

A COMMENTARY ON THE HOLY BIBLE

by Matthew Poole

VOLUME I: GENESIS-JOB

THE BANNER OF TRUTH TRUST

THE BANNER OF TRUTH TRUST
3 Murrayfield Road, Edinburgh, EH12 6EL
P.O. Box 621, Carlisle, Pennsylvania 17013, U.S.A.

*

First Edition Published 1685

This Edition 1962

Reprinted 1968

Reprinted 1975

Reprinted 1979

ISBN for set of three volumes 0 85151 211 9

ISBN for this volume 0 85151 134 1

*

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY OFFSET LITHOGRAPHY BY BILLING & SONS LTD, GUILDFORD, LONDON AND WORCESTER

PREFACE

TO

FIRST EDITION¹

THE same reason which teacheth us to conclude that there is a First Being, and must be a First Cause and Mover, (whom we call God,) "that it is he who hath made us, and not we ourselves," and that "we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture," will also oblige us to "enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise," and to "be thankful unto him" by fulfilling his will; which we cannot do without some revelation of it to us. God therefore having ceased to speak to men face to face, as to Abraham, and Moses, &c., (which he never ordinarily did but to some particular favourites,) we are by reason enforced to conclude that there are some books in the world in which this revelation is to be found. The church of God (the mother of us all) hath constantly held forth the books of the Old and New Testament (which we have in our Bibles) for this sacred revelation, which hath justly obliged all her children to look upon them as hung out to them for that use upon that noble pillar the church. Looking into them upon the church's notice, (as the child does upon the mother's telling it, That is the sun,) every reasonable man finds them of so venerable antiquity, and discerneth in them such stamps of divinity, in the majesty of their style, the purity of the matter, the sublimeness and spirituality of the propositions contained in them, the self-denial of the penmen, the heavenliness of the scope and end of those sacred writings, the harmony of the parts, the seal of miracles, and principally in the mighty power and efficacy of them upon the souls and consciences of multitudes, both for conviction, and for support and consolation, that he easily concludes, This is the voice of God, and not of man; and looks back upon his mother the church, (as a child upon his nurse,) thanking her for showing him such a treasure, and saying, as the Samaritans to their countrywomen, John iv. 42, Now we believe these books are the word of God, not because of thy saying so, but because we have looked into them ourselves, and find them of a different style, nature, and matter, and to have a different scope, end, power, and efficacy upon the souls of men, from what any other writings in the world have. Though the truth is, that until a man comes to be fully persuaded of the truth of them from the same Spirit that dictated them, every soul will be as apt to waver in his faith, concerning their being the word of God, as he in Tully, who only believed the immortality of the soul from the reading of Plato's book, which (if I remember right) the Roman orator expresseth in words to this sense: I have read over Plato's book again and again; but I know not how it comes to pass, so long as I am reading I agree with it; but no sooner is the book out of my hands but de immortalitate animæ dubitare cœpi, I begin to doubt whether the soul be immortal, yea or no. But, however, in one degree or other every Christian makes that the principle of his religion, that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are the word of God. Some believe it more faintly and uncertainly, some more fixedly and firmly; and accordingly the faith of persons, as to them, is more or less operative.

This revelation of the Divine will was made perfect gradually, (as it pleased God in succeeding times to reveal what was his secret will before, but hid from ages,) so as (if chronologers compute right) there were more than fifteen hundred years passed betwixt the writing of the first book of Genesis by Moses, and the Revelation (which was the last) by John; and divines generally judge that he sealed up the book by those words, Rev. xxii. 18, 19. So that, as to things to be believed or done, we are to expect no further revelation.

When "the mighty God, even the Lord," had thus spoken, and God had thus "shined out of Zion, the perfection of beauty," it was but reasonable that his people should come to the knowledge of what he had said, that they might answer the end of the revelation both by believing and obeying.

The Old Testament being written in the Hebrew tongue, when great multitudes of the Hebrews or Jews, by their captivity in Babylon, had much forgotten or corrupted their own language, it was thought reasonable there should be a Chaldaic paraphrase; and the wisdom of Divine Providence provided a Septuagint version, as for the benefit of others, ¹ This work was originally published under the title "Annotations on the Holy Bible" in two volumes—Vol. I (Genesis to Isaiah) in 1683 and Vol. II (Jeremiah to Revelation) in 1685. As Matthew Poole did not live to complete the work beyond Isaiah 58, the remainder of the Annotations were compiled by various other divines, who also wrote the Preface. In executing their work they drew largely from Poole's own Synopsis Criticorum—a massive work in five folio volumes written in Latin and designed to bring into one view whatever had been written by critics of all ages and nations on the books of Holy Scripture. Thus the complete commentary although not compiled entirely by Poole is nevertheless largely the fruit of his labours.—THE PUBLISHERS.

so possibly of the Jews themselves, the most of whom, before Christ's time, were more Grecians than Hebricians; and it is generally thought that all the books of the New Testament were written in the Grecian language.

When it pleased God that the gospel should be preached to all nations, and the sound of it go to the ends of the earth, he so ordered it also, that soon after true religion came into any place, some were stirred up to translate those holy books into the language of that country; and he so far assisted them, that though in many lesser things they failed through want of a knowledge of the just propriety of some words in Hebrew or Greek, or the use of particles in those languages, yet they failed not in any thing whereby the reader might be led into any pernicious error touching his salvation. And we shall observe the penmen of the New Testament giving such a deference to the commonly received version in their times, that although the Septuagint version which we have appears to us more dissonant from the Hebrew than any other, yet most of the quotations of the Old Testament which we have in the New are apparently from that version; which teacheth us, that it is not every private minister's work to make a new version of the Scripture, but he ought to acquiesce in the version which God hath provided for the church wherein he lives, and not ordinarily, or upon light grounds, to enter into a dissent to it; and if in any thing he sees it necessary to do it, yet not to do it (as to a particular text) without great modesty, and a preface of reverence.

This translation of the Scriptures into a language understood by all people in that country into which the church came was looked upon so reasonable and necessary, as it was opposed by none till the papists had patched up a religion, for the upholding of which it was necessary for them to maintain, that ignorance was the mother of devotion; after which it was very difficult in any places where these spiritual tyrants had a dominion to get the Scriptures translated into the language of that country. Not to instance in other places, we shall give some short account of England. Our records tell us of a translation of some part of them into the Saxon language (which was then a great part of ours) within seven hundred years after Christ, and of the translation of the whole into the same language by Beda within forty years after. Beda was himself a papist, but the mystery of iniquity grew up gradually to its height. Soon after, Bibles which the people could understand were very scarce commodities in England, and thus it continued for six hundred years. Wickliff, who lived in the time of Richard II., and died 1384, being the first we know of afterward who translated the Scriptures into a language understood by any who were not skilled in some or other of the three learned languages. That great man easily understood, that without the Scriptures in their own language the people must take all for the will of God that their priests told them was so, and that the popish priests were generally persons of ignorance, and impudence enough to entitle God to any of their own blasphemies and superstitions. But within thirty years after the death of Wickliff, viz. anno 1414, the council (or conventicle rather) of Constance decreed all Wickliff's books to the fire; and though some were spared, yet the battle was so hard that there were very few that escaped. This was our state till the year 1527, (in all which year the poor people of the land of our nativity were without a teaching Bible, (as to the common people,) and indeed without a teaching priest,) yea, and for some time after this, as we shall hear.

In the year 1527 God put it into the heart of Mr. Tindall to translate the New Testament into English; as also the five books of Moses (he being then an exile in Germany for his religion). But he lost all his papers by a shipwreck in his passage to Hamburg, and had his work to begin again; which yet that faithful and most unwearied servant of God did accomplish, adding some prefaces to the several books, and some notes to the particular chapters and verses; the publishing of which much nettled the popish bishops in England, and all means were then used to suppress it. Amongst others, the then bishop of London advised with one Packington a merchant of that city concerning the best accommodate mean to that design. The merchant could think of none so probable, as with a sum of money to buy up the whole impression. The bishop approving it, furnished him with a round sum to that purpose; which the

Sculteri Annales,
in anno 1532.

merchant (being more a friend to Mr. Tindall than the bishop knew) sent to Mr. Tindall, and had the impression sent him (some few copies being (as we must imagine) first sold off). With this money Mr. Tindall supported himself in his exile, and was also enabled to go on with his translation of the other part of the Bible, and to prepare a perfect English Bible. In the mean time, a passage happened so pleasant, that I shall think it worth the while here to relate it: Sir Thomas More being lord chancellor, and having several persons accused for heresy, and ready for execution, offered to compound with one of them for his life, upon the easy terms of his discovery to him who they were in London that maintained Tindall beyond sea. After that the poor man had got as good a security for his life as the honour and truth of the chancellor could give him, he told him it was the bishop of London maintained him, by sending him a sum of money to buy up the impression of his Testaments. The chancellor smiled, saying that he believed he said true. Thus was the poor confessor's life saved. But to return to our story. In the year 1536 Mr. Tindall was martyred at Villefort in Flanders, for translating into English the New Testament and part of the Old (saith Sir Richard Baker). But his great adversary, Sir Thomas More, was the year before gone to his own place, being executed for treason. Mr. Tindall and Mr. Coverdale, (as Mr. Fox telleth us,) before Mr. Tindall's death, had translated the whole Bible. But it came not out till after his death, under the name of Thomas Matthews (with the addition of the Apocrypha, translated by John Rogers). The Lord Cromwell, with Archbishop Cranmer, presented it to the king, and obtained an order from his majesty for leave for any of his subjects to read it; but this was not without the great regret of the bishops.

George Constantine.

About thirteen years after this (or not so much) the Lord Cromwell obtained letters from King Henry VIII. for a subject of his to reprint at Paris the Bible in English; the king also wrote a letter to Bonner (at that time his ambassador in France) to further it. Grafton and Whitchurch undertook the work, upon what seeming encouragement from Bonner may be read in Mr. Fox's 2nd vol. of his Martyrology, pref. 1641, p. 515, 516. But how it came to pass I cannot tell, (though Bonner's treachery was suspected in the case,) when it was upon the point finished, the copies were seized, and ordered to be burnt, and the work had wholly ceased but for the covetousness of the officer, who sold four great dry fats filled with them to a haberdasher to lay caps in. By this means having recovered some copies, they came to London, and there made a new impression.

But after this, my Lord Cromwell being put to death, the bishops and popish party made so great complaint to the king, (whose warmth for the Reformation much abated in the latter part of his life,) that the sale of the English Bible was again prohibited, and the printer imprisoned; and although the bishops promised the king they would make a more correct translation, yet it was never done during that king's reign.

But in the year of our Lord 1577, which was the nineteenth or twentieth of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, some bishops published a new translation; but till that time the Bibles used in churches were Tindall's and Coverdale's, being allowed by the public authority of King Edward VI., 1549—1552. And to this day the Psalms in our Service Book are according to Tindall's and Coverdale's Bibles; which should make us wary in our censures of that translation, though we see reason in many things to dissent from it. Only we having a more correct translation established by authority, why (for the avoiding the offence of the less knowing people) we have not made use of that, but retained a translation not undertaken by any public authority, and confessed to be more imperfect, is what I cannot, nor count myself obliged to account for. Possibly God for the honour of his martyr hath so ordered it.

After this, King James coming to the crown, being a prince of great learning and judgment, and observing the different usage of some words in his age from the usage of them in King Henry VIII. or in Queen Elizabeth's time, and also the several mistakes (though of a minute nature) in those more ancient versions, was pleased to employ divers learned men in making a new translation, which is that which at this day is generally used. With what reverence to former translators, what labour, and care, and pains they accomplished their work, the reader may see at large in their preface prefixed to those copies that are printed in folio, and in their epistle to King James in our Bibles of a lesser form; of which translation (though it may not be without its more minute errors) yet I think it may be said that it is hardly exceeded by that of any other church.

By this history (reader) thou mayst understand the mighty workings of Divine Providence, and wonderful goodness of God to this nation in the plenty we have of Bibles, and that of a very correct translation (though possibly not in every little thing perfect). Mr. Fox (if we remember right) tells us a story of two maids in Lincolnshire, that in Queen Mary's time parted with a considerable part of their estate for a few leaves of the Bible. How good is God to us, that we for a few shillings can have the whole revelation of the Divine will! upon which account we offer it to the consideration of any thinking English man or woman, what he or she will answer for his or her ignorance in the Holy Scriptures, or for the ignorance of his or her children, if (having so much means as we have to learn to read) any shall neglect the teaching of their children to read it, or learning themselves, in case their parents have neglected them; or, being able to read, shall neglect the practice of it, in exercising himself in the law of the Lord day and night, and living up to the rule of it. The English Bible is come to us at the price of the blood of one martyr, and the unwearied labour of a multitude of holy and learned men, succeeding one another for more than sixty years, before we had the translation so perfect as now it is in all hands.

Poor Christians in popish countries either have not this pot of spiritual food, or must cry out, "Death is in the pot." Our English translators in their preface observe, that of late the church of Rome would seem to bear something of a motherly affection to her children, and allow them the Scriptures in the mother tongue; but it is indeed a gift not worthy of its name. They must first get a licence in writing before they use them; and, to get that, they must approve themselves to their confessors to be such as are, if not frozen in the dregs, yet soured with the leaven, of their superstition. Yet this seemed too much to Clement the Eighth, who therefore frustrated the grant of Pius the Fourth. They will allow none to be read but the Doway Bibles, and the Rhemish Testaments, (the corruptions of which have been sufficiently manifested by many learned men,) nor will they trust their people with these without the licence of their own bishops and inquisitors. This is the liberty they boast of giving to any of their religion to read the Scriptures in English; what it is worth let any man judge.

In the mean time, those who are not affected with the mercy of God to us in this particular, must declare themselves neither to have any just value for God in the mighty workings of his providence to bring this about; nor yet for the blood of holy Mr. Tindall, who died in his testimony to this truth, that no people ought to be deprived of so great a good; nor for the labours and pains of those many servants of God who travailed in this great work, and thought no labour in it too much; nor indeed for their own souls, to the salvation of which, if the Holy Scripture in our own language doth not highly contribute, we must lay the blame upon ourselves.

But although we have the Bible in a language we understand, yet we may see reason to cry out as Bernard does with reference to the Song of Solomon, Here is an excellent nut, but who shall crack it? heavenly bread, but who shall break it? For though the papists and such as have ill will to the good of souls make too great an improvement of the difficulties in holy writ, in making them an argument against the people's having them in a language which they can understand; (for Augustine said true when he said, 'There are fords in them wherein lambs may wade, as well as depths in which elephants may swim;') and what others observe is as true, that things necessary to be believed or done in order to salvation, lie plain and obvious in holy writ: yet it is as true, that there is much of holy writ of which the generality of people must say as the eunuch, "How can I understand, except some man should guide me?" Acts viii. 31; (not to mention the seeming contradictions that are betwixt the holy penmen of those sacred books;) and indeed it is hard to say what book of Scripture is so plain that every one who runneth can read it with understanding (such a vast difference there is betwixt the capacities of those who yet have the same honest hearts). This hath made wise and learned men not only see a need of larger commentaries, but also of shorter notes, annotations, and paraphrases, &c. Nor is this a late discovery. It is upward of three hundred years since Lyra wrote his short notes upon the whole Bible. What Vatablus and Erasmus (though all of them papists) have done since is sufficiently known, to say nothing of many others of that religion. Amongst the Reformed churches, there hath been a learned Piscator in Germany, Junius and Tremellius elsewhere, who did the same things; but all these wrote their notes in Latin, not in the peculiar language of any country. The ancientest notes we have in English were those ordinarily known by the name of the Geneva Notes, after two years labour finished 1560, by those good men who, flying from Queen Mary's persecution, took sanctuary there. A work so acceptable to protestants in the beginning of our Reformation, that their Bible with those Notes annexed was (as is observed by the authors of our late English Annotations) printed above thirty times over by Queen Elizabeth's printers and their heirs and successors. There wanted not one indeed who fifty years after boldly reflected on that excellent work in the most public pulpit of our University of Oxford; but how grateful his reflections were to the University at that time may be read in the preface to the English Annotations: he was in the same pulpit checked and confuted by the doctor of the chair, and suspended by the governors of the University. The labours of Erasmus in his Paraphrase on the New Testament were so acceptable, that by public order they were to be in every church exposed to public view and use, and (if we mistake not) ought to be so still. After these, were published Diodate's Notes written in Italian, since translated into English. About the year 1640 some deliberations were taken for the composing and printing other English notes (the old Geneva Notes not so well fitting our new and more correct translation of the Bible). These were at first intended to be so short, that they might be printed together with our Bibles in folio or quarto. But those divines who were engaged in it found this would not answer their end; it being not possible by so short notes to give people any tolerable light into the whole text; yet they so contracted their work, that it was all despatched in one volume; which though it were at first greedily bought up, yet we cannot say it gave so general a satisfaction (by reason of the shortness of it) as was desired and expected. So as upon the second edition it came forth quite a new thing, making two just volumes. This was so acceptable to the world, that within sixteen years it was ready for a third edition, with some further enlargements; before which also were published the Dutch Annotations translated into our language.

So that at this day (besides the shorter Geneva Notes) we have three sorts of annotations in our own language; those of famous Diodate, the Dutch Annotations, and those of our own divines (originally so wrote). After which, new annotations may seem superfluous. It seems therefore reasonable that we should give our readers some short account of our undertaking. We dare say nothing could be further from the thoughts of our reverend brother (now at rest with God) who at first began this work, than to reflect any dishonour upon those eminent persons who laboured before in works of this nature, nor is any thing further from our thoughts. (They all of them did famously in their generations.) And if it should appear to any of our readers that any of us have seen further into any particular texts than those did who went before us, yet we hope all our readers will understand there is little honour due to us upon that account, because we had all their shoulders to stand upon.

The pains which our reverend brother (ὁ μακαρίτης) took in his Synopsis Criticorum is such, as not only will make his name live in the churches of Christ, but also eminently fitted him for giving the sense of the whole Scripture in Annotations of this nature, which he undertook and carried on by his own hand to the 58th of Isaiah, designing that two volumes should comprehend the whole, and that the first should determine with his notes upon the Song of Solomon. What occasioned his first thoughts and undertaking himself tells us in his paper of proposals published with reference to that work, in these words: "But although there are many excellent comments upon divers parts of the Scripture, and some entire comments, or large annotations, upon the whole, in the English tongue; yet because of the too much brevity of some, and the unequal composure of others, as being done by divers hands, and the prolixity of those that have been written upon particular books, it hath been often and earnestly wished that there were some short and full comment, wherein all those passages which need the help of an interpreter might be sufficiently cleared," &c. As the first edition of our English Annotations, after which followed the translation of those of the learned Diodate into our language, and then those of the Low Country divines of Holland, (though all of them deservedly valuable,) seemed much too short to satisfy the thirst of many pious souls after the fuller knowledge of the Scriptures; so the larger edition of our English Annotations seems capable of some amendments, by which they might be made more serviceable to those that use them, especially in these particulars.

1. The whole text is not printed in them, so as those who will use them must make use of a Bible also for the understanding of them. Our reverend brother (with whom also we concur) rightly judged that it would be of more advantage to have the entire text in the reader's eye while he is seeking the sense of any particular place, and while he reads a chapter to have a commentary under his eye in which he might find the sense of any part of it, and satisfy himself as to any difficulty occurring in it.

2. As some (very eminently learned men) had been too large in those Annotations, (saying almost all that hath been said by any upon the texts they handled,) so others had been as much too short, and that especially in the New Testament (which seems to Christians to need the fullest explication); and others, from their variety of learning, had mixed several quotations out of the fathers, and critical and philological notions, possibly not so proper for the end for which such annotations are designed, which is to give the unlearned Christians the true sense of the Holy Scriptures, that those who can, might read and understand the will of God.

That our reader may not mistake our design or undertaking, we desire that he should know, that we do not pretend (as some have vainly fancied) to translate Mr. Pool's Synopsis Criticorum; that would have asked six volumes instead of two; and when it had been done, would have signified very little, unless for those who (being learned men) needed no such translation: possibly in a whole leaf of that book six lines would not serve our purpose. Nor have we had any ambition either to say something that none had said before us, (we have observed that those who have had such an itch have for the most part happened to say what those who came after them would not subscribe,) nor yet to say all that we knew was said before us; (that had been to have confounded our readers only with a variety of senses;) we have only hinted the senses which in our judgment have seemed fairest, and least constrained, and shortly showed the consonancy of them to other scriptures. We have avoided all polemical discourses, as no way proper to our design, and very rarely hinted those practical conclusions which have arose from the text when opened (the most we have done of that nature is in our discourses upon the parables).

Our reverend brother (designing but two volumes, and the first to end with the Song of Solomon, though since it hath been determined to conclude it with the prophet Isaiah, that all which he lived to finish might be comprehended in one volume) had a hard task to contract his discourses so as to bring them within that compass, and thereby was necessitated not to give the entire sense of each verse in his notes, but only of those words or terms in the verse which he conceived to stand in need of explication, referring by letters in the text to the parts of the commentary. This was not necessary in such parts of the Scripture where the entire sense of the whole text is given; nor indeed as to some parts in it possible (such we mean as are opened harmonically); of which nature are the three first evangelists. It is confessed by all, that the evangelists make up but one entire history, though some of them have some things which the others have not, and they seldom agree in the phrases and circumstances of any one piece of history. This made it reasonable that, with the interpretation of one evangelist, should be joined what the others had with reference to the same piece of history; which method hath been accordingly pursued (being the same in which the most judicious Mr. Calvin and others have gone before us); nor indeed could any other course have been taken without a needless writing the same things over again; so as that in our notes upon Mark we have only enlarged in the explication of what he hath which we did not meet with before in Matthew; and in the explication of Luke, we have only opened what he hath which was not in Matthew or Mark. Where they all three concurred, or but two of them concurred, in any story, we have opened what they all or both say in our notes upon the first of them; and when we have come to it again in one or both the other, we have only referred to our former notes. John (having little which the other evangelists have) we have considered by himself mostly, yet sometimes taking in something from him, where we found it compleatory of any thing related by the other evangelists.

In magnis voluisse sat est. We cannot say that we have left no room for others to come after us, and add to or correct what we have said. But this we can say in truth, that we have not willingly balked any obvious difficulty, and have designed a just satisfaction to all our readers; and if any knot remain yet untied, we have told our readers what hath been most probably said for their satisfaction in the untying of it.

If it had pleased God to have lent a little longer life to our reverend brother, the work had very probably been done to greater advantage, and more general satisfaction. We are but entered upon his harvest, and have wanted his sickle; we cannot pretend to any double portion of his spirit. His mantle dropped from him before he was translated (we mean his Synopsis). We have taken that up; out of that great work of his we have taken so much as we judged proper for his design in this work, and made use of a great number of other authors, some of which he left out, or very little considered, in his Synopsis, upon design to make a further use of them in this English work, as thinking their labours more proper for this than his other work.

Our design, good reader, was not to tell thee how the fathers interpreted texts, (Aquinas, Justinianus, and others have done that work,) nor yet to tell thee any grammatical niceties, or what learned men have critically noted upon terms or phrases, (that is done in the Synopsis Criticorum,) nor yet to tell thee what conclusions of truth may be raised from the verses, (that hath been done profitably upon many books of Scripture by Mr. Dickson, Hutchinson, Fergusson, Guild, Durham, and some others,) much less to handle the controversies that have risen from any portion of Scripture. Our work hath been only to give thee the plain sense of the Scripture, and to reconcile seeming contradictions where they occurred, and as far as we were able to open scripture by scripture, which is its own best interpreter, comparing things spiritual with spiritual, "that thy faith might not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the wisdom and power of God." If we have reached this end, it is all we aimed at; if thou gettest any good by what we have done, remember thy sacrifice is due at another altar, even His who "ministereth seed to the sower," who both watereth the furrows of the field, and blesseth the springing of the corn; let Him have the praise, and we only thy prayers, that we may live a useful life, and die a happy death, and "attain to the resurrection of the dead," in which we shall all see and understand more perfectly than we yet do.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES

CALLED

GENESIS

THE ARGUMENT.

THIS Book is called GENESIS, i. e. generation, or birth, giving an account of passages during 2300 years and upwards, viz. from the creation of all things, to the death of Joseph. In which history Moses, by Divine inspiration, treats of the creation of the world, with all the parts and uses in it, and of it, but chiefly of man, who alone was made after God's image; where he lays down God's concessions and prohibitions to him; and man's transgression, together with the woeful effects, and the remedy of them in the promise of a Saviour; the original, progress, and preservation of the true church, springing from Abel, and carried on by Seth, Enoch, &c.; and the ground and rise of apostacy, begun in Cain, and carried on by his posterity, separating themselves from the holy seed, till by their monstrous provocations they had brought a universal deluge to destroy all mankind from off the earth, excepting only Noah and his family; out of which, as the church did again spring forth, so another cursed race carrying on the former enmity to a greater height, not only fell into idolatry, after it had continued a considerable time in Sem's race, but breaking out into all outrages, and tyrannical oppressions, it was almost extinct among those numerous nations that Noah's posterity sprang out into. But God calling Abraham into the Land of Promise, who was an idolater in Chaldea, and giving him temporal and spiritual promises, and especially that of the Messiah coming out of his loins, and assuring it by a special covenant sealed by circumcision, the church began now to take root, and to be embodied in Jacob's family under the name of Israel; and here God undertook the protection of his people and worship, by the visible presence of Christ her Head, that Angel of the covenant, going continually with them, comforting and defending them, till they came into Egypt, where the church continued until Joseph's death; where this Book ends.

CHAPTER I.

The whole visible creation asserted in general, 1. Shewed in particular the condition of the rude matter of it, 2. The formation of the several creatures on the several days. (1.) Light produced by the powerful word of God, 3; approved and separated from the darkness, 4; named, and the first day declared, 5. (2.) The firmament formed, its use, name, and time, 6—8. (3.) The waters separated from the earth; sea and dry land named and approved, 9, 10. The earth brings forth grass, herbs, and trees; approved, and time declared, 11—13. (4.) The firmament furnished with sun, moon, and stars; their uses assigned, their names, with approbation, and time of doing, declared, 14—19. (5.) Waters and air furnished, approved, blessed, and time of it declared, 20—23. (6.) The earth furnished with living creatures sensitive, and approved, 24, 25. Rational man in both sexes created upon consultation, according to God's image, with dominion over the other creatures; and blessed, 26—28. Food appointed for man, 29; for beasts, 30: the whole approved on the sixth day.

In the beginning, to wit, of time and things, in the first place, before things were distinguished and perfected in manner hereafter expressed. Or the sense is this, The beginning of the world was thus. And this phrase further informeth us, that the world, and all things in it, had a beginning, and were not from eternity, as some philosophers dreamed.

God created the heaven and the earth; made out of nothing, either, 1. The heaven and earth as now they are with their inhabitants. So this verse is a summary or brief of what is particularly declared in the rest of this chapter. Or, 2. The substance and common matter of heaven and earth. Which seems more probably by comparing this verse with the next, where the earth here mentioned is declared to be without form, and the heavens without light; as also with Gen. ii. 1, where the heavens and the earth, here only said to be created, are said to be finished or perfected. Yet I conceive the third heaven to be included under the title of the heaven, and to have been created and perfected the first day, together with its blessed inhabitants the holy angels, as may be collected from Job xxxiii. 6, 7. But the Scripture being written for men, and not for angels, the Holy Ghost thought it sufficient to comprehend them and their dwelling-place under that general term of the heavens, and proceeded to give a more particular account of the visible heavens and earth, which were created for the use of man. In the Hebrew it is, the

B. C. 4004. IN the *beginning ^b God created the heaven and the earth.
 1. John 1. 1,
 2. Heb. 1. 10.
 3. Pa. 4. 3.
 4. ss. 6. & 89. 11, 12. & 102. 25. & 134. 5. & 141. 6. Is. 44. 24. Jer. 10. 12. & 51. 15. Zech. 12. 1. Acts 14. 15. & 17. 24. Col. 1. 16, 17. Heb. 11. 3. Her. 4. 11. & 10. 5.

heavens and the earth. For there are three heavens mentioned in Scripture: the aerial; the place of birds, clouds, and meteors, Matt. xxvi. 64; Rev. xix. 17; xx. 9. The starry; the region of the sun, the moon, and stars, Gen. xxii. 17. The highest or third heaven, 2 Cor. xii. 2; the dwelling of the blessed angels.

2 And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. ^c And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

^c Ps. 33. 6.
Is. 40. 13, 14.

The same confused mass or heap is here called both earth, from its most solid and substantial part; and the deep, from its vast bulk and depth; and waters, from its outward face and covering. See Psal. civ. 6; 2 Pet. iii. 5.

Without form and void; without order and beauty, and without furniture and use.

Upon the face, the surface or uppermost part of it, upon which the light afterward shone. Thus not the earth only, but also the heaven above it, was without light, as is manifest from the following verses.

The Spirit of God; not the wind, which was not yet created, as is manifest, because the air, the matter or subject of it, was not yet produced; but the Third Person of the glorious Trinity, called the Holy Ghost, to whom the work of creation is attributed, Job xxvi. 13, as it is ascribed to the Second Person, the Son, John i. 3; Col. i. 16, 17; Heb. i. 3, and to the First Person, the Father, every where.

Upon the face of the waters, i. e. upon the waters, to cherish, quicken, and dispose them to the production of the things after-mentioned. It is a metaphor from birds hovering and fluttering over, and sitting upon their eggs and young ones, to cherish, warm, and quicken them.

3 ^d And God said, 'Let there be light: and there was light.

^d Ps. 33. 9.
^e 2 Cor. 4. 6.

He commanded, not by such a word or speech as we use, which agreeth not with the spiritual nature of God; but either by an act of his powerful will, called the word of his power, Heb. i. 3; or, by his substantial Word, his Son, by whom he made the worlds, Heb. i. 2; Psal. xxxiii. 6, who is called, The Word, partly, if not principally, for this reason, John i. 1—3, 10.

There was light; which was some bright and lucid body, peradventure like the fiery cloud in the wilderness, giving a small and imperfect light, successively moving over the several parts of the earth; and afterwards condensed, increased, perfected, and gathered together in the sun.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided † the light from the darkness.

† Heb. between the light and between the darkness.

He observed with approbation that it was pleasant and amiable, agreeable to God's purpose and man's use; and made a distinction or separation between them in place, time, and use, that the one should succeed and shut out the other, and so by their vicissitudes make the day and the night.

5 And God called the light 'Day, and the darkness he called Night. † And the evening and the morning were the first day.

† Ps. 74. 16. & 104. 20.
† Heb. And the evening was, and the morning was.

It is acknowledged by all, that the evening and the morning are not here to be understood according to our common usage, but are put by a synecdoche each of them for one whole part of the natural day. But because it may be doubted which part each of them signifies, some understand by evening, the foregoing day; and by the morning, the foregoing night; and so the natural day begins with the morning or the light, as it did with the ancient Chaldeans. Others by evening understand the first night or darkness which was upon the face of the earth, ver. 2, which probably continued for the space of about twelve hours, the beginning whereof might fitly be called evening; and by morning the succeeding light or day, which may reasonably be supposed to continue the other twelve hours, or thereabouts. And this seems the truer opinion, 1. Because the darkness was before the light, as the evening is put before the morning, ver. 5 and 8, and afterwards. 2. Because this best agrees both with the vulgar and with the Scripture use of the terms of evening and morning. 3. Because the Jews, who had the best opportunity of knowing the mind of God in this matter by Moses and other succeeding prophets, begun both their common and sacred days with the evening, as is confessed, and may be gathered from Lev. xxiii. 32.

Were the first day; did constitute or make up the first day; day being taken largely for the natural day, consisting of twenty-four hours: these were the parts of the first day; and the like is to be understood of the succeeding days. Moreover, God, who could have made all things at once, was pleased to divide his work into six days, partly to give us occasion more distinctly and seriously to consider God's works, and principally to lay the foundation for the weekly sabbath, as is clearly intimated, Gen. ii. 2, 3; Exod. xx. 9—11.

6 ¶ And God said, 'Let there be a ^g firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the ^h waters.

^g Job 37. 18.
^h Ps. 136. 5.
Jer. 10. 12.
& 51. 15.
† Heb. expansion.

A firmament; or, an extension, or a space or place extended or stretched out, and spread abroad like a tent or curtain, between the waters, though not exactly in the middle place; as Tyrus is said to sit, or be situated in the midst of the seas, Ezek. xxviii. 2, though it was but a little space within the sea. But of these things see more in the next verse.

7 And God made the firmament, ⁱ and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were ^j above the firmament: and it was so.

ⁱ Prov. 8. 28.

^j Ps. 148. 4.

The firmament here is either, 1. The starry heaven; so called, not from its solidity, but from its fixed, durable, and, in a sort, incorruptible and unchangeable nature. Or, 2. The air; called here, the expansion, or extension, because it is extended far and wide, even from the earth to the third heaven; called also the firmament, because it is fixed in its proper place, from whence it cannot be moved, unless by force. The waters under the firmament are seas, rivers, lakes, fountains, and other waters in the bowels of the earth. The waters above the firmament, or above the heavens, as they are called, Psal. cxlviii. 4, are either, 1. A collection or sea of waters placed by God above all the visible heavens, and there reserved for ends known to himself. Or rather, 2. The waters in the clouds; for the clouds are called waters, Psal. xviii. 11; civ. 3, and are said to be in heaven, 2 Sam. xxi. 10; Matt. xxiv. 30, and the production thereof is mentioned as an eminent work of God's creation, Job xxxv. 5; xxxvi. 29; Psal. cxlvii. 8; Prov. viii. 28; which therefore it is not credible that Moses in his history of the creation would admit, which he doth, if they be not here meant; and these are rightly said to be above the firmament, i. e. the air, because they are above a considerable part of it. As God commanded and ordered it, so it was done and settled.

8 And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, 'Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

^k Job 26. 10.
& 28. 9.
^l Ps. 33. 7.
& 95. 5. & 104. 9. & 136. 6.
^m 1 rov. 8. 29.
Jer. 5. 22.
2 Pet. 3. 5.

The waters under the heaven; both the great abyss, or deep of water which is shut up in the bowels of the earth, Gen. vii. 11; Psal. xxiv. 2; xxxiii. 7; cxxxvi. 6; as also the sea and rivers, all which are here said to be gathered together into one place, because of their communication and mixture one with another.

Let the dry land appear; for hitherto it was covered with water, ver. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 5.

10 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

He called them not sea, but seas; because of the differing quantity and nature both of several seas, and of the rivers, and other lesser collections of waters, all which the Hebrews call seas. The separation of the waters was begun on the second day, ver. 6, &c., but not perfected till this third day; therefore God's approbation of that work is not mentioned there, but here only.

1 Heb. 6. 7. 11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

Let the earth bring forth; the sense is, For the present let it afford matter, out of which I will make grass (as man's rib afforded matter, out of which God made woman); and for the future let it receive virtue or power of producing it out of that matter which I have made, and suited to that end.

Grass; that which groweth of itself without seed or manuring, and is the food of beasts.

The herb yielding seed, for the propagation of their several kinds, to wit, mature and perfect herbs, which alone yield seed. So afterwards God made man, not in the state of children, but of grown and perfect age.

After his kind, i. e. according to the several kinds of fruits.

Whose seed is in itself; now is by my constitution, and shall be for the future. In some part of itself, either in the root, or branch, or leaf, or bud, or fruit. The sense is, which is sufficient of itself for the propagation of its kind, without any conjunction of male and female.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

This clause is so often added, to show that all the disorders, evil and hurtful qualities, that now are in the creatures, are not to be imputed to God, who made all of them good; but to man's sin, which hath corrupted their nature, and perverted their use.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years:

Let there be lights; to wit, more glorious lights than that created the first day, which probably was now condensed and reduced into these lights; which are higher for place, more illustrious for light, and more powerful for influence, than that was. Note here, that herbs and trees were created before the sun, whose influence now is necessary for their production, to show that God doth not depend upon the means or upon the help of the creatures in his operations.

The day, i. e. the artificial day, reaching from sun-rising to sun-setting.

Let them be for signs; for the designation and distinction of times, as months, weeks, &c.; as also for the signification of the quality of the weather or season, by the manner of their rising and setting, Matt. xvi. 2; by their eclipses, conjunctions, &c. And for the discovery of supernatural and miraculous effects; of which see Josh. x. 13; Isa. xxxviii. 8; Luke xxi. 25, 26; Acts ii. 19, 20.

And for seasons, and for days, and years: 1. By their motions and influences to produce and distinguish the four seasons of the year, mentioned Gen. viii. 22. And to show as well the fit times and seasons for sowing, planting, reaping, navigation, &c., as for the observation of set and solemn feasts, or other times for the ordering of ecclesiastical or civil affairs. 2. By their diurnal and swift motion to make the days, and by their nearer approaches to us, or further distances from us, to make the days or nights either longer, or shorter, or equal. He speaks here of natural days, consisting of twenty-four hours. 3. By their annual and slower motion to make years.

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

Two great lights, or, enlighteners, as the word properly signifies. The sun, which is really and considerably greater than the moon, or any of the stars, or the whole earth. And the moon, called here the lesser light, is greater than any of the stars, not really, but in appearance, and in clearness and light, in respect of which it is called great in this place, and both are much greater in efficacy and use than any of the stars.

To rule the day; either, 1. To influence the earth and its fruits with heat or moisture, and to govern men's actions and affairs, which commonly are transacted by day; for the word day is sometimes put metonymically for the events of the day, as Prov. xxvii. 1; 1 Cor. iii. 13. Or, 2. To regulate and manage the day; by its rise to begin it, by its gradual progress to carry it on, even to the mid-day, and by its declination and setting to impair and end it. Which seems most probable, because the moon is in like manner said to rule the night, which is meant of the time, and not of the actions or events of the night.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,

18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

This clause was omitted in the first day's work, but is added here, because the light was then but glimmering and imperfect, which now was made more clear and complete.

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.

The moving creature, or, creeping thing. A word which belongs to all those living creatures who move with their bellies close to the element they move in. Hence it is used both of birds which fly in the air, Lev. xi. 20, and of things creeping upon the earth, as ver. 24 of this chapter, and of fishes that swim in the sea, as here.

And fowl that may fly above the earth. The particle that or which is oft wanting, and to be understood in the Hebrew language, as Gen. xxxix. 4; Job xli. 1; Isa. vi. 6: according to this translation the fowl have their matter from the water as well as the fishes; which seem most probable, as from this, so also from the following verses, in which they are both mentioned together, as made of the same materials, and as works of the same day, and both are blessed together, and both are distinguished and separated from the production of the earth, which were the works of the sixth day, ver. 24, &c. And whereas it is said, Gen. ii. 19, Out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; it may be answered, That the word ground or earth may be there understood more largely, as it is confessedly in some other places of Scripture, for the lower part of the world, consisting of earth and water. For it is most reasonable to expound that short and general passage from the foregoing chapter, wherein the original both of beasts and fowls are largely and distinctly described. Moreover, the fowl seem to have been made of both these elements, viz. of soft and moist earth, possibly taken from the bottom of the water, in which case they were brought forth by the water, as is said here, and formed out of the ground, as there. As Eve is said to be made of Adam's bone and rib, Gen. ii. 21; and of his flesh ver. 23. Which shows that with the rib flesh was taken from Adam, though it be not said so, ver. 21. So here, the fowl were made both of water and earth, as their temper and constitution shows, n Dent. 4. 19. Ps. 74. 16. & 136. 7. † Heb. between the day and between the night. ‡ Ps. 74. 17. & 104. 19.

† Heb. tender grass. ‡ Luke 6. 41.

p Ps. 136. 7. 8, 9. & 148. 3, 5. † Heb. for the rule of the day. ‡ Ps. 8. 3. † Job 38. 7.

† Jer. 31. 35.

† 2 Ead. 6. † Or, creeping. † Heb. soul. † Heb. let fowl fly. † Heb. face of the firmament of heaven.

though but one of them be here expressed. But these words are by some translated thus, and let the fowl fly. But according to that translation, the mention of the fowl, both here and in the following verse, seems to be very improper and forced. For it is preposterous, and contrary to the method constantly used in this whole chapter, to speak of the motion of any living creature, and the place thereof, before its original and production be mentioned. Besides, either the original of the fowls is described here, or it is wholly omitted in this chapter, which is not credible.

u ch. 6. 20.
v ch. 7. 14. &
R. 10.
Ps. 104. 26.

21 And " God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

God created, i. e. produced out of most unfit matter, as if a man should out of a stone make bread, which requires as great a power as that which is properly called creation.

Great whales; those vast sea-monsters known by that name, though elsewhere this word be applied to great dragons of the earth. After his kind; in such manner as is declared in the first note upon ver. 20.

v ch. 8. 17.

22 And God blessed them, saying, " Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

He gave them power of procreation and fruitfulness, which is justly mentioned as a great blessing, Psal. cxxviii. 3, 4.

Fill the waters in the seas; and consequently in the rivers, which come from the sea, and return into it.

Let fowl multiply in the earth, where they shall commonly have their habitation, though they had their original from the waters; of which see on ver. 20.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

1. Those living creatures hereafter mentioned, whose original is from the earth, and whose habitation is in it. 2. Those tame beasts which are most familiar with and useful to men for food, clothing, or other service. 3. Creeping thing; to wit, of the earth, of a differing kind from those creeping things of the water, ver. 20. 4. The wild beast, as the Hebrew word commonly signifies, and as appears further, because they are distinguished from the tame beasts, here called cattle.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, " Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and ^v let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

God had now prepared all things necessary for man's use and comfort. The plurals us and our afford an evident proof of a plurality of persons in the Godhead. It is plain from many other texts, as well as from the nature and reason of the thing, that God alone is man's Creator: the angels rejoiced at the work of creation, but only God wrought it, Job xxxviii. 4-7. And it is no less plain from this text, and from divers other places, that man had more Creators than one person: see Job xxxv. 10; John i. 2, 3, &c.; Heb. i. 3. And as other texts assure us that there is but one God, so this shows that there are more persons in the Godhead; nor can that seeming contradiction of one and more being in the Godhead be otherwise reconciled, than by acknowledging a plurality of persons in the unity of essence. It is pretended that God here speaks after the manner of princes, in the plural number, who use to say, We will and require, or, It is our pleasure. But this is only the invention and practice of latter times, and no way agreeable to the simplicity, either of the first ages of the world, or of the Hebrew style. The kings of Israel used to speak of themselves in the singular number, 2 Sam. iii. 28; 1 Chron. xxi. 17; xxix. 14; 2 Chron. ii. 6. And so did the eastern monarchs too, yea, even in their decrees and orders, which now run in the plural number, as Ezra vi. 8, I (Darius) make a decree; Ezra vii. 21, I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree. Nor do I remember one example in Scripture to the contrary. It is therefore a rash and presumptuous attempt, without any warrant, to thrust the usages of modern style into the sacred Scripture. Besides, the Lord doth generally speak of himself in the singular number, some few places excepted, wherein the plural number is used for the signification of this mystery. Moreover, this device is utterly overthrown by comparing this text with Gen. iii. 22, The Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us. Therefore there are more persons than one in the Godhead. How many they are other texts plainly inform us, as we shall see in their proper places. And whereas he saith not now as he did before, Let the earth or waters bring forth, but, Let us make; this change of the phrase and manner of expression shows that man was, as the last, so the most perfect and the chief of the ways and works of God in this lower world.

After our likeness. Image and likeness are two words noting the same thing, even exact likeness. For both of them are used of Adam, Gen. v. 3, He begat a son in his own likeness, after his image; and they are separately and indifferently used in the same sense, man being said to be made in the likeness of God, Gen. v. 1, and in the image of God, Gen. ix. 6. Quest. Wherein doth the image of God in man consist? Answe. 1. It is in the whole man, both in the blessedness of his estate, and in his dominion over the rest of the creatures. 2. It shines forth even in the body, in the majesty of man's countenance, and height of his stature, which is set towards heaven, when other creatures by their down-looks show the lowness and meanness of their nature, as even heathens have observed. 3. It principally consists and most eminently appears in man's soul. 1. In its nature and substance, as it is, like God, spiritual, invisible, immortal, &c. 2. In its powers and faculties, reason or understanding, and freedom in its choice and actions. 3. In the singular endowments wherewith God hath adorned it, as knowledge, righteousness, and true holiness, in which St. Paul chiefly placeth this image, Eph. iv. 24; Col. iii. 10.

The male and female are both comprehended in the word man, as is expressed, ver. 27, together with their posterity.

Over the cattle; by which he understands either, 1. Both tame and wild beasts, the same word being used here in a differing sense from what it hath ver. 25, as is frequent in Scripture. Or, 2. Tame beasts, which are particularly mentioned, because they are more under man's dominion than the wild beasts, and more fitted for man's use and benefit, though the other be not excluded, but comprehended under the former, as the more famous kind, as is usual in Scriptures and other authors. Over all the earth; over all other creatures and productions of the earth, and over the earth itself, to manage it as they see fit for their own comfort and advantage.

27 So God created man in his own image, " in the image of God created he him; " male and female created he them.

Not both together, as some of the Jews have fabled, but successively, the woman after and out of the man, as is more particularly related, Gen. ii. 21, &c., which is here mentioned by anticipation. Albeit the woman also seems to have been made upon the sixth day, as is here related, and as the following blessing showeth, which is common to both of them, though the particular history of it is brought in afterwards, chap. ii., by way of recapitulation or repetition.

x ch. 5. 1.
& 9. 6.
Ps. 100. 3.
Eccles. 7. 29.
Wis. 2. 23.
Acts 17. 20.
29. 29.
1 Cor. 11. 7.
Eph. 4. 24.
Col. 3. 10.
Jam. 3. 9.
v ch. 9. 2.
Ps. 8. 6.

s 1 Cor. 11.7.
x ch. 5. 2.
Mal. 2. 15.
Matt. 19. 4.
Mark 10. 6.

28 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, ^bBe fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that [†]moveth upon the earth.

Having blessed them with excellent natures, and heavenly gifts and graces, he further blesseth them with a special and temporal blessing expressed in the following words.

Replenish the earth, with inhabitants to be begotten by you. Quest. Whether this be a command obliging all men to marriage and procreation? So the Hebrew doctors think. It may be thus resolved: 1. It is a command obliging all men so far as not to suffer the extinction of mankind: thus it did absolutely bind Adam and Eve, as also Noah, and his sons and their wives, after the Flood. 2. It doth not oblige every particular person to marry, as appears both from the example of the Lord Jesus, who lived and died in an unmarried state, and from his commendation of those who made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of God, Matt. xix. 12; and from St. Paul's approbation of virginity, 1 Cor. vii. 1, 8, 26, 27, 32, &c. 3. It is here rather a promise or benediction than a command, as appears both from ver. 22, where the same words are applied to the brute beasts, who are not subject to a command; and because if this were a command, it would equally oblige every man to exercise dominion over fishes and fowls, &c., which is absurd. It is therefore a permission rather than a command, though it be expressed in the form of a command, as other permissions frequently are, as Gen. ii. 16; Deut. xiv. 4.

29 ¶ And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb [†]bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; ^cto you it shall be for meat.

It is neither affirmed nor denied that flesh also was granted to the first men for food, and therefore we may safely be ignorant of it. It is sufficient for us that it was expressly allowed, Gen. ix. 3.

30 And to ^devery beast of the earth, and to every ^efowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is [†]life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And ^fGod saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

have been created within the compass of the first six days, which also is probable from Col. i. 16, 17. But it is no wonder that the Scripture saith so little concerning angels, because it was written for the use of men, not of angels; and God would hereby take us off from curious and impertinent speculations, and teach us to employ our thoughts about necessary and useful things.

2 ^bAnd on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

God ended his work, or rather had ended or finished, for so the Hebrew word may be rendered, as all the learned know, and so it must be rendered, else it doth not agree with the former chapter, which expressly saith that all these works were done within six days.

He rested, not for his own need and refreshment, for he is never weary, Isa. xl. 28; but for our example and instruction, that we might keep that day as a day of religious rest.

3 And God ^cblessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God [†]created and made.

God blessed the seventh day, by conferring special honours and privileges upon it above all other days, that it should be a day of solemn rest and rejoicing and celebration of God and his works, and a day of God's bestowing singular and the best blessings upon his servants and worshippers. He separated it from common use and worldly employments, and consecrated it to the worship of God, that it should be accounted a holy day, and spent in holy works and solemn exercises of religion. Some conceive that the sabbath was not actually blessed and sanctified at and from this time, but only in the days of Moses, which they pretend to be here related by way of anticipation. But this opinion hath no foundation in the text or context, but rather is confuted from them; for as soon as the sacred penman had said that God had ended his work and rested, &c., he adds immediately in words of the same tense, that God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it. And if we compare this place with Exod. xx., we shall find that Moses there speaks of God's blessing and sanctifying of the sabbath, not as an action then first done, but as that which God had done formerly upon the creation of the world, to the end that men might celebrate the praises of God for that glorious work, which as it was agreeable to the state of innocency, so was it no less proper and necessary a duty for the first ages of the world after the fall, than it was for the days of Moses, and for the succeeding generations. Because he would have the memory of that glorious work of creation, from which he then rested, preserved through all generations.

Which God created and made; either, 1. Created in making, i. e. made by way of creation; or rather, 2. Created out of nothing, and afterwards out of that created matter made or formed divers things, as the beasts out of the earth, the fishes out of the water. He useth these two words possibly to show that God's wisdom, power, and goodness was manifest, not only in that which he brought out of mere nothing, but also in those things which he wrought out of matter altogether unfit for so great works.

4 ¶ ^dThese are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,

i. e. These things mentioned in the 1st chapter are a true and full relation of their generations, i. e. of their original or beginnings. In the day; not strictly so called, but largely taken for the time, as it is ver. 17; Ruth iv. 5; Luke xix. 42; 2 Cor. vi. 2.

5 And every ^eplant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not ^fcaused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man ^gto till the ground.

^b ch. 9. 1, 7.
Lev. 26. 3.
Ps. 127. 3.
& 128. 3, 4.

[†] Heb. creepeth.

[†] Heb. seed-bearing seed.

^c ch. 9. 3.
Job 36. 31.
Ps. 104. 14,
15, & 136.
25, & 146, 7.
Acts 14. 17.

^d Ps. 145. 15,
16, & 147. 9.
^e Job 38. 41.

[†] Heb. a living soul.

^f Ps. 104. 24.
Eccles. 38.
16.
^g 1 Tim. 4. 4.

CHAP. II.

The sabbath instituted and blessed, 2, 3. A rehearsal of the creation; and, (1.) Of vegetables, 4, 5. The earth watered, 6. (2.) Of man, 7. His habitation, 8, 9. Trees for his delight and food; as also the tree of life and knowledge, 9. Its pleasant situation and riches, 10—14. Man's employment, 15. Every tree given him but that of knowledge, 16. This denied on pain of death, 17. A purpose to create the woman, and the reason thereof, 18. Beasts and fowls named by Adam, 19, 20. The woman made of Adam's rib, presented to him, 21, 22, and owned by him, 23. Marriage ordained, 24. Their state whilst innocent, 25.

THUS the heavens and the earth were finished, and ^aall the host of them.

All the creatures in heaven and earth are called their hosts, for their multitude, variety, order, power, and subjection to the Lord of hosts. Particularly the host of heaven in Scripture (which is its own best interpreter) signifies both the stars, as Deut. iv. 19; xvii. 3; Isa. xxxiv. 4; and the angels, as 1 Kings xxii. 19; 2 Chron. xviii. 18; Luke ii. 13; who from these words appear to

^a Ps. 33. 6.

^b Ex. 20. 11.
& 31. 17.
Deut. 5. 14.
Heb. 4. 4.

^c Neh. 9. 14.
Is. 58. 13.

[†] Heb. created to make.

^d ch. 1. 1.
Ps. 90. 1, 2.

^e ch. 1. 12.
Ps. 104. 14.

^f Job 38. 26,
27, 28.
^g ch. 3. 23.

Before it was in the earth, i. e. when as yet there were no plants, nor so much as seeds of them, there. Before it grew, to wit, out of the earth, as afterwards they did by God's appointment.

The two great means of the growth of plants and herbs, viz. rain from heaven, and the labour of man, were both lacking, to show that they were now brought forth by God's almighty power and word.

6 But || there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.

There went up, from time to time, by God's appointment, a vapour, or cloud, which going up into the air, was turned into rain, and fell down again to the earth from whence it arose; whereby the earth was softened, and disposed both to the nourishment of those plants or trees that were created, and to the production of new plants in a natural and ordinary way. But these words may be otherwise understood, the copulative and, here rendered but, being put for the disjunctive or, as it is Exod. xxi. 15, 17; Job vi. 22; viii. 3, and in other places. Or, the negative particle not may be understood out of the foregoing clause, as it is usual in the Hebrew language, as Psal. i. 5; ix. 17; xlv. 19; i. 8; Isa. xxviii. 27, 28. And so these words may be joined with the foregoing, and both translated in this manner, There was no rain, nor a man to till the ground, or (or nor, for both come to one thing) so much as a mist which went up from the earth, and watered (as afterwards was usual and natural) the whole face of the ground.

7 And the LORD God formed man † of the dust of the ground, and † breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

Into his nostrils, and by that door into the head and whole man. This is an emphatical phrase, sufficiently implying that the soul of man was of a quite differing nature and higher extraction and original than the souls of beasts, which together with their bodies are said to be brought forth by the earth, Gen. i. 24. The breath of life, Heb. of lives; either to show the continuance of this breath or soul, both in this life and in the life to come; or to note the various degrees or kinds of life which this one breath worketh in us; the life of plants, in growth and nourishment; the life of beasts, in sense and motion; and the life of a man, in reason and understanding. Man, who before this was but a dull lump of clay, or a comely statue, became a living soul, i. e. a living man: the soul being oft put for the whole man, as Gen. xii. 5, 13; xvi. 15, 18; 1 Pet. iii. 20, &c.

8 ¶ And the LORD God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.

He had planted, viz. on the third day, when he made the plants and trees to grow out of the ground, a place of the choicest plants and fruits, most beautiful and pleasant. Eastward, from the place where Moses writ, and the Israelites afterwards dwelt. Eden here is the name of a place, not that Eden near Damascus in Syria, or which see Amos i. 5; but another Eden in Mesopotamia or Chaldea, of which see Gen. iv. 16; 2 Kings xix. 12; Isa. xxxvii. 12; Ezek. xxvii. 23. There are many and tedious disputes about the place of this Paradise; of which he that listeth may see my Latin Synopsis. It may suffice to know that which is evident, that it was in or near to Mesopotamia, in the confluence of Euphrates and Tigris. There he put the man whom he had formed, to wit, in another place.

9 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

The tree of life; so called, either symbolically, and sacramentally, because it was a sign and seal of that life which man had received from God, and of his continual enjoyment of it upon condition of his obedience; or, effectively, because God had planted in it a singular virtue for the support of nature, prolongation of life, and the prevention of all diseases, infirmities, and decays through age. In the midst of the garden, or, within the garden, as Tyrrus is said to be in the midst of the seas, Ezek. xxviii. 2, though it was but just within it. The tree of knowledge of good and evil; so called with respect, either, 1. To God, who thereby would prove and make known man's good or evil, his obedience and happiness, or his rebellion and misery; or rather, 2. To man, who by the use of it would know, to his cost, how great and good things he did enjoy, and might have kept by his obedience, and how evil and bitter the fruits of his disobedience were to himself and all his posterity. So it seems to be an ironical denomination: q. d. You thirsted after more knowledge, which also the devil promised you; and you have got what you desired, more knowledge, even dear-bought experience.

10 And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.

A river, or, rivers, by a common enallage. Eden, the country in which Paradise was; where those rivers either arose from one spring, or met together in one channel.

From the garden, it was divided into four principal rivers, concerning which there are now many disputes. But it is no wonder if the rise and situation of these rivers be not now certainly known, because of the great changes, which in so long time might happen in this as well as in other rivers, partly by earthquakes, and principally by the general deluge. And yet Euphrates and Tigris, the chief of these rivers, whereof the other two are branches, are discovered by some learned men to have one and the same original or spring, and that in a most pleasant part of Armenia, where they conceive Paradise was. See my Latin Synopsis.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;

Pison, an eminent branch of the river Tigris, probably that called by others Pasi-tigris, or Pisi-tigris.

That is it which compasseth, i. e. with many windings and turnings passed through; as this word is used, Josh. xv. 3; Matt. xxiii. 15.

The whole land of Havilah; either that which is in those parts of Arabia which is towards Mesopotamia, so called from Havilah the issue of Cham, Gen. x. 7; or that which is high Persia, and in the borders of India, so called from another Havilah of the posterity of Sem, Gen. x. 29. To either of these following the description agrees well.

12 And the gold of that land is good:

there is bdellium and the onyx stone.

Good, i. e. better than ordinary. Bdellium, which signifies either a precious gum, of which see Numb. xi. 70, or gems and pearls. Once for all observe, that many of the Hebrew words or names of stones, trees, birds, and beasts, are even to the Hebrew doctors and others, both ancient and modern interpreters, of uncertain signification, and that without any considerable inconvenience to us, who are free from the obligations which the Jews were formerly under of procuring such stones, and abstaining in their diet from such beasts and birds as then were sufficiently known to them; and if any were doubtful, they had one safe course, to abstain from them.

The onyx stone, a kind of precious stone, of which see Exod. xxv. 7; xxviii. 9, 20.

13 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia.

Gihon; not that river in the land of Israel, so called, 1 Kings i. 33; 2 Chron. xxxii. 30; but another of the same name, which in Hebrew signifies, the branch of a greater river: here it is a branch either of Euphrates, as most think, or of Tigris, as some late writers conceive.

Ethiopia; not that country in Africa above Egypt, commonly so called; but either Arabia, which in Scripture is † Or, a mist which went up from, &c.

† Heb. dust of the ground. 1 ch. 3. 19, 22. 1st. 103. 14. Eccles. 12. 7. Is. 64. 8. Eccles. 17. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 47. 1 Job 33. 4. 2 Esd. 3. 5. Acts 17. 25. k ch. 7. 22. Is. 2. 22. 1 Cor. 15. 45.

m ch. 13. 10. Is. 61. 3. Ezek. 28. 13. Joel 2. 3. n ch. 3. 24. o ch. 4. 18. 2 Kings 19. 12. Ezek. 27. 23. p ver. 15. 2 Esd. 3. 6.

q Ezek. 31. 8. r ch. 3. 22. Prov. 3. 18. & 11. 30. Rev. 2. 7. & 22. 2, 14. s ver. 17.

t Eccles. 24. u ch. 25. 18.

w Num. 11. 7.

† Heb. Cush.

frequently called Cush or Ethiopia; of which see the notes upon 2 Kings xix. 9; Job xxviii. 19; Ezek. xxix. 10; xxx. 8, 9; Hab. iii. 7. Or rather a country adjoining to India and Persia, with which Cush is joined, Ezek. xxxviii. 5; see also Isa. xi. 11; Ezek. xxvii. 10; and about which place the Ethiopians are seated by Herod. l. 7, Homer, Hesiod, and others. Of which see my Latin Synopsis.

14 And the name of the third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth || toward the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates.

Hiddekel, i. e. Tigris, or an eminent branch of it. See Dan. x. 4.

15 And the LORD God took || the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.

Put him, i. e. commanded and inclined him to go. To prune, dress, and order the trees and herbs of the garden, and to keep it from the annoyance of beasts, which being unreasonable creatures, and allowed the use of herbs, might easily spoil the beauty of it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat:

God commanded the woman too, (as appears both from the permission for eating herbs and fruits given to her, together with her husband, Gen. i. 28, 29, and from Gen. iii. 1—3, and from Eve's punishment,) and that either immediately, or by Adam, whom God enjoined to inform her thereof.

Thou mayest freely eat; without offence to me, or hurt to thyself. The words in Hebrew have the form of a command, but are only a permission or indulgence, as 1 Cor. x. 25, 27.

17 * But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, * thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

With a threefold death. 1. Spiritual, by the guilt and power of sin: at that instant thou shalt be dead in trespasses and sins, Eph. ii. 1. 2. Temporal, or the death of the body, which shall then begin in thee, by decays, infirmities, terrors, dangers, and other harbingers of death. 3. Eternal, which shall immediately succeed the other.

18 ¶ And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make ^a him an help [†] meet for him.

The Lord God said, or, had said, to wit, upon the sixth day, on which the woman was made, Gen. i. 27, 28.

Not good; not convenient either for my purpose of the increase of mankind, or for man's personal comfort, or for the propagation of his kind.

Meet for him; a most emphatical phrase, signifying thus much, one correspondent to him, suitable both to his nature and necessity, one altogether like to him in shape and constitution, disposition and affection; a second self; or one to be at hand and near to him, to stand continually before him, familiarly to converse with him, to be always ready to succour, serve, and comfort him; or one whose eye, respect, and care, as well as desire, Gen. iii. 16, should be to him, whose business it shall be to please and help him.

19 * And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto || Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

Brought them unto Adam, either by winds, or angels, or by their own secret instinct, by which storks, and cranes, and swallows change their places with the season; partly to own their subjection to him; partly that man, being recreated with their prospect, might adore and praise the Maker of them, and withal be sensible of his want of a meet companion, and so the better prepared to receive God's mercy therein; and partly for the reason here following.

To see, or, make a discovery; not to God, who knew it already, but to all future generations, who would hereby understand the deep wisdom and knowledge of their first parent.

That was the name thereof, to wit, in the primitive or Hebrew language. And this was done for the manifestation both of man's dominion over the creatures, and of the largeness of his understanding; it being an act of authority to give names, and an effect of vast knowledge to give convenient names to all the creatures, which supposeth an exact acquaintance with their natures.

20 And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

But though, in giving them names, he considered their several natures and perfections, it was evident to himself, as well as to the Lord, that none of them was an help meet for him.

21 And the LORD God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof;

1. God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, that he, who was without sin, might feel no pain in the taking away of his rib. And in this sleep some think Adam was in an ecstasy, wherein he saw what was done, together with the reason and mystery of it.

2. He took one of his ribs, together with the flesh upon it, ver. 23; or, one of his sides, for the Hebrew word signifieth a side as well as a rib, which may be taken synecdochically, for a part of one of his sides, viz. a rib and the flesh upon it; or, for one part out of each of his sides; as if the two ribs clothed with flesh were taken out of the man, because he saith, ver. 23, This is bone of my bones, not, of my bone. The woman was taken out of this part, not out of the higher or lower parts, to show that she is neither to be her husband's mistress, to usurp authority over him, 1 Tim. ii. 12; nor yet to be his slave, to be abused, despised, or trampled under his feet; but to be kindly treated, and used like a companion, with moderation, respect, and affection. Quest. How could a rib be taken from Adam, but it must be either superfluous in Adam, while it was in him, or defective afterwards, both which reflect upon the Creator? Ans. 1. It was no superfluity, but a conveniency, if Adam had at first one rib extraordinary put into him for this purpose. 2. If Adam lost a rib upon so glorious an occasion, it was but a scar or badge of honour, and no disparagement either to him or to his Creator. 3. Either God created him a new rib, or hardened the flesh to the nature and use of a rib, and so there was no defect in him.

3. He closed up the flesh, together with another bone or rib, instead of that rib and flesh which he took away from him, which was easy for God to do.

22 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

From some place at a little distance, whether he first carried her, that for the decency of the action he might bring her thence; a bride to a bridegroom to be married to him: the great God being pleased to act the part of a father to give his daughter and workmanship to him, thereby both teaching parents their duty of providing marriages for their children, and children their duty of expecting their parents' consent in marriage.

23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man.

And Adam said. Quest. How knew he this? Ans. Either, 1. By his own observation; for though it be said that he was asleep till the rib was taken out and restored, yet he might awake as soon as ever that was done, the reason of his sleep ceasing, and so might see the making of the x Dan. 10. 4.

† Or, eastward to Assyria.

† Or, Adam,
† ver. 8.

† Heb. eating thou shalt eat.

x ver. 9.
a ch. 3. 1, 3, 11, 17.
2 Esd. 3. 7.
b ch. 3. 3, 19.
Rom. 6. 23.
1 Cor. 15. 56.
Jam. 1. 15.

† Heb. aying thou shalt die.

c ch. 3. 12.
1 Cor. 11. 9.
1 Tim. 2. 13.
d Ecclus. 36.
24.

† Heb. as before him.

e ch. 1. 20, 24.

f Ps. 8. 6.
See
ch. 4. 20.
† Or,
the man.

† Heb. called.

g ch. 15. 12.
† Sam. 26.
12.

† Heb.
built.
h Prov. 18.
22.
Heb. 13. 4.

i ch. 29. 14.
Judg. 9. 2.
2 Sam. 5. 1.
& 19. 13.
Eph. 5. 30.
† Heb. Iska.
1 Cor. 11. 8.
† Heb. Jah.

woman. Or, 2. By the revelation of God, who put these words into Adam's mouth, to whom therefore these words of Adam are ascribed, Matt. xix. 5.

This is now; or, for this time the woman is made of my bones, &c.; but for the time to come the woman as well as the man shall be produced another way, to wit, by generation. Made of my rib and flesh; i. e. God hath provided me a meet help and wife, not out of the brute creatures, but nearer hand, a part of my own body, and of the same nature with myself.

1 ch. 31. 15. 24 ¹Therefore shall a man leave his
 Pa. 45. 10. father and his mother, and shall cleave
 Matt. 19. 5. unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.
 Mark 10. 7. 1 Cor. 6. 16.
 Eph. 5. 31.

These are the words of Moses by Divine instinct, or his inference from Adam's words.

Shall a man leave his father and his mother; in regard of habitation and society, but not as to natural duty and affection; and in conjugal relation and highest affection, even above what they owe to their parents, they two (as it is in the Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic translations, and Matt. xix. 5) shall be esteemed by themselves and others to be as entirely and inseparably united, and shall have as intimate and universal communion, as if they were one person, one soul, one body. And this first institution shows the sinfulness of divorces, and polygamy, however God might upon a particular reason for a time dispense with his own institution, or remit the punishment due to the violators of it.

m ch. 3. 7, 10, 11. 25 ^mAnd they were both naked, the n Ex. 32. 25. man and his wife, and were not ⁿashamed.
 Is. 47. 3.

To wit, of their nakedness, as having no guilt, nor cause of shame, no filthy or evil inclinations in their bodies, no sinful concupiscence or impure motions in their souls, but spotless innocency and perfection, which must needs exclude shame.

CHAP. III.

The serpent's subtlety, and insnaring question, 1. The woman's answer, 2. The serpent denies the certainty of the threatening, 4; suggests a benefit by eating, 5. The woman looks on the fruit, takes, eats, gives to the man, who also eats of it, 6. The consequence of their sin, 7, 8. Adam's summons, 9, appearance, 10, examination, 11, excuse, 12. The woman examined, excuses, yet confesses the fact, 13. Sentence upon the serpent the instrument, 14; upon the devil the chief agent, with the first gospel promise, 15; upon the woman, 16; upon the man, 17—19. Adam names his wife, 20. God clothes them, 21. They are thrown out of Paradise, 22, to till the ground, 23. Their return impossible, 24.

a Rev. 12. 9. NOW ^athe serpent was ^bmore subtil than & 20. 2. any beast of the field which the LORD b Matt. 10. God had made. And he said unto the 16. woman, †Yea, hath God said, Ye shall 2 Cor. 11. 3. not eat of every tree of the garden?
 † Heb. Yea, because, &c.

The serpent; or rather, this or that serpent; for here is an emphatical article, of which more by and by.

The serpent's eminent subtlety is noted both in sacred Scripture, Gen. xlix. 17; Psal. lviii. 5; Matt. x. 16; 2 Cor. xi. 3, and by heathen authors, whereof these instances are given; that when it is assaulted, it secures its head; that it stops its ear at the charmer's voice; and the like. If it be yet said that some beasts are more subtle, and therefore this is not true; it may be replied, 1. It is no wonder if the serpent for its instrumentality in man's sin hath lost the greatest part of its original subtlety, even as man's sin was punished with a great decay both of the natural endowments of his mind, wisdom, and knowledge, and of the beauty and glory of his body, the instrument of his sin. But this text may, and seems to be understood, not of the whole kind of serpents, but of this individual or particular serpent; for it is in the Hebrew Hannachash, that serpent, or this serpent, to signify that this was not only an ordinary serpent, but was acted and assisted by the devil, who is therefore called that old serpent, Rev. xii. 9. And this seems most probable, partly from the following discourse, which is added as a proof of that which is here said concerning the serpent's subtlety; and that surely was not the discourse of a beast, but of a devil; and partly from 2 Cor. xi. 3, which hath a manifest reference to this place, where the apostle affirmeth that the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety; not surely through that subtlety which is common to all serpents, but through that subtlety which was peculiar to this, as it was possessed and acted by the devil. There seems indeed to be an allusion here to the natural subtlety of all serpents; and the sense of the sacred penman may seem to be this, as if he said, The serpent indeed in itself is a subtle creature, and thought to be more subtle than any beast of the field; but howsoever this be in other serpents, it is certain that this serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field, as will appear by the following words. If it be said, the particle this, or that, is relative to something going before, whereas there is not a word about it in the foregoing words; it may be replied, that relative particles are often put without any antecedents, and the antecedents are left to be gathered not only out of the foregoing, but sometimes also out of the following passages, as is apparent from Exod. xiv. 29; Numb. vii. 19; xxiv. 17; Psal. lxxxvii. 1; cv. 19; cxiv. 2; Prov. vii. 8; xiv. 26. So here, that serpent, that of which I am now to speak, whose discourse with the woman here followeth.

Quest. How the serpent could speak, and what the woman conceived of his speech, and why she was not affrighted, but continued the discourse with it? There be two satisfactory answers may be given to these questions. 1. The woman knew that there were spirits, and did freely and frequently converse with spirits or angels, who also did appear in some visible shape to her, which seems very credible; because in the following ages not only the angels, but even the blessed God himself, did in that manner converse with men. And as they afterwards used to appear in the shape of men, why might not one of them now appear to her, and converse with her, in the shape of a beautiful serpent? And why might she not freely and securely discourse with this which she thought to be one of those good angels, to whose care and tuition both she and her husband were committed? For I suppose the fall of the angels was yet unknown to her; and she thought this to be a good spirit, otherwise she would have declined all conversation with an apostate spirit. 2. A late ingenious and learned writer represents the matter thus, in which there is nothing absurd or incredible: The serpent makes his address to the woman with a short speech, and salutes her as the empress of the world, &c. She is not affrighted, because there was as yet no cause of fear, no sin, and therefore no danger, but wonders and inquires what this meant, and whether he was not a brute creature, and how he came to have speech and understanding? The serpent replies, that he was no better than a brute, and did indeed want both these gifts, but by eating of a certain fruit in this garden he got both. She asked what fruit and tree that was? Which when he showed her, she replied, This, no doubt, is an excellent fruit, and likely to make the eater of it wise; but God hath forbidden us this fruit. To which the serpent replies, as it here follows in the text. It is true, this discourse is not in the text; but it is confessed by Jewish and other expositors, that these words, Yea, hath God said, &c., are a short and abrupt sentence, and that they were but the close of a foregoing discourse; which might well enough be either this now mentioned, or some other of a like nature. And that expression which follows, ver. 6, when the woman saw, i. e. understood that it was a tree to be desired to make one wise, may seem to imply, both that the serpent told her, and that she believed, that the speech and understanding of the serpent was the effect of the eating of that fruit; and therefore that if it raised him from a brute beast to the degree of a reasonable creature, it would elevate her from the human to a kind of Divine nature or condition.

He said unto the woman, who had upon some occasion retired from her husband for a season (an advantage which the crafty serpent quickly espied, and greedily embraceth, and assaulteth her when she wanteth the help of her husband). Yea, or why, or is it so, or, indeed, or, of a truth. It is scarce credible that God, who is so bountiful, and the sovereign good, and so abhorring from all parsimony and envy, should forbid you the enjoyment of any part of those provisions which he hath made for your use and comfort.

Of every tree, or, of any; for the word is ambiguous, which therefore the cunning adversary useth to hide the snare which he was laying for her.

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden :

^{e ch. 2. 17.} 3 ^o But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

To wit, in order to the eating of it. Or the touch might be simply forbidden, or she might reasonably understand it to be forbidden in and by the prohibition of eating, because it was an occasion of sin, and therefore to be avoided. For it is not probable that the woman, being not yet corrupted, should knowingly add to God's word, or maliciously insinuate the harshness of the precept. Others read, lest peradventure ye die, as if she doubted of the truth of the threatening; which seems not probable, the woman yet continuing in the state of innocence, and such doubting being evidently sinful; and the Hebrew particle Pen doth not always imply a doubt, as appears from Psal. ii. 12; Isa. xxvii. 3; xxxvi. 18, compared with 2 Kings xviii. 3.

^{d ver. 13.} ^{2 Cor. 11. 3.} ^{1 Tim. 2. M.} 4 ^d And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die :

It is not so certain as you imagine, that you shall die. God did say so indeed for your terror, and to keep you in awe; or, he had some mystical meaning in those words; but do not entertain such hard and unworthy thoughts of that God who is infinitely kind and gracious, that he will, for such a trifle as the eating of a little fruit, undo you and all your posterity, and so suddenly destroy the most excellent work of his own hands.

^{c ver. 7.} ^{Acta 25. 18.} 5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then ^{*} your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

If you would have the whole truth of the matter, and God's design in that prohibition, it is only this, He knoweth that you shall be so far from dying, that ye shall certainly be entered into a new and more noble kind of life; and the eyes of your minds, which are now shut as to the knowledge of a world of things, shall then be opened, and see things more fully and distinctly.

Ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil, or, as God, like unto God himself in the largeness of your knowledge; as the very name that God hath put upon the tree may teach you. But this is a privilege, of which, for divers causes best known to himself, some of which your own reason will easily guess at, he would not have you partake of.

6 And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was [†] pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, [†] and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; [‡] and he did eat.

The woman saw; by curious and accurate observation, and gazing upon it, or perceiving it by the serpent's discourse, as was observed on ver. 3.

Pleasant to the eyes, to wit, in an eminent degree; for otherwise so were all the rest.

To make one wise, which she might know by the serpent's information. See the notes on ver. 1. Gave also unto her husband with her, who by this time was returned to her, and who now was with her; or, that he might eat with her, and take his part of that fruit.

And he did eat, by her persuasion and instigation. See 1 Tim. ii. 14.

^{h ver. 5.} ^{i ch. 2. 25.} [†] Or, things to gird about. 7 And ^h the eyes of them both were opened, ⁱ and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves ^{||} aprons.

The eyes of them both. The eyes of their mind- and consciences, which hitherto had been closed and blinded by the arts of the devil, were opened, as the devil had promised them, though in a far differing and sadder sense.

They knew that they were naked. They knew it before, when it was their glory, but now they know it with grief and shame, from a sense both of their guilt for the sin newly past, and of that sinful concupiscence which they now found working in them.

They tied, twisted, or fastened, the lesser branches or twigs, upon which were also the leaves of a fig tree, which peradventure was then near them, and which because of its broad leaves was most fit for that use.

Made themselves aprons, to cover their nakedness.

8 And they heard ^k the voice of the ^l Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife [†] hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden.

The voice of the Lord God, mentioned ver. 9, or rather the sound, as the word voice is often taken in Scripture, as Psal. xciii. 3; Rev. x. 3; xix. 6. Either God the Father, or rather God the Son, appeared in the shape of a man, as afterwards he frequently did, to give a foretaste of his incarnation. About evening, the time when men use to walk abroad to recreate themselves, when there was a cool and refreshing wind, whereby also the voice of the Lord was more speedily and effectually conveyed to Adam and his wife. Adam and his wife hid themselves: being sensible of God's approach, and filled with shame and conscience of their own guilt, and dread of judgment, instead of flying to God for mercy, they foolishly attempted to run away from him, whom it was impossible to avoid.

9 And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

The Lord God called with a loud voice, Thou whom I have so highly obliged, whither and wherefore dost thou run away from me, thy Friend and Father, whose presence was lately so sweet and acceptable to thee? In what place, or rather in what condition, art thou? What is the cause of this sudden and wonderful change? This he asks, not that he was ignorant of it, but to make way for the following sentence, and to set a pattern for all judges, that they should examine the offender, and inquire into the offence, before they proceed to punishment.

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, ^m and I was afraid, because I ⁿ was naked; and I hid myself.

He confesseth his nakedness, which was evident, but saith nothing of his sin; which, if possible, he would have hid: see Job xxxi. 33. And is grieved for the shameful effects of his sin, but not yet sincerely penitent for his sin.

I hid myself, out of reverence to thy glorious majesty.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

That thou wast naked; or, that thy nakedness, which lately was thy glory, was now become matter of shame.

Whereof I commanded thee; concerning which I gave thee so severe a charge upon pain of death.

12 And the man said, ⁿ The woman ^o whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

I have eaten, not by my own choice and inclination, but by the persuasion of this woman, whom thou gavest to be with me, as a meet help, a faithful friend, and constant companion, supposing that it was not good for me to be alone, which the event shows would have been much better for me. Thus Adam excuseth himself, and chargeth God foolishly with his sin. I did eat, out of complacency to her, not from any evil design against thee.

13 And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, ^o The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

How heinous a crime hast thou committed! What a world of mischief hast thou by this one act brought upon [†] Heb. a desire.

[†] Ecclus. 25. 2.
[†] Tim. 2. 14.
^g ver. 12, 17.

^h ver. 5.
ⁱ ch. 2. 25.

[†] Or, things to gird about.

^o ver. 4.
^o ver. 4.
² Cor. 11. 3.
¹ Tim. 2. 14.

[†] Heb. wind.
[†] Job 31. 25.
[†] Jer. 23. 24.
[†] Amos 9. 3.

^m ch. 2. 25.
ⁿ Job 31. 33.
ⁿ John 3. 20.

ⁿ ch. 2. 16.
^o Job 31. 33.
^o Prov. 28. 13.

thyself and all thy posterity? Or, why hast thou done this? What causes or motives couldst thou have for so wicked an action? What need hadst thou of meddling with this forbidden fruit, when I had given thee so large and liberal an allowance? And the woman said, The serpent, a creature which thou hast made, and that assisted by a higher power, by an evil angel, for such I now perceive by sad experience there are, beguiled me, a weak and foolish woman, whose seduction calls for thy pity, not thine anger; and I did eat, being surprised and over-persuaded against my own judgment and resolution.

p Ex. 21, 28, 32.
g Is. 65, 25. Mic. 7, 17.

14 And the LORD God said ^punto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and ^qdust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

Unto the serpent; or rather, this or that serpent, which, as was said before on ver. 1, was no ordinary serpent, but a serpent acted and assisted by the devil; and therefore this sentence or curse is pronounced against both of them: 1. Against the serpent itself, which though an unreasonable creature, and therefore not subject to a law, and consequently not capable of guilt or sin, Rom. iv. 15, yet, being the instrument of the devil's malice, is rightly punished; as other beasts being abused by man's sin did suffer together with him, Exod. xxxii. 20; Lev. xx. 15, 16, not for their crime, but partly for the punishment, and partly for the benefit of man, who is their lord and owner, Psal. viii. 6; for whose sake seeing they were made, it is not strange if they be punished for his use, that in their punishment man might have a demonstration of God's anger against sin, and a motive to repentance. See on chap. vi., vii. 2. Against the devil, who is here principally intended, though as he lay hid in the body of the serpent which he possessed and used, so his curse is here mentioned under the cover of the serpent's curse, and under the disguise of such terms as properly and literally agree to the serpent, but are also mystically to be understood concerning the devil; with whom the Lord entertaineth no conference, as he did with Adam and Eve, whose sin was less than his, and whom God meant to bring to repentance; but immediately denounceth the curse against him, as one that sinned against much greater knowledge, and from far worse principles, not from mistake or misinformation, but from choice and rebellion, from hatred of God, and from mere envy and implacable malice against men.

Because thou hast done this, deceived the woman, and tempted her to this sin, thou art cursed; or, shalt be from henceforth, both really and in the opinion of all mankind; or, be thou.

Every beast of the field; as in other respects, so particularly in that which here follows; upon thy belly shalt thou go. If the serpent did so before the fall, what then was natural, is now become painful and shameful to it, as nakedness and some other things were to man. But it seems more probable that this serpent before the fall either had feet, or rather did go with its breast erect, as the basilisk at this day doth; God peradventure so ordering it as a testimony that some other serpents did once go so. And so the sense of the curse being applied to this particular serpent, and to its kind, may be this: Whereas thou hadst a privilege above other kinds of serpents, whereby thou didst go with erected breast, and didst feed upon the fruits of trees and other plants; now thou shalt be brought down to the same mean and vile estate with them, upon thy belly (or rather, breast, as the word also signifies) shalt thou go, &c. as they do; and dust shalt thou eat. Dust is the food, as of earth-worms, scorpions, and some other creatures, so also of some serpents, as appears both from Isa. lxxv. 25; Mic. vii. 17, and from the testimony of Nicander, Theriac. ver. 372, and Philo, an Arabic writer. Or, the dust is the serpent's sauce rather than his meat; whilst creeping and grovelling upon the earth, and taking his food from thence, he must necessarily take in dust and filth together with it. These two clauses being applied to the devil, signify his fall from his noble state and place to earth and hell; the baseness of his nature and of his food, his delight being in the vilest of men and things, it being now his meat and drink to dishonour God and destroy mankind, and promote the esteem and love of earthly things.

15 And I will put enmity between thee ^r and the woman, and between ^s thy seed and ^t her seed; ^uit shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

r Matt. 3, 7. s 13, 38. t 21, 33. u John 8, 44. Acts 13, 10. 1 John 3, 8. s 24, 132, 11 Is. 7, 14.

Though now ye be sworn friends, leagued together against me, I will put enmity between thee and the woman; and the man too, but the woman alone is mentioned, for the devil's greater confusion. 1. The woman, whom, as the weaker vessel, thou didst seduce, shall be the great occasion of thy overthrow. 2. Because the Son of God, who conquered this great dragon and old serpent, Rev. xii. 9, who came to destroy the works of the devil, 1 John iii. 8, was made of a woman, Gal. iv. 4, without the help of man, Isa. vii. 14; Luke i. 34, 35.

Thy seed; literally, this serpent, and, for his sake, the whole seed or race of serpents, which of all creatures are most loathsome and terrible to mankind, and especially to women. Mystically, that evil spirit which seduced her, and with him the whole society of devils, (who are generally hated and dreaded by all men, even by those that serve and obey them, but much more by good men,) and all wicked men; who, with regard to this text, are called devils, and the children or seed of the devil, John vi. 70; viii. 44; Acts xiii. 10; 1 John iii. 8.

And her seed, her offspring; first and principally, the Lord Christ, who with respect to this text and promise is called, by way of eminency, the seed, Gal. iii. 16, 19; whose alone work it is to break the serpent's head, i. e. to destroy the devil, Heb. ii. 14. Compare John xii. 31; Rom. xvi. 20. Secondly, and by way of participation, all the members of Christ, all believers and holy men, who are called the children of Christ, Heb. ii. 13, and of the heavenly Jerusalem, Gal. iv. 26. All the members whereof are the seed of this woman; and all these are the implacable enemies of the devil, whom also by Christ's merit and strength they do overcome.

The head is the principal instrument both of the serpent's fury and mischief, and of his defence, and the principal seat of the serpent's life, which therefore men chiefly strike at; and which being upon the ground, a man may conveniently tread upon, and crush it to pieces. In the devil this notes his power and authority over men; the strength whereof consists in death, which Christ, the blessed Seed of the woman, overthroweth by taking away the sting of death, which is sin, 1 Cor. xv. 55, 56; and destroying him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, Heb. ii. 14. The heel is the part which is most within the serpent's reach, and wherewith it was bruised, and thereby provoked to fix his venomous teeth there; but a part remote from the head and heart, and therefore its wounds, though painful, are not deadly, nor dangerous, if they be observed in time. If it be applied to the Seed of the woman, Christ, his heel may note either his humanity, whereby he trod upon the earth, which indeed the devil, by God's permission, and the hands of wicked men, did bruise and kill; or his saints and members upon the earth, whom the devil doth in diverse manners bruise, and vex, and afflict, while he cannot reach their Head, Christ, in heaven, nor those of his members who are or shall be advanced thither.

16 Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; ^vin sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; ^wand thy desire shall be ^xto thy husband, and he shall ^yrule over thee.

v Ps. 48, 6. Is. 13, 8. & 21, 3. John 16, 21. 1 Tim. 2, 15. w ch. 4, 7. x Or, subject to thy husband. 1 Cor. 11, 3. & 14, 34. Ephes. 5, 22. y 1 Pet. 3, 1, 5, 6.

23, 24. 1 Tim. 2, 11, 12. Tit. 2, 5. 1 Pet. 3, 1, 5, 6.

I will greatly multiply, or certainly, as the repetition of the same word implies.

And thy conception, in diverse pains and infirmities peculiar to thy sex; i. e. Thou shalt have many, and those oft-times, false and fruitless conceptions, and abortive births; and whereto thou mightest commonly have had many children at one conception, as some few women yet have, now thou shalt ordinarily undergo all the troubles and pains of conception, breeding, and birth, for every child which thou hast. Or, thy sorrows and thy conception, by a figure called hendiaduo, are put for thy sorrows in conception, or rather in child-bearing, which the Hebrew word here used signifies, Gen. xvi. 4; Judg. xiii. 3. Aristotle, in his Histor. Animal. 7, 9, observes, that women bring forth young with more pain than any other creatures.

Bring forth children, or bear, for the word notes all the pains and troubles which women have, both in the time of child-bearing, and in the act of bringing forth. Sons, and daughters too, both being comprehended in the Hebrew word Sons, as Exod. xxii. 24; Psal. cxxviii. 6.

Thy desire shall be to thy husband; thy desires shall be referred or submitted to thy husband's will and pleasure to grant or deny them, as he sees fit. Which sense is confirmed from Gen. iv. 7, where the same phrase is used in the same sense. And this punishment was both very proper for her that committed so great an error, as the eating of the forbidden fruit was, in compliance with her own desire, without asking her husband's advice or consent, as in all reason she should have done in so weighty and doubtful a matter; and very grievous to her, because women's affections use to be vehement, and it is irksome to them to have them restrained or denied. Seeing, for want of thy husband's rule and conduct, thou wast seduced by the serpent, and didst abuse that power I gave thee together with thy husband to draw him to sin, thou shalt now be brought down to a lower degree, for he shall rule thee; not with that sweet and gentle hand which he formerly used, as a guide and counsellor only, but by a higher and harder hand, as a lord and governor, to whom I have now given a greater power and authority over thee than he had before, (which through thy pride and corruption will be far more uneasy unto thee than his former empire was,) and who will usurp a further power than I have given him, and will, by my permission, for thy punishment, rule thee many times with rigour, tyranny, and cruelty, which thou wilt groan under, but shalt not be able to deliver thyself from it. See 1 Cor. xiv. 34; 1 Tim. ii. 11, 12; 1 Pet. iii. 6.

17 And unto Adam he said, ¹ Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, ² and hast eaten of the tree, ³ of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: ⁴ cursed is the ground for thy sake; ⁵ in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

Hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, i. e. obeyed the word and counsel, contrary to my express command. Cursed is the ground, which shall now yield both fewer and worse fruits, and those too with more trouble of men's minds, and labour of their bodies; for thy sake, i. e. because of thy sin; or, to thy use; or, as far as concerns thee. In sorrow; or, with toil, or, grief.

18 ¹ Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and ² thou shalt eat the herb of the field;

Thorns also and thistles, and other unuseful and hurtful plants, synecdochically contained under these, shall it bring forth to thee, of its own accord, not to thy benefit, but to thy grief and punishment; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field, instead of those generous and delicious fruits of Paradise, which because thou didst despise, thou shalt no more taste of. See Gen. i. 29.

19 ¹ In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: ² for dust thou art, and ³ unto dust shalt thou return.

In the sweat of thy face, i. e. of thy body: he mentions the face, because there the sweat appears first and most. Or, with labour of body or brain, Eccl. i. 13, and vexation of mind, shalt thou get thy food and livelihood: bread being put for all nourishment, as Gen. xviii. 5; xxviii. 20.

Dust thou art, as to the constitution and original of thy body. See Gen. xviii. 27; Job i. 21; Psal. ciii. 14. Though upon thy obedience I would have preserved thy body no less than thy soul from all mortality; yet now, having sinned, thou shalt return unto dust in thy body, whilst the immortal spirit shall return unto God who gave it, Eccl. xii. 7. Thus thy end shall be as base as thy beginning.

20 And Adam called his wife's name

† Eve; because she was the mother of ^{† Heb. Chava. That is, living.} all living.

The word signifies either living, or, the giver or preserver of life. Though for her sin justly sentenced to a present death, yet by God's infinite mercy, and by virtue of the promised Seed, she was both continued in life herself, and was made the mother of all living men and women that should be after her upon the earth; who though in and with their mother they were condemned to speedy death, yet shall be brought forth into the state and land of the living, and into the hopes of a blessed and eternal life by the Redeemer, whose mother or progenitor she was.

21 Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God make coats of skins, and clothed them.

The Lord God, either by his own word, or by the ministry of angels, made coats of skins, of beasts slain either for sacrifice to God, or for the use of man, their lord and owner; and clothed them, partly to defend them from excessive heats and colds, or other injuries of the air, to which they were now exposed; partly to mind them of their sin, which made their nakedness, which before was innocent and honourable, now to be an occasion of sin and shame, and therefore to need covering; and partly to show his care even of fallen man, and to encourage his hopes of God's mercy through the blessed Seed, and thereby to invite him to repentance.

22 ¶ And the LORD God said, ¹ Behold, ^{1 ver. 5. Like in 19. 12. & 47. 12. Jer. 22. 23.} the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth ² his hand, ³ and take also of the tree of ⁴ life, and eat, and live for ever:

The Lord God said, either within himself, or to the other persons of the Godhead, Adam and Eve both are become such according to the devil's promise, and their own expectation. This is a holy irony, or sarcasm, like those, 1 Kings xviii. 27; Eccl. xi. 9: q. d. Behold! O all ye angels, and all the future generations of men, how the first man hath overreached and conquered us, and got the Divinity which he affected; and how happy he hath made himself by his rebellion! But this bitter scorn God uttereth not to insult over man's misery, but to convince him of his sin, folly, danger, and calamity, and to oblige him both to a diligent seeking after, and a greedy embracing the remedy of the promised Seed which God offered him, and to a greater watchfulness over himself, and respect to all God's commands for the time to come.

As one of us, i. e. as one of the Divine persons, of infinite wisdom and capacity. Here is an evident proof of a plurality of persons in the Godhead; compare Gen. i. 26, and xi. 7. If it be said, God speaks this of himself and the angels; besides that as yet not one word hath been spoken concerning the angels, it is an absurd and unreasonable conceit that the great God should level himself with the angels, and give them a kind of equality with himself, as this expression intimates. To know all things, both good and evil.

Lest he put forth his hand: the speech is defective, and to be supplied thus, or some such way. But now care must be taken, or man must be banished hence, lest he take also of the tree of life, as he did take of the tree of knowledge, and thereby profane that sacrament of eternal life, and fondly persuade himself that he shall live for ever. This is another scoff or irony, whereby God upbraideth man's presumption, and those vain hopes wherewith he did still feed himself.

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, ¹ to till the ^{1 ch. 4. 2. & 2. 20.} ground from whence he was taken.

For prevention thereof, the Lord God sent him forth, or expelled him with shame and violence, and so as never to restore him thither; for it is the same word which is used concerning divorced wives. To till, to wit, with toil and z ver. 6. a ch. 2. 17.

1 Sam. 15.

b Eccles. 1. 2, 3. Is. 24. 5, 6. Rom. 6. 20. c Job 4. 7. Eccles. 2. 23.

Hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, i. e. obeyed the word and counsel, contrary to my express command. Cursed is the ground, which shall now yield both fewer and worse fruits, and those too with more trouble of men's minds, and labour of their bodies; for thy sake, i. e. because of thy sin; or, to thy use; or, as far as concerns thee. In sorrow; or, with toil, or, grief.

d Job 31. 40. † Heb. Chava to bud. e Ps. 104. 14.

f Eccles. 1. 13. 2 Thess. 3. 10. g ch. 2. 7. h Job 21. 25. & 34. 15. i Ps. 104. 25. Eccles. 3. 20. & 12. 7. Heb. 9. 27.

In the sweat of thy face, i. e. of thy body: he mentions the face, because there the sweat appears first and most. Or, with labour of body or brain, Eccl. i. 13, and vexation of mind, shalt thou get thy food and livelihood: bread being put for all nourishment, as Gen. xviii. 5; xxviii. 20. Dust thou art, as to the constitution and original of thy body. See Gen. xviii. 27; Job i. 21; Psal. ciii. 14. Though upon thy obedience I would have preserved thy body no less than thy soul from all mortality; yet now, sweat, as was threatened, ver. 17, the ground without Paradise; for he was made without Paradise, and then put into it, as was noted before.

24 So he drove out the man; and he placed ^m at the east of the garden of Eden ⁿ Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

The east of the garden, where the entrance into it was, the other sides of it being enclosed or secured by God to preserve it from the entrance and annoyance of wild beasts. Or, before the garden, i. e. near to the garden; before any man could come at the garden any way. Cherubims, i. e. angels, so called from their exquisite knowledge, and therefore fitly here used for the punishment of man, who sinned by affecting Divine knowledge. And a flaming sword in the cherubims' hands, as it was upon other occasions, Numb. xxii. 23; Josh. v. 13; 1 Chron. xxi. 16, 27. And this was either a material sword, bright, and being brandished, shining and glittering like a flame of fire; or flaming fire, in the shape of a sword. Or, flaming swords, because there were divers cherubims, and each of them had a sword; the singular number for the plural. Or, a two-edged sword, which turned every way, was brandished and nimbly whirled about by the cherubims; which posture was fittest for the present service, to keep the way that leads to Paradise, and so to the tree of life, that man might be deterred and kept from coming thither.

CHAP. IV.

The birth of Cain and Abel, and their employment, 1, 2. Cain's offering, 3. Abel's sacrifice, and God's acceptance, 4. Cain's rejected; his discontent, 5. God expostulates it with him, 6, 7. He murders Abel, 8. God makes inquiry after Abel, 9. The cry of his blood, 10. God's curse upon Cain, 11, 12. His complaint, 13, 14. God mitigates it, 15. Its execution, 16. Cain's posterity, 17, 18. Lamech's two wives, 19. They bear unto him sons, who dwell in tents, 20; invent musical instruments, 21; have skill in brass and iron, 22. His boasting, 23, 24. The birth of Seth, 25. His son; and the revival of religion, 26.

AND Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare || Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

This modest expression is used both in Scripture and other authors, to signify the conjugal act or carnal knowledge. So Gen. xix. 8; xxiv. 16; Numb. xxxi. 17; Matt. i. 25; Luke i. 34.

Cain, whose name signifies a possession. A man, a male child, as Gen. vii. 2, which was most welcome. From the Lord; or, by or with the Lord, i. e. by virtue of his first blessing, Gen. i. 28, and special favour. Or, a man the Lord, as the words properly signify: q. d. God-man, or the Messias, hoping that this was the promised Seed.

2 And she again bare his brother † Abel. And Abel was † a keeper of sheep, but Cain was ^a a tiller of the ground.

Abel signifies vanity, a vain, mortal, miserable man, whereas she thought Cain to be more than an ordinary man; or this name might prophetically design his miserable life, and untimely and unnatural death. To till the ground was esteemed a more honourable calling than that of a shepherd, and therefore either chosen by the elder brother, or allotted to him by his father.

3 And † in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought ^b of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

Either, 1. In general, at the return of the set time then appointed, and used for the solemn service of God. Or, 2. At the end of the year, when there might be now, as there was afterward among the Jews, more solemn worship and sacrifices; the word days being often put for a year, as Lev. xxv. 29; 1 Sam. i. 3; xxvii. 7. Or, 3. More probably at the end of the days of the week, or upon the seventh and last day of the week, Saturday, which then was the sabbath day, which before this time was blessed and sanctified, Gen. ii. 3. Cain brought an offering, either to the place appointed for the solemn worship of God, or to his father, who at that time was both king, and prophet, and priest. Or brought, i. e. offered.

4 And Abel, he also brought of ^c the firstlings of his [†] flock and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had ^d respect unto Abel and to his offering:

The firstlings; either, 1. The first-born, which God reserved to himself, both at this time, and afterwards by an express law, Exod. xiii. 2; Numb. iii. 13. Or, 2. The choicest and most eminent of the flock; for the best of any kind are oft called first-born, as Job xviii. 13; Jer. xxxi. 19; Heb. xii. 23. The fat thereof was either, 1. Properly, the fat being properly now required by God, as afterwards was expressed, Exod. xxix. 13, 22; Lev. iii. 3. Or, 2. The best of them, as the word fat is often used, as Gen. xlv. 18; xlix. 20; Numb. xviii. 12; Neh. viii. 10; Psal. cxlvii. 14.

The Lord had respect, or, looked to him with a gracious eye, kindly accepted and owned him and his sacrifice, and testified this (Heb. xi. 4) to Cain and all there present, either by express word, or by some visible sign; probably by consuming his sacrifice by fire from heaven, as the fathers generally think; whereby also God did afterwards frequently signify his acceptance of sacrifices, as Lev. ix. 24; Judg. vi. 21; 1 Kings xviii. 38; 1 Chron. xxi. 26; 2 Chron. vii. 1. Unto Abel's person, who was a truly good man; and then to his sacrifice, which was offered with faith in God's mercy and in the promised Mediator, Heb. xi. 4.

5 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, ^e and his countenance fell.

Cain was very wroth; partly with God, who, had cast so public a disgrace upon him, and given the preference to his younger brother; and partly with Abel, because he had received more honour from God, and therefore was likely to have more respect and privilege from his parents than himself. His countenance fell; whereas before it was lifted up and cheerful, now it fell down through sense of guilt, disappointment of his hope, shame and grief, and envy at his brother.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

The Lord spoke unto Cain, that he might bring him to repentance, and the knowledge of his sin. Why is thy countenance fallen? the cause of this dejectedness is not from me, but from thyself.

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not || be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door. And || unto thee shall || be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

If thou doest well, or, for the future shalt do well, i. e. repent of thy sin, amend thy life, offer thy offerings with a willing and cheerful mind and honest heart, in faith and love, as Abel did, shalt thou not be accepted? Or, pardoned, received into favour? Or, exalted, and either preserved in or restored unto those rights of the first-born, which thou art conscious to thyself that thou hast forfeited? Or, elevated in thy looks, i. e. would not, or should not, thy countenance have been upright and pleasant, which now is sad and dejected? Sin is here taken, either, 1. Properly; so the sense is, Sin will be growing upon thee; one sin will bring in another, and that malice and purpose of revenge against thy brother, which now lies hid in the secret chamber of thy mind and heart, lies at the door ready to break forth into the view of the world in open murder. Or, 2. For the punishment of sin, as it is taken Gen. xix. 15; Lev. v. 1; xx. 20; Numb. xviii. 1; 2 Kings vii. 9; Zech. xiv. 19: so the sense is, If thou wilt go on in sin, and execute thy wicked purpose, which I perceive lies working in thy heart, be sure thy sin will find thee out, as it is said Numb. xxxii. 23. Thou shalt not long enjoy the fruits of thy wickedness, but a dreadful judgment shall tread upon the heels of thy sin, and lie like a furious

m ch. 2. 8.
n Ps. 104. 4.
Heb. 1. 7.

c Num. 18.
17.
Prov. 3. 9.
† Heb.
sheep, or,
goats.
d Heb. 11. 4.

e ch. 31. 2.

|| That is,
gotten, or,
acquired.

+ Heb.
Hebel.
+ Heb.
a feeder.
a ch. 3. 23.
& 8. 21.

+ Heb. at the end of days.
b Num. 18.
12.

|| Or,
have the excellency?
Heb. 11. 4.
|| Or, subject
unto thee.
ch. 3. 16.

mastiff dog at the very door of thy house, to seize upon thee at thy first coming in or going out. For that person or thing which is very near to us, or at hand, is said to be at the doors, Matt. xxiv. 33; James v. 9.

Unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him. Those two clauses may relate either, 1. To sin, which may be here spoken of as a person, as it is Rom. vii. 8, 9, 11, &c. So the place may be rendered and expounded thus, The desire of sin is to thee, i. e. to assault, seduce, conquer, and destroy thee; as it is said, Luke xxii. 31, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you, &c. Or thus, its desire, objectively, not subjectively taken, i. e. thy desire, intention, or resolution of sinning, that evil motion of thy heart against thy brother, shall be against (as the Hebrew particle el oft signifies) thee, i. e. howsoever at present it pleaseth thee, yet it is really not only against him, but against thyself, and will certainly turn to thy own ruin; but (for so the particle and is commonly taken) if thou be wise, give no place to it, but resist it, do thou rule (for the future tense is oft put imperatively, as in the ten commandments, and it frequently signifies not what a man can or shall do, but his duty or what he ought to do, as is evident from Gen. xx. 9; Mal. i. 6; Luke iii. 14) over it, i. e. conquer and subdue it, which is thy duty; or, thou shalt rule over it, i. e. by my grace assisting thy endeavours, thou shalt be enabled to subdue thy civil concupiscences and passions, and so overrule, prevent, or remove those punishments which otherwise sin will infallibly bring upon thee. Or, 2. To Abel, and so the sense is, and (as for thy brother Abel, to whose faith and piety I have given this public and honourable testimony, which thy naughty heart makes an occasion of envy and malice, and intention of murder, that thou mayst not by a mistake be led to the perpetration of so horrid a crime, know that this favour of mine concerns only his spiritual privilege, and the happiness of the life to come, which thou despisest; but it makes no change in civil rights, nor doth it transfer the dominion from thee, whose it is by birth, unto him; nor doth he so understand it; for notwithstanding this) unto thee shall be his desire, subject, i. e. he shall and will nevertheless yield to thee as his superior, and thou, according to thy own heart's desire, shalt rule over him. If it be said the name of Abel is not here mentioned, it may be answered, that this is sufficiently included in the pronouns his and him, and it is not unusual to put those relative pronouns alone, the antecedent being not expressed, but to be gathered either from the foregoing or following words; of which see my notes on Gen. iii. 1.

ch. 3975.

8 And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.

Cain talked with Abel, either, 1. Familiarly and friendly, as he used to do, thereby to make him secure and careless; or by way of expostulation and contention; in the field, into which Abel was led, either by his own employment, or by Cain's persuasion; this being a fit place for the execution of his wicked purpose. Slew him, possibly with stone or club, or with some iron tool belonging to husbandry.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Cain, ^g Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, ^h I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

Where is Abel? not that God was ignorant where he was, but partly to convince him of his sin, and to lead him to repentance, and partly to instruct judges to inquire into causes, and hear the accused speak for themselves, before they pass sentence. Thy brother, whom nature and near relation obliged thee to love and preserve.

Am I my brother's keeper? Why dost thou inquire of me concerning him who is of age to look to himself? Is he such a stripling that he needs a guardian? or didst thou ever make me his guardian?

10 And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's † blood crieth unto me from the ground.

I hear thy words, but what say thy actions? What a hideous crime hast thou committed! In vain dost thou endeavour to hide it or deny it. In the Hebrew it is bloods, either to aggravate the crime, or to show the plenty of the blood spilt, or to charge him with the murder of all those that might naturally have come out of Abel's loins; which was a far greater crime in the nonage of the world, when the world greatly wanted people.

From the ground, upon which it was spilt by thy bloody hands.

11 And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand;

As the earth was cursed for thy father's sake, so now art thou cursed in thy own person; from the earth, or, in regard of the earth, which shall grudge thee both its fruits and a certain dwelling-place, and which had more humanity to thy brother than thou hadst; for it kindly received and covered that blood which thou didst cruelly and unnaturally shed upon it.

12 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

Or, that ground, which doth or shall fall to thy share, besides the first and general curse inflicted upon the whole earth, shall have this peculiar curse added to it, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength, i. e. its virtue and fruit, in such proportion as it hath hitherto done.

A vagabond shalt thou be, banished from thy own land and kindred, and father's house, and from the whole society of the faithful, and wandering hither and thither. Others render the words mourning and trembling; or, trembling and wandering. These two words note both the quietness and horror of his mind and conscience, and the unsettledness of his habitation and condition, and, as some add, the trembling of his body.

13 And Cain said unto the LORD, ¶ My punishment is greater than I can bear.

^h Or, Mine iniquity is greater than that it may be forgiven.

Heb. My sin; but sin seems here to be put for punishment, as before, ver. 7; Gen. xix. 15; Lev. v. 1; Psal. lxxix. 27; Prov. xii. 21; for Cain was not so sensible of his sin as of the ill effects of it, as himself shows, ver. 14.

14 ^k Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and ^l from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, ^m that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

^k Job 15. 20-24.

^l Ps. 51. 11.

^m ch. 9. 6. Num. 35. 19-21, 27.

Consider how severely thou usest me; thou hast driven me out, with public infamy, as the word signifies, from the face of the earth, or, this earth, my native land, and from thy face, i. e. favour and protection, as the public enemy of mankind, and as one devoted by thee to destruction.

Quest. Whom did Cain fear, when it appears not that there were any but his father and mother? Ans. So ignorant people conceive; but it is a fond conceit to think that there were no more men than are expressed in this book, where God never intended to give a catalogue of all men, but only of the church, or those who had some relation to or concern with it. Nay, that there were very many thousands of men now in being, is very credible upon these rational grounds and suppositions. 1. That Adam and Eve did, according to God's precept and blessing, Gen. i. 26, procreate children presently after the fall, and God's gracious reconciliation to them; and consequently their children did so, when they came to competent age. 2. That those first men and women were endowed by God with extraordinary fruitfulness, and might have two, three, four, or more at a time, (as divers persons long after had,) which was then expedient for the replenishing of the world; and the like may be judged of their children during the world's infancy. 3. That this murder was committed but a little before the hundred and thirtieth year of Adam's age, which appears by comparing Gen. iv. 25 and v. 3. Before which time, how vast and numerous an offspring might have come from Adam, none can be ignorant that can and shall make a rational computation.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him ⁿsevenfold. And the ⁿ LORD ^o set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

^f Wis. 10. 3. Matt. 23. 34. ⁱ John 3. 12. Jude 11.

^g Ps. 9. 12. ^h John 8. 44.

⁺ Heb. blood. ⁱ Heb. 12. 24. Rev. 6. 10.

Therefore; or, assuredly, as the word signifies, Jer. ii. 32; v. 2; Ze'h. xi. 17; that thou mayst see how I hate murder, and how impartially I shall punish all murderers; and that thou mayst be unhappily free from this fear, that thou mayst live for an example to mankind, for a terror to thyself and others.

Sevenfold, i. e. abundantly; he shall be plagued with many and grievous punishments, as the phrase is used, Lev. xxvi. 28; Psal. xii. 7; lxxix. 12, and in many other places.

A mark upon Cain. What this was, whether a trembling of his body, or a ghastliness of his countenance, or what other visible token of the Divine displeasure, God hath not revealed, nor doth it concern us to know.

16 ¶ And Cain ^p went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.

i. e. He was banished from the place of God's special presence and habitation, from the society of his father, and of the only church which God had upon earth; and dwelt in the land of Nod, in the land which was afterwards called Nod, from Cain's unsettled condition, because he continued wandering hither and thither in it.

17 And Cain knew his wife; and she conceived, and bare † Enoch: and he builded a city, ^a and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch.

Cain knew his wife; of which phrase see on chap. iv. 1. He built a city; partly to divert his troubled mind with business and pleasure, and partly for his own security against the enemies and evils which his guilty conscience made him fear, notwithstanding the assurance which God had given him. And this he did as soon as he was in capacity for it, either by the increase of his own posterity, or by the accession of other degenerate sons of Adam to him, who either being banished, or having departed from the church, willingly associated themselves with their brethren in iniquity.

After the name of his son, Enoch; not after his own name, which he knew to be infamous and hateful.

18 And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat † Lamech.

19 ¶ And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

Lamech, the wicked branch of that cursed root of Cain, took unto him two wives, against God's first institution, Gen. ii. 24; Mal. ii. 15, and without God's leave.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

He taught shepherds to dwell in tents, and to remove them from place to place, for conveniency of pasture. The first authors or inventors of any thing are commonly called its fathers. And he was the inventor of the art of keeping and managing cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the ^r father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

Or, the lovely instrument; but what kind of instrument this was, even the Jews do not understand. The meaning is, he was the inventor of music and musical instruments.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an † instructor of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah.

Tubal-cain, whom (as the learned conceive, and the agreement of the name and function makes probable) the heathens worshipped by the name of Vulcan, the god of smiths; and his sister Naamah, by the name of Venus. He first taught men how to make arms, and other instruments of iron.

Naamah; so called from her beauty, which her name signifies.

23 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, hear my voice; ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for ¶ I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man ¶ to my hurt:

Adah and Zillah, observing his fierceness and cruelty, feared that the vengeance of God or men would fall upon him, and upon them for his sake.

Be it so that I have slain a man, and that a young man, why do you concern yourselves in it? It is to my own wounding and hurt, not to yours; I must suffer for it, not you. Some take this to be a sorrowful confessor: of his bloody crime: q. d. I have murdered a man, to my wounding, &c. i. e. to my utter ruin, or to the wounding and grief of my heart and conscience. But this seems not to agree either with the quality of Cain's family, or with the temper of Lamech's person, or with the scope of the Holy Ghost in this place; which is to describe, not the virtues, but the crimes of that wicked race. According to the marginal translation, the sense may be this, Fear not for me; for if any man, though in his youth and strength, should assault me, and give me the first wound, he should pay dearly for it; and though I were wounded and weakened, the remainders of my strength would be sufficient to give him his death's wound. The words also may be otherwise rendered; the particle chi being taken interrogatively, as it is Isa. xxxix 6; xxxvi. 19, and elsewhere, Have I slain a man to my wounding, and [or,] a young man to my hurt? i. e. that thereby I should deserve such a mortal wound or hurt to be inflicted upon me by way of retaliation? You have therefore no cause of fear, either for my sake or for your own.

24 * If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, ^s ver. 15. truly Lamech seventy and sevenfold.

If the slaughter of Cain shall be punished in him that shall kill him, whosoever he be, my death shall be much more certainly and severely revenged by God upon any man that shall murder me. These words may be either, 1. A profane scoff: q. d. Since Cain, my father and pattern in murder, was so far from being punished by the hand of God, that he had a special protection from him that no man should dare to touch him, I (whose murder is not so heinous as his was) shall not fare worse than he, and therefore have no reason to fear either God or men. Or, 2. An argument or ground of his security: q. d. I am not only secured by my own puissance, but by God's providence; which certainly will be more watchful over me, who have not committed any such horrid crime, than over him that killed his own innocent brother.

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and ^t called his name † Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

She gave the name, but not without Adam's consent, Gen. v. 3. She spoke by Divine inspiration.

Note that the word seed is used of one single person here, and Gen. xxi. 13; xxxviii. 8; which confirms the apostle's argument, Gal. iii. 16.

Instead of Abel; to succeed his father Adam, as Abel should have done in the priesthood, and administration and care of holy things in the church of God.

26 And to Seth, ^u to him also there was born a son; and he called his name † Enos: then began men ¶ to call upon the name of the LORD.

Enos properly signifies a miserable man, to note the great wickedness and wretchedness of that generation, which the Hebrew writers generally observe.

To call upon the name of the Lord; to pray unto God, to worship God in a more public and solemn manner;

n Pa. 79. 12.
o Ezek. 9. 4.

p 2 Kings 13.
21. & 24. 21.
Jer. 21. 39.
& 52. 3.

r Heb.
Chronick.
q Pa. 49. 11.

t Heb.
Lamech.

r Rom. 4. 11,
12.

+ Heb.
whetter.

l Or, I would slay a man in my sound,
&c.
|| Or,
in my hurt.

3764.

t ch. 5. 3.

+ Heb.
Seth.
|| That is,
appointed,
or, put.

3769.

u ch. 5. 6.
+ Heb.
Enosh.
|| Or, to call themselves by the name of the LORD.

w 1 Kings 18. 24. Ps. 116. 17. Joel 2. 32. Zeph. 3. 9. 1 Cor. 1. 2 praying being here put for the whole worship of God, as Gen. xii. 8; xxvi. 25, and in many other places. According to the marginal version, the sense is this: Then when the world was universally corrupt, and had forsaken God and his service, good men grew more valiant and zealous for God, and did more publicly and avowedly own God, and began to distinguish and separate themselves from the ungodly world, and to call themselves and one another by the name of God, i. e. the sons, servants, or worshippers of God as they are expressly called; and that, as it seems, upon this occasion, Gen. vi. 2. And in this sense this phrase is elsewhere taken, as Isa. xliii. 7; xlv. 5; lxxv. 1. Some render the place thus, Then began men to profane the name, i. e. the worship, of the Lord, by idolatry or superstition. But this seems neither to agree with the Hebrew phrase, nor to suit with this place, where he speaks of the posterity of Seth; who were the holy seed, and the only church of God then in the world.

CHAP. V.

The manner of man's creation repeated, 1, 2. The genealogy, age, and death of the fathers from Adam to Noah, in the line of Seth. Seth begotten of Adam after his image, 3. The piety and translation of Enoch, 24. Lamech's prophecy of his son Noah, 29. Sons born to Noah, 32.

THIS is the * book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in ^b the likeness of God made he him;

This is the book, i. e. the list or catalogue, as this word is taken, Neh. vii. 5; Matt. i. 1, as it is also put for any short writing, as for a bill of divorce, as Deut. xxiv. 1, 2. The generations of Adam, i. e. his posterity begotten by him; the word being passively used. But he doth not here give a complete list of all Adam's children, but only of his godly seed, which preserved true religion and the worship of God from Adam to the Flood, and from whose loins Christ came, Luke iii.

God created man. This is here repeated to note the different way of the production of Adam, and of his posterity; his was by creation from God, theirs by generation from their parents. See Gen. i. 26.

^c ch. 1. 27. 2 Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created.

See Gen. i. 26; Matt. xix. 4; Mark x. 6. He blessed them with power to propagate their kind, and with other blessings. See Gen. i. 28.

Called their name Adam; which name is given both to every man, as Gen. ix. 6; Psal. xlix. 20, and to the first man, as Gen. ii. 23, and to the whole kind, both the man and the woman, who are called by one name, to show their intimate union and communion in all things.

^{3874.} 3 ¶ And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image; and ^d called his name Seth:

Adam lived an hundred and thirty years after he was created, in which time he begat other sons and daughters, as appears from what was said before.

After his image; either, 1. In regard of the natural frame of his body and soul; but this was so evident of itself, that the mention of it had been frivolous. Nor is there any reason why that should be said of Seth, rather than of Cain or Abel. Or, 2. In regard of his corruption, q. d. a weak, sinful, mortal man, like himself; for Adam's image is here plainly opposed to the likeness of God, wherein Adam is said to be created, ver. 1. And this is fitly said of Seth to signify, that although he was a worthy and good man, and, Adam excepted, the most eminent person of the whole church of God; yet he, no less than wicked Cain, was begotten and born in sin; and that all the difference which was between him, and consequently between other good men, and the wicked progeny of Cain, was not from the nature which they received from Adam, but from the grace infused into them by God.

4 * And the days of Adam after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: and he begat sons and daughters:

Whose names and numbers are here passed over in silence, as not belonging to the genealogy of Christ, nor to the following history.

5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died.

The long lives of men in ancient times, here noted, are also mentioned by heathen authors; and it was wisely so ordered by God, both for the more plentiful increase of mankind in the first age of the world, and for the more effectual propagation of true religion and other useful knowledge to the world. And many natural reasons might be given why their lives were then longer than afterwards.

6 And Seth lived an hundred and five years, and ^b begat Enos:

7 And Seth lived after he begat Enos eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters:

8 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

9 ¶ And Enos lived ninety years, and begat Cainan:

10 And Enos lived after he begat Cainan eight hundred and fifteen years, and begat sons and daughters:

11 And all the days of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and he died.

12 ¶ And Cainan lived seventy years, and begat Mahalaleel:

13 And Cainan lived after he begat Mahalaleel eight hundred and forty years, and begat sons and daughters:

14 And all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years: and he died.

15 ¶ And Mahalaleel lived sixty and five years, and begat Jared:

16 And Mahalaleel lived after he begat Jared eight hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters:

17 And all the days of Mahalaleel were eight hundred ninety and five years: and he died.

18 ¶ And Jared lived an hundred sixty and two years, and he begat Enoch:

19 And Jared lived after he begat Enoch eight hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

20 And all the days of Jared were nine hundred sixty and two years: and he died.

21 ¶ And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat Methuselah:

Whose name is thought by some learned men to contain a prophecy of the flood, which was to come a thousand years after; for it signifies, He dies, and the dart or arrow of God's vengeance comes; or, He dies, and the sending forth of the waters comes.

22 And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

i. e. He lived as one whose eye was continually upon God; whose care and constant course and business it was to please God, and to imitate him, and to maintain acquaintance and communion with him; as one devoted to God's service, and wholly governed by his will. He walked not with the men of that wicked age, or as they walked, but being a prophet and preacher, as may be gathered from ^e 1 Chron. 1. 1, &c.

^f ch. 1. 28.
^g ch. 3. 19. Heb. 9. 27.
^h ch. 4. 26.
ⁱ Heb. Kenan.
^j Heb. Jared.
^k ch. 6. 9. & 17. 1. & 24. 40. 2 Kings 20. 3. Ps. 16. 8. & 116. 5. & 128. 1. Mic. 6. 8. Mal. 2. 6.
^l ch. 3. 19. Heb. 9. 27.
^m ch. 4. 26.
ⁿ Heb. Kenan.
^o Heb. Jared.
^p ch. 1. 27.
^q ch. 4. 23.
^r ch. 6. 9. & 17. 1. & 24. 40. 2 Kings 20. 3. Ps. 16. 8. & 116. 5. & 128. 1. Mic. 6. 8. Mal. 2. 6.
^s ch. 3. 19. Heb. 9. 27.
^t ch. 4. 26.
^u Heb. Kenan.
^v Heb. Jared.
^w ch. 1. 27.
^x ch. 4. 23.
^y ch. 6. 9. & 17. 1. & 24. 40. 2 Kings 20. 3. Ps. 16. 8. & 116. 5. & 128. 1. Mic. 6. 8. Mal. 2. 6.
^z ch. 3. 19. Heb. 9. 27.
^{aa} ch. 4. 26.
^{ab} Heb. Kenan.
^{ac} Heb. Jared.
^{ad} ch. 1. 27.
^{ae} ch. 4. 23.
^{af} ch. 6. 9. & 17. 1. & 24. 40. 2 Kings 20. 3. Ps. 16. 8. & 116. 5. & 128. 1. Mic. 6. 8. Mal. 2. 6.

Jude 14, 15, with great zeal and courage he protested and preached against their evil practices, and boldly owned God and his ways in the midst of them. Compare Gen. vi. 6; Jer. xii. 3; Micah vi. 8.

Begat sons and daughters; hence it is undeniably evident that the state and use of matrimony doth very well agree with the severest course of holiness, and with the office of a prophet or preacher.

23 And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years:

24 And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.

i. e. He appeared not any longer upon earth, or amongst mortal men. The same phrase is in Gen. xlii. 36; Jer. xxxi. 15.

For God took him out of this sinful and miserable world unto himself, and to his heavenly habitation: see Luke xxiii. 43. And he took either his soul, of which alone this phrase is used, Ezek. xxiv. 16; or rather both soul and body, as he took Elias, 2 Kings ii. 11, because he so took him that he did not see death, Heb. xi. 5.

25 And Methuselah lived an hundred eighty and seven years, and begat † Lamech:

26 And Methuselah lived after he begat Lamech seven hundred eighty and two years, and begat sons and daughters:

27 And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years: and he died.

This was the longest time that any man lived. But it is observable that neither his nor any of the patriarchs' lives reached to a thousand years, which number hath some shadow of perfection. He died but a little before the flood came, being taken away from the evil to come.

28 ¶ And Lamech lived an hundred eighty and two years, and begat a son:

Not that wicked Lamech mentioned chap. iv., for he was of the family of Cain, but this was descended from Seth.

29 And he called his name † Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground which the Lord hath cursed.

And he called his name Noah, which signifies rest, saying, by the Spirit of prophecy, This same shall comfort us, concerning the hard labour and manifold troubles to which we are sentenced, chap. iii. 19. And this he did either, 1. By the invention of instruments of husbandry, whereby tillage was made more easy. Or, 2. By removing in some part the curse inflicted upon the earth, and reconciling God unto mankind. Possibly he might suppose that this was the Messias, or promised Seed, and the Saviour of the undone world; as it was frequent with the ancient fathers, through their earnest desire of the Messias, to expect him long before he came, and to mistake other persons for him. Or, 3. By preserving a remnant of mankind from that deluge which he by the Spirit foresaw would come, and re-peopling the emptied earth with a new generation of men, and by restoring and improving the art of husbandry: see Gen. ix. 20.

30 And Lamech lived after he begat Noah five hundred ninety and five years, and begat sons and daughters:

31 And all the days of Lamech were seven hundred seventy and seven years: and he died.

32 And Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat † Shem, Ham, ° and Japheth.

i. e. He began to beget; God in mercy denying him children till that time, that he might not beget them to the destroyer, that he might have no more than should be saved in the ark; or, having before that time begotten others who were now dead, and having the approaching flood in his view, he began again to beget a seminary for the world.

Of these three sons here following, the eldest seems to be Japheth, Gen. x. 21. The second was Sem, as appears because he was but an hundred years old two years after the flood, Gen. xi. 11. The youngest Ham, Gen. ix. 24. But Sem is first named in order of dignity, as being the progenitor of the church, and of Jesus Christ; and because he and his progeny is the principal subject of this whole history.

CHAP. VI.

Unlawful matches of the sons of God with the daughters of men, 1, 2, grieve the Spirit of God, who threatens their destruction, 3. Giants and mighty men born; a general degeneracy of mankind, 4, 5. God repents that he had made man, and resolves to destroy that world, 6, 7. Noah is excepted, and finds favour with God, 8. His character, 9. The earth corrupt, and filled with violence, 11, 12. God declares to Noah his purpose to destroy it, 13. Directs him to make an ark, 14—16. Mentions a deluge, 17. His covenant with Noah to preserve a seed, 18—21. Noah's obedience, 22.

AND it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

Men, i. e. wicked men, the posterity of Cain, as appears from the following verse; who are here called men, and the sons of men, by way of contempt, and of distinction; mere men, such as had only the natures and qualities of corrupt men, without the image of God.

Began to multiply, to wit, more than ordinarily; or more than the sons of God, because they practised polygamy, after the example of their predecessor, the ungodly Lamech, Gen. iv. 19.

Daughters were born unto them; so doubtless were sons also; but their daughters are here mentioned as one principal occasion of the sin noted in the next verse, and of the following deluge.

2 That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.

The sons of God; either, 1. Persons of greatest eminency for place and power, for such are called gods, and children of the Most High, Psal. lxxxii. 6; where also they are opposed to men, ver. 7, i. e. to meaner men. And the most eminent things in their kinds are attributed to God, as cedars of God, hill of God, &c. But it is not probable that the princes and nobles should generally take wives or women of the meaner rank, nor would the marriages of such persons be simply condemned, or at least it would not be mentioned as a crying sin, and a great cause of the deluge. Or rather, 2. The children of Seth and Enos, the professors of the true religion. For, 1. Such, and only such, in the common use of Scripture, are called the sons and children of God, as Deut. xiv. 1; xxxii. 19; Isa. i. 2; xlv. 11; Hos. xi. 1; Luke xvii. 27, &c. 2. This title manifestly relates to Gen. iv. 26, where the same persons are said to be called by the name of the Lord, i. e. to be the sons and servants of God. 3. They are opposed to the daughters of men, the word men being here taken in an ill sense, for such as had nothing in them but the nature of men, which is corrupt and abominable, and were not sons of God, but foreigners and strangers to him, and apostates from him. 4. These unequal matches with persons of a false religion are every where condemned in Scripture as sinful and pernicious, as Gen. xxvi. 35; Exod. xxxiv. 16; 1 Kings xi. 2, 3; Ezra ix. 12; Neh. xiii. 23, &c.; Mal. ii. 11; 1 Cor. vii. 39; 2 Cor. vi. 14, and therefore are fitly spoken of here as one of the sins which brought the flood upon the ungodly world.

Saw, i. e. gazed upon and observed curiously and lustfully, as the sequel sheweth, the daughters of men, of that ungodly and accursed race of Cain.

They were fair, i. e. beautiful, and set off their beauty with all the allurements of ornaments and carriage; herein using greater liberty than the sons and daughters of God did or durst take, 1 Pet. iii. 3; and therefore were more

12 Kings 2
11.
Eclus. 44.
Is. & 40. 14.
Heb. 11. 5.

3130.
† Heb.
Lamech.

2948.
+ Gr. Noe.
Luke 3. 26.
Heb. 11. 7.
1 Pet. 3. 20.
† That is,
rest, or,
comfort.
m ch. 3. 17.
& 4. 11.

n ch. 6. 10.
o ch. 10. 21.

2 ch. 1. 26.
2 Eadr. 3. 7.

Deut. 7. 5.

enticing and prevalent with fleshly-minded men. Either, 1. By force and violence, as the word sometimes signifies. Or rather, 2. By consent; for the sons of God were so few, in comparison of the wicked world, that they durst not take away their daughters by force; which also proves that they did not take them for harlots, but for wives.

They took them wives, possibly more than one for each of them, after the example of those wicked families into which they were matched; of all which they chose, i. e. loved and liked, as the word choosing is taken, Psal. xxv. 12; cxix. 173; Isa. i. 29; xlii. 1, compared with Matt. xii. 28. This is noted as the first error, that they did promiscuously choose wives, without any regard to their sobriety and religion, minding only the pleasing of their own fancies and lusts, not the pleasing and serving of their Lord and Maker, nor the obtaining of a godly seed, which was God's end in the institution of marriage, Mal. ii. 15, and therefore should have been theirs too.

3 And the LORD said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years.

The Lord said; either, 1. To the men of that age by the mouth of Noah; or, 2. Within himself (see Psal. xiv. 1); he determined. Strive with man, or, contend, or, debate in or against men, as it hath hitherto done, by inward motions and suggestions in the minds and consciences of wicked men, or by the mouths and ministry of that small remnant of holy men, and particularly of Noah, who protested against and contended with the world of the ungodly, and by their doctrines, admonitions, threatenings, and examples, endeavoured to bring them to repentance, 1 Pet. iii. 19; or dispute with, or concerning, or because of men, i. e. whether I should destroy or save him, as God disputes with or about Ephraim, Hos. xi. 8.

For that he also, i. e. even the seed of Seth, or the sons of God also, no less than the offspring of Cain; the pronoun being here put for the foregoing noun, and the singular number put for the plural, he, i. e. they, to wit, the sons of God. Both which figures are frequent in the use of Scripture. Or, he, i. e. man, all mankind, the sons of God not excepted, is flesh; not only fleshly in part, or in some actions, but altogether, in regard of soul as well as body, minding nothing but making provision for the flesh to fulfil its lusts, Rom. xiii. 14. Not having the Spirit, Jude 19, nor heeding its good motions, but suppressing and resisting them. Flesh not only in the condition of their nature, but in the baseness and corruption of their hearts and lives; as the word flesh is commonly used when it is opposed to the Spirit, as John iii. 6; Rom. vii. 18; viii. 5, 7; Gal. v. 17. Yet, though he deserve a speedy destruction, his days, i. e. the time allowed him for repentance, and the prevention of his ruin, shall be an hundred and twenty years. During which time Noah was preaching; and, to assure them of the truth of his doctrine, preparing the ark. See 1 Pet. iii. 20; 2 Pet. ii. 5. Quest. How did God perform this promise, when there were but a hundred years between this time and the flood, by comparing Gen. v. 32, with Gen. vii. 11? Ans. 1. The increasing wickedness of mankind might justly hasten their ruin, and forfeit the benefit of this indulgence. 2. This promise, though mentioned after that, Gen. v. 32, yet seems to have been made twenty years before it; for that verse is added there out of its proper place only to complete the genealogy; and therefore, after this narration, it is repeated here in its due order, ver. 10. And such hysteron proterons are frequently noted in Scripture.

246.

4 There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

Giants; men so called, partly from their high stature, but principally for their great strength and force, whereby they oppressed and tyrannized over others: for this is mentioned as another sin, and cause of the flood; and therefore they seem to be here noted, not for the height of their stature, which is no crime, but for their violence, which also is expressed beneath, ver. 11, 13. After that time there arose a new generation or succession of that sort of men, when the sons of God came in, were united and incorporated with them. A modest expression of the conjugal state and act, as Gen. xvi. 2; xxxv. 3; Judg. xv. 2.

Which were of old, which were proper to the first ages of the world; for the succeeding generations were generally less in stature and strength of body, and therefore not so famous for personal exploits. Or these words may be thus joined with the following, which were of old, i. e. among the men of that first and wicked world, men of renown, i. e. famous in their generations; when indeed they should have been infamous for the abuse of their stature and strength to tyranny and cruelty.

5 ¶ And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.

¶ Or, the whole imagination: The Hebrew word signifieth not only the imagination, but also the purposes and desires. e ch. 8. 21. Deut. 29. 19. Prov. 6. 18. 2 Esd. 3. 8. Matt. 15. 19. † Heb. every day.

To the heart the Scripture commonly ascribes all men's actual wickedness, as Psal. xli. 6; Prov. iv. 23; vi. 14, 18; Jer. xvii. 9; Matt. xv. 19; Rom. iii. 10, &c.; thereby leading us from acts of sin to the original corruption of nature, as the cause and source of them.

Evil continually, i. e. that man was perpetually either doing or contriving wickedness; that not only his actions were vile, but his principles also; his very soul, yea, the noblest part of it, which might seem most free from the contagion; his mind and thoughts were corrupt and abominable, and so there was no hope of amendment.

6 And 'it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.

Properly God cannot repent, Numb. xxiii. 19; 1 Sam. xv. 11, 29, because he is unchangeable in his nature and counsels, Mal. iii. 6; James i. 17, and perfectly wise, and constantly happy, and therefore not liable to any grief or disappointment. But this is spoken of God after the manner of man, by a common figure called anthropopathia, whereby also eyes, ears, hands, nose, &c. are ascribed to God; and it signifies an alienation of God's heart and affections from men for their wickedness, whereby God carries himself towards them like one that is truly penitent and grieved, destroying the work of his own hands. It grieved him at his heart, or, at his very soul, i. e. exceedingly.

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; † both man, and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.

Both man and beast; for as the beasts were made for man's use and service, so they are destroyed for man's punishment, and to discover the malignity of sin, and God's deep abhorrence thereof, by destroying those innocent creatures that had been made instrumental to it.

8 But Noah ^h found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

i. e. Obtained mercy and favour; which is noted to show that Noah was so far guilty of the common corruption of human nature, that he needed God's grace and mercy to pardon and preserve him from the common destruction.

9 ¶ These are the generations of Noah: ⁱ Noah was a just man and ¶ perfect in his generations, and Noah ^h walked with God.

The generations of Noah; either, 1. Properly the posterity of Noah, as the word is commonly used, and as it is explained ver. 10. So the rest of this verse comes in by way of parenthesis, which is frequent. Or, 2. The events or occurrences which befell Noah and his family, as the word is taken, Gen. xxxvii. 2; Prov. xxvii. 1.

A just man, and perfect. These words are to be taken

¶ Or, the whole imagination: The Hebrew word signifieth not only the imagination, but also the purposes and desires.

246. f Sep. Num. 1 Sam. 15. 11, 29. 2 Sam. 24.

16. Mal. 3. 6. Jam. 1. 17. g 16. 63. 10. Eph. 4. 30.

† Heb. from man unto beast.

h ch. 19. 12. Ex. 35. 12. 13, 16, 17.

Luke 1. 30. Acts 7. 46.

i ch. 7. 1. Ezek. 14. 14. 29. Ecclesi. 44. 17. Rom. 1. 17. 14. b. 11. 7. 2 Pet. 2. 5.

¶ Or, upright. k ch. 5. 22.

either, 1. Jointly, q. d. he was righteous, not only in appearance, or in part, but perfectly, in all respects, towards God and men; or sincerely and truly. Or, 2. Distinctly, q. d. he was for his state and condition just before God, which was by faith, Heb. xi. 7, by which every just man lives, Rom. i. 17, and perfect, i. e. upright and unblamable in the course of his life among the men of his age, as it follows; in his generations. This is spoken either, 1. Diminutively; he was so comparatively to the men that then lived, who were very bad; though otherwise even Noah had many infirmities, so that he also had not been saved but for God's grace and mercy, ver. 8. Or, 2. By way of amplification and commendation; he was good in bad times, in spite of all evil counsels or examples. He saith generations, in the plural number, to show that as he lived in two generations, one before the flood, and another after it, so he continued uncorrupted in both of them.

Noah walked with God. See on Gen. v. 22.

1 ch. 5. 32. 10 And Noah begat three sons, ¹ Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

See the note on Gen. v. 32.

11 The earth also was corrupt ^m before God, and the earth was ⁿ filled with violence.

^m ch. 7. 1. & 10. 9. & 13. 13. 2 Chron. 34. 27. Luke 1. 6. Rom. 2. 13. & 3. 13. ⁿ Ezek. 8. 17. & 28. 16. Hab. 2. 8, 17.

The earth is here put for its inhabitants, as 1 Kings x. 24; Ezek. xiv. 13.

Before God, or, before the face of God; q. d. in despite and contempt of God, and of his presence and justice. Compare Gen. x. 9, and xiii. 13; q. d. They sinned openly and impudently without shame, boldly and resolutely without any fear of God.

In the latter part of the verse, the earth is put for the place, or the inhabited parts of it. So the same word is twice used in a differing sense in one and the same verse. See the like Matt. viii. 22.

Violence, or, injustice, fraud, rapine, oppression; for all these this word signifies. Some conceive that these two branches note the universal corruption of mankind, in reference to all their duties. 1. Towards God and his worship, which they corrupted by horrible superstition, and by idolatry, which is called corruption, Exod. xxxii. 7; Deut. xxxii. 5; Judg. ii. 19; 2 Chron. xxvii. 28. 2. Towards men, in the duties of righteousness.

12 And God ^o looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

All men, as the word flesh is taken, Psal. lxxviii. 39; Isa. xl. 5, and oft elsewhere, had corrupted his way; either, 1. God's way, his precepts concerning religion and righteousness; or, 2. Their own way or manner of living.

13 And God said unto Noah, ^p The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; ^q and, behold, I will destroy them ^r with the earth.

i. e. The time of ruin, as this word is used, Ezek. vii. 2, 3, 6; Amos viii. 2, of all flesh, to all men, as ver. 12, though the beasts also were involved in the same destruction. is come, i. e. is approaching, and at the very door, and shall as certainly come as if it were actually come.

Before me, i. e. in my purpose and decree, howsoever vain men flatter themselves with hopes of longer impunity. Through them, i. e. By their means; so that the earth even groans under them.

With the earth, i. e. with the fruits and beauty, though not the substance of the earth. Or, from the earth, as ver. 7; the Hebrew oth being oft put for min or meeth, as Gen. xlv. 4; Deut. xxxiv. 1; 1 Kings viii. 43, compared with 2 Chron. vi. 33.

14 ¶ Make thee an ark of gopher wood; † rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

An ark; a little ship made in the form of an ark or chest, but probably sloping at the bottom for the convenience of navigation, as it was for another reason sloping at the top.

Gopher wood: this word is but once used in Scripture, and therefore it is diversely rendered by the learned; by some pine, by many cedar, but by others cypress, a tree very proper and usual for ships, and of a firm and durable substance, and much abounding in those parts; all which appears from ancient authors.

With pitch; or rather, with some kind of bitumen, of the same nature and use with pitch, to cement the parts of the ark together, and to preserve it from the injuries of the sun, and water, and worms; but more odoriferous, to correct the unpleasant scent of some of the creatures.

15 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: The length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

This is the fashion, or, this is the measure, or the manner according to which thou shalt make it; and it was a just and regular proportion, the length being six times more than the breadth, and ten times more than the height. There is no need to understand this of geometrical cubits, which are said to have contained nine ordinary cubits; nor of sacred cubits, which were a hand's breadth longer than the ordinary, Ezek. xliii. 13; nor to suppose the stature of men at that time to have been generally larger, and consequently their cubit much longer. For the ordinary cubit consisting of a common foot and a half, is sufficient for the containing of all the kinds of living creatures and their provisions, which was to be put into the ark, as hath been at large demonstrated by learned men. Nor is there any considerable difficulty in the point, but what is made by the ignorance of infidels, and aggravated by their malice against the Holy Scriptures; especially if these things be considered: 1. That the differing kinds of beasts and birds, which unlearned men fancy to be innumerable, are observed by the learned, who have particularly searched into them, and written of them, to be little above three hundred, whereof the far greatest part are but small; and many of these which now are thought to differ in kind, in their first original were but of one sort, though now they be so greatly altered in their shape and qualities, which might easily arise from the diversity of their climate and food, and other circumstances, and from the promiscuous conjunctions of those lawless creatures. 2. That the brute creatures, when they were enclosed in the ark, where they were idle, and constantly under a kind of horror and amazement, would be contented with far less provisions, and those of another sort than they were accustomed to, and such as might lie in less room, as hay, and the fruits of the earth. God also, who altered their natures, and made the savage creatures mild and gentle, might by the same powerful providence moderate their appetites, or, if he pleased, have increased their provision whilst they did eat it, as afterwards Christ did by the loaves. So vain and idle are the cavils of wanton wits concerning the incapacity of the ark for the food of so many beasts. 3. That supposing the ravenous creatures did feed upon flesh, here is also space enough and to spare for a sufficient number of sheep, for their food for a whole year, as upon computation will easily appear; there being not two thousand sheep necessary for them, and the ark containing no less than four hundred and fifty thousand cubits in it. But of this matter more may be seen in my Latin Synopsis.

16 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

A window, or a light; or lights, or windows; the singular number being put for the plural, which is most frequent; or it might be one great light or lantern, by which light might be derived and distributed into several rooms.

Shalt thou finish it above, i. e. either, 1. The window, which was to be a cubit square. Or rather, 2. The ark; as appears, 1. From the gender of the Hebrew affix, which is feminine, and therefore agrees with the ark, which in the Hebrew is of the feminine gender, not with the window, which is masculine. 2. From the nature of the thing, the ark requiring a roof, and that sloping, that the rain might ⁱⁿ ch. 7. 1. & 10. 9. & 13. 13. 2 Chron. 34. 27. Luke 1. 6. Rom. 2. 13. & 3. 13. ⁿ Ezek. 8. 17. & 28. 16. Hab. 2. 8, 17.

^o ch. 18. 21. Ps. 14. 2. & 33. 14. & 53. 2, 3.

^p Jer. 51. 13. Ezek. 7. 2, 3, 6. Amos 9. 2. 1 Pet. 4. 7.

^q ver. 17. ^r Or, from the earth.

† Heb. nests.

slide off from it, and not sink into it; for which end the roof in the middle was to be higher than the ark by a cubit. And as the other parts of the ark were made with exquisite contrivance, so doubtless this was not defective therein.

The highest story was for men and birds; the second for provision for the brute creatures; the lowest for the beasts, under which was the sink of the ark, which most probably was made sloping at the bottom, as all ships and boats are, where serpents and such like creatures might be put, with their proper provisions.

r ver. 13.
ch. 7. 4, 21,
22, 23.
2 Pet. 2. 5.

17 ^r And, behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth shall die.

I, even I, which is thus emphatically repeated, to signify that this flood did not proceed from natural causes, but from the immediate hand and judgment of God, do bring, i. e. will assuredly and speedily bring, all flesh, i. e. all men, birds, and beasts.

Every thing that is in the earth. This limitation is added to show, that the fishes are not included in the threatened destruction, either because they did not live in the same element wherein men lived and sinned; or because they were not so instrumental in men's sins as the beasts might be; or because man had a greater command over the beasts than over the fishes, and greater service and benefit from them; and therefore the destruction of the former was a greater and more proper punishment to man than the latter.

18 But with thee will I establish my covenant; and thou shalt come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

Either, 1. My promise to preserve thee and thine, both till the flood and in it, notwithstanding all the scoffs and threats of the wicked world against thee all the time of thy preaching and building of the ark. The word covenant being here understood, not of a mutual compact or agreement, but of a single and gracious promise, as it is also used Numb. xviii. 19; xxv. 12, and in other places. Which promise, though only here mentioned, was doubtless made before, as may easily be gathered, both from these words and some foregoing passages, and from the need which Noah had of such a support and encouragement during all the time of his ministry. Or, 2. My covenant concerning the sending of the promised Seed, and the redemption of mankind by the Messias, who shall come out of thy loins, and therefore thou shalt be preserved.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

Of all flesh two; i. e. either, 1. By couples, or male and female; but this is mentioned as a distinct thing in the close of the verse. Or rather, 2. Two at least of every sort, even of the unclean; but of the clean more, as is noted chap. vii. 2.

20 Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

After their kind, i. e. according to their several kinds. They shall come unto thee of their own accord, by my impulse, or by the conduct of angels, as Gen. ii. 19.

21 And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

See Gen. i. 29, 30.

w Heb. 11. 7.
See Ex. 40.
16.
x ch. 7. 5, 9, 16.

22 ^w Thus did Noah; ^r according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

Both for the matter and the manner of it, although the work of building the ark was laborious, costly, tedious, dangerous, and seemingly foolish and ridiculous; especially when all things continued in the same posture and safety for so many scores of years together; whereby Noah, without doubt, was all that while the song of the drunkards, and the sport of the wits of that age. So that it is not strange that this is mentioned as an heroic act of faith in Noah, Heb. xi. 7, whereby he surmounted all these difficulties.

CHAP. VII.

God commands Noah to enter into the ark; the reason of it, 1. Directs him as to the manner and time, 2—4. Noah's obedience in all things, 5. His age, 6. His entrance with his family, &c. into the ark, 7—9. The day in which the flood began, 10, 11. Its continuance, 12. Noah and his family, &c. in the ark, 13—16. The flood increases and destroys all living substance, 17—24.

AND the LORD said unto Noah, ^a Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for ^b thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.

When the ark was finished and furnished, and the time of God's patience expired, Gen. vi. 3, he said unto Noah, Come, i. e. prepare to enter, thou and all thy family; which consisted only of eight persons, 1 Pet. iii. 20, to wit, Noah and his three sons, and their four wives, Gen. vi. 18. Whereby it appears that each had but one wife, and consequently it is more than probable that polygamy, as it began in the posterity of wicked Cain, Gen. iv. 19, so it was confined to them, and had not as yet got footing amongst the sons of God. For if ever polygamy had been allowable, it must have been now, for the re-peopling of the perishing world. For thee have I seen righteous, with the righteousness of faith, as it is explained, Heb. xi. 7, evidenced by all the fruits of righteousness and true holiness, not only before men, and seemingly, but really, and to my all-seeing eye, in this generation; of which expression, see notes on Gen. vi. 9.

2 Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female: ^d and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female.

Obj. The distinction of clean and unclean beasts was not before the law. Answer. Some legal things were prescribed and used before the law, as abstinence from the eating of blood, Gen. ix. 4, and, among other things, sacrifices, as learned men have sufficiently proved; and consequently the distinction of beasts to be sacrificed was then, in some measure, understood, which afterwards was expressed, Lev. i., &c. Nor is this a good argument, This was not written before, therefore it was not commanded and practised before, especially concerning a time when no commands of God were written, but only delivered by tradition.

By sevens; either, 1. Seven single, as most think. Or rather, 2. Seven couples, as may be gathered, 1. From the duplication of the word in Hebrew. If it be said seven signifies only seven of every kind, then it would have been said concerning the unclean beasts two two, i. e. two of each sort; whereas now there is an apparent difference; there it is said only by two, but here, by sevens, or seven seven, which difference of the phrase suggest a difference in the things. 2. By the following words, the male and his female, which being indifferently applied to the clean and unclean, plainly shows that none of them entered into the ark single, and therefore there was no odd seventh among them, but all went in by couples, which was most convenient in all for the propagation of their kind, and in the clean for other uses also; as for sacrifices to God, if not for the sustentation of men in the ark, and after they came out of it. Which gives us the reason why God would have more of the clean than of the unclean put into the ark, because they were more serviceable both to God and men.

3 Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

2349.
a ver. 7, 12.
Matt. 24. 38.
Luke 17. 26.
Heb. 11. 7.
1 Pet. 3. 20.
2 Pet. 2. 5.
b ch. 6. 9.
c ver. 8.
Lev. ch. 11.
+ Heb. seven seven.
d Lev. 10. 10.
Ezek. 44. 23.

Ps. 33. 18, 19. Prov. 10. 9. 2 Pet. 2. 9.

s ch. 7. 1, 7, 13.
1 Pet. 3. 20.
2 Pet. 2. 5.

t ch. 7. 8, 9, 15, 16.

u ch. 7. 9, 15. See
ch. 2. 15.

Of clean fowls, which he leaves to be understood out of the foregoing verse, by sevens; and of the unclean, by two; as before of the beasts, to keep seed alive, i. e. the issue or breed of them.

4 For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth ^e forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I † destroy from off the face of the earth.

^e ver. 12, 17.
† Heb. blot out.
Yet seven days, or, after seven days, the Hebrew Lamed being put for after, as it is Exod. xvi. 1; Psal. xix. 3; Jer. xli. 4. Or, within seven days, which time God allowed to the world as a further space of repentance, whereof therefore it is probable Noah gave them notice; and it is not unlikely that many of them who slighted the threatening when it was at one hundred and twenty years distance, now hearing a second threatening, and considering the nearness of their danger, might be more affected and brought to true repentance; who though destroyed in their bodies by the flood for their former and long impenitency, which God would not so far pardon, yet might be saved in their spirits. See 1 Pet. iv. 6. And as some preserved in the ark were damned, so others drowned in the deluge might be eternally saved. And every living substance, all that hath in it the breath of life, as was said chap. vi. 17.

^f ch. 6. 22. 5 ^f And Noah did according unto all that the Lord commanded him.

Which was said chap. vi. 22, and is here repeated, because this was an eminent instance of his faith and obedience.

2310. 6 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

g ver. 1. 7 ¶ And Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

Or, for fear of; for fear is ascribed to and commended in Noah, Heb. xi. 7. Or, from the face of.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

9 There went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

They went by the secret impulse of their great Creator and Governor, (see Gen. ii. 19; vi. 20.) two and two; of which see above, ver. 20.

10 And it came to pass ¶ after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 ¶ In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the same day were all ^h the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the ¶ ⁱ windows of heaven were opened.

^h ch. 8. 2.
ⁱ Prov. 8. 34.
Ezek. 26. 19.
¶ Or, floodgates.
^j ch. 1. 7.
^k 8. 2.
^l Ps. 78. 23.
In the six hundredth year; either complete, or rather current or begun; otherwise he had lived three hundred and fifty one years after the flood, not three hundred and fifty only, as it is written, Gen. ix. 29. In the second month; either, 1. Of that year of Noah's life; or, 2. Of the year. Now as the year among the Hebrews was twofold; the one sacred, for the celebration of feasts, beginning in March, of which see Exod. xii. 2; the other civil, for the better ordering of men's political or civil affairs, which began in September. Accordingly this second month is thought, by some, to be part of April and part of May, the most pleasant part of the year, when the flood was least expected or feared; by others, part of October and part of November, a little after Noah had gathered the fruits of the earth, and laid them up in the ark. So the flood came in with the winter, and was by degrees dried up by the heat of the following summer. And this opinion seems the more probable, because the most ancient and first beginning of the year was in September; and the other beginning of the year in March was but a later institution among the Jews, with respect to their feasts and sacred affairs only, which are not at all concerned here.

The fountains of the great deep, i. e. of the sea, called the deep, Job xxxviii. 16, 30; xli. 31; Psal. cvi. 9; and also of that great abyss, or sea of waters, which is contained in the bowels of the earth. For that there are vast quantities of waters there, is implied both here and in other scriptures, as Psal. xxxiii. 7; 2 Pet. iii. 5; and is affirmed by Plato in his Phædrus, and by Seneca in his Natural Questions, 3. 19, and is evident from springs and rivers which have their rise from thence; and some of them have no other place into which they issue themselves, as appears from the Caspian Sea, into which divers rivers do empty themselves, and especially that great river Volga, in such abundance, that it would certainly drown all those parts of the earth, if there were not a vent for them under ground; for other vent above ground out of that great lake or sea they have none. Out of this deep therefore, and out of the sea together, it was very easy for God to bring such a quantity of waters, as might overwhelm the earth without any production of new waters, which yet he with one word could have created. So vain are the cavils of atheistical antiscipturists in this.

The fountains are said to be broken up here, also Psal. lxxiv. 15, by a metonymy, because the earth and other obstructions were broken up, and so a passage opened for the fountains; as bread is said to be bruised, Isa. xxviii. 28, and meal to be ground, Isa. xlvii. 2, because the corn, of which the meal and bread were made, was bruised and ground. The windows of heaven were opened; which some understand of the waters, which, from Gen. i. 7, they suppose were placed by God above the visible heavens, and reserved and kept, as it were, in prison for this very purpose; and now the prison-doors were opened, and they let loose and sent down for the destruction of the world. But others more fitly understand it of the clouds, which are called the windows of heaven, Mal. iii. 10; so 2 Kings vii. 2, 19; Psal. lxxviii. 23; Isa. xxiv. 18, which then grew thicker and bigger with waters; nor is there any inconvenience in it, if we say that God created a great quantity of waters for this end, which afterwards he annihilated.

12 ^k And the rain was upon the earth ^k ver. 4, 12. forty days and forty nights.

God by this gradual proceeding both awakened to repentance, and gave them space for it.

13 In the selfsame day ^l entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark;

In the selfsame day on which the flood began by that terrible shower. Heb. In the body, or essence, or strength of the day, as Gen. xvii. 26; Lev. xxiii. 14; Josh. x. 27: q. d. Not in the dark or twilight, like one ashamed of his action, or afraid of the people, but when it was clear day, or about noon-tide, in the public view of the world.

14 ^m They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every † sort.

Every bird. The first word signifies the greater, the second the less sort of birds, as appears from Gen. xv. 9, 10; Lev. xiv. 4; Psal. civ. 17. Of every sort; Heb. Of every kind of wing, whether feathered, as it is in most birds, or skinny and gristly, as in bats.

15 And they ⁿ went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

See on ver. 9. i. e. All living creatures forementioned, ver. 14.

16 And they that went in, went in male and o ver. 2, 3. female of all flesh, * as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut him in.

Or, shut the door after him, or upon him, or for him, i. e. his good and safety, against the fury either of the waters or of the people. This God did in some extraordinary manner.

p ver. 4, 12. 17 ^p And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

The flood; or, that flood of waters which was poured down in that shower mentioned ver. 12; otherwise the flood was one hundred and fifty days upon the earth, ver. 24. The waters increased, by the accession of more waters from above and beneath.

18 And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; ^q and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

The waters were increased greatly upon the earth; overthrowing men, and houses, and trees, where possibly they did or thought to secure themselves.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; ^r and all the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

Profane wits pretend this to be impossible, because of the vast height of divers mountains. But, 1. This cannot be thought impossible by any man that believeth a God; to whom it was as easy to bring forth a sufficiency of water, for this end, as to speak a word. And if we acknowledge a miracle of the Divine power and providence here, it is no more than even heathens have confessed in other cases. 2. Peradventure this flood might not be simply universal over the whole earth, but only over all the habitable world, where either men or beasts lived; which was as much as either the meritorious cause of the flood, men's sins, or the end of it, the destruction of all men and beasts, required. And the or that whole heaven may be understood of that which was over all the habitable parts of it. And whereas our modern heathens, that miscall themselves Christians, laugh at the history of this flood upon this and the like occasions, as if it were an idle romance; they may please to note, that their predecessors, the ancient and wiser heathens, have divers of them acknowledged the truth of it, though they also mixed it with their fables, which was neither strange nor unusual for them to do. Lactantius appeals to the heathens of his age concerning it. Nay, there is not only mention of the flood in general, but also of the dove sent out of the ark, in Plutarch, and Berosus, and Abydenus. And the memory of this general flood is preserved to this day among the poor ignorant Indians, who asked the Christians who invaded their land, whether they ever heard of such a thing, and whether another flood was to be expected? And the Chinese writers relate, that but one person, whom they call Puoncuus, with his family, were saved in the flood, and all the rest perished.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

Fifteen cubits were sufficient for the destruction of the highest men, or other creatures, though placed upon the highest mountains.

21 * And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

All flesh that moved, i. e. lived; for motion is a sign of life.

22 All in ^t whose nostrils was [†] the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

Whether men or beasts, &c., all that breathed the same air with man, all that lived in the same element which man by his sins had infected; whereby the fishes are excepted, as living in another element. See note on Gen. ii. 7.

23 And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and ^u Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

This is so often repeated, that it may be more deeply ingrafted into the dull minds and hard hearts of men, to teach men that they ought again and again to consider this dreadful instance of God's justice against sin and incorrigible sinners.

24 ^w And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

The waters prevailed, i. e. either grew higher and higher, or rather continued to prevail, and did not decrease. An hundred and fifty days in all, whereof one part was the forty days mentioned ver. 17, as appears from chap. viii. 4.

CHAP. VIII.

The waters abate, 1—3. The ark rests on Mount Ararat, 4. The day on which the tops of the mountains were seen, noted, 5. Noah opens the window of the ark, 6; sends forth a raven, 7; after that a dove, 8, which returned, 9. He sends the dove out a second time, 10, which returns with an olive leaf, 11. He sends her out again, and she returns not, 12. The earth dry, 13, 14. God commands Noah and his family to come out, 15—17, which they do, 18, 19. Noah builds an altar, and sacrifices, 20. God accepts it, and promises not to drown the world again, 21, but to continue the seasons of the year, 22.

AND God ^a remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: ^b and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters asswaged.

God remembered Noah, i. e. he showed by his actions that he minded and cared for him, or pitied and succoured him. God is said to remember his people, when after some delays or suspensions of his favour he returns and shows kindness to them, as Gen. xix. 29; xxx. 22; Exod. xxxii. 13; Job xiv. 13; Psal. cxxxii. 1. As God punished the beasts for man's sin, so now he favours them for man's sake. God made a wind to pass; a drying or burning wind, like that of Exod. xiv. 21, which had a natural power to dry up the waters; but that was lightened by the assistance of a higher and miraculous operation of God.

2 ^c The fountains also of the deep and the windows of heaven were stopped, and ^d the rain from heaven was restrained;

3 And the waters returned from off the earth [†] continually: and after the end ^e of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat.

In the seventh month, from the beginning, not of the flood, but of the year, as appears by comparing chap. vii. 11, and chap. viii. 13, 14, the ark rested upon one of the mountains of Ararat; by a frequent enallage of the number, as Judg. xii. 7; Matt. xxi. 5. And by Ararat is here commonly and rightly understood Armenia, as appears both by comparing Isa. xxxvii. 38; Jer. li. 27, and by the testimony of ancient writers, produced by Josephus and others to this purpose; and by the great height of those mountains, and by its nearness to the place where the first men lived; this great vessel not being fitted for sailing to remote places, but only for the receipt and preservation of men and other creatures in it.

5 And the waters [†] decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth

^u Wisd. 10. 4.
¹ Pet. 3. 20.
² Pet. 2. 5.
& 3. 6.

^w ch. 8. 3.
& ch. 8. 4.
compared with ver. 11.
of this chap.

^q Ps. 104. 26.
^r Jer. 3. 23.

^r Ps. 104. 4.
¹ Jer. 3. 23.

^a ch. 19. 29.
^{Ex.} 2. 24.
¹ Sam. 1. 19.
^b Ex. 14. 21.

^c ch. 7. 11.
^d Job 38. 37.

[†] Heb. is going and returning.
^e ch. 7. 24.

^s ch. 6. 13,
¹⁷ ver. 4.
¹ Job 22. 16.
² Esd. 3. 9,
¹⁰.
[†] Wisd. 10. 4.
[†] Matt. 24. 39.
¹ Luke 17. 27.
² Pet. 3. 6.

^t ch. 2. 7.
[†] Heb. the breath of the spirit of life.

[†] Heb. is going and decreasing.

month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

f ch. 6. 16. 6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened the window of the ark which he had made :

7 And he sent forth a raven, which went forth † to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

† Heb. in going forth and returning.
He sent forth a raven; a fit messenger for that purpose, because it smells dead carcasses at a great distance, and flies far, and then returneth to its former habitation with something in its bill.

To and fro; Heb. going and returning; i. e. went forth hither and thither; now forward, then backward; sometimes going from the ark, and sometimes returning to the ark, though never entering into it again. Not as if she returned afterwards; the phrase implies that she never returned. And so the word until is often used, as 2 Sam. vi. 23, Michal had no child until the day of her death, i. e. never had a child. See also Psal. cx. 1; Matt. i. 25.

8 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground;

The dove flies lower and longer than the raven, and is more sociable and familiar with man, and more constant to its accustomed dwelling, and more loving and faithful to its mate, and therefore more likely to return with some discovery.

9 But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned unto him into the ark, for the waters were on the face of the whole earth: then he put forth his hand, and took her, and † pulled her in unto him into the ark.

† Heb. caused her to come.
The dove found no rest for the sole of her foot; because the tops of the hills which then appeared were either muddy and dirty, or unobserved by the dove, as not soaring so high; whence the doves are emphatically called the doves of the valleys, Ezek. vii. 16. He took her, and pulled her in; her former acquaintance with Noah, and her present necessity, making her more tractable.

10 And he stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark;

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was an olive leaf plucked off: so Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

The dove came in to him in the evening, as the manner of doves is, partly for better accommodation, both for food and lodging, than yet she could meet with abroad; and partly from her love to her mate. In her mouth was an olive leaf.

Quest. Whence was this leaf, when trees had been so generally overthrown and rooted up by the deluge? Answ. 1. Many trees might be preserved by an advantageous situation, between the rocks or hills which broke the force of the waters. 2. It is probable that God, by his powerful providence, preserved the plants and trees for future ages; and therefore there is no mention of any of their roots or seeds preserved in the ark. 3. The olive-tree especially will not only stand, but live and flourish under the waters, as Pliny, l. 13. c. 25, and 16. 20, and Theophrastus, 4. 8, observe. Add, that the word here rendered leaf signifies also a tender branch.

12 And he stayed yet other seven days; and sent forth the dove; which returned not again unto him any more.

Finding convenient food and resting-place upon the earth, and preferring her freedom before her mate: possibly she might lose the sight of the ark, and forget or mistake the way to it.

2298. 13 ¶ And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth :

and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

The words month and day are oftentimes, for brevity sake, omitted by the Hebrews, as being easily understood. Thus the first of the feast, Matt. xxvi. 17, is the first day of the feast, Mark xiv. 12.

14 And in the second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

Not only from water, as it was ver. 13, but from mud and dirt also. So the flood continued ten days more than a year, by comparing this with chap. vii. 11.

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 Go forth of the ark, ^s thou, and ^g ch. 7. 12 thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

As Noah expected the command of God for his going into the ark, chap. vii. 1, 2, so for his coming forth of it.

17 Bring forth with thee ^b every living ^a ch. 7. 15 thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that they may breed abundantly in the earth, and ¹ be fruitful, and multiply upon ⁱ ch. 1. 22 the earth.

Quest. How could these creatures which came out of the ark in Asia get thence to America, or to the islands remote from the continent? Answ. 1. As for America, it is thought by divers learned men, that it is either joined to this continent, or separated from it only by a narrow sea, which divers living creatures could easily swim over. 2. Many living creatures are, and always were, transported by men in their vessels, either for their supply, or profit, or diversion, or other ends, and thence might easily be propagated there. 3. The same God who made all these creatures, and caused them to come first to Adam, and afterwards to Noah, could afterwards both incline and empower them to go whither he pleased, without the advice of these vain men, who will believe nothing of God which themselves either do not see or cannot do.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him :

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their † kinds, went [†] Heb. families. forth out of the ark.

20 ¶ And Noah builded an altar unto the LORD; and took of ^k every clean ^l Lev. ch. 11. beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar.

This is the first altar we read of, but not the first which was built; for the sacrifices which were offered before, Gen. iv. 3, 4, presuppose an altar. Therefore it is no sufficient evidence that such things were not done because they are not said to be done in Scripture; which will be a useful consideration for the understanding of many passages in Scripture hereafter.

The first thing Noah doth, is to pay his debt of justice and gratitude to that God which had so miraculously preserved him, and restored him to his ancient and proper habitation. God expects to be served in the first place. What beasts were clean and what unclean, see chap. vii. 2; Lev. xi. 2, &c.

21 And the LORD smelled ¹ a † sweet ¹ Lev. 1. 9. savour; and the LORD said in his heart, ² Ezek. 20. 41. I will not again ³ curse the ground any ⁴ Cor. 2. 15. more for man's sake; ¶ for the ⁵ Eph. 5. 2. imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; ⁶ Heb. a sa- ⁷ m ch. 3. 17. ⁸ & 6. 17. ⁹ ¶ Or, ¹⁰ thovh. ¹¹ n ch. 6. 5. ¹² Job 14. 4. ¹³ & 15. 14. ¹⁴ Ps. 51. 5. ¹⁵ ¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ ¹⁹ ²⁰ ²¹ ²² ²³ ²⁴ ²⁵ ²⁶ ²⁷ ²⁸ ²⁹ ³⁰ ³¹ ³² ³³ ³⁴ ³⁵ ³⁶ ³⁷ ³⁸ ³⁹ ⁴⁰ ⁴¹ ⁴² ⁴³ ⁴⁴ ⁴⁵ ⁴⁶ ⁴⁷ ⁴⁸ ⁴⁹ ⁵⁰ ⁵¹ ⁵² ⁵³ ⁵⁴ ⁵⁵ ⁵⁶ ⁵⁷ ⁵⁸ ⁵⁹ ⁶⁰ ⁶¹ ⁶² ⁶³ ⁶⁴ ⁶⁵ ⁶⁶ ⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ ⁶⁹ ⁷⁰ ⁷¹ ⁷² ⁷³ ⁷⁴ ⁷⁵ ⁷⁶ ⁷⁷ ⁷⁸ ⁷⁹ ⁸⁰ ⁸¹ ⁸² ⁸³ ⁸⁴ ⁸⁵ ⁸⁶ ⁸⁷ ⁸⁸ ⁸⁹ ⁹⁰ ⁹¹ ⁹² ⁹³ ⁹⁴ ⁹⁵ ⁹⁶ ⁹⁷ ⁹⁸ ⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰¹ ¹⁰² ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁹ ¹¹⁰ ¹¹¹ ¹¹² ¹¹³ ¹¹⁴ ¹¹⁵ ¹¹⁶ ¹¹⁷ ¹¹⁸ ¹¹⁹ ¹²⁰ ¹²¹ ¹²² ¹²³ ¹²⁴ ¹²⁵ ¹²⁶ ¹²⁷ ¹²⁸ ¹²⁹ ¹³⁰ ¹³¹ ¹³² ¹³³ ¹³⁴ ¹³⁵ ¹³⁶ ¹³⁷ ¹³⁸ ¹³⁹ ¹⁴⁰ ¹⁴¹ ¹⁴² ¹⁴³ ¹⁴⁴ ¹⁴⁵ ¹⁴⁶ ¹⁴⁷ ¹⁴⁸ ¹⁴⁹ ¹⁵⁰ ¹⁵¹ ¹⁵² ¹⁵³ ¹⁵⁴ ¹⁵⁵ ¹⁵⁶ ¹⁵⁷ ¹⁵⁸ ¹⁵⁹ ¹⁶⁰ ¹⁶¹ ¹⁶² ¹⁶³ ¹⁶⁴ ¹⁶⁵ ¹⁶⁶ ¹⁶⁷ ¹⁶⁸ ¹⁶⁹ ¹⁷⁰ ¹⁷¹ ¹⁷² ¹⁷³ ¹⁷⁴ ¹⁷⁵ ¹⁷⁶ ¹⁷⁷ ¹⁷⁸ ¹⁷⁹ ¹⁸⁰ ¹⁸¹ ¹⁸² ¹⁸³ ¹⁸⁴ ¹⁸⁵ ¹⁸⁶ ¹⁸⁷ ¹⁸⁸ ¹⁸⁹ ¹⁹⁰ ¹⁹¹ ¹⁹² ¹⁹³ ¹⁹⁴ ¹⁹⁵ ¹⁹⁶ ¹⁹⁷ ¹⁹⁸ ¹⁹⁹ ²⁰⁰ ²⁰¹ ²⁰² ²⁰³ ²⁰⁴ ²⁰⁵ ²⁰⁶ ²⁰⁷ ²⁰⁸ ²⁰⁹ ²¹⁰ ²¹¹ ²¹² ²¹³ ²¹⁴ ²¹⁵ ²¹⁶ ²¹⁷ ²¹⁸ ²¹⁹ ²²⁰ ²²¹ ²²² ²²³ ²²⁴ ²²⁵ ²²⁶ ²²⁷ ²²⁸ ²²⁹ ²³⁰ ²³¹ ²³² ²³³ ²³⁴ ²³⁵ ²³⁶ ²³⁷ ²³⁸ ²³⁹ ²⁴⁰ ²⁴¹ ²⁴² ²⁴³ ²⁴⁴ ²⁴⁵ ²⁴⁶ ²⁴⁷ ²⁴⁸ ²⁴⁹ ²⁵⁰ ²⁵¹ ²⁵² ²⁵³ ²⁵⁴ ²⁵⁵ ²⁵⁶ ²⁵⁷ ²⁵⁸ ²⁵⁹ ²⁶⁰ ²⁶¹ ²⁶² ²⁶³ ²⁶⁴ ²⁶⁵ ²⁶⁶ ²⁶⁷ ²⁶⁸ ²⁶⁹ ²⁷⁰ ²⁷¹ ²⁷² ²⁷³ ²⁷⁴ ²⁷⁵ ²⁷⁶ ²⁷⁷ ²⁷⁸ ²⁷⁹ ²⁸⁰ ²⁸¹ ²⁸² ²⁸³ ²⁸⁴ ²⁸⁵ ²⁸⁶ ²⁸⁷ ²⁸⁸ ²⁸⁹ ²⁹⁰ ²⁹¹ ²⁹² ²⁹³ ²⁹⁴ ²⁹⁵ ²⁹⁶ ²⁹⁷ ²⁹⁸ ²⁹⁹ ³⁰⁰ ³⁰¹ ³⁰² ³⁰³ ³⁰⁴ ³⁰⁵ ³⁰⁶ ³⁰⁷ ³⁰⁸ ³⁰⁹ ³¹⁰ ³¹¹ ³¹² ³¹³ ³¹⁴ ³¹⁵ ³¹⁶ ³¹⁷ ³¹⁸ ³¹⁹ ³²⁰ ³²¹ ³²² ³²³ ³²⁴ ³²⁵ ³²⁶ ³²⁷ ³²⁸ ³²⁹ ³³⁰ ³³¹ ³³² ³³³ ³³⁴ ³³⁵ ³³⁶ ³³⁷ ³³⁸ ³³⁹ ³⁴⁰ ³⁴¹ ³⁴² ³⁴³ ³⁴⁴ ³⁴⁵ ³⁴⁶ ³⁴⁷ ³⁴⁸ ³⁴⁹ ³⁵⁰ ³⁵¹ ³⁵² ³⁵³ ³⁵⁴ ³⁵⁵ ³⁵⁶ ³⁵⁷ ³⁵⁸ ³⁵⁹ ³⁶⁰ ³⁶¹ ³⁶² ³⁶³ ³⁶⁴ ³⁶⁵ ³⁶⁶ ³⁶⁷ ³⁶⁸ ³⁶⁹ ³⁷⁰ ³⁷¹ ³⁷² ³⁷³ ³⁷⁴ ³⁷⁵ ³⁷⁶ ³⁷⁷ ³⁷⁸ ³⁷⁹ ³⁸⁰ ³⁸¹ ³⁸² ³⁸³ ³⁸⁴ ³⁸⁵ ³⁸⁶ ³⁸⁷ ³⁸⁸ ³⁸⁹ ³⁹⁰ ³⁹¹ ³⁹² ³⁹³ ³⁹⁴ ³⁹⁵ ³⁹⁶ ³⁹⁷ ³⁹⁸ ³⁹⁹ ⁴⁰⁰ ⁴⁰¹ ⁴⁰² ⁴⁰³ ⁴⁰⁴ ⁴⁰⁵ ⁴⁰⁶ ⁴⁰⁷ ⁴⁰⁸ ⁴⁰⁹ ⁴¹⁰ ⁴¹¹ ⁴¹² ⁴¹³ ⁴¹⁴ ⁴¹⁵ ⁴¹⁶ ⁴¹⁷ ⁴¹⁸ ⁴¹⁹ ⁴²⁰ ⁴²¹ ⁴²² ⁴²³ ⁴²⁴ ⁴²⁵ ⁴²⁶ ⁴²⁷ ⁴²⁸ ⁴²⁹ ⁴³⁰ ⁴³¹ ⁴³² ⁴³³ ⁴³⁴ ⁴³⁵ ⁴³⁶ ⁴³⁷ ⁴³⁸ ⁴³⁹ ⁴⁴⁰ ⁴⁴¹ ⁴⁴² ⁴⁴³ ⁴⁴⁴ ⁴⁴⁵ ⁴⁴⁶ ⁴⁴⁷ ⁴⁴⁸ ⁴⁴⁹ ⁴⁵⁰ ⁴⁵¹ ⁴⁵² ⁴⁵³ ⁴⁵⁴ ⁴⁵⁵ ⁴⁵⁶ ⁴⁵⁷ ⁴⁵⁸ ⁴⁵⁹ ⁴⁶⁰ ⁴⁶¹ ⁴⁶² ⁴⁶³ ⁴⁶⁴ ⁴⁶⁵ ⁴⁶⁶ ⁴⁶⁷ ⁴⁶⁸ ⁴⁶⁹ ⁴⁷⁰ ⁴⁷¹ ⁴⁷² ⁴⁷³ ⁴⁷⁴ ⁴⁷⁵ ⁴⁷⁶ ⁴⁷⁷ ⁴⁷⁸ ⁴⁷⁹ ⁴⁸⁰ ⁴⁸¹ ⁴⁸² ⁴⁸³ ⁴⁸⁴ ⁴⁸⁵ ⁴⁸⁶ ⁴⁸⁷ ⁴⁸⁸ ⁴⁸⁹ ⁴⁹⁰ ⁴⁹¹ ⁴⁹² ⁴⁹³ ⁴⁹⁴ ⁴⁹⁵ ⁴⁹⁶ ⁴⁹⁷ ⁴⁹⁸ ⁴⁹⁹ ⁵⁰⁰ ⁵⁰¹ ⁵⁰² ⁵⁰³ ⁵⁰⁴ ⁵⁰⁵ ⁵⁰⁶ ⁵⁰⁷ ⁵⁰⁸ ⁵⁰⁹ ⁵¹⁰ ⁵¹¹ ⁵¹² ⁵¹³ ⁵¹⁴ ⁵¹⁵ ⁵¹⁶ ⁵¹⁷ ⁵¹⁸ ⁵¹⁹ ⁵²⁰ ⁵²¹ ⁵²² ⁵²³ ⁵²⁴ ⁵²⁵ ⁵²⁶ ⁵²⁷ ⁵²⁸ ⁵²⁹ ⁵³⁰ ⁵³¹ ⁵³² ⁵³³ ⁵³⁴ ⁵³⁵ ⁵³⁶ ⁵³⁷ ⁵³⁸ ⁵³⁹ ⁵⁴⁰ ⁵⁴¹ ⁵⁴² ⁵⁴³ ⁵⁴⁴ ⁵⁴⁵ ⁵⁴⁶ ⁵⁴⁷ ⁵⁴⁸ ⁵⁴⁹ ⁵⁵⁰ ⁵⁵¹ ⁵⁵² ⁵⁵³ ⁵⁵⁴ ⁵⁵⁵ ⁵⁵⁶ ⁵⁵⁷ ⁵⁵⁸ ⁵⁵⁹ ⁵⁶⁰ ⁵⁶¹ ⁵⁶² ⁵⁶³ ⁵⁶⁴ ⁵⁶⁵ ⁵⁶⁶ ⁵⁶⁷ ⁵⁶⁸ ⁵⁶⁹ ⁵⁷⁰ ⁵⁷¹ ⁵⁷² ⁵⁷³ ⁵⁷⁴ ⁵⁷⁵ ⁵⁷⁶ ⁵⁷⁷ ⁵⁷⁸ ⁵⁷⁹ ⁵⁸⁰ ⁵⁸¹ ⁵⁸² ⁵⁸³ ⁵⁸⁴ ⁵⁸⁵ ⁵⁸⁶ ⁵⁸⁷ ⁵⁸⁸ ⁵⁸⁹ ⁵⁹⁰ ⁵⁹¹ ⁵⁹² ⁵⁹³ ⁵⁹⁴ ⁵⁹⁵ ⁵⁹⁶ ⁵⁹⁷ ⁵⁹⁸ ⁵⁹⁹ ⁶⁰⁰ ⁶⁰¹ ⁶⁰² ⁶⁰³ ⁶⁰⁴ ⁶⁰⁵ ⁶⁰⁶ ⁶⁰⁷ ⁶⁰⁸ ⁶⁰⁹ ⁶¹⁰ ⁶¹¹ ⁶¹² ⁶¹³ ⁶¹⁴ ⁶¹⁵ ⁶¹⁶ ⁶¹⁷ ⁶¹⁸ ⁶¹⁹ ⁶²⁰ ⁶²¹ ⁶²² ⁶²³ ⁶²⁴ ⁶²⁵ ⁶²⁶ ⁶²⁷ ⁶²⁸ ⁶²⁹ ⁶³⁰ ⁶³¹ ⁶³² ⁶³³ ⁶³⁴ ⁶³⁵ ⁶³⁶ ⁶³⁷ ⁶³⁸ ⁶³⁹ ⁶⁴⁰ ⁶⁴¹ ⁶⁴² ⁶⁴³ ⁶⁴⁴ ⁶⁴⁵ ⁶⁴⁶ ⁶⁴⁷ ⁶⁴⁸ ⁶⁴⁹ ⁶⁵⁰ ⁶⁵¹ ⁶⁵² ⁶⁵³ ⁶⁵⁴ ⁶⁵⁵ ⁶⁵⁶ ⁶⁵⁷ ⁶⁵⁸ ⁶⁵⁹ ⁶⁶⁰ ⁶⁶¹ ⁶⁶² ⁶⁶³ ⁶⁶⁴ ⁶⁶⁵ ⁶⁶⁶ ⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁸ ⁶⁶⁹ ⁶⁷⁰ ⁶⁷¹ ⁶⁷² ⁶⁷³ ⁶⁷⁴ ⁶⁷⁵ ⁶⁷⁶ ⁶⁷⁷ ⁶⁷⁸ ⁶⁷⁹ ⁶⁸⁰ ⁶⁸¹ ⁶⁸² ⁶⁸³ ⁶⁸⁴ ⁶⁸⁵ ⁶⁸⁶ ⁶⁸⁷ ⁶⁸⁸ ⁶⁸⁹ ⁶⁹⁰ ⁶⁹¹ ⁶⁹² ⁶⁹³ ⁶⁹⁴ ⁶⁹⁵ ⁶⁹⁶ ⁶⁹⁷ ⁶⁹⁸ ⁶⁹⁹ ⁷⁰⁰ ⁷⁰¹ ⁷⁰² ⁷⁰³ ⁷⁰⁴ ⁷⁰⁵ ⁷⁰⁶ ⁷⁰⁷ ⁷⁰⁸ ⁷⁰⁹ ⁷¹⁰ ⁷¹¹ ⁷¹² ⁷¹³ ⁷¹⁴ ⁷¹⁵ ⁷¹⁶ ⁷¹⁷ ⁷¹⁸ ⁷¹⁹ ⁷²⁰ ⁷²¹ ⁷²² ⁷²³ ⁷²⁴ ⁷²⁵ ⁷²⁶ ⁷²⁷ ⁷²⁸ ⁷²⁹ ⁷³⁰ ⁷³¹ ⁷³² ⁷³³ ⁷³⁴ ⁷³⁵ ⁷³⁶ ⁷³⁷ ⁷³⁸ ⁷³⁹ ⁷⁴⁰ ⁷⁴¹ ⁷⁴² ⁷⁴³ ⁷⁴⁴ ⁷⁴⁵ ⁷⁴⁶ ⁷⁴⁷ ⁷⁴⁸ ⁷⁴⁹ ⁷⁵⁰ ⁷⁵¹ ⁷⁵² ⁷⁵³ ⁷⁵⁴ ⁷⁵⁵ ⁷⁵⁶ ⁷⁵⁷ ⁷⁵⁸ ⁷⁵⁹ ⁷⁶⁰ ⁷⁶¹ ⁷⁶² ⁷⁶³ ⁷⁶⁴ ⁷⁶⁵ ⁷⁶⁶ ⁷⁶⁷ ⁷⁶⁸ ⁷⁶⁹ ⁷⁷⁰ ⁷⁷¹ ⁷⁷² ⁷⁷³ ⁷⁷⁴ ⁷⁷⁵ ⁷⁷⁶ ⁷⁷⁷ ⁷⁷⁸ ⁷⁷⁹ ⁷⁸⁰ ⁷⁸¹ ⁷⁸² ⁷⁸³ ⁷⁸⁴ ⁷⁸⁵ ⁷⁸⁶ ⁷⁸⁷ ⁷⁸⁸ ⁷⁸⁹ ⁷⁹⁰ ⁷⁹¹ ⁷⁹² ⁷⁹³ ⁷⁹⁴ ⁷⁹⁵ ⁷⁹⁶ ⁷⁹⁷ ⁷⁹⁸ ⁷⁹⁹ ⁸⁰⁰ ⁸⁰¹ ⁸⁰² ⁸⁰³ ⁸⁰⁴ ⁸⁰⁵ ⁸⁰⁶ ⁸⁰⁷ ⁸⁰⁸ ⁸⁰⁹ ⁸¹⁰ ⁸¹¹ ⁸¹² ⁸¹³ ⁸¹⁴ ⁸¹⁵ ⁸¹⁶ ⁸¹⁷ ⁸¹⁸ ⁸¹⁹ ⁸²⁰ ⁸²¹ ⁸²² ⁸²³ ⁸²⁴ ⁸²⁵ ⁸²⁶ ⁸²⁷ ⁸²⁸ ⁸²⁹ ⁸³⁰ ⁸³¹ ⁸³² ⁸³³ ⁸³⁴ ⁸³⁵ ⁸³⁶ ⁸³⁷ ⁸³⁸ ⁸³⁹ ⁸⁴⁰ ⁸⁴¹ ⁸⁴² ⁸⁴³ ⁸⁴⁴ ⁸⁴⁵ ⁸⁴⁶ ⁸⁴⁷ ⁸⁴⁸ ⁸⁴⁹ ⁸⁵⁰ ⁸⁵¹ ⁸⁵² ⁸⁵³ ⁸⁵⁴ ⁸⁵⁵ ⁸⁵⁶ ⁸⁵⁷ ⁸⁵⁸ ⁸⁵⁹ ⁸⁶⁰ ⁸⁶¹ ⁸⁶² ⁸⁶³ ⁸⁶⁴ ⁸⁶⁵ ⁸⁶⁶ ⁸⁶⁷ ⁸⁶⁸ ⁸⁶⁹ ⁸⁷⁰ ⁸⁷¹ ⁸⁷² ⁸⁷³ ⁸⁷⁴ ⁸⁷⁵ ⁸⁷⁶ ⁸⁷⁷ ⁸⁷⁸ ⁸⁷⁹ ⁸⁸⁰ ⁸⁸¹ ⁸⁸² ⁸⁸³ ⁸⁸⁴ ⁸⁸⁵ ⁸⁸⁶ ⁸⁸⁷ ⁸⁸⁸ ⁸⁸⁹ ⁸⁹⁰ ⁸⁹¹ ⁸⁹² ⁸⁹³ ⁸⁹⁴ ⁸⁹⁵ ⁸⁹⁶ ⁸⁹⁷ ⁸⁹⁸ ⁸⁹⁹ ⁹⁰⁰ ⁹⁰¹ ⁹⁰² ⁹⁰³ ⁹⁰⁴ ⁹⁰⁵ ⁹⁰⁶ ⁹⁰⁷ ⁹⁰⁸ ⁹⁰⁹ ⁹¹⁰ ⁹¹¹ ⁹¹² ⁹¹³ ⁹¹⁴ ⁹¹⁵ ⁹¹⁶ ⁹¹⁷ ⁹¹⁸ ⁹¹⁹ ⁹²⁰ ⁹²¹ ⁹²² ⁹²³ ⁹²⁴ ⁹²⁵ ⁹²⁶ ⁹²⁷ ⁹²⁸ ⁹²⁹ ⁹³⁰ ⁹³¹ ⁹³² ⁹³³ ⁹³⁴ ⁹³⁵ ⁹³⁶ ⁹³⁷ ⁹³⁸ ⁹³⁹ ⁹⁴⁰ ⁹⁴¹ ⁹⁴² ⁹⁴³ ⁹⁴⁴ ⁹⁴⁵ ⁹⁴⁶ ⁹⁴⁷ ⁹⁴⁸ ⁹⁴⁹ ⁹⁵⁰ ⁹⁵¹ ⁹⁵² ⁹⁵³ ⁹⁵⁴ ⁹⁵⁵ ⁹⁵⁶ ⁹⁵⁷ ⁹⁵⁸ ⁹⁵⁹ ⁹⁶⁰ ⁹⁶¹ ⁹⁶² ⁹⁶³ ⁹⁶⁴ ⁹⁶⁵ ⁹⁶⁶ ⁹⁶⁷ ⁹⁶⁸ ⁹⁶⁹ ⁹⁷⁰ ⁹⁷¹ ⁹⁷² ⁹⁷³ ⁹⁷⁴ ⁹⁷⁵ ⁹⁷⁶ ⁹⁷⁷ ⁹⁷⁸ ⁹⁷⁹ ⁹⁸⁰ ⁹⁸¹ ⁹⁸² ⁹⁸³ ⁹⁸⁴ ⁹⁸⁵ ⁹⁸⁶ ⁹⁸⁷ ⁹⁸⁸ ⁹⁸⁹ ⁹⁹⁰ ⁹⁹¹ ⁹⁹² ⁹⁹³ ⁹⁹⁴ ⁹⁹⁵ ⁹⁹⁶ ⁹⁹⁷ ⁹⁹⁸ ⁹⁹⁹ ¹⁰⁰⁰ ¹⁰⁰¹ ¹⁰⁰² ¹⁰⁰³ ¹⁰⁰⁴ ¹⁰⁰⁵ ¹⁰⁰⁶ ¹⁰⁰⁷ ¹⁰⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁰⁹ ¹⁰¹⁰ ¹⁰¹¹ ¹⁰¹² ¹⁰¹³ ¹⁰¹⁴ ¹⁰¹⁵ ¹⁰¹⁶ ¹⁰¹⁷ ¹⁰¹⁸ ¹⁰¹⁹ ¹⁰²⁰ ¹⁰²¹ ¹⁰²² ¹⁰²³ ¹⁰²⁴ ¹⁰²⁵ ¹⁰²⁶ ¹⁰²⁷ ¹⁰²⁸ ¹⁰²⁹ ¹⁰³⁰ ¹⁰³¹ ¹⁰³² ¹⁰³³ ¹⁰³⁴ ¹⁰³⁵ ¹⁰³⁶ ¹⁰³⁷ ¹⁰³⁸ ¹⁰³⁹

ed the person and faith and praise-offering of Noah, and was as well pleased therewith as men use to be with a sweet smell; and the Lord said in his heart, i. e. determined within himself, and expressed so much to Noah. The Hebrew preposition el sometimes signifies in, as Gen. vi. 6; 1 Sam. xxvii. 1. Others, said to his heart, i. e. spoke to the heart of Noah, who is mentioned, ver. 20. To speak to the heart, in Scripture use, signifies to comfort. Will not again curse the ground, i. e. the whole earth, with this kind of curse, with another deluge. Otherwise God doth not hereby tie his hands, that he may not either destroy a particular land by a deluge, which hath been done since, or destroy the world by fire when he sees fit, as he hath declared he will do. For the imagination of man's heart is evil. The reason contained in these words is this: Since all men's hearts are naturally corrupt, and from that filthy spring wicked actions will be continually flowing forth into the world; and consequently, if I should be severe to punish men according to their sins, I should do nothing but send one deluge after another. Or these words may be joined with the former, and the sense may be this: I will not again destroy the earth with a deluge for man's sake, or for man's sin, or because of the imagination, &c., i. e. because his heart is corrupt, and his actions are agreeable to it, which was the cause of the last deluge. Or the particle chi may be rendered although, as it is frequently taken, as Exod. v. 11; xiii. 17; xxxiv. 9; Josh. xvii. 13; Psal. xxv. 11; xli. 5; and so the sense is plain, I will not again destroy the earth, although the imagination, &c., i. e. although I have just cause to do so. Or, from his very childhood and infancy, as the Chaldee and Greek interpreters translate it. Neither will I again smite, i. e. kill or destroy, as the word smiting is taken, Exod. xxi. 18; Numb. xiv. 12; xxxv. 16; Deut. xxviii. 22, 27; Amos iv. 9.

22 ^p † While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and ^q day and night shall not cease.

While the earth remaineth, viz. in this estate; for though it seems probable that the substance of the earth will abide for ever, after the dissolution of the world by fire; yet that will be in another manner, and for other purposes, and then there will be no need of seed-time, or harvest, &c. Day and night. This distinction in a manner ceased in the ark, the heavens being covered, and all its lights eclipsed by such thick and black clouds, as never were before nor since.

CHAP. IX.

God renews his blessing, 1, and confirms our dominion over the creatures, 2. Grants flesh for food, but with the blood forbids it, 3, 4. The penalty of murder, 5, 6. God repeats his blessing, 7. His covenant with Noah and all his creatures, 8—11. Confirms it by the rainbow as his token, 12—17. Noah's three sons, 18, 19. His employment, 20. He is drunk and uncovered, 21. Ham sinfully reveals it, 22. His other two sons, going backwards, covered him, 23. Noah knows it, 24. Curses Canaan, 25. Blesses Shem first, 26, and then Japheth, 27. His age and death, 28, 29.

AND God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, ^a Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

a ch. 1. 28. ver. 7, 19. ch. 10. 32.

God renewed the old blessing and grant made chap. i. 28, which might seem to be forfeited and made void by man's sin, and by God's judgment consequent upon it.

2 ^b And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered.

b ch. 1. 28. Hoec. 2. 18.

Before they loved and revered you as lords and friends, now they shall dread you as enemies and tyrants. Into your hand are they delivered, for your use and service. I restore you in part to that dominion over them which you for your sins have forfeited.

3 ^c Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the ^d green herb have I given you ^e all things.

c Deut. 12. 15. & 14. 3, 9. 11. Acts 10. 12, 13. d ch. 1. 29. e Rom. 14. 14, 20. 1 Cor. 10. 23, 26. Col. 2. 16. 1 Tim. 4. 3, 4.

Every moving thing which is wholesome and fit for food, and clean; an exception to be gathered both from the nature of the thing, and from the distinction of clean and unclean beasts, mentioned before and afterwards. That liveth. This is added to exclude the use of those creatures which either died of themselves, or were killed by wild beasts, which is here forbidden implicitly, and afterwards expressly. See Exod. xxii. 31; Lev. xxii. 8. Shall be meat for you: it is not a command that we must, but a permission that we may eat of them. A grant possibly given before the flood, but now expressed, either because the former allowance might seem to be forfeited, or because as men now grew more infirm and needed better nourishment, so the earth was grown more feeble by the flood, and its fruits yielded less and worse nourishment. I have given you all things: understand this with the limitation above-mentioned. The green herbs were given before, chap. i. 29.

4 ^f But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

f Lev. 17. 10, 11. & 18. 25. Deut. 12. 23. 1 Sam. 14. 34. Acts 15. 20, 29.

With the life thereof, i. e. whilst it lives, or taken from the creature before it be quite dead; which was an ancient practice, and an effect either of luxury or cruelty. Which is the blood thereof, i. e. which life or soul hath its seat in and its support from the blood, and the spirits contained in it. It is certain blood is the thing which is here principally minded and forbidden, and so the words may be thus translated and understood: But flesh, i. e. the flesh of living creatures hereby allowed you, with the life thereof, that is to say, with the blood thereof, wherein its life consists; or, flesh whilst it hath in it its life or soul, or, which is all one, its blood, shall you not eat. God thought fit to forbid this, partly that by this respect shown to the blood of beasts it might appear how sacred a thing the blood of man was, and how much God abhorred the sin of murder; and principally because the blood was reserved and consecrated to God, and was the means of atonement for man, (which reason God himself gives, Lev. xvii. 11, 12,) and did in a special manner represent the blood of Christ, which was to be shed for the redemption of mankind.

5 And surely your blood of your lives will I require; ^g at the hand of every beast will I require it, and ^h at the hand of every ⁱ man's brother will I require the life of man.

g Ex. 21. 28. h ch. 4. 9, 10. Pa. 8. 12. i Acts 17. 26.

And; or, for, as the particle is oft taken; this being the reason of the foregoing prohibition.

Of your lives; or, of your souls, i. e. of your persons; the word soul being oft put for person. Or, your blood, which is for your lives, i. e. which by the spirits it generates is the great preserver and instrument of your lives, and of all your vital actions, and the great bond which ties your souls and bodies together. The sense of the place is, If I am thus careful for the blood of beasts, be assured I will be much more solicitous for the blood of men, when it shall be shed by unjust and violent hands. I will make inquisition for the author of such bloodshed, as I did after Cain, and consequently punish him; for this phrase of requiring implies punishment. See Gen. xlii. 22; Deut. xviii. 19, compared with Acts iii. 23; Psal. ix. 13. If magistrates neglect this duty, I myself will avenge it by my own hand. At the hand of every beast will I require it; not for the punishment of the beast, which being under no law is not capable of sin nor punishment; but for caution to men, for whose use seeing they were made, it is no abuse of them if they be destroyed for man's benefit. Compare Exod. xxi. 28; Lev. xx. 15. At the hand of every man's brother. This is added, either, 1. As an aggravation of the crime, because the man slain was the brother of the murderer; all men being made of one blood, Acts xvii. 26. And having one Father, even God, Mal. ii. 10, and Adam too. Upon which account all men are frequently called one another's brethren, as is manifest from Gen. xxvi. 31; xxix. 4; Lev. xix. 17; xxv. 14; xxvi. 37, and from many other places of Scripture. Or, 2. As an assurance of the punishment of the murderer, without any exception of the nearest relation; which, though it makes the sin greater, yet many times is a security against punishment, the murderer easily finding favour and pardon from his parents and dear friends. But the former sense seems the better.

^{k Ex. 21. 12, 14. Lev. 24. 17. Matt. 26. 52. Rev. 13. 10. 1 ch. 1. 27.} 6 ^hWhoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: ⁱfor in the image of God made he man.

Whoso sheddeth man's blood, wilfully and unwarrantably. For there is a double exception to this law: 1. Of casual murder, expressed Numb. xxxv. 31; Deut. xix. 4. 2. Of death inflicted by the hand of the magistrate for crimes deserving it, mentioned in the following words, and elsewhere.

By man, i. e. by the hand of man, namely, the magistrate, Rom. xiii. 4; who is hereby empowered and required, upon pain of my highest displeasure, to inflict this punishment. See Exod. xxi. 12; Lev. xxiv. 17; Matt. xxvi. 57. Or, for that man, i. e. for that man's sake, whose blood he hath shed, which cries for vengeance.

In the image of God made he man; so that murder is not only an offence against man, but also an injury to God, and a contempt of that image of God which all men are obliged to reverence and maintain, and especially magistrates, who being my vicegerents and servants, are therefore under a particular obligation to punish those who deface and destroy it.

^{m ver. 1. 13. ch. 1. 23.} 7 And you, ^mbe ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

i. e. As for you, I do not repent of that former blessing I gave to your parents, Gen. i. 28, but do hereby renew it to you, and your seed after you.

8 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

^{n ch. 6. 19. o ch. 54. 9.} 9 And I, ⁿbehold, I establish ^omy covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

*i. e. My promise, for the beasts included in this covenant, ver. 10, are not capable of a covenant properly so called. And the word covenant is oft used for a simple promise, as we shall see hereafter.*

With your seed, i. e. your posterity, as that word is frequently taken, as Gen. xii. 7; Exod. xxviii. 43, &c.

^{p Ps. 145. 9.} 10 ^pAnd with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

*To wit, which shall hereafter be in the earth. So they are distinguished from those which were now with them.*

^{q ch. 54. 9.} 11 And ^qI will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

i. e. A universal deluge; for particular inundations there have been, whereby towns and countries have been overwhelmed with all their inhabitants.

^{r ch. 17. 11.} 12 And God said, ^rThis is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

This is the token, i. e. the bow mentioned in the next verse, I appoint to you for a sensible sign and evidence, to assure you that I shall perform this covenant or promise.

^{s Rev. 4. 3.} 13 I do set ^smy bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

I do set my bow; Heb. I have given, i. e. I will from time to time give and place. God calleth it his bow, partly because it was his workmanship, and chiefly because it was his pledge, and the seal of his promise. In the cloud, a proper seat for it; that they might now fetch an argument of faith from thence, whence before they had matter of just fear; and that which naturally was and is a sign of rain, might by this new appointment of God be turned into an assurance that there should be no such overflowing rain as now had been.

14 ^{t Eccles. 43. 11, 12.} And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

Not always, but very frequently, which is sufficient for this purpose.

15 And ^{u Ex. 24. 12. Lev. 26. 42, 45. Ezek. 14. 60.} I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember ^{v ch. 17. 13. 19.} the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

i. e. This covenant made with all succeeding generations of men and beasts. This and the like speeches are oft ascribed to God after the manner of men, who being forgetful, need helps for their memory.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

The same thing is so oft repeated for the strengthening of the faith of all men, and especially of Noah and his sons, whom the remembrance of that dreadful deluge, which they had experience of, had made exceeding prone to fears of the like for time to come.

18 ¶ And the sons of Noah, that went ^{2347.} forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: ^{x ch. 10. 6. Heb. Chanaan.} and Ham is the father of [†]Canaan.

Which is here mentioned to make way for the following relation.

19 ^{y ch. 5. 32. z ch. 10. 32. 1 Chron. 1. 4, &c.} These are the three sons of Noah: and of them was the whole earth overspread.

*A truth which the old heathens were not ignorant of, though they changed the names, and mixed their fables with it; for they tell us that Saturn and his three sons divided the world among themselves. And it is apparent that their Saturn was no other than our Noah, because they tell us he was the common parent and prince of all mankind, also a husbandman and vinedresser, all which Noah was. They say he was born of the sea, because Noah came out of the waters; that he devoured all his children except three, because Noah condemned and foretold the destruction of all the rest of the world.*

20 And Noah began to be ^{a ch. 3. 19. 23. & 4. 2. Prov. 12. 11.} an husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:

*i. e. Was a husbandman, as he had been before. The verb to begin doth oft abound, and is applied to him that continueth or repeateth an action begun before. Thus Christ is said to begin to cast out, Mark xi. 15, and to begin to speak, Luke xii. 1; for which in the parallel places he is said only to cast out, Matt. xxi. 12, and to speak, Matt. xvi. 6.*

21 And he drank of the wine, ^{b Prov. 20. 1. 1 Cor. 10. 12.} and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent.

Either through ignorance and inexperience of the nature and strength of that liquor, or through the infirmity of the flesh, which was tempted by its great and, to him, new pleasantness, and by the refreshment he found in it under the weary labours of his body, and the sad thoughts of his mind, for the desolate condition of the world.

He was uncovered, either to relieve himself against the heat of the climate and season, or from his negligence and carelessness; which might easily happen, because men's garments at that time were loose, as they were in the following ages, when breeches were not in common use, and therefore were peculiarly prescribed to the priests, Exod. xxviii. 42; Ezek. xlv. 18, 19.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren without.

The grown age of Ham was a great aggravation of this sin. The father of Canaan: this is here added as a reason of Canaan's curse, ver. 25. The nakedness, i. e. the secret parts, oft so called, as Lev. xviii., and elsewhere, and told his two brethren without, who were then without the house or room where their father lay in that posture, whom he invited to that prospect.

c Ex. 20. 12
Gal. 6. 1.

23 ^c And Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father; and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.

24 And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.

Noah awoke from his wine, from his drunkenness, or from his sleep, the effect of it, and knew, either by the information of his sons, or by Divine inspiration, what his younger son had done unto him; or, his little son, either Ham, mentioned ver. 22, or Canaan, mentioned in the next verse; by comparing of which places it may be gathered that Canaan first saw it, and told his father Ham of it, and he told it to his brethren. The latter seems here principally intended, 1. Because the curse following is appropriated to him. 2. Because of the title of younger or little son, which seems not to be so properly added if Ham was meant; both because it doth not appear that he was the youngest, for wheresoever these three brethren are mentioned he is always put in the middle place, and because that addition seems to be unnecessary and impertinent to the present business, which if Canaan be intended, is proper and pertinent, by way of distinction, to show that he spake of his grandson, or his son's son. Object. He calleth him his son. Answer. Grandchildren are frequently called their grandfather's sons in Scripture, as Gen. xxix. 5; 2 Sam. xix. 24; 1 Chron. i. 17.

25 And he said, ^d Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

And he said, not from the passion of revenge, but by Divine inspiration, and the Spirit of prophecy, Cursed be Canaan; hateful to God, abhorred by men, miserable in his person and posterity. Quest. Seeing Ham committed the crime, why is the curse inflicted upon his son Canaan? Answer. 1. When Canaan is mentioned, Ham is not exempted from the curse, but rather more deeply plunged into it, whilst he is pronounced accursed, not only in his person, (which is manifestly supposed by his commission of that sin for which the curse was inflicted,) but also in his posterity, which doubtless was a great aggravation of his grief; as on the contrary Joseph is said to be blessed when his children are blessed, Gen. xlvi. 15, 16. 2. It seems therefore very probable from these words, and the Hebrew doctors and others affirm it, that Canaan did partake with his father in the sin, yea, that he was the first discoverer of his father's shame. 3. Canaan is particularly mentioned by the Spirit of prophecy, in regard of the future extirpation of that people; and this is here remembered for the encouragement of the Israelites, who were now in their expedition against them. 4. This may be an ellipsis, or defect of the word father; for such relative words are oftentimes omitted and understood in Scripture, as Matt. iv. 21, James of Zebedee, for the son of Zebedee; John xix. 25, Mary of Cleopas, for the wife of Cleopas; Acts vii. 16, Emmor of Sychem, for the father of Sychem, as our English translation rightly supplies it from Gen. xxxiii. 19. Thus Goliath is put for Goliath's brother, as is evident by comparing 2 Sam. xxi. 19, with 1 Chron. xx. 5. So here Canaan may be put for the father of Canaan, as the Arabic translation hath it, that is, Ham, as the Seventy here render it. And though Ham had more sons, yet he may be here described by his relation to Canaan, because in him the curse was more fixed and dreadful, reaching to his utter extirpation, whilst the rest of Ham's posterity in after-ages were blessed with the saving knowledge of the gospel. A servant of servants, i. e. the vilest and worst of servants; as vanity of vanities is the greatest vanity, Eccl. i. 2; and great wickedness, Hos. x. 15, is in the Hebrew wickedness of wickedness; and King of kings is put for the chief of kings.

26 And he said, ^e Blessed be the LORD God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

Blessed be the Lord God of Shem. Quest. What is this to Shem? for it is not Shem, but God who is here blessed. Answer. 1. Shem also is here blessed, and that in the highest degree, because the Lord hath here declared himself to be Shem's God. Now for God to be said to be any man's God, is every where mentioned as the height of blessedness: see Gen. xvii. 7; Psal. cxliv. 15; Jer. xxxi. 33; Matt. xxii. 32. But the phrase is here justly varied. The curse is fixed upon Ham, because man alone is the author of his own sin, and the cause of his ruin; but because God is the author and fountain of all the good that man either doth or receiveth, therefore the blessing is emphatically given to God, who only doth the work, and of right is to receive all the glory, yet so as it redounds to Shem also. And Shem is here peculiarly mentioned, not Japheth, both for the comfort of the Israelites, whose progenitor he was, and because this blessing was first seated and long continued in Shem's posterity alone, Japheth's posterity being for a long time excluded from it; and because the Lord Christ, who is often called the Lord and God in Scripture, did take flesh from Shem; and so the incarnation of Christ may be here foretold, and Shem highly honoured and blessed in this, that he should be the father of Christ according to the flesh, Rom. ix. 5. Answer. 2. This may be a short and abrupt manner of speech, which is frequent in the Hebrew tongue; and it may signify that Shem should be so eminently blessed, that men beholding it should be rapt up into admiration, and break forth into the praises of that God who gave such gifts unto men, and did so great things for Shem. Answer. 3. The words may be otherwise rendered, either thus, Blessed, O Lord God, let Shem be, i. e. Do thou bless him. So it is only the construct from Elohe, for the absolute Elohim, which is not unusual in Scripture. Or thus, Blessed of the Lord God be Shem, or shall Shem be. So here is only a defect of the Hebrew particle min, which is oft wanting.

27 God shall ^f enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

God shall enlarge Japheth; or, enlarge to Japheth. Understand here his place, as Gen. xxvi. 22; Psal. iv. 1, or his border; which was very literally made good to him, because he had a very numerous posterity; and by them he possessed the largest part of the world, even all Europe, a great part of Asia, and it is probable America also. Or, God shall persuade Japheth to do what follows, to dwell in Shem's tents, where God dwelleth; and so to be reunited to his brother Shem both in affection and in religion, in both which the Gentiles, the greatest part of whom were Japheth's posterity, were for a long time at an irreconcilable distance from the Jews.

He shall dwell in the tents of Shem, i. e. shall be of the same church with Shem, i. e. of the church, which is called in Scripture the tents or tabernacles of Judah, or of Jacob, or in general of the saints, Zech. xii. 7; Mal. ii. 12; Rev. xx. 9, and here of Shem, in whose posterity the church was first and longest settled. And to dwell with another notes friendly association and communion with him, as when God is said to dwell with men; and when the wolf is said to dwell with the lamb, Isa. xi. 6. Possibly this may note Japheth's succession into Shem's tents, or coming into their place and stead, or the calling of the Gentiles, together with the rejection of the Jews; as the Reubenites are said to f Pa. 144. 15.

Heb. 11. 16.
g Or,
servant to them.

h Or, persuade
i Eph. 2. 13.
k & c.

dwell in the tabernacles of the Hagarites, whom they subdued and expelled, 1 Chron. v. 10.

Canaan shall be his servant. This was eminently accomplished; for though Shem and Japheth, in their posterity, did successively conquer and rule one over the other, yet none of Ham's posterity did ever bear rule over Japheth; but Ham, though for a time he bore sway in his son Nimrod, yet that dominion soon expired, and the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Grecians, and Romans ruled the world for a succession of many ages, and Ham's people were constantly their servants and subjects.

28 ¶ And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years.

Which reacheth to the fifty-eighth year of Abraham's age, as the Jews note. And so we have a manifest account of the propagation of religion, from the beginning of the world to this day. Noah received it from his parents, who had the account of it from their first father Adam's own mouth, and transmitted it to Abraham; and its descent from him to the Jews, and by the Jews to others, is sufficiently known. Within this time also Noah saw the building of Babel's tower, the horrid wickedness and idolatry of his children, and the bloody wars which even then arose between some of them.

1998.

29 And all the days of Noah were nine hundred and fifty years: and he died.

Here is an omission of that solemn clause used in all the preceding generations, and he begat sons and daughters; which implies that Noah had no more than these three sons, which also appears from the 19th verse of this chapter.

CHAP. X.

Noah's posterity, 1. Sons of Japheth, 2—5. Of Ham, 2—14; among whom Nimrod the first monarch and tyrant; he reigns in Babel, &c., 10. Asshur builds Nineveh, &c., 11. Sons of Canaan, 15. Their border, 19. Of Shem, 21—31.

This chapter, though it may seem to some unprofitable, as consisting almost wholly of genealogies, yet hath indeed great and manifold uses. 1. To show the true original of the several nations; about which all other authors write idly, fabulously, and falsely; and thereby to manifest the providence of God in the government of the world and church, and the truth and authority of the Holy Scriptures. 2. To discover and distinguish from all other nations that people or nation in which God's church was to be, and from which Christ was to come. 3. That Noah's prophecy concerning his three sons might be better understood, and the accomplishment of it made evident. 4. To explain divers prophetic predictions and other passages of Scripture, as will appear in the sequel. For the better understanding of this chapter, compare with it 1 Chron. i. 4—24. And consider these three things. 1. In the search of these genealogies we must avoid both carelessness, for the reasons now mentioned, and excessive curiosity about every particular person here named, and the people sprung from him; which is neither necessary nor profitable, nor indeed possible now to find out, by reason of the great changes of names, through length of time, loss of ancient records, differences of languages, extinction of families, conquest and destruction of nations, and other causes. It may suffice that divers of them, and those the most eminent, are evident and discernible at this day, as will appear in the progress, by which we may and ought to presume the truth of the rest, whose names are lost in the public confusions of the world in former ages, of whom I shall therefore be silent, and only speak of the principal persons, and that briefly. 2. The same people which were originally seater in one place did oftentimes shift their places, or at least send forth colonies; and that sometimes into places far distant from their brethren, as appears from the ancient and famous expeditions mentioned in sacred and profane story. So you must not wonder if you meet with the same people in divers countries. 3. In general, the world was divided into three parts, whereof the more eastern parts were allotted to Shem and his issue, the more southern parts to Ham, and the more northern parts of it to Japheth.

NOW these are the generations of the sons of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth:

* and unto them were sons born after the flood. a ch. 9. 1, 7, 19.

2 ^b The sons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras. b 1 Chron. 1. 5, &c.

Japheth's portion was at first Asia the Less, and afterwards by degrees all Europe, and the northern parts of Asia. This is he so much celebrated among the Greeks by the name of Japetus. Gomer's posterity are reckoned among the northern people, Ezek. xxxviii. 6, and were seated in the northern parts of the Lesser Asia, and afterwards about Thracia; and from him were called Gomari, and by an easy change Cimbri, or Cimmerii. Magog was the father of the Scythians, as may be gathered from Ezek. xxxviii. 2, 3, 15; xxxix. 3, 6. The posterity of Madai, wheresoever they were first placed, in Macedonia or elsewhere, afterwards were fixed in Media, and were called Medes, and in the Hebrew by the name of their father Madai, as appears from 2 Kings xvii. 6; Isa. xiii. 17; Jer. xxv. 25; li. 11; Dan. v. 28; vi. 8. From Javan came the Grecians, who are called by themselves Iaones, or Ioncs, and in the Hebrew Jevanim, and their country Greece, Javan. See Isa. lxxi. 19; Ezek. xxvii. 13, 19; Dan. viii. 21; x. 20. Of Tubal came the Iberi, anciently called Thobeli, a people of Asia, near the Euxine Sea. See Ezek. xxvii. 3; xxxii. 26; xxxviii. 2, 3. Meshech was father of the Moschi, i. e. the Muscovites, or rather, as others think, the Cappadocians, who were anciently called Meschini, and Moschi, and their chief city Maraca. And Tiras was father of the Thracians; amongst whom is a river and haven called Athyras, and who worshipped their god Mars under the name of Thuras.

3 And the sons of Gomer; Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

Ashkenaz, whose seed possessed Pontus and Bithynia, and the neighbouring parts, from whom they took the names of the lake and haven called Ascanius, and the sea called Axenus, or Euxinus. Riphath is called Diphath, 1 Chron. i. 6; the letters Daleth and Resh being oft interchanged, as we shall see in other instances. His posterity dwelled in or near Pontus and Bithynia, where Mela and Pliny and Solinus place the Riphæi, or Riphaces, and the Paphlagonians, who were anciently called Piphatæi. Togarmah, whose posterity are joined with Gomer's; see Ezek. xxvii. 14; xxxviii. 6; and were, as some think, the Phrygians and Galatians, and of them the Gauls and Germans; or, as others, the Armenians, and of them the Turks.

4 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and ^{¶ Or, as some read it Rodanim.} Tarshish, Kittim, and ¶ Dodanim.

Elishah, the father of the Grecians properly so called, who have preserved his name and remembrance in the cities Elis and Elisius, in a tract of ground called Ellas, and in the Elysian fields. And from these came the Æolians, a people of the Lesser Asia, where many of the Grecian colonies were seated. Tarshish was father of the Cilicians, from whom their chief city Tarsus, in Hebrew Tarshish, took its name; see Ezek. xxvii. 12; Jonah i. 3; Acts xxii. 3; and from whom the whole Mediterranean Sea is called Tarshish, because the Cilicians were in a great degree masters of that sea. Kittim, or, Chittim, the father of the Macedonians, and Italians too, as may be gathered from hence, because both their countries are called by the name of Chittim; Macedonia, 1 Mac. i. 1; viii. 5, and Italy, Numb. xxiv. 24; Dan. xi. 30. See also Isa. xxiii. 1; Jer. ii. 10. Besides that there are other evidences in profane writers that the Italians came from the Grecians. Dodanim is called also Rodanim, 1 Chron. i. 7. See Riphath in the former verse. His posterity is uncertain. Most probably he was seated near his brethren in some part of Greece. And the Greeks seem to have worshipped him under the name of Jupiter Dodonæus, whose famous oracle was in the city Dodona.

5 By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one c Ps. 72. 10. Jer. 2. 10. & 25. 22. Zeph. 2. 11.

after his tongue, after their families, in their nations.

The isles of the Gentiles; not isles properly so called; for why should they, having their choice, forsake the continent for islands, and thereby cut off themselves from their brethren? and where had they ships to transport them? But the word isles here and elsewhere signifies all those countries that had the sea between them and Judea, as it doth Isa. xi. 10, 11; xl. 15; Jer. ii. 10; xxv. 22; Ezek. xxvii. 3; Zeph. ii. 11. And isles are here put for the inhabitants, as the words earth and land are commonly used. This division of the world among them being a work of great weight, was doubtless managed with great care and consultation, and the advice of their heads and governors, and above all by the wise and special providence of God, which at this time did particularly determine the bounds of their several habitations, as it is recorded Acts xvii. 26. Every one after his tongue, i. e. according to their several languages, into which they were divided at Babel. By which it appears that this division, though mentioned before, was not executed till after the confusion of languages at Babel. After their families. Here observe the wise and gracious providence of God mixed with this judgment, that God distributed the languages according to the difference of families and nations, that each several nation, and all the families or branches of that nation, should have one and the same language; whereby both union and love were preserved among themselves, and the several nations were distinguished one from another, which was very fit and necessary for many reasons: as that the church of God, which was confined to the Hebrew nation, might neither be mixed with nor infected by the idolatrous nations; and that it might be evident to the world, that the Messiah was born of the seed of Abraham according to God's promise, &c.

d 1 Chron. 1. 9, &c.

6 ¶^d And the sons of Ham; Cush, and Mizraim, and Phut, and Canaan.

The posterity of Ham were disposed into the parts south from Babel, both in Asia and Africa. See 1 Chron. iv. 40; Psal. cv. 27. Cush was father both of the Ethiopians and the Arabians; who, as it seems, sent forth a colony from themselves more eastward, even near to India. See Gen. ii. 13; 2 Kings xix. 9; Job xxviii. 19; Jer. xiii. 23; xlv. 9. Mizraim was father of the Egyptians, who are generally known in Scripture by that name. Of Phut sprung the Libyans, among whom is the river Put, and the Moors. See Jer. xvi. 9; Ezek. xxvii. 10; xxx. 5; Nahum iii. 9. Canaan was the cursed parent of that accursed race of the Canaanites, well known in Scripture, Gen. x. 15.

7 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabtah, and Raamah, and Sabtechah: and the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.

Seba; or, Saba, or Sheba, whose seed were the Sabaeans in Arabia the Desert; see Psal. lxxii. 10; Isa. xliii. 3; and, as some think, the Abyssines in Africa. Havilah, the father of the inhabitants of the land of Havilah, mentioned Gen. ii. 11; a land in the most eastern part of Arabia, this being opposed to Shur, a desert near Egypt, as the two remotest bounds of Arabia, Gen. xxv. 18; 1 Sam. xv. 7. Sabtah was father of those people who were seated in the lower part of Arabia the Happy, near the Persian Gulf, who also sent forth a colony into Persia. For in those parts we meet with the Sabatani in Josephus, the Stabei and Messabathi in Ptolemy and Pliny. Raamah, from whom descended another people dwelling in the same Arabia. See Ezek. xxvii. 22. Sabtechah, the father of another people adjoining to them. Sheba was father either of that people which inhabited Ethiopia, who were known by that name; see 1 Kings x. 1, 4; Ezek. xxvii. 22; Matt. xii. 42; Acts viii. 27; or rather of another people in Arabia. So the several sons of Cush are conveniently seated one near another. And those Ethiopians in Africa might be a colony either of these, or rather of the posterity of the former Seba. Dedan; of whose posterity see Ezek. xxvii. 15; xxxviii. 13.

cir. 2218.

8 And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.

Whom he placeth last of all his sons, because he was to say more of him.

9 He was a mighty hunter before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD.

e Jer. 16. 16
Mic. 7. 2
1 ch. 6. 11.

He was a mighty hunter, first of beasts, and by that occasion of men. For when men were few, and lived dispersedly, and wild beasts abounded, and most of all in those parts, by hunting and destroying of those beasts he got much reputation and favour with men, who thereby were secured in their dwellings. In confidence hereof, and having this occasion to gather great companies of the youngest and strongest men together to himself, by their help he established a tyranny and absolute power over men, insnaring, hunting after, and destroying like beasts all those men who opposed his dominion. Tyrants and persecutors are oft in Scripture called foolers and hunters, as Psal. xci. 3; Jer. xvi. 16; Lam. iii. 52; iv. 18.

Before the Lord; an aggravation of his crime, that it was done in God's presence, impudently and in contempt both of God, who had so lately manifested his detestation of this sin, by the destruction of the world, amongst other sins, for this very sin of violence, Gen. vi. 13, and of his grandfather Noah, then living and preaching, who probably did admonish him of the wickedness and danger of this practice. Thus he showed that he neither feared God nor revered man, if they withstood him in his usurpation of dominion. It became a proverb, when any man was haughty, and cruel, and tyrannical, and that joined with impudence and obstinacy, That he was another Nimrod.

10 And the beginning of his kingdom was † Babel, and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar.

g Mic. 6. 6
† Gr. Babylon.

The beginning of his kingdom, i. e. either his chief and royal city, or the place where his dominion began, and from whence it was extended to other parts. Babel; which being not built till the confusion of languages, chap. xi. 4, showeth that this, though here mentioned upon occasion of the genealogy, was not executed till afterward; it being very usual in Scripture to neglect the order of time in historical relations. Calneh, called Calno, Isa. x. 9; and Canneh, Ezek. xxvii. 23; and as it is here, Calneh, Amos vi. 2; where it is mentioned amongst the eminent cities. The land of Shinar, i. e. in Mesopotamia. This clause belongs to all the cities here named; and is added for distinction sake, because there is a Babylon in the land of Egypt, and there might be other cities of the same name with the rest in other countries.

11 Out of that land † went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh, and † the city Rehoboth, and Calah, ‡ Or, he went out into Assyria. Or, the streets of the city.

Asshur; a man so called: either, 1. Asshur the son of Shem, who forsook the land, either being forced by or weary of Nimrod's tyranny and impiety, and erected another kingdom. But it is not probable either that Moses would here relate an exploit of a man whose birth is not mentioned till ver. 22, or that one single son of Shem would be here disorderly placed among the sons of Ham. Or, 2. Another Asshur of Ham's race. But it seems most likely that Asshur is the name of a place or country, even of Assyria, which in the Hebrew is called Asshur; and that the words should be thus rendered, he, i. e. Nimrod, went forth out of his own land to Asshur, to war against it, and add it to his empire; for to go forth is commonly ascribed to those that go to war or to battle, as Judg. ii. 15; xi. 3; 2 Sam. xi. 1; Psal. lx. 10; and the particle to is here understood as it is 2 Sam. vi. 10; x. 2, compared with 1 Chron. xiii. 13; xix. 2.

Nineveh, a famous and vast city near the river Tigris, but so ruined by time, that the learned are not agreed about the place where it was situate. Of Rehoboth, see Gen. xxxvi. 37; 1 Chron. i. 48.

12 And Resen between Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great city.

Either, 1. Nineveh, which is called a great city, Jonah iii. 3; iv. 11; and indeed was so, being sixty miles in compass. Thus it is a trajection, and the relative is referred to the remoter noun, as sometimes is done, though this seems to be a little forced. Or, 2. Resen; so the meaning is.

though this city be much inferior to Nineveh, yet this also, if compared with most others, is a great city.

13 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Ananim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim,

Of Ludim and the following names here and ver. 14, observe two things: 1. They are not the names of persons, but of people or nations; and the word father is here understood; Ludim, for the father of the people called Ludim, and so the rest. 2. That they are the several nations dwelling in Africa, springing from the Egyptians, which, as they multiplied, went further and further westward and southward from Egypt.

14 And Pathrusim, and Casluhim, ^{h1 Chron. 1.} (out of whom came Philistim,) and ^{12.} Caphtorim.

Pathrusim, the inhabitants of Pathros; of which see Isa. xi. 11; Jer. xlv. 1, 15; Ezek. xxix. 14.

Out of whom came Philistim: the meaning is, they came out of his loins, or were his offspring, which might be true; though afterwards we find them seated amongst the offspring of Canaan, having driven out the former inhabitants, as was usual in those ancient times. Object. The Philistines are elsewhere said to come from Caphtorim: see Jer. xlvii. 4. Answer. Therefore some make a trajection here, which is not unusual; and read the words thus, and Casluhim, and Caphtorim, out of whom came Philistim. But this seems forced, nor is it necessary; for the place may be thus read without any parenthesis, and Casluhim, out of whom came the Philistim and Caphtorim, which two latter were brethren, both the sons of Casluhim; and so might at first dwell together, whence their names are promiscuously used one for another; and the Caphtorims are said to dwell in Azzah, or Gaza, the known seat of the Philistines, Deut. ii. 23. Afterwards they might be divided, first in their dwellings, then in their affections, and war one against another; and the Caphtorims seem to have subdued and enslaved the Philistines, and carried them into their country, whom therefore God is said to bring and deliver from Caphtor, Amos ix. 9; and the Caphtorims either then or afterward might be destroyed and extirpated by the hand of God or men, whence the Philistines, in after-times, are called The remnant of the country of Caphtor, Jer. xlvii. 4.

15 ¶ And Canaan begat † Sidon his firstborn, and Heth, Sidon his first-born, the father of the people, and builder of the city of Sidon, Josh. i. 8; xix. 28. Of Heth came the Hittites, Josh. i. 4; ix. 1, &c.

16 And the Jebusite, and the Amorite, and the Gergasite,

Of these and the other people following, see Josh. xviii. 22, 28; 2 Chron. xiii. 4; Isa. xlix. 12; Ezek. xxvii. 8, 11; Amos vi. 2, 14, &c.

17 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

18 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.

Dispersed in the several quarters of the land, who, before they grew so numerous, dwelt together in the same place.

19 ¶ And the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon, as thou comest to Gerar, unto † Gaza; as thou goest, unto Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.

From Sidon, i. e. the city and country of Sidon, on the north-west. Unto Gaza, on the south-west. Zeboim, on the south and south-east. Lasha, on the north-east.

20 These are the sons of Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.

21 ¶ Unto Shem also, the father of all the children of Eber, the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.

Of all the children of Eber, i. e. of the Hebrews, the only church and people of God when Moses wrote, who are called Eber, Numb. xxiv. 24, as here, the children of Eber. And he is here called the father of them peculiarly, though he had other children, because he was their father not only by natural generation, but also in respect of the promise of God, which was conveyed to them through Shem's hands, and of that faith and holiness wherein he was their predecessor and eminent pattern; even as Ham, though he had other sons, is specially called the father of Canaan, Gen. ix. 22, because his father's curse rested upon him, ver. 25. Object. Eber had many other children here recorded, and therefore in that sense Shem was not the father of all the children of Eber. Answer. Though Eber had other children, yet none are called in Scripture the children of Eber, or, which is all one, the Hebrews, but Abraham's posterity; even as though Abraham had divers other children, yet the Israelites are in many places peculiarly called the children of Abraham. And the ungodly Jews, when they degenerate from God and godliness, God takes away their name, and denieth them to be Jews, Rom. ii. 28, and calls them Sodomites, Isa. i. 10. And therefore no wonder if Joktan and his posterity, having, as it is probable, forsaken their father's God, and turned idolaters, be here disowned as bastards, and blotted out of the honourable catalogue of the children of Eber: see Rom. ix. 8. Japheth alone is here mentioned as his brother, and not Ham, because he was deservedly shut out from Shem's blessing pronounced by Noah, and was accused of God, whereas Japheth was partaker with Shem, both in the piety exercised towards their father, and the blessing thereupon pronounced; the word brother being often applied to persons alike in condition, disposition, or manners: see Gen. xlix. 5. The elder. Though the words in Hebrew may seem ambiguous, yet other texts make it probable that Japheth was the elder. For Noah began to beget children in his five hundredth year, Gen. v. 32. And Shem was but a hundred years old two years after the flood, Gen. xi. 10. Therefore he was not the eldest. And Ham is concluded not to be the eldest, from Gen. ix. 24; of which see the notes there; if so, Japheth must be the eldest. And Shem is generally named first, not because he was the first-born, but because he had the privileges of the first-born, and was chief in dignity and authority in the church of God.

22 The † children of Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and † Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram.

Of Elam came the Elamites or Persians: see Gen. xiv. 9; Isa. xxi. 2; Jer. xlix. 34; Dan. viii. 2; Acts ii. 9. Asshur was father of the Assyrians: see ver. 11. Of Arphaxad the Chaldeans, as many conceive; or, as others, the inhabitants of that part of Assyria, from him called Arphaxitis, which Ptolemy corruptly calls Arrapachitis. Lud was father of the Lydians, a well-known people in Asia the Less. Of Aram the Syrians, known by the name of Aramites, both in sacred and other authors: compare with this Gen. xxii. 21.

23 And the children of Aram; Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Mash.

24 And Arphaxad begat †¹ Salah; and Salah begat Eber.

25 ¶ And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of one mas || Peleg; for in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's name mas Joktan.

In his days; either, 1. In the time of his birth, whence he was so called. Or, 2. Afterwards in the time of life. So his father gave him this name by the Spirit of prophecy, foreseeing this great event, and the time of it; this being no unusual thing in Scripture, as we shall hereafter see, to give prophetic names to children. And thus there is a longer and more convenient space left for the peopling of the world, and ripening of things for the general dispersion and habitation of the earth. The earth was divided, first in language, and then in habitations.

26 And Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah,

From Almodad and the rest of Joktan's sons here mentioned, come either, 1. The various nations of India, as i ch. 13. 12, 14, 15, 17, & 18, 19-21. Num. 34. 2-12. Josh. 12. 7, 8. † Heb. Azath.

k 1 Chron. 1. 17, &c. † Heb. Arphachad.

† Heb. Salah. 1 ch. 11. 12.

m 1 Chron. 1. 19. 2247. † That is, division.

most think; or rather, 2. The several people that live in the innermost parts of Arabia, who profess themselves the posterity of Joktan, and have a city near Mecca called Jectan. And the Homerites, one sort of them, are deduced from him by divers writers.

27 And Hadoram, and Uzal, and Diklah, 28 And Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

A different person from him ver. 7, and the father of another people, having only the same name with him.

29 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan.

Ophir; either that in India, of which see 1 Kings ix. 28; x. 11; xxii. 48; or the other in Arabia, of which see Job xxii. 24; xxviii. 16. See also Psal. xlv. 9; Isa. xiii. 12. Havilah, a distinct person from him ver. 7.

30 And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest, unto Sephar a mount of the east.

These places were either, 1. In India, where there are places called by Ptolemy and Pliny, Mæssa, and Saparum, and Sabara. Or rather, 2. In Arabia, where there was a noted port called Musa; and near it, and eastward from it, a people called Sapharitæ, and a royal city called Saphar; from whence this famous and long mountain doth here receive its name. If it be said Arabia is not east but south from Judea, it may be answered, 1. That Arabia, as it is east in respect of Egypt, where the Jews long dwelt, and part of it is so to Judea also; so it is not seldom in Scripture reckoned as a part of the east country, as appears from Gen. xxv. 6, 18; Judg. vi. 3; 1 Kings iv. 30; Job i. 3; Isa. xi. 14; Jer. xlix. 28. And Tacitus describing Judea, saith, It is bounded on the east by Arabia. 2. That this mountain is said to be easterly, not simply, but in respect of the city Mesha, on the east whereof Ptolemy placeth this mountain, though he call it by another name, Climax; add to this, that Moses speaks of these places as known to the Jews, and therefore not so far distant from them as India, a place wholly unknown to them, and wherewith, as yet, they had no communication. If it be further objected, that if these people had been so near and well known to the Jews, we should have had more mention of them in Scripture; I answer, there is mention of some of them; and for others, it is no wonder if by the following wars among nations, and mixtures and confusions of people, some of them were extirpated, and others lost their names, though not their beings, as oft happened.

31 These are the sons of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

n ver. 1.

32 These are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: and by these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.

o ch. 9. 19.

CHAP. XI.

One language in the earth, 1. They journey from the east, settle in a plain in the land of Shinar, 2; make bricks, which they burn and use with slime, 3; build a city and tower that they might not be scattered, 4. God sees it, 5. Disapproves their design, 6; defeats it, and scatters them by confounding their language, 7, 8; for which reason the place called Babel, 9. The posterity of Shem to Abram, 10—26. Abram takes Sarai to wife, 29. She is barren, 30. He removes from Ur to Haran, 31, where his father dies, 32.

AND the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech.

Earth is oft put for its inhabitants, as Gen. vi. 21; 1 Chron. xvi. 23; Psal. xxxiii. 8. Of one speech, which even heathen writers acknowledge; and that probably was the Hebrew tongue.

2 And it came to pass, as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there.

cir. 2247.
1 Or, east-ward, as ch. 13. 11.
2 Sam. 6. 2. with 1 Chro. 13. 6.

As they journeyed from the east, i. e. Nimrod and the rest of his confederates of Ham's posterity; not from Armenia, where the ark rested, which was north from Babel, and is called north in Scripture, as Jer. xxv. 9, 26, &c.; but from Assyria, into which they had before come from the mountains of Ararat for more convenient habitation. It may be rendered to the east; but that manner of translation is neither usual nor necessary here. The land of Shinar, where Babel was, Gen. x. 10.

3 And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.

+ Heb. a man said to his neighbour.
+ Heb. burn them to a burning.

Let us make brick, for in that low and fat soil they had no quarries of stones. The heathen writers agree that Babylon's walls were made of brick. The slime was a kind of clay called bitumen, which, as Pliny testifieth, is liquid and glutinous, and fit to be used in brick buildings, as Strabo, Dion, and others note. And that Babylon was built with this, as is here said, we have the joint and express testimony of Berosus, Ctesias, Dion, Curtius, and many others.

4 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

a Deut. 1. 28.

Whose top may reach unto heaven, i. e. a very high tower; a usual hyperbole, both in Scripture, as Deut. i. 28; ix. 1, and in other authors. This tower and its vast height is noted by Herodotus, Diodorus, and others.

Let us make us a name, i. e. a great name, as the phrase is elsewhere used. Compare also 2 Sam. vii. 9, with 1 Chron. xvii. 8. See also Isa. lxiii. 12, 14; Dan. ix. 15. They take no care for God's name, and the defence and propagation of the true religion, as duty bound them, but merely out of pride and vain-glory labour to erect an everlasting monument of their wit, and wealth, and magnificence to all posterity.

Their design was not to secure themselves against a flood, which they well knew brick buildings were no fence against; nor would they then have built this tower in a plain, but upon some high mountain; but rather to prevent a total and irrecoverable dispersion. They sought therefore to bind themselves together in one glorious empire, and to make this glorious city the capital seat of it, and the place of refuge and resort upon any considerable occasion.

5 And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

b ch. 12. 21.

Not by local descent, for he is every where; but by the manifestation of his presence and the effects of his power in that place. To see the city and the tower, i. e. to know the truth of the fact, thereby setting a pattern for judges to examine causes before they pass sentence; otherwise God saw this in heaven; but in these expressions he condescends to the capacity of men. The children of men, so called emphatically, 1. For distinction of them from the sons of God, or the race of Shem, who were not guilty of the sin, and therefore did not partake in the curse, the confusion of their language, but retained their ancient tongue uncorrupted for a good while. 2. To note their rashness and folly, who being but weak and silly men, durst oppose themselves to the infinitely wise and powerful God, who did (as they might easily gather both from his words and works) intend to disperse and separate them, that so by degrees they might possess the whole earth, which God had made for that purpose.

6 And the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

c ch. 9. 19. Acts 17. 26. d ver. 1.

e Ps. 2. 1.

The Lord said this in way of holy scorn and derision. Compare Gen. iii. 22.

f ch. 1. 26. 7 Go to, 'let us go down, and there Pa. 2. 4. confound their language, that they may Acta 2. 4. 5, 6. not understand one another's speech.
g ch. 42. 23.
Deut. 28. 49.
Jer. 5. 15. 1 Cor. 14. 2, 11.

Let us, i. e. the blessed Trinity. See Gen. i. 26. Confound their language, by making them forget their former language, and by putting into their minds several languages; not a distinct language into each person, but into each family, or rather into each nation; that thereby they may be disenabled from that mutual comersence which was altogether necessary for the carrying on of that work.

h Luke 1. 51. 8 So ^h the LORD scattered them abroad
i ch. 10. 25, from thence ⁱ upon the face of all the 32. earth: and they left off to build the city.

Thus they brought upon themselves the very thing they feared, and that more speedily and more mischievously to themselves; for now they were not only divided in place, but in language too, and so were unfitted for those confederacies and correspondences which they mainly designed, and for the mutual comfort and help of one another, which otherwise they might in good measure have enjoyed.

9 Therefore is the name of it called j That is, Babel; ^k because the LORD did there confusion. confound the language of all the earth:
k Wis. 10. 5. and from thence did the LORD scatter 1 Cor. 14. 23. them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

l ch. 10. 22. 10 ¶ ^l These are the generations of 1 Chron. 1. Shem: Shem was an hundred years old,
17. and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood:

Not all the generations of Shem, as appears both from the next verse, and from the former chapter; but of those who were the seminary of the church, and the progenitors of Christ.

2346.

11 And Shem lived after he begat Arphaxad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

So that he lived almost all the time of Abraham; which was a singular blessing, both to himself, who hereby saw his children of the tenth generation; and to the church of God, which by this means enjoyed the counsel and conduct of so great a patriarch.

2311.

12 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty years, ^m and begat Salah:

m See Luke 3. 36.

13 And Arphaxad lived after he begat Salah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

2261.

14 And Salah lived thirty years, and begat Eber:

15 And Salah lived after he begat Eber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

2247.

n 1 Chron. 1. 19.

o Called Luke 3. 35, Phalec.

16 ⁿ And Eber lived four and thirty years, and begat ^o Peleg:
17 And Eber lived after he begat Peleg four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

So that he was the longest lived of all the patriarchs which were born after the flood.

2217.

18 And Peleg lived thirty years, and begat Reu:

19 And Peleg lived after he begat Reu two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

2183.

p Luke 3. 35, Saruch.

20 And Reu lived two and thirty years, and begat ^p Serug:
21 And Reu lived after he begat Serug two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

22 And Serug lived thirty years, and begat Nahor: 2155.

23 And Serug lived after he begat Nahor two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

24 And Nahor lived nine and twenty years, and begat ^q Terah: 2126.
q Luke 3. 34, Thara.

Nahor was the first patriarch who fell to idolatry.

25 And Nahor lived after he begat Terah an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters.

26 And Terah lived seventy years, and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran. 2056.
r Josh. 24. 2, 1 Chron. 1. 26.

i. e. Began to beget, as Gen. v. 32. Abram, who is first named in order of dignity, (for which cause Shem is put before Ham and Japheth, and Moses before Aaron,) not in order of time, which seems to be this: Haran probably was the eldest, because Nahor married his daughter; Nahor the second; and Abram certainly was the youngest, because Terah, Abram's father, lived two hundred and five years, ver. 32, and Abram after his father's death, Acts vii. 4, went out of Haran, when he was seventy-five years old, Gen. xii. 4, 5; therefore he was not begotten in Terah's seventieth year, when Terah began to beget his sons, as here is said, but in his one hundred and thirtieth year, and so there remains seventy-five years precisely to Abram's departure. And Sarai, Haran's daughter, was but ten years younger than Abram, Gen. xvii. 17; and therefore Haran was Abram's elder brother.

27 ¶ Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot. 1096.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chaldees.

i. e. In the presence and during the life of his father.

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: the name of Abram's wife was

* Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife, s ch. 17. 15. & 20. 12. t ch. 22. 20. Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah.

Such marriages of uncles and nieces being permitted then, Exod. vi. 20, (as in the beginning of the world the marriages of brethren and sisters were,) though afterwards, the church being very much enlarged, they were severely forbidden, Lev. xviii. 12, 14. Iscah is either Sarai, as the Jews and many others think, or rather another person. For, 1. Why should Moses express Sarai thus darkly and doubtfully? Had he meant her, he would have added after Iscah, this is Sarai, according to his manner in like cases, Gen. xiv. 2, 7; xxxv. 6. 2. He elsewhere calleth her, the daughter, not of his brother, as he should have done, had she been Iscah, but of his father, by another mother.

30 But ^u Sarai was barren; she had no child. u ch. 16. 1, 2. & 18. 11, 12.

See Gen. xvi. 1, 2; xviii. 11, 12.

31 And Terah ^v took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from ^v Ur of the Chaldees, to go into ^w the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there. w ch. 12. 1.

See Josh. xxiv. 2; Neh. ix. 7; 1 Chron. i. 26. Being informed by his son of the command of God, Terah did not despise it, because it came to him by the hands of his inferior, but cheerfully obeyeth it; and therefore he is so honourably mentioned as the head and governor of the action. Terah and Abram went with Lot and Sarai, as their heads and guides. Haran is called Charran, Acts vii. 4, and by the Romans Carræ, a place in Mesopotamia strictly so called, in the way to Canaan, and near to it, well known by Crassus' defeat there: see Gen. xxiv.

10; xiviii. 10; xxix. 4. Dwelt there; or, rested or abode, being detained there for a season; peradventure by Terah's disease, which begun there, for the next verse tells us of his death.

1921. 32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

CHAP. XII.

God calls Abram from his own country and kindred to Canaan, 1. Promises to make of him a great and flourishing nation, and to bless in Christ his seed, 2, 3. Abram obeys, 4-6. God appears to him, and promises to give Canaan to his seed; he builds an altar, 7. He removes to Beth-el, and there builds an altar, 8. There being a famine he goes down to Egypt, 10. He advises Sarai to equivocate, 11-13. She is taken into Pharaoh's house, 15. Pharaoh kind to Abram for her sake, 16. God plagues him because of Sarai, 17. He calls Abram, and expostulates with him, 18, 19. Sends him safely away, 20.

1922. NOW the ^a LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

The Lord had said, to wit, in Ur of the Chaldees, by comparing Gen. xi. 31, with Acts vii. 2-4; or, did say, again, i. e. renewed the command in Haran, whilst Abram might possibly linger there, as afterwards Lot did in Sodom, longer than he should. But the former interpretation is more probable, because Moses speaks here of that command of God which came to Abram before he was gone from his kindred and father's house, and therefore before he came to Haran. And this command was given to Abram either immediately, or by Shem, then the governor of God's church.

From thy father's house; from the family of Nachor, which was now become idolatrous, Gen. xxxi. 30; Josh. xxiv. 2; and consequently their society was dangerous and pernicious; and therefore God mercifully snatcheth him as a brand out of the fire.

A land that I will show thee; which as yet he nameth not, for the greater trial and exercise of Abram's faith and patience: compare Isa. xlii. 2; Heb. xi. 8.

2 ^b And I will make of thee a great nation, ^c and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; ^d and thou shalt be a blessing:

I will bless thee with all my blessings, spiritual, temporal, and eternal; (see Deut. vii. 13; xxviii. 2, &c.; Eph. i. 3); and thou shalt be, both a pattern and instrument of blessedness to others; to thy posterity, who shall be blessed for thy sake; to thy servants and friends, who shall be blessed by thy instruction and help; and to all the world, as it follows.

3 ^e And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: ^f and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

Those that are friends or enemies to thee shall be the same to me; a marvellous condescension and privilege.

In thee, i. e. in thy Seed, as it is explained Gen. xxii. 18; xxvi. 4; xxviii. 14, i. e. in and through Christ, Acts iii. 25; Gal. iii. 9, 16, 28, 29; or, for thee, as the Chaldee hath it, i. e. for thy sake; or, by thee, i. e. by thy means; or, with thee, by comparing this with Gal. iii. 8, 9, i. e. in the same way and manner in which thou art blessed, that is, by a fruitful faith: compare Rom. iv. 11, 12, 16. All families of the earth, i. e. all nations; which is to be limited to the believers of all nations, by the whole current of the Scriptures. All that shall be blessed shall be blessed by this means, and no other way.

4 So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

Abram departed, first from Ur, and after his father's death, from Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and ^g the souls that they had gotten ^h in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

The souls, i. e. the persons, as the word souls is oft used, as Gen. xiv. 21; xvii. 14; Exod. xii. 15; Lev. v. 1; Numb. xxiii. 10; Deut. xxiv. 7; Mark iii. 4, &c.

That they had gotten; Heb. made, i. e. either, 1. Begotten; for though Abram had yet no children, Lot had, and both their servants had children by their fellow servants born in their house, which might well be numbered among Abram's and Lot's persons, because they had an absolute dominion over them. Or, 2. Instructed, i. e. turned from idolatry, and taught in the true religion, as the Chaldee expounds it; for such were most proper for Abram to take along with him out of his father's house in this expedition. Or, 3. Gotten, i. e. procured either by conquest or purchase, or any other lawful and usual way.

6 ¶ And Abram ⁱ passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, ^k unto the plain of Moreh. ^l And the Canaanite was then in the land.

Sichem; Heb. Sechem, a place afterwards so called in the mountains of Ephraim, Josh. xxi. 21; Judg. viii. 31, and here so called by anticipation. The Canaanite is properly so called; that cursed, cruel, impious, and idolatrous nation: see Zech. xiv. 21. This is added as an aggravation of Abram's faith and obedience, that he durst and did profess the true religion in the midst of such a people, which could not be without great danger both of his estate and life. Was then in the land, as a settled inhabitant to continue there for a long time; whereas now in Moses's time he was forthwith to be expelled out of it.

7 ^m And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, ⁿ Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an ^o altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

The Lord appeared unto Abram, to encourage and comfort him against his wicked neighbours: see Gen. xiii. 15; xv. 18; xvii. 8; xxiv. 7; Deut. xxxiv. 4.

There built he an altar, a place for sacrifice, and other parts of Divine worship, erected by him both to keep his family in the true religion, and to separate himself and them from that idolatrous neighbourhood.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and ^p called upon the name of the LORD.

Beth-el, a known place, which afterwards was called Beth-el, but now Luz, Gen. xxviii. 19; a usual prolepsis, or anticipation, as before, ver. 6. On the west; or, on the sea; which is all one, because the sea was on the west part of the land: see Gen. xiii. 14; xxviii. 14; Numb. iii. 23; Deut. iii. 27. Hai, or Ai, as it is called, Josh. vii. 2; Jer. xlix. 3; Isa. x. 28.

9 And Abram journeyed, ^q going on still toward the south.

Removing from place to place, still hoping to meet with better neighbours, and to free himself from that perpetual vexation which he had in beholding their wickedness. Toward the south, i. e. the southern part of the land of Canaan towards Egypt.

10 ¶ And there was ^r a famine in the land: and Abram ^s went down into Egypt.

a ch. 15. 7.
Neh. 9. 7.
Is. 41. 2.
Acts 7. 3.
Heb. 11. 8.

b ch. 17. 6.
& 18. 18.
Deut. 26. 5.
1 Kings 3. 8.
e ch. 24. 36.
d ch. 28. 4.
Gal. 3. 14.

Ex. 27. 29.
Num. 24. 9.
f ch. 18. 12.
& 22. 18.
& 26. 4.
Ps. 72. 17.
Acts 3. 25.
Gal. 3. 8.

g ch. 14. 14.
h ch. 11. 31.

i Heb. 11. 8.
k Deut. 11. 30.
Judg. 7. 1.
l ch. 10. 18.
19. & 13. 7.

m ch. 17. 1.
n ch. 13. 15.
& 17. 8.
Ps. 105. 9.
11.
o ch. 13. 4.

p ch. 13. 4.

q Heb. in going and journeying.
r ch. 26. 1.
s Ps. 105. 13.

to sojourn there; for the famine was ^{t ch. 43. 1.} 'grievous in the land.

There was a famine in the land, or, in that land of Canaan, a land eminently fruitful, Deut. viii. 7, 8. This was partly to punish that people's sins, Psal. cvii. 34, partly to try Abram's faith.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art ^{u ver. 14. ch. 26. 7.} " a fair woman to look upon :

Quest. How could she be so fair, when she was above sixty years old? Ans. She was so both comparatively to the Egyptians, and simply in herself, and that might be from divers causes : 1. From the greater vigour of nature in that age of the world. 2. Because her beauty was not diminished by child-bearing. 3. From God's singular providence, ordering it thus for Abram's trial, and for the manifestation of his special providence watching over him and his.

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife : and they ^{w ch. 20. 11. & 26. 7.} " will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

The Egyptians were a very lustful people, which made Abram more cautious.

13 ^{r ch. 20. 5. & 26. 7.} " Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister : that it may be well with me for thy sake ; and my soul shall live because of thee.

Say thou art my sister : so she was, either, 1. More generally, as his niece; for nephews and nieces are in Scripture called brethren and sisters, as Gen. xiii. 8. Or rather, 2. Properly, i. e. by the father's side, Gen. xx. 12. So this expression was true, but ambiguous, and intended to deceive the Egyptians, and therefore unwarrantable. And here Abram, the father of the faithful, elsewhere celebrated for the strength of his faith, betrays his infirmity and distrust of God's providence and promise, and this fact was not without great danger both to himself and Sarai.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians ^{y ch. 39. 7. Matt. 5. 28.} ' beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh : and the woman was ^{s ch. 20. 2.} " taken into Pharaoh's house.

The princes also of Pharaoh, i. e. the officers and courtiers ; whose great design was to gain their prince's favour by gratifying his lusts. Pharaoh was a name common to all the kings of Egypt now, and for many ages after. The woman was taken into Pharaoh's house, i. e. taken and brought, one word for two. So the word take is used Gen. xv. 9, 10; Exod. xviii. 2; xxvii. 20, &c. Not to his bed, but the house of his women, where they were purified and prepared for the king's presence and society, as Esth. ii. 8, 9, that in due time she might be his concubine or wife. Thus even the ceremonies of courts serve the providence of God, and give opportunity for working her deliverance.

16 And he ^{a ch. 20. 14.} " entreated Abram well for her sake : and he had sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and menservants, and maid-servants, and she asses, and camels.

To wit, by Pharaoh's gift, over and above his own ; else it had been impertinent to mention it in this place.

17 And the LORD ^{b ch. 20. 13. 1 Chron. 16. 21. Ps. 105. 14. Heb. 13. 4.} " plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife.

Most probably with some notable distemper of his body, which did both chastise him for and hinder him in the execution of his lust. His house, i. e. his servants, who being some one way, some another, partners of his sin, are justly made partners in his plagues. And if any were innocent in this matter, they were obnoxious to God for other sins. Besides, as they were punished upon the occasion of Pharaoh's sin, so Pharaoh was punished in their punishments. Because of Sarai, i. e. 1. For the act of violence towards her ; for the word taken, ver. 15, implies that it was by constraint, and not with Abram's and with her consent, which it is not probable that either of them would give in that case. 2. For an intention of uncleanness. For God, who is the Searcher and Judge of men's hearts, may justly, and doth often, punish men for their evil purposes. Compare Gen. xx. 3, 4.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, ^{c ch. 20. 9. & 26. 10.} " What is this that thou hast done unto me ? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife ?

How great an injury hast thou done to me in concealing this from me, that she was thy wife ! How knew Pharaoh this ? Ans. 1. He guessed it from the quality of his plague, which also awakened his conscience. 2. Upon a serious inquiry into the cause of this plague, he understood it either by Divine instinct, as Gen. xx. 3, or by Sarai's confession, whom doubtless he severely examined about it. And she, being awakened by this warning, durst no longer conceal herself, and thought she might securely make herself known.

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister ? so I might have taken her to me to wife : now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

I might have taken her to me to wife ; though he had another before ; polygamy being then commonly practised.

20 ^{d Prov. 21. 1.} And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him : and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

Pharaoh gave them a charge concerning him for his safe conduct whither he pleased.

CHAP. XIII.

Abram returns from Egypt to Canaan with Lot, 1. He comes to Beth-el ; calls on the Lord, 3, 4. Abram and Lot being both very rich are obliged to part. Lot goes to Sodom, 5—12. The men of Sodom exceeding wicked, 13. God renews his promise to Abram concerning Canaan and a numerous issue, 14—17. Abram removes to Mamre, and there builds an altar, 18.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, ^{cir. 1918.} and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, ^{a ch. 12. 9.} " into the south.

i. e. Into the southern part of Canaan, from whence he came, Gen. xii. 9, and which in Scripture is called simply the south, Josh. x. 40 ; xi. 16. Otherwise he went rather into the north : but the Scripture being written for the Jews, doth frequently accommodate the names of the quarters of the world to them.

2 ^{b ch. 24. 35. Ps. 112. 3. Prov. 10. 22.} " And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys ^{c ch. 12. 8, 9.} " from the south even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, where Beth-el and Hai ;

He went on his journey, or rather, according to his journeys, which he took as he came, going in the same road, and resting in the same place, of which he had experience.

4 Unto the ^{d ch. 12. 7, 8.} " place of the altar, which he had made there at the first : and there Abram ^{e Ps. 116. 17.} " called on the name of the LORD.

Unto the place of the altar, i. e. where the altar was ; for the altar itself was either fallen down, as being probably built of earth, as afterwards, Exod. xx. 24, or overthrown by the wicked Canaanites. He worshipped God by prayer, and preaching to his family, Gen. xviii. 19, and offering sacrifices. See Gen. iv. 26; xii. 8.

5 ¶ And Lot also, which went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

f ch. 36. 7. 6 And ¹the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

g ch. 24. 20. 7 And there was ²a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: ³and the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land.

The Canaanite, i. e. the Canaanites, as Gen. xii. 6, the singular number for the plural, as Psal. lxxviii. 45; cv. 33, 40.

Dwelled then in the land, i. e. were the lords and owners of it; and therefore Abram and Lot could not take what pastures they pleased, but such as the others left them, which was not sufficient for their conveniency. It may also be added as a reason of Abram's following motion, because that idolatrous people were present, and diligently observed all their contentions and other miscarriages; and would, doubtless, take occasion thence to disparage the true religion. And it must be remembered, that these are the words not of Abram, but of Moses; who, knowing that the Canaanites were then speedily to be turned out of the land, intimates that the case was otherwise in Abram's days, when the Canaanites were possessed, and were likely to continue the possessors and lords of the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, ¹Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be [†]brethren.

Abram said unto Lot. The elder, and wiser, and worthier person relinquisheth his own right to his inferior for peace sake, leaving us a noble example for our imitation.

Between me and thee, and between; or, or between, &c., and for or, as Exod. xxi. 17; Psal. viii. 4, compared with Matt. xv. 14; Heb. ii. 6, for there was no strife between Abram and Lot, though he feared it might pass from the feet to the head.

For we be brethren, i. e. both by nature near kinsmen, as the word brother is oft used, and in the faith and religion too, amongst whom contentions are very indecent and scandalous.

k ch. 20. 15. 9 ¹Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: ¹if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

Is not the whole land before thee? i. e. open to thy view, and free to choose which part thou pleasest, as thou canst agree with the owners: I give thee full power to choose before me. See a like phrase, Gen. xx. 15; xxxiv. 10, 21; xvii. 6. Thou wilt take: this and the following supplement are easily gathered both from the words of this and the 11th verse, and from the nature of the thing. And the Hebrew language being a concise or short language, such supplements are frequently necessary, and very usual. Compare 2 Chron. x. 11, with 1 Kings xii. 11; 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, with 1 Chron. xi. 11.

10 And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all ²the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD ³destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, ⁴even as the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto ⁵Zoar.

The plain of Jordan, a great plain so called, because there the pleasant river Jordan divided itself into divers little streams or rivulets, which having no visible outlet into the sea, by degrees, and in several places, insinuated themselves into the earth, which made it very fruitful and excellent for Lot's purpose. But this lovely plain was afterwards transformed by Divine vengeance into a filthy lake or dead sea, Gen. xix. Even as the garden of the Lord; i. e. either, 1. Like that famous garden of Eden which God himself planted, Gen. ii. 8. The like comparison we meet with Isa. li. 3; Ezek. xxviii. 13; xxxi. 8. Or, 2. Like some excellent garden; for excellent things are thus expressed, as, the host of God, 1 Chron. xii. 22, i. e. a great host; cedars of God, Psal. lxxx. 10. Like the land of Egypt, a land of eminent fertility by the influence of that great river Nilus, anciently celebrated as the granary of other countries. See Ezek. xxxi. Unto Zoar, i. e. to Bela, Gen. xiv. 2, afterwards called Zoar, Gen. xix. 22, and here so called by a prolepsis. But these words are not to be joined with the words immediately going before, as if Egypt was commended for its fertility in that part of it from which men go to Zoar, but with the more remote words, and the sense is, as the words of the text are transposed and rendered by some, that the plain of Jordan was (before the Lord destroyed it and its cities Sodom and Gomorrah) watered every where, even to Zoar; or, even until thou comest, i. e. till a man come, to Zoar, i. e. all the way which leads from the place where Abram then was to Zoar. And such transpositions are not unusual, as we shall see hereafter.

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

Lot journeyed east; Heb. from the east, or eastward, as the Hebrew particle min is sometimes used: see Gen. ii. 8; 2 Sam. ii. 2, compared with 1 Chron. xiii. 6.

12 Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot ¹dwelled in the cities of the plain, and ²pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom ³were wicked and ⁴sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

Eminent, noted, and impudent sinners; see Gen. xviii. 20; Ezek. xvi. 49; which is here added as a secret reproof to Lot, who was either careless in his inquiry into the dispositions and manners of those among whom he intended to fix his abode, which for many reasons he should have searched out; or he was willing to expose himself to all the hazards which he might incur by their neighbourhood and familiarity, for the sweetness and fertility of the soil; an error which is frequently committed by men in the choice of their habitations, and which oft costs them dear, as it did Lot in the following story.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot ¹was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art ²northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

The Lord said this unto Abram, to comfort him now when he was alone, and in a worse soil than Lot had chosen.

15 For all the land which thou seest, ¹to thee will I give it, and ²to thy seed for ever.

Object. Abram could see but a little part of the land. Ans. 1. He might now possibly be upon a mountain, from whence he might have a large prospect every way. 2. He gave him all that he saw, but not only that, but also the rest of the land, and therefore he bids him walk through and view the whole land, ver. 17. Quest. How was the land given to Abram, when it is expressly said, He, i. e. God, gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on, Acts vii. 5. Ans. 1. God gave Abram the right to it, though not the actual possession of it, until the time that God appointed; as God gave the right of the kingdom to David, but not the possession till Saul's death. 2. God explains himself, To thee and to thy seed, i. e. to thee, that is, to thy seed, and that for thy sake; the particle and being put off for that is, as 1 Chron. xxi. 12, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 13; Eph. i. 3, and in many other places, as we shall see. Quest. How was this for ever, when after some hundreds of years they were turned out of it?

m ch. 19. 17.
Deut. 34. 3.
Ps. 107. 34.
n ch. 19. 24.
25.
o ch. 2. 10.
as. 51. 3.
p ch. 14. 2.
6. & 19. 22.

q ch. 19. 20.
cir. 1917.
r ch. 14. 12.
& 19. 1.
2 Pet. 2. 7, 8.

q ch. 19. 20.
Ezek. 16. 43.
2 Pet. 2. 7, 8.
t ch. 6. 11.

u ver. 11.

w ch. 28. 14.

x ch. 12. 7.
& 15. 18. &
17. 8. & 24.
7. & 26. 4.
y ch. 24. 12.
Deut. 34. 4.

Acts 7. 5. y 2 Chron. 20. 7. Pa. 37. 22, 29. & 112. 2.

Ans. 1. This promise was made to them upon condition of their obedience, which is oft expressed in other places, as Lev. xviii. 26; Deut. iv. 25, 26; Isa. xlvi. 18, 19. 2. The word olam, rendered for ever, doth not always signify eternity, but a long continuance, as is evident from Gen. xvii. 13; xlviii. 4; Exod. xxi. 6; Psal. cxxxii. 14, and many other places of Scripture; and in particular, when it is applied to the Jewish rites and privileges, it commonly signifies no more than during the standing of that commonwealth, or until the coming of the Messias; and so it may here be understood.

16 And ^z I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, ^z then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 Then Abram removed ^b his tent, and came and ^a dwelt in the [†] plain of Mamre, ^b which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the Lord.

Mamre was an Amorite of great note, from whom the city Hebron was called Mamre, Gen. xxiii. 19, a friend and confederate of Abram, Gen. xiv. 13, by whom it is thought he was brought to the knowledge and worship of the true God. In Hebron; or, near Hebron; for so the Hebrew Beth is sometimes taken.

CHAP. XIV.

Several kings wage war against the king of Sodom, &c.; Lot is taken prisoner, 1—12. Abram rescues him, 13—16. The king of Sodom congratulates him his victory, 17. Melchizedek king of Salem blesses him; to him Abram gives tithes, 18—20. The king of Sodom offers to give Abram the goods taken in victory, 21; which Abram refuses to accept, 22—24.

AND it came to pass in the days of Amraphel king ^a of Shinar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Chedorlaomer king of ^b Elam, and Tidal king of nations;

i. e. Of a people which came to him out of several nations, (being allured possibly by his fame, or by promises and privileges granted to them,) and put themselves under his government. Or Gottin is the name of a certain place or country, so called from the confluence of divers people or nations thither, as Tyrus is called the mart of nations, Isa. xxiii. 3, upon the same account.

2 That these made war with Bera king of Sodom, and with Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of ^c Admah, and Shemeber king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, which is ^d Zoar.

Once for all, observe that the name of kings is here and elsewhere given by Moses to the chief governors of cities or little provinces. Compare Josh. xii. 9, &c.

3 All these were joined together in the vale of Siddim, ^e which is the salt sea.

Which now is, though when this battle was fought it was not so.

4 Twelve years ^f they served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

He was their lord, either, 1. By inheritance, as the issue of Elam, Shem's son, Gen. x. 22. Or, 2. By conquest, having subdued those people in a former war, which Josephus speaks of.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote ^g the Rephaims ^h in Ashteroth Karnaim, and ⁱ the Zuzims in

Ham, ^k and the Emims in ^l Shaveh Kiriathaim,

The kings that were with him, i. e. confederate with him for the recovery of his right, expecting the same assistance from him upon the like occasion. The Rephaims, a fierce and warlike people of Canaan. See Gen. xv. 20. Or the giants, as this word is taken Deut. ii. 11. Ashteroth Karnaim, a place in Basan called Ashteroth, Deut. i. 4; Josh. ix. 10; xiii. 31. It is surnamed Carnaim, q. d. Two-horned, like a half moon, either from the situation and form of the place, or from the goddess Diana, or the moon, which usually was painted with two horns, whom they worshipped. The Emims, a people in Canaan of giant-like stature, Deut. ii. 10, 11. Shaveh Kiriathaim; Kiriathaim is a noted city in Gillead, and Shaveh may be either the ancient name of that city, or the present name of the country adjoining and belonging to it.

6 ^m And the Horites in their mount Seir, unto ⁿ El-paran, which is by the wilderness.

The Horites, the ancient inhabitants of Seir, of whom see Gen. xxxvi. 20; Deut. ii. 12. El signifies a plain, and Paran is the name of a known city and mountain. See Num. xiii. 3; Deut. xxxiii. 2; 1 Sam. xxv. 1, &c.

7 And they returned, and came to Enmishpat, which is Kadesh, and smote all the country of the Amalekites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt ^m in Hazezon-tamar.

Which is Kadesh, i. e. which after that time was called Kadesh, of which see Num. xx. 1, 14, &c. The country of the Amalekites, i. e. which afterwards was possessed by the Amalekites, Gen. xxxvi. 12. A known figure called prolepsis.

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela (the same is Zoar); and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

9 With Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings with five.

10 And the vale of Siddim was full of ⁿ slimepits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there; and they that remained fled ^o to the mountain.

The vale of Siddim was chosen by those five kings for the place of battle, that their adversaries being ignorant of the place might unawares fall into those pits, which they by their knowledge of it thought to escape. Kings of Sodom and Gomorrah, i. e. their armies; a figurative speech, frequent in Scripture and other authors; for their persons escaped: see ver. 17. They either, 1. Fell into the pits which they designed for others; or rather, 2. Were slain, as this word is oft used, as Josh. viii. 24, 25; Judg. viii. 10; xii. 6; and here too; for those that fell are here opposed to those that remained.

11 And they took ^p all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their vic-tuals, and went their way.

12 And they took Lot, Abram's ^q brother's son, ^r who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed.

Lot now suffered for his cohabitation with bad neighbours.

13 ¶ And there came one that had escaped, and told Abram the Hebrew; for ^s he dwelt in the plain of Mamre, Amorite, brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner: ^t and these were confederate with Abram.

Abram the Hebrew; so called, either, 1. From his great z ch. 16. 6.

& 22. 17. &
26. 4. & 28.
14. & 32. 12.
Ex. 32. 13.
Num. 22. 10.
Deut. 1. 10.
1 Kings 4.
20. 1 Chron.
27. 23.
It. 48. 19.
Jer. 33. 22.
Rom. 4. 16.
17. 18.
Heb. 11. 12.

a ch. 14. 13.
† Heb.
¶ Gen.
b ch. 35. 27.
& 37. 14.

a ch. 10. 10.
& 11. 2.
b It. 11. 11.

c Deut. 29.
23.

d ch. 19. 22.

e Deut. 3. 17.
Num. 34. 12.
Josh. 3. 16.
Ps. 107. 34.

f ch. 9. 26.

g ch. 15. 20.
Deut. 3. 11.
h Josh. 12. 4.
& 13. 12.

i Deut. 2. 20.

k Deut. 2.
10. 11.
l Or,
the plain of Kiriathaim.

m 2 Chron.
20. 2.

n ch. 11. 3.
o ch. 19. 17.
30.

p ver. 16. 21.

q ch. 12. 5.

r ch. 13. 12.

s ch. 13. 16.

t ver. 24.

and good predecessor Eber, Gen. x. 24; xi. 14, in and by whom the primitive language and true religion were preserved; and therefore though Abram had five other progenitors between Eber and him, which were persons of less note, he is rightly denominated from Eber, the Hebrew, because he was the first that revived the memory and the work of Eber, that kept up the same language, and eminently propagated the same true religion. Or, 2. As others think, from his passing over the river Euphrates, from beyond which he came into Canaan.

These were confederate with Abram, i. e. had entered into a league for their mutual defence against common enemies. Whence we learn that it is not simply and universally unlawful to make a league with persons of a false religion.

14 And when Abram heard that ^uhis brother was taken captive, he ^{||}armed his ^{||}trained servants, ^{||}born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued ^xthem ^{*}unto Dan.

He armed his trained servants, whom he had disciplined and instructed both in religion and in the military art too, both which were necessary to make them good soldiers, that they might both fight with skill and courage, and also rely upon God, and engage his assistance; which was now especially necessary, when so small a party were to engage against so numerous an army. Dan is commonly thought to be a town then called Leshem, Josh. xix. 47, or Laiish, Judg. xviii. 7, and afterwards Dan; see Judg. xviii. 7, 29; so it is an anticipation. But it may be doubted whether this was a city; or if it were, whether it were not another town called by the same name, which was frequent in those parts. And some think this is not a town, but the very fountain of Dan, whence Jordan had its name.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and ^vsmote them, and pursued them unto ^vHobah, which ^{is} on the left hand of Damascus.

He divided himself, i. e. his forces into several parties, that coming upon them from several quarters he might strike them with greater terror, whilst they thought his army far more numerous than it was.

16 And he brought back ^xall the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

He brought back all the goods which the victorious kings had taken from the princes and people mentioned before in this chapter.

17 ¶ And the king of Sodom ^awent out to meet him ^bafter his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that ^{were} with him, at the valley of Shaveh, which ^{is} the ^cking's dale.

So called either upon this occasion of the meeting of divers kings here; or because king Melchizedek either had his habitation, or was much delighted with it, and conversant in it. See 2 Sam. xviii. 18.

18 And ^dMelchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he ^{was} ^ethe priest of ^fthe most high God.

Quest. Who was this? Ans. 1. Shem, as the Jews and many others think, who probably was alive at this time, and, no doubt, a great prince. But neither is it probable that Shem should be a king among the cursed race of Ham; nor will this agree with the apostle's description of Melchizedek, Heb. vii. 3, without father and mother, &c. Whereas Shem's parents, and the beginning and end of his days, are as expressly mentioned by Moses as any other. 2. A Canaanitish king, by the Divine Providence made both a king over men, and priest unto the true God, brought in here in this unusual manner, without any mention of his parents, birth, or death, for this end, that he might be an illustrious type of Christ. Of this matter see more upon Heb. vii. 3.

King of Salem, i. e. of Jerusalem, called elsewhere Jebus, and Salem, Psal. lxxvi. 2.

Bread and wine; not for sacrifice to God; for then he had brought forth beasts to be slain, which were the usual and best sacrifices: but partly to show the respect which he bore to Abram, and principally to refresh his weary and hungry army, according to the manner of those times. See Deut. xxiii. 3, 4; xxv. 18; Judg. viii. 5, 6, 15; 1 Sam. xvii. 17. He was the priest of the most high God: thus in succeeding ages the same persons were often both kings and priests, as the learned note out of Virgil and other authors. And this clause is here added, as the cause and reason, not for his bringing forth or offering bread and wine, as some would have it, (for that is ascribed to him as a king, as an act of royal munificence,) but of the following benediction and decimation. In those times God had his remnant scattered here and there even in the worst places and nations.

19 And he blessed him, and said, Blessed ^gbe Abram of the most high God, ^gpossessor of heaven and earth:

And, or therefore, (as the particle is oft taken, i. e. because he was a priest of God,) he (i. e. Melchizedek) blessed him, (Abram), which was one act of the priestly office. -See on Heb. vii. 6, 7. So it is a prayer for him, that God would confirm and increase the blessing which he had given him. Or, blessed is; so it is an acknowledgment of God's blessing conferred upon Abram both formerly, and in this late and great victory. Or, blessed shall be; so it is a prediction concerning his future and further blessedness, whereof this was only an earnest.

20 And ^hblessed be the most high God, ^hwhich hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes ⁱof all.

Not Melchizedek gave to Abram, as some Jews foolishly understand it; for Abram swears that he would not keep nor take any of the recovered goods of the kings of Sodom, or his brethren, ver. 23. But Abram gave to Melchizedek, as appears both from Heb. iv. 7, and from the nature of the thing; for the tithes confessedly belong to the priest, such as Melchizedek, and not Abram, is here described to be. All, not of all the recovered goods, but of all the spoils taken from the enemies.

21 And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the [†]persons, and take [†]the goods to thyself.

22 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I [†]have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, [†]the possessor of heaven and earth,

This was the ancient manner of swearing. See Exod. vi. 8; Numb. xiv. 30; Deut. xxxii. 40; Ezek. xx. 5, 6.

23 That ^mI will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet, and that I will not take any thing that ^{is} thine, lest thou shouldst say, I have made Abram rich:

That I will not take; Heb. If I shall take. Understand, God do so and so to me, which is expressed 1 Sam. xiv. 44. A defective manner of swearing used amongst the Hebrews, either to maintain the reverence of oaths, and the dread of perjury, seeing they were afraid so much as to mention the curse which they meant; or to show that they were willing to submit to any punishment which God should inflict upon them, without exception, if they violated their oaths. Even to a shoe-latchet, i. e. any thing, though never so small or mean, lest thou shouldst claim a share with God in the honour due to him, to whose blessing alone I do and I will owe my riches. Or, lest thou shouldst say, Abram is enriched with my spoils; and however he pretended kindness and charity, yet indeed it was his covetousness that put him upon this work.

24 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men

u ch. 13. 8.
|| Or.
|| led forth.
|| Or.
|| instructed.
w ch. 15. 3.
x 17. 12, 27.
Eccl. 2. 7.
x Deut. 34. 1.
Judg. 18. 29

v Is. 41. 2, 3.

x ver. 11, 12.

a Judg. 11. 34.
1 Sam. 18. 6.
b Heb. 7. 1.

c 2 Sam. 18. 18.

d Heb. 7. 1.
e Pa. 110. 4.
f Heb. 5. 6.
g Mic. 6. 8.
Acts 15. 17.
Ruth 3. 10.
2 Sam. 2. 5.

g ver. 22.
Mat. 11. 28.

h ch. 24. 27.

i Heb. 7. 4.

k Ex. 6. 8.
Dan. 12. 7.
Rev. 10. 5, 6.
1 ver. 19.
ch. 21. 33.

m So Esther 9. 15, 16.

n ver. 13. ^a which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; let them take their portion.

For as Abram had a right to spoils, so had they, whether they joined with him in the battle, as it is conceived they did, or only abode by the stuff, 1 Sam. xxx. 24; and therefore though he might and did give away his own right, he could not give away other men's.

CHAP. XV.

A comfortable promise to Abram, 1. His prayer for an heir, 2, 3. The promise of an answer to his prayer, 4, 5. Abram's faith, 6. He desires a sign, 7, 8. God gives him one, 9. He observes it, 10, 11. God appears to him when in a deep sleep, 12. A prediction of evil to befall his posterity, 13. Their deliverance, 14—16. The covenant concerning Canaan renewed, 17—21.

^a Dan. 10. 1. ^b Acts 10. 10, 11. ^c ch. 26. 24. ^d Dan. 10. 12. ^e Luke 1. 15, 30. ^f Ps. 3. 3. & 5. 12. & 64. 11. & 91. 4. & 119. 114. ^g Ps. 16. 5. & 88. 11. ^h Prov. 11. 18.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram ^a in a vision, saying, ^b Fear not, Abram: I am thy ^c shield, and thy exceeding ^d great reward.

God anciently revealed himself to men two ways; either, 1. When the man was asleep, in a dream; or, 2. In a vision, Numb. xii. 6, when he was awake: and this either, 1. When he was rapt into an ecstasy, wherein his senses are idle, but his mind is active and elevated to the contemplation and understanding of what God reveals. See Numb. xii. 6—8; xxiv. 4; Isa. i. 1; Acts x. 10, 11. Or, 2. When the thing was manifested by an external representation. So here, God seems to have appeared to Abram in the shape of a man, as he did Gen. xviii., as may be gathered from ver. 5, 10.

Fear not, Abram; neither the return of those enemies whom thou hast smitten and provoked, nor the envy of thy neighbours for this glorious victory, nor for thy own desolate condition. Seeing thou didst trust to my protection, I will be a shield or a protector to thee; and seeing thou didst so honourably and for my sake reject other rewards, taken by thyself, and offered by the king of Sodom, thou shalt be no loser by it; I will abundantly recompense all thy piety to me, and charity to thy afflicted kinsman Lot, and thy liberality towards others: I will bless thee with all sorts of good things, as well as defend thee from all evil; which two things make a man completely happy.

2 And Abram said, Lord God, what ^a wilt thou give me, ^b seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

What pleasure can I take in any other gifts, so long as thou dost withhold from me that great and promised gift of that blessed and blessing Seed, in the giving of whom thy honour and the world's happiness is so highly concerned? chap. xii. 3. Seeing I go childless; either, 1. I pass the time of my life, going on and growing in years, and hastening to my long home. Or, 2. I die, i. e. am about to die, or likely to die. Going is oftentimes put for dying, as 1 Chron. xvii. 11, compared with 2 Sam. vii. 12; Job x. 21; xiv. 20; Matt. xxvi. 24. What good will the world do me, if I have no heir to possess it? if God lose the glory of his truth in making good his promise, and I lose the comfort of my long hoped-for child, and that such a child the effect of a Divine promise, one out of whose loins he must come, in whom all nations shall be blessed?

The steward of my house; Heb. The son of the care, or government, or management of my house, i. e. he who manageth the affairs of my house. A usual Hebraism, as captives are called children of captivity, Ezra iv. 1, and afflicted persons, children of affliction, Prov. xxxi. 5. Others read the verse thus, And the steward of my house, this Eliezer of Damascus, understand, shall be my heir; which words may easily be supplied out of the following verse. And such supplements of a word or short sentence out of a member or verse either foregoing or following, are frequent in Scripture, as Numb. xxiv. 22; Zech. xiv. 18; Neh. v. 2; Hab. ii. 3; Eph. ii. 1. Damascus may be the name either of a man, or of a place so called.

3 And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, ^a one born in ^b my house is mine heir.

Of such see Gen. xiv. 14; Eccl. ii. 7. And these are opposed to them that are born of a man's body, Job xix. 17; Prov. xxxi. 2; Jer. ii. 14. Mine heir; either, 1. By nearness of relation, being, as some conceive, descended from Aram the eldest son of Shem. Or, 2. For a recompense of his fidelity: compare Prov. xvii. 2. Or, 3. because he only had the exact knowledge and absolute power of all his master's estate, Gen. xxiv. 10, and therefore could easily keep all after his master's death. All which reasons concurring might give occasion for this speech.

4 And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that ^a shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

i. e. Out of thy own body: see Gen. xxxv. 11; 2 Sam. vii. 12; 2 Chron. vi. 9.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and ^a tell the ^b stars, if thou be able to number them; and he said unto him, ^c So shall thy seed be.

Quest. Seeing the sun was not yet going down, ver. 12, how could he see the stars? Ans. 1. He might see them by representation in a vision, or by a Divine power strengthening his eyes to behold them. 2. It was not necessary he should then actually see them. He bids him make trial when he pleased, if he could number the stars which were now present to his mind, and would shortly be present and visible to his bodily eye. This he was not able to do; for though astronomers have presumed to give us the number of those stars which are distinctly visible to the eye, wherein yet they vary one from another, yet there are other stars innumerable, appear confusedly to the eye, and evidently by the help of glasses.

6 And he ^a believed in the LORD; and he ^b counted it to him for righteousness.

He believed in the Lord, i. e. he was fully persuaded that God was able to fulfil, and would certainly fulfil, the promise made to him concerning a child, and especially concerning the Messiah, who should come out of his loins by that child, and that both himself and all people should be justified and blessed in and through him.

He counted it to him, or reckoned, or imputed, as this word is translated, Rom. iv. 10, 22, for righteousness, i. e. for a righteous and worthy action, as Psal. cvi. 31; and further, in respect of this action and grace of faith, whereby he relied upon God for the promised Seed, and upon the promised Seed too, he pronounced him a just and righteous person notwithstanding his failings, which even this history acquaints us with, and graciously accepted him as such; which sense is easily gathered from St. Paul's explication and accommodation of this passage, Rom. iv. 9, 18, 22.

7 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that ^a brought thee out of ^b Ur of the Chaldees, ^c to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord God, ^a whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

He asks a sign, not out of distrust of God's promise, for he was strong in faith, Rom. iv. 20, but for further assurance and confirmation of it. And such an asking of a sign was not an unusual practice with good men, as Judg. vi. 37; 2 Kings xx. 8, not are they reprov'd for it; but on the contrary, Ahaz was commanded to ask a sign, and reprov'd for not asking it, Isa. vii.

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove, and a young pigeon.

Take and offer at my command, and for my service, an ^g 2 Sam. 7. 12. & 16. 11. ^h 2 Chron. 32. 21.

ⁱ h Ps. 147. 4. ^j 1 Jer. 33. 22. ^k ch. 22. 17. ^l Eccl. 32. 13. ^m Deut. 1. 10. & 10. 22. ⁿ 1 Chron. 27. 13. ^o Rom. 4. 18. ^p Heb. 11. 12. See ch. 13. 16.

^q 1 Rom. 4. 3. ^r 9. 22. ^s Gal. 3. 6. ^t Jam. 2. 23. ^u m Ps. 106. 31.

^v n ch. 12. 1. ^w o ch. 11. 28. ^x 31. ^y p Ps. 105. 42, 44. ^z Rom. 4. 13. ^{aa} q See ch. 24. 15. 14. Judg. 6. 17, 37. ^{ab} 1 Sam. 14. 9. ^{ac} 10. 2 Kings 20. 8. ^{ad} Luke 1. 18.

heifer of three years old, at which time it is perfect in stature and strength, and therefore fittest for God's service. This and the other creatures here following, and sacrifices, are the same which afterwards were prescribed in the Levitical law.

10 And he took unto him all these, and ^{r Jer. 34. 18,} divided them in the midst, and laid each ^{19,} piece one against another: but ^{s Lev. 1. 17.} the birds divided he not.

And he, i. e. Abram, who by Divine instinct and precept did all this which here follows, divided them in the midst, into two equal parts. This was done for two reasons. 1. To represent the torn and distracted condition in which his seed was to lie for a season. 2. To ratify God's covenant with Abram and his seed; for this was a rite used in making covenants, as appears both from Scripture, Jer. xxxiv. 18, and other authors.

Laid each piece one against another, partly to encourage hope, that God would in his time put those parts together, and unite those dry bones, (to which the Israelites are compared, Ezek. xxxvii.,) and clothe them with flesh; and partly that the persons entering into covenant might pass between those parts, and so testify their union and conjunction in one and the same sacrifice. The birds divided he not, either because there were two birds, and the one was laid against the other, which answered to the division of the larger creatures; or because they belonged not to the ceremony of the covenant, but were for the use of sacrifice, wherein they were to be offered whole, as afterwards was prescribed, Lev. i. 15, 17.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcasses, Abram drove them away.

The fowls came to devour them; whereby is signified, either, 1. The disturbance and distraction which good men are exposed to in the service of God from evil spirits and men; or rather, 2. The great peril of Abram's posterity, who were not only torn in pieces like these sacrifices, but even the remainder of them were likely to be devoured by the Egyptians, whose king is compared to an eagle, the chief of the birds of prey, Ezek. xvii.

Abram drove them away by the blast of his mouth, as the Hebrew word signifies; representing Abram's conquest over all his enemies by faith and prayer, whereby he engaged God to be the Preserver and Deliverer of his people.

12 And when the sun was going down, ^{t Gen. 2. 21,} a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, ^{Job 4. 13.} an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

A deep sleep fell upon Abram; partly natural, from his labour in killing and sacrificing those creatures; and partly sent upon him from God, to make way for the following representation. He seemed to be covered with a dreadful darkness, which was either, 1. A token of God's special presence: compare 1 Kings viii. 12. Or, 2. A signification of the distressed and doleful condition of Abram's seed; for darkness in Scripture is frequently mentioned as an emblem or sign of great misery, as Psal. lxxxviii. 6; cvii. 14, &c.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety ^{u Ex. 12. 40,} that thy seed shall be a stranger ^{Ps. 105. 23,} in a land that is not their's, and shall serve ^{Acto 7. 6.} them; and ^{w Ex. 1. 11,} they shall afflict them four ^{Ps. 105. 22.} hundred years;

In a land that is not theirs, i. e. in Canaan and Egypt; for though Canaan was theirs by promise, to be fulfilled in after-times, yet it was not theirs by actual donation and possession; but they were strangers in it, Gen. xvii. 8; Psal. cv. 11, 12.

Four hundred years, exactly four hundred and five years; but a small sum is commonly neglected in a great number, both in sacred and profane writers. There were four hundred and thirty years between the first promise, or between the renewing and confirming of the promise by the gift of Isaac, and Israel's going out of Egypt, or God's giving of the law, Exod. xii. 40; Gal. iii. 17; but part of this time Abraham with his son Isaac lived in much honour and comfort; but after Isaac grew up, the affliction here mentioned began with Isaac in Canaan, and continued to him and his posterity in Egypt till this time was expired.

14 And also that nation, whom they shall serve, ^{x Ex. 6. 6,} will I judge: and after- ^{Lev. 6. 22,} ward ^{y Ex. 12. 36,} shall they come out with great ^{Is. 105. 37,} substance.

That nation whom they shall serve, i. e. Egypt, the principal seat of their servitude, and the instrument of their sorest bondage, will I judge, i. e. punish, as that word is used, Psal. li. 4; Obad. 21, and elsewhere. With great substance; the accomplishment of this, see Exod. iii. 22; xi. 2; xii. 35, 37.

15 And ^{z Job 5. 26,} thou shalt go ^{a Acts 13. 26,} to thy fathers in peace; ^{b ch. 25. n.} and thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

To thy fathers, i. e. either, 1. Into heaven, where thy godly progenitors are gone; or, 2. Into the state of the dead, where all thy fathers are gone before thee. This may seem more probable, at least in this place, partly, because this or the like phrase is indifferently used concerning good and bad men; see Gen. xxv. 8; Psal. xlix. 19; partly, because this phrase is so expounded, Acts xiii. 36, He, i. e. David, was laid to his fathers, and (for that is) saw corruption; partly, because some of Abraham's fathers, and particularly Nahor, his grandfather, who lived and died an idolater, cannot with any warrant from Scripture be presumed to be gone to the place of blessedness in their souls. Free from those afflictions which shall come upon thy posterity after thy decease.

16 But ^{c Ex. 12. 40,} in the fourth generation they ^{d 1 Kings 21,} shall come hither again: for the iniquity ^{e Dan. 8. 23,} of the Amorites ^{Matt. 23. 32,} is not yet full. ^{f Thess. 2. 16.}

In the fourth generation; in the end of the four hundred years mentioned ver. 13, a generation being at that time reckoned at one hundred years, or thereabouts. Or, in the fourth generation numbered from their going into Egypt, or from their leaving Canaan; which may possibly be implied by these words, they shall come hither. So Caleb was the fourth from Judah, and Moses the fourth from Levi, and so doubtless many others.

The iniquity of the Amorites, i. e. of the people inhabiting Canaan. And the Amorites, one of those people, ver. 21, are here put for all the rest, as Gen. xlviii. 22; 1 Kings xxi. 26; 2 Kings xxi. 2; Amos ii. 10, either because they were the greatest and stoutest of all, Amos ii. 9, or because Abram dwelt among that people, Gen. xiii. 18; xiv. 13. All men's sins are kept by God as in a book of remembrance, not one of them is lost; and as God exactly observes the number and measure of men's sins, so he determines within himself how far and how long he will bear with sinful men or nations, and what shall be the period of his patience; and when that comes, their measure is full, and their destruction infallibly comes. See Jer. ii. 13; Matt. xxiii. 32; 1 Thess. ii. 16.

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and ^{g Heb. a lamp of fire,} a burning lamp ^{f Jer. 34. 18,} that ^{19,} passed between those pieces.

By which symbol God designed to represent, either, 1. The future state of Abram's seed; the smoking furnace signifying Israel's misery in the iron furnace of Egypt, as it is called, Jer. xi. 4; and the burning lamp noting their deliverance, or light shining out of darkness. Or, 2. His own presence; for God is called a consuming fire, Heb. xii. 29; and both smoke and fire are elsewhere mentioned as the signs and means of God's appearance. See Exod. iii. 2; xix. 9, 16, 18; xx. 18. And this sense seems to be favoured by the following words, it being the custom of persons entering into covenant to pass between such pieces as hath been said; and because God hath no body which could visibly do so, therefore he doth it in this type or shadow.

18 In the same day the LORD ^{g ch. 24. 7,} made a ^{h ch. 12. 7,} covenant with Abram, saying, ^{i Ex. 15. 15,} Unto thy ^{26. 4,} seed have I given this land, from the river ^{Ex. 23. 31,} of Egypt unto the great river, the river ^{Num. 34. 3,} Euphrates: ^{Deut. 1. 7,} ^{h. 11. 24, & 34. 4,}

Unto thy seed have I given this land, i. c. decreed and promised in due time to give, which makes it as sure as if it were actually given to them. Or, I will give; words of the past time being oft put for the future, especially in prophecies. The river of Egypt; not Nilus, which elsewhere is so called, but a less river, as is sufficiently implied, because this is opposed to the great river here following; but a river called Sihor, which divides Egypt from Canaan. See Numb. xxxiv. 5; Josh. xiii. 3; 1 Chron. xiii. 5. The accomplishment hereof, see 2 Sam. viii. 3; 1 Kings iv. 21; ix. 21.

19 The Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,

The Kenites are supposed the same with the Midianites, by comparing Exod. iii. 1, with Judg. i. 16. See also Numb. xxiv. 21; 1 Sam. xv. 6. The Kenizzites, thought to be the Idumeans, who sprung from Kenaz of Esau's race. But this seems not to agree with Deut. ii. 5, where God expressly saith to the Israelites concerning the Idumeans, I will give you none of their lands, &c. The Kadmonites, i. e. the eastern people, as the word signifies, elsewhere called the Hivites, Josh. ix. 1, who lived near the Mount Hermon, Josh. xi. 3, which was in the east part of Canaan. See Psal. lxxxix. 12.

20 And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims, 21 And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

CHAP. XVI.

Sarai is barren, 1. She gives Hagar, her servant, to Abram to be his wife, 2, 3. Hagar conceives and despises her mistress, 4. Sarai complains of it, 5. Abram leaves her to Sarai's disposal, who deals hardly with her: Hagar runs from her, 6. The angel of the Lord meets her, commands her to return and submit, 7—9; promising her a numerous seed, 10; names the child, 11; foretells his disposition, 12. God's looking on her in her affliction comforts her, 13, 14. Her son born, and named, 15. Abram's age.

a ch. 15. 2, 3. NOW Sarai Abram's wife *bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, ^b an Egyptian, whose name was ^c Hagar.

d ch. 30. 3. 2^d And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD ^e hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, ^f go into my maid; it may be that I may ^g obtain children by her. And Abram ^h hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

She reckons the children of her bond-woman (as Hagar was, Gal. iv. 22) would be accounted her children. See Gen. xxx. 3; Exod. xxi. 4; 2 Sam. xxi. 8; Esth. ii. 7.

Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai; supposing that God would accomplish his promise of a seed to come out of his loins by this way; and knowing that Sarai was not yet mentioned in the promise, as the person by whom he should have that seed; and not consulting with God, which he should have done.

1911. 3 And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram ⁿ had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife.

i. e. His concubine, or secondary wife. Polygamy, though it was forbidden by God's first institution, Gen. ii. 24, compared with Matt. xix. 5, and brought into the world by wicked Lamech, yet it was sometimes practised by the patriarchs, either by God's permission, who could rightly dispense with his own laws when and where he pleased; or by their mistake about the lawfulness of it. As for the present case, it is most evident this action was not the effect of an inordinate lust, but of an earnest desire of having children, and especially of obtaining the blessed and promised Seed.

4 ¶ And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was ^l despised in her eyes.

l 2 Sam. 6.
16. Prov. 30.
21, 23.

For barrenness in itself was a reproach, and especially to Sarai, who seemed to be a person rejected by God, as one whom he would not honour with being the mother of that Seed; and Hagar being suddenly made Sarai's partner in the privilege of Abram's bed, and superior to her in respect of that great blessing of child-bearing, it is no wonder if she grew insolent upon it, especially being advanced so highly from so low a condition.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong ^{be} upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: ^k the LORD judge between me and thee.

k ch. 31. 53.
1 Sam. 24.
12.

i. e. The injury done to me by Hagar, who thus wickedly requites my kindness to her, be upon thee. i. e. is to be imputed to thee; thou art the cause of it, because thou dost not maintain my reputation, and repress her arrogance. The Lord give forth a righteous sentence between us, and deal with each of us according to our guilt or innocence in this matter. Compare 1 Sam. xxiv. 12, 15.

6 ^l But Abram said unto Sarai, ^m Behold, thy maid ⁿ is in thy hand; do to her ^o as it pleaseth thee. And when Sarai ^p dealt hardly with her, ^q she fled from her face.

l Prov. 15. 1.
1 Pet. 3. 7.
m Job 2. 6.
Pa. 106. 41, 42.
Jer. 38. 5.
+ Heb. that which is good is

thine eyes. + Heb. afflicted her. n Ex. 2. 15. Thy maid is in thine hand, i. e. subject to thy power and authority, as the phrase is taken, Gen. xxiv. 10; xxxix. 4, 6, 8; Numb. xxxi. 49. For though she be my concubine, yet she is thy inferior; and therefore if she exalt herself above her measure, I give thee power to exercise thy authority over her. But whether this was not one of Abram's infirmities, to give up his second wife into the hands of the first, may well be questioned. Use whatsoever power God hath given thee over her; for we must not think that Abram gave her power of life and death over her, especially now when she was with child. Therefore here, as often elsewhere, the general words must be limited from the nature of the thing, and from other texts of Scripture, which forbid cruelty even to our servants. And when Sarai dealt hardly with her, either by imposing labours upon her above her strength, or by grievous stripes which she could not bear, she fled from her face, contrary to God's command, Eccl. x. 4, and to the laws of justice, because both her person and the fruit of her body were not her own, but Abram's right in possession.

7 ¶ And the angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, ^r by the fountain in the way to ^s Shur.

o ch. 25. 18.
p Ex. 15. 22.

The Son of God, who oft appeared in man's shape, before he took man's nature, is called an Angel or Messenger, because he was the Angel of the covenant, Mal. iii. 1, and was sent upon divers messages to men in the Old Testament, and at last was to be sent in the flesh as God's great Ambassador, or Messenger of peace and reconciliation. Shur, a place near Egypt, Gen. xxv. 18; 1 Sam. xv. 7; Exod. xv. 22, being her native country.

8 And he said, Hagar, Sarai's maid, whence camest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

By this title he admonisheth her, that though she was Abram's wife, yet she was Sarai's maid, to whom she owed subjection and service, from which she could not lawfully withdraw herself. Consider with thyself what thou art doing: what a sad exchange thou art making. Thou forsakest not only an excellent master and husband, but also me and my worship, which thou wilt not find in any other family, and so castest thyself out of the true church, and art running headlong into a place of all idolatry and impiety, to thy utter undoing; and this merely through pride and impatience.

9 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and ^asubmit thyself under her hands.

^g Tit. 2. 9.
^h 1 Pet. 2. 18.

10 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, 'I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

r ch. 17. 20.
& 21. 18. &
28. 12.

11 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, and shalt call his name Ishmael; because the LORD hath heard thy affliction.

s ch. 17. 19.
Matt. 1. 21.
Luke i. 13,
31.
^h That is,
God shall hear.

Hath heard thy cry in thy affliction.

12 And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him; and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

t ch. 21. 20.

He will be a wild man; Heb. A wild-ass man, i. e. a man like a wild ass, fierce and untamed, and unsettled in his habitation; or as that creature is, Job xxxix. 5, 8; Jer. ii. 24; Hos. viii. 9, living in deserts and mountains, warlike and violent, exercising himself continually in hunting beasts, and oppressing men. See Gen. xxi. 20. He will provoke and injure all that converse with him, and thereby will multiply his enemies; which is to be understood not only of him, but also of his posterity. And he shall dwell in the borders of the other sons and kindred of Abram and Isaac, who though they shall be vexed and annoyed with his neighbourhood, yet shall not be able to make him quit his habitation. See Gen. xxv. 18.

13 And she called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?

x ch. 31. 42.

Thou God seest me; thou hast been pleased to take notice and care of me, and graciously to manifest thyself unto me.

After him that seeth me, i. e. after that God whose eye is upon me for good. So she chides herself for her neglect of God, and of his providence, and that not only in her master's house, but even here in the wilderness, where her desolate and miserable condition should have made her look after and call upon God for help. Or rather, these are words of admiration: q. d. Have I also here, i. e. in this desolate wilderness, looked after him that seeth me, i. e. seen the face of my gracious God! That God should appear to me in my master's house, where he used to manifest himself, was not strange; but that I should have such a favour here, that God should not only look upon me, but admit me to look upon him, and visibly appear to me after I had run away from him, and from my godly master, this was more than I could hope or expect! Others thus, Have I here seen after him that sees me? i. e. after the vision of him that hath appeared to me? i. e. Do I yet see and live after I have seen God? She wonders at it, because it was then the common opinion that an appearance of God to any person was a forerunner of death. See Gen. xxxii. 30; Exod. xxxiii. 20; Judg. vi. 22; xiii. 22. And seeing is here put for living, one function of life for life itself, as Exod. xxiv. 11; Eccl. xi. 7, 8. But the word seeing put by itself, as here it is, is neither in those places, nor elsewhere, used for living. And had that been her meaning, she would have expressed it plainly, as they do in the places alleged, and not have used so dark and dubious a metaphor, nor would have said, after him that sees me, but rather, after I have seen him.

y ch. 24. 62.
& 25. 11.

^h That is,
the well of him that seeth me.

14 Wherefore the well was called Beer-lahai-roi; behold, it is between Kadesh and Bered.

This name may have respect, either, 1. To God, The well of him that liveth (i. e. of the true and living God) and seeth me, i. e. taketh care of me. Or, 2. To Hagar, The well of her that liveth, i. e. who though she gave up herself for dead and lost, yet now is likely to live, both in her person and in her posterity, and seeth, or did see, namely, God present with her.

15 And Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called his son's name, which Hagar bare, Ishmael.

^b ver. 11.

Hagar bare Abram a son, to wit, after her return and submission to her mistress, which is evident from the following history.

16 And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abram.

1910.

CHAP. XVII.

God renews his covenant with Abram, 1—4. His name in token hereof changed, 5. Kings shall be born of him, 6. The covenant established with his seed, 7. The promise of Canaan to him and his seed repeated, 8. Circumcision instituted, 9, 10. The part to be circumcised, 11. The time and persons, 12, 13. The punishment on neglecters of it, 14. Sarah's name changed, 15. A son by her promised, 16. Abraham's surprise, 17. His prayer for Ishmael, 18. The promise of a son by Sarah confirmed; his name, 19. Abraham's prayer for Ishmael answered, 20; but the covenant established in Isaac, 21. Abraham is circumcised; as is also Ishmael, and all his house, 23—27.

AND when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

a ch. 12. 1.
b ch. 28. 3.
& 35. 11.
Ex. 6. 3.
Deut. 10. 17.
c ch. 5. 22.
& 48. 15.
1 Kings 2. 4.
& 8. 25.
2 Kings 20. 3.
Job 1. 1.
Matt. 5. 48.

^h Or, upright, or, sincere. d ch. 6. 9. Deut. 18. 13. Job 1. 1. Matt. 5. 48.

I am the Almighty God, who can do all that I have promised, or shall promise to thee, and whatsoever pleaseth me; and therefore do thou firmly believe all my words. Walk before me as becomes one in the presence of thy Lord, and Judge, and Rewarder, being careful to please and obey me in all things, and depending upon me for thy well-doing and well-being. See the same phrase, Gen. xlviii. 15; 1 Kings viii. 29; Psal. cxvi. 9. And be thou perfect, i. e. sincere, universal, and constant in thy belief of my promises, and obedience to my commands. See Gen. vi. 9.

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

e ch. 12. 2.
& 13. 16. &
22. 17.

I am come to renew, establish, and enlarge that covenant which I formerly made with thee.

3 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

f ver. 17.

Abram fell on his face, partly in self-abasement, and a humble sense of his own undeservedness of such favours; and partly in reverence and worship to God, and a thankful acknowledgment of his marvellous kindness. Compare Lev. ix. 24; Ezek. xliii. 3.

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.

g Rom. 4.
11. 12, 16.
Gal. 3. 29.
+ Heb. multitude of nations.

Both literally, or after the flesh, of the Israelites, Ishmaelites, Edomites, &c., and spiritually, of all believers of all nations, to whom Abram hath in some sort the place of a father, Rom. iv. 12, 17. Not only as he was the great example and teacher of that faith by which they are all saved, (as the instructors of others are called their fathers, both in Scripture, as Gen. iv. 20, 21, and in profane authors,) but as he was made by God the head of the covenant, by or through whom the covenant right was conveyed to all his natural seed, and afterwards to the spiritual seed, all Gentile believers.

5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

h Neh. 9. 7.
i That is,
Father of a great multitude.
i Rom. 4. 17.

Abraham, i. e. the father of a multitude; Iam in the Hebrew being put for Hamon, which signifies a multitude, by a figure called apocope, which is usual in proper names.

k ch. 35. 11.
1 ver. 15.
cl. 35. 11.
Matt. 1. 6.
&c.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.

So did the kings of Israel and Judah, of Edom, of the Saracens, and the Messias, who is King of kings, and Lord of lords.

m Gal. 3. 17.

7 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

n ch. 28. 24.
& 28. 13.
Heb. 11. 16.
o Rom. 9. 8.

i. e. Whatsoever I am or have, all that shall be thine, and shall be employed for thy protection, consolation, and salvation. This phrase contains in it the confluence of all blessings, temporal, spiritual, and eternal. See Lev. xxvi. 12; Psal. xxxiii. 12; cxliiv. 15; Jer. xxxi. 33.

p ch. 12. 7.
& 13. 15.
Pa. 105. 9.
11.
+ Heb. of thy sojournings.
q ch. 24. 4.
& 28. 4.
r Ex. 6. 7.
Lev. 26. 12. Deut. 4. 37. & 14. 2. & 28. 18. & 29. 13.

8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

And to thy seed; unto thee, not in thy own person, but in thy seed. See Gen. xiii. 15, 17.

For an everlasting possession; upon condition of their obedience to God, as is oft expressed; wherein seeing they so notoriously failed, it is no wonder if they possessed it but a little while, as the prophet complains, Isaiah lxiii. 18.

9 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

The agreement is mutual: my part was expressed before; now follows thy part, and the condition to which my promise and blessing is annexed.

10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised.

Acts 7. 8.

Circumcision is here called the covenant by a usual metonymy, because it is the condition, sign, and seal of the covenant, the pledge of God's promise and man's duty. And upon the same grounds the cup, i. e. the wine, is called the new testament in Christ's blood, Luke xxii. 20; or, which is all one, Christ's blood in the new testament, Matt. xxvi. 28.

It is evident that women as well as men were comprehended in this covenant, from Gen. xxxiv. 14; Exod. xii. 3, 4; Joel ii. 15, 16. Yet circumcision is given only to the males, partly, because it could not, at least not conveniently, be administered to females; partly, because man is the principal cause of the propagation of children, and consequently of the propagation of that original corruption which cleaves to them; partly, to signify that all persons begotten by man should be polluted by sin, though not all conceived by a woman, as Christ was; and partly, because man is the head of the woman, and of the family, upon whom all their concerns are devolved, and from whom the distinction of families and people comes.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

t Acts 7. 8.
Rom. 4. 11.

The flesh of your foreskin, i. e. by a usual hypallage, the foreskin of your flesh; and the word flesh is here put for the genital part, as it is Lev. xv. 2, 19; Ezek. xvi. 26; xxiii. 20, and elsewhere. This part God singled out for this ordinance, because it is and was a great instrument both in the commission of actual sins, and in the propagation of original sin; and therefore it was very proper to apply to it the seal of God's gracious covenant for the remission of sins past, and the extirpation of sin for the future.

It shall be a token of the covenant, i. e. a sign, evidence, and assurance, both of the blessing promised by that God who appointed this ordinance, and of man's obligation to the duties required, which is signified by his acceptance of and submission to this ordinance. And here we have the nature and definition of a sacrament, viz. that it is a figure or token of God's covenant.

12 And the that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

+ Heb. a son of eight days.
u Lev. 12. 3.
Luke 2. 21.
John 7. 22.
Phil. 3. 5.

Eight days; not before that time, because of the child's weakness and imperfection, and impurity too, Exod. xxii. 30; Lev. xii. 3, for which reason also beasts were not to be offered to God before the eighth day, Exod. xxii. 30. Every man-child in your generations, successively, until the Messias come, who shall circumcise your hearts, and change this ordinance for another.

Bought with money of any stranger: these were of two sorts. 1. Children, who being entirely his possession, and having not understanding to discern, nor will to choose or refuse, were to be circumcised. 2. Grown persons, who were not to be compelled to be circumcised, but if they refused it, were not to be permitted to dwell in his family, lest they should infect others, but were to be sold to strangers, as the Hebrew doctors teach. But as for Abraham's servants here, they were thoroughly instructed in religion, Gen. xviii. 19, and doubtless did willingly embrace it, and submit to this sacrament.

13 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

So it was, and is properly in regard of the thing signified to all true believers; and for the sign, it is so called because it was to endure through all generations till the coming of the Messias; the word olam, here and elsewhere rendered everlasting, or for ever, being oft used to express not only simple eternity, but any long continuance, for many ages, yea, sometimes for a man's life. See Exod. xxi. 6; Deut. xv. 17; 1 Kings ix. 3.

14 And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

v Ex. 4. 24.

And the uncircumcised man-child; or rather, and as for the uncircumcised man-child. So the nominative is put absolutely, as is frequent in the Hebrew tongue. Whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, or, who shall not circumcise the flesh of his foreskin; for the Hebrew verb may be rendered actively, which seems best here; because the punishment seems more justly to belong to the parent, who was guilty of this neglect; than to the child, who was not capable of this precept, and therefore not guilty of the violation of it. And this may further appear from Exod. iv. 24, 25, where God seeks to kill, not the child, but the father, Moses, for this sin. And the flesh of the child's foreskin is rightly called the flesh of his, i. e. the parent's, foreskin, because the child is a part and the possession of his parent. So that this threatening concerns only grown persons, and of them only such as shall wilfully and unnecessarily neglect this duty; for otherwise it was neglected by the Israelites for forty years together in the wilderness, Josh. v. 7, without any token of God's displeasure for it. That soul shall be cut off from his people. This phrase denotes either, 1. An exclusion from fellowship with God's people, and from all the promises, privileges, and blessings belonging to them, either in this life or that to come. Or rather, 2. An untimely and violent death, as may be gathered from Exod. xxxi. 14, to be inflicted by the magistrate, to whom God committed the execution of this as well as other laws; and in case of his neglect and default, or the secrecy of the fact, by the extraordinary hand of God, who sometimes ascribes this act to himself, as Lev. xvii. 10; xx. 6. He hath broken my covenant, that sacred bond which tied him and me together; and by his neglect and contempt of the condition required on his part, he hath forfeited the blessing promised on my part.

15 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, As for

¹ That is, Princess. Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but || Sarah shall her name be.

Sarai signifies my lady, or my princess, which confines her dominion to one family; but Sarah signifies either a lady or princess, simply and absolutely without restriction, or the princess of a multitude, the Hebrew letter he being taken out of Hamon, and added to her name, as it was to Abram's name.

^{x ch. 18. 10.} ^{+ Heb. she shall become nations.} ^{γ ch. 35. 11.} ^{Gal. 4. 31.} ^{1 Pet. 2. 6.} 16 And I will bless her, * and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and † she shall be a mother ^γ of nations; kings of people shall be of her.

^{z ch. 18. 12.} ^{& 21. 6.} 17 Then Abraham fell upon his face, * and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

He laughed, through admiration and holy rejoicing at so great a blessing, not through unbelief, as Sarah did, Gen. xviii. 12, 13, as appears from Rom. iv. 19, 20. And though the outward act was the same in both, yet God discerned their differing dispositions and intentions therein.

18 And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee!

Grant, O Lord, that the giving of one son may not be joined with the taking away of another; that Ishmael may faithfully serve thee, and may have a share in thy favour and gracious covenant. For this seems to be the meaning of this phrase of living before God, or in God's presence, by comparing a parallel phrase, of walking before God, ver. 1, and elsewhere, and an opposite phrase, from thy face shall I be hid, Gen. iv. 14.

^{a ch. 18. 10.} ^{& 21. 2.} ^{Gal. 4. 28.} 19 And God said, * Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

Isaac signifies laughter, not from Sarah's laughter, which as yet had not happened, but from Abraham's past laughter, ver. 17, and future joy in his son.

^{b ch. 16. 10.} ^{c ch. 25. 12.} ^{16.} ^{d ch. 21. 18.} 20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and ^b will multiply him exceedingly; ^c twelve princes shall he beget, ^d and I will make him a great nation.

Have heard thee, to wit, in part, or so far as is here expressed; and probably, as to the chief blessing of the covenant, to wit, the forgiveness of his sins, and eternal life, as the Hebrew doctors and some others collect from Gen. xxv. 17, and from other considerations.

^{e ch. 21. 2.} 21 But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, * which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

The covenant of the promised Seed to come out of his loins, and of life and salvation to accrue to himself and to his posterity by virtue of that Seed; in comparison whereof God speaks slightly of all the temporal blessings conferred upon Ishmael, though in themselves they were great and glorious. By which it may sufficiently appear that Abraham's faith, whereby he is said to be justified, Rom. iv., had a further reach in it than to his own immediate child, even to the Messias, whose day therefore Abraham is said to have seen, John viii. 56.

22 And he left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

To heaven in a visible manner, as it seems he conversed with him in some visible shape. Compare Gen. xxxv. 13; Judg. xiii. 20.

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house; and circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the selfsame day, as God had said unto him.

Circumcised the flesh of their foreskin; partly by his own hand, and partly by the help of others, whom he by Divine instinct called to and directed in that work; in the selfsame day, in which God appeared to him and gave the command. So he made haste and delayed not to execute God's command. And his servants also yielded a ready and cheerful obedience to this severe and painful precept, being moved thereunto by Abraham's example and sovereign authority, by God's powerful presence some way or other manifested to them, and by the prospect and hope of God's blessing to accompany and follow his own ordinance.

^{1898.} 24 And Abraham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

26 In the selfsame day was Abraham circumcised, and Ishmael his son.

27 And 'all the men of his house, born ^{f ch. 18. 19.} in the house, and bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised with him.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Lord appears to Abraham, 1. He sees three men, 2; invites them, 3—5. They accept it, 5. He prepares for them a calf, &c.; they eat, 6—8. The promise of a son by Sarah renewed; the time appointed, 9, 10. Sarah, being old, laughs, 11, 12. God reproves her, 13; and confirms the promise, 14. Her denial, and God's reply, 15. The men go towards Sodom, 16. God resolves to show Abraham his purpose to destroy Sodom, 17. The reason of it, 18. God's testimony of him, 19. God reveals his purpose to him, 20—22. Abraham's intercession for Sodom oft repeated, and God's condescension, 23—32.

AND the LORD appeared unto him in the ^{1898.} ^{a ch. 13. 18.} ^{& 14. 13.} plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day;

Waiting for strangers which might pass that way; for whom no public places being provided in those times and places, virtuous persons used to entertain them in their houses. See Heb. xiii. 2. In the heat of the day, the time when travellers, especially in those hot contries, used to divert and refresh themselves.

2 ^{b Heb. 13. 2.} ^{c ch. 19. 1.} ^{1 Pet. 4. 9.} And he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: * and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

Three men, as they seemed to be, though indeed they were angels in men's shape. Bowed himself toward the ground; a respect usually paid to persons of quality, such as these seemed to be.

3 And said, My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant:

He directeth his speech to one, who, by the majesty of his countenance, and the respect which the other two showed him, seemed to be the chief of them.

4 Let ^{d ch. 19. 2.} ^{& 43. 24.} a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:

A practice usual in those parts, Gen. xix. 2; xxiv. 32; xliii. 24; John xiii. 4, 5; 1 Tim. v. 10, because they used to travel either bare-footed, or only with sandals to cover and secure the bottom of their feet.

5 And * I will fetch a morsel of bread, and † comfort ye your hearts; after that

^{e Judg. 6. 18.} ^{& 13. 15.} ^{f Heb. stay.} ^{g Judg. 19. 5.} ^{h Ps. 104. 15.}

g ch. 19. 8. & 33. 10. + Heb. you have passed. ye shall pass on : * for therefore † are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.

Therefore are ye come to your servant; not that he saith or thought that this was their design, but an effect of Divine Providence. The meaning is, Therefore hath God directed you this way, that I might have an occasion of performing my duty to you, which I cheerfully embrace.

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, † Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

Three measures, containing each the third part of an ephah. See Exod. xvi. 36. Upon the hearth; upon the coals, or in the warm cinders, or in an oven. He had doubtless other bread ready, but he would have new bread for them, which he thought most grateful.

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetcht a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hastened to dress it.

8 And ^h he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat.

The calf, to wit, the choicest parts of the calf. He stood by them, to wait upon them, as the word standing is used, Neh. xii. 44; Jer. lii. 12. They did eat; either seemingly, as the Scripture oft speaks of things according to appearance; or really, they received the meat into the bodies which they assumed, where it was consumed by a Divine power.

9 ¶ And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, ⁱ in the tent.

They said unto him, i. e. one of them, in the name of all said; which he did not for his own satisfaction, for he who knew her name knew also where she was, but to give occasion for the following discourse. In the tent; in her tent; for men and women had then their several tents or apartments.

10 And he said, I ^k will certainly return unto thee ^l according to the time of life; and, lo, ^m Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent door, which was behind him.

I will certainly return unto thee, not in a visible shape, but with my powerful and effectual presence, to fulfil my promise. According to the time of life: this time may respect, either, 1. Abraham and Sarah, in the time of life, i. e. when you shall be both alive and in health. But if it belonged to them, it might seem better to understand it thus; in the time when God shall restore life, i. e. vigour and activity to you; for till then both Abraham's body and Sarah's womb are expressly said to be dead, Rom. iv. 19, to which deadness this life may be opposite; and the time of restoring this lost power of generation may well be called a time of life, it being a kind of life from the dead, and an empowering of him for a vital action from which he was before disabled, and for the conveying of life to a child, and perpetuating his own life in him. Or, 2. To the child, according to the time of life, i. e. in the time which is usual for the conception, quickening, and bringing forth of a living child. Which interpretation receiveth some countenance from 2 Kings iv. 16, where we have the same phrase. Or, 3. To the year, according to the time, or this time of life, or living time, i. e. when this time or season of the year shall revive, i. e. return or be restored; as cities and buildings are said to be revived, when they are repaired or rebuilt, as 1 Chron. xi. 8; Neh. iv. 2. And this season might more properly be said to revive, and be called the time of life, because it may be gathered from the heat, ver. 1, and their refreshing themselves under the shadow of a tree, that it was the spring time, when herbs and plants and trees, which seem to be dead in the winter, recover and show forth their life and vigour: and so the sense may be this, according to this time, which is a time of life, or reviving, wherein as the beauty and fruits of the earth will be renewed and revived, so thou and Sarah shall be revived, or receive, as it were, a new life in the son that shall be born to you. This sense seems more probable than either of the former, because he speaks of a certain set or appointed time, ver. 14; Rom. ix. 9; Gen. xxi. 2, and that time was about a year after this, as may appear by comparing Gen. xvii. 24, and xxi. 5.

In the tent door which was behind him, i. e. at the back of the angel that spoke with him; which is here added, to show that he knew her laughter, not by the sight of his eyes, but by his all-seeing knowledge.

11 Now ⁿ Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah ^o after the manner of women.

As to those monthly effluvia peculiar to her sex, which are necessary to conception, compare Gen xxxi. 35.

12 Therefore Sarah ^p laughed within herself, saying, ^q After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my ^r lord being old also?

Sarah laughed within herself; not from joy and admiration, but from distrust and contempt, as if it were incredible. Heb. In her heart, i. e. she secretly derided it, though none but herself, as she thought, knew it. Shall I have pleasure? not so much in the conception, as in the education and fruition of a child.

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 ^s Is any thing too hard for the LORD? ^t At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

Is any thing too hard for the Lord? Heb. Hid from God? So the sense is, Though she laughed only in her heart, it is not unknown to me. Or rather, too wonderful for God to effect? which best suits with the following words.

15 Then Sarah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

Sarah denied, from the sense of guilt, and the discovery of her shame, and the expectation of a sharp rebuke, both from this person, and from her husband.

16 ¶ And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them ^u to bring them on the way.

A civility usual then and afterwards. See Acts xx. 38; xxi. 5; Rom. xv. 24; 1 Cor. xvi. 11.

17 And the LORD said, ^v Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

q. d. I will not, cannot hide it; it is against the laws of friendship to conceal my secrets from him. The interrogation here is in effect a negation, as elsewhere. Compare 2 Sam. vii. 5, with 1 Chron. xvii. 4; and Matt. vii. 16, with Luke vi. 43. See also Amos iii. 7.

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be ^x blessed in him?

q. d. Seeing I have done greater things for him, how can I deny him the less? Compare the argument, Rom. viii. 32. God's ways are not like men's ways. Former favours to men are arguments why they should do no more, but to God they are motives for the adding of new ones.

19 For I know him, ^y that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that n ch. 17. 17. Rom. 4. 19. Heb. 11. 11, 12, 19. o ch. 31. 35.

p ch. 17. 17. q Luke 1. 12.

r 1 Pet. 3. 6.

s Jer. 32. 17.

t Zech. 8. 5.

u Matt. 3. 9.

& 10. 26.

v Luke 1. 37.

w ch. 17. 21.

x ver. 10.

y 2 Kings 4. 16.

z Jer. 32. 17.

aa Zech. 8. 5.

ab Matt. 3. 9.

ac & 10. 26.

ad Luke 1. 37.

ae ch. 17. 21.

af ver. 10.

ag 2 Kings 4. 16.

ah Jer. 32. 17.

ai Zech. 8. 5.

aj Matt. 3. 9.

ak & 10. 26.

al Luke 1. 37.

am ch. 17. 21.

an ver. 10.

ao 2 Kings 4. 16.

ap Jer. 32. 17.

aq Zech. 8. 5.

ar Matt. 3. 9.

as & 10. 26.

at Luke 1. 37.

au ch. 17. 21.

av ver. 10.

aw 2 Kings 4. 16.

ax Jer. 32. 17.

ay Zech. 8. 5.

az Matt. 3. 9.

ba & 10. 26.

bb Luke 1. 37.

bc ch. 17. 21.

bd ver. 10.

be 2 Kings 4. 16.

bf Jer. 32. 17.

bg Zech. 8. 5.

bh Matt. 3. 9.

bi & 10. 26.

bj Luke 1. 37.

bk ch. 17. 21.

bl ver. 10.

bm 2 Kings 4. 16.

bn Jer. 32. 17.

bo Zech. 8. 5.

bp Matt. 3. 9.

the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

For I know him; I know him to be such a one as I am now describing; or I know this concerning him which now follows. Others, I love him, and therefore cannot conceal this from him. Words of knowledge being oft put for love, as Jer. i. 5; xxiv. 5; Hos. xiii. 5; Amos iii. 2. That he will command, or instruct, as the word is used, Lev. xiv. 5; Deut. xx. 18; xxvii. 4. It will not be in vain that I tell him this, and give him occasion to pray and to taste my goodness in answering prayers, because he will not smother these things in his own breast, but manifest them to others, and teach them how good God is, who so readily complies with the desires and prayers of men, and how terrible he is to incorrigible sinners, and how evil and bitter a thing it is to sin against God. And so I shall get the end I aim at in all my works, which is, that they may be known for the good of others; that they may learn by such examples. His children and his household, who will live when he is dead. He will so diligently imprint these things in their minds, that they shall never forget them. They shall keep the way of the Lord, i. e. observe and walk in the way of God's precepts: q. d. He shall not lose his design or labour; for what he teacheth they shall learn and practise. See Psal. li. 15, &c. To do justice and judgment, i. e. to do all things that are good, and right, and just, both to God and men: compare Psal. cxix. 121. That Abraham and his posterity, keeping the conditions of the covenant required on their part, God may without any blemish to his honour or justice give all those good things which he hath promised to them.

20 And the LORD said, Because ^a the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous;

Sins are said to cry when they are gross, and manifest, and impudent, and such as highly provoke God to anger. He names only these two cities, as being the most eminent in state, and exemplary in wickedness; but under them he includes the rest, as appears by the story.

21 ^a I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, ^b I will know.

i. e. I will inquire into the truth of the thing. God here speaks after the manner of men, and for the example and instruction of judges to search into causes ere they pass sentence. Whether they have done altogether; Heb. Whether they have made a consummation or accomplishment; i. e. whether they have filled up the measure of their sins. Compare Gen. xv. 16; Matt. xxiii. 32; James i. 15.

22 And the men turned their faces from thence, ^c and went toward Sodom: but Abraham ^d stood yet before the LORD.

And the men, i. e. two of them; for the third staid with Abraham, as it here follows. Before the Lord, the third of these persons, whom now he perceived to be the Lord himself, who had assumed a human shape.

23 ¶ And Abraham ^e drew near, and said, ^f Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

i. e. He approached unto God to inquire of him, and to pray unto him; for so the phrase of drawing near to God is used, 1 Sam. xiv. 36; Psal. lxxiii. 28; Isa. xlix. 13; Heb. x. 22.

24 ^g Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

Within the city, i. e. in the cities concerned, as appears by ver. 20, and xix. 25; the singular number for the plural, as is frequent, as Gen. iii. 22; 1 Chron. x. 1, compared with 1 Sam. xxxi. 1, and oft elsewhere. Or the city Sodom alone is mentioned, but the rest are comprehended under it, either because of its eminency, or because they were subject or subordinate to it, as may seem probable from the history, Gen. xiv.

25 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked: and ^h that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: ⁱ Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

^h Job 8. 20.
ⁱ Job 8. 3. & 34. 17.
ⁱ Job 8. 3. & 34. 17.
ⁱ Job 8. 3. & 34. 17.
ⁱ Job 8. 3. & 34. 17.
ⁱ Job 8. 3. & 34. 17.

Now he clearly perceiveth that this person was no less than the Creator, Governor, and Judge of the world, even the second person in the blessed Trinity, to whom that title and work is ascribed, as John v. 22, 27; Acts x. 42; xvii. 31. He speaks not this as if it were simply unjust for God to involve the righteous in the same temporal destruction with the wicked; for he knew very well, and by his own experience, that there was not a just man upon earth, that did good and sinned not, Eccl. vii. 20, and therefore no such just man who did not for his own sin deserve that death and destruction which is the proper wayes of sin, Rom. vi. 23. But he speaks not here of strict and rigorous justice, but of that moderate and equitable way which God is pleased to use with the sons of men, and of that right to temporal deliverances which by virtue of God's gracious covenant and promise did accrue to pious and virtuous persons, especially in the times of the Old Testament, when temporal promises were more expressly and particularly made to good men.

26 And the LORD said, ^k If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

^k Jer. 5. 1.
Ezek. 22. 30.

27 And Abraham answered and said, ^l Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am ^m but dust and ashes:

^l Luke 18. 1.
^m ch. 3. 19.
Job 4. 19.
Eccles. 12. 7.
1 Cor. 15. 47, 48.
2 Cor. 5. 1.

In regard of the composition of my body, which was taken out of the dust, and shall return into it again. See Gen. iii. 19; Job iv. 19; Eccl. xii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 47, 48.

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

Lack of five, Heb. for five, or because of five, to wit, which are lacking or wanting. The same supplement we have also Psal. cix. 24; Lam. iv. 9.

29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he said, I will not do it for forty's sake.

30 And he said ⁿ unto him, Oh let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak: Peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And he said, I will not do it, if I find thirty there.

31 And he said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

32 And he said, ^o Oh let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there. ^p And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

ⁿ Judg. 6. 39.

^o James 5. 16.

Abraham in modesty could proceed no further; and being a good man himself, he had a charitable opinion of others, and thought there certainly were so many good men in all those cities, especially including Lot and his family. No doubt Abraham remembered Lot in his prayers; but that large and generous soul could not content himself with Lot's preservation, but aims at the saving of the whole cities, which when he saw was doubtful and unlikely, he prayed for his deliverance out of that common destruction, as may be gathered from Gen. xix. 29.

33 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: and Abraham returned unto his place.

CHAP. XIX.

Two angels come to Sodom, 1. Lot invites them in; they at first refuse, 2. They enter; he entertains them, and they eat, 3. The men of Sodom demand to know them, 4, 5. Lot dissuades them, 6, 7; offers his daughters; urges reason, 8. They are obstinate; threaten, and press to break the door, 9. The angels pull Lot in, and shut to the door, 10; and smite the men with blindness, 11. Advise Lot to depart with his kindred, 12. The reason, 13. Lot speaks to his sons-in-law; they deride him, 14. The angels lay hold on Lot, his wife, and two daughters, and carry them out, 16; command them not to look back, 17. Lot requests to stay in Zoar; it is granted, with a command to hasten, because till they are gone the Lord can do nothing, 18—23. God rains brimstone and fire upon Sodom, 24, 25. Lot's wife looking back becomes a pillar of salt, 26. Abraham looks towards Sodom, 27, 28. God kind to Lot for Abraham's sake, 29. Lot and his two daughters remove to the mountain, 30. Lot's daughters contrive for an issue, 31, 32. They make their father drunk, lie with him, 33—35, and are with child, 36. Moab and Ben-ammi, the two sons, born thereby, 37, 38.

a ch. 18. 22. AND there ^a came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and ^b Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

And there came two angels, even those two which departed from Abraham, chap. xviii. 22, and now were come to Lot, the third yet staying and communing with Abraham. Angels they truly were, though they be called men, chap. xviii.

At even of the same day on which they departed from Abraham. In the gate of Sodom, where he sat either to observe the administration or corruption of justice there; for the seats of judicature were in the gates: or rather to wait for strangers, to whom he might exercise kindness and hospitality.

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, ^c turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and ^d wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, ^e Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

Go on your ways, and so this will be no hinderance to your occasions. We will abide in the street all night: this was no untruth, but really intended by them in the present state of things, and upon supposition that Lot should press them no further; but they also intended, if Lot was earnest with them, to comply with him. The first denial was but decent, and an act of civility, and in them it was a design to discover Lot's piety and hospitality, and to manifest the great difference between him and the barbarous Sodomites, and the reason and justice of Lot's deliverance, and their destruction.

3 And he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; ^f and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

He did bake unleavened bread, because that was sooner prepared, that so they might eat it, and after that go to bed in due time.

4 ¶ But before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, all the people from every quarter:

Before they lay down to sleep, of which this word is used, Gen. xxviii. 13; Lev. xiv. 47; xxvi. 6. All the people from every quarter; some to exercise villany, and some to please themselves with the contemplation of it, and some out of curiosity, &c. This is added to show how universally corrupt they were, and that there were not ten righteous men there.

5 ^g And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? ^h bring them out unto us, that we ⁱ may know them.

Either know who they are; or rather abuse them, as Lot's answer explains it, and so that word is used, Gen. iv. 1; Numb. xxxi. 17; Judg. xix. 22. And for the sin here committed, see Lev. xviii. 22; xx. 13; Rom. i. 26, 27; 1 Cor. vi. 9; Jude 7. They openly and impudently profess their wicked intention, for which they are branded, Isa. iii. 9; and this intention of theirs is the more probable, because of the great beauty which it is likely was in those bodies which the angels assumed, whereby their lust was more inflamed.

6 And ^k Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him,

7 And said, I pray you, brethren, do not so wickedly.

They were brethren by community of nature and habitation; see Gen. ix. 5; xxix. 4; Lev. xix. 17; and so he calls them, if possibly he might sweeten and restrain them.

8 ^l Behold now, I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; ^m for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

Which have not known man, to wit, carnally. See Gen. xxiv. 16; Numb. xxxi. 18; Judg. xi. 39. Do ye to them as is good in your eyes, whatsoever your purpose or pleasure is. See the same phrase Gen. xx. 15; xli. 37; Numb. xxiv. 1, &c. A most imprudent and sinful motion, whereby he yielded to one sin to prevent another, contrary to Rom. iii. 8, and exposed his daughters' chastity, which he was obliged to preserve, and which indeed he had no power to expose, especially seeing they were betrothed to other men, ver. 14. But it is some extenuation of his sin that it proceeded from his great charity and kindness to strangers, and that he was at this time under a great perturbation and discomposure of mind. For therefore, that they might be preserved from such outrages. This was the design of the thing, though not of those persons. See the note on Gen. xviii. 5. Under the shadow of my roof, i. e. under the protection of my house. Shadow is oft put for protection or defence, as Judg. ix. 15; Psal. xxxvi. 7; Jer. xlviii. 45.

9 And they said, Stand back. And they said again, This one fellow ⁿ came in to sojourn, ^o and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee, than with them. And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

Stand back, or, go further off, i. e. out of our way; stand not between us and the door; or, come hither, that so they might seize him, and proceed in the designed wickedness. This one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: q. d. One man, and he too but a stranger, presumeth to oppose the whole society of the native citizens. Heb. In judging he will judge. This busybody, if not restrained in time, will take authority to himself to censure, reprove, and condemn us from time to time.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men ^p that were at the door of the house with blindness, both small and great: so that they wearied themselves to find the door.

They smote the men, Heb. with blindness, i. e. with a blindness both of body and mind. It was not a total blindness, as if they quite lost the use of their eyes, for they saw the house, though not the door, but it was a great dimness and confusion of their sight, and a disturbance in their common sense, by which they were made unable to dish Judg. 19.

g Is. 3. 9.

22.

i ch. 4. 1.

Rom. 1. 24.

27. Jude 7.

k Judg. 19.

23.

l See Judg.

19. 24.

m See ch.

18. 5.

n 2 Pet. 2. 1.

o Ex. 2. 14.

p Wisd. 19.

17.

See 2 Kings

6. 18.

Acts 13. 11.

tinguish between differing persons or places; as it was also with the Syrians, 2 Kings vi. 18; as it is in some measure with some drunkards, who, though their eyes be open, cannot distinguish between things that differ. And this was very easy for angels to do by a small alteration either in their sight, or in the air, whereby either the door might appear like the solid wall, or the several parts of the wall like so many doors.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, Hast thou here any besides? son in law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, ^qbring them out of this place:

13 For we will destroy this place, because the ^rcry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; and ^sthe LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons in law, ^twhich married his daughters, and said, ^uUp, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city.

^xBut he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons in law.

Which married his daughters; Heb. took, or were taking, or about to take, to wit, either to espouse, or to marry. Compare Gen. vi. 2; xxiv. 3; xxviii. 6; Deut. vii. 3. Anciently persons were first espoused, and after some time the marriage was consummated.

15 ¶ And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, ^yArise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which ^zare here; lest thou be consumed in the ^ziniquity of the city.

Which are here; Heb. which are found; i. e. which are present with thee, as this word is used, 1 Chron. xxix. 17; 2 Chron. v. 11; xxx. 21; xxxi. 1. Whence some gather that he had two other daughters married to two Sodomish men, who by their husbands' persuasion and example staid and perished in those flames. But this is not necessary; for this phrase may be applied to the daughters by way of distinction from their spouses or husbands: q. d. Tarry no longer in expectation of thy sons-in-law, who are absent, and must be given up for lost, but take thy daughters which are found and present with thee, and go thy way.

16 And ^awhile he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; ^band the LORD being merciful unto him: ^band they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

He lingered, either through lothness to part with all his estate, or to lose his sons-in-law; or through astonishment and distraction of mind, which made him both listless and impotent.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, ^cEscape for thy life; ^dlook not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

Either one of the angels said this, or the third person, the Lord himself, who having parted from Abraham, after some time came to Lot, as appears both by the change of the number; for before this he speaks of them in the plural number, but from hence in the singular number, as ver. 19, 21, 22; and by the variation of the phrase, for the other two speak with submission, and as servants, ver. 13, The Lord hath sent us, &c.; but this speaks with more authority, as is evident from ver. 21, 22. Escape for thy life, i. e. as thou lovest thy life. See Deut. iv. 15; Josh. xxiii. 11; Jer. xvii. 21. Or, escape with thy life, for the Hebrew particle al is sometimes taken for with, as Exod. xxxv. 23; Lev. ii. 2; xiv. 31; Deut. xxii. 6. So the sense is, Stand not lingering in hopes to save thy goods, them thou shalt lose as a punishment of thy sin and folly in choosing to dwell with so wicked a people; and be thankful that thou hast thy life given thee for a prey, as it is expressed, Jer. xxxviii. 2. Look not behind thee, like one that grieves either for the loss of thy pleasant habitation or vast estate, or for those cursed miscreants justly devoted to this destruction. And this command, though given to Lot alone, yet was directed also to his companions, to whom doubtless he imparted it, as is evident both from all the other commands, which equally concern all, and from the following event. See Matt. xxiv. 18; Luke ix. 62.

18 And Lot said unto them, Oh, ^enot so, my Lord: ^{i. e.}Unto one of them, as is manifest from the following words.

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die:

I cannot escape to the mountain, because of the infirmity of my age, and the fainting of my spirits. Thus he sheweth an unworthy and unreasonable distrust of God's power and goodness, which he had now experienced and acknowledged.

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh, let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

And it is a little one; therefore as its inhabitants, so its sins are fewer, and it will not be an eminent example of thy vengeance, as the other places will be.

21 And he said unto him, See, ^fI have accepted ^fthee concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

I have accepted thee; Heb. I have lift up thy countenance, i. e. granted thy request. The manner of the expression possibly may be taken from the custom of the eastern parts; where petitioners used not to fall upon their knees as we do, but to prostrate themselves with their face to the ground; and the person to whom they addressed themselves, in token of his favourable acceptance of their petitions, commanded them to be lifted up.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for ^gI cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore ^gthe name of the city was called ^g|| Zoar.

I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither, because of God's decree and promise to save thee from the general destruction.

23 ¶ The sun was ^hrisen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

This phrase may note, either the time of the day when this was done; or rather the nature and quality of the day, that the sun appeared and shone forth that morning in great lustre and glory; which is well noted as a very considerable circumstance of the history, and a great aggravation of the ruin, which came when they least expected it.

24 Then ⁱthe LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

And the neighbouring cities, Admah and Zeboim, as appears from Deut. xxix. 23; Jer. xlix. 18; Hos. xi. 8. Brimstone is added to the fire, either to convey and carry down the fire, which in itself is light and apt to ascend; or to increase it, Isa. xxx. 33; or to represent the noisomeness of their lusts. From the Lord, i. e. from himself; the noun put for the pronoun, as Gen. i. 27; 2 Chron. vii. 2. But here it is emphatically so expressed, either, 1. To signify that it proceeded not from natural causes, but from the immediate hand of God. Or, 2. To note the plurality of persons in the Godhead, God the Son, who now appeared upon the earth, rained from God his Father in heaven, both concurring in this act, as indeed all outward actions are common to all the persons of the Trinity.

q ch. 7. 1.
2 Pet. 2. 7, 9.

r ch. 18. 20.

s 1 Chron. 21. 15.

t Matt. 1. 18.

u Num. 16. 24, 45.

x Ex. 9. 21.
Luke 17. 28.
& 24. 11.

y Num. 16. 24, 26.

z Rev. 18. 4.

† Heb. are found.

‡ Or, present.

a Wisd. 10. 6.

b Luke 18. 13.
Rom. 9. 15, 16.
b Ps. 34. 22.

c 1 Kings 19. 3.

d ver. 26.

e Matt. 24. 16, 17, 18.

f Luke 9. 62.

g Phil. 3. 13, 24.

o Acts 10. 14.

i. e. Unto one of them, as is manifest from the following words.

I cannot escape to the mountain, because of the infirmity of my age, and the fainting of my spirits. Thus he sheweth an unworthy and unreasonable distrust of God's power and goodness, which he had now experienced and acknowledged.

f Job 42. 6, 9.
Ps. 145. 19.
† Heb. thy face.

g See ch. 32. 25, 26.
Deut. 32. 10.
Mark 9. 14.
h ch. 13. 10. & 14. 2.

¶ That is, little. ver. 20.

† Heb. gone forth.

i Dent. 29. 23. Is. 13. 19.
Jer. 25. 16.
& 50. 40.
Ezek. 16. 49, 50.

Hos. 11. 8. Amos 4. 11. Zeph. 2. 9. Luke 17. 29. 2 Pet. 2. 6. Jude 7.

25 And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and ^kthat which grew upon the ground.

^k ch. 14. 3.
^{Pa.} 107. 34.

All the plain, to wit, where these cities and their territories lay, called the plain of Jordan, Gen. xiii. 10; all which then became, and to this day continues, to be a filthy lake, called the Dead Sea, because no fish lives in it.

26 ¶ But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became ^la pillar of salt.

^l Wisd. 10. 7.
^{Luke} 17. 32.

His wife looked back, through curiosity, or unbelief, or desire of what she left, or from all these causes; from behind her husband, whom she followed. Which circumstance seems to be mentioned as the reason of this presumption, because she could do it without her husband's observation or reproof, to which she had a greater regard than to the all-seeing eye of God. And she, i. e. her body, by a very common synecdoche, became a pillar of salt; either metaphorically, i. e. a perpetual durable pillar, as an everlasting covenant is called a covenant of salt, Numb. xviii. 19; or properly, for there is a kind of metallic salt which resists the rain, and is hard enough for buildings, as Pliny, Solinus, and others witness. And that salt was here mixed with brimstone, may be gathered from Deut. xxix. 23. Add to this, that Josephus, Antiq. i. 12, affirms that this pillar remained in his time. And the like is witnessed by others after him.

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where ^mhe stood before the LORD:

^m ch. 18. 22.

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, ⁿthe smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

ⁿ Rev. 18. 8.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

^o ch. 8. 1.
[&] 18. 23.

God remembered Abraham; either, 1. The promise made to Abraham, Gen. xii. 3. Or, 2. The prayer made by Abraham, Gen. xviii., who doubtless in his prayers for Sodom would not forget Lot, though his prayer for him be not there mentioned. And hereby it is insinuated, that Lot, though he was a righteous man, and should be saved eternally, yet deserved to perish temporarily with those wicked people, to whom he associated himself merely for worldly advantages, and should have done so, if Abraham had not hindered it by his prayers.

30 ¶ And Lot went up out of Zoar, and ^pdwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

^p ver. 17. 19.

He feared to dwell in Zoar, lest he should either suffer from them or with them; perceiving now that though it was a little city, yet there was more wickedness in it than he imagined.

31 And the firstborn said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth ^qto come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

^q ch. 16. 2. 4.
^{ch.} 38. 8. 9.
^{Deut.} 25. 5.

In the earth; either, 1. In the whole earth; for they thought the same deluge of fire which destroyed the four cities had by this time extended itself to Zoar, and all other places, knowing that the whole world did lie in wickedness, and having possibly heard from their father, that the world, as it was once destroyed by water, so it should afterwards be consumed by fire, which they might think was now executed, and that God had secured Abraham from it by taking him to himself. Or, 2. In that land, as the word may be rendered. And her meaning might not be this, that there was no man at all, but not a man with whom they might or durst marry; for though they knew they left many men in Zoar, yet the sad experience of the dreadful ruin wherein their brethren-in-law were involved, made them abhor the thoughts of any conjunction with them. After the manner of all the earth, i. e. of all the inhabitants of the earth. Compare Gen. xviii. 11.

32 Come, let us make our father drink wine, and we will lie with him, that we ^rmay preserve seed of our father.

^r Mark 12. 19.

Wine they carried with them, amongst other necessary provisions, either from Sodom or Zoar.

This, though an incestuous and abominable action, yet they thought was made lawful by the supposed necessity, as in the beginning of the world the marriage of brethren and sisters was lawful because necessary; and when it ceased to be necessary, because of the increase of mankind, it became incestuous.

33 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the firstborn went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

They made their father drink wine, to wit, in excess, so as to deprive him of the use of his reason and grace, which was likely to frustrate their project: this was a great sin, not only in them, but also in Lot himself, not to be excused by ignorance of the virtue of wine, which being known to both the daughters, certainly their father could not be ignorant of it. Thus he who kept his integrity in the midst of all the temptations of Sodom, falls into a grievous sin in a place where he might seem most remote from all temptations; God permitting this, to teach all following ages how weak even the best men are when they are left to themselves, and what absolute need they have of Divine assistance.

He perceived not; wherein there is nothing strange, it being usual with drunken men to do many things in that condition, which, when they come to themselves, they perfectly forget. And so might Lot, when under the power of wine, forget that his wife was turned into a pillar of salt, and might mistake his daughter for his wife.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the firstborn said unto the younger, Behold, I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

35 And they made their father drink wine that night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

36 Thus were both the daughters of Lot with child by their father.

Which they might possibly imagine to be an evidence of Divine approbation of their fact; whereas, indeed, it was a design of God to make a lasting monument of their sin and shame.

37 And the firstborn bare a son, and called his name Moab: ^sthe same is the father of the Moabites unto this day.

1897.

^s Deut. 2. 9.

Called his name Moab, i. e. of my father, begotten upon me by my father. So she had learned from her neighbours to declare her sin as Sodom, Isa. iii. 9. The Moabites were a mischievous and infamous people, branded, as their brethren also the Ammonites were, with characters of God's displeasure.

38 And the younger, she also bare a son, and called his name Ben-ammi: ^tthe same is the father of the children of Ammon unto this day.

^t Deut. 2. 19.

Called his name Ben-ammi, i. e. the son of my people, or kindred, not of the cursed race of the Sodomites, where I was to be married. This is something more modest than the other in the name she gives, but both impudently glorying in their sin and shame, of which they should have bitterly repented.

CHAP. XX.

Abraham sojourns in Gerar, 1; denies Sarah to be his wife: Abimelech sends and takes her, 2. God warns Abimelech in a dream, 3. He expostulates with God, who answers and commands him to restore Sarah, 4—7. Abimelech warns his servants, 8; rebukes Abraham, 9, 10; who excuses and defends what he had said, 11—13. Abimelech kind to Abraham; restores his wife, 14, 15; rebukes Sarah, 16. Abraham prays for Abimelech; God removes his judgments, 17, 18.

AND Abraham journeyed from ^athence toward the south country, and dwelled between ^bKadesh and Shur, and ^csojourned in Gerar.

From thence; from the plain of Mamre, chap. xviii. 1, where he had long dwelt; and whence he removed, either because of its nearness to that filthy lake, which now was in the place of that late fruitful plain; or for other reasons and conveniences needless to be here inquired or determined. Towards the south country, yet more towards the southern part of Canaan.

2 And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, ^dShe is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and ^etook Sarah.

Abraham said this lest they should slay him for his beautiful wife's sake, as himself tells us, ver. 11. For though Sarah was ninety years old, yet she retained her beauty in good measure, partly, because she had not been broken by bearing and nursing of children; partly, because in that age of the world men and women, as they lived longer, so they did not so soon begin to decay, as now they do; and partly, because of God's especial blessing upon her. Abimelech took Sarah, not without violence, for it is not to be thought that either Abraham or Sarah would consent to it.

3 But ^fGod came to Abimelech ^gin a dream by night, and said to him, ^hBehold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is ⁱ† a man's wife.

God then used to manifest his mind in dreams, not only to his people, but even to heathens for their sakes, or in things wherein they were concerned. Thou art but a dead man, thou deservest a present and untimely death; and if thou proceedest in thy intended wickedness, it shall be inflicted upon thee, both for thy injustice in taking her away by force, and for thy intentions to abuse her, though not yet executed.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, ^jwilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

Abimelech had not come near her, i. e. had not yet lain with her. A modest expression, like that of knowing a woman, Gen. iv. 1, or going in to her, Gen. vi. 4, or touching her, Prov. vi. 29; 1 Cor. vii. 1, by which we are taught to use modesty in our speeches, and not, with the rude cynics, to express all things by their proper names. This clause and history was necessary to be added here for Sarah's vindication, and especially for the demonstration of Isaac's original from Abraham and Sarah, according to God's promise. Wilt thou slay also a righteous nation? i. e. innocent as to this matter. Compare 2 Sam. iv. 11. He knew it was just and usual for God to punish a nation for their king's sins; and therefore, as became a good prince, he is solicitous, and prays for the safety of his nation: or else by nation he may mean his family, for some of them were not involved in the guilt of this fact.

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: ^kin the integrity of my heart and innocency of my hands have I done this.

Without any adulterous design in my heart, or outward actions tending to it, being wholly ignorant of what thou now informest me.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for ^lI also withheld thee from sinning ^magainst me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

I know that thou didst not this knowingly and maliciously, but imprudently and inconsiderately, which is indeed an extenuation of thy sin, though not a total excuse. Compare 1 Kings ix. 4; 1 Chron. xxix. 1. I also withheld thee, partly by my restraining grace, and partly by my powerful providence, and the plague mentioned ver. 17. Which plainly shows that ignorance is not always an excuse for sin. See Luke xii. 48. This sin, though directly committed against Abraham and Sarah only, is said to be against God, as other such sins are, Gen. xxxix. 9; Psal. li. 4, because it was against God's command written in men's minds, though not yet published by express word or writing; and against God's honour; and that here in a particular manner, because it would have rendered Isaac's original, and thereby God's promise, doubtful.

7 Now therefore restore the man ⁿhis wife; ^ofor he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore ^pher not, ^qknow thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, ^rand all that are thine.

He is a prophet, a person very dear to me, and familiarly acquainted with me, and therefore the injuries done to him I take as done to myself. See Psal. cv. 15. He shall pray for thee, which is one part of a prophet's work, Jer. xiv. 11; xv. 1. Thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine; which was not unjust, because they all had sins of their own, for which they deserved death whensoever God thought fit to inflict it; and God might take this occasion to do it, that in punishing them he might also punish the king, whose subjects they were.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.

His servants; his counsellors and principal officers, as that word is used, 1 Kings i. 2; x. 13.

9 Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, ^sthat thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me ^tthat ought not to be done.

What hast thou done unto us? how great a danger hast thou exposed us to! A great sin: even the heathens, who thought fornication harmless, judge adultery to be a very great and heinous crime. See Gen. xxxviii. 24; Lev. xx. 10; Deut. xx. 22; Ezek. xvi. 38; xxiii. 45, 47. Or, a great punishment, as this word is oft used; which seems better to answer to his offending Abraham now mentioned.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

What levity or miscarriage didst thou discern in us which moved thee to deal thus with us?

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely ^uthe fear of God is not in this place; and ^vthey will slay me for my wife's sake.

The fear of God is not in this place, i. e. true piety, or the knowledge of the true God, which is the only effectual restraint from the grossest wickedness.

12 And yet indeed ^wshe is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

She is my sister, my near kinswoman; even as Lot upon the same account is called Abraham's brother, Gen. xiii. 8. She is the daughter of my father, i. e. the granddaughter;

1 ch. 31. 7.
& 35. 5.
Ex. 34. 24.
1 Sam. 25.
26. 34.
m ch. 39. 9.
Lev. 6. 2.
Pa. 51. 4.

n 1 Sam. 7.
5. 2 Kings 5.
11. Job 42. 8.
James 5. 14.
15. 1 John
5. 16.
o ch. 2. 17.
p Num. 16.
32, 33.

q ch. 26. 10.
Ex. 32. 21.
Josh. 7. 25.

r ch. 34. 7.

s ch. 42. 18.
Ps. 35. 1.
Prov. 16. 6.
t ch. 12. 12.
& 26. 7.

u See
ch. 11. 29.

cir. 1898.
a ch. 18. 1.
b ch. 16. 7, 14.
c ch. 26. 6.

d ch. 12. 13.
& 26. 7.
e ch. 12. 15.

f Ps. 105. 14.
g Job 33. 15.
h ver. 7.

+ Heb. married to as husband.

i ch. 18. 23.
ver. 18.

k 2 Kings 20. 3.
l 2 Cor. 1. 12.
m Or, simplicity, or, sincerity.

for grandchildren are commonly called the sons and daughters of their grandparents, as Gen. xxxi. 28; Exod. ii. 18. And besides, her father Haran dying before her grandfather, she was left more immediately under his care and education, and therefore was more peculiarly reputed Terah's daughter, and Abraham's sister. See Gen. xi. 29. But not the daughter of my mother, because Haran was Abraham's brother only by the father's side; for Terah had Haran by another wife.

How could Abraham marry one so near of kin to him? Ans. There were larger allowances for marriages in those times, as it was convenient there should be; neither had God as yet given those prohibitions, Lev. xviii. Besides, among all nations, the mother's side was more regarded than the father's in all prohibitions of marriage.

<sup>x ch. 12. 1,
9, 11, &c.
Heb. 11. 8.</sup> 13 And it came to pass, when [†]God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, [†]This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, [†]say of me, He is my brother.

To wander. This word he useth because God did not direct him to any certain place, but sent him out he knew not whither, Heb. xi. 8. And being to travel and sojourn amongst persons of divers tempers and manners, and all pagans, he thought this equivocal expression convenient for his security.

^{x ch. 12. 16.} 14 And Abimelech [†]took sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and womenservants, and gave [†]them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife.

^{a ch. 13. 9.} 15 And Abimelech said, Behold, [†]my land is before thee: dwell [†]where it pleaseth thee.

My land is before thee, i. e. free for thy view and choice, as Gen. xiii. 9.

^{b ver. 5.} 16 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given [†]thy brother a thousand [†]pieces of silver: [†]behold, he is to thee [†]a covering of the eyes, unto all that are with thee, and with all [†]other: thus she was reproved.

Thy brother; a sharp rebuke and irony: q. d. he whom thou didst miscall thy brother. A thousand pieces of silver, to wit, shekels, which is commonly understood when a sum of silver or gold is indefinitely mentioned, as Numb. vii. 13, 85; 2 Sam. xviii. 12; 2 Kings vi. 25. He is to thee a covering of the eyes, i. e. a protection to thee from the wanton eyes and attempts of others, whilst they know thee to be the wife of another man, and he such a one whom they reverence and fear; and therefore thou didst take a very wrong course to disown him, whereby thou didst expose thyself to great danger. Or, this is to thee, &c., i. e. this I give to thee to buy thee a veil, wherewith thou mayst cover thy face, as it is fit and usual for married persons to do. Compare Gen. xxiv. 65; 1 Cor. xi. 3, 6, 7, 10. Unto all that are with thee; unto all that here live with thee, or near thee, and with all men whomsoever. Thus she was reproved, or admonished to be more circumspect for the future; or, and be thou admonished; for they may be the words of Abimelech.

<sup>e Job 42. 9,
10.</sup> 17 ¶ So Abraham [†]prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare [†]children.

^{f ch. 12. 17.} 18 For the LORD [†]had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah Abraham's wife.

This phrase elsewhere notes barrenness, as 1 Sam. i. 5, 6, and so many understand it here. Against which some learned men object that that could not so soon be discovered, for all this happened between the conception and birth of Isaac. Which objection may seem not valid, because the evidences of women's being with child go so long before the birth of the child, and those evidences not appearing in any of their women, who before that time were generally fruitful and child-bearing, they might discern God's hand in it, especially upon God's admonition to their king. But because this history seems to have been done in a far less space of time, it not being probable either that God would suffer Sarah to be long with Abimelech ere he warned him, or that he being warned, and so severely threatened, and actually punished, would delay the execution of God's command, or that upon his obedience to God the mercy and deliverance promised would be delayed by God; that seems more probable which others think, that this was an indisposition, or plague, or sore in the secret parts, by which they were hindered from cohabitation and mutual converse, and consequently from hopes of conception and child-bearing; upon the removal whereof, it is said that they bare children, where, as oftentimes in Scripture, the last and consummating act is put for all the preceding acts: q. d. and they were restored to the conjugal use, and conception, and, in due time, to child-bearing.

CHAP. XXI.

God visits Sarah; she conceives and bears a son, 1, 2. He is named Isaac, 3; circumcised the eighth day, 4. Sarah's joy and thanks, 6, 7. Abraham makes a feast at the weaning of Isaac, 8. Ishmael mocks; Sarah sees it, 9. She complains to Abraham, and desires to have him cast out, 10. Abraham is grieved, 11. God commands it; the reason, 12; promises a blessing to Ishmael for his sake, 13. Abraham sends Hagar and her son away; they wander in the wilderness, are like to perish for want of water, 14—16. God calls to her, 17; repeats his promise to Ishmael, 18; opens her eyes; she sees a well, 19. They dwell there, and Ishmael is an archer, 20; marries an Egyptian, 21. Abimelech convinced that God was with Abraham, desires a covenant, 22, 23. Abraham consents, 24. Abimelech's servants having taken a well from him, Abraham reproves him for it, 25. He pleads ignorance, 26. Both of them make a covenant, 27—32. Abraham plants a grove, and calls on the Lord the everlasting God, 33, 34.

AND the LORD ^avisited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah ^bas he had spoken.

The Lord visited Sarah, i. e. performed his gracious promise of giving her strength to conceive and bear a child. God's visitation of a person in Scripture use, is the manifestation and execution of his purpose or word towards that person, and that either for evil, and so it is an inflicting of evils threatened, as the word visiting is used, Exod. xx. 5; Psal. lix. 5; or for good, and so it is used for the actual giving of mercies promised, as here, and Gen. l. 24; Exod. iv. 31; Ruth i. 6.

2 For Sarah ^cconceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, ^dat the set time of which God had spoken to him.

In his old age, or, for his old age, i. e. for the comfort of his old age.

3 And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, ^eIsaac.

4 And Abraham ^fcircumcised his son Isaac being eight days old, ^gas God had commanded him.

5 And ^hAbraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.

6 ¶ And Sarah said, ⁱGod hath made me to laugh, ^kso that all that hear ^kwill laugh with me.

Before, my own distrustful heart made me to laugh, now God makes me laugh, not through diffidence and irreverence, as before, chap. xviii. 12, but through excess of holy joy. All that hear will laugh with me; or, at me; some through sympathy rejoicing with me and for me, laughter being oft put for joy, as Isa. liv. 1; Gal. iv. 27, &c.; others through

^a 1 Sam. 2.
^b ch. 17. 19.
& 18. 10, 14.
Gal. 4. 23, 28.

^c Acts 7. 8.
Gal. 4. 22.
Heb. 11. 11.
^d ch. 17. 21

^e ch. 17. 19.
^f Acts 7. 8.
^g ch. 17. 10.
^h 12.

ⁱ cir. 1807.
^k ch. 17. 1,
17.

ⁱ Ps. 126. 2.
Is. 54. 1.
Gal. 4. 27.
^k Luke 1. 58.

scorn and derision, as at a thing which well may seem incredible to them, because it did so to me. See Gen. xvii. 17; xviii. 12, 15.

7 And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? ¹ for I have born ² him a son in his old age.

¹ ch. 18. 11, 12. What man or woman could believe so improbable a thing? Or, who but a God could have foreseen and foretold it? She saith children, though she had but one child, either by a usual enallage of the plural number for the singular, whereby the word sons or daughters is used when there was but one, as Gen. xxxvi. 25; xlv. 23; Numb. xxvi. 8; or presaging, that having received from God a new strength, she might have more children. By her expression she sheweth all mothers what their duty is, viz. to give their children suck when they are able to do it; and that neither greatness of quality, nor multitude of business, nor other difficulties and inconveniences, will be a sufficient excuse to those that neglect it.

8 And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.

It doth not appear how old Isaac was, because the time for the weaning of children is very various, according to the differing tempers and necessities of children, or inclination of parents; and in those times, when men's lives were longer than now they are, proportionably the time was longer ere children were weaned.

9 ¶ And Sarah saw the son of Hagar ^m the Egyptian, ⁿ which she had born unto Abraham, ^o mocking.

^m ch. 16. 1. ⁿ ch. 16. 15. ^o Gal. 4. 29. Signifying either by words or gestures his contempt of Isaac, and his derision of all that magnificence then showed towards his younger brother. And this carriage proceeding from a most envious and malicious disposition, and being a sufficient indication of further mischief intended to him, if ever he should have opportunity, it is no wonder it is called persecution, Gal. iv. 29, although the Hebrew word may be rendered beating him, as it is used 2 Sam. ii. 14.

10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, ^p Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.

^q ch. 17. 18. She was enraged by this fact, and perceived it was but a beginning and earnest of greater evil designed by him against her beloved Isaac; being also guided by the wise counsel and providence of God, as appears from ver. 12. Though the fact was done by Ishmael, yet Sarah plainly saw that this and other like carriages were from his mother's instigation and encouragement, who being of an imperious and petulant disposition, as appears from Gen. xvi. 4, 9, in all probability comforted herself, and animated her son, by that right he had to his father's inheritance as he was his first-born, as may be gathered both from the custom of women in such cases, and from the last words of this verse. Besides, if the mother had been continued, she would easily have prevailed with Abraham to fetch the child back again.

11 And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight ^q because of his son.

Because of his tender affection to him, and God's promise concerning him. See Gen. xvii. 18, 20. He who cheerfully parted with Isaac, was hardly brought to part with Ishmael, because the former was done by God's command, which he was obliged to obey; the latter by the passion of an enraged woman, wherewith he thought not fit to comply; and probably he had denied her desire if God had not interposed in it. He doth not say because of his wife; from whence may be gathered, either that Hagar was not properly his wife, or that this was another of Abraham's infirmities, that he had not that affection for her which he should have had. Whereby we may also see the excellency of God's institutions, who appointed but one woman for one man, that each might have the entire interest in the other's affections; and the danger of men's inventions, which brought polygamy into the world, whereby a man's affections are divided into several, and sometimes contrary streams.

12 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for ^r in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

Thus Abraham had better authority for his divorce from Hagar than he had for his marriage with her, chap. xvi. 2. Thy seed, to wit, the promised Seed, the heir of thy estate, covenant, and promises, the progenitor of my church and people, and particularly of the Messias.

Called, i. e. reputed and valued, both by me and other men. The words may be thus rendered, by Isaac shall thy seed be; for to be called is oftentimes put for to be, as Isa. i. 26; xlvii. 1, 5; Matt. v. 9, 19.

13 And also of the son of the bondwoman will I make ^s a nation, because he ^t is thy seed.

14 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and ^u sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba.

He who before doubted and lingered to do it when Sarah's passion suggested it, when once he understands it to be God's will, he makes haste to execute it. An excellent example of prudence and piety. Bread, by which may be here understood all necessaries, as Mal. i. 7, 12; Matt. vi. 11; xiv. 15, compared with Mark vi. 36; Luke xiv. 1. Quest. How is it likely that so rich and liberal a person as Abraham would send away such near and dear relations with so mean accommodations? Ans. 1. This might be done by particular command from God to Abraham, though it be not here expressed, as many things were said by God, and done by men, which are not mentioned in Scripture, as is evident from John xx. 30, 31; xxi. 25, and many other places. And God might order it thus, partly, to chastise Abraham's irregular marriage with Hagar; partly, to correct and tame the haughty and rugged temper of the bond-woman and her son, and to prepare them for the receiving of God's help and mercy; and partly, that he might more eminently show his care and kindness to Abraham, in providing for such forlorn and neglected creatures, because they belonged to him. 2. It cannot be reasonably doubted that Abraham gave her these provisions only for the present, and intended to send further and better afterward to a place appointed by him, which also he did. But she missed her way, as well she might, in the wilderness, and thereby came into these straits designed by God for the signification of greater mysteries, as may be gathered from Gal. iv. Beer-sheba, a place near Gerar, so called here by a prolepsis. See ver. 31.

15 And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

Not as if she carried him in her arms, or upon her shoulders, for he was now about eighteen years old; but being weak and faint, and no doubt much dejected in spirit upon the prospect of his desolate and distressed condition, she was forced to support and lead him by the hand; but now, despairing of his life, she lays him down under a shrub.

16 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bowshot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept.

Who wept? Either Hagar, for the verb is of the feminine gender; or the lad, as the words following seem to intimate. And for the change of the genders, that is not infrequent in Scripture use.

17 And ^v God heard the voice of the ^w lad; and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

God heard his cries, though not flowing from true repentance, but extorted from him by his pressing calamity. Though he be in a vast and desolate wilderness, yet my eye is upon him, and I will take care of him.

18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great nation.

i. e. Support or sustain thy languishing child with thy hand; for I will bless him, and thy care shall not be in vain.

19 And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

Not that her eyes were shut or blind before, but she saw not the well before; either because it was at some distance, or because her eyes were full of tears, and her mind distracted and heedless through excessive grief and fear; or because God withheld her eyes that she might not see it without his information. Compare Numb. xxiii. 31; Luke xxiv. 16.

20 And God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer.

i. e. A skilful hunter of beasts, and warrior with men too, according to the prediction, Gen. xvi. 12. For the bow was a principal instrument in war, as well as in hunting, Gen. xlviii. 22; xlix. 23, 24. And these two professions oft went together. See Gen. x. 9.

21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran: and his mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt.

In the wilderness of Paran; in the borders of that wilderness, by comparing Gen. xiv. 6, for the innermost parts of it were uninhabitable by men or beasts, as ancient writers note.

His mother took him a wife; by which we see both the obligation that lies upon parents, and the right that is invested in them, to dispose of their children in marriage in convenient time. Compare Gen. xxiv. 4; xxviii. 2; Judg. xiv. 2. Out of the land of Egypt, rather than out of Canaan, concerning whose accursed state and future destruction she had been informed in Abraham's house.

22 And it came to pass at that time, that Abimelech and Phichol the chief captain of his host spake unto Abraham, saying, God is with thee in all that thou doest:

We plainly see that God blesseth and prospereth thee in all thy undertakings. Of Abimelech, see Gen. xx. 2.

23 Now therefore swear unto me here by God that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

That thou wilt not deal falsely with me; that thou wilt not do me any hurt or injury; Heb. That thou wilt not lie unto me; i. e. as thou hast formerly professed kindness and friendship to me, give me thy oath to assure me that thou wilt be true and constant to thy own professions.

24 And Abraham said, I will swear.

Quest. How could Abraham lawfully swear this, when Canaan was given by God to him and his seed for ever? Answ. Neither Abraham nor his seed had any present and actual right to the possession of the land, but only the promise of a right in it, and possession of it after some hundreds of years, and therefore he gave away none of his right by this oath. For this oath did only oblige Abraham, and not his posterity; and Abimelech extended that obligation no further than to his son's son.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.

That the foundation of true friendship might be firmly laid, and the peace inviolably observed, he removes an impediment to it, an occasion of quarrel and just exception on Abraham's part. A well of water in those hot and dry countries was of great esteem and necessity. Compare Gen. xxvi. 19-21; Judg. i. 15. Besides, a well may be put for wells, as the Greeks render it, and as may seem probable by comparing this with Gen. xxvi. 15, 18; it being an ordinary thing to use the singular number for the plural, as hath been showed. See Gen. iii. 2; iv. 20.

26 And Abimelech said, I wot not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to day.

By which he wisely and truly suggests, that Abraham should not have smothered the grudge in his mind so long time, but should instantly have reproved him for it, and endeavoured a speedy redress, which hereby he intimates that he was ready to give.

27 And Abraham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.

Abraham gave them unto Abimelech; partly, as an acknowledgment to him for his former favour and friendship; partly, as an assurance of his sincere friendship, both present and for the future, of his acquiescence in his answer about the well; and partly, for sacrifice, and for the usual rite in making covenants, which was, that the persons covenanting might pass through the parts of the slain beasts. See Gen. xv. 17.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.

That this care of Abraham's was not superfluous may appear from Gen. xxvi. 15.

31 Wherefore he called that place Beer-sheba; because there they swore both of them.

Which name was communicated unto a city adjoining: of which see Gen. xxvi. 23; Josh. xv. 28; 2 Sam. xvii. 11; xxiv. 2.

32 Thus they made a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.

i. e. Into their part of that land, to wit, Gerar, which was not far from this place. It is a usual synecdoche, whereby the whole land is put for a part of it; otherwise they were at this time in that land.

33 And Abraham planted a grove in Beer-sheba, and called there on the name of the Lord, the everlasting God.

Abraham planted a grove, not so much for shade, which yet was pleasant and necessary in these hot regions, as for religious use, that he might retire thither from the noise of worldly business, and freely converse with his Maker. Which practice of his was afterwards abused to superstition and idolatry, for which reason groves were commanded to be cut down. See Deut. xii. 3; xvi. 21. Called there on the name of the Lord. He thankfully acknowledging God's great goodness in giving him the favour and friendship of so great and worthy a prince and neighbour.

34 And Abraham sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

e See ch. 26. 15, 18, 20, 21, 22.

f ch. 26. 31.

g ch. 33. 8.

h ch. 31. 45, 52.

i ch. 26. 33.

|| That is, The well of the oath.

cir. 1891.

|| Or, tree. k ch. 4. 26. l Deut. 33. 27. Is. 40. 28. Rom. 16. 26. m Tim. 1. 17.

x Num. 22. 31.
See 2 Kings 6. 17, 18, 20.
Luke 24. 16, 31.

y ch. 28. 15.
z 29. 2, 3, 21.
a ch. 16. 12.

b ch. 20. 2. & 26. 26.

c ch. 26. 28.

d Josh. 2. 12. 1 Sam. 24. 21.
† Heb. if thou shalt lie unto me.

CHAP. XXII.

God tempts Abraham, 1, to sacrifice Isaac, 2. He readily goes about it, 3—6. Isaac's question, 7. Abraham's answer, 8. They come to the place; he binds Isaac; lays him on the altar; takes the knife, 9, 10. The Lord sees his integrity, and forbids him, 11, 12. Aram caught, and offered in the stead of Isaac, 13. The name of the place, Jehovah-jireh, 14. The Lord calls a second time, 15; swears by himself; confirms his promise to Abraham and his seed, 16—18. Abraham returns to Beer-sheba, 19. The posterity of his brother Nahor, 20—24.

1872.
 Job. Ant.
 a 1 Cor. 10.
 13.
 Heb. 11. 17.
 James 1. 12.
 1 Pet. 1. 7.
 † Heb.
 † Behold me.

AND it came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, † Behold, here I am.

After the accomplishment of God's promises made to Abraham, and especially of that promise concerning the blessed Seed, when now he seemed to be in a most prosperous and secure condition, he meets with a severe exercise from God, God did tempt Abraham. The word tempt is ambiguous, and signifies either, 1. To entice to sin, in which sense devils and wicked men are said to tempt others, but God tempts no man, James i. 13. Or, 2. To prove or try, and in this sense God is said to tempt men. See Deut. viii. 2; xiii. 3; Judg. ii. 22. Thus God tempted Abraham, i. e. he tried the sincerity and strength of his faith, the universality and constancy of his obedience, and this for God's great honour, and Abraham's great glory and comfort, and for the church's benefit in all following ages.

Behold, here I am; an expression signifying a man's attentive hearing what is said to him, and his readiness to execute it, as ver. 7, 11; Gen. xxvii. 1; 1 Sam. iii. 4, 6.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, † thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee † into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

Not a word here but might pierce a heart of stone, much more so tender a father as Abraham was. Take now, without demurring or delay, I allow thee no time for consideration, thy own proper son; not a beast, not an enemy, not a stranger, though that had been very difficult to one so kind to all strangers; not a dear servant, not a friend or familiar: thine only son, not by birth, for so he had another, Ishmael; but this was his only son by Sarah, his first and legitimate wife; who only had the right of succession both to his inheritance, and to his covenant and promises; and this only was now left to him, for Ishmael was abandoned and gone from him: and this must be such a son as Isaac, once matter of laughter and great joy, now cause of inexpressible sorrow; thy Benoni; a son of the promise, of so great hopes, and such pregnant virtue and piety as this story shows; whom thou lovest, peculiarly and superlatively, even as thy own soul: and get thee into the land of Moriah; a place at a great distance, and to which thou shalt go but leisurely, ver. 4, that thou mayst have thy mind all that while fixed upon that bloody act, which other men's minds can scarce once think of without horror; and so thou mayst offer him in a sort ten thousand times over before thou givest the fatal blow; and offer him there with thine own hands, and cruelly take away the life which thou hast in some sort given him; for a burnt-offering, wherein by the law of the burnt-offering then known to Abraham, afterwards published to all Israel, his throat was to be cut, his body dissected into quarters, his bowels taken out, as if he had been some notorious traitor, and vile malefactor and miscreant, and afterwards he was to be burnt to ashes, that if possible there might be nothing left of him: and this must be done upon one of the mountains, which I shall tell thee of; not secretly in a corner, as if it were a work of darkness, and thou wert ashamed or afraid to own it; but in a public and open place, in the view of heaven, earth, God, angels, and men. Which horrid and stupendous act it may be easily conjectured what reproach and blasphemy it would have occasioned against the name and worship of God and the true religion, and what shame and torment to Abraham, from his own self-accusing mind, from the clamours of his wife, and all his friends and allies, and what a dangerous and mischievous example this would have been to all future generations. That faith that could surmount these and many more difficulties, and could readily and cheerfully rest upon God in the discharge of such a duty, no wonder it is so honoured by God, and celebrated by all men, yea, even by the heathens, who have translated this history into their fables. Moriah signifies the vision of God, the place where God would be seen and manifested. And so it is here called by way of anticipation, because it was so called afterwards, ver. 14, in regard of God's eminent appearance there for Isaac's deliverance; though it may also have a further respect unto Christ, because in that place God was manifested in the flesh. There were divers mountains there, as is evident from Psal. cxxv. 2; and particularly there were two eminent hills, or rather tops or parts of the same mountain; Sion, where David's palace was; and Moriah, where the temple was built, and whence the adjoining country afterwards received its name. Which I will tell thee of, by some visible sign, or secret admonition which I shall give thee.

3 ¶ And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

Abraham rose up early in the morning, that he might execute God's command without doubt or delay; and saddled his ass, for greater expedition, not waiting for his servant to do it.

4 Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

Probably on the beginning of the third day. It is true, Moriah was not three days' journey from Beer-sheba. But it must be considered that the ass, upon which he rode, is a dull and slow creature, and that Abraham went no faster than the rest of his company, who, for aught appears, were on foot; and that the provisions which they carried along with them, both for their own and the ass's subsistence, and for sacrifice, must needs retard them.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

Abraham said this, lest they should hinder him in the execution of his design. I and the lad will come again to you; for he knew that God both could and would for his promise sake, either preserve Isaac from being sacrificed, or afterward raise him from the dead, as it is intimated, Heb. xi. 19.

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and † laid it upon Isaac † his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

Isaac, though called a lad, ver. 5, was now a grown man, at least five and twenty years old, and therefore well able to bear that burden; and in this act he was an eminent type of Christ, who carried that wood upon which he was crucified.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, † Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is † the † lamb for a burnt offering? †

My father; a compellation which might both wound Abraham's heart, and admonish him how unbecoming to a father that action was which he was going about. Here am I, my son; which expression showed that he had not put off fatherly affection to him, and that his intention did not arise from any unnatural and barbarous disposition, nor from any decay of love to him, but from a higher cause, even the declared will of God.

8 And Abraham said, My son, God will pro-

b 11 Heb. 11.
 17.
 c 2 Chron.
 3. 1.

d John 19.
 17.

† Heb.
 Behold me.

¶ Or, kid.

vide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

God will provide himself a lamb; either, 1. Literally, though I know not how; for his wisdom and power are infinite: or, 2. Mystically, as Christ, whose type Isaac was, is called a Lamb. Thus Abraham prudently reveals the matter to him by degrees, not all at once.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and [¶] laid him on the altar upon the wood.

¶ Heb. 11. 17.
Jan. 2. 21.

Abraham built an altar, made of earth slightly put together, as God afterwards prescribed, Exod. xx. 24; and bound Isaac his son, partly, because burnt-offerings were to be bound to the altar; of which see on Psal. cxviii. 27; partly, to represent Christ, who was bound to the cross. And that Isaac might be the more exact type of Christ, he was bound by his own consent, otherwise his age and strength seem sufficient to have made an effectual resistance. It is therefore highly reasonable to think that Abraham, having in the whole journey prepared Isaac for such a work by general but pertinent discourses, did upon the mount particularly instruct him concerning the plain and peremptory command of God, the absolute necessity of complying with it, the glorious reward of his obedience, and the dismal consequences of his disobedience; the power and faithfulness of God either to prevent the fatal blow, or to restore his life lost with infinite advantage. Upon these, and such-like reasons, doubtless he readily laid himself down at his father's feet, and yielded up himself to the Divine will.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 And the angel of the Lord called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

The angel of the Lord, i. e. Christ the Angel of the covenant, as appears from ver. 12, 16. He repeats his name to prevent Abraham, whom he knew to be most expeditious in God's service, and just ready to give the deadly blow.

¶ 1 Sam. 15.

22.

Mic. 6. 7, 8.

g ch. 26. 5.

Jan. 2. 22.

12 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for [¶] now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

God knew the sincerity and resolvedness of Abraham's faith and obedience before and without this evidence, and from eternity foresaw this fact and all its circumstances; and therefore you must not think that God had now made any new discovery: but this is spoken here, as in many other places, of God after the manner of men, who is then said to know a thing, when it is notorious and evident to a man's self and others by some remarkable effect. Thus David prayed that God would search and know his heart, and his thoughts, Psal. cxxxix. 23, though he had before professed that God understood his thought afar off, ver. 2. This therefore is the sense, Now I know, i. e. Now I have what I designed and desired; now I have made thee and others to know. As the Spirit of God and of Christ is said to cry Abba, Father, Gal. iv. 6, when it makes us to cry so, Rom. viii. 15. Thou hast not withheld thy son from me, for my service and sacrifice; or for me, i. e. for my sake; i. e. thou hast preferred mine authority and honour before the life of thy dear son. By which words it appears that God himself speaks these words.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son.

Behind him; which way he looked, either because the voice came that way, or because he heard the noise made by the motion of the ram in the thicket, which had gone astray from the rest of the flock, and whose errors were directed hither by God's wise and powerful providence; and being young, though horned, it might be called either lamb, as ver. 7, or ram, as it is here. There needs no curious inquiry how he could offer up that to God which was not his own, both because it was found in a public place, and in all probability utterly lost to its owner, and because he had no doubt a warrant and inspiration for it from the great Lord and supreme Owner of all things.

14 And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen.

¶ That is, The LORD will see, or provide.

Jehovah-jireh. The same Hebrew letters differently pointed make the sense either active, the Lord will see, i. e. provide or take care of those that commit themselves and their affairs to him; or passive, the Lord will be seen, i. e. will appear and show himself in the behalf of all those that love him. As it is said to this day, wherein Moses wrote this book: this is still used as a proverb. In the mount of the Lord, i. e. in greatest extremities and distresses, as we say, at the pit's brink, it shall be seen, or, the Lord shall be seen or manifested. And although these words are used by way of remembrance of this great deliverance, and by way of accommodation to such-like eminent preservations from great dangers; yet they may have a further respect, and may signify, that this was but an earnest of further and greater blessings to be expected in this place, where the temple was built, and the Lord Christ was manifested in the flesh.

15 ¶ And the angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

h Ps. 105. 9.
Ecclus. 44.
21. Luke 1.
73. Heb. 6.
13, 14.

By myself have I sworn: so the Lord swears by his name, Jer. xlv. 26; by his soul, in the Hebrew text, Jer. li. 14; by his holiness, Amos iv. 2; which is the same with by himself here. Hence also it appears that the Angel who speaks here is Christ and God, because this is God's prerogative to swear by himself, as appears from Heb. vi. 13. Because thou hast done this thing; not that Abraham by this act did properly merit or purchase the following promises, as plainly appears, because the same things for substance had been freely promised to Abraham long before this time and action, Gen. xii. 2; xiii. 16, only what before was promised is now confirmed by an oath, as a testimony of that singular respect which God had to Abraham, and to this heroic instance of faith and obedience.

17 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

i ch. 15. 5.
Jer. 33. 22.
k ch. 13. 16.
† Heb. tip.
i ch. 24. 60.
m Mic. 1. 9.

i. e. The city, by a usual synecdoche, as Deut. xii. 15; xviii. 6, all the cities, and consequently the country adjacent; gate for gates. The sense is, they shall subdue their enemies. For the gates of cities were the places both of jurisdiction or judicature, Deut. xxi. 19; xxii. 15; Amos v. 12, 15; Zech. viii. 16; and of fortification and chief strength in war, Judg. v. 5; Psal. cxlvii. 13; Isa. xxii. 7; Ezek. xxi. 22. And this promise was fulfilled both literally in Israel's conquest of Canaan, in David, Solomon, &c., and spiritually in Christ, Psal. cx. 1—3.

18 And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.

n ch. 12. 3.
& 18. 18. &
24. 4.
Ecclus. 44.
22. Acts 3.
25. Gal. 3.
6, 9, 16, 18.
o ver. 5, 10.
ch. 26. 5.
p ch. 21. 31.

19 So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Beer-sheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

20 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that it was told Abraham, saying,

^{c ch. 11. 23.} Behold, ^a Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

This narration and genealogy is added for Rebekah's sake, and to make way for the following relation.

^{r Job 1. 1.} 21 ^a Huz his firstborn, and Buz his

^{a Job 22. 2.} brother, and Kemuel the father ^a of Aram, From Buz descended, as some conceive, Elihu the Buzite, Job xxxii. 2. Aram was so called, possibly because he dwelt among the Syrians, as Jacob, for the same reason, was called a Syrian, Deut. xxvi. 5. But there was another more ancient Aram, from whom the Syrians descended, Gen. x. 22.

22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

^{t ch. 24. 15.} 23 And ^a Bethuel begat ^a Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

Rebekah was afterwards Isaac's wife, chap. xxiv.

24 And his concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bare also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah.

A concubine was an inferior kind of wife, taken according to the common practice of those times, subject to the authority of the principal wife, and whose children had no right of inheritance, but were endowed with gifts. See Gen. xxi. 14; xxv. 6. Maachah, a name common both to man, as 2 Sam. x. 6, and woman, as 1 Kings xv. 13.

CHAP. XXIII.

Sarah's age and death; Abraham mourns, 1, 2. He speaks to the sons of Heth for a burying-place, 3, 4. They offer him the choice of their sepulchres, 5, 6. Abraham desires to purchase a field of Ephron, 8, 9. Ephron would give it him, 10—15. Abraham purchases it, and weighs the silver, 16. The field made sure to Abraham for a possession before witnesses, 17—20.

1800. AND Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

This is the peculiar honour of Sarah the mother of the faithful, 1 Pet. iii. 6, to have the years of her life numbered in Scripture.

^{a Josh. 14. 13.} 2 And Sarah died in ^a Kirjath-arba; the same is ^a Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

Kirjath-arba, or, the city of Arba; so called probably from a giant or great man called Arba, who lived and ruled in those parts. See Josh. xiv. 15; xv. 13. It is objected against this scripture, that this city was not called Hebron till Joshua's time, Josh. xiv. 15; but this is a mistake, Joshua doth not say so, but only that the name of Hebron before, (or in old time;) as this very particle is rendered, Deut. ii. 20, and elsewhere. So the sense is, the most ancient name of it was Kirjath-arba. Nor doth Joshua there give any account or reason of this change of the name at that time, or upon that occasion, as the sacred writers used to do in such cases, but rather supposeth that Hebron was the name of it before he came thither; and how long before that time he doth not express. Abraham came into Sarah's tent, (see Gen. xviii. 6, 9,) to weep for her, according to the laudable custom of all ages and nations, to manifest their sense of God's hand upon them, and of their own loss. See Gen. i. 3; Deut. xxxiv. 8, &c.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead,

To show his moderation in sorrow, and to take care for her burial, according to his duty.

—and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

^{c ch. 17. 8.} 4 ^a I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: ^a give me a possession of a buryingplace with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.

The privilege of burial hath been always sought and prized by all nations, whom nature and humanity teacheth to preserve the bodies of men, which have been the temples of reasonable and immortal souls, from contempt and violation; so especially by Christians, as a testimony and pledge of their future resurrection. See Numb. xxxiii. 4; Deut. xxi. 23; Job v. 26. For which cause Abraham desires a distinct burying-place separated from the pagan people. With you, in Canaan. There he, and after him other patriarchs, earnestly desired to be buried, upon this account, that it might confirm their own and their children's faith in God's promise, and animate their children in due time to take possession of the land. See Gen. xxv. 9; xlviii. 29, 30; 1. 13, 25; Exod. xiii. 19; Heb. xi. 22. That I may bury my dead out of my sight; so she that before was the desire of his eyes, Ezek. xxiv. 16, is now, being dead, become their torment.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: thou art [†] ^a [†] a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

Hear us, my lord: here is a conjunction of the plural and singular number, because though but one person spake, yet he spake in the name of the whole community. A mighty prince; Heb. a prince of God. Great and excellent persons or things are oft expressed by adding the name of God. See Gen. xiii. 10. Or, by prince of God, they understand a prince favoured and beloved of God. In the choice of our sepulchres; for each family had a distinct sepulchre.

7 And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

i. e. Showed a civil respect to them in testimony of his thankfulness. Religion allows and requires civility, and those gestures which express it. To the people of the land; to the governors of the people, who managed all public affairs in the people's name and stead, and for their good. The children of Heth, so called from Heth the son of Canaan, Gen. x. 15.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight; hear me, and intreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar,

Heb. If it be with, i. e. agreeable to, your soul, that is, your will, or good pleasure; for so the soul is sometimes taken, as Deut. xxiii. 24; Psal. xxvii. 12; xli. 2.

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for [†] ^a as much money as [†] ^a it is worth he shall give it me for a possession of a buryingplace amongst you.

Machpelah, which seems to be the proper name of the place, ver. 17, 19, so called from its duplicity, because the cave was double, either one for men, and another for women; or the one served only for an entrance into the other, which was the burying-place. For as much money as it is worth; Heb. for full money, 1 Chron. xxi. 22, 24; i. e. for money of full weight, answerable to its worth.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth: and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the [†] audience of [†] the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate of his city, saying, Ephron dwelt, Heb. did sit, to wit, at that time, as one of the chief or rulers of the people; for so the word sitting is oft used, as we shall see hereafter. His city; either where he was born, or at least where he lived.

11 ^a Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of

^{c ch. 17. 8.}
^{1 Chron. 29.}
^{15.}
^{Ps. 105. 12.}
^{Heb. 11. 9.}
^{13.}
^{a Job 7. 8.}

^{† Heb.}
^{a prince of} ^{God.}
^{c ch. 13. 2.}
^{& 14. 14. &}
^{24. 35.}

^{† Heb.}
^{full money.}

^{† ch. 34. 20,} ^{24.}
^{Ruth 4. 4.}

^{† See 2 Sam.} ^{24. 21—24.}

the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

But if thou wilt give it; it is a short speech, and something must be supplied; either if thou wilt give or resign it to me; or, if thou be the man of whom I speak; for though Abraham knew his name, he might not know him by face, nor that he was then present. He prudently chose rather to buy it than to receive it as a gift, partly because it would be the surer to him and his, ver. 17, 20, and partly because he would not have too great obligations to his pagan neighbours.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred^h shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

He speaks of the common shekel, which many value at fifteen pence of English money; but others, more probably, at two shillings and sixpence, rightly, as I conceive, supposing that this was of the same weight and value with the shekel of the sanctuary, which was so called, not as if that were double to the former, but only because all shekels were to be examined by that standard which was kept in the sanctuary. What is that betwixt me and thee? both friends, and rich men; it is not worth any words or trouble between us.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

In those times silver was paid by weight, Gen. xliii. 21; Jer. xxxiii. 10. Current money with the merchant, i. e. right for quality as well as weight in the judgment of merchants, whose frequent dealing in it makes them more able to judge of it.

17 ¶ And the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure

18 Unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a buryingplace by the sons of Heth.

wonders at the providence, 21; makes a present to Rebekah, 22; inquires of what family she was, 23. Her answer, 24, 25. He blesseth the Lord, 26, 27. Rebekah acquaints her friends with it, 28. They provide for him, &c. and invite him in, 31, 32. He goes in, but refuses to eat till he had told his errand, 33. He acquaints them with his business, and God's providence towards him, 34—49. They consent to his proposal, 50, 51. He praises God, 52; makes presents to them all, 53; desires to return to his master, 54—56. Rebekah being content to go with him, they consent and bless her, 57—60. They depart, and meet Isaac meditating in the field, 61—65, who marries her, 67.

AND Abraham^a was old, and[†] well stricken in age: and the LORD^b had blessed Abraham in all things.

He was one hundred and forty years old, comparing Gen. xxi. 5, with Gen. xxv. 20.

2 And Abraham said^c unto his eldest servant of his house, that^d ruled over all that he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

His eldest servant of his house; viz. Eliezer, Gen. xv. 2. This ceremony was used in swearing, as now, so anciently in the eastern parts, as Gen. xlvii. 29, either as a testimony of subjection, and promise of faithful service, for this rite was used only by inferiors towards superiors; or, as some think, with respect to the blessed Seed, Christ, who was to come out of Abraham's thigh, as the phrase is, Gen. xli. 26, because this rite was used only to believers.

3 And I will make thee swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that^e thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

i. e. Not persuade nor engage my son to take; for Isaac, though forty years old, was not only willing to be governed by his father in this affair, but also to hearken to the counsel of this wise and faithful servant, of whom both his father and himself had such long and large experience. He knew that the Canaanites were not only gross idolaters and heinous sinners, for so many others were; but that they were a people under God's peculiar curse, Gen. ix. 25, and devoted to extirpation and utter destruction, which was to be inflicted upon them by Abraham's posterity; and therefore to marry his son to such persons had been a high degree of self-murder, whereby the holy and blessed seed had been in danger of great infection from them, and utter ruin with them. And Abraham's practice was afterwards justified by God, who hath oft showed his dislike of such unequal matches of his people with those infidels and idolaters, by severe prohibitions and sharp censures. See Exod. xxxiv. 16; Deut. vii. 3; Josh. xxiii. 12; Ezra ix. 1—3; Neh. xiii. 23, 25; 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15.

4^h But thou shalt goⁱ unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

My country, i. e. Mesopotamia, ver. 10, which being largely taken for the country between those two famous rivers Euphrates and Tigris, from which situation it hath that name; so Chaldea, whence Abraham came, Gen. xi. 31; xii. 1, was a part of it. My kindred, the family of Nahor, concerning the increase whereof he had received information, chap. xxii. 20, &c., which he justly preferred before the Canaanites, partly because though they were idolaters, as appears from Gen. xxxi. 19, 30, 32, 35; Josh. xxiv. 2, yet they did worship the true God together with idols, as may be gathered from ver. 31, 50 of this chapter, and from other places; and therefore there was more hopes of the conversion of one of that family; and partly because they lived at a great distance from the place where Abraham and his posterity did and should live, and therefore one of that stock would be more easily disentangled from her superstition and idolatry, because she was removed from the influences of the evil counsels and examples of her

^h Ex. 30. 15.
ⁱ Ezek. 45. 12.

ⁱ Jer. 32. 9.

^k ch. 25. 9.
^l & 49. 30, 31,
^m 32, & 50. 13.
ⁿ Acts 7. 16.

¹ See Ruth
⁴ 7, 8, 9, 10,
² Jer. 32. 10,
¹¹.

1857.
^a ch. 13. 11.
^b & 21. 5.
[†] Heb. gone into decay.
^c ch. 13. 2.
^d Prov. 10. 22.

ver. 35. Ps. 112. 3.

^e ch. 15. 2.
^d ver. 10.
^f ch. 39. 4, 5, 6.
^g ch. 47. 29.
^h 1 Chron. 22.
ⁱ 24. Lam. 5.
^j 6.

^f ch. 14. 22.
^g Deut. 8. 13.
^h Josh. 2. 12.

^g ch. 28. 35.
^h & 27. 46. &
ⁱ 28. 2.
^j Ex. 34. 16.
^k Deut. 7. 3.

^h ch. 28. 2.
ⁱ ch. 12. 1.

CHAP. XXIV.

Abraham's age and prosperity, 1. He makes his eldest servant swear not to take a wife for his son Isaac of the Canaanites, but of his own kindred, 2—4. The servant inquires into the nature and condition of the oath, 5. Abraham expresses his faith in the promise, 7; explains the oath, 8. The servant swears, 9. He goes to the city of Nahor, 10; prays for success, 12, and direction, 13, 14. An immediate and particular answer, 15—20. He nearest relations, and partly because they were of the race of blessed Shem, and not of cursed Canaan.

5 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

Note here the prudence and piety of this good man, who, before he would take an oath, doth diligently inquire into the nature and conditions of it, and expressly mentioneth that exception which might seem to be of course supposed in it.

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

In case she will not come hither, do not thou engage that he shall go thither. Why so? 1. Because there was more danger of infection from his wife and her kindred, because of their friendly, and familiar, and constant converse with him, than from the Canaanites, who were strangers to him, and lived separately from him, and had but little conversation with him. 2. Because the command of God to Abraham to come out of Chaldea, and into Canaan, did extend to his posterity also, whom God would oblige to dwell there as long as they could, that they might live in constant faith and expectation of the performance of God's promise in giving this land unto them. Quest. How could he bring Isaac thither again, where he never was? Ans. 1. Isaac might be said to be there before virtually, or in the loins of his father, as Levi is said to pay tithes to Melchizedek by Abraham, in whose loins he was. 2. This again may be referred to the servant, that when he returned again he would not carry Isaac along with them. 3. He might reasonably suppose that Isaac must go once thither to fetch his wife; (for her coming so suddenly to him was an unexpected thing;) but he would not have him promise, that when he had done so once, he should go thither again to live there with her.

7 ¶ The LORD God of heaven, which took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, 'Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

He shall send his angel before thee, to direct and succeed thee in this enterprise. Compare Exod. xiv. 19; xxiii. 20. Thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence; I doubt not of the success. He might say so, either by rational conjecture, both from the nature of the thing, and from the constant course of God's providence blessing him in all his concerns; or by particular assurance and inspiration from God.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

Thou shalt be clear from the obligation of this oath, and from the penalties of the violation of it.

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels of the camels of his master, and departed; for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor.

The goods of his master were in his hand, i. e. in his power to take, without particular orders, what he thought fit and necessary, either for his own use, or for the promotion of the present business. The city of Nahor was Haran, by comparing Gen. xviii. 10; xxix. 4.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.

12 And he said, 'O LORD God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.

Or, mercy. He makes no mention of himself, nor of the merits of his master, but he ascribes even temporal blessings, and much more eternal salvation, merely to God's mercy.

13 Behold, 'I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

14 And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.

That this was not a rash and vain fancy, but a special expectation and confidence wrought in him by God's Spirit, appears both by the eminent prudence and godliness of this person, and by the exact correspondency of the event with his prayer, and by parallel examples, as Judg. vi. 36; 1 Sam. vi. 7; xiv. 8. She that thou hast appointed; Heb. evidently pointed out; or, exactly searched out, as a person meet for him.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

According to the manner of the first and purest ages of the world, wherein humility and diligence, not, as in this degeneration of the world, pomp and idleness, were the ornaments of that sex and age. See Gen. xviii. 6; xxix. 9, 18, 20; Exod. ii. 16; Prov. xxxi. 27.

16 And the damsel was very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

She was a virgin not only in title and show, but in truth, for no man had known her, i. e. corrupted her.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hastened, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

She said, Drink, my lord; for his retinue showed him to be a person of more than ordinary quality.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she hastened, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

The man wondered at her, i. e. at the wonderful providence of God, and the eminent answer of his prayer.

22 And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden earring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold;

The man took, i. e. gave to her, (as that word of taking, or receiving, is oft used, as Gen. xii. 19; Exod. xviii. 12; xxix. 25; Psal. lxxviii. 18, compared with Eph. iv. 8.) a r ver. 27. ch. 28. 24. & 28. 13. & 32. 9. Ex. 3. 6. 15. s Neh. 1. 11. Ps. 37. 6.

t ver. 43. u ch. 29. 9. Ex. 2. 16.

w See Judg. 6. 17, 37. 1 Sam. 6. 7. & 14. 8. & 20. 7. 1 Mac. 5. 40.

x ch. 11. 29. & 22. 23.

y ch. 26. 7. † Heb. good of conscience.

z 1 Pet. 3. 5. & 4. 9.

k ch. 12. 1, 7.

l ch. 12. 7. & 13. 15. & 15. 18. & 17. 8. Ex. 32. 13. Deut. 1. 8. & 34. 4. Acts 7. 5. n Ex. 23. 20. 22. & 33. 2. Heb. 1. 14.

n Josh. 2. 17, 20.

o ver. 2. 1 Or, and.

p ch. 27. 43.

+ Heb. that women which draw water go forth. q Ex. 2. 16. 1 Sam. 9. 11.

a ver. 12. 55.

b Ex. 32. 2. 3. Is. 3. 19. 20, 21. Ezek. 16. 11, 12. 1 Pet. 3. 5. † Or, jewel for the forehead.

golden earring; so the word signifies, Gen. xxxv. 4; Exod. xxxii. 2, 3. Or, jewels for the forehead, which hung down from the forehead to the nose, or between the eyes. So the word is used, ver. 47; Ezek. xvi. 12.

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

And said, or, for he had said; for it is probable he inquired who she was before he gave her those presents.

24 And she said unto him, 'I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

So she signifies that she was Nahor's daughter, not by his concubine, but by his lawful and principal wife.

25 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man ^dbowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

Giving thanks to God for his marvellous assistance hitherto, and begging the continuance of his presence and blessing.

27 And he said, 'Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD ^eled me to the house of my master's brethren.

His mercy and his truth, i. e. who hath showed his mercy in promising all manner of blessings, and his truth in performing his promises at this day. Or, it is a figure called heniyadis, for true mercy: q. d. he hath not only been kind to him in show, and in words, but in real and considerable effects. My master's brethren, i. e. near kinsmen, as that word is commonly used, as ver. 48; Gen. xiii. 8; Mark iii. 31, 32.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

Not of her father's house; either because her father was now dead, and Bethuel, who is hereafter mentioned, was not Laban's father, but his brother so called; or because the women had distinct apartments in the houses, and she went first thither according to her custom.

29 ¶ And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the earring and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, 'thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

Come in, thou blessed of the Lord, i. e. whom God hath so eminently favoured and blessed.

32 ¶ And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and ^kgave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

Of which custom, see Gen. xviii. 4.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, 'I will not eat, until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And the LORD ^mhath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great:

and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maidservants, and camels, and asses.

36 And Sarah my master's wife ⁿbare a son to my master when she was old: and ^ounto him hath he given all that he hath.

i. e. Hath purposed and promised, and doth by me engage that he will give. Things are oft said to be done, in Scripture language, when they will certainly and shortly be done.

37 And my master ^pmade me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell:

38 'But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

39 'And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.

40 'And he said unto me, The LORD, ^rbefore whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house:

Before whom I walk, in obedience to all his commands, and in hearty trust in his promises and gracious providence towards me and mine.

41 'Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

Clear from this my oath; Heb. from my curse, denounced against thee if thou shouldst violate thine oath. The words oath and curse are oftentimes indifferently used, because they commonly go together, and sometimes they are both expressed, as Numb. v. 21.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, 'O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go:

i. e. The design or course in which I am engaged, as the word way is frequently used.

43 'Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

45 'And before I had done ^sspeaking in mine heart, behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

47 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I ^tput the earring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

First he asks who she was, then he gives the gifts to her; which is the right order, and is here observed in the repetition; which was inverted in the first relation, ver. 22, 23.

e Ex. 18. 10.
Ruth 4. 14.
1 Sam. 25.
32, 39.
2 Sam. 18.
23. Luke 1.
68.
f ch. 32. 10.
Ps. 96. 3.
g ver. 48.

h ch. 29. 5.

i ch. 28. 20.
Judg. 17. 2.
Ruth 2. 10.
Ps. 115. 15.

k ch. 43. 24.
Judg. 19. 21.

l Job 23. 12.
John 4. 34.
Eph. 6. 5,
6, 7.

m ver. 1.
ch. 13. 2.

n ch. 21. 2.

o ch. 21. 10.
& 25. 5.

p ver. 3.

q ver. 4.

r ver. 5.

s ver. 7.

t ch. 17. 1.

u ver. 8.

v ver. 12.

w ver. 13.

x ver. 15.
&c. y 1 Sam. 1.
13.

z Ezek. 14.
11, 12.

^a ver. 26. 48 ^a And I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take ^b my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

^c ch. 47. 29. Josh. 2. 14. 49 And now if ye will ^c deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

If you will show true kindness and real friendship to him in giving your daughter to his son, tell me; and if not, tell me, that I may look out a wife for him elsewhere. It is a proverbial expression, Numb. xx. 17; xxii. 26; Deut. ii. 27.

^d Ps. 118. 26. Matt. 21. 42. Mark 12. 11. e ch. 31. 24. 50 Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, ^d The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot ^e speak unto thee bad or good.

Laban is put first, either because this Bethuel was not his father, but his younger brother, as Josephus thinks; or because Laban was the chief manager of this business, to whom his father seems to have committed the care of his family, being himself unfit for it through age or infirmity. The thing proceedeth from the Lord, from God's counsel and special providence. Hereby it appears they had the knowledge and worship of the true God among them, though they added idols to him. We cannot without opposing God speak or act any thing which may hinder thy design, or thwart thy desire. Compare Gen. xxxi. 24, 29; 2 Sam. xiii. 22.

^f ch. 20. 15. 51 Behold, Rebekah ^f is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

Rebekah is before thee, i. e. in thy power and disposal; as this phrase is taken, Gen. xx. 15, and elsewhere.

^g ver. 26. 52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he ^g worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

⁺ Heb. sewals. h Ex. 3. 22. & 11. 2. & 12. 35. i 2 Chron. 21. 2. Ezra 1. 6. 53 And the servant brought forth ⁺ h jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother ⁱ precious things.

The precious fruits of the land from which he came; see Deut. xxxiii. 13, &c.; or in general, other rare and excellent things. In those days men gave portions for their wives, as now they have portions with them.

^k ver. 56, & 58. 54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, ^k Send me away unto my master.

^{||} Or, a full year, or ten months. Judg. 14. 8. 55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us ^{||} a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

Others thus, a year, or at the least ten months, the word days being put for a year, as elsewhere. But it is very improbable that they would demand or expect such a thing from this man, whom they saw bent so much upon expedition.

56 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, ^{*} seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

i. e. Understand her mind by her words, not so much concerning the marriage itself, in which she resigned up herself to the disposal of her parents and friends, and to which she had given an implicit consent by her acceptance of those presents which were made to her for that end, as concerning the hastiness of her departure.

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

59 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and ¹ her nurse, and Abraham's ¹ ch. 35. a servant, and his men.

Her nurse was Deborah, by comparing chap. xxxv. 8. In this corrupt family, the mother and the nurse are two distinct persons; but in Abraham's pious family there was no such principle or practice. See Gen. xxi. 7.

60 And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou ^m the mother of thousands of millions, ^m ch. 17. 16. and ⁿ let thy seed possess the gate of those ⁿ ch. 22. 17. which hate them.

Thou art our sister, i. e. our near kinswoman; distance of place shall not alienate our affections from thee, but we shall still own thee as our sister, and, as far as we can, be ready to perform all the duties of brethren to thee.

61 ¶ And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 And Isaac came from the way of the ^o well Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the ^o ch. 16. 14. & 25. 11. south country.

In the southern parts of Canaan, as Gen. xii. 9, at Beersheba, whither it seems Abraham returned after Sarah's death.

63 And Isaac went out ^{||} ^p to meditate ^{||} Or, ^{to pray} in the field at the eventide: and he lifted ^p up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the ^p camels were coming. ^p Josh. 1. 8. Ps. 1. 2. & 77. 12. & 119. 15. & 143. 5.

To meditate; to converse with God, and with himself, by pious and profitable thoughts and ejaculations, and fervent prayers, as for other things, so particularly for God's blessing upon this great affair, and so his prayers are eminently answered. He chooseth a solitary place, wherein he might more freely attend upon God without any interruption or distraction, in the field at the eventide; that as he had begun the day with God, so he might close it with him, and commit himself to his protection. Compare Psal. lv. 17.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, ^q she lighted off the ^q Josh. 15. 18. camel.

As a testimony of her respect to him, whom by the servant she understood to be her lord and husband. Compare Josh. xv. 18; 1 Sam. xxv. 23.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a veil, and covered herself.

In token of modesty, reverence, and subjection. See Gen. xx. 16; 1 Cor. xi. 10.

66 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

67 And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac ^r was comforted after his mo- ^r ch. 32. 12. ther's death.

Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, partly to give her possession of it, and partly to consummate the marriage. Women then had their tents apart from men. See Gen. xviii. 10; xxiv. 67; xxxi. 33. Isaac was comforted after his mother's death; a sorrowful sense whereof he yet had retained, though she died three years before this time.

CHAP. XXV.

Abraham's sons by Keturah, 1—4. Isaac inherits his father's estate, 5. Provision for the other sons, 6. Abraham's age, 7; death, 8; burial, 9, 10. God blesseth Isaac, 11. The posterity of Ishmael, 12—15. His age and death, 17. Their habitation, 18. The generations of Isaac, 19. His age when married, 20. He prays for children; God answers, 21. Two children struggle in the womb; Rebekah inquires of the Lord, 22. God gives the reason, 23. She delivered of twins, 24. The first-born red and hairy; his name, 25. His brother takes him by the heel; his name: Isaac's age when they were born, 26. The eldest a cunning hunter; the other a plain man, 27. Isaac loves the eldest; Rebekah the youngest, 28. The eldest sells his birthright for red pottage, and is called Edom, 30—32. Confirms the sale by an oath, 33. Despising his birthright, 34.

cir. 1853. THEN again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah.

After Sarah's death and Isaac's marriage Abraham took a wife, (a secondary wife, or a concubine, as she is called, ver. 6, and 1 Chron. i. 32,) not from any inordinate lust, which his age and eminent grace may sufficiently evince, but from a desire of more children, and of accomplishing God's promise concerning the great multiplication of his seed. Keturah was a distinct person from Hagar, as appears from ver. 6, and 12, and, as it seems, of better quality, and younger, for Hagar was now eighty years old, and not likely to be a mother of six children.

a 1 Chron. 1. 32. 2 And *she bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah.

Quest. How could Abraham, being now about one hundred and forty years old, have so many children, when his body was dead in his hundredth year? Ans. Because that renewed strength which was miraculously conferred upon him, did still in a great measure remain in him, being not a temporary action, but a durable habit or power.

These persons were the heads of several people dwelling in Arabia and Syria, where we shall find evident footsteps of their names amongst ancient geographers, only a little changed, which could not be avoided in their translation into another language. Midian, the father of those Midianites, of whom we read Gen. xxxvi. 35; Judg. vi. 2; Isa. x. 26. From Shuah Bildad seems to be descended, Job ii. 11.

3 And Jokshan begat Sheba, and Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were Asshurim, and Letushim, and Leummim.

4 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Epher, and Hanoah, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.

Ephah; of whom see Isa. lx. 6. From Epher some think Africa received its name.

b ch. 24. 36. 5 ¶ And ^b Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.

Which before he purposed and promised to give, Gen. xxiv. 36, and now actually gave; except that which is excepted in the following verse, and except the use and enjoyment of his estate during his own life.

6 But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and ^c sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto ^d the east country.

The concubines, Hagar and Keturah. Concubines are sometimes called wives, as Gen. xvi. 3; Judg. xix. 1—3, 29, but their children had no right to the inheritance. For though the children of Jacob's concubines did equally partake of the inheritance with the other children, that was done by Divine appointment, and Jacob's voluntary act, and upon special reason, because of the vast inheritance promised, and afterwards given to them, which made it no loss, but a great convenience and advantage to the children of the chief wives to have their half-brethren, the sons of the concubines, seated so near to them. Sent them away from Isaac; partly, that the entire possession of that land might be reserved to the children of Isaac; and partly, lest nearness of relation joined with cohabitation or neighbourhood should beget a great familiarity between them, whereby Isaac's seed were likely to be infected by their brethren, whose degeneration and apostasy Abraham might easily foresee from the evil inclinations of their own hearts, and God's exclusion of them from that covenant of grace and life, which was the only effectual remedy against that powerful and universal corruption. Eastward, unto the east country; into Arabia, and other parts of Asia the Greater, which were situate eastward from the southern part of Canaan where Abraham now was, whence these people are oft called the children of the east, as Judg. vi. 3; vii. 12; Job i. 3.

7 And these are the days of the years ¹⁸²² of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

8 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and ^e died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and ^f was gathered to his people. e ch. 15. 15. & 49. 29. f ch. 35. 29. & 40. 33.

His soul was not required of him, as it was of that fool, Luke xii. 20; not forced from him by sharp and violent diseases, but was quietly, easily, and cheerfully yielded up by him into the hands of his merciful God and Father, as the word intimates, in a good old age; good, both graciously, his hoary head being found in the way of righteousness; and naturally, free from the manifold infirmities and calamities of old age. Of which see Eccl. xii. 1, &c. Full of years; in the Hebrew it is only full, or satisfied; but you must understand, with days or years, as the phrase is fully expressed, Gen. xxxv. 29; 1 Chron. xxxiii. 1; xxix. 28; Job xlii. 17; Jer. vi. 11. When he had lived as long as he desired, being in some sort weary of life, and desirous to be dissolved; or full of all good, as the Chaldee renders it; satisfied, as it is said of Naphtali, Deut. xxxiii. 23, with favour, and full with the blessing of the Lord upon himself, and upon his children; he was gathered to his people; to his godly progenitors, the former patriarchs, the congregation of the just in heaven, Heb. xii. 23; in regard of his soul: for it cannot be meant of his body, which was not joined with them in the place of burial, as the phrase is, Isa. xiv. 20, but buried in a strange land, where only Sarah's body lay. And it is observed, that this phrase is used of none but good men, of which the Jews were so fully persuaded, that from this very expression used concerning Ishmael here below, ver. 17, they infer his repentance and salvation. See this phrase, Gen. xv. 15; xlix. 29; Numb. xx. 24; xxvii. 13; Judg. ii. 10.

9 And ^g his sons Isaac and Ishmael ^h buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

Ishmael, though banished from his father's house, lived in a place not very far from him; and as no doubt he received many favours from his father after his departure, which is implied here, ver. 6, though it be not mentioned elsewhere; so it is probable that he had a true respect and affection to his father, which he here expresseth.

10 ⁱ The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: ^j there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife. h ch. 23. 16. i ch. 49. 31.

11 ¶ And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac; and Isaac dwelt by the ^k well Lahai-roi.

12 ¶ Now these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, ^l whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham: k ch. 16. 14. & 24. 62. l ch. 16. 15.

They are here recorded as an evidence of God's faithfulness in fulfilling his promise made to Abraham, Gen. xvi. 10; xvii. 20. cir. 1800.

m 1 Chron. L. 29.

13 And ^mthese are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: the firstborn of Ishmael, Nebajoth; and Kedar, and Ad-beel, and Mibsam, Nebajoth; of whom see Isa. lx. 7. From whom part of Arabia was called Nabathæa. Of Kedar, see Psal. cxx. 5; Isa. xxi. 16; Jer. xlix. 28; the father of those called Cedraei, or Cedareni, in Arabia.

14 And Mishma, and Dumah, and Massa,

Dumah; from him Dumah, Isa. xxi. 11, or Dumatha, a place in Arabia, seems to have received its name. Others make him the father of the Idumeans.

¶ Or, Hadad, 1 Chron. l. 30.

15 ¶ Hadar, and Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah:

Tema gave his name to the city and country of Tema, or Teman, Job ii. 11; vi. 19; Jer. xxv. 23. Jetur, the father of the Itureans, as may be gathered from 1 Chron. v. 19.

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; ⁿtwelve princes according to their nations.

n ch. 17. 20.

1773.

17 And these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and ^ohe gave up the ghost and died; and was gathered unto his people.

o ver. 6.

p 1 Sam. 15. 7.

18 ^pAnd they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest toward Assyria: and he ^qdied in the presence of all his brethren.

+ Heb. fell. Ps. 78. 64. q ch. 16. 12.

Before Egypt, as thou goest toward Assyria, i. e. on that part or side of Egypt which leads to Assyria. He died in the presence of all his brethren; his brethren surviving him, and being his neighbours, and therefore as they had conversation with him in the time of his life, so now they did him honour at his death. But this translation and interpretation may seem improbable, 1. Because his death was related, ver. 17, and would not be so presently repeated. 2. Because the foregoing words in this verse speak not of his death, but of his dwelling, to which these words do very well agree. For what we translated and he died, is commonly rendered and he fell, or it fell, and is most commonly used concerning a lot whereby men's portions are designed and divided, as Lev. xvi. 9, 10; Numb. xxxiii. 54; Josh. xvi. 1; and so the sense may be, it fell, i. e. that country fell to him or his; or he lay, or was stretched out, or posted himself, as the Hebrew word is used, Judg. vii. 12, i. e. he dwelt in the presence of all his brethren; and so indeed his country lay between the children of Keturah on the east, and the children of Isaac and Israel on the west.

19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: ^rAbraham begat Isaac:

r Matt. 1. 2.

1857.

20 And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, ^sthe daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padan-aram, ^tthe sister to Laban the Syrian.

s ch. 22. 23.

t ch. 24. 29.

Bethuel the Syrian of Padan-aram; either of the country of Syria, as it is called, Hos. xii. 12; or rather, Padan of Syria; or, as the Septuagint and Chaldee render it, Mesopotamia of Syria. For that Padan is the proper name of a place, may be gathered from Gen. xlviii. 7, and it is so called from its situation between two rivers, for Padan signifies a pair or two.

1838. u 1 Chron. 5. 20. 2 Chron. 33. 13. Ezra 6. 23. w Rom. 9. 10.

21 And Isaac intreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: and the LORD was intreated of him, and ^wRebekah his wife conceived.

He prayed, as the Hebrew word signifies, instantly or fervently, frequently and continually, for near twenty years together; for so long it was between their marriage and the first child. He was so much concerned, because not only his comfort, but the truth of God's promise, depended upon this mercy; and he knew very well that God's purpose and promise did not exclude, but require the use of all convenient means for their accomplishment. For his wife; or, in the presence of his wife; signifying that, besides their more secret devotions, they did oftentimes in a more solemn manner, and with united force, pray for this mercy wherein they were both equally concerned. Or, over against his wife, noting that each of them did severally and apart entreat God for this mercy, so that there was a concurrence, if not in place, yet in design and action. She was barren, as divers of those holy women that were progenitors of Christ have long been, that it might appear that that sacred stock was propagated more by the virtue of God's grace and promise than by the power of nature.

22 And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? ^xAnd she went to enquire of the LORD.

x 1 Sam 9. 9. & 10. 22.

The children struggled, in a violent and extraordinary manner, which was likely to cause both pain and fear in her. The sense may be either, 1. If it be thus with me, that there be two children contending and fighting within me, likely to destroy one the other, and both threatening my death, why did I desire and pray for this as a great mercy? Or, why is it thus with me? why hath God dealt thus with me, to continue my life till it be a burden to me, and to give me conception which is so painful and hazardous? Or rather, 2. If God hath granted me my desire in the conception of a child, what means this disturbance and conflict within me, which threatens me with loss of the mercy before I enjoy it? For she seems not so much to murmur at it, as to wonder and to inquire about it, as it here follows. She went to inquire of the Lord; either immediately, by ardent prayers to God that he would reveal his mind to her herein; or mediately, by her father Abraham, who lived fifteen years after this time, ver. 7, or by some other godly patriarch yet surviving, by whom God used to manifest his will and counsels to others, when he thought fit.

23 And the LORD said unto her, ^yTwo nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and ^zthe one people shall be stronger than the other people; and ^athe elder shall serve the younger.

y ch. 17. 16. & 24. 60.

z 2 Sam. 8. 14. a ch. 27. 29. Mal. 1. 3. Rom. 9. 12.

The Lord spoke, either by inward inspiration, in a dream or vision; or by the ministry of an angel or prophet. Two nations, i. e. the roots, heads, or parents of two distinct nations, one opposite to the other; the one blessed, the other cursed, namely, the Israelites and Edomites. Shall be separated; not only separated from thee, but one separated or greatly differing from the other in their frame of body, temper of mind, course of life, profession and practice of religion. The elder, or, the greater, namely Esau, who was, as older, so of a stronger constitution of body, and of greater power and dignity in the world than Jacob; and Esau's posterity were great princes for a long time, when Jacob's seed were strangers in Canaan, slaves in Egypt, and poor afflicted wanderers in the wilderness. But, saith he, Esau and his shall not always be stronger and mightier than Jacob and his posterity, the tables shall be turned, and the children of Israel shall be uppermost and subdue the Edomites, which was literally accomplished in David's time, 2 Sam viii. 14; and afterwards, 2 Chron. xxv. 11, 12; and after that by the Maccabees; but much more eminent-ly in a spiritual sense under the gospel, when one of Jacob's children, even Jesus Christ, shall obtain the dominion, and shall rule the Edomites no less than other heathen nations with his iron rod, and make them serviceable one way or other to his glory, and to the felicity of his true Israel.

24 ¶ And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.

25 And the first came out red, ^ball over like an hairy garment; and they called his name Esau.

b ch. 27. 11. 16, 23.

Red; with red hair upon all the parts of his body. From him the Red Sea is supposed to receive its name, it being so called, as the heathen writers tell us, from one who reigned in those parts, and was called Erythras, or Erythrus, which signifies red, the same with Edom or Esau. Esau, i. e. made or perfect; not properly a child, but rather a man as soon as he was born, having that hair upon him which in others was an evidence of manhood.

26 And after that came his brother out, and ^c his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and ^d his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them.

Jacob, i. e. supplanter, or one that taketh hold of or trippeth up his brother's heels. See Gen. xxvii. 36. Isaac was threescore years old. Thus God exercised his faith and patience twenty years, by comparing this with ver. 20, ere he gave him the promised blessing.

27 And the boys grew: and Esau was ^e a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was ^f a plain man, ^g dwelling in tents.

Esau was a hunter of wild beasts, and afterwards an oppressor of men. Compare Gen. x. 9. This course of life was most agreeable to his complexion, fierce and violent. A man of the field; one that delighted more in conversing abroad than at home, whose employment it was to pursue the beasts through fields, and woods, and mountains, who therefore chose a habitation fit for his purpose in Mount Seir. A plain man, a sincere, honest, and plain-hearted man; or a just and perfect man, as the word is used, Gen. vi. 9; dwelling in tents, quietly minding the management of his own domestic affairs, his lands and cattle, and giving no disturbance either to wild beasts or men.

28 And Isaac loved Esau, because ^h he did ⁱ eat of his venison: ^j but Rebekah loved Jacob.

Isaac loved Esau, not simply nor chiefly because he pleased his palate, but because this was an evidence of his son's great respect and affection to him, that he would take such pains and incur such hazards to which that course of life exposed him, that he might please and serve his father. But Rebekah loved Jacob upon better grounds, both because of his more pious and meek temper, and because of the oracle and promise of God.

29 ¶ And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint:

30 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, ^k with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called ¶ Edom.

Red pottage; red by the infusion of lentiles, or saffron, or some other things of that colour. The word is doubled in the Hebrew text, to show how vehemently he desired it. Edom, which signifies red; as he was at first so called from the colour of his hair, so now that name was confirmed and given to him afresh upon this occasion: q. d. He was rightly called Edom, or red, not only historically for his colour, but prophetically for this accident.

31 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright.

i. e. Speedily, without delay. So this Hebrew word is used 1 Sam. ii. 16; ix. 13, 27; 2 Chron. xviii. 4. The birthright then had divers singular privileges; as, 1. Dignity and authority over his brethren, Gen. iv. 7; xxvii. 29, 37; xlix. 3. 2. A double portion, Deut. xxi. 17; 1 Chron. v. 1. 3. A special blessing from his father, Gen. xxvii. 4. 4. The priesthood and chief government of the affairs of the church in his father's absence, or sickness, and after his death, Numb. viii. 16, 17, &c. 5. The first-born was a special type, both of Christ, who was to be a first-born; and of the church, which is called God's first-born, as Exod. iv. 22; and of the great privileges of the church, particularly of adoption and eternal life. See Heb. xii. 23. And therefore he is justly called profane, Heb. xii. 16, for slighting so sacred and glorious a privilege. Quest. 1. Could the birthright be lost? Ans. Yes. See Gen. iv. 7; 1 Chron. v. 1. Quest. 2. Did Jacob well in this matter? Ans. No; because he tempted his brother to an act of profaneness and folly, and so was guilty of his sin. And though God had designed and promised this privilege to him, yet he should have waited till God had executed his promise in his own way, as David did till God gave him possession of Saul's kingdom; and not have anticipated God, and snatched it by an irregular act of his own, as Jeroboam did the kingdom from Rehoboam.

32 And Esau said, Behold, I am ^l at the point to die: and what profit shall this birthright do to me?

I am at the point to die; not with famine, which could not consist with Isaac's plentiful estate and house, but by the perpetual hazards to which his course of life exposed him in the pursuit of wild beasts, and contending with other men. What profit shall this birthright do to me? by which he plainly showeth that his care and affections reached no further than the present life.

33 And Jacob said, Swear to me this day; and he sware unto him: and ^m he sold his birthright unto Jacob.

Jacob acted subtly in this affair; he knew that delays were dangerous; and Esau's consideration, or second thoughts, might have spoiled his bargain, and therefore he requires haste, as in the sale, so in his oath; wherein he addeth another sin, in hurrying his brother into an oath by precipitation, which neither his brother should have taken, nor Jacob should have advised him to take, without mature advice.

34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and ⁿ he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright.

Secure and impenitent, without any remorse for his ingratitude to God, or the injury which he had done to himself and to all his posterity, he went his way, despising his birthright, preferring the present and momentary satisfaction of his lust and appetite before God's and his father's blessing, and all the glorious privileges of the birthright.

CHAP. XXVI.

A famine in the land; Isaac goes to Gerar, 1. God directs him to abide there, and promises to be with him: the covenant with Abraham also made with Isaac, 2-5. Through fear he denies Rebekah, 7. Abimelech, seeing Isaac and Rebekah together, concludes her to be his wife; charges him with it; he confesses it, 8, 9. Abimelech reproves him, charging his people not to touch them on pain of death, 10, 11. Isaac blessed with great plenty, 12-14. The Philistines envy him; stop his wells, 15; desire him to depart, 16. He removes to the valley of Gerar, 17. There he digs wells, but the herdsmen strive with him about them, 18-21. He hath rest, 22; removes to Beer-sheba, 23. The Lord renews his covenant, 24. He calls on the name of the Lord, 25. Abimelech, convinced that the Lord was with Isaac, desires to make a covenant with him, 26-29. They make a feast, and swear to one another, 30, 31. Esau being forty years old, taketh to him wives of the Canaanites, 34. Isaac and Rebekah grieved hereat, 35.

AND there was a famine in the land, beside ^o the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto ^p Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.

Abimelech is not he mentioned Gen. xx. 2, but most probably his son and successor, called by his father's name.

2 And the Lord appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in ^q the land which I shall tell thee of:

To Egypt it seems Isaac intended to go, it being a very fruitful place, and being encouraged to do so by his father's example upon the same occasion. But God saw good reasons to forbid Isaac to go thither, which it is needless to inquire, and not difficult to conjecture.

3 ^{d ch. 20. 1. Pa. 39. 12. Heb. 11. 9. e ch. 28. 15. f ch. 12. 1. g ch. 13. 15. h 15. 18. i ch. 22. 16. Pa. 105. 9.} Sojourn in this land, and ^e I will be with thee, and ^f will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, ^g I will give all these countries, and I will perform ^h the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father;

Unto thee, and unto thy seed; to thee to enjoy for thy present comfort, and to them to possess as an inheritance. See the notes on Gen. xiii. 15; xv. 18. I will perform the oath, i. e. the promises confirmed by oath, Gen. xxii. 16, &c.

4 And ^{i ch. 15. 5. & 22. 17.} I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; ^k and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 ^{l ch. 22. 16. 18.} Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

Here was a covenant made between God and Abraham; and as, if Abraham had broken the condition of walking before God required on his part, God had been discharged from the promise made on his part; so contrarily, because Abraham performed his condition, God engageth himself to perform his promise to him, and to his seed. But as that promise and covenant was made by God of mere grace, as is evident and confessed; so the mercies promised and performed to him and his are so great and vast, that it is an idle thing to think they could be merited by so mean a compensation as Abraham's obedience, which was a debt that he owed to God, had there been no such covenant or promise made by God, and which also was an effect of God's graces to him and in him.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar:

7 And the men of the place asked ^{m ch. 12. 13. & 20. 2. 13. n Prov. 29. 25.} him of his wife; and ^m he said, She is my sister: for ⁿ he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, ^o said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she ^o was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

Using more free and familiar carriage than became a brother and sister, but such as was allowable between husband and wife. See Deut. xxiv. 5; Prov. v. 18, 19. But that this was not the conjugal act, may easily be gathered from the circumstances of the time and place, which was open to Abimelech's view; and therefore that was not consistent either with Isaac's modesty or with his prudence, because he would not have her thought to be his wife.

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and ^{p ch. 20. 9.} thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

The heathens esteemed fornication either no sin, or a very little one; but adultery was heinous and formidable even among the heathens, and especially here, because it was fresh in memory how sorely God had punished Abimelech, and all his family, only for an intention of adultery, Gen. xx. Note here, they take it for granted that their ignorance had not been a sufficient excuse for their sin.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that ^{q Pa. 105. 15.} toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

He that hurteth or injureth. So that word is used, ver. 29; Josh. ix. 19; Psal. cv. 15; Zech. ii. 8; and being applied to a woman, it is used for the defiling or humbling of her, as Gen. xx. 6; Prov. vi. 29.

12 Then Isaac sowed in that land, and ^{r Matt. 13. 8. Mark 4. 8. s ver. 3. ch. 24. 1. 35. Job 42. 12.} † received in the same year ^t an hundredfold: and the LORD ^u blessed him:

Isaac sowed in that land; either in the grounds which he had hired of the right owners, or in some grounds which lay neglected, and therefore were free to the first occupier; which was not strange in that age of the world, when the inhabitants of countries were not so numerous as afterward. An hundredfold, i. e. a hundred times as much as he sowed. The same degree of increase is intimated Matt. xiii. 8, and affirmed sometimes of other places by heathen writers; but then it was in a better soil and season than this was, for this was a time of famine or scarcity.

13 And the man ^{v ch. 24. 35. Pa. 112. 3. Prov. 10. 22.} waxed great, and grew until he became very great: † went forward, and grew until he became very great:

14 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of ^{w Or. husbandry. u ch. 37. 11. Eccles. 4. 4.} servants: and the Philistines ^x envied him.

Great store of servants; or rather, of husbandry, as this word is elsewhere used; of corn-fields, vineyards, &c.; for he is describing his riches, which then consisted in the two things here expressed, cattle and lands, which he diligently and successfully managed, ver. 12.

15 For all the wells ^{y ch. 21. 30.} which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for ^{z Ex. 1. 9.} thou art much mightier than we.

Which breeds envy, and jealousy, and fear among my subjects, and may occasion greater mischiefs; and therefore it is better that we should part friends, than by continuing together be turned into enemies.

17 ¶ And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: ^{y ch. 21. 31.} and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

Though there might be a brook there, probably it was but little, and soon dried up. And Isaac digged those rather than new ones, partly to keep up his father's memory, and partly because he had most right to them, and others less cause of quarrel with him about them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of ^{z Heb. living.} † springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar ^{z ch. 21. 25.} did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is our's: and he called the name of the well ^z † Esek; because they strove with him.

The water is ours, because digged in our soil; which was no good argument, because he digged it by their consent or permission at his own charge, and for his own use.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it || Sitnah.

¶ That is, Hatred.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it || Rehoboth; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall *be fruitful in the land.

¶ That is, Room.

a ch. 17. 6. & 26. 3. & 41. 52. Ex. 1. 7.

23 And he went up from thence to Beer-sheba.

Where he lived before the famine drove him thence.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, ^bI am the God of Abraham thy father: ^cfear not, for ^dI am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

b ch. 17. 7. & 24. 12. & 28. 13. Ex. 3. 6. Acts 7. 32. c ch. 15. 1. d ver. 3, 4.

25 And he ^ebuilded an altar there, and ^fcalled upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

e ch. 12. 7. & 13. 18. f Ps. 116. 17.

26 ¶ Then Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, g ch. 21. 22. ^gand Phichol the chief captain of his army.

Phichol may be either, 1. The title of an office; for the word signifies, the mouth of all, or he by whom all the people were to present their addresses to the king, and receive the king's commands. Or, 2. The name of a man; and then this might be the son of him mentioned Gen. xxi. 32, called by his father's name, as Abimelech also was.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ^hye hate me, and have ⁱsent me away from you?

h Judg. 11. 7. i ver. 16.

28 And they said, ¶ We saw certainly that the LORD ^kwas with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

† Heb. Seeing we saw. k ch. 21. 22, 23.

29 † That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: ^lthou art now the blessed of the LORD.

† Heb. If thou shalt, &c.

l ch. 24. 31. Ps. 115. 15.

We have not touched thee, to wit, so as to injure or hurt thee, as above, ver. 11. Thou art now the blessed of the LORD; or, O thou who art now the blessed of the LORD, whom God hath enriched with great and manifold blessings, which we did not take away from thee, as we could easily have done, but thou dost still enjoy them; and now art, as thou wert amongst us, the blessed of the LORD. Or, Seeing God hath blessed thee, it will not become thee to curse us, or to bear any grudge against us for that little unkindness which we expressed to thee. Or it may be a wish, If thou makest this covenant with us, be thou now the blessed of the LORD, we heartily wish thy blessings and prosperity may increase.

m ch. 19. 3.

30 ^mAnd he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

n ch. 21. 31.

31 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and ⁿswore one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

They rose up betimes; partly for the despatch of their journey and business, and partly because then their minds were most vigorous, and sober, and fit to perform so sacred an action as an oath was.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it || Shebah: ^otherefore the name of the city is || Beer-sheba unto this day.

¶ That is, an oath. o ch. 21. 31. ¶ That is, the well of the oath.

This name had been given before, either to this or a neighbouring place, by Abraham, Gen. xxi. 31; but was now buried in oblivion, as his wells were; and the wells being revived, he revives and renews the name, which proved now a lasting name, unto this day, as here follows, which is not added Gen. xxi. 31, because then the name, though given by Abraham, was soon forgotten and neglected by others.

34 ¶ ^pAnd Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

1796. p ch. 36. 2.

Both Hittites, the worst of the Canaanites, Ezek. xvi. 3; which, from his grandfather Abraham's severe charge, Gen. xxiv. 3, he must needs know would be highly displeasing both to God and to his parents. And as Esau had several names, being called also Edom and Seir; so it seems these women and their parents had, by comparing this with Gen. xxxvi. 2, which was usual in those times and places. Or Esau had more wives than these.

35 Which ^qwere † a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.

q ch. 27. 46. & 29. 1, 8. † Heb.

Because to their idolatry and other wickedness they added obstinacy and incorrigibleness, despising their persons and godly counsels, whereby they invited them to repentance.

bitterness of spirit.

CHAP. XXVII.

Isaac being aged, sends Esau for venison, that he might eat thereof, and bless him, 1—4. Esau obeys his father, 5. Rebekah hearing it, tells Jacob, 6, 7. Her contrivance and advice to him to intercept the blessing, 8—10. Jacob is afraid of a curse instead of a blessing, 11, 12. His mother encourageth him, 13. He complies; puts on Esau's raiment, and the skins of the kids; goes with the venison his mother prepared: Isaac eats of it, and blesseth him, 14—29. Esau brings the venison he had taken, 30, 31. Isaac is exceedingly surprised, but confirms the blessing on Jacob, 32, 33. Esau weeps bitterly, and prays for a blessing, 34; expostulates with his father, and obtains one, 36—40. Esau hates Jacob, 41. Rebekah hears of it, 42. She advises Jacob to go to her kindred, 43, 44. Complains of Esau's wives to Isaac.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and ^rhis eyes were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

cir. 1700. a ch. 48. 10. 1 Sam. 3. 2.

Isaac was about one hundred and thirty-seven years old. He could not see; which was ordered by God's wise providence, not only for the exercise of Isaac's patience, but also as a means to transfer Esau's right to Jacob.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I ^sknow not the day of my death:

b Prov. 27. 1. Jam. 4. 14.

3 ^tNow therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and † take me ^usome venison;

c ch. 25. 27, 28.

Thy quiver, or, as the Chaldee and Hebrew doctors render it, thy sword; a weapon no less necessary for a hunter of beasts than a bow.

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring ^vit to me, that I may eat; that my soul ^wmay bless thee before I die.

d ver. 27. ch. 43. 9, 15. & 49. 28. Deut. 33. 1.

Quest. Why doth he require that he may eat before he bless him? Ans. 1. That being refreshed and delighted therewith, his spirit might be more cheerful, and so the fitter for the giving of this prophetic benediction; for which reason also the prophet Elisha called for a minstrel ere he could utter his prophecy, 2 Kings iii. 15. 2. By the special direction of Divine Providence, that Esau's absence might give Jacob the advantage of getting the blessing. He speaks not here of a common and customary blessing, which parents may bestow upon any of their children as and when they please; but of the last, solemn, extraordinary, and prophetic benediction, whereby these holy patriarchs did by God's appointment, and with his concurrence, constitute one of their sons heir, not only of their inheritance, but of Abraham's covenant, and all the promises, both temporal and spiritual, belonging to it. As for the oracle delivered to Rebekah, which transferred this blessing upon Jacob, chap. xxv. 23, either Isaac knew not of it, not being sufficiently informed thereof by Rebekah; or he did not thoroughly understand it; or he might apprehend that it was to be accomplished not in the persons of Esau and Jacob, but in their posterity; or at this time it was quite out of his mind; or he was induced to neglect it through his passionate affection to his son Esau.

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

Before the Lord; solemnly, as in God's presence, in his name, and by his authority, and with his leave and favour, which I shall heartily pray for thee. So he signifies that this was more than an ordinary blessing which he now intended to give him.

8 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

It is observable, that as Jacob deceived his father by a kid, so his sons deceived him by the same creature, Gen. xxxvii. 31—33. I will make them savoury meat, out of their most tender and delicate parts; wherewith it was not difficult to deceive Isaac, partly because of the likeness of the flesh, especially being altered by convenient sauce; and partly because the same old age which had dimmed Isaac's sight had also dulled his other senses.

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

I shall appear to him to be indeed a deceiver, one that abuseth his age and blindness. The particle as sometimes signifies not the likeness, but the truth of the thing, John i. 14; 2 Cor. iii. 18. I shall bring a curse upon me, which is due to every one that deceiveth the blind, Deut. xxvii. 18, especially his father, and especially in a religious concern, Jer. xlvi. 10; Mal. i. 14, such as this was.

13 And his mother said unto him, Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

She saith so out of an assured confidence in the Divine oracle and promise.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son:

Either the sacerdotal garments which the eldest son wore in the administration of that office which belonged to him; or rather some other suit better than ordinary.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

Upon the two naked parts of his body, which were most likely to be discovered. As for his face, it is more than probable from his age, which was the same with Esau's, chap. xxvi. 34, that nature had given him a covering like Esau's.

17 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy firstborn; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

This cannot be excused, for it was a manifest untruth, and no less is all this following relation, though it pleased God graciously to pardon it; and notwithstanding these failings, to confer the blessing promised upon Jacob.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him.

He discerned him not, because all his senses were not only dulled with age and infirmity, but also held by Divine Providence, as theirs, Luke xxiv. 16, for the bringing about his own purpose; so that it is no wonder he was so grossly deceived in the whole business.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

Which he did, either that he might more fully satisfy himself concerning the person, or rather as a mark of that special favour and affection wherewith he bestowing the blessing. Compare Gen. xlvi. 10.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

Which is full of odoriferous herbs, and flowers, and fruits, and spices, with some of which Esau's garments

† Heb. desirable. n ver. 27.

† Heb. before me.

p ver. 12.

q ver. 18.

r ver. 4.

s Hos. 14. 6.

e ver. 13.

f ver. 4.

g ver. 4.

h ch. 25. 25.

i ver. 22.

k ch. 9. 25. Deut. 27. 18.

l ch. 43. 9. 1 Sam. 25. 34. 2 Sam. 14. 9. Matt. 27. 25.

m ver. 4. 9.

might be performed in the chest wherein they were laid, as the manner now is. These garments smell not of the sheep-cots and stables, as Jacob's do, but of the fields, in which Esau is conversant.

^t Heb. 11. 20.
^u Deut. 33.
13, 28.
2 Sam. 1. 21.
^w ch. 45. 18.
^x Deut. 33.
28.

28 Therefore 'God give thee of' the dew of heaven, and 'the fatness of the earth, and 'x plenty of corn and wine:

God give thee, or, will give; for it is both a prayer and a prophecy. He mentions the dew rather than the rain, because it was of more constant use and necessity in those parts than the rain, which fell considerably but twice in a year, the first being called the former, and the other the latter rain. And under this and the following blessings, which are but temporal, are comprehended all manner of blessings, both spiritual, temporal, and eternal, according to the usage of that time and state of the church. The fatness of the earth; a fat and fruitful land, which Canaan was, abounding with all sorts of precious fruits. Compare Deut. viii. 8; xxxiii. 13, 14.

^y ch. 9. 25.
& 25. 23.
^z ch. 49. 8.
^a ch. 12. 3.
Num. 24. 9.

29 ' Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and ' let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: ' cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

Let thy mother's son bow down to thee. How and when this was fulfilled, see on Gen. xxv. 23.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and ^b eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

That Esau did not come to his father till the meat was dressed, may be ascribed partly to his own choice, that he might come with more acceptance; and partly to Rebekah, who could easily hinder his coming sooner by specious pretences and artifices.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born Esau.

^{+ Heb. trembled with a great trembling greatly.} ^{+ Heb. hunted.}
^c ch. 28. 3, 4.
Rom. 11. 23.

33 And Isaac † trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath † taken venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, ° and he shall be blessed.

Isaac was filled with astonishment and horror in consideration of Jacob's fraud, and the sad disappointment and great misery of his beloved Esau, and his own rashness and folly in suffering his fond affection towards him to carry him headlong into an opposition to the Divine oracle, Gen. xxv. 23, which now came to his remembrance, as appears by his ratification of Jacob's blessing. Who? where is he? a short speech, proceeding from a discomposed mind. Yea, and he shall be blessed. This blessing, though otherwise intended by me, and pronounced upon a mistake of the person, shall and must rest upon the head of Jacob; and I neither can nor dare undertake to revoke and contradict God's appointment, which now I more fully discern, and in which both thou and I and all men must fully acquiesce. And now Isaac fixeth the blessing upon Jacob by faith, as it is expressed, Heb. xi. 20, which before, through misguided fancy and affection, he intended for Esau.

^d Heb. 12. 17.

34 And when Esau heard the words of his father, ^d he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

He cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, not for any sense of his former sin, in despising his birthright, but for grief at his great loss therein, because God would not suffer him to be perjured in keeping that birthright blessing which he had sold and sworn away. Bless me, even me also, O my father, i. e. Thou art my father no less than his, and therefore, as a child, I claim a share in thy blessing.

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

Which was thine by the right of nature, and by custom of nations, and by my hearty desire and intention, as well as by thy own expectation and opinion.

^e ch. 25. 26.
[¶] That is, a supplanter.
^f ch. 25. 33.

36 And he said, ° Is not he rightly named ¶ Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: ' he took away my birthright; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

He puts a perverse construction upon Jacob's name, as if it belonged not to him so properly, because of the manner of his birth, as because of his falseness and deceitfulness, and his tripping up his brother's heels. He took away my birthright; a false accusation; Jacob did not take it deceitfully, but Esau sold it profanely.

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, ° Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and ^h with corn and wine have I ¶ sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

The blessing of Abraham is not at my disposal, but God's, who hath manifested his mind and will by my error; it cannot be divided into several hands, nor imparted to one, who, though my son, yet hath made himself unworthy of it.

38 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father. And Esau lifted up his voice, ' and wept.

ⁱ Heb. 12. 17.

Hast thou but one? By these words Esau manifests his profane and worldly mind, that he esteemed this blessing but as one among many others equal to it, and did not apprehend the true and peculiar excellency and absolute necessity of it, and that it was impossible for him or his posterity to be happy without an interest in this covenant, and continuance in that church to which it was appropriated.

39 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, Behold, ^k thy dwelling shall be ¶ the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;

^k ver. 28.
^l Heb. 11. 20.
[¶] Or, of the fatness.

In a country competently fruitful and refreshed with convenient dews and showers. Object. Thus Esau seems to have the same blessing which was before given to Jacob. Ans. 1. Though it may seem to be the same as to the fertility of the soil, in which divers other parts of the world did and do equal the land of Canaan; yet there is an observable difference in the manner of Isaac's expression. When he speaks of Esau, he only saith, Thy dwelling shall be the fatness, &c. But when he speaks to Jacob, he saith, God give thee, or shall give thee of the fatness, &c.; which words being, as it may seem, purposely omitted concerning Esau, and so emphatically expressed concerning Jacob, seem to intimate, especially if compared with many other scriptures where that phrase is applied to good men, that Esau's fat soil was rather taken by himself than given by God; or if given by God to him, it was only by his general providence, by which he giveth food to all creatures; whereas Jacob's fat and fruitful soil was derived to him and his by God's special gift, as a token of his singular kindness, and pledge of greater blessings: 2. This is but one branch of the blessing; the other part, which concerns dignity and superiority, is expressly given to Jacob, ver. 29, and denied to Esau, ver. 40.

^l ch. 25. 23.
^l Obad. 18.
^m 19. 20.
ⁿ 2 Sam. 8. 14.
^m 2 Kings 8. 20.

40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and ' shalt serve thy brother; and ^m it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

By thy sword shalt thou live; by violence and rapine, in an unquiet and military posture, troubling others, and forced to defend thyself. But this, as also the following clause, though spoken to Esau, was not fulfilled in him, but in his posterity the Edomites, whose history makes good this prophecy. Thus things spoken and promised to Abraham were fulfilled in his posterity, as Gen. xii. 3; xxii. 18. When thou shalt have the dominion; when thou shalt grow potent. Some render the words thus, When thou shalt have mourned or groaned, as the same word is used Psal. lv. 2; when thou hast oppressed as long as I think fit.

n ch. 37. 4, 8. 41 ¶ And Esau ^a hated Jacob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, °The days of mourning for my father are at hand; ^p then will I slay my brother Jacob.

Esau hated Jacob; and this hatred was hereditary, extending to their posterity also. See Ezek. xxxv. 5; Amos i. 11; Obad. 10. Esau said in his heart, within himself; although he could not contain it there, but declared his intentions to some of his confidants, by which means it came to Rebekah's ear.

42 And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth ^a comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother ^r to Haran;

44 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

A few days; so she expected and intended, but was greatly disappointed, for he tarried there twenty years.

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send, and fetch thee from thence: why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

Of thee by Esau's bloody hands; and of Esau, who was likely to suffer death for his murder, either by the authority of the magistrate, as God commanded, Gen. ix. 6, or by the hand of God, who ofttimes supplies the magistrate's defects in that particular, and in some extraordinary manner executes this vengeance. See Gen. iv. 11, 16; Acts xxviii. 4.

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, °I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: °if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

The daughters of Heth, Esau's wives, who were Hittites, Gen. xxvi. 34. Therefore let us, after the example of Abraham, send him to fetch a wife from his own kindred. This indeed was one reason, but the other she conceals from Isaac; thus prudently alleging several reasons, one to Jacob, and another, as it is probable, to Esau, and each most suitable to the person to whom she speaks.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Isaac calls Jacob; charges him not to marry a Canaanite, but one of his kindred in Padan-aram, 1, 2; confirms the blessing to him, 3, 4. Jacob obeys his father, and goes to Laban, 5. Esau perceiving this, marries one of his kindred, but of Ishmael's family, 6—9. Jacob journeys towards Haran; in his way takes of the stones of the place for pillows, 10, 11; in a dream sees a ladder reaching from earth to heaven, angels ascending and descending on it, 12. The Lord standing above it, renews his covenant concerning Canaan and the promised seed, &c., 13—15. Jacob awakened, acknowledges God's presence there, and is afraid, 16, 17; sets up the stones for a pillar, pours oil on it, 18; names the place Beth-el, 19; makes a vow to be the Lord's, if God will return him in peace, 20—22.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and ^a blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, ^a Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

Blessed him, confirmed his former blessing, being now thoroughly sensible both of God's purpose, and of his own duty, wishing him also a prosperous and successful journey, as the word is used, Josh. xxii. 7.

2 ° Arise, go to ^a Padan-aram, to the house of ° Bethuel thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of ° Laban thy mother's brother.

The house of Bethuel. See Gen. xxii. 22, 23; xxv. 20.

3 ° And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be [†] a multitude of people;

4 And give thee ^b the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land [†] where-in thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

Bethuel the Syrian. Object. He was no Syrian, but a Mesopotamian. Ans. Syria is sometimes largely taken, and it comprehends Mesopotamia, or Chaldea, yea, and Assyria, as appears from Isa. xxxvi. 11; Dan. ii. 4.

6 ¶ When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing ^a that the daughters of Canaan [†] pleased not Isaac his father;

9 Then went Esau unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had ¹ Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael Abraham's son, ^m the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

Esau went unto Ishmael; either to his person, or rather to his family, called Ishmael by their father's name, as David is sometimes put for David's posterity; for Ishmael seems to have been dead before this, from Gen. xxv. 17, though that may possibly be a prolepsis, and then this may be Ishmael himself. Mahalath, called also Bashemath, Gen. xxxvi. 3. He thought by this means to ingratiate himself with his father, and so to get another and a better blessing; but he takes no care to reconcile himself to God, nor observes his hand in the business. Besides, he mends one fault by committing another, and taking a third wife when he had one too many before, and her too he unwisely fetcheth out of that stock which was begotten to bondage, and was utterly incapable of the inheritance. Nebajoth was Ishmael's eldest son, Gen. xxv. 13, who alone is here mentioned, either in the name of all the rest, whose sister she is by consequence supposed to be; or because peradventure she and Nebajoth were Ishmael's children by the same mother, and the rest by another.

n Hos. 12. 12.
o Called,
Acts 7. 2.
Charan.

10 ¶ And Jacob ^a went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward ^o Haran.

It is not strange that Jacob went alone, as it appears that he did from Gen. xxxii. 10, when his grandfather's servant was attended with a great retinue, Gen. xxiv., because attendance was then necessary to procure him reputation, and to obtain the consent of the virgin and her parents to so long a journey; but here, as it was unnecessary, so it would have been troublesome and prejudicial, exposing him both to the envy and snares of his brother Esau, which by this private departure he did avoid. Besides, God in his wise providence did so order this, and some other matters of the like nature, for the greater illustration of his care and kindness towards his children. Add to this the great simplicity, humility, and innocency of those times, if compared with ours, which made many things then usual which now would be ridiculous.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.

12 And he ^p dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold ^q the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

This ladder may be considered, either, 1. Literally, and so it represented to Jacob the providence of God, who, though he dwell in heaven, extends his care and government to the earth, and particularly makes use of the angels as ministering spirits for the good of his people. And these angels do not appear idle, or standing still, but always in motion, either ascending to God to receive his commands, or descending to earth for the execution of them. Which was a most reasonable vision for Jacob in his sad and sorrowful condition, that he might see that though he was forsaken and persecuted by men, and forced to flee away secretly for fear of his life, yet he neither was, nor should be, neglected or forsaken by God in this whole journey. Or, 2. Mystically, and so it represents Christ, by whom heaven and earth are united, who is called the way to heaven, which this ladder was, who, as the Head of angels, is perpetually sending them forth either to God or from God to minister to the heirs of salvation, Heb. i. 14; and this explication or accommodation of this vision, is warranted by our Saviour himself, John i. 51.

13 ^r And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, ^s I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: ^t the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And ^u thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt ^v spread abroad ^w to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and ^x in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

i. e. The nations of the earth, as that word is used.

15 And, behold, ^y I am with thee, and will ^z keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will ^a bring thee again into this land; for ^b I will not leave thee, ^c until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

Nor ever after; for so the word until is frequently used, as 2 Sam. vi. 23; Matt. i. 25; not so as to exclude the time following, but so as to include all the foregoing time, wherein the thing spoken of might be most suspected or feared; as here the worst and most dangerous state in which Jacob was, or was like to be, was this time of his banishment from his country and kindred, against which he is therefore particularly armed and comforted in these words.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in ^d this place; and I knew it not.

Surely the Lord is in this place, by his special and gracious presence, and the manifestation of his mind and will to me; and I little expected to meet with such a revelation out of my father's house, much less in this desert and doleful state and place, when I thought myself rejected by God, as well as abandoned by men.

17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

How dreadful is this place, or venerable, both for the majesty of the Person present, and for the glorious manner of his discovery of himself! The house of God; the habitation of God and of his holy angels.

18 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and ^e set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

As a monument of God's great kindness and gracious manifestation of himself to him, which might bring this mercy to his remembrance in his return, Gen. xxxi. 13. This was an ancient practice among the patriarchs, Gen. xxxv. 14; but afterwards, upon the growing abuse of it among the heathens, it was forbidden by God, Lev. xxvi. 1; Deut. vii. 5; xii. 3. The oil he brought with him either for food or medicine, or for the anointing of himself, as need required; and poured it upon the top of the stone, as a token of his consecration thereof to this use to be a memorial of God's favour to him. Oil was used in sacrifices, and in the consecration of persons and places, Exod. xxx. 25, 26; xl. 9.

19 And he called the name of ^g that place Beth-el: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.

Either of that city which was nearest to the field in which Jacob lay; or of that city which afterwards was built in or near to this place, and was known by the name of Bethel.

20 ^h And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If ⁱ God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me ^k bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

Jacob vowed a vow, i. e. bound himself by a solemn promise or obligation. Compare Gen. xiv. 22; Eccl. v. 4. If God will be with me. He speaks not thus as if he doubted of the truth of God's promises, or would, like a mercenary person, make a bargain with God, but rather supposeth that God will do this for him, as he ha' in effect promised, ver. 15, and thereupon obligeth himself to a grateful return to God for this mercy: If God will be with me, &c., as he hath just now assured me he will; or, Seeing God will be with me, &c., for the Hebrew im doth not always imply a doubt, but rather a supposition, and is oft rendered seeing that, as Exod. xx. 25; Numb. xxxvi. 4; 1 Sam. xv. 17; Amos vii. 2. And so the Greek particle answering to the Hebrew im is used, Matt. vi. 22; Luke xi. 34. Bread; food convenient, as it is called, Prov. xxx. 8, which is oft signified by the name of bread. See Gen. iii. 19.

21 So that ^l I come again to my father's house in peace; ^m then shall the LORD be my God:

I will publicly own him for my God and the Saviour of men, and will establish his solemn worship, as it follows.

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

God's house, i. e. a place where I will offer prayers and sacrifices to God; such places being commonly called God's houses, and God is oft said to dwell in them, in regard of his special presence there. See Exod. xx. 24. Compare ver. 17 of this chapter, and Gen. xxxv. 1, 3, 7. I will surely give the tenth unto thee, to be laid out in thy service, and for sacrifices, and for the use and benefit of those who

p ch. 41. 1.
Job 35. 15.

q John 1. 51.
Heb. 1. 14.

r ch. 35. 1.
& 48. 3.
s ch. 28. 24.

t ch. 13. 15.
& 35. 12.

u ch. 13. 16.

v Heb. break forth.
w ch. 13. 14.
Deut. 12. 20.

x ch. 12. 3.
& 18. 14. &
22. 18. &
26. 4.

y See ver.
20, 21.
ch. 26. 24.
& 31. 3.
z ch. 48. 16.
1s. 121. 5.
7. 8.
a ch. 35. 6.
b Deut. 38. 6.
Josh. 1. 5.
1 Kings 8. 57.
11. 13. 5.
c Num. 23. 19.

d Ex. 3. 5.
Josh. 5. 15.

e ch. 31. 13.
45. & 35. 14.
f Lev. 8. 10,
Hos. 2. 15.
Num. 7. 1.

g Judg. 1.
25, 26.
Hos. 2. 15.
h That is,
the house of God.

h ch. 31. 13.
Judg. 11. 30.
2 Sam. 15. 8.
i ver. 15.

k 1 Tim. 6. 8.

l Judg. 11.
31. 2 Sam.
19. 24, 30.
m Deut. 25.
17. 2 Sam.
17. 2 Sam.

1s. 8. 2 Kings 5. 17.

n ch. 35. 7.
14.
o Lev. 27.
30.

shall attend upon sacred things; as also for the relief of the poor and needy, whom God hath substituted in his room, and to whom part of the tithes were to be given by a following law, Deut. xiv. 28, 29.

CHAP. XXIX.

Jacob comes to the well of Haran, 1—3; inquires of the shepherds concerning Laban, 4—8. They show him Rachel, Laban's daughter, coming with the sheep, 9. Jacob goeth near to her; waters the flock, 10; tells her who he was, 12. She tells it her father, who brings him to his house, hears what had happened to him, 12—14. They bargain that Jacob should serve seven years for Rachel, 15—19. He performs his service, and desires her to be given him, 20, 21. Laban makes a feast, and invites all the men of the place, 22; and puts Leah, his eldest daughter, in the room of Rachel, 23—26. Jacob obtains Rachel, promising other seven years' service, 27—30. Rachel is beloved and barren; Leah hated, and bears Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, 31—35.

THEN Jacob † went on his journey, * and came into the land of the † people of the east.

† Heb. lift up his feet.
 † Num. 21. 7.
 Hos. 12. 13.
 † Heb. children.
 Heb. Jacob lift up his feet; which may note either the gesture of his body, that he went on foot; or the temper of his mind, that he went not sadly and unwillingly, drawing his legs after him, as we use to say, but readily and cheerfully, being encouraged by God's word. The land of the people of the east; which lay eastward from Canaan, as Mesopotamia did.

2 And he looked, and beheld a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

They, i. e. the people belonging to that place, watered; or, the flocks were watered; it is an impersonal speech. A great stone was upon the well's mouth, to preserve the water, which was scarce in those parts, and to keep it pure.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we. He calls them my brethren, partly in token of respect and affection, and partly because they were of the same nature and employment with himself.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, † Is he well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

According to the manner of those times, Exod. ii. 16; Cant. i. 7, 8, when humility, innocency, simplicity, and industry were in fashion, both among men and women of great quality. There are some that quarrel with the Scripture, and question the truth of such relations, because they judge of the state of ancient times and things by the present age, whereby they discover great folly and deep ignorance of the state of former ages.

7 And he said, Lo, † it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

Neither is it time that the cattle should be taken from their pasture, and brought to be watered.

8 And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

Either because of the greatness of the stone, which they could not remove till more help came; or rather because of the custom, order, and agreement made amongst themselves about it. We cannot, to wit, rightly; or we may not, as that word is used, Gen. xxxiv. 14; xliii. 32; xliv. 26.

9 ¶ And while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep: c Ex. 2. 16. for she kept them.

Having probably other shepherds under her, who did the meaner offices, whom she was to oversee.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

Either with the assistance of others, or by himself, he being then strong and lusty, and putting forth all his might before Rachel.

11 And Jacob * kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

Jacob kissed Rachel, as the custom of friends then was, both at their first meeting, as ver. 13; Gen. xxxiii. 4; Exod. iv. 27; xviii. 7, and at their departure, as Ruth i. 14; 1 Sam. xx. 41; 1 Kings xix. 20. Wept tears of joy, like those Gen. xxxiii. 4, at the gracious providence of God to him, which had brought him safe to his desired place, and so happily and strangely conducted him to that person and family which was so desirable and dear to him.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

Her father's brother; his near kinsman; as that word is frequently used, as Gen. xiii. 8; xxiv. 27.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

The tidings of Jacob; the report of his father's family, of the cause of his coming in so mean circumstances, of the occurrences in his journey, and of his providential meeting with Rachel at the well.

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him † the space of a month.

Thou art my bone and my flesh; of the same bone and flesh with myself, by our common grandfather Terah, and therefore art justly dear to me, and with me thou shalt be in safety. See the same or like expression, Gen. ii. 23; Judg. ix. 2; 2 Sam. xix. 12, 13.

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldst thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well favoured.

Leah was tender-eyed; her eyes were soft and moist, and therefore unsightly.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

It being then the custom for men to buy their wives. See Gen. xxxiv. 12; Exod. xxii. 17; 1 Sam. xviii. 25; 2 Sam. iii. 14; Hos. iii. 2.

19 And Laban said, It is better that I give her † Heb. is there grace to him?

 b ch. 43. 27.

† Heb. yet the day is great.

c ch. 33. 4.
 & 43. 14, 15.

f ch. 13. 8.
 & 14. 14, 16.
 g ch. 24. 28.

† Heb. hearing.
 h ch. 24. 29.

i ch. 2. 23.
 Judg. 9. 2.
 2 Sam. 5. 1.
 & 19. 12, 13.
 † Heb. a month of days.

k ch. 31. 41.
 2 Sam. 3. 14.

to thee, than that I should give her to another man : abide with me.

An ambiguous and crafty answer, wherein he doth not directly grant his desire, but only insinuates it in such terms as might hide his design, which the event showed.

1 ch. 30. 26.
Hos. 12. 12. 20 And Jacob ¹served seven years for Rachel ; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

He speaks not of the time, which in such cases seems long, Prov. xiii. 12, but of the service of that time, which seemed but little, and far below the worth of Rachel.

1753.

21 ¶ And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may ^mgo in unto her.

Give me my wife ; so she was by promise and contract ; persons betrothed or espoused being oft called wives in Scripture, as Matt. i. 18, 20 ; Luke ii. 5. My days are fulfilled, the seven years of service agreed upon, ver. 18.

n Judg. 14.
10. John 2.
1, 2. 22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and ^amade a feast.

His kindred and neighbours, according to the custom. See Judg. xiv. 10, 11 ; John ii. 1, 2, &c. He gathered a great number together, both that the marriage might be more solemn and public, and that Jacob might be overawed by their presence and authority, and not dare to disannul the marriage, and reject Leah afterwards, which otherwise he might have done.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him ; and he went in unto her.

The occasion of the deceit was the custom of those times, which was to bring the bride to her husband in the dark, and with a veil upon her face : see Gen. xxiv. 65. And Leah being instructed by her father, and confederate with him in the deceit, was, doubtless, careful not to discover herself by speech, or any other way, to him.

24 And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah Zilpah his maid for an handmaid.

25 And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah : and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me ? did not I serve with thee for Rachel ? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me ?

Though Laban could not solidly answer the question, yet Jacob could do it, and had just cause to reflect upon his own former action of beguiling his father ; for which God had now punished him in the same kind.

26 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, † to give the younger before the firstborn.

† Heb. place. This seems to be a false pretence ; but if it had been true, custom is to give place to justice, by which he was obliged to perform his contract with him.

o Judg. 14.
12. 27 °Fulfil her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

Fulfil her week, the seven days usually devoted to the feast and solemnity of marriage, as Judg. xiv. 12, 15, 17. And this he desired, that a week's cohabitation with Leah might either knit his affections to her, or at least confirm the contract and marriage with her.

28 And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week : and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

It was not so strange that Laban should give, as that Jacob should take, not only two wives, but two sisters to wife, which seems to be against the law of nature, and was expressly forbidden by God afterward, Lev. xviii. 18 ; though it be also true that God might dispense with his own institution, or permit such things in the patriarchs upon special reasons, which are not to be drawn into example.

29 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her maid.

30 And he went in also unto Rachel, and he ^ploved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him ^qyet seven other years.

p ver. 20.
Deut. 21. 15.
q ch. 30. 26.
& 31. 41.
Hos. 12. 12.

31 ¶ And when the LORD ^rsaw that Leah was hated, he ^sopened her womb : but Rachel was barren.

r Ps. 127. 3.
s ch. 30. 1.

Leah was hated comparatively to Rachel, less loved, slighted. So that word is oft used, as Deut. xxi. 15 ; Matt. vi. 24 ; x. 37, compared with Luke xiv. 26 ; John xii. 25. Thus variously doth God distribute his favours, that all may be contented and none despised.

32 And Leah conceived, and bare a son, and she called his name ¶ Reuben : for she said, Surely the LORD hath ^tlooked upon my affliction ; now therefore my husband will love me.

cir. 1752.
¶ That is, see a son.
t Ex. 3. 7.
& 4. 31.
Deut. 28. 7.
Ps. 25. 18.
& 106. 44.

The Lord hath looked upon my affliction with an eye of pity and kindness, as that general phrase is oft understood.

33 And she conceived again, and bare a son ; and said, Because the LORD hath heard that I was hated, he hath therefore given me this son also : and she called his name ¶ Simeon.

cir. 1751.

¶ That is, hearing.

The Lord hath heard, i. e. perceived or understood ; hearing being oft put for understanding.

34 And she conceived again, and bare a son ; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have born him three sons : therefore was his name called ¶ Levi.

cir. 1750.

¶ That is, joined.
See Num. 18. 2, 4.

This time will my husband be joined unto me in more sincere and fervent affection.

35 And she conceived again, and bare a son : and she said, Now will I praise the LORD : therefore she called his name ¶ Judah ; and † left bearing.

cir. 1749.

u Matt. 1. 2.
¶ That is, praise.
† Heb. stood from bearing.

Now will I praise the Lord more solemnly and continually ; for otherwise she did praise and acknowledge God for the former mercies.

CHAP. XXX.

Rachel being barren, envies her sister, impatiently desires children of Jacob, 1. He is angry, and reproves her, 2. She gives him her handmaid Bilhah, who bears him Dan and Naphtali, 3—8. Leah ceasing to bear, gives Zilpah her maid to Jacob, 9. She bears him Gad and Asher, 10—13. Reuben, Leah's son, finds mandrakes, and brings them to his mother ; Rachel desires them ; they bargain, 14, 15. Jacob goes in to Leah, who conceives again and bears Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah, 16—21. God remembers Rachel ; she conceives and bears Joseph, 22—24. Jacob desires to return unto his own country with his wives and children, 25, 26. Laban denies his consent ; having learnt by experience that God had blessed him for Jacob's sake, 27. They make a new contract, 28—36. Jacob's device, and the success of it, 37—43.

AND when Rachel saw that ^ashe bare Jacob no children, Rachel ^benvied her sister ; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, ^cor else I die.

cir. 1749.
a ch. 29. 31.
b ch. 37. 11.

c Job 5. 2.

A speech full of impatience, and bordering upon blasphemy, and striking at God himself through Jacob's sides ; for which therefore she afterwards smarted, dying by that very means whereby she hoped to prevent her death, and prolong her life, Gen. xxxv. 18.

2 And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel : and he said, ^dAm I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb ?

d ch. 16. 2.
1 Sam. 1. 5.

Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel for the injury done to himself, and especially for the sin against God, in which case anger is not only lawful, but necessary. Am I in God's stead? It is God's prerogative to give children. See Gen. xvi. 2; 1 Sam. ii. 5, 6; Psal. cxliii. 9; cxxvii. 3.

3 And she said, Behold ^emy maid Bilhah, go in unto her; and she shall bear upon my knees, ^ethat I may also [†]have children by her.

She shall bear upon my knees; an ellipsis or short speech; She shall bear a child which may be laid upon my knees, or in my lap, which I may adopt and bring up as if it were my own. See Gen. i. 23; Isa. lxvi. 12. That I may also have children by her; for as servants, so their work and fruit, were not their own, but their masters'.

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid ^hto wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

5 And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, God hath [†]judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name ^{||}Dan.

God hath judged me, pleaded my cause, or given satisfaction for me, as this phrase is oft taken.

7 And Bilhah Rachel's maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With [†]great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name ^{||}^kNaphtali.

With great wrestlings, Heb. With wrestlings of God; either with great and hard wrestlings or strivings, or by wrestling with God in fervent prayer, and by God's grace and strength. I have prevailed; which was not true; for her sister exceeded her both in the number of her children, and in her propriety in them, being the fruit of her own womb, not of her handmaid's, as Rachel's were. Here is an instance how partial judges most persons are in their own causes and concerns.

9 When Leah saw that she had left bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and [†]gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name ^{||}Gad.

A troop cometh, or, good luck cometh; my design hath well succeeded; a happy star hath shone upon me; and such a star in the opinion of astrologers is that of Jupiter, which by the Arabians is called Gad. This may well agree to Leah and her heathenish education, and the manners of the Chaldeans, who were much given to the study of the stars.

12 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, [†]Happy am I, for the daughters [™]will call me blessed: and she called his name ^{||}Asher.

The daughters of men, i. e. women, as Prov. xxxi. 29; Cant. vi. 9.

14 [¶]And Reuben went in the days of wheat harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, [™]Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

Mandrakes: the word is only found here and Cant. vii. 13, whence it appears that it is a plant or fruit of pleasant smell, such as the mandrake is said to be by Dioscorides and Levinus Lemnius, and by St. Austin upon his own experience. If it be said this was too early for mandrakes to be ripe, it being now but wheat-harvest; it may be replied, that fruits ripen much sooner in those hot countries than elsewhere, and that they are not here said to be ripe, but only to be gathered. Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes; which she might desire, either because they were pleasant to the eye or taste, or because they were thought helpful to conception.

15 And she said unto her, [°]Is it a ^o ^{Num. 16. 9, 13.} small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to night for thy son's mandrakes.

Jacob either did equally divide the times between his two wives; or rather, had more estranged himself from Leah, and cohabited principally with Rachel, which occasioned the foregoing expostulation.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

He ratified their agreement, that he might preserve peace and love amongst them.

17 And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.

God hearkened unto Leah, notwithstanding her many infirmities. Hence it appears that she was moved herein not by any inordinate lust, but by a desire of children.

18 And Leah said, God hath given me my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name ^{||}Issachar.

Thus she mistakes the answer of her prayers for a recompence of her error.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

20 And Leah said, God hath endued me ^{with} a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name ^{||}^pZebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name ^{||}Dinah.

22 [¶]And God [°]remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and [†]opened her womb.

23 And she conceived, and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away [°]my reproach:

Barrenness was then accounted a great reproach, especially in that race, because it was a kind of curse, whereby such persons were excluded both from the first and general blessing of fructification given to all mankind, Gen. i. 28; and from the special blessing given to Abraham for the multiplication of his seed; and from all hopes of being the progenitors of the blessed Messias.

24 And she called his name ^{||}Joseph; and said, [°]The Lord shall add to me another son.

25 [¶]And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, [°]Send me away, that I may go unto [™]mine own place, and to my country.

Canaan, which he calleth his country, in regard both of his former and long habitation in it, and of the right which he had to it by God's promise: see chap. xxviii. 13.

26 Give me my wives and my children, [°]for whom I have served thee, and let

e ch. 16. 2.
f ch. 50. 23.
Job 3. 12.
g ch. 16. 2.
† Heb. be built by her.

n ch. 16. 3. & 35. 22.
cir. 1748.

i Pa. 35. 24. & 43. 1.
Lam. 3. 59.

|| That is, judging.

† Heb. wrastlings of God.
ch. 23. 6.
|| That is, my wrestling.
k Called, Matt. 4. 13, Nephthalim.

1 ver. 4.
cir. 1748.

|| That is, a troop, or, company.
Is. 55. 11.

† Heb. In my happiness.
m Prov. 31. 28.
n Luke 1. 43.
|| That is, happy.

cir. 1748.

n ch. 25. 30.

cir. 1747.

|| That is, an hire.

cir. 1746.

|| That is, dwelling.
p Called, Matt. 4. 13, Zebulun.
cir. 1745.
|| That is, judgment.
q ch. 31. 1.
I Sam. 1. 18.
r ch. 29. 31.

s 1 Sam. 1. 6.
Is. 4. 1.
Luke 1. 25.

u ch. 24. 54, 56.
w ch. 18. 33. & 31. 55.

x ch. 29. 20, 30.

me go: for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for ¹ I have learned by experience that the LORD hath blessed me ² for thy sake.

28 And he said, * Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, ^b Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

How carefully it was managed, and how greatly improved by my care and industry.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now † increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee † since my coming: and now when shall I ^c provide for mine own house also?

For it was little comparatively to what now it is. Since my coming; Heb. at my foot, i. e. upon my coming; since my feet entered into thy house: or, by my foot, i. e. by my ministry and labour, as this phrase is used, Deut. xi. 10. When shall I provide for mine own house also, according to my duty, which also is thy interest?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me any thing: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock:

32 I will pass through all thy flock to day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and ^d of such shall be my hire.

Speckled and spotted cattle, which may seem to be thus distinguished; speckled with little spots, and spotted with greater spots or stains, both of diverse colours from the rest of the body. Or, the speckled may be the same with the ring-straked, by comparing this with ver. 35. All the brown cattle; or black, or dark-coloured; for the Hebrew word signifies also great heat which produceth such a colour. Of such shall be my hire; or, then shall be my hire; and for then, as is frequent in Scripture. The sense is, Then, when the speckled, and spotted, and brown are separated, and none but white remaining, my hire shall be out of those white ones, and that in such manner as is expressed in the following verse, all the white young ones shall be thine, and the speckled, and spotted, and brown which shall be brought forth by those white ones shall be mine.

33 So shall my ^e righteousness answer for me † in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

When the cattle shall, contrary to their natural and usual course, bring forth young ones of a contrary colour to their own, it will hereby be evident that this is the work of God, who hereby pleads my righteous cause against a cruel and unjust master. Or thus, When thou shall accuse me of doing thee injury, I shall have this manifest and undeniable evidence of my righteousness or innocency, that I have no cattle but of that colour which is by agreement appropriated to me. When it shall come for my hire before thy face. When it, i. e. my righteousness, shall come to, or upon my reward, i. e. when my righteousness shall appear in the very colour of that cattle which is allotted to me for my reward or hire; before thy face, i. e. thou being present and diligently observing whether I have any cattle of another colour. But the Hebrew word tabo is also of the second person, and so the sense seems to be this, When thou shalt come upon my hire or reward, to wit, to observe and see whether I have any other cattle than what belongs to me. And so these words come in by way of parenthesis; and the following words, before my face, are to be joined to the former words, thus, so shall my righteousness answer for me in time to come (when thou shalt come upon my hire) before thy face. This I prefer before the other, because the phrase of coming upon his hire seems more properly to agree to a person than to his righteousness.

34 And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

Laban trusted to the course of nature, whereby cattle usually bring forth their young of their own colour; and Jacob relied upon the providence of an Almighty God, and his gracious Father.

35 And he removed that day the he goats that were ringstraked and spotted, and all the she goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons.

The he-goats that were ring-straked, which had lines or strakes like bands about them of diverse colours from the rest of their body. Every one that had some white: this word some is oft understood in other texts of Scripture, and here it is so necessarily; as appears both from the thing itself, as it is related, and from the phrase; for he saith not that was white, but that had white in it, to wit, mixed with other colours.

36 And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

Three days' journey; understand it of the journeying or travelling of sheep, not of men. He did this lest either Jacob should mingle and exchange the sheep, or the sheep, by the contemplation of the diverse coloured ones, should bring forth others like to them.

37 ¶ And ^f Jacob took him rods of ^g green poplar, and of the hazel and chesnut tree; and pilled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

Jacob took rods: this he did by Divine appointment, as will appear in the sequel, which is sufficient for Jacob's justification. Took rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chesnut tree; either because these trees were next at hand, or because he saw these in the Divine vision afterwards mentioned, and would exactly follow his pattern. He made the white appear, by pilling off the rind which covered it.

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink.

When by their refreshment and meeting together, they were most likely to generate and conceive.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ringstraked, speckled, and spotted.

The flocks conceived; Heb. were heated, i. e. inflamed or excited, and disposed to conceive, and this in a more than ordinary manner by the Divine disposal. The event hath some foundation in nature, because of the great power of imagination; and there are divers instances in many authors, both of women and of beasts, who either by the strong fancying, or by the actual and frequent contemplation, of some certain objects, have brought forth young ones exactly of the same colour and complexion, as one did an Ethiopian, &c. But the providence of God was the principal cause of this effect, without which the productions of that kind would neither have been so many nor so certain. This policy of Jacob's could scarcely be excused from deceit and injustice, if it were not manifest that it was done by the direction and authority of the sovereign Lord of all

y ch. 30. 3. 5.

z see ch. 26. 24.

a ch. 29. 15.

b ch. 31. 6, 38, 39, 40. Matt. 24. 45. Tit. 2. 10.

+ Heb. brook-en, fur/h. ver. 43.

+ Heb. at my foot. c 1 Tim. 5. 6.

d ch. 31. 8.

e Ps. 37. 6.

+ Heb. to morrow. Ex. 13. 14.

f See ch. 31. 9-12.

estates, Gen. xxxi. 9, 11, &c., who may take them from one, and give them to another, as it pleaseth him; who also observed Laban's injustice, and gave to Jacob no more than he abundantly deserved from Laban.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ringstraked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

Jacob did separate the lambs, such as were ring-straked and brown from the white, as it here follows. He caused the ring-straked and all the brown to go foremost, and the white to follow them, that by the continued beholding of them in the time of their conjunction, they might have their colour more imprinted upon their fancies, and thereby convey it to their young ones. He put them not unto Laban's cattle; which he did upon the same reason, lest the constant beholding of them should make them bring forth the like, i. e. single-coloured ones.

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

It is known that the cattle in those parts did conceive and bring forth twice in a year, at spring and in autumn; and it is supposed that the stronger here mentioned, are such as joined in the spring, and the feeble they that joined in autumn.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man ^e increased exceedingly, and ^h had much cattle, and maid-servants, and menservants, and camels, and asses.

CHAP. XXXI.

Jacob observing Laban's envy, on God's command and promise, with the consent of his wives, departs secretly, 1—21. Laban pursues him; God in a dream warns him not to treat Jacob ill; he overtakes him on Mount Gilead; taxes him sharply for his secret departure, and with stealing his gods, 23—30. Jacob excuses his departure, 31; denies the taking either gods or ought else that was Laban's, 32. Laban searches, but finds not, 33—35. Jacob is wroth, and rebukes him vehemently for all he had suffered from him, 36—41. He owns God as his defence in the day of his affliction, 42. They make a covenant, in which Laban obliges Jacob not to hurt his daughters, nor take other wives to them, 44—52. Jacob swears by the fear of Isaac, and offers sacrifice, 53, 54. Laban returns to his place, 55.

1739. AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this

^a glory. These riches, which are called glory, Gen. xlv. 13; Psal. xlix. 16; Isa. lxvi. 12, compared with Isa. lx. 6, because their possessors use to glory in them, and by them gain glory and esteem from others.

2 And Jacob beheld ^b the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not ^c toward him [†] as before.

And this change of his countenance argued a change in his mind, and presaged some evil intentions in him towards Jacob.

3 And the LORD said unto Jacob, ^d Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,

Rachel is first named here, as also Ruth iv. 11, because she was his chief, and, by right, his first and only designed wife. And therefore it is observable, that in the enumeration of Jacob's wives and children, Gen. xlvi., Leah is only mentioned by her name, ver. 15, but Rachel is called Jacob's wife, ver. 19, by way of eminency, and in a peculiar manner. In the field they might more freely discourse of their business, and without fear or interruption.

5 And said unto them, ^e I see your fathers countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father ^f hath been with me.

Either, 1. Hath blessed me; hath stood constantly by me, when your father hath failed and deceived me. Or, 2. Hath appeared unto me, as ver. 13.

6 And ^g ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

With all my power, both of my mind and body, as I would have done for myself, as became a faithful servant to do.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and ^h changed my wages ⁱ ten times; but God ^k suffered him not to hurt me.

Ten times, i. e. oftentimes, as that certain number is commonly used, as Lev. xxvi. 26; Numb. xiv. 22; 1 Sam. i. 8; Job xix. 3, &c.

8 If he said thus, ^l The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, ^m The ring-straked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ringstraked.

All the cattle. All is here, as oft elsewhere, put for the greater or the better part, as appears from chap. xxxi. 1, 8. Or, for all that Jacob desired to be such. The ring-straked shall be thy hire; hence it appears that Laban through envy and covetousness did break his agreement made with Jacob, and altered it as he thought meet, and that Jacob patiently yielded to all such changes.

9 Thus God hath ⁿ taken away the cattle of your father, and given ^o them to me.

10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the ^p rams which leaped upon the cattle were ringstraked, speckled, and grised.

i. e. Were marked with spots, like hail in colour and proportion, as the word signifieth.

11 And ^q the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: And I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ringstraked, speckled, and grised: for ^r I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am the God of Beth-el, ^s where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now ^t arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

Where thou vowedst a vow unto me; of which see Gen. xxviii. 19, 20. And this God here mentions to show his acceptance of that action of Jacob's, his mindfulness even of the past and forgotten services of his people, and his purpose now to fulfil the promise there made to him.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, ^u Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

We can expect no further benefit from him, but deceit, and oppression, and injury, and therefore are willing to leave him. This was the fruit of his unnatural and unworthy

g ver. 30.
h ch. 13. 2.
& 24. 35. &
26. 13, 14.

g ver. 30,
30, 40, 41.
ch. 30. 20.

h ver. 41.
i Num. 14.
22.
Neh. 4. 12.
Job 19. 3.

k ch. 20. 6. Ps. 105. 14.

l ch. 30. 32.

|| Or, he goats.

n ch. 48. 16.

o Ex. 3. 7.

p ch. 28. 18, 19, 20.

q ver. 3.
ch. 32. 9.

r ch. 2. 24.

b ch. 4. 5.
c Deut. 28.
54.
† Heb. as yesterday and the day before. 1 Sam. 19. 7.

d ch. 28. 15, 20, 21. & 32.
a.

carriage to them, that it did eat out their natural affection to him.

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for ^{s ch. 29. 15, 27.} he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

Are we not counted of him strangers? as if we had no more right to his estate than strangers? Instead of a good part of his estate, which by the law of God and nature belongs to us, 2 Cor. xii. 14, wherewith he should have endowed us upon our marriage, he hath made sale of us for this fourteen years' hard service, seeking only his own, not our advantage. He hath not only withheld from us, but spent upon himself, that money which he got by thy care and industry, whereof a considerable part was due in equity to us and to our children.

16 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is our's, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

That is ours; not only by God's special gift, but by the natural right which children have to a share in his estate, and upon the account of thy faithful and laborious service.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the † images that were her father's.

Quest. 1. What were those teraphim or images? Answ. They were images made in the shape of men, 1 Sam. xix. 13, 16, which the Gentiles worshipped as subordinate gods, ver. 30, 32 of this chapter, to which they committed the protection of their families, 1 Sam. xix. 13, which they used to consult about secret or future things, and from which they received answers about them, Ezek. xxi. 21; Zech. x. 2. Of these see more Judg. xvii. 5; xviii. 14, 17, &c.; Hos. iii. 4. And these idols Laban worshipped together with the true God. Quest. 2. Why did Rachel steal them? Answ. Partly, lest her father by consulting them should discover their flight, and the course which they took; and partly, because she seemed yet to retain a superstitious conceit of them, as may be gathered from Gen. xxxv. 2. Others, because they were pretty and precious things, made of silver and gold, which she took as a part of what was due to her, both as his daughter, and for her husband's service. Others, that she might remove so great an occasion of her father's idolatry, and show him the vanity of such gods as might be stolen away.

20 And Jacob stole away † unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

Heb. Stole away the heart of Laban, to wit, his daughters, his cattle, and his gods, upon which his heart was vehemently set, as Micah's was, Judg. xviii. 24. But if this had been meant, it had been imputed to Rachel, and not to Jacob, who knew nothing of the gods. Or rather, stole away from the heart, &c., the Hebrew eth being put for meeth, as Gen. iv. 1; xlix. 25; 1 Kings viii. 43, compared with 2 Chron. vi. 33; Micah iii. 8, i. e. without the knowledge and consent of Laban, which sense is confirmed by the words next following, and by ver. 26, 27, and by the like use of the phrase, 2 Sam. xix. 3. Thus he fled, because he knew Laban's selfish, and unrighteous, and cruel disposition, that he would always hinder him from departing, either by fraudulent pretences or by open force, nor suffer so great a diminution in that estate, which he thought one time or other he might in good measure recover to himself.

21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river, and † set his face toward the mount Gilead.

The river Euphrates, which lay between Mesopotamia and Chaldea, Gen. xv. 18, which for its largeness and famousness is oft called the river emphatically, as Exod. xxiii. 31; Josh. xxiv. 2, 3, &c.

And set his face, i. e. resolutely directed his course. See Jer. l. 5; Luke ix. 51, 53.

Mount Gilead, a very high and long mountain beyond Jordan, adjoining to the mountain of Lebanon, at the foot of which there was a large and fruitful country, which from the mountain received the name of Gilead, Deut. xxxiv. 1; Jer. viii. 22; xxii. 6. This mountain is here called Gilead by anticipation, as appears from ver. 48.

22 And it was told Laban on the third day that Jacob was fled.

That he heard of it no sooner must be ascribed to the great distance which Laban had put between his and Jacob's flocks, Gen. xxx. 36, and to the care and art which Jacob used to prevent a sooner discovery.

23 And he took † his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.

24 And God † came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou † speak not to Jacob † either good or bad.

Neither persuading him by flattering promises and cunning artifices, nor compelling him by threatenings, to return. For so these general words must be limited, as is evident from God's design in them, and from the following relation. So this is a synecdochical expression.

25 ¶ Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and † carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

By force and violence. A false accusation; for they freely consented, ver. 14—16.

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and † steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me † to kiss my sons and my daughters? † thou hast now done foolishly in so doing.

To kiss my sons and my daughters, as was usual at the parting of friends. See the note on Gen. xxix. 11. But indeed Jacob took the wisest course for the security of his person and estate, especially having the direction and protection of God in it.

29 It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the † God of your father spake unto me † yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

The God of your father, Isaac or Abraham, by which he disowns him for his God, and tacitly reproacheth him with the novelty of his religion, which was first brought in by his father. Compare ver. 53.

30 And now, though thou wouldst needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou † stolen my gods?

Laban could not be so senseless as to take those for true gods which could be stolen away; but he called them gods, because they were the means or representations whereby he worshipped his gods.

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldst take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, † let him not live: before our bre-

u ch. 46. 28.
2 Kings 12
77. Luke 9.
51, 53.

The river Euphrates, which lay between Mesopotamia and Chaldea, Gen. xv. 18, which for its largeness and famousness is oft called the river emphatically, as Exod. xxiii. 31; Josh. xxiv. 2, 3, &c.

y ch. 20. 3.
Job 33. 15.
Matt. 1. 20.
z ch. 24. 50.
† Heb. from good to bad.

a 1 Sam. 30.
2.

+ Heb. hast stolen me.

b ver. 55.
Ruth 1. 9.
14. 1 Kings
19. 20.
Acts 20. 37.
e 1 Sam. 13.
13. 2 Chron.
16. 9.

d ver. 53.
ch. 28. 13.
e ver. 24.

f ver. 19.
Judg. 18. 24.

g See ch. 44.

thren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

Let him not live; I give my consent that he shall die by the hands of justice. A rash and inconsiderate sentence.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into Leah's tent, and into the two maidservants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

The men and women's tents were distinct and separate. See Gen. xviii. 2; xxiv. 67.

34 Now Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. And Laban †searched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease my lord that I cannot ^hrise up before thee; for the custom of women ⁱis upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

Quest. How could that occasion hinder her from rising up to her father? Ans. 1. It might be attended in her, as it was and is in some other women, especially in those hot countries, with a great flux of blood, or with more than ordinary infirmity and sickness; and this Laban might know to be usual with her by former observation or information. 2. She offers this as a reason, not why she could not rise up to show a civility to him, but why she could not rise up from his face, or from before him, as the words in the Hebrew sound, i. e. so as to give way to him that he might come and search there for the images; because menstruous women were anciently esteemed polluted, and to pollute the things which they touched or sat upon, as you may see by Lev. xv. 19—22; which law, though it were not yet given and written, yet that, as well as divers other ceremonial rites, might be enjoined by God, and observed by sober heathens at that time, especially by such as were akin to Abraham, as Laban and his family were, who by that means might easily come to the knowledge of such matters. Add to this, one of the seven precepts given to the sons of Noah, was that of uncovering nakedness; which both Jewish and Christian writers take to be a very comprehensive expression, and to include all such things as have a natural turpitude in them, among which this is confessed to be one. And the words thus understood contain a solid and satisfactory reason why Laban should not now come near her, nor search the things which she sat upon, which had been an uncivil and immodest thing.

36 ¶ And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

With so much fury and violence.

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

Thy she-goats have not cast their young, which thou owest in a great measure to my care and diligence in ordering them, and principally to God's blessing given to thee for my sake, by thy own confession, Gen. xxx. 27.

39 ⁱThat which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss ^kof it; ^kof my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

Which was unjust and unreasonable, except where it fell out through the shepherd's default. See Exod. xxii. 13. Quest. How could Jacob pay these losses, seeing he came empty from his father's house, and got nothing by his service, for the first fourteen years, but his wives? Ans.

Either, 1. He had some supplies sent from his father, though it be not mentioned in this history. Or, 2. He might have some inconsiderable allowances or privileges from Laban, out of which he could easily defray these charges, which because of his great care and watchfulness did but seldom happen. Or, 3. These losses were put to his account, to be satisfied by him as soon as he should be able to do it.

40 Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

Through my extraordinary thoughtfulness and care about thy cattle, especially in cases of danger.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I ^lserved thee fourteen years ^lfor thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle: and ^mthou hast changed my wages ten times.

42 ⁿExcept the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and ^othe fear of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. ^pGod hath seen mine affliction and the labour of my hands, and ^qrebuked thee yesternight.

The fear of Isaac, i. e. the God whom my father Isaac worships with reverence and godly fear, as appears by comparing ver. 53. The act is here put for the object, as it frequently is; and particularly God is called our fear, Isa. viii. 13. And fear is one of God's names amongst the rabbins. He calls him not Isaac's God, but his fear. because Isaac was yet alive, and in the state of probation, and served God with fear and trembling: see Gen. xxvii. 33. The Jews observe, that God is not called the God of any particular person, as of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, till after their death. God hath seen my affliction, with compassion and intention of good to me for it. God's seeing is oft used for his relieving and helping, as Gen. xvi. 13; xxix. 32; Exod. iii. 7, 9. Or, hath showed or proved it, to wit, that he hath seen, &c.: compare Gen. xx. 16. Either way it is an ellipsis of the pronoun, which is usual, as appears by comparing 1 Kings x. 7, with 2 Chron. ix. 6; and Psal. xli. 9, with John xiii. 18.

43 ¶ And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

He pretends that to be an act of his natural affection and kindness which was indeed the effect of his fear.

44 Now therefore come thou, ^rlet us make a covenant, I and thou; ^sand let it be for a witness between me and thee.

Both to our own consciences of our mutual obligations, and to God against either of us who shall break it, that he may severely punish us for it.

45 And Jacob ^ttook a stone, and set it up for a pillar.

In testimony of his compliance with Laban's proposal, and his entering into this covenant. See Exod. xxiv. 4.

46 And Jacob said unto his brethren, Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

To wit, afterwards, ver. 54, though it be here mentioned by anticipation. They did eat there upon the heap, or rather by or beside the heap, as the Hebrew particle al is oft understood, as Psal. xxiii. 2; lxxxi. 7.

47 And Laban called it ^uJegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it ^vGaleed.

Both names signify the same thing, a heap of witness; only Laban gives the name in the Syrian language; but Jacob, though he had been long conversant in Syria, and understood that language, yet he chose to give it in † Heb. felt.

h Ex. 20. 12.
Lev. 19. 32.

l ch. 29. 27.
28.

m ver. 7.

n Ps. 124. 1.
2.
o ver. 53.
Is. 8. 13.

p ch. 29. 32.
Ex. 3. 7.
q 1 Chron.
12. 17.
Jude 8.

r ch. 28. 28.
s Josh. 24.
27.

t ch. 28. 18.

u That is, the heap of witness. Heb. Child.

v That is, the heap of witness. Heb.

Hebrew, which was both a secret renouncing of the Syrian manners and religion, together with their language, and an implicit profession of his conjunction with the Hebrews, as in their tongue, so in their religion.

^x Josh. 24. 27. 48 And Laban said, "This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed;

49 And ^x || Mizpah; for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives beside my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee.

The curse is here understood, as it commonly is, to maintain a greater reverence for oaths, and to beget a greater dread of the curse belonging to the violators of it.

No man is with us, i. e. here is now no man with us, who when we are parted can witness and judge between us, and punish the transgressor. Or thus, Though now we have many with us, as witnesses of this agreement, yet shortly, when we shall be parted, no man will be with us, to observe and report our actions to the other, or to do the injured person right.

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

53 The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, ^y judge betwixt us. And Jacob ^z swore by ^a the fear of his father Isaac.

The God of Nahor, the God of their father. He joins idols with the true God, and secretly chargeth the religion of Jacob and Abraham with novelty, and prefers his own as the most ancient religion. See Josh. xxiv. 2. Whence we may learn that antiquity of itself is no certain argument of the true church or religion.

^y Or, killed beasts. 54 Then Jacob || offered sacrifice upon the mount, and called his brethren to eat bread; and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

Then Jacob offered sacrifice; either to give God thanks for the great mercies and deliverances vouchsafed to him, or to beg God's blessing upon the present treaty, and upon their whole family. But it is not so probable that Jacob would choose that time for the offering of sacrifices when Laban was present, whom he could neither honestly admit to them, nor conveniently exclude from them. And therefore, seeing the same Hebrew word signifies killing as well as sacrificing, as appears from Numb. xxii. 40; 1 Sam. xxviii. 24; 1 Kings i. 9; 2 Chron. xviii. 2, &c., I rather understand it of his killing of beasts, in order to a feast which he made for his brethren, whom he called, as it here follows, to eat bread, &c., under which phrase all meats are usually comprehended in Scripture, as hath been already noted, and will appear hereafter. And this practice was usual in those times, to confirm covenants by a feast. See Gen. xxvi. 30.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, and ^b blessed them: and Laban departed, and ^c returned unto his place.

^b ch. 28. 1.
^c ch. 18. 33.
& 30. 25.

CHAP. XXXII.

The angels of God meet Jacob, 1. He calls them God's host, and the place Mahanaim, 2. Sends messengers to his brother Esau, 3—5. They return, and bring word that Esau comes to meet him with four hundred men, 6. Jacob is afraid; divides his people and cattle into two bands, 7; gives orders concerning them, 8; prays to God in a very fervent and humble manner, 9—12; sends presents to his brother, with directions; gets his wives and children over the ford by night, 13—23. Jacob wrestles with God, and prevails; is called Israel: God blesseth him; he inquires after God's name; calls the place Peniel: Jacob halts, 24—31. The Jews' observation in memorial of it, 32.

AND Jacob went on his way, and ^a the ^a angels of God met him.

In visible, human, and glorious shape, as they frequently appeared to the patriarchs.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, ^b This is God's ^b host: and he called the name of that place || Mahanaim.

God's host; so the angels are justly called for their great number, Dan. vii. 10; Luke ii. 13, excellent order, mighty power, and for their use and service to God, and to his church, for whose protection they are sent. See 2 Kings vi. 17; Psal. xxxiv. 7. Mahanaim, i. e. two hosts; so called, either because the angels divided themselves into two companies, and placed themselves some before, others behind him, or some on each side of him, for his greater comfort and security; or because the angels made one host, and his family another.

3 And Jacob sent messengers before ^c him to Esau his brother ^c unto the land of Seir, ^d the ^d country of Edom.

The land of Seir; of which see Gen. xiv. 6; xxxvi. 9, 20, 21; whither Esau had removed his habitation from Canaan, partly out of discontent at his parents; partly as most convenient for his course of life; and principally by direction of Divine Providence, that Canaan might be left free and clear for Jacob and his posterity. The land of Seir, the country of Edom; so that Seir and Edom either are one and the same place; or rather Seir was a part of Edom. Some say both names are put here for distinction. For they make two lands of Edom, the one southward from Canaan, the other eastward, and this latter they understood here, alleging that the other, or southern, was so remote from Mount Gilead, whence Jacob was now descending, that Jacob need not fear Esau at that distance, nor send to him. But as that distinction seems to be without solid ground, so this reason seems to have but little weight in it, both because though this history immediately follows his descent from Mount Gilead, yet it might be done some competent time after it, and because Jacob in his journey to those parts where his father Isaac lived, and whither he was going, was still drawing nearer and nearer to Esau.

4 And he commanded them, saying, ^e Thus shall ye speak unto my lord Esau; ^e Thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

My lord Esau; which title being but a civil respect commonly given in Scripture to such persons as have no authority nor superiority over them who use it, as Gen. xxiii. 6; xxiv. 18, Jacob doth not hereby renounce his right of primogeniture which was devolved upon him, nor return it to Esau. Nor if he did hereby acknowledge Esau his superior for the present, would this have been injurious to that right, because Jacob was not yet in actual possession of it, for it was not to commence till his father's death; and indeed did more belong to his posterity than to his person; and as to his person, did more respect his spiritual advantages than his worldly greatness. See Gen. xxvii. 29. I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now, as a stranger and exile, and so a more proper object for thy pity than for thy envy.

5 And ^f I have oxen, and asses, flocks, ^f and menservants, and womenservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that ^g I may find grace in thy sight.

Yet in my exile God hath blessed me with a competency

^a Ps. 91. 11.
Heb. 1. 14.

^b Josh. 5. 14.
18. 103. 21.
& 148. 2.
Luke 2. 13.

|| That is,
two hosts, or, camps.

^c ch. 33. 14,
16.
^d ch. 36. 6,
7, & Deut.
2. 5. Josh.
24. 4.
^e Heb. field.

^f ch. 30. 43.

^g ch. 33. 8,
15.

of worldly goods, and therefore I am not likely to be either a burden to thee, or a disgrace to our family. And I have sent to tell my lord, to acquaint him with my coming, and with the state of my affairs, that I may obtain pardon for my former errors, and thy favour and friendship for the future.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also ^hhe cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.

Esau gave them but an imperfect and a doubtful answer, as appears from Jacob's fear, ver. 7. He brought four hundred men with him; either as his usual guard, he being then a great man in those parts; or in ostentation of his power and greatness, in spite of all the injury which his father or brother did him; or because at first he designed mischief to Jacob, as may seem by his dismissing of his messengers without any testimony of his favour, though afterwards, upon Jacob's prayer, God changed his mind.

7 Then Jacob was greatly afraid and ⁱdistressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

Notwithstanding the renewed promise of God, and the late apparition of angels, Jacob was greatly afraid; wherein he showed the weakness of his faith, to which God left him for his trial and exercise, and to quicken him to prayer, that so God might have more glory, and he more comfort in the mercy.

8 And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

Either by flight, or because he supposed Esau's revenge would be satisfied with the first slaughter.

9 ¶ ^kAnd Jacob said, ^lO God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD ^mwhich saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

It is observable, that Jacob directs his prayers to God immediately, and not to the angels, though now, if ever, he had reason and obligation to do so, from their visible apparition to him for his success and comfort.

10 † I am not worthy of the least of all the ⁿmercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with ^omy staff I passed over this Jordan; and now I am become two bands.

The truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant, in fulfilling thy promises made to me; and much more am I unworthy of those further mercies which I am now about to beg of thee. Having nothing with me but my travelling staff for my support, I passed over this Jordan; or, that Jordan; either which I now see, as being at this time upon a high hill; or which my mind is set upon, as that river which I am going to repass, that I may go to my father, and to that good land which thou hast given to me and mine for ever; and now I am become two bands, or two troops, or companies; into which he had now divided his people and cattle, ver. 7.

11 ^pDeliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and ^qthe mother † with the children.

A proverbial speech, noting a total destruction. Compare Deut. xxii. 6; Hos. x. 14.

12 And ^rthou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand ^sa present for Esau his brother;

^s ch. 43. 11.
^t Prov. 18. 16.

Either that which was in his hand and power; or rather, that which was nearest at hand, and most ready for him, because the approaching night, and his own great fear, gave him not leave to make so scrupulous a choice as otherwise he would have made.

14 Two hundred she goats, and twenty he goats, two hundred ewes, and twenty rams, 15 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine, and ten bulls, twenty she asses, and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

That his gift might be represented to Esau with most advantage, and his mind might by little and little be sweetened towards him.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

Coming to see thy face, and beg thy favour.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will ^tappease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept † of me.

^t Prov. 21. 14.

^u Heb. my face. Job 42. 8, 9.

I will appease him; Heb. appease or allay his anger; for the Hebrew word panim signifies both anger, as Psal. xxi. 9; xxxiv. 16, and face, as every where, because a man's anger is most discernible in his face or countenance, Prov. xxi. 14. He will accept of me; Heb. will lift up my face or countenance, which now is dejected with the sense of his displeasure; compare Gen. iv. 6; or, will accept of my person, as this phrase is oft used.

21 So went the present over before him: and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two women-servants, and his eleven sons, ^vand passed over the ford Jabbok.

His eleven sons, and Dinah, though she be not here mentioned; as the women are oft omitted in Scripture, as being comprehended under the men. Passed over the ford Jabbok, which is here generally related, but the time and manner of it is particularly described in the following verses. Of this ford Jabbok, see Numb. xxi. 24; Deut. iii. 16.

23 And he took them, and † sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

^w Heb. caused to pass.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone; and there ^xwrestled a man with him until the † breaking of the day.

^x Hos. 12. 3, 4. Eph. 6. 12. ^y Heb. ascending of the morning.

In some private place, it matters not on which side Jabbok, that he might more freely and ardently pour out his soul unto God. There wrestled a man with him, an angel, yea, the Angel of the covenant, the Son of God, as it is plain from ver. 28, 30; Hos. xii. 3, 4, who did here, as oft elsewhere, assume the shape and body of a man, that he might do this work; for this wrestling was real and corporeal in its nature, though it was also mystical and spiritual in its signification, as we shall see, and it was accompanied with an inward wrestling by ardent prayers joined with tears, Hos. xii. 4.

^k Ps. 50. 15.
^l ch. 28. 13.

^m ch. 31. 3, 13.

ⁿ Heb. I am less than all, &c.
^o ch. 24. 27.

^p Job 8. 7.

^q Ps. 59. 1, 2.

^r Hos. 10. 14.
^s Heb. upon.

^t ch. 28. 13, 14, 15.

25 And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and ^y the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

Not through impotency, but in design, the angel suffered himself to be conquered, to encourage Jacob's faith and hope against the approaching danger. The hollow of his thigh, the joint of his hip-bone, or rather the hollow in which that joint was. The hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, which was done that Jacob might see that it was not his own strength, but only God's grace, which got him this victory, and could give him the deliverance which he hoped for.

26 And ^z he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, ^a I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

And he said, Let me go: he saith this, partly to show the prevailing power of his prayer with God, and partly to quicken and encourage Jacob to persist in his conflict. Compare Exod. xxxii. 10; Deut. ix. 14. The day breaketh, and I am not willing that there should be any spectators or witnesses of these things. Except thou bless me with the blessings which thou hast promised to Abraham and to me, among which one is protection in this hour of my danger. For Jacob now began to think that it was no man, nor ordinary angel, that was with him, but God himself, as he saith, ver. 30.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, ^b Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou ^c power with God and ^d with men, and hast prevailed.

No more Jacob, not Jacob only. See the like manner of expression 1 Sam. viii. 7; Jer. xxiii. 7; John vii. 16; 1 Cor. i. 17. Israel signifies a prince or prevailer with God; or, a prince of God, i. e. a great prince and conqueror. Thou hast in some sort conquered both God in this conflict and men, Laban, Esau, &c., and hast prevailed; or, and shalt prevail over Esau, of whom thou art afraid.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, ^e Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

Tell me, I pray thee, thy name, that I may give thee the honour due to it. Art thou a created angel, or art thou the ever-blessed God? Wherefore dost thou ask after my name? a question which carries in it both a denial of his request, as Judg. xiii. 17, 18, and a reproof of his curiosity. He blessed him there, in an eminent and peculiar manner, which was a real answer to Jacob's question, and gave him to understand both his name and nature.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for ^f I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

I have seen God face to face; not in his essence, for no man ever saw God, John i. 18, nor yet in a dream or vision, but in a most evident, sensible, familiar, and friendly manifestation of himself. My life is preserved; I am now well assured of my safety from Esau, whose approach threatened my life. Or he speaks of it with wonder, as others did, that he should see God, and not be struck dead by the glory of his presence. Compare Gen. xvi. 13; Exod. xx. 19; Judg. vi. 22, 23; xiii. 22.

31 And as he passed over Peniel the sun rose upon him, and he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

Not from any superstitious conceit about it, but only for a memorial of this admirable conflict, the blessed effects whereof even the future generations received.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Jacob sets his wives and children in the order they shall travel, 1, 2; meets his brother; his obedience to him, 3. Esau kindly embrace Jacob, 4. His wives and children present themselves to Esau, 7. Jacob offers a present to his brother, 8. He refuses it, 9. Jacob presses him, and he accepts, 10, 11. They part friendly, 12—15. Esau returns to Seir; Jacob comes to Succoth, 17; from thence he goes to Shalem; where he buys a field for one hundred pieces of money; builds an altar; calls it El-elohe-Israel, 18—20.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, ^a Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindmost.

Placing his best beloved in the last and safest place.

3 And he passed over before them, and ^b bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

He passed over before them, exposing himself to the first and greatest hazard for the security of his wives and children.

4 ^c And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, ^d and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those [†] with thee? And he said, The children ^e which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, [†] What meanest thou by [†] all this drove which I met? And he said, These are ^e to find grace in the sight of my lord.

He knew his meaning before from the servants' mouths; but he asks, that he might both be more certainly informed of the truth, and have an occasion for a civil refusal of the gift.

9 And Esau said, I have enough, my brother; [†] keep that thou hast unto thyself.

I neither need it for my use, nor desire it as a compensation for thy former injuries.

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I ^h have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

For therefore I have seen thy face; or, for I therefore tender it unto thee, and humbly beg thy acceptance of it, because; for thus the Hebrew al-cen is used, Numb. xiv. 43, and elsewhere. As though I had seen the face of God. It is in a manner as pleasant a sight to me as the sight of God himself, because in thy reconciled face I see the face and favour of God thus manifested unto me.

^y See Matt. 26. 41. 2 Cor. 12. 7.

^z See Luke 24. 28. ^a Hos. 12. 4.

^b ch. 35. 10. 2 Kings 17. 34. [†] That is, a prince of God. ^c Hos. 12. 3, 4. ^d ch. 25. 31. & 27. 33.

^e Judg. 13. 18.

[†] That is, the face of God. ^f ch. 16. 13. Ex. 24. 11. & 33. 20. Deut. 5. 24. Judg. 6. 22. & 13. 22. Is. 6. 5.

^a ch. 32. 6

^b ch. 18. 2. & 42. 6. & 43. 26.

^c ch. 22. 28. ^d ch. 45. 14. 15.

[†] Heb. to thee. ^e ch. 48. 9. Ps. 127. 3. Is. 8. 18.

[†] Heb. What is all this band to thee? ^f ch. 32. 16. ^g ch. 32. 5.

^h ch. 43. 3. 2 Sam. 3. 13. & 14. 24, 25, 32. Matt. 18. 10.

1 Judg. 1. 15.
1 Sam. 25.
27. & 30. 26.
2 Kings 5.
15.
+ Heb.
all things.
Phil. 4. 18.
1. 2 Kings 5.
23.

11 Take, I pray thee, ¹my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have [†]enough. ²And he urged him, and he took it.

Take, I pray thee, my blessing; this gift, which as I received from God's blessing, so I heartily give it to thee with my blessing and prayer, that God would abundantly bless it to thee. Gifts are oft called blessings, as Josh. xv. 19; 1 Sam. xxv. 27; xxx. 26.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

Or rather, beside thee, so as to keep thee company, or to keep pace with thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me: and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

The children are tender; the eldest of them, Reuben, not being yet fourteen years old. The flocks and herds with young are with me; or, upon me, i. e. committed to my care, to be managed as their necessities require. See Isa. xl. 11.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according [†]as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be able to endure, until I come unto my lord ¹unto Seir.

† Heb. according to the foot of the work, &c. and according to the foot of the children. I ch. 32. 3.

We do not read that Jacob did according to this promise or insinuation go to Seir; either therefore he changed his first intentions for some weighty reasons, or upon warning from God; or he used this only as a pretence, which we should not too easily believe of so good a man, especially after such dangers and deliverances; or rather he did perform this promise, though the Scripture be silent of it, as it is of many other historical passages, and as it is here concerning Jacob's visiting of his father Isaac, which is not mentioned till ten years after this time; and yet it is utterly incredible that Jacob should be so near to his dear and worthy father for so long a time together, and not once give him a visit.

15 And Esau said, Let me now [†]leave with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, [†]What needeth it? ¹let me find grace in the sight of my lord.

+ Heb. act, or, place.
+ Heb. Wherefore in this? m ch. 34. 11. & 47. 25. Ruth 2. 13.

16 ¶ So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 And Jacob journeyed to ²Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called [¶]Succoth.

n Josh. 13. 27.
Judg. 8. 5.
Ps. 60. 6.
¶ That is, booths.

Built him an house, which doubtless was some slight building, because he intended not to stay there.

18 ¶ And Jacob came to ³Shalem a city of [¶]Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padan-aram; and pitched his tent before the city.

o John 3. 23.
¶ Called, Acts 7. 16, Shechem p. Josh. 24. 1. Judg. 9. 1.

Shalem; most take it for the proper name of a place belonging to Shechem, as it here follows, called Salim, John iii. 23, and Sichem or Sychar, John iv. 5. But others take it for an appellative noun, and render the place thus, he came safe or whole to the city of Shechem; to note either that he was then cured of the lameness which the angel gave him; or rather, to note the good providence of God that had brought him safe in his person, family, and estate through all his dangers, first from Laban, then from Esau, till he came to this place, where it seems he intended to make his abode for a good while, had not the following miscarriages obliged him to remove. Before the city. i. e. near to it, but not in it, for the conveniency of his cattle.

19 And ⁴he bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of [¶]Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred [¶]pieces of money.

¶ Called, Acts 7. 16, Emamor. ¶ Or, lambs.

He bought a parcel of a field for his present possession and use; for the right which he had to it was only in reversion after the time that God had allotted for it.

The children of Hamor, i. e. subjects, called his children to note the duty which they owed to him, and the care and affection that he owed to them. Compare Numb. xi. 12.

An hundred pieces of money. The word is used only here, and Josh. xxiv. 32; Job xlii. 11, and it may signify either lambs, given in way of exchange for it, or pieces of money, which seems more probable, both by comparing Acts vii. 16, and because money was come into use in that place and time, Gen. xvii. 12, 13; xxiii. 16; xlvii. 16, which were called lambs possibly from the figure of a lamb stamped upon it, as the Athenian money was called an ox for the like reason, and as we call a piece of gold a Jacobus, because the picture of that king is upon it.

20 And he erected there an altar, and called it [¶]El-elohe-Israel.

r ch. 35. 7. ¶ That is, God the God of Israel.

Or, called upon El-elohe-Israel, the particle to being redundant, as such pronouns oft are, as Gen. xii. 1; Josh. xx. 2.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Dinah going forth to see the daughters of the country, is abused and defiled by Shechem, son of Hamor, 1, 2; who loves her, 3; desires to marry her, 4. Jacob hears it, 5. Hamor treats with Jacob and his sons, 6—12. They answered him deceitfully, making a condition that all the males of the Shechemites should be circumcised, 13—17. They and their citizens consent to it, 18—23; are circumcised, and, when sore, surprised and murdered by Simeon and Levi; the city is plundered by Jacob's sons; the women and children are carried away captive, 24—29. Jacob is exceedingly troubled and afraid, 30. They justify themselves, 31.

AND ¹Dinah the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, ²went out to see the daughters of the land.

cir. 1732. s ch. 30. 21. b Tit. 2. 5.

From her father's house into the city, out of curiosity, there being then, as Josephus reports, a great concourse of people to a feast. Thus she put herself out of her father's protection, and merely out of a vain humour exposed both herself and others to temptation; which was the worse, because it was amongst them that had no fear of God to restrain them from the most enormous crimes. She was now fourteen or fifteen years old.

2 And when Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, ³saw her, he ⁴took her, and lay with her, and [†]defiled her.

c ch. 6. 2. Judg. 14. 1. d ch. 30. 2. + Heb. Armed her. Deut. 22. 29.

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake [†]kindly unto the damsel.

+ Heb. to the heart of the damsel. See Is. 40. 2. Hos. 2. 14.

Perceiving her to be exceedingly enraged and perplexed at this horrid violence, he endeavours to appease and sweeten her, and to get her consent to marry him.

4 And Shechem ⁵spake unto his father Hamor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.

e Judg. 14. 2.

He desires both his father's consent and assistance herein.

5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: now his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Jacob [†]held his peace until they were come.

f 1 Sam. 10. 27. 2 Sam. 13. 22.

Being unable to punish the delinquent, and not knowing what to do, he waits for his sons' coming and advice.

6 ¶ And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they ^s were very wroth, because he ^h had wrought folly in Israel in lying with Jacob's daughter; ⁱ which thing ought not to be done.

Because he had wrought folly; that is, wickedness; which howsoever vain men many times esteem their wisdom, by the sentence of the all-wise God is accounted and commonly in Scripture called folly, as Deut. xxii. 21; Josh. vii. 15; Judg. xix. 23; xx. 6, &c. In Israel, or, against Israel; either, 1. Against the person, and in or against the family of Israel, a person near and dear to God, and highly honoured by him, and in covenant with God; who therefore esteems the injuries done to Israel as if they were done to himself. See Gen. xii. 3; Exod. xxiii. 22; Zech. ii. 8. Or, 2. In or against the church of God, which then was in a manner confined to that family, and which is oft called by the name of Israel. See Deut. xxii. 21; Josh. vii. 15. And Moses may here vary the phrase from what was used in Jacob's time to what was usual in his time, the sense being in both the same, and therefore not altered by such a change.

Which thing ought not to be done; Heb. shall not be done, i. e. should not, &c. But in the Hebrew language words of the future time oft signify duty and decency, as Mal. i. 6; ii. 7.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

Hamor communed with them; with Jacob's sons, to whom Jacob committed the business, being himself oppressed with shame and grief, and fear for his daughter. Your daughter, the daughter of your family; or he thus speaketh to her brothers, because they transacted all in their father's name.

9 And make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and ^k the land shall be before you; dwell and ^l trade ye therein, and ^m get you possessions therein.

Before you, i. e. in your power, to dwell where you please, and to have the same rights and privileges in which we enjoy. See Gen. xx. 15. Get you possessions therein; or, take possession in it, i. e. in any vacant part of it; use it for pasture or tillage, as you think good, and take the benefit to yourselves.

11 And Shechem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

12 Ask me never so much ⁿ dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

Dowry to her for her portion, according to the ancient custom of men's buying their wives; of which see Exod. xxii. 17; and gift to you, either for reparation of the past injury, or in testimony of my respect to you, and desire of her, as Gen. xxiv. 53.

13 And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father ^o deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Dinah their sister:

Deceitfully; pretending and promising marriages with them upon that condition which they never intended.

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for ^p that were a reproach unto us:

There was no such law yet in force, as the examples of Isaac and Jacob show, who married the daughters of uncircumcised persons; and therefore they do not here reject it as simply unlawful, but only as dishonourable and reproachful.

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

16 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was ^q more ^r honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying,

The gate of their city, the place where all public affairs were debated and concluded. See on Gen. xxii. 17; xxiii. 10.

21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall not their cattle and their substance and every beast of their's be our's? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

Shall not their substance be ours? either for our use and benefit in the way of commerce and trade; or because they will descend to the issue of our children as well as theirs; or because we being more numerous and potent than they, can easily overrule them, and when we think meet, dispose all things to our own advantage. Thus they cover their private design with the specious show of public good.

24 And unto Hamor and unto Shechem his son hearkened all that ^r went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

They yielded to circumcision, partly in compliance with their young prince, whom they either loved or feared; and partly for the prospect of their own advantage, for which men are frequently willing to expose themselves to great pains and hazards. All that went out of the gate of his city; all the citizens that went out of the gate, &c., or came in at the gate, as they are described Gen. xxiii. 10; Jer. xvii. 20. For when the chief persons had consented, they could easily persuade or overrule others to comply with them.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, ^s Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

On the third day, when the pain and grief of wounds is the greatest, as physicians note, when they were sore, and therefore not well able to defend themselves; for circumcision caused great pain in children, which was the ground of that exclamation, Exod. iv. 25, much more in grown men. See Josh. v. 8. Simeon and Levi: these two only are mentioned, because they were authors of the counsel, and conductors of the rest in the execution; but it is probable, from ver. 27, that most of their brethren were con-

g ch. 49. 7.
h Sam. 13. 21.
i Josh. 7. 15.
j Judg. 20. 6.
k Deut. 23.
l 17. 2 Sam.
m 13. 12.

k ch. 13. 9.
& 20. 15.
l ch. 42. 34.
m ch. 47. 27.

n Ex. 22. 16,
17.
Deut. 22. 29.
1 Sam. 18.
25.

o See 2 Sam.
13. 24, &c.

p Josh. 5. 9.

q ch. 49. 5, 6, 7.

federate with them, and that they had a considerable number of their servants with them, who would be ready enough to revenge their masters' quarrel, and to punish so great a villany; but all that was done is justly ascribed to them two, as it is common for all writers to say this or that was done by such a captain or general, when in truth it was done by his soldiers. Dinah's brethren; so they were both by the father and mother, which made them more forward and zealous than the rest. All the males; such of them as were grown up, by comparing ver. 29, for these, or some of them, seem to have been the abettors of the injury against their sister and family. Their sin in this act was manifold; that they did it without sufficient authority, and against their father's mind, as appears from ver. 30, and Gen. xlix. 6, which they well knew; and without all bounds, rashly, unjustly, and cruelly punished the innocent and the guilty together, and ushered in this fact with horrible deceit and lying, and that under pretence of friendship and show of religion.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the † edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.

They, i. e. one of them, as oftentimes that which is done by one man is imputed to the whole body. See Josh. vii. 1, 11, 12; xxii. 20; Matt. ii. 20. Or they impute Shechem's fact to all, either invidiously and cunningly to take off from themselves the reproach of this cruel action; or because they made themselves guilty of it, either by not discouraging and hindering that filthiness as far as they might, or by their being instrumental in it, or by their approbation of it and complacency in it.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,

Thus they add to their cruelty theft and robbery, which doubtless Jacob disowned when they brought the spoil home, and returned back both the surviving people and their goods, though it be passed over in silence, as many other things are. See on Gen. xxxiii. 14.

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

Either in the prince's house, or in their several houses; or within doors, as the word signifies.

30 And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, 'Ye have troubled me to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.'

You have not only discomposed my mind, but perplexed my affairs, and brought me into such troubles and dangers as I am never likely to escape. You have made me odious to the inhabitants of the land, who will impute this perfidious and bloody fact to my contrivance. Few in number; Heb. men of number, i. e. few; for such can easily be numbered. So this phrase is used Deut. iv. 27; xxxiii. 6, opposite to which are men without number, 2 Chron. xii. 3. They shall slay me: he could expect no other in human reason, and they were hindered from so doing only by the hand of the great God smiting them with terror, Gen. xxxv. 5.

31 And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

Shall we express no more resentment of this abominable abuse of our sister, than if she had been some common harlot, whose abuse no man either regardeth or revengeth? Thus they excuse one fault by committing another, and defend themselves by accusing their father of stupidity, and insensibleness of so great an indignity and injury.

CHAP. XXXV.

God commands Jacob to dwell at Beth-el, and build an altar there, 1. He commands his family to purge themselves from idols, and go to Beth-el, 2, 3. They obey, 4. He and they go thither, none pursuing them; the reason thereof, 5, 6. There he builds an altar, 7. The death and burial of Rebekah's nurse, 8. God appears to Jacob, confirms his name of Israel, renews the promises, 9—13. For which he sets up a pillar, pours oil thereon, and calls the place Beth-el, 14, 15. Going thence Rachel dies in labour of Benjamin, and is buried there, 16—20. Reuben commits incest in his father's house, 22. Jacob's sons' names, 23—26. Jacob visits his father Isaac, 27. His age, death, and burial, 28, 29.

AND God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to Beth-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

This was a word in season to comfort his disquieted mind, and convey him to a safer place. Understand, and pay thy vows there made in the time of thy distress, but not yet paid; whether it was Jacob's error to forget and neglect his former vows and promises; or whether he waited for a fit time, or an admonition from God concerning the season of paying them.

2 Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the strange gods that are among you, and be clean, and change your garments:

The strange gods, the idols, which are so called here, and Deut. xxxi. 16; xxxii. 12; Josh. xxiv. 20, because they were the gods of strange and foreign nations, such as all were accounted who were not Israelites. Quest. How came these to be and to continue so long in Jacob's house. Answ. Either, 1. By Rachel's means, who brought them from her father's house, which haply was not discovered till this time. Or, 2. By Leah, and by Jacob's two concubines, who might possibly bring such with them. Or, 3. By the means of Jacob's Gentile servants, who might secretly worship such gods; or having taken them from the Shechemites, they might keep them for their precious matter, as gold and silver, though not for religious use. Like a good man, and a good master of a family, he takes care not only for himself, but for all his family, to keep them from the exercise of a false religion, and to engage them as far as he can in the profession and practice of the true. Compare Gen. xviii. 19; Josh. xxiv. 15.

Be clean; cleanse yourselves by outward and ritual washing, as Exod. xix. 10, 14, which even then was in use; and especially by purging your hearts as well as hands from these idols, which I perceive, to my sorrow, some of you have still retained; and from your late detestable cruelty; that you may be fit to approach to that God who hath now summoned me and you to make a solemn appearance before him. Change your garments, either by putting on new garments, as 2 Sam. xii. 20, or by washing the old ones, as Exod. xix. 10; Lev. xv. 13. And these, as well as other ceremonial institutions and practices, were professions of their repentance; which consists in putting off the old man, and putting on the new, Eph. iv. 22.

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went.

He takes God's gracious promise, and the comfortable hope and assurance of God's favour to him, and care of him, impressed by God upon his mind and heart, for an answer to his prayers, though he had then seen no success nor accomplishment of God's word to him.

4 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their earrings which were in their † Heb. month.

t ch. 49. 6.
u Josh. 7. 25.
x Ex. 5. 21.
1 Sam. 13. 4.

γ Dent. 4. 27.
Ps. 105. 12.

d ch. 19. 19.
Josh. 24. 15.
e ch. 31. 19.
34. Josh.
24. 2. 23.
1 Sam. 7. 3.
f Ex. 19. 10.

g ch. 32. 7.
24.
Ps. 107. 6.
h ch. 28. 20.
& 31. 3, 42.

i Hec. 2. 13.

ears; and Jacob hid them under ¹the oak which was by Shechem.

Either because they had been abused to idolatry and superstition at Shechem, or elsewhere, and therefore were to be destroyed according to God's command, now signified to Jacob, and afterwards delivered to his posterity, Deut. vii. 5; xii. 3; or for fear they should be so abused. For the Scripture seems to insinuate, and other writers expressly affirm, that divers heathen people did wear earrings for the honour of their idols, and with the representations or en-signs of their idols engraven upon them. See Judg. viii. 24. After he had melted or broken them, (which seems probable from parallel instances, as Exod. xxxii. 20; 2 Kings xviii. 4.) Jacob hid them under a certain oak, though not known to his family which it was. He chose that place, either as most proper to put monuments of idolatry under those trees which were so much and so generally abused to idolatry, as oaks especially were, Isa. i. 29; or as the safest place, where they were likely to remain longest hid, because the heathen had a veneration for oaks, and therefore would not cut them down, nor dig them up, nor do any thing which had a tendency that way.

5 And they journeyed: and ¹the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

The terror of God, i. e. a great terror sent from God, as Exod. xxiii. 27; Josh. ii. 9, 11; 2 Chron. xiv. 14; xvii. 10. So we read of a sleep of God, 1 Sam. xxvii. 12. Nothing less could have secured Jacob, considering the great number, power, and rage of his enemies.

6 ¶ So Jacob came to ^mLuz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Beth-el, he and all the people that were with him.

In the land of Canaan, properly so called, or where the Canaanites properly so called dwelt. Thus it is distinguished from another Luz, Judg. i. 26.

7 And he ⁿbuilt there an altar, and called the place || El-beth-el: because ^othere God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

El-beth-el, i. e. He confirmed the name which he had formerly given to the place.

8 But ^pDeborah Rebekah's nurse died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el under an oak: and the name of it was called || Allon-bachuth.

She came with Rebekah into Canaan, Gen. xxiv. 59, and probably carried with her whilst she lived, and after her death, as it seems; and, upon Jacob's desire, after his return from Haran, came into his family; where, being a person of great prudence and piety, her presence and advice was very useful in his numerous and divided family. Allon-bachuth, from the great lamentation which they made there for the loss of a person of such singular worth.

9 ¶ And ^qGod appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: ^rthy name shall not be called any more Jacob, ^sbut Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

Israel shall be thy name. I do not repent of the change which I made of thy name, but I do again confirm it; and as then thou didst prevail over thy brother Esau, so now thou shalt prevail over those of whom thou art afraid.

11 And God said unto him, ^t'I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; ^ua nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins;

A company of nations, tribes, for number and power, equal to so many nations, shall come out of thy loins, i. e.

shall be begotten by thee, as this phrase is taken also in Gen. xvi. 26; 1 Kings viii. 19; Acts ii. 30.

12 And the land ^wwhich I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And God ^xwent up from him in the place where he talked with him.

God went up from him; either locally and visibly, to wit, in that human shape in which he appeared to him; or by withdrawing the signs of his special presence, as Gen. xvii. 22; Judg. xiii. 20; as on the contrary God is said to come down, not by change of place, but by some signal manifestation of his presence and favour, as Exod. iii. 8; Numb. xi. 17.

14 And Jacob ^yset up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone: and he poured a drink offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

Either he repaired the old pillar set up by him, Gen. xxviii. 18, which was ruined by the injury of time, or by the neighbouring idolaters; or rather erected a new one, more stable and durable than he could do in that time, as a monument or witness of God's manifold favours, and of his own gratitude. The drink-offering was of wine, as may be gathered by comparing Exod. xxix. 40; Numb. xxviii. 14.

15 And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him, ^zBeth-el.

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el; and there was but ⁺a little way to come to Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; ⁺thou shalt have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died) that she called his name || Ben-oni: but his father called him || Benjamin.

In departing; or, in going out; namely, out of the body, as Psal. cxlvi. 4, which is an argument of the soul's immortality, especially if compared with Eccl. xii. 7. From which places, laid together, we learn the two terms of the journey, whence it goes, and whither it goes. Benjamin; either as near and dear and precious to him as his right hand, which is both more useful and more honourable than the left; see Psal. lxxx. 17; or instead of his right hand, the staff, stay, and comfort of his old age.

19 And ^bRachel died, and was buried in the way to ^cEphrath, which is Beth-lehem.

In the way to Ephrath; not in the city, though that was near; for in ancient times their sepulchres were not in the places of resort, but in separated places, and out of cities. See Matt. xxvii. 60; Luke vii. 12.

20 And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave ^dunto this day.

Jacob set a pillar, as a monument or memorial of her life and death, and as a testimony of her future resurrection. Unto this day, i. e. unto the time wherein Moses writ this book, and long after. See 1 Sam. x. 2; Jer. xxxi. 15.

21 ¶ And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond ^ethe tower of Edar.

Or, the tower of the flock: a place where were excellent pastures. See Micah iv. 8.

22 And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and ^flay with Bilhah his father's concubine:

1 Josh. 24.
25
Judg. 9. 6.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

Deut. 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9.
& 5. 1.

1 Sam. 14.
15. 2 Chron.
14. 14.

1 Ex. 15. 16.
& 23. 27.
& 34. 24.

w ch. 12. 7.
& 13. 15.
& 26. 3. 4.
& 28. 13.

x ch. 17. 22.

y ch. 28. 18.

z ch. 28. 19.

+ Heb. a little piece of ground.

2 Kings 5. 18.

n ch. 50. 24.
1 Sam. 4. 20.

o ch. 28. 13.

¶ That is, the son of my sorrow.

¶ That is, the son of the right hand.

b ch. 48. 7.
c Ruth 1. 2.
& 4. 11.
Micah 5. 2.
Matt. 2. 6.

d 1 Sam. 10. 18. 18.

e Mic. 4. 8.

f ch. 49. 4.
1 Chron. 5. 1.
See 2 Sam. 16. 22. & 29. 3. 1 Cor. 5. 1.

and Israel heard it. Now the sons of Jacob were twelve :

This was a horrid incest; for concubines were a sort of wives. See Gen. xxii. 24; xxv. 1. Israel heard it, and doubtless sadly resented it, both in Reuben, as appears from Gen. xlix. 4; 1 Chron. v. 1, 2; and in Bilhah, whose bed without question he forsook upon it, as afterwards David did in the like case. See 2 Sam. xvi. 22; xx. 3. Yet here is no mention of Jacob's reproof of it, nor any censure of Moses added to it; possibly to teach us, that we are not to approve of every fact which is mentioned in Scripture without censure, and that the miscarriages of professors of religion are rather to be silently bewailed than publicly reproached, lest religion should suffer by it. The sons of Jacob were twelve, which were heads of the twelve tribes; therefore his daughter Dinah is not here mentioned, because she was not the head of a tribe.

g ch. 46. 8. 23 The sons of Leah; ^g Reuben, Jacob's firstborn, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun :

24 The sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin :

25 And the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan, and Naphtali :

26 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad, and Asher: these are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padan-aram.

All but Benjamin, who must in all reason be supposed to be excepted here, because he is said to be born elsewhere, above, ver. 16. But it is a usual synecdoche, whereby that is ascribed to all in gross which belongs to the greatest part. See Gen. xv. 13; xvi. 15; Exod. xii. 40; Judg. xx. 46; John xx. 24; 1 Cor. xv. 5.

27 ¶ And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto ^h Mamre, unto the ⁱ city of Arbah, which is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

Jacob came; either with his wives, and children, and estate, to dwell with Isaac; or rather in person, to visit his sick and dying father; for otherwise Jacob having been ten years near his father, no doubt he had oft visited him, and carried his wives and children thither, though Scripture be silent in this particular: but they could not live together because of the greatness of their estates, as it happened with others. See Gen. xiii. 6; xxxvi. 7.

28 And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.

29 And Isaac gave up the ghost, and ^k was gathered unto his people, ^l being old and full of days: and ^m his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

Was gathered unto his people; either to the society of the dead, or to the congregation of the just. See Gen. xv. 15; xxv. 8.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Esau's wives and children born in Canaan, 1—5. They remove from Jacob to Seir; the reason, 6—8. His posterity, 9—19; as also that of Seir the Horite, 20; among whom is Anah, who first found out mules in the wilderness, 24. His children, 25—30. A catalogue of kings and princes in Edom, 31—43.

cir. 1796. NOW these are the generations of Esau, ^a who is Edom.

They are here mentioned partly to show the effect of his father's blessing, chap. xxvii. 39; partly that the Israelites might be admonished to treat the Edomites like brethren, and not to invade their land. See Deut. xxiii. 7.

b ch. 26. 34. 2 ^b Esau took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and ^c Aholibamah the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

If this account be compared with that Gen. xxvi. 34, we shall find some difficulties, which yet admit of an easy reconciliation, if these things be considered. 1. That it is very usual, and confessed by all, that the same persons are oft called by several names. 2. That the names of some persons are in Scripture given to others, because of a great resemblance between them. Upon which account the parents of the Israelites are called Amorites and Hittites, Ezek. xvi. 3; and the governors of Jerusalem are called the rulers of Sodom and Gomorrah, Isa. i. 10; and John the Baptist is called Elias, Matt. xvii. 12. 3. That the same men are oftentimes denominated from several countries, as Christ is noted to have a threefold country in Scripture; Bethlehem by his birth, Nazareth by his education, and Capernaum by his much residence and preaching there. 4. That the same names are sometimes common to men and women. 5. That persons are called the children, not only of their immediate parents, but of their grandparents, and of those who adopted them. These things premised, the seeming contradictions objected by infidels do vanish. She who was properly called Judith, chap. xxvi., is here called Aholibamah, a name which seems to be given her either by Isaac or by Moses, from her settledness in her idolatrous courses. And Adah was also called Bashemath, chap. xxvi.; and Mahalath, Ishmael's daughter, was called Bashemath, either because in her principles and manners she resembled Esau's other wife so called, or to show that Ishmael's marriage to a third wife was no less opprobrious to him and displeasing to his parents than the former. Anah, a man, and the son of Zibeon, as appears from ver. 24, called here a Hivite, is called Beeri the Hittite, chap. xxvi., either because those two people were mixed together in habitation and by marriage, or because the one people were larger than the other, and comprehended under their name, or because he was a Hivite by birth, a Hittite by habitation or incorporation with them. Hence also we may learn how Aholibamah here comes to be the daughter both of Anah and of Zibeon; the one being either the natural or proper father, and the other either the grandfather, or father by adoption.

3 And ^d Bashemath Ishmael's daughter, ^{cir. 1760.} sister of Nebajoth. ^{d ch. 28. 9.}

4 And ^e Adah bare to Esau Eliphaz; and Bashemath bare Reuel;

Eliphaz, the progenitor of that Eliphaz, Job ii. 11. Reuel, the father of Jethro. See Exod. ii. 18; Numb. x. 29.

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeshu, and Jaalam, and Korah: these are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him in the land of Canaan.

He had also daughters, ver. 6, though their names be not here mentioned.

6 And Esau took his wives, and his ^{cir. 1740.} sons, and his daughters, and all the ⁺ persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Canaan; and went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob. ^{+ Heb. ovula.}

Quest. 1. Why went he thither? Answ. Partly by his own choice, that wild and mountainous country being very commodious for hunting, to which he wholly addicted himself; partly by his wives' persuasions, who were both utterly averse from cohabitation with Isaac or Jacob, and strongly inclined to their own country; but principally from the secret conduct of Divine Providence, thus accomplishing his promises. See Josh. xxiv. 4; Mal. i. 3. Quest. 2. When went he thither? Answ. He went thither before this time in discontent at his parents, and dwelt in Seir before Jacob's return to Canaan, as appears from Gen. xxxii. 3; xxxiii. 14, 16; yet so as he came sometimes to Canaan, and to his father's house, and did not quit his interest in his father's estate. But when his father was dead, and Jacob and he agreed about the partition of the estate, he did totally and finally forsake Canaan, partly, for the reason here following; partly, for the other reasons now alleged; and partly, to avoid all occasion both of communication and contention with his brother. From the face of his brother

Jacob, i. c. further up into the country; or, into another country, as the Chaldee renders it, namely, into Seir; the word another being supplied. If that seem too bold a supplement, the place may be rendered thus, he went into a land distant or remote from the face of his brother, which supplement lies hid and is implied in the word migne, from the face; or thus, he went out of the land; for so the Hebrew preposition el is sometimes used for min, which signifies off, or out of, as appears by comparing 1 Kings viii. 30, with 2 Chron. vi. 21; Isa. lix. 20; Rom. xi. 26; Judg. xvii. 2; 2 Chron. i. 13, and many other places.

fch. 13. 6, 11.

7 For their riches were more than that they might dwell together; and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle.

Which words contain the reason why that land which was large and fruitful could not bear them, because they were not entire possessors of it, but only sojourners in it, and therefore must take the owners' leavings, which were not sufficient for both of them and their numerous families.

8 Thus dwelt Esau in ^h mount Seir: Esau is Edom.

This seems to be mentioned by the Holy Ghost by way of contempt or reproach; this is he who sold his birthright for a mess of red pottage, and therefore was called Edom or red.

9 ¶ And these are the generations of Esau the father of † the Edomites in mount Seir:

10 These are the names of Esau's sons; ^k Eliphaz the son of Adah the wife of Esau, Reuel the son of Bashemath the wife of Esau.

11 And the sons of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, † Zepho, and Gatam, and Kenaz.

12 And Timna was concubine to Eliphaz Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz † Amalek: these were the sons of Adah Esau's wife.

13 And these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

14 ¶ And these were the sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife: and she bare to Esau Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

15 ¶ These were dukes of the sons of Esau: the sons of Eliphaz the firstborn son of Esau; duke Teman, duke Omar, duke Zepho, duke Kenaz,

These were dukes, princes or heads of their several families and little principalities, according to the manner of those times, who ruled their dominions, either severally, each his own, or jointly, by common advice, or it may be under one chief prince, their superior either in title or in power. And in this division Eliphaz, as he was Esau's first-born, so he had more than a double portion, his six sons being made dukes, as Esau's immediate sons were. Compare 1 Chron. v. 1.

16 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek: these are the dukes that came of Eliphaz in the land of Edom; these were the sons of Adah.

Korah is not mentioned among the sons of Eliphaz, and therefore is thought to be his grandson. There is another Korah, ver. 14, 18.

17 ¶ And these are the sons of Reuel Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke Mizzah: these are the dukes that came of Reuel in the land of Edom; these are the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

18 ¶ And these are the sons of Aholibamah Esau's wife; duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.

19 These are the sons of Esau, who is Edom, and these are their dukes.

20 ¶ These are the sons of Seir the Horite, who inhabited the land; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah,

The sons of Seir are here mentioned, partly because of their alliance with Esau's family, ver. 2, 20, 22, 24, 25, and partly because the government was translated from his to Esau's family. Who inhabited the land, and ruled there, till Esau and his posterity drove them out, Deut. ii. 12, 22.

21 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan: these are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

22 And the children of Lotan were Hori and † Hemam; and Lotan's sister was Timna.

23 And the children of Shobal were these; † Alvan, and Manahath, and Ebal, † Shepho, and Onam.

24 And these are the children of Zibeon; both Ajah, and Anah: this was that Anah that found the mules in the wilderness, as he fed the asses of Zibeon his father.

Mules; so most understand the word Jemim, which is no where else used, and give this sense of it, that he found out the way of the generation of mules by the copulation of a horse and a mare. Others render it waters, that he found out some springs of water, which in those hot countries were rare and precious; or hot waters, some hot and medicinal springs. But the Chaldee renders it giants, and the Samaritan version Emims, a sort of giants mentioned Deut. ii. 10, 11; who also were neighbours to the Horites here spoken of, as appears from Gen. xiv. 5, 6; and therefore might, according to the manner of those times, make inroads one upon another. So Jemim is put for Emim, either by an apocope of the first letter, or by the change of the Hebrew letter Jod into Aleph, both which are frequent among the Hebrews. And the sense is, that Anah the Horite found out the Emims; that is, he met with them, or came upon them suddenly, and smote them. In this sense the word finding is oft used, as Judg. i. 5; 1 Sam. xxxi. 3; Psal. xxi. 8; Isa. x. 10.

25 And the children of Anah were these; Dishon, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah.

The children, Heb. sons, though but one son be mentioned. Either then he had other sons not here expressed; or the plural number is put for the singular, as Gen. xxi. 7.

26 And these are the children of Dishon; † Hemdan, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

27 The children of Ezer are these; Bilhan, and Zaavan, and † Akan.

28 The children of Dishan are these; Uz, and Aran.

29 These are the dukes that came of the Horites; duke Lotan, duke Shobal, duke Zibeon, duke Anah, 30 Duke Dishon, duke Ezer, duke Dishan: these are the dukes that came of Hori, among their dukes in the land of Seir.

Among other dukes which were in that country. Or, according to their dukedoms or principalities; the word duke being here put for dukedom, as the word king is put for kingdom, Isa. xxiii. 15; Dan. vii. 17.

31 ¶ And these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before

g ch. 17. 8. & 28. 4.

h ch. 32. 3. Deut. 2. 5. Josh. 24. 4. i ver. 1.

† Heb. Edom.

k 1 Chron. 1. 35, &c.

† Or, Zephi, 1 Chron. 1. 36.

1 Ex. 17. 9, 14. Num. 24. 20. 1 Sam. 15. 2, 3, &c.

cir. 1940. m 1 Chron. 1. 38. n ch. 14. 6. Deut. 2. 12, 22.

† Or, Hemdan, 1 Chron. 1. 39.

† Or, Alvan, 1 Chron. 1. 40.

† Or, Shepho, 1 Chron. 1. 40.

o See Lev. 19. 19.

† Or, Auram, 1 Chron. 1. 41.

† Or, Jakan, 1 Chron. 1. 42.

cir. 1780.

p 1 Chron. 1. 43.

there reigned any king over the children of Israel.

He speaks of the posterity of Esau, who after they had subdued the Horites, erected a kingdom there.

Here profane wits triumph. How, say they, could Moses write this, when as yet there was no king in Israel? Answo. 1. The word may be taken for any chief governor, in which sense the title of king is given to Moses, Deut. xxxiii. 5; and to the judges, Judg. xvii. 6; and to others who were not kings, properly so called, Psal. cxix. 46; Luke xxii. 25; Acts ix. 15, &c. Answo. 2. Moses might well say thus, because he did by the Spirit of prophecy foresee, and therefore could foretell, that the Israelites would have a king, as appears from Deut. xvii. 14, 15. Answo. 3. This, with other clauses of the same nature, might be inserted afterwards by some holy and inspired man of God, as it is confessed that part of the last chapter of Deuteronomy was.

32 And Bela the son of Beor reigned in Edom: and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

Where he was born or dwelt, and so in the rest. The diversity of their cities makes it probable, that these kings had not their power by succession, but either by election, or by usurpation, according to Isaac's prophecy of them, Gen. xxvii. 40, By thy sword thou shalt live.

33 And Bela died, and Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead.

34 And Jobab died, and Husham of the land of Teman reigned in his stead.

Of which land, see Jer. xlix. 7, 20, so called either from the city Teman, or from Teman the son of Eliphaz, ver. 11. Or, of the south country, as the ancient translations render it.

35 And Husham died, and Hadad the son of Bedad, who smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

36 And Hadad died, and Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

37 And Samlah died, and Saul of Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead.

The river; either Euphrates, or a branch of it, called Chabras, by which there is even at this day a city called Rahabath-melic, i. e. King's Rahabath, as the learned observe; or some other river of note in those times and parts.

38 And Saul died, and Baal-hanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

39 And Baal-hanan the son of Achbor died, and Hadar reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Pau; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

Either Matred was the father, and Mezahab the mother; or Matred was the mother, and Mezahab the grandmother.

40 And these are the names of the dukes that came of Esau, according to their families, after their places, by their names; duke Timnah, duke || Alvah, duke Jetheth,

The names of the dukes, of their persons, and generations, and families. The state of Edom between the times of Esau and Moses seems to have been this; there were first dukes, then kings, and after them dukes again. But if it be objected, that the time was too short for a succession of so many persons, it may be replied, that what is confessed concerning the dukes preceding the kings, might be true also of these succeeding dukes, and that the Edomites either having taken some distaste at kingly government, or differing about the choice of a new king, divided themselves again into several petty principalities or dukedoms; and so several of those were dukes at the same time in divers parts.

41 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

42 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

43 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram: these be the dukes of Edom, according to their habitations in the land of their possession: he is Esau the father of the Edomites.

† Heb. Edom.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Jacob dwells in Canaan: Joseph brings to his father an ill report of his brethren, 2. He loves, they hate him, 3, 4; the more because of his dreams which he told them, 5. His first dream, 7. His brethren interpret it, and their hatred increases, 8. His second dream, 9. Tells it his father, who rebukes him, but observes his saying, 10, 11. He is sent by his father to seek after his brethren, 13—17. They seeing him, conspire his death, 18—20. But upon the intercession of Reuben they strip and throw him into a pit, 21—24. Some Ishmeelites passing by, by Judah's advice they sell him to them, who carry him into Egypt, 25—28. Reuben is concerned for him, 29, 30. Their contrivance to deceive Jacob, 31, 32. His grief for the loss of Joseph, 33—35. Joseph sold to Potiphar, an officer in Egypt, 36.

AND Jacob dwelt in the land † where his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

† Heb. of his father's sojournings. a ch. 17. v. 23. 4. & 28. 4. & 36. 7. Heb. 11. 9. 17. 29.

2 These are the generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their evil report.

b 1 Sam. 2. 23, 24.

The generations, i. e. the events or occurrences which happened to Jacob in his family and issue. So that word is used Gen. vi. 9; Numb. iii. 1. Or the word these may relate to what is said Gen. xxxv. 22, &c. The genealogy of Esau being brought in by way of parenthesis, and that being finished, Moses returns to the generations of Jacob, as his principal business, and proceeds in the history of their concerns.

Jacob placed Joseph with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, rather than with the sons of Leah, either to keep Joseph humble; or for Joseph's security, because the other sons retained the old grudge of their mother, and were more like to envy, contemn, hate, and abuse him; or as an observer of their actions, whom he most suspected, as the following words may seem to imply.

Joseph brought unto his father their evil report, acquainted him with their lewd and wicked courses, to the dishonour of God and of their family, that so his father might apply such remedies as he thought meet.

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many colours.

c ch. 44. 20.

† Or, pieces. Jug. 5. 20. 2 Sam. 13. 18.

He was the son of his old age, being born when Jacob was ninety-one years old. Such children are commonly best beloved by their parents, either because such are a singular blessing of God, and a more than common testimony of his favour, and a mercy least expected by them, and therefore most prized; or because they have more pleasing conversation with them, and less experience of their misbehaviour, of which the elder oftentimes are guilty, whereby they alienate their parents' affections from them. The ancient translations, Chaldee, Persian, Arabic, and Samaritan, render the words thus, a wise or prudent son; old age being oft mentioned as a token of prudence; one born old, one wise above his years, one that had a grey head, as we say, upon green shoulders. This may seem the more probable, both because Joseph was indeed such a child, and gave good evidence of it in a prudent observation of his brethren's trespasses, and a discreet choice of the fittest remedy for them; and because the reason here alleged seems proper and peculiar to Joseph; whereas in the other sense it belongs more to Benjamin, who was younger than Joseph, and cost his mother dearer, and therefore might upon that account claim a greater interest in his father's affections.

A coat of many colours, probably made of threads of divers colours interwoven together. Compare 2 Sam. xiii. 18. This he gave him as a token of his special love, and of the rights of the first-born, which being justly taken from Reuben, he conferred upon Joseph, 1 Chron. v. 1.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they ^d hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

d ch. 27. 41.
& 49. 23.

Their hatred was so deep and keen, that they could not smother it; as for their own interest they should have done, but discovered it by their churlish words and carriage to him.

5 ¶ And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

The dream it is probable he did not understand, for then he would never have told it to them, who, as he knew very well, were likely to make an evil construction and use of it.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

e ch. 42. 6.
9. & 43. 26.
& 44. 14.

7 For, ° behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

We were binding sheaves in the field; a secret insinuation of the occasion of Joseph's advancement, which was from his counsel and care about the corn of Egypt. Your sheaves stood round about; this was a posture of ministry and service, as is manifest both from Scripture and from common usage.

8 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

For his relation of his dreams, which they imputed to his arrogance.

9 ¶ And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and, behold, the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

f ch. 46. 29.

He dreamed another dream, that the repetition of the same thing in another shape might teach them that the thing was both certain and very observable. The sun and the moon were not mentioned in the first dream, because in the event his brethren only went at first to Egypt and there worshipped him, as afterwards his father went with them. Object. His father did not worship him in Egypt. Answ. 1. He did worship him mediately by his sons, who in their father's name and stead bowed before him, and by the presents which he sent as testimonies of that respect which he owed to him. 2. It is probable that Jacob did, before the Egyptians, pay that reverence to his son which all the rest did, and which was due to the dignity of his place. As the Roman consul was commended by his father for requiring him to alight from his horse, as the rest did, when he met him upon the way.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

g ch. 27. 28.

His father rebuked him; not through anger at Joseph, or contempt of his dream, for it follows, he observed it; but partly lest Joseph should be puffed up upon the account of his dreams, and principally to allay the envy and hatred of his brethren. Thy mother: either, 1. Rachel, who was now dead, and therefore must rise again and worship thee; whence he may seem to infer the idleness of the dream, because the fulfilling it was impossible. Or rather, 2. Leah, his stepmother, one that filled his mother's place, being now Jacob's only wife, and the mother of the family.

11 And his brethren envied him; but his father observed the saying.

h Acts 7. 9.
i Dan. 7. 28.
Luke 2. 19.
51.

The words of Joseph; or the thing, the dream which he told; well knowing that God did frequently at that time signify his mind by dreams, and perceiving something singular and extraordinary in this dream, and especially in the doubling of it.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem.

In the parts adjoining to Shechem, in the lands which he had purchased there, Gen. xxxiii. 19. Let none think strange that he should send his sheep so far from him, both because that land was his own, and because his sheep being exceeding numerous, and he but a stranger in the land, was likely to be exposed to many such inconveniences. Compare Gen. xxx. 36. One may rather wonder that he durst venture his sons and his cattle there, where that barbarous massacre had been committed, chap. xxxiv. 25. But those pastures being his own, and convenient for his use, he did commit himself and them to that same good Providence which watched over him then and ever since, and still kept up that terror which then he sent upon them. Besides Jacob's sons and servants made a considerable company, and the men of Shechem being universally slain, others were not very forward to revenge their quarrel, where there was any hazard to themselves in such an enterprise.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, Here am I.

cir. 1720.

Having kept him for some time at home, and supposing that length of time had cooled their heats, and worn out their hatred, he now sends him to them.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, † see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

† Heb. see the peace of thy brethren, &c. ch. 28. 6.

k ch. 35. 27.

15 ¶ And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field; and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

l Cant. 1. 7.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence; for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

m 2 Kings 6. 13.

Dothan, a place not very far from Shechem, where afterwards a city was built. See 2 Kings vi. 13.

18 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.

n 1 Sam. 18. 1. Ps. 51. 12. & 57. 12, 32. & 94. 21. Matt. 27. 1. Mark 14. 1. John 11. 53. Acts 23. 12.

19 And they said one to another, Behold, this † dreamer cometh.

† Heb. master of dreams.

Heb. This master of dreams, this crafty dreamer, that covers his own ambitious designs and desires with pretences or fictions of dreams.

20 ° Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

o Prov. 1. 11. 16. & 6. 17. & 27. 4.

Cast him into some pit; partly, as unworthy of burial; partly, to cover their villainous action; and partly, that they might quickly put him out of their sight and minds. Some evil beast hath devoured him, there being great store of such creatures in those parts. See 1 Kings xiii. 24; 2 Kings ii. 24.

p ch. 42. 22. 21 And ^p Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

He delivered him, as to the violent and certain despatch of his life which was intended. Or the act is here put for the purpose and endeavour of doing it, in which sense Balak is said to fight against Israel, Josh. xxiv. 9, and Abraham to offer up Isaac, Heb. xi. 17. So here, he delivered him, i. e. used his utmost power to deliver him, that so he might recover his father's favour lost by his incestuous action.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many || colours that was on him;

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 ^q And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of ^r Ishmeelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and ^s balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

They sat down to eat bread, to refresh themselves, their consciences being stupefied, and their hearts hardened against their brother, notwithstanding all his most passionate entreaties to them, Gen. xlii. 21.

Ishmeelites; the posterity of Ishmael. See Gen. xxv. 18. Gilead, a famous place for balm, and other excellent commodities, and for the confluence of merchants. See Jer. viii. 22; xxii. 6.

Balm, or rosin, as the ancient and divers other translators render it.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and ^t conceal his blood?

If we suffer him to perish in the pit, when we may sell him with advantage, and conceal his blood, i. e. his death, as the word blood is often used. See Deut. xvii. 8; 2 Sam. i. 16; iii. 28.

27 Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites, and ^u let not our hand be upon him; for he is ^v our brother and ^w our flesh. And his brethren ^x were content.

28 Then there passed by ^y Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, ^z and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for ^a twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

This story seems a little involved, and the persons to whom he was sold doubtful. Here seem to be two, if not three, sorts of merchants mentioned, Ishmeelites and Midianites here, and Medanites, as it is in the Hebrew, ver. 36, which were a distinct people from the Midianites, as descended from Medan, when the Midianites descended from Midian, both Abraham's sons, Gen. xxv. 2. The business may be accommodated divers ways; either, 1. The same persons or people are promiscuously called both Ishmeelites and Midianites, as they also are Judg. viii. 1, 24, 28; either because they were mixed together in their dwellings, and by marriages; or because they were here joined together, and made one caravan or company of merchants. And the text may be read thus, And the Midianite merchantmen (either the same who were called Ishmeelites, ver. 27, or others being in the same company with them) passed by, and they (i. e. not the merchantmen, but Joseph's brethren, spoken of ver. 27; the relative being referred to the remoter antecedent, as it is frequently in the Scripture) lift up Joseph, and sold him to the Ishmeelites or Midianites, &c. Or, 2. The persons may be distinguished, and the story may very well be conceived thus: The Ishmeelites are going to Egypt, and are discerned at some distance by Joseph's brethren, while they were discoursing about their brother. In the time of their discourse, the Midianites, who seem to be coming from Egypt, coming by the pit, and hearing Joseph's cries there, pull him out of the pit, and sell him to the Ishmeelites, who carry him with them into Egypt. There they sell him to the Medanites, though that, as many other historical passages, be omitted in the sacred story. And the Medanites, or Midianites, if you please, only supposing them to be other persons than those mentioned ver. 28, which is but a fair and reasonable supposition, sell him to Potiphar.

29 ¶ And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and he ^c rent his clothes. c Job 1. 20.

Reuben returned unto the pit, that, according to his brethren's order, ver. 27, he might take him thence and sell him. He rent his clothes, as the manner was upon doleful occurrences. See below, ver. 34; Numb. xiv. 6; Ezra ix. 3; Job i. 20; ii. 12.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child ^d is not; and I, whither shall I go? d ch. 42. 13, 36. Jer. 31. 15.

He calls him the child comparatively to his brethren, though he was seventeen years old, ver. 2. The child is not, i. e. is not in the land of the living, or is dead, as that phrase is commonly used, as Gen. xlii. 13, 36, compared with Gen. xlv. 20; Job vii. 21; Jer. xxxi. 15; Lam. v. 7; Matt. ii. 18. I, whither shall I go, either to find the child, or to flee from our father? He is more solicitous than the rest, because he being the eldest brother, his father would require Joseph at his hand; and being so highly incensed against him for his former crime, would be the more apt to suspect him, and deal more severely with him.

31 And they took ^e Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood; e ver. 23.

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

They brought it by a messenger whom they sent: men are commonly said to do what they cause others to do.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an ^f evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces. f ver. 20. ch. 44. 28.

34 And Jacob ^g rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days. g ver. 29. 2 Sam. 3. 31.

Sackcloth, i. e. a coarse and mournful habit. This is the first example of that kind, but afterwards was in common use upon these occasions. See 2 Sam. iii. 31; 1 Kings xx. 31; xxi. 27, &c.

35 And all his sons and all his daughters ^h rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For ⁱ I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him. h 2 Sam. 12. 17. i ch. 42. 38. & 44. 29, 31.

All his daughters; Dinah, and his daughters-in-law, and his sons' daughters. The grave; this Hebrew word sheol is taken sometimes for hell, as Job xi. 8; Prov. xv. 11, but most commonly for the grave, or the place or state of the dead, as Gen. xlii. 38; xlv. 29, 31; Psal. vi. 5; xvi. 10, &c. And whether of those it signifies, must be determined by the subject and the circumstances of the place. Here it cannot be meant of hell, for Jacob neither could believe that good Joseph was there, nor would have resolved to go thither;

but the sense is, I will kill myself with grief, or I will never leave mourning till I die. Unto my son; or, for my son: so the preposition el is oft used for al, as 1 Sam. i. 27; iv. 19, 21, 22; 2 Sam. xxi. 2.

36 And ^{k ch. 39. 1.} the Midianites sold him into ^{† Heb. emack:} Egypt unto Potiphar, an ^{† Heb. emack:} officer of Pharaoh's, and ^{† Heb. emack:} captain of the guard.

Whose office it was to apprehend and punish criminal persons. See Gen. xl. 3; Jer. xxxix. 9; Mark vi. 27.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Judah marries a Canaanitish woman, who bears him three sons, 1—5. He marries her eldest son to Tamar, 6. He being wicked is slain by God, 7. The second son is commanded to marry her, 8. His wickedness, 9, and death, 10. He promises her his third son, but performs not, 11. She by a subtle practice commits incest with him, 13. He gives her a pledge, 18. She is found with child; Judah commands her to be burnt, 24. She brings to her father the pledge, 25. He acknowledges it; acquits her, and condemns himself, 26. She brings forth two sons, 27—30.

AND it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and ^{a ch. 19. 3.} ^{2 Kings 4. 8.} turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

This story is not without difficulty, if we consider how little time is allowed for all the events of this chapter, there being not above twenty-three years between Judah's marriage and the birth of Pharez, yea, and the birth of his sons too, Hezron and Hamul, who are said to go into Egypt with Jacob, Gen. xlvii. 12. But there are two ways proposed for the resolution of it, as the phrase, at that time, may be understood two ways; either, 1. More largely, for the time since Jacob's return from Padan to Canaan, and so the history may be conceived thus: Judah was married some years before the selling of Joseph, though it be here mentioned after it, and so out of its place, as being the foundation of all the following events, which are here placed together, because they followed the selling of Joseph. Judah, and Er, and Onan, and afterwards Pharez, are supposed each to marry and have a child at fourteen years old, which, though unusual, wants not examples both in sacred and profane writers. And they that will quarrel with the Scripture, and question its authority for some such uncustomary occurrences which it relates, show more of impiety than wisdom in it, and shall do well to consider, that God might so order things by his providence, and record such things in his word, upon the same account on which he hath put several other difficult passages in Scripture, partly to try and exercise men's faith, humility, and modesty; and partly to punish the evil minds of ungodly men, and for their sins to lay an occasion of stumbling and cavilling at the Scriptures before them that greedily seek and gladly catch at all such occasions. Or, 2. More strictly, for the time following the sale of Joseph, which seems the more probable way, and so the story lies thus: Judah was now about twenty years old when he married, and the three first years he hath three sons, Er, Onan, and Shelah. The two first marry each when they were about seventeen years old. Three years after both their deaths, and when Shelah had been marriageable a year or two, and was not given to Tamar, Judah lies with Tamar and begets upon her Pharez. But as for Hezron and Hamul, they are said to go into Egypt with Jacob, as also Benjamin's ten sons are said to go with him thither, to wit, in their father's loins, because they were begotten by their father in Egypt, whilst Jacob lived there, of which more in its proper place.

Judah went down from his brethren; probably in discontent, upon occasion of quarrels arisen among them about the selling of Joseph, whereof Judah was a great promoter, if not the first mover. A certain Adullamite, of the city of Adullam; of which see Josh. xii. 15; xv. 35.

^{b ch. 24. 2.} 2 And Judah ^b saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was ^{c 1 Chr. 2. 3.} Shuah; and he took her, and went in unto her.

He married her against the counsel and example of his parents. But when Judah had committed so great a crime as the selling of his brother, and God had forsaken him, no wonder he adds one sin to another. Shuah was the name, not of the daughter, but of her father, ver. 12.

3 And she conceived, and bare a son; and he called his name ^{d ch. 46. 12.} Er. ^{Num. 26. 19.}

4 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she called his name ^{e ch. 46. 12.} Onan. ^{Num. 26. 19.}

5 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son; and called his name ^{f ch. 46. 12.} Shelah: ^{Num. 26. 20.} and he was at Chezib, when she bare him.

Chezib; a place near Adullam, called also Achzib, Josh. xix. 29; Micah i. 14.

6 And Judah ^{g ch. 21. 21.} took a wife for Er his firstborn, whose name was Tamar.

7 And ^{h ch. 46. 12.} Er, Judah's firstborn, was ^{Num. 26. 19.} wicked in the sight of the LORD; ^{i 1 Chr. 2. 3.} and the LORD slew him.

Wicked in the sight of the Lord, i. e. notoriously wicked. Compare Gen. x. 9; xiii. 13. The Lord slew him, in some extraordinary and remarkable manner, as ver. 10.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, Go in unto ^{k Deut. 25.5.} thy brother's wife, and marry her, ^{Matt. 22. 24.} and raise up seed to thy brother.

This, as also divers other things, was now instituted and observed amongst God's people, and afterwards was expressed in a written law, Deut. xxv. 5, 6. See also Numb. xxxvi. 6, 7; Ruth i. 11; Matt. xxii. 24. Raise up seed to thy brother; beget a child which may have thy brother's name and inheritance, and may be reputed as his child. So it was with the first child, but the rest were reputed his own.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be ^{l Deut. 25. 6.} his; and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.

Two things are here noted: 1. The sin itself, which is here particularly described by the Holy Ghost, that men might be instructed concerning the nature and the great evil of this sin of self-pollution, which is such that it brought upon the actor of it the extraordinary vengeance of God, and which is condemned not only by Scripture, but even by the light of nature, and the judgment of heathens, who have expressly censured it as a great sin, and as a kind of murder. Of which see my Latin Synopsis. Whereby we may sufficiently understand how wicked and abominable a practice this is amongst Christians, and in the light of the gospel, which lays greater and stricter obligations upon us to purity, and severely forbids all pollution both of flesh and spirit. 2. The cause of this wickedness; which seems to have been either hatred of his brother, or envy at his brother's name and honour, springing from the pride of his own heart.

10 And the thing which he did ^{† Heb. was evil in the eyes of the LORD.} displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew ^{m ch. 46. 12.} him also. ^{Num. 26. 19.}

Displeased the Lord; an expression noting a more than ordinary offence against God, as 2 Sam. xi. 27. This just but dreadful severity of God is noted both for the terror of such-like transgressors, and to provoke love and thankfulness to God in those whom he useth more indulgently.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter in law, ^{n Ruth 1. 13.} Remain a widow at thy father's house, till Shelah my son be grown: for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did. And Tamar went and dwelt ^{o Lev. 22. 13.} in her father's house. At thy father's house, whither he sent her from his house, that Shelah might not be ensnared by her presence and conversation. So he dismissed her with a pretence of kindness, and a tacit promise of marriage to her, which he never intended to keep, as the following words imply; for he said; or rather, but he said; for the Hebrew chi oft signifies but, as Gen. xlv. 8; Psal. xxxvii. 20; Eccl. ii. 10; vi. 2. So here is an opposition between what he said to Tamar, and what he said to himself, or in his own heart, as that word said is oft used: he intimated to her that he would give Shelah to her, but he meant otherwise, and said in himself, I will not do it, lest peradventure he die also as his brethren did; imputing the death of his two sons either to her fault, or to her unluckiness, rather than to his own or his son's miscarriages.

12 ¶ And †in process of time the daughter of Shuah Judah's wife died; and Judah ^pwas comforted, and went up unto his sheepshearers to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

In process of time, when many days had passed, and Shelah, though grown, was not given to Tamar, Judah went up unto his sheep-shearers, to feast and rejoice with them at that time, as the manner was then and afterwards. See 1 Sam. xxv. 36. Timnath; a place not far from Adullam; of which see Josh. xv. 57.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold thy father in law goeth up ^ato Timnath to shear his sheep.

14 And she ^rput her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, and ^ssat in †an open place, which is by the way to Timnath; for she saw ^tthat Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

Covered her with a veil, as harlots used to do in those modester ages of the world, when they had not learnt to outface the sun, nor to glory in their villanies. In an open place, where she might be soonest discovered by passengers. This is noted as the practice of harlots, Prov. vii. 12; ix. 14; Jer. iii. 2; Ezek. xvi. 24, 25.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

And was doubtless careful not to discover herself by her voice.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter in law.) And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, "I will send thee †a kid from the flock. And she said, "Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, "Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

Thy bracelets, or handkerchief, or girdle, or any other ornament made of twisted thread, which the Hebrew word signifies. God so ordering things by his providence, that his sin might be discovered. And this and other such horrid crimes committed sometimes by the patriarchs, and other eminent persons, it hath pleased God for divers wise and holy reasons to leave upon record, partly, to discover how great and deep the corruption of man's nature is, and that even in the best; partly, to oblige all men to a humble sense of their own infirmity, and to a diligent application of themselves to God for his gracious succours, and to a greater circumspection and watchfulness to prevent those evils in themselves; partly, to encourage even the greatest sinners to repentance and the hope of pardon; and partly, for the just punishment and obduration of incorrigible sinners, who make such sad examples matter of their delight and imitation.

19 And she arose, and went away, and ^ylaid by her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot, that was ^{||}openly by the way side? And they said, ^{||}Or, ^{||}in Enajim. There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there was no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we †be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

Note, that fornication was esteemed sinful and shameful amongst the heathens.

24 ¶ And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter in law hath ^zplayed the harlot; and also, behold, she ^zis with child by whoredom. And Judah said, Bring her forth, ^aand let her be burnt.

Bring her forth to the magistrate, from whom she may receive her sentence and deserved punishment. Judah had not the power of life and death, at least not over her, who was a Canaanite, and who was not in his, but in her own father's house. But he being a person of great estate and authority, and, as it seems, of obliging conversation, could do very much to persuade those who then had the power of the sword, either to draw it forth, at least in a just cause, on his behalf, or to sheath it upon his desire and satisfaction.

Let her be burnt, as guilty of adultery, which was punished with death by the laws of God, Deut. xxii. 23, 24, and of nations too, Jer. xxix. 22, 23. He chargeth her with adultery, because she was betrothed to Shelah. See Deut. xxii. 23. This eagerness of Judah proceeded not from zeal of justice, for then he would not have endeavoured to destroy the innocent child with the guilty mother, against God's law, Deut. xxiv. 16; Ezek. xviii. 20, but from worldly policy, that he might take her out of the way, which he esteemed a burden and a blot to his family.

25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, ^aam I with child: and she said, ^bDiscern, I pray thee, whose ^bare these, ^cthe signet, and bracelets, and staff.

26 And Judah ^dacknowledged them, and said, ^eShe hath been more righteous than I; because that ^fI gave her not to Shelah my son. And he knew her again ^gno more.

His guilty conscience, and the horror of so foul a fact, together with his sudden surprisal, forced him to an ingenuous confession, whereas he might have used many pretences and evasions, which would easily have prevailed with such partial judges. She hath been more righteous than I. She was more unchaste, because she knowingly committed adultery and incest, when he designed neither; but he was more unjust, because he was the cause of her sin, both by withholding Shelah from her, who was hers both by right and by Judah's promise, and by whom her chastity should have been preserved; and by his solicitation and encouragement of her to the sin. He knew her again no more; showing the sincerity of his confession by his forsaking of the sin confessed. See Job xxxiv. 32. And it may be probably concluded, that he neither knew her nor + Heb. the days were multiplied.

p 2 Sam. 13. 39.

g Josh. 15. 19, 57. Judg. 14. 1.

r Judith 10. 3.

s Prov. 7. 12. + Heb. the door of eyes, or, of Enajim.

t ver. 11, 26.

|| Ezek. 16. 33.

+ Heb. a kid of the goats.

w ver. 20.

x ver. 25.

|| Or, in Enajim.

|| Heb. become a contempt.

z Judg. 19. 2.

a Lev. 21. 9. Deut. 22. 21.

b ch. 37. 32.

c ver. 18.

d ch. 37. 33.

e 1 Sam. 24. 17. f ver. 14.

g Job 34. 31, 32.

any other woman afterward, because there is no mention of any child which he had after this time.

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.

28 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.

The midwife bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, in token of his being the first-born, which she confidently expected he would be.

29 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, ¶ How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called ¶^hPharez.

This breach be upon thee, be imputed to thee, as the same phrase is taken Gen. xvi. 5.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zarah.

CHAP. XXXIX.

God prospers Joseph in Potiphar's service, 1, 2. Potiphar observes it, and sets him over all his house, 3—6. He is a goodly person, and his mistress solicits him to lie with her, 7. He abhorring the ingratitude against his master, and sin against God, constantly refuses, 8—10. They being in the house alone, she seizes his coat, which he leaves with her, and fled, 11—13. She accuses him first to the servants, 14, 15; then to his master, 16—18, who casts him into prison, 19, 20. The Lord is with him there; he finds favour with the keeper; is set over the prisoners, and prospers, 21—23.

1729. AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and ^aPotiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, ^bbought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And ^cthe LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

The Lord was with Joseph, with his gracious presence and blessing, as this phrase is taken here, ver. 21; Gen. xxi. 22; xxvi. 24. He was in the house of his master: he doth not endeavour to make an escape to his father, but demeaned himself patiently and faithfully in the station into which God's providence had brought him.

3 And his master saw that the LORD ^dwas with him, and that the LORD ^dmade all that he did to prosper in his hand.

The heathens owned a supreme God, and his overruling providence in affairs, though they did not glorify him as God, but worshipped the creature with and more than the Creator, Rom. i. 25. In his hand, i. e. under his ministry, as this phrase is used, Exod. iv. 13; Lev. viii. 36; Prov. xxvi. 6, and oft elsewhere.

4 And Joseph ^efound grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him ^foverseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

He served him, not now as a slave, but in a higher degree. All that he had he put into his hand, i. e. committed to his care and management, as Gen. xvi. 6. Object. How could this be, when Joseph understood not the Egyptian tongue? Ans. Joseph doubtless when he came thither did as much as possibly he could endeavour to get the knowledge of that language, and being a person of excellent parts, would soon obtain it, especially because of the great affinity between that language and his own. Nor must we think that Joseph was thus highly advanced in an instant, but by degrees, step by step, and after some considerable time.

5 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that ^gthe LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph ^hwas a goodly person, and well favoured.

*He took care for nothing, but that he might eat, and drink, and fare deliciously. Nor did he indeed take any care for that, it being provided for him by other hands. Others thus, He took care for nothing, but committed all to Joseph, except his bread, which he would not have provided by a Hebrew hand, because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews, Gen. xliii. 32. But that was no impediment, for neither did Joseph eat with his master, nor was he the cook to dress it for him. But he might provide food for him, as afterwards he did for all the Egyptians without any scruple on their side.*

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, ⁱLie with me.

She cast her eyes upon Joseph, in a lascivious and unchaste manner. See Job xxxi. 1; Matt. v. 28; 2 Pet. ii. 14.

8 But he refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

9 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

He avoided her company and familiar conversation, as evil in itself, the present circumstances considered, and as an occasion of further evil. See Prov. i. 15; v. 8; 1 Cor. xv. 33; 1 Thess. v. 22; 1 Tim. v. 14.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was none of the men of the house there within.

About this time, or, upon a certain day, which she thought convenient for the reason following. To do his business, that which belonged to his charge; to cast up his accounts, as the Chaldee renders it, which requiring privacy, gave her this opportunity. There was none of the men within, to wit, in that part of the house where Joseph was.

12 And ^mshe caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

He left his garment in her hand, which he would not strive to get from her, partly, for reverence to his mistress; partly, in detestation of her wickedness, whereby even his garment might seem to be infected; and partly, to put himself and her out of the danger of further temptation.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth,

14 That she called unto the men of her house,

¶ Or, Wherefore hast thou made this breach against thee?

¶ That is, a breach. h ch. 46. 12. Num. 26. 20. 1 Chron. 2. 4. Matt. 1. 3.

This breach be upon thee, be imputed to thee, as the same phrase is taken Gen. xvi. 5.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zarah.

a ch. 37. 36. Ps. 105. 17. b ch. 37. 28.

c ver. 21. ch. 21. 22. & 26. 24, 25. & 28. 15. d Sam. 16. 18. & 18. 14, 28. Acts 7. 9.

d Ps. 1. 3.

e ch. 18. 3. & 19. 19. ver. 21.

f Gen. 24. 2.

h 1 Sam. 16. 12.

i 2 Sam. 13. 11.

She cast her eyes upon Joseph, in a lascivious and unchaste manner. See Job xxxi. 1; Matt. v. 28; 2 Pet. ii. 14.

k Prov. 6. 29, 32. l ch. 20. 6. Lev. 6. 2. 9 Sam. 12. 13. Ps. 51. 4.

m Prov. 7. 13, &c.

and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an Hebrew unto us to mock us; he came in unto me to lie with me,

† Heb. great. and I cried with a loud voice :

Unto the men of her house ; to such as were in other parts of the house, whom she called in as witnesses for her husband's satisfaction. He, i. e. my husband, whom she would not name, as it were out of disdain and high displeasure for being the occasion of this horrid affront. Thus the pronouns he and they are oft used by way of contempt, as Luke xiv. 24; xix. 27; John vii. 11; viii. 10. An Hebrew; so she calls him, to render him hateful and contemptible to the Egyptians. To mock us; to abuse me; or to vitiate and defile me; for that word is oft used in an obscene sense. She insinuates, that this was not only an indignity to her, but an injury to all the family, which therefore they were obliged to revenge.

15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home.

n Ex. 28. 1. Ps. 120. 3. 17 And she ⁿspake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me :

So she makes her husband accessory to the crime, that she might provoke him to the sharper revenge.

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

An improbable story, and an evidence that the violence was on her side; otherwise, if he had attempted violence upon her person, he would not have forborne violence to the recovery of his garment, which he very well knew might be made a pretence against him.

19 And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his ^owrath was kindled.

o Prov. 6. 34, 35.

20 And Joseph's master took him, and ^pput him into the ^qprison, a place where the king's prisoners ^rwere bound: and he was there in the prison.

p Ps. 106. 18. 1 Pet. 2. 19. q See ch. 40. 3, 16, & 41. 14.

Quest. Why did he not kill him, the crime being capital, and he having so undoubted a power in his hand to do it? Answer. 1. It is probable he was a little moderated by Joseph's apology, which doubtless he made for himself, though it be not here recorded. 2. This is to be ascribed to the good providence of God, which restrains the waves of the sea, and the passions of men, and sets them their bounds which they shall not pass, which watched over Joseph in a peculiar manner. The king's prisoners; traitors, or great offenders against the king, whose prison doubtless was none of the easiest, and therefore it is called a duncheon, Gen. xl. 15; xli. 14; and he endured great hardship in it. See Psal. cv. 18.

21 ¶ But the LORD was with Joseph, and †shewed him mercy, and ^sgave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

† Heb. cast down kindness unto him. r Ex. 3. 21. & 11. 3. & 12. 36. Ps. 106. 46. Prov. 16. 7. Dan. 1. 9. Acts 7. 9, 10.

The gaoler, who under Potiphar was the keeper of that particular prison.

s ch. 40. 3, 4. 22 And the keeper of the prison ^tcommitted to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that ^uwere in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

They did nothing but by Joseph's command or permission.

23 The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that ^vwas under his hand; because

' the LORD was with him, and that which ^{t ver. 2, 3.} he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

CHAP. XL.

Pharaoh's chief butler and baker are put into prison, and committed to Joseph, 1—4. They dream, and are sad, 5, 6. He asks the reason, 7. Their answer, and Joseph's reply, 8. The chief butler tells his dream, 9—11. Joseph interprets it of his restoration, and desires him to be mindful of him, 12—15. The chief baker also tells his dream, 16, 17. Joseph interprets it, 18, 19. Both made good by the event, 20—22. The butler forgets Joseph, 23.

AND it came to pass after these things, ^{cir. 1720.} that the ^abutler of the king of Egypt and ^{a Neh. 1. 11.} his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt.

2 And Pharaoh was ^bwroth against two of his officers, against the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers. ^{b Prov. 16. 14.}

3 ^cAnd he put them in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, into the prison, the place where Joseph ^{c ch. 39. 20, 23.}was bound.

The captain of the guard, to wit, Potiphar, Gen. xxxvii. 36, who being informed by his underkeeper of Joseph's great care and faithfulness, began to have a better opinion of him, though for his own quiet, and his wife's reputation, he left him still in the prison. Where Joseph was bound; was a prisoner, as that word is used, Isa. xxii. 3; for Joseph being now made governor of the prisoners, was doubtless freed from his bonds: or had been bound, and that with irons in a cruel manner, Psal. cv. 18.

4 And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he served them: and they continued a season in ward.

A season, Heb. days, i. e. either many days, or a year, as that word sometimes signifies. See Gen. xxiv. 55.

5 ¶ And they dreamed a dream both ^{cir. 1718.} of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which ^rwere bound in the prison.

i. e. Not a vain and idle dream, but one that had in it a signification of future things, and needed interpretation; and the several dreams were proper and agreeable to the several events which befell them, and to the several interpretations which Joseph put upon them: the dream and interpretation did fitly answer one to the other.

6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they ^{were}sad.

Perplexed and terrified both, because they perceived the dream was extraordinary and sent from God; compare Gen. xli. 8; Dan. ii. 1; Matt. xxvii. 19; and because they understood not the meaning of it.

7 And he asked Pharaoh's officers that ^{were}with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore [†]look ye ^{so}sadly to day?

8 And they said unto him, ^dWe have dreamed a dream, and ^ethere is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, ^{e Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.}

† Heb. are your faces cast? Neh. 2. 2. d ch. 41. 15.

There is no interpreter of it, to wit, with us, or to whom we can now resort; for otherwise there were many in Egypt of that profession, chap. xli. 8. Do not interpretations belong to God? In vain do you expect such things from your wise men, for it is only that God who sends these dreams that can interpret them, and to him you should seek for it. Tell e See ch. 41. 16. Dan. 2. 11, 28, 47.

me, who am the servant of the true God, who useth to communicate his secrets to his people, and who, I doubt not, will hear my prayers for this mercy. This he spoke by special direction and instinct from God, who had given this gift to him.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said to him, In my dream, behold, a vine was before me ;

10 And in the vine were three branches : and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth ; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes :

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand : and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

12 And Joseph said unto him, 'This is the interpretation of it: The three branches are three days :

i. e. Signify three days. So that word is oft used, as ver. 18 ; xli. 26, 27 ; Dan. ii. 38 ; iv. 22 ; Matt. xiii. 19, 38 ; xxvi. 26, 28 ; Luke viii. 11 ; 1 Cor. x. 4. And indeed there is no proper Hebrew word which answers to signify.

13 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thine head, and restore thee unto thy place : and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

Lift up thine head, i. e. advance thee to thy former dignity. So that phrase is used 2 Kings xxv. 27 ; Psal. cx. 7. Or, reckon thy head, i. e. thy name or thy person, to wit, among his servants, which is added, ver. 20. According to the custom, which was this : at set times governors of families used to take an account of their servants, and to have the names of their servants read to them, and they either left them in the catalogue, or put any of them out, as they saw fit, and inflicted such further punishments upon any of them as they deserved. This seems the truer interpretation, because it is said that Pharaoh lifted up the head of his butler, and of his baker, ver. 20, and therefore the phrase must be so expounded, as to agree equally to both.

14 But † think on me when it shall be well with thee, and † shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house :

Though he patiently endures his prison, yet he prudently useth all lawful means to get his freedom.

15 For indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews : † and here also have I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

I was stolen away, taken away by force and fraud, without my own or father's consent, out of the land of Canaan, which he might call the land of the Hebrews, either because they now dwelt in it, or by way of protestation of their right and claim to it by God's gift. Or rather thus, out of that part of Canaan where the Hebrews dwell ; for the word land is not only spoken of whole countries, as of the whole land of Canaan, but of any parts or parcels thereof, as Gen. xiii. 6 ; xxii. 2 ; xxiii. 15 ; xxiv. 1. Observe, that Joseph doth not accuse either his brethren or his mistress, but only asserts his own innocence, which was necessary for his deliverance.

16 When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, I had three || white baskets on my head :

White baskets ; so called from the colour, either of the baskets, which were made of pilled, and so white twigs, or of the things contained in them, as white bread, &c.

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of † bakemeats for Pharaoh ; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

18 And Joseph answered and said, || This is the interpretation thereof : The three baskets are three days :

19 || Yet within three days shall Pharaoh || lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree ; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

From off thee. This clause is industriously added here to the former phrase, to show that it was now meant in another sense. He shall indeed lift up thy head, as well as the chief butler's, but in another manner, not for thee, but from thee, or so as to take away thy head or thy life (which eminently consists and appears in the head) from thee.

20 ¶ And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's † birthday, that he † made a feast unto all his servants : and he ¶ lifted up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

Pharaoh's birth-day. Birth-days by persons of eminency then were, and since have usually been, celebrated with feasting and rejoicing.

21 And he † restored the chief butler unto his butlership again ; and † he gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand :

22 But he † hanged the chief baker : as Joseph had interpreted to them.

23 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but † forgot him.

i. e. Neglected him and his desire ; as men in Scripture are oft said to forget God, when they do not remember him so as to love and obey him, as Psal. cvi. 13, 21 ; Hos. ii. 13.

CHAP. XLI.

Pharaoh's two dreams, 1—7. He is troubled ; sends for interpreters ; their inability, 8. The chief butler, sensible of his fault, remembers Joseph, 9 ; comments him to Pharaoh, 10—13, who causes him to be brought before him, 14, expecting the interpretation from him, 15. Joseph ascribes all to God, 16. Pharaoh relates his dreams to Joseph, 17—24. He interprets them, 25—31. The reason of their being doubled, 32. His advice to Pharaoh against the dearth to come, 33—36, which he approves of, 37 ; appoints him governor, next himself, over the whole land, 38—41. The ensigns of dignity and stately presents conferred on him, 42—44 ; also a new name, Zaphnath-paaneah, and a wife, 45. Joseph, now thirty years of age, makes a progress over all the land, inspects the stores, lays up provisions, 45—49 ; has two children, Manassah and Ephraim, 50—52. Bad years come on ; he supplies the country, 53—57.

AND it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed : and, behold, he stood by the river.

Two full years, after the butler's restitution to his place. Heb. Years of days, for full years, as 2 Sam. xiv. 28 ; Jer. xxviii. 3 ; as a month of days is put for a full month, Gen. xxix. 14, which is complete to a day. Nilus is called the river simply, because of its eminency, as Homer or Virgil are called the poet.

2 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well favoured kine and fatfleshed ; and they fed in a meadow.

This suits well with the nature of the thing, for both the fruitfulness and the barrenness of Egypt depended, under God, upon the increase or diminution of the waters of that river. Kine, when they appeared in dreams, did portend, in the opinion of the learned Egyptians, the years or times to come, and them either good or bad, according to their quality.

the work of a baker, or, cook.

m ver. 12.

n ver. 13.

|| Or, reckon thee, and take thy office from thee.

o Matt. 14. 6.

p Mark 6. 21.

q ver. 13, 19.

r Matt. 25. 19.

|| Or, reckoned.

r ver. 13.

s Neh. 2. 1.

t ver. 19.

u Job 19. 14.

Ps. 31. 12.

Eccl. 9.

15, 16.

Amos 6. 6.

f ver. 18, ch. 41. 12, 25. Judg. 7. 14. Dan. 2. 36. & 4. 19. g ch. 41. 26.

h 2 Kings 25. 27. Ps. 3. 3. Jer. 52. 31. || Or, reckon.

h 2 Kings 25. 27. Ps. 3. 3. Jer. 52. 31. || Or, reckon.

+ Heb. remember me with thee. 1 Luke 23. 42.

† Josh. 2. 12. 1 Sam. 20. 14, 15. 2 Sam. 9. 1. 1 Kings 2. 7.

|| Or, full of holes.

|| Or, full of holes.

+ Heb. meet of Pharaoh.

3 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

Which shows how sparingly the river overflowed the lands.

4 And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, † rank and good.

Ears of corn are fit and proper resemblances of the thing here intended, both because the fertility of a land doth mainly consist in the abundance and goodness of these; and because ears of corn appearing to any in a dream, did, in the judgment of the Egyptian wise men, signify years, as Josephus notes.

6 And, behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprung up after them.

A boisterous wind, and in those parts of the world very pernicious to the fruits of the earth, Ezek. xvii. 10; xix. 12; Hos. xiii. 15.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

Not a real thing, as Pharaoh in his sleep imagined it to be. Heb. Behold the dream, i. e. the dream did not vanish, as dreams commonly do, but was fixed in his mind, and he could not shake it off; by which he saw that it was no common or natural, but a Divine and significant dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morning *that his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all † the magicians of Egypt, and all the † wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

His spirit was troubled, because he understood not the meaning of it, and dreaded the consequences of it. Compare Gen. xl. 6; Dan. ii. 1, 3; Mat. xxvii. 19. The magicians, whose profession it was to discover secret and future things; which they did either by the observation of the stars, or by other superstitious practices, and the help of evil spirits. See Exod. vii. 11; viii. 19; Dan. ii. 2, 10. The wise men, who were conversant in the study of nature; and by reason of their great sagacity, did oftentimes make happy conjectures. Pharaoh calls them both one dream, either because they seemed to portend the same thing, or because they were the product of one night, and were divided only by a very little interruption.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

Not against Joseph by ingratitude, but against the king; by which expression he both acknowledgeth the king's justice in imprisoning him, and his clemency in pardoning him.

10 Pharaoh was † wroth with his servants, * and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

11 And † we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

Of which phrase see on Gen xl. 5.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, † servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he † interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, † as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

Me he restored; either, 1. Pharaoh. But then he would have mentioned either his name or title, and not have spoken so slightly and indecently of him. Or rather, 2. Joseph, of whom he spake last, and who is here said to restore the one, and to hang the other, because he foretold those events, as Jeremiah is said to pull down and destroy those nations, Jer. i. 10, whose destruction he did only foretell.

14 ¶ † Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they † brought him hastily † out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

The dungeon, or prison, by a synecdoche of the part for the whole. For it is not probable that Joseph, who was now so much employed, and intrusted with all the affairs of the prison and prisoners, Gen. xxxix. 21—23, should still be kept in the dungeon properly so called. He shaved himself; for till then he suffered his hair to grow, as the manner was for persons in prison, or under great sorrow, 2 Sam. xix. 24. But to appear in a mournful dress before the king was not convenient, nor usual. Compare Esth. iv. 4.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: † and I have heard say of thee, that † thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, † It is not in me: † God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace.

I cannot do this by any power, or virtue, or art of my own, for I am but a man, as your magicians are, but only by inspiration from the great God. Thus he gives the honour from himself unto God, and leads Pharaoh to the knowledge of the true God. For the phrase compare Matt. x. 20; 1 Cor. xv. 10. God shall give; or, may God give, &c. It is my desire that God would vouchsafe to Pharaoh a comfortable and happy answer.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, † In † my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fatfleshed and well favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill favoured and leanfleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

20 And the lean and the ill favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:

21 And when they had † eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

They seemed to be neither fatter in the flesh, nor fuller in their bodies. As many times in famine men eat much, but are not satisfied, because God withdraws his blessing from it, by which alone it is that meat nourisheth us.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, † withered, thin, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them:

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and † I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one: † God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.

† Heb. fat.

a Dan. 2. 1. b Ex. 7. 11,
22.
Is. 29. 14.
Dan. 1. 20, &
2. 2. & 4. 7.
c Matt. 2. 1.

d ch. 40. 2, 3.
e ch. 39. 20.
f ch. 40. 5.

g ch. 37. 36.
h ch. 40. 12,
&c.

i ch. 40. 22.

k Ps. 105. 20.
l Dan. 2. 25.
† Heb. made him run.
m 1 Sam. 2. 8.
n Ps. 113. 7, 8.

n ver. 12.
Ps. 25. 14.
Dan. 5. 16.
† Or, when thou hearest a dream thou canst interpret it.
o Dan. 2. 30.
Acts 3. 12.
2 Cor. 3. 5.
p ch. 40. 8.
Dan. 2. 22,
23, 47. & 4. 2.

q ver. 1.

† Heb. come to the inward parts of them.

† Or, small.

r ver. 8.
Dan. 4. 7.

s Dan. 2. 28, 29, 45.
Rev. 4. 1.

The dream of Pharaoh is one, to wit, in its design and signification; both dreams portend the same thing.

26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.

27 And the seven thin and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine.

t 2 Kings
8. 1.

u ver. 25.

28 ^u This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: What God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

x ver. 47.

29 Behold, there come ^x seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

y ver. 54.

30 And there shall ^y arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine ^y shall consume the land;

z ch. 47. 13.

There shall be no relics of it to keep it in men's minds, which will be so taken up with the contemplation of their present misery and future danger, that they will have neither heart nor leisure to reflect upon their former plenty, the remembrance whereof will but aggravate the present calamity.

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very [†] grievous.

† Heb.
keny.

32 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the ^a thing is || established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

a Num. 23.
19. Is. 46.
10. 11.
† Or, prepared of God.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint || officers over the land, and ^b take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

† Or, overseers.
b Prov. 6. 6, 7, 8.

Not by force or violence, for Joseph would never be the author of such unrighteous counsels; but by purchase at the common price, which was like to be very low in that case, and therefore might easily be compassed by that rich and mighty prince. Quest. Why the fifth part, and not half, seeing the years of famine were as many as the years of plenty? Ans. Because, 1. Men would and should live more sparingly in times of famine. 2. It was likely that very many men would lay up great quantities of corn in those years, partly because they could not spend it all, and partly in expectation of a scarcer and dearer time, when they might either use it themselves, or sell it to their advantage. 3. The fifth part of those years of great plenty might be more than the half, yea, equal to the whole crop of ordinary years.

c ver. 48.

35 And ^c let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land [†] perish not through the famine.

† Heb. be not cut off.
d ch. 47. 15, 19.
e Ps. 105. 19.
Acts 7. 10.

37 ¶ And ^e the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

f Num. 27.
18. Job 32. 8.
Prov. 2. 6.
Dan. 4. 8.
19. & 5. 11.
14. & 5. 3.

38 And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man ^f in whom the Spirit of God is?

Or, of the gods, in his heathen language. One whom God hath endowed with such admirable knowledge and wisdom.

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

God hath showed thee all this, i. e. hath given thee this extraordinary gift of foreseeing and foretelling things to come, and of giving such sage advice for the future.

40 ^g Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people [†] be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

g Ps. 105.
21, 22.
1 Mac. 2. 53.
Acts 7. 10.
† Heb. be armed,
or, kiss.

According unto thy word, i. e. direction and command, Heb. mouth, which is oft put for command, (as Exod. xvii. 1; xxxviii. 21; Numb. iii. 16, 39, &c.,) shall all my people be ruled, or, be fed; they shall receive their provisions from thy hand, and according to thy disposal. Others, shall kiss, viz. the hand, as inferiors used to do, upon their address to or conference with great persons. See Job xxxi. 27; Hos. xiii. 2. But it was frivolous for Joseph to command them to do that which by the custom of the place they were obliged and wont to do. Some render the word thus, and that agreeable to the Hebrew, at thy mouth shall the people kiss; which may be understood either properly, as inferiors did sometimes kiss their superiors in token of their homage; see 1 Sam. x. 1; or rather metaphorically, as the same phrase is used Psal. ii. 12; Prov. xxiv. 26, receive all thy commands with reverence and submission. In the throne, i. e. in sovereign power and dignity.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have ^h set thee over all the land ^h Dan. 6. 3. of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh ⁱ took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and ^h arrayed him in vestures of || fine linen, ¹ and put a gold chain about his neck;

i Esth. 3. 10.
& 8. 2, 8.

k Esth. 8. 15.

† Or, silk.
l Dan. 5. 7,
29.

His ring was both a token of highest dignity, and an instrument of greatest power, by which he had authority to make and sign what decrees he thought fit in the king's name. See Esth. iii. 10; viii. 2. With fine linen the greatest potentates were arrayed. See Prov. xxxi. 22, 24; Ezek. xvi. 10; Luke xvii. 19; Rev. xix. 8. A gold chain was another badge of great honour. See Prov. i. 9; Ezek. xvi. 11; Dan. v. 7, 16, 29.

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; ^m and they cried before him, || [†] Bow the knee: and he made him ruler ⁿ over all the land of Egypt.

m Esth. 6. 9.
† Or, Tender
father.
ch. 45. 6.
† Heb.
Abreck.
n ch. 42. 6.
& 46. 5, 25.
Acts 7. 10.

In the second chariot; in the king's second chariot, that he might be known and owned to be the next person to the king in power and dignity. Compare 2 Chron. xxxv. 24; Esth. vi. 8; x. 3; Dan. v. 29. Bow the knee: they commanded all that passed by him, or came to him, to show their reverent respect to him in this manner: compare Esth. iii. 2. Others, tender father, to signify that he was to be owned as the father of the country, because by his prudence and care he had provided for them all, and saved them from utter ruin.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

I am Pharaoh, i. e. I only am the king, I reserve to myself the sovereign power over thee, and over all. As the name of Cæsar among the Romans was commonly used for the emperor, so the name of Pharaoh for the king. Or thus, I have the supreme power, and therefore as I have authority to give thee the following power, so I will make it good to thee, and oblige all my people to observe and obey thee. No man shall do any thing in the public affairs of the kingdom concerning matters of war or peace without thy commission or licence.

¶ Which in the Coptic signifies, A revealer of secrets, or, The man to whom secrets are revealed.
 ¶ Or, prince.
 Ex. 2. 16. 2 Sam. 8. 18. & 20. 26.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name || Zaphnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah || priest of On. And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

Zaphnath-paaneah, i. e. The revealer of secrets, as the Hebrews generally understand it, and with them most others. Poti-pherah, not that Potiphar, Gen. xxxix. 1; both because he had another title, and dwelt in another place; and because it is not probable Joseph would have married the daughter of so unchaste a mother; but another and a greater person. It is the observation of a late ingenious and learned writer, that among the Egyptians there were three words, or endings of words, near akin, but differing in signification, and in the degree of dignity and authority, to which those names were annexed: Phar, which belonged to inferior officers; and Pherah, which was given to those of greater dignity and power; and Pharaoh, which was appropriated to the king. Priest, or prince, as the word signifies, Exod. xviii. 1; 2 Sam. viii. 18; xx. 26, and elsewhere. This sense is the more probable, both from Joseph's high quality, and from his holy disposition, whereby he hated idolatry, and would never have married the daughter of an idolatrous priest. On was a famous city of Egypt, called also Aven, Ezek. xxx. 17, and afterwards, as some think, Heliopolis, now Damiatra. See Jer. xliii. 13. Joseph went out over all the land, upon his employment, and to execute the king's command, and his own counsel.

46 ¶ And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

Joseph's age is here noted to teach us, 1. That Joseph's short affliction was recompensed with a much longer prosperity, even for eighty years. 2. That Joseph's excellent wisdom did not proceed from his large and long experience, but from the singular gift of God. He stood before Pharaoh, as his chief minister: to stand before another is the posture and designation of a servant, as 1 Sam. xvi. 21; Dan. i. 19. Went throughout all the land, to provide places for his stores, and to constitute officers for the management of them.

47 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

Or, unto handfuls, to wit, growing upon one stalk; or, unto heaps; or, as the ancients render it, for the barns or storehouses; i. e. in such plenty, that all their storehouses were filled with heaps of corn.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

All the food; that is, either all sorts of grain which was proper for food; or all which he intended to gather, to wit, the fifth part, ver. 34.

49 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 ¶ And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah || priest of On bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the firstborn || Manasseh: For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

i. e. Hath expelled all sorrowful remembrance of it by my present comfort and glory. All my toil, and all my father's house, i. e. the toil of my father's house, or the toil and misery which for many years I have endured by means of my father's family, and my own brethren, who sold me hither; a figure called hendyadis.

52 And the name of the second called he || Ephraim: For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction. i. e. In the land which hitherto hath been to me a land of affliction.

53 ¶ And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

54 ¶ And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

In all lands; in all the neighboring countries, appears by comparing this with Gen. xlii. 1.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

The people cried to Pharaoh, as to their king and common father. Compare 2 Kings vi. 26.

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth: And Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 ¶ And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn: because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

CHAP. XLII.

Jacob hearing there was corn in Egypt, sends all his sons thither but Benjamin, 1—5. They bow before Joseph, who knew them, but not they him; he treats them roughly, 6—8; remembers his dreams; charges them for spies, 9—12. They, to vindicate themselves, declare that they were all sons of one father, and had a younger brother at home, 13. Joseph imprisons them, but releases all but Simeon, and sends the rest to fetch their brother, and so prove their words true, 14—20. Their consciences are awakened, and charge them with their sin against Joseph; they accuse one another, 21, 22. Joseph hears them; weeps; binds Simeon, 23, 24. Joseph orders their sacks to be filled with corn, and to return their money, 25, 26. In the way one finds his money in his sack; they are the more afraid, 27, 28. At home they relate to Jacob what happened to them, so far as to persuade Jacob to let Benjamin go, 29—35. He complains; Reuben undertakes for him; he cannot consent to let him go, 36—38.

NOW when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

When Jacob saw, i. e. heard, as the word is used, Exod. xx. 18; as seeing is put for smelling, Exod. v. 21, and for tasting, Psal. xxxiv. 8; and for touching, John xx. 29. Why do ye look one upon another; like lazy, careless, and helpless persons, each one expecting relief from the other, but none offering either counsel or help for all our subsistence?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die.

I have heard: this word explains the word saw, ver. 1. Get you down; for Egypt was lower than Canaan; whence, on the contrary, they are said to go up to Canaan, Gen. xlv. 9. That we may live, and not die; an emphatical repetition of the same thing, used here to make them more sensible of their danger.

o 1 Sam. 16.
 21. 1 Kings
 12. 6, 8.
 Dan. 1. 19.

p ch. 22. 17.
 Judg. 7. 12.
 1 Sam. 13. 5.
 Ps. 78. 27.

q ch. 46. 20.
 & 48. 5.

¶ Or, prince,
 ver. 45.
 2 Sam. 8. 18.
 cir. 1712.

¶ That is,
 forgetting.

cir. 1711.

¶ That is,
 fruitful.
 7 ch. 49. 22.

1708.

a Ps. 105. 14.
 Acts 7. 11.
 t ver. 30.

+ Heb. all
 was.
 u ch. 42. 6.
 & 47. 14, 24.

x Deut. 9. 28.

1707.
 a Acts 7. 12.

b ch. 43. 8.
 Ps. 118. 17.
 Is. 38. 1.

3 ¶ And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren; for he said, ^{c ver. 38.} Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

Because he was very young, and now his best beloved son.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was ^{d Acts 7. 11.} in the land of Canaan. ^{e ch. 41. 41.}

6 And Joseph was the governor ^{f ch. 37. 7.} of the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and ^f bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

He sold to the people; either, 1. By his ministers and commissioners appointed to that end, as men in Scripture and in all authors are said to do that which others do by their authority and command. Or, 2. He himself immediately contracted with the buyers, or at least with such as were foreigners; which he did upon prudential reasons; both because he would not have them to pry into the state of Egypt, ver. 12, and because he would by that opportunity understand the state of other lands, and improve that knowledge for his master's service. Joseph's brethren bowed down themselves before him; thus unwittingly fulfilling Joseph's dream, Gen. xxxvii. 7.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake ^{+ Heb. hard things with them.} † roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

He spake roughly unto them; partly, to bring their sin to remembrance; partly, to get the knowledge of the true state of his father and family; and partly, to further the following design, and make way for his and their greater happiness.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

Because his visage was much altered by his beard, and by other things, it being about twenty years since they saw him; and his Egyptian language, and habit, and carriage, together with the great dignity of his place, prevented all suspicions concerning their brother.

9 And Joseph ^{g ch. 37. 5, 9.} remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

This he saith, not because they were so, or he thought them to be so; but that he might search out the truth of their affair, speaking too much like a courtier or politician. The nakedness of the land, i. e. the weak parts of it, and where it may be best assaulted or surprised.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons; we are true men, thy servants are no spies.

We are all one man's sons, and therefore not spies; for it is not likely either that a father would venture so many sons upon so hazardous an employment, or that such a work would have been trusted in the hands of one family only. We are true men, who honestly and truly mean what we pretend, and have no other design in our coming hither.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one ^{h ch. 37. 30. Lam. 5. 7. See ch. 44. 20.} is not.

i. e. Is dead, as that phrase often signifies both in Scripture, as Gen. xxxvii. 30; xlv. 20; Jer. xxxi. 15; Matt. ii. 17, 18, and in other authors, as Homer, Euripides, &c. They concluded with great probability that he was dead, chap. xlv. 20, because for twenty years together they had heard nothing, either of him or from him; which may seem strange, considering the nearness of Egypt and Canaan: but this came to pass partly from his own long imprisonment, and afterwards from his great and high employment; partly, from his lothness to bring so much mischief to his father and brethren, as the discovery of his case might have produced; and principally, from the overruling providence of God, which for its own glorious design disposed of Joseph's mind and affairs, so that he either did not send to his father's house, or that the messages were intercepted, there being not then those conveniences for mutual correspondencies which now there are. And it is not improbable that Joseph might be further acquainted with the mind of God in this matter by dreams, which may seem to have been familiarly afforded to him, together with the interpretation of them. See Gen. xl. 8; xli. 16.

14 And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

This justifies my accusation; for it is not probable that one man should have so many sons, all grown up and living together in one family, and that he should expose them all to the perils of such a journey.

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: ^{i See 1 Sam. i. 26; xvii. 55; 2 Kings ii. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 11. And it is not strange that Joseph through human infirmity was carried by the stream of the general practice of the court, especially when the law of God was not yet delivered concerning the appropriation of oaths unto God.} ^{1 See 1 Sam. i. 26; xvii. 55; 2 Kings ii. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 11. And it is not strange that Joseph through human infirmity was carried by the stream of the general practice of the court, especially when the law of God was not yet delivered concerning the appropriation of oaths unto God.} By the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

By the life of Pharaoh, as sure as Pharaoh lives. It seems to be the form of an oath in use among the Egyptians, as afterwards the Romans used to swear by the name, genius, health, and life of their emperors. Compare 1 Sam. i. 26; xvii. 55; 2 Kings ii. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 11. And it is not strange that Joseph through human infirmity was carried by the stream of the general practice of the court, especially when the law of God was not yet delivered concerning the appropriation of oaths unto God.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be ^{+ Heb. bound.} † kept in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies.

17 And he ^{+ Heb. gathered.} † put them all together into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; ^{k Lev. 25. 43. Neh. 5. 15.} for I fear God:

I will spare your lives, and not punish you with death as spies, and you shall carry provisions, that your family also may live; for I fear God, and therefore will not be cruel to you, nor to your brother whom you shall leave with me. This might have raised some suspicion concerning Joseph, but that they knew there were divers among the heathens who did own the true God, though they worshipped idols with him.

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

Your prison, in which you are now imprisoned, and are still like to be so, if you accept not this condition.

20 But ^{l ver. 34. ch. 43. 5, & 44. 23.} † bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.

i. e. Resolved and promised to do so. Those things are oft said to be done in Scripture which were sincerely resolved upon, as hath been noted before.

21 ¶ And they said one to another, ^{m Job 26. 5, 9. Hos. 5. 15.} We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would n Prov. 21. 13. not hear; ^a therefore is this distress come upon us.

This is the just punishment of that great wickedness, which though we could cover from men, yet we now see and feel was known to God, who is now reckoning with us for it. Thus Divine vengeance overtakes them, and conscience tortures them for a sin committed above twenty years before, and their affliction brings them to repentance. When he besought us: compare Gen. xlix. 23. Yet this passage is not mentioned in that history, chap. xxxvii. Learn hence, that the silence of the Scripture is no good argument that such or such a thing was not said or done, except in some special cases. Therefore is this distress come upon us; he is inexorable to us, as we were to him.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, ^o Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is ^p required.

i. e. The punishment of his blood or death occasioned by us.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for [†] he spake unto them by an interpreter.

24 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

He turned himself and wept tears, partly of natural affection and compassion towards his brethren, now in great distress and anguish; and partly of joy, to see the happy success of his design and rigorous carriage, in bringing them to the sight of their sins.

He chooseth to punish Simeon, partly, because next to Reuben he was the eldest, and, as it may be probably gathered from his bloody disposition, Gen. xxxiv. 25; xlix. 6, the most fierce and forward against Joseph, when Reuben was for milder counsels, as we see here, ver. 22; chap. xxxvii. 29; and partly, because the detainment of one of so perverse and furious a temper would least afflict his father, and most secure Benjamin, who was to come with his brethren. He bound him before their eyes, that it might make deeper impression upon their hard hearts, and make their repentance more effectual.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and [†] thus did he unto them.

26 And they laden their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

27 And as ^r one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

And after him the rest by his example and information did so, as is affirmed chap. xliii. 21, and it is not denied here.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their heart [†] failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

They were afraid, lest this should be a design to entrap, and so destroy them. Whoever were the instruments, they knew that God was the chief author of this occurrence, and wisely reflect upon his providence in it, and their own guilt which provoked him against them.

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them; saying,

30 The man, who is the lord of the land,

^s spake [†] roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies:

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father; one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, ^t Hereby shall I know that ye are true men: leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone:

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall ^u traffick in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, ^x every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

i. e. Their fear returned upon them with more violence, having now more leisure to consider things, and their wise and experienced father suggesting new matters to them, which might more deeply affect them.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me.

Simeon is not; he gave him up for lost, as being, as he thought, in the power of a cruel enemy.

All these things are against me; I am the great sufferer in all these things: you carry yourselves as if you were neither concerned nor affected with them.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

Slay my two sons, two of the four mentioned Gen. xlii. 9. An absurd proposition, neither fit for him to make, nor for Jacob to accept.

38 And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for ^z his brother is dead, and he is left alone: ^a if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye ^b bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

He is left alone, to wit, of his mother, my dear Rachel.

CHAP. XLIII.

The famine continuing, and their provision being spent, Jacob commands them to go again to Egypt, 1, 2. They prevail with their father to send Benjamin: Judah undertakes for him, 3—10. He gives them presents, double money, and his blessing, 11—14. They go to Egypt; stand before Joseph, 15. He seeing Benjamin with them, causeth them to be brought to his house, and entertained, 16, 17; whereat they are afraid, and make an apology to the steward about their money, 18—22. He bids them good cheer, useth them courteously, brings Simeon to them, 23, 24. They prepare to bring their presents to Joseph, who speaks kindly to them, (and asks them of their father,) especially to Benjamin, with whom he is so moved that he must retire to weep, 25—30. He feasts them, but Benjamin in an especial manner, 31—34.

AND the famine was ^a sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass, when they had

o ch. 37. 21.
p ch. 9. 5.
1 Kings 2.
32. 2 Chron.
24. 22.
1's. 9. 12.
Luke 11. 80.
51.

+ Heb. an interpreter was between them.

q Matt. 5. 44.
Rom. 12. 17.
20. 21.

r See ch. 43. 21.

+ Heb. went forth.

s ver. 7.
+ Heb. with us hard things.

t ver. 15, 19, 20.

u ch. 34. 10.

x See ch. 43. 21.

y ch. 43. 14.

z ver. 13. & ch. 37. 33. & 44. 29.

a ver. 4. & ch. 44. 29.

b ch. 37. 35. & 44. 21.

a ch. 41. 54. 57.

eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food.

He saith a little, either to show that he took no thought to satisfy his or their curiosity or luxury, but only their necessity, for which a little would suffice, and that they must all moderate their appetites, especially in a time of such scarcity; or to encourage them to the journey, by suggesting to them that they needed not bring great stores, but only what was sufficient for that year, and that God would provide better for them hereafter, so as they should not need to go so far for corn any more.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The man †did solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not see my face, except your ^bbrother be with you.

^{+ Heb. protesting protested. b ch. 42. 20. & 44. 23.}
Ye shall not see my face. See the same expression, 2 Sam. xiv. 24, 32; Acts xx. 25, 38. Ye shall not be admitted into my presence, nor to the purchasing of any corn here.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

5 But if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down: for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

We will not go down, because we shall both lose the end of our journey, viz. the getting of corn, and run the utmost hazard of all our lives.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

7 And they said, The man †asked us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? and we told him according to the †tenor of these words: †could we certainly know that he would say, Bring your brother down?

^{+ Heb. asking asked us.}
We told him according to the tenor of these words; we gave answers suitable to his questions, or such as his words required.

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and also our little ones.

Judah, for his age and prudence, and penitent carriage for his youthful follies, was most beloved and regarded by his father. The lad; so he calls him, because he was the youngest of all, though he was now thirty years old, and a father of divers children. See Gen. xxx. 22; xxxv. 18; xli. 46; xli. 21.

9 I will be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him: °if I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:

^{c ch. 44. 32. Philem. 16. 19.}
Let me bear the blame; Heb. be an offender to thee. Let me bear the guilt, and shame, and punishment due to so great an offence.

10 For except we had lingered, surely now we had returned || this second time.

11 And their father Israel said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and ^dcarry down the man a present, a little ^ebalm, and a little honey, spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds:

^{d ch. 32. 20. Prov. 16. 16. e ch. 37. 25. Jer. 6. 22.}
Of all which see Gen. xxxvii. 25. The nuts were of that kind which we call pistaches, as some Hebrew and other expositors render the word; for that was both an excellent fruit, and peculiar to Judea and Syria, and well agreeing with the almonds which here follow.

12 And take double money in your hand; and the money ^fthat was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

Take double money, double to what you carried last, either to procure more corn, which may prevent the frequency of such perilous journeys; or because the continuance and increase of the scarcity had advanced the price. Carry it again, for it is their money, not ours, and therefore must be restored. Peradventure it was an oversight, either in you, or in the receiver of your money, who through multitude of buyers, and haste in his business, might easily be mistaken.

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

14 And God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. ^g|| If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

^{g Esth. 4. 16. || Or, and I, as I have been, &c.}
An expression whereby he submits himself and children to God's will and providence, whatever the issue shall be. Compare Esth. iv. 16. Or thus, As I have been already bereaved of some of my dearest children, so I shall be bereaved of the rest, and I shall be left solitary; and if this be my portion, God's will be done.

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the ^hruler of his house, Bring these men home, and †slay, and make ready; for these men shall †dine with me at noon.

^{h ch. 24. 2. & 39. 4. & 44. 1. || Heb. kill a killing. 1 Sam. 25. 11. † Heb. eat.}
The usual time for the more solemn meal in the east countries, as the evening was the time, and the supper the great meal, among the Romans.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house; and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may †seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

^{+ Heb. roll himself upon us. Job 30. 14.}
Take us for bondmen, the proper punishment for thieves.

19 And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

20 And said, O sir, ⁱ† we came indeed down at the first time to buy food:

^{i ch. 42. 3, 10. † Heb. coming down we came down. k ch. 42. 27. 35.}
21 And ^kit came to pass, when we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

23 And he said, Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: †I had your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them.

^{+ Heb. your money came to me.}
Peace be to you; no harm shall come to you for that matter. Your God, and the God of your father: thus he speaks, because Joseph had instructed him, as well as others of his family, in the true religion. Hath given you treasure, by his power and providence secretly putting it there.

24 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and ¹ gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses provender.

25 And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶ And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and ^m bowed themselves to him to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their † welfare, and said, † Is your father well, the old man ⁿ of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive. ° And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

Thy servant; by which expression delivered in Jacob's name, and by his order, Jacob himself made obeisance to him, as was foretold, Gen. xxxvii. 9.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw ^p his brother Benjamin, ^q his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, ^r of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

Saw his brother, i. e. more narrowly observed him, having now more leisure than he seems to have had when he saw him first, ver. 16. My son; so he calls him, not from special affection, which he intended not yet to discover; but because this compellation is commonly used when a man speaks to another who is his inferior in age or dignity.

30 And Joseph made haste; for ^s his bowels did yern upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and ^t wept there.

His bowels did yern; his heart and inward parts were vehemently moved, as they commonly are upon occasion of any excessive passion, of love, pity, grief, or joy, &c.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on ^u bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with him, by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that ^v is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

They set on for him by himself; partly because the dignity of his place, and the custom of princes, required this state; and partly for the reason here following. That is an abomination unto the Egyptians; not so much from their pride and disdain of other people, as from their superstition and idolatry; partly because they worshipped the creatures which the Hebrews and others did commonly eat; and partly because of some peculiar rites and customs which they had in the dressing and ordering of their diet. Whence Herodotus affirms, that the Egyptians would not use the pots nor knives of the Grecians about their food. Compare Gen. xli. 34. See there, Exod. viii. 26.

33 And they sat before him, the firstborn according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

The youngest according to his youth; being so placed either by Joseph's appointment; or rather by their own choice, and according to their custom; by which the elder, though the handmaidens' children, took place of the younger, who by that order were taught what veneration they owe to the aged, and how great a sin it is, though very customary, in young men to despise those whom they should reverence. The men, not the Egyptians, but the Hebrews, the men last spoken of, marvelled; either at the matter and manner of the feasts and entertainments of the Egyptians; or rather, at the singular honour which Joseph did to them above all others, the reason whereof they could not conceive, and therefore marvelled at it.

34 And he took and sent messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was ^x five times so much as any of their's. And they drank, and † were merry with him.

It was the ancient custom of Egypt and other countries in their feasts, that either all the meat, or at least some eminent parts and parcels of it, were not promiscuously set before all the guests, but peculiarly distributed by the master of the feast to the several guests, and that differently, according to his respect and affection to them, or to their several qualities. See 1 Sam. i. 5; ix. 22—24. Five times so much as any of theirs; partly, because of his nearer relation and dearer affection to him; and partly, to observe whether this would raise that envy in them towards him, which was the occasion of their malicious enterprise against himself, that he might accordingly provide for his security. Were merry: the Hebrew word oft signifies to be drunk, but oftimes it is only to drink liberally, though not to drunkenness, as may appear from Cant. v. 1; Hag. i. 6; John ii. 10.

CHAP. XLIV.

Joseph commands his steward to fill their sacks, restore every man's money, and put his silver cup into Benjamin's sack; sends them away, 1—3; thereby contriving to bring them back again: they are pursued, and charged with theft, 4—6; whereat, being greatly perplexed, they ignorantly make themselves liable to punishment, 7—10. The cup is found in Benjamin's sack; they return to Joseph, submitting to his censure, 11—14. Joseph pretends the gift of prophecy, 15. Judah speaks much and earnestly on Benjamin's behalf, offering to remain in his stead, 16—34.

AND he commanded † the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

It seems to have been a large cup, and of great price, and much used by Joseph. In the sack's mouth of the youngest, with design to discover their intentions and affections towards Benjamin, whether they did envy him, and would desert him in his danger, as they did Joseph; or would cleave to him; that hence he might take his measures how to deal with him and them.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he † divineth? † Or, maketh trial. They have done evil in so doing.

Amongst the several kinds of divination in use among the Egyptians and other heathens, this was one, to do it by a cup or bason, which they filled with water, and put in them plates of silver, or precious stones, in which certain charac-

l ch. 18. 4 & 24. 32.

m ch. 37. 7, 10.

† Heb. peace. ch. 37. 14. † Heb. Is there peace to your father? n ch. 42. 11, 13.

o ch. 37. 7, 10.

p ch. 35. 17, 18.

q ch. 42. 13.

r 1 Kings 3. 26.

s ch. 42. 24.

t ver. 25.

u ch. 46. 34. Ex. 8. 26.

x ch. 45. 22. † Heb. drank largely: See Hag. 1. 6. John 2. 10.

† Heb. him that was over his house.

† Or, maketh trial.

ters were engraven, by which, and some words they used, they called upon the devil, who gave them answer. Joseph did not use this course, nor was a diviner, but the people thought him such a one, and the steward might represent him as such, for the better covering or carrying on his design. But this sense agrees not with the 15th verse of this chapter, Wot you not, &c. Which words show that he speaks of something which they all might easily know; but they did not know that Joseph was a diviner, much less that he divined by that cup, whereas that kind of divination was generally performed by a glass, not by a cup. Others observe, that the Hebrew word oftentimes signifies not to divine, but only to observe and discover a thing, as Gen. xxx. 27; 1 Kings xx. 33, and render the place thus, whereby he will certainly observe or discover, to wit, what you are and do. But this also seems not to consist with ver. 15, and the supplement is too large and remote. The true sense then is this, the Hebrew bo is not to be rendered by which, but concerning which, as the particle beth is oft used, and it notes not the instrument whereby, but the object about which, he did divine, and the words must be rendered, concerning which he can or would certainly divine. And this agrees well with ver. 15: q. d. Did you think you could deceive my master? Did not you and all others know that he could divine, and discover secret things, whence he had both his name and preferment? And this cup being much prized and used by him, you might easily judge that he would use his art to recover it. Ye have done evil, i. e. very evil, unjustly, unthankfully, and foolishly.

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing:

a ch. 42. 21. 8 Behold, ^a the money, which we found in our sacks' mouths, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

It is not probable that he who restored that which was in our power to keep, and to conceal without any danger, should steal that which was likely to be discovered with so much shame and hazard to ourselves.

9 With whomsoever of thy servants it b ch. 31. 32. be found, ^b both let him die, and we also will be my lord's bondmen.

This over daring offer proceeded from hence, that they were all conscious of their own innocency, and did not suspect any fraud or artifice in the matter.

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

Thus he moderates the conditions which they proposed, exempting the innocent, and exchanging the deserved and offered death of the nocent into slavery.

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

Began at the eldest, to take off all their suspicion of his fraud. The cup was found in Benjamin's sack. He found doubtless the money there, but he accused them not about that matter, both because they had an answer ready to that charge from his own mouth, chap. xliii. 23, and because the greater crime, the stealing of the cup which Joseph so much prized and used, might seem to extinguish the less, or at least cause him to neglect it.

c ch. 37. 29, 34. Numb. 14. 6. 2 Sam. 1. 11. 13 Then they ^c rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.

Being afraid and ashamed to go to their father without Benjamin, concerning whom they had received so severe a charge, and made such solemn promises and imprecations.

14 ¶ And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house; for he was yet there: and they ^d fell before him on the ground. d ch. 37. 7.

15 And Joseph said unto them, What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly ^e divine? e ver. 9.

16 And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold, ^e we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found. e ver. 9.

Judah speaks in the cause, as being one of the eldest, and a person of most gravity and discretion, and readiness of speech, and most eminently concerned for his brother. God hath found out the iniquity, viz. this iniquity, of which it seems some of us are guilty, and God hath discovered it. Or iniquity may be put for iniquities; whether we are guilty of this fact or not, we are certainly guilty of many other sins, for which God is now punishing us, to whose providence we therefore willingly submit.

17 And he said, 'God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in peace unto your father. f Prov. 17. 15.

18 ¶ Then Judah came near unto him, and said, Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and ^g let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh. g ch. 16. 30, Ex. 32. 22.

Judah made a little nearer approach to him, that he might present his humble petition to him. In my lord's ears, in thy hearing; for this phrase doth not necessarily imply that he whispered in his ears; as appears from Numb. xiv. 28; Deut. xxxii. 44; Judg. xvii. 2. Thou art even as Pharaoh; as thou representest his person, so thou art invested with his majesty and authority, and therefore thy word is a law; thou canst do with us what thou pleasest, either spare or punish us, and therefore we do justly deprecate thine anger, and most humbly entreat thy favourable audience and princely compassion to us.

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

20 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and ^h a child of his old age, a little one; and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him. h ch. 37. 3.

A little one; so they call him comparatively to themselves, who were much elder; and withal, to signify the reason why he came not with them, because he was young and tender, and unfit for such a journey.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set ⁱ mine eyes upon him. i ch. 42. 15, 20.

i. e. See him with my own eyes, and thereby be satisfied of the truth of what you say. Compare Gen. xlii. 15. 16. Elsewhere this phrase signifies to show favour to a person, as Jer. xxxix. 12; xl. 4. But though that was Joseph's intention, as yet he was minded to conceal it from them.

22 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

23 And thou saidst unto thy servants, ^k Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more. k ch. 43. 3, 5.

Quest. Why would Joseph expose his father to the hazard of his life, in parting with his dear child? Ans. Joseph supposed that to be but a pretence, and might fear lest his brethren had disposed of Benjamin as they did of him, and therefore could not bring him forth. And as for his father, the experience which he had of his continuance in life and health after the supposed untimely death of Joseph, gave him good assurance that his parting with Benjamin for a season, and that under the care and charge of his brethren, was not likely to make any dangerous impression upon him.

24 And it came to pass when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

1 ch. 43. 2. 25 And ¹our father said, Go again, and buy us a little food.

26 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

27 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that ^mmy wife bare me two sons:

He calleth her my wife, by way of eminency, as Gen. xvi. 19, because she only was his wife by design and choice, whereas Leah was put upon him by fraud, and might have been refused by him, if he had so pleased; and the other two were given to him by Rachel and Leah.

28 And the one went out from me, and I said, ⁿSurely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since:

29 And if ye ^otake this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

30 Now therefore when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; seeing that ^phis life is bound up in the lad's life;

The death of the child, which upon this occasion he will firmly believe, will unavoidably procure his death also.

31 It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

32 For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, ^qIf I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

33 Now therefore, I pray thee, ^rlet thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

Partly in compassion to our aged father, and partly for thy own advantage; because I can be more serviceable to thee than he, because of my greater strength and experience.

34 For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall ^tcome on my father.

CHAP. XLV.

Joseph no longer able to refrain, discovers himself to his brethren, and weeps; asks concerning his father: they are troubled at his presence, 1—3. He forbids their grief for their sin, and comforts them with God's gracious design and providence in it, 4—8. He hastens them to go and acquaint their father, and bring him to Egypt; his message to his father, 9—13. His kindness to Benjamin and his brethren, 14, 15. Pharaoh is glad, and invites them down to Egypt, 16—20. Joseph dismisses them with gifts and presents to his father; exhorting them not to fall out by the way, 21—24. Coming home they relate all to their father, who at last believes them, rejoicing that he should see his son before he died, 25—28.

THEN Joseph could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, Cause every man to go out from me. And there stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

Cause every man to go out from me; remove all the Egyptians out of my presence and chamber. Which he did, partly that he might maintain the honour of his place, and not make himself cheap and contemptible to the Egyptians, by his excessive tears and passions, and by his free, and familiar, and affectionate converse with his brethren; and partly to preserve the reputation of his brethren, by concealing their fault from the Egyptians.

2 And he [†]wept aloud: and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

His tears and voice which had been hitherto kept in by main force, now breaking forth with greater violence. The Egyptians, and the house of Pharaoh; some who were near, with their own ears, and others by report.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, ^{*}I am Joseph; doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; for they were ^{||}troubled at his presence.

He repeats his former question, Gen. xliii. 27, either because he questioned the truth of their former relation, or would be further satisfied in it, it being usual with men to ask over and over again what they long to know; or because he now desired a more particular relation of his father's condition, and how he did bear up under all his calamities. They were troubled at his presence, from a sudden and deep sense of their horrid guilt, and their just fear of some dreadful punishment.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, I am Joseph your brother, ^bwhom ye sold into Egypt.

Come near to me; be not afraid of me, but come nearer to me with cheerfulness and confidence, that you may be assured that I am he, and that we may more freely and privately discourse together, so as none others may hear. It is probable that Joseph sat in state, and that they hitherto kept a due distance from him. Sold into Egypt, i. e. sold unto them that brought me into Egypt, and sold me there: see Gen. xxxvii. 28; xxxix. 1. So they sold him into Egypt occasionally and eventually.

5 Now therefore ^cbe not grieved, [†]nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: ^dfor God did send me before you to preserve life.

Be not grieved, to wit, immoderately, and for the injury which you did to me, or for the danger which you have brought upon yourselves. Otherwise he doth not dissuade them from a godly sorrow for their offence against God, for the procurement of which he designed and used that strange and rough carriage towards them. Nor angry with yourselves; neither excessively torment yourselves with the remembrance of the fact, neither break forth into contentions and wrath, and upbraidings of one another; for God by his wise, powerful, and gracious providence overruled your evil intentions to a happy end, to preserve life; not only your lives, for the expression is here indefinite and general, but the lives of all the people in this and the neighbouring countries; which though it doth not lessen your sin, yet ought to qualify your sorrow.

6 For these two years hath the famine been in the land: and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest.

Neither sowing nor reaping, except in a few places near [†] Heb. And my father. Ex. 18. 9. Job 31. 29. Ps. 116. 3. & 119. 143.

[†] Heb. gave forth his voice in weeping. Num. 1.

^a Acta 7. 13. ^{||} Or, terrified. Job 4. 5. & 23. 15. Matt. 14. 26. Mark 6. 50.

^b ch. 37. 28.

^c Is. 40. 2. [†] Heb. neither let there be anger in your eyes. 170.

^d ch. 50. 20. Ps. 105. 16, 17. See 2 Sam. 16. 10, 11. Acta 4. 24.

Nilus, because the people could not spare seed-corn, and would not lose it; understanding from Joseph that their cost and labour would be lost, and that the famine would be of long continuance.

^{+ Heb. to put for you a remnant.} 7 And God sent me before you † to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

That you and your children might be sustained and preserved in this time of famine, and afterwards abundantly multiplied, as God hath promised. By a great deliverance, or, for a great remnant, or escaping, i. e. that you who are now but a handful, escaping this danger, may grow into a vast multitude. The word evasion, or escaping, is here put for the persons that do escape, as it is 2 Chron. xxx. 6; Isa. x. 20; and as captivity is oft put for the captives, as it is Numb. xxi. 1; Deut. xxi. 10. And so what was said in the former clause is repeated in this with an emphatical addition.

8 So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me ^{e ch. 41. 43. Judg. 17. 10. Job 28. 16.} a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

That I came to this place, and pitch of honour and power, is not to be imputed to your design, which was of another nature, but to God's overruling providence, which ordered the circumstances of your action, so as I should be brought to this place and state. Compare Gen. 1. 20. A father to Pharaoh; to advise him, and to provide for him, as fathers do for their children, and to have the authority, respect, and power of a father with him.

9 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, ^{f ch. 47. 1.} tarry not:

10 And 'thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

Goshen, a part of Egypt bordering upon Canaan, well watered and fit for cattle, and therefore most proper for the Israelites, not only for present use, and to keep them at some distance from the inward parts of Egypt, and from the court, but also that they might have Canaan always in their eye and mind, and in God's time might with least disadvantage march thither. Joseph promiseth this place, either because it was least inhabited, being in the borders of the land, or because he justly presumed upon the king's favour, and knew that the growing famine would give him opportunity to dispose of the people as he pleased.

11 And there will I nourish thee; for yet there are five years of famine; lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that ^{g ch. 42. 23.} is ^h my mouth that speaketh unto you.

Because I speak to you not by an interpreter, as hitherto I have done, but immediately, and in the Hebrew language.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have ^{h Acts 7. 14.} seen; and ye shall haste and ^b bring down my father hither.

14 And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

To wit, freely and familiarly, being encouraged by his kindness.

16 ¶ And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it † pleased Pharaoh ^{+ Heb. most good in the eyes of Pharaoh. ch. 41. 57.} well, and his servants.

Because they all owed their lives unto Joseph, and his favour was now fresh and present, and therefore he had more influence upon them, and they more kindness for him.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan;

18 And take your father and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat ^{i ch. 27. 28. Numb. 18. 12, 29.} the fat of the land.

The choicest fruits of the land. Fat off is put for the best of any sort, as Numb. xviii. 12, 29; Deut. xxxii. 14; Psal. lxiii. 5; cxlvii. 14.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

Besides that absolute power which I have given thee to dispose of all things as thou pleasest, I do particularly and especially command thee to do this thing.

20 Also † regard not your stuff; for the good of all the land of Egypt is your's. ^{+ Heb. let not your eye spare, &c.}

Regard not your stuff; Heb. let not your eye pity or spare any part of your stuff, as loth to leave it behind you, or afraid to lose it. Sparing or pitying is an act of the mind, but it is ascribed to the eye here, as also Ezek. vii. 4, 9; xvi. 5; partly, because there it discovers itself by tears, or otherwise; and partly, because the sight of the eye doth oft affect the heart, and move pity.

21 And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them wagons, according to the † commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way. ^{+ Heb. month. Numb. 3. 16.}

22 To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment; but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and ^{k ch. 43. 34.} five changes of raiment.

Changes of raiment; new and handsome garments, which upon their coming into Pharaoh's presence, and on other occasions, they might wear instead of those more old and homely ones, which they brought with them from Canaan. Compare Judg. xiv. 12, 19; 2 Kings v. 5.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses † laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way. ^{+ Heb. carrying.}

After this manner; Heb. according to this. What? Either what went before, changes of raiment, or what follows, ten asses, &c.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way.

Or, contend, one with another, each vindicating himself, and laying the blame upon his brother.

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father,

26 And told him, saying, Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. ^{l Job 29. 24. Ps. 126. 1. Luke 24. 11, 41.} And † Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not. ^{+ Heb. Ais.}

Jacob's heart fainted, or, was weakened, or failed, he fell into a swoon, as it is ordinary, because of the greatness and suddenness of the news, and the conflict of contrary and violent passions, raised hereby; grief at the remembrance of his former loss, and excessive joy for Joseph's recovery and felicity; hope that this might be true, and fear lest it should be but a fiction of theirs: any one of these passions are able to cause a fainting of the spirits, but much more when all meet together, especially in an aged person.

He believed them not; partly because of the greatness, and strangeness, and desirableness of the thing; compare Psal. cxxvi. 1; and partly because they were by this very relation convicted of one lie about Joseph, in saying that he was dead, and therefore might easily be thought guilty of another.

27 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him, the spirit of Jacob their father revived:

28 And Israel said, It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

I desire no more, no greater happiness in this world, than to see him; which when I have done, I am willing to die.

CHAP. XLVI.

Jacob sets out towards Egypt with his family and substance; offers sacrifices at Beer-sheba; God appears to him in a vision, renewing his promises and blessing, 1—4. He goes to Egypt, 5, 6. The names of the children of Israel, 8—27. Jacob sends Judah before him; Joseph goes to meet his father; their joy, 28—30. Joseph instructs his brethren what to say to Pharaoh, to declare themselves shepherds, and desire to dwell in Goshen; the reason, 31—34.

1706. AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac.

Both in thankfulness to God for former favours, and especially for Joseph's preservation and happiness; and by way of supplication to God for his direction in this great case, whether he might leave the promised land of Canaan, and go into the idolatrous and impious land of Egypt; and for his protection and blessing, as well in his journey as in Egypt.

The God of his father Isaac; whom Isaac honoured and served, and who had constantly protected and provided for Isaac, and confirmed his covenant with him. He mentions Isaac rather than Abraham, partly for Isaac's honour, to show that though Isaac was much inferior to Abraham in gifts and graces, yet God was no less Isaac's than Abraham's God, and therefore would be his God also, notwithstanding his unworthiness; and partly for his own comfort, because Isaac was Jacob's immediate parent, and had transferred the blessing of the covenant from Esau to Jacob, and the validity of that translation depended upon Isaac's interest in God.

2 And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I.

In the visions of the night, i. e. in that way or manner of visions which God affordeth to men by night, and in their sleep. See Gen. xx. 3; Job xxxiii. 15, 16; Matt. i. 20; ii. 13, 19; Acts xvi. 9; xviii. 9, &c. Jacob, Jacob; he doubles the name both in token of his friendship and familiarity with him, and to raise Jacob's attention. Compare Gen. xxiii. 11; 1 Sam. iii. 10.

3 And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation:

Here were many causes of fear; lest he should do evil in forsaking the promised and blessed land, and going to a place which had been incommodious to his grandfather, Gen. xii. 15, and forbidden to his father, Gen. xxvi. 2; lest he should expose his children to manifold perils, as of being infected with the vices, and particularly the idolatry, which reigned there above all other countries, and of being inveigled by the pleasantness and eminent fruitfulness of that soil, to give up themselves to all manner of pleasures, and to settle themselves there, and give over all thoughts of returning to Canaan, and of being brought into that grievous bondage and affliction which was spoken of Gen. xv. 13; and lest some mischief should befall him or his in so long and dangerous a journey.

4 I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

I will bring thee up again, though not in thy person, yet in thy body, Gen. xlvii. 29, 30; 1. 5, 13; and in thy posterity, which are a part of thyself, or thyself multiplied. Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes; shall close thy eyes; which office was usually performed by the nearest and dearest relations of the dying party among the Jews, Greeks, and Romans. Hereby Jacob is assured that he should die in peace, and that Joseph both now was alive, and should survive his father.

5 And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba, and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

In the land of Canaan, and in Mesopotamia. But Canaan only is here mentioned, because here they got the far greatest part of them, which by a synecdoche is put for the whole.

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

His daughters; either his daughter Dinah, the plural number for the singular, as ver. 23; Gen. xxi. 7; Numb. xxvi. 8, or Dinah and her daughters; for grandchildren are commonly called their grandfather's children, or sons or daughters; or his daughters-in-law, his son's wives.

8 ¶ And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: Reuben, Jacob's firstborn.

This genealogy is both here and elsewhere described exactly and particularly, as well to show the faithfulness of God in the performance of his promise concerning the vast multiplication of Abraham's seed, and that in so short a time, as to distinguish the tribes; which was of great importance, and necessary for the disposal of the kingdom and priesthood, and above all, for the discovery of the true Messias. Compare this following catalogue with that Numb. xxvi.; 1 Chron. vi.—viii.

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 ¶ And the sons of Simeon; ¶ Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and ¶ Jachin, and ¶ Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

Ohad is not mentioned in those parallel places, because he was then dead, and that without issue. The son of a Canaanitish woman; which is here mentioned as a brand upon him, and as an intimation that the rest of them, except Judah, married to persons of a better race.

11 ¶ And the sons of Levi; ¶ Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 ¶ And the sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

a ch. 21. 31, 33, & 28. 10.
b ch. 26. 24, 25, & 28. 13.
& 31. 42.

c ch. 15. 1.
Job 33. 14, 15.

d ch. 28. 13.

e ch. 12. 2.
Deut. 28. 5.

f ch. 28. 15.
& 45. 21.
g ch. 15. 16.
& 50. 13, 24.
25. Ex. 3. 4.
h ch. 50. 1.

i ch. 45. 19.
21.

j Deut. 28. 6.
Josh. 24. 4.
Ps. 105. 23.
Is. 62. 4.

m Ex. 1. 1.
& 6. 14.

n Num. 26.
5.
1 Chro. 5. 1.

o Ex. 6. 15.
1 Chr. 4. 24.
¶ Or, Nemuel.
¶ Or, Jarib.
¶ Or, Serak.
1 Chr. 4. 24.

p 1 Chro. 6.
1, 15.
¶ Or, Gershom.

q 1 Chr. 2. 3.
& 4. 21.

r ch. 38. 3, 1, 10.
s ch. 38. 29.
1 Chro 2. 5.

Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan, and therefore are not contained in the following number, ver. 15. Hezron and Hamul, though they seem to have been born in Egypt, yet are here set down amongst those who came into Egypt, because they came thither in their father's loins, as Levi is said to pay tithes in Abraham, Heb. vii. 9. And the children may as well be said to come thither in their parents, as their father Jacob is said to return from thence, ver. 4, in his children. Object. If this be the sense, why should these two be mentioned rather than the grandchildren of the other brethren, who came into Egypt in the same manner? Answer. This may be done either, 1. From some special excellency or eminency in them above the rest, as Hezron was eminent for being the progenitor of the Messiah, and Hamul might be so for some other cause, though unknown to us. Or, 2. Because they were the first grandchildren that were born in Egypt, and it may be all that were born whilst Jacob lived there, and therefore are not unfitly named with Jacob, and allotted to him; as Joseph's two eldest sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were by Jacob appropriated to himself, and reckoned as his immediate sons, when all the rest of Joseph's sons were excluded from that privilege, Gen. xlviii. 5, 6. And the like may be said of the other two grandchildren mentioned ver. 17.

13 ¶ And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.

14 ¶ And the sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

Which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram: this is true properly and immediately of the sons, who were indeed born there, but improperly and mediately of the grandchildren, which are as truly said to be born of Leah in Padan as to be born of her at all, because they were indeed born of them which were born of her, and that in Padan. All the souls of his sons and his daughters, to wit, which came into Egypt as before; so that Er and Onan are excluded, as dying before this journey into Egypt, ver. 12. Daughters is here put for daughter, as ver. 7, because Dinah was all the daughters which Jacob had. Heb. all the souls, sons and daughters being reckoned together with their father.

16 ¶ And the sons of Gad; Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and Ezbon, Eri, and Arodi, and Areli.

17 ¶ And the sons of Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister: and the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 These are the sons of Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter, and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The sons of Rachel Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 ¶ And unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On bare unto him.

21 ¶ And the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi, and Rosh, Muppim, and Huppim, and Ard.

Whereof part seem to be born before his coming to Egypt, and part in Egypt, Benjamin being now but twenty and four years old.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

23 ¶ And the sons of Dan; Hushim.

24 ¶ And the sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

25 These are the sons of Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

Loins, Heb. thigh, which is here put for the secret parts between the thighs, which are called sometimes the feet, as Gen. xlix. 10; Deut. xxviii. 57; Ezek. xvi. 25, for the like reason, because they are between the feet. From this eastern manner of speech came that passage in the Greek fables, concerning Bacchus being born out of Jupiter's thigh. Threescore and six; so many they are, excluding Jacob, as the common parent, and Joseph and his two sons, as being in Egypt before Jacob's coming thither; which four being included they make up seventy, as it is ver. 27.

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.

He doth not say, which came with Jacob into Egypt, because some of them came thither before him, and others with him, some in their persons, and some in their parents. As for the difficulty arising from comparing this place with Acts vii. 14, it will be more fit to speak of it when we come to that place.

28 And he sent Judah before him unto Joseph, to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

To direct his face unto Goshen; Heb. to prepare, or to teach him, the way before his face, i. e. before his coming to Goshen; i. e. to show him where it was, and into what part of it he should come and settle himself; or to give notice unto Joseph of his approach, before his face or coming into Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

Doubtless Joseph fell down before him with all that reverence which children owe to their parents, and in this posture Jacob falls upon his neck, &c. Of which posture see Gen. xxxiii. 4; xlv. 14; Luke xv. 20; Acts xx. 37.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

Now I expect no greater happiness upon earth, and therefore am content to die. Compare Luke ii. 29.

31 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me;

32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation?

34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also

† 1 Chr. 7. 1.
‡ Or, Phuah, and Jaakub.

u Num. 26.
15, &c.
Zephon.
‡ Or, Ozai.
‡ Or, Arod.

x 1 Chro. 7.
30.

y ch. 30. 10.

z ch. 29. 24.

a ch. 44. 27.

b ch. 41. 50.

‡ Or, prince.
c 1 Chro. 7.
6. & 8. 1.
d Num. 26.
38, Ahran. e Num. 26.
39, Shu-
pam.
1 Chro. 7. 12,
Sheppim.
‡ Ephraim,
Num. 26. 39.

† 1 Chr. 7. 12.
‡ Or,
Shuham,
Num. 26. 42.

¶ 1 Chron.
7. 13.

h ch. 30. 5, 7

i ch. 29. 29

k Ex. 1. 5.

l Heb. thigh.
ch. 30. 11.

1 Deut. 10.
22. See Acts
7. 14.

m ch. 31. 21.

n ch. 47. 1.

o So ch. 45.
14.

p So Luke
2. 20, 30.

q ch. 47. 1.

r Heb. they are men of cattle.

r ch. 47. 2, 3.

s ver. 32.
t ch. 30. 35.
& 34. 5. &
37. 12.

our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

g ch. 43. 32.
Ex. ii. 26.

In this design and choice Joseph shows both his prudence and piety. He brings them not to court, where it had been easy for him to have put them all into the best places and offices of the court; and as he is not ashamed to own himself a brother to shepherds, which were contemptible among the Egyptians, so he seeks not to advance them higher, but continues them in their employment, and placeth them in Goshen: whereby, 1. He kept them together, which was very convenient for them in many respects. 2. He secured them both from envy, and, as far as he could, from the corruption of their religion and manners, which was likely to follow their mixture with the Egyptians, and especially their being at the court. 3. He put them into a capacity of returning to Canaan, when God gave them opportunity.

Every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians; either, 1. Because they did both kill and eat those creatures which the Egyptians adored. Or, 2. Because of the fresh remembrance of the horrid cruelties lately committed there by the Phœnician shepherds, who, as some very ancient writers affirm, were seated in Egypt in great numbers, and had arrived to great power, and waged a cruel war with other Egyptians, wherein they wasted divers cities, and burned their temples, and barbarously murdered a multitude of people. And therefore it is no wonder if the calling of shepherds was grown out of use and credit among them. True it is, the Egyptians had some sheep, and other cattle, Gen. xvii. 6, 17; Exod. viii. 26; ix. 3, which they kept for delight or profit by their milk, wool, &c., or for sale to others, but they did not use them, as other shepherds generally did, kill and eat them. And it is probable that they committed even the keeping of their sheep and cattle to those strangers which were dispersed among them, and looked upon the employment as too vile and mean for any Egyptian. And though Pharaoh offered it to Joseph's brethren as a favour to be rulers over his cattle, Gen. xlvii. 6, that might proceed only from hence, because he saw them firmly resolved upon that course of life, and therefore could not bestow any higher preferment upon them.

CHAP. XLVII.

Joseph acquaints Pharaoh with his father's arrival; presents five of his brethren to him, 1, 2. He after some inquiry instates them in Goshen: they being shepherds, he orders Joseph, if he knew any men of activity amongst them, to make them rulers over his cattle, 3—6. Joseph likewise brings his father before Pharaoh, who inquires after his age, and is blessed by Jacob, 7—10. Joseph maintains his father, and all his house, in Goshen, 11, 12. Joseph gets all the money, cattle, and lands of the Egyptians into his hands for corn; removes them to distant quarters of the land, 13—21; the priests only excepted, who have a portion assigned them by Pharaoh, 22. Joseph leaves the land to the people to till, and gives them corn to sow, they giving Pharaoh the fifth part of the crop, 23—26. Jacob's life in Egypt, and full age, 27, 28. He takes an oath of Joseph concerning his burial, 29—31.

1706.
s ch. 46. 31.

THEN Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in the land of Goshen.

b ch. 45. 10.
& 46. 28.

Either to abide there, or to remove thence to any other place which thou shalt appoint for them.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh.

Some of his brethren, or part, as this Hebrew word is used, Dan. i. 2; or the extremity, or end, or tail of them, i. e. the meanest of them for person and presence, as the word is taken 1 Kings xiii. 31, lest if he had presented the goodliest of them, Pharaoh might have required their attendance upon him, either at court or camp. And for the same reason for which he did industriously represent them to Pharaoh as contemptible in their employment, he might also present those to him who were so in their persons.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

d ch. 46. 33.
e ch. 46. 34.

This employment is not pretended nor taken up by us in design, or in contempt of thee or thy people, but was handed to us by our fathers, and hath been our business to this day.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come; for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

f ch. 15. 13.
Deut. 26. 5.
g ch. 43. 1.
Acts 7. 11.

To sojourn in the land are we come; not to defraud thy people of their lands and habitations, but only to be here for a season, as strangers and sojourners, till we can conveniently return to our own land.

Canaan being a higher ground than Egypt, and watered in a manner only by rain from heaven, must needs sooner and sorer feel the effects of a drought and scarcity than Egypt, which had relief from Nilus in that kind.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

i ch. 20. 15.
k ver. 4.

The land of Egypt is before thee, to view it, and take thy choice where thou pleasest, it is in thy power. See Gen. xiii. 9. Any man of activity, or, of strength, or, vigour of body and mind, fit for the employment. By which expression it seems probable that those five presented to Pharaoh were of the meanest sort of them. See on ver. 2.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

Not in an authoritative way, as the greater bleaseth the less, but in a general manner, i. e. he saluted him, thanked him for all his favours to him and his, and prayed to God to bless and recompense him for it. Thus blessing is put for saluting, 1 Sam. xiii. 10; 2 Kings iv. 29; for praying, Numb. vi. 23, 24; for thanksgiving, Matt. xxvi. 26, compare with Luke xxii. 19.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?

† Heb. How many are the days of thy life?
l Heb. 11. 9, 13.
m Ps. 39. 12.
n Job 14. 1.

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

n ch. 25. 7.
& 35. 28.

My pilgrimage, i. e. my unstable or unsettled life, in which I have been flitting from place to place. See Gen. xvii. 8; Psal. cxix. 19; Heb. xi. 9, 13. And though I seem old in comparison of thy people, yet I fall much short of my progenitors, Isaac, and Abraham, and Terah.

10 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

o ver. 7.

11 ¶ And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded p Ex. 1. 11.

& 12. 37.
q ver. 6.

The land of Rameses; a part of the land of Goshen, possibly that part where afterwards the city Rameses was built by the Israelites, Exod. i. 11; xii. 37, whence it is so called here by anticipation; for the Israelites were not now numerous enough to possess the whole land of Goshen, which was given to them, but contented themselves with a part of it, leaving the rest to the management of the Egyptians; and therefore when they increased greatly, they were forced to spread their habitations amongst the Egyptians. See Exod. xii. 7, 23, 35, 37.

¶ Or, as a little child is now-ished.
† Heb. according to the little ones.
ch. 20. 21.

12 And Joseph nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, ¶ according to their families.

Or, according to the mouth of the family; mouth being put for their will or desire, as it is Gen. xxiv. 57; Isa. xxx. 2, as much as every one desired, without any restraint; or, according to the manner of a little child, he put their meat into their very mouths; it was brought to them without any more care or pains of theirs than an infant takes for its food.

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine.

Quest. Whence came it that the people in this extremity did not take the corn by force out of the several store-houses? Answe. Besides that singular providence of God which watcheth over kings and rulers, and stilleth the tumults of the people, Joseph had no doubt foreseen this difficulty, and took due care to prevent it, partly, by disposing the stores in strong and well-guarded places; partly, by adding wealth and strength to the king, whereby he might more easily suppress any seditious risings; and principally, by not permitting the people to despair, or come to the utmost extremity, but giving them relief in all their exigences.

14 * And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

Wherein he did no more than any of the subjects might have done; he bought great store of corn in the plentiful years with the king's money, and kept it till a time of famine, and sold it at a rate which was agreeable to the season.

15 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

Why shouldst thou see and suffer us to perish for our want of money, when thou canst relieve us?

16 And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses: and he † fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies, and our lands:

The second year; not the second from the beginning of the famine, but from their great extremity, the second year after that last mentioned, wherein they had sold their cattle;

but this seems to have been the last year of the famine, because he now gives them corn for food and for seed too, ver. 23, whereas in the first six years there was no sowing nor reaping, Gen. xlv. 6.

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, i. e. whilst thou lookest upon us like an idle spectator, not pitying and relieving us? The land is said to die improperly, when it is desolate and barren, and when the fruits of it die, or, which is equivalent to it, do not live. We and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh; Pharaoh shall be the sole proprietor, and we are content to be his tenants, to manage it for his use. Give us seed, because this was the last year of famine, as Joseph informed them, and therefore they tilled and sowed the ground for the following year. That the land be not desolate, without inhabitants, as it will be if thou sufferest us to die for want of bread.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.

Under the cities are here comprehended the villages and lands belonging to the territory and government of each city; for the seed which he gave them was not to be sown in cities, but in the country; but the cities only are here mentioned, because they were sent thither first, either for the conveniency of nourishing them during this famine out of the public storehouses which were there; or that they might all profess their subjection to the governments of the several cities, which was convenient for the management of that numerous and tumultuous people; or that the cities might be first and most replenished with inhabitants, as being the principal honour, and strength, and security of a kingdom, and that arts, and trades, and merchandise might flourish, without which the commodities of the country would have been of less price and use. But the cities being first supplied, the residue, which doubtless was vast, were dispersed in the country.

From one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof; far from their native soil and ancient patri-monies, that none of them might plead prescription, but that all might be forced to acknowledge that they owed their estates not to their own wit and industry, nor to their parents' gift, but wholly to the king's favour; and that the remembrance of their patrimonial lands might be worn out, and therewith the grief which would arise from their resentment of their loss of them, which probably would be matter of tumults and seditions, to which that people were very prone. And it is probable that he so disposed of this affair, that those who were apt, and likely, and used to unite together in seditious insurrections, whether kindred or others, should be separated one from another as far as might be. If any think that Joseph dealt hardly with them, and made an ill use of their necessity, he will see how moderately and mercifully he deals with them, ver. 24.

22 * Only the land of the priests bought he not; for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them: wherefore they sold not their lands.

The priests: under this name he understands chiefly those who administered the worship of the gods or idols of Egypt, and withal those who applied themselves to the study of the arts and virtues, called their wise men and magicians; though some understand it of the princes (as that word sometimes signifies) or officers of Pharaoh, who were nourished out of the king's treasures. And possibly the same

r ch. 41. 20.
Acts 7. 11.

* ch. 41. 56.

1702.

t ver. 19.

+ Heb. led them.

u Ezra 7. 24.
¶ Or, princes.
ch. 41. 45.
2 Sam. 8. 18.

Hebrew word may here comprehend both, viz. the ministers of the king, and of their idols too, for both enjoyed the same privileges, as Diodorus Siculus relates. And that the priests are included, if not mainly intended here, will be evident enough to any one that considers the state of Egypt, how mad that people universally were upon their idols, how numerous their priests were, and in how great honour and veneration both with prince and people: besides, reason of state obliged Pharaoh to engage and secure to himself that sort of men, which bore so great sway with the old inhabitants of their several places, and were likely to have the same authority with the new inhabitants, to quiet and satisfy them at their first change, which must needs be very ungrateful to them.

Of this immunity of the priests, that ancient writer Diodorus Siculus makes mention. But this is not to be ascribed to Joseph's will or choice; for he who abhorred their idolatry, could not have a kindness for, nor would have given encouragement to, the great upholders and promoters of it; but in this he was overruled either by Pharaoh's express command, (it being not probable that so great an interest as that of the priests should not have friends at court, or that their pleas and desires should not be granted by an idolatrous king,) or by the laws of Egypt, or by their customs and usages in things of a like nature, which would have the force of a law among them.

23 Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh: lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

For this was the last year of the famine, as was noted before.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give the fifth part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

Whereas he might have reserved four parts to Pharaoh, and have allowed them only the fifth. Herein he showed both his humanity and kindness, in mitigating that hard bargain which themselves had made, and were necessitated to make, and his prudence in composing, sweetening, and winning the hearts of the people to the king, and making them pay their tribute for the future with more cheerfulness.

25 And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: ^{x ch. 33. 15.} let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

Without thy care and providence we had all been dead men; and therefore if thou hadst kept us to the first bargain, thou hadst done us more kindness than wrong, much more when thou hast used us with so much equity and clemency. Be thou our friend with Pharaoh in this and upon all other occasions. We will be Pharaoh's servants, to manage his land for him upon the terms which thou hast proposed.

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part; ^{y ver. 22.} except the land of the || priests only, which became not Pharaoh's.

That Pharaoh should have the fifth part; that the propriety of the land should be Pharaoh's; and that in token thereof the people should pay the fifth part of the products of it to Pharaoh.

27 ¶ And Israel ^{z ver. 11.} dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and ^{a ch. 46. 3.} grew, and multiplied exceedingly.

They had possessions, i. e. lands, not for the dominion or propriety of them, for that rested in Pharaoh, but for the use and profit of them for their present subsistence.

1689. 28 And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years: so [†] the whole age of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.

29 And the time ^b drew nigh that Israel must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, ^c put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and ^d deal kindly and truly with me; ^e bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt:

Put thy hand under my thigh, i. e. swear to me, as ver. 31, that thou wilt do what I am now desiring of thee: see the notes on Gen. xxiv. 2. He requires this, not out of any distrust of Joseph's promise, but partly, as a more solemn protestation of his right to and affection for that promised land; partly, as a motive to all his children to have their minds and hearts there, even when their bodies were in Egypt; and partly, to give Joseph an argument and excuse to Pharaoh, that he might more willingly permit Joseph to fulfil his father's desire, because of his own oath. And deal kindly and truly, or, that thou wilt deal; as the Hebrew vau joined with the future tense is elsewhere used, as Psal. xxiv. 7; xxxv. 24; li. 15. Kindly in promising, and truly in performing thy promise.

30 But ^f I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and ^g bury me in their buryingplace. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

I will lie with my fathers, Abraham and Isaac, in Canaan. See Gen. xxiii. 19; xxv. 9; xxxv. 29. Which he desired not so much for himself, as knowing that wherever he was buried he should rise to glory; as for his children, to show his own, and confirm their faith in God's promise of Canaan; to discover his high valuation of that land, not only for itself, but as it was a type and pledge of the heavenly inheritance; to keep his children's minds and hearts loose from Egypt, a place of so much sin and danger, and fixed upon Canaan, that they might be more willing to go thither when God called them, by virtue of that inclination which is in most persons to be buried with their fathers; and in the mean time to declare his detestation of idolaters, with whom he would have no communion either in life, as far as he could avoid it, or in the place of burial; and on the contrary, to profess his communion with his godly ancestors, by his desire to be joined with them in burial. And for the same reasons Joseph desired the translation of his bones thither, Gen. i. 25.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he sware unto him. And ^h Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

Israel bowed himself, not to Joseph, who being now not upon his throne, nor amongst the Egyptians, but in his father's house, was doubtless more ready to pay that reverence (as he did chap. xlviii. 12) than to receive veneration from him, which he owed to his father; but to God, who is here to be understood, as he is in the same phrase, 1 Kings i. 47, whom with this gesture he worshipped and praised, as for the promise of Canaan, and the assurance which he had now received from Joseph of his being buried there, so for all his favours to him and to Joseph, and by him to all his family.

Jacob at this time was bedrid, through age and infirmity; but being now to give God solemn thanks, though the words and manner of it be not here expressed, he raised himself and sat upon the head or uppermost part of his bed, as he did also Gen. xlviii. 2, that he might express his reverence to God as much as he could by bowing, when he could not do it as much as he would, being unable to do it kneeling. Others for bed read staff, the discussion whereof I refer unto its proper place, Heb. xi. 21.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Jacob being sick, Joseph comes and visits him, 1, 2. Jacob declares God's appearances and promises to him, 3, 4; adopts Joseph's two sons Manasseh and Ephraim to be fathers of two tribes in Israel, 5, 6; mentions Rachel's

† Heb. the days of the years of his life. See ver. 2. b So Deut. 1 Kings 2. 1.

c ch. 24. 2.
d ch. 24. 49.
e So ch. 50. 25.

f 2 Sam. 19. 37.
g ch. 49. 29. & 50. 5, 13.

h ch. 48. 2. 1 Kings 1. 47. Heb. 11. 21.

death, and the place where he buried her, 7; calls for his sons to bless them: Joseph brings and places them: Jacob purposely crosses his hands, 8—14. His blessing on Joseph and his sons, 15, 16. Joseph interposes to remove his father's hands, 17, 18. He declares the pre-eminence of the younger, but the other also blessed, 19, 20. Prophecieth of their return to Canaan, 21. He gives Joseph a piece of land apart, 22.

1689. AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

To obtain his venerable and religious father's blessing for them.

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

He got new strength, his spirits being quickened and refreshed by the tidings of Joseph's approach, and he put forth all the strength which he had.

3 And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at ^aLuz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee ^bfor an everlasting possession.

5 ¶ And now thy ^ctwo sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

Thy two sons are mine, by adoption: I shall own them as if they were my immediate children, and each of them shall have equal share, both in my present estate, and future inheritance of Canaan, with the rest of my children. Thus Jacob transfers the double portion, which was the right of the first-born, from which Reuben by his transgression fell, Gen. xlix. 4, upon Joseph, 1 Chron. v. 1. He names the two eldest, who, if any, might seem to claim a greater privilege than the rest.

6 And thy issue, which thou begetteth after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

Shall be reputed as thy children, and my grandchildren, and shall not have any distinct share in my present or future inheritance, but shall have a part of their brethren's lot, in such manner and proportion as thou shalt think fit, or as their succeeding parents or governors shall determine. But it doth not appear, nor doth Scripture any where mention, that Joseph had any other sons but these, and therefore it is probable he had no more; only Jacob speaks this upon supposition, in case he should have any other.

Shall be called after the name of their brethren; either Ephraimites or Manassites.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, ^dRachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath: the same is Beth-lehem.

Rachel died by me; or, beside me; near me, before mine eyes, I seeing, but not being able to help her in her extremity; which makes the remembrance of it more grievous to me. This story he here mentions, partly because the sight of Joseph and his children brought his beloved Rachel to his remembrance; partly to give the reason of this action of his to the rest of his children, which was not only because Rachel was his first rightful wife by designation and contract, and therefore the right of the first-born was truly Joseph's; but because by her early death he was cut off from all hopes of having more children by her, and therefore it was but fit he should supply that defect by adopting Joseph's children. I buried her there, not out of disrespect to her, whose person was, and memory yet is, precious and honourable to me, but either because dying in childbed they could not keep her till they came to the burying-place of the patriarchs at Hebron, Gen. xxiii. 19, especially when they were tied to the slow motion of the flocks and herds; or because I would not bury her in the common burying-place with heathens and idolaters, in the city of Ephrath. By which he tacitly implies, that he would not have Joseph joined with the Egyptians in burial.

8 And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

For Jacob's eyes were dim through age and infirmity, as is observed ver. 10, and therefore he could not distinctly discern them.

9 And Joseph said unto his father, ^eThey are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and ^fI will bless them.

Or, that I may bless them, not with a common, but with a paternal, and patriarchal, and prophetic blessing, in the name and by the Spirit of God, praying for and foretelling those blessings which God will confer upon them.

10 Now ^gthe eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see. And he brought them near unto him; and ^hhe kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, ⁱI had not thought to see thy face: and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

From between his knees; not his own knees, from which they had been taken before, but Jacob's knees, between which they stood whilst Jacob kissed and embraced them; from which Joseph removed them, partly that they might not be burdensome to their aged and weak grandfather, and principally that he might place them in fit order and reverent posture to receive the blessing for which he longed. He bowed himself, testifying thereby his reverence to his father, his thankfulness for the favour which he had now showed to him and his, and his humble and earnest request for his blessing upon them.

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, ^kguiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the firstborn.

The right hand was more honourable both in Scripture account, and amongst the Gentiles. Laid it upon Ephraim's head; which was a rite used often, and in divers cases, as in the conferring of offices either sacred or civil, as Numb. viii. 10; Deut. xxxiv. 9; Acts vi. 6; xiii. 3; and among other things, in giving benedictions, as Matt. xix. 13. Guiding his hands wittingly; this proceeded not from chance, or the mistake and weakness of his eyes, but from design, and the wisdom of his hands. Heb. He disposed his hands prudently, or, he dealt wisely with his hands. Here was a double wisdom showed. 1. Human, by which he gathered that Manasseh was the eldest, because Joseph placed him towards his right hand. 2. Divine and prophetic, by which he foresaw Ephraim's advantage above Manasseh, and wisely suited the ceremony to the substance, giving the greater sign of honour to him, to whom God designed the thing.

a ch. 28. 13, 19, & 35. 6, 9, &c.

b ch. 17. 8.

c ch. 41. 50, & 45. 20, Josh. 13. 7, & 14. 4.

g ch. 27. 1. h ch. 27. 1. i ch. 27. 1. k ver. 19.

d ch. 35. 9, 16, 19.

1 Heb. 11. 21. 15 ¶ And ¹ he blessed Joseph, and said, ^m before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day,

He blessed Joseph, not now in his person, but in his children, which yet is called here a blessing of Joseph, because they were a part of himself. In which sense, and upon the same ground, the land of Canaan is oftentimes said to be not only promised, but given to Abraham and Isaac, &c., not as if they were in person to possess it, but because it should be given to their children. Thus Ham is said to be cursed when his son is cursed, Gen. ix. 25. Which fed me, i. e. protected, sustained, and directed me.

16 The Angel ⁿ which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let ^o my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them [†] grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

The Angel; not surely a created angel, but Christ Jesus, who is called an Angel, Exod. xxiii. 20, and the Angel of the covenant, Mal. iii. 1, who was the conductor of the Israelites in the wilderness, as plainly appears by comparing of Exod. xxiii. 20, 21, with 1 Cor. x. 4, 9. Add hereunto, that this Angel is called Jacob's Redeemer, which is the title appropriated by God to himself, Isa. xliii. 14; xlvii. 4, and that from all evil, and therefore from sin, from which no created angel can deliver us, but Christ only, Matt. i. 21; and that Jacob worshippeth and prayeth to this Angel no less than to God for the blessing, and that without any note of distinction, the word bless being in the singular number, and equally relating to God and to the Angel; and that the Angel to whom he here ascribes his deliverances from all evil, must in all reason be the same to whom he prayed for these very deliverances which he here commemorates, and that was no other than the very God of Abraham, as is evident from Gen. xxviii. 15, 20, 21; xxxii. 9—11; xxxiv. 3. Let my name be named on them, i. e. let them be called by my name, owned for my immediate children, and invested with the same privileges with my other children, be the heads of distinct tribes, and as such receive distinct inheritances. And hence they are called the children of Jacob or Israel, no less than the children of Joseph. For the phrase, see Deut. xxviii. 10; 2 Chron. vii. 14; Isa. iv. 1; Jer. xiv. 9. And the name of my fathers; let them be called their children; let them not only have my blessing, but the blessings of Abraham and Isaac; let all meet together upon their heads; and let that gracious covenant of God made with Abraham, and confirmed with Isaac and me, be ratified and made good unto them.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father ^p laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it [¶] displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasse's head.

It displeased him, because of that affection which parents generally have for their first-born. See Gen. xxi. 11.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father: for this ^{is} the firstborn; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, ¶ I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly [†] his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a [†] multitude of nations.

Greater than he; so the tribe of Ephraim was both in number, Numb. i. 32, 33, 35; ii. 19, 21; Deut. xxxiii. 17, and in power and privileges; for that tribe was the seat first of the tabernacle, and afterwards of the kingdom. Whence the name of Ephraim is sometimes put for all the ten tribes, as Isa. vii. 2, and sometimes for Joseph himself, as Numb. i. 32; Rev. vii. 8, which Manasseh never is. A multitude of nations, i. e. equal to many nations in number and strength; or, from them shall proceed many nations,

i. e. many numerous, potent, and flourishing families, whereof each is equivalent to an ordinary nation. For as nations are sometimes called families, as Zech. xiv. 18, so the tribes and families of Israel are called nations or people, as Ezek. ii. 3; Acts iv. 27.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, ¶ In thee shall Israel bless, saying, ^o So Bath ^{11, 12.} God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

In thee, i. e. in thy seed, as appears both from the relative them here, and from ver. 15, where his blessing of them is called the blessing of Joseph; and from the following words, where this is interpreted of Ephraim and Manasseh. And in thee, or in thy seed, i. e. using their names in the form or words of blessing, as eminent examples of blessedness.

21 And Israel said unto Joseph, Behold, I die: but [†] God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

Behold, I die, i. e. I am about to die; the present time for that which will shortly and certainly be, as Gen. xix. 13; xx. 3; John xiv. 2. The land of your fathers, i. e. Canaan; their land, 1. By habitation, as Nazareth is called Christ's country because he dwelt in it. 2. By the donation of God, who had promised, and would in his time give the actual possession of it to them, i. e. to their seed.

22 Moreover ¶ I have given to thee ^u one portion above thy brethren, which I ¹ took out of the hand ² of the Amorite with ³ my sword and with my bow.

i. e. I do now give to thee the right, and I do prophetically give, and God will really and actually give unto thy son Ephraim, or his posterity, who shall possess this part over and above that portion which shall fall to him by lot. This was all the land which Jacob had in Canaan, which he here gives to Joseph, partly, in testimony of his great affection and obligation to him; partly, as a sign that he did confirm the right of the first-born upon him; and partly, for the confirmation of the faith of Joseph and his brethren, and to oblige them to set up their rest no where but in Canaan. One portion: the Hebrew word is Shechem, which word indeed signifies a shoulder, as Gen. ix. 23, and is here put for a part of land which is choice and good, as the shoulder is among the parts of the body. See 1 Sam. ix. 24. And he useth this word, that by allusion he might signify what place he speaks of, even Shechem, as may further appear by comparing Josh. xxiv. 32; John iv. 5. Yea, some would have Shechem here to be the proper name of the place, which might be if the word one were not added to it.

This place is understood, either, 1. Of the future conquest of the land of the Amorites or Canaanites by his posterity, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is. But Jacob would not attribute that to his sword, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is. But Jacob would not attribute that to his sword, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is. But Jacob would not attribute that to his sword, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is. But Jacob would not attribute that to his sword, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is. But Jacob would not attribute that to his sword, which he here ascribes to himself, and speaks of it in the past time, as of a thing already done, as the manner of the prophets is.

n ch. 28. 14. & 31. 11, 13, 24. Ps. 34. 22. & 121. 7. o Amos 9. 12. Acts 15. 17. † Heb. as Ashes de incense: See Num. 28. 34, 37.

1 ch. 44. 4. & 50. 24.

u Josh. 24. 32. 1 Chro. 5. 2. John 4. 5. z ch. 15. 16. & 24. 22. Josh. 17. 14. &c.

p ver. 14. ¶ was evil in his eyes. ch. 28. 6.

q ver. 14.

r Num. 1. 33, 35. & 2. 19, 21. Deut. 33. 17. Rev. 7. 6, 8. † Heb. Uinace.

the by in some one place of Scripture, without any particular account of the circumstances of them, either there or elsewhere, as Gen. xxxvi. 24; Deut. ii. 9—11; Josh. xxiv. 11. And though Jacob was a man of peace, yet his sons were warriors; and they by his permission might drive out, by their arms, those straggling Canaanites which had taken possession of his purchase, Jacob being the more willing to recover his right herein, because it was an earnest of his future possession of the whole land. And the neighbouring Canaanites would not concern themselves in the defence of the invaders, both because they were convinced of the right of Jacob's cause, and because they were overruled by Divine Providence, in which Jacob trusted, and of which he had ample experience. Or, 2. Metaphorically, i. e. by his money, which he calls his sword and his bow, not only because money is answerable to the sword and the bow, and all other things, Eccl. x. 19, and is a defence, Eccl. vii. 12, and therefore may well be so called, even as prayers and tears are called the arms of the church, because they serve for the same purpose that arms do against their enemies; but also and principally by way of opposition to the sword and bow of his cruel sons. So the sense may be this, I have given to thee one portion, or one Shechem, not the city of Shechem, which Simeon and Levi took from the hand of the Amorite with their sword and their bow, but a part of the territory of Shechem which I took or received from the hand of the Amorite by my sword and my bow, i. e. by my money, whereby I purchased it.

CHAP. XLIX.

Jacob calls his sons to bless them before his death, 1. Bespoke their attention, 2. Condemns Reuben's incest, 3, 4; Simeon's and Levi's cruelty, 5—7. Extols Judah; prophesieth of Christ, and the calling of the Gentiles, 9—12. Of Zebulun, 13; Issachar, 14, 15; Dan, 16, 17. Expresses his faith on God's salvation, 18. Of Gad, 19; Asher, 20; Naphtali, 21. Joseph's peculiar blessing, 22—26. Of Benjamin, 27. His charge concerning his burial and death, 28—33.

AND Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may *tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.

Or, in the following times, or latter days, when you shall enter into and be settled in the Land of Promise. Hereby he signifies, that he speaks here of things which concern not so much their persons as their posterity.

2 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Jacob; and *hearken unto Israel your father.

3 ¶ Reuben, thou art ^dmy first-born, my might, ^eand the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power :

The beginning of my strength; the first instance or evidence of my might or strength, or of that masculine vigour whereby God enabled me to beget a child. Compare Deut. xxi. 17; Psal. cv. 36. Or the first of my children, which are the strength, the stays, and supports of a father, and of his family; thence called his arrows, as Psal. cxxvii. 4, and by other authors, the pillars of the house. The excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power. As first-born thou hadst the right of precedence before all thy brethren in point of dignity and power or privilege; the double portion, the priesthood, the dominion over thy brethren were thine.

4 Unstable as water, †^f thou shalt not excel; because thou ^gwentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: || he went up to my couch.

Unstable as water: this may concern either, 1. Something past, or Reuben's fault; and so he is said to have been unstable, or light, and vain, as the word is used, Judg. ix. 4; Zeph. iii. 4; like water, moved with every little wind of temptation, and unbounded in thy lust; as water of itself hath no bounds, but will scatter itself every way, if it be not kept within banks, or in a vessel: or, hasty, violent, impetuous in thy lust, like water, which either overflows or breaks its banks. Or, 2. Something to come, or Reuben's punishment; and so the meaning is, Thou, i. e. thy posterity, shall be unstable, or unsettled, flitting and vanishing, coming to nothing, or poured forth like water, useless, contemptible, and weak. Such indeed was the state of that tribe, of which we read nothing eminent in Scripture. See Judg. v. 15, 16. This I prefer before the former, 1. Because it is not probable that his fault should be described here in such general and ambiguous and dark terms, which is described so plainly and particularly in the following words. 2. Because this makes the coherence most plain. Here is a description, (1.) Of Reuben's excellent state to which he was born, ver. 3. (2.) Of his fall from that state, in these words, and the immediately following, thou shalt not excel. (3.) Of the reason of this fall, his great sin. 3. Because the similitude of water applied to men in this manner, notes rather their impotency and calamity than their sin, as Josh. vii. 5; Psal. xxii. 14. Thou shalt not excel, or, be the most eminent amongst thy brethren; thou hast lost thy pre-eminence due to thee by birthright, both for thyself and for thy posterity, and it shall be given to others; the priesthood to Levi, the dominion to Judah, and the double portion to Joseph. Then defiledst thou it, by committing incest with Bilhah. He repeats the same thing, and that in an emphatical manner, turning his speech and face from Reuben to his brethren, in a posture of indignation and detestation; which you must not impute to Jacob's passion, he being now a dying man, and this being forty years after the crime committed, but to the Spirit of God guiding his tongue to utter this, not only nor chiefly for the punishment of Reuben, who, as many think, had repented of his sin; but for terror, instruction, and caution to all others, and to assure them that sin, though it may be long dissembled and borne with, yet it will one time or other be sorely punished. But these and the next foregoing words may be thus rendered, Then defiledst thou my bed: he went up to it, or rather, he is gone up, i. e. he is vanished, or perished, or lost; for so this word is oft used, as Job v. 26; Isa. v. 24; Jer. xlvi. 15. And so here is an elegant figure, called antanaclasis, whereby the same word is repeated in the same verse in a different sense, as Psal. xviii. 26; Matt. viii. 22. So here, He went up wickedly to his father's bed to commit a great sin; therefore now he is gone up penalty, to receive condign punishment; his excellency is gone up like smoke, which ascendeth and is dispersed in the air. And this may seem to be the truest translation and interpretation, because it keeps close to the Hebrew words and their order; whereas, in our translation, there is both a transplacing of the Hebrew words, and a supplement added unnecessarily.

5 ¶ Simeon and Levi are ⁱbrethren; ^h instruments of cruelty are ⁱin their habitations.

Simeon and Levi are brethren; not only by nature, but in iniquity; of like cruel and bloody disposition, confederate in the same wicked design, Gen. xxxiv. 25. So the word brother is elsewhere used, for him that agrees much with another in his temper, or employment, or designs, as Job xxx. 29; Prov. xviii. 9, &c.

Their bloody swords are yet in their dwellings, to bear witness against them for their barbarous cruelty. But these words may be, and are by some both ancient and later interpreters, rendered otherwise. For the Hebrew word mecheroth, here rendered habitations, is never so used, nor indeed is found elsewhere in Scripture. Nor doth that signification agree with the Hebrew root from whence this comes, which is mechar, and signifies to bar-gain, or sell, or exchange. And accordingly this word is by the Samaritan translator, and by other learned interpreters, rendered, their conventions, or compacts, or civil contracts, or agreements. And, which is more, the Chaldee verb mechar, from whence this word may very well be deduced, signifies to espouse; and the noun mechirah, derived from it, signifies a spouse. And so the words may be rendered thus, their contracts, or agreements, (or their nuptial contracts,) were instruments of cruelty. Which trans-

a Deut. 33. 1.
Amos 3. 7.
b Deut. 4. 30.
Num. 24. 14.
Is. 2. 2. & 39.
c Jer. 23.
d Dan. 2.
28, 29.
Acts 2. 17. Heb. 1. 2.

d ch. 29. 32.
e Deut. 21.
f Ps. 78. 51.

† Heb. do not thou excel.
f 1 Chro. 5. 1.
g ch. 35. 22.
h Cant. 5. 1.
i Deut. 27. 20.
j Or, my couch is gone.

h ch. 29. 33.
i 34.
i Prov. 18. 9.
j Or, their swords are
k ch. 34. 25.

lation seems better than the other, 1. Because it keeps closest to the words of the text, and leaves out that particle in, which is not in the Hebrew text, but was added by our translators to complete the sense. 2. Because this best agrees with the history recorded, Gen. xxxiv., where we read that they did cover their bloody design with a pretence of an agreement and nuptial contract with the Shechemites, which was a great aggravation of their villany, that those things which to others are bonds of love and peace, were made by them instruments of cruelty.

1 Prov. 1. 15, 16.
m Ps. 26. 9.
Eph. 5. 11.
p Ps. 15. 9.
& 30. 12.
& 57. 9.
o ch. 34. 26.
l Or, hough- ed over.

6 O my soul, ¹ come not thou into their secret; ^m unto their assembly, ⁿ mine honour, be not thou united: for ^o in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they || digged down a wall.

Their secret; or, counsel, or company, as the word is used, Psal. lxiv. 2; Jer. xv. 17; i. e. do not partake with them in their secret and wicked designs. Hereby he signifies to all posterity, that that bloody enterprise was undertaken without his consent or approbation, and that he could not think of it without detestation, nor let it pass without a severe censure. Or, O my soul, thou wast not in their secret, as the Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic take it, by a common enallage of the future tense for the past. Mine honour; either, 1. Properly so called. So the sense is, Let not my honour or good name be bound up with theirs; they gloried in this wickedness, which I abominate, and which indeed is their shame. Or, 2. Improperly; so he understands either, 1. His soul, which is indeed the glory of a man, though I do not remember any place of Scripture where that word must necessarily be so understood. So this is a repetition of the same thing in other words, which is usual in Scripture. Or rather, 2. His tongue, for which the word honour or glory is commonly put, as Psal. xvi. 9, compared with Acts ii. 26; Psal. xxx. 12; lvii. 8; cviii. 1, because the tongue or speech is the glory of a man, by which he is distinguished from unreasonable creatures, and, if well used, it brings much honour to God, and to the man that speaks with it. So the sense is, As my soul did not approve of that wicked action, so my tongue never gave consent to it, nor shall it now by silence seem to own it, but shall publicly witness my abhorrence of it. In their anger they slew a man, i. e. men, the Shechemites, Gen. xxxiv. 25, 26, the singular number for the plural, as Gen. iii. 2; xxxii. 5; 1 Chron. x. 1, compared with 1 Sam. xxxi. 1. He saith man rather than men, either with respect unto the prince, whose slaughter was principally designed, or to show that they slew them all to a man. In their self-will: it may note, that this cruelty of theirs was committed, 1. By their own will and choice, not by Jacob's will or consent, which they never asked nor obtained. 2. Without any necessity or sufficient provocation, but merely by their own will and proper motion. 3. Not rashly and hastily, but wilfully and resolvedly, after mature deliberation. 4. Not unwillingly, but cheerfully, and with delight and good will, as that word commonly signifies. They digged down a wall; not the walls of the city, but of private houses; it may be only of the prince's house, who upon the first noise of the tumult might, and probably did, retire and secure himself in some strong room of the house, whose wall they brake down that they might come at him. For neither were the walls of houses or cities so strong then as now many are; nor were Simeon and Levi destitute of fit instruments to break down a wall, which doubtless they brought with them, as easily foreseeing that difficulty in their enterprise. But because the Hebrew word is not shur, a wall, but schor, an ox, others translate the words thus, they houghed, or killed an ox, or bull, meaning Shechem, so called either from his lust, or from his strength and power, from which princes are oft so called, as Deut. xxxiii. 17; Psal. xxii. 12; lxviii. 30. Or rather thus, they rooted out, or drove away an ox, i. e. the oxen, the singular number for the plural, as before; and under them are comprehended the other cattle of the Shechemites, which they drove away, as we read they did, Gen. xxxiv. 28. For as the words may bear this sense, so it seems more reasonable to understand them of that which certainly was done by them, than of their breaking a wall, of which we do not read any thing in the history.

7 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: ^p I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

Cursed be their anger, or, cursed was. It was execrable and abominable both before God and men; such as deserved and brought the curse of God upon themselves, which I, as God's instrument, am now to pronounce against them.

I do here declare, in the name of God, that they shall be divided and dispersed in Jacob, &c.; that is, among the children or tribes of Jacob or Israel. Prophets are said to do what they foretell that God will do, as Jeremiah is said to root out and pull down kingdoms, Jer. i. 10, and Ezekiel to destroy the city, Ezek. xliii. 3. Add Hos. vi. 5. Note here how suitable their punishment was to their crime. They sinned by conspiracy and confederation in the counsel and action, and they are punished with division or separation, not only of the two brethren and their tribes, but of the children and families of the several tribes, one from another. This was eminently fulfilled in the tribe of Levi, which had no proper portion or inheritance, but was scattered among all the tribes, Josh. xviii. 7, though afterwards God turned this curse into a blessing. And for Simeon, he had no part of his own in the division of the land; but the portion of Judah being too large for that tribe, he was taken into that lot, and was as an inmate to them, Josh. xix. 1, 2, 9, and afterwards part of them were forced to seek new seats, and so were divided from the rest of their brethren, 1 Chron. iv. 27, 39, 42. And moreover, the Jewish doctors write, that that tribe was so straitened in their habitations and conveniences, that a very great number of them were forced to scatter themselves amongst the other tribes to get a subsistence by teaching their children.

8 ¶ ^q Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: ^r thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; ^s thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

Or rather, Thou art Judah, thy brethren shall praise or celebrate thee. So the expression is like that 1 Sam. xxv. 25, As his name is, so is he; Nabal is his name, and folly is with him, or in him. So here the sense is, As thy name signifies praise, Gen. xxix. 35, so shalt thou have praise or honour from thy brethren. He alludes to his name, and to the occasion of it, but with an elegant variation. Thou art deservedly called Judah, not only because thy mother praised God for thee, but also because thy brethren shall praise and bless thee for the reasons here following. But this, as also the other blessings or predictions, do not so much declare the state of Judah or the rest in their own persons, as in their posterity. Thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies, i. e. thou shalt overthrow and subdue them. This was fulfilled in part, Judg. i. 1, 2, 4; iii. 9, 10; but more fully in David, 2 Sam. viii. 1, and Solomon, 1 Chron. xxii. 9; and most eminently, though spiritually, in Christ. The phrase is taken either, 1. From the practice of warriors, who use to assault their enemies in that part, that they may throw them down at their feet; of which see Job xv. 26; xvi. 12. Or, 2. from the custom of conquerors, who are said to put the yokes upon the necks of the conquered. See Gen. xxvii. 40; Deut. xxviii. 48; Isa. x. 27; Jer. xxvii. 8; xxviii. 14. Thy father's children, i. e. all thy brethren, and my posterity; he saith not thy mother's children, for his sons had divers mothers; shall bow down before thee, i. e. shall own thee as their superior and lord, upon whom I have devolved this part of the right of the first-born. By this and the following words we plainly see that these blessings and predictions were not distributed according to Jacob's affections and inclinations, (for then Judah should never have been advanced above his worthily beloved Joseph,) but by the direction of God's Spirit.

9 Judah is ^t a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: ^u he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?

Judah is as a lion's whelp, or as a young lion, for courage, and strength, and terror to his enemies. The particle is is here wanting, as also ver. 14, 17, 21, 22, and in many other p Josh. 19. 1.

& 21. 5, 6, 7.
1 Chron. 4.
24, 29.

q ch. 29. 35.
Deut. 32. 7.
r Ps. 137. 4.
s ch. 27. 29.
1 Chron. 5. 2.

t Hos. 5. 14.
Rev. 5. 5.
u Num. 7.
24. & 24. 9.

places, as Psal. xi. 1; xii. 6; xxii. 6, &c. And he is rightly compared first to a lion's whelp, then to an old lion, to signify the growth of that tribe in strength and interest; and that from small beginnings, and a precedence of order only, Judg. i. 1, 2, it should ascend to the height of honour, and power, and happiness in David, and especially in the Messiah, who should conquer all nations. From the prey thou art gone up. Having taken the prey, i. e. conquered thine enemies, thou art gone up in triumph; or gone up, i. e. grown greater and higher after thy victories, as the manner is. Or he alludes to the lions, which usually dwell in mountains, as divers writers observe, and come down to prey in the valleys, and when they have got their prey, they go up to their habitations, and so shall Judah do. He stooped; a change of the person very frequent in prophetic writings, as we shall oft have occasion to note hereafter. He couched. When he hath taken the prey, he doth not convey it away to his den with haste and speed for fear the enemy should return and overtake him, but like a lion he stoops down to feed upon his prey, and coucheth or lieth down securely to rest himself after he hath eaten it, without the least fear of any enemy, as it is observed of him, Isa. xxxi. 4. Judah's conquests shall not be interrupted or followed with ill successes and defeats or overthrows afterward, as it frequently happens in the course of war, but he quietly possess his spoils, and after the bloody wars, to which he will be forced, shall enjoy a sweet peace and tranquillity, which his posterity did, 1 Kings iv. 25. As an old lion, or rather a grown lion, not a decrepit and impotent lion, but one come to his full strength; who shall presume or dare to disturb or provoke him? All shall fear him, and seek peace with him.

10 *The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor 'a lawgiver' from between his feet, 'until Shiloh come; 'and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.

The sceptre, i. e. the dominion or government, which is oft expressed by this word, as Numb. xxiv. 17; Psal. xlv. 6; Isa. xiv. 5; Ezek. xix. 11, 14; Amos i. 5, 8; Zech. x. 11, because it is an ensign of government, Esth. iv. 11. So it is a figure called a metonymy of the sign, than which nothing more frequent. The sense is, That superiority or dominion over his brethren, which I said he should obtain, (ver. 8,) he shall keep; it shall not depart from him. Others, the tribe, as the word shebet signifies, 1 Sam. x. 19—21; 1 Kings xi. 32, &c. So the sense is this, Whereas the other tribes shall be captivated, dispersed, and confounded, the tribe of Judah shall be kept entire and distinct until Christ come. This is a great and important truth, and a singular demonstration of the all-disposing providence of God, and of the truth and Divine authority of the Scriptures; but it seems not to be the meaning of this place, 1. Because both the foregoing and following words do evidently speak of Judah's power and greatness, and particularly this shebet, or sceptre, is explained and restrained by the following lawgiver. 2. Because this renders the phrase improper and absurd; for the tribe had not departed from Judah, nor had they ceased to be a tribe, if the other tribes had been mixed with them in their land, as indeed they were sometimes. See 2 Chron. xi. 16. 3. Because this is not peculiar to the tribe of Judah; for in this sense the tribe did not depart from Levi, nay, that tribe was kept more distinct than that of Judah; thus also the tribe did not depart from Benjamin, as appears from Ezra i. 5; x. 9; Neh. xi. 4. Nay, it is questionable whether in this sense the tribe departed from any of the other tribes, not only because there is a distinct mention of the several tribes, Ezek. xlvi. 1, which was written after the dispersion and supposed confusion of the other tribes, and which speaks of the times after the coming of the Messiah, but also because of the great care which the Israelites generally took in distinguishing, not only their tribes, but their several families, in exact genealogies, of which we have many proofs and instances, as 1 Chron. iv. 33; v. 1, 7, 17; vii. 7, 9, 40; ix. 1, 22; Ezra ii. 62; viii. 1, 3; Neh. vii. 5, 64. The Jews indeed have another device to avoid the force of this text. They say shebet signifies a rod, to wit, a rod of correction, as the word is taken Prov. xxii. 15. And so they say the sense is, The tyrannical sceptre, or the rod of the oppressor, shall not cease or depart from Israel till the Messiah come, who shall save them from all their oppressors and enemies. But this is a vain and frivolous conceit; for, 1. The following sentence, which expounds the former, as it is usual in Scripture, plainly shows that this shebet, or rod, is such as is proper to the lawgiver, and therefore is a rod of authority, or a sceptre, which is called also a rod, Ezek. xix. 14, and not a rod of affliction. 2. This is contrary to the whole context, wherein there is nothing prophesied of Judah, but honour, and dominion, and victory, and safety. 3. There was no reason why the rod of affliction should be appropriated to Judah, which was common to all the tribes, and came sooner, and fell heavier, and abode longer upon the other tribes than upon Judah. 4. This interpretation is confuted by the event or history, both because the rod of correction did depart from Judah, and from them more than from the other tribes, for many generations before the coming of the Messiah; and because that rod is not removed from them, but hath continued longer and more dreadfully upon them since the coming of the Messiah than ever before; which one consideration hath been the occasion of the conversion of many Jews. 5. Howsoever the modern Jews pervert this word and text out of enmity to Christ and Christians, it is certain that the ancient Jews, the LXX., and the Chaldee Paraphrast, with many others, take the word as we do, as the learned have proved out of their own writings. See my Latin Synopsis.

A lawgiver; so the Hebrew word signifies, as here, so also Numb. xxi. 18; Deut. xxxiii. 21; Psal. lx. 7; cviii. 8; Isa. xxxiii. 22. And the verb from whence this word comes signifies to make laws, as Prov. viii. 15, &c.; and the Hebrew word chok, which comes from the same root, constantly signifies a law or statute. Some render it the scribe, and that either the civil scribe, who belongs to the ruler; or the ecclesiastical scribe, the interpreter of the law; and so it signifies, that both the civil and the ecclesiastical power should continue in Judah till Christ came, and then should be taken away, both which the event did verify. But indeed the Hebrew word for scribe is sopher, not mechokek, which never is so used in Scripture, but always for a lawgiver, as I have showed; and so Kimchi and Aben Ezra, two late and learned Jews, with others, expound it.

From between his feet; from his posterity, or from those that come from between his feet, i. e. that are begotten and born of that tribe. And thus Kimchi, and the Chaldee Paraphrast, and other ancient Jews, understand this place. And the truth of this interpretation may appear, by comparing this with other texts of Scripture, as Deut. xxviii. 57, where the young one is described to be one that cometh from between her (the woman's) feet; and Ezek. xvi. 25, and with those places where the word feet is used for the secret parts, as Isa. vii. 20, the hair of the feet, not properly so called, for hair seldom grows there; and 2 Kings xviii. 27; Isa. xxxvi. 12, where the water which comes from the secret parts is called the water of the feet. And possibly that phrase of covering the feet, applied to them that eased their bellies, may note so much, because the Jews in that action were not to hide their feet properly so called, but their secret parts, which without due care might be discovered upon that occasion.

Shiloh, i. e. the Messias; which we need not stand to prove, because it is so expounded by all the three Chaldee Paraphrasts, and by the Jewish Talmud, and by divers of the latter Jews themselves. And the word signifies, either a peace-maker, or saviour; or, as others, her son, or one that came out of the woman's womb, or out of that skin in which the child in the womb is wrapped, which this word, or one near akin to it, signifies. So it notes that the Messiah should be born of a woman, though without the help of man. Or, as others, the sent, he who was oft promised and to be sent. And this signification may seem to be warranted by comparing John ix. 7, with those places of the New Testament in which the Messiah is described by that periphrasis of one sent, or to be sent, as John iii. 34, &c. And the phrase here used is remarkable, till the Shiloh come, for the Shiloh, or Messiah, oft goeth under the name of him that was to come, as Matt. xxi. 9; Luke vii. 20; xiii. 35. And hence the kingdom of the Messiah is called the world or kingdom to come, i. e. of him who was to come, Heb. ii. 5; vi. 5.

Unto him shall the gathering of the people be; they shall!

be gathered together, or united both among themselves, and with the Jews, under him as their Head. Others, the reverence, obedience, or worship; which comes to the same thing, for they that are gathered to him, do also reverence, obey, and worship him. The Hebrew word is used only here and Prov. xxx. 17. The people, i. e. the Gentiles, as the Jews themselves understand it. And so it is a plain prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles by and under the Messiah; signifying, that whereas the ordinances of God, and means of worship and salvation, were confined to the Jews before Christ's coming, Psal. cxlvii. 19, 20, when the Messiah should come, the pale of the church should be enlarged, the partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles taken down, and the Gentiles should worship the true God and the Messias. And this is no more than is foretold and promised in other prophecies, as we shall see hereafter. The sum of this verse is, The sceptre or dominion shall be seated in the tribe of Judah, though he doth not determine when it shall come thither; but when once it shall come, it shall not depart from thence till the Messiah come; and then Judah shall lose this sceptre and other privileges, and the Gentiles shall come into the stead of the Jews, and shall embrace that Messiah whom they shall reject. So now here is an undeniable argument to prove against the Jews that the Messiah is already come, and that the Lord Jesus Christ is he, because he was to come during the time wherein the sceptre was in the hands of Judah; and about that time when Jesus Christ came the sceptre was taken away from Judah and the Jews, and hath now been lost for sixteen hundred years together. The Jews are mightily perplexed and confounded with this argument; one evidence whereof is their various and contradictory expositions of the place, whilst some of them affirm this Shiloh to be Moses, others Saul, others Jeroboam, others Nebuchadnezzar, which neither need nor deserve confutation; others David; which, though some of the acutest of the Jewish doctors assert, is as contemptible as any of the rest, it being ridiculous to say the sceptre departed from Judah under him by whom it first came into that tribe, having been till David's time in other tribes. But the great difficulty is, how this was accomplished; for if the event fully agrees with this prophecy, the cause of the Jews is lost, and Christ must be owned as the true Messias. The sceptre was for a time in other tribes; as in Moses of the tribe of Levi; in divers of the judges, who were of several tribes; and lastly in the tribe of Benjamin under Saul; but the sceptre departed from all these. But this is prophesied as Judah's privilege, that when once the sceptre or government came into that tribe, which it did in David's time, it should not depart from it till Christ came, and then it should depart. And thus it came to pass. Concerning the time from David unto the captivity of Babylon there is no dispute, there being a constant succession of kings in that tribe all that time. For the time of the Babylonish captivity, wherein there may seem to be more difficulty, it is to be considered, 1. That the sceptre or government was not lost or departed from Judah, but only interrupted, and that but for seventy years at most, which in so long a space of time as above a thousand years is little to be regarded. As none will say the kingdom was departed from the house of David, because of those interregnums or interruptions which sometimes fell out in that family. Add to this, that God hath given them an absolute promise and assured hope of the restoration of Judah's sceptre; so that this was rather a sleep than the death of that government. 2. That within these seventy years there were some remainders and beams of Judah's sovereignty in Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxv. 27; in Daniel, who was of that tribe, Dan. ii. 25; v. 13, and of the king's seed, Dan. i. 3; and in the successive heads or governors of the exiles, of whom the Jewish writers say so much; and they affirm that they were always of the house of David, and were more honourable than the governors of the Jews which were left in the land of Israel. 3. All that was then left of the sceptre of the Jews was in the tribe of Judah; nor was the sceptre departed from Judah to any other tribe; and that is the thing which seems especially to be respected in this prophecy: for Judah is here compared with the rest of the tribes; and it is here signified, that the power and dominion which was in Judah, when once it came thither, should not shift from tribe to tribe, as it had done, but whilst there was any sceptre or supreme government among the Jews, it should be in that tribe, even till the coming of the Messias. But if there should happen any total, but temporary intercision or cessation of the government among all the tribes, which now was the case, that was no prejudice to the truth of this promise, nor to the privilege granted to Judah above the rest of the tribes. After the captivity, the state of the Jews was very various. Sometimes they had governors put in by the Persian king, as Zorobabel, who was also of the tribe of Judah, and, as it is supposed, nephew of Jehoiachin; and Nehemiah, whom Eusebius affirms to have been of the tribe of Judah. And though he may seem to be numbered among the priests, Neh. x. 8, yet a diligent reader will find that he is even there distinguished from them by his title the Tirshatha, ver. 1, and the word priests, ver. 8, relateth only to the rest there mentioned besides him; especially if this be compared with chap. ix. 38, where the princes (among whom surely Nehemiah was the chief) are distinguished from the priests. And sometimes the people chose governors, or captain-generals, as the Maccabees, and others. But under all their vicissitudes, after their return from Babylon, the chief government was evidently and unquestionably seated in the great council called Sanhedrim or Synedrion, wherein, though some of the tribe of Levi were mixed with those of the tribe of Judah, yet because they, together with other members of that council, had their power both from that tribe by which they were chosen, and in it, and for it, the sceptre did truly remain in the tribe of Judah; even as it was rightly called the Roman empire, when Trajan a Spaniard, or other foreigners, administered it; or as we call it the kingdom of Poland, when they choose a king of another nation. How great and venerable the authority of this council was among the Jews, may easily be gathered, 1. From the Divine institution of it, Numb. xi. 16, whereby indeed it was at first to consist of persons indifferently chosen out of all the tribes; but now the other tribes being banished and dispersed in unknown places, and Benjamin and Levi being as it were accessions to the tribe of Judah, and in a sort incorporated with it, it now becomes as it were appropriated to the tribe of Judah, as acting in its name, and by its authority; and the whole land is called Judea, and all the people Jews, from the predominancy of that tribe above the rest. 2. From the great power and privileges anciently granted to it, Deut. xvii. 8, &c.; 2 Chron. xix. 8, 11; Psal. cxvii. 5. 3. From the testimony of Josephus, and other Jewish writers, which is most considerable in this argument, who largely describe and magnify the power and authority of it; who tell us that the power of their king was subject to that of this council; and therefore one of them addressing his speech to that council, where also the king himself was present, first salutes the senators, and after them the king. They affirm also that the power of making war or peace was vested in that council, and that Herod was tried for his life by it. If it be said that the power of this council was in a great measure taken away, which the Jews confess, John xviii. 31, and that the sceptre of Judea was in the hand of the Romans, and by them given to Herod, who was no Jew, but an Idumean, and this before the coming of the Messias, which is the only remaining difficulty; to this many things may be said: 1. That this happened but a few years before the coming of Christ, when Christ was even at the doors, and about to come, and therefore might well be said to be come; especially in the prophetic style, whereby things are oft said to be done which are near doing. 2. That the Jewish senators did long struggle with Herod about the government, and did not yield it up to him till his last year, when they took an oath of fealty to him, which was after Christ was born. Nor indeed was the sceptre quite gone from them then, for that council still had the power, though not of life and death, yet of civil and ecclesiastical matters. See John xviii. 31. So that if the sceptre was gone, the lawgiver remained there still. Nor was their government and commonwealth quite destroyed until the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus. And therefore some translate the place thus, and that with great probability, The sceptre shall not depart—until the Shiloh come, and until (which word is repeated out of the former member, as it is most usual in the Scripture) the gathering of the people be to him, i. e. until the Gentiles be converted and brought in to Christ.

And this interpretation receiveth countenance from Matt. xxiv. 14, The gospel shall be preached in all the world,—and then shall the end come; not the end of the whole world, as it is evident, but the end of the commonwealth and government of the Jews, when the sceptre and lawgiver should be wholly taken away from that tribe and people.

c 2 Kings 18. 32. 11 ° Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes:

He signifies the plenty of vines in Judah's portion, that they shall be planted every where, even in the commons and highways where men travel, and where upon occasion they use to tie the beasts on which they ride to any tree which is near them. Such shall be the plenty of it, that if it were convenient, men might use wine instead of water to wash their garments. The blood of grapes; so the wine is called also in Deut. xxxii. 14; 1 Mac. vi. 34; and by Pliny, Hesiod, and others. As oil is called the blood of the olive.

d Prov. 23. 29. 12 His ^d eyes shall be red with wine, and his teeth white with milk.

Which shows not only the plenty of wine, but also the excellency and strength of it, which, though not drunk in great quantity, or to excess, will make the eyes red. See Prov. xxiii. 29.

e Deut. 33. 18, 19. 13 ¶ Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea; and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon.

Acknowledge here and adore the Divine Providence, which directed Jacob thus exactly to foretell the portion of Zebulun, which fell to them two hundred years after this, and that not by choice, or any design of men, but merely by lot. His portion was extended from the sea of Galilee to the great Mediterranean Sea, and to such parts of it where there were convenient havens. His border shall be unto Zidon; or, his side or coast, to wit, that which is upon the Mediterranean Sea, is near Zidon, understanding not the city, but the territory belonging to it, unto which that tribe reached upon the sea-coast; for though Asher might seem to intercept them, yet he did not reach to the sea. Or, his coast looks towards Zidon, hath it in view, and lies commodiously for commerce with that great city, which then was the mart of the nations.

14 ¶ Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens:

A strong ass, Heb. an ass of bone, i. e. of great bulk and bones, and strength of body, but of little spirit and courage, couching down between two burdens, which are laid upon his back, and which he is contented to bear. Or, lying down, i. e. enjoying his ease and rest, between the borders, to wit, of the other tribes, with which he was encompassed and secured from foreign enemies, which made him more secure and slothful. Or, between the borders or folds of cattle; as a word very near akin to it, and proceeding from the same root, signifies, Judg. v. 16, to the feeding and minding whereof he wholly gave himself, neglecting more generous things.

15 And he saw that rest was good, and the land that it was pleasant; and bowed ^f his shoulder to bear, and became a servant unto tribute.

f 1 Sam. 10. 9. Rest, or rather, his resting-place, as this very word signifies, Gen. viii. 9; Psal. cxvi. 7; cxxii. 8; Isa. xi. 10, i. e. his portion or habitation, as the Chaldee and Syriac translate it. So this agrees with the following member, where, after the manner of the Hebrews, the same thing is repeated in other words. And if it be objected against this version, that it is not said his rest, but rest in the general, it may be replied, that so it is in the following branch, the land, though it be apparently meant of his land, or portion of land allotted to him. Besides, the pronouns are often omitted, and to be understood in Hebrew text; as may appear by comparing 1 Kings x. 7, with 2 Chron. ix. 6; and Psal. xli. 9, with John xiii. 18; and Matt. iii. 12, with Luke iii. 17. Became a servant unto tribute; willingly paying whatsoever tributes were imposed upon him, either by the neighbouring tribes, or by foreign powers, rather than to forfeit his pleasant and fruitful country, and his sweet repose.

16 ¶ Dan shall judge his people, as ^g one of the tribes of Israel.

g Deut. 33. 22. Judg. 18. 1, 2. i. e. Rule and govern them. Though he be the son of my concubine, yet he shall not be subject to any other tribe, but shall have an absolute power within himself. What is said of him is to be understood of the rest of the sons of the concubines, and hereby all difference between the sons of the wives and concubines is taken away. It is said of Dan, because he is the first mentioned of that sort. As the rest of the tribes do, having distinct governments and governors amongst them. See Numb. i. 4, 16.

17 ^h Dan shall be a serpent by the way, ^h † an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.

h Judg. 18. 27. † Heb. an arrow-snake. An adder in the path, which covereth and hideth itself in the sand or dust of the highway, watching for men or beasts that pass that way. He notes the subtlety of that tribe, which should conquer their enemies more by craft and cunning, than by strength or force of arms.

18 ⁱ I have waited for thy salvation, O LORD.

i Ps. 25. 6. & 119. 166. 174. Is. 25. 9. I do earnestly wait, and hope, and pray for thy helping hand to save me and my posterity from the manifold temporal calamities which I foresee will come upon them, and especially from spiritual and eternal mischiefs, by that Messiah which thou hast promised. Jacob in the midst of his great work doth take a little breathing, and finding himself weakened by his speech to his children, and drawing nearer death, he opens his arms to receive it, as the thing for which he had long waited, as the only effectual remedy and mean of salvation or deliverance from all his pains and miseries, and particularly from his present horrors, upon the contemplation of the future state of his children. And this pathetic exclamation may look either, 1. Backward, to the state of the tribe of Dan, which he foresaw would be deplorable, both for its great straits and pressures, of which see Josh. xix. 47; Judg. i. 34, and especially for that idolatry which that tribe would introduce and promote, Judg. xviii. 30; 1 Kings xii. 29, whereby they would ruin themselves, and most of the other tribes with them. Or, 2. Forward, to the doubtful and miserable condition of Gad.

19 ¶ ^k Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last.

k Deut. 33. 20. 1 Chron. 5. 18. i. e. Troops of enemies shall frequently invade his country, and for a time conquer and spoil it. And so it came to pass, because the inheritance of that tribe lay beyond Jordan, near to the Ammonites and Moabites, two inveterate enemies of Israel, and to other hostile nations on the east. But he shall overcome at the last, or, afterwards. This was fulfilled, 1 Chron. v. 18, &c. He shows that the events of the wars should be various, but Gad should one time or other spoil his spoilers. See Deut. xxxiii. 20.

20 ¶ ^l Out of Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall yield royal dainties.

l Deut. 33. 24. Josh. 19. 24. i. e. Out of the land of Asher. Or, As for or concerning Asher, his bread-corn shall be fuller and sweeter and better than ordinary; and he shall yield royal dainties; not only oil for ointments, but also delicious and excellent fruits, fit to be presented to a king. See Deut. xxxiii. 24, 25.

21 ¶ ^m Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words.

m Deut. 33. 23. A hind let loose; not pursued by hunters, nor shut up in some little enclosure, but wholly left to its own freedom, to feed upon the best pastures: see Deut. xxxiii. 23. Or, free from the yoke which they, together with the other tribes, did bear in Egypt; free from its former restraints, which make it run away more swiftly. So it may note their nimbleness and expedition, either in encountering enemies, or in avoiding dangers. See Judg. iv. 6, 10; v. 18. Or, like a tame hind left to its liberty, in which the owner takes delight, as Prov. v. 19; for he seems to be commended rather for arts of peace than war. And this may note, that his temper and conversation was civil, obliging, and amiable; which sense the next words favour. His speeches and discourses with others are fair, and friendly, and winning. It is not strange that this tribe was generally of a sweeter disposition than others, seeing it is commonly observed that there is a great difference in the tempers of people of divers provinces or cities bordering one upon another. But this verse may be otherwise rendered according to the opinion of a late learned writer: Naphtali is a tree (so the Hebrew word signifies, only jod is inserted here, as it is in the same word, Isa. i. 29; lxi. 3) shot forth, or spread forth, (into many branches; for the Hebrew verb shalach is oft used concerning trees, and their shooting forth of branches, as Psal. lxxx. 11; Ezek. xvii. 6; xxxi. 5.) sending forth goodly branches; the word imre, which is by others rendered words, here signifying branches, as either the same word, or one coming from the same root, and consisting of the same radical letters, is taken Isa. xvii. 6, 9. And it is usual in the Hebrew language for two words coming from the same root to exchange their significations. And this interpretation is favoured by the ancient interpreters, the LXX., and one of the Arabic manuscripts, which make Naphtali here to be compared to a goodly tree bringing forth excellent fruit.

22 ¶ Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose † branches run over the wall :

A fruitful bough, in regard of those two numerous tribes which proceeded from his two sons. By a well, or fountain, or water-course, which situation doth much further the growth of trees. See Psal. i. 3; Ezek. xix. 10. Whose branches run over the wall, i. e. which is planted by a wall, whose heat furthers its growth no less than the moisture of the water doth.

23 The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him :

i. e. His adversaries, as well his own brethren as his master and mistress; with their scoffs, and slanders, and injuries, which in Scripture are oft compared to arrows.

24 But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob ; (*from thence 'is the shepherd, 'the stone of Israel :)

His bow, wherewith he opposed his enemies; which was no military bow, but that which he opposed to all their injuries, to wit, his own virtue, his innocence, his patience, his temperance, his faith and hope in God, whereby he resisted and vanquished all the temptations and difficulties which he met with, so that all his enemies could neither defile nor destroy him. The mighty God of Jacob, i. e. my God; the noun for the pronoun, which is frequent. When men forsook and persecuted him, my God and his God stood by him. He showed that it was not Joseph's wisdom or courage, but God's gracious assistance, that made him conqueror.

From thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel; either, 1. From that great deliverance vouchsafed by God to Joseph it is that Israel or Jacob hath a shepherd to feed him, a stone to lay his head upon, as once he did, Gen. xxviii. 11, or a rock of refuge to fly to in his great distresses, or a foundation-stone, or corner-stone, or pillar, to sustain or preserve Jacob's house. Or rather, 2. From the hands of the mighty God of Jacob, last mentioned. Or from the God of his father, as it follows the next verse. So the sense is this, Though Joseph was a blessed instrument in this wonderful work, yet the God of Jacob was the chief author of it, by whose wise and merciful providence it was so ordered that Joseph should be first sold, and afterwards advanced, and all in order to this end, that his Israel, with whom he hath been pleased to make a gracious and everlasting covenant, should have a shepherd to feed him in the time of famine, and a stone or rock to support him.

25 'Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; 'and by the Almighty, 'who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb :

Here he explains and determines that doubtful expression from thence, by adding, even by (or rather from, as this particle mem properly signifies, and was just now used) the God of thy father, i. e. who hath chosen and loved thy father, and made a league with him, and blessed him with all manner of blessings. Blessings of heaven above, i. e. the sweet and powerful influences of the heavenly bodies, and the dews and rains which fall from heaven, whereby the fruits of the earth are produced in great plenty. See Lev. xxvi. 4; Deut. xxviii. 12; xxxiii. 14. Blessings of the deep, i. e. of that great sea of waters both about the earth, and in the earth, whence come those springs and rivers by which the earth is moistened and made fruitful. See Gen. i. 2; vii. 11; Deut. viii. 7. Blessings of the breasts, and of the womb, whereby both men and beasts shall be greatly multiplied, and abundantly supplied with all necessaries.

26 The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of thy progenitors 'unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: 'they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

The blessings which I thy father have conferred upon thee, are much more considerable than those which I received from my father Isaac, or from my grandfather Abraham. This was true, 1. In the extent of the blessings; Ishmael was excluded from Abraham's blessing, and my brother excluded from Isaac's blessing, but both Joseph's children are comprehended in Jacob's blessing. 2. In the distinctness and clearness of them; for that land of Canaan which was transmitted to Isaac and to Jacob only in the general, was now in some sort particularly distributed to Joseph, and to the rest of his brethren, as afterwards it was by Joshua. 3. In the nearness of the accomplishment. Now there was a more likely prospect of the multiplication of their seed, than there was to Abraham or Isaac; and in not very many years after this they multiplied to astonishment, and drew nearer to the possession of the promised land. Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: these words seem to note the duration of Joseph's blessing, that it should continue even to the bounds of the everlasting, or lasting, or ancient hills, i. e. as long as the most solid and stable mountains shall last, i. e. for ever. Perpetuity is described by the continuance of the mountains, as Isa. liv. 10; or of the sun and moon, as Psal. lxxii. 5, 7, 17; or of the heavens and earth, as Matt. v. 18. In the foregoing words of this verse he commends these blessings from their excellency above all former blessings; and here he commends them from their durability. They shall be; or, let them be; for this may be a prayer to God that these blessings may be constant and perpetual. Him that was separate from his brethren; so he was, when he was sold into Egypt, and abode there in the court when his brethren were in Goshen. Or, the crowned of, or among his brethren, i. e. who though he was once scorned and trampled upon by his brethren, yet now is highly honoured and advanced above them. Others, the Nazarite of, or among his brethren; as he may be called either for his purity and sanctity, or for his eminency and dignity. But we must remember that the Nazarites were as yet unknown, being instituted long after this time.

27 ¶ Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

He notes the warlike and fierce disposition and carriage of that tribe. Instances whereof we have Judg. iii. 15; xix.; xx.; 1 Sam. xiii.; xiv.; xv. This may be understood, either of the same wolf, which in the morning, being more hungry and greedy, devours his prey alone; but in the evening, being in some measure satisfied, is content that his brethren should share with him. Or rather of several sorts of wolves, whereof some hunt and devour alone, others hunt in couples or troops, and those divide the prey among

n ch. 37. 4.
24, 26, & 39.
20. & 42. 21.
Ps. 118. 13.

o Job 29. 20.
Ps. 37. 15.
p Ps. 132.
2. 5.
q ch. 45. 11.
& 47. 12.
& 50. 21.
r Ps. 80. 1.
s Is. 26. 18.

t ch. 26. 13.
21. & 35. 3.
& 43. 25.
u ch. 17. 1.

& 35. 11.
Deut. 33.
13.
y Deut. 34.
15. z Hab. 3. 6.
Deut. 33.
16.

a Judg. 20.
21, 25.
Ezek. 22.
25, 27.
b Num. 23.
24. Ezech. 8.
11. Ezek. 30. 10. Zech. 14. 1, 7.

themselves. He mentions both morning and evening, because these are the two seasons when the wolves prey, and to note that this would be Benjamin's carriage both in the first and last times of that tribe, as indeed it was.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

The twelve tribes, i. e. the heads and parents of the twelve tribes. A metonymy of the effect. The tribes are generally accounted twelve, though they were thirteen, because the land was divided only into twelve parts, Levi having no distinct part of his own. Every one according to his blessing, i. e. according to that blessing which God in his purpose had allotted to each of them, which also he manifested unto Jacob by his Spirit. Object. There is no blessing here given to Reuben, Simeon, and Levi, but rather a curse; how then is he said to bless every one of them? Answer. He blessed them all implicitly and really, though not expressly, or in words, because he gave each of them a part in Canaan; and his taking away from Reuben only the right of the first-born, plainly supposeth that he left him his single portion and inheritance. And he might well be said to bless them all, because he left them all an interest in God's covenant, one article whereof was the giving of Canaan, or part of Canaan, to them, and this was an earnest of the other branches or articles of it; though it is probable he also added some short blessing, or prayer to God for his blessing, upon them all.

29 And he charged them, and said unto them, I ^cam to be gathered unto my people: ^dbury me with my fathers ^ein the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite,

In Canaan. Whereby he designed to withdraw their minds from Egypt, and fix them upon Canaan.

30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, ^fwhich Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a buryingplace.

He describes it so particularly, both for their direction, because they had been some years absent thence; and to express how much his heart was set upon this matter; and thereby to oblige them to the more careful performance of his command.

31 ^gThere they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; ^hthere they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.

32 The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein was from the children of Heth.

33 And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and ⁱwas gathered unto his people.

Commanding his sons, to wit, concerning the place of his burial. Whilst he was employed in that most solemn and religious work of blessing his children in the name and by the Spirit of God, he used as reverent a posture as his infirm body would permit, and therefore is supposed to sit upon his bedside with his feet hanging downwards. And when he had finished that great work, and wearied himself with so long speech delivered with a most raised and affected mind, he composed himself to rest, and waited for the comfortable approach of his death, which speedily followed it.

CHAP. L.

Joseph bewails his father's death; and embalms him, 1, 2. The Egyptians mourn for him seventy days, 3. Joseph with Pharaoh's leave carries him stately accompanied to Canaan, 4—9. They mourn there seven days, and sorely, so that the Canaanites from thence named the place Abelmizraim, 10, 11. They bury him where he commanded, 12, 13. They return to Egypt, 14. Jacob being dead, his sons are afraid of their brother Joseph, 15. Pretending their father's order, they address for pardon, 16—18. He weeps, forgives, and encourageth them, 19—21. Joseph lives to see a third and fourth generation, 22, 23. Assures his brethren of their future return to Canaan, 24. He takes an oath of them to carry his bones with them, 25; dies; is embalmed; and put in a coffin, 26.

AND Joseph ^afell upon his father's face, and ^bwept upon him, and kissed him.

And doubtless closed his eyes, as God had promised, Gen. xvi. 4, which may be implied in this general phrase.

2 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to ^cembalm his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.

The dead corpse of his father with spices, and ointments, and other things necessary for the preservation of the body from putrefaction as long as might be. This Joseph did, partly, because he would comply as far as he could with the Egyptians, whose custom this was, from whom also the Jews took it, 2 Chron. xvi. 14; John xix. 39, 40; partly, to do honour and show his affections to his worthy father; and partly, because this was necessary for the keeping of the body so long as the times of mourning and the journey to Canaan required.

3 And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed: and the Egyptians [†]mourned for him threescore and ten days.

For him, i. e. for his embalming; that so the drugs or spices which were applied might more effectually reach to all the parts of the dead body, and keep it from corruption. And the effect of their diligence and so long continuance in this work was, that bodies have been preserved uncorrupt for some thousand of years. Threescore and ten days, i. e. thirty days, (according to the custom of the Hebrews, Numb. xx. 29; Deut. xxxiv. 8, to which doubtless the Egyptians in this case did accommodate themselves,) besides the forty days spent in embalming him, which also was a time of mourning. And thus I suppose the Egyptians reckoned those seventy-two days which Diodorus Siculus saith they spent in mourning for their deceased kings.

4 And when the days of his mourning were past, Joseph spake unto ^ethe house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

The house of Pharaoh; the household or family, namely, those of them which were chief in place and favour with the king. Joseph makes use of their intercession, either, 1. Lest he might seem to despise them, or to presume too much upon his own single interest. Or, 2. By engaging them in this matter to stop their mouths, who otherwise might have been ready enough to censure this action, which they would have a fair opportunity to do in Joseph's absence. Or, 3. Because it was the custom here, as it was elsewhere, Esth. iv. 2, that persons in mourning habit might not come into the king's presence, partly because they would not give them any occasion of sadness, and partly because, according to their superstitious conceits, the sight of such a person was judged ominous.

5 ^fMy father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave ^gwhich I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

Here is a triple obligation upon Joseph: 1. His duty to fulfil the will of the dead. 2. The obedience which he owed to his father's command. 3. The tie of a solemn oath: all which had weight even with the heathens, and were so many arguments to Pharaoh and his courtiers.

In my grave which I have digged for me, according to the manner of those ancient and succeeding times. See 2 Chron. xvi. 14; Isa. xxii. 16; Matt. xxvii. 60. In that large cave which Abraham bought for a burying-place for his family, Jacob had digged a particular and small cell or repository for himself, as others did after him upon the like occasion. And this reason is prudently added, to show that this desire proceeded not from any contempt of Pharaoh or his land, but from that common and customary desire of persons of all ages and nations to be buried in their fathers' sepulchres.

6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

The heathens by the light of nature discovered the sacredness of an oath, and the wickedness of perjury.

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,
All the servants, i. e. a great number of them, as that word is understood, Matt. iii. 5, and oft elsewhere. For many of them were aged and infirm, and many could not be spared from their attendance at court, or upon their employments, &c. The servants of Pharaoh were courtiers of an inferior rank; the elders of his house, the chief officers, and under him governors of his family and councils, who used to reside at or near the court; and the elders of the land, the great officers civil and military, whose places of habitation and command were dispersed in the several parts of the land.

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

And such as were necessary to take care of them, which must needs be understood.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

Chariots and horsemen, for their defence, in case of any opposition.

10 And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they ^bmourned with a great and very sore lamentation: ^cand he made a mourning for his father seven days.

Atad, a man so called; or, of thorn, or thorns, as the word signifies, Judg. ix. 14; Psal. lviii. 9. So it might be a place either abounding or encompassed with thorns. Beyond, or on this side; for the word signifies both, and it may be taken either way here; the one in respect of Egypt, the other in regard of the place in which Moses wrote. It is certain they fetched a great compass, whether for the commodiousness of the way for their chariots, and for conveniences for so great a company, or to prevent all jealousies in the people, as if they came thither with ill design, is not material. There they mourned, because there was the entrance into that country or territory where he was to be buried. Though the Egyptians were not much grieved nor concerned for Jacob's death, yet they used bitter cries and lamentations, which possibly were made or aggravated by persons hired and used upon such occasions. See Jer. ix. 17. Seven days, according to the custom. See 1 Sam. xxxi. 13.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim, which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

13 For ^dhis sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham ^ebought with the field for a possession of a buryingplace of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, ^mthey said, ⁿJoseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they [†]sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying,

This looks like a lie; for Jacob either did not know this fact, or rather, was so well assured of Joseph's clemency and goodness, that he never feared his revenge. But guilt doth so awaken fear, that it makes a man never to think himself secure.

17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; ⁿfor they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of ^othe God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

The God of thy father, for whose sake pardon those that join with thee in his worship. Joseph wept; partly in compassion to their fear and trouble; and partly because they still retained a diffidence in his kindness, after all his great and real demonstrations of it.

18 And his brethren also went and ^pfell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we ^qbe thy servants.

Ready and willing to undergo that servit which we so wickedly sold thee.

19 And Joseph said unto them, ^rFear not: for ^sam I in the place of God?

It is God's prerogative to take vengeance, which I dare not usurp. See Deut. xxxii. 35. Or, can I do what I please with you without God's leave? Therefore fear him rather than me, and upon your experience of his wonderful care and kindness to you, believe that God will not, and therefore that I neither can nor will do you any hurt. But it is not unusual to put the Hebrew he for halo, as it is Gen. xxvii. 36; 1 Sam. ii. 28; 2 Sam. xxiii. 19; 1 Kings xvi. 31, &c.; and so the words may be very well rendered, Am not I under God, i. e. subject to his will, a minister of his providence? Dare I destroy those whom God so eminently designed to save? Dare I punish those whom God hath pardoned.

20 ^tBut as for you, ye thought evil against me; ^ubut God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

Ye thought evil against me, therefore I do not excuse your guilt, though I comfort you against despondency.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: ^vI will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake [†]kindly unto them.

I will nourish you; expect not only a free pardon from me, but all the kindness of a loving brother.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children ^wof the third generation: ^xthe children also of Machir the son of Manasseh ^ywere [†]brought up upon Joseph's knees.

Of the third generation, reckoning from and after Ephraim, i. e. Ephraim's grandchildren's children. So h 2 Sam. 1. 17.

Acts 8. 2.
1 Sam. 31. 13.
Job 2. 13.

f That is, the mourning of the Egyptians.

k ch. 49. 29, 30.
Acta 7. 16.

l ch. 23. 16.

+ Heb. charged.

n Prov. 28. 13.

o ch. 49. 25.

p ch. 37. 7, 10.

r ch. 45. 5.
Deut. 32. 35.
Job 34. 29.

s Rom. 12. 19. Heb. 10. 30. 2 Kings 5. 7.

t Ps. 56. 5. Is. 10. 7.
1 ch. 45. 5, 7. Acta 3. 13, 14, 15.

v ch. 47. 12. Matt. 5. 44.

+ Heb. to their hearts. ch. 34. 3.

1625.

x Job 42. 16. y Num. 32. 39.

z ch. 30. 3.

+ Heb. borne.

early did Ephraim's privilege above Manasseh appear, and Jacob's blessing (Gen. xlviii. 19) take place. The children of Machir, Heb. sons. For though he had but one son, viz. Gilead, by his first wife, yet he married a second wife, and by her had two other sons, 1 Chron. vii. 16, which Joseph lived long enough to see. Or under the name of children his grandchildren also might be comprehended. So there is no need of that enallage of sons for one son which we meet with in other places. Were brought up upon Joseph's knees; laid upon Joseph's lap or knees, where parents use oftentimes to take up and repose their infants, to express their love to them, and delight in them. And some observe, that it was an ancient custom in divers nations, that the infant, as soon as it was born, was laid upon the grandfather's knees. So it is an ellipsis, whereby one word is put for two, or under one verb. See more of this phrase on Gen. xxx. 3; xlviii. 12.

24 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die: and ^aGod will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land unto the land ^bwhich he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

God will surely visit you, i. e. deliver you out of this place, where I foresee you will be hardly used after my decease; or, fulfil his promised kindness to you, as that word is used, Gen. xxi. 1; Exod. iv. 31. There is a double visitation oft mentioned in Scripture; the one of grace and mercy, which is here meant; the other of justice and anger, as elsewhere.

25 And ^cJoseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

Joseph took an oath, for the same reason which moved

Jacob to require an oath from him, Gen. xlvii. 30, 31, of the children of Israel: he saith not, of his brethren, but of Israel's children; under which his grandchildren are comprehended, and seem principally intended here; either because his brethren were most of them dead, or rather because he knew that they were not to go out of Egypt in his brethren's time, but in their second or third generation. My bones, i. e. my dead body: but he mentions only his bones, because part of his body was corrupted, and the other part, though preserved from corruption by the embalming, yet was so changed and adulterated with the spices, and other materials which they used, that it looked like another thing; only his bones remained entire and unchanged. Quest. Why did he not desire to be presently carried thither, and buried there, as his father did? Ans. 1. Lest he should disoblige the Egyptians, and provoke them against his brethren and children. The removal of his father thither was necessary, and forced from him by an oath, but the order for the removal of himself would have been voluntary and designed, and therefore could not have escaped the censure of an ungrateful contempt of the land of Egypt, which as it was thought good enough for him and his to live in, should have been judged so too for his burial. 2. That by these his remains his memory might be the longer and better preserved, both with the Egyptians, who for his sake might show kindness to his near relations; and with the Israelites, to whom this was a visible pledge of their deliverance, and a help to their faith, and an obligation to them to persist in the true religion.

26 So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they ^dembalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt. 1635.

So for about thirteen years of affliction he enjoyed eighty years of honour, and as much happiness as earth could afford him.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

EXODUS.

THE ARGUMENT.

AFTER the death of Joseph, who had sent for his father's house into Egypt, the children of Israel exceedingly multiplied, notwithstanding Pharaoh's cruel oppressing of them; from under which God, hearing their cry, brought them with a strong hand. Wherefore this book is called by the Greeks Exodus, i. e. a going forth; containing an historical account of passages for about one hundred and forty years; with the wonderful raising up of Moses, who, together with Aaron, were to be instruments of their deliverance; and accordingly, after the inflicting ten dreadful plagues upon Pharaoh, brought them into the wilderness through the Red Sea, wherein Pharaoh (his heart being hardened under all these plagues) and all his host pursuing of them were drowned; God having first instituted the passover, as an abiding sacrament to bring to their remembrance in after-times this great deliverance.

In their conduct through the wilderness, God gave them the signal mark of his presence in the pillar of a cloud, and the pillar of fire; who, notwithstanding their great and reiterated murmurings, gave them food, both bread and flesh from heaven, and drink out of the rock; and when they were come to Mount Sinai, he there gave them the moral law, beside other both politic and ecclesiastical ordinances. Afterwards, the breaking of the tables being occasioned by the idolatry of the golden calf, God graciously renewed his covenant with them. There being also a tabernacle, and ark, and other things to be made by God's command, the bounty of the people, in order to the making and furnishing thereof, is here set down; which, being finished, the tabernacle is anointed, and filled with the glory of God.

CHAP. I.

The names and numbers of the children of Israel that came into Egypt, 1—5. Joseph, his brethren, and that generation die, 6. A new king, who knew not Joseph, 8, goeth about by affliction, &c. to suppress the Israelites, 9—11. They increase, 12. Pharaoh commands the midwives to kill the male children, 15, 16. They fear

God, and obey not the king, 17. For this God blesseth the midwives, 20, 21. Pharaoh commands all the male children to be drowned, 22.

NOW ^athese are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

B. C. 1706.
^a Gen. 46. 8.
ch. 8. 14.

This list is here repeated, that by comparing this small root with so vast a company of branches as grew upon it, we may see the wonderful providence of God in the fulfilling of his promises. And his household, his children and grandchildren, as the word house is taken Ruth iv. 11; 2 Sam. vii. 11; 1 Kings xxi. 29.

- 2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,
- 3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

Who, though the youngest of all, is placed before Dan, Naphtali, &c., because these were the sons of the handmaidens.

4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the † Joins of Jacob were ^b seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.

Seventy souls, including Jacob and Joseph, and his two sons. See Gen. xlv. 26, 27; Deut. x. 22. Or if they were but sixty-nine, they are called seventy by a round number, of which we shall have many instances.

6 And ^c Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

i. e. All that were of the same age with Joseph and his brethren.

7 ¶ ^d And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

Here are many words, and some very emphatical, to express their incredible multiplication. They waxed exceeding mighty; which may relate either to their numbers, which greatly added to their strength, or to their constitution, to note that their offspring was strong as well as numerous. Atheistical wits cavil at this story, and pretend it impossible that out of seventy persons should come above six hundred thousand men within two hundred and fifteen years; wherein they betray no less ignorance than impiety. For, to say nothing of the extraordinary fruitfulness of the women in Egypt, who oft bring forth four or five children at one birth, as Aristotle notes, Hist. Animal. 7. 4, nor of the long lives of the men of that age, nor of the plurality of wives then much in use, nor of the singular blessing of God upon the Hebrews in giving them conceptions and births without abortion, all which are but very reasonable suppositions, the probability of it may plainly appear thus: Suppose there were only two hundred years reckoned, and only fifty persons who did beget children, and these begin not to beget before they be twenty years old, and then each of them beget only three children. Divide this time now into ten times twenty years. In the first time, of 50 come 150. In the second, of 150 come 450. Of them in the third, come 1350. Of them in the fourth, 4050. Of these in the fifth, 12150. Of these in the sixth, 36450. Of them in the seventh, 109350. Of them in the eighth, 328050. Of these in the ninth, 984150. And of them in the tenth, 2952450. If it be objected, that we read nothing of their great multiplication till after Joseph's death, which some say was not above fifty years before their going out of Egypt, it may be easily replied: 1. This is a great mistake, for there were above one hundred and forty years between Joseph's death and their going out of Egypt, as may appear thus: It is granted that the Israelites were in Egypt about two hundred and ten or two hundred and fifteen years in all. They came not thither till Joseph was near forty years old, as is evident by comparing Gen. xli. 46, with Gen. xlv. 6. So there rests only seventy years of Joseph's life, which are the first part of the time of Israel's dwelling in Egypt, and there remain one hundred and forty-five years, being the other part of the two hundred and fifteen years. 2. That the Israelites did multiply much before Joseph's death, though Scripture be silent in it, as it is of many other passages confessedly true, cannot be reasonably doubted. But if there was any defect in the numbers proposed in the first fifty-five years, it might be abundantly compensated in the one hundred and forty-five years succeeding. And so the computation remains good.

8 Now there ^e arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

A new king, i. e. another king; one of another disposition, or interest, or family; for the kingdom of Egypt did oft pass from one family to another, as appears from the history of the Dynasties recorded in ancient writers. Which knew not Joseph, or, acknowledged not the vast obligations which Joseph had laid not only upon the kingdoms of Egypt, and the king under whom Joseph lived, but upon all his successors, in regard of those vast additions of wealth and power which he had made to that crown. This phrase notes his ungrateful disowning and ill requiting of Joseph's favours. For words of knowledge in Scripture commonly include the affections and actions; as men are oft said not to know God, when they do not love nor serve him; and God is said not to know men, when he doth not love them.

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are ^f more and mightier than we:

This was not a true, but an invidious representation and aggravation of the matter, the better to justify the severities which he designed.

10 ^g Come on, let us ^h deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

War was not unusual in that country. So get them up out of the land, which they might easily learn from some of the Hebrews, that they were in due time to do. And they were very unwilling to part with them, because of the tribute and service which they did receive and expect from them.

11 Therefore they did set over them ⁱ taskmasters to afflict them with their ^j burdens. And they built for Pharaoh ^k treasure cities, Pithom and Raameses.

Taskmasters, Heb. masters of tribute, who were to exact from them the tribute required, which was both money and labour; that their purses might be exhausted by the one, their strength by the other, and their spirits by both. To afflict, or, oppress, or humble; to spend their strength by excessive labours, and so disenable them for the procreation of children. Treasure cities, where they laid the king's money or corn, which is reckoned among treasures, 2 Chron. xvii. 12; xxxii. 27, and wherein a great part of the riches of Egypt consisted; for they had corn enough, not only for themselves, but to sell to other countries; so that Egypt was accounted the granary of the Roman empire. Or, defenced cities, in which garrisons were to be placed, which seems best to agree with the place and use of them. For they were in the borders of the land, and among the Israelites, which appears concerning the one from Gen. xlvii. 11, (where the land in which they were placed is called Rameses, which in Hebrew consists of the same letters with this Raameses, and seems to be so called then by anticipation from the city of that name now built in it,) and may be reasonably presumed concerning the other; and therefore it is most probable that they were built to keep the Israelites in subjection, and to hinder them from going out of the land.

12 † But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel.

They multiplied, through God's overruling providence and singular blessing, which God gave them purposely to hasten first their sorer affliction, and next, and by that means, their glorious deliverance. They were grieved, through envy and fear.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour:

Or, cruelty, or, tyranny; with hard words and cruel usage, without mercy or mitigation. This God permitted for wise and just reasons. 1. As a punishment of their idolatry, into which divers of them fell there, Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 5, 7, 8; xxiii. 8. 2. To wean them from the land of Egypt, which otherwise was a plentiful and desirable land, and to ^a Heb. thigh.

^b Gen. 46.
26, 27.
ver. 20.
Deut. 10. 22.

1835.
^c Gen. 30. 28.
Acts 7. 15.

^d Gen. 46. 3.
Deut. 26. 5.
Ps. 105. 24.
Acts 7. 17.

^e Ps. 10. 2.
& 83. 3. 4.
^f Job 5. 13.
Ps. 108. 25.
Prov. 16. 25.
& 21. 30.
Acts 7. 19.

ⁱ Gen. 15. 13.
ch. 3. 7.
Deut. 26. 6.
k ch. 2. 11.
& 5. 4, 5.
Ps. 81. 6.
^j Gen. 47. 11.

[†] Heb.
And as they afflicted them, so they multiplied, &c.

^e Acts 7. 18.

quicken their desires after Canaan. 3. To prepare the way for God's glorious works, and Israel's deliverance.

14 And they ^mmade their lives bitter with hard bondage, ⁿin mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

Service in the field was the basest and most laborious of all their services.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah:

The Hebrew midwives; such as not only were employed about the Hebrew women, but were Hebrews themselves, not Egyptians, as some suppose; as may appear, 1. Because they are expressly called, not the midwives of the Hebrews, but the Hebrew midwives. 2. The Egyptian midwives would not willingly employ their time and pains among the meanest and poorest of servants, as these were. And if they were sent in design by the king, he had lost his end, which was to cover his cruelty with cunning, and to persuade the people that their death was not from his intention, but from the chances and dangers of child-bearing. 3. The Hebrew women, as they had doubtless midwives of their own, so they would never have admitted others. 4. They are said to fear God, ver. 17, 21.

You are not to think that these were the only midwives to so many thousands of Hebrew women, but they were the most eminent among them; and it may be, for their excellence in that profession called to the service of some Egyptian ladies, and by them known to Pharaoh, who might therefore think by their own interest, and by the promise of great rewards, or by severe threatenings, to oblige them to comply with his desires; and if he met with the desired success by them, he meant to proceed further, and to engage the rest in like manner.

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him: but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

The stools; a seat used by women when ready to be delivered, conveniently framed for the midwife's better discharge of her office. Ye shall kill him, which it was not difficult for them to do without much observation. If it be a daughter, then she shall live; either, 1. Because he feared not them, but the males only; and some add, that he was advised by one of their magicians, that a male child should be born of the Israelites, who should be a dreadful scourge to the Egyptians. Or, 2. They reserved them for their lust, or for service, or for the increase of their people, and the raising of a fairer breed by them.

17 But the midwives ^ofeared God, and did not ^pas the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive.

They feared God more than the king, and therefore chose to obey God rather than the king, their commands being contrary each to other.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive?

19 And ^qthe midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

They are lively, or, vigorous and active in promoting the birth of their own children; or, like the beasts, which without any help of others bring forth their young. So the Hebrew word signifies; and so there is only a resemblance of the particle of similitude, which is frequent, as I have noted before.

This might be no lie, as many suppose, but a truth concerning many of them, and they do not affirm it to be so with all. And so it might be, either because their daily and excessive labours joined with the fears of the execution of the king's command, whereof they seem to have gotten notice, did hasten their birth, as the same causes do commonly in other women; or because they, understanding their danger, would not send for the midwives, but committed themselves to God's providence, and the care of some of their neighbours present with them. So here was nothing but truth, though they did not speak the whole truth, which they were not obliged to do.

20 Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

Therefore, because they feared God, and spared the children, ver. 17, whereby they exposed themselves to the king's displeasure; because they would not offend God by murdering the children, which they might have done many times secretly, and therefore it was only the fear of God which restrained them from it.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses.

i. e. God greatly increased their families both in children and posterity, and in wealth, and other outward blessings. So this phrase is used Gen. xxx. 30; Deut. xxv. 9; 1 Sam. ii. 35; 1 Kings ii. 24; xi. 38; Psal. cxvii. 1. As houses are commonly put for families, so building is put for procreating of children, Gen. xvi. 2; xxx. 3.

22 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAP. II.

Moses's parentage and birth, 1, 2. His mother makes an ark, puts him therein, 3. Pharaoh's daughter going to wash herself, seeth him, takes him for her own child, and gives him to his mother to nurse, 4-9. Moses seeing an Israelite wronged by an Egyptian, kills him, 11, 12. Pharaoh hearing this, seeks to slay Moses; he flees to Midian, 15. There he rescues Reuel's daughters from the violence of the shepherds, 17; serves Reuel, and marries his daughter Zipporah, 21. She bears him a son, his name, and the reason of it, 22. God heareth the cry of the Israelites, 23-25.

AND there went ^aa man of the house of Levi, and took to ^bwife a daughter of Levi.

There went a man, viz. Amram, (Exod. vi. 20; Numb. xxvi. 58, 59,) from the place of his abode to another place for the following purpose. A daughter of Levi, namely Jochebed, Numb. xxvi. 59, called a daughter, not strictly, but more largely, to wit, a grandchild, as the words father and son are oft used for a grandfather and a grandson, as hath been showed before. And so the word sister, Exod. vi. 20, is to be taken largely, as brother is oft used for a cousin. This seems more probable than that an Israelite should marry his own sister, which even heathens by the light of nature have condemned, especially now when he had such abundant choice elsewhere.

2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and ^cwhen she saw him that he ^dwas a goodly child, she hid him three months.

3 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

She could not longer hide him, with safety to herself, because they now grew more violent in executing that bloody decree, and the child growing up was more likely to be discovered, especially seeing the Egyptians dwelt among them, Exod. iii. 22. That boats were made of such

m ch. 2. 23.
& 6. 9.
Numb. 26. 15.
Acta 7. 19,
34.
11 Pa. 81. 6.

cir. 1635.
o Prov. 16. 6.
p Dan. 3. 16,
14. & 6. 13.
Acta 5. 29.

q See Josh.
2. 4. &c.
2 Sam. 17.
19, 20.

r Prov. 11. 18.
Eccles. 8. 12.
Is. 3. 10.
Heb. 6. 10.

s See 1 Sam.
2. 35.
2 Sam. 7. 11,
19, 27, 29.
1 Kings 2.
24. & 11. 38. Pa. 127. 1.

cir. 1573.
t Acta 7. 19.

a ch. 6. 20.
Numb. 28. 69.
1 Chron. 23.
14.

1571.

b Acta 7. 20.
Heb. 11. 23.

materials as butrushes in those parts, is evident from Isa. xviii. 2, and from the testimonies of Herod, Pliny, and others. Slime and pitch; slime within, and pitch without. She laid it in the flags, which grew near the river's side; partly that the vessel might not be carried away, and overturned by the violence of the winds and water, and partly that the child might be sooner discerned, and more easily taken out thence by any kind hand, which she hoped for.

^c ch. 15. 20. Num. 26. 59. 4 ° And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

His sister stood afar off, that she might not be thought to have laid the child there, or to be related to it.

^d Acts 7. 21. 5 ¶ And the ^d daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side; and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

This she might very probably guess, both from the circumstances in which she found him, and from the singular fairness and beauty of the child, far differing from the Egyptian hue; and she might certainly know it by its circumcision.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became ^e her son. And she called his name ¶ Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

He became her son, by adoption, Heb. xi. 24. For, as Philo reports, she, though long married, had no child of her own; and therefore treated him as her own, and gave him royal education and instruction. See Acts vii. 21.

Moses; it matters not whether this be an Egyptian name, or a Hebrew name answering to it in signification, seeing the meaning of it is here explained.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, ^f when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their ^g burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

In those days, whilst Moses lived at court, and was owned as the son of Pharaoh's daughter, and, as some write, designed to succeed Pharaoh in the throne. Moses was grown to maturity, being forty years old, Acts vii. 23. He went out unto his brethren; partly by natural affection and inclination, that he might learn the state of his brethren, and help them, as occasion should offer itself; and partly by Divine instigation, and in design that he might give some manifestation to them that he was raised and sent of God to deliver them; as may be gathered from Acts vii. 25.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he ^h slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

Looked this way and that way; not from conscience of guilt in what he intended, but from human and warrantable prudence.

This action of Moses was extraordinary, and is not to be justified by the common right of defending the oppressed, which belongs not to private persons, Rom. xii. 19; but only by his Divine and special vocation to be the ruler and deliverer of Israel. Which call of his, howsoever manifested, whether by his father, as Josephus saith, or immediately to himself, was evident to his own conscience, and he gave this as a signal to make it evident to the people.

13 And ⁱ when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

The next day after that achievement, he returns to execute the office in which God had set him as a judge, whose work it is both to destroy enemies, and to reconcile brethren.

14 And he said, ^k Who made thee † a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

Moses feared, through the weakness of his faith, which afterwards growing stronger, he feared not that which now he did fear, the wrath of the king, Heb. xi. 27. Distinguish the times, and scriptures agree which seemed to clash together.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But ^l Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by ^m a well.

He sought to slay Moses; not out of zeal to punish a murderer, but to secure himself from so dangerous a person, probably supposing that this was the man foretold to be the scourge of Egypt, and the deliverer of Israel.

16 ⁿ Now the ¶ priest of Midian had seven daughters: ^o and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

The priest of Midian; not of idols, for then Moses would not have married into his family; but of the true God; for some such were in those ancient times here and there, as appears by Melchisedek, though his manner of worshipping God might be superstitious and corrupt: or the Hebrew cohen may here signify a prince, or a potentate, as Gen. xli. 45. Nor doth the employment of his daughters contradict that translation, both because principalities were then many of them very small and mean, and because this employment then was esteemed noble, and worthy of great men's daughters, as appears from Gen. xxiv. 15; xxix. 6, &c.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and ^p watered their flock.

The shepherds drove them away, that they might enjoy the fruit of their labours, and make use of the water which they had drawn for their own cattle. Moses helped them; either by persuading them with fair words, or by force; for Moses was strong, and full of courage and resolution, wherewith the shepherds were easily daunted.

18 And when they came to ^q Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to day?

Their father; either, 1. Strictly, and then he is the same who elsewhere is called Jethro, Exod. iii. 1, and xviii. oft-times; and, as some think, Hobab, Judg. iv. 11. Or, 2. Largely, i. e. their grandfather, for such are oft called fathers, as Gen. xxxi. 43; 2 Kings xiv. 3, &c.; xvi. 2; xviii. 3; so he was the father of Jethro, or Hobab, Numb. x. 29.

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

They guessed him to be an Egyptian by his habit and speech, or he told them that he came from thence. Drew water; Heb. in drawing drew, which notes that he drew it very diligently and readily, which caused their quick return.

ⁱ Acts 7. 26.

^k Acts 7. 27, 28. [†] Heb. ^{a man, a prince.} Gen. 13. 8.

^l Acts 7. 29. Heb. 11. 27.

^m Gen. 24. 11. & 29. 2.

ⁿ ch. 3. 1. [¶] Or, ^{prince, as} Gen. 41. 45. ^o Gen. 24. 11. & 29. 10. ¹ Sam. 9. 11.

^p Gen. 29. 10.

^q Num. 10. 29. called also Jethro or Jether, ch. 3. 1.

& 4. 18. & 18. 1, &c.

^e Acts 7. 21.

¶ That is, drawn out.

^f Acts 7. 23.

^g Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26.

^h ch. 1. 11.

1531.

^h Acts 7. 24.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread.

r Gen. 31. 54. & 43. 25.

Heb. Have left the man thus, or now, at this time of the day, when it is so late, and he a stranger and traveller.

21 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter.

s ch. 4. 25. & 18. 2.

Moses was content; or, consented to his desire or offer. And so his present and temporary repose there is turned into a settled habitation. Moses married Zipporah not instantly, but after some years of acquaintance with the family, as may probably be gathered from the youngness and uncircumcisedness of one of his sons forty years after this, Exod. iv. 25. In which time, as Moses would not fail to instruct them in the knowledge of the true God, which he was able excellently to do, so it is likely he had succeeded therein in some measure, and therefore married Zipporah.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom: for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

¶ That is, a stranger here.

t ch. 18. 3.

u Acts 7. 29.

Heb. 11. 13, 14.

x ch. 7. 7.

Acts 7. 30.

y Num. 20. 16.

Deut. 26. 7.

Ps. 12. 5.

z Gen. 16. 20.

ch. 3. 9.

22. 23, 27.

Deut. 24. 15.

Jan. 5. 4.

23 ¶ And it came to pass in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

In process of time; Heb. in those many days, viz. in which he lived or abode there, i. e. after them. In is put for after here, as it is Numb. xxviii. 26; Isa. xx. 1; Mark xiii. 24, compared with Matt. xxiv. 29; Luke ix. 36. After forty years, as appears by comparing Exod. vii. 7, with Acts vii. 30. The king of Egypt died; and after him one or two more of his sons or successors, and the rest who sought for Moses's life, Exod. iv. 19. The children of Israel sighed, because though their great oppressor was dead, yet they found no relief, as they hoped to do.

24 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

a ch. 6. 5.

b ch. 6. 6.

Ps. 105. 4.

42. & 106. 43.

c Gen. 15. 14.

& 46. 4.

d ch. 4. 31.

1 Sam. 1. 11.

2 Sam. 16. 12.

Luke 1. 25.

† Heb.

knew.

e ch. 3. 7.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect unto them.

Heb. Knew them, so as to pity and help them; as words of knowledge are oft used, as Psal. i. 6; xxxi. 7. He who seemed to have rejected them, now owned them for his people, and came for their rescue.

CHAP. III.

Moses keeping Jethro's flock, cometh to mount Horeb, 1. There God appears to him in a burning bush, 2. Moses beholds it, 3. God calls to him out of the burning bush, 4; cautions him what to do, 5, 6. God seeth their afflictions, 7; promises them a happy deliverance, 8; sends Moses to Pharaoh, 10. He desires to be excused because unworthy, 11. God encourages him, 12, and directs him what to say to the children of Israel, 13, 14; makes his name known to Moses, 15; commands him to gather the elders of Israel, 16; and what he was to say to them, 17; likewise to Pharaoh, 18. Pharaoh's obstinacy, 19. God threatens the Egyptians, 20; and tells Moses with what plenty the Israelites should depart, 21, 22.

1491.

a ch. 2. 16.

b ch. 18. 5.

1 Kings 19. 8.

8.

Jethro was either the same with Reuel, or his son, who, upon his father's death, succeeded into his office. See Exod. ii. 18. To the backside of the desert, to its innermost parts, which were behind Jethro's habitation, and the former pastures, whither he went for fresh pastures. The mountain of God; so called, either as a high or eminent mountain; or from the vision of God here following; see Acts vii. 30; or by anticipation, from God's glorious appearance there, and giving the law from thence, Exod. xviii. 5; xix. 3: see also 1 Kings xix. 8. Horeb, called also Sinai, Exod. xix. 1; Acts vii. 30. Or Horeb was the name of the whole tract or row of mountains, and Sinai the name of that particular mountain where this vision happened, and the law was delivered. Or Horeb and Sinai were two several tops of the same mountain.

2 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

c Deut. 33. 16.

Is. 63. 9.

Acts 7. 30

The angel of the Lord; not a created angel, but the Angel of the covenant, Christ Jesus, who then and ever was God, and was to be man, and to be sent into the world in our flesh, as a messenger from God. And these temporary apparitions of his were presages or forerunners of his more solemn mission and coming, and therefore he is fitly called an Angel. That this Angel was no creature, plainly appears by the whole context, and specially by his saying, I am the Lord, &c. The angels never speak that language in Scripture, but, I am sent from God, and, I am thy fellow servant, &c. And it is a vain pretence to say that the angel, as God's ambassador, speaks in God's name and person; for what ambassador of any king in the world did ever speak thus, I am the king, &c.? Ministers are God's ambassadors, but if any of them should say, I am the Lord, they would be guilty of blasphemy, and so would any created angel be too, for the same reason. By a flame of fire was fitly represented God's majesty, and purity, and power. The bush was not consumed; which doubtless represented the condition of the church and people of Israel, who were now in the fire of affliction, yet so as that God was present with them, and that they should not be consumed in it, whereof this vision was a pledge.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

d Ps. 111. 2.

Acts 7. 31.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

e Deut. 33. 16.

He doubles the name, partly to show kindness and familiarity, and principally to make Moses more attentive to the business before him.

5 And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

f ch. 19. 12.

Josh. 5. 15.

Acts 7. 33.

Draw not nigh hither; keep thy distance; whereby he checks his curiosity and forwardness, and works him to the greater reverence and humility. Compare Exod. xix. 12, 21; Josh. v. 15. Put off thy shoes: this he requires as an act and token, 1. Of his reverence to the Divine Majesty, then and there eminently present. 2. Of his humiliation for his sins, whereby he was unfit and unworthy to appear before God; for this was a posture of humiliation, 2 Sam. xv. 30; Isa. xx. 2, 4; Ezek. xxiv. 17, 23. 3. Of purification from the filth of his feet, or ways, or conversation, that he might be more fit to approach to God. See John xiii. 10; Heb. x. 22. 4. Of his submission and readiness to obey God's will, for which reason slaves used to be bare-footed. Holy ground; with a relative holiness at this time, because of my special presence in it.

6 Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

g Gen. 28. 13.

ver. 15.

ch. 4. 5.

Matt. 22. 32.

Mark 12. 26.

Luke 20. 37.

Acts 7. 32.

h So 1 Kings 19. 13.

Is. 6. 1, 5. Neh. 9. 9. Ps. 106. 44. Acts 7. 34.

The God of thy fathers, engaged to them by covenant or promise, which I am now come to perform. He was afraid to look upon God, as other excellent servants of God have been, through the sense of their own meanness and sinfulness, and of God's majesty and holiness. See Gen. xvi. 13; xvii. 3; 1 Kings xix. 13; Isa. vi. 2, 5, &c.

7 ¶ And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and I have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows;

I have surely seen; Heb. In seeing I have seen, i. e. I have seen and observed it diligently, accurately, and certainly; for so much the doubling of the verb signifies.

8 And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

I am come down: this word notes God's manifestation of himself and his favour, and giving help from heaven. See Gen. xviii. 21.

It was a good land and a large, not only comparatively to Goshen, where they now dwelt, and to the number of the Israelites at that time; but absolutely, if you take the Land of Promise according to its true, and first, and ancient bounds of it, as you have them described, Gen. xv. 18; Deut. i. 7; xi. 24, and not according to those narrow limits to which they were afterwards confined for their unbelief, sloth, cowardice, and impiety. Flowing with milk and honey, i. e. abounding with the choicest fruits, both for necessity and for delight. The excellency and singular fruitfulness of this land, howsoever denied or disputed by some ill-minded persons, is sufficiently evident, 1. From express testimony, not only of Moses, Deut. viii. 7-9, but also of the spies who were sent to view it, and, though prejudiced against it, yet acknowledged it, Numb. xiii. 27; and of the holy prophets that lived long in it, as David, Psal. cvi. 24; Joel, chap. ii. 3; and Ezekiel, who calls it the glory of all lands, Ezek. xx. 15. Which if it had not been true, it is ridiculous to think that they durst have said and writ so, when the people with whom they contested, and thousands of other persons there and then living, were able to confute them. After them Josephus, and St. Hierom, and others since, who lived long in that land, have highly commended it. And whereas Strabo speaks of the barrenness of the soil about Jerusalem, that is true, but by himself it is limited to the compass of sixty furlongs from Jerusalem. And if at this day the land be now grown barren in a great measure, it is not strange, considering both the great neglect and sloth of the people as to the improvement of it, and the great wickedness of its inhabitants, for which God hath threatened to turn a fruitful land into barrenness, Psal. cvii. 34.

These people are diversely numbered, there are ten sorts reckoned, Gen. xv. 19-21, and seven, Deut. vii. 1, and here but six, because some of them were either destroyed or driven out of their land by others; or did by choice and design remove to some other place, as many in those times did, though it be not mentioned in Scripture; or by cohabitation and marriage with some of the other people, did make a coalition, and were incorporated with them, and so their name was swallowed up in the other; or because the names of some of these people, as particularly the Canaanites and the Amorites, were used sometimes more strictly, and sometimes more largely, so as to comprehend under them the other people, as the Gergashites, &c., whence it comes to pass that all the rest go under the names of the Canaanites, Gen. xiii. 7, and of the Amorites in some places of Scripture, as hath been showed.

9 Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me:

and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

The cry of the children of Israel; either in prayer, or rather forced by their oppressions, as the next clause explains it.

10 Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

What a mean, inconsiderable person am I! how unworthy and unfit for that employment! He was more forward in the work forty years ago, by reason of the fervours of his youth, his inexperience in affairs, the advantage of his power and interest in the court, by which he thought he could and should procure their deliverance; but now age had made him cool and considerate; the remembrance of his brethren's rejection of him, when he was a great man at court, took away all probability of prevailing with them to follow him, much more of prevailing with Pharaoh to let them go. Thus Moses falls into that distemper to which most men are prone, of measuring God by himself, and by the probabilities or improbabilities of second causes.

12 And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou shalt have brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

This shall be a token unto thee; either, 1. This vision; or, 2. The fulfilling of this promise, that I will be with thee by signs and wonders, and a strong hand; or rather, 3. This which here follows, that he and Israel should serve God there. Signs indeed are commonly given from things past or present, but sometimes from things to come, as here, and 1 Sam. ii. 34; Isa. vii. 13, 14; ix. 6, &c. Quest. How could Moses be confirmed in his present calling and work by a thing yet to come? Answe. Such signs, if they were single, and the only evidences of a man's calling, might leave some ground for suspicion; but when they are accompanied with other signs, as it is here and in the other places produced, they are of great use for the corroboration of a man's faith. Moses was otherwise assured of the presence, and power, and faithfulness of that God who spake to him, and was to expect more assurances that God would be with him to help him in and carry him through his work. And as an evidence that this work of bringing Israel out of Egypt should be completed, he gives him a promise that he should serve God in that place; which promise coming from God, he knew to be as infallibly certain, as if it were already come to pass, and therefore this was an apt mean to strengthen his faith in his present undertaking.

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

Since I must go to them in thy name, and thou hast variety of names and glorious titles, and some of them are ascribed to idols, not only by the Egyptians, but by too many of thy own people; what name shall I use, whereby both thou mayest be distinguished from false gods, and thy people may be encouraged to expect deliverance from thee?

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

I am that I am; a most comprehensive and significant name, and most proper for the present occasion. It notes, 1. The reality of his being; whereas idols are nothings, 1 Cor. viii. 4, all their divinity is only in the fancies and opinions of men. 2. The necessariness, eternity, and unchangeableness of his being; whereas all other beings once

i ch. 2.23,24.
k ch. 1. 11.
l Gen. 18. 21.
ch. 2. 23.

m Gen. 11.5,
7. & 18. 21.
& 50. 24.
n ch. 6. 6, 8.
& 12. 51.

o Deut. 1.25.
& 8. 7, 8, 9.
p ver. 17.
ch. 13. 5.
& 33. 3.
Num. 13. 27.
Deut. 26. 9.
15. Jer. 11.5.
& 32. 22.
Ezek. 20. 6.
q Gen. 15.18.

r Pa. 105. 26.
Mic. 6. 4.

u See ch. 6.
12.
1 Sam. 18.
16.
Is. 6. 5, 8.
Jer. 1. 6.

x Gen. 31. 3.
Deut. 31. 23.
Josh. 1. 5.
Rom. 8. 31.

v ch. 6. 3.
John 8. 58.
2 Cor. 1. 20.
Heb. 13. 8.
Rev. 1. 4.

were not, and, if he please, they shall be no more; and all their being was derived from him, and wholly depends upon him; and he only is by and from himself. 3. The constancy and certainty of his nature, and will, and word. The sense is, I am the same that ever I was; the same who made the promises to Abraham, &c., and am now come to perform them; who, as I can do what I please, so I will do what I have said. Heb. I shall be what I shall be. He useth the future tense; either, 1. Because that tense in the use of the Hebrew tongue comprehends all times, past, present, and to come, to signify that all times are alike to God, and all are present to him; and therefore what is here, I shall be, is rendered, I am, by Christ, John viii. 58. See Psal. xc. 4; 2 Pet. iii. 8. Or, 2. To intimate, though darkly, according to that state and age of the church, the mystery of Christ's incarnation. I shall be what I shall be, i. e. God-man; and I who now come in an invisible, though glorious, manner to deliver you from this temporal bondage, shall in due time come visibly, and by incarnation, to save you and all my people from a far worse slavery and misery, even from your sins, and from wrath to come. Of this name of God, see Rev. i. 4, 8; xvi. 5.

15 And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

z Ps. 135. 13.
Hos. 12. 5.

The Lord, Heb. Jehovah; a word of the same root and signification with I am. See Exod. vi. 3. This he adds, because God was best known to the Israelites by that name; and to show, that though he had given himself a new name, yet he was the same God. This is my memorial, by which I will be remembered, owned, and served by my people, and distinguished from all others. See Psal. cii. 12; cxxxv. 13.

a ch. 4. 28.

16 Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

b Gen. 50.
24.
ch. 2. 25. &
4. 31.
Luke 1. 68.

The elders; either by age, or rather by office and authority. For though they were all slaves to the Egyptians, yet among themselves they retained some order and government, and had doubtless some whom they owned as their teachers and rulers, as heads of tribes and families, &c.

c Gen. 15.
14, 15.
ver. 8.

17 And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

d ch. 4. 31.

e ch. 5. 1, 3.

18 And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath met with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

f Num. 23.
3, 4, 15, 16.

Hath met with us; hath appeared to us, expressing his displeasure for our neglect of him, and declaring his will that we should do what follows. Three days' journey; to Sinai, which, going the nearest way, was no further from Egypt; for here God had declared he would be served, ver. 12. Quest. Was not this deceitfully and unjustly spoken, when they intended to go quite away from him? Answer. No; for, 1. Pharaoh had no just right and title to them, to keep them in bondage, seeing they came thither only to sojourn for a time, and by Joseph had abundantly paid for their habitation there, and therefore they might have demanded a total dismission. 2. Moses doth not say any thing which is false, but only conceals a part of the truth; and he was not obliged to discover the whole truth to so cruel a tyrant, and so implacable an enemy. 3. Moses cannot be blamed, both because he was none of Pharaoh's subject, and because herein he follows the direction and command of his Master that sent him. And God surely was not obliged to acquaint Pharaoh with all his mind, but only so far as he pleased. And it pleased him for wise and just reasons to propose only this to Pharaoh, that his denial of so modest a request (which God foresaw) might make his tyranny more manifest, and God's vengeance upon him more just and remarkable. Sacrifice to the Lord our God, which they could not do freely and safely in Egypt, Exod. viii. 26.

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, nor, not by a mighty hand.

g ch. 6. 2. &
7. 4.
¶ Or, but by strong hand.

I am sure; I know it infallibly beforehand. No, not by a mighty hand; though he see and feel the miraculous and dreadful works of a strong, yea, almighty hand, yet he will not consent to your going; which the history makes good. Nor did he let them go till he could hold them no longer, till the fear of his own life, and the clamours of his people, forced him to give way to it. And yet after that he repents of his permission, and laboured to bring them back again. Others, but or except by a strong hand, i. e. except by my almighty power he be forced to it. Both translations come to the same sense.

20 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go.

h ch. 6. 6. &
7. 5. & 9. 15.
i ch. 7. 3. &
11. 9.
Deut. 6. 22.
Neh. 9. 10.
Ps. 135. 27.
& 135. 9.
Jer. 32. 20.
Acts 7. 36.
See ch. 7. to
ch. 13.
k ch. 12. 31.
l ch. 11. 3.
& 12. 36.
m Gen. 15.
14. ch. 11. 2.
& 12. 35, 36.

21 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

I will give this people favour, so that they shall readily grant what the Israelites desire. See Exod. xii. 36.

22 But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

n Job 27. 17.
Prov. 13. 22.
Ezek. 39. 10.
¶ Or, Egypt.

Whether this was just or no, see on Exod. xii. 36.

CHAP. IV.

Moses's objection, 1. The answer, 2. God turns his rod into a serpent, 3—5. He adds another sign, 6—8. And lest they would not believe, water is turned into blood, 9. Moses's objection, 10. God argues with him, 11. God's command and promise, 12. Moses's answer, 13. God is angry, and enjoins Aaron to the same employment, 14; tells what Aaron should be, and what Moses should do, 15—17. Moses returning to Jethro, craves leave to go to Egypt to see his brethren: Jethro's grant, 18. Moses having taken the rod of God, departs with his wife and children into Egypt, 20. God tells him what he should say to Pharaoh, 22, 23. God seeketh to kill Moses, 24. Zipporah with a sharp knife cuts off her son's foreskin, and what she said, 25, 26. God commands Aaron to meet Moses, 27. Moses declares to Aaron both what he had heard and seen, 28. They gather together the elders of Israel, 29; and Aaron speaks all the words and does all the signs which God commanded, 30. The people believe, 31.

AND Moses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

They will not believe me; which he conjectured both from reason, because the greatness and strangeness of the deliverance made it seem incredible; and their minds were so oppressed with cares and labours, that it was not likely they could raise them up to any such expectation; and from the experience which he had of them forty years before, when their deliverance by his means and interest at court seemed much more credible than now it did.

2 And the LORD said unto him, What ^{a ver. 17, 20.} is that in thine hand? And he said, ^a A rod.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it.

It became a serpent, i. e. was really changed into a serpent; whereby it was intimated what and how pernicious his rod should be to the Egyptians.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

The tail was the dangerous part; whereby God would try Moses's faith, and prepare him for the approaching difficulties.

5 That they may ^b believe that ^c the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

An imperfect sentence, to be thus completed, This thou shalt do before them, that they may believe. See the like in 2 Sam. v. 8, compared with 1 Chron. xi. 6; and Mark xiv. 49, compared with Matt. xxvi. 56.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous ^d as snow.

For whiteness. See Numb. xii. 10. Hereby God would suggest to them how soon he could weaken and destroy the hard and strong hand by which the Egyptians tyrannised over them. It might also be done to keep Moses humble and depending upon God, and to teach him and Israel to ascribe all the future miracles not to the hand of Moses, which was weak and liable to many distempers, but wholly to the Divine power and goodness.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again; and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, ^e it was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

To the voice of the first sign; to the voice or word of God delivered and confirmed by the first sign. For Moses did not make dumb shows before them, but acquainted them with the mind of God therein. Or he saith the voice, to note that God's works have a voice to speak to us, which we must diligently observe. See Micah vi. 9.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour ^f it upon the dry land: and ^g the water which thou takest out of the river ^h shall become blood upon the dry land.

The river Nile, well known to Moses, and called so by way of eminency, as Euphrates also is. Shall become, Heb. shall be, even shall be, i. e. it shall assuredly be so.

10 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, O my Lord, I am not ⁱ eloquent, neither

† heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken ^{† Heb. since yesterday, nor since the third day.} unto thy servant: but [†] I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue. ^{g ch. 6. 12. Jer. 1. 6.}

I am not eloquent; not able to deliver thy message acceptably and decently, either to Pharaoh or to the Israelites. Since thy appearance to me, thou hast made some change in my hand, but none in my tongue, but still I am, as I was, most unfit for so high an employment. But indeed he was therefore fit for it, as the unlearned apostles were for the preaching of the gospel, that the honour of their glorious works might be entirely given to God, and not to the instruments which he used.

11 And the LORD said unto him, ^h Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and I will be ⁱ with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

By my Spirit to direct and assist thee what and how to speak. Whence Moses, though he still seems to have remained slow in speech, yet was in truth mighty in words as well as deeds, Acts vii. 22. Compare Matt. x. 19, 20.

13 And he said, O my Lord, ⁱ send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send.

By one who is fitter for the work than I am. Heb. Send by the hand of him whom thou wilt send, i. e. should send; for the future tense oft signifies what one should do. See Gen. xx. 9; xxxiv. 7; Mal. i. 6; ii. 7. Thou usest according to thy wisdom to choose fit instruments, and to use none but whom thou dost either find or make fit for their employment, which I am not. Others, Send by the hand of Messiah, whom thou wilt certainly send, and canst not send at a fitter time, nor for better work. Moses and the prophets knew that Christ would come, but the particular time of his coming was unknown to them. See 1 Pet. i. 11.

14 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, ¹ he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

He cometh forth to meet thee, by my instigation and direction; which, because I see, thou art still diffident, I give thee for a new sign to strengthen thy belief that I will carry thee through this hard work.

15 And ^m thou shalt speak unto him, and ⁿ put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and ^o will teach you what ye shall do.

Put words in his mouth, i. e. instruct him what to speak, and command him freely and faithfully to express it. See Isa. li. 16; lix. 21.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and ^p thou shalt be to him instead of God.

To teach and command him. See Exod. vii. 1.

17 And thou shalt take ^q this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

Both those which I have already made thee to do, and others as I shall direct and enable thee.

18 ¶ And Moses went and returned to [†] Jethro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace.

b ch. 19. 9.
c ch. 3. 15.

d Num. 12.
10. 2 Kings
5. 27.

e Deut. 32.
38. Num.
12. 13, 14.
2 Kings 5. 14.
Matt. 8. 3.

f ch. 7. 19.

g Heb. shall be and shall be.

† Heb. a mess of words.

i Is. 50. 4.
Jer. 1. 9.
Matt. 10. 19.
Mark 13. 11.
Luke 12. 11.
12. & 21. 14, 15.

1 See Jonah 1. 3.
Or, shouldst.

1 ver. 27.
1 Sam. 10. 2, 3, 5.

m ch. 7. 1, 2.
n Num. 22.
38. & 23. 5, 12, 16.
Deut. 18. 18.
Is. 61. 16.
Jer. 1. 9.
o Deut. 5. 31.

p ch. 7. 1. & 18. 19.

q ver. 2.

† Heb. Jethro.

He pretends only a visit, and so indeed it was, and that no very long one neither: he knew that he should certainly return to this place, and there meet with his father-in-law. So that he did not deceive him, nor intended to do so, though he thought fit to conceal from him the errand upon which God sent him, lest his father or wife should attempt to hinder or discourage him from so difficult and dangerous an enterprise. Moses shows here a rare example, as well of modesty and humility, that such glorious and familiar converse with God, and the high calling to which God had advanced him, did neither make him forget the civility and duty which he owed to his father, nor make him break forth into public and vain-glorious boasting of such a privilege; as also of his piety and prudence, that he avoided all occasions and temptations to disobedience to God's command.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for ^{r ch. 2. 15, 23.} all the men are dead which sought thy life. ^{Matt. 2. 20.}

This seems to have been a second vision, whereby God calls him forth to the present and speedy execution of that command which before was more generally delivered. Which sought thy life, to wit, to take it away. See the like expression, 1 Sam. xxii. 23; 1 Kings xix. 14; Matt. ii. 20. God knew very well that one great cause of Moses's unwillingness to this undertaking was his carnal fear, though he was ashamed to profess it, and therefore gives him this cordial.

20 And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: and Moses took ^{s ch. 17. 9.} the rod of God in his hand. ^{Num. 20. 8, 9.}

His sons, Gershom, Exod. ii. 22, and Eliezer, Exod. xviii. 4, whom he intended to carry with him; but afterwards observing that they were like to be impediments to him in his great business, and being well assured that it would not be long ere he returned to them, he sent them back to Jethro, as may seem from Exod. xviii. 5. Upon an ass: one ass might be sufficient for her and her two children, because one of them was but little, ver. 25. Or ass may be put for asses, which changes of the numbers is very frequent in Scripture. The rod of God; his shepherd's rod so called, partly because it was appropriated to God's special service, to be the instrument in all his glorious works; and partly to show that whatsoever was done by that rod, was not done by any virtue in the rod, or in Moses's hand, but merely by the power of God, who was pleased for the greater confusion of his enemies to use so mean an instrument.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those ^{t ch. 3. 20.} wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine hand: ^{u cli. 7. 3, 13.} but ^{& 9. 12, 35. &} ^{10. 1. & 14. 8.} I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go. ^{Deut. 2. 30.} ^{Josh. 11. 20.} ^{Is. 63. 17.} ^{Jolin 12. 40.} ^{Rom. 9. 18.}

In thine hand, i. e. in thy power or commission, to be done by thy hand, and the rod in it. I will harden his heart, that he shall be unmerciful to all the groans and pressures of the Israelites, inexorable to the requests of Moses, unmovable and incorrigible by all my words and works. But God doth not properly and positively make men's hearts hard, but only privatively, either by denying to them, or withdrawing from them, that grace which alone can make men soft, and flexible, and pliable to the Divine will; as the sun hardens the clay by drawing out of it that moisture which made it soft; or by exposing them to those temptations of the world or the devil, which, meeting with a corrupt heart, are apt to harden it.

22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, ^{x Hos. 11. 1.} Thus saith the LORD, ^{Rom. 9. 4.} ^{2 Cor. 6. 18.} ^{Jer. 31. 9.} ^{Jam. 1. 18.} Israel is my son, ^{even} my firstborn:

By my choice and adoption. They are most dear to me, and reserved by me out of all nations to be my peculiar people; and therefore I will no longer suffer thee to invade my right, nor them to live in the neglect of my service.

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, ^{z ch. 11. 5.} I will slay thy son, ^{& 12. 29.} even thy firstborn.

I say unto thee; I command thee; for saying is put for commanding, Luke iv. 3; ix. 54; and in 1 Chron. xxi. 19, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 19. I will slay thy son; by which plague, coming after the rest, thou wilt be enforced to do what I advise thee now to do upon cheaper terms.

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD ^{a Num. 22.} met him, and ^{b Gen. 17. 14.} sought to ^{kill} him.

Met him, i. e. appeared to him in some visible shape, and sought to kill him. Whom? Moses, spoken of and to before. He offered and endeavoured to kill him, either by inflicting some sudden and dangerous disease or stroke upon him, or by showing himself in some threatening posture, possibly as the angel did to Balaam, and afterwards to David, with a drawn sword in his hand, ready to give him a deadly blow. The reason of this severity was not Moses's distrust of God, or delay in his journey, nor the bringing of his wife and children along with him, (which it was convenient for him to carry with him, both that his father might not think he intended to desert them, and for the greater assurance and encouragement of the Israelites, when they saw that he exposed his dearest relations to the same hazards with them all,) but the neglect of circumcising his child, which also the Lord some way or other signified to Moses and Zipporah, as plainly appears, 1. From Zipporah's following fact upon that occasion. 2. From the Lord's dismissal of Moses upon the circumcision of the child. 3. From the threatening of death, or cutting off, for this sin, Gen. xvii. 14, which, because there was now no magistrate to do it, God himself offers to execute it, as he sometimes saith he would do that in case. And this was a greater sin in Moses than in another man, and at this time than it had been before, because he understood the will and law of God about it better than any man, and God had lately minded him of that covenant of his with Abraham, &c., whereof circumcision was a seal; the blessings and benefits of which covenant Moses was now going to procure for himself and for his people, whilst he remained under the guilt of grossly neglecting the condition of it. Besides, what could be more absurd than that he should come to be a lawgiver, who lived in a manifest violation of God's law? or that he should be the chief ruler and instructor of the Israelites, whose duty it was to acquaint them with their duty of circumcising their children, and, as far as he could, to punish the wilful neglect of it, and yet at the same time be guilty of the same sin? or that he should undertake to govern the church of God, that could not well rule his own house? 1 Tim. iii. 5. And this was not only a great sin in itself, but a great scandal to the Israelites, who might by this great example easily be led into the same miscarriage; and moreover might not without colour of probability suspect the call of such a person, and conclude that God would not honour that man who should continue in such a visible contempt of his law. And therefore it is no wonder that God was so angry at Moses for this sin. Quest. How came Moses to neglect this evident duty? Ans. From Zipporah's averseness to and dread of that painful and, as she thought, dangerous ordinance of God, which she herself evidently discovers in this place; and the rather because of the experience which she had of it in her eldest son. And as she seems to have been a woman of an eager and passionate temper, so Moses was eminently meek and pliable, and in this matter too indulgent to his wife, especially in her father's house, and therefore he put it off till a more convenient season, when he might either persuade or overrule her therein; which was a great fault, for God had obliged all the children of Abraham not only to the thing, but to the time also, to do it upon the eighth day, which season Moses had grossly, and for some considerable time, slipped, and so had preferred the pleasing of his wife before his obedience to God.

25 Then Zipporah took ^{c Josh. 5. 2, 3.} a sharp ^{¶ Or, knife.} stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and ^{¶ Heb. made it touch.} cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

Perceiving the danger of her husband, and the cause of it, and her husband being disenabled from performing that work, whether by some stroke or sickness, or by the terror of so dismal and unexpected an apparition to him, and delays being highly dangerous, she thought it better to do it herself as well as she could, rather than put it off a moment longer; whether because the administration of that sacrament was not confined to any kind or order of persons, or because, if it was so, she did not apprehend it to be so, or because she thought this was the least of two evils, and that it was safer to commit a circumstantial error, than to continue in a substantial fault. A sharp stone, which she took as next at hand in that stony country. Let none think this strange, for not only this work, but the cutting off of that part, which some used to do, was commonly performed with a flint, or a sharp stone, as is expressly affirmed by Herodotus, l. 2; Plin. 35. 12. See also Juvenal, Sat. 6. and Martial. Epigram. 3. 18. But the word may be rendered, a sharp knife. See Josh. v. 2, 3. Cast it at his feet: the words are very short, and therefore ambiguous, and may be rendered, either thus, she cast herself at his feet; either, 1. At the feet of the angel, as a supplicant for her husband's life. But it is most probable that she directs this action and her following speech to the same person. Or, 2. The feet of her husband, to make request to him, that she and her children might depart from him, and return to her father, which also he granted. But neither was she of so humble a temper, nor at this time in so mild a frame, as to put herself into such a lowly posture to her husband; nor was she likely to present her humble supplication to him, to whom at the same time she showed such scorn and indignation. Or rather thus, she cast it at his, i. e. her husband's, feet: it, either the child; but that being tender, and now in great pain, she would not use it so roughly: or rather the foreskin cut off, or at least the blood which came from it; which she did in spite and anger against her husband, as the cause of so much pain to the child, and grief to herself. A bloody husband art thou to me: this some think she spake to the child, whom she calls her spouse, as some late rabbins affirm the infant used to be called, when it was circumcised, though they bring no competent proof for this usage; or her son, as the Hebrew word chatham signifies. But indeed that signifies only a son-in-law, as 1 Sam. xviii. 18, which is not true nor proper here. Yet some make these to be the form or solemn words used in circumcision, Thou art a spouse, or a son of blood, to me, i. e. made so to me by the blood of circumcision. But it doth not appear that this was the usual form. Nor was it likely that she, being a Midianitish, not a Hebrew woman, and doing this suddenly, and in a rage, should be so expert to know, and so punctual to use, the right form of words, when she did not use a fit and decent carriage in the action, as appears by her casting it at his feet. It is therefore more probable she spoke thus to her husband. And because she durst not accuse God, the author of this work, she falls foul upon her husband as the occasion of it, and as a costly and bloody husband to her, whose endangered life she was forced to redeem with blood, even the blood of her little child, by which as he received a new life after a sort, so she did anew, and the second time, espouse him; whence she calls him chatham, which properly signifies a spouse, not a husband.

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

So he let him go; or, he, i. e. God, or the destroying angel sent from God, departed from him, i. e. from Moses, and removed the tokens of God's indignation, the sickness or stroke laid upon him.

Zipporah both repeats and amplifies her former censure, and reproacheth not only her husband, but also God's ordinance; which perverse and obstinate spirit her husband observing in her, and wisely forecasting how much disturbance she might give him in his great and difficult work in Egypt, he thought fit to send her and her children back to her father, as appears from Exod. xviii. 1—3. In the Hebrew it is, because of the circumcisions, to wit, of her two sons, who possibly were both circumcised at this time, though it be not so expressed; but one being mentioned for an example, we are left to suppose the like concerning the other; or the circumcision of this child brings the other to her remembrance, and: so she upbraids him with both. Only this doth more provoke her than it seems the other did, because she was forced to do this speedily, and with her own hands, and that to a tender infant; whereas the elder peradventure was circumcised when he was more grown and strong, and able to bear the pain. Let none think it strange that Zipporah should quarrel so much at circumcision, because the Midianites were descended from Abraham, and therefore were circumcised. For if they were so, it was done when they were grown up, about the thirteenth year of their age, from the example of Ishmael, who was circumcised at that age. But indeed it is more likely that those people, being cast out of God's covenant, as to the benefit of it, would, and did in a little time, throw off the sign of it, as having much more of pain and danger in it, than of use and privilege.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness ^{d ver. 14.} to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in ^{e ch. 3. 1.} the mount of God, and kissed him.

28 And Moses told Aaron all the ^{f ver. 15, 16.} words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the ^{g ver. 8, 9.} signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶ And Moses and Aaron ^{h ch. 3. 16} went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel:

All of them whom they could easily and quickly bring together, or all that were in those parts. Of those elders, see Exod. iii. 16; xxiv. 1, 9; Numb. xi. 16.

30 ^{i ver. 16.} And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

Thus beginning to execute the office which God had put upon him; which was to be Moses's mouth, or spokesman. i. e. Aaron did the signs as Moses's minister, or by the command and direction of Moses.

31 And the people ^{k ch. 3. 18 ver. 8, 9.} believed: and when they heard that the LORD had ^{l ch. 3. 16. m ch. 2. 25. n Gen. 24. 26. o ch. 12. 27. p 1 Chr. 29. 20.} visited the children of Israel, and that he ^q had looked upon their affliction, then ^r they bowed their heads and worshipped.

Had visited, i. e. taken cognizance of their cause and condition, and resolved to deliver them, they bowed their heads and worshipped; acknowledging and adoring the kindness and faithfulness of God therein.

CHAP. V.

Moses and Aaron entreateth Pharaoh to let the people go, 1. Pharaoh's blasphemous refusal, 2. Chides Moses and Aaron for their request, 4. Pharaoh, seeing the Israelites to be many, 5, commands the task-masters and officers to increase their bondage, 6—9. The task-masters go and do as Pharaoh commands, 10, 11. The scattering of the people throughout Egypt, 12. The task-masters' cruelty to the officers of the Israelites, 14. The officers' complaint to Pharaoh, 15, 16. He upbraids them with idleness, 17. His harsh answer, 18. The officers of the children of Israel meet Moses and Aaron, and blame them, 20, 21. Moses returns and complains to God, 22, 23.

AND afterward Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold ^{a ch. 10. 8.} a feast unto me in the wilderness.

Moses and Aaron went in, and with them some of the elders of Israel, as may seem from Exod. iii. 18, though here only the two chiefs be mentioned. Or, because Moses did not seem to be satisfied with the assistance of the elders before offered him, Exod. iii. 18, God was pleased to give him a more acceptable assistant in their stead, even Aaron his brother, Exod. iv. 14. Told Pharaoh: either both successively told him; or Aaron did it immediately, and with his tongue, Moses by his interpreter, and by his command. Or, offer a sacrifice, as they express it, ver. 3, and chap. x. 9. For both went together, and a good part of many sacrifices was spent in feasting before the Lord, and unto the honour of the Lord. See Deut. xii. 6, 7, 11, 12.

^{b 2 Kings 19. 35. Job 21. 15. c ch. 3. 19.} 2 And Pharaoh said, ^b Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, ^c neither will I let Israel go.

I am the sovereign lord of Egypt, and I own no superior here.

^{d ch. 3. 18.}

3 And they said, ^d The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

Hath met with us, i. e. hath appeared to us lately, and laid this command upon us. Others, is called upon us, i. e. his name is called upon us, or we are called by his name. But why should Moses so solemnly tell that to Pharaoh which all the people knew, to wit, that the Hebrews did worship the God of the Hebrews? And our translation is confirmed by comparing this with Exod. iii. 18, where this very message is prescribed. Lest he fall upon us; lest he punish, either us, if we disobey his command, or thee, if thou hinderest us from obeying it: but this latter they only imply, as being easily gathered from the former.

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your ^e burdens.

^{e ch. 1. 11.} Either, 1. Ye, the elders of Israel, who are here come with Moses and Aaron: see ver. 1. Or, 2. Ye, Moses and Aaron. So far am I from granting the liberty which you desire for the people, that as a just punishment upon you for your seditious attempt, I command you also to go with the rest, and to take your share in their burdens, and to perform the task which shall be required of you. And that so cruel a tyrant did not proceed further against them, must be ascribed to the mighty power of God, who governs the spirits and restrains the hands of the greatest kings when he pleaseth.

^{f ch. 1. 7, 9.} 5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are ^f many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

The Israelites in this land are very numerous, and therefore it were a madness in me to permit them all to meet and go together as you desire, which may tend to the ruin of my whole kingdom, and probably it is designed by you to that purpose. Or, therefore your injury to me is the greater, in attempting to rob me of the benefit of their labours. This I prefer, because it suits best with the following words.

^{g ch. 1. 11.} 6 And Pharaoh commanded the same day the ^g taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying,

The task-masters were Egyptians, and the officers were Israelites, under-officers to them, ver. 14, 15, 19.

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

The straw was used either to mingle with the clay, that it might not be too brittle; or to cover the clay when it was formed into bricks, that the heat of the sun might not dry them too much, which might easily be done in that hot country; or for fuel, either wholly or in part, to burn their bricks with, straw being abundant there, and much used for that purpose.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 † Let there more work be laid upon ^{† Heb. Let the work be heavy upon the men.} the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.

The words of Moses and Aaron, which are vain or false, i. e. which they falsely pretend to come from God, when it is only an ill design of their own to advance themselves by raising sedition.

10 ¶ And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get your straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

All the land of Egypt, i. e. all that part of it; which is a very usual synecdoche.

13 And the taskmasters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your † daily ^{† Heb. a matter of a day in his day.} tasks, as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

i. e. The Egyptian task-masters, who, by sending us abroad to gather straw, hinder us from doing the work which they require; and so they are both unjust and unreasonable. They charge the task-masters, not the king, either in civility and duty, casting his fault upon the instruments; or because they did not know, or at best not believe, that this was the king's act. Others, Thy people, i. e. the Egyptians, make themselves guilty, and will bring the vengeance of God upon them for their cruelty.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now, and work; for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not diminish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

Did see that they were in evil case, or, looked upon them with sadness, or with an evil eye, i. e. with a sorrowful and angry countenance, as those that could obtain no relaxation for themselves or for their brethren.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

They, i. e. the officers who went to pour out their complaints to Pharaoh, ver. 15.

21 ^{h ch. 4. 9.} And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our savour † to be abhorred ^{† Heb. to drink. Gen. 34. 31. 1 Sam. 15. 4. & 27. 12. 2 Sam. 10. 6. 1 Chro. 19. 6.} in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

To give them what they have long sought and thirsted after, to wit, an occasion to destroy and root us out.

22 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

Moses returned unto the Lord, to expostulate with him, and pray to him. To the people he saith nothing, but meekly passeth by their severe censures, as forced from them by intolerable oppression; and because their minds being now embittered and exasperated, they were incapable of admonition. Wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people, by giving occasion to their greater bondage? He expostulates the matter with God, not from pride and arrogance, as one that would censure and condemn his actions, but from zeal for God's glory, and his people's happiness, as one that would prevail with God to relieve them; though it must be confessed that Moses exceeded his bounds, being transported with grief and passion, which the gracious God was pleased to pass by.

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; †neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

In thy name; not of my own head, but by thy command and commission. Neither hast thou delivered thy people, according to thy promise and mine, and thy people's just expectation.

CHAP. VI.

God encourageth Moses, 1; reneweth his covenant, confirms it by his name Jehovah, 3-8. Their unbelief, 9. God commands Moses to speak to Pharaoh to let Israel go, 10-13. The genealogy of Reuben, 14; of Simeon, 15; of Levi, 16; of Aaron, 23. Moses and Aaron spake to Pharaoh to let the children of Israel go, 27.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for *with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand *shall he drive them out of his land.

With a strong hand; being compelled to do so by my powerful and terrible works.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am || the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of *God Almighty, but by my name *JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

Quest. How is this true, when God was known to them, and called by the name Jehovah? Gen. xv. 7; xxvi. 24, &c. Answ. 1. He speaks not of the letters or syllables, but of the thing signified by that name. For that denotes all his perfections, and, amongst others, the eternity, constancy, and immutability of his nature and will, and the infallible certainty of his word and promises. And this, saith he, though it was believed by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, yet it was not experimentally known to them; for they only saw the promises afar off, Heb. xi. 13. Answ. 2. This negative expression may be understood comparatively, as many others are, as Gen. xxxii. 29; Matt. ix. 13; 1 Cor. i. 17: q. d. They knew this but darkly and imperfectly, which will now be made known more clearly and fully.

4 *And I have also established my covenant with them, †to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And *I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, †I am the LORD, and †I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will *redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments:

With a stretched-out arm, i. e. my almighty power. A metaphor from a man that stretcheth out his arm, and puts forth all his strength to give the greater blow. With great judgments, i. e. punishments justly inflicted upon them, as the word judging and judgments is oft used, as Gen. xv. 14; 2 Chron. xx. 12; Prov. xix. 29.

7 And I will †take you to me for a people, and †I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out *from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

Will take you to me for a people, i. e. for my people; ye shall no longer be the people and slaves of the king of Egypt, but my people and servants, whom I will bless and preserve. And I will be to you a God, to judge and deliver you.

8 And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did †swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage: I am the LORD.

And therefore have authority and power to dispose of lands and kingdoms as I please; and faithful to give you what I have promised.

9 ¶ And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: *but they hearkened not unto Moses for †anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

Their minds were so oppressed with their present burdens and future expectations, that they could not believe nor hope for any deliverance, but deemed it impossible; and having been once deceived in their hopes, they now quite despaired, and thought their entertainment of new hopes, or use of further endeavours, would make their condition worse, as it had done.

10 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Go in, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

12 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have *not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, *who am of uncircumcised lips?

i. e. Of polluted lips. Uncircumcision being a great defect and blemish, whereby men were rendered profane, contemptible, and unfit for many services and privileges, may note any defect, whether moral, and of the spirit, or natural, and of the body. So here it notes Moses's inability to clothe God's commands in such words as might prevail with Pharaoh. But this was a great weakness of faith, as if God could not effect his purpose, because the instrument was unfit.

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

14 ¶ These be the heads of their fathers' houses: *The sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel; Hanoeh, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi: these be the families of Reuben.

This genealogy he describes here, to show the lineage of Moses and Aaron, by whom this great work was to be effected. Only he premiseth in brief the genealogy of his two elder brethren, Reuben and Simeon, to make way for the third, which he intended more largely to insist upon. And he mentions them rather than any other, either to ad-

+ Heb. delivering thou hast not delivered.

a ch. 3. 19.
b ch. 11. 1. & 12. 31, 33, 39.

|| Or. JEHOVAH.
c Gen. 17. 1. & 35. 11. & 48. 3. d ch. 3. 14. Ps. 68. 4. & 88. 18.
John 8. 58. Rev. 1. 4.

g ch. 2. 24.

h ver. 2, 8, 29.
i ch. 3. 17. & 7. 4.
Deut. 26. 8. Ps. 61. 6. & 136. 11, 12.

k ch. 15. 13. Deut. 7. 8. 1 Chr. 17. 21. Neh. 1. 10.

l Deut. 4. 20. & 7. 6. & 14. 2. & 26. 18. 2 Sam. 7. 24. m Gen. 17. 7. n ch. 29. 45. 45. Rev. 21. 7. o ch. 5. 4, 5. Ps. 61. 6.

+ Heb. lift up my hand. See Gen. 14. 22. Deut. 32. 40. o Gen. 15. 18. & 26. 3. & 28. 13. & 35. 12.

p ch. 5. 21. + Heb. earnest, or, strictness.

q ver. 9. r ver. 30. ch. 4. 10. Jer. 1. 16.

s Gen. 46. 9. 1 Chron. 5. 3.

vance the favour of God in preferring that tribe before the descendants of their elder brethren; or to show that, although the parents were sharply censured, and rather cursed than blessed by Jacob, Gen. xlix., yet their posterity was not rejected by God, but received to mercy, and admitted to the same privilege with their brethren.

^t 1 Chron. 4. 24. Gen. 46. 10. 15 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman: these are the families of Simeon.

^u Gen. 46. 11. Num. 3. 17. 1 Chron. 6. 1, 16. 16 ¶ And these are the names of the sons of Levi according to their generations; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari: and the years of the life of Levi were an hundred thirty and seven years.

From each of which proceeded a distinct generation or family called by their father's name.

^x 1 Chron. 6. 17. & 23. 7. 17 *The sons of Gershon; Libni, and Shimi, according to their families.

^y Num. 26. 57. 1 Chron. 6. 2, 18. 18 And *the sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel: and the years of the life of Kohath were an hundred thirty and three years.

^z 1 Chron. 6. 19. & 23. 21. 19 And *the sons of Merari; Mahali and Mushi: these are the families of Levi according to their generations.

^a ch. 2. 1, 2. Num. 26. 59. 20 And *Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife; and she bare him Aaron and Moses: and the years of the life of Amram were an hundred and thirty and seven years.

His father's sister; or rather, kinswoman, or cousin, or niece; for so this Hebrew word is sometimes used, as appears from Jer. xxxii. 8, 9, 12. Object. She is called the daughter of Levi, Exod. ii. 1. Answer. Even nieces are oft called daughters, as we have showed. See Luke i. 5, and the notes on Exod. ii. 1.

^b Num. 16. 1. 1 Chron. 6. 37, 38. 21 ¶ And ^bthe sons of Izhar; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zithri.

^c Lev. 10. 4. Num. 3. 30. dir. 1530. d Ruth 4. 19, 20. 22 And *the sons of Uzziel; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Zithri.

^e Lev. 10. 1. Num. 3. 2. & 26. 60. 1 Chron. 6. 3. & 24. 1. 23 And Aaron took him Elisheba, daughter of ^dAmminadab, sister of Naashon, to wife; and she bare him ^eNadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

Amminadab; a prince of the tribe of Judah, Numb. i. 7; ii. 3. Marriages were not yet confined to their own tribes; and when they were, the Levites seem to have had this privilege, that they might marry a daughter of any other tribe, because indeed the reason of that law did not concern them, there being no danger of confusion or loss of inheritance on their part. And especially there were many marriages made between the tribes of Judah and Levi, to signify that both were united in Christ, who was to be both king and priest. It is observable, that Moses is here silent in his own progeny, but gives a particular account of his brother's, not only from his great humility and modesty, which shines forth in many other passages, but because it was of more concernment; and the honour of priesthood given to Aaron was to be hereditary, and peculiar to his seed, and therefore it was necessary they should be exactly known; whereas Moses's honour and government was only personal, and did not pass to his children.

^f Num. 26. 11. 24 And the ^fsons of Korah; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph; these are the families of the Korhites.

^g Num. 25. 7, 11. Josh. 24. 33. 25 And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and ^gshe bare him Phinehas: these are the heads of the fathers of the Levites according to their families.

^h ver. 13. 26 These are that Aaron and Moses, ^hto whom the LORD said, Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their ⁱarmies. ⁱ ch. 7. 4. & 12. 17, 51. Num. 23. 1.

i. e. According to their numerous families, which were equal to great armies, and which went out of Egypt like several armies in military order, and with great power. See Exod. xii. 41, 51; xiii. 18; xiv. 8.

27 These are they which ^kspake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, ^kto bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron. ^k ch. 5. 1, 3. & 7. 10. 1 ver. 13. ch. 32. 7. & 33. 1. Ps. 77. 20.

28 ¶ And it came to pass on the day when the LORD spake unto Moses in the land of Egypt, 29 That the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ^m"I am the LORD: ^mspeak thou unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say unto thee. ^m ver. 2. 11. ch. 7. 2.

30 And Moses said before the LORD, Behold, ⁿ"I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me? ⁿ ver. 12. ch. 4. 10.

CHAP. VII.

God encourages Moses to speak to Pharaoh, 1. God foretells the hardness of Pharaoh's heart, that he might multiply his wonders in Egypt, 3, 4, to declare to the Egyptians that he only is the Lord, 5. Moses and Aaron obey God's command, 6. Their age, 7. God commands them to show a miracle for the confirmation of their authority, 8, 9. Their rod turned into a serpent, 10. The magicians do the same, 11. Aaron's rod devoureth theirs, 12. Pharaoh is hardened, as the Lord had said, 13; and refuseth to let the people go, 14. God denounces judgments on the Egyptians, 17, 18. Commands Moses and Aaron to stretch out their hands over the waters, 19. The waters are turned into blood, 20. The fish die, and the river stinks, 21. The magicians do the same, whereby Pharaoh's heart is hardened, 22. The means they used against this plague, 24. The continuance of it, 25.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee ^aa god to Pharaoh: and Aaron thy brother shall be ^bthy prophet. ^a ch. 4. 16. Jer. 1. 10. b ch. 4. 16.

To represent my person, to act like God, by requiring his obedience to thy commands, and by punishing his disobedience with such punishments as none but God can inflict, to which end thou shalt have my omnipotent assistance. i. e. Thy interpreter, or spokesman, as chap. iv. 16, to deliver thy commands to Pharaoh.

2 Thou ^cshalt speak all that I command thee: and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land. ^c ch. 4. 15.

Heb. And he will send or dismiss, to wit, at last, being forced to it. Success shall attend your endeavours.

3 And ^dI will harden Pharaoh's heart, and ^dmultiply my ^esigns and my wonders in the land of Egypt. ^d ch. 4. 21. e ch. 11. 9. f ch. 4. 7.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, ^gthat I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt ^hby great judgments. ^g ch. 10. 1. & 11. 9. h ch. 6. 6.

5 And the Egyptians ⁱshall know that I am the LORD, when I ⁱstretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them. ⁱ ver. 17. ch. 8. 22. & 14. 4, 18. Ps. 9. 16. k ch. 3. 20.

6 And Moses and Aaron ^jdid as the LORD commanded them, so did they. ^j ver. 2.

An emphatical repetition, to show their courage in attempting to say and do such things to so great a monarch in his own dominions, and their fidelity in the execution of all God's commands.

1491.
m Deut. 28.
5. & 31. 2.
& 34. 7.
Acte 7. 23.
30.
7 And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

The ages of Moses and Aaron here, as of Levi and Kohath chap. vi. 16, 18, and before them of Jacob and Joseph, are so exactly set down, that thence we may understand the accomplishment of God's prediction, Gen. xv. 13, and the time of Israel's being in Egypt.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, "Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, "Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

Say unto Aaron, by whose hands this and other miracles were to be done, and not by Moses immediately; partly to take off the suspicion that these miracles were wrought by some magical artifice of Moses; and partly for the greater honour of Moses, that he might be what God had said, ver. 1, a god to Pharaoh, who not only could work wonders himself, but also give power to others to do so. Take thy rod: the same rod is called the rod of God, and of Moses, and of Aaron, here and ver. 12, because it was appointed, and as it were consecrated by God, and used both by Moses and Aaron in their great works. And this rod Moses ordinarily held in his hand, and delivered it to Aaron upon occasion for the execution of his commands. A serpent; Heb. a dragon, which is a great serpent. Others, a crocodile, to whose jaws he had exposed the Israelitish infants.

10 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

11 Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

Under the general title of wise men he seems to comprehend all who were most eminent in any sort of wisdom, either natural, or civil, or divine, who were all called to give their opinion and advice in these matters. The magicians, the same now called sorcerers, who acted by the power of the devil, whom by certain rites and ceremonies they engaged to their assistance. Of these the two chief were Jannes and Jambres, 2 Tim. iii. 8. They also did in like manner, in show and appearance, which was not difficult for the devil to do, either by altering the air and the spectators' sight, and by causing their rods both to look and move like serpents; or by a sudden and secret conveyance of real serpents thither, and removing the rods. Nor is it strange that God permitted those delusions, partly because it was a just punishment upon the Egyptians for their horrid and manifold idolatry, and barbarous cruelty towards the Israelites, and their other wickedness; and partly because there was a sufficient difference made between their impostures, and the real miracles wrought by Moses and Aaron, as appears from the next-verse, and from chap. viii. 18, and from other passages. And this is a great evidence of the truth of Scripture story, and that it was not written by fiction and design. For if Moses had written these books to deceive the world, and to advance his own reputation, (as some have impudently said,) it is ridiculous to think that he would have put in this, and many other passages, which might seem so much to eclipse his honour, and the glory of his works.

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

They became serpents; either, 1. In appearance. For the Scripture oft speaks of things otherwise than they are, because they seem to be so. And therefore as the devil appearing to Saul in the likeness of Samuel is called Samuel; so may these rods upon the same account be called serpents, because through diabolical illusion they seemed to be so. Or, 2. Really, in manner expressed, ver. 11. Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods; by which it was evident, either that Aaron's rod was turned into a real serpent, because it had the real properties and effects of a serpent, viz. to devour; or, at least, that the God of Israel was infinitely more powerful than the Egyptian idols or devils.

13 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

He, the Lord, to whom this act of hardening is frequently ascribed both in this book and elsewhere.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, "Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

He is obstinate, and resolved in his way, so as neither my word nor works can make any impression upon him.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

He goeth out unto the water, i. e. the Nile, whither he went at that time, either for his recreation, or to pay his morning worship to that river, which the Egyptians had in great veneration, as Plutarch testifies.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, "The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldst not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to blood.

Because thou saidst, Who is the Lord? and, I know not the Lord, chap. v. 2, thou shalt know him experimentally, and to thy cost. Behold, I will smite, viz. by Aaron's hand, who shall do it by my command and direction. Thus Pilate is said to give Christ's body to Joseph, Mark xv. 45, because he commanded it to be delivered by others to him. The same action is ascribed to the principal and instrumental cause. The river Nile, which was one of their principal gods; and therefore it was inexcusable in them, that they would not renounce those feeble gods, which were unable to help not only their worshippers, but even themselves, nor embrace the service and commands of that God whose almighty power they saw and felt. They shall be turned to blood, which was a very grievous plague to them; both because it was an eternal dishonour to their religion, and because from hence they had both their drink, Deut. xi. 10, 11; Jer. ii. 18, and their meat, Numb. xi. 5; for greater and lesser cattle they would not eat, Exod. viii. 26. And it was a very proper punishment for them, who had made that river an instrument for the execution of their bloody design against the Israelitish infants, Exod. i. 22.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians shall lothe to drink of the water of the river.

Therefore the Israelites were free from this plague, and those branches of Nilus which they used were uncorrupted, when all others were turned into blood. Shall lothe, or, shall weary themselves, in running hither and thither in hopes of finding water in some parts or branches of the river.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon † Heb. gathering of their waters.

all their †pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

Not that he was to go to every pool to use this ceremony there, but he stretched his hand and rod over some of them in the name of all the rest, which he might signify either by his words, or by the various motions of his rod several ways.

g ch. 17. 5. 20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he ^glifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the ^hwaters that were in the river were turned to blood.

h Pa. 78. 44. & 105. 29.

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians ⁱcould not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

i ver. 18.

22 ^kAnd the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; ^las the LORD had said.

k ver. 11. Wied. 17. 7.

l ver. 3.

It was not difficult for the devil to convey blood speedily and unperceivably, and that in a great quantity, which might suffice to infect with a bloody colour those small parcels of water which were left for them to show their art in. Quest. Whence could they have water, when all their waters were turned into blood? Ans. It might be had, either, 1. By rain, which at that time God was pleased to send down either for this purpose, or to mitigate the extremity of the plague, or for other reasons known to him, though not to us. For that rain sometimes falls in Egypt, though not much nor often, is affirmed by ancient writers and late travellers. Or, 2. From Goshen, which was not far from the court, or from some houses of the Israelites, who dwelt amongst the Egyptians, as appears from many places of this history, and who were free from these plagues. See Exod. viii. 22; ix. 26; x. 23; xii. 13, &c. Or, 3. From the pits which they digged, ver. 24. Or, 4. From some branch of Nilus, or some vessels in their houses, whose waters were not yet changed; for this change might be wrought not suddenly, (which is not affirmed in this relation,) but by degrees, which God might so order for this very end, that the magicians might have matter for the trial of their experiment.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

He did not seriously consider it, nor the causes or cure of this plague, and was not much affected with it, because he saw this fact exceeded not the power of his magicians.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

It is not much material to us, whether they lost their labour, and found only blood there, as Josephus affirms; or whether they succeeded and found water there, which seems more probable, because these come not within the compass of Moses's commission, ver. 17, 19, 20, or whether they found the water something purified and less bloody, though mixed with blood. But it is observable, that though the devil could do something which might increase the plague, or imitate it, yet he could do nothing to remove it.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

Seven days were fulfilled, ere all the waters of Egypt were perfectly free from this infection. Quest. How could the Egyptians subsist so long without water? Ans. 1. Philo tells us that many of them died of this plague. 2. As the plague might come on, so it might go off, by degrees; and so the water, though mixed with blood, might give them some relief. 3. The juices of herbs, and other liquors, which were untouched with this plague, might refresh them. 4. They might have some water, either from their pits, or by rain from heaven, as was said before; or from Goshen; for though it be said that the blood was in all their vessels, ver. 19, yet it is not said that all that should afterwards be put into them should be turned into blood.

CHAP. VIII.

God sends Moses to Pharaoh that he might let the people go, 1. He threatens his denial with a judgment of frogs, 2—4. Aaron stretching forth his rod, Egypt is covered with frogs, 6. The magicians do so, 7. Pharaoh calls Moses and Aaron to entreat the Lord to remove the frogs, and promises them to let them go, 8. Moses and Aaron cry to the Lord to take away the frogs, 12; which he did, 13. Pharaoh's heart still hardened, 15. Aaron stretching forth his rod smites the dust, which becomes lice, 17. The magicians attempt the same, but could not, 18; which extorted a confession from them that this is the finger of God, yet Pharaoh is hardened, 19. Scarms of flies threatened, 20—23. God fulfils his word, 24. Pharaoh sends for Moses and Aaron, and permits a sacrifice in Egypt, 25. Moses would go three days into the wilderness, 27. Pharaoh permits that, but not far, 28. The flies are removed, 29—31. Pharaoh is hardened, 32.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, ^athat they may serve me.

^b2 And if thou ^brefuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with ^cfrogs:

All thy land which is within thy borders; a synecdoche; so that word is used also Exod. x. 14, 19; 1 Kings i. 3; Psal. cxlvii. 14; Jer. xv. 13. So the gate and the wall are put for the city to which they belong, Gen. xxii. 17; Amos i. 7, 10, 14.

³ And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into ^dthy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy ^ekneading-troughs:

The river; under which are comprehended all other rivers, streams, and ponds, as appears from ver. 5. But the river Nilus is mentioned, because God would make that an instrument of their misery in which they most gloried, Ezek. xxix. 3, and to which they gave divine honours, and which was the instrument of their cruelty against the Israelites, chap. i. 22. Into thy bed-chamber; either because God made the doors and windows to fly open, which it is easy to believe concerning God, seeing that this hath been many times done by evil angels; or because whensoever men entered into any house, or any room of their house, which their occasions would oft force them to do, the frogs, being always at their heels in great numbers, would go in with them. This plague was worse than the former, because it was more constant and more general; for the former was only in the waters, and did only molest them when they went to drink or use the water; but this infected all liquors, and all places, and at all times, and annoyed all their senses with their filthy substance, and shape, and noise, and stink, and mingled themselves with their meats, and sauces, and drinks, and crawling into their beds made them restless. And many of them probably were of a more ugly shape and infectious nature than ordinary.

⁴ And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

Not upon the Israelites, whom he hereby exempts from the number of Pharaoh's people and subjects, and owns them for his peculiar people. The frogs did not only invade their houses, but assault their persons, which is not strange, considering that they were armed with a Divine commission and power.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, e ch. 7. 19. Say unto Aaron, "Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

The Lord spake unto Moses, by inward instinct or suggestion to his mind; for he was now in the king's presence.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt. f Ps. 78. 45. & 105. 30.

7 ¶ And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt. g ch. 7. 11. Wisd. 17. 7.

Nor was it hard for the devil to produce them out of their own spawn, and the slime of the river.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, h ch. 9. 28. & 10. 17. Num. 21. 7. 1 Kings 11. 25. Acts 8. 24. "Intreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, i Or, Have this honour over me, &c. ¶ Or, against whom. ¶ Heb. to cut off. ¶ Glory over me: ¶ when shall I intreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, † to destroy the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

Glory over me: as I have gloried over thee in laying first my commands, and then my plagues upon thee, so now lay thy commands upon me for the time of my praying; and if I do not what thou requirest, I am content thou shouldst insult over me, and punish me. Or, glory, or boast thyself of, or concerning me, as one that by God's power can do that for thee which all thy magicians cannot, of whom therefore thou now seest thou canst not glory nor boast, as thou hast hitherto done. When shall I intreat for thee? Appoint me what time thou pleasest. Hereby he knew that the hand and glory of God would be more conspicuous in it. And this was no presumption in Moses, because he had a large commission, chap. vii. 1; and also had particular direction from God in all that he said or did in these matters.

10 And he said, ¶ To morrow. And he said, ¶ Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God. j Or, Against to morrow. i ch. 9. 14. Deut. 32. 26. 2 Sam. 7. 22. 1 Chr. 17. 23. Ps. 86. 8. Is. 46. 9. Jer. 10. 6, 7.

Why not presently? Answ. 1. Because he hoped ere that time they might be removed, either by natural causes or by chance, and so he should not need the favour of Moses or his God. 2. Because he thought it a hard and long work to remove so vast a number of frogs, and that Moses might use divers ceremonies, as the magicians did, in his addresses to God, which would require some considerable time.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses k cried out to the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh. k ver. 30. ch. 9. 33. & 10. 18. & 32. 11. Jam. 5. 16, 17, 18.

Or, as the place is fitly rendered by others, because of the word, or matter of, or about the frogs which he had given or propounded to Pharaoh. Because he had given his word both for the thing and the time of it, he prayed more earnestly lest God should be dishonoured, and Pharaoh have occasion of triumph. The Hebrew verbs to put and to give are frequently exchanged, as appears by comparing 1 Kings x. 9, with 2 Chron. ix. 8; and Isa. xlii. 1, with Matt. xii. 18.

Moses cried unto the Lord: though he was assured that the frogs would depart at his word, yet he would use the means appointed by God for the accomplishment of it.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

A short speech for they died and were removed out of, &c., as appears from the next verse; it being frequent in the Hebrew tongue under one verb expressed to understand another agreeable to it. See examples in the Hebrew, Gen. xliiii. 33, 34; Exod. xviii. 12; xxv. 2; Prov. xxv. 22.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank.

Doubtless they cast them into their rivers, or pits, &c., though that be not here mentioned. God would not instantly and wholly take them away, both to convince them of the truth of the miracle, and to make them more sensible of this judgment, and more fearful of bringing another upon themselves.

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was respice, m he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said. l Eccles. 8. 11. m ch. 7. 14.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

God, it seems, gave him no warning, because he showed himself in the very last plague to be both perfidious and incorrigible. Others think he was forewarned, though that be not here expressed. Lice, so the Hebrew word is rendered by all the Jewish and most other interpreters. But it is probable that what is said of the locusts, Exod. x. 14, was true of these, that they were much more loathsome and troublesome than ordinary.

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and n it became lice in man, and in beast; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt. n Ps. 105. 31.

The dust was not fit matter to produce lice, and therefore shows this work to be Divine and miraculous. All the dust of the land, i. e. a great part of it, the word all being commonly so understood in Scripture.

18 And o the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they p could not: so there were lice upon man, and upon beast. o ch. 7. 11. p Luke 10. 18. Wisd. 17. 7. 2 Tim. 3. 8, 9.

Did so, i. e. endeavoured to do so. Thus to enter, Matt. vii. 13, is put for striving to enter, Luke xii. 24. Thus men are said to deliver, Gen. xxxvii. 21; to fight, Josh. xxiv. 9; to return, Josh. x. 15; when they only attempted or endeavoured to do so. And therefore when it is said in any of the plagues that the magicians did so, it is not to be understood that they really did the same thing, but that they endeavoured to do so, and that they did something which looked like it.

It was as easy for them to produce lice as frogs, but God hindered them, partly to confound them and their devilish arts, and to show that what they did before was only by his permission; and partly to convince Pharaoh and the Egyptians of their vanity in trusting to such impotent magicians, and in opposing that God who could control and confound them when he pleased.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is q the finger of God: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said. q 1 Sam. 6. 3, 9. Ps. 8. 3. Matt. 12. 28. Luke 11. 20. r ver. 15.

The finger is put either synecdochically for the hand, as it is Exod. xxxi. 18; Psal. viii. 3; cxliv. 1; or metaphorically for the power or virtue, as Luke xi. 20, compared with Matt. xii. 28. Of God; of that supreme God, whom both the Egyptians and other heathen idolaters acknowledged as superior to all men, and idols, and devils. This they said, lest they should be thought inferior to Moses and Aaron in magical art. But hereby they own the sovereign God to be on Israel's side; and yet, like the devils, they proceed to fight against him. He hearkened not unto them; either to his magicians, of whom he last spake; or rather to Moses and Aaron, as the following words show. For relatives oft belong to the remoter antecedents, as Gen. xix. 13; 1 Sam. vii. 17; Mark ii. 13.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^{a ch. 7. 15.} 'Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; lo, he cometh forth to the water; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, 'Let my people go, that they may serve me.

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send ¶ swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

Swarms of flies; Heb. a mixture of insects or flies, as appears from Psal. lxxviii. 45, which were of various kinds, as bees, wasps, gnats, hornets, &c., infinite in their numbers, and doubtless larger and more venomous and pernicious than the common ones were.

22 And ¶ I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

Either, 1. Of the whole earth, and consequently of Egypt, that I am not only the Lord of Israel, but of thee and thy dominions too. God is here spoken of after the manner of earthly princes, who use to reside in the midst of their kingdoms, that they may more conveniently rule and influence them. Or rather, 2. Of Goshen; the words being properly thus rendered, that I the Lord am in the midst of that land, to wit, the land of Goshen now spoken of, to defend and preserve it. For God is said to be in the midst of them whom he protects, Deut. vii. 21; xxiii. 14; Josh. iii. 10; Psal. xlvi. 5; and not to be in the midst of others whom he forsakes, and designs or threatens to destroy, Numb. xiv. 42; Deut. i. 42; xxxi. 17. Compare Exod. xxxiii. 3, with xxxiv. 9.

23 And I will put † a division between my people and thy people: ¶ to-morrow shall this sign be.

A division; Heb. a redemption or deliverance, i. e. a token or mean of deliverance, by a metonymy; a wall of partition, by which I will preserve the Israelites, whilst I destroy the Egyptians. To-morrow shall this sign be. This he saith, partly to gain the more belief to himself in what he now did or should further speak in God's name to them; and partly to warn them of their danger, and make their disobedience more inexcusable.

24 And the LORD did so; and *there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: the land was ¶ corrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

The LORD did so, immediately by his own word, and not by Moses's rod, lest the Egyptians should think it was a magician's wand, and that all Moses's works were done by the power of the devil. A grievous swarm of flies; Heb. a heavy mixture of flies. Heavy, i. e. either great, as this Hebrew word is used, Gen. xli. 31; Isa. xxxiii. 2, or mischievous and troublesome; or rather, numerous, as it is taken, Gen. i. 9; Numb. xi. 14; 1 Kings iii. 9, compared with 2 Chron. i. 10. The land, i. e. either the fruits or products of the land; or rather, the inhabitants of the land, as the word land is taken, Gen. xli. 36; 1 Sam. xxvii. 9: many of the people were poisoned or stung to death by them, as appears from Psal. lxxviii. 45. See also the Book of Wisdom, chap. xvi. 9.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice *the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

It is not meet, Heb. not right, neither in God's eyes, who hath appointed us the place as well as the thing; nor in the Egyptians' eyes, as it follows. The abomination of the Egyptians; that which the Egyptians abhor to kill, or to see killed; as not only Scripture, but profane authors, as Diodorus, and Tully, and Juvenal, witness, because they worshipped them as gods, as is notoriously known. Their fear was just; for when once a Roman had but killed a cat, though imprudently, the people tumultuously met together, and beset his house, and killed him in spite of the king and his princes, who used their utmost power and diligence to prevent it.

27 We will go *three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as *he shall command us.

For we know not what kind or number of sacrifices to offer to him till we come thither.

28 And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: ^{b ver. 8.} ¶ intreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and ¶ intreated the LORD.

31 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh *hardened his heart at this time also neither would he let the people go.

CHAP. IX.

God threatens to smite his cattle with a pestilence, 1—3; but spares Israel's, 4. Appoints a time for the execution hereof, 5; wherein the Egyptians' cattle dies, 6. Pharaoh's obstinacy, 7. God strikes all Egypt with boils, which is the sixth plague, 10. The magicians are not able to stand before Moses, 11. Pharaoh's heart hardened according to the word of the Lord, 12. God commands Moses to repeat his message, 13; and threatens Pharaoh with more grievous plagues, 14. God's end in raising up Pharaoh, 16. The seventh plague, viz. hail and rain, 18. God's counsel for the securing of their cattle, 19. The execution of this plague, 23. The effects of it, 25. The land of Goshen is preserved, 26. Pharaoh's confession, 27. Moses's prayer for him, 29. He foretells Pharaoh's obstinacy, 30. By Moses's entreaty the plague is stayed, 33. Pharaoh's heart remains hardened, 34, 35.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, *Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

b ch. 8. 2. 2 For if thou ^brefuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still,

c ch. 7. 4. 3 Behold, the ^chand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

The hand of the Lord; in an immediate manner, not by my rod, that thou mayst know it is not I, but the Lord, which doth all these things to thee. Thy cattle; which they kept for their wool or milk, or manifold uses and services, though not for food and sacrifice.

d ch. 8. 22. 4 And ^dthe LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

e Ps. 78. 50. 6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and ^eall the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

All the cattle; either of all sorts, or a very great number of them, as the word all is frequently used; or rather, all that were in the field, as it is expressly limited, ver. 3, but not all absolutely, as appears from ver. 9, 19, 25, and chap. xiv. 23.

f ch. 7. 14. & 5. 22. 7 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And ^fthe heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

Take to you handfuls of ashes, to mind them of their cruel usage of the Israelites in their furnace, of which see Deut. iv. 20; Jer. xi. 4. Both were to take them up, but Moses only to sprinkle them, as at other times Aaron only did the work, to show that they were but instruments, which God could use as he pleased, and God was the principal author of it.

g Rev. 16. 2. 9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be ^ga boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

A burning scab, which quickly raised blains and blisters; whereby they were both vehemently inclined to scratch themselves, and yet utterly disenabled from it by its great soreness.

h Deut. 28. 27. 10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became ^ha boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast.

God multiplying that dust, and heating it, and then dispersing it over all the land, and causing it to fall and rest upon the bodies of the Egyptians.

i ch. 8. 18, 19. 2 Tim. 3. 9. 11 And the ⁱmagicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

Could not stand before Moses, as they hitherto had done, both as spies and as adversaries; for though their understandings were convinced of God's hand and infinite power, yet their hearts were not changed; but for their worldly interest they persisted to rebel against their light, and therefore are justly plagued. It was no favour to Pharaoh that the plague was not upon him, but only a reservation to a greater mischief, as it follows.

12 And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; ^kas the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

l ch. 8. 20. 13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^lRise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

m ch. 8. 10. 14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; ^mthat thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

Upon thine heart, or, into thy heart: thou hast hitherto not felt my plagues upon thy own person or thy body, but I shall shortly reach and wound it, and that not only in the skin, as the magicians and others are now smitten, but even to thy heart, such as shall make thy heart sick, Micah vi. 13, such as shall give thee a mortal and irrecoverable wound. Some understand it of inward and spiritual judgments upon Pharaoh's heart, such as hardness of heart; but that plague had been inflicted upon him, and is recorded before this time. And Pharaoh's heart being here opposed to his servants and people, seems rather to denote his person, the heart or soul being often put synecdochically for the whole man.

n ch. 8. 20. 15 For now I will ⁿstretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth.

Pestilence; not properly so called, but largely, as the word is used Hos. xiii. 14, meaning with an utter and irrecoverable destruction. This relates partly to the killing of the first-born, which plague did more immediately and nearly concern both him and his people, and principally to their destruction in the Red Sea.

o Rom. 9. 17. See ch. 14. 17. Prov. 16. 4. 1 Pet. 2. 9. + Heb. made thee stand. 16 And in very deed for ^othis cause have I ^oraised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

Raised thee up; so the Hebrew word is translated, Rom. ix. 17. I have raised thee up out of thy first nothing, into thy being, and life, and kingdom; and upheld thy being and reign even in the midst of thy tyranny. Heb. I have made thee to stand, i. e. to remain alive and untouched, when thy magicians could not stand, ver. 11. I have preserved thee in life, not for want of power to destroy thee, as thou mayst fancy, nor for want of provocation from thee, but for my own glory. To show in thee my power, in those mighty works which have been occasioned by thy rebellion and obstinacy. My name; my being and providence, and my manifold perfections; my patience in bearing thee so long, my justice in punishing thee, my power in conquering thee, my wisdom in overruling thy pride, and tyranny, and cruelty, to thy own destruction, and the redemption of my oppressed people, and my faithfulness in making good my promises to them, and my threatenings to thee.

17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

Against my people, i. e. against me acting for my people. The gracious God takes what is done to or against his people as done to or against himself. See Zech. ii. 8; Matt. xxv. 40, 45; Acts ix. 4, 5.

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

Since they were a kingdom or a nation.

19 Send therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

This forewarning God gives, partly, to mitigate the severity of the judgment; partly, that a considerable number of horses might be reserved for Pharaoh's expedition, chap. xiv.; partly, to show the justice of God in punishing so wicked and obstinate people, as would take no warning neither from God's words, nor from his former works; and partly, to make a difference between the penitent and the incorrigible Egyptians.

20 He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that † regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

Upon man, i. e. upon those men that presumed to continue in the field after this admonition.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

The fire ran along upon the ground, devouring both herbs and cattle which were upon it, Psal. lxxviii. 47, 48; cv. 32, 33.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

Which strange mixture much increased the miracle.

That hail and rain did sometimes, though but seldom, fall in Egypt, is attested by divers eye-witnesses.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

i. e. Most of them; or herbs and trees of all sorts, as appears from chap. x. 12, 15. See before, ver 6.

26 Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

It seems the Egyptians that dwelt there were spared for the sake of their neighbours the Israelites; which great obligation probably made them more willing to lend their jewels to them, chap. xii. 35.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

I now plainly see and freely acknowledge my sin in striving with God. He seems not to deny that he had sinned before, for even the light of nature would discover his sin, in breaking his faith, and the word of a King given to Moses for Israel's dismissal.

28 Intreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more † mighty thunders and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

Or, and let it be enough, (let God content himself that he hath punished me so long, and that I have confessed my sin, and promised amendment,) that there may be hereafter no more.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the earth is the LORD's.

Or, that this land is the Lord's, even his whom thou deniest to have any jurisdiction in it; or over thee, Exod. v. 2. Or the earth is put for the world, the heaven and the earth: q. d. That thou mayest see that he can either cause the heavens to send forth such thunders and hails, or restrain them as he pleaseth.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolted.

The flax and the barley were not so necessary for human life as the wheat and rye. Thus God still sends smaller judgments to usher in the greater.

32 But the wheat and the rie were not smitten: for they were † not grown up.

The Hebrew word may be rendered either dark or hid, to wit, under the ground, whereby it was secured from this stroke; or late, as divers of the Hebrews and other interpreters render it. This kind of corn coming later up, was now tender and hidden, either in the ground or in the herb; whereby it was in some measure secured both from the fire by its greenness and moisture, and from the hail by its pliability and yielding to it, whereas the stalks of barley were more dry and stiff, and therefore more liable to the hail and fire.

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

Moses went out of the city, that, being solitary, he might pour forth his heart in fervent prayers.

34 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken † by Moses.

CHAP. X.

The reason why God hardened Pharaoh's heart, 1, 2. Egypt threatened with locusts, 4. Pharaoh's servants persuade him to let the Israelites go, 7. Pharaoh inquires of Moses who are they that shall go to serve the Lord, 8. Moses's answer, 9. Pharaoh's reply, 10, 11. Locusts come over all Egypt, 13—15. Pharaoh sends for Moses, and confesseth his sin, 16, 17. Moses prays to God, 18. The plague is stayed, 19. Pharaoh's heart hardened, 20. The ninth plague, to wit, darkness over all Egypt, 22, 23. Pharaoh would let Israel go, but without cattle, 24. Moses will not leave a hoof behind, 25, 26. Pharaoh hardened, 27; and charges Moses, upon pain of death, never to appear in his sight any more, 28; which also came to pass, 29.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs before him:

2 And that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what

† 1 Kings 8. 22, 26.
Ps. 143. 6.
Is. 1. 15.

z Ps. 24. 1.
1 Cor. 10. 26,
28.

a Is. 26. 10.

b Ruth 1. 22.
& 2. 23.

† Heb. hidden, or, dark.

c ver. 29.
ch. 8. 12.

† Heb. by the hand of Moses.
ch. 1. 13.

† Heb. set not his heart unto. ch. 7.
23.

p Rev. 16. 21.

q Josh. 10.
11.
Ps. 18. 13, &
78. 47, & 105.
32, & 148. 8.
Is. 30. 30.
Ezek. 38. 22.
Rev. 8. 7.

r Ps. 105. 33.

s ch. 8. 22.
& 9. 4, 6, &
10. 23, & 11.
7, & 12. 13,
Is. 32. 18, 19.

t ch. 10. 16.
u 2 Chr. 12.
6.
Ps. 129. 4.
& 145. 17.
Lam. 1. 18.
Dan. 9. 14.

x ch. 8. 8,
26, & 10. 17.
Acts 8. 24.
† Heb. voice of God.
Ps. 29. 3, 4.

a ch. 4. 21.
& 7. 14.

b ch. 7. 4.

c Deut. 4. 9.
Ps. 44. 1, &
71. 16, & 78.
6, &c.
Joel 1. 3.

things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to ⁴humble thyself before me? let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to morrow will I bring the ⁵locusts into thy coast:

5 And they shall cover the ⁶face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and ⁷they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

The residue; the wheat and the rye, the staff of their lives. Every tree; the fruits and leaves of every tree.

6 And they ⁸shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

Such for number, or shape, or mischievous effects, as were never seen before.

7 And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be ⁹a snare unto us? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?

How long shall this man be a snare; an occasion of sin and destruction? See Exod. xxiii. 33; Josh. xxiii. 13.

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but ¹⁰†who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for ¹¹we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

A feast upon a sacrifice, wherein all are concerned, and therefore all must be present and ready to do what God requires us.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

I wish God may be no more ready and willing to be with you, and to do you good, than I am willing to let you go. Evil is before you; either, 1. Evil of sin. You have some ill design against me, either to stir up sedition or war against me, or utterly to depart out of my kingdom. Or rather, 2. Evil of calamity or mischief. 1. Because it is here said to be before their faces, whereas evil designs are in men's hearts, and the fair pretences wherewith they cover them are said to be before their faces. 2. The word of caution he gives to them, look to it, or take heed, seems to imply that he speaks not of the evil they designed against Pharaoh, but of that which they would unavoidably bring upon themselves from so potent a king, by the refusal of such fair offers, and continuing in such insolent and unreasonable demands.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

For that ye did desire; which was not true, but only was gathered by him out of their declared intention of going to sacrifice, wherein he thought the presence of the women and children wholly unnecessary.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ¹²Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and ¹³eat every herb of the land, even all that ¹⁴the hail hath left.

This is no unusual plague in Africa and Arabia, where, when the harvest is ripe, they frequently come in vast numbers, and upon all their corn, and what they do not eat they infect with their touch, and the moisture coming from them, and afterwards dying in great numbers, they poison the air, and cause a pestilence. So that it is no wonder that Pharaoh and his servants were so concerned for this plague, so well known to them, especially considering that this was like to be far worse than all of the same kind which they had either seen or heard of.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

Over the land; over divers parts of the land, shaking his rod towards the several quarters of it. An east wind in those parts is a most violent and pernicious wind, Exod. xiv. 21; Numb. xi. 31, and a dry wind, and therefore fit for the engendering of those creatures. This wind brought them from Arabia, where they are in great numbers, as we have seen, ver. 12, though God miraculously increased their numbers, and their power of doing mischief.

14 And ¹⁵the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were ¹⁶they; ¹⁷before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

Quest. How can this be true, when the same words are used of the locusts in Joel's time? Ans. It might be true of both in divers respects; of these for number and quality, of them for long continuance, for they lasted three or four years, when these were but for a little time; of these for Egypt, of them for Judea, where they were fixed.

15 For they ¹⁸covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they ¹⁹did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

The land was darkened; either by their flying in vast numbers, and so darkening the air, as they have oftentimes done; or by covering the green and lightsome herbs and productions of the earth with their dark and direful bodies. They did eat every herb of the land. How could this be, when the hail had smitten every herb, and broken every tree? chap. ix. 25. Ans. 1. There seems to have been some distance of time between these two plagues, in which space new productions might be sprouting forth, both out of the ground, and from the trees. 2. The words all and every are commonly understood of the greatest part.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh ²⁰†called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, ²¹¶I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

Pharaoh called for them, because this kind of plague in itself was most pernicious, whereby whole countries had been wasted, and grievous famines and pestilences caused, and was mightily aggravated by the vengeance of God, and by the peculiar quality of these locusts, which did not only fall upon their herbs and fruits, as they use to do, but ind 1 Kings 21. 29.

2 Chro. 7. 14.
& 24. 27.
Job 42. 6.
Jer. 13. 18.
Jam. 4. 10.
1 Pet. 5. 6.

e Pro. 30. 27.
Wind. 16. 9.
Rev. 9. 3.
† Heb. eye.
ver. 15.

f ch. 9. 32.
Joel 1. 4.
& 2. 25.

g ch. 8. 3, 21.

h ch. 23. 33.
Josh. 23. 13.
1 Sam. 18. 21.
Eccles. 7. 26.
1 Cor. 7. 35.

+ Heb. who,
and who, &c.

i ch. 5. 1.

m Ps. 78. 46.
& 108. 34.

n Joel 2. 2.

o ver. 5.

p Ps. 105. 35.

+ Heb. hastened to call.
q ch. 9. 27.

vade their very houses, ver. 6, infect their meats, fill their beds, poison them with their stink and with their venomous bitings, whereby they killed many men, as it is written in the Book of Wisdom, chap. xvi. 19. Against you; by contempt of your great and terrible works, by breach of my promise made to you, and by my denial of your just desires and commands given to me in his name, whom I now find and feel to be the almighty and sovereign God.

17 Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and ^{r ch. 9. 28. 1 Kings 13. 6.} intreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death only.

I desire no further favour, I will no more offend nor need your pardon.

This death; this deadly plague, compare 2 Kings iv. 40, and 2 Cor. xi. 23. Besides it did destroy the life of herbs and trees, yea, of beasts and men, either directly, or at least by consequence, in depriving them of the necessary supports of life.

18 And he ^{s ch. 8. 30.} went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and [†] cast them into the Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

A mighty strong west wind; Heb. a wind of the sea, i. e. coming from the sea, called there the great sea, and the Mediterranean Sea, from whence came the north-west wind, which did blow the locusts directly into the Red Sea.

Cast them, as the Hebrew word signifies, with a great noise, and with great force, so as they should never rise again to molest them. The Red Sea; Heb. the sea of bulrushes, so called from the great number of bulrushes near its shore; or, the sea of bounds or limits, q. d. the narrow sea, whereas they could see no bounds nor shore beyond the Mediterranean Sea. It was called the Arabian Gulf, and by others the Red Sea, either from its red sand, or rather from Esau, called also Edom, which signifies red, Gen. xxv. 30, from whom as the adjoining country was called Edom, or red, so this was called the Red Sea.

20 But the LORD ^{n ch. 4. 21. & 11. 10.} hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^{x ch. 9. 22.} Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, [†] even darkness which may be felt.

[†] Heb. that one may feel darkness. It is an hyperbolical expression, such being very frequent both in Scripture and in all authors. For darkness being only a privation, cannot be properly felt, yet it might be felt in its cause, to wit, those thick and gross vapours which filled and infected the air. But the place may be rendered thus, that there may be darkness—after that (so the Hebrew vau is sometimes used, as Micah vii. 13) the darkness (i. e. the darkness of the night, or the common and daily darkness) is departed or removed, and the time of the day come; for so the root from whence this word may be derived signifies, Exod. xiii. 22. And to this purpose the words are rendered by the Chaldee and Syriac, and some others; and the sense is, that the darkness may continue in the day-time as well as in the night.

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a [†] thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days: [†] Heb. that one may feel darkness.

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: ^{s ch. 8. 22. Wisd. 18. 1.} but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

They saw not one another, because these gross and moist fogs and vapours did not only quite shut out the light of the heavenly bodies, but also put out their candles, or other artificial lights, or at least so darken them that men could have no benefit by them.

From his place. Place here may be taken, either, 1. More strictly and particularly; so the sense is, The horror of that darkness was so great that they durst not remove at all, but stood or sat where the darkness found them, like men astonished or affrighted, and therefore unmovable, having their minds disturbed, being terrified with their guilty consciences, which most affect men in the dark, and with the dreadful noises which they heard, Wisd. xvii. 5, and with the apparitions of evil angels, as may seem from Psal. lxxviii. 49, where the plague of evil angels is put instead of this plague of darkness, which therefore is omitted in that place where all the rest are reckoned up. Or rather, 2. More largely, for their own houses or dwellings, for so the Hebrew word is certainly used, Exod. xvi. 29. So the sense is, They did not stir abroad out of their houses upon their most necessary occasions. Object. He saith not that they could not go, but that they could not rise from their place, which may seem to limit this expression to their particular places. Answer. The word rise is commonly put for going about any business; and here it is a pregnant word, as they call it, and implies going in it, none arose, viz. to go or remove from his place. And rising cannot be properly taken here for that particular posture, unless we will suppose that this darkness found all men sitting, which is absurd to imagine.

The children of Israel had light in their dwellings, whereby they might have conveyed themselves, and families, and goods away, as afterwards they did in haste; but they waited for Moses's orders, and he for God's command; and God intended to bring them forth, not by stealth, but in a more honourable and public manner, in spite of all opposition.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and ^{a ver. 8.} said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your ^{b ver. 10.} little ones also go with you.

And Pharaoh, or therefore, or then, to wit, after the darkness was either wholly or in part removed. Let your flocks and your herds be stayed, either as a pledge of your return after your sacrifice is ended, or as a recompence for the cattle which I have lost by your means. Let your little ones also go with you, and consequently the women, whose help and service was necessary for their little ones in divers regards.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give [†] us also sacrifices and burnt offerings, [†] Heb. into our hands. that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

Thou must give us, i. e. suffer us to take of our own stock.

26 Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

Which was not a pretence, but a real truth. For this being a solemn and extraordinary sacrifice by the express and particular appointment of God, they knew not either of what kinds, or in what number or manner their sacrifices must be offered. And for all these things they did not receive particular directions till they came to Mount Sinai.

27 ¶ But the LORD ^{c ver. 20. ch. 4. 21. & 14. 4, 8.} hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; for in that day thou seest my face thou shalt die.

29 And Moses said, Thou hast spoken well, ^{d Heb. 11. 27.} I will see thy face again no more.

Thou hast spoken well, Heb. right; not morally, for so it was very ill said; but logically, that which agrees, though not with thy duty, yet with the event and truth of the thing; for as thou hast warned me to see thee no more, so I in the name of God assure thee that thou shalt see me no more, to beg my prayers, or to be helped out of thy troubles by my means. And therefore that discourse of Moses to Pharaoh, which follows, chap. xi. 4, &c., though it be put there out of its order and proper place, as many other passages are, yet was delivered at this time, and upon occasion of these words.

CHAP. XI.

God commandeth the Israelites to borrow jewels of the Egyptians, 2. God giveth them favour among the Egyptians, 3. Moses denounceth the last plague, 4, 5. A great cry, 6. The Israelites' safety, 7. The Egyptians thrusting them out, 8. God foretells Pharaoh's hardness, 9.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: *when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether.

The Lord said unto Moses; either, 1. Whilst Moses was not yet gone out of Pharaoh's presence; so God might suggest this to his mind, as he did other things to Micaiah, when he was before Ahab and Jehoshaphat, 1 Kings xxii. Or rather, 2. Before his last coming to Pharaoh; and the words may be rendered thus, Now the Lord had said unto Moses. And this is here added as the reason why Moses spake so boldly to Pharaoh, because God had assured him of a good issue. He shall surely thrust you out hence altogether; men, and women, and children, and cattle, and all that they had, which he would never do before.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, ^b jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

The Israelites, who at first lived distinctly by themselves, when they were greatly multiplied, and Pharaoh began to cast a jealous eye upon them, and to take cruel counsels against them, were more mixed with the Egyptians, as appears from chap. xii. 12, 13, and many other places, either by their own choice, that they might receive protection and sustenance from them; or rather by Pharaoh's design, who planted many of his own people among them to watch and chastise them, Exod. i. 11; and, it may be, removed some of them from Goshen to the parts adjoining to it, which were inhabited by his people. Jewels, or vessels, as the Hebrew word properly signifies; for they might more plausibly ask, and the Egyptians would with less suspicion lend them vessels, which might be proper and useful, both for their sacrifices and feasts, than jewels, for which they had no present need or use.

3 *And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover the man ^dMoses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

Therefore they complied with their request, not only out of love to the people, but out of fear to Moses, lest he should punish them severely in case of refusal.

4 And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, *About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

Moses said this to Pharaoh before his departure, as appears by comparing ver. 8, with chap. x. 29. And therefore the three first verses of this chapter come in by way of parenthesis; and now he returns to the story, and sets down the last words which Moses spake to Pharaoh for a final parting:

God is said to go out, or go forth, or come down, &c., by way of condescension to the custom and capacity of men, when he doth any eminent act of power either in way of justice or mercy.

5 And *all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of beasts.

That sitteth upon his throne; either now actually ruling with his father, as Solomon did even whilst David lived, 1 Kings i. 34; or, more probably, he that is to sit, the present time for the future, he whose right this is by the custom of Egypt, and by the law of nations. The first-born of the maid-servant; the poor captive slave that was in the prison, as it is chap. xii. 29, and there did grind at the mill. In those times and places they had divers mills, which were not turned about by wind or water, as ours are, but by the hands of their servants, who for that purpose stood behind the mill, and so with hard labour turned it about. See Judg. xvi. 21; Isa. xlvii. 1, 2; Lam. v. 13.

6 *And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 ^hBut against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

Instead of those loud cries of the Egyptian families, there shall be so great a tranquillity among the Israelites, that even the dogs, which are sensible of, and awaked, and provoked by, the least noise, shall not be stirred up by them.

8 And *all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people †that follow thee: and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in †a great anger.

Thy courtiers and great officers, who now are so insolent and obstinate, shall come down unto me, both by their own inclination and necessity, and in thy name, and by thy command. That follow thee; that are under thy conduct and command; as this or the like expression is used Judg. iv. 10; 1 Kings xx. 10; 2 Kings iii. 9; Isa. xli. 2. In a great anger; not so much for the affront offered to himself, as for his incurable rebellion against God. Compare Mark iii. 5.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, ¹Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that ^mmy wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: *and the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAP. XII.

The month wherein they went out of Egypt to be to them the first month of the year, 1, 2. God enjoins them to choose a spotless lamb for the passover, 3. How they were to eat the same, 4. The description of the lamb, 5; the time of killing it, 6; the manner of sprinkling, 7; the time and method of eating it, 8—11. God's purpose to smite the first-born, 12. The use of the blood upon the doors, 13. Seven days of unleavened bread, and the manner of keeping it, 15. Moses directeth the elders, both for their present and future safety, 21—24. They instruct their children concerning it, 26, 27. The first-born of all Egypt slain, 29. A great cry, 30. Pharaoh giveth Israel leave to go, 31. The Egyptians thrust them out, 33. Their hasty departure, 34. They spoil the Egyptians, 35, 36. Their number, 37. Their baking unleavened bread, 39. How long they dwell in Egypt, 40. The time of their deliverance, 41. Who were to partake of the passover, 43—49. The children of Israel did as the Lord commanded, 50.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

a ch. 12. 31, 33, 39.

b ch. 3. 22, & 12. 35.

c ch. 9. 21, & 12. 36.

Ps. 106. 46.

d 2 Sam. 7. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50.

e ch. 12. 12, 23, 29.

f Amos 4. 17.

f ch. 12. 12, 29.

Amos 4. 10.

g ch. 12. 30, Amos 6. 17, Wisd. 18. 10.

h ch. 8. 22.

i Josh. 10. 21.

k ch. 12. 33.

† Heb. that is at thy feet.

So Judg. 4. 10, & 8. 5.

1 Kings 20. 10, 2 Kings 3. 9.

† Heb. heat of anger.

1 ch. 9. 12, & 7. 4, & 10. 1.

m ch. 7. 3.

n ch. 10. 20, 27. Rom. 2. 5, & 9. 22.

The lord spake; had spoken, before the three days' darkness, as may appear by comparing ver. 3 and 6 of this chapter with chap. xi. 4. And the mention of it was put off by him till this place, as well that he might not interrupt the history of all the plagues, as that he might give the whole institution of the passover together.

a ch. 13. 4.
Deut. 16. 1.

2 *This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.

This month was the first month after the vernal equinox, called Abib, Exod. xiii. 4; xxiii. 15; Deut. xvi. 1, and Nisan, Neh. ii. 1; Esth. iii. 7; containing part of our March, and part of April. The beginning; Heb. the head; which, I conceive, notes not so much the order, which is more plainly mentioned in the following words, as the eminency of it, that it shall be accounted the chief and principal of all months; as the sabbath hath been called by some the queen of days. And justly must they prefer this month before the rest, whether they looked back to their prodigious deliverance from Egypt therein, or forward to their spiritual redemption by Christ, and to the acceptable year of the Lord, Luke iv. 19; for in this very month our Lord Jesus suffered, John xviii. 28. It shall be the first month: heretofore your first month for all affairs hath been Tisri, which in part answers to our September, and is the first month after the autumnal equinox; and so it shall be to you still as to civil affairs, as it appears from Exod. xxiii. 16; xxxiv. 22; Lev. xxv. 8—10, but as to sacred and ecclesiastical matters, this shall henceforth be your first month.

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a ¶ lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house:

In the tenth day; partly, that they might have the lamb ready for the sacrifice, and might not be distracted about procuring it when they should be going to use it; partly, that by the frequent contemplation of the lamb, as a sign appointed by God, they might have their faith strengthened as to their approaching deliverance, and afterwards might have their minds quickened to the more serious consideration of that great deliverance out of Egypt, and of that more glorious deliverance from hell by Christ the true Passover, which should be offered for them; partly, to teach the church in all ages how necessary a thing preparation is to the solemn duties and exercises of religion; and partly, to signify that Christ should be first set apart, and separated to the ministry, which was done three or four prophetic days, i. e. years, before his death, and afterwards offered: most of which reasons being perpetual, it may seem this usage was so too, and not for the first passover only. They shall take to them, into their houses, where the Jews tell us he was tied to the bed-post. A lamb, or kid, ver. 5, for the same word signifies both, though a lamb was commonly used, and a kid only in case of the want of a lamb; and the Chaldee and LXX. do almost constantly translate the Hebrew word lamb. And Christ is seldom or never typified by a kid, but generally by a lamb, as he is called John i. 29, partly for his innocence, meekness, patience, &c., but principally with respect to the paschal lamb, instead whereof he was in due time to be offered; whence he is called our Passover, 1 Cor. v. 7.

A lamb was to be disposed of to every house or family, according to its quantity, or the number of persons in it, as the next verse explains it. The several families are called the houses of their fathers, because they consist of those persons which come from one father or grandfather. The people were divided into tribes, the tribes were subdivided into families, and the families again into houses, which were like sprigs taken from the greater branches, and planted apart, and each of these had their several fathers, from whom they were denominated, as here they are.

4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it according to the number of the souls; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

Too little for the lamb, i. e. for the eating of the whole lamb at one meal, according to the rule, ver. 8, 10; if the persons be so few that they cannot eat it up without gluttony.

Take it; or rather thus, word for word, And, or Then he (the master of that family) shall take also his neighbour next unto his house; he shall take him and his family into society with himself; they shall join together. To the number of the souls, or persons, i. e. as the two families shall consist of more or fewer persons. I suppose the meaning is, that if his next neighbour's family were of itself sufficient for the eating of the whole lamb, that he should pass over that to the next small family, which being joined with his might make up a fit number, which, as the Hebrew doctors tell us, was ten, besides women and children. According to his eating, i. e. according to the proportion which he can or commonly doth eat. The meaning is this, The whole lamb being to be eaten at once, and a sufficient number being necessary to that end, and there being great variety in men's stomachs and meals, they were to give allowance for that, and to take either more or fewer persons, as their stomachs were better or worse.

5 Your lamb shall be ^bwithout blemish, a male † of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats:

Without blemish; without any deformity or distemper of body. Heb. perfect. Of which see Lev. xxii. 21, &c.; Deut. xv. 21; xvii. 1. And this the very light of nature taught the heathens to observe in their sacrifices. This property was required both to typify Christ, a Lamb without spot or blemish, Heb. ix. 14; 1 Pet. i. 19, and to instruct us that all our services to God must be as perfect as possibly may be. A male, partly because that was better and more perfect than the female, whence a male is opposed to a corrupt thing, Mal. i. 14; and partly to typify the man Christ Jesus. Of the first year, i. e. a year old, when it is in its vigour and perfection, and the fittest type of Christ. Most explain it thus, That it was not to be more than a year old, but it might be much less, seeing it might be offered to God any time after it was eight days old, Exod. xxii. 30; Lev. xxii. 27. But though it was then fit to be offered to God, it was not very fit to be eaten by men. And the Hebrew phrase, the son of a year, seems to require a year's age, as Saul is called the son of one year, 1 Sam. xiii. 1, when he had reigned one whole year. And it is remarkable, that he doth not say the son of this or that year, which might agree to one brought forth that year, though it was much younger than a year, but the son of a year, without any restrictive article. Or from the goats; Heb. and from the goats: if you want a lamb, you shall take a kid or from the goats. But the particle and is here well rendered or, as it is used Gen. xiii. 8; Exod. xxi. 17, compared with Matt. xv. 4; Psal. viii. 4, compared with Heb. ii. 6.

6 And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it † in the evening.

Ye shall keep it up; separate it from the rest of the flock, and keep it in a safe place; the reasons of which, see ver. 3. The whole assembly; or rather, every assembly, to wit, every such society as meet together for eating of the lamb. And the assembly is said to kill it, because one person did it in their name, and by their appointment; in which manner, and upon which reason, the whole congregation is said to stone a man, Lev. xxiv. 14, 16; Numb. xv. 35; Deut. xxii. 21. It is probable it was killed by the master of the family, who was a priest in his own family, &c. In the evening; Heb. between the evenings, or the two evenings, i. e. between the beginning and end of the evening. The evening is one third part of the day, and one of the appointed and usual times of devotion, as appears from Psal. lv. 17; Dan. vi. 10; and it begun at their ninth or our third hour, as may be gathered from Acts iii. 1; for then the sun began more sensibly to decline, whence that time is fitly called by the Jews the first evening, and that was the time of the evening sacrifice; the second evening was when the sun was setting or set. Between these it was to b Lev. 22.

19, 20, 21.
Mal. 1. 8, 14.
Heb. 9. 14.
1 Pet. 1. 19.
† Heb. sons of a year. Lev. 23. 12.

c Lev. 23. 5.
Numb. 9. 3, &c.
28. 16, 1. 6.
† Heb. between the two evenings,
ch. 16. 12.

be killed. This had a respect both to the time of the world's age when Christ came, which was its evening, or declining time, or end, Heb. i. 2; ix. 26; 1 Pet. i. 20; and the time of the day in which Christ our Passover was killed, Matt. xxvii. 46—50; Mark xv. 25, 33, 34.

7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

This was afterwards restrained to the priests, but at this time it was allowed to the masters of families, as their present circumstances required. They shall strike it; with a bunch of hyssop, ver. 22, as a badge of distinction between their houses and the Egyptians'; not to direct the destroying angel where they were, who could as well discern the houses as the blood in the night, but to direct their thoughts to Christ, whose blood was hereby evidently typified, by whose merits and mediation they obtained this preservation and deliverance from Egypt, as well as their great deliverance from hell.

8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and ^{d ch. 24. 25. Deut. 16. 3. Num. 9. 11. 1 Cor. 5. 8.} unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

In that night, i. e. the night following the fourteenth, and beginning the fifteenth day. The lamb was killed upon the fourteenth day, in the evening or close thereof, but it was eaten upon the fifteenth day, to wit, in the beginning of it; whence the passover is said to be offered sometimes upon the fourteenth, and sometimes upon the fifteenth day, which may serve for the reconciliation of some seemingly contrary scriptures. Roast with fire; partly for expedition, ver. 11; and principally to be a type of the Lamb of God, Christ, and of the sharp and dreadful pains which he suffered, not only from men, but from God too, and from the fire of his sore displeasure against sinners, whose place and person Christ sustained in his sufferings. Unleavened bread; partly, as a monument of their speedy departure out of Egypt, which gave them not time to leaven their bread, ver. 34, which is the reason alleged for it, Deut. xvi. 3; partly, to teach us how men should be qualified that come to the sacrament, they should be purged from error, and pride, and malice, and hypocrisy, which are called and compared to leaven, Matt. xvi. 6, 11; Luke xii. 1; 1 Cor. v. 8; and partly, to signify the singular purity of Christ from all kind of spiritual leaven. And with bitter herbs; both to remind them of their hard service and bitter usage in Egypt, Exod. i. 14, from which God delivered them, Deut. xvi. 3; and to prefigure the further crosses and troubles which they were to expect between their going out of Egypt and coming to Canaan. Or, with bitternesses, i. e. with great bitterness, or with grief of heart, that together with faith in God and in Christ, and hope and joy for their approaching deliverance, they might exercise bitter and hearty repentance for their idolatries, and other sinful practices whereof they were guilty in Egypt. And this instructs us as well as them of the absolute necessity of true and bitter repentance in all those that would profitably feed upon Christ our Passover.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but ^{e Deut. 16. 7.} roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

Eat not of it raw, i. e. not thoroughly roasted, for such we also say is raw, and so the Hebrew word na is understood by the Jewish and other doctors. It signified, that Christ should suffer, as well as save, to the uttermost, all that was due for our sins. The purtenance; Heb. the inwards, which were to be taken and washed, and then to be roasted together with the rest. Some do here except the fat, and caul, and kidneys, which were reserved by God for himself, 2 Chron. xxxv. 12, 14. But that exception was not made till after this time, and it seems not certain that that exception extended to the paschal lamb. These and the heads and legs are here mentioned, not to exclude other parts, but because they are not commonly roasted; but God would have the whole lamb roasted and eaten, to signify, that we must have either nothing of Christ, or the whole Christ, and all his benefits, his Spirit to sanctify and rule us, as well as his blood to save us.

10 And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire. ^{f ch. 23. 18. & 34. 25.}

That which either was not usually eaten, or was more than all of you could conveniently eat, ye shall burn with fire; to prevent either, 1. The superstitious use of the relics of that lamb by the Israelites, who thereby had received a greater benefit than they did afterwards by the brazen serpent, which upon that account they worshipped; or, 2. The profane abuse of that which had been consecrated to God's service. Compare Exod. xxix. 34.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: ^{g Deut. 16. 5.} it is the LORD's passover.

Thus shall ye eat it, to wit, for this time, because their circumstances required it, that they being suddenly to take a great journey, might be in a traveller's habit. But that these, and some other circumstances now enjoined and used, were only temporary, and not perpetual nor obligatory, sufficiently appears from the practice not only of the Jews in following ages, but also of Christ and of his apostles. And in like manner there are some institutions in the New Testament which did only oblige that age, and not all that follow them, as Acts xv. 28, 29. With your loins girded, like travellers and persons undertaking some difficult service; for such used to gird up their garments, which in those parts were long and troublesome. See 2 Kings iv. 29; ix. 1; Luke xii. 35. Shoes on your feet; a badge, 1. Of their readiness for their journey, Isa. v. 27; Acts xii. 8. 2. Of their freedom; for slaves, such as the Israelites now were in Egypt, used to go barefooted. 3. Of joy, as on the contrary going barefoot was a badge of mourning, 2 Sam. xv. 30. Your staff in your hand, like persons upon the point of departing, which was a very comfortable circumstance. In haste; for so the word signifies, Deut. xvi. 3; Isa. lii. 12. It is the Lord's passover: this lamb, or your eating of it, is the Lord's passover, i. e. it is a sign of God's passing over you and your houses, when he comes to destroy the Egyptians on every side of you, ver. 13, 23. It is a metonymy usual in sacramental speeches, as Gen. xvii. 10; Matt. xxvi. 26—28.

12 For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: ^{h ch. 11. 4, 5. Amos 6. 17.} I am the LORD. ^{i Num. 33. 4. ¶ Or, graven: ch. 21. 6. & 22. 28. 1's. 62. 1, 6. John 10. 34, 35. k ch. 6. 2.}

I will execute judgment; either, 1. By exposing them to shame and contempt, as vain and impotent gods that could not save their worshippers. But that appeared before. Or, 2. By destroying those beasts which they worshipped; and it is not unlikely but those particular beasts, which were their chief idols, as Apis, Mnevis, &c., were first-born, and therefore perished in this plague. Or, 3. By overthrowing their idols, as he afterwards did Dagon. And so some Hebrew writer tells us, that this very night all their idols were broken and thrown down. And there are some footsteps hereof even in heathen authors; of whom some tell us that most of the temples of Egypt at one time fell down by an earthquake; and others affirm, that the Egyptian gods, for fear of one Typho, (by whom it is apparent they meant Moses,) did hide themselves for a season, &c.

13 And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you: † to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt. ^{† Heb. for a destruction.}

A token, both to you, as he now said, a sign and a pledge to confirm your faith in the expectation of the promised deliverance; and to the angel, that he may know and pass over your houses, as the following words intimate. See on ver. 7. This is spoken of God after the manner of men; the sense is, If I find that you keep the condition which I require, you may expect the privilege which I have promised you; otherwise not.

1 ch. 13. 9. 14 And this day shall be unto you¹ for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a^m feast to the LORD throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a feastⁿ by an ordinance for ever.

For a memorial, or monument, both of this deliverance from Egypt, and moreover of your redemption by Christ, of which that is a type, as even the ancient Jews understood it, who also noted that Israel was to be redeemed in the days of the Messiah upon the same day on which they were delivered from Egypt, to wit, upon the fifteenth day of the month of Nisan. Upon which day our blessed Lord was crucified for the redemption of his people. You shall observe it for a solemn feast or festival time. For ever, i. e. so long as your state and church continues, or till the coming of the Messias. This word doth not always signify eternity, but any long time, as Prov. xxix. 14; Dan. iii. 9, and oft elsewhere.

o ch. 13. 6, 7. & 23. 15. & 34. 18, 25. Lev. 23. 5, 6. Num. 28. 17. Deut. 16. 3, 8. 1 Cor. 5. 7. p Gen. 17. 14. Num. 9. 13. 15 ° Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whatsoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day,^p that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

Seven days, besides and after the day of eating the passover, which was a distinct feast, and no part of the feast of unleavened bread, shall ye eat unleavened bread, to remind them of their departure out of Egypt, which was so sudden that they had not leisure to leaven their dough. See more on ver. 8. That soul shall be cut off, either by excommunication, or by death to be inflicted by the magistrate, and, in case of his neglect, by God himself. Nor let any one think that this was too severe a punishment for what may seem no great offence. For this was indeed a very great crime, being a manifest contempt of God, and a rebellion against God's authority and express command, which surely deserves as severe a punishment as is inflicted upon rebels against their prince, especially considering that the Israelites were the people and subjects of God in a peculiar manner. It was also a tacit renunciation of their religion, and of the covenant of God with them, and of their interest both in that past deliverance out of Egypt, and in the future deliverance by the Messias. See more on Gen. xvii. 14.

16 And in the first day there shall be a holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every[†] man must eat, that only may be done of you.

An holy convocation; a solemn day for the people to assemble together, and to attend upon the public worship and service of God in hearing his word, prayers, praises, and sacrifices. And in the seventh day, because then Pharaoh and his host were drowned in the sea. As on the first day the first-born were killed; so their deliverance was begun on the first, and completed on the seventh day, and therefore those days deserved a special character of honour. And indeed that there were seven days between those two miracles, the Jews unanimously affirm, and it seems probable from the account of their journeys. No manner of work, i. e. of servile work, Lev. xxiii. 7. Save that which every man must eat: herein, as many think, these days were inferior to the sabbath, in which that was forbidden. But of this see my notes on Exod. xvi. 23, and xxxv. 3.

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for^r in this selfsame day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever.

Your armies, so called, not from their military force or courage, but from their numbers, and the order and manner in which they came forth. See chap. xiii. 18.

18 ¶ In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

Until the one and twentieth day, inclusively. For otherwise they were obliged to eat unleavened bread eight days, viz. on the day of the passover, ver. 8, and seven days after, which is strictly and properly called the feast of unleavened bread, because in them they were tied to that ceremony only, except the two days of a holy convocation.

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses: for whatsoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

A stranger, to wit, a proselyte; for strangers unconverted to the Jewish religion were not obliged nor admitted to the celebration of the passover or feast of unleavened bread. Though I see no inconvenience, if all strangers, though heathens, were forbidden to have or use any unleavened bread at that time, lest the Jews who conversed with them might be tempted to desire or partake of it with them. In the land, to wit, of Canaan, which I have promised to you, and to which I am now leading you, which was so well known to all of them, that it was needless to express it in this place.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

A bunch of hyssop; so the Hebrew word is rightly rendered, as appears from Heb. ix. 19. The door of his house, i. e. of the house wherein he did eat the passover, which oftentimes was his neighbour's house: see ver. 4. Until the morning; till the beginning of the morning after midnight, and after the slaughter of the Egyptians' first-born; which may reconcile those scriptures that seem to contradict one another, while some affirm they went out of Egypt by night, and others by day, for they went out in the morning very early when it was yet dark, as it is expressed in a like case, John xx. 1.

23 For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

Will not suffer, Heb. not give him licence or commission. The destroyer, i. e. the destroying angel, which whether it were a good or bad angel is not agreed, nor is it necessary to determine.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

This thing, viz. the substance of the thing, the passover and feast of unleavened bread, though not all the rites and ceremonies, whereof divers were peculiar to the first time.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come a Lev. 23. 5. Num. 28. 16.

† Ex. 23. 15. & 34. 18. Deut. 16. 3. 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8. u Num. 9. 13.

x ver. 3. Num. 9. 4. Josh. 5. 10. 2 Kings 23. 21. Ezra G. 29. Matt. 26. 18, 19. Mark 14. 12, 16. Luke 22. 7, &c. ¶ Or, And. y Heb. 11. 28. z ver. 7.

a ver. 12, 13.

b Ezek. 9. 6. Rev. 7. 3. & 9. 4. c 2 Sam. 24. 16. 1 Cor. 10. 10. Heb. 11. 28.

to the land which the LORD will give you, ^daccording as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

To the land, viz. of Canaan, as ver. 19. For in the wilderness they kept this feast but once, and that by God's particular direction, Numb. ix. 2.

^e ch. 13, 14. ^f Deut. 32. 7. ^g Josh. 4. 6. ^h Ps. 78. 6. ²⁶ And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

Or, part of Divine worship. God expects this even from the Jewish children, and much more from Christian men, that they should inquire and understand what is said or done in the public worship or service of God, and therefore not to rest in dumb signs, whereof they neither inquire nor know the meaning, or in the service of God in a language which they understand not.

^f ver. 11. ²⁷ That ye shall say, 'It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people ^g bowed the head and worshipped.

The passover was both a sacrifice, as it was offered to God, as it appears from Exod. xxiii. 18; xxxiv. 25; Numb. ix. 7, 13; Deut. xvi. 2, 5; and because there was in it the shedding and sprinkling of blood, wherein the essence of a sacrifice consists, 2 Chron. xxx. 16; xxxv. 11, 13; and also a sacrament, as it was received and eaten by men. The people bowed the head, in token of their thankful acknowledgment of God's favours, and of their cheerful submission to God's command and ordinance. See 2 Chron. xxxix. 30.

^h Heb. 11. 28. ²⁸ And the children of Israel went away, and ^h did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

They killed and did eat the paschal lamb in such manner as God prescribed.

ⁱ ch. 11. 4. ²⁹ ¶ And it came to pass, that at midnight ^k the LORD smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, ^l from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that ^m was in the ⁿ dungeon; and all the firstborn of cattle.

At midnight; a great aggravation of the plague; for then darkness itself strikes men with horror, and makes any calamity more terrible; then they were asleep and secure, and least expected such a stroke. All the first-born, both of man and beast, whether male or female. Some extend it to all that were first-born; and so many persons might be killed in one house, as both father and mother, and several sons, which might be the first-born by several mothers, and sons' sons or daughters, &c. Others confine it to the first-born child in the family. I conceive the heads of the family are not included, for these, though they might be the first-born children of their parents' families, yet were not, nor ever are called or accounted, the first-born of their own families, but the heads and roots of them: but for all the rest, I conceive they are all included, because all such were really first-born, and did first open their mother's womb; and all such were to be set apart unto the Lord, instead of these first-born of the Egyptians now slain, chap. xiii. 12, 15, and therefore are in both places to be understood in the same latitude.

^m ch. 11. 6. ⁿ Prov. 21. 13. ^o Amos 5. 17. ^p Jam. 2. 13. ³⁰ And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a ^q great cry in Egypt; for ^r there was not a house where ^s there was not one dead.

Not a house, to wit, of those houses which had any first-born in them, for in divers families there might be no first-born. And such restrictions of the universal particles are frequently understood.

ⁿ ch. 11. 11. ^o Ps. 105. 38. ³¹ ¶ And ^p he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, ^{and} get you forth from among my people, ^q both ye and the children of Israel; and ^r go, serve the LORD, as ye have said.

i. e. He sent this message to them, for they came no more to him, chap. x. 29.

³² ¶ Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone; and ³ bless me also.

Pray to God for me, that I may not perish by this or any other plague.

³³ ¶ And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, ⁴ We be all dead men.

They were urgent, not by force, which they durst not now use, but by earnest and importunate entreaties, Exod. xi. 8. This was the ground of that fable of the heathens mentioned in Tacitus, that the Jews were driven out of Egypt for their scabs; so they falsely and maliciously ascribed their own ulcers and scabs sent upon them by God to the Israelites.

³⁴ And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their ⁵ kneading-troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

Their kneading-troughs; or, as others rightly render it, their dough lumps, or food, or lumps of paste unleavened.

³⁵ And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and they borrowed of the Egyptians ⁶ jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment:

They borrowed of the Egyptians, either before this time, as they had opportunity, when their hearts were mollified by the foregoing plagues; or even at this time, when the Israelites might well take confidence to borrow, and the Egyptians would be willing to lend them, partly that they might gain their affections and prayers, and partly that they might more readily depart from them. Jewels, where-with they used to adorn themselves in the worship of their idols, and therefore supposed the Israelites might use them in the worship of their God. Or, vessels; of which see on chap. xi. 2.

³⁶ ¶ And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them ⁷ such things as they required. And ⁸ they spoiled the Egyptians.

The Lord gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, i. e. inclined their hearts to do it willingly, and not only out of fear. So that they lent unto them; Heb. and they lent them, to wit, the jewels or vessels mentioned ver. 35. They spoiled the Egyptians, to wit, of their ornaments. Quest. Was not this unjustly done of the Israelites to borrow these jewels which they never paid again? Answ. No, 1. Because they did nothing in this matter but by God's appointment, chap. xi. 1, 2; so that if there be any injustice, it must be in God, in whom there neither can be in any thing, nor is in this thing, the least blot or shadow of injustice, as well because he hath an unquestionable right in and power to dispose of all persons and things, as being the Maker, and Giver, and Lord of all; as because there was great and evident reason both why the Israelites should be recompensed for all their hard labours and sufferings, and why the Egyptians should be spoiled for their idolatry, luxury, and cruelty to the Israelites, and the great benefits which they had received from Joseph, and from the service of the Israelites. 2. Because the supreme Lord of all forbade them to restore what they borrowed, and gave them the entire right and sole propriety therein. 3. Because though there was a form and appearance of borrowing and lending, yet indeed the Israelites did not so much borrow as desire, as the Hebrew word rendered borrow (ver. 35) signifies; and the Egyptians did not reckon these things; as lent, and to be restored, but as given, and never to be expected again; even as Pharaoh and his people rightly judged, that if the Israelites were once permitted to go out of the land with their whole families and estates, they would never return again, chap. xiv. 5. And in truth the Egyptians did and might esteem it a good bargain to give these things to redeem their lives, and to engage the Israelites to a speedy departure, knowing that otherwise both their persons and all their estates were in extreme hazard. 4. Because, if these jewels were properly borrowed, yet the Egyptians, by their causeless and hostile pursuit after the Israelites with intent to destroy them, did fully discharge them from all obligations to restitution, and give them a right not only to keep these goods, but to take any other which they could from the Egyptians, according to the known and approved laws of war.

^{7 Num. 33. 3, 5.}
^{8 Gen. 47. 11.}
^{9 Gen. 12. 2.}
^{10 Gen. 46. 3.}
^{11 Num. 1. 46.}
^{12 & 11. 21.}
37 ¶ And ⁷ the children of Israel journeyed from ⁸ Rameses to Succoth, about ⁹ six hundred thousand on foot ¹⁰ that were men, beside children.

Succoth; a place so called, either because there the Israelites first lodged in booths or tents, whereas before they dwelt in houses; or because there God first spread his cloud of fire over them for a covering, Psal. cv. 39. Six hundred thousand, to wit, grown and strong men, and fit for war, among whom there was none feeble or sick, Psal. cv. 37. Thus the heathen writer Chæremon, mentioned by Josephus, speaking of this matter, reckons up first two hundred and fifty thousand, and then three hundred and eighty thousand more. That were men: the Hebrew word properly signifies strong and able men, fit to go on foot in battle-array; so decrepit or weak old men are not comprehended in this number. Beside children, and women, whose presence and assistance is necessary to them. See Exod. x. 24. Some say the Hebrew word taph signifies their households or families, which consist principally of women and children.

^{13 Heb. a great mixture.}
^{14 Num. 11. 4.}
38 And † a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

A mixed multitude, consisting of Egyptians or other people, who went with them, either because they were their servants, or that by this means they might free themselves from the servitude which they endured under hard masters in Egypt; or because the glorious works which they had seen, had raised their esteem of God and of his people, and made them expect a share in the great felicities which they presumed would be conferred upon a people so highly honoured and beloved of such an almighty and all-sufficient God. And because their hearts were not sincere, nor their ends right, they soon repented of their choice, Numb. xi. 4. Compare Zech. viii. 23.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because ^b they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

It was not leavened; both because leaven was forbidden to them at that time, and because the great haste required gave them not time for leavening it. They were thrust out of Egypt; not by force, but by importunate requests, as was observed on ver. 33. Thus men are said to be driven to worship the sun, moon, &c., when they are persuaded to it, Deut. iv. 19.

^{c Gen. 15. 13.}
^{d Acts 7. 6.}
^{e Gal. 3. 17.}
40 ¶ Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was ^c four hundred and thirty years.

It is plain that those years are to be computed from the first promise made to Abraham, Gen. xii. 1, 2, to the giving of the law, from Gal. iii. 17, where this is affirmed. And although it doth not plainly appear when that promise was made, because the Scripture mentions not Abraham's age, neither when it was made, nor when Abraham came to Haran with his father, Gen. xi. 31, but only when he went out of Haran, being seventy-five years old, Gen. xii. 4; yet a good while after it was made, and, as it may seem more than probable, thirty years afterward, it is manifest there were only four hundred years of this time to come, Gen. xv. 13. And many more years passed ere there was such a man as Israel or Jacob, and more ere there were any children of Israel, or of Jacob, and yet more ere they came into Egypt. How then can this be true which is here said? Answ. 1. Some affirm that they were in Egypt four hundred and thirty years, which is sooner said than proved. 2. Some ancient Hebrew copies are said to have had more words than ours now have; for the LXX. and Samaritan interpreters after the words in Egypt, read, and in the land of Canaan. And some other copies after the word who, add, together with their fathers, or, and their fathers. And so the difficulty vanisheth. And if it should be granted that there were some few such errors in our present copies in matters purely historical or chronological, which God might permit to be there for many wise and holy reasons, yet this is no prejudice to our faith, or to God's providence, which hath been pleased to have so special a care of those texts which concern the essentials of faith and a good life, that all copies are agreed in them. 3. These four hundred and thirty years are not by the text confined to Egypt, but may be extended to any place where they were sojourners; and the Hebrew word asher is not to be rendered which, as relating to the time of their sojourning, but who, as belonging to the persons sojourning, as our translation well renders it; and the sense is, that they were sojourners, or, which is all one, strangers, or dwellers in a land that was not theirs, as it is said Gen. xv. 13, for four hundred and thirty years. And the emphasis lies in the Hebrew word moshab, which is here fitly rendered sojourning; as toshab, coming from the same root, is commonly used for a sojourner, or one that lives in a place or land which is not his, as Lev. xxii. 10; xxv. 35, 40; Numb. xxxv. 15; Psal. xxxix. 12. There is now but one difficulty remains, How the children of Israel can be said to be sojourners so long, seeing much of this time passed before they were born? Answ. As Levi is said to pay tithes in Abraham, Heb. vii. 9, because he was in the loins of Abraham when Abraham paid tithes; with much more reason might the children of Israel be said to sojourn so long, because they sojourned a great part of it in their own persons, and the rest in the loins of their parents. And as oftentimes when the parents only are mentioned, the children are included or intended, as Gen. xii. 3, in thee, i. e. in thy seed; and Gen. xiii. 17, I will give it (the land) unto thee, i. e. to thy seed; and Jacob is said to be brought up again out of Egypt, Gen. xli. 4, to wit, in his posterity; and David is oft put for his posterity, as 1 Kings xii. 16; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; xxxvii. 24, 25; why may not parents also be understood sometimes when the children only are mentioned? But we need not make suppositions, seeing we have examples; the persecution in Egypt, and deliverance out of it, which happened to the parents only, being attributed to their posterity, who neither felt the one, nor saw the other, Deut. xxvi. 5, &c. Compare Psal. lxxvi. 6; Judg. x. 11, 12. And the souls of the house of Jacob, (i. e. of the children of Israel, for by house it is evident he means only children,) which came with Jacob into Egypt, are said to be threescore and ten souls, Gen. xli. 26, 27. In which number and title Jacob himself is confessedly included. And therefore upon the very same ground, under this title of the children of Israel, we must understand Israel himself, who being the chief author and subject of this sojourning in Egypt, it were unreasonable to exclude him from the number of those sojourners. And this phrase being once extended to their immediate parent, may by a parity of reason be extended to their great-grandfather Abraham, as being the first author of that famous peregrination or sojourning, which being begun in Canaan, ended in Egypt. Add to this, that the word Israel, as it is put for the people or children of Israel, is elsewhere used for the whole church of God, as Rom. ix. 6, and therefore may well include Abraham as the father, and, under God, the founder of it. And the title of the children of Israel might well be given to all that people, and to the family from which they descended, because they were now known by that name. And that this indeed was Moses's meaning, which is here produced, may be further gathered from hence, that otherwise Moses had contradicted himself; for by the years of the lives of Jacob, and Levi, and Kohath, and Amram, and Moses himself, which he precisely sets down, it appears that the sojourning of the children of Israel, strictly so called, in Egypt, was not above two hundred and fifteen years. And it is absurd to think that so wise and learned a man, as all acknowledge Moses to have been, should commit so gross an error, especially seeing that generation could easily have confuted him.

41 And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

If this be the right translation, the four hundred and thirty years mentioned Gal. iii. 17 are to be taken in a latitude, for about or near so many years, as is very frequent in Scripture and other authors; else there wants one year of it, because the law was not given till about a year after their coming out of Egypt. Nor was it of any concernment to the apostle's argument there, whether it wanted a year of that number or no, as here it is. But the words may be rendered here, as Gen. vii. 12, in the body or strength of the day, i. e. when the day-light was full, and clear, and strong, when it was broad day-light, the Egyptians seeing and not being able to hinder them. If it be said they went out by night, Deut. xvi. 1, that is true, in regard of their resolution, and preparation, and the beginning of their journey; but their actual marching forth was by day-light, or in the morning; nor could it be done sooner from the nature of the thing, and the time necessarily required for so great a work. The selfsame day: this circumstance is noted to set forth the accurateness and infallibility of God's foreknowledge, and the efficacy of his providence in accomplishing all his own counsels in his own appointed time.

42 It is † a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover: There shall no stranger eat thereof:

This which here followeth is the law or appointment of God concerning the celebration of the passover. No stranger, or, foreigner, who is so both by nation and religion; for if were circumcised, he might eat of it, ver. 44, 48.

44 But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

When thou hast circumcised him; for the master had a power to circumcise such persons, Gen. xvii. 12. And though it is probable, that by their interest in them, and a diligent instruction of them, they made them willing to receive circumcision, yet it seems they had a power to compel them to it; but then circumcision was not to them a seal of God's covenant, nor of their religion, for that must be matter of choice, but only a civil badge, or a note of that family or people into which they were politically incorporated.

45 A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

Except he submit to circumcision, as ver. 43. See Numb. ix. 14.

46 In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house;

Partly, because they were all obliged not to go out of the house till the morning, ver. 22, and to leave none of it till that time, ver. 10; partly, lest it should be either superstitiously or profanely abused; and partly, to signify that Christ and salvation are not to be had out of God's house or church.

— Neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

To take out and eat the marrow of it. This was required, partly to mind them of their hasty departure out of Egypt, wherein they had no leisure to break and empty the bones; and principally, that it might be an evident type of the Lord Jesus, in whom this was literally fulfilled, John xix. 36. The bones were burnt with the other remainders of the lamb.

47 All the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

48 And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.

50 Thus did all the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass the selfsame day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies.

CHAP. XIII.

God commands all the first-born to be consecrated, 1, 2. The day of their going forth out of Egypt to be had in remembrance, 3. The feast of unleavened bread to be kept in the land of Canaan, 5—10. The firstlings of beasts to be set apart for the Lord, 12. The reason of it, 15. The way God led them into the wilderness, 18. Moses carries Joseph's bones out of Egypt, 19. Israel encampeth at Etham, 20. God conducteth them by a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night, 21, 22.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast: it is mine.

Sanctify unto me, to my use and service, in manner as I shall hereafter explain. And sanctify, i. e. command all the people to sanctify, as Moses did, ver. 12. All the first-born, viz. if they be males, as it is limited, ver. 12. Whatsoever openeth the womb; every child which is the first-born of his mother: so that if a man had many wives, either together or successively, his first child by every one of these was a first-born. Whether clean or unclean, though in different manner; whereof see Numb. xviii. 13, 15, 17. It is mine, by special right and title; as being by my singular care and favour preserved from the common destruction, and therefore I challenge a peculiar interest in them, and do hereby require that they be devoted to me.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: there shall no leavened bread be eaten.

4 This day came ye out in the month Abib.

See Exod. xii. 2, in the spring-time, the most proper season for a long journey.

5 ¶ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that thou shalt keep this service in this month.

d ch. 7. 4. & ver. 51.

† Heb. a night of observations. e See Deut. 15. 6.

f Numb. 9. 14.

g Gen. 17. 12, 13.

h Lev. 22. 10.

i Numb. 9. 12, John 19. 33, 36.

k ver. 6. Num. 9. 13. † Heb. do it. 1 Num. 9. 14.

m Numb. 9. 14. & 15. 15, 16. Gal. 3. 28.

n ver. 41.

o ch. 6. 26.

a ver. 12, 13, 15. ch. 22. 29, 30, & 34. 19. Lev. 27. 28. Numb. 3. 13. & 8. 16, 17, & 18. 15. Deut. 15. 19. Luke 2. 23.

b ch. 12. 42. Deut. 16. 3.

† Heb. servants. c ch. 6. 1.

d ch. 12. 8.

e ch. 23. 15. & 34. 18. Deut. 16. 1.

f ch. 3. 8.

g ch. 6. 8.

h ch. 12. 25, 26.

This service; which is spoken of before, and in the following verses. From this place it is evident the Israelites were not obliged to this service in the wilderness without a particular command from God. See Deut. xii. 1, 9.

6 ^{i ch. 12. 15, 16.} Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 ^{k ch. 12. 19.} Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall ^hno leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 ^{l ver. 14. ch. 12. 26.} ¶ And thou shalt ^hshew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for ^ma sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the LORD's law may be in thy mouth: for with a strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

The celebration of this feast shall be to thee instead of a mark which a man makes, or a ring, or any thing else which he puts upon his hand or arm, to bring any thing to his remembrance; for such things his eye is most frequently fixed upon. Compare Cant. viii. 6; Isa. xlix. 16; Jer. xxii. 24; Hag. ii. 23. A memorial between thine eyes; instead of any monument or memorial, which is placed between, and therefore directly before a man's eyes, which he can scarcely overlook, and therefore must needs bring to remembrance the thing which he would not forget. Such proverbial phrases are usual in Scripture, as Deut. vi. 8; Prov. iii. 3; vi. 21; vii. 3; and are not to be understood literally, as the superstitious Jews understood them, who hence derive their custom of wearing scrolls of parchment upon their foreheads, and arms, and garments, which they call phylacteries, wherein they wrote certain portions of Scripture. But they might as well have added parcels of God's law to be kept in their mouths, because it follows, that the Lord's law may be in thy mouth; from whence we may better infer that neither mouth, nor hand, nor eyes are to be properly understood, for then it had been an improper method to fasten a parchment between their eyes, that it might be in their mouths; but figuratively, as they are commonly understood in Scripture.

10 ^{n ch. 12. 14, 24.} Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

Heb. From days to days. But days in the Hebrew tongue are oft put for a complete year. Of which see Gen. iv. 3; Lev. xxv. 29; Amos iv. 4.

11 ¶ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, as he swore unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee,

The land of the Canaanites, under which general name all the other nations are contained, as being all the children of Canaan.

12 ^{o ver. 2. ch. 22. 29. & 34. 19. Lev. 27. 26. Num. 8. 17. & 18. 15. Deut. 15. 19. Ezek. 44. 30.} That thou shalt [†]set apart unto the LORD all that openeth the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the males shall be the LORD's.

Thou shalt set apart, i. e. separate it from the rest, resign thy right in it to God. Heb. Cause it to pass, not through the fire, as that verb is used, Deut. xviii. 10; 2 Kings xvi. 3; but under the rod, as it is used, and more fully expressed, Lev. xxvii. 32, which was the rite when any thing was separated and consecrated to God. The males shall be the Lord's, devoted to him, either to be sacrificed, if it was clean, or to be otherwise destroyed, if it was unclean, as it here follows.

13 And ^{p ch. 34. 20. Num. 18. 15, 16.} every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a [¶]lamb; and if thou ^{q Or, kid.} wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all the firstborn of man ^{q Num. 8. 46, 47. & 18. 15, 16.} among thy children ⁹shalt thou redeem.

The ass was an unclean creature, and therefore this rule was to be observed in all other unclean creatures, as appears, 1. Because the reason of this law is common to all such. 2. By comparing this place with Numb. xviii. 15. 3. Because the first-born of all beasts were appropriated to God; and because many of them were unclean, and so could not be sacrificed, there was no other way of offering them to God, but by redemption, or a price paid for them. And the single exception of the price of a dog in this case, Deut. xxiii. 18, doth sufficiently intimate that the price of all other unclean creatures was allowed and required. The ass alone is here named for all the rest, because this creature was most common, and most useful, and yet was not to be spared; whence it was easy to infer, that this course was much rather to be observed in other creatures which were of less use. Thou shalt break his neck; or, cut off his neck, or head, as the word is used, Deut. xxi. 4; Isa. lxvi. 3; because being consecrated to God, it was not to be applied to any profane or common use.

14 ¶ And it shall be when thy son asketh thee ^{r ch. 12. 26. Deut. 6. 20. Josh. 4. 6, 21. † Heb. to Morrow. § ver. 3.} in time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, [†]By strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage:

Which is added to teach parents in all succeeding ages, that it is their duty to instruct their children in the word and works of God, and in the nature and reasons of every particular kind or part of God's worship and service. See Deut. xv. 5; Psal. lxxvi. 4; Hos. ii. 14.

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that ^{t ch. 12. 29.} the LORD slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of man, and the firstborn of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the firstborn of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for ^{u ver. 9.} a token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

For frontlets; instead of frontlets. The sense is, This practice shall make your deliverance from Egypt as fresh and evident to you, and to your children, as any thing which you see hanged or written upon one another's foreheads. See Ezek. ix. 4. It seems strange to me, that they that understand the sign on the hand, and the memorial between the eyes, ver. 9, metaphorically, should understand the frontlets between the eyes in this place properly, seeing the phrase is perfectly the same; only here is a more particular allusion to the custom of the Egyptians, which used to wear some devices upon their foreheads, which probably they called totaphoth, which were memorials of their idols, or of something relating to them. And therefore it seems unlikely that he should here prescribe the use of the same things to the Jews; and the more probable meaning of the phrase is only this, that this practice would be as effectual and useful a remembrancer of this mighty and glorious work of God in bringing them out of Egypt, as those contrivances were to the Egyptians of their idols.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people ^{x ch. 14. 11, 12. Num. 14. 1, 4. † Deut. 17. 18.} repent when they see war, and [†]they return to Egypt:

The Philistines, a fierce and warlike people, whereof they had sad and late experience, 1 Chron. vii. 21. That was near; there being this way but a few days' journey between Egypt and Canaan. Peradventure: God speaks after the manner of men, for nothing was unknown nor uncertain to him. Though the Hebrew particle pen doth not always imply doubting, but oftentimes only signifies lest, as Gen. iii. 3; xxxviii. 23; Numb. xx. 18. When they see war; which they were likely to do, because the war would probably be long and hot, and their bodies were much weakened, and their spirits and courage broken, by a tedious and grievous bondage; and therefore it was fit that before they were called to such sharp conflicts, they should be hardened by the labours of a long and troublesome journey, and their faith should be strengthened by further experience of God's power, and faithfulness, and goodness, and by the glorious appearance of God at Mount Sinai, and those commands, promises, and encouragements there given them. But though this which is here mentioned was one, yet it was not the only reason of his counsel, but there were other causes of it; the Egyptians were to be drowned in the sea, the Israelites to be further tried, Deut. viii. 2, and full measure to be allowed to the iniquity of the Amorites. And they return to Egypt; as afterwards they attempted to do, Numb. xiv., upon a like occasion.

^{a ch. 14. 2. Num. 33. 6. &c.} 18 But God ^aled the people about, ^bthrough the way of the wilderness of the Red sea: and the children of Israel went up ^charnessed out of the land of Egypt.

Or, armed, or girt with swords and belts about the fifth rib, as the Hebrew word may imply. But it doth not appear how or whence they should get their arms, nor how the Egyptians would permit so numerous a people to have and to keep arms, especially when they had a long time oppressed and exasperated them, and made them desperate. It is true, some few of them might procure arms, but this word is here used concerning the whole body of them. Others render it by fives, five and five in a rank, that is, by a usual synecdoche, in military order, not doubtfully and fearfully, but confidently and courageously; not confusedly, as men that steal or run away, but in good order, so as one might not hinder another. Which interpretation is strengthened by comparing Josh. i. 14. It may be rendered girt, to wit, about the fifth rib, as the word implies, the place where men used to gird their garments, this being the usual posture for travellers: he implies that they went out resolved upon and prepared for their journey.

^{a Gen. 50. 25. Josh. 24. 32. Acts 7. 16.} 19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, ^aGod will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

The bones of Joseph, and the other patriarchs, as appears from Acts vii. 16. The oath was taken only by the parents, but because the matter of it was not personal, and of particular concernment to them, but common to them and their children, therefore it obliged both the parents and their children, as Moses here signifieth.

^{b Num. 33. 6.} 20 ¶ And ^bthey took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.

^{c ch. 14. 19. 24. & 40. 38. Num. 9. 15. & 10. 34. & 14. 14. Deut. 1. 33. Neh. 9. 12. 19. Ps. 78. 14. & 99. 7. & 105. 39. Is. 4. 5. 1 Cor. 10. 1.} 21 And ^cthe LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night:

The Lord, the Son of God, whose presence and conduct the Israelites had in the wilderness, as appears from 1 Cor. x. 4, 9; compare Heb. xi. 26; who is sometimes called the Angel of the Lord, chap. xiv. 19, because he was and was to be his Father's Angel or Messenger, sent by God unto men to ratify his covenant with them; whence he is called the Angel of the covenant, Mal. iii. 1, as he is upon another account called the Angel of his presence, Isa. lxiii. 9. Went before them, not by local motion, but by his gracious and powerful operations for and about them. The pillar was but one, Numb. ix. 15, 16, having two different appearances and uses, of a cloud by day, to defend them from the heat, Psal. cv. 39, which in those parts was excessive; and of a fire by night, to illuminate them. It was a cloud erected towards heaven, like a pillar upwards;

but downwards flat and broad, spread over the body of the people, and afterwards more eminently over the tabernacle. To lead them the way, which was altogether necessary in those vast and pathless deserts, Numb. x. 33; Deut. i. 33.

22 He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people.

Whilst they continued in the wilderness, and had need of such direction.

CHAP. XIV.

God commandeth the Israelites to encamp at Pi-hahiroth, 1, 2; the reason why, 3, 4. Pharaoh and his servants repent for letting the people go, 5; pursue and overtake the Israelites, 8, 9. The Israelites are afraid, 10; and murmur against Moses, 11, 12. Moses encourages the people with a promise of deliverance, 13, 14. God encouraging Moses, 15, bids the people go forward, 16. God defends the Israelites by the pillar of cloud, 19, 20. Moses dividing the sea, 21, the Israelites pass over on dry ground, 22. The Egyptians with all their forces pursue them into the sea, 23. God commands Moses to cause the waters to return on the Egyptians, 26. The waters return, 27. The Egyptians drowned, 28. Israel's safety, 29, 30, and faith, 31.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

Or rather, had spoken, to wit, before they came to Succoth, chap. xii. 37. For what was there briefly and generally expressed, is here more largely and particularly declared, together with the occasion of it, which was God's command.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, ^athat they turn and encamp before ^bPi-hahiroth, between ^cMigdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

Pi-hahiroth, Heb. the mouth of Hîrôth, i. e. the entrance or straits of Hiroth, two great mountains, between which they marched, and were enclosed on both sides. Migdol, a city in Egypt, Jer. xlii. 1, wherein it is thought there was a garrison. Baal-zephon, another place of note, situated in a high place, and having a fair and large prospect, and possibly a garrison too.

3 For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, ^dThey are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

They are enclosed with mountains, and garrisons, and deserts.

4 And ^eI will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; and ^fI will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; ^gthat the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

I will be honoured, by the manifestation of my power and justice.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and ^hthe heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

That the people fled; did not only depart for three days to sacrifice at Horeb, as Moses pretended, but designed an escape and flight, as appeared by their speedy march, and other circumstances. Why have we done this? They who never truly repented of their sins, now heartily repent of their only good action.

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him:

7 And he took ⁱsix hundred chosen

^a ch. 13. 18. ^b Num. 33. 7. ^c Jer. 44. 1.

^d Ps. 71. 11.

^e ch. 4. 21. ^f & 7. 3.

^g ch. 9. 16. ver. 17, 18. Rom. 9. 17, 22, 23. ^h ch. 7. 5.

^h Ps. 105. 26.

ⁱ ch. 15. 4.

chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

Quest. How could he use or carry his chariots, when all his horses were killed by that plague? Exod. ix. 6.
Ans. That plague slew only the horses which were in the field, chap. ix. 3, not those kept in houses, as the chariot-horses generally were, and now are.

All the chariots, i. e. a great number; all that could be got together in haste, which the present service required. Over every one of them; over the men that fought out of every chariot. Or, over all of them; the command of all these chariots being distributed to several captains or commanders.

8 And the LORD ^{k ver. 4.} hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and ^{l ch. 6. 1. & 13. 9. Num. 33. 3.} the children of Israel went out with an high hand.

Either, 1. Of God, with a Divine hand or power, by comparing Exod. xiii. 16. Or, 2. Their own, not with hands hanging down, a posture betraying weakness and fainting, fear and shame, Heb. xii. 12, but with hands lifted up; with courage and confidence, not like fugitives, but like valiant and victorious soldiers, openly, boldly, resolvedly; as men are said to sin with a high hand, Numb. xv. 30, that sin in such a manner.

9 But the ^{m ch. 15. 9. Josh. 24. 6. 1 Mac. 4. 9.} Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: and the children of Israel ^{n Josh. 24. 7. Neh. 9. 9. Ps. 34. 17. & 107. 6.} cried out unto the LORD.

Which is not strange; these being now a people of low spirits, depressed by long and grievous servitude; being also generally unarmed, wearied with their journey, and their fears aggravated by the presence and outrages of their wives and children. But they should have supported themselves by the consideration of the mighty power of God, of which they had late and great experience. They cried out, partly by petition, and partly by complaint and expostulation.

11 ^{o Ps. 106. 7, 8.} And they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?

12 ^{p ch. 5. 21. & 6. 9.} Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, ^{q 2 Chro. 20. 15, 17, 18. 41. 10, 13, 14.} Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to day: ¶ for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

Stand still; Heb. make yourselves to stand; let not your hearts fail and sink, or stagger through unbelief, but with quiet minds look up to God. It notes the frame of their minds, not the posture of their bodies. Whom ye have seen; or, as ye have seen them, to wit, alive and armed, and ready to devour you; for otherwise they did see them dead and disarmed, ver. 30.

14 ^{r ver. 25. Dent. 1. 20. & 3. 22. & 30. 4. Jos. 10. 14. & 23. 3. 2 Chro. 20. 29. Neh. 4. 20. Is. 31. 4. 5 Is. 30. 15.} The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall ^{s ver. 25.} hold your peace.

i. e. Ye shall contribute nothing to the victory, neither by your words nor by your deeds; for this Hebrew word signifies a cessation not only from speech, but from action too, as 2 Sam. xix. 11; Psal. lxxxiii. 1; Isa. xlii. 14, 15. Or rather, do you hold your peace, the future tense for the imperative, as it is very frequent; cease your murmuring against the Lord and me.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward:

Wherefore criest thou unto me, by fervent, though secret prayer? for which he doth not approve him, but only bids him turn his prayer into action. Compare Josh. vii. 10, 13.

16 But ^{t ver. 21, 26. ch. 7. 19.} lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

Divide it, i. e. do thou command it in my name to divide itself hither and thither, and I will divide it.

17 And I, behold, I will ^{u ver. 8. ch. 7. 3.} harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will ^{x ver. 4.} get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians ^{y ver. 4.} shall know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And the angel of God, ^{z ch. 13. 21. & 23. 20. & 32. 34. Num. 20. 16. Is. 63. 9.} which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

Not changing his place, for he was the omnipresent God, ver. 15; but his operation, from leading the Israelites forward in their way, to the protecting of them from their pursuers.

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and ^{a See Is. 8. 14. 2 Cor. 4. 3.} it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

It was a cloud and darkness to the Egyptians, to whom it brought their former horrible darkness to mind, and did both exceedingly affright them, and altogether hinder them from motion or action, as that also did for three days. But it gave light by night to the Israelites, as the opposition showeth.

21 And Moses ^{b ver. 16. c Ps. 66. 6. d ch. 15. 8. Josh. 3. 16. & 4. 23. Neh. 9. 11. Ps. 74. 13. & 106. 9. & 114. 3. Is. 63. 12.} stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and ^{e ver. 16. f Ps. 66. 6. g Josh. 3. 16. & 4. 23. Neh. 9. 11. Ps. 74. 13. & 106. 9. & 114. 3. Is. 63. 12.} made the sea dry land, and the waters were ^{h ver. 16. i Ps. 66. 6. j Josh. 3. 16. & 4. 23. Neh. 9. 11. Ps. 74. 13. & 106. 9. & 114. 3. Is. 63. 12.} divided.

A strong east wind; a proper instrument both to divide that sea, which lay north and south, and to dry and harden the mud at the bottom of the sea, that the Israelites might walk upon it. See Gen. viii. 13; Exod. xv. 8. Yet the wind could never have done so great a work, especially not so speedily, if there had not been a higher, even a Divine hand to manage and improve it. The waters were divided, so largely, that a great number of the Israelites might march in one rank, and the whole number might go a good way in it in the time here mentioned.

22 And ^{e ver. 22. ch. 15. 19. Num. 33. 8. Ps. 66. 6. & 78. 15. Is. 63. 13. 1 Cor. 10. 1. Heb. 11. 29. f Hab. 3. 10.} the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were ^{g ver. 22. ch. 15. 19. Num. 33. 8. Ps. 66. 6. & 78. 15. Is. 63. 13. 1 Cor. 10. 1. Heb. 11. 29. f Hab. 3. 10.} a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

This was about midnight, as may be gathered from ver. 24. The waters were a wall, both for height, and for their defence.

23 ¶ And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 And it came to pass, that in the morning watch ^g the LORD looked upon the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians,

The night was anciently divided, not by hours, as now it is, but by watches, which sometimes were accounted four, and sometimes but three; howsoever the last of them was called the morning watch. Then when they hoped for most advantage in the pursuit, they met with their greatest disaster. The Lord; called the Angel of God, ver. 19. By which promiscuous use of these titles it sufficiently appears that this was no ordinary angel, but the Son of God. The Lord looked with an eye of indignation and vengeance, (as that phrase is used, Job xl. 12: see also Amos ix. 4,) and troubled them with most terrible and prodigious winds, and rains, and lightnings, and both claps and bolts of thunder, as may be gathered from Exod. xv. 10; Psal. lxxvii. 18, 19; and, as some ancient historians relate, with terrors also in their minds, &c.

25 And took off their chariot wheels, ¶ that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD ^h fighteth for them against the Egyptians.

Took off their chariot wheels; either burning them with lightning, or tearing them in pieces with thunder-bolts, or loosening them, and making them to fall off. That they drave them heavily; Heb. and he made him, or them, the singular number for the plural, i. e. the Egyptians, or their chariots, to go heavily, hardly and slowly, either for want of wheels, or for breaches in them, or because the rain had softened the bottom of the sea, or because the lightnings and thunders affrighted and dispirited their horses. For the Lord fighteth for them. Prodigious stupidity! They did not understand and consider this, though it was notorious, to them especially, by many great and fresh instances, till it was too late to prevent it; therein being a type of most sinners, who will not be convinced, nor repent, till they be past all benefit by it.

26 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen.

27 And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea ^k returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it; and the LORD ^l overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

The sea returned to his strength; to its natural and ordinary course and motion, which is swift and strong, which it had been hitherto restrained by a stronger hand, and rendered in a manner impotent and weak. But now, Samson-like, when its bonds are broken, it puts forth its former and natural strength. But indeed this word may belong to the morning, and so a learned man translates the place, and that very agreeably to the use and order of the Hebrew words, The sea returned, to wit, to its course, when the morning appeared according to, or in his strength, i. e. when it was full and clear morning; as we oft read of the strength of the day. See Gen. vii. 13; Job xxi. 23. So the strength of the morning is here opposed to the morning watch. Against it; against the sea, for which way soever they fled the waters met them, and fought against them.

28 And ^m the waters returned, and ⁿ covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them.

After them, i. e. after the children of Israel. Note here, the relative is put without an antecedent before it; the antecedent being to be understood and gathered out of the following verse, or out of the course of the story. An observation which is very useful for the understanding of many scriptures. See the note on Gen. iii. 1.

29 But ^o the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus the LORD ^p saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel ^q saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore.

Which was done either, 1. By the natural power of the sea, which casteth up its dead bodies after a certain time; till which time God caused the Israelites to abide near the sea, that they might see this for their comfort. Or, 2. By the mighty power of God, which brought them, and their arms too, as many probably conceive, to shore before the usual time. Quest. How could the Israelites, both they and their cattle, in so little time get over that great sea? Ans. 1. The Hebrew and some other interpreters deny that they went over, and tell us, they only went into the sea, and fetched a compass in it, that they might allure the Egyptians to follow them, and then by Moses's conduct returned to the Egyptian shore again. The principal ground of which opinion is this, That as they went into the sea out of the wilderness of Etham, Exod. xiii. 20, so they came again out of the sea into the wilderness of Etham, Numb. xxxiii. 8. But the sameness of the name doth not prove that it is the same place, nothing being more frequent in Scripture, than for divers places to be called by one and the same name. And the Israelites might possibly give the name of Etham to this desert on the Arabian side of the Red Sea, either for its great resemblance to that desert so called on the Egyptian side; or to intimate, that God by dividing the sea, had made that and this to be one continued desert. Or the name of Etham might be common to all that desert at the end of the Red Sea, and on both sides of it. Ans. 2. They might all conveniently pass over the sea to the Arabian shore in the time allowed for it, either by the mighty power of God, which could easily make both men and beasts to do it in much less than ordinary time, or even by the course of nature; for that part of the sea was not above eight or nine miles over, as geographers and others affirm. And the time allotted for their passage seems to be much more than interpreters have assigned for it. For the Egyptians and Israelites were divided one from another by the cloudy pillar all the night, ver. 20, and a strong east wind blew all that night, ver. 21. The next morning, as I apprehend it, the cloud still keeping between them, and possibly covering the Egyptians with gross and horrible darkness, which hindered their march, the whole body of the Israelites, and their cattle too, are drawn by Moses's direction near the shore, and, it may be, the cattle were put into the sea, all which might well take up most of that day; then towards the evening they enter into the sea, and so proceed; and the cloud withdrawing further from the Egyptians, and following the Israelites, the Egyptians pursue after them, and, as it is very probable from the nature and reason of the thing, stand debating some considerable time, when they came to the shore, whether they should venture to follow them into the sea or no. At last the worst counsel prevails, as it generally happens when a people are under a Divine infatuation, and into the sea they go; and by the beginning of the morning watch they draw near the Israelites, when God seasonably appears for Israel's succour, and puts a stop to the march of the Egyptians. So the morning watch, mentioned ver. 24, I take to be, not the morning watch of that night, mentioned ver. 20, 21, (for all that night, and therefore the morning watch of that night, which was a third, or at least a fourth part of it, was now past and gone,) but the next morning watch after that night and the succeeding day; which seems much more reasonable, than to shrink up the march, first of the Israelites, and then of the Egyptians, into about three hours' time, which is the time between the midnight and the morning watch. Nor is there any thing in the text which in the least contradicts g See Ps. 77. 17, &c.

h Or, and made them to go heavily. i ver. 14.

i ver. 16.

k Josh. 4. 18.

l ch. 15. 1, 7. + Heb. shook off. Deut. 11. 4. Ps. 78. 53. Neh. 9. 11. Heb. 11. 29.

m Hab. 3. 8, 13. n Ps. 106. 11.

o ver. 22. p Ps. 77. 20, & 78. 62, 63.

p Ps. 106. 8, 10.

q Ps. 58. 10. & 59. 10.

this opinion, but only that this day's interval and work is not mentioned in this story; whereas such omissions are frequent in Scripture relations, in which the substance only is mentioned, and many circumstances omitted, whereof we have seen some instances already, and shall meet with many more hereafter.

† Heb. Aand. 31 And Israel saw that great †work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people feared the LORD, and †believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.

CHAP. XV.

Moses and the people praise the Lord, 1—21. They want water, 22. The waters of Marah are bitter, 23. The people murmur against Moses, 24. He crieth unto the Lord; the waters are sweetened, 25. They come to Elim, where they find twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees, 27.

THEN sang †Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will †sing unto the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

Moses composed the song, and he, together with the Israelites, sung it, unto the honour and praise of God.

2 The LORD is my strength and †song, and he is become my salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him †an habitation; my †father's God, and I †will exalt him.

My strength and song; the matter or subject of the present song of praise. An habitation; a place for his service and worship, where he will dwell by his special presence.

3 The LORD is a man of †war: the LORD is his †name.

A man of war; an eminent warrior; as the phrase is used 1 Sam. xvii. 33. Thus an eloquent man is called a man of words, Exod. iv. 10, and a mighty man, a man of arm, Job xxiii. 8.

4 †Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea:

With great force, like an arrow out of a bow; as the Hebrew word signifies.

—his chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

5 †The depths have covered them: †they sank into the bottom as a stone.

6 †Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in the greatness of thine †excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, which †consumed them †as stubble.

In the greatness of thine excellency; by thy great and glorious power. As stubble; as easily, and as speedily, and as irrevocably.

8 And †with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, †the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

Of thy nostrils; or, of thine anger, to wit, that vehement east wind, ver. 10, and chap. xiv. 21, which was raised by thine anger in order to the ruin of thine enemies. The floods, Heb. the streams, or the flowing waters, whose nature it is to be constantly in motion. Were congealed, i. e. hardened, stood still, as if they had been frozen, and so they were a wall on both hands, chap. xiv. 22. In the heart of the sea, i. e. the midst; as that word is used, Psal. xviii. 16; xlvii. 2; Ezek. xxviii. 2.

9 †The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will †divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them; I will draw my sword, my hand shall †destroy them.

My lust; the lust of covetousness and revenge too. Shall destroy them; or, take possession of them and theirs: see of this word, Numb. xiv. 12, 24.

10 Thou didst †blow with thy wind, †the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

Heb. Magnificent or honourable waters, made so by being the instrument of thy glorious work.

11 †Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the †gods? who is like thee, †glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, †doing wonders?

Amongst the gods, so called and esteemed; or princes or potentates, as Psal. xxix. 1; Ezek. xxxii. 21. Glorious in holiness, or, righteousness: thy power is great and glorious; but thou dost not abuse it to unrighteous and unworthy purposes, but to holy and honourable designs; to the punishment of wicked tyrants, and to the vindication of thy oppressed and holy people. Fearful in praises; in praiseworthy actions; the act being put for the object, as fear is put for a thing to be feared, as Psal. xiv. 5; 1 Pet. iii. 14. Or, to be feared or had in reverence when thou art praised; to be both loved and feared at the same time.

12 Thou stretchedst out †thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

Either, 1. The globe, consisting of earth and water, which is here called earth; as it is called the deep, and the waters, Gen. i. 2. Or, 2. The earth is here put for the sea, the other part of the same globe; as the soul is put for the body, or the dead carcass, the other part of the man, Lev. xix. 28; xxi. 1; Numb. vi. 6, 9, 11. Or, 3. The earth properly, either because many of them sunk into the mud at the bottom of the sea, and were buried in it; or because, after they were cast up upon the shore, they were buried by the Israelites in the earth.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast †led forth the people which thou hast redeemed: thou hast guided them in thy strength unto †thy holy habitation.

i. e. Canaan, the place where not only they shall dwell, but thou in and with them. See Psal. lxxviii. 52, &c.

14 †The people shall hear, and be afraid: †sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 †Then †the dukes of Edom shall be amazed; †the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them; †all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 †Fear and dread shall fall upon them; by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still †as a stone; till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over, †which thou hast purchased.

Be as still, or, be as silent; they shall be so struck with amazement, that they shall be impotent both for speech and motion.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and †plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, in the †Sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

In the mountain of thine inheritance; either, 1. In the country of Canaan, which is a mountainous country, full of r ch. 4. 31. & 19. 9. P's. 106. 12. John 2. 11. & 11. 45.

u Judg. 5. 1. 2 Sam. 22. 1. P's. 106. 12. Wisd. 10. 20. v ver. 21.

c Deut. 10. 21. Ps. 15. 2. & 22. 3. & 59. 17. & 62. 6. & 109. 1. & 118. 14. & 140. 7. In 12. 2. Hab. 3. 18. 19. d Gen. 28. 21. 22. 2 Sam. 7. 6. Ps. 132. 5.

g 1^a. 24. 8. Rev. 19. 11. h ch. 6. 3. P's. 83. 18.

i ch. 14. 28.

l ch. 14. 28. m Neh. 9. 11. n Ps. 118. 15, 16.

o Deut. 32. 26.

p Ps. 59. 13. q Is. 5. 24. & 47. 14.

r ch. 14. 21. 2 Sam. 22. 16. Job 4. 9. 2 Thess. 2. 8. s Ps. 78. 13. Hab. 3. 10.

t Judg. 5. 30. u Gen. 49. 27. Ps. 53. 12. Luke 11. 22. || Or, response.

x ch. 14. 21. Pa. 147. 18. y ver. 6. ch. 14. 28.

z 2 Sam. 7. 22. 1 Kings 8. 23. Ps. 71. 19. & 66. 8. & 89. 6. 8. Jer. 10. 6. & 49. 19.

|| Or, mighty ones. a Is. 6. 3. b Ps. 77. 14.

c ver. 5.

d Ps. 77. 15. 20. & 78. 52. & 80. 1. & 106. 9. Is. 63. 1. Jer. 2. 6. e Ps. 78. 54.

f Num. 14. 14. Deut. 2. 25. Josh. 2. 9, 10. P's. 43. 5. g Gen. 36. 40. i Deut. 2. 4. k Num. 22. 3. Hab. 3. 7. l Josh. 5. 1. m Deut. 2. 25. & 11. 25. Josh. 2. 9. n 1 Sam. 25. 37. o ch. 10. 5. Deut. 32. 9. 2 Sam. 7. 25. Ps. 74. 2. Is. 43. 1. 3. & 51. 10. Jer. 31. 11. T^a. 2. 14. 1 Pet. 2. 9. 2 Pet. 2. 1.

p Ps. 44. 2. & 80. 8.

q Ps. 78. 54.

hills and valleys, Deut. xi. 11; not like Egypt, a plain and low country. Or, 2. In and about the mount of Moriah, where the temple was to be built, which is here put for the whole land, it being the most eminent part of it, round about which the people were planted, and to which they were frequently to resort. Have established; will certainly build and establish, i. e. cause to be built and established. The past tense for the future, to note the certainty of it, according to the style of the prophets.

^r Psa. 10. 16. & 29. 10. & 146. 10. ^s ch. 14. 23. Prov. 21. 31. 18 The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

^t ch. 14. 28, 29. ^u Judg. 4. 4. 1 Sam. 10. 5. 2 Num. 26. 69. ^v 1 Sam. 18. 7. ^w Judg. 11. 34. & 21. 21. ^x Sam. 6. 16. Pa. 68. 11. 23. & 149. 3. & 150. 4. 19 For the 'horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and 'the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

^y 1 Sam. 18. 7. ^z Judg. 11. 34. & 21. 21. ² Sam. 6. 16. Pa. 68. 11. 23. & 149. 3. & 150. 4. 20 ¶ And Miriam ^a the prophetess, ^b the sister of Aaron, ^c took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her ^d with timbrels and with dances.

Miriam the prophetess; so called, either in a general sense, because she was an instructor of other women in the praise and service of God; or in a more special sense, because she had the Spirit of prophecy. See Numb. xii. 2; Micah vi. 4. The sister of Aaron. Quest. Why not of Moses also? Ans. 1. She might be Moses's sister only by one parent, Aaron's by both. 2. She was best known to the people by her relation to Aaron, with whom she had lived for many years, when Moses was banished. With timbrels and with dances, according to their ancient custom in public solemnities. See Judg. xi. 34; xxi. 21; 1 Sam. xviii. 6; 2 Sam. vi. 14, 21; Jer. xxxi. 4, 13.

^a 1 Sam. 18. 7. ^b ver. 1. 21 And Miriam ^c answered them, ^d Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

Miriam addressed either, 1. The women, last spoken of, and then it is an enallage of the gender. Or, 2. The men spoken of before. They sung by turns, or by parts, either the same words being repeated, or some other words of a like nature added. See 1 Chron. xvi. 41; 2 Chron. v. 13; Ezra iii. 11.

^e Gen. 16. 7. & 25. 18. 22 So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea, and they went out into the wilderness of ^f Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

Shur; so usually called, Gen. xvi. 7; and by the Israelites, Etham, as may be gathered by comparing this place with Numb. xxxiii. 8, for both there and here it is said they went three days in this wilderness.

^d Num. 33. 9. ^e That is, bitterness. Ruth 1. 20. e ch. 16. 2. & 17. 3. f ch. 14. 10. & 17. 4. Ps. 60. 15. g Eccles. 30. 8. 23 ¶ And when they came to ^h Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called ¶ Marah.

^h See 2 Kings 2. 21. & 4. 41. i See Josh. 24. 25. k ch. 16. 4. Deut. 8. 2. 16. Judg. 2. 22. & 5. 1, 4. Ps. 66. 10. & 81. 7. 24 And the people ⁱ murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

^l See 2 Kings 2. 21. & 4. 41. i See Josh. 24. 25. k ch. 16. 4. Deut. 8. 2. 16. Judg. 2. 22. & 5. 1, 4. Ps. 66. 10. & 81. 7. 25 And he ^j cried unto the LORD; and the LORD shewed him a ^k tree, ^l which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet: there he ^m made for them a statute and an ordinance, and there ⁿ he proved them,

The waters were made sweet, not so much by any virtue in that tree, as by the power of God, who used this rather as a sign to the Israelites, than as an instrument to himself in this work. There he made for them a statute: God, or Moses in God's name, and by his order, constituted and published to them a statute. Which seems to be understood not of any particular statute or law, as that concerning the sabbath, or their duty to their parents, or the like; for the specifying of their duties is reserved to another time and place; but of a general law or rule formerly given, and now solemnly renewed by Moses at God's command, like that given to Abraham their father, Gen. xvii. 1, Walk before me, and be perfect. God having thus far performed his part of that covenant made with Abraham and his seed, to bring them out of Egypt towards Canaan, tells them that he expects and requires of them their observance of the condition of that covenant, and gives them this indefinite and universal law or precept, that they should obey and fulfil all the commands which God had already laid upon them or their parents, and which he should hereafter reveal to them. This sense may be gathered out of the following verse, wherein he explains what he meant by this statute, even all God's statutes or commandments, which if they would keep, he engageth himself to preserve and deliver them. So it is only a change of the number, the singular, statute, being put for the plural, statutes, which is a figure very frequently used both in Scripture and in other authors. God having now eased them of the hard and iron yoke of the Egyptians, puts his sweet and easy yoke upon them; and having undertaken to be their King, and Protector, and Captain, he claims their subjection to himself, and to his laws or statutes. He proved them, or, tried them, i. e. the Israelites. There he tried both their faith by the difficulty now mentioned, viz. their want of water, and their future obedience by this general command, which he is about to branch forth into divers particulars.

^o Deut. 7. 12, 15. 26 And said, ^p If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these ^q diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD ^r that healeth thee.

None of these diseases upon thee, nor other evils or plagues; but, on the contrary, I will bless thee with all manner of blessings. Under one branch or part of the blessings of God's covenant, he includes all the rest by a very common synecdoche. That healeth thee; or, thy physician, for all thy maladies both of soul and body.

^s Num. 33. 9. 27 ¶ And they came to Elim, where ^t were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

Palm trees were both pleasant for their shade, and refreshing for their sweet fruit. Thus the Israelites are obliged and encouraged to the obedience commanded, by being put into better circumstances than they were under in their last station.

CHAP. XVI.

The children of Israel sojourn in the wilderness of Sin, 1; murmur against Moses, 2, 3. God promises to supply their wants with bread from heaven, 4; and directs about preparing this bread, 5. Moses reproves the people for murmuring, 7, 8; appoints them to come before the Lord, 9. God's glory appeareth in the cloud, 10. He sendeth quails, 13, and manna, 14, 15. Every one gather a quantity, 16—18. The command about keeping it, 19, is disobeyed, 20. The time of gathering, 21. Their increasing the quantity on the sixth day, 22—24. The command concerning the sabbath, 25, 26, disobeyed, 27; for which God is angry, 28. Moses's counsel, 29. They rest, 30. The name of the bread, 31. The command concerning the preservation of the manna, 32, 33. The time of the manna's continuance, 35.

AND they ^a took their journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of ^b Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.

r Psa. 10. 16. & 29. 10. & 146. 10. s ch. 14. 23. Prov. 21. 31.

t ch. 14. 28, 29.

u Judg. 4. 4. 1 Sam. 10. 5. 2 Num. 26. 69.

v 1 Sam. 18. 7. w Judg. 11. 34. & 21. 21. x Sam. 6. 16. Pa. 68. 11. 23. & 149. 3. & 150. 4.

y 1 Sam. 18. 7. z Judg. 11. 34. & 21. 21. 2 Sam. 6. 16. Pa. 68. 11. 23. & 149. 3. & 150. 4.

a 1 Sam. 18. 7. b ver. 1.

e Gen. 16. 7. & 25. 18.

d Num. 33. 9. e That is, bitterness. Ruth 1. 20. e ch. 16. 2. & 17. 3. f ch. 14. 10. & 17. 4. Ps. 60. 15. g Eccles. 30. 8.

h See 2 Kings 2. 21. & 4. 41. i See Josh. 24. 25. k ch. 16. 4. Deut. 8. 2. 16. Judg. 2. 22. & 5. 1, 4. Ps. 66. 10. & 81. 7.

o Deut. 7. 12, 15.

m Deut. 23. 27, 60.

n ch. 23. 25. Pa. 41. 3, 4. & 103. 3. & 147. 3.

s Num. 33. 9.

1491. a Num. 33. 10, 11.

b Ezek. 30. 15.

They came not immediately to the wilderness of Sin; for there is another stage of theirs by the Red Sea, mentioned Numb. xxxiii. 10, (in which chapter Moses designed exactly to set down all their stations,) but omitted here, because nothing remarkable happened in it; and Moses in this place designed to record only the memorable passages. The wilderness of Sin was a great wilderness between the Red Sea and Mount Sinai, but differing from that Zin mentioned Numb. xx. 1.

2 And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness:

For want of meat, as appears from the following verse, their provisions brought out of Egypt being now spent.

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, ^d Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, ^e when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

By the hand of the Lord; by any of those plagues where-with God destroyed the Egyptians. When we did eat bread to the full; which is not probable; but they amplify their former mercies, that they might aggravate their present calamity, as the manner of impatient and ungodly men is.

Quest. What danger was there of dying with hunger, seeing they had their flocks and herds which they brought out of Egypt? Ans. 1. There was no great danger of it, but they use aggravating expressions, as discontented persons use to do. 2. Their flocks and herds were not so numerous as to suffice them for above a month's provision, if they had all been slain and eaten, as it is implied Numb. xi. 21, 22. So there was some danger of it, though neither immediate nor great. 3. They were it seems resolved to spare these, partly for increase, and for their future subsistence; and partly for sacrifice, as not knowing how many of them they should be required to offer. See Exod. x. 26.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread for you; and the people shall go out and gather † a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

Bread, i. e. manna, which shall serve them instead of bread, Numb. xi. 8, and was a more delicate and pleasant kind of bread, called therefore the bread of angels, Psal. lxxviii. 24, 25. From heaven; the air, oft called heaven, in which manna is produced. Every day, Heb. the thing, i. e. the provision of a day in his day, i. e. every day, as much as was sufficient for a man's sustenance that day. That I may prove them; either, 1. Whether by my giving them such miraculous and excellent provision they will be won to love and obey me. Or, 2. Whether by raining it down upon them for several days together they will learn to trust me for the following days, and therefore gather no more than that day required.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and ^h it shall be twice as much as they gather daily.

Prepare; lay up, grind, bake, or seethe. See ver. 23. and Numb. xi. 8.

6 And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, ⁱ At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt:

And not we by our own authority or counsel, as you suggest, ver. 3.

7 And in the morning, then ye shall see ^k the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and ^l what are we, that ye murmur against us?

The glory of the Lord; either this glorious work of God in giving manna; or rather the glorious appearance of God in the cloud, as is evident from ver. 10.

8 And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are ye? your murmurings are not against us, but ^m against the LORD.

9 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, ⁿ Come near before the LORD: for he hath heard your murmurings.

Before the Lord; either before the cloudy pillar, where God was especially present; or in the place of God's worship. For though the great tabernacle was not yet built, yet it seems from Exod. xxxiii. 7 there was a little tabernacle. For as the solemn, and public, and sabbath worship was among them before the tabernacle was built, so it was necessary there should be some place where they did assemble together, and perform that worship which was proper to those times, and there God was supposed to be present in a peculiar manner.

10 And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD ^o appeared in the cloud.

An extraordinary brightness suddenly appearing in the pillar of cloud. See Lev. ix. 6, 23.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, The Lord spake, or, had spoken, to wit, before, by comparing this with ver. 7.

12 ^p I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, ^q At even ye shall eat flesh, and ^r in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

God chooseth the proper time for each kind of provision; the evening for the quails, which being brought from remote parts, by their day's flight, about evening came thither; and the morning for manna, which usually falls at that time.

13 And it came to pass, that at even ^s the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning ^t the dew lay round about the host.

Heb. There was a bed of dew, wherewith the manna was covered, ver. 14. To this the hidden manna, Rev. ii. 17, alludes.

14 And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay ^u a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground.

When the dew was gone up, to wit, into the air; or, was vanished, as the word ascend is used Jer. xlvi. 15.

15 And when the children of Israel saw ^v it, they said one to another, ^w It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, ^x This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

It is manna; or, What is this? which best suits with the following reason, for they wist not what it was. Manna signifies what in the Egyptian tongue; and it is not strange that the Israelites use one of their words, being newly come out of their land. Hence this is called manna; but it is of a different nature from the ordinary manna, which now we

c ch. 15. 24.
Ps. 106. 25.
1 Cor. 10. 10.

d Lam. 4. 9.
e Num. 11. 4, 5.

f Ps. 78. 24,
25, & 105. 40.
John 6. 31,
32. 1 Cor. 10. 3.

g Heb. the portion of a day in his day.
Prov. 30. 8.
Matt. 6. 11.
g ch. 15. 25.
Deut. 8. 2, 16.

h See ver. 22.
Lev. 25. 21.

i See ver. 12,
13, & ch. 6. 7.
Num. 16. 28, 29, 30.

k See ver. 10.
15. 35. 2, &
40. 5. John 11. 4, 40.

l Num. 16. 11.

m See 1 Sam. 8. 7.
Luke 10. 16.
Rom. 13. 2.

n Num. 16. 16.

o ver. 7. ch. 13. 21. Num. 16. 19. 1 Kings 8. 10, 11.

p ver. 8.

q ver. 6. r ver. 7.

s Num. 11. 31. Ps. 78. 27, 28, & 105. 40. t Num. 11. 9.

u Num. 11. 7. Deut. 8. 3. Neh. 9. 15. Ps. 78. 24. & 105. 40. Wis. 16. 20.

v Or, What is this? or, it is a portion.
x John 6. 31. 40, 58.
1 Cor. 10. 3.

use only as physic for purging; whereas this manna was food, and nourishing, being prepared by the great God for this use.

16 ¶ This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, ⁷an omer † for every man, according to the number of your † persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

According to his eating, i. e. as much as is sufficient for his eating. An omer contains the tenth part of an ephah, and therefore was a very liberal allowance, and such as might abundantly suffice a man of greatest strength and stomach. It might seem too much, but it must be remembered that it was a very light meat, and easy of digestion; nor was every one obliged to eat up his whole portion, as we shall see.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

Either, 1. According as their families were more or less numerous. Or rather, 2. As the gatherers were more or less strong and active in gathering it.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, [†]he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

All that was gathered by the members of one family was put into a heap, and then distributed to each person an omer, neither more nor less; to which St. Paul alludes, 2 Cor. viii. 13, &c.

19 And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning.

viz. For the provision of the next day, as distrusting God's care and goodness in giving them more. Not that every one was bound to eat all of it, which certainly many of their stomachs could not bear; but that they were to dissolve it, or burn it, as they did the remains of some sacrifices, Exod. xii. 10; xxix. 34, or consume it some other way.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them.

Some of them left of it; either distrusting God's providence for their future provisions; or out of curiosity to learn the nature of this manna, and what they might do when occasion required. It stank, not so much from its own nature, which was pure and durable, as from God's judgment.

21 And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

To wit, as much of it as was left upon the ground. This was not from its own nature, which was so solid that it could endure the fire, and was bruised by a pestle; but from God's wise providence, partly, that it might not be corrupted or trodden under foot, or otherwise abused, and so despised; partly, that it might not remain there to tempt any of them to gather more of it than they should; and partly, that all their stock of provision being wasted, they might be obliged to the more entire dependence upon God. And this is here mentioned as a reason why they gathered it in the morning.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man:

Considering God's present providence in causing it to fall in double proportion, and remembering that the next day was the sabbath day, which God had blessed and sanctified to his own immediate service, Gen. ii. 3, and therefore was not to be employed in servile works, such as the gathering of manna was, they rightly concluded that God's commands, delivered ver. 16, 19, reached only to ordinary days, and must in all reason give place to the more ancient and necessary law of the sabbath.

—and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

Either to acquaint him with this increase of the miracle, or to take his direction for their practice, because they found two commands seemingly clashing together, and therefore needed and desired his advice.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To morrow is ^athe rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake to day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

^a Gen. 2. 3. ch. 20. 8. & 31. 15. & 35. 3. Lev. 23. 3.

This is that which the Lord hath said; either to Moses by inspiration, or to the former patriarchs upon like occasions: this practice is agreeable to the former word and law of God concerning the sabbath, as it follow.

Bake and seethe: the manna was dressed these two ways, Numb. xi. 8. The words to-day are not in the original, and possibly are better left out than taken in; or if they be taken in, they do not seem to me, as they do to many others, to prove that they were commanded to bake or seethe on the sixth day all that they were to eat both that day and upon the following sabbath, or that they were forbidden to bake or seethe it upon the sabbath day; for there is not a word here to that purpose; and it is apparent from the whole context, that the rest of the sabbath is not opposed to their baking or seething of it, but to their going out into the field to gather it. Nay, the contrary is here implied, because after they had baked and sodden what they intended to bake or seethe, part of the manna did, as is here expressly added, remain over, and was reserved for the sabbath day's provision, and that unbaked and unsodden, otherwise it would not have been noted as a miraculous thing, that it did not stink nor breed worms, ver. 24. Lay up until the morning: what you do not eat this day, keep for the next day's provision.

24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not ^bstink, ^bver. 20. neither was there any worm therein.

As there was before, ver. 20. So great a difference there is between the doing of a thing upon God's command, and with his blessing, and the doing of the same thing against his will, and with his curse.

25 And Moses said, Eat that to day; for to day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to day ye shall not find it in the field.

These words were spoken upon the morning of the sabbath day, as appears from the foregoing verse. A sabbath unto the Lord, i. e. wholly consecrated to his service, and therefore not to be employed in servile works.

26 ^cSix days ye shall gather it; but ^cch. 20. 9. on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, How long ^drefuse ye to keep my com- ^d2 Kings 17. 14. Ps. 78. 10, 22. & 106. 13. mandments and my laws?

The Lord spoke unto Moses, that he might speak it to the people. He signifies that this was an old disease in them, to disobey God's precepts, and to pollute his sabbaths.

29 See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

Hath given you the sabbath; hath given to you, and to your fathers, that great command and privilege of the sabbath. Let no man go out of his place, out of his house or tent, into the field to gather manna, as appears from the occasion and reason of the law here before mentioned. For otherwise they might and ought to go out of their houses to the public assemblies, as appears from Lev. xxiii. 3; Acts xv. 21; and to lead their cattle to watering, Luke xiii. 15; or to help them out of a pit, Matt. xii. 11; and a sabbath day's journey was permitted, Acts i. 12.

30 So the people rested on the seventh day.

Or ceased, to wit, from gathering manna, by comparing this with ver. 27, and consequently from all works of that nature.

31 And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna: and ^e it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

^e Num. 11. 7, 8. It was like coriander seed, in shape and figure, but not in colour, for that is dark-coloured, but this white, as it follows here, like baellium, &c., Numb. xi. 7. The taste of it, when it was raw; but when it was drest it was like fresh oil, Numb. xi. 8.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

^f Heb. 9. 4. 33 And Moses said unto Aaron, 'Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

In the tabernacle, and by the ark, when they shall be built, and at present in the place where you meet for the solemn worship of God.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up ^g before the Testimony, to be kept.

^g ch. 25. 16, 21, & 40. 20. Num. 17. 10. Deut. 10. 5. 1 Kings 8. 9. i. e. Before the ark, which is called the ark of the testimony, Exod. xxv. 16; and here, by way of abbreviation, the testimony, or witness, because in it were the tables of the covenant, or the law of God, which was a testimony of God's authority and will, and of man's subjection and duty, or of the covenant made between God and man. See Deut. x. 5; xxxi. 26. Quest. How could this be laid up before the ark, when the ark was not yet built? Ans. This text only tells us that Aaron did lay it up, but it doth not determine the time, nor affirm that it was done at this instant, but rather intimates the contrary, and that it was done afterwards when the testimony, i. e. the ark, was built. As the next verse also speaks of what was done in the following forty years.

35 And the children of Israel did eat manna ^h forty years, ⁱ until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan.

^h Num. 33. 38. Deut. 8. 2, 3. Neh. 9. 20, 21. John 6. 31, 49. 1 Josh. 5. 12. Neh. 9. 15. This Moses might well write; for though he did not go into Canaan, yet he came to the borders of Canaan. And though he did not see the cessation of the manna, yet he sufficiently knew both from the nature of the thing, and by revelation from God, that it would forthwith cease upon their entrance into Canaan.

36 Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

CHAP. XVII.

The children of Israel come to Rephidim; there is no water, therefore murmur against Moses, 1—3. Moses crieth to the Lord, 4. The Lord sendeth Moses to Horeb; he smiteth the rock, and water cometh out, 5, 6. He names that place, and the reason of it, 7. Amalek warreth against the Israelites, 8. Moses appointeth Joshua to fight with him, 9. Joshua's success when Moses held up his hand; when let down, Amalek prevailed, 11—13. Moses buildeth an altar, and nameth it, 15. The reason of it, 16.

^a ch. 16. 1. Num. 33. 12, 14. AND *all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the wilderness of Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

After their journeys; by divers stations, recorded Numb. xxxiii. 12, 13, &c., but here omitted, because there was nothing extraordinary happened in them. According to the commandment of the LORD, expressed either by word of mouth, or by the motion or rest of the cloudy pillar, Exod. xiii. 21.

2 ^b Wherefore the people did chide with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?

^b Num. 20. 3, 4. ^c Dent. 6. 16. Pa. 78. 18, 41. Is. 7. 12. Matt. 4. 7. 1 Cor. 10. 9. By distrusting God's power, and providence, and faithfulness, and goodness, upon such a small occasion, by refusing to submit to God's will, and to wait upon him by humble and fervent prayers for relief, and instead thereof quarrelling with me, as if it were my fault, and murmuring against God under my name.

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people ^d murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?

4 And Moses ^e cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^f Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith ^g thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

^f 1 Sam. 30. 6. John 8. 59. & 10. 31. g Ezek. 2. 6. Take with thee of the elders of Israel, that they may be eye-witnesses of this glorious work, and may report it to the people. The river; either the Red Sea, for an arm of the sea is sometimes called a river; or the river Nilus.

6 Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

ⁱ Num. 20. 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 20, & 166. 41. & 114. 8. Wisd. 11. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 4. I will stand before thee there, in my cloudy pillar, which shall stand over that place.

Horeb and Sinai are sometimes spoken of as the same place, and sometimes as two differing places, as here, compared with Exod. xix. 2. The learned write, that this was one long mountain, whereof there were two eminent parts or tops, the one at a considerable distance from the other, and Horeb was the first part of it, and near Rephidim; and Sinai the more remote, to which they came afterwards. Moses did so, i. e. smote the rock, and the waters flowed out plentifully and continually, making a river, which God caused to follow them to their several stations. See 1 Cor. x. 4.

7 And he called the name of the place ^k Massah, and ^l Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

^k Num. 20. 13. Pa. 81. 7. & 95. 8. Heb. 3. 8. ^l That is, temptation. ^m That is, chiding, or, strife. viz. To protect and provide for us according to his word given to us. Will God be as good as his word, or will he not? For it is to us very doubtful.

8 ¶ Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.

ⁿ Sam. 15. 2. Wisd. 11. 3. Then, i. e. when they were upon their march from Rephidim to Horeb, Deut. xxv. 17, 18.

The ground of the quarrel was the prosecution of the old hatred of Esau against Jacob, and the revenging of themselves and their father upon the posterity of Jacob; for which they thought this the fittest season, they being now a great and potent people. Numb. xxiv. 20, and Israel now weak, and unarmed, and dispirited with long servitude.

m Called Jesse,
Acts 7. 45.
Heb. 4. 8.
n ch. 4. 20.
9 And Moses said unto ^mJoshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with ⁿthe rod of God in mine hand.

Go out; out of the camp to meet the enemy. I will stand on the top of the hill, both to observe thy carriage, and success or defeat, that I may govern myself accordingly, and that I may in that retirement pour out my soul unto the Lord of hosts, that he may give thee victory. With the rod of God; by which having done so great exploits formerly, doubt not of the same Divine assistance to accompany it, and make thee victorious.

10 So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill.

Hur; a person of eminency both for wisdom and experience, and for place and authority, supposed to be the husband of Miriam. See Exod. xxiv. 14.

11 And it came to pass, when Moses ^oheld up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

Moses held up his hand, with the rod of God in it. This gesture, though fervent prayer was doubtless joined with it, seems not to have been the gesture of praying, which is the lifting up of both hands, but of an ensign-bearer, or of one ready to smite his enemies. Howsoever this was only a sign whereby Moses strengthened his faith, and quickened his prayers, and heightened the courage of the soldiers below, and protested that he expected victory not from the skill and prowess of his army, but from the assistance of God. When he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed; God so dispensing his favour, that the honour of the day and victory might be wholly ascribed to the rod and power of God, not to Israel.

12 But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

Not that both hands were erected and joined together, which was not a fit posture for one holding a rod in his hand; but that Moses shifted the rod out of one hand into the other when the former was weary, and that Aaron and Hur did each of them with both hands hold up that hand which was next to them, successively, that they also might relieve one the other.

13 And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

Either, 1. The king of the Amalekites, and his people. Or, 2. The people of the Amalekites, and those other people who were leagued with them.

14 And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.

In a book; even in this book, which Moses was to write by God's inspiration and appointment. See Exod. xxxiv. 27; Deut. xxxi. 9, 22. In the ears of Joshua, thy successor, and the captain of my people, that he and all succeeding governors may watch all occasions to execute this command. I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek, i. e. I will utterly destroy them; for a person or people dead or destroyed are soon forgotten, Psal. xxxi. 12, and the grave is called the land of forgetfulness, Psal. lxxxviii. 12. Or thus, Though they are now a numerous and flourishing people, and in great repute, I will make them few and inglorious, for such are little minded or remembered; for this is not to be understood absolutely of a speedy and utter extinction of them, for he supposeth their being from generation to generation, ver. 16, but comparatively. From under heaven; from the face of the whole earth.

15 And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it Jehovah-nissi:

Moses built an altar, both for the offering of sacrifices of praise unto God, and to be a monument of this victory, and of the author of it. The name of it, viz. of the altar, which he so calls metonymically, because it was the sign and monument of Jehovah-nissi; even as circumcision is called God's covenant, Gen. xvii. 13, and the lamb, the passover, Exod. xii. 11, and the cup, the new testament, Luke xxii. 20, because they were the signs of them. Or the word altar is to be repeated out of the former member, which is frequent, and the place to be read thus, he called the name of it the altar of Jehovah-nissi. Or the name given to it signifies only the inscription engraven upon it, which was not the single name of God, but an entire sentence, the lord is my banner. By which words he takes all the praise of the victory from the Israelites, and gives it to God.

16 For he said, Because the LORD hath sworn that the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

For, or, and, as the Hebrew particle properly signifies; for these words are not a reason of the passage next preceding, but an additional sentence. Because, or, surely, (as that particle is oft used, as Job viii. 6; xx. 20; Psal. x. 14; xlv. 22, &c.) Heb. the hand upon the throne of the Lord, for the hand of the Lord upon his throne, which is perfectly the same thing, only the order of the words is a little varied after the manner of the Hebrew tongue. These words then are a paraphratical description of a solemn oath, by the usual posture of it, viz. the lifting up the hand, which is usually put for swearing, and in that sense is ascribed both to men, as Gen. xiv. 22, and to God, as Deut. xxxii. 40. And this hand of God lifted up upon his throne, where his majesty doth peculiarly and gloriously dwell, signifies that God swears by himself, as is said Heb. vi. 13. And thus the Chaldee and Arabic interpreters understand it. Others render the place thus, Because the hand (or, his hand, the pronoun being here understood, as it frequently is in the Hebrew language, of which several instances have been given before, i. e. the hand of Amalek, which may easily be understood out of the following clause, in which Amalek is named) was against the throne of the Lord, i. e. was stretched out against God himself; for so God esteems it, because it was done against that people among whom God had placed his throne, or seat, or dwelling, according to his covenant made with them; which also was well known to the Amalekites by the relation of their progenitors, who in all probability had acquainted them with their own rights, and with Jacob's arts, whereby he robbed Esau, the father of Amalek, Gen. xxxvi. 15, 16, of his birthright and blessing, and consequently of the land of Canaan, to which now God was bringing them, that he might plant them there, and set up his throne among them. And the Amalekites doubtless heard, as the other neighbours also did, in what a miraculous manner God had brought them out of Egypt, and over the Red Sea. And they knew better than others, by tradition from their parents, that God had promised Canaan to them, and now they saw that he was conducting them thither, and therefore to prevent this they now commence a war against them, and against God or his throne, whose presence with and conduct over them was most manifest; which was a great aggravation of their sin. And this latter translation and interpretation seems most probable, 1. Because it exactly agrees with the Hebrew words, and the order in which they are placed. 2. It makes the coherence more clear than our translation doth, the former part of the verse containing a reason of the latter, to wit, of that severe curse and everlasting war denounced against Amalek, because they attempted by force to overthrow God's throne and people, and that with so many aggravating circumstances; of which see Deut. xxv. 17, 18.

p ch. 34. 27.
q Num. 24.
20. Deut. 26.
19. 1 Sam.
15. 3, 7, &
30. 1, 17.
2 Sam. 8. 12.
Ezra 9. 14.

|| That is, the LORD my banner: See Judg. 6. 24.

|| Or, Because the hand of Amalek is against the throne of the LORD.

therefore, &c. + Heb. the hand upon the throne of the LORD.

CHAP. XVIII.

Jethro cometh to Moses with his wife and his children; their names, 1—5. Moses going to meet his father, does obeisance, 7; and relates to him God's providence, 8. Jethro's joy and thanksgiving, 9, 10; confesseth God's power therein, 11. Jethro sacrificeth, 12. Moses's judging the people, 13, disliked by his father, 14. Moses's answer, 15, 16. Jethro's advice, 19—23. Moses hearkening to his father, 24, chooseth able men for rulers, 25; who always judged the people, 26. Jethro's departure, 27.

a ch. 2. 16.
& 3. 1.

b Ps. 44. 1.
& 77. 14, 15.
& 78. 4, &
106. 5, 43.
& 106. 2, 8.

c ch. 4. 26.

d Acts 7. 29.

e ch. 2. 22.
|| That is,
a stranger
there.

|| That is,
my God is an help.

f ch. 3. 1, 12.

Jethro came, not at this time, but after the delivery of the law at Mount Sinai; as it may appear, 1. Because he finds them encamped, as it here follows, at the mount of God, i. e. Sinai, whither they came not till Exod. xix. 2. 2. Because the laws of sacrifices were given before his coming, as appears from ver. 12. 3. Because the execution of this counsel here given about the choice of magistrates, ver. 19, is related after the Israelites' departure from Sinai, Deut. i. 7, &c. And therefore here is a transposal in this history, which is also frequent in other places of Holy Scripture.

6 And he said unto Moses, I thy father in law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

He spoke, not by word of mouth, as the next verse showeth, but either by a letter, or by a messenger, as that word is used, Matt. viii. 6, 8, compared with Luke vii. 3, 6.

7 ¶ And Moses went out to meet his father in law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their welfare; and they came into the tent.

Of their welfare, Heb. of their peace, i. e. prosperity and all happiness, which also they wished one to the other, as this phrase implies. See 1 Sam. x. 4; Psal. cxxii. 6.

8 And Moses told his father in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them.

For Israel's sake, or, concerning Israel's business.

9 And Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods: for in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them.

Now I know, viz. more clearly and by certain experience; as that phrase signifies, Gen. xxii. 12; 1 Kings xvii. 18, 24. For otherwise it is more than probable that Jethro had the knowledge of the true God before this time, not only because he was the great-grandchild of Abraham, but also because of his long conversation with a person of so great knowledge, and wisdom, and piety, as Moses was. Wherein they dealt proudly; either, 1. Their false gods, who wrought strange things in and by their servants the magicians, who contended with Moses, and proudly boasted of their skill as not a whit inferior to that of Moses, but at last were forced to yield up the cause, Exod. viii. 19; or rather, 2. The Egyptians, spoken of ver. 10, who dealt proudly, and scornfully, and tyrannically with the Israelites, but God showed himself to be above them, and above their king; though Pharaoh would not own him for his superior, Exod. v. 2, but lift up his horn against God, and against his people: but the LORD brought that proud prince upon his knees, and forced him off to confess his faults, and to become suppliant to Moses for deliverance from the plagues; and at last, when he continued incorrigible, he drowned him in the sea.

12 And Jethro, Moses' father in law, took a burnt offering and sacrifices for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to eat bread with Moses' father in law before God.

Took a burnt-offering, i. e. gave, or offered; as that verb is used Psal. lxxviii. 18, compared with Eph. iv. 8; also Exod. xxv. 2. Which he did, that he might publicly testify both his embracing of the true religion, and his thankfulness to God for the great deliverance given to his people, wherein also himself and family were concerned. And he took or offered these, not immediately, or by himself, (which would have seemed a presumptuous and unwarrantable action for a stranger to undertake in the church of Israel,) but by those who were appointed to do it; in which sense David is said to have sacrificed, 2 Sam. xxiv. 25, and Solomon, 1 Kings viii. 63, and all those who brought their offerings to the priests to offer for them. A burnt offering and sacrifices, to wit, of thanksgiving, as is expressed Exod. xxiv. 5; for part of these the offerers, with others, did eat, Lev. vii. 15, whereas no man might eat of the burnt-offerings, Lev. i. 9. To eat bread, i. e. to feast together of the remainders of the sacrifices. Before God; either before the cloudy pillar; or rather, before the altar, and in the place of public worship; for some such place undoubtedly they had, though the tabernacle was not yet built; and that was the place appointed for such feasts. See Deut. xii. 7; xxvii. 7; 1 Chron. xxix. 21; Psal. cxvi. 17.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

Moses sat as a civil magistrate, by hearing and determining causes and controversies arising among the people.

14 And when Moses' father in law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Moses said unto his father in law, Because the people come unto me to enquire of God:

k Gen. 14.20.
2 Sam. 18.25
Luke 1. 68.

l 2 Chro. 9.5.
Ps. 85. 3, &
97. 8. 135.
5.

m ch. 1. 10, 16, 22, & 5.2, 7, & 14. 8,18. n 1 Sam. 2.3.
Neh. 9. 10,
16, 23. Job
40. 11, 12.
Ps. 31. 23.
& 119. 21.
Luke 1. 51.

o Deut. 12.7.
1 Chr. 23. 22.
1 Cor. 10. 18, 21, 31.

p Lev. 24.12.
Num. 15. 34.

i. e. Of the mind and will of God, both as to his worship and service, and as to their mutual duties to one another. See I Sam. ix. 9.

16 When they have ^aa matter, they come unto me; and I judge between †one and another, and I do ^rmake them know the statutes of God, and his laws.

i. e. Do interpret and apply them to their several cases and circumstances.

17 And Moses' father in law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

Not convenient either for thyself or for the people.

18 †Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee; for this thing is too heavy for thee; ^athou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

Thou wilt surely waste and destroy thy health and strength by excessive labour of mind and body; and this people, by tedious attendance and expectation ere their turn comes for the decision of their matters.

19 Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and ^rGod shall be with thee: Be thou ^rfor the people to Godward, that thou mayest ^rbring the causes unto God:

God shall be with thee, i. e. I doubt not God will assist and bless thee, as well in the course which I propose to thee, as in that which thou now dost use, because God is a God of order, and loves order; and he is a God of mercy, and would not have thee destroy thyself in his work. Or it may be taken for a prayer, and God be with thee, i. e. bless and assist thee therein. To Godward, Heb. before God, i. e. in hard and weighty causes, which the inferior judges cannot determine, as it is explained ver. 22; where they need and seek direction from God, there thou shalt be as a mediator between God and them, to bring their matters to God, as it here follows, and to receive directions and commands from him. See Numb. xv. 33, 34; xxvii. 5, 6.

20 And thou shalt ^rteach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them ^rthe way wherein they must walk, and ^rthe work that they must do.

Thou alone shalt deliver and explain God's law to them, which they may apply to their particular causes and occasions, and so end their differences among themselves without giving thee any trouble.

21 Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people ^bable men, such as ^cfear God, ^dmen of truth, ^ehating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

Able men, Heb. men of might, not for strength of body, but for greatness, resolution, courage, and constancy of mind, which is the best preservative against partiality and corruption in judgment, to which men of little minds, or narrow souls, are easily swayed by fears, or hopes, or gifts. Such as fear God; which will restrain them from all injustice, even when they have ability and opportunity to do wrong so cunningly or powerfully that they may escape the observation and censure of men. Men of truth, or, of faith, or faithful, such as love the truth, and diligently labour to find it out in all causes, and then pass a true and righteous sentence; not at all respecting persons, but only the truth and right of their causes; such as hate lies and slanders, and will severely rebuke and punish them. Hating covetousness: this, though included in the former, is particularly expressed, because gifts and bribes are the great corrupters of judges and judgments.

22 And let them judge the people ^aat all seasons: ^rand it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and ^bthey shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be ^bable to endure, and all this people shall also go to ^atheir place in peace.

If God approve of the course which I suggest, to whose wisdom I submit my opinion. For Jethro might well think that Moses neither would nor might make so great an alteration in the government without consulting God about it, and expecting his answer. Others render the place thus, both God will give thee his commands, i. e. thou wilt have leisure to ask and take his counsel in all emergencies, which now thou hast not, and thou wilt be able to endure.

To their place; to their several habitations, which are called men's places, Judg. vii. 7; ix. 55; xix. 28, 29; where their calling and business lies, from which they are now diverted and detained by fruitless and wearisome attendances. In peace, orderly and quietly, wearing their minds much eased by this course, and their contentions soon ended.

24 So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father in law, and did all that he had said.

This is one evidence of that meekness for which Moses is justly magnified, that he disdained not to receive advice from one so much his inferior in wisdom, and learning, and knowledge of the things of God. And God would have this wise counsel to come from Jethro, not from Moses himself, to show how variously he distributes his gifts, and to teach all men not to think too highly of themselves, nor to despise the counsels even of their inferiors. Moses did all that he had said, not immediately, but after he had received God's approbation, Numb. xi. 16, and the people's consent, Dent. i. 14.

25 And ^rMoses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

Moses chose them not solely, but together with the people, as appears from Dent. i. 13.

26 And they ^mjudged the people at all seasons: the ⁿhard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

27 ¶ And Moses let his father in law depart; and ^ohe went his way into his own land.

i. e. Moses dismissed him honourably. See Numb. x. 29.

CHAP. XIX.

The people come to Sinai, 1, 2. God's proposal to them by Moses. Of the terms of the covenant, 3—6. Moses lays before them what God had commanded, 7. The people's acceptance of the same, 8. God directeth Moses how to sanctify the people, 10, 11; to set bounds to the people that they touch not the mount, 12. The punishment of those that did, 13. Moses sanctifying the people, 14; commands them to keep from their wives, 15. The manner of God's appearing, 16, 18, 19. God talketh with Moses, 21—24.

IN the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day ^acame they into the wilderness of Sinai.

Heb. Third new moon, called Sivan, including the latter part of May, and the former part of June. The same day, Heb. in that day, to wit, when the month or new moon began, and when they departed from Rephidim, to note, that there was no station between these two. This is set

q ch. 23. 7.
 & 24. 14.
 Dent. 17. 8.
 2 Sam. 15. 3.
 Job 31. 13.
 Acta 18. 15.
 1 Cor. 6. 1.
 † Heb. a man and his fellow.
 r Lev. 24. 15.
 Num. 15. 35. & 27. 6, &c. & 36. 6, 7, 8, 9.
 † Heb. 11.
 14, 17.
 Dent. 1. 9, 12.

t ch. 3. 12.
 u ch. 4. 16.
 & 20. 19.
 Dent. 5. 5.
 x Num. 27. 5.

y Dent. 4. 1,
 5. & 5. 1. & 6.
 1, 2. & 7. 11.
 z Ps. 143. 8.
 a Dent. 1. 18.
 b ver. 25.
 Dent. 1. 16,
 16. & 16. 18.
 2 Chron. 19.
 5.—10.
 Acta 6. 3.
 c Gen. 42. 18.
 2 Sana. 23. 3.
 2 Chron. 19. 9.
 d Ezek. 18. 8.
 e Deu. 16. 19.

Num. 15. 33.
 & 27. 2. & 36.
 1. Dent. 1.
 17. & 17. 8.
 h Num. 11.
 17.
 i ver. 18.
 k Gen. 18. 33.
 & 30. 25.
 ch. 16. 29.
 2 Sam. 19. 39.

l Dent. 1. 15.
 Acta 6. 5.

m ver. 22.
 n Job 29. 16.

o Num. 10.
 29, 30.

1481.
 n Num. 33.
 15.

down thus accurately, because it gives an account of the original of the feast of pentecost, because the giving of the law, which was three or four days after this time, was fifty days after the passover, whereof forty-six or forty-seven were past at their first coming to Sinai, reckoning from the fifteenth day of the first month, when they came out of Egypt, to this time.

b ch. 17. 1, a. 2 For they were departed from ^bRephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before ^cthe mount.

To the desert of Sinai, i. e. to that part of the desert which adjoined to Mount Sinai, as Rephidim, from whence they came, was in that part of the wilderness adjoining to Horeb, which was another part of the same mountain. See Exod. xvii. 6. So they seem to have fetched a large compass, and to have come from one side of the mountain to the other.

d ch. 20. 21.
e Acta 7. 38.
f ch. 3. 4. 3 And ^dMoses went up unto God, and the LORD ^ecalled unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

Moses went up into the mount of God, to the place where God had now fixed his cloudy pillar, and where he was about to manifest himself in a glorious manner. So it is an anticipation.

f Deut. 29. 2. 4 'Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how ^gI bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.

g Deut. 32. 11. Is. 63. 9. Rev. 12. 14. i. e. Safely, out of the reach of danger; and strongly, against all opposition. Compare Deut. xxxii. 11; Isa. lxxiii. 9; Rev. xii. 14. Unto myself, into my presence, and favour, and fellowship, to be my peculiar people, to serve and worship me as your only Lord and King.

h Deut. 5. 2. i Deut. 4. 20. k 7. 6. & 14. 2. l 21. & 26. 15. m 32. 8, 9. n 1 Kings 8. 53. o Ps. 135. 4. p Cant. 8. 12. q Is. 41. 8. r 43. 1. 5 Now ^htherefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ⁱye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for ^kall the earth is mine:

Jer. 10. 16. Mal. 3. 17. Tit. 2. 14. k ch. 9. 29. Deut. 10. 14. Job 41. 11. Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 26, 28.

If ye will obey my voice indeed; Heb. obeying ye will obey; i. e. if ye will obey me sincerely, diligently, and constantly. A peculiar treasure, highly prized and loved, and carefully kept by me, as men's treasures generally are. For all people upon earth are mine by creation and dominion, and I can dispose of them all as I please, and either choose or refuse any of them as I think fit; and therefore though I might refuse you, as well as any others, yet it is my pleasure to single you out of all the world, upon whom to confer my chiefest and peculiar blessings. Or, though all the earth be mine, by general right, yet you only are mine by special title and privilege.

1 Deut. 33. 2. 2. 4. 1 Pet. 2. 5, 9. Rev. 1. 6. & 5. 10. & 20. 6. m Lev. 20. 24, 25. Deut. 7. 6. & 26. 19. & 28. 9. Is. 62. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 17. 1 Thes. 5. 27. 6 And ye shall be unto me a ^lkingdom of priests, and an ^mholy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

A kingdom of priests; so they are called in regard, 1. Of their exemption and separation from all the people of the world, as priests are taken out of the multitude of men. 2. Of their consecration to the worship and service of God, every subject of this kingdom being in some sort a priest to offer some kind of sacrifices to God. 3. Of their privileges, because God conferred upon them singular honour, safety, and immunity, and liberty of coming near to him, as priests among all nations have been esteemed privileged persons. An holy nation, purged from the idolatry and other abominations of the heathen world, and separated from them by a wall of partition; allied to me by a holy covenant, and consecrated to my use and service.

7 ¶ And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

n ch. 24. 3, 7. Deut. 5. 27. & 28. 17. 8 And ⁿall the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

Not for God's information, but for the people's greater obligation, and to learn what answer he should return from God to them.

o ver. 16. ch. 20. 21. & 24. 15, 16. Deut. 4. 11. Ps. 18. 11. 12. & 97. 2. Matt. 17. 5. p Deut. 4. 12. 36. John 12. 29, 30. q ch. 16. 31. 9 And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee ^oin a thick cloud, ^pthat the people may hear when I speak with thee, and ^qbelieve thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

I come unto thee, as to the mediator between me and them, and the interpreter of my mind to them. In a thick cloud: see ver. 16, and compare 1 Kings viii. 12; 2 Chron. vi. 1. The words of the people; those mentioned ver. 8. This is here repeated, because God's answer to them now follows.

r 1. 37. 11. Heb. 10. 22. e ver. 16. Gen. 35. 2. Lev. 15. 5. 10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people, and ^rsanctify them to day and to morrow, and let them ^swash their clothes,

i. e. Command them to sanctify and cleanse themselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, and to prepare their hearts for the right receiving of my laws, and solemn entering into covenant with me. Compare Lev. xi. 45; Josh. iii. 5; vii. 13. Let them wash their clothes; by which external washing, which was agreeable to that state of the church, they were taught to cleanse their inward man.

t ver. 16, 18. ch. 34. 5. Deut. 33. 2. 11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD ^twill come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

For the third day from this time, and the fiftieth day from the passover, as was noted before, the Lord will come down in a visible and glorious manifestation of his presence.

u Heb. 12. 20. 12 And thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: ^uwho-soever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death:

By this symbolical injunction God designed, 1. To restrain men's curious and bold inquiries into the things of God. 2. To possess the Israelites then present, and all succeeding generations, with the dread and reverence of the Divine Majesty, and of his holy law. 3. To prepare and inure the people to the obedience of God's commands, even when they discern not the reasons of them. 4. To make them sensible of their own impurity and infirmity, and of their absolute need of a mediator, through whom they might have access to God. See Gal. iii. 19.

v Or, cornet. x ver. 10, 19. 13 There shall not an hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; whether ^vit be beast or man, it shall not live: when the ^wtrumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

There shall not an hand touch it, i. e. the mountain. But, 1. This seems to be a gross tautology, for it was twice forbidden in the words next foregoing. 2. So the word hand would seem to be ascribed both to man and beast. Others therefore render it touch him, i. e. they shall look upon such an impudent transgressor of my express command as an abominable person, whom they cannot touch without defilement, and therefore he shall be put to death in such a manner as may be performed without touching him. Whether it be beast; for though the beasts are not capable of a law, yet they might be threatened for man's caution, and punished for the fault of their owners in not keeping them at a distance from the mount. When the trumpet soundeth long, i. e. with one continued, equal, and gentle sound, as is usual in the end of the music song, which is opposed to a rough, and loud, and unequal sound. There was no real trumpet here, but an angel made a sound like that of a trumpet. They shall come up to the mount. Object. This was forbidden to them, ver. 12. Ans. 1. They were forbidden to come up to the mount whilst God was delivering his laws, but allowed it afterwards when that action ceased, which was signified by the long sound of the trumpet. 2. They might not come into the mount or towards the top of it, but they might come to the bottom or lower parts of it, where the bounds were set, or at least towards or near it, as the Hebrew preposition beth is sometimes used. So the mount may be understood more strictly, ver. 12, for an eminent part or top of it, where the thick cloud appeared, and where Moses was, and here more largely for the whole mountain.

14 ¶ And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, and sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes.

Moses sanctified the people, by commanding them to sanctify themselves, and directing them how to do it.

15 And he said unto the people, * Be ready against the third day: * come not at your wives.

Abstain from the use of the marriage-bed, partly because your wives may haply have their uncleanness upon them, though unknown to themselves, at least to you, whereby you may be legally defiled; see Lev. xv. 18; and partly that your minds may be abstracted from all sensual delights, and wholly employed about this great and holy work and service. There is a like command 1 Cor. vii. 5; but both this and that do indifferently concern both ministers and people, and are limited to a certain time, and therefore are very impertinently alleged for the perpetual celibacy of ministers. See also 1 Sam. xxi. 5.

16 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled.

The thunders and lightnings were sent partly as evidences and tokens both of God's glorious presence, and of the anger of God, and the dreadful punishments due to the transgressors of the law now to be delivered; and partly as means to humble, and awaken, and convince, and terrify proud and secure sinners, that they might more reverently attend to the words and commands of God, more willingly yield obedience to them, and be more afraid of the violation of them. A thick cloud was both a fit mean for the production and reception of the thunders and lightnings, and a signification as well of the invisible and unconceivable nature of God, as of the obscurity of the legal dispensation in regard of its types and shadows, &c., 2 Cor. iii. 13, 18; iv. 6. The trumpet was a fit instrument, both for the promulgation of God's law, and for the signification of that war that is between God and sinners. All the people, Moses himself not excepted, as appears from Heb. xii. 21.

17 And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

Therefore one part of the mount they might come to, though not to another, to wit, the higher; which may clear the difficulty and seeming contradiction betwixt ver. 12 and 13.

18 And mount Sinai was altogether as a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly.

The LORD descended in fire for further terror to obstinate sinners. Hence this law is called a fiery law, Deut. xxxiii. 2. The whole mount quaked greatly, by an earthquake, as appears from Psal. ix. 2; civ. 32.

19 And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice.

Waxed louder and louder; Heb. went on, or increased and grew very strong, or vehement, or loud. This is opposed to the sounding long, ver. 13. God answered him by a voice, i. e. by plain, distinct, and audible words, as Psal. lxxxi. 7; John xii. 29, so as the people also might hear, as appears from ver. 9. See Deut. v. 24; 1 Kings xix. 12, 13; Heb. xii. 19.

20 And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up.

So here are three parts of the mount manifestly distinguished; the top, where the cloud was; the middle part, where Moses now stood, and about which the bounds seem to have been put; and the nether or lower part, where the people were.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD to gaze, and many of them perish.

Through curiosity to know in what form or manner I appear to thee.

22 And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, sanctify themselves, lest the LORD break forth upon them.

For though the Aaronical priesthood was not yet appointed, it is certain, that as there were sacrifices before, so there were priests to offer them, which were either the first-born, who were consecrated to God, and did execute the office of priests, as may be gathered from Exod. xiii. 2; xxiv. 5; Numb. iii. 12; viii. 26, or some other persons appointed by God for doing that work till the office was settled in Aaron's family. Which come near to the LORD; not at this time, for both priests and people are now kept at equal distance, ver. 24; but usually: q. d. Whose duty and privilege it is to approach unto God, and to present the people's prayers and sacrifices to him, and therefore are here particularly admonished, because they above all others are obliged to this care, and because they might seem to claim this privilege by their function.

23 And Moses said unto the LORD, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

The people are sufficiently admonished in that particular, because as thou didst command this same thing before, ver. 12, so I have informed and warned them of it; so that it may seem superfluous for me to go down again to acquaint them herewith. But God, who better knew the dulness and the hardness of their hearts than Moses did, saw it necessary to repeat the same command again and again. Some read the words interrogatively, lo for halo, as it is 2 Sam. xiii. 26; 2 Kings v. 26; Job ii. 10; Mal. ii. 15; May not the people (i. e. some of the people, the priests at least, which, as thou hast now said, may come near to the LORD) go up? Is this a universal prohibition? To this answer is given by a distinction in the next verse, that he and Aaron might come up, but no other.

24 And the LORD said unto him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them.

25 So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

CHAP. XX.

The object of man's worship, 1, 2. The decalogue, 3—17. The people fear, 18. They desire Moses to speak to them, and not God, 19. Moses encourages them, 20. Moses

y ver. 10.

* ver. 11.
a 1 Sam. 21.
b 4, 5.
c Zech. 7, 3. d 1 Cor. 7, 5.

b Ps. 77, 18.
c Heb. 12, 18.
d 18, Rev. 4, 3.
e & R. 5, & 11.
f 19.
g ver. 9.
h ch. 50, 34.
i Chro. 5, 14.
j d Rev. 1, 10.
k & 4, 1.
l Heb. 12, 21.

f Deut. 4, 10.

g Deut. 4, 11.
h & 33, 2.
i Judg. 5, 5.
j Pa. 68, 7, & 18, & 4.
k Hab. 3, 3.
l h ch. 3, 2.
m & 24, 17, & 23.
n Chro. 7, 1, & 2, 3.
o Gen. 18, 17.
p Pa. 144, 5. Rev. 15, 8. k Pa. 68, 8. & 77, 18. & 114, 7. Jer. 4, 24. Heb. 12, 28.

1 ver. 13.
m Heb. 12, 21.
n Neh. 9, 13.
o Pa. 81, 7.

+ Heb. coasted.
o See ch. 3, 5.
p 1 Sam. 6, 19.

p Lev. 10, 3.
q 2 Sam. 6, 7, 8.

r ver. 12.
s Josh. 3, 4.

drawing near the darkness, God speaks to him, 21, 22. God's charge about making no other gods, 23. God's command to build an altar, and of what they should make it, 24, 25; and in what manner they should approach unto it, 26.

^a Deut. 5. 22. AND God spake ^aall these words, saying, Or, Then, to wit, when Moses was returned into the mount.

God spake immediately, and not by an angel. For though an ambassador or messenger may act in the name of his master, yet it is against the use of all ages and places for such to call themselves by his name. As well might an ambassador of France say, I am the king of France, which all men would account absurd, arrogant, and ridiculous, as an angel might say, I am the Lord. All these words, i. e. commands, for so the word is used, Deut. xvii. 19; Esth. i. 12.

^b Lev. 26. 1, ^{13.} Deut. 5. 6. Ps. 81. 10. Hos. 13. 4. c ch. 13. 3. + Heb. servants.

2 ^b*I am the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, °out of the house of †bondage.*

The only true God, and thy God by special title, having entered into covenant with thee, and chosen thee for my peculiar people, to protect, and rule, and bless thee above all others. God's authority and right over them is fitly put in the front, as the foundation of all God's commands, and their duties. Which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt; and so by right of redemption thou art mine. Out of the house, i. e. the place; for so the word house is sometimes used, as Judg. xvi. 21.

^d Deut. 5. 7. & 6. 14. ² Kin. 17. 35. Jer. 25. 6. & 35. 15.

3 ^d*Thou shalt have no other gods before me.*

Heb. There shall not be to thee another god, or other gods, to wit, idols, which others have, esteem, and worship as gods, and therefore Scripture so calls them by way of supposition, Deut. xxxii. 21; 1 Sam. xii. 21; 1 Cor. viii. 4, 5; but thou shalt not have them in any such reputation or veneration, but shalt forsake and abhor them, and cleave unto me alone. Before me, i. e. in my presence, in my house or church, which you are, where I am especially present; and therefore for you to worship any other god is most impudent idolatry, even as when a woman commits adultery before her husband's face. He may also intimate, that all the idolatry which any of them shall hereafter commit, though never so cunningly and secretly managed, is manifest to his eyes, Psal. xlv. 20, 21. Others translate it with me, or besides me, as it is rendered Matt. xii. 30. He forbids the worship of all others, not only in opposition to him, but also in conjunction with him, or subordination to him. See 2 Kings xvii. 33; Exod. xxxii.; Acts vii. 41; Rev. xix. 10; xxii. 8. 9.

^e Lev. 26. 1. Deut. 4. 16. & 5. 8. & 27. 15. Ps. 57. 7.

4 ^e*Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:*

Thou shalt not make, either in thy mind, or with thy hand, Acts xvii. 29, or by thy command. Unto thee, i. e. for thy use, or for thee to worship; for otherwise they were not absolutely forbidden to make any images, but only to make them for worship, as may appear by comparing this place with Lev. xix. 4; Deut. iv. 15; and Amos v. 26, with Acts vii. 43; and from Lev. xxvi. 1, where the setting up of a pillar, or stone, is as absolutely forbidden as the making of an image. And therefore as the former is not forbidden to be done simply and universally, as appears from Josh. xxiv. 20; 1 Sam. vii. 12, but only to be done in order to worship, so also is the latter. Moreover there were cherubims and other images in the temple, and afterwards the brazen serpent, which because they were not made to be worshipped, neither were indeed, nor were ever esteemed to be, any contradictions to this law. Any graven image, or molten, or any other image, as is most evident from the nature and reason of the precept. Nor is any thing more common than such synecdochical expressions, wherein under one kind named all other things of the like nature are contained. But for more abundant caution, and to put all out of doubt, he adds a more general word, nor any likeness. Any thing that is in heaven; as of God, Deut. iv. 15; Isa. xlv. 9, 20, angels, sun, moon, or stars, which the heathens worshipped, Deut. iv. 19; xvii. 3. Or in the earth; as of men, and beasts, and creeping things, which the Egyptians and other Gentiles worshipped as gods. See Deut. iv. 16, 17; Isa. xlv. 13; Ezek. xxiii. 14. Or in the water; as of fishes, such as Azek; or serpents, crocodiles, and such other Egyptian deities. Under the earth: this is emphatically added, to note the singular care of Divine Providence in bringing the waters under the earth, which naturally are lighter and higher than it, and therefore might easily overwhelm it. Compare Psal. civ. 6.

5 ^f*Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am °a jealous God, °visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;*

Not only inward reverence is forbidden, but also all outward gestures that naturally or customarily express reverence, whether bowing down the body, as here; or bending the knee, as 1 Kings xix. 18; or kissing the idol, or one's hand towards it, as Job xxxi. 27; Hos. xiii. 2; one gesture being by a synecdoche named for all. To them, nor before them; for to bow to them, and to bow before them, are expressions in Scripture of the same extent and use, as appears by comparing this place with Lev. xxvi. 1; 2 Chron. xxv. 14; and 2 Sam. vii. 22, with 1 Chron. xvii. 25; and Matt. iv. 9, with Luke iv. 7. Nor serve them; or, worship them, either inwardly in thy mind, or outwardly by any sensible mean or sign of worship given to them, as incense or sacrifice, vowing to them, or swearing by them, or the like. A jealous God, i. e. impatient of any partner in thy love and worship, and full of wrath against them that give my glory to images, Isa. xlii. 8; as jealousy is the rage of a man (Prov. vi. 34) against the defiler of his marriage-bed. God is pleased to call and account himself the Husband of his church and people, Jer. ii. 2; Hos. ii. 19; and therefore idolatry is called adultery, Deut. xxxi. 16; Jer. iii. 3, 10; and God's anger against idolaters' jealousy. The word el properly signifies the strong God, and shows God's ability to avenge himself, as the word jealous notes his readiness and resolution to do it. Visiting, i. e. remembering, inquiring into, or punishing, (as that word is commonly used, as hath been noted before,) the iniquity of the fathers upon the children. Quest. How can this be just? Answ. 1. All are born sinners, and are children of wrath, and therefore justly punishable for their own sins. Answ. 2. He speaks not here of eternal damnation, but of temporal punishments, in which there is no shadow of injustice; as appears, 1. Because the sins of parents are oft punished in their children, even in human courts, as is manifest in traitors, which practice being acknowledged to be just, it cannot with any sense be accounted unjust in God. 2. Because such external punishments have more good than evil in them, and are in many, and may be so in others, if themselves do not hinder it, instruments of the greatest good, exercises of their virtues and graces, and means of their eternal happiness. 3. Because children are a part and the possession of their parents, and therefore it is not unjust if they suffer with them, and for them. Answ. 3. This is to be understood with an exception of repentance, and penitent children, as appears from Ezek. xviii. And if any such be temporally punished for their fathers' sins, God will abundantly recompense it to them some other way. But if children tread in their fathers' sinful steps, it is but just that they should partake of their plagues. Unto the third and fourth generation; and further too, as appears in the ten tribes, and afterwards in the two tribes, upon whom the iniquity of their fathers hath been visited now for many generations. But he mentions them in particular, partly, because a parent may live so long, and see the dreadful effects of his sin in his children's children; partly, because so far the memory of a father may extend, and be matter of imitation to his children; and partly, to show the difference between his exercise of justice and mercy, as appears by comparing the next verse. Them that hate me. This word is opposed to the conceit that idolaters, at least many of them, have of themselves, that they love God more than others do, because they love, and honour, and worship the creatures for his sake, and for those excellencies that he hath wrought in them; but this will no more excuse their idolatry, than it will excuse him that commits adultery with his friend's wife, that he did it for his friend's sake, and from the love he had to his friend, and for his relations.

6 And ¹shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

Unto thousands, to wit, of their generations, i. e. for ever; whereas his punishment extended only to three or four of them: so far is God's mercy exalted above his justice. Compare Psal. ciii. 17.

Them that love me, and keep my commandments: this conjunction is very observable, both against those that falsely and foolishly pretend or insinuate that the inward affection of love to God is not absolutely and always necessary to salvation; and also against them who, pretending inward love to God, live in the customary breach of God's known commands.

7 ^kThou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD ¹will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

Or, not carry, or not take, or lift up, to wit, in or into thy mouth, as the phrase is more fully expressed, Job iv. 2; Psal. xvi. 4, l. 16. So men are said to take up a proverb, or a lamentation, Isa. xiv. 4; Ezek. xxvi. 17. The name of the Lord; not only the proper name of the Lord, but any of his attributes, ordinances, and works, by which God hath made himself known. In vain; or unto vanity, or vainly. Either, 1. Falsely, or in a false oath; thou shalt not swear falsely by the name of the Lord, or not lift up the name of God into thy mouth in an oath to the confirmation of a lie. Or, 2. In vain, as we render it, and as the word schave is frequently used, as Job vii. 3; xv. 31; Psal. lx. 11; lxxxix. 47; Isa. i. 13. You shall not use the name of God, either in oaths or in common discourse, lightly, rashly, irreverently, or unnecessarily, or without weighty or sufficient cause. Which being a duty enjoined not only in many places of sacred Scripture, but also in the apocryphal Ecclesiasticus, xxiii. 15—17, and even by heathen authors, as Plato in his Book of Laws, and it being evident by the light of nature to man's reason, it were strange if it were not here understood; especially considering that it is most reasonable to take these short laws in the most comprehensive sense, such as this, not the former, is; for the prohibition of using it vainly and rashly doth certainly include that of swearing by it falsely, but this latter doth not include the former. Besides, the former exposition restrains the words to swearing, whereas the words are more general, and speak of any taking God's name into their mouths, either by oaths or any other way. And it becomes not us to set limits to God's words where God hath set none. It is also here to be observed, as well as in the other commands, that when this sin is forbidden, the contrary duty is commanded, to wit, to use the name of God, both in swearing and otherwise, holily, cautiously, and reverently. Guiltless, or, innocent, i. e. free from guilt, and the punishment of it: the meaning is, the Lord will look upon him as a guilty person, and will severely punish him. And so this or the like phrase is used 1 Kings ii. 9. And it is a common figure, called meiosis, where more is understood than is expressed, as 1 Sam. xii. 21; Psal. xxv. 3; Prov. x. 2. And this reason is here added, because sinners of this sort are usually held innocent by men, either because they cannot discover their fault when they forswear themselves, or because they take no care to punish the abusers of God's name by vain and customary oaths, curses, or blasphemies: q. d. Though men spare them, I will assuredly punish them.

8 ^mRemember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

This word remember is here very emphatical; and, 1. It reminds us of a former delivery of the substance of this command, to wit, Gen. ii. 3. 2. It insinuates the great necessity of consideration and preparation for the sabbath before it comes, 3. It shows the singular importance of this command, which is therefore placed in the heart and centre of the rest, to show that the religious observation of this is the best way to secure our obedience to all the rest, and that the neglect of this will bring in the violation of all the other, as common experience shows. To keep it holy, i. e. to use it holily, by a careful abstinence from servile works or worldly business, and by a diligent employing of the day in holy thoughts, words, and exercises, in the worship of God in public and private, and the celebration of his works, and the furthering of our own and others' sanctification and salvation. See Isa. lviii. 13.

9 ⁿSix days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

This may be either, 1. A command to employ those days in our worldly occasions, yet so as God and religion be not neglected on those days, as many scriptures teach us. Or, 2. A permission to do so; which I prefer, 1. Because so it is a proper argument to enforce the observation of the sabbath: q. d. Grudge not me one day, when I allow you six for it. 2. Because the command of diligence in our callings would seem improperly placed here, as being of a quite different nature, and belonging to the second table, and being provided for in a distinct command, as we shall see.

10 But the ^oseventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

The sabbath of the Lord, or, to the Lord, i. e. consecrated to his use, honour, and service. Hence God calls them my sabbaths, Lev. xxvi. 2; Isa. lvi. 4, because they are commended by his example, and enjoined by his command. Any work, i. e. any servile, laborious, common, or worldly work, tending to thy own profit or pleasure. See Exod. xxxiv. 21; Lev. xxiii. 7; Numb. xxviii. 18; Isa. lviii. 13. Nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant: this clause is added, not as if children or servants were not immediately obliged by this command, or were excused by God for the breach of this law at their master's commands, which were to obey men rather than God, contrary to St. Peter's command and practice, Acts v. 29, and which were to limit the foregoing word thou, and the law of the sabbath, only to those that have children and servants, which is an idle, senseless, and absurd, as well as profane opinion; but to restrain hard-hearted, and covetous, or ungodly persons, that they should neither command nor suffer their children or servants to profane the sabbath, so far as they can hinder it; which how far it concerns thousands of governors of families at this day, they shall do well seriously and in time to consider. Nor thy cattle, partly, to teach us to exercise mercy towards the brute creatures; compare Deut. v. 14; partly, because the use of cattle must have drawn along with it the attendance and employment of men; and partly, that by observing the rest of the cattle, they might be more minded and quickened to the observation of this sacred rest. Nor thy stranger, i. e. the Gentile that sojourneth with thee; lest their example should provoke the Israelites to imitate them; and lest the Gentiles should have opportunity of gaining at that time when, and by that thing whereby, the Israelites were losers, even by the religious observation of the sabbath. That dwells within thy cities, which have walls and gates, or within thy villages or territories. So the word gates is oft taken, as Gen. xxii. 17; xxiv. 60; 2 Sam. x. 8, compared with 1 Chron. xix. 9.

11 For ^qin six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

In six days, and neither in more nor less time, as he could have done. Rested, i. e. ceased from his creating works; otherwise he worketh still (John v. 17) by his providence and grace; and neither is idle nor weary, Isa. xl. 28; but this rest is ascribed to him for our admonition and imitation. The Lord blessed the sabbath day, i. e. made it a day of blessing; as well of receiving blessings and praises from men, as of conferring his blessings and favours upon those that religiously observe it. The day is said to be blessed when men are blessed by it, and in it, by a common metonymy, as a man's field, Gen. xxvii. 27, and basket and store, Deut. xxviii. 5, and the work of his hands, Job i. 10, are said to be blessed when a man is blessed in them. It is remarkable, the blessing and sanctification are not appropriated to the seventh day, but to the sabbath day, whether it should be the seventh day, as to the Jews it then was, or the first day, as to us Christians now it is, which change seems hereby to be insinuated. Hallowed it, i. e. separated it from the rest of the days, and from all common employments, and consecrated it to his own holy service, and man's holy use.

12 ¶ Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

The word honour doth not only note the reverence, love, and obedience we owe them, but also support and maintenance, as appears from Matt. xv. 4—6, and from the like signification of that word, 1 Tim. v. 3, 17, which is so natural and necessary a duty, that the Jews say a man is bound even to beg, or to work with his hands, that he may relieve his parents.

The father is put first here, and the mother Lev. xix. 3, to show that we owe this duty promiscuously and indifferently to both of them. Compare Exod. xxi. 15, 17; Deut. xxi. 18; xxvii. 16; Prov. xx. 20; xxx. 17. And because these laws are brief, and yet comprehensive, under these are contained all our superiors and governors. That thy days may be long, Heb. that they, i. e. thy parents, may prolong thy days, or the days of thy life, to wit, instrumentally, by their prayers made to God for thee, and by their blessing in my name conferred upon thee; though the active verb is commonly taken impersonally, as Job vii. 3; Prov. ix. 11; Luke xii. 10; and so it may be here, they prolong, for be prolonged.

13 *Thou shalt not kill.

To wit, any man or woman, without authority, and without just cause; which exception must necessarily be understood, because many other scriptures command the magistrate to kill great offenders. And this prohibition being delivered by God, who made, and searcheth, and commands men's hearts, must be extended not only to the external act of killing, but to all motions of the heart or tongue which tend that way, as anger, hatred, envy, malice, strife, blows, and the challenges of duellists; which is clearly manifest by comparing this with other scriptures, as Matt. v. 21; 1 John iii. 15, &c. And here, as in the rest, is commanded the contrary duty of preserving the lives of our neighbours as much as lies in our power.

14 *Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Here is mentioned one kind of uncleanness, as being eminently sinful, and unjust, and pernicious to human society. But under this are comprehended and forbidden all other kinds of filthiness, as bestiality, sodomy, whoredom, fornication, &c., and all means, occasions, and appearances of them; as it appears, 1. From other scriptures that forbid those things, which either belong to this command, or to none of the ten, which is very improbable. 2. From the large extent of the other commands, noted before. 3. From our Saviour's explication, Matt. v. 27. And contrariwise, all chastity and sobriety in thoughts, affections, words, habits, and gestures, is here prescribed. See 1 Thess. iv. 3, 4; Heb. xiii. 4.

15 *Thou shalt not steal.

i. e. Either by deceit or violence, or without his knowledge and consent, take away another man's goods, Eph. iv. 28; but, on the contrary, shalt preserve and increase them, as need requires, and occasion is offered.

16 *Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

Heb. not answer, viz. when thou art asked in judgment, Lev. v. 1; xix. 16; or, not speak a false testimony, or as a false witness; which doth not only forbid perjury in judgment, but also all unjust censure, slander, backbiting, scorning, false accusation, and the like; and also requires a just and candid judgment of him, and of his words and actions, speaking well of him, as far as truth and justice will permit, and defending his good name against the calumnies and detractions of others. Against thy neighbour; no, nor for thy neighbours; but he saith against, both because such perjuries, slanders, &c. are most commonly designed against them, and because this is a great aggravation of the sin, when a man not only speaks evil and falsehood, but doth this from malice and ill-will. But under this kind are contained other sins of a like, though less sinful, nature, as in the other commands.

A man's neighbour here is not only the Israelite, as some would have it, but any man; as plainly appears, 1. Because that word is frequently used in that sense, not only in the New, as all agree; but also in the Old Testament, as Gen. xi. 3; Lev. xx. 10; Esth. i. 19; Prov. xviii. 17. 2. Because it is so explained, Luke x. 29, 36; Rom. xiii. 9, compared with Matt. xxii. 39. 3. From the reason of the thing, which is common to all; unless a man will be so hardy to say that he may bear false witness against a stranger, though not against an Israelite; and, in like manner, that when God forbids a man to commit adultery with his neighbour's wife, Lev. xx. 10, he may do it with a stranger's wife; and that though a man be commanded to speak the truth to his neighbour, Zech. viii. 16, he may tell lies to a stranger. 4. Because the great law of love and charity, which is the life and soul of this and all the commands, and binds us to all; binds us, and bound the Israelites, to strangers, as appears from Exod. xxiii. 4; Lev. xix. 33, 34.

17 *Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

The coveting here forbidden is either, 1. The inward and deliberate purpose and desire of a deceitful or violent taking away of another man's goods; but this is forbidden in the eighth commandment. And it is hard to conceive that St. Paul should think that this command did not forbid such a practice, Rom. vii. 7, which even the better sort of heathens esteemed a sin, whose words are, that they who are withheld from incest, or whoredom, or theft, only from a principle of fear, are guilty of those crimes; especially seeing the Old Testament Scriptures, which doubtless he diligently studied, do so plainly condemn evil purposes of the heart, as Lev. xix. 17; Deut. ix. 4, 5; xv. 7, 9, &c. Or, 2. The greedy desire of that which is another man's, though it be without injury to him. Thus Ahab sinned in desiring Naboth's vineyard, though he offered him money for it, 1 Kings xxi. 2. Or rather, 3. Those inward motions of the heart, which from the fountain of original corruption do spring up in the heart, and tickle it with some secret delight, though they do not obtain the deliberate consent of the will. For seeing this law of God is spiritual and holy, Rom. vii. 12, 14, and reacheth the thoughts, intents, and all the actual motions of the heart, as is apparent from the nature of God, and of his law; and seeing such motions are both the fruits of a sinful nature, and the common causes of sinful actions, and are not agreeable either to man's first and uncorrupted nature, or to God's law; they must needs be a swerving from it, and therefore sin. And this is the reason why this command is added as distinct from all the rest.

18 ¶ And *all the people *saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

Saw the thunderings, i. e. heard them. One sense is put for another, as seeing, Gen. xlii. 1, for hearing, Acts vii. 12. They removed from the bottom of the mountain, where it seems they stood.

19 And they said unto Moses, *Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but *let not God speak with us, lest we die.

x Deut. 5. 2.
21. Mic. 2. 2.
Hab. 2. 2.
Luke 12. 15.
Acts 20. 33.
Rom. 7. 7.
& 13. 9.
Eph. 5. 3. 5.
Heb. 13. 5.
y Job 31. 9.
Prov. 6. 29. Jer. 5. 8. Matt. 5. 28.

z Heb. 12. 18. a Rev. 1. 10.
12.

b ch. 19. 18.

c Deut. 5. 27.
G. 15. 16.
Gal. 3. 19. 20.
Heb. 12. 19.
d Deut. 5. 22.

This they speak from a sense of their own guilt, and of the greatness and holiness of the Divine Majesty, to whom they durst not approach but by a mediator. See Deut. v. 27; xvi. 16; Gal. iii. 19.

20 And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: 'for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

To prove you, or try, or search you, whether you are innocent, and such as delight in my presence; or conscious of your guilt, and therefore afraid of my appearance; whether you have such a righteousness as can abide the trial of a severe Judge; or whether you are such as have cause to fear my wrath, and to flee to my grace and mercy; which of you are sincere and upright, and which are hypocrites and ungodly persons; or, to try whether this terrible appearance will produce in you that reverence, fear, and obedience which I call for; or, to give you a law, by which you will be proved whether you do indeed love and fear me, as you pretend you do, or whether you do not.

God's fear is properly in men's hearts; but here the sense seems to be this, That this fear, i. e. his dreadful manifestation of his majesty and justice, (the act being here put for the object,) may be now and ever before your eyes, and in your memories, as an effectual preservative from sin.

21 And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto ^hthe thick darkness where God was.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you ⁱfrom heaven.

Ye have seen, i. e. heard, as ver. 18. He may use the word seen here, to intimate that this was all they could see of God, to wit, his voice and speech, and that they saw no image of him, as is expressed in a parallel place, and therefore should make no resemblances of him, as it here follows. From heaven, i. e. from the lower heaven, to wit, the air, or the clouds, which were over the top of mount Sinai, Deut. iv. 36; Neh. ix. 13; and so the word heaven is oft understood, as Gen. i. 20; Job xxxv. 11; Psal. lxxix. 2. And so this place may be reconciled with Heb. xii. 25, where this is said to be spoken upon earth.

23 Ye shall not make ^kwith me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

With me, i. e. to worship together with me; I will allow no companion; or, to me, as it follows, unto you; and ver. 24, unto me; and the particle eth is sometimes used for el, or lamed, as 1 Sam. xxii. 14; 2 Kings xxii. 14; or, for me, either to represent my person, by comparing this with the parallel place, Deut. iv. 15, 16, or to worship me by, as it is apparent that the Israelites afterwards did intend to worship Jehovah in the golden calf, and therefore Aaron calls the feast of the calf a feast to Jehovah, Exod. xxxii. 5, and that with the approbation of the people, whom he then complied with, and durst not resist. Gods, i. e. idols or images, to whom you may give the name and worship of gods, of silver, and consequently not of any other materials, as wood or stone: it is a synecdoche.

24 ¶ An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, ^lthy sheep, and thine oxen: in all ^mplaces where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will ⁿbless thee.

An altar thou shalt make for thy present use, or whilst thou art in the wilderness: this he commanded, partly, that they might easily and readily erect an altar upon all occasions, which it might be hard for them to do there of better materials; partly, to mind them how much more God regarded the inward holiness than the outward pomp of their devotions; partly, because God would make a conspicuous difference between them and idolaters, who used much cost and curiosity about their altars; partly, that the altars might, after they left them, fall down and moulder away, and not remain as lasting monuments, which might be afterward abused to idolatry by any persons that came thither; partly, because they were uncertain of their stay any where, except at Sinai, and therefore must raise such altars as they could suddenly do. But this command only concerned their wilderness state; for there were better and more durable altars in the tabernacle and temple. In all places, therefore there is no need of building any stately altar in a certain place, as if my presence were fixed there, and not to be enjoyed elsewhere. Where I record my name, or, cause my name to be remembered by you; i. e. not in every place which you shall invent, but in all such places as I shall appoint for the remembrance or celebration of my name, or for the service of my majesty, whether it be in the wilderness, and in divers parts thereof, or in the tabernacle and temple.

25 And ^oif thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not ^pbuild it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

An altar of stone in those rocky parts might be as easy for them to make as one of earth. Hewn stone would require both time, and cost, and art. The reasons of this precept are in part the same with the former, ver. 24. If thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it, by thy disobedience to my express command now given; and howsoever they think to gratify me by this curiosity, I shall not look upon it as a sacred thing, by which the sacrifices offered on it shall be sanctified, but as a profane thing which will defile them. So little doth God value or approve the inventions of men in his worship, how colourable soever they be.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

He seems to mean the steps of ladders, or others of the same nature, which could suddenly be made, and were proper for their present condition, where there was danger of the following inconvenience. For afterwards God appointed an altar ten cubits high, 2 Chron. iv. 1; though some conceive they went not up to that by steps, but by an insensible ascent upon the ground raised by degrees for that purpose. But if the priests did go up to it by steps, God provided against the indecency here mentioned, by prescribing linen breeches to them in that service. That thy nakedness be not discovered thereon; for these linen breeches were not yet appointed, and the manner then and there was for men to wear long coats or gowns like women. God would remove all appearance or occasion of immodesty, especially in sacred persons and things; and the rather, to show his detestation of that impudence and filthiness which was very usual in some of the solemnities and worship of the heathen.

CHAP. XXI.

Law concerning bond-men or slaves, 1—5. Servants bored through the ear, 6. Ordinances for bond-women, 7—11. Of murderers, 12. Of them that curse their parents, 17. Of strikers, 18, 19. Of them that hurt a woman with child, 22—25. Of a master of a family that strikes out an eye or tooth of his man or maid servant, 26, 27. Of a pushing ox, 29. Of them that hurt their neighbour's ox by digging a pit, 33. Of one ox killing another, 35, 36.

NOW these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them.

Or, the judicial laws, by which thou and the judges before mentioned shall govern thyself and the people in civil and criminal causes.

2 ^bIf thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.

If thou buy an Hebrew servant; of which practice see

^c 1 Sam. 12. 20. Is. 41. 10, 13. ^f Gen. 22. 1. ^g Deut. 13. 3. ^h Deut. 4. 10. ⁱ 6. 2. & 10. 12. & 17. 13. ^k 19. & 19. 20. & 28. 28. Prov. 3. 7. & 16. 6. Lk. 8. 13.

^h ch. 19. 16. Deut. 6. 6. 1 Kin. 8. 12.

ⁱ Deut. 4. 36. Neh. 9. 13.

^k ch. 32. 1. 2 Kings 1. 11. 5. 4. 5. 2 Kings 17. 33. Ezek. 20. 39. & 43. 8. Dan. 5. 4. 23. Zeph. 1. 5. 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15, 16.

^l Lev. 1. 2. m Deut. 12. 5. 11. 21. & 14. 23. & 16. 6. 11. & 26. 2. 1 Kings 8. 43. & 9. 3. ^m 2 Chron. 6. 6. & 7. 16. & 12. 13. Ezra 6. 12. Neh. 1. 9. Ft. 74. ⁿ Jer. 7. 10, 12. n Gen. 12. 2. Deut. 7. 13.

^o Deut. 27. 5. Josh. 8. 31. ^p 1 Mac. 4. 47. ^q Heb. build them with hewing.

^r ch. 24. 3. 4. Deut. 4. 14. & 6. 1.

^b Lev. 25. 37. 41. Deut. 15. 12. Jer. 34. 14.

Jer. xxxiv. 14. This was allowed in two cases: 1. When a man for his crimes was condemned by the judges to be sold; of which see Exod. xxii. 3; 2 Kings iv. 1; Matt. xviii. 25. 2. When a man pressed by great poverty sold himself or his children; of which see Lev. xxv. 39, 40. The seventh year is to be numbered, either, 1. From the last sabbatical year, or year of release, which came every seventh year; and the sense of the place is, not that he shall always serve six full years, but that he shall never serve longer, and that his service shall last only till that year comes. Or rather, 2. From the beginning of his service; for, 1. It were a very improper speech to say, he shall serve six years, of one who possibly entered into his service but a month before the year of release. 2. In the law of the sabbatical year there is no mention of the release of servants, as there is of other things, Lev. xxv.; Deut. xv.; and in the year of jubilee, when servants are to be released, it is expressed so, as Lev. xxv. 54, 55.

^{† Heb. with his body.} 3 If he came in [†]by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

By himself, i. e. with his own person only, not with a wife, as the opposite branch showeth.

4 If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

That being a true rule, and approved both by Scripture and by heathen authors, that the birth follows the belly, Gen. xxi. 10; Gal. iv. 24, 25; and he that owns the tree hath right to all its fruit.

Quest. How was this separation of man and wife agreeable with the first institution of marriage, by which that bond is made indissoluble? Ans. 1. That bond was not necessarily dissolved by this law, both because the separation was at the man's choice, who might have staid there if he so pleased; and because the distinction of their habitations might consist with the right and use of matrimony, which the master also would probably permit for his own advantage. Ans. 2. God might here, as well as in the case of divorces, dispense with his own laws and institutions, especially in this case, where he might design this for a punishment to the man for marrying a stranger, which was not pleasing to God, as appears from Deut. xxi. 11; Ezra x. 2; Neh. xiii. 23. And that this woman was a stranger, and not a Hebrewess, is manifest, because then she also must have gone out free, ver. 7—9; Deut. xv. 12.

^{c Deut. 15. 16, 17.} 5 ° And if the servant [†]shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free:

^{† Heb. saying shall say.} 6 Then his master shall bring him unto the ^djudges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall °bore his ear through with an aul; and he shall serve him for ever.

Shall bring him unto the judges; partly, that it may appear he chooseth this freely, and is not overawed nor overreached by his master; and partly, that the agreement being so publicly and solemnly confirmed, might be irrevocable. He shall also bring him to the door, to wit, of his master's house, as it is expressed, Deut. xv. 17; a token that he was fixed there, and never to go a freeman out of these doors. His master shall bore his ear through with an aul, as a note of a servant; as it continued to be long after this in Syria and Arabia, as Juvenal and Petronius Arbiter affirm; and it did fitly represent his settled and perpetual obligation to abide in that house, and there to hear and obey his master's commands. See Psal x. 5. For ever, i. e. not only for six years more, but without any limitation of time, as long as he lives, until the jubilee, which is an exception made by God to this law, Lev. xxv. 40; Deut. xv. 17. The Hebrew word olam, here used, oft signifies not eternity, but only a long time. See Exod. xii. 14.

^{† Neh. 5. 5.} 7 ¶ And if a man [†]sell his daughter to be a maidservant, she shall not go out ^gas the menservants do.

A man, i. e. a Hebrew, as appears by the opposition of one of a strange nation, ver. 8.

For a man to sell his daughter to be a maid-servant was allowed in case of extreme necessity, because of the hardness of their hearts. She shall not go out as the men-servants do, but upon better terms, as being one of the weaker and more helpless sex. Quest. How doth this agree with Deut. xv. 17, Also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise? Ans. 1. Distinguish persons. She, Deut. xv., was sold by herself, and that to mere servitude; this here was sold by her father, not only for service, but in order to her marriage, as the following verses sufficiently imply. 2. Distinguish things. The likeness between men-servants and maid-servants was only in the rites used, in case she consented to perpetual servitude. The difference here is, in case they both were made free, in which case she had some privileges, which here follow.

8 If she [†]please not her master, who [†]hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

^{† Heb. de evil in the eyes of, &c.} Who hath betrothed her to himself, for a concubine or secondary wife. Not that masters did always take maid-servants upon these terms, as some conceive; but that some did so, and of them this place speaks. Though here is a differing reading; and as the margin hath to the pronoun, signifying to him, so the text hath to the adverb, signifying not; and so the text may be translated thus, so that he doth not betroth her, to wit, to himself, or to his son, as he gave her hopes he intended. Either reading or sense is proper and probable. Then shall he let her be redeemed, either by herself or friends, or any other person that will redeem her. Quest. How could he part with her, and sell her, when she was betrothed to him? Ans. 1. This might be one of those many indulgences given to them for the hardness of their hearts; and there is no doubt God could dispense with his own positive laws. 2. The latter reading avoids this difficulty. To sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power: this was in general prohibited for all Hebrew servants, but it is particularly mentioned here, because there was special reason for it; both because there was more danger of her corruption in chastity and religion in regard of her sex, and because the master in that case was under a greater temptation of selling her to a foreigner, because no Israelite would buy her, or give so much money for her as a heathen would, who would and might keep her for a perpetual servant, which the Israelites might not do. He hath dealt deceitfully with her, viz. in breaking his promise of marriage made to her, or blasting the hopes he encouraged her to have of it. The Hebrew words are exactly rendered thus, in dealing deceitfully or falsely with her or against her; and they may be added as an aggravation of that sin of selling her to a strange nation, wherein there was a double false dealing; the one towards God, who by his law forbade this; the other towards her, whom he hired upon other terms, and not with a power to dispose of her contrary to the law and manner of the Israelites.

9 And if he have betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

i. e. Give her a convenient portion, as he doth to his own daughters, chap. xxii. 16.

10 If he take him another wife; her food, her raiment, ^hand her duty of marriage, shall he not diminish.

Her duty of marriage is called due benevolence, 1 Cor. vii. 3. Or, her dwelling, as the due is oft used. So here are the three great conveniences of life, food, and raiment, and habitation, all which he is to provide for her. Or, her cohabitation, or, her time, the convenient and appointed times for conjugal converse with her; for some times were disallowed for it, Lev. xv., and when there were plurality of wives, they had their vicissitudes, Gen. xxx. 15, 16. Shall he not diminish, or rather, not withdraw, or deny it, as the word signifies, and as the LXX., Chaldee, Samaritan, Vulgate, and others render it.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out free without money.

And with gifts also by virtue of the law, Deut. xv. 14. The sum is this, The master was either, 1. Willing to part with her; and then he was to let her be redeemed by herself, or any of her friends, but not by a heathen, ver. 8. Or, 2. Willing to keep her; and then, as he had betrothed her, he was to perform all the duties of a husband to her, although he had another wife besides her, ver. 10. 3. If he would keep her, and yet deny those duties to her, then as his fault was aggravated, so was his punishment; for now he cannot sell her, but must let her go freely, as in this verse.

12 ¶ He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

He that smiteth a man knowingly and wilfully, as appears by the next verse, neither the friends of the party slain, nor the magistrate, shall give him a pardon, or accept a ransom for him, Numb. xxxv. 31.

13 And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

If it appear that the manslayer did not intend nor desire it, but only it fell out by his heedlessness, or by some casualty, or by some unexpected providence; or, God, and not man, God without the man's contrivance or design; for otherwise, in a general sense and way, God delivered Christ into the hands of Judas and the Jews, who did advisedly and maliciously kill him. A place whither he shall flee, i. e. a city or place of refuge, Numb. xxxv. 11; Deut. xix. 5.

14 But if a man come presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

If a man come presumptuously, i. e. do this proudly, boldly, purposely, and maliciously; for so the word signifies. From mine altar, which not only in the wilderness, but afterward, seems to have been esteemed a place of refuge, 1 Kings i. 50, as it also was among the heathens: but God so far abhors murder, that he will rather venture the pollution of his own altar than the escape of the murderer. See 2 Kings xi. 15.

15 ¶ And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

He that smiteth; either, 1. So as is before mentioned, ver. 12, so as they die. And to smite sometimes signifies to kill, as Gen. iv. 15; 2 Kings xiv. 5, compared with 2 Chron. xxv. 3. And this may be here added by way of distinction: q. d. That killing of another man which is punished with death, must be done presumptuously; but the killing of parents, though not done presumptuously, is a capital crime. Or, 2. The mere smiting of them, to wit, wilfully and dangerously. Nor will any think this law too severe, that considers that this is an act full of horrid impiety against God, who hath so expressly and emphatically commanded children to honour their parents; of highest and most unnatural ingratitude, and utterly destructive to human society.

16 ¶ And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

i. e. In the manstealer's hand; q. d. though he keep him in his own hands for his own use; for still it is a theft, and he is made that man's slave, and it is in his power to sell him to another when he pleaseth, and therefore deserves death.

17 ¶ And he that curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death.

Or, revileth, to wit, wilfully, maliciously, obstinately, against all admonition, by comparing Deut. xxi. 18.

18 ¶ And if men strive together, and one smite another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed:

With a stone, or any other instrument fit for such a mischievous purpose. A usual synecdoche.

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

The loss of his time, i. e. of the profit which he could or commonly did make of his time in the way of his calling. Cause him to be thoroughly healed, i. e. pay the charges of the cure.

20 ¶ And if a man smite his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely punished.

His servant, namely, a stranger; for an Israelite was to be better used. See Lev. xxv. 39, 40, &c. With a rod; a fit and usual instrument for correction, whereby it is implied, that if he killed him with a sword, or any such weapon, he was to die for it. Under his hand, i. e. whilst the master is correcting him. He shall be surely punished; not with death, for then it would have been said so, as it is before and after; but as the magistrate or judge shall think fit, according to the diversity of circumstances; and therefore no particular punishment is set down.

21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money.

i. e. His possession bought with his money; and therefore, 1. Had a power to chastise him according to his demerit, which might be very great. 2. Is sufficiently punished with his own loss. 3. May be presumed not to have done this purposely and maliciously.

22 ¶ If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine.

A woman with child, to wit, the wife of the other person, who interposed herself to succour her husband. No mischief follow, neither to the woman nor child; for it is generally so as to reach both, in case the abortive had life in it.

The husband shall impose the fine, and if it be unreasonable, the judges shall have a power to moderate it.

23 And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life,

Any mischief; either to the mother or to the child, whether it be death, or any maim or mischief.

Who shall give life for life? Ans. Not the private person, which would have introduced infinite mischiefs and confusions, but the magistrate; for these laws are given to Moses, and the execution of these things was committed to Moses, and others under him.

24 ¶ Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

This is called the law of retaliation, and from hence the heathen lawgivers took it and put it into their laws. But though this might sometimes be practised in the letter, yet it was not necessarily to be understood and executed so; as may appear, 1. By the impossibility of the just execution of it in many cases, as when a man that had but one eye or hand was to lose the other, which to him was a far greater mischief than what he did to his neighbour, whom he deprived but of one of his eyes or hands. And this is a sure and righteous rule, Punishments may be less, but never should be greater than the fault. And how could a wound be made neither bigger nor less than that which he inflicted? 2. By comparing this with other laws, wherein a compensation is allowed in like cases, as ver. 18, 30. And when it is enjoined that no satisfaction shall be taken for the life of a wilful murderer, Numb. xxxv. 31, it seems therein implied that satisfaction may be taken for lesser injuries. And indeed the payment of such a price as the loss of an eye, or hand, or foot required, though it might not so much satisfy the revenge of the party so injured, yet

1 Gen. 9. 6.
2 Lev. 24. 17.
3 Num. 35.
4 30, 31.
5 Matt. 23. 32.

1 Num. 35.
2 Deut. 19.
3 4. 6.
4 1 Sam. 24.
5 4, 10, 18.
6 Num. 35.
7 11. Deut. 19.
8 2. Josh. 20. 2.

1 Num. 15.
2 30. & 35. 20.
3 Deut. 19.
4 11, 12. Heb.
5 10. 26.
6 1 Kings 2.
7 26. - 34.
8 2 Kin. 11. 15.

1 Deut. 24.
2 Gen. 37.
3 28.
4 ch. 22. 4.

1 Lev. 20. 9.
2 Prov. 20. 20.
3 Matt. 15. 4.
4 Mark. 7. 10.
5 11 Cr. revileth.

11 Cr. his neighbour.

1 3 Sam. 3.
2 Heb.
3 his causing.

1 Heb.
2 avenged.
3 Gen. 4. 15, 24.
4 Rom. 13. 4.

1 Lev. 25. 45.
2 46.

1 ver. 30.
2 Deut. 22.
3 18, 19.

1 Lev. 24. 20.
2 Deut. 19. 21.
3 Matt. 5. 38.

it was really more to his benefit. This law therefore was only minatory, but so as it was literally to be inflicted, except the injuring party would give such satisfaction as the injured person accepted, or the judges determined.

25 Burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 ¶ And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

27 And if he smite out his manservant's tooth, or his maidservant's tooth; he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

Some confine this to the Israelitish servants, but the text doth not so limit it; and the reason of the law seems to reach to Gentile servants, this being a just punishment to unmerciful masters, (who ought to be merciful to their beasts, much more to such servants,) and a fit recompence to a servant for such a loss. And this law reacheth the loss of any other member, these two being instanced in, the one as the chief, and the other as the meanest, to intimate that other parts of a like or middle nature are included.

28 ¶ If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then *the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

Under which you are to understand any other creatures of like nature which hurt a man in such a dangerous manner, whether with their horns, or teeth, or feet; but he mentions only the ox or bull, and his goring with his horn, because this is most frequently done. Ox shall be stoned; partly, to prevent future mischiefs from that creature; partly, to punish its master for his negligence in not keeping it in; and principally, for man's admonition, for whom seeing the beasts were made, it is not strange nor unjust if it be destroyed for man's good. God would hereby show that he would not, and men should not, spare a wilful murderer. His flesh shall not be eaten; both because it was forbidden food, its blood being not let out; and for the punishment of the owner, who was hereby hindered from the sale of it, to beget in all the greater detestation of murderers, when they observe the poor beast upon this account accused, and therefore not to be touched or tasted.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

It hath been testified, which the Jews say was to be done thrice, and before the magistrate. A man or a woman, to wit, an Israelite, or a stranger who is free, by comparing this with ver. 32.

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for *the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him.

If there be laid on him; either by the avenger of blood, the next akin to the party slain, who is willing to exchange the punishment; or by the judge, who may discern some circumstances which may much lessen the crime, as if an ox had broken his cords wherewith he was tied, or broke forth through the carelessness or wickedness of his servant to whose care he was committed.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

A son or a daughter; names signifying their tender age, in respect of the man or woman, ver. 29. And this is added, lest the foregoing sense should be restrained to their parents, whose lives were more precious, and therefore their loss greater.

32 If the ox shall push a manservant or maidservant; he shall give unto their master ^bthirty shekels of silver, and the ^cox shall be stoned.

The half the freeman's price. See on Matt. xxvi. 15.

33 ¶ And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

If a man shall either open an old pit which hath been covered with earth; or dig a new pit, to wit, in a public way, as the reason of the law shows; for if it were done in a man's own house or ground, there was no danger of such an accident, except the beast transgressed his bounds, and then the man was not culpable.

34 The owner of the pit shall make it good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

The owner of the pit, i. e. he by whose hand or command it was made, shall give money equal to the worth of the dead beast, in the opinion of the judge.

35 ¶ And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also they shall divide.

They shall divide the money; not equally, for so the owner of the mischievous ox might be gainer by the mischief, his ox being much worse than that which was killed; but in such proportions as the judges shall think fit, considering the worth of the cattle, and the circumstances of the action.

36 Or if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his own.

Ox for ox; an ox of equal value with that slain ox, or the price and worth of it.

CHAP. XXII.

Of theft, 1—4. Of eating another man's vineyard, 5. Of hurt coming by fire, 6. Of hurt coming to goods committed to one's trust, 7—13. Of hurt befalling things borrowed, 14, 15. Of committing adultery, 16, 17. Of witchcraft, 18. Of uncleanness with beasts, 19. Of idolatry, 20. That none shall hurt strangers or widows, 21—24. Of usury, 25. Of pawning clothes, 26, 27. Of honouring magistrates, 28. Of the first-fruits, 29. Of eating flesh torn by beasts, 31.

IF a man shall steal an ox, or a ||sheep, || Or, goat. and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and *four sheep for a sheep.

An ox, or a sheep; or, an ass, which is added ver. 4, and consequently any other living creature, to be valued according to its worth and use to man, proportionably to the rule here laid down. Only these are instanced in for their usefulness in the service both of God and men. Or sell it, which was an aggravation of the crime, and a token of greater boldness, resolvedness, and expertness in the trade of thieving, than was in him who kept it at home, ver. 4. Four sheep for a sheep. Quest. 1. Why so much, seeing the stealer of other things was tied to restore but double? Ans. 1. For terror, because these beasts being kept in the fields might more easily be stolen. 2. Because the loss of these was greater than of other things; for they did not only lose what the cattle might be sold for, but all the service, increase, and other benefits which a man might receive from them. Quest. 2. Why more for oxen than for sheep? Ans. 1. Because it argued greater boldness and customeriness in the thief to steal that which might more easily be discovered. 2. Because besides the intrinsic worth of the ox, the labour of the ox was very considerable to his owner, Prov. xiv. 4, and therefore the loss greater.

2 ¶ If a thief be found ^bbreaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall ^cno blood be shed for him.

Breaking up, to wit, an house, which the Chaldee here adds, and by night, as appears from the next verse. For him, i. e. for the thief, though he be killed by a man in his own defence. Because in that case the thief might be pre-

a ver. 22.
Num. 35, 31.

b See Zech.
11, 12, 13.
Matt. 26, 15.
Phil. 2, 7.
c ver. 28.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

a 2 Sam. 12.
b Luke 19.
c See Prov.
6, 31.

sumed to have a worse design, and the owner of the house could neither expect or have the help of others to secure him from the intended violence, nor guide his blows with that discretion and moderation which in the day-time he might use.

3 If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution; if he have nothing, then he shall be sold for his theft.

There shall be blood shed for him; he that kills him shall be put to death, because he punished him more than his crime deserved, and might have been otherwise secured or righted; and in that case, it is probable, the thief designed not murder, but theft only. But if it were evident that the housebreaker designed murder, he might doubtless kill him in his own defence. He shall be sold; either so long till his service was worth the thing stolen, or rather for the ordinary time of six years, because this was not a simple thief, but a housebreaker, which was much worse. Quest. How can he be sold, who is supposed to be killed? Ans. 1. The Hebrew word may be better rendered should be sold, as the foregoing word of the same future time is rendered, should make restitution, to wit, if he were not killed; and therefore the killer of him being sufficiently secured against this injury, was more culpable in killing him without necessity.

4 If the theft be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep; he shall restore double.

Alive; not killed, nor sold, as ver. 1. Double; not more, 1. Because in that case it was presumed, either that he intended to restore it, or at least that he was but raw and unexercised in the trade of stealing, and so should be more gently punished. 2. Because the right owner recovered his goods with less charge and trouble. Or, 3. Because it was but a single crime, whereas the other, ver. 1, was an aggravated and complicated crime, where one sin and injury was added to another. Object. It is said, he shall restore sevenfold, Prov. vi. 31. Ans. 1. Sevenfold is put for abundantly, as that word is oft used, as Gen. iv. 24; Psal. xii. 6; lxxix. 12; and a learned man observes, it is never used for that definite number. Ans. 2. This sevenfold, or seven times, may relate not to the proportion of his restitution, but to the number of his thefts, or rather of his detections; and the sense is this, Though he be found guilty of theft seven times, all his punishment is, that he shall restore as the law prescribes. Whereas adultery, of which he there speaks in the following verses, is a crime of that nature, that if a man be once found guilty of it, restitution cannot be made, nor will it serve his turn, but he falls into all the mischiefs there reckoned up.

5 ¶ If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.

A field or vineyard, or orchard, or other things of like nature; which is generally to be observed in laws.

6 ¶ If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the stacks of corn, or the standing corn, or the field, be consumed therewith; he that kindled the fire shall surely make restitution.

He that kindled the fire, whether wilfully for such a purpose, or carelessly in such a time or place as was dangerous. He shall surely make restitution; which if he were not able to do, it is probable he was to be sold for it, as in like cases was provided.

7 ¶ If a man shall deliver unto his neighbour money or stuff to keep, and it be stolen out of the man's house; if the thief be found, let him pay double.

Stuff, Heb. vessels, garments, utensils, or any kind of household stuff.

8 If the thief be not found, then the master of the house shall be brought unto the judges, to see whether he have put his hand unto his neighbour's goods.

That they may examine all circumstances, and use all means to find out the truth, by offering him his oath, or otherwise. Unto his neighbour's goods; either to take and reserve them for his own use, or to dispose of them to another for his own advantage.

9 For all manner of trespass, whether it be for ox, for ass, for sheep, for raiment, or for any manner of lost thing, which another challengeth to be his, the cause of both parties shall come before the judges; and whom the judges shall condemn, he shall pay double unto his neighbour.

All manner of trespass, to wit, about matters deposited upon trust, and lost, of which alone this place speaks. Which another challengeth to be his; or, when, or concerning which he shall say, This is it, viz. the thing that I have lost; or rather, This is he, to whom I committed it, and whom I suspect and charge as guilty. Whom the judges shall condemn; whether the person with whom the things were deposited, if they judged him guilty of theft, or the depositor, if he were convicted of a false accusation.

10 If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep, or any beast, to keep; and it die, or be hurt, or driven away, no man seeing it:

To keep, as his servant, not freely, but for wages.

11 Then shall an oath of the LORD be between them both, that he hath not put his hand unto his neighbour's goods; and the owner of it shall accept thereof, and he shall not make it good.

An oath of the Lord; so called here, as also 1 Kings ii. 43, because it is taken by his authority and appointment, and for his honour, and in his name alone, God being made both witness, and judge, and avenger thereby. Shall be between them both, i. e. shall end the difference between them both; the one shall give his oath, and the other shall accept of it: or be taken by them both; by the one, that he did deliver them to him upon agreement and for hire; by the other, that he put not his hand to them.

12 And if it be stolen from him, he shall make restitution unto the owner thereof.

From him, Heb. from with him, which is an emphatical expression, and notes that this was taken away, either, 1. From those things which were with him, or which were his, i. e. from the midst of his own goods, which supposeth fraud in him. Or, 2. From under his eye, when he either did know of it, or with common care and diligence it might have been known and prevented, and this argues gross neglect in him. And this is one reason why this man is bound to make restitution, when the other, ver. 7, is not: another reason of the difference is, because those things, ver. 7, were only or principally dead things, and such things as required no great care; or if they did, (for in that case also were included oxen, asses, &c., ver. 9.) yet he with whom they were left received no recompence for them, and therefore was not obliged to any singular care about them; but here the things were such as needed great care and diligence, which also this man was obliged to perform by the hire which he received upon that account, which was Jacob's case, Gen. xxxi. 39.

13 If it be torn in pieces, then let him bring it for witness, and he shall not make good that which was torn.

Let him bring it; i. e. some part of the torn creature, which the wild beast haply had left, Amos iii. 11, 12. Quest. What if the whole creature were carried away, as a sheep or lamb is sometimes by the wolf? Ans. 1. I suppose this was not frequent, and that those ravenous creatures did speedily fall to their meal, and that something was left

d ch. 21. 2.

e ch. 21. 14.

f See ver. 1, 7. Prov. 6. 31.

g ver. 4.

h ch. 21. 6. & ver. 22.

i Deut. 25. 1. 2 Chr. 19. 10.

1 Gen. 31. 39.

39.

k Heb. 6. 16.

not far from the place, which the shepherd might easily procure. 2. The words may be otherwise rendered, he shall bring a witness, as the Chaldee and Samaritan render it; or a testimony, i. e. some evidence whereby the judge might be satisfied; as for instance, that some wolf or lion, &c. was seen in those parts, &c., or some witness of his diligence and faithfulness in all other things, which therefore might well be presumed in this.

14 ¶ And if a man borrow ought of his neighbour, and it be hurt, or die, the owner thereof being not with it, he shall surely make it good.

Ought, i. e. any living thing, which may be hurt or die, as it follows. He shall surely make it good: this may seem hard, but all things considered is reasonable; because in doubtful cases, wherein it is not evident whether the borrower was faulty or not, as it is here, it ought to be interpreted in favour of the lender, rather than of the borrower; partly, to oblige the borrower to the greater fidelity and care in such things, which being not his own, men are commonly more careless about; partly, because the benefit being wholly the borrower's, the loss also in all reason ought to be his, and the lender ought not to suffer for his kindness, lest he should be discouraged from such actions for the future.

15 But if the owner thereof be with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, it came for his hire.

If the owner thereof be with it: the law reasonably presumes, both that the borrower would not abuse it in the sight of its owner, and that the lender might and would take due care about it. He shall not make it good, except there be some manifest fault in the borrower, as if he should kill or wound the beast in the lender's presence; which exception is easily to be understood from divers other laws of God. It came for his hire, i. e. the benefit was the lender's, and not the borrower's, and therefore the former reason ceaseth; and whether the master were present or absent, he that receives the gain or hire shall bear the loss, except when it came through the borrower's gross and wilful default.

16 ¶ And if a man entice a maid that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely endow her to be his wife.

If a man entice a maid, by persuasions, promise of marriage, allurements, or rewards. But if she were betrothed, it was punished with death, Deut. xxii. 23, 24.

17 If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

This shows the necessity of parents' consent in marriage. According to the dowry of virgins, i. e. in such proportion as the virgin's quality requires; for there was no certain and equal dowry appointed for all women. See 1 Sam. xviii. 25. Quest. Why is there no punishment for the woman? Ans. 1. She had no distinct estate, being yet in her father's house. 2. The loss of her virginity was a sufficient punishment, especially in Israel, where it was a great reproach and prejudice. 3. She was not so culpable as the man, both because she was of the weaker sex, and because she was drawn to the sin by the man's persuasion.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.

i. e. Any person that is in league with the devil, and by his help either doth any mischief, or discovers and practises things above the reach of other men or women. Of which see Exod. vii. 11; Lev. xx. 27; Deut. xviii. 10; 1 Sam. xxviii. 9. The word is of the feminine gender, partly because women are most prone to these devilish arts, and most frequently guilty of them; and partly to intimate that no pity should be showed to such offenders, though they were of the weaker sex.

19 ¶ Whosoever lieth with a beast shall surely be put to death.

20 ¶ He that sacrificeth unto any god, save unto the Lord only, he shall be utterly destroyed.

Sacrificeth, or otherwise worshippeth, as appears from Deut. xvii. 2—5, and many other places. One act of worship put for all by a very familiar synecdoche. Destroyed, Heb. anathematized, i. e. esteemed execrable, and as such destroyed without mercy. See Deut. xxiii. 15, &c.; xviii. 20.

21 ¶ Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child.

23 If thou afflict them in any wise, and they cry at all unto me, I will surely hear their cry;

24 And my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 ¶ If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.

Any of my people, i. e. any Israelite; for it was permitted to take usury of the Gentiles, Deut. xxiii. 20. That is poor: this seems to be added not by way of apposition, as if God's people and the poor were all one, because such are commonly poor; but by way of restriction; for God had promised greatly to bless and enrich the generality of his people, if they by their wickedness did not hinder it, and that there should be few poor among them; yet some such there should be for the trial and exercise of their charity. See Lev. xix. 10; Deut. xv. 4, 7, 11. Usury; the Hebrew word signifies biting; so usury is called, not by way of distinction, as if moderate usury were allowed in this case, which is manifestly false, because the borrower is here supposed to be poor, to whom not the use only, but oftentimes even the principal is to be remitted, Luke vi. 34, 35; but by way of explication, because all usury is of a biting or eating nature, which commonly consumes the person that pays it.

26 ¶ If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

Thy neighbour's; to wit, that is poor, as appears by comparing this with the next verse, where he is supposed to have but one garment, and with Deut. xxiv. 12, 13. By that the sun goeth down; because he speaks of such raiment or covering wherein he used to sleep, ver. 27. But you are not to think that the creditor would every morning take, and every night redeliver his pledge; and therefore this is rather a prohibition to take any such thing for a pledge as a man hath great and daily need of, by this argument, that if he did take it, he could not keep it. Compare Deut. xxiv. 6.

27 For that is his covering only, it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he crieth unto me, that I will hear; for I am gracious.

28 ¶ Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people.

Gods; not gods falsely so called, as some would have it, as appears by 1 Kings xviii. 27; Jer. x. 11; but magistrates and governors, whether civil or ecclesiastical, as it is evident both from Acts xxiii. 3—5, and from the following words, which explain the former, according to the common use of Scripture, and from the title of gods commonly given to such, as Exod. vii. 1; Psal. lxxxii. 6; John x. 34, 35. The ruler of thy people. Compare Eccl. x. 20; Jude 8.

29 ¶ Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

Thou shalt not delay beyond the times appointed, lest this delay grow to a total neglect. And delay may here be ra Deut. 22, 28, 29.

† Heb. seph. Gen. 23, 16. n Gen. 34.12. Deut. 22, 29. 1 Sam. 18.25.

o Lev. 19.26. 31. & 24. 27. Deut. 18. 10, 11. 1 Sam. 23, 3, 9.

p Lev. 18.23. & 20. 15.

q Num. 25.2, 7, 8. Deut. 13. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 10, 14, 15, & 17. 2, 3, 5. 1 Mac. 2. 24.

r ch. 23. 9. Lev. 19. 33. & 25. 35. Deut. 10. 19. Jer. 7. 6. Zech. 7. 10. Mal. 3. 5. s Deut. 10.18. & 24.17. & 27. 19. Ps. 94. 6. Is. 1. 17, 23. & 10. 2. Ezek. 22. 7. Zech. 7. 10. Jam. 1. 27. t Deut. 15. 9. & 24. 15. Job 35. 9. Luke 18. 7. u ver. 23. Job 34. 28. 1's. 18. 6. & 145. 19. Jam. 4. 4. x Job 31. 23. 1's. 69. 24. y Ps. 109. 9. Lam. 5. 3. z Lev. 25.35, 36, 37. Deut. 23. 19, 20. Neh. 5. 7. Ps. 15. 6. Ezek. 18. 6, 17.

a Deut. 24. 6, 10, 13, 17. Job 22. 6. & 24. 5, 9. Pro. 20. 16. & 22. 27. Ezek. 18. 7, 16. Amos 2. 8.

b ver. 23. c ch. 34. 6. 2 Chr. 30. 9. Ps. 66. 15. d Eccles. 10. 20. Acts 23. 5. Jude 8. || Or, judges. ver. 8, 9. Ps. 82. 6.

+ Heb. thy fulness. e ch. 23. 16. f Ps. 94. 9. g Heb. fear. f ch. 13. 2, 12. & 34. 19.

put for neglect, as that word is used, Deut. vii. 10; xxiii. 21; Hab. ii. 3; which may seem to be favoured by the following clause, which commands the giving or offering of the first-born without any mention of the hastening or delaying of it. Thy ripe fruits, Heb. thy fulness; and whereas this word is sometimes applied to seed or corn, as Numb. xviii. 27, and sometimes to the vintage, as Deut. xxii. 9, the circumstances must determine, as it doth in like cases, how it must be taken; which here seem to restrain it to dry fruits, as corn, &c., because it is opposed to liquors; and so all sorts of fruits are comprehended here. Unless you will make this a usual figure called hendyadis, as judgment and justice, Deut. xvi. 18, is put for judgment of justice, or just judgment; so here the fulness and liquors, for the fulness of thy liquors; and so this may be one kind mentioned for all the rest, than which nothing more frequent. Shalt thou give unto me, not in kind, but by a price of redemption to be paid to me in their stead.

^g Deut. 15. ^h Lev. 22. 27. 30 ^e Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: ^b seven days it shall be with his dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me.

Likewise, i. e. ye shall offer their first-born. On the eighth day; not sooner, because it was till then tender and imperfect, and therefore not fit to be offered to God; but it was not tied to that day, for it might be offered afterwards, as appears from Lev. xxii. 27, even till it was a year old.

ⁱ ch. 10. 6. ^l Lev. 19. 2. ^m Lev. 14. 21. ⁿ Lev. 22. 8. ^o Ezek. 4. 14. ^p & 44. 31. 31 ¶ And ye shall be ^{holy} men unto me: ^q neither shall ye eat ^{any} flesh that is ^{torn} of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

Ye shall be holy, i. e. separated from all filthiness, both moral and ceremonial. Neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts; partly, because the blood was not taken out of it; partly, because the clean beast was ceremonially defiled by the touch of the unclean; and partly, to beget in them a detestation of cruelty, even in the beasts, and much more in men.

CHAP. XXIII.

False witness and report forbidden, 1. Right must not be wrested, 2. He commands man to do good to his enemies, 3—5. Bribes are forbidden, 8. The years of sowing appointed, and gathering, 10. Of the seventh year, which is the year of rest; God's command concerning it, 11. Of the sabbath day, 12. Other gods shall not be mentioned, 13. Of the three feasts in a year, 14. The manner of keeping the feasts, 15, 16. The times appointed for the males appearing before the Lord, 17. No sacrifice to be offered with leavened bread, 18. Command concerning the first-fruits, 19. God promiseth an Angel to prepare a way, 20; who is commanded to be obeyed, 21, 22. God promising them the land of the Amorites, &c., 23; forbiddeth the honouring of strange gods, 24. God promises to bless them that serve him, 25—27. Hornets shall expel the enemies of the Israelites, 28—30. The borders of the land of Israel, 31. A covenant with the heathen is forbidden, 32; or to let them inhabit among them, 33.

^a ver. 1. ^b Lev. 19. 16. ^c Pa. 15. 3. & 101. 5. ^d Prov. 30. 18. ^e See 2 Sam. 10. 27. ^f with 16. 3. ^g Or, receive. ^h ch. 20. 16. ⁱ Deut. 19. 16, 17, 18. ^j Ps. 35. 11. ^k Prov. 19. 5, 9, 28. & 24. 28. ^l See 1 Kings 21. 10, 13. ^m Matt. 26. 59, 60, 61. ⁿ Acts 6. 11, 13. THOU shalt not || raise a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

Thou shalt not raise, Heb. not take up, to wit, into thy mouth, as Exod. xx. 7, either by the first raising, or further spreading of it; or not bear, or endure, as that word oft signifies; not hear it patiently, delightfully, readily, approvingly, as persons are very apt to do; but rather shalt discourage and reprove the spreader of it, according to Prov. xxv. 23. Possibly the Holy Ghost might choose a word of such general signification to show that all these things were forbidden. Put not thine hand, i. e. not conspire or agree with them, which is signified by joining hands, Prov. xi. 21, not give them a helping hand in it, not encourage them to it by gifts or promises, not assist them by counsel or interest. Others, not swear with them; but swearing is not noted by putting the hand, but by lifting it up.

2 ¶ Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; ^q neither shalt thou [†] speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment:

Thou shalt not follow a multitude, either their counsel or example. But the Hebrew rabbim both here and in the following clause is by some rendered great men, men in power and authority, whom we are commanded not to follow. And as the word is thus used Job xxxii. 9; Jer. xli. 1, so this sense may seem most probable, 1. Because in the last clause he speaks of causes or controversies, as the Hebrew rib signifies; and matters of judgment, which were not determined by the multitude, but by great men. 2. Because these are opposed to the poor in the next verse. 3. Because the examples of such men are most prevalent. To do evil, either in general or particular, to work mischief, to oppress or crush another. Neither shalt thou speak, Heb. answer, when thou art summoned as a witness in any cause. To wrest judgment, or to turn aside right, or to pervert thyself, the verb being taken reciprocally, as hiph'el is oft put for hitp'ahel; or, which is all one, to do perversely, i. e. unrighteously.

3 ¶ Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

Heb. honour, i. e. respect, or prefer his cause when the richer man's cause is more just: the meaning of this and the former verse is, there shall be no respect of persons, whether rich or poor, but an impartial consideration of the cause. See Lev. xix. 15; Psal. lxxii. 1, 2.

4 ¶ If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

So far shalt thou be from revenging his injuries, that thou shalt render good to him for them, whereby if thou dost not reconcile him, thou wilt procure peace to thyself, and honour to religion.

5 ¶ If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, || and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.

This translation depends upon this supposition, that the Hebrew verb azab, which is thrice used in this verse, signifies not only to leave, but also to help, or erect, or lift up, or strengthen, or restore; which signification of the verb may be proved, 1. From that use of it, Neh. iii. 8; iv. 2. 2. From the parallel place, Deut. xxii. 4, where instead of this verb azab is hakim, which is properly to erect or lift up. But if the verb did signify only to leave, it may be thus rendered according to the Hebrew words, then, or therefore, or surely (for all these ways the Hebrew particle vau is used) thou shalt forbear to leave it, to wit, the ass groaning under his burden, or the lifting up of the ass and burden, to him alone; but if thou wilt be leaving, I will appoint thee a better object for it, thou shalt surely leave or lay aside what thou hast against him, i. e. whatsoever controversy thou hast with him, that shall not hinder thee from succouring him or his in any distress. The Hebrew preposition im, doth oft signify against, as Gen. xxvi. 20; Psal. lxxxv. 4; xciv. 16; Hos. ix. 8. And it is a concise or short way of speaking, which is very common in the Hebrew language, against him, for what thou hast against him. Or thus, and wouldst forbear to leave, to wit, thy business which thou art going about, for him, i. e. for the sake of him who is thy enemy, as the Hebrew preposition lamed is oft used, as Exod. xiv. 25; Numb. xxv. 13; Josh. x. 14, &c.; thou shalt repress those malicious desires, and thou shalt surely leave it to be, or to tarry, or to help with him to lift up the ass. So there is only an ellipsis of the verb, which is most common in the Hebrew tongue.

6 ¶ Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

^e Gen. 7. 1. & 19. 4, 7. ^f ch. 22. 1, 2. ^g Josh. 24. 15. ^h 1 Sam. 15. 9. ⁱ 1 Kin. 19. 10. ^j Job 31. 24. ^k Prov. 1. 10, 11, 15. & 4. 14. ^l Matt. 27. 24, 26. ^m Mark 15. 15. ⁿ Luke 23. 23. ^o Acts 24. 27. & 25. 9. ^p d ver. 6, 7. ^q Lev. 19. 16. ^r Deut. 1. 17. ^s Pa. 72. 2. ^t + Heb. answer.

^e Deut. 22. 1. ^f Job 22. 29. ^g Prov. 24. 17. & 25. 21. ^h Matt. 5. 44. ⁱ Rom. 12. 20. ^j 1 Thess. 5. 15.

^f Deut. 22. 4. ^g Or, wilt thou cease to help him? or, and wouldst thou cease to leave thy business for him; thou shalt surely leave it to join with him.

^g ver. 2. ^h Deut. 27. 19. ⁱ Job 31. 13, 21. ^j Eccl. 8. 5. ^k 5. 8. ^l 1a. 10. 1, 2. ^m Jer. 5. 28. & 7. 6. ⁿ Amos 5. 12. ^o Mal. 3. 5.

i. e. Of the poor which is among thee, not of the poor Jews only, as some peradventure may conceive; for common right must be done even to the Gentiles. Compare Deut. xxvii. 19.

^h Lev. 19. 11. ⁷ ^h Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not: for ^k I will not justify the wicked.

^h ver. 1. ⁱ Deut. 27. 24. ^l Prov. 17. 15, 26. ^m Jer. 7. 6. ⁿ Matt. 27. 4. ^o ch. 34. 7. ^p Rom. 1. 18.
Keep thee far, i. e. abstain from all occasions, degrees, or appearances of it. Compare Job xxii. 23; Prov. iv. 14, 15. A false matter, i. e. an unrighteous judgment; for he is speaking to the judges, as appears both by the foregoing and following verses. Slay thou not; condemn not to death, nor to any other unjust penalty, for the same reason. I will not justify the wicked, and therefore not condemn the innocent; one contrary being here understood from the other, as is frequent in the book of the Proverbs; and what I do not, thou who actest in my name and stead shouldst not do. Or rather thus, Know, O judge, (for to such he speaks,) if thou dost pronounce such a wicked sentence, I will not justify thee, or hold thee guiltless, i. e. I will severely punish thee, as Exod. xx. 7.

^q Deut. 18. 19. ^r 1 Sam. 8. 3. ^s & 12. 3. ^t 2 Chro. 19. 7. ^u Pa. 28. 10. ^v Prov. 15. 27. ^w & 17. 8, 23. ^x & 29. 4. ^y Is. 1. 23. & 5. 23. & 33. 15. ^z Ezek. 22. 12. ^{aa} Amos 5. 12. ^{ab} Ecclus. 20. 29. ^{ac} Acts 24. 28. ^{ad} + Heb. the seeing.
8 ¶ And thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth † the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.

From such shall take no gift, namely, from such whose causes are depending before thee; because if thou dost not sell justice for it, yet thou wilt both seem to do so, and be tempted to do so. Compare Deut. xvi. 19; 1 Sam. viii. 3; Prov. xvii. 8, 23; xix. 6. The wise, or, the open-eyed, and quick-sighted, who in this case cannot see, partly because they will not see, and partly because interest and affection do exceedingly corrupt the judgment, and render it very partial. The words of the righteous, i. e. the judgment of the righteous judges, i. e. of them who before were such, and are inclined to be so, and probably would be so, were they not tempted with bribes; or of them who by their place should be righteous. So they are called righteous, to admonish them of their duty to be so, and to aggravate their sin when they are unrighteous, and consequently to aggravate the mischief of gifts, which make those unrighteous whose office obligeth them to be righteous. Or thus, the matters or causes of the righteous, which may be understood not of the judges, but of the parties pleading, whose righteous cause is by this means perverted by the judge, and a wrong sentence given.

^{ae} ch. 22. 21. ^{af} Deut. 10. 19. ^{ag} & 24. 14, 17. ^{ah} & 27. 19. ^{ai} Pa. 94. 6. ^{aj} Ezek. 22. 7. ^{ak} Mal. 2. 5. ^{al} + Heb. soul.
9 ¶ Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the † heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

The heart of a stranger, i. e. the disposition, dejection, and distress of his heart, which makes him an object of pity, not of malice or mischief.

^{am} Lev. 25. 3. 4.
10 And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard.

Thou shalt let it rest, and lie still, i. e. from manuring, ploughing, tilling, and sowing, and reaping also, by comparing Lev. xxv. 3-5. And this God ordained not only for the reason here mentioned, the more comfortable provision of the poor, and for the cattle, but for other weighty reasons; as, 1. That the heart and strength of the land might not be eaten out by continual tillage. 2. That he might both try and exercise, and also secure the obedience of the Israelites. 3. That he might keep them in dependence upon himself, and give to them and all their neighbours a manifest proof of his singular and gracious providence over his people. 4. That by this kind of quit-rent they might be admonished that God alone was the Lord and Proprietary of the land, and they were only tenants at his will. 5. That being freed from their great labours about the land, they might have the more leisure to meditate upon God's works, and to attend upon the law, which was to be solemnly read at this time, Deut. xxxi. 10, &c. That the poor of thy people may eat. Quest. What had the poor to eat? Answ. Not only the fruits of the vines, and olives, and other fruit trees, but also all that grew of its own accord, Lev. xxv. 5, from those seeds which in the last reaping-time were scattered here and there, which were much more numerous now than in other years, because God gave a special blessing to the sixth year, whereby it did bring forth the fruit of three years, Lev. xxv. 21, and in years of so great plenty men are generally more negligent in their reaping, and therefore the relics are more. In like manner thou shalt deal, i. e. thou shalt not prune nor dress them, nor gather and appropriate to thy own use what they shall produce, but shalt leave them to the poor.

12 Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed.

This command is here repeated, lest any should think the weekly rest might cease when the whole year was consecrated to rest. There were three sorts of sabbaths to the Jews: 1. Of days. 2. Of years, to wit; the seventh year. 3. Of weeks of years, to wit, the jubilee; and all these are types of the eternal rest in heaven.

13 And in all things that I have said unto you be circumspect: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

Make no mention, to wit, with honour or delight, or without detestation; as fornication is not to be named among saints, Eph. v. 3. Or, not mention them in your worship, or in oaths, or in common discourse, and without special occasion, lest the frequent mention of them might keep up their memory, or introduce their worship. Hence the names of idols and idolatrous places were oftentimes changed by the Israelites. See Numb. xxxii. 38; Josh. xxiii. 7. Compare Psal. xvi. 4; Hos. ii. 17; Zech. xiii. 2.

14 Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt: and none shall appear before me empty.)

This may be either, 1. A precept, as it is generally understood, that none should ever come at those times without some offering or other, for the support of the Levites, and of the worship of God; but the determination of this, or what they would give, was left to their choice. Or, 2. A promise to encourage them to come so oft from their remotest habitations to Jerusalem, because they should never appear before God in vain, i. e. to no purpose, or without some benefit, for so the word rekam oft signifies. So it may be parallel to Isa. xlv. 19, I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain. But the former sense is more probable, by comparing this with its parallel place, Deut. xvi. 16, 17.

16 And the feast of harvest, the first-fruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in thy field: and the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.

The feast of harvest, i. e. of wheat harvest, for barley harvest was before this time. This feast was otherwise called pentecost. Quest. How were these the first-fruits, when a sheaf was offered to God in the feast of the passover? Answ. That sheaf was generally of barley, which was less considerable than their wheat; but this was the ^o ch. 20. 8, 9. ^p Deut. 5. 13. ^q Luke 13. 14.

^r Deut. 4. 9. ^s Josh. 22. 5. ^t Pa. 39. 1. ^u Eph. 5. 15. ^v 1 Tim. 4. 16. ^w q Num. 32.

^x Deut. 12. 2. ^y Josh. 23. 7. ^z Pa. 16. 4. ^{aa} Hos. 2. 17. ^{ab} Zech. 13. 2.

^{ac} ch. 24. 23. ^{ad} Lev. 23. 4^t. ^{ae} Deut. 16. 16.

^{af} ch. 12. 15. ^{ag} & 13. 6. & 34. 18. ^{ah} Lev. 23. 6. ^{ai} Deut. 16. 8.

^{aj} ch. 34. 20. ^{ak} Deut. 16. 16. ^{al} Ecclus. 36. 4.

^{am} ch. 24. 22. ^{an} Lev. 23. 10.

^{ao} Deut. 16. 13.

¹ Or, olive trees.

first-fruits of their wheat, which was their principal grain, and they had no bread before this time from the growth of that year. The feast of ingathering, to wit, of all the rest of the fruits of the earth, as of the vines and olives. This was also called the feast of booths, and of tabernacles. See Lev. xxiii. 43; Numb. xxix. 12; Deut. xvi. 13. All their three feasts had a respect to the harvest, which began in the passover, was carried on at pentecost, and was fully completed and ended in this feast. In the end of the year; of the common or civil year, which began in September, as the sacred year began in March.

17 ⁷ Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

To wit, such as are of competent years, and health, and strength, and such as were at their own dispose; for that servants were not bound to this may seem probable, because none of these concerned were to appear before the Lord empty, or without an offering, but the generality of servants had not any thing to offer. And the care and management of their domestic affairs did require the presence and care of many of their males. Before the Lord God, i. e. in that place where God shall record his name, Exod. xx. 24, as the tabernacle or temple.

18 ⁸ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

These clauses most understand of the passover, by comparing this place with its parallel, Exod. xxxiv. 25, where the passover is mentioned. But the words being here universal, by the laws of interpretation they ought to be universally understood, if they can bear that sense; which here they may, for both these clauses agree to other sacrifices. For as every sacrifice had a minchah, or a meat-offering of flour, attending upon it, and offered with it; so it was expressly cautioned, that no leaven should be in that minchah, Lev. ii. 11. And the fat of every sacrifice was consecrated to God, Lev. iii. 16; 2 Chron. xxxv. 14, &c., and was presently to be burnt upon the altar, Lev. vii. 2, 3. And for Exod. xxxiv. 25, what hinders but what is here more generally prescribed, may be there particularly applied to the passover? and that seems more reasonable, than to make that an idle repetition of the same thing. And my sacrifice may be here put for my sacrifices, by the common enallage. Moreover, the two principal things which were offered to God in every sacrifice were blood and fat, Lev. xvii. 6, 11, &c. Neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning: this, if understood of the passover, may seem superfluous, because nothing of it, neither fat nor leaven, was to remain until the morning, Exod. xii. 10, but all of it was to be eaten, even the purtenance thereof, ver. 9, and that, for aught I see, without any exception of the fat, as there was in other sacrifices, Lev. iii. 16. And therefore in that parallel place, Exod. xxxiv. 25, where the passover is mentioned, there is not a word of the fat, but only it is said in the general, neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left until the morning. And in that 2 Chron. xxxv. 14, where there is mention of the fat, it is manifestly restrained to the burnt-offerings, which are there distinguished from the passover, ver. 11, 12.

19 ⁹ The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God.

This seems to be a general rule, extending to all the fruits which the earth first produced; in every kind of which the very first are here enjoined to be offered unto God, before they should presume to eat any of them. It may seem to be repeated here, where the year of rest is mentioned, to teach them the first-fruits were to be given to God of all that the earth produced, not only by their labour and seed, as might be thought from ver. 16, but also of its own accord, as is here implied.

—^b Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

He names one kind, under which he understands a lamb, or a calf, &c., according to the use of Scripture style. This law many understand literally, and that it is forbidden to them, because the idolaters had such a custom, whereof yet there seems to be no sufficient proof; nor, if there were, doth it seem to be a rite of that importance or probability to entice the Israelites to imitate it, that there needed a particular law against this, more than against a hundred such ridiculous usages which were among the heathen, and are not taken notice of in the book of God's laws. The words may be rendered thus, Thou shalt not seethe, or roast, (for the word bashal signifies to roast as well as to boil, as it is evident from Deut. xvi. 7,) a kid, being, or whilst it is (which is to be understood, there being nothing more common than an ellipsis of the verb substantive) in his mother's milk; which it may be said to be, either, 1. Whilst it sucks its mother's milk; and so it may admit of a twofold interpretation: (1.) That this is to be understood of the passover, of which most conceive he had now spoken, ver. 18, in which they used either a lamb or a kid, Exod. xii. 5, and then the word bashal must be rendered roast. (2.) That this speaks not of sacrifice to God, wherein sucking creatures were allowed, Exod. xxii. 30; Lev. xxii. 27; 1 Sam. vii. 9, but of man's use; and so God ordained this, partly because this was unwholesome food, and principally to restrain cruelty, even towards brute creatures, and luxury in the use of them. Or rather, 2. Whilst it is very tender and young, rather of a milky than of a fleshy substance, like that young kid of which Juvenal thus speaks, Qui plus lactis habet quam sanguinis, i. e. which hath more milk than blood in it. And it may be said to be in its mother's milk, by a usual hypallage, when its mother's milk is in it, i. e. whilst the milk it sucks, as it were, remains in it undigested and unconverted into flesh, even as a man is oft said to be in the Spirit, when indeed the Spirit is in him. And what is here indefinitely prohibited, is elsewhere particularly explained, and the time defined, to wit, that it be not offered to God before it was eight days old. And this interpretation may receive light and strength from hence, that the law of the first-fruits, which both here and Exod. xxxiv. 26 goes immediately before this law, doth in Exod. xxii. 30 immediately go before that law of not offering them before the eighth day, which implies, that both of them speak concerning the same thing, to wit, the first-fruits or first-born of the cattle, which were not to be offered to God while they were in their mother's milk, saith this place, or till they were eight days old, saith that place. And consequently, if they might not be offered to God, they might not be used by men for food.

20 ¹⁰ Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

To wit, Christ, the Angel of the covenant, as may be gathered both from the following words, because pardon of sin, which is God's prerogative, Mark ii. 7, is here ascribed to him, and God's name is in him, and by comparing other scriptures, as Exod. xxxii. 34; Acts vii. 38, 39; 1 Cor. x. 9. See Exod. xiii. 21; xiv. 19.

21 Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him.

He will not pardon your transgressions, i. e. he will severely punish you for them, by a common meiosis, as Exod. xx. 7. Understand, if you continue obstinate in your sins.

My name is in him, Heb. is in his inward parts, i. e. is intimately united to him, according to John xiv. 11, I am in the Father, and the Father in me. It not only signifies that he acts in his name, and by his power and authority, which even the apostles did, and other ministers of the gospel do, and therefore it is unreasonable to think no more is ascribed to this Angel; but that his Divine nature or essence is in him, whence he is called the Lord our Righteousness, Jer. xxiii. 6; and God, who will not give his glory to another, Isa. xlii. 8, hath given it to Christ, that all men should honour the Son even as they honour the Father, John v. 23, which never was nor can be said of any angel without blasphemy. Add to this, that the word name is oft put for the thing or being, whether it be human or Divine, as is manifest from Deut. xxviii. 58; Psal. xx. 1; cxv. 1; Isa. xxx. 27; Acts i. 15;

7 ch. 34. 23.
Deut. 16. 16.

8 ch. 12. 8.
& 34. 25.
Lev. 2. 11.
Deut. 16. 4.
1 Cor. feast.

a ch. 22. 29.
& 34. 26.
Lev. 23. 10.
17. Num. 18.
12, 13.
Deut. 26. 10.
Neh. 10. 35.

b ch. 34. 26.
Deut. 14. 21.

c ch. 14. 19.
& 32. 34. &
33. 2, 14.
Numb. 20. 16.
Josh. 6. 13.
& 6. 2. 1^a. 91.
11. Is. 63. 9.

d Num. 14.
11. Ps. 78. 40.
& 85. Eph. 4.
30. Heb. 3.
10, 16.
e ch. 32. 34.
Numb. 14. 35.
Deut. 16. 19.

Josh. 24. 19. Jer. 5. 7. Heb. 3. 11. 1 John 5. 16. 1 Is. 9. 6. Jer. 23. 6. John 10. 30, 38.

Rev. iii. 4; xi. 13. And so it must be here, because this name is not said to be given to him, as it would be, if it were properly taken; but to be in him, or in his inwards, which agrees well to the Divine nature or essence, but not to the mere name.

22 But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries. All that I speak; all that I have already commanded, and shall further prescribe by him unto Moses.

23 For mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I will cut them off.

24 Thou shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works: but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

Thou shalt not bow down nor serve them, i. e. give them neither outward worship with thy body, nor inward with thy mind, nor follow their example in the worship of idols. Thou shalt overthrow them, i. e. the people, lest thou be insnared by their counsel or example, and quite break down their images, or statues, or pillars, or any thing else erected in honour to their false gods. See Gen. xxviii. 18; xxxv. 20.

25 And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

Thy bread and thy water, i. e. thy meat and thy drink, that they shall be able to nourish thee, and give thee comfort, which without my blessing they will never be able to do.

26 There shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren, in thy land: the number of thy days I will fulfil.

Here was a double mercy. God gave them strength both to conceive, and to retain the conception till the natural and proper time of bringing forth came. The number of thy days I will fulfil; I will preserve thee so as thou shalt live as long as the course of nature and temper of thy body will permit, when evil men shall not live out half their days, Psal. lv. 23.

27 I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.

My fear, i. e. a great terror, or a terror wrought by me. See Exod. xxxiii. 2; Josh. xxiv. 12.

28 And I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee.

Hornets, properly so called, as may be gathered from Josh. xxiv. 12; Deut. vii. 20. Hornets are of themselves very troublesome and mischievous; but these it is very probable were like those Egyptian flies, Exod. viii. 21, of an extraordinary bigness and perniciousness. Nor is it strange that such creatures did drive many of these people from their habitations; for many heathen writers give us instances of some people driven from their seats by frogs, others by mice, others by bees and wasps; of which see Herodotus, Diodorus, Pliny, Ælian, Justin, &c.

He names these three people, either for all the rest, because they were the most potent about the time of Israel's first entrance into Canaan, and gave them most trouble; or because these three were more infested with hornets than the other nations, as being more numerous and dangerous.

29 I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee.

Desolate, void of inhabitants in a great measure, because thy present number is not sufficient to occupy and manage their whole land.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

Compare this place with Gen. xv. 18; Numb. xxxiv. 3. The sea of the Philistines, i. e. the Mediterranean or midland sea, upon whose coast the land of the Philistines lay. The desert, of Egypt or Arabia; whereof see Gen. xvi. 7; Exod. xv. 22. The river, to wit, Euphrates, as it is expressed Deut. i. 7; xi. 24, which is oft called the river by way of eminency. All within these bounds were given them by God, but upon conditions, which they manifestly broke, and therefore were for the most part confined to a much narrower compass.

32 Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

To worship them, as they made a covenant with Jehovah to worship him. The sense is, Thou shalt not engage thyself, either to the people or to their gods, but shalt root out both.

33 They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee.

For if thou serve; or, for thou wilt serve; this will be the fruit of thy cohabitation with them, thou wilt thereby be drawn to idolatry. It will surely, or, and assuredly this will, be a snare; an occasion of further sin and utter ruin.

CHAP. XXIV.

Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu are commanded to appear before the Lord, 1. Who was to come near the Lord, 2. Moses buildeth an altar and twelve pillars, 4. He sends young men to sacrifice unto the Lord, 5. He sprinkles the altar with the blood, 6. The covenant being read, the people promise obedience, 7. The people are sprinkled with blood, 8. Moses and the elders of Israel see the Lord, 9, 10. God promises to give to Moses tables of stone, 12. Moses and Joshua go up into the mount, 13. Aaron and Hur took care for the people in the mean time, 14. God's glory on the mount, 15, 16; appeareth like devouring fire, 17. Moses remains there forty days and forty nights, 18.

AND he said unto Moses, Come up unto the LORD, thou, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

After thou hast gone down and acquainted the people with my will, and received their answer, then come up again. This sense is gathered from the repetition of this command after that was done, ver. 12. Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu; Aaron and his two eldest sons, whom by this special honour and favour he prepared for that office to which they were to be called, chap. xxviii. Seventy of the elders of Israel; not the seventy governors which were chosen after this time, as appears from Numb. xi. 16, compared with ver. 24; but seventy persons selected by Moses out of those rulers chosen and mentioned Exod. xviii. 25; and possibly these were the chief heads of those several families which went with Jacob into Egypt, which were about seventy. See Gen. xli. 26, 27. Worship ye afar off. Though they may come up into the mount further than the people, yet do thou, and let them especially, keep their

g Gen. 12. 3.
Deut. 30. 7.
Jer. 30. 20.
|| Or, I will afflict them that afflict thee.

h ver. 20.
ch. 33. 2.
1 Josh. 24.
8, 11.

k ch. 20. 5.
1 Lev. 18. 3.
Deut. 12. 30.
31
12 ch. 34. 13.
Numb. 33. 52.
Deut. 7. 5.
25. & 12. 3.

n Deut. 5. 13.
& 10. 12, 20.
& 11. 13, 14.
& 13. 4.
Josh. 22. 5.
& 24. 14, 15.
21, 24.
1 Sam. 7. 3.
& 12. 20, 24. Matt. 4. 10.

q Deut. 7. 14.
& 28. 4.
Job 21. 10.
Mal. 3. 10, 11.
r Gen. 25. 8.
& 35. 29.
1 Chron. 23. 1.

s Gen. 35. 5.
ch. 15. 14, 16.
Deut. 2. 25.
& 11. 25.
Josh. 2. 9, 11.
1 Sam. 14. 15.
2 Chr. 14. 14.
t Deut. 7. 23.
+ Heb. neck. Pa. 18. 40.

u Deut. 7. 20.
Josh. 24. 12.
Wisd. 12. 8.

x Gen. 15. 18.
Numb. 34. 3.
Deut. 12. 24.
Josh. 1. 4.
1 Kin. 4. 21
24. Pa. 72. 8
y Josh. 21. 44
Judg. 1. 4
& 11. 21.

w Deut. 7. 22.

a ch. 28. 1.
Lev. 10. 1, 2.
b ch. 1. 6.
Numb. 11. 18.

distance; and what worship either thou or they shall offer to me, shall be performed afar off from the top of the mountain, whither thou only shalt be admitted, and that not to pray to me, but only to receive laws and oracles from me. See ver. 2.

c ver. 13, 15, 18. 2 And Moses ^calone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

Moses alone, i. e. without the persons now mentioned, though not without Joshua his minister, as some conceive from ver. 13, though even there Moses seems to ascend into the mount without Joshua. Neither shall the people go up with him to any part of the mount, as Aaron, and Nadab, &c. did, but they shall tarry at the bottom. See Exod. xix. 12.

3 ¶ And Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and all the judgments: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, ^dAll the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

Moses came down from the mount to the people, after he had received the laws from God. All the words which the LORD hath said will we do: this they so readily and rashly promise, because they were not sensible of their own weakness, and because they did not understand the comprehensiveness, and spirituality, and strictness of God's law, but thought it consisted only in the external performances and abstinences expressed.

e Deut. 31. 9. 4 And Moses ^ewrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve ^fpillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

Moses wrote, to wit, in a book, Heb. ix. 19. And the ten commandments God himself wrote also in tables of stone, Exod. xxxi. 18. Builded an altar; representing God in Christ, as one party in the covenant. Twelve pillars; representing the people of Israel, the other party. So here are the outward signs and symbols of a covenant made between God and the Israelites.

5 And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

It matters not whether they were the first-born, or others; it is sufficient that they were persons appointed and authorized for the present service, not without God's direction. Peace-offerings of oxen; one kind, as the principal is named for all; for there were offered also goats, as appears both from Heb. ix. 19, and from hence, that burnt-offerings were usually made of the goats, Lev. i. 10; Numb. vii. 28.

g Heb. 9. 18. 6 And Moses ^gtook half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.

Half of the blood of the beasts killed, which for convenience of sprinkling was mixed with a little water, Heb. ix. 19, whereby also Christ was most fitly represented, who came by water and blood, 1 John v. 6. Half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar, to signify, as well that God was appeased and atoned by this blood, as it represented the blood of Christ, as also that Christ was sanctified with his own blood, Heb. ix. 12.

h Heb. 9. 19. 7 And he ^htook the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, ⁱAll that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

The book of the covenant, wherein Moses had written the conditions of this covenant, to wit, the words and laws of God, above, ver. 4. In the audience of the people, i. e. in the hearing of a great number of them, or of some in the name of all the people, by whom it was read, or otherwise published to all the people successively.

8 And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold ^kthe blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

Moses took the blood; the other half of the blood, which was put in the basons for this end, ver. 6. On the people; either upon the twelve pillars representing the people; or upon the people's representatives, to wit, the elders mentioned ver. 1, as when the people are commanded to lay on their hands, the elders do it in their name and stead, Lev. iv. 15; Deut. xxi. 2; or upon those of the people which are nearest him, which was imputed to all the rest, and was to be taken by them as if it had reached unto them all. Now this sprinkling of the blood upon the people did signify, 1. Their ratification of the covenant on their parts, and their secret wishing of the effusion of their own blood if they did not keep it. 2. Their sprinkling of their consciences with the blood of Christ, and their obtaining redemption, justification, and access to God through it alone. See Heb. ix. 20, 22; xiii. 20. The blood of the covenant, whereby the covenant is made and confirmed, as was usual both in Scripture, Matt. xxvi. 28; Luke xxii. 20, and among heathens.

9 ¶ Then ¹went up Moses, and Aaron, ¹Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel:

In obedience to that command of God given ver. 1. 10 And they ^msaw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of a ⁿsapphire stone, and as it were the ^obody of heaven in his clearness.

They saw the God of Israel; not any visible resemblance of the Divine nature, which is expressly denied, Deut. iv. 15; 1 Tim. vi. 16, and was refused to Moses when he desired it, Exod. xxxiii. 18, 20, and therefore surely would never be granted to the elders of Israel; but some glorious appearance or token of God's special presence; or rather, the Second Person in the Trinity, who now showed himself to them in a human and glorious shape, as an essay and testimony of his future incarnation. This may seem probable, 1. Because here is mention of his feet. 2. Because this way of Christ's appearance was not unusual. See Gen. xviii., &c. 3. Because the person who delivered the law in Sinai was Christ, as appears from Acts vii. 38, though he be there called an angel, a name oft given to Christ, as hath been formerly showed. A sapphire stone is of a clear sky colour, mixed with golden spots like stars in the sky. In his clearness, or, for clearness. A clear sky in prophetic style signifying God's favour, as a cloudy sky notes his anger.

11 And upon the nobles of the children of Israel he ^plaid his right hand: also ^qthey saw God, and did ^reat and drink.

The nobles; or, separated or select ones, i. e. the persons who were singled out to go up with Moses, ver. 1, 9, the same of whom it is said here, and ver. 10, that they saw God. He laid not his hand, i. e. did not hurt or destroy them, as they might expect according to the vulgar opinion, Gen. xvi. 13; xxxii. 20, &c., and the conscience of their own guilt, as being now before their Lord and Judge. And so the phrase of putting or stretching forth the hand is most frequently used, as Gen. xxxvii. 22; 1 Sam. xxvi. 11, 23; Esth. ii. 21; Job i. 11, 12; Psal. cxxxviii. 7, &c. Did eat and drink; so far they were from being destroyed, that they were not affrighted at this glorious appearance of God, but were refreshed and comforted by it, and did joyfully eat and drink together in God's presence, celebrating the sacred feast made of the remnant of the peace-offerings, according to the manner. Thus God gave them a taste of his grace and mercy in this covenant, and an assurance that he would not deal with them according to the rigours of the law, but for the sake of the blood of Christ typically represented here, would graciously pardon and accept all those that sincerely, though imperfectly, obey him.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^sCome up to me into the mount, and be d ver. 7. ch. 19. 8. Deut. 5. 27. Gal. 3. 19, 20.

f Gen. 28. 18. & 31. 45.

g Heb. 9. 18.

h Heb. 9. 19.

i ver. 3.

k Heb. 9. 20. & 13. 20. Pet. 1. 2.

m See Gen. 32. 30. ch. 3. 6. Judg. 13. 22. 1a. 6. 1. 6. with ch. 33. 20, 23. John 1. 18. 1 Tim. 6. 16. 1 John 4. 12.

n Ezek. 1. 26. & 10. 1. Rev. 4. 3. o Matt. 17. 2.

p ch. 19. 21. q ver. 10. ch. 33. 20. Gen. 16. 13. & 32. 30.

r Deut. 4. 33.

s Judg. 13. 22. r Gen. 31. 54. ch. 18. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 18.

s ver. 2, 15.

t ch. 31. 19.
g. 32. 15, 16.
Deut. 5. 22.

there: and I will give thee 'tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

Be there, i. e. abide, as that verb is used 1 Tim. iv. 15, and elsewhere. Tables of stone; he chose that material, partly as very durable, yet so that it was capable of being broken, which God, foreseeing their wickedness, intended to do; and partly for signification, to note the hardness of their hearts, upon which no impression could be made, but by the finger of God. A law, and commandments, or, the law; and because that is ambiguous to the moral, and ceremonial, and judicial, he adds, even the commandment, or commandments, to wit, the ten commandments, so called by way of eminency, for these only were written by God upon the stony tables, as appears by Exod. xxxiv. 28; the rest were written by Moses in a book, above, ver. 4.

u ch. 32. 17.
& 33. 11.
w ver. 2.

13 And Moses rose up, and 'his minister Joshua: and Moses 'went up into the mount of God.

Joshua did not go up with Moses to the top of the mount, as is sufficiently implied both here and above, ver. 1, 2; but abode in some lower place, waiting for Moses's return, as appears from Exod. xxxii. 17. And there Joshua abode forty days, not fasting all the while, but having, as the rest had, manna for his meat, and for his drink, water out of the brook that descended out of the mount, as we read Deut. ix. 21.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

For us, i. e. for me and Joshua, and here, i. e. in the camp, where he was when he spake these words; for it was where not only Aaron and Hur, but the people might come, as it here follows, and therefore not upon the mount. Moses had made Aaron and Hur joint-commissioners, to determine hard causes which were brought to them from the elders, according to the order, Exod. xviii. 22. Some make Aaron the ecclesiastical head, and Hur the civil head; but Aaron was not authorized for ecclesiastical matters till chap. xxviii.

15 And Moses went up into the mount, and 'a cloud covered the mount.

x ch. 19. 9, 16.
Matt. 17. 5.
y ch. 16. 10.
Num. 14. 10.

16 And 'the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

The glory of the Lord, i. e. the tokens of his glorious presence in the fire, ver. 17; Deut. iv. 36. The cloud covered it from the eyes of the people. The seventh day; so long God made Moses wait, either to exercise his humility, devotion, and dependence upon God; or to prepare him by degrees for so great a work; or because this was the sabbath day, called therefore the seventh with an emphatical article; and God might choose that day for the beginning of that glorious work, to put the greater honour upon it, and oblige the people to a stricter observance of it. So it was upon a Lord's day that St. John had his revelation delivered to him, Rev. i. 10.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like 'devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel.

x ch. 3. 2.
& 19. 18.
Deut. 4. 36.
Heb. 12. 18, 29.

He saith like it, for it was not devouring fire, as appears by Moses's long abode in it. Note here, whatsoever the elders of Israel saw before, the people saw no similitude of God, as Moses observes, Deut. iv. 15.

18 And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and 'Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

a ch. 34. 28.
Deut. 9. 9.

Into the midst of the cloud, the God that called him enabling him to enter and abide there; whereas, when he was left to himself, he could not enter into the tabernacle, Exod. xl. 35. Forty days and forty nights; in which he did neither eat nor drink, Exod. xxxiv. 28; Deut. ix. 9, 18; whereby it seems most probable the six days mentioned ver. 16 were a part of these forty days, because Moses being in perpetual expectation of God's call, seems not to have had leisure for eating and drinking, nor provision neither. Besides, he is not said to be in the midst of the cloud so long, but only in the mount, where he was those six days, ver. 15, 16.

CHAP. XXV.

Moses is commanded to take a free-will offering to set up the tabernacle, and of what, 1—7. God commands him to make a sanctuary, 8; chargeth him how and whereof to make a tabernacle, 9. The form of the ark, 10—16. The mercy-seat, 17—22. The table for the shew-bread, with other utensils, 23—30. Of the candlestick, with its employment, and other furnitures for the tabernacle, 31—39. Moses is commanded to make it answerable to the pattern which he saw in the mount, 40.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

Having delivered the moral and judicial laws, he now comes to the ceremonial law, wherein he sets down all things very minutely and particularly, whereas in the other laws he was content to lay down general rules, and leaveth many other things to be by analogy deduced from them. The reason of the difference seems to be this, that the light of reason implanted in all men, gives him greater help in the discovery of moral and judicial things than in ceremonial matters, or in the external way and manner of God's worship; which is a thing depending wholly upon God's institution, and not left to man's invention, which is a very incompetent judge of those things, as appears from hence, because the wittiest men, destitute of God's revelation, have been guilty of most foolery in their devices of God's worship.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that they †bring me an ‖offering: *of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering.

+ Heb. take for me.
‡ Or, heave offering.
* ch. 35. 5, 21.
1 Chro. 29. 3, 5, 9, 14.
Ezra 2. 68. & 3. 5. & 7. 16.
Neh. 11. 2.
2 Cor. 8. 12. & 9. 7.
‡ Or, silk.
Gen. 41. 42.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass,

4 And blue, and purple, and scarlet, and ‖fine linen, and goats' hair,

Blue, or sky-coloured; but here you must not understand the mere colours, which could not be offered, but some materials proper for the work, and of the colours here mentioned, to wit, wool, or threads, or some such-like things, as appears from Heb. ix. 19, and from the testimony of the Jews. Fine linen, which was of great esteem in ancient times, and used by priests and great officers of state. See Gen. xli. 42; Rev. xix. 8, 14. Goats' hair; Heb. goats. But that their hair is understood, is apparent from the nature of the thing, and from the use of the word in that sense in other places.

5 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood,

A kind of wood growing in Egypt and the deserts of Arabia, very durable and precious. See Exod. xxxv. 24; Numb. xxxiii. 49; Isa. xli. 19; Joel iii. 18.

6 Oil for the light, *spices for anointing oil, and for †sweet incense,

b ch. 27. 20.
c ch. 30. 23.
d ch. 30. 34.

Oil for the light; for the lamps or candlesticks, ver. 37. Anointing oil, wherewith the priests, and the tabernacle, and the utensils thereof, were to be anointed. Sweet incense; Heb. incense of spices, or sweet odours; so called to distinguish it from the incense of the fat of sacrifices, which was burnt upon the altar.

7 Onyx stones, and stones to be set in the *ephod, and in the †breastplate.

e ch. 28. 4, 6.
f ch. 28. 16.

Onyx stones, or, sardonyx stones. Note, that the signification of the Hebrew names of the several stones are not agreed upon by the Jews at this day, and much more may we safely be ignorant of them, the religious use of them being now abolished. Stones to be set in the ephod; stones of fulness, or filling, or perfecting stones; so called either because they did perfect and adorn the ephod, or because they filled up the ouches, or the hollow places, which were left vacant for this purpose. What the ephod and breast-plate were, see Exod. xxviii.

8 And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them.

A place of public and solemn worship, that I may dwell among them; not by my essence, which is every where, but by my grace and glorious operations.

9 According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

10 And they shall make an ark of shittim wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

An ark, or little chest, or coffer, for the uses after mentioned. Two cubits and a half; understand it of the common cubit, which is generally conceived to contain a foot and a half of our measure. See Gen. vi. 15.

11 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, within and without shalt thou overlay it, and shalt make upon it a crown of gold round about.

Or, a border, raised up above the rest of the ark, as a crown is above that which it is applied to, only a crown is round, and this was square. This was both for ornament, and for the fastening of the covering of the ark to it.

12 And thou shalt cast four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four corners thereof; and two rings shall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it.

In the four corners; in the middle of each corner, for convenience of carriage. See 1 Kings vii. 30.

13 And thou shalt make staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold.

14 And thou shalt put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be borne with them.

15 The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.

16 And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee.

To wit, the two tables of stone, wherein the decalogue was written, called the testimony here, and Exod. xxx. 6; Lev. xvi. 13; and more fully the tables of the testimony, Exod. xxxi. 18; Numb. i. 50; because they were witnesses of that covenant made between God and his people, whence they are called the tables of the covenant, Deut. ix. 9, and the ark, the ark of the covenant, Numb. x. 33. This being as a public record both of God's mercy promised to them, and of the duty and conditions required of them. See Exod. xvi. 34.

17 And thou shalt make a mercy seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

Mercy-seat, or, propitiatory; which seems from the sameness of dimensions to be nothing else but the covering of the ark, upon which God is said to sit, whence the ark is called God's footstool. This covering is a manifest type of Christ, who is therefore called the propitiation, or propitiatory, Rom. iii. 25; 1 John ii. 2; iv. 10, because he interposeth himself between God our Judge, and the law, by which we all stand condemned and accursed, Gal. iii. 10, 13; that God may not deal rigorously with us according to that law, but mercifully for his sake who hath fulfilled the law, and therefore boldly presents himself to his Father on our behalf.

18 And thou shalt make two cherubims of gold, of beaten work shalt thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy seat.

Figures of human shape, in which alone the angels used to appear; but they had wings, to signify their expedition in God's work and messages. And between these angels God is said to sit and dwell. So this place was a representation of heaven, where God sitteth and dwelleth among the cherubims and other glorious angels. Of beaten work; not made of several parcels joined together, as images commonly are, nor yet melted and cast in a frame or mould, but beaten by the hammer out of one continued piece of gold, possibly to note the exact unity or indivisibility and the simplicity of the evangelical nature.

19 And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end: even || of the mercy seat shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

i. e. Of one and the same piece of massy gold, out of which the cherubims were made.

20 And the cherubims shall stretch forth their wings on high, covering the mercy seat with their wings, and their faces shall look one to another; toward the mercy seat shall the faces of the cherubims be.

Towards God, who is supposed to sit there, whose face the angels in heaven always behold, and upon whom their eyes are fixed to observe and receive his commands; and towards Christ, the true propitiatory, which mystery they desire to look into, 1 Pet. i. 12; not envying mankind their near and happy relation to him, but taking pleasure in the contemplation of it.

21 And thou shalt put the mercy seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee.

Or, after thou shalt have put in the ark; for the ark was not to be opened after the covering was put upon it. The Hebrew particle vau oft signifies after that, as Jer. xliiii. 13; li. 60.

22 And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

There I will meet with thee; there I will be in a special and gracious manner present with thee. From between the cherubims, which spreading forth their wings formed a kind of seat, which the Divine Majesty was pleased to possess.

23 Thou shalt also make a table of shittim wood: two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of gold round about.

A square border at the top of it, as ver. 11; partly for ornament, and principally to keep what was put upon it from falling off.

25 And thou shalt make unto it a border of an hand breadth round about, and thou shalt make a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

A border, which encompassed and kept together the feet of the table, and seems to have been towards the bottom of it. A golden crown; not the same mentioned before, ver. 24, but another for further ornament to the table.

26 And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

g ch. 36. 1, 3.
4. Lev. 4. 6.
& 10. 4. &
21. 12.

k ch. 37. 1.
Deut. 10. 3.
Heb. 9. 4.

11 Kin. 8. 8.
m ch. 16. 34.
& 31. 18.
Deut. 10. 2.
5. & 31. 26.
1 Kings 8. 9.
2 Kin. 11. 12.
Heb. 9. 4.

n ch. 37. 6.
Rom. 3. 25.
Heb. 9. 5.

|| Or, of the matter of the mercy seat.

o 1 Kin. 8. 7.
1 Chr. 28. 18.
Heb. 9. 5.

p ch. 26. 34.
q ver. 18.

r ch. 29. 42.
43. & 30. 6, 24.
Lev. 16. 2.
Num. 17. 4.
s Num. 7. 89.
1 Sam. 4. 4.
2 Sam. 6. 2.
2 Kings 19.
15. Ps. 80. 1.
& 90. 1.
Is. 37. 16.

t ch. 37. 10.
1 Kin. 7. 45.
2 Chro. 4. 8.
Heb. 9. 2.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be for places of the staves to bear the table.

As much below the top as the border was above the bottom of the feet of the table, which was a convenient place for the carriage. Others, near the border, in that part of the feet which is next to it.

28 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them.

29 And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, to cover withal: of pure gold shalt thou make them.

The dishes, in which the bread and frankincense upon it were put, Lev. xxiv. 7. Of this sort there were twelve, one for every loaf. Spoons, in which incense was put, as appears from Numb. vii. 14, and by which incense was either put into the dishes or taken out of them, as occasion required. Covers; so the Hebrew word is used, Exod. xxxvii. 16; Numb. iv. 7. Herewith either the bread, or incense, or both, were covered. Bowls, to cover the same things. So this and the former were two several sorts of covers, the one deeper than the other, one to cover the bread, another the incense. Or, bowls thereof, to pour out withal, to wit, liquid things, as wine and oil, when they were offered. See Gen. xxxv. 14. Or these last words may relate not only to the bowls, but the other things, here mentioned, and may be thus rendered, wherewith it, to wit, the table, shall be covered, as indeed it was in a manner quite covered with these vessels.

30 And thou shalt set upon the table shewbread before me alway.

Heb. Bread of faces, or of the presence, so called, because it was constantly placed in God's presence. This bread was divided into twelve loaves, one for every tribe; and they were in their name presented to God in the nature of an offering, as the frankincense shows, as a public acknowledgment that they received all their bread or food, both corporal and spiritual, from God's hand, and were to use it as in God's presence 31 ¶ And thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold: of beaten work shall the candlestick be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same.

Thou shalt make, either by thyself, or by some other person whom thou shalt cause to make it. His shaft; the trunk, or main body of it. His knops, or, apples, made in form of a pomegranate. His flowers shall be of the same, to wit, beaten out of the same piece by the hammer. Compare ver. 36.

32 And six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side:

In every one of which was a lamp, and there was a seventh lamp in the chief stem of it, as appears from ver. 37. And all these together represent the seven Spirits of God, Rev. i. 4; iv. 5; v. 6; or the Spirit of God, the great Enlightener of the church, with his sevenfold or various gifts and operations.

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower in one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers.

In the candlestick, i. e. in the shaft or trunk of the candlestick, which is here distinguished from its branches, shall be four bowls, whereas there were but three in each of the branches.

35 And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

And, to complete the number of four, mentioned in the foregoing verse, we must understand that there was another knop and bowl and flower in the upper part of the shaft, above all the branches, as the rules of proportion, and common use in making such things, will easily evince.

36 Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one beaten work of pure gold.

37 And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof: and they shall light the lamps thereof, that they may give light over against it.

They shall light the lamps, whom I shall appoint for that work. Over against it, i. e. either, 1. The table of shewbread. Or rather, 2. The candlestick, as it is expressed, Numb. viii. 2, where by the candlestick you are to understand, as here, ver. 33, 34, the stem or main body of it; and the sense is, that the lamps shall be so placed, that they and their light may look towards that stem; unless you will suppose that the seven lamps were distinct and separated from the candlestick, and fastened to the sides of the tabernacle in several places, and all giving light to or over-against the great candlestick, which was in the midst, as the candlestick did over-against them, which is also now usual among us.

38 And the tongs thereof, and the snuffdishes thereof, shall be of pure gold.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

A talent contains three thousand shekels, Exod. xxxviii. 25, or one hundred and twenty-five pounds.

40 And look that thou make them after their pattern, which was shewed thee in the mount.

CHAP. XXVI.

Moses is commanded to make the tabernacle with ten curtains, 1. The length and breadth of the curtains, 2. The form of the curtains, 3—6. He is commanded to make eleven curtains of goats' hair, 7. The manner of the making and placing them, 8—14. Of what the tabernacle is to be made, 15. The manner of its making, with other utensils, 16—30. Of the veil, and what it is to be made of, 31. The fashion of it, 32, 33. The hanging for the tent-door, 36.

MOREOVER thou shalt make the tabernacle with ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims of cunning work shalt thou make them.

The tabernacle, or tent; a little house wherein the ark, table, and candlestick were to be placed. And scarlet, i. e. with materials of these colours, to wit, wool, as may be gathered from hence, that it is opposed to linen. Compare Exod. xxv. 4. Of cunning work, either woven, or rather wrought with needle, wherein is most skill and curiosity.

2 The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The five curtains shall be coupled together one to another; and other five curtains shall be coupled one to another.

4 And thou shalt make loops of blue upon the edge of the one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling; and likewise shalt thou make in the

x ch. 37. 17.
1 Kin. 7. 49.
Zech. 4. 2.
Heb. 9. 2.
Rev. 1. 12.
2. 4. 5.

¶ Heb. which thou wast caused to see.

y ch. 27. 21.
2. 30. 5.
Lev. 24. 3. 4.
2 Chr. 13. 11.
¶ Or, cause to ascend.
2 Num. 9. 2.
¶ Heb. the face of it.

a ch. 26. 30.
Num. 8. 4.
1 Chron. 23. 11, 19.
Acta 7. 44.
Heb. 8. 5.

a ch. 36. 8.
+ Heb. the work of a cunning workman, or, embroiderer.

uttermost edge of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

Loops together with the taches were for the joining the curtains together, as appears from ver. 11, which way of conjunction was most convenient for the often taking them down and setting them up. From the selvage, or from, or in the extremity, or end, or edge, Heb. lip. In the coupling, i. e. in the place where the two curtains are coupled together. And likewise the second curtain is to be made exactly like the first.

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second; that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

The taches, or hooks or buttons, which were put into the loops to unite and fasten the curtains.

b ch. 36. 14. 7 ¶ And ^bthou shalt make curtains of goats' hair to be a covering upon the tabernacle: eleven curtains shalt thou make.

Of goats' hair, spun, Exod. xxxv. 26, and woven into a stuff, like our camel. To be a covering; to be put next above the curtains.

8 The length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle.

For the better security of the inward covering.

10 And thou shalt make fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the || tent together, that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the backside of the tabernacle.

13 And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side † of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it.

c ch. 36. 19. 14 And ^cthou shalt make a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.

To preserve the rest from the injury of the weather.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make boards for the tabernacle of shittim wood standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

† Heb. bands. 17 Two † tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

Two tenons, Heb. hands, i. e. parts of the boards, so cut and framed that like hands they may take hold of and be fastened into the sockets, ver. 19.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side southward.

19 And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

Forty sockets, or bases, or pedestals, or feet, upon which the boards stood, and to which they were fastened.

20 And for the second side of the tabernacle on the north side there shall be twenty boards:

21 And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

Which were of another fashion than the former, as may be gathered both from the distinct nomination and use of them, and from the laws of building. And whereas the rest were but single boards, these were double, for greater strength and conveniency of joining them together.

24 And they shall be † coupled together beneath, and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners.

Coupled together, Heb. as twins, i. e. equal and equally joined together, and exactly answering one to the other. Unto one ring, which ring was exactly in the corner, and with the help of the bars kept the corner boards, and with them the other boards of the tabernacle, close together. But you must note, that here were two rings in each corner, the one in the upper, the other in the lower parts.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

26 ¶ And thou shalt make bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle,

By bars you may understand either, 1. Several rows or orders of bars, one bar beginning at the end of the other, and each containing four cubits in length, and altogether twenty cubits, which was the length of the tabernacle; or, 2. Single bars, which seem truer, 1. Because the word signifies bars, not rows of bars; and why should we go from the proper signification of the word without cause? 2. If bars be put for rows of bars, there must be five rows of bars on a side, there being so many bars said to be on a side. But the abettors of that opinion allow only four rows of bars on a side; and it is apparent the middle bar, which is one of the five, is but one single bar, ver. 28, and therefore it may be presumed the rest were so too. 3. The name of the middle bar implies, that of the other four bars, two were above it, and two below it. Object. But if they were each single bars, reaching the whole length of the building, why is it said peculiarly of the middle bar, that it should reach from end to end, or from extremity to extremity? ver. 28. Answ. This may be peculiarly said of this, either because the other four might want something of the just length of the building, or because the middle bar might stand out beyond the two ends of it, for conveniency of the carriage of the building.

27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward.

There was but one side westward. Either therefore here is a transposition of the Hebrew words, which is usual, and the words are thus to be placed and rendered, westward, looking to both sides, or, westward, according to both the other sides, now mentioned, to note that the number and length of bars in the west end should be equal to those on either of the other sides; or here is an enallage of the number, the dual or plural for the singular, of which there are many examples, and so the words are to be rendered, for the side looking westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end.

In the midst of the boards; not within the thickness of the boards, as the Jews conceive, but in the length of them; as appears, 1. Because this bar, as well as the rest, was gilded, ver. 29, which was frivolous if it were never seen. 2. Because all the bars had rings made to receive and hold them up, ver. 29.

29 And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

Either by visible representation to his eye, or rather by mental vision or impression of it upon his imagination.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make a veil of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made:

Thou shalt make a veil, which was thick and strong that none could see through it, called the second veil, Heb. ix. 3, whereby the holy of holies, which represented the highest heaven, was divided from the holy place, where the church militant, or its representatives, met and served God, ver. 33. For the signification of this veil, see Luke xxiii. 45; Heb. ix. 8, 24; x. 19, 20.

32 And thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of shittim wood overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold, upon the four sockets of silver.

The hooks were fastened to the tops of the pillars, as the veil was fastened to them.

33 ¶ And thou shalt hang up the veil under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the veil the ark of the testimony: and the veil shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy.

Under the taches, or, in the place (as the Hebrew tacheth oft signifies) of the taches, to wit, where the two curtains are joined together by taches, ver. 6.

34 And thou shalt put the mercy seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set the table without the veil, and the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side.

36 And thou shalt make an hanging for the door of the tent, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework

For the door of the tent, i. e. of the holy place, where it was divided from the court of the people.

37 And thou shalt make for the hanging five pillars of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

CHAP. XXVII.

Of the brazen altar, 1—8. Of the court of the tabernacle, 9—17; the length of it, 18. Of the lamps burning always, 20.

AND thou shalt make an altar of shittim wood, five cubits long, and five cubits broad; the altar shall be foursquare: and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

This was not that for incense, but another for sacrifices.

2 And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof: his horns shall be of the same: and thou shalt overlay it with brass.

The horns were elevated above the body of the altar, in form either of pyramids or spires, or rather of horns, as the word signifies; nor is there any necessity of departing from the proper signification. These were not only for ornament, but for use also, either to keep things put upon it from falling, or that beasts to be offered might be bound to them. See Psal. cxviii. 27. His horns shall be of the same, of the same piece with the altar, for its use required strength. With brass; with plates of brass of competent thickness, both above the wood and under it, that the fire might not take hold of the wood.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his shovels, and his basons, and his fleshhooks, and his firepans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.

Basons, to receive the blood of the sacrifices, which they were to sprinkle. Flesh-hooks, wherewith they took flesh out of the pot in which it was seethed, as 1 Sam. ii. 14. But this seems not proper here, because the flesh was never boiled upon the altar, but in other places appointed for that use. And the Hebrew word is general, and may signify either tongs or fire-forks. Firepans, in which they carried live coals from this altar to that of incense, as occasion required.

4 And thou shalt make for it a grate of network of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brazen rings in the four corners thereof.

A grate of net-work, which was competently strong and thick, this being as it were the hearth of the altar, upon which they laid both the wood and the sacrifices, and it was full of holes, through which the blood and ashes might fall down into the place appointed for them. Upon the net, or rather at, or beside, or under the net, for so the rings were placed, as their use shows, and the Hebrew preposition al is oft so used. Four brazen rings, which were either, 1. Peculiar to the grate, which by these was carried apart from the altar, having the perpetual fire kept in it; for had it been carried with the altar, the cloth wherewith the altar was covered, Numb. iv. 13, would have been endangered by the fire. Or, 2. Common to the altar, to which these were fixed on the outside, as on the inside to the grate, that by them the grate might be both kept even and upright, and also carried together with the altar, and that with such caution that the fire included might not hurt the covering-cloth, which was not difficult to do.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

Under the compass, i. e. within the square and hollow space of the altar. That the net may be even to the midst of the altar, or, and the net shall be at (the Hebrew ad being here used for el, as Hos. xiv. 2; Joel ii. 12; Amos iv. 6, 8) the midst of the altar. And these words seem added to explain the word beneath, to show that as it was not to be at the top, so neither at the bottom of the altar, but in the midst of it.

6 And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with brass.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to bear it.

The staves shall be put into the rings, which seem to be the same both to the altar and the grate, though some allege that place for the contrary.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: as it was shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

e ch. 38. 1.
Ezek. 43. 13.

AND thou shalt make an altar of shittim wood, five cubits long, and five cubits

c ch. 25. 40.
& 26. 30.
+ Heb. be shewd.

i. e. Not one entire piece of wood, but consisting of four several sides, hollow within, for easiness and conveniency of carriage in their wilderness state.

9 ¶ And ^{d ch. 38. 9.} thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen of an hundred cubits long for one side:

A court encompassing the tabernacle, Exod. xl. 33, in the midst whereof the altar of sacrifices was placed, upon which the offerings were burnt in the open air, which was most convenient. By the hangings the court was distinguished and enclosed.

10 And the twenty pillars thereof and their twenty sockets shall be of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.

On the twenty pillars the hangings were fastened by the hooks here mentioned. Their twenty sockets, or, bases, upon which the pillars stood. Their fillets, or, hoops, which encompassed the pillars at the top, being placed there, as it seems, for ornament only.

11 And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars and their twenty sockets of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 ¶ And for the breadth of the court on the west side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten.

13 And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

These fifteen cubits, with the fifteen cubits ver. 15, and the twenty cubits ver. 16, make up the fifty cubits mentioned ver. 13.

15 And on the other side shall be hangings fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 ¶ And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

17 All the pillars round about the court shall be filleted with silver; their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of brass.

Their hooks shall be of silver, all silver, not only covered with silver, as some unduly infer from Exod. xxxviii. 17.

18 ¶ The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth † fifty every where, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen, and their sockets of brass.

19 All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass.

With the pins the tabernacle and curtains thereof were fastened to the ground, as tents usually are with wooden pins.

20 ¶ And ^{e Lev. 24. 2.} thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp † to burn always.

Beaten out of the olives with a pestle, which is freer from dregs than that which is squeezed out with a press. To burn always, i. e. at all the times appointed; daily, though not continually; as the lamb offered only every morning and every evening is called a continual burnt-offering, Exod. xxix. 42. For that these were lighted only at the evening, may seem probable from the next verse, and from Exod. xxvii. 21; xxx. 8; Lev. xxiv. 3; 1 Sam. iii. 3; 2 Chron. xiii. 11. But because Josephus and Philo, who were eye-witnesses of the temple service, and had no temptation to lie in this matter, expressly affirm, that some lights did burn in the day-time; and it may seem indecent and improbable that God should dwell and the priests minister in darkness, and there were no windows to give light to the tabernacle by day; it may be granted that some few burnt in the day, and all in the night, and that the latter is only mentioned in the places alleged, as being a more solemn time when all are lighted.

21 In the tabernacle of the congregation ^{f ch. 26. 31, 33. g ch. 30. 6. 1 Sam. 3. 3. 2 Chr. 13. 11. h ch. 29. 43. & 29. 9. 28. Lev. 3. 17. & 16. 34. & 24. 9. Num. 18. 23. & 19. 21. 1 Sam. 30. 25.} without the veil, which is before the testimony, ^g Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning before the LORD: ^h it shall be a statute for ever unto their generations on the behalf of the children of Israel.

The tabernacle of the congregation was so called, because there the people used to meet not only one with another, but with God also. See Exod. xxv. 22; Numb. xvii. 4. Others render it, in the tabernacle of witness, because there God declared his mind and will, and man's duty. Without the veil, to wit, the second veil, in the holy place. Before the testimony; a short speech for before the ark of the testimony, as it is elsewhere more largely called: compare Exod. xxv. 16. Shall order it, to wit, the lamp, or the lights, taking care that there be a constant supply of them, and that they burn well.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Aaron and his sons ordained for the priest's office, 1. His holy garments, 2—5. The ephod, 6. Curious girdle, 8. The two onyx stones on which the names of the children of Israel were engraven, 9—14. Of the breastplate, whereon was the same, 15—22; with two golden rings, 23—29. The Urim and Thummim, 30. The golden plate which had on it, Holiness to the Lord, 36. The coats of Aaron's sons, their girdles, caps, and their linen drawers, 40, which they put on when they served in the holy place, 43.

AND take thou unto thee ^{a Num. 18. 7. Eccius. 45. 6. Heb. 5. 1, 4.} Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.

Take thou unto thee; cause them to come near unto thee, that thou mayst before them and before the people, declare the will of God herein, and solemnly set them apart for his office.

2 And ^{b ch. 29. 5. 29. & 31. 10. & 39. 1, 2. Lev. 8. 7, 30. Num. 30. 26. 28. Eccius. 45. 7, 8.} thou shalt make holy garments for Aaron thy brother for glory and for beauty.

Garments to be used only in holy ministrations, for glory and for beauty, i. e. such as are glorious and beautiful; partly to mind the people of the dignity and excellency of their office and employment; and principally to represent the glorious robes wherewith Christ is both clothed himself, and clothed all his people, who are made priests unto God.

3 And ^{c ch. 31. 6. & 36. 1. d ch. 31. 3. & 35. 30, 31.} thou shalt speak unto all that are wise hearted, ^d whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

All that are wise-hearted, i. e. skilful artists. The Hebrews make the heart, not the brain, the seat of wisdom. See Job ix. 4. Whom I have filled; either, 1. By my ordinary providence and assistance, giving them both ability and opportunity to learn the arts; or rather, 2. By extraordinary inspiration, which was necessary for the Israelites, whose base and laborious drudgery took off their minds and hands from all ingenious studies and arts. To consecrate him, i. e. to be an outward sign of my calling and consecration of him to my holy service. A metonymical expression.

c ver. 15.
f ver. 6.
g ver. 31.
h ver. 39.

4 And these are the garments which they shall make; ^a a breastplate, and ^b an ephod, and ^c a robe, and ^d a broidered coat, a mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

An ephod was a short upper garment, made without sleeves, which was girt about the body. And it was two-fold; the one made of fine linen, which was common not only to all the priests, as 1 Sam. ii. 18; xxii. 18; but to some others also upon solemn and sacred occasions, as 2 Sam. vi. 14: the other made of divers stuffs and colours, peculiar to the high priest; the parts whereof were not sewed, but tied together. A robe; an upper garment like a surplice. A broidered coat; an under coat curiously wrought with circular works like eyes, as the word notes, and richly adorned with gems and other things. A mitre; a kind of bonnet or cap for the covering of the head, supposed to be something like a Turkish turban for the form of it. A girdle, to enclose and fasten all the other garments, which were loose in themselves, that he might be more expeditious in his work.

5 And they shall take gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

i ch. 39. 2.

6 ¶ And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined linen, with cunning work.

Of gold, beaten out into plates, and cut into wires.

7 It shall have the two shoulderpieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

The two shoulder-pieces were two parts of the ephod going up from the body of the ephod, the one before, the other behind, which when the priest had put over his head, were tied together, and covered the priest's shoulders, and part of his back and breast.

¶ Or, embroidered.

8 And the ¶ curious girdle of the ephod, which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

The girdle of the ephod was for the closer fastening and girding of it. Which is upon it: this is added to distinguish it from the other girdle, ver. 4, which was to gird all the garments, and was tied in a lower place. Of the same; either, 1. Of the same piece; or rather, 2. Of the same kind of materials and workmanship, as the following words explain it.

9 And thou shalt take two onyx stones, and grave on them the names of the children of Israel:

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, according to their birth.

Levi seems to be omitted here, as being sufficiently represented by the high priest himself.

h Wisd. 18. 24.

11 ¶ With the work of an engraver in stone, like the engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ouches of gold.

Hollow places, such as are made in golden rings to receive and hold the precious stones which are put in them.

12 And thou shalt put the two stones upon the shoulders of the ephod for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel: and Aaron shall bear their names i ver. 29. ch. 39. 7.

before the LORD upon his two shoulders ^{in See Josh. 4. 7. Zech. 6. 14.} for a memorial.

Upon the shoulders of the ephod, i. e. in the place where the two shoulder-pieces were joined together. Before the Lord; into the holy of holies: an evident type of Christ's entering into heaven with the names and in the stead of his people, the true Israel, upon his shoulders, and presenting them to his Father with acceptance. For a memorial; not so much to the high priest, that he should not forget to pray for them, as to God, that he, beholding their names there, according to his order, might graciously remember them, and show mercy unto them. Such a memorial to God was the rainbow, Gen. ix. 13. Such things are spoken of God after the manner of men.

13 ¶ And thou shalt make ouches of gold;

Not for the stones, ver. 12, which had other ouches, ver. 11, but for the chains, ver. 14.

14 And two chains of pure gold at the ends; of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

At the ends, or, with ends; i. e. not like chains that are fastened about one's neck or arm, which seem to have no end; but two distinct chains, with two several ends, both hanging downward: compare ver. 22. The Syriac render it double, others equal, or of equal length.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make the breast-plate of judgment with cunning work; after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen, shalt thou make it.

This was a square and curiously wrought piece put over the ephod upon one's breast, called of judgment, because from thence the Israelites were to expect and receive their judgment, and the mind of God in all those weighty matters of war or peace wherein they consulted God for direction.

16 Foursquare it shall be being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

It was doubled for greater strength, that it might better support and secure the precious stones which were put into it, and that it might receive the Urim and Thummim, Lev. viii. 8.

17 ° And thou shalt set in it settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be a sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

It is needless to trouble the reader with the explication of these stones, which the Jewish doctors themselves are not agreed in, seeing this use of them is now abolished. It may suffice to know that they were precious stones severally allotted to the names of the several tribes, according to God's good pleasure, possibly with respect to some disposition or concernment of each tribe, which at this distance we cannot learn.

18 And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

19 And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their ¶ inclosings.

21 And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be according to the twelve tribes.

i. e. According to the order of their birth, the first stone to the eldest, the second to the next, &c.

22 ¶ And thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

Some think these are the same with those mentioned ver. 14. But it seems improbable and without example that God should in this short description, and that within a few verses, give a new and second command concerning the same thing. It may rather seem that these are other chains fastened to the breastplate, as it follows, whereas those chains, ver. 14, seem to have been fastened to the ephod, to those ouches made in it for that purpose, ver. 13. And whereas these chains also are fastened in the said ouches, ver. 25, two several chains may well enough be fastened in divers parts of each of the ouches; and there seems to be this difference between the chains, those chains mentioned ver. 14 are said to be fastened only at one end, even to the ouches of the ephod, whence they might hang down loosely, whereas these are manifestly fastened at both ends, ver. 24, 25.

† Heb. Allinge.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod before it.

i. e. In the forepart of the ephod; or before him, i. e. the high priest, in his forepart, upon his breast.

26 ¶ And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

Upon the two ends, to wit, upon the lower ends, for there were other rings put upon the upper ends, ver. 23—25. In the side of the ephod inward, i. e. in the inner side of the ephod, under which these rings were hid; for the ephod was double, ver. 16.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

Two other rings, to answer the two rings in the breastplate, that by all these the breastplate might be the better fastened to the ephod. On the two sides of the ephod underneath; in the lower part of the ephod, or in that part of it which is under the lowest part of the breastplate. Toward the forepart thereof; towards the breast. Over against the other coupling thereof, i. e. over against the ouches on the shoulder-pieces, where the upper part of the breastplate was fastened to the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually.

Partly to admonish the high priest of that dear affection he should have to his people, and with what ardcy he should pray for them, and principally to represent the tender compassions of Christ, the great High Priest, towards his people, and how mindful he is of them, and of all their concerns, even when he is in the holy of holies, that is, in heaven, where he remembers them still, and incessantly intercedes for them. Unto the holy place, i. e. into the most holy place; the positive degree being put for the superlative.

30 ¶ And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

The words Urim and Thummim confessedly signify light, or illuminations and perfections, which may be understood either of two differing things, the one noting the knowledge, the other the perfection, to wit, of virtues and graces, which were required in the high priest, and which were in Christ in an eminent degree, and from him alone communicated to his people; or of one and the same thing, noting perfect light or illumination, by a figure called hendyadis, oft used in Scripture, as Deut. xvi. 18; Matt. iv. 16, compared with Job x. 21; John iii. 5; Acts xvii. 25, compared with Gen. ii. 7. Which may seem probable, 1. Because the great use of this instrument was to give light and direction in dubious and difficult cases, and not to confer any other perfection upon any person. 2. Because sometimes both these words and things are expressed only by one of them, and that is by Urim, Numb. xxvii. 21; 1 Sam. xxviii. 6, which signifies lights. And the name seems to be given from the effect, because hence the Israelites had clear light, and perfect or certain direction in dark and doubtful matters. But the great question is, what this Urim and Thummim was, and in what manner God answered by it; which God having on purpose concealed from us, and not set down the matter or form of it, as he hath done of all the other particulars, it may seem curiosity and presumption for men solicitously to inquire, and positively to determine. Many conceive it was nothing else but the twelve precious stones, wherein the names of the twelve tribes were engraven, and that the answer of God was composed out of those letters which either show more brightly, or thrust themselves further outward, than the rest did; which seems a frivolous and ungrounded conjecture, both because all the letters of the alphabet were not there, and so all answers could not be given by them; and because it was shut up within the duplicature of the breastplate, and therefore could not be seen by the high priest; and there is not a word to signify that he was to take it out thence, and look upon it, but rather the contrary is evident. And that this Urim and Thummim are not the same thing with those twelve stones may be easily proved: 1. Because the stones were set and engraven in the breastplate, ver. 17, 21, this was only put into it, which is a word of quite different and more loose and large signification, and therefore probably doth not design the same thing. 2. It is not likely that in such a brief account of the sacred utensils the same command would be repeated again, especially in more dark and general words than it was mentioned before. And how could Moses now put it in, when the workmen had fastened it there before? or why should he be required to put it in the breastplate, when it was fastened to it already, and could not without violence be taken from it? 3. Because the stones were put in by the workmen, Exod. xxxix. 10, the Urim and Thummim by Moses himself, Lev. viii. 8. It is objected, that where the stones are mentioned there is no mention of Urim and Thummim, as Exod. xxxix., and that where the Urim and Thummim are mentioned there is no mention of the stones, as Lev. viii. 8, which shows they were one and the same thing. But that is not necessary, and there is an evident reason of both those omissions; of the former, Exod. xxxix., because he mentions only those things which were made by the workmen, whereas the Urim and Thummim seems to have been made immediately by God, or by Moses with God's direction; of the latter, Lev. viii., because the stones are implied in the breastplate as a part of it, and being fastened to it, whereas there he only mentions what was put in by Moses himself. There are other conjectures, as that it was the name Jehovah, or some visible representations, &c. But such conjectures are as easily denied as affirmed. It is therefore more modest and reasonable to be silent where God is silent, than to indulge ourselves in boundless and groundless fancies. It may suffice us to know that this was a singular piece of Divine workmanship, which the high priest was obliged to wear upon solemn occasions, as one of the conditions upon which God engaged to give him answers; which answers God might give to him either by inward suggestion to his mind, or by a vocal expression to his ear. But which of those ways,

3 Lev. 8. 5.
Num. 27. 21.
Deut. 33. 8.
1 Sam. 28. 6.
Ezra 2. 63.
Neh. 7. 65.
Eccles. 43.
10.

or whether by any other way, it is needless now to search, and impossible certainly to discover.

The judgment of the children of Israel. A short speech. As the testimony is oft put for the ark of the testimony, so is the judgment here for the breastplate of judgment, i. e. that breastplate which declared the judgment, or oracle, or mind of God to the Israelites in those cases which they brought to the Lord. Before the Lord continually, i. e. at all times when he shall appear before the Lord in the holy place.

1 ch. 39. 22. 31 ¶ And thou shalt make the robe of the ephod all of blue.

Not the ephod itself, for that was prescribed before, ver. 6, but a long and loose robe called the robe of the ephod, because it was worn next under it, and was girded about the high priest's body with the curious girdle of the ephod.

32 And there shall be an hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of an habergeon, that it be not rent.

¶ Or, akirts. 33 ¶ And beneath upon the hem of it thou shalt make pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and bells of gold between them round about:

Pomegranates; the figures of pomegranates, but flat and embroidered. By the sound of the bells the people might be admonished of the work which the priest was employed in, and thereby be provoked to join their affections and devotions with his. These pomegranates and bells might note either, 1. The qualifications of the priest, who was both to declare or give forth the sound of pure and wholesome doctrine, and to adorn his doctrine with the fragrant and fruitfulness of a good conversation. Or, 2. The glorious achievements of Christ, who caused the sound of his doctrine to be heard by all men, and offered up himself as a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour, Eph. v. 2.

34 A golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about.

35 * And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.

For his disobedience or carelessness. For though the matter might seem small in itself, yet it was an error in God's worship, wherein God is more severe than in other things; and it was an error of the high priest, who had more knowledge of God's mind herein, and was obliged to more care and diligence, not only for himself, but for the influences of his bad example upon the people.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

The plate of pure gold was like a half coronet, reaching, as the Jews say, from ear to ear. Holiness to the Lord, to mind the priest of his special consecration to God, and of that singular holiness which was required of him, as at all times, so especially in his approaches to God. It might also represent Christ, who is called the Holy One of God, and who is a crowned Priest, or both King and Priest.

37 And thou shalt put it on a blue lace, that it may be upon the mitre; upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be.

The words may be rendered, thou shalt put it on, or, bind it, as the Vulgate renders it, with a blue lace, to wit, upon the mitre, as it follows.

38 And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the LORD.

That Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things; either, 1. That he, being consecrated to God for this end, that he should take care as far as he could that both persons and things presented to God should be holy or agreeable to the mind of God, might bear the punishment for any miscarriage committed therein which he could have prevented. Or rather, 2. That he, being a holy person, and appointed by God to make a typical reconciliation for the sins of the people, and to intercede for them, might take away, or obtain from God the pardon of their iniquity, wherewith even their holy things are defiled, if God should severely mark what is amiss in them; which sense the last words of the verse favour. And the high priest was herein eminently a type of Christ, who properly and truly bare and took away the iniquity of his people's holy things by his sacrifice and intercession. Which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts, i. e. shall separate or consecrate unto God in all their offerings or gifts. If there be any thing amiss either in the thing offered, or in the manner of offering, God upon the priest's intercession will pardon it. It shall be always upon his forehead, i. e. at all times of his solemn appearance before God.

39 ¶ And thou shalt embroider the coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the girdle of needlework.

The coat was a loose and large garment made with sleeves, worn under the ephod, reaching down to the feet, which was girt with a girdle, Lev. vii. 7.

40 * And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

The coats were not of woollen, Ezek. xlv. 17, but of linen, Exod. xxxix. 27. These were ephods, 1 Sam. xxii. 18.

41 And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and shalt consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

Consecrate them, Heb. fill their hand, i. e. present them to God with part of the sacrifice in their hands, as we find, Exod. xxix. 24, by that rite putting them into their office.

42 And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover their nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs they shall reach:

Including both. Compare Exod. xx. 26.

43 And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that they bear not iniquity, and die: it shall be a statute for ever unto him and his seed after him.

CHAP. XXIX.

The manner of consecrating priests, 1—3. Of consecrating Aaron and his sons, 4—7. The priests' vesture, 8, 9. How the bullock of the sin-offering was to be offered, 10—14. One ram for a burnt-offering, and the manner of offering, 15—18. A ram for hallowing the priests, 19—31. Aaron and his sons eat of the ram wherewith they were consecrated, 32, 33. The altar sanctified for seven days, 36, 37. Two lambs offered daily, 38. The time, 39. The manner of offering, 40—43. God's promise to hallow the tabernacle, Aaron, and his sons, 44, and to dwell with them, 45, 46.

AND this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in

1 Lev. 1. 4
2 22. 27. &
3 23. 11.
4 Is. 56. 7.

x ver. 4.
ch. 39. 27.
28, 29, 41.
Ezek. 44. 17, 18.

y ch. 29. 7.
& 30. 30. &
40. 15.
Lev. 10. 7.
+ Heb. fill their hand.
z ch. 29. 9, 30.
Lev. ch. 8.
Heb. 7. 28.

a ch. 39. 28.
Lev. 6. 10.
& 16. 4.
Ezek. 44. 18.
+ Heb. reach of their nakedness.
† Heb. be.

b ch. 20. 26.
c Lev. 5. 1,
17. & 20. 19,
20. & 22. 9,
Num. 9. 13.
& 18. 22. 21.
d ch. 27. 21.
Lev. 17. 7.

t ch. 39. 30.
Zech. 14. 20.
Ezek. 45. 12.

u ver. 43.
Lev. 10. 17.
& 22. 9.
Num. 18. 1.
Is. 53. 11.
Ezek. 4. 4,
5, 6.
John 1. 29.
Heb. 9. 28.
1 Pet. 2. 24.

^a Lev. 8. 2. the priest's office: *Take one young bullock, and two rams without blemish, See Exod. xii. 5; Mal. i. 13, 14.

^b Lev. 2. 4, 5. ^c 20, 21, 22. 2 And ^b unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of wheaten flour shalt thou make them.

The unleavened bread was to show that the priests should be, and that Christ really was, free from all malice and hypocrisy, both which are compared to leaven, Luke xii. 1; 1 Cor. v. 8, and that all the services offered to God by the priests were to be pure and unmixed.

3 And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

To the door of the tabernacle, as it follows, ver. 4.

4 And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt wash them with water.

^c ch. 40. 12. ^d Lev. 8. 6. ^e Heb. 10. 22.

Taken out of that laver, Exod. xxx. 18. This signified the universal pollution of all men, and the absolute need they have of washing, especially when they are to draw nigh to God. And this outward washing was only typical of their spiritual washing by the blood and Spirit of Christ in order to their acceptance with God.

5 ^d And thou shalt take the garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with ^e the curious girdle of the ephod:

Not about the loins, but about the paps, or breast, as Christ and his ministers are represented, Rev. i. 13. The linen breeches are here omitted, because they were put on privately before they came to the door of the tabernacle, where the other things were put on.

6 ^f And thou shalt put the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.

The holy crown, i. e. the plate of gold, chap. xxviii. 36, as appears by comparing Lev. viii. 9.

7 Then shalt thou take the anointing ^g oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.

Which signified the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, wherewith Christ was, and the priests ought to be, replenished. See Isa. lxi. 1; 1 John ii. 27. But here ariseth a difficulty; for this anointing is sometimes spoken of as peculiar to the high priest, as Lev. xxi. 10, sometimes as common to all the priests, Exod. xxx. 30; xl. 14, 15, which may be thus reconciled: the oil was sprinkled upon all the priests, and their right ears, thumbs, and toes, and their garments, ver. 20, 21; Lev. viii. 30, but it was poured out upon the head only of the high priest, Psal. cxxxiii. 2, who herein was a type of Christ, who was anointed above his fellows, Psal. xlv. 7; Heb. i. 9.

8 And ^h thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them.

9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons, and ⁱ put the bonnets on them: and ^j the priest's office shall be their's for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt ^k consecrate Aaron and his sons.

A perpetual statute; so long as the Jewish pedagogy and policy lasts.

10 And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and ^l Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.

To signify that they offered it for themselves and for their own sins, which the offerer performing this rite was to confess, Lev. xvi. 21, that they acknowledged themselves to deserve that death which was inflicted upon this innocent creature for their sakes, and to testify their faith in the future sacrifice of Christ, upon whom their sins were to be laid, and by whose blood they were expiated, and that they humbly begged God's mercy in pardoning their sins, and accepting them to and in their holy office.

11 And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

Moses, who though no priest, yet for this time and occasion was called by God to this work.

12 And thou ^m shalt take of the blood ⁿ of the bullock, and put it upon ^o the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

Upon the horns of the altar; not of incense, as some would have it, but of the burnt-offerings, as may appear, 1. Because it was that altar at the bottom wherof the blood was to be poured, as it is here expressed; but that was not done at the altar of incense, as is evident and confessed. Compare Lev. xvi. 18, &c. 2. It was that altar upon which the parts of the sacrifices were burnt, as it here follows, ver. 13, for there is no distinction here between the two altars. It is true, in the following sin-offerings of the priests the blood was put upon the horns of the altar of incense, Lev. iv. 7. But it must be considered, 1. That the blood was not poured out at the bottom of that altar. 2. Because Aaron and his sons were not yet complete priests, but private persons, and therefore did this at the same altar which the people used in their sin-offerings, Lev. iv. 25, 30.

13 And ^p thou shalt take all the fat ^q that covereth the inwards, and ^r the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.

The parts which in all sacrifices were burned unto God, Lev. iii. 3; iv. 19, to signify either the mortification of their inward and most beloved lusts, or the dedication of the best of all sacrifices, and of their inward and best parts, to God and his service.

14 But ^s the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering.

To wit, for the high priest, as is plain from the whole context, and therefore ought to be burnt by that law, Lev. iv. There was indeed a law, that that sin-offering whose blood was not carried into the tabernacle, which was the case here, should not be burnt, but eaten, Lev. vi. 30; x. 18. But that concerned the people, not the priests, who did not eat, but burn their own sin-offerings, Lev. iv. 3, 12.

15 ¶ ^t Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall ^u put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

Which signifies, that not only our persons, but our very altars and sacrifices, and best services, need the sprinkling of Christ's blood upon them to render them acceptable to God.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and ^v unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

A sweet savour, Heb. a savour of rest, wherewith God will be well pleased, and for which, as representing Christ who offered up himself, he will graciously accept of the offerings of the priests for themselves, and for the people.

^f Heb. bind.
^g Num. 18. 7.
^h Heb. all the head of.
ⁱ ch. 28. 41.
^j Lev. 8. 22, &c.
^k Heb. 7. 28.

^l Lev. 1. 4. & 8. 14.

^l Or, upon.

^m Gen. 8. 21.

t ver. 3.
Lev. 8. 22.

19 ¶ And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

This was for a peace-offering. So here were all the three sorts of sacrifices, which were afterwards to be offered by them for the people.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot; and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

These parts are consecrated in the name and stead of all the rest; the ear, as the instrument of hearing and receiving the mind and will of God in all their sacred administrations, and in their whole conversation; the hand and foot, as the instruments of action and execution of that which they hear and understand to be the mind of God; and the right parts are chosen rather than the left, as being usually more vigorous and expeditious. And all these parts are sprinkled with this blood, to show the absolute necessity of Christ's blood to qualify them for an acceptable and successful discharge of their office.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

22 Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ramic of consecration:

Of the priests in their office. Therefore the right shoulder was burnt, which in other sacrifices was given to the priest.

23 And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:

24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD.

Either toss them from one hand to another, as giving all from themselves to God; or shake them to and fro, towards the several parts of the world, to note God's dominion over all places and people, and the extent of that true and great sacrifice, represented in these types to all.

25 And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

To wit, the breast alone, whereas both shoulder and breast were given to Aaron afterwards; the reason whereof might be, either because Moses was not a proper and complete priest, as Aaron afterward was, but only appointed by God for this time to do that work; or because now there were in a manner two priests, the one consecrating, to wit, Moses; the other consecrated, to wit, Aaron; therefore these parts were divided, the breast given to the former to be eaten, the shoulder offered unto God for the latter, ver. 22; he being not yet a perfect priest, and therefore not in a capacity of eating it.

u ch. 30. 25,
31.
Lev. 8. 30.

w ver. 1.
Heb. 9. 22.

x Lev. 8. 28.

+ Heb. shake to and fro.
y Lev. 7. 30.

a Lev. 8. 28.

a Lev. 8. 28.

b Ps. 99. 6.

27 And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons:

c Lev. 7. 31,
34. Num. 16.
11, 18.
Deut. 18. 3.

Heaved up: this was done by throwing the parts upward, and catching them again. Even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons: the words may be rendered thus, of which breast and shoulder of the ram shall be Aaron's portion, and of which shall be the portion of his sons; so there is only an ellipsis of the verb substantive, which is most common, and the Hebrew prefix lamed designs a thing belonging to the person to whom that is prefixed, as it is in other like cases, as Gen. xl. 8; Deut. i. 17; Psal. xlvii. 9.

28 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace offerings, even their heave offering unto the LORD.

d Lev. 10. 15.

e Lev. 7. 34.

It is an heave-offering; under which is comprehended also the wave-offering; as plainly appears both from the context, and from the parity of reason, these offerings being of the same nature, and designed for the same purpose.

29 ¶ And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

f Num. 20.
26, 28.
g Num. 18. 6.
& 35. 25.

His sons, i. e. his eldest sons successively. To be consecrated by some other priest, there being no other higher person who could do it, and therefore the necessity of it made it warrantable.

30 And that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.

+ Heb. he of his sons.
h Num. 20.
28.
i Lev. 8. 35.
& 9. 1, 8.

For so long the solemnity of the consecration lasted, ver. 35. In the holy place; both that strictly so called, and in the most holy place; for as none could go into the most holy place except the high priest, so there were some things to be done in the holy place which none but he could do. See Lev. iv. 7, 8.

31 ¶ And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.

k Lev. 8. 31.

In the court-yard at the door of the tabernacle, where it was both boiled and eaten, as appears from this and the next verse, and from Lev. viii. 31. And part of this was eaten by the person or persons that brought the offering, though they were of the people, who were not admitted into any other holy place but this.

32 And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

l Matt. 12. 4.

33 And they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

m Lev. 10.
14, 15, 17.

n Lev. 22. 10.

Those things, i. e. the remainders of the oblations mentioned ver. 32. A stranger, i. e. one who is not of the priestly race, whereas in other peace-offerings the offerer did eat a part.

34 And if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

o Lev. 8. 32.

Thou shalt burn the remainder, according to the law of all peace-offerings, except those which were vows or voluntary offerings, Lev. vii. 16, 17, which these were not: compare Exod. xii. 10.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all things which I have commanded thee: ^pseven days shalt thou consecrate them.

^p Ex. 40. 12.
Lev. 8. 35,
34, 35.

^q Heb. 10. 11.

36 And thou shalt ^qoffer every day a bullock for a sin offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, ^rand thou shalt anoint it, to sanctify it.

^r ch. 30. 26,
28, 29, & 40.
10.

For atonement, as well for the priests as for the altar; both which, as they were or might be polluted, so they needed the sprinkling of this blood to sanctify them, to show that all persons and things were fitted for God's service, and accepted by him only for and through the blood of Christ.

37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; ^sand it shall be an altar most holy: ^twhatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

^s ch. 40. 10.
^t ch. 30. 29,
Matt. 23. 19.

It shall be an altar most holy, as appears from the following reason, because it was not only holy in itself, but by its touch communicated a legal holiness to other things. Whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy: this may be understood either, 1. Of persons, as a caution that none should touch the altar but holy and consecrated persons. Or rather, 2. Of things, yet not of all things, for polluted things were not made holy by the touch of holy things, which is affirmed, Hag. ii. 12; but of things belonging to the altar of offerings, which by God's appointment were to be offered, which were sanctified by being laid upon this altar, and therefore the altar was greater and more holy than the gift, as our blessed Saviour notes, Matt. xxiii. 19.

38 ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; ^utwo lambs of the first year ^vday by day continually.

^u Num. 28. 3.
^v 1 Chr. 16. 40.
12 Chr. 2. 4, &
13. 11, & 31.
3. Ezra 3. 3.
^w See Dan.
9. 27, & 12. 11.

This is that which thou shalt offer: this is the chief end and use of this altar, though it served also for other sacrifices. Day by day continually; to show, partly, that men do daily contract new defilement, and daily need new pardons; and partly, that God is not only to be worshipped upon the sabbath days, and other set and solemn times, but every day.

39 The one lamb thou shalt offer ^xin the morning; and the other lamb thou shalt offer at even:

Which two seasons were selected as most commodious, that men might both begin and end their worldly actions and businesses with God, and might see their need of God's assistance and blessing in all their concerns, and the justice of giving him the praise and glory of all.

40 And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil; and the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering.

A tenth deal; the tenth part of an ephah, as is evident from Numb. xxviii. 5, which is an omer, Exod. xvi. 36. An hin was a measure for liquid things, as the ephah was for dry things, containing six pints of our measure.

41 And the other lamb thou shalt ^yoffer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat offering of the morning, and according to the drink offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

^y 1 Kings
16. 29, 36.
2 Kin. 16. 15.
Ezra 3. 4, 5.
Ps. 141. 2.
Dan. 6. 21.

42 This shall be ^za continual burnt offering throughout your generations at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD: ^awhere I will meet you, to speak there unto thee.

^a ver. 36.
ch. 30. 6.
Num. 28. 6.
Dan. 6. 11,
12, 13.
^b ch. 25. 22,
& 30. 6, 36.
Num. 17. 4.

Either, 1. At which door, for there the Lord stood and talked with Moses, Exod. xxxiii. 9, 10. Or rather, 2. In which tabernacle, to wit, in the innermost part of it, because that was the principal place where God did ordinarily reside and meet with his people, Exod. xxx. 6; Lev. xvi. 2; whereas God met but once at the door of the tabernacle, and that with Moses only, not with the people, with whom he is said to meet in this place, ver. 43. Add to this, that the place where God meets them is the same place which is sanctified by his glory, and that was the tabernacle, ver. 43, as it is expressed in our translation, and sufficiently implied in the Hebrew, by a common ellipsis of the pronoun it, i. e. that place where I meet with you, to wit, the tabernacle, shall be, &c.

43 And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and ^bthe tabernacle shall be sanctified by my glory.

i. e. By my glorious presence and appearance, of which see Exod. xl. 34, 35; Lev. ix. 24.

44 And I will sanctify the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar: I will ^csanctify also both Aaron and his sons, to minister to me in the priest's office.

45 ¶ And ^dI will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God.

I will dwell, by my special grace, and favour, and blessing; for by his essence he fills all places.

46 And they shall know that ^eI am the Lord their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them: I am the LORD their God.

CHAP. XXX.

He commands to make an altar for incense, and of what, 1. The length and breadth of it, 2. The form of it, 3—6. Whereon the priest was to kindle incense every morning, being commanded, 7. All the children of Israel to bring half a shekel for their souls, 11—16. A laver of brass, 17, 18; wherein Aaron and his sons wash their hands and their feet, 19—21. The making the oil of holy ointment, 22—25. Its use, 26—28. None might make the like, 32, 33. The composition of the perfume, 34—38.

AND thou shalt make ^fan altar ^gto burn incense upon: of shittim wood shalt thou make it.

Incense signifies the prayers of God's people, Psal. cxli. 2; Rev. viii. 3; which are not acceptable to God except they be offered upon the true altar, Christ. This incense also was useful to correct the bad smell of the sacrifices, which were offered on another altar not far from it. Yea, some sacrifices were offered upon this altar, as appears from ver. 10; Lev. iv. 7. But here only the principal and constant use of it is noted.

2 A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; foursquare shall it be: and two cubits shall be the height thereof: the horns thereof shall be of the same.

See Exod. xxvii. 2. Though these horns, as they were for another use, so they seem to be here of another form, and for ornament more than for service.

3 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the ^htop thereof, and the ⁱsides thereof round about, and the horns thereof; and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

The top was made hollow like a grate, that the ashes might fall through it. The crown was a border which encompassed the altar, that the things laid on it might not fall off.

4 And two golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two ^jcorners thereof, upon the two sides of it

^h Or, Israel.
ⁱ ch. 40. 34.
^j Kin. 8. 11.
^k Chr. 5. 14.
& 7. 1, 2, 3.
Ezek. 43. 5.
Hag. 2. 7, 9. Mal. 3. 1.

^c Lev. 21. 15.
& 22. 9, 16.
^d Ex. 25. 8.
Lev. 26. 12.
Zech. 2. 10.
John 14. 17,
23.
^e Cor. 6. 16.
Rev. 21. 3.

^e ch. 20. 2.

^f ch. 37. 25.
& 40. 5.
^g See ver. 7, 9, 10.
^h Lev. 4. 7, 18.
Rev. 8. 3.

^h Heb. roof.
ⁱ Heb.
walls

^j Heb. ribs.

shalt thou make it; and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it before the veil that is by the ark of the testimony, before the ^cmercy seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.

Before the veil; before the second veil, in the holy place, and near to the holy of holies, and consequently to the ark and mercy-seat.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon [†] sweet incense every morning: when ^che dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it.

Aaron was to do this for the first time, but afterwards any priest might do it, as appears from Luke i. 9; this not being done in the holy of holies, which was the high priest's peculiar. When he dresseth the lamps, i. e. cleansed them, and prepared them for the receiving of the new light.

8 And when Aaron ^{††} lighteth the lamps [†] at even, he shall burn incense upon it, a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations.

The even was the time when all the lamps were to be lighted, 1 Sam. iii. 3. See Exod. xxvii. 20, 21.

9 Ye shall offer no ^cstrange incense thereon, nor burnt sacrifice, nor meat offering; neither shall ye pour drink offering thereon.

No strange incense, i. e. of any other sort than what I shall here appoint, ver. 34, &c.

10 And ^sAaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonements: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

Once in a year, on the day of expiation, Lev. xvi. 19; Numb. xxix. 7. With the blood of the sin-offering of atonements; to note, that the prayers of the saints are acceptable to God no otherwise but through the blood of Christ, who was offered for the expiation of our sins.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 When thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after [†]their number, then shall they give every man ^aransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no ^kplague among them, when thou numberest them.

A ransom for his soul; a certain price for the redemption of their lives; whereby they acknowledge the right and power which God had over their lives, and that they had forfeited them by their sins, and that it was God's mercy to continue their lives to them. When thou numberest them, to wit, upon any just occasion, either now in the wilderness, or afterwards. It may seem that this payment was neither to be made at this time only, as some would have it; nor yet every year, as Josephus and others affirm, because it is not said to be a perpetual statute, as other things of constant observance are, but upon any eminent occasions, when the service of the tabernacle (which is the end and use of this collection) or temple required it, as may be gathered from 2 Kings xii. 4, compared with 2 Chron. xxiv. 6. Compare Neh. x. 32; Matt. xvii. 24. And as now it was employed in the building of the tabernacle, so afterwards it might be laid out upon the repairs or other services of it.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary: (^ma shekel is twenty gerahs;) ^aan half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

The shekel of the sanctuary hath been commonly conceived to be double to the common shekel, yet divers late learned men seem more truly to judge that it was no more than the common shekel, consisting of half a crown of English money; which is called the shekel of the sanctuary, because the standard by which all shekels were to be examined was kept in the sanctuary, as afterwards the just weights and measures were kept in Christian temples, or other public places. See Lev. xxvii. 25; Numb. iii. 47; Ezek. xlv. 10—12. Add to this, that it was a part of the priest's office to look to the weights and measures, as plainly appears from 1 Chron. xxiii. 29. An half shekel shall be the offering; not less, lest it should be contemptible; nor more, lest it should be too burdensome for the poor.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

From twenty years old and above; the time when they began to be fit for employment, and capable of getting and paying money. Women and children are not included here, because they are reckoned in their fathers or husbands.

15 The ^orich shall not [†]give more, and the poor shall not [†]give less than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make an ^atonement for your souls.

This was partly to teach them that all souls are of equal worth in themselves and price with God; that there is no respect of persons with God, and in God's worship and service, but gospel graces, ordinances, and privileges are common and equal to all, Exod. xii.; xvi. 18; Gal. iii. 28; Col. iii. 11; that all persons are alike obnoxious to Divine justice, and are redeemed by one and the same price: partly to check the arrogance and vanity of the rich, who are very apt to despise the poor; and partly that by this means the number of the people might be exactly known when occasion required it.

16 And thou shalt take the atonement money of the children of Israel, and ^ashalt appoint it for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be ^a memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

For the service of the tabernacle; for the building and furniture of it, and the maintenance of God's worship in it. That it may be a memorial; either to the people, who hereby profess God to be their Lord and Owner, and themselves his subjects and tributaries; or to God, who hereby takes occasion to remember them, and to own them for his people.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, The frequent repetition of this phrase, and the shortness of these discourses, in comparison of the length of the forty days, show that God did not deliver all these laws and prescriptions at one time, but successively at several times, possibly upon the sabbath days.

18 Thou shalt also make a laver of brass, and his foot also of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein.

See the accomplishment Exod. xxxviii. 8; to wash both the priests and the parts of the sacrifices.

The altar, to wit, of burnt-offerings.

19 For Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat:

To signify their natural impurity and unworthiness, either to handle holy things, or to come into the holy place, and their need of washing with the blood and Spirit of Christ, which was typified by this washing.

c ch. 25. 21, 22.

† Heb. incense of spices.
d ver. 34.
1 Sam. 2. 28.
1 Chr. 23. 13.
Luke 1. 9.
c ch. 27. 21.

† Heb. causeth to ascend.
† Heb. between the two evenings.
ch. 12. 6.

† Lev. 10. 1.

g Lev. 16. 18. & 23. 27.

h ch. 28. 25. Num. 1. 2, 5. & 26. 2.

2 Sam. 24. 2.

† Heb. them that are to be numbered. See Num. 31. 50.
i Job 33. 24. & 38. 16.
Ps. 49. 7.
Matt. 20. 28.
Mark 10. 45.
1 Tim. 2. 6.
1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. k 2 Sam. 24. 15.

l Matt. 17. 24.

m Lev. 27. 25. Num. 3. 47. Ezek. 45. 12. n ch. 38. 26.

o Job 34. 19. Prov. 22. 2. Eph. 6. 9. Col. 3. 25. † Heb. multiply. † Heb. diminish. p ver. 12.

q ch. 38. 25.

r Num. 16. 40.

s ch. 38. 6. 1 Kin. 7. 38.

t ch. 40. 7. 20.

u ch. 40. 31. 32. Ps. 26. 6. Is. 62. 11. John 13. 10. Heb. 10. 22.

20 When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD :

That they die not; for though the fault might seem small, yet the command was evident and easy, and therefore the disobedience was worse, arguing presumption, rebellion, and contempt. And God is more severe in the matters of his worship than in other cases.

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and ^{w ch. 28. 48.} it shall be a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto thee ^{† Cant. 4. 14. Ezek. 27. 22. † Ps. 45. 8. Prov. 7. 17.} principal spices, of pure ^{† Cant. 4. 14. Jer. 6. 20.} myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet ^{† Cant. 4. 14. Jer. 6. 20.} calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

Take thou also unto thee: the words are very emphatical, and the Jews from hence do rightly infer, that this ointment was but once made, and that by Moses's own hands. Spices: see Cant. iv. 14; Ezek. xxvii. 22; and compare Psal. xlv. 8; Amos vi. 6. Pure myrrh, Heb. myrrh of liberty; either, 1. Free from adulteration or mixture; or rather, 2. Freely dropping from the tree, which is esteemed better than that which is forced out of it. Calamus; a sweet reed, of which see Isa. xliiii. 24; Jer. vi. 20.

24 And of ^{a Ps. 45. 8.} cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of ^{b ch. 28. 40.} oil olive an ^hhin:

Not the common kind of cassia, which we use in purging, but another kind of it, there being seven several kinds of it, as the learned note.

25 And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the ^h apothecary: it shall be ^can holy anointing oil.

^h Or, perfume. c ch. 37. 29. Num. 35. 25. Ps. 89. 20. & 133. 2. d ch. 40. 9. Lev. 8. 10. Num. 7. 1.

26 ^dAnd thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony,

This was only an outward ceremony, signifying the separation and sanctification of these things for the service of God; as the anointing of kings and priests noted their designation to their offices.

27 And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, 28 And the altar of burnt offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot.

29 And thou shalt sanctify them, that they may be most holy: ^{e ch. 29. 37.} whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy.

30 ^{f ch. 29. 7. &c. Lev. 8. 12, 30.} And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

Not all of them, but only those who succeed him in the high priest's office, as appears from Exod. xl. 15; Lev. iv. 3, 5, 16; xvi. 32; xxi. 10. This anointing of them signified both God's election or calling them to this office, and the inward qualifications requisite for it, to wit, the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, which are oft designed by this word of anointing, as Isa. lxi. 1; Dan. ix. 24; 1 John ii. 27, and the solemn setting apart of Christ, the true High Priest, for the mediatorial office.

31 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations.

i. e. Reserved for my service alone, not employed to any profane or civil use, as it follows.

32 Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured, neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition of it: ^{† it is g ver. 26, 37.} it is ^h holy, and it shall be holy unto you.

Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured, except those whom God himself, the author of this law, excepts, to wit, the high priests, of which see ver. 30; and some of the kings, of which see 1 Kings i. 39; Psal. lxxxix. 20, though others think the kings were only anointed with common oil. It shall be holy unto you, as it is unto me, ver. 31; you shall account it holy, as I do.

33 ^h Whosoever compoundeth any like ^h ver. 38. it, or whosoever putteth any of it upon a stranger, ⁱ shall even be cut off from his ^{i Gen. 17. 14. ch. 12. 15. Lev. 7. 22, 21.} people.

The word stranger is commonly used to note the Gentiles, or such as were not of Israel's race; but sometimes it notes those that are not of the priestly race, as Exod. xxix. 33; Lev. xxii. 12, 13; and so it seems to be here. And if any of the kings were anointed with this oil, it was done by God's special appointment, who may dispense with his own laws.

34 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, ^k Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and ^{k ch. 26. 6. & 37. 23.} onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense: of each shall there be a like weight :

Stacte, and onycha, and galbanum: the Jews themselves are not agreed what these were, and it concerns not Christians much to know, the use of them being abolished. It is evident they were each of them sweet spices, and therefore this galbanum was not of the common kind, which gives a very bad scent. Of each shall there be a like weight, Heb. alone shall be with alone, i. e. each of these alone shall be with another alone, to wit, in equal quantity. Or it may note, that each of these was to be taken and beaten apart, and then mixed together. Or, it shall be alone alone, i. e. absolutely and certainly alone, the doubling of the word increasing the signification, and thus it doth not belong to all the ingredients, because the Hebrew verb is here of the singular number, but only to the frankincense; and the sense may be, that whereas the other things shall be tempered together, the frankincense should be alone, which may seem most agreeable both to the common use of frankincense, and to its differing nature from the other things mentioned, two of them at least being confessedly liquid things.

35 And thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection ^{l ver. 25. † Heb. salt-ed. Lev. 2. 13.} after the art of the apothecary, [†] tempered together, pure and holy:

Tempered together, Heb. salted; either, 1. Properly, for salt was to be offered with all offerings, Lev. ii. 13. And the Hebrew doctors tell us that six egg-shells full of salt were used. Or, 2. Metaphorically, well mixed together, as salt was with things either offered to God, or eaten by man. Pure, of the best of each kind of drugs, the most perfect and uncorrupted.

36 And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put of it before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, ^{m ch. 29. 42. Lev. 16. 2. n ver. 32. ch. 29. 37. Lev. 2. 3.} where I will meet with thee: ⁿ it shall be unto you most holy.

Some of it; so much as is sufficient for the daily incense.

37 And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ^{o ver. 32.} ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD.

38 ^p Whosoever shall make like unto ^{p ver. 33.}

that, to smell thereto, shall even be cut off from his people.

CHAP. XXXI.

Bezaleel and Aholiab are called for the work of the tabernacle, 1--7. The table and candlestick, 8. The altar, 9. Hallowing of the sabbath is commanded again, 12--17. Moses receiveth the two tables of the law, 18.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 * See, I have called by name Bezaleel the ^bson of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah :

a ch. 35. 30.
& 36. 1.
b 1 Chron. 2.
20.

He seems to be the same mentioned 1 Chron. ii. 20.

c ch. 35. 31.
Kin. 7. 14.

3 And I have ^cfilled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

I have filled him with the spirit of God, which was now necessary, because the Israelites in Egypt wanted ingenious education to learn these things, and therefore needed inspiration. In wisdom, or, with wisdom, the following clauses being explicatory of the former, showing what gifts of the Spirit God had filled him with, to wit, wisdom, &c.

4 To devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

5 And in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

6 And I, behold, I have given with him ^dAholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan : and in the hearts of all that are ^ewise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee ;

e ch. 28. 3.
& 35. 10, 33.
& 36. 1.

All that are wise-hearted; that have wisdom and skill sufficient to do these things, under the inspection and direction of Bezaleel and Aholiab, the principal workmen.

f ch. 36. 8.

7 ^fThe tabernacle of the congregation, and ^gthe ark of the testimony, and ^hthe mercy seat that is thereupon, and all the [†]furniture of the tabernacle,

g ch. 37. 1.
h ch. 37. 6.

† Heb. ceceela.

i ch. 37. 10.

k ch. 37. 17.

8 And ⁱthe table and his furniture, and ^kthe pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense,

The pure candlestick; so called by way of eminency, not only because it was made of pure gold, and was not defiled with blood, for so some other things were, but especially to mind the priests of their duty in keeping it neat and clean, it being more subject to defilement than other things.

l ch. 38. 1.

m ch. 38. 8.

9 And ^lthe altar of burnt offering with all his furniture, and ^mthe laver and his foot,

n ch. 39. 1, 41.
Numb. 4. 5,
& 6c.

10 And ⁿthe cloths of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office,

The cloths of service, wherein the ark and other sacred utensils were wrapped up when they were to be removed. See Exod. xxxv. 19; Numb. iv.

o ch. 30. 25,
31. & 37. 29.
p ch. 30. 34.
& 37. 22.

11 ^oAnd the anointing oil, and ^psweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

q Lev. 19. 3, 20. & 26. 2.
r Ezek. 20. 12, 20. & 44. 24.

13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, ^qVerily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you.

My sabbaths ye shall keep: this precept is here repeated, either, 1. To show the chief use of the tabernacle, and all this cost and trouble about it, to wit, that they might there acceptably serve God, as in some measure upon every day, so especially upon the sabbath day. Or rather, 2. To restrain the time for the doing of the forementioned works: q. d. Though the work of the tabernacle and utensils be holy, and for a holy use, yet I will not have it done upon my holy day. The sabbath was not made for them, but they for it, and therefore they shall give place to it. It is a sign between me and you. The sabbath is a fivefold sign: 1. Commemorative, of God's creation of and dominion over them and all other things, to whom they do hereby profess their subjection. 2. Indicative, showing that they were made to be holy, and that their sanctification can be had from none but from God, as it here follows, and from the observation of God's days and appointments. 3. Distinctive, whereby they owned themselves to be the Lord's peculiar people, by a religious keeping of those sabbaths, which the rest of the world grossly neglected and profanely scoffed at. 4. Prefigurative, of that rest which Christ should purchase for them, to wit, a rest from the burden of the ceremonial, and from the curses and rigours of the moral law, as also from sin and the wrath of God for ever. See Heb. iv. 5. Confirmative, both assuring them of God's good will to them, and that as he blessed the sabbath for their sakes, so he would bless them in the holy use of it with temporal, spiritual, and everlasting blessings, as he declares in many places of Scripture; and assuring God of their standing to that covenant made between God and them. So that this was a mutual stipulation or ratification of the covenant of grace on both sides.

That doth sanctify you; that selecteth you out of all people, and consecrateth you to myself, and to my service and worship, a great part whereof is the observation of the sabbath. Or, that sanctifieth you by my word and ordinances, which are in more eminent and solemn manner dispensed upon the sabbath day, by the observation whereof you declare that you own me as your only Sanctifier. And so we may observe, the sabbath owns the Lord as our Creator, and as our Redeemer, and as our Sanctifier; and therefore it is no wonder God so severely enjoins the sanctification of the sabbath, and punisheth the neglect of it, it being a tacit renouncing or disowning of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

14 ^rYe shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that defleth it shall surely be put to death: for ^swhosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

r ch. 30. 8.
Deut. 5. 12.
Ezek. 20. 13.

Shall surely be put to death; of which see an example, Numb. xv. 32, &c. i. e. Servile work, as it is explained, Lev. xxiii. 7, &c.

15 ^tSix days may work be done; but in the ^useventh is the sabbath of rest, [†]holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.

s ch. 35. 2.
Numb. 15. 35.

t ch. 20. 9.
u Gen. 2. 2.
ch. 16. 23.
& 20. 10.
† Heb. holiness.

The sabbath of rest, Heb. the sabbath of sabbaths, or of sabbaths, i. e. the great and chief sabbath, as the song of songs is the most excellent song, the holy of holies is the most holy, &c. The Jews had many sabbaths or days of rest, but this is here preferred before them all, by this emphatical repetition of the same word; and by this argument the foregoing duty is pressed upon them.

16 Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant.

Or, shall keep the sabbath by observing or celebrating the sabbath, i. e. by observing or celebrating it, the antecedent being put for the relative, as is frequently done. So here is another most emphatical repetition to oblige us to the greater caution and diligence in this great duty, and to show what stress God lays upon it, who hath therefore placed this in the midst of the commands of the decalogue, as the heart which gives life and vigour to all the rest. Or it may be rendered thus, shall observe the day of rest to celebrate the sabbath; and so the phrase is like that in the fourth command, Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy. So here, Observe the sabbath, i. e. watch its coming and approach, consider attentively the nature and use of it, and that not as a matter of idle speculation, but of serious practice; or, so that you may do or celebrate the sabbath, i. e. perform all the duties of it. Or thus, shall observe the sabbath, to make it a sabbath or day of rest, and that no idle or carnal rest, but a rest, holy to the Lord, as it is called in the foregoing verse. For a perpetual covenant, or, by a perpetual covenant, or, it is a perpetual covenant, i. e. condition or part of that agreement made between me and them. They have solemnly covenanted or promised that they will do all that I commanded them, Exod. xxiv. 7, 8, among which this is a chief branch; and I have covenanted to bless and sanctify them in so doing. And this word perpetual, as also the word for ever, being added to it in the next verse, may intimate that this hath a longer perpetuity than the ceremonies, to which this phrase is sometimes ascribed, the rather because the reason of this perpetuity given in the next verse is such as hath its force not only till Christ, but even till the end of the world, and it is fit and just that men should retain this monument or memorial of the world's creation even till its dissolution.

17 It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for 'in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

It is a sign, a sign of the covenant between us, that I will be their God, and they will be my people; and both which depends upon this amongst other duties, and upon this in an eminent degree. Was refreshed; not as if he had been weary with working, which surely he could not be with speaking a few words, nor can God be weary with any thing, Isa. xl. 28; but it notes the pleasure or delight God took in reflecting upon his works, beholding that every thing he had made was very good, Gen. i. 31.

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

i. e. The tables of the law, which was the witness of God's will and Israel's duty. See Exod. xvi. 34. Tables of stone; whereby was signified both the durable and perpetual obligation of the moral law, whereas the ceremonial law was to end with the Jewish polity at Christ's coming; and the stoniness of men's hearts by nature, in which the law of God could not be written but by a Divine and omnipotent hand. Written with the finger of God, i. e. with the power or Spirit of God, by comparing Matt. xii. 18; not by any art of man, but immediately by a Divine hand.

CHAP. XXXII.

The people commit idolatry by worshipping the molten image which Aaron made, 1—6. God makes it known to Moses, and threatens their destruction, 7—10. Moses prays for them, 11—13. God repents of the evil, 14. Moses comes down from the mount with two tables, 15; being God's own writing, 16. Moses hearing and seeing their idolatry, breaks the two tables, 19; and turns the calf into powder, 20. Aaron's excuse, 21—24. Moses seeing their nakedness, 25, commands them to be slain, 26, 27. He bids them consecrate themselves, 29. Moses charging them with sin, 30, prayeth for them, 31, 32. God spareth them, 34; but afterwards plagueth them, 35.

AND when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, 'Up, make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

Moses had now been in the mount for near forty days. The people, i. e. most or some of the people, as it is expressed 1 Cor. x. 7. Unto Aaron, as the chief person in Moses's absence. Make us gods, i. e. images or representations of God, whom, after the manner of idolaters, they call by God's name. For it is ridiculous to think that the body of the Israelites, who were now lately instructed by the mouth, and words, and miraculous works of the eternal God, should be so senseless as to think that was the true God which themselves made, and that out of their own earrings; much more, that that was the God that brought them out of Egypt, as they say, ver. 4. Which shall go before us, to guide us through this vast wilderness to the Land of Promise, where they longed to be; for as for the cloud, which hitherto had guided them, that seemed now to be fixed upon the mount; and they thought both that and Moses had deserted them. The Jewish doctors note, that he doth not say, Make us gods whom we may worship, but which shall go before us, which, as they truly say, shows that they wanted not a God, whom they knew by infallible evidences they had, but a visible guide, who might supply the want of Moses, as the next words show. This Moses; an expression of contempt towards their great deliverer. What is become of him, whether he be not consumed by the fire in the cloud, or taken up to heaven, or conveyed away by God to some other place.

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden earrings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

The golden earrings were of good value and common use among the eastern people, who seem to have used them superstitiously, Gen. xxxv. 4; Judg. viii. 24; and therefore Aaron demands these, partly that he might take away one vice, or occasion of vice, whilst the people were intent upon another; and partly that the proposed loss of their precious earrings might cool their idolatrous desires. In the ears of your wives, whom he thought most fond of their jewels, and most unlikely to part with them.

3 And all the people brake off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

Whereby they show both their madness upon their idols, and their base ingratitude to their God, who had transferred these jewels from the Egyptians to them, Exod. xii. 35, 36, which therefore God upbraids them with, Ezek. xvi. 11, &c. In their ears, i. e. the men's ears, for the affix is of the masculine gender; whereby it seems the men were more set upon idolatry than the women, parting with their earrings for it, which the women would not do.

4 And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf: and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

A molten calf: the meaning of this translation is, that Aaron, to wit, by artificers, did first melt the god into one mass, and then by the graving-tool form it into the shape of a calf, and polish it; or as others render the words, he formed it in a type or mould, made in the shape of a calf, into which he cast the molten gold, and so made it a molten calf. But the words may be translated thus, He put it, or them, into a purse; for so the Hebrew verb and noun are both used, 2 Kings v. 23; and in like manner Gideon disposed the earrings given him for the like use, Judg. viii. 24; and afterwards he made of them a molten calf. Now the people desired, and Aaron in compliance with them made this in the form of a calf, or an ox, (for the word signifies both,) in imitation of the Egyptians, as Philo the Jew expressly affirms, and the learned generally agree; and it may thus appear: 1. The great idols of the Egyptians, Apis, Seraphis, and Isis, were oxen and cows, as is confessed. 2. The Egyptians, besides those creatures which they

x ver. 13.
Exod. 20, 12,
24.
y Gen. 1. 31.
& 2. 2.

1491.
* ch. 24. 12.
& 32. 15, 16.
* 24. 26, 27.
Deut. 4. 13.
& 5. 22, 28.
9. 10, 11.
2 Cor. 3. 3.

* ch. 20. 22.
Deut. 9. 16.
Judg. 17. 3, 4.
1 Kin. 12. 28.
Neh. 9. 18.
Ps. 106. 19.
Is. 46. 6.
Acta 7. 41.
Rom. 1. 23.

* ch. 24. 18.
Deut. 9. 9.
b Acta 7. 40.

d Judg. 8. 24, 25, 26, 27.

adored as gods, did also make, and keep, and worship their images, as even the heathen writers, Meia and Strabo, affirm. 3. The Israelites, whilst they were in Egypt, were many of them infected with the Egyptian idolatry, as it appears from Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 7, 8; xxiii. 3; Acts vii. 39. And it is not unlikely divers of them hankered no less after the idols, than after the garlic and onions of Egypt. And being now, as they thought, forsaken by Moses, they might think of returning to Egypt, as afterwards they did, and therefore chose a god of the Egyptian mode, that they might more willingly receive them again.

These be thy gods, i. e. this is thy god, the plural number being put for the singular, as it is usual in this case. The meaning is, This is the sign, or symbol, or image of thy god; for such expressions are very frequent: thus this image of a calf is called a calf frequently, and the images of the temple of Diana are called shrines or little temples, Acts xix. So they intended to worship the true God by this image, as afterwards Jeroboam did by the same image, as we shall plainly see when we come to that place of Scripture. And it is absolutely incredible that the generality of the Israelites should be so void of all sense and reason, as to think that this new-made calf did bring them out Egypt before its own creation, and that this was the same Jehovah who had even now spoken to them from heaven with an audible voice, saying, I am the Lord thy God who brought thee out of the land of Egypt.

5 And when Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, To-morrow is a feast to the LORD.

When Aaron saw, i. e. observed with what applause they received it, and with what fury and resolution they prosecuted their former desire, he was borne down with the stream, and, as it is probable, by the people's instigation, built an altar to it. To the Lord, Heb. to Jehovah; which title being peculiar to the true God, and being here given by Aaron to the calf, with the approbation of the people, makes it more than probable that the people designed to worship the true God in this calf, which they made only as a visible token of God's presence with them, and an image by which they might convey their worship to God.

6 And they rose up early on the morning, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

Brought peace-offerings, but no sin-offerings, which they most needed. The people sat down to eat and to drink; for the sacrifices were accompanied with feasting, both among the worshippers of the true God, and among idolaters. See Exod. xviii. 12; xxiv. 11. Rose up to play, by shouting, and singing, and dancing, as it appears from ver. 17-19.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves:

No longer my people, as God had called them hitherto, Exod. iii. 7; v. 1, &c.; they have forsaken me, and I do hereby renounce them.

8 They have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people:

Untractable, wilful, and stubborn, incorrigible by my judgments, ungovernable by mine or by any laws. A metaphor from those beasts that will not bend their necks to receive the yoke or bridle.

10 Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation.

Do not hinder me by thy prayers, which I see thou art now about to make on their behalf. I will make of thee; to come out of thy loins.

11 ¶ And Moses besought the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

The Lord his God; emphatically so called: q. d. Moses had not lost his interest in God, though Israel had. Why doth thy wrath wax hot, so hot as to consume them utterly? For though he saw reason enough why God should be angry with them, yet he humbly expostulates with God whether it would be for his honour utterly to destroy them. Or this is a petition delivered in form of an interrogation or expostulation, as Matt. viii. 29, compared with Luke viii. 28. Against thy people, an ingenious retortion: q. d. They are not my people, as thou calledst them, ver. 7, but thy people, which he proves in the following words.

12 ¶ Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people.

In the mountains, i. e. in or at Mount Sinai, the plural number for the singular; or, in this mountainous desert.

13 Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶ And Moses turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

Not on the inside and outside, which is unusual and unnecessary, but on the inside only, some of the ten commands being written on the right hand, and others on the left, not for any mystery, but only for conveniency of writing.

16 And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

Joshua had waited all this while upon the middle of the hill for Moses's return; and so neither knew what the people had done, nor heard what God had said to Moses.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

The voice of them that shout for mastery, Heb. of a cry of strength, i. e. of strong men, or of the stronger and victorious party, who use to express themselves with triumphant shouts. The voice of them that cry for being overcome, Heb. of a cry of weakness, i. e. of weak, and wounded, and vanquished men, who use to break forth into doleful cries.

f Lev. 23. 2,
4, 21, 37.
2 Kin. 10. 20.
2 Chro. 30. 5.

g 1 Cor. 10. 7.

h Deut. 9. 12.
ver. 1. ch. 33.
1. Dan. 9. 24.
i Gen. 5. 11.
12. Deut. 4.
16. & 32. 5.
Judg. 2. 19.
Hos. 9. 9.

k ch. 20. 3, 4, 23.
Deut. 9. 16.

l 11 Kings 12.
23.

m ch. 33. 3,
5. & 34. 5.
Deut. 9. 6,
13. & 31. 27.
2 Chro. 30.
8. Is. 43. 4.
Acts 7. 51.

n Deut. 9.
14, 19.
o ch. 22. 24.
p Num. 14.
12.

q Deut. 9. 19.
26, 27, 28, 29.
Ps. 74. 1, 2.
& 106. 23.
r Heb. the face of the LORD.

r Num. 14. 13.
Deut. 9. 26.
& 32. 27.

s ver. 14.

t Gen. 22. 16.
Heb. 6. 13.
u Gen. 12. 7.
& 13. 15. &
15. 7, 18. &
26. 4. & 28. 13.
& 35. 11, 12.
w Deut. 32.
25. 2 Sam.
24. 16. 1 Chr.
21. 15. Ps.
106. 45. Jer.
18. 8. & 26.
13. 19. Joet
2. 13. Jonah
3. 10. & 4. 2.

x Deut. 9. 15.

y ch. 31. 18.

+ Heb.
weakness.

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf, and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.

Not through rash anger, but by Divine instinct, partly to punish their idolatry with so great a loss, and partly to show that the covenant made between God and them, so much to their advantage, which was contained in those tables, was by their sin broken, and now of none effect, and not to be renewed but by bitter repentance.

20 * And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

Ground it to powder; melted it either into one great mass, or rather into divers little fragments, which afterwards by a file or other instruments he, by the help of many others, might soon grind to powder, or dust of gold. Strawed it upon the water; upon the brook which came out of the rock Horeb, Exod. xvii. 6. The children of Israel; not all, which would require a long time, but some in the name of the rest; and most probably either the chief promoters of this idolatrous design, or the chief rulers of the people, who should by their power and authority have restrained the people from this wickedness. To drink of it; of the water into which that dust was cast; partly to make them ashamed of their madness in worshipping a god which now must be drunk, and cast out into the draught; and partly to fill them with terror and dreadful expectation of some ill effect or curse of God to come upon them, either by this draught, or by other means.

21 And Moses said unto Aaron, ^bWhat did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

What injury or mischief had they done to thee, which thou didst so severely revenge? The sin of the people is charged upon Aaron, both because he did not resist and suppress their wicked suggestion, ver. 1, by his counsel, and by the authority which Moses had left in his hand, which he should have done even with the hazard of his life, as the rabbins say that Hur did, whom they report to have been slain by the people whilst he dissuaded them from their attempt, and because he did not promote, and direct, and manage their enterprise, ver. 4, 5.

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: ^cthou knowest the people, that they are set on mischief.

Heb. are in evil, i. e. are altogether wicked, addicted to or bent upon wickedness, so that it was impossible for me to stop or divert their course.

23 For they said unto me, ^dMake us gods, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there ^ecame out this calf.

Not that he meant or thought to persuade Moses that the melted gold came out of the fire in the form of a calf by accident, without any art or industry of his, which was a ridiculous conceit, and easily confuted; but only he conceals his own sin in the forming and graving of it, and lays the whole blame upon the people.

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were ^fnaked; (for Aaron ^ghad made them naked unto ^htheir shame among ⁱtheir enemies:)

i. e. That they were stripped both of their ornament, which was not so much the jewels of their ears, as the innocency of their minds and lives; and of their defence, to wit, of the favour and protection of God, by which alone they were secured from the Egyptians, and were to be defended against those many and mighty enemies towards whom they were about to march; and that being thus disarmed and helpless, they would be a prey to every enemy: when Moses considered this, he took the following course to cover their nakedness, to expiate their sins, to regain the favour of God, and by punishing the most eminent and incorrigible offenders, to bring the rest to repentance. Aaron had made them naked, as Ahaz is said to have made Judah naked, 2 Chron. xxviii. 19. Quest. How were they made naked or ashamed amongst their enemies, when at this time they were in their own camp, remote from all their enemies? Ans. He speaks not only of their present shame, but of their everlasting reproach, especially among their and God's enemies, who, being constant to their idols, would justly scorn the Israelites for their levity in forsaking their God so quickly and easily. See Jer. ii. 11. But the Hebrew word may be, and is by some, translated thus, amongst those that do or shall rise up or be born of them, i. e. that shall succeed them; for so the word rising is used Exod. i. 8; Matt. xi. 11. And so the Chaldee here renders it, amongst their generations; and the other Chaldee interpreter, and the Syriac, in their latter days, or in after-times. So the sense is, that Aaron had put a note of perpetual infamy upon them, even to all after-ages.

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

He chose the gate of the camp, 1. As the usual place of judicature. 2. That he might withdraw himself from the company of idolaters as far as he might. 3. As a fit place of concourse and resort for those that were on God's side. 4. To prevent the escape of the greatest delinquents, the rest of the camp being probably surrounded with some trench, or such like thing, else gates had been superfluous and unprofitable. Who is on the Lord's side? who will take God's part, and plead his cause against idolatry and idolaters? All the sons of Levi, i. e. the most of that tribe, as that universal particle is oft understood; for some of them were destroyed as guilty.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and ^hslay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

The meaning is, slay every principal offender whom you meet with, without any indulgence or exception, though brother, or companion, or neighbour. There was no fear of killing the innocent in this case, because, 1. The people were generally guilty. 2. Moses had called to himself all that were on God's side, who thereby were separated from the guilty. 3. The innocent might easily be discerned from the transgressors, either by the personal knowledge which the Levites or others had of the most forward idolaters, or by their abiding in their tents as ashamed and grieving for their sin, whilst the transgressors were impudently walking about in the camp, as trusting to their numbers; or by the direction of God's providence, if not by some visible token.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

And no more, for it is probable they slew only those whom they knew to have been the ringleaders to others in this mischief.

29 ⁱ ¶ For Moses had said, ^jConsecrate yourselves to day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

Moses said, Consecrate yourselves to day to the LORD, because every man hath been against his son, and against his brother, &c. ^kFill your hands.

^a Deut. 9. 16, 17.

^a Deut. 9. 21.

^b Gen. 30. 9. & 26. 10.

^c ch. 14. 11. & 15. 24. & 16. 2. 20. 28. & 17. 2. 4.

^d ver. 1.

^e ver. 4.

^f ch. 33. 4, 5. ^g 2 Chron. 28. 18. ^h Heb. those that rose up against them.

^h Num. 25. 8. Deut. 33. 9.

ⁱ Num. 25. 11, 12, 13. Deut. 13. 6. — 11. & 33. 9, 10. 1 Sam. 15. 18, 22. Prov. 21. 3. Eccl. 13. 3. Matt. 10. 37. ^j Or, And Offer up yourselves to the honour and service of the Lord in this work, which because it was joined with the hazard of their lives, he calls it a consecration or oblation of themselves, as Abraham for the like reason is said to have offered up Isaac. Consecrate yourselves, Heb. fill your hands, &c., i. e. offer a sacrifice, for so that phrase is oft used, as Exod. xxviii. 41; Judg. xvii. 5, 12. That work of justice which they were going to execute might seem an inhuman and barbarous act, but he tells them it was an acceptable sacrifice to God, as the destruction of God's enemies is called a sacrifice, Isa. xxxiv. 6; Ezek. xxxix. 17. Or he hereby intimates that this tribe was designed by God for his immediate service, and therefore recommends this work to them as an excellent initiation into their office, and as a demonstration that they were in some sort worthy of that great trust.

30 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, ^kYe have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; ^lperadventure I shall ^mmake an atonement for your sin.

He speaks doubtfully, partly because he was uncertain how far God would pardon them, and partly to quicken them to the more serious practice of repentance.

31 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have ^omade them gods of gold.

32 Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, ^pblot me, I pray thee, ^qout of thy book which thou hast written.

If thou wilt forgive their sin; understand here, forgive it, or, or it is well, or, I and others shall praise thy name. His great passion for his people stops his words, and makes his speech imperfect. Out of thy book, i. e. out of the book of life, as appears by comparing this with other places, as Psal. lxxix. 28; Dan. xii. 1; Luke x. 20; Phil. iv. 3; Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8; xx. 12; or out of the catalogue or number of those that shall be saved. I suppose Moses doth not in this case wish his eternal damnation, because that state implies both wickedness in himself, and the dishonour of God, but his annihilation, or the utter loss of this life, and of that to come, and of all the happiness of both of them. Nor doth Moses simply desire this, but only comparatively expresseth his singular zeal for God's glory, and charity to his people; signifying, that the very thoughts of the destruction of God's people, and of the reproach and blasphemy which would be cast upon God by means thereof, were so grievous and intolerable to him, that he rather wisheth, if it were possible, that God would accept of him as a sacrifice in their stead, and by his utter destruction prevent so great a mischief. And it is to be considered that Moses speaks this, as also many other things, as the mediator between God and Israel, and as the type of the true Mediator, Jesus Christ, who was in effect to suffer this which Moses was content to suffer.

33 And the LORD said unto Moses, ^rWhosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

Whosoever hath sinned, or, doth sin, to wit, presumptuously, obstinately, and impenitently, him will I cut off out of the land of the living, and eternally deprive of my favour and glory, and not thee who art innocent and righteous.

34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: ^sbehold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless ^tin the day when I visit I will visit their sin upon them.

Behold, mine angel; not Christ, the Angel of the covenant, who had hitherto gone before them; but a created angel, as appears by comparing this with Exod. xxxiii. 2, 3, 12; though Moses obtained the revocation of this threatening, Exod. xxxiii. 14, 17. I will visit their sin upon them; when I shall punish them for their other sins, which I foresee they will commit, I will remember and punish this also.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because ^uthey made the calf, which Aaron made.

This relates either to the destruction of three thousand of them by the Levites, or rather to the future plagues, in which God also reckoned with them for this sin. Because they made the calf; they made it because they urged Aaron to make it, as Judas is said to purchase the field, Acts i. 18, which was purchased by his money; and Aaron made it, by giving command to make it. The Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, and Samaritan render the words thus, they worshipped or sacrificed to the calf which Aaron made. And the word which signifies to make, is oft used for worshipping or sacrificing, as Exod. x. 25; Judg. xiii. 15; 1 Kings xviii. 26.

CHAP. XXXIII.

God refuseth to go with the people as formerly, 1—3. The people mourn, 4. God's command what to say to the children of Israel, 5. They mourn, and lay by their ornaments, 6. Moses pitcheth the tabernacle without the camp, 7; and going in, God speaks to him, 8, 9. A cloudy pillar descendeth on it, 10. God speaks to Moses face to face, 11. He prays for his guidance and presence, 12—16. God promises him, 14, 17; proclaims his name, 19. His face can be seen by no man, 20—23.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Depart, and go up hence, thou ^aand the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I swear unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, ^bUnto thy seed will I give it:

2 ^cAnd I will send an angel before thee; ^dand I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite:

3 ^eUnto a land flowing with milk and honey: ^ffor I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou ^gart a ^hstiffnecked people: lest ⁱI consume thee in the way.

I will not go up in the midst of thee by my own special and gracious presence, as hitherto I have done, but I will depart from thee. In pursuance hereof God removes his tabernacle without the camp, ver. 7. I will only make good my promise to thy fathers, and send an angel to accomplish it, but I will show no peculiar and further kindness to thee. Lest I consume thee in the way; lest thy sins should be aggravated by my presence and favour, and thereby I should be provoked utterly to destroy thee. So he shows that their perverseness makes this severity necessary for them, and that God even in his judgment remembers mercy to them.

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings, ^jthey mourned: ^kand no man did put on him his ornaments.

Their precious garments or jewels, which the women reserved, as we saw, ver. 3. This was a visible sign and profession of their inward humiliation and repentance for their sin, and of their deep sense of God's displeasure.

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, ^lYe are a stiffnecked people: I will come up ^minto the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may ⁿknow what to do unto thee.

I will come up into the midst of thee, to wit, in anger;

k 1 Sam. 12.
20, 23.
Luke 15. 18.
1 2 Sam. 15.
12.
Amos 5. 15.
m Num. 23.
13.

He speaks doubtfully, partly because he was uncertain how far God would pardon them, and partly to quicken them to the more serious practice of repentance.

n Deut. 9. 18.
o ch. 20. 2A.

p Ps. 69. 2A.
Rom. 9. 3.
q 1^a. 56. 8.
& 130. 15.
Dan. 12. 1.
Phil. 4. 3.
Rev. 3. 5.
& 13. 8. &
17. 8. & 20. 12, 15. & 21. 27. & 22. 19.

If thou wilt forgive their sin; understand here, forgive it, or, or it is well, or, I and others shall praise thy name. His great passion for his people stops his words, and makes his speech imperfect. Out of thy book, i. e. out of the book of life, as appears by comparing this with other places, as Psal. lxxix. 28; Dan. xii. 1; Luke x. 20; Phil. iv. 3; Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8; xx. 12; or out of the catalogue or number of those that shall be saved. I suppose Moses doth not in this case wish his eternal damnation, because that state implies both wickedness in himself, and the dishonour of God, but his annihilation, or the utter loss of this life, and of that to come, and of all the happiness of both of them. Nor doth Moses simply desire this, but only comparatively expresseth his singular zeal for God's glory, and charity to his people; signifying, that the very thoughts of the destruction of God's people, and of the reproach and blasphemy which would be cast upon God by means thereof, were so grievous and intolerable to him, that he rather wisheth, if it were possible, that God would accept of him as a sacrifice in their stead, and by his utter destruction prevent so great a mischief. And it is to be considered that Moses speaks this, as also many other things, as the mediator between God and Israel, and as the type of the true Mediator, Jesus Christ, who was in effect to suffer this which Moses was content to suffer.

r Lev. 23. 30.
1 Ezek. 18. 4.

Whosoever hath sinned, or, doth sin, to wit, presumptuously, obstinately, and impenitently, him will I cut off out of the land of the living, and eternally deprive of my favour and glory, and not thee who art innocent and righteous.

s ch. 33. 2,
14, &c.
Num. 20. 16.
1 Deut. 32. 23.
Amos 3. 14.
Rom. 2. 5, 8.

Behold, mine angel; not Christ, the Angel of the covenant, who had hitherto gone before them; but a created angel, as appears by comparing this with Exod. xxxiii. 2, 3, 12; though Moses obtained the revocation of this threatening, Exod. xxxiii. 14, 17. I will visit their sin

u 2 Sam. 12.
9. Acts 7. 41.

a ch. 32. 7.

b Gen. 12. 7.
ch. 32. 13.

c ch. 32. 34.
& 34. 11.
d Deut. 7. 22.
Josh. 24. 11.

e ch. 3. 8.
f ver. 15, 17.
g ch. 32. 9.
& 34. 9.
Deut. 9. 6, 13.
h ch. 23. 21.
& 32. 10.
Num. 16. 21,
46.

I will not go up in the midst of thee by my own special and gracious presence, as hitherto I have done, but I will depart from thee. In pursuance hereof God removes his tabernacle without the camp, ver. 7. I will only make good my promise to thy fathers, and send an angel to accomplish it, but I will show no peculiar and further kindness to thee. Lest I consume thee in the way; lest thy sins should be aggravated by my presence and favour, and thereby I should be provoked utterly to destroy thee. So he shows that their perverseness makes this severity necessary for them, and that God even in his judgment remembers mercy to them.

j Num. 14.
1, 39.
k Lev. 10. 6.
2 Sam. 10. 24.
1 Kin. 21. 27.
2 Kin. 10. 1.

Esth. 4. 1, 4. Ezra 9. 3. Job 1. 20. & 2. 12. Is. 32. 11. Ezek. 24. 17, 23. & 26. 16.

l ver. 3.
m See Num.
16. 45, 46.

n Deut. 8. 2.
Ps. 130. 23.

not in favour, ver. 3, where the words are the same, but the sense differing, and consume thee. Object. But God had promised he would not do so, ver. 3. Answer. That was signified to Moses, not to the people, to whom the threatening was most proper and profitable; and this threatening hath a condition implied, to wit, except they repent, as the next words plainly show. That I may know what to do unto thee; that I may either inflict my judgments, or suspend them, as thou art penitent or impenitent.

6 And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

7 And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, ° and called it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

The tabernacle was a tent set up by Moses for the people to meet in for sacrifice and seeking of God, and other parts of God's worship, until the great tabernacle should be finished; for such a place was necessary, or highly expedient for that use, and therefore it is not probable they would be without it for a year's space. Afar off from the camp; in testimony of God's alienation from them, and displeasure against them, this being a kind of excommunication; and all was too little to bring them to a thorough repentance. The tabernacle of the congregation; it was so before, but he called it so now, to show that God had not wholly forsaken them; and that if they truly repented, he still permitted them to come into his presence, and to seek the Lord. Every one which sought the Lord; either for his favour, or for counsel and direction. See Exod. xviii. 15, 19, 20.

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and stood every man at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

Testifying their grief for God's departure, their respect to Moses, whom they had lately despised, their earnest desire of his intercession for them, their longing for God's favour, and their humble expectation of a gracious return from God by the hands of Moses.

9 And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD talked with Moses.

Whereby God testified his approbation of Moses, and of that which Moses had done, which might seem to some severe and cruel.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle door: and all the people rose up and worshipped, every man in his tent door.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

Face to face, or, mouth to mouth, as Numb. xii. 8. Not that God hath face or mouth, or that Moses could behold it, which is denied, ver. 20. But the sense is, he spake with him freely and familiarly, and immediately, not by an angel in a dream or vision, as he did to other prophets. See Deut. xxxiv. 10.

Joshua abode in the tabernacle, either to keep it from injury or inconvenience; for as it was set up by man's help, so it needed man's care to preserve it; or to assist and direct those who resorted thither to seek God in Moses's absence. And Joshua seems to be appointed for this work rather than Aaron, or any other of the elders, because they had one way or other been guilty of the late idolatry, and God would hereby punish them with a temporary suspension from his service, and their office.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

Whom thou wilt send with me, i. e. what angel it is, whether it be a created angel, for then I profess I am unsatisfied with him, ver. 15; or the same uncreated Angel Christ, who hath hitherto accompanied us, and then I am content. But I am at a great loss by thy withdrawing thy cloudy pillar from the people to whom it is to be a guide. I know thee by name, i. e. distinctly and familiarly, as one whom I have much converse with, and great kindness for; thy name is written in my book. Compare Exod. xxxii. 32, 33; Psal. lxxxvii. 5, 6; Phil. iv. 3. And knowing here notes approbation and affection, as Psal. i. 6; Matt. vii. 23: compare Jer. i. 5.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is thy people.

Show me now thy way; the course and manner of thy dealings with men, and particularly thy purpose and will concerning me and thy people, and the method which thou wilt choose for the fulfilling of thy promise, and the course which thou wouldst have me take, and the way by which I shall conduct thy people to the Promised Land. That I may know thee, i. e. thy mind herein; men are said to know God when they know his mind and will; or that I may experimentally know thee to be what thou hast promised thou wilt be to me and to thy people; or rather, that I may thereby know thee, namely, that I shall find grace in thy sight, as it follows; that I may be assured that thou wilt be reconciled to and present with me and thy people. Thy people, both by thy own choice and purpose, and promise to their parents, and by their recognition of thee for their God, and their returning to thee again.

14 And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

My presence, Heb. my face, i. e. I myself, by comparing this with 2 Sam. xvii. 11. The Angel of my presence, Isa. lxiii. 9; the pledge of my presence, the cloudy pillar; and I will not turn thee over to an angel, as I threatened, ver. 2. See Deut. iv. 34. I will give thee rest; not only rest from thy present anguish and perplexity of mind for thy people, but in due time I will bring them to their resting-place and settled habitation; for it is evident from ver. 15, 16, that Moses's care and prayer was more for the people than for himself.

15 And he said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

Let us rather live and die in the wilderness with thy presence and favour, than go into Canaan without it; for even that promise of rest I value not without thy presence. So he echoes back God's words to himself, and turns God's promise into a prayer.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

Wherein shall it be known here? by what other token shall other nations and after-ages know? So shall we be separated, i. e. distinguished by thy peculiar kindness and privileges afforded to us. Or, be made wonderful, or eminent, or glorious above all other people.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, I

o ch. 29. 42, 43.

p Deut. 4. 29. 2 Sam. 21. 1.

q Num. 16. 27.

r ch. 25. 22. & 31. 18. Ps. 99. 7.

s ch. 4. 31.

t Gen. 32. 30. Num. 12. 8. Deut. 34. 10.

u ch. 24. 13.

x ch. 32. 34.

y ver. 17. Gen. 16. 19. Ps. 1. 6. Jer. 1. 5. John 10. 14, 15. 2 Tim. 2. 19.

z ch. 34. 9.

a Ps. 25. 4. & 27. 11. & 96. 11. & 118. 32. & Deut. 9. 26, 29. Joel 2. 17.

c ch. 13. 21. & 40. 34-36. Is. 63. 9. d Deut. 3. 20.

Josh. 21. 44. & 22. 4. & 23. 1. Ps. 95. 11.

e ver. 3. ch. 34. 9.

f Num. 14. 14. g ch. 34. 10. Deut. 4. 7. 24. 2 Sam. 7. 23. 1 Kings 8. 53. Ps. 147. 20.

h Gen. 19. 21. Jan. 8. 16.

will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for ¹thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 And he said, I beseech thee, shew me ^kthy glory.

^le. Thy glorious majesty, the brightness of thy countenance, some such manifestation of thyself as becomes thy excellency, and such as shall be seen in the other life; or that glorious shape which, together with a human voice, thou hast now assumed. But for the essence of God, as that was and is and ever will be invisible to bodily eyes, 1 Tim. vi. 16, so a man of such great reason and deep knowledge in Divine things, and universal learning, could not be ignorant of it, and therefore would not desire it.

19 And he said, ¹I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; ²and will be ³gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

All my goodness, or, my beauty; for so that Hebrew word is sometimes used, Gen. vi. 2; 1 Sam. ix. 2; or my excellency, or my glory, as appears from ver. 22, which was the thing Moses desired to see; and the difference between his request and God's answer doth not lie in glory and goodness, but in showing his glory so as Moses might gaze upon it, and making it only, as it follows, to pass before him, to wit, in a sudden and very transitory vision; though it may be understood properly of God's goodness and kindness to men, of which the following words speak, and that was the great, if not the only thing ascribed to God, chap. xxxiv. 6, 7. The name of the Lord, i. e. my name; the noun for the pronoun, as is very frequent. I will give thee notice when I come, that thou mayst attend; I will not surprise thee, nor steal by thee. Or will proclaim, or publish of the name of the Lord, or of my name, i. e. some part of it, especially my goodness, which may seem to be here principally intended, 1. By comparing this with chap. xxxiv. 6, 7. 2. By the following words, which seem a limitation of this general expression: q. d. I will proclaim, manifest, and impart my goodness, but with a difference, not to all men, but to whom I please. 3. By other places, where the name of the Lord is principally, if not solely, understood of his goodness, as Isa. l. 10, and in many places of the Psalms. I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious: this may seem to be added, with reference to the people for whom Moses is interceding, lest Moses should misunderstand or misapply what is said here, and chap. xxxiv. 6, 7. The sense is, I will show this peculiar favour to thee, I will also be gracious towards the people thou pleadest for, but not promiscuously. Some of them I will severely and eternally punish for this and their other sins; and some of them I will pardon and save, not because they are righteous, or innocent, or less sinners than the rest, but merely out of my own good pleasure and most free grace, whereby I will show mercy to some, when I will not show mercy to others. Thus this place is interpreted by the apostle, Rom. ix. 16, &c.

20 And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for ^othere shall no man see me, and I will live.

My face; either, 1. My essence. But that no man can see, neither in this life, nor in the next. Or rather, 2. My glorious presence.

This may note either, 1. God's purpose that that blissful vision of God in glory shall be given to no man here, but is reserved for the future life. Or rather, 2. The impossibility of the thing from man's weakness, which is such, that if God should display all the beams of his glory to him, it would certainly astonish, overwhelm, and destroy him.

21 And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:

There is a place by me, in this mountain where my residence and glorious presence now is, and in that part of it whence my voice now cometh to thine ears.

22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory

passeth by, that I will put thee ^pin a cliff of the rock, and will ^qcover thee with my hand while I pass by:

That thou mayst not be undone by thy own desires, nor swallowed up with the sight of my glory.

23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts: but my face shall ^rnot be seen.

My back parts, i. e. imperfectly and in part, as when we see only a man's back parts, and not his face. Thou shalt see a shadow or obscure delineation of my glory, as much as thou canst bear, though not as much as thou dost desire.

CHAP. XXXIV.

God commands Moses to hew two tables of stone like the former, wherein he promises to write, 1. Moses goes with these tables up to the mount, 4. God descends in a cloud, 5. He proclaims his name, 6, 7. Moses worships, 8, 9. God making a covenant with the people, commands them not to make a covenant with their enemies, 10—12; bids them beware of molten gods, 13—17. The feast of unleavened bread, 18. To rest on the sabbath day, 21. Other laws, 22—26. Moses wrote these words, 27. The time of Moses's abode on the mount, 28. Moses's face shining, 29, is covered, 33—35. He acquaints the people with what the Lord told him, 31, 32.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, ^aHew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: ^band I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.

The first tables were made immediately by God, who of his own mere grace and good pleasure, and without man's merit or contrivance, entered into covenant with Abraham and his seed. These tables must be made by Moses, partly in token of God's displeasure for their sin, and partly to signify, that though the covenant of grace was first made without man's care and counsel, yet it should not be renewed but by man's repentance. And as the tables of stone signified the hardness of their hearts, so the hewing of them by Moses might signify the circumcision and ploughing up of their hearts, that they might be fit for the receiving of God's mercies, and the performance of their duties. The words that were in the first tables; to show God's reception of Israel into his favour, and their former state, and that the law and covenant of God was neither abolished nor changed by their sin.

2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me ^cin the top of the mount.

3 And no man shall ^dcome up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.

This is said, not for the beasts, which are not capable of a law, but to restrain the presumption and curiosity of the people, by this argument, that even the beasts that come too near shall be destroyed, and much more man, whose knowledge aggravates his sin and punishment.

4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.

5 And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and ^eproclaimed the name of the LORD.

In the cloud; in the cloudy pillar, which ordinarily stood up in the air above the mount, but came down to the top of it when God spake with Moses. See Exod. xxxiii. 9; Numb. xi. 17, 25. Stood with him there, to wit, in the ^k ver. 20.

^l Tim. 6. 16.

^m Rom. 9.

ⁿ Rom. 4. 4.

^o Gen. 32. 30.

^p Deut. 5. 24.

^q Judg. 6. 22.

^r 13. 22.

^s Is. 6. 5.

^t Rev. 1. 15, 17.

^u See ch. 24. 10.

^v ch. 34. 5, 6, 7.

^w Jer. 31. 14.

^x Rom. 9.

^y 15, 16, 18.

^z Rom. 4. 4.

^{aa} 16.

^{ab} Rom. 9.

^{ac} 15, 16, 18.

^{ad} Rom. 4. 4.

^{ae} 16.

^f ver. 20.

^g John 1. 18.

^{ah} ch. 32. 16.

^{ai} 19.

^{aj} Deut. 10. 1.

^{ak} ver. 28.

^{al} Deut. 10. 2, 4.

^{am} ch. 19. 20.

^{an} & 24. 12.

^{ao} ch. 19. 12.

^{ap} 13, 21.

^{aq} ch. 33. 19.

^{ar} Num. 14. 17.

mount, ver. 2, 4, and the cliff of a rock, chap. xxxiii. 22, which was in the mount, and near the top of it, as appears by comparing these places together.

6 And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth,

The Lord God: this title shows his glorious being, power, and authority; the following titles note his goodness to men. Abundant in goodness and truth; in fulfilling all his gracious promises made to Abraham, and to his seed, and to all his people; wherein he is said to be abundant, because he generally is better than his word, and gives more than he promised. There is a truth in Divine threatenings, but here the situation of this word in the midst of the attributes of Divine goodness plainly shows that it is to be restrained to the promises; this being usual and reasonable, that general words have their signification limited by the context. And indeed here seems to be a hendyadis, goodness and truth, for true, sincere, and hearty goodness, as mercy and truth are oft put for true and real mercy. See Psal. xxv. 10; lvii. 3, &c.

7 Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation.

For thousands; the Chaldee and some others render it, for a thousand generations. Iniquity, and transgression, and sin; sins of all sorts and sizes, secret or open, infirmities or presumptions, against God or men, as the heap of various words here put together signifies. That will by no means clear the guilty: this is commonly esteemed a title of justice or vengeance, which is here added by way of correction, lest men should mistake or abuse God's mercy. God is most gracious indeed, but so as he is also just, and will not pity nor spare impudent and impenitent transgressors, but will severely punish them. And the Jewish doctors hereupon observe, that the mercy of God doth far exceed his justice; here being, as they number them, thirteen attributes of mercy, and but one of justice. But this translation and interpretation is rejected by some late learned interpreters, who make this an attribute of God's goodness or clemency, and render the words thus, In destroying he will not utterly destroy, though visiting, &c.: q. d. He is so gracious, that though he will severely punish the iniquity of the fathers, and especially their idolatry, upon themselves, and upon their children, &c., as he hath said, Exod. xx. 5, yet in judgment he will remember mercy, and will not utterly destroy his people for their sins. There are many things which favour this interpretation. 1. This suits most with Moses's solicitude and prayer for the people of Israel, which was that God would not utterly destroy them, as he threatened to do. 2. This sense best agrees with God's promise, chap. xxxiii. 19, I will make all my goodness pass before thee; which general promise is particularly explained and performed in these two verses. 3. This place doth not speak of God's disposition and carriage towards his enemies, against whom he proceeds with great severity, and commands the Israelites to do so in the verses here following; but towards his people, whose cause Moses is all along pleading with God. See chap. xxxii. 11—13, 31, 32; xxxiii. 13, 15; xxxiv. 9. 4. The Hebrew verb here used frequently signifies to make empty or desolate, to empty men of their goods, or places of men. See Isa. iii. 26; Amos iv. 6. So here, he will not utterly empty or destroy: though he will leave the marks of his vengeance for this sin upon thy people, even to their third and fourth generation; or, if it may be, further; yet he will not utterly root them out, which is the great thing thou fearest and labourest to prevent. And this very phrase, here used, we have in Jer. xxx. 11, and repeated Jer. xlii. 28, where, though interpreters generally render it, I will not leave thee altogether unpunished, which may make a good sense, yet it seems much better to be rendered, I will not utterly destroy thee, (1.) Because hereby these words exactly answer to the foregoing clause, yet will I not make a full end of thee, and so the same thing is elegantly repeated in other words, which is very frequent in Scripture. (2.) Because here is an opposition between the severity God useth to other people, and the kindness he useth to his own people, which is manifest in the former member of the verse, and therefore most probable and agreeable in this. 5. This is much confirmed from Numb. xiv. 18, where Moses, pleading with God for the pardon of his people's sin, useth this very phrase and argument, as taken out of God's mouth, which in this sense is very proper and prevalent, Thou hast said, that even when thou dost visit iniquity, &c., thou wilt not utterly destroy them. And God answers him, ver. 20, I have pardoned according to thy word, i. e. so as not utterly to destroy them. But truly as I live, &c., ver. 21—23, i. e. But I will severely punish them. But if this had been the meaning, Lord, thou hast said—thou wilt by no means clear the guilty, as we render it, it was a most improper argument, and put a sword into the Lord's hand to slay them even by virtue of this consideration.

8 And Moses made haste, and bowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped.

9 And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O LORD, let my Lord, I pray thee, go among us; for it is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.

It is a stiff-necked people, and therefore need thy glorious and powerful presence to rule them. Or rather, though it be a stiff-necked people, as thou sayest, yet forsake them not. The Hebrew particle chi oft signifies though, as Exod. v. 11; Isa. liv. 6. Take us for thine inheritance, i. e. deal with us as men do with their inheritances, dwell among us, protect us, improve us.

10 ¶ And he said, Behold, I make a covenant: before all thy people I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD: for it is a terrible thing that I will do with thee.

Behold, I make a covenant, i. e. I do hereby renew my covenant with thy people which they had violated and voided by their sin. But the shortness of the phrase, there being no mention here of any with whom this covenant is made or renewed, and the following words, make it more probable that this covenant is nothing but a solemn promise or engagement that God will do the thing which here follows. And the word covenant is oft used for a mere promise, as Gen. ix. 9, &c.; Lev. xxiv. 8; Numb. xviii. 19; xxv. 12. It is a terrible thing that I will do with thee; either, 1. By thy ministry, as that phrase is sometimes used, as 1 Cor. xv. 10. Or, 2. In the midst of thee, i. e. of thy people, as ver. 11, before thee, i. e. before thy people. This I prefer, because the next verse explains this of such things as were not done by Moses's ministry, nor in his time, but afterwards.

11 Observe thou that which I command thee this day: behold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite.

12 Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee:

13 But ye shall destroy their altars, break their images, and cut down their groves:

Which at first were used by good men for their devotion,

n ch. 33. 15.
o ch. 33. 3.
p Deu. 32. 9.
Ps. 28. 9. &
33. 12. & 78.
62. & 94. 14.
Jer. 10. 16.
Zech. 2. 12.
q Deut. 5. 2.
& 29. 12, 14.
r Deu. 4. 32.
2 Sam. 7. 23.
Ps. 77. 14. &
78. 12. & 147.
20. s Deut. 10. 21.
Ps. 145. 6.
Is. 64. 3.
t Deut. 5. 32.
& 6. 3, 25. &
12. 29, 32. &
28. 1.
u ch. 33. 2.
x ch. 23. 32.
Deut. 7. 2.
Judg. 2. 2.
y ch. 23. 33.
z ch. 23. 24.
Deut. 12. 3.
Judg. 2. 2.
+ Heb. afraque.
a Deut. 7. 5.
& 12. 2.
Judg. 6. 25.
2 Kings 18. 4. & 23. 14.
2 Chron. 31. 1. & 34. 3, 4.

as Gen. xxi. 33; but afterwards being horribly abused to superstition and idolatry, were by God's command to be destroyed.

b ch. 20. 3, 5. 14 For thou shalt worship ^b no other god: for the LORD, whose ^c name is Jealous, is a ^d jealous God:

Whose name is Jealous; who hath made himself known by, and glories in that name, The jealous God, who cannot endure any competitor or corival; whereas the false and puny gods of the heathens were contented with multitudes of partners. So this is properly said to be the name of God, whereby he is known and distinguished from all other gods.

15 ^e Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they ^f go a whoring after their gods and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one ^g call thee, and thou ^h eat of his sacrifice;

A covenant, for cohabitation, or to suffer them quietly to live among you, whom you should drive out. Go a whoring, i. e. commit idolatry, which is oft called and compared to spiritual whoredom. See Jer. ii. ; iii. ; Ezek. xvi. And thou eat of his sacrifice, to wit, of the parts or remainders of his sacrifice, whereby thou wilt partake with him in an idolatrous worship; because such feasts were a part of the worship offered to the idol, and were accompanied with solemn benedictions and thanksgivings to the idol. See Numb. xxv. 2; Psal. cvi. 28; Ezek. xviii. 6; xxii. 9; 1 Cor. x. 20; Rev. ii. 20.

16 And thou take of ⁱ their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters ^k go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.

17 ^l Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.

Nor graven, nor any other, as it plainly appears both from the nature of the things, and from many parallel scriptures; but he mentions molten, because their late idol was of that kind.

18 ¶ The feast of ^m unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the ⁿ month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.

19 ^o All that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.

Heb. And (for that is, as the particle and is oft used; the words following here, and ver. 20, being a particular explication of the general sentence in the beginning of this verse) all thy cattle which (a particle oft understood) shall be born male, (as it is also explained Exod. xiii. 12.) the opening, or whatsoever (to wit, of the male kind) openeth the matrix (which word is fitly understood out of the former member, which is very usual) of ox or (and put for or, as it is oft done) sheep.

20 But ^p the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a ¶ lamb: and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me ^q empty.

Either without a gift to me, so it is a precept; or without benefit to himself, so it is a promise. See Exod. xxiii. 15.

21 ¶ Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing time and in harvest thou shalt rest.

Which times are expressed, because the great profit and seeming necessity of working at that time was likely to be a powerful temptation to make men break the sabbath.

22 ¶ And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the ^r year's end.

The feast of weeks, i. e. which is numbered by weeks, being just seven weeks after the passover, whence it is called pentecost, i. e. the fiftieth day, to wit, after the passover. See Lev. xxiii. 15; xxv. 8. The first-fruits of wheat harvest; so this is a designation of the time and business of the feast of weeks. The feast of ingathering, to wit, of the fruits of the earth. The year's end; so it was in regard of the jubilee and civil contracts.

23 ¶ Thrice in the year shall all your ^s menchildren appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.

24 For I will ^t cast out the nations before thee, and ^u enlarge thy borders; ^v neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.

I will cast out the nations; so thou shalt have no intestine enemy to do thee or thine mischief. This God promised to do, but upon condition of Israel's discharge of their duty in following God in this work of driving them out, which they neglecting, it was not fully done. Neither shall any man desire thy land; I will not only tie their hands, that they shall make no invasion upon you, but I will take off their thoughts and affections from such an enterprise, which it was very easy for God to effect many ways.

25 ^w Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven; ^x neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left unto the morning.

26 ^y The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. ^z Thou shalt not see the a kid in his mother's milk.

First of the first-fruits; thou shalt not delay to do this, but shalt bring the very first of them. Or, the first-fruits, even the first-fruits of thy land; which limitation seems here conveniently added, because they were not bound to bring thither all their first-fruits, to wit, those of their own bodies, their children.

27 And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou ^{aa} these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.

Object. God saith, I will write, ver. 1. Answer. 1. Moses was to write the ritual precepts mentioned here above, God wrote the moral law. 2. Moses wrote what he wrote in a book; see Exod. xxiv. 7; but what was written upon the tables of stone was written by God himself, not by Moses, who had no graving instruments with him in the mount, and could not without them write upon the stone.

28 ^{ab} And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And ^{ac} he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten ^{ad} commandments.

He was there forty days and forty nights; as he had been before, being now to renew the broken covenant. This forty days' fast of his is mentioned four times, Exod. xxiv. 18, and here, and Deut. ix. 18, and x. 10, but it is evident it was performed but twice, as the occasion of it happened only twice. He wrote, not Moses, but the Lord, as appears from ver. 1, and from Deut. x., the relative pronoun being here referred to the remoter antecedent, of which there are many instances, as Gen. x. 12; 1 Sam. xxi. 14; xxvii. 8; Psal. cxix. 6.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai with the ^{ae} two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, when he came down from the mount, that Moses wist not that ^{af} the skin of his face shone while he talked with him.

^r Heb. conclusion of the year

^s ch. 23. 14, 17.
^t Deut. 16. 16.
^u ch. 33. 2.
^v Lev. 18. 24.
^w Deut. 7. 1.
^x Ps. 78. 55.
^y Deut. 12. 20. & 19. 8.
^z See Gen. 35. 5.
^{aa} 2 Chr. 17. 10.
^{ab} Prov. 16. 7.
^{ac} Acts 18. 10.

^{ad} ch. 23. 14, 17.
^{ae} ch. 33. 2.
^{af} Lev. 18. 24.
^{ag} Deut. 7. 1.
^{ah} Ps. 78. 55.
^{ai} Deut. 12. 20. & 19. 8.
^{aj} See Gen. 35. 5.
^{ak} 2 Chr. 17. 10.
^{al} Prov. 16. 7.
^{am} Acts 18. 10.

^{an} ch. 23. 14, 17.
^{ao} ch. 33. 2.
^{ap} Lev. 18. 24.
^{aq} Deut. 7. 1.
^{ar} Ps. 78. 55.
^{as} Deut. 12. 20. & 19. 8.
^{at} See Gen. 35. 5.
^{au} 2 Chr. 17. 10.
^{av} Prov. 16. 7.
^{aw} Acts 18. 10.

^{ax} ch. 23. 14, 17.
^{ay} ch. 33. 2.
^{az} Lev. 18. 24.
^{ba} Deut. 7. 1.
^{bb} Ps. 78. 55.
^{bc} Deut. 12. 20. & 19. 8.
^{bd} See Gen. 35. 5.
^{be} 2 Chr. 17. 10.
^{bf} Prov. 16. 7.
^{bg} Acts 18. 10.

^{bh} ch. 23. 19.
^{bi} Deut. 26. 2.
^{bj} 10.
^{bk} ch. 23. 19.
^{bl} Deut. 14. 21.

^{bm} ch. 23. 19.
^{bn} Deut. 26. 2.
^{bo} 10.
^{bp} ch. 23. 19.
^{bq} Deut. 14. 21.

^{br} ver. 10.
^{bs} Deut. 4. 13.
^{bt} & 31. 9.

^{bu} ch. 24. 18.
^{bv} Deut. 9. 9, 12.
^{bw} ver. 1.
^{bx} ch. 31. 18.
^{by} & 32. 16.
^{bz} Deut. 4. 13.
^{ca} & 10. 2, 4.
^{cb} Heb. words.

^{cc} ch. 24. 18.
^{cd} Deut. 9. 9, 12.
^{ce} ver. 1.
^{cf} ch. 31. 18.
^{cg} & 32. 16.
^{ch} Deut. 4. 13.
^{ci} & 10. 2, 4.
^{cj} Heb. words.

^{ck} ch. 32. 15.
^{cl} Matt. 17. 2.
^{cm} 2 Cor. 3. 7.
^{cn} 13.

^e So 1s. 9. 6.
^f 57. 15.
^g ch. 20. 5.

^h ver. 12.
ⁱ Deut. 31.
^j 16. Judg. 2.
^k 17. Jer. 3. 9.
^l Ezek. 6. 9.
^m Num. 25. 2.
ⁿ 1 Cor. 10. 27.
^o 1 Ps. 106. 28.
^p 1 Cor. 8. 4.
^q 7. 10.

^r Deut. 7. 3.
^s 1 Kings 11.
^t 2 Ezra 9. 2.
^u Neh. 13. 23.
^v 1 Num. 25. 1, 2.
^w 1 Kings 11. 4.

^x ch. 22. 8.
^y Lev. 19. 4.

^z ch. 12. 15.
^{aa} 23. 15.

^{ab} ch. 13. 4.

^{ac} ch. 13. 2.
^{ad} & 22. 29.
^{ae} Ezek. 44. 30.
^{af} Luke 2. 23.

^{ag} ch. 13. 13.
^{ah} Num. 18. 15.
^{ai} Or, kid.

^{aj} ch. 23. 15.
^{ak} Deut. 16. 16.
^{al} 1 Sam. 9. 7, 8.
^{am} 2 Sam. 24. 24.

^{an} ch. 20. 9.
^{ao} & 23. 12.
^{ap} & 35. 2.
^{aq} Deut. 5. 12, 13.
^{ar} Luke 13. 14.

^{as} ch. 23. 16.
^{at} Deut. 16. 10.
^{au} 13.

Quest. Why now, and not when he came down from God before? Ans. 1. Because now he obtained what he did not before, to wit, a glimpse of the Divine glory, which, though but very transient, left its print upon his face. 2. Now it was more necessary than before, to procure the greater honour to Moses, and to the law, 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8, 11, because of the late horrid violation and contempt of them, which the Israelites had fallen into.

30 And when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him.

31 And Moses called unto them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him; and Moses talked with them.

Unto him, to the tabernacle, which was still at a distance from the camp, though afterwards, God being reconciled, it was set up in the camp, Exod. xl. 34.

32 And afterward all the children of Israel came nigh: and he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai.

33 And till Moses had done speaking with them, he put a vail on his face.

In condescension to their weakness.

34 But when Moses went in before the LORD to speak with him, he took the vail off, until he came out. And he came out, and spake unto the children of Israel that which he was commanded.

35 And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone: and Moses put the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

CHAP. XXXV.

The command to observe the sabbath, 1—3; and to bring a free-will offering to the Lord, 4, 5. The furniture of the tabernacle, 6—19. Men and women bring their jewels for the same, 20—24. Understanding women spin, 25, 26. The chief of the people bring in precious stones and spices, 27—29. God endues Bezaleel and Aholiab with a spirit of wisdom for this work, 30—35.

AND Moses gathered all the congregation of the children of Israel together, and said unto them, *These are the words which the LORD hath commanded, that ye should do them.

2 Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you †an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the LORD: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death.

This command of the sabbath is repeated here, as also Exod. xxxi. 13, together with the instructions for the building of the tabernacle, and its utensils, to show that they were made for no other use than the service of God, which was to be performed, as every day, so in an eminent and peculiar manner upon the sabbath day, and to teach them the absolute necessity of minding that precept in and above all their ceremonial observations.

3 Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day.

This command seems to be only temporary and extraordinary during the present season and condition, and not extending to succeeding generations. For, 1. There are instances of temporary precepts both in the Old and New Testament, which yet are not in their places said to be so. Such were some of the precepts concerning the passover, Exod. xii. 11, as is confessed. And such was that law of abstaining from things strangled, and blood, Acts xv. 2.

This precept is nakedly proposed, and not called a perpetual statute, nor enjoined to be observed in their generations, as other precepts are, to whom those, or some like clauses, are frequently added. 3. The sabbath is rather a feast day than a fast day. And the Jews did make feasts, and invited guests upon the sabbath day, which could not probably be without kindling a fire. And, which is more considerable, Christ himself, who fulfilled all righteousness, and therefore would not have joined in the violation of the sabbath, went to one of those feasts, Luke xiv. And the Corinthians, as they received the Lord's supper upon that day, which none question, so they had their feasts, as is confessed and apparent from 1 Cor. xi. 21, 22, &c. 4. The kindling of a fire was no greater hinderance to the religious observation of the sabbath, than other things which were allowed upon that day, such as the washing and dressing of themselves, eating and drinking, &c. 5. This prohibition doth not seem to concern the dressing of meat, as many understand it, by comparing this with Exod. xvi. 23, (which place I humbly conceive is misunderstood, as I have there intimated, for that was lawful to be done upon their most solemn days, Exod. xii. 16.) but the service of the tabernacle, which is the subject of this chapter, and the occasion of these words; and the sense seems to be this, You shall kindle no fire for any handiwork throughout your habitation, no, not for the service of this tabernacle, for the heating of any tools, or the melting of any metals, or other things belonging to it, which being to be made for God's service, and deserving and requiring all expedition, they might probably conceive that such work might be done upon that day. And here also, as oft elsewhere, under one kind, all the rest are comprehended and forbidden.

4 ¶ And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD commanded, saying,

5 Take ye from among you an offering unto the LORD: whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold, and silver, and brass, Whosoever is of a willing heart, for God values not forced or grudging services, 2 Cor. ix. 7.

6 And blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair,

7 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood,

8 And oil for the light, and spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense,

9 And onyx stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate.

10 And every wise hearted among you shall come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded;

i. e. Every skilful artist; for though God had prescribed the things, yet it required wisdom and skill to execute what God commanded.

11 The tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets,

The tabernacle, i. e. the boards or structure of the tabernacle, as it appears, because it is distinguished here from its tent and curtains; whereas elsewhere the tabernacle is put for all together. His tent; the inward and finer curtains which covered the boards of it. His covering; the outward and coarser coverings.

12 The ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy seat, and the vail of the covering,

i. e. Which was hanged before the ark and mercy-seat.

13 The table, and his staves, and all his vessels, and the shewbread,

But neither did God prescribe the making of the shewbread amongst the other utensils, Exod. xxv., nor was this

b ch. 29. 9.
& 31. 14, 15.
Lev. 23. 3.
Num. 15. 32,
&c.
Deut. 5. 12.
Luke 13. 14.
+ Heb.
holiness.

a ch. 34. 32.

d ch. 25. 1, 2.

e ch. 23. 2.

g ch. 31. 6.

h ch. 26. 1, 2, &c.

i ch. 25. 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

i ch. 25. 10, &c.

made by the workmen here spoken of, but by others. How then comes this to be mentioned here? Ans. 1. The shew-bread may be here put for the vessels for the receiving the shew-bread, by a usual metonymy of the adjunct, the thing contained put for the thing containing; as treasures are put for the place where the treasures are put, Psal. cxxxv. 7; Matt. ii. 11; xii. 35, and the gifts or offerings of God for the treasury where they were put, Luke xxi. 4. Hence Tremellius renders this place, and the vessels of the shew-bread. Object. All the vessels of the table are mentioned before, of which this was one. Ans. It is not unusual after a general expression comprehending all distinctly, to name one eminent member of that kind, such as this unquestionably was, the table being made principally for this use. Thus Mark xvi. 7, Tell my disciples and Peter. Like examples are in 2 Sam. ii. 30; 1 Kings xi. 1; Psal. xviii. the title; Acts xi. 4, and in other authors. And for the particle vau, and, which may seem to imply that these were things of another kind, and not any vessels of the table, that is oft put for especially, as Josh. ii. 1; Mark xvi. 7, and so only notes an eminent thing of the same kind, as hath been said. Ans. 2. Though God did not prescribe the making of the shew-bread, yet he mentions it, together with the table, Exod. xxv. 30, and therefore it is conveniently mentioned with the table in this place also, where Moses, to show his exactness and fidelity, doth punctually repeat the same things to the people which he had received in command from God. In like manner the oil, which fed the light of the lamps, is mentioned here in the next verse, because the lighting of the lamps was prescribed, Exod. xxv. 37.

m ch. 25. 31,
&c.

n ch. 30. 1.

o ch. 30. 23.
p ch. 30. 34.

q ch. 27. 1.

r ch. 27. 9.

s ch. 31. 10.
& 39. 1, 41.
Num. 4. 5,
& 6, &c.

t ver. 5, 22,
26, 29.
ch. 25. 2.
& 36. 2.
1 Chron. 28.
2, 9, & 29. 9.
Ezra 7. 27.
2 Cor. 8. 12.
& 9. 7.

Whose heart stirred him up, i. e. whose heart being desirous and ready to serve God, engaged his hand to offer what he had to his service.

22 And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, and brought bracelets, and earrings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and every man that offered offered an offering of gold unto the LORD.

Earrings. Object. Aaron had got these from them for the making of the calf, Exod. xxxii. Ans. Though the generality of the people did then part with their earrings, yet there was a considerable number who did not, as being unsatisfied with that idolatrous design; and it may seem that the women would not part with theirs, being more fond of their ornaments than of their idols. See the notes on Exod. xxxii. 3.

23 And "every man, with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.

u 1 Chron.
29. 8.

24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found shittim wood for any work of the service, brought it.

25 And all the women that were "wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.

w ch. 28. 3.
& 31. 6, &c.
36. 1, 2 Kin.
23. 7. Prov.
31. 19, 22,
24.

26 And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun goats' hair.

In wisdom: this word seems better to agree with the following than with the foregoing word, they spun with wisdom, i. e. with skill and art.

27 And "the rulers brought onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; x 1 Chr. 29.

Ezra 2. 63.

28 And "spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.

y ch. 30. 23.

29 The children of Israel brought a "willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.

z ver. 21.
1 Chr. 29. 9.

30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, "the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;

a ch. 31. 2.
&c.

31 And he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship;

32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,

33 And in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.

34 And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and "Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.

b ch. 31. 6.

That he may teach, to wit, others to work under him; for the work required many hands; and it is a peculiar gift of God to be apt to teach, which every skilful man hath not.

35 Them hath he "filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.

c ver. 31.
ch. 31. 3, 6.
1 Kin. 7. 14.
2 Chr. 2. 14.
Is. 28. 25.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Moses committeth the work to Bezaleel and Aholiab, 1—4. The liberality of the people is forbid, 5, 6. The curtains of cherubims, 8—13. The curtains of goats' hair, &c. all belonging to the tabernacle, 14—38.

THEN wrought Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every "wise hearted man, in whom the LORD put wisdom and understanding 1491.

d ch. 28. 3.
& 31. 6, &c.
35. 10, 35.

b ch. 26. 8. to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the ^bsanctuary, according to all that the LORD had commanded.

Of the sanctuary, or, of the holy place, to wit, of the tabernacle, so called by a prolepsis and synecdoche.

2 And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one ^cwhose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it:

God had qualified them before, but that is not sufficient without a call.

3 And they received of Moses all the offering, which the children of Israel ^dhad brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free offerings every morning.

Which time they chose as the first and best part of the day, and therefore fittest for God's service.

4 And all the wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made;

5 ¶ And they spake unto Moses, saying, ^e"The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the LORD commanded to make."

6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing.

The women did part of this work as well as the men. See Exod. xxxv. 25.

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.

f ch. 26. 1. 8 ¶ And every wise hearted man among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims of cunning work made he them.

9 The length of one curtain was twenty and eight cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: the curtains were all of one size.

10 And he coupled the five curtains one unto another: and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another.

11 And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.

g ch. 26. 5. 12 ^g"Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another."

13 And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches: so it became one tabernacle.

h ch. 26. 7. 14 ¶ ^hAnd he made curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them.

i. e. For the outward covering of the tabernacle. See Exod. xxxv. 11.

15 The length of one curtain was thirty cubits, and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size.

16 And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves.

17 And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

18 And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.

19 ⁱAnd he made a covering for the ⁱ tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' skins above that.

20 ¶ ^kAnd he made boards for the ^k tabernacle of shittim wood, standing up.

21 The length of a board was ten cubits, and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half.

22 One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

23 And he made boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the south side southward:

24 And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

25 And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards,

26 And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

27 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards.

28 And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

29 And they were [†]coupled beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners.

30 And there were eight boards; and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, [†]under every board two sockets.

31 ¶ And he made ^lbars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle,

32 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacle for the sides westward.

33 And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other.

34 And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.

35 ¶ And he made ^ma veil of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: with cherubims made he it of cunning work.

To wit, the second veil, which separated between the holy place and the holy of holies, because the first veil is described ver. 37.

36 And he made thereunto four pillars of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold: their hooks were of gold; and he cast for them four sockets of silver.

37 ¶ And he made an ⁿhanging for the tabernacle door of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, [†]of needlework;

i ch. 26. 14.

k ch. 26. 15.

† Heb. twined.

† Heb. two sockets, two sockets under one board. l ch. 26. 28.

m ch. 26. 31.

n ch. 26. 36. † Heb. the work of a needleworker, or, embroiderer.

This door divided the holy place from the court.

38 And the five pillars of it with their hooks : and he overlaid their chapiters and their fillets with gold : but their five sockets were of brass.

Whereas the pillars are said to be overlaid with gold, Exod. xxvii. 37. that hence appears to be a synecdochical expression, in regard the tops and knobs of the pillars were wholly overlaid with gold, and the rest of the pillars adorned with divers golden girdles or hoops ; for that place is in all reason to be explained by this, as coming after it, and containing the execution of that prescript, and that more particularly than is there expressed.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Bezaleel makes the ark of shittim wood, 1—5. The mercy-seat with cherubims, 6—9. The table with its vessels, 10—16. The candlestick with its lamps and instruments, 17—21. The altar of incense, 25—28. The anointing oil, and sweet incense, 29.

^{a ch. 25. 10.} AND Bezaleel made ^athe ark of shittim wood : two cubits and a half was the length of it, and a cubit and a half the breadth of it, and a cubit and a half the height of it :

2 And he overlaid it with pure gold within and without, and made a crown of gold to it round about.

3 And he cast for it four rings of gold, to be set by the four corners of it ; even two rings upon the one side of it, and two rings upon the other side of it.

4 And he made staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold.

5 And he put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, to bear the ark.

^{b ch. 25. 17.} 6 ¶ And he made the ^bmercy seat of pure gold : two cubits and a half was the length thereof, and one cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

7 And he made two cherubims of gold, beaten out of one piece made he them, on the two ends of the mercy seat ;

^{¶ Or, out of,} 8 One cherub [¶] on the end on this [¶] side, and another cherub [¶] on the other end on that side : out of the mercy seat made he the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

On the end, or, made out of the end ; for they were to be of the same piece with the mercy-seat, Exod. xxv. 19.

9 And the cherubims spread out their wings on high, and covered with their wings over the mercy seat, with their faces one to another ; even on the mercy seatward were the faces of the cherubims.

^{c ch. 25. 23.} 10 ¶ And he made ^cthe table of shittim wood : two cubits was the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof :

11 And he overlaid it with pure gold, and made thereunto a crown of gold round about.

12 Also he made thereunto a border of an handbreadth round about ; and made a crown of gold for the border thereof round about.

13 And he cast for it four rings of gold, and out the rings upon the four corners that were in the four feet thereof.

14 Over against the border were the rings, the places for the staves to bear the table.

15 And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold, to bear the table.

16 And he made the vessels which were upon the table, his ^ddishes, and his ^{d ch. 25. 29.} spoons, and his bowls, and his covers [¶] to cover withal, of pure gold. ^{¶ Or, to pour out withal.}

17 ¶ And he made the ^ecandlestick of pure gold : of beaten work made he the candlestick ; his shaft, and his branch, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, were of the same :

18 And six branches going out of the sides thereof ; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side thereof, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side thereof :

19 Three bowls made after the fashion of almonds in one branch, a knop and a flower ; and three bowls made like almonds in another branch, a knop and a flower : so throughout the six branches going out of the candlestick.

20 And in the candlestick were four bowls made like almonds, his knops, and his flowers :

21 And a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches going out of it.

22 Their knops and their branches were of the same : all of it was one beaten work of pure gold.

23 And he made his seven lamps, and his snuffers, and his snuffdishes, of pure gold.

24 Of a talent of pure gold made he it, and all the vessels thereof.

25 ¶ And he made the incense altar ^{f ch. 30. 1.} of shittim wood : the length of it was a cubit, and the breadth of it a cubit ; it was foursquare ; and two cubits was the height of it ; the horns thereof were of the same.

26 And he overlaid it with pure gold, both the top of it, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns of it : also he made unto it a crown of gold round about.

27 And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal.

28 And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold.

29 ¶ And he made ^{g ch. 30. 23.}the holy anointing oil, and the pure incense of sweet spices, according to the work of the apothecary.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

The altar of burnt-offering, with its furniture, 1—7. The laver of brass, 8. The court, and the hangings thereof, 9—20. Bezaleel and Aholiab make all ready, 22, 23. The sums of what the people offered, 24—31.

AND ^{a ch. 27. 1.}he made the altar of burnt offering of shittim wood : five cubits was the length thereof, and five cubits the breadth thereof ; it was foursquare ; and three cubits the height thereof.

2 And he made the horns thereof on the four corners of it; the horns thereof were of the same: and he overlaid it with brass.

3 And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, and the fleshhooks, and the firepans: all the vessels thereof made he of brass.

4 And he made for the altar a brasen grate of network under the compass thereof beneath unto the midst of it.

5 And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of brass, to be places for the staves.

6 And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with brass.

7 And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal; he made the altar hollow with boards.

8 ¶ And he made ^bthe laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the ^{||}looking-glasses of the women †assembling, which assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

Looking-glasses, as now they are sometimes made of polished steel, so anciently were made of polished brass, as appears both from sacred and from profane writers. See Job xxxvii. 18; Phil. 33. 9, &c. The words following seem to note a company of religious women, who in a more peculiar manner devoted themselves to the service of God in or about his tabernacle, by fasting, prayer, &c. See 1 Sam. ii. 22; Luke ii. 37. And whereas some object that the tabernacle was not yet built, it may be replied, either that this is to be understood of the tabernacle spoken of Exod. xxxiii. 7, which might serve for that purpose till this was built; or that here is a prolepsis or anticipation, and that he speaks not of what the women now did, but of what they did after the tabernacle was built, which was before Moses writ these words.

9 ¶ And he made ^cthe court: on the south side southward the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits:

10 Their pillars were twenty, and their brasen sockets twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets were of silver.

Upon the hooks they hanged the beasts to be sacrificed, as the Jews affirm.

11 And for the north side the hangings were an hundred cubits, their pillars were twenty, and their sockets of brass twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the west side were hangings of fifty cubits, their pillars ten, and their sockets ten; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

13 And for the east side eastward fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of the one side of the gate were fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And for the other side of the court gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen.

17 And the sockets for the pillars were of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapters of silver; and all the pillars of the court were filleted with silver.

18 And the hanging for the gate of the court was needlework, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: and twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was five cubits, answerable to the hangings of the court.

The height relates to its standing or hanging upright, and the breadth relates to the hanging itself, and the height of the hanging was taken in the breadth.

19 And their pillars were four, and their sockets of brass four; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapters and their fillets of silver.

20 And all the ^dpins of the tabernacle, and of the court round about, were of brass.

21 ¶ This is the sum of the tabernacle, even of ^ethe tabernacle of testimony, as it was counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, son to Aaron the priest.

This doth not belong to the following account of gold and silver, but to the foregoing particulars of holy things relating to the tabernacle, for these only were committed to the care of the Levites, as it here follows, but this gold and silver was put into other hands. For the service of the Levites, i. e. for those holy uses and services which the Levites administered.

22 And ^fBezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the Lord commanded Moses.

23 And with him was Aholiab, son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

24 All the gold that was occupied for the work in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after ^hthe shekel of the sanctuary.

Every talent contained three thousand shekels. See Gen. xxiii. 15; Exod. xxx. 13. It is not said that all this gold and following silver were used about the building of the tabernacle, for the people brought much more than enough, Exod. xxxvi. 5. And these remains, it is probable, were put into the sacred treasury, to be used as occasion should require.

25 And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

26 ⁱA bekah for [†]every man, that is, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for every one that went to be numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for ^ksix hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty men.

27 And of the hundred talents of silver were cast ^lthe sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the vail: an hundred sockets of the hundred talents, a talent for a socket.

28 And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapters, and filleted them.

29 And the brass of the offering was seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred shekels.

30 And therewith he made the sockets to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and ^e Num. 1. 50, 53, & 9. 15, & 10. 11. & 17. 7, 8. & 18. 2. 2 Chr. 24. 6. Acts 7. 44. ^f Num. 4. 28, 35.

^g ch. 31. 2, 6.

^h ch. 30. 13, 24. Lev. 5. 15. & 27. 3, 25. Num. 3. 47. & 18. 16.

ⁱ ch. 30. 13, 15. [†] Heb. a poll.

^k Num. 1. 46.

^l ch. 26. 19, 21, 25, 32.

^b ch. 30. 18.

^{||} Or, brasen glasses. [†] Heb. assembling by troops, sa 1 Sam. 2. 22.

the brasen altar, and the brasen grate for it, and all the vessels of the altar, 31 And the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the court gate, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of the court round about.

CHAP. XXXIX.

The holy garments, 1. The ephod, 2—7. The breastplate, with twelve stones therein, 8—21. The robe of the ephod, 22—26. The coats, mitre, and girdle of fine linen, 27—29. The plate of the holy crown, 30, 31. All is viewed and approved by Moses, 32—43.

^a ch. 35. 23. AND of ^a the blue, and purple, and scarlet, they made ^b cloths of service, to do service in the holy place, and made the holy garments for Aaron; ^c as the LORD commanded Moses.

^d ch. 28. 6. 2 ^d And he made the ephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

3 And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, with cunning work.

4 They made shoulderpieces for it, to couple it together: by the two edges was it coupled together.

5 And the curious girdle of his ephod, that was upon it, was of the same, according to the work thereof; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^e ch. 28. 9. 6 ¶ ^e And they wrought onyx stones inclosed in ouches of gold, graven, as signets are graven, with the names of the children of Israel.

^f ch. 28. 12. 7 And he put them on the shoulders of the ephod, that they should be stones for ^f a memorial to the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

^g ch. 28. 15. 8 ¶ ^g And he made the breastplate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being doubled.

^h ch. 28. 17, ⁱ c. ^h And they set it in four rows of stones: the first row was a ¶ sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this was the first row.

11 And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

12 And the third row, a figure, an agate, and an amethyst.

13 And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their inclosings.

14 And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet, every one with his name, according to the twelve tribes.

15 And they made upon the breastplate chains at the ends, of wreathen work of pure gold.

16 And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings; and put the two rings in the two ends of the breastplate.

17 And they put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings on the ends of the breastplate.

18 And the two ends of the two wreathen chains they fastened in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, before it.

19 And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two ends of the breastplate, upon the border of it, which was on the side of the ephod inward.

20 And they made two other golden rings, and put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart of it, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

21 And they did bind the breastplate by his rings unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ ⁱ ch. 28. 31. And he made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue.

23 And there was an hole in the midst of the robe, as the hole of an habergeon, with a band round about the hole, that it should not rend.

24 And they made upon the hems of the robe pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and twined linen.

25 And they made ^k bells of pure gold, ^k ch. 28. 33. and put the bells between the pomegranates upon the hem of the robe, round about between the pomegranates;

26 A bell and a pomegranate, a bell and a pomegranate, round about the hem of the robe to minister in; as the LORD commanded Moses.

27 ¶ ^l ch. 28. 39, ⁴⁰. And they made coats of fine linen of woven work for Aaron, and for his sons, 28 ^m ch. 28. 4, ³⁹ And a mitre of fine linen, and goodly bonnets of fine linen, and ⁿ linen breeches of fine twined linen, ⁴⁰ Ezek. 44. 18. n ch. 28. 42.

29 ^o ch. 28. 39. And a girdle of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, of needlework; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ ^p ch. 28. 36, ³⁷. And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon it a writing, like to the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

31 And they tied unto it a lace of blue, to fasten it on high upon the mitre; as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 ¶ Thus was all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation finished: and the children of Israel did ^q ver. 42, 43. ch. 28. 40. according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

33 ¶ And they brought the tabernacle unto Moses, the tent, and all his furniture, his taches, his boards, his bars, and his pillars, and his sockets,

34 And the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of badgers' skins, and the veil of the covering,

35 The ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy seat,

36 The table, and all the vessels thereof, and the shewbread,

37 The pure candlestick, with the lamps thereof, even with the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels thereof, and the oil for light,

38 And the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and †the sweet incense, and the hanging for the tabernacle door,

39 The brasen altar, and his grate of brass, his staves, and all his vessels, the laver and his foot,

40 The hangings of the court, his pillars, and his sockets, and the hanging for the court gate, his cords, and his pins, and all the vessels of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of the congregation,

41 The cloths of service to do service in the holy place, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and his sons' garments, to minister in the priest's office.

42 According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel made all the work.

43 And Moses did look upon all the work, and, behold, they had done it as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses blessed them.

i. e. Both the people for their liberal contribution, and the workmen for their great care and industry.

CHAP. XL.

The tabernacle is commanded to be reared, 1—8; and anointed, 9—11. Aaron and his sons sanctified, 12—15. Moses performeth all things accordingly, 16—33. A cloud covereth the tabernacle, 34—38.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 On the first day of the first month shalt thou set up the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

To wit, of the second year after their coming out of Egypt, as is evident.

3 And thou shalt put therein the ark of the testimony, and cover the ark with the veil.

4 And thou shalt bring in the table, and set in order †the things that are to be set in order upon it; and thou shalt bring in the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof.

The things that are to be set in order; the vessels belonging to it, and the shew-bread, Exod. xxv. 29, 30.

5 And thou shalt set the altar of gold for the incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle.

6 And thou shalt set the altar of the burnt offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

i. e. The tabernacle which is covered with a tent. See Exod. xxxv. 11. Though elsewhere the words tabernacle and tent are promiscuously used.

7 And thou shalt set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and shalt put water therein.

8 And thou shalt set up the court round about, and hang up the hanging at the court gate.

9 And thou shalt take the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof: and it shall be holy.

10 And thou shalt anoint the altar of the burnt offering, and all his vessels, and sanctify the altar: and it shall be an altar most holy.

11 And thou shalt anoint the laver and his foot, and sanctify it.

12 And thou shalt bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water.

13 And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and anoint him, and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

14 And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats:

15 And thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generations.

i. e. A sign or seal that their priesthood shall continue as long as their polity lasts, till the coming of the Messias. He signifies that this unction should be sufficient for all succeeding priests; they should not need to be anointed again, except the successive high priests. See Exod. xxix. 7, 29; Lev. iv. 3; xvi. 32; xxi. 10.

16 Thus did Moses: according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the first month of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up.

Second year after their coming out of Egypt, Numb. vii. 1.

18 And Moses reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars.

19 And he spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

20 ¶ And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy seat above upon the ark:

21 And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the veil of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the veil.

23 And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

24 ¶ And he put the candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.

+ Heb. the incense of sweet spices.

r ch. 35. 10.

Lev. 9. 22, 23.
Num. 6. 23.
Josh. 22. 6.
2 Sam. 6. 18.
1 Kings 8. 14.
2 Chr. 30. 27.

a ch. 12. 2.
& 13. 4. b ver. 17. &
ch. 26. 1, 30.

c ver. 21.
ch. 26. 33.
Num. 4. 5.

d ver. 22.
ch. 26. 35.
e ver. 23.
ch. 25. 30.
Lev. 24. 5, 6.
+ Heb. the order thereof.
f ver. 24, 25.

g ver. 26.

k ch. 29. 36, 37.
+ Heb. holiness of holinesses.

l Lev. 8. 1.—13.

m ch. 28. 41.

n Num. 26. 13.

i. e. A sign or seal that their priesthood shall continue as long as their polity lasts, till the coming of the Messias. He signifies that this unction should be sufficient for all succeeding priests; they should not need to be anointed again, except the successive high priests. See Exod. xxix. 7, 29; Lev. iv. 3; xvi. 32; xxi. 10.

1490.
o ver. 1.
Num. 7. 1.

p ch. 25. 16.

q ch. 26. 33. & 35. 12.

r ch. 26. 35.

s ver. 4.

t ch. 26. 35.

u ver. 4.
ch. 25. 37.

25 And ^hhe lighted the lamps before the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

y ver. 5.
ch. 30. 6.

26 ¶ ^vAnd he put the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the vail:

z ch. 30. 7.

27 ^zAnd he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

This is wisely and seasonably added, because this was a work peculiar to the priest, and not to be done by Moses without God's express command.

a ver. 5.
ch. 26. 36.

28 ¶ ^aAnd he set up the hanging at the door of the tabernacle.

b ver. 6.

29 ^bAnd he put the altar of burnt offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and ^coffered upon it the burnt offering and the meat offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

The burnt-offering and the meat-offering, for the consecration of the altar, this being the first sacrifice.

d ver. 7.
ch. 30. 18.

30 ¶ ^dAnd he set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal.

31 And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat:

32 When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; ^eas the LORD commanded Moses.

f ver. 8.
ch. 27. 9, 16.

33 ^fAnd he reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the hanging of the court gate. So Moses finished the work.

34 ¶ ^gThen a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

i. e. The glorious presence of God, which having been forfeited and lost, was now returned to them, and took its habitation among them.

35 And Moses ^hwas not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

Moses was not able to enter in, partly, because of the extraordinary thickness and brightness of the cloud, which both dazzled his eyes and struck him with horror, as 1 Kings viii. 11; and partly, because of his great reverence and dread of that eminent and glorious appearance of God; and partly, because he was not called to it, as he was not able to go up into the mount till he was called, Exod. xxiv. 16.

36 ⁱAnd when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel [†]went onward in all their journeys:

37 But ^kif the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up.

38 For ^lthe cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.

The same pillar which in the day-time was like a cloud, in the night-time had the appearance of fire. Sec Exod. xiii. 21.

g ch. 29. 43
Lev. 16. 2.
Num. 9. 15.
1 Kin. 8. 10.
2 Chr. 5.
13. & 7. 2.
Is. 6. 4.
Hag. 2. 7, 9
Rev. 15. 5.

h Lev. 16. 2.
1 Kin. 8. 11.
2 Chr. 5. 14.

i Num. 9. 17.
& 10. 11.
Neh. 9. 19.

† Heb.
journeyed.
k Num. 9. 19.
—22.

l ch. 13. 21.
Num. 9. 15.

THE THIRD BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

LEVITICUS.

THE ARGUMENT.

THIS Book, containing the actions of about one month's space, acquainteth us with the Levitical ceremonies used after the tabernacle was erected and anointed in the wilderness, and is therefore called LEVITICUS. It treats of laws concerning persons and things, clean and unclean, by infirmity or accident; as also purifyings in general once a year, and divers particular cleansings, with a brief repetition of divers laws, chap. xix., together with certain feasts, of seven years' rest, of the jubilee, and the redemption of things consecrated to God, &c.; but especially of such ceremonies as were used about offerings and sacrifices, which were both expiatory, for trespasses wittingly or unwittingly committed, whether by the people or the priests; and also eucharistical, in the owning of God's blessings. Here are declared also laws for the regulating of these, and prescribing the lawful time for marriages. Here is set down how several abominable sins are punishable by the magistrate; and how these things are to be managed by certain persons appropriated to the tribe of Levi, whose office is confirmed from heaven, and the maladministration of it threatened, and the judgment particularly inflicted on Nadab and Abihu for an example. Here are also promises and threatenings to the observers or breakers of this law.

CHAP. I.

God commands Moses concerning free-will burnt-offerings of bullock or sheep; male without blemish, 1—3. The offerer to lay his hand on the head of the offering, that it might be accepted for him, 4. The bullock to be slain, and its blood sprinkled on the altar, 5. Its parts to be consumed by fire, 7—9. Of sheep or goats, 10—13. Of fowls, as turtle-doves and young pigeons; their blood to be wrung out at the side of the altar, 14—17

AND the LORD ^acalled unto Moses, and spake unto him ^bout of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

Moses stood without, Exod. xl. 35, waiting for God's call. Out of the tabernacle of the congregation; from the mercy-seat in the tabernacle.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^cIf any man of you bring

B. C. 1480
a Ex. 29. 3.
b Ex. 40. 34.
35. Num. 12.
4, 5.

c ch. 22. 18, 19.

an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

There are divers kinds of sacrifices here prescribed; some by way of acknowledgment to God for mercies either desired or received; others by way of satisfaction to God for men's sins; others were mere exercises of piety and devotion. And the reason why there are so many kinds of them was, partly respect to the childish estate of the Jews, who by the custom of nations, and their own natural inclinations, were much addicted to outward rites and ceremonies, that they might have full employment of that kind in God's service, and thereby be kept from temptations to idolatry; and partly to represent as well the several perfections of Christ, the true sacrifice, and the various benefits of his death, as the several duties which men owe to their Creator and Redeemer, all which could not be so well expressed by one sort of sacrifices. Of the flock, or, of the sheep; though the Hebrew word contains both the sheep and goats, as appears both from the use of the word, Gen. xii. 16; xxvii. 9; xxxviii. 17, and from ver. 10, and other places of Scripture. Now God chose these kinds of creatures for his sacrifices, either, 1. In opposition to the Egyptian idolatry, to which divers of the Israelites had been used, and were still in danger of revolting to again, that the frequent destruction of these creatures might bring such silly deities into contempt. Or, 2. Because these are the fittest representations both of Christ and of true Christians, as being gentle, and harmless, and patient, and most useful to men. Or, 3. As the best and most profitable creatures, with which it is fit God should be served, and which we should be ready to part with, when God requires us to do so. Or, 4. As things most common and obvious, that men might never want a sacrifice when they needed or God required it.

3 If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male ^dwithout blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.

A burnt sacrifice, strictly so called, was such as was to be all burnt, the skin excepted, Lev. vii. 8. See Gen. viii. 20; 1 Kings iii. 15. For otherwise every sacrifice was burnt, more or less. The sacrifices did partly signify that the whole man, in whose stead the sacrifice was offered, was to be entirely and unreservedly offered or devoted to God's service; and that the whole man did deserve to be utterly consumed, if God should deal severely with him; and directed us to serve the Lord with all singleness of heart, without self-ends, and to be ready to offer to God even such sacrifices or services wherein we ourselves should have no part nor benefit. A male, as being more perfect than the female, Mal. i. 14, and more truly representing Christ. Without blemish; of which see Exod. xxix. 1; Lev. xxii. 22, &c.; to signify, 1. That God should be served with the best of every kind. 2. That man, represented by these sacrifices, should aim at all purity and perfection of heart and life, and that Christians should one day attain to it, Eph. v. 27. 3. The spotless and complete holiness of Christ, Heb. ix. 13, 14; 1 Pet. i. 18, 19; ii. 22. Of his own voluntary will. According to this translation, the place speaks only of free-will offerings, or such as were not prescribed by God to be offered in course, but were offered at the pleasure and by the voluntary devotion of any person, either by way of supplication for any mercy which he needed or desired, or by way of thanksgiving for any favour or blessing received. But it may seem improper to restrain the rules here given to free-will offerings, which were to be observed in other offerings also. And the Hebrew word is by the LXX. Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic, and others, rendered to this purpose, for his acceptance, or that he may be accepted with God, or that God may be atoned, as it is ver. 4. And so this phrase is used Lev. xxiii. 11. At the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; in the court near to the door, where the altar stood, ver. 5. For here it was to be sacrificed, and here also the people might behold the oblation of it. And this further signified, that men could have no entrance, neither into the earthly tabernacle, the church, nor into the heavenly tabernacle of glory, but by Christ, who is the door, John x. 7, 9, by whom alone we have access to God.

4 And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt offering; and it shall be accepted for him ^eto make atonement for him.

His hand, i. e. both his hands, Lev. viii. 14, 18; xvi. 21; a common enallage. Upon the head of the burnt-offering; whereby he signified, 1. That he willingly gave it to the Lord. 2. That he did legally unite himself with it, and judged himself worthy of that death which it suffered in his stead; and that he laid his sins upon it in a ceremonial way, and had an eye to him upon whom God would lay the iniquity of us all, Isa. liii. 6; and that together with it he did freely offer up himself to God. To make atonement for him, to wit, ceremonially and sacramentally; as directing his faith and thoughts to that true propitiatory sacrifice which in time was to be offered up for him. See Rom. iii. 25; Heb. ix. 15, 25, 26. And although burnt-offerings were commonly offered by way of thanksgiving, Gen. viii. 20; Psal. li. 16, 17, yet they were sometimes offered by way of atonement for sin, to wit, for sins in general, as appears from Job i. 5, but for particular sins there were special sacrifices, as we shall see.

5 And he shall kill the ^hbullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

He shall kill; either, 1. The offerer, who is said to do it, to wit, by the priest; for men are commonly said to do what they cause others to do, as John iv. 1, 2. Or, 2. The priest, as it follows, or the Levite, whose office this was. See Exod. xxix. 11; Lev. viii. 15; Numb. viii. 19; 1 Chron. xxiii. 28, 31; 2 Chron. xxx. 16; xxxv. 11. Sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar; which was done in a considerable quantity, as may be gathered from Zech. ix. 15; and whereby was signified, 1. That the offerer deserved to have his blood spilt in that manner. 2. That the blood of Christ should be poured forth for sinners, and that that was the only mean of their reconciliation to God, and acceptance with him.

6 And he shall flay the burnt offering, and cut it into his pieces.

He shall flay the burnt-offering; partly for decency, because the sacrifices being as it were God's food and feast, it was incongruous to offer to God that which men refused to eat; and partly to signify that the great thing which God required and regarded in men was, not their outward appearance, but their inside; and that as he doth see all men's insides, Heb. iv. 13, so he will one day make them visible to others. Into his pieces, to wit, the head, and fat, and inwards, and legs, ver. 8, 9.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and ⁱlay the wood in order upon the fire:

Or, dispose the fire, i. e. blow it up, and put it together, so as it might be fit for the present work. For the fire there used and allowed came down from heaven, Lev. ix. 24, and was to be carefully preserved there, and all other fire was forbidden, Lev. x. 1, &c.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:

The fat; all the fat, which was to be separated from the flesh, and to be put together, to increase the flame, and to consume the other parts of the sacrifice more quickly. Others translate it, the trunk of the body, as distinguished from the head, and joints, and inward parts.

9 But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a ^msweet savour unto the LORD.

^e ch. 4. 15.
^e 3. 2, 8, 13.
^e 8. 15, 22.
^e 16. 21. Ex.
29. 10, 15, 19.
^e ch. 22. 21.
^e 7. 1c. 56. 7. Rom. 12. 1. Phil. 4. 18. g ch. 4. 20, 25, 31, 35, & 2. 7. & 16. 24. Num. 15. 25. 2 Chron. 29. 23, 24. Rom. 5. 11.

^h Mic. 6. 8.
ⁱ 2 Chron. 35. 11.
ⁱ Heb. 10. 11.
ⁱ Heb. 3. 8.
ⁱ Heb. 13. 24.
ⁱ 1 Pet. 1. 2.

^m Gen. 8. 21.
^m Ezek. 20. 28, 41.
^m Cor. 2. 15.
^m Eph. 5. 2.
^m Phil. 4. 16

His inwards and his legs shall he wash, to signify the universal and perfect purity both of the inwards, or the heart, and of the legs, or ways, or actions, which was in Christ, and which should be in all Christians. The priest shall burn all; not only the parts now mentioned, but all the rest, the trunk of the body, and the shoulders, as is apparent from the practice or execution of these precepts. Of a sweet savour; not in itself, for so it rather caused a stink, but as it represented Christ's offering up himself to God as a sweet-smelling savour, Eph. v. 2; and to admonish us of the excellent virtue of Divine institution, without which God values no worship, though never so glorious, and by which even the meanest things are precious and acceptable to God.

10 ¶ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male ⁿ without blemish.

n ver. 3.

o ver. 5.

11 ° And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

This and other kinds of sacrifices were killed on the side of the altar northward, Lev. vi. 25; vii. 2, because here seems to have been the largest and most convenient place for that work, the altar being probably near the middle of the east end of the building, and the entrance being on the south side; so the north side was the only vacant place. Besides, this might design the place of Christ's death, both more generally, to wit, in Jerusalem, which was in the sides of the north, Psal. xlviii. 2; and more specially, to wit, on Mount Calvary, which was on the north and west side of Jerusalem.

12 And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:

13 But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if the burnt sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of ^p turtledoves, or of young pigeons.

p ch. 5. 7. & Luke 2. 24.

These birds were appointed for the relief of the poor who could not bring better. And these birds are preferred before others, partly because they were easily gotten, and partly because they are fit representations of Christ's chastity, and meekness, and gentleness, for which these birds are remarkable. The pigeons must be young, because then they are best; but the turtle-doves are better when they are more grown up, and therefore they are not confined to that age.

15 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and ¶ wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar:

Wring off his head, to wit, from the rest of the body; as sufficiently appears, because this was to be burnt by itself, as it here follows, and the body afterwards, ver. 17. And whereas it is said, Lev. v. 8, he shall—wring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder, that is spoken not of the burnt-offering, as here, but of the sin-offering, in which there might be a differing rite.

16 And he shall pluck away his crop with ¶ his feathers, and cast it ^q beside the altar on the east part, by the place of the ashes:

q Or, the filth thereof. ch. 6. 10.

With his feathers, or, with its dung or filth, to wit, contained in the crop, and in the guts. On the east part, to wit, of the tabernacle. Here the filth was cast, because this was the remotest place from the holy of holies, which was in the west end; to teach us, that impure things and persons should not presume to approach to God, and that they should be banished from his presence. By the place of the ashes; the place where the ashes fell down and lay, whence they were afterwards removed without the camp. See Lev. iv. 12; vi. 10, 11; viii. 17.

17 And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall not divide it asunder: ^r Gen. 15. 10 and the priest shall burnt it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: ^s it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

Shall not divide it asunder; shall cleave the bird through the whole length, yet so as not to separate the one side from the other, and so as there may be a wing left on each side. See Gen. xv. 10.

CHAP. II.

Concerning free-will meat-offerings, of fine flour with oil and frankincense upon it, 1; for a memorial, 2. The remainder most holy, to be eaten by Aaron and his sons, 3. Of baked and unleavened cakes mixed and wafers sprinkled with oil, 4; or dressed in the pan, 5; or in the frying-pan, 7; but without leaven or honey, 11. The firstlings excepted, 12. Salt of the covenant to be offered, 13. First-fruits, how to be offered, 14—16.

AND when any will offer ^a a meat-offering unto the LORD, his offering shall be ^b of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it, and put frankincense thereon:

a ch. 6. 14. & 9. 17. Num. 15. 4.

A meat-offering was of two kinds; the one joined with other offerings, Numb. xv. 4, 7, 10, which was prescribed, together with the measure or proportion of it; the other, of which this place speaks, was a distinct and separate offering, and was left to the offerer's good will, both for the thing and for the quantity. And the matter of this offering was things without life, as meal, corn, cakes, &c. Now this sort of sacrifices were appointed, 1. Because these are things of greatest necessity and benefit to man, and therefore it is meet that God should be served with them, and owned and praised as the giver of them. 2. In condescension to the poor, that they might not want an offering for God, and to show that God would accept even the meanest services, when offered to him with a sincere mind. 3. These were necessary provisions for the feast, which was here to be represented to God, and for the use of the priests, who were to attend upon these holy ministrations. Fine flour, seared, or sifted, and purged from all bran, it being fit that the best things should be offered to the best Being. He shall pour oil upon it; which may note the graces of the Holy Ghost, which are compared to oil, and anointing with it, Psal. xlv. 7; 1 John ii. 20, and which are necessary to make any offering acceptable to God. The frankincense manifestly designed Christ's satisfaction and intercession, which is compared to a sweet odour, Eph. v. 2, and to incense, Rev. viii. 3.

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereof his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof; and the priest shall burn ^b the memorial of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD:

b ver. 9. & ch. 5. 12. & 6. 15. & 24. 7. Is. 66. 3. Exod. 45. 16. Act. 10. 4.

He shall take, i. e. that priest to whom he brought it, and who is appointed to offer it. The memorial of it; that part thus selected and offered; which is called a memorial, either, 1. To the offerer, who by offering this part is minded that the whole of that he brought, and of all which he hath of that kind, is God's, to whom this part was paid as a quit-rent or acknowledgment. Or, 2. To God, whom (to speak after the manner of men) this did put in mind of his gracious covenant, and promises of favour and acceptance of the offerer and his offering, See Exod. xxx. 16; Lev. vi. 15; Numb. v. 26.

3 And ^{c ch. 7. 9. & 10. 12. 13. Ecclus. 7. 31. d Ex. 28. 37. Num. 18. 9.} the remnant of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': ^d it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

Aaron's and his sons', to be eaten by them, Lev. vi. 16. i. e. Most holy, or such as were to be eaten only by the priests, and that only in the holy place near the altar. See Lev. vi. 26; vii. 6, 9; xxi. 22.

4 ¶ And if thou bring an oblation of a meat offering baken in the oven, it shall be unleavened cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, or unleavened wafers ^e anointed with oil.

Baken in the oven; made in the sanctuary for that use, as may seem from 1 Chron. xxiii. 28, 29; Ezek. xlv. 20.

5 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken ¶ in a pan, it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil.

6 Thou shalt part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat offering.

Thou shalt part it in pieces; because part of it was offered to God, and part given to the priest.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken in the fryingpan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat offering ^f a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

10 And ^h that which is left of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with ⁱ leaven: for ye shall burn no leaven, nor any honey, in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

No meat-offering, to wit, which is offered of free will; for in other offerings it might be used, Lev. vii. 13; xxiii. 17. Shall be made with leaven: this was forbidden, partly to mind them of their deliverance out of Egypt, when they were forced through haste to bring away their meal or dough (which was the matter of this oblation) unleavened; partly to signify what Christ would be, and what they should be, pure and free from all error in the faith and worship of God, and from all hypocrisy and malice or wickedness, all which are signified by leaven, Matt. xvi. 12; Mark viii. 15; Luke xii. 1; 1 Cor. v. 8; Gal. v. 9. Nor any honey; either, 1. Because it hath the same effect with leaven in paste or dough, making it sour, and swelling. Or, 2. In opposition to the sacrifices of the Gentiles, in which the use of honey was most frequent. Or, 3. To teach us that God's worship is not to be governed by men's fancies and appetites, to which honey might have been grateful, but by God's will. The Jews conceive, that under the name of honey all sweet fruits, as figs, dates, &c., are contained and forbidden.

12 ¶ ^k As for the oblation of the first-fruits, ye shall offer them unto the LORD: but they shall not [†] be burnt on the altar for a sweet savour.

Or, the offering, or, for the offering of the first-fruits you shall or may offer them, or either of them, to wit, leaven or honey, which were offered and accepted in that case, Lev. xxiii. 17; 2 Chron. xxxi. 5. They shall not be burnt; but reserved for the priests, Numb. xviii. 13; Deut. xviii. 4.

13 And every oblation of thy meat offering ^l shalt thou season with salt; neither shalt thou suffer ^m the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat offering: ⁿ with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt.

Every oblation of thy meat-offering shalt thou season with salt; either, 1. For the decency and conveniency of the feast, which God would have here represented. Or, 2. For the signification of that incorruption of mind, and sincerity of grace, which in Scripture is signified by salt, Mark ix. 49; Col. iv. 6, and which is necessary in all them that would offer an acceptable offering to God. Or, 3. In testimony of that communion which they had with God in these exercises of his worship; salt being the great symbol of friendship in all nations and ages. The salt of the covenant of thy God: so salt is called, either, 1. Because it fitly represented the durability and perpetuity of God's covenant with them, which is designed by salt, Numb. xviii. 19; 2 Chron. xiii. 5. Or, 2. Because it was so particularly and rigorously required as a condition of their covenant with God; this being made absolutely necessary in all their offerings, as it follows; and as the neglect of sacrifices was a breach of covenant on their part, so also was the neglect of salt in their sacrifices. With all thine offerings; not these only, but all other, as appears from Ezek. xliii. 24; Mark ix. 49.

14 And if thou offer a meat offering of thy firstfruits unto the LORD, ^o thou shalt offer for the meat offering of thy firstfruits green ears of corn dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of ^p full ears.

If thou offer a meat-offering of thy first-fruits, to wit, of thine own free will; for there were other first-fruits, and that of several sorts, which were prescribed, and the time, quality, and proportion of them appointed by God. See Lev. xxiii. 10.

15 And ^q thou shalt put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon: it is a meat offering.

16 And the priest shall burn ^r the memorial of it, part of the beaten corn thereof, and part of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

CHAP. III.

Concerning thank-offerings: of bullocks, male or female, without blemish; the manner of this oblation, 1—5. Of small cattle, male or female, without blemish; a lamb, 6—11; a goat, 12—16. All fat the Lord's; the fat and blood not to be eat, 16, 17.

AND if his oblation be a sacrifice of peace offering, if he offer it of the herd; whether it be a male or female, he shall offer it ^b without blemish before the LORD.

Which was an offering for peace and prosperity, and the favour and blessing of God, either, 1. Obtained; and so this was a thank-offering, as Lev. vii. 12, 16; or, 2. Desired; and so it was a kind of supplication to God, as Judg. xx. 26; 1 Chron. xxi. 26. Whether it be a male or female; which were allowed here, though not in burnt-offerings, because those principally respected the honour of God, who is to be served with the best; but the peace-offerings did primarily respect the benefit of the offerer, and therefore the choice was left to himself.

2 And ^c he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congrega-^k Ex. 22. 29. ch. 23. 10, 11.

[†] Heb. sacer.

^l Mark 9. 49. Col. 4. 6. m Num. 18. 19.

ⁿ Ezek. 43. 24.

^o ch. 23. 10. 14.

^p 2 Kin. 4. 42.

^q ver. 1.

^r ver. 2.

^a ch. 7. 11. 29. & 22. 21.

^b ch. 1. 3.

^c ch. 1. 4. 5. Ex. 29. 10.

tion: and Aaron's sons the priests shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

At the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; not on the north side of the altar, where the burnt-offering was killed, Lev. i. 11, as also the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering, Lev. vi. 25; vii. 2, but in the very entrance of the court where the brazen altar stood, which place was not so holy as the other; as appears both because it was more remote from the holy of holies, and because the ashes of the sacrifices were to be laid here. And the reason of this difference is not obscure, both because part of this sacrifice was to be waved by the hands of the offerer, Lev. vii. 30, who might not come into the court; and because this offering was not so holy as the other, which were to be eaten only by the priest, when part of these were eaten by the offerer.

3 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; ⁴ the || fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

d Ex. 29. 13, 22.
ch. 4. 8, 9.
1 Or, meat.

1 Or, midriff over the liver, and over the kidneys.
e ch. 6. 12.
Ex 29. 13.

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the || caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

5 And Aaron's sons shall burn it on the altar upon the burnt sacrifice, which is upon the wood that is on the fire: it is an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

Upon the burnt sacrifice; either, 1. Upon the remainders of it, which yet were burning; or rather, 2. After it; for the daily burnt-offering was first to be offered, both as more eminently respecting God's honour, which ought to be preferred before all things; and as the most solemn and stated sacrifice, which should take place of all voluntary and occasional oblations, and as a sacrifice of a higher nature and use, being for expiation and atonement, without which no peace could be obtained, nor peace-offering offered with acceptance.

6 ¶ And if his offering for a sacrifice of peace offering unto the LORD be of the flock; male or female, ⁷ he shall offer it without blemish.

7 If he offer a lamb for his offering, then shall he offer it before the LORD.

8 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

9 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat thereof, and the whole rump, it shall he take off hard by the backbone; and the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

The fat thereof, and the whole rump, which in sheep is fat and sweet, and in these parts was very much larger and better than ours, as is agreed both by ancient and modern writers, and therefore was fitly offered to God.

10 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

11 And the priest shall burn it upon the altar: it is ¹² the food of the offering made by fire unto the LORD.

The priest shall burn it, i. e. the parts now mentioned, and for the rest, they fell to the priest, Lev. vii. 31. The food of the offering, i. e. the fuel of the fire, or the matter of the offering. It is called food, Heb. bread, to note God's acceptance of it, and delight in it, as men delight in their food.

12 ¶ And if his offering be a goat, then ¹³ he shall offer it before the LORD.

13 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of it, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle the blood thereof upon the altar round about.

14 And he shall offer thereof his offering, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

15 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savour: ¹⁷ all the fat is the LORD's.

The priest shall burn them, the parts mentioned, among which the tail is not one, as it was in the sheep, because that in goats is a refuse part. All the fat: this is to be limited, 1. To those beasts which were offered or might be offered in sacrifice, as it is explained and restrained Lev. vii. 23, 25. 2. To that kind of fat which is here above mentioned, and required to be offered, which was separated, or easily separable, from the flesh; for the fat which was here and there mixed with the flesh they might eat, Deut. xxxii. 14; Neh. viii. 10.

17 It shall be a ¹⁸ perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither ¹⁹ fat nor blood.

Throughout all your dwellings; not only at or near the tabernacle, nor only of those beasts which you actually sacrifice, but also in your several dwellings, and of all that kind of beasts. That ye eat neither fat: this was forbidden, 1. To preserve the reverence of the holy rites and sacrifices. 2. That they might be taught hereby to acknowledge God as their Lord, and the Lord of all the creatures, who might reserve what he pleased to himself. 3. To exercise them in obedience to God, and self-denial, and mortification of their appetites, even in those things which probably many of them would much desire. Nor blood: this was forbidden, partly, to maintain reverence to God and his worship; partly, out of opposition to idolaters, who used to drink the blood of their sacrifices; partly, with respect unto Christ's blood, thereby manifestly signified; and partly, for moral admonition about avoiding cruelty, &c.

CHAP. IV.

Of sins of ignorance, and their sacrifice, 1, 2: committed by the priest according to the guilt of the people; he must offer a perfect young bullock, and sprinkle the blood seven times before the veil of the holy place, and upon the horns of the incense altar, 3—12. Or by the whole congregation, when their sin is known, the elders of the congregation to lay their hands on the head of the offering, to be offered in the same manner with that of the priest, 13—21. Or by a ruler, he, when his sin is made known to him, must offer a he-goat, 22—26. Or by a private person, must offer a female goat, 27—35: the sin is forgiven him.

AND THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ³ If a soul shall sin through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

This must necessarily be understood of more than common sins and daily infirmities; for if every such sin had

h ver. 1, 7.
&c.

i ch. 7. 23, 25.
1 Sam. 2. 15.
2 Chro. 7. 7.

k ch. 6. 18.
& 7. 36. & 17.
7. & 23. 14.
1 ver. 16.
compare with Deut. 32. 14.
Neh. 9. 10.

m Gen. 9. 4. ch. 7. 23, 26. & 17. 10, 14. Deut. 12. 16. 1 Sam. 14. 33. Ezek. 44. 7, 15.

g See ch. 21.
6, 9, 17, 21,
22. & 22. 25.
Ezek. 44. 7.
Mal. 1. 7, 12.

a ch. 5. 15,
17. Num.
15. 22. Ac.
1 Sam. 14. 27.
Ps. 15. 12.

required an offering, it had not been possible either for most sinners to bear such a charge, or for the altar to receive so many sacrifices, or for the priests to manage so infinite a work. And for ordinary sins, they were ceremonially expiated by the daily offering, and by that on the great day of atonement, Lev. xvi. 30. Through ignorance; or, error; either not knowing his fact to be sinful, as appears by comparing ver. 13, 14, or not considering it, but rashly and unadvisedly falling into sin through the power of some sudden passion or temptation, as the Hebrew word signifies, Psal. cxix. 67. Compare Job xix. 4; Psal. xix. 13. Against any of the commandments of the Lord concerning things which ought not to be done: the words may be thus rendered, in or about every, or any of the commandments of the Lord which should not be done; or, which concern things that should not be done, to wit, in any negative commands. And there is great reason why a sacrifice should be more necessary for these than for other sins, because affirmative precepts do not so strictly and constantly bind men as the negative do; and if a man through ignorance have neglected them, he may yet recover his error, and fulfil them. And shall do against any of them; then he shall offer according to his quality, which is here to be understood out of the following verses.

b ch. 8. 13.

3^b If the priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring for his sin, which he hath sinned, ^ca young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin offering.

c ch. 9. 2.

The priest that is anointed, i. e. the high priest, who only was anointed after the first time. See Exod. xxix. 7; xxx. 30; xl. 15; Lev. x. 7; Numb. iii. 3. His anointing is mentioned, because he was not complete high priest till he was anointed. Do sin, either in doctrine or practice, which it is here supposed he may do. And this is noted as a blot and character of imperfection in the priesthood of the law, whereby the Israelites were directed to expect another and better High Priest, even one who is holy, harmless, and separate from sinners, Heb. vii. 26. According to the sin of the people; in the same manner as any of the people do, which implies that God expected more circumspection and care from him than from the people. But the words may be rendered, to the sin or guilt of the people, which may be mentioned as a reason of the law, and an aggravation of his sin, that by it he commonly brings sin, and guilt, and punishment upon the people, who are infected or scandalized by his example. A young bullock; the same sacrifice which was offered for all the people, to show how much his sin was aggravated by his quality. For a sin-offering, Heb. sin, which word is oft taken in that sense, as Exod. xxix. 14.

d ch. 1. 3, 4.

4 And he shall bring the bullock ^dunto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD.

He shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, to testify both his acknowledgment of his sin, and his faith in God's promise for the expiation of his sins through Christ, whom that sacrifice typified. And kill the bullock, to wit, by one of the priests, whom he shall cause to do it; for this priest is distinguished from the anointed priest, ver. 5.

e ch. 16. 14.
Numb. 19. 4.

5 And the priest that is anointed ^eshall take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation:

Into the tabernacle; which was not required nor allowed in any other sacrifice, possibly to show the greatness of the high priest's sin, which needed more than ordinary diligence in him and favour from God to expiate it.

6 And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times before the LORD, before the veil of the sanctuary.

Seven times; a number much used in Scripture, as a number of perfection; and here prescribed, either to show that his sins needed more than ordinary purgation, and more frequent and manifest exercises of his faith and repentance, both which graces he was obliged to join with that ceremonial rite. Before the veil, to wit, the second veil dividing between the holy of holies, which is generally called by the name here used, as Exod. xxvi. 31, &c.; xxxv. 12; xl. 3, 21; Numb. iv. 5.

7 And the priest shall ^fput some of the blood upon the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD; which ^gis in the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall pour ^hall the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, which ⁱis at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

f ch. 8. 15.
g 9. 9. & 16.
18.

g ch. 5. 9.

The altar of sweet incense which is in the tabernacle; the altar of burnt-offerings was without the tabernacle. All the blood; so also below, ver. 18, 30, 34, to wit, all the rest, as it is expressed Lev. v. 9, for part was disposed elsewhere.

8 And he shall take off from it all the fat of the bullock for the sin offering; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that ^jis upon the inwards,

9 And the two kidneys, and the fat that ^kis upon them, which ^lis by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away,

10 ^hAs it was taken off from the bullock of the sacrifice of peace offerings: and the priest shall burn them upon the altar of the burnt offering.

h ch. 3.3,4,5.

11 ⁱAnd the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, and with his legs, and his inwards, and his dung,

i Ex. 29. 14
Numb. 19. 5.

12 Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth ^mwithout the camp unto a clean place, ⁿwhere the ashes are poured out, and ^oburn him on the wood with fire: ^pwhere the ashes are poured out shall he be burnt.

+ Heb. without the camp.
k ch. 6. 11.
l Heb. 13. 11.
+ Heb. at the pouring out of the ashes.

So no part of this was to be eaten by the priests, as it was in other sin-offerings, Lev. vi. 26. The reason is plain, because the offerer might not eat of his own sin-offering, and the priest was the offerer in this case, as also in the sin-offering for the whole congregation below, ver. 21, of which the priest himself was a member. Shall he carry forth; not himself, which would have defiled him, but by another whom he shall appoint for that work, as may be gathered from Lev. xvi. 27, 28. Without the camp, to signify either, 1. The horrible and abominable nature of sin, especially in high and holy persons, or when it over-spreads a whole people. Or, 2. The removing of the guilt and punishment of that sin from the people, and their duty of keeping such wickedness out of the camp for time to come. Or, 3. That Christ should suffer without the camp or gate, as he did. See Heb. xiii. 11, 12. Where the ashes are poured out; for the ashes, though at first they were thrown down near the altar, Lev. i. 16, yet afterwards they, together with the filth of the sacrifices, were carried into a certain place without the camp. See Lev. vi. 10, 11.

13 ¶ And ^mif the whole congregation of Israel sin through ignorance, ⁿand the thing be hid from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done somehat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which should not be done, and are guilty;

m Numb. 15.
n Josh. 7. 11.
n ch. 5. 2, 3, 4, 17.

The whole congregation; the body of the people, or the greater part of them, their rulers concurring with them.

14 When the sin, which they have sinned against it, is known, then the congregation shall offer a young bullock for the sin, and bring him before the tabernacle of the congregation.

Against it; against any one of the said commandments. A young bullock; but if the sin of the congregation was only the omission of some ceremonial duty, a kid of the goats was to be offered, Numb. xv. 24.

15 And the elders of the congregation shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock before the LORD: and the bullock shall be killed before the LORD.

The elders of the congregation, i. e. the rulers of the people, of whom see Exod. iii. 16; xxiv. 1, who here acted in the name of all the people, who could not possibly perform this act in their own persons.

16 And the priest that is anointed shall bring of the bullock's blood to the tabernacle of the congregation:

17 And the priest shall dip his finger in some of the blood, and sprinkle it seven times before the LORD, even before the veil.

18 And he shall put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar which is before the LORD, that is in the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall pour out all the blood at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

Before the Lord; that is, before the holy of holies, where the Lord was in a more special manner present; namely, the altar of incense, as before, ver. 7.

19 And he shall take all his fat from him, and burn it upon the altar.

20 And he shall do with the bullock as he did with the bullock for a sin offering, so shall he do with this: and the priest shall make an atonement for them, and it shall be forgiven them.

For a sin-offering, to wit, for the priest's sin-offering, called the first bullock, ver. 21.

21 And he shall carry forth the bullock without the camp, and burn him as he burned the first bullock: it is a sin offering for the congregation.

22 ¶ When a ruler hath sinned, and done somewhat through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD his God concerning things which should not be done, and is guilty;

A ruler, to wit, of the people, or a civil magistrate. Through ignorance; either not knowing it to be sin, or not observing and considering it till it be done. See before on ver. 2.

23 Or if his sin, wherein he hath sinned, come to his knowledge; he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a male without blemish:

The disjunctive or is here put for the copulative and, as it is 1 Cor. xii. 13; xiii. 8; xv. 11; for it is evident that he speaks of the same person, and of the same sin.

24 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the goat, and kill it in the place where they kill the burnt offering before the LORD: it is a sin offering.

The burnt-offering is so called by way of eminency, to wit, the daily burnt-offering, of which Exod. xxix. 38, of which place see Lev. i. 11. It is a sin-offering, and therefore to be killed where the burnt-offering is killed, as is expressed Lev. vi. 25; vii. 2; whereby it is distinguished from the peace-offerings, which were killed elsewhere, Lev. iii. 2.

25 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out his blood at the bottom of the altar of burnt offering.

26 And he shall burn all his fat upon the altar, as the fat of the sacrifice of peace offerings: and the priest shall make an atonement for him as concerning his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

Both ceremonially and judicially, as to all ecclesiastical censures or civil punishments; and really, upon condition of their repentance and faith in the Messias to come.

27 ¶ And if any one of the common people sin through ignorance, while he doeth somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and be guilty;

The common people, whether Israelites, or strangers embodied with them and proselytes; for both were under one and the same law, Exod. xii. 49; Numb. xv. 16.

28 Or if his sin, which he hath sinned, come to his knowledge: then he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a female without blemish, for his sin which he hath sinned.

A female was here sufficient, because the sin of one of those was less than the sin of the ruler, for whom a male was required, ver. 21.

29 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay the sin offering in the place of the burnt offering.

30 And the priest shall take of the blood thereof with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar.

31 And he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat is taken away from off the sacrifice of peace offerings; and the priest shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour unto the LORD; and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

32 And if he bring a lamb for a sin offering, he shall bring it a female without blemish.

33 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay it for a sin offering in the place where they kill the burnt offering.

He, to wit, the offerer. And slay, not by himself, but by the hands of the priest.

34 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar:

35 And he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat of the lamb is taken away from the sacrifice of the peace offerings; and the priest shall burn them upon the altar, according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: and the priest shall make an atonement for his sin that he hath committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

Shall burn them, i. e. the fat; but he useth the plural number, because the fat was of several kinds, as we saw ver. 8, 9. According to the offerings made by fire; Heb. upon the offerings, together with them, or after them; because the burnt-offerings were to have the first place. See on chap. iii. 5.

CHAP. V.

If a man heard or knew of blasphemy, and concealed it, he must atone it, 1. Or if he touch any unclean thing, and is made sensible of it, or have sworn rashly, he is guilty, must confess it, and offer a lamb or goat, female; in case of poverty, two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, one for a sin, and one for a burnt-offering, 2—10. But if this were too much, the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour, without oil or frankincense, 11—13. He that purloineth holy things must offer a ram, and the worth in silver, shekel according to the weight of the sanctuary, 14—16. Sins of ignorance again mentioned, and a perfect ram, with the estimation, for a sin-offering, 17—19.

^a 1 Kings 8. 31. ^b Matt. 26. 63. ^c ch. 7. 18, & 17. 16, & 19. ^d & 20. 17. ^e Num. 9. 13. AND if a soul sin, ^a and hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall ^b bear his iniquity.

And hear; and for that is, as that particle is often used, as Gen. xiii. 15; 1 Chron. xxi. 12, compared with 2 Sam. xxiv. 13; for this declares in particular what the sin was. The voice of swearing; either, 1. Of adjuration upon oath, when the judge adjures a witness to speak the whole truth; of which see Matt. xxvi. 63. But this seems too much to narrow the sense; and this and the other laws, both before and after it, speak of private sins committed through ignorance. Or, 2. Of false swearing before a judge. But that is expressly forbidden, Lev. vi. 3. Or rather, 3. Of cursing, or blasphemy, or execration, as the word commonly signifies; and that either, 1. Against one's neighbour, as 2 Sam. xvi. 7; or, 2. Against God, as Lev. xxiv. 10, 11; which may seem to be principally intended here, because the crime here spoken of is of so high a nature, that he who heard it was obliged to reveal it, and prosecute the guilty. And though God be not here mentioned, yet the general word is here to be understood of the most famous particular, as it is frequently in all authors, of which there are many instances. Whether he hath seen; being present when it was said. Or known; by sufficient information from others. He shall bear his iniquity, i. e. the punishment of it, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xix. 15; Numb. xviii. 1. See of this phrase Lev. xvii. 16; xx. 20; Isa. liii. 11.

^c ch. 11. 24, 28, 31, 39. ^d Num. 19. 11, 13, 16. 2 Or ^e if a soul touch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcase of an unclean beast, or a carcase of unclean cattle, or the carcase of unclean creeping things, and if it be hidden from him; he also shall be unclean, and ^a guilty.

^d ver. 17. Touch any unclean thing, to wit, ceremonially; of which see more fully chap. xi. 24, &c.; Deut. xiv. If it be hidden from him; if he do it unwittingly, yet that would not excuse him, because he should have been more diligent and circumspect to avoid all unclean things. Hereby God designed to awaken men to watchfulness against, and repentance for, their unknown or unobserved sins. See Psal. xix. 12; 1 John iii. 20. Guilty; not morally, for the conscience was not directly polluted by these things, Matt. xv. 11, 18, but ceremonially.

^c ch. 12, & 13, & 16. 3 Or if he touch ^a the uncleanness of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty.

As soon as he knoweth it, he must not delay to make his peace with God. And though it was sin before, though not known, yet the knowledge of it made it worse, and therefore required the more speedy repentance. He shall be guilty, not only ceremonially by that touch, but morally for his violation and contempt of God's authority and command.

^f See 1 Sam. 25. 22. ^g Acts 23. 12. ^h See Mark 8. 28. 4 Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips ^t to do evil, or ^s to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these.

If a soul swear; to wit, rashly, without consideration, either of God's law, or his own power or right, as David did, 1 Sam. xxv. 22. To do evil; either, 1. To himself, to wit, to punish himself, either in his body, or estate, or something else which is dear to him. Or rather, 2. To his neighbour, as 1 Sam. xxv. 22; Acts xxiii. 12. Or to do good, to wit, to his neighbour, as Mark vi. 23, when a man either may not or cannot do it, which may frequently happen. And it be hid from him, i. e. he did not know, or not consider, that what he swore to do, was or would be impossible or unlawful. When he knoweth of it; when he discovers it to be so, either by his own consideration, or by information from others. In one of these; either in the good or evil which he swore to do.

5 And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing: ^h ch. 16. 21. ⁱ Num. 5. 7. ^j Ezra 10. 11, 12.

In one of these things; in one of the three forementioned cases, either by sinful silence and compliance with others in their sin, ver. 1; or by an unclean touch, as ver. 2, 3; or by rash swearing, ver. 4. He shall confess before the Lord in the place of public worship. And this confession is not to be restrained to the present case, but by a parity of reason, and comparing of other scriptures, to be extended to other sacrifices for sin, to which this was a constant companion; and as it was signified by the guilty person's laying his hand upon his offering, so it is probable it was expressed in words. See Numb. v. 6, 7.

6 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the Lord for his sin which he hath sinned, a female from the flock, a lamb or a kid of the goats, for a sin offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his sin.

Quest. How comes confession and a sacrifice to be necessary for him that touched an unclean thing, when such persons were cleansed with simple washing, as appears from Lev. xi; Numb. xix. ? Answ. This place speaks of him that being so unclean did come into the tabernacle, as may be gathered by comparing this place with Numb. xix. 13, which if any man did, knowing himself to be unclean, which was the case there, he was to be cut off for it; and if he did it ignorantly, which is the case here, ver. 2, he was upon discovery of it to offer this sacrifice. Interpreters dispute much what the difference is between sins and trespasses, and between sin-offerings and trespass-offerings. Some make the one for omissions, the other for commissions; the one for greater, the other for lesser sins; the one for known sins, the other for sins of ignorance; in all which there seems to be more curiosity than solidity. Either they seem to be the same, as may be gathered from ver. 6, where those two words, asham and chata, which they so carefully and critically distinguish, are both used concerning the trespass-offerings, and from ver. 9; or the difference may be this, that sin-offerings were more indefinite or general, being for any particular sin, and trespass-offerings more restrained and particular, for such sins as were more scandalous and injurious, either to God by blasphemy, as ver. 1, or to his sanctuary, by approaching to it in one's uncleanness, ver. 2, 3, as hath been now said; or to one's neighbour, by swearing to do to them either the good which we afterwards cannot or do not, or the evil which we should not; or to the priests and holy things of God, ver. 15. A female; because those sins were less than others, as being committed ignorantly or unwittingly, and therefore God would accept a meaner sacrifice for them.

7 And if he be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring for his trespass, which he hath committed, two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, unto the Lord; one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering. ⁱ ch. 12. 8. ^j & 14. 21. ^k Heb. His hand cannot reach to the sufficiency of a lamb. ^l ch. 1. 14.

If he be not able, through poverty, as ver. 11. And this exception was allowed also in other sin-offerings. Two young pigeons, of which see Lev. i. 14. One for a sin-offering, which was for that particular sin, and therefore is offered first before the burnt-offering, which was for sins in general, to teach us not to rest in general confessions and repentances for sin, as hypocrites commonly do, but distinctly and particularly, as far as we can, to search out, and confess, and loathe, and leave our particular sins, without which God will not accept our other religious services. Note that the burnt-offering was for the expiation of sin as well as the sin-offering, Lev. i. 4, only that was for sin in general, and this for particular sins.

8 And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer that which is for the sin offering first, and ¹wring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder:

9 And he shall sprinkle of the blood of the sin offering upon the side of the altar; and ²the rest of the blood shall be wrung out at the bottom of the altar: it is a sin offering.

This is added as the reason why its blood was so sprinkled and spilt. See Lev. iv. 7, 18, 30, 34.

10 And he shall offer the second for a burnt offering, according to the ³man-ner: ⁴and the priest shall make an atone-ment for him for his sin which he hath sinned, and it shall be forgiven him.

According to the manner or order appointed by God. The priest shall make an atonement for him; either declaratively, he shall pronounce him to be pardoned; or typically, with respect to Christ.

11 ¶ But if he be not able to bring two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a sin offering; ⁵he shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon: for it is a sin offering.

The tenth part of an ephah, about a pottle of our measure. See Exod. xvi. 36. He shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon; either to distinguish these from the meat-offerings, Lev. ii. 1; or as a fit expression of their true sorrow for their sins, in the sense whereof they were to abstain from things pleasant and delightful; see Numb. v. 15; or to signify that by his sins he deserved to be utterly deprived both of the oil of gladness, the gifts, graces, and comforts of the Holy Ghost, and of God's gracious acceptance of his prayers and sacrifices, which is signified by incense, Psal. cxli. 2; or to teach them how evil a thing sin was, how hateful to God, and how uncomfortable to themselves.

12 Then shall he bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take his handful of it, ⁶even a memorial thereof, and burn it on the altar, ⁷according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: it is a sin offering.

13 ⁸And the priest shall make an atone-ment for him as touching his sin that he hath sinned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven him: and ⁹the remnant shall be the priest's, as a meat offering.

As it was in the meat-offering, where all, except one handful, fell to the share of the priests. See Lev. ii. 3; vii. 9. And this is the rather mentioned here, because in the foregoing sacrifices, Lev. iv. 3, &c., 13, &c., the priest had no part reserved for him.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ¹⁰15 ¹¹If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance, in the holy things of the LORD; then ¹²he shall bring for his trespass unto the LORD a ram without blemish out of the flocks, with thy estimation by shekels of silver, after ¹³the ¹⁴shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass offering: ¹⁵Ex. 30. 13 ch. 27. 23.

If a soul commit a trespass against the Lord and his priests. And sin through ignorance; for if a man did it knowingly, he was to be cut off, Numb. xv. 30. In the holy things of the Lord; in things consecrated to God, and to holy uses; of which see Lev. xxii. 2; such as tithes and first-fruits, or any things due, or devoted, or offered to God, which possibly a man might either withhold, or employ to some common use. See Exod. xxxiv. 26; Deut. xii. 17, 18; xv. 19; Jer. ii. 3. A ram was a more chargeable sacrifice than the former, as the sin of sacrilege was greater. With thy estimation; as thou shalt esteem or rate it, thou, O priest, as appears from ver. 16, 18; Lev. vi. 6; see also Lev. xxii. 14; xxvii. 2, 3; and at present, thou, O Moses, Lev. xxvii. 3, for he as yet performed the priest's part. And this either, 1. May be referred to the ram, which was to be of such a price and worth as the priest should appoint. Or rather, 2. Is an additional charge and punishment to him, which, besides the ram, he was to pay for the holy thing which he had withheld or abused, so many shekels of silver as the priest should esteem proportionable to it; which was, as it were, another part or branch of his trespass-offering. The shekel of the sanctuary; of which see on Gen. xxiii. 15.

16 And he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and ¹⁶shall add the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: ¹⁷and the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

Shall add the fifth part; so much they were to add to holy things redeemed, Lev. xxvii. 13, 15, 19.

17 ¶ And if a ¹⁸soul sin, and commit any of these things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; ¹⁹though he wist it not, yet is he ²⁰guilty, and shall bear his iniquity.

Any of these things, to wit, concerning holy things, of which he is ²¹et speaking, though with some difference and addition, as it may seem. The former law concerns the alienation of holy things from the sacred to a common use; and this may concern other miscarriages about holy things and holy duties, as may be gathered from ver. 19, where this is said to be a trespass against the Lord, not in a general sense, for so every sin was, but in a proper and peculiar sense. Though he wist it not; for if he did it knowingly, he must die, Numb. xv. 30.

18 ²²And he shall bring a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest: ²³and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist it not, and it shall be forgiven him.

19 It is a trespass offering: ²⁴he hath certainly trespassed against the LORD.

CHAP. VI.

Trespass-offerings for sins of deceit, or violence and perjury; restoration must be made, and a ram offered, 1—7. The law of the burnt-offering further declared; the fire to be ever burning upon the altar, 8—13. Of meat-offerings for a memorial unto the Lord, and every one that toucheth them is holy, 14—18. Meat-offerings for the consecration of Aaron and his sons, 19—23. Of the sin-offering, 24—30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, ²⁵26 ²⁷If a soul sin, and ²⁸commit a trespass against the LORD, and ²⁹lie unto his neigh-²⁵ Num. 5. 6.

²⁶ ch. 19. 11.
²⁷ Acts 5. 4.
²⁸ Col. 3. 2.

e Ex. 22. 7, 10.
 f Or, in dealing.
 + Heb. putting of the hand.
 d Prov. 24. 28. & 25. 110.

hour in that ^e which was delivered him to keep, or in ^f fellowship, or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath ^d deceived his neighbour;

This sin, though directly committed against man only, is here emphatically said to be done against the Lord; not only in general, for so every sin against man is also against the Lord, whose image in man is thereby injured, and whose law, which obligeth us to love, and fidelity, and justice to other men, is thereby violated; but in a more special sense, because this was a violation of human society, whereof God is the author, and president, and defender; see Numb. v. 6; and because it was a secret sin, of which God alone was the witness and judge; see Acts v. 4; and because God's name was abused in it by perjury, ver. 3. To keep, to wit, in trust. Or in fellowship, Heb. or in putting of the hand. Which may be either, 1. Another expression of the same thing immediately going before, which is very frequent in Scripture; and so the sense is, when one man puts any thing into another man's hand to keep for him; and when he requires it, to restore it to him. Or, 2. A distinct branch, which seems more probable, and so it belongs to commerce or fellowship in trading, which is very usual, when one man puts any thing into another's hand, not to keep it, as in the foregoing word or member, but to use and improve it for the common benefit of them both, in which cases of partnership it is easy for one to deceive the other, and therefore provision is here made against it. And this is called a putting of the hand, because such agreements and associations used to be confirmed by giving or joining their hands together, Jer. l. 15; Gal. ii. 9. Compare Exod. xxiii. 1. Taken away by violence, to wit, secretly; for he seems to speak here of such sins as could not be proved by witness. Or hath deceived his neighbour, got any thing from him by calumny, or fraud, or circumvention; for so the word signifies.

e Deut. 22. 1, 2, 3.
 f Ex. 22. 11. ch. 19. 12.
 Jer. 7. 9.
 Zech. 6. 4.

3 Or ^e have found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and ^f sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doeth, sinning therein:

Sweareth falsely; his oath being required, seeing there was no other way of discovery left.

4 Then it shall be, because he hath sinned, and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found,

Because he hath sinned, and is guilty. This guilt of his being manifested, either by his refusing to swear when called to it, as in some of the cases alleged; or by his voluntary confession upon remorse, whereby he reapeth this benefit, that he only restores the principal with the addition of a fifth part; whereas if he were convicted of his fault, he was to pay double, Exod. xxii. 9.

g ch. 5. 16.
 Num. 5. 7.
 2 Sam. 12. 6.
 Luke 19. 8.
 h Or, in the day of his being found guilty.
 i Heb. in the day of his trespass.

5 Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even ^g restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, ^h ⁱ in the day of his trespass offering.

It must not be delayed, but restitution to man must accompany repentance towards God. Compare Matt. v. 23.

6 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, ^a a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest:

i ch. 4. 26.

7 ⁱ And the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD: and it shall be forgiven him for any thing of all that he hath done in trespassing therein.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 9 Command Aaron and his sons, saying, This is the law of the burnt offering: It is the burnt offering, ^j because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it.

^j Or, for the burning.

Hitherto he hath prescribed the sacrifices themselves, now he comes to the manner of them. The law of the burnt-offering, to wit, of the daily one, of which Exod. xxix. 38; Numb. xxviii. 3, as the following words show. Because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning: the meaning is, the evening burnt-offering was to be so managed and laid on piece after piece, that the fire might be constantly maintained by it. It is to be understood, that the morning burnt-offerings were to be kept burning all the day from morning to night also; but he mentions not that because there was so great a number and such a constant succession of sacrifices in the day-time, that there needed no law for feeding and keeping in the fire then; the only danger was for the night, when other sacrifices were not offered, but only the evening burnt-offering, which if it had been consumed quickly, as the morning burnt-offering was, there had been danger of the going out of that fire, which they were commanded diligently and constantly to keep in and maintain here below, ver. 13.

10 ^k And the priest shall put on his linen garment, and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath consumed with the burnt offering on the altar, and he shall put them ^l beside the altar.

k ch. 16. 4.
 Ex. 28. 39, 40, 41, 43.
 Ezek. 44. 17, 18.

His linen garment, i. e. his linen coat, of which see Exod. xxviii. 39, 40.

The ashes are said to be consumed improperly, when the wood is consumed into ashes; as meal is said to be ground. Isa. xlvii. 2, when the corn is ground into meal; and the naked to be stripped of their clothing, Job xxii. 6, when by being stripped they are made naked.

11 And ^m he shall put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes without the camp ⁿ unto a clean place.

m Ezek. 44. 19.

Put on other garments, because this was no sacred, but a common work. Unto a clean place, where no dung or filth was laid. See Lev. iv. 12, and compare Lev. xiv. 40, 41.

12 And the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall burn wood on it every morning, and lay the burnt offering in order upon it; and he shall burn thereon ^o the fat of the peace offerings.

o ch. 3. 9, 14.

The fire coming down from heaven, Lev. ix. 24, was to be perpetually preserved, and not suffered to go out, partly that there might be no occasion nor temptation to offer strange fire, nor to mingle their inventions with God's appointments; and partly to teach them whence they were to expect the acceptance of all their sacrifices, even from the Divine mercy and grace, signified by the fire which came down from heaven, which was a usual token of God's favourable acceptance. See the notes on Gen. iv. 4, 5. Every morning; though the evening also be doubtless intended, as it appears from ver. 9, and from the nature of the thing; yet the morning is only mentioned, because then the altar was cleansed, and the ashes taken away, and a new fire made. He shall burn thereon, i. e. upon the burnt-offering, which thereby would be sooner consumed, that so way might be made for other sacrifices, which were many.

13 The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out.

14 ¶ And this is the law of the meat offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD, before the altar.

p ch. 2. 1. Num. 15. 4.

The law of the meat-offering, to wit, of that which was offered alone, and that by any of the people, not by the priest, for then it must have been all burnt. This law, delivered Lev. ii., is here repeated for the sake of some additions here made to it; as it is a common practice of law-makers, when they make additional laws, to recite such laws to which such additions belong.

15 And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even the memorial of it, unto the LORD.

16 And the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: * with unleavened bread shall it be eaten in the holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it.

The males only might eat these, because they were most holy things; whereas the daughters of Aaron might eat other holy things, Numb. xviii. 11. With unleavened bread; or rather, unleavened; for with is not in the Hebrew, and it disturbs the sense; for since the meat-offering itself was fine flour, Lev. ii. 1, it is not likely that they eat it with unleavened bread. In the court of the tabernacle of the congregation; in some special room appointed for that purpose. See Lev. viii. 31; 1 Sam. iii. 3; Ezek. xlii. 13; xli. 19, 24. The reason why this was to be eaten only by holy persons, and that in a holy place, is given ver. 17, because it is most holy, and therefore to be treated with greater reverence.

17 * It shall not be baken with leaven. * I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire; * it is most holy, as is the sin offering, and as the trespass offering.

It shall not be baken with leaven; that part which remains to the priest; for the part here offered to God seems not to have been baked at all.

18 * All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. * It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire: * every one that toucheth them shall be holy.

It may be understood either, 1. Of persons, that none should touch or eat them but consecrated persons, to wit, priests. Or this may be an additional caution, that they who eat them should be not only priests, or their male children, but also holy, i. e. having no uncleanness upon them, for in that case even the priests themselves might not touch them. Or rather, 2. Of things, as may be gathered by comparing this with ver. 27, 28. whatsoever toucheth them, as suppose the dish that receives them, the knife, or spoon, &c. which is used about them, those shall be taken for holy, and not employed for common uses. See Exod. xxix. 37.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 20 ^b This is the offering of Aaron and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD in the day when he is anointed; the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a meat offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night.

When he is anointed; when any of them are anointed for high priest; for he only of all the priests was to be anointed in future ages. This law of his consecration was delivered before, Exod. xxix. 2, 24, 25, and is here repeated because of some additions made to it. A meat-offering perpetual, to wit, whensoever any of them shall be so anointed. At night, or, in the evening; the one to be annexed to the morning sacrifice, the other to the evening sacrifice, over and besides that meat-offering which every day was to be added to the daily morning and evening sacrifices, Exod. xxix. 40.

21 In a pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baken, thou shalt bring it in: and the baken pieces of the meat offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

When it is baken, or fried, so that it swells and bubbles up. Thou shalt bring it in, who art so anointed and consecrated, ver. 22.

22 And the priest of his sons ^d that is anointed in his stead shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD; * it shall be wholly burnt.

23 For every meat offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt: it shall not be eaten.

No part of it shall be eaten by the priest, as it was when the offering was for the people. The reason of the difference is, partly, because when he offered it for the people, he was to have some recompence for his pains, which he could not expect when he offered it for himself; partly, to signify the imperfection of the Levitical priests, who could not bear their own iniquity; for the priest's eating part of the people's sacrifices did signify his typical bearing of the people's iniquity, as appears from Lev. x. 17; and partly, to teach the priests and ministers of God, that it is their duty to serve God with singleness of heart, and to be content with God's honour, though they have no present advantage by it.

24 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

25 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, saying, ^f This is the law of the sin offering: ^g In the place where the burnt offering is killed shall the sin offering be killed before the LORD: ^h it is most holy.

26 ⁱ The priest that offereth it for sin shall eat it: ^k in the holy place shall it be eaten, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation.

For sin; for the sins of the rulers, or of the people, or any of them, but not for the sins of the priests; for then its blood was brought into the tabernacle, and therefore it might not be eaten.

27 ^l Whatsoever shall touch the flesh thereof shall be holy: and when there is sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place.

Whatsoever shall touch the flesh; of which see the note on ver. 18. Upon any garment; upon the priest's garment; for it was he only that sprinkled it, and in so doing he might easily sprinkle his garments. Thou shalt wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place; partly out of reverence to the blood of sacrifices, which hereby was kept from a profane or common touch; and partly that such garments might be decent; and fit for sacred administrations.

28 But the earthen vessel wherein it is sodden ^m shall be broken: and if it be sodden in a brasen pot, it shall be both scoured, and rinsed in water.

The earthen vessel shall be broken, because being full of pores, the liquor in which it was sodden might easily sink into it, whereby it was ceremonially holy, and therefore was broken, lest afterwards it should be abused to profane or common uses. It shall be both scoured, and not broken, as being of considerable value, which therefore God would not have unnecessarily wasted. And this being of a more solid substance than an earthen vessel, was not so apt to drink in the humour.

29 ⁿ All the males among the priests shall eat thereof: ^o it is most holy.

30 ^p And no sin offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation to reconcile mithal in the holy place, shall be eaten: it shall be burnt in the fire.

Such were the sacrifices offered for the high priest, or for

r ch. 2. 3.
Ezek. 44. 29.
s ver. 26.
ch. 10. 12, 13.
Num. 18. 10.

t ch. 2. 11.

u Num. 18.
9, 10.
x ver. 25.
ch. 2. 3.
& 7. 1.
Ex. 29. 37.

y ver. 29.
Num. 18. 10.
z ch. 2. 17.

a ch. 22. 3.
4, 5, 6, 7.
Ex. 29. 37.

b Ex. 29. 2.

c Ex. 16. 36.

d ch. 4. 3.

e Ex. 29. 25.

f ch. 4. 2.

g ch. 1. 3, 5, 11, & 4. 24,
29, 33.

h ver. 17.
ch. 21. 22.
i ch. 10. 17,
18. Num.
18. 9, 10.
Ezek. 44. 28, 29.
k ver. 16.

l Ex. 29. 37.
& 30. 29.

m ch. 11. 33.
& 15. 17.

n ver. 18.
Num. 18. 10.
o ver. 25.

p ch. 4. 7, 11,
12, 16, 21.
& 10. 18.
& 18. 27.
Heb. 12. 11.

the whole assembly, either severally, Lev. iv. 7, 18, or jointly for both, in the yearly atonement, Lev. xvi. 27, 33.

CHAP. VII.

The law of the trespass-offering, and what fell to the priests, both of this and some other sacrifices, 1—10. The law of the sacrifices of peace-offerings; of thanksgiving, 11—15; of vows and free-will-offerings: the unclean person eating thereof to die, 16—21. Fat not to be eaten; what fat might be used for other things; he that eats of the fat of the offering to die; and no blood to be eat, 22—27. Another caution concerning peace-offerings, 28—34. The conclusion of the former laws, which are repeated, 35—38.

a ch. 5, & 6.
1, -7.
b ch. 6, 17,
25, & 21, 22.
c ch. 1, 3, 5, 11, & 4, 24,
29, 33.

LIKEWISE ^athis is the law of the trespass offering: ^bit is most holy.

2 ^cIn the place where they kill the burnt offering shall they kill the trespass offering: and the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar.

d ch. 3, 4, 9, 10, 14, 15, 16,
& 4, 8, 9,
Ex. 28, 13.

3 And he shall offer of it ^dall the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away:

Which is by the flanks; or, and that which is, &c. So this is another fat, as may seem probable from the mention of the several parts, the kidneys and the flanks. For it seems preposterous after a plain and exact description of the very particular place of the fat, the kidneys, to add another more dark and doubtful description of it from the flanks. And the Hebrew writers, whose common practice of these things makes them the best interpreters of it, make these divers kinds or parts of fat. And so there is only an ellipsis of the conjunction copulative, which is Psal. cxxxiii. 3, and in many other places, as hath been already showed.

5 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the Lord: it is a trespass offering.

e ch. 6, 16,
17, 18,
Num. 16, 9, 10,
f ch. 2, 3.

6 ^eEvery male among the priests shall eat thereof: it shall be eaten in the holy place: ^fit is most holy.

Every male, supposing his not to have any uncleanness upon him, ver. 20, or other impediment.

g ch. 6, 25,
26, & 14, 13.

7 As the sin offering is, so is ^gthe trespass offering: there is one law for them: the priest that maketh atonement there-with shall have it.

So is the trespass-offering, to wit, in the matter here following, for in other things they differed. Shall have it, i. e. by a synecdoche, that part of it which was by God allowed to the priest. See Lev. vi. 26.

8 And the priest that offereth any man's burnt offering, even the priest shall have to himself the skin of the burnt offering which he hath offered.

h ch. 2, 3, 10,
Num. 18, 9,
Ezek. 44, 29.

9 And ^hall the meat offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the fryingpan, and ⁱin the pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it.

ⁱ Or, on the flat plate, or, slice.

All the meat-offering, except the part reserved by God, Lev. ii. 2, 9. Shall be the priest's that offereth it, because these were ready drest and hot, and not to be presently eaten; and because the priest who offered it was in reason to expect and have something more than his brethren who laboured not about it; and that he had only in this offering, for the other were equally distributed.

10 And every meat offering, mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, one as much as another.

Dry, without oil, or drink-offering, as those Lev. v. 11;

Numb. v. 15. One as much as another: the sense may be either, 1. That every priest shall have equal right to this, when the course of his ministration comes. But then there was no reason to make so great an alteration of the phrase, nor to make any distinction of the differing kinds of meat-offerings, if in both they were to be the priest's that offered them, as is expressed ver. 9, and here, as they say, intended. Or rather, 2. That these were to be equally divided among all the priests. And there was manifest reason for this difference, because these were in greater quantity than the former; and being raw, might more easily and commodiously be divided and reserved for the several priests to dress it in that way which each of them best liked.

11 And ⁱthis is the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which he shall offer unto the Lord. i ch. 3, 1, & 22, 19, 21.

12 If he offer it for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers ^kanointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried.

k ch. 2, 4.
Numb. 6, 15.

For a thanksgiving; for mercies received. See Lev. xxii. 29; 2 Chron. xxix. 31; xxxiii. 16.

13 Besides the cakes, he shall offer ^lfor his offering leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace offerings. l Amos 4, 5.

Leavened bread; partly, because this was a sacrifice of another kind than those in which leaven was forbidden, this being a sacrifice of thanksgiving for God's blessings, among which leavened bread was one; partly, to show that leaven was not so strictly forbidden in other sacrifices, as if it were evil in itself, but to teach us wholly to rest in the will of God in all his appointments, without too scrupulous an inquiry into the particular reasons of them. Object. Leaven was universally forbidden, Lev. ii. 11. Answ. 1. That prohibition concerned only things offered and burnt upon the altar, which this bread was not, but it was offered only towards the priest's food. 2. That was another kind of sacrifice, and therefore it is no wonder if it had other rites. 3. That leaven was not universally forbidden appears from Lev. xxiii. 17. With the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace-offerings, or, with the sacrifice of thanksgiving for his peace or prosperity.

14 And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an heave offering unto the Lord, ^mand it shall be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace offerings. m Num. 18, 9, 11, 19.

Of it, i. e. either of the loaves of leavened bread mentioned ver. 13, or of the offering, one of each part of the whole oblation, as it follows; it being most probable, and agreeable to the rules and laws laid down before and afterward, that the priest should have a share in the unleavened cakes and wafers, as well as in the leavened bread.

Concerning the heave-offerings, see Exod. xxix. 24, 28.

15 ⁿAnd the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings for thanksgiving shall be eaten the same day that it is offered; he shall not leave any of it until the morning.

n ch. 22, 30.

By the priests and offerers this flesh was eaten, Lev. xxii. 30.

16 But ^oif the sacrifice of his offering be a vow, or a voluntary offering, it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice: and on the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten:

o ch. 19, 6, 7, 5.

Be a vow; offered in performance of a vow, the man having desired some special favour from God, and vowed the sacrifice to God if he would grant it. A voluntary offering, which a man freely offered to God, in testimony of his faith and love to God, without any particular injunction from God, or design of his own special advantage thereby. See Lev. xxii. 23; Ezek. xlvi. 12. On the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten, which was not allowed for the thank-offering; the reason of which difference is to be fetched only from God's good pleasure and will, to which he expects our obedience, though we discern not the reason of his appointments.

17 But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice on the third day shall be burnt with fire.

That it might neither putrefy, and thereby be exposed to contempt; nor yet be reserved either for superstitious abuse, or for the priest's domestic use, which would savour of covetousness, and of distrust of God's care for their future provisions.

18 And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings be eaten at all on the third day, it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be ^p imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an ^a abomination, and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity.

It shall not be imputed unto him for an acceptable service to God.

19 And the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire: and as for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

The flesh, to wit, of the holy offering, of which he is here treating; and therefore the general word is to be so limited; for other flesh one might eat in this case, Deut. xii. 15, 22. That toucheth any unclean thing, after its oblation; which might easily happen, as it was conveyed from the altar to the place where it was eaten; for it was not eaten in the holy place, as appears, because it was eaten by the priests, together with the offerers, who might not come thither. As for the flesh, i. e. the other flesh; that which shall not be polluted by any unclean touch. All that be clean, whether priests or offerers, or guests invited to the feast. See 1 Sam. ix. 12; xx. 26. Both the flesh and the eaters of it must be clean.

20 But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, that pertain unto the LORD, ^r having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul ^s shall be cut off from his people.

The soul that eateth knowingly; for if it were done ignorantly, a sacrifice was accepted for it, Lev. v. 2. Having his uncleanness upon him, i. e. not being cleansed from his uncleanness according to the appointment, Lev. xi. 24, &c. This verse speaks of uncleanness from an internal cause, as by an issue, &c., for what was from an external cause is spoken of in the next verse.

21 Moreover the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as ^t the uncleanness of man, or any ^u unclean beast, or any ^v abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul ^x shall be cut off from his people.

The uncleanness of man, or, of women, for the word signifies both; and that there were such things coming from men or women, the touch whereof did pollute men and things, may be seen Lev. xv., and elsewhere. Others make it an hypallage. uncleanness of man, for a man of uncleanness, or, an unclean man. But that seems not necessary here.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^y Ye shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat.

The general prohibition of eating fat, Lev. iii. 17, is here explained of, and restrained to, those kinds of creatures which were sacrificed to God.

24 And the fat of the ^z beast that dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use: but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

He speaketh still of the same kinds of beasts, and showeth that this prohibition reacheth not only to the fat of those beasts which were offered to God, but also of those that died, or were killed at home. And if this seems a superfluous prohibition concerning the fat, since the lean as well as the fat of such beasts was forbidden, Lev. xxii. 8, it must be noted that that prohibition reached only to the priests, ver. 4.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be cut off from his people.

26 ^z Moreover ye shall eat no manner of blood, whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings.

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

29 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^a He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace offerings unto the LORD shall bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace offerings.

Not by another, but by himself, as it is explained ver. 30. His oblation, i. e. those parts of the peace-offering which are in a special manner offered to God, to wit, the fat, and breast, and shoulder, as it follows. Unto the Lord, i. e. to the tabernacle, where the Lord was present in a special manner. He shows, that though part of such offerings might be eaten in any clean place, Lev. x. 14, yet not till they had been killed, and part of them offered to the Lord in the place appointed by him for that purpose.

30 ^b His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire, the fat with the breast, it shall he bring, that ^c the breast may be waved for a wave offering before the LORD.

After the beast was killed, and the parts of it divided, the priest was to put the parts mentioned into the hands of the offerer. See Exod. xxix. 22—24. Made by fire; so called not strictly, as burnt-offerings are, because some parts of these were left for the priest, ver. 31; but more largely, because even these peace-offerings were in part, though not wholly, burnt. The breast may be waved to and fro by his hands, which were supported and directed by the hands of the priest.

31 ^d And the priest shall burn the fat upon the altar: ^e but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'.

i. e. The portion of every succeeding high priest and his family: compare Exod. xxix. 26.

32 And ^f the right shoulder shall ye give unto the priest for an heave offering of the sacrifices of your peace offerings.

33 He among the sons of Aaron, that offereth the blood of the peace offerings, and the fat, shall have the right shoulder for his part.

34 For ^g the wave breast and the heave shoulder have I taken of the children of Israel from off the sacrifices of their peace offerings, and have given them unto Aaron the priest and unto his sons by a statute for ever from among the children of Israel.

The breast or heart is the seat of wisdom, and the shoulder of strength for action, and these two may denote p Num. 18.

27.
q ch. 11. 10,
11, 41,
& 19. 7.

r ch. 15. 3.
s Gen. 14. 14.

t ch. 12, &
13, & 15.
u ch. 11. 24, 26.
v Ezek. 4.
14.

x ver. 20.

y ch. 3. 17.

+ Heb.
carcase.
ch. 17. 15.
Deut. 14. 21.
Ezek. 4. 14.
& 44. 31.

z Gen. 9. 4.
ch. 3. 17. &
17. 10.—14.

a ch. 3. 1.

b ch. 3. 3, 4, 5, 14.

c Ex. 29. 24,
27, ch. 8. 27.
d ch. 9. 21.
Num. 6. 20.

d ch. 3. 5, 11, 16.
e ver. 34.

f ver. 34.
ch. 9. 21.
Num. 6. 20.

g Ex. 29. 28.
ch. 10. 14, 15.
Num. 18. 16,
19.
Deut. 16. 3.

that wisdom and virtue or power which was in Christ our High Priest, 1 Cor. i. 24, and which ought to be in every priest.

35 ¶ This is the portion of the anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons, out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, in the day when he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;

Of the anointing, i. e. of the priesthood; the sign put for the thing signified; and the anointing by a like figure is put for the right, or part of the sacrifices belonging to the priest by virtue of his anointing, as plainly appears from the words here following, out of the offerings, &c. In the day when he presented them: this was their portion appointed them by God in that day, and therefore to be given to them in after-ages. Or, from the day, &c., and thenceforward; the Hebrew preposition both being put for min, as it is frequently.

36 Which the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations.

37 This is the law of the burnt offering, of the meat offering, and of the sin offering, and of the trespass offering, and of the consecrations, and of the sacrifice of the peace offerings;

Of the consecrations, i. e. of the sacrifice offered at the consecration of the priests.

38 Which the LORD commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he commanded the children of Israel to offer their oblations unto the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai.

CHAP. VIII.

Moses by God's command calls together Aaron and his sons, and the whole congregation, 1—5. Washes Aaron and his sons, 6. Puts on the priestly garments, 7—9. Anoints the tabernacle, with the altar and laver, to sanctify them, 10, 11. Anoints Aaron, 12. Puts the holy garments on his sons, 13. Offers sacrifices for them; a bullock for a sin-offering, 14—17; and a ram for a burnt-offering, 18—21; and a second ram for consecration; uses the blood about some parts of their bodies; gives the parts into their hands to wave before the Lord, and sprinkles of the anointing oil and blood from upon the altar on them and their garments, 22—30. Declares to them God's charge, which they perform, 31—36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

This is here premised, to show that Moses did not confer the priesthood upon Aaron by virtue of his relation or affection to him, but by God's appointment, which also appears from the following story.

2 *Take Aaron and his sons with him, and the garments, and the anointing oil, and a bullock for the sin offering, and two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread;

3 And gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

The elders which represented all, and as many of the people as would and could get thither, that all might be witnesses both of Aaron's commission from God, and of his work and business.

4 And Moses did as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, This is the thing which the LORD commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, and washed them with water.

7 And he put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod, and bound it unto him therewith.

The linen breeches prescribed Exod. xxviii. 42 are not here mentioned, because they were not to be put on at his consecration, but afterwards in the execution of his office.

8 And he put the breastplate upon him: also he put in the breastplate the Urim and the Thummim.

9 And he put the mitre upon his head; also upon the mitre, even upon his forehead, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD commanded Moses.

Of which see Exod. xxix. 6.

10 And Moses took the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

11 And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

Seven times, to signify the singular use and holiness of it, which it was not only to have in itself, but also to communicate to all the sacrifices laid upon it. The laver, where the priests washed themselves, and the sacrifices, and vessels or instruments of the holy ministration. See Lev. vi. 28.

12 And he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him.

He poured of the anointing oil in a plentiful manner, as appears from Psal. cxxxiii. 2, whereas other persons and things were only anointed or sprinkled with it.

13 And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

14 And he brought the bullock for the sin offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin offering.

There were indeed seven bullocks to be offered at his consecration, one every day, Exod. xxix. 35, 36; but here he mentions only one, either by a common enallage of number, or because he here describes only the work of the first day, and leaves the rest to be gathered from it; of which see ver. 33.

15 And he slew it; and Moses took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it.

16 And he took all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burned it upon the altar.

17 But the bullock, and his hide, his flesh, and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD commanded Moses.

h ch. 8. 12, 30. Ex. 40. 13, 15.

i ch. 6. 9.

k ch. 6. 14. l ch. 6. 25. m ver. 1.

n ch. 6. 20. Ex. 29. 1. o ver. 11.

p ch. 1. 2.

d Ex. 29. 1.

e Ex. 29. 4.

f Ex. 29. 5. g Ex. 29. 4.

h Ex. 28. 30.

i Ex. 29. 6.

k Ex. 28. 37. etc.

l Ex. 30. 26, 27, 28, 29.

m ch. 21. 10. n Ex. 29. 7. & 30. 20. Pa. 133. 2. Ecclus. 43. 15.

n Ex. 29. 8, 9.

† Heb. bound.

o Ex. 29. 10. Ezek. 43. 19.

p ch. 4. 4.

q Ex. 29. 12, 36. ch. 4. 7. Ezek. 43. 20, 26. Heb. 9. 22.

r Ex. 29. 13. ch. 4. 8.

s ch. 4. 11, 13. Ex. 29. 15.

In the offerings for the people the hide was not burnt, but given to the priest.

^t Ex. 29. 15. 18 ¶ And he brought the ram for the burnt offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

19 And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

He killed it; either Moses, as in the following clause, the pronoun being put for the noun; or some other person by Moses's appointment; which may be the reason why he is not named here, as he is to the sprinkling of the blood, which was an action more proper to the priest, and more essential to the sacrifice, as the learned have observed.

20 And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat.

21 And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt sacrifice for a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; ^u as the LORD commanded Moses.

^w Ex. 29. 19, 31. 22 ¶ And ^w he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

23 And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

The lowest and softest part of the ear is called the tip or lap of the ear. See Exod. xxix. 20.

24 And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ear, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

^x Ex. 29. 22. 25 *And he took the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and the right shoulder:

^y Ex. 29. 23. 26 ^y And out of the basket of unleavened bread, that was before the LORD, he took one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder:

^z Ex. 29. 24, &c. 27 And he put all *upon Aaron's hands, and upon his sons' hands, and waved them for a wave offering before the LORD.

^a Ex. 29. 25. 28 *And Moses took them from off their hands, and burnt them on the altar upon the burnt offering: they were consecrations for a sweet savour: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

29 And Moses took the breast, and waved it for a wave offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' ^b part; as the LORD commanded Moses.

Moses at this time administering the priest's office was to receive the priest's wages; it being most just and reasonable that the work and wages should go together.

^c Ex. 29. 21, & 30. 30, Num. 3. 3. 30 And *Moses took of the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

31 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, ^d Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.

Boil the flesh, that which was left of the ram, and particularly the breast, which was said to be Moses's part, ver. 29, and by him was given to Aaron, that he and his sons might eat of it, in token that they, and only they, should have the right to do so for the future.

32 *And that which remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.

33 And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for ^f seven days shall he consecrate you.

For seven days the same ceremonies were to be repeated, as the next verse implies, and other rites to be performed. He consecrate you; either God or Moses; for the words may be spoken by Moses, either in God's name, or in his own; Moses speaking of himself in the third person, which is very common in Scripture.

34 *As he hath done this day, ^g so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and ^h keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

The charge of the Lord; what God hath commanded you concerning your consecration.

If the threatening seem too severe for the fault, it must be considered both that it is the usual practice of lawgivers most severely to punish the first offences for the terror and caution of others, and for the maintenance of their own authority; and that this transgression was aggravated by many circumstances, being committed by sacred and eminent persons, and that in the presence of the people, which made it a public scandal, and in God's worship, where he is very tender and jealous, and against a plain and easy command of God, and at a time when they were receiving high favours and privileges from God. Nor is sin to be esteemed or measured by the idle fancies of men of corrupt minds and lives, whose interests and lusts easily blind their minds; but by the authority, majesty, and will of the great, and wise, and just Lawgiver.

36 So Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. IX.

Moses commands Aaron to offer a sin-offering, and burnt-offering, and peace and meat offering; the congregation drawing near, and so the glory of the Lord should appear to them; to make atonement for himself and the people, 1—7. Aaron's offering for himself, 8—14; for the people, 15—21, whom he blesses, first by prayer to God, and then by solemn declaration to them; the glory of God appears: fire from heaven consumes the sacrifice; the people shout and are amazed, 22—24.

AND *it came to pass on the eighth day, ^e that Moses called Aaron and his sons, and the elders of Israel;

The eighth day, to wit, from the first day of his consecration, or when the seven days of his consecration were ended, chap. viii. 33, 35, as appears from Exod. xxix. 30, &c.; Ezek. xliii. 27. The eighth day is famous in Scripture for the perfecting and purifying both of men and beasts. See Lev. xii. 2, 3; xiv. 8-10; xv. 13, 14; xxii. 27.

All the congregation were called to be witnesses of Aaron's instalment into his office, to prevent their murmurings and contempt, which being done, the elders were now sufficient to be witnesses of Aaron's first execution of his office.

^{b ch. 4. 2. & 8. 14. Ex. 29. 1. c ch. 8. 18.} 2 And he said unto Aaron, ^b Take thee a young calf for a sin offering, ^c and a ram for a burnt offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

A young calf, Heb. a calf, the son of a bull or cow; which may seem to be added purposely to intimate that it was not a young calf properly so called, but a young bullock, for that was the sacrifice enjoined for the high priest's sin-offering, Lev. iv. 3. Though it be not material, if this be a young calf, and that a young bull, because the grounds and ends of the several sacrifices differ, that Lev. iv. being for his particular sin, and this for his own and family's sins in general, and therefore no wonder if the sacrifices also differ. For a sin-offering, for himself and his own sins, which was an evidence of the imperfection of that priesthood, and of the necessity of another and a better.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, ^d Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt offering;

^{d ch. 4. 23. Ezra 6. 17. & 10. 19.}

A sin-offering for the people, as it is expressed here ver. 15, for whose sin a young bullock was required, Lev. iv. 14; but that was for some particular sin, but this was more general and indefinite for all their sins. Besides, there being an eye here had to the priest's consecration and entrance into his office, it is no wonder if there be some difference in these sacrifices from those before prescribed.

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD; and ^e a meat offering mingled with oil: for ^f to day the LORD will appear unto you.

^{e ch. 2. 4. f ver. 6. 23. Ex. 29. 43.}

See the fulfilling of this promise, ver. 24. Heb. hath appeared. He speaks of the thing to come as if it were past, which is frequent in Scripture, to give them the more assurance of the thing.

5 ¶ And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation: and all the congregation drew near and stood before the LORD.

Before the tabernacle where God dwelt.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do: and ^g the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.

^{g ver. 23. Ex. 24. 16.}

The glorious manifestation of God's powerful and gracious presence, ver. 24. Compare Exod. xxiv. 16, 17; xl. 34, 35; Ezek. xliii. 2.

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and ^h offer thy sin offering, and thy burnt offering, and make an atonement for thyself, and for the people: and ⁱ offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; as the LORD commanded.

^{h ch. 4. 3. 1 Sam. 3. 14. Heb. 5. 3. & 7. 27. & 9. 7.}

^{i ch. 4. 16, 20. Heb. 5. 1.}

Moses had hitherto sacrificed, but now he resigneth his work to Aaron, and actually gives him that commission which from God he had received for him.

The order is very observable, first for thyself, otherwise thou art unfit to do it for the people. Hereby God would teach us, both the deficiency of this priesthood, and the absolute necessity of a higher and better Priest, Heb. vii. 26, 27, and how important and needful it is that God's ministers should be in the grace and favour of God themselves, that their ministrations may be acceptable to God, and profitable to the people.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin offering, which was for himself.

9 ^k And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him: and he dipped his finger in the blood, and ^l put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar:

^{k ch. 8. 15.}

^{l See ch. 4. 7.}

Upon the horns of the altar, to wit, of burnt-offerings, of which alone he speaks both in the foregoing and following words; and the blood was poured out at the bottom of this altar only, not of the altar of incense, as appears from Lev. iv. 7, where indeed there is mention of putting some of the blood upon the horns of the altar of incense, in this case of the priest's sacrificing for his own sins. But there seems to be a double difference: 1. That sacrifice was offered for some particular sin, this for his sins indefinitely. 2. There he is supposed to be complete in his office, and here he is but entering into his office, and therefore must prepare and sanctify himself by this offering upon the brazen altar in the court, before he can be admitted into the holy place where the altar of incense was. And the like is to be said for the difference between the sin-offering for the people here, and Lev. iv. 17, 18.

10 ^m But the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver of the sin offering, he burnt upon the altar; ⁿ as the LORD commanded Moses.

^{m ch. 8. 16.}

^{n ch. 4. 8.}

Either, 1. Disposed it for the burning, i. e. laid it upon the altar where it was to be burnt by the heavenly fire, ver. 24. Thus interpreters generally understand the word here, as also ver. 13, 17, 20, by an anticipation; or the consequent is put for the antecedent, of which there are examples in Scripture. Or, 2. Properly burnt by ordinary fire, which was used and allowed until the fire came down from heaven, ver. 24, though afterwards it was forbidden. And if it had not been allowed otherwise, yet this being done by Aaron at the command of Moses, and consequently with God's approbation, it was unquestionably lawful. And therefore there seems to be no necessity of departing from the proper sense of the word. Add to this, that there is nothing said to be consumed by that heavenly fire, but the burnt-offering with the fat belonging to it, namely, that burnt-offering mentioned ver. 16, which therefore is not there said to be burnt, as it is said of the other burnt-offering, ver. 13, and of the rest of the sacrifices in their places.

11 ^o And the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.

^{o ch. 4. 11. & 8. 17.}

12 And he slew the burnt offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, ^p which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

^{p ch. 1. 5. & 8. 19.}

13 ^q And they presented the burnt offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head: and he burnt them upon the altar.

^{q ch. 8. 20.}

14 ^r And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt offering on the altar.

^{r ch. 8. 21.}

15 ¶ ^s And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

^{s ver. 3. Is. 53. 10. Heb. 2. 17. & 5. 3.}

This was to be offered for the people, as the former was for himself, ver. 7. As the first, to wit, in like manner as he did that for the priest, ver. 8, and consequently burnt this, as he did the other, ver. 11, for which Moses reproves him, Lev. x. 17.

16 And he brought the burnt offering, and offered it ^t according to the manner.

^{t ch. 1. 3, 10. || Or, ordinance.}

Which also was offered for the people, as the last-mentioned sin-offering was.

u ver. 4.
ch. 2. 1, 2
+ Heb. *Filled
his hand out of it.*
x Ex. 29. 38.

17 And he brought ^u the meat offering, and [†] took a handful thereof, and burnt ^{it} upon the altar, ^² beside the burnt sacrifice of the morning.

The meat-offering was always to be added to the burnt-offering. See Lev. vi. The burnt-sacrifice of the morning was to be first offered every morning; for God will not have his ordinary and stated service swallowed up by extraordinary.

18 He slew also the bullock and the ^y ram ^{for} ^³ a sacrifice of peace offerings, which ^{was} for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump, and that which covereth ^{the} inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul ^{above} the liver:

That which covereth; the fat which covereth the inwards, or the guts; which words are here understood, as appears by comparing this place with Lev. iii. 3, 9; iv. 8; vii. 3, where they are expressed.

20 And they put the fat upon the ^z breasts, ^² and he burnt the fat upon the altar:

The breasts were reserved for the priest out of the peace-offerings, which were offered for the people. See Lev. vii. 30, 31, 34.

21 And the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved ^a for a wave offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded.

22 And Aaron lifted up his hand toward the people, and ^b blessed them, and came down from offering of the sin offering, and the burnt offering, and peace offerings.

Aaron lifted up his right hand, which the Jews say was lifted up highest; or his hands, according to the other reading, which was the usual rite of blessing. See Luke xxiv. 50. By this posture he signified both whence he expected the blessing, and his hearty desire of it for them. Blessed them, in some such manner as is related Numb. vi. 24, &c., though not in the same form, as some suppose, for it is not probable that he used it before God delivered it. And this blessing was an act of his priestly office no less than sacrificing. See Gen. xiv. 18, 19; Numb. vi. 23; Deut. x. 8; xxi. 5; Luke xxiv. 50. Came down, to wit, from the altar; whence he is said to come down, either, 1. Because the altar stood upon raised ground, to which they went up by an insensible ascent. Compare Exod. xx. 26. Or, 2. Because it was nearer the holy place, and the holy of holies, which was the upper end.

23 And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out, and blessed the people: ^c and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

Moses went in with Aaron to direct him, and to see him perform those parts of his office which were to be done in the holy place, about the lights, and the table of shew-bread, and of the altar of incense, upon which part of the blood of the sacrifices now offered was to be sprinkled, according to the law, Lev. iv. 7, 18. Blessed the people, i. e. prayed to God for his blessing upon the people, as this phrase is explained, Numb. vi. 23, &c., and particularly for his gracious acceptance of these and all succeeding sacrifices, and for his signification thereof by some extraordinary token, which accordingly happened. The glory of the LORD; either a miraculous brightness shining from the cloudy pillar, as Exod. xvi. 10; Numb. xiv. 10; or a glorious and visible discovery of God's gracious presence and acceptance of the present ministry and service, as it follows.

24 And ^d there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat: ^{which} when all the people saw, ^e they shouted, and fell on their faces.

There came a fire, in token of God's acceptance and approbation of the priesthood now instituted, and the sacrifices now offered, and consequently of others of the like nature. See the like instances, Judg. vi. 21; xiii. 19, 20; 1 Chron. xxi. 26. And this fire now given was to be carefully kept, and not suffered to go out, Lev. vi. 13, and therefore was carried in a peculiar vessel in their journeys in the wilderness. From before the LORD; or, from the face or presence of the LORD; i. e. from the place where God was in a special manner present: either, 1. From heaven, as 1 Kings xviii. 38; 2 Chron. vii. 1, which is oft called God's dwelling-place, as Deut. xxvi. 15; Isa. lxiii. 15. Or, 2. From the holy of holies, where also God is said to dwell, 2 Kings xix. 15; 2 Chron. vi. 2; Psal. lxxx. 1. And what is done before the ark is said to be done before God, as 1 Chron. xiii. 8, 10; xvi. 1, &c. And this may seem more probable by comparing this with Lev. x. 2. They shouted; as wondering at, rejoicing in, and blessing God for this wonderful and gracious discovery of himself, and of his favour to them therein.

CHAP. X.

Nadab and Abihu offering strange fire, are devoured by fire from heaven, 1, 2; for God will be sanctified by them that draw near unto him, 3. Their dead bodies carried without the camp, 4, 5. Aaron and his two other sons forbid to mourn, 6; also to drink wine or any strong drink, 8, 9. Their duty to distinguish between holy and unholy; and to teach the people all the statutes of the LORD, 10, 11. Moses declares to them what of the burnt-offerings they might eat, 12—15; is angry that the sin-offering was not eat, nor the blood carried into the holy place, 16—18. He is appeased by Aaron, 19, 20.

AND ^a Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, ^b took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered ^c strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not.

Strange fire; so called, as not appointed for, nor belonging to, the present work; fire not taken from the altar, as it ought, but from some common fire. Before the LORD; upon the altar of incense. Which he commanded them not; for seeing Moses himself neither did nor might do any thing in God's worship without God's command, which is oft noted of him, for these to do it was a more unpardonable and inexcusable presumption. Besides, not commanding may be here put for forbidding, as it is Jer. xxxii. 35. Now as this was forbidden implicitly, Lev. vi. 12, especially when God himself made a comment upon that text, and by sending fire from heaven declared of what fire he there spake; so it is more than probable it was forbidden expressly, though that be not here mentioned, nor was it necessary it should be.

2 And there ^d went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them, and they died before the LORD.

From the LORD; from heaven, or rather from the sanctuary. See chap. ix. 24. Devoured them; destroyed their lives; for their bodies and garments were not consumed, as it appears from ver. 4, 5. Thus the sword is said to devour, 2 Sam. ii. 26. Thus lightning many times kills persons, without any hurt to their bodies or garments.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, ^e This is it that the LORD spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them ^f that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be ^g glorified. ^h And Aaron held his peace.

This is it that the LORD spake; though the express words be not recorded in Scripture, where only the heads of scri-d Gen. 4. 4.

Judg. 6. 21.
1 Kin. 16. 38.
2 Chro. 7. 1.
Ps. 20. 3.
2 Mac. 2. 10,
11. e 1 Kings
18. 39.

2 Chro. 7. 3. Ezra 3. 11.

a Ex. 29. 24, 26.
ch. 7. 30, 31,
32, 33, 34.

b Numb. 6. 23.
Deut. 21. 5.
Luke 24. 50.

c ver. 5.
Numb. 14. 10.
& 16. 19, 42.

a ch. 16. 1.
& 22. 9.
Numb. 3. 5, 4.
& 26. 61.
1 Chro. 24. 2.
b ch. 16. 12.
Numb. 16. 18.
c Ex. 30. 9.

d ch. 9. 24.
Numb. 16. 35.
2 Sam. 6. 7.

e Ex. 19. 22.
& 29. 45.
ch. 21. 6, 17,
21. 16, 52. 11.
Ezek. 20. 41.
& 42. 13.

f 1e. 49. 3.
Ezek. 28. 22.
John 13. 31.
32. & 14. 13.

g 2 Thess. 1. 10.
g Ps. 38. 9.

mons and discourses are contained, yet it is probable they were uttered by Moses in God's name. Howsoever, the sense and substance of them is in many places. See Exod. xix. 22; xxix. 43; Lev. viii. 35. I will be sanctified: this may note either, 1. Their duty to sanctify God, i. e. to demean themselves with such care, and reverence, and watchfulness, as becomes the holiness of the God whom they serve, and of the worship in which they are engaged; whence he leaves them to gather the justice of the present judgment for their gross neglect herein. Or, 2. God's purpose to sanctify himself, i. e. to declare and manifest himself to be a holy and righteous God by his severe and impartial punishment of all transgressors, how near soever they are to him. In them that come nigh me, i. e. who draw near to me, or to the place where I dwell, and are admitted into the holy place, whence others are shut out. It is a description of the priests. See Exod. xix. 22; Lev. xxi. 17; Ezek. xlii. 13, 14. Before all the people I will be glorified: as they have sinned publicly and scandalously, so I will vindicate my honour in a public and exemplary manner, that all men may learn to give me the glory of my sovereignty and holiness by an exact conformity to my laws. Aaron held his peace, partly through excessive grief, which is sometimes signified by silence, as Isa. xlvi. 5; Lam. ii. 10, and principally in acknowledgment of God's justice and submission to it. Compare Psal. xxxix. 10; Ezek. xxiv. 17. He murmured not, nor replied against God, nor against Moses; wisely considering that their sin was directly against God, and in that which is most dear and honourable in God's account, to wit, in his worship; and that God's honour ought to be dearer to him than his sons; and that this being the first violation of the law newly given, and committed by those who should have been the strictest observers and assertors of it, did deserve a very severe punishment.

4 And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of ^h Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, ⁱ carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

For Aaron and his sons had scarce finished their consecration work, and were employed in their holy ministrations, from which they were not to be called for funeral solemnities. See Lev. xxi. 1, &c. The uncle of Aaron. See Exod. vi. 18; Numb. iii. 19. Your brethren, i. e. kinsmen, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xlii. 8; xxiv. 27. Out of the camp, where the burying-places of the Jews were, that the living might neither be annoyed by the unwholesome scent of the dead, nor defiled by the touch of their graves.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

In their coats; in the holy garments wherein they ministered; which might be done either, 1. As a testimony of a respect due to them, notwithstanding their present failure; and that God in judgment remembered mercy, and when he took away their lives, spared their souls. Or, 2. Because being polluted both by their sin, and by the touch of their dead bodies, God would not have them any more used in his service.

6 And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, ^h Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes; lest ye die, and lest ⁱ wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

Uncover not your heads; either, 1. By putting off your mitres and bonnets, or ornaments, and going bare-headed, as mourners sometimes did. See Lev. xiii. 45; Ezek. xxiv. 17, 23. Or, 2. By shaving off the hair of your heads and beards, as mourners did. See Job i. 20; Jer. vii. 29; xli. 5; Ezek. xli. 20; Micah i. 16. This latter may seem to be principally intended, 1. Because this ceremony of uncovering the head being used by the people as well as by the priests in case of mourning, as the places now alleged show; and the other ceremony here joined with it, of rending the clothes, being also common to the people; seems to imply that he speaks not of that uncovering of the head which was peculiar to the priests, but of that which was common both to priests and people, especially seeing that which is here forbidden to these priests is in the following words allowed to the people, to bewail their death, which as at other times it was, so now probably might be performed by these same ceremonies. 2. Because the high priest is forbidden to uncover his head in way of mourning for the dead, not only at that time when he was in actual ministration, but at all times, even when he had neither his mitre nor any of the holy garments upon him, Lev. xxi. 10. Neither rend your clothes; give no signification of your sorrow; mourn not for them; partly lest you should seem to justify and approve of your brethren, and tacitly reflect upon God as too severe in his proceedings with them; and partly lest thereby you should be diverted from or disturbed in your present service, which God expects should be done cheerfully. But let your brethren bewail the burning, not so much in compassion to them against whom God hath showed such great and just indignation, as in sorrow for the tokens of Divine displeasure.

7 ^m And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: ⁿ for the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

Ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle, where at this time they were, either because this happened within seven days of their consecration; see Lev. viii. 35; or because they were longer detained there about some other holy ministrations. Though the former may seem more probable, because the meat-offering here mentioned, ver. 12, and the sin-offering, ver. 16, were part of the consecration-offerings. The anointing oil of the Lord is upon you. You are persons consecrated peculiarly to God's service, which therefore it is just and reasonable you should prefer before all funeral solemnities.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, saying,

9 ^o Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations;

This is here added, either because Nadab and Abihu had been led to their error by drinking too much, which might easily fall out when they were feasting and full of joy for their entrance into so honourable and profitable an employment; or at least because others might thereby be drawn to commit the same miscarriages, which they might now commit from other causes. Drunkenness is so odious a sin in itself, especially in a minister, and most of all in the time of his administration of sacred things, that God saw fit to prevent all occasions of it. And hence the devil, who is God's ape in his prescriptions for his worship, required this abstinence from his priests in their idolatrous service.

10 And that ye may ^p put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean;

Persons and things, which Nadab and Abihu did not, mistaking unholy or common fire for that which was sacred and appointed by God for their use.

11 ^q And that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

That ye may teach; be apt to teach aright, which drunken persons are very unfit to do.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take ^r the meat-offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it with-^h Ex. 6. 18, 22, Num. 3. 19, 30.

ⁱ Luke 7. 12. Acts 5. 6, 9, 10. & 6. 2.

^m ch. 21. 12.

ⁿ Ex. 28. 41. ch. 6. 30.

^o Ezek. 44. 21. Luke 1. 15. 1 Tim. 3. 3. Tit. 1. 7.

^p ch. 11. 47. & 20. 25. Jer. 15. 19. Ezek. 22. 26. & 44. 23.

^q Deut. 24. 8. Neh. 8. 2, 8, 9, 13. Jer. 18. 18. Mal. 2. 7.

^r Ex. 29. 2. ch. 6. 16. Num. 18. 9, 10.

• ch. 21. 22. out leaven beside the altar: for *it is most holy:

Moses repeateth and re-enforceth the former command, partly lest their great loss and grief should cause them to forget or neglect their meat prescribed them by God, which abstinence would have been both a signification of their sorrow, which God had forbidden them, and a new transgression of a Divine precept; and partly to encourage them to go on in their holy services, and not to be dejected for the late severity, as if God would no more accept them or their sacrifices.

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due, of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for 'so I am commanded.

t ch. 2. 3.
& 6. 16.

In the holy place; in the court, near the altar of burnt-offerings. See Lev. vi. 26. Because it is thy due. See Lev. ii. 3; vi. 16, 17.

14 And "the wave breast and heave shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place; thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace offerings of the children of Israel.

In a clean place; in any of your dwellings, or any place in the camp, which he supposeth to be kept clean from all ceremonial defilement, as they ought to be; whence the lepers were put out of the camp. See Numb. v. 1—3. In any place where the women as well as the men might come, for the daughters of the priests might eat these as well as their sons, as it here follows. And thy daughters, to wit, if they were maids, or widows, or divorced, Lev. xxii. 11—13.

15 *The heave shoulder and the wave breast shall they bring with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever; as the LORD hath commanded.

x ch. 7. 29,
30, 34.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought 'the goat of the sin offering, and, behold, it was burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

The goat of the sin-offering, to wit, for the people, mentioned Lev. ix. 15, to know what was done with that part of it which was the priest's; which he inquired into more than into the other sacrifices, because a mistake there was easy and probable, because that matter might seem something doubtful, by reason of two laws concerning it seemingly contrary, the one Lev. iv. 21, where it is to be burned, the other Lev. vi. 26, where it was to be eaten. But they are thus reconciled: It was to be burnt when the blood of this sacrifice was brought into the holy place, Lev. iv. 16, 17; and when that was not done, which Aaron this first time could not do, for the reason expressed in ver. 18, it was to be eaten, and here lay their mistake. He was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar: he spares Aaron at this time, as overwhelmed with sorrow, and because the rebuking of him before his sons might have exposed him to some contempt; but he knew that the reproof, though directed to them, would concern him too, as he also apprehended it. Which were left alive, preserved from death when their brethren were destroyed, which is here mentioned as an aggravation of their sin.

s ch. 6. 26,
29.

17 * Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

i. e. As a reward of your service and function, whereby you do expiate, bear, and take away their sins, by offering those sacrifices, and performing those rites, by which God through Christ is reconciled to the penitent and believing offerers.

18 Behold, *the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, ^bas I commanded.

a ch. 6. 30.

b ch. 6. 26.

The blood of it was not brought in within the holy place; the reason whereof was, because Aaron was not yet admitted into the holy place, whither that blood should have been brought, till he had prepared the way by the sacrifices which were to be offered in the court.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, 'this day have they offered their sin offering and their burnt offering before the LORD; and such things have befallen me: and if I had eaten the sin offering to day, ^dshould it have been accepted in the sight of the LORD?

c ch. 9. 8, 12.

d Jer. 6. 20.

& 14. 12.

Hos. 9. 4.

Mal. 1. 10, 13.

This day have they offered; they have done the substance of the thing, though they have mistaken this one circumstance. Such things have befallen me; whereby, having been oppressed with grief, and almost bereft of my reason, it is not strange nor unpardonable if I have mistaken. Should it have been accepted? because it was not to be eaten with sorrow, but with rejoicing and thanksgiving, as appears from Deut. xii. 7; xxvi. 14; Hos. ix. 4; and I thought it fitter to burn it, as I did other sacred relics, than to profane it by eating it unworthily.

20 And when Moses heard that, he was content.

He rested satisfied with his answer, either because he thought it reasonable, seeing the letter of the law oftentimes yields to necessities or great accidents, 2 Chron. xxx. 18; Matt. xii. 3, 4; or at least because the things alleged were mitigations of his fault, and he would not add affliction to the afflicted, but rather defer the debate of it to a fitter opportunity.

CHAP. XI.

Beasts clean and unclean, 1—8. Of fishes, 9—12. Of fowls and creeping things, 13—23. In touching of a dead carcass, 24—28. Other creatures unclean, 29—43. They are exhorted to purity and holiness from the nature of God, and his goodness to them in taking them to be his people, 44, 45. The whole repeated, 46, 47.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

From the laws concerning the priests, he now comes to those which belong to all the people.

The Lord spake to both Moses and Aaron, because the cognizance of the following matters belonged to both; the priest was to direct the people about the things forbidden or allowed where any doubt or difficulty arose, and the magistrate was to see the direction here given followed.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, *These are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

a Den. 14. 4.

Acts 10. 12,

14.

Though every creature of God be good and pure in itself, as appears from Gen. i. 31; Matt. xv. 11; Rom. xiv. 14; yet it pleased God to make a difference between clean and unclean, and to restrain the use of them, which he did in general and in part before the flood, Gen. vii. 2; but more fully and particularly here for many reasons, as, 1. To assert his own sovereignty over man, and over all the creatures, which men may not use but with God's leave, and to inure that stiff-necked people to obedience. 2. To keep up the wall of partition between the Jews and other nations, which was very useful and necessary for many great and wise purposes. 3. That by bridling their appetite in things in themselves lawful, and some of them very desirable and delightful for food, they might be better prepared and enabled to deny themselves in things simply and grossly sinful. 4. For the preservation of their health, some of the creatures forbidden being, though used by the neighbouring nations, of unwholesome nourishment, especially to the Jews, who were very obnoxious to leprosy, which some of these meats are apt to produce and foment. 5. For moral signification, to teach them to abhor that filthiness and all those ill qualities for which some of these creatures are noted.

3 Whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is cloven-footed, and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

Cloven-footed, to wit, is divided into two parts only, as in the coney, swine, &c., whereas the horse, camel, &c. have their hoofs entire and undivided. This clause is added only to explain and limit the former, as appears from ver. 26; for the feet or hoofs of dogs, cats, &c. are parted or cloven into many parts. Cheweth the cud, Heb. and bringeth up the cud, i. e. the meat once chewed out of the stomach into the mouth again, that it may be chewed a second time for better concoction. And this branch is to be joined with the former, both properties being necessary for the allowed beasts. But the reason hereof must be resolved into the will of the lawgiver; though interpreters guess that God would hereby signify their duties by the first, that of dividing the word of God aright, and discerning between good and evil, between God's institutions and men's inventions; and by the latter, that duty of recalling God's word to our minds, and serious meditation upon it.

4 Nevertheless these shall ye not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

The camel was a usual food in Arabia, but yielding bad nourishment, as Galen notes. Divideth not the hoof, to wit, so as to have his foot cloven in two, which being expressed ver. 3, is here to be understood; otherwise the camel's hoof is divided, but it is but a small and imperfect division, as Aristotle and Pliny observe, and observation shows.

5 And the coney, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

Some understand by the Hebrew word shaphan, a mountain mouse, which were of a much greater size than ordinary mice, and were used by the Arabians for food. But for the names of the following creatures, seeing the Jews themselves are uncertain and divided about them, I think it improper to trouble the unlearned reader with disputes about them, and for the learned, they may have recourse to my Latin Synopsis. I shall therefore take them according to our translation.

6 And the hare, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And the swine, though he divide the hoof, and be clovenfooted, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

The Jews would not so much as name the swine, but called it another or a strange thing, lest the naming of it should tempt them to eat this meat, which was so commonly used and so much esteemed by others.

8 Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcase shall ye not touch; they are unclean to you.

Ye shall not touch, to wit, in order to eating, as may be gathered by comparing this with Gen. iii. 3; Col. ii. 21. For since the fat and the skins of some of the forbidden creatures were useful for medicinal and other good uses, and were used by good men; see Matt. iii. 4; it is not probable that God would have them cast away. Thus God forbade the making of images, Exod. xx., not absolutely and universally, but in order to the worshipping of them, as Christian interpreters agree. Or, they were here forbidden to touch them, to wit, unnecessarily; and if he that touched them for some necessary use were polluted by it, it was but a slight and transient pollution, ending at evening, as appears from ver. 24, 25, &c.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

Whatsoever hath fins and scales, to wit, both of them; such fishes being both more cleanly and more wholesome food than others. The names of them are not particularly mentioned, partly because most of them wanted names, the fishes not being brought to Adam and named by him as other creatures were; and partly because the land of Canaan had not many rivers, nor great store of fishes.

10 And all that have not fins and scales in the seas, and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters, and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an abomination unto you:

i. e. Either of the smaller sort of fishes, or of the greater, which are called here living creatures or beasts, as some of them are called the beasts of the sea by other authors.

11 They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcases in abomination.

An abomination unto you, to wit, for food. This clause is added to show that they were neither abominable in their own nature, nor for the food of other nations; and consequently when the partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles was taken away, these distinctions of meats were to cease. See Acts x.

12 Whatsoever hath no fins nor scales in the waters, that shall be an abomination unto you.

13 ¶ And these are they which ye shall have in abomination among the fowls; they shall not be eaten, they are an abomination: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospry,

The true signification of these and the following Hebrew words is now lost, as the Jews at this day confess, which not falling out without God's singular providence may intimate the cessation or abolition of this law, the exact observation whereof since Christ came is become impossible. In general, this may be observed, that the fowls forbidden in diet are all either ravenous and cruel, or such as delight in the night and darkness, or such as feed upon impure things; and so the signification and reason of these prohibitions is manifest, to teach men to abominate all cruelty or oppression, and all works of darkness and filthiness. The ossifrage and the ospry are two peculiar kinds of eagles, distinct from that which, being the chief of its kind, is called by the name of the whole kind, as it usually happens.

14 And the vulture, and the kite after his kind;

15 Every raven after his kind;

i. e. According to the several kinds of birds, known by this general name, which includes, besides ravens properly so called, crows, rooks, pies, &c.

16 And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind,

The owl, Heb. the daughter of the owl, which he mentions as the best of the kind both for sex and age, and therefore more desired for food than the elder or males. And it is hereby implied, that the very youngest and best of all the other kinds are forbidden, and much more the rest.

17 And the little owl, and the cormorant, and the great owl,

18 And the swan, and the pelican, and the gier eagle,

19 And the stork, the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

20 All fowls that creep, going upon all four, shall be an abomination unto you.

All fowls that crawl or creep upon the earth, and so degenerate from their proper nature, which is to fly, and are of a mongrel kind ; which may intimate that apostates and mongrels in religion are abominable in the sight of God, and in conversation with men. Going upon all four, upon four legs, or upon more than four, as bees, flies, &c., which is all one to the present purpose, these pluralists for legs being here opposed to those that have but two.

21 Yet these may ye eat of every flying creeping thing that goeth upon all four, which have legs above their feet, to leap withal upon the earth ;

Which have legs above their feet. The truth of this translation may seem evident, both from the following clause, to leap withal, and especially from the next verse, where one of this kind is the locusts, which, as it is manifest, have two legs wherewith they leap, besides the four feet upon which they walk. The adverb lo is here put for the pronoun lo, as it is also 1 Chron. xi. 20, compared with 2 Sam. xxiii. 18. Others take the words as they lie, and read them negatively, which have not legs upon their feet, and so the sense may be this, That they might eat the locusts, grasshoppers, &c. when they were very young, and therefore more wholesome for food ; for they are born without legs, Plin. Nat. Hist. 11. 29, or their legs at first are very small, and scarce to be discerned, and in effect none. And the canon of the Jews in this matter is this, Those which yet have not wings and legs may be eaten, though they be such as afterward would have them.

22 Even these of them ye may eat ;
^{h Matt. 3. 4.} ^h the locust after his kind, and the bald
^{Mark 1. 6.} locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind.

Locusts, though unusual in our food, were commonly eaten by the Ethiopians, Libyans, Parthians, and other eastern people bordering upon the Jews, which is expressly affirmed by Diodorus Siculus, Aristotle, Pliny, St. Hierom, and others, as well as Matt. iii. 4. And it is certain that the eastern locusts were much larger than ours, so it is probable they were of different qualities, and yielded better nourishment ; and the familiar use of them made them more agreeable to their bodies ; for even poisons themselves have by frequent use been made not only harmless, but nourishing also to some persons.

23 But all other flying creeping things, which have four feet, shall be an abomination unto you.

i. e. All such except those now mentioned ; the word other being here understood out of the former verse, without which there might seem to be a contradiction between this and that verse. But the words may be, and by the vulgar Latin are, thus rendered, But all flying creeping things which have only four feet ; which word only is to be gathered out of ver. 20, 21 ; i. e. which have not those legs above and besides their feet mentioned ver. 21. And so all the verses agree well together.

24 And for these ye shall be unclean : whosoever toucheth the carcase of them shall be unclean until the even.

And such were excluded both from the courts of God's house, and from free conversation with other men. Until the even ; which possibly might signify that even the smallest defilements could not be cleansed but by the death of Christ, who was to come and offer up himself in the evening, or end, or declining age of the world, as the prophets signify, and the apostle expresseth, Heb. ix. 26.

25 And whosoever beareth ought of the carcase of them ^{i ch. 14. 8.} shall wash his clothes, ^{& 15. 6.} and be unclean until the even. ^{Num. 19. 10,} ^{22. & 31. 24.}

Whosoever beareth, or, taketh away, out of the place where haply it may lie, by which others may be either offended or polluted.

26 The carcasses of every beast which divideth the hoof, and is not clovenfooted, nor cheweth the cud, are unclean unto you : every one that toucheth them shall be unclean.

The word carcasses is easily to be understood out of ver. 24, 25, where it is expressed.

27 And whatsoever goeth upon his paws, among all manner of beasts that go on all four, those are unclean unto you : whoso toucheth their carcase shall be unclean until the even.

Upon his paws, Heb. upon his hands, i. e. which hath feet divided into several parts like fingers, as dogs, cats, apes, bears, &c.

28 And he that beareth the carcase of them shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even : they are unclean unto you.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the creeping things that creep upon the earth ; the weasel, and ^{k Is. 66. 17.} the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind,

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole.

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep : whosoever doth touch them, when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean ; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be, wherein any work is done, ^{l ch. 15. 12.} it must be put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even ; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel, whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean ; and ^{m ch. 6. 28.} ^{& 15. 12.} ye shall break it.

34 Of all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean : and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

That on which such water cometh : the meaning is, that flesh or herbs, or other food which is dressed in water, to wit, in a vessel so polluted, shall be unclean ; not so, if it be food which is eaten dry, as bread, fruits, &c., the reason of which difference seems to be this, that the water did sooner receive the pollution in itself, and convey it to the food so dressed.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcase falleth shall be unclean ; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, they shall be broken down : for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless a fountain or pit, ^{+ Heb. a gathering together of waters.} wherein there is plenty of water, shall be clean : but that which toucheth their carcase shall be unclean.

Wherein there is plenty of water ; of which no solid reason can be given, whilst such unclean things remain in them, but only the will of the Lawgiver, and his merciful condescension to men's necessities, water being scarce in those countries ; and for the same reason God would have the ceremonial law of sacrifices to be offered to God, give place to the moral law of mercy towards men.

37 And if any part of their carcase fall upon any sowing seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean.

Partly because this was necessary provision for man ; and partly because such seed would not be used for man's food till it had received many alterations in the earth, whereby such pollution was taken away. See John xii. 24 ; 1 Cor. xv. 36.

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcase fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

The reason of the difference is, partly because wet seed doth sooner receive and longer retain any pollution; and partly because such seed was not fit to be sown presently; and therefore that necessity which justified the use of the dry seed, which was speedily to be sown, could not be pretended in this case.

39 And if any beast, of which ye may eat, die; he that toucheth the carcase thereof shall be unclean until the even.

If any beast die; either of itself, or being killed by some wild beast, in which cases the blood was not poured forth, as it was when they were killed by men either for food or sacrifice.

40 And he that eateth of the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

He that eateth, to wit, unwittingly; for if he did it knowingly, it was a presumptuous sin against an express law, Deut. xiv. 21, and therefore punished with cutting off, Numb. xv. 30.

41 And every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination; it shall not be eaten.

Except those before expressly excepted above, ver. 21, 22.

42 Whatsoever goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever hath more feet among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat; for they are an abomination.

Upon the belly, as worms and snakes. Upon all four, as toads and divers serpents. More feet, to wit, more than four, as caterpillars, &c.

43 Ye shall not make your selves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.

44 For I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy; for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

Ye shall be holy; by which he gives them to understand, that all these cautions and prohibitions about the eating or touching of these creatures was not for any real uncleanness in them, all being God's good creatures, but only that by the diligent observation of these rules they might learn with greater care to avoid all moral pollutions, and to keep themselves from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, and particularly from all familiar and intimate converse with notorious sinners.

45 For I am the LORD that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: ye shall therefore be holy, for I am holy.

46 This is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth:

47 To make a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten.

days, 1-4. Of a daughter fourteen days, and her purification sixty-six days, 5. Her offering, if rich, a lamb of a year old, a young pigeon or turtle-dove for a sin-offering, 6, 7. If poor, two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons; one for a burnt-offering, and one for a sin-offering, 8.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a woman have conceived seed, and born a man child: then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

From uncleanness contracted by the touching or eating of external things, he now comes to that uncleanness which ariseth from ourselves.

She shall be unclean; not for any filthiness which was either in the conception or in bringing forth, but to signify the universal and deep pollution of man's nature even from the birth, and from the conception. For seven days, or thereabouts, nature is employed in the purification of most women. For her infirmity, i. e. for her monthly infirmity. And it may note an agreement therewith not only in the time, Lev. xv. 19, but in the degree of uncleanness, which was such that she defiled every thing she touched, &c.

3 And in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

Which law is here repeated, because the woman's uncleanness lasting for seven days, was one, though not the only, reason why the child's circumcision was put off till the eighth day.

4 And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days; she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

She shall then continue, Heb. sit, i. e. abide, as that word is oft used, as Gen. xxii. 5; xxxiv. 10, or tarry at home, nor go into the sanctuary. In the blood of her purifying; in her polluted and separated estate; for the word blood or bloods signifies both guilt, as Gen. iv. 10, and uncleanness, as here and elsewhere. See Ezek. xvi. 6. And it is called the blood of her purifying, because by the expulsion or purification of that blood, which is done by degrees, she is purified. She shall touch no hallowed thing; she shall not eat any part of the peace-offerings which she or her husband offered, which otherwise she might have done; and if she be a priest's wife, she shall not eat any of the tithes or first-fruits, or part of the hallowed meats, which at other times she together with her husband might eat.

5 But if she bear a maid child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

The time in both particulars is double to the former, not so much from natural causes, because the purifications in female births are longer and slower, which if it were true, yet doth not extend to any such time as here is mentioned, as for moral reasons; either to be as a blot upon that sex for being the first in man's transgression, 1 Tim. ii. 14, or to put an honour upon the sacrament of circumcision, which being administered to the males, did put an end to that pollution sooner than otherwise had been; or to show the privilege of the man above the woman, and that the women were to be purified, sanctified, and saved by one of the other sex, even by the man Christ Jesus, without whom they should have still continued in their impurity.

6 And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle dove, for a sin offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

For a son, or for a daughter; for the birth of a son, or of a daughter; but the purification was for herself, as ap-

n ch. 17. 15.
& 22. 8.
Deut. 14. 21.
Ezek. 4. 14.
& 44. 31.

† Heb. doth multiply feet.

o ch. 20. 25.
† Heb. soule.

p Ex. 19. 6.
ch. 19. 2. &
20. 7. 28.
1 Thes. 4. 7.
1 Pet. 1. 15,
16.

q Ex. 6. 7.

r ver. 44.

s ch. 10. 10.

a ch. 15. 19.

b Luke 2. 22.

c ch. 15. 19.

d Gen. 17. 12.

Luke 1. 59.

& 2. 21. John

7. 22. 23.

e Luke 2. 22

† Heb. a son of his year.

CHAP. XII.

Laws touching the uncleanness of women in child-bearing. Of a son seven days, and her purification thirty-three pears from the following verses. For a sin-offering; either because of her ceremonial uncleanness, which required a ceremonial expiation; or for those particular sins relating to the time and state of child-bearing, of which she is justly presumed to be guilty, which might be many ways.

7 Who shall offer it before the LORD, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born a male or a female.

For though there was a difference in the time of her uncleanness for the one and for the other, yet both were to be purified one and the same way; to note, that though all sins and sinners were not equal, yet all were to be cleansed by the same means, to wit, by Christ, and by faith. See 1 Cor. vii. 14; Gal. iii. 28.

8 ^{f ch. 5. 7} And if ^g she be not able to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt offering, and the other for a sin offering: ^e and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

h Luke 2. 24.
i Heb. her hand find not sufficiency of.

g ch. 4. 26.

CHAP. XIII.

Laws touching leprosy; its different kinds how to be known and judged of by the priest, 1—8. Of the swelling, 9—17. Of the sores or boils, 18—23. Of the fiery inflammation, 24—28. Of the scall, 29—37. Of the blisters, 38, 39. Of baldness, 40—44. The leper with clothes rent, bare head, and covered lips, must cry, Unclean, unclean, and dwell alone, 45, 46. Of the leprosy in clothes, linen, woollen, and skins, 47—59.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a ^{||} rising, ^a a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh ^b like the plague of leprosy; ^b then he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests:

In the skin; for there was the seat of the leprosy. Bright spot, shining like the scale of a fish, as it is in the beginning of a leprosy.

Leprosy was a distemper most frequent in Egypt and Syria, &c., known also among the Greeks, who note that it was not so properly a disease as a defilement or distemper in the skin, whence Christ is not said to heal, but to cleanse the lepers that came to him. And this distemper is here provided against, not because it was worse than others, but because it was externally and visibly filthy, and because of its infectious nature, that hereby we might be instructed to avoid converse with such vicious persons who were likely to infect us. He shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, not to the physician, because, as was now said, it needed not so much healing as cleansing, and was rather a ceremonial pollution than a disease; and because it belonged to the priest to cleanse him, and therefore to search and discover whether he was defiled and needed cleansing. The priest also was to admit to, or exclude from, the sanctuary, and therefore to examine who were to be excluded. And the discovery of this distemper was not so difficult that it required the physician's art, but the priest, by experience, and the observation of those rules, might easily make it.

3 And the priest shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh: and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and pronounce him unclean.

On the plague, i. e. the sign or appearance of the plague of leprosy. And it is observable, that the same signs of it are given by Moses here, and by the learned physicians in their works. And when the leprosy came to its height, not the hair only, but also the skin was turned white, as Exod.

iv. 6; Numb. xii. 10. And this change of colour was an evidence both of the abundance of excrementitious humours, and of the weakness of nature, as we see in old and sick persons. Deeper than the skin; for the leprosy did consume both the skin and the flesh, as appears from 2 Kings v. 14. Pronounce him unclean, Heb. make him unclean, i. e. ministerially and declaratively, in which sense ministers are said to remit sins, Matt. xvi. 19, and to destroy nations, Jer. i. 10.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague seven days:

For greater assurance; to teach ministers not to be rash nor hasty in their judgments and censures, but diligently to search and examine all things beforehand. The plague is here put for the man that hath the plague, as pride is put for a proud man, Jer. l. 31, and dreams for the dreamers, Jer. xxvii. 9.

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin; then the priest shall shut him up seven days more:

If the plague be at a stay: this translation is justified by the following clause, which is added to explain it. Otherwise the words are and may be rendered thus, stand or abide in its own colour; the Hebrew word being used for colour as well as for sight.

6 And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean: it is but a scab: and he ^e shall wash his clothes, and ^{c ch. 11. 25. & 14. 8.} be clean.

If the plague be somewhat dark; which is opposed to the white colour of the leprosy. But the word may be rendered, have contracted itself, or, be restrained or confined to its former place and bigness; and thus the opposition seems to be most clear to the spreading of itself, mentioned both in the foregoing verse, and in the following clause. He shall wash his clothes, though it was no leprosy, but a scab only; to teach us, that no sin was so small which did not need to be washed by the blood of Christ, which was the thing designed by all these washings.

7 But if the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again:

8 And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a leprosy.

9 ¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest;

10 ^d And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be [†] quick raw flesh in the rising;

If the rising be white, to wit, with a preternatural and extraordinary whiteness, as Numb. xii. 10. And there be; or rather, or, the copulative put for the disjunctive, as hath been noted before; for either of these were signs of a leprosy, and one of these may seem inconsistent with the other; the former sign of white hair supposing the skin in which the hair was to remain, and the latter of live flesh supposing the skin to be consumed by the leprosy. Quick raw flesh showed that this was not a superficial leprosy, but one of a deeper and more malignant nature, that had eaten into the very flesh, for which cause it is in the next verse called an old, or inveterate, or grown leprosy.

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up: for he is unclean.

|| Or, swelling.
a Deut. 28. 27.
b 3. 17.
c Deut. 17. 8, 9, & 24. 8.
d Luke 17. 14.

d Num. 12. 10, 12.
2 Kin. 5. 27.
2 Chr. 28. 20.

† Heb. the quickening of living flesh.

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy cover all the skin of him that hath the plague from his head even to his foot, wheresoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: it is all turned white: he is clean.

If the leprosy, i. e. the sign or appearance of the leprosy; or the scab is called a leprosy, because at first view it seemed to be so to the priest, and to other beholders. Have covered all his flesh: when it appeared in some one part, it discovered the ill humour which lurked within, and withal the inability of nature to expel it; but when it over-spread all, it manifested the strength of nature conquering the distemper, and purging out the ill humours into the outward parts.

14 But when raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean.

In him, or rather, in it, i. e. in the place where the sign or appearance of leprosy was, when the flesh was partly changed into a whiter colour, and partly kept its natural colour; this variety of colours was an evidence of the leprosy, as one and the same colour continuing was a sign of soundness.

15 And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean: for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy.

The raw flesh is unclean: this is repeated again and again, because raw or living flesh might rather seem a sign of soundness, and the priest might easily be deceived by it, and therefore he was more narrowly to look into it, and to observe the place and manner and other circumstances in which it appeared.

16 Or if the raw flesh turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest;

Be changed unto white; as it is usual with sores, when they begin to be healed, the skin, which is white, coming upon the flesh.

17 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the plague be turned into white; then the priest shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: he is clean.

18 ¶ The flesh also, in which, even in

^{e Ex. 9. 9.} the skin thereof, was a °boil, and is healed,

19 And in the place of the boil there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish, and it be shewed to the priest;

Somewhat reddish, i. e. white mixed with red, as when blood and milk are mixed together. A late learned writer renders the words thus, white and very bright, or light, which indeed is the true colour of leprosy, to wit, when it is in its perfection, as Exod. iv. 6, &c. But here it was only beginning and arising out of a bile, in which together with the white, which was the colour of the leprosy, there might be some mixture of redness arising from the bile, or that part of it which was not yet turned into the nature and colour of leprosy.

20 And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it be in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white; the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the boil.

21 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

But be somewhat dark, or, and be contracted; of which see ver. 6.

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague.

Or, the plague, to wit, of leprosy, of which he is speaking.

23 But if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning boil; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

24 ¶ Or if there be any flesh, in the skin whereof there is † a hot burning, ^{† Heb. a burning of fire.} and the quick flesh that burneth have a white bright spot, somewhat reddish, or white;

A hot burning, Heb. a burning of fire, by the touch of any hot iron, or burning coals, which doth naturally and usually make an ulcer or sore in which the following spot is. Or white, i. e. or only white, without any mixture of red in it. This clause seems to overthrow that exposition of the Hebrew word adamdam which is given by a learned man, ver. 19, because this colour which is here said to be only white, is distinguished from that which is here called adamdam, which therefore must be some other colour than that of snow, which though very light or bright, yet is only white.

25 Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be turned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin; it is a leprosy broken out of the burning: wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

26 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

Somewhat dark, or, contracted, i. e. not spreading. See on ver. 6.

27 And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day: and if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

28 And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark; it is a rising of the burning, and the priest shall pronounce him clean: for it is an inflammation of the burning.

i. e. Arising from the burning mentioned ver. 24.

29 ¶ If a man or woman have a plague upon the head or the beard;

30 Then the priest shall see the plague: and, behold, if it be in sight deeper than the skin; and there be in it a yellow thin hair; then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

The leprosy in the body turned the hair white, in the head or beard it turned it yellow. And if a man's hair was yellow before, this might easily be distinguished from the rest, either by the thinness or smallness of it, which is here noted, or by its peculiar kind of yellow, for there are divers kinds or degrees of the same colour manifestly differing one from another, as in green colours, &c.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin, and that there is no black hair in it; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days:

And that there is no black hair in it; for had that appeared, it had ended the doubt, the black hair being a sign of soundness and strength of nature, ver. 37, as the yellow hair was a sign of unsoundness.

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague: and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no yellow hair, and the scall be not in sight deeper than the skin ;

33 He shall be shaven, but the scall shall he not shave ; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more :

He shall be shaven, for the more certain discovery of the growth or stay of the plague.

34 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall : and, behold, if the scall be not spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin ; then the priest shall pronounce him clean : and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

35 But if the scall spread much in the skin after his cleansing ;

36 Then the priest shall look on him : and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair ; he is unclean.

He need not search for the hair, or any other sign, the spreading or running of it being a sure sign of leprosy, without any other evidence.

37 But if the scall be in his sight at a stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein ; the scall is healed, he is clean : and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

The truth of the thing, and not the sentence of the priest, made him clean ; and if the priest had partially pronounced one clean who was not clean, his sentence had been null. And therefore it is a fond and dangerous conceit to think that the absolution given to any sinner by a priest will stand him in any stead if he do not truly repent.

38 ¶ If a man also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots ;

39 Then the priest shall look : and, behold, if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white ; it is a freckled spot that groweth in the skin ; he is clean.

Darkish white, or contracted, or confined to the place where they are, and white.

40 And the man whose † hair is fallen off his head, he is bald ; yet is he clean.

41 And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead bald : yet is he clean.

42 And if there be in the bald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore ; it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead.

It is a sign that such baldness came not from age or any accident, but from the leprosy.

43 Then the priest shall look upon it : and, behold, if the rising of the sore be white reddish in his bald head, or in his bald forehead, as the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh ;

44 He is a leprous man, he is unclean : the priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean ; his plague is in his head.

45 And the leper in whom the plague is, his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall 'put a covering upon his upper lip, and shall cry, ^sUnclean, unclean.

His clothes shall be rent, to wit, in the upper and former parts, which were most visible. This was done, partly, as a token of sorrow, Ezra ix. 3, 5 ; Job ii. 12, because though this was not a sin, yet it was an effect of sin, and a sore punishment, whereby he was cut off both from converse with men, and from the enjoyment of God in his ordinances ; partly, as a warning to others to keep at a due distance from him wheresoever he came ; and partly, as some add, that it might conduce to his cure, by giving the freer vent to the ill humours. But the exposing of the affected part to the cold would rather hinder than further evaporation. His head bare ; another sign of mourning, as appears from Lev. x. 6. God would have men, though not overwhelmed with, yet deeply sensible of, his judgments. A covering upon his upper lip ; partly as another badge of his sorrow and shame, as Ezek. xxiv. 17, 22 ; Micah iii. 7 ; and partly for the preservation of others from his infectious breath or touch. Unclean, unclean ; as begging the pity and prayers of others, and confessing his own infirmity, and cautioning those who came near him to keep at a distance from him.

46 All the days wherein the plague shall be in him he shall be defiled ; he is unclean : he shall dwell alone ; ^hwith- out the camp shall his habitation be.

Partly, for his humiliation ; partly, to prevent the infection of others ; and partly, to show the danger of converse with spiritual lepers or notorious sinners. This rule excludes the society of sound persons, but not of lepers. See 2 Kings xv. 5 ; 2 Chron. xxvi. 21. Without the camp ; so Numb. xii. 14 ; and afterward without cities and places of great concourse, whereof we have examples, 2 Kings vii. 3 ; Luke xvii. 12.

47 ¶ The garment also that the plague of leprosy is in, whether it be a woollen garment, or a linen garment ;

Leprosy in garments and houses is unknown in these times and places, which is not strange, there being some diseases or distempers peculiar to some ages and countries, as the learned have noted. And that such a thing was among the Jews cannot reasonably be doubted ; for if Moses had been a deceiver, as some have impudently affirmed, a man of his wisdom would not have exposed himself to the disbelief and contempt of his people by giving laws about that which their experience showed to be but a fiction. A woollen garment, or a linen garment, are put by a synecdoche for any other garments.

48 Whether it be in the warp, or woof ; of linen, or of woollen ; whether in a skin, or in any † thing made of skin ;

In the warp, or woof ; a learned man renders it, in the outside, or in the inside of it. If the signification of these words be doubtful or unknown now, as some of those of the living creatures and precious stones are confessed to be, it is not material to us, this law being abolished ; it sufficeth that the Jews understood these things by frequent experience.

49 And if the plague be greenish or reddish in the garment, or in the skin, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any † thing of skin ; it is a plague of leprosy, and shall be shewed unto the priest :

50 And the priest shall look upon the plague, and shut up it that hath the plague seven days :

51 And he shall look on the plague on the seventh day : if the plague be spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in a skin, or in any work that is made of skin ; the plague is ⁱa fretting leprosy ; it is unclean.

52 He shall therefore burn that garment, whether warp or woof, in woollen or in linen, or any thing of skin, wherein the plague is : for it is a fretting leprosy ; it shall be burnt in the fire.

53 And if the priest shall look, and, behold, the plague be not spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin ;

54 Then the priest shall command that they wash the thing wherein the plague is, and he shall shut it up seven days more :

^h Num. 5. 2.
& 12. 14.
ⁱ 2 Kings 7. 3.
& 15. 5.
ⁱ 2 Chr. 26. 21.
Luke 17. 12.

⁺ Heb. work of.

⁺ Heb. vessel, or,
instrument

^f Ezek. 24.
17, 22.
^g Mic. 3. 7.
^g Lam. 4. 15.

55 And the priest shall look on the plague, after that it is washed: and, behold, if the plague have not changed his colour, and the plague be not spread; it is unclean; thou shalt burn it in the fire; it is fret inward, † whether it be bare within or without.

+ Heb. whether it be bald in the head thereof, or in the forehead thereof.

If the plague have not changed his colour; if washing doth not take away that vicious colour, and restore it to its own native colour. Bare within or without; in the outside of the garment, which is here called the forehead or forehead, as being most visible, or in the inside of it. Some of the Jewish doctors understood it thus, whether the garment was made threadbare by the leprosy, or by former wearing of it.

56 And if the priest look, and, behold, the plague be somewhat dark after the washing of it; then he shall rend it out of the garment, or out of the skin, or out of the warp, or out of the woof:

57 And if it appear still in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin; it is a spreading plague: thou shalt burn that wherein the plague is with fire.

58 And the garment, either warp, or woof, or whatsoever thing of skin it be, which thou shalt wash, if the plague be departed from them, then it shall be washed the second time, and shall be clean.

59 This is the law of the plague of leprosy in a garment of woollen or linen, either in the warp, or woof, or any thing of skins, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean.

CHAP. XIV.

Rites and sacrifices for the cleansing of a leper; the leprosy being healed, and judged so by the priest, who, going without the camp, must take two living clean birds, &c. The manner of it: one to be slain, the other to be let loose, 1—9. On the eighth day two male lambs and one ewe lamb, and meat-offering, 10—20. If poor, 21—32. Of the leprosy of houses, how to be known, 33—48. The manner of cleansing them, 49—53. A repetition of this and the former chapter, 54—57.

AND THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing: He shall be brought unto the priest:

Not into the priest's house, but to some place without the camp or city, Lev. xiii. 46, which the priest shall appoint.

3 And the priest shall go forth out of the camp; and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be healed in the leper;

To wit, by God; for God alone did heal or cleanse him really, the priest only ministerially and declaratively, as ministers are said to remit sins, though it be granted that none can truly and properly forgive sins but God, Mark ii. 7.

4 Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed two || birds alive and clean, and ^bcedar wood, and ^cscarlet, and ^dhyssop:

Two birds; the one to represent Christ as dying for his sins, the other to represent him as rising again for his purification or justification. Clean; allowed for food and for sacrifice. Cedar wood; a stick of cedar, to which the hyssop and one of the birds was tied by the scarlet thread. Cedar seems to be chosen, to note that the leper was now freed from that putrefaction or corruption which his leprosy had brought upon him, that kind of wood being in a manner incorruptible. Scarlet; a thread of wool of a scarlet colour,

Heb. ix. 19, to represent both the leper's sinfulness, Isa. i. 18, and the blood of Christ, and the happy change of the leper's colour and complexion, which before was wan and loathsome, now sprightly and beautiful. Hyssop, chosen partly for its fragrant smell, which signified the cure of the leper's ill scent, and partly for conveniency in the use of sprinkling. See Exod. xii. 22.

5 And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an earthen vessel over running water:

To wit, by some other man. The priest did not kill it himself, because it was not properly a sacrifice, as being killed without the camp, and not in that place to which all sacrifices were confined; and if it had been a sacrifice, that might be killed by another, so long as the sprinkling of the blood of it, which was the most proper and essential act in the sacrifice, was done by the priest. Over running water; it seems to be a metathesis or transplacing of words, for over running water put in an earthen vessel. Thus the blood of the bird and the water were mixed together, partly for the conveniency of sprinkling, and partly to signify Christ, who came by water and blood, 1 John v. 6. The running water, i. e. spring or river water, by its liveliness and motion did fitly signify the restoring of liveliness to the leper, who was in a manner dead with his leprosy, as was noted before.

6 As for the living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop, and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water:

7 And he shall ^esprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy ^fseven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall let the living bird loose † into the open field.

Seven times, to signify his perfect cleansing and restoration to all his former privileges. Compare Lev. iv. 17. Into the open field, the place of its former abode, signifying the taking off that restraint which was laid upon the leper, and the liberty which the leper now had to return to his former habitation and conversation with other men.

8 And he that is to be cleansed ^gshall wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, ^hand wash himself in water, that he may be clean: and after that he shall come into the camp, and ⁱshall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days.

Shave off all his hair; partly, to discover his perfect soundness; partly, to preserve him from relapse through any seeds or relics of it which might remain in his hair, or in his clothes; and partly, to teach him to put off his old lusts, and become a new man. Out of his tent; out of his former habitation, in some separate place, lest some of his leprosy yet lurking in him should break forth to the infection of his family.

9 But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head and his beard and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.

He shall shave all his hair, which began to grow again since it was first shaved, and now for more caution is shaved again.

10 And on the eighth day ^khe shall take two he lambs without blemish, and one ewe lamb † of the first year without blemish, and three tenth deals of fine flour for ^la meat offering, mingled with oil, and one log of oil.

Oil is added here as a fit sign of God's grace and mercy, and of the leper's healing. Log, a measure for liquid things containing six eggshells-full.

1 Or, sparrow.
b Num. 19.6.
c Heb. 9. 19.
d Ps. 51. 7.

k Matt. 8. 4.
Mark 1. 44.
Luke 5. 14.

† Heb. the daughter of her year.

l ch. 2. 1.
Num. 15. 4.
15.

+ Heb. upon the face of the field.

e Heb. 9. 13.
f 2 Kings 6. 10, 14.

g ch. 13. 6.

h ch. 11. 25.

i Num. 12. 15.

11 And the priest that maketh him clean shall present the man that is to be made clean, and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

The healing is ascribed to God, ver. 13, but the ceremonial cleansing or making of him clean and fit for society was an act of the priest using the rites which God had prescribed, whereby the sinner was cleansed.

12 And the priest shall take one he lamb, and ^moffer him for a trespass offering, and the log of oil, and ⁿwave them for a wave offering before the LORD :

For a trespass-offering, to teach them that sin was the cause of leprosy and of all diseases, and that these ceremonial observations had a further meaning, even to make them sensible of their spiritual diseases, their sins, and to fly to God in Christ for the cure of them.

13 And he shall slay the lamb ^oin the place where he shall kill the sin offering and the burnt offering, in the holy place :

for ^pas the sin offering is the priest's, so is the trespass offering : ^qit is most holy :

In the holy place, to wit, in the court of the tabernacle. See Lev. i. 11 ; vii. 7. It is most holy ; both of them are equally holy, and therefore to be offered in the same place.

14 And the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and the priest shall put ^rit upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot :

To signify that he was now free to hear God's word in the appointed places, from which he was before excluded, and to touch any person or thing without defiling it, and to go whither he pleased.

15 And the priest shall take some of the log of oil, and pour ^sit into the palm of his own left hand :

As the blood signified Christ's blood, by which men obtain remission of sins ; so the oil noted the graces of the Spirit, by which they are regenerated and renewed.

16 And the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle of the oil with his finger seven times before the LORD :

i. e. Before the second veil which covered the holy of holies, where God is oft said to dwell, and to be present in a peculiar manner.

17 And of the rest of the oil that is in his hand shall the priest put upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the blood of the trespass offering :

i. e. Upon the place of that blood, as it is expressed ver. 28, or where that blood was put, ver. 14 ; or, over and besides the blood, &c. ; i. e. as the blood was put in those places, so shall the oil be.

18 And the remnant of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall pour upon the head of him that is to be cleansed : and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD.

19 And the priest shall offer ^tthe sin offering, and make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed from his uncleanness ; and afterward he shall kill the burnt offering :

20 And the priest shall offer the burnt offering and the meat offering upon the altar : and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

21 And ^uif he be poor, and ^vcannot get so much ; then he shall take one lamb for a trespass offering ^wto be waved, to make an atonement for him, and one tenth deal of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering, and a log of oil ;

22 ^xAnd two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, such as he is able to get ; and the one shall be a sin offering, and the other a burnt offering.

23 ^yAnd he shall bring them on the eighth day for his cleansing unto the priest, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, before the LORD.

24 ^zAnd the priest shall take the lamb of the trespass offering, and the log of oil, and the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD :

25 And he shall kill the lamb of the trespass offering, and the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and put ^{aa}it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot :

26 And the priest shall pour of the oil into the palm of his own left hand :

27 And the priest shall sprinkle with his right finger some of the oil that is in his left hand seven times before the LORD :

28 And the priest shall put of the oil that is in his hand upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the place of the blood of the trespass offering :

29 And the rest of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall put upon the head of him that is to be cleansed, to make an atonement for him before the LORD.

30 And he shall offer the one of ^{ab}the turtledoves, or of the young pigeons, such as he can get ;

31 Even such as he is able to get, the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, with the meat offering : and the priest shall make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed before the LORD.

32 This is the law of him in whom is the plague of leprosy, whose hand is not able to get ^{ac}that which pertaineth to his cleansing.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

34 ^{ad}When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession ;

35 And he that owneth the house shall come and tell the priest, saying, It seemeth to me there is as it were ^{ae}a plague in the house :

36 Then the priest shall command that they ^{af}empty the house, before the priest go into it to see the plague, that all that is in the house be not made unclean :

u ch. 5. 7.
& 12. 8.
+ Heb. his hand
reach not.
+ Heb. for a waving.

w ch. 12. 8.
& 15. 14, 15.

x ver. 11.

y ver. 12.

z ver. 14.

m ch. 5. 2, 18, & 6. 6, 7.

n Ex. 29. 24.

o Ex. 29. 11.
ch. 1. 5, 11.
& 4. 4, 24.

p ch. 7. 7.
q ch. 2. 3. &
7. 6. & 21. 22.

r Ex. 29. 20.
ch. 8. 23.

s ch. 4. 26.

t ch. 5. 1, 6.
& 12. 7.

c Gen. 17. 8.
Num. 32. 22.
Deut. 7. 1.
& 32. 49.

d Ps. 91. 10.
Prov. 3. 33.
Zech. 5. 4.

ff Or, prepare.

and afterward the priest shall go in to see the house :

That they empty the house, i. e. the possessors of the house. It is observable here, that neither the people nor the household stuff were polluted till the leprosy was discovered and declared by the priest, to show what great difference God makes between sins of ignorance, and sins against knowledge and conscience.

37 And he shall look on the plague, and, behold, if the plague be in the walls of the house with hollow strakes, greenish or reddish, which in sight are lower than the wall ;

In the walls of the house this was an extraordinary judgment of God peculiar to this people, either as a punishment of their sins, which were much more sinful and inexcusable than the sins of other nations ; or as a special mean and help to repentance, which God afforded to them above other people ; or as a document of the mischievous nature of sin, typified by leprosy, which did not only destroy persons, but their habitations also : see Zech. v. 4. With hollow strakes, such as were in the bodies of leprous persons, Lev. xiii. 3.

38 Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days :

39 And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look : and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house ;

40 Then the priest shall command that they take away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city :

Where they used to cast dirt and filthy things.

41 And he shall cause the house to be scraped within round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off without the city into an unclean place :

The mortar or other rubbish.

42 And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones ; and he shall take other mortar, and shall plaister the house.

43 And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plaistered ;

44 Then the priest shall come and look, and, behold, if the plague be spread in the house, it is ^a fretting leprosy in the house : it is unclean.

^e ch. 13. 51.
^{Zech.} 5. 4

45 And he shall break down the house, the stones of it, and the timber thereof, and all the mortar of the house ; and he shall carry them forth out of the city into an unclean place.

46 Moreover he that goeth into the house all the while that it is shut up shall be unclean until the even.

47 And he that lieth in the house shall wash his clothes ; and he that eateth in the house shall wash his clothes.

⁺ Heb. in coming in shall come in, &c.

48 And if the priest † shall come in, and look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house, after the house was plaistered : then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed.

^f ver. 4.

49 And ^{he} shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop :

50 And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water :

51 And he shall take the cedar wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times :

52 And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet :

53 But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and ^g make an atonement for the house : and it shall be clean.

^g ver. 20

54 This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and ^h scall,

^h ch. 13. 30.

55 And for the ⁱ leprosy of a garment, ^k and of a house,

ⁱ ch. 13. 47.

^k ver. 34.

56 And ^l for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot :

^l ch. 13. 2.
^m Deut. 24. 8. Ezek. 44. 23.

57 To ^m teach † when it is unclean, and when it is clean : this is the law of leprosy.

⁺ Heb. in the day of the unclean, and in the day of the clean.

To teach ; to direct the priest when to pronounce a person or house clean or unclean. So it was not left to the priest's power or will, but they were tied to plain rules, such as the people might discern no less than the priest.

CHAP. XV.

Uncleanness by issues, and their putrefaction and expiation. 1—15. Of flowing seed, its uncleanness, 16—18. Of women : their courses ordinarily, 19—24 ; extraordinary, 25—28. Their expiation, 29, 30. An exhortation to cleanness, lest they die, and that they pollute not the tabernacle, 31. A repetition of the whole, 32, 33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying,

^a ch. 22. 4.
^{Num.} 5. 2.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^{*} When any man hath a ^{||} running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean.

² Sam. 3. 29.
^{Matt.} 9. 20.
^{Mark} 5. 25.
^{Luke} 8. 43.
^{||} Or, running of the reins.

His secret parts, called flesh, Lev. vi. 10 ; xii. 3 ; Ezek. xvi. 26 ; xxiii. 20.

3 And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue : whether his flesh run with his issue, or his flesh be stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness.

Or if it have run, and been stopped in great measure, either by the grossness of the humour, or by some obstruction in parts that it cannot run freely, as it did, but only droppeth.

4 Every bed, whereon he lieth that hath the issue, is unclean : and every † thing, whereon he sitteth, shall be unclean.

⁺ Heb. vessel.

Every thing, Heb. vessel, by which the Hebrews understand all sorts of household stuff.

5 And whosoever toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, ^b and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

^b ch. 11. 23. & 17. 15.

6 And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

7 And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

He that toucheth the flesh, that is, any part of his body; the word flesh being taken otherwise here than ver. 2; as the same word is frequently used in Scripture in differing significations in the same chapter, and sometimes in the same verse, as Matt. viii. 22.

8 And if he that hath the issue spit upon him that is clean; then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

9 And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean.

10 And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

11 And whomsoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

This may be understood, either, 1. Of the person touching, if he that hath an issue toucheth another with unwashed hands. Thus most take it. But why then should it be limited to his hands? for if he had touched him by any other part, as suppose by kissing him, he had defiled him, though his hands had been washed. Or rather, 2. Of the person touched, to whom the washing of his hands is proscribed as an easier way of cleansing himself, if speedily used; but if that was neglected or delayed, a more laborious course was enjoined him. And thus the Syriac interpreter understands it.

12 And the vessel of earth, that he toucheth which hath the issue, shall be broken: and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water.

13 And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue; then ^d he shall number to himself seven days for his cleansing, and wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean.

Is cleansed of his issue; when his issue is not only stopped in part, or for a season, but hath wholly ceased. For his cleansing, to wit, for the use of the ceremonies prescribed in such cases. See Numb. xix. 11, 12. Shall be clean, i. e. admitted to converse with men, and with God in public ordinances.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take to him ^e two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, and come before the Lord unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest:

15 And the priest shall offer them, ^f the one for a sin offering, and the other ^g for a burnt offering; ^h and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the Lord for his issue.

Not as if this was in itself a sin, but only a punishment of sin; though oftentimes it was sinful, as being a fruit of a man's intemperance and immoderate lust. See Lev. xiv. 12.

16 And ⁱ if any man's seed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even.

Go out from him; not through weakness of the parts, as that ver. 3; but in his sleep, which is called nightly pollution, which, though involuntary, might arise from some lustful dream or imagination. But if it was voluntary, and by a man's own procurement when awake, it was esteemed abominable, and a degree of murder. See Gen. xxxviii. 9.

17 And every garment, and every skin, whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even.

18 The woman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and ⁱ be unclean until the even.

ⁱ 1 Sam. 21. 4.

Man, or, the man, to wit, that had such an issue, which is plainly to be understood out of the whole context. For though in some special cases, relating to the worship of God, men were to forbear the use of the marriage-bed, as Exod. xix. 15; 1 Sam. xxi. 4; yet to affirm that the use of it in other cases did generally defile the persons, and make them unclean till even, is contrary to the whole current of Scripture, which affirms the marriage-bed to be undefiled, Heb. xiii. 4, to the practice of the Jews, which is a good comment upon their own laws, and to the light of nature and reason.

19 ¶ And ^k if a woman have an issue, ^l and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be [†] put apart seven days: and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even.

^k ch. 12. 2.

[†] Heb. in her separation.

Heb. And a woman, when she shall have an issue of blood, (and because that might be at her nose or other parts, he adds,) and her issue shall be in her flesh, i. e. in her secret parts, as the word flesh is taken ver. 2. So it notes her monthly disease. Apart, not out of the camp, as the lepers and some others, but from converse with her husband and others, and from access to the house of God. Seven days; for sometimes it continues so long, and it was but decent to allow some time for purification after the ceasing of her issue. Whosoever toucheth her, to wit, of grown persons. For the infant, to whom in that case she might give suck, was exempted from this pollution by the greater law of necessity, and by that antecedent law which required women to give suck to their own children.

20 And every thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean: every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean.

21 And whosoever toucheth her bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

22 And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

23 And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he toucheth it, he shall be unclean until the even.

24 And ^m if any man lie with her at all, ⁿ and her flowers be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days; and all the bed whereon he lieth shall be unclean.

ⁿ See ch. 20. 18.

He shall be unclean seven days, if he did this unwittingly; but if the man and woman did this knowingly, this was a gross sin, Ezek. xviii. 6; and they being accused and convicted were punished with death, Lev. xx. 18; for as there was a turpitude in the action, so it was very prejudicial to the children then begotten, who were commonly weak, or leprous, or otherwise disordered; which was also an injury to the commonwealth of Israel, and redounded to the dishonour of God, and of the true religion, that the professors thereof gave such public evidence of their intemperance.

25 And if ^o a woman have an issue of ^p her blood many days out of the time of her separation, or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean.

^o Matt. 9. 20.
^p Mark 5. 25.
Luke 8. 43.

The time of her separation, to wit, the seven days mentioned Lev. xii. 2, as suppose she had the emerods, &c.

26 Every bed whereon she lieth all the days of her issue shall be unto her as the bed of her separation: and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation.

27 And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean, and shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

n ver. 13. 28 But if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall number to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean.

Seven days from the stopping of her issue, as it is apparent. And this was for trial, whether it was only a temporary obstruction, or a real cessation.

29 And on the eighth day she shall take unto her two turtles, or two young pigeons, and bring them unto the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

30 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD for the issue of her uncleanness.

o ch. 11. 47. Deut. 24. 3. Ezek. 44. 23. 31 Thus shall ye separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, when they defile my tabernacle that is among them.

When they defile my tabernacle; which they did both ceremonially, by coming into it in their uncleanness, and morally, by the gross neglect and contempt of God's express and positive command to cleanse themselves.

q ver. 2. r ver. 16. 32 This is the law of him that hath an issue, and of him whose seed goeth from him, and is defiled therewith;

s ver. 19. t ver. 25. u ver. 24. 33 And of her that is sick of her flowers, and of him that hath an issue, of the man, and of the woman, and of him that lieth with her that is unclean.

CHAP. XVI.

Aaron not permitted at all times to go into the holy of holies, 1, 2. He is commanded to make a general expiation, and wherewith, 3-5. He-goats, the one for sacrifice, the other to escape, 7, 8. The manner of offering, 4-14, and ministering the sacrifice, 15-19. The scape-goat, with the sins of the people laid on his head, sent into the wilderness, 20-22; after which Aaron, and he who let go the goat, and he who burnt the sacrifice without the camp, must wash themselves, 23-28. This day of expiation, which was on the tenth day of the seventh month, to be a solemn fast and sabbath of rest, and they cleansed from all their sins, 29-34.

a ch. 10. 1, 2. AND the LORD spake unto Moses after the death of the two sons of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died;

b Ex. 30. 10. ch. 23. 27. Heb. 9. 7. & 10. 19. 2 And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat.

That he come not at all times; not whensoever he pleaseth, but only when I shall appoint him, to wit, to take down the parts and furniture of it upon every removal, and to minister unto me once in the year, Exod. xxx. 10. Holy place, i. e. into the most holy, or the holy of holies, as the following words demonstrate, which is sometimes called only the holy place, as Heb. ix. 2, 3; the positive degree put for the comparative, which is not unusual in Scripture. Within the veil, to wit, the second veil. See Lev. iv. 6. That he die not, for his irreverence and presumption. I will appear, visibly and gloriously; that is, as it were, my presence-chamber, whither the priest shall not dare to come but when I call him. In the cloud; either in that dark place, for there was no light came into it, and clouds and darkness go together, and one may be put for the other; or in a bright and glorious cloud, which used to be over the mercy-seat, or rather in the cloud of incense mentioned afterward, ver. 13.

3 Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a young bullock for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering.

Thus; in this manner, or upon these terms. With a young bullock, i. e. with the blood of it, as it is explained ver. 14. So it is a synecdoche, the whole put for the part. For as for the body of it, that was to be killed and offered without upon the altar of burnt-offerings. For a sin-offering, for his own and family's sins, for a goat was offered for the sins of the people.

4 He shall put on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore shall he wash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

It is observable that the high priest did not now use his peculiar and glorious robes, but only his linen garments, which were common to him with the ordinary priests. The reason whereof was, either because this was not a day of feasting and rejoicing, but of mourning and humiliation, at which times people were to lay aside their ornaments, Exod. xxxiii. 5. Some conceive, that under the linen garments here named are comprehended his more glorious robes also by a synecdoche. But that doth not appear neither from hence, nor from other places alleged. Had only his holy garments been mentioned in general, all might have been understood; but when only the linen apparel is mentioned here, and after, ver. 23, and when that is so particularly expressed in four several parts of it, and not a word of the other either here or in the rest of the chapter, it seems presumptuous to add them here without any ground or evidence. Or because it was fit he should not exalt, but abase himself, when he was to appear before the Divine Majesty, and therefore he was to come in the meanest of his priestly habits. Or that it might be an evidence of the imperfection of this priesthood, and of the great difference between the Levitical and the true High Priest Christ Jesus, whose prerogative alone it is to go into the true holy of holies with his glorious robes, when this must carry thither the characters of his meanness. These are holy garments, because appropriated to a holy and religious use, for which reason other things are called holy. See Exod. xxix. 31; xxx. 25; 2 Chron. v. 5.

5 And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin offering, and one ram for a burnt offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and make an atonement for himself, and for his house.

i. e. His family, as Gen. vii. 1, to wit, the priests and Levites. See Numb. i. 49.

7 And he shall take the two goats, and present them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for the scapegoat.

One lot for the LORD; for the Lord's use and service by way of sacrifice. Both this and the other goat typified Christ; this in his death and passion for us; that in his resurrection for our deliverance.

9 And Aaron shall bring the goat upon which d Heb. 9. 7. 12, 24, 25. e ch. 4. 3.

f Ex. 28. 39, 42, 43. ch. 6. 10. Ezek. 44. 17, 18.

g Ex. 30. 20. ch. 8. 6, 7.

h See ch. 4. 14. Num. 29. 11. 2 Chron. 29. 31. Ezra 6. 17. Ezek. 45. 22, 23.

i ch. 9. 7. Heb. 5. 2. & 7. 27, 28. & 9. 7.

+ Heb. Azazel.

† Heb. went up. the LORD's lot † fell, and offer him for a sin offering.

So the lot is said to fall, Jonah i. 7; Acts i. 26. Heb. went up, to wit, out of the vessel, into which the lots were put, and out of which they were brought up.

10 But the goat, on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat, shall be presented alive before the LORD, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scapegoat into the wilderness.

To make an atonement with him, in manner hereafter expressed, ver. 21, 22.

11 And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin offering which is for himself:

The bullock, mentioned in general ver. 6; the ceremonies whereof are here particularly described. This was a differing bullock or heifer from that Numb. xix., as appears by comparing the places.

12 And he shall take a censer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the veil:

From off the altar, to wit, of burnt-offering, where the fire was always burning, and whence fire was taken for such uses as these. Incense; of which see Exod. xxx. 34, 35, 38. Within the veil, i. e. into the holy of holies, ver. 2.

13 And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not:

Upon the fire, which was in the censer, ver. 12. That he die not for so gross an error committed in the highest acts of worship, and that by a high priest, whose knowledge and function was a great aggravation to his sin.

14 And he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat eastward; and before the mercy seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.

He shall sprinkle it upon the mercy-seat, to teach us that God is merciful to sinners only through and for the blood of Christ. Eastward, i. e. with his face eastward, or upon the eastern part of it, towards the people, who were in the court, which lay eastward from the holy of holies, which was the most western part of the tabernacle. This signified that the high priest in this act represented the people, and that God accepted it on their behalf. Before the mercy-seat; on the ground.

15 Then shall he kill the goat of the sin offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood within the veil, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat:

Either he killed the goat before he entered into the holy of holies, though it be mentioned after, such transplacings of passages being not unusual; or rather he went out of the holy of holies and killed it, and then returned thither again with its blood, and this agrees best with the text, nor are transpositions to be allowed without necessity. And whereas the high priest is said to be allowed to enter into that place but once in a year, that is to be understood but one day in a year, though there seems to have been occasion of going in and coming out more than once upon that day.

16 And he shall make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation, that remaineth among them in the midst of their uncleanness.

An atonement for the holy place; of which see below, ver. 19, 20; Exod. xxix. 36; Lev. viii. 15; Heb. ix. 13. Because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel; for though the people did not enter into that place, yet their sins entered thither, and would hinder the effects of the high priest's mediation on their behalf, if God was not reconciled to them. In the midst of their uncleanness; encompassed with their sins, being in the midst of a sinful people, who defile not themselves only, but also God's sanctuary, as God complains, Ezek. xxiii. 38, 39.

17 And there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.

In the tabernacle of the congregation, i. e. in the holy place, where the priests and Levites were at other times. This was commanded for the greater reverence to the Divine Majesty, then in a more special manner appearing, and that none of them might cast an eye into the holy of holies as the high priest went in or came out.

18 And he shall go out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about.

Unto the altar, to wit, the altar of incense, where the blood of sacrifices was to be put, Lev. iv. 7; and particularly the blood of the sin-offerings offered upon this day of atonement, Exod. xxx. 10; and which is most truly and properly said to be before the Lord, i. e. before the place where God in special manner dwelt, to wit, the holy of holies. Some understand it of the altar of burnt-offerings, because he is said to go out to it. But that going out relates not to the tabernacle, but to the holy of holies, into which he was said to go in, ver. 17. Add to this, that this altar which is atoned by the high priest seems to be in that place where he only might now come, and therefore in the holy place, called here the tabernacle, from which all other priests were for this day excluded, whereas the altar of burnt-offerings was without the holy place or tabernacle, to wit, at the door of it, and in the court of the priests.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

Seven times, to signify its perfect cleansing, seven being a number of perfection, and our perfect reconciliation by the blood of Christ here represented.

20 And when he hath made an end of reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat:

21 And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness:

Both his hands. See on Exod. xxix. 10; Lev. i. 4. And confess over him; confession of sin being a duty to accompany the sacrifice offered for it, as we see Lev. v. 5; Numb. v. 7. All their transgressions in all their sins, or with or according to all their sins; for so the Hebrew par-

1 ch. 10. 1.
Num. 16. 18,
46. Rev. 8. 5.

m Ex. 30. 34.

n Ex. 30. 1,
7. 8. Num.
16. 7, 18, 46.
Rev. 8. 3, 4.
o Ex. 25. 21.

p ch. 4. 5.
Heb. 9. 13,
25. & 10. 4.
q ch. 4. 6.

r Heb. 2. 17.
& 5. 2. & 9.
7, 28.

s ver. 2.
Heb. 8. 19.
& 9. 3, 7, 12.

t See Ex. 29.
36. Ezek. 45.
18. Heb. 9.
22, 23.

† Heb. dwelleth.

u See Ex. 34. 3. Luke 1. 10.

x Ex. 30. 10. ch. 4. 7, 18. Heb. 9. 22, 23.

y Ezek. 43. 20.

z ver. 16. Ezek. 45. 20.

a Is. 53. 6.

+ Heb. a man of opportunity.

ticle is oft used. He mentions iniquities, transgressions, and sins, to note sins of all sorts, and that a very free and full confession was to be made, and that the smallest sins needed, and the greatest sins were not excluded from, the benefit of Christ's death here represented. Putting them upon the head of the goat; charging all their sins and the punishment due to them upon the goat, which though only a ceremony, yet being done according to God's appointment, and manifestly pointing at Christ, upon whom their iniquities and punishments were laid, Isa. liii. 5, 6, it was available for this end. And hence the heathens took their custom of selecting one beast or man upon whom they laid all their imprecations and curses, and whom they killed as an expiatory sacrifice for their sins, and to prevent their ruin. A fit man; one that knows the wilderness, and the way to it, and what places in it are most convenient for that use. Heb. a man of time, i. e. of years and discretion, who may be trusted with this work. Into the wilderness; which signified the removal of their sins far away, both from the people, and out of God's sight, or from the place of his presence. And here the goat being neglected by all men, and exposed to many hardships and hazards from wild beasts, which were numerous there, might further signify Christ's being forsaken, both by God and by men, even by his own disciples, and the many dangers and sufferings he underwent. The Jews write, that this goat was carried to the mountain called Azazel, whence the goat is so called, ver. 10; and that there he was cast down headlong; and that the red string by which he was led turned white when God was pleased with the Israelites, otherwise it remained red; and then they mourned all that year. And the ancient Hebrews write, that forty years before the destruction of the temple, which was about the time of Christ's death, this red string turned no more white.

b Is. 53. 11,
12. John 1.
29. Heb. 9.
28. 1 Pet. 2.
24.
† Heb. of separation.

22 And the goat shall ^bbear upon him all their iniquities unto a land †not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

c Ezek. 42.
14. & 44. 19.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall put off the linen garments, which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there:

Aaron shall come, forthwith, not expecting the return of the man who carried the goat away, but securely committing that to God's providence he shall go on in his work.

d ver. 3, 5.

24 And he shall wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, and offer his burnt offering, and the burnt offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

In the holy place; either in the laver appointed for that purpose, or in some other vessel within the holy place, because after he had washed in it he is said to come forth. His garments; not his ordinary priestly linen garments, for he was to leave them in the tabernacle, ver. 23, but the high-priestly garments, called his garments properly and peculiarly, and by way of distinction from the former garments, which are called holy garments, ver. 4, and the linen garments, ver. 23, but never his garments, as these are. And this change of his garments was not without cause. For the common priestly garments were more proper and fit for him in the former part of his ministrations, both because he was to appear before the Lord in the most holy place to humble himself, and make atonement for his own and for the people's sins, and therefore his humblest and meanest attire was most fit; and because he was to lay his hands upon that goat on which all their sins were put, by which touch both he and his garments would be in some sort defiled; and therefore, as we read here that he washed himself or his flesh, so we may well presume his linen garments were laid by for the washing, as the clothes of him who carried away the scape-goat were washed, ver. 26. And the high-priestly garments were most proper for the latter part of his work, which was of another nature.

25 And *the fat of the sin offering shall e ch. 4. 10. he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scapegoat shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp. f ch. 15. 5.

He shall wash his clothes, because he had contracted some degree of ceremonial uncleanness by the touch of the goat.

27 *And the bullock for the sin offering, and the goat for the sin offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

g ch. 4. 12,
21. & 6. 30.
Heb. 13. 11.

28 And he that burneth them shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 ¶ And this shall be a statute for ever unto you: that ^hin the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

h Ex. 30. 10.
ch. 23. 27.
Num. 29. 7.
Is. 58. 3, 5.
Dan. 10. 3, 12.

For ever. See on Exod. xii. 14. In the seventh month, answering part to our September, and part to our October; when they had gathered in all their fruits, and were most at leisure for God's service: this time God chose for this and other feasts, herein graciously condescending to men's necessities and conveniencies, being contented with that time which men could best spare. On the tenth day. Object. It was on the ninth day, Lev. xxiii. 32. Answer. It began in the evening of the ninth day, and continued till the evening of the tenth day, as is there sufficiently implied. Ye shall afflict your souls, i. e. yourselves, as the word soul is frequently used, both your bodies by abstinence from food and other delights, and your minds by anguish and grief for former sins, which though bitter, yet is voluntarily in all true penitents, who are therefore here said not to be afflicted, but to afflict themselves, or to be active in the work.

30 For on that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

i Ps. 51. 2.
Jer. 33. 5.
Eph. 5. 26.
Heb. 9. 13,
14. & 10. 1, 2.
1 John 1. 7, 9.
k ch. 23. 32.

31 It shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

A sabbath of rest; observed as a sabbath day by cessation from all worldly and servile works, and diligent attendance upon God's worship and service.

32 ^lAnd the priest, whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall ^mconsecrate to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and shall put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments:

l ch. 4. 3, 5, 16.
+ Heb. all his hand.
m Ex. 29. 29,
30. Num. 20. 26, 28.
n ver. 4.

Whom he shall anoint; he, i. e. either God, who commanded him to be anointed, as men are oft said to do what others do by their command, or the high priest, who was to anoint his successor. Or, the third person is here put indefinitely or impersonally, for who shall be anointed.

33 And he shall make an atonement for the holy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar, and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.

o ver. 6, 16,
18, 19, 24.

34 ^pAnd this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement

p ch. 23. 31.
Num. 29. 7.

for the children of Israel for all their sins
g Ex. 30. 10. once a year. And he did as the LORD
Heb. 9. 7, 23. commanded Moses.

CHAP. XVII.

Sacrifices to be offered only in the temple, 1—6, and not to devils, 7, on pain of death, 8, 9. Blood not to be eat, on the same pain; the life being in the blood, and it given for an atonement, 10—14; nor any beast that died of itself, or was torn by beasts, 15.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them; This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever there be of the house of Israel, ^athat killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp,

That killeth, not for common use or eating, for such beasts might be killed by any person or in any place, but for sacrifice, as manifestly appears both from ver. 4, where that is expressed, and from the reason of this law, which is peculiar to sacrifices, ver. 5, and from Deut. xii. 5, 15, 21. In the camp, or out of the camp: in Canaan, the city answered to the camp, and so it forbids any man doing this either in the city or in the country.

4 ^bAnd bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD; blood shall be ^cimputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man ^dshall be cut off from among his people:

This was appointed, partly, in opposition to the heathens, who sacrificed in all places; partly, to cut off occasions of idolatry; partly, to prevent the people's usurpation of the priest's office; and partly, to signify that God would accept of no sacrifices but through Christ and in the church, (of both which the tabernacle was a type: see Heb. ix. 11,) and according to his own prescript. But though men were tied to this law, God was free to dispense with his own law, which he did sometimes to the prophets, as 1 Sam. vii. 9; xi. 15, &c., and afterwards more fully and generally in the days of the Messiah, Mal. i. 11; John iv. 21, 24. Blood shall be imputed unto that man; he shall be esteemed and punished as a murderer both by God and by men. See Isa. lxvi. 3. The reason is, because he shed that blood, which, though not man's blood, yet was as precious, being sacred and appropriated to God, and typically the price by which men's lives were ransomed. He shall be cut off by death, either by the hand of God, in case men do not know it or neglect to punish it, or by men, if the fact was public and evident.

5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, ^ewhich they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them for peace offerings unto the LORD.

Which they offer; either, 1. The Egyptians and other idolatrous nations, which commonly sacrificed to idols or devils in fields or any places; who are not here named, but may be designed by the particle they, in way of contempt, as if they were not worthy to be named, as that particle is used, Luke xiv. 24; xix. 27; John vii. 11; viii. 10. Or rather, 2. The Israelites now mentioned, and plainly understood in the following they, who, before the building of the tabernacle, took the same liberty herein which the Gentiles did, from which they are now restrained.

He nameth not peace-offerings exclusively to others, as appears from the reason of the law, and from ver. 8, 9, but especially, because in these the temptation was more common in regard of their frequency, and more powerful, because part of these belonged to the offerer, and the pretence was more plausible, because their sanctity was something of a lower degree than others, these being only called holy, and allowed in part to the people, when the other are called most holy, and were wholly appropriated either to God or to the priests.

6 And the priest shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar of the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and ^gburn the fat for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

This verse contains a reason of the foregoing law, because of God's propriety in the blood and fat, wherewith also God was well pleased, and the people reconciled. And these two parts only are mentioned, as the most eminent, and peculiar, though other parts also were reserved for God.

7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices ^hunto devils, after whom they have gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

Unto devils; so they did, not directly or intentionally, but by construction and consequence, because the devil is the author of idolatry, and is eminently served, pleased, and honoured by it. And as the Egyptians were notorious for their idolatry, as appears by the testimony of Scripture, and of all ancient writers, so the Israelites were infected with their leaven, Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 7; xxiii. 2, 3. And the name of devils is commonly given in Scripture to idols, yea, even to those which seemed most innocent, as to Jeroboam's calves, 2 Chron. xi. 15, by which he and the people designed and professed to worship the true God, as is manifest from the nature of the thing, and from many places of Scripture; and the worshippers of idols are esteemed and called worshippers of devils. See Deut. xxxii. 17; Psal. cvi. 37; 1 Cor. x. 20; Rev. ix. 20. The Hebrew word rendered devils signifies goats, either because goats were eminently worshipped by the Egyptians, as Herodotus, Strabo, and others note, and divers of the idols of the heathens were of that or a like form; or because the devil did oft appear to the heathens in that shape, as their own authors note. After whom they have gone a whoring; for idolatry, especially in God's people, is commonly called whoredom, as Ezek. xvi. 16, 26; xxiii. 8, 19, 21, &c., and that justly, because it is a violation of that covenant by which they were peculiarly betrothed or married to God. See Hos. ii. 18—20.

8 ¶ And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, ^kthat offereth a burnt offering or sacrifice,

9 And ^lbringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer it unto the LORD; even that man shall be cut off from among his people.

10 ¶ ^mAnd whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; ⁿI will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

i. e. I will be an enemy to him, and execute vengeance upon him immediately; because such persons probably would do this in private, so as the magistrate could not know nor punish it. See this or the like phrase Lev. xx. 3; xxvi. 17; Jer. iii. 12; Ezek. xiv. 8.

11 ^oFor the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar ^pto make an atonement for your

^a See Deut. 12. 5, 15, 21.

^b Deut. 12. 5, 6, 13, 14.

^c Rom. 5. 13.

^d Gen. 17. 14.

^e Gen. 21. 33, & 22. 2, & 31. 54. Deut. 12. 2. 1 Kin. 14. 23. 2 Kin. 16. 4. & 17. 10. 2 Chr. 28. 4. Ezek. 20. 26. & 22. 9.

^h ch. 3. 2.

^g Ex. 29. 18. ch. 3. 5, 11, 16, & 4. 31. Num. 18. 17.

^h Deut. 32.

ⁱ 2 Chro.

^j 11. 15.

^k Ps. 106. 37.

^l 1 Cor. 10. 20.

^m Rev. 9. 20.

ⁿ 1 Ex. 34. 15.

^o ch. 20. 3.

^p Deut. 31. 16.

^q Ezek. 23. 8.

^k ch. 1. 2, 3.

^l ver. 4.

^m Gen. 9. 4.

ⁿ ch. 3. 17. &

^o 7. 26, 27.

^p & 19. 26.

^q Deut. 12. 16,

^r 23, & 15. 23.

^s 1 Sam. 14. 33.

^t Ezek. 44. 7.

^u n ch. 20. 3,

^v 5, 6, & 28. 17.

^w Jer. 44. 11.

^x Ezek. 14. 8,

^y & 15. 7.

^o ver. 14.

^p Mat. 26. 28.

^q Mark 14. 24.

^r Rom. 3. 25.

^s & 5. 9.

souls : for ^qit is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

Of the flesh, i. e. of living creatures. Is in the blood, i. e. it depends upon the blood, is preserved and nourished by it, and is extinguished when the blood is gone. And this law was given to the Jews, and hard-hearted people, as they are oft said to be, that by this restraint from the blood of brute creatures they might be wrought to the greater abhorreny of taking away the life of a man. It is the blood that maketh an atonement; typically, and in respect of the blood of Christ, which it represented, by which the atonement is really made, Heb. ix. 12. So the reason is double: 1. Because this was the eating up of the price or ransom of their own lives, which in construction was the destroying of themselves. 2. Because this was ingratitude and irreverence towards that sacred blood of Christ which they ought to have in continual veneration.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, †which hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

Any beast; he instanceth in this kind, either because persons much given to that exercise are commonly too licentious, and being in haste might easily transgress; or because some might think the former prohibition did reach only to the blood of such creatures as were offered to God in sacrifice. Cover it with dust; partly, to beget an honourable respect unto the blood even of beasts, and much more of men; partly, lest the beasts should lick it up, and by tasting the sweetness of it be made more fierce and cruel to devour and destroy others; and partly, as a licence from God upon this condition giving them a right to kill and eat such creatures, without any fear of the blood being imputed to them; for as the not covering of the blood portends the punishment which the sin of bloodshedding calls for, Job xvi. 18; Ezek. xxiv. 7, 8, so covering it notes impunity.

14 For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 And every soul that eateth †that which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, he shall both wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean.

Every soul that eateth, to wit, through ignorance or inadvertency, as appears by the slightness of the punishment; for if it was done knowingly, it was a presumptuous sin against an express law here, and Deut. xiv. 21, and therefore more severely punished. Or a stranger; understand of the proselytes; either of the proselytes of the gate, who were obliged to observe the precepts of Noah, whereof this was one; or of the proselytes of righteousness, or converts to the Jewish religion; for other strangers were allowed to eat such things, Deut. xiv. 21.

16 But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh; then he shall bear his iniquity.

i. e. The punishment of it, and therefore must offer a sacrifice for it. See Lev. v. 1, 2, &c.; vii. 18.

tion with a menstruous woman, 19; and adultery, 20; and offering children to Moloch, 21; and all unnatural copulation with man or beast, 22, 23. These things the nations do; and the land is defiled, and God is provoked; and they who do those things shall die: but God was their Lord, 24—30.

AND THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the LORD your God.

Your Sovereign and Lawgiver. This is oft repeated here, because the things here forbidden were practised and allowed by the Gentiles, to whose custom he here opposeth Divine authority, and their obligation to obey his commands.

3 After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do: neither shall ye walk in their ordinances.

Egypt and Canaan: these two nations he mentions, because their habitation and conversation among them made their evil example in the following matters more dangerous. But under them he includes all other nations, as he elsewhere expresseth it. In their ordinances, or statutes; either because their laws did indeed allow such things, or because prevailing customs have the force of laws.

4 Ye shall do my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God.

My judgments and mine ordinances; mine universally, Deut. xxvii. 26; Gal. iii. 10; for though the words be indefinite, the matter is necessary; and mine solely, Deut. vi. 13, compared with Matt. iv. 10, and therefore those that here follow, though you do not see the particular reason of some of them, and though they be contrary to the laws and usages of the nations.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD.

He shall live in them; not only happily here, but also eternally hereafter, as it is expounded Matt. xix. 17; Rom. x. 5. This is added as a powerful argument why they should follow God's commands rather than men's examples, because their life and happiness depends upon the one, not the other. And though in strictness, and according to the law or covenant of works, they could not challenge life for doing, except their obedience was universal, perfect, constant, and perpetual, and therefore no man since the fall could be justified by the law, as the apostle affirms and proves, Rom. iv.; Gal. iii.; yet by the covenant of grace this life is promised to all that obey God's commands sincerely, though not perfectly, 1 Tim. iv. 8.

¶ None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

None, Heb. no man. For though the women also be bound by this law, yet the men alone are mentioned, both because they are most active in the choice of their yoke-fellows, and therefore most likely to transgress these laws, and because they having authority over the women, could have the greater influence upon them, by their power, counsel, or example, to oblige them either to the observation or violation of them. Approach: this word signifies the conjugal act here, as it doth Gen. xx. 4; Isa. viii. 3; but because it is ambiguous in itself, it is so limited and explained in the end of the verse. To any that is near of kin to him: this is the general rule, which is particularly expounded and applied in the following instances. And these laws are so just and reasonable, that although the barbarous nations did allow of such incestuous marriages, yet wiser and civil heathens by the mere light of nature condemned them, as may be seen in Suetonius, Tacitus, Catullus, and others. Their nakedness, i. e. their secret † Heb. that hunteth any beast, r ch. 7. 26. s Deut. 12. 16, 24, & 15. 23. t Ezek. 24. 7.

u ver. 11, 12. Deut. 9. 4. Deut. 12. 23.

x Ex. 22. 31. ch. 22. 5. Deut. 14. 21. Ezek. 4. 14. & 44. 31. † Heb. a carcase. y ch. 11. 25. z ch. 15. 5.

a ver. 4. Ex. 6. 7. ch. 11. 44. & 19. 4. 10. 34. & 20. 7. Ezek. 20. 5, 7, 19, 20.

b Ezek. 20. 7, 8. & 23. 8.

c Ex. 23. 24. ch. 20. 23. Deut. 12. 4, 30, 31.

d Deut. 4. 1. 2. & 6. 1. Ezek. 20. 19.

e Ezek. 20. 11, 13, 21. Luke 10. 28. Rom. 10. 5. Gal. 3. 12. f Ex. 6. 2, 6, 29. Mal. 3. 6.

† Heb. remainder of his flesh.

CHAP. XVIII.

Israelites not to live after the customs of the Egyptians or Canaanites, but according to God's institutions, 1—5. To abstain from incestuous marriages, 6—18; and copula-parts, so called to put us in mind of the fall of our first parents, whose first sense and shame of their nakedness had its rise from thence. This phrase notes the same thing with knowing, Gen. iv. 1; and with discovering one's skirt, Deut. xxii. 30; xxvii. 20.

g ch. 20. 11. 7 ^sThe nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

Of thy father, or of thy mother, Heb. and of thy mother, put for that is, or to wit, as it is oft used. Here it notes that the nakedness of the father, and the nakedness of the mother, are one and the same thing, because they two are one flesh, and therefore her nakedness is his also; which further appears, because the mother only is mentioned in the following words, which contain the reason of the law. She is thy mother; and therefore even nature teacheth thee to abhor such incest. Yet the Persians used to marry their mother; therein worse than the very camels, whom no force will drive to that act with their dams.

h Gen. 49. 4.
ch. 20. 11.
Deut. 22. 30.
& 27. 20.
Ezek. 22. 10.
Amos 2. 7.
1 Cor. 5. 1.
8 ^hThe nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover: it is thy father's nakedness.

i. e. Thy step-mother. Examples of this are Gen. xxxv. 22; xlix. 4; 1 Cor. v. 1. It is thy father's nakedness, by interest and relation; that which he only may uncover.

i ch. 20. 17.
2 Sam. 13.
12. Ezek. 22.
11.
9 ⁱThe nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

Thy sister, by both parents. The daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother; thy sister by either of thy parents. Whether she be born at home, to wit, of thy father by another wife, whom he hath taken into his house. Or born abroad; either of thy mother, by another, whether a former or a second husband, in another house and family; or of thy father by some strange woman, for there might be some doubt in these cases.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for their's is thine own nakedness.

And consequently of all thy children and children's children, and all downwards; for they are a part of thyself, as coming out of thy loins, and out of thy wife, whose nakedness is thine own.

11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, she is thy sister, thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

Begotten of thy father, or, being akin to thy father. He seems to speak of the daughter of the father's brother by his wife, whom the father here spoken of, being brother to the deceased person, married by virtue of that law, Deut. xxv. 5, by which marriage there was a near kindred contracted between the two families, so that the son of the one could not marry the daughter of the other. Thus this law is differing from that ver. 9. And that seems more probable, than that in so brief a table of laws the same thing should be forbidden both there and here. Object. The word being the same here and ver. 9, must be understood in the same sense, and therefore here must be rendered begotten or born, as it is there. Answer. It may be rendered there as well as here akin, as some render the words there, of domestic, or of another, a foreign, kindred; and if the word had been participially put for begotten or born, it is likely the preposition mem or lamed would have been prefixed to the Hebrew word abicha, as is common in those cases.

k ch. 20. 19. 12 ^kThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman.

Thy aunt by the father's side, as the next verse speaks of the aunt by the mother's side. If Amram's example be alleged to the contrary, see on Exod. vi. 20. Thy father's near kinswoman, Heb. thy father's flesh, a member and product of the same flesh from which thy father came.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

l ch. 20. 20. 14 ^lThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt.

Of thy father's brother, i. e. of his wife, as the next words explain it. And as a man may not marry his aunt, so neither may a woman marry her uncle, there being altogether the same distance in kindred, and the selfsame reason of the law. And for the examples of Abraham, Amram, Othniel, &c., to the contrary, they were before the publication of this law, by which it pleased God to restrain the liberty allowed formerly, when the holy seed was in a narrower compass, and fewer persons, which altered the case. For in that regard there was a time when God allowed brethren and sisters to marry, to wit, when there were no other in the world, which was the case of Adam's immediate children. We learn from hence that the same degrees are forbidden in consanguinity or kindred by blood, and in affinity or kindred by marriage. She is thine aunt: some infer from hence that it is unlawful for cousin-germans, or the children of brethren and sisters, to marry. But there is not the same reason, nor the same degree of distance, for my uncle or aunt are nearer akin to me than their children are. Yet because it seems doubtful to many, and may hereafter prove occasion of grievous perplexities of mind, especially to tender and scrupulous consciences, Christian prudence directs us to choose the safest way, there being so great a latitude of unquestionable persons.

m Gen. 38.
18, 26, ch.
20. 12. Ezek.
22. 11.
15 ^mThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter in law: she is thy son's wife; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

n ch. 20. 21.
Matt. 14. 4.
See Deut.
25. 5. Matt.
22. 24. Mark
12. 19.
16 ⁿThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness.

Neither in his lifetime, nor after his death, and therefore a woman might not marry her husband's brother, nor might a man marry his wife's sister, either before or after his wife's death, for so all the prohibitions are to be understood; which will give light to ver. 18. But God, who can undoubtedly dispense with his own laws, did afterwards make one exception to this rule, of which see Deut. xxv. 5.

o ch. 20. 14. 17 ^oThou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness.

Of a woman and her daughter, to wit, thy step-daughter, and so thy step-son's daughter, &c. It is wickedness; because they are very near to thy wife by consanguinity, as coming directly from her; and therefore they are as near to thee by affinity, which binds as much as consanguinity; the wife, who is only related by affinity, being nearer to a man than any other by consanguinity, they two being made one flesh, and therefore the same distance is to be observed in both of them.

p Cr., one wife to another.
Ex. 26. 3.
p 1 Sam. 1.
6, 8.
18 Neither shalt thou take \parallel a wife to her sister, ^pto vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her life time.

The word sister is here understood, either, 1. Properly, so some; whence others infer that it is lawful to marry one's wife's sister after the wife's death. Or, 2. Improperly for any other woman, as not only persons, but things, of the same kind are oft called sisters and brethren, of which see plain examples, Exod. xxvi. 3; xxxii. 27, 29; Ezek. i. 9; iii. 13; xvi. 45, 48, 49. So the sense is, thou shalt not take one woman to another. And this sense may seem more probable, 1. Because else here were a tautology, the marriage of a man with his wife's sister being sufficiently forbidden, ver. 16, where marriage with his brother's wife is forbidden; as also ver. 9, 11, where he forbids the marriage of one's own sister, and consequently the marriage of one's wife's sister, it being manifest and confessed that affinity and consanguinity are of the same consideration and obligation in these matters. Nor can this be added for explication, for then the comment would be darker than the text, nay, it would destroy the text; for then what was simply, and absolutely, and universally forbidden before, is here forbidden doubtfully and restrainedly, and might at least seem to be allowed after the wife's death; which is rejected by those who own the former interpretation. 2. Because the reason of this prohibition, which is lest he should vex her thereby, is much more proper and effectual against marrying any other woman, than against marrying the wife's sister, so near and dear a relation being most commonly and probably a means to induce them rather to love and please and serve, than to vex one another in such a relation. And therefore to take her natural sister to vex her, would seem a course unsuitable to his end or design. 3. Some add another reason, that polygamy, which Christ condemns, Matt. xix. 5, is either forbidden here or no where in the law. But this may admit of great dispute. And it is observable, that Christ confutes polygamy and divorces, not by any of Moses's laws, (which probably he would not have omitted, if they had been to his purpose,) but by the first institution of marriage, Gen. ii. 23; whence also Malchi seems to fetch his argument, chap. ii. 14, 15. And that law, Deut. xxi. 15, 16, may seem to intimate that God did then, in consideration of the hard-heartedness of the Jewish nation, dispense with that first and primitive law, especially if we consider the practice of divers holy men amongst the Jews, not only before the law, as Abraham and Jacob, but also after it, as Elkanah and David, who would never have lived in the violation of a known law, or, if they had, would have been blamed for it; whereas on the contrary God mentions it as one of his favours vouchsafed to David, that he gave him his master's wives into his bosom, 2 Sam. xii. 8; and affirms, that David turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah, 1 Kings xv. 5. Peradventure therefore it may deserve some consideration, which a learned man in part suggests, that this text doth not simply forbid the taking of one wife to another, but the doing of it in such a manner, or for such an end, that he may vex, or punish, or revenge himself of the former; which probably was a common motive amongst that hard-hearted people to do so, and therefore the forbidding hereof might give a great check to the practice of polygamy amongst them. In her lifetime: this clause is added to signify God's allowance to marry one wife after another, when she is dead, and thereby to intimate how the word sister is to be understood.

19 ^q Also thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness, as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

No, not to thy own wife. See chap. xii. 2; xv. 24, 25. This was not only a ceremonial pollution, but an immorality also, whence it is put amongst gross sins, Ezek. xviii. 6. There is also a natural turpitude in this action. And therefore it is now unlawful under the gospel.

20 Moreover thou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her.

21 And thou shalt not let any of thy seed pass through the fire to Molech, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

Pass through the fire: this was done two ways; either, 1. By burning them in the fire, of which see 2 Kings iii. 27; 2 Chron. xxviii. 3; Psal. cvi. 37, 38; Isa. lvii. 5. Or, 2. By making them pass between two great fires, which was a kind of lustration or consecration of them to that god; which latter seems to be here meant. See on Deut. xviii. 10, where the word fire, here understood, is expressed.

To Molech, or, Moloch; called also Milcom; an idol chiefly of the Ammonites, as appears from 1 Kings xi. 7; 2 Kings xxiii. 13; Jer. xlix. 1, 3. This seems to be the Saturn of the heathens, to whom especially children and men were sacrificed. This is mentioned, because the neighbours of Israel were most infected with this idolatry, and therefore they are particularly cautioned against it, though under this one instance all other idols and acts, or kinds of idolatry, are manifestly comprehended and forbidden. Neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God; either by joining him with, or by forsaking him for, such a base and bloody idol, whereby the name, honour, and service of God would be horribly defiled, and exposed to the scorn of the heathen, as if he were but one of the same kind with their mongrel deities.

22 ^r Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination.

See Lev. xx. 13; 1 Kings xiv. 24.
23 ^y Neither shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith: neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is confusion.

A horrible confusion of the natures which God hath distinguished, and of the order which God hath appointed, and an overthrow of all bounds of religion, honesty, sobriety, and modesty.

24 ^a Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: ^b for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you:

In all these, to wit, above-mentioned sins. Whence it is apparent that the several incests here prohibited are not only against the positive and particular law given by God to the Jews, but also against the general law and light of nature. And therefore the law about these things was one of the seven precepts of Noah. And the sober heathens condemned such incestuous marriages. The Roman historians observe, that when Claudius the emperor had married his niece, (which is one of the lowest kinds of incest here mentioned,) and the senate in complaisance with him had made it lawful for any to do so, yet there was but one, and he too an obscure person, that followed his example.

25 And the land is defiled: therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.

I do visit; I am now visiting, or about to visit, i. e. to punish. See Isa. xxvi. 21. The land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants, as no less burdens to the earth than corrupted food is to the stomach. See Jer. ix. 19; Micah ii. 10.

26 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you:

Nor any stranger, in nation or religion, of what kind soever. For though they might not force them to submit to their religion, yet they might restrain them from the public contempt of the Jewish laws, and from the violation of natural laws, which besides the offence against God and nature, were matters of evil example and consequence to the Israelites themselves.

27 (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled;)

28 That the land spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you.

29 For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people.

To wit, by death to be inflicted by the magistrates, as it is apparent in case of idolatry with Moloch or other false gods; and, in case of the magistrate's neglect, by God q ch. 20. 18. Ezek. 18. 6. & 22. 10.

r ch. 20. 10. Ex. 20. 14. Deut. 5. 18. & 22. 22. Prov. 6. 29. 32. Mal. 3. 5. Matt. 5. 27. Rom. 2. 22. 1 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 13. 4. s ch. 20. 2. 2 Kings 16. 3. & 21. 6. & 23. 10. Jer. 19. 5. Ezek. 20. 31. & 23. 37. 39. t 1 Kings 11. 7. 33. Called, Acts 7. 43, Moloch. u ch. 19. 12. & 20. 3. & 21. 6. & 22. 2, 32. Ezek. 36. 20, &c. Mal. 1. 12.

x ch. 20. 13. Rom. 1. 27. 1 Cor. 6. 9. 1 Tim. 1. 10.

y ch. 20. 15, 16. Ex. 22. 19.

s ch. 20. 12.

a ver. 30. Matt. 15. 18, 19, 20. Mark 7. 21, 22, 23. 1 Cor. 3. 17. b ch. 20. 23. Deut. 18. 12.

c Num. 35. 24. Jer. 2. 7. & 16. 18. Ezek. 36. 17. d Ps. 88. 33. Is. 26. 21. Jer. 5. 9, 29. & 9. 9. & 14. 10. & 23. 2. Hos. 2. 13. & 8. 13. & 9. 9. e ver. 28.

f ver. 5, 30. ch. 20. 22, 23.

g ch. 20. 22. Jer. 9. 19. Ezek. 36. 13, 17.

himself. This phrase therefore of cutting off is to be understood variously, as many other phrases are, either of ecclesiastical, or civil and corporal punishment, according to the differing natures of the offences for which it is inflicted.

30 Therefore shall ye keep mine ordinance, ^hthat ye commit not any one of these abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye ⁱdefile not yourselves therein: ^kI am the LORD your God.

h ver. 3, 28.
ch. 20, 21.
Deut. 18, 9.
i ver. 24.
k ver. 2, 4.

CHAP. XIX.

Israelites must be holy, 1, 2; must honour their parents, and keep sabbaths, 3; shun idolatry, 4; duty to stay and eat their peace-offerings, 5—8; in harvest-time leave gleanings for the poor and stranger, 9, 10; not steal, deceive, or lie, 11; nor swear falsely, 12; nor defraud, rob, or detain, 13; nor curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling-block before the blind, 14; nor judge unjustly, 15; nor be tale-bearers; nor bear false witness against their neighbour, 16; but rebuke their brother for sin, 17; not revenge themselves, but love their neighbours, 18; not to mix different things, 19. The punishment of a man lying with a bond-maid, 20—22. They must not eat of the fruits of Canaan till after four years, 23—25. To eat no blood, and use no soothsaying, 26, nor any heathenish method of mourning, 28, nor prostitute their daughters, 29; but must reverence God and his ordinances, 30; not regard conjurers and wizards, 31; honour the ancient, 32; love and right strangers, 33, 34; do no unrighteousness, either in judgment or commerce, 35, 36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^aYe shall be holy: for I the LORD your God am holy.

Ye shall be holy, separated from all the forementioned defilements, and entirely consecrated to God, and obedient to all his laws and statutes. I the Lord your God am holy, both in my essence, and in all my laws, which are holy and just and good, and in all my actions; whereas the gods of the heathens are unholy both in their laws and institutions, whereby they allow and require filthy and abominable actions; and in their practices, some of them having given wicked examples to their worshippers.

3 ^b¶ ^cYe shall fear every man his mother, and his father, and ^ekeep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

The mother is put first, partly because the practice of this duty begins there, mothers, by perpetual converse, being more and sooner known to their children than their fathers; and partly because this duty is most commonly neglected to the mother, upon whom children have not so much dependence as they have upon their father. And this fear includes the two great duties of reverence and obedience. And keep my sabbaths: this is here added, to show, that whereas it is enjoined to parents that they should take care that the sabbath be observed both by themselves and by their children, it is the duty of children to fear and obey their parents in this matter; and moreover, that if parents should neglect their duty herein, or by their command, counsel, or example draw them to pollute the sabbath, yet the children in that case must keep the sabbath, and in all such cases prefer the command of God before the commands of their parents or superiors.

4 ^d¶ ^fTurn ye not unto idols, ^gnor make to yourselves molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

Turn not your hearts and faces from me, whom alone you pretend to respect, unto them. He intimates, that their turning to idols is a turning from God, and that they could not serve both God and idols. Unto idols: the word signifies such as are no gods, or nothings, as they are called,

a ch. 11. 44.
& 20, 7, 26.
1 Pet. 1. 16.

b Ex. 20. 12.
c Ex. 20. 8.
& 31. 13.

d Ex. 20. 4.
ch. 28. 1.
1 Cor. 10. 14.
1 John 5. 21.
e Ex. 34. 17.
Deut. 27. 15.

1 Cor. viii. 4, many idols having no being, but only in the fancy of their worshippers, and all of them having no virtue or power to do good or evil, Isa. xli. 23. Molten gods, nor graven gods neither, as appears from Exod. xx., whereby we learn that such expressions are generally to be understood synecdochically.

5 ¶ And ^fif ye offer a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will.

Or, according to your own good pleasure, what you think fit; for though this in the general was required, yet it was left to their choice to determine the particulars. See Lev. vii. 16. Or rather, to your acceptance, i. e. in such manner as it may be accepted by God on your behalf, which is explained in the next verse, and not in such manner as to lose the end you aim at, to wit, God's acceptance; for if ye do otherwise than God hath prescribed, it shall not be accepted, as he adds ver. 7, but on the contrary severely punished, ver. 8.

6 It shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

And on the morrow; by which clause it appears that he speaks here only of that sort of peace-offerings which were offered either by vow, or freely for the obtaining of some mercy desired; for the other sort, which was by way of gratitude for mercies received, were to be eaten the same day, Lev. vii. 15.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD: and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

His iniquity, i. e. the punishment of his iniquity; instead of acceptance he shall receive punishment.

9 ¶ And ^gwhen ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God.

Who gave you all these things with a reservation of my authority over you, and right in them, and with a charge of giving part of them to the poor.

11 ¶ ^hYe shall not steal, neither deal falsely, ⁱneither lie one to another.

Or, one against another, to the defrauding of him of any of his goods, to which kind of lying the words foregoing and following seem here to restrain it, though it be true that all sorts of lying are unlawful.

12 ¶ And ye shall not ^kswear by my name falsely, ^lneither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

Ye shall not swear by my name falsely: this is here added, to show how one sin draws on another, and that when men will lie for their own advantage, they will easily be induced to perjury. Neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God, by any unholy use of it. So it is an additional precept, thou shalt not abuse my holy name by swearing either falsely or rashly. Or this may be a reason of the former prohibition, because in so doing thou wilt profane the name of thy God.

13 ¶ ^mThou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: ⁿthe wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning.

The wages, Heb. the work, put for the wages, as Deut. xxiv. 15; Job vii. 2; Jer. xxii. 13. Shall not abide with thee all night, because his urgent necessities require it for present subsistence.

f ch. 7. 16.

g ch. 23. 22.
Deut. 24.
19, 20, 21.
Ruth 2. 15, 16.

h Ex. 20. 15.
& 22. 1, 7, 10.
Deut. 5. 19.
i ch. 6. 2.

Eph. 4. 25. Col. 3. 9.

k Ex. 20. 7.
ch. 6. 3.
Deut. 5. 11.
Mat. 5. 33.
James 5. 12.
1 ch. 18. 21.

m Eccles.
10. 6.
Mark 10. 19.
1 Thess. 4. 6.
n Deut. 24.
14, 15.
Mat. 5. 5.
Tob. 4. 14.
James 5. 4.

d Den. 27. 18.
Rom. 14. 13.
g ver. 32.
ch. 25. 17.
Gen. 42. 18.
Eccles. 5. 7.
1 Pet. 2. 17.

14 ¶ Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumblingblock before the blind, but shalt fear thy God: I am the LORD.

Nor put a stumbling-block before the blind, to make them fall. Under these two particulars are manifestly and especially forbidden all injuries done to such as are unable to right or defend themselves; of whom God here takes the more care, because they are not able to secure themselves; who both discerns the injuries you do them, and can avenge them, though the blind and deaf cannot.

15 ¶ Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

Thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, so as through pity to him to give an unrighteous sentence. Compare Deut. i. 17; x. 17; Prov. xxiv. 23.

16 ¶ Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people: neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.

As a tale-bearer, who makes it his business to go up and down from one to another, and divulge evil and false reports concerning others, which, though many times it proceeds only from levity and talkativeness, yet apparently tends to the great injury of our neighbour. See Prov. xi. 13; Jer. vi. 28; ix. 4. Neither shalt thou stand, to wit, in judgment, as a false accuser or false witness; for accusers and witnesses use to stand, whilst the judges sat, in courts of judicature.

17 ¶ Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.

To prevent murder, last spoken of, he forbids hatred, which is the common cause, and a degree of murder, 1 John iii. 15. Thy brother; the same with neighbour, as it follows, i. e. every man, Matt. v. 44; for it is manifest that God's law commanded them to love strangers no less than Israelites.

If thy brother hath done thee or others any injury, thou shalt neither divulge it to others as a tale-bearer, nor hate him, and smother that hatred by sullen silence, as 2 Sam. xiii. 22, nor justify and flatter and encourage him therein; but shalt freely, and in love, not with hatred, tell him of his fault. And not suffer sin upon him, i. e. not suffer him to lie under the guilt of any sin, which thou by rebuking of him, and thereby bringing him to true repentance, couldst in some sort free him from. But the phrase of suffering sin upon him seems imperfect and unusual in Scripture, and I doubt whether the Hebrew verb nasa be ever used for permitting or suffering. The words may be rendered thus, And (or so) thou shalt not bear sin for him, or for his sake; thou shalt not make thyself guilty of his sin, as thou wilt assuredly do, if thou dost not perform thy duty of rebuking him for his sin, which is a likely way, and a course appointed by God, to remove the guilt of his sin from him; and consequently, as it was his fault that he sinned and contracted guilt, so it is thy fault that his guilt continues upon him. Many things favour this sense. 1. This is the proper and usual signification of the word nasa. 2. The same words are used in this sense Lev. xxii. 9; Numb. xviii. 32. 3. The proposition al is oft used thus, as Gen. xxxvii. 8, 34; Judg. ix. 9; 1 Kings xvi. 7. 4. This phrase of bearing sin, or iniquity, is constantly used in this book for being guilty and liable to punishment. And so the sense is here full and complete, and a very weighty reason here given to enforce the foregoing precept.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

Nor bear any grudge, Heb. nor keep, either, 1. The injury here supposed in thy memory: so it is opposed to those who say they will forgive, but not forget an injury. Or, 2. Anger or hatred in thy heart: so this verb is used Jer. iii. 12; Nah. i. 2. Thy neighbour; by which he understands not the Israelites only, as some would persuade us, but every other man with whom we converse, as plainly appears, 1. By comparing this place with ver. 34, where this very law is applied to strangers. 2. Because the word neighbour is explained by another man, Lev. xx. 10; Rom. xiii. 8: see more on Exod. xx. 16. As thyself; with the same sincerity, though not equality, of affection, as to thyself.

19 ¶ Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind: neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.

Ye shall keep my statutes; either, 1. My laws. So this is fitly premised, because otherwise some of the following commands might seem trifling, and obedience to them unnecessary. Or, 2. My ordinances, to wit, of nature; or the order which I have appointed in creatures, as the word is used Job xxvi. 10; xxxviii. 33; Psal. cxlviii. 6; Prov. viii. 29; and therefore they shall not confound those things that I have distinguished, which were in some sort to reproach and correct my works, and which may seem to be done in some of the following instances. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind: this was prohibited, partly, to restrain the curiosity and boldness of men, who might attempt to amend or change the works of God; partly, that by the restraints here laid even upon brute creatures men might be taught to abhor all unnatural and unlawful lusts; partly, to teach the Israelites to avoid mixtures with other nations, either in marriage or in religion; which also may be signified by the following prohibitions. See of this and the next Deut. xxii. 9—11.

20 ¶ And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman, that is a bondmaid, betrothed to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her; she shall be scourged; they shall not be put to death, because she was not free.

Betrothed to an husband; or, reproached or despised, and therefore forsaken, of her husband. For as his continuance with her in his and her master's family and service is mentioned as an evidence that he loved her, Exod. xxi. 5, 6; so on the contrary, his forsaking of her was a reproach to her, and a sign of contempt. She shall be scourged, Heb. there shall be a scourging, which may belong, either, 1. To her alone, as the Jews understand it, for the man's punishment follows, ver. 21, 22. Or, 2. To both of them; for, 1. Both were guilty. 2. It follows, they shall not be punished with death, which may seem to imply that they were to be punished by some other common and considerable punishment, which scourging indeed was, but the paying of a ram was a small penalty, and very unsuitable to the greatness of the offence. And the offering of the ram as a trespass-offering for the sin against God, is not inconsistent with making satisfaction other ways for the injury done to men, as we may see Lev. vi. 4—6, but only added here as a further punishment to the man; either because he only could do this, and not the woman, who being a bond-woman had nothing of her own to offer; or because his sex and his freedom aggravated his sin. They shall not be put to death, which they should have been, had she been free, Deut. xxii. 23, 24. Because she was not free: the reason of this difference is not from any respect which God gives to persons, for bond and free are alike to him, but because bond-women were scarce wives, and their marriages were scarce true marriages, being neither made by their choice, but by their master's authority, nor continued beyond the year of release, but at her master's or husband's pleasure; of which see Exod. xxi. 4, &c.

21 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, unto the door of z Deut. 22.

9, 10.
a Deut. 22.
11.

Or, abused by any.
+ Heb. reproached by, or, for man.
+ Or, they.
+ Heb. there shall be a scourging.

b ch. 5. 15.
& 6. 6.

q Ex. 23. 2, 5.
Deut. 1. 17.
& 16. 19, & 27.
19. Ps. 82. 2.
Prov. 34. 23.
James 2. 9.

r Ex. 23. 1.
Ps. 15. 3.
& 50. 20.
Prov. 11. 13.
& 20. 19.
Ezek. 22. 9.
e Ex. 23. 1, 7.
1 Kin. 21. 13.
Matt. 26. 60, 61, & 27. 4.

t 1 John 2.
9, 11, & 3. 15.
u Eccles. 19.
13. Matt. 18.
15. Luke 17.
3. Gal. 6. 1.
Eph. 5. 11.
1 Tim. 5. 20.
2 Cor. 4. 2. Tit. 1. 13, & 2. 15. Or, that thou bear not sin for him: See Rom. 1. 32. 1 Tim. 5. 2. 1 Tim. 5. 22. 2 John 11.

x 2 Sam. 12.
22. Prov. 20.
22. Rom. 12.
17, 19. Gal.
5. 20. Eph. 4.
31. 1 Pet. 2.
1. Jam. 6. 9.
y Matt. 5. 43.
& 22. 39. Rom. 13. 9. Gal. 5. 14. James 2. 8.

the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass offering.

22 And the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering before the LORD for his sin which he hath done : and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

23 ¶ And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised : three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you : it shall not be eaten of.

As uncircumcised, i. e. as unclean, not to be eaten, but cast away, and counted abominable, as the foreskins are. Three years. This precept was serviceable, 1. To the trees themselves, which grew the better and faster, being early stript of those fruits, which otherwise would have derived to themselves and drawn away much more of the strength from the root and tree. 2. To men, both because the fruit then was waterish, indigested, and unwholesome, and because hereby men were taught to bridle their appetites ; a lesson of great use and absolute necessity in a godly life. 3. To God, who required and deserved the first-fruits, which must be also of the best, and so they could not be in this time.

24 But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be †holy ° to praise the LORD withal.

Consecrated to the Lord, as the first-fruits and tithes were, and therefore given to the priests and Levites, Numb. xviii. 12, 13 ; Deut. xviii. 4 ; yet so that part of them were communicated to the poor widows, and fatherless, and strangers. See Deut. xiv. 28, 29. To praise the Lord withal ; to bless the Lord, by whose power and goodness the trees bring forth fruit to perfection.

25 And in the fifth year shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, that it may yield unto you the increase thereof : I am the LORD your God.

That it may yield unto you the increase thereof ; that God may be pleased to give his blessing, which alone can make them fruitful.

26 ¶ ^dYe shall not eat any thing with the blood : °neither shall ye use enchantment, nor observe times.

With the blood, i. e. any flesh out of which the blood is not first poured. See 1 Sam. xiv. 32. The Jews write, that the Egyptians and other nations, when they offered sacrifices to the devils, did eat part of the sacrifices, beside the blood which was kept in basons for that end, which also they believed to be as it were the special food of the devils. Nor observe times, to wit, superstitiously, by the observation of the clouds, or stars, or otherwise, by esteeming some days lucky, others unlucky. See Deut. xviii. 10, 11 ; Esth. iii. 7.

27 ¶ Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.

The corners of your heads ; i. e. your temples : Ye shall not cut off the hair of your heads round about your temples. This the Gentiles did, either for the worship of the devils or idols, to whom young men used to consecrate their hair, being cut off from their heads, as Homer, Plutarch, and many others write ; or in funerals or immoderate mournings, as appears from Isa. xv. 2 ; Jer. xlvi. 37. And the like is to be thought concerning the beard or the hair in the corner, i. e. corners of the beard. The reason then of this prohibition is, because God would not have his people agree with idolaters, neither in their idolatries, nor in their excessive sorrowing, no, nor so much as in the appearances and outward significations or expressions thereof.

28 Ye shall not ^smake any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you : I am the LORD.

Any cuttings in your flesh, which the Gentiles commonly did both in the worship of their idols, and in their solemn mournings, Jer. xvi. 6. For the dead ; Heb. for a soul, i. e. either, 1. Improperly, for a dead body ; as that word is sometimes used, as Lev. xix. 28 ; xxi. 1 ; Numb. vi. 6 : or, 2. Properly, for the soul ; Ye shall not cut your flesh or your bodies, for your souls, or upon pretence of doing your souls any good, either in way of mortification, or in the worship of God, as they did, 1 Kings xviii. 28, in like manner as others were willing to give to God the fruit of their body for the sin of their soul, Micah vi. 7.

29 ¶ ^hDo not †prostitute thy daughter, to cause her to be a whore ; lest the land fall to whoredom, and the land become full of wickedness.

This the Gentiles frequently did for the honour of some of their idols, to whom divers women were consecrated, and publicly prostituted.

30 ¶ ⁱYe shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary : I am the LORD. Not presuming to approach it without reverence, or with any kind of uncleanness upon you.

31 ¶ ^lRegard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them : I am the LORD your God.

Them that have familiar spirits ; that have entered into covenant with the devil, by whose help they foretell many things to come, and acquaint men with secret things. See Lev. xx. 27 ; Deut. xviii. 11 ; 1 Sam. xxviii. 3, 7, 9 ; 2 Kings xxi. 6. Wizards ; another name expressing the same thing for substance, to wit, persons in league with the devil, with some difference only in the manner of their operation.

32 ¶ ^mThou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and ⁿfear thy God : I am the LORD.

Thou shalt rise up, to do them reverence when they pass by, for which end they were obliged, as the Jews say, presently to sit down again when they were past, that it might be manifest they arose out of respect to them. Fear thy God ; a reason of the former precept, both because old men in some respects do most resemble God, who is styled the Ancient of days, Dan. vii. 9, 13, and because this respect is due to such, if not for themselves, who may be unworthy or contemptible, yet for God's sake, who requires this reverence, and whose singular blessing old age is.

33 ¶ And ^oif a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not ^pvex him. Either with opprobrious expressions, or grievous exactions.

34 ^qBut the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and ^rthou shalt love him as thyself ; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt : I am the LORD your God.

As one born among you ; either, 1. As to the matters of common right, as it here follows : so it reacheth to all strangers. Or, 2. As to church privileges : so it concerns only those who were proselytes of righteousness. For ye were strangers ; and therefore are sensible of the fears, distresses, and miseries of such, which call for your pity, and you ought to do to them as you would that others should do to you when you were such.

35 ¶ ^rYe shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure.

In meteyard ; in the measuring of lands, or any dry and continued things, as cloth, riband, &c. In measure ; in the measuring of liquid or such dry things as are not continued, only contiguous, as of corn or wine, &c. Or, the former may note greater, the latter, less measures.

36 ^sJust balances, just †weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have : I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

+ Heb. holiness of provides to the LORD.
c Deut. 12.
17, 18.
Prov. 3. 9.

d ch. 17. 10.
e Deut. 12. 23.
e Deut. 18.
10, 11, 14.
1 Sam. 15. 22.
2 Kings 17. 17. & 21. 6. 2 Chron. 33. 6. Mal. 3. 5.

f ch. 21. 5.
Jer. 9. 26.
& 48. 37.
Is. 15. 2.

g ch. 21. 5.
Deut. 14. 1.
Jer. 16. 6.
& 48. 37.

h Ex. 22. 18.
ch. 20. 6, 27.
Deut. 18. 10.
1 Sam. 28. 7.
1 Chron. 10.
13. Is. 8. 19.
Acts 16. 16.

i ver. 3.
ch. 25. 2.
k Eccles. 5. 1.

l Ex. 22. 18.
ch. 20. 6, 27.
Deut. 18. 10.
1 Sam. 28. 7.
1 Chron. 10.
13. Is. 8. 19.
Acts 16. 16.

m Prov. 20.
22. n 1 Tim. 5. 1.

o Ex. 22. 21.
& 23. 9.

p Or, oppress.

q Exod. 12. 48, 49.

r Deu. 10. 19.

s Deut. 25. 13, 15.
Prov. 11. 1.
& 16. 11.
& 20. 10.
+ Heb. stones.

A just ephah, and a just hin; these two measures are named as most common, the former for dry, the latter for moist things; but under them he manifestly comprehends all other measures.

^{t ch. 18. 4, 5. Deut. 4. 5, 6. & 5. 1. & 2. 26.} 37 Therefore shall ye observe all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: I am the LORD.

Therefore; because my blessings and deliverances are not indulgences to sin, but greater obligations to all duties to God and men. So that if religion and righteousness were utterly lost in the world, they ought in all reason to be found among you as my peculiar people and freed men.

CHAP. XX.

Israelites must not offer their children to Molech on pain of death, 1—3; which if not inflicted by the magistrate, shall be by God himself, 4, 5. The same against running after soothsayers, 6; against cursers of parents, 9; against adultery, 10, or incestuous and unlawful copulation with women, men, or beasts, 11—21. They must put a difference between clean and unclean, 22—26. Soothsayers to be stoned, 27.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

^{a ch. 18. 21. b ch. 18. 21. Deut. 12. 31. & 18. 10. 2 Kings 17. 17. & 23. 10. 2 Chro. 33. 6. Jer. 7. 31. & 32. 35. Ezek. 20. 26, 31.} 2 Again, thou shalt say to the children of Israel, Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his seed unto Molech; he shall surely be put to death: the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

Here follow the punishments of the crimes forbidden in the former chapters. The strangers; not only such as were proselytes, but all others, these being gross immoralities, and such as the precepts of Noah reached to, and such as the laws of nature and nations obliged them to. And therefore the toleration of such actions was not only against reason of state, and the interest of the commonwealth of Israel, and dangerous to the infection and destruction of the Israelites by the imitation of such examples, but also against the light of nature and laws of humanity. Unto Molech, or to any other idol; for the reason of the law equally concerns all. See Lev. xviii. 21.

^{c ch. 17. 10. d Ezek. 5. 11. & 23. 36, 39. e ch. 18. 21.} 3 And I will set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to defile my sanctuary, and to profane my holy name.

I will set my face against that man, i. e. deal with him as an enemy, and make him a monument of my justice, either by punishing him immediately and eminently, when the magistrate cannot or will not do it, or by adding to his corporal punishments my curse upon his soul and name. See Lev. xvii. 10. From among his people; from the number of his people, of what nation or kindred soever he was; or, from the land of the living. To defile my sanctuary, which was done by this wickedness, either because such persons did, for the cover of their idolatry, come into God's sanctuary, as the rest did; see Lev. xv. 31; or because the sanctuary was, and was said to be, defiled by gross abominations committed in that city or land where God's sanctuary was; or because by these actions they did pronounce and declare to all men that they esteemed the sanctuary and service of God abominable and vile, by preferring such odious and pernicious idolatry before it. And to profane my holy name; partly by despising it themselves, and partly by disgracing it to others, and giving them occasion to blaspheme it, and to abhor the true religion, because they saw it deserted and condemned by those that best knew it and once embraced it.

4 And if the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and kill him not:

^{f Deut. 17. 2, 3, 5.}

i. e. Wink at his fault, and forbear to accuse and punish him. Compare Acts xvii. 30.

5 Then I will set my face against that man, and against his family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people.

Against his family, i. e. either, 1. His posterity, whom God threatened to punish for their father's idolatry, Exod. xx. Or, 2. His people, as that word is used, Jer. viii. 3; Micah ii. 3, to wit, the people of that land, who by their connivance make themselves guilty of his sin, ver. 4. Or, 3. His disciples and followers, who are oft called the sons or children of their masters. And so it may seem to be explained in the following words, all that go a whoring after him, as the first clause, which concerns the head or chief person himself, I will set my face against that man, is explained by these words, I will cut him off.

6 ¶ And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

To go a whoring after them; to seek knowledge, or counsel, or help from them.

7 ¶ Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God.

8 And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the LORD which sanctify you.

i. e. Who separated you from all nations, and from their impurities and idolatries, to be a peculiar people to myself, and therefore I will not suffer you to follow their examples. Or, who really sanctify you, and give you my grace to do what I require, i. e. to keep my statutes. Or the argument is this, Those idols and idolatries will defile you and make you worse, but I only and my service will sanctify you and make you better.

9 ¶ For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; his blood shall be upon him.

For, or, surely, as that particle, chi, is oft used, as Job viii. 6; xx. 20. So there needs no dispute about the connexion, or what this is a reason of. Curseth; which is not meant of every perverse expression, but of bitter reproaches or imprecations. Or his mother; Heb. and put for or, as hath been noted before. His blood shall be upon him; he is guilty of his own death; he deserves to die for so unnatural a crime.

10 ¶ And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 And the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

12 And if a man lie with his daughter in law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought confusion; their blood shall be upon them.

By perverting the order which God hath appointed, and mixing the blood which God would have separated, and making the same offspring both his own immediate child and his grandchild, they have wrought confusion.

13 If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall

^{g ch. 11. 44. & 19. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 16.}

^{h ch. 19. 37.}

^{i Ex. 31. 13. ch. 21. 8. Ezek. 37. 28.}

^{o Ex. 21. 17. Deut. 27. 16. Prov. 20. 20. Matt. 15. 4. p ver. 11, 12, 13, 16, 27. 2 Sam. 1. 16.}

^{q ch. 18. 20. Deut. 22. 22. John 8. 4, 5.}

^{r ch. 18. 8. Deut. 27. 23.}

^{s ch. 18. 15.}

^{t ch. 18. 23.}

^{u ch. 18. 22. Deut. 23. 17. See Gen. 19. 8. Judg. 19. 22.}

surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

Except the one party was forced by the other. See Deut. xxii. 25.

^{z ch. 18. 17.}
^{Deut. 27. 23.} 14 *And if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

It is wickedness, i. e. abominable and extraordinary wickedness, as the singularity of the punishment showeth. Both he and they; either, or both or all of them, if they consented to it.

^{y ch. 18. 21.}
^{Deut. 27. 21.} 15 *And if a man lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death: and ye shall slay the beast.

Partly, for the prevention of monstrous births; partly, to blot out the memory of so loathsome a crime; and partly, that by so severe a punishment of that creature which was only a passive instrument to man's sin, men might be assured that a more dreadful punishment than corporal death was reserved for them, if they repented not.

16 And if a woman approach unto any beast, and lie down thereto, thou shalt kill the woman, and the beast: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

^{z ch. 18. 9.}
^{Deut. 27. 22.}
^{See Gen. 20. 12.} 17 *And if a man shall take his sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, and see her nakedness, and she see his nakedness; it is a wicked thing; and they shall be cut off in the sight of their people: he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness; he shall bear his iniquity.

Seeing is here understood, either, 1. Properly, and so God would cut off the occasions of further filthiness. Or rather, 2. Improperly, for touching her or lying with her; for, 1. The sense of seeing is oft put for other senses, as for hearing, Gen. xlii. 1, compared with Acts vii. 12; Exod. xx. 18; Rev. i. 12; and for touching, as John xx. 25, 29. 2. That act is expressed by words parallel to this of seeing, as by uncovering, or discovering, and by knowing, Gen. iv. 1. 3. So it is directly explained in the following words, he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness, which manifestly signifies lying with her. 4. It is not probable that an equal punishment would have been appointed to an immodest sight, and to the highest act of filthiness. 5. Nor seems there to be any reason why this crime should be restrained to this rather than to any other relations, when it was as great, yea, a greater crime in some other relations. In the sight of their people, i. e. publicly, for the terror and caution of others.

^{a ch. 18. 19.}
^{See ch. 15. 24.}
^{+ Heb. made naked.} 18 *And if a man shall lie with a woman having her sickness, and shall uncover her nakedness; he hath †discovered her fountain, and she hath uncovered the fountain of her blood: and both of them shall be cut off from among their people.

If a man shall lie with a woman, wittingly and willingly. See on Lev. xv. 24; xviii. 19. Her sickness, i. e. her monthly infirmity. Her fountain, or her issue. Thus the fountain of blood in Mark v. 29, is the issue of blood, Luke viii. 44, the fountain put for the stream, the cause for the effect, which is common.

^{b ch. 18. 12.}
^{13.}
^{c ch. 18. 6.} 19 *And thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister, nor of thy father's sister: °for he uncovereth his near kin: they shall bear their iniquity.

^{d ch. 18. 14.} 20 *And if a man shall lie with his uncle's wife, he hath uncovered his uncle's nakedness: they shall bear their sin; they shall die childless.

i. e. Either shall be speedily cut off ere they can have a child by that incestuous conjunction, that the remembrance of the fact may be blotted out: or, if this seem a less crime than most of the former incestuous mixtures, because the relation is more remote, and therefore the magistrate shall forbear to punish it with death, yet they shall either have no children from such an unlawful bed, or their children shall die before them, Hos. ix. 11, 12; or shall not be reputed their genuine children, but bastards, and therefore excluded from the congregation of the Lord, Deut. xxiii. 2.

21 *And if a man shall take his brother's wife, it is †an unclean thing: he hath uncovered his brother's nakedness; they shall be childless.

Except in the case allowed by God, Deut. xxv. 5. An unclean thing; an abominable thing, like the uncleanness of a menstruous woman, which is oft expressed by this word: Heb. a separation or removing, i. e. a thing deserving separation or exclusion from society with others; or a thing to be removed out of sight or out of the world.

22 ¶ Ye shall therefore keep all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: that the land, whither I bring you to dwell therein, °spue you not out.

23 *And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nation, which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them.

24 But *I have said unto you, Ye shall inherit their land, and I will give it unto you to possess it, a land that floweth with milk and honey: I am the Lord your God, which have separated you from other people.

By my special grace and favour vouchsafed to you above all people, in glorious and miraculous works wrought for you and among you, and in ordinances and other singular privileges and blessings imparted to you, all which calls for your special love and service.

25 *Ye shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowls and clean: °and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast, or by fowl, or by any manner of living thing that ¶ creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean.

i. e. As things which by my sentence I have made unclean, and which you must avoid as such.

26 And ye shall be holy unto me: °for I the Lord am holy, and °have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine.

27 ¶ *A man also or woman that hath a familiar spirit, or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone them with stones: °their blood shall be upon them.

CHAP. XXI.

Priests must not defile themselves, in mourning over the dead: cases excepted, 1—6. Nor marry with a whore, profane, or divorced woman, 7, 8. His daughter, if a whore, to be burnt with fire, 9. The high priest must in no case defile himself with the dead, 10—12: must marry a virgin of his people, 13—15. Persons having bodily defects allowed to eat of the holy things, but not to serve in the tabernacle, or offer to God, 16—24.

AND the Lord said unto Moses, Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, *There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people:

To wit, by touching of the dead body, or abiding in the same house with it, or assisting at his funerals, or eating of the funeral feast. The reason of this law is evident, because by such pollution they were excluded from converse with men, to whom by their function they were to be serviceable upon all occasions, and from the handling of holy things, Numb. vi. 6; xix. 11, 14, 16; Deut. xxvi. 14; Hos. ix. 4. And God would hereby teach them, and in them all successive ministers of holy things, that they ought so entirely to give themselves to the service of God, that they ought to renounce all expressions of natural affections, and all worldly employments, so far as they are impediments to the discharge of their holy services. See Lev. x. 3, 7; Deut. xxxiii. 9; Matt. viii. 22. Hereby also God would beget in the people a greater reverence to the priestly function, and oblige the priests to a greater degree of strictness and purity than other men.

2 But for his kin, that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother,

For his kin that is near unto him: under this general expression his wife seems to be comprehended, though she be not expressed in the following instances, because from the mention of others more remote it was easy to gather that so near a relation was not excluded. And hence it is noted as a peculiar and extraordinary case, that Ezekiel, who was a priest, was forbidden to mourn for his wife, Ezek. xxiv. 16, &c. These exceptions God here makes in condescension to human infirmity, because in such cases it was very hard to restrain the affections. But this allowance concerns only the inferior priest, not the high priest, as we shall see. For his brother. Object. Eleazar and Ithamar are forbidden to mourn for their brethren, Nadab and Abihu. Answ. 1. That case was singular, both because such a mourning might seem to be a censure of God's severity upon them, and because they were then in the actual execution of their office, and in their initiation to it, and they were the only persons, besides Aaron, that could perform that work, and therefore their attendance upon it was more necessary than it would be in after-times and other cases. 2. The latter law can either limit or enlarge the former at the pleasure of the lawgiver. And this law may seem to be added, lest that prohibition, Lev. x., should be taken for a general rule.

3 And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled.

For his sister, either by father or mother. Nigh unto him, i. e. by nearness, not of relation, (for that might seem a needless addition,) but of habitation, i. e. one not yet cut off from the family, as it follows. Which hath had no husband; for if she was married, she was now of another family, and under her husband's special care in those matters.

4 But he shall not defile himself, being a chief man among his people, to profane himself.

Or, seeing he is a chief man, &c., or ruler, &c., for such not only the high priest, but others also of the inferior priests, were. And therefore though he might defile himself for the persons now named, yet he, above all others, must take heed so to do it that he do not profane himself by doing as follows. Or, for a chief man, &c., the preposition lamed being easily understood from the former verse, where it is oft used, such supplements being not unusual in the Hebrew tongue. So the sense is, he shall not defile himself for any other person whatsoever who is not thus near of kin to him, no, not for a prince or chief ruler among his people, who might seem to challenge this duty from him, to join with all others in their resentment of the public loss; much less shall he defile himself for any other. And so the last word, to profane himself, may be added as a reason why he should not defile himself for the prince or any other except the persons named, because such defilement for the dead did profane him, or make him as a common person and unclean, and consequently unfit to manage his sacred employment, which was an impediment to the service of God, and a public inconvenience to the people, whose concerns with God he negotiated. And it was not meet such great and important affairs should give place to the ceremonies of a funeral for a stranger.

5 They shall not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard, nor make any cuttings in their flesh.

To wit, in funerals, as the heathens did: q. d. Though I allow them to defile themselves for some of the dead, yet in no case shall they use these superstitious and heathenish rites, which also the people are forbidden to do, Lev. xix. 27; Deut. xiv. 1, but the priests in a more peculiar manner, because they are by word and example to teach the people their duty not to sorrow for the dead as persons without hope.

6 They shall be holy unto their God, and not profane the name of their God: and the bread of their God, they do offer: therefore they shall be holy.

Holy unto their God; devoted to God's service, and always prepared and fit for it; and therefore shall keep themselves as far as they can from all defilement, which makes them unmeet for their Master's use. Not profane the name of their God, which they especially bear; they shall not disparage the service of God by making it give place to such slight occasions. The bread of their God, i. e. the shew-bread; or rather, all the other offerings besides burnt-offerings; which are called bread, either because bread is commonly put for all food, as below, ver. 17, 21; or because God is satisfied and refreshed with these offerings, as a man is with his bread; or rather, because they, or part of them, are the bread or food of the priests, and are here called the bread of their God, either objectively, because they were offered to God, or efficiently, because they were given by God to the priests. And these are called bread in opposition to the burnt-offerings, which being wholly consumed gave no food to the priests. Or, the offerings made by fire are here put synecdochically for all the rest, the most eminent kind for all, which are here called bread, because devoured by fire to the honour of God; for the particle and is not in the Hebrew, and may be omitted.

7 They shall not take a wife that is a whore, or profane; neither shall they take a woman put away from her husband for he is holy unto his God.

Or profane, or defiled, or deflowered, though it were done secretly, or by accident, or by force; because the priest must take care that all the members of his family be free not only from gross wickedness, but from all suspicion of evil, and occasions of reproach or contempt, because this would reflect upon himself, and upon his God and religion also. The word may denote one deflowered by any person, though it were by her husband; or a widow, because not only the high priest was obliged to marry a virgin, ver. 13, but also the inferior priests, as appears from Ezek. xlv. 22, and that is either signified by this word, or by none other here. It is true, a widow, and a profane person, are distinguished, ver 14; but the same word may be, and oft is, taken in differing senses, both more largely and more strictly, in the same chapter. And there was some reason why it should be more expressly and distinctly set down there, a widow, or one profane or deflowered otherwise, because there was the more need of caution in the high priest, and therefore the widow is particularly mentioned, which in the former case might be sufficiently comprehended under a general title. A woman put away from her husband, though not for adultery, but for light causes, and by the husband's fault, because though the woman might be wholly innocent and free, yet it would leave some blemish upon her.

8 Thou shalt sanctify him therefore; for he offereth the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: for I the Lord, which sanctify you, am holy.

Thou, O Moses, and whosoever shall succeed in thy place, to whom it belongs to see those and other of my

b ch. 19. 27.
28.
Deut. 14. 1.
Ezek. 44. 20.

c ch. 18. 21.
& 19. 12.

d See ch. 3.
11.

e Ezek. 44.
22.

f See Deut.
24. 1, 2.

|| Or, being an husband among his people, he shall not defile himself for his wife, &c. See Ezek. 24. 16, 17.

g ch. 20. 7, 8.

laws observed, shall take care that the priest be holy, and do not defile himself by any of these forbidden marriages, though he would do it. He shall be holy unto thee; either, 1. In thy esteem, and therefore shall not give thee cause to think meanly and irreverently of him by his defiling or debasing of himself with irregular mixtures. Or, 2. To thy use or service, in whose name he is to act with God, and therefore shall preserve himself in a state of holiness and acceptance with God. For I the Lord am holy, and therefore my ministers must be such also.

h Gen. 38.
24. 9 ¶^h And the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore, she profaneth her father: she shall be burnt with fire.

And by analogy his son also, and his wife, because the reason of the law here added concerns all. And nothing is more common than to name one kind for the rest of the same nature, as also is done Lev. xviii. She profaneth her father, i. e. exposeth his person and office, and consequently religion, one of whose prime ministers he is, to contempt. She shall be burnt with fire; which was the severest of all the kinds of punishments among the Jews. Whereby God would show, both the greatness of their sins who stand in nearer relation to God than others, and how far God is from allowing sin in those who are nearest to him.

i Ex. 29. 29,
30. ch. 8. 12,
& 16. 32.
Num. 35. 25.
k Ex. 28. 2.
ch. 16. 32.
1 ch. 10. 6. 10ⁱ And he that is the high priest among his brethren, upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, and^k that is consecrated to put on the garments, shall not uncover his head, nor rend his clothes;

Upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, Lev. viii. 12; which was only sprinkled upon inferior priests, blood also being mixed with it, Lev. viii. 30. The garments, to wit, those holy garments which were peculiar to him, as well as those common to others. Shall not uncover his head; this being then the posture of mourners, Lev. x. 6, though afterwards the custom was changed, and mourners covered their heads, 2 Sam. xv. 30; Esth. vi. 12. Or if this custom was now in use, the meaning may be, he shall not put off the priestly covering or mitre, which was necessary for him to do, if he had put on the mourner's covering upon his head, otherwise the holy covering had been defiled, but he shall continue in the exercise of his office, which is signified by keeping on his priestly garments.

m Num. 19.
14.
See ver. 1, 2. 11 Neither shall he^m go in to any dead body, nor defile himself for his father, or for his mother;

Neither shall he go, to wit, into the chamber or house where they lie. This and divers other rites here prescribed were from hence translated by the heathens into their use, whose priests were put under the same obligations. Nor defile himself for his father; because upon his father's death he was actually high priest, having been consecrated to this office in his father's lifetime.

n ch. 10. 7. 12ⁿ Neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, nor profane the sanctuary of his God; for^o the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him: I am the LORD.

Out of the sanctuary, to wit, to attend the funerals of any person; for upon other occasions he might and did commonly go out. Nor profane the sanctuary; either by making the service thereof give place to the discharge of his passions, or the performance of a civility, or by entering into the sanctuary before the seven days allotted for his cleansing (Numb. xix. 11) were expired. The crown of the anointing oil, i. e. the anointing oil, which to him was instead of a crown, by which he was advanced not only above the rest of his brethren, but even above all the people, whose chief governor he was in the things of God, though subject and accountable to the civil magistrate, by which also he was made an eminent type of Christ, who was to be King and Priest. Or, the crown, to wit, the golden plate, which is called the holy crown, Exod. xxix. 6, and the anointing oil of his God are upon him. So there is only an ellipsis of the conjunction and, which is frequent, as Psa. xxxiii. 2; cxliv. 9; Isa. lxiii. 11; Hab. iii. 11, &c. And these two things being most eminent, are put for the rest, and the sign is put for the thing signified, q. d. for he is God's high priest. Or, the consecration (for so nezer signifies) of the anointing oil, which by an hypallage may be put for the anointing oil of the consecration, i. e. whereby he is consecrated, is upon him; i. e. though that action be past, yet the virtue of it remains still upon him; he is a sacred person in the highest degree, and therefore not to defile himself in any kind.

13 And^p he shall take a wife in her^q virginity. p ver. 7. Ezek. 44. 22.

Or, a virgin, partly for the decency of the type, because as he was a type of Christ, so his wife was a type of the church, which is compared to a virgin, 2 Cor. xi. 2; Rev. xiv. 4; and partly for greater caution and assurance that his wife was not a defiled or deflowered person. This and the following rule belong not to all the priests, for then this were a gross tautology, these same things, or most of them, being expressly forbidden to them, ver. 7, but only to the high priest, to show that he also, and he especially, is obliged to the same cautions.

14 A widow, or a divorced woman, or profane, or an harlot, these shall he not take: but he shall take a virgin of his own people to wife.

A widow; except she were the widow of his predecessor, which some gather from Ezek. xlv. 22. But that place speaks only of the common priest, not of the high priest. Of his own people, i. e. either, 1. Of his own tribe, which is confuted by the examples of holy men; see 2 Chron. xxii. 11; or, 2. Of the seed of Israel, as it is explained Ezek. xlv. 22.

15 Neither shall he profane his seed among his people: for^r I the LORD do^s sanctify him.

Neither shall he profane his seed by mixing it with forbidden kinds, whereby the children would be disparaged, and rendered unfit for their priestly function. Do sanctify him, i. e. have separated him from all other sorts of men for my especial and immediate service, and therefore will not have that race corrupted.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Speak unto Aaron, saying, Whosoever he be of thy seed in their generations that hath any blemish, let him not^t approach to offer the bread of his God. r ch. 10. 3. Num. 16. 5. Ps. 64. 4. Or, food. ch. 3. 11.

Whosoever he be of thy seed, whether the high priest or the inferior ones. In their generations; in all successive ages, as long as your priesthood and policy endures. Any blemish, i. e. any defect or excess of parts, any notorious deformity or imperfection in his body. The reason hereof is partly typical, that he might more fully represent Christ, the great High Priest, who was typified both by the priest and sacrifice, and therefore both were to be without blemish; partly moral, to teach all Christians, and especially ministers of holy things, what purity and perfection of heart and life they should labour after, and that notorious blemishes in the mind or conversation render a man unfit for the ministry of the gospel; and partly prudential, because such blemishes were apt to breed contempt of the person, and consequently of his function, and of the holy things wherein he ministered. For which reason, some conceive, that still such persons as have notorious defects or deformities, which render them contemptible, are not fit for the ministry; which may be true in the general, except where there are eminent gifts and graces, which are sufficient to vindicate a man from the contemptibleness of his bodily presence. The particular defects here mentioned I shall not enlarge upon, because some of the Hebrew words are diversely interpreted, and because the use of these things being abolished, the knowledge of them is not very necessary. The bread; either the shew-bread, one eminent part being named for the whole; or, the food, i. e. all the oblations. See before on ver. 6.

18 For whatsoever man he be that hath a blemish, he shall not approach: a blind man, or a lame, or he that hath a flat nose, or any thing ^asuperfluous,

He shall not approach unto God, or to serve him in his sanctuary. A flat nose : most restrain this word to the nose, and to some great deformity relating to it, either the want of it wholly or in part, or the shortness, flatness, or crookedness of it. But according to others, it signifies more generally a person that wants some member or members, because the next word, to which it is opposed, signifies one that hath more members than he should.

19 Or a man that is brokenfooted, or brokenhanded,

20 Or crookbackt, or ^{||}a dwarf, or that hath a blemish in his eye, or be scurvy, or scabbed, or ^bhath his stones broken;

21 No man that hath a blemish of the seed of Aaron the priest shall come nigh to ^coffer the offerings of the LORD made by fire : he hath a blemish ; he shall not come nigh to offer the bread of his God.

No man that hath a blemish ; any notorious blemish whereby he is disfigured, though not here mentioned.

22 He shall eat the bread of his God, ^dboth of the ^emost holy, and of the ^fholy.

Which a priest having any uncleanness upon him might not do ; whereby God would show the great difference between natural infirmities sent upon a man by God, and moral defilements which a man brought upon himself. What was holy, and what most holy, was declared before. See Lev. ii. 3 ; vi. 17 ; vii. 1 ; xiv. 13 ; xxii. 10.

23 Only he shall not go in unto the veil, nor come nigh unto the altar, because he hath a blemish ; that ^ghe profane not my sanctuaries : for I the LORD do sanctify them.

In unto the veil, i. e. to the second veil, which was between the holy and the most holy place, Exod. xxvi. 13, 36, to burn incense, to order the shew-bread, and to dress the lamps, which were nigh unto that veil, though without. Nor come nigh unto the altar, i. e. the altar of burnt-offering, which was without the sanctuary. The sense is, He shall not execute the priest's office, which was to be done in those two places. My sanctuary, Heb. my sanctuaries, in the plural number, as it is also Lev. xxvi. 31 ; Jer. li. 51 ; Ezek. xxviii. 18 ; for though the sanctuary was but one, yet there were divers parts, to wit, the court, the holy place, and the most holy, each of which was in a large sense a sanctuary, or a holy place set apart for God's worship. I the LORD do sanctify them, i. e. do set them apart for high and holy uses, to manifest my presence and grace, and to receive my worship and service in them. And therefore I will not have them polluted or disparaged by the admission of defiled or deformed priests to minister therein.

24 And Moses told it unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXII.

The priests in their uncleanness must abstain from the holy things, 1—5. How they shall be cleansed, 6—9. Who of the priest's house may eat of the holy things, 10—16. The sacrifices must be without blemish, 17—25. The age of the sacrifice, 26—28. The law of eating the sacrifice of thanksgiving, 29, 30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they ^aseparate themselves from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they ^bprofane not my holy name in ^cthose things which they ^dhallow unto me : I am the LORD.

That they separate themselves, to wit, when any uncleanness is upon them, as it appears from ver. 3, 4. From the holy things, i. e. from eating of those parts of the offerings which belong to them. Only of the fithes they might eat in that case. Which they hallow ; either the children of Israel, or the priests ; for both of them did in their kinds hallow, consecrate, or offer them to God. But the former seems more probable, both because they were mentioned here and ver. 3, where they are said to hallow, &c., and because this makes the argument stronger, it ill became the priests to profane or pollute what the people did hallow.

3 Say unto them, Whosoever he be of all your seed among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, ^ehaving his uncleanness upon him, that ^fsoul shall be cut off from my presence : I am the LORD.

Unto the holy things, to eat them or to touch them ; for if the touch of one of the people having his uncleanness upon him defiled the thing he touched, much more was it so in the priest. From my presence ; either from the place of my presence and from my ordinances by excommunication : he shall be excluded both from the administration and from the participation of them. Or, from the people, among whom I am present, which commonly is expressed by cutting off from his people. Or, from the land of the living.

4 What man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath ^ga ^hrunning issue ; he shall not eat of the holy things, ⁱuntil he be clean. And ^jwhoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or ^ka man whose seed goeth from him ;

What man soever, i. e. or woman, of Aaron's seed ; for they were under the same law.

5 Or ^lwhosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or ^ma man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath ;

6 The soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he ⁿwash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down, he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things ; because ^oit is his food.

i. e. His portion, the means of his subsistence. This may be added to signify why there was no greater nor longer a penalty put upon the priests than upon the people in the same case, Lev. xi. and xv., because his necessity craved some mitigation ; though otherwise the priests being more sacred persons, and obliged to greater care and exemplariness, deserved a greater punishment.

8 ^pThat which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat to defile himself therewith : I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, ^qlest they bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it : I the LORD do sanctify them.

Mine ordinance ; either this ordinance here treated of concerning abstaining from holy things when they are unclean ; or more generally, that great ordinance whereby I have made them the guardians of holy places and things, to keep them from all defilement by themselves or others. Heb. my watch, i. e. the watch or guard which I have commanded them to keep. Lest they bear sin, i. e. incur guilt and punishment. For it, i. e. for the neglect or violation of it. If they profane it, i. e. their charge, or God's ordinance about it.

^l Or, too slender.

^t Deut. 23. 1.

^u ver. 6.

^x ch. 2. 3, 10.
^y ch. 17. 23, &
7. 1. & 24. 9.
Num. 18. 9.
^z ch. 22. 10, 11, 12. Num. 18. 19.

^z ver. 12.

^e ch. 15. 2.
^f Heb. running of the reins.
^g ch. 14. 2. & 15. 13.
^h Num. 19. 11, 22.
ⁱ ch. 15. 16.

^j ch. 11. 24, 43, 44.

^k ch. 15. 7, 19.

^l ch. 15. 6.
Heb. 10. 22.

^m ch. 21. 22.
Num. 18. 11, 13.

ⁿ Ex. 22. 31.
ch. 17. 15.
Ezek. 44. 31.

^o Ex. 28. 43.
Num. 18. 22, 32.

^c Ex. 28. 36.
Num. 18. 32.
Deut. 15. 18.

10 ^p There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing : a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

No stranger, i. e. of a strange family, who is not a priest, as ver. 12: compare Matt. xii. 4. But there is an exception to this rule, ver. 11. A sojourner; one that comes to his house and abides there for a season, and eats at his table. Of the holy things; of those parts of the offerings which fell to the priest's share, as the breast and shoulder.

11 But if the priest buy any soul † with his money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house: ^a they shall eat of his meat.

Because they were wholly his, and as such they were circumcised, Gen. xvii.; Exod. xii.

12 If the priest's daughter also be married unto † a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things.

Unto a stranger, i. e. to one of another family, who is no priest. Yet the priest's wife, though of another family, might eat. The reason of which difference is, because the wife passeth into the name, state, and privileges of her husband, from whom the family is denominated and esteemed.

13 But if the priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child, and is ^r returned unto her father's house, ^s as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat: but there shall no stranger eat thereof.

14 ¶ ^t And if a man eat of the holy thing unwittingly, then he shall put the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.

The fifth part, over and above the principal, and besides the ram to be offered to God, Lev. v. 15. Shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing; or, and shall give unto the priest the holy thing; i. e. the worth of it, which the priest was either to take to himself or offer to God, as the nature of the thing was.

15 And ^u they shall not profane the holy things of the children of Israel, which they offer unto the LORD;

Either, 1. The people shall not profane them, by eating them. Or, 2. The priests shall not profane them, i. e. suffer the people to profane them, without censure and punishment. Both come to the same thing; the people shall not do it, nor the priests suffer it.

16 Or ¶ suffer them ^v to bear the iniquity of trespass, when they eat their holy things: for ^w the LORD do sanctify them.

i. e. They, i. e. the priests shall not (the negative particle being understood out of the foregoing clause, as Psal. i. 5; ix. 18) suffer them, i. e. the people, to bear the iniquity of trespass, i. e. the punishment of their sin, which they might expect from God, and for the prevention whereof the priest was to see restitution made, &c. The words may be rendered thus, But (so the Hebrew vau is oft translated) they, i. e. the priests, shall make them, i. e. the people, to bear the iniquity, or punishment, of their trespass or sin, i. e. they shall require from them reparations in manner here expressed.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, ^y Whatsoever he be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his freewill offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt offering;

Or of the strangers; such as were proselytes. For all his vows. See on Lev. vii. 16.

19 ^z Ye shall offer at your own will a male without blemish, of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats.

A male for a burnt-offering, which was always of that kind; but the females were accepted in peace-offerings, Lev. iii. 1, and sin-offerings, Lev. iv. 32; v. 6.

20 ^a But whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer: for it shall not be acceptable for you.

21 And ^b whosoever offereth a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD ^c to accomplish his vow, or a freewill offering in beeves or ¶ sheep, it shall be perfect to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein.

To wit, none of the blemishes mentioned ver. 22, 24; for some blemishes did not hinder the acceptance of a freewill offering, but only of a vow, ver. 23.

22 ^d Blind, or broken, or maimed, or having a wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, ye shall not offer these unto the LORD, nor make ^e an offering by fire of them upon the altar unto the LORD.

23 Either a bullock or a ¶ lamb that hath any thing ^f superfluous or lacking in his parts, that mayest thou offer for a freewill offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted.

That mayest thou offer; either, 1. To the priest, who might, according to the rules given by God, either convert it to his own use, or sell it, and lay out the price of it upon the temple or sacrifices. But in this sense any of the other kinds, as blind, or broken, &c., might be offered, which yet are forbidden to be offered ver. 22. Or rather, 2. To the Lord, as is expressed ver. 22 and 24, this being put down by way of opposition to those defects, ver. 22, and by way of exception from the general rule, ver. 21.

24 Ye shall not offer unto the LORD that which is bruised, or crushed, or broken, or cut; neither shall ye make ^g any offering thereof in your land.

25 Neither ^h from a stranger's hand shall ye offer ⁱ the bread of your God of any of these; because their ^j corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them: they shall not be accepted for you.

Neither from a stranger's hand, to wit, from proselytes, from whom less might seem to be expected, and in whom God might bear with some things which he would not bear with in his own people; yet even from those such should not be accepted, much less from the Israelites. The bread, i. e. the sacrifices. See on Lev. xxi. 8. Of any of these, i. e. corrupted or defective; which clause limits the sense and kinds of offerings, and cuts off another more general interpretation received by many, to wit, that he forbids the receiving of any offering, whether blemished or perfect, from the hands of a stranger remaining in heathenism. Their corruption is in them, i. e. they are corrupt, vicious, and unlawful sacrifices. For you, or, from you, O priests, to whom it belongs to offer. You shall bear the blame of it, for the strangers might do so through ignorance of God's law.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 ^k When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

From the eighth day. See on Exod. xxii. 30; xxiii. 19.

28 And whether it be cow or ¶ ewe, ye shall not kill it ^l and her young both in one day.

^p See 1 Sam. 21. 6.

⁺ Heb. with the purchase of his money.

^q Num. 18. 11, 13.

⁺ Heb. a man a stranger.

^r Gen. 38. 11.
^s ch. 10. 14.
Num. 16. 11, 19.

^t ch. 5. 15, 16.

^u Num. 18. 32.

¶ Or, take themselves with the iniquity of trespass in their eating.
^x ver. 9.

^y ch. 1. 2, 3, 10.
Num. 15. 14.

^a Dent. 15. 21. & 17. 1.
Mal. 1. 8, 14.
Eph. 5. 27.
Heb. 9. 14.
1 Pet. 1. 19.
^b ch. 3. 1, &

^c ch. 7. 15.
Num. 15. 3, 8.
Deut. 23. 21, 23. Ps. 61. 8. & 65. 1.
Eccl. 5. 4, 5.
¶ Or, goats.

^d ver. 20.
Mal. 1. 8.

^e ch. 1. 9, 13. & 3. 3, 5.

¶ Or, kid.
^f ch. 21. 18.

^g Num. 15. 15, 16.
^h ch. 21. 6, 17.
Mal. 1. 14.

^k Ex. 22. 30.

¶ Or, she goat.
^l Deut. 22. 6.

Because it savoured of cruelty. See on Deut. xxii. 6.

29 And when ye will ^moffer a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the LORD, offer it at your own will.

i. e. What and when you please, so the rules be observed: or, for your acceptance, as Lev. i. 3, i. e. in such manner that God may accept it, i. e. regularly, cheerfully, &c.

30 On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave ⁿnone of it until the morrow: I am the LORD.

31 Therefore shall ye keep my commandments, and do them: I am the LORD.

32 Neither shall ye profane my holy name; but I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: I am the LORD which hallow you,

Neither shall ye profane my holy name; either by despising me and my command yourselves, or by giving others occasion to profane them. Hallowed, or sanctified, either by you in keeping my holy commands, or upon you in executing my holy and righteous judgments, Lev. x. 3; Isa. xxvi. 15. I will manifest myself to be a holy God, that will not bear the transgression of my laws. Which hallow you, by separating you from all the world unto myself and service, by giving you holy laws, and my Holy Spirit to enable and incline you to keep them; and therefore you have the more reason to hallow me and keep my commands, and are the more inexcusable if you transgress them.

33 That brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD.

CHAP. XXIII.

The feasts of the Lord, 1, 2. The sabbath, 3. The passover, 4—8. The sheaf of first-fruits, 9—14. The feast of pentecost, 15—21. Gleanings to be left for the poor, 22. The feast of trumpets, 23—25. The day of atonement, 26—32. The feast of tabernacles, 33—43.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, Concerning the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my feasts.

Ye shall proclaim, i. e. cause to be proclaimed by the priests. See Numb. x. 8—10. Holy convocations; days for your assembling together to my worship and service in a special manner. These are my feasts, which I have appointed, and the right observation whereof I will accept.

3 Six days shall work be done: but the seventh day is the sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the sabbath of the LORD in all your dwellings.

No work; so it runs in the general for the sabbath day, and for the day of expiation, ver. 28, excluding all works about earthly occasions or employments, whether of profit or pleasure; but on other feast days he forbids only servile works, as ver. 7, 21, 36, for surely this manifest difference in the expressions used by the wise God must needs imply a difference in the things. In all your dwellings: this is added to distinguish the sabbath from other feasts, which were to be kept before the Lord in Jerusalem only, whither all the males were to come for that end; but the sabbath was to be kept in all places, where they were, both in synagogues, which were erected for that end, and in their private houses.

4 These are the feasts of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons.

In their appointed and proper times, as the word is used Gen. i. 14; Psal. civ. 19.

5 In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the LORD's passover.

6 And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the LORD: seven days ye must eat unleavened bread.

7 In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

8 But ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD seven days: in the seventh day is an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

Seven days, the matter and manner whereof, see Numb. xxviii. 18, &c.

9 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a sheaf of the firstfruits of your harvest unto the priest:

When ye be come into the land; therefore this obliged them not in the desert, where they reaped no harvest, &c. Shall reap, i. e. begin to reap, as it is expounded Deut. xvi. 9. So, he began to beget, Gen. v. 32; xi. 26; and, he built, 1 Kings vi. 1, i. e. he began to build, as it is explained 2 Chron. iii. 2. The harvest thereof, to wit, barley harvest, which was before wheat harvest. See Exod. ix. 31, 32; xxxiv. 22; Ruth ii. 23. A sheaf, Heb. an omer, which is the tenth part of an ephah. It seems here to note the measure of corn which was to be offered. For it is to be considered that they did not offer this corn in the ear, or by a sheaf or handful, but as Josephus, iii. 10, affirms, and may be gathered from Lev. ii. 14—16, purged from the chaff, and dried, and beaten out, and, some add, ground into meal, and sifted into fine flour; though this may be doubted of, because the meat-offering attending upon this was of fine flour, ver. 13, and because this offering is said to be of green ears of corn dried, &c., Lev. ii. 14.

11 And he shall wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted for you: on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it.

To be accepted for you; that God may accept of you, and bless you in the rest of your harvest. On the morrow after the sabbath, i. e. after the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, which was a sabbath, or day of rest, as appears from ver. 7, or upon the sixteenth day of the month. And this was the first of those fifty days, in the close whereof was the feast of pentecost, or Whitsuntide.

12 And ye shall offer that day when ye wave the sheaf an he lamb without blemish of the first year for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

An he lamb, besides the daily morning and evening sacrifice, which it was needless to mention here, and besides one of those sacrifices to be offered every day of the seven, ver. 8.

13 And the meat offering thereof shall be two tenth deals of fine flour mingled with oil, an offering made by fire unto the LORD for a sweet savour: and the drink offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of an hin.

Two tenth deals, or, parts, to wit, of an ephah, i. e. two omers, whereas in other sacrifices of lambs there was but one tenth deal prescribed, Numb. xv. 4. The reason of which disproportion may be this, that one of the tenth deals was a necessary attendant upon the lamb, and the other was peculiar to this feast and occasion, and was au

m ch. 7. 12.
Ps. 107. 22.
& 116. 17.
Amos 4. 5.

n ch. 7. 15.

o ch. 10. 37.
Numb. 15. 40.
Deut. 4. 40.

p ch. 10. 21.
q ch. 10. 3.
Matt. 6. 9.
Luke 11. 2.

r ch. 20. 8.

s Ex. 6. 7.
ch. 11. 43.
& 19. 36.
& 25. 38.
Numb. 15. 41.

a ver. 4. 37.
b Ex. 32. 5.
2 Kin. 10. 20.
Ps. 81. 3.

c Ex. 20. 9.
& 23. 12. &
31. 15. & 34.
21. ch. 19. 3.
Deut. 4. 13.
Luke 13. 14.

d ver. 2. 37.
Ex. 23. 14.

e Ex. 12. 6, 14, 18. & 23.
3, 10. & 23.
15. & 34. 18.
Numb. 9. 2, 3.
& 28. 16, 17.
Deut. 16.
1—5
Josh. 5. 10.

f Ex. 12. 16.
Numb. 28. 18, 25.

g Ex. 23. 16,
19. & 34.
22, 26.
Numb. 15. 2,
18. & 25. 26.
Deut. 16. 9.
Josh. 5. 15.
h Or,
handful.
i Heb. omer.
k Rom. 11.
16.
l Gen. 15. 20.
James 1. 18.
Rev. 14. 4.

i Ex. 23. 24.

k ch. 2. 14.
15, 16.

attendant upon that of the sheaf or corn, and was offered with it in thanksgiving to God for the fruits of the earth. Drink-offerings were added to all burnt-offerings, as we may see Numb. xv. 5. An hin; the measure appointed for every lamb, Numb. xv. 5. This also probably would have been doubled, for the reason now mentioned, had this been a thank-offering for the vintage, as it was for the harvest.

14 And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the selfsame day that ye have brought an offering unto your God: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

Bread, made of new wheat, as the nature and reason of the law sheweth. Nor green ears, which were usual, not only for offerings to God, as Lev. ii. 14, but also for man's food. See Josh. v. 11; Ruth ii. 14; 1 Sam. xvii. 17; Matt. xii. 1. Until the selfsame day: good reason God should be first served and owned as the supreme Landlord.

15 ¶ And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven sabbaths shall be complete:

From the morrow after the sabbath, i. e. from the sixteenth day of the month, and the second day of the feast of unleavened bread inclusively. See on ver. 11. Seven sabbaths, i. e. weeks, which are so called, by a synecdoche, from the chief day of it, both here and Luke xviii. 12; Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 2.

16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number ^m fifty days; and ye shall offer ⁿ a new meat offering unto the Lord.

i. e. After seven weeks, or forty-nine days, the morrow after which was the fiftieth day, called also pentecost. A new meat-offering, to wit, of new corn made into loaves, as it follows.

17 Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are ^o the firstfruits unto the Lord.

Out of your habitations, i. e. out of the corn of your own land, for which and for the fruits of it you are now to offer praises unto God. And this also, as well as the former sacrifice, was brought out of the common charge, and in the name of the whole nation, whence it is said to be brought out of their habitations in the plural number. Some conceive two several loaves were brought from every family, or, as others, from every city or town. But this is easily confuted from ver. 18, where we read that with the bread, to wit, the two loaves, were to be offered seven lambs, one bullock, &c., which doubtless was a common oblation, and in the name of all. Two wave loaves; in double proportion, as before, ver. 13. Baken with leaven; because these were not offered to God, but wholly given to the priest for food. See on Lev. ii. 11; vii. 13.

18 And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt offering unto the Lord, with their meat offering, and their drink offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savour unto the Lord.

Two rams; in Numb. xxviii. 11, 19 it is two young bullocks and one ram. Either therefore it was left to their liberty to choose which they would offer, or one of the bullocks there, and one of the rams here, were the peculiar sacrifices of the feast-day, and the other were attendants upon the two loaves, which were the principal and most proper offering at this time. And the one may be mentioned there, and the other here, to teach us that the addition of a new sacrifice did not destroy the former, but both were to be offered, as the extraordinary sacrifices of every feast did not hinder the oblation of the daily sacrifice.

19 Then ye shall sacrifice ^p one kid of the goats for a sin offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of ^q peace offerings.

One kid: in Lev. iv. 14 the sin-offering for the sin of the people is a bullock, but here a kid, &c.; the reason of the difference may be this, because that was for some particular sin of the people, but this only in general for all their sins. If it be said, then this should have been the better sacrifice, as being for far more, and possibly greater, offences; it may be replied, that this is not the only instance wherein the greater sins are expiated by smaller sacrifices, and the smaller sins by greater sacrifices, which was to instruct us, that sins were not expiated by the sacrifices for any worth in them, but only in respect of Christ, and that, though all sins are not equal, yet they are all expiated by one and the same price, even by the blood of Christ.

20 And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the firstfruits for a wave offering before the Lord, with the two lambs: ^r they shall be holy to the Lord for the priest.

The priest shall wave them, i. e. some part of them in the name of the whole, and so for the two lambs, otherwise they had been too big and too heavy to be waved. So it is a synecdochical expression. For the priests; who had to themselves not only the breast and shoulder, as in others, which belonged to the priest, but also the rest which belonged to the offerer, because the whole congregation being the offerer here, it could neither be distributed to them all, nor given to some without offence or injury to the rest.

21 And ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you: ye shall do no servile work therein: it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

An holy convocation, a sabbath or day of rest, called pentecost, which was instituted, partly in remembrance of the consummation of their deliverance out of Egypt, by bringing them thence to the mount of God, or Sinai, as God had promised, and of that admirable blessing of giving the law to them at that time, and forming them into a commonwealth under his own immediate government; and partly in gratitude for the further progress of their harvest, as in the passover they offered a thank-offering to God for the beginning of their harvest.

22 ¶ And ^s when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, ^t neither shalt thou gather any gleaning of thy harvest: thou shalt leave them unto the poor, and to the stranger: I am the Lord your God.

From the plural ye he comes to the singular thou, because he would press this duty upon every person who hath a harvest to reap, that none might plead exemption from it. And it is observable, that though the present business is only concerning the worship of God, yet he makes a kind of excursion to repeat a former law of providing for the poor, to show that our piety and devotion to God is little esteemed by him, if it be not accompanied with acts of charity to men.

23 ¶ And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, 24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the ^u seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, ^x a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation.

A memorial of blowing of trumpets, i. e. solemnized with the blowing of trumpets by the priests; not in a common way, as they did every first day of every month, Numb. x. 10, but in an extraordinary manner, not only in Jerusalem, but in all the cities of Israel. This seems to have been in-

1 ch. 25. 8.
Ex. 34. 22.
Deut. 16. 9.

m Acts 2. 1.
n Num. 28.
26.

o Ex. 23. 16,
16. & 22. 29.
& 34. 22. 25.
Num. 15. 17.
& 28. 26.
Deut. 26. 1.

r Num. 18.
12. Deu. 18.
4.

s ch. 19. 9.

t Deu. 24. 19.

u Num. 29. 1.

x ch. 25. 9.

stituted, 1. To solemnize the beginning of the new year, whereof as to civil matters, and particularly as to the jubilee, this was the first day; concerning which it was fit the people should be admonished, both to excite their thankfulness for God's blessing in the last year, and to direct them in the management of their civil affairs. 2. To put a special honour upon this month. For as the seventh day was the sabbath, and the seventh year was a sabbatical year; so God would have the seventh month to be a kind of sabbatical month, for the many sabbaths and solemn feasts which were observed in this more than in any other month. And by this sounding of the trumpets in its beginning, God would quicken and prepare them for the following sabbaths, as well that of atonement and humiliation for their sins, as those of thanksgiving for God's mercies.

25 Ye shall do no servile work therein: but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD. What that was, see Numb. xxix. 2, &c.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 27 'Also on the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement: it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

Ye shall afflict your souls, with fasting, and bitter repentance for all, especially their national sins, among which no doubt God would have them remember their sin of the golden calf. For as God had threatened to remember it in after-times to punish them for it, Exod. xxxii. 34, so there was great reason why they should remember it to humble themselves for it.

28 And ye shall do no work in that same day: for it is a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God.

29 For whatsoever soul it be that shall not be afflicted in that same day, ² he shall be cut off from among his people.

Whatsoever soul, either of the Jewish nation or religion. Hereby God would signify the absolute necessity which every man had of repentance and forgiveness of sin, and the desperate condition of all impenitent persons.

30 And whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, ^a "the same soul will I destroy from among his people.

31 Ye shall do no manner of work: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

32 It shall be unto you a sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye [†] celebrate your sabbath.

This clause seems to be added to answer an objection, how this day of atonement could be both on the tenth day ver. 27, and on the ninth day here. The answer is, it began at the evening or close of the ninth day, and continued till the evening or close of the tenth day; and so both were true, especially if you consider, that the Jews did take in some part of the sixth day's evening by way of preparation for the sabbath, and therefore would much more take in a part of the ninth day to prepare and begin the great and solemn work of their yearly atonement. And this clause may be understood either, 1. Of this particular sabbath, called here your sabbath, in the singular number, possibly to note the difference between this and other sabbaths; for the weekly sabbath is oft called the sabbath of the Lord, because that was in a special manner appointed for the praising, honouring, and serving of God, and celebrating his glorious works, as also the other sabbaths here mentioned were, whereas this was principally ordained for their need and for their good, even to seek and obtain the pardon of their sins. Or, 2. Of all their sabbaths, and consequently of this. The Jews are supposed to begin every day, and consequently their sabbaths, at the evening, in remembrance of the creation, Gen. i. 5, as Christians generally begin their days and sabbaths with the morning, in memory of Christ's resurrection.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ^b "The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the LORD.

Of tabernacles, i. e. of tents, or booths, or arbour. This feast was appointed principally to remind them of that time when they had no other dwellings in the wilderness, as it is expressed ver. 43, and to stir them up to bless God as well for the gracious conduct and protection then afforded them, as for their more commodious and secure habitations now given them; and secondarily, to excite them to gratitude for all the fruits of the year newly ended, which were now completely brought in, as may be gathered from ver. 39; Exod. xxiii. 16; Deut. xvi. 13, 14. See an instance of this feast Neh. viii. 16.

35 On the first day shall be an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

36 Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: ^c "on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a [†] solemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein.

Seven days ye shall offer an offering; a several offering each day, which is particularly described Numb. xxix. 13, &c. On the eighth day; which though it was not one of the days of this feast strictly taken, nor is it here affirmed to be so, but on the contrary is expressly said to consist of seven days, ver. 34, 39, nor did they dwell longer in tabernacles; yet in a larger sense it belonged to this feast, and is called the great day of the feast, John vii. 37. And so indeed it was, as for other reasons, so because, by their removal from their tabernacles into more fixed and comfortable habitations, it represented that happy time wherein their forty years' tedious march in the wilderness was ended, with their introduction into, and settlement in, the land of Canaan, which it was most fit and just they should acknowledge with such a solemn day of thanksgiving as this was. A solemn assembly, Heb. a day of conclusion, because it was the end of the feast, John vii. 37; or, of restraint, because they were restrained from servile work, and obliged to attendance upon God's worship; or, of detention, because they were yet detained before the Lord, and kept together for his service, and not suffered to return to their tents till this was over.

37 ^e "These are the feasts of the LORD, [•] ver. 2, 4, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, every thing upon his day:

A sacrifice, i. e. another sacrifice, to wit, for a sin-offering, as we shall find it Numb. xxix. 16, 19, 22, &c., called by the general name, a sacrifice, because it was designed for that which was the principal end of all sacrifices, to wit, for the expiation of sin.

38 ^f "Beside the sabbaths of the LORD, [†] Num. 29. 39. and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your freewill offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

Beside the sabbaths, i. e. the offerings of the weekly sabbaths, by a metonymy, as the day is sometimes put for the actions done in it, as Prov. xxvii. 1; 1 Cor. iii. 13. God will not have any sabbath sacrifice diminished, because of the addition of others proper to any other feast. And it is here to be noted, that though other festival days are sometimes called sabbaths, as here ver. 39, yet these are here

^v ch. 16. 30.
^{Num.} 29. 7.

^a ch. 20. 3, ^{5, 6.}

[†] Heb. rest.

^b Ex. 23. 16.
^{Num.} 29. 12.
^{Deut.} 16. 13.
^{Para.} 3. 4.
^{Neh.} 8. 14.
^{Zech.} 14. 16.
^{1 Esdr.} 3. 51.
^{John} 7. 2.

^c Num. 29.
^{25.}
^{Neh.} 8. 18.
^{John} 7. 37.
[†] Heb. day of restraint.
³ Deut. 16. 8.
² Chro. 7. 9.
^{Neh.} 8. 18.
^{Joel} 1. 14.
^{& 2. 15.}

[•] ver. 2, 4.

[†] Num. 29.
^{39.}

called the sabbaths of the Lord, in way of contradistinction to other days of rest, to show that this was more eminently such than other feast-days, which also sufficiently appears from the fourth commandment. Beside your gifts, which, being here distinguished from free-will offerings made to the Lord, may seem to note what they freely gave to the priests over and above their first-fruits and tithes, or other things which they were enjoined to give.

39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

Also, or rather, surely, as this particle is oft used; for this is no addition of a new, but only a repetition of the former injunction, with a more particular explication both of the manner and reason of the feast. The fruit, not the corn, which was gathered long before, but of their trees, as vines, olives, and other fruit-trees; which completed the harvest, whence this is called the feast of ingathering, Exod. xxiii. 16.

40 And ye shall take you on the first day the boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God seven days.

Boughs, Heb. the fruit, i. e. fruit-bearing boughs, or branches with the fruit on them, as the word fruit seems to be taken, 2 Kings xix. 30; Ezek. xix. 12. Goodly trees, to wit, the olive, myrtle, and pine, as they are mentioned, Neh. viii. 15, 16, which were most plentiful there, and which would best preserve their greenness or freshness. Thick trees, fit for shade and shelter. Willows of the brook, which might do well to mix with the other, and in some sort to bind them together. And as they made their booths of these materials, as is apparent from Neh. viii., so it seems they did also carry some of these boughs in their hands, as is affirmed by Jewish and other ancient writers. Ye shall rejoice; which joy they testified by feasting, thanksgiving, &c.

41 And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations: ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

42 Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

Booths were erected in their cities or towns, either in their streets or gardens, or the tops of their houses, Neh. viii. 16, which were made flat, and therefore were proper and fit for that use.

43 That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

44 And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

CHAP. XXIV.

The oil for the lamps, 1—4. The shew-bread, 5—9. Shelomith's son blasphemeth, 10—12. The law of blasphemy, 13—16. Of murder, 17. Of damage, 18—22. The blasphemer is stoned, 23.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamps to burn continually.

That they bring, at their common charge, because it was for their common good and service. This command was given before, Exod. xxvii. 20.

3 Without the veil of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: it shall be a statute for ever in your generations.

The veil of the testimony, i. e. which was before the ark of the testimony. Shall Aaron order it; either by himself, or by his sons, Exod. xxv. 37.

4 He shall order the lamps upon the pure candlestick before the LORD continually.

So called, partly because it was made of pure gold, partly because it was to be oft dressed and always kept clean.

5 ¶ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake twelve cakes thereof: two tenth deals shall be in one cake.

Thou shalt take; by the priests or Levites, whose work it was to prepare them, 1 Chron. ix. 32. Twelve cakes, representing the twelve tribes. Two tenth deals, i. e. two omers. See Lev. xxiii. 13.

6 And thou shalt set them in two rows, six on a row, upon the pure table before the LORD.

Not one above another, but one beside another, as the frankincense put upon each, ver. 7, shows. The pure table was so called because it was covered with pure gold, Exod. xxv. 24, and because it was always to be kept very pure and clean by the care of the priests.

7 And thou shalt put pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

Pure frankincense, unmixed and uncorrupted, or of the best sort. That it may be on the bread, or to the bread, or for the bread, to wit, to be burnt before the Lord instead of the bread, which could not conveniently be offered to God in that manner. And this was done every time that the bread was changed. For a memorial; for that part which properly belonged to God, whereas the rest belonged to the priests. See on Lev. ii. 2.

8 Every sabbath he shall set it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.

Before the Lord, whence it was called the shew-bread, Heb. the bread of faces, or of presence, i. e. the bread which was put upon the table in the Lord's presence. Being taken; such supplements are not unusual. Thus in the floor, 1 Kings xxii. 10, is put for sitting in the floor, 2 Chron. xviii. 9; and burdens, 2 Chron. ii. 18, for carrying burdens, 1 Kings v. 15. And these cakes are said to be received from or offered by the children of Israel, because they were bought with the money which they contributed, as may be seen Neh. x. 32, 33; as Judas is said to purchase the field, Acts i. 18, which was purchased by his money, Matt. xxvii. 7. By an everlasting covenant; by virtue of that compact made between me and them, by which they are obliged to keep this amongst other commands, and, they so doing, I am obliged to be their God, and to bless them. And this may be here called an everlasting covenant, not only because it was to endure as long as the Jewish religion and polity stood, but also because this was to stand there everlastingly, or continually, as is here said, and therefore the new cakes were first brought before the old were taken away.

9 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons'; and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire by a perpetual statute.

g. Ex. 23. 16.
Deut. 16. 13.

h. Neh. 8. 15.

† Heb. fruit.

1 Deut. 16.
14, 15.

1 Num. 28.
12.

Neh. 8. 18.

1 Neh. 8. 14,
15, 16.

20 Deut. 31.
13.

Ps. 78. 5, 6.

a. ver. 2.

b. Ex. 31. 8.
2. 28. 37.

d. 1 Kings
7. 48.

2 Chron. 4.
12. 4. 13. 11.

Heb. 2. 2.

e. Num. 4. 7.

1 Chr. 9. 32.

2 Chr. 2. 4.

f. 1 Sam. 21. 6.

Matt. 12. 4.

Mark. 2. 26.

Luke 6. 4.

g. Ex. 29. 33.

ch. 8. 3. &
21. 22.

+ Heb. to cause to ascend.

i. e. The old bread now to be taken away. Of the offerings, or, as one or being one of the offerings, &c., in regard of the incense which was offered by fire, and that for or instead of the bread, as was said on ver. 7, and therefore the bread was reputed as if it had been so offered.

10 ¶ And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp;

Whose father was an Egyptian: this circumstance seems noted, partly to show the danger of marriages with persons of wicked principles or practices, wherein the children, as one wittily and truly observes, like the conclusion, do commonly follow the worse part, and are more easily taught by word or example to do ten things agreeable to their corrupt natures, than one thing contrary to it; and partly by this severity against him who was a stranger by the father, and an Israelite by the mother, to show that God would not have this sin to go unpunished amongst his people, whatsoever he was that committed it. Went out, to wit, out of Egypt, being one of that mixed multitude which came out with the Israelites, Exod. xiii. 38. It is probable this was done when the Israelites were near Sinai. Strove together: this is added to show that provocation to sin is no justification of sin.

11 And the Israelitish woman's son blasphemed the name of the LORD, and cursed. And they brought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan:)

h ver. 16.
i Job 1-5, 11, 22, & 2
5, 9, 10, 15, & 21.
k Exod. 18, 22, 28.

The name of the Lord: the words of the Lord, or of Jehovah, are here conveniently supplied out of ver. 16, where they are expressed, but here they are omitted for the aggravation of his crime. He blasphemed the name, so called by way of eminency; that name which is above every name; that name which a man should in some sort tremble to mention; which is not to be named without cause and without reverence. For which reason the godly Jews did many times rather understand than express the name of God, as Mark xiv. 62, the right hand of power, for of the power of God, as it is Luke xxii. 69; and the Blessed for the blessed God, Matt. xxvi. 63; Mark xiv. 61. And cursed, not the Israelite only, but his God also, as appears from ver. 15, 16. They brought him; either the people who heard him, or the inferior magistrate, to whom he was first brought. Unto Moses, according to the order settled by Jethro's advice, Exod. xviii. 26.

12 And they put him in ward, that the mind of the LORD might be shewed them.

For God had only said in general, that he would not hold such guiltless, i. e. he would punish them, but had not declared how he would have them punished by men.

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

14 Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him.

By laying their hands upon his head they gave public testimony that they heard this person speak such words, and did in their own and in all the people's names desire and demand justice to be executed upon him, that by this sacrifice God might be appeased, and his judgments turned away from the people, upon whom they would certainly fall if he were unpunished. Stone him; the same punishment which was before appointed for those who cursed their parents, whereas it deserved a far more grievous death. Thus God in this life mixeth mercy with judgment, and punisheth men less than their iniquities deserve.

15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin.

i. e. Speaketh of him reproachfully, and with contempt.

o ch. 5. 1, & 30. 17.
Num. 9. 13.

They therefore are greatly mistaken that understand this of the heathen gods, whom their worshippers are forbidden to reproach or curse. But Moses is not here giving laws to heathens, but to the Israelites; nor would he concern himself so much to vindicate the honour of idols; nor doth this agree either with the design of the holy Scriptures, which is to beget a contempt and detestation of all idols and idolatry, or with the practice of the holy prophets, who used oft to vilify them. See 1 Kings xviii. 27; Jer. x. 11. Shall bear his sin, i. e. the punishment of it; shall not go unpunished. Some say he was to be beaten with stripes, others say with death, which is described ver. 16.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

He that blasphemeth the name of the Lord: this some make a distinct sin from cursing his God, mentioned ver. 15, but the difference they make seems arbitrary, and without evidence from reason, or the use of the words. And therefore this may be a repetition of the same sin in other words, which is common. And as this law is laid down in more general terms, ver. 15, so both the sin and the punishment are more particularly expressed, ver. 16. Or the first part of ver. 16 may be an application of the former rule to the present case. And as for him that blasphemeth, &c., or is blaspheming, &c., in the present tense, which is fitly used concerning words just now uttered, and scarce yet out of their ears, he shall, &c. And so the following words, as well the stranger, &c., may be a repetition and amplification of the former law. All the congregation shall stone him, to show their zeal for God, and to beget in them the greater dread and abhorrence of blasphemy.

17 ¶ And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death.

This law is repeated here, either to justify this sentence of putting blasphemers to death, from the same severity executed for a less crime; or to prevent the mischievous effects of men's striving or contending together, which as here it caused blasphemy, so it might in others lead to murder.

18 And he that killeth a beast shall make it good; †beast for beast.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done, so shall it be done to him;

20 Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God.

One manner of law, to wit, in matters of common right, but not as to church privileges.

23 ¶ And Moses spake to the children of Israel, that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and stone him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.

CHAP. XXV.

The land not to be tilled, but rest the seventh year; and that which grew of itself in the field or vineyard to be meat for them and their cattle, 1-7. The jubilee on the day of

p 1 Kings 21. 10, 15.
Ps. 74. 10, 18.
Matt. 12. 31.
Mark 3. 29.
Jan. 2. 7.

q Ex. 21. 12.
Num. 35. 31.
Deut. 19.
11, 12.

† Heb. amitteth the life of a man.

r ver. 21.
† Heb. life for life.

s Ex. 21. 24.
Deut. 19. 21.
Matt. 5. 38.
& 7. 2.

t Ex. 21. 33.
ver. 18.
u ver. 17. *

x Ex. 12. 48.
ch. 19. 34.
Num. 15. 16.

atonement; a year of liberty and restoration; a year of rest to the land; of the peculiar blessing of God on it, 8—22. Sold inheritances to be redeemed at any time; but now to be restored; a dwelling-house in a walled city only excepted, 23—34. Kindness to the poor; usury forbidden; an Israelite must not be a bond-man or maid, but a hired servant till the year of jubilee; bond-men or maids to be taken from the heathen; an inheritance for ever, 35—46. Of an Israelite that should sell himself to a stranger, 47—55.

1491. AND the LORD spake unto Moses in mount Sinai, saying,

i. e. Near Mount Sinai. So the Hebrew particle beth is sometimes used, as Gen. xxxvii. 13; Josh. v. 13; Judg. viii. 5; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 20, compared with 2 Kings xxi. 18. So there is no need to disturb the order of the history in this place.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land which I give you, then shall the land †keep *a sabbath unto the LORD.

When ye come into the land, so as to be settled in it; for the time of the wars was not to be accounted, nor the time before Joshua's distribution of the land among them, Josh. xiv. 7, 10. Keep a sabbath, i. e. enjoy rest and freedom from ploughing, tilling, &c. Unto the Lord, i. e. in obedience and unto the honour of God. This was instituted partly for the assertion of God's sovereign right to the land, in which the Israelites were but tenants at God's will; partly for the trial and exercise of their obedience; partly for the demonstration of his providence as well in the general towards men, as more especially towards his own people, of which see below, ver. 20—22; partly to wean them from inordinate love, and pursuit of or trust to worldly advantages, and to inure them to depend upon God alone, and upon God's blessing for their subsistence; partly to put them in mind of that blessed and eternal rest provided for all good men, wherein they should be perfectly freed from all worldly labours and troubles, and wholly devoted to the service and enjoyment God; see on Exod. xxiii. 11; and lastly, that by their own straits in that year they might learn more compassion to the poor, who were under the same straits every year.

3 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof;

4 But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD: thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard.

5 ^bThat which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes †of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

Of its own accord; from the grains that fell out of the ears the last reaping time. Thou shalt not reap, i. e. as thy own peculiarly, but only so as others may reap it with thee, for present food. The grapes of thy vine undressed, Heb. the grapes of thy separation, i. e. the grapes which thou hast separated or set apart to the honour of God, and to the ends and uses appointed by God; or the grapes of that year, which are in this like the Nazarites' hair, not cut off by thee, but suffered to grow to the use of the poor.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

The sabbath, i. e. the growth of the sabbath, or that fruit which groweth in the sabbatical year. See on Lev. xxiii. 38, where the word sabbath is taken in the like sense. For thee, and for thy servant; for all promiscuously, to take food from thence as they need it.

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beast that are in thy land, shall ll the increase thereof be meat.

8 ¶ And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet †of the jubile to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, ^ein the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

⁺ Heb. loud of sound. c ch. 23. 24, 27.

The jubilee signified the true liberty from our spiritual debts and slaveries, to be purchased by Christ, and to be published to the world by the sound of the gospel. The seventh month was the first month of the year for civil and worldly affairs, which were mainly concerned in the jubilee, and therefore it began in that month; and, as it seems, upon this very tenth day, when the trumpet sounded, as other feasts generally began when the trumpet sounded. In the day of atonement; a very fit time, that when they fasted and prayed for God's mercy to them in the pardon of their sins, then they might exercise their charity and kindness to men in forgiving their debts, which is the true fast, as is noted Isa. lviii. 6, and to teach us that the foundation of all solid comfort and joy must be laid in bitter repentance and atonement for our sins through Christ.

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and ^dproclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; ^eand ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

^d Is. 61. 2. & 63. 4. Jer. 34. 8, 15, 17. Luke 4. 19. e ver. 13. Num. 36. 4.

By which it seems most probable that the year of jubilee was not the forty and ninth year, as some learned men think, but precisely the fiftieth year; which may appear, 1. Because the Jews account it so, which is confessed by the adversaries of this opinion, who say that the Jews err in the computation of the jubilee, as they do in Christ, the great end and antitype of the jubilee. But it is not probable that the Jews should universally err in a matter of constant practice among themselves, especially when there was nothing of interest or prejudice in the case, as there was in reference to Christ. 2. Because it is expressly called the fiftieth year here, and ver. 11, that fiftieth year, which was not true if it was but the nine and fortieth year. It is said it is called so popularly, and it was so if you take in the foregoing jubilee. But it must be remembered, that there was not yet any foregoing jubilee, but the very first of the kind is expressly called the fiftieth year, which in truth it was not if the jubilee was ended ere the fiftieth year began. 3. From the common course of computation. The old weekly sabbath is called the seventh day, because it truly was so, being next after the six days of the week, and distinct from them all; and the year of release is called the seventh year, ver. 4, as immediately following the six years, ver. 3, and distinct from them all. And therefore, in like manner, the jubilee must needs be called the fiftieth year, because it comes next after seven times seven, or forty-nine years, ver. 8, and is distinct from them all. 4. From ver. 11, 12, where it is said, ye shall not sow, nor reap, &c; for it is the jubilee, &c.; which looks like a vain and useless repetition, if this year were but one of the seven years, for this very command was given concerning every seventh year, ver. 4; but if this year of jubilee was, as indeed it was, a year distinct from and coming after the seven sevens of years, then this repetition and application of that command to it was highly necessary, because otherwise it might seem hard and unreasonable that they should forbear sowing and reaping two years together, which hereby they are commanded to do. Two things are objected against this: 1. That the jubilee was only a revolution of forty-nine years. But that seems a great mistake, for it is most expressly distinguished from them all, and by way of distinction called the fiftieth year, therefore surely none of the forty-nine. 2. The difficulty propounded ver. 20 concerns only the seventh year, whereas it had been a greater difficulty if it had been extended to the jubilee, and the jubilee had been another vacant year coming next after the seventh year. But though the difficulty was greater for the jubilee, yet it was more frequent for the seventh year; and the resolution of the one made the way plain for the satisfaction of the other. For as God promised so to bless every sixth year, that it should bring forth fruit for three years, ver. 21; so when the case was extraordinary, as in the jubilee, it was but reasonable to expect an extraordinary blessing from God upon that sixth year which went next before the last of the seventh years, or the forty-ninth year, that it should then bring forth fruit for four years.

All the inhabitants thereof: understand such as were Israelites; principally to all servants, even to such as would not and did not go out at the seventh year, and to the poor, who now were acquitted from all their debts, and restored to their possessions. A jubilee; so called, either from the Hebrew word jobel, which signifies first a ram, and then a ram's horn, by the sound whereof it was proclaimed; or from Jubal, the inventor of musical instruments, Gen. iv. 21, because it was celebrated with music and all expressions of joy. Every man unto his possession, which had been sold, or otherwise alienated from him. This law was not at all unjust, because all buyers and sellers had an eye to this condition in their bargains; but it was necessary and expedient in many regards; as, 1. To mind them that God alone was the Lord and Owner and Proprietor both of their and of their lands, and they only his tenants and farmers; a point which they were very apt to forget. 2. That hereby inheritances, families, and tribes might be kept entire and clear until the coming of the Messias, who was to be known, as by other things, so by the tribe and family out of which he was to come. And this accordingly was done by the singular providence of God until the Lord Jesus did come. Since which time those characters are miserably confounded; which is no small argument that the Messias is come. 3. To set bounds both to the insatiable avarice of some, and the foolish prodigality of others, that the former might not wholly and finally swallow up the inheritances of their brethren, and the latter might not be able to undo themselves and their posterity for ever, which was a singular privilege of this law and people. Every man unto his family, from whom he was gone, being sold to some other family, either by himself or by his father.

11 A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

Though it come immediately after a seventh year, wherein also this was forbidden to you.

12 For it is the jubile; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

It shall be holy unto you: so it was, because it was sequestered in great part from worldly employments, and dedicated to God, and to the exercise of holy joy and thankfulness; and because it was a type of that holy and happy jubilee which they were to expect and enjoy by and under the Messias. The increase thereof; such things as it produced of itself; for the year before nothing was sowed. Out of the field; whence they in common with others might take it as they needed it; but must not put it into barns. See ver. 5; Exod. xxiii. 11.

13 In the year of this jubile ye shall return every man unto his possession.

14 And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not oppress one another:

Neither the seller by requiring more, nor the buyer by taking the advantage from his brother's necessities to give him less than the worth of it.

15 According to the number of years after the jubile thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee:

Or, of years of fruits, or, of fruitful years; for there were some unfruitful years, to wit, such wherein they were not allowed to sow or reap, &c.

16 According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

Or, for the number of the fruits. The meaning is, he selleth not the land, but only the fruits thereof, and that for a certain time.

17 Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; but thou shalt fear thy God: for I am the Lord your God.

18 Wherefore ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

A like objection, see Exod. xxxiv. 23, 24.

21 Then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

i. e. Give my blessing. Commanding is oft used in Scripture either for the performance of promised blessings, as Deut. xxviii. 8; Psal. cxi. 9; cxxxiii. 3, or for the execution of threatened judgments, as Isa. v. 6; Amos ix. 4; both being acts of God's providential will, as the command is of his legislative will. For three years; not completely, but in great part, to wit, for that part of the sixth year which was between the beginning of harvest and the beginning of the seventh year, for the whole seventh year, and for that part of the eighth year which was before the harvest, which reached almost until the beginning of the ninth year. And by this expression we may understand the meaning of that eminent passage of Christ's being three days and three nights in the grave, to wit, one whole day, and part of two days; of which more, if God please, in its proper place. This is added to show the equity of this command. As God would hereby try their faith, and exercise obedience, so he gave them an eminent proof of his own exact providence and tender care over them, in making provisions suitable to their necessities. Albeit it be also probable that divers of them, especially such as were more solicitous or distrustful of God's providence, did lay up something of the fruits of former years against this time.

22 And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

Of old fruit; of the sixth year principally, if not solely. Until her fruits, i. e. the fruits of the eighth year.

23 The land shall not be sold for ever: for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me.

For ever, or, absolutely and properly, so as to become the propriety of the buyer; or to the extermination or utter cutting off, to wit, of the seller, from all hopes and possibility of redemption. For the land is mine; procured for you by my power, given to you by my mere grace and bounty, and the right of propriety reserved by me, and to be disposed of by you only to such persons and in such manner as I shall have ordained. Sojourners with me, i. e. in my land or houses: thus he is said to sojourn with another that dwells in his house. Thus the poor decayed Israelites and the strangers are said to live with them, i. e. with the other Israelites, to wit, in the land or houses here, ver. 35, 36, 40, 44. Or, before me, in my sight, or in my account. Howsoever in your own or other men's opinions you pass for lords and proprietors, yet in truth, according

h ver. 10.
ch. 27. 24.
Num. 36. 4.

i ver. 17.
ch. 19. 13.
1 Sam. 12. 3.
4. Mic. 2. 2.
1 Cor. 6. 8.

k ch. 27. 18,
23.

1 ver. 14.
m ver. 43.
ch. 19. 14, 32.

n ch. 19. 37.

o ch. 26. 5.
Deut. 12. 10.
Ps. 4. 8.
Prov. 1. 33.
Jer. 23. 6.

p ch. 26. 5.
Ezek. 34.
23, 27, 28.

q Matt. 6.
r ver. 4. 5.

s Deut. 28. 8.
See Ex. 16.
23.

t 2 Kings
19. 29.
u Josh. 5. 11,
12.

|| Or, to be quite cut off.
† Heb. for cutting off.
x Deut. 32.
43. 2 Chron.
7. 20. Ps. 85. 1. Joel 2. 16. & 3. 2. y 1 Chron. 29. 15. Ps. 39. 12. & 119. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 11.

to which my judgment always is, you are but strangers and sojourners, not to possess the land for ever, but only for a season, and to leave it to such as I have appointed for it.

24 And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land.

i. e. A right of redemption in the time and manner following.

25 ¶ If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

Some of his possession, to wit, in the fields, but not in cities, ver. 29. If any of his kin come to redeem it; or, if the redeemer come, being near akin to him, to whom the right of redemption belonged, Ruth iii. 2, 9, 12; Jer. xxxii. 7, who in this act was an eminent type of Christ, who was made near akin to us by taking our flesh, that he might perform the work of redemption for us.

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and †himself be able to redeem it;

27 Then †let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

The years of the sale thereof, i. e. from the time of the sale to the jubilee. See above, ver. 15, 16. The overplus, i. e. a convenient price for the years from this redemption to the jubilee.

28 But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubile: and in the jubile it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession.

It shall go out, i. e. out of the buyer's hand, without any redemption money.

29 And if a man sell a dwelling house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; within a full year may he redeem it.

30 And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubile.

The reason is from the great difference between such houses and lands. The reasons before alleged for lands do not hold in such houses; there was no danger of confusion in tribes or families by the alienation of houses. The seller also had a greater propriety in houses than in lands, as not coming to him by God's mere gift, but being commonly built by the owner's cost and diligence, and therefore had a fuller power to dispose of them. Besides, God would hereby encourage persons to buy and possess houses in such places, which frequency and fulness of inhabitants in cities was a great strength, honour, and advantage to the whole land.

31 But the houses of the villages which have no wall round about them shall be counted as the fields of the country: †they may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubile.

The houses of the villages belonged to and were necessary or very convenient for the management of the lands.

32 Notwithstanding ^dthe cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if †a man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, shall go out in the year of jubile: for the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession among the children of Israel.

Or thus, But he that shall redeem it shall be or must be of the Levites, i. e. no person of another tribe, though by marriage near akin to the selling Levite, shall redeem it, but Levites only, and any of them shall have the same power to redeem it, which in other tribes only the nearest kindred have; and, in case none of them redeem it, yet the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, i. e. his share or interest in the city of his possession, shall go out and return to the Levites without any redemption.

34 But †the field of the suburbs of their cities may not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

Of the suburbs of the cities, see on Numb. xxxv. 4. May not be sold; not sold at all, partly because it was of absolute necessity for them for the keeping of their cattle, and partly because these were no enclosures, but common fields, in which all the Levites that lived in such a city had an interest, and therefore no particular Levite could dispose of his part in it. Some conceive that this law was altered in ensuing ages, which they gather from Jer. xxxii. 7, 8, &c.; Acts iv. 36, 37. But those examples do not prove it. That sale of Jeremiah's was made by a particular dispensation and command of God, and that in a time when the Levites, as well as the people, were to be destroyed or dispersed, and carried into captivity, and therefore could receive no considerable injury by it; and besides, this sale was only made formally and for signification, as it is explained, ver. 14, 15. And for the land sold by Barnabas a Levite, Acts iv., as it was at a time when the Jewish church was dissolved, and their state upon the brink of utter ruin, so it is not evident that it was such suburb land, which would have yielded but a small price, but it might be other land, either such as he might have in right of his wife, or such as he might have purchased. For though the Levites in general had no other share of land beside this allotted them by God, yet it is conceived that particular Levites might purchase lands to themselves.

35 ¶ And if thy brother be waxen poor, and †fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt †relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee.

Fallen in decay; Heb. his hand wavereth, or faileth, or is decayed, so that he hath not power to get or keep wealth, as the phrase is, Deut. viii. 18; as on the contrary, when a man is able, his hand is said to attain and find sufficiency, as here above, ver. 26. Relieve him, Heb. strengthen him, comfort his heart, and strengthen his hand. A sojourner; understand it of proselytes only, for of other strangers they were permitted to take usury, Deut. xxiii. 20.

36 ^bTake thou no usury of him, or increase: but †fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee.

i. e. Of thy brother, whether he be Israelite or proselyte. Increase: this some conceive relates to the fruits of the earth, food, &c., as usury doth to money. But here may rather seem to be two words expressing the same thing, (1.) To meet with the subtle evasions of crafty and covetous men, who made gain of their poor brethren (for of such only he speaks here, as is evident from ver. 35) by the lending of money or other things; and that they may quiet their consciences, and palliate their sin, they disguise it under other names; and, (2.) To show that all kinds of usury are in this case forbidden, whether of money, or of victuals, or of any thing that is commonly lent by one man to another upon usury, or upon condition of receiving the thing lent with advantage and overplus, as it is said Deut. xxiii. 19.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon

¶ Or, one of the Levites redeem them. e ver. 28.

z Ruth 2. 20. & 4. 4, 6.

a See Ruth 3. 2, 9, 12. Jer. 32. 7, 8.

† Heb. his hand hath attained and found sufficiency. ch. 5. 7. b ver. 50, 51, 52.

c ver. 13.

† Heb. his hand faileth. + Heb. strengthen him. g Deut. 15. 7, 8. Ps. 37. 26. & 41. 1. & 112. 5, 9. Prov. 14. 31. Luke 6. 35.

Acts 11. 29. Rom. 12. 18. 1 John 3. 17.

h Ex. 22. 25. Deut. 23. 19. Neh. 5. 7. Ps. 15. 5. Prov. 28. 8. Ezek. 18. 8, 13, 17.

& 22. 12. i ver. 17. Neh. 5. 9.

† Heb. redemption belongeth unto it.

d See Num. 35. 2. Josh. 21. 2, &c.

usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.

38 ^a I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and to be your God.

39 ¶ And ^b if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not ^c compel him to serve as a bondservant :

Neither for the time, for ever, nor for the manner, with the hardest and vilest kinds of service, rigorously and severely exacted from him.

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubile :

41 And then shall he depart from thee, both he and his children ^m with him, and shall return unto his own family, and ⁿ unto the possession of his fathers shall he return.

Then shall he depart from thee ; thou shalt not suffer him or his to abide longer in thy service, as thou mightest do in the year of release, Exod. xxi. 2, 6.

42 For they are ^o my servants, which I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: they shall not be sold ^p as bondmen.

They are my servants ; they, no less than you, are members of my church and people ; such as I have chosen out of all the world to serve me here, and to enjoy me hereafter, and therefore are not to be oppressed or abused, neither are you absolute lords over them, to deal with them as you please.

43 ^q Thou shalt not rule over him with rigour ; but ^r shalt fear thy God.

Though thou dost not fear them who are in thy power, and unable to right themselves, yet fear that God who hath commanded thee to use them kindly, and who can and will avenge their cause, if thou dost oppress them.

44 Both thy bondmen, and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you ; of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids.

45 Moreover of ^s the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land : and they shall be your possession.

46 And ^t ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession ; ^u they shall be your bondmen for ever : but over your brethren the children of Israel, ^v ye shall not rule one over another with rigour.

47 ¶ And if a sojourner or stranger ^w wax rich by thee, and ^x thy brother that dwelleth by him wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner by thee, or to the stock of the stranger's family :

The stock, Heb. root, i. e. one of the root or stock. So the word root is elsewhere used for the branch or progeny growing from it, as Numb. xiii. 28 ; 2 Chron. xxii. 10. He seems to note one of a foreign race and country, transplanted into the land of Israel, and there having taken root amongst the people of God ; yet even such a one, though he hath some privilege by it, yet he shall not have power to keep a Hebrew servant from the benefit of redemption.

48 After that he is sold he may be redeemed again ; one of his brethren may ^y redeem him :

49 Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, may redeem him, or any that is nigh of kin unto him of his family may redeem him ; or if ^z he be able, he may redeem himself.

50 And he shall reckon with him that bought him from the year that he was sold to him unto the year of jubile : and the price of his sale shall be according unto the number of years, ^a according to the time of an hired servant shall it be with him.

Allowance shall be made for the time wherein he hath served, proportionable to that which is given to a hired servant for so long service, because his condition is in this like theirs ; that it is not properly his person, but his work and labour that was sold.

51 If there be yet many years behind, according unto them he shall give again the price of his redemption out of the money that he was bought for.

52 And if there remain but few years unto the year of jubile, then he shall count with him, and according unto his years shall he give him again the price of his redemption.

53 And as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him : and the other shall not rule with rigour over him in thy sight.

Thou shalt not suffer this to be done, but whether thou art a magistrate, or a private person, thou shalt take care according to thy capacity to get it remedied.

54 And if he be not redeemed ^b in these years, then ^c he shall go out in the year of jubile, both he, and his children with him.

55 For ^d unto me the children of Israel are servants ; they are my servants whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt : I am the LORD your God.

CHAP. XXVI.

God commands them to shun idolatry, 1, keep his sabbaths, and reverence his sanctuary, 2, and walk in his statutes, 3 ; promising plenty, peace, victory, fruitfulness, his tabernacle and presence, 4—13. Dreadful threatenings against the despisers, haters, and breakers of his commands ; he will give them over to diseases, their enemies, drought, pestilence, sword, famines ; they who remain shall fall one upon another, and pine away in their sins, 14—39. But if they confess their sins, and are humbled under God's judgments, God will remember his covenant, and show them favour in their enemies' land, 40—45. These statutes the Lord gave to Israel in Mount Sinai by Moses, 46.

YE shall make you ^e no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a ^f standing image, neither shall ye set up ^g any ^h image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it : for I am the LORD your God.

A standing image, or, pillar, to wit, to worship it, or bow down to it, as it follows. Otherwise this was not simply prohibited, being practised by holy men both before and after this law. Compare Exod. xxiii. 24 ; Deut. xvi. 22. So Exod. xx. 4. They are forbidden to make images, not simply or for any use, but for worship.

2 ¶ ⁱ Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary : I am the LORD.

h ch. 22. 32, 33.
i Ex. 21. 2.
Deut. 15. 12.
1 Kin. 9. 22.
2 Kings 4. 1.
Neh. 5. 5.
Jer. 34. 14.
+ Heb. acerve himself with him with the service.
q. ver. 46.
Exod. 1. 14.
Jer. 25. 14.
& 27. 7.
& 30. 8.

m Ex. 21. 3.
n ver. 28.

o ver. 55.
Rom. 6. 22.
1 Cor. 7. 23.
+ Heb. with the sale of a bondman.

p Ph. 6. 9.
Col. 4. 1.
q ver. 46.
Exod. 1. 13.
r ver. 17. Exod. 1. 17, 21. Deut. 25. 18. Mal. 3. 5.

t Is. 14. 2.
+ Heb. ye shall acerve your selves with them.
ver. 39.
u ver. 43.

+ Heb. his hand obtain.
q. ver. 26.
x ver. 25, 35.

y Nch. 6. 5.

z ver. 28.

a Job 7. 1.
Is. 18. 14.
& 21. 18.

b Or, by these means.
c ver. 41.
Ex. 21. 2, 3.

c ver. 42.

e Ex. 20. 4.
5. Deut. 5.
8. & 16. 22.
& 27. 15.
f Is. 67. 7.
g Or, pillar.
h Or, figured stone.
+ Heb. stone of picture.

b ch. 19. 30.

Reverence my sanctuary, by purging and preserving it from all uncleanness, by approaching to it, and managing all the services of it, with reverence, and in such manner only as God hath appointed.

3 ¶ If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them;

4 Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

I will give you rain; therefore God placed them not in a land where there were such rivers as Nilus to water it and make it fruitful, but in a land which depended wholly upon the rain of heaven, the key whereof God kept in his own hand, that so he might the more effectually oblige them to obedience, in which their happiness consisted.

5 And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time: and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

Your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, i. e. you shall have so plentiful a harvest, that you shall not be able to thresh out your corn in a little time, but that work will last till the vintage.

6 And I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will rid evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land.

Neither shall the sword go through your land, i. e. war, as the sword is oft taken, as Numb. xiv. 3; 2 Sam. xii. 10. Otherwise there is the sword of justice. It shall not enter into it, nor have passage through it, much less shall your land be made the seat of war.

7 And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

Five of you, i. e. a small number; a certain number for an uncertain.

9 For I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you.

i. e. Actually perform all that I have promised you in my covenant made with you,

10 And ye shall eat old store, and bring forth the old because of the new.

Bring forth the old, or, cast out, throw them away, as having no occasion to spend them, or give them to the poor, or even to your cattle, that you may make way for the new corn, which also is so plentiful, that of itself it will fill up your barns.

11 And I will set my tabernacle among you: and my soul shall not abhor you.

As I have placed it, so I will continue it among you, and not remove it from you, as once I did upon your miscarriage, Exod. xxxiii. 7.

12 And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

I will walk among you, as I have hitherto done, both by my pillar of cloud and fire, and by my tabernacle, which have walked or gone along with you in all your journeys, and stayed among you in all your stations, to protect, conduct, instruct, and comfort you. Ye shall be my people; I will own you for that peculiar people which I have singled out of the mass o. mankind, to bless you here, and to save you hereafter.

13 I am the Lord your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bondmen; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

With heads lifted up, not pressed down with a yoke. It notes their liberty, security, confidence, and glory. See Exod. xiv. 8; Numb. xxxiii. 3.

14 But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments;

15 And if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant:

i. e. Break your part or conditions of that covenant made between me and you, and thereby discharge me from the blessings promised on my part.

16 I also will do this unto you; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it.

I will even appoint over you; I will give them power over you, that you shall not be able to avoid or resist them. Shall consume the eyes, by the decay of spirits, and affluence of ill humours.

17 And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies: they that hate you shall reign over you; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you.

18 And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you seven times more for your sins.

19 And I will break the pride of your power; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass:

The pride of your power, i. e. your strength, of which you are proud, your numerous and united forces, your kingdom, yea, your ark and sanctuary. Your earth as brass; the heavens shall yield you no rain, nor the earth fruits.

20 And your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

Your strength shall be spent in vain; ploughing, and sowing, and tilling the ground.

21 And if ye walk contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me; I will bring seven times more plagues upon you according to your sins.

Contrary unto me, or, carelessly or heedlessly with me, or before me, i. e. so as to be careless and unconcerned whether you please me or offend me. This is opposed to exact and circumspect walking with God, as Abraham did, Gen. xvii. 1, and all are to do, Eph. v. 15.

22 I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and your high ways shall be desolate.

By reason of the fewness of travellers and people, and the terror of wild beasts growing more numerous thereby.

23 And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me;

e Deut. 11. 13, 14, 15.
& 28. 1, -14.
d Is. 30. 22.
Ezek. 34. 26.
Joel 2. 23, 24.
e Ps. 67. 6.
& 85. 12.
Ezek. 34. 27.
& 36. 30.
Zech. 8. 12.

f Amos 9. 13.
g ch. 25. 19.
Deut. 11. 15.
Joel 2. 19, 28.
h ch. 25. 18.
Job 11. 18.
Ezek. 34. 25, 27, 28.

i 1 Chr. 22. 9. Ps. 29. 11.
& 147. 14.
Is. 45. 7.
Hag. 2. 9.
k Job 11. 19.
Ps. 3. 5. & 4. 8. Is. 35. 9.
Jer. 30. 10.
Ezek. 34. 25.
Hos. 2. 18. Zeph. 3. 13. † Heb. cause to cease. 1 2 Kings 17. 25. Ezek. 6. 17. & 14. 15. m Ezek. 14. 17.

n Deut. 32. 30. Josh. 23. 10.

o Ex. 25. 8. & 29. 45.
Josh. 22. 19.
Ps. 76. 2.
Ezek. 37. 26, 27, 28.
Rev. 21. 3. s ch. 20. 23. Deut. 32. 19.

t 2 Cor. 6. 16. u Ex. 6. 7. Jer. 7. 23. & 11. 4. & 30. 22. Ezek. 11. 20. & 36. 28.

v ch. 25. 38, 42, 55.

x Jer. 2. 20. Ezek. 34. 27.

y Deut. 26. 16. Lam. 2. 17. Mal. 2. 2.

z ver. 43. 2 Kin. 17. 15.

+ Heb. upon you.

a Deut. 28. 63, 66, 67. & 35. 25. Jer. 15. 8. b Deut. 28. 22. c 1 Sam. 2. d Deut. 28. 33, 31. Job 31. 8. Mic. 6. 15.

e ch. 17. 10. f Deut. 28. 25. Judg. 2. 14. Jer. 19. 7. g Ps. 106. 41. h ver. 36. Ps. 53. 5. Prov. 28. 1.

i 1 Sam. 2. 5. Ps. 119. 164. Prov. 24. 16. k Is. 25. 11. & 28. 5. Ezek. 7. 24. & 30. 6. l Deut. 28. 23.

m Ps. 127. 1. Is. 49. 4. n Deut. 11. 17. & 28. 18. Hag. 1. 10.

¶ Or, at all adventures with me, and so ver. 24.

o Deut. 32. 24. 2 Kings 17. 25. Ezek. 5. 17. & 14. 15. p Judg. 5. 6. 2 Chron. 15. 5. Is. 33. 8. Lam. 1. 4. Zech. 7. 14.

q Jer. 2. 30. & 5. 3. Amos 4. 6, -12.

r 2 Sam. 22.
27. Psa. 18.
26.

24 *Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins.

Contrary unto you, or, carelessly with you or towards you, i. e. I will put you out of my care and protection.

s Ezek. 5. 17.
& 6. 3. & 14.
17. & 29. 8.
& 33. 2.

25 And *I will bring a sword upon you, that shall avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities, I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy.

The quarrel of my covenant, i. e. my quarrel with you for your breach of your faith and covenant made with me. Into the hand of the enemy; because those few that shall be left of the pestilence will be unable to defend you in your cities or strong holds.

u Ps. 105. 16.
Is. 3. 1.
Ezek. 4. 16.
& 5. 16. &
11. 13.

26 *And when I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ye shall eat, and not be satisfied.

Broken the staff of your bread; either, 1. By taking away that power and virtue of nourishing which I have put into bread or food, which when I withdraw it will be unable to nourish. Or rather, 2. By sending a famine, or scarcity of bread, which is the staff and support of man's present life, Psal. civ. 15; for so this phrase is commonly used, and elsewhere explained, as Psal. cv. 16; Ezek. iv. 16, and so the following words expound it here. Ten women, i. e. ten or many families, for the women took care for the bread and food of all the family. Bread by weight: this is a sign and consequence both of a famine, and of the baking of the bread of several families together in one oven, where in each family took care to weigh their bread, and to receive the same proportion which they put in. Compare Ezek. iv. 16.

y ver. 21, 24.

27 And *if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me;

z Is. 59. 18.
& 63. 3. &
66. 15. Jer.
21. 5. Ezek. 5.
13, 15. & 18.

28 Then I will walk contrary unto you also *in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

Contrary unto you in fury; or, in fury of rashness or carelessness with you or among you, like a raging lion breaking into a multitude of people, and destroying all he meets with promiscuously, or without any distinction, both righteous and wicked together, as is threatened Ezek. xxi. 3. Or, in fury of contrariety, or meeting with you, or against you, like a man that meets his enemy in the fury of battle.

a Deu. 28. 53.
2 Kin. 6. 29.
Ezek. 5. 10.
Lam. 4. 10.
Bar. 2. 3.

29 *And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.

Through extreme hunger. See Lam. iv. 10.

b 2 Chron.
34. 3, 4, 7.
Is. 27. 9.
Psal. 6. 3, 4, 5, 6, 13.
c 2 Kings
23. 20.
d 2 Chr. 34. 5.
e Lev. 20. 23. Ps. 78. 59. & 89. 38. Jer. 14. 17.

30 And *I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

Your high places, in which you will sacrifice after the manner of the heathens. See Lev. xix. 26; Numb. xxxiii. 52. Your images; or, your images of the sun, made for the honour and worshiping of the sun, and having some resemblance to it. See 2 Chron. xxxiv. 7. Under this one kind of idolatry, famous and frequent in those times and places, he contains all the rest. The carcases of your idols; so he calls them, either to signify that their idols, how specious soever or glorious in their eyes, were in truth but lifeless and contemptible carcases, having eyes, but see not, &c., Psal. cxv. 5, or to show that their idols should be so far from helping them, that they should be thrown down and broken with them, and both should lie together in a forlorn and loathsome state.

31 *And I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will not smell the savour of your sweet odours.

e Neh. 2. 3.
Jer. 4. 7.
Ezek. 6. 6.
f Ps. 74. 7.
Lam. 1. 16.
Ezek. 8. 5.
& 21. 7.

Your sanctuaries; either, 1. God's sanctuary, called sanctuaries here, as also Psal. lxxiii. 17; lxxiv. 7; Jer. li. 51; Ezek. xxviii. 18, because there were divers apartments in it, each of which was a sanctuary, or, which is all one, a holy place, as they are severally called. And your emphatically, not mine, for I disown and abhor it, and all the services you do in it, because you have defiled it. Or, 2. The temples built by you to idols, therefore called their sanctuaries, in opposition to God's. Or, 3. Your synagogues. But the first is most probable, because he speaks of the place where they used to offer their sweet odours here following. I will not smell, i. e. not own or accept them. See Gen. viii. 21; Isa. i. 11, &c. Of your sweet odours; either of the incense, or of your sacrifices, which when offered with faith and obedience, are very sweet and acceptable to me.

32 *And I will bring the land into desolation: and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

g Jer. 9. 11.
& 25. 11, 18.
h Deu. 28. 37.
i Kings 9. 6.
Jer. 18. 16.
& 19. 8.
Ezek. 6. 15.

Having driven you out and possessed your places. See Lam. v. 2.

33 And *I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

i Deut. 4. 27.
& 28. 64.
j Ps. 44. 11.
Jer. 9. 16.
Ezek. 12. 15.
& 20. 27. &
22. 15. Zech.
7. 14.

The sword shall follow you into strange lands, and you shall have no rest there.

34 *Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

k 2 Chron.
36. 21.

Either, 1. Because it shall be rid of you, who were the unprofitable and heavy burdens thereof, under whom it in a manner groaned. Or rather, 2. Because it shall now enjoy those sabbatical years of rest from tillage, which you through covetousness oftentimes would not give it, as the next verse informs us, though God commanded it, Lev. xxv. 4.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it.

l ch. 25. 2.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

m Ezek. 21.
7, 12, 15.

n ver. 17.
Job 15. 21.
o Prov. 28. 1.
p Heb.
driven.

Faintness: the word notes a tenderness and softness of mind, whereby they are disenabled from bearing the present miseries, and are in continual dread of further and sorer miseries.

37 And *they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth: and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

q Is. 16. 4.
See Judg. 7.
22. 1 Sam.
14. 15, 16.
r Josh. 7.
12, 13.
Judg. 2. 14.

They shall fall one upon another, as soldiers used to do when their ranks are broken, and they forced to flee away hastily from their pursuers. When none pursueth; your guilt and fear causing you to imagine that they do pursue you when indeed they do not.

38 And ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

q Deut. 4. 27.
& 28. 65.
Neh. 1.
Jer. 3. 24.
& 29. 12, 15.
Ezek. 4. 17.
& 6. 9. & 20.
43. & 24. 23.
& 35. 10. &
36. 5. 15.
Zech. 10. 9.

39 And they that are left of you shall pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.

Shall pine away, be consumed and melt away by degrees, through diseases, oppressions, griefs, and manifold miseries.

40 ^r If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me ;

If they shall confess, Heb. And they shall confess, where our translation and many others understand the particle if, which is also wanting and understood, Exod. iv. 23 ; Mal. i. 2 ; iii. 8. So here, And if they shall confess, &c. But there seems no necessity of any such supplement, but these and the following words may be taken as they lie in their plain and proper signification, to this purpose, ver. 40, And through the heaviness and extraordinariness of their affliction, their consciences will force them to confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespass which they have trespassed against me, i. e. with their prevarication with me and defection from me to idolatry, which by way of eminency he calls their trespass ; and that also they have walked contrary to me, ver. 41, and that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies ; i. e. that they are not come into these calamities by chance, nor by the misfortune of war, but by my just judgment upon them. All which confession is no more than Pharaoh made in his distresses, and than hypocrites in their affliction use to make. And therefore he adds, if then their uncircumcised, i. e. impure, carnal, profane, and impenitent hearts be humbled, i. e. subdued, purged, reformed ; if to this confession they add sincere humiliation and reformation, I will do what follows.

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies ; if then their ^auncircumcised hearts be ^bhumbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity :

The Hebrew word avon commonly signifies iniquity, but it is oft used for the punishment of iniquity, as here and 1 Sam. xxviii. 10 ; Psal. xxxi. 10 ; Isa. liii. 6, 11. The meaning is, if they sincerely acknowledge the righteousness of God, and their own wickedness, and patiently submit to his correcting hand, and would rather be in their present suffering condition than in their former sinful, though prosperous estate ; if with David they are ready to say, it is good for them that they are afflicted, that they may learn God's statutes, and obedience to them for the future, which is a good evidence of true repentance.

42 Then will I ^aremember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember ; and I will ^aremember the land.

I will remember my covenant, to wit, so as to perform it, and make good all that I have promised in it. For words of knowledge or remembrance in Scripture do most commonly connote affection and kindness ; of which there are many instances, some given before, and more hereafter. I will remember the land, which now seems to be forgotten, and neglected, and despised, as if I had never chosen it to be the peculiar place of my presence and blessing.

43 ^r The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them : and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity : because, even because they ^adespised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, ^aI will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them : for I am the LORD their God.

Neither the desperateness of their condition, nor the greatness of their sins, shall make me wholly make void my covenant with them : and their ancestors, but I will in due time remember them for good, and for my covenant's sake return to them in mercy. From this place the Jews take great comfort, and assure themselves of deliverance out of their present servitude and misery. And from this, and such other places, St. Paul concludes that the Israelitish nation, though then rejected and ruined, should be gathered again and restored.

45 But I will ^bfor their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, ^cwhom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt ^din the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God : I am the LORD.

For their sakes, or rather, to or for them, i. e. for their good or benefit ; for surely, if one considers what is said before concerning the wickedness of this people, he cannot say this deliverance was given them for their sakes, but must rather say with the prophet, Ezek. xxxvii. 22, 32, not for your sake, O house of Israel, &c.

46 ^aThese are the statutes and judgments and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel ^bin mount Sinai by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. XXVII.

Laws touching the redeeming of men devoted to God, 1—8, or of beasts, 9—13 ; of houses, 14, 15 ; of fields or grounds, 16—25. What things might not be vowed ; and being so, what redeemable, and what not, 26—29. Of redeeming the tenths both of fruit and cattle, 30—33.

AND THE LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto the childfen of Israel, and say unto them, ^aWhen a man shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation.

A singular vow, or, an eminent or hard or wonderful vow ; not concerning things, which was not strange, but customary ; but concerning persons, as it here follows, which he vowed, or by vow devoted unto the Lord, which indeed was unusual and difficult : yet there want not instances of such vows, and of persons which devoted either themselves or their children to the service of God, and that either more strictly and particularly, as the Nazarites and the Levites, 1 Sam. i. 11, and for these there was no redemption admitted, but they were in person to perform the service to which they were devoted ; or more largely and generally, as some who were not Levites, nor intended themselves or their children should be Nazarites, might yet, through zeal to God and his service, or to obtain God's help in giving them some mercy which they wanted and desired, or in freeing them from some evil felt or feared, devoted themselves or their children to the service of God and of the sanctuary, though not in such a way as the Levites, which they were forbidden to do, yet in some kind of subserviency to them. And because there might be too great a number of persons thus dedicated, which might be burdensome and chargeable to the sanctuary, therefore an exchange is allowed, and the priests are directed to impose and require a tax for their redemption.

For the Lord, i. e. dedicated to the Lord, and consequently to the priest. By whose estimation ? Answ. Either, 1. Thine, O priest, to whom the valuation of things belonged, and here is ascribed, ver. 12. Or rather, 2. Thine, O man that vowest, as appears from ver. 8, where his estimation is opposed to the priest's valuation. Nor was there any fear of his partiality in his own cause, for the price is particularly limited. But where the price is undetermined, there, to avoid that inconvenience, the priest is to value it, as ver. 8, 12.

3 And thy estimation shall be of the male from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be fifty shekels

r Num. 5. 7.
1 Kings 8.
24, 25, 47.
Neh. 9. 2.
Dan. 9. 3, 4.
Prov. 28. 13.
Luke 15. 18.
1 John 1. 9.

s See Jer. 6.
10, & 9:25, 26.
1 Zek. 44. 7.
Acts 7. 51.
Rom. 2. 29.
Col. 2. 11.
11 Kim. 21:29.
2 Chr. 12. 6.
7, 12, & 32:26.
& 33. 17, 13.

u Exod. 2.
24. & 6. 5.
Ps. 106. 43.
1 Zek. 16. 60.

x Ps. 136. 23.

z ver. 15.

a Deut. 4.31.
2 Kin. 18. 23.
Rom. 11. 2.

b Rom. 11.
26.
c ch. 22. 53.
& 25. 38.

d Ps. 98. 2.
Frag. 29.
9, 14, 22.

e ch. 27. 24.
Deut. 6. 1. &
12. 1. & 32. 4.
John 1. 17.

f ch. 25. 1.

a Num. 6. 2.
Judg.
11. 30, 31.
39. 1 Sam.
1. 11, 26.

Ex. 30. 13. of silver, ^bafter the shekel of the sanctuary.

From twenty years old to sixty years old is the best time for strength and service, and therefore is prized at the highest rate.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be thirty shekels.

Less than the man's price, because she is inferior to him both in strength and serviceableness.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

From five years old, at what age they might be vowed by their parents, as appears from 1 Sam. i., though not by themselves; and the children were obliged by their parents' vow, which is not strange, considering the parents' power and right to dispose of their children so far as is not contrary to the mind of God.

6 And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.

7 And if it be from sixty years old and above; if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

8 But if he be poorer than thy estimation, then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

If he be poorer than thy estimation; if after his vow he be decayed and impoverished, and not able to pay the price which thou, according to the rules here given, requirest of him. According to his ability; which God also considered in other cases, as Lev. xii. 8. Compare 2 Cor. viii. 12.

9 And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.

Whereof men bring, to wit, usually and according to God's appointment. Giveth, i. e. voweth to give. Shall be holy, i. e. consecrated to God, either to be sacrificed, or to be given to the priest according to the manner of the vow, and the intention of him that voweth.

10 He shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

He shall not alter it, nor change it; two words expressing the same thing more emphatically: q. d. He shall in no wise change it, neither for one of the same, nor of another kind. A good for a bad, or a bad for a good; partly because God would preserve the sanctity and reverence of consecrated things, and therefore would not have them alienated; and partly to prevent abuses of them who on this pretence might exchange it for the worse, as reserving the judgment to himself. The exchange thereof, i. e. both the thing first vowed, and thing offered or given in exchange. This was inflicted upon him as a just penalty for his rashness and levity in such weighty matters.

11 And if it be any unclean beast, of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

If it be unclean, either for the kind, or for the quality of it, if it were such a one as might not be offered. The dog only may seem to be excepted, for his price might not be offered. See Deut. xxiii. 18.

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: †as thou valuest it, who art the priest, so shall it be.

13 ^cBut if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 ¶ And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

Sanctify his house, to wit, by a vow, for of that way and manner of sanctification he speaks in this whole chapter. Holy unto the Lord; in which case the benefit of it redounded either to the priests, for their maintenance, Numb. xviii. 4, or to the sanctuary, for its reparations or expenses. So shall it stand; supposing that the priest's estimation doth not notoriously swerve from the rules of valuation prescribed by God. For if the priest determined most unrighteously and unreasonably, as suppose a hundred times more than the true value of it, I presume no man is so void of sense as to say they were all bound to stand to the priest's determination in that case. Even as in case a man's leprosy was notorious and unquestionable, if a priest should through partiality pronounce him clean, this did not make him clean. And therefore all those passages of Scripture which leave things to, and command men to acquiesce in, the determination of the priest or priests, are to be understood with this exception, that their determinations be not evidently contrary to the revealed will of God, to whom priests are subject and accountable. Otherwise, if the priests had commanded men to profane the sabbath, this would have acquitted them from the obligation of God's command of keeping it holy, which is impious and absurd to affirm. And this consideration will give light to many scriptures.

15 ^dAnd if he that sanctified it will ^{d ver. 13.}re-deem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

He shall add the fifth part, which he might the better do, because the priests did usually put a moderate rate upon it.

16 And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: ¶an homer of ^{|| Or, the land of an homer, &c.}barley seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

A field of his possession, i. e. which is his by inheritance, because particular direction is given about purchased lands, ver. 22. And he saith part of it, because it was unlawful to vow away all his possessions, because thereby he had disenabled himself from the performance of divers duties by way of sacrifice, almsgiving, &c., and made himself burdensome to his brethren. According to the seed thereof, i. e. according to the quantity and quality of the land, which is known by the quantity of seed which it can receive and return. Fifty shekels of silver, not to be paid yearly, till the year of jubilee, as some would have it, but once for all, as is most probable, 1. Because here is no mention of any yearly payment, but only of one payment, and we must not add to the text. 2. Because it is most probable that lands and all things were favourably and moderately valued, so that men might be rather encouraged to make such vows upon just occasions, than to be deterred from them by excessive impositions. But if this were yearly rent, it was an excessive rate, and much more than the land ordinarily yielded. For an omer is but the tenth part of an ephah, Exod. xvi. 36, and therefore not above a pottle of our measure, which quantity of seed would not extend very far, and in some lands would yield but an inconsiderable crop, especially in barley, which was cheaper than wheat, and which for that reason, among others, may seem to be here mentioned rather than wheat.

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubile, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

From the year of jubilee, i. e. immediately after the year of jubilee is past. According to thy estimation, now mentioned, to wit, of fifty shekels for an homer of barley seed. It shall stand, i. e. that price shall be paid without diminution.

18 But if he sanctify his field after the jubile, then the priest shall ^{p ch. 25. 15, 16.}reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

⁺ Heb. according to thy estimation, O priest, &c. c ver. 13, 19.

After the jubilee, i. e. some considerable time after the jubilee, as appears from the following words. Unto the year of the jubilee; the defalcation from the full price of fifty shekels being to be more or less, as the years are more or fewer. See Lev. xxv. 15—17.

f ver. 13.

19 'And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more.

If he will not redeem the field, to wit, when the priest shall set a price upon it, and offer it to him in the first place to redeem it. If he have sold; he, who? Either, 1. The man that vowed it; if he after such a vow made shall neglect to pay his vow, and shall sacrilegiously sell the same land to another man; or, if he sell it, i. e. suffer it to be sold to another, and will not prevent that by redeeming it to himself. Or rather, 2. The priest, or some in his name, who, though not expressed, is sufficiently understood out of the foregoing clause, If he will not redeem or buy again the field, to wit, of the priest, who is now the seller of it; or, or rather and, for this seems to be added by way of accumulation, if he, i. e. the priest, of whom he might have redeemed it, upon his refusal, offers it to sale, and have sold the field to another man. Add to this, that none but the priest could sell this land, after it was once vowed and declared to be so, and offered by the priest to him again to redeem it, which is apparently the present case. It shall not be redeemed any more, i. e. he shall for ever lose the benefit of redemption.

g ch. 25. 10, 29, 31.

h ver. 28.
i Num. 18.
14. Ezek. 44.
29.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubile, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

When it goeth out, i. e. out of the possession of the other man to whom the priest sold it. The priests', for their maintenance. Nor is this repugnant to that law, that the priests should have no inheritance in the land, Numb. xviii. 20; for that is only spoken of them and the whole tribe of Levi in general, and in reference to the first division of the land, wherein the Levites were not to have a distinct part of land, as other tribes had; but this doth not hinder but some particular lands might be vowed and given to the priests, either for their own benefit, or for the service of the sanctuary.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of his possession;

Which is not his patrimony or inheritance.

1 ver. 18.

23 'Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubile: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

The worth of thy estimation, i. e. the price or sum at which thou, O priest, shalt reckon it. So it is only a change of the person, which is frequent; or, the price which thou, O Moses, by my direction hast set in such cases. Unto the year of the jubilee, i. e. as much as it is worth for that space of time between the making of the vow and the year of jubilee; for he had no right to it for any longer time, as the next verse tells us. He shall give thine estimation, without the addition of the fifth part, which he was to pay for his lands of inheritance, ver. 19, as being of a better and more durable tenure than purchased lands, which were his only till the jubilee. As a holy thing; as that which is to be consecrated to God instead of the land redeemed by it.

m ch. 25. 28.

24 'In the year of the jubile the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

By original right, which no other person by vow or otherwise could give away from him.

25 And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: twenty gerahs shall be the shekel.

n Exod. 30.
13. Num. 3.
47. & 18. 16.
Ezek. 45. 12.
+ Heb. Prat-
baru, &c.
o Ex. 13. 2.
12. & 22. 29.
Num. 18. 17.
Deut. 15. 19.

26 ¶ Only the firstling of the beasts, which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it; whether it be ox, or sheep: it is the LORD's.

No man shall sanctify it, to wit, by vow; because it is not his own, but the LORD's already, and therefore to vow such a thing to God is a tacit derogation from and a usurpation of the LORD's right, and a mocking of God by pretending to give him what we cannot withhold from him. Ox or sheep: under these two eminent kinds he comprehends all other beasts which might be sacrificed to God, the firstlings whereof could not be redeemed, but were to be sacrificed; whereas the firstlings of men were to be redeemed, and therefore were capable of being vowed, as we see 1 Sam. i. 11.

27 And if it be of an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, and shall add a fifth part of it thereto: or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation.

p ver. 11, 12, 13.

If it be of an unclean beast, i. e. if it be the first-born of an unclean beast, as appears from ver. 26, which could not be vowed, because it was a first-born, nor offered, because it was unclean, and therefore is here commanded to be redeemed or sold. Others understand it of all unclean beasts in general, and not of the first-born of them, because the first-born of such were to be redeemed by a sheep, Exod. xiii. 13, without the addition of any such fifth part as is here enjoined; which is true of the first redemption of them, but then as after they were redeemed they might be again vowed unto God, so when the owners would redeem them a second time, it was but reasonable they should pay a better price for them. And if this were meant of unclean beasts in general, this were the very same law which is mentioned before, ver. 11—13; which, it is not probable, would after a few verses be unnecessarily repeated again like a distinct law. It shall be sold, and the price thereof was given to the priests, or brought into the LORD's treasury.

28 'Notwithstanding no devoted thing, that a man shall devote unto the LORD of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD.

q ver. 31.
Josh. 6. 17,
18, 19.

No devoted thing, i. e. nothing which is absolutely devoted to God, with a curse upon themselves or others if they disposed not of it according to their vow; as the Hebrew word implies. Of all that he hath, to wit, in his power or possession. Is most holy unto the LORD, i. e. only to be touched or employed by the priests, and by no other persons; no, not by their own families, for that was the state of the most holy things.

29 'None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

r Num. 21.
2, 3.

Of men, not by men, as some would elude it; but of men, for it is manifest both from this and the foregoing verses, that men here are not the persons devoting, but devoted. Quest. Was it then lawful for any man or men thus to devote another person to the LORD, and in pursuance of such vow to put him to death? Answer. This was unquestionably lawful, and a duty in some cases, when persons have been devoted to destruction either by God's sentence, as idolaters, Exod. xxii. 20; Deut. xiii. 15, the Canaanites, Deut. xx. 17, the Amalekites, Deut. xxv. 19, 1 Sam. xv. 3, 26, Benhadad, 1 Kings xx. 42; or by men, in pursuance of such a sentence of God, as Numb. xxi. 2, 3; xxxi. 17; or for any crime of a high nature, as Judg. xxi. 5; Josh. vii. 15. But this is not to be generally understood, as some have taken it, as if a Jew might by virtue of this text devote his child or his servant to the Lord, and thereby oblige himself to put them to death, which peradventure was Jephthah's error. For this is expressly limited to all that a man hath, or which is his, i. e. which he hath a power over. But the Jews had no power over the lives of their children or servants, but were directly forbidden to take them away, by that great command, Thou shalt do no murder. And seeing he that killed his servant casually by a blow with a rod was surely to be punished, as is said Exod. xxi. 20, it could not be lawful wilfully and intentionally to take away his life upon pretence of any such vow as this. But for the Canaanites, Amalekites, &c., God, the undoubted Lord of all men's lives, gave to the Israelites a power over their persons and lives, and a command to put them to death. And this verse may have a special respect to them, or such as them. And although the general subject of this and the former verse be one and the same, yet there are two remarkable differences to this purpose: 1. The verb is active ver. 28, and the agent there expressed, that a man shall devote; but it is passive ver. 29, and the agent undetermined, which shall be devoted, to wit, by God, or men in conformity to God's revealed will. 2. The devoted person or thing is only to be sold or redeemed, and said to be most holy, ver. 28; but here it is to be put to death, and this belongs only to men, and those such as either were or should be devoted in manner now expressed.

^a Gen. 28. 22. ^b Num. 18. 21. ^c 2 Chron. 30. 10. 30 And *all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD. ^{31. 5 6. 12. Neh. 10. 12. Mal. 3. 8, 10}

There are divers sorts of tithes, but this seems to be understood only of the ordinary and yearly tithes belonging to the Levites, &c., as the very expression intimates, and the addition of the fifth part in case of redemption thereof implies.

31 *And if a man will at all redeem ^{t ver. 13} ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

32 And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever ^{u See Jer. 53. 33. Ezek. 29. 37. Mic. 7. 14.} passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.

Under the rod; either, 1. The tither's rod, it being the manner of the Jews in tithing to cause all their cattle to pass through some gate or narrow passage, where the tenth was marked by a person appointed for that purpose, and reserved for the priest. Or, 2. The shepherd's rod, under which the herds and flocks passed, and by which they were governed and numbered. See Jer. xxxiii. 13; Ezek. xx. 37.

33 He shall not search whether it be good or bad, *neither shall he change it; ^{x ver. 10.} and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.

34 *These are the commandments, ^{y ch. 26. 46.} which the LORD commanded Moses for the children of Israel in mount Sinai.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES,

CALLED

NUMBERS.

THE ARGUMENT.

THIS Book giveth us a history of almost forty years travel of the children of Israel through the wilderness, where we have an account of their journeys, and what happened to them therein, with their government, and how they were managed thereby; called NUMBERS by reason of the several numberings of the people, as at the offerings of the princes, and at their several journeys, &c. But especially two: one, chap. i., out of which the priests and Levites were excepted, but numbered by themselves, viz. in the second year after they were come out of Egypt, in the first month whereof the pass-over was instituted; with the order about the tabernacle, both of the Levites and people, and their several marches, encampings, and manner of pitching their tents, the priests' maintenance and establishment, by the miraculous budding of Aaron's rod, with the several impediments in their marches, both among themselves by several murmurings, seditions, and conspiracies; and from their enemies, viz. the Edomites, Canaanites, over whom having obtained a victory, and afterwards murmuring, they were stung with fiery serpents, and cured by the brazen one; Amorites, whose kings, Sihon and Og, they overcame and slew; and Moabites, where by the allurements of Balaam, who was hired by Balak to curse Israel, they joined themselves to Baal-peor, and are plagued for it; that openly opposed them. The other chief numbering is in chap. xxvi., where they are found almost as many as at the first, though among them were none of the first numbering, (according to what God had threatened, chap. xiv.) save Moses, Joshua, and Caleb, by reason of their desire to return back into Egypt upon the discouraging report of ten of those twelve that Moses sent to spy out the land; whereupon they were forced to wander above thirty-eight years in the wilderness; where he gave them several laws, civil, ecclesiastical, and military; as also particular directions about women's inheriting, occasioned by the case of Zelophehad's daughters, and concerning vows; and then brings them back to the borders of Canaan, where, after divers victories obtained against their enemies, they were directed how the land of Canaan was to be divided among the tribes, and what portion the Levites were to have among them, together with six cities of refuge set apart for the manslayer. At length Aaron being dead, and Eleazar placed in his stead, and Moses also having received the sentence of death, doth, by God's appointment, deliver up the people unto the charge and conduct of Joshua.

CHAP. I.

God commands Moses and Aaron to number the people that were fit for war, 1—3. Twelve captains chose, of every tribe one; their names; the number of each tribe, 4—46. The Levites exempted; to take care of the tabernacle; the other tribes camping round it, 47—54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses ^a in the wilderness of Sinai, ^b in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

B. C. 1490. ^a Ex. 19. 1. ^b ch. 10. 11, 12. ^c Ex. 25. 22

They now had been in the wilderness a full year, or near it, as may be gathered by comparing this place with Exod. xix. 1; xl. 17, and other places. In the tabernacle; from the mercy-seat.

2 ° Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

This is not the same muster with that Exod. xxxviii. 26, as plainly appears, because that was before the building of the tabernacle, which was built and set up on the first day of the first month, Exod. xl. 2; but this was after it, to wit, on the first day of the second month, as is said ver. 1. And they were for differing ends; that was to tax them for the charges of the tabernacle, but this was for other ends; partly, that the great number of the people might be known to the praise of God's faithfulness, in making good his promises of multiplying them, and to their own comfort and encouragement; partly, for the better ordering of their camp and march, for they were now beginning their journey; and partly, that this account might be compared with the other in the close of the book, where we read that not one of all this vast number, except Caleb and Joshua, were left alive; which was an evident discovery of the mischievous nature of sin, by which so vast a company were destroyed, and a fair warning to all future generations to take heed of rebelling against the Lord, for which their ancestors had been so dreadfully plagued even to extirpation. It is true, the sums and numbers agree in this and that computation, which is not strange, because there was not much time between the two numberings, and no eminent sin among the people in that interval whereby God was provoked to diminish their numbers. Some conceive, that in that number, Exod. xxx., xxxviii., the Levites were included, which are here excepted, ver. 47, and that in that interval of time there were grown up as many more men of those years as there were Levites of the same age. Of the children of Israel; so the strangers mixed with them were not numbered. The people were divided into twelve tribes, the tribes into great families, Numb. xxvi. 5; these great families into lesser families, called the houses of their fathers, because they were distinguished one from another by their fathers.

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

To inspect the work, that it might be faithfully and impartially done.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

With you, to wit, with Moses and Aaron, who were the chief managers of the work. The tribes are here numbered according to the order or quality of their birth, first the children of Leah, then of Rachel, and then of the handmaids.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethanceel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Gishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedazur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

Called Reuel, Numb. ii. 14, the Hebrew letters daleth and resh being very like, and oft changed.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 ° These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.

The renowned, Heb. the named or called, to wit, by Moses and by God's appointment, to manage this affair, and others as there was occasion. Compare Numb. xvi. 2; xxvi. 9. Heads of thousands. See Exod. xviii. 21; Numb. x. 4.

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.

19 As the LORD commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

20 And the children of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

By their generations, Heb. to wit, their generations, i. e. the persons begotten of Reuben's immediate children, who are here subdivided into families, and they into houses, and they into particular persons.

21 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Reuben, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

