver. 9.

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and † their liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.

† Heb. their lying in wait, ver. 4.

To wit, accompanied with a small part of the host now mentioned, i. e. very early in the morning, when it was yet dark, as is said in a like case, John xx. 1, whence it is here called night, though it was early in the morning, as is said ver. 10; for it seems most probable that all was done in one night's space, and in this manner: Joshua sends away the ambush by night, ver. 3, and lodgeth that night with twenty-five thousand men, ver. 9, not far from the city. But not able nor willing to sleep all night, he rises very early, ver. 10, and numbers his men, which by the help of the several officers was quickly done, and so immediately leads them towards Ai; and while it was yet duskish or night, he goes into the midst of the valley, ver. 13; and when the day dawns he is discovered by the king and people of Ai, who thereupon rose up early to fight with them, ver. 14. Though others conceive this was the second night, and so the ambush had lain hid a night and a day together. But then there might be danger of their being discovered, although that danger may seem to be the less, because Ai might be shut up, that none might go out nor come in, but by order, and upon necessity, because of the nearness of their enemies, as Jericho formerly was for the same reason, Josh. vi. 1. Into the midst of the valley; which was near the city, thereby to allure them forth.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted and rose up early, and the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain; but he ¹ wist not that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

All his people, to wit, all his men of war, for the rest were left in Ai, ver. 16. At a time appointed; at a certain hour agreed upon between the king and people of Ai, and of Beth-el too, who were their confederates in this enterprise, as it may seem from ver. 17. Possibly they might appoint the same hour of the day on which they had fought against Israel with such good success, looking upon it as a lucky hour. Before the plain, i. e. towards or in sight of that plain or valley in which the Israelites were, that so they might put themselves in battle-array. He wist not that there were liers in ambush; the former success having made him more careless and secure, as is usual in such cases; God also blinding his mind, and infatuating him, as he useth to do with those which he intends to destroy.

15 And Joshua and all Israel ^k made as if they were beaten before them, and fled by the way of the wilderness.

^k Judg. 20. 26, &c.

Made as if they were beaten before them, i. e. fled from them, as it were for fear of a second blow; and peradventure some of them might be wounded, though none were killed, and might make that the pretence of their fleeing away. The wilderness lay between Ai and Jericho, whither they now seemed to flee.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them: and they pursued after Joshua, and were drawn away from the city.

All the people, to wit, all that were able to bear arms, for old men and children were unfit for the pursuit or fight; and that they were yet left, may seem from ver. 24, 25.

17 And there was not a man left in Ai or Beth-el, that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open, and pursued after Israel.

Not a man, to wit, fit for war. Beth-el, being a neighbouring city, and encouraged by the former success, had sent some forces to assist them; and now, upon notice sent to them of the flight of their common enemies, or upon some other signal given, which might easily be done, having been appointed beforehand, as is usual in such cases, all their men of war join with those of Ai in the pursuit.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, Stretch out the spear that is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

The spear, or, thy banner; or there might be some banner in the end of his spear. This was prescribed and practised, either, 1. For a sign to his host present with him, to stop their flight, and make head against the pursuers; or, 2. For a signal to the liers in wait, as may seem from ver. 19, who, though they were at some distance, might know this from persons whom they had set in some high and convenient places to observe Joshua's motion, and to give notice from one to another, and that speedily, as is common in such cases, until it came to the whole ambush; or, 3. As a mystical token of God's presence and assistance with them, and of their victory; or as a mean by God's appointment contributing to their good success, as the like posture of Moses lifting up his hand was, Exod. xvii. 11, 12, which may be the reason why he continued this posture till the enemies were all destroyed, ver. 26; whereas if it had been a signal only, it was sufficient to do it for a little while. I know no reason why all these ends might not be joined together.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and hasted and set the city on fire.

i. e. Not all of it, as appears both from ver. 28, and because then they had lost that prey which God had allowed them; but some part of it, enough to raise a smoke, and give notice to their brethren of their success.

⁴ Eccl. 9. 12.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the smoke of the city ascended up to heaven, and they had no †power to flee this way or that way: and the people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

No power, or, place; for so the Hebrew word is oft used, as Numb. ii. 17; Neh. vii. 4; Job xxxvii. 7; Psal. civ. 25; Isa. xxiii. 18; lvi. 5.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

All Israel, i. e. all the Israelites there present, or all those who seemed to flee away before.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them; so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that side: and they smote them, so that they †let none of them remain or escape.

The other; they who lay in ambush. So their late success was a real mischief to them, as being the occasion of their total ruin.

23 And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

Reserving him to a peculiar and more ignominious punishment, for the terror of the other kings, who were the chief causes of all that opposition and disturbance which Israel met with in gaining the possession of the Promised Land.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

i. e. The inhabitants of it, the men, who through age or infirmity were unfit for war, and the women, ver. 25.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of Ai.

Not strictly, but largely so called, who were now in Ai, either as constant and settled inhabitants, or as sojourners, and such as came to them for their help, such as being confederate with them are esteemed as one with them; for it is evident that the men of Beth-el are included in this number, ver. 17, the Israelites who took this number being unable to distinguish who belonged to the one city, and who to the other.

26 For Joshua drew not his hand back, where-with he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

Either, 1. He ceased not to fight with that hand. Or, 2. He kept his hand and spear in the same posture, both stretched out and lifted up, as a sign both to encourage them, and to direct them to go on in the work. See on ver. 18.

27 Only the cattle and the spoil of that city Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

For ever, or, for a long time, as that word oft signifies, as Gen. vi. 3; Isa. xlii. 14; for that it was after some ages rebuilt, may seem from Neh. xi. 31, unless that were another city built near the former, there being some little difference in the name also.

29 And the king of Ai he hanged on a tree until eventide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcase down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise thereon a great heap of stones, that remaineth unto this day.

He dealt more severely with the kings of Canaan than with the people, partly because the abominable wickedness of that people was not restrained and punished, (as it should have been,) but countenanced and encouraged by their evil examples and administrations; and partly because they were the principal authors of the destruction of their own people, by engaging them in an obstinate opposition against the Israelites. That they should take his carcase down from the tree, according to God's command in that case, Deut. xxi. 22, 23. He chose the entering of the gate of the city, either as most commodious, now especially when all the city within the gate was already turned into a heap of stones and rubbish; or because this was the usual place of judgment, and therefore proper to bear the monument of God's just sentence against him, not without reflection upon that injustice which he had been guilty of in that place.

30 ¶ Then Joshua built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal, *to wit, after the taking of Ai. For they were obliged to do this when they were brought over Jordan into the land of Canaan, Deut. xi. 29; xxvii. 2, 3, which is not to be understood strictly, as if it were to be done the same moment or day; for it is manifest they were first to be circumcised, and to eat the passover, which they did, and which was the work of some days; but as soon as they had opportunity to do it, which was now when these two great frontier cities were taken and destroyed, and thereby the coast cleared, and the bordering people under great consternation and confusion, that all the Israelites might securely march thither. And indeed this work was fit to be done as soon as might be, that thereby they might renew their covenant with, and profess their subjection to, that God by whose help alone they could expect success in their great and difficult enterprise. Built an altar, to wit, for the offering of sacrifices, as appears from the following verse, and from Deut. xxvii. 5—7. In Mount Ebal. Why not on Mount Gerizim also? Answer. Because God's altar was to be but in one place, Deut. xii. 13, 14, and this place was appointed to be Mount Ebal, Deut. xxvii. 4, 5, which also seems most proper for it, that in that place whence the curses of the law were denounced against sinners, there might also be the tokens and means of grace, and peace and reconciliation with God, for the removing of the curses, and the procuring of God's blessing unto sinners.*

31 As Moses the servant of the LORD commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and they offered thereon burnt offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace offerings.

32 ¶ And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

Not upon the stones of the altar, which were to be rough and unpolished, ver. 31, but upon other stones, smooth and plastered, as is manifest from Deut. xxvii. 2. A copy of the law of Moses; not certainly the whole five books of Moses, for what stones and time would have sufficed for this! nor the blessings and the curses here following, which never are nor can without great impropriety be called the law of Moses, seeing they presuppose the law, and the observation or transgression thereof, to which they belong, only as rewards of the one, and punishments of the other: but the most weighty and substantial parts of the law, as may be gathered from the laws which are mentioned, and to the violaters whereof the curses are applied, Deut. xxvii. 15, &c., and especially the law of the ten commandments.

33 And all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark and on that side before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well * the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount Ebal; *as Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

All Israel, i. e. the whole congregation, old and young, male and female, as it follows, ver. 35. On this side the ark, and on that side, i. e. some on one side of it, and some on the other. Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal were in the tribe of Ephraim, not far from Shechem, as appears both from Scripture, Deut. .xi. 29, 30; xxvii. 12; Judg. ix. 7, and from other authors who lived in those parts, as Josephus and the Jewish doctors. That they should bless, or curse, which is easily understood out of the following verse, and from Deut. xxvii. 13, &c.

34 And afterward ^b he read all the words of the law, * the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law.

Afterward; after the altar was built, and the stones plastered and writ upon. He read, i. e. he commanded the priests or Levites to read, Deut. xxvii. 14. The blessings and cursings; which words come in not by way of explanation, as if the words of the law were nothing else besides the blessings and curses; but by way of addition, to note that these were read over and above the words of the law.

He saith not, according to all that was written upon those stones, but in the book of the law, which shows the mistake of them that think the same things were both read and written upon these stones.

35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, * with the women, and the little ones, and * the strangers that † were conversant among them.

There was not a word which Joshua read not; therefore he read not the blessings and curses only, as some think, but the whole law, as the manner was when all Israel, men and women, were assembled together, as we read, Deut. xxxi. 10—12. That were conversant among them, i. e. who were proselytes, for no others can be supposed to be with them at this time.

CHAP. IX.

The kings of Canaan hear of Joshua's exploits; consult together, and conclude to fight against Israel, 1, 2. The Gibeonites, feigning themselves to be of a far country, obtain a league, 3—15. The craft is discovered; the promise which was confirmed with an oath remains firm, 16—20. But for a punishment, they are condemned to perpetual slavery, 21—27.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of * the great sea over against Lebanon, ^b the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof;

2 That they * gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one † accord.

They gathered themselves together; not actually, as the following history shows; but they entered into a league or confederation to do this.

3 ¶ And when the inhabitants of ^d Gibeon * heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

Or, but when the inhabitants; for he shows that these took another and a wiser course. Gibeon; a great and royal city of the Hivites, Josh. x. 2; xi. 19.

4 They did work wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up;

Ambassadors, sent from a far country, as they say, ver. 6. 5 And old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua † unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come from a far country: now therefore make ye a league with us.

Gilgal; the place of their head-quarters. To the men of Israel, to wit, those who used to meet in council with Joshua, to whom it belonged to make leagues, as it here follows, even the princes of the congregation; not the common people, as appears both from ver. 15, 18, 19, 21, and from common usage of all ambassadors, who generally deliver their message to and treat with princes, not people. And the Hebrew word isch, here used, sometimes notes men of eminency and dignity. Now therefore, because we are not of this people, whom, as we are informed, you are obliged utterly to destroy; that which appeared sufficiently, by the Israelites' practice in destroying the Amorites beyond Jordan, and the people of Jericho and Ai, without any allowance for sex or age; and by common rumour, and the report of the Israelites and other persons who dwelt among them, or had converse with them, as Rahab and all her kindred; and by the nature of the thing, because they were to possess that whole land, and were not to mix themselves with the people of it.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the ^g Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and ^h how shall we make a league with you?

The Hivites, i. e. the Gibeonites, who were Hivites, Josh. xi. 19. Among us, i. e. in this land, and so are of that people with whom we are forbidden to make any league or covenant, Exod. xxiii. 32, 33; Deut. vii. 2; xx. 15, 16.

8 And they said unto Joshua, ⁱ We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

We are thy servants; we desire a league with you upon your own terms; we are ready to accept of any conditions. Who are ye? and from whence come ye? for this free and general concession of theirs gave Joshua just cause to suspect that they were of the cursed Canaanites.

9 And they said unto him, ^k From a very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the LORD thy God: for we have ^l heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

Because of the name of the Lord; being moved thereunto by the report of his great and glorious nature and works; so they gave them hopes that they would embrace their religion. All that he did in Egypt: they cunningly mention those things only which were done some time since, and say nothing of the dividing of Jordan, nor of the destruction of Jericho and Ai, as if they lived so far off that the fame of those things had not yet reached them.

10 And ^m all that he did to the kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth.

11 Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take victuals † with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants: therefore now make ye a league with us.

12 This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy:

13 And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

14 And ¶ the men took of their victuals, and asked not counsel at the mouth of the LORD.

The men, i. e. the princes, as before, ver. 6. Took of their victuals; not from their want or any desire they could have to such unpleasant and unwholesome food; nor in a ceremony usual in making leagues, for that was not now done, but in the next verse; but that they might examine the truth of what they said. Asked not counsel at the mouth of the LORD, as they ought to have done upon all such weighty and doubtful occasions. So they are accused of rashness, and neglect of their duty. For though it is probable, if God had been consulted, he would have consented to the sparing of the Gibeonites; yet it should have been done with more caution, and an obligation left upon them to embrace the true religion, which here was omitted.

15 And Joshua °made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes of the congregation swore unto them.

To let them live, i. e. that they would not destroy them. Some question whether this league was lawful and obliging, because it is contrary to a positive and precedent law of God, by which they were enjoined to make no peace with them, but utterly to destroy them, Exod. xxiii. 32; xxxiv. 12, &c. But this law seems to admit of some exception and favourable interpretation, and that taken from the reason and soul of that law; which was this, that the Israelites might not be tainted with their idolatry and other abominations by cohabitation with them; and therefore when that reason ceased, i. e. if they were willing to relinquish their possessions and idolatry, and other wickedness, and to embrace the true religion, they might be spared. And though this law was delivered in general terms, because God foresaw that the Israelites would be most prone to err on that hand, by sparing those whom they should destroy; yet that it was to be understood with an exception of penitents and true converts might easily be gathered, both from the example of Rahab, and from the tenor of Divine threatenings, which, though absolutely delivered, allow of this exception; as appears from Jer. xviii. 7, 8; Jonah iii., iv., and from the great kindness and favour which God hath manifested unto all true penitents, in delivering them from evils threatened to them, and inflicted upon others; which kindness of God we also are obliged to imitate by virtue of that natural and moral law of God implanted in us, and revealed to us, to which such positive commands as this of killing the Canaanites must give place. And that this league was lawful and obliging, may seem probable, 1. Because Joshua and all the princes upon the review concluded it so to be, and spared them accordingly, ver. 19, 20, 22, 23. 2. Because God punished the violation of it long after, 2 Sam. xxi. 1. 3. Because God is said to have hardened the hearts of all other cities not to seek peace with Israel, that so he might utterly destroy them, Josh. xi. 19, 20, which seems to imply that their utter destruction did not necessarily come upon them by virtue of any absolute and peremptory command of God to destroy them, but by their own obstinate hardness, whereby they neglected and refused to make peace with the Israelites. Object. This league was grounded upon a deceit and error of the persons, which also they had entered a caution against, ver. 7. Answ. Their supposition that they were Canaanites was indeed a part of the foregoing discourse, ver. 7, and the Israelites rested satisfied with their answer, and believed they were not, and so entered into the league; but that league was absolute, not suspended upon that or any other condition; and the error was not about the persons, but about the country and people to which they belonged, which was not material to this contract, no more than it is to a contract of marriage, that the one person believed the other to be of another country or family than indeed they were.

16 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them.

At the end of three days, i. e. at the last of them, or upon the third day, as it is said ver. 17; so this phrase is elsewhere used, as Deut. xiv. 28; xxxi. 10. Or it may be properly understood, that after three days they heard this; and on the day after they heard this, they came to their cities, as is said, ver. 17.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim.

Cities which were subject to Gibeon, which was the royal city, Josh. x. 2.

18 And the children of Israel smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes.

Partly, from that proneness which is in people to censure the actions of their rulers; partly, because they might think the princes by their rashness had brought them into a snare, that they could neither kill them for fear of the oath, nor spare them for fear of God's command to the contrary; and partly, for their desire of the possession and spoil of these cities, of which they thought themselves hereby deprived.

19 But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them.

They plead not the lawfulness or the prudence of the action, but only the obligation of an oath; of which, though it was procured by fraud, they perceived the people sufficiently sensible. We may not touch them, i. e. not hurt them, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xxvi. 11; Psal. cv. 15; cxliv. 5; or not smite them, as is said, ver. 18.

20 This we will do to them; we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we swore unto them.

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all the congregation; as the princes had promised them.

i. e. Let them be public servants, and employed in the meanest offices and drudgeries, (such as this was, thus one kind being put for all the rest, as it is Deut. xxix. 11.) for the use and benefit of the congregation; to do this partly for the sacrifices and services of the house of God, as it is expressed, ver. 23, which otherwise the Israelites themselves must have done, partly for the service of the camp or body of the people, and sometimes upon occasion even to particular Israelites; whence they are made bond-men, which is † Heb. in your hand.

mentioned as a thing distinct from their service in the house of God, ver. 23. And so they are in effect stripped of all their possessions, whereby the main ground of the people's quarrel was taken away. As the princes had promised them; or, because or seeing that (as the Hebrew word sometimes signifies) the princes (i. e. we ourselves; they speak of themselves in the third person, which is very frequent in the Hebrew language) had promised it to them, to wit, that they should live, and confirmed their promise by an oath. So the princes speaking here to the people allege the promise or oath of the princes when they met among themselves, and apart from the people. And this change of persons may possibly arise from hence, because some of the princes who were present in the assembly of the princes might now be absent upon some occasion. And this clause relates not to the next words, which are fitly enclosed within a parenthesis, but to the foregoing clause, let them live, because the princes have promised them their lives.

22 ¶ And Joshua called for them, and he spake unto them, saying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us?

23 Now therefore ye are cursed, and there shall none of you be freed from being bondmen, and hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God.

Ye are cursed; you shall not escape the curse of God, which by Divine sentence belongs to all the Canaanites, who are a people devoted by God to ruin, but only change the quality of it; you shall feel that curse of bondage and servitude, which is proper to your race by virtue of that ancient decree, Gen. ix. 25; you shall live indeed, but in a poor, vile, and miserable condition. There shall none of you be freed from being bond-men; the slavery which is upon you shall be entailed to your posterity. Hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God: this only service they mention here, because it was their principal and most durable servitude, being first in the tabernacle, and then in the temple, whence they were called Nethinims, 1 Chron. ix. 2; Ezra ii. 43; whereas their servitude to the whole congregation would in a great measure cease when the Israelites were dispersed to their several habitations.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

We are in thine hand, i. e. in thy power to use as thou wilt. We refer ourselves to thee and thy own piety and probity, and faithfulness to thy word and oath; if thou wilt destroy thy humble suppliants, we submit.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

So as was said ver. 23, and so as here follows.

27 And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose.

By which it appears that they were not only to do this service in God's house, but upon all other occasions, as the congregation needed or required their help.

CHAP. X.

Five of the kings of Canaan, afraid of Joshua, are angry with the Gibeonites, and wage war against them; they send to Joshua for succours, 1-5. He rescues them, 6-10. God casts down hail-stones upon the enemy, 11. Joshua prays to God, and commands the sun to stand still, which it does for the space of a day, 12-15. The five kings hide themselves in caves, where Joshua causeth them to be shut up, afterwards to be brought forth, scornfully used, and hanged, and thrown into a cave by Makkedah, 16-27. This place taken, the king, city, and all therein are burnt, 28. Joshua doth the same to Libnah and Lachish, 29-32; to Gezer, Eglon, Hebron, Debir, and all the land, 33-42. Joshua returns to Gilgal, 43.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

i. e. Were conversant with them, had yielded themselves to their disposal, submitted themselves to their laws, had mingled interests with them.

2 That they feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

They feared, i. e. he and his people, the king being spoken of ver. 1, as a public person representing all his people. Or, he and the following kings, ver. 3. But this fear is mentioned, ver. 2, as the cause why he sent to those kings. As one of the royal cities; either, 1. Really a royal city, the Hebrew particle caph oft signifying the truth of a thing, as Hos. iv. 4; v. 10, and oft elsewhere. Or, 2. Equal to one of the royal cities, though it had no king, but seems to be governed aristocratically by their elders, Josh. ix. 11.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

He sent, either because he was superior to them in power or dignity, or because he was nearest the danger, and most forward in the work.

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: for it hath made peace with Joshua and with the children of Israel.

5 Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon, and made war against it.

Amorites; this name being here taken largely or generally for any of the Canaanites, as is frequent; for, to speak strictly, the citizens of Hebron, here mentioned, ver. 3, were Hittites; thus the Gibeonites, who were Hivites, Josh. xi. 19, are called Amorites, 2 Sam. xxi. 2. It is reasonably supposed that the Amorites, being numerous and victorious beyond Jordan, did pour forth colonies or forces into the land of Canaan, and there subdued divers places, and so communicated their name to all the rest.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua to the camp to Gilgal, saying, Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites that dwell in the mountains are gathered together against us.

The men of Gibeon sent, or, had sent, when their enemies were drawn towards them, which they could easily learn. Slack not thy hand; do not neglect nor delay to help us. From thy servants, whom thou art obliged to protect both in duty, as thou art our master and ruler; and by thy own interest, we being part of thy possessions; and in ingenuity, because we have given ourselves to thee, and put ourselves under thy protection. In the mountains; in the mountainous country.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, ^{h ch. 8. 1.} and ^h all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

Having, no doubt, asked advice of God first, which is implied by the answer God gives to him, ver. 8. And all the mighty men, or, even, or that is, as this particle is oft used, as hath been noted before. So it seems put here by way of explication and restriction; having said all the people of war, he now adds, even all the mighty men, &c., i. e. an army of the most valiant men picked out from the rest; for it is not probable, either that he would take so many hundred thousands with him, which would have hindered one another, or that he would leave the camp without an army to defend it.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, ^{i ch. 11. 6.} ^{Judg. 4. 14.} ^{k ch. 1. 5.} Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; ^k there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all night.

Though assured by God of the victory, yet he useth all prudent means, and surpriseth them. It is not said that he went from Gilgal to Gibeon in a night's space, but only that he travelled all night; unto which you may add part either of the foregoing or of the following day.

10 And the LORD ^ldiscomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up ^mto Beth-horon, and smote them to ⁿAzekah, and unto Makkedah.

Slew them, or, he slew them; either God or Israel; for God's work is described ver. 11. At Gibeon, Heb. in Gibeon; not in the city, but in the territory belonging to it; as Joshua is said to be in Jericho, Josh. v. 13.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, ^othat the LORD cast down great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

Great stones, i. e. hailstones of extraordinary greatness and hardness, cast down with that certainty as to hit the Canaanites, and not their pursuers the Israelites, and with that force as to kill them. Josephus affirms that thunder and lightning were mixed with the hail, which may seem probable from Hab. iii. 11.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, ^pSun, ^qstand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, ^rMoon, in the valley of ^sAjalon.

Joshua spake to the Lord, to wit, in way of petition for this miracle; being moved to beg it out of zeal to destroy God's enemies, and directed to it by the motion of God's Spirit; and receiving a gracious answer, and being filled with holy confidence of the success, he speaks the following words before the people, that they might be witnesses of it.

In the sight of Israel, i. e. in the presence and audience of Israel; seeing being sometimes put for hearing, as Gen. xlii. 1, compared with Acts vii. 12; although these words may seem rather to be joined with the following, thus, In the sight of Israel stand still, O sun, &c., which sense the Hebrew accents favour. Upon Gibeon, i. e. over and above or against Gibeon, i. e. in that place and posture in which now it stands towards and looks upon Gibeon. Let it not go down lower, and by degrees, out of the sight of Gibeon. It may seem that the sun was declining; and Joshua perceiving that his work was great and long, and his time but short, begs of God the lengthening out of the day, and that the sun and moon might stop their course, and keep the place in which they now were. In the valley, or, upon the valley; as before, upon Gibeon; the preposition being the same there and here. Ajalon; either, 1. That Ajalon which was in the tribe of Zebulun, Judg. xii. 12, northward from Gibeon. Or rather, 2. That Ajalon which was in the tribe of Dan, Josh. xix. 42; Judg. i. 35, westward from Gibeon, For, 1. This was nearer Gibeon than the other. 2. This was most agreeable to the course of the sun and moon, which is from east to west. 3. This way the battle went, from Gibeon westward to Ajalon, and so further westward, even to Lachish, ver. 31. And he mentions two places, Gibeon and Ajalon, not as if the sun stood over the one, and the moon over the other, which is absurd and ridiculous to affirm, especially these places being so near the one to the other; but partly to vary the phrase, as is common in poetical passages; partly because he was in his march in the pursuit of his enemies to pass from Gibeon to Ajalon; and he begs that he may have the help and benefit of longer light to pursue them, and to that end that the sun might stand still, and the moon also; not that he needed the moon's light when he had the sun's, but because it was fit, either that both the sun and moon should go, or that both should stand still, to prevent disorder and confusion in the heavenly bodies.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. ^rIs not ^{r 2 Sam. 1. 18.} this written in the book of ^sJasher? So ^sthe sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hastened not to go down about a whole day. ^sOr, the upright.

*Stood still, Heb. was silent, i. e. still, as this phrase is commonly used, as 1 Sam. xiv. 9; Psal. iv. 4; Jonah i. 12; the cessation of the tongue's motion being put synecdochically for the cessation of any other motion or action. Until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies, i. e. till they had utterly destroyed them, as is mentioned in the following chapter. The book of Jasher; either of a man so called, or of the righteous or upright, wherein possibly the memorable actions of worthy men were recorded, and this amongst the rest. And this book was written and published before Joshua wrote his, and so is fitly alleged here. But this, as well as some few other historical books, is lost, not being a canonical book, and therefore not preserved by the Jews with the same care as they were. So the sun stood still: here is no mention of the moon, because the sun's standing was the only thing which Joshua desired and needed; and the moon's standing he desired only by accident, to prevent irregularity in the motions of those celestial lights. Some take this to be but a poetical phrase and relation of the victory, that Joshua did so many and such great things in that day, as if the sun and moon had stood still and given him longer time for it. But the frequent repetition and magnificent declaration of this wonder manifestly confutes that fancy. That the sun and moon did really stand still, is affirmed, Hab. iii. 11; Sirach xlvi. 5, 6. And if it seem strange to any one that so wonderful a work, observed by the whole world that then was, should not be mentioned in any heathen writers; he must needs be satisfied, if he considers, that it is confessed by the generality of writers, heathens and others, that there is no certain history or monument in heathen authors of any thing done before the Trojan wars, which was a thousand years after Joshua's time; and that all time before that is called by the learnedest heathens the *uncertain, unknown, or obscure time. In the midst of heaven; not mathematically, in the very meridian or middle part of that hemisphere; but morally, and with some latitude, when it had begun a little to decline, the consideration whereof seems to have given Joshua occasion for his desire. About a whole day, i. e. for the space of a whole day. Understand an artificial day, between sun-rising and sun-setting; for that was the day which Joshua needed and desired, a day to give him light for his work.

^s See Is. 36. 14 And there was 'no day like that before it or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for 'the LORD fought for Israel.

There was no day like that, to wit, in those parts of the world in which he here speaks, and about which the comparison is here made: vain therefore is that objection, that the days are longer near the northern and southern poles, where they are constantly longer at certain seasons, and that by the order of nature; whereas the length of this day was purely contingent, and granted by God in answer to Joshua's prayer, as is here added. Object. In Hezekiah's time, and at his prayer, there was a day which may seem to have been longer; for the sun went back ten degrees in ten hours, and then returned again ten degrees in ten hours, and so it was twenty hours longer than a common day, and so longer than this. Answer. It is not certain either that each degree designed an hour, and not rather half an hour, or a quarter, as others think; or that the sun returned those ten degrees as slowly as he went down before or after. Besides, it was now near summer solstice, when the day was longest, and about fourteen hours; and that being doubled, the artificial day was twenty-eight hours; and because there is not the least evidence that Hezekiah's day was longer, but rather of the contrary, it is much more reasonable to believe this Scripture assertion, than to deny or question upon mere suppositions or idle conjectures. Hearkened unto the voice of a man, to wit, in such a manner to alter the course of nature, and of the heavenly bodies, that a man might have more time to pursue and destroy his enemies. The Lord fought for Israel: this is added as the reason why God was so ready to answer Joshua's petition herein, because he was engaged and resolved to fight for Israel, and that in a more than ordinary manner.

^u ver. 43. 15 ¶ And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

Not immediately, or upon the same day, but after he had despatched the matter which here follows; as appears by ver. 43, where the very same words are repeated, to show that that was the meaning of them. And they are put here to close the general discourse of the fight, which begun ver. 10, and ends here; which being done, he particularly describes some remarkable passages, and closeth them with the same words.

16 But these five kings fled, and hid themselves in a cave at Makkedah.

The five kings named above, ver. 3. In a cave, as a place of most secrecy or security; but there is no escaping the eye or hand of God, who here brought them into a net of their own making. At Makkedah, Heb. in Makkedah; not in the city, for that was not yet taken; but in the territory of it; as in Gibeon, ver. 10.

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them:

19 And stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and †smite the hindmost of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

Stay ye not; lose not your opportunity by your sloth or negligence. The hindmost of them; their rereward, all whom you can overtake. To enter into their cities, whereby they will recover their strength, and renew the war. The Lord hath delivered them into your hand; your work will be easy, God hath already done the work to your hands.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

i. e. Joshua by the children of Israel; or the children of Israel, i. e. a party of them, by the command, direction, and encouragement of Joshua; for Joshua himself went not with them, but abode in the siege before Makkedah, ver. 21

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: ^x none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

To the camp; to the body of the army which were encamped there with Joshua to besiege that place. None moved his tongue; not so much as a dog, as it is expressed, Exod. xi. 7. Not only their men of war could not find their hands, but they were all so confounded, that they could not move their tongues in way of insultation and reproach, as doubtless they did when the Israelites were repulsed and smitten at Ai; but now they were silenced as well as conquered; they durst no more provoke nor injure the Israelites.

22 Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, ^y put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.

Put your feet upon the necks of these kings: this he did not from pride and contempt of their dignity in itself; but, partly, as a punishment of their impious rebellion against their sovereign Lord; partly, in pursuance of that curse of servility due to all this people, Gen. ix. 25; partly, as a token to assure his captains that God would subdue the proudest of them all under their feet; and partly, to oblige and teach his people severely to execute the judgment of God upon them, and not to spare any of them, either out of a foolish pity, or out of respect to their dignity, as Saul afterwards spared Agag to his own ruin.

25 And Joshua said unto them, ^z Fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong and of good courage: for ^a thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and hanged them on five trees: and they ^b were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

He hanged them, after they were dead, as a brand of infamy, and for the terror and instruction of others.

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they ^c took them down off the trees, and cast them into the cave wherein they had been hid, and laid great stones in the cave's mouth, which remain until this very day.

Laid great stones in the cave's mouth; that neither wild beasts could come at them to devour them, nor any of their people to give them honourable burial.

28 ¶ And that day Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof he utterly destroyed, them, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain: and he did to the king of Makkedah as he did unto the king of Jericho.

d ch. 6. 21.

That day, on which the sun stood still, or on which the five kings were hanged. Nor is it strange that so much work was done, and places so far distant taken, in one day, when the day was so long, and the Canaanites struck with such a terror. The king of Jericho was hanged, or otherwise killed, as appears from Josh. vi. 2.

29 Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto Libnah, and fought against Libnah:

All Israel, to wit, who were with him in this expedition. Libnah, a city of Judah, Josh. xv. 42.

30 And the LORD delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

All the souls, i. e. the human souls; for all the cattle they had for a prey.

31 ¶ And Joshua passed from Libnah, and all Israel with him, unto Lachish, and encamped against it, and fought against it:

32 And the LORD delivered Lachish into the hand of Israel, which took it on the second day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah.

On the second day; either the day after his first laying of the siege, or after the taking of Makkedah and Libnah.

33 ¶ Then Horam king of Gezer came up to help Lachish; and Joshua smote him and his people, until he had left him none remaining.

Gezer; either that in Ephraim, of which Josh. xvi. 3; Judg. i. 29; but that seems too remote from the other places; or rather, that in Judah, which was near Lachish, 1 Chron. xiv. 16, whose king therefore was more capable, and more obliged to help them for his own sake.

34 ¶ And from Lachish Joshua passed unto Eglon, and all Israel with him; and they encamped against it, and fought against it:

Eglon, a city of Judah, Josh. xv. 39.

35 And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachish.

On that day on which they first attempted it.

36 And Joshua went up from Eglon, and all Israel with him, unto Hebron; and they fought against it:

Which though they took and killed all its inhabitants, yet they did not keep it; and therefore when Joshua and his army had forsaken it, and were returned to Gilgal, it seems the giants and other Canaanites being burnt out, or driven away from their former seats, planted and fortified themselves there; which made it necessary for Caleb to take it a second time, as is recorded Josh. xv. 14; Judg. i. 10. Or this is the same story, and the same conquest of Hebron, which is here generally related, and afterwards repeated, and more particularly described, Josh. xv. 13, 14.

37 And they took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining, according to all that he had done to Eglon; but destroyed it utterly, and all the souls that were therein.

The king thereof; either him mentioned before, ver. 23, whose death is here repeated in this account of the general destruction of all the inhabitants of that place, or his heir or successor. All the cities thereof, which were subject to its jurisdiction; this being, it seems, a royal city, as Gibeon was, ver. 2, and having cities under it as that had, Josh. ix. 17.

38 ¶ And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to Debir; and fought against it:

f See ch. 15. 15. Judg. 1. 11.

He is said to return thither, not as if he had been there before, but because having gone as far westward and southward as he thought fit, even as far as Gaza, ver. 41, he now returned towards Gilgal, which lay northward and eastward from him, and in his return fell upon Debir: see on Josh. xv. 15.

39 And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof; and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining: as he had done to Hebron, so he did to Debir, and to the king thereof; as he had done also to Libnah, and to her king.

40 ¶ So Joshua smote all the country of the hills, and of the south, and of the vale, and of the springs, and all their kings: he left none remaining, but utterly destroyed all that breathed, as the LORD God of Israel commanded.

g Deut. 20. 16, 17.

All that breathed, i. e. all mankind, by a synecdoche; for they reserved the cattle for their own uses. As the Lord God of Israel commanded: this is added for the vindication of the Israelites, whom God would not have to suffer in their reputation for executing his commands; and therefore he acquits them of that implacable hatred and heinous cruelty which they might be thought guilty of, and ascribes it to himself and his own just indignation against this most wicked people.

41 And Joshua smote them from Kadesh-barnea even unto Gaza, and all the country of Goshen, even unto Gibeon.

h Gen. 10. 19. i ch. 11. 16.

Kadesh-barnea lay in the south of Canaan, Numb. xxxiv. 4; Deut. i. 19; Josh. xv. 3. Gaza was in the south-west of Canaan. So he here signifies that Joshua did in this expedition subdue all those parts which lay south and west from Gilgal. Goshen; not that Goshen in Egypt, but another in Judah, Josh. xi. 16; xv. 51.

42 And all these kings and their land did Joshua take at one time, because the LORD God of Israel fought for Israel.

k ver. 14.

43 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

b ch. 19. 15.

Hazor, the chief city of all those parts, ver. 10. Had heard those things: this was a remarkable instance of the wisdom and goodness of Divine Providence, which so governed the minds and hearts of the Canaanites, that they were not at all united under one king, but divided amongst many petty kings; and next, that these did not all unanimously join their counsels and forces together to oppose the Israelites at their first entrance, which their own wisdom and interest obliged them to do; but quietly suffered the destruction of their brethren, thereby preparing the way for their own. Shimron, called Shimron-meron, Josh. xii. 20. Achshaph, a place in the tribe of Asher, the furthest part of the land toward the north and west.

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of °Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders ^d of Dor on the west,

On the north of the mountains, Heb. on the north (which may be the general designation of all the particular places following, that they were in the northern parts of Canaan, as those mentioned Josh. x. were in the southern parts) in the mountain; either in or near the famous mountain of Lebanon, called the mountain by way of eminency; or in the mountainous country. South of Chinneroth, Heb. in the plain lying southward from Chinneroth, or the lake of Gennesaret. See Deut. iii. 17; Luke v. 1. Dor; a place upon the coast of the midland sea.

3 And to the Canaanite on the east and on the west, and to the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Jebusite in the mountains, °and to the Hivite under 'Hermon ^e in the land of Mizpeh.

The Canaanites properly so called lived part of them on the east near Jordan, and part on the west near the sea, and both are here united. The Hivite under Hermon; that dwelt under Mount Hermon in the north of Canaan, whereby they are distinguished from those Hivites who lived in Gibeon; of which before. Mizpeh; that Mizpeh which was in the northern part of Gilead; of which Gen. xxxi. 49; Judg. xi. 29. But there were other cities called by that name, which signifying a watching-place, might be easily applied to several places of good prospect. Besides this, there is one Mizpeh of Judah, Josh. xv. 38; another of Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 26; a third in Moab, 1 Sam. xxii. 3.

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, ^h even as the sand that is upon the sea shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.

5 And when all these kings were † met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

The waters of Merom; a lake made by the river Jordan in the northern part of it, which was in the territory of the king of Shimron, or Shimron-meron, and near Hazor, Jabin's royal city, and almost in the middle of these confederate kings.

6 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, ⁱ Be not afraid because of them: for to-morrow about this time will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou shalt ^k hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

Hough their horses, i. e. cut their hamstrings, that they may be unfit for war. For God forbade them to have or keep many horses, Deut. xvii. 16, now especially, that they might not trust to their horses, as men are apt to do, nor distrust God for want of so necessary a help in battle; nor ascribe the conquest of the land to their own strength, but wholly to God, by whose power alone a company of raw and unexperienced footmen were able to subdue so potent a people, which besides their great numbers, and giants, and walled cities, had the advantage of many thousands of horses and chariots.

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him, against them by the waters of Merom suddenly; and they fell upon them.

When they least expected them, intending there to refresh, and prepare, and order themselves for the offensive war which they designed.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them unto || great Zidon, and unto ^{||} † Misrephoth-maim, and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

Zidon, a great and famous city in the north-west part of Canaan, and upon the sea. Misrephoth-maim, a place not far from Zidon, supposed to be so called from the salt or glass which they made there. The valley of Mizpeh, under Mount Hermon, as appears by comparing this with ver. 3, 17, where it seems to be called the valley of Lebanon. This lay on the east, as Zidon did on the west; and so it seems they fled several ways, and the Israelites also divided themselves into two bodies, one pursuing east, and the other west.

9 And Joshua did unto them ^m as the LORD bade him: he houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor, and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

Smote the king thereof; either in the former battle, though it be mentioned here; or rather in his royal city, to which he fled out of the battle. The head of all those kingdoms; not of all Canaan, but of all those who were confederate with him in this expedition.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them: there was not † any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

There was not any, i. e. no human person.

12 And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword, and he utterly destroyed them, ⁿ as Moses the servant of the LORD commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still † in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor only; that did Joshua burn.

In their strength, Heb. with (for so this preposition is oft used, as Exod. xxxv. 12; Lev. ii. 2; Ezek. xvi. 37, &c.) their fence or fences, walls or bulwarks, i. e. which were not utterly ruined together with their walls in the taking of them. Save Hazor only; which though taken by the Israelites, was not so much destroyed as other places were. That did Joshua burn, because this city began the war; and being the chief and royal city, might renew the war, if the Canaanites should ever seize upon it.

14 And all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.

15 ¶ As the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so ^p did Moses command Joshua, and ^q so did Joshua; † he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 So Joshua took all that land, ^r the hills, and all the south country, ^s and all the land of Goshen, and the valley, and the plain, and the mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;

All that land, of Canaan, whose parts here follow. The hill, or, the mountain, i. e. the mountainous country, to wit, of Judea, as may seem, 1. Because in the following enumeration he begins in the south parts, where there was an eminent mountain, Numb. xiii. 17. 2. Because a considerable part of Judea was called the hilly or the mountainous country, Luke i. 39, 65, which is not likely to be omitted in this particular description of the land; the rather because Hebron, one of the places taken by Joshua, chap. x. 36, 37, was in the mountain of Judah, Josh. xx. 7. 3. Because this is here distinguished from the mountain of Israel, and therefore most likely to be the mountain of Judah, especially if you compare this with ver. 21, where having mentioned the mountain in general, from which Joshua cut off the Anakims, he comes to particularize, and names only two, all the mountain of Judah, and all the mountain of Israel. All the south country, i. e. not only the mountainous part, but all the country of Judea, which lay in the southern part of Canaan, and oft comes under the name of the south, as Numb. xiii. 22, 29; xxi. 1; Josh. x. 40; xviii. 5, &c. The land of Goshen; of which see Josh. x. 41. The vale; the low countries. The plain; the fields or champaign grounds. The mountain of Israel; either, 1. Some one particular and eminent mountain, possibly the hill of Samaria, mentioned 1 Kings xvi. 24; or rather, 2. The mountains or mountainous country of Israel. See the second note on this verse. The vale of the same, i. e. of Israel.

17 ^tEven from || the mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon under mount Hermon: and ^uall their kings he took, and smote them, and slew them.

That goeth up to Seir, i. e. to the country of Seir or Edom, to wit, that part of it which was south from Judea, not that which was eastward from it, as appears from hence, that here, as also Josh. xii. 7, is mention of the two extreme bounds of the land conquered by Joshua; whereof the other which follows being in the north, this must needs be in the south of the land. Baal-gad; a part of Mount Lebanon.

18 || Joshua made war a long time with all those kings.

For divers years together, as is evident by the following history, and by comparing Deut. ii. 14 with Josh. xiv. 7, &c. And this is here expressed, lest it should be thought that as all these wars are here recorded in a short narration, so they were despatched in a short time. And God would have the land to be conquered gradually, for many weighty reasons: 1. Lest the sudden extirpation of those nations should have made a great part of the land desert, and thereby have increased the numbers of wild beasts, Deut. vii. 22. 2. Lest being done suddenly and easily, it should soon be forgotten and despised, as the nature of man is apt to do in those cases. 3. That by long exercise the Israelites might grow skilful in the art of war, which was very useful and needful for them in that land. 4. For the trial and exercise of their patience, and courage, and trust in God. 5. To oblige them to the greater care to please and obey God, whom they yet needed for their help against their enemies.

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel, save ^xthe Hivites the inhabitants of Gibeon: all other they took in battle.

To wit, all that were taken by Joshua, were taken by the sword, and therefore it is no wonder that the war was long, when the enemy was so obstinate.

20 For ^yit was of the LORD to harden their hearts, that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour, but that he might destroy them, ^zas the LORD commanded Moses.

It was the design of God's providence not to soften their hearts to a compliance with the Israelites, but to give them up to their own animosity, pride, confidence, and stubbornness; that so both their abominable and incorrigible wickedness might be severely punished, and that the Israelites might not be mixed with them, but be entire among themselves in the possession of the land. Compare Deut. ii. 30, and for the phrase, Exod. vii. 13; ix. 12; xiv. 17.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut off ^athe Anakims from the mountains, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

At that time, i. e. in that war; for it cannot be meant of any particular and short time, because the work here related was done in divers times and years. The Anakims; a race of giants, of which see Numb. xiii. 33. From the mountain, or, mountains, the singular number for the plural: these barbarous and monstrous persons either chose to live in the dens or caves, which were frequent in the mountains of those parts; or else they were driven thither by the arms and success of the Israelites. From Debir; either, 1. From the territories belonging to these cities, as we have oft seen in this history, cities mentioned for the country subject to them; for the cities were taken before by Joshua, chap. x. 36—38. Or, 2. From the cities themselves; and so either the cities were retaken by the giants, which it is not probable that God would permit in Joshua's time; or he speaks here of that time when he took those places mentioned here and chap. x., which history he here in part repeats and enlargeth with this memorable circumstance, that, together with the rest, he destroyed also the giants which were in those places. Anab; a place in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 50. From all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: it doth not follow from hence, which some conclude, that this book was written by some other person long after Joshua's death, even after the division of the Israelites into two kingdoms, of Israel and Judah; but only that this was one of those clauses which were added or altered and suited to the style of the present times by Ezra, or some other prophet, though that be not necessary; for since it was evident to Joshua, from Gen. xlix. 9, &c., that the tribe of Judah was to be the chief of all the tribes, and some dawning of its eminency appeared in that time, in their having the first lot in the land of Canaan, Josh. xv. 1, and the largest inheritance, Josh. xix. 9, it is no wonder that it is mentioned apart, and distinguished from the rest of the tribes of Israel, though that also be one of them; even as the daughter of Pharaoh is distinguished from the strange women, 1 Kings xi. 1, and Saul from all David's enemies, Psal. xviii. title, and Peter from the disciples, Mark xvi. 7, though they were each of the same nature and quality with the rest. Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities. Quest. How could Joshua utterly destroy these, when Caleb and Othniel destroyed some of them after Joshua's death, Josh. xiv. 12; Judg. i. 10—13. Answer. This might be, either, 1. Because these places being in part destroyed and neglected by the Israelites, might be repossessed by the giants, either in Joshua's time, or after his death, and by them kept till Caleb dispossessed and destroyed them. Or rather, 2. Because this work, though done by the particular valour and industry of Caleb, is ascribed to Joshua as the general of the army, according to the manner of all historians; and therefore it is here attributed to Joshua, though afterwards, that Caleb might not lose his deserved honour, the history is more particularly described, and Caleb owned as the great instrument in the achievement of it, Josh. xiv.; Judg. i.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel: only in Gaza, in ^bGath, ^cand in Ashdod, there remained.

Three cities of the Philistines, to which they retired, and where we find some of them afterwards, 1 Sam. xvii. 4; 2 Sam. xxi. 16; which may be one reason why the Israelites durst not make an attempt upon these places, though they were a part of their possession.

23 So Joshua took the whole land, ^daccording to all that the LORD said unto

CHAP. XII.

A catalogue of the kings, and their possessions, out of which they were driven by the Israelites; first in the time of Moses on the other side Jordan, 1—6, and afterwards by Joshua on this side of Jordan, 7—23; in all one and thirty kings, 24.

1462. NOW these are the kings of the land, which the children of Israel smote, and possessed their land on the other side Jordan toward the rising of the sun, ^afrom the river Arnon ^bunto mount Hermon, and all the plain on the east:

On the east of Jordan, called the plain, Deut. i. 1, and the plains of Moab, Deut. xxxiv. 1.

^c2 ^oSihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and ruled from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half Gilead, even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon;

From the middle of the river: it is not unusual, even amongst us, for a river to be divided between two lords, and for their territories or jurisdictions to meet in the middle of the river; and besides, here is a very particular reason for this expression, because the city Ar, which was no part of Sihon's dominions, but belonged to the Moabites, Deut. ii. 9, 18, was in the middle of the river Arnon, Deut. ii. 36; iii. 16; and therefore the middle of the river is most fitly and properly here mentioned, as the bound of Sihon's dominion on that side. And from half Gilead, Heb. and the half Gilead, i. e. half of the country of Gilead: the particle from is not in the original, and this doth not seem to denote the term or bound from which his dominion began, as our version implies, for so indeed it was not; but the place or country in and over which his dominion was, which, as is here said, began at Arnon, and took in half Gilead, and ended at Jabbok, beyond which was the other half of Gilead, which belonged to Og, as is expressly said, ver. 5, where the words being wholly the same that are here, it is most reasonable to understand and translate them in the same manner.

^d3 And ^dfrom the plain to the sea of Chinneroth on the east, and unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea on the east, ^ethe way to Beth-jeshimoth; and from ^fthe south, under ^g|| Ashdoth-pisgah:

To the sea of Chinneroth on the east; which words describe the situation not of the sea of Chinneroth, which was part of the western border of Sihon's dominion, but of the plain, which is here said to lie eastward from the sea of Chinneroth, and also eastward from the Salt Sea, as it here follows. And this was indeed the situation of the plains of Moab, which are here spoken of, to wit, that they lay between the two seas, that of Chinneroth and the Salt Sea, and eastward to them both. The sea of the plain; the Salt Sea is so called because it was a famous plain, pleasant and fruitful, before it was turned into a salt sea. From the south, or, on or towards the south.

^h4 ¶ And ^ethe coast of Og king of Bashan, which was of ^hthe remnant of the giants, ⁱthat dwelt at Ashtaroth and at Edrei,

To wit, successively; sometimes at the one, sometimes at the other city; both being his royal mansions.

5 And reigned in ^kmount Hermon, ^land in Salcah, and in all Bashan, ^munto the border of the Geshurites and the Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon king of Heshbon.

The Geshurites, of which see Deut. iii. 14; Josh. xiii. 13; 2 Sam. xiii. 37; xv. 8.

6 ⁿThem did Moses the servant of the LORD and the children of Israel smite: and ^oMoses the servant of the LORD gave it for a possession unto the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

7 ¶ And these are the kings of the country ^pwhich Joshua and the children of Israel smote on this side Jordan on the west, from Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon even unto the mount Halak, that goeth up to ^qSeir; which Joshua ^rgave unto the tribes of Israel for a possession according to their divisions;

8 ^sIn the mountains, and in the valleys, and in the plains, and in the springs, and in the wilderness, and in the south country; ^tthe Hittites, the Amorites, and the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites:

The wilderness: this word here and elsewhere in Scripture notes not a land wholly desert and uninhabited, but one thin of inhabitants, as 1 Kings ii. 34; ix. 18; Matt. iii. 1, 3.

9 ¶ ^uThe king of Jericho, one; ^vthe king of Ai, which is beside Beth-el, one; ^wWhich is beside Beth-el: this is added to distinguish it from Ai of the Ammonites, of which Jer. xlix. 3.

where it doth not appear that there was either king or city; but of another city of the same name, (as was frequent in those parts,) probably in Galilee towards the sea, whither divers people might possibly resort for trade and merchandise, over whom this was king, as formerly Tidal seems to have been, Gen. xiv. 1.

24 The king of Tirzah, one: all the kings thirty and one.

Each being confined to a narrow compass, and being king only of one city, or small province belonging to it, which was by the wise and singular providence of God, that they might be more easily and successively conquered by the Israelites one after another, as they were.

CHAP. XIII.

God makes known to Joshua the bounds of the land not yet conquered, 1—6; commands it to be divided among the nine tribes and a half, 7. The inheritance of the two tribes and a half on the other side Jordan, 8—13. The Lord and his sacrifices the inheritance of Levi, 14. The portion of the Reubenites, 15—23; of the Gadites, 24—28; of the half tribe of Manasseh, 29—32.

1445. NOW Joshua ^awas old and stricken in years; and the LORD said unto him, Thou art old and stricken in years, and there remaineth yet very much land [†]to be possessed.

[†]Thou art old, therefore delay not to do the work which I have appointed and commanded thee to do. To be possessed; to be conquered, and so possessed by the people.

2 ^bThis is the land that yet remaineth: ^call the borders of the Philistines, and all ^dGeshuri,

That yet remaineth unconquered by thee, and to be conquered by the Israelites, if they behave themselves aright. Geshuri; a people in the north-east of Canaan, of which see Deut. iii. 14, as the Philistines are on the south-west.

3 ^eFrom Sihor, which is before Egypt, even unto the borders of Ekron northward, which is counted to the Canaanite: ^ffive lords of the Philistines; the Gazathites, and the Ashdothites, the Eshkalonites, the Gittites, and the Ekronites; also ^gthe Avites:

Sihor; a river, of which see Isa. xxiii. 3; Jer. ii. 18. Which is counted to the Canaanite, i. e. which, though now possessed by the Philistines, who drove out the Canaanites, the old inhabitants of it, Deut. ii. 23; Amos ix. 7; yet is a part of the land of Canaan, and therefore belongs to the Israelites. The Avites, or the Avims, as they are called, Deut. ii. 23; who though they were expelled out of their ancient seat, and most of them destroyed by the Capthorims or Philistines, as is there said, yet many of them probably escaped, and planted themselves in some other place not very far from the former.

4 From the south, all the land of the Canaanites, and ^hMearah that is beside the Sidonians, ⁱunto Aphek, to the borders of ^jthe Amorites:

i. e. From those southern parts of the sea-coast now possessed by the Philistines, all the more northern parts of the sea-coast being yet inhabited by the Canaanites, almost as far as Sidon, as it here follows; for there is no mention made of any conquests of Joshua upon the sea-coast. The Canaanites, properly so called, are said to dwell by the sea, Numb. xiii. 29, and these are here spoken of, though some of them dwelt in other parts of the land. Mearah; a strong place; it matters not whether it was a city, or an impregnable cave, which some writers mention to be in those parts. Aphek; not that of Judah, of which Josh. xv. 53; but another in the tribe of Asher, of which Josh. xii. 18; Judg. i. 31. To the borders of the Amorites: the Amorites were a strong and very numerous people, and we find them dispersed in several parts, some within Jordan, and some without it; some in the south, and others in the north, of whom he speaks here.

5 And the land of ^kthe Giblites, and all Lebanon, toward the sunrising, ^lfrom Baal-gad under mount Hermon unto the entering into Hamath.

The Giblites; a people dwelling near Sidon in Gebal, of which see 1 Kings v. 18; Ezck. xxvii. 9.

6 All the inhabitants of the hill country from Lebanon unto ^mMisrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians, them ⁿwill I drive out from before the children of Israel: only ^odivide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee.

Them will I drive out from before the children of Israel, presently after thy death, if the Israelites do not hinder it by their unbelief or wickedness.

Though they be now unconquered, yet divide them, partly, as a pledge to assure them of my help in conquering them after thy death; partly, to lay an obligation upon the Israelites to proceed in conquering work, and to bear witness against them in case they did not; and partly, as a wall of partition between them and the Canaanites, to prevent all agreements, contracts, and confederacies with them, to which God saw they began to incline.

7 Now therefore divide this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

8 With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, ^pwhich Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses the servant of the LORD gave them;

With whom, Heb. with him, i. e. with the half tribe of Manasseh; not that half which is expressed ver. 7, as is evident from the thing; but the other half, which is sufficiently and necessarily understood, the relative being here put for the antecedent, understood, as it is, Numb. vii. 89; Psal. cxiv. 2; Isa. viii. 21; Jonah i. 3. As Moses the servant of the LORD gave them; which Moses gave them by my command, and therefore do not thou disturb them in their possessions, but proceed to divide the other possessions to the rest.

9 From Aroer, that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, ^qand all the plain of Medeba unto Dibon;

The city that is in the midst of the river; of which see the notes on Deut. iii. 16, and on Josh. xii. 2. Either this is the same city now mentioned, even Aroer, which is said to have been a double city, as the very name seems to import, whereof one part was on the bank of the river, and the other in the middle of it, whence we read of the cities of Aroer, Isa. xvii. 2; or it is another city, possibly Ar, as it is elsewhere named. Medeba and Dibon; two cities anciently belonging to the Moabites, and taken from them by the Amorites, Numb. xxi. 30, and from them by the Israelites; and after the Israelites were gone into captivity, recovered by the first possessors the Moabites, as may seem from Isa. xv. 2.

10 And ^rall the cities of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon;

11 ^sAnd Gilead, and the border of the Geshurites and Maachathites, and all mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Saleah;

Maachathites; whose land God had given to the Israelites without Jordan, though they had not yet used the gift of God, nor taken possession of it, as is noted, ver. 13.

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth and in Edrei, who remained of 'the remnant of the giants: "for these did Moses smite, and cast them out.

These did Moses smite; not all now mentioned, as appears from ver. 13, but Sihon and Og, and their people, and the generality of them, which he had now named, some of them being excepted.

13 Nevertheless the children of Israel expelled *not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites: but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell with the Israelites until this day.

This seems added by way of anticipation and reflection upon the present Israelites; implying, that although Moses did and might permit them to remain, both because the land which he had conquered was more than enough for the Israelitish possessors, and because being intent upon their passage over Jordan into the land of Canaan, he would not delay them, by searching their enemies out of all their corners; yet they were in fault, in not going on and perfecting the work which was begun by Moses, and carried on so far by Joshua.

14 Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the sacrifices of the Lord God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, *as he said unto them.

He, i. e. Moses, as is expressed ver. 33, gave none inheritance, to wit, in the land beyond Jordan, where yet a considerable part of the Levites were to have their settled abode. This is mentioned as the reason both why Moses gave all that land to the Reubenites, and Gadites, and Manassites; and why Joshua should divide the land only into nine parts and a half, as was said, ver. 7, because Levi was otherwise provided for. Sacrifices of the Lord made by fire; which by a synecdoche are here put for all those sacrifices and oblations, including first-fruits and tithes, which were assigned to the Levites; and this passage is so oft repeated and urged, to prevent those calumnies and injuries which God foresaw the Levites were likely to meet with from the malice, envy, and covetousness of their brethren; and to oblige all the other tribes to a cheerful and conscientious giving to the Levites their dues, to which they had as good a right and title as they had to their several possessions.

15 ¶ And Moses gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families.

Dividing the inheritance into as many parts as they had families; but this is only spoken of the greater families; for the lesser divisions or distributions to the several small families was done by inferior officers, according to the rules which Moses gave them.

16 And their coast was ^afrom Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, ^band the city that is in the midst of the river, ^cand all the plain by Medeba;

The city that is in the midst of the river; of which see Deut. iii. 16; Josh. xii. 2.

17 Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon, and ¶ Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon, Heshbon: this city and Dibon and Ataroth were upon the borders of Reuben and Gad, and therefore sometimes are ascribed to Reuben, as here, and Numb. xxxii. 37, sometimes to Gad, as Numb. xxxii. 34; 1 Chron. vi. 80, 81, by whom Heshbon, is said to be given to the Levites, Josh. xxi. 39. Possibly it and the rest were jointly inhabited by both tribes, as Jerusalem was by Jews and Benjamites. Bamoth-baal; of which Numb. xxi. 28. Beth-baal-meon; called Beth-meon, Jer. xlviii. 23, and Baal-meon, Ezek. xxv. 9, part of the name being cut off, as is usual with the Hebrews.

18 ^dAnd Jahaza, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath,

19 ^eAnd Kirjathaim, and 'Sibmah, and Zareth-shahar in the mount of the valley,

In the mountain bordering upon that valley, which then was famous among the Israelites, whether that where Moses was buried, which was near to the place here following, Beth-peor, Deut. xxxiv. 1, 6, or some other. And this clause is thought to belong to all the cities now mentioned.

20 And Beth-peor, and ^fAshdodispigah, and Beth-jeshimoth,

21 ^hAnd all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, whom Moses smote ⁱwith the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon, dwelling in the country.

The cities of the plain; opposed to the foregoing cities of the mountain of the valley. All the kingdom of Sihon; a synecdochical expression, for a great part of it; in which sense we read of all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, Matt. iii. 5, and all Galilee, Matt. iv. 23, and many others. Or, which all were the kingdoms of Sihon, i. e. belonged to his kingdom. The Hebrew conjunction and is oft put for the relative particle which, as Judg. ii. 21; Prov. xix. 1; Eccles. vi. 12. With the princes of Midian; not in the same time or battle, as appears by comparing Numb. xxi. 23, 24, with Numb. xxxi. 8, but in the same manner. And they are here mentioned, partly because they were slain not long after, and upon the same occasion, even their enmity against Israel; and partly because of their relation and subjection to Sihon, as it here follows. Dukes of Sihon. Quest. How could they be so, when they were kings of Midian? Numb. xxxi. 8. Ans. There were divers petty kings in those parts, which were subject to greater kings; and such these were, but are here called dukes or princes of Sihon, because they were subject and tributaries to him, and therefore did one way or other assist Sihon in this war, though they were not killed at this time. It is probable, that when Sihon destroyed those Moabites which dwelt in these parts, he frightened the rest of them, and with them their neighbours and confederates the Midianites, into some kind of homage or tribute, which they were willing to pay to him. Dwelling in the country, Heb. inhabiting that land, namely, Midian, last mentioned; whereby he signifies, that though they were subject to Sihon, yet they did not dwell in his land, but in another.

22 ¶ ^lBalaam also the son of Beor, the soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.

The soothsayer; so he was in truth, though a prophet (2 Pet. ii. 16) in title and profession. See Numb. xxiv. 25.

23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

And the border thereof, i. e. those cities or places which bordered upon Jordan. Compare Numb. xxxiv. 6.

24 And Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad according to their families.

25 ^mAnd their coast was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before ⁿRabbah;

All the cities of Gilead, i. e. all the cities of note and eminency; all cities properly so called, which it seems lay in that part of Gilead; and so this may well agree with ver. 31, where half the country of Gilead is said to be given to the Manassites; but there is no mention of any cities there. Half the land of the children of Ammon; not of that which now was theirs, for that they were forbidden to meddle

26 And from Heshbon unto Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from Mahanaim unto the border of Debir;

From Heshbon, either exclusively or inclusively. See before on ver. 17. Ramath-mizpeh, called Ramoth-gilead, or Ramoth in Gilead, Josh. xx. 8, and elsewhere. Mahanaim, exclusively; for Mahanaim was in the portion of Manasseh, beyond Jabbok, which was the border of Gad and Manasseh.

27 And in the valley, ^pBeth-aram, and Beth-nimrah, ^aand Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the sea of Chinnereth on the other side Jordan eastward.

Rest of the kingdom of Sihon; the northern part of his kingdom.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities, and their villages.

29 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the half tribe of Manasseh: and this was the possession of the half tribe of the children of Manasseh by their families.

Unto the half tribe of Manasseh; not that they desired it, as Reuben and Gad did, Numb. xxxii. 1, but partly as a recompence to Machir the Manassite for his valiant acts against Og; and partly for the better security and defence of the other two tribes, by so considerable an accession to them, which also was without any inconvenience to them, because the country was too large for the two tribes of Reuben and Gad.

30 And their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and ^aall the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities:

Jair, who, though of the tribe of Judah by the father, 1 Chron. ii. 21, 22, yet is called the son of Manasseh, Numb. xxxii. 41, because he married a daughter of Manasseh, and wholly associated himself with those valiant Manassites, and with their help took sixty cities or great towns, Deut. iii. 4, 14, which thence were called the towns of Jair.

31 And half Gilead, and ^aAshtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh, even unto the one half of the ^achildren of Machir by their families.

The children of Machir; whom before he called the children of Manasseh, he now calls the children of Machir, because Machir was the most eminent, and, as it may seem, the only surviving son of Manasseh, Numb. xxvi. 29; 1 Chron. vii. 14—16. For the other half of Machir's or Manasseh's children, see Josh. xvii. 1, &c.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 ^aBut unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not any inheritance: the LORD God of Israel was their inheritance, ^aas he said unto them.

couraged the people, Moses then promised him the land of Hebron, which he now claims of Joshua, 6—12; who grants his request, 13—15.

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of Canaan, ^awhich Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

These, mentioned chap. xiv.—xix. Eleazar the priest. see on Josh. viii. 33; ix. 15, 18; xix. 51. He best understood the laws of God, by which this division was to be regulated; and he was to consult God upon any difficult occurrence. The heads of the fathers of the tribes; twelve persons, each the head of his tribe, which were appointed and named by God, Numb. xxxiv. 19; and if any of them were now dead, no doubt Joshua and Eleazar, by God's direction, put others in their stead.

2 ^bBy lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half tribe.

This course God ordained, partly to prevent discontents, enmities, animosities, and quarrels among the tribes about the quality of their several portions; and partly to demonstrate the truth and wisdom of his providence, by which alone those parts fell to each of them, which Jacob long since, and Moses lately, foretold; so that, as a learned man saith, He must be more stupid than stupidity, and more impudent than impudence itself, that doth not acknowledge and confess a Divine hand and providence in this matter. The lot did only determine the several parts or provinces to the several tribes, but did not precisely fix all the bounds of it, but these might be either enlarged or diminished according to the greater or smaller number of the tribes, Numb. xxvi. 53, 56; xxxiii. 54, and that by the direction of those persons mentioned ver. 1; Josh. xvii. 14—18.

3 ^cFor Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and an half tribe on the other side Jordan: but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.

4 For ^dthe children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

Were two tribes, i. e. had the double portion, or the portion of two tribes, 1 Chron. v. 1, 2, and therefore though Levi was excluded, there remained nine tribes and a half, as was said ver. 2, to be provided for in Canaan.

5 ^eAs the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

They, i. e. the persons named ver. 5, who represented and acted in the name of the children of Israel, divided it, either now, or presently after; which is here spoken by anticipation.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal: and Caleb the son of Jephunneh the ^fKenezite said unto him, Thou knowest ^gthe thing that the LORD said unto Moses the man of God concerning me and thee ^hin Kadesh-barnea.

Then the children of Judah; either, 1. At that time when Joshua and the rest were consulting about the division of the land, though they did not yet actually and fully divide it. Or, 2. When Joshua, and himself, and the Israelites were proceeding in their conquests, and were going against Hebron, Josh. x. 36, which expedition, there mentioned in a general manner, may be particularly described in this

CHAP. XIV.

The land and its inheritances to be divided by lot, 1—5. Caleb having on his return from spying the land en-chapter, and Josh. xv. 13, 14. But the former seems more probable, because this was done when Joshua was in Gilgal, and not when he was pursuing his enemies. Came, not so much to intercede for Caleb, which was not needful with Joshua, especially in a thing already promised by God, but only to justify and countenance him in his desire. Gilgal; where the division of the land was designed and begun, though it was executed and finished at Shiloh, Josh. xviii. 1, &c. Son of Jephunneh; so he is called here, and 1 Chron. iv. 15, to difference him from Caleb the son of Hezron, 1 Chron. ii. 18. The Kenezite; of the posterity of Kenaz, of whom see Judg. i. 13; 1 Chron. iv. 13, 15. The thing that the Lord said unto Moses; in general, the gracious and comfortable promise he made us of possessing this land; and in particular, for my part, that which is expressed here, ver. 9. The man of God; whose words therefore thou art obliged to make good.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses the servant of the LORD ¹sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

Forty years old was I: see on Josh. xi. 18. I brought him word again as it was in mine heart; I spake my opinion sincerely, without flattery and fear, when the other spies were biased by their own fears, and the dread of the people, to speak otherwise than in their consciences they believed, as appears from Numb. xiii. 30—32; xiv. 36.

8 Nevertheless ²my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt: but I wholly ¹followed the LORD my God.

Which self-commendation is justifiable, because it was necessary, as being the ground and foundation of his petition.

9 And Moses swore on that day, saying, ²"Surely the land ¹whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

See Numb. xiv. 24; Deut. i. 36.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, ²as he said, these forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel ¹wandered in the wilderness: and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.

These forty and five years, whereof thirty-eight years were spent in the wilderness, and seven since they came into Canaan.

11 ²As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both ¹to go out, and to come in.

For war; not only for counsel, but for action, for marching and fighting. And therefore this gift will not be cast away upon an unprofitable and unserviceable person. To go out, and to come in; to perform all the duties belonging to my place.

12 Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how ¹the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced: ²"if so be the LORD will be with me, then ¹I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said.

This mountain, i. e. this mountainous country, in which was Hebron, Josh. xi. 21; xx. 7, and Debir, and Anab. He names the country rather than the cities, either, 1. Because the giants here following were already driven out of their cities, but yet abode in their caves or holds in the mountains, whence they much molested the Israelites. Or, 2. Because the cities were given to the Levites, Josh. xxi. 11, 13. Thou heardest, i. e. didst understand, both by the reports of others, and by thy own observation, as I also did. Hearing, the sense by which we get knowledge, is oft put for knowing or understanding, as Gen. xi. 7; xlii. 23; 2 Kings xviii. 26. If so be the Lord will be with me; a modest, and humble, and pious expression, signifying both the absolute necessity of God's help, and his godly fear, lest God for his sins should deny his assistance to him, as he might justly do; for although he was well assured in general that God would crown his people with success in this war, yet he might doubt of his particular success in this or that enterprise. To drive them out; out of their fastnesses, where they yet remain. Caleb desires this difficult work as a testimony of his own faith, and as a motive to quicken and encourage his brethren to the like attempts.

13 And Joshua ²blessed him, ¹and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

Joshua either, 1. Prayed to God to bless and help him according to his own desire. Or, 2. Acknowledged his praiseworthy carriage in the matter of the spies, and the reasonableness of his request. Or, 3. Consented to his desire, and, as it follows, gave it to him; as God's blessing is oft put for his actual conferring of favours upon men.

14 ²Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite unto this day, because that he ¹wholly followed the LORD God of Israel.

15 And ²the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. ¹And the land had rest from war.

A great man, in stature, and strength, and dignity, and authority, as being the progenitor of Anak, the father of those famous giants called Anakims. The land had rest from war; which gave them opportunity for the distribution of the land.

CHAP. XV.

The borders of the lot of Judah, 1—12. Among them Kirjath-arba, Caleb's inheritance: he drives thence the three sons of Anak; promises to give his daughter in marriage to him who should smite Kirjath-sepher; which Othniel does, and obtains her: she requests of her father some land for a dowry; which he grants, 13—19. The cities of Judah, 20—62. The Jebusites could not be conquered by them, 63.

THIS then was the lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families; ²even to the border of Edom the ¹wilderness of Zin southward was the uttermost part of the south coast.

For the general understanding of this business, it must be known, 1. That this working of casting lots was transacted with great seriousness and solemnity, in God's presence, with prayer and appeal to him for the decision of the matter. 2. That although an exact survey of this land was not taken till Josh. xviii. 4, 5, yet there was, and must needs be, a general description of it, and a division thereof into nine parts and a half; which as far as they could guess, were equal either in quantity or in quality. 3. That the lot did not at this time so peremptorily and unchangeably determine each tribe, that their portion could neither be increased nor diminished; as is manifest, because after Judah's lot was fixed, Simeon's lot was taken out of it, Josh. xix. 9, though after the land was more distinctly known and surveyed, Josh. xviii., it is likely the bounds were more certain and fixed. 4. That the lot determined only in general what part or quarter of the land belonged to each tribe, but left the particulars to be determined by Joshua and Eleazar, &c. For the manner of this lottery, it is probably conceived that there were two urns or pots, into one of which were put the names of all the tribes, each in a distinct paper, and into the other the names of each portion described; then Eleazar, or some other person, drew out first the name of one of the tribes out of one pot, and then the name of one portion out of the other pot, and that portion was appropriated to that tribe; and so in the rest. And with respect to these pots, in the bottom of which the papers lay, these lots are oft said to come up, or come forth. The lot of the tribe of the children of Judah came out first by God's disposition, as a note of his pre-eminency above his brethren. Edom lay south-east from Judah's portion.

2 And their south border was from the shore of the salt sea, from the †bay that looketh southward:

The bay, Heb. the tongue; by which he understands either a creek or arm of that sea; or a promontory, which by learned authors is sometimes called a tongue; it is not material to know which of these it was.

3 And it went out to the south side ^c to †Maaleh-acrabbin, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezron, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkaa:

Concerning this description of the southern coast of Judah, see Numb. xxxiv. 3—5.

4 From thence it passed ^d toward Azmon, and went out unto the river of Egypt; and the goings out of that coast were at the sea: this shall be your south coast.

5 And the east border was the salt sea, even unto the end of Jordan. And their border in the north quarter was from the bay of the sea at the uttermost part of Jordan:

The end of Jordan, i. e. the place where Jordan runs into the Salt Sea.

6 And the border went up to ^eBeth-hogla, and passed along by the north of Beth-arabah; and the border went up ^f to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben:

By the north of Beth-arabah, or, on the north, or northward to Beth-arabah; which place is attributed to Judah here, ver. 61; and to Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 22; because it was a frontier town in the borders of Judah and Benjamin, and therefore promiscuously belonging to both; which also was the case of some other places: and this cohabitation was convenient to maintain brotherly love and union between the several tribes, especially in the borders, where differences oft arise. The stone of Bohan; a place so called, not from Bohan's dwelling there, (for the Reubenites had no portion on this side Jordan,) but from some notable exploit which he did there, though it be not recorded in Scripture.

7 And the border went up toward ^g Debir from ^ethe valley of Achor, and so northward, looking toward Gilgal, that is before the going up to Adummim, which is on the south side of the river: and the border passed toward the waters of En-shemesh, and the goings out thereof were at ^hEn-rogel:

Debir; a differing place from that Debir, ver. 15, which was near Hebron, and remote from Judah's border; as also from that Debir, Josh. xiii. 26, which was beyond Jordan. Gilgal; either that Gilgal nigh Jordan, Josh. iv. 19, or another place of that name. On the south side of the river, or brook, or valley.

8 And the border went up ⁱby the valley of the son of Hinnom unto the south side of the ^kJebusite; the same is Jerusalem: and the border went up to the top of the mountain that lieth before the valley of Hinnom westward, which is at the end ^lof the valley of the giants northward:

The border went up; properly, for the line went from Jordan and the Salt Sea, to the higher grounds nigh Jerusalem; and therefore the line is said to go down, Josh. xviii. 16, because there it takes a contrary course, and goes downwards to Jordan and the sea. Hinnom; a very pleasant place, but afterwards made infamous, 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Of the Jebusite, i. e. of the city of the Jebusites, which was anciently called Jebusi, Josh. xviii. 28; Judg. xix. 10. The same is Jerusalem: it may seem hence, and from Deut. xxxiii. 12; Josh. xviii. 28; Judg. i. 21, that Jerusalem, properly, or at least principally, belonged to Benjamin; and yet it is ascribed to Judah also here, ver. 63, and elsewhere, either because a part of the city was allotted to Judah; or because the Benjamites needed or desired the help and conjunction of this powerful tribe of Judah, for the getting and keeping of this most important place. And when the Benjamites had in vain attempted to drive out the Jebusites, this work was at last done by the tribe of Judah, who therefore had an interest in it by the right of war; as Ziklag, which belonged to the tribe of Simeon, being gotten from the Philistines by David, was adjoined by him to his tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxvii. 6.

9 And the border was drawn from the top of the hill unto ^mthe fountain of the water of Nephtoa, and went out to the cities of mount Ephron; and the border was drawn ⁿto Baalah, which is ^oKirjath-jearim:

Of Mount Ephron, i. e. belonging to or bordering upon Mount Ephron. Kirjath-jearim, called Kirjath-baal, ver 60; Josh. xviii. 14.

10 And the border compassed from Baalah westward unto mount Seir, and passed along unto the side of mount Jearim, which is Chesalon, on the north side, and went down to Beth-shemesh, and passed on to ^pTimnah:

Mount Seir; not that of Edom, but another so called from some resemblance it had with that in quality. Beth-shemesh: there were divers cities of this name; this in Judah here, and Josh. xxi. 16; 2 Kings xiv. 11, another in Issachar, and a third in Naphtali, Josh. xix. 22, 38.

11 And the border went out unto the side of ^qEkron northward: and the border was drawn to Shicron, and passed along to mount Baalah, and went out unto Jabneel; and the goings out of the border were at the sea.

12 And the west border was ^rto the great sea, and the coast thereof. This is the coast of the children of Judah round about according to their families.

13 ¶ ^sAnd unto Caleb the son of Je-phunneh he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the LORD to Joshua, even ^tthe city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron.

He gave, i. e. Joshua, as appears by comparing this with Josh. xiv. 6, 12, 13. Arba, or Kirjath-arba; not the city, which was the Levites', but the territory of it, Josh. xxi. 13.

14 And Caleb drove thence ^uthe three sons of Anak, ^vSheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmi, the children of Anak.

Thence, i. e. from the said territory, from their caves and forts in it : compare Josh. xiv. 12. This and the following work was done either in Joshua's life-time, as may seem from Josh. xi. 21, or after his death, as is related Judg. i. 10; these giants having either recovered their cities or defended themselves in the mountains. Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai; either the same who are mentioned Numb. xiii. 33, and so they were long-lived men, such as many were in those times and places; or their sons, called by their fathers' names, which is very usual.

15 And ^{y ch. 10. 38.} he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir : and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher.

Debir; the same mentioned above, ver. 7. The name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher: this clause seems to be added to distinguish this from the other Debir subdued by Joshua, Josh. x. 38, 39.

16 ¶ ^{z Judg. 1.12.} And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

Which is to be understood with some conditions, as, if he were one who could marry her by God's law; for every promise contrary to that is void; and if she were willing; for though parents had a great power over their children, they could not force them to marry any person against their own wills. He might otherwise be an unfit and unworthy person: but this was no ordinary motion propounded to the imitation of others, but a Divine impulse, that Othniel's valour might be more manifest, and so the way prepared for his future government of the people, Judg. iii. 9.

17 And ^{a Judg. 1.13. & 3. 9.} Othniel the ^{b Num. 32. 12. ch. 14. 6.} son of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

Object. This marriage was unlawful. Ans. No; for it was not Othniel, but Kenaz, who was Caleb's brother; and besides, the word brother is commonly used for any kinsman; and that Caleb was not properly Othniel's brother sufficiently appears, because Caleb is constantly called the son of Jephunneh; and Othniel, the son of Kenaz here, and I Chron. iv. 13.

18 ^{c Judg. 1.14.} And it came to pass, as she came unto him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and ^{d See Gen. 24. 64. 1 Sam. 25. 23.} she lighted off her ass; and Caleb said unto her, What wouldest thou?

As she came unto him, or, as she went, to wit, from her father's house to her husband's, as the manner was: see on Matt. i. 18. She moved him to ask; she persuaded her husband; either, 1. That he would ask; or rather, 2. That he would suffer her to ask, as she did. She lighted off her ass, that she might address herself to her father in a humble posture, and as a suppliant, which he understood by her gesture.

19 Who answered, Give me a blessing; for thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs, and the nether springs.

Give me a blessing, i. e. a gift, as that word signifies, Gen. xxxiii. 11. A south land, i. e. a dry land, which was much exposed to the south wind, which in those parts was very hot and drying, as coming from the deserts of Arabia. Springs of water, i. e. a field, as she desired, ver. 18, wherein are springs of water, which in that country were of great price; for it is not probable that he would give her the springs, and give to another the grounds in which the springs were, who could thereby at their pleasure deprive her of the use and benefit of her springs: so she begs a well-moistened field, which also might give some relief to that which was dry and barren. The upper springs, and the nether springs, i. e. springs both in the higher and in the lower grounds; or two fields, one in high, another in low grounds; or rather, one above, and the other below, that south and dry ground which she complained of, that by this means it might be watered on both sides.

20 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Judah according to their families.

21 And the uttermost cities of the tribe of the children of Judah toward the coast of Edom southward were Kabzeel, and Eder, and Jagur,

The uttermost cities; those which were on the borders of the land, not the midland cities. It is apparent that all the cities belonging to this tribe are not mentioned in this catalogue. Kabzeel, called Jekabzeel, Neh. xi. 25.

22 And Kinah, and Dimonah, and Adadah,
23 And Kedesh, and Hazor, and Ithnan,
24 Ziph, and Telem, and Bealoth,
25 And Hazor, Hadattah, and Kerioth, and Hezron, which is Hazor,

Hazor, Hadattah; possibly it should be read as one word, Hazor-hadattah, as there is Hazar-gaddah, ver. 27, and Hazar-shual, ver. 28, such compounded proper names being usual; and this may seem the more probable, because if Hazor and Hadattah were two different cities, the conjunction and would have been put between them, as it is generally in the rest. Which is Hazor, or, which also is called Hazor; but to distinguish it from the other Hazor, ver. 23, this was called also Hezron.

Shema, called also Sheba, Josh. xix. 2.

31 And ^{f 1 Sam. 27. 6.} Ziklag, and Madmannah, and Sansannah,

32 And Lebaoth, and Shilhim, and Ain, and Rimmon: all the cities are twenty and nine, with their villages:

Object. Here are thirty-seven or thirty-eight cities named before; how then are they only reckoned twenty-nine? Ans. There were only twenty-nine of them, which either, 1. Properly belonged to Judah; the rest fell to Simeon's lot; or, 2. Were cities properly so called, i. e. walled cities, or such as had villages under them, as it here follows, the rest being great but unwalled towns, or such as had no villages under them.

36 And Sharaim, and Adithaim, and Gederah, ^{h Or, or.} and Gederothaim; fourteen cities with their villages:

Object. There are fifteen numbered. Ans. Either one of them was no city strictly called; or Gederah and Gederothaim is put for Gederah or Gederothaim, so called, possibly, because the city was double, as there want not instances of one city divided into two parts, called the old and the new city. So the conjunction and is put for the disjunctive or, whereof examples have been given before.

45 Ekron, with her towns and her villages:

Here and in the following verses are contained all the cities of the Philistines, among which are Gath and Askelon, which peradventure are here omitted, because they were not at this time places of such power and eminency as afterwards they were, but were the daughters of some of these following cities, though afterwards the daughter might overtop the mother, as is usual. Her towns, Heb. her daughters, i. e. lesser cities, or great towns, subject to Ekron's jurisdiction. Her villages, i. e. lesser towns or hamlets.

46 From Ekron even unto the sea, all that lay †near Ashdod, with their villages;

n ch. 18. 14. 60 ^aKirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, and Rabbah; two cities with their villages :

61 In the wilderness, Beth-arabah, Middin, and Secacah,

The wilderness; so the Hebrews call places either uninhabited by men, or having but few inhabitants.

62 And Nibshan, and the city of Salt, and Engedi; six cities with their villages.

The city of Salt; so called either from the Salt Sea, which was near it; or from the salt which was made in it, or about it.

63 ¶ As for the Jebusites the inhabitants of Jerusalem, 'the children of Judah could not drive them out: 'but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem unto this day.

For though Jerusalem was in part taken by Joshua before this, yet the upper and stronger part of it, called Zion, was still kept by the Jebusites, even until David's time; and it seems from thence they descended to the lower town called Jerusalem, and took it; so that the Israelites were forced to win it a second time; yea, and a third time also, for afterwards it was possessed by the Jebusites, Judg. xix. 11; 2 Sam. v. 6, 7. Could not drive them out; namely, because of their unbelief, as Christ could do no mighty work—because of the people's unbelief, Mark vi. 5, 6; Matt. xiii. 58, and because of their sloth, and cowardice, and wickedness, whereby they forfeited God's help, and then they must needs be impotent; but this inability was wilful, and brought upon them by themselves. Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem: the same things which are here said of the children of Judah, are said of the Benjamites, Judg. i. 21. Hence ariseth a question, To which of the tribes Jerusalem belonged? whether to Benjamin, as is gathered from Gen. xlix. 27; Deut. xxxiii. 12; Jer. vi. 1, or to Judah, as is implied here, and Psal. lxxviii. 68, 69. Some think, that being in the borders of both, it was common to both, and promiscuously inhabited by both; and it is certain that after the captivity it was possessed by both, Neh. xi. 4. But for the present, though it did belong to Benjamin, yet the children of Judah being possibly very active in the first taking of it by Joshua, as they certainly were after his death, Judg. i. 8, they might thereby get some right share with the Benjamites in the possession of it. It seems most probable that part of it, and indeed the greatest part and main body of it, stood in the tribe of Benjamin; and hence this is mentioned in the list of their cities, and not in Judah's list: and part of it stood in Judah's share, even Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built; and Mount Zion, when it was taken from the Jebusites. Unto this day; when this book was written, whether in Joshua's life and old age, which continued many years after the taking of Jerusalem; or after his death, when this clause was added here and elsewhere in this book by some other man of God, which must needs be done before David's time, when the Jebusites were quite expelled, and their fort taken.

CHAP. XVI.

The general borders of the sons of Joseph, 1—4. The borders of Ephraim, 5—9. Some of the Canaanites not expelled, but made tributary, 10.

AND the lot of the children of Joseph †fell from Jordan by Jericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the wilderness that goeth up from Jericho through-out mount Beth-el, † Heb. went forth.

Of Joseph, i. e. of Ephraim, and the half tribe of Manasseh, which are here put together in one; not because they had but one lot, for Ephraim had one here, ver. 5, and Manasseh another, Josh. xvii. 1; but because in these first verses he speaks of them in common, and of the south border, which seems to be the same, either wholly or in a great part; and then he comes to the particular description of their several portions. It is here further remarkable, that God so disposed of these lots, that they came forth in decent and due order; Judah's first, to whom the sovereignty was promised; and then Joseph's, who succeeded Reuben in the other privilege of the birth-right, the double portion, 1 Chron. v. 1, 2. The water of Jericho; of which see 2 Kings ii. 19—22. The wilderness that goeth up from Jericho; the wilderness of Beth-aven, as appears by comparing Josh. xviii. 12, which speaks of the very same border which was on the south of Ephraim, and on the north of Benjamin.

2 And goeth out from Beth-el to ^aLuz, and passeth along unto the borders of Archi to Ataroth,

From Beth-el to Luz, or, from Bethel-luzah, as the LXX. here join the words; for Beth-el was anciently called Luz, Gen. xxviii. 19; xviii. 3; though some think this was another Luz, spoken of Judg. i. 26. Others make Beth-el and Luz two neighbouring towns, which afterwards being more built and inhabited, became one, as oft hath happened.

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, ^bunto the coast of Beth-horon the nether, and to ^cGezer: and the goings out thereof are at the sea.

Of the two Beth-horons, see Josh. x. 10, 11.

4 ^dSo the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

therefore they are now said to take their inheritance, to wit, by dividing it between them according to the direction of Joshua and Eleazar, &c.; for that phrase being used of them, and not to my remembrance of any other tribes, may seem to have some peculiar signification, which doth not agree to the other tribes. But there being mention of a peculiar lot taken out for Manasseh, Josh. xvii. 1, shows that their several inheritances fell to them, as the rest did to the other tribes, even by several lots; and it is said of them, that they took their inheritance, which also Judah had done before them, because the tribes of Judah and Joseph did take their inheritances before the rest; and it was fit they should do so, for the security of the main camp, and the body of the people which were at Gilgal. See Josh. xviii. 5.

5 ¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim according to their families was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the east side was ^a Ataroth-addar, ^c unto Beth-horon the upper;

^c ch. 18. 13. ^f 2 Chr. 8. 5. On the east side, i. e. the north-east side. It is no wonder, if some of these descriptions are dark and doubtful to us at this distance of time and place; there having been so many alterations made in places, and so many circumstances being now altogether undiscoverable. But this is evident to every man of common sense, that this and all the descriptions here mentioned were then certain and evident to the Israelites, because these were the foundation of their present practice, and of all the possessions which then they took and peaceably possessed in succeeding ages.

6 And the border went out toward the sea to ^e Michmethah on the north side; and the border went about eastward unto Taanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah;

Toward the sea; the midland sea, towards the west.

7 And it went down from Janohah to ^h 1 Chr. 7. 28. Ataroth, ^h and to Naarath, and came to Jericho, and went out at Jordan.

Not to the city of Jericho, which belonged to Benjamin's lot, Josh. xviii. 21, but to its territory.

8 The border went out from Tappuah ⁱ ch. 17. 9. westward unto the ⁱ river Kanah; and the goings out thereof were at the sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And ^k ch. 17. 9. the separate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

The separate cities, i. e. besides those cities which were within Ephraim's bounds, he had some other cities, to which all their territories were annexed out of Manasseh's portion, because his tribe was all here, and was larger than Manasseh's.

CHAP. XVII.

The inheritance of Manasseh, and its borders, 1—11. They could not drive out the Canaanites, but made them tributary, 12, 13. The children of Joseph complain that their borders are too narrow: Joshua promises them the subdividing of the Canaanites, 14—18.

ⁿ Gen. 41. 51. ^o & 46. 20. & 48. 18. ^p Gen. 50. 23. ^q Num. 26. 29. THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh; for he was the ^a firstborn of Joseph; to wit, for ^b Machir the firstborn of Manasseh, the father of Gilead: because he was a man of war, therefore he had ^c Gilead and Bashan.

^c Deut. 3. 15. He was the first-born of Joseph: the sense is, though Ephraim was to be more potent and numerous, yet Manasseh was the first-born, and had the privilege of the first-born, which was translated to Joseph, to wit, a double portion; and therefore though this were but half the tribe of Manasseh, yet they are not made inmates to Ephraim, but have a distinct lot of their own, as their brethren or other half tribe had beyond Jordan. Machir; the only son of Manasseh, who therefore is here, and Judg. v. 14, put for the whole tribe. The first-born; so even only sons are sometimes called, as Matt. i. 25; see Exod. iv. 22. The father of Gilead; or, and the father, or who was also the father of Gilead; not of the land of Gilead, but of the man Gilead, who was Machir's son, Numb. xxvi. 29. He was a man of war; he, i. e. Machir, had given great proof of his valour in his generation, (though the particular history be not mentioned,) and his posterity were no degenerate sons, but had his valiant blood still running in their veins. Gilead and Bashan, i. e. part of those countries; for part of them was also given to the Reubenites, and part to the Gadites, as appears from Josh. xiii. 30, 31. This may be added as a reason, either, 1. Why he got those places from the Amorites; or, 2. Why they were allotted to him or his posterity, because this was a frontier country, and the out-works to the land of Canaan, and therefore required such valiant persons to defend it.

2 There was also a lot for ^d the rest of the children of Manasseh by their families; ^e for the children of ^e Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, ^f and for the children of Asriel, and for the children of Shechem, ^g and for the children of Hopher, and for the children of Shemida: these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

A lot, or, a portion, or distinct inheritance. The rest of the children of Manasseh, to wit, those of them which had not received their possessions beyond Jordan, Numb. xxvi. 29, &c. These were the male children: this expression is used to bring in what follows, concerning his female children.

3 ¶ But ^h Zelophehad, the son of Hopher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters: and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

No sons, but daughters; of whom see on Numb. xxvi. 33; xxvii. 1.

4 And they came near before ⁱ Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, ^k The LORD commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren. Therefore according to the commandment of the LORD he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

He gave them, i. e. Eleazar, or Joshua, with the consent of the princes appointed for that work.

5 And there fell ten portions to Manasseh, beside the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

Ten portions; either, 1. Six portions for the six sons, whereof one was Hopher; and because he had no sons, his part was subdivided into five equal parts, for each of the daughters. Or, 2. Ten portions, five for the sons, and five for the daughters; for as for Hopher, both he and his son Zelophehad were dead, and that without sons, and therefore he had no portion; but his daughters had several portions allotted to them.

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and the rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

Among his sons, i. e. no less than the sons; so their sex was no bar to their inheritance.

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to ¹Michmethah, that lieth before Shechem; and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of Tappuah: but ^mTappuah on the border of Manasseh belonged to the children of Ephraim;

9 And the coast descended ⁿunto the river Kanah, southward of the river: ^othese cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh: the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea:

These cities of Ephraim; Tappuah, and the cities upon the coast descending to the river, &c., last mentioned. Are among the cities of Manasseh, i. e. are intermixed with their cities, which was not strange nor unfit, these two being linked together by a nearer alliance than the rest.

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east.

His border; either, 1. Manasseh's, whose portion is here described, and whose name was last mentioned. Or, 2. Ephraim's and Manasseh's, both expressed in the foregoing words, and implied in the following, they. In Asher, i. e. upon the tribe of Asher; for though Zebulun came between Asher and them for the greatest part of their land, yet it seems there were some necks or parcels of land, both of Ephraim's and of Manasseh's, which jutted out farther than the rest, and touched the borders of Asher. And it is certain there were many such incursions of the land of one tribe upon some parcels of another, although they were otherwise considerably distant one from the other. See Josh. xix. 34. And you must not judge of these things by the present maps, which are drawn according to the opinions of late authors, which many times are false; and they are to be judged by the Scripture, and not the Scripture by them: but that part of Manasseh did reach to Asher, appears from hence, that Dor, a city of Manasseh, ver. 11. was, as Josephus witnesseth, near Carmel, which belonged to Asher, Josh. xix. 26.

11 ^p And Manasseh had in Issachar and in Asher ^qBeth-shean and her towns, and Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of En-dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

In Issachar and in Asher; either, 1. Bordering upon them, as in Asher is taken, ver. 10, and as Aaron's rod is said to be in the ark, i. e. close by it, Heb. ix. 4; or, 2. Properly in them, as Ephraim had some cities in the tribe of Manasseh, Josh. xvi. 9, and as it was not unusual, when the places allotted to any tribe was too narrow for it, and the next too large, to give away part from the larger to the less portion; nay, sometimes one whole tribe was taken into another, as Simcon was into Judah's portion, when it was found too large for Judah, Josh. xix. 9. The inhabitants of Dor; not the places only, but the people; whom, contrary to God's command, they spared and used for servants, whom therefore they are said to have or possess. Three countries: this may be referred either to some, to wit, the three last places, or to all the places named in this verse, which are here said either to have three countries or tracts of land belonging to them, or to be in three several countries or portions, as they seem to have been, some in Issachar, and some in Asher, and yet both belonging to Manasseh. Or, the words may be rendered the third part of that country; for the Hebrew word is of the singular number, and the article seems emphatical; and so the meaning may be, that the cities and towns here mentioned are a third part of that country, i. e. of that part of Issachar's and Asher's portion, in which those places lay.

12 Yet ^rthe children of Manasseh could not drive out the inhabitants of those cities; but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

See on Josh. xv. 63. Would dwell; were resolved to fight, rather than be turned out of their ancient habitations.

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were waxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to ^stribute; but did not utterly drive them out.

Which they were obliged to, now they were strong and numerous enough to possess those places.

14 ^tAnd the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but ^uone lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am ^va great people, forasmuch as the LORD hath blessed me hitherto?

The children of Joseph, i. e. of Ephraim and Manasseh, as is manifest, partly from ver. 17, where it is so explained; and partly because they mention it as an unreasonable thing, that they, being two, should have but one lot. Spake unto Joshua, i. e. expostulated with him, when they went and saw that portion which was allotted to them, and found it much short of their expectation. One lot, and one portion; either, 1. Because they really had but one lot, which was afterwards divided by the arbitrators between them. Or, 2. Because the land severally allotted to them was no more than was little enough for one of them. A great people, or numerous; for so the Hebrew word oft signifies.

15 And Joshua answered them, If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood country, and cut down for thyself there in the land of the Perizzites and of the ^wgiants, if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.

He retorts their own argument: Seeing thou art a great and numerous people, turn thy complaints into actions and valiant exploits, and enlarge thy borders by thy own hand, to which thou mayst confidently expect God's assistance. To the wood country; to the mountain, as it is called, ver. 18, where among some towns there is much wood land, which thou mayst without much difficulty possess, and so get the more room. Cut down, i. e. the wood, ver. 18, for thy own advantage and use; partly in building more cities and towns; and partly for preparing the land for the use of pasture and tillage. The Perizzites; supposed to be a savage and brutish kind of people, that lived in woods and mountains. Of the giants, who lived in caves and mountains, now especially when they were driven out of their cities. If Mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee, or, seeing Mount Ephraim is too narrow for thee, as thou complainest, take to thyself the rest of that hilly and wood country. Mount Ephraim was a particular and eminent portion of the land, belonging to the tribe of Ephraim, as appears from Josh. xix. 50; xx. 7; xxi. 21; Judg. iv. 5. And this seems to be here mentioned synecdochically, for all the portion allotted to Ephraim and Manasseh, as appears from their complaint, which was not that this part, but that their whole portion, was too strait for them.

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us: and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley have ^ychariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are ^zof the valley of Jezreel.

The hill is not enough for us; if we should invade and conquer it, and cut down both wood and men, yet it would not be sufficient for us. Heb. The hill will not be found, i. e. obtained, by us; those fierce and strong people the Perizzites and the giants will easily defend themselves, and frustrate our attempts, having the advantage of the woods and mountains. The Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley, i. e. And if thou sayest, as we know thou wilt reply, that if the hill either cannot be conquered, or be not sufficient for us, we may go down and take more land out of the pleasant and fruitful valleys, we shall meet with no less difficulty there than in the mountains. Or thus, In going to the hills to which thou directest us, we must pass through valleys, where we shall be waylaid by powerful and armed enemies. Chariots of iron; not all made of iron, but armed with iron, not only for defence, but for offence also, having as it were scythes and swords fastened to them, to cut down all that stood in their way. The valley of Jezreel; which was either in the tribe of Issachar, or upon the borders of it, Josh. xix. 18.

17 And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, Thou art a great people, and hast great power: thou shalt not have one lot only:

Thou needest and deservest more than that lot, of which thou art actually possessed, and thou hast power to get more; which if thou endeavourest to do, God will bless thee, and give thee more.

18 But the mountain shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down: and the outgoings of it shall be thine: for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, ^a though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

The outgoings of it; either, 1. The productions or fruits of that land, when it is cleared from the wood, and purged; or rather, 2. The valleys and fields belonging or adjoining to it, for there the Canaanites were, ver. 16.

CHAP. XVIII.

The tabernacle is set up in Shiloh, 1. The remainder of the land described, and divided into seven parts, for the seven tribes which as yet had no inheritance, 2—9. Joshua casts the lot at Shiloh, 10: the first comes out for Benjamin, whose borders and cities are described, 11—28.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together ^a at Shiloh, and ^b set up the tabernacle of the congregation there. And the land was subdued before them.

Set up the tabernacle of the congregation there, by God's appointment, as is manifest from Deut. xii. 5, &c.; Jer. vii. 12. Hither it was removed from Gilgal, partly for the honour and convenience of Joshua, that he being of the tribe of Ephraim, and seating himself there, might have the opportunity of consulting with God as oft as he desired and needed; and partly for the convenience of all the tribes, that, being in the heart and centre of them, they might more easily resort to it from all places. Here the tabernacle continued for above three hundred years, even till Samuel's days, 1 Sam. i. 3. And the land, or, for the land, because these words contain a reason of the former action: the particle and is oft used for for, as hath been showed.

2 And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, ^c How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you?

This slackness is supposed to arise, partly, from their dissatisfaction in the portions already allotted, Judah's being too large, as it appeared, and Joseph's too narrow, as they complained; partly, from an opinion of the impossibility of making any regular and equal distribution of the parts, till the whole were better known, and more exactly surveyed, which accordingly is here done; and partly, because being weary of war, and having sufficient plenty of all things in their present condition, they grew slothful and secure, and were unwilling to run into new hazards and wars, as they perceived, by Joshua's answer to the tribe of Joseph, Josh. xvii. 15, &c., they were likely to do when they entered upon their several possessions.

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe: and I will send them, and they shall rise, and go through the land, and describe it according to the inheritance of them; and they shall come again to me.

Three men; three, not one, for more exact observation both of the measure and quality of the several portions, and for greater assurance and evidence of their care and faithfulness in giving in their account. Of each tribe; either one of each of these tribes, who were yet unprovided for; or rather, two of all the tribes, even of them who had already received their portions; which was highly expedient, that in case it should appear that there was not a sufficiency for each of these tribes who wanted their portions, their brethren might be more ready either to assist them in procuring more land, or to part with some of their own portion to them. Go through the land; which they might now safely do, because the terror of the late war was yet upon the Canaanites, who were loth to rouse so near and potent an enemy.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts: ^d Judah shall abide in their coast ^e ch. 15. 1. on the south, and ^e the house of Joseph ^e ch. 16. 1, 4. shall abide in their coasts on the north.

Seven parts; which were of equal extent or worth; for no tribe was so great but one of these parts in its full extent would abundantly suffice them; and there was no reason why the portions should be greater or less according as the tribes at present were more or fewer in number, because of the various changes which happened therein successively; it being usual for one tribe to be more numerous than another in one age, which was fewer in the next. And if the several tribes had increased more, and not diminished their numbers by their sins, they might have sent forth colonies, and taken any part of the land, even as far as Euphrates, all which the Lord of the whole earth had given them a right to, which when they pleased they might take possession of. Shall abide in their coast on the south: they shall not be disturbed in their possession, but shall keep it, except some part of it shall be adjudged to another tribe. On the north; in respect of Judah, not of the whole land; for divers other tribes were more northern than they.

6 Ye shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, ^f that I may cast lots ^f ch. 14. 2. for you here before the LORD our God. ^{& ver. 10.}

i. e. Before the ark or tabernacle, that God may be witness, and judge, and author of the division, that each may be contented with his lot, and that your several possessions may be secured to you as things sacred, and not to be alienated.

7 ^g But the Levites have no part among ^g ch. 13. 33. you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance: ^h and Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave them. ^h ch. 13. 8.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it, and come again to me, that I may here cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

The Levites have no part among you; therefore it shall be divided only into seven parts, as I have said.

land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

By cities, or, according to the cities, to which the several parts or territories belonged.

10 ¶ And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

Wherein we see the wisdom of Divine Providence, this being the only place in which that prophecy, Deut. xxxiii. 12, could have been accomplished.

12 ⁱ And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward; and the goings out thereof were at the wilderness of Beth-aven.

A place distinct from, but near unto Beth-el, as may be gathered from Josh. xvi. 1.

13 And the border went over from thence toward Luz, to the side of Luz, ^k which is Beth-el, southward; and the border descended to Ataroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side ^l of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of the sea southward, from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward; and the goings out thereof were at ^m Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, a city of the children of Judah: this was the west quarter.

Kirjath-jearim; the Israelites changed the name, to blot out the remembrance of Baal. Compare Josh. xv. 9; Numb. xxxii. 38.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to ⁿ the well of waters of Nephtoah:

The south quarter; the same with the north quarter of Judah. See Josh. xv. 5, 6, 11.

16 And the border came down to the end of the mountain that lieth before ^o the valley of the son of Hinnom, and which is in the valley of the giants on the north, and descended to the valley of Hinnom, to the side of Jebusi on the south, and descended to ^p En-rogel,

To the end of the mountain, i. e. the place where the mountain ends, and the valley begins. Before the valley of the son of Hinnom, i. e. in the prospect of that valley; or, that reacheth to that valley on the south. In the valley of the giants on the north; which extends to this other valley on the north side of it. To the side of Jebusi; to that part where the Jebusites lived, which was in and near Jerusalem.

17 And was drawn from the north, and went forth to En-shemesh, and went forth toward Geliloth, which is over against the going up of Adummim, and descended to ^q the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben, Geliloth, called also Gilgal, as appears from Josh. xv. 7; Judg. iii. 19; but differing from that Gilgal by Jordan.

18 And passed along toward the side over against ^r Arabah northward, and went down unto Arabah: ^s the plain.

Arabah, called Beth-arabah, Josh. xv. 6.

19 And the border passed along to the side of Beth-hoglah northward: and the outgoings of the border were at the north ^t bay of the salt sea at the south end of Jordan: this was the south coast. ^u Heb. tongue.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, by the coasts thereof round about, according to their families.

At the north bay of the Salt Sea, where an arm of that sea runs into the land, which is opposed to the south bay that was in the south border of the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 2. At the south end of Jordan, where it enters into the Salt Sea, which is here opposed to the north end of it, or the spring-head, which was in the north.

21 Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin according to their families were Jericho, and Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz, Jericho; for though the city was destroyed, the territory remained, and some houses probably were built and inhabited there, though it was not made a city with walls and gates, which was the only thing forbidden, Josh. vi. 26. Keziz, or, Emec-keziz, the proper name of a city or great town.

22 And Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and Beth-el,

23 And Avim, and Parah, and Ophrah, 24 And Chephar-haammonai, and Ophni, and Gaba; twelve cities with their villages:

25 Gibeon, and Ramah, and Beeroth, Zemaraim; which either gave name to, or took name from, that mountain, 2 Chron. xiii. 4.

26 And Mizpeh, and Chephirah, and Mozah, 27 And Rekem, and Irpeel, and Taralah, Mizpeh, near Ramah, in the same mountain where Silo was. There were divers other cities of that name.

28 And Zelah, Eleph, and ^v Jebusi, ^w ch. 15. 8. which is Jerusalem, Gibeath, and Kirjath; fourteen cities with their villages. This is the inheritance of the children of Benjamin according to their families.

Which is Jerusalem: so it seems this city did properly and primarily belong to Benjamin, although the tribe of Judah had also an interest in it, either because some part of it was allotted to them, or because the Benjamites gave them a share in it, for the assistance which either they had received or did expect from that potent tribe, for the getting or defending of that very important place. See more on Josh. xv. 63. It is more than probable that all the cities belonging to this tribe are not here named, because Anathoth and Almon are omitted here, but expressed Josh. xxi. 18.

CHAP. XIX.

The second lot falls to Simeon; his borders among the tribe of Judah, whose inheritance was too great for them, 1—9. The third lot falls to Zebulun, 10—16. The fourth to Issachar, 17—23. The fifth to Asher, 24—31. The sixth to Naphtali, 32—39. The seventh to Dan, 40—48. The children of Israel give an inheritance to Joshua, 49, 50. The division of the land finished, 51.

AND the second lot came forth to Simeon, even for the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families:

^x and their inheritance was within the inheritance of the children of Judah. ^y ver. 9.

This was so ordered by God's providence, partly, to fulfil that threatening that he would divide and scatter this tribe in Israel, Gen. xlix. 7, which was hereby done in part, because they had no distinct part of their own, but were as inmates to Judah; partly, because now upon the more exact survey of the land it appeared to Joshua and Eleazar, and all the princes and people, even to the tribe of Judah themselves, that the part given to Judah did far exceed the proportion which either they needed and could occupy, or which the other tribes could expect; and partly, because this was the least of the tribes, as is evident from Numb. xxvi. 14, and therefore fittest to be put within another tribe.

^b 1 Chron. 4. 28. 2 And ^bthey had in their inheritance Beer-sheba, Sheba, and Moladah, Beer-sheba, Sheba, or, or Sheba, i. e. otherwise called; for that Beer-sheba and Sheba were one and the same city is manifest, both from ver. 6, where all the cities are reckoned to be but thirteen; and from 1 Chron. iv. 28, where Simeon's cities are enumerated, and Sheba omitted as superfluous.

3 And Hazar-shual, and Balah, and Azem, Balah, called also Bilhah, 1 Chron. iv. 29; and Baalah, Josh. xv. 29. For let this be observed, once for all, that the names of persons or places are frequently changed through length of time, or difference of dialects, or study of brevity and easiness in pronunciation, or new accidents, or other causes. Thus Etlolad and Bethul, ver. 4, are called Tolad and Bethuel, 1 Chron. iv. 29, 30; and for Beth-lebaath, ver. 6, is Beth-birei, 1 Chron. iv. 31.

4 And Etlolad, and Bethul, and Hormah,
5 And Ziklag, and Beth-marcaboth, and Hazar-susah,
6 And Beth-lebaath, and Sharuhem; thirteen cities and their villages:

Thirteen cities, or, towns, as some of them are called, 1 Chron. iv. 32. Nor are all Simeon's cities here numbered, for Etam is added, 1 Chron. iv. 32, unless that were built afterward.

7 Ain, Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan; four cities and their villages:

8 And all the villages that were round about these cities to Baalath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was too much for them: ^c therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.

10 ¶ And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun according to their families: and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid:

Zebulun is here put before Issachar, his elder brother, as he is also Gen. xlix. 13, 14; Deut. xxxiii. 18.

^d Gen. 49. 13. 11 ^d And their border went up toward the sea, and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that

^e ch. 12. 22. is ^e before Jokneam; The sea, i. e. the midland sea, as on the other side it reached to the sea of Galilee, and so those prophecies concerning him, Gen. xlix. 13; Deut. xxxiii. 18, were abundantly fulfilled. Jokneam: supposed to be Kishon, Judg. iv. 7, or Belus, or Pagis.

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sunrising unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to Daberath, and goeth up to Japhia, Daberath, a city in Issachar, as appears from Josh. xxi. 18.

13 And from thence passeth on along on the east to Gittah-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, and goeth out to Remmon-|| methoar to Neah;

^h Or, which is drawn.

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon: and the outgoings thereof are in the valley of Jiphthah-el:

15 And Kattath, and Nahallal, and Shimron, and Idalah, and Beth-lehem: twelve cities with their villages.

Bethlehem; not that where Christ was born, which was in Judah, thence called Bethlehem Judah, Matt. ii. 1, but another. Twelve cities: there are more numbered here, but the rest either were not cities properly so called, having villages under their jurisdiction; or were not within this tribe, but only bordering upon it, and belonging to other tribes, which is evident of some of them, and may well be presumed of others.

16 This is the inheritance of the children of Zebulun according to their families, these cities with their villages.

17 ¶ And the fourth lot came out to Issachar, for the children of Issachar according to their families.

18 And their border was toward Jezreel, and Chesulloth, and Shunem, Jezreel, the royal city, 1 Kings xxi. 1. This tribe, because it lay between Benjamin on the south and Zebulun on the north, is not here described by its borders, which were the same with theirs; but by some of its cities. Shunem, the birth-place of Abishag, 1 Kings i. 3.

19 And Haphraim, and Shihon, and Anaharath,
20 And Rabbith, and Kishion, and Abez,
21 And Remeth, and En-gannim, and En-hadadah, and Beth-pazzez;

En-gannim; a different place from that En-gannim in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 34.

22 And the coast reacheth to Tabor, and Shazimamah, and Beth-shemesh; and the outgoings of their border were at Jordan: sixteen cities with their villages.

23 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Issachar according to their families, the cities and their villages.

24 ¶ And the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families.

25 And their border was Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and Achshaph,

Their border, on the north-west side.
26 And Alammelech, and Amad, and Misheal; and reacheth to Carmel westward, and to Shihor-libnath;

Carmel westward, or, Carmel by the sea, to distinguish it from that Carmel in the tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. xxv. 2. This was a place of eminent fruitfulness, Isa. xxxiii. 9; xxxv. 2; xxxvii. 24, agreeable to the prophecy concerning Asher, Gen. xlix. 20; Deut. xxxiii. 24.

27 And turneth toward the sunrising to Beth-dagon, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the valley of Jiphthah-el toward the north side of Bethemek, and Neiel, and goeth out to Cabul on the left hand, Either, 1. That country called Cabul, wherein were twenty cities, of which 1 Kings ix. 13. But this is not probable, because that was not within nor belonging to any particular tribe; for then Solomon could not have alienated it from them, and given it unto Hiram, whereas this did belong to Asher. Or 2. A certain city so called. On the left hand, i. e. on the north, which, when men look towards the east, as is usual, is on their left hand.

28 And Hebron, and Rehob, and Hamon, and Kanah, ^f even unto great Zidon; ^g ch. 11. 8. Judg. 1. 31.

Kanah, to wit, Kanah the greater, in the Upper Galilee, not Kanah the less, which was in the Lower Galilee. Great Zidon; called great for its antiquity, and riches, and glory. This city either was not given to the Israelites, but is only mentioned as their border; or at least was never possessed by them; not without a singular providence of God, that they might not by the opportunity of so good a port be engaged in much commerce with other nations, from which, together with wealth, that great corrupter of mankind, they might contract their errors and vices.

29 And then the coast turneth to Ramah, and to the strong city † Tyre; and the coast turneth to Hosah; and the outgoings thereof are at the sea from the coast to ^s Achzib:

The coast turneth from the north southward. To the strong city Tyre; exclusively, for this city was no part of the land given them.

30 Ummah also, and Aphek, and Rehob: twenty and two cities with their villages.

Here are more named, but some of them were not within this tribe, but only bordering places.

31 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families, these cities with their villages.

32 ¶ The sixth lot came out to the children of Naphtali, even for the children of Naphtali according to their families.

33 And their coast was from Heleph, from Allon to Zaanannim, and Adami, Nekeb, and Jabneel, unto Lakum; and the outgoings thereof were at Jordan:

Their coast; their northern border, drawn from west to east, as appears, because when this coast is described and brought to its end, the coast is said to turn from the east westward, ver. 34. The outgoings, i. e. the end of that coast.

h Deut. 33.

34 And then ^h the coast turneth westward to Aznoth-tabor, and goeth out from thence to Hukkok, and reacheth to Zebulun on the south side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah upon Jordan toward the sunrising.

Westward: this is unquestionably the southern border described from east to west. To Judah upon Jordan. Quest. How can this be, when there were divers tribes between this and Judah, all which reached to Jordan? Ans. He doth not say of Judah, as he doth of Zebulun and Asher, that it reacheth to it; but, as it seems, purposely leaves out that word which he had used in both the former branches, lest it should be understood of a local reaching to it, or being contiguous with it, which was not true; and that he might signify that he meant this clause in another sense, to wit, that it did in some sort go or reach to, or converse with Judah by Jordan. And so this may be here added, to show the accomplishment of that famous and obscure prophecy, That Naphtali, though he should be planted in the utmost border of the land, on the north-east, yet he should possess the riches of the west and south, Deut. xxxiii. 23, i. e. of those tribes which were at a great distance from him westward and southward; and this he should do by way of commerce with them by their famous river Jordan, which he did not only touch in a small part, as some of the other tribes did, but lay all along it for a good space together, even from the very fountain unto the sea of Gennesaret. Some think that this is verified by that royalty of this river, which they suppose God gave to the tribe of Judah, which extended as far as Naphtali.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth, Hammath, or, Hamath; of which see Numb. xxxiv. 8; 1 Kings vii. 65; 2 Kings xxiii. 33. Chinnereth; whence the lake of Chinnereth or Gennesaret received its name.

36 And Adamah, and Ramah, and Hazor,

37 And Kedesh, and Edrei, and En-hazor,

38 And Iron, and Migdal-el, Horem, and Beth-anath, and Beth-shemesh; nineteen cities with their villages.

Nineteen cities: see on ver. 15, 22, 30.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah, and Eshtaol, and Ir-shemesh,

Their inheritance; which is here described only by its cities, not by its borders, which are in part the same with Judah's; and their inheritance is in good part taken out of Judah's too large portion, as appears from divers of the cities here mentioned, which are also reckoned as in Judah's portion.

42 And ^h Shaalabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and Thimnathah, and Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and Gath-rimmon,

46 And Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the border || before || Japho.

47 And ^k the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them: therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, ^l Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

|| Or, over against.
l Or, Joppa,
Acts 9. 36.
k See Judg. 18.

Went out too little for them, Heb. went out from them, to wit, out of their hands or possession; for so this Hebrew word is used concerning those lands, which in the year of the jubilee are said to go out, Lev. xxv. 28, 30, 31, 33, i. e. out of the hands of the present possessor, to the first and ancient owner. And so peradventure this may signify that many of the Danites were forced by their powerful neighbours the Philistines to relinquish their coast, and their allotted habitations; which put them upon the following course. The children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem after Joshua's death, as appears from Judg. xviii., and seems to be here inserted, partly that all the chief places where the Danites (dwelt,) though far distant, might be mentioned together; and partly to give an account of this strange accident, why they removed from their appointed portion to so remote a place; which may be this, that being much molested and terrified by their bad neighbours, they thought fit to go to some place remote from them, which also they were in a manner constrained to do, because otherwise they must have taken some part of the portions of other tribes, whereas now going to the very utmost northern point of the land, they took that which did not belong to, or, at least, was not in the possession of any other tribe. See more on Judg. xviii.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families, these cities with their villages.

49 ¶ When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coasts, the children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them:

i. e. They are said to give it, because the whole land was given to Joshua, and Eleazar, and the princes, as joint trustees, acting in the name and for the good of the people; so that even Joshua could take nothing without their gift.

50 According to the word of the LORD they gave him the city which he asked, even ^m Timnath-ⁿ serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

m ch. 24. 30.
n 1 Chron. 7.

According to the word of the LORD; as God promised or commanded; either, first, formerly, as may be gathered from Josh. xiv. 6; where we read that the Lord said something unto Moses concerning me, Caleb, and thee, Joshua; though only what is said to Caleb be there expressed, the other not being to his purpose there; for Joshua having showed the same courage and faithfulness which Caleb did, did doubtless receive equal encouragement and comfort from God at that time. Or, secondly, now at this time by Eleazar. Tinnath-serah, called Tinnath-heres, Judg. ii. 9. He built, i. e. repaired and enlarged it, in which sense Nebuchadnezzar is said to have built Babylon, Dan. iv. 30.

51 °These are the inheritances, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

CHAP. XX.

God commands six cities of refuge for those who unawares should slay a man, 1—4. The right use of them, 5, 6. The Israelites appoint hereunto three cities on this, and three on the other side of Jordan, 7—9.

THE LORD also spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, °Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses :

The possessions being now divided among you, do you reserve some of them for the use which I have commanded.

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares and unwittingly may flee thither : and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

Unawares and unwittingly, Heb. through ignorance, or error, or mistake, and without knowledge; the same thing twice repeated, to cut off all the claims and expectations that wilful murderers might have of protection here; and God having declared that such should be taken even from his altar, that they might be killed, Exod. xxi. 14; and accordingly Joab was by Solomon's order killed even at the altar, 1 Kings ii. 28—31, 34. It is the more strange and impudent that any Christians should make their sanctuaries give protection to such persons whom God hath so expressly excepted from it, which the papists do; and their doctors are not ashamed to defend it upon frivolous reasons. The avenger of blood; the kinsman, who had right or power to demand or take vengeance of the slaughter.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

The judges used to sit at the entering of the gate. His cause, or, his matters or business, what he hath done, and why, and how; he shall give them a true relation of the fact, and all its circumstances. They shall take him into the city; understand, if they are satisfied in the relation he makes concerning the fact, otherwise it had been a vain thing to examine his cause. Give him a place; which they might well allow him, because God gave them the city with a reservation for such persons.

5 °And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not beforetime.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days : then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

Standing was the posture of the accused and accusers, Exod. xviii. 13; Isa. 1. 8; Zech. iii. 1. Before the congregation, or, company, or assembly, to wit, the council appointed to judge of these matters: not the council of the city of refuge, for they had examined him before, ver. 4; but of the city to which he belonged, or in or nigh which the fact was committed, as appears from Numb. xxxv. 25. Until the death of the high priest; of which see on Numb. xxxv. 25.

7 ¶ And they appointed Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba, which is Hebron, in the mountain of Judah.

Concerning these cities, note, 1. That they were all upon mountains, that they might be seen at a great distance, and so direct those who fled thither. 2. That they were seated at convenient distance one from another, for the benefit of the several tribes; for Kedesh was in the north, Hebron in the south, and Shechem between them. 3. That they all belonged to the Levites; partly that these causes might be more impartially examined and justly determined by them, who are presumed best able to understand the law of God, and most obliged and likely to follow it in their judgment, and not to be biassed by any affection or corrupt interest; and partly that their just reputation with the people, and their good counsels, might lay some restraint upon revengeful persons, who might be inclined or tempted to follow the man-slayer thither, and endeavour to kill him there.

8 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho eastward, they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

They assigned, or gave, or had assigned, or given; for they were given by Moses, Deut. iv. 41, &c.; or they confirmed Moses's grant, and applied them to that use to which Moses designed and separated them.

9 m These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.

For the stranger; not only proselytes, but others also; because this was a matter of common right, that a distinction might be made between casual man-slayers and wilful murderers.

CHAP. XXI.

Cities given out of the other tribes by lot to the Levites, 1—8. Particularly to the priests, the children of Aaron, 9—19; to the Levites, the Kohathites, 20—26, the Gershonites, 27—33, and Merarites, 34—40; in all forty-eight cities, with their suburbs, 41, 42. The Israelites quietly enjoy the Promised Land, 43—45.

Merari, and the heads of these were the chief persons now alive of these several families.

^b ch. 18. 1. 2 And they spake unto them at ^b Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying, ^c The LORD commanded by the hand of Moses to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

It seems most probable that they gave to the Levites promiscuously such cities as God commanded, and that the lot appropriated them to their several houses or families. Out of their inheritance, i. e. out of their several possessions; partly that the burden and loss might be equally divided; and principally, that the Levites being dispersed among the several tribes, according to Jacob's prediction, Gen. xlix. 7, might more easily, and frequently, and effectually teach the Israelites God's law and judgments, which they were engaged to do, Deut. xxxiii. 10; and that the people might upon all occasions resort to them, and require the meaning of the law at their mouths, Mal. ii. 7. These cities and their suburbs; not only the use, but the absolute dominion of them, as is manifest both from ver. 11, 12, where a distinction is made between the city and suburbs of Hebron, and the fields and villages thereof, and the former are given to the Levites, the latter to Caleb; and from the return of these cities in the jubilee unto the Levites, as to their proper owners, Lev. xxv. 33, 34.

4 And the lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and ^d the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, ^e had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.

Which three tribes were nearest to the temple, where their business lay. Thirteen cities; for though the priests were now few enough for one city, yet respect was to be had to their succeeding numbers; this division being made for all future generations. And seeing the Levites might sell their houses until the jubilee, Lev. xxv. 33, much more might they let them; and therefore it is probable their cities were not very long uninhabited, many being inclined to dwell with them by virtue of relations contracted with them, or dependence upon or expectation from them; or out of respect to the service of God, and the good of their souls.

^f ver. 20, &c. 5 And ^f the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

The children of Kohath were of Aaron's family, or priests, but Levites only. These tribes are nearest to the three former, and so the Kohathites are placed next to their brethren the Aaronites. Ten cities; fewer than they gave out of the three former tribes, because their inheritance was less than the former. See Numb. xxxv. 8.

^g ver. 27, &c. 6 And ^g the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

^h ver. 34, &c. 7 ^h The children of Merari by their families had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

ⁱ ver. 3. 8 ⁱ And the children of Israel gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, ^k as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

These cities with their suburbs; of which see on Numb. xxxv. 2.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, these cities which are here † mentioned by name, [†] Heb. called.

Judah and Simeon are mentioned together, because the cities of Simeon lay within Judah's portion.

10 ¹ Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for their's was the first lot.

Of the families, i. e. of the family, the plural number for the singular, which is not unusual.

11 ^m And they gave them ⁿ the city of Arba the father of ^o Anak, which city is Hebron, ^o in the hill country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.

12 But ^p the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunneh for his possession.

The fields of the city, i. e. all beyond the 2000 cubits expressed Numb. xxxv. 5. This is here mentioned, not as his peculiar case, but as one eminent instance, to show that it was so in all the rest of the cities here named; that the fields and villages thereof still belonged to the several tribes from whom the cities and their suburbs were taken; and to make the rest of the Israelites more contentedly and cheerfully resign so great a part of their possessions to the Levites, because even Caleb did so, though his possession had been long before promised, and now actually given to him by God's special command, as a mark of honour and compensation for his long and faithful service.

13 ¶ Thus ^q they gave to the children of Aaron the priest ^r Hebron with her suburbs, ^r to be a city of refuge for the slayer; ^s and Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And ^t Jattir with her suburbs, ^t and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

15 And ^x Holon with her suburbs, ^x and Debir with her suburbs,

Holon, called Hilen, 1 Chron. vi. 58, as Juttah here is called Ashan, 1 Chron. vi. 59, and Kibzaim called Jokmeam, 1 Chron. vi. 68, and so some others, the names of the places being changed by length of time, and upon special occasions, as was frequent among the Jews; and though their doctors add, that some of these places here mentioned, being now in the Canaanites' possession, and not speedily recovered from them, there were others put in their stead.

16 And ^z Ain with her suburbs, ^z and Juttah with her suburbs, ^z and ^b Bethshemesh with her suburbs; nine cities out of those two tribes.

Ain here, and Gibeon ver. 17, and some others here named, are not named 1 Chron. vi., either because they were destroyed in some of those hostile invasions and wars wherewith their land was grievously harassed and wasted before that time; or they appear there under other names, as was said.

17 And out of the tribe of Benjamin, ^c Gibeon with her suburbs, ^c and ^d Geba with her suburbs, 18 Anathoth with her suburbs, and ^e Almon with her suburbs; four cities.

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 ¶ ^f And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

The families which remained of the children of Kohath, over and above those of them who were priests.

^{g ch. 20. 7.} 21 For they gave them ^eShechem with her suburbs in mount Ephraim, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Gezer with her suburbs, 22 And Kibzaim with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs; four cities.

23 And out of the tribe of Dan, Eltekeh with her suburbs, Gibbethon with her suburbs, 24 Aijalon with her suburbs, Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; four cities.

25 And out of the half tribe of Manasseh, Tannach with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; two cities.

To wit, that half which dwelt in Canaan, by comparing this with ver. 27.

26 All the cities were ten with their suburbs for the families of the children of Kohath that remained.

^{h ver. 6. 1 Chr. 6. 71.} 27 ¶ ^hAnd unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half tribe of Manasseh they gave ⁱGolan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Beeshterah with her suburbs; two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs, 29 Jarmuth with her suburbs, Engannim with her suburbs; four cities.

30 And out of the tribe of Asher, Mishal with her suburbs, Abdon with her suburbs, 31 Helkath with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs; four cities.

^{k ch. 20. 7.} 32 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, ^kKedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Hammoth-dor with her suburbs, and Kartan with her suburbs; three cities.

33 All the cities of the Gershonites according to their families were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

^{l ver. 7. See 1 Chr. 6. 77.} 34 ¶ ^lAnd unto the families of the children of Merari, the rest of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, Jokneam with her suburbs, and Kartah with her suburbs, 35 Dimnah with her suburbs, Nahalal with her suburbs; four cities.

^{m ch. 20. 8.} 36 And out of the tribe of Reuben, ^mBezer with her suburbs, and Jahazah with her suburbs, Bezer, a city of refuge, as it is called Josh. xx. 8, and therefore needless to be here repeated.

37 Kedemoth with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs; four cities.

^{n ch. 20. 8.} 38 And out of the tribe of Gad, ⁿRamoth in Gilead with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Mahanaim with her suburbs, 39 Heshbon with her suburbs, Jazer with her suburbs; four cities in all.

40 So all the cities for the children of Merari by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were by their lot twelve cities.

41 ^{o Num. 35. 7.} All the cities of the Levites within the possession of the children of Israel were forty and eight cities with their suburbs.

Quest. Why hath this tribe, which was the least of all, more cities than any of them? Answo. First, It doth not appear that they had more; for though all the cities of the Levites be expressed, it is not so with the other tribes, but divers of their cities are omitted, as is evident. Secondly, The Levites were confined to their cities and suburbs; the rest had large territories belonging to their cities, which also they were in a capacity of improving, which the Levites were not; so that one of their cities might be more considerable than divers of the Levites. Thirdly, God was pleased to deal liberally with his ministers, partly to put honour upon those whom he foresaw many would be prone to despise; and partly, that being free from all outward distractions, they might more entirely and fervently devote themselves to the service of God, and the instruction of souls.

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 ¶ And the LORD gave unto Israel ^{p Gen. 13. 15. & 15. 18. & 26. 3. & 28. 4. 13.} all the land which he sware to give unto their fathers; and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

He gave them the right to all, and the actual possession of the greatest part of it, and power to possess the rest as soon as it was needful and convenient for them, which was by degrees, when their numbers were increased, &c., Exod. xxiii. 29, 30, and the absolute dominion of all the people remaining in it.

44 ^{q ch. 11. 23. & 22. 4.} And the LORD gave them rest round about, according to all that he sware unto their fathers: and ^{r Deut. 7. 24.} there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand.

To wit, all the days of Joshua, by comparing Josh. i. 5, for afterwards it was otherwise with them.

45 ^{s ch. 23. 14.} There failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass.

CHAP. XXII.

The two tribes and half are sent home with a blessing, strict charge to fear the Lord, and great booty, 1—9. They build an altar of testimony at the brink of Jordan, 10. The Israelites are offended, and assemble to wage war against them, 11, 12. They first send Phinehas and ten princes ambassadors to reprove them, 13—20. They clear themselves; their brethren rest satisfied, 21—34.

THEN Joshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept ^{a Num. 22. 3. 18. b ch. 1. 16, 17.} all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, ^band have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you:

3 Ye have not left your brethren these many days unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God.

These many days, i. e. for divers years together, so long as the war lasted. See Josh. xi. 18; xiv. 10.

4 And now the LORD your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them: therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, ^{c Num. 32. 33. Deut. 22. 6. ch. 12. 6.} which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you on the other side Jordan.

Unto your tents, i. e. to your settled habitations, as appears from ver. 8, which are oft called tents, as Judg. xix. 9; 2 Sam. xviii. 17; Hos. ix. 6; Mal. ii. 12.

d Deut. 6. 6, 17. & 11. 22.
e Deu. 10. 12.
5 But ^a take diligent heed to do the commandment and the law, which Moses the servant of the Lord charged you, ^e to love the Lord your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul.

Take diligent heed; watch over yourselves and all your actions. The commandment and the law; two words expressing the same thing, the law of commandments delivered by Moses. With all your heart and with all your soul; with the whole strength of your minds, and wills, and affections.

6 So Joshua ^f blessed them, and sent them away: and they went unto their tents.

g ch. 17. 5.
7 ¶ Now to the one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan: ^g but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them,

8 And he spake unto them, saying, Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: ^h divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.

i. e. With them who staid beyond Jordan for the defence of their land, and wives, and children, who therefore were to have a share, though not an equal share, with these. See Numb. xxxi. 27. But for them, 1 Sam. xxx. 24, their share was equal, because their danger was equal.

j Num. 32. 1, 26, 29.
9 ¶ And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go unto ⁱ the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh built there an altar by Jordan, a great altar to see to.

Or, built then, as this particle is elsewhere used; and so learned interpreters understand it, Psal. xiv. 5; xxxvi. 12; Eccles. iii. 17; Hos. ii. 15. And in the Latin tongue adverbs of place are sometimes put for adverbs of time: so I take it here. First, Because this best answers to the when in the beginning of the verse. Secondly, This seems to me to clear a great difficulty as to the place where the altar was built, which though according to our translation it seems, and is generally thought by interpreters to have been, in the land of Canaan; yet if things be more narrowly examined, it may be thought to have been on the other side Jordan in Gilead; and that both, first, from ver. 11, where it is said to have been built over against, or in the sight of the land of Canaan, therefore not in it. And secondly, from the reason they gave of the building of this altar, for fear lest the Israelites within Jordan and in Canaan should say unto their children dwelling beyond Jordan, The Lord hath made Jordan a border between us and you, &c.; which jealousy would have been much confirmed by building the altar in Canaan, but would be satisfied and confuted by having on the other side of Jordan, and in their own land, a pattern of that altar at which God was served in the land of Canaan, as a witness that they owned the same God, and the same way of worship, with their brethren that lived in Canaan. But whether the Hebrew particle be rendered then or there, it is not to be taken too strictly: if then, the meaning is not, that they did this as soon as ever they came to the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan; but about that time when they came to them, that they thought and designed it, and as soon as ever they were got over Jordan, which was in a very little time, they effected and perfected it: if it be rendered there, it is not to be limited to the very same spot of ground mentioned before, as if it was built at that border of Jordan that was in the land of Canaan; but to be a little more largely understood; to be built at one or other of the borders of Jordan; or, in general, by Jordan; which is here purposely added, for the explication of the word there, and to prevent the restraint of it to the border of Jordan, within Canaan.

k Deut. 13. 12, &c. Judg. 20. 12.
11 ¶ And the children of Israel ^k heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at the passage of the children of Israel.

Where they passed over Jordan, either at their first entrance into Canaan, or afterwards, and usually.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, ^l the whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them. l Judg. 20. 1.

The children of Israel; not in their own persons, but by their elders, who used to transact all affairs of this kind in the name and stead of all the people. To go up to war against them; as apostates from God, according to God's command in that case, Deut. xiii. 13, &c.

15 ¶ And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,

16 Thus saith the whole congregation of the Lord, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to turn away this day from following the Lord, in that ye have builded you an altar, ^p that ye might rebel this day against the Lord? p See Lev. 17. 8, 9. Deut. 12. 13, 14.

The whole congregation of the Lord, who do and are resolved to cleave unto that God from whom you have revolted, and who speak this to you in the name of the Lord. What trespass is this? how heinous a crime is this! To turn away this day, i. e. so soon after God hath obliged you by such wonderful favours, and when God is now conducting you home to reap the fruits of all your pains and hazards. That ye might rebel; with a design to revolt from and rebel against God, and against his express command of worshipping him at one only altar, Exod. xx. 24; Lev. xvii. 8, 9; Deut. xii. 5, 11, 13.

17 Is the iniquity ^q of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed q Num. 25. 3, 4. Deut. 4. 3.

until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD,

The iniquity of Peor, i. e. of our worshipping of Baal-Peor, Numb. xxv. From which we are not cleansed until this day; for though God had pardoned it, as to the national punishment of it, Numb. xxv. 11, yet they were not yet thoroughly purged from it; partly because the shame and blot of that filthy and odious practice was not yet wiped of; and partly because some of that corrupt leaven still remained among them, and though smothered for a time, yet was ready to break forth upon all occasions. See Josh. xxiv. 23. And God also took notice of these idolatrous inclinations in particular persons, and found out ways to punish them one time or other.

18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to day against the LORD, that to morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

r Num. 16. 22.

To-morrow, i. e. suddenly, as that word is oft used, as Matt. vi. 30; 1 Cor. xv. 32. He will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel; with you for doing so, and with us for suffering, or not punishing it.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar beside the altar of the LORD our God.

If the land of your possession be unclean; if you apprehend it to be so for want of the tabernacle and altar there, as the following words imply; if you now repent of your former choice in preferring the worldly commodities of that country before the advantage of God's presence and favour, and more frequent opportunities of his service. Take possession among us; we will readily resign part of our possessions to you for the prevention of this sin and mischief; wherein they show great zeal for God's honour, and great pity and charity to their brethren. Nor rebel against us; for all the tribes were united in one body politic, and made one commonwealth, and one church; and each tribe was subject to the laws and commands of the whole society, and of the chief ruler or rulers thereof; so its disobedience to their just commands was properly rebellion against them.

t ch. 7. 1, 5.

20 Did not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

The son of Zerah, i. e. one of his posterity, Josh. vii. 17, 18. Perished not alone, but brought destruction upon his whole family, and part of our forces sent against Ai. In his iniquity, or, for his sin; of which see Josh. vii. 24.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasse answered, and said unto the heads of the thousands of Israel,

Either, first, properly, each was a governor of a thousand; for there were among them divers rulers, some of tens, some of hundreds, and some of thousands; or rather, secondly, improperly, and indefinitely, i. e. of the people of Israel, which consist of so many thousands more than you, whose authority therefore you owe a reverence to. For by comparing ver. 14, these seem to be greater persons than those that were rulers of thousands.

22 The LORD our God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD, (save us not this day,)

The Lord God of gods; that Jehovah whom we, no less than you, acknowledge and adore as the God of gods, infi-nately superior to all that are called gods. The multiplying of his titles, and the repetition of these words, show their zeal and earnestness in this matter, and their abhorrence of the very thoughts of it. He knoweth; to him we appeal who knoweth all things, and the truth of what we are now saying. Israel he shall know; not only our present words, but our future and constant course shall satisfy all Israel of our perseverance in the true religion. If it be; if this have been done by us with such design, or in such a manner. Save us not this day; thou, O Lord, to whom we have appealed, and without whom we cannot be saved or preserved, save us not from any of our enemies, nor from the sword of our brethren. It is a sudden apostrophe to God, usual in such vehement speeches.

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt offering or meat offering, or if to offer peace offerings thereon, let the LORD himself require it; y Deut. 18. 19. 1 Sam. 26. 16.

i. e. Call us to an account, and punish us for it; as that phrase is oft used, as Deut. xviii. 19; 1 Sam. xx. 16; Job x. 6; Psal. x. 13.

24 And if we have not rather done it for fear of this thing, saying, † In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

† Heb. To mu. roa.

You have no relation to him, nor interest in him, or his worship.

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

A border between us and you, to shut you out of the Land of Promise, and consequently from the covenant made between God and our fathers. Ye have no part in the LORD; nothing to do with him; no right to serve him or expect favour from him. See the like phrase 2 Sam. xx. 1; Ezra iv. 3; John xiii. 8.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a witness between us, and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

a Deut. 12. 5, 6, 11, 12, 17, 18, 26, 27.

That we might do the service of the Lord before him; that we and ours may have and hold our privilege of serving and worshipping God, not upon this altar, but in the place of God's presence, in your tabernacle, and upon your altar.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

The pattern; an exact representation and resemblance. A witness between us and you, that we both serve one God, and approve and make use of one and the same altar.

29 God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt offerings, for meat offerings, or for sacrifices, beside the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

b Deut. 12. 13, 14.

30 ¶ And when Phineas the priest, and the princes of the congregation and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the children of Manasseh spake, † it pleased them.

+ Heb. it was good in their eyes.

They were fully satisfied with this answer.

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: † now ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

c Lev. 26. 11. 12. 2 Chron. 12. 2.

+ Heb. then.

The Lord is among us, by his gracious presence and preventing goodness, in keeping you from so great an offence, and all of us from those dismal calamities that would have followed upon it. Out of the hand of the Lord, i. e. from the wrath and dreadful judgments of God; by avoiding that sin which would have involved both you and us in a most bloody war, you have delivered us from the evils we feared. He that prevents an unexpected or approaching disease or mischief, doth as truly deliver a man from it, as he that cures or removes it after it hath been inflicted.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, and to the children of Israel, and brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

CHAP. XXIII.

Joshua being old assembles the people; declares the wonders God had wrought for them, and would work, in expelling the Canaanites, 1—5. Exhorts them to be courageous, to observe the law, and beware of idolatry, 6—8; which he enforces by former benefits, and promises, 9—11; by threatenings, 12—16.

c Deut. 31. 28. ch. 24. 1. 1 Chr. 28. 1.

Joshua called; either to his own city, or rather to Shiloh, the usual place of such assemblies, where his words being uttered before the Lord, were likely to have the more effect upon them. For all Israel; not all the people in their own persons, who could not either come thither, or hear him there; but in their representatives, by their elders, heads, judges, and officers, which are here added for the restriction and explication of that general expression. And for, or, even for, &c.

These nations that remain, not yet conquered. To be an inheritance for your tribes; you shall certainly subdue them, and inherit their land, as you have done the rest, if you be not wanting to yourselves. With all the nations that I have cut off, i. e. with the land of those nations; the people put for their land, as we have seen before; and as sometimes, on the contrary, the land is put for the people. Westward, where the Philistines, your most formidable adversaries, yet survive; but them also and their land I have given to you, and you shall undoubtedly destroy them, if you will proceed vigorously in your work.

5 And the LORD your God, he shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight; and ye shall possess their land, as the LORD your God hath promised unto you.

6 Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses, that ye turn not aside therefrom to the right hand or to the left;

h ch. 1. 7.

i Deut. 5. 32. & 28. 14.

Be ye therefore very courageous; for it will require great courage and resolution to execute all the commands of Moses, and particularly that of expelling and destroying the residue of the Canaanites. To the right hand or to the left, i. e. in one kind or other, by adding to the law, or diminishing from it, as Moses speaks.

7 That ye come not among these nations, these that remain among you; neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

k Ex. 23. 33. Deut. 7. 2, 3. Prov. 4. 14. Eph. 5. 11. 1 Ex. 23. 13. Ps. 16. 4. Jer. 5. 7. Zeph. 1. 5. See Num. 32. 38.

Come not among these nations, i. e. avoid all familiar converse and contracts, but especially marriages, with them, as it is explained, ver. 12, and as the Hebrew word intimates, being oft used of coming or going in to a woman. Neither make mention of the name of their gods, to wit, unnecessarily and familiarly, lest the mention of them breed discourse about them, and so by degrees bring a man to the approbation and worship of them. Compare Exod. xxiii. 13; Deut. xii. 3; Psal. xvi. 4; Eph. v. 3. Nor cause to swear by them; nor require nor compel the Gentiles to swear by them, as they used to do; especially in leagues and contracts, which therefore the Israelites are here implicitly forbidden to make with them. Neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them; neither give them any inward reverence, or outward adoration. Here is an observable gradation, whereby he shows what notable progress sin usually makes, and what reason there is to look to the beginnings of it, forasmuch as a civil and common conversation with their persons was likely to bring them, and indeed did actually bring them, by insensible steps, to the worship of their gods. So it is no wonder if some things not simply and in themselves evil be forbidden by God, as here the naming of their gods is, because they are occasions and introductions to evil.

8 ¶ But cleave unto the LORD your God, as ye have done unto this day.

l Or, For if ye will cleave, &c. m Deut. 10. 20. & 11. 22. & 13. 4. ch. 22. 5.

Cleave unto the Lord, by firm affiance, constant obedience, entire affection, faithful service and worship of him alone. As ye have done unto this day, to wit, since you came into Canaan; since which time the body of the people (for of them he speaks, not of every particular person) had behaved themselves much better than they did in the wilderness, and had not been guilty of any gross and general apostasy from God, or rebellion against him.

so great a part of the promised land and people yet remain unconquered? Answer. God promised them to destroy all their enemies, and to give them the whole land, not at once, but by degrees, by little and little, as is expressed Deut. vii. 22, and as was most convenient for them.

15 ¶Therefore it shall come to pass, ^athat as all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promised you; so shall the LORD bring upon you ^ball evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

CHAP. XXIV.

Joshua assembles all the tribes at Shechem, 1. A brief history of God's benefits from Terah: he exhorts them faithfully to serve the true God, 2—13. Reneweth a covenant between them and God; promising for himself and his house; the people four several times promising for themselves, 14—25. He writes this in the book of the law, and sets up a stone for a witness, 26—28. His age, death, and burial, 29—31. The burying of Joseph's bones, 32. The death and burial of Eleazar, 33.

AND Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to ^aShechem, and ^bcalled for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they ^cpresented themselves before God.

a Gen. 35. 4.
b ch. 23. 2.

c 1 Sam. 10. 19.

Gathered all the tribes of Israel, to wit, by their representatives, as Josh. xxiii. 2. To Shechem; either, 1. To Shiloh, where the ark and tabernacle was; because they are here said to present themselves before God; and because the stone set up here is said to be set up in or by the sanctuary of the Lord; of both which I shall speak in their proper places. And they say Shiloh is here called Shechem, because it was in the territory of Shechem; but that may be doubted, seeing Shiloh was ten miles distant from Shechem, as St. Jerom affirms. And had he meant Shiloh, why should he not express it in its own and proper name, by which it is called in all other places, rather than by another name no where else given to it? Or rather, 2. To the city of Shechem, a place convenient for the present purpose, not only because it was a Levitical city, and a city of refuge, and a place near to Joshua's city, but especially for the two main ends for which he summoned them thither. 1. For the solemn burial of the bones of Joseph, as is implied here, ver. 32, and of the rest of the patriarchs, as is noted Acts vii. 15, 16, for which this place was designed. 2. For the solemn renewing of their covenant with God; which in this place was first made between God and Abraham, Gen. xii. 6, 7, and afterwards was there renewed by the Israelites at their first entrance into the land of Canaan, between the two mountains of Ebal and Gerizim, Josh. viii. 30, &c., which were very near Shechem, as appears from Judg. ix. 6, 7; and therefore this place was most proper, both to remind them of their former obligations to God, and to engage them to a further ratification of them. Before God; either, 1. Before the ark or tabernacle, as that phrase is commonly used; which might be either in Shiloh, where they were fixed; or in Shechem, whither the ark was brought upon this great occasion, as it was sometimes removed upon such occasions, as 1 Sam. iv. 3; 2 Sam. xv. 24. Or, 2. In that public, and venerable, and sacred assembly met together for religious exercises; for in such God is present, Exod. xx. 24; Psal. lxxxii. 1; Matt. xviii. 20. Or, 3. As in God's presence, to hear what Joshua was to speak to them in God's name, and to receive God's commands from his mouth. Thus Isaac is said to bless Jacob before the Lord, i. e. in his name and presence, Gen. xxvii. 7; and Jephthah is said to utter all his words before the Lord in Mizpeh, i. e. as in God's presence, calling him in to be witness of them.

2 And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^dYour fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and ^ethey served other gods.

Unto all the people, i. e. that people which were present, to wit, to the elders, &c., by whom it was to be imparted to all the rest, and to as many of the people as came thither. The flood, or, the river, to wit, Euphrates, as all agree; so called by way of eminency. They served other gods, i. e. both Abraham and Nahor were no less idolaters than the rest of mankind. This is said to prevent their vain boasting in their worthy ancestors, and to assure them that whatsoever good was in or had been done by their progenitors, was wholly from God's free grace, and not for their own merit or righteousness, as the Jews were very apt to conceit.

3 And ^fI took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and ^ggave him Isaac.

I took your father; I apprehended him by my grace, and snatched him out of that idolatrous and wicked place, and took him into acquaintance and covenant with myself, which was the highest honour and happiness he was capable of. Led him throughout all the land of Canaan, i. e. I brought him after his father's death into Canaan, Gen. xii. 1, and I conducted and preserved him in safety in all his travels through the several parts of Canaan. Multiplied his seed, i. e. gave him a numerous posterity, not only by Hagar and Keturah, but even by Sarah and by Isaac, as it follows. Gave him Isaac, by my special power and grace, to be the heir of my covenant, and all my promises, and the seed in or by which all nations were to be blessed, Gen. xii. 3; xxi. 2.

4 And I gave unto Isaac ^hJacob and Esau: and I gave unto ⁱEsau mount Seir, to possess it; ^jbut Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

I gave unto Esau Mount Seir to possess it, that he might leave Canaan entire to his brother Jacob and his posterity, Gen. xxxvi. 7, 8. Jacob and his children went down into Egypt, where they long lived in grievous bondage; which God having delivered us from, I shall now pass it over.

5 ^kI sent Moses also and Aaron, and ^lthey plagued Egypt, according to that which I did among them: and afterward I brought you out.

According to that which I did, i. e. in such manner, and with such plagues as I inflicted, and are recorded.

6 And I ^mbrought your fathers out of Egypt: and ⁿye came unto the sea; ^oand the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red sea.

7 And when they ^pcried unto the LORD, ^qhe put darkness between you and the Egyptians, ^rand brought the sea upon them, and covered them; and ^syour eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderness ^ta long season.

He speaketh this to the elders, ver. 1, who were so, not only by power and dignity, but many of them by age; and there being now not sixty years past since those Egyptian plagues, it is very probable that a considerable number of those here present had seen those things in Egypt, and being not twenty years old, were exempted from that dreadful sentence of destruction, passed upon all who were then of more years standing, Numb. xiv.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwelt on the other side Jordan; ^xand they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then ^yBalak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and ^zsent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

Balak warred against Israel. Quest. How is this true, when Balak did never fight against Israel, Judg. xi. 25? Ans. One prince may commence a war against another, though he never come to a battle, nor strike one stroke; so Balak warred, though not by open force, yet by crafty counsel and warlike stratagems, by magical arts, by wicked devices, by making bate betwixt them and God their confederate; or by warlike preparations, in case Balaam's charms had succeeded, as may be gathered from Numb. xxii. 11; or at least by design or intention; things being oft said to be done both in Scripture and other authors which were only designed or intended, as here, ver. 11; Gen. xxxvii. 21; Ezek. xxiv. 13; Matt. v. 28; John x. 32, 33. And the old lawyers note, That he is rightly called a thief or an adulterer, &c., who wanted nothing but occasion to be so.

10 ^aBut I would not hearken unto Balak; ^btherefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

I would not hearken unto Balaam, who hereby appears to have desired of God leave to curse Israel; and therefore it is not strange that God, who permitted him simply to go, was highly angry with him for going with so wicked an intent, Numb. xxii. 20, 22, 32. Out of his hand, i. e. from Balak's malicious design against you.

11 And ^cye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and ^dthe men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

Fought against you; made opposition against you, by shutting their gates, by endeavouring to cut off your spies, &c.; they warred against you, if not by an offensive, yet by a defensive war. In the names of these nations he seems to comprise all their wars, which being so fresh in their memory, he thought it needless particularly to mention.

12 And ^eI sent the hornet before you, which drave them out from before you, ^feven the two kings of the Amorites; ^gbut not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

The hornet; either, 1. Figuratively, i. e. terrors and plagues, or other destroying judgments. Or, 2. Properly so called. See on Exod. xxiii. 28. And this being done before Joshua's entrance into Canaan, it is not strange if it be not mentioned in this book or record of Joshua's actions. Not with thy sword, nor with thy bow; for though thou didst fight with them, and prevail against them in battle, yet this was not because thou hadst more force or courage than they; but because by my hornet, which I sent like a harlinger before thee, I had both broken their spirits, and greatly diminished their numbers, and particularly cut off those giants or others who were like to give thee most trouble and difficulty; whence it comes to pass that we read of so few giants in that land, which was called the land of giants, Deut. iii. 13.

In sincerity and in truth; either these two expressions note the same thing; or sincerity is opposed to the mixture of false gods with the true, as it here follows, or of a false and corrupt worship of God with that which God appointed; and truth is opposed to dissimulation and falseness, and instability of heart. Put away the gods; whereby it appears, that although Joshua had doubtless prevented and purged out all public and manifest idolatry, yet there were some of them who practised it in their private houses and retirements. See below, ver. 23; Amos v. 25, 26; Acts vii. 42, 43. Your fathers, Terah, and Nahor, and Abraham, as ver. 2, and others of your ancestors. On the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; see Ezek. xxiii. 3, 8, 19, 21, 27. Under these particulars no doubt he comprehends all other false gods, which were served by the nations amongst whom they were, as appears from ver. 15, but only mentions these, as the idols which they were in more danger of worshipping than those in Canaan; partly because those of Canaan had been now lately and palpably disgraced by their inability to preserve their worshippers from total ruin; and partly because the other idols came recommended unto them by the venerable name of antiquity, and the custom of their forefathers. See Jer. xlv. 17; Ezek. xx. 18.

If it seem evil; unjust, unreasonable, or inconvenient. Choose you this day whom ye will serve; not that he leaves them to their liberty, whether they would serve God or idols; for Joshua had no such power or liberty himself, nor could give it to any other; and both he and they were obliged by the law of Moses to give their worship to God only, and to forbear all idolatry in themselves, and severely to punish it in others; but it is a rhetorical and powerful insinuation, whereby he both implies that the worship of God is so highly reasonable, so necessary and beneficial, and the service of idols is so absurd, and vain, and pernicious, that if it were left free to all men to make their choice, every man in his right wits must needs choose the service of God before that of idols; and provokes them to bind themselves faster to God by their own choice. See such manner of speeches in Ruth i. 8, 15; 1 Kings xviii. 21. But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord; but know this, if you should all be so base and brutish, as to prefer senseless and impotent idols before the true and living God, it is my firm purpose, that I will, and my children and servants (as far as I can influence them) shall, be constant and faithful to the Lord.

16 And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For the LORD our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed:

18 And the LORD drave out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land: therefore will we also serve the LORD; for he is our God.

19 And Joshua said unto the people, ^q Ye cannot serve the LORD: for he is an ^r holy God; he is ^s a jealous God; ^t he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

Ye cannot serve the Lord; he speaks not of an absolute impossibility, (for then both his resolution to serve God himself, and his exhortation to them to do so, had been vain and ridiculous,) but of a moral impossibility, or a very great difficulty, which he allegeth not to discourage them from God's service, which is his great design to engage them in; but only to make them more considerate and cautious in obliging themselves, and more circumspect and resolved in answering their obligations. The meaning is, God's service is not, as you seem to fancy, a slight and easy thing, as soon done as said; but it is a work of great difficulty, and requires great care, and courage, and resolution; and when I consider the infinite purity of God, that he will not be mocked or abused; and withal your great and often manifested proneness to superstition and idolatry, even during the life of Moses, and in some of you whilst I live, and whilst the obligations which God hath laid upon you in this land are fresh in remembrance; I cannot but fear that after my decease you will think the service of God too hard and burdensome for you, and therefore will cast it off, and revolt from him, if you do not double your watch, and carefully avoid all occasions of idolatry, which I fear you will not do, but I do hereby exhort you to do. He is a jealous God; he will not endure a corvial or partner in his worship; you cannot serve him and idols together, as you will be inclined and tempted to do. He will not forgive your transgressions; if you who own yourselves for his people and servants, shall wickedly and wilfully transgress his laws by idolatry or other crimes, he will not let this go unpunished in you, as he doth in other nations; therefore consider what you do when you take the Lord for your God; weigh your advantages and inconveniences together; for as if you be sincere and faithful in God's service, you will have admirable benefits by it; so if you be false to your professions, and forsake him whom you have so solemnly avouched to be your God, he will deal more severely with you than with any people in the world.

20 ^u If ye forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, ^v then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

He will turn, i. e. he will alter his course and the manner of his dealing with you, and will be as severe as ever he was kind and gracious. Consume you, after that he hath done you good; he will repent of all his former kindness, and his goodness abused will be turned into fury.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

To wit, him only, and not strange gods, as was supposed by Joshua, ver. 20.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, Ye are witnesses against yourselves that ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

Ye are witnesses against yourselves; this solemn profession will be a swift witness against you, if hereafter you apostatize from God.

23 Now therefore ^w put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

The strange gods which are among you; those idols which you either brought out of Egypt, or have taken in Canaan, which I have too much reason to believe that some of you, contrary to God's command, do keep, whether for the preciousness of the matter, or rather for some secret inclination to superstition and idolatry, as the following words imply. Either, 1. He set, or propounded, or declared unto them the statute and ordinance, i. e. the sum of the statutes and ordinances of God, which their covenant obliged them to. Or, 2. He set or established it, to wit, that covenant, with them, i. e. the people, for a statute or an ordinance, to bind themselves and their posterity unto God for ever, as a statute and ordinance of God doth.

^c Deut. 31. 24. 26 ¶ And Joshua ^cwrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took ^d a great stone, and ^e set it up there ^f under an oak, that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

These words, i. e. this covenant or agreement of the people with the Lord. In the book of the law of God, i. e. in that volume which was kept in the ark, Deut. xxxi. 9, 26, whence it was taken and put into this book of Joshua. This he did, partly, for the perpetual remembrance of this great and solemn action; partly, to lay the greater obligation upon the people to be true to their engagement; and partly, as a witness for God, and against the people, if afterwards he severely punished them for their defection from God, to whom they had so solemnly and freely obliged themselves. Set it up there, as a witness and monument of this great transaction, according to the custom of those ancient times, as Gen. xxviii. 18; xxxi. 45; xxxv. 14; Exod. xxiv. 4; Deut. xxvii. 2; Josh. iv. 3; viii. 32. Possibly this agreement was written upon this stone, as was then usual. Under an oak that was by the sanctuary of the Lord, i. e. near to the place where the ark and tabernacle then were; for though they were forbidden to plant a grove of trees near unto the altar, Deut. xvi. 21, as the Gentiles did, yet they might for a time set up an altar, or the ark, near a great tree which had been planted there before.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be ^g a witness unto us; for ^h it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

^g See Gen. 31. 48, 52. Deut. 31. 19, 21, 26. ch. 22. 27, 29, 34. ^h Deut. 32. 1.

28 So ⁱ Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 ¶ ^k And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in ^l Timnath-serah, which is in mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.

31 And ^m Israel served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that ⁿ overlived Joshua, and which had ^o known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Israel.

32 ¶ And ^p the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground ^q which Jacob bought of the sons of Hamor the father of Shechem for an hundred ^r pieces of silver: and it became the inheritance of the children of Joseph.

In Shechem; not in the city of Shechem, but in a field near and belonging to it, as appears from the following words, and from Gen. xxxiii. 18, and from the ancient custom of the Israelites to have their burying-places without cities, in fields or gardens.

33 And Eleazar the son of Aaron died; and they buried him in a hill that pertained to ^s Phinehas his son, which was given him in mount Ephraim.

By special favour, and for his better conveniency in attending upon the ark, which then was, and for a long time was to be, in Shiloh, which was near to this place; whereas the cities which were given to the priests were in Judah, Benjamin, and Simeon, which were remote from Shiloh, though near to the place where the ark was to have its settled abode, to wit, to Jerusalem.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE author of this book is not certainly known, whether it was Samuel, or Ezra, or some other prophet; nor is it material to know. 1. It matters not who was the king's secretary, or with what pen it was written, if it be once known that it was the king who made the order or decree: it is sufficient that unto the Jews were committed the oracles of God, Rom. iii. 2, i. e. the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, one part of which this was, by confession of all; and that the Jews did not falsify their trust therein, but kept those holy books themselves, and delivered them to the world, entire, without addition or diminution; for neither Christ nor his apostles, who severely rebuke them for their mistakes and misunderstandings of some passages of Scripture, ever charge them with any perfidiousness about the canon or books of the Scripture. This book is called the Book of JUDGES, because it treats of the judges, or of the state of the commonwealth of Israel under all the judges, except Eli and Samuel, who being the last of the judges, and the occasions or instruments of the change of this government, are omitted in this book. The judges were a sort of magistrates inferior to kings, and could neither make new laws, nor impose any tributes, but were the supreme executors of God's laws and commands, and the generals of their armies.

CHAP. I.

The tribe of Judah, by God's command, begin to make war against the Canaanites, 1—4. Adoni-bezek justly requited,

5—7. They take Jerusalem, 8; and Hebron. Anak's sons slain, 9, 10. Othniel subdueth Debir, and so obtaineth Caleb's daughter to wife, 11—15. The Kenites dwell in Judah, 16. Simeon subdueth Zephath, 17; and Judah divers cities of the Philistines, 18—20. The Jobsites dwell with Benjamin, 21. They of the house of Joseph subdue Beth-el, 22—26. Manassch, Ephraim, Zebulun, Asher, Naphtali, Dan drive out the Canaanites; for which they are vexed by them, and are left to dwell one among another, 27—36.

NOW after the death of Joshua it came to pass, that the children of Israel ^a asked the LORD, saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

After the death of Joshua; not long after it, because Othniel, the first judge, lived in Joshua's time. The children of Israel asked the Lord; being assembled together at Shiloh, they inquired of the high priest by the Urim and Thummim. See Numb. xxvii. 21; Judg. xx. 18; 1 Sam. xxiii. 9. Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first? Being sensible that the Canaanites are troublesome to them, and expected great advantage against them by their heedless condition, and finding their people to increase and multiply exceedingly, and consequently the necessity of enlarging their quarters, they renew the war. They do not inquire who shall be the captain-general to all the tribes; but (as appears by the answer) what tribe shall first undertake the expedition, that by their success the other tribes may be encouraged to make the like attempt upon the Canaanites in their several lots.

^b Gen. 40. 8. 2 And the LORD said, ^b Judah shall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

Not a person so called, but the tribe of Judah, as is manifest from ver. 3, 4, 8, 9, which is chosen for the first enterprise, because they were both most populous, and so most needing enlargement; and withal most valiant, and therefore most likely to succeed; for God chooseth fit means for the work which he designs; and because the Canaanites were numerous and strong in those parts, and therefore were in time to be suppressed, before they grew too strong for them.

3 And Judah said unto Simeon his brother, Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; and ^c I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

Unto Simeon his brother; as nearest to him both by relation, being his brother by both parents, which few of them were; and by habitation, as appears from Josh. xix. 1, 2. Against the Canaanites; specially so called, because they are distinguished from the Perizzites, ver. 4.

4 And Judah went up; and the LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they slew of them in ^d Bezek ten thousand men.

Not in the city, for that was not yet taken, ver. 5, but in the territory of it, or near to it; as in Hor is taken, Numb. xxxiii. 37; and in Jericho, Josh. v. 13.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

Adoni-bezek; the lord or king of Bezek, as his name signifies, in Bezek; whither he fled, when he had lost the field. Against him, i. e. against the city wherein he had encamped himself, and the rest of his army.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled; and they pursued after him, and caught him, and cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

That he might be disenabled to fight with his hands, or to run away upon his feet. And this they did, either by the secret instinct and direction of God, or upon notice of his former tyranny and cruelty expressed upon others, in this manner, as it follows: either way it was a just requital.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having ⁺ their thumbs and their great toes cut off, ^{and of their feet.} gathered their meat under my table: "as I have done, so God hath required me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

Threescore and ten kings; which is not strange in those times and places; for these might be either, first, kings successively, and so there might be divers of those kings in one place, and so in others; or, secondly, contemporary kings. For it is well known that anciently each ruler of a city, or great town, was called a king, and had kingly power in that place; and many such kings we meet with in Canaan; and it is probable that some years before kings were more numerous there, till the greater devoured many of the less. Having their thumbs cut off, that so their hands might be unable to manage weapons of war. Gathered their meat under my table; an act of barbarous inhumanity thus to insult over the miserable, joined with abominable luxury. God hath required me: he acknowledgeth the providence and vindictive justice of God, which also Pharaoh did, and others too, without any true sense of piety. They brought him; they carried him in triumph, as a monument of God's righteous vengeance. To Jerusalem; it being the metropolis of the nation.

8 Now ^f the children of Judah had fought against Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

To wit, in Joshua's time; which though done before, may be here repeated, to show why they brought Adoni-bezek to Jerusalem, because that city was in their hands, having been taken before, as may be gathered from Josh. xv. 63. And the taking of this city may be ascribed to the children of Judah rather than to Joshua, because the city was not taken by Joshua and the whole body of the army in that time when so many kings were destroyed, Josh. x., xii., (for there is mention made of the destroying of the king of Jerusalem, Josh. x. 23; xii. 10; but not a word of the taking of Jerusalem, as there is of the taking of Makkedah, and Libnah, and other cities belonging to the kings there mentioned, Josh. x. 28, &c.) but by the children of Judah after they had received their lot, when at the desire and with the consent of the Benjamites, in whose lot Jerusalem fell, Josh. xviii. 28, they assaulted and took it, and thereby, as it seems, acquired the right of copartnership with the Benjamites in the possession of that city. Though some think Jerusalem was twice taken; once in Joshua's lifetime; and being afterwards recovered by the Canaanites, was now retaken by the children of Judah.

9 ¶ And afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites, that dwell in the mountain, and in the south, and in the ^g valley.

10 And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwell in Hebron: (now the name of Hebron before ^h was Kirjath-arba:) and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

Judah went, under the conduct of Caleb, as it is recorded, Josh. xv. 14, &c.; for that relation, and this here following, are doubtless one and the same expedition and war, as appears by all the circumstances; and it is mentioned either there by anticipation, or here by repetition. Of this and the following verses, see the notes there.

11 ⁱ And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before ^j was Kirjath-sepher:

12 ^k And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

13 And Othniel the son of Kenaz, ^l Caleb's younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

r Num. 10.

16 ¶ And the children of the Kenite, Moses' father in law, went up out of the city of palm trees with the children of Judah into the wilderness of Judah, which lieth in the south of Arad ; and they went and dwelt among the people.

Children of the Kenite, i. e. of Jethro, so called from the people from whom he descended, Numb. xxiv. 21, 22. And whatsoever he did, it is evident that his posterity came into Canaan with the Israelites, and were there seated with them. See Judg. iv. 11, 17 ; v. 24 ; 1 Sam. xv. 6 ; 1 Chron. ii. 55. Out of the city of palm trees, i. e. from Jericho, so called Deut. xxxiv. 3 ; not the city, which was utterly destroyed ; but the territory belonging to it, where it seems they were seated as in a most pleasant, and fruitful, and safe place, according to the promise made by Moses to their father, Numb. x. 31, 32, and whence they might remove, either to avoid the society or molestation of the neighbouring Canaanites ; or out of love to the children of Judah, whom they went to ; or to avoid temptations to luxury, and exercise themselves in self-denial and contempt of the present evil world, and the lusts thereof ; as may be thought from Jer. xxxv. 6, &c. ; or for some other cause unknown to us at this distance. In the south of Arad ; in the southern part of the land of Canaan, where Arad was, Numb. xxi. 1. They went, i. e. some of them, for others of them dwelt in the contrary quarter, in the most northern part of the land. Among the people, Heb. that people, to wit, those children of Judah that lived there.

17 And Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, and utterly destroyed it. And the name of the city was called Hormah.

t Num. 21. 3.

Josh. 19. 4.

Judah went with Simeon his brother, according to his promise, ver. 3, and the laws of justice and gratitude. Hormah ; either, 1. The same place so destroyed and called, Numb. xxi. 3, and so what was there vowed is here executed ; or, 2. Some other place called by the same name upon the like occasion, which was frequent among the Hebrews. This seems more probable, 1. Because this was but one city, that divers cities, Numb. xxi. 2, 3. 2. Because that seems to have been done in Moses's time, though interpreters generally think otherwise ; of which see my notes there.

u Josh. 11.

18 Also Judah took Gaza with the coast thereof, and Askelon with the coast thereof, and Ekron with the coast thereof.

The principal cities of the Philistines. Quest. How could this be, when among the people left to try Israel, are the five lords of the Philistines, Judg. iii. 3 ? Answe. It is only said that they took the cities, and probably contented themselves with making them tributary ; but it is not said that they slew the people, as they ought to have done, and as it is said of the other cities here, ver. 5, 8, 17, 25. And the people being thus spared, did by God's just judgment recover their strength, and expel the Jews out of their cities, as we find afterwards. It is further observable, that Ekron here taken was one of Dan's cities, Josh. xix. 43, and it was attempted and taken here by Judah and Simeon, partly out of love to their brother Dan, and partly to secure their new conquests, and other adjoining territories, from such potent neighbours.

On account of their unbelief, whereby they doubted and distrusted God's power to destroy those who had chariots of iron, and so gave way to their own fear and sloth, whereby God was provoked to withdraw his helping hand from them, and so they were really made impotent, as they were unwilling. The entrance into the city ; on which side it is weakest, that we may best invade and take it.

25 And when he shewed them the entrance into the city, they smote the city with the edge of the sword ; but they let go the man and all his family.

Together with his estate, as the following verse manifests.

26 And the man went into the land of the Hittites, and built a city, and called the name thereof Luz : which is the name thereof unto this day.

The land of the Hittites ; where the Hittites seated themselves after they were driven out of Canaan, which seems to be northward from Canaan, and near unto it. See 1 Kings xi. 1 ; 2 Chron. i. 17.

27 ¶ Neither did Manasseh drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shean and her towns, nor Taanach and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Ibleam and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns : but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

33 ¶ Neither did Naphtali drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh, nor the inhabitants of Beth-anath; but he dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land : nevertheless the inhabitants of Beth-shemesh and of Beth-anath became tributaries unto them.

Beth-shemesh ; a place differing from that Beth-shemesh, Josh. xv. 10.

34 And the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the mountain : for they would not suffer them to come down to the valley :

i. e. Into the plain country ; which was the occasion of that expedition for the getting of new quarters ; of which we read Josh. xix. ; Judg. xviii.

35 But the Amorites would dwell in mount Heres in Aijalon, and in Shaal-bim : yet the hand of the house of Joseph prevailed, so that they became tributaries.

Of the house of Joseph, i. e. of the Ephraimites, who helped their brethren the Danites against the Amorites, and that with good success.

o Josh. 19.
42.

36 And the coast of the Amorites was from the going up to Akkrabbim, from the rock, and upward.

Akrabbim was in the southern part of Canaan, Josh. xv. 2, 3, from whence it went up towards the north. This is added to show the great power and large extent of this people.

CHAP. II.

An angel reproveth Israel at Bochim ; they bewail their sins, 1—5. The wickedness of the new generation after Joshua ; their frequent idolatry, 6—13 ; for which they are often punished of God by the enemy ; and being delivered by the judges, grow worse, 14—19 ; wherefore God will leave the Canaanite to prove and vex them, 20—23.

f Or,
messenger.
a ver. 5.

AND an angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bochim, and said, I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I swore unto your fathers ; and I said, I will never break my covenant with you.

An angel of the Lord : either, first, A created angel. Or, secondly, A prophet or man of God, for such are sometimes called angels, which signifies only messengers of God ; and then the following words are spoken by him in the name of God, as may easily be understood. Or, thirdly, Christ, the Angel of the covenant, who is oft called the Angel of the Lord, as we have formerly seen, to whom the conduct of Israel out of Egypt, and through the wilderness, and into Canaan, here spoken of, is frequently ascribed, as Exod. xiv. 19 ; xxiii. 20 ; xxxiii. 14 ; Josh. v. 13, 14 ; Judg. vi. 12 ; xiii. 3 ; who alone of all the angels could speak the following words in his own name and person ; whereas created angels and prophets do universally usher in their Divine messages with, Thus saith the Lord, or some equivalent expression. And this angel having assumed the outward shape of a man, it is not strange that he imitates the local motion of a man, and comes as it were from Gilgal to the place where now they were ; by which motion he signified that he was the person that brought them to Gilgal, the first place where they rested in Canaan, and there renewed covenant with them, and protected them there so long, and from thence went out with them to battle, and gave them success. Bochim ; a place so called Lere by anticipation, for the reason expressed here, ver. 5. And it seems to be no other than Shiloh, where it seems probable that the people were met together upon some solemn festival. And this was the proper and usual place of sacrificing, ver. 5. And I said, i. e. I promised, upon condition of your keeping covenant with me.

2 And ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land ; ye shall throw down their altars : ye have not obeyed my voice : why have ye done this ?

i. e. Disobeyed these express commands of mine ?

3 Wherefore I also said, I will not drive them out from before you ; but they shall be as thorns in your sides, and their gods shall be a snare unto you.

I also said with myself ; I have now taken up this peremptory resolution. Thorns in your sides : see on Numb. xxxiii. 55 ; Josh. xxiii. 13.

4 And it came to pass, when the angel of the LORD spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up their voice, and wept.

Some of them from a true sense of their sins ; but most of them from a just apprehension of their danger and approaching misery from the Canaanites' growing power, and God's forsaking of them ; as the following history makes most probable.

5 And they called the name of that place Bochim : and they sacrificed there unto the LORD.

For the expiation of their sins, by which they had provoked God to this resolution ; and for the regaining of God's favour.

6 ¶ And when Joshua had let the people go, the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land.

When Joshua had let the people go ; when he had distributed their inheritances, and dismissed them severally to take possession of them. This was done before this time, whilst Joshua lived ; but is now repeated in order to the discovery of the time, and cause, or occasion of the people's defection from God, and of God's desertion of them.

7 And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that outlived Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the LORD, that he did for Israel.

8 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

9 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash.

Timnath-heres, called Timnath-serah, Josh. xix. 50 ; xxiv. 30.

10 And also all that generation were gathered unto their fathers : and there arose another generation after them, which knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel.

Which knew not the Lord ; which had no experimental nor serious and affectionate knowledge of God, nor of his works.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim :

In the sight of the Lord; which notes the heinousness and the impudence of their sins above other people's sins; because God's presence was with them, and his eye upon them, in a peculiar manner, and he did narrowly observe all their actions, which also they were not ignorant of, and therefore were guilty of more contempt of God than other people. Baalim, i. e. false gods. He useth the plural number, because the gods of the Canaanites and adjoining nations, which Israel worshipped, were divers, and most of them called by the name of Baal.

12 And they ^pforsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed ^qother gods, of the gods of the people that were round about them, and ^rbowed themselves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger.

13 And they forsook the LORD, ^sand served Baal and Ashtaroth.

i. e. The sun and the moon, whom many heathens worshipped, though under divers names; and so they ran into that error which God had so expressly warned them against, Deut. iv. 19.

14 ¶ ^tAnd the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he ^udelivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and ^xhe sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they ^ycould not any longer stand before their enemies.

Sold them, i. e. delivered them up, as the seller doth his commodities unto the buyer. Thus the same phrase is used Judg. iii. 8; iv. 9, compared with ver. 14; Psal. xlv. 12.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for evil, as the LORD had said, and ^zas the LORD had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

Whithersoever they went out, i. e. whatsoever expedition or business they undertook; which is usually signified by going out and coming in.

16 ¶ Nevertheless ^athe LORD raised up judges, which ^bdelivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

The Lord raised them up, by inward inspiration and excitation of their minds and hearts, and by outward designation, testified by some heroical and extraordinary action. Judges; supreme magistrates, whose office it was, under God, and by his particular direction, to govern the commonwealth of Israel by God's laws, and to protect and save them from their enemies; to preserve and purge religion; to maintain the liberties of the people against all oppressors. See Judg. iii. 9, 10, 15, &c.; iv. 4; vi. 25, 26; viii. 23.

17 And yet they would not hearken unto their judges, but they ^bwent a whoring after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them: they turned quickly out of the way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD; but they did not so.

Their judges admonished them of their sin and folly, and of the danger and misery which would certainly befall them.

18 And when the LORD raised them up judges, then ^cthe LORD was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: ^dfor it repented the LORD because of their groanings by reason of them that oppressed them and vexed them.

It repented the Lord, i. e. the Lord changed his course and dealings with them, as penitent men use to do; removed his judgments, and returned to them in mercy, Gen. vi. 6.

19 And it came to pass, ^ewhen the judge was dead, that they returned, and ^fcorrupted themselves more than their fathers, in following other gods to serve them, and to bow down unto them; they ^gceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

They returned to their former, and usual, and natural, though interrupted course. More than their fathers, in Egypt or in the wilderness. From their own doings, i. e. from their evil practices, which he calls their own, partly because they were agreeable to their own natures, which in all mankind are deeply and universally corrupted, Gen. vi. 5; viii. 21; and partly because they were familiar and customary to them. Compare Isa. lviii. 13; lxvi. 3; Ezek. xxxvi. 32; Acts xiv. 16; Jude 16. Their stubborn way, Heb. hard way; so he calls their way of wickedness, either because it proceeded from a hard heart, and was managed with a hard and stiff neck; or to signify, that although it seemed at first very soft, and easy, and pleasant, yet they would certainly, and did constantly, find that it was hard, and difficult, and troublesome to them, as a hard way is to the traveller.

20 ¶ ^hAnd the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and he said, Because that this people hath ⁱtransgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice;

21 ^hI also will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died:

22 ⁱThat through them I may ^kprove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

That I may prove Israel; either, first, That I may try, and see whether Israel will be true and faithful to me, or whether they will suffer themselves to be corrupted by the evil counsels and examples of their bad neighbours, whom I will leave among them for their trial and exercise. Or, secondly, That by them I may afflict and punish Israel; for afflictions are commonly and justly called trials. But the former sense suits better with the following words.

23 Therefore the LORD ^lleft those nations, without driving them out hastily; neither delivered he them into the hand of Joshua.

Hastily; or, speedily; when the Israelites desired it, and needed it.

CHAP. III.

The nations left to prove Israel mentioned, 1—4. The Israelites marrying their daughters, and serving their gods, they are delivered up to the king of Mesopotamia; are rescued by Othniel, 5—11. Continuing to do evil, they are again punished and oppressed by the king of the Moabites; are rescued by Ehud: ten thousand Moabites are slain, 12—30. They are afterwards delivered from the Philistines by Shamgar, 31.

NOW these ^aare the nations which the LORD left, to prove Israel by them, even as many of Israel as had not known all the wars of Canaan;

i. e. Such who had no experience of those wars, nor of God's extraordinary power and providence manifested in them.

10 And ^o the Spirit of the LORD [†] came upon him, and he judged Israel, and went out to war: and the LORD delivered Chushan-rishathaim king of [†] Mesopotamia into his hand; and his hand prevailed against Chushan-rishathaim.

The Spirit of the Lord came upon him, with extraordinary influences, endowing him with singular wisdom, and courage, and resolution; and stirring him up to this great undertaking. Compare Judg. vi. 34; xi. 29. He judged Israel, i. e. pleaded and avenged the cause of Israel against their oppressors; as that phrase is oft used, as Deut. xxxii. 36; Psal. x. 18; xliii. 1.

11 And the land had rest forty years. And Othniel the son of Kenaz died.

The land had rest; either, first, It rested about forty years, or the greatest part of forty years; it being most frequent in Scripture to use numbers in such a latitude. Thus the Israelites are said to bear their iniquities forty years in the wilderness, Numb. xiv. 34, when they wanted near two years of that number; and to dwell in Egypt four hundred and thirty years, when there wanted many years of that number. Thus Joseph's kindred, sent for and called by him into Egypt, are numbered seventy-five souls, Acts vii. 14, although they were but seventy, as is affirmed, Gen. xli. 27; Exod. i. 5. So here the land is said to rest forty years, although they were in servitude eight of those years, ver. 8. And in like manner the land is said to have rest eighty years, though eighteen of them they served the king of Moab, ver. 14. And so in some other instances. Nor is it strange and unusual, either in Scripture or in other authors, for things to be denominated from the greater part, as here it was; especially when they did enjoy some degrees of rest and peace, even in their times of slavery, which here they did. Or, secondly, It rested, i. e. began to rest, or recovered its interrupted rest, in the fortieth year, either after Joshua's death, or after the first and famous rest procured for them by Joshua, as is noted, Heb. iv. 9, when he destroyed and subdued the Canaanites, and gave them quiet possession of the land; and the land had rest from war, as is said, Josh. xi. 23; xiv. 15. So there is this difference between the years of servitude and oppression, and those of rest, that in the former he tells us how long it lasted; in the latter, when it began; by which, compared with the other years, it was easy also to know how long the rest lasted. To strengthen this interpretation, two things must be noted. 1. That resting is here put for beginning to rest, as to beget is put for beginning to beget, Gen. v. 32; xi. 26; and to reign, for to begin to reign, 2 Sam. ii. 10; and to build, 1 Kings vi. 15, 36, for to begin to build, 2 Chron. iii. 1. 2. That forty years is put for the fortieth year; the cardinal number for the ordinal, which is common both in the Holy Scripture, as Gen. i. 5; ii. 11; Exod. xii. 2; Hag. i. 1; Mark xvi. 2, and in other authors.

12 ¶ And the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the LORD: and the LORD strengthened ^q Eglon the king of Moab against Israel, because they had done evil in the sight of the LORD.

Strengthened Eglon, by giving him courage, and power, and success against them.

13 And he gathered unto him the children of Ammon and ^r Amalek, and went and smote Israel, and possessed ^s the city of palm trees.

i. e. Jericho, as may be gathered from Deut. xxxiv. 3; Judg. i. 16; 2 Chron. xxviii. 15. Not the city, which was demolished, but the territory belonging to it. Here he fixed his camp, partly for the admirable fertility of that soil; and partly because of its nearness to the passage over Jordan, which was most commodious, both for the conjunction of his own forces, which lay on both sides of Jordan; and to prevent the conjunction of the Israelites in Canaan with their brethren beyond Jordan; and to secure his retreat into his own country, which therefore the Israelites prevented, ver. 28.

14 So the children of Israel ^t served Eglon the king of Moab eighteen years.

15 But when the children of Israel ^u cried unto the LORD, the LORD raised them up a deliverer, Ehud the son of Gera, ^v a Benjamite, a man [†] left-handed:

and by him the children of Israel sent a present unto Eglon the king of Moab.

A Benjamite, Heb. the son of Gemini, who was of the tribe of Benjamin, 2 Sam. xvi. 11; xix. 17; 1 Kings ii. 8. This tribe was next to him, and doubtless most afflicted by him; and hence God raiseth a deliverer. Left-handed; which is here noted, partly as a mark of his courage, and strength, and activity; see Judg. xx. 16; and principally as a considerable circumstance in the following story, whereby he might more advantageously and unsuspectedly give the deadly blow.

16 But Ehud made him a dagger which had two edges, of a cubit length; and he did gird it under his raiment upon his right thigh.

A cubit length; long enough for his design, and not too long for carriage and concealment. Upon his right thigh; which was most convenient, both for the use of his left hand, and for the avoiding of suspicion.

17 And he brought the present unto Eglon king of Moab: and Eglon was a very fat man.

The present was to be paid to him as a part of his tribute. A very fat man, and therefore more unwieldy and unable to ward off Ehud's blow.

18 And when he had made an end to offer the present, he sent away the people that bare the present.

He accompanied them part of the way, and then dismissed them, and returned to Eglon alone, that so he might have more easy access to him, and privacy with him; and that he might the better make his escape.

19 But he himself turned again *from the || quarries that were by Gilgal, and said, I have a secret errand unto thee, O king: who said, Keep silence. And all that stood by him went out from him.

He turned again, as if he had forgot and neglected some important business. From the quarries; either, first, Whence they hewed stones. Or, secondly, The twelve stones which Joshua set up there; by the sight whereof he was animated to his work. Or, thirdly, The idols, as the word also signifies, which that heathen king might place there, either in spite and contempt to the Israelites, who had that place in great veneration; or that he might ascribe his conquest of the land to his idols, as the Israelites did to the true God, by setting up this monument in the entrance or beginning of it. Keep silence till my servants be gone; whom he would not have acquainted with a business which he supposed to be of great and close importance.

20 And Ehud came unto him; and he was sitting in †a summer parlour, which he had for himself alone. And Ehud said, I have a message from God unto thee. And he arose out of his seat.

+ Heb.
a parlour of cooling;
See Amos 3.
15.

They had divers houses and chambers, some for winter, others for summer. See Jer. xxxvi. 22; Amos iii. 15. Which he had for himself alone; into which he used to retire himself from company; which is mentioned as the reason why his servants waited so long ere they went in to him, ver. 25. I have a message, to be delivered not in words, but by actions; Heb. a word, or thing, or business. So that there is no need to charge Ehud with a lie, as some do. From God: this he saith to amuse him, by raising his expectation and wonder, to divert him from any apprehension of his danger, and to oblige him to rise out of his seat, which he knew he would do from the common practice of the heathens in their intercourses with God. And he designedly useth the name Elohim, which was common to the true God and false ones, and not Jehovah, which was peculiar to the true God, because Ehud not knowing whether the message came not from his own false god, he would more certainly rise, and thereby give Ehud more advantage for his blow; whereas he would possibly show his contempt of the God of Israel by sitting still to hear his message. He arose out of his seat, in token of humble subjection and reverence to God; see Numb. xxiii. 18; 2 Kings xxiii. 3; which condemns those Christians that behave themselves irreverently in the presence and service of the true God.

21 And Ehud put forth his left hand, and took the dagger from his right thigh, and thrust it into his belly:

22 And the haft also went in after the blade; and the fat closed upon the blade, so that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly; and || the dirt came out.

¶ Or,
It came out at the fundament.

i. e. His excrements came forth, not at the wound, which closed up, but at the fundament, as is usual when persons die either a natural or violent death.

23 Then Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them.

Ehud went forth, with a composed countenance and gait, without any fear; being well assured that God, who by his extraordinary call had put him upon that enterprise, would by his special providence preserve him, and carry him through it. Upon him; either upon the king, or upon or after himself. Locked them; either by pulling it close after him, as we do when doors have spring-locks; or by taking the key with him for more caution; and this he did, that they supposing the king to be retired, might wait till he was gone.

24 When he was gone out, his servants came; and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he || covereth his feet in his summer chamber.

¶ Or, doeth his easement.
1 Sam. 24. 3.

Covereth his feet: this phrase is used only here and 1 Sam. xxiv. 3. It is commonly understood in both places, of easing nature; because the men not then wearing breeches, as we do, but long coats, they did in that act cover their feet, as women do: but a late judicious interpreter expounds it of composing himself to take a little sleep or rest, as was very usual to do in the day-time in those hot countries, 2 Sam. iv. 5; xi. 2. And when they did so in cool places, such as this summer parlour unquestionably was, they used to cover their feet, as appears from Ruth iii.

7. And this may seem to be the more probable, both because the summer parlour was more proper for this use than for the former; and because this was a more likely reason of their long waiting at his door, lest they should disturb his repose. And this sense best agrees with Saul's case in the cave, when being asleep David could more securely cut off the lap of his garment, 1 Sam. xxiv. 3, where see my annotations.

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened the doors of the parlour; therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth.

Ashamed, or, confounded, not knowing what to say or think; lest they should either disturb him, or be guilty of neglect towards him. A key; another key, it being usual in princes' courts to have divers keys for the same door.

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and passed beyond the quarries, and escaped unto Seirath.

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that †he blew a trumpet in the †mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him from the mount, and he before them.

31 ¶ And after him was ° Shamgar the son of Anath, which slew of the Philistines six hundred men ° with an ox goad: † and he also delivered ° Israel.

Slew six hundred men with an ox-goad; as Samson did a thousand with the jaw-bone of an ass; both being miraculous actions, and not at all incredible to him that believes a God, who could easily give strength both to the persons and to their weapons to effect this.

CHAP. IV.

King Jabin oppresses Israel; his captain-general was Sisera, 1—3. The prophetess Deborah, from the Lord commands Barak to go out against him; promiseth victory; she herself marcheth with him, 4—14. Sisera's host is beaten; he flees: Jael hides him in her tent, and while he sleeps she kills him, 15—23. King Jabin is destroyed, 24.

AND ° the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the LORD, when Ehud was dead.

2 And the LORD ° sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan, that reigned in ° Hazor; the captain of whose host was ° Sisera, which dwelt in ° Harosheth of the Gentiles.

King of Canaan, i. e. of the land where the most of the Canaanites, strictly so called, now dwelt, which seems to be in the northern part of Canaan. This seems to be of the posterity of that Jabin, whom Joshua slew, Josh. xi. 10, who watched all opportunities to recover his ancient possessions, and to revenge his own and father's quarrel upon the Israelites. In Hazor; either, 1. In the city of Hazor, which though taken and burnt by Joshua, chap. xi. 11, yet might be retaken and rebuilt by the Canaanites. Or, 2. In the territory or kingdom of Hazor, which might now be restored to its former largeness and power, Josh. xi. 10, the names of cities being oft put for their territories, as Zorah, a city, Josh. xv. 33, is put for the fields belonging to it, Judg. xiii. 2, in which Samson's parents lived, Judg. xiii. 25; xvi. 31; xviii. 2. Harosheth of the Gentiles; so called, because it was much frequented and inhabited by the Gentiles; either by the Canaanites, who being beaten out of their former possessions, seated themselves in those northern parts; or by other nations coming there for traffic, or upon other occasions, as Strabo notes of those parts; whence Galilee, where this was, is called Galilee of the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel cried unto the LORD: for he had nine hundred † chariots of iron; and twenty years ° he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

More than the former tyrants; partly from his malice and hatred against the Israelites; and principally from God's just judgment, the growing punishment being most suitable to their aggravated wickedness.

4 ¶ And Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.

As there were men prophets, so there were also women prophetesses, as Miriam, Exod. xv. 20, Huldah, 2 Kings xxii. 14, and divers others; but the word prophets or prophetesses is very ambiguous in both Testaments; sometimes being used of persons extraordinarily inspired by God, and endowed with a power of working miracles, and foretelling things to come; and sometimes of persons endowed with special, though not miraculous, gifts or graces, for the better understanding of and discoursing about the word and mind of God, for praising of God, or the like; of which see 1 Chron. xxv. 1; 1 Cor. xi. 5; xiv. 1, 3, 4, &c. And of this sort were the sons of the prophets, or such who were bred in the schools of the prophets, who are oft called prophets, as 1 Sam. x. 5, 10—12. See also 1 Kings xviii. 4; xix. 10. And because we read nothing of Deborah's miraculous actions, peradventure she was only a woman of eminent holiness and prudence, and knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, by which she was singularly qualified for the judging of the people according to the laws of God. If it be alleged that she foresaw and foretold the following victory, so did all the sons of the prophets foresee and foretell Elijah's translation, 2 Kings ii. 3, 5, which yet were not extraordinary prophets. The wife of Lapidoth; or, a woman of Lapidoth; and so Lapidoth is not the name of a man, but of the place of her birth or abode. She judged Israel, i. e. determined causes and controversies arising among the Israelites, as is implied, ver. 5. And this Jabin might suffer to be done, especially by a woman; and the frequent discharge of this part of the judge's office, whereby she gained great power and authority with the people, did notably (though not observed by the tyrant) prepare the way for her sliding into the other part of her office, which was to defend and rescue the people from their enemies.

5 ° And she dwelt under the palm tree of Deborah between Ramah and Beth-el in mount Ephraim: and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.

To have their suits and causes determined by her sentence.

6 And she sent and called ° Barak the son of Abinoam out ° of Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the LORD God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulun?

She sent and called Barak, by virtue of that power which God had given her, and the people owned in her. Kedesh-naphtali; so called, to distinguish it from other places of that name, one in Judah, Josh. xv. 23, and another in Issachar, 1 Chron. vi. 72. Hath not the Lord God of Israel commanded? i. e. assuredly God hath commanded thee: this is not the fancy of a weak woman, which peradventure thou mayst despise, but the command of the great God by my mouth. Which command of God, and the following assurance of success, she might either gather from the general rules of Scripture, and the common course of God's gracious providence, which was always ready to succour them when they cried to God; or receive by instinct or direction from God. Go and draw, or, go; for so this word is oft used, as Gen. xxxvii. 28; Judg. xx. 37; Job xxi. 33; Hob. draw, to wit, thyself, or thy feet. Mount Tabor; a place most fit for his purpose, as being in the borders of divers tribes, and having a large plain at the top of it, where he might conveniently marshal and discipline his army. She names Naphtali and Zebulun, partly, because they were nearest and best known to Barak, and therefore soonest brought together; partly, because they were nearest to the enemy, and therefore must speedily be assembled, or else they were likely to be hindered in their design, whilst the other tribes, being at more distance, had better opportunity of gathering forces for their succour; and partly, because these had most smarted under their oppressor, who was in the heart of their country, and therefore were most forward in the present service: but these are not named exclusively, as appears by the concurrence of some other tribes, as is related, Judg. v.

7 And ° I will draw unto thee to the river Kishon Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand.

I will draw unto thee, by my secret and powerful providence, ordering and overruling his inclinations that way.

8 And Barak said unto her, If thou wilt go with me, then I will go: but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go.

His offer to go with her shows the truth of his faith, for which he is praised, Heb. xi. 32; but his refusal to go without her shows the weakness of his faith, that he could not trust God's bare word, as he ought to have done, without the pledge of the presence of his prophetess, whom he thought God would preserve and deliver, and himself for her sake.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee: notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kedesh.

Notwithstanding the journey, Heb. the way, i. e. the course or practice, as the way is taken, Numb. xxii. 32. A woman; either, 1. Jael; or rather, 2. Deborah, who being, as it were, the judge and chief commandress of the army, the honour of the victory would be ascribed to her. But for Jael, her fact would have been the same, though Barak had gone into the field without Deborah.

10 ¶ And Barak called ° Zebulun and Naphtali to Kedesh; and he went up with ten thousand men ^p at his feet: and Deborah went up with him.

At his feet, i. e. who followed him or his footsteps; possibly he intimates that they were all footmen, the Israelites neither now having, nor otherwise allowed to have, a multitude of horses; and so this is emphatically added, to signify by what contemptible means God overthrew Sisera's great host, wherein there were ten thousand horse, as Josephus reports.

11 Now Heber ^q the Kenite, which was of the children of ^r Hobab the father in law of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the plain of Zaanaim, ^s which is by Kedesh.

Heber; the husband of Jael, ver. 17. The Kenite; of whom see Numb. xxiv. 21, 22; Judg. i. 16. Hobab; called also Jethro. See Numb. x. 29. From the Kenites; from the rest of his brethren, who lived in the wilderness of Judah, Judg. i. 16; which removal is here mentioned, lest any should wonder to find the Kenites in this place. His tent, i. e. his dwelling, which probably was in tents, as shepherds used.

12 And they shewed Sisera that Barak the son of Abinoam was gone up to mount Tabor.

They, i. e. his people dwelling there, or his spies; or, he was told, this being an impersonal speech.

13 And Sisera † gathered together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron, and all the people that were with him, from Harosheth of the Gentiles unto the river of Kishon.

14 And Deborah said unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Sisera into thine hand: ^t is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went down from mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him.

Up, Heb. arise, delay not, fall to thy work. Gone out before thee, to wit, as General of thine army, to fight for thee: see Judg. v. 20; 2 Sam. v. 24. Barak went down from Mount Tabor · he doth not make use of the advantage which he had of the hill, where he might have been out of the reach of his iron chariots, Josh. xvii. 16, but boldly marcheth down into the valley, to give Sisera the opportunity of using all his horses and chariots, that so the victory might be more glorious and wonderful.

15 And ^u the LORD discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet.

The LORD discomfited Sisera, with great terror and noise, as the word signifies, Exod. xiv. 24; Josh. x. 10; 1 Sam. x., most probably with thunder, and lightning, and hailstones, or other such instruments of destruction poured upon them from heaven, as is sufficiently implied, Judg. v. 20. With the edge of the sword, i. e. by the sword of Barak and his army, whose ministry God used; but so that they had little else to do but to kill those whom God by more powerful arms had put to flight. Fled away on his feet, that he might flee away more secretly and securely in the quality of a common soldier, whereas his chariot would have exposed him to more observation and hazard.

16 But Barak pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword; and there was not † a man left.

To wit, in the field; for there were some who fled away, as Sisera did.

17 Howbeit Sisera fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite.

To the tent of Jael; for women had their tents apart from their husbands, Gen. xxiv. 67; xxxi. 33. And here he thought to lurk more securely than in her husband's tent. There was peace; not a league or covenant of friendship, which they were forbidden to make with that cursed people, but only a cessation of hostilities, which he afforded them because they were a peaceable people, abhorring war, and wholly minding pasturage, and were not Israelites, with whom his principal quarrel was; and especially by God's overruling disposal of his heart to favour them who were careful to keep themselves uncorrupted with Israel's sins, and therefore are preserved from their plagues.

18 ¶ And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; fear not. And when he had turned in unto her into the tent, she covered him with a ¶ mantle.

Fear not: this was a promise of security, and therefore she cannot be excused from dissimulation and treachery in the manner, though the substance of her act was lawful and worthy.

19 And he said unto her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink; for I am thirsty. And she opened ^x a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

Gave him milk to drink; either because she had not water in her tent, and pretended fear of discovery or some inconvenience if she went out to fetch it; or as a signification of greater respect; or as a likely mean to cast him into a sleep, which she desired and designed; to which end possibly she might mix something with it to cause sleep, which she could not so conveniently have done with water. Covered him, upon pretence of hiding him, but really to dispose him to sleep.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent, and it shall be, when any man doth come and enquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No.

He speaks imperiously to her; but it is observable, that she gives him no promise to do so, nor makes him any answer; possibly because though she knew her design upon him was warrantable, yet she had proceeded too far in using dissimulation therein.

en. 5. 28. 21 Then Jael Heber's wife [†]took a nail of the tent, and [†]took an hammer in her hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, and fastened it into the ground: for he was fast asleep and weary. So he died.

A nail of the tent; wherewith they used to fasten the tent, which consequently was long and sharp, being headed with iron: these weapons she chooseth, either, 1. Because she had no better weapons at hand, this being only the woman's tent, where arms use not to be kept, and these people being wholly given to peace, and negligent of war, or Sisera having disarmed them before this time. Or, 2. Because she had more skill in the handling these than other weapons, being probably accustomed to fasten the tents herewith. Or, 3. Because this was very proper for his present posture, and which she knew would be effectual. Into his temples; which is the softest part of the skull, and soonest pierced. This might seem a very bold attempt; but it must be considered that she was encouraged to it, partly, by observing that the heavens and all the elements conspired against him, as against one devoted to destruction; partly, by the fair opportunity which God's providence put into her hands; and principally, by the secret instinct of God inciting her to it, and assuring her of success in it. Quest. What shall we judge of this fact of Jael's? It is a difficult question, and necessary to be determined, because on the one hand there seems to be gross perfidiousness, and a horrid violation of all the laws of hospitality and friendship, and of the peace which was established between Sisera and her; and on the other side, this fact of hers is applauded and commended in Deborah's song, Judg. v. 24, &c. And some who make it their business to pick quarrels with the Holy Scriptures, from hence take occasion to question and reject their Divine authority for this very passage, because it commends an act so contrary to all humanity, and so great a breach of faith. And whereas all the pretence of their infidelity is taken from the following song, and not from this history, wherein the fact is barely related, without any reflection upon it, there are many answers given to that argument; as, 1. That there was no league of friendship between Jael and Sisera, but only a cessation of acts of hostility; of which see the notes on ver. 17. 2. That Deborah doth not commend Jael's words, ver. 18, Turn in, my lord; fear not; in which the great strength of this objection lies; but only her action, and that artifice, that he asked water, and she gave him milk; which, if impartially examined, will be found to differ but little from that of warlike stratagems, wherein a man lays a snare for his enemy, and deceives him with pretences of doing something which he never intends. And Sisera, though for the time he pretended to be a friend, yet was in truth a bitter and implacable enemy unto God, and all his people, and consequently to Jael herself. But these and other answers may be omitted, and this one consideration following may abundantly suffice to stop the mouths of these men. It cannot be denied that every word, or passage, or discourse which is recorded in Scripture is not divinely inspired, because some of them were uttered by the devil, and others by holy men of God, but mistaken, (the prophets themselves not always speaking by inspiration,) such as the discourse of Nathan to David, 2 Sam. vii. 3, which God presently contradicted, ver. 4, 5, &c., and several discourses of Job's three friends, which were so far from being divinely inspired, that they were in a great degree unsound, as God himself tells them, Job xlii. 7, Ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath. This being so, the worst that any malicious mind can infer from this place is, That this song, though indited by a good man or woman, was not divinely inspired, but only composed by a person piously-minded, and transported with joy for the deliverance of God's people, but subject to mistake; who therefore, out of zeal to commend the happy instrument of so great a deliverance, might easily overlook the indirectness of the means by which it was accomplished, and commend that which should have been disliked. And if they further object, that it was composed by a prophetess, Deborah, and therefore must be divinely inspired; it may be replied, 1. That it is not certain what kind of prophetess Deborah was, whether extraordinary and infallible, or ordinary, and so liable to mistakes; for there were prophets of both kinds, as hath been proved above, on ver. 4. 2. That every expression of a true and extraordinary prophet was not divinely inspired, as is evident from Nathan's mistake above mentioned, and from Samuel's mistake concerning Eliab, whom he thought to be the Lord's anointed, 1 Sam. xvi. 6.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will shew thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 So ^{*}God subdued on that day Jabin ^{Ps. 18. 47.} the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel [†]prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan. ^{† Heb. going west and was hard.}

CHAP. V.

Deborah exhorts to praise; she begins; recounts the former wonders and mercies of God to his people, 1—5. From the miseries of former times glories in their present state, 6—9. Excites the governors, &c. to praise the Lord, 10—13. Commends the chief of the tribes who went forth willingly to this battle, and checks the unwilling who tarried at home, 14—18. Describes the victory in all its circumstances, 19—22. Curseth Meroz for not coming to their assistance, 23. Extols Jael and her act, 24—27. Derideth Sisera's court ladies, 28—30. Prays for like judgment on their enemies, and prosperity to God's people, 31.

THEN ^{*}sang Deborah and Barak the son of Abinoam on that day, saying, ^{a See Exod. 15. 1. Ps. 18. title.}

Deborah was the composer of this song, as may be gathered from ver. 7.

2 Praise ye the LORD for the ^bavenging of Israel, ^cwhen the people willingly offered themselves. ^{b Ps. 18. 47. c 2 Chron. 17. 16. 1 Mac. 2. 42.}

Praise ye the Lord; give him the praise who hath done the work. For the avenging of Israel; or, for taking vengeance, to wit, upon his and their enemies, by Israel, or for Israel, for Israel's benefit, or for the injuries and violences offered by them to Israel. The people; chiefly Zebulun and Naphtali, below, ver. 18; iv. 6, and others hereafter mentioned. Willingly offered themselves, when neither Deborah nor Barak had any power to compel them.

3 ^dHear, O ye kings; give ear, O ye princes; I, even I, will sing unto the LORD; I will sing praise to the LORD God of Israel. ^{d Deut. 32. 1, 3. Ps. 2. 10.}

You especially that live near to Israel, and have evil minds and designs against Israel, know this for your instruction, and caution, and terror too, if you shall presume to molest them. To the Lord God of Israel, who, as you see by this plain instance, is both able and resolved to defend them from all their enemies.

4 LORD, ^ewhen thou wentest out of Seir, when thou marchest out of the field of Edom, ^fthe earth trembled, and the heavens dropped, the clouds also dropped water. ^{e Deut. 33. 2. Ps. 68. 7. f 2 Sam. 22. 8. Ps. 68. 8. Is. 64. 3. Hab. 3. 3, 10.}

Seir and Edom are the same place; and these two expressions note the same thing, even God's marching in the head of his people from Seir or Edom towards the land of Canaan. Whilst the Israelites were encompassing Mount Seir, there were none of the following effects; but when once they had done that, and got Edom on their backs, then they marched directly forwards towards the land of Canaan. The prophetess being to praise God for the present mercy, takes her rise higher, and begins her song with the commemoration of the former and ancient deliverances afforded by God to his people, the rather because of the great resemblance this had with them, in the extraordinary and miraculous manner of them. The earth; either, 1. The inhabitants of the earth or land; or, 2. The earth, properly taken, as the following passages are; God prepared the way for his people, and struck a dread into their enemies by earthquakes, as well as by other terrible signs. The clouds also dropped water, i. e. thou didst send most dreadful showers of rain, storms and tempests, thunder and lightning, and other tokens of thy displeasure, upon thine enemies; as may appear by comparing this with other parallel texts.

5^s The mountains † melted from before the LORD, evenⁿ that Sinai from before the LORD God of Israel.

Melted, or flowed, with floods of water poured out of the clouds upon them, and from them flowing down in a mighty stream upon the lower grounds, and carrying down some part of the mountain with it, as is usual in excessive showers.

She slides into the mention of another and a more ancient appearance of God for his people, to wit, in Sinai; it being usual in Scripture repetitions of former actions to put divers together into a narrow compass, and in few words. The sense is, No wonder that the mountains of the Amorites and Canaanites melted and trembled when thou didst lead thy people towards them; for even Sinai itself could not bear thy presence, but melted in like manner before thee. Or, as that Sinai did upon a like manifestation of thyself; so there is only a defect of the particle as, which I have showed to be frequent.

6 In the days of 'Shamgar the son of Anath, in the days of 'Jael, 'the highways were unoccupied, and the † travellers walked through † byways.

In the days of Shamgar; whilst Shamgar lived, who was, if not a judge, yet an eminent person for strength and valour, Judg. iii. 31. In the days of Jael: Jael, though an illustrious woman, and of great authority and influence upon the people, did effect nothing for the deliverance of God's people till God raised me up, &c. Through by-ways; partly because of the Canaanites, who, besides the public burdens and tributes which they laid upon them, waited for all opportunities of doing them mischief secretly; their soldiers watching for travellers in common roads, as is usual with such in times of war; and partly because of the robbers even of their own people, who having cast off the fear and worship of God, and there being no king or ruler in Israel to restrain or punish them, and being also many of them reduced to great want, through the oppression of the Canaanites, it is not strange, if, in those times of public disorder and ataxy, divers of the Israelites themselves did break forth into acts of injustice and violence, even against their own brethren, whom they could meet with in convenient places, which made travellers seek for by-paths.

7 The inhabitants of the villages ceased, they ceased in Israel, until that I Deborah arose, that I aroseⁿ a mother in Israel.

The villages ceased; the people forsook all their unfortified towns, as not being able to protect them from military insolence. A mother, i. e. to be to them as a mother, to instruct, and rule, and protect them, which duties a mother oweth to her children as far as she is able.

8 Theyⁿ chose new gods; then was war in the gates: ° was there a shield or spear seen among forty thousand in Israel?

They did not only submit to idolatry when they were forced to it by tyrants, but they freely chose new gods; new to them, and unknown to their fathers, and new in comparison of the true and everlasting God of Israel, being but upstarts, and of yesterday. In the gates, i. e. in their walled cities, which have gates and bars; gates are oft put for cities, as Gen. xxii. 17; Deut. xvii. 2; Obad. 11. Then their strongest holds fell into the hands of their enemies. Was there, i. e. there was not; the meaning is not that all the Israelites had no arms, for here is mention made only of shields or spears; so they might have swords, and bows, and arrows to offend their enemies; but either that they had but few arms among them, being many thousands of them disarmed by the Canaanites; or that they generally neglected the use of arms, as being utterly dispirited, and without all hope of recovering their lost liberty, and being necessitated to other employments for subsistence.

9 My heart is toward the governors of Israel, that^p offered themselves willingly among the people. Bless ye the LORD.

I greatly honour and love those, who being the chief of the people in wealth and dignity, did not withdraw themselves from the work, as such usually do; but did expose themselves to the same hazards, and joined with their meaner brethren in this noble but dangerous attempt, and by their examples and countenance engaged others in it. Bless ye the Lord; who inclined their hearts to this undertaking, and gave them success in it. As she gives instruments their due, so she is careful the sovereign Cause and Lord of all lose not his glory.

10 || ° Speak, ye^r that ride on white asses, ° ye that sit in judgment, and walk by the way.

Speak; celebrate the praises of our mighty God, whose hand hath done this. Ye that ride on white asses, i. e. magistrates and nobles, who used to do so, Judg. x. 4; xii. 14; horses being in a manner forbidden there, Deut. xvii. 16. Ye that walk by the way, i. e. you that now can safely travel about your business in those highways, which before you durst neither ride nor walk in. So great and mean persons are jointly excited to praise God.

11 They that are delivered from the noise of archers in the places of drawing water, there shall they rehearse the † righteous acts of the LORD, even the righteous acts toward the inhabitants of his villages in Israel: then shall the people of the LORD go down to the gates.

From the noise of archers; either, 1. From the noise or sound, and consequently the force of those arrows which are shot at them; but she names the noise, because this epithet is frequently given to bows and arrows in poetical writings. Or, 2. From the triumphant noise and shout of archers rejoicing when they meet with their prey. In the places of drawing water; at those pits or springs of water, which were scarce and precious in those hot countries, to which the people's necessities forced them oft to resort, and nigh unto which the archers did usually lurk in woods, or thickets, or hedges, that from thence they might shoot at them, and kill and spoil them. When they come to those places with freedom and safety, which before they could not, they shall with thankfulness rehearse this righteous, and faithful, and gracious work of God, in rescuing his people, and punishing his enemies. He mentions the inhabitants of his villages, because as their danger was greater, ver. 7, so was their deliverance, and their obligation to praise God. To the gates, to wit, of their cities, which were the chief places to which both city and country resorted for public business and matters of justice, from which they had been debarred by their oppressors; but now they had free access and passage, either in or out of the gates, as their occasions required; and they who had been driven from their cities, now returned to them in peace and triumph; so the citizens' deliverance is celebrated here, as the countrymen's is in the foregoing words.

12 ° Awake, awake, Deborah: awake, awake, utter a song: arise, Barak, and lead thy captivity captive, thou son of Abinoam.

Awake, awake; stir up thyself and all that is within thee to admire and praise the Lord. Lead thy captivity captive: how could this be done when there was none of them left? Judg. iv. 16. Answ. 1. None were left to make head against them. 2. None is oft put for few, and those few

Ps. 49. 14. have dominion over the nobles among the people: the LORD made me have dominion over the mighty.

Thus God did not only preserve the poor and despised remnant of his people from the fury of the oppressor before this war, and from the destruction which Sisera designed and promised himself to bring upon them by this war; but also gave them the victory, and thereby the dominion over the princes and nobles of Canaan, who were combined against them. Me, though but a weak woman.

14 * Out of Ephraim was there a root ch. 3. 27. of them * against Amalek; after thee, Benjamin, among thy people; out of Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that † handle the pen of the writer.
ch. 3. 13.

Now she relates the carriage and miscarriage of the several tribes in this expedition; and she begins with Ephraim. Was there a root of them; either, first, Of the Ephraimites; or, secondly, Of them that came forth to this expedition. By root she seems to mean a branch, as that word is sometimes used, as Isa. xi. 10; liii. 2; by which also she may note the fewness of those that came out of Ephraim, that fruitful bough consisting of many branches, Gen. xlix. 22, yielding but one branch or a handful of men to this service. Against Amalek, the constant and sworn enemy of the Israelites, who were confederate with their last oppressors the Moabites, Judg. iii. 13, and in all probability took their advantage now against the Israelites in the southern or middle parts of Canaan, whilst their main force was drawn northward against Jabin and Sisera. Against these therefore Ephraim sent forth a party; and so did Benjamin, as it here follows; and these hindered their conjunction with Jabin's forces, and gave their brethren the advantage of fighting with Sisera alone. After thee, Benjamin: Benjamin followed Ephraim's example. Or, after thee, O Benjamin; and thus the pre-eminence is here given to Benjamin in two respects: First, That he was first in this expedition, as indeed he lay near the Amalekites, and by his example encouraged the Ephraimites. Secondly, That the whole tribe of Benjamin, though now but small, came forth to this war, when the numerous tribe of Ephraim sent only a handful to it. Among thy people; either, first, Among the people of Benjamin, with whom those few Ephraimites united themselves in this expedition. Or, secondly, Among the people or tribes of Israel, to wit, those who engaged themselves in this war. Out of Machir, i. e. out of the tribe of Manasseh, which are elsewhere called by the name of Machir, as Josh. xiii. 31, to wit, out of the half tribe which was within Jordan; for of the other she speaks ver. 17. Governors; either civil governors, the princes and great persons, who were as ready to hazard themselves and their ample estates as the meanest; or military officers, valiant and expert commanders, such as some of Machir's posterity are noted to have been. They that handle the pen of the writer, i. e. even the scribes, who gave themselves to study and writing, whereby they were exempted from military service, did voluntarily enter into this service. Or, they that drew, to wit, the people after them, as that verb is used, Judg. iv. 6. With the pen of the scribe or writer, i. e. who did not only go themselves, but by their letters invited and engaged others to go with them to the battle.

15 And the princes of Issachar were
ch. 4. 14. with Deborah; even Issachar, and also Barak: he was sent on † foot into the valley. || For the divisions of Reuben there were great † thoughts of heart.
+ Heb. his feet.

Were with Deborah, i. e. ready to assist her. Even Issachar, Heb. and Issachar, i. e. the tribe or people of Issachar, following the counsel and example of their princes, and being now at their commandments, as they were afterwards upon another occasion, 1 Chron. xii. 32. And also Barak, or, even as Barak, i. e. they were as hearty and valiant as Barak their general; and as he marched on foot here and Judg. iv. 10, against their enemies' horses and chariots, and that into the valley, where the main use of horses and chariots lies; so did they with no less courage and resolution. The divisions, or separations; whereby they were divided or separated, not so much one from another in their thoughts, counsels, and carriage in this war, (for they seem to be all too well agreed in abiding at home with their sheep, as it follows,) as all from their brethren, from whom they were divided no less in their designs and affections, than in their situation by the river Jordan; and they would not join their interests and forces with them in this common cause. Great thoughts, or, great searchings, as it is ver. 16; great and sad thoughts, and debates, and perplexities of mind among the Israelites, to see themselves deserted by so great and potent a tribe as Reuben was.

16 Why abodest thou ^d among the d Num. 32. 1. sheepfolds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks? || For the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart.
Or, In.

Why wast thou so unworthy and cowardly, so void of all zeal for God, and compassion towards thy brethren, and care for the recovery of thy own liberties and privileges, that thou wouldst not engage thyself in so just, so necessary, and so noble a cause, but didst prefer the care of thy sheep, and thy own present ease and safety, before this generous undertaking? Reuben thought neutrality their wisest course, being very rich in cattle, Numb. xxxii. 1. They were loth to run the hazard of so great a loss, by taking up arms against so potent an enemy as Jabin was; and the bleatings of their sheep were so loud in their ears, that they could not hear the call of Deborah and Barak to this expedition.

17 * Gilead abode beyond Jordan: and e See Josh. 19, 25, 31. why did Dan remain in ships? † Asher continued on the sea || shore, and abode in his || breaches.
f Josh. 19, 29, 31.
Or, port.
Or, creeks.

Gilead is sometimes taken more largely, for all the land of the Israelites beyond Jordan, as Numb. xxxii. 1, 26, 29. So it is not here taken, because Gilead is here distinguished from Reuben and his land. Sometimes it is taken more strictly for that part of the land beyond Jordan which fell to the half tribe of Manasseh, as Numb. xxxii. 39, 40; Deut. iii. 15; Josh. xvii. 1. And sometimes both for that part of Manasseh's, and for Gad's portion, as Josh. xiii. 24, 25, 29—31. And so it seems to be understood here; and the land Gilead is here put for the people or inhabitants of it, Gad and Manasseh. Beyond Jordan, in their own portions, and did not come over Jordan to the help of the Lord, and of his people, as they ought to have done. Dan, whose coast was near the sea, was wholly intent upon his merchandise and shipping, as the great instrument both of his riches and safety; and therefore would not join in this land expedition. On the sea-shore, where their lot lay. In his breaches; either, first, In the creeks of the sea, whether in design to save themselves by ships in case of danger, as Dan also intended; or upon pretence of repairing the breaches made by the sea into their country. Or, secondly, In their broken and craggy rocks and caves therein, in which they thought to secure themselves.

18 * Zebulun and Naphtali were a g ch. 4. 10. people that † jeoparded their lives unto the death in the high places of the field.
+ Heb. exposed to reproach.

Jeopardied, Heb. despised, or reproached, or contemned, comparatively; they chose rather to venture upon a generous and honourable death, than to enjoy a shameful and servile life. In the high places of the field, i. e. upon that large and eminent plain in the top of Mount Tabor, where they put themselves in battle-array, and expected the enemy; though when they saw he did not come up to them, they marched down to meet and fight him.

19 The kings came and fought, then fought the kings of Canaan in Taanach by the waters of Megiddo; ^h they took no gain of money.
h ch. 4. 16. Ps. 44. 12. See ver. 30.

The kings; either confederate with him, or subject to him: for it is known that there were divers petty kings in those parts; which also oftentimes were subject to one greater and more potent king; and particularly this Hazor, where this Jabin now reigned, Judg. iv. 2, was beforetime the head of divers petty kingdoms, Josh. xi. 10. Taanach and Megiddo were two eminent cities, belonging indeed to Manasseh, Judg. i. 27, but seated in the tribe of Issachar, Josh. xvii. 11, not far from Mount Tabor, Josh. xvii. 10; Judg. i. 27, nor from the river Kishon. They took no gain of money; either, first, From Sisera. They fought without pay, whether from mere hatred of the Israelites, and a desire to be revenged upon them; or from a full hope and confidence of paying themselves abundantly out of Israel's spoils. Or, secondly, From the Israelites; so the sense is, They fell, lost all their hopes of money, and rich spoils, and booty, which they assured themselves of; instead of gaining a prey, they lost themselves.

1 See Josh. 16. 11. Ps. 77. 17, 18. k ch. 4. 15. † Heb. paths.

20 ¹They fought from heaven; ²the stars in their † courses fought against Sisera.

Or, they from heaven, or the heavenly host fought, by thunder, and lightning, and hailstones, possibly mingled with fire. Compare Josh. x. 11; 1 Sam. vii. 10. The stars; which raised these storms by their influences, which they do naturally and ordinarily, but now far more, when God sharpened their influences, and disposed the air to receive and improve their impressions. In their courses, or, from their paths, or stations, or high places. As soldiers fight in their ranks and places assigned them, so did these, and that with advantage, as those enemies do which fight from the higher ground.

21 ¹The river of Kishon swept them away, that ancient river, the river Kishon. O my soul, thou hast trodden down strength.

The river of Kishon, though not great in itself, and therefore fordable, was now much swelled and increased by the foregoing storm and rain, as Josephus affirms; and therefore drowned those who being pursued by the hand of God, and by the Israelites, were forced into it, and thought to pass over it, as they did before. That ancient river; so called, either, first, In opposition to those rivers which are of a later date, being made by the hand and art of man. Or, secondly, Because it was a river anciently famous for some remarkable exploits, for which it was celebrated by the ancient poets or writers, though not here mentioned. Thou hast trodden down strength, i. e. thou, O Deborah, though but a weak woman, hast, by God's assistance and blessing upon thy counsels and prayers, subdued a potent enemy. Such apostrophes and abrupt speeches are frequent in poetical scriptures.

22 Then were the horsehoofs broken by the, means of the || pransings, the pransings of their mighty ones.

† Or, trampings, or, plungings.

Their horses, in which they put most confidence, had their hoofs, which is their support and strength, broken, either by dreadful hailstones, or rather, by their swift and violent running over the stony grounds, when they fled away with all possible speed from God and from Israel. By the means of the pransings; or, because of their fierce or swift courses. Of their mighty ones; either, first, Of their strong and valiant riders, who forced their horses to run away as fast as they could. Or, secondly, Of their horses, as this word signifies, Jer. viii. 16; xlvii. 3; l. 42, i. e. of themselves; the antecedent for the relative.

23 Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof; ^mbecause they came not to the help ⁿof the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

m ch. 21. 9. 10. Neh. 3. 5. n 1 Sam. 17. 47. & 18. 17. & 25. 28.

Meroz; a place then, no doubt, eminent and considerable, though now there be no remembrance of it left, which possibly might be the effect of this bitter curse; as God curseth Amalek in this manner, that he would utterly blot out their remembrance, &c., Exod. xvii. 14; Deut. xxv. 19. And this place above all others may be thus severely cursed, either because it was near the place of the fight, and therefore had the greatest opportunity and obligation to engage with and to assist their brethren; and their denying their help was a great discouragement to all their brethren, whose hearts, no doubt, were greatly afflicted, and might have utterly fainted at this great miscarriage, and scandalous example; or for some other great aggravation of their cowardice and treachery, which may easily be imagined, though it be not here expressed. Said the angel of the Lord: she signifies that this curse proceeded not from her spleen or ill will towards that place, nor from her own private opinion or affection, but from Divine inspiration; and that if all the rest of the song should be taken but for the breathings and expressions of a pious and devout soul, but liable to mistake, yet this branch of it was immediately dictated to her by the Lord, by the ministry of an angel; otherwise she neither would nor durst have uttered so bitter a curse against them. Of the Lord; either, first, Of the Lord's people; for God takes what is done for or against his people as if it was done to himself: see Isa. lxiii. 9; Zech. ii. 8; Matt. xxv. 45. Or, secondly, Of the Lord himself, who though he did not need, yet did require and expect their help and concurrence; and he expresseth it thus, to show the sinfulness and unreasonableness of their cowardly desertion of this cause, because it was the cause of God, and they had the call of God to it, whom they knew to be able easily to crush that enemy whom they dreaded, and who had promised to do it.

24 Blessed above women shall ^oJael the ^pwife of Heber the Kenite be, ^qblessed shall she be above women in the tent.

Blessed above women; celebrated, and praised, and endowed with all sorts of blessings more than they. But of this fact of Jael's, see the notes on Judg. iv. 21. In the tent; in her tent or habitation, in her house and family, and all her affairs; for she and hers dwelt in tents. The tent is here mentioned in allusion to the place where this fact was done.

25 ^rHe asked water, and she gave him ^smilk; she brought forth butter in a lordly dish.

^r ch. 4. 19.

Butter, or, cream, i. e. the choicest of her milk; so the same thing is repeated in differing words. In a lordly dish; which you are not to understand of such a stately and costly dish as the luxury of after-ages brought in, which is not agreeable to the simplicity, either of this family, or of those ancient times; but of a comely and convenient dish, the best which she had, and such as the better sort of persons then used.

26 ^tShe put her hand to the nail, and ^uher right hand to the workmen's hammer; and ^v† with the hammer she smote Sisera, she smote off his head, when she had pierced and stricken through his temples.

Her hand, i. e. her left hand, as appears from the nature of the thing; and from the right hand, which is opposed to it. Smote off; or, struck through, as the LXX. and Syriac render it; or brake, as the Chaldee hath it. When she had pierced, Heb. and she pierced; or, and the nail pierced.

Here is a lively representation of the thing done. At the first blow or wound he was awakened, and made some attempt to rise; but being astonished and very weak, she also following her first blow with others, he found himself impotent, and fell down dead; and then she struck the nail quite through his head into the ground, as is said, Judg. iv. 21.

28 The mother of Sisera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattice, Why is his chariot so long in coming? why tarry the wheels of his chariots?

CHAP. VI.

The Midianites oppress Israel, 1—6. A prophet raised rebukes them, 7—10. An angel calls Gideon to Israel's deliverance, 11—16; confirms him by a miracle, 17—21. He builds an altar; calls it Jehovah-shalom; and offereth there. By God's command he breaks down the altar of Baal: his name Jerub-baal, 22—32. The Midianites gather together to fight; and Gideon prepares against them: God strengthens and confirms him by a miracle, 33—40.

seven years.

For although the generality of the Midianites had been cut off by Moses about two hundred years ago, yet many of them doubtless fled into the neighbouring countries, whence afterwards they returned into their own land, and in that time might easily grow to be a very great number; especially when God furthered their increase, that they might be a fit scourge for his people Israel when they transgressed.

5 For they came up with their cattle and their tents, and they came ^eas grass-hoppers for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

Without number, i. e. so many that it was not easy to number them. It is an hyperbole.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished because of the Midianites; and the children of Israel ^hcried unto the LORD.

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent †a prophet unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and ⁱdrave them out from before you, and gave you their land;

10 And I said unto you, I am the LORD your God; ^hfear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but ye have not obeyed my voice.

Fear not, i. e. do not serve or worship them.

11 ¶ And there came an angel of the LORD, and sat under an oak which was in Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash ^lthe Abi-ezrite: and his son ^mGideon threshed wheat by the winepress, †to hide it from the Midianites.

In Ophrah, to wit, in Manasseh; for there was another Ophrah in Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 23. The Abi-ezrite; of the posterity of Abi-ezer; of whom see Josh. xvii. 2; 1 Chron. vii. 18. See Judg. viii. 27, 32. Threshed wheat; not with oxen, as the manner was, Deut. xxv. 4; but with a staff, to prevent discovery. 12 And the "angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, The LORD is ^owith thee, thou mighty man of valour.

i. e. Will assist thee against thine and mine enemies. Thou mighty man of valour; to whom I have given strength and courage for this end.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my Lord, if the LORD be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and ^pwhere be all his miracles ^qwhich our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? but now the LORD hath ^rforsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, ^sGo in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: ^thave not I sent thee?

The Lord looked upon him, with a settled and pleasant countenance, as a testimony of his favour to him, and of his readiness to help him. Go in this thy might; or, go now, or at this time, in thy might; the strength which thou hast already received, and dost now further receive from me, is sufficient with my help. Have not I sent thee? I do hereby give thee command and commission for this work, and therefore am obliged in honour to assist thee in it.

My present; not a sacrifice, because neither was Gideon a priest, nor was this the place of sacrifice, nor was any altar here, nor was there any such sacrifice as here follows appointed by God; but a repast, or some food for the angel, which he thought to be a man, as appears by ver. 22. Of an ephah of flour, to wit, out of the choicest part of a whole ephah; as also he brought to him the best part of a kid dressed; for a whole ephah and a whole kid had been very superfluous, and improper to provide for and set before one man.

b ch. 13. 19. c See 1 Kin. 18. 33, 34.

20 And the angel of God said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and ^blay them upon this rock, and ^cpour out the broth. And he did so.

By these things he showed himself to be no man that needed such provisions, but a true angel of God, or the Son of God; and by this instance of his omnipotency, gave him assurance that he both could and would consume the Midianites.

e ch. 13. 21.

22 And when Gideon perceived that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon said, Alas, O LORD God! for because I have seen an angel of the LORD face to face.

f Gen. 16. 13. & 32. 30. Ex. 33. 20. ch. 13. 22.

I am an undone man; I must die, and that speedily; for that he feared, ver. 23, according to the common opinion in that case; of which see Gen. xvi. 13; xxxii. 30; Exod. xxxiii. 20; Deut. v. 25, 26. For because, or, for therefore,

&c., i. e. therefore God hath showed me this sight as a presage of my death.

23 And the LORD said unto him, Peace be unto thee; fear not: thou shalt not die.

The Lord spake by inward suggestion, rather than in a visible apparition. Peace be unto thee; thou shalt receive no hurt by this vision, as thou fearest; but only peace, i. e. all the blessings needful for thy own happiness, and for the present work; for this is a very comprehensive phrase among the Hebrews.

24 Then Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it ^f|| Jehovah-shalom: unto this day it is yet ^hin Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites.

† That is, The LORD send peace: See Gen. 22. 14. Ex. 17. 15. Jer. 33. 16. Ezek. 48. 35. h ch. 8. 32.

There, to wit, on the top of the rock, as is evident from ver. 20, and especially from ver. 26, where that which is here expressed only in general, and by anticipation, is more particularly described, according to the usage of the Scripture. Jehovah-shalom, i. e. the Lord's peace; the sign or witness of God's speaking peace to me, and to his people; or the place where he spake peace to me, when I expected nothing but destruction.

25 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, Take thy father's young bullock, ^{||}even the second bullock of seven years old, and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and ⁱcut down the grove that is by it:

|| Or, and.

i Ex. 34. 13. Deut. 7. 8.

Even the second bullock: thus there was but one bullock, which was young, to wit, comparatively, but not simply, for it was seven years old; and of such this Hebrew word is used, Job xxi. 10; for these creatures are fruitful above seven years. Or thus, thy father's young bullock, and the second bullock: so there were two bullocks. But because there is but one of them mentioned both in the next verse, and in the execution of this command, ver. 28, it is probable it was but one; and the Hebrew particle van, and, is put exegetically for even, or, to wit, as is very usual. And this he calls his father's young bullock, both because his father was the owner of it, and because his father kept and fed it for a sacrifice to Baal. But because it is likely his father kept divers of these cattle of differing ages and statures for that use, either at his own or at the people's charge, therefore he adds, by way of limitation, that he should not take the eldest and the greatest, but the second, to wit, in age, or stature, or goodness, or in the order of sacrifice, that which was to have been sacrificed to Baal in the second place. And this he singled out because of its age; for being seven years old, it began with the Midianitish calamity, and being now to be sacrificed, did fitly signify, that the period of that misery was now come. That thy father hath; which thy father built in his own ground, though for the common use of the whole city, ver. 28-30. The grove that is by it; planted by the altar for idolatrous or impure uses, as the manner of idolaters was. See Judg. iii. 7. This action might seem injurious to his father's rights and authority; but God's command was sufficient warrant, and Gideon was now called to be the supreme magistrate, whereby he was made his father's superior, and was empowered, and authorized, and enjoined to root out all idolatry and superstition, and the instruments thereof.

26 And build an altar unto the LORD thy God upon the top of this [†]rock, ^{||}in the ordered place, and take the second bullock, and offer a burnt sacrifice with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

+ Heb. strong place. || Or, in an orderly manner.

Upon the top of this rock; of which ver. 20, 21. Heb. of this strong hold; for in that calamitous time the Israelites retreated to such rocks, and hid and fortified themselves in them. In the ordered place, i. e. in a plain and smooth part of the rock, where an altar may be conveniently built. Or, in order, i. e. in such manner as I have appointed; for God had given rules about the building of altars. Offer a burnt-sacrifice : Gideon was no priest, nor was this the appointed place of sacrifice ; but God can dispense with his own institutions, though we may not ; and his call gave Gideon sufficient authority.

27 Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and did as the LORD had said unto him : and so it was, because he feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

Doubtless he had acquainted the ten men with his design, and the assurance of success in it, whereby they were easily induced to assist him, if not sincerely, yet for the expectation of advantage to themselves by it. Because he feared ; not so much lest he should suffer for it, for he knew very well the doing it by night with so many hands could not hinder the discovery, and consequently the punishment of it ; but lest he should be prevented from doing it.

28 ¶ And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

Not upon Baal's altar, for which it was designed ; but upon an altar erected in contempt of Baal.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing ? And when they enquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

Which they might easily conjecture, partly by his known aversion from the worship of Baal, and partly because no other person durst presume to do such a thing ; but they might more certainly learn it from some of the persons employed in it, who through fear or favour might inform them.

30 Then the men of the city said unto Joash, Bring out thy son, that he may die : because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him, Will ye plead for Baal ? will ye save him ? he that will plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning : if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.

Will ye plead for Baal ? Why are you so zealous in pleading for that Baal, for the worship whereof you suffer such grievous calamities at this day, and from whom you have no help ? It is plain that Joash had been a worshipper of Baal ; either therefore he was now convinced by Gideon's information and action, or he makes use of this pretence to preserve his son, being indeed indifferent in matters of religion ; and therefore as he did worship Baal to comply with his neighbours, so now he deserts him to rescue his son. He that will plead for him, let him be put to death ; he that shall further plead for such a god as this, deserves to die for his folly and impiety. It is not probable that this was all that he said for his son's defence ; or that he would neglect to mention the call his son had from God to it, the apparition of an angel, the promise of deliverance ; but it is usual in Scripture to give only some short hints of those things which were more largely discoursed. Whilst it is yet morning, i. e. instantly, without delay ; for it was now morning time, as appears from ver. 28, &c. Let him plead for himself, as the God of Israel hath often done when any indignity or injury hath been done to him. But Baal hath now showed that he is neither able to help you nor himself, and therefore is not worthy to be served any longer. This courageous and resolute answer was necessary to stop the torrent of the people's fury ; and it was drawn from him, partly by the sense of his son's extreme danger, and partly by the confidence he had that God would plead his son's cause, and use him for the rescue of his people.

¶ That is, Let Baal plead. 1 Sam. 12. 11. 2 Sam. 11. 21. Jerubbabekah ; that is, Let the shameful thing plead. See Jer. 11. 13. Hos. 9. 10.

32 Therefore on that day he called him ¶ Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

He called him, i. e. Joash called Gideon so, Judg. vii. 1, in remembrance of this noble exploit, and to put a brand upon Baal.

33 ¶ Then all the Midianites and the Amalekites and the children of the east were gathered together, and went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel.

Not that Jezreel in Judah, of which Josh. xv. 56 ; but another in the borders of Manasseh and Issachar, Josh. xvii. 16 ; xix. 18, which is not far distant from Ophrah, where Gideon dwelt, and now was.

34 But the Spirit of the LORD came upon Gideon, and he blew a trumpet ; and Abi-ezer was gathered after him.

Came upon Gideon, inspiring him with extraordinary wisdom, and courage, and zeal, to vindicate God's honour and his country's liberty. Compare 1 Chron. xii. 18 ; 2 Chron. xxiv. 20. Abi-ezer, i. e. the Abi-ezrites, his kindred, and their servants, and others ; who finding no harm coming to him for the destroying of Baal, but rather a blessing from God, in giving him strength and courage for so great and dangerous an attempt, changed their minds, and followed him as the person by whose hands God would deliver them.

35 And he sent messengers throughout all Manasseh ; who also was gathered after him : and he sent messengers unto Asher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali ; and they came up to meet them.

Throughout all Manasseh, on both sides of Jordan. Unto Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali ; because these tribes were nearest to him, and so could soonest join with him ; and were nearest the enemy also, ver. 33, and therefore were most sensible of the calamity, and would in all reason be most forward to rescue themselves from it.

36 ¶ And Gideon said unto God, If thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, Gideon said this in way of humble supplication, partly for the strengthening of his own faith, and partly for the greater encouragement of his soldiers in this great and strange attempt.

37 Behold, I will put a fleece of wool on the floor ; and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beside, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said.

Upon all the earth beside, i. e. upon all that spot of ground which adjoineth to and encompasseth the fleece.

38 And it was so : for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water.

39 And Gideon said unto God, Let not thine anger be hot against me, and I will speak but this once : let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece ; let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew.

Which was more difficult and preternatural than the former instance, because if there be any moisture, such bodies as fleeces of wool are most likely to drink it up.

40 And God did so that night : for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

CHAP. VII.

Gideon with two and thirty thousand men encamps against the Midianites ; they, by God's command and token, are lessened to three hundred, 1—8. He is encouraged by a dream, and its interpretation, 9—15 ; divideth his army into three companies; who all with one accord blow the trumpets, and break the pitchers, wherein the lamps were, in pieces, 16—20. The Midianites are terrified, flee and destroy one another, 21, 22. The next adjoining Israelites pursue them to stop their passage over Jordan: two princes of the Midianites are taken by the Ephraimites, 23—25.

a ch. 6. 32. THEN *Jerubbaal, who is Gideon, and all the people that were with him, rose up early, and pitched beside the well of Harod: so that the host of the Midianites were on the north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the valley.

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel ^bvaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

Too many for me, i. e. for my purpose; which is, so to deliver Israel, that it may appear to be my own miraculous act, that so I may have all the glory of it, and they may be more strongly obliged to love and serve me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, ^cWhosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from mount Gilead. And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand; and there remained ten thousand.

*Mount Gilead; not that famous Mount Gilead which was beyond Jordan; for it is apparent that both the camps of the Israelites and of the Midianites were on this side Jordan: but another Mount Gilead in the tribe of Manasseh; which might be so called, either for some resemblance it had with the other Mount Gilead, or in remembrance of their father Gilead; or that this might be a memorial of their near relation to their brethren, notwithstanding their being divided one from another by Jordan; or for some other reason now unknown at this distance of time and place. Or, the words may be rendered towards Mount Gilead; for the Hebrew particle min, or men, is sometimes rendered towards, of which see Gen. xi. 2; xiii. 11; Deut. xxxii. 2; 2 Sam. vi. 2. And so it may be understood of the famous Mount Gilead beyond Jordan, which he may mention here, either, 1. Because many of his soldiers were of that half tribe of Manasseh which dwelt there, and so it was most proper for them to return thither; or, 2. Because that was their safest course, to get furthest from the danger which they feared; or, 3. Because though he would remove them from danger, yet he would not have them dispersed, but kept together in a body about Mount Gilead; knowing that they who had not courage enough to fight their enemies, might have valour enough to pursue them when they were beaten by others; and suspecting that the Midianites, if beaten, would probably flee that way. Twenty and two thousand; who finding their whole army to be very small in comparison of their enemy's, who were a hundred and thirty-five thousand, Judg. viii. 10, and they, no doubt, well armed and disciplined, and encouraged by long success; whereas the Israelites were dispirited with long servitude, and many of them unfurnished with arms and provisions, lost the courage which in the beginning they seemed to have.*

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

Unto the water; either that which ran from the well of Harod, mentioned ver. 1, or some other brook. I will try them for thee; because thy proclamation hath not sufficiently tried them; for many who are fearful indeed will put on the face, and desire the opinion of being valiant persons; I will take another course.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth, him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

It is true, there may be natural reasons given why some did only lap of the water, when others bowed down to drink; from the temperance, or fortitude, or patience, or strength, or diligence of the one, and the intemperance, or cowardice, or impatience, or weakness, or slothfulness of the other; but these seem to be mere conjectures: the true reason and design of this course seems to be only this, that God would reduce them to a very small number, which was likely to be done by this means; for the season of the year being hot, and the generality of the soldiers weary, and thirsty, and faint, they would most probably bow down upon their knees, that they might more fully refresh themselves by a liberal draught, as indeed they did; and it could be expected that there would be but few, who either could or would deny themselves in this matter, especially when God concurred in the work, and so disposed of the minds and bodies of them, that all, except three hundred, should lie down to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

Putting their hand to their mouth; taking up a little water in the palm of their hands to put into their mouths.

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, ^dBy the three hundred men that lapped will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

i. e. To his own home, as Numb. xxiv. 11.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men: and the host of Midian was beneath him in the valley.

And their trumpets, i. e. the trumpets belonging to the whole army, even to those who were gone away, which he retained for the use here following. See ver. 16.

9 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the LORD said unto him, ^eArise, get thee down unto the host; for I have delivered it into thine hand.

The same night; after he had dismissed all but the three hundred. That the Lord said unto him, in a dream or vision of the night.

10 But if thou fear to go down, go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host:

If thou fear to go down, to wit, without some further assurance of thy success, I will condescend so far to thee, as to give thee another sign.

11 And thou shalt hear what they say; and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host. Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the ¶armed men that were in the host.

Afterward shall thine hands be strengthened; thou wilt be encouraged to proceed, notwithstanding the smallness of thy number, which may deter thee.

12 And the Midianites and the Amalekites and all the children of the east lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were

13 And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and said, Behold, I dreamed a dream, and, lo, a cake of barley bread tumbled into the host of Midian, and came unto a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along.

A cake of barley bread; a weak and contemptible thing, and in itself as unable to overthrow a tent as to remove a mountain; but being thrown by a Divine hand, bore down all before it; which fitly resembled Gideon's case, which was mean and despicable, as himself saith, Judg. vi. 15; yet he was mighty, through God, to destroy the Midianites.

14 And his fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Joash, a man of Israel: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

As there are many examples of significant dreams given by God to heathens, as Gen. xli.; Dan. ii. and iv., so some of them had the gift of interpreting dreams; which they sometimes did by study and art, and sometimes by Divine direction, as in this case.

15 ¶ And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and † the interpretation thereof, that he worshipped, and returned into the host of Israel, and said, Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

Gideon understood the telling of the dream, though spoken in the Midianitish language; either because it was near akin to the Hebrew, being only a different dialect of it; or because the Israelites had now been accustomed to the Midianites' company and discourse for seven years. He worshipped; he praised God for this miraculous work and special encouragement, whereby he was confirmed in his enterprise.

16 And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put † a trumpet in every man's hand, with empty pitchers, and † lamps within the pitchers.

Into three companies; to make a show of a vast army encompassing them. Lamps, or, torches, made of such materials as would quickly take fire, and keep it for some time. Within the pitchers; partly to preserve the flame from the violence of wind and weather; and partly to conceal it, and surprise their enemy with sudden and unexpected flashes of light.

17 And he said unto them, Look on me, and do likewise: and, behold, when I come to the outside of the camp, it shall be that, as I do, so shall ye do.

For though two hundred of his men were placed on other sides of the camp; yet they were so disposed, that some person or persons, set as watchmen, might see what was done, and give notice to the rest to follow the example.

18 When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then blow ye the trumpets also on every side of all the camp, and say, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

He mentions his own name, together with God's, not out of vain ostentation or arrogance, as if he would equal himself with God; for he mentions God in the first and chief place, and himself only as his minister; but from prudent policy, because his name was grown formidable to them, and so was likely to further his design, and their flight, as it did.

19 ¶ So Gideon, and the hundred men that were with him, came unto the outside of the camp in the beginning of the middle watch; and they had but newly set the watch: and they blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers that were in their hands.

Of the middle watch, i. e. of the second watch; for though afterwards the night was divided into four watches by the Romans, Matt. xiv. 25, yet in more ancient times, and in the eastern parts, it was divided into three. He chose the dark and dead of the night to increase their terror by the trumpets, whose sound would then be loudest and best heard, and the lamps, whose light would then shine most brightly, and seem biggest, to surprise them at disadvantage, and to conceal the smallness of their numbers.

20 And the three companies blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow withal: and they cried, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

Held the lamps and the trumpets, that they might be thought to be a mighty host, having as many troops or companies as there were trumpets and lights.

21 And they ^h stood every man in his place round about the camp: ⁱ and all the host ran, and cried, and fled.

Every man in his place; as if they had only been torch-bearers to the several companies.

22 And the three hundred ^h blew the trumpets, and ^l the LORD set ^m every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host: and the host fled to Beth-shittah † in Zererath, and to the † border of Abel-meholah, unto Tabbath.

They slew one another, either because they suspected treachery, and so fell upon those they first met with; which they might more easily do, because they consisted of several nations, as may be gathered from Judg. vi. 3, and Josephus affirms; or because the darkness of the night made them unable to distinguish friends from foes; or because the suddenness of the thing struck them with horror and amazement; or because God infatuated them, as he hath done many others. Compare 1 Sam. xiv. 20; 2 Chron. xx. 23. Abel-meholah; of which see 1 Kings iv. 12; xix. 16.

23 And the men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali, and out of Asher, and out of all Manasseh, and pursued after the Midianites.

24 ¶ And Gideon sent messengers throughout all ^a mount Ephraim, saying, Come down against the Midianites, and take before them the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan. Then all the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and ^o took the waters unto ^p Beth-barah and Jordan.

Take before them the waters unto Beth-barah, i. e. the passes over those waters to which they are like to come. And Jordan; the fords of Jordan, which river they must pass over into their own country.

25 And they took ^a two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb; and they slew Oreb upon ^r the rock Oreb, and Zeeb they slew at the winepress of Zeeb, and pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon on the ^o other side Jordan.

For Gideon in the pursuit had passed over Jordan, as we read, Judg. viii. 4, which, though mentioned after this, may seem to have been done before it, such transpositions being frequent in sacred story. Or, on this side Jordan, for the Hebrew word is indifferent to both sides: see Gen. i. 10. And so this is opposed to what follows of his passing over Jordan, Judg. viii. 4. And then there is no anticipation here.

CHAP. VIII.

The Ephraimites are displeased with Gideon; he satisfies them, 1—3. He pursueth two kings of the Midianites beyond Jordan, where Succoth and Penuel refuse to relieve Gideon's army: the kings being taken by him, in his return he punisheth those of Succoth and Penuel, 4—17. He revengeth his brethren's death on the two kings, 18—21. He refuseth government, 22, 23; demandeth a present of the spoil, and thereof makes an ephod; places it in Ophrah; it is a cause of idolatry, 24—27. Gideon's children, wives, death, and burial, 30—32. Israel revolts to idolatry; is ungrateful to Gideon's family, 33—35.

^a See ch. 12. 1, 2 Sam. 19. 41.

⁺ Heb. What thing is this that thou hast done unto us?

[†] Heb. strongly.

AND ^a the men of Ephraim said unto him, [†] Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not, when thou wentest to fight with the Midianites? And they did chide with him [†] sharply.

Why hast thou neglected and despised us, in not calling us in to thy help, as thou didst other tribes? These were a proud people, Isa. xi. 13, puffed up with a conceit of their number and strength, and the preference which Jacob by Divine direction gave them above Manasseh, Gen. xlviii. 19, 20, of which tribe Gideon was, who by this act had seemed to advance his own tribe, and to depress theirs.

2 And he said unto them, What have I done now in comparison of you? Is not the gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abi-ezer?

What was done was done by God's immediate hand, making them one to kill another; what I have done, in cutting off some of the fugitive common soldiers, is not to be compared with your exploit in destroying their princes; I began the war, but you have finished. The gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim; what you have gleaned or done after me. Of Abi-ezer, i. e. of the Abi-ezerites, to whom he modestly communicateth the honour of the victory, and doth not arrogate it to himself, as generals commonly do.

3 ^b God hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb: and what was I able to do in comparison of you? Then their [†] anger was abated toward him, when he had said that.

His soft and humble answer allayed their rage and envy. See Prov. xv. 1; xxv. 15.

4 ¶ And Gideon came to Jordan, and passed over, he, and the three hundred men that were with him, faint, yet pursuing them.

Passed over, or, had passed over: when he passed over, see on Judg. vii. 25.

^d Gen. 33. 17. Ps. 60. 6.

5 And he said unto the men of ^d Succoth, Give, I pray you, loaves of bread unto the people that follow me; for they be faint, and I am pursuing after Zebah and Zalmunna, kings of Midian.

Succoth; a place beyond Jordan, Gen. xxxiii. 17; Josh. xiii. 27; Psal. lx. 6. Kings of Midian; where before this time were five kings at once, Numb. xxxi. 8, who either reigned separately in divers parts of the land, or governed by common counsel and consent, as sometimes there were two or three Roman emperors together.

6 ¶ And the princes of Succoth said, ^e Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that ^f we should give bread unto thine army?

Art thou so foolish to think, with thy three hundred faint and weary soldiers, to conquer and destroy a host of fifteen thousand men?

7 And Gideon said, Therefore when the LORD hath delivered Zebah and Zalmunna into mine hand, ^g then I will [†] tear your flesh with the thorns of the wilderness and with briers.

^g ver. 16.

⁺ Heb. through.

With the thorns which grow abundantly in the neighbouring wilderness; I will chastise or beat your naked bodies with thorny rods, even unto death. Or, I will lay you down upon thorns on the ground, and bring the cart-wheel upon you, which will both tear your flesh, and bruise you to death.

8 ¶ And he went up thence ^h to Penuel, and spake unto them likewise: and the men of Penuel answered him as the men of Succoth had answered him.

Penuel; another city beyond Jordan; of which see Gen. xxxii. 30; 1 Kings xii. 25.

9 And he spake also unto the men of Penuel, saying, When I ⁱ come again in peace, ^k I will break down this tower.

Your confidence in which makes you thus proud and presumptuous. He implies that he would afterwards destroy their persons, as is expressed, ver. 17.

10 ¶ Now Zebah and Zalmunna were in Karkor, and their hosts with them, about fifteen thousand men, all that were left of ^l all the hosts of the children of the east: for there fell ^{||} an hundred and twenty thousand men that drew sword.

i. e. Persons expert and exercised in war, besides the retainers to them, Judg. vi. 5.

11 ¶ And Gideon went up by the way of them that dwelt in tents on the east of ^m Nobah and Jogbehah, and smote the host: for the host was ⁿ secure.

Of them that dwelt in tents, i. e. of the Arabians; so fetching a compass, and falling upon them where they least expected it. Nobah and Jogbehah; of which cities see Numb. xxxii. 35, 42. The host was secure; being now got safe over Jordan, and a great way from the place of battle; and, probably, supposing Gideon's men to be so tired with their hard service, and the great slaughter which they had made, that they would have neither strength nor will to pursue them so far.

12 And when Zebah and Zalmunna fled, he pursued after them, and ^o took the two kings of Midian, Zebah and Zalmunna, and [†] discomfited all the host.

13 ¶ And Gideon the son of Joash returned from battle before the sun was up,

By which it may be gathered that he came upon them in the night, which was most convenient for him, who had so small a number with him; and most likely both to surprise and terrify them by the remembrance of the last night's sad work, and the expectation of another like it.

14 And caught a young man of the men of Succoth, and enquired of him: and he [†] described unto him the princes of Succoth, and the elders thereof, even threescore and seventeen men.

He told him their names and qualities.

15 And he came unto the men of Succoth, and said, Behold Zebah and Zalmunna, with whom ye did ^p upbraid me, saying, Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that we should give bread unto thy men that are weary?

16 ^q And he took the elders of the city, and thorns of the wilderness and briers, and with them he [†] taught the men of Succoth.

By that severe punishment (of which ver. 7) he made the men, i. e. the elders of Succoth, to know their sin and folly, though it was too late for their good, but not for the instruction and warning of others.

17 ^r And he beat down the tower of Penuel, and slew the men of the city.

t ch. 4. 6.
¶ v. 18. 12.

+ Heb. according to the form, &c.

What manner of men, i. e. for outward shape and quality? At Tabor; whether he understood they fled for shelter, upon the approach of the Midianites; and where he learnt that some were slain, which he suspected might be they. Each one resembled the children of a king; not for their garb, or outward splendour, for the family was but mean; but for the majesty of their looks; by which commendation they thought to ingratiate themselves with their conqueror.

19 And he said, They were my brethren, even the sons of my mother: as the LORD liveth, if ye had saved them alive, I would not slay you.

For being not Canaanites he was not obliged to kill them; but they having killed his brethren, and that in cool blood, he was by law the avenger of their blood.

20 And he said unto Jether his firstborn, Up, and slay them. But the youth drew not his sword: for he feared, because he was yet a youth.

Up, and slay them; partly, that he might animate him to the use of arms for his God and country against their enemies, and to the exercise of justice; partly, that the death of those mischievous persons might be more shameful and painful; and partly, that he might have some share in the honour of the victory.

21 Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, Rise thou, and fall upon us: for as the man is, so is his strength. And Gideon u Ps. 63. 11.

† Or, ornaments like the moon.

arose, and slew Zebah and Zalmunna, and took away the ornaments that were on their camels' necks.

As the man is, so is his strength: thou excellest him, as in age and stature, so in strength; and it is more honourable, as well as easy, to die by the hands of a valiant man.

22 ¶ Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also: for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

Rule thou over us; not as a judge, for that he was already made by God; but as a king; and let the kingdom be hereditary to thee and to thy family. This miraculous and glorious deliverance by thy hands deserves no less from us.

23 And Gideon said unto them, I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: * the LORD shall rule over you.

z 1 Sam. 8. 7. & 10. 19. & 12. 12.

I will not rule over you, to wit, as a king, which you desire. The Lord shall rule over you, in a special manner, as he hath hitherto done, by judges, whom God did particularly appoint and direct, even by Urim and Thummim, and assist upon all occasions; whereas kings had a greater power, and only a general dependence upon God, as other kings had. Compare 1 Sam. viii. 6, 7.

24 ¶ And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would give me every man the earrings of his prey. (For they had golden earrings, † because they were Ishmaelites.)

y Gen. 25. 13. & 27. 25, 26.

Object. They are called Midianites before. Answer. Here seems to have been a mixture of people, Judg. vi. 3, which are all called by one general name, Ishmaelites, or Arabians, who used to wear earrings, Gen. xxxv. 4; but the greatest, and the ruling part of them, were Midianites.

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast therein every man the earrings of his prey.

26 And the weight of the golden earrings that he requested was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold; beside ornaments, and collars, and purple raiment that was on the kings of Midian, and beside the chains that were about their camels' necks.

† Or, sweet jewels.

27 And Gideon made an ephod there, and put it in his city, even in Ophrah: and all Israel went thither a whoring after it: which thing became a snare unto Gideon, and to his house.

x ch. 17. 5.

a ch. 6. 24.

b Ps. 106. 39.

c Deut. 7. 16.

Made an ephod thereof; not of all of it, for then it would have been too heavy for use; but of part of it, the rest being probably employed about other things agreeable and appertaining to it; which elsewhere are comprehended under the name of the ephod, as Judg. xvii. 5; xviii. 14, 18; Hos. iii. 4. Put it in his city; not as a monument of the victory, for such monuments were neither proper nor usual; but for religious use, for which alone the ephod was appointed. The case seems to be this, Gideon having by God's command erected an altar in his own city, Ophrah, Judg. vi. 26, for an extraordinary time and occasion, thought it might be continued for ordinary use; and therefore as he intended to procure priests, so he designed to make priestly garments, and especially an ephod, which was the chief and most costly; which besides its use in sacred ministrations, was also the instrument by which the mind of God was inquired and discovered, 1 Sam. xxiii. 6, 9; xxx. 7, which might seem necessary for the judge to have at hand, that he might consult with God upon all occasions. All Israel went thither a whoring after it; committing superstition or idolatry with it; or going thither to inquire the will of God; whereby they were drawn from the true ephod, instituted by God for this end, which was to be worn by the high priest only. A snare; an occasion of sin and ruin to him and his, as the next chapter showeth. Though Gideon was a good man, and did this with an honest mind, and a desire to set up religion in his own city and family; yet here seems to be many sins in it. 1. Superstition and will-worship, worshipping God by a device of his own, which was frequently and expressly forbidden. 2. Presumption, in wearing, or causing other priests to wear, this kind of ephod, which was peculiar to the high priest. 3. Transgression of a plain command, of worshipping God ordinarily but at one place, and one altar, Deut. xii. 5, 11, 14, and withdrawing people from that place to his. 4. Making a fearful schism or division among the people. 5. Laying a stumbling-block, or an occasion of superstition or idolatry, before that people, whom he knew to be too prone to it.

28 ¶ Thus was Midian subdued before the children of Israel, so that they lifted up their heads no more. † And the country was in quietness forty years in the days of Gideon.

Lifted up their heads no more, i. e. recovered not their former strength or courage, so as to conquer or oppress others, as they had done. Forty years, i. e. to the fortieth year, from the beginning of the Midianitish oppression: see on Judg. iii. 11. In the days of Gideon, i. e. as long as Gideon lived.

29 ¶ And Jerubbaal the son of Joash went and dwelt in his own house.

Not in his father's house, as he did before; nor yet in a court, like a king, as the people desired; but in a middle state, as a judge, for the preservation and maintenance of their religion and liberties.

32 ¶ And Gideon the son of Joash died ^gin a good old age, and was buried in the sepulchre of Joash his father, ^hin Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites.

ⁱIn a good old age; his long life being crowned with the continuance of his honour, tranquillity, and happiness.

33 And it came to pass, ⁱas soon as Gideon was dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and ^kwent a whoring after Baalim, ^land made Baal-berith their god.

The children of Israel turned again; whereby we see the wicked temper of this people, who did no longer cleave to God than they were in a manner constrained to it by the presence and authority of their judges. Baalim: this was the general name, including all their idols, whereof one here follows. Baal-berith, i. e. The lord of the covenant, so called, either from the covenant wherewith the worshippers of this god bound themselves to maintain his worship, or to defend one another therein; or rather, because he was reputed the god and judge of all covenants, and promises, and contracts, to whom it belonged to maintain them, and to punish the violators of them; and such a god both the Grecians and the Romans had.

34 And the children of Israel ^mremembered not the LORD their God, who had delivered them out of the hands of all their enemies on every side:

35 ⁿNeither shewed they kindness to the house of Jerubbaal, namely, Gideon, according to all the goodness which he had shewed unto Israel.

CHAP. IX.

Abimelech, Gideon's son, by conspiracy with the Shechemites, and the murder of his brethren, Jotham the youngest escaping, is made king, 1—6. Jotham by a parable rebuketh them, and foretelleth their ruin: he flees and dwells at Beer, 7—21. The Shechemites conspire against Abimelech, 22—25. Gaal joins himself to the Shechemites, 26—29. Zebul reveals it, 30—33. Betrayeth Gaal, 34—38. Abimelech overcometh them, and soweth the city with salt, 39—45. Sets the tower on fire; and also the hold of the god Berith, 46—49. He subdues Thebez: going near to the tower to burn it, a woman casts down a piece of a millstone on his head, and breaks his skull, 50—53. He commands his armour-bearer to thrust him through, 54. Jotham's curse is fulfilled, 56, 57.

AND Abimelech the son of Jerubbaal went to Shechem unto ^ahis mother's brethren, and communed with them, and with all the family of the house of his mother's father, saying,

2 Speak, I pray you, in the ears of all the men of Shechem, † Whether is better for you, either that all the sons of Jerubbaal, which are ^bthreescore and ten persons, reign over you, or that one reign over you? remember also that I am ^cyour bone and your flesh.

He supposeth that the sons of Jerubbaal would take that government which their father modestly refused, and that the multitude of his sons would occasion horrible divisions, and confusions, and contests about the sovereign power; all which they might avoid by choosing him king; and so they might enjoy the monarchy which they had long and oft desired. Your bone and your flesh; your kinsman, of the same tribe and city with you; which will be no small honour and advantage to you.

3 And his mother's brethren spake of him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all these words:

and their hearts inclined † to follow Abimelech; for they said, He is our ^dbrother.

His mother's brethren, i. e. kinsmen, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xiv. 16; xxix. 12. He is our brother; they were easily persuaded to believe and follow what served their own interest.

4 And they gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver out of the house of ^eBaal-berith, wherewith Abimelech hired ^fvain and light persons, which followed him.

Threescore and ten, agreeably to the number of his enemies, Gideon's seventy sons. Pieces of silver; not shekels, as some fancy, which were too small a sum for this purpose; but far larger pieces, the exact worth whereof it is neither possible nor needful for us now to know. Out of the house of Baal-berith; out of his sacred treasury; for even they who were very parsimonious and base in their expenses about God's service, were liberal in their contributions to idols; having since Gideon's death built this temple, (which he would never have suffered whilst he lived,) and endowed it with considerable revenues. Vain and light persons; unsettled, idle, and necessitous persons, the most proper instruments for tyranny and cruelty.

5 And he went unto his father's house ^gat Ophrah, and ^hslew his brethren the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone: notwithstanding yet Jotham the youngest son of Jerubbaal was left; for he hid himself.

The sons of Jerubbaal; the only persons who were likely to hinder him in establishing his tyranny. Threescore and ten persons; wanting one, who is here expressed; and these synecdochical expressions are frequent in Scripture: see Gen. xxxv. 26; xlii. 13; Numb. xiv. 32, 33; John xx. 24; 1 Cor. xv. 5. Upon one stone; whereby he would signify that this was either, 1. An act of justice, in cutting them all off in an orderly manner, for some supposed crime, probably as designing sedition and rebellion; or, 2. An act of religion, in avenging the dishonour and injury done to Baal by Gideon, Judg. vi. 27, 28, upon his children, whom he offered up as so many sacrifices to Baal upon this stone, which served for an altar; and for this reason it seems the money was taken out of Baal's house, because it was to be laid out in his service.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the house of Millo, and went, and made Abimelech king, † by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

Of Millo; of a place or person so called; some eminent and potent family living in Shechem, or near to it; either the family of Abimelech's mother, or some other: or, and all Beth-millo; so Beth is not a house, but a part of the name of the place. Made Abimelech king, to wit, over all Israel, ver. 22, which was a strange presumption for the inhabitants of one city to undertake; but they had many advantages and encouragements for it; as the eager, and general, and constant inclination of the Israelites to kingly government; Abimelech's being the son of Gideon, to whom and to his sons they offered the kingdom, Judg. viii. 22; and though the father could and did refuse it for himself, yet they might imagine that he could not give away his son's right, conveyed to them by the Israelites, in their offer; the universal defection of the Israelites from God to Baal, whose great patron and champion Abimelech pretended to be; the power and prevalency of the tribe of Ephraim, in which Shechem was, Josh. xx. 7, whose proud and imperious spirit, manifested Judg. viii. 1; xii. 1, would make them readily close with a king of their own brethren; and Abimelech's getting the start of all others, having the crown actually put upon his head, and an army already raised to maintain his tyranny. By the plain of the pillar, or, by the oak of the pillar, i. e. by the oak, where Joshua erected a pillar as a witness of the covenant renewed between God and Israel, Josh. xxiv. 26. This place they chose, to signify that they still owned God, and their covenant with him; and did not worship Baal in opposition to God, but in conjunction with him, or in subordination to him.

7 ¶ And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of ¹mount Gerizim, and lifted up his voice, and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you.

Mount Gerizim lay near Shechem, and near Mount Ebal. The valley between these two mountains of Gerizim and Ebal was a famous place, employed for a religious use, even for the solemn reading of the law, and its blessings and curses, Deut. xi. 29; xxvii. 12; Josh. viii. 33; and therefore it is probable it was still used, even by the superstitious and idolatrous Israelites, for such-like occasions, who delighted to use the same places which their religious ancestors had consecrated and used. Lifted up his voice, and cried; so as they that stood in the valley might hear him, though not suddenly come at him to take him. Ye men of Shechem; who are here met together upon a solemn occasion, as Josephus notes, Abimelech being absent. That God may hearken unto you, when you cry unto him for mercy; so he conjures and persuades to give him patient audience, as they did.

8 ^k The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them; and they said unto the olive tree, ¹Reign thou over us.

A parabolical discourse, usual among the ancients, especially in the eastern parts; wherein, under the names of trees, men are represented. To anoint a king, i. e. to make a king, which was oft done among the Israelites, and some others, with the ceremony of anointing. By the olive tree he understands Gideon.

9 But the olive tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness, ^m wherewith by me they honour God and man, and [†] go to be promoted over the trees?

In the worship and service of God oil was used for divers things; as, about the lamps, Exod. xxxv. 14, and offerings, Lev. ii. 6, 7, and for the anointing of sacred persons and things. Oil was also used in the constitution of kings, and priests, and prophets, and for a present to great persons, and to anoint the head and face, &c. To be promoted, Heb. to move hither and thither, to wander to and fro, to exchange my sweet tranquillity for incessant cares and travels for the good of others, as a king ought to do.

10 And the trees said to the fig tree, Come thou, and reign over us.

This, as also the vine, ver. 12, signifies the same thing with the olive tree; but here are various expressions used, either for the decency of the parable; or because Gideon refused this honour, both for himself and for his sons; or to signify that the sons of Gideon, whom Abimelech had so cruelly slain, upon pretence of their affecting the kingdom, were as far from such thoughts as their father, and therefore were unjustly and wickedly murdered.

11 But the fig tree said unto them, Should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees?

My sweetness; for which that fruit is particularly commended.

12 Then said the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us.

13 And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, ⁿ which cheereth God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees?

Wherewith God is well-pleased, because it was offered to God, Numb. xv. 5, 7, 10. See also Psal. civ. 15; Prov. xxxi. 6.

14 Then said all the trees unto the ^obramble, Come thou, and reign over us.

The bramble, or thorn; a mean, and barren, and hurtful tree, fitly representing Abimelech, the son of a concubine, and a person of small use, and great cruelty.

15 And the bramble said unto the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in my ^oshadow: and if not, ^plet fire come out of the bramble, and devour the ^qcedars of Lebanon.

If in truth you anoint me king over you; if you deal truly and justly in making me king. Put your trust in my shadow; then you may expect protection under my government. Let fire come out of the bramble; instead of protection, you shall receive destruction by me; especially you cedars, i. e. nobles, such as the house of Millo, who have been most forward in this work.

16 Now therefore, if ye have done truly and sincerely, in that ye have made Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with Jerubbaal and his house, and have done unto him ^raccording to the deserving of his hands;

17 (For my father fought for you, and [†]adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian;

Heb. cast away his soul or life far off, out of his reach or power to recover it, i. e. exposed himself to utmost hazard for your sakes.

18 ^sAnd ye are risen up against my father's house this day, and have slain his sons, threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, and have made Abimelech, the son of his maidservant, king over the men of Shechem, because he is your brother;

Abimelech's fact is justly charged upon them, as done by their consent, approbation, and assistance. His maidservant; his concubine, whom he so calls by way of reproach, because maidservants were oft made concubines, Exod. xxi. 7—10. Over the men of Shechem; by which limitation of their power, and his kingdom, he reflects contempt upon him, and chargeth them with presumption, that having only power over their own city, they durst impose a king upon all Israel.

19 If ye then have dealt truly and sincerely with Jerubbaal and with his house this day, then ^trejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you:

20 But if not, ^ulet fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the house of Millo, and devour Abimelech.

This is not a prediction, but an imprecation or curse, as it is called, ver. 57, which, being grounded upon just cause, and being the only way by which Jotham could perform the duty of the avenger of his brethren's blood, which was incumbent upon him, had its effect, as others in like case had, as Josh. vi. 26, compared with 1 Kings xvi. 34; 2 Kings ii. 24.

21 And Jotham ran away, and fled, and went to ^vBeer, and dwelt there, for fear of Abimelech his brother.

He might easily flee, having the advantage of the hill and other accommodations for flight, and because the people were not forward to pursue a man whom they knew to have such just cause and great provocation to speak, and so little power to do them any hurt. Beer; a place remote from Shechem, and out of Abimelech's reach. There were divers places of that name.

The cruelty, i. e. the punishment of the cruelty.

25 And the men of Shechem set liars in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech.

Liers in wait for him, to seize his person. All that came along that way by them, to wit, such as favoured or served Abimelech; for to such only their commission reached, though it may be they went beyond their bounds, and by military licence robbed all passengers promiscuously. It was told Abimelech; who, as it is here implied, exercised hostility towards the men of Shechem.

26 And Gaal the son of Ebed came with his brethren, and went over to Shechem: and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

It is not known who or of what tribe Gaal was; but it is evident that he was a man very considerable for wealth, and strength, and counsel, and interest, and ill-pleased with Abimelech's power. Went over to Shechem, by his presence and counsel to animate and assist them against Abimelech.

They went out into the fields, which, till his coming, they durst not do, for fear of Abimelech; but now took confidence to do so, in contempt of him. Made merry; partly from the custom of rejoicing and singing songs in vintage time, Lev. xix. 24; Isa. xvi. 10; Jer. xxv. 30; and partly for the hopes of their redemption from Abimelech's tyranny. The house of their god, Baal-berith, ver. 4; either to beg his help against Abimelech, or to give him thanks, either for the fruits of the earth now received, or for the hopes of recovering their former and lost liberty. Did eat and drink, to the honour of their idols, and out of the oblations made to them, as they used to do to the honour of Jehovah, and out of his sacrifices. Cursed Abimelech; either by reviling and reproaching him after their manner; or rather in a more solemn and religious manner, cursing him by their god, as Goliath did David, 1 Sam. xvii. 43; or calling upon their god to ratify their curses pronounced against him.

28 And Gaal the son of Ebed said, ^c Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? is not he the son of Jerubbaal? and Zebul his officer? serve the men of ^d Hamor the father of Shechem: for why should we serve him?

Who is Abimelech? what is he but a base-born person, an ambitious, imperious, and cruel tyrant, and one every way unfit and unworthy to govern you? Who is Shechem? Shechem is here the name, either, 1. Of the place or city of Shechem; and so the Hebrew particle mi, who, is put for mah, what, as it is Judg. xiii. 17; and then the sense of the place is this: Consider how obscure and unworthy a person Abimelech is, and what a potent and honourable city Shechem is; and judge you whether it be fit that such a city should be subject to such a person. Or rather, 2. Of a person, even of Abimelech, named in the foregoing words, and described in those which follow, the son of Jerubbaal, between which Shechem is hemmed in, and therefore cannot conveniently belong to any other. He is called Shechem for the Shechemite, by a metonymy of the subject, whereby the place is put for the person contained in it, and belonging to it; as Egypt, Ethiopia, Seba, Judca, Macedonia, and Achaia, &c., are put for the people of those countries, Job i. 15; vi. 19; Psal. lxxviii. 31; cv. 38; Isa. xliiii. 3; Matt. iii. 5; Rom. xv. 26. Thus mi is taken properly, and the sense is, Who is this Shechemite? for so he was by the mother's side, born of a woman of your city, and she but his concubine and servant; why should you submit to one so basely descended? The son of Jerubbaal, i. e. of Gideon; a person obscure by his own confession, Judg. vi. 15, and famous only by his boldness and fierceness against that Baal which you justly honour and reverence, whose altar he overthrew, and whose worship he endeavoured to abolish. And Zebul his officer; and you are so unworthy and mean-spirited, that you do not only submit to him, but suffer his very servants to bear rule over you, and enslave you; and particularly this ignoble and hateful person Zebul. Serve the men of Hamor the father of Shechem: if you love bondage, call in the old master and lord of the place; choose not an upstart, as Abimelech is; but rather take one of the old stock, one descended from Hamor, Gen. xxxiv. 2, who did not carry himself like a tyrant, as Abimelech did, but like a father of his city of Shechem. This he might speak, either, 1. Sincerely, as being himself a Canaanite and a Shechemite, and possibly come from one of those little ones whom Simeon and Levi spared when they slew all the grown males, Gen. xxxiv. 29. And it may be that he was one of the royal blood, a descendant of Hamor, who hereby sought to insinuate himself into their minds and government, as it follows, ver. 29, Would to God this people were under my hand! which he might judge the people more likely to do, both because they were now united with the Canaanites in religion, and because their present distress might oblige them to put themselves under him, who seemed or pretended to be a valiant and expert commander. Or, 2. In way of derision, he being an Israelite: If you are so servile, serve some of the children of Hamor; which because you rightly judge to be absurd and dishonourable, do not now submit to a far baser person; but cast off his yoke, and recover your lost liberties.

29 And ^e would to God this people were ^e 2 Sam. 15.
under my hand! then would I remove ^a Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, Increase thine army, and come out.

Under my hand, i. e. under my command; I wish you would unanimously submit to me, as your captain and governor; for he found them divided, and some of them hearkening after Abimelech, whom they had lately rejected, according to the levity of the popular humour. Then would I remove Abimelech; as you have driven him out of your city, I would drive him out of your country. He said to Abimelech; he sent this message or challenge to him, I desire not to surprise thee at any disadvantage; strengthen thyself as much as thou canst, and come out into the open field, that thou and I may decide it by our arms.

30 ¶ And when Zebul the ruler of the city heard the words of Gaal the son of Ebed, his anger was || kindled.

[†] Or, hot.

It seems he had temporized and complied with the people's humour and plot against Abimelech, either in dissimulation and design, and by Abimelech's connivance or advice, or really; but when he heard Gaal's words, and himself traduced and struck at by them, he changed his mind, repented of his defection from Abimelech, and intended to return himself, and to bring the people again to the obedience of their lord and king.

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech †privily, saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed and his brethren be come to Shechem; and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

† Heb. crispile, or, to Yarmak.

Privily, so as Gaal and his confederates might not know it. Or, in Tormah; or, who was in Tormah; for some make it the name of the place where Abimelech was, which is called with some variation Arumah, ver. 41. They fortify the city against thee; they besiege or guard the city of Shechem, so as none may go out to thee, nor come in from thee.

32 Now therefore up by night, thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field:

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city: and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to them †as thou shalt find occasion.

† Heb. as thine hand shall find. 1 Sam. 10. 7. & 25. 8. Eccles. 9. 10.

Behold, when he, i. e. Gaal, mentioned ver. 31.

34 ¶ And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and Abimelech rose up, and the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

Stood in the entering of the gate of the city, to put his army in order, and to conduct them against Abimelech, whom he supposed to be at a great distance.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.

Zebul concealed the anger which he had conceived, ver. 30, and pretended compliance with him in this expedition, that he might draw him forth into the field, where Abimelech might have the opportunity of fighting with him, and overthrowing him. Thou seest the shadow of the mountains; for in the morning, as this was, and in the evening, the shadows are longest, and move most quickly. He intimates that he was afraid of shadows.

37 And Gaal spake again and said, See there come people down by the †middle of the land, and another company come along by the plain of †Meonenim.

† Heb. navel. 1 ¶ Or, the regarders of the times. Deut. 18. 14.

By the middle of the land, Heb. by the navel of the land. So he calls either, first, The middle of it, as the middle part of Greece and of Sicily are called the navel of them by the Roman writers, because the navel is in the midst of man's body; or, secondly, The higher part of it, called the mountains, ver. 36, and here the navel, because it was raised above the other ground, as the navel is above the rest of the body.

38 Then said Zebul unto him, Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou †saidst, Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? is not this the people that thou hast despised? go out, I pray now, and fight with them.

† ver. 28, 29.

Thy mouth, i. e. thy brags. Now thou betrayest thy fears; and therefore now show thyself a man, and fight valiantly for thyself and people.

39 And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech.

40 And Abimelech chased him, and he fled before him, and many were overthrown and wounded, even unto the entering of the gate.

He fled before him; being surprised by the unexpected coming of Abimelech, and possibly not fully prepared for the encounter. Many were overthrown and wounded, being pursued and overtaken by Abimelech.

41 And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah: and Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren, that they should not dwell in Shechem.

Abimelech did not prosecute his victory, but retreated to Arumah, partly to see the effect of this fight, and whether the Shechemites would not of themselves return to his government, being either persuaded by Zebul upon this occasion, or terrified by his strength and valour, or now by his clemency in proceeding no further against them; and partly that, being hereby grown more secure, he might have the greater advantage against them, which accordingly he here makes use of. Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren; which he was enabled to do, because the multitude, which is generally light and unstable, and judgeth of all things by events, were now enraged against Gaal, suspecting him guilty either of treachery, or cowardice, or ill conduct; and besides, they thought the expulsion of Gaal would sweeten and satisfy Abimelech, and make him give over the war against them. But though they were offended with Gaal, yet Zebul's interest was not so considerable with them, that he could prevail with them either to kill Gaal and his brethren, or to yield themselves to Abimelech; and therefore he still complies with the people, and waits for a fairer opportunity, though in vain.

42 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people went out into the field; and they told Abimelech.

The people went out into the field; either, first, To renew the fight, and avenge themselves for their last loss, the great God hardening their hearts to their destruction, and the accomplishment of his word delivered to them by Jotham. But here is not one word about the people's arming, or resisting, or fighting, as there was before, ver. 39, but only of their slaughter, ver. 43, 44. Or, secondly, To their usual and then proper employments about their lands; for though their vintage was past, the seed-time was now come, and other things were to be done in the fields. Or, thirdly, Upon some solemn occasion, not here expressed; possibly to make a solemn procession, or perform some other rites in the fields, to the honour of their god Baal-berith, as the manner of the heathen was, to make supplication to him for his help, and for better success; or only to go for that end to the house of their god Baal-berith, which is thought to have been in the fields, as may seem from ver. 27, 46, on a mountain upon the east side of the city.

43 And he took the people, and divided them into three companies, and laid wait in the field, and looked, and, behold, the people were come forth out of the city; and he rose up against them, and smote them.

Three companies; whereof he kept one with himself, ver. 44, and put the rest under other commanders.

44 And Abimelech, and the company that was with him, rushed forward, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and the two other companies ran upon all the people that were in the fields, and slew them.

Stood in the entering of the gate of the city, to prevent their retreat into the city, and give the other two companies opportunity to cut them off.

45 And Abimelech fought against the city all that day; and ^ghe took the city, ^gver. 20. and slew the people that was therein, and ^hbeat down the city, and sowed it with salt.

^h Deut. 29. 24. 1 Kings 12. 25. 2 Kin. 3. 25.

Not to make the place barren, as salt will do, for then he would have sowed the fields, not the city; but in token of his detestation and desire of their utter and irrecoverable destruction; for salt is the symbol or sign of perpetuity:

compare Numb. xviii. 19; Deut. xxix. 23; 2 Chron. xiii. 5; Zeph. ii. 9.

46 ¶ And when all the men of the tower of Shechem heard that, they entered into an hold of the house ¹of the god Berith.

The tower of Shechem; a strong place belonging to the city of Shechem, and made for its defence or security, but without the city. It is thought this was that Millo which was confederate with Shechem in their design for Abimelech, ver. 6, which also Jotham cursed with Shechem, ver. 20, and that curse is noted to have its effect, ver. 57. And this place may be called the tower of Shechem, either because those who possessed and defended it were sent from Shechem, or because it was built and kept for the safeguard of Shechem. The house of the god Berith; or, Baal-berith, ver. 4. Hither they fled out of the town belonging to it, fearing the same event with Shechem; and here they thought to be secure; partly by the strength of the place, as the temples of idols were oftentimes built in the highest and strongest places, as the capitol at Rome, and the temple at Jerusalem; and such this place seems to have been, because they laid their treasure here, ver. 4; partly by the religion of it, thinking that either their god would protect them there, or that Abimelech would spare them there, if not out of piety to that god, yet out of thankfulness for the benefit which he received thence, ver. 4.

47 And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together.

48 And Abimelech gat him up to mount ¹Zalmon, he and all the people that were with him; and Abimelech took an ax in his hand, and cut down a bough from the trees, and took it, and laid it on his shoulder, and said unto the people that were with him, What ye have seen [†]me do, make haste, and do as I have done.

Zalmon; a place so called from its shadiness, because there were many trees there.

49 And all the people likewise cut down every man his bough, and followed Abimelech, and put them to the hold, and set the hold on fire upon them; so that all the men of the tower of Shechem died also, about a thousand men and women.

50 ¶ Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and encamped against Thebez, and took it.

Thebez; another town near to Shechem; and, as it seems, within its territory.

51 But there was a strong tower within the city, and thither fled all the men and women, and all they of the city, and shut it to them, and gat them up to the top of the tower.

All the men and women; all that were not slain in the taking of the town; or they all forsook the town, and retired to their strong hold. The top of the tower was flat and plain, after their manner of building.

52 And Abimelech came unto the tower, and fought against it, and went hard unto the door of the tower to burn it with fire.

53 And a certain woman ¹cast a piece of a millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to brake his scull.

Such great stones no doubt they carried up with them, whereby they might defend themselves, or offend those who assaulted them. Here the justice of God is remarkable in suiting the punishment to his sin. He slew his brethren upon a stone, ver. 5, and he loseth his own life by a stone.

54 Then ^mhe called hastily unto the young man his armourbearer, and said unto him, Draw thy sword, and slay me, that men say not of me, A woman slew him. And his young man thrust him through, and he died.

A woman slew him; which was esteemed a matter of disgrace.

55 And when the men of Israel saw that Abimelech was dead, they departed every man unto his place.

56 ¶ ⁿThus God rendered the wickedness of Abimelech, which he did unto his father, in slaying his seventy brethren:

The wickedness which he did unto his father, in rooting out, as far as he could, the name, and memory, and remainders of his father.

57 And all the evil of the men of Shechem did God render upon their heads: and upon them came ^othe curse of Jotham the son of Jerubbaal.

CHAP. X.

Tola judgeth Israel; and Jair, whose thirty sons had thirty cities, 1—5. The people's idolatry, 6. The Philistines and Ammonites oppress them, 7—9. They cry to God, who sendeth them to their false gods; but upon their repentance pitieth them, 10—16. The Ammonites and Israelites encamp against one another, 17, 18.

AND after Abimelech there ^aarose to [†]defend Israel Tola the son of Puah, the son of Dodo, a man of Issachar; and he dwelt in Shamir in mount Ephraim.

There arose; not of himself, but either chosen by the people; or rather, raised by God, as the other judges were. To defend Israel, or, to save, which he did not by fighting against and overthrowing their enemies, but by a prudent and pious government of them. whereby he kept them from sedition, and oppression, and tyranny, as also from idolatry, as may be gathered from ver. 6, which if not restrained and purged out, would have brought certain ruin upon them. In Shamir in Mount Ephraim; which was in the very heart and midst of the land.

2 And he judged Israel twenty and three years, and died, and was buried in Shamir.

3 ¶ And after him arose Jair, a Gileadite, and judged Israel twenty and two years.

A Gileadite; of Gilead beyond Jordan.

4 And he had thirty sons that ^brode on thirty ass colts, and they had thirty cities, ^cwhich are called [†]Havoth-jair unto this day, which are in the land of Gilead.

Rode on ass colts, because horses were scarce there, and were not to be multiplied by the king himself, Deut. xvii. 16. Hence their kings and kings' children used to ride upon mules, 2 Sam. xiii. 29; xviii. 9; 1 Kings i. 33, 38, 44. Compare Judg. v. 10; xii. 14. Havoth-jair. Object. These villages were called so from another Jair, Numb. xxxii. 41; Deut. iii. 14. Answer. They are not said to be now first called by that name, but to be still so called, because the old name was revived and confirmed upon this occasion; as Sheba is said to be called Beer-sheba, upon an occasion mentioned Gen. xxvi. 33, though it was so called before upon a more ancient occasion, Gen. xxi. 31. Possibly this Jair had enlarged or fortified these towns, and so they were justly denominated from him, no less than from the former.

8 And that year they vexed and [†] oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years, all the children of Israel that were on the other side Jordan in the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead.

Or, that year they had vexed and oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years. Or, they vexed them in that year, that was the eighteenth year, to wit, of that vexation. This was the eighteenth year from the beginning of that oppression. And these eighteen years are not to be reckoned from Jair's death, because that would enlarge the time of the judges beyond the just bounds, as may appear from 1 Kings vi. 1; nor from Jephthah's beginning to reign, because he reigned but six years, and in the beginning thereof put an end to this persecution; but from the fourth year of Jair's reign; so that the greatest part of Jair's reign was contemporary with this affliction. And although this oppression of the Ammonites and Philistines, and the cause of it, the idolatry of the Israelites, be not mentioned till after Jair's death, because the sacred penman would deliver the whole history of this calamity entirely and together; yet they both happened before it; and Jair's death is mentioned before that only by a prolepsis or anticipation, than which nothing is more frequent in Scripture. The case of Jair and Samson seem to be much alike. For as it is said of Samson, that he judged Israel in the days of the tyranny of the Philistines twenty years, Judg. xv. 20, by which it is evident that his judicature and their dominion were contemporary; the like is to be conceived of Jair, that he began to judge Israel, and endeavoured to reform religion and purge out all abuses; but being unable to effect this, through the backwardness and baseness of the people, God would not enable him to deliver the people, but gave them up to this sad oppression; so that Jair could only perform one half of his office, which was to determine differences amongst the Israelites, but could not deliver them from their enemies.

9 Moreover the children of Ammon passed over Jordan to fight also against Judah, and against Benjamin, and against the house of Ephraim; so that Israel was sore distressed.

They put away the strange gods: this was an evidence of the sincerity of their sorrow, that they did not only confess and bewail their sins, but also forsake them, and loathe themselves for them. His soul was grieved; not properly, or as to inward affection; for God being infinitely happy, is not capable of grieving; but figuratively, and as to outward expression. He acted towards them like one that felt their sufferings; he had pity upon them, repented of his severe proceedings against them, and quite changed his carriage towards them, and punished their enemies as sorely as if they had grieved and injured his own person.

CHAP. XI.

Jephthah dwells in the land of Tob, 1—3; is called by the elders of Gilead to command in chief against the Ammonites, 4—6. He demands to be continued head after the war should cease; they swear it shall be so, 7—11. He sendeth twice messengers to the king of the Ammonites to treat of peace, but in vain, 12—28. Jephthah marcheth against him; maketh a vow; smiteth the Ammonites; performeth his vow on his daughter, 29—40.

^a Heb. 11. 32, called Jephthah. ^b ch. 6. 12. ^c Kings 5. 1. ^d Heb. a woman an harlot. NOW ^a Jephthah the Gileadite was ^b a mighty man of valour, and he was the son of ^c an harlot: and Gilead begat Jephthah.

2 And Gilead's wife bare him sons; and his wife's sons grew up, and they thrust out Jephthah, and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in our father's house; for thou art the son of a strange woman.

The Gileadite; so called, either from his father Gilead, Josh xvii. 1, 2, or from the mountain or city of Gilead, the place of his birth or abode. The son of an harlot, i. e. a bastard; for though such were not ordinarily to enter into the congregation of the Lord, Deut. xxiii. 2, yet God can dispense with his own laws, and hath sometimes done honour to base-born persons, so far, that some of them were admitted to be the progenitors of the Lord Jesus Christ. Gilead; one of the children of that ancienter Gilead, Numb. xxxii. 1; Josh. xvii. 1.

^e Heb. from the face. 3 Then Jephthah fled ^f from his brethren, and dwelt in the land of Tob; and there were gathered ^g vain men to Jephthah, and went out with him.

The land of Tob, the name either of the land or territory, or of the man who was the owner or ruler of it. This place was in or near Gilead, as appears by the speedy intercourse which here was between Jephthah and the Israelites. Vain men; idle persons, who desire to get their living rather by spoil and rapine, than by honest and diligent labour. These evil-minded persons Jephthah managed well, employing them against the enemies of God and of Israel that bordered upon them; and particularly, upon parties of the Ammonites, which made the Israelites more forward to choose him for their chieftain in this war. Went out with him, when he made excursions and attempts upon his and their enemies.

^h Heb. after days. 4 ¶ And it came to pass ⁱ in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.

In process of time, Heb. after some days; or, after a year; days being oft put for a year, as hath been showed, after that year mentioned Judg. x. 8. The Ammonites had vexed and oppressed them eighteen years, and now that the Israelites begin to make opposition, they commence a war against them. Or, some time after Jephthah had been banished, and after he had taken up arms, and given them some disturbance. Or, after the Israelites assembled together, as is said, Judg. x. 18.

5 And it was so, that when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob:

By direction or instinct from God, who both qualified him for and called him to the office of a judge. See Judg. xii. 7; Heb. xi. 32. Otherwise they might not have chosen a bastard, Deut. xxiii. 2. Unless we will say, that there being no other person among them fit for and willing to this work, necessity dispensed with this law, as it did with other positive laws, as those of the sabbath and sacrifices.

6 And they said unto Jephthah, Come, and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

Our captain: they say not our king; for the experience of Abimelech's kingship had cooled their appetite in that particular; but our captain.

7 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, ^d Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

Did not ye expel me out of my father's house, and deprive me of all share in my father's goods, which, though a bastard, was due to me? This expulsion of him was the act of his brethren; but he here ascribes it to the elders of Gilead; either because some of them were among these elders, as is very probable from the dignity of this family; or because this act, though desired and promoted by his brethren, was executed by the decree of the elders, to whom the determination of all controversies about inheritances belonged; and therefore it was their fault that they did not protect him from the injuries of his brethren, as their duty was.

8 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we ^e turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be ^f our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

Therefore we turn again to thee now; being sensible that we have done thee injury, we come now to make thee full reparations.

9 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon, and the Lord deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

If ye bring me home again; if you recall me from this place where I am now settled, to the place whence I was expelled. Shall I be your head? will you really make good this promise? Jephthah was so solicitous in this case, either from his zeal for the public good, which required that he should be so; or from the law of self-preservation, that he might secure himself from his brethren; whose ill will he had experienced, and whose injuries he could not prevent, if, after he had served their ends, he had been reduced to his private capacity: or there might be some tincture of ambition in him; for which God therefore severely, though paternally, chastiseth him, as we see afterwards.

10 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, ^h The Lord ⁱ be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

They confirm their promise by a solemn and sacred oath.

11 Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him ⁱ head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all his words ^k before the Lord in Mizpeh.

Jephthah uttered all his words, objectively so called; i. e. all that was spoken, not only by him, but also by the elders of Gilead concerning him, and concerning this whole transaction, and the conditions of it; or, all his matters, the whole business. Before the Lord, i. e. before the public congregation, wherewith God was usually and then especially present: see Exod. xx. 24; Deut. vi. 25; Matt. xviii. 10. Or, before the altar, which possibly they did erect upon this special occasion, by God's permission. Or, in God's presence, calling him to be present, as a witness and judge between them.

12 ¶ And Jephthah sent messengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, saying, What hast thou to do with me, that thou art come against me to fight in my land?

Messengers, i. e. ambassadors, to prevent bloodshed, and make peace, as far as in him lay; that so the Israelites might be acquitted before God and men from all the sad consequences of this war: herein he showed great prudence, and no less piety. What hast thou to do with me? what pretence or reasonable cause hast thou for this invasion? My land; he speaks this in the name of all the people, whose the land was.

13 And the king of the children of Ammon answered unto the messengers of Jephthah, ¹Because Israel took away my land, when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon even unto ^mJabbok, and unto Jordan: now therefore restore those lands again peaceably.

My land, i. e. this land of Gilead, which was mine, but unjustly taken from me, by Sihon and Og, the kings of the Amorites, and the injury perpetuated by Israel's detaining it from me. This land, before the conquests of Sihon and Og, belonged partly to the Ammonites, as is affirmed, Josh. xiii. 25; and partly and principally to the Moabites, as appears from Numb. xxi. 24, 26; Deut. iii. 11. And indeed Moab and Ammon did for the most part join their interests and their forces, as appears from Scripture story; and as Balak the king of the Moabites acted for the Ammonites, so now the king of Ammon seems to act for the Moabites; either as being now his subjects, or as his confederates; whence it comes to pass that Moab and Ammon are here promiscuously mentioned, as ver. 15, 17, 18, 25; and Chemosh, the known god of the Moabites, Numb. xxi. 29; 1 Kings xi. 33; 2 Kings xxiii. 13; Jer. xlvi. 13, 46, is here called the god of the Ammonites, ver. 24, though, to speak strictly, Moloch or Milcom was their god, 1 Kings xi. 5, 7, 33; 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

14 And Jephthah sent messengers again unto the king of the children of Ammon:

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, ⁿIsrael took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when Israel came up from Egypt, and ^owalked through the wilderness unto the Red sea, and ^pcame to Kadesh;

Unto the Red Sea; unto which they came three times; once, Exod. xiii. 18; again, a little after their passage over it, Exod. xv. 22; and a third time, long after, when they came to Ezion-gaber, Numb. xxxiii. 35; Deut. ii. 8, which was upon the shore of the Red Sea, 1 Kings ix. 26; 2 Chron. viii. 17, from whence they went to Kadesh, Numb. xx.: of this time he speaks here.

17 Then ^qIsrael sent messengers unto the king of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: ^rbut the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab: but he would not consent: and Israel ^sabode in Kadesh.

Peaceably, and did not revenge their unkindness and inhumanity, as they could have done.

18 Then they went along through the wilderness, and ^tcompassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and ^ucame by the east side of the land of Moab, ^vand pitched on the other side of Arnon, but came not within the border of Moab: for Arnon was the border of Moab.

19 And ^wIsrael sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, the king of Heshbon; and Israel said unto him, ^xLet us pass, we pray thee, through thy land into my place.

i. e. Unto the land of Canaan, which God hath given to me.

20 ^aBut Sihon trusted not Israel to pass through his coast: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

So Sihon was the aggressor or beginner of the war; and the Israelites were forced to it for their own defence.

21 And the LORD God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they ^bsmote them: so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country.

22 And they possessed ^call the coasts of the Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and from the wilderness even unto Jordan.

The coasts, or borders, together with all the land included within those borders; for so that word is oft used, as Exod. viii. 2; Psal. cxlviii. 14; Jer. xv. 13; xvii. 3. The wilderness, to wit, the desert of Arabia.

23 So now the LORD God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldest thou possess it?

God, the sovereign Lord of all lands, hath given us this land: this he adds, as a further and a convincing reason; because otherwise it might have been alleged against the former argument, that they could gain no more right to that land from Sihon than Sihon himself had, and he had but an unjust claim to it.

24 Wilt not thou possess that which ^dChemosh thy god giveth thee to possess? So whomsoever ^ethe LORD our God shall drive out from before us, them will we possess.

He speaks according to their fond and absurd opinion. The Ammonites and Moabites got their land by right of war, and conquest of the old inhabitants, whom they cast out; and this success, though given them by the true God, for Lot's sake, Deut. ii. 19, they impiously and ridiculously ascribe to their god Chemosh, whose gift they owned to be a firm and sufficient title.

25 And now art thou any thing better than ^fBalak the son of Zippor, king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,

Art thou better than Balak? art thou wiser than he? or hast thou more right than he had? Balak, though he plotted against Israel, in defence of his own land, which he feared they would invade and conquer, Numb. xxii. 4; yet he never contended with them about the restitution of those lands which Sihon took from him or his predecessors, after the Israelites had conquered them.

26 While Israel dwelt in ^gHeshbon and her towns, and in ^hBeroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, three hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

Three hundred years; not precisely, but about that time; either from their coming out of Egypt, or from their first conquest of those lands; and thus numbers are oft expressed: see Numb. i. 46; ii. 32; xi. 21; Judg. xx. 46. He urgeth prescription, which is by all men reckoned a just title, and it is fit it should be so for the good of the world, because otherwise the door would be opened both to kings and to private persons for infinite contentions and confusions.

27 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me: the LORD ⁱthe Judge ^kbe judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon.

Bewail my virginity; that I shall die childless, which was esteemed both a curse and a disgrace for the Israelites, Gen. xxx. 23; 1 Sam. i. 6, 7; Isa. iv. 1, because such were excluded from that great privilege of increasing the holy seed, and contributing to the birth of the Messiah, who was to be born of an Israelitish woman.

38 And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.

39 And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who ^zdid with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a † custom in Israel,

Quest. What was it which Jephthah vowed and performed concerning his daughter? Ans. Many, especially of modern writers, conceive that Jephthah's daughter was not sacrificed, but only devoted to perpetual virginity, which then was esteemed a great curse and reproach. This they gather, 1. From ver. 37, 38, where we read that she bewailed not her death, which had been the chief cause of lamentation, if that had been vowed, but her virginity. 2. From this ver. 39, where, after he had said that he did with her according to his vow, he adds, by way of declaration of the matter of that vow, and she knew no man. But for the first, there may be a fair reason given, That she could not with honour bewail her death, which she had so generously and cheerfully accepted of, because it was attended with and occasioned by the public good, and her father's honour and happiness, ver. 36, and was a kind of martyrdom; and moreover, an act of religion, the payment of a vow, which ought to be done cheerfully; but only bewailed the circumstance of her death, that it was in some sort accursed and opprobrious; she having had no husband to take away her reproach, as they speak, Isa. iv. 1, and leaving no posterity to her father's comfort, and the increase of God's people. And for the second, that clause, and she knew no man, is plainly distinguished from the execution of his vow, which is here mentioned before; and this is added, not as an explication of the vow, but as an aggravating circumstance, that this was executed when she had not yet known any man. Besides, this opinion seems liable to weighty objections: 1. There is no example in all the Scripture of any woman that was obliged to perpetual virginity by any vow of her own, much less by the vow of her parents; nor have parents any such power over their children, either by the law of nature, or by the Holy Scripture. 2. The express words of the vow, ver. 31, mention nothing of her virginity, but only that she should surely be the Lord's, i. e. devoted to the service of the Lord, which might be without any obligation to perpetual virginity; for even Samuel, who was as fully devoted to the Lord by his parents as she could be, 1 Sam. i. 11; and Samson, who was devoted not only by his parents, but by God himself, and that in the highest degree, even to be a perpetual Nazarite, Judg. xiii. 5, 7; yet were not prohibited marriage; nor were any of the most sacred persons, Levites, or priests, or high priests, though they were the Lord's in a singular manner, obliged to perpetual virginity: and therefore if she was not offered up for a burnt-offering, as the authors of this opinion say, but only was consecrated to God, there was no occasion to bewail her virginity, which, for any thing that appears, she was not tied to. 3. If this were all, here was no sufficient cause why so wise and valiant a man as Jephthah should so bitterly and passionately lament over himself or his daughter. And therefore it may seem most probable that Jephthah did indeed sacrifice his daughter, as he had vowed to do; which was the opinion of Josephus the Jew, and of the Chaldee Paraphrast, and of divers of the Jewish doctors, and almost all the ancient fathers, and many eminent writers; and this best agrees with the words of the vow, delivered ver. 31, Whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me—shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it for a burnt-offering. Nor is there one word in all the following verses which denies that she was thus offered; only the execution of the vow is delivered in more ambiguous and general terms, ver. 39, which in all reason, and by the laws of good interpretation, ought to be limited and explained by the more plain and particular description of it. It is true, those words may seem capable of another interpretation; the conjunctive particle and may be here put for the disjunctive or, as it often is, as Exod. xxi. 16, 17; Lev. vi. 3, 5; 2 Sam. ii. 19, &c.; and so the meaning is, That what I first meet shall surely be the Lord's, or, I will offer it up for a burnt-offering, to wit, if it be a creature fit to be offered; otherwise, say they, if a dog or an ass should have met him first, he should have been obliged to offer them, which was against the law. But it is sufficiently evident that he speaks of a human person, from the very phrase of coming forth to meet him at his return; which plainly argues a design to meet him, purposely to congratulate his return; this phrase of going to meet a person coming being very oft used in Scripture, and constantly of one person meeting another, as Gen. xiv. 17; xviii. 2; xxiv. 17, &c., and never of any brute creature. And although and is sometimes put for or, yet it is not to be so used without necessity, which seems not to be in this place; nor is it very proper to distinguish two sentences in this manner, where the one is more general, and the other being more special, is comprehended within it, which is the case here; for it shall surely be the Lord's, is the general; and its being offered up for a burnt-offering, is the particular way or manner how it was to be the Lord's; as it were very improper to say, This is either a man, or it is my servant John; because the latter branch is contained in the former; and therefore in all the alleged instances where and is put for or, they are two distinct persons or things, and not one comprehended within another, as Exod. xxi. 17, father or mother; 2 Sam. ii. 19, right hand or left. But the great objection against this opinion is this, That it seems a most horrid act, directly contrary to the law of nature, and to plain Scripture, thus to sacrifice his own daughter; and that it seems altogether incredible, either that such a man as Jephthah, so eminent for piety, and wisdom, and zeal, and faith, should either make so barbarous a vow, or pursue it for above two months' space; and that none of the priests of that time should inform him of the unlawfulness of executing so wicked a vow, and of the liberty he had to redeem such a vow, by virtue of Lev. xxvii. 2, 3, &c.; or that Jephthah would not willingly receive information, especially where it was so agreeable to his own interest and natural affection; or that the priests and people would suffer him to execute his own daughter, and not rather hinder him by force, as they afterwards did Saul, when he had sworn the death of Jonathan. These and other such difficulties I confess there are in the case; but something may be truly and fairly said to allay the seeming monstrousness of this fact. 1. These were times of great and general ignorance and corruption of religion, wherein the Israelites had apostatized from God, and learnt and followed the practices and worships of the heathen nations, Judg. x. 6, whereof this was one, to offer up human sacrifices to Moloch; and although they seem now to have repented and forsaken their idols, Judg. x. 16, yet they seem still to have retained part of the old leaven, and this among the rest, that they might offer human sacrifices, not to Moloch, as they had done, but unto the Lord. And whereas some of the Jewish writers pretend that Phinehas was alive at this time; and tell a fine story concerning him and Jephthah, that both stood upon their terms, and neither would go to the other to advise about the matter; yet it is more than probable that Phinehas was dead long before this time, and whosoever was the high priest then, he seems to be guilty either of gross ignorance or negligence; so that a late learned writer conceives that this was the reason why the priesthood was taken from him, and from that line, and translated to the line of Ithamar, which was done in the time of the judges, as may be gathered from 1 Sam. ii. 35, 36. Moreover Jephthah, though now a good man, may seem to have had but a rude and barbarous education; having been banished from his father's house, and forced to wander and dispose himself in the utmost borders of the land of Gilead, beyond Jordan, at a great distance from the place of worship and instruction: nor is it strange that the priests and people did not resist Jephthah in this enterprise; partly because many of them might lie under the same ignorance and mistake that Jephthah did; and partly because they knew Jephthah to be a stout, and resolute, and boisterous man, and were afraid to oppose him in a matter wherein he seemed to be so peremptory, and their persons and families were not much concerned. 2. This mistake of Jephthah's, and of the rest of that age, was not without some plausible appearance of warrant from the holy text, even from Lev. xxvii. 28, 29, wherein it is expressly provided, that no devoted thing, whether man or beast, should be redeemed, but should surely be put to death; a place which it is not strange that a soldier in so ignorant an age should mistake, seeing even some learned divines, in this knowing age, and Capellus, amongst the rest, have fallen into the same error, and justified Jephthah's action from that place; and though I doubt not they run into the other extreme, as men commonly do, those words being to be otherwise understood than they take them, (of which see my notes on that place,) yet it must be granted that place gave Jephthah a very colourable pretext for the action; and being pushed on by zeal for God, and the conscience of his vow, he might easily be induced to it; and though this was a sin in him, yet it was but a sin of ignorance; which therefore was overlooked by a gracious God, and not reproved by any holy men of God. It is probably conceived, that the Greeks, who used to steal sacred histories, and turn them into fables, had from this history their relation of Iphigenia, (which may be put for Jephthah's,) sacrificed by her father Agamemnon, which is described by many of the same circumstances wherewith this is accompanied. She knew no man, to wit, carnally; she died a virgin.

40 That the daughters of Israel went † yearly || to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

Went yearly, to a place appointed for their meeting to this end, possibly to the place where she was sacrificed. To lament the daughter of Jephthah; to express their sorrow for her loss, according to the manner. Or, to discourse of (so the Hebrew lamed is sometimes used) the daughter of Jephthah, to celebrate her praises, who had so willingly yielded up herself for a sacrifice.

CHAP. XII.

The Ephraimites wage war against Jephthah; are smitten by the Gileadites; and being discerned by Shibolet, are slain to the number of two and forty thousand, 1—6. Jephthah dies, 7. After him Iban, 8—10, Elon, 11, 12, Abdon, 13—15, were judges over Israel.

AND *the men of Ephraim † gathered themselves together, and went northward, and said unto Jephthah, Wherefore passedst thou over to fight against the children of Ammon, and didst not call us to go with thee? we will burn thine house upon thee with fire.

Northward; over Jordan, so northward towards Mizpeh, where Jephthah was, Judg. xi. 34, and which was in the northern part of the land beyond Jordan. Said unto Jephthah, through pride and envy, contending with him as they did before with Gideon, Judg. viii. 1. Wherefore passedst thou over? not over Jordan, for there he was already; but over the borders of the Israelites' land beyond Jordan, as appears by comparing this with Judg. xi. 29, where the same phrase is used.

2 And Jephthah said unto them, I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon; and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands.

Hence it appears that he craved their assistance, which they denied, though that be not elsewhere expressed.

3 And when I saw that ye delivered me not, I put my life in my hands, and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the LORD delivered them into my hand: wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day, to fight against me?

I put my life in my hands, i. e. I exposed myself to utmost danger; as a man that carries a brittle and precious thing in his hand, which may easily either fall to the ground, or be snatched from him. The same phrase is used 1 Sam. xix. 5; xxviii. 21; Job xiii. 14; Psal. cxix. 109. Wherefore then are ye come up unto me? why do you thus requite my kindness in running into such hazard to preserve you and yours?

4 Then Jephthah gathered together all the men of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim: and the men of Gilead smote Ephraim, because they said, Ye Gileadites are fugitives of Ephraim among the Ephraimites, and among the Manassites.

According to this translation, these words are a scoffing and contemptuous expression of the Ephraimites concerning the Gileadites, whom they call fugitives of Ephraim; the word Ephraim being here taken largely, as it is elsewhere, as Isa. vii. 2, 5, so as it comprehends the other neighbouring tribes, of which Ephraim was in some sort the head or chief; and especially their brethren of Manasseh, who lived next to them, and were descended from the same father, Joseph; by reason whereof both these tribes are sometimes reckoned for one, and called by the name of the tribe of Joseph. And this large signification of Ephraim may seem probable from the following words, where, instead of Ephraim, is put the Ephraimites and the Manassites. By Gileadites here they seem principally to mean the Manassites beyond Jordan, who dwell in Gilead, as appears from Deut. iii. 13; Josh. xvii. 1, 5, 6. And although other Gileadites were joined with them, yet they vent their passion against these; -principally, because they envied them most; partly, because they seemed to have had a chief hand in the victory, Judg. xi. 29; and partly, because they were more nearly related to them, and therefore more obliged to desire their conjunction with them in the war. These they here opprobriously call fugitives, i. e. such as had deserted their brethren of Ephraim and Manasseh, and for some worldly advantage planted themselves beyond Jordan, at a distance from their brethren, and were alienated in affection from them, and carried on a distinct and separate interest of their own, as appears by their monopolizing the glory of this success to themselves, and excluding their brethren from it. According to the Hebrew, the words lie and may be rendered thus, Therefore (so chi is oft rendered) they said, Fugitives of Ephraim are ye, (i. e. Ye Ephraimites are mere runaways; for the words next foregoing are, the men of Gilead smote Ephraim. And having told you what they said, because the pronoun they was ambiguous, he adds by way of explication,) who said it, even the Gileadites, (and they said it when they had got the advantage over them, and got between them and home, as the next verse shows,) being between Ephraim and Manasseh; i. e. having taken the passages of Jordan, as it follows, which lay between Ephraim and that part of Manasseh which was beyond Jordan. Or these latter words may be rendered thus, And the Gileadites were between Ephraim and Manasseh. So there is only an ellipsis of two small words, which are oft defective, and to be understood in Scripture. Or thus, And the Gileadites were in the midst of the Ephraimites, and in the midst of the Manassites, to wit, those Manassites who ordinarily lived within Jordan, who possibly were confederate with the Ephraimites in this quarrel. And so the meaning is, they followed close after them, and overtook them, and fell upon the midst of them, and smote them; and they sent a party to intercept them at the passages of Jordan, as it here follows.

5 And the Gileadites took the passages of Jordan before the Ephraimites: and it was so, that when those Ephraimites which were escaped said, Let me go over; that the men of Gilead said unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he said, Nay;

Those Ephraimites which were escaped, Heb. the fugitives of Ephraim, as before; for the Hebrew words are the same; which may make the latter exposition of the foregoing words more probable, to wit, that it is not the Gileadites, but the Ephraimites, who are there as well as here so called, because they are smitten before Jephthah, and fled from him. If he said, Nay; to avoid the present danger.

6 Then said they unto him, Say now || Shibboleth: and he said Sibboleth: for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan: and there fell at that time of the Ephraimites forty and two thousand.

Shibboleth signifies a stream or river, which they desired to pass over; so it was a word proper for the occasion, and gave them no cause to suspect the design, because they were required only to express their desire to go over the Shibboleth or river. He said Sibboleth. It is well known, that not only divers nations, but divers provinces, or parts of the same nation, who use the same language, differ in their dialect and manner of pronunciation. He could not frame to pronounce it right, or rather, he did not frame or direct himself to speak so, or to speak right, i. e. so as he was required to do it. The Hebrew text doth not say that he could not do it, but that that he did it not, because he, suspecting not the design of it, uttered it speedily according to his manner of expression. At that time; not in that place, at the passages of Jordan, but in that expedition, being slain either in the battle, or in the pursuit, or at Jordan.

7 And Jephthah judged Israel six years. Then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

Did evil, i. e. fell into idolatry, &c., not now after the death of Abdon the last judge, but in the days of the former judges. Forty years, to be computed not from Abdon's death, but before that time, as is evident both from ver. 5, where it is declared that Israel was under the power of the Philistines; and from Judg. xv. 20, where only twenty of these years are said to have been in Samson's days. And it is probably conceived, that that great slaughter of the Ephraimites made by Jephthah did greatly encourage the Philistines to rise against Israel, when one of their chief bulwarks was so much weakened; and therefore that the Philistines began to domineer over them not long after Jephthah's death.

2 ¶ And there was a certain man of †Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah; and his wife was barren, and bare not.

8 ¶ Then Manoah intreated the LORD, and said, O my Lord, let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born.

9 And God hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field: but Manoah her husband was not with her.

10 And the woman made haste, and ran, and shewed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day.

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman? And he said, I am.

Supposing him to be a man and a prophet, to whom he would in this manner express his respect, as was usual to strangers. See Gen. xviii. 5; Judg. vi. 18.

16 And the angel of the LORD said unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread: and if thou wilt offer a burnt offering, thou must offer it unto the LORD. For Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the LORD.

Bread, i. e. meat, as bread is commonly taken in Scripture. Unto the Lord; not unto a man, as now thou apprehendest me to be; but unto the Lord, as thou wilt by and by perceive me to be.

17 And Manoah said unto the angel of the LORD, What is thy name, that when thy sayings come to pass we may do thee honour?

Either by making honourable mention of thee, or by performing respect and service to thee, by a present, which they usually gave to prophets, 1 Sam. ix. 7, 8; 1 Kings xiv. 3.

18 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, °Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is †secret?

Or, hidden from mortal men; or, wonderful, such as thou canst not comprehend; my nature or essence (which is oft signified by name in Scripture) is incomprehensible. This shows that this was the Angel of the covenant, the Son of God.

19 So Manoah took a kid with a meat offering, †and offered it upon a rock unto the LORD: and the angel did wonderfully; and Manoah and his wife looked on.

Meat-offerings were generally joined with the chief sacrifices. Offered it upon a rock; the angel's presence and command being a sufficient warrant for the offering of sacrifice by a person who was no priest, and in a place otherwise forbidden.

20 For it came to pass, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the LORD ascended in the flame of the altar. And Manoah and his wife looked on it, and †fell on their faces to the ground.

The flame; either arising from the fire which Manoah brought for the offering, or produced by the angel out of the rock in a miraculous manner. From off the altar, i. e. from that part of the rock which served instead of an altar, upon which the sacrifice was laid. The angel ascended in the flame, to manifest his nature and essence to be spiritual, because not capable of hurt by the fire; and celestial. Fell on their faces; partly in reverence to that glorious presence manifested in so wonderful a manner; and partly out of a religious horror and fear of death upon this occasion, as is expressed ver. 22, for the prevention whereof they fell down in way of supplication to God.

21 But the angel of the LORD did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife. †Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the LORD.

22 And Manoah said unto his wife, "We shall surely die, because we have seen God.

23 But his wife said unto him, If the LORD were pleased to kill us, he would not have received a burnt offering and a meat offering at our hands, neither would he have shewed us all these things, nor would as at this time have told us such things as these.

Or, at this time; the particle as noting here, not likeness, but the truth and reality of the thing, as it doth Numb. xi. 1; Deut. ix. 10, and elsewhere. This expression seems to have some emphasis in it, to enhance God's mercy to them, as being afforded them in a time of such public and grievous calamity; and in a time when the word of the Lord was precious, and there was no open vision, as it was afterwards, 1 Sam. iii. 1.

24 ¶ And the woman bare a son, and called his name †Samson: and †the child grew, and the LORD blessed him.

i. e. Endowed him with all those graces and gifts of mind and body which were necessary for the work he was designed for.

25 *And the Spirit of the LORD began to move him at times in †the camp of Dan †between Zorah and Eshtaol.

To move him at times, i. e. to stir him up to heroic designs; to show forth its power in him in the frame of his mind, and in the strength of his body, discovered to his neighbours in extraordinary actions; to incline his heart to great attempts to the help and deliverance of God's people; and to give some essays of it to his brethren, and to seek all opportunities for it, as he did in the next chapter. In the camp of Dan; a place so called, either from the expedition of the Danites, Judg. xviii. 11, 12; which though placed after this history, was done before it; or from some other camp which the Danites had formed there at this time, to give some check to the incursions of the Philistines.

CHAP. XIV.

Samson desires to wife a daughter of the Philistines of Timnath; and this of the Lord, for an occasion against them, 1—4. His parents go down with him to Timnath: a young lion meets him; he kills it, 5—7; in his return he findeth honey in the carcass, 8, 9. Keepeth a marriage feast: hath thirty companions adjoined to him; to whom he propoundeth a riddle; with promise of a present, 10—15. His wife extorts from him the explication, and discovereth it, 16—18. He slayeth thirty Philistines of Ashkelon, and therewith payeth his present, 19. His wife is given to another, 20.

AND Samson went down *to Timnath, and †saw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines.

After he was come to mature age. Timnath; a place not far from the sea; of which see Gen. xxxviii. 12; Josh. xv. 57; xix. 43.

2 And he came up, and told his father and his mother, and said, I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines: now therefore †get her for me to wife.

3 Then his father and his mother said unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of †thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the †uncircumcised Philistines? And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me; for †she pleaseth me well.

The uncircumcised Philistines, with whom the Israelites were forbidden to marry, Exod. xxxiv. 12, &c. And although the Philistines were not Canaanites in their original, Gen. x. 14; Deut. ii. 23; yet they were so in their habitation, and concurrence with them in wickedness, and therefore were liable to the same censures and judgments with them. Get her for me: this action of Samson's, though against common rules, seems to be warranted, partly by the greatness and goodness of his design in it, and principally by the instinct and direction of God, which is mentioned in the following words, which was known to Samson, but not to his parents. She pleaseth me well; not so much for her beauty, as for the design mentioned in the next verse.

4 But his father and his mother knew not that it was 'of the LORD, that he sought an occasion against the Philistines: for at that time 'the Philistines had dominion over Israel.

He sought an occasion against the Philistines; which he knew by very probable conjecture, if not by particular inspiration, that marriage would give him many ways.

5 ¶ Then went Samson down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath: and, behold, a young lion roared † against him.

His father and his mother accompanied him, either because they were now acquainted with his design, or to order the circumstances of that action which they saw he was set upon, or to watch if they could find any occasion to take him off from his intention. Came to the vineyards of Timnath, whither he had turned aside, either by a Divine impulse, or upon some real or pretended occasion.

6 And ^hthe Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him, and he rent him as he would have rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand: but he told not his father or his mother what he had done.

Came mightily upon him; stirred up and increased his courage and bodily strength. As he would have rent a kid; as soon and as safely. He told not his father or his mother, lest by their means it should be publicly known; for he wisely considered that it was not yet a fit time to awaken the jealousies and fears of the Philistines concerning him, as this would have done.

7 And he went down, and talked with the woman; and she pleased Samson well.

8 ¶ And after a time he returned to take her, and he turned aside to see the carcase of the lion: and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and honey in the carcase of the lion.

After a time, Heb. after days, i. e. either after some days; or rather, after a year, as that word oft signifies; as Exod. xiii. 10; Lev. xxv. 29; Numb. ix. 22; Judg. xvii. 10; 1 Sam. i. 3; xxvii. 7; when the flesh of the lion, which by its strong smell is offensive to and avoided by bees, was wholly consumed, and nothing was left but the bones. There was a swarm of bees; not generated of the dead lion's body, but elsewhere, and settling themselves there, as they have sometimes done in a man's skull, and in a sepulchre, and such-like places.

9 And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcase of the lion.

He took thereof in his hands, out of the lion's carcass. Quest. Did not Samson transgress in touching a carcass? Ans. It was in itself a legal pollution; but some such pollutions were involuntary and unavoidable, as in one that hath an issue running in his sleep; and some were necessary duties, as in those who were to attend upon a woman in her month, or upon the burial of a dead body. And such was this pollution, being contracted by Divine instinct and direction, and in order to God's honour, and therefore dispensed with by the author of that law, and required by him for his service. Came to his father and mother; from whom he had turned aside for a season, ver. 8, upon some pretence or other.

10 ¶ So his father went down unto the woman: and Samson made there a feast; for so used the young men to do.

11 And it came to pass, when they saw him, that they brought thirty companions to be with him.

When they saw him, or, observed or considered him, his stature, and strength, and countenance, and carriage, which were extraordinary. They brought thirty companions to be with him; partly in compliance with the custom of having bridemen; of which see Matt. ix. 15; Mark ii. 19; John iii. 29, though they were not so numerous; and principally by way of caution, and as a guard put upon him under a pretence of respect and affection.

12 ¶ And Samson said unto them, I will now 'put forth a riddle unto you: if ye can certainly declare it me ^bwithin the seven days of the feast, and find it out, then I will give you thirty || sheets and thirty ¹change of garments:

A riddle, i. e. an obscure sentence for you to resolve and explain. The seven days of the feast; for so long marriage-feasts lasted. See Gen. xxix. 27. Thirty sheets; fine linen clothes, which were used for many purposes in those parts. See Matt. xxvii. 59; Mark xiv. 51. Thirty change of garments, i. e. changeable suits of apparel, as below, ver. 19; Gen. xlv. 22.

13 But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets and thirty change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said unto them, Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And they could not in three days expound the riddle.

i. e. Out of that strong and devouring creature, the lion, came forth sweet meat, to wit, honey; withal it is covertly implied, that the Philistines, though now they had strength on their side, and dominion over Israel, whom they did devour upon all occasions, yet at last they should become meat to the Israelites.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they said unto Samson's wife, ^mEntice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, ⁿlest we burn thee and thy father's house with fire: have ye called us † to take that we have? is it not so?

On the seventh day; they had doubtless spoken to her before this time, but with some remissness, supposing that they should find it out; but now their time being nigh slipped, they press her with more vehemency, and put her under a necessity of searching it out. To take that we have, i. e. to strip us of our garments; and so your civility will end in gross unkindness and injustice.

16 And Samson's wife wept before him, and said, °Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not: thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee?

Though I have had much more experience of their fidelity and taciturnity than of thine.

17 And she wept before him || the seven days, while their feast lasted: and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her, because she lay sore upon him: and she told the riddle to the children of her people.

The seven days, while their feast lasted, i. e. on the residue of the seven days, to wit, after the third day. It is a familiar synecdoche. Or, on the seventh of the days on which the feast was; and then the following clause, on the seventh day, is only the noun repeated for the pronoun, on that day; as is most frequent, as 1 Kings viii. 1, Solomon assembled—unto Solomon, i. e. unto himself.

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey? and what is stronger than a lion? And he said unto them, If ye had not plowed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

If you had not employed my wife to find it out, as men plough up the ground with a heifer, thereby discovering its hidden parts: he calls her heifer, either because he now suspected her wantonness and too much familiarity with that friend which she afterwards married; or because she was joined with him in the same yoke; or rather, because they used such in ploughing.

19 ¶ And ^{p ch. 3. 10. & 13. 25.} the Spirit of the LORD came upon him, and he went down to Ashkelon, and slew thirty men of them, and took their ^{¶ Or, apparel.} spoil, and gave change of garments unto them which expounded the riddle. And his anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house.

The Spirit of the Lord came upon him; though he had a constant habit of eminent strength and courage, yet that was exceedingly increased upon special occasions, by the extraordinary influences of God's Spirit. To Ashkelon; either to the territory, which oft comes under the name of the city; or to the city itself, where he had both strength and courage enough to attempt what here follows; and upon the doing hereof they were doubtless struck with such a terror, that every one sought only to preserve himself, and none durst oppose or pursue him. Change of garments, together with their sheets or shirts, which it sufficed to imply here, being expressed above, ver. 13. His anger was kindled, for the treachery of his wife and companions. And he went up, to wit, alone, or without his wife.

20 But Samson's wife ^{q ch. 15. 2.} was given to his companion, whom he had used as his friend.

Samson's wife was given, by her father, to the chief of the bride-men, to whom he had showed most respect and kindness.

CHAP. XV.

Samson desireth to visit his wife; is denied her; wherefore he tieth firebrands to three hundred foxes' tails, and sets the corn on fire, 1—5; for which they burn his wife and her father, 6. Samson's revenge, 7, 8. The Philistines pitch in Judah, and demand Samson: the men of Judah bind and deliver him, 9—13. He breaketh his bands, and slayeth one thousand Philistines with the jawbone of an ass, 14—17. He is athirst; prays; obtains water out of it, 18—20.

cir. 1140. BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with a kid; and he said, I will go in to my wife into the chamber. But her father would not suffer him to go in.

In the time of wheat harvest; which circumstance is noted as the proper season for the following exploit. Into the chamber; into her proper chamber, which women had distinct and separate from the men's.

2 And her father said, I verily thought that thou hadst utterly ^{a ch. 14. 0.} hated her; therefore I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister fairer than she? † take her, I pray thee, instead of her.

I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her, because thou didst desert her in great wrath: but this was not sufficient cause; for he should have endeavoured a reconciliation, or waited for it; and not have disposed of another man's wife without his consent; which is not only against the law of God, but of nature also.

3 ¶ And Samson said concerning them, ¶ Now shall I be more blameless than ^{¶ Or, Now shall I be blameless from the Philistines, though &c.} the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure.

Because they have first provoked me by an irreparable injury. But although this may look like an act of private revenge, yet it is plain enough that Samson acted as a judge, (for so he was,) and as an avenger of the public injuries and oppressions of his people; as plainly appears from hence, that Samson designed this very thing before he had received any personal injury, Judg. xiv. 4.

4 And Samson went and caught three hundred foxes, and took ^{¶ Or, torches.} firebrands, and turned tail to tail, and put a firebrand in the midst between two tails.

There were great numbers of foxes in Canaan, as appears from Neh. iv. 3; Psal. lxxiii. 10; Cant. ii. 15; Lam. v. 18; Ezek. xiii. 4. So that divers places there have their names from the foxes which abounded there; as Josh. xv. 28; xix. 42; 1 Sam. xiii. 17. Add to this, that some learned men conceive that the Hebrew name schual is more general, and contains not only the foxes, but another sort of creature very like to them, called thoes, whereof there were so many there, that sometimes two hundred of them have been met together in one company, as some who have lived in those parts have left upon record. But infidels are much scandalized at this history, and pretend it incredible that Samson should catch so many foxes together; so nice and delicate is the faith of these men in things concerning God and Scripture, that can devour things ten times more difficult and absurd, concerning the production of the world, and of men, &c. But there is no cause of wonder here, for any man that is tolerably wise; for it is not said that Samson caught them all, either at one time, or by his own hands; for being so eminent a person, and the judge of Israel, he might require assistance of as many persons as he pleased, and all his people would readily assist him; nor can it at all perplex any man's reason or faith, if it be allowed that the God who made the world, and by his singular providence watched over Israel, and intended them deliverance at this time, could easily dispose things so that they might be taken. He chose to do this exploit, not by his brethren, whom he would preserve from the envy, and hatred, and mischief which that might have occasioned to them, but by brute creatures, thereby to add scorn and contempt to their calamity, and particularly by foxes; partly, because they were fittest for the purpose, being creatures very fearful of fire; and having such tails as the firebrands might most conveniently be tied to; and not going directly forward, but crookedly and involv'dly, whereby the fire was likely to be dispersed in more places. Fire-brands; made of such matter as would quickly take fire, and keep it for a long time; which was easy to procure. Between two tails, that the foxes might not make too much haste, nor run into their holes, but one of them might delay and stop another in his course, and so continue longer in the places where they were to do execution.

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives.

He let them go, to wit, successively at several times, and in divers places, with great care and discretion, so as they might not hinder one another, nor all run into the same field; but being dispersed in all parts, might spread the plague further; and withal might be kept at a distance from the fields and vineyards of the Israelites. It is not worthy of our inquiry what became of these foxes afterward, whether they were burnt by the firebrands, or run into holes, or were taken and killed by the Philistines. The truth of this history is notably attested by a custom of the Romans, which it is very probable they had from the Phœnicians, upon this occasion; for every year they had a solemnity in April, the very time of Canaan's wheat harvest, wherein foxes were let loose with burning torches fastened to their backsides, &c.

6 ¶ Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson, the son in law of the Timnite, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. ^b And the Philistines came up, and burnt her and her father with fire.

Partly for her adultery, which divers heathens punished with death; and partly for that mischief which she had occasioned to them; thus she brought upon herself that mischief which she studied to avoid, Judg. xiv. 15, as wicked persons oft do, Prov. x. 24.

7 ¶ And Samson said unto them, Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

Whereby it appears, that it was not his private injuries, but the public, which he did revenge.

8 And he smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

Hip and thigh; upon their hips and thighs, peradventure not designing to kill them, but to make them incapable of military employment, or of doing hurt to the Israelites. Or, He smote them with his leg upon their thigh, i. e. without any other weapon but his leg and foot he kicked them, and made them lame and useless for war. With a great slaughter, Heb. with a great stroke; for so it was, even to them whom it did not kill. He dwelt in the top of the rock Etam; partly because there he could better defend himself from his enemies; and partly because he would not involve his brethren in the same danger with himself, but, like a worthy magistrate, would secure them even with his own greater hazard.

9 ¶ Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves ^c in Lehi.

The rock Etam was in Judah: see 1 Chron. iv. 32; 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6. Spread themselves, as coming in great numbers with a powerful host. Lehi; a place so called by anticipation, ver. 17.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, To bind Samson are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand men of Judah ^d went to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest thou not that the Philistines are ^e rulers over us? what is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me, so have I done unto them.

What is this that thou hast done unto us? thou hast by these actions punished not them, as thou intendest; but us, who being under their dominion, are sure to smart for it.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not fall upon me yourselves.

Not that he feared them, or could not as easily have conquered them, as he did the whole host of the Philistines; but because he would be free from all obligation or temptation of doing them any harm, though it were in his own just and necessary defence.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No; but we will bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

i. e. From the cave or hole in the rock, in which he had secured himself, out of which he was first brought up, and then carried down from the rock to the plain.

14 ¶ And when he came unto Lehi, the Philistines shouted against him: and ^e the Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him, and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands ^f loosed from off his hands.

The Philistines shouted against him, for joy and triumph, because they had now their great enemy, as they supposed, in their hands. His bands loosed, Heb. were melted, i. e. were dissolved, as things are which are melted in the fire.

15 And he found a ^g new jawbone of an ass, and put forth his hand, and took it, and ^h slew a thousand men therewith.

A new jawbone, and therefore more tough and strong.

16 And Samson said, With the jawbone of an ass, ⁱ heaps upon heaps, with the jaw of an ass have I slain a thousand men.

This, though it might seem difficult, yet is not at all impossible or incredible; especially seeing the learned affirm of the asses of Syria, that they were larger and stronger than ours, and so consequently were their bones. And withal, it must be acknowledged that there was something extraordinary and miraculous in this, as there was unquestionably in Samson's strength, and so all the difficulty vanisheth.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jawbone out of his hand, and called that place ^j Ramath-lehi.

And by contraction, Lehi, ver. 14, it being usual so to contract proper names; as Salem is put for Jerusalem, Psal. lxxvi. 2; Sheba for Beer-sheba, Josh. xix. 2; and many other.

18 ¶ And he was sore athirst, and called on the Lord, and said, ^k Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant: and now shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?

He was sore athirst, so as he was ready to faint and die with thirst; which was partly natural, from his excessive toil and heat; partly sent by God, that by the experience of his own impotency he might be forced to ascribe the victory to God only, and not to himself. Now shall I die for thirst? Wilt thou not finish what thou hast begun? Wilt thou undo what thou hast done?

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in ^l the jaw, and there came water thereout; and when he had drunk, ^m his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof ⁿ En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

Clave an hollow place, i. e. by cleaving a place, made it hollow; an expression like that Isa. xlvii. 2, grind meal, i. e. grind corn into meal; and that Psal. lxxiv. 15, thou didst cleave the fountain, i. e. cleave the rock so as to make a fountain in it. In the jaw; in the jawbone which he had used, which God could easily effect, either by causing the jawbone to send forth water, as the rock formerly did, the miracle being in effect the same, though in a differing subject, causing a spring to break forth in Lehi: or, in that Lehi mentioned before, ver. 14; for Lehi is both the name of a place, and signifies a jawbone. En-hakkore, i. e. the fountain of him that cried for thirst; or, that called upon God for deliverance; i. e. the fountain or well which was given in answer to my prayer. Which is in Lehi unto this day. According to this translation, Lehi is the name of a place, and not a jawbone, because it seems improbable that a jawbone should continue there so long, which every traveller might take away, and would be forward enough to carry a fountain with them in those hot countries; although it is not incredible that passengers would generally forbear to meddle with or remove so great a monument of God's

|| He seems to have judged South west Israel during twenty years of their servitude of the Philistines. i ch. 13. 1.

20 || And he judged Israel in the days of the Philistines twenty years.

i. e. He pleaded their cause, and avenged them against the Philistines. In the days of the Philistines, i. e. whilst the Philistines had the power and dominion, from which he was not fully to deliver, but only to begin to deliver them, as it was foretold, Judg. xiii. 5. From this place it is manifest, that in the computation of the times of the judges, the years of servitude or oppression are not to be separated from the years of the judges, and added to them, but are comprehended within them; which proposition is of great importance for clearing this difficult part of Scripture chronology, and for justifying that account of times given 1 Kings vi. 1.

CHAP. XVI.

Samson goeth in to a harlot; is hemmed in; riseth at midnight; taketh the city gates, posts, and bars on his shoulders, and carrieth them up into a mountain, 1—3. Is in love with Delilah; she enticeth him to discover wherein his strength lay; is thrice deceived; at last she overcomes him, 4—20. They put out his eyes, and cast him into prison, 21. His hair grows again, 22. The lords of the Philistines and the people gather together to make sport with him to the honour of their idols; and sacrifice, 23—25. Samson getteth them to place his hands on the two pillars of the house; he prays to God; pulls down the house; and dieth: but more slain at his death than in his life, 26—30. He is buried, 31.

|| Or, by the brook.

THEN went Samson to Gaza, and saw there † an harlot, and went in unto her.

Samson went to Gaza, a chief city, to make some new attempt upon the Philistines, whom he feared not either in their cities or in their camps, having had such large experience of his own strength, and of God's assistance; possibly he came in thither by night, unknown and unobserved till afterwards. Saw there an harlot; going into a house of public entertainment to refresh himself, as the manner was, Josh. ii. 1. He there saw this harlot; which implies that he did not go thither upon so evil a design, but accidentally saw her there, and by giving way to lustful looks upon her, was insnared by her.

2 And it was told the Gazites, saying, Samson is come hither. And they ^a compassed him in, and laid wait for him all night in the gate of the city, and were † quiet all the night, saying, In the morning, when it is day, we shall kill him.

This they chose to do, rather than to seize upon him in his house and bed by night; either because they knew not certainly in what house or place he was; or because they thought that might cause great terror, and confusion, and mischief among their own people; whereas in the day time they might more fully discover him, and more unexpectedly surprise him, and more certainly direct their blows and use their weapons against him.

3 And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight, and took the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts, and went away with them, † bar and all, and put them upon his shoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.

Arose at midnight; being either smitten in conscience for his sin, when he first awaked, and thence fearing danger, as he had just cause to do; or being secretly warned by God in a dream, or by an inward impulse, for the prevention of his designed destruction. The doors of the gate of the city; not the great gates, but lesser doors made in them, and strengthened with distinct posts and bars. Went away with them; the watchmen not expecting him till morning, and therefore being now retired into the sides or upper part of the gate-house, as the manner now is, to get some rest, whereby to fit themselves for their hard service intended in the morning; or if some of them were in his way, he could easily and speedily strike them dead, and break the door, whilst the rest were partly astonished with the surprise, and partly preparing themselves for resistance: nor durst they pursue him, whom they now again perceived to have such prodigious strength and courage; and to be so much above the fear of them, that he did not run away with all speed, but went leisurely, having so great a weight on his shoulders, wherewith they knew he could both defend himself and offend them. Up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron; either, 1. To a hill near Hebron, which was above twenty miles from Gaza; or, 2. To the top of a high hill not far from Gaza, which looked towards Hebron, which also stood upon another high hill, and might be seen from this place, though it was at a great distance from it. And Samson did this not out of vain ostentation, but as an evidence of his great strength, for the encouragement of his people to join with him more vigorously for their own deliverance than yet they had done, or durst do, and for the greater terror and contempt of the Philistines. It may seem strange that Samson immediately after so foul a sin should have the courage in himself, and the strength from God, for so great a work. But, 1. It is probable that Samson had in some measure repented of his sin, and begged of God pardon and assistance, which also he perceived by instinct that God would afford him. 2. This singular strength and courage was not in itself a grace, but a gift, which might have been in a graceless person, and therefore might continue in a good man, notwithstanding a heinous act of sin; and it was such a gift as did not depend upon the disposition of his mind, but upon the right ordering of his body, by the rule given to him, and others of that order.

4 ¶ And it came to pass afterward, that he loved a woman || in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.

He loved a woman; either, first, With conjugal love, so as to marry her, as divers both Jews and Christians have thought. Or, secondly, With lustful love, as a harlot; which though not certain, because the phrase is here ambiguous, she being neither called a harlot, as she of Gaza was, ver. 1, nor yet his wife, as she of Timnath was, Judg. xiv. 2, 3, 20, yet it may seem more probable; partly, because the dreadful punishment now inflicted upon Samson for this sin, whom God spared for the first offence, is an intimation that this sin was not inferior to the former; partly, because the confidence which the Philistine lords had in her, and their bold and frequent treating with her, and the whole course of her carriage towards Samson, show her to be a mercenary and perfidious harlot, and not a wife, whose affection and interest would have obliged her to better things; and partly, because Samson did not carry her home to his house, as husbands use to do their wives; but lodged in her house, as appears from the whole story.

5 And the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and said unto her, ^b Entice him, and see wherein his great strength lieth, and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to || afflict him: and we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of silver.

The lords of the Philistines; the lords of their five principal cities, who seem to have been united together at this time in one aristocratical government; or at least were leagued together against him as their common enemy. To afflict him; to chastise him for his injuries done to us.

mean to punish him severely, as they did; but they express it in mild words, lest the horror of it might move her to pity him. Pieces of silver, i. e. shekels, as that phrase is commonly used, as Numb. vii. 13, 85; 2 Sam. xviii. 12; 2 Kings vi. 25.

6 ¶ And Delilah said to Samson, Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth, and wherewith thou mightest be bound to afflict thee.

Wherewith thy great strength lieth; what is the cause of this prodigious strength, or wherein doth it consist? She seems to ask merely out of curiosity, to understand the state of a person whom she so highly values.

7 And Samson said unto her, If they bind me with seven ¶ green withs that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as ¶ another man.

Samson is guilty both of the sin of lying, though he dress up the lie in such circumstances as might make it most probable; and of great folly, in encouraging her inquiries, which he should at first have checked: but as he had forsaken God, so God had now forsaken him, and deprived him of common prudence; otherwise the frequent repetition and vehement urging of this question might easily have raised suspicion in him.

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she bound him with them.

9 Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber. And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it ¶ toucheth the fire. So his strength was not known.

With her in the chamber; with her, i. e. in the same house, in a chamber, i. e. in a secret chamber within her call. Nor is it strange that they did not fall upon him in his sleep; partly because they feared to awake a sleeping lion; and partly because they expect an opportunity for doing their work more certainly, and with less danger.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now tell me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, If they bind me fast with new ropes ¶ that never were occupied, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

12 Delilah therefore took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And there were liars in wait abiding in the chamber. And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, If thou weavest the seven locks of my head with the web.

Or, thread which is woven about a weaver's loom; or, with a weaver's beam. If my hair, which is all divided into seven locks, be fastened about a weaver's beam, or interwoven with weavers' threads; understand out of the foregoing verses, then I shall be weak as another man.

14 And she fastened it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awaked out of his sleep, and went away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.

Having done what Samson directed, she adds this for sureness' sake; she fastened the hair thus woven with a pin.

15 ¶ And she said unto him, How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me these three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

When thine heart is not with me; when thy love consists only in outward expression, not in affection, and thou wilt not open thy heart to me, as one true friend doth to another.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was ¶ vexed unto death;

Being tormented by two contrary and violent passions; desire to gratify her whom he so much doted upon, and fear of betraying himself to utmost hazard. But being deserted by God, it is no wonder that he chooseth the worst part.

17 That he ¶ told her all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.

Not that his hair was in itself the seat or cause of his strength, but because it was the chief condition of that vow or covenant, whereby as he stood obliged to him, so God was pleased graciously to engage himself to fit him for, and assist him in, that great work to which he called him; but upon his violation of his condition, God justly withdraws his help, and leaves him to himself.

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once, for he hath shewed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and brought money in their hand.

It was not hard for her to discover that he had told her all his heart, by the change of his countenance, and the matter of his discourse, and the whole carriage of the business.

19 ¶ And she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and she caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

She made him sleep, by some sleepy potion, which it is like she gave him upon other pretences, agreeable enough to his present and vitiated inclination. Upon her knees; resting his head upon her knees. She caused him to shave off, with a gentle hand, as if she herself had been but sporting with him. She did this more securely, partly because she had cast him into a deep sleep, and partly because if he had discovered it before it was finished, she would have said it was only an innocent intention to try the sincerity of his affection to her, and the truth of this last relation, which she had so just reason to doubt of, from his frequent dissimulation and lies. She began to afflict him, i. e. to disturb, and awaken, and affright him, as by other ways, so particularly by crying out in a terrible manner, The Philistines are upon thee, as she had done before, and as it follows, ver. 20. His strength went from him; which, as is here implied, she perceived, because he could not now shake himself as he did before, i. e. with equal vigour and might, as is intimated in the next verse; or because she had bound him, though it be not here expressed, and found him unable to break his bands.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that the LORD ¶ was departed from him.

He awoke out of his sleep, and said within himself, i. e. he purposed and attempted it. Shake myself, i. e. put forth my strength to crush them, and to deliver myself. He wist not; being not yet well awake, and not distinctly feeling the loss of his hair, or not duly considering what would follow upon it. The Lord was departed from him; in respect of the strength and help he had formerly given him.

21 ¶ But the Philistines took him, and † put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and bound him with fetters of brass; and he did grind in the prison house.

The Philistines now durst apprehend him, because they rested in the assurance which Delilah had given them, that now all was discovered and done. Put out his eyes; which was done by them out of revenge and policy, to disenable him from doing them much harm, in case he should recover his strength; but not without God's providence, punishing him in that part which had been greatly instrumental to his sinful lusts. Brought him down to Gaza, because this was a great and strong city, where he would be kept safely; and upon the sea-coast, at sufficient distance from Samson's people; and to repair the honour of that place, upon which he had fastened so great a scorn, Judg. xvi. 3. God also ordering things thus, that where he first sinned, Judg. xvi. 1, there he should receive his punishment. He did grind in the prison-house, as captives and slaves use to do: see Exod. xi. 5; Isa. xlvii. 2; Matt. xxiv. 41. He made himself a slave to vile lusts and harlots, and now God suffers men to use him like a slave.

22 Howbeit the hair of his head began to grow again ¶ after he was shaven.

This circumstance, though in itself inconsiderable, is noted as a sign of the recovery of God's favour, and his former strength, in some good degree, upon his bitter repentance, and his renewing of his vow with God, which was allowed for Nazarites to do, Numb. vi. 9, &c., and which it is here supposed he did, and by the effects proved.

23 Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto Dagon their god, and to rejoice: for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand.

The lords of the Philistines gathered them together; either upon some annual or customary solemnity; or rather, upon this special occasion, to praise Dagon for this singular favour. And they did not appoint this solemn service as soon as Samson was taken, but some considerable time after, as appears by the growth of Samson's hair in the mean time, because they would give sufficient time and warning for all their friends and allies to come thither, and for the making of all necessary preparations for so great an occasion. Dagon is by most supposed to be an idol, whose upper part was like a man, and whose lower part was like a fish; whence there is mention of Dagon's hands, but not of his feet, in 1 Sam. v. 4. And this place being near Egypt, where some of their gods were worshipped in the form of fishes, and being near the sea, it seems most probable that it was one of the sea gods of the heathens, and that it had in some part the resemblance of a fish.

24 And when the people saw him, they h praised their god: for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, † which slew many of us.

25 And it came to pass, when their hearts were merry, that they said, Call for Samson, that he may make us sport. And they called for Samson out of the prison house; and he made † them sport: and they set him between the pillars.

He made them sport; either, first, Passively, being made by them the matter of their sport and derision, and of many bitter scoffs, and other indignities or injuries; or, secondly, Actively, by some ridiculous actions, or some proofs of more than ordinary strength yet remaining in him, like the ruins of a great and goodly building; whereby he lulled them asleep in security, until by this seeming complaisance he prepared the way for that which he designed; otherwise his generous soul would never have been forced to make them sport, save in order to their destruction.

26 And Samson said unto the lad that held him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them.

27 Now the house was full of men and women; and all the lords of the Philistines were there; and there were upon the ^kroof about three thousand men and women, that beheld while Samson made sport.

The roof, after the manner of the times, was flat, and had windows through which they might see what was done in the lower parts of the house.

28 And Samson called unto the LORD, and said, O Lord God, remember me, I pray thee, and strengthen me, I only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.

This prayer was not an act of malice and revenge, but of faith and zeal for God, who was there publicly dishonoured; and justice, in punishing their insolences, and vindicating the whole commonwealth of Israel, which was his duty, as he was judge, to do. And this is manifest from hence, because God, who heareth not sinners, and would never use his omnipotency to gratify any man's impotent malice, did manifest by the effect that he accepted and owned his prayer, as the dictate of his own Spirit. And that in this prayer he mentions only his personal injury, the loss of his eyes, and not their indignities to God and his people, must be ascribed to that prudent care which he had, and declared upon former occasions, of deriving the rage and hatred of the Philistines upon himself alone, and diverting it from the people. For which end I conceive this prayer was made with an audible voice, though he knew they would entertain it only with scorn and laughter, which also he knew would quickly be turned into mourning.

29 And Samson took hold of the two middle pillars upon which the house stood, and ¶ on which it was borne up, of the one with his right hand, and of the other with his left.

Quest. How could so great a building, containing so many thousands of people, rest upon two pillars so near placed together? Here infidels triumph, as if they had got an unanswerable argument against the truth of the Scriptures. But it is a far more incredible and ridiculous thing to imagine that the penman of this book should feign such a circumstance as this is, if it had been false, whereby he would have utterly overthrown the credit of the whole book; and that he should do this before a people that could easily have confuted him; and that people should have so high a veneration for that book in which they knew so notorious a falsehood to be: these things, I say, are far more absurd to believe, than the truth of this relation. But to this I shall add two answers. First, It is no sufficient argument to prove that this was not true, because we do not at this day understand how it was done. There were many great works and excellent pieces of art, some footsteps whereof are left in ancient writers; but the exact way and particular manner of them is wholly, or in a great measure, unknown and lost; so that Pancirollus hath written a whole book of such things. Particularly, the old way of architecture is much in the dark, as is confessed by the learned. It may be pretended, that though there might be curious arts of building in the learned and ingenious part of the world, it is not probable they were among such a rude and barbarous people as the Philistines. But this is certainly a very great mistake; for these people were either a part of, or very near neighbours to, the Phœnicians, from whom it is confessed the arts came to the Grecians. And forasmuch as many things which were concluded by the ancients to be impossible, are by the wit and industry of later ages found to be possible, and certainly true; it cannot be strange if some things now seem impossible to some men, which were then known to be practicable. And he that will venture his faith and salvation upon this proposition, That such a building as this was simply impossible, because he doth not see the possibility of it; or, which is all one, That no man understands more than he doth; will find few admirers of his wisdom. And to question the truth and divinity of the Holy Scriptures, which is so fully and clearly proved by sundry arguments, upon such a nicety as this, is but a more learned kind of doting. Answ. 2. Instances are not wanting of far more large and capacious buildings than this, that have been supported only by one pillar. Particularly, Pliny, in the 15th chapter of the 36th book of his Natural History, mentions two theatres built by one C. Curio, who lived in Julius Cæsar's time, each of which was supported only by one pillar, or pin, or hinge, though very many thousands of people did sit in it together. And much more might two pillars suffice to uphold a building large enough to contain three thousand persons, which is the number mentioned, ver. 27. Or the pillars might be made two in the lower part merely for ornament sake, which might easily be so ordered as to support a third and main pillar in the middle, which upheld the whole fabric.

30 And Samson said, Let † me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might; and the house fell upon the lords, and upon all the people that were therein. So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

Let me die with the Philistines, i. e. I am contented to die, so I can but therewith contribute any thing to the vindication of God's glory, here trampled upon, and to the deliverance of God's people. This is no example nor encouragement to those that wickedly murder themselves; for Samson did not desire nor procure his own death voluntarily, but only by mere force and necessity, because he did desire, and by his office was obliged to seek, the destruction of these enemies and blasphemers of God, and oppressors of his people; which in these circumstances he could not effect without his own death: and his case was not much unlike theirs, that in the heat of battle run upon the very mouth of the cannon, or other evident and certain danger of death, to execute a design upon the enemy; or theirs, who go in a fire-ship to destroy the enemy's best ships, though they are sure to perish in the enterprise. Moreover, Samson did this by Divine instinct and approbation, as God's answer to his prayer manifests, and that he might be a type of Christ, who by voluntarily undergoing death destroyed the enemies of God, and of his people.

31 Then his brethren and all the house of his father came down, and took him, and brought him up, and ^mburied him between Zorah and Eshtaol in the buryingplace of Manoah his father. And he judged Israel twenty years.

His brethren; either, first, Largely so called, his kinsmen. Or, secondly, Strictly so called; Samson's parents having had other children after him; as it was usual with God when he gave an extraordinary and unexpected power of procreating a child, to continue that strength for the generation or conception of more children, as in the case of Abraham, Gen. xxv. 1, 2; and Hannah, 1 Sam. ii. 21. They adventured to bury him; partly, because the most barbarous nations allowed burial even to their enemies, and would permit this oftentimes to be done by their friends; partly, because Samson had taken the blame of this action wholly to himself, for which his innocent relations could not upon any pretence be punished; and principally, because they were under such grief, and perplexity, and consternation for the common calamity, that they had neither heart nor leisure to revenge themselves of the Israelites, but for their own sakes were willing not to disquiet or offend them; at least, till they were in a better posture to resist them. He judged Israel twenty years: this was said before, Judg. xv. 20, and is here repeated, partly to confirm the relation of it, and partly to explain it; and to show when these twenty years ended, even at his death, as is here noted.

CHAP. XVII.

Micah stealth money of his mother; then confesseth and restoreth it. She dedicates it to the Lord; maketh images: he sets them up in the house of his gods; and consecrates one of his sons for his priest; there being then no magistrates in Israel, 1—6. A Levite travelling that way, he hireth and consecrateth him to be his priest, 7—12; is confident that God would therefore favour and bless him, 13.

AND there was a man of mount Ephraim, ^{cir. 1406.} whose name was Micah.

The things mentioned here, and in the following chapters, did not happen in the order in which they are put; but much sooner, even presently after the death of the elders that overlived Joshua, Judg. ii. 7, as appears by divers passages; as first, Because the place called Mahaneh-dan, or the camp of Dan, Judg. xiii. 25, was so called from that which was done, Judg. xviii. 12. Secondly, Because the Danites had not yet got all their inheritance, Judg. xviii. 1, which is not credible of them above three hundred years after Joshua's death. Thirdly, Because Phinehas the son of Eleazar was priest at this time, Judg. xx. 28, who must have been about three hundred and fifty years old, if this had been done after Samson's death, which is more than improbable.

2 And he said unto his mother, The eleven hundred shekels of silver that were taken from thee, about which thou cursedst, and spakest of also in mine ears, behold, the silver is with me; I took it. And his mother said, ^{a Gen. 14. 19. Ruth 3. 10.} Blessed be thou of the LORD, my son.

About which thou cursedst, i. e. didst curse the person who had taken them away, and that in my hearing, as it follows. I took it; the fear of thy curse makes me acknowledge mine offence, and beg thy pardon. Blessed be thou of the Lord; I willingly consent to and beg from God the removal of the curse, and a blessing instead of it. Be thou free from my curse, because thou hast so honestly restored it.

3 And when he had restored the eleven hundred shekels of silver to his mother, his mother said, I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the LORD from my hand for my son, to ^bmake a graven image and a molten image: now therefore I will restore it unto thee. ^{b See Ex. 20. 4, 23. Lev. 19. 4.}

The Lord; in the Hebrew it is Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God; whereby it is apparent that neither she nor her son intended to forsake the true God or his worship; as appears from his rejoicing when he had got a priest of the Lord's appointment, of the tribe of Levi, ver. 13; but only to worship God by an image; which also it is apparent that both the Israelites, Exod. xxxii. 1, &c., and Jeroboam afterwards, designed to do. For my son; either, first, For the honour and benefit of thyself and family; that you need not be continually going to Shiloh to worship, but may do it as well at home by these images. Or, secondly, That thou mayst cause these things to be made; to which end she restored all the money to him, as it here follows. A graven image and a molten image; many think this was but one image, partly graven, and partly molten. But it seems more probable that they were two distinct images, because they are so plainly distinguished, Judg. xviii. 17, 18, where also some other words come between them. It is true, the graven image alone is mentioned, Judg. xviii. 20, 30, 31, not exclusively to the other, as appears from what is said just before; but by a common synecdoche, whereby one is put for all, especially where that one is esteemed the chief. I will restore it unto thee to dispose of, as I say.

4 Yet he restored the money unto his mother; and his mother ^ctook two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

Yet he restored the money unto his mother; though his mother allowed him to keep it, yet he persisted in his resolution to restore it, that she might dispose of it as she pleased; and did actually restore it, as was said before; and now confirms the former restitution, and therefore is twice said to restore it. His mother took two hundred shekels of silver; reserving nine hundred shekels, either for the ephod and teraphim, or for other things relating to this worship, or for her own private use; being, it seems, cooled in her first zeal, and willing to have as cheap a religion as she could, as also her son Micah was, ver. 10. Who made thereof; made them, either first, of that matter; or secondly, for that money.

5 And the man Micah had an house of gods, and made an ephod, and teraphim, and † consecrated one of his sons, who became his priest.

An house of gods, i. e. an house or place consecrated for the service of God in this manner. An ephod; an eminent part of the priestly garments, Exod. xxviii. 4, which, some think, is here put for all of them. Teraphim; some sort of images so called, of which see Gen. xxxi. 19; Hos. iii. 4. Who became his priest; because the Levites in that corrupt estate of the church neglected the exercise of their office, and therefore were neglected by the people, and others put into their employment. But this kind of priesthood was condemned, Numb. xvi. 40; xviii. 2, 7.

6 ¶ In those days there was no king in Israel, † but every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

No king, i. e. no judge to govern and control them. The word king being here used largely for a supreme magistrate; as Gen. xxxvi. 31; Deut. xxxiii. 5. God raised up judges to rule and deliver the people when he saw fit; and at other times for their sins he suffered them to be without them, and such a time this was; and therefore they ran into that idolatry from which the judges usually kept them, as appears by that solemn and oft-repeated passage in this book, that after the death of such or such a judge the people forsook the Lord, and turned to idols. That which was right in his own eyes, i. e. not what pleased God, but what best suited his own fancy or lusts.

7 ¶ And there was a young man out of Beth-lehem-judah of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he sojourned there.

Out of Beth-lehem-judah, or, of Beth-lehem-judah; so called here, as Matt. ii. 1, 5, to difference it from Beth-lehem in Zebulun, Josh. xix. 15. There he was born and bred. Of the family of Judah, i. e. of or belonging to the tribe of Judah; not by birth, for he was a Levite; nor by his mother, for though that might be true, the mother's side is not regarded in genealogies; but by his habitation and ministration. For the Levites, especially in times of confusion and irreligion, were dispersed among all the tribes; and this man's lot fell into the tribe of Judah; which seems to be here noted by way of reflection upon that tribe, and as an evidence of the general defection, that a Levite could not find entertainment in that great and famous tribe, which God had put so much honour upon, Gen. xlix. 8—11, and therefore was forced to wander and seek for subsistence elsewhere. He sojourned there; so he expresseth it, because this was not the proper nor usual place of his abode, this being no Levitical city.

8 And the man departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah to sojourn where he could find a place: and he came to mount Ephraim to the house of Micah, † as he journeyed.

Where he could find a place, for employment and a livelihood; for the tithes and offerings, which were their maintenance, not being brought in to the house of God, the Levites and priests must needs be reduced to great straits.

9 And Micah said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to sojourn where I may find a place.

10 And Micah said unto him, Dwell with me, and be unto me a father and a priest, and I will give thee ten shekels of silver by the year, and † a suit of apparel, and thy victuals. So the Levite went in.

A father and a priest; for, a father; that is, a priest; a spiritual father, a teacher or instructor, for such are called fathers: see 2 Kings vi. 21; viii. 9; xiii. 14; Isa. xxii. 21. He pretends reverence and submission to him; and what is wanting in his wages he pays him in empty titles.

11 And the Levite was content to dwell with the man; and the young man was unto him as one of his sons.

The Levite was content; being constrained by necessity, and infected with the common contagion of the superstition and idolatry of the times. Was unto him as one of his sons, i. e. treated with the same degree of kindness and affection.

12 And Micah consecrated the Levite; and the young man became his priest, and was in the house of Micah.

Consecrated the Levite, to be a priest, for which he thought a consecration necessary, as knowing that the Levites were no less excluded from the priest's office than the people. Became his priest, instead of his son, whom he had consecrated for want of a fitter, ver. 5; but now seems to restrain him from the exercise of that office, and to devolve it wholly upon the Levite, who was nearer akin to it.

13 Then said Micah, Now know I that the Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

I am assured God will bless me. So blind and grossly partial he was in his judgment, to think that one right circumstance would answer for all his substantial errors, in making and worshipping images against God's express command, in worshipping God in a forbidden place, and in that he, being an Ephraimite, presumed to make a priest, &c.

CHAP. XVIII.

Those of the tribe of Dan, having not sufficient inheritance, send forth five men to spy out a place; they come to the house of Micah, and desire the Levite to ask counsel of God touching their journey, 1—5. He encouraging them, they spy out the city Laish; and at their return instigate their brethren to set upon the city, 6—10. Six hundred go forth armed: in their march they seize upon Micah's priest and idols; which he in vain demandeth again, 11—25. They pull down Laish; build it again; inhabit it; and call it Dan, 26—29; consecrate their priest, and set up Micah's images, 30, 31.

IN those days there was no king in Israel: and in those days the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in; for unto that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.

In those days; not long after Joshua's death, of which see on Judg. xvii. 6. The tribe of the Danites; a part or branch of that tribe, consisting only of six hundred men of war, ver. 16, with their families, ver. 21; or, a family of the Danites; for the word schebet, which properly signifies a tribe, is sometimes taken for a family, as Judg. xx. 12, as elsewhere family is put for a tribe, as Zech. xii. 13. All their inheritance had not fallen unto them; the lot had fallen to them before this time, Josh. xix. 40, &c., but not the actual possession of their lot, because therein the Philistines and Amorites opposed them, not without success. See Josh. xix. 40; Judg. i. 34.

Of their family; which shows that it was but one, though a large family, which was engaged in this expedition. Eshtaol; of which see Josh. xix. 41; Judg. xiii. 2, 25. They lodged there; not in the same house, but near it, as appears from the next verse, in a neighbouring place.

3 When they were by the house of Micah, they knew the voice of the young man the Levite: and they turned in thither, and said unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makest thou in this place? and what hast thou here?

They knew the voice of the young man; either, 1. By his manner of pronunciation, which was differing and distinguishable in several tribes, as appears from Judg. xii. 6; Mark xiv. 70. Or, 2. By the celebration of some part of his office, which they, then lodging in the neighbourhood, might be invited to. Or rather, 3. By some acquaintance which some of them formerly had with him, which they might have upon many occasions. What makest thou in this place; this being not thy usual place, nor proper for thy employment?

i 1 Kin. 22. 6.

6 And the priest said unto them, ⁱ Go in peace: before the LORD is your way wherein ye go.

Your way, i. e. your journey or design, is under the eye of God, i. e. under his care, and protection, and direction, which the eye of God being upon a person commonly notes in Scripture, as Psal. xxxii. 8; xxxiv. 15. Compare Jer. xxxix. 12; xl. 4. So the phrase is here taken in a restrained sense, which is elsewhere taken more largely, as Prov. v. 21. This answer he either feigns to gratify their humour, or did indeed receive from the devil, who transformed himself into an angel of light, and in God's name gave them answers, and those not seldom very true, which God suffered for the trial of his people. See Deut. xiii. 1—3. But it is observable, that his answer was, as the devil's oracles usually were, ambiguous, and such as might have been interpreted either way, as they had success or disappointment.

7 ¶ Then the five men departed, and came to ^k Laish, and saw the people that were therein, ^l how they dwelt careless, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure; and there was no ^m magistrate in the land, that might put them to shame in any thing; and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no business with any man.

k Josh. 19. 47. called, Leshem. l ver. 27, 28.

m Heb. possessor, or, heir of restraint.

Laish, called also Leshem, Josh. xix. 47. After the manner of the Zidonians, who living in a very strong place, and abounding in wealth, and understanding that they were not a part of that land which God gave to his people, and perceiving that the Israelites never attempted any thing against them, were grown secure and careless. That might put them to shame in any thing, or, that might rebuke or punish any thing, i. e. any crime; Heb. that might put any thing to shame, or, make any thing shameful. Putting to shame seems to be used metonymically for inflicting civil punishment, because shame is generally the adjunct or effect of it. They were far from the Zidonians, who otherwise could have succoured them, and would have been ready to do it. Had no business with any man; no league of confederacy, nor much converse with other cities, it being in a pleasant and plentiful soil, between the two rivulets of Jor and Dan, not needing supplies from others, and therefore minding only their own ease and pleasure.

8 And they came unto their brethren to ⁿ Zorah and Eshtaol: and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

m ver. 2.

9 And they said, ⁿ Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and, behold, it is very good: and are ye ^o still? be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

Are ye still, Heb. silent? Silence is oft put for stillness or cessation from action or motion, as Exod. xiv. 14; Isa. lxii. 1; Lam. ii. 18. For they do not accuse them for want of speaking, for that they did; but for want of doing, and putting their words and resolves into execution.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people ^p secure, and to a large land: for God hath given it into your hands; ^q a place where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

q Deut. 8. 9.

God hath given it into your hands: this they gather partly from God's word or promise, which they supposed they had from the Levite's mouth; and partly from his providence, which hath so disposed them, that they will be an easy prey to you.

11 ¶ And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men appointed with weapons of war.

s ch. 13. 25.

Kirjath-jearim, called Kirjath-baal, Josh. xv. 60; a city lying in the northern parts of Judah, in the road to Laish; yet not in the city, but in the fields belonging to it, as the following words evince. Behind Kirjath-jearim, i. e. westward from it, as the western sea is called the hindermost sea, Deut. xi. 24; and as, on the contrary, the east is called Kedem, which signifies the forepart.

13 And they passed thence unto mount Ephraim, and came unto ^t the house of Micah.

Then answered, i. e. spake, the word answering being oft used in Scripture of the first speaker, as 1 Kings i. 28; xiii. 6; Ezra x. 2; Isa. xiv. 10. In those houses, i. e. in one of these houses, the plural number for the singular, as Judg. xii. 7. Consider what ye have to do, i. e. whether it be not expedient, either, 1. To consult them again for your own satisfaction; or rather, 2. To take them away for your further use, as you shall have occasion; for their action is the best comment upon their words.

15 And they turned thitherward, and came to the house of the young man the Levite, even unto the house of Micah, and ^v saluted him.

Came in thither, to wit, into the house, and that part of it where those things were. In the entering of the gate; whether they had drawn him forth, that they might without noise or hinderance take them away.

18 And these went into Micah's house, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image. Then said the priest unto them, What do ye?

These, to wit, the five mentioned ver. 17. What do ye? what do you mean to do? I hope you will not do so impious and injurious an action.

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy peace, lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, and be to us a father and a priest: is it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

c ch. 17. 10.

Lay thy hand upon thy mouth, i. e. be silent, as this phrase is used, Job xxi. 5; xxix. 9; xl. 4; Prov. xxx. 32. The same thing repeated in other words. A father and a priest: see on Judg. xvii. 10. A family in Israel, to wit, a tribe that is (and being oft put for that is) a family. For it is certain this was not an expedition of the whole tribe, which numbered 64,000 men, Numb. xxvi. 43, but only of one family, which it seems were more vexed with the Philistines or Amorites, and therefore resolved to seek new habitations at a great distance from them. And after this time we find the body of the Danites in their old and proper portions in Samson's time, which, though placed before this, was long after it.

20 And the priest's heart was glad, and he took the ephod, and the teraphim, and the graven image, and went in the midst of the people.

The priest's heart was glad; being wholly governed by his own interest, and making all his obligations of justice and gratitude give place to it. But it is not strange, if he who was before perfidious to God, should prove so to men. In the midst of the people, i. e. among the people; or properly in the midst, both for the greater security of such precious things, and that Micah might not be able to come at him, either to injure or upbraid him; and it may be, because that was the place where the ark used to be carried.

21 So they turned and departed, and put the little ones and the cattle and the carriage before them.

For their greater security, if Micah should pursue them.

22 ¶ And when they were a good way from the house of Micah, the men that were in the houses near to Micah's house were gathered together, and overtook the children of Dan.

23 And they cried unto the children of Dan. And they turned their faces, and said unto Micah, What aileth thee, † that thou comest with such a company?

24 And he said, Ye have taken away my gods which I made, and the priest, and ye are gone away: and what have I more? and what is this that ye say unto me, What aileth thee?

So far was he besotted with superstition and idolatry, that he esteemed those gods which were man's work. But he could not be so stupid as to think these were indeed the great Jehovah that made heaven and earth; but only a lower sort of gods, by whom, as mediators, he offered up his worship unto the true God, as it is manifest divers of the heathens did. What have I more? I value nothing I have in comparison of what you have taken away. Which zeal for idolatrous trash may shame multitudes that call themselves Christians, and yet apparently value their worldly conveniences more than all the concerns even of the true religion, and of their own salvation.

25 And the children of Dan said unto him, Let not thy voice be heard among us, lest † angry fellows run upon thee, and thou lose thy life, with the lives of thy household.

Thy voice; thy complaints and reproaches. Angry fellows; the soldiers, who are in themselves sharp and fierce, and will soon be inflamed by thy provoking words. And thou lose thy life; which, notwithstanding all thy pretences, thou dost value more than thy images, as indeed appeared from his following practice.

26 And the children of Dan went their way: and when Micah saw that they were too strong for him, he turned and went back unto his house.

27 And they took the things which Micah had made, and the priest which he had, and came unto Laish, unto a people that were at quiet and secure: and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and burnt the city with fire.

Not wholly, but in great measure, to strike the greater terror into the inhabitants, and to make their conquest of the place more easy.

28 And there was no deliverer, because it was far from Zidon, and they had no business with any man; and it was in the valley that lieth by Beth-rehob. And they built a city, and dwelt therein.

Beth-rehob; a place near Libanus and Hamath; of which see Numb. xiii. 21; Josh. xix. 28; xxi. 31; Judg. i. 31.

29 And they called the name of the city Dan, after the name of Dan their father, who was born unto Israel: howbeit the name of the city was Laish at the first.

After the name of Dan their father; that it might be manifest that they belonged to the tribe of Dan, though they were seated at a great distance from them, even in the most northerly part of the land; whereas the lot of their tribe was in the southern part of Canaan.

30 ¶ And the children of Dan set up the graven image: and Jonathan, the son of Gershom, the son of Manasseh, he and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan until the day of the captivity of the land.

Having succeeded in their expedition according to the prediction which, as they supposed, they had from this image, they had a great veneration for it. Until the day of the captivity of the land; either, 1. When the ark and the Israelites were taken captives by the Philistines, 1 Sam. iv. 10, 11; though there is no mention of any who were then taken captives, or that the Philistines did pursue the victory, and conquer the land at that time, for their victory was quickly damped, and turned to mourning, 1 Sam. v. Or, 2. After that time, when the Philistines slew Saul and Jonathan, and discomfited the whole host of Israel, and made the rest of the people flee out of their cities, and took possession of their cities and land. land of the ten tribes, whereof Dan was one, was conquered, and the people carried captive by the Assyrian, 2 Kings xvii. 6, 23, which is called by way of eminency the captivity, 1 Chron. v. 22. But against this it is objected, that it is not probable that this idolatry should continue so long in such a public place and manner; or that David and Solomon would suffer it. Answo. It is not said that the graven image was there so long, for that is restrained to a shorter date, even to the continuance of the ark in Shiloh, ver. 31, which was removed thence, 1 Sam. iv.; but only that Jonathan's posterity were priests to this tribe or family of Dan, which they might be under all the changes, even till the Assyrian captivity, sometimes more openly and allowedly, sometimes more cunningly, sometimes more secretly, sometimes in one way of superstition or idolatry, and sometimes in another; and in and after Jeroboam's time, in the worship of the calves, for which service, though he did make priests of the meanest of the people, 1 Kings xii. 31, yet that was not by choice, but out of necessity, because the priests and Levites generally forsook him, 2 Chron. xi. 13, 14; and therefore when he could engage any of the priests or Levites in that service, he was doubtless very glad of them to gain reputation to his impious and absurd device.

31 And they set them up Micah's graven image, which he made, 'all the time that the house of God was in Shiloh.

A Levite's concubine runs from him to her father's house at Beth-lehem; he goeth to fetch her back; is kindly entertained by her father; he departs, and comes to Gibeah of Benjamin, and his concubine with him, 1—14. cir. 1406. n ch. 17. 6. & 18. 1. & 21. 25.

† Heb. a woman a concubine, or, a wife a concubine. b ch. 17. 7.

AND it came to pass in those days, *when there was no king in Israel, that there was a certain Levite sojourning on the side of mount Ephraim, who took to him † a concubine out of ^b Beth-lehem-judah.

In those days; of which see on Judg. xvii. 1. On the side, Heb. in the sides, i. c. in one of the sides, as ver. 18. A concubine, Heb. a wife a concubine, i. e. such a concubine as was also his wife, as appears from ver. 3—5, 7, 9, 26, 27; Judg. xx. 4. See of these Gen. xxii. 24; xxv. 1.

2 And his concubine played the whore against him, and went away from him unto her father's house to Beth-lehem-judah, and was there †† four whole months.

Against him, i. e. against her faith given to him, or to his wrong; or, with him, i. e. in his house; or whilst she lived with him, which is opposed to her going away, which here follows. Went away from him; either for fear of his severe rebukes or punishment, or because her heart was alienated from him. Four whole months, Heb. some days, to wit, four months; or, a year (so days commonly signify) and four months; wherein not only she sinned, but her father by some indulgence and connivance at her sin, and neglect of just endeavours for her reconciliation to her husband, the ill effects whereof he speedily felt, in the loss of his daughter in so dreadful a manner.

3 And her husband arose, and went after her, to speak † friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses: and she brought him into her father's house: and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

† Heb. to Ans heart. Gen. 34. 3.

To speak friendly unto her, or, to speak to her heart, i. e. kindly and comfortably, as that phrase is taken, Gen. i. 21; Hos. ii. 14, to offer her pardon and reconciliation, and restitution to her former state. To bring her again, to wit, to his own house. A couple of asses; partly for himself or his wife to ride upon, as there was occasion; and partly for carrying their provision, as appears from ver. 19. He rejoiced to meet him, hoping the breach would be made up by this means.

4 And his father in law, the damsel's father, retained him; and he abode with him three days: so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart: and the damsel's father said unto his son in law, † Comfort thine heart with a morsel of bread, and afterward go your way.

† Heb. strengthen. c Gen. 18. 5.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damsel's father had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be merry.

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father in law urged him: therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damsel's father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried † until afternoon, and they did eat both of them.

† Heb. till the day declined.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father in law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day † draweth toward evening, I pray you tarry all night: behold, † the day groweth to an end, lodge here, that thine heart may be merry; and to morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go † home.

† Heb. is even. † Heb. it is the pitching time of the day.

† Heb. to thy tent.

The day groweth to an end, Heb. it is the encamping time of the day, i. e. the evening, when armies having marched in the day, begin to pitch their camp; or, when the sun that makes the day begins to encamp himself, and go toward rest; so it is a poetical expression taken from hence, that the sun, when he sets, seems to vulgar eyes to go to rest.

10 But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came † over against ^d Jebus, which is Jerusalem; and there were with him two asses saddled, his concubine also was with him.

† Heb. to over against. d Josh. 18. 28.

11 And when they were by Jebus, the day was far spent; and the servant said unto his master, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in into this city ^e of the Jebusites, and lodge in it.

e Josh. 15. 8, 63. ch. i. 21. 2 Sam. 5. 8.

12 And his master said unto him, We will not turn aside hither into the city of a stranger, that is not of the children of Israel; we will pass over ^f to Gibeah.

f Josh. 18. 28.

Of a stranger, i. c. of a strange nation, which the Canaanites possess; for though the city Jerusalem had been taken by Calcb, Judg. i., yet the strong fort of Zion was still in their hands, 2 Sam. v. 6, 7, whence it is likely the y did much molest, and afterwards, by God's permission, and for the punishment of their sin, drive out the Israelites who dwelt there.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come, and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in Gibeah, or in ^gRamah.

Both which places lay in Benjamin's portion, a little northward from Jerusalem, and in the road from Bethlehem-judah to Gibeah.

14 And they passed on and went their way; and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah, which belongeth to Benjamin.

This is added to difference it from another Gibeah in Judah, Josh. xv. 57. Possibly this is that which was called Gibeah of Saul, 1 Sam. xi. 4.

15 And they turned aside thither, to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in, he sat him down in a street of the city: for there was no man that ^htook them into his house to lodging.

Though they were soft and effeminate in other respects, yet they were hard-hearted towards strangers or indigent persons. Either there were no public houses to receive and entertain travellers, as may be gathered from Gen. xxviii., xlii., xlv.; Josh. ix. &c.; or, if there were such a one here, they might perceive it to be a very wicked house, as being in so lewd a place, and therefore might decline it, and expect that some private person would exercise hospitality to them, as persons of any worth used to do, as Gen. xviii. 1—4; xix. 1, 2; Heb. xiii. 2.

16 ¶ And, behold, there came an old man from ⁱhis work out of the field at even, which was also of mount Ephraim; and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were Benjamites.

Of Mount Ephraim; whence also the Levite was, which obliged and inclined him to show the more kindness to his countryman. The men of the place were Benjamites: this was indeed one of the cities belonging to the priests, Josh. xxi.; 1 Chron. vi.; but you consider that the cities which were given to the priests, and whereof they were possessors and owners, were not inhabited by the priests or Levites only, especially at this time when they were but few in number, but many other persons of differing professions and callings, which was necessary for their conveniency.

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes, he saw a wayfaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of mount Ephraim; from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to ^kthe house of the LORD; and there is no man that ^lreceiveth me to house.

The house of the Lord was in Shiloh, Josh. xviii. 1; xxii. 12. Thither he went, either because he lived there, for that was in the tribe of Ephraim; or rather, because he would there offer prayers, and praises, and sacrifices unto God, for his mercy in reconciling him and his wife together, and for his blessing upon them again, and to make atonement for his wife.

19 Yet there is both straw and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me, and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy servants: there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, 'Peace be with thee; howsoever let all thy wants ^mlie upon me; ⁿonly lodge not in the street.

It matters not whether thou wantest nothing or every thing, I will take care to supply all thy wants.

21 "So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: ^oand they washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

They washed their feet, as they used to do to travellers in those hot countries, Gen. xviii. 4; xix. 2; xxiv. 32, &c.

22 ¶ Now as they were making their hearts merry, behold, ^pthe men of the city, certain ^qsons of Belial, beset the house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, 'Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may know him.

Making their hearts merry, i. e. refreshing themselves with the provisions set before them. Certain sons of Belial; wicked and licentious men: see Deut. xiii. 13. That we may know him; an ambiguous expression, whereby they pretended only a desire to know and see what person he had brought among them, and yet carry on their wicked design of knowing him carnally. Compare Gen. xix. 5, where the same phrase is used in that sense upon a like occasion. But though they name only the man, yet it is plain from the following relation that their design was principally upon the woman, and therefore under the name of the man, they comprehended those that belong to him.

23 And ^rthe man, the master of the house, went out unto them, and said unto them, Nay, my brethren, nay, I pray you, do not so wickedly; seeing that this man is come into mine house, 'do not this ^tfolly.

This man is come into mine house, and therefore I am obliged to protect him by the laws of hospitality. Compare Gen. xix. 7, 8.

24 "Behold, here is my daughter a maiden, and his concubine; them I will bring out now, and ^uhumble ye them, and do with them what seemeth good unto you: but unto this man do not ^vso vile a thing.

He offers this to avoid a greater and more unnatural sin, which he thought they designed; but it seems they did not, their abuse being confined to the woman, and not extended to the man, who also was in their power, if they had lusted after him. But this offer was sinful, because he offered that which was not in his nor in the man's power to dispose of, even the chastity of his daughter, and the man's wife; and because no man must do any evil, though never so small, for the prevention of any evil of sin or misery, or for the procuring of the greatest good, Rom. iii. 8; though his sin was much mitigated by his ignorance, by his honest and generous intention of protecting a stranger, by the force which was in some sort put upon him, and by the suddenness and violence of the temptation.

25 But the men would not hearken to him: so the man took his concubine, and brought her forth unto them; and they ^wknew her, and abused her all the night until the morning: and when the day began to spring, they let her go.

The man took his concubine; being willing to expose her rather than the daughter of his host, who had expressed such a singular care and affection for him.

26 Then came the woman in the dawning of the day, and fell down at the door of the man's house where her lord was, till it was light.

Fell down, to wit, dead, as the following words show, and as that word is oft used, as Exod. xix. 21; Psal. lxxxii. 7; xci. 7; Hos. v. 5; killed, partly with grief of heart, and partly with excessive abuse of her body, of which there have been divers instances. Thus the sin she formerly chose, ver. 2, is now her destruction; and though her husband pardoned her, God would punish her, at least as to this life. Her lord;

so he is called, either because he was her husband; for which cause Sarah called Abraham lord, 1 Pet. iii. 6; or because she had been his maid-servant, as concubines oftentimes were; as Gen. xxx. 3, 9.

27 And her lord rose up in the morning, and opened the doors of the house, and went out to go his way: and, behold, the woman his concubine was fallen down at the door of the house, and her hands were upon the threshold.

The posture either of one that had fallen down, or of one that was laid down to sleep, her hands or arms (for the Hebrew word signifies both) leaning upon the threshold, and being put under her head; and therefore he thought to awake her, and raise her up.

28 And he said unto her, Up, and let us be going. But none answered. Then the man took her up upon an ass, and the man rose up, and gat him unto his place.

None answered; for she was dead, as is said, Judg. xx. 5.

29 ¶ And when he was come into his house, he took a knife, and laid hold on his concubine, and divided her, together with her bones, into twelve pieces, and sent her into all the coast of Israel.

Together with her bones, or, according to her bones; according to the joints of her body, for there he made a division. This might seem to be a barbarous and inhuman act in itself; but may seem excusable, if it be considered that the sadness of the spectacle did highly contribute to stir up the zeal of all the Israelites to avenge his concubine's death, and to execute justice upon such profligate offenders; and was necessary, especially in this time of anarchy and general corruption, Judg. xvii. 6, to awaken them out of that lethargy in which all the tribes lay. Into twelve pieces; that one piece might be sent to every tribe; whereof none to Levi, because they would meet with it in every tribe, being dispersed among them; but one to Benjamin; for he might well presume, that they would as much abhor so villanous an action, though done by some of their own tribe, as any of the rest. Sent her into all the coasts of Israel, by several messengers, by whom also he sent a particular relation of the fact.

30 And it was so, that all that saw it said, There was no such deed done nor seen from the day that the children of Israel came up out of the land of Egypt unto this day: consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds.

No such deed; so wicked and abominable. Consider of it, take advice, and speak your minds; let us meet together, and seriously consider, and every one freely speak what is to be done in this case.

CHAP. XX.

The Israelites assemble at Mizpeh: the Levite declares his wrong, 1—7. Their decree, 8—11. They require the delinquents of the Benjamites to do justice on them; they are denied, 12—17. Whereupon, having consulted God, they march to fight against them; are twice foiled; and lose forty thousand men, 18—25. Being humbled, and receiving clearer revelation from God, they, by a stratagem, destroy the whole tribe, six hundred men excepted, (who fled away,) and burnt their cities, 26—48.

THEN all the children of Israel went out, and the congregation was gathered together as one man, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, with the land of Gilead, unto the LORD in Mizpeh.

All the children of Israel, i. e. a great number, and especially the rulers of all the tribes, except Benjamin, ver. 3, 12. Went out, from their several habitations. As one man, i. e. with one consent. From Dan even to Beer-sheba; Dan was the northern border of the land, near Lebanon; and Beer-sheba the southern border, Gen. xxi. 33. Compare 1 Kings iv. 25. The land of Gilead, beyond Jordan, where Reuben, Gad, and half Manasseh were. Unto the Lord; as to the Lord's tribunal; for God was not only present in the place where the ark and tabernacle was, but also in the assemblies of the gods, or judges, Psal. lxxxii. 1, and in all the places where God's name is recorded, Exod. xx. 24, and where two or three are met together in his name, Matt. xviii. 20, for his service, and to seek for counsel and mercy from him: compare Judg. xi. 11. In Mizpeh; a place in the borders of Judah and Benjamin, and therefore ascribed to both of them, Josh. xv. 38; xviii. 26. This they chose, as a place most fit and proper in many respects. First, As a place they used to meet in upon solemn occasions: see Judg. x. 17; xi. 11; 1 Sam. vii. 5, 16; x. 17. Secondly, For its convenient situation for all the tribes within and without Jordan. Thirdly, As being near the place where the fact was done, that it might be more thoroughly examined; and not far from Shiloh, where the tabernacle was, whither they might go or send, if need were.

2 And the chief of all the people, even of all the tribes of Israel, presented themselves in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand footmen that drew sword.

The chief, Heb. the corners, i. e. the nobles and rulers, which are oft so called, because, like corner-stones, they both unite, and support, and adorn the whole building. Four hundred thousand, or, and four hundred thousand. It is an ellipsis of the particle [and,] of which examples have been given before: for the chief of the people were not so many; but the common soldiers, and these were all footmen; whereas many of the rulers rode upon horses, or asses, Judg. v. 10; x. 4; xii. 14. The number is here set down, to show both their zeal and forwardness in punishing such a villany; and the strange blindness of the Benjamites that durst oppose so great and united body; and that the success of battles depends not upon great numbers, seeing this great host was twice defeated by the Benjamites, but wholly upon God's blessing. Footmen; for horsemen they had few or none in their armies.

3 (Now the children of Benjamin heard that the children of Israel were gone up to Mizpeh.) Then said the children of Israel, Tell us, how was this wickedness?

The children of Benjamin heard; like persons unconcerned and resolved, they neither went nor sent thither; partly, from their own pride, and stubbornness, and self-confidence; partly, because as they were loth to give up any of their brethren to justice, so they presumed the other tribes would never proceed to a war against them; and partly, from a Divine infatuation hardening that wicked tribe to their own destruction. Tell us; the verb is of the plural number, because they speak to the Levite, and his servant, and his host, who doubtless were present upon this occasion.

4 And † the Levite, the husband of the woman that was slain, answered and said, I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine, to lodge.

The Levite; to whose relation the other two gave their consent.

5 † And the men of Gibeah rose against me, and beset the house round about upon me by night, and thought to have slain me: and my concubine have they forced, that she is dead.

Thought to have slain me; except I would either submit to their unnatural lust, which I was resolved to withstand even unto death; or deliver up my concubine to them, which I was forced to do.

6 And † I took my concubine, and cut

Israel: for they have committed lewdness and folly in Israel.

i. e. A lewd folly; most ignominious and impudent wickedness.

7 Behold, ye are all children of Israel; ^{k ch. 19. 30.} give here your advice and counsel.

Children of Israel; the sons of that holy man, who for one filthy action left an eternal brand upon one of his own sons; a people in covenant with the holy God, whose honour you are obliged to vindicate, and who hath expressly commanded you to punish all such notorious enormities.

8 ¶ And all the people arose as one man, saying, We will not any of us go to his tent, neither will we any of us turn into his house.

We will not any of us go to his tent, i. e. his habitation, to wit, until we have revenged this injury.

9 But now this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah; we will go up by lot against it;

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people, that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

That they may do according to all the folly that they have wrought; that we may punish them as such a wickedness deserves. In Israel: this is added as an aggravation, that they should do that in Israel, or among God's peculiar people, which was esteemed abominable even among the heathen.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, † knit together as one man.

12 ¶ And the tribes of Israel sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

The tribe, Heb. tribes; either the plural number for the singular; or rather tribe is put for family, as was noted before, as families are elsewhere put for tribes. They take a wise and a just course, in sending to all the parts and families of the tribe, to separate the innocent from the guilty, and to give them a fair opportunity of preventing their ruin, by doing nothing but what their duty, honour, and interest obliged them to, even by delivering up those vile malefactors, whom they could not keep without horrid guilt and shame, and bringing the curse of God upon themselves.

13 Now therefore deliver us the men, ^{m Deut. 13. 13. ch. 19. 22.} the children of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and ^{n Deu. 17. 12.} put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel;

Put away evil; both the guilt and the punishment, wherein all Israel will be involved, if they do not punish it. The children of Benjamin would not hearken; partly, from the pride of their hearts, which made them scorn to submit to their brethren, or to suffer them to meddle in their territory; partly, from the conceit of their own valour and military skill; and partly, from God's just judgment.

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time out of the cities twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, beside the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.

Object. This agrees not with the following numbers; for all that were slain of Benjamin were 25,100 men, ver. 35, and there were only 600 that survived, ver. 47, which make only 25,700. Answer. The other thousand men were either left in some of their cities, where they were slain, ver. 48, or were cut off in the two first battles, wherein it is unreasonable to think they had an unbloody victory; and as for these 25,100 men, they were all slain in that day, i. e. the day of the third battle, as is affirmed, ver. 35.

16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men ^{o ch. 3. 15. 1 Chr. 12. 2.} left-handed; every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss.

Left-handed, Heb. shut up on their right hand, i. e. using their left hand instead of their right. Every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss; an hyperbolical expression, signifying that they could do this with great exactness. There are many parallel instances in historians of persons that could throw stones or shoot arrows with great certainty, so as seldom or never to miss; of which see my Latin Synopsis. And this was very considerable, and one ground of the Benjamites' confidence, because in those times they had no guns.

17 And the men of Israel, beside Benjamin, were numbered four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

The men of Israel, to wit, such as were here present, ver. 2, for otherwise it is most probable they had a far greater number of men, being 600,000 before their entrance into Canaan, Numb. i. 2.

18 ¶ And the children of Israel arose, and ^{p ver. 23. 26.} went up to the house of God, and ^{q Num. 27. 21. ch. 1. 1.} asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the Lord said, Judah shall go up first.

The children of Israel, i. e. some sent in the name of all. To the house of God, to wit, to Shiloh, which was not far from Mizpeh, where they were. Which of us shall go up first to the battle? this they ask to prevent emulations and contentions; but they do not ask whether they should go against them, or no, for that they knew they ought to do by the will of God already revealed. Nor yet do they seek to God for his help by prayer, and fasting, and sacrifice, as in all reason they ought to have done; but were confident of success, because of their great numbers, and righteous cause.

19 And the children of Israel rose up in the morning, and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin; and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And ^{r Gen. 49. 27.} the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.

Quest. Why would God suffer them to have so great a loss in so good a cause? Answer. Because they had many and great sins reigning amongst themselves, and they should not have come to so great a work of God as this with polluted hands, but should have pulled the beam out of their own eye, before they attempted to take that out of their brother Benjamin's eye; which because they did not, God doth it for them, making them by this loss more clearly to see their own sins, and their need of God's help, without which their great numbers were insignificant; and bringing them through the fire, that they might be purged from their dross; it being probable that the great God, who governs every stroke in battles, did so order things, that their worst and rotten members should be cut off, which was a great blessing to the whole commonwealth.

22 And the people the men of Israel encouraged themselves, and set their battle again in array in the place where they put themselves in array the first day.

Encouraged themselves, Heb. strengthened themselves; partly by supporting themselves with the conscience of the justice of their cause, and the hopes of success; and partly by putting themselves in better order for defending themselves, and annoying their enemies. In the place where they put themselves in array the first day; hereby showing their freedom from that heathenish superstition, whereby they might have been apt to have rejected that as an unlucky place. Compare 1 Kings xx. 23, 28.

^a ver. 26. 27 23 (^a And the children of Israel went up and wept before the LORD until even, and asked counsel of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother? And the LORD said, Go up against him.)

Went up and wept; not so much for their sins as for their defeat and loss, as appears by the sequel. Against the children of Benjamin my brother; they impute their ill success, not to their own sins, as they had great reason to do, but to their taking up arms against their brethren, the lawfulness whereof they now begin to doubt of. But still they persist in their former neglect of seeking God's assistance in the way which he had appointed, as they themselves acknowledge presently, by doing those very things which now they sinfully neglected, ver. 26, and therefore are again justly punished. Go up against him: God answers to their question; but as they did not desire his assistance and success, so he doth not promise it.

24 And the children of Israel came near against the children of Benjamin the second day.

^t ver. 21. 25 And ^b Benjamin went forth against them out of Gibeah the second day, and destroyed down to the ground of the children of Israel again eighteen thousand men; all these drew the sword.

^u ver. 18. 26 ¶ Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, ^c went up, and came unto the house of God, and wept, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted that day until even, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings before the LORD.

Sat there before the Lord, and fasted; being now sensible of their former slightness, and not being truly humbled for their sins, which now they discover to be the true cause of their ill success. Offered burnt-offerings, to make atonement to God for their own sins. Peace-offerings; partly to bless God for sparing so many of them, whereas he might justly have cut off all of them when their brethren were slain; and partly to implore his assistance for the future, and to give him thanks for the victory, which now they were confident he would give them.

27 And the children of Israel enquired of the LORD, (for ^d the ark of the covenant of God was there in those days, Inquired of the Lord, to wit, by Urim and Thummim, Numb. xxvii. 21. Was there; in Shiloh, where they were now assembled.

^y Josh. 24. 28 ^e And Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, ^f stood before it in those days,) saying, Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease? And the LORD said, Go up; for to-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand.

Phinehas the son of Eleazar: this is added to give us some light about the time of this history, and to show it was not done in the order in which it is here placed, after Samson's death, but long before. Stood, i. e. ministered, as the word stand oft signifies, as Deut. x. 8; xviii. 7; Prov. xxii. 29; Jer. lii. 12, compared with 2 Kings xxv. 8, because standing is the usual posture of servants. Before it, i. e. before the ark; or, before his, i. e. the Lord's, face, or presence; which shows that he was the high priest, for none else might appear there. Or shall I cease? which, if thou requirest, we are willing to do, notwithstanding the provocation they have given us, and our own inclination to revenge. To-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand: now, when they had sought God after the due order, and truly humbled themselves for their sins, he gives them a full and satisfactory answer to their desires.

29 And Israel ^g set liers in wait round ^h about Gibeah.

Though they were assured of the success by a particular and absolute promise, yet they do not neglect the use of means; as well knowing that the certainty of God's purposes or promises doth not excuse, but rather require man's diligent use of all fit means for the accomplishment of them. Round about Gibeah, i. e. on several sides of it, as may be gathered from the following verses.

30 And the children of Israel went up against the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themselves in array against Gibeah, as at other times.

The children of Israel, i. e. a considerable part of them, who were ordered to give the first onset, and then to counterfeit flight, to draw the Benjamites forth of their strong hold. See ver. 32. On the third day, to wit, after the second battle; for the first day after it they spent in perplexing thoughts, and going up to the house of the Lord; the second, in fasting and prayer there; and this third, in the fight. Or this is so called with respect unto the two several foregoing days of battle, and so this was the third day of battle.

31 And the children of Benjamin went out against the people, and were drawn away from the city; and they began ⁱ to smite of the people, and kill, as at other times, in the highways, of which one goeth up to ^j the house of God, and the other to Gibeah in the field, about thirty men of Israel.

Drawn away from the city, by the dissembled flight of the Israelites. As at other times; with the same kind, though not with the same degree of success. Gibeah in the field; so called, to difference it from this Gibeah, which was upon a hill; wherefore they are constantly said to ascend or go up against it, as ver. 23, 30. See Josh. xviii. 24, 28.

32 And the children of Benjamin said, They are smitten down before us, as at the first. But the children of Israel said, Let us flee, and draw them from the city unto the highways.

33 And all the men of Israel rose up out of their place, and put themselves in array at Baal-tamar: and the liers in wait of Israel came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah.

Out of their place; where they had disposed themselves, that they might fall upon the Benjamites, when they were drawn forth to a sufficient distance from their city, and when they were pursuing that party, mentioned ver. 30. Came forth out of their places, to execute what was agreed upon, even to take Gibeah, and burn it, as they actually did, ver. 37.

34 And there came against Gibeah ten thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and the battle was sore: ^k but they knew not ^l that evil was near them.

Chosen men out of all Israel; selected out of the main body, which was at Baal-tamar; and these were to march directly to Gibeah on the one side, whilst the liers in wait stormed it on the other side, and whilst the great body of the army laboured to intercept these Benjamites, who, having pursued the Israelites that pretended to flee, now endeavoured to retreat to Gibeah. They knew not that evil was near them; they were so puffed up with their former successes, that they were insensible of their danger.

35 And the LORD smote Benjamin before Israel: and the children of Israel destroyed of the Benjamites that day twenty and five thousand and an hundred men: all these drew the sword.

This is the total sum, whereof the particulars are related ver. 41, 45; and for the odd hundred not there mentioned, they were killed in other places not there expressed.

36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten: for the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah.

37 ^d And the liers in wait hastened, and rushed upon Gibeah; and the liers in wait || drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword.

Drew themselves along, or, extended themselves, i. e. whereas before they lay close and contracted into a narrow compass, now they spread themselves, and marched in rank and file, as armies do. Or, marched or went, Heb. drew their feet. So this verb is oft used, as Gen. xxxvii. 28; Exod. xii. 21; Judg. iv. 6; Job xxi. 33.

38 Now there was an appointed || sign between the men of Israel † and the liers in wait, that they should make a great † flame with smoke rise up out of the city.

39 And when the men of Israel retired in the battle, Benjamin began † to smite and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons: for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle.

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke, the Benjamites ° looked behind them, and, behold, † the flame of the city ascended up to heaven.

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, the men of Benjamin were amazed: for they saw that evil † was come upon them.

The men of Benjamin were amazed, because of their great disappointment, and the present danger wherewith they were surrounded on every side.

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel unto the way of the wilderness; but the battle overtook them; and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them.

The battle, i. e. the men of battle or war; the abstract for the concrete, as poverty, 2 Kings xxiv. 14, pride, Psal. xxxvi. 11, deceit, Prov. xii. 5, dreams, Jer. xxvii. 9, election, Rom. xi. 7, are put for persons that are poor, proud, deceitful, dreamers, elect. Them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them: so the sense may seem to be this, That the Israelites did not only kill the inhabitants of Gibeah, and all the Benjamites that came into the field against them, six hundred excepted; but in the midst of them, or together with them, they killed also the rest of the Benjamites, who, when they saw their army was wholly destroyed, made haste to flee out of their several cities or towns, that so they might escape the sword, which was coming towards them. But the words may be rendered thus: And them who were of the other cities, to wit, of Benjamin, i. e. who abode in their own cities, and did not go up to Gibeah, they destroyed in the midst of them, i. e. in their several cities; or, in the midst of it, i. e. of every city; for so it is said, ver. 48, where it is said that they smote the men of every city. But this I submit to the learned.

43 Thus they inclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and trode them down || with ease † over against Gibeah toward the sunrising.

With ease; without great difficulty. Now that God gave them his presence and assistance, they easily did that which before they found too hard for them. Or, unto Menuchah; or, as far as Menuchah; a place so called. See 1 Chron. ii. 52; Jer. li. 59.

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men; all these were men of valour.

There fell, to wit, in the field, or battle.

45 And they turned and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men; and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them.

They gleaned, i. e. they cut off the remainders in the pursuit, and spared none; a metaphor from those who gather grapes or corn so clearly and fully, that they leave no relics for those who come after them.

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were twenty and five thousand men that drew the sword; all these were men of valour.

Twenty and five thousand, besides the odd hundred expressed ver. 35; but here only the great number is expressed, the less being omitted, as inconsiderable; which way of numbering is frequent in Scripture, as Judg. xi. 26; 2 Sam. v. 5, and in other authors, and in vulgar use; as when they are called the seventy interpreters, who in truth and exactness were seventy-two. Here are also a thousand more omitted, because here he speaks only of them who fell in that third day of battle. See on ver. 15.

47 ^g But six hundred men turned and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months.

In a cave within that rock, where they fortified themselves and fetched in provision as they had opportunity; which they could easily do, when the heat of the battle was over, and the Israelites were not solicitous to pursue them farther.

48 And the men of Israel turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that † came to hand: also they set on fire all the cities that † they came to.

Having destroyed those that came to Gibeah, and into the field, now they follow them home to their several habitations. The men of every city; comprehensively taken, so as to include women and children. If this seem harsh and bloody, either it may be ascribed to military fury; or rather, it may be justified; partly, from that high guilt brought upon the whole tribe, in which it is no wonder if their infants suffered, which was not unusual in such cases, as Numb. xxxi. 17; 1 Sam. xv. 3; Josh. vii. 15; partly, from that command of God in a parallel case, Deut. xiii. 15; and partly, from that solemn oath by which they had anathematized or devoted to death all that came not up to Mizpeh, Judg. xxi. 5, which none of the Benjamites did; for which cause also they destroyed all the men, women, and children of Jabesh-gilead, Judg. xxi. 10.

CHAP. XXI.

The people bewail the desolation of Benjamin, 1—7. The inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead, for not coming up to this battle, are all destroyed, excepting four hundred damsels, whom the Israelites bestow for wives on the remaining Benjamites, 8—15. They advise the rest to seize on the dancing maidens at the feast in Shiloh; and to carry away as many as they had need of, 16—21. The answer wherewith they should pacify their relations, 22.

a ch. 20. 1. NOW ^a the men of Israel had sworn in Mizpeh, saying, There shall not any of us give his daughter unto Benjamin to wife.

The men of Israel had sworn; in the beginning of this war, after the whole tribe had espoused the quarrel of the men of Gibeah, Judg. xx. 13, 14. They do not (as some suppose) here swear the utter extirpation of the tribe, which fell out beyond their expectation, ver. 3, 6, but only not to give their daughters to those men who should survive; justly esteeming them for their barbarous villany to be as bad as the worst of heathens, with whom they were forbidden to marry. In this case the Benjamites might have married among themselves, if any of their men and women were left alive.

b ch. 20. 18, 26. 2 And the people came ^b to the house of God, and abode there till even before God, and lifted up their voices, and wept sore;

The people came to the house of God; partly to mourn for the common loss, and partly to ask counsel from God about the repairing of it.

3 And said, O LORD God of Israel, why is this come to pass in Israel, that there should be to day one tribe lacking in Israel?

Why hast thou given them up to such wickedness, and us to such rage, that the whole tribe should be in a manner lost? Hence it appears that they did not swear to root them all out, as is further manifest from the different matter and words of this oath, ver. 1, which only denied them their daughters in marriage; and that concerning the people of other tribes who joined not with them in this business, which was, that they should be put to death, ver. 5. And their sparing of those six hundred men in the rock Rimmon, ver. 13, 14, plainly shows that they were not obliged by any oath or vow to extirpate them.

c 2 Sam. 24. 25. 4 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people rose early, and ^c built there an altar, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings.

Built there an altar; not for a monument of the victory, as some say, but for sacrifices, as the next words show. Quest. What need was there of this, when the ordinary altar was there, to which also they seem to be restrained, Deut. xvi. 2? Answ. They are not there restrained to one altar, but to one place of worship, as is expressed; and therefore there might be in that place more altars than one, when the multitude of sacrifices so required, which was the case 1 Kings viii. 64; and probably at this time, when all the tribes being met, they had many sacrifices to offer, some in common for all, and some peculiar to every tribe. Nay, other altars might be, and oftentimes were, erected in other places, by Divine direction or dispensation; as Judg. vi. 24, 26; 1 Sam. vii. 9, 17; xi. 15; xvi. 2, 5.

d ch. 5. 23. 5 And the children of Israel said, Who ^d is there among all the tribes of Israel that came not up with the congregation unto the LORD? ^e For they had made a great oath concerning him that came not up to the LORD to Mizpeh, saying, He shall surely be put to death.

A great oath, i. e. a solemn oath, joined with some terrible execration against the offenders herein. He shall surely be put to death; because by refusing to execute the vengeance due to such malefactors, they were justly presumed guilty of the crime, and therefore liable to the same punishment, as was the case of that city that would not deliver up an idolater dwelling among them to justice.

6 And the children of Israel repented them for Benjamin their brother, and said, There is one tribe cut off from Israel this day.

Children of Israel repented them; not for the war, which was just, and necessary, and good; but for their immoderate severity in the execution of it, and for the dreadful consequences of it.

7 How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing we have sworn by the LORD that we will not give them of our daughters to wives?

8 ¶ And they said, What one ^e is there of the tribes of Israel that came not up to Mizpeh to the LORD? And, behold, there came none to the camp from ^e Jabesh-gilead to the assembly. e 1 Sam. 11. 1. & 31. 11.

A city in Gilead, and in the tribe of Manasseh; of which see 1 Sam. xi. 1, 3, 9, &c.; xxxi. 11, &c.

9 For the people were numbered, and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there.

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, ^f Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children. f ver. 5. & ch. 5. 23. 1 Sam. 11. 7.

Who in such public and scandalous crimes were, for the greater terror of such transgressors, and prevention of the like sins, oft involved in the same punishment with the men, as Deut. xiii. 15; Josh. vii. 24, &c.

11 And this ^g is the thing that ye shall do, ^g Ye shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that ^h hath lain by man. g Num. 31. 17. h Heb. enough the lying with man.

But not the virgins, as appears from the next verses. It is questionable whether they were not obliged to destroy these also by virtue of their oath, and of God's express command concerning devoted persons, such as these certainly were, that they should surely be put to death, Lev. xxvii. 29, which was also particularly enjoined and practised in such cases, as Deut. xiii.; Josh. vii., &c. But the natural and necessary duty of preserving a tribe from total ruin, might seem to render the case difficult and doubtful, and incline their opinions, as well as their affections, to the more favourable side. And it may be, the Lord, whom they were here consulting with upon all their occasions, gave them a dispensation thus to do, though that be not expressed; which is the case of many other things which were done, though not recorded; as this very oath was omitted in its proper place, and had not been recorded if this extraordinary occasion had not been offered.

12 And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred ⁱ young virgins, that had known no man by lying with any male; and they brought them unto the camp to ^j Shiloh, which ^k is in the land of Canaan. i Heb. young women virgins. j Josh. 18. 1.

Young virgins; not married, yet marriageable. It is probable there were other and younger virgins; but whether they were slain or spared Scripture determines not, and the learned do not agree. But these could not serve the present and urgent occasion, and therefore he takes notice only of these four hundred which were of riper age.

13 And the whole congregation sent ^l some ^l to speak to the children of Benjamin ^m that were in the rock Rimmon, and to ⁿ call peaceably unto them. l Heb. and spake and called. m ch. 20. 47. n Or, proclaim peace. Deut. 20. 10.

14 And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead: and yet so they sufficed them not.

Benjamin; the poor remainders of the tribe of Benjamin.

15 And the people ^o repented them for Benjamin, because that the LORD had made a breach in the tribes of Israel. o ver. 6.

The people repented them for Benjamin; were yet more grieved upon this unhappy disappointment, for they supposed here would have been wives sufficient for them. The Lord had made a breach; the Benjamites were the only authors of the sin, but God was the chief author of the punishment, and the Israelites were but his executioners.

16 ¶ Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

For them that remain; for the two hundred who are yet unprovided of wives.

17 And they said, There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin, that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

The inheritance promised by Jacob and Moses, and given by Joshua to the tribe of Benjamin, doth all of it belong to those few which remain of that tribe, and cannot be possessed by any other tribe; and therefore we are obliged to procure wives for them all, that they may make up this breach, and be capable of possessing and managing all their land, that this tribe and their inheritance may not be confounded with or swallowed up by any of the rest. Heb. the inheritance (to wit, belonging to the whole tribe of Benjamin) is or belongs to them that be escaped of Benjamin.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters: for the children of Israel have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

i. e. To this generation of Benjamites who have made themselves guilty of this foul wickedness; but this oath did not extend to their posterity. And some think it had another exception, to wit, unless the surviving Benjamites could not otherwise be supplied with wives.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a feast of the Lord in Shiloh yearly in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el, on the east side of the highway that goeth up from Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah.

Yearly; on the three solemn feasts, in which they used some honest and holy recreations; among which dancing was one, Exod. xv. 20; 1 Sam. xviii. 6; 2 Sam. vi. 14; and probably it was the feast of tabernacles, which they did celebrate with more than ordinary joy, Deut. xvi. 13—15. Which is on the north side of Beth-el, Heb. which is on the north of Beth-el. Which doth not relate to Shiloh, which was so known a place, that it was frivolous to describe it by such circumstances, even by places much less known than itself; but to the feast, which as to that part or exercise of the feast here especially concerned and mentioned, to wit, the dancing of the virgins, was not celebrated in Shiloh, but in a neighbouring place more convenient for that purpose.

20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards;

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out to dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

The daughters of Shiloh; by whom he may possibly understand not those only who were born or settled inhabitants there, (as many conceive,) but all those who were come thither upon this occasion, and for a time sojourned there; for although only the males were obliged to go up to the three solemn feasts, yet it is apparent that the women had liberty to go, and those who were most devout did usually go, and others, upon special reasons or occasions: see 1 Sam. i. 7, 21, 22, 24; Luke ii. 22, 23, 41—43. And it may be justly presumed, especially concerning those women that lived at no great distance from the place of public worship, that they came thither in great numbers. Moreover, the daughters of Shiloh, strictly so called, are not only they that lived in that town or city, but in the country belonging to it, which oft comes under the name of the city to which it belongs. And these may be here particularly named, because though others might come, yet they were under great obligations to come, because of their nearness to the place. The vineyards were near to their dancing-place. Catch ye every man his wife; take them away by force or violence; which they might the better do, because mixed dances were not used by the people of God in their solemnities, but the women danced by themselves, and therefore were more liable to this rape.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, ¶ Be favourable unto them for our sakes: because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.

Be favourable unto them; pass by their offence, if not for their sakes, whom necessity forced to this course; yet for our sakes, and indeed for your own sakes; for both you and we have done them a great injury in prosecuting them with so much fury, as to endanger the utter extinction of the whole tribe; and therefore this is the least we can do by way of reparation. In the war; either, first, in the war with Jabesh-gilead, wherein they should have taken care to reserve a sufficient number, which they might have done, by sparing either so many of the married women as were necessary, who, their former husbands being slain, might have been married to those Benjamites; or as many of the younger virgins, who, within a little time, might have been married to them, whom many suppose that they slew. Or, secondly, in the war with the Benjamites, in which they acknowledge their cruelty in destroying the women with such fury, as not to leave a competent number for the men which were left. See Judg. xx. 48. Ye did not give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty. Quest. Whether this did really discharge them from their oath? Ans. First, It seems to excuse those parents of these virgins who were not acquainted with the plot, and did neither directly nor indirectly give their daughters to them, but they were taken away by force, without their knowledge and consent. If it be said those parents might and should have retaken their daughters from them; it may be replied, that they could not do so before they were corrupted, and the rulers of Israel would not assist them with their power to recover them. And it is a maxim, That many things which ought not to be done, when once they are done, should not be undone. And for those parents who were conscious of the design, it is probable they kept their daughters at home to avoid this. Secondly, Either the oath was made with an exception of the case of the total extirpation of a tribe, or it was a rash oath to do what was out of their power, or what they could not lawfully do, to wit, utterly to destroy a tribe out of Israel, which therefore they here speak of with horror, ver. 3, 6; and if so, as they sinned in making it, so they were not obliged to keep it; it being an acknowledged truth, that rash and sinful oaths are better broken than kept. Thirdly, Yet they cannot be wholly excused from sin in this matter; for as it was folly to take such an oath as it is expressed, so the manner of freeing themselves from their own snare is fraudulent and injurious to the parents, in disposing of their children without their consent.

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught: and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and repaired the cities, and dwelt in them.

According to their number, i. e. each man his wife, as is said, ver. 22. By which we may see they had no very favourable opinion of polygamy, because they did not allow it in this case, when it might seem most necessary for the reparation of a lost tribe. Returned unto their inheritance; which being very near the place, they could speedily do before the parents could obtain redress. Repaired the cities,

THE BOOK OF RUTH.

THE ARGUMENT.

THIS little Book, by whomsoever written, which is not material to know, is annexed to the Book of Judges, and by some of the Hebrew doctors made a part of it. It is useful, as for many other points, so especially to show the genealogy of David, and consequently of Christ; and the rise of Christ from a Moabitish woman; which was a useful document, and a great encouragement to the Gentiles to believe in Christ.

CHAP. I.

A famine in Canaan. Elimelech removes to Moab; with Naomi his wife, and his two sons, who marry Orpah and Ruth there; and die, 1—5. Naomi returns to Judah; her daughters-in-law accompany her on her way, 6—13. Orpah returns home to her people and gods; Ruth remains, being converted, 14—18. They come to Beth-lehem, 19—22.

NOW it came to pass in the days when the judges †ruled, that there was ^aa famine in the land. And a certain man of °Beth-lehem-judah went to sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.

In the days when the judges ruled; which is noted as the cause of the following famine, because in much of that time they were guilty of great defection from God. But under which of the judges this happened, Scripture being silent, it seems presumptuous to determine; nor is it necessary to know. What is said about this matter from the genealogy, mentioned chap. iv. 18, &c., it will be most proper to consider it there. In the land, or, in that land, to wit, of Canaan. The country of Moab; a fruitful land beyond Jordan, eastward.

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, °Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-judah. And they came °into the country of Moab, and †continued there.

Ephrathites; so called, because this Beth-lehem is otherwise called Ephrath or Ephratah, Gen. xxxv. 19; Micah v. 2; either from Caleb's wife of that name, 1 Chron. ii. 19; iv. 4, or from the fertility of the soil about it; which title may therefore be used here, to show the greatness of the famine, which affected even fertile parts. Of Beth-lehem-Judah: see the notes on Judg. xvii. 7. Continued there, to wit, during the famine.

3 And Elimelech Naomi's husband died; and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they took them wives of the women of Moab; the name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

Of the women of Moab; either these were proselytes when they married them, which may well be doubted, from ver. 15, or they sinned in marrying them, as appears from Deut. vii. 3; xxiii. 3; Ezra ix. 1, 2; Neh. xiii. 23, and therefore were punished with short life and want of issue, ver. 5, 19, 21. About ten years; as long as the famine lasted.

5 And Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them; and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.

6 ¶ Then she arose with her daughters in law, that she might return from the country of Moab: for she had heard in the country of Moab how that the LORD had visited his people in °giving them bread.

i. e. Food; so she staid no longer there than necessity forced her.

7 Wherefore she went forth out of the place where she was, and her two daughters in law with her; and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah.

8 And Naomi said unto her two daughters in law, °Go, return each to her mother's house: °the LORD deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with °the dead, and with me.

Each to her mother's house; not that they wanted fathers, Ruth ii. 11, but because daughters used to converse more frequently with their mothers, and to be most endeared to them, and to dwell in the same apartments with them, which then were distinct from those parts of the house where the men dwelt. With the dead; with my sons, your husbands, whilst they lived.

9 The LORD grant you that ye may find °rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then she kissed them; and they lifted up their voice, and wept.

Rest, i. e. a quiet and happy life, free from those cares, vexations, encumbrances, and troubles which widows are in a special manner exposed unto. She kissed them, as the manner there was when friends parted.

10 And they said unto her, Surely we will return with thee unto thy people.

11 And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet any more sons in my womb, °that they may be your husbands?

According to the ancient custom, Gen. xxxviii., and the express law of God, Deut. xxv. 5, which doubtless she had acquainted them with before, among other branches of the Jewish religion, wherein she did instruct them.

12 Turn again, my daughters, go your way; for I am too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, if I should have an husband also to night, and should also bear sons;

Go your way. Quest. Why doth she dissuade them from this journey, and not rather persuade them to go with her, and to embrace the Jewish religion? Ans. 1. Possibly she thought such dissuasion might be the best way to persuade them, as it oft happens; especially in that sex. 2. She would not have them rashly and inconsiderately to embrace the Jewish religion, in hopes of some advantage from it, which she justly thought they would be disappointed of; and withal, exposed to many straits and troubles, and on that occasion revolt from the true religion, which would be far worse than never to have embraced it. And therefore she doth justly, and wisely, and piously in representing to them the truth of the business, and the outward inconveniences which would accompany the change of their place and religion; as also our blessed Lord Christ did, Matt. viii. 20.

+ Heb. hope. 13 Would ye † tarry for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters; for † it grieveth me much for your sakes that ⁿ the hand of the LORD is gone out against me.

Would ye stay for them from having husbands? it is unreasonable for me to expect it, or for you to perform it. For your sakes; that you are left without the comfort of husbands or children; that I must part with such dear and affectionate daughters; and that my circumstances are such that I cannot invite nor encourage you to go along with me. For her condition was so mean at this time, that Ruth, when she came to her mother's city, was forced to glean for a living, chap. ii. 2.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again: and Orpah ^o kissed her mother in law; but Ruth ^e clave unto her.

Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, i. e. departed from her with a kiss, as the manner was, Gen. xxxi. 28; 1 Kings xix. 20.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister in law is gone back unto her people, and unto ^a her gods: ^r return thou after thy sister in law.

Unto her people, and unto her gods; which she saith, partly, to try Ruth's sincerity and constancy; partly, that by upbraiding Orpah with her idolatry she might consequently turn her from it; and partly, that she might intimate to her, that if she went with her, she must embrace the true God and religion.

16 And Ruth said, ¶ Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: ^t thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God:

I renounce those idols which my sister hath returned to, and I will worship no other God but thine, who is indeed the only true God.

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: ^u the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 ^x When she saw that she † was stedfastly minded to go with her, then she left speaking unto her.

19 ¶ So they two went until they came to Beth-lehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Beth-lehem, that ^y all the city was moved about them, and they said, ^z Is this Naomi?

Is this she that formerly lived in so much plenty and honour? Oh how marvellously is her condition changed, that she is returned in this forlorn and desolate condition!

20 And she said unto them, Call me not ¶ Naomi, call me ¶ Mara: for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.

Naomi signifies pleasant, or cheerful, or amiable. Mara signifies bitter or sorrowful.

21 I went out full, ^a and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

Full; with my husband and sons, and a plentiful estate for our support. Hath testified against me, i. e. hath borne witness, as it were, in judgment, and given sentence against me, and declared my sin by my punishment.

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter in law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Beth-lehem ^b in the beginning of barley harvest.

CHAP. II.

Ruth gleaning in the fields of Boaz, her deceased husband's near kinsman, he taketh knowledge of her, 1-7. He showeth her great kindness, and blesseth her, 8-16. That which she got she brings to Naomi; and telleth her what had befallen her. She giveth God thanks, and exhorteth Ruth to continue in the field, 17-23.

AND Naomi had a ^a kinsman of her husband's, a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech; and his name was ^b Boaz.

2 And Ruth the Moabitess said unto Naomi, Let me now go to the field, and ^c glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace. And she said unto her, Go, my daughter.

Gleaning was permitted to the poor and the stranger, Deut. xxiv. 19, both which she was; nor was she ashamed to confess her poverty, nor would she eat the bread of idleness; whereby she showeth herself to be a prudent, and diligent, and virtuous woman, as she is called, Ruth iii. 11. In whose sight I shall find grace; for though it was their duty to permit this, Lev. xix. 9; xxiii. 22, yet either she was ignorant thereof, or thought that, being a stranger, it might be grudged or denied to her; or, at least, that it became her modestly and humbly to acknowledge their kindness herein.

3 And she went, and came, and gleaned in the field after the reapers: and her ^t hap was to light on a part of the field belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

Her hap was; for it was indeed a chance in reference to second causes, but ordered and designed by God's providence.

4 ¶ And, behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and said unto the reapers, ^d The LORD be with you. And they answered him, The LORD bless thee.

They expressed and professed their piety, even in their civil conversation and worldly transactions; which now so many are ashamed of, and call it hypocrisy or vain ostentation thus to do.

¶ Or, if I were with an husband.

5 Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers, Whose damsel is this?

6 And the servant that was set over the reapers answered and said, It is the Moabitish damsel^e that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab:

i. e. That came with Naomi when she came back; for otherwise, as Ruth did not go from thence, so she could not properly be said to come back.

7 And she said, I pray you, let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves: so she came, and hath continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house.

She said, I pray you, let me glean; she did not boldly intrude herself, but modestly ask leave of us. Hath continued even from the morning until now; she is not retired through idleness, for she hath been diligent and constant in her labours. In the house; not in Naomi's house, as many understand it, as may be gathered from ver. 18, 19, but in the little house or tent, which was set up in the fields at these times, and was necessary in those hot countries, where the labourers or others might retire for a little repose or repast at fit times. Being weary with her continued labours, she comes hither to take a little rest.

8 Then said Boaz unto Ruth, Hearest thou not, my daughter? Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but abide here fast by my maidens:

Not by the young men, to avoid both occasion of sin, and matter of scandal. Herein he shows his piety and prudence.

9 Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them: have I not charged the young men that they shall not touch thee? and when thou art athirst, go unto the vessels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn.

That they shall not touch thee, so as to offer any incivility or injury to thee. Touching is oft taken for hurting, Gen. xxvi. 11; Psal. cv. 15.

10 Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger?

She fell on her face: this was the humblest posture of reverence; either civil, when performed to men, or religious, when to God. See Gen. xviii. 2; xxxiii. 3; xlii. 6; Matt. ii. 11; viii. 2. Take knowledge of me, i. e. show any respect and kindness to me; for words of knowledge in Scripture commonly include affection.

11 And Boaz answered and said unto her, It hath fully been shewed me, ^gall that thou hast done unto thy mother in law since the death of thine husband: and how thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou knewest not heretofore.

Which thou knewest not; of whom thou hadst no experience; for otherwise in general she could not be ignorant of this people.

12 ^hThe LORD recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the LORD God of Israel, ⁱunder whose wings thou art come to rest.

Wings, i. e. protection and care, as Deut. xxxii. 11; Psal. xvii. 8; xxxvi. 7; xci. 4. An allusion either to hens, which protect and cherish their young ones under their wings; or to the wings of the cherubims, between which God dwelt.

13 Then she said, ¶^l Let me find favour in thy sight, my lord; for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken †friendly unto thine handmaid, ^lthough I be not like unto one of thine handmaidens.

Let me find favour in thy sight; I humbly implore the continuance of thy good opinion of me, though I do not deserve it. Not like unto one of thy handmaidens; a person more mean, and necessitous, and obscure, being a stranger, and one born of heathenish parents, and not of the holy and honourable people of Israel, as they are.

14 And Boaz said unto her, At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. And she sat beside the reapers: and he reached her parched corn, and she did eat, and ^mwas sufficed, and left.

Bread in those simple and frugal times was the usual food of servants and the meaner sort, at least when they were engaged in such works as this, which required speed, and therefore must be quick in their eating, as well as in their work. Or bread may be here put for any food, as it oft is. Vinegar; either simple vinegar, in which the poorer sort used to dip their bread, and so eat it in hot countries, as they did not only in Canaan, but afterwards in Italy; it being very proper, especially in those parts, for cooling them in those hot seasons, for strengthening their sinews, &c.; or vinegar mixed with other things to make some kind of sauce. Beside the reapers; not with or among them, but at some little distance from them, and as one inferior to them, as she had acknowledged before in words, and now showeth it by her actions. Parched corn; a food in frequent use and some esteem with them. See 2 Sam. xvii. 28.

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and †reproach her not:

As if she were rude or impudent in so doing, as otherwise they should have thought. Quest. Why did he not rather give her as much corn as she could carry, and send her away? Ans. Because he would not have her to eat the bread of idleness, but honestly to get it with the sweat of her brow, according to her duty and present condition.

16 And let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not.

17 So she gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned: and it was about an ephah of barley.

An ephah is thought to contain about a bushel. See Exod. xvi. 36; Lev. v. 11.

18 ¶ And she took it up, and went into the city: and her mother in law saw what she had gleaned: and she brought forth, and gave to her ⁿthat she had reserved after she was sufficed.

Or, that which she had left of her fulness, or after she was satisfied. She did eat as much as she desired of what she had gleaned, and her mother, as I suppose, with her, and the residue she gave to her mother to lay up for future use.

19 And her mother in law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to day? and where wroughtest thou? blessed be he that did ^otake knowledge of thee. And she shewed her mother in law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to day is Boaz.

unto her, The man is near of kin unto us,
|| one of our next kinsmen.

And to the dead, i. e. which he formerly showed to those who are now dead, to wit, my husband and his sons whilst they were living, and now continues to us, their wives, who are now alive. One of our next kinsmen; Heb. one of our redeemers, or avengers, to whom it belongs to avenge our persons, and to redeem our lands, and to marry thee, the widow and relict of his next kinsman, as is expressed, Ruth iii. 9. She saith one of them, not that there were many who were immediately such, but that he was a very near kinsman, and one to whom that office belonged, in case of the refusal of one person, of whom she rightly conjectured that he would refuse, as he did.

21 And Ruth the Moabite said, He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young men, until they have ended all my harvest.

Both barley harvest and wheat harvest, as is said, ver. 23.

22 And Naomi said unto Ruth her daughter in law, It is good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that they || meet thee not in any other field.

|| Or, fall upon thee.

Whereby thou wilt both expose thyself to many inconveniences, which thou mayst expect from strangers; and incur his displeasure, as if thou didst either despise his proffered kindness, or doubt of the sincerity of his affections and offers.

23 So she kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest and of wheat harvest; and dwelt with her mother in law.

Heb. sat or continued at home, when she had despatched her occasions abroad, and did not wander or gad abroad, after the manner of idle persons and harlots, Prov. vii. 11, 12.

CHAP. III.

By Naomi's advice, Ruth lieth at Boaz's feet, 1—7. He awaking commendeth what she had done, and acknowledgeth the right of a kinsman; tells her there was a nearer kinsman, to whom he would offer her, who refusing, he would redeem her, 8—13. Sends her away with six measures of barley, 14—18.

THEN Naomi her mother in law said unto her, My daughter, ^a shall I not seek ^b rest for thee, that it may be well with thee?

a 1 Cor. 7. 36.
b 1 Tim. 5. 8.
c ch. 1. 9.

Rest, i. e. a life of rest, and comfort, and safety, under the care of a good husband. The question supposeth an affirmative answer: I will seek it, as my duty binds me.

2 And now is not Boaz of our kindred, ^c with whose maidens thou wast? Behold, he winnoweth barley to night in the threshingfloor.

c ch. 2. 8.

Which was in a place covered at the top, but open elsewhere, whither Ruth might easily come. And this work of winnowing corn was usually begun or ended with a feast, as may be gathered both from ver. 7, and from other instances, wherein they used to do so upon like occasions; and this work was to begin this evening, and, as some think, was done only in the evenings, when the heat grew less, and the wind began to blow. See Gen. iii. 8.

3 Wash thyself therefore, ^d and anoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, and get thee down to the floor: but make not thyself known unto the man, until he shall have done eating and drinking.

d 2 Sam. 14.

Thy raiment, to wit, thy best raiment. All this was done to render herself more amiable in the eyes of Boaz. Object. But Boaz could not see her, the whole business being to be transacted by night. Answer. First, It was begun in the beginning of the night, as soon as Boaz had supped and composed himself to rest, as appears from ver. 4, 7, when there was so much light left as might discover her to him. Secondly, There being a solemn feast this evening, as is very probably thought, and the master of the feast having invited his labouring people to it, and Ruth among the rest, it is likely that both she and the rest did put themselves into their best dress upon that occasion, as the manner is even at this day; and so he had opportunity enough to see her. Make not thyself known unto the man, to wit, not in so familiar a way, as she was appointed to do, so as he might know her, in the sense in which that word is sometimes used.

4 And it shall be, when he lieth down, that thou shalt mark the place where he shall lie, and thou shalt go in, and || un- ^{|| Or, lift up the clothes that are on his feet.} cover his feet, and lay thee down; and he will tell thee what thou shalt do.

When he lieth down, to rest or sleep, as upon such occasions they used to do in those hot countries. Thou shalt go in: though Naomi and Ruth seem to be virtuous and modest women, and their intent was lawful and honest; yet there seems to be a manifold irregularity in the manner of it. First, It seems to be against that modesty which should be eminent in that sex, and in unmarried persons. Secondly, Against honesty, both because it was an injury to another person, who was nearer akin, whose right this was; which Naomi could not be ignorant of; and because it was a preposterous and precipitant method, not agreeable either to the rules of Scripture, or the usage of well-mannered nations, or that decency which even nature requires. Thirdly, Against prudence; for it might have proved the occasion, as of many sins, so of great shame to all of them; and a means to alienate his affection from her, which she sought to engage. And though there be some circumstances which alleviate the fact, as the experience which Naomi had of the wisdom and sobriety both of Boaz and of Ruth, yet she knew not what the event would be; and that there was something of shamefulness in the thing, may be gathered both from Naomi's choice of the night for it, as if it were a work of darkness, and from Boaz's fear lest this should be known, ver. 14. And it is an aggravation of it, that this course was unnecessary, and she had a plain and likely way, which was directly to address herself to Boaz, or the next kinsman, and to require the duty which by God's law he was bound to perform, and this before witnesses, as Boaz did. And her clandestine proceeding seems to have arisen from a distrust of God's providence to bring about what she desired in the ordinary way. Uncover his feet; remove the clothes which were upon his feet; thereby to awaken him. What thou shalt do; how thou shouldst carry thyself, or what course thou shalt take to obtain that marriage which belongs unto thee. Only there were some rites to be observed, and circumstances to be done, before they came to the conclusion of the marriage, about which Boaz would instruct her.

5 And she said unto her, All that thou sayest unto me I will do.

The confidence she had in Naomi's wisdom and piety, and true love to her, made her ready to follow her advice, wherein she was the more excusable, because she did not understand the laws and customs of the country, as Naomi did.

6 ¶ And she went down unto the floor, and did according to all that her mother in law bade her.

7 And when Boaz had eaten and drunk, and ^e his heart was merry, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of corn: and she came softly, and uncovered his feet, and laid her down.

Had eaten and drunk, to wit, liberally, as the manner was upon those occasions. See Judg. ix. 27; P'sal. iv. 7; Isa. ix. 3.

8 ¶ And it came to pass at midnight, that the man was afraid, and || turned himself: and, behold, a woman lay at his feet.

At midnight; he did not discover her sooner, though she did not uncover his feet, being it seems in a deep sleep, as is usual after feasts, and she doing no more than her mother commanded her, and using no words or gestures which might provoke his lust; wherein she showed her temperance and modesty, and that what she did was only by her mother's instigation and advice, which plainly appeared from her desire expressed, ver. 9, which he knew, she being a stranger, was unacquainted with. And this was the reason why Boaz was not in the least offended with her, but only commends her virtue, without any reflection upon her for this fact. Turned himself; from the place where he lay, he raised and turned himself towards the feet, to learn who or what was there. Or, he was troubled, or afraid, or wondered; for the Hebrew word being but once used, is diversely rendered. A woman lay at his feet; which he might understand, either by some glimmerings of light which were after midnight, which discovered her; or rather, by her voice, or out of her own mouth, who being asked, told him so much in general, before he made particular inquiry.

f Ezek. 16. 8. 9 And he said, Who art thou? And she answered, I am Ruth thine handmaid: ^fspread therefore thy skirt over thine handmaid; for thou art ^ga near kinsman.

Spread thy skirt over thine hand-maid, i. e. take me to be thy wife, and perform the duty of an husband to me. This phrase is used in this sense Deut. xxii. 30; xxvii. 20; Ezek. xvi. 8. Either, first, Because the wife is admitted into the same bed with her husband, and both are covered with one and the same covering. Or, secondly, From an ancient ceremony of the husband's throwing the skirt of his garment over her head, in token both of her subjection, 1 Cor. xi. 5, 6, 10, and appropriation to him, being hereby as it were hid from the eyes of others; see Gen. xx. 16; and also of that protection which he oweth to her: see Ruth ii. 12.

h ch. 2. 20. 10 And he said, ^hBlessed be thou of the LORD, my daughter: for thou hast shewed more kindness in the latter end than ⁱat the beginning, inasmuch as thou followedst not young men, whether poor or rich.

Thou hast showed more kindness; both to thy deceased husband, the continuance of whose name and memory thou preferrest before the satisfaction of thy own lust; and to thy mother-in-law, whose commands thou hast punctually obeyed, even with thy own hazard in so doubtful an enterprise. Thou followedst not young men, to seek thy marriage either here, or in thy own country, as thou wouldst have done if thou hadst not preferred obedience to God's command, before the pleasing of thyself.

11 And now, my daughter, fear not; I will do to thee all that thou requirest: for all the [†]city of my people doth know that thou art ^ha virtuous woman.

Fear not; think not that I despise and reject thee, because I do not immediately comply with thy desire. I will do to thee all that thou requirest, i. e. marry thee, upon the condition here following.

12 And now it is true that I am thy [†]near kinsman: howbeit ^mthere is a kinsman nearer than I.

13 Tarry this night, and it shall be in the morning, that if he will ⁿperform unto thee the part of a kinsman, well; let him do the kinsman's part: but if he will not do the part of a kinsman to thee, then will I do the part of a kinsman to thee, ^oas the LORD liveth: lie down until the morning.

If he will perform unto thee the part of a kinsman, i. e. take thee to wife, to raise up seed to his brother, as he ought to do.

14 ¶ And she lay at his feet until the morning: and she rose up before one could know another. And he said, ^pLet it not be known that a woman came into the floor.

Before one could know another, i. e. while it was yet so dark that one person could not discern another. Or, before one did know the other, i. e. before they were carnally known to one another. Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor; he takes care to preserve not only his conscience towards God, but his reputation, and hers also, among men.

15 Also he said, Bring the ^{||}vail that [†]thou hast upon thee, and hold it. And when she held it, he measured six ^{measures} of barley, and laid it on her: and she went into the city.

The veil, or, the apron, such as women ordinarily wear. Six measures; known and usual measure: it is not determined how large those measures were, but this the nature of the thing shows, that they were no larger than one woman could carry in her veil, or apron.

16 And when she came to her mother in law, she said, Who art thou, my daughter? And she told her all that the man had done to her.

Who art thou, my daughter? either, first, She did not distinctly know who she was, because it was dark, and so calls her daughter only in general, as elder women call the younger. But she could as easily have discerned who she was, as what her age was. Or, secondly, This is not a question of doubting, but of wonder, as if she had said, Art thou in very deed my daughter? I can hardly believe it. How comest thou hither in this manner, and thus early?

17 And she said, These six ^{measures} of barley gave he me; for he said to me, Go not empty unto thy mother in law.

18 Then said she, ^qSit still, my daughter, until thou know how the matter will fall: for the man will not be in rest, until he have finished the thing this day.

CHAP. IV.

Boaz goeth up to the gate, calleth his kinsman; inquires whether he would redeem and marry Ruth, 1—5. He refuseth, 6—8. Boaz, the people witnessing and congratulating, buyeth the inheritance, and marrieth Ruth, 9—12. She beareth Obed the grandfather of David, 13—17. The genealogy from Pharez unto David, 18—22.

THEN went Boaz up to the gate, and sat him down there: and, behold, ^athe kinsman of whom Boaz spake came by; unto whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down.

The gate; the place where controversies were decided, and the people assembled, and where they used to go out and come in to the town; where he was most likely to find his kinsman. Ho, such a one! doubtless Boaz both knew his name, and called him by it; but it is omitted by the holy writer, partly because it was unnecessary to know it; and principally in way of contempt, as is usual, and as a just punishment upon him, that he who would not preserve his brother's name might lose his own, and lie buried in the grave of perpetual oblivion. Sit down here, I have some business of importance with you.

2 And he took ten men of ^bthe elders of the city, and said, Sit ye down here. And they sat down.

He took ten men, to be umpires or witnesses between them; for though two or three witnesses were sufficient, yet in weightier matters they used more. And ten was the usual number among the Jews, in causes of matrimony and divorce, and translation of inheritances; who were both judges of the causes, and witnesses of the fact. See 1 Kings xxi. 8.

3 And he said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's :

Both Naomi and Ruth had an interest in this land during their lives, but he mentions only Naomi, partly because all was done by her direction, to which Ruth wholly submitted herself; and partly lest the mention of Ruth should raise a suspicion of the necessity of his marrying Ruth, before he had given his answer to the first proposition. Selleth a parcel of land; which she might do because of her poverty, Lev. xxv. 25.

4 And † I thought to advertise thee, saying, ° Buy it ^d before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it: but if thou wilt not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know: ° for there is none to redeem it beside thee; and I am after thee. And he said, I will redeem it.

Before the elders of my people; before this assembly, that it may be legally and firmly made over to thee.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, ^t to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

The wife of the dead; according to the law, Deut. xxv. 5, &c; Matt. xxii. 24, &c. To raise up the name of the dead; to revive his name, which was lost and buried with his body, by raising up a seed to him, to be called by his name.

6 ¶ And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, lest I mar mine own inheritance; redeem thou my right to thyself; for I cannot redeem it.

Lest I mar mine own inheritance; either, first, Because having no children of his own, he might have one, and but one, son by Ruth, who, though he should carry away his inheritance, yet should not bear his name, but the name of Ruth's husband; and so by preserving another man's name, he should lose his own. Or, secondly, Because as his inheritance would be but very little increased by this marriage, so it might be much diminished by being divided amongst his many children, which he possibly had already, and might probably have more by Ruth. Redeem thou my right, which I freely renounce and resign to thee.

7 ^h Now this was the manner in former time in Israel concerning redeeming and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

For to confirm all things, i. e. in all alienation of lands. So that it is no wonder if this ceremony differ a little from that Deut. xxv. 9, because that concerned only one case, but this is more general. Besides, he pleads not the command of God, but only ancient custom, for this practice. A man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour: he who relinquished his right to another, plucked off his own shoe, and gave it to him. This was symbolical, and a significant and convenient ceremony; as if he said, Take this shoe wherewith I used to go and tread upon my land, and in that shoe do thou enter upon it, and take possession of it. This was a testimony in Israel; this was admitted for sufficient evidence in all such cases.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, Buy it for thee. So he drew off his shoe.

9 ¶ And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, ¹ that the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witnesses this day.

From the gate of his place, i. e. from among the inhabitants dwelling within the gate of this city, which was Bethlehem-judah.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. ^k The LORD make the woman that is come into thine house like Rachel and like Leah, which two did ¹ build the house of Israel: and ^{||} do thou worthily in ^m Ephrath, and † be famous in Bethlehem:

Like Rachel and like Leah, amiable and fruitful. Those two are singled out, partly because they were of a foreign and heathenish original, and yet ingrafted into God's people, as Ruth also was; and partly because of that singular fertility which God vouchsafed unto them above their predecessors, Sarah and Rebekah. Rachel is placed before Leah, because she was his most lawful, and only intended, and chosen, and best beloved wife. Build the house, i. e. increase the posterity. See Gen. xvi. 2; Exod. i. 21. Ephrath and Beth-lehem, two names of one and the same place; of which see on Ruth i. 2.

12 And let thy house be like the house of Pharez, ⁿ whom Tamar bare unto Judah, of ^o the seed which the LORD shall give thee of this young woman.

Like the house of Pharez; as honourable and numerous as his family was; whom, though he also was born of a stranger, God so far blessed, that his family was one of the five families to which all the tribe of Judah belonged, and the progenitor of the inhabitants of this city.

13 ¶ So Boaz ^p took Ruth, and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, ^q the LORD gave her conception, and she bare a son.

Boaz took Ruth; which he might do, though she was a Moabite, because the prohibition against marrying such is to be restrained to those who continue in the heathenish estate, as is evident from the reason of it; whereas Ruth was a sincere proselyte and convert to the God and faith of Israel. He went in unto her, i. e. had conjugal converse with her. See Gen. vi. 4. Conception, i. e. strength to conceive and retain seed.

14 And ^r the women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the LORD, which hath not † left thee this day without a ^{||} kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

Without a kinsman; which is understood, either, first, Of the son new born. Or rather, secondly, Of Boaz; for the name of goel, which is translated kinsman or redeemer, is never, that I know of, given to the child born, but always to the person begetting him of his brother's or near kinsman's wife. And whereas it is objected, that there was no cause for this congratulation at this time in reference to Boaz, because that was done divers months before this time; it may be replied, that the memory of that generous action was revived upon this occasion, and therefore is fitly mentioned as the foundation of this child's birth; and this happy effect justly leads them to the cause and original of it, which was this, that Boaz had shown himself to be a kinsman or redeemer, not only in name and title, as the other kinsman was, ver. 6, but in truth and reality. The words may be rendered, which hath not made or suffered thy kinsman to fail to thee, i. e. to neglect or refuse the performance of his duty to thee and thine, as the other kinsman did. That his name may be famous in Israel, Heb. and his name shall be famous in Israel, for this noble and worthy action, wherein 15 And he shall be unto thee a restorer of thy life, and † a nourisher of † thine old age : for thy daughter in law, which loveth thee, which is ^a better to thee than seven sons, hath born him.

A restorer of thy life, i. e. of the comfort of thy life, which was in a great measure dead and gone. Hath born him, to wit, a son; the pronoun for the noun understood, which is frequent in the Hebrew tongue. Or, hath born to him, i. e. to thy kinsman, to wit, a son, which is easily understood; and so the pronoun affix is put for the separate; of which there are instances; as Josh. xv. 19; 1 Kings xix. 21; Job xxxi. 37; Ezek. xxix. 3.

16 And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became nurse unto it.

17 And the women her neighbours gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name Obed: he is the father of Jesse, the father of David.

Gave it a name, i. e. they gave her advice about the name; for otherwise they had no power or right to do so. Obed; a servant, to wit, to thee, to nourish, and comfort, and assist thee; which duty children owe to their progenitors.

18 ¶ Now these are the generations of Pharez: Pharez begat Hezron, 19 And Hezron begat Ram, and Ram begat Amminadab,

20 And Amminadab begat ^a Nahshon, and Nahshon begat ^γ Salmon,

21 And Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed,

22 And Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat ^z David.

How can this be a true genealogy, seeing by this means four persons take up three hundred and eighty years, which were between Salmon and David, and consequently every one of them must beget a son when he was very old? Answ. 1. It is not certain that each of these was the immediate parent of him whom he is said to beget; for sometimes grandfathers are said in Scripture to beget their grandchildren, to wit, by the intervention of their immediate sons; whereof instances have been given. And sometimes in genealogies whole generations are omitted, as may appear by Ezra vii. 2, compared with 1 Chron. vi. 3, and by Matt. i. 8, which might be done here for divers reasons now unknown. 2. There are many examples even in profane writers, both ancient and modern, of persons that have not only lived one hundred and twenty and one hundred and thirty years and upwards, but have been vigorous and have begotten children at above one hundred years old; and of women that have conceived and born children at the age of fifty, sixty, yea, seventy years. And therefore if it were so in these more ancient times, when men were longer lived, and under the law, when long life was expressly promised to the obedient, and in persons of strong constitutions and sober conversations, such as some of these are known to have been, and the others may justly be presumed to be such, it is not strange, nor in the least incredible.

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL.

OTHERWISE CALLED

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THE ARGUMENT.

It is not certainly known who was the penman of this Book, or whether it was written by one or more hands; nor is it of any great importance; for since there are sufficient evidences that God was the chief author of it, it matters not who was the instrument. As when it appears that such a thing was really an act of parliament, or of the council-table, it is not considerable who was the clerk or which was the pen that wrote it. And this is the less material in such historical books, wherein there is but little which concerns the foundation of faith and good life, and therefore it was not necessary to name the writer of them. It may abundantly suffice that there were in these times divers prophets and holy men of God; as Samuel, and Nathan, and Gad, and David himself, who might each of them write some part of this and the following book. But if any man will out of perverseness doubt or deny that these wrote it, yet this I suppose no discreet and impartial man will deny, that it is wholly incredible that such books should be written in their times, and recommended to the church as a part of the Holy Scriptures, and so received by the succeeding generation, without their approbation, who had so great a power and authority in the church and commonwealth of Israel.

CHAP. I.

Elkanah goeth yearly up to the feast at Shiloh with his two wives: Hannah is barren; Peninnah upbraideth her, 1—6. Hannah prayeth fervently to the Lord for a son; promising to separate him a Nazarite unto God, 7—12. Eli thinking her drunk rebuketh her; upon her answer, blesseth her, 13—18. She returneth home with Elkanah, and conceiveth; beareth Samuel; offereth her sacrifice; performs her promise concerning him, 19—28.

NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of mount Ephraim, and his name was ^a Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, ^b an Ephrathite:

Ramathaim-zophim, called Ramah, ver. 19, and here is the dual number Ramathaim, i. e. double Ramah, probably because it consisted of two parts, whereof the one might be called the old city, the other the new, both being united into one; and the additional title of Zophim, which signifies watch-towers, or watchmen, may note either the height of its situation, which made it fit for that use; or that the prophets, who are called watchmen, as Ezek. iii. 17, had a school or college there. An Ephrathite, i. e. one of Bethlehem-judah, Ruth i. 2, to wit, by his birth and habitation, though by his original a Levite. Thus divers Jews by nation are called Medes, Elamites, Cretians, &c., Acts ii. 9—11, because they were born and bred there.

2 And he had two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children.

He had two wives; as divers other good men had in those ages. And it is probable that he took a second wife, to wit, Peninnah, because Hannah, who being first named seems to have been his first wife, was barren.

3 And this man went up out of his city ^cyearly ^dto worship and to sacrifice unto the LORD of hosts in ^eShiloh. And the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, the priests of the LORD, were there.

Yearly, to wit, at one of the solemn feasts, which probably was the passover, when he not only went up himself, but carried his wife and children with him. Compare ver. 7. Or, at the appointed days or times; Heb. from days to days; or, from time to time, i. e. at the three solemn feasts, when he, together with all other males, were obliged to go to worship God in the place appointed; and at other times, when he as a Levite was to go thither in his course. To sacrifice; not in his own person, which the Levites could not do, but by the priests; in which sense David, and Solomon, and Absalom are said to offer sacrifices, 2 Sam. xv. 8; 1 Kings viii. 63; 1 Chron. xxi. 26. In Shiloh; where the tabernacle had long been, and now was. See Josh. xviii. 1; Judg. xviii. 31; xxi. 19. The priests of the LORD were there, or, were the priests of the LORD there, to wit, under their father Eli, who is generally conceived to have been the high priest, but being very old and infirm, 1 Sam. iv. 15, and unfit for service, his sons ministered in his stead, being as it were second priests. See 2 Kings xxv. 18. And this clause seems to be added, to show that this good man did not run into that vulgar error, of neglecting his duty of offering to God for the wickedness of the priests; of which see chap. ii. 17, 24.

4 ¶ And when the time was that Elkanah offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters, portions:

To wit, out of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings, the greatest part whereof fell to the offerer, and was eaten by him and his friends or guests before the Lord, Lev. iii., vii; Deut. xii. 12; xvi. 11; and out of this he gave them all parts or portions, as the master of the feast used to do to guests.

5 But unto Hannah he gave || a worthy portion; for he loved Hannah: ^abut the LORD had shut up her womb.

A worthy portion, or, an honourable or select part, such as the master of the feast usually gave to the person most respected or beloved. See Gen. xliii. 34; 1 Sam. ix. 23, 24. He loved Hannah, with a singular and eminent love. Compare Gen. xxix. 30.

6 And her adversary also ^bprovoked her sore, for to make her fret, because the LORD had shut up her womb.

Her adversary, or, her troubler, or vexer, or enemy; for so her envy or jealousy made her, though so nearly related. Compare Gen. xxix. 30; Lev. xviii. 18. To make her fret, against her husband, or against God, or within herself.

7 And as he did so year by year, ¶ when she went up to the house of the LORD, so she provoked her; therefore she wept, and did not eat.

As he did so, i. e. either as oft as he went and carried them with him to worship; or as Elkanah expressed peculiar kindness to Hannah, as was said, ver. 5. Year by year, i. e. every year, at the days or times mentioned, ver. 3. When she went up to the house of the Lord. This circumstance is noted, first, As the occasion of the contention, because at such times they were forced to more society with one another by the way, and in their lodgings; whereas at home they had distinct apartments, where they might be asunder; and then her husband's extraordinary love and kindness was showed to Hannah, whereby Peninnah was the more exasperated; then also Hannah prayed earnestly for a child, which hitherto she had done in vain; and this possibly she reproached her with. Secondly, As the aggravation of her sin, that when she came to worship God, and to offer sacrifices, when she should have been reconciled even to her enemies, Matt. v. 23, 24, she did quarrel with so near a relation. Did not eat; either little, or rather nothing at all, as being overwhelmed with grief, and therefore unfit to eat of that sacred food, according to Deut. xii. 7.

8 Then said Elkanah her husband to her, Hannah, why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I better to thee than ten sons?

Oughtest thou not to value my hearty love to thee, more than the having of as many sons as Peninnah hath? She would willingly change conditions with thee.

9 ¶ So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk. Now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of ^kthe temple of the LORD.

After they had eaten, i. e. Elkanah and his company, except Hannah. Or, she; for though at first she eat nothing, yet upon her husband's invitation and encouragement she might eat afterwards; though the former may seem more probable. Upon a seat, or throne; for it is manifest it was raised higher than ordinary, chap. iv. 18. Here he might sit, either as the judge, or rather as high priest, to hear and answer such as came to him for advice, and to inspect and direct the worship of God as need was. By a post of the temple, i. e. of the tabernacle, which is called the temple here, and chap. iii. 3; 2 Sam. xxii. 7; Psal. xxvii. 6; as, on the contrary, the temple is called the tabernacle, Jer. x. 20; Lam. ii. 6. And although this tabernacle was but a tent, yet it was supported by boards and posts, and especially at the entrance, by which Eli sat, even by the entrance into the outward court, otherwise he could not have seen Hannah. See more on chap. iii. 15.

10 ^lAnd she was ^min bitterness of soul, and prayed unto the LORD, and wept sore.

She was in bitterness of soul, i. e. oppressed with grief, as that phrase is used, Job vii. 11; x. 1; Ruth i. 20.

11 And she ⁿvowed a vow, and said, O LORD of hosts, if thou wilt indeed ^olook on the affliction of thine handmaid, and ^premember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid ^qa man child, then I will give him unto the LORD all the days of his life, and ^rthere shall no razor come upon his head.

She vowed a vow; knowing that her husband would willingly consent to it, otherwise she had not power to do it. If thou wilt indeed look on, to wit, favourably, so as to remove it. The affliction, i. e. the barrenness and reproach which attends it. Give him unto the Lord, i. e. consecrate him to God's service in his temple, as far as in me lies; for if he had any blemish, she might not do it. All the days of his life; not only from his twenty-fifth to his fiftieth year, as all the Levites, and so he himself, were obliged by God, Numb. iv. 3; viii. 24, but for his whole time; which is still to be understood with a reservation of God's right, which her vow must give place to, as indeed it did; for God called him to be a prophet, and a general of the army, and a judge. There shall no razor come upon his head, i. e. he shall be a perpetual Nazarite; for under this one rule, as the chief, all the rest are contained; as elsewhere the whole Mosaical law is understood, under the title of circumcision.

+ Heb. multiplied to pray.

12 And it came to pass, as she † continued praying before the LORD, that Eli marked her mouth.

As she continued praying, Heb. multiplied to pray. By which it appears that she said much more than is here expressed. And the like you are to judge of the prayers and sermons of other holy persons recorded in Scripture, which gives us only the sum and substance of them; which consideration may help us much in the understanding of some passages of the Bible. Her mouth, i. e. the motion of her lips, as it follows.

13 Now Hannah, she spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli thought she had been drunken.

Her voice was not heard; partly, to avoid the suspicion of vain-glory; partly, because she would not have others acquainted with her barrenness, which was matter of reproach; and partly, because she would not disturb others, who at this solemn feast were probably employed there in the same work. Eli thought she had been drunken, because of the multitude of her words, and those uncouth gestures and motions of her face and body, which the vehemency of her passion, and her fervency in prayer, caused in her, as it doth frequently in others; and because she was but newly come from a feast, wherein the manner was to eat and drink liberally, (though not to excess,) which he knew very well, both from the general custom of that season, and from the time of the day.

14 And Eli said unto her, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee.

Come not before the Lord in thy drunkenness, but go and sleep it out, and repent of this thy sin.

15 And Hannah answered and said, No, my lord, I am a woman † of a sorrowful spirit: I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have † poured out my soul before the LORD.

I am a woman; in whom drunkenness is most abominable; so that the Romans punished it with death; therefore judge me not so severely. Of a sorrowful spirit; and therefore not likely to give up myself to drink and jollity, and far from that merry temper which drunkards have: I am drunk with affliction, not with wine, as is said, Isa. li. 21. I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, to wit, this day: see above, ver. 7, 8. Have poured out my soul; have been breathing forth the griefs, and perplexities, and desires of my soul. The like phrase is Job xxx. 16; Psal. lxii. 8; cxlii. 2.

16 Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of † Belial: for out of the abundance of my † complaint and grief have I spoken hitherto.

For a daughter of Belial; for such a wicked monster, as a drunken woman is. The oppression of my spirits hath forced me to speak, and that so liberally at this time, for the ease of my sinking heart.

17 Then Eli answered and said, † Go in peace: and † the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him.

Go in peace; I recall my censure, and give thee my blessing, and wish thee peace, i. e. a quiet and composed mind, free from whatsoever it is that grieves and oppresses thee; and withal, good success and prosperity in what thou desirest; for peace is a very comprehensive word among the Hebrews. Grant, or will grant; for it may be either a prayer or a prediction, which he might deliver, either from the consideration of God's known goodness and readiness to hear prayers; or he might be directed to say so by a special instinct of God's Spirit, which sometimes was given to the high priests, even when they were wicked men, as John xi. 51, and much more when they were holy men, as Eli was. And some add, that he was a prophet.

18 And she said, † Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight. So the woman † went her way, and did eat, and her countenance was no more sad.

Grace in thy sight; that favourable opinion, and good will, and gracious prayer, which thou hast expressed on my behalf, be pleased to continue towards me. Her countenance was no more sad; her heart being cheered by the priest's comfortable words, and especially by God's Spirit setting them home upon her, and assuring her that both his and her prayers should be heard, it quickly appeared in her countenance. Heb. her indignation, or vexation, (as the word face is sometimes understood, as Gen. xxxii. 20; Psal. xxi. 9; xxxiv. 16,) was no more, i. e. it vanished away.

19 ¶ And they rose up in the morning early, and worshipped before the LORD, and returned, and came to their house to Ramah: and Elkanah † knew Hannah † his wife; and † the LORD remembered her.

They rose up in the morning early; partly for their journey, and partly for prayer, as it follows, for which this was a very fit and usual time, Psal. v. 3; cxix. 147. Remembered her, i. e. manifested his remembrance of her by the effect.

20 Wherefore it came to pass, † when the time was come about after Hannah † had conceived, that she bare a son, and called his name † Samuel, saying, Because I have asked him of the LORD.

So the sense is, When the usual time from the conception to the birth was past, she brought forth her son. Heb. in or after the revolution, or expiration of some days, Hannah conceived, and in due time bare a son. So the meaning is, That although her husband knew her conjugally at his return, and God was mindful of her, and intended in his time to give her his blessing, yet she did not conceive at first, but after some days or time afterwards. And called, i. e. she called, not doubting of her husband's consent to the name. The names of children were given to them sometimes by the fathers, and sometimes by the mothers. See Gen. iv. 1, 26; v. 29; xxi. 3; xix. 37, 38, &c.

21 And the man Elkanah, and all his house, † went up to offer unto the LORD † the yearly sacrifice, and his vow.

All his house, i. e. his wife Peninnah, and his children, which are oftentimes called a man's house in Scripture, Hannah only and her child excepted, as it here follows. The yearly sacrifice; that solemn sacrifice which was offered up once every year; probably the paschal lamb, which is oft called a sacrifice, as Exod. xii. 27; xxxiv. 25. And his vow; by which it appears, though it was not expressed before, that he heard and consented to her vow, which was necessary to make it obligatory, Numb. xxx., and that he added a vow of his own, of some singular sacrifice to be offered, if God answered his prayers.

22 But Hannah went not up; for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will † bring him, that he may appear before the LORD, and there † abide † for ever.

Hannah went not up, to wit, at that sacred anniversary feast, to which she went up before, but now did not, because she could not with satisfaction to her mind and conscience appear before the Lord empty, or without paying her vow; nor bring her child thither to God, and then carry him away from God to her own house. Nor did she sin by not going up; for the women were not obliged to go up at the solemn feasts, but the men only, Exod. xxiii. 17. Until the child be weaned; not only from the breast and the milk, which was done within two or three years at most, but also from the mother's knee and care, and from childish food; till the child be something grown up, and fit to do some service in the tabernacle; for it seems, that as soon as he was brought up, he worshipped God, ver. 28, and presently after ministered to Eli, I Sam. ii. 11. And this may further appear from the very nature of the vow, which must needs design a service and an advantage to the tabernacle, and not a burden and encumbrance, as it would have been if a 23 And ^eElkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him; ^fonly the LORD establish his word. So the woman abode, and gave her son suck until she weaned him.

The Lord establish his word; either, first, The word of God made known to them by Eli, above, ver. 17, which being delivered by God's high priest, and that in answer to his and his wife's prayers, he took to be a kind of oracle sent from God. But that word was already fulfilled in the birth of a son. Or, secondly, Some other word or message from God to Elkanah or his wife concerning Samuel; for such revelations were frequent in those ages of the church, and were oft vouchsafed by God, concerning such children as were extraordinary persons, or in a special manner devoted to God; as concerning Isaac, Gen. xviii., and Samson, Judg. xiii. 3, 4, and John Baptist, Luke i. 13, 14, &c., and others. And so it might be here, though it were not mentioned before, there being many such things in Scripture omitted in their proper places, which afterwards are expressed or implied upon other occasions. Or rather, thirdly, It may be rendered his matter, or thing, i. e. the business concerning the child, that which thou hast promised or vowed concerning him, that he may grow up, and be accepted and employed by God in his service; and that he, when he is fully grown, may not break thy vow, but confirm it.

Three bullocks; either, first, One to be offered at that time; the other two presented to the priest, whether for his own use, or to be offered afterwards, as he saw fit. Or, secondly, One for a burnt-offering, the second for a sin-offering, the third for a peace-offering, of which they might all feast together; for all these sorts seem expedient for this work and time. One ephah of flour, for the meat-offerings belonging to the principal sacrifices, which to each bullock were three tenth deals, or three tenth parts of an ephah, as appears from Numb. xv. 9; xxviii. 12; and so nine homers, or nine parts of the ephah, were spent, and the tenth part was either a separate meat-offering, or given to the priest. A bottle of wine, for drink-offerings, according to the manner.

25 And they slew a bullock, and ⁱbrought the child to Eli.

A bullock; either, first, One of the three at the present, reserving the rest for the future. Or, secondly, The three bullocks mentioned ver. 24, to which the article here added, in the Hebrew, seems manifestly to relate; there being no one bullock there, singled out, to which it can belong. And so it is only an enallage of the singular number for the plural, which is frequent.

k Gen. 42. 15. 2 Kings 2. 4, 6.

26 And she said, Oh my lord, ^kas thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the LORD.

Oh my lord; a form of speech to engage favourable attention. As thy soul liveth; the usual form of an oath, as Gen. xlii. 15; 1 Sam. xvii. 55; xx. 3; as surely as thou livest: which asseverations seem necessary, because this was some years after it, and was quite forgotten by him.

l Matt. 7. 7. m ver. 11, 22.

n Or, returned of him, whom I have obtained by petition, to the LORD.

27 ^lFor this child I prayed; and the LORD hath given me my petition which I asked of him:

28 ^mTherefore also I have ⁿlent him to the LORD; as long as he liveth ⁿhe shall be lent to the LORD. And he ^oworship-ped the LORD there.

I have lent him to the Lord, or, given him, &c., i. e. do now give or offer him; for she did not lend him for a time, with a purpose or right to require him again. The words may be rendered thus, And I also asked him, or made myself to ask him, (a usual Hebraism,) for the Lord, i. e. I prayed for this child, not only for myself, and to take away my reproach, but especially that I might have a child to serve and devote to the Lord. And so the following words, as long as he liveth, are not to be joined with this foregoing clause, but with those which come next after them; and that whole clause may be thus rendered, as a consequent upon the former: And, or therefore all the days in which he is, or shall be, he is or shall be lent or given to the Lord; or, as one begged for the Lord, and for his service, and therefore justly given to him. He sha!' be lent, or rendered, or used as one given in my prayer; for this was the condition of my prayer, that he should be the Lord's. He worshipped; not Eli, who is not mentioned but ver. 25, and then only passively, not as speaking or doing any thing; nor Elkanah, of whom here is no mention; but young Samuel, who is the subject spoken of in this and the foregoing verse, and who was capable of worshipping God in some sort, at least with external adoration; of which see on ver. 22. And so the particle there is emphatical, signifying that hereby he entered himself into the worship and service of God in that place, to which he was devoted by his parents, and now did devote himself.

CHAP. II.

Hannah's song, 1—10. Samuel ministers before the Lord, 11. Eli's sons are wicked, 12—17. Hannah beareth more children, 20, 21. Eli reproves his sons, but mildly, 22—25. God by a prophet foretelleth the destruction of Eli's house, 27—36.

AND Hannah ^aprayed, and said, ^bMy heart rejoiceth in the LORD, ^cmine horn is exalted in the LORD; my mouth is enlarged over mine enemies; because I ^drejoice in thy salvation.

Hannah prayed, i. e. praised God; which is a part of prayer, Col. iv. 2; 1 Tim. ii. 1; so it is a synecdochical expression. My heart rejoiceth, or, leapeth for joy; for the words note not only inward joy, but also the outward demonstrations of it. In the Lord, as the author and the master of my joy, that he hath heard my prayer, and accepted my son for his service. Mine horn is exalted; my strength and glory (which are oft signified by a horn, as Psal. lxxxix. 17, 24; xcii. 10) are advanced and manifested to my vindication, and the confusion of mine enemies. My mouth is enlarged, i. e. opened wide, to pour forth abundant praises to God, and to give a full answer to all the reproaches of mine adversaries; whereas before it was shut through grief and confusion. Over mine enemies, i. e. more than theirs, or so as to get the victory over them, as she saith afterwards. Here she manifests her great prudence, and piety, and modesty, that she doth not name Peninnah, but only her enemies in the general. Because I rejoice in thy salvation; because the matter of my joy is no trivial or worldly thing, but that strange and glorious salvation or deliverance which thou hast given me from my own oppressing care and grief, and from the insolencies and reproaches of mine enemies, in giving me a son, and such a son as this, who shall be serviceable to God, and to his people, in helping them against their enemies, which she presaged, as may be guessed from ver. 10.

2 ^eThere is none holy as the LORD: ^ffor there is none beside thee: neither is there any rock like our God.

There is none holy as the Lord; none so perfectly, unchangeably, and constantly holy, as God hath showed himself to be in this act of grace to me, whereby he hath both checked the proud and mighty, and pleaded the cause of his afflicted servant that trusted in him, and also fulfilled e Ex. 15. 11. f Deut. 3. 24. & 32. 4. Ps. 86. 8. & 89. 6, 8.

g Deut. 4. 35. 2 Sam. 22. 32.

h Ex. 15. 11. i Deut. 3. 24. & 32. 4. Ps. 86. 8. & 89. 6, 8.

his promise in giving me a son, whom he hath sanctified by his grace to his service; all which are the proper effects of God's holiness. There is none beside thee; not only none is so holy as thou art, but in truth there is none holy (which word is easily understood out of the former clause) besides thee, to wit, entirely or independently, but only by participation from thee. Or, as none have any holiness like thine, so none have any being besides thee, unless by derivation from thee. Neither is there any rock like our God; thou only art a sure defence and refuge to all that flee to thee, and trust in thee, as I have found by my experience.

3 Talk no more so exceeding proudly; ^{g Ps. 94. 4.} let not ^{Mal. 3. 13.} ~~†~~ arrogance come out of your ^{Jude 15.} mouth: for the LORD is a God of knowledge, and by his actions are weighed. ^{† Heb. hard.}

Talk no more so exceeding proudly; thou Peninnah, boast no more of thy numerous offspring, and speak no more insolently and scornfully of me, as thou hast done. She speaks of her in the plural number, because she would not expose her name to censure, but only instruct and reprove her for her good. Arrogancy, Heb. hard speeches, as those are called, Jude 15, harsh, heavy, and not to be borne. Or, the old sayings; either the old proverbs concerning barren women, which thou appliedst to me; or the old reproaches, to which for a long time thou hast accustomed thyself. The Lord is a God of knowledge; he knoweth thy heart, and all that pride, and envy, and contempt of me which thy own conscience knows, and all thy perverse carriages towards me. By his actions are weighed, i. e. he pondereth or trieth all men's thoughts and actions, (for the Hebrew word signifies both,) as a just Judge, to give to every one according to their works; and therefore he hath pitied my oppressed innocency, and rebuked her arrogance. Or, by his counsels, or actions, or events are disposed or ordered, and not by ourselves; and therefore he brings many things to pass contrary to men's expectations, as now he hath done; he maketh one barren, and another fruitful, when and how it pleaseth him. In the Hebrew text it is lo the adverb; and so the words may be rendered thus, His actions are not, or cannot, be directed, or rectified, or corrected by any others; none can mend his work; he doth every thing best, and in the best season, as now he hath done: or weighed, or numbered; his ways are unsearchable. Or thus, Are not his works right and straight? who can blame his actions? So lo is for halo, as it is 2 Sam. xiii. 26; 2 Kings v. 26; Job ii. 10.

4 ^{h Ps. 37. 15,} The bows of the mighty men ^{17. & 76. 3.} are broken, and they that stumbled are girded with strength.

This notes either, 1. The strength of which they boasted. See Psal. xiv. 6; xlv. 9. Or, 2. Their malicious or mischievous designs. See Psal. vii. 12; xi. 2; xxxvii. 14. Or, 3. Their virulent tongues, which are compared to bows that shoot their arrows, even bitter words; as it is said Psal. lxiv. 3: compare Jer. ix. 3. Or, 4. Their procreating virtue, which may well be compared to a bow, both because it is called a man's strength, Gen. xlix. 3, and because children, which are the effects of it, and are as it were shot from that bow, are compared to arrows, Psal. cxvii. 4, 5. And this seems best to agree with the following verse. They that stumbled; or, were weak, or feeble, in body and spirit, that had no strength to conceive, which was once Sarah's case, Heb. xi. 11; or to bring forth, which was Israel's condition under Hezekiah, 2 Kings xix. 3. Are girt with strength; are enabled both to conceive and to bring forth, as the church was, Isa. lxvi. 9.

5 ^{i Ps. 34. 10,} They that were full have hired out ^{Luke 1. 53.} themselves for bread; and they that were hungry ceased: so that ^{k Ps. 113. 9.} the barren hath born seven; and ^{l Is. 54. 1,} she that hath many ^{Jer. 15. 9.} children is waxed feeble.

Have hired themselves out for bread, through extreme necessity, into which they are fallen from their greatest plenty. It is the same thing which is expressed both in divers metaphors in the foregoing and following verses, and properly in the latter branch of this verse. Ceased, i. e. ceased to be such, to wit, hungry; the hungry failed; there was none of them hungry or indigent. Seven, i. e. many, as seven is oft used. She speaks in the prophetic style, the past time for the future; for though she had actually born but one, yet she had a confident persuasion that she should have more, which was grounded either upon some particular assurance from God, or rather upon the prayer or prediction of Eli; which, though it be mentioned after this song, ver. 20, yet in all probability was spoken before it, even upon the parents' presentation of the child to Eli, chap. i. 25, it not being likely that she would sing this song in Eli's presence, or before he had given his answer to her speech delivered chap. i. 26—28, there being nothing more frequent than such transpositions in Scripture. And the experience she had of the strange and speedy accomplishment of his former prophecy made her confidently expect the same issue from the latter. She that hath many children, i. e. Peninnah. Is waxed feeble; either because she was now past child-bearing, and impotent for procreation; or because divers of her children, which were her strength and her glory, were dead, as the Hebrew doctors relate.

6 ^{m Deut. 32,} The LORD killeth, and maketh alive: ^{38. Job 5. 18,} he bringeth down to the grave, and bringeth up. ^{Hos. 6. 1,} ^{Tob. 13. 2,} ^{Wisd. 16. 13.}

Killeth, and maketh alive; either, 1. Diverse persons; he killeth one, and maketh another alive. Or, 2. The same person whom he first killeth, or bringeth very nigh unto death, he afterwards raiseth to life. Me, who was almost overwhelmed and consumed with grief, he hath revived. The name of death, both in sacred Scripture and profane writers, is oft given to great calamities; as Isa. xxvi. 19; Ezek. xxxvii. 11; Rom. viii. 36.

7 The LORD ^{n Job 1. 21,} maketh poor, and maketh rich: ^{o Ps. 75. 7.} he bringeth low, and lifteth up.

8 ^{p Ps. 113. 7,} He raiseth up the poor out of the ^{8. Dan. 4. 17,} dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the ^{Luke 1. 52,} dunghill, ^{q Job 36. 7.} to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory: ^{r Job 38. 4,} for the pillars of the earth ^{5. Ps. 24,} are the LORD's, ^{2. & 102. 25,} and he hath set the world upon them. ^{& 104. 5,} ^{Heb. 1. 3.}

Out of the dust, i. e. out of their low and miserable condition, as this phrase is used, 1 Kings xvi. 2; Psal. cxiii. 7. Compare Job xvi. 15; Psal. xxii. 15. From the dunghill; from the most sordid place and mean estate. Compare 1 Kings xvi. 2; Job xxxvi. 11; Psal. vii. 5. Dunghill; which the poor are said to embrace, Lam. iv. 5. To make them inherit; not only possess themselves, but transmit them to their posterity, as hath oft happened in the world; or, possess. The throne of glory, i. e. a glorious throne or kingdom. The pillars; either, 1. The foundations of the earth, which God created and upholds, and where-with he sustains the earth and all its inhabitants, as a house is supported with pillars; and therefore it is not strange if he disposeth of persons and things therein as he pleaseth. Or, 2. The princes or governors of the earth, which are called the corners, or corner-stones, of a land or people, Judg. xx. 2; 1 Sam. xiv. 38; Zeph. iii. 6, and are fitly called pillars, because they uphold the world, and keep it from sinking into confusion. See Psal. lxxiv. 2; Jer. i. 18; Rev. iii. 12. And these are here said to be the Lord's, by creation and constitution, because he advanceth them to their state, and preserves them in it, Prov. viii. 15, 16, and puts the world, or the kingdoms of the world, upon them, as burdens upon their shoulders: see Isa. ix. 6.

9 ^{s Ps. 91. 11,} He will keep the feet of his saints, ^{& 121. 3.} and the wicked shall be silent in darkness; for by strength shall no man prevail.

The feet, i. e. the steps or paths, their counsels and actions, he will keep, i. e. both uphold, that they may not fall, at least, into mischief or utter ruin; and direct and preserve from wandering, and from those fatal mistakes and errors that wicked men daily run into. Shall be silent; shall be put to silence: they who used to open their mouths wide against heaven, and against the saints, shall be so confounded with the unexpected disappointment of all their hopes, and with God's glorious appearance and operations for his people, that they shall have their mouths quite stopped, and sit down in silent amazement and consternation: see Isa. xv. 1; Jer. viii. 14; xlvii. 5, 6. In darkness; both inward, in their own minds, which are wholly in the dark, perplexed by their own choice and counsels, not knowing what to say or do; and outward, in a state of deepest distress and misery. By strength shall no man prevail, to wit, against God, or against his saints, as the wicked were confident they should do, because of their great power, and wealth, and numbers; whereas God's people were mean, and impotent, and helpless. And particularly, Peninnah shall not prevail against me by that strength which she hath, or thinks to have, from her numerous offspring. But it is to be observed, that although Hannah takes the rise of this song from her own condition, yet she extends her thoughts and words further, even to the usual methods of God's providence in the government of the world.

10 The adversaries of the LORD shall be broken to pieces; *out of heaven shall he thunder upon them: *the LORD shall judge the ends of the earth; and he shall give strength unto his king, and [†]exalt the horn of his anointed.

The adversaries of the Lord; and of his people; especially the Philistines, who at this time were the chief oppressors of Israel. Shall be broken to pieces: these and the following words are prophetic of what God was about to do: they who are now our lords, shall be subdued. Out of heaven, i. e. out of the clouds or air, which is oft called heaven. Shall he thunder upon them; as was done, 1 Sam. vii. 10. Shall judge, i. e. shall condemn and punish, as that verb by a synecdoche is oft used. Of the earth, or, of the land, to wit, the Philistines who dwell in the utmost borders of Canaan, even upon the sea-coast. Unto his king; either, 1. Unto the judge or ruler whom he shall set up for the protection and deliverance of his people; the word king being elsewhere so taken. Or, 2. The king properly so called; and so she prophesieth, that Israel should have a king, and that there should be a great difference between king and king; between the people's king, Saul, whom they would obstinately and passionately desire, by whom therefore they should have but little relief; and God's king, David, whom God would choose as a man after his own heart, and whom he would strengthen and assist so, as by his hands to break all his enemies to pieces. Exalt the horn, i. e. increase or advance the strength. Of his anointed, i. e. of his king. The same thing repeated in other words, although it may have a mystical sense and respect to Christ, the singular anointed one of God, and the special King of his people, whom all their other kings did typify and represent, and from whom they received authority and power.

11 And Elkanah went to Ramah to his house. *And the child did minister unto the LORD before Eli the priest.

In some way agreeable to his tender years, as in singing, or playing upon instruments of music, as they used then to do in God's service; or lighting the lamps, or some other way. For I suppose Samuel was not brought to the tabernacle in such tender years as some think; of which see on 1 Sam. i. 22. Before Eli the priest, i. e. under the inspection and by the direction and instruction of Eli.

12 ¶ Now the sons of Eli were *sons of Belial; [†]they knew not the LORD.

To wit, practically, i. e. they did not acknowledge, honour, regard, love, or serve God; for so words of knowledge are commonly used in Scripture: see Rom. i. 28; 1 Cor. xv. 34; Tit. i. 16.

13 And the priest's custom with the people was, that, when any man offered sacrifice, the priest's servant came, while the flesh was in seething, with a fleshhook of three teeth in his hand;

Offered, i. e. presented it to the Lord, to be offered by the priest. While the flesh was in seething; for as the Lord's part of the peace-offerings was burnt upon the altar, so the priest's and offerer's parts were to be sodden.

14 And he struck it into ^cthe pan, or ^dkettle, or ^ecaldron, or ^fpot; all that the fleshhook brought up the priest took for himself. So they did in Shiloh unto all the Israelites that came thither.

All that the flesh-hook brought up the priest took for himself; not contented with the breast and shoulder which were allotted them by God, Exod. xxix. 27, 28; Lev. vii. 31, they took also part of the offerer's share; and besides, they snatched their part before^e it was heaved and waved, contrary to Lev. vii. 34.

15 Also before they ^dburnt the fat, the priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed, Give flesh to roast for the priest; for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.

The fat, and the other parts to be burnt with it. See Lev. iii. 3, 4, 9; vii. 31. So this was an additional injury; for lest the fork should mistake and injure them, they took such parts as they best liked whilst it was raw, when it might be better discerned.

16 And if any man said unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat [†]presently, and then take as much as thy soul desireth; then he would answer him, Nay; but thou shalt give it me now: and if not, I will take it by force.

Take as much as thy soul desireth; we are content to relinquish our parts to thee, only let not God be wronged of his due.

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was very great ^ebefore the LORD: for men ^fabhorred the offering of the LORD.

The sin of the young men was very great; because they violently took away both man's and God's dues, and this before their time, and that with manifest contempt of God and men; and all this merely for the gratifying of their sensual appetite. Before the Lord, i. e. even in the place of God's special presence, where he saw and observed all their miscarriages; which argues the height of impiety and imprudence. Men abhorred the offering of the Lord; they neglected and abhorred the practice of carrying up sacrifices to be offered, which they knew would be so grossly abused; and which, as they might think, would be rejected and abhorred by God himself; and therefore they would not contribute to the priests' sin, and the corruption of God's worship, but judged it better to neglect the thing, than to expose it to the priests' depravation; wherein yet they erred, as we see, ver. 21.

18 ¶ But Samuel ministered before the LORD, being a child, ^hgirded with a linen ephod.

Ministered, i. e. performed his ministrations carefully and faithfully, not corrupting nor abusing it, as Eli's sons did. Before the Lord; in God's tabernacle; or as in God's presence, sincerely and regularly, with God's approbation. Compare Gen. xvii. 1; 2 Chron. xxvi. 4. A linen ephod; a garment used in God's service, and allowed not only to the inferior priests and Levites, but also to eminent persons of the people, as 2 Sam. vi. 14, and therefore to Samuel, who, though no Levite, was a Nazarite, and that from his birth.

19 Moreover his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she ⁱcame up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

A little coat, suitable to his age and stature, to be worn ordinarily; for coats were their usual garments. See Gen. iii. 21; xxxvii. 3; 2 Sam. xv. 32; Cant. v. 3; Dan. iii. 21; Luke iii. 11; ix. 3. Knowing that he could not yet do much service, she would not have him too burdensome to the tabernacle, and therefore she yearly provided him with 18 ¶ And Eli ^k blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, The LORD give thee seed of this woman for the || loan which is lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home.

^{||} Or, petition which she asked, &c. 1 ch. 1. 28.

As their superior, and God's high priest, Eli blessed them in God's name, and they received his blessing by faith, which made it effectual, ver. 21. Seed, i. e. a child, or rather children, as the event showed. For the loan which is lent to the Lord, or, for the petition, i. e. the thing desired, to wit, the child; which she, thy wife, asked of the Lord; or, for the Lord, as chap. i. 28, to whom accordingly she hath given them. And therefore as she asked him not so much for herself, for she seldom sees him, as for the Lord, to whose service she hath wholly devoted him; so now I pray that God would give you other children, for both your comfort and enjoyment.

21 And the LORD ^m visited Hannah, so that she conceived, and bare three sons and two daughters. And the child Samuel ⁿ grew before the LORD.

Visited, to wit, in mercy, and with his blessing, as that word is used, Gen. xxi. 1; Exod. xiii. 19; Jer. xv. 15; not in anger, as it is taken Exod. xxxii. 34; Lev. xxvi. 16. Grew; not only in age and stature, but especially in wisdom and goodness, as Luke i. 15. Or, was magnified; or grew great, famous and acceptable, as ver. 26. Before the Lord; not only before men, who might be deceived, but in the presence and judgment of the all-seeing God.

22 ¶ Now Eli was very old, and heard all that his sons did unto all Israel; and how they lay with ^o the women that [†] assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

^o See Exod. 38. 8. [†] Heb. assembled by troops.

Eli was very old; and therefore unfit either to manage his office himself, or to make a diligent inspection into the carriage of his sons in holy administrations; which gave them opportunity for their wickedness. All that his sons did unto all Israel; whom they injured in their offerings, and alienated from the service of God. Assembled, or warred; which expression is used of them, either because they came to the service and worship of God in the tabernacle, which is often called a wayfare; or because they came in considerable numbers, and due order, like to an army. At the door; the place where all the people, both men and women, waited when they came up to the service of God, 1 Sam. i. 9, 12; Luke i. 10, because they could not have admittance into the tabernacle, and because the altar on which their sacrifices were offered was by the door. Hence it seems probable that these women were not such as devoted themselves to the service of God and of his tabernacle, either by fasting and prayer, &c., or by sewing, spinning, &c., which, if then there were any such, had their stations not at the door, but in divers places allotted to them round about the tabernacle; but of such as came up to worship God at his tabernacle; as women oftentimes did, with their husbands, as here Hannah did, and the blessed Virgin Mary, Luke ii. 41, or with their parents. And this exposition may receive strength from Exod. xxxviii. 8, where the very same phrase is used, and that when the great tabernacle was not yet built; and so there was no occasion for any women to come to the other less tabernacle then used, save only to pray or offer sacrifices,

23 And he said unto them, Why do ye such things? for || I hear of your evil dealings by all this people.

Such things, as those above mentioned, ver. 13, 22. Eli's sin in this matter was not only that he reproved them too gently, and generally, and sparingly; but especially that he contented himself with a verbal rebuke, and did not restrain them, as is said chap. iii. 13, and inflict those punishments upon them, of putting them out of their priest's office, and cutting them off from God's people; which such high crimes deserved by God's law, and which he as judge and high priest ought to have done, without all respect of persons. By all this people, that dwell here, or come hither to worship.

24 Nay, my sons; for it is no good report that I hear: ye make the LORD's people || to transgress.

^{||} Or, to cry out.

Words too mild for such diabolical actions. Ye make the Lord's people to transgress; either, 1. The women that by your instigation were drawn to folly. Or, 2. Others who are easily brought to follow your pernicious example. Or, 3. Other persons of pious and honest minds, whom therefore he calls the Lord's people by way of distinction from the children of Belial, who were so highly offended with the great dishonour done to God and to his worship, and with the horrible wickedness of the priests, that upon that occasion they were hurried into the other extreme, and lived in the neglect and contempt of their own indispensable duty of offering sacrifices, because they came through the priests' hands.

25 If one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but if a man ^p sin against the LORD, who shall intreat for him? Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto the voice of their father, ^q because the LORD would slay them.

^p Num. 16. 30.

^q Josh. 11. 20. Prov. 15. 10.

If one man sin against another, by doing any injury. The judge shall judge him; the magistrate shall by his sentence end the difference, and both parties shall acquiesce in his determination, and so the breach shall be made up. The sense is, if only man be wronged, man can right it, and reconcile the persons. If a man sin against the Lord, to wit, in such manner as you have done, directly and immediately, in the matters of his worship and service, wilfully and presumptuously. Who shall entreat for him? the offence is of so high a nature, that few or none will dare to intercede for him, but will leave him to the just judgment of God. He speaks after the manner of men, who do oft intercede with the prince for such as have injured any private person; but will not presume to do so when the injury is committed against his own person. The words are, and may be thus rendered, Who shall judge for him? Who shall interpose himself as umpire, or arbitrator, between God and him? Who shall compound that difference? None can or dare do it, and therefore he must be left to the dreadful, but righteous judgment of God; which is your case and misery. Because the Lord would slay them, i. e. because God hath determined to destroy them for their many and great sins; and therefore would not and did not give them grace to hearken to Eli's counsel, and to repent of their wickedness, but hardened their hearts to their destruction.

26 And the child Samuel ^r grew on, and was ^s in favour both with the LORD, and also with men.

^r ver. 21. ^s Prov. 3. 4. Luke 2. 52. Acts 2. 47. Rom. 14. 18.

He grew better in bad times, which is remembered to his commendation.

27 ¶ And there came a man of God unto Eli, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, "Did I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's house?"

^t 1 Kings 13. 1.

^u Ex. 4. 14, 27.

A man of God, i. e. a prophet or preacher sent from God. See 1 Tim. vi. 11; 2 Tim. iii. 17; 2 Pet. i. 21. Who this was is not revealed by God, and therefore it is vain to inquire, and impossible to determine. Did I plainly appear? did I indeed show such a favour, and appear so evidently and gloriously to thee, and for thee, and is this thy requital? Unto the house of thy father, i. e. unto Aaron the chief of thy father's house. When they were in Egypt: see Exod. iv. 27. Pharaoh's house, i. e. either, 1. In Pharaoh's land; the whole kingdom being, as it were, one great family, whereof Pharaoh was the master. Or, 2. In Pharaoh's court, where Aaron might probably be at the time of this revelation, either to answer to some accusation against him or his brethren, or to beg some relaxation of the rigour, or for some other occasion.

Did I choose him, to wit, Aaron thy father? whereby he shows what he meant by his father's house. An ephod; that golden ephod which was peculiar to the high priest. All the offerings made by fire, i. e. all the priest's part of the offerings. He only had the office, and he had the whole benefit.

29 Wherefore *kick ye at my sacrifice and at mine offering, which I have commanded in my *habitation; and honour-est thy sons above me, to make yourselves fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of Israel my people?

Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice; using them irreverently, contemptuously, and profanely; both by abusing them to your own luxury, and by causing the people to abhor and neglect them? He chargeth Eli with his sons' faults. Honour-est thy sons above me; permitting them to dishonour and injure me, by taking my part to themselves; choosing rather to offend me by thy connivance at their sin, than to displease them by severe rebukes, and effectual restraints, and just punishments; and so prefer their will, and pleasure, and honour, before mine. To make yourselves fat; to pamper yourselves. This you did not out of any necessity, but out of mere luxury. The chiefest of all the offerings; not contented with those parts which I had allotted you, you invaded those choice parts which I reserved for myself.

30 Wherefore the LORD God of Israel saith, ^bI said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father, should walk before me for ever: but now the LORD saith, ^cBe it far from me; for them that honour me ^dI will honour, and ^ethey that despise me shall be lightly esteemed.

I said indeed. Quest. Where or when did God say this? Answ. Either, 1. When he made that promise for the perpetuation of the priesthood in Aaron's family, Exod. xxviii. 43; xxix. 9. Object. If Eli and all his family had been cut off, yet that promise had been made good in Eleazar's family: how then was that promise recalled by this sentence against Eli? Answ. It was recalled and made void, though not absolutely and universally to all Aaron's family, yet respectively to Eli and his family, which were wholly excluded from the benefit of it, wherein otherwise they should have shared; even as God's keeping of the Israelites out of Canaan and in the wilderness for forty years, and destroying them there, is called his breach of promise, Numb. xiv. 34, although the promise of Canaan was not simply made void to all the Israelites, but only to that evil generation of them; or as God's covenant with David, and with his seed, of which God saith that it should stand fast, Psal. lxxxix. 28, and that he would not break nor alter it, ver. 34, yet is said to be made void, ver. 39, to wit, in regard of some particular branches or members of that family. Or, 2. To Eli himself, or to his father, when the priesthood was translated from Eleazar's to Ithamar's family, for some cause not mentioned in Scripture, but most probably for some great miscarriage of some of them. If it be said that there is no such promise recorded in Scripture, it may be so replied, That there are many sayings and doings noted in Holy Scripture which were not spoken of in their proper times and places, as Gen. xxiv. 51; xlii. 21; Hos. xii. 4; Luke xi. 49; Acts xx. 25. So the sense of the place may be this, That promise and privilege of the perpetuation of the priesthood in Phinehas and his family, made to them Numb. xxv. 12, 13, namely, upon condition of his and their faithfulness in their office, which is plainly understood, I now take away from that family for their wickedness, and

I transfer it to thee and thine, and will fix it there upon the same condition. Should walk before me, i. e. minister unto me as high priest. Walking is oft put for discharging one's office; before me may signify that he was the high priest, whose sole prerogative it was to minister before God, or before the ark, in the most holy place. For ever; as long as the Mosaic law and worship lasted, as that phrase is oft used. Be it far from me, to wit, to fulfil my promise, which I repent of, and hereby retract. Them that honour me; that worship and serve me with reverence and godly fear, and according to my will, which I esteem as an honour done to me. I will honour; I will advance them to honour, and maintain them in it. They that despise me; not formally and directly; for so Eli's sons did not despise God; but indirectly and by consequence, by presumptuous disobedience of my commands; by defiling and disgracing my worship and ordinances, either by transgressing the rules I have given them therein, or by their ungodly and shameful conversation; and by making my service contemptible and abominable to others through their scandals: all which are manifest arguments of contempt of God, and are so called, as Numb. xi. 20; 1 Sam. xii. 9, 10; Mal. i. 8, and all which were eminently found in Eli's sons. Shall be lightly esteemed, both by God and men.

31 Behold, the days come, that I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house.

I will cut off thine arm, i. e. I will take away thy strength, which is oft signified by the arm, as Job xxii. 8; Psal. xxxvii. 17, or all that in which thou placest thy confidence and security; either, 1. The ark, which is called God's strength, Psal. lxxviii. 61, and was Eli's strength, who therefore was not able to bear the very tidings of the loss of it, chap. iv. 18. Or, 2. His priestly dignity or employment, whence he had all his honour and substance. Or rather, 3. His children, to whom the words following here, and in the succeeding verses, seem to confine it, who are the strength of parents: see Gen. xlix. 3; Deut. xxi. 17; Psal. cxxvii. 4, 5. The arm of thy father's house, i. e. thy children's children, and all thy family; which was in great measure accomplished, 1 Sam. xxii. 16, &c. There shall not be an old man in thine house; they shall generally be cut off by an untimely death before they be old.

32 And thou shalt see || an enemy in my habitation, in all the wealth which God shall give Israel: and there shall not be an old man in thine house for ever.

So the sense is, Thou shalt see, not in thy person, but in thy posterity, (it being most frequent in Scripture to attribute that to parents which properly belongs to their posterity only; as Gen. xvii. 8; xxvii. 29, 40), an enemy, i. e. thy competitor, or him who shall possess that place of high trust and honour which now thou enjoyest, (such persons being through man's corrupt nature esteemed as a man's worst enemy,) in my habitation, i. e. in the sanctuary. And then he adds by way of aggravation, that this sad accident should happen in all the wealth which God shall give Israel, i. e. in a time when God should eminently bless Israel, and make good all his promises to them, which was in Solomon's days, when Abiathar of Eli's race was put out of the high priesthood, and Zadok was put in his place, 1 Kings ii. 27, 35, when the priesthood was most glorious, and most profitable, and comfortable, and therefore the loss of it more deplorable. But the words may be otherwise rendered, as is noted in the margin of our English Bibles: Thou shalt see, to wit, in thy own person, the affliction, or oppression, or calamity of my habitation, i. e. either of the land of Israel, wherein I dwell; or of the sanctuary, called the habitation by way of eminency, whose greatest glory the ark was, 1 Sam. iv. 21, 22, and consequently, whose greatest calamity the loss of the ark was; for, or instead of all that good wherewith God would have blessed Israel, or was about to bless Israel; having raised up a young prophet, Samuel, and thereby given good grounds of hope that he intended to bless Israel, if thou and thy sons had not hindered it by your sins, which God was resolved severely to punish. So this clause of the threatening concerns Eli's person, as the following concerns his posterity. And this best agrees with the most proper and usual signification of that phrase, Thou shalt see. For ever, i. e. as long as the priesthood continues in thy family, or as long as the Levitical priesthood lasts.

33 And the man of thine, whom I shall not cut off from mine altar, shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart: and all the increase of thine house shall die † in the flower of their age.

+ Heb. men.

The man of thine, i. e. those of thy posterity. From mine altar, i. e. from attendance upon mine altar; whom I shall not destroy, but suffer to live, and wait at the altar. Shall be to consume thine eyes, and to grieve thine heart; shall be so forlorn and miserable, that if thou wast alive to see it, it would grieve thee at the very heart, and thou wouldst consume thine eyes with weeping for their calamities. So the phrase is like that of Rachel weeping for her children, Jer. xxxi. 15, which were slain long after her death. The increase of thine house, i. e. thy children. In the flower of their age; about the thirtieth year of their age, when they were to be admitted to the plenary administration of their office, Numb. iv. 3, then they shall die.

35 And I will raise me up a faithful priest, that shall do according to that which is in mine heart and in my mind: and I will build him a sure house; and he shall walk before mine anointed for ever.

A faithful priest, to wit, of another line, as is necessarily implied by the total removal of that office from Eli's line, before threatened. The person designed is Zadok, one eminent for his faithfulness to God and to the king, who, when Abiathar, the last of Eli's line, was deposed by Solomon, was made high priest in his stead, 1 Kings ii. 27 35; 1 Chron. xxix. 22. That shall do according to that which is in mine heart; and shall not dishonour or disobey me to gratify his sons, as thou hast done. I will build him a sure house, i. e. give him a numerous posterity, as that phrase is used, Exod. i. 21; 2 Sam. vii. 11; 1 Kings xi. 38, and confirm that sure covenant of an everlasting priesthood made to Phinehas, of Eleazar's line, Numb. xxv. 13, and interrupted for a little while by Eli, and his, of the line of Ithamar, unto him and his children for ever. And this was manifestly verified until the Babylonish captivity, Ezek. xliv. 15; and there is no reason to doubt of its continuance in the same line till Christ came. He shall walk, i. e. minister as high priest. Before mine anointed; either, first, Before king Solomon, who was anointed king, 1 Kings i. 39, and before the succeeding kings, who are commonly called anointed, or the Lord's anointed, as 1 Sam. xii. 3, 5; xxiv. 6, 10; Psal. lxxxix. 38, 51; Lam. iv. 20. Or rather, secondly, Before Jesus Christ; first, Because this title of Anointed, or Christ, or Messias, (both which words signify only the Anointed,) is most frequently and eminently ascribed to Christ, both in the Old and New Testament, and therefore it is most reasonable to understand it of him, when there is nothing in the text or context which determines it to any other. Secondly, Christ is the main scope and design, not only of the New, but of the Old Testament, which in all its types and ceremonies represented Christ; and particularly, the high priest was an eminent type of Christ, and did represent his person, and act in his name and stead, and did mediate what John Baptist did immediately, go before the face of the Lord Christ; and when Christ did come, that office and officer was to cease. Thirdly, The high priest is seldom or never said to walk or minister before the kings of Israel or Judah, but constantly before the Lord, and consequently before Christ, who as he was God blessed for ever, Rom. ix. 5, was present with, and the Builder and Governor of, the ancient church of Israel, as is manifest from Acts vii. 35; 1 Cor. x. 4; Heb. iii. 3—6, and many other places; and their temple is particularly called his temple, Mal. iii. 1, because all the temple worship was performed in his presence, and had a special respect unto him, and therefore the high priest is most properly said to walk before him.

36 And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left in thine house shall come and crouch to him for a piece of silver and a morsel of bread, and shall say, † Put me, I pray thee, into one of the priests' offices, that I may eat a piece of bread.

n 1 Kings 2. 27.

+ Heb. Join. Or, somewhat about the priesthood.

Crouch to him, in way of humble supplication. See 1 Kings ii. 26; A morsel of bread; whereas before they were so nice and delicate, that my liberal allowance could not satisfy them, but they must have their meat raw and fat, &c., above, ver. 13—16; so the punishment is suited to the nature of their sin. Into one of the priests' offices; into the meanest office belonging to it. See Ezek. xliv. 10, 11, &c. Quest. How could they be reduced to so great straits, seeing, though they lost the high priesthood, they still were inferior priests, and had a right to those plentiful provisions which belonged to that order? Answ. First, They might be degraded, not only from the office of the high priest, but also from that of the inferior priests, and consequently might forfeit and lose all the privileges belonging to their office. Secondly, This might be from the tyranny and violence of some of the succeeding priests of Eleazar's line towards that other line, which had long stood in competition with them, and had for a season got away the priesthood from them; for this text only relates the matter of fact, but doth not express an approbation of it.

CHAP. III.

The Lord calleth Samuel three times; he knows not God's voice, but thinks it to be Eli who calls him; runs to him, who instructs him, 1—9. At the fourth call he answers, 10. God acquainteth Samuel with the destruction of Eli's house, 11—14. Samuel in the morning discovers it to Eli, at his request: Eli's submission, 15—18. All Israel acknowledged Samuel for a prophet, 19—21.

AND the child Samuel ministered unto the LORD before Eli. And the word of the LORD was precious in those days; there was no open vision.

a ch. 2. 11.

b Ps. 74. 9. Amos 8. 11. See ver. 21.

Before Eli, i. e. under his inspection and direction, which, being so young, he needed. The word of the Lord, to wit, the word of prophecy, or the revelation of God's will to and by the prophets. Was precious, i. e. rare or scarce, such things being most precious in men's esteem, whereas common things are generally despised. There was no open vision; God did not impart his mind by way of vision or revelation openly, or to any public person, to whom others might resort for satisfaction, though he might or did privately reveal himself to some pious persons for their particular direction. This is here premised as a reason why Samuel understood not, when God called him once or twice.

2 And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see;

cir. 1141. e Gen. 27. 1. & 48. 10. ch. 2. 22. & 4. 15.

In his place; in the court of the tabernacle. He could not see, to wit, clearly and distinctly. This is added as an evidence of his old age, partly to show God's contempt of him, notwithstanding his venerable age, and his preferring the child Samuel before him in this vision; and partly as the reason why Samuel so readily ran to him upon the first call, because his great age made him more to need his servants' help.

3 And ere the lamp of God went out in the temple of the LORD, where the d Ex. 27. 21. Lev. 24. 3. 2 Chr. 13. 11. e ch. 1. 9.

ark of God was, and Samuel was laid down to sleep :

Ere the lamp of God went out; before the lights of the golden candlestick were put out, i. e. in the night season, or before the morning, when they were put out, as they were lighted in the evening, Exod. xxvii. 21; Lev. xxiv. 3; 2 Chron. xiii. 11. In the temple, i. e. in the tabernacle, which is sometimes called the temple, as being of the same use and significance. Samuel was laid down to sleep; not that this happened when he first lay down, but whilst he was lying there.

4 That the LORD called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I.

5 And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down.

He ran; showing his great faithfulness and diligence in the service, either of the Lord, or of his master Eli.

6 And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again.

7 Now Samuel did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

Either, first, He was not acquainted with God in that extraordinary or prophetic way. Or rather, secondly, He did not yet understand, any more than before, that it was not Eli, but God, who spake to him. And this ignorance of Samuel's served God's design, that his simplicity might give Eli the better assurance of the truth of God's call and message to Samuel.

8 And the LORD called Samuel again the third time. And he arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child.

He arose and went to Eli; he persists in the same readiness to obey and serve him, and was not discouraged or driven from his duty by his double mistake and disappointment. Eli perceived, by the consideration of Samuel's piety, of the sanctity of the place adjoining, from whence God had oft-times spoken, and of the solitude of the place, where there was no human person besides himself who could or would have called Samuel in that manner.

9 Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

Thy servant heareth, i. e. I am ready to hear what thou speakest, and to do what thou requirest.

10 And the LORD came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.

The Lord came; before, he spake to him at a distance, even from the holy oracle between the cherubims; but now, to prevent all further mistakes, the voice came near to him, as if the person speaking had been present with him. And stood; before, the voice passed by him, now the speaker fixeth his abode with him for a time, till he had uttered his whole mind to him. As at other times; as he had done before. Samuel, Samuel; his name is here doubled, to engage him to the more speedy and diligent attention.

11 ¶ And the LORD said to Samuel, Behold, I will do a thing in Israel, ^g at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle.

I will do a thing: those things which are related in the next chapter, which though done by the Philistines, God here ascribes to himself, because he was the first and chief cause of it, by withdrawing his helping hand from Israel, and by delivering the ark, and Eli's two sons, and the rest of people, into his and their enemies' hands. Both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle; which will be so terrible, that not only those that feel it shall groan under it, but those that only hear the report of it shall be struck with such amazement and horror, which will make their heads and hearts ache. A metaphor from him, who being surprised with some great and hideous noise, such as thunder or great guns, his head is much affected with it, and the sound or tingling of it abides in his ears a good while after it. This phrase is used also 2 Kings xxi. 12; Jer. xix. 3.

12 In that day I will perform against

Eli ^h all things which I have spoken concerning his house: † when I begin, I will also make an end.

In that day; in that time which I have appointed for this work, which was about twenty or thirty years after this threatening. So long space of repentance God allows to this wicked generation to make their peace with God, and prevent the execution, as others did in like cases. All things which I have spoken, by that prophet, chap. ii. 27. When I begin, I will also make an end; though this vengeance may and shall be delayed for a season, to manifest my patience, and incite them to repentance; yet when once I begin to inflict, I shall certainly go on with it, and not desist till I have made a full end.

13 ¶ For I have told him that I will judge his house for ever for the iniquity which he knoweth; because ^l his sons made themselves † vile, and he †^m restrained them not.

I will judge, i. e. condemn and punish or destroy, as the word judge is oft used, as Gen. xv. 14; John iii. 18; xvi. 11. His house; his children and posterity, as is manifest by the story; as the word house is frequently taken, as 2 Sam. vii. 11; 1 Kings xxi. 29. So the house of Judah, of Aaron, of David, are oft taken for their posterity. And to build a house, in Scripture use, is to increase their posterity, as Exod. i. 21; Deut. xxv. 9; Ruth iv. 11. Compare Gen. xvi. 2; xxx. 3. For ever; till they be utterly rooted out; or for a long time, as that phrase is oft used. Which he knoweth; either by the information of the prophet, chap. ii. 27, &c., or by his own guilty and self-accusing conscience. But these and the foregoing and following words may well be and are rendered thus; for this iniquity, because he knew (both by common fame, and by his own observation) that his sons, &c. He cannot pretend ignorance, or want of proof of their wickedness, which aggravates his sin. Vile; not only hateful to God, but contemptible to all the people, whereby they also brought their sacred office and God's holy ordinances into contempt. Heb. cursed themselves, or made themselves execrable or accursed, both to God and men; by their lewd and cursed practices they put themselves under the curse of God, by such a gross violation of God's commands: compare Josh. vi. 18; vii. 12, 13. This expression may be used by way of reflection upon their father, because he did not denounce the curse of God against them, nor put them out of the priesthood, as accursed persons, although they were so vile, that they had prevented their father's censure, and meritoriously cast themselves out, and cut themselves off from the priesthood and congregation of the Lord, which their father should have done judicially. He restrained them not; he contented himself with a cold and gentle reproof, and did not severely rebuke, and punish, and effectually restrain them from their abominable courses, nor use that authority which God had given him, as a father, as a high priest, and as a judge, or chief magistrate, against them, as by the law of God he was obliged to do.

14 And therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli, that the iniquity of Eli's house ⁿ shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever.

I have sworn; which might be done before, though it be mentioned here only. Or, I do swear; the past tense being commonly put for the present in the Hebrew tongue. Unto the house, or, concerning, as the prefix lamed is oft used, as Exod. xiv. 3; xviii. 7; 2 Sam. xi. 7; Psal. xci. 11, compared with Matt. iv. 6. Shall not be purged with sacrifice, i. e. the punishment threatened against Eli and his family shall not be prevented or hindered by all their sacrifices, as they fondly imagine, but shall infallibly be executed.

15 ¶ And Samuel lay until the morning, and opened the doors of the house of the LORD. And Samuel feared to shew Eli the vision.

Opened the doors of the house of the Lord: although the tabernacle, whilst it was to be removed from place to place in the wilderness, had no doors, but consisted only of curtains, and had only hangings before the entrance, instead of doors; yet when it was settled in one place, as now it was in Shiloh, where it had been for a long time, it is more than probable, both from this place, and by comparing 1 Sam. i. 9; 2 Sam. vi. 17, and from the nature and reason of the thing, that it was enclosed within some solid building, which had doors, and posts, and other parts belonging to it. The vision, i. e. the matter of the vision or revelation, partly from the reverence and respect he bore to his person, to whom he was loth to be a messenger of such sad tidings; partly lest if he had been hasty to utter it, Eli might think him guilty of arrogance or secret complacency in his calamity, which was like to tend to Samuel's advancement. And not being commanded by God to acquaint Eli herewith, he prudently suspended the publication of it till a fit occasion were offered, which he might reasonably expect in a very little time, knowing that Eli would be greedy to know the matter of that revelation, the preface whereof he was acquainted with; and that it would be less offensive, and therefore more useful to Eli, when he saw that Samuel was not puffed up with it, nor forward to vent it, until Eli forced it from him.

16 Then Eli called Samuel, and said, Samuel, my son. And he answered, Here am I.

17 And he said, What is the thing that the LORD hath said unto thee? I pray thee hide it not from me: ° God do so to thee, and † more also, if thou hide any ¶ thing from me of all the things that he said unto thee.

God inflict the same evils upon thee, which I suspect he hath pronounced against me, and greater evils too. Or, God do so, i. e. let God deal with thee so severely, as I cannot, or am loth to express. So it is a kind of aposiopesis, usual in oaths and in adjurations. The same phrase is in Ruth i. 17. Thus he adjures him to utter the whole truth, as was usual among the Hebrews, as 1 Kings xxii. 16; Matt. xxvi. 63.

18 And Samuel told him † every whit, and hid nothing from him. And he said, ¶ It is the LORD: let him do what seemeth him good.

This severe sentence is from the sovereign Lord of the world, who hath an absolute power and right to dispose of me and all his creatures as he pleaseth, to whose good pleasure I therefore freely submit: from Israel's God, who was known by this name of Jehovah, who is in a special manner the ruler of the people of Israel, to whom it properly belongs to punish all mine offences, whose chastisement I therefore accept.

19 ¶ And Samuel ° grew, and † the LORD was with him, * and did let none of his words fall to the ground.

Samuel grew, as in stature, so in wisdom and piety, and God's favour, and reputation with the people. Fall to the ground, i. e. want its effect or success; God made good all his predictions. A metaphor from precious liquors, which when they are spilt upon the ground, are altogether useless and ineffectual. This phrase is oft used, as Josh. xxi. 45; Esth. vi. 10, &c.

20 And all Israel † from Dan even to Beer-sheba knew that Samuel was ¶ established to be a prophet of the LORD.

From Dan even to Beer-sheba; through the whole land, from the northern bound, Dan, to the southern, Beer-sheba; which was the whole length and largest extent of the land. See Judg. xx. 1, 2; 2 Sam. xvii. 11. Knew, both by Eli's testimony, and particular relation of the foregoing history, to the people that came from all parts; and by succeeding revelations made to him, whereof mention is made in the next verse, which though placed after, might be done before.

21 And the LORD appeared again in Shiloh: for the LORD revealed himself to Samuel in Shiloh by ° the word of the LORD.

Or, did use to reveal his mind to Samuel. By the word of the Lord, i. e. by his word, the noun for the pronoun, which is frequent, as Lev. xiv. 15, &c.; by his word of command, which he chose to deliver to Israel by his mouth, as it here follows; or by his word of prophecy concerning future events.

CHAP. IV.

The Israelites are smitten by the Philistines at Eben-ezer, 1, 2. They fetch the ark from Shiloh; receive it with a great shout, to the terror of the Philistines, 3—8; who yet take courage, and a second time beat the Israelites: the ark is taken; the two sons of Eli are slain, 9—11; which Eli hearing, falleth backward from his seat, and breaketh his neck, 12—18. His daughter-in-law falls in labour, nameth her son Ichabod, and dieth, 19—22.

AND the word of Samuel ¶ came to all Israel. Now Israel went out against the Philistines to battle, and pitched beside ° Eben-ezer: and the Philistines pitched in Aphek.

The word of Samuel, i. e. the word of the Lord revealed to Samuel, and by him to the people; either, first, The prophetic word mentioned before, chap. iii. 11, &c., which is here said to come, or to come to pass, as it was foretold, to all Israel. But the subject of that prophecy was not all Israel, but Eli and his house, as is evident. Or, rather, secondly, A word of command, that all Israel should go forth to fight with the Philistines, as the following words explain it, that so they might be first humbled and punished for their sins, and so prepared by degrees for their future deliverance. Against the Philistines; or, to meet the Philistines, who having by this time recruited themselves after their great loss by Samson, Judg. xvi. 30, and perceiving an eminent prophet arising among them, by whom they were likely to be united, counselled, and assisted, thought fit to suppress them in the beginning of their hopes and designs of rescuing themselves from their power. Eben-ezer; a place so called here (by anticipation) from a following event, chap. vii. 12. Aphek; a city so called in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 53, upon the borders of the Philistines' country; not that Aphek in Asher, Josh. xix. 30; Judg. i. 31, which was very remote from them.

2 And the Philistines put themselves in array against Israel: and when † they joined battle, Israel was smitten before the Philistines: and they slew of † the army in the field about four thousand men.

When they joined battle, Heb. when the battle was spread, i. e. when the two armies had drawn forth themselves into military order, and put themselves into the usual posture for fighting, and began to fight in their several places.

3 ¶ And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israel said, Wherefore hath the LORD smitten us to day before the Philistines? Let us † fetch the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies.

Wherefore hath the Lord smitten us to-day before the Philistines, seeing our cause is so just, our own just and necessary defence from God's and our enemies, and we came not forth to battle by our own motion, but by God's command delivered by Samuel? This was strange blindness, that when there was so great a corruption in their worship and manners, chap. ii., and such a defection to idolatry, chap. vii. 3; Psal. lxxviii. 58, they could not see sufficient reason why God should suffer them to fall by their enemies. The ark of the covenant of the Lord; that great pledge of God's presence and help, by whose conduct our ancestors obtained success, Numb. x. 35; xiv. 44; Josh. vi. 4. Instead of the performance of moral duties, humbling themselves deeply for and purging themselves speedily and thoroughly from all their sins, for which God was displeased with them, and now had chastised them, they take an easier and cheaper course, and put their trust in their ceremonial observances, not doubting but the very presence of the ark would give them the victory; and therefore it is no wonder they meet with so sad a disappointment.

4 So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the LORD of hosts,^b which dwelleth between^c the cherubims: and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God.

That they might bring from thence the ark; which it may seem they should not have done without asking counsel of God, which they might easily have done by Samuel. Hophni and Phinehas were there; either, first, in the camp; or rather, secondly, in Shiloh. With the ark; attending upon it, instead of their aged father.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the LORD came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again.

Partly from their great joy and confidence of success; and partly in design to encourage themselves, and terrify their enemies.

6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And they understood that the ark of the LORD was come into the camp.

They understood, by information from the Israelites, who would readily tell them of it to afflict them.

7 And the Philistines were afraid, for they said, God is come into the camp. And they said, Woe unto us! for there hath not been such a thing [†]heretofore.

God is come, to wit, in and with his ark; or they give the name of God to the ark, before which he was worshipped, as they used to do to the images of their false gods. There hath not been such a thing heretofore; not to our knowledge, or not in our times; for the forementioned removals of the ark were before it came to Shiloh.

8 Woe unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? these are the Gods that smote the Egyptians with all the plagues in the wilderness.

These mighty Gods; they secretly confess the Lord to be higher and greater than their gods, and yet against their knowledge presume to oppose him. They mention the wilderness, not as if all the plagues of the Egyptians came upon them in the wilderness, but because the last and sorest of all, which is therefore put for all, to wit, the destruction of Pharaoh and all his host, happened in the wilderness, namely, in the Red Sea, which having the wilderness on both sides of it, Exod. xiii. 18, 20; xiv. 3, 11; xv. 22, &c., may well be said to be in the wilderness. Although it is not strange if these heathens did mistake and misreport some circumstance in a relation of the Israelitish affairs, especially some hundreds of years after they were done, such mistakes being frequent in divers heathen authors treating of those matters, as Justin, and Tacitus, and others.

been to you: [†]quit yourselves like men, [†]and fight.

Quit yourselves like men; since you can expect no relief from your gods, who are not able to resist theirs, it concerns you to put forth all your strength and courage, and once for all to act like brave and valiant men.

10 ¶ And the Philistines fought, and Israel was smitten, and they fled every man into his tent: and there was a very great slaughter; for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

Into his tent, i. e. to his habitation, called by the ancient name of his tent. Before they lost but four thousand, now in the presence of the ark thirty thousand, to teach them that the ark and ordinances of God were never designed for sanctuaries or refuges to impenitent sinners, but only for the comfort and relief of those that repent. Horsemen are not mentioned; either, first, Because they had few or none, God having forbidden the multiplication of their horses, Deut. xvii. 16, and the Philistines, their lords and oppressors, having taken away what they had. Or, secondly, Because they fled away, as is usual in such cases, whilst the footmen were more easily overtaken.

11 And ^gthe ark of God was taken; and ^hthe two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, [†]were slain.

The ark of God was taken; which God justly and wisely permitted; partly, to punish the Israelites for their profanation of it; partly, that by taking away the pretences of their foolish and impious confidence, he might more deeply humble them, and bring them to true repentance; partly, that the Philistines might by this means be more effectually convinced of God's almighty power, and of their own and their gods' impotency, and so a stop might be put to their triumphs and insultations, and to their rage against the poor Israelites, whom otherwise in human appearance they might easily have rooted out. Thus as God was no loser by this event, so the Philistines were no gainers by it; and Israel, al. things considered, received more good than hurt by it, as we shall see.

12 ¶ And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and ⁱcame to Shiloh the same day with his clothes rent, and ^kwith earth upon his head.

The usual rites in great sorrows. See Gen. xxxvii. 29; Josh. vii. 6, &c.; 2 Sam. i. 2, 11.

13 And when he came, lo, Eli sat upon ^la seat by the wayside watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city, and told ^mit, all the city cried out.

Eli sat upon a seat; placed there on purpose for him, that he might soon receive the tidings, which he longed for. His heart trembled for the ark of God; whereby he discovered a public and generous spirit, and a fervent zeal for God, and for his honour and service, which he preferred before all his natural affections and worldly interests, not regarding his own children in comparison of the ark, though otherwise he was a most indulgent father, and had reason to believe that they went out like sheep for the slaughter, according to Samuel's prediction.

14 And when Eli heard the noise of the crying, he said, What meaneth the noise of this tumult? And the man came in hastily, and told Eli.

15 Now Eli was ninety and eight years old; and ⁿhis eyes [†]were dim, that he could not see.

16 And the man said unto Eli, I am he that came out of the army, and I fled to day out of the army. And he said, ^oWhat [†]is there done, my son?

I am he that came out of the army; I speak not what I have by uncertain rumours, but what mine eyes were witnesses of.

17 And the messenger answered and said, Israel is fled before the Philistines, and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people, and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God is taken.

18 And it came to pass, when he made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the seat backward by the side of the gate, and his neck brake, and he died: for he was an old man, and heavy. ¶ And he had judged Israel forty years.

He fell from off the seat backward; being so oppressed with grief and astonishment, that he had no strength left to support him. By the side of the gate, to wit, the gate of the city, which was most convenient for the speedy understanding of all occurrences. He was an old man, and heavy; old, and therefore weak, and apt to fall; heavy, and therefore his fall more dangerous and pernicious. He had judged Israel; he was their supreme governor, both in civils and spirituals.

19 ¶ And his daughter in law, Phinehas' wife, was with child, near ¶ to be delivered: and when she heard the tidings that the ark of God was taken, and that her father in law and her husband were dead, she bowed herself and travailed; for her pains † came upon her.

To wit, before her time, which is oft the effect of great terrors, both in women and in other creatures, Psal. xxix. 9.

20 And about the time of her death ° the women that stood by her said unto her, Fear not; for thou hast born a son. But she answered not, † neither did she regard it.

Being overwhelmed with sorrow, and so incapable of comfort.

21 And she named the child ¶ Ichabod, saying, ° The glory is departed from Israel: because the ark of God was taken, and because of her father in law and her husband.

The glory, i. e. the glorious type and assurance of God's presence, the ark, which is oft called God's glory, as Psal. xxvi. 8; lxxviii. 61; Isa. lxix. 11, and which was the great safeguard and ornament of Israel, which they could glory in above all other nations.

22 And she said, The glory is departed from Israel: for the ark of God is taken.

This is repeated to show her piety, and that the public and spiritual loss lay heavier upon her spirit than her personal or domestic calamity.

CHAP. V.

The Philistines place the ark of God at Ashdod in the house of Dagon; which falls down, once and again, 1—5. They of Ashdod are smitten with emerods; they send the ark to Gath, 6—8. They are also smitten with emerods, and send the ark to Ekron; they resolve to return it back to the Israelites, 9—12.

AND the Philistines took the ark of God, and brought it ° from Eben-ezer unto Ashdod.

Quest. Why were not they immediately killed, who touched the ark, as afterwards Uzzah was? 2 Sam. vi. 7. Ans. First, Because the sin of the Philistines was not so great, because the law forbidding this was not given, or at least was not known to them; whereas Uzzah's fact was a transgression, and that of a known law. Secondly, Because God designed to reserve the Philistines for a more public and more shameful punishment, which had been prevented by this. From Eben-ezer; where they found it in the camp of the Israelites, chap. iv. 1. Ashdod, called also Azotus; whither they brought it, either because it was the first city in their way, or rather because it was a great and famous city, and most eminent for the worship of their great god Dagon.

2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it into the house of ^bDagon, and set it by Dagon.

Either, first, Out of respect to it, that it might be worshipped together with Dagon. Or rather, secondly, By way of reproach and contempt of it, as a spoil and trophy set there to the honour of Dagon, to whom doubtless they ascribed this victory, as they did a former, Judg. xvi. 23. And though they had some reverence for the ark before, chap. iv. 7, &c.; yet that was certainly much diminished by their success against Israel, notwithstanding the presence and help of the ark.

3 ¶ And when they of Ashdod arose early on the morrow, behold, Dagon was ° fallen upon his face to the earth before the ark of the LORD. And they took Dagon, and ° set him in his place again.

They of Ashdod, i. e. the priests of Dagon. Arose early on the morrow; either to worship Dagon according to their manner, or being curious and greedy to know whether the neighbourhood of the ark to Dagon had made any alteration in either of them, that if Dagon had received any damage, they might, if possibly they could, repair it, before it came to the people's knowledge, as indeed they did, to prevent their contempt of that idol, by which the priests had all their reputation and advantage. Set him in his place again; supposing or pretending that his fall was wholly casual.

4 And when they arose early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the LORD; and ° the head of Dagon and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold; only ¶ the stump of Dagon was left to him.

The head is the seat of wisdom; the hands, the instruments of action: both are cut off, to show that he had neither wisdom nor strength to defend himself nor his worshippers. Thus the priests, by concealing Dagon's shame before, make it more evident and infamous. Only the stump of Dagon, Heb. only Dagon, i. e. that part of it from which it was called Dagon, to wit, the fishy part, for dag in Hebrew signifies a fish. And hence their opinion seems most probable, that this idol of Dagon had in its upper parts a human shape, and in its lower parts the form of a fish; for such was the form of divers of the heathen gods, and particularly of a god of the Phœnicians, (under which name the Philistines are comprehended,) as Diodorus Siculus and Lucian both witness, though they call it by another name. Was left to him, or, upon it, i. e. upon the threshold; there the trunk abode in the place where it fell, but the head and hands being violently cut off, were flung to distant and several places.

5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day.

Out of a religious reverence, supposing this place to be sanctified by the touch of their god, who first fell here, and being broken here, touched it more thoroughly than he did other parts. This superstition of theirs was noted and censured long after, Zeph. i. 9. Herein they manifested their stupendous folly, both in making a perpetual monument of their own and idol's shame, which in all reason they should rather have buried in eternal oblivion; and in turning a plain and certain argument of contempt into an occasion of further veneration. Unto this day; when this history was written, which if written by Samuel towards the end of his life, was a sufficient ground for this expression, this superstitious usage having then continued for many years.

6 But ^g the hand of the LORD was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and he ^h destroyed them, and smote them with ⁱ emerods, even Ashdod and the coasts thereof.

The hand of the Lord was heavy upon them of Ashdod, for their incorrigibility by the foregoing documents. He destroyed them; partly by wasting their land, chap. vi. 5; and partly by killing many of their persons, as is sufficiently implied here, ver. 10. Emerods; a disease mentioned only here and Deut. xxviii. 27; it was in the hinder parts. It is needless to inquire into the nature of it. It may suffice to know that it was a very sore disease, and not only very vexatious and tormenting, but also pernicious and mortal.

7 And when the men of Ashdod saw that it was so, they said, The ark of the God of Israel shall not abide with us: for his hand is sore upon us, and upon Dagon our god.

8 They sent therefore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said, What shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel? And they answered, Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about unto Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about thither.

Supposing that this plague was confined to Ashdod for some particular reasons, or that it came upon them by chance, or from some bad influence of the air, or of the stars, or for putting it into Dagon's temple, which they resolved they would not do.

9 And it was so, that, after they had carried it about, ^k the hand of the LORD was against the city ^l with a very great destruction: and ^m he smote the men of the city, both small and great, and they had emerods in their secret parts.

Or, in their hidden parts, to wit, in the inwards of their hinder parts; which is the worst kind of emerods, as all physicians acknowledge, both because its pains are far more sharp and keen than the other, and because the malady is more out of the reach of remedies.

10 ¶ Therefore they sent the ark of God to Ekron. And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to [†] us, to slay us and our people.

Not that they intended this, but because this would be the event of it.

11 So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines, and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay [†] us not, and our people: for there was a deadly destruction throughout all the city; ⁿ the hand of God was very heavy there.

Throughout all the city, to wit, the city of Ekron, during its short stay there. Or, in every city, to wit, where the ark of God came; for it came also to Gaza and Askelon, and produced the same effects there, as may be gathered from chap. vi. 4, 17, though for brevity sake it be here omitted.

12 And the men that died not were smitten with the emerods: and the cry of the city went up to heaven.

The men that died not; either of some other plague or ulcer, as may be thought from ver. 6, or of the emerods, which infested and tormented even those whom it did not kill. The cry of the city, or, of that city where the ark was; and the city is put for the people inhabiting it.

CHAP. VI.

The Philistines consult with the priests how they shall return the ark: they advise to send with it for a trespass-offering five golden emerods and mice, on a new cart which they do: the kine tied to the cart, go straightway to Beth-shemesh; which was for a sign to the Philistines, 1—12. They of Beth-shemesh rejoice: the Levites offer sacrifice for it, 13—15. The people are smitten for looking into the ark; and request them of Kirjath-jearim to fetch it thence into their own city, 19—21.

AND the ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months. cir. 1140.

So long they kept it, as loth to lose so great a prize, and willing to try all ways to keep it, and yet free themselves from the mischiefs accompanying its presence.

2 And the Philistines ^a called for the priests and the diviners, saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place.

The diviners; whose art was in great esteem with heathen nations, and especially with the Philistines and their neighbours the Canaanites and Egyptians. Wherewith; in what manner, and with what gifts; for to send it they had decreed before, chap. v. 11.

3 And they said, If ye send away the ark of the God of Israel, send it not ^b empty; but in any wise return him ^c a trespass offering: then ye shall be healed, and it shall ^d be known to you why his hand is not removed from you.

Empty, i. e. without a present; which they judged necessary, from the common opinion and practice both of Jews and Gentiles. Return him a trespass-offering; thereby to acknowledge our offence, and obtain his pardon. It shall be known to you; you shall understand what is hitherto doubtful, whether he was the author of these calamities, and why they continued so long upon you. Compare ver. 7—9.

4 Then said they, What shall be the trespass offering which we shall return to him? They answered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, ^e according to the number of the lords of the Philistines: for one plague was on [†] you all, and on your lords.

What shall be the trespass-offering? they desire particular information, because they were ignorant of the nature and manner of the worship of Israel's God, and they might easily understand that there were some kinds of offerings which God would not accept. Golden emerods, i. e. figures of that part of the body which was the seat of the disease, which by its swelling, or some other way, represented also the disease itself; which they offered not in contempt of God, for they sought to gain his favour hereby; but in testimony of their humiliation, that by leaving this monument of their own shame and misery they might obtain pity from God, and freedom from their disease. Golden mice; which marred their land, (as it is related, ver. 5,) by destroying the fruits thereof; as the other plague afflicted their bodies.

5 Wherefore ye shall make images of your emerods, and images of your mice that ^f mar the land; and ye shall ^g give glory unto the God of Israel: peradventure he will ^h lighten his hand from off you, and from off ⁱ your gods, and from off your land.

Glory unto the God of Israel; the glory of his power in conquering you, who seemed and pretended to have conquered him; of his justice in punishing you; and of his goodness if he shall relieve you. From off your gods: they so speak, either because not only Dagon, but their other gods also, were thrown down by the ark, though that be

6 Wherefore then do ye harden your hearts, ^k as the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? when he had wrought || wonderfully among them, ^l did they not let † the people go, and they departed?

Do ye harden, or, should ye harden; the future tense of the indicative mood being put potentially, as is not unusual. They express themselves thus, either because they perceived that some opposed the decree of sending home the ark, though the most had consented to it; or because they thought they would hardly send it away in the manner prescribed, by giving glory to God, and taking shame to themselves. As the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts; which they might easily learn, either by tradition from their ancestors, or by the reports of the Hebrews.

7 Now therefore make ^m a new cart, and take two milch kine, ⁿ on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart, and bring their calves home from them:

Make a new cart; as David did for the same use, 2 Sam. vi. 3, in reverence to the ark. On which there hath come no yoke; partly in respect to the ark, and partly for the better discovery, because such untamed heifers are wanton, and apt to wander, and keep no certain and constant paths, as oxen accustomed to the yoke do, and therefore were most unlikely to keep the direct road to Israel's land. Bring their calves home from them; which would stir up natural affection in their dams, and cause them rather to return home, than to go to a strange country.

8 And take the ark of the LORD, and lay it upon the cart; and put ^o the jewels of gold, which ye return him for a trespass offering, in a coffer by the side thereof; and send it away, that it may go.

Lay it upon the cart; which God winked at in them, both because they were ignorant of God's law to the contrary, and because they had no Levites to carry it upon their shoulders. In a coffer by the side thereof; for they durst not presume to open the ark, to put them within it.

9 And see, if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to ^p Beth-shemesh, then || he hath done us this great evil: but if not, then ^q we shall know that it is not his hand that smote us; it was a chance that happened to us.

His own coast, or, border, i. e. the way that leadeth to his coast or border, viz. the country to which it belongs. Then he hath done us this great evil; which they might well conclude, if such heifers should, against their common use and natural instinct, go into a strange path, and regularly and constantly proceed in it, without any man's conduct. It was a chance that happened to us: this evil came to us from some influences of the stars, or other unknown causes; which was a weak and foolish inference, depending upon a mere contingency, it being uncertain whether God would please to give them this sign, and probable that he would deny it, both to punish their superstition, and to harden their hearts to their further and utter destruction. But wicked men will sooner believe the most uncertain and ridiculous things, than own the visible demonstrations of God's power and providence.

10 ¶ And the men did so; and took two milch kine, and tied them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home:

11 And they laid the ark of the LORD upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold and the images of their emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way to the way of Beth-shemesh, and went along the highway, lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left; and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh.

To the way of Beth-shemesh, i. e. leading to Beth-shemesh, a city of the priests, Josh. xxi. 16, who were by office to take care of it. Lowing as they went; testifying at once both their natural and vehement inclination to their calves, and the supernatural and Divine power which overruled them to a contrary course. The lords of the Philistines went after them, under pretence of an honourable dismission of it; but in truth, to prevent all imposture, and to get assurance of the truth of the event; all which circumstances tended to their greater confusion, and illustration of God's glory.

13 And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley: and they lifted up their eyes, and saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came into the field of Joshua, a Beth-shemite, and stood there, where there was a great stone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the kine a burnt offering unto the LORD.

They clave; not the lords of the Philistines, but the Beth-shemites, to wit, the priests that dwelt there. A burnt-offering unto the Lord: there may seem to be a double error in this act. First, That they offered females for a burnt-offering, contrary to Lev. i. 3; xxii. 19. Secondly, That they did it in a forbidden place, Deut. xii. 5, 6, into which they might easily be led by excess of joy, and eager desire of returning to their long-interrupted course of offering sacrifices. And some think these irregularities were partial causes of the following punishment. But this case being very extraordinary, may in some sort excuse it, if they did not proceed by ordinary rules. As for the first, though they might not choose females for that use, yet when God himself had chosen, and in a manner consecrated them to his service, and employed them in so sacred and glorious a work, it may seem tolerable to offer them to the Lord, as being his peculiar, and improper for any other use. And for the latter, we have many instances of sacrifices offered to God by prophets and holy men in other places besides the tabernacle, upon extraordinary occasions, such as this certainly was; it being fit that the ark should at its first return be received with thanksgivings and sacrifice; and this place being sanctified by the presence of the ark, which was the very soul of the tabernacle, and that by which the tabernacle itself was sanctified, and for whose sake the sacrifices were offered at the door of the tabernacle.

15 And the Levites took down the ark of the LORD, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great stone: and the men of Beth-shemesh offered burnt offerings and sacrificed sacrifices the same day unto the LORD.

And the Levites took down, or, for the Levites had taken down; for this, though mentioned after, was done before the sacrifices were offered.

16 And when ^r the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

To wit, when they had seen that prodigious return of the ark to its own country, and the entertainment it found there.

17 * And these are the golden emerods ^s ver. 4 which the Philistines returned for a trespass offering unto the LORD; for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one;

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities, and of country villages, even unto the || great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the LORD: which stone remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua, the Beth-shemite.

Both of fenced cities, and of country villages: this is added for explication of that foregoing phrase, all the cities; either to show that under the name of the five cities were comprehended all the villages and territories belonging to them. in whose name and at whose charge these presents were made; or to express the difference between this and the former present, the emerods being only five, according to the five cities mentioned ver. 17, because it may seem the cities only, or principally, were pestered with that disease; and the mice being many more, according to the number of all the cities, as is here expressed; the word city being taken generally so, as to include, not only fenced cities, but also the country villages, as is here added, and the fields belonging to them, these being the parts where the mice did most mischief. The great stone of Abel; which is mentioned as the utmost border of the Philistines' territory to which the plague of mice did extend; the word stone being easily understood out of ver. 14, where this great stone is expressly mentioned, as the place on which the ark was set, which is also here repeated in the following words. And this place is here called Abel, by anticipation, from the great mourning mentioned in the following verse.

21. Num. 4.
5, 15, 20.
2 Sam. 6. 7.

19 ¶ And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men: and the people lamented, because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

They had looked into the ark of the Lord; having now an opportunity which they never yet had, nor were ever like to have, it is not strange they had a vehement curiosity and desire to see the contents of the ark; or whether the Philistines had taken them away, and put other things in their place; and they thought they might now presume the more, because the ark had been polluted by the Philistines, and was now exposed to open view, and not yet put into that most holy place, which they were forbidden to approach. Of the people, i. e. of the people living in and near Beth-shemesh, or coming thither from all parts upon this great and glorious occasion. Heb. and, or also, he smote of the people, to wit, of or belonging to other places, though now here; so these are distinguished from the men of Beth-shemesh, of whom he speaks only in general and indefinitely, he smote the men, i. e. some or many of them, and then sets down the number of the persons smitten or slain, either excluding the Beth-shemites, or including them. Fifty thousand and threescore and ten men: this may seem an incredible relation, both because that place could not afford so great a number, and because it seems an act of great rigour, that God should so severely punish those people who came with so much zeal and joy to congratulate the return of the ark, and that for so inconsiderable an error. For the latter branch of the objection, it may be said, 1. That God always used to be most severe in punishing his own people, as sinning against more knowledge and warning than others; especially for such sins as immediately concern his own worship and service. 2. That men are very incompetent judges of these matters, because they do not understand all the reasons and causes of God's judgments. For although God took this justly occasion to punish them for that crime which was so severely forbidden even to the common Levites under pain of death; of which see Numb. iv. 18—20; yet it is apparent that the people were at this time guilty of many other and greater miscarriages, for which God might justly inflict the present punishment upon them; and moreover, there are many secret sins which escape man's observation, but are seen by God, before whom many persons may be deeply guilty, whom men esteem innocent and virtuous. And therefore men should take heed of censuring the judgments of God, of which it is most truly said, that they are oft secret, but never unrighteous. And for the former branch of the objection, many things are or may be said: 1. That the land of Israel was strangely populous. See 2 Sam. xxiv. 9; 2 Chron. xiii. 3.

2. That all these were not the settled inhabitants of this place, but most of them such as did, and in all probability would, resort thither in great numbers upon so illustrious an occasion. 3. That all these were not struck dead in the very fact, and upon the place, which would have terrified others from following their example; but were secretly struck with some disease or plague, which killed them in a little time. 4. That divers learned men translate and understand the place otherwise, and make the number much smaller. Josephus the Jew, and the Hebrew doctors, and many others, contend that only seventy persons were slain; which though it seem but a small number, yet might justly be called a great slaughter, either for the quality of the persons slain, or for the greatness and extraordinariness of the stroke; or because it was a great number, considering the smallness of the place, and the sadness of the occasion. The words in the Hebrew are these, and thus placed, he smote of or among the people seventy men, fifty thousand men; whereas, say they, the words should have been otherwise placed, and the greater number put before the less, if this had been meant, that he smote fifty thousand and seventy men. And one very learned man renders the words thus, He smote of the people seventy men, even fifty of a thousand, the particle mem, of, being here understood, as it is very frequently. So the meaning is, that God smote every twentieth man of the transgressors, as the Romans used to cut off every tenth man in case of the general guilt of an army. Or the words may be rendered thus, He smote of or among the people seventy men out of fifty thousand men; the particle mem, of, or out of, being understood before the word fifty, which Bochart puts before a thousand; and it may be thus expressed, to show that God did temper his severity with great clemency; and whereas there were many thousands of transgressors, (every one following his brother's example, as is usual in such cases,) God only singled out seventy of the principal offenders, who either sinned most against their light or office, or were the ringleaders or chief encouragers of the rest. To which may be added, that the ancient translators, the Syriac and Arabic, read the place five thousand and seventy men, being supposed to have read in their Hebrew copies chamesh, five, for chamishim, fifty, which is no great alteration in the word.

20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, "Who is able to stand before this holy LORD God? and to whom shall he go up from us?"

u 2 Sam. 6.9.
Mal. 3. 2.

To stand before this holy Lord God, i. e. to minister before the ark where the Lord is present. Since God is so severe to mark whatsoever is amiss in his servants, who is sufficient and worthy to serve him? who dare presume to come into his presence? It seems to be a complaint, or expostulation with God, concerning this last and great instance of his severity. To whom shall he go up from us? who will dare to receive the ark with so much hazard to themselves?

21 ¶ And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of ^{*}Kirjath-jearim, saying, The Philistines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you.

z Josh. 18. 14.
Judg. 18. 12.
1 Chr. 13. 5, 6.

They sent to Kirjath-jearim, either because the place was not far off from them, and so it might soon be removed, which they mainly desired; or because it was a place of eminency and strength, and somewhat further distant from the Philistines, where therefore it was likely to be better preserved from any new attempts of the Philistines, and to be better attended by the Israelites, who would more freely and frequently come to it at such a place, than in Beth-shemesh, which was upon the border of their enemies' land; or because they thought they would gladly receive it, being a pious and zealous people; or because it was in the way to Shiloh, its ancient habitation, and whither they might suppose it was to be carried by degrees and several stages, whereof this was one.

CHAP. VII.

The ark is placed in Kirjath-jearim; Eleazar's son is sanctified to keep it, 1, 2. Samuel exhorts them to repent, and put away their idols; they obey him. A fast at Mizpeh, 3-6. The Philistines intend to set upon the Israelites, who are afraid, 7. Samuel offereth and prayeth for Israel: God heareth; terrifieth the Philistines with thunder, and they are smitten; are subdued; and the cities which they had taken from the Israelites are recovered, 8-14. Samuel visiteth all the cities of Israel, and returns to Ramah; there builds an altar to the Lord, 15-17.

Ps. 132. 6.

AND the men of ^aKirjath jearim came, and fetched up the ark of the LORD, and brought it into the house of ^bAbinadab in the hill, and sanctified Eleazar his son to keep the ark of the LORD.

b 2 Sam. 6. 4.

The men of Kirjath-jearim gladly embraced the motion, as wisely considering that their great calamity was not to be charged upon the ark, but upon themselves, and their own carelessness, irreverence, and presumption, in looking into the ark. This place is elsewhere called Baalah, and Kirjath-baal, as is evident from Josh. xv. 9, 60; xviii. 14; 1 Chron. xiii. 6, 7. Fetched up the ark, i. e. caused it to be brought up, to wit, by the priests appointed to that work, whom they could easily procure, and undoubtedly would do it, especially having been so lately warned of the great danger of violating God's commands in those matters. In Scripture use, men are commonly said to do that which they order or cause others to do. They chose the house of Abinadab in the hill, because it was both a strong place, where it would be most safe; and a high place, and therefore visible at some distance, and to many persons, which was convenient for them, who were at that time to direct their prayers and faces towards the ark, 1 Kings viii. 29, 30, 35; Psal. xxviii. 2; cxxxviii. 2; Dan. vi. 10. And for the same reason David afterwards placed it in the hill of Zion. Some translate the word in the tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. xiii. 6, 7. Sanctified Eleazar; not that they made him either Levite or priest, as some would have it; for in Israel persons were not made, but born such; and since the institution of Levites and priests, none were made such that were born of other tribes or families: but that they devoted or set him apart (as this verb sometimes signifies) wholly to attend upon this work. They chose the son rather than his father, because he was younger and stronger, and probably freed from domestic cares, which might divert him from or disturb him in his work; or because he was more eminent for prudence or piety. To keep the ark of the Lord; to keep the place where it was clean and neat, and to guard it, that none might approach or touch it but such as God required or allowed to do so.

2 And it came to pass, while the ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, that the time was long; for it was twenty years: and all the house of Israel lamented after the LORD.

cir. 1120.

The ark abode in Kirjath-jearim, and was not carried to Shiloh, its former place, either because that place was destroyed by the Philistines when the ark was taken, as may be gathered from this history, compared with Jer. vii. 12, 14; xxvi. 6, 9; or because God would hereby punish the wickedness, either of that particular place of Shiloh, or of the people of Israel, by keeping it in a private and obscure place, and that near to the Philistines, whither the generality of the people neither durst nor could safely come. It was twenty years; he saith not that this twenty years was all the time of the ark's abode there; for it continued there from Eli's time till David's reign, 2 Sam. vi. 2, which was forty years, Acts xiii. 21; but that it was so long there ere the Israelites were sensible of their sin and misery, ere they lamented, &c., as it follows. The house of Israel lamented after the Lord, i. e. they followed after God with lamentation for his departure and so long estrangement from them, and with prayers for his return and favour to them.

3 ¶ And Samuel spake unto all the house of Israel, saying, If ye do ^creturn unto the LORD with all your hearts, ^dthen ^eput away the strange gods and ^fAshtaroth from among you, and ^gprepare your hearts unto the LORD, and ^hserve him only: and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines.

Unto all the house of Israel; to all the rulers and people too, as he had occasion in his circuit, described below, ver. 16, mixing exhortations to repentance with his judicial administrations. If ye do return unto the Lord; if you do indeed what you profess, if you are resolved to go on in that which you seem to have begun. With all your heart; sincerely and in good earnest. Put away the strange gods out of your houses, where some of you keep and worship them; and out of your hearts and affections, where they still have an interest in many of you. And Ashtaroth; and particularly or especially Ashtaroth, which he mentions as a god, whom they, together with the neighbouring nations, did more eminently worship. See Judg. ii. 13. Prepare your hearts, by purging them from all sin, and particularly from all inclinations to other gods. Or, direct your hearts; having alienated your hearts from your idols, turn them to God, and not to other idols or vanities. To Mizpeh; not that beyond Jordan, of which Judg. xi. 11, 29; but another in Canaan, where the Israelites used to assemble, Judg. xx. 1; 1 Sam. x. 17. Drew water, and poured it out; which they did either, 1. Figuratively; they drew tears out of their hearts, and poured out of their eyes as it were rivers of water; such descriptions of penitential sorrow being not unusual. See Psal. vi. 7; cxix. 136; Jer. ix. 1; Lam. iii. 48, 49. Or rather, 2. Properly, because they are said first to draw it, and then to pour it out. And this agrees well with the state of those times, wherein such rites as this were very customary. Now this course they seem to have used, either, 1. As a mean or instrument of their purification. So they washed themselves in this water, thereby acknowledging their filthiness, and cleansing themselves as the law prescribed. But this seems not probable, 1. Because here is only mention of drawing and pouring forth this water before the Lord, but not of any washing themselves with it. 2. Because this was not a fit time and place to purify themselves in this great and general assembly. Or, 2. As an external sign, whereby they testified and professed both their own great filthiness and need of washing by the grace and Spirit of God, and blood of the covenant, which are oft signified by water, and their sincere desire to pour out their very hearts before the Lord in true repentance, and to cleanse themselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit. Before the Lord, i. e. in the public assembly, where God is in a special manner present, as hath been noted before. Samuel judged the children of Israel, i. e. governed them, reformed all abuses against God or man, took care that the laws of God should be observed and executed, and wilful transgressors punished.

7 And when the Philistines heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Mizpeh, the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel.

And when the children of Israel heard it, they were afraid of the Philistines.

The lords of the Philistines went up, to wit, with an army, ver. 10, suspecting the effects of their general convention, and intending to nip them in the bud. They were afraid; being a company of unarmed persons, and unfit for battle.

8 And the children of Israel said to Samuel, †°Cease not to cry unto the LORD our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

We are ashamed and afraid to look God in the face, because of our great wickedness this day remembered and acknowledged; do thou therefore intercede for us, as Moses did for his generation.

9 ¶ And Samuel took a sucking lamb, and offered it for a burnt offering wholly unto the LORD: and Samuel cried unto the LORD for Israel; and the LORD heard him.

It might be a sucking lamb, though it was more than eight days old, and so that law, Exod. xxiii. 19, was not violated. Offered it; either himself by Divine instinct, which was a sufficient warrant; or rather by a priest, as Saul is afterwards said to have offered, 1 Sam. xiii. 9. A burnt-offering wholly; burning all the parts of it, according to the law of the burnt-offerings; whereas in other offerings some parts were reserved. The Lord heard him, as appears by the effects, the following thunder, and the overthrow of the Philistines' host.

10 And as Samuel was offering up the burnt offering, the Philistines drew near to battle against Israel: but the LORD thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them; and they were smitten before Israel.

Either by the lightnings, or thunderbolts, or other things which accompanied the cracks of thunder; or by the Israelites, who perceiving them to be affrighted and flee away, pursued and smote them, as the next verse mentions.

11 And the men of Israel went out of Mizpeh, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, until they came under Beth-car.

Quest. Whence had they weapons wherewith to smite them? Ans. Divers of them probably brought them to the assembly; others borrowed them at Mizpeh, or the neighbouring places; and the rest might be the arms of the Philistines, which they threw away to hasten their flight, as is usual in such cases.

12 Then Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Eben-ezer, saying, Hitherto hath the LORD helped us.

A stone; a rude, unpolished stone, which was not prohibited by that law, Lev. xxvi. 1, there being no danger of worshipping such a stone, and this being set up only as a monument of the victory. Eben-ezer; by which, compared with chap. iv. 1, it appears that this victory was gained in or near the very same place where the Israelites received their former fatal loss. Hitherto hath the Lord helped us; he hath begun to help us in some measure, though not completely to deliver us; by which wary expression he exciteth both their thankfulness for their mercy received, and their holy fear and care to please and serve the Lord, that he might proceed to help and deliver them more effectually.

13 ¶ So the Philistines were subdued, and they came no more into the coast of Israel: and the hand of the LORD was against the Philistines all the days of Samuel.

They came no more into the coast of Israel, i. e. they came not with a great host, as now they did, but only molested them with straggling parties, or garrisons; as 1 Sam. x. 5; and they came not, to wit, all the days of Samuel, as it follows, i. e. while Samuel was their sole judge, or ruler; for in Saul's time they did come, 1 Sam. xiii. 5, 17; xiv. 52; xvii. 1, &c.

14 And the cities which the Philistines had taken from Israel were restored to Israel, from Ekron even unto Gath; and the coasts thereof did Israel deliver out of the hands of the Philistines. And there was peace between Israel and the Amorites.

The cities were restored to Israel by the Philistines, who, it seems, were fought into this restitution by their dread of Samuel, and of the Divine vengeance. Object. The Philistines had cities and garrisons in Israel's land after this time; as 1 Sam. x. 5; xiii. 3. Ans. Either therefore those places were not any of these here mentioned; for it is not said that all their cities were restored, but only indefinitely the cities, and those limited to a certain compass, from Ekron to Gath; or some of the cities now restored by the Philistines, were afterwards retaken by them. There was peace; an agreement for the cessation of all acts of hostility. The Amorites, i. e. the Canaanites, oft called Amorites, because these were formerly the most valiant and terrible of all those nations, and the first enemies which the Israelites met with, when they went to take possession of their land. They made this peace with the Canaanites, that they might be more at leisure to oppose the Philistines, now their most potent enemies.

15 And Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life.

For though Saul was king in Samuel's last days, yet Samuel did not then quite cease to be a judge, being so made by God's extraordinary call, which Saul could not destroy; and therefore Samuel did sometimes, upon great occasions, though not ordinarily, exercise the office of a judge after the beginning of Saul's reign; as chap. xi. 7; xv. 32, 33. And the years of the rule of Saul and Samuel are joined together, Acts xiii. 20, 21. Quest. How doth the office of a judge agree with Hannah's vow, whereby she devoted him to a perpetual attendance upon the Lord's service? Ans. This was not inconsistent with her vow, which consisted of two branches; the one more general, that he should be given or lent to the Lord all his days, 1 Sam. i. 11, 28, which she faithfully executed, leaving him wholly to the service and disposal of the Lord, who thought fit to employ him in this way; and if any thing therein was contrary to that vow, could undoubtedly dispense with it, as being his own right only; the other more particular, that no razor should come upon his head; nor doth it appear that this part was violated; or if it was, it was done by Divine dispensation.

16 And he went from year to year † in circuit to Beth-el, and Gilgal, and Mizpeh, and judged Israel in all those places.

Beth-el; either a place known by that name, or the house of God, to wit, Kirjath-jearim, where the ark was. Gilgal; in the eastern border. Mizpeh; towards the west. Judged Israel in all those places; he went to those several places, partly in compliance with the people, whose convenience and benefit he was willing to purchase with his own trouble, making himself an itinerant judge and preacher for their sakes; and partly that by his presence in several parts, he might the better observe and rectify all sorts of miscarriages against God or men.

17 And his return was to Ramah; for there was his house; and there he judged Israel; and there he built an altar unto the LORD.

That by joining sacrifices with his prayers he might the better obtain direction and assistance from God upon all emergencies. Object. It was unlawful to build another altar for sacrifice besides that before the tabernacle, Deut. xii. 5, 13. Ans. This was in part excused by the confusion of those times, wherein the tabernacle and its altar were destroyed, as is most probable; but most fully, because this was done by prophetic inspiration, and Divine dispensation, as appears by God's approbation and acceptance of the sacrifices offered upon it.

When Samuel was old, and so unable for his former travels and labours, he made his sons judges; not supreme judges, for such there was to be but one, and that of God's choosing, and Samuel still kept that office in his own hands, chap. vii. 15; but his vicegerents or deputies, who might go about and determine matters, but with reservation of a right of appeals to himself. He advanceth his sons to this place, not so much out of paternal indulgence, the sad effects whercof he had seen in Eli; but because he had doubtless instructed them in a singular manner, and fitted them for the highest employments; and he hoped that the example he had set them, and the inspection and authority he still had over them, would have obliged them to diligence and faithfulness in the execution of their trust.

Opportunity and temptation drew forth and discovered that corruption in them, which till now was hid from their father, and, it may be, from themselves.

4 Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah,

The elders; either for age, or dignity and power.

 Acts 13. 21.

They feared that Samuel would not live long; and that either he through infirmity and indulgence might leave the government in his sons' hands, or that they would invade and keep it after their father's death; and therefore they jointly make their complaints against them, and procure their removal from their places. Thus they are brought low, and crushed by those very wicked ways by which they designed to advance and establish themselves. So true is it, that honesty is the best policy, and unrighteousness the greatest folly. Make us a king to judge us: their conclusion outruns their premises, and their desires exceed their reasons or arguments, which extended no further than to the removal of Samuel's sons from their places, and the procuring some other just and prudent assistance to Samuel's age. Nor was the grant of their desire a remedy for their disease, but rather an aggravation of it; for the sons of their king might and were likely to be as corrupt as Samuel's sons; and if they were, would not be so easily removed as these were. Like all the nations, i. e. as most of the nations about us have. But there was not the like reason, because God had separated them from all other nations, and cautioned them against the imitation of their examples, and had taken them into his own immediate care and government; which privilege other nations had not.

6 ¶ But the thing [†]displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the Lord.

[†] Heb. sons

The thing displeased Samuel; not their complaint of his sons, but their desire of a king, as is apparent from the following words, and from the whole course of the story; which was so grievous to him, partly because of their injustice and ingratitude to himself, whose government, though it had been so sweet and beneficial to them, they plainly show themselves weary of; and principally because God was hereby dishonoured and provoked, by that distrust of God, and that vain-glory and ambition, and that itch after changes, which were the manifest causes of this desire; and because of that great servitude and misery which he wisely foresaw the people would hereby bring upon themselves, as he particularly informs them, ver. 11, &c. Samuel prayed unto the Lord, for the pardon of their sin, and desire of direction and help from God in this great affair.

7 And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for ^gthey have not rejected thee, but ^hthey have rejected me, that I should not reign over them.

 Hos. 13. 10, 11.

Hearken unto the voice of the people; God grants their desire in anger, and for their punishment, as is affirmed, Hos. xiii. 11. Compare Numb. xxii. 13, 20; Deut. i. 22; Psal. lxxvii. 20. They have not rejected thee, i. e. not thee only, nor principally; compare Gen. xxxii. 28; Exod. xvi. 7; Hos. vi. 6; Matt. x. 20; but this injury and contumely reflects chiefly upon me and my government, that I should not reign over them, to wit, by my immediate and peculiar government, which was the great honour, safety, and happiness of this people, if they had had wit to know it, or hearts to prize it. And all the infelicities of Israel, under this kind of government, did not proceed from the nature of the government, but from the ungovernableness and wickedness of the people, which, they might be sure, would produce the same or greater calamities under their kingly government. Quest. First, Did not God reign over them when they had kings? Answe. Yes, in a general way, but not in such a peculiar manner as he did by the judges, who were generally raised and called by God's particular appointment, endowed and sanctified by his Spirit, directed and assisted by his special providence upon all emergencies; whereas all things were for the most part contrary in their kings. Quest. Secondly, Was it simply unlawful for the people to desire a king? Answe. No, as appears from Deut. xvii. 14; but herein was their sin, that they desired it upon sinful grounds, of which see on ver. 7, and in an impetuous manner, and at an unseasonable time, and without asking leave or advice from God; which in so weighty and difficult a case they could not neglect without great sin.

8 According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt even unto this day, wherewith they have forsaken me, and served other gods, so do they also unto thee.

Thou farest no worse than myself. This he speaks for Samuel's comfort and vindication.

9 Now therefore [¶]hearken unto their voice: [¶]howbeit yet protest solemnly unto them, and [¶]shew them the manner of the king that shall reign over them.

[¶] Or, obey.

Protest solemnly unto them; that, if it be possible, thou mayst yet prevent their sin and misery. The manner of the king, i. e. of the kings which they desire, like the kings of other nations. He speaks not of the just authority, or the right of their kings, but of their practice, as is evident from divers of the following particulars, which are expressly forbidden and condemned in Scripture, as we shall see.

10 ¶ And Samuel told all the words of the Lord unto the people that asked of him a king.

11 And he said, [¶]This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: [¶]He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to [¶] See Deut. 17. 16, &c.

 ch. 10. 25.
 1 ch. 14. 52.

be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots.

He will take your sons, to wit, injuriously and by violence, as this Hebrew word is oft used, as Gen. xx. 3; xxvii. 36; Job v. 5; and so it must be here; because otherwise the king would have no more privilege than any of his subjects; for any man might take a son with his own or parents' consent. And to be his horsemen, or, and for his horses; for so the Hebrew word parash sometimes signifies, as Isa. xxi. 7, 9; xxviii. 28; to ride his horses.

12 And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots.

He will appoint him, Heb. to or for himself, emphatically, i. e. for his own fancy, or glory, or conveniency, or evil design, and not only when the necessities of the kingdom or commonwealth require it, as the judges did. And though this might seem to be no encumbrance, as it is here represented, but an honour and advantage to the persons so advanced, yet even in them that honour was accompanied with great dangers, and pernicious snares of many kinds, which those faint shadows of glory could not recompense; and as to the public, their pomp and power proved very burdensome and oppressive to the people, whose lands and fruits were taken from them, and bestowed upon these, for the support of their state, as it follows below, ver. 14, 15. And to reap his harvest, at his own pleasure, and without their consent, when possibly their own fields required all their time and pains. To make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots; he will press them for all sorts of his work, and that upon his own terms.

13 And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers.

Which would be more grievous to their parents, and more dangerous to themselves, because of the tenderness of that sex, and liahness to many injuries.

14 And ^mhe will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your oliveyards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants.

He will take your fields, to wit, by fraud or force, as Ahab did from Naboth. And give them to his servants: he will not only take the fruits of your lands for his own use, but will take away your possessions to give to his servants.

15 And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his [†]officers, and to his servants.

He will take the tenth: besides the several tenths which God hath reserved for his service and servants, he will, when he pleaseth, impose another tenth upon you. To his officers, Heb. to his eunuchs; which may be properly understood, and may imply a further injury, that he should, against the command of God, make some of his people eunuchs, and take those into his court and favour which God would have cast out of the congregation.

16 And he will take your menservants, and your maidservants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work.

By constraint, and without sufficient recompence.

17 He will take the tenth of your sheep: and ye shall be his servants.

i. e. He shall use you like slaves, and deprive you of that liberty which you now enjoy.

18 And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the LORD ⁿwill not hear you in that day.

Ye shall cry out in that day; ye shall bitterly mourn for the sad effects of this inordinate desire of a king. The LORD will not hear you in that day, because you will not hear him, nor obey his counsel, in this day. Compare Prov. i. 24, &c.; Zech. vii. 13.

19 ¶ Nevertheless the people ^orefused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, Nay; but we will have a king over us;

They said, Nay, i. e. these things shall never be, these are but vain suppositions to affright us from our purpose. Thus they are not ashamed to give Samuel the lie, of whose modesty, integrity, and prophetic spirit they had so great assurance, as if he had feigned those pretences merely to keep the power in his own and his sons' hands. We will have a king over us; we will have a king, whatsoever it cost us, although all thy predictions should be verified.

20 That we also may be ^plike all the nations; and that our king may judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles.

That we also may be like all the nations: woeful stupidity! whereas it was their glory and happiness that they were unlike all other nations, Numb. xxiii. 9; Deut. xxxiii. 28, as in other glorious privileges, so especially in this, that the Lord was their only and immediate King and Lawgiver.

21 And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and he rehearsed them in the ears of the LORD.

He repeated them privately between God and himself; partly for his own vindication and comfort; and partly as a foundation for his prayers to God, for direction and assistance in this difficult case.

22 And the LORD said to Samuel, ^qHearken unto their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel said unto the men of Israel, Go ye every man unto his city.

Betake yourselves to your several occasions, till you hear more from me in this matter; for God hath heard your words, and will give way to your irregular and obstinate desire; and accordingly I shall wait upon God for the determination of the person, which he hath wholly reserved to himself, as for judges, so for the king also, Deut. xvii. 15, and for the regulation of all the circumstances.

CHAP. IX.

The genealogy of Kish, 1. Saul's person, 2. He is sent to seek his father's asses, 3. He travels through the country, and finds them not, 4, 5. By the counsel of his servant, 6—10, and the direction of young maidens, 11—14, according to God's revelation, 15—17, he cometh to Samuel, who meets him; entertaineth him at the feast; telleth him the asses were found, and he should be king, 18—20. Saul's amazement, 21. Samuel gives him the highest place, and a peculiar dish; eats with him, 22—24. After secret communication leadeth him on the way; the servant goes before; Saul stands still with Samuel, 25—27.

NOW there was a man of Benjamin, whose name was ^aKish, the son of Abiel, the son of Zeror, the son of Bechorath, the son of Aphiah, ¶ a Benjamite, a mighty man of ¶ power.

Whose name was Kish. Object. His name was Ner, 1 Chron. viii. 33; ix. 39. Answer. Either his father had two names, as was usual among the Hebrews; or Kish was really his father that begot him; and Ner, the brother of Kish, 1 Sam. xiv. 51; 1 Chron. ix. 36, is called his father, because, upon the death of Kish, he took the care of his education, and brought him up as his own son. A Benjamite, Heb. the son of a man of Jemini, i. e. either of Benjamin, or of a place, or of a man, called Jemini. A mighty man of power, i. e. a man of great courage and strength; which tends to Saul's commendation: otherwise, a man of great wealth. But that seems confuted by Saul's words below, ver. 21, and the people's contempt of him, chap. x. 27.

not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he : ^b from his shoulders and upward he was higher than any of the people.

And a goodly, Heb. good, i. e. comely and personable, as that word is used, Gen. vi. 2; as evil is put for deformed, Gen. xli. 19. He was higher than any of the people : a tall stature was much valued in a king in ancient times, and in the eastern countries.

3 And the asses of Kish Saul's father were lost. And Kish said to Saul his son, Take now one of the servants with thee, and arise, go seek the asses.

Which were there of great price and use, Judg. x. 4; xii. 14, because of the scarcity of horses, Deut. xvii. 16, and therefore not held unworthy of Saul's seeking, at least in those ancient times, when simplicity, humility, and industry were in fashion among persons of quality.

4 And he passed through mount Ephraim, and passed through the land of ^cShalisha, but they found them not; then they passed through the land of Shalim, and there they were not : and he passed through the land of the Benjamites, but they found them not.

Mount Ephraim; a part of the tribe of Ephraim, which bordered upon Benjamin; and therefore they could soon pass out of the one into the other, and back again, as they saw cause.

5 And when they were come to the land of Zuph, Saul said to his servant that was with him, Come, and let us return; lest my father leave caring for the asses, and take thought for us.

The land of Zuph; in which was Ramah, called also Ramah, or Ramathaim-zophim, the place of Samuel's birth and habitation, 1 Sam. i. 1; vii. 17.

6 And he said unto him, Behold now, there is in this city ^da man of God, and he is an honourable man; ^eall that he saith cometh surely to pass : now let us go thither; peradventure he can shew us our way that we should go.

A man of God; a prophet, as that phrase is used, 1 Sam. ii. 27; Josh. xiv. 6; Judg. xiii. 6. An honourable man; one of great reputation for his skill and faithfulness. All that he saith cometh surely to pass; his declaration of things secret or future are always certain, and confirmed by the event. Our way that we should go; the course we should take to find the asses. He saith peradventure, because he doubted whether so great a prophet would seek, or God would grant him, a revelation concerning such mean matters; although sometimes God was pleased herein to condescend to his people, to cut off all pretence or occasion of seeking to witches or heathenish divination. See 1 Kings xiv. 2; 2 Kings i. 3.

7 Then said Saul to his servant, But, behold, if we go, what shall we bring the man? for the bread ^fis spent in our vessels, and there is not a present to bring to the man of God: what ^ghave we?

The bread is spent in our vessels : this he saith, because bread was not unusually given by way of present, as we see, 1 Sam. x. 3, 4. Or bread is put for all manner of provisions, as is frequent; and among these they might have something not unfit, in these plain times, to make a present of, as clusters of raisins, or cakes of figs, such as Abigail presented to David, 1 Sam. xxv. 18. See also 1 Kings xiv. 3; 2 Kings iv. 42. There is not a present; such presents were then made to the prophets, 1 Kings xiv. 2, 3; 2 Kings iv. 42; viii. 8; either as a testimony of respect to him as their superior; upon which account subjects made presents to their kings, 1 Sam. x. 27; and the Persians never came to their king without some gift : or as a grateful acknowledgment of his favour; or for the support of the prophets themselves; or of the sons of the prophets; or of other persons in want, known to them.

8 And the servant answered Saul again, and said, Behold, ^h† I have here at hand the fourth part of a shekel of silver : that will I give to the man of God, to tell us our way.

The fourth part of a shekel of silver was near a groat; which, though now it may seem a contemptible gift, yet in those ancient times it was certainly of far more worth, and better accepted than now it would be, when the covetousness, and pride, and luxury of men have raised their expectations and desires to far greater things.

9 (Beforetime in Israel, when a man ⁱwent to enquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer : for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called ^ha Seer.)

Of God; or, a man of God, which signified the same thing. Was called a seer, because he did discern and could discover things secret and unknown to others. And these are the words, either, first, Of some later sacred writer, which, after Samuel's death, inserted this verse. Or, secondly, Of Samuel, who, being probably fifty or sixty years old at the writing of this book, and speaking of the state of things in his first days, might well call it beforetime. Or rather, thirdly, Of Saul's servant, who might be now stricken in years, and might speak this either by his knowledge of what was in his juvenile years, or upon the information of his father or ancestors. And so it is a fit argument to persuade Saul to go to the man of God, that he might show them their way, and where the asses were, because he was likely to inform them; for the prophets were anciently called seers, because they knew and could reveal hidden things. And the meaning is, that anciently they were not vulgarly called prophets, but seers only; whereas now, and afterwards, they were called seers, yet they were more commonly called prophets.

10 Then said Saul to his servant, ^h† Well said; come, let us go. So they went unto the city where the man of God was.

11 ¶ And as they went up ⁱ† the hill to the city, ⁱ they found young maidens going out to draw water, and said unto them, Is the seer here?

Going out, i. e. out of the city, and down to the bottom of the hill, where the fountain or river was.

12 And they answered them, and said, He is; behold, he is before you : make haste now, for he came to day to the city; for ^kthere is a ^{||}sacrifice of the people to day ^lin the high place :

He came to-day to the city : she so speaks, though this was his own constant habitation, because he had been travelling abroad, possibly in his circuit, described 1 Sam. vii. 16, 17, and was now returned to his own house in Ramah, as he used to do, and so she implies they come in a good and seasonable time to meet with him. There is a sacrifice, otherwise feast; but it seems to be understood of a sacrifice. First, Because so the Hebrew word signifies most properly, and most frequently. Secondly, Because this eating was in the high place, which was the common place for sacrifices, but not for private feasts. Thirdly, The prophet's presence was not so necessary for a feast as for a sacrifice. Of the people; so this sacrifice is called, because this was a public solemnity, and possibly the new moon, when the people brought several sacrifices, to wit, peace-offerings, whereof part fell to the offerer's share; and of these parts united together, they here made a common feast; not without Samuel's direction, who being forewarned the day before, by God, of Saul's coming, made this feast more solemn for his entertainment, ver. 22—24. In the high place; upon the hill mentioned ver. 11, and near the altar which Samuel built for this kind of use, 1 Sam. vii. 17, by Divine dispensation, as was there noted; otherwise to sacrifice in high places was forbidden by the law, after the building of the tabernacle.

13 As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth bless the sacrifice; and afterwards they eat that be bidden. Ye shall straightway find him, at home and at leisure. To eat the relics of the sacrifices, according to the manner. He doth bless the sacrifice, i. e. either, first, The meat left of the sacrifice, which is the matter of the following feast; as this is commonly understood. Or rather, secondly, The sacrifice itself. For what reason is there to depart from the proper signification of the word? For that the sacrifices under the law were accompanied with confession, or petition, or thanksgiving, may be gathered from divers places of Scripture, as Lev. v. 5; xvi. 21; Numb. v. 7; Luke i. 10. And who so proper to perform this work as Samuel, an eminent prophet? And the blessing of this sacrifice seems to have consisted both of thanksgiving, this being a thank-offering, and of prayer to God for his acceptance, Psal. xx. 3. Now therefore get you up with speed, lest he be set down before you come.

15 ¶ Now the LORD had † told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying,

In his ear, i. e. secretly. A day before Saul came, that he might prepare himself for Saul's reception.

16 To morrow about this time I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be captain over my people Israel, that he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines: for I have ° looked upon my people, because their cry is come unto me.

I will send thee a man; I will by my secret providence so dispose of matters, and of the hearts of Saul and his father, that Saul shall come to thee, though with another design. That he may save my people out of the hand of the Philistines; for though they were now most pressed with the Ammonites, as we read, chap. xii. 12, yet they looked upon these as a land-flood, which they hoped would be soon up, and soon down again; but the Philistines, their constant, inveterate, and nearest enemies, they most dreaded. And from these Saul did in some measure save them, and should have saved them much more, if his and the people's manifold sins had not hindered it. I have looked upon my people, to wit, with compassion and resolution to help them; a usual synecdoche. Their cry, i. e. their earnest prayers to me for help.

Unto him; in his ear, as before, ver. 15, by secret instinct, so as none but he could hear it.

18 Then Saul drew near to Samuel in the gate, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, where the seer's house is.

In the gate; the gate, either, first, Of Samuel's house. But he was come out thence before, ver. 14. Or rather, secondly, Of the city; for the word gate being put by itself, according to reason and common use, must be understood of the most eminent in its kind, which the gate of the city is. And through this gate Samuel seems now to have been passing to go to the high place, which probably was without the city; and there he makes a stand, to hear what these persons now approaching to him were about to speak.

19 And Samuel answered Saul, and said, I am the seer: go up before me unto the high place; for ye shall eat with me to day, and to morrow I will let thee go, and will tell thee all that is in thine heart.

Either all that thou desirest to know, as concerning the asses; or rather, the secret thoughts of thy heart, or such actions as none know but God and thy own heart; that so thou mayst be assured of the truth and certainty of that which I am to acquaint thee with. And this might be done, though it be not here particularly related.

20 And as for thine asses that were lost † three days ago, set not thy mind on them; for they are found. And on whom is all the desire of Israel? Is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house?

Set not thy mind on them; trouble not thy mind about them. On whom is all the desire of Israel? who is he that shall be that thing or person which all Israel desire to have, to wit, a king? Is it not on thee, and on all thy father's house? that honour is designed for thee, and, after thy death, for thy family or posterity, if by thy sin thou dost not cut off the entail.

21 And Saul answered and said, Am not I a Benjamite, of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and ° my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? wherefore then speakest thou † so to me?

The smallest of the tribes; for so indeed this was, having been all cut off except six hundred, Judg. xx., which blow they never recovered, and therefore they were scarce reckoned as an entire tribe, but only as a remnant or fragment of a tribe; and being ingrafted into Judah, in the division between the ten tribes and the two, they in some sort lost their name, and they, together with Judah, were accounted but one tribe, as 1 Kings xi. 32, &c. The least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin, i. e. one of the least; obscure and inconsiderable, in comparison of divers others; whence it may seem that Saul's family was not so noble and wealthy as some imagine; see on ver. 1. Wherefore then speakest thou so to me? why dost thou feed me with vain hopes of the kingdom?

22 And Samuel took Saul and his servant, and brought them into the parlour, and made them sit in the chiefest place among them that were bidden, which were about thirty persons.

He honoured his servant for Saul's sake; thereby both giving all the guests occasion to think how great that person was, or should be, whose very servant was advanced above the chief persons of the city, who were doubtless present upon this occasion; and showing how far himself was from envying Saul that honour and power, which was to be translated from him to Saul. Made them sit in the chiefest place; thereby to raise all their expectation, and to prepare them for giving that honour to Saul which his approaching dignity required.

23 And Samuel said unto the cook, Bring the portion which I gave thee, of which I said unto thee, Set it by thee.

Or, which I appointed or disposed to thee, i. e. which I bade thee reserve for this use.

24 And the cook took up * the shoulder, and that which was upon it, and set it before Saul. And Samuel said, Behold that which is † left! set it before thee, and eat: for unto this time hath it been
