■ 18:35 coming near Jericho. Luke implies Jesus was entering Jericho, whereas Matthew and Mark say the incident occurred as they "went out" of Jericho (Matt. 20:30; Mark 10:46). There seem to have been two "Jerichos" about a mile apart: the ruins of the Old Testament city conquered by Joshua (Josh. 6), and a city built by Herod the Great. The encounter may have happened as Jesus was leaving the old city and entering the new.

a certain blind man. Matthew mentions two blind men (cf. Matt. 8:28 and note), while Luke and Mark mention only one (named Bartimaeus, Mark 10:46); he may have been the spokesman for the two.

■ 18:42 your faith. Faith was the means by which the gift was received.

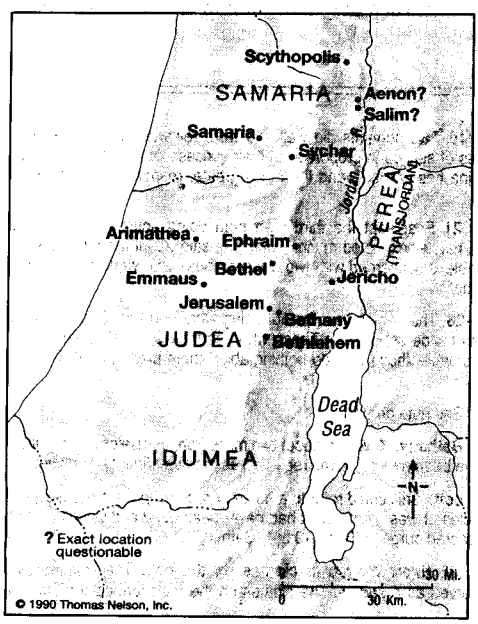
has made you well. This might be translated "has saved you," which would fit in with his following Jesus and praising God.

■ 19:2 chief tax collector. The term is found nowhere else, but clearly it means the head of the local taxing agents. Jericho was near a major trade route and famous balsam groves. There was much to tax, and Zacchaeus was accordingly quite rich.

■ 19:4 sycamore tree. A tree frequently planted by the roadside; it was easy to climb.

■ 19:8 I restore. The verb is in the present tense for vividness and emphasis.

fourfold. The law required the amount plus a fifth (Lev. 6:5; Num. 5:7); Zacchaeus was going far beyond what the law demanded.



Last Journey to Jerusalem. During Jesus' last trip to Jerusalem (Luke 9:51–56), He was turned away by an unfriendly Samaritan village. Thus, instead of passing through Samaria, He apparently took a longer route from Scythopolis, crossing to the east bank of the Jordan River to travel south. Recrossing the Jordan River near Jericho, He ascended the mountain to Bethany and finally arrived at Jerusalem.

9 And Jesus said to him, "Today salvation has come to this house, because [g]he also is [h]a son of Abraham; 10 [i]for the Son of Man has come to seek and to save that which was lost."

The Parable of the Minas

11 Now as they heard these things, He spoke another parable, because He was near Jerusalem and because [j]they thought the kingdom of God would appear immediately. 12 [k]Therefore He said: "A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. 13 So he called ten of his servants, delivered to them ten [5]minas, and said to them, 'Do business till I come.' 14 [l]But his citizens hated him, and sent a delegation after him, saying, 'We will not have this man to reign over us.'

15 "And so it was that when he returned, having received the kingdom, he then commanded these servants, to whom he had given the money, to be called to him, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. 16 Then came the first, saying, 'Master, your mina has earned ten minas.' 17 And he said to him, [m]'Well done, good servant; because you were [n]faithful in a very little, have authority over ten cities.' 18 And the second came, saying, 'Master, your mina has earned five minas.' 19 Likewise he said to him, 'You also be over five cities.'

20 "Then another came, saying, 'Master, here is your mina, which I have kept put away in a handkerchief. 21 [o]For I feared you, because you are [6]an austere man. You collect what you did not deposit, and reap what you did not sow.' 22 And he said to him, [p]'Out of your own mouth I will judge you, you wicked servant. [q]You knew that I was an austere man, collecting what I did not deposit and reaping what I did not sow. 23 Why then did you not put my money in the bank, that at my coming I might have collected it with interest?'

24 "And he said to those who stood by, 'Take the mina from him, and give it to him who has ten minas.' 25 (But they said to him, 'Master, he has ten minas.') 26 'For I say to you, [r]that to everyone who has will be given; and from him who does not have, even what he has will be taken away from him. 27 But bring here those enemies of mine, who did not want me to reign over them, and slay them before me.' "

The Triumphal Entry

28 When He had said this, [s]He went on ahead, going up to Jerusalem. 29 [t]And it came to pass, when He drew near to [7]Bethphage and [u]Bethany, at the mountain called [v]Olivet, that He sent two of His disciples, 30 saying, "Go into the village opposite you, where as you enter you will find a colt tied, on which no one has ever sat. Loose it and bring it here. 31 And if anyone asks you, 'Why are you loosing it?' thus you shall say to him, 'Because the Lord has need of it.' "

32 So those who were sent went their way and found it just [w]as He had said to them. 33 But as they were loosing the colt, the owners of it said to them, "Why are you loosing the colt?"

34 And they said, "The Lord has need of him." 35 Then they brought him to Jesus. [x]And they

■ 19:9 salvation. Jesus has just said that it is hard for a rich person to be saved (18:24, 25); the salvation of Zacchaeus shows it is not impossible (18:27). See "Salvation" at Acts 4:12.

a son of Abraham. This phrase may point to Zacchaeus as one of the lost sheep of Israel, to whom Jesus felt a special mission (cf. 13:16; Matt. 10:6; 15:24).

■ 19:10 the Son of Man. Jesus' favorite way of referring to Himself (5:24 note).

■ 19:11 Jesus' journey to Jerusalem was nearing its end, and some thought He would set up a magnificent earthly kingdom there.

■ 19:12 The parable of the talents (Matt. 25:14–29) resembles this one, but there the amounts are larger and vary in size, testing the servants for their fitness for larger tasks. Here the amounts are small and the same for all (v. 13). The parable teaches that everyone has one basic task—to serve God faithfully.

a far country. Herod's sons were examples of noblemen who went to Rome hoping to be made king.

■ 19:13 ten minas. Each servant received one mina, the equivalent of one hundred drachmas (15:8 note), or several months' wages.

■ 19:14 When Herod's son Archelaus went to Rome seeking his kingdom, his Jewish subjects sent a delegation to ask that he not be made king over them.

■ 19:16–19 Two servants did well and were rewarded with further opportunities of service in proportion to their success. Notice their modesty ("your mina has earned") and the much greater responsibility allotted to them.

■ 19:20, 21 Fear kept the third man from doing anything, though he knew his master expected much. Nothing is said about the other seven. The parable is concerned with two classes: those who worked and those who did not.

■ 19:22–26 The punishment for not using what one has is to lose it, a principle of wide application. Those who use their spiritual opportunities find more, while those who do nothing about them lose what ability they did have.

■ 19:28 See note on 9:51.

■ 19:29 Bethany. A village about two miles from Jerusalem. Bethphage must have been nearby; it was regarded as the outer limit of Jerusalem.

■ 19:30 colt. This could refer to a horse or a donkey; the other Gospels make it clear it was a donkey. It had never been used and was therefore fit for a sacred purpose (Num. 19:2; 1 Sam. 6:7).

■ 19:35, 36 threw their own clothes on the colt. The clothing evidently served as a saddle. The clothes on the road formed a triumphal carpet.

threw their own clothes on the colt, and they set Jesus on him. 36 And as He went, many spread their clothes on the road.

37 Then, as He was now drawing near the descent of the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to [y]rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works they had seen, 38 saying:

[z]" 'Blessed is the King who comes in the name of the LORD!'
[a]Peace in heaven and glory in the highest!"

39 And some of the Pharisees called to Him from the crowd, "Teacher, rebuke Your disciples."

40 But He answered and said to them, "I tell you that if these should keep silent, [b]the stones would immediately cry out."

Jesus Weeps over Jerusalem

41 Now as He drew near, He saw the city and [c]wept over it, 42 saying, "If you had known, even you, especially in this [d]your day, the things that [e]make for your [f]peace! But now they are hidden from your eyes. 43 For days will come upon you when your enemies will [g]build an embankment around you, surround you and close you in on every side, 44 [h]and level you, and your children within you, to the ground; and [i]they will not leave in you one stone upon another, [j]because you did not know the time of your visitation."

Jesus Cleanses the Temple

45 [k]Then He went into the temple and began to drive out those who [g]bought and sold in it, 46 saying to them, "It is written, [l]'My house [g]is a house of prayer,' but you have made it a [m]'den of thieves.'"

47 And He [n]was teaching daily in the temple. But [o]the chief priests, the scribes, and the leaders of the people sought to destroy Him, 48 and were unable to do anything; for all the people were very attentive to [p]hear Him.

Jesus' Authority Questioned

20 Now [a]it happened on one of those days, as He taught the people in the temple and preached the gospel, that the chief priests and the scribes, together with the elders, confronted Him 2 and spoke to Him, saying, "Tell us, [b]by what authority are You doing these things? Or who is he who gave You this authority?"

3 But He answered and said to them, "I also will ask you one thing, and answer Me: 4 The [c]baptism of John—was it from heaven or from men?"

5 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, "If we say, 'From heaven,' He will say, 'Why

■ 19:37 This entry into Jerusalem fulfilled prophecy (Zech. 9:9) and was a public claim to messiahship, but messiahship of a distinctive kind, since the donkey was the animal of a man of peace. A conquering king would ride a horse. The people seem to have recognized the kingship, but not to have seen the emphasis on peace.

■ 19:38 A quotation from Ps. 118:26, but with an explicit reference to the King. Luke alone has the words "peace" and "glory." He does not have "Hosanna," which his Gentile readers might not have understood.

■ 19:39 rebuke Your disciples. The Pharisees would not have wanted anything that disturbed the peace and brought trouble from the Romans.

■ 19:41, 42 Only Luke records Jesus' lament as He drew near the city. Jesus knew that the excitement of the crowds did not correspond to genuine spiritual perception and that the actions being pursued would inevitably bring war, not peace.

■ 19:43 build an embankment. A description of a typical siege of a city. The embankment was erected as a protection for the invaders and a base from which to launch attacks.

■ 19:44 The city will be completely destroyed. The people must live with their rejection of God's Messiah.

■ 19:45, 46 All four Gospels speak of Jesus driving traders out of the temple precincts, but the first three place it at the end of Jesus' ministry and John at the beginning. There were probably two cleansings (Mark 11:15 note). The merchants in the temple courts were money changers and sellers of sacrificial animals. Only coins from Tyre were accepted in the temple, and money had to be changed before an offering could be made. It was convenient to have them close to the temple, but their presence in the temple courts themselves made true worship difficult. The traders would have been in the court of the Gentiles, the only place Gentiles could go to pray.

■ 19:47, 48 The temple was a normal place for teaching. Jesus' opposition now includes a new group—"the leaders of the people." Evidently prominent lay people had now joined the priests and the scribes.

■ 20:1 preached the gospel. Jesus was bringing God's good news at the very time His enemies were plotting against Him.

chief priests . . . scribes . . . elders. This appears to be a delegation from the Sanhedrin.

■ 20:2 these things. Things such as driving the traders out of the temple.

■ 20:3, 4 Jesus was not avoiding their question. John had testified that Jesus was the Messiah. If they answered Jesus' question, they would have the answer to their own.

■ 20:5, 6 Notice that they were not concerned with the truth, but with the consequences of their possible answers.

[8]And Jesus said to them, "Neither will I tell you by what authority I do these things."

The Parable of the Wicked Vinedressers

[9]Then He began to tell the people this parable: [e]"A certain man planted a vineyard, leased it to [2]vinedressers, and went into a far country for a long time. [10]Now at [3]vintage-time he [f]sent a servant to the vinedressers, that they might give him some of the fruit of the vineyard. But the vinedressers beat him and sent him away empty-handed. [11]Again he sent another servant; and they beat him also, treated him shamefully, and sent him away empty-handed. [12]And again he sent a third; and they wounded him also and cast him out.

[13]"Then the owner of the vineyard said, 'What shall I do? I will send my beloved son. Probably they will respect him when they see him.' [14]But when the vinedressers saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, 'This is the [g]heir. Come, [h]let us kill him, that the inheritance may be [i]ours.' [15]So they cast him out of the vineyard and [j]killed him. Therefore what will the owner of the vineyard do to them? [16]He will come and destroy those vinedressers and give the vineyard to [k]others."

And when they heard it they said, "Certainly not!"

[17]Then He looked at them and said, "What then is this that is written:

> [l]'The stone which the builders rejected
> Has become the chief cornerstone'?

[18]Whoever falls on that stone will be [m]broken; but [n]on whomever it falls, it will grind him to powder."

[19]And the chief priests and the scribes that very hour sought to lay hands on Him, but they [4]feared the people—for they knew He had spoken this parable against them.

The Pharisees: Is It Lawful to Pay Taxes to Caesar?

[20][o]So they watched Him, and sent spies who pretended to be righteous, that they might seize on His words, in order to deliver Him to the power and the authority of the governor.

[21]Then they asked Him, saying, [p]"Teacher, we know that You say and teach rightly, and You do not show personal favoritism, but teach the way of God in truth: [22]Is it lawful for us to pay taxes to Caesar or not?"

[23]But He perceived their craftiness, and said to them, [5]"Why do you test Me? [24]Show Me a denarius. Whose image and inscription does it have?"

They answered and said, "Caesar's."

[25]And He said to them, [q]"Render[6] therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's."

[26]But they could not catch Him in His words in the presence of the people. And they marveled at His answer and kept silent.

■ 20:7, 8 Jesus will not talk about authority to men who refuse to reply to an important religious question, the answer to which they already know.

■ 20:9–12 The tenants are a vivid picture of the nation that persistently rejected the messengers of God who were sent to call them to repentance.

■ 20:13 Normally a landowner confronted with persistent refusal to pay and with abuse of his messengers would have taken strong measures. But just as this landowner keeps giving the tenants the opportunity for repentance, so God continues to reach out to sinners.

■ 20:14 This is the heir. The tenants had refused to acknowledge an owner by paying rent, and they apparently reasoned that with the heir out of the way, they could establish their own title to the land. Jesus is making the point that the nation had behaved outrageously toward God.

■ 20:17 Jesus quotes Ps. 118:22, which points to a complete reversal of accepted values.

chief cornerstone. Lit. "the head of the corner." It may be a large stone in the foundation, laid at the corner and determining the position of two walls. Or it may be the stone at the top of the corner binding the building together.

■ 20:19 The religious teachers were hostile to Jesus but could find no legal way of harming him.

■ 20:20 the governor. Clearly the "spies" hoped Jesus would say something that would make the Romans arrest Him.

■ 20:21 The flattering approach was doubtless meant to put Jesus off guard.

■ 20:22 Is it lawful. This means "Is it in accordance with God's law?" (it was required by Roman law). From the point of view of the questioners the answer had to put Jesus at odds with either the Romans or the Jews, who resented the taxes.

■ 20:24 a denarius. Jesus asked for the silver coin that was the proper coinage for paying the tax, roughly equivalent to a day's wage (15:8 note). It bore an image of the emperor with his titles of honor. There was only one answer to Jesus' question, and it opened the way for His unexpected reply. Jesus could not be accused of disloyalty to either the Jews or the Romans. He made it clear that there are duties owed to God, but also duties to the state.

The Sadducees: What About the Resurrection?

27 [r]Then some of the Sadducees, [s]who deny that there is a resurrection, came to Him and asked Him, 28 saying: "Teacher, Moses wrote to us that if a man's brother dies, having a wife, and he dies without children, his brother should take his wife and raise up offspring for his brother. 29 Now there were seven brothers. And the first took a wife, and died without children. 30 And the second [7]took her as wife, and he died childless. 31 Then the third took her, and in like manner the seven [8]also; and they left no children, and died. 32 Last of all the woman died also. 33 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife does she become? For all seven had her as wife."

34 Jesus answered and said to them, "The sons of this age marry and are given in marriage. 35 But those who are [t]counted worthy to attain that age, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; 36 nor can they die anymore, for [u]they are equal to the angels and are sons of God, [v]being sons of the resurrection. 37 But even Moses showed in the burning bush passage that the dead are raised, when he called the Lord [w]'the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.' 38 For He is not the God of the dead but of the living, for [x]all live to Him."

39 Then some of the scribes answered and said, "Teacher, You have spoken well." 40 But after that they dared not question Him anymore.

Jesus: How Can David Call His Descendant Lord?

41 And He said to them, [y]"How can they say that the Christ is the Son of David? 42 Now David himself said in the Book of Psalms:

[z] 'The LORD said to my Lord,
"Sit at My right hand,
43 Till I make Your enemies Your footstool."'

44 Therefore David calls Him 'Lord'; [a]how is He then his Son?"

Beware of the Scribes

45 [b]Then, in the hearing of all the people, He said to His disciples, 46 [c]"Beware of the scribes, who desire to go around in long robes, [d]love greetings in the marketplaces, the best seats in the synagogues, and the best places at feasts, 47 [e]who devour widows' houses, and for a [f]pretense make long prayers. These will receive greater condemnation."

The Widow's Two Mites

21 And He looked up [a]and saw the rich putting their gifts into the treasury, 2 and He saw also a certain [b]poor widow putting in two [c]mites.[1] 3 So He said, "Truly I say to you [d]that this poor widow has put in more than all; 4 for all these out of their abundance have put in offerings [2]for God, but she out of her poverty put in [e]all the livelihood that she had."

■ 20:27 Sadducees. Luke mentions the Sadducees only here. None of their writings survive, so we know them only as their opponents saw them. They were conservative and aristocratic, and counted the high priests among their ranks. They rejected the oral tradition of the Pharisees and found no basis for a doctrine of resurrection in the Old Testament.

■ 20:28–33 When a Jew died childless his brother was required to marry the widow, and the first son would become the heir of the deceased (Deut. 25:5–10). The Sadducees clearly thought that their story made nonsense of the doctrine of resurrection.

■ 20:34–36 The Sadducees assumed that if there were an afterlife it would be something like a repetition of this life. Jesus denies this. Marriage is an essential part of this life but not of the next; therefore, their question was invalid.

■ 20:36 equal to the angels. At the Resurrection there will be a change in nature, and believers will have resurrection bodies like that of Christ (1 Cor. 15:35–58 and notes). Jesus' point is not that human beings will be exactly like angels, but that the mode of existence of angels, and in particular their immortality, provides a clue to the post-resurrection existence of believers, who will also be immortal (1 Cor. 15:42, 52–55). Marriage and procreation will no longer be necessary or appropriate to immortal bodies. See "Resurrection and Glorification" at 1 Cor. 15:21.

■ 20:37 the burning bush passage. Before the addition of chapter and verse divisions, passages in Scripture were referred to by their content. Jesus draws an interesting proof that people live after this life from a well-known part of Scripture (Mark 12:26 note).

■ 20:41 How can they say. Earlier generations were regarded as greater and wiser than the present one, and this opened the way for Jesus to pose a question of His own. By popular definition, David was more important than any of his descendants. How could David call the Messiah his "Lord" (Ps. 110:1)? Jesus is teaching that the Messiah is not simply the Son of David; He is the Son of God and so David's Lord. Jesus' messiahship may be understood in part from His title "Son of David," but there are other aspects as well. He could not be regarded simply as "David" all over again.

■ 20:45–47 See note on Mark 12:40.

■ 21:1 the treasury. In the court of the women there were thirteen trumpet-shaped collection boxes with inscriptions showing the use to which donations would be put.

■ 21:2 poor. An unusual word (only here in New Testament) meaning "very poor." Her total livelihood (v. 4) was two copper coins of the lowest value (see text note).

Jesus Predicts the Destruction of the Temple

5 [f]Then, as some spoke of the temple, how it was [3]adorned with beautiful stones and donations, He said, 6 "These things which you see—the days will come in which [g]not one stone shall be left upon another that shall not be thrown down."

The Signs of the Times and the End of the Age

7 So they asked Him, saying, "Teacher, but when will these things be? And what sign will there be when these things are about to take place?"

8 And He said: [h]"Take heed that you not be deceived. For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am He,' and, 'The time has drawn near.' [4]Therefore do not [5]go after them. 9 But when you hear of [i]wars and commotions, do not be terrified; for these things must come to pass first, but the end will not come immediately."

10 [j]Then He said to them, "Nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. 11 And there will be great [k]earthquakes in various places, and famines and pestilences; and there will be fearful sights and great signs from heaven. 12 [l]But before all these things, they will lay their hands on you and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues and [m]prisons. [n]You will be brought before kings and rulers [o]for My name's sake. 13 But [p]it will turn out for you as an occasion for testimony. 14 [q]Therefore settle it in your hearts not to meditate beforehand on what you will [6]answer; 15 for I will give you a mouth and wisdom [r]which all your adversaries will not be able to contradict or [7]resist. 16 [s]You will be betrayed even by parents and brothers, relatives and friends; and they will put [t]some of you to death. 17 And [u]you will be hated by all for My name's sake. 18 [v]But not a hair of your head shall be lost. 19 By your patience possess your souls.

The Destruction of Jerusalem

20 [w]"But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation is near. 21 Then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains, let those who are in the midst of her depart, and let not those who are in the country enter her. 22 For these are the days of vengeance, that [x]all things which are written may be fulfilled. 23 [y]But woe to those who are pregnant and to those who are nursing babies in those days! For there will be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people. 24 And they will fall by the edge of the sword, and be led away captive into all nations. And Jerusalem will be trampled by Gentiles [z]until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled.

The Coming of the Son of Man

25 [a]"And there will be signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; and on the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring; 26 men's hearts failing them from fear and the expectation of those things which are coming on the earth, [b]for the powers of the heavens will be shaken. 27 Then they will see the Son of Man [c]coming in a cloud with power and great glory. 28 Now when these things begin to happen, look up and lift up your heads, because [d]your redemption draws near."

- 21:5 beautiful stones. See note on Mark 13:2.
- 21:6 This was fulfilled during the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70.
- 21:8 I am He. False teachers will claim to be the Christ.
- 21:9 the end. The end of all things. Some sections of this discourse refer to the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 and others to Jesus' coming at the end of the age (Mark 13:4 note).
- 21:12 synagogues. Synagogues were centers for discipline as well as places of worship.
- 21:13 Trouble for the church also means opportunity to bear witness.
- 21:16–19 This passage is a strong affirmation of God's overriding control. For some of His followers there will be a martyr's death, for others deliverance. Either way, God is bringing His purposes to pass.
- 21:20 Jerusalem. This section refers to the destruction of the city, not the end time (v. 9 note).
- 21:21 flee to the mountains. People would normally flee to a walled city for shelter from an invading army, but Jerusalem is doomed. People must run away from it, not try to enter it.
- 21:22 vengeance. Not meaningless suffering, but the divine penalty.
- 21:23 woe. The siege of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 in fact brought extreme suffering.
- 21:24 the times of the Gentiles. This may mean the time when the Gentiles will have their triumph over Israel, or the time when the gospel is preached to the Gentiles, or both.

  fulfilled. A divine purpose will be worked out (cf. Rom. 11:1–32).
- 21:25, 26 Attention moves to the Second Coming of Christ (v. 9 note). It will be preceded by signs that will puzzle many.
- 21:27 coming. Jesus' return will be a coming in splendor to reign.
- 21:28 redemption. This word means deliverance on payment of a price. Jesus paid the price at Calvary, and He here looks forward to the final fulfillment of what that deliverance means.

The Parable of the Fig Tree

29 [e]Then He spoke to them a parable: "Look at the fig tree, and all the trees. 30 When they are already budding, you see and know for yourselves that summer is now near. 31 So you also, when you see these things happening, know that the kingdom of God is near. 32 Assuredly, I say to you, this generation will by no means pass away till all things take place. 33 [f]Heaven and earth will pass away, but My [g]words will by no means pass away.

The Importance of Watching

34 "But [h]take heed to yourselves, lest your hearts be weighed down with [g]carousing, drunkenness, and [i]cares of this life, and that Day come on you unexpectedly. 35 For [j]it will come as a snare on all those who dwell on the face of the whole earth. 36 [k]Watch therefore, and [l]pray always that you may [g]be counted [m]worthy to escape all these things that will come to pass, and [n]to stand before the Son of Man."

37 [o]And in the daytime He was teaching in the temple, but [p]at night He went out and stayed on the mountain called Olivet. 38 Then early in the morning all the people came to Him in the temple to hear Him.

The Plot to Kill Jesus

22 Now [a]the Feast of Unleavened Bread drew near, which is called Passover. 2 And [b]the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might kill Him, for they feared the people.

3 [c]Then Satan entered Judas, surnamed Iscariot, who was numbered among the [d]twelve. 4 So he went his way and conferred with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray Him to them. 5 And they were glad, and [e]agreed to give him money. 6 So he promised and sought opportunity to [f]betray Him to them in the absence of the multitude.

Jesus and His Disciples Prepare the Passover

7 [g]Then came the Day of Unleavened Bread, when the Passover must be [1]killed. 8 And He sent Peter and John, saying, "Go and prepare the Passover for us, that we may eat."

9 So they said to Him, "Where do You want us to prepare?"

10 And He said to them, "Behold, when you have entered the city, a man will meet you carrying a pitcher of water; follow him into the house which he enters. 11 Then you shall say to the master of the house, 'The Teacher says to you, "Where is the guest room where I may eat the Passover with My disciples?" ' 12 Then he will show you a large, furnished upper room; there make ready."

13 So they went and [h]found it just as He had said to them, and they prepared the Passover.

Jesus Institutes the Lord's Supper

14 [i]When the hour had come, He sat down, and the [2]twelve apostles with Him. 15 Then He said to them, "With fervent desire I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer; 16 for I say to you, I will no longer eat of it [j]until it is fulfilled in the kingdom of God."

17 Then He took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, "Take this and divide it among your-

16 [j][Rev. 19:9]

■ 21:30 The appearance of leaves on the trees announces that summer is at hand. So the signs tell us that the kingdom is near.

■ 21:32 generation. The Greek word usually means all the people alive at a given time, but it can also mean all of a certain kind of people (e.g., wicked or righteous). The term can also mean "race"; if this is the meaning here it signifies that the Jews will continue to the end.

■ 21:36 Watch . . . pray. Watchfulness and prayer are Christian duties to the end of time.

to stand before the Son of Man. This signifies salvation at the last day.

■ 21:37, 38 Jesus' last days were spent teaching in Jerusalem, while at night He stayed on the Mount of Olives nearby.

■ 22:1 the Feast . . . Passover. Strictly speaking, Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were different but immediately successive festivals (Num. 28:26, 27), but by New Testament times the names were used interchangeably. The feast commemorated the great deliverance of Israel from Egypt (Ex. 12:17; Mark 14:1 note).

■ 22:2 chief priests. The chief priests had the political power among the Jews and they, not the Pharisees, led the final opposition to Jesus.

■ 22:3–6 Satan took control of Judas (John 13:2), and it was Judas who sought the chief priests, not they who sought him. The "captains" of the temple guard were mostly Levites.

■ 22:7 Passover. According to Ex. 12:5 the animal could be a lamb or a young goat. It would be killed at twilight (Ex. 12:6).

■ 22:8–12 Jesus was ready to die, but at the time of His own choosing. This may be the reason for the way Jesus made arrangements for the feast. None of the disciples knew where they would eat it.

■ 22:10 carrying a pitcher. A man carrying a pitcher of water would stand out, because pitchers were used by women, and men carried water in skins.

■ 22:15, 16 Jesus had intense desire for fellowship with His disciples at the Passover.

■ 22:17 Then He took the cup. At the Passover meal, each person would drink four cups of red wine. The wine was diluted, usually three parts of water to one of wine.

selves; 18 for [k]I say to you, [3]I will not drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God comes."

19 [l]And He took bread, gave thanks and broke it, and gave it to them, saying, "This is My [m]body which is given for you; [n]do this in remembrance of Me."

20 Likewise He also took the cup after supper, saying, [o]"This cup is the new covenant in My blood, which is shed for you. 21 [p]But behold, the hand of My betrayer is with Me on the table. 22 [q]And truly the Son of Man goes [r]as it has been determined, but woe to that man by whom He is betrayed!"

23 [s]Then they began to question among themselves, which of them it was who would do this thing.

The Disciples Argue About Greatness

24 [t]Now there was also a dispute among them, as to which of them should be considered the greatest. 25 [u]And He said to them, "The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them, and those who exercise authority over them are called 'benefactors.' 26 [v]But not so among you; on the contrary, [w]he who is greatest among you, let him be as the younger, and he who governs as he who serves. 27 [x]For who is greater, he who sits at the table, or he who serves? Is it not he who sits at the table? Yet [y]I am among you as the One who serves.

28 "But you are those who have continued with Me in [z]My trials. 29 And [a]I bestow upon you a kingdom, just as My Father bestowed one upon Me, 30 that [b]you may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, [c]and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Jesus Predicts Peter's Denial

31 [d]And the Lord said, "Simon, Simon! Indeed, [d]Satan has asked for you, that he may [e]sift you as wheat. 32 But [f]I have prayed for you, that your faith should not fail; and when you have returned to Me, [g]strengthen your brethren."

33 But he said to Him, "Lord, I am ready to go with You, both to prison and to death."

34 [h]Then He said, "I tell you, Peter, the rooster shall not crow this day before you will deny three times that you know Me."

Supplies for the Road

35 [i]And He said to them, "When I sent you without money bag, knapsack, and sandals, did you lack anything?"

So they said, "Nothing."

36 Then He said to them, "But now, he who has a money bag, let him take it, and likewise a knapsack; and he who has no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one. 37 For I say to you that this which is written must still be [5]accomplished in Me: [j]'And He was numbered with the transgressors.' For the things concerning Me have an end."

■ 22:18 until the kingdom of God comes. This is an important aspect of the Lord's Supper as a sacrament; it points forward to the Second Coming of Christ (1 Cor. 11:26).

■ 22:19 This is My body. There has been much discussion of these words (Matt. 26:26 note). The verb "is" in this instance does not mean "is identical with," but something more like "represents," "signifies," or perhaps "conveys." One Reformed communion service instructs the worshiper to "feed on Him in thy heart" when the bread is received. See "The Lord's Supper" at 1 Cor. 11:23.

do this. The one thing Jesus commanded His followers to do as a remembrance of Him referred to His death, underlining the centrality of the Cross for the Christian faith.

■ 22:20 the new covenant. By His death, Jesus offers the sacrifice that ratifies the new covenant of Jer. 31:31.

■ 22:22, 23 Jesus immediately speaks of betrayal by one of those at the table. That Judas was enjoying table fellowship with Jesus made his crime all the worse. Jesus would fulfill prophecy and go as it had been decreed, but this does not lessen the guilt of the one who betrayed Him.

■ 22:24–27 Only Luke has the account of this dispute that showed how far even the Twelve were from understanding what Jesus had come to do.

■ 22:25 benefactors. A number of kings in antiquity took the title "Benefactor," often with little justification. The disciples must serve, as Jesus did.

■ 22:28–30 That the disciples should serve rather than seek greatness does not mean they will go unnoticed. Jesus makes it clear that He knows how they have stood with Him, and that there will be a place for them in the kingdom. They are promised a wonderful future that includes judging the tribes of Israel (v. 30).

■ 22:31 Simon, Simon. The repetition gives solemnity and emphasis. It is a form of intimate, personal address.

asked for you. The word "you" is plural. Satan had asked permission to trouble all the disciples. Notice that Satan has no power to act outside the area God allows him.

■ 22:32 you. Here the word "you" is singular. When Peter has come through the trial he is to strengthen others.

■ 22:35, 36 The future will not be as easy for the disciples as the past.

■ 22:36 sword. This is probably not meant literally (cf. vv. 49–51; Matt. 26:51, 52), but is a way of saying that they face a dangerous future. Jesus Himself faces the fulfillment of Is. 53:12 and His followers will surely experience resistance and persecution.

38 So they said, "Lord, look, here are two swords."
And He said to them, "It is enough."

The Prayer in the Garden

39 *k*Coming out, *l*He went to the Mount of Olives, as He was accustomed, and His disciples also followed Him. 40 *m*When He came to the place, He said to them, "Pray that you may not enter into temptation."

41 *n*And He was withdrawn from them about a stone's throw, and He knelt down and prayed, 42 saying, "Father, if it is Your will, take this cup away from Me; nevertheless *o*not My will, but Yours, be done." 43 *6*Then *p*an angel appeared to Him from heaven, strengthening Him. 44 *q*And being in agony, He prayed more earnestly. Then His sweat became like great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 When He rose up from prayer, and had come to His disciples, He found them sleeping from sorrow. 46 Then He said to them, "Why *r*do you sleep? Rise and *s*pray, lest you enter into temptation."

Betrayal and Arrest in Gethsemane

47 And while He was still speaking, *t*behold, a multitude; and he who was called *u*Judas, one of the twelve, went before them and drew near to Jesus to kiss Him. 48 But Jesus said to him, "Judas, are you betraying the Son of Man with a *v*kiss?"

49 When those around Him saw what was going to happen, they said to Him, "Lord, shall we strike with the sword?" 50 And *w*one of them struck the servant of the high priest and cut off his right ear.

51 But Jesus answered and said, "Permit even this." And He touched his ear and healed him.

52 *x*Then Jesus said to the chief priests, captains of the temple, and the elders who had come to Him, "Have you come out, as against a *y*robber, with swords and clubs? 53 When I was with you daily in the *z*temple, you did not try to seize Me. But this is your *a*hour, and the power of darkness."

Peter Denies Jesus, and Weeps Bitterly

54 *b*Having arrested Him, they led Him and brought Him into the high priest's house. *c*But Peter followed at a distance. 55 *d*Now when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the courtyard and sat down together, Peter sat among them. 56 And a certain servant girl, seeing him as he sat by the fire, looked intently at him and said, "This man was also with Him."

57 But he denied *7*Him, saying, "Woman, I do not know Him."

58 *e*And after a little while another saw him and said, "You also are of them."

But Peter said, "Man, I am not!"

59 *f*Then after about an hour had passed, another confidently affirmed, saying, "Surely this fellow also was with Him, for he is a *g*Galilean."

60 But Peter said, "Man, I do not know what you are saying!"

Immediately, while he was still speaking, *8*the rooster crowed. 61 And the Lord turned and looked at Peter. Then *h*Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how He had said to him, i"Before the rooster *9*crows, you will deny Me three times." 62 So Peter went out and wept bitterly.

■ 22:38 enough. The disciples take the words about the sword literally, and Jesus' reply means, "Enough of that sort of talk."

■ 22:40 the place. Gethsemane (Mark 14:32), an olive grove (John 18:1).

■ 22:41 Luke's account does not mention Peter, James, and John (who slept while Jesus prayed). Luke's emphasis is on Jesus' prayer, not the disciples' failings. People generally prayed standing (18:11, 13), but at this solemn time Jesus knelt.

■ 22:42 this cup. A symbol of suffering and divine anger (Is. 51:17; Ezek. 23:33).

not My will. As One who had taken upon Himself a complete human nature, it was natural for Jesus to shrink from the horror of the Cross, a horror magnified by His knowledge that in dying He would be forsaken by God and experience the weight of divine anger on sin. Nevertheless, Jesus is determined to follow the will of His Father.

■ 22:43, 44 Luke alone tells of the angel who strengthened Jesus and of the sweat "like great drops of blood."

■ 22:47 kiss. The kiss was a common greeting (1 Thess. 5:26), and to use it in this way was a horrible form of betrayal.

■ 22:53 your hour. A furtive arrest at night suits this effort of the forces of spiritual darkness (cf. Eph. 6:12; Col. 1:13).

■ 22:54 the high priest's house. Jesus was taken first to the high priest who had ordered His arrest. All four Gospels give more space to the trial than to the Crucifixion. They are answering questions about why the Jews condemned Jesus and why the Romans executed Him, and bringing out His identity as the Son of God and King of the Jews.

■ 22:55–62 All four Gospels say that the first challenge came from a slave girl, but the second variously from the same girl (Mark 14:69), a different girl (Matt. 26:71), or a man (Luke 22:58). Servants were around a fire in a courtyard; a challenge from any of them would be taken up by the others and there would have been several voices challenging Peter. The threefold denial fulfills the prediction of v. 34.

63 jNow the men who held Jesus mocked Him and kbeat Him. 64 lAnd having blindfolded Him, they lstruck Him on the face and asked Him, saying, "Prophesy! Who is the one who struck You?" 65 And many other things they blasphemously spoke against Him.

Jesus Faces the Sanhedrin

66 mAs soon as it was day, nthe elders of the people, both chief priests and scribes, came together and led Him into their council, saying, 67 o"If You are the Christ, tell us."

But He said to them, "If I tell you, you will pby no means believe. 68 And if I qalso ask you, you will by no means answer rMe or let Me go. 69 sHereafter the Son of Man will sit on the right hand of the power of God."

70 Then they all said, "Are You then the Son of God?"

So He said to them, t"You rightly say that I am."

71 uAnd they said, "What further testimony do we need? For we have heard it ourselves from His own mouth."

Jesus Handed Over to Pontius Pilate

4 So Pilate said to the chief priests and the crowd, h"I find no fault in this Man."

5 But they were the more fierce, saying, "He stirs up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, beginning from iGalilee to this place."

Jesus Faces Herod

6 When Pilate heard qof Galilee, he asked if the Man were a Galilean. 7 And as soon as he knew that He belonged to jHerod's jurisdiction, he sent Him to Herod, who was also in Jerusalem at that time. 8 Now when Herod saw Jesus, khe was exceedingly glad; for he had desired for a long time to see Him, because lhe had heard many things about Him, and he hoped to see some miracle done by Him. 9 Then he questioned Him with many words, but He answered him mnothing. 10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused Him. 11 nThen Herod, with his rmen of war, treated Him with contempt and mocked Him, arrayed Him in a gorgeous robe, and sent Him back to Pilate. 12 That very day oPilate and Herod became friends with each other, for previously they had been at enmity with each other.

Taking the Place of Barabbas

13 pThen Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, the rulers, and the people, 14 said to them, q"You have brought this Man to me, as one who misleads the people. And indeed, rhav-

■ 22:63–65 Jesus was evidently left to a guard of soldiers who made sport of Him.

■ 22:66–71 No single Gospel gives a complete account of Jesus' trial. It is clear that there were two main stages: the Jews tried Him before the Sanhedrin and obtained a verdict that He was a blasphemer and deserved to die. However, only the Romans had the right to execute Him, and they would not execute a man for blasphemy. There had to be a further trial before the Romans for a violation of Roman law.

■ 22:66 day. Jewish trials had to be held in the daytime. Luke's description of those present points to the Sanhedrin.

■ 22:67–69 Luke does not speak of a formal accusation or of a trial according to proper procedure. The Sanhedrin simply required Jesus to incriminate Himself according to their understanding of the Messiah. This He declines to do, as they would not believe Him. But He does say that a change is coming ("Hereafter," v. 69) and that He will be in the place of highest honor in heaven.

■ 22:71 Jesus had conceded to the Sanhedrin's charge that He claimed to be the Son of God, and as far as they were concerned He was guilty of blasphemy (cf. Matt. 26:65). Persuading the Romans would require a different charge, but for the Sanhedrin the matter was over. Jesus was guilty in their eyes, and it remained only to secure His execution.

■ 23:1 the whole multitude. All the members of the Sanhedrin were not needed, but their united front would impress Pilate with their seriousness.

■ 23:2 perverting the nation. A curiously imprecise charge.

forbidding to pay taxes to Caesar. Jesus did the opposite (20:25).

saying that He . . . is Christ, a King. Jesus specifically refused to use the title (22:67, 68). All the charges were false.

■ 23:3 The words "It is" are not in the Greek. In one sense Jesus was King of the Jews, but in the sense in which Pilate understood the title He was not. His answer means something like "So you say" (cf. John 18:33–38). From this reply Pilate concluded that Jesus was no revolutionary (v. 4).

■ 23:5–7 In the Roman Empire, a trial was usually held in the province where the offense was committed, but it could be transferred to the province from which the accused came. Pilate seized on this to send Jesus to Herod. Only Luke mentions this.

■ 23:9 answered him nothing. Herod was the only person to whom Jesus refused to speak.

■ 23:11 Herod mocked Jesus, not taking the charge seriously.

ing examined Him in your presence, I have found no fault in this Man concerning those things of which you accuse Him; 15 no, neither did Herd, for [d]I sent you back to him; and indeed nothing deserving of death has been done by Him. 16 [e]I will therefore chastise Him and release Him" 17 [f](for[5] it was necessary for him to release one to them at the feast).

18 And [u]they all cried out at once, saying, "Away with this Man, and release to us Barabbas"— 19 who had been thrown into prison for a certain rebellion made in the city, and for murder.

20 Pilate, therefore, wishing to release Jesus, again called out to them. 21 But they shouted, saying, "Crucify Him, crucify Him!"

22 Then he said to them the third time, "Why, what evil has He done? I have found no reason for death in Him. I will therefore chastise Him and let Him go."

23 But they were insistent, demanding with loud voices that He be crucified. And the voices of these men [6]and of the chief priests prevailed. 24 So [v]Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they requested. 25 [w]And he released [7]to them the one they requested, who for rebellion and murder had been thrown into prison; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

The King on a Cross

26 [x]Now as they led Him away, they laid hold of a certain man, Simon a Cyrenian, who was coming from the country, and on him they laid the cross that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And a great multitude of the people followed Him, and women who also mourned and lamented Him. 28 But Jesus, turning to them, said, "Daughters of Jerusalem, do not weep for Me, but weep for yourselves and for your children. 29 [y]For indeed the days are coming in which they will say, 'Blessed are the barren, wombs that never bore, and breasts which never nursed!' 30 Then they will begin [z]'to say to the mountains, "Fall on us!" and to the hills, "Cover us!"' 31 [a]For if they do these things in the green wood, what will be done in the dry?"

32 [b]There were also two others, criminals, led with Him to be put to death. 33 And [c]when they had come to the place called Calvary, there they crucified Him, and the criminals, one on the right hand and the other on the left. 34 [8]Then Jesus said, "Father, [d]forgive them, for [e]they do not know what they do."

And [f]they divided His garments and cast lots. 35 And [g]the people stood looking on. But even the [h]rulers with them sneered, saying, "He saved others; let Him save Himself if He is the Christ, the chosen of God."

36 The soldiers also mocked Him, coming and offering Him [i]sour wine, 37 and saying, "If You are the King of the Jews, save Yourself."

38 [j]And an inscription also was [9]written over Him in letters of Greek, Latin, and Hebrew:

THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 [k]Then one of the criminals who were hanged blasphemed Him, saying, [l]"If You are the Christ, save Yourself and us."

40 But the other, answering, rebuked him, saying, "Do you not even fear God, seeing you are under the same condemnation? 41 And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our

■ 23:16 I will . . . chastise Him. Under Roman law a person might be beaten and warned to be more careful in the future. Pilate was evidently hoping that this would placate the Jews and enable him to release One he knew was innocent.

■ 23:17 The custom of releasing a prisoner at Passover is not attested outside the Gospels, but this sort of thing was widely done at this time and there is nothing improbable about it.

■ 23:18 Barabbas. The crowds clamored for Barabbas, a man otherwise unknown. His name means "son of the father," and Luke reports that his crimes were rebellion and murder.

■ 23:26 Simon a Cyrenian. It was customary for the condemned to carry the horizontal crossbeam to the site of the crucifixion. Jesus started to carry His cross (John 19:17), but He would have been weakened by the heavy scourging that usually preceded crucifixion (Mark 15:15). The soldiers conscripted a passer-by named Simon from Cyrene in North Africa. His sons apparently were known in the church (Mark 15:21 note).

■ 23:27–31 Only Luke records this incident. There must have been many supporters of Jesus in Jerusalem, only a comparatively small number could crowd around the judgment hall where the opposition was concentrated.

■ 23:28 Daughters of Jerusalem. These were local people, not pilgrims from Galilee. Jesus is concerned for them, not Himself, and turns their attention to the terrible troubles that would come upon the land (21:20–24).

■ 23:31 Evidently a proverbial saying, possibly meaning that if Jesus (who was innocent) was crucified, what would happen to the Jews (who were guilty)?

■ 23:33 Calvary. From the Latin word calvaria, "a skull." All four Gospels say that Jesus was crucified between two criminals; in His death He "was numbered with the transgressors" (Is. 53:12).

Jesus Dies on the Cross

44 [n]Now it [3]was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour. 45 Then the sun was [4]darkened, and [o]the veil of the temple was torn in [5]two. 46 And when Jesus had cried out with a loud voice, He said, "Father, [p]'into Your hands I commit My spirit.'" [q]Having said this, He breathed His last.

47 [r]So when the centurion saw what had happened, he glorified God, saying, "Certainly this was a righteous Man!"

48 And the whole crowd who came together to that sight, seeing what had been done, beat their breasts and returned. 49 [s]But all His acquaintances, and the women who followed Him from Galilee, stood at a distance, watching these things.

Jesus Buried in Joseph's Tomb

50 [t]Now behold, there was a man named Joseph, a council member, a good and just man. 51 He had not consented to their decision and deed. He was from Arimathea, a city of the Jews, [u]who[6] himself was also waiting for the kingdom of God. 52 This man went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. 53 [v]Then he took it down, wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a tomb that was hewn out of the rock, where no one had ever lain before. 54 That day was [w]the Preparation, and the Sabbath drew near.

55 And the women [x]who had come with Him from Galilee followed after, and [y]they observed the tomb and how His body was laid. 56 Then they returned and [z]prepared spices and fragrant oils. And they rested on the Sabbath [a]according to the commandment.

24 Now [a]on the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they, [1]and certain other women with them, came to the tomb [b]bringing the spices which they had prepared. 2 [c]But they found the stone rolled away from the tomb. 3 [d]Then they went in and did not find the body of the Lord Jesus. 4 And it happened, as they were [2]greatly perplexed about this, that [e]behold, two men stood by them in shining garments. 5 Then, as they were afraid and bowed their faces to the earth, they said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? 6 He is not here, but is risen! [f]Remember how He spoke to you when He was still in Galilee, 7 saying, 'The darkness. Not an eclipse, because Passover occurs at the time of the full moon. This was a supernatural darkness.

■ 23:45 the veil. A curtain separating the Most Holy Place from the rest of the temple. Jesus' death opened the way into the presence of God.

■ 23:46 Matthew and Mark stress how terrible Jesus' death was. Luke does not deny this, but records Jesus' words showing that His death was in accordance with the will of the Father.

breathed His last. This is not the usual way of referring to death. None of the Gospels employs standard terminology for Jesus' death.

■ 23:47 a righteous Man. The way He died showed Him to be "righteous." Matthew and Mark have "Son of God"; in this context, the two terms have much the same meaning (Mark 15:39 note).

■ 23:48 beat their breasts. A sign of grief. The crowd had come to be entertained, but Jesus' death disturbed them. Luke does not say what effect the death had on the disciples who witnessed it.

■ 23:50, 51 Joseph of Arimathea is mentioned in all four Gospels as taking the leading role in Jesus' burial. The location of Arimathea is uncertain (Mark 15:43 note). Joseph was a member of the Sanhedrin and must have been absent when the vote to execute Jesus was taken, for "all" agreed to this (Mark 14:64). That he was "waiting for the kingdom of God" (v. 51) means that he was a follower of Jesus.

■ 23:53 linen. The linen cloth was a shroud (placed over the linen strips mentioned in John 19:40).

a tomb . . . hewn out of the rock. A rock tomb generally held several bodies (Mark 15:46 note), but this one was empty.

■ 23:54 the Preparation. Friday, the day on which people prepared for the Sabbath (John 19:14 note).

■ 23:55, 56 There was not time on Friday to do all that Jesus' followers would have liked for His burial. The women took note of where the body was laid, evidently to know where to come when the Sabbath was over to complete the burial. Joseph and Nicodemus placed a considerable quantity of myrrh and aloes with the body as they laid it in the tomb (John 19:38, 39), but the women wanted to make their own contribution.

■ 24:1–53 Each Gospel deals with the Resurrection in its own way, though none describes how it happened. Some things are clear in all four: the empty tomb, the slowness of the disciples to believe that the Resurrection had happened, and the prominence of women in the first appearances. But each Gospel also has something that does not appear in the others. Luke includes the account of the walk to Emmaus and related events.

■ 24:1 the first day of the week. This began at sunset on Saturday. The women would have had the hours of darkness to complete their preparations before setting out for the tomb at daybreak.

■ 24:2 See theological note "The Resurrection of Jesus."

■ 24:2, 3 A stone tomb would be closed by rolling a stone in front of the opening (Mark 15:46 note). Matthew notes that a seal was placed on the stone (Matt. 27:66).

Son of Man must be [g]delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.' "

[8] And [h]they remembered His words. [9] [i]Then they returned from the tomb and told all these things to the eleven and to all the rest. [10] It was Mary Magdalene, [j]Joanna, Mary the mother of James, and the other women with them, who told these things to the apostles. [11] [k]And their words seemed to them like [3]idle tales, and they did not believe them. [12] [l]But Peter arose and ran to the tomb; and stooping down, he saw the linen cloths [4]lying by themselves; and he departed, marveling to himself at what had happened.

The Road to Emmaus

[13] [m]Now behold, two of them were traveling that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was [5]seven miles from Jerusalem. [14] And they talked together of all these things which had happened. [15] So it was, while they conversed and reasoned, that [n]Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. [16] But [o]their eyes were restrained, so that they did not know Him.

[17] And He said to them, "What kind of conversation is this that you have with one another as you [6]walk and are sad?"

[18] Then the one [p]whose name was Cleopas answered and said to Him, "Are You the only stranger in Jerusalem, and have You not known the things which happened there in these days?"

[19] And He said to them, "What things?"

So they said to Him, "The things concerning Jesus of Nazareth, [q]who was a Prophet [r]mighty in deed and word before God and all the people, [20] [s]and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and crucified Him. [21] But we were hoping [t]that it was He who was going to redeem Israel. Indeed, besides all this, today is the third day since these things happened. The Resurrection of Jesus

Jesus' resurrection was a divine act involving all three Persons of the Godhead (John 10:17, 18; Acts 13:30–35; Rom. 1:4). It was not just a revival of the broken physical body that was taken down from the cross and buried. It was a transformation of Jesus' humanity that enabled Him to appear, vanish, and move unseen from one location to another (Luke 24:31, 36). It was the creative renewing of His body, to become the body that is now fully glorified and deathless (Phil. 3:21; Heb. 7:16, 24). The Son of God in heaven lives in and through His body, and will do so forever. In 1 Cor. 15:50–54, Paul envisages that Christians who are alive on earth at the moment of Christ's return will undergo a similar transformation. Those who have died in Christ before His return will likewise be transformed never to die again.

Christianity rests on the certainty of Jesus' resurrection as an occurrence in history. The Gospels have it as their goal, with the empty tomb and resurrection appearances, and Acts insists on it (Acts 1:3; 2:24–35; 3:15; 4:10; 5:30–32; 13:33–37). Paul regarded the Resurrection as indisputable proof that the message about Jesus as Judge and Savior is true (Acts 17:31; 1 Cor. 15:1–11, 20).

Jesus' resurrection demonstrated His victory over death (Acts 2:24; 1 Cor. 15:54–57), vindicated Him as righteous (John 16:10) and indicated His divine identity (Rom. 1:4). It led on to His ascension, and His present heavenly reign. It guarantees the believer's present forgiveness and justification (Rom. 4:25; 1 Cor. 15:17), and it is the hope of eternal life in Christ for the believer (John 11:25, 26; Rom. 6; Eph. 1:18—2:10; Col. 2:9–15; 3:1–4). □

■ 24:9 all the rest. This indefinite expression shows that there was a large band of Jesus' followers in Jerusalem at this time. Many would have been Galileans in Jerusalem for the Passover.

■ 24:10 Mary Magdalene was the first to see the risen Lord (Mark 16:9; John 20:10–18). She is mentioned in all four Gospels in connection with the Crucifixion and the Resurrection, but otherwise we hear of her only in 8:2.

■ 24:11 they did not believe them. In general the testimony of women was not highly regarded by first-century Jews.

■ 24:13 Emmaus. The exact site is not known.

■ 24:16 their eyes were restrained. This appears to mean that God prevented them from recognizing Jesus at this time.

■ 24:18 Cleopas is not mentioned elsewhere.

■ 24:20 chief priests and our rulers. The disciples place the principal responsibility for Jesus' death on their own people, not the Romans.

■ 24:21 redeem. The word means to set free by paying a price. Clearly, the two were thinking of the political deliverance of their nation.

ished us. 23 When they did not find His body, they came saying that they had also seen a vision of angels who said He was alive. 24 And [v]certain of those who were with us went to the tomb and found it just as the women had said; but Him they did not see."

25 Then He said to them, "O foolish ones, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken! 26 [w]Ought not the Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His [x]glory?" 27 And beginning at [y]Moses and [z]all the Prophets, He [7]expounded to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself.

The Disciples' Eyes Opened

28 Then they drew near to the village where they were going, and [a]He [8]indicated that He would have gone farther. 29 But [b]they constrained Him, saying, [c]"Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." And He went in to stay with them.

30 Now it came to pass, as [d]He sat at the table with them, that He took bread, blessed and broke it, and gave it to them. 31 Then their eyes were opened and they knew Him; and He vanished from their sight.

32 And they said to one another, "Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us on the road, and while He opened the Scriptures to us?" 33 So they rose up that very hour and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven and those who were with them gathered together, 34 saying, "The Lord is risen indeed, and [e]has appeared to Simon!" 35 And they told about the things that had happened on the road, and how He was [9]known to them in the breaking of bread.

Jesus Appears to His Disciples

36 [f]Now as they said these things, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and said to them, "Peace to you." 37 But they were terrified and frightened, and supposed they had seen [g]a spirit. 38 And He said to them, "Why are you troubled? And why do doubts arise in your hearts? 39 Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself. [h]Handle Me and see, for a [i]spirit does not have flesh and bones as you see I have."

40 [1]When He had said this, He showed them His hands and His feet. 41 But while they still did not believe [j]for joy, and marveled, He said to them, [k]"Have you any food here?" 42 So they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish [2]and some honeycomb. 43 [l]And He took it and ate in their presence.

The Scriptures Opened

44 Then He said to them, [m]"These are the words which I spoke to you while I was still with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms concerning Me." 45 And [n]He opened their understanding, that they might comprehend the Scriptures.

The Ascension

46 Then He said to them, [o]"Thus it is written, [3]and thus it was necessary for the Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, 47 and that repentance and [p]remission of sins should be preached in His name [q]to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. 48 And [r]you are witnesses of these things. 49 [s]Behold, I send the Promise of My Father upon you; but tarry in the city [4]of Jerusalem until you are endued with power from on high."

■ 24:45 open their understanding. Jesus showed them the way to understand the Bible. Christ's death and resurrection were foretold in Scripture (v. 26 note). In addition, the calling of people to repentance and remission of sin were foretold (v. 47). These are based on Christ's atoning work. See "The Mission of the Church in the World" at John 20:21.

The Ascension of Jesus

Jesus' ascension was His Father's act of withdrawing Him from His disciples' gaze upward (a sign of exaltation) into a cloud (a sign of God's presence, Acts 1:9–11). This act was not a form of space travel, but the next step following the Resurrection of Jesus' return from death to the height of glory. Jesus foretold the Ascension (John 6:62; 14:2, 12; 16:5, 10, 17, 28; 17:5; 20:17), and Luke described it (Luke 24:50–53; Acts 1:6–11). Paul celebrates it and affirms Christ's consequent lordship (Eph. 1:20; 4:8–10; Phil. 2:9–11; 1 Tim. 3:16), and Hebrews applies this truth for encouragement of the faint-hearted (Heb. 1:3; 4:14; 9:24). Jesus Christ is Lord of the universe, a source of enormous encouragement to all believers.

The Ascension was from one standpoint the restoration of the glory that the Son had before the Incarnation, from another the glorifying of human nature in a way that had never happened before, and from a third the start of a reign that had not existed in this form before. The Ascension establishes three facts:

1. Christ's personal ascendancy. Ascension means accession. To sit at the Father's right hand is to occupy the position of ruler on God's behalf (Matt. 28:18; 1 Cor. 15:27; Eph. 1:20–22; 1 Pet. 3:22).

2. Christ's spiritual omnipresence. In the heavenly sanctuary of the heavenly Zion (Heb. 9:24; 12:22–24), Jesus is accessible to all who invoke His name (Heb. 4:14), and powerful to help them, anywhere in the world (Heb. 4:16; 7:25; 13:6–8).

3. Christ's heavenly ministry. The reigning Lord intercedes for His people (Rom. 8:34; Heb. 7:25). Though requesting from the Father is part of what He does (John 14:16), the essence of Christ's intercession is intervention in our interest rather than supplication on our behalf (as if His position were one of sympathy without status or authority). In sovereignty He now lavishes upon us the benefits that His suffering won for us. From His throne He sends the Holy Spirit constantly to enrich His people (John 16:7–14; Acts 2:33) and equip them for service (Eph. 4:8–12). □

■ 24:50 Luke gives no time indication here, but later he states that the Ascension took place forty days after the Resurrection (Acts 1:3).

Bethany. A village on the Mount of Olives about two miles east of Jerusalem (John 11:18).

■ 24:51 He was parted from them. Luke's account of the Ascension is a brief but fitting conclusion to his Gospel, which is an account of "all that Jesus began both to do and teach, until the day in which He was taken up" (Acts 1:1, 2). Luke provides a more detailed ascension account at the beginning of his second book (Acts 1:9–11). The Ascension marks the end of the work Jesus came to do on earth and the beginning of what He continues to do in and through the church. See theological note "The Ascension of Jesus."

■ 24:52 they worshiped Him. Whatever their view of Jesus in earlier days, they now recognized His divinity and worshiped Him. The separation did not bring sadness, but "great joy."

■ 24:53 The Gospel ends as it began, in Jerusalem with the worship of God.

The Gospel According to

JOHN

Author

The author of this Gospel was almost certainly a Jew. He displays an intimate knowledge of Jewish customs, festivals, and beliefs. His detailed geographical knowledge suggests that he was a native of Palestine, and it appears that he was an eyewitness of many of the events recorded in his Gospel (19:35).

Although the work is anonymous, it contains some hints about its authorship. This is the only Gospel that refers to one of the apostles with the expression the disciple "whom Jesus loved" (13:23) rather than by name. This disciple is the one identified as the eyewitness who "testifies of these things, and wrote these things" (21:24). Moreover, any careful reader would notice that John, son of Zebedee, who was one of the most prominent disciples, is not mentioned by name in the Gospel. It is difficult to explain this omission unless one assumes that the Gospel was written by John and that he refrained from identifying himself.

Early church tradition, such as the writings of Irenaeus in the second century, consistently and explicitly attributes this Gospel to the apostle John. Modern doubts about the reliability of that tradition have led many scholars to reject John's authorship of the book, but no other view gives as satisfactory an account of the facts.

Date and Occasion

Early church tradition suggests that John wrote the Gospel toward the end of his life, around A.D. 90. Some scholars of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, having abandoned authorship by John, argued that the Gospel was as late as the middle of the second century. The discoveries of the Rylands papyrus (a manuscript fragment dated to about A.D. 125, containing a few lines from John 18) and of the Dead Sea Scrolls (which improved our understanding of Palestine in the first century) have led most scholars to return to the Gospel's traditional date. Some specialists have gone further and dated it before A.D. 70.

The author himself describes his purpose for writing: "that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in His name" (20:31).

Interpretive Difficulties

A special challenge to interpreters of John's Gospel is the relation between seeing "signs" and belief. The author places great emphasis on the unique significance of Jesus' miracles because they reveal much about His Person and work (20:30, 31). But some passages seem to suggest that belief based solely upon having personally seen the signs is not a good thing. In 4:48, for instance, Jesus rebukes His hearers, "Unless you people see signs and wonders, you will by no means believe." This passage brings to mind the statement of Thomas in 20:25, "Unless I see . . . I will not believe." Therefore, many readers have concluded that an ideal faith has no interest in miracles. The problem with this conclusion is twofold. First, if faith resulting from miracles is not good, why does Jesus perform miracles? Second, why does John link these signs to faith in Christ (20:31)?

To believe in Jesus means not only to acknowledge His ability to perform miracles, but also to accept what those miracles as "signs" reveal about His Person and work. The evangelist indicates that the written record of Jesus' signs is sufficient testimony for those who are not eyewitnesses. This understanding is implied by what Jesus said to Thomas, "Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed" (20:29). Paul's formulation gives a similar relation between faith and sight: "we walk by faith, not by sight" (2 Cor. 5:7; cf. Rom. 8:24, 25).

Faith can be produced and encouraged by the signs Jesus performed. But the goal of this faith is to apprehend Jesus in His fullness, not merely as a miracle worker. Jesus is revealed by His "signs" as the eternal Word of God, one in glory with the Father and the Spirit. It is not necessary to be an eyewitness of the signs; the record of them is sufficient to convey their power for eliciting and strengthening faith in Jesus as the Messiah, the Son of God.

Characteristics and Themes

The teachings of Jesus recorded in John tend to be lengthy discussions of a single topic, in contrast to the pithy, proverb-like sayings usually found in the other three Gospels. The teaching material is often embedded in conversations, as Jesus interacts with individual people or groups in discussion. There are almost no parables in this Gospel.

Jesus' interaction with those who did not receive Him although they were "His own" (1:11) is an important focus of the public ministry (chs. 1—12). Jesus appears often in Jerusalem at the time of the Jewish feasts. These feasts have special importance because of the way Jesus relates His own work to what the feasts signify (7:37–39). Despite this ministry, His nation did not receive Him, a fact that John explains as the result of human sin. Jesus is rejected, not because He is a stranger, but because people love darkness rather than light.

The Gospel of John makes use of sharp contrasts: light and darkness (1:4–9), love and hatred (15:17, 18), from above and from below (8:23), life and death (6:57, 58), truth and falsehood (8:32–47). Other distinctive features are the theme of misunderstanding (2:21; 6:51–58 and notes), the use of twofold or double meanings (3:14; 6:62 and notes), and the role of the "I am" sayings (6:35 note).

John highlights the reality of sin in various ways, but especially by emphasizing our total dependence on God for salvation. Just as our physical birth was not the result of our own effort or will, so our spiritual birth is not due to us, but to God's will and the power of His Spirit (1:12, 13; 3:5–8). Sinful men and women are unable to come to Jesus for salvation unless they are drawn by the Father (6:44). But when they come to Jesus, they have "everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment" (5:24); they belong to the Father, and He will not let them die (10:27–29).

One of the most striking distinctives of this Gospel is the Prologue (1:1–18) that presents Jesus as the eternal Logos, or Word, the One who reveals the Father. Christ reveals the Father because He shares in the Father's deity. He is the One who made the universe (1:3). He met the needs of the Israelites in the wilderness, and now He provides spiritual water and bread (4:13, 14; 6:35). In short, He is one with the Father, the "I AM" (5:18; 8:58; 10:30–33; cf. Ex. 3:14). □

The Eternal Word

IN the beginning [a]was the Word, and the [b]Word was [c]with God, and the Word was [d]God. 2 [e]He was in the beginning with God. 3 [f]All things were made through Him, and without Him nothing was made that was made. 4 [g]In Him was life, and [h]the life was the light of men. 5 And [i]the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not [j]comprehend it.

■ 1:1–18 This "Prologue" to the Gospel is a preface to the narrative beginning at v. 19.

■ 1:1 the Word. The term "Word" (Greek logos) designates God the Son with respect to His deity; "Jesus" and "Christ" refer to His incarnation and saving work. During the first three centuries, doctrines of the Person of Christ focused intensely on His position as the Logos. In Greek philosophy, the Logos was "reason" or "logic" as an abstract force that brought order and harmony to the universe. But in John's writings such qualities of the Logos are gathered in the Person of Christ. In Neo-Platonic philosophy and the Gnostic heresy (second and third centuries A.D.), the Logos was seen as one of many intermediate powers between God and the world. Such notions are far removed from the simplicity of John's Gospel.

In this verse the Word is expressly affirmed to be God. The Word existed already "in the beginning" (a clear reference to the opening words of the Bible), which is a way of denoting the eternity that is unique to God. John states clearly, "the Word was God." Some have observed that the word translated "God" here has no definite article, and argued on this basis that it means "a god" rather than "God." This is a misunderstanding; the article is omitted because of the word order in the Greek sentence (the predicate "God" has been placed first for emphasis). The New Testament never endorses the idea of "a god," an expression that implies polytheism and is in sharp conflict with the consistent monotheism of the Bible. In the New Testament, the Greek word for "God" occurs often without the definite article, depending on the requirements of Greek grammar.

That "the Word was with God," indicates a distinction of Persons within the unity of the Godhead. Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are not successive forms of appearance of one Person, but are eternal Persons present from "the beginning" (v. 2). "With" suggests a relationship of close personal intimacy. See "One and Three: The Trinity" at Is. 44:6.

■ 1:3 All things were made through Him. This verse also emphasizes the deity of the Word, since creation belongs to God alone. See also v. 10; Col. 1:16–17; "God the Creator" at Ps. 148:5.

■ 1:4 In Him was life. Another affirmation of deity: the Son as well as the Father has "life in Himself" (5:26).

■ 1:5 did not comprehend it. See text note. It is characteristic of the style of this Gospel to emphasize contrasting concepts (see Introduction). The plot of this Gospel could be seen in terms of a struggle between the forces of faith and unbelief.

■ 1:7, 9 all . . . every man. The universal relevance of the gospel is asserted (v. 7) as well as the enlightening activity of God's common grace (v. 9). God's saving activity is not restricted to any particular people.

■ 1:9 the true Light. In this Gospel, "truth" and "true" are often employed to signify what is everlasting or heavenly, as opposed to the merely temporal or earthly. See notes on 4:24; 6:32; "Mankind's Guilty Knowledge of God" at Rom. 1:19.

■ 1:11 did not receive Him. Jesus' public ministry was one of rejection by "His own people" (see text notes).

■ 1:12 See text note. Fallen human beings are not children of God by nature; this is the privilege only of those who have faith, a faith generated in them by the sovereign action of God (v. 13). See "Adoption" at Gal. 4:5.

Him, to them He gave the [5]right to become children of God, to those who believe in His name:
13 [r]who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

The Word Becomes Flesh

14 [s]And the Word [t]became [u]flesh and dwelt among us, and [v]we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, [w]full of grace and truth.

15 [x]John bore witness of Him and cried out, saying, "This was He of whom I said, [y]'He who comes after me [6]is preferred before me, [z]for He was before me.' "

16 [7]And of His [a]fullness we have all received, and grace for grace. 17 For [b]the law was given through Moses, but [c]grace and [d]truth came through Jesus Christ. 18 [e]No one has seen God at any time. [f]The only begotten [g]Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He has declared Him.

A Voice in the Wilderness

19 Now this is [g]the testimony of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, "Who are you?"

20 [h]He confessed, and did not deny, but confessed, "I am not the Christ."

21 And they asked him, "What then? Are you Elijah?"

He said, "I am not."

"Are you [i]the Prophet?"

And he answered, "No."

22 Then they said to him, "Who are you, that we may give an answer to those who sent us? What do you say about yourself?"

23 He said: [j]"I am

> "Make straight the way of the LORD,"'

as the prophet Isaiah said."

24 Now those who were sent were from the Pharisees. 25 And they asked him, saying, "Why then do you baptize if you are not the Christ, nor Elijah, nor the Prophet?"

26 John answered them, saying, [l]"I baptize with water, [m]but there stands One among you

■ 1:13 who were born. Early Latin versions understood this to describe the virgin birth of Christ. However, the plural verb "were born" shows that this verse is about the new birth of Christian believers (cf. 3:3, 5, 7, 8). This new birth takes place by the action of the Spirit giving life to those who were "dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1). The new birth, often called "regeneration," is explained more fully in 3:1–21. Paul uses the metaphor of a resurrection from death in sin rather than the image of rebirth (Rom. 6:4–6; Eph. 2:5, 6; Col. 2:13; 3:1; cf. John 5:24). God's work of salvation is wholly sovereign and gracious, but the reality of the human response in believing and receiving is never cancelled. See "Election and Reprobation" at Rom. 9:18.

■ 1:14 the Word became flesh. This is the climactic assertion of the Prologue. To some of John's contemporaries, spirit and the divine were utterly opposed to matter and flesh. To others, the gods were thought to visit the earth disguised as human beings (Acts 14:11). But here a chasm is bridged: the eternal Word of God did not merely appear to be a human being, but actually became flesh. He took to Himself a full and genuine human nature. See theological note "Jesus Christ, God and Man."

dwelt among us. "Dwelt" means "pitched His tent." This not only indicates the temporary nature of Jesus' earthly existence, but does so in a way that recalls ancient Israel's tabernacle, where God could be found (Ex. 40:34, 35).

we beheld His glory. His "glory" is beheld, even as God's was in the wilderness (Ex. 16:1–10; 33:18–23), in the tabernacle (Ex. 40:34–35), and later in the temple (1 Kin. 8:1–11). There may also be a reference to the Transfiguration, since John witnessed it (Matt. 17:1–5). "Glory" applies supremely to God, who is the Creator and Ruler of the universe, and before whom all knees must bow. The Son has the divine glory by right (17:5). The Reformers declared their faith with the motto, Soli Deo Gloria ("To God alone the glory").

the only begotten. This phrase translates a single Greek word and explicitly points to the eternal generation of the Son in the Trinity. Another possibility is to translate "only Son," without the idea of begetting, but referring to the uniqueness of the Son.

full of grace and truth. These words correspond to Old Testament terms describing God's covenant mercy that are often translated "mercy and truth" (Gen. 24:27; Ps. 25:10; Prov. 16:6; cf. Ex. 34:6; Ps. 26:3). The Word made flesh fully manifests the gracious covenant-making and covenant-keeping character of God.

■ 1:15 John the Baptist's ministry preceded the public ministry of Jesus (Matt. 3), yet the Word, being eternal, existed before John (cf. 8:58).

■ 1:16 grace. This word, frequent in Paul's epistles, appears in John's writings only in this passage and as a customary greeting in Rev. 1:4; 22:21. It emphasizes that salvation is a gift. The Reformation expressed this with the motto Sola Gratia ("by grace alone").

■ 1:17 Moses . . . Jesus Christ. There is both contrast and comparison. Grace and truth truly existed in Moses' day, but they were fully revealed in the coming of Christ.

■ 1:18 No one has seen God. It is fundamental that God is invisible and without form (1 Tim. 6:16). Yet Christ reveals God. He brings the invisible and the visible together in a way that has no parallel or analogy.

■ 1:19 testimony of John. John the Baptist's testimony to those who question him reveals that his role was to prepare the world for Christ.

■ 1:21 Are you Elijah. In Matt. 11:14 Jesus, clearly referring to Mal. 4:5, tells the crowd that John is "Elijah who is to come." John comes in the "spirit and power of Elijah" (Luke 1:17), but the Baptist here affirms that he is not Elijah himself.

the Prophet. There were different expectations among first-century Jews concerning the "Prophet like me" that Moses announced in Deut. 18:15. Here the priests and Levites want to know whether John considers himself to be this Prophet.

■ 1:23 In quoting Is. 40:3, John applies to Christ what is said of Yahweh in that passage. The same truth appears even more clearly in Mark 1:1–3.

Jesus Christ, God and Man

Trinity and Incarnation belong together. The doctrine of the Trinity declares that Christ is truly divine; the doctrine of the Incarnation declares that the same Christ is also fully human. Together they proclaim the full reality of the Savior revealed in the New Testament, the Son who came from the Father's side at the Father's will to become the sinner's substitute on the cross (Matt. 20:28; 26:36–46; John 1:29; 3:13–17; Rom. 5:8; 8:32; 2 Cor. 5:19–21; 8:9; Phil. 2:5–8).

The doctrine of the Trinity was defined at the Council of Nicaea (A.D. 325), when the church countered the Arian idea that Jesus was God's first and noblest creature by affirming that He was of the same "substance" or "essence" as the Father. The distinction between Father and Son is within the divine unity, so that the Son is God in the same sense as the Father is. In saying that Son and Father are "of one substance," and that the Son is "begotten, not made" (echoing "only begotten," John 1:14, 18; 3:16, 18), the Nicene Creed unequivocally recognized the deity of Jesus Christ.

The church's confession of the doctrine of the Incarnation was expressed at the Council of Chalcedon (A.D. 451), where the church countered both the Nestorian idea that Jesus was two "persons," not one, and the Eutychian idea that Jesus' divinity had swallowed up His humanity. Rejecting both, the Council affirmed that Jesus is one person in two natures (that is, with two sets of capacities for experience, expression, and action). The two natures are united in Him without mixture, confusion, separation, or division, and each nature retains its own attributes. In other words, all that is in us, as well as all that is in God, is and always will be truly and distinguishably present in the one Christ. Thus the Chalcedonian formula strongly affirms the full humanity of the Lord.

The Incarnation, the mysterious miracle at the heart of historic Christianity, is central in the New Testament witness. Jesus came first to the Jews, whose central affirmation of faith is that there is only one God. The apostles were Israelites, yet they and the writers of the New Testament taught that Jesus the Messiah should be worshiped and trusted. This is to say that He is God no less than He is man. It is amazing that this testimony could prevail among them.

John's Gospel opens its eye-witness narratives (John 1:14; 19:35; 21:24) with the declaration that Jesus is the eternal divine Logos, agent of creation and source of life and light (vv. 1–5, 9). Through becoming "flesh," the Logos was revealed as the Son of God and the source of "grace and truth," "the only begotten of the Father" (vv. 14, 18). The Gospel is punctuated with "I am" statements that have special significance because "I am" was used as a divine name on account of the Greek translation of Ex. 3:14; when John reveals Jesus as the "I am," the claim to deity is explicit. Examples of this are John 8:28, 58, and the seven declarations of Jesus as (a) the bread of life, giving spiritual food (6:35, 48, 51); (b) the light of the world, banishing darkness (8:12; 9:5); (c) the door for the sheep, giving access to God (10:7, 9); (d) the good shepherd, protecting from peril (10:11, 14); (e) the resurrection and life, overcoming death (11:25); (f) the way, truth, and life, guiding to the Father (14:6); (g) the true vine, nurturing for fruitfulness (15:1, 5). Climactically, Thomas worships Jesus as "My Lord and my God" (20:28). Jesus pronounces His blessing on all who share Thomas's faith (20:29–31).

Paul says about Jesus that "in Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. 2:9; cf. 1:19). Paul hails Jesus the Son as the Father's image and as His agent in creating and upholding everything (Col. 1:15–17). Paul declares Him to be "Lord," to whom one must pray for salvation just as one calls on Yahweh (Joel 2:32; Rom. 10:9–13). Jesus is "God over all" (Rom. 9:5), our "God and Savior" (Titus 2:13). Paul prays to Him personally (2 Cor. 12:8, 9), and looks to Him as a source of divine grace (2 Cor. 13:14). The testimony is explicit: faith in Jesus' deity is basic to Paul's theology and religion.

The writer to the Hebrews, revealing the perfection of Christ's high priesthood, declares the full deity and unique dignity of the Son of God (Heb. 1:3, 6, 8–12). He then celebrates Christ's full humanity (ch. 2). The high priesthood that he describes Christ as exercising depends on the conjunction of an endless, unfailing divine life with a full human experience of temptation and suffering (Heb. 2:14–17; 4:14—5:2; 7:13–28; 12:2, 3). The New Testament forbids worship of angels (Col. 2:18; Rev. 22:8, 9), but commands worship of Jesus. Outspokenly it presents the divine-human Savior as the proper object of faith, hope, and love. A religion without this emphasis cannot be Christianity. □ whom you do not know. 27 [n]It is He who, coming after me, [o]is preferred before me, whose sandal strap I am not worthy to loose."

28 These things were done [p]in [q]Bethabara beyond the Jordan, where John was baptizing.

The Lamb of God

29 The next day John saw Jesus coming toward him, and said, "Behold! [r]The Lamb of God [s]who takes away the sin of the world! 30 This is He of whom I said, 'After me comes a Man who [t]is preferred before me, for He was before me.' 31 I did not know Him; but that He should be revealed to Israel, [u]therefore I came baptizing with water."

32 [v]And John bore witness, saying, "I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and He remained upon Him. 33 I did not know Him, but He who sent me to baptize with water said to me, 'Upon whom you see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him, [w]this is He who baptizes with the Holy Spirit.' 34 And I have seen and testified that this is the [x]Son of God."

The First Disciples

35 Again, the next day, John stood with two of his disciples. 36 And looking at Jesus as He walked, he said, [y]"Behold the Lamb of God!"

37 The two disciples heard him speak, and they [z]followed Jesus. 38 Then Jesus turned, and seeing them following, said to them, "What do you seek?"

They said to Him, "Rabbi" (which is to say, when translated, Teacher), "where are You staying?"

39 He said to them, "Come and see." They came and saw where He was staying, and remained with Him that day (now it was about the tenth hour).

who takes away the sin of the world. The "world" designates humanity in its hostility to God, as elsewhere in this Gospel. Although not all persons without exception will be saved, the sacrifice is the only atonement for human sin, and its effectiveness is not limited by time or place (3:16 note).

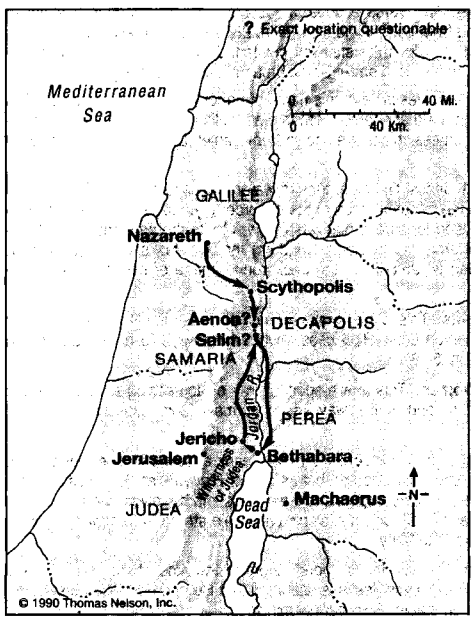
■ 1:31 I did not know Him. Though John the Baptist may have had previous personal contact with Jesus (cf. Luke 1:39–45), he did not know who Jesus was (the Lamb and Son of God) until the Spirit identified Him (v. 32). See "The Baptism of Jesus" at Mark 1:9.

■ 1:33 who baptizes with the Holy Spirit. The Old Testament anticipated the time of redemption as the time when the Spirit would be poured out on God's people. Paul refers to Jesus as the second Adam who became "a life-giving spirit," (1 Cor. 15:45 note). It is after Jesus returns to heaven that He sends this heavenly Helper to dwell with His people on earth (14:26; 16:7). The baptism of the Holy Spirit occurs with the new birth that constitutes helpless sinners as sons and daughters of God (vv. 12, 13; 1 Cor. 12:13). This baptism also empowers them for Christian service (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:8).

■ 1:34 this is the Son of God. This is John's way of reporting the heavenly voice that accompanied the heaven-sent Spirit, as recorded in Matt. 3:17, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." While "son of God" was used variously by Jews (2 Sam. 7:14; Ps. 2:7) and Gentiles (Mark 15:39 note), the Baptist's witness, that of the last of the prophets of the old order (Matt. 11:11–14) is clear. Jesus is the Son of God, the "only begotten of the Father" (v. 14).

■ 1:35–51 Jesus calls His first disciples. Since the apostles had unique authority from Christ to bear witness, the witness on which the church would be established (Eph. 2:20), it was necessary that they be particularly identified as having been selected by Christ Himself (cf. 15:16).

■ 1:37 they followed. Traditionally, the students of a Jewish rabbi walked behind him. Jesus' disciples followed Him physically, but more is in view. Following Jesus takes on deeper levels of meaning throughout this Gospel (13:36–38; cf. 21:15–22).



Baptism and Temptation. Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee to be baptized by John the Baptist. Though John had been baptizing in the Jordan River near Aenon and Salim (John 3:23), the exact location of Jesus' baptism is uncertain. Immediately after, Jesus was led by the Holy Spirit into the wilderness of Judea below Jericho. Following His temptation there, Jesus returned to Galilee.

brother. 41 He first found his own brother Simon, and said to him, "We have found the [3]Messiah" (which is translated, the Christ). 42 And he brought him to Jesus.

Now when Jesus looked at him, He said, "You are Simon the son of [4]Jonah. [y]You shall be called Cephas" (which is translated, [5]A Stone).

Philip and Nathanael

43 The following day Jesus wanted to go to Galilee, and He found [z]Philip and said to him, "Follow Me." 44 Now [a]Philip was from Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. 45 Philip found [b]Nathanael and said to him, "We have found Him of whom [c]Moses in the law, and also the [d]prophets, wrote—Jesus [e]of Nazareth, the [f]son of Joseph."

46 And Nathanael said to him, [g]"Can anything good come out of Nazareth?"

Philip said to him, "Come and see."

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming toward Him, and said of him, "Behold, [h]an Israelite indeed, in whom is no deceit!"

48 Nathanael said to Him, "How do You know me?"

Jesus answered and said to him, "Before Philip called you, when you were under the fig tree, I saw you."

49 Nathanael answered and said to Him, "Rabbi, [i]You are the Son of God! You are [j]the King of Israel!"

50 Jesus answered and said to him, "Because I said to you, 'I saw you under the fig tree,' do you believe? You will see greater things than these." 51 And He said to him, "Most assuredly, I say to you, [k]hereafter[6] you shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man."

Water Turned to Wine

2 On the third day there was a [a]wedding in [b]Cana of Galilee, and the [c]mother of Jesus was there. 2 Now both Jesus and His disciples were invited to the wedding. 3 And when they ran out of wine, the mother of Jesus said to Him, "They have no wine."

4 Jesus said to her, [d]"Woman, [e]what does your concern have to do with Me? [f]My hour has not yet come."

5 His mother said to the servants, "Whatever He says to you, do it."

4 [d]John 19:26 [e]2 Sam. 16:10 [f]John 7:6, 8, 30; 8:20

■ 1:45 of whom Moses . . . the prophets, wrote. Philip recognizes that all the Old Testament, both Law and Prophets, anticipated a great redemptive work of God to be accomplished by a special anointed One. The Old Testament anticipation of Christ and His work was affirmed by Christ Himself (Luke 24:25–27, 44–47) and was central in the preaching of the apostles (Acts 2:29–32; 3:18, 21, 24; 7:52, 53; 8:30–35; 26:22, 23; 28:23).

the son of Joseph. This does not imply a denial of the virgin birth, of which Philip may not in any case have been aware; it is simply a reference identifying Jesus by His town and family (Matt. 1:24).

■ 1:46 Can anything good come out of Nazareth. Nathanael apparently expresses contemporary skepticism that a prophet could arise from Galilee (7:52). Nazareth was an insignificant village, not mentioned in the Old Testament or other Jewish literature of the time.

■ 1:47 an Israelite indeed. The phrase is probably meant to call to mind Israel as the people of God, to whom the Messiah was promised. This phrase also alludes to vv. 50, 51, where Nathanael is promised an experience similar to that of the first person named Israel (Gen. 28:12; 32:28), whose deceitful character was transformed by God.

■ 1:49 Rabbi, You are the Son of God. Nathanael's confession may seem like an overreaction to Jesus' supernatural knowledge. But Philip had already indicated to Nathanael that Jesus was the One anticipated by the Law and the Prophets (v. 45). Nathanael comes to Jesus looking for reasons to believe or disbelieve, and he finds Jesus' knowledge convincing.

King of Israel. This is a title for the Messiah, used in shouts of praise at the Triumphal Entry (12:13), similar to the announcement of the wise men (Matt. 2:2) and to the inscription on the cross (19:19).

■ 1:50 greater things than these. Jesus' earthly miracles are signs of His redemptive power and work. The miracles are to be appreciated, not merely for themselves, but for the redemptive realities they promise. Greater than such works is the salvation Christ brings (v. 51).

■ 1:51 heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending. This verse alludes to Jacob's vision of a ladder or stairway stretching from earth to heaven (Gen. 28:12). Jesus presents Himself as the reality to which the stairway pointed. Jacob saw in a dream the reunion of heaven and earth; Christ brought it about in reality.

Son of Man. Jesus uses this name often for Himself. It emphasizes His human nature that enabled Him to die for His people. It also refers to the heavenly, messianic figure known from Daniel (Dan. 7:13; see Matt. 8:20 note).

■ 2:1–11 Jesus' first sign: turning water into wine at Cana. This miracle signifies the transformation of the old order (symbolized by the stone water jars used for ceremonial washing, v. 6) into the new (the wine standing for eternal life in God's kingdom) through Jesus Christ (cf. 2 Cor. 5:17). See Is. 25:6–9 for the background image of salvation as a banquet.

■ 2:3 wine. This is the normal term employed in the New Testament for the fermented drink. Paul uses it when he says, "Do not be drunk with wine" (Eph. 5:18).

■ 2:4 Woman. This is a respectful way of addressing a woman within that culture and is the way Jesus normally addresses women (4:21; 8:10).

what does your concern . . . Me. Jesus answers Mary's request, not because she is His mother, but as part of His work as the Messiah. This indicates that Mary's special role as Jesus' mother gives her no authority to intervene in Christ's messianic career—a strong argument against offering prayer to Mary.

My hour. Usually Jesus' "hour" refers to the time of His suffering and death (12:27). Here Jesus is asserting that He and not Mary must determine the timetable of His earthly ministry.

[6] Now there were set there six waterpots of stone, [g]according to the manner of purification of the Jews, containing twenty or thirty gallons apiece. [7] Jesus said to them, "Fill the waterpots with water." And they filled them up to the brim. [8] And He said to them, "Draw some out now, and take it to the master of the feast." And they took it. [9] When the master of the feast had tasted [h]the water that was made wine, and did not know where it came from (but the servants who had drawn the water knew), the master of the feast called the bridegroom. [10] And he said to him, "Every man at the beginning sets out the good wine, and when the guests have well drunk, then the inferior. You have kept the good wine until now!"

[11] This [i]beginning of signs Jesus did in Cana of Galilee, [j]and [l]manifested His glory; and His disciples believed in Him.

[12] After this He went down to [k]Capernaum, He, His mother, [l]His brothers, and His disciples; and they did not stay there many days.

Jesus Cleanses the Temple

[13] [m]Now the Passover of the Jews was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. [14] [n]And He found in the temple those who sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the money changers [2]doing business. [15] When He had made a whip of cords, He drove them all out of the temple, with the sheep and the oxen, and poured out the changers' money and overturned the tables. [16] And He said to those who sold doves, "Take these things away! Do not make [o]My Father's house a house of merchandise!" [17] Then His disciples remembered that it was written, [p]"Zeal for Your house [3]has eaten Me up."

[18] So the Jews answered and said to Him, [q]"What sign do You show to us, since You do these things?"

[19] Jesus answered and said to them, [r]"Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up."

[20] Then the Jews said, "It has taken forty-six years to build this temple, and will You raise it up in three days?"

[21] But He was speaking [s]of the temple of His body. [22] Therefore, when He had risen from the dead, [t]His disciples remembered that He had said this [4]to them; and they believed the Scripture and the word which Jesus had said.

The Discerner of Hearts

[23] Now when He was in Jerusalem at the Passover, during the feast, many believed in His name when they saw the [u]signs which He did. [24] But Jesus did not commit Himself to them, be-and His disciples believed in Him. See also v. 23 and 20:31, where John's purpose for writing the book is disclosed.

■ 2:12–23 Jesus is the final and full expression of what was only a shadow in the Old Testament (Heb. 10:1). Here He indicates that God is present in Him. The temple in Jerusalem could be destroyed, but not the temple that Jesus would rebuild in three days, His own body that was to be raised from the dead. John's record of the temple cleansing immediately after the miracle at Cana (vv. 1–11 note) offers an important key to the whole of Jesus' ministry. In these events are signaled replacement of the old order (water of ceremonial cleansing, Herod's temple) with the new (the wine of salvation, Is. 25:6–9; the risen Lamb as the new temple, Rev. 21:22).

Matthew, Mark, and Luke report a cleansing of the temple in the week of Jesus' crucifixion. In spite of some similarities, these are best viewed as different incidents (Mark 11:15 note). It is noteworthy that Jesus' statement about destroying the temple, which John alone records (v. 19), probably was the basis for the accusation by the false witnesses (Matt. 26:61; Mark 14:58), and again for the taunting comment of some spectators at the crucifixion (Matt. 27:40; Mark 15:29). The first three Gospels confirm the historical character of John's narrative. An echo of the same thought is found in the accusation against Stephen (Acts 6:14).

■ 2:12 His brothers. See Matt. 12:46.

■ 2:15 a whip of cords. Jesus fulfills the prophecy of Mal. 3:1–4. He comes suddenly to the temple and purifies the sons of Levi, as a demonstration of His zeal for God and for keeping God's ordinances holy.

■ 2:20 forty-six years. The sentence itself does not indicate whether the temple was finished or was still under construction after these years of building. The first century Jewish historian Josephus (Antiquities, 15.380) says that the temple was begun in the eighteenth year of Herod the Great (around 19 B.C.) and was not completed until the reign of Herod Agrippa (A.D. 63), indicating that construction was still continuing in Jesus' time.

will You raise it up in three days. The Jews (and the disciples, v. 22) misunderstand Jesus' ambiguous statement. Such initial misunderstanding is common in John's Gospel (e.g., 3:4; 6:52). Those who "receive" Jesus (1:12) are led on to full understanding, but those who reject Him remain at the level of complete misunderstanding (1:5).

■ 2:22 His disciples remembered. During His final instruction of the disciples before His arrest, Jesus promised that what He had taught them would be brought to their remembrance by the Holy Spirit (14:25, 26). The ability to predict events otherwise unknowable is evidence of divine authority. This applies to the prophecies of the Old Testament and to the predictions made by Jesus, especially about His resurrection.

■ 2:23 believed in His name. In biblical times the "name" summed up a person's character, activity, and place in God's purpose. The faith of those mentioned here remained superficial, however, because they came to it only because "they saw the signs" (see Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties). For that reason, Jesus "did not commit Himself to them" (v. 24).

■ 2:24, 25 Although Jesus did not exercise divine omniscience in the days of His flesh (11:34; Mark 13:32), He often displayed supernatural knowledge, important for His redemptive work, that indicated the divine endorsement of His claims and mission (1:48; Matt. 9:4; 17:27; Mark 11:2–4; 14:13–16).

3 Jesus answered and said to him, "Most assuredly, I say to you, dunless one is born fagain, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Regeneration: The New Birth

Regeneration is the act of God alone, in which He renews the human heart, making it alive when it was dead. In regeneration, God acts at the origin and deepest point of the human person. This means that there is no preparation, no preceding disposition in a sinner that requests or contributes to the new life given by God.

Regeneration is necessary because all descendants of Adam and Eve have inherited their sin and are morally unable to do what is good. Paul wrote to the Ephesians that people are by nature dead in trespasses and sins. In this state, they are without God and without hope in the world. Not in response to their merit, but freely and in love, God speaks the word that raises the dead.

The classic verses of John 3 that use the language of being "born again" or being "born from above" give the outlines of regeneration their sharpest edge. Jesus says that unless you are born again, you cannot see the kingdom of heaven. Without the grace of God, sinners cannot find the door, let alone force their way in. Elsewhere Jesus said, "Without me, you can do nothing"; and in speaking about salvation, "Without God, nothing is possible."

Jesus showed surprise that Nicodemus was puzzled by the demand to be born again. Nicodemus should have understood from the Old Testament that he was a sinner, and in need of new life; and he must have known the prophets, who promised that God would remove their hearts of flesh and replace them with hearts ready to do God's will. God would raise the dead, give sight to the blind, and preach the good news to those who could not save themselves.

Regeneration is the gift of God's grace. It is the immediate, supernatural work of the Holy Spirit wrought in us. Its effect is to quicken us to spiritual life from spiritual death. It changes the disposition of our souls, inclining our hearts to God. The fruit of regeneration is faith. Regeneration precedes faith.

Infants can be born again, although the faith that they exercise cannot be as visible as that of adults. For many Christians, the moment that they were born again is clearly known; but for others, it may not be, especially if they received new life in childhood. We are responsible to know whether we are spiritually alive, not the time and place we were born again. □

■ 3:1–21 This is the first of many teaching discourses recorded by John. Typically on being asked a question, Jesus answers in a way that steers the discussion into a deeper realm, often through misunderstandings that are corrected for those becoming true disciples. The new understanding reveals Jesus more fully.

■ 3:2 by night. This might betray a fear of being seen, or it might be a sign of deference to Jesus, a rabbi who should not be distracted during the day. Understood symbolically, Nicodemus is a person living in the darkness of this world, who now encounters the light (8:12; cf. 9:4; 11:10; 13:30).

a teacher . . . from God. Nicodemus understands that God attests His messengers through giving them power to perform miracles, but this understanding falls far short of Jesus' true identity.

■ 3:3 born again. See text note. The translation "born from above" accords well with the discussion of "earthly" and "heavenly" things in v. 12, and the discussion of ascending and descending in v. 13. This is the meaning of the Greek adverb in other places in this Gospel (19:11, 23). Nicodemus apparently understood it to mean "a second time." It is possible that both meanings are intended—a new birth that is a birth from above. See theological note "Regeneration: The New Birth."

■ 3:5 born of water and the Spirit. Some suggest that the "water" is the release of fluid that accompanies physical birth, but linguistic considcannot enter the kingdom of God. 6 That which is born of the flesh is [f]flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. 7 Do not marvel that I said to you, 'You must be born again.' 8 [g]The wind blows where it wishes, and you hear the sound of it, but cannot tell where it comes from and where it goes. So is everyone who is born of the Spirit."

9 Nicodemus answered and said to him, [h]"How can these things be?"

10 Jesus answered and said to him, "Are you the teacher of Israel, and do not know these things? 11 [i]Most assuredly, I say to you, We speak what We know and testify what We have seen, and [j]you do not receive Our witness. 12 If I have told you earthly things and you do not believe, how will you believe if I tell you heavenly things? 13 [k]No one has ascended to heaven but He who came down from heaven, that is, the Son of Man [2]who is in heaven. 14 [l]And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so [m]must the Son of Man be lifted up, 15 that whoever [n]believes in Him should [3]not perish but [o]have eternal life. 16 [p]For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten [q]Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. 17 [r]For God did not send His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.

18 [s]"He who believes in Him is not condemned; but he who does not believe is condemned already, because he has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. 19 And this is the condemnation, [t]that the light has come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. 20 For [u]everyone practicing evil hates the light and does not come to the light, lest his deeds should be exposed. 21 But he who does the truth comes to the light, that his deeds may be clearly seen, that they have been [v]done in God."

John the Baptist Exalts Christ

22 After these things Jesus and His disciples came into the land of Judea, and there He remained with them [w]and baptized. 23 Now John also was baptizing in Aenon near [x]Salim, because there was much water there. erations pc to understanding "water" and "Spirit" as referring to a single spiritual birth. Many interpreters understand "water" here as the water of baptism, but such a reference, before Christian baptism was instituted, would have been meaningless to Nicodemus. Others find a reference to John's baptism, but Jesus nowhere makes John's baptism a requirement for salvation. Probably, the statement refers to Old Testament passages in which the terms "water" and "Spirit" are linked to express the pouring out of God's Spirit in the end times (Is. 32:15; 44:3; Ezek. 36:25–27). The presence of such rich Old Testament imagery accounts for Jesus' reproof of Nicodemus (v. 10): as a "teacher of Israel," he should have understood.

■ 3:6–8 This passage emphasizes the priority and sovereignty of God in the work of salvation. It does not exclude the reality of human response in repentance and faith.

■ 3:11 I say to you . . . you do not receive Our witness. The first "you" is singular (Nicodemus) and the second "you" is plural (you and those whom you represent).

■ 3:13 the Son of Man. See note at Matt. 8:20.

who is in heaven. It could be said that in His divine nature Christ continued to dwell "in heaven" even during His life on earth. The point is that He has authority to speak of heavenly things. Later in the Gospel, Jesus' origin "from heaven" becomes a chief matter of dispute (6:41, 42).

■ 3:14 Moses. Num. 21:4–9 records the story of the rebellious Israelites, who murmured and complained. God sent fiery serpents into their midst to punish them. Then God told Moses to put a bronze serpent on a pole, with the promise that whoever looked at it would live.

must . . . be lifted up. Here is a key term in this Gospel (8:28; 12:32, 34) which carries the double meaning of crucifixion and exaltation. Christ's death on the cross, His resurrection, and His glorification together reveal the glory of God. The word "must" points to God's sovereign purpose. The crucifixion was the keystone of God's eternal plan to save His people (Acts 4:27, 28).

■ 3:16 God so loved the world. Some have insisted that God sent Jesus to die for the purpose of bringing salvation to everyone without exception, but only as a possibility. However, Jesus makes clear that the salvation of those whom the Father "gives Me," and only those, is not a mere possibility but an absolute certainty; "and they come to Me" (6:37–40; 10:14–18; 17:9). The point made by "the world" is that Christ's saving work is not limited to one time or place but applies to the elect from all over the world. Those who do not receive the remedy God has provided in Christ will perish. It remains true that anyone who believes will not die (be separated from God) but live in God's presence forever. See "God Is Love: Divine Goodness and Faithfulness" at Ps. 136:1.

■ 3:17 to condemn the world. Jesus elsewhere says that judgment does attend His coming into the world (9:39). His point is not that He will not judge, but that the time is not ready. The world was already under threat of judgment before He came, but with His coming salvation became a reality offered to a hostile world (Matt. 23:37; Rom. 5:8).

■ 3:18 Unbelief is not the only basis for condemnation, but it constitutes the climax of rebellion by resisting even God's gracious offer of salvation in Christ. Jesus comes into a world that is already condemned because of its rejection of God's self-revelation (Rom. 1:18–32).

■ 3:19 men loved darkness rather than light. Jesus gives the reason for the world's rejection of Him: He is the light who exposes whether a person is righteous or not.

■ 3:21 he who does the truth comes to the light. Jesus speaks of "doing" the truth. This indicates that "truth" is a matter of both thought and practice. Living by the truth is contrasted with doing what is evil (v. 20).

■ 3:22–36 There are three sections here. In vv. 22–24 we are told that Jesus and His disciples went into Judea, where John was. In vv. 25–30 the Baptist affirms once more that his entire role is to prepare for Christ. Verses 31–36 appear to be a continuation of the Baptist's words, or possibly a comment by the Gospel writer.

■ 3:24 John . . . not yet . . . into prison. See Matt. 14:3–12; Mark 6:17–29.

tion. 26 And they came to John and said to him, "Rabbi, He who was with you beyond the Jordan, [a]to whom you have testified—behold, He is baptizing, and all [b]are coming to Him!"

27 John answered and said, [c]"A man can receive nothing unless it has been given to him from heaven. 28 You yourselves bear me witness, that I said, [d]'I am not the Christ,' but, [e]'I have been sent before Him.' 29 [f]He who has the bride is the bridegroom; but [g]the friend of the bridegroom, who stands and hears him, rejoices greatly because of the bridegroom's voice. Therefore this joy of mine is fulfilled. 30 [h]He must increase, but I must decrease. 31 [i]He who comes from above [j]is above all; [k]he who is of the earth is earthly and speaks of the earth. [l]He who comes from heaven is above all. 32 And [m]what He has seen and heard, that He testifies; and no one receives His testimony. 33 He who has received His testimony [n]has certified that God is true. 34 [o]For He whom God has sent speaks the words of God, for God does not give the Spirit [p]by measure. 35 [q]The Father loves the Son, and has given all things into His hand. 36 [r]He who believes in the Son has everlasting life; and he who does not believe the Son shall not see life, but the [s]wrath of God abides on him."

A Samaritan Woman Meets Her Messiah

4 Therefore, when the Lord knew that the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and [a]baptized more disciples than John 2 (though Jesus Himself did not baptize, but His disciples), 3 He left Judea and departed again to Galilee. 4 But He needed to go through Samaria.

5 So He came to a city of Samaria which is called Sychar, near the plot of ground that [b]Jacob [c]gave to his son Joseph. 6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied from His journey, sat thus by the well. It was about the sixth hour.

7 A woman of Samaria came to draw water. Jesus said to her, "Give Me a drink." 8 For His disciples had gone away into the city to buy food.

1 [a]John 3:22, 26

5 [b]Gen. 33:19 [c]Gen. 48:22

■ 3:26 baptizing. See "Baptism" at Rom. 6:3.

■ 3:27 A man can receive. God is the Author of all that we receive (1 Cor. 4:7).

■ 3:31 He who comes from above. Jesus is distinguished from all other humans who are "of the earth" (v. 13 note).

■ 3:32 no one receives His testimony. John repeats the idea of 1:10, 11, that neither His own nation nor the world at large was ready to receive Christ. The barrier is the sin and blindness that God alone can penetrate (v. 3; 1:5).

■ 3:33 He who has received. The world refused the light, but John immediately mentions those who are coming to the light, especially himself as the first exponent of the truth. John's preaching is the culmination of the Old Testament and the beginning of the New (1:15; Matt. 11:11).

■ 3:34 for God does not give the Spirit by measure. These words could certainly apply to the Spirit-empowered earthly ministry of Jesus (Luke 3:22; 4:1). But it is also possible that they refer to the fullness of the Spirit that Jesus gives to those who serve Him, and some ancient and modern commentators have understood the text this way. Later, Jesus is the agent who sends the Spirit (15:26).

■ 3:35 The Father loves the Son. See 5:20.

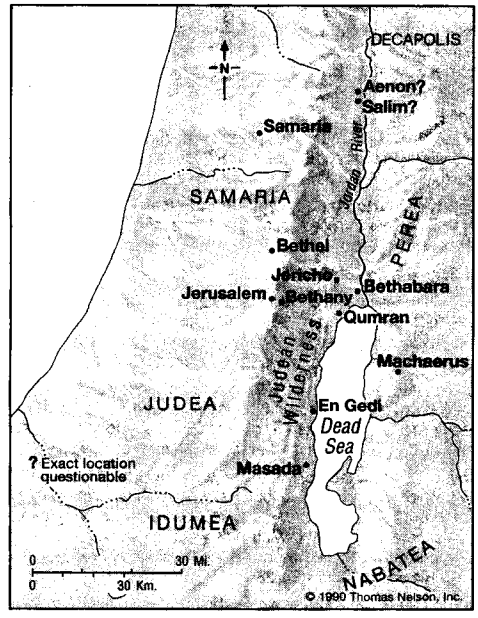
■ 4:1–42 The background of this incident is the profound contempt that the Jews and the Samaritans felt for each other (v. 9). Not surprisingly, the Samaritans responded with enmity toward the Jews. When traveling between Galilee and Judea, many Jews would cross the Jordan twice rather than pass through Samaria. Jesus did not follow this practice (Luke 9:52).

■ 4:6 wearied. Jesus experienced fatigue and even exhaustion by virtue of His human nature (Matt. 8:24). See "The Humanity of Jesus" at 2 John 7.

the sixth hour. Noon.

Region of John the Baptist. Little is known about John the Baptist's life until he appeared preaching in the Judean wilderness. He may have had some connection with the Essene groups, such as the Qumran community. He baptized in the Jordan River near Aenon and Salim (John 3:23), and also near an unidentified town called Bethabara (John 1:28). His preaching against Herod Antipas led to John's imprisonment at Machaerus.



9 Then the woman of Samaria said to Him, "How is it that You, being a Jew, ask a drink from me, a Samaritan woman?" For [d]Jews have no dealings with [e]Samaritans.

10 Jesus answered and said to her, "If you knew the [f]gift of God, and who it is who says to you, 'Give Me a drink,' you would have asked Him, and He would have given you [g]living water."

11 The woman said to Him, "Sir, You have nothing to draw with, and the well is deep. Where then do You get that living water? 12 Are You greater than our father Jacob, who gave us the well, and drank from it himself, as well as his sons and his livestock?"

13 Jesus answered and said to her, "Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again, 14 but [h]whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him [i]will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life."

15 [j]The woman said to Him, "Sir, give me this water, that I may not thirst, nor come here to draw."

16 Jesus said to her, "Go, call your husband, and come here."

17 The woman answered and said, "I have no husband."

Jesus said to her, "You have well said, 'I have no husband,' 18 for you have had five husbands, and the one whom you now have is not your husband; in that you spoke truly."

19 The woman said to Him, "Sir, [k]I perceive that You are a prophet. 20 Our fathers worshiped on [l]this mountain, and you Jews say that in [m]Jerusalem is the place where one ought to worship."

21 Jesus said to her, "Woman, believe Me, the hour is coming [n]when you will neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, worship the Father. 22 You worship [o]what you do not know; we know what we worship, for [p]salvation is of the Jews. 23 But the hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers will [q]worship the Father in [r]spirit [s]and truth; for the Father is seeking such to worship Him. 24 [t]God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth."

25 The woman said to Him, "I know that Messiah [u]is coming" (who is called Christ). "When He comes, [v]He will tell us all things."

26 Jesus said to her, [w]"I who speak to you am He."

The Whitened Harvest

27 And at this point His disciples came, and they marveled that He talked with a woman; yet no one said, "What do You seek?" or, "Why are You talking with her?"

28 The woman then left her waterpot, went her way into the city, and said to the men, 29 "Come, see a Man [x]who told me all things that I ever did. Could this be the Christ?" 30 Then they went out of the city and came to Him.

■ 4:9 Jews have no dealings with Samaritans. This phrase could also be translated, "Jews use nothing in common with Samaritans," referring to the legislation that forbade a Jew to eat or drink with Samaritans, who were more lax in their understanding of ritual cleanness. The surprise was not so much that Jesus would speak with a Samaritan, but that He would drink from a Samaritan vessel.

■ 4:10 the gift of God. This expression emphasizes that salvation is not earned but given (Eph. 2:8). Jesus Himself is the gift of God (3:16; Gal. 2:20; Eph. 5:25).

living water. In the Old Testament, living or running water was employed figuratively as a reference to divine activity (Jer. 2:13; Zech. 14:8). See also v. 14 and 7:37–39.

■ 4:11 Like the Jews and Nicodemus before her, the Samaritan woman misunderstands the key terms Jesus uses (v. 15; 2:19–21; 3:3–10).

■ 4:13 will thirst again. Jesus contrasts temporary with eternal satisfaction, teaching that all earthly pleasures, even if legitimate, are fading.

■ 4:14 "I shall give" expresses the divine origin of the blessing: "springing up" is its great abundance; "everlasting life" is its endless duration.

■ 4:18 you have had five husbands. Jesus' knowledge of the Samaritan woman's previous life is like His knowledge of Nathanael (1:48).

■ 4:20 Our fathers worshiped on this mountain. Some time after the northern kingdom fell to Assyria (721 B.C.), a split arose between the Jews in Jerusalem and the Israelites living in Samaria. These Samaritans later built a temple on Mount Gerizim, which was destroyed about 130 B.C. They continue to worship on Mount Gerizim even into modern times.

■ 4:23 the hour is coming, and now is. See 6:25. The time is soon coming when divisions between Jews and Samaritans will be removed (v. 21), and the temple worship will be superseded. The time "now is" because Jesus is present and has begun the work leading to the presence of the Holy Spirit in the church (7:39; 20:22).

■ 4:24 must worship in spirit and truth. "True" worship is contrasted with the worship regulated by the temporary provisions of the law, especially the separation of Jews and Gentiles and the requirement of temple worship at Jerusalem. The ceremonial and sacrificial aspects of the law were not false; they were temporary and provisional. Worship "in spirit" is worship in the Holy Spirit. He continues the work begun by Jesus (14:16–18; Acts 2:33). Prominent marks of the age of the Spirit are the removal of the barrier between Jews and Gentiles, and the ability of Christians to worship without the need for a temple of any kind.

■ 4:26 I . . . am He. This is the one occasion before His trial when Jesus is recorded designating Himself as the Messiah. Perhaps the political overtones associated with this title made it unwise for Jesus to use it often (cf. 6:14, 15).

■ 4:27 marveled. The disciples' attitude reflects both the contempt of the Jews for the Samaritans and the male chauvinism that regarded giving instruction to a woman as a waste of time.

■ 4:30 they went out. The witness of the woman was more effective than the visit of the twelve apostles.

31 In the meantime His disciples urged Him, saying, "Rabbi, eat."

32 But He said to them, "I have food to eat of which you do not know."

33 Therefore the disciples said to one another, "Has anyone brought Him anything to eat?"

34 Jesus said to them, [y]"My food is to do the will of Him who sent Me, and to [z]finish His work. 35 Do you not say, 'There are still four months and then comes [a]the harvest'? Behold, I say to you, lift up your eyes and look at the fields, [b]for they are already white for harvest! 36 [c]And he who reaps receives wages, and gathers fruit for eternal life, that [d]both he who sows and he who reaps may rejoice together. 37 For in this the saying is true: [e]'One sows and another reaps.' 38 I sent you to reap that for which you have not labored; [f]others have labored, and you have entered into their labors."

The Savior of the World

39 And many of the Samaritans of that city believed in Him [g]because of the word of the woman who testified, "He told me all that I ever did." 40 So when the Samaritans had come to Him, they urged Him to stay with them; and He stayed there two days. 41 And many more believed because of His own [h]word.

42 Then they said to the woman, "Now we believe, not because of what you said, for [i]we ourselves have heard Him and we know that this is indeed [j]the Christ, the Savior of the world."

Welcome at Galilee

43 Now after the two days He departed from there and went to Galilee. 44 For [l]Jesus Himself testified that a prophet has no honor in his own country. 45 So when He came to Galilee, the Galileans received Him, [k]having seen all the things He did in Jerusalem at the feast; [l]for they also had gone to the feast.

A Nobleman's Son Healed

46 So Jesus came again to Cana of Galilee [m]where He had made the water wine. And there was a certain [2]nobleman whose son was sick at Capernaum. 47 When he heard that Jesus had come out of Judea into Galilee, he went to Him and implored Him to come down and heal his son, for he was at the point of death. 48 Then Jesus said to him, [n]"Unless you people see signs and wonders, you will by no means believe."

49 The nobleman said to Him, "Sir, come down before my child dies!"

50 Jesus said to him, "Go your way; your son lives." So the man believed the word that Jesus spoke to him, and he went his way. 51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him and told him, saying, "Your son lives!"

52 Then he inquired of them the hour when he got better. And they said to him, "Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him." 53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said to him, "Your son lives." And he himself believed, and his whole household.

54 This again is the second sign Jesus did when He had come out of Judea into Galilee.

A Man Healed at the Pool of Bethesda

5 After [a]this there was a feast of the Jews, and Jesus [b]went up to Jerusalem. 2 Now there is in Jerusalem [c]by the Sheep Gate a pool, which is called in Hebrew, [j]Bethesda, having five porches. 3 In these lay a great multitude of sick people, blind, lame, [2]paralyzed, [3]waiting for the moving of the water. 4 For an angel went down at a certain time into the pool and stirred up the water; then whoever stepped in first, after the stirring of the water, was made well of whatever

■ 4:37 One sows and another reaps. Jesus makes it clear that His disciples have a responsibility distinct from His own. They will harvest what Jesus sowed. The saying may deliberately anticipate 12:23, 24.

■ 4:42 the Savior of the world. They recognized that Jesus was more than a prophet (vv. 19, 29, 39); He is the Savior (1 John 4:14).

■ 4:44 no honor in his own country. "His own country" is probably Galilee rather than Judea (cf. v. 3). Galilee is considered to be the place of Jesus' origin in this Gospel (1:46; 2:1; 7:42, 52). Though the Galileans "received Him" (v. 45), the text indicates that Jesus was displeased with their need to "see signs and wonders" in order to believe (v. 48; see Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 4:46 nobleman. See text note. An officer in the service of Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee (cf. Matt. 14:1–12; Luke 23:7).

■ 4:50 your son lives. This was a word with power to heal, not merely a prophecy that he would recover.

■ 4:52 the seventh hour. 1:00 P.M.

■ 4:54 second sign. While Jesus had performed many other signs (2:23), this is the second that took place at Cana in Galilee (cf. 2:11). The repetition three times of "your son lives" (vv. 50, 51, 53) shows the purpose of the sign is to reveal that Jesus has the power to give life. Corresponding to this repetition is the progression of the official's faith (vv. 48, 50, 53). This focus on life through the power of Jesus' word prepares the reader for the following discourse on life through the Son (5:19–30).

■ 5:1 a feast of the Jews. Probably one of the pilgrimage feasts that were observed in Jerusalem, either Tabernacles, Passover, or Pentecost.

disease he had. 5 Now a certain man was there who had an infirmity thirty-eight years. 6 When Jesus saw him lying there, and knew that he already had been in that condition a long time, He said to him, "Do you want to be made well?"

7 The sick man answered Him, "Sir, I have no man to put me into the pool when the water is stirred up; but while I am coming, another steps down before me."

8 Jesus said to him, [d]"Rise, take up your bed and walk." 9 And immediately the man was made well, took up his bed, and walked.

And [e]that day was the Sabbath. 10 The Jews therefore said to him who was cured, "It is the Sabbath; [f]it is not lawful for you to carry your bed."

11 He answered them, "He who made me well said to me, 'Take up your bed and walk.' "

12 Then they asked him, "Who is the Man who said to you, 'Take up your bed and walk'?" 13 But the one who was [g]healed did not know who it was, for Jesus had withdrawn, a multitude being in that place. 14 Afterward Jesus found him in the temple, and said to him, "See, you have been made well. [h]Sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you."

15 The man departed and told the Jews that it was Jesus who had made him well.

Honor the Father and the Son

16 For this reason the Jews [i]persecuted Jesus, [j]and sought to kill Him, because He had done these things on the Sabbath. 17 But Jesus answered them, [k]"My Father has been working until now, and I have been working."

18 Therefore the Jews [l]sought all the more to kill Him, because He not only broke the Sabbath, but also said that God was His Father, [m]making Himself equal with God. 19 Then Jesus answered and said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, [n]the Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He sees the Father do; for whatever He does, the Son also does in like manner. 20 For [o]the Father loves the Son, and [p]shows Him all things that He Himself does; and He will show Him greater works than these, that you may marvel. 21 For as the Father raises the dead and gives life to them, [q]even so the Son gives life to whom He will. 22 For the Father judges no one, but [r]has committed all judgment to the Son, 23 that all should honor the Son just as they honor the Father. [s]He who does not honor the Son does not honor the Father who sent Him.

Life and Judgment Are Through the Son

24 "Most assuredly, I say to you, [t]he who hears My word and believes in Him who sent Me has everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, [u]but has passed from death into life. 25 Most assuredly, I say to you, the hour is coming, and now is, when [v]the dead will hear the voice of the Son of God; and those who hear will live. 26 For [w]as the Father has life in Himself, so He has granted the Son to have [x]life in Himself, 27 and [y]has given Him authority to execute judgment also, [z]because He is the Son of Man. 28 Do not marvel at this; for the hour is coming in

■ 5:5 an infirmity. The exact disease is not specified, but the event indicates that it hindered the man's movement and walking.

■ 5:8 take up your bed. Jewish tradition had interpreted the Sabbath prohibition against work to forbid carrying burdens. Jeremiah protested against loading and unloading on the Sabbath (Jer. 17:21, 22).

■ 5:9 the man was made well. It is not stated that faith in Jesus was required of the man, as was the case in many of Jesus' miracles (Matt. 9:22; 13:58; Mark 6:5, 6). The focus here is on Jesus' power.

■ 5:14 a worse thing. The "worse thing" is left indefinite. The point of the admonition is not necessarily that the man had brought his illness on himself by some specific sin. Some sins can provoke God to physical and temporal judgment (1 Cor. 11:28–32), but illness is not necessarily related to particular sins (9:3).

■ 5:17–47 Jesus debates the Jews regarding His relation to the Sabbath and to God. Jesus does not argue with His opponents about whether they understand the Sabbath legislation correctly. His interest is whether they understand who He is. Jesus claims to be God by indicating some of His divine prerogatives (vv. 17–30) and shows the basis for His claim (vv. 31–47).

■ 5:17 My Father . . . and I have been working. Jesus does not dispute with the Jews whether they are right to criticize the lame man. He denies that they can criticize Him, because He is only doing what His Father does. The Jews understood Him to be saying this, since they accused Him of making Himself equal with God (v. 18).

■ 5:18 making Himself equal with God. Jesus represented Himself as One who had the same authority over the Sabbath as the Author of the Sabbath (Luke 6:5), which was given not only at Sinai but in the creation order itself.

■ 5:19 the Son can do nothing. This does not express personal inability, but emphasizes the complete unity of purpose and action in the Trinity. See theological note "The Humble Obedience of Christ."

■ 5:20 greater works than these. There is a greater work than healing the sick. This work, according to v. 21, is raising the dead.

■ 5:21 the Father raises the dead. A clear affirmation of what is expressed less clearly in the Old Testament. Jesus agrees with the Pharisees against the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection (Matt. 22:23). Raising the dead is possible only for God, yet Jesus claims the power for Himself (v. 25).

■ 5:23 honor. Here "honor" is the holy fear of God awakened by the knowledge of coming judgment (v. 22). The Son, no less than the Father, is One to whom all will give an account.

■ 5:24 everlasting life. Salvation is not only an object of hope for the future, but a present reality for the believer; such a one "has passed from death into life" (cf. 6:47).

■ 5:26 life in Himself. See "The Self-existence of God" at Ps. 90:2.

The Humble Obedience of Christ

Humility in Scripture does not mean pretending to be worthless and refusing positions of responsibility, but knowing and keeping the place God has appointed for one. Being humble is a matter of accepting God's arrangement, whether it means the high exposure of leadership (Moses was humble as a leader, Num. 12:3), or the obscurity of being a servant. When Jesus said that He was "lowly in heart" (Matt. 11:29), He meant that He was following the Father's plan for His earthly life.

The three Persons of the Trinity are eternal and self-existent, having equally all aspects and attributes of deity, and always acting together. But the Persons are distinct in their mutual relationships. Something of what this means is revealed in the humble submission of Christ to the Father's will, and also in the way that the Holy Spirit is sent by the Father and the Son to confirm the work of salvation in human hearts.

The Father's will for Christ is sometimes called the covenant of redemption. It is called a "covenant" because it is an agreement between two parties. The Westminster Confession summarizes the agreement (the Father's purpose, accepted by the Son) as follows:

> It pleased God, in His eternal purpose, to choose and ordain the Lord Jesus, His only-begotten Son, to be the Mediator between God and man, the Prophet, Priest, and King; the Head and Saviour of His Church, the Heir of all things, and Judge of the world: unto whom He did, from all eternity, give a people to be His seed, and to be by Him in time redeemed, called, justified, sanctified, and glorified (Westminster Confession, VIII.1).

Christ fulfilled this covenant through two stages called His "humiliation" and His "exaltation." In His humiliation, He left behind the eternal glory that was His, taking on a perfect and complete human nature: body, soul, and spirit. Through His incarnation He lived a life of poverty and suffering. He was rejected by His nation, finally to die the shameful death of a common criminal (2 Cor. 8:9; Gal. 3:13; Phil 2:6–8).

In His exaltation, Christ rose from the dead, ascended to heaven, and reigns as King over the world and the church. Together with the Father, He has sent the Holy Spirit to complete the work of redemption that He won for us.

The redemptive obedience of Christ has two sides, called "active" and "passive." In His active obedience, Christ fulfilled the positive commandments of God on behalf of His people, serving God and doing good. This positive righteousness is granted as a gift through faith to believers, securing for them a righteous standing before God. In His passive obedience, Christ paid the penalty owed by sinners to God. He did this by suffering death on the cross. "Passive" means "permitting" or "allowing," not being inactive, detached, or unfeeling. Jesus came to do the Father's will, not to avoid it, and His heart was wholly conformed to it. □

■ 5:29 resurrection. See "Resurrection and Glorification" at 1 Cor. 15:21.

■ 5:31–47 Jesus addresses four types of testimony that establish His claims: the testimony of John the Baptist; of Jesus' own works; of God the Father; and of Scripture, especially Moses.

willing for a time to rejoice in his light. 36 But [j]I have a greater witness than John's; for [k]the works which the Father has given Me to finish—the very [l]works that I do—bear witness of Me, that the Father has sent Me. 37 And the Father Himself, who sent Me, [m]has testified of Me. You have neither heard His voice at any time, [n]nor seen His form. 38 But you do not have His word abiding in you, because whom He sent, Him you do not believe. 39 [o]You search the Scriptures, for in them you think you have eternal life; and [p]these are they which testify of Me. 40 [q]But you are not willing to come to Me that you may have life.

41 [r]"I do not receive honor from men. 42 But I know you, that you do not have the love of God in you. 43 I have come in My Father's name, and you do not receive Me; if another comes in his own name, him you will receive. 44 [s]How can you believe, who receive honor from one another, and do not seek [t]the honor that comes from the only God? 45 Do not think that I shall accuse you to the Father; [u]there is one who accuses you—Moses, in whom you trust. 46 For if you believed Moses, you would believe Me; [v]for he wrote about Me. 47 But if you [w]do not believe his writings, how will you believe My words?"

Feeding the Five Thousand

6 After [a]these things Jesus went over the Sea of Galilee, which is the Sea of [b]Tiberias. 2 Then a great multitude followed Him, because they saw His signs which He performed on those who were [c]diseased.[1] 3 And Jesus went up on the mountain, and there He sat with His disciples.

4 [d]Now the Passover, a feast of the Jews, was near. 5 [e]Then Jesus lifted up His eyes, and seeing a great multitude coming toward Him, He said to [f]Philip, "Where shall we buy bread, that these may eat?" 6 But this He said to test him, for He Himself knew what He would do.

7 Philip answered Him, [g]"Two hundred denarii worth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may have a little."

8 One of His disciples, [h]Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, said to Him, 9 "There is a lad here who has five barley loaves and two small fish, [i]but what are they among so many?"

10 Then Jesus said, "Make the people sit down." Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand. 11 And Jesus took the loaves, and when He had given thanks He distributed them [2]to the disciples, and the disciples to those sitting down; and likewise of the fish, as much as they wanted. 12 So when they were filled, He said to His disciples, "Gather up the fragments that remain, so that nothing is lost." 13 Therefore they gathered them up, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves which were left over by those who had eaten. 14 Then those men, when they had seen the sign that Jesus did, said, "This is truly [j]the Prophet who is to come into the world."

14 [j]Gen. 49:10

■ 5:36 the very works that I do. This is the principle acknowledged by Nicodemus (3:2). The power given by God to work miracles is a sign of His approval (10:25, 38), although not every wonderful work is a miracle in this sense (Ex. 7:11, 12; Matt. 7:22, 23; 24:24; Rev. 13:13).

■ 5:37, 38 His voice . . . His word. These terms probably refer to Scripture, which is God's "voice" and "word," but which the unbelievers did not receive.

■ 5:39 the Scriptures . . . testify of Me. Jesus agrees that the Old Testament leads to eternal life (cf. 2 Tim. 3:15), while going on to reveal that this life is in Him, the Author of eternal life. The searching of those who refuse to find Christ in the Scriptures is futile, because it lacks the enlightenment of the Spirit (2 Cor. 3:6).

■ 5:45 one who accuses you. Moses will accuse those who do not believe in Christ, because Moses wrote about Him. Jesus does not refer to any single text in Moses (such as Deut. 18:15), but to what "he wrote" (v. 46) in a general way. This is similar to what Jesus told His disciples after the resurrection on the road to Emmaus (Luke 24:27, 44–46), as well as to the preaching of the apostles (Acts 3:18; 17:2, 3; 18:28; 26:22, 23; 28:23).

■ 6:1–71 This chapter is a major turning point in chs. 2—12. It reveals the identity of Jesus as One sent from the Father (vv. 38, 44, 46, 50, 51, 57); it graphically distinguishes belief and unbelief through the illustration of eating Jesus' flesh and blood (vv. 53–58); and it chronicles the growing rejection, motivated by unbelief, that confronted Jesus (vv. 41, 42, 60–66). The signs in this chapter call to mind corresponding saving events in the history of Israel. They indicate that Jesus fulfills the typology of the Passover, the Exodus, and the provision of food in the desert.

■ 6:1–4 Jesus leaves Jerusalem and travels to the far side of the Sea of Galilee, around the time of the Passover. This feast was established in Ex. 12:43–51 to commemorate how God "passed over" the Israelites and killed the Egyptians. The Old Testament passages read during the Passover in Jesus' time probably included Gen. 1—8, Ex. 11—16, and Num. 6—14. There are strong similarities between these texts and Jesus' comments in this discourse.

■ 6:1 Sea of Tiberias. Another name for the Sea of Galilee, in honor of the town of Tiberias, built by Herod between A.D. 20–30.

■ 6:2 His signs. John has reported only one healing in Galilee, of the official's son (4:46–54). Jesus must have done other such miracles as well (cf. 21:25).

■ 6:3 Jesus went up on the mountain. This detail may be intended to suggest a comparison of Jesus and Moses, who went up on Mount Sinai (v. 14 note).

■ 6:5–15 The feeding of the five thousand. Jesus brings food to a multitude, as Moses did in the wilderness (Num. 11).

■ 6:5 that these may eat. Reminiscent of Num. 11:13, where Moses asks God a similar question.

■ 6:7 Two hundred denarii. A denarius was about one day's wage (Matt. 20:2).

■ 6:10 five thousand. The figure does not include women and children (Matt. 14:21; cf. 2 Kin. 4:42–44).

■ 6:14 the Prophet. That is, the Prophet like Moses (Deut. 18:15).

Jesus Walks on the Sea

15 Therefore when Jesus perceived that they were about to come and take Him by force to make Him [k]king, He departed again to the mountain by Himself alone.

16 [l]Now when evening came, His disciples went down to the sea, 17 got into the boat, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was already dark, and Jesus had not come to them. 18 Then the sea arose because a great wind was blowing. 19 So when they had rowed about [3]three or four miles, they saw Jesus walking on the sea and drawing near the boat; and they were [m]afraid. 20 But He said to them, [n]"It is I; do not be afraid." 21 Then they willingly received Him into the boat, and immediately the boat was at the land where they were going.

The Bread from Heaven

22 On the following day, when the people who were standing on the other side of the sea saw that there was no other boat there, except [4]that one [5]which His disciples had entered, and that Jesus had not entered the boat with His disciples, but His disciples had gone away alone— 23 however, other boats came from Tiberias, near the place where they ate bread after the Lord had given thanks— 24 when the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, nor His disciples, they also got into boats and came to Capernaum, [o]seeking Jesus. 25 And when they found Him on the other side of the sea, they said to Him, "Rabbi, when did You come here?"

26 Jesus answered them and said, "Most assuredly, I say to you, you seek Me, not because you saw the signs, but because you ate of the loaves and were filled. 27 [p]Do not labor for the food which perishes, but [q]for the food which endures to everlasting life, which the Son of Man will give you, [r]because God the Father has set His seal on Him."

28 Then they said to Him, "What shall we do, that we may work the works of God?"

29 Jesus answered and said to them, [s]"This is the work of God, that you believe in Him whom He sent."

30 Therefore they said to Him, [t]"What sign will You perform then, that we may see it and believe You? What work will You do? 31 [u]Our fathers ate the manna in the desert; as it is written, [v]'He gave them bread from heaven to eat.'"

32 Then Jesus said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, Moses did not give you the bread from heaven, but [w]My Father gives you the true bread from heaven. 33 For the bread of God is He who comes down from heaven and gives life to the world."

34 [x]Then they said to Him, "Lord, give us this bread always."

35 And Jesus said to them, [y]"I am the bread of life. [z]He who comes to Me shall never hunger, and he who believes in Me shall never [a]thirst. 36 [b]But I said to you that you have seen Me and yet [c]do not believe. 37 [d]All that the Father gives Me will come to Me, and [e]the one who comes to Me I will [6]by no means cast out. 38 For I have come down from heaven, [f]not to do My own will, [g]but the will of Him who sent Me. 39 This is the will of the Father who sent Me, [h]that of all He

■ 6:15 to make Him king. The kingship of the Messiah was to be spiritual, not political. While accepting the title "King of Israel" (1:49), Jesus refused the offer of Satan (Matt. 4:8, 9; Luke 4:5, 6) and the misguided efforts of the people.

■ 6:16–21 This miracle is recorded in Matt. 14:22–33 and in Mark 6:47–51. It should not be confused with the calming of the storm found in Matt. 8:23–27; Mark 4:36–41; and Luke 8:22–25.

■ 6:21 immediately. Some understand this to be an additional miracle; others take it to mean that after Jesus' entrance into the boat, no further difficulties were encountered.

■ 6:26 not because you saw the signs. Although they saw the miracle of the loaves and fishes, they did not recognize it as a sign identifying Jesus as the Messiah. It was merely as an opportunity for a meal to them.

■ 6:27 Jesus points to the spiritual meaning of the miracle, which is to set God's seal of approval on His ministry and to identify Him as the Son of Man, the promised Messiah.

■ 6:31 They expected that the coming of the Messiah would be marked by a miracle as great as or greater than the giving of the manna in the desert.

■ 6:32 the true bread from heaven. The word "true" has a special meaning. Jesus refers to what is everlasting, as opposed to something merely representative. The bread God provided through Moses (Ex. 16; Num. 11) was only material and temporary, not spiritual and eternal. See note at 4:24.

■ 6:33 He who comes down from heaven. This is Jesus Christ, whose incarnation is described as "coming down" (vv. 38, 41, 42, 50, 51, 58; 3:13, 31; Eph. 4:9–10).

gives life to the world. Christ provides eternal life to those who are dead in trespasses and sins (Eph. 2:1). They are chosen not only from the Jews but from the whole world. Jesus does not here teach universal salvation, but the universal relevance and appeal of His saving work (3:16 note).

■ 6:34 give us this bread. They misinterpreted Jesus' statement by taking it on a purely physical level, as Nicodemus (3:4) and the Samaritan woman (4:15) had done.

■ 6:35 I am the bread of life. This is the first of seven such "I am" sayings in this Gospel (8:12; 9:5; 10:7, 9, 11, 14; 11:25; 14:6; 15:1, 5). The expression looks back to Ex. 3:14 and is an implicit claim to deity (8:58, 59 and notes).

■ 6:37 All that the Father gives Me. God leads to faith all whom He plans to redeem. The redemption of the elect is certain. The Son promises acceptance to anyone who truly believes.

■ 6:38 not to do My own will. The will of the Son and the will of the Father agree; there is no competition or disagreement. Jesus' submission to the Father shows this agreement.

■ 6:39 lose nothing, but should raise. The Father's will is more than that Jesus should make an offer to lost sinners. He will at last raise up all has given Me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day. 40 And this is the will of Him who sent Me, [i]that everyone who sees the Son and believes in Him may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

Rejected by His Own

41 The Jews then [7]complained about Him, because He said, "I am the bread which came down from heaven." 42 And they said, [j]"Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How is it then that He says, 'I have come down from heaven'?"

43 Jesus therefore answered and said to them, [8]"Do not murmur among yourselves. 44 [k]No one can come to Me unless the Father who sent Me [l]draws him; and I will raise him up at the last day. 45 It is written in the prophets, [m]'And they shall all be taught by God.' [n]Therefore everyone who [9]has heard and learned from the Father comes to Me. 46 [o]Not that anyone has seen the Father, [p]except He who is from God; He has seen the Father. 47 Most assuredly, I say to you, [q]he who believes [r]in Me has everlasting life. 48 [r]I am the bread of life. 49 [s]Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and are dead. 50 [t]This is the bread which comes down from heaven, that one may eat of it and not die. 51 I am the living bread [u]which came down from heaven. If anyone eats of this bread, he will live forever; and [v]the bread that I shall give is My flesh, which I shall give for the life of the world."

52 The Jews therefore [w]quarreled among themselves, saying, "How can this Man give us His flesh to eat?"

53 Then Jesus said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, unless [x]you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, you have no life in you. 54 [y]Whoever eats My flesh and drinks My blood has eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. 55 For My flesh is [2]food indeed, and My blood is [3]drink indeed. 56 He who eats My flesh and drinks My blood [z]abides in Me, and I in him. 57 As the living Father sent Me, and I live because of the Father, so he who feeds on Me will live because of Me. 58 [a]This is the bread which came down from heaven—not [b]as your fathers ate the manna, and are dead. He who eats this bread will live forever."

59 These things He said in the synagogue as He taught in Capernaum.

Many Disciples Turn Away

60 [c]Therefore many of His disciples, when they heard this, said, "This is a [4]hard saying; who can understand it?"

61 When Jesus knew in Himself that His disciples [5]complained about this, He said to them, "Does this [6]offend you? 62 [d]What then if you should see the Son of Man ascend where He was who are given Him by the Father and lose not one from that group. God graciously perseveres with true believers, ensuring their final salvation. See "Perseverance of the Saints" at Rom. 8:30.

■ 6:41 The Jews then complained about Him. This response is similar to that of the Israelites in the wilderness, who complained against Moses and Aaron (Ex. 16:7; 17:3; Num. 11:1).

came down from heaven. Jesus' origin establishes His identity as Messiah and Son of God (vv. 29, 33, 38; 1:1, 2, 14, 18, 45, 46; 3:2, 13, 17, 31; 5:36–38). Those confronted with this revelation must respond either in belief or in rejection. There is no middle ground.

■ 6:44 unless the Father who sent Me draws him. Jesus teaches that no one can respond positively to His warning and invitation apart from the Father's work of drawing the individual to Jesus. The heart is naturally hard and will not accept God's invitation, unless a special work of God's grace takes place (v. 65). See "Effectual Calling and Conversion" at 2 Thess. 2:14.

■ 6:45 they shall all be taught by God. In its original context Is. 54:13 is a promise of final redemption. Jesus indicates in the next sentence that those who participate in this redemption are those who come to Him, thereby identifying Himself as the One in whom that final redemption comes.

everyone who has heard . . . comes to Me. Whoever wishes may come, and they come because they have "learned from the Father," who draws them (v. 44).

■ 6:51–58 Jesus' hearers continue to misunderstand His statements, taking them on a purely physical level (cf. v. 34). Understood literally, what Jesus said would be highly objectionable since it would involve cannibalism and a use of blood that was strictly forbidden in the Law (Gen. 9:4; Lev. 7:26, 27; 17:10–14; Deut. 12:23, 24). Jesus uses the language of eating and drinking to illustrate the intimacy of the union between Christ and the believer. This spiritual union, by which Christ imparts new life to the believer, is portrayed later in the Gospel as the union of a vine and its branches (15:1–8). It is sometimes called the "mystical union," and is a recurrent topic in Paul's letters (Gal. 2:20; Eph. 1:3–14).

Though some see here a reference to the Lord's Supper, a mention of that sacrament at this point would have been incomprehensible to Jesus' listeners. This passage is best understood as pointing to the spiritual reality the Lord's Supper also signifies—union with Christ and all the benefits of salvation received through Him.

■ 6:51 the living bread. See note on v. 32.

the world. See note on 4:42.

■ 6:53 unless you eat . . . and drink. Apart from personal union with the Savior there is no salvation. See "The Lord's Supper" at 1 Cor. 11:23.

■ 6:60 many of His disciples. These disciples took offense at Jesus' words, refused to listen to Jesus' explanation, and were unwilling to accept the message of salvation by grace.

■ 6:61, 64, 70. Three examples of supernatural knowledge (cf. 2:24, 25).

■ 6:62 see the Son of Man ascend. Like "lifted up" (3:14 note), "ascend" here probably refers to the events beginning with Christ's being "lifted up" on the cross and climaxing in His exaltation at the right hand of the Father. If many of His disciples grumbled at the hard sayings of vv. 53–58, what would their response be to the scandal of the crucifixion? See "The Ascension of Jesus" at Luke 24:51.

before? 63 [e]It is the Spirit who gives life; the [f]flesh profits nothing. The [g]words that I speak to you are spirit, and they are life. 64 But [h]there are some of you who do not believe." For [i]Jesus knew from the beginning who they were who did not believe, and who would betray Him. 65 And He said, "Therefore [j]I have said to you that no one can come to Me unless it has been granted to him by My Father."

66 [k]From that time many of His disciples went [7]back and walked with Him no more. 67 Then Jesus said to the twelve, "Do you also want to go away?"

68 But Simon Peter answered Him, "Lord, to whom shall we go? You have [l]the words of eternal life. 69 [m]Also we have come to believe and know that You are the [8]Christ, the Son of the living God."

70 Jesus answered them, [n]"Did I not choose you, the twelve, [o]and one of you is a devil?" 71 He spoke of [p]Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon, for it was he who would [q]betray Him, being one of the twelve.

Jesus' Brothers Disbelieve

7 After these things Jesus walked in Galilee; for He did not want to walk in Judea, [a]because the [1]Jews sought to kill Him. 2 [b]Now the Jews' Feast of Tabernacles was at hand. 3 [c]His brothers therefore said to Him, "Depart from here and go into Judea, that Your disciples also may see the works that You are doing. 4 For no one does anything in secret while he himself seeks to be known openly. If You do these things, show Yourself to the world." 5 For [d]even His [e]brothers did not believe in Him.

6 Then Jesus said to them, [f]"My time has not yet come, but your time is always ready. 7 [g]The world cannot hate you, but it hates Me [h]because I testify of it that its works are evil. 8 You go up to this feast. I am not [2]yet going up to this feast, [i]for My time has not yet fully come." 9 When He had said these things to them, He remained in Galilee.

The Heavenly Scholar

10 But when His brothers had gone up, then He also went up to the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret. 11 Then [j]the Jews sought Him at the feast, and said, "Where is He?" 12 And [k]there was much complaining among the people concerning Him. [l]Some said, "He is good"; others said, "No, on the contrary, He deceives the people." 13 However, no one spoke openly of Him [m]for fear of the Jews.

14 Now about the middle of the feast Jesus went up into the temple and [n]taught. 15 [o]And the Jews marveled, saying, "How does this Man know letters, having never studied?"

16 [3]Jesus answered them and said, [p]"My doctrine is not Mine, but His who sent Me. 17 [q]If anywhere He was before. A reference to the eternal preexistence of the living Word (1:1–3).

■ 6:63 the Spirit who gives life; the flesh profits nothing. This makes it plain that a merely physical understanding of Jesus' words was utterly mistaken. Note the close cooperation of the Father (vv. 37–40, 44–46, 57; 65), the Son, and the Holy Spirit (v. 63) shown in this passage.

■ 6:65 no one can come to Me unless. It is impossible for anyone to come to Christ without the enabling call of God. The sinner's moral inability to choose Christ must be overcome by the gracious and sovereign power of the Spirit (3:5–21).

■ 6:66–71 A crucial turning point in this Gospel. Many disciples, together with the crowds, reject Christ in unbelief, while His remaining disciples (as exemplified by Peter's confession) deepen their faith in Him.

■ 6:67 Do you . . . go away. Jesus' question elicits the firm confession of Peter as the spokesman for the Twelve. A parallel situation is found in Matt. 16:13–20; Mark 8:27–29; Luke 9:18–20.

■ 7:2 Feast of Tabernacles. The longest festival of the Jewish year (lasting seven days), this feast followed the Jewish New Year and the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur, Lev. 23; Deut. 16). It was a celebration of God's gracious provision for the Israelites in the desert and the completion of the year's harvest. There was a ceremonial water-drawing (commemorating the provision of water in the desert, Num. 20:2–13) and a lamp-lighting ritual. The first of these ceremonies provides the setting for Jesus' proclamation in vv. 37, 38, the second for His statement in 8:12.

■ 7:3, 5, 10 His brothers. Cf. 2:12; Matt. 12:46. Some of the brothers later believed in Jesus (Acts 1:14).

■ 7:6 My time. See vv. 8, 30; 2:4; 8:20; 12:23; 13:1; 17:1; Matt. 26:18; Mark 14:41. Such passages show the concern of Jesus to conform to God's schedule.

■ 7:7 The world. Humanity in its opposition to God and His purpose.

evil. Evildoers resent being unmasked by the good (3:19, 20).

■ 7:8 I am not yet going up to this feast. Jesus does indeed later go to the Feast. His brothers have asked Him to present Himself openly to the crowds. But Jesus asserts that He is "not yet" ready to appear in such a public way.

■ 7:13 for fear of the Jews. This is not a reference to all those who were natural descendants of Abraham. Rather, the term refers to Jewish leaders and officials who were hostile toward Jesus.

■ 7:15 having never studied. Jesus was not known to have been taught by any rabbi, yet His knowledge and wisdom astounded those who heard Him (cf. 3:2; Matt. 7:28; Luke 2:47).

■ 7:16 His who sent Me. Jesus indicates the source of His teaching. His message is not original with Himself but comes from His Father.

■ 7:17 shall know. A true perception of the divine nature of Christ's teaching is granted to those who earnestly desire to do God's will (Ps. 25:14).

one wills to do His will, he shall know concerning the doctrine, whether it is from God or whether I speak on My own authority. 18 [r]He who speaks from himself seeks his own glory; but He who [s]seeks the glory of the One who sent Him is true, and [t]no unrighteousness is in Him. 19 [u]Did not Moses give you the law, yet none of you keeps the law? [v]Why do you seek to kill Me?"

20 The people answered and said, [w]"You have a demon. Who is seeking to kill You?"

21 Jesus answered and said to them, "I did one work, and you all marvel. 22 [x]Moses therefore gave you circumcision (not that it is from Moses, [y]but from the fathers), and you circumcise a man on the Sabbath. 23 If a man receives circumcision on the Sabbath, so that the law of Moses should not be broken, are you angry with Me because [z]I made a man completely well on the Sabbath? 24 [a]Do not judge according to appearance, but judge with righteous judgment."

Could This Be the Christ?

25 Now some of them from Jerusalem said, "Is this not He whom they seek to [b]kill? 26 But look! He speaks boldly, and they say nothing to Him. [c]Do the rulers know indeed that this is [4]truly the Christ? 27 [d]However, we know where this Man is from; but when the Christ comes, no one knows where He is from."

28 Then Jesus cried out, as He taught in the temple, saying, [e]"You both know Me, and you know where I am from; and [f]I have not come of Myself, but He who sent Me [g]is true, [h]whom you do not know. 29 [5]But [i]I know Him, for I am from Him, and He sent Me."

30 Therefore [j]they sought to take Him; but [k]no one laid a hand on Him, because His hour had not yet come. 31 And [l]many of the people believed in Him, and said, "When the Christ comes, will He do more signs than these which this Man has done?"

Jesus and the Religious Leaders

32 The Pharisees heard the crowd murmuring these things concerning Him, and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take Him. 33 Then Jesus said [6]to them, [m]"I shall be with you a little while longer, and then I [n]go to Him who sent Me. 34 You [o]will seek Me and not find Me, and where I am you [p]cannot come."

35 Then the Jews said among themselves, "Where does He intend to go that we shall not find Him? Does He intend to go to [q]the Dispersion among the Greeks and teach the Greeks? 36 What is this thing that He said, 'You will seek Me and not find Me, and where I am you cannot come'?"

The Promise of the Holy Spirit

37 [r]On the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried out, saying, [s]"If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink. 38 [t]He who believes in Me, as the Scripture has said, [u]out

■ 7:18 from himself. A contrast is established between self-seeking messengers and Jesus, whose guiding principle is to be true to His mission (12:49). See 1:14, 17; 14:6; 18:37; 2 Cor. 11:10; Rev. 3:7, 14; 19:11—passages where Christ and His message are identified with truth. This is also said of God the Father (7:28; 8:26; 17:3; Ps. 31:5; Is. 65:16; Rom. 3:4; 1 Thess. 1:9; 1 John 5:20; Rev. 6:10; 15:3; 16:7) and of the Holy Spirit (14:17; 15:26; 16:13; 1 John 4:6; 5:6). The same applies to the Scripture and apostolic preaching (17:17; Ps. 119:30, 43, 138, 142, 151, 160; Eph. 1:13; Col. 1:5; 2 Tim. 2:15; James 1:18). This is in sharp contrast with Satan who is "a liar" (8:44).

■ 7:19 Moses . . . the law. The blessing of having received the law as the revelation of God's will (cf. Ps. 103:7; Rom. 3:2; 9:4) becomes a bane through disobedience (Rom. 7:7–12).

■ 7:20 have a demon. Compare 8:48–52; 10:19–20; Matt. 12:24.

■ 7:21 I did one work. Jesus refers to the one deed He had done in their region, the healing of the lame man (5:1–15).

■ 7:22 circumcision. Circumcision was prescribed in the law of Moses (Lev. 12:3), but it was previously instituted by God in the days of Abraham (Gen. 17:10–14). The regulation that it had to be performed on the eighth day was commonly regarded as taking precedence over the law of rest on the Sabbath.

■ 7:23 completely well. Jesus calls attention to the inconsistency of His accusers. There were a number of activities permitted on the Sabbath, including circumcision. He compares these activities with the work of healing.

■ 7:27 we know where this Man is from. The people knew that Jesus was from Galilee (vv. 41, 52), and this seemed to conflict with the prevailing view that the Messiah would come from Bethlehem (v. 42; Matt. 2:5, 6) or that His origin would be unknown. Jesus in response points to His divine origin rather than an earthly location. In failing to acknowledge His divine mission they showed their ignorance of God's plan, in spite of the miracles, which were proof of God's endorsement (v. 31).

■ 7:30 they sought to take Him. The plots against Christ's life could not succeed until God's own time had come.

■ 7:34 You will seek Me and not find Me. This is not in contradiction with Matt. 7:7. There Jesus is speaking about a thirst for God (cf. v. 37) that only the Holy Spirit creates in someone; but here He is referring to an effort to find Him geographically, which would be futile since He would be in heaven. Note the contrast between unbelievers (v. 34) and believers (14:3).

■ 7:35 Where does He intend to go. The Jews were puzzled as to Christ's origin and so could not understand His destination, which was heaven. They understood it merely in geographical terms and were not pleased at the thought that He would exercise His ministry among the Greeks, heathens that they despised.

■ 7:37, 38 At the climax of the feast, Jesus repeated dramatically the message He had given to the Samaritan woman (4:10–14) making clear that coming to Him meant believing in Him.

■ 7:38 as the Scripture has said. What follows is not an exact quotation from the Old Testament, but there are several Old Testament pas-of his heart will flow rivers of living water." 39 [v]But this He spoke concerning the Spirit, whom those [7]believing in Him would receive; for the [8]Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet [w]glorified.

Who Is He?

40 Therefore [9]many from the crowd, when they heard this saying, said, "Truly this is [x]the Prophet." 41 Others said, "This is [y]the Christ."

But some said, "Will the Christ come out of Galilee? 42 [z]Has not the Scripture said that the Christ comes from the seed of David and from the town of Bethlehem, [a]where David was?" 43 So [b]there was a division among the people because of Him. 44 Now [c]some of them wanted to take Him, but no one laid hands on Him.

Rejected by the Authorities

45 Then the officers came to the chief priests and Pharisees, who said to them, "Why have you not brought Him?"

46 The officers answered, [d]"No man ever spoke like this Man!"

47 Then the Pharisees answered them, "Are you also deceived? 48 Have any of the rulers or the Pharisees believed in Him? 49 But this crowd that does not know the law is accursed."

50 Nicodemus [e](he who came to [1]Jesus [2]by night, being one of them) said to them, 51 [f]"Does our law judge a man before it hears him and knows what he is doing?"

52 They answered and said to him, "Are you also from Galilee? Search and look, for [g]no prophet [3]has arisen out of Galilee."

An Adulteress Faces the Light of the World

53 [4]And everyone went to his own house.

8 But Jesus went to the Mount of Olives.

2 Now [1]early in the morning He came again into the temple, and all the people came to Him; and He sat down and [a]taught them. 3 Then the scribes and Pharisees brought to Him a woman caught in adultery. And when they had set her in the midst, 4 they said to Him, "Teacher, [2]this woman was caught in [b]adultery, in the very act. 5 [c]Now [3]Moses, in the law, commanded us [4]that such should be stoned. But what do You [5]say?" 6 This they said, testing Him, that they [d]might have something of which to accuse Him. But Jesus stooped down and wrote on the ground with His finger, [6]as though He did not hear.

7 So when they continued asking Him, He [7]raised Himself up and said to them, [e]"He who is sages that connect water with the end-time gift of the Spirit (e.g., Is. 44:3; Ezek. 36:25–27) and the blessings of the present (messianic) age (e.g., Is. 12:3; 58:11). Jesus fulfills the meaning of the Feast of Tabernacles (v. 2 note).

rivers. This implies great abundance, benefitting not only believers, but also those around them.

■ 7:39 the Holy Spirit was not yet given. Jesus is referring to the blessing of Pentecost. Of course, the Holy Spirit was present in the Old Testament period, but at Pentecost He entered into a more intimate relationship with believers (14:17; 1 Cor. 6:19). This is the Messiah's gift to His people: He baptizes with the Spirit (Matt. 3:11; Mark 1:8; Luke 3:16), but this blessing in its full measure and glory must await the ascension of Christ who will pour out the Spirit from heaven upon His people (16:7; cf. Eph. 4:8).

■ 7:40 the Prophet. A reference to Deut. 18:15. It is interesting to observe the testimony of those outside the group of disciples who were not blinded by prejudice. They understood that Jesus could be "the Prophet" promised by Moses. They knew that His miracles were worthy of the Messiah they expected (v. 31). Some called him "the Christ" (v. 41), and they testified that no one ever spoke like Him (v. 46).

■ 7:41–43 Dispute over the identity of Jesus continues to focus on His origin (cf. vv. 25–36 and notes). The people's questioning remains trapped within the limits of this world (3:1–15; 4:1–26).

■ 7:45–52 The strong prejudice of the chief priests and Pharisees is apparent in their condemnation of the temple guards (vv. 47, 48), of the crowd (v. 49), and even of Nicodemus, one of their number (v. 52).

■ 7:52 Galilee was held in contempt by the Sanhedrin as a mixed-race region where the law was not zealously observed.

■ 7:53—8:11 These verses are not present in some Greek manuscripts, and in others they appear at different locations, such as after 7:36, or even in Luke.

■ 8:5 the law. The punishment prescribed by law for adultery was death (Lev. 20:10; Deut. 22:22). Stoning was not specified, except in one case (Deut. 22:24).

■ 8:6 testing Him. If Jesus told them to carry out the stoning, He would violate the Roman law by which the Romans reserved to themselves the execution of the death penalty in occupied lands (18:31). If Jesus told them to release the woman, He would appear to condone adultery and violate the law of Moses.

wrote. This is the only passage where Jesus is said to write. Nothing is said about what He wrote.

■ 8:7 Jesus' challenge showed the accusers to be disqualified as judges. Their purpose was not to enforce Moses' law but to entrap Jesus, and they were using this woman as a pawn to achieve their wicked design.

without sin among you, let him throw a stone at her first." [8] And again He stooped down and wrote on the ground. [9] Then those who heard it, [f]being[g] convicted by their conscience, went out one by one, beginning with the oldest even to the last. And Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. [10] When Jesus had raised Himself up [g]and saw no one but the woman, He said to her, "Woman, where are those accusers [f]of yours? Has no one condemned you?"

[11] She said, "No one, Lord."

And Jesus said to her, [g]"Neither do I condemn you; go [2]and [h]sin no more."

[12] Then Jesus spoke to them again, saying, [i]"I am the light of the world. He who [j]follows Me shall not walk in darkness, but have the light of life."

Jesus Defends His Self-Witness

[13] The Pharisees therefore said to Him, [k]"You bear witness of Yourself; Your witness is not [3]true."

[14] Jesus answered and said to them, "Even if I bear witness of Myself, My witness is true, for I know where I came from and where I am going; but [l]you do not know where I come from and where I am going. [15] [m]You judge according to the flesh; [n]I judge no one. [16] And yet if I do judge, My judgment is true; for [o]I am not alone, but I am with the Father who sent Me. [17] [p]It is also written in your law that the testimony of two men is true. [18] I am One who bears witness of Myself, and [q]the Father who sent Me bears witness of Me."

[19] Then they said to Him, "Where is Your Father?"

Jesus answered, [r]"You know neither Me nor My Father. [s]If you had known Me, you would have known My Father also."

[20] These words Jesus spoke in [t]the treasury, as He taught in the temple; and [u]no one laid hands on Him, for [v]His hour had not yet come.

Jesus Predicts His Departure

[21] Then Jesus said to them again, "I am going away, and [w]you will seek Me, and [x]will die in your sin. Where I go you cannot come."

[22] So the Jews said, "Will He kill Himself, because He says, 'Where I go you cannot come'?"

[23] And He said to them, [y]"You are from beneath; I am from above. [z]You are of this world; I am not of this world. [24] [a]Therefore I said to you that you will die in your sins; [b]for if you do not believe that I am He, you will die in your sins."

[25] Then they said to Him, "Who are You?"

And Jesus said to them, "Just what I [c]have been saying to you from the beginning. [26] I have many things to say and to judge concerning you, but [d]He who sent Me is true; and [e]I speak to the world those things which I heard from Him."

[27] They did not understand that He spoke to them of the Father.

[28] Then Jesus said to them, "When you [f]lift[4] up the Son of Man, [g]then you will know that I am He, and [h]that I do nothing of Myself; but [i]as My Father taught Me, I speak these things.

■ 8:11 condemn. This is a legal term referring to the sentence of a court. Jesus indicates that no such lawful procedures have been followed and therefore there is no basis for the capital punishment proposed. Jesus admonished the woman not to go on sinning.

■ 8:12 I am the light of the world. In Jesus' time, candles were used as part of the celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles. During this feast, the rock that provided water in the wilderness and the pillar of fire that provided light and guidance were remembered (Ex. 13:21). The rock pointed to Jesus (1 Cor. 10:4), and He also is the light to which the pillar of fire as a type pointed. Since God is light (1 John 1:5), Jesus' words amount to a claim of deity. Again, "I am" points back to Ex. 3:14 (6:35 note).

■ 8:13 Your witness is not true. See text note. This discussion, which runs through v. 19, pivots on the question of valid testimony. The Pharisees say that Jesus' testimony is not legally acceptable because it lacks corroboration (Deut. 17:6; 19:15).

■ 8:14 I know where I came from. Since Jesus knows where He "came from" (heaven), He knows that His testimony is valid and true. Jesus' origin is again the point of conflict (7:41–43, 52 and notes).

■ 8:16 I am not alone. Since the Father is His witness, Christ's testimony is legally acceptable. In any case, one who has the witness of God needs nothing more.

■ 8:19 The Pharisees misunderstood Jesus' claim as a reference to His physical father, and they may have been eager to challenge Him as a child allegedly born out of wedlock. In speaking of His Father, however, Jesus was not talking about Joseph but about God. Knowledge of the Father comes through the Son (1:18; 14:9; 1 John 5:20). The Pharisees' blindness to Jesus shows that their technical knowledge of the law did not give them the knowledge of God.

■ 8:21 I am going away. Jesus speaks of His death, resurrection, and ascension.

die in your sin. Jesus clearly states the two destinies of humanity. Not all will be saved; some cannot go where Jesus is going. The only way of salvation is to believe (v. 24; 3:16, 18).

■ 8:24, 28 I am He. Here Jesus applies Old Testament language for Yahweh to Himself (Ex. 3:14; Is. 43:10), an identification that becomes unambiguous in v. 58.

■ 8:28 lift up. See note at 3:14.

29 And [i]He who sent Me is with Me. [k]The Father has not left Me alone, [l]for I always do those things that please Him." 30 As He spoke these words, [m]many believed in Him.

The Truth Shall Make You Free

31 Then Jesus said to those Jews who believed Him, "If you [n]abide in My word, you are My disciples indeed. 32 And you shall know the [o]truth, and [p]the truth shall make you free."

33 They answered Him, [q]"We are Abraham's descendants, and have never been in bondage to anyone. How can You say, 'You will be made free'?"

34 Jesus answered them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, [r]whoever commits sin is a slave of sin. 35 And [s]a slave does not abide in the house forever, but a son abides forever. 36 [t]Therefore if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed.

Abraham's Seed and Satan's

37 "I know that you are Abraham's descendants, but [u]you seek to kill Me, because My word has no place in you. 38 [v]I speak what I have seen with My Father, and you do what you have [5]seen with your father."

39 They answered and said to Him, [w]"Abraham is our father."

Jesus said to them, [x]"If you were Abraham's children, you would do the works of Abraham. 40 [y]But now you seek to kill Me, a Man who has told you the truth [z]which I heard from God. Abraham did not do this. 41 You do the deeds of your father."

Then they said to Him, "We were not born of fornication; [a]we have one Father—God."

42 Jesus said to them, [b]"If God were your Father, you would love Me, for [c]I proceeded forth and came from God; [d]nor have I come of Myself, but He sent Me. 43 [e]Why do you not understand My speech? Because you are not able to listen to My word. 44 [f]You are of your father the devil, and the [g]desires of your father you want to [h]do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and [i]does not stand in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own resources, for he is a liar and the father of it. 45 But because I tell the truth, you do not believe Me. 46 Which of you convicts Me of sin? And if I tell the truth, why do you not be-

■ 8:30 believed in Him. From what is said later (vv. 33, 37, 39), it is apparent that their profession was superficial. True believers are those who abide in His word (v. 31). Perseverance distinguishes those who are truly born of God (15:2, 6; 1 John 2:19).

■ 8:32 you shall know the truth. Holding to the teaching of Christ who is the truth (14:6) leads one to the truth that sets a person free from slavery to sin. Salvation is not obtained by intellectual knowledge as the Gnostics imagined, but by a vital relationship with Jesus Christ and a commitment to the truth He revealed (18:37).

■ 8:33 We . . . have never been in bondage. The Jews had been enslaved in Egypt and later were ruled by the Philistines, the Assyrians, and others. Since they could hardly deny this, they were probably saying that they had been a nation under God since the Exodus, no matter what else had happened to them. It is also possible that they were speaking about the time of the Romans, when they had certain liberties, including official recognition as a religion.

■ 8:34 whoever commits sin is a slave. Jesus describes the gravity of sin and the predicament of humanity under sin. His hearers did not understand the freedom He offered them as they did not understand the bondage they were in. See "The Freedom and Bondage of the Will" at Jer. 17:9.

■ 8:36 if the Son makes you free. Regeneration (the new birth) is the work of the Holy Spirit (3:3–8), accomplished on the basis of Christ's death and resurrection on our behalf (3:14–16).

free indeed. Jesus was not speaking of political freedom, nor merely a freedom by which we are relieved from physical bondage. True freedom is to serve God, to fulfill the purposes of those specially created in God's image. Sin deprives us of this fulfillment because sin clouds our minds, degrades our feelings, and enslaves our wills. This is what the Reformers called "total depravity"; its only remedy is the grace of God in spiritual rebirth (3:3). See "Christian Liberty" at Gal. 5:1.

■ 8:37 Abraham's descendants. God is interested in spiritual descent rather than physical ancestry. It does not matter how good a person's ancestors have been if he or she is walking in the path of disobedience (Ezek. 18). Likewise it does not matter how bad a person's ancestors have been if that person is renewed by God's Spirit and walks in the way of faith.

■ 8:40 Abraham did not do this. Abraham was obedient to God's direction even when it was painful for him. Jesus' audience claimed to be Abraham's descendants, but Jesus shows they are not like their ancestor in the essential matter of obedience. True sonship is not defined by biology but by obedience.

■ 8:41 born of fornication. This may well have been a sarcastic suggestion that Jesus was illegitimate.

Father—God. The Jews seldom addressed God as "Father." The fatherhood of God is a leading feature of Christ's teaching. God is the Father of those who are saved and received into God's household by adoption. God is the Father of the Son in a unique sense (1:14 note; 3:16; 20:17).

■ 8:42 you would love Me. The unity between Father and Son is so profound that no one can belong to the Father and reject the Son. Again Jesus' origin is a point of contention (7:41–43 note).

■ 8:44 You are of your father the devil. The relation of truth and righteousness has been prominent in this Gospel. People love darkness (error) rather than light (truth), because their deeds are evil (3:10). A frightful contrast is apparent here; there are just two options: God or Satan. By God's grace, Abraham (vv. 39–41) had walked in the way of faith and obedience. Those who rejected Jesus were doing the opposite.

you want. Sinners desire to do what is evil. Only a supernatural act of grace can redirect a person's will to desire the good.

He was a murderer . . . a liar. Among all the sins that could be mentioned as characteristic of Satan, murder and lying are singled out: lying because it is the direct opposite of "truth," the central emphasis of this section (vv. 32–47); and murder because they desired to kill Jesus (v. 40). Satan contrasts sharply with Jesus who is "the truth, and the life" (14:6) and the giver of life (10:10, 28).

■ 8:46 Which of you convicts Me of sin. No one can convict Jesus of sin, or prove any charge against Him. Jesus is free of all sin (2 Cor. 5:21), "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners" (Heb. 7:26), doing always what pleases the Father (v. 29).

lieve Me? 47 [j]He who is of God hears God's words; therefore you do not hear, because you are not of God."

Before Abraham Was, I AM

48 Then the Jews answered and said to Him, "Do we not say rightly that You are a Samaritan and [k]have a demon?"

49 Jesus answered, "I do not have a demon; but I honor My Father, and [l]you dishonor Me. 50 And [m]I do not seek My own glory; there is One who seeks and judges. 51 Most assuredly, I say to you, [n]if anyone keeps My word he shall never see death."

52 Then the Jews said to Him, "Now we know that You [o]have a demon! [p]Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and You say, 'If anyone keeps My word he shall never taste death.' 53 Are You greater than our father Abraham, who is dead? And the prophets are dead. [q]Who do You make Yourself out to be?"

54 Jesus answered, [r]"If I honor Myself, My honor is nothing. [s]It is My Father who honors Me, of whom you say that He is [6]your God. 55 Yet [t]you have not known Him, but I know Him. And if I say, 'I do not know Him,' I shall be a liar like you; but I do know Him and [u]keep His word. 56 Your father Abraham [v]rejoiced to see My day, [w]and he saw it and was glad."

57 Then the Jews said to Him, "You are not yet fifty years old, and have You seen Abraham?"

58 Jesus said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, [x]before Abraham was, [y]I AM."

59 Then [z]they took up stones to throw at Him; but Jesus hid Himself and went out of the temple, [a]going[7] through the midst of them, and so passed by.

A Man Born Blind Receives Sight

9 Now as Jesus passed by, He saw a man who was blind from birth. 2 And His disciples asked Him, saying, "Rabbi, [a]who sinned, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?"

3 Jesus answered, "Neither this man nor his parents sinned, [b]but that the works of God should be revealed in him. 4 [c]I[1] must work the works of Him who sent Me while it is [d]day; the night is

■ 8:47 you do not hear. Sin paralyzes our spiritual senses. Only an act of God's grace enables a sinner to hear His voice (cf. v. 43; 10:3, 4, 16, 27).

■ 8:48 a Samaritan. A term of insult, possibly implying that Jesus was born out of wedlock (v. 41 note).

have a demon. When cornered by the truth, Jesus' enemies turn to blasphemy (Matt. 12:24, 31).

■ 8:49 I do not have a demon. Jesus' conduct, in honoring the Father and not seeking self-glory, is the opposite of what a demon-possessed person would do. Jesus is not afraid to refer the matter to God's judgment (cf. 17:4).

■ 8:51 if anyone keeps My word he shall never see death. Death, as eternal separation from fellowship with God, is the judicial punishment for sin (Rom. 6:23). Since Jesus died as the substitute for His people, those who belong to Him are freed from the penalty of sin because Christ endured it for them.

never. In extending the promise beyond this life, Jesus lays claim to a divine prerogative. The Jews understood the statement as promising avoidance of physical death (v. 52). Earlier statements made clear what Jesus meant (5:24–29).

■ 8:53 Are You greater than our father Abraham. Abraham and the prophets, great as they were in the history of redemption, could not take away death. Only Christ has triumphed over the grave.

■ 8:54 My honor. Lit. "glory." In the days of His earthly ministry, Jesus did not seek honor even though it belonged to Him as the Son of God. Christ's glory was visible to those who had eyes to see it (1:14). It was apparent in His resurrection and ascension (1 Tim. 3:16), and will be seen fully at His Second Coming.

■ 8:56 Abraham . . . saw it and was glad. Abraham saw Christ's day as he embraced in faith many promises given to him by God, promises that demanded the coming of Christ to be fulfilled. Since the context of the discussion has been Satan as a murderer and Jesus as one whose death delivers from death, it may have special reference to God's providing the ram as a substitute when Abraham was prepared to sacrifice Isaac. This statement shows clearly that even in Old Testament times, believers were saved through faith in Christ presented to them in the foreshadowing given by God to reveal His redemptive plan (cf. Acts 4:12).

■ 8:57 fifty years old. Jesus was closer to thirty (Luke 3:23).

■ 8:58 before Abraham was, I AM. This is a clear reference to Jesus' eternal preexistence. Since this is an attribute of God alone, this text is a forceful statement of Jesus' deity. The present tense of the verb suggests the eternal present of God's eternity. "I AM" is also reminiscent of God's name in Ex. 3:14 (vv. 24, 28 note). See "Jesus Christ, God and Man" at 1:14.

■ 8:59 they took up stones. The Jews would not accept Christ's claim to be God, but treated it as blasphemy, for which stoning was required in the law (Lev. 24:16; cf. John 10:31; Matt. 26:65).

■ 9:2 who sinned. Many Jews, like Job's friends, believed that every temporal misfortune was God's punishment for some specific sin. With a congenital affliction the explanation could be that the sin had been committed in the womb, or by the parents whose sinful act victimized their child. Jesus dismisses these as improper explanations (v. 3), but this is not to say that certain trials are not the God-ordained punishment for certain sins (e.g., the life of David after His adultery and murder, 2 Sam. 12—21). Neither does Jesus here dismiss the biblical doctrine of original sin (Rom. 5:12–21), which teaches that all suffering is the consequence of our corporate sin and rebellion in Adam. But it is unwise and uncharitable to judge that the sufferings of others are specifically punitive (Matt. 7:1). The question put to Jesus presents a false dilemma. Only two possibilities were given as reasons for the man's affliction, his own sin or the sin of his parents. Jesus offers a third option (v.3).

■ 9:3 that the works of God should be revealed. Some of our sufferings, like the trials of Job, are for God's glory, either through our resulting refinement or through a spectacular healing as in the present case. God's purpose is not always presently known to us, but we have God's assurance that His purpose is good (Rom. 8:28).

coming when no one can work. 5 As long as I am in the world, [e]I am the light of the world."

6 When He had said these things, [f]He spat on the ground and made clay with the saliva; and He anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay. 7 And He said to him, "Go, wash [g]in the pool of Siloam" (which is translated, Sent). So [h]he went and washed, and came back seeing.

8 Therefore the neighbors and those who previously had seen that he was [2]blind said, "Is not this he who sat and begged?"

9 Some said, "This is he." Others said, [3]"He is like him."

He said, "I am he."

10 Therefore they said to him, "How were your eyes opened?"

11 He answered and said, [i]"A Man called Jesus made clay and anointed my eyes and said to me, 'Go to [4]the pool of Siloam and wash.' So I went and washed, and I received sight."

12 Then they said to him, "Where is He?"

He said, "I do not know."

The Pharisees Excommunicate the Healed Man

13 They brought him who formerly was blind to the Pharisees. 14 Now it was a Sabbath when Jesus made the clay and opened his eyes. 15 Then the Pharisees also asked him again how he had received his sight. He said to them, "He put clay on my eyes, and I washed, and I see."

16 Therefore some of the Pharisees said, "This Man is not from God, because He does not [5]keep the Sabbath."

Others said, [j]"How can a man who is a sinner do such signs?" And [k]there was a division among them.

17 They said to the blind man again, "What do you say about Him because He opened your eyes?"

He said, [l]"He is a prophet."

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind and received his sight, until they called the parents of him who had received his sight. 19 And they asked them, saying, "Is this your son, who you say was born blind? How then does he now see?"

20 His parents answered them and said, "We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind; 21 but by what means he now sees we do not know, or who opened his eyes we do not know. He is of age; ask him. He will speak for himself." 22 His parents said these things because [m]they feared the Jews, for the Jews had agreed already that if anyone confessed that He was Christ, he [n]would be put out of the synagogue. 23 Therefore his parents said, "He is of age; ask him."

24 So they again called the man who was blind, and said to him, [o]"Give God the glory! [p]We know that this Man is a sinner."

25 He answered and said, "Whether He is a sinner or not I do not know. One thing I know: that though I was blind, now I see."

26 Then they said to him again, "What did He do to you? How did He open your eyes?"

27 He answered them, "I told you already, and you did not listen. Why do you want to hear it again? Do you also want to become His disciples?"

28 Then they reviled him and said, "You are His disciple, but we are Moses' disciples. 29 We know that God [q]spoke to [r]Moses; as for this fellow, [s]we do not know where He is from."

30 The man answered and said to them, [t]"Why, this is a marvelous thing, that you do not know where He is from; yet He has opened my eyes! 31 Now we know that [u]God does not hear sinners;

■ 9:6 He spat on the ground. In Mark 8:23–25, Jesus also used saliva in the course of a healing. It was not a medical agent, but provided an opportunity for the man to show his faith by obeying Jesus' command (v. 7).

■ 9:9 He is like him. The miracle was so amazing that onlookers could not believe it was the same man.

■ 9:12 I do not know. As the story develops, the healed man moves forward in the path of faith. Here, he does not know where Jesus is; later he asserts that Jesus is a prophet (v. 17); later still he raises doubts about the accusation that Jesus is a sinner (v. 25); and finally, after meeting Jesus again, he acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God and worships Him (vv. 35–38). These steps of faith illustrate what the author of the Gospel wants for his readers (20:31).

■ 9:16 Sabbath. Instead of being grateful for this supernatural work of God's grace, the Pharisees began to haggle about the observance of the Sabbath. Their concern was specifically about their traditional interpretation of what the fourth commandment required. Not one of the actions involved (spitting, applying mud, going as far as Siloam, washing one's face, healing a blind man) was forbidden by the law. Rather than question their own understanding of the law, they rejected Jesus and His ministry.

■ 9:18–23 An inquiry with the blind man's parents establishes the reality of his blindness and the cure.

■ 9:24–34 A second investigation with the healed man brings no new facts to light, but the investigators' position is hardened. The Pharisees call Jesus a "sinner" (v. 24) whose origin is unknown (v. 29), and they excommunicate the man whose replies only irritate them (vv. 27, 30). His replies are to the point: The man born blind had been healed, and "God does not hear sinners" (v. 31).

but if anyone is a worshiper of God and does His will, He hears him. 32 Since the world began it has been unheard of that anyone opened the eyes of one who was born blind. 33 [v]If this Man were not from God, He could do nothing."

34 They answered and said to him, [w]"You were completely born in sins, and are you teaching us?" And they [6]cast him out.

True Vision and True Blindness

35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when He had [x]found him, He said to him, "Do you [y]believe in [z]the Son of [7]God?"

36 He answered and said, "Who is He, Lord, that I may believe in Him?"

37 And Jesus said to him, "You have both seen Him and [a]it is He who is talking with you."

38 Then he said, "Lord, I believe!" And he [b]worshiped Him.

39 And Jesus said, [c]"For judgment I have come into this world, [d]that those who do not see may see, and that those who see may be made blind."

40 Then some of the Pharisees who were with Him heard these words, [e]and said to Him, "Are we blind also?"

41 Jesus said to them, [f]"If you were blind, you would have no sin; but now you say, 'We see.' Therefore your sin remains.

Jesus the True Shepherd

10 "Most assuredly, I say to you, he who does not enter the sheepfold by the door, but climbs up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. 2 But he who enters by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. 3 To him the doorkeeper opens, and the sheep hear his voice; and he calls his own sheep by [a]name and leads them out. 4 And when he brings out his own sheep, he goes before them; and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice. 5 Yet they will by no means follow a [b]stranger, but will flee from him, for they do not know the voice of strangers." 6 Jesus used this illustration, but they did not understand the things which He spoke to them.

3 [a]John 20:16

5 [b][2 Cor. 11:13–15]

8 [1]M omits before Me

9 [c][John 14:6; Eph. 2:18]

■ 9:35–38 In this second encounter with Jesus, the healed man's faith moves from a general confidence in Jesus' godly mission to a joyful acceptance of Him as the Messiah, worthy to be worshiped.

■ 9:39–41 In this epilogue Jesus brings to light the impact of His coming: those who falsely imagine they have special insight into the things of God become blind opponents of God's ways, and those who seem less informed are able to see when the Spirit of God opens their eyes and leads them to faith.

■ 9:39 For judgment I have come. The First Coming of Christ did not bring in the Last Judgment (3:17; 12:47), but He confronted people with the obligation to decide for or against Him (Matt. 12:30; Luke 11:23). Until the Second Coming of Christ, this is still the age of redemption during which the blind are made to see, and those dead in trespasses and sins are raised to newness of life (Eph. 2:4).

■ 9:41 We see. The opponents lacked the elementary humility of acknowledging that they were sinners.

■ 10:1–42 This chapter is divided into three sections: the good shepherd discourse (vv. 1–21), the discourse with the Jews at the Feast of Dedication (vv. 22–38), and a closing section (vv. 39–42). The chapter is unified by the teaching on the certain character of Christ's saving activity.

■ 10:1 For God as the Shepherd of His people, see Gen. 48:15; 49:24; Ps. 23:1; 28:9; 78:52; 80:1; Is. 40:11; Jer. 31:10; Ezek. 34:11–16. A prophecy in Zech. 13:7 concerning "the Shepherd" of Israel was applied by Jesus to Himself (Matt. 26:31). Jesus here presents His ministry as the work of a shepherd. In other parts of the New Testament, Jesus is referred to as the "great Shepherd" (Heb. 13:20) and "the Chief Shepherd" (1 Pet. 5:4); and Rev. 7:17 says that "the Lamb . . . will shepherd them."

the sheepfold. A fenced enclosure with one entrance. Thieves and predators might climb over the fence to steal or even kill the sheep (vv. 8, 10).

■ 10:2 enters by the door. The shepherd does not need to climb over the fence, but is admitted by the watchman. The language here implies that several flocks are kept in one fold, and that a proper shepherd attended to his own sheep.

■ 10:3 the sheep hear. The shepherd knows his sheep "by name" and the sheep recognize their shepherd's voice and come to him. This is a vivid image of how God has marked some people to be His in the midst of fallen humanity.

■ 10:4 know his voice. Electing grace is also effective grace: Jesus, who knows the sheep, reveals Himself to them in such a way that they will respond. He does not force them to follow Him, but through the work of regeneration He makes them willing.

■ 10:5 they will by no means follow a stranger. This comforting promise does not exclude the need to warn believers against deceitful teachers (Mark 13:22, 23; 2 Tim. 3:5; 4:2–5; 1 John 2:26).

■ 10:6 they did not understand. In some cases the disciples themselves did not understand what Jesus was teaching (Matt. 13:10–17, 36; 15:15).

■ 10:7 I am the door. Jesus changes the metaphor from "shepherd" to "door." As the "door of the sheep," Jesus is the One through whom eternal life is received (cf. 14:6; Matt. 7:13, 14). The "I am" phrase here continues the series of seven such expressions in this Gospel (6:35 note).

■ 10:8 thieves and robbers. This does not refer to the Old Testament prophets sent by God (Matt. 21:34–36; 23:29–36), but to anyone who falsely claimed to be the Messiah.

■ 10:9 If anyone enters by Me, he will be saved. This guarantees that salvation is given to those who trust in Christ (Acts 16:31; Rom. 10:9, 10). In 14:6, it is made plain that these only are saved. Christ is necessary and sufficient for salvation (3:36).

Definite Redemption

Definite redemption, also called "particular redemption," or "limited atonement," is the historic Reformed doctrine about the intention of the triune God in the death of Jesus Christ. Without questioning the infinite worth of Christ's sacrifice or the genuineness of God's sincere invitation to all who hear the gospel (Rev. 22:17), the doctrine states that Christ in dying intended to accomplish what He did accomplish: to take away the sins of God's elect, and to ensure that they would all be brought to faith through regeneration and preserved through faith for glory. Christ did not intend to die in this efficacious sense for everyone. The proof of that, as Scripture and experience unite to teach us, is that not all are saved.

In discussing the atonement, some say that Christ died for all, and that all without exception will be saved. This is an actual universalism. A second doctrine is that Christ died for all, but that His death has no saving effect without an added faith and repentance not foreseen in His death. In other words, He died for the general purpose of making salvation possible, but the salvation of particular individuals was not included in His death. This is a hypothetical universalism. The third doctrine is that although Christ's death was infinite in value, it was offered to save only some, those who were known beforehand. This is the limited or definite atonement.

Scripture does not teach that all will be saved, ruling out actual universalism. The other two views do not differ about how many will be saved, but about the purpose for which Christ died. Scripture addresses this question. The New Testament teaches that God chose for salvation a great number of the fallen race and sent Christ into the world to save them (John 6:37–40; 10:27–29; 11:51, 52; Rom. 8:28–39; Eph. 1:3–14; 1 Pet. 1:20). Christ is said to have died for a particular people, with the clear implication that His death secured their salvation (John 10:15–18, 27–29; Rom. 5:8–10; 8:32; Gal. 2:20; 3:13, 14; 4:4, 5; 1 John 4:9, 10; Rev. 1:4–6; 5:9, 10). Before He died, Christ prayed for those the Father had given Him, and not for the world (John 17:9, 20). Jesus' prayer lifted up those for whom He was going to die, and He promised them that He would not fail to save them. Such passages present the idea of a definite atonement. The Old Testament, with its emphasis on the election of grace, provides strong support.

The free offer of the gospel, and the commandment to preach the good news everywhere, is not inconsistent with the teaching that Christ died for His elect people. All who come to Christ will find mercy (John 6:35, 47–51, 54–57; Rom. 1:16; 10:8–13). The gospel offers Christ, who knows His sheep, He died for them; He calls them by name, and they hear Him. This is the gospel that He commanded His disciples to preach in all the world, in order to save sinners. □

■ 10:10 that they may have life . . . abundantly. The life that Jesus gives is unique because it is eternal, and He gives this life in ever-growing abundance to His redeemed.

■ 10:11 good shepherd. Jesus now returns to the illustration with which the chapter started (vv. 2–5).

gives His life. Jesus as Shepherd does more than risk His life (cf. 1 Sam. 17:34–36), He gives His life, enduring death on behalf of sinners. This is intimated in the name "Lamb of God" declared by John the Baptist (1:29) and in other statements by Jesus Himself (2:19; 3:14; 6:51).

for the sheep. This sacrifice is for "the sheep." It is for those whom the Father has given Him (17:2, 6, 24), the elect. It is they who through the death of Jesus Christ on their behalf will be justified and enjoy fellowship with God.

■ 10:12 a hireling. Jesus sharpens the picture by contrasting His sacrificial service with the cowardly abandonment of the sheep by those who are controlled by self-interest. Thieves rob the sheep; hired hands abandon the sheep; Christ lays down His life for the sheep.

■ 10:14 I know My sheep, and am known by My own. This is placed in parallel with the intimacy between the Father and the Son (v. 15; cf. 17:21–23). It is clear that "know" here, as so often in Scripture, means more than a mental grasp; it includes personal understanding and a commitment of will. To say that God "knows" a person in this way refers to His gracious redemptive commitment to that individual.

■ 10:15 See theological note "Definite Redemption."

Father; [i]and I lay down My life for the sheep. [16] And [j]other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they will hear My voice; [k]and there will be one flock and one shepherd.

[17] "Therefore My Father [l]loves Me, [m]because I lay down My life that I may take it again. [18] No one takes it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. I [n]have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. [o]This command I have received from My Father."

[19] Therefore [p]there was a division again among the Jews because of these sayings. [20] And many of them said, [q]"He has a demon and is [3]mad. Why do you listen to Him?"

[21] Others said, "These are not the words of one who has a demon. [r]Can a demon [s]open the eyes of the blind?"

The Shepherd Knows His Sheep

[22] Now it was the Feast of Dedication in Jerusalem, and it was winter. [23] And Jesus walked in the temple, [t]in Solomon's porch. [24] Then the Jews surrounded Him and said to Him, "How long do You keep us in [4]doubt? If You are the Christ, tell us plainly."

[25] Jesus answered them, "I told you, and you do not believe. [u]The works that I do in My Father's name, they [v]bear witness of Me. [26] But [w]you do not believe, because you are not of My sheep, [5]as I said to you. [27] [x]My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me. [28] And I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish; neither shall anyone snatch them out of My hand. [29] [y]My Father, [z]who has given them to Me, is greater than all; and no one is able to snatch them out of My Father's hand. [30] [a]I and My Father are one."

Renewed Efforts to Stone Jesus

[31] Then [b]the Jews took up stones again to stone Him. [32] Jesus answered them, "Many good works I have shown you from My Father. For which of those works do you stone Me?"

[33] The Jews answered Him, saying, "For a good work we do not stone You, but for [c]blasphemy, and because You, being a Man, [d]make Yourself God."

[34] Jesus answered them, "Is it not written in your law, [e]'I said, "You are gods"'? [35] If He

34 [e]Ps. 82:6

■ 10:16 other sheep. The gospel is not confined to Israel, but extends to the rest of the world.

■ 10:17 My Father loves Me. The self-sacrifice of the Son is an act of loving obedience to the Father that reveals the love among the three Persons of the Trinity.

■ 10:17, 18 I . . . take it again. The resurrection of Christ is described as the act of each of the three Persons of the Trinity: the Son, the Father (Acts 2:32; 3:15; 4:10; Gal. 1:1), and the Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:10–11).

■ 10:18 No one takes it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. This is a claim to deity, as even His enemies understood (v. 33), because God alone is the Author and Giver of life. The verse also underscores that Christ was not a victim but freely offered Himself for sinners. See "The Humble Obedience of Christ" at 5:19.

■ 10:19 division. See 7:43; 9:16.

■ 10:20 See 7:20.

■ 10:22 Feast of Dedication. This festival, now called Hanukkah, is celebrated in December. It commemorates the restoration of the temple in the time of Judas Maccabeus and the Jewish revolt against Antiochus Epiphanes (164 B.C.).

■ 10:23 Solomon's porch. A portico with roof and supporting columns on the east side of the court of the Gentiles in Herod's temple (Acts 3:11; 5:12).

■ 10:24 If You are the Christ. This was the key question arising from Jesus' ministry. The disciples had reached that conclusion (6:69; Matt. 16:16; Mark 8:29; Luke 9:20). The question will be raised again at Jesus' trial, and the high priest will regard Jesus' answer as blasphemy (Matt. 26:63–65; Mark 14:61–64; Luke 22:67–71).

■ 10:25 I told you. Jesus had affirmed this to the Samaritan woman (4:26) and to the man born blind (9:37), and He had accepted the confession of the disciples (v. 24 note; 1:49). In His discussions with the Jewish authorities, He had implied as much (8:28, 58). Here He again affirms His messianic identity absolutely.

The works. Jesus had referred to His works as evidence of the trustworthiness of His claims (5:36), and He pressed this point later before the disciples (14:11; 15:24). The man born blind had reasoned the same way (9:32, 33).

■ 10:26 you do not believe. They closed their eyes to the clear evidence.

because you are not of My sheep. Only those who are Christ's, whom the Father has given Him, come to faith. Others are so blinded by their sinful prejudice that they refuse to believe. Only the regenerate, who have been "born again" (3:3, 7) believe.

■ 10:27 My sheep. They listen to Jesus (vv. 3–5), and they follow Him (v. 4). These believers show renewal in the new direction and commitment of their lives.

■ 10:28 The Lord gives His sheep the endless life of fellowship with God (17:2–3). He protects them from perishing, according to the infallibility of divine grace; and He allows no one to snatch them from His hand. The saints persevere because God preserves them. The sheep are not able to snatch themselves out of God's hand because the divine Shepherd will keep all of His true sheep from eternally straying (cf. 17:12). The solemn warnings of Scripture against apostasy are not intended to cause doubts about God's perseverance with those He has saved (cf. 1 John 2:19). See "Perseverance of the Saints" at Rom. 8:30.

■ 10:29 My Father's hand. The hand of the Shepherd is also the Father's hand, and the supreme power of God is the ultimate guarantee of the sheep's safety.

■ 10:30 one. Not identical Persons but one in essence (the Greek word for "one" is neuter). The Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit possess alike the fullness of the divine nature. This essential unity underlies their unity in the redemptive purpose. The verse indicates more than unity of purpose.

■ 10:31–33 The Jews understood Jesus' claim to deity, and were preparing to stone Him for blasphemy (8:59).

■ 10:34–38 In the Old Testament, human judges (see text note at Ps. 82:6) could be called "gods" because they were viewed as acting in God's place in dispensing justice. The Hebrew word 'elohim is used not called them gods, *f*to whom the word of God came (and the Scripture *g*cannot be broken), 36 do you say of Him *h*whom the Father sanctified and *i*sent into the world, 'You are blaspheming,' *j*because I said, 'I am *k*the Son of God'? 37 *l*If I do not do the works of My Father, do not believe Me; 38 but if I do, though you do not believe Me, *m*believe the works, that you may know and *n*believe *o*that the Father is in Me, and I in Him." 39 *p*Therefore they sought again to seize Him, but He escaped out of their hand.

The Believers Beyond Jordan

40 And He went away again beyond the Jordan to the place *q*where John was baptizing at first, and there He stayed. 41 Then many came to Him and said, "John performed no sign, *r*but all the things that John spoke about this Man were true." 42 And many believed in Him there.

The Death of Lazarus

11 Now a certain man was sick, Lazarus of Bethany, the town of *a*Mary and her sister Martha. 2 *b*It was that Mary who anointed the Lord with fragrant oil and wiped His feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick. 3 Therefore the sisters sent to Him, saying, "Lord, behold, he whom You love is sick."

4 When Jesus heard that, He said, "This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God may be glorified through it."

5 Now Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus. 6 So, when He heard that he was sick, *c*He stayed two more days in the place where He was. 7 Then after this He said to the disciples, "Let us go to Judea again."

8 The disciples said to Him, "Rabbi, lately the Jews sought to *d*stone You, and are You going there again?"

9 Jesus answered, "Are there not twelve hours in the day? *e*If anyone walks in the day, he does not stumble, because he sees the *f*light of this world. 10 But *g*if one walks in the night, he stumbles, because the light is not in him." 11 These things He said, and after that He said to them, "Our friend Lazarus *h*sleeps, but I go that I may wake him up."

12 Then His disciples said, "Lord, if he sleeps he will get well." 13 However, Jesus spoke of his death, but they thought that He was speaking about taking rest in sleep.

14 Then Jesus said to them plainly, "Lazarus is dead. 15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, that you may believe. Nevertheless let us go to him."

16 Then *i*Thomas, who is called the Twin, said to his fellow disciples, "Let us also go, that we may die with Him."

only to refer to the one true God but also to denote false gods, angels, and, very rarely, men exercising divine functions. Jesus' argument may be understood as follows: "Rather than taking offense because this word is used of Me, you should examine My credentials that prove My Father has sent Me into this world."

■ 10:34 your law. The quotation is found in Ps. 82:6. The term "law" was not restricted to the Pentateuch, or Torah, but referred to any part of the Old Testament as also having legal authority (15:25).

■ 10:35 to whom the word of God came. This is not a reference to the writing of Scripture, but to the divine appointment of the judges.

the Scripture cannot be broken. A strong statement of the authority of Scripture. In this serious confrontation that was to end in His death, Jesus did not hesitate to base His whole argument on one word of a minor psalm of Asaph. See "The Authority of Scripture" at 2 Tim. 3:16.

■ 10:37 the works of My Father. The miracles and the whole course of His life attested to the correctness of Jesus' claim of a heavenly origin and mission. See "Miracles" at 1 Kin. 17:22.

■ 10:38 the Father is in Me, and I in Him. This mutual indwelling is characteristic of relationships within the Trinity.

■ 10:39 He escaped. John does not give us details but makes it plain that nothing could happen to Jesus until God's appointed hour (7:44; 8:59).

■ 11:1–54 The miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead is a climax to all the preceding signs that have revealed God's glory through Jesus. Here death itself, the final enemy of humanity, is successfully confronted by the One who is Himself the Resurrection and the Life. Yet even this glorious sign divides those who witness it. Those who reject the glory revealed commit themselves to pursuing Jesus' death (vv. 46–50).

■ 11:1 Lazarus. Not the Lazarus of Luke 16:20. Lazarus is named only in John's Gospel.

■ 11:2 that Mary. Mary's anointing of Jesus is related in 12:1–8.

■ 11:3 he whom You love is sick. This was a distress call, apparently sent shortly before Lazarus died.

■ 11:4 This sickness is not unto death. In so speaking, Jesus is not denying that Lazarus will be dead for four days, but denying that death will finally triumph.

■ 11:6 two more days. A delay the sisters would have a hard time understanding.

■ 11:8 the Jews sought to stone You. Jesus' death did not happen by accident or miscalculation; it was what He came to do. Jesus and His disciples knew that if He went to Jerusalem His life would be at risk.

■ 11:11 sleeps. In the New Testament death is frequently represented as sleep (Acts 7:60; 1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thess. 4:13). This is a common way of talking about death and says nothing in favor of the doctrine of "soul-sleep" for departed saints. Scripture is clear that conscious awareness continues after death.

■ 11:16 that we may die with Him. The hostility toward Jesus has now reached the point that the disciples are convinced that a trip to Jerusalem will result in Jesus' death. If they cannot talk Him out of the trip, they are at least willing to die with Him.

I Am the Resurrection and the Life

17 So when Jesus came, He found that he had already been in the tomb four days. 18 Now Bethany was near Jerusalem, about [1]two miles away. 19 And many of the Jews had joined the women around Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Now Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met Him, but Mary was sitting in the house. 21 Now Martha said to Jesus, "Lord, if You had been here, my brother would not have died. 22 But even now I know that [j]whatever You ask of God, God will give You."

23 Jesus said to her, "Your brother will rise again."

24 Martha said to Him, [k]"I know that he will rise again in the resurrection at the last day."

25 Jesus said to her, "I am [l]the resurrection and the life. [m]He who believes in Me, though he may [n]die, he shall live. 26 And whoever lives and believes in Me shall never die. Do you believe this?"

27 She said to Him, "Yes, Lord, [o]I believe that You are the Christ, the Son of God, who is to come into the world."

Jesus and Death, the Last Enemy

28 And when she had said these things, she went her way and secretly called Mary her sister, saying, "The Teacher has come and is calling for you." 29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly and came to Him. 30 Now Jesus had not yet come into the town, but [2]was in the place where Martha met Him. 31 [p]Then the Jews who were with her in the house, and comforting her, when they saw that Mary rose up quickly and went out, followed her, [3]saying, "She is going to the tomb to weep there."

32 Then, when Mary came where Jesus was, and saw Him, she [q]fell down at His feet, saying to Him, [r]"Lord, if You had been here, my brother would not have died."

33 Therefore, when Jesus saw her weeping, and the Jews who came with her weeping, He groaned in the spirit and was troubled. 34 And He said, "Where have you laid him?"

They said to Him, "Lord, come and see."

35 [s]Jesus wept. 36 Then the Jews said, "See how He loved him!"

37 And some of them said, "Could not this Man, [t]who opened the eyes of the blind, also have kept this man from dying?"

Lazarus Raised from the Dead

38 Then Jesus, again groaning in Himself, came to the tomb. It was a cave, and a [u]stone lay against it. 39 Jesus said, "Take away the stone."

Martha, the sister of him who was dead, said to Him, "Lord, by this time there is a stench, for he has been dead four days."

40 Jesus said to her, "Did I not say to you that if you would believe you would [v]see the glory of God?" 41 Then they took away the stone [4]from the place where the dead man was lying. And Jesus lifted up His eyes and said, "Father, I thank You that You have heard Me. 42 And I know that You always hear Me, but [w]because of the people who are standing by I said this, that they may believe that You sent Me." 43 Now when He had said these things, He cried with a loud

42 [w]John 12:30; 17:21

■ 11:17 four days. This reference to the duration of time in the tomb, repeated in v. 39, is designed to show that Lazarus was really dead, and not merely sick.

■ 11:21 If You had been here. The first statement of each sister (cf. v. 32).

■ 11:22 even now. Martha still expected some miracle, although it seemed that her brother was beyond recovery. When Jesus speaks of resurrection, she relates it to the distant future, the "last day" (v. 24). Martha's faith was better informed than the Sadducees, who said there is no resurrection (Matt. 22:23).

■ 11:25 I am the resurrection and the life. This is repeated in part in 14:6 (Acts 3:15; Heb. 7:16). Life for the believer does not end at death, but continues eternally as an endless life of fellowship with God. This is true for those who, like Lazarus, were in the tomb as well as for those who are still alive. See note on 6:35.

■ 11:27 You are the Christ. The conversation elicits from Martha a confession of faith that parallels that of Peter (Matt. 16:16).

■ 11:28 The Teacher. A characterization of Jesus' ministry. He did not disdain, as others often did, to teach a woman (Luke 10:39, 42).

■ 11:33 He . . . was troubled. The outward expression of sorrow did not leave Jesus unmoved. He shed tears (v. 35) in sympathy for the bereaved.

■ 11:34 Where have you laid him. John's Gospel teaches both the deity of Christ (1:1, 18) and His full humanity. As the Mediator, Christ acted within the limits of His sinless humanity, without laying aside His deity. He experienced human emotions and could express ignorance of fact. See "The Humanity of Christ" at 2 John 7.

■ 11:37 Could not this Man. The questions raised are what sort of power Jesus has and when He will choose to use it. Lazarus was allowed to die and the sisters to mourn, in order that God's glory might be manifested (v. 4; 9:3). The healing of the blind man is remembered as clearly supernatural.

■ 11:41 Father, I thank You. Jesus offers thanks for the answer to His prayer. He is careful to relate this miracle to His mission as Messiah.

■ 11:43 Lazarus, come forth. The dead cannot hear, but Jesus wanted those present to see that God's voice can raise the dead (5:28, 29). This divine call that gives life to the dead vividly illustrates God's call to the spiritually dead that raises them to spiritual life (Eph. 2:5).

voice, "Lazarus, come forth!" 44 And he who had died came out bound hand and foot with [x]graveclothes, and [y]his face was wrapped with a cloth. Jesus said to them, "Loose him, and let him go."

45 Then many of the Jews who had come to Mary, [z]and had seen the things Jesus did, believed in Him. 46 But some of them went away to the Pharisees and [a]told them the things Jesus did. 47 [b]Then the chief priests and the Pharisees gathered a council and said, [c]"What shall we do? For this Man works many signs. 48 If we let Him alone like this, everyone will believe in Him, and the Romans will come and take away both our place and nation."

49 And one of them, [d]Caiaphas, being high priest that year, said to them, "You know nothing at all, 50 [e]nor do you consider that it is expedient for [5]us that one man should die for the people, and not that the whole nation should perish." 51 Now this he did not say on his own authority; but being high priest that year he prophesied that Jesus would die for the nation, 52 and [f]not for that nation only, but [g]also that He would gather together in one the children of God who were scattered abroad.

53 Then, from that day on, they plotted to [h]put Him to death. 54 [i]Therefore Jesus no longer walked openly among the Jews, but went from there into the country near the wilderness, to a city called [j]Ephraim, and there remained with His disciples.

55 [k]And the Passover of the Jews was near, and many went from the country up to Jerusalem before the Passover, to [l]purify themselves. 56 [m]Then they sought Jesus, and spoke among themselves as they stood in the temple, "What do you think—that He will not come to the feast?" 57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a command, that if anyone knew where He was, he should report it, that they might [n]seize Him.

The Anointing at Bethany

12 Then, six days before the Passover, Jesus came to Bethany, [a]where Lazarus was [1]who had been dead, whom He had raised from the dead. 2 [b]There they made Him a supper; and Martha served, but Lazarus was one of those who sat at the table with Him. 3 Then [c]Mary took a pound of very costly oil of [d]spikenard, anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped His feet with her hair. And the house was filled with the fragrance of the oil.

4 But one of His disciples, [e]Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, who would betray Him, said, 5 "Why was this fragrant oil not sold for [2]three hundred denarii and given to the poor?" 6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and [f]had the money box; and he used to take what was put in it.

7 But Jesus said, "Let her alone; [3]she has kept this for the day of My burial. 8 For [g]the poor you have with you always, but Me you do not have always."

The Plot to Kill Lazarus

9 Now a great many of the Jews knew that He was there; and they came, not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might also see Lazarus, [h]whom He had raised from the dead. 10 [i]But the chief

■ 11:45–47 This work of God had a double result: faith in some, and resistance and unbelief in others (cf. 2 Cor. 3:15, 16).

■ 11:48 The Sanhedrin, which had supreme religious authority in the land, feared that Jesus' ministry would provoke a popular uprising that the Romans would crush by force of arms.

■ 11:49 Caiaphas. He was a Sadducee and the son-in-law of Annas, who had been deposed as high priest by the Romans but had considerable influence over the religious leaders (18:13).

■ 11:50 Caiaphas callously suggests that executing an innocent person may be excused if it secures an advantage for the nation. He had forgotten the message of Prov. 17:15.

■ 11:51 he prophesied. In the purposes of God, Caiaphas unknowingly uttered a prophecy. It was a blessing that Jesus died, because His death was necessary for the salvation, not only of Jews, but of the elect of the whole world.

■ 11:54–57 The increasing hostility of the Jewish leaders led Jesus to withdraw for a time from Jerusalem.

■ 12:1–11 The anointing of Jesus recounted in Luke 7:36–50 is a different incident from this anointing by Mary, which is related also in Matt. 26:6–12 and Mark 14:3–9.

■ 12:3 costly oil. Judas evaluates this at a year's wages (v. 5), almost three times as much as Judas accepted to betray Jesus.

anointed the feet of Jesus. Matthew and Mark indicate that she poured some perfume on His head, which would be the common practice. To attend to His feet and wipe them with her hair was a tribute of humility and devotion.

■ 12:4–6 Judas (and the other disciples, Matt. 26:8) objected strongly, calling the act a waste of money. His remarks were inconsiderate of Jesus and cruel toward Mary. The interest in the poor is unmasked as artificial.

■ 12:7 Let her alone. Jesus defends Mary while hinting at the nearness of His death. For this pivotal point of God's redemptive work, no expense is too great.

■ 12:8 always . . . not . . . always. There would always be poverty in a fallen world, together with the responsibilities of ministering to the poor as an expression of God's love. The opportunity of being present with Jesus and serving Him during His time on earth would not be repeated.

■ 12:9, 10 Instead of recognizing God's hand in Lazarus's resurrection, the chief priests plotted to kill both Jesus and Lazarus.

priests plotted to put Lazarus to death also, 11 *j*because on account of him many of the Jews went away and believed in Jesus.

The Triumphal Entry

12 *k*The next day a great multitude that had come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 took branches of palm trees and went out to meet Him, and cried out:

"Hosanna!
l 'Blessed is He who comes in the name of the LORD!'
The King of Israel!"

14 *m*Then Jesus, when He had found a young donkey, sat on it; as it is written:

15 "Fear[n] not, daughter of Zion;
Behold, your King is coming,
Sitting on a donkey's colt."

16 *o*His disciples did not understand these things at first; *p*but when Jesus was glorified, *q*then they remembered that these things were written about Him and that they had done these things to Him.

17 Therefore the people, who were with Him when He called Lazarus out of his tomb and raised him from the dead, bore witness. 18 *r*For this reason the people also met Him, because they heard that He had done this sign. 19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, s"You see that you are accomplishing nothing. Look, the world has gone after Him!"

The Fruitful Grain of Wheat

20 Now there *t*were certain Greeks among those *u*who came up to worship at the feast. 21 Then they came to Philip, *v*who was from Bethsaida of Galilee, and asked him, saying, "Sir, we wish to see Jesus."

22 Philip came and told Andrew, and in turn Andrew and Philip told Jesus.

23 But Jesus answered them, saying, w"The hour has come that the Son of Man should be glorified. 24 Most assuredly, I say to you, *x*unless a grain of wheat falls into the ground and dies, it remains alone; but if it dies, it produces much [4]*y*grain. 25 *y*He who loves his life will lose it, and he who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life. 26 If anyone serves Me, let him *z*follow Me; and *a*where I am, there My servant will be also. If anyone serves Me, him My Father will honor.

■ 12:11 many of the Jews. The religious leaders were losing popularity: Nicodemus seemed to have defected (7:50–52); some Jews had believed in Christ, however superficially (8:30 note); some were impressed by the healing of the man born blind (10:21); Jesus seemed to be gaining followers across the Jordan (10:41, 42); and now Lazarus's resurrection was leading still more to faith in Him (vv. 17, 18; 11:45). All this prepared for the acclaim that Jesus would receive at His triumphal entry, which led the Pharisees to say, "the world has gone after Him" (v. 19).

■ 12:13 Hosanna. The salutation was borrowed in part from Ps. 118:25, 26, to which was added the reference to "The King of Israel." This was particularly disquieting to the Jewish leaders, who feared a popular uprising under Jesus' leadership.

■ 12:14, 15 The precise circumstances had been prophesied in Zech. 9:9. This prophecy is noted also in Matthew, and was understood in retrospect by the disciples.

■ 12:20 certain Greeks. An ironic footnote to the statement of the Pharisees in v. 19. These "Greeks" were probably not Jews of the dispersion (the Greek word is different from that translated "Hellenists" in Acts 6:1). Rather, they were perhaps proselytes or, more probably, Gentile "God-fearers" (as they were called) who participated in synagogue worship but did not undergo circumcision and full reception into the Jewish religion (Acts 8:27; 13:26; 17:4).

■ 12:23 The hour has come. In contrast to earlier statements that His time had not yet come (2:4; 7:6, 8, 30; 8:20), this is the first of a number of statements that Christ's death and resurrection are at hand (v. 27; 13:1; 16:32; 17:1). The cross and burial themselves are described elsewhere as His humiliation (Phil. 2:8). This humiliation is the way by which Christ the Mediator, following the days of His resurrection on earth, must enter the glory of His ascension to the Father's right hand (13:31, 32; cf. Phil. 2:8, 9).

■ 12:24 a grain of wheat. Jesus uses the growth of wheat from a seed as an explanation of His own work. His death in a certain time and place will open the doors of salvation for people of every age and nation.

■ 12:25 He who loves his life. Those who are absorbed by the interests of life on earth encounter ruin, while those detached from worldly interests will through Christ's work attain to eternal life (Matt. 10:39; Luke 17:33). It is in the service of Christ and in union with Him that the truth of this statement is experienced (ch. 14).

■ 12:27 Now My soul is troubled. Jesus is greatly troubled by the prospect of bearing the wrath of His holy Father in the place of sinners. Nevertheless He accepts His role and reasserts His commitment to it.

■ 12:28 a voice came from heaven. In three places in the Gospels the Father speaks directly from heaven about Jesus: at His baptism (Matt. 3:17), at the Transfiguration (Matt. 17:5), and here. For the benefit of the [d]Then a voice came from heaven, saying, "I have both glorified it and will glorify it again."

29 Therefore the people who stood by and heard it said that it had thundered. Others said, "An angel has spoken to Him."

30 Jesus answered and said, [e]"This voice did not come because of Me, but for your sake. 31 Now is the judgment of this world: now [f]the ruler of this world will be cast out. 32 And I, [g]if I am [5]lifted up from the earth, will draw [h]all peoples to Myself." 33 [i]This He said, signifying by what death He would die.

34 The people answered Him, [j]"We have heard from the law that the Christ remains forever; and how can You say, 'The Son of Man must be lifted up'? Who is this Son of Man?"

35 Then Jesus said to them, "A little while longer [k]the light is with you. [l]Walk while you have the light, lest darkness overtake you; [m]he who walks in darkness does not know where he is going. 36 While you have the light, believe in the light, that you may become [n]sons of light." These things Jesus spoke, and departed, and [o]was hidden from them.

Who Has Believed Our Report?

37 But although He had done so many [p]signs before them, they did not believe in Him, 38 that the word of Isaiah the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spoke:

> [q]"Lord, who has believed our report?
> And to whom has the arm of the LORD been revealed?"

39 Therefore they could not believe, because Isaiah said again:

> 40 "He[r] has blinded their eyes and hardened their hearts,
> [s]Lest they should see with their eyes,
> Lest they should understand with their hearts and turn,
> So that I should heal them."

41 [t]These things Isaiah said [6]when he saw His glory and spoke of Him.

Walk in the Light

42 Nevertheless even among the rulers many believed in Him, but [u]because of the Pharisees they did not confess Him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue; 43 [v]for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 Then Jesus cried out and said, [w]"He who believes in Me, [x]believes not in Me [y]but in Him disciples (v. 30), the Father places His seal of approval upon Jesus' saving work.

■ 12:29 the people . . . heard it. A situation similar to the circumstances of Paul's conversion, where those who accompanied him heard a noise but could not distinguish the words (Acts 9:7; 22:9).

■ 12:31 Now is the judgment of this world. By His coming death, Jesus will end the power of sin over Adam's race, judging and condemning it.

the ruler of this world. Satan (cf. 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:2; 1 John 4:4; 5:19). Satan has power in fact, not by right. When God destroys Satan's power, He is not violating his rights, or breaking any agreement made with him.

■ 12:32 lifted up. This refers to the Crucifixion (v. 33), but also to the glorification of Christ. As Mediator, He will be "lifted up" to the right hand of God (3:14 note).

will draw all peoples. The Cross exerts a universal attraction, and people of all nationalities, Gentiles as well as Jews, will be saved through it. "All" means all kinds of people without distinction, not all members of the human race without exception.

■ 12:34 the law. One of the terms used for the whole Old Testament Scripture (10:34; 15:25). This is a possible reference to Ps. 89:36; 110:4; Is. 9:7; Ezek. 37:25; Dan. 7:14; Mic. 5:2.

The Son of Man. They understood this title to be a claim to be the promised Messiah.

lifted up. They understood this to be a reference to hanging or crucifixion, and on the basis of scriptures such as Ps. 89:36, 37 they could not reconcile Christ's death with their view of the Messiah.

■ 12:35 the light. Jesus is the "light" (v. 46; 1:4–9; 8:12; 9:5). His impending death will bring a period of darkness.

■ 12:38 the word of Isaiah . . . might be fulfilled. Jesus' earthly public ministry was a fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy, which was largely one of judgment upon unbelieving Israel. Jesus pronounces the judgment, previously announced by Isaiah, that must precede the coming kingdom.

■ 12:39 they could not believe. No one will truly believe unless God opens that person's understanding by a supernatural work of the Spirit (3:3–7).

■ 12:41 saw His glory. Isaiah had received a vision of the glory of the enthroned God (Is. 6:1) and prophesied about the divine Suffering Servant (Is. 52:13—53:12).

■ 12:42 many believed in Him. Isaiah's announced judgment came true, yet even some leaders (e.g., Joseph and Nicodemus, 19:38–40) were believers despite the threat of excommunication by their unbelieving peers.

■ 12:44 believes in Me . . . Him who sent Me. The close relationship of Jesus with the Father (cf. 17:21–23) is stressed in three respects: to believe in Christ is to believe in the Father; to see Christ is to see the Father (v. 45); to hear Christ is to hear the Father (v. 50). On the other hand, rejection of Christ and His words is also a rejection of the Father and His words. This rejection results in judgment, although the leading purpose of Christ's incarnation was the salvation of His own and not the condemnation of those who do not believe.

who sent Me. 45 And [z]he who sees Me sees Him who sent Me. 46 [a]I have come as a light into the world, that whoever believes in Me should not abide in darkness. 47 And if anyone hears My words and does not [7]believe, [b]I do not judge him; for [c]I did not come to judge the world but to save the world. 48 [d]He who rejects Me, and does not receive My words, has that which judges him—[e]the word that I have spoken will judge him in the last day. 49 For [f]I have not spoken on My own authority; but the Father who sent Me gave Me a command, [g]what I should say and what I should speak. 50 And I know that His command is everlasting life. Therefore, whatever I speak, just as the Father has told Me, so I [h]speak."

Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet

13 Now [a]before the Feast of the Passover, when Jesus knew that [b]His hour had come that He should depart from this world to the Father, having loved His own who were in the world, He [c]loved them to the end.

2 And [1]supper being ended, [d]the devil having already put it into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray Him, 3 Jesus, knowing [e]that the Father had given all things into His hands, and that He [f]had come from God and [g]was going to God, 4 [h]rose from supper and laid aside His garments, took a towel and girded Himself. 5 After that, He poured water into a basin and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel with which He was girded. 6 Then He came to Simon Peter. And Peter said to Him, [i]"Lord, are You washing my feet?"

7 Jesus answered and said to him, "What I am doing you [j]do not understand now, [k]but you will know after this."

8 Peter said to Him, "You shall never wash my feet!"

Jesus answered him, [l]"If I do not wash you, you have no part with Me."

9 Simon Peter said to Him, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head!"

10 Jesus said to him, "He who is bathed needs only to wash his feet, but is completely clean; and [m]you are clean, but not all of you." 11 For [n]He knew who would betray Him; therefore He said, "You are not all clean."

12 So when He had washed their feet, taken His garments, and sat down again, He said to them, "Do you [2]know what I have done to you? 13 [o]You call Me Teacher and Lord, and you say well, for so I am. 14 [p]If I then, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, [q]you also ought to wash one another's feet. 15 For [r]I have given you an example, that you should do as I have done to you. 16 [s]Most assuredly, I say to you, a servant is not greater than his master; nor is he who is sent greater than he who sent him. 17 [t]If you know these things, blessed are you if you do them.

■ 12:48 the word that I have spoken. See "The Teaching of Jesus" at Matt. 7:28.

■ 13:1—17:26 These five chapters recount the ministry of Jesus to the disciples in the upper room, a ministry accompanied by a meal. The other Gospels indicate that the Lord's Supper was instituted on this occasion, but John does not say so, perhaps because he viewed the institution as sufficiently covered in the three Synoptic Gospels, Matthew, Mark, and Luke.

The relationship between the Synoptic accounts and John's Gospel has been extensively discussed by many commentators. The Synoptic Gospels all state that the meal alluded to in 13:2 was the Passover meal (Matt. 26:17–30; Mark 14:12–26; Luke 22:7–23). John, on the other hand, implies that the meal took place on the eve of the Passover, and that Jesus died at the precise time when the Passover lambs were being slaughtered (13:1, 29; 18:28; 19:14, 31, 42). Among scholars who accept the truthfulness of John and the Synoptic Gospels, several possible solutions have been proposed. See notes on 19:14; Matt. 26:17.

■ 13:1 He loved them to the end. Great emphasis is placed in chs. 13—17 on Christ's love. This love is illustrated in the moving scene of the foot-washing in which the Son of God does not disdain performing the most menial tasks of a servant (Phil. 2:7, 8).

■ 13:2 A vivid contrast between self-serving Judas and self-giving Jesus.

■ 13:3 Jesus, knowing. Jesus' humble conduct was not because He forgot His rank as incarnate God the Son. His act demonstrates that rank and privilege are not occasions for arrogance, but are higher credentials for service.

■ 13:5 wash the disciples' feet. Foot-washing was a common element of hospitality in a dusty country where people wore sandals (cf. Luke 7:44). This task was usually performed by the lowliest member of the household.

■ 13:6–10 Peter, with his usual impulsiveness (Luke 5:8; Matt. 16:22; Acts 10:14), objected to Jesus' action of washing His feet. He could not understand the humility of Christ. Jesus answers that whatever Peter's own expectations may have been, Peter must accept Jesus in the path that God has chosen for the Messiah to follow (Is. 55:7–9; Matt. 16:23).

■ 13:11 He knew. John emphasizes that Judas's betrayal was not an unforeseen development, but that Jesus proceeded in full awareness of coming events and of Judas's role in them. Judas's action was his own free and responsible decision—yet carried out according to the plan of God.

■ 13:13 Teacher and Lord. This double title gives special significance to the claim of Christ over the disciples' lives. Later, they would call Him "Lord" in acknowledgement of His deity (20:28).

■ 13:15 I have given you an example. The humility of Christ is a pattern for His disciples. Instead of aspiring to dominate, they must be eager to serve (Matt. 20:26–28; Phil. 2:5–8; 1 Pet. 2:21).

■ 13:17 if you do them. Intellectual perception is not enough, but must be backed up by commitment of life. This does not mean that our works are the basis of our acceptance by God, but that they are the evidence of a true faith. Trust and obedience are inseparable.

Jesus Identifies His Betrayer

18 "I do not speak concerning all of you. I know whom I have chosen; but that the [u]Scripture may be fulfilled, '[v]He who eats [3]bread with Me has lifted up his heel against Me.' 19 [w]Now I tell you before it comes, that when it does come to pass, you may believe that I am He. 20 [x]Most assuredly, I say to you, he who receives whomever I send receives Me; and he who receives Me receives Him who sent Me."

21 [y]When Jesus had said these things, [z]He was troubled in spirit, and testified and said, "Most assuredly, I say to you, [a]one of you will betray Me." 22 Then the disciples looked at one another, perplexed about whom He spoke.

23 Now [b]there was [4]leaning on Jesus' bosom one of His disciples, whom Jesus loved. 24 Simon Peter therefore motioned to him to ask who it was of whom He spoke.

25 Then, leaning [5]back on Jesus' breast, he said to Him, "Lord, who is it?"

26 Jesus answered, "It is he to whom I shall give a piece of bread when I have dipped it." And having dipped the bread, He gave it to [c]Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon. 27 [d]Now after the piece of bread, Satan entered him. Then Jesus said to him, "What you do, do quickly." 28 But no one at the table knew for what reason He said this to him. 29 For some thought, because [e]Judas had the money box, that Jesus had said to him, "Buy those things we need for the feast," or that he should give something to the poor.

30 Having received the piece of bread, he then went out immediately. And it was night.

The New Commandment

31 So, when he had gone out, Jesus said, [f]"Now the Son of Man is glorified, and [g]God is glorified in Him. 32 If God is glorified in Him, God will also glorify Him in Himself, and [h]glorify Him immediately. 33 Little children, I shall be with you a [i]little while longer. You will seek Me; [j]and as I said to the Jews, 'Where I am going, you cannot come,' so now I say to you. 34 [k]A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another; as I have loved you, that you also love one another. 35 [l]By this all will know that you are My disciples, if you have love for one another."

Jesus Predicts Peter's Denial

36 Simon Peter said to Him, "Lord, where are You going?"

Jesus answered him, "Where I [m]am going you cannot follow Me now, but [n]you shall follow Me afterward."

■ 13:18 not . . . all of you. Jesus chose Judas to be one of the Twelve, but He did not bring him to salvation. Judas was not one of the elect (Matt. 26:24), yet he was in no way coerced into his betrayal.

fulfilled. Jesus remarks on the fulfillment of Scripture in many details of His life. The quotation from Ps. 41:9 is a possible reference to the treason of Ahithophel (2 Sam. 15:31).

■ 13:19 before it comes. The truth of a prior prediction was the mark of a true prophet, and false prediction was a sure way to discern a false prophet (Deut. 18:18–22).

I am He. The word "He" is supplied here for the English text (as denoted by italics). The original Greek reads "I am," a claim to deity derived from Ex. 3:14.

■ 13:21 troubled in spirit. Compare 11:33; 12:27. From the beginning Jesus knew what Judas would do, but His soul still felt it as the time approached.

■ 13:22 perplexed. Judas had hidden his betrayal so carefully that the other disciples had no inkling of it. Each one began to fear that he might be the weak link (Matt. 26:22). Judas, too, mouthed the question (Matt. 26:25), but the disciples apparently did not hear Jesus' response.

■ 13:23 leaning on Jesus' bosom. In a formal banquet people were not seated but reclined at the table (Luke 22:14 note). John's position would not be unusual on such an occasion.

whom Jesus loved. This reference appears in 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20, and has generally been understood to be John, the author of the Gospel. The remark does not imply a lack of love for the other disciples, but indicates a special affinity for John (19:26, 27).

■ 13:26 a piece of bread. This was apparently a favor reserved for a guest of honor.

■ 13:27 Satan entered him. Judas's refusal to respond to Jesus' appeal opened up his heart to the control of Satan. He was still a responsible agent, but had surrendered to the dominion of evil (cf. 8:34).

do quickly. Jesus is still in control of the timetable and makes no further effort to check Judas on his fateful way.

■ 13:31, 32 glorified. The verb is repeated five times. One could have expected the opposite word ("humiliated"), for in the language of Paul, Jesus was on the threshold of His deepest humiliation, hanging on the Cross under the divine curse (Gal. 3:13). But John focuses on the revelation of God's glory through Christ so as to bring out the glory of God revealed especially in the Cross.

■ 13:33 You will seek Me. This restriction is a temporary one. In time His disciples will go where Jesus is, when He has prepared a place for them (14:2).

■ 13:34 A new commandment. There is nothing new about the command to love, since Lev. 19:18 teaches to "love your neighbor as yourself." The new element is the change from "neighbor" to "one another" and the change from "as yourself" to "as I have loved you." Christian love has Christ's sacrificial love as its model, and the community of believers as the primary (though by no means exclusive) place in which it is expressed (cf. Matt. 25:40; Gal. 6:10; Eph. 5:25). See "Love" at 1 Cor. 13:13.

■ 13:36 you shall follow Me afterward. This is a prophecy about the martyrdom of Peter (21:18, 19).

37 Peter said to Him, "Lord, why can I not follow You now? I will [o]lay down my life for Your sake."

38 Jesus answered him, "Will you lay down your life for My sake? Most assuredly, I say to you, the rooster shall not [p]crow till you have denied Me three times.

The Way, the Truth, and the Life

14 "Let [a]not your heart be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in Me. 2 In My Father's house are many [1]mansions; if it were not so, [2]I would have told you. [b]I go to prepare a place for you. 3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, [c]I will come again and receive you to Myself; that [d]where I am, there you may be also. 4 And where I go you know, and the way you know."

5 [e]Thomas said to Him, "Lord, we do not know where You are going, and how can we know the way?"

6 Jesus said to him, "I am [f]the way, [g]the truth, and [h]the life. [i]No one comes to the Father [j]except through Me.

The Father Revealed

7 [k]"If you had known Me, you would have known My Father also; and from now on you know Him and have seen Him."

8 Philip said to Him, "Lord, show us the Father, and it is sufficient for us."

9 Jesus said to him, "Have I been with you so long, and yet you have not known Me, Philip? [l]He who has seen Me has seen the Father; so how can you say, 'Show us the Father'? 10 Do you not believe that [m]I am in the Father, and the Father in Me? The words that I speak to you [n]I do not speak on My own authority; but the Father who dwells in Me does the works. 11 Believe Me that I am in the Father and the Father in Me, [o]or else believe Me for the sake of the works themselves.

The Answered Prayer

12 [p]"Most assuredly, I say to you, he who believes in Me, the works that I do he will do also; and greater works than these he will do, because I go to My Father. 13 [q]And whatever you ask in My name, that I will do, that the Father may be [r]glorified in the Son. 14 If you [3]ask anything in My name, I will do it.

■ 13:37 I will lay down my life for Your sake. Peter was undoubtedly sincere, but he did not know himself.

■ 13:38 the rooster shall not crow. The expression "crows twice" (as reported in Mark 14:30) refers to the same confirmation of Peter's denials.

■ 14:1 Let not your heart be troubled. This passage of supreme comfort is offered by Jesus in an hour darkened by the shadow of Judas's treachery and Peter's failure, only a few hours away from the agony of Gethsemane and death on the cross (13:21). Yet the statement conveys a sense of sublime peace, and is intended to minister to the fears of the disciples rather than to Jesus' own needs.

■ 14:2 many mansions. See text note. While the road is narrow and the gate small that lead to life (Matt. 7:14), it is also true that the number of Abraham's children is like the sand on the shore and the stars in the sky (Gen. 22:17), "a great multitude which no one could number" (Rev. 7:9).

prepare a place for you. Christ prepares the place in heaven for His own, and the Holy Spirit prepares the redeemed on earth for their place in heaven. See "Heaven" at Rev. 21:1.

■ 14:3 receive you to Myself. In 1:51, Jesus has compared Himself to a ladder between heaven and earth. He is the One who takes His people to heaven.

■ 14:6 the life. Not existence as such, but existence in fulfillment of God's design that we should be His living temple (1:4).

except through Me. This is a strong affirmation that Christ alone is the way of salvation. To imagine and proclaim other ways is to mislead people and forget the necessity of His coming and redemption (Acts 4:12; Rom. 10:14, 15; 1 John 5:12).

■ 14:7 If you had known Me. All the blessings previously named are summed up in the knowledge of God, which is more than a mere mental grasp, as it involves wholehearted commitment.

■ 14:8 show us the Father. Philip's request shows misunderstanding, a theme throughout the Gospel (2:21 note), but it opens the way for the development that follows.

■ 14:9 has seen the Father. Jesus is not denying the distinction of Persons in God. He is reminding Philip that He is the one who reveals God.

■ 14:10 I am in the Father, and the Father in Me. This is the reciprocal indwelling announced in 10:38 and developed here, also in v. 20, and again in 17:21. Three great unities are proclaimed in Scripture: the unity of the three Persons of the Trinity; the unity of the divine and human natures of Christ; and the unity of Christ and His people in redemption.

■ 14:11 See "Miracles" at 1 Kin. 17:22.

■ 14:12 greater works than these. History proves that Jesus is not affirming that each believer will do greater miracles than He did. The church's work in the power of the Holy Spirit will be "greater" than Jesus' works in number and territory.

■ 14:13 whatever you ask in My name. This does not guarantee that God will do whatever we ask if only we add to our prayer the words "in Christ's name." To pray in Christ's name is to identify with the purpose of Christ to the extent that our will has become identified with the will of God (1 John 5:14). Those who do not obtain what they specifically request are often surprised by a different but better answer—and "no" is sometimes the best answer. See "Prayer" at Luke 11:2.

Jesus Promises Another Helper

15 [s]"If you love Me, [4]keep My commandments. 16 And I will pray the Father, and [t]He will give you another [5]Helper, that He may abide with you forever— 17 [u]the Spirit of truth, [v]whom the world cannot receive, because it neither sees Him nor knows Him; but you know Him, for He dwells with you [w]and will be in you. 18 [x]I will not leave you orphans; [y]I will come to you.

Indwelling of the Father and the Son

19 "A little while longer and the world will see Me no more, but [z]you will see Me. [a]Because I live, you will live also. 20 At that day you will know that [b]I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you. 21 [c]He who has My commandments and keeps them, it is he who loves Me. And he who loves Me will be loved by My Father, and I will love him and [6]manifest Myself to him."

22 [d]Judas (not Iscariot) said to Him, "Lord, how is it that You will manifest Yourself to us, and not to the world?"

23 Jesus answered and said to him, "If anyone loves Me, he will keep My word; and My Father will love him, [e]and We will come to him and make Our home with him. 24 He who does not love Me does not keep My words; and [f]the word which you hear is not Mine but the Father's who sent Me.

The Gift of His Peace

25 "These things I have spoken to you while being present with you. 26 But [g]the [7]Helper, the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will [h]send in My name, [i]He will teach you all things, and bring to your [j]remembrance all things that I said to you. 27 [k]Peace I leave with you, My peace I give to you; not as the world gives do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. 28 You have heard Me [l]say to you, 'I am going away and coming back to you.' If you loved Me, you would rejoice because [8]I said, [m]'I am going to the Father,' for [n]My Father is greater than I.

29 "And [o]now I have told you before it comes, that when it does come to pass, you may be-

■ 14:15 keep. The proof of love to Christ is not an oral profession but living obedience.

■ 14:16 I will pray the Father, and He will give. Both the Father and the Son are active in sending the Holy Spirit. He is the Spirit of God, the Spirit of the Father (Gen. 1:2; Is. 11:2; Matt. 10:20), and the Spirit of Christ, the Son (Rom. 8:9; Gal. 4:6; Phil. 1:19; 1 Pet. 1:11).

another Helper. See text note. The Greek word translated "Helper" was used in legal language for an advocate for the defense (1 John 2:1), and more generally for one called upon for help. Jesus was such a help for the disciples; and after His ascension the Holy Spirit would take over this work. The term emphasizes the personality of the Holy Spirit as distinct from the Father and the Son, and also His unity with them in the work of redemption.

■ 14:17 the Spirit of truth. Here also the Spirit is in equality with the Father (Is. 65:16) and the Son (v. 6). The "Spirit of truth" is the authority behind the Bible: see "The Authentication of Scripture" at 2 Cor. 4:6.

the world. Sinful humanity as contrasted with God's redeemed people (15:18, 19; 17:9; 1 John 2:15–17; 4:5; 5:4, 5, 19).

with you and will be in you. The Spirit lives in believers (1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 6:19; 2 Cor. 6:16; Eph. 2:21).

■ 14:18 I will come to you. Jesus refers primarily to the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, since the mutual indwelling, "you in Me, and I in you" (v. 20), will not await the Second Coming of Christ. But these words are also appropriate for the hope of the church. Jesus will return to take the redeemed with Him (vv. 3, 19, 28; Acts 1:11).

■ 14:19 Because I live, you will live also. This emphasizes again the truth of 11:25, 26. Life is to be found only in Jesus Christ (v. 6; 1:4).

■ 14:20 I am in My Father. See notes on v. 10 and 10:38. The mutual indwelling in the Trinity is paralleled by the mutual indwelling of Christ and the believer.

■ 14:21 he who loves Me will be loved. Just as there is reciprocal indwelling, there is also the deepest mutuality of love (v. 15 note).

■ 14:22 to us, and not to the world. The disciple understood Jesus correctly, but he was probably hoping also for a political triumph that would be visible to all.

■ 14:23 Our home. As the Holy Spirit indwells the believer, so also the Father and the Son (Rom. 8:9–11; Rev. 3:20).

■ 14:26 the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send. In 15:26, it is the Son who sends the Spirit. The Father and Son concur in this sending. See theological note "The Holy Spirit."

will teach you all things. All things that they needed to know for their mission (16:13).

bring to your remembrance all things. This statement shows the divine intention in the teaching work of the Holy Spirit: the Spirit's teaching agrees with the teaching of Jesus Himself. He will ensure that the words of Jesus will be preserved for the instruction of the church (Matt. 24:35). These promises given to the apostles were fulfilled in the preaching of the apostles and in the completion of the New Testament Scriptures. They continue to be fulfilled as God's people learn from the inspired Scripture.

■ 14:27 Peace. This was a common Hebrew salutation used in greeting or farewell. Jesus gives it a new and deeper sense that reappears in the salutations of the New Testament letters. Jesus' peace is true reconciliation with God, purchased with His death (Acts 10:36; Rom. 5:1; 14:17; Eph. 2:14–17; Phil. 4:7; Col. 3:15). It is the supreme remedy for all fears (v. 1), and the legacy Jesus left for His heirs.

■ 14:28 you would rejoice. The Lord's departure and return are necessary to complete His mediatorial work (v. 3); they are the end of His humiliation and the revelation of His glory.

My Father is greater than I. This statement must be understood in light of the witness of this Gospel to the full deity of the Son, His equality and oneness with the Father (v. 9; 1:1; 10:30). The Son voluntarily veiled His divine glory to follow the way of humble obedience (Phil. 2:6–11).

■ 14:29 I have told you. The fulfillment of Jesus' prophecies will be a convincing proof that He was sent by God.

CHAPTER 15

2 [a]Matt. 15:13 [l]Or lifts up

The Holy Spirit

Before Jesus' death, He promised that He and the Father would send to His disciples "another Helper" (John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7). The Greek word translated "Helper" is parakletos. It means a lawyer or assistant in a legal question. In a wider context it means a person who provides encouragement, counsel, and strength. Jesus will send "another" Helper, One like Himself who will carry on after Him the teaching and testimony that He began (John 16:7–15).

The work of such a Helper is work carried out by a personal Being. The Old Testament reveals much about the Spirit's activity in creation (Gen. 1:2; Ps. 33:6), revelation (Is. 61:1–3; Mic. 3:8), empowerment (Ex. 31:2–6; Judg. 15:14, 15; Is. 11:2), and inward renewal (Ps. 51:10–12; Ezek. 36:25–27). But it was for the New Testament to reveal clearly the Spirit as a distinct divine Person, coequal with the Father and the Son. The Spirit is said to speak (Acts 1:16; 8:29; 10:19; 13:2), teach (John 14:26), witness (John 15:26), search (1 Cor. 2:10), will (1 Cor. 12:11), and intercede (Rom. 8:26, 27). All these are the acts of an individual Person.

The divinity of the Spirit appears from the way the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are named together in benedictions (2 Cor. 13:14; Rev. 1:4–6) and in the formula of baptism (Matt. 28:19). To lie to the Spirit is to lie to God (Acts 5:3, 4). The Spirit is called "seven Spirits" in Rev. 1:4; 3:1; 4:5; 5:6 as an expression of His fullness and the diversity of His work in the church in many places, represented by the seven churches in Asia (Rev. 1:11–20). This divine perfection was foreshadowed in Zech. 3:9; 4:2, 10; the number "seven" expresses the perfection of the one Spirit. The Spirit is the third Person of the Trinity, equal to the Father and the Son in glory, and worthy with them of worship, love, and obedience.

The work of the Spirit is to glorify Jesus Christ by showing His disciples who He is (John 16:7–15) and what He means to them (Rom. 8:15–17; Gal. 4:6). The Spirit enlightens (Eph. 1:17, 18), regenerates (John 3:5–8), sanctifies (Gal. 5:16–18), and transforms (2 Cor. 3:18; Gal. 5:22, 23). He gives God's people what they need to serve Him (1 Cor. 12:4–11).

The Spirit's full ministry began on Pentecost, after Jesus ascended to heaven (Acts 2:1–4). John the Baptist foretold that Jesus would baptize in the Spirit (Mark 1:8; John 1:33) as the fulfillment of a promise made in the Old Testament and repeated by Jesus (Jer. 31:31–34; Joel 2:28–32; Acts 1:4, 5). Pentecost marked the opening of the last era of world history that will end when Christ returns.

At the time they are born again, believers in Jesus receive the Spirit according to the fullness of the New Testament (Acts 2:38; Rom. 8:9; 1 Cor. 12:13). All the gifts for life service that appear subsequently in a Christian's life flow from this initial baptism in the Spirit, because in this baptism the sinner is united to the risen Christ. □ he has nothing. This is a reaffirmation of Jesus' sinlessness (v. 31; 8:29, 46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 7:26, 27). He is the only member of the human race about whom this may be said.

■ 15:1–17 The union of Christ the Mediator and His redeemed people is portrayed in Scripture in a variety of ways. These portrayals work together in explaining the nature of this relationship. There is: (a) the foundation and the building (1 Cor. 3:11; Eph. 2:20–22); (b) the vine and the branches (15:1–17; Rom. 6:5); (c) the head and the body (1 Cor. 6:15, 19; 12:12; Eph. 1:22, 23; 4:15, 16); (d) the husband and the wife (Rom. 7:4; Eph. 5:31, 32; Rev. 19:7); (e) Adam and his descendants (Rom.

bear [b]more fruit. 3 [c]You are already clean because of the word which I have spoken to you. 4 [d]Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abides in the vine, neither can you, unless you abide in Me.

5 "I am the vine, you are the branches. He who abides in Me, and I in him, bears much [e]fruit; for without Me you can do [f]nothing. 6 If anyone does not abide in Me, [g]he is cast out as a branch and is withered; and they gather them and throw them into the fire, and they are burned. 7 If you abide in Me, and My words [h]abide in you, [i]you[2] will ask what you desire, and it shall be done for you. 8 [j]By this My Father is glorified, that you bear much fruit; [k]so you will be My disciples.

Love and Joy Perfected

9 "As the Father [l]loved Me, I also have loved you; abide in My love. 10 [m]If you keep My commandments, you will abide in My love, just as I have kept My Father's commandments and abide in His love.

11 "These things I have spoken to you, that My joy may remain in you, and [n]that your joy may be full. 12 [o]This is My [p]commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you. 13 [q]Greater love has no one than this, than to lay down one's life for his friends. 14 [r]You are My friends if you do whatever I command you. 15 No longer do I call you servants, for a servant does not know what his master is doing; but I have called you friends, [s]for all things that I heard from My Father I have made known to you. 16 [t]You did not choose Me, but I chose you and [u]appointed you that you should go and bear fruit, and that your fruit should remain, that whatever you ask the Father [v]in My name He may give you. 17 These things I command you, that you love one another.

The World's Hatred

5:12, 18–21; 1 Cor. 15:22, 45, 49). The comparison with vine and branches indicates an organic union and a relation of complete dependence.

■ 15:1 I am the true vine. As elsewhere in this Gospel, "true" means "genuine." Jesus is the final, real "vine," as compared to Israel, which was a type foreshadowing the reality. Israel is called God's "vine" or "vineyard" in the Old Testament (Ps. 80:8–16; Jer. 2:21). Israel is judged for not bearing fruit, while Jesus is and does what the type signified. This is the last of the "I am" sayings in the Gospel (6:35 note).

■ 15:2 does not bear fruit. No branch that is Christ's can be wholly fruitless. But branches that belong to Christ will bear fruit, and undergo the pruning necessary to increase. The lack of fruit described in Ps. 80, Is. 5:1, and Jer. 2:21 is failure to be obedient to God. These Old Testament discussions of the vine and its fruit, combined with Christ's command to love in this chapter, indicate that "fruit" refers to a Christ-like life produced by the Holy Spirit (Gal. 5:22, 23), rather than to the number of people converted under a believer's ministry.

■ 15:4 Abide. Jesus emphasizes permanence and steadfastness in His relationship with the disciples. "Abide" is repeated ten times in vv. 4–10. The metaphor of the vine illustrates the point; it is only when nutrients flow freely to the branches that fruit can be borne.

■ 15:5 without Me you can do nothing. The total inability of the unregenerate sinner makes saving grace absolutely necessary for the beginning, the development, and the completion of salvation.

■ 15:6 If anyone does not abide in Me. Those that do not remain show that they never had a saving relationship with Christ. Their destiny is described with the language of damnation (cf. Matt. 3:12; 25:41; Jude 7; Rev. 20:14).

■ 15:8 so you will be My disciples. The works spoken of are not the ground of acceptance with God, but the result of a saving union with Christ received through grace, not merit.

■ 15:11 My joy. Many imagine that obedience to Christ is burdensome because it requires sacrificial self-surrender and service (Rom. 12:1, 2). Jesus teaches the opposite, associating obedience with joy.

■ 15:12 My commandment. See note on 13:34.

■ 15:13 lay down one's life. Rom. 5:7, 8 describes Christ's amazing self-sacrifice, not for the righteous, but for sinners who are at enmity with God.

■ 15:14 My friends. The test of friendship with Christ is obedience.

■ 15:15 No longer do I call you servants. There is no previous record of Jesus Christ calling the disciples "servants," except possibly 12:26; yet Jesus had a right to do this, as He had the right to be called "Lord" (13:13). "Friend" suggests a close relation, and the language of brotherhood is closer still (Heb. 2:10, 11).

all . . . I have made known. Christ did not have a higher revelation reserved for an inner group; He revealed Himself to the disciples unstintingly.

■ 15:16 You did not choose Me, but I chose you. Jesus does not mean that His disciples exercised no will of their own; they did choose to follow Him. Rather, He is indicating that the first initiative, the original and saving choice, was His. Had He not chosen them, they would not have chosen Him. The immediate reference is to service as apostles, but the principle applies to many other matters including election to salvation (Eph. 1:4, 11).

appointed you. This too emphasizes the sovereign activity of God exercised without violation of the human act of decision.

fruit. The figure refers to individual sanctification (Gal. 5:22, 23) and to effectiveness in evangelism (Matt. 13:3–8; Rom. 1:13).

fruit should remain. A distinguishing characteristic of Christian service is that the results have eternal significance.

whatever you ask . . . give you. Effective prayer is accompanied by obedience and identification with the will of God (14:13 note; Ps. 66:18).

■ 15:17 love one another. Repeated for the third time in this episode (v. 12; 13:34).

out of the world, therefore the world hates you. 20 Remember the word that I said to you, [z]'A servant is not greater than his master.' If they persecuted Me, they will also persecute you. [a]If they kept My word, they will keep yours also. 21 But [b]all these things they will do to you for My name's sake, because they do not know Him who sent Me. 22 [c]If I had not come and spoken to them, they would have no sin, [d]but now they have no excuse for their sin. 23 [e]He who hates Me hates My Father also. 24 If I had not done among them [f]the works which no one else did, they would have no sin; but now they have [g]seen and also hated both Me and My Father. 25 But this happened that the word might be fulfilled which is written in their law, [h]'They hated Me without a cause.'

The Coming Rejection

26 [i]"But when the [3]Helper comes, whom I shall send to you from the Father, the Spirit of truth who proceeds from the Father, [j]He will testify of Me. 27 And [k]you also will bear witness, because [l]you have been with Me from the beginning.

16 "These things I have spoken to you, that you [a]should not be made to stumble. 2 [b]They will put you out of the synagogues; yes, the time is coming [c]that whoever kills you will think that he offers God service. 3 And [d]these things they will do [1]to you because they have not known the Father nor Me. 4 But these things I have told you, that when [2]the time comes, you may remember that I told you of them.

"And these things I did not say to you at the beginning, because I was with you.

The Work of the Holy Spirit

5 "But now I [e]go away to Him who sent Me, and none of you asks Me, 'Where are You going?' 6 But because I have said these things to you, [f]sorrow has filled your heart. 7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth. It is to your advantage that I go away; for if I do not go away, the Helper will not come to you; but [g]if I depart, I will send Him to you. 8 And when He has [h]come, He will convict the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: 9 [i]of sin, because they do not believe in Me; 10 [j]of righteousness, [k]because I go to My Father and you see Me no more; 11 [l]of judgment, because [m]the ruler of this world is judged.

12 "I still have many things to say to you, [n]but you cannot bear them now. 13 However, when He, [o]the Spirit of truth, has come, [p]He will guide you into all truth; for He will not speak on His own authority, but whatever He hears He will speak; and He will tell you things to come. 14 [q]He will glorify Me, for He will take of what is Mine and declare it to you. 15 [r]All things that the Father has are Mine. Therefore I said that He [3]will take of Mine and declare it to you.

■ 15:22 they would have no sin. The sin here is the particular sin of hating Jesus and those who belong to Him; it is not sin in the general sense (v. 24).

■ 15:25 in their law. Those who received the law are condemned by it. This quotation is from the Psalms; "law" refers to the Old Testament in general rather than just to the Pentateuch (10:34 note).

■ 15:26 the Helper. See note on 14:16.

send to you. This refers to the work of the Holy Spirit in the plan of redemption, not His eternal relationships within the Godhead.

■ 15:27 because you have been with Me from the beginning. The apostles were eyewitnesses, and through the operation of the Holy Spirit, they were to provide the foundational and authoritative witness to Christ for the church (Luke 24:48; Acts 1:21, 22; Eph. 2:20). Following the conclusion of their unique work there can be no more apostles, and the church's present witness to Christ is dependent on the apostolic witness as it is written in the New Testament and illumined by the Holy Spirit.

■ 16:5 none of you asks Me. Although Peter had formally asked this and Thomas had practically done so (13:36; 14:5), their questions had been prompted by the prospect of Jesus' departure rather than the desire to know the nature and meaning of Jesus' destination (v. 6).

■ 16:7 if I do not go away. Although news of Jesus' departure disturbed the disciples, it was necessary if they were to enjoy the permanent presence of the Spirit.

■ 16:8 He will convict the world of sin. This is probably not a reference to the conviction that leads to repentance and salvation, but to the exposure of humanity's inexcusable guilt. See "Illumination and Conviction" at 1 Cor. 2:10.

■ 16:9 of sin. Unbelief is an especially serious sin.

■ 16:11 of judgment. Satan and those over whom he rules will ultimately be condemned by divine justice, whose verdict has already been rendered.

■ 16:13 He will guide you into all truth. This refers to the truth about God, not temporal knowledge of every kind. The Spirit guided the New Testament writers who prepared the new written revelation that would take its place beside the Old Testament Scriptures. The Spirit will remind the writers of the past (14:26; the Gospels), interpret the gospel for the present (14:26; 15:26; Acts and the Epistles), and reveal things to come (Rev. 1:19).

■ 16:14 He will glorify Me. Since the plan of redemption centers on Christ, this is the topic on which the Spirit will concentrate His teaching (15:26).

CHAPTER 17

Sorrow Will Turn to Joy

16 "A [s]little while, and you will not see Me; and again a little while, and you will see Me, [t]because I go to the Father."

17 Then some of His disciples said among themselves, "What is this that He says to us, 'A little while, and you will not see Me; and again a little while, and you will see Me'; and, 'because I go to the Father'?" 18 They said therefore, "What is this that He says, 'A little while'? We do not [4]know what He is saying."

19 Now Jesus knew that they desired to ask Him, and He said to them, "Are you inquiring among yourselves about what I said, 'A little while, and you will not see Me; and again a little while, and you will see Me'? 20 Most assuredly, I say to you that you will weep and [u]lament, but the world will rejoice; and you will be sorrowful, but your sorrow will be turned into [v]joy. 21 [w]A woman, when she is in labor, has sorrow because her hour has come; but as soon as she has given birth to the child, she no longer remembers the anguish, for joy that a human being has been born into the world. 22 Therefore you now have sorrow; but I will see you again and [x]your heart will rejoice, and your joy no one will take from you.

23 "And in that day you will ask Me nothing. [y]Most assuredly, I say to you, whatever you ask the Father in My name He will give you. 24 Until now you have asked nothing in My name. Ask, and you will receive, [z]that your joy may be [a]full.

Jesus Christ Has Overcome the World

25 "These things I have spoken to you in figurative language; but the time is coming when I will no longer speak to you in figurative language, but I will tell you [b]plainly about the Father. 26 In that day you will ask in My name; and I do not say to you that I shall pray the Father for you; 27 [c]for the Father Himself loves you, because you have loved Me, and [d]have believed that I came forth from God. 28 [e]I came forth from the Father and have come into the world. Again, I leave the world and go to the Father."

29 His disciples said to Him, "See, now You are speaking plainly, and using no figure of speech! 30 Now we are sure that [f]You know all things, and have no need that anyone should question You. By this [g]we believe that You came forth from God."

31 Jesus answered them, "Do you now believe? 32 [h]Indeed the hour is coming, yes, has now come, that you will be scattered, [i]each to his [5]own, and will leave Me alone. And [j]yet I am not alone, because the Father is with Me. 33 These things I have spoken to you, that [k]in Me you may have peace. [l]In the world you [6]will have tribulation; but be of good cheer, [m]I have overcome the world."

Jesus Prays for Himself

17 Jesus spoke these words, lifted up His eyes to heaven, and said: "Father, [a]the hour has come. Glorify Your Son, that Your Son also may glorify You, 2 [b]as You have given Him

■ 16:16 A little while . . . a little while. The first refers undoubtedly to the Crucifixion that will take Jesus away from them, the second may refer to the Resurrection, the coming of the Spirit, or to the Second Coming of Christ. The Resurrection fits best for the immediate time of the prophecy; the Second Coming fits best for the full scope of the joy in view.

■ 16:17 I go to the Father. The disciples connected what Jesus said in v. 10 with the statement of v. 16, and that made it more difficult to understand Christ's meaning, since one statement refers to the Ascension and the other to the Crucifixion.

■ 16:22 I will see you again. See note on v. 16.

your joy no one will take. The blessings of God's redemption cannot be canceled by any power, human or satanic. The gracious purpose of God ensures the ongoing joy of salvation in the world (10:28; Phil. 1:6).

■ 16:23 ask . . . ask. There are two different Greek verbs here, the first ordinarily relating to inquiry, and the second to petition. If we observe this distinction, we will note that after the Ascension the disciples will receive revealed truth through the Holy Spirit. Prayers will be directed mainly to the Father in Christ's name (in a spirit of complete agreement with the will and purposes of Christ). See "Prayer" at Luke 11:2.

■ 16:24 Until now. Their prayers were too timid in the light of the salvation they were soon to know.

■ 16:26 I do not say . . . that I shall pray the Father for you. Jesus is not saying that He will cease to pray for them (Rom. 8:34; Heb. 7:25; 1 John 2:1); it means that the disciples will have reached a certain maturity in prayer, so that He will not need to pray in their stead.

■ 16:27 the Father Himself loves you. The three Persons of the Trinity are united in their love for believers (3:16). Believers respond with faith and love toward all three Persons of the Godhead.

■ 16:30 You know all things. Only God is omniscient; the disciples acknowledge the origin and the deity of Christ.

■ 16:32 I am not alone. In most of His suffering, Christ was not alone. But His cry of distress, "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?" (Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34), makes it clear that Jesus endured a real separation from the Father. This was the climax of what He endured as our sin-bearer.

■ 17:1 Father. This word occurs over one hundred times in John's Gospel. In the prayer of ch. 17 it is found six times.

the hour has come. Jesus was fully conscious of what was going to happen.

Glorify Your Son, that Your Son also may glorify You. The perfect life of the Son in His incarnation gives glory to the Godhead. The Son is glorified in His crucifixion, resurrection, and enthronement at God's right hand—these events are viewed as a composite unity in this Gospel. See notes on 12:23; 13:31.

■ 17:2 given. This verb is used sixteen times in this prayer.

Jesus Prays for His Disciples

6 [k]"I have [3]manifested Your name to the men [l]whom You have given Me out of the world. eternal life. See note on 3:16.

as many as You have given Him. God's sovereign choice is emphasized in this expression (used again in vv. 6, 9, 24; cf. 6:44; 10:29).

■ 17:3 that they may know You . . . and Jesus Christ. Life consists in fellowship with God "who created us for Himself, so that our soul is restless unless it finds its rest in Him," as Augustine expressed it. Knowledge, here as so often in Scripture, means more than mere intellectual grasp; it involves affection and commitment as well. By placing Himself and the Father together as the source of eternal life, Christ affirms His own deity. See "True Knowledge of God" at Jer. 9:24.

■ 17:4 finished the work. This anticipates the cry of victory from the cross, "It is finished" (19:30).

■ 17:5 glorify Me . . . with the glory. Jesus affirms as part of His petition that His glory existed "before the world was," signifying that He was preexistent and uncreated. Second, He refers to the kind of "glory" He enjoyed there. Throughout the Bible, this is the glory always associated with the true, living, and only God.

■ 17:6 manifested Your name. Here, "name" denotes God in the beauty of His perfection as revealed to humanity.

They were Yours. Everything and everyone belongs to God by virtue of creation, but here possession by redemption is in view. God gave the elect to the Redeemer: "You gave them to Me" (cf. Heb. 2:10–13).

■ 17:9 I do not pray for the world. Jesus' work of redemption has particular reference to the elect—those whom the Father has given Him (10:14, 15, 27–29). This verse strongly supports a doctrine of definite redemption: the prayer of Jesus before His sacrificial death specifies His purpose in dying. In other contexts, where the specific purpose of Jesus' offering is not in precise focus, Jesus prays for His enemies, as we also are to do (Matt. 5:44; Luke 23:34). See "Definite Redemption" at 10:15.

■ 17:10 I am glorified in them. It is surprising that God's glory could be associated with the actions of human beings, who are so insignificant compared to the divine majesty. Yet people like Elihu in the Book of Job show that humans may give glory to God, and Paul affirms it of the most common activities of human beings, such as eating and drinking (1 Cor. 10:31).

■ 17:11 Holy Father. This form of address is used only here in the New Testament.

that they may be one as We are. The unity of Persons in the Trinity is the example for the unity of believers with one another through their union with Christ (14:10 note). There is a unity of purpose and essence in the invisible church, the body of Christ. This perfect unity (Eph. 4:12–16), to be manifested on the day of Christ, already forms and shapes God's people so "that the world may believe" (v. 21). Organized unity is no substitute for spiritual unity, although organizational divisions and separations among Christians undoubtedly bear a negative witness in the world (1 Cor. 1:10–13; 12:25; Gal. 5:20).

■ 17:12 the son of perdition. See text note. The same term is used to denote the Antichrist in 2 Thess. 2:3. This fulfills Ps. 41:9. Judas's betrayal was necessary for the fulfillment of many other passages descriptive of our Lord's suffering. Jesus understood many Scriptures as containing prophetic announcements of various details of His messianic career. He stressed that all these would be fulfilled because they were the Word of God.

they are not of the world. The new birth implies a radical division in humanity. Believers continue to live in the world, but they do not truly belong to it (v. 16).

■ 17:15 keep them from the evil one. Jesus knows that the world will hate His disciples as it hated Him, but He does not ask for the disciples to be protected from suffering, but rather that they would be kept from the evil one. It is not the physical or social troubles of the world from which Jesus wishes His disciples to be "kept," but from its moral corruption. See "Christians in the World" at Col. 2:20.

■ 17:17 Sanctify them. Jesus does not pray for the temporal well-being of the disciples, but for their sanctification. He wishes above all that they should be holy. "Truth" is the means by which holiness is attained. Error and deception are basic to evil, and truth is basic to godliness.

Your word is truth. This testimony refers immediately to the Old Testament that the disciples possessed. It extends also to the teaching of Jesus, called God's "word" (v. 14), and it comes to include the books of the 20 "I do not pray for these alone, but also for those who [l]will believe in Me through their word; 21 [g]that they all may be one, as [n]You, Father, are in Me, and I in You; that they also may be one in Us, that the world may believe that You sent Me. 22 And the [i]glory which You gave Me I have given them, [j]that they may be one just as We are one: 23 I in them, and You in Me; [k]that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that You have sent Me, and have loved them as You have loved Me.

Jesus Prays for All Believers

24 [l]"Father, I desire that they also whom You gave Me may be with Me where I am, that they may behold My glory which You have given Me; [m]for You loved Me before the foundation of the world. 25 O righteous Father! [n]The world has not known You, but [o]I have known You; and [p]these have known that You sent Me. 26 [q]And I have declared to them Your name, and will declare it, that the love [r]with which You loved Me may be in them, and I in them."

Betrayal and Arrest in Gethsemane

18 When Jesus had spoken these words, [a]He went out with His disciples over [b]the Brook Kidron, where there was a garden, which He and His disciples entered. 2 And Judas, who betrayed Him, also knew the place; [c]for Jesus often met there with His disciples. 3 [d]Then Judas, having received a detachment of troops, and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, came there with lanterns, torches, and weapons. 4 Jesus therefore, [e]knowing all things that would come upon Him, went forward and said to them, "Whom are you seeking?"

5 They answered Him, [f]"Jesus [l]of Nazareth."

Jesus said to them, "I am He." And Judas, who [g]betrayed Him, also stood with them. 6 Now when He said to them, "I am He," they drew back and fell to the ground.

7 Then He asked them again, "Whom are you seeking?"

And they said, "Jesus of Nazareth."

8 Jesus answered, "I have told you that I am He. Therefore, if you seek Me, let these go their

New Testament canon (v. 20; Luke 8:11–15, 21; 11:28; Acts 4:31; 6:7; 8:14, 25; 1 Thess. 2:13). This is a powerful attestation of the authority and divine origin of Scripture. See "The Authority of Scripture" at 2 Tim. 3:16.

■ 17:18 As You sent Me . . . I also have sent them. Compare 20:21. Jesus is the supreme pattern for Christian missions. Any true Christian is a "missionary," sent into the world to bear witness to Christ, to reach out to the lost where they may be found in order to lead them to the Savior.

into the world. Note the prepositions: not "of" the world (vv. 14, 16), nor "out of" the world (v. 15), but "into" the world and "in" the world (16:33).

■ 17:19 I sanctify Myself. Jesus, being supremely holy, does not need moral improvement (Heb. 7:26, 27). As the High Priest He consecrates Himself (Ex. 28:41) to His sacred task, especially His supreme sacrifice.

■ 17:20 those who will believe. In a sublime turn of thought, the Lord now embraces in His prayer the whole body of believers, even those yet to come to faith in future ages. Every true Christian can be assured of being included in this prayer.

■ 17:21 that the world may believe that You sent Me. This prayer for unity is not merely for a "spiritual" or invisible unity, but for a unity that is visible to the world, "that the world may believe." See note on v. 11.

■ 17:23 perfect in one. There is a pattern of unity that characterizes the relationship of the Father and the Son, and the Son and the Christian. See note on 14:10.

loved them as You have loved Me. This statement brings to light the love of God the Father for the redeemed (3:16), sometimes overlooked because of emphasis on the love of Christ for them.

■ 17:24 they may behold My glory. Jesus does not request temporal prosperity for either the disciples or the church; rather, He prays for holiness and unity on earth and for the gathering of His saints in heaven. To be with Christ is the supreme yearning of the Christian (Phil. 1:23; 1 Thess. 4:17).

■ 17:26 The prayer ends by sounding again some of the notes heard throughout: unity, knowledge, mission, and love. This is a fitting climax to the teaching of Jesus in the whole Gospel.

■ 18:1–40 This chapter has three sections. The arrest of Jesus is recorded in vv. 1–18, the trial before Annas in vv. 19–27, and the trial before Pilate in vv. 28–40.

The accounts of the four Gospels cover the major events of the arrest, trial, execution, and resurrection of Jesus. While some difficulties arise in the correlation of details, the main elements are in complete harmony. Jesus was arrested at night. His trial before the Jewish authorities had at least two phases, and during this part of the trial Peter denied Jesus three times. The trial before secular powers had three phases, and Jesus was executed by Pilate's soldiers. He was buried in Joseph of Arimathea's tomb, and on the first day of the week He arose from the dead and was seen alive in a variety of appearances to His disciples. None of the difficulties in the correlation of details is insuperable, but in a number of cases more than one explanation is possible, and in the absence of fuller data, it is difficult to choose among them.

■ 18:1 the Brook Kidron. In the Kidron Valley east of the city.

■ 18:3 officers from the chief priests. These were probably the same as the temple guards of 7:32, 45. They obviously expected resistance to the arrest, both from Jesus and His disciples.

■ 18:4 knowing all . . . went forward and said to them. Note here, and at vv. 7 and 11, that Jesus was ready to be arrested and tried. He made no attempt to escape what He had come to do.

■ 18:5–7 I am *He. Here we may have a simple identification, but "He" is supplied in the English text, so Jesus' response coincides with a solemn name for God ("I AM") used in the Greek translation of the Old Testament in Ex. 3:14 (6:35 note).

■ 18:8 let these go. Even at this crucial time, Jesus was concerned for His disciples (17:12).

way," [9] that the saying might be fulfilled which He spoke, [h]"Of those whom You gave Me I have lost none."

[10] [i]Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it and struck the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

[11] So Jesus said to Peter, "Put your sword into the sheath. Shall I not drink [j]the cup which My Father has given Me?"

Before the High Priest

[12] Then the detachment of troops and the captain and the officers of the Jews arrested Jesus and bound Him. [13] And [k]they led Him away to [l]Annas first, for he was the father-in-law of [m]Caiaphas who was high priest that year. [14] [n]Now it was Caiaphas who advised the Jews that it was [2]expedient that one man should die for the people.

Peter Denies Jesus

[15] [o]And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did [p]another[3] disciple. Now that disciple was known to the high priest, and went with Jesus into the courtyard of the high priest. [16] [q]But Peter stood at the door outside. Then the other disciple, who was known to the high priest, went out and spoke to her who kept the door, and brought Peter in. [17] Then the servant girl who kept the door said to Peter, "You are not also one of this Man's disciples, are you?"

He said, "I am [r]not."

[18] Now the servants and officers who had made a fire of coals stood there, for it was cold, and they warmed themselves. And Peter stood with them and warmed himself.

Jesus Questioned by the High Priest

[19] The high priest then asked Jesus about His disciples and His doctrine.

[20] Jesus answered him, [s]"I spoke openly to the world. I always taught [t]in synagogues and [u]in the temple, where [4]the Jews always meet, and in secret I have said nothing. [21] Why do you ask Me? Ask [v]those who have heard Me what I said to them. Indeed they know what I said."

[22] And when He had said these things, one of the officers who stood by [w]struck[5] Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, "Do You answer the high priest like that?"

[23] Jesus answered him, "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why do you strike Me?"

[24] [x]Then Annas sent Him bound to [y]Caiaphas the high priest.

Peter Denies Twice More

[25] Now Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. [z]Therefore they said to him, "You are not also one of His disciples, are you?"

■ 18:10 Peter . . . struck the high priest's servant. An ill-conceived act of resistance. John alone records that Peter carried the sword and that Malchus was the name of the servant; Luke alone records that Jesus healed him (Luke 22:51).

■ 18:11 Put your sword into the sheath. Jesus' rebuke does not concern the propriety of self-defense or civil resistance; the point is that Jesus has come to give His life a ransom for many, and He must not be dissuaded from this task (cf. Matt. 16:21–23).

Shall I not drink the cup. This "cup" is the cup of the wine of God's wrath (Ps. 75:8; Is. 51:17; Jer. 25:15–17, 27–38). The "cup" that Jesus chooses to drink is not merely death, but the wrath of God upon sin (cf. Matt. 20:22; Mark 10:38).

■ 18:13 Annas. One of the most influential Jewish leaders of that age. Although deposed from the high priesthood by the Romans, He was still known by this title among the Jews. It is difficult to determine whether this verse and vv. 19–24 represent one or two phases of a trial before the Jewish authorities. Matthew, Mark, and Luke refer to an additional phase before the Sanhedrin. Judging from the description of rules for trials found in the Mishnah of some two hundred years later, the proceedings here were marked by serious irregularities and violations of Jewish law. The Sanhedrin was not supposed to meet at night; the death penalty could not be declared on the day of the trial; there was false evidence, and false witnesses were used (Matt. 26:59, 60); Jesus was exposed to blows from attendants during the trial (v. 22; Mark 14:65). In addition to all this, it was illegal for the Sanhedrin to meet for a capital case on the eve of a Sabbath or a feast day. These violations show that Jesus' condemnation by the Jewish authorities was a travesty of justice.

■ 18:15 another disciple. Probably this was John since of the three closest to Jesus (Peter, James, and John), he is the only one not mentioned by name in the Gospel.

known to the high priest. He was admitted to the palace, even allowed to invite a guest (v. 16).

■ 18:17 The account of Peter's denial is interrupted in John's Gospel by part of the trial proceedings (vv. 19–24). It would appear that there were three occasions of denial rather than three single sentences by Peter. This is what one would expect with a number of people coming and going and warming themselves by a fire. There may be different legitimate ways of distinguishing the occasions to yield the figure three predicted by Jesus (13:38). All four Gospels agree that the first denial was in response to a question of a "servant girl," in other words, a harmless person of no great importance in the household.

I am not. Peter's denial points out that when Jesus endures God's punishment against sin, He does so without comfort or consolation. Peter's denial is foretold in Zech. 13:6, 7. Jesus' solitude in His suffering is anticipated in Ps. 69:20.

■ 18:19 the high priest then asked. This may be Annas or Caiaphas in the house of Annas (v. 24). An accused person was not to be questioned until witnesses had first established a presumption of guilt. For this reason, some call this a hearing, not a trial.

■ 18:22 one of the officers . . . struck Jesus. This obviously was highly irregular, particularly when the prisoner was bound (v. 24).

He denied it and said, "I am not!"

26 One of the servants of the high priest, a relative of him whose ear Peter cut off, said, "Did I not see you in the garden with Him?" 27 Peter then denied again; and [a]immediately a rooster crowed.

In Pilate's Court

28 [b]Then they led Jesus from Caiaphas to the Praetorium, and it was early morning. [c]But they themselves did not go into the [6]Praetorium, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover. 29 [d]Pilate then went out to them and said, "What accusation do you bring against this Man?"

30 They answered and said to him, "If He were not [7]an evildoer, we would not have delivered Him up to you."

31 Then Pilate said to them, "You take Him and judge Him according to your law."

Therefore the Jews said to him, "It is not lawful for us to put anyone to death," 32 [e]that the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled which He spoke, [f]signifying by what death He would die.

33 [g]Then Pilate entered the [8]Praetorium again, called Jesus, and said to Him, "Are You the King of the Jews?"

34 Jesus answered him, "Are you speaking for yourself about this, or did others tell you this concerning Me?"

■ 18:26 a relative. A question by this man endangered Peter more than the previous ones, since he might have wanted to avenge Malchus.

■ 18:28 the Praetorium. See text note. The Roman trial of Jesus appears to have had three phases: an appearance before Pilate (vv. 28–38); an appearance before Herod (Luke 23:5–12); and a second appearance before Pilate (18:39—19:16). John describes only the first and third parts, but in more detail than the other Gospels.

lest they should be defiled. The Roman Praetorium was a site of hostility between the Romans and the Jews, and an unclean place for Jews. Remarkably, it is the place where they collaborated to put Jesus to death. See note on chs. 13—17.

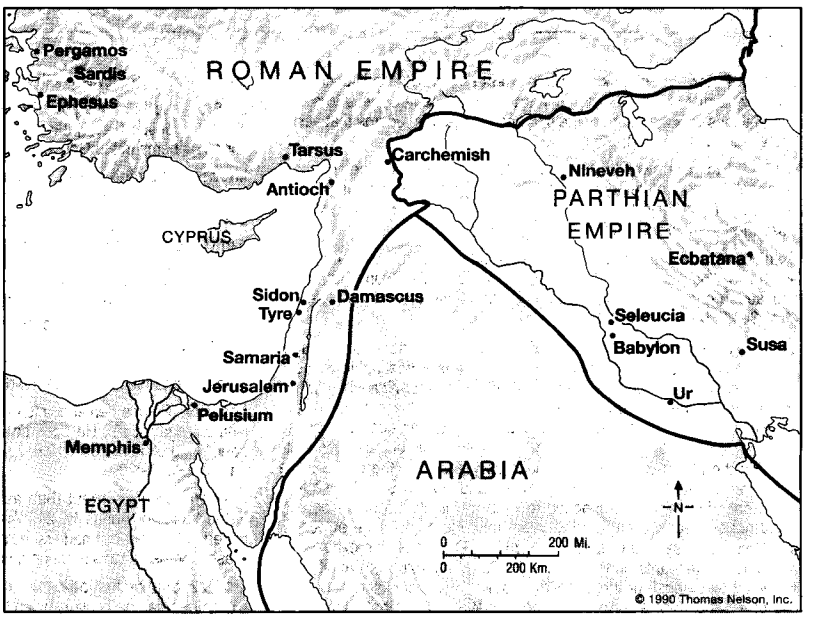
■ 18:29 What accusation. The Jews had no charge that would be recognized in a Roman court, let alone be viewed as a capital offense.

■ 18:31 You take Him and judge Him. A logical response. Pilate's point is that if they were not willing to specify charges, they should not expect Him to conduct a trial.

not lawful for us to put . . . to death. This was the usual provision in countries occupied by Rome, perhaps in order to protect those who supported Rome. The Jews were not always so obedient; note the death of Stephen (Acts 7:57–60).

■ 18:32 signifying by what death. See 3:14; 12:32–34. Stoning was the Jewish method of capital punishment. Hanging and crucifixion, as implied in the words "lifted up," were used by the Romans. This shows the divine control over the whole procedure, even though it was marked by flagrant injustice.

■ 18:33 King of the Jews. Jesus was not the "King of the Jews" in the sense that He promoted sedition against Rome, as charged by the Jewish leaders (Luke 23:2), but He was the King of the Jews in the messianic sense (12:13; Matt. 2:2; Luke 1:32, 33; 19:38).



Roman Control of Palestine at the Time of Christ. Following a successful military campaign against the Seleucids in 64 B.C., Pompey turned the Roman armies southward and took control of Jerusalem in 63 B.C. Initially the Roman army had been invited by some of the Jews to protect them from the Nabateans. Once the Romans became established in Palestine, they never left, despite repeated Jewish revolts against Roman control.

35 Pilate answered, "Am I a Jew? Your own nation and the chief priests have delivered You to me. What have You done?"

36 [h]Jesus answered, [i]"My kingdom is not of this world. If My kingdom were of this world, My servants would fight, so that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now My kingdom is not from here."

37 Pilate therefore said to Him, "Are You a king then?"

Jesus answered, "You say rightly that I am a king. For this cause I was born, and for this cause I have come into the world, [j]that I should bear [k]witness to the truth. Everyone who [l]is of the truth [m]hears My voice."

38 Pilate said to Him, "What is truth?" And when he had said this, he went out again to the Jews, and said to them, [n]"I find no fault in Him at all.

Taking the Place of Barabbas

39 [o]"But you have a custom that I should release someone to you at the Passover. Do you therefore want me to release to you the King of the Jews?"

40 [p]Then they all cried again, saying, "Not this Man, but Barabbas!" [q]Now Barabbas was a robber.

The Soldiers Mock Jesus

19 So then [a]Pilate took Jesus and scourged Him. 2 And the soldiers twisted a crown of thorns and put it on His head, and they put on Him a purple robe. 3 [1]Then they said, "Hail, King of the Jews!" And they [b]struck Him with their hands.

4 Pilate then went out again, and said to them, "Behold, I am bringing Him out to you, [c]that you may know that I find no fault in Him."

Pilate's Decision

5 Then Jesus came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. And Pilate said to them, "Behold the Man!"

6 [d]Therefore, when the chief priests and officers saw Him, they cried out, saying, "Crucify Him, crucify Him!"

Pilate said to them, "You take Him and crucify Him, for I find no fault in Him."

7 The Jews answered him, [e]"We have a law, and according to [2]our law He ought to die, because [f]He made Himself the Son of God."

8 Therefore, when Pilate heard that saying, he was the more afraid, 9 and went again into the Praetorium, and said to Jesus, "Where are You from?" [g]But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then Pilate said to Him, "Are You not speaking to me? Do You not know that I have [3]power to crucify You, and [3]power to release You?"

11 Jesus answered, [h]"You could have no power at all against Me unless it had been given you from above. Therefore [i]the one who delivered Me to you has the greater sin."

12 From then on Pilate sought to release Him, but the Jews cried out, saying, "If you let this

■ 18:36 My kingdom is not of this world. Jesus is a King, but He will not establish His kingdom by force. This greatly puzzles Pilate. See "Jesus' Heavenly Reign" at Acts 7:55.

■ 18:37 You say rightly. Pilate's question elicits the marvelous answer of Jesus, whose kingdom and mission are founded in the truth (1:8, 14, 17; 8:32; 14:6).

■ 18:38 What is truth. Truth does not matter to those who, like Pilate, are motivated by expediency. Likewise, truth does not matter to skeptics who have despaired of knowing it.

I find no fault in Him. Pilate finds no crime in Jesus and is reluctant to put Jesus to death. Ironically, it is the pagan Roman governor who tries to release Jesus, while "His own" (1:11) want Him to die.

■ 18:39 you have a custom. The custom of pardoning a criminal at the Passover is relevant to the festival itself, which commemorates God's sparing the Israelites from death.

■ 18:40 Barabbas. This name means "son of the father." Instead of him, the true Son of the Father died.

■ 19:1 scourged Him. The Roman scourge was cruel and sometimes fatal. The whip had metal or bone fragments in it to tear the flesh.

■ 19:5 Behold the Man. A natural way for Pilate to introduce the accused, but providentially a significant statement. Jesus is the last Adam, who sums up all that humanity could and should be.

■ 19:6 the chief priests . . . cried out. In their hatred of Jesus, the chief priests become the leaders of a mob.

I find no fault in Him. For the third time Pilate proclaims Jesus' innocence (18:38; 19:4; cf. Luke 23:4, 14, 22).

■ 19:7 He ought to die. The appeal is to the charge of blasphemy, a capital offense in Jewish law (Lev. 24:16).

■ 19:9 But Jesus gave him no answer. Jesus' submission to arrest and trial is part of His surrender as a self-offering.

■ 19:11 You could have no power. Jesus acknowledges that the sovereign plan of God includes even the wickedness of His accusers and the cowardice of Pilate. See also the words of Peter (Acts 2:23) and the early church (Acts 4:28).

■ 19:12 you are not Caesar's friend. "Caesar's friend" was a recognized title for political supporters of the emperor. The Jews threaten Pilate with the suggestion that he will be considered a traitor to Rome if he releases someone who talks about being a king.

Man go, you are not Caesar's friend. [j]Whoever makes himself a king speaks against Caesar."

13 [k]When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus out and sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called The Pavement, but in Hebrew, Gabbatha. 14 Now [l]it was the Preparation Day of the Passover, and about the sixth hour. And he said to the Jews, "Behold your King!"

15 But they cried out, "Away with Him, away with Him! Crucify Him!"

Pilate said to them, "Shall I crucify your King?"

The chief priests answered, [m]"We have no king but Caesar!"

16 [n]Then he delivered Him to them to be crucified. Then they took Jesus [4]and led Him away.

The King on a Cross

17 [o]And He, bearing His cross, [p]went out to a place called the Place of a Skull, which is called in Hebrew, Golgotha, 18 where they crucified Him, and [q]two others with Him, one on either side, and Jesus in the center. 19 [r]Now Pilate wrote a title and put it on the cross. And the writing was:

JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 Then many of the Jews read this title, for the place where Jesus was crucified was near the city; and it was written in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin.

21 Therefore the chief priests of the Jews said to Pilate, "Do not write, 'The King of the Jews,' but, 'He said, "I am the King of the Jews." ' "

22 Pilate answered, "What I have written, I have written."

23 [s]Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took His garments and made four parts, to each soldier a part, and also the tunic. Now the tunic was without seam, woven from the top in one piece. 24 They said therefore among themselves, "Let us not tear it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be," that the Scripture might be fulfilled which says:

> [t]"They divided My garments among them,
> And for My clothing they cast lots."

Therefore the soldiers did these things.

Behold Your Mother

25 [u]Now there stood by the cross of Jesus His mother, and His mother's sister, Mary the wife of [v]Clopas, and Mary Magdalene. 26 When Jesus therefore saw His mother, and [w]the disciple whom He loved standing by, He said to His mother, [x]"Woman, behold your son!" 27 Then He said to the disciple, "Behold your mother!" And from that hour that disciple took her [y]to his own home.

■ 19:14 Preparation Day of the Passover. This is often understood to be the Thursday before Passover (Matt. 27:17 note). If so, John portrays Jesus being crucified at the same time as the Passover lambs (chs. 13—17 note). This appears to conflict with the record of the three Synoptic Gospels, where Jesus' crucifixion occurs on Friday. Probably, the reference here is to Friday as the Preparation Day before the weekly Sabbath.

Behold your King. To the last, Pilate refers to Jesus as the "King of the Jews." It may be that this was a last effort by Pilate to mollify the Jews, but if so, it failed. Later Pilate had this title affixed to the cross (v. 19).

■ 19:15 no king but Caesar. They ignored or did not remember that God was their King.

■ 19:18 they crucified Him. See Matt. 27:32–37.

two others. Two criminals were crucified at the same time as Jesus, in fulfillment prophecy (Is. 53:12; Luke 22:37). This gave Christ the opportunity to show His saving power by reaching out and rescuing a man at the very edge of eternity.

■ 19:19 the writing. The four Gospels recount the inscription of Pilate with minute differences, perhaps because the inscription was in three languages. John's form, with the name "Jesus of Nazareth," has a Semitic flavor. It was customary to attach an inscription stating the reason for execution. At the same time, Pilate's notice was a public announcement of the kingship of Christ.

■ 19:21, 22 the chief priests . . . said. They viewed the inscription as an offense to their nation, and Pilate may have meant it that way—but he refused to change it.

■ 19:23 tunic. Such tunics were not uncommon in the ancient world. The point is not the tunic's value, but the depth of Jesus' humiliation, from whom everything was taken as He offered Himself. It is also the fulfillment of Ps. 22:18.

■ 19:25 by the cross. "Clopas" may be the same as "Cleopas," mentioned in Luke 24:18. The courage of the four women is noteworthy. Some are present again at Jesus' burial (Matt. 27:61; Mark 15:47) and at the Resurrection (20:1–18; Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:1).

■ 19:26 Woman, behold your son. "Woman" is not a harsh form of address in Aramaic (2:4 note). Even in the midst of dying on the cross as the Mediator of the new covenant, Jesus fulfills his duty as the Son of Mary in a splendid example of obedience to the letter and spirit of the fifth commandment. In a time of intense physical pain and mental anguish, the Lord thought of others, as is shown in the first statements from the cross (Luke 23:34, 43).

It Is Finished

28 After this, Jesus, [5]knowing that all things were now accomplished, [z]that the Scripture might be fulfilled, said, "I thirst!" 29 Now a vessel full of sour wine was sitting there; and [a]they filled a sponge with sour wine, put it on hyssop, and put it to His mouth. 30 So when Jesus had received the sour wine, He said, [b]"It is finished!" And bowing His head, He gave up His spirit.

Jesus' Side Is Pierced

31 [c]Therefore, because it was the Preparation Day, [d]that the bodies should not remain on the cross on the Sabbath (for that Sabbath was a [e]high day), the Jews asked Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. 32 Then the soldiers came and broke the legs of the first and of the other who was crucified with Him. 33 But when they came to Jesus and saw that He was already dead, they did not break His legs. 34 But one of the soldiers pierced His side with a spear, and immediately [f]blood and water came out. 35 And he who has seen has testified, and his testimony is [g]true; and he knows that he is telling the truth, so that you may [h]believe. 36 For these things were done that the Scripture should be fulfilled, [i]"Not one of His bones shall be broken." 37 And again another Scripture says, [j]"They shall look on Him whom they pierced."

Jesus Buried in Joseph's Tomb

38 [k]After this, Joseph of Arimathea, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly, [l]for fear of the Jews, asked Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus; and Pilate gave him permission. So he came and took the body of Jesus. 39 And [m]Nicodemus, who at first came to Jesus by night, also came, bringing a mixture of [n]myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pounds. 40 Then they took the body of Jesus, and [o]bound it in strips of linen with the spices, as the custom of the Jews is to bury. 41 Now in the place where He was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new tomb in which no one had yet been laid. 42 So [p]there they laid Jesus, [q]because of the Jews' Preparation Day, for the tomb was nearby.

bodies should not remain on the cross. This would ceremonially defile the land (Deut. 21:23). It is a starkly revealing example of their depraved insensitivity that they joined forces to commit murder and at the same time were so punctilious about enforcing the ceremonial law.

legs . . . broken. Breathing was so difficult in crucifixion that if the legs could not help by lifting the torso, a person would quickly die.

■ 19:34 pierced His side with a spear. This act proves that Jesus was not in a coma but was dead, as shown by the burial preparations (vv. 39, 40) and the specification of a particular tomb (v. 41). Both the preserving of His bones (v. 33) and the piercing of His side fulfill Old Testament Scripture (vv. 36, 37; Ps. 34:20; Zech. 12:10).

blood and water. John emphasizes this physical evidence that Jesus was a real human being and that He was dead. It has been suggested that rupture of the heart caused by extreme agony is indicated, but more recent medical research has shown that such trauma occurs only when the heart is already damaged by disease. Others see a symbolic significance linked with 1 John 5:6–8.

■ 19:38 Joseph of Arimathea. A secret supporter of Jesus mentioned in all four Gospels in connection with Jesus' burial, but nowhere else in the New Testament. See note on Luke 23:50, 51.

The Empty Tomb

20 Now the [a]first day of the week Mary Magdalene went to the tomb early, while it was still dark, and saw that the [b]stone had been taken away from the tomb. 2 Then she ran and came to Simon Peter, and to the [c]other disciple, [d]whom Jesus loved, and said to them, "They have taken away the Lord out of the tomb, and we do not know where they have laid Him."

3 [e]Peter therefore went out, and the other disciple, and were going to the tomb. 4 So they both ran together, and the other disciple outran Peter and came to the tomb first. 5 And he, stooping down and looking in, saw [f]the linen cloths lying there; yet he did not go in. 6 Then Simon Peter came, following him, and went into the tomb; and he saw the linen cloths lying there, 7 and [g]the [1]handkerchief that had been around His head, not lying with the linen cloths, but folded together in a place by itself. 8 Then the [h]other disciple, who came to the tomb first, went in also; and he saw and believed. 9 For as yet they did not [2]know the [i]Scripture, that He must rise again from the dead. 10 Then the disciples went away again to their own homes.

Mary Magdalene Sees the Risen Lord

11 [j]But Mary stood outside by the tomb weeping, and as she wept she stooped down and looked into the tomb. 12 And she saw two angels in white sitting, one at the head and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain. 13 Then they said to her, "Woman, why are you weeping?"

She said to them, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I do not know where they have laid Him."

14 [k]Now when she had said this, she turned around and saw Jesus standing there, and [l]did not know that it was Jesus. 15 Jesus said to her, "Woman, why are you weeping? Whom are you seeking?"

She, supposing Him to be the gardener, said to Him, "Sir, if You have carried Him away, tell me where You have laid Him, and I will take Him away."

16 Jesus said to her, [m]"Mary!"

She turned and said to [3]Him, "Rabboni!" (which is to say, Teacher).

17 Jesus said to her, "Do not cling to Me, for I have not yet [n]ascended to My Father; but go to [o]My brethren and say to them, [p]'I am ascending to My Father and your Father, and to [q]My God and your God.' "

■ 20:1–31 The four Gospels have accounts of several resurrection appearances; together with Acts 1:3–8 and 1 Cor. 15:5–8, there are twelve appearances, the first six in Jerusalem, four in Galilee, one on the Mount of Olives, and one on the road to Damascus.

■ 20:2 Peter . . . the other disciple. Peter and John. See note on 13:23.

we do not know. "We" indicates that several women were there, as recorded by the other Gospels. They were the same women who stood at the foot of the Cross, perhaps with the exception of Mary, Jesus' mother, who is not mentioned.

where they have laid Him. Neither Mary nor the disciples were expecting the Resurrection, in spite of what Jesus had told them (cf. v. 9).

■ 20:5–8 he . . . saw the linen cloths. John took the first cursory look and saw that only the burial clothes were there. Peter and John then made a closer inspection. The graveclothes were in good order (v. 7). If someone had violated the tomb and removed the corpse, the linen cloths would not have been so well arranged, and the handkerchief (see text note) would not likely have been folded.

■ 20:9 they did not know the Scripture. See text note. Later, as a result of Jesus' instruction, they understood His resurrection as a necessary fulfillment of prophecy (Luke 24:26, 27, 44–47; Acts 2:25–32; 13:35–37). Clearly the disciples did not expect a resurrection, or try to invent one in order to fit their own religious view. See "The Resurrection of Jesus" at Luke 24:2.

■ 20:12 two angels in white. Matt. 28:2 records "an angel"; Mark 16:5 "a young man"; and Luke 24:4 "two men" (called "a vision of angels" in Luke 24:23). There is no necessary contradiction since the angels must have appeared in human form and one of them may be singled out, perhaps because he was the speaker. What Mary saw may also differ from what the other women saw since she remained alone at the tomb after Peter and John had left.

■ 20:14 she . . . saw Jesus standing there. Matthew reveals that Jesus had already appeared once to the group of women on their way to Jerusalem to tell the news about the empty tomb (Matt. 28:8–10).

did not know that it was Jesus. Jesus was often not immediately recognized after His resurrection (v. 20; 21:4). On some occasions this may have been due to skepticism or grief; in Luke it is sometimes due to supernatural hindrance (Luke 24:16, 31). In addition, the resurrection involves a change in appearance (1 Cor. 15:35–49).

■ 20:16 Rabboni. The voice of Jesus calling "Mary" revealed clearly who He was. "Rabboni" is a lengthened form of "Rabbi," occurring one other time in the New Testament (Mark 10:51).

■ 20:17 Do not cling to Me. There is no impropriety in touching the resurrection body; in v. 27 Jesus tells Thomas to touch Him (see also Matt. 28:9). Jesus reminds Mary that He is not merely recovered but resurrected. She need not "cling to" Jesus as an earthly being who has been healed; rather, she should recognize Him as One whose resurrection marks Him as Lord and Christ. The kind of relationship that had been enjoyed by His friends up to now cannot continue unchanged. There is a continuing intimacy to be sure, but not of the former kind. There is no reason to suppose that Jesus ascended to the Father between His encounters with Mary and Thomas. See "The Ascension of Jesus" at Luke 24:51.

My brethren. Jesus' disciples; the same language is used in Matt. 28:10.

My Father and your Father, and to My God and your God. Jesus distinguishes pointedly His unique Sonship from the sonship of the disciples. Jesus' relation to the Godhead is different from that of redeemed humans; He is the Lord from heaven (1:18; 3:13, 31).

18 [r]Mary Magdalene came and told the [4]disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that He had spoken these things to her.

The Apostles Commissioned

19 [s]Then, the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were [5]assembled, for [t]fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and said to them, [u]"Peace be with you." 20 When He had said this, He [v]showed them His hands and His side. [w]Then the disciples were glad when they saw the Lord.

21 So Jesus said to them again, "Peace to you! [x]As the Father has sent Me, I also send you." 22 And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and said to them, "Receive the Holy Spirit. 23 [y]If you forgive the sins of any, they are forgiven them; if you retain the sins of any, they are retained."

The Mission of the Church in the World

"Mission" comes from a Latin word meaning "to send." Jesus commanded His first disciples, as representatives of those to follow, "As the Father has sent Me, I also send you" (John 20:21; cf. 17:18). This mission is still valid: the universal church, including every local congregation and every Christian in it, is sent into the world to fulfill a definite task.

The appointed task has two parts. First and fundamentally, it is the work of worldwide witness, making disciples and planting churches (Matt. 24:14; 28:19, 20; Mark 13:10; Luke 24:47, 48). The church proclaims Jesus Christ everywhere as God incarnate, Lord and Savior, and announces God's invitation to enter life through turning to Christ in repentance and faith (Matt. 22:1–10; Acts 17:30). Paul's ministry as a church-planter and evangelist to all the world, so far as was possible, is a model for carrying out this primary commitment (Rom. 1:14; 15:17–29; 1 Cor. 9:19–23; Col. 1:28, 29).

Second, all Christians are called to do works of mercy and compassion. Relying on God's commandment to love our neighbor, Christians should respond with generosity and compassion to all forms of human need (Matt. 25:34–40; Luke 10:25–37; Rom. 12:20, 21). Jesus healed the sick, fed the hungry, and taught the ignorant (Matt. 15:32; 20:34; Mark 1:41; 10:1), and those who are new creatures in Christ must practice the same compassion. In doing so they make credible the gospel they preach, about a Savior whose love transforms sinners into those who love God and other people (Matt. 5:16; cf. 1 Pet. 2:11, 12).

Though Jesus foresaw the mission to the Gentiles (Matt. 24:14; John 10:16; 12:32), His earthly ministry was directed to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 15:24). Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, always went to the Jews first as he preached (Acts 13:42–48; 14:1; 17:1–4, 10; 18:4–7, 19). Because the right of the Jews to hear the gospel first is a matter of divine appointment (Acts 3:26; 13:46; Rom. 1:16), it is important for Christians to continue bearing witness to the Jews. As Paul said, it was from Israel, according to the flesh, that Christ came to be the Savior of the world (Rom. 9:5). □ the doors were shut. The impression is that the risen Jesus passed through the closed doors (also v. 26), not that they were opened in some way (compare Acts 12:10). This shows the transformation involved in the resurrection of the body (1 Cor. 15:35–49).

Peace be with you. Everyday words but a most welcome greeting, since they might have expected a rebuke for having abandoned Jesus at the time of His arrest.

■ 20:20 His hands and His side. The marks of His wounds would identify Jesus, and also prove that He was not a ghost.

■ 20:21 As the Father has sent Me, I also send you. This is a brief statement of the commission Jesus gave His disciples. A fuller statement is found in Matt. 28:18–20 and in Luke 24:44–53. Jesus is the supreme example for evangelism and missions. See theological note "The Mission of the Church in the World."

■ 20:22 Receive the Holy Spirit. The gift is essential for the performance of the task given the disciples. This occasion is a foreshadowing of the fullness of the Spirit to be bestowed on the church at Pentecost.

■ 20:23 If you forgive the sins of any. The apostles, as the founders of the church and acting for it, receive the authority to declare God's judgment on sins. Fundamentally, this declaration is made in the preaching of the gospel. See "Church Discipline and Excommunication" at Matt. 18:15.

Seeing and Believing

24 Now Thomas, [z]called the Twin, one of the twelve, was not with them when Jesus came. 25 The other disciples therefore said to him, "We have seen the Lord."

So he said to them, "Unless I see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into His side, I will not believe."

26 And after eight days His disciples were again inside, and Thomas with them. Jesus came, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, "Peace to you!" 27 Then He said to Thomas, "Reach your finger here, and look at My hands; and [a]reach your hand here, and put it into My side. Do not be [b]unbelieving, but believing."

28 And Thomas answered and said to Him, "My Lord and my God!"

29 Jesus said to him, [6]"Thomas, because you have seen Me, you have believed. [c]Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed."

That You May Believe

30 And [d]truly Jesus did many other signs in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book; 31 [e]but these are written that [f]you may believe that Jesus [g]is the Christ, the Son of God, [h]and that believing you may have life in His name.

Breakfast by the Sea

21 After these things Jesus showed Himself again to the disciples at the [a]Sea of Tiberias, and in this way He showed Himself: 2 Simon Peter, [b]Thomas called the Twin, [c]Nathan-a-el of [d]Cana in Galilee, [e]the sons of Zebedee, and two others of His disciples were together. 3 Simon Peter said to them, "I am going fishing."

They said to him, "We are going with you also." They went out and [f]immediately got into the boat, and that night they caught nothing. 4 But when the morning had now come, Jesus stood on the shore; yet the disciples [g]did not know that it was Jesus. 5 Then [g]Jesus said to them, "Children, have you any food?"

They answered Him, "No."

6 And He said to them, [h]"Cast the net on the right side of the boat, and you will find some." So they cast, and now they were not able to draw it in because of the multitude of fish.

7 Therefore [i]that disciple whom Jesus loved said to Peter, "It is the Lord!" Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he put on his outer garment (for he had removed it), and plunged into the sea. 8 But the other disciples came in the little boat (for they were not far from land, but about two hundred cubits), dragging the net with fish. 9 Then, as soon as they had come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid on it, and bread. 10 Jesus said to them, "Bring some of the fish which you have just caught."

11 Simon Peter went up and dragged the net to land, full of large fish, one hundred and fifty-three; and although there were so many, the net was not broken. 12 Jesus said to them, [j]"Come and eat breakfast." Yet none of the disciples dared ask Him, "Who are You?"—knowing that it was the Lord. 13 Jesus then came and took the bread and gave it to them, and likewise the fish.

■ 20:28 My Lord and my God. This is probably the clearest and simplest confession of the deity of Christ to be found in the New Testament. The two highest words, "Lord" (used in the Greek translation of the Old Testament for the divine name "Yahweh"), and "God," are used together and addressed to Jesus in recognition of His glory. Jesus accepts this worship without hesitation. This is in sharp contrast to the angels who were mistakenly worshiped in Rev. 19:10; 22:9.

■ 20:29 Blessed are those who have not seen. While commending Thomas's faith, Jesus blesses those who will come to believe through the witness of the disciples (17:20; cf. 1 Pet. 1:8, 9). This blessing introduces the reason for the writing of the Gospel (vv. 30, 31).

■ 20:30 many other signs. None of the Gospels is an attempt to give a complete or a strictly chronological record, such as a modern biography (cf. 21:25). See Introduction to Matthew: Interpretive Difficulties.

■ 20:31 these are written that you may believe. This states the purpose of this Gospel. Through the signs narrated, the reader is to come to faith in Jesus as more than a miracle worker. He is Christ, the incarnate Word, with the Father and the Spirit as Triune God. Through believing, we find life in Him who is the source of life (6:32–58).

■ 21:1–25 This chapter appears to be a kind of postscript, prepared by the same author as the rest of the Gospel, with the possible exception of vv. 24, 25.

■ 21:3 I am going fishing. Perhaps Peter, having denied the Lord, thought he had forfeited the privilege of being a witness of Jesus' resurrection.

that night they caught nothing. Fishing at night was not unusual. The circumstances are reminiscent of the miraculous draught of fish recounted in Luke 5:4–11 and associated with the call of Peter and other disciples.

■ 21:4 the disciples did not know. See note on 20:14.

■ 21:7 that disciple whom Jesus loved. See note on 13:23. He was quick to recognize Jesus.

put on his outer garment. This is strange for someone about to jump into the water. It seems to be a gesture of reverence for Jesus, before whom Peter did not want to appear unclothed.

14 This is now [k]the third time Jesus showed Himself to His disciples after He was raised from the dead.

Jesus Restores Peter

15 So when they had eaten breakfast, Jesus said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of [2]Jonah, do you love Me more than these?"

He said to Him, "Yes, Lord; You know that I [3]love You."

He said to him, [l]"Feed My lambs."

16 He said to him again a second time, "Simon, son of [4]Jonah, do you love Me?"

He said to Him, "Yes, Lord; You know that I [5]love You."

[m]He said to him, "Tend My [n]sheep."

17 He said to him the third time, "Simon, son of [6]Jonah, do you [7]love Me?" Peter was grieved because He said to him the third time, "Do you [7]love Me?"

And he said to Him, "Lord, [o]You know all things; You know that I [7]love You."

Jesus said to him, "Feed My sheep. 18[p]Most assuredly, I say to you, when you were younger, you girded yourself and walked where you wished; but when you are old, you will stretch out your hands, and another will gird you and carry you where you do not wish." 19 This He spoke, signifying [q]by what death he would glorify God. And when He had spoken this, He said to him, [r]"Follow Me."

The Beloved Disciple and His Book

20 Then Peter, turning around, saw the disciple [s]whom Jesus loved following, [t]who also had leaned on His breast at the supper, and said, "Lord, who is the one who betrays You?" 21 Peter, seeing him, said to Jesus, "But Lord, what about this man?"

22 Jesus said to him, "If I [8]will that he remain [u]till I come, what is that to you? You follow Me."

23 Then this saying went out among the brethren that this disciple would not die. Yet Jesus did not say to him that he would not die, but, "If I will that he remain till I come, what is that to you?"

24 This is the disciple who [v]testifies of these things, and wrote these things; and we know that his testimony is true.

25 [w]And there are also many other things that Jesus did, which if they were written one by one, [x]I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that would be written. Amen.

■ 21:14 the third time. Not the third appearance absolutely, but the third to a group of the apostles (cf. 20:19–23, 24–28).

■ 21:15 Simon, son of Jonah. Jesus used this name at the beginning of His solemn declaration in response to Peter's confession (Matt. 16:17).

do you love Me more than these. It is possible to construe this question in several ways. "Do you love Me more than these others love Me?"; "Do you love Me more than you love these others?"; "Do you love Me more than you love these nets and fish?" (cf. v. 3 note). The Greek verb translated "love" in Jesus' question changes when the question is raised the third time (v. 17 and text notes), and Peter's answer has this second verb each time. Some have thought that there is a difference intended in the use of the two verbs. This is possible but not necessary, for two reasons. First, John interchanges these verbs elsewhere in His Gospel. Second, other differences of wording in this conversation do not seem to indicate a difference of purpose. For example, "Feed My lambs," "Tend My sheep," and "Feed My sheep" are equivalent.

Feed My lambs. "My lambs" and "My sheep" correspond to "My church" (10:14, 26, 27; Matt. 18:18). When Peter writes to his fellow elders (1 Pet. 5:1, 2), he urges them, "Shepherd the flock of God which is among you," apparently having taken to heart the words of Jesus.

■ 21:17 the third time. Peter was grieved not because of the change of wording in this last question, but because Jesus repeated the question itself three times. Perhaps Peter was reminded of the three times he had denied Christ (13:38; 18:27). Whether Jesus intended such a reminder or not, He was giving Peter an opportunity to confess his love and to reaffirm his calling to follow Christ. With this knowledge Peter calls Jesus the "Chief Shepherd" (1 Pet. 5:4).

■ 21:19 by what death. An ancient tradition says that Peter was martyred by being crucified upside down.

Follow Me. This is like the original call given by Jesus to His apostles (Matt. 4:19; Luke 5:27; cf. John 21:22). The whole incident restores Peter to his place as an apostle, which his denial threatened to take from him.

■ 21:20 the disciple whom Jesus loved. This further description, combined with 13:23–25, leaves little doubt that this was John, son of Zebedee.

■ 21:24 the disciple who testifies. See v. 20; 13:23 and notes.

we know. This is the certification of a contemporary who was in a position to know John personally. Therefore, the whole Gospel, including ch. 21, was accepted immediately by the early church.

■ 21:25 the world itself could not contain. The writer uses exaggeration to make the point that the Gospel writers had to be selective of the facts and details included in their accounts.

THE ACTS

of the Apostles

Author According to tradition the Book of Acts is by Luke the physician, a companion of Paul on his second and third missionary journeys and on the voyage to Rome. Evidence from the early church is that Luke was the author. Irenaeus (c. A.D. 130–200), Clement of Alexandria (A.D. 153–217), the anonymous Muratorian Canon (c. A.D. 170), and Eusebius (c. A.D. 325) all credit Luke as the author.

Evidence for Luke's authorship is found in the well-known "we" passages of the latter half of the book (16:10–17; 20:5–15; 21:1–18; 27:1—28:16). These passages show that the narrator of Acts accompanied Paul from Troas in Asia Minor to Philippi on the continent of Europe, returning with him to Troas. Later he and Paul traveled from Palestine to Rome.

The author was probably an educated Gentile, as attested by the style and the high level of Greek used in Luke and Acts. His Greek is sometimes fully classical (Luke 1:1–4). The author's methodical approach to writing and his interest in research reveal an educated, highly trained man.

It appears from Col. 4:14 that Paul was with "Luke the beloved physician." In the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, scholars drew attention to the medical terminology found in Luke and Acts and to the author's interest in diseases (Luke 4:38; 8:43–44; Acts 3:7; 12:23; 13:11; 20:7–11; 28:3, 8). More recently it has been argued that medical terms were in common use among ancient writers, so that the author need not have been a physician. Still, an interest in medical matters is apparent in Luke and Acts, and it is reasonable to think that Luke the physician was the author.

Date and Occasion Three dates suggested for Acts are: before A.D. 70; 80 to 85; and 105 to 130. The later dates are based in part on the theory that the author of Acts was probably not Luke, and obtained his information about the revolutionaries, Theudas and Judas (5:36, 37) from the writings of the Jewish historian Josephus (Antiquities 18.4–10 and 20.97–98), who wrote during the latter half of the first century. But the Theudas mentioned in Acts may have been one of many revolutionaries who arose about the time Herod the Great died, and not the later Theudas mentioned by Josephus. Luke's knowledge of Judas was not necessarily derived from Josephus, any more than Josephus's knowledge was derived from Luke. Some argue that Luke made use of Josephus's account of the death of Herod Agrippa I in A.D. 44 (12:19–22), since both use similar words in describing the event. The two accounts, however, differ considerably.

The view that Luke and Acts were written before the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 is supported by the following considerations. First, ch. 28 ends with Paul under house arrest. While waiting to appear before Caesar, he is free to preach to all who come to him. This had to occur before A.D. 64, when a great fire swept through Rome and the Emperor Nero said that Christians were to blame. Second, Acts does not mention Paul's death, which appeared to be imminent in 2 Tim. 4 and which occurred about A.D. 68. Third, near the end of Acts, Luke portrays the Roman government as benevolent toward Christianity, an attitude that changed after A.D. 64. Fourth, certain vocabulary points to an early date. This vocabulary includes "disciple"; "the first day of the week" (later to become "the Lord's Day," Rev. 1:10); a reference to "the people of Israel" in 4:27 (a term later to include both Jews and Gentiles; Titus 2:14); the early title "Son of Man" (7:56); as well as language about geographical and political details.

Luke 1:3 and Acts 1:1 are both addressed to Theophilus. He may have been Luke's patron, or benefactor. Certainly he was a Gentile who received Christian instruction (Luke 1:4). As Luke's patron, Theophilus would have provided a living for Luke to enable him to do research and write his two books. By way of comparison, the historian Josephus had the Roman generals Vespasian and Titus as patrons, as well as another benefactor, a certain Epaphroditus, to whom he dedicated his book Against Apion.

Luke collected material from his own experience and from Semitic sources inside and outside Palestine. He mentions the names of several people who may have helped him (16:11; 20:4). He could have talked to Mary, Jesus' mother, in addition to others who were "eyewitnesses and ministers of the word" (Luke 1:2).

Characteristics and Themes Acts is a careful history of the development of the early church. Luke's descriptions of geographical and provincial details, of governmental officials and their actions, of imperial procedure, of a sea voyage to Italy, replete with accurate nautical terms—all these come from a careful researcher who was himself an eyewitness of many of the events he records.

Luke had several purposes. In 1:1, 2 he says that in the Gospel he has explained the life of Jesus until the Ascension. He summarizes the general theme of Acts as follows: the Lord is going to expand his work "in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth." Acts is called the "Acts of the Apostles," yet Luke traces only the ministries of Peter (chs. 1—12) and Paul (chs. 13—28). Some have detected an interest in defending Christianity or showing that Christianity was not a threat to Rome. Acts is a map of the progress of the church into the ancient world, showing how the present age began. □

Prologue

THE former account I made, O [a]Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach, 2 [b]until the day in which [1]He was taken up, after He through the Holy Spirit [c]had given commandments to the apostles whom He had chosen, 3 [d]to whom He also presented Himself alive after His suffering by many [2]infallible proofs, being seen by them during forty days and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

The Holy Spirit Promised

4 [e]And being assembled together with them, He commanded them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the Promise of the Father, "which," He said, "you have [f]heard from Me; 5 [g]for John truly baptized with water, [h]but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days from now." 6 Therefore, when they had come together, they asked Him, saying, "Lord, will You at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" 7 And He said to them, [i]"It is not for you to [j]know times or seasons which the Father has put in His own authority. 8 [k]But you shall receive power [l]when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and [m]you shall be [3]witnesses to Me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and [n]Samaria, and to the [o]end of the earth."

Jesus Ascends to Heaven

9 [p]Now when He had spoken these things, while they watched, [q]He was taken up, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. 10 And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as He went up, behold, two men stood by them [r]in white apparel, 11 who also said, "Men of Galilee, why do you stand gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, who was taken up from you into heaven, [s]will so come in like manner as you saw Him go into heaven."

■ 1:1 The former account. The Gospel of Luke as shown by the reference to Theophilus (Luke 1:3).

all that Jesus began both to do and teach. A fitting summary of what Luke records in the Gospel.

■ 1:2 taken up. Luke 24:50–52 locates the Ascension near Bethany, on the east side of the Mount of Olives, east of Jerusalem.

through the Holy Spirit . . . commandments. After the Resurrection Jesus communicated to His apostles the reality of His resurrection (John 20; 21), the truth of His calling as Messiah (Luke 24:44–49), the blessing of the Holy Spirit (John 20:22, 23), and the reality of His physical resurrection body (Luke 24:37–43).

He had chosen. A reference to Jesus' original choice of His apostles (Luke 6:12–16), one of whom (Judas) Jesus knew would become a traitor.

■ 1:3 presented Himself . . . many infallible proofs. Christ's resurrection appearances (Matt. 28; Mark 16; Luke 24; John 20; 21; 1 Cor. 15:5–7) were important as an unshakable confirmation of Christ's supernatural person and work. It was important that Jesus' resurrection should be seen by the disciples (v. 22).

forty days. The time from the Resurrection to the Ascension. After Jesus ascended to heaven, the disciples stayed ten days in Jerusalem waiting for the promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit that occurred on Pentecost, the fiftieth day after Passover.

■ 1:4 being assembled together with them. Jesus often communed with His friends and disciples over a meal: at the feeding of the five thousand (Luke 9:16), with tax collectors and sinners (Mark 2:15, 16; Luke 5:29), at the Pharisee's house (Luke 7:37), at the Last Supper (Matt. 26:21, 26), and after the Resurrection (Luke 24:42; John 21:9–15).

wait for the Promise of the Father. The Holy Spirit was the gift of the Father and the gift of Jesus the Son (John 14:1, 26; 15:26).

■ 1:5 John truly baptized with water. John the Baptist baptized large crowds of people (Matt. 3:5, 6, 13–15; Mark 1:5, 9; Luke 3:7–16, 21). John's water baptism of repentance (Mark 1:4) pointed forward to the messianic baptism with the Holy Spirit and fire (Luke 3:16). See "The Baptism of Jesus" at Mark 1:9.

not many days from now. A few days would pass before Pentecost.

■ 1:6 at this time restore the kingdom to Israel. From what Jesus said in Matt. 19:28, the disciples thought that He might overthrow the Romans and restore the physical kingdom to Israel.

■ 1:7 not for you to know times or seasons. The specific years or dates (which some in all ages try to predict) of the Second Coming of Christ (cf. 1 Thess. 5:2).

■ 1:8 Holy Spirit has come upon you. Jesus means that the Holy Spirit will show His control of their lives with visible manifestations: the blowing of a violent wind, the appearance of tongues of fire, and speaking in foreign languages (ch. 2).

witnesses to Me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth. The Book of Acts follows this strategy. The Jerusalem witness (ch. 2) gives in miniature form God's worldwide ministry: the "Jews . . . from every nation" (2:5) who heard and believed carried the message far and wide. In the rest of Acts the gospel spreads to Jerusalem (3:1—8:1), to Judea and Samaria, up to Antioch of Syria (8:1—12:25), and to the ends of the earth (13:1—28:31).

■ 1:9 He was taken up. See "The Ascension of Jesus" at Luke 24:51.

■ 1:10 two men . . . in white apparel. Persons described as dressed in white are commonly supernatural or glorified beings: Jesus Christ (Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:3; Rev. 1:14), angels (Matt. 28:3; Mark 16:5; Luke 24:4; John 20:12), and glorified saints (Luke 9:30, 31; Rev. 3:4, 5, 18; 4:4; 7:14).

■ 1:11 Men of Galilee. The eleven were from Galilee; Judas Iscariot was from Kerioth in Judah.

in like manner. Jesus will return in His resurrection body, coming with the clouds of heaven (Matt. 24:30; 26:64; Mark 14:62; 1 Thess. 4:16, 17; Rev. 1:7). See "The Return of Christ" at 1 Thess. 4:16.

The Upper Room Prayer Meeting

12 [r]Then they returned to Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is near Jerusalem, a Sabbath day's journey. 13 And when they had entered, they went up [u]into the upper room where they were staying: [v]Peter, James, John, and Andrew; Philip and Thomas; Bartholomew and Matthew; James the son of Alphaeus and [w]Simon the Zealot; and [x]Judas the son of James. 14 [y]These all continued with one [4]accord in prayer [5]and supplication, with [z]the women and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with [a]His brothers.

15 And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the [6]disciples (altogether the number [b]of names was about a hundred and twenty), and said, 16 "Men and brethren, this Scripture had to be fulfilled, [c]which the Holy Spirit spoke before by the mouth of David concerning Judas, [d]who became a guide to those who arrested Jesus; 17 for [e]he was numbered with us and obtained a part in [f]this ministry."

18 [g](Now this man purchased a field with [h]the [7]wages of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst open in the middle and all his [8]entrails gushed out. 19 And it became known to all those dwelling in Jerusalem; so that field is called in their own language, Akel Dama, that is, Field of Blood.)

21 "Therefore, of these men who have accompanied us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 beginning from the baptism of John to that day when [k]He was taken up from us, one of these must [l]become a witness with us of His resurrection."

23 And they proposed two: Joseph called [m]Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

■ 1:12 the mount called Olivet. A hill beyond the Kidron Valley just east of the walled city of Jerusalem. The disciples had been with Jesus on the Mount near Bethany (Luke 24:50).

a Sabbath day's journey. From the city, a distance calculated by the rabbis to be about 1,100 meters or three-fourths of a mile.

■ 1:13 up into the upper room where they were staying. Probably where the disciples had been hiding for fear of the Jews. This may have been the same room in which they had celebrated the Passover and Jesus had instituted the Lord's Supper (Mark 14:15), or a room in the house of Mary, the aunt of Barnabas (Col. 4:10), where the Christians later held meetings (12:12). It was probably located close to the temple courts where the visiting Jewish crowds were assembled (2:5–12).

Bartholomew. Also known as Nathanael (John 1:45; 21:2).

James the son of Alphaeus. Also known as James the younger (Mark 15:40).

Zealot. Possibly referring to Simon's former membership in the Zealot revolutionary group.

Judas the son of James. Also known as Thaddaeus (Matt. 10:3; Mark 3:18).

■ 1:14 continued . . . in prayer. Jesus established a pattern of prayer in the lives of His disciples. For examples of Jesus praying, see Luke 3:21; 5:16; 6:12; 9:18, 28, 29; 11:1; 22:32, 41; 23:34, 46.

with the women. Certain women who had followed Jesus, supported His work, and cared for Him in His death (Matt. 27:55, 56; 28:1; Mark 15:40, 41; Luke 8:2, 3; 23:49; 24:1; 24:22).

Mary the mother of Jesus. This is the last reference in the New Testament to Jesus' mother.

His brothers. Jesus' half brothers, the sons of Mary and Joseph (Matt. 13:55; Luke 14:26; John 7:3, 10).

■ 1:15 in those days. The ten days between the Ascension and Pentecost (2:1).

■ 1:16 Men and brethren. Males are particularly addressed here because Peter is talking about replacing Judas Iscariot, one of the Twelve whom Jesus had originally chosen as apostles (Matt. 10:2–4).

this Scripture had to be fulfilled. Ps. 69:25 and 109:8, quoted in v. 20, are applied by Peter to Judas Iscariot, who as an enemy of God had been deposed from his apostleship. Now "his office" (Ps. 109:8) had to be filled again.

the Holy Spirit spoke . . . by the mouth of David. The Holy Spirit inspired David to compose these words using his poetic skills.

■ 1:17 obtained a part in this ministry. In His plan God allowed Judas, the enemy of the Savior, to serve for a time in the ministry of the disciples.

■ 1:18 this man purchased a field. Judas indirectly bought the field when he returned the money to the chief priests and elders who in turn purchased a burial place for foreigners called "Field of Blood."

with the wages. The thirty silver coins (Matt. 26:15), probably worth about 120 denarii, or 120 days' labor (Matt. 20:2).

falling headlong. Matthew writes that Judas "hanged himself" (Matt. 27:5). Apparently during or soon after the hanging his body fell to the ground and was broken or decomposed.

■ 1:21 among us. This includes the whole time of Jesus' public ministry from His baptism to His ascension.

■ 1:23 proposed two. Evidently Joseph and Matthias were chosen from a larger number of witnesses (according to v. 15, about 120 persons were present). Neither is mentioned elsewhere in Scripture.

Matthias. And he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

Coming of the Holy Spirit

2 When [a]the Day of Pentecost had fully come, [b]they were all [f]with one accord in one place.
2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and [c]it filled the whole house where they were sitting. 3 Then there appeared to them [2]divided tongues, as of fire, and one sat upon each of them. 4 And [d]they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began [e]to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

The Apostles

Although the Gospels call the same people "disciples" and "apostles" (Matt. 10:1, 2; Luke 6:13), the terms are not synonyms. "Disciple" means "pupil, learner"; "apostle" means "emissary, representative," one sent with the authority of the sender. The twelve apostles (Rev. 21:14), as distinct from the apostles ("messengers") of the churches (2 Cor. 8:23 and text note), and from the rest of the disciples, were chosen and sent by Jesus (Mark 3:14) just as Jesus Himself, "the Apostle . . . of our confession" (Heb. 3:1), was foreordained and sent by the Father (1 Pet. 1:20). As rejecting Jesus is rejecting the Father, so rejecting the apostles is rejecting Jesus (Luke 10:16).

Paul, the "apostle to the Gentiles" (Rom. 11:13; Gal. 2:8), announces himself as an apostle in the opening words of most of his letters. Because he had seen Christ on the Damascus road and been commissioned by Him (Acts 26:16–18), he was as truly a witness to Jesus' resurrection (which an apostle had to be, Acts 1:21, 22; 10:41, 42) as were the others. James, Peter, and John accepted Paul into apostolic partnership (Gal. 2:9), and God confirmed his status by the signs of an apostle (miracles and signs, 2 Cor. 12:12; Heb. 2:3, 4), and by the fruitfulness of his ministry (1 Cor. 9:2).

The apostles were agents of God's revelation of the truths that would become the Christian rule of faith and life. As such, and through Christ's appointment of them as His authorized representatives (2 Cor. 10:8; 13:10), the apostles exercised a unique authority in the church. There are no apostles today, though some Christians fulfill ministries that are in particular ways apostolic in style. No new canonical revelation is being given; apostolic teaching authority resides in the canonical Scriptures. The absence of new revelation does not put the contemporary church at a disadvantage compared with the church of apostolic days, for the Holy Spirit interprets and applies the Scriptures to God's people continually. □

■ 1:24 You have chosen. Peter and the disciples recognized that their human responsibility and choice of a man to succeed Judas occurred within the bounds of God's sovereign will.

■ 1:26 cast their lots. Lots are mentioned in the Old Testament as a means of ascertaining God's will (Ex. 28:30 note).

apostles. See theological note "The Apostles."

■ 2:1 Day of Pentecost. Lit. the "Fiftieth Day" after the Sabbath of the Passover week (Lev. 23:4–7, 15–16). Pentecost was celebrated on the first day of the week and was one of the three great annual feasts of Israel, preceded by Passover (Lev. 23:4–8; Num. 28:16–25) and followed four months later by the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:33–43; Num. 29:12–38; cf. John 7:1–44). Pentecost is also called the "Feast of Weeks," because it was celebrated seven weeks after Passover (Deut. 16:10); the "Feast of Harvest," because the first fruits of the harvest were gathered then (Ex. 23:16); and the "day of the firstfruits" (Num. 28:26).

they were all with one accord. All of the apostles (1:16) were there, and probably many of the 120 mentioned earlier (1:15).

in one place. An idiom meaning "together."

■ 2:2 a sound . . . of a rushing mighty wind. Three signs (wind, fire, and inspired speech) of God's presence were witnessed (Ex. 3:2; 13:21; 24:17; 40:38; 1 Kin. 19:11–13). Wind is a symbol of the Holy Spirit's presence (Ezek. 37:9, 13; John 3:8), while fire is a symbol of the His cleansing and judging power (Matt. 3:11, 12). The tongues were various languages spoken in all parts of the eastern Mediterranean region, from Rome to Persia.

■ 2:4 all. All of the 120 (1:15). See Joel 2:28 which speaks of God's Spirit poured out "on all flesh."

filled with the Holy Spirit. They were under the special guidance and influence of the Spirit, particularly evidenced by their speaking in known languages ("other tongues") which they had not previously learned (see 10:46; 19:6). Paul discusses the spiritual gift of tongues in 1 Cor. 12—14. The coming of the Spirit is the fulfillment of Jesus' promise reported in 1:5, 8 and Luke 24:49, but this does not mean that the Holy Spirit was not present and working with God's people in the Old Testament ("Holy Spirit" occurs in Ps. 51:11; Is. 63:10, 11; "Spirit of the Lord" in Judg. 3:10; 1 Sam. 10:6; Is. 11:2). See "The Holy Spirit" at John 14:26.

the Spirit gave them utterance. In all of the Christian life nothing is accomplished apart from God (Eph. 2:10; Phil. 2:12, 13).

The Crowd's Response

5 And there were dwelling in Jerusalem Jews, *f*devout men, from every nation under heaven.
6 And when this sound occurred, the *g*multitude came together, and were confused, because everyone heard them speak in his own language. 7 Then they were all amazed and marveled, saying to one another, "Look, are not all these who speak *h*Galileans? 8 And how is it that we hear, each in our own *3*language in which we were born? 9 Parthians and Medes and Elamites, those dwelling in Mesopotamia, Judea and *i*Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, 10 Phrygia and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya adjoining Cyrene, visitors from Rome, both Jews and proselytes, 11 Cretans and *4*Arabs—we hear them speaking in our own tongues the wonderful works of God." 12 So they were all amazed and perplexed, saying to one another, "Whatever could this mean?"

13 Others mocking said, "They are full of new wine."

Peter's Sermon

14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, raised his voice and said to them, "Men of Judea and all who dwell in Jerusalem, let this be known to you, and heed my words. 15 For these are not drunk, as you suppose, *j*since it is only *5*the third hour of the day. 16 But this is what was spoken by the prophet Joel:

17 'And[k] it shall come to pass in the last days, says God,

*m*Acts 21:9

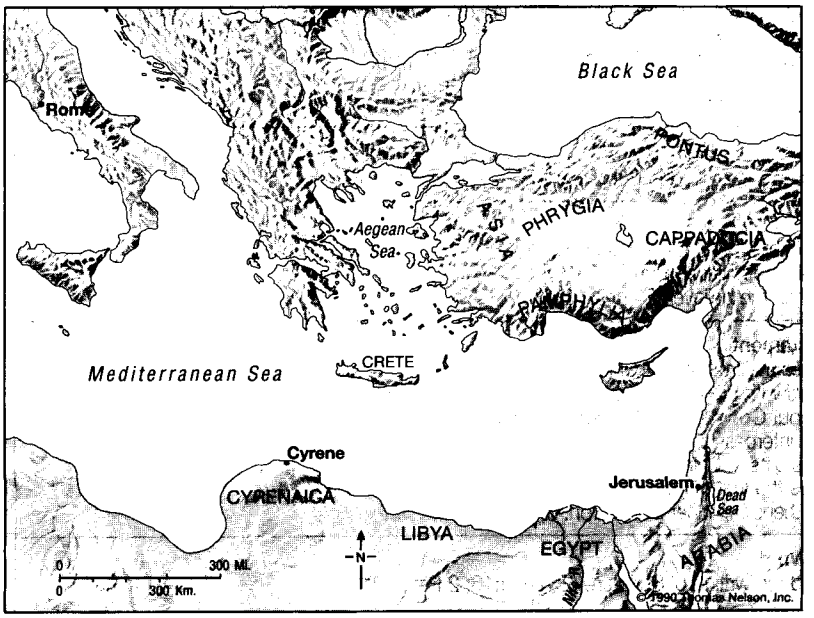
■ 2:5 Jews, devout men. See 8:2; 22:12; Luke 2:25. Probably most of these were visiting Jerusalem for Pentecost.

■ 2:6, 7 The crowd was amazed that rural Galileans with their peculiar accents could have learned all these foreign languages.

■ 2:8–11 The list of people from fifteen nations starts with the east ("Parthians and Medes and Elamites, those dwelling in Mesopotamia," where Jews had been taken captive to Assyria and Babylon). The list proceeds west to Judea, and then north to Asia Minor (Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia), from there to North Africa (Egypt, parts of Libya near Cyrene), then to Rome. Finally the list includes two widely separated places, Crete and Arabia.

■ 2:15 only the third hour. Counting 6:00 A.M. as the first hour makes this 9:00 A.M. It was customary to fast on feast days until at least the fourth hour. Thus the alleged drunkenness was most unlikely.

■ 2:17–21 The quotation is from the Greek Old Testament text of Joel 2:28–32 (3:1–5). Peter's use of the words "in the latter days" (cf. Is. 2:2; Hos. 3:5; Mic. 4:1; 1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Tim. 3:1; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18) makes explicit that Joel is referring to the last times promised by God. Peter interprets Joel's words as referring to the new covenant in contrast to the former days of the old covenant (Heb. 8:7; 9:1).



The Nations of Pentecost. In the first Christian century, Jewish communities were located primarily in the eastern part of the Roman Empire, where Greek was the common language, but also existed as far west as Italy and as far east as Babylonia. In addition to people from the nations shown here, those present on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:9–11) included visitors from Mesopotamia and even farther east, from Parthia, Media, and Elam (present-day Iran).

■ 2:22 Jesus of Nazareth. This title is used elsewhere by Luke (6:14; 10:38; 22:8; 26:9; Luke 18:37; 24:19). In the sermon Peter emphasizes these important facts about Jesus: His death (v. 23), His bodily resurrection (vv. 24–32), His exaltation (v. 33), His coronation (vv. 34, 36), and the conquest at His Second Coming (v. 35).

attested by God to you by miracles, wonders, and signs. Although coming from Nazareth was a stumbling block (cf. John 1:46), God amply demonstrated that Jesus was the Messiah through the attestation of miracles.

■ 2:23 by the determined purpose and foreknowledge of God. Although wicked men, both Jews and Gentiles (4:27, 28), had of their own will put Jesus to death, their actions were within the sovereign determination of God (cf. 17:26; 2 Chr. 25:16; Jer. 21:10; Dan. 11:36). God ordained the death of His Son, but the immediate perpetrators bear the guilt for crucifying Jesus (3:17, 18; 4:27, 28; 13:27). God ordains the means as well as the ends of human events without violating human freedom and responsibility. The Jews could not pass their guilt to the Romans; they had asked the Romans to crucify Jesus. Peter teaches that the Jews were accountable (3:15; 4:10; 5:30; 10:39).

The Work of the Holy Spirit (2:4)

In the beginning
- Active and present at creation, hovering over the unordered conditions (Gen. 1:2)

In the Old Testament
- The origin of supernatural abilities (Gen. 41:38)
- The giver of artistic skill (Ex. 31:2–5)
- The source of power and strength (Judg. 3:9, 10)
- The inspiration of prophecy (1 Sam. 19:20, 23)
- The equipper of God's messenger (Mic. 3:8)

In Old Testament prophecy
- The cleansing of the heart for holy living (Ezek. 36:25–29)

In salvation
- Regenerates the believer (Titus 3:5)
- Indwells the believer (Rom. 8:9–11)
- Sanctifies the believer (2 Thess. 2:13)

In the New Testament
- Declares the truth about Christ (John 16:13, 14)
- Endows with power for gospel proclamation (Acts 1:8)
- Pours out God's love in the heart (Rom. 5:5)
- Makes intercession (Rom. 8:26)
- Imparts gifts for ministry (1 Cor. 12:4–11)
- Enables the fruit of holy living (Gal. 5:22, 23)
- Strengthens the inner being (Eph. 3:16)

In the written Word
- Inspired the writing of Scripture (2 Tim. 3:16; 2 Pet. 1:21)

[6]have taken by lawless hands, have crucified, and put to death; 24 [u]whom God raised up, having [7]loosed the [8]pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be held by it. 25 For David says concerning Him:

[v]'I foresaw the LORD always before my face,
For He is at my right hand, that I may not be shaken.
26 Therefore my heart rejoiced, and my tongue was glad;
Moreover my flesh also will rest in hope.
27 For You will not leave my soul in Hades,
Nor will You allow Your Holy One to see [w]corruption.
28 You have made known to me the ways of life;
You will make me full of joy in Your presence.'

29 "Men and brethren, let me speak freely to you [x]of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his tomb is with us to this day. 30 Therefore, being a prophet, [y]and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his body, [9]according to the flesh, He would raise up the Christ to sit on his throne, 31 he, foreseeing this, spoke concerning the resurrection of the Christ, [z]that His soul was not left in Hades, nor did His flesh see corruption. 32 [a]This Jesus God has raised up, [b]of which we are all witnesses. 33 Therefore [c]being exalted [d]to [d]the right hand of God, and [e]having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He [f]poured out this which you now see and hear.

34 "For David did not ascend into the heavens, but he says himself:

[g]'The LORD said to my Lord,
"Sit at My right hand,
35 Till I make Your enemies Your footstool."'

36 "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God has made this Jesus, whom you crucified, both Lord and Christ."

37 Now when they heard this, [h]they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

38 Then Peter said to them, [i]"Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the [2]remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. 39 For the promise is to you and [j]to your children, and [k]to all who are afar off, as many as the Lord our God will call."

have crucified. Luke again emphasizes how Jesus died (Luke 24:39). Archaeologists have discovered in Palestine the pierced heel bones of a first-century A.D. victim of crucifixion.

■ 2:25 David says. In Ps. 16 David is primarily speaking about his own human experience and suffering, but in the verses quoted here he is ultimately talking about Jesus (v. 25), God's Holy One whose body did not see decay (v. 27).

■ 2:33 exalted to the right hand of God. God's plan went beyond the resurrection of His Son, who must be exalted to the position He occupied with the Father from eternity (John 17:5).

and having received from the Father . . . Holy Spirit . . . poured out. The doctrine of the Trinity is implied: Peter showed how the Father (vv. 32, 33) worked in the life, death, resurrection, and exaltation of Jesus, His Son, and the Holy Spirit produced the miracle of causing His servants to speak in tongues.

■ 2:36 In this climactic statement Peter not only stresses that Jesus is God's Messiah of the Old Testament (3:18, 20; 4:26; 5:42; Is. 11:1; Luke 4:18–21), but that He is the exalted Lord (Rom. 10:9; Phil. 2:9–11), and the conquering King (1 Cor. 15:24, 25; Rev. 19:16).

■ 2:38 Repent, and . . . be baptized. Repentance (turning to God in sorrow for sin) and baptism were important parts of the message of John the Baptist (Matt. 3:1; Mark 1:4) and of Jesus (Matt. 4:17; 11:20; Luke 13:3, 5), and were central in the church's preaching and teaching (Matt. 28:18, 19). See "Baptism" at Rom. 6:3.

in the name of Jesus Christ. A summary of Matt. 28:18, 19 (baptism in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit), with only Jesus mentioned here, since Peter's sermon had to do with Jesus and His ministry.

for the remission of sins. Baptism is a sign and seal of spiritual cleansing the Spirit effects through the forgiveness of sins (Titus 3:5).

the gift of the Holy Spirit. The gift of the indwelling Person of the Holy Spirit, as well as the gift of forgiveness (Eph. 1:7), and of empowering for ministry. It is significant that Peter does not speak here of receiving the gift of tongues. The gifts of forgiveness and the indwelling Holy Spirit are essential for producing the fruit of the Spirit in the lives of believers (Gal. 5:22, 23) and for exercising the gifts the Spirit chooses to give at different times to different believers (1 Cor. 12:4–11).

■ 2:39 Peter proclaims that salvation through God's Messiah is promised to the Jews, to their children, and to all those far off (i.e., the Gentiles, Eph. 2:11–13). Here again is the message of Acts—the gospel is for Jews and Gentiles. See "Infant Baptism" at Gen. 17:11.

as many as the Lord our God will call. Salvation is based on God's choice and calling (John 6:37; Eph. 1:4, 5).

about three thousand souls were added to them. 42 [l]And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' [5]doctrine and fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayers. 43 Then fear came upon every soul, and [m]many wonders and signs were done through the apostles. 44 Now all who believed were together, and [n]had all things in common, 45 and [6]sold their possessions and goods, and [o]divided[7] them among all, as anyone had need.

46 [p]So continuing daily with one accord [q]in the temple, and [r]breaking bread from house to house, they ate their food with gladness and simplicity of heart, 47 praising God and having favor with all the people. And [s]the Lord added [8]to the church daily those who were being saved.

A Lame Man Healed

3 Now Peter and John went up together [a]to the temple at the hour of prayer, [b]the ninth hour. 2 And [c]a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, [d]to [l]ask alms from those who entered the temple; 3 who, seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked for alms. 4 And fixing his eyes on him, with John, Peter said, "Look at us." 5 So he gave them his attention, expecting to receive something from them. 6 Then Peter said, "Silver and gold I do not have, but what I do have I give you: [e]In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." 7 And he took him by the right hand and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. 8 So he, [f]leaping up, stood and walked and entered the temple with them—walking, leaping, and praising God. 9 [g]And all the people saw him walking and praising God. 10 Then they knew that it was he who [h]sat begging alms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple; and they were filled with wonder and amazement at what had happened to him.

Preaching in Solomon's Portico

11 Now as the lame man who was healed held on to Peter and John, all the people ran together to them in the porch [i]which is called Solomon's, greatly amazed. 12 So when Peter saw it, he responded to the people: "Men of Israel, why do you marvel at this? Or why look so intently at us, as though by our own power or godliness we had made this man walk? 13 [j]The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our fathers, [k]glorified His Servant Jesus, whom you [l]delivered up and [m]denied in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go. 14 But you denied [n]the Holy One [o]and the Just, and [p]asked for a murderer to be granted to you, 15 and killed the [2]Prince of life, [q]whom God raised from the dead, [r]of which we are witnesses. 16 [s]And His name, through faith in His name, has made this man strong, whom you see and know. Yes, the faith which comes through Him has given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 "Yet now, brethren, I know that [t]you did it in ignorance, as did also your rulers. 18 But [u]those things which God foretold [v]by the mouth of all His prophets, that the Christ would suffer, He has thus fulfilled. 19 [w]Repent therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, so

■ 2:42 the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayers. This is a summary of the essential elements needed in Christian discipleship. They are elements the apostles had learned from their experience with Jesus: His teaching about His person and work (Matt. 16:18, 19; Luke 24:46) and their Christian responsibility as His followers (Matt. 5—7), the fellowship of Christ with His disciples (John 13), the Lord's Supper—the breaking of bread (Matt. 26:17–30), and His prayer life for and with the disciples (Matt. 6:5–13; Luke 11:1–13; John 17).

■ 2:44 all who believed were together. This demonstrates the unity of the Spirit Paul later advocates (Eph. 4:3).

■ 2:45 sold their possessions. Unified in the Spirit, the believers were attuned to the physical needs of others and voluntarily (4:34; 5:4) gave to meet those needs (4:32, "they had all things in common").

■ 2:46 breaking bread from house to house. This refers to the common daily meals shared in the homes.

■ 2:47 the Lord added. The church belongs to the Lord, and He is the one who sovereignly builds His church (Matt. 16:18; 1 Cor. 3:9).

■ 3:1 the temple. The temple courts, and particularly the part near the gate called Beautiful (v. 2). This may have been the "Nicanor Gate" made of Corinthian bronze. Its exact location is uncertain.

■ 3:3 into the temple. As Jews, Peter and John could walk through the Court of Women into the Court of Israel, but non-Jews would be restricted to the Court of the Gentiles.

■ 3:11 porch . . . called Solomon's. A porch built by Herod the Great along the east side of the temple platform. Jesus taught here on occasion (John 10:22).

■ 3:13 The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Appeal to the patriarchs was important in the sermons of Christ's servants (7:32; 13:17).

■ 3:14 denied the Holy One and the Just. The phrase "the Holy One," referring to God, appears a number of times in the Old Testament. The phrase "the Holy One of Israel" occurs in Is. 1:4 and 5:24 (cf. Luke 1:35). Isaiah also speaks of God as "the Righteous One" (Is. 24:16; cf. Acts 7:52; 22:14). In applying this description to Jesus, Peter indicates the deity of Christ.

■ 3:18 foretold by the mouth of all His prophets. See Luke 24:26, 27, 44–47. Peter could also have cited such passages as Deut. 18:15 (quoted in v. 22); Is. 53; Ps. 2; 16:8–11; 22 (cf. 1 Pet. 1:10, 11).

■ 3:19 Repent . . . be converted. Peter's sermon illustrates the two sides of repentance, that is, turning aside in sorrow from sin, and turning to God in faith. The call to repentance and faith is a necessary element of the apostolic preaching (2:38; 17:30; 20:21).

sins . . . blotted out. In the order of the gospel, repentance and faith receive from God forgiveness and removal of sins.

times of refreshing. This phrase, like "the restoration of all things" (v. 21), seems to refer to the Second Coming of the Messiah.

Him you shall hear in all things, whatever He says to you. 23 And it shall be that every soul who will not hear that Prophet shall be utterly destroyed from among the people.'* 24 Yes, and [b]all the prophets, from Samuel and those who follow, as many as have spoken, have also [6]foretold these days. 25 [c]You are sons of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying to Abraham, [d]'And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.' 26 To you [e]first, God, having raised up His Servant Jesus, sent Him to bless you, [f]in turning away every one of you from your iniquities."

Peter and John Arrested

4 Now as they spoke to the people, the priests, the captain of the temple, and the [a]Sadducees came upon them, 2 being greatly disturbed that they taught the people and preached in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. 3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in custody until the next day, for it was already evening. 4 However, many of those who heard the word believed; and the number of the men came to be about five thousand.

Addressing the Sanhedrin

5 And it came to pass, on the next day, that their rulers, elders, and scribes, 6 as well as [b]Annas the high priest, Caiaphas, John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the family of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem. 7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, [c]"By what power or by what name have you done this?"

8 [d]Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, said to them, "Rulers of the people and elders of Israel: 9 If we this day are judged for a good deed done to a helpless man, by what means he has been made well, 10 let it be known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, [e]that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crucified, [f]whom God raised from the dead, by Him this man stands here before you whole. 11 This is the [g]'stone which was rejected by you builders, which has become the chief cornerstone.' 12 [h]Nor is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved."

■ 3:25 saying to Abraham, 'And in your seed. As a climax, Peter refers to another patriarch and prophet, Abraham, through whom God sent Abraham's "seed," the Messiah (Gal. 3:16), to bless all peoples on earth. As members of Abraham's spiritual posterity, all those who belong to Christ are also called "Abraham's seed" (Rom. 4:16; Gal. 3:29).

■ 4:1 the priests. Several priests serving their allotted week's temple service (Luke 1:8, 23) were near Solomon's Colonnade and could hear Peter's declarations about Jesus the Messiah. Alarmed at what was considered dangerous teaching against Jewish authority, they probably alerted the captain of the temple guard. This captain was the commander of the temple police force and a member of one of the important priestly families. The priests also alerted the Sadducees, who held prominent positions in the Sanhedrin, the Jewish council.

■ 4:2 preached in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. The Sadducees were distressed because the apostles were teaching the people about the resurrection (1 Cor. 15:12–20). The Sadducees, unlike the Pharisees, did not believe in the bodily resurrection (23:6–8).

■ 4:3 put them in custody . . . for it was already evening. This action was necessary because the temple sacrifices had been concluded and the temple gates were closed; official actions by the Sanhedrin would have to be taken the next day.

■ 4:4 Despite the persecution, the church grew from three thousand on the day of Pentecost to five thousand. The emphasis here is on men, because in that time the men would have gathered together by themselves to hear the message, and the women would have been in the Court of Women (cf. John 6:10). In modern Israel men and women are separated in their worship at the Wailing Wall.

■ 4:5 rulers, elders, and scribes. These groups constituted the Jewish religious council, the Sanhedrin. Luke 22:66 describes the body of chief priests and scribes as "their council." This body would include the high priest, members of his family (v. 6), Sadducees, and Pharisees (Matt. 27:62) such as Nicodemus (who is called a ruler of the Jews and "teacher of Israel," John 3:1, 10) and Gamaliel (5:34; 22:3).

■ 4:6 The men listed in this verse constituted what might be called the executive committee of the council. Annas, the father-in-law of Caiaphas who was the official high priest (John 18:13), is here called the high priest. He was the power behind the office and probably still regarded as high priest by many Jews since the office was held for life. The Romans had deposed Annas in A.D. 15. John is possibly Jonathan, son of Annas who was appointed high priest in A.D. 36, or Jonathan ben Zaccai, who became president of the Great Synagogue after the fall of Jerusalem. Nothing is known of Alexander.

■ 4:7 by what name. The answer is given in v. 10: "the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth." There is frequent emphasis on the name of Jesus or the name of the Lord (stressing the person and work of the Lord) in Acts (2:21, 38; 3:16; 4:10, 12; 8:16; 9:15, 28; 15:26; 16:18).

■ 4:8 filled with the Holy Spirit. See 2:4; Eph. 5:18.

■ 4:11 stone . . . rejected . . . the chief cornerstone. In Acts, defense of the gospel often includes reference to the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy; here Ps. 118:22 is quoted (also cited in Matt. 21:42; 1 Pet. 2:7; cf. Rom. 9:33).

■ 4:12 no other name. Just as the name of Jesus had been the only hope for physical healing of the man crippled from birth, so also the name of Jesus is the only hope for the spiritual healing of mankind. This exclusive and total reliance upon Christ for salvation is the clear teaching of both Jesus and the New Testament generally (John 14:6; 1 Tim. 2:5). See theological note "Salvation."

The Name of Jesus Forbidden

13 Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, *i*and perceived that they were uneducated and untrained men, they marveled. And they realized that they had been with Jesus. 14 And seeing the man who had been healed *j*standing with them, they could say nothing against it. 15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves, 16 saying, k"What shall we do to these men? For, indeed, that a *l*notable miracle has been done through them is *l*evident*2* to all who dwell in Jerusalem, and we cannot deny it. 17 But so that it spreads no further among the people, let us severely threaten them, that from now on they speak to no man in this name."

18 *m*So they called them and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus. 19 But Peter and John answered and said to them, n"Whether it is right in the sight of God to listen to you more than to God, you judge. 20 *o*For we cannot but speak the things which *p*we have seen and heard." 21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding no way of punishing them, *q*because of the people, since they all *r*glorified God for *s*what had been done. 22 For the man was over forty years old on whom this miracle of healing had been performed.

Salvation

The central theme of the Christian gospel is salvation. The gospel proclaims that as God saved Israel from Egypt and the psalmist from death (Ex. 15:2; Ps. 116:6), so He will save all who trust Christ from sin and its consequences. This salvation from sin and death is wholly God's work. "For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8). "Salvation is of the LORD" (Jon. 2:9).

The Hebrew words that express the idea of salvation in the Old Testament have the general sense of deliverance from physical danger or moral distress (Ps. 85:8, 9; Is. 62:11). In such passages the Septuagint (the Greek translation of the Old Testament) uses Greek words that mean to save from death or dangers, as well as to preserve or to heal. New Testament passages that speak of salvation use all these ideas to explain the acts of God on behalf of the lost.

Salvation delivers the believer from the wrath of God, the dominion of sin, and the power of death (Rom. 1:18; 3:9; 5:21; 1 Thess. 5:9). God liberates sinners from the natural condition of being mastered by the world, the flesh, and the devil (John 8:23, 24; Rom. 8:7, 8; 1 John 5:19). He frees believers from the fears that a sinful life generates (Rom. 8:15; 2 Tim. 1:7; Heb. 2:14, 15), and from the vicious habits that enslaved them (Eph. 4:17–24; 1 Thess. 4:3–8; Titus 2:11—3:6). Salvation brings not only the promise of spiritual wholeness and peace, but also of physical healing (Matt. 9:21, 22; Mark 10:52 and text note; James 5:15). Although Christians have already received salvation, they will experience the benefits of salvation in their fullness only when Christ returns at the end of the age (Heb. 9:28; 1 Pet. 1:3–5).

Salvation is accomplished through what Christ did in history and by what He continues to do in believers by the Holy Spirit. The basis for our salvation is Jesus' death on the cross (see "The Atonement" at Rom. 3:25) and the righteousness He achieved for us in His active obedience. It is realized in our lives as Christ lives in us (John 15:4; 17:26; Col. 1:27) and we live in Christ, united with Him in His death and risen life (Rom. 6:3–10; Col. 2:12, 20; 3:1). This vital union, sustained by the Spirit through faith and formed in our new birth, presupposes our eternal election in Christ (Eph. 1:4–6). Jesus was foreordained to represent us and to bear our sins as our substitute (1 Pet. 1:18–20; cf. Matt. 1:21). We were chosen to be effectually called, conformed to His image, and glorified by the Spirit's power (Rom. 8:11, 29, 30). □

■ 4:13 uneducated. The courage and ready witness of Peter and John is a fulfillment of Christ's promise to the disciples in Matt. 10:19, 20. The courage and knowledge of the unschooled Galilean fishermen astonished the Sanhedrin. In taking note that these men "had been with Jesus," the council no doubt remembered how Jesus too, though without formal training, had surprised them with His teaching (Luke 2:46, 47; John 7:15).

■ 4:19 to listen to you more than to God. The duty of religious worship and speech is prior to the rights of the state, and the duty of a Christian conscience before God in proclaiming the gospel is above the rights of the Sanhedrin. The state is a servant ordained by God to maintain peace and order (Rom. 13:1–7). See "Christians and Civil Government" at Rom. 13:1.

Prayer for Boldness

23 And being let go, [t]they went to their own companions and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said to them. 24 So when they heard that, they raised their voice to God with one accord and said: "Lord, [u]You are God, who made heaven and earth and the sea, and all that is in them, 25 who [3]by the mouth of Your servant David have said:

[v] 'Why did the nations rage,
And the people plot vain things?
26 The kings of the earth took their stand,
And the rulers were gathered together
Against the LORD and against His Christ.'

27 "For [w]truly against [x]Your holy Servant Jesus, [y]whom You anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together 28 [z]to do whatever Your hand and Your purpose determined before to be done. 29 Now, Lord, look on their threats, and grant to Your servants [a]that with all boldness they may speak Your word, 30 by stretching out Your hand to heal, [b]and that signs and wonders may be done [c]through the name of [d]Your holy Servant Jesus."

31 And when they had prayed, [e]the place where they were assembled together was shaken; and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, [f]and they spoke the word of God with boldness.

Sharing in All Things

32 Now the multitude of those who believed [g]were of one heart and one soul; [h]neither did anyone say that any of the things he possessed was his own, but they had all things in common. 33 And with [i]great power the apostles gave [j]witness to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. And [k]great grace was upon them all. 34 Nor was there anyone among them who lacked; [l]for all who were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the proceeds of the things that were sold, 35 [m]and laid them at the apostles' feet; [n]and they distributed to each as anyone had need.

36 And [4]Joses, who was also named Barnabas by the apostles (which is translated Son of [5]Encouragement), a Levite of the country of Cyprus, 37 [o]having land, sold it, and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet.

■ 4:24 raised their voice to God. This activity was a natural result of the apostles' training with Jesus and the habits they had formed (2:42).

Lord, You are God. A term used to express the total creative power and control of the Lord over all His physical creation and over the affairs of humanity (cf. vv. 25, 26; Jer. 10:12).

■ 4:25 by the mouth of Your servant David. A succinct summary of verbal inspiration. The Scripture writers spoke and wrote under the guidance of the Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21).

■ 4:27 Herod and Pontius Pilate . . . Gentiles . . . people of Israel. The believers properly understood that both Jews and Gentiles were responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus. These were Herod Antipas, who was the son of Herod the Great and tetrarch (i.e., subordinate ruler under the Romans) of Galilee and Perea (Luke 3:1; 23:6, 7) and Pontius Pilate, who was the Roman procurator (governor) of Palestine from A.D. 26–36 (Luke 3:1; 23:1–24). The chief priests and elders persuaded the people to reject Jesus and ask for Barabbas (Matt. 27:20–26).

■ 4:28 Your hand and Your purpose. A clear affirmation that nothing, not even the wrongful death of God's Son, happens apart from God's sovereign will and control. The certainty of God's plan for the world is established by His sovereign "purpose" and ensured by His almighty "hand." The early chapters of Acts teach the compatibility of divine sovereignty and human responsibility. While the murderers of Jesus acted in accord with what God had determined, they were morally responsible agents and were held accountable (3:15).

■ 4:29 This prayer of the believing community illustrates the way in which the church should be empowered and encouraged by God's sovereignty. In the face of the threat of physical violence, the church affirmed God's control of the situation (v. 28) and, encouraged by this, they petitioned for greater boldness.

Lord. The Greek word for "Lord" is kyrios, used in the Septuagint (the Greek Old Testament) to translate the divine name Yahweh. It is used in the New Testament to refer both to God and also to Christ specifically (2:36; 7:31).

■ 4:32–35 Because the believers were "of one heart" (v. 32), they were conscious of the needy in the church and consequently they helped by selling land and giving the proceeds to the apostles for those needs. This Christian giving was proportional to real need. It was a voluntary, not compulsory (5:4).

■ 4:33 the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. The crowning proof of the salvation accomplished in Jesus Christ was His resurrection from the dead. The apostles, as chief witnesses, had to testify about this redemptive event (1:22).

grace. Grace in witnessing and living.

■ 4:36 Joses . . . also named Barnabas . . . a Levite. In the Old Testament, the Levites did not have inherited land, as the other tribes had, although the Levites were allotted towns (Josh. 21). However, by New Testament times a Levite such as Joses Barnabas may well have been able to own land. This probably was true of a country outside of Palestine, such as Cyprus. On the other hand, the land owned may have belonged to his wife. The introduction of Barnabas here lays the foundation for further reference to the significant influence of this outstanding believer in the life of the Jewish and Gentile churches and in the life of Paul.

■ 4:37 having land, sold it. As "Son of Encouragement" (v. 36), Barnabas presented a good example of a Christian who gave to the needs of others (contrasted with the selfish example of Ananias and Sapphira, 5:1–11). Barnabas also interceded for Saul (9:27), encouraged the church at Antioch in Syria (11:22), led in missionary work abroad (13:2, 3), and continued in missionary work despite a disagreement with Paul (15:37–39).

Lying to the Holy Spirit

5 But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession. 2 And he kept back part of the proceeds, his wife also being aware of it, and brought a certain part and laid it at the apostles' feet. 3 [a]But Peter said, "Ananias, why has [b]Satan filled your heart to lie to the Holy Spirit and keep back part of the price of the land for yourself? 4 While it remained, was it not your own? And after it was sold, was it not in your own control? Why have you conceived this thing in your heart? You have not lied to men but to God."

5 Then Ananias, hearing these words, [c]fell down and breathed his last. So great fear came upon all those who heard these things. 6 And the young men arose and [d]wrapped him up, carried him out, and buried him.

7 Now it was about three hours later when his wife came in, not knowing what had happened. 8 And Peter answered her, "Tell me whether you sold the land for so much?"

She said, "Yes, for so much."

9 Then Peter said to her, "How is it that you have agreed together [e]to test the Spirit of the Lord? Look, the feet of those who have buried your husband are at the door, and they will carry you out." 10 [f]Then immediately she fell down at his feet and breathed her last. And the young men came in and found her dead, and carrying her out, buried her by her husband. 11 [g]So great fear came upon all the church and upon all who heard these things.

Continuing Power in the Church

12 And [h]through the hands of the apostles many signs and wonders were done among the people. [i]And they were all with one accord in Solomon's Porch. 13 Yet [j]none of the rest dared join them, [k]but the people esteemed them highly. 14 And believers were increasingly added to the Lord, multitudes of both men and women, 15 so that they brought the sick out into the streets and laid them on beds and couches, [l]that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might fall on some of them. 16 Also a multitude gathered from the surrounding cities to Jerusalem, bringing [m]sick people and those who were tormented by unclean spirits, and they were all healed.

Imprisoned Apostles Freed

17 [n]Then the high priest rose up, and all those who were with him (which is the sect of the Sadducees), and they were filled with [1]indignation, 18 [o]and laid their hands on the apostles and put them in the common prison. 19 But at night [p]an angel of the Lord opened the prison doors and brought them out, and said, 20 "Go, stand in the temple and speak to the people [q]all the words of this life."

21 And when they heard that, they entered the temple early in the morning and taught. [r]But the high priest and those with him came and called the [2]council together, with all the [3]elders of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

Apostles on Trial Again

22 But when the officers came and did not find them in the prison, they returned and reported, 23 saying, "Indeed we found the prison shut securely, and the guards standing [4]outside before the doors; but when we opened them, we found no one inside!" 24 Now when [5]the high priest, [s]the

■ 5:2 he kept back part of the proceeds. Ananias and his wife had the right to keep all of the proceeds from their land since the land and the money was theirs (v. 4). The testimony of the whole church was at risk because of the sins of a few (cf. Lev. 10:1, 2; Num. 16:23–35; Josh. 7:19–25; 2 Sam. 6:1–7).

■ 5:3 Satan filled your heart. Another example of Satan's influence is seen in the life of Peter (Mark 8:33). Later, Peter warned Christians against Satan's potential influence over them (1 Pet. 5:8).

lie to the Holy Spirit. In v. 4 Peter tells Ananias that he has lied to God. Peter's words indicate that the Holy Spirit is God (v. 9).

■ 5:11 all the church. This is the first of more than twenty occurrences in Acts of the Greek word ekklesia, usually translated "church." Stephen uses this word for the Old Testament "congregation" of the people (7:38). In the Septuagint (the Greek Old Testament), the worshiping assembly of God's people is often designated with this word. In ancient Greece, the ekklesia was the political "assembly" of citizens (19:32). The New Testament uses the word initially to refer to an organized body of believers (8:1; 11:22; 13:1).

■ 5:13 none of the rest dared join them. No insincere, superficial followers dared to identify with the church. The standards of morality were high.

■ 5:14 believers . . . both men and women. Believers came forward and joined the church. Luke mentions women often in the Gospel (Luke 7:28; 8:2, 3; 17:35; 23:27, 29, 49, 55) and in Acts (1:14; 8:3, 12; 9:2, 36; 13:50; 16:1, 13, 14; 17:4, 12, 34; 18:2; 21:5).

■ 5:15 shadow of Peter. As when Jesus' healing power flowed from His garment at the touch of the woman who had been subject to bleeding (Mark 5:27, 28), here God allows the shadow of Peter to effect a cure, as He did also through cloths and aprons that Paul had used (19:11, 12).

■ 5:21 the council. The great Jewish religious council at Jerusalem, the Sanhedrin, composed of about seventy men. It included Sadducees, Pharisees, and their associates. Under the Romans the Sanhedrin had broad authority in Palestine. According to ancient Jewish tradition, the members sat in a semicircle with two clerks and three rows of students at the front.

captain of the temple, and the chief priests heard these things, they wondered what the outcome would be. 25 So one came and told them, [6]saying, "Look, the men whom you put in prison are standing in the temple and teaching the people!"

26 Then the captain went with the officers and brought them without violence, [t]for they feared the people, lest they should be stoned. 27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council. And the high priest asked them, 28 saying, [u]"Did we not strictly command you not to teach in this name? And look, you have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, [v]and intend to bring this Man's [w]blood on us!"

29 But Peter and the other apostles answered and said: [x]"We ought to obey God rather than men. 30 [y]The God of our fathers raised up Jesus whom you murdered by [z]hanging on a tree. 31 [a]Him God has exalted to His right hand to be [b]Prince and [c]Savior, [d]to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins. 32 And [e]we are His witnesses to these things, and so also is the Holy Spirit [f]whom God has given to those who obey Him."

Gamaliel's Advice

33 When they heard this, they were [g]furious[7] and plotted to kill them. 34 Then one in the council stood up, a Pharisee named [h]Gamaliel, a teacher of the law held in respect by all the people, and commanded them to put the apostles outside for a little while. 35 And he said to them: "Men of Israel, [8]take heed to yourselves what you intend to do regarding these men. 36 For some time ago Theudas rose up, claiming to be somebody. A number of men, about four hundred, [9]joined him. He was slain, and all who obeyed him were scattered and came to nothing. 37 After this man, Judas of Galilee rose up in the days of the census, and drew away many people after him. He also perished, and all who obeyed him were dispersed. 38 And now I say to you, keep away from these men and let them alone; for if this plan or this work is of men, it will come to nothing; 39 [i]but if it is of God, you cannot overthrow it—lest you even be found [j]to fight against God."

40 And they agreed with him, and when they had [k]called for the apostles [l]and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go. 41 So they departed from the presence of the council, [m]rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for [l]His name. 42 And daily [n]in the temple, and in every house, [o]they did not cease teaching and preaching Jesus as the Christ.

Seven Chosen to Serve

6 Now in those days, [a]when the number of the disciples was multiplying, there arose a complaint against the Hebrews by the [b]Hellenists,[1] because their widows were neglected [c]in the daily distribution. 2 Then the twelve summoned the multitude of the disciples and said, [d]"It is not desirable that we should leave the word of God and serve tables. 3 Therefore, brethren, [e]seek out

■ 5:28 bring this Man's blood on us. In 2:23; 3:15, 16; and 4:10, 11, Peter and his associates blamed the members of the Sanhedrin for the death of Jesus. The people had heard this accusation.

■ 5:31 Him God has exalted to His right hand. This declaration would be understood by the Sanhedrin as a reference to the Resurrection. Such an exaltation by God would make this resurrected Jesus equal with God (cf. John 5:18; 10:33).

■ 5:34 Gamaliel. One of the most famous rabbis of his time, Gamaliel was Paul's teacher (22:3) and probably a grandson of Rabbi Hillel, the leader of one of the two great schools of Jewish legal interpretation. In contrast to the school of Shammai, Gamaliel and the school of Hillel were known for their lenient interpretation of the law (Matt. 19:3 and note).

■ 5:37 Judas of Galilee. The Jewish historian Josephus (Jewish War 20.118) speaks of a certain Galilean who stirred up a revolt because he resisted subservience and paying taxes to the Romans. The revolt failed, but it may have laid the groundwork for the party of the Zealots. The apostle Simon the Zealot (1:13; Matt. 10:4 and note) may have previously been a member of this group.

days of the census. Not the census of Luke 2:1, which was ordered by the Emperor Augustus about 8 B.C. (but was delayed until 5 or 6 B.C.), but the census fourteen years later in A.D. 6, in the time of the Procurator Coponius.

■ 5:40 beaten them. The apostles received the traditional "forty stripes minus one" (2 Cor. 11:24).

■ 6:1 widows were neglected. The Old Testament required care of the poor and needy (Ps. 9:18 note). This concern is seen in the social action set forth in 2:44, 45; 4:34–37. Here the age-old problem of discrimination had emerged: the widows of Grecian Jews (see text note) were considered outsiders by native-born Jews and so were not getting their share of the food distribution, probably deriving in part from the generous giving of 4:34–37.

■ 6:2 the twelve. The twelve apostles including Matthias (1:26). This is a shift from "the eleven" (1:26; 2:14; Luke 24:9, 33).

disciples. The first of a number of times the believers are called "disciples" in Acts (e.g., v. 7; 9:1; 11:26; 13:52). Paul does not use this term to identify Christians.

the word of God. In this initial organization of the New Testament church, two important ministries are listed: the ministry of the word and prayer (v. 4); and the ministry of meeting people's physical needs, such as serving at table. The Greek verb is diakoneo ("serve"), from which English derives the word "deacon." In 6:1, the related noun is translated "distribution," and in v. 4 "the ministry." The office of deacon, which may have had its beginning here, is described in 1 Tim. 3:8–13.

■ 6:3 brethren, seek out . . . seven men. The members of the church elected the seven, and the apostles set them apart (ordained) by prayer and the laying on of hands (v. 6).

from among you seven men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this [f]business; [4] but we [g]will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word."

[5] And the saying pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Stephen, [h]a man full of faith and the Holy Spirit, and [i]Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and [j]Nicolas, a proselyte from Antioch, [6] whom they set before the apostles; and [k]when they had prayed, [l]they laid hands on them.

[7] Then [m]the word of God spread, and the number of the disciples multiplied greatly in Jerusalem, and a great many [n]of the priests were obedient to the faith.

Stephen Accused of Blasphemy

[8] And Stephen, full of [2]faith and power, did great [o]wonders and signs among the people. [9] Then there arose some from what is called the Synagogue of the Freedmen (Cyrenians, Alexandrians, and those from Cilicia and Asia), disputing with Stephen. [10] And [p]they were not able to resist the wisdom and the Spirit by which he spoke. [11] [q]Then they secretly induced men to say, "We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses and God." [12] And they stirred up the people, the elders, and the scribes; and they came upon him, seized him, and brought him to the council. [13] They also set up false witnesses who said, "This man does not cease to speak [3]blasphemous words against this holy place and the law; [14] [r]for we have heard him say that this Jesus of Nazareth will destroy this place and change the customs which Moses delivered to us." [15] And all who sat in the council, looking steadfastly at him, saw his face as the face of an angel.

Stephen's Address: The Call of Abraham

7 Then the high priest said, "Are these things so?"

[2] And he said, [a]"Brethren and fathers, listen: The [b]God of glory appeared to our father Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in [c]Haran, [3] and said to him, [d]'Get out of your country and from your relatives, and come to a land that I will show you.' [4] Then [e]he came out of the land of the Chaldeans and dwelt in Haran. And from there, when his father was [f]dead, He moved him to this land in which you now dwell. [5] And God gave him no inheritance in it, not even enough to set his foot on. But even when Abraham had no child, [g]He promised to give it to him for a possession, and to his descendants after him. [6] But God spoke in this way: [h]that his descendants would dwell in a foreign land, and that they would bring them into [i]bondage and oppress them four hundred years. [7] [j]'And the nation to whom they will be in bondage I will [k]judge,' said God, [l]'and after that they shall come out and serve Me in this place.' [8] [m]Then full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom. The two requirements for the ministry of service in all ages are obedience to the Spirit and action guided by wisdom.

■ 6:5 Stephen . . . Nicolas. All seven men had Greek names, which may point to their being Jews from the Dispersion, although many Palestinian Jews also had Greek names. Attributes are listed for the first and last of the seven: for Stephen ("full of faith and power") who appears in 6:8—7:60, and for Nicolas, "a proselyte from Antioch." Antioch soon became a center of missionary activity. Philip's later ministry to Samaria and to the Ethiopian eunuch is described in ch. 8.

■ 6:8 Stephen . . . did great wonders and signs. Philip, another of the seven, also did miracles later like the apostles who had ordained them (8:6).

■ 6:9 Synagogue of the Freedmen. Composed of Jews freed from slavery, who in this case were from Cyrene, a well-known town of North Africa.

Cilicia. A Roman province in the southeast part of Asia Minor, with Paul's hometown of Tarsus (9:11, 30; 11:25) as one of its chief cities.

Asia. The Roman province in the western part of modern-day Turkey.

■ 6:11 blasphemous words against Moses and God. Although in the light of the gospel he may have begun to express concern about hollow observance of the technical details of the law, all that Stephen said, as is evident in ch. 7, was that Moses, like Jesus and like Stephen himself, was rejected by the people (7:35, 39). This could not be taken as blasphemy against Moses and God.

■ 6:13 against this holy place and the law. Stephen did not speak against the temple, but only declared that God was not confined to an earthly temple since heaven was His home and throne (7:48–50). Stephen actually supported the Mosaic law and its teaching, especially as they pointed forward to Christ (7:37, 38).

■ 6:14 Jesus of Nazareth will destroy this place. The Jewish leadership had heard the misinterpreted quotation of Jesus in John 2:19, but there is no evidence that Stephen had known or used it.

■ 7:2 The God of glory. This title recalls the divine glory God showed His people in the time of Moses: the pillar of cloud (Ex. 14:19; 16:10; Ps. 105:39), the pillar of fire (Ex. 14:24), the glory of the Lord on the mountain (Ex. 24:15–18; 2 Cor. 3:7), and the glory on the tabernacle (Ex. 40:34, 35; cf. John 1:14).

■ 7:4 land of the Chaldeans. Babylonia, in southern Mesopotamia (modern Iraq).

■ 7:6 four hundred years. Ex. 12:40 has "four hundred and thirty years," but Stephen is speaking in round numbers, and may have been following the text of Gen. 15:13 which has "four hundred years."

■ 7:8 covenant of circumcision. God established this covenant with Abraham. He was the father of all Israel but lived centuries before Moses came. Moses instituted the customs that Stephen's adversaries tried to protect (6:14).

He gave him the covenant of circumcision; [n]and so Abraham begot Isaac and circumcised him on the eighth day; [o]and Isaac begot Jacob, and [p]Jacob begot the twelve patriarchs.

The Patriarchs in Egypt

9 [q]"And the patriarchs, becoming envious, [r]sold Joseph into Egypt. [s]But God was with him 10 and delivered him out of all his troubles, [t]and gave him favor and wisdom in the presence of Pharaoh, king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house. 11 [u]Now a famine and great [l]trouble came over all the land of Egypt and Canaan, and our fathers found no sustenance. 12 [v]But when Jacob heard that there was grain in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first. 13 And the [w]second time Joseph was made known to his brothers, and Joseph's family became known to the Pharaoh. 14 [x]Then Joseph sent and called his father Jacob and [y]all his relatives to him, [z]seventy-five people. 15 [z]So Jacob went down to Egypt; [a]and he died, he and our fathers. 16 And [b]they were carried back to Shechem and laid in [c]the tomb that Abraham bought for a sum of money from the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem.

God Delivers Israel by Moses

17 "But when [d]the time of the promise drew near which God had sworn to Abraham, [e]the people grew and multiplied in Egypt 18 till another king [f]arose who did not know Joseph. 19 This man dealt treacherously with our people, and oppressed our forefathers, [g]making them expose their babies, so that they might not live. 20 [h]At this time Moses was born, and [i]was well pleasing to God; and he was brought up in his father's house for three months. 21 But [j]when he was set out, [k]Pharaoh's daughter took him away and brought him up as her own son. 22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was [l]mighty in words and deeds.

23 [m]"Now when he was forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren, the children of Israel. 24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended and avenged him who was oppressed, and struck down the Egyptian. 25 For he supposed that his brethren would have understood that God would deliver them by his hand, but they did not understand. 26 And the next day he appeared to two of them as they were fighting, and tried to reconcile them, saying, 'Men, you are brethren; why do you wrong one another?' 27 But he who did his neighbor wrong pushed him away, saying, [n]'Who made you a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Do you want to kill me as you did the Egyptian yesterday?' 29 [o]Then, at this saying, Moses fled and became a dweller in the land of Midian, where he [p]had two sons.

30 [q]"And when forty years had passed, an Angel [3]of the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire in a bush, in the wilderness of Mount Sinai. 31 When Moses saw it, he marveled at the sight; and as he drew near to observe, the voice of the Lord came to him, 32 saying, [r]'I am the God of your fathers—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.' And Moses trembled and dared not look. 33 [s]'Then the LORD said to him, "Take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you stand is holy ground. 34 I have surely [t]seen the oppression of My people who are in Egypt; I have heard their groaning and have come down to deliver them. And now come, I will [u]send you to Egypt."'

35 "This Moses whom they rejected, saying, [v]'Who made you a ruler and a judge?' is the one God sent to be a ruler and a deliverer [w]by the hand of the Angel who appeared to him in the bush. 36 [x]He brought them out, after he had [y]shown wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, [z]and in the Red Sea, [a]and in the wilderness forty years.

■ 7:14 seventy-five people. The Hebrew text of Ex. 1:5 has "seventy." But the Greek translation of the Old Testament text, which this sermon is basically following, and the fragments of Exodus found among the Dead Sea Scrolls read "seventy-five." The explanation of the "seventy-five" is to be found in the five additional descendants of Joseph included in the Greek translation of Gen. 46:20, where two sons of Manasseh, two sons of Ephraim, and one grandson of Ephraim are included.

■ 7:16 the tomb that Abraham bought . . . of Shechem. Stephen has condensed the events regarding the patriarchs' burial purchases. Jacob was buried in the cave of Machpelah at Hebron (Gen. 50:13), and according to Josephus (Antiquities 2.199) Joseph's brothers were buried in Hebron. Joseph's bones, however, were placed in the land Jacob had bought from the sons of Hamor (Gen. 33:19; 50:25; Ex. 13:19; Josh. 24:32). Stephen's audience knew that Jacob and his sons were buried in two different places (Hebron and Shechem). The narrative here is highly condensed.

■ 7:22 Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Ex. 2:10 states that when the child Moses grew older the nurse (Moses' mother) took him to Pharaoh's daughter and "he became her son," with the assumption that in the royal household he would be given a full Egyptian education. Two first-century scholars, the historian Josephus and Philo the philosopher, tell of the extensive learning of Moses.

38 [d]"This is he who was in the [5]congregation in the wilderness with [e]the Angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and with our fathers, [f]the one who received the living [g]oracles[6] to give to us, 39 whom our fathers [h]would not obey, but rejected. And in their hearts they turned back to Egypt, 40 [i]saying to Aaron, 'Make us gods to go before us; as for this Moses who brought us out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has become of him.' 41 [j]And they made a calf in those days, offered sacrifices to the idol, and [k]rejoiced in the works of their own hands. 42 Then [l]God turned and gave them up to worship [m]the host of heaven, as it is written in the book of the Prophets:

[n] 'Did you offer Me slaughtered animals and sacrifices during forty years in the wilderness, O house of Israel?
43 You also took up the tabernacle of Moloch,
And the star of your god Remphan,
Images which you made to worship;
And [o]I will carry you away beyond Babylon.'

God's True Tabernacle

44 "Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as He appointed, instructing Moses [p]to make it according to the pattern that he had seen, 45 [q]which our fathers, having received it in turn, also brought with Joshua into the land possessed by the Gentiles, [r]whom God drove out before the face of our fathers until the [s]days of David, 46 [t]who found favor before God and [u]asked to find a dwelling for the God of Jacob. 47 [v]But Solomon built Him a house.

48 "However, [w]the Most High does not dwell in temples made with hands, as the prophet says:

49 'Heaven[x] is My throne,
And earth is My footstool.
What house will you build for Me? says the LORD,
Or what is the place of My rest?
50 Has My hand not [y]made all these things?'

Israel Resists the Holy Spirit

51 "You [z]stiff-necked[7] and [a]uncircumcised in heart and ears! You always resist the Holy Spirit; as your fathers did, so do you. 52 [b]Which of the prophets did your fathers not persecute? And they killed those who foretold the coming of [c]the Just One, of whom you now have become the betrayers and murderers, 53 [d]who have received the law by the direction of angels and have not kept it."

Stephen the Martyr

54 [e]When they heard these things they were [8]cut to the heart, and they gnashed at him with their teeth. 55 But he, [f]being full of the Holy Spirit, gazed into heaven and saw the [g]glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God, 56 and said, "Look! [h]I see the heavens opened and the [i]Son of Man standing at the right hand of God!"

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, stopped their ears, and ran at him with one accord;

■ 7:38 the congregation in the wilderness. "Congregation" translates the Greek word ekklesia ("church," see 5:11 note).

the Angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai. Although Moses received the law from God on Mount Sinai (Ex. 20:1, 21), angels had some part in its institution (v. 53; Deut. 33:2; Gal. 3:19; Heb. 2:2). On the Angel of the Lord, see notes on Gen. 16:7 and Judg. 2:1.

■ 7:44 tabernacle of witness. The Old Testament tabernacle contained the ark of the covenant and the tablets of the Ten Commandments, which are called "the Testimony." Further symbolizing God's presence and life-giving power were the table of the consecrated bread (Ex. 37:10–16; Heb. 9:2), the seven-branched lampstand (Ex. 37:17–23; cf. John 8:12; Rev. 1:12–18), and the altar of incense (Ex. 37:25–29) pointing to the prayers of God's people rising up to the ever-present God (Ps. 141:2; Rev. 8:3, 4).

■ 7:51 You stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears. They would not listen from their hearts, nor obey the Lord and the Scriptures Stephen had cited. These metaphors are Old Testament figures meaning spiritually stubborn and unregenerate (Ex. 32:9; 33:3, 5; Deut. 9:6; 10:16; 30:6; Jer. 4:4).

■ 7:52 the Just One. A title used for the Lord Almighty (Is. 24:16), and for Jesus Christ (22:14; 1 John 2:1).

■ 7:55 the glory of God. The brilliance of God's presence (cf. Rev. 15:8; 21:11, 23).

standing at the right hand of God. Usually Jesus is said to be sitting at the right hand of God because His work was finished (Rom. 8:34; Col. 3:1; Heb. 10:12), but here He is standing to receive Stephen or to defend him. In this scene the Son of Man is both Judge and Advocate. See theological note "Jesus' Heavenly Reign."

■ 7:56 I see . . . the Son of Man. Stephen's vision of the Son of Man in heaven must have vividly reminded the Sanhedrin that when they asked Jesus, "Are You the Christ," He replied, "I am. And you will see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of the Power, and coming with the clouds of heaven" (Mark 14:61, 62). Stephen saw the same Jesus standing in heaven at God's right hand, proving the truth of what he was saying and condemning the Sanhedrin.

[58] and they cast him out of the city and stoned him. And [j]the witnesses laid down their clothes at the feet of a young man named Saul. [59] And they stoned Stephen as he was calling on God and saying, "Lord Jesus, [k]receive my spirit." [60] Then he knelt down and cried out with a loud voice, [l]"Lord, do not charge them with this sin." And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

Saul Persecutes the Church

8 Now Saul was consenting to his death.

At that time a great persecution arose against the church which was at Jerusalem; and [a]they were all scattered throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles. [2] And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and [b]made great lamentation over him.

[3] As for Saul, [c]he made havoc of the church, entering every house, and dragging off men and women, committing them to prison.

Christ Is Preached in Samaria

[4] Therefore [d]those who were scattered went everywhere preaching the word. [5] Then [e]Philip went down to [1]the city of Samaria and preached Christ to them. [6] And the multitudes with one accord heeded the things spoken by Philip, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. [7] For [f]unclean spirits, crying with a loud voice, came out of many who were possessed; and many who were paralyzed and lame were healed. [8] And there was great joy in that city.

The Sorcerer's Profession of Faith

[9] But there was a certain man called Simon, who previously [g]practiced [2]sorcery in the city and [h]astonished the [3]people of Samaria, claiming that he was someone great, [10] to whom they all

Jesus' Heavenly Reign

Christ's present role in glory is commonly referred to as His heavenly "session," His "sitting" at God's right hand. The New Testament pictures Jesus' heavenly activity as standing ready to act (Acts 7:56; Rev. 1:12–16; 14:1), walking among His people (Rev. 2:1), and riding to battle (Rev. 19:11–16), but it regularly expresses His present authority by saying that He sits at the Father's right hand—not to rest, but to rule. The picture is not of inactivity but of authority.

In Ps. 110 God sets the Messiah at His right hand as king and priest—as king to bring His enemies under His feet (v. 1), and as priest to serve God and direct God's grace forever (v. 4).

Christ rules over all spheres of authority whether angelic or human (Matt. 28:18; 1 Pet. 3:22). His kingdom in a direct sense is the church, the body over which He is the Head, governing it by His word and Spirit (Eph. 1:22, 23). As for the state: it is not related to the kingdom of God as it was in the Old Testament. The sword is not to be used to enforce Christ's kingdom (John 18:36), but Christ uses secular authority to maintain civil peace and order, and commands His disciples to submit to rulers (Matt. 22:21; Rom. 13:1–7). Christians seek in every sphere of life to do His will, reminding themselves and others that all are accountable to Christ as Judge, whatever their position in life may be (Matt. 25:31; Acts 17:31; Rom. 2:16; 2 Cor. 5:10).

Christ's session will continue until all His enemies and ours, including death, are brought to nothing. Death, the last enemy, will cease to exist when Christ at His appearing raises the dead for judgment (John 5:28, 29). Once judgment has been executed, the work of the mediatorial kingdom will be over, and Christ will triumphantly deliver the kingdom to the Father (1 Cor. 15:24–28). □

■ 7:58 a young man named Saul. Saul, later called Paul, was a Pharisee and associated with the Sanhedrin (Phil. 3:5). Possibly he was an instigator of Stephen's trial (8:3; 9:1, 2). At this point Luke introduces Saul, the second great figure of his book.

■ 7:60 do not charge them with this sin. Compare the statement of Jesus in Luke 23:34.

■ 8:3 As for, Saul, he made havoc of the church. The Greek verb is strong; not just harassment, but an attempt to destroy the church is meant.

■ 8:4 scattered . . . preaching the word. Through persecution the message was spread farther and more rapidly (11:19). As Tertullian said, "The blood of Christians is the seed of the church."

■ 8:9 Simon. Simon Magus the sorcerer is frequently mentioned in ancient writings outside the Bible as the archenemy of the church and one gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, "This man is the great power of God." 11 And they heeded him because he had astonished them with his [4]sorceries for a long time. 12 But when they believed Philip as he preached the things [i]concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, both men and women were baptized. 13 Then Simon himself also believed; and when he was baptized he continued with Philip, and was amazed, seeing the miracles and signs which were done.

The Sorcerer's Sin

14 Now when the [j]apostles who were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent Peter and John to them, 15 who, when they had come down, prayed for them [k]that they might receive the Holy Spirit. 16 For [l]as yet He had fallen upon none of them. [m]They had only been baptized in [n]the name of the Lord Jesus. 17 Then [o]they laid hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit.

18 And when Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Spirit was given, he offered them money, 19 saying, "Give me this power also, that anyone on whom I lay hands may receive the Holy Spirit."

20 But Peter said to him, "Your money perish with you, because [p]you thought that [q]the gift of God could be purchased with money! 21 You have neither part nor portion in this matter, for your [r]heart is not right in the sight of God. 22 Repent therefore of this your wickedness, and pray God [s]if perhaps the thought of your heart may be forgiven you. 23 For I see that you are [t]poisoned by bitterness and bound by iniquity."

24 Then Simon answered and said, [u]"Pray to the Lord for me, that none of the things which you have spoken may come upon me."

25 So when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, they returned to Jerusalem, preaching the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

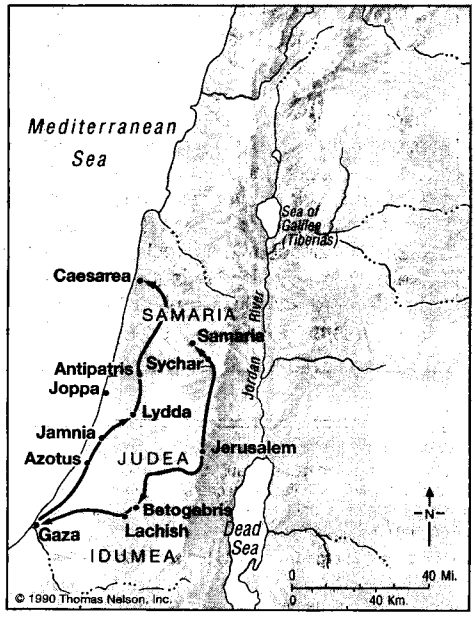
of the leaders of the Gnostic heresy. Gnosticism (named from the Greek word gnosis, meaning "knowledge") taught that a person gained salvation not by the merit of Christ's death for sinners, but by special knowledge about God. Justin Martyr (died c. A.D. 165), himself a Samaritan, says that almost all the Samaritans considered Simon the highest god (the "great power," v. 10). Irenaeus (died c. A.D. 180), who wrote extensively against the Gnostics, regards Simon as one of the sources of their heresies. Although the Simon of v. 9 could be another Simon, the church fathers equate the two, and the context of 8:9–11 (his character and the Samaritans' attitude about him) certainly points to the two as the same person.

■ 8:15 receive the Holy Spirit. The believing Samaritans to this point had not received evidence of the dynamic inward presence of the Holy Spirit, although as believers the Holy Spirit was living in them (Rom. 8:9). We are not told what evidence the Holy Spirit gave.

■ 8:22, 23. By his words and actions Simon proved that he did not believe in Christ. He was still "poisoned by bitterness" (cf. Deut. 29:18; Heb. 12:15) and "bound by iniquity" (see Rom. 6:16; 8:8). A profession of faith without repentance is invalid.

■ 8:27 eunuch. This word refers to either an emasculated official in the royal court or to a high official of government. The biblical Ethiopia (or Cush) is the remote area south of Egypt, including parts of modern Eritrea, Ethiopia, and Sudan.

Philip's Missionary Journeys. The journeys of Philip (see Acts 6:5) are recorded in Acts 8:5–13 and 8:26–40. The significant response to his preaching in Samaria brought Peter and John there to minister to the new converts. Philip followed divine instruction to travel the wilderness road that runs south from Jerusalem to Gaza, baptizing the Ethiopian eunuch on the way. Thereafter, Philip preached along the coastal plain from Azotus to Caesarea.



And behold, [w]a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace the queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge of all her treasury, and [x]had come to Jerusalem to worship, 28 was returning. And sitting in his chariot, he was reading Isaiah the prophet. 29 Then the Spirit said to Philip, "Go near and overtake this chariot."

30 So Philip ran to him, and heard him reading the prophet Isaiah, and said, "Do you understand what you are reading?"

31 And he said, "How can I, unless someone guides me?" And he asked Philip to come up and sit with him. 32 The place in the Scripture which he read was this:

[y]"He was led as a sheep to the slaughter;
And as a lamb before its shearer is silent,
[z]So He opened not His mouth.
33 In His humiliation His [a]justice was taken away,
And who will declare His generation?
For His life is [b]taken from the earth."

34 So the eunuch answered Philip and said, "I ask you, of whom does the prophet say this, of himself or of some other man?" 35 Then Philip opened his mouth, [c]and beginning at this Scripture, preached Jesus to him. 36 Now as they went down the road, they came to some water. And the eunuch said, "See, here is water. [d]What hinders me from being baptized?"

37 [6]Then Philip said, [e]"If you believe with all your heart, you may."

And he answered and said, [f]"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

38 So he commanded the chariot to stand still. And both Philip and the eunuch went down into the water, and he baptized him. 39 Now when they came up out of the water, [g]the Spirit of the Lord caught Philip away, so that the eunuch saw him no more; and he went on his way rejoicing. 40 But Philip was found at [7]Azotus. And passing through, he preached in all the cities till he came to [h]Caesarea.

The Damascus Road: Saul Converted

9 Then [a]Saul, still breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest 2 and asked [b]letters from him to the synagogues of Damascus, so that if he found any who were of the Way, whether men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.

3 [c]As he journeyed he came near Damascus, and suddenly a light shone around him from heaven. 4 Then he fell to the ground, and heard a voice saying to him, "Saul, Saul, [d]why are you persecuting Me?"

5 And he said, "Who are You, Lord?"

Then the Lord said, "I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. [f]It is hard for you to kick against the goads."

6 So he, trembling and astonished, said, "Lord, what do You want me to do?"

Then the Lord said to him, "Arise and go into the city, and you will be told what you must do."

Candace. The title of the queen mother who ruled in the place of her son. He was thought to be too sacred to be involved in secular affairs.

■ 8:28 reading Isaiah. If the Ethiopian had been reading the passage about the Lord's mercy to eunuchs (Is. 56:3–5; cf. Deut. 23:1), it would have been natural for him also to read Is. 53 (v. 35 note).

■ 8:30 heard him. In ancient times people normally read out loud.

■ 8:35 preached Jesus. Philip began from Is. 53, and identified the servant in the passage as the Suffering Servant, Jesus. Luke implies that he went on to other Old Testament passages to identify Jesus as the Messiah.

■ 8:40 Azotus. Ancient Old Testament Ashdod (1 Sam. 5:1), one of the five Philistine cities, about twenty miles north of Gaza and sixty miles south of Caesarea on the coast. Philip preached the gospel in all the towns along the coast until he reached Caesarea, a large city Herod the Great had rebuilt (near Strato's Tower). It had an excellent harbor that Herod expanded for important sea traffic (21:8), and it served as headquarters for the Roman procurators such as Pilate, Felix (23:33—24:4), and Festus (25:6). Philip must have settled in Caesarea because years later he still resided there (21:8).

■ 9:1 Saul. Saul was introduced in 7:58 and he is the main character in 9:1–31. A third brief glimpse of Saul is seen again in 11:25–30 before Saul, soon to be called Paul, becomes the main character in chs. 13—28.

still breathing threats. Even though he had helped to eliminate Stephen, Saul continued to persecute the Christian heresy.

■ 9:2 the Way. Other names used in Acts for the early Christians are: "Christians" (used only in 11:26; 26:28; 1 Pet. 4:16), "disciples" (vv. 10, 19), "saints" (v. 13), "all who call on Your name" (v. 14), and "brethren" (v. 30). "The Way" identifies the Christian cause as composed of followers of Jesus, who is "the way" (John 14:6). It is used a number of times in Acts (19:9, 23; 22:4; 24:14, 22).

■ 9:3 a light . . . from heaven. A supernatural light brighter than the sun (26:13) caught his attention.

■ 9:4 Saul, Saul. The repetition signifies intimate personal address (cf. Gen. 22:11; 46:2; Ex. 3:4; 1 Sam. 3:10; Luke 10:41; 22:31).

7 And [e]the men who journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice but seeing no one.
8 Then Saul arose from the ground, and when his eyes were opened he saw no one. But they led him by the hand and brought him into Damascus. 9 And he was three days without sight, and neither ate nor drank.

Ananias Baptizes Saul

10 Now there was a certain disciple at Damascus [f]named Ananias; and to him the Lord said in a vision, "Ananias."

And he said, "Here I am, Lord."

11 So the Lord said to him, "Arise and go to the street called Straight, and inquire at the house of Judas for one called Saul [g]of Tarsus, for behold, he is praying. 12 And in a vision he has seen a man named Ananias coming in and putting his hand on him, so that he might receive his sight."

13 Then Ananias answered, "Lord, I have heard from many about this man, [h]how much [2]harm he has done to Your saints in Jerusalem. 14 And here he has authority from the chief priests to bind all [i]who call on Your name."

15 But the Lord said to him, "Go, for [j]he is a chosen vessel of Mine to bear My name before [k]Gentiles, [l]kings, and the [m]children[3] of Israel. 16 For [n]I will show him how many things he must suffer for My [o]name's sake."

17 [p]And Ananias went his way and entered the house; and [q]laying his hands on him he said, "Brother Saul, the Lord [4]Jesus, who appeared to you on the road as you came, has sent me that you may receive your sight and [r]be filled with the Holy Spirit." 18 Immediately there fell from his eyes something like scales, and he received his sight at once; and he arose and was baptized.

19 So when he had received food, he was strengthened. [s]Then Saul spent some days with the disciples at Damascus.

Saul Preaches Christ

20 Immediately he preached [5]the Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God.

21 Then all who heard were amazed, and said, [t]"Is this not he who destroyed those who called on this name in Jerusalem, and has come here for that purpose, so that he might bring them bound to the chief priests?"

22 But Saul increased all the more in strength, [u]and confounded the Jews who dwelt in Damascus, proving that this Jesus is the Christ.

Saul Escapes Death

23 Now after many days were past, [v]the Jews plotted to kill him. 24 [w]But their plot became known to Saul. And they watched the gates day and night, to kill him. 25 Then the disciples took him by night and [x]let him down through the wall in a large basket.

Saul at Jerusalem

26 And [y]when Saul had come to Jerusalem, he tried to join the disciples; but they were all afraid of him, and did not believe that he was a disciple. 27 [z]But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles. And he declared to them how he had seen the Lord on the road, and that He had spoken to him, [a]and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus. 28 So [b]he was with them at Jerusalem, coming in and going out. 29 And he spoke boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus and disputed against the [c]Hellenists,[6] [d]but they attempted to kill him. 30 When the brethren found out, they brought him down to Caesarea and sent him out to Tarsus.

■ 9:7 the men . . . hearing a voice. In 22:9 Paul says that "they did not hear the voice"; the Greek word can mean "sound" or "voice." Saul's companions heard a sound but could not understand what was being said.

■ 9:15 chosen vessel . . . before Gentiles, kings, and the children of Israel. Paul considered himself to be an apostle to the Gentiles (Rom. 1:13, 14) as Peter was to the Jews (Gal. 2:8), but Paul also preached many times to the Jews, particularly in their synagogues (v. 20; Rom. 1:16; 1 Cor. 9:20).

■ 9:17 Jesus, who appeared to you. Saul had not had a dream or seen a vision, but had seen the Lord (cf. Is. 6:1, 5).

be filled with the Holy Spirit. Cf. 2:38. Nothing is said about any supernatural gifts, but emphasis is placed on his powerful preaching about Jesus as the Son of God (v. 20).

■ 9:18 something like scales. Luke frequently calls attention to physical afflictions (13:11; 28:3–8). See Introduction: Author.

■ 9:26 Saul had come to Jerusalem. According to Gal. 1:18, 19, Paul saw only Peter and James the Lord's brother at Jerusalem. The others may have been afraid to meet with him or were preaching the gospel in other areas.

The Church Prospers

31 [e]Then the [z]churches throughout all Judea, Galilee, and Samaria had peace and were [f]edified.[g] And walking in the [g]fear of the Lord and in the [h]comfort of the Holy Spirit, they were [i]multiplied.

Aeneas Healed

32 Now it came to pass, as Peter went [j]through all parts of the country, that he also came down to the saints who dwelt in Lydda. 33 There he found a certain man named Aeneas, who had been bedridden eight years and was paralyzed. 34 And Peter said to him, "Aeneas, [k]Jesus the Christ heals you. Arise and make your bed." Then he arose immediately. 35 So all who dwelt at Lydda and [l]Sharon saw him and [m]turned to the Lord.

Dorcas Restored to Life

36 At Joppa there was a certain disciple named [9]Tabitha, which is translated [l]Dorcas. This woman was full [n]of good works and charitable deeds which she did. 37 But it happened in those days that she became sick and died. When they had washed her, they laid her in [o]an upper room. 38 And since Lydda was near Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent two men to him, imploring him not to delay in coming to them. 39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he had come, they brought him to the upper room. And all the widows stood by him weeping, showing the tunics and garments which Dorcas had made while she was with them. 40 But Peter [p]put them all out, and [q]knelt down and prayed. And turning to the body he [r]said, "Tabitha, arise." And she opened her eyes, and when she saw Peter she sat up. 41 Then he gave her his hand and lifted her up; and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive. 42 And it became known throughout all Joppa, [s]and many believed on the Lord. 43 So it was that he stayed many days in Joppa with [t]Simon, a tanner.

Cornelius Sends a Delegation

2 [b]Acts 8:2; 9:22; 22:12 [c][Acts 10:22, 35; 13:16, 26]

■ 9:35 Sharon. The news concerning the healing of the paralytic had dramatic effects; it traveled to the Plain of Sharon, which extends north of Joppa up the coast forty to fifty miles.

■ 9:36 Joppa. An ancient seaport (modern Jaffa, south of Tel Aviv), about thirty-eight miles northwest of Jerusalem, the port from which Jonah sailed (Jon. 1:3).

Tabitha. See text note.

■ 9:37 washed her. Probably before the anointing with spices (cf. John 19:40). In Jerusalem, Jesus' body had been buried on the day of death, but outside the city a longer period was allowed (up to three days).

■ 9:43 Simon, a tanner. Jews believed tanning to be an unclean profession because it involved contact with dead animals (Lev. 5:2). Peter was willing to stay with a tanner because the message of the gospel was beginning to break down barriers between people. This also anticipates Peter's vision in 10:9–23.

■ 10:1 Caesarea. Caesarea Maritima (Caesarea by the Sea) was a seaport on the Mediterranean sixty-five miles northwest of Jerusalem. It was rebuilt and improved on an ambitious scale by Herod the Great.

■ 10:2 feared God. A term that may indicate that Cornelius was partly converted to Judaism, a Gentile who worshiped God but who was not circumcised (13:16, 26).

Peter's Missionary Journeys. Peter and John traveled to Samaria to join Philip in the revival there (Acts 8:14–25). Peter's missionary efforts in Acts 9:32—10:48 show the power of God at work. He traveled to Lydda where Aeneas was healed. In Joppa he restored Dorcas to life and stayed many days with Simon the tanner. The vision of the unclean animals and birds prepared Peter to accept readily Cornelius's invitation to come to Caesarea, where the gospel was powerfully received by the Gentiles.

who gave [2]alms generously to the people, and prayed to God always. [3] About [3]the ninth hour of the day [d]he saw clearly in a vision an angel of God coming in and saying to him, "Cornelius!"

[4] And when he observed him, he was afraid, and said, "What is it, lord?"

So he said to him, "Your prayers and your alms have come up for a memorial before God. [5] Now [e]send men to Joppa, and send for Simon whose surname is Peter. [6] He is lodging with [f]Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea. [g]He[4] will tell you what you must do." [7] And when the angel who spoke to him had departed, Cornelius called two of his household servants and a devout soldier from among those who waited on him continually. [8] So when he had explained all these things to them, he sent them to Joppa.

Peter's Vision

[9] The next day, as they went on their journey and drew near the city, [h]Peter went up on the housetop to pray, about [5]the sixth hour. [10] Then he became very hungry and wanted to eat; but while they made ready, he fell into a trance [11] and [i]saw heaven opened and an object like a great sheet bound at the four corners, descending to him and let down to the earth. [12] In it were all kinds of four-footed animals of the earth, wild beasts, creeping things, and birds of the air. [13] And a voice came to him, "Rise, Peter; kill and eat."

[14] But Peter said, "Not so, Lord! [j]For I have never eaten anything common or unclean."

[15] And a voice spoke to him again the second time, [k]"What God has [6]cleansed you must not call common." [16] This was done three times. And the object was taken up into heaven again.

Summoned to Caesarea

[17] Now while Peter [7]wondered within himself what this vision which he had seen meant, behold, the men who had been sent from Cornelius had made inquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate. [18] And they called and asked whether Simon, whose surname was Peter, was lodging there.

[19] While Peter thought about the vision, [l]the Spirit said to him, "Behold, three men are seeking you. [20] [m]Arise therefore, go down and go with them, doubting nothing; for I have sent them."

[21] Then Peter went down to the men [8]who had been sent to him from Cornelius, and said, "Yes, I am he whom you seek. For what reason have you come?"

[22] And they said, "Cornelius the centurion, a just man, one who fears God and [n]has a good reputation among all the nation of the Jews, was divinely instructed by a holy angel to summon you to his house, and to hear words from you." [23] Then he invited them in and lodged them.

On the next day Peter went away with them, [o]and some brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

Peter Meets Cornelius

[24] And the following day they entered Caesarea. Now Cornelius was waiting for them, and had called together his relatives and close friends. [25] As Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him and fell down at his feet and worshiped him. [26] But Peter lifted him up, saying, [p]"Stand up; I myself am also a man." [27] And as he talked with him, he went in and found many who had come together. [28] Then he said to them, "You know how [q]unlawful it is for a Jewish man to keep company with or go to one of another nation. But [r]God has shown me that I should not call any man common or unclean. [29] Therefore I came without objection as soon as I was sent for. I ask, then, for what reason have you sent for me?"

[30] So Cornelius said, [9]"Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and behold, [s]a man stood before me [t]in bright clothing, [31] and said, 'Cor-

■ 10:9 on the housetop to pray. Peter probably prayed three times a day (cf. 3:1; Dan. 6:10); this was his midday prayer. Houses typically had flat roofs reached by an outside stairway.

■ 10:10 a trance. Peter's consciousness was withdrawn from external things in preparation for the vision (cf. 22:17).

■ 10:12 All kinds of . . . animals. Both clean and unclean animals (Lev. 11).

■ 10:13 kill and eat. Peter was unwilling to violate the Old Testament laws that prohibited eating unclean animals (v. 14).

■ 10:15 God has cleansed. Through this vivid illustration, God told Peter that He had abrogated the laws of ritual cleanliness; see Mark 7:14–19.

■ 10:16 three times. The vision was repeated to impress Peter.

■ 10:24 the following day. It took the group two days to travel thirty miles from Joppa to Caesarea.

■ 10:25 Peter was coming in. Peter was now willing to enter the house of a Gentile (v. 28).

fell down at his feet and worshiped him. Cornelius was overawed at Peter's presence; he had been instructed by God to send for the apostle.

■ 10:28 God has shown me. He refers to the vision he had seen (v. 15).

nelius, [u]your prayer has been heard, and [v]your [1]alms are remembered in the sight of God. 32 Send therefore to Joppa and call Simon here, whose surname is Peter. He is lodging in the house of Simon, a tanner, by the sea. [2]When he comes, he will speak to you.' 33 So I sent to you immediately, and you have done well to come. Now therefore, we are all present before God, to hear all the things commanded you by God."

Preaching to Cornelius' Household

34 Then Peter opened his mouth and said: [w]"In truth I perceive that God shows no partiality. 35 But [x]in every nation whoever fears Him and works righteousness is [y]accepted by Him. 36 The word which God sent to the [3]children of Israel, [z]preaching peace through Jesus Christ—[a]He is Lord of all— 37 that word you know, which was proclaimed throughout all Judea, and [b]began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached: 38 how [c]God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power, who [d]went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, [e]for God was with Him. 39 And we are [f]witnesses of all things which He did both in the land of the Jews and in Jerusalem, whom [4]they [g]killed by hanging on a tree. 40 Him [h]God raised up on the third day, and showed Him openly, 41 [i]not to all the people, but to witnesses chosen before by God, even to us [j]who ate and drank with Him after He arose from the dead. 42 And [k]He commanded us to preach to the people, and to testify [l]that it is He who was ordained by God to be Judge [m]of the living and the dead. 43 [n]To Him all the prophets witness that, through His name, [o]whoever believes in Him will receive [p]remission[5] of sins."

The Holy Spirit Falls on the Gentiles

44 While Peter was still speaking these words, [q]the Holy Spirit fell upon all those who heard the word. 45 [r]And [6]those of the circumcision who believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, [s]because the gift of the Holy Spirit had been poured out on the Gentiles also. 46 For they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God.

Then Peter answered, 47 "Can anyone forbid water, that these should not be baptized who have received the Holy Spirit [t]just as we have?" 48 [u]And he commanded them to be baptized [v]in the name of the Lord. Then they asked him to stay a few days.

Peter Defends God's Grace

11 Now the apostles and brethren who were in Judea heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God. 2 And when Peter came up to Jerusalem, [a]those of the circumcision contended with him, 3 saying, [b]"You went in to uncircumcised men [c]and ate with them!"

4 But Peter explained it to them [d]in order from the beginning, saying: 5 [e]"I was in the city of Joppa praying; and in a trance I saw a vision, an object descending like a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came to me. 6 When I observed it intently and considered, I saw four-footed animals of the earth, wild beasts, creeping things, and birds of the air. 7 And I heard a voice saying to me, 'Rise, Peter; kill and eat.' 8 But I said, 'Not so, Lord! For nothing common or unclean has at any time entered my mouth.' 9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, 'What God has cleansed you must not call common.' 10 Now this was done three times, and all were drawn up again into heaven. 11 At that very moment, three men stood before the house where I was, having been sent to me from Caesarea. 12 Then [f]the Spirit told me to go with them, doubting nothing. Moreover [g]these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered the man's house. 13 [h]And he told us how he had seen an angel standing in his house, who said to him, 'Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon whose surname is Peter, 14 who will tell you words by which you and all your household will be saved.' 15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Spirit fell upon them, [i]as upon us at the beginning. 16 Then I remembered the word of the Lord, how

■ 10:34 God shows no partiality. The gospel is for both Jews and Gentiles (1:8; Rom. 1:16).

■ 10:36 preaching peace through Jesus Christ. The peace of reconciliation with God through the blood of Jesus, our peace (Eph. 2:13, 14).

Lord of all. Jesus is Lord of both Jews and Gentiles.

■ 10:44 the Holy Spirit fell upon all. They were anointed by the Spirit's power and were praising God and speaking in tongues (v. 46).

■ 10:45 the circumcision . . . were astonished. It was difficult for strict Jews who had not seen Peter's vision to realize that God did not show favoritism in His offer.

■ 10:48 in the name of the Lord. Forgiveness of sins is through the name of Jesus (v. 43).

■ 11:2 those of the circumcision. Other Jewish believers criticized Peter for accepting Gentiles.

■ 11:3 ate with them. Eating with non-Jews was a clear violation of the ceremonial law because Gentiles did not follow the Old Testament dietary laws (Lev. 11) or ceremonial washings (Mark 7:5).

■ 11:14 you and all your household will be saved. God's saving grace is often extended to whole families, as consistently appears in the Old Testament (e.g., Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and their families) and the New (2:38, 39; 16:31; Luke 19:9).

He said, [j]John indeed baptized with water, but [k]you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.' [17] [l]If therefore God gave them the same gift as He gave us when we believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, [m]who was I that I could withstand God?"

[18] When they heard these things they became silent; and they glorified God, saying, [n]"Then God has also granted to the Gentiles repentance to life."

Barnabas and Saul at Antioch

[19] [o]Now those who were scattered after the persecution that arose over Stephen traveled as far as Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to no one but the Jews only. [20] But some of them were men from Cyprus and Cyrene, who, when they had come to Antioch, spoke to [p]the Hellenists, preaching the Lord Jesus. [21] And [q]the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and [r]turned to the Lord.

[22] Then news of these things came to the ears of the church in Jerusalem, and they sent out [s]Barnabas to go as far as Antioch. [23] When he came and had seen the grace of God, he was glad, and [t]encouraged them all that with purpose of heart they should continue with the Lord. [24] For he was a good man, [u]full of the Holy Spirit and of faith. [v]And a great many people were added to the Lord.

[25] Then Barnabas departed for [w]Tarsus to seek Saul. [26] And when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch. So it was that for a whole year they assembled with the church and taught a great many people. And the disciples were first called Christians in Antioch.

Relief to Judea

[27] And in these days [x]prophets came from Jerusalem to Antioch. [28] Then one of them, named [y]Agabus, stood up and showed by the Spirit that there was going to be a great famine throughout all the world, which also happened in the days of [z]Claudius Caesar. [29] Then the disciples, each according to his ability, determined to send [a]relief to the brethren dwelling in Judea. [30] [b]This they also did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

Herod's Violence to the Church

12 Now about that time Herod the king stretched out his hand to harass some from the church. [2] Then he killed James [a]the brother of John with the sword. [3] And because he saw that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to seize Peter also. Now it was during [b]the Days of Unleavened Bread. [4] So [c]when he had arrested him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four [1]squads of soldiers to keep him, intending to bring him before the people after Passover.

Peter Freed from Prison

[5] Peter was therefore kept in prison, but [2]constant prayer was offered to God for him by the church. [6] And when Herod was about to bring him out, that night Peter was sleeping, bound with two chains between two soldiers; and the guards before the door were [3]keeping the prison. [7] Now behold, [d]an angel of the Lord stood by him, and a light shone in the prison; and he struck Peter on the side and raised him up, saying, "Arise quickly!" And his chains fell off his hands. [8] Then the angel said to him, "Gird yourself and tie on your sandals"; and so he did. And he said to him, "Put on your garment and follow me." [9] So he went out and followed him, and [e]did not know that what was done by the angel was real, but thought [f]he was seeing a vision. [10] When

■ 11:17 I could withstand God. It was God's will to save both Jews and Gentiles; no doubt some of those present were reminded of God's promise to Abraham: "in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed" (Gen. 12:3; cf. Gal. 3:8).

the Lord Jesus Christ. This full title of Jesus is first used here.

■ 11:18 repentance to life. Biblical repentance means sorrow for sin and a change of heart that turns from sin toward God (20:21). The fruits of repentance are the good works to which God calls us (26:20; Luke 3:8; Eph. 2:10).

■ 11:21 hand of the Lord. The men preached, but people were saved as God called them to believe in Him (1 Cor. 3:6).

■ 11:26 called Christians. The word "Christian" occurs three times in the New Testament: here, 26:28, and 1 Pet. 4:16. It means a person belonging to or following Christ. The name may have originated in the church, or it may at first have been a derogatory term used by outsiders.

■ 11:28 all the world. Widespread, not local.

■ 12:3 it pleased the Jews . . . seize Peter also. God's sovereign purpose was carried out in the lives of His equally dedicated servants: at this time James died by the sword, while Peter was delivered from prison.

during the Days of Unleavened Bread. With so many zealous Jews visiting the city at the feast, it was an opportune time to make the arrest.

■ 12:7 an angel of the Lord . . . a light shone. An angel was an assurance of God's presence, and the light would probably remind Peter of the Old Testament glory of the Lord (9:3; Ex. 3:2; 13:22; 40:34).

■ 12:10 iron gate that leads to the city. The Antonian Fortress had an entrance into the temple courts on the south as well as other entrances to the city.

they were past the first and the second guard posts, they came to the iron gate that leads to the city, [g]which opened to them of its own accord; and they went out and went down one street, and immediately the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter had come to himself, he said, "Now I know for certain that [h]the Lord has sent His angel, and [i]has delivered me from the hand of Herod and from all the expectation of the Jewish people."

12 So, when he had considered this, [j]he came to the house of Mary, the mother of [k]John whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together [l]praying. 13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a girl named Rhoda came to answer. 14 When she recognized Peter's voice, because of her gladness she did not open the gate, but ran in and announced that Peter stood before the gate. 15 But they said to her, "You are beside yourself!" Yet she kept insisting that it was so. So they said, [m]"It is his angel."

16 Now Peter continued knocking; and when they opened the door and saw him, they were astonished. 17 But [n]motioning to them with his hand to keep silent, he declared to them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, "Go, tell these things to James and to the brethren." And he departed and went to another place.

18 Then, as soon as it was day, there was no small [4]stir among the soldiers about what had become of Peter. 19 But when Herod had searched for him and not found him, he examined the guards and commanded that they should be put to death.

And he went down from Judea to Caesarea, and stayed there.

Herod's Violent Death

20 Now Herod had been very angry with the people of [o]Tyre and Sidon; but they came to him with one accord, and having made Blastus [5]the king's personal aide their friend, they asked for peace, because [p]their country was [6]supplied with food by the king's country.

21 So on a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat on his throne and gave an oration to them. 22 And the people kept shouting, "The voice of a god and not of a man!" 23 Then immediately an angel of the Lord [q]struck him, because [r]he did not give glory to God. And he was eaten by worms and [7]died.

24 But [s]the word of God grew and multiplied.

Barnabas and Saul Appointed

25 And [t]Barnabas and Saul returned [s]from Jerusalem when they had [u]fulfilled their ministry, and they also [v]took with them [w]John whose surname was Mark.

13 Now [a]in the church that was at Antioch there were certain prophets and teachers: [b]Barnabas, Simeon who was called Niger, [c]Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen who had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul. 2 As they ministered to the Lord and fasted, the Holy Spirit said, [d]"Now separate to Me Barnabas and Saul for the work [e]to which I have called them." 3 Then, [f]having fasted and prayed, and laid hands on them, they sent them away.

■ 12:15, 16 The disciples prayed fervently to God (cf. 4:23, 24) to protect and deliver Peter, but then failed to believe that the Lord had done what they requested.

■ 12:15 his angel. They thought it was his personal angelic guardian (Matt. 18:10; Heb. 1:14). The popular conception was that such a guardian could assume the appearance of the human person protected.

■ 12:19 put to death. According to Roman law, if a prisoner escaped, the guard was liable to be punished as the prisoner would have been (cf. 16:27, 28).

■ 12:23 did not give glory to God. In his pride, he accepted for himself the praise that belongs to God.

eaten by worms. The Jewish historian Josephus (Antiquities 19.346–350) records that Herod Agrippa I experienced heart pains together with pain in his abdomen and died after five days. Herod died in A.D. 44, the fourth year of Claudius Caesar.

■ 12:25 Barnabas and Saul . . . had fulfilled their ministry. This was the mission of bringing the Antioch famine relief gift to Jerusalem (11:27–30).

John . . . Mark. Possibly the young man who fled the night of Jesus' arrest (Mark 14:51, 52). Mark, the writer of the second Gospel (cf. 1 Pet. 5:13), accompanied Paul and Barnabas down to Antioch and went with them on the first missionary journey (13:4) as far as Perga in Pamphylia (13:13).

■ 13:1 Barnabas. See note on 4:36.

Simeon . . . called Niger. His second name means "black" in Latin and he may have come from Africa. He may be the same as Simon of Cyrene (Luke 23:26) whose sons, Alexander and Rufus, were among the Christians at Rome (Mark 15:21; cf. Rom. 16:13).

Lucius of Cyrene. Cyrene was the capital of the Roman province of Cyrenaica (in modern Libya).

■ 13:3 laid hands on them. They officially placed their hands on Barnabas and Saul in recognition of what the Holy Spirit had already done (v. 2) and what He was going to do in sending them out (v. 4; cf. 14:23; 1 Tim. 4:14).

Preaching in Cyprus

4 So, being sent out by the Holy Spirit, they went down to Seleucia, and from there they sailed to [g]Cyprus. 5 And when they arrived in Salamis, [h]they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. They also had [i]John as their assistant.

6 Now when they had gone through [j]the island to Paphos, they found [j]a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew whose name was Bar-Jesus, 7 who was with the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, an intelligent man. This man called for Barnabas and Saul and sought to hear the word of God. 8 But [k]Elymas the sorcerer (for so his name is translated) [2]withstood them, seeking to turn the proconsul away from the faith. 9 Then Saul, who also is called Paul, [l]filled with the Holy Spirit, looked intently at him 10 and said, "O full of all deceit and all fraud, [m]you son of the devil, you enemy of all righteousness, will you not cease perverting the straight ways of the Lord? 11 And now, indeed, [n]the hand of the Lord is upon you, and you shall be blind, not seeing the sun for a time."

And immediately a dark mist fell on him, and he went around seeking someone to lead him by the hand. 12 Then the proconsul believed, when he saw what had been done, being astonished at the teaching of the Lord.

At Antioch in Pisidia

13 Now when Paul and his party set sail from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia; and [o]John, departing from them, returned to Jerusalem. 14 But when they departed from Perga, they Cyprus. An island in the Eastern Mediterranean, inhabited largely by Greeks but also by many Jews.

■ 13:5 arrived in Salamis. They sailed directly west about 130 miles from Seleucia to the east coast of Cyprus. Salamis was the most important city on the island; the provincial capital was Paphos, ninety miles southwest.

■ 13:6 a certain sorcerer . . . a Jew. The Greek magos means "wise man" (Matt. 2:1), "sorcerer," "magician." Sorcery was forbidden in Judaism, but was not unknown. Bar-Jesus ("son of Joshua") was indeed a false prophet.

■ 13:7 Sergius Paulus. Possibly Lucius Sergius Paulus, who had been an official in the reign of Claudius and then became proconsul (the chief officer in a senatorial province) at Paphos in Cyprus (cf. 18:12; 2 Cor. 9:2). By contrast, Palestine was an imperial province and had a procurator responsible directly to the emperor.

■ 13:8 Elymas. Another name for Bar-Jesus. This man was in the proconsul's court; he tried to keep Paulus from believing the Christian message.

■ 13:9 Saul . . . called Paul. "Saul" was his Jewish name and "Paul" his Roman name, probably going back to his life in Tarsus. Luke uses the occasion of the conversion of a prominent Gentile official, Sergius Paulus, to introduce the familiar name of the apostle to the Gentiles.

■ 13:13 came to Perga in Pamphylia. The city of Perga was in Pamphylia, an economically poor Roman province on the south coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Perga was five miles inland. It was at this time that John Mark left Paul and Barnabas and returned home.

■ 13:14 Antioch in Pisidia. This Antioch was about a hundred miles

Paul Goes to Galatia (The First Missionary Journey, Acts 13; 14). Sent out from the church at Antioch (Acts 13:1–3), Paul and Barnabas went to the cities of Galatia in Asia Minor. The Jewish synagogues in these cities provided Paul a platform for preaching the gospel. At times, however, he even encountered opposition from the synagogues.

Antioch in Pisidia, and [p]went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and sat down.
15 And [q]after the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent to them, saying, "Men and brethren, if you have [r]any word of [3]exhortation for the people, say on."
16 Then Paul stood up, and motioning with his hand said, "Men of Israel, and [s]you who fear God, listen: 17 The God of this people [4]Israel [t]chose our fathers, and exalted the people [u]when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with [5]an uplifted arm He [v]brought them out of it. 18 Now [w]for a time of about forty years He put up with their ways in the wilderness. 19 And when He had destroyed [x]seven nations in the land of Canaan, [y]He distributed their land to them by allotment.
20 "After that [z]He gave them judges for about four hundred and fifty years, [a]until Samuel the prophet. 21 [b]And afterward they asked for a king; so God gave them [c]Saul the son of Kish, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, for forty years. 22 And [d]when He had removed him, [e]He raised up for them David as king, to whom also He gave testimony and said, [f]'I have found David the son of Jesse, [g]a man after My own heart, who will do all My will.' 23 [h]From this man's seed, according [i]to the promise, God raised up for Israel [j]a [6]Savior—Jesus— 24 [k]after John had first preached, before His coming, the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel. 25 And as John was finishing his course, he said, [l]'Who do you think I am? I am not He. But behold, [m]there comes One after me, the sandals of whose feet I am not worthy to loose.'
26 "Men and brethren, sons of the [7]family of Abraham, and [n]those among you who fear God, [o]to you the [8]word of this salvation has been sent. 27 For those who dwell in Jerusalem, and their rulers, [p]because they did not know Him, nor even the voices of the Prophets which are read every Sabbath, have fulfilled them in condemning Him. 28 [q]And though they found no cause for death in Him, they asked Pilate that He should be put to death. 29 [r]Now when they had fulfilled all that was written concerning Him, [s]they took Him down from the tree and laid Him in a tomb. 30 [t]But God raised Him from the dead. 31 [u]He was seen for many days by those who came up with Him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are His witnesses to the people. 32 And we declare to you glad tidings—[v]that promise which was made to the fathers. 33 God has fulfilled this for us their children, in that He has raised up Jesus. As it is also written in the second Psalm:

[w] 'You are My Son,
Today I have begotten You.'

34 And that He raised Him from the dead, no more to return to [9]corruption, He has spoken thus:

[x] 'I will give you the sure [1]mercies of David.'

35 Therefore He also says in another Psalm:

[y] 'You will not allow Your Holy One to see corruption.'

36 "For David, after he had served [2]his own generation by the will of God, [z]fell asleep, was buried with his fathers, and [3]saw corruption; 37 but He whom God raised up [4]saw no corruption.
38 Therefore let it be known to you, brethren, that [a]through this Man is preached to you the forgiveness of sins; 39 and [b]by Him everyone who believes is justified from all things from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses. 40 Beware therefore, lest what has been spoken in the prophets come upon you:

north of Perga and 3,600 feet above sea level. It was in Phrygia but near Pisidia, and to distinguish it from another Antioch in Phrygia it was popularly called "Antioch in Pisidia."

■ 13:15 reading of the Law and the Prophets. A worship service in the synagogue would include the creed (Deut. 6:4), the prayer of "Eighteen Blessings," a reading from the Law and another from the Prophets, an exposition and application (Luke 4:16–30), and a concluding benediction.

■ 13:20 about four hundred and fifty years. About four hundred years plus the forty years in the wilderness and the period of Joshua's conquest (7:6 note).

■ 13:39 The law points the sinner to Christ (Gal. 3:24), for "a man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ" (Gal. 2:16). To be justified is to be declared righteous by God (Rom. 3:21, 22), and therefore granted forgiveness of sins (Eph. 1:7). See "Justification and Merit" at Gal. 3:11.

Blessing and Conflict at Antioch

42 [5]So when the Jews went out of the synagogue, the Gentiles begged that these words might be preached to them the next Sabbath. 43 Now when the congregation had broken up, many of the Jews and devout proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas, who, speaking to them, [d]persuaded them to continue in [e]the grace of God.

44 On the next Sabbath almost the whole city came together to hear the word of God. 45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy; and contradicting and blaspheming, they [f]opposed the things spoken by Paul. 46 Then Paul and Barnabas grew bold and said, [g]"It was necessary that the word of God should be spoken to you first; but [h]since you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, behold, [i]we turn to the Gentiles. 47 For so the Lord has commanded us:

[j]'I have set you as a light to the Gentiles,
That you should be for salvation to the ends of the earth.'"

48 Now when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad and glorified the word of the Lord. [k]And as many as had been appointed to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was being spread throughout all the region. 50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and prominent women and the chief men of the city, [l]raised up persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them from their region. 51 [m]But they shook off the dust from their feet against them, and came to Iconium. 52 And the disciples [n]were filled with joy and [o]with the Holy Spirit.

At Iconium

14 Now it happened in Iconium that they went together to the synagogue of the Jews, and so spoke that a great multitude both of the Jews and of the [a]Greeks believed. 2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles and [1]poisoned their [2]minds against the brethren. 3 Therefore they stayed there a long time, speaking boldly in the Lord, [b]who was bearing witness to the word of His grace, granting signs and [c]wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But the multitude of the city was [d]divided: part sided with the Jews, and part with the [e]apostles. 5 And when a violent attempt was made by both the Gentiles and Jews, with their rulers, [f]to abuse and stone them, 6 they became aware of it and [g]fled to Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and to the surrounding region. 7 And they were preaching the gospel there.

Idolatry at Lystra

8 [h]And in Lystra a certain man without strength in his feet was sitting, a cripple from his mother's womb, who had never walked. 9 This man heard Paul speaking. [3]Paul, observing him

■ 13:46 the word of God . . . to you first. Since Jesus the Messiah came through the Jews (Gen. 12:3), Paul is consistent in applying the principle, "for the Jew first and also for the Greek" (Rom. 1:16). He recognizes that God's plan also includes the Gentiles (Is. 49:6), a fact resisted by these Jews of Pisidian Antioch.

■ 13:48 as many as had been appointed to eternal life believed. God had chosen these people beforehand, and now through conviction and repentance (11:18; 2 Tim. 2:25) brought them to faith in Christ (Eph. 2:8). Luke uses the passive voice ("had been appointed"), indicating that God is the agent. Only God grants eternal life (Matt. 25:46; John 10:28; 17:2). See "Election and Reprobation" at Rom. 9:18.

■ 13:51 shook off the dust from their feet. A Jewish sign of displeasure and disassociation (Matt. 10:14).

■ 14:1 in Iconium. Paul and Barnabas traveled eighty miles southeast from Antioch in Pisidia to Iconium, an ancient Phrygian town. The Greeks made it a city state, and under Augustus it became a city in the province of Galatia.

■ 14:4 apostles. For the first time in Acts, the term has a broader meaning that includes men like Barnabas in addition to the apostles chosen by Jesus (1:24–26; Matt. 10:1–4; 2 Cor. 1:1 note).

■ 14:5 stone them. Stoning was the way the Jews executed the death penalty for religious blasphemy (7:58, 59).

■ 14:6 Lystra and Derbe. These two cities along with Iconium belonged strictly to the Roman province of Galatia, although they were part of the subdistrict called Lycaonia. From A.D. 37–72 Iconium was linguistically and politically on the Phrygian side of the border.

intently and seeing that he had faith to be healed,[10] said with a loud voice, [i]"Stand up straight on your feet!" And he leaped and walked. [11] Now when the people saw what Paul had done, they raised their voices, saying in the Lycaonian language, [j]"The gods have come down to us in the likeness of men!" [12] And Barnabas they called [4]Zeus, and Paul, [5]Hermes, because he was the chief speaker. [13] Then the priest of Zeus, whose temple was in front of their city, brought oxen and garlands to the gates, [k]intending to sacrifice with the multitudes.

[14] But when the apostles Barnabas and Paul heard this, [l]they tore their clothes and ran in among the multitude, crying out [15] and saying, "Men, [m]why are you doing these things? [n]We also are men with the same nature as you, and preach to you that you should turn from [o]these useless things [p]to the living God, [q]who made the heaven, the earth, the sea, and all things that are in them, [16] [r]who in bygone generations allowed all nations to walk in their own ways. [17] [s]Nevertheless He did not leave Himself without witness, in that He did good, [t]gave us rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with [u]food and gladness." [18] And with these sayings they could scarcely restrain the multitudes from sacrificing to them.

Stoning, Escape to Derbe

[19] [v]Then Jews from Antioch and Iconium came there; and having persuaded the multitudes, [w]they stoned Paul and dragged him out of the city, supposing him to be [x]dead. [20] However, when the disciples gathered around him, he rose up and went into the city. And the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

Strengthening the Converts

[21] And when they had preached the gospel to that city [y]and made many disciples, they returned to Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, [22] strengthening the souls of the disciples, [z]exhorting them to continue in the faith, and saying, [a]"We must through many tribulations enter the kingdom of God." [23] So when they had [b]appointed elders in every church, and prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord in whom they had believed. [24] And after they had passed through Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia. [25] Now when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down to Attalia. [26] From there they sailed to Antioch, where they had been commended to the grace of God for the work which they had completed.

[27] Now when they had come and gathered the church together, [c]they reported all that God had done with them, and that He had [d]opened the door of faith to the Gentiles, [28] So they stayed there a long time with the disciples.

Conflict over Circumcision

15 And [a]certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren, [b]"Unless you are circumcised according to the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved." [2] Therefore, when Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and dispute with them, they determined that [c]Paul and Barnabas and certain others of them should go up to Jerusalem, to the apostles and elders, about this question.

[3] So, [d]being sent on their way by the church, they passed through Phoenicia and Samaria, [e]describing the conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great joy to all the brethren. [4] And when they had come to Jerusalem, they were received by the church and the apostles and the elders; and they reported all things that God had done with them. [5] But some of the sect of the Pharisees

■ 14:12, 13 An ancient legend circulated in Lystra that the Greek gods Zeus and Hermes disguised themselves as men and came to the Phrygian hill country, seeking hospitality. Only one couple welcomed them, and in return their cottage was changed into a temple with a golden roof and marble columns. The houses of those who had refused the gods were destroyed. The Lystrans may have been thinking of this legend when they welcomed Barnabas and Paul and prepared to sacrifice oxen.

■ 14:14 tore their clothes. A conventional sign of grief or distress.

■ 14:15–17 The content of Paul's sermon is similar to his later sermon at Athens (17:22–31). Both sermons were addressed to pagan crowds who would not understand quotations from and explanations of Old Testament Scriptures. Paul stressed that God's creative and providential power extended everywhere. See "General Revelation" at Ps. 19:1.

■ 15:1 The reports of Paul's and Barnabas's direct contact with the Gentiles on the first missionary journey may have reached Judea and Jerusalem through John Mark after he returned home (13:13). Also, others from Antioch may have brought the news during Paul's and Barnabas's extended stay there. This caused the Jewish Christians to fear that their Jewish heritage was threatened; they thought that the converted Gentiles must be brought into Judaism through circumcision. Paul recognized that forcing Gentiles to be circumcised might make them think that salvation must be earned (cf. Gal. 2:15, 16). He knew that the Judaizers had to be opposed lest they hinder the extension of the gospel to the Gentiles (1 Thess. 2:14–16).

who believed rose up, saying, "It is necessary to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses."

The Jerusalem Council

6 Now the apostles and elders came together to consider this matter. 7 And when there had been much dispute, Peter rose up and said to them: [f]"Men and brethren, you know that a good while ago God chose among us, that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel and believe. 8 So God, [g]who knows the heart, [t]acknowledged them by [h]giving them the Holy Spirit, just as He did to us, 9 [i]and made no distinction between us and them, [j]purifying their hearts by faith. 10 Now therefore, why do you test God [k]by putting a yoke on the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? 11 But [l]we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus [2]Christ we shall be saved in the same manner as they."

12 Then all the multitude kept silent and listened to Barnabas and Paul declaring how many miracles and wonders God had [m]worked through them among the Gentiles. 13 And after they had [3]become silent, [n]James answered, saying, "Men and brethren, listen to me: 14 [o]Simon has declared how God at the first visited the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name. 15 And with this the words of the prophets agree, just as it is written:

16 'After[p] this I will return
And will rebuild the tabernacle of David, which has fallen down;
I will rebuild its ruins,
And I will set it up;

18 [5]"Known to God from eternity are all His works. 19 Therefore [q]I judge that we should not trouble those from among the Gentiles who [r]are turning to God, 20 but that we [s]write to them to abstain [t]from things polluted by idols, [u]from [6]sexual immorality, [v]from things strangled, and from blood. 21 For Moses has had throughout many generations those who preach him in every city, [w]being read in the synagogues every Sabbath."

The Jerusalem Decree

22 Then it pleased the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas, namely, Judas who was also named [x]Barsabas,[7] and Silas, leading men among the brethren.

23 They wrote this letter by them:

The apostles, the elders, and the brethren,

To the brethren who are of the Gentiles in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia:

Greetings.

24 Since we have heard that [y]some who went out from us have troubled you with words, [z]unsettling your souls, [8]saying, "You must be circumcised and keep the law"—to whom we gave no such commandment— 25 it seemed good to us, being assembled with one [9]accord, to send chosen men to you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, 26 [a]men who have risked their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. 27 We have therefore sent

■ 15:6 apostles and elders came together. The church leaders took the lead in the discussion, but v. 12 indicates that the whole assembly was present.

■ 15:13 James answered. James was the half brother of Jesus (Matt. 13:55; Introduction to James: Author). He seems by now to have become a prominent leader of the Jerusalem church (Gal. 2:9). James added a third testimony that Gentile believers should not be burdened with keeping the details of the Jewish ceremonial law; his speech concentrated on Old Testament Scriptures and their application to Gentile conversion.

■ 15:19 I judge. James finds support in the Scriptures and in the testimonies of Simon Peter, Barnabas, and Paul that God wants the Gentiles to be free from the ceremonial law and the demands of the Judaizers. He proposes that both Jews and Gentiles practice moderation. The Jewish Christians are to recognize that Gentiles are not to be bound by Jewish ceremonial law. The Gentile believers must consider the scruples of Jewish Christians and not offend them by eating food sacrificed to idols, or eating the meat of strangled animals, or blood (Lev. 17:10–14; 19:26).

■ 15:23 the brethren. The Jewish Christians used this expression to set the Gentile Christians at ease.

Judas and Silas, who will also report the same things by word of mouth. 28 For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things: 29 [b]that you abstain from things offered to idols, [c]from blood, from things strangled, and from [d]sexual[1] immorality. If you keep yourselves from these, you will do well.

Farewell.

Continuing Ministry in Syria

30 So when they were sent off, they came to Antioch; and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the letter. 31 When they had read it, they rejoiced over its encouragement. 32 Now Judas and Silas, themselves being [e]prophets also, [f]exhorted and strengthened the brethren with many words. 33 And after they had stayed there for a time, they were [g]sent back with greetings from the brethren to [2]the apostles.

34 [3]However, it seemed good to Silas to remain there. 35 [h]Paul and Barnabas also remained in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

Division over John Mark

36 Then after some days Paul said to Barnabas, "Let us now go back and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they are doing." 37 Now Barnabas [4]was determined to take with them [i]John called Mark. 38 But Paul insisted that they should not take with them [j]the one who had departed from them in Pamphylia, and had not gone with them to the work. 39 Then the contention became so sharp that they parted from one another. And so Barnabas took Mark and sailed to [k]Cyprus; 40 but Paul chose Silas and departed, [l]being [5]commended by the brethren to the grace of God. 41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, [m]strengthening the churches.

Timothy Joins Paul and Sales

16 Then he came to [a]Derbe and Lystra. And behold, a certain disciple was there, [b]named Timothy, [c]the son of a certain Jewish woman who believed, but his father was Greek. 2 He was well spoken of by the brethren who were at Lystra and Iconium. 3 Paul wanted to have him go on with him. And he [d]took him and circumcised him because of the Jews who were in that region, for they all knew that his father was Greek. 4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered to them the [e]decrees to keep, [f]which were determined by the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. 5 [g]So the churches were strengthened in the faith, and increased in number daily.

The Macedonian Call

6 Now when they had gone through Phrygia and the region of [h]Galatia, they were forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in [1]Asia. 7 After they had come to Mysia, they tried to go into Bithynia, but the [2]Spirit did not permit them. 8 So passing by Mysia, they [i]came down to Troas. 9 And a vision appeared to Paul in the night. A [j]man of Macedonia stood and pleaded

8 [i]2 Cor. 2:12

9 [j]Acts 10:30

■ 15:28 to the Holy Spirit, and to us. They were filled with the Spirit (2:1–41; 4:8; 6:5; 9:17; 13:4) and recognized the Spirit's role in their debate and decision.

■ 15:32 Judas and Silas . . . prophets. Bringing encouragement and strength to believers was a primary function of the New Testament prophet (a spokesman for God).

■ 15:39 contention . . . parted. The failure of Barnabas to support the Gentile Christians (Gal. 2:13) may have also contributed to the disagreement about Mark. Though the remainder of Acts contains no further record of Paul working with Barnabas, Paul mentions Barnabas in a positive light in 1 Cor. 9:6. Paul's later high regard for Mark is evident in Col. 4:10; Philem. 24; 2 Tim. 4:11.

Barnabas took Mark . . . Cyprus. Barnabas took his cousin Mark (Col. 4:10) on a missionary journey to the island of Cyprus, Barnabas's home. This would also provide an opportunity for Barnabas to encourage (4:36) the younger man.

■ 16:1 a certain disciple . . . Timothy. In the small Jewish community of Lystra Paul found this young man, part Jew and part Greek. Like his father, Timothy had been reared as a Greek, and so had not been circumcised. His mother was Jewish. Paul did not think he was compromising the principles of Gentile freedom by circumcising Timothy (v. 3).

■ 16:6 Phrygia and . . . Galatia. This is the southern part of the larger province of Galatia. It included the Phrygian district, Antioch of Pisidia, and the surrounding area.

Holy Spirit . . . Asia. The province of Asia, located in the western sector of Asia Minor, included the famous city of Ephesus where God wanted Paul to go at a later date (ch. 19). The Holy Spirit's identity coincides with both the Spirit of Jesus (v. 7) and God (v. 10; cf. 2 Cor. 3:17 note). These verses point to the Christian doctrine of the Trinity (cf. 2 Cor. 13:14).

■ 16:7, 8 Mysia . . . Troas. Paul and Silas came from Derbe and Lystra northwest to Mysia, a region to the south of the Hellespont. They were unable to go north to Bithynia (toward the Black Sea), and instead went west to Troas on the Aegean coast. Troas was an established seaport; the site of ancient Troy was ten miles inland.

■ 16:9 Macedonia. Macedonia was across the Aegean Sea from Troas. Mt. Olympus is in the south of Macedonia.

with him, saying, "Come over to Macedonia and help us." [10] Now after he had seen the vision, immediately we sought to go [k]to Macedonia, concluding that the Lord had called us to preach the gospel to them.

Lydia Baptized at Philippi

[11] Therefore, sailing from Troas, we ran a straight course to Samothrace, and the next day came to Neapolis, [12] and from there to [l]Philippi, which is the [3]foremost city of that part of Macedonia, a colony. And we were staying in that city for some days. [13] And on the Sabbath day we went out of the city to the riverside, where prayer was customarily made; and we sat down and spoke to the women who met there. [14] Now a certain woman named Lydia heard us. She was a seller of purple from the city of [m]Thyatira, who worshiped God. [n]The Lord opened her heart to heed the things spoken by Paul. [15] And when she and her household were baptized, she begged us, saying, "If you have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come to my house and stay." So [o]she persuaded us.

Paul and Silas Imprisoned

[16] Now it happened, as we went to prayer, that a certain slave girl [p]possessed with a spirit of divination met us, who brought her masters [q]much profit by fortune-telling. [17] This girl followed Paul and us, and cried out, saying, "These men are the servants of the Most High God, who proclaim to us the way of salvation." [18] And this she did for many days.

But Paul, [r]greatly [4]annoyed, turned and said to the spirit, "I command you in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her." [s]And he came out that very hour. [19] But [t]when her masters saw that their hope of profit was gone, they seized Paul and Silas and [u]dragged them into the marketplace to the authorities.

[20] And they brought them to the magistrates, and said, "These men, being Jews, [v]exceedingly trouble our city; [21] and they teach customs which are not lawful for us, being Romans, to receive or observe." [22] Then the multitude rose up together against them; and the magistrates tore off their clothes [w]and commanded them to be beaten with rods. [23] And when they had laid many stripes on them, they threw them into prison, commanding the jailer to keep them securely. [24] Having received such a charge, he put them into the inner prison and fastened their feet in the stocks.

■ 16:10 we. The first of several passages using the plural pronoun "we" starts here, indicating that the author was with Paul and Silas.

■ 16:11 Samothrace. A prominent island in the north Aegean where vessels regularly stopped. It was about halfway between Troas and Neapolis, the seaport serving Philippi.

■ 16:12 Philippi. Philip II of Macedon, the father of Alexander the Great, had established a large Greek colony here and named it Philippi. The Romans conquered it in 167 B.C. and made it part of the province of Macedonia.

■ 16:13 where prayer was customarily made. According to Jewish law at least ten men were required to form a synagogue. Failing that, a place of prayer could be established outdoors, preferably near water.

women who met there. They would meet to read and study the Scriptures, and they welcomed the assistance of any Jewish teacher who happened to visit there.

■ 16:14 from the city Thyatira. Southeast of Pergamum and about forty miles inland, Thyatira was in Asia Minor, across the Aegean Sea from Athens. Thyatira was known for wool and dying. Purple was an expensive dye.

The Lord opened her heart. Divine illumination and persuasion is necessary for the heart blinded by sin to respond to the gospel (Jer. 13:23; John 6:44, 65; Rom. 9:16; 1 Cor. 2:14). This effectual call of God ensures that all who have been chosen by God will believe (13:48; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; 2 Tim. 1:9, 10).

■ 16:15 she and her household were baptized. Throughout redemptive history it has often been God's practice to save entire family units at the same time (2:38, 39; 11:14; 16:31; Gen. 17:7–14). The household baptisms of Acts are striking examples of this (10:47, 48; 16:31–33; cf. 1 Cor. 1:16). Such household baptisms were apparently standard practice.

■ 16:16 a spirit of divination. Lit. "a python spirit." The term originally referred to a mythical serpent believed to guard the temple and oracle of the Greek god Apollo at Delphi. Later the phrase meant a demon-possessed person or even a ventriloquist. The people at Philippi must have thought of her as having a demon that could tell fortunes.

■ 16:17 the Most High God. A Jew would understand this to be Yahweh; a Gentile would apply it to Zeus.

■ 16:18 name of Jesus Christ to come out. Following the common understanding of the expression "the Most High God," everyone would realize that Paul meant to convey the thought that Jesus, as deity, expelled the demon.

■ 16:19 seized Paul and Silas. Because both Paul and Silas were Jews and leaders of the missionary team, they were seized. Their companions were Gentiles (Luke, a Gentile from Syrian Antioch, and Timothy, a half-Gentile from Lystra) and were not charged.

■ 16:21 teach customs . . . not lawful for us . . . Romans. The charge was that Paul and Silas were propagating an illegal religion and disturbing the peace. The charge was inflamed by cultural and religious prejudice.

■ 16:22 beaten. Paul and Silas were Roman citizens (v. 37) and should have been exempt from such treatment. But in the mob atmosphere this was ignored.

■ 16:24 in the stocks. They were treated like criminals.

The Philippian Jailer Saved

25 But at midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God, and the prisoners were listening to them. 26 [x]Suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken; and immediately [y]all the doors were opened and everyone's chains were loosed. 27 And the keeper of the prison, awaking from sleep and seeing the prison doors open, supposing the prisoners had fled, drew his sword and was about to kill himself. 28 But Paul called with a loud voice, saying, "Do yourself no harm, for we are all here."

29 Then he called for a light, ran in, and fell down trembling before Paul and Silas. 30 And he brought them out and said, [z]"Sirs, what must I do to be saved?"

31 So they said, [a]"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will be saved, you and your household." 32 Then they spoke the word of the Lord to him and to all who were in his house. 33 And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes. And immediately he and all his family were baptized. 34 Now when he had brought them into his house, [b]he set food before them; and he rejoiced, having believed in God with all his household.

Paul Refuses to Depart Secretly

35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the [5]officers, saying, "Let those men go."

36 So the keeper of the prison reported these words to Paul, saying, "The magistrates have sent to let you go. Now therefore depart, and go in peace."

37 But Paul said to them, "They have beaten us openly, uncondemned [c]Romans, and have thrown us into prison. And now do they put us out secretly? No indeed! Let them come themselves and get us out."

38 And the officers told these words to the magistrates, and they were afraid when they heard that they were Romans. 39 Then they came and pleaded with them and brought them out, and [d]asked them to depart from the city. 40 So they went out of the prison [e]and entered the house of Lydia; and when they had seen the brethren, they encouraged them and departed.

Paul Goes to Greece (The Second Missionary Journey, Acts 15:39—18:22). Starting from Jerusalem, Paul took Silas to visit again the churches of Galatia. Young Timothy joined them in Lystra. Together they went to Macedonia and Achaia, present-day Greece. On this journey the Philippian jailer was saved, the Bereans "searched the Scriptures daily" (Acts 17:11), and Paul preached at the Areopagus.

Preaching Christ at Thessalonica

17 Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to [a]Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue of the Jews. [2] Then Paul, as his custom was, [b]went in to them, and for three Sabbaths [c]reasoned with them from the Scriptures, [3] explaining and demonstrating [d]that the Christ had to suffer and rise again from the dead, and saying, "This Jesus whom I preach to you is the Christ." [4] [e]And some of them were persuaded; and a great multitude of the devout Greeks, and not a few of the leading women, joined Paul and [f]Silas.

Assault on Jason's House

[5] But the Jews [j]who were not persuaded, [2]becoming [g]envious, took some of the evil men from the marketplace, and gathering a mob, set all the city in an uproar and attacked the house of [h]Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. [6] But when they did not find them, they dragged Jason and some brethren to the rulers of the city, crying out, [i]"These who have turned the world upside down have come here too. [7] Jason has [3]harbored them, and these are all acting contrary to the decrees of Caesar, [k]saying there is another king—Jesus." [8] And they troubled the crowd and the rulers of ~~the city~~ when they heard these things. [9] So when they had taken security from Jason and the rest, they let them go.

Ministering at Berea

[10] Then [k]the brethren immediately sent Paul and Silas away by night to Berea. When they arrived, they went into the synagogue of the Jews. [11] These were more [4]fair-minded than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness, and [l]searched the Scriptures daily to find out whether these things were so. [12] Therefore many of them believed, and also not a few of the Greeks, prominent women as well as men. [13] But when the Jews from Thessalonica learned that the word of God was preached by Paul at Berea, they came there also and stirred up the crowds. [14] [m]Then immediately the brethren sent Paul away, to go to the sea; but both Silas and Timothy remained there. [15] So those who conducted Paul brought him to Athens; and [n]receiving a command for Silas and Timothy to come to him with all speed, they departed.

The Philosophers at Athens

[16] Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, [o]his spirit was provoked within him when he saw that the city was [5]given over to idols. [17] Therefore he reasoned in the synagogue with the Jews and with the Gentile worshipers, and in the marketplace daily with those who happened to be there. [18] [6]Then certain Epicurean and Stoic philosophers encountered him. And some said, "What does this [7]babbler want to say?"

Others said, "He seems to be a proclaimer of foreign gods," because he preached to them [p]Jesus and the resurrection.

[19] And they took him and brought him to the [8]Areopagus, saying, "May we know what this seen the brethren. "Brethren" would include all the believers—Lydia, her household, the jailer, Luke, and others.

■ 17:1 Amphipolis and Apollonia . . . Thessalonica. Amphipolis was thirty miles southwest of Philippi and Apollonia twenty-five miles farther on the highway to Thessalonica. Paul and his companions were eager to get to Thessalonica, forty miles beyond Apollonia. Thessalonica had a population of 200,000 and was the provincial capital of Macedonia.

■ 17:2 three Sabbaths. The Pauline epistles suggest that Paul stayed in Thessalonica much longer than three weeks. According to Phil. 4:16, the church at Philippi repeatedly sent him aid, and the Thessalonian epistles indicate that Paul had been able to give extensive doctrinal instruction to the Thessalonian Christians.

■ 17:7 contrary to the decrees of Caesar. A political charge was brought against Paul, who had spoken about the spiritual kingdom of God (14:22; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23, 31). His opponents seemed to have distorted the message to mean political opposition to Rome. About this time, Claudius Caesar (A.D. 49–50) expelled the Jews from Rome because of riots allegedly instigated by "Chrestus," a probable reference to Christ.

■ 17:10 Berea. Modern Verria, fifty miles southwest of Thessalonica, in the foothills of the Olympian Mountains.

■ 17:11 searched the Scriptures daily. The Bereans compared Paul's teaching with God's written Word, setting a good example for the church throughout history.

■ 17:16 Athens. The leading city of Greece, served by the port of Piraeus on the Aegean Sea. Athens reached its zenith in the fifth century B.C. under Pericles (495–429 B.C.), when the Parthenon and other magnificent structures were built. The classical poets Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, and Aristophanes flourished at this time. Although conquered by the Romans in 146 B.C., Athens continued to be a great intellectual and cultural center.

given over to idols. There were statues of gods or goddesses in the Parthenon and other temples on the Acropolis, as well as in the public, commercial, and temple buildings below.

■ 17:18 Epicurean and Stoic. Epicurus (342–270 B.C.) taught that the purpose of life was pleasure and freedom from pain, passions, and fears. On the other hand, the Cypriot Zeno (340–265 B.C.), founder of Stoicism, stressed living in harmony with nature and depending on reason and other self-sufficient powers. Both schools stressed the quest for peace of mind. Zeno viewed God pantheistically as the "world-soul."

babbler. A derogatory term meaning a scrap collector or peddler of assorted ideas.

■ 17:19 the Areopagus. The name means "Mars' Hill." This is a hill near the Acropolis where in ancient times a council had met. The council became the city council of Athens, and in Roman times it was the court supervising morals, education, and religion. In Paul's time, the court met in the Royal Portico, in the marketplace below the Acropolis.

new doctrine is of which you speak? 20 For you are bringing some strange things to our ears. Therefore we want to know what these things mean." 21 For all the Athenians and the foreigners who were there spent their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing.

Addressing the Areopagus

22 Then Paul stood in the midst of the [9]Areopagus and said, "Men of Athens, I perceive that in all things you are very religious; 23 for as I was passing through and considering the objects of your worship, I even found an altar with this inscription:

TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.

Therefore, the One whom you worship without knowing, Him I proclaim to you: 24 [q]God, who made the world and everything in it, since He is [r]Lord of heaven and earth, [s]does not dwell in temples made with hands. 25 Nor is He worshiped with men's hands, as though He needed anything, since He [t]gives to all life, breath, and all things. 26 And He has made from one [l]blood every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and has determined their preappointed times and [u]the boundaries of their dwellings, 27 [v]so that they should seek the Lord, in the hope that they might grope for Him and find Him, [w]though He is not far from each one of us; 28 for [x]in Him we live and move and have our being, [y]as also some of your own poets have said, 'For we are also His offspring.' 29 Therefore, since we are the offspring of God, [z]we ought not to think that the Divine Nature is like gold or silver or stone, something shaped by art and man's devising. 30 Truly, [a]these times of ignorance God overlooked, but [b]now commands all men everywhere to repent, 31 because He has appointed a day on which [c]He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He has ordained. He has given assurance of this to all by [d]raising Him from the dead."

32 And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked, while others said, "We will hear you again on this matter." 33 So Paul departed from among them. 34 However, some men joined him and believed, among them Dionysius the Areopagite, a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

Ministering at Corinth

18 After these things Paul departed from Athens and went to Corinth. 2 And he found a certain Jew named [a]Aquila, born in Pontus, who had recently come from Italy with his wife Priscilla (because Claudius had commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome); and he came to them. 3 So, because he was of the same trade, he stayed with them [b]and worked; for by occupation they were tentmakers. 4 [c]And he reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded both Jews and Greeks.

5 [d]When Silas and Timothy had come from Macedonia, Paul was [e]compelled [l]by the Spirit,

■ 17:23 TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Possibly a reference to the Altar of the Twelve Gods at Athens, erected to ensure that no god was left out of their worship. Paul used this point of contact to begin his discourse about the God who made the world, who is not carved out of stone or confined to any temple, and who controls the times and places where people live.

■ 17:26 from one blood. See "The Fall" at Gen. 3:6.

■ 17:28 in Him we live and move and have our being. Paul says that God brought all people into being and they only exist by His providence. In the ancient world the three great mysteries of philosophy and science were the questions of life, motion, and being. See "General Revelation" at Ps. 19:1.

some of your own poets. Paul knew that the Athenians did not know the Old Testament, and he quoted from three of their own poets. Although their words originally referred to Zeus, the head of the Greek gods, Paul applied the quotations to the living God of heaven. The poets are Epimenides (c. 600 B.C.), Cleanthes (331–233 B.C.), and Aratus (c. 315–240 B.C.).

■ 17:29 not . . . like gold or silver. See "The Self-existence of God" at Ps. 90:2.

■ 17:30 times of ignorance God overlooked. That is, God took into consideration the limitations of their knowledge about God, but now Paul has revealed the truth about the living God. With all people, they are called upon to repent of their sins.

■ 17:31 a day on which He will judge . . . by the Man whom He has ordained. The final Day of Judgment (Rev. 20:12–15). Rejection by the Athenians of the Man whom God appointed will result in Jesus finally and justly rejecting them on that Day of Judgment. Paul stresses that God's call to repentance and faith is not an invitation but a command.

raising Him. See "The Resurrection of Jesus" at Luke 24:2.

■ 18:1 Corinth. Since 27 B.C., this city had been the capital of the Roman province of Achaia. It was fifty miles southwest of Athens, near the isthmus that joins Attica and the Peloponnesus. Corinth was large and prosperous in the eighth to sixth centuries B.C., but it declined and was captured in 338 B.C. by Philip II of Macedon. In 196 B.C., it was taken by the Romans. They sacked it in 146 B.C. in punishment for a revolt, but it was restored by Julius Caesar as a Roman colony in 44 B.C. In New Testament times Corinth had over 200,000 inhabitants, including Greeks, freedmen from Italy, Roman army veterans, businessmen, government officials, people from the Near East, a large number of Jews, and many slaves. Corinth was thoroughly pagan and immoral. The city was filled with pagan temples and on the south there was a high acropolis with a temple of Aphrodite. From the fifth century B.C., the expression "to Corinthianize" meant to be sexually immoral.

■ 18:2 Aquila, born in Pontus . . . Priscilla. Pontus was on the north coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey). Priscilla is frequently listed before her husband (vv. 18, 19, 26; Rom. 16:3; 2 Tim. 4:19). She may have had higher social status or have been more prominent in their tent-making business.

and testified to the Jews that Jesus is the Christ. 6 But [f]when they opposed him and blasphemed, [g]he shook his garments and said to them, [h]"Your blood be upon your own heads; [i]I am clean. [j]From now on I will go to the Gentiles." 7 And he departed from there and entered the house of a certain man named [2]Justus, one who worshiped God, whose house was next door to the synagogue. 8 [k]Then Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his household. And many of the Corinthians, hearing, believed and were baptized.

9 Now [l]the Lord spoke to Paul in the night by a vision, "Do not be afraid, but speak, and do not keep silent; 10 [m]for I am with you, and no one will attack you to hurt you; for I have many people in this city." 11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 When Gallio was proconsul of Achaia, the Jews with one accord rose up against Paul and brought him to the [3]judgment seat, 13 saying, "This fellow persuades men to worship God contrary to the law."

14 And when Paul was about to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews, "If it were a matter of wrongdoing or wicked crimes, O Jews, there would be reason why I should bear with you. 15 But if it is a [n]question of words and names and your own law, look to it yourselves; for I do not want to be a judge of such matters." 16 And he drove them from the judgment seat. 17 Then [4]all the Greeks took [o]Sosthenes, the ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. But Gallio took no notice of these things.

Paul Returns to Antioch

18 So Paul still remained [5]a good while. Then he took leave of the brethren and sailed for Syria, and Priscilla and Aquila were with him. [p]He had his hair cut off at [q]Cenchrea, for he had taken a vow. 19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there; but he himself entered the synagogue and reasoned with the Jews. 20 When they asked him to stay a longer time with them, he did not consent, 21 but took leave of them, saying, [r]"[6] must by all means keep this coming feast in Jerusalem; but I will return again to you, [s]God willing." And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at [t]Caesarea, and [7]gone up and greeted the church, he went down to Antioch. 23 After he had spent some time there, he departed and went over the region of [u]Galatia and Phrygia [8]in order, [v]strengthening all the disciples.

Ministry of Apollos

24 [w]Now a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man and mighty in the Scriptures, came to Ephesus. 25 This man had been instructed in the way of the Lord; and being [x]fervent in spirit, he spoke and taught accurately the things of the Lord, [y]though he knew only the baptism of John. 26 So he began to speak boldly in the synagogue. When Aquila and Priscilla heard him, they took him aside and explained to him the way of God more accurately. 27 And when he desired to cross to Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him; and when he arrived, [z]he greatly helped those who had believed through grace; 28 for he vigorously refuted the Jews publicly, [a]showing from the Scriptures that Jesus is the Christ.

■ 18:6 Your blood be upon your own heads. They were responsible for their own sins.

■ 18:7 house of . . . Justus. The first home of the Corinthian church. Titius Justus was a Gentile adherent to the faith at the synagogue, and a Roman citizen. He could have belonged to one of the families Julius Caesar sent to colonize Corinth. He may have been the Gaius of Rom. 16:23, who was baptized by Paul (1 Cor. 1:14); Gaius could have been a third name standing before Titius Justus.

■ 18:8 Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue. As synagogue ruler, Crispus was in charge of the physical arrangements for the synagogue services. It is this Crispus (and presumably his household) whom Paul baptized (1 Cor. 1:14).

all his household. See 16:15 and note; 16:31–33.

■ 18:10 I have many people in this city. Jesus promises that Paul's labors in Corinth will be fruitful because God's own people (those God has appointed to eternal life, 13:48) live in that city. Even though the elect Corinthians had not yet believed the gospel, and some had not even heard it, they nevertheless were known to God.

■ 18:12 When Gallio was proconsul of Achaia. Luke's identification of the administrative head of this senatorial province as a proconsul is correct. An inscription found at Delphi, Greece, identifies Gallio as the proconsul in A.D. 52.

■ 18:13 contrary to the law. That is, contrary to the Roman law forbidding the practice of religions not legally recognized by Rome. Judaism was legally recognized, and Christianity as an offshoot of Judaism was also a legal religion (religio licita).

■ 18:18 he had taken a vow. Though this phrase could apply to Aquila, Paul is probably in view. The Nazirite vow required rigorous ceremonial purity that would have been impractical in Gentile lands (Num. 6:1–21), so this vow was more likely a private one undertaken by Paul as a religious exercise. The hair was allowed to grow during the period of the vow, and cutting it marked the conclusion of the vow and was perhaps an expression of gratitude to God.

■ 18:23 some time there. Presumably Paul was in Antioch for several months, from about the fall of A.D. 52 to the spring of A.D. 53.

Galatia and Phrygia. Paul started his third missionary journey in the Phrygian part of Galatia in southern Asia Minor, the area nearest his former work.

Paul at Ephesus

19 And it happened, while [a]Apollos was at Corinth, that Paul, having passed through [b]the upper regions, came to Ephesus. And finding some disciples [2] he said to them, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed?"

So they said to him, [c]"We have not so much as heard whether there is a Holy Spirit."

[3] And he said to them, "Into what then were you baptized?"

So they said, [d]"Into John's baptism."

[4] Then Paul said, [e]"John indeed baptized with a baptism of repentance, saying to the people that they should believe on Him who would come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus."

[5] When they heard this, they were baptized [f]in the name of the Lord Jesus. [6] And when Paul had [g]laid hands on them, the Holy Spirit came upon them, and [h]they spoke with tongues and prophesied. [7] Now the men were about twelve in all.

[8] [i]And he went into the synagogue and spoke boldly for three months, reasoning and persuading [j]concerning the things of the kingdom of God. [9] But [k]when some were hardened and did not believe, but spoke evil [l]of the Way before the multitude, he departed from them and withdrew

■ 19:1 the upper. When he had finished his ministry in Phrygian Galatia (18:23), Paul continued westward by land through the region of Colosse, Laodicea, and Hierapolis (Col. 4:13) in the Lycus Valley, and finally arrived at Ephesus. Here he ministered for about three years (vv. 8, 10), from about A.D. 53 to 56.

Ephesus. The capital of the Roman province of Asia, Ephesus had been founded in about the twelfth century B.C. by Ionians from Athens. It became a great commercial power, but its economic prosperity declined, mainly because erosion into the river had silted and clogged the harbor. The city derived wealth and prestige from its temple of Artemis, built in honor of the goddess of fertility. The Ephesus of Paul's day had passed its zenith but was still an important commercial and religious center.

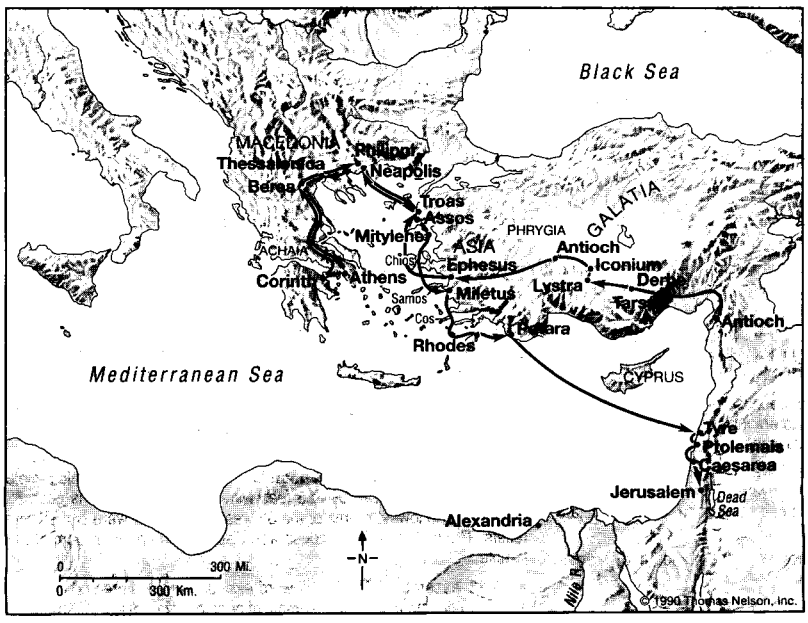
some disciples. According to v. 7, "about twelve."

■ 19:2 receive the Holy Spirit. As followers of John the Baptist, these believers had not been instructed about the coming of the Spirit. Note that all categories of people received the baptism of the Holy Spirit: Jews, God-fearing Greeks, Samaritans, and Gentiles.

■ 19:4 baptism of repentance . . . who would come after him . . . Jesus. John's baptism of repentance (Mark 1:4; Luke 3:3) was directed toward repentance of sins and looked forward to the redeeming work of Jesus.

■ 19:6 spoke with tongues and prophesied. The experience the Ephesian Gentiles had when receiving the Holy Spirit parallels that of the Jews (2:4, 11), Samaritans (8:14–17), and God-fearing Gentiles (10:44–46). This episode is an extension of the Pentecost experience to yet another group of people (v. 2 note). "Prophesied" in this passage may be equivalent to "speaking . . . the wonderful works of God" (2:11) or speaking so as to "magnify God" (10:46).

■ 19:9 school of Tyrannus. Nothing further is known about Tyrannus. Some manuscripts add, "from the fifth to the tenth hour" (11:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.). Tyrannus could have used the room in the cool morning hours, and given it to Paul for the rest of the day.



Asia and Greece Revisited (Paul's Third Missionary Journey, Acts 18:23—21:16). Paul visited the churches of Galatia for a third time, and then settled in Ephesus for more than two years. Upon leaving Ephesus, Paul traveled again to Macedonia and Achaia (Greece) for a three-month stay. He returned to Asia by way of Macedonia.

On this third journey Paul wrote 1 Corinthians from Ephesus, 2 Corinthians from Macedonia, and the letter to the Romans from Corinth.

the disciples, reasoning daily in the school of Tyrannus. 10 And [m]this continued for two years, so that all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

Miracles Glorify Christ

11 Now [n]God worked unusual miracles by the hands of Paul, 12 [o]so that even handkerchiefs or aprons were brought from his body to the sick, and the diseases left them and the evil spirits went out of them. 13 [p]Then some of the itinerant Jewish exorcists [q]took it upon themselves to call the name of the Lord Jesus over those who had evil spirits, saying, [1]"We [2]exorcise you by the Jesus whom Paul [r]preaches." 14 Also there were seven sons of Sceva, a Jewish chief priest, who did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, "Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are you?"

16 Then the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, [3]overpowered them, and prevailed against [4]them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded. 17 This became known both to all Jews and Greeks dwelling in Ephesus; and [s]fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified. 18 And many who had believed came [t]confessing and telling their deeds. 19 Also, many of those who had practiced magic brought their books together and burned them in the sight of all. And they counted up the value of them, and it totaled fifty thousand pieces of silver. 20 [u]So the word of the Lord grew mightily and prevailed.

The Riot at Ephesus

21 [v]When these things were accomplished, Paul [w]purposed in the Spirit, when he had passed through [x]Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, "After I have been there, [y]I must also see Rome." 22 So he sent into Macedonia two of those who ministered to him, [z]Timothy and [a]Erastus, but he himself stayed in Asia for a time.

23 And [b]about that time there arose a great commotion about [c]the Way. 24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, who made silver shrines of [5]Diana, brought [d]no small profit to the craftsmen. 25 He called them together with the workers of similar occupation, and said: "Men, you know that we have our prosperity by this trade. 26 Moreover you see and hear that not only at Ephesus, but throughout almost all Asia, this Paul has persuaded and turned away many people, saying that [e]they are not gods which are made with hands. 27 So not only is this trade of ours in danger of falling into disrepute, but also the temple of the great goddess Diana may be despised and [6]her magnificence destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worship."

28 Now when they heard this, they were full of wrath and cried out, saying, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" 29 So the whole city was filled with confusion, and rushed into the theater with one accord, having seized [f]Gaius and [g]Aristarchus, Macedonians, Paul's travel companions. 30 And when Paul wanted to go in to the people, the disciples would not allow him. 31 Then some of the [7]officials of Asia, who were his friends, sent to him pleading that he would not venture into the theater. 32 Some therefore cried one thing and some another, for the assembly was confused, and most of them did not know why they had come together. 33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And [h]Alexander [i]motioned with his hand, and wanted to make his defense to the people. 34 But when they found out that he was a Jew, all with one voice cried out for about two hours, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

35 And when the city clerk had quieted the crowd, he said: "Men of Ephesus, what man is to the sick. This was not Paul's doing; because of their pagan religious background, the Ephesians were used to employing superstitious means (v. 19). God accommodated His gracious work to their ignorance.

■ 19:10 Asia. The Roman province in the western part of Asia Minor. As a result of this teaching, groups of believers were formed in numerous places (Col. 4:13, 16; Rev. 2; 3).

■ 19:12 handkerchiefs or aprons . . . from his body. That is, sweat cloths or work aprons that Paul used as he worked at making tents or awnings (18:3).

■ 19:13 evil spirits. In ancient times it was common practice to use magical names to drive out evil spirits. Jews in Ephesus presumed "to call the name of the Lord Jesus" over those possessed, trying to imitate what Paul did (v. 12; 16:18).

■ 19:19 their books. These were scrolls with the names and incantations used in their magic.

■ 19:23 the Way. See note on 9:2.

■ 19:24 Demetrius, a silversmith. An important guild of silversmiths had developed at Ephesus on account of the large numbers of religious pilgrims. The pilgrims came to worship the goddess Diana (Artemis in Greek) who was portrayed by a famous statue at Ephesus as a fertility goddess with many breasts. Her "image" which had fallen "from Zeus" (v. 35) was probably a meteorite that the people had begun to worship. The temple of Artemis was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. Not only was it the object of religious pilgrimage, but it was a banking depository as well. Making silver shrines and images of the goddess was an important trade.

■ 19:27 temple of the great goddess Diana. The archaic Ionic temple of Diana measured 220 by 425 feet, with 127 marble columns each 62 feet high. The lowest drums of the 36 western columns were carved with reliefs. The statue of the goddess was displayed in an inner room of the temple.

■ 19:32 assembly. The Greek word ekklesia is used here and in vv. 39 and 41 to denote a secular assembly of people (5:11 note).

there who does not know that the city of the Ephesians is temple guardian of the great goddess [8]Diana, and of the image which fell down from [9]Zeus? [36] Therefore, since these things cannot be denied, you ought to be quiet and do nothing rashly. [37] For you have brought these men here who are neither robbers of temples nor blasphemers of [1]your goddess. [38] Therefore, if Demetrius and his fellow craftsmen have a [2]case against anyone, the courts are open and there are proconsuls. Let them bring charges against one another. [39] But if you have any other inquiry to make, it shall be determined in the lawful assembly. [40] For we are in danger of being [3]called in question for today's uproar, there being no reason which we may give to account for this disorderly gathering." [41] And when he had said these things, he dismissed the assembly.

Journeys in Greece

20 After the uproar had ceased, Paul called the disciples to himself, embraced them, and [a]departed to go to Macedonia. [2] Now when he had gone over that region and encouraged them with many words, he came to [b]Greece [3] and stayed three months. And [c]when the Jews plotted against him as he was about to sail to Syria, he decided to return through Macedonia. [4] And Sopater of Berea accompanied him to Asia—also [d]Aristarchus and Secundus of the Thessalonians, and [e]Gaius of Derbe, and [f]Timothy, and [g]Tychicus and [h]Trophimus of Asia. [5] These men, going ahead, waited for us at [i]Troas. [6] But we sailed away from Philippi after [j]the Days of Unleavened Bread, and in five days joined them [k]at Troas, where we stayed seven days.

Ministering at Troas

[7] Now on [l]the first day of the week, when the disciples came together [m]to break bread, Paul, ready to depart the next day, spoke to them and continued his message until midnight. [8] There were many lamps [n]in the upper room where [l]they were gathered together. [9] And in a window sat a certain young man named Eutychus, who was sinking into a deep sleep. He was overcome by sleep; and as Paul continued speaking, he fell down from the third story and was taken up dead. [10] But Paul went down, [o]fell on him, and embracing him said, [p]"Do not trouble yourselves, for his life is in him." [11] Now when he had come up, had broken bread and eaten, and talked a long while, even till daybreak, he departed. [12] And they brought the young man in alive, and they were not a little comforted.

From Troas to Miletus

[13] Then we went ahead to the ship and sailed to Assos, there intending to take Paul on board; for so he had [2]given orders, intending himself to go on foot. [14] And when he met us at Assos, we took him on board and came to Mitylene. [15] We sailed from there, and the next day came opposite Chios. The following day we arrived at Samos and stayed at Trogyllium. The next day we came to Miletus. [16] For Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus, so that he would not have to spend time in Asia; for [q]he was hurrying [r]to be at Jerusalem, if possible, on [s]the Day of Pentecost.

■ 19:37 neither robbers of temples nor blasphemers of your goddess. These were common charges of Gentiles against Jews and Jewish Christians (Josephus, Antiquities 4.207; Against Apion 2.237).

■ 20:1 departed to go to Macedonia. Paul went up the coast of Asia Minor from Ephesus, either by road or by ship, probably as far as Troas and then by ship to Macedonia (cf. 16:8–10) and Philippi (cf. 16:11–40), visiting groups of believers as he went. While in Macedonia, Paul may have extended his ministry as far as Illyricum (modern Albania; Rom. 15:19).

■ 20:2 came to Greece. Paul arrived at Corinth, where he spent the winter of A.D. 56–57. During this time he wrote Romans (Rom. 15:26; 16:23, 24).

■ 20:4 Paul's traveling companions are listed by name. They may have been official church representatives appointed to travel with Paul to deliver money collected for relief of the Jerusalem church (1 Cor. 16:1–4; 2 Cor. 9:1–5). Sopater may be the "Sosipater" mentioned in Rom. 16:21. Aristarchus had faithfully accompanied Paul during the third missionary journey (19:29), and he accompanied the apostle to Rome (27:2) where he shared Paul's imprisonment (Col. 4:10). Secundus is not mentioned elsewhere in the New Testament. Gaius may be different from the Macedonian Gaius mentioned in 19:29. On Timothy, see Introduction to 1 Timothy: Date and Occasion. Tychicus was later Paul's representative to various churches during the apostle's imprisonments (Eph. 6:21; Col. 4:7–9; 2 Tim. 4:12). Trophimus accompanied Paul to Jerusalem where his presence in the city led to Paul's arrest (21:29). He apparently accompanied Paul after the apostle's release from the first Roman imprisonment (2 Tim. 4:20).

■ 20:5 waited for us. Luke again uses the first person plural pronoun, indicating that he travelled with Paul to Jerusalem.

■ 20:7 first day of the week. Sunday.

to break bread. Since they were gathered together for worship on the first day of the week, the Lord's Day (Rev. 1:10), this celebration included communion (2:42) and was not just a fellowship meal (2:46).

Paul . . . spoke. This was a Sunday evening preaching-teaching service.

■ 20:8–12 Luke records that Eutychus was "taken up dead," the likely result of such a fall. Paul's restoration of the young man to life is one of two such raisings of the dead by apostles recorded in Acts (9:40; cf. Luke 7:11–17; 8:49–56; John 11:1–44).

■ 20:13 sailed to Assos. Paul went by road the twenty miles from Troas to Assos, while Luke went with the ship.

■ 20:15 the next day . . . Chios . . . Samos . . . Miletus. They sailed down the coast to Miletus, about thirty miles south of Ephesus.

The Ephesian Elders Exhorted

17 From Miletus he sent to Ephesus and called for the elders of the church. 18 And when they had come to him, he said to them: "You know, [t]from the first day that I came to Asia, in what manner I always lived among you, 19 serving the Lord with all humility, with many tears and trials which happened to me [u]by the plotting of the Jews; 20 how [v]I kept back nothing that was helpful, but proclaimed it to you, and taught you publicly and from house to house, 21 [w]testifying to Jews, and also to Greeks, [x]repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. 22 And see, now [y]I go bound in the spirit to Jerusalem, not knowing the things that will happen to me there, 23 except that [z]the Holy Spirit testifies in every city, saying that chains and tribulations await me. 24 [3]But [a]none of these things move me; nor do I count my life dear to myself, [b]so that I may finish my [4]race with joy, [c]and the ministry [d]which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify to the gospel of the grace of God.

25 "And indeed, now I know that you all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, will see my face no more. 26 Therefore I testify to you this day that I am [e]innocent[5] of the blood of all men. 27 For I have not [6]shunned to declare to you [f]the whole counsel of God. 28 [g]Therefore take heed to yourselves and to all the flock, among which the Holy Spirit [h]has made you overseers, to shepherd the church [7]of God [i]which He purchased [j]with His own blood. 29 For I know this, that after my departure [k]savage wolves will come in among you, not sparing the flock. 30 Also [l]from among yourselves men will rise up, speaking [8]perverse things, to draw away the disciples after themselves. 31 Therefore watch, and remember that [m]for three years I did not cease to warn everyone night and day with tears.

32 "So now, brethren, I commend you to God and [n]to the word of His grace, which is able [o]to build you up and give you [p]an inheritance among all those who are sanctified. 33 I have coveted no one's silver or gold or apparel. 34 [9]Yes, you yourselves know [q]that these hands have provided for my necessities, and for those who were with me. 35 I have shown you in every way, [r]by laboring like this, that you must support the weak. And remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that He said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' "

36 And when he had said these things, he knelt down and prayed with them all. 37 Then they all [s]wept [t]freely, and [t]fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, 38 sorrowing most of all for the words which he spoke, that they would see his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ship.

Warnings on the Journey to Jerusalem

21 Now it came to pass, that when we had departed from them and set sail, running a straight course we came to Cos, the following day to Rhodes, and from there to Patara. 2 And finding a ship sailing over to Phoenicia, we went aboard and set sail. 3 When we had

■ 20:17 elders. These were the ordained representatives of the Ephesian congregation, called to be overseers and shepherds of the church of God (v. 28; cf. 1 Tim. 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9).

■ 20:20 taught you publicly and from house to house. Paul's teaching during his three-year stay (v. 31) in Ephesus was extensive, including public lectures at the synagogue and the lecture hall of Tyrannus, 19:8–10) as well as more private instruction in homes.

■ 20:21 repentance . . . faith. See note on 3:19. Both Jews and Gentiles must come to God in the same way—in repentance for sin (26:20; Luke 24:47) and faith in Jesus Christ.

■ 20:22 bound in the spirit. Probably this refers to the urging of the Holy Spirit. Such explicit guidance by the Holy Spirit often occurred during Paul's ministry (16:6–10).

■ 20:25 will see my face no more. Paul's statement was based on his own judgment of the situation rather than on divine revelation. Because of continued plots against his life by the Jews (v. 3), the divine revelation that "chains and tribulations" awaited him (v. 23), and his own intention to focus his future ministry on the western Mediterranean (Rom. 15:23–29), Paul considered likely that he was seeing the Ephesian elders for the last time. However, it appears that Paul was later able to return to Ephesus after his release from prison in Rome (1 Tim. 1:3).

■ 20:27 whole counsel of God. The revelation of God culminating in His Son Jesus Christ. Paul did not suppress any truths of the gospel but preached the full gospel to Jew and Gentile. He always used tact and discretion but never compromised the good news.

■ 20:28 with His own blood. The phrasing is remarkable in the way it acknowledges that the blood of Christ is the blood of God. Many ancient manuscripts have a different word order, reading "the blood of His own," that is, of Christ.

■ 20:29 not sparing the flock. See "Pastors and Pastoral Care" at 1 Pet. 5:2.

■ 20:30 from among yourselves. Paul's prophetic warning in this verse was fulfilled as the Ephesian church was soon to be plagued by false teachers, some of whom apparently were leaders of the church (1 Tim. 1:3, 7, 19, 20; 6:3–5; Introduction to 2 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 20:37 kissed him. The ancient practice of the Christian kiss of greeting (Luke 7:45; 1 Thess. 5:26; 1 Pet. 5:14), is still practiced in some cultures today.

■ 21:1 Cos . . . Rhodes . . . Patara. They sailed on a direct course through the islands off the coast of Asia Minor to the port of Patara. The small island of Cos was a free state in the province of Asia. Rhodes, the capital on the north end of the island of Rhodes, was famous and prosperous in the earlier Greek period. Patara, a port on the southwest coast of Asia Minor, was an important harbor for ancient ships sailing the eastern Mediterranean, thus bringing Syria, Palestine, and Egypt into contact with Asia Minor, Macedonia, and Achaia.

■ 21:2 Phoenicia. Syria controlled Phoenicia in the Roman period.

sighted Cyprus, we passed it on the left, sailed to Syria, and landed at Tyre; for there the ship was to unload her cargo. 4 And finding [1]disciples, we stayed there seven days. [a]They told Paul through the Spirit not to go up to Jerusalem. 5 When we had come to the end of those days, we departed and went on our way; and they all accompanied us, with wives and children, till we were out of the city. And [b]we knelt down on the shore and prayed. 6 When we had taken our leave of one another, we boarded the ship, and they returned [c]home.

7 And when we had finished our voyage from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais, greeted the brethren, and stayed with them one day. 8 On the next day we [2]who were Paul's companions departed and came to [d]Caesarea, and entered the house of Philip [e]the evangelist, [f]who was one of the seven, and stayed with him. 9 Now this man had four virgin daughters [g]who prophesied. 10 And as we stayed many days, a certain prophet named [h]Agabus came down from Judea. 11 When he had come to us, he took Paul's belt, bound his own hands and feet, and said, "Thus says the Holy Spirit, [i]'So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man who owns this belt, and deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.' "

12 Now when we heard these things, both we and those from that place pleaded with him not to go up to Jerusalem. 13 Then Paul answered, [j]"What do you mean by weeping and breaking my heart? For I am ready not only to be bound, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."

14 So when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, [k]"The will of the Lord be done."

Paul Urged to Make Peace

15 And after those days we [3]packed and went up to Jerusalem. 16 Also some of the disciples from Caesarea went with us and brought with them a certain Mnason of Cyprus, an early disciple, with whom we were to lodge.

17 [l]And when we had come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly. 18 On the following day Paul went in with us to [m]James, and all the elders were present. 19 When he had greeted them, [n]he told in detail those things which God had done among the Gentiles [o]through his ministry. 20 And when they heard it, they glorified the Lord. And they said to him, "You see, brother, how many myriads of Jews there are who have believed, and they are all [p]zealous for the law; 21 but they have been informed about you that you teach all the Jews who are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children nor to walk according to the customs. 22 [4]What then? The assembly must certainly meet, for they will hear that you have come. 23 Therefore do what we tell you: We have four men who have taken a vow. 24 Take them and be purified with them, and pay their expenses so that they may [q]shave their heads, and that all may know that those things of which they were informed concerning you are nothing, but that you yourself also walk orderly and keep the law. 25 But concerning the Gentiles who believe, [r]we have written and decided [5]that they should observe no such thing, except that they should keep themselves from things offered to idols, from blood, from things strangled, and from [6]sexual immorality."

■ 21:4 through the Spirit. Paul was not disobedient to the Spirit; the Holy Spirit was compelling him to go to Jerusalem (20:22 note). It was "through the Spirit" that Paul's friends learned he was soon to suffer prison and hardship (20:23), and in response to this revelation they tried to persuade Paul "not . . . go up to Jerusalem" (cf. vv. 11, 12).

■ 21:7 Ptolemais. A port twenty-five miles south of Tyre, where the ship unloaded cargo.

■ 21:8 Caesarea. This seaport, built by Herod the Great, was the provincial capital of Judea; it was thirty-two miles south of Ptolemais (10:1 note).

Philip . . . one of the seven. One of the seven chosen to handle the food distribution (6:1–6). He had preached to the Samaritans, the Ethiopian eunuch, and the people along the Palestinian coast (ch. 8).

■ 21:10 prophet named Agabus. The same Agabus who fifteen years earlier prophesied the severe famine in Judea and the surrounding area (11:27, 28).

■ 21:11 says the Holy Spirit. In the first century context of the apostles, Agabus, as a prophet, was led directly by the Spirit to give God's inspired message.

■ 21:15 went up to Jerusalem. Pentecost, the fiftieth day after Passover, was fast approaching (they had spent at least thirty-six days traveling from Philippi to Caesarea, and they had spent several days at Caesarea), and Paul wanted to be at Jerusalem for this feast.

■ 21:20 zealous for the law. Thousands of Jewish Christians in Jerusalem strictly observed the Mosaic law. While many of these no doubt resented the fact that Gentile Christians were not required to observe the ceremonial law of Moses (v. 25; 15:1–31), the charge here was that Paul was encouraging Jews to forsake the law as well (v. 21). Such a charge may have been prompted by reports that Paul himself did not follow the Jewish ceremonial law when in Gentile company. Though Paul had no objection to Jews following their ancestral customs, he opposed any attempt to make such observance in some way necessary for salvation (Rom. 14:1–8; Gal. 5:2–6). Always careful to avoid giving unnecessary offense, Paul's flexibility in such matters shows that the interests of the gospel were always foremost in his mind (1 Cor. 9:19–23).

■ 21:24 be purified . . . expenses. This was the Nazirite vow (Num. 6:1–21), during which the devotee let his hair grow. When the period of the vow was over, he shaved off his hair, dedicated it to the Lord, and burned it together with the sacrifice for the fellowship offering (Num. 6:18). Paul paid the expenses for four Nazirites, went to the priest with them for the sacrifices, and participated in the purification rites. In this way Paul publicly demonstrated that he was a law-abiding Jew.

Arrested in the Temple

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day, having been purified with them, [s]entered the temple [t]to announce the [7]expiration of the days of purification, at which time an offering should be made for each one of them.

27 Now when the seven days were almost ended, [u]the Jews from Asia, seeing him in the temple, stirred up the whole crowd and [v]laid hands on him, 28 crying out, "Men of Israel, help! This is the man [w]who teaches all men everywhere against the people, the law, and this place; and furthermore he also brought Greeks into the temple and has defiled this holy place." 29 (For they had [8]previously seen [x]Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the city, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And [y]all the city was disturbed; and the people ran together, seized Paul, and dragged him out of the temple; and immediately the doors were shut. 31 Now as they were [z]seeking to kill him, news came to the commander of the [9]garrison that all Jerusalem was in an uproar. 32 [a]He immediately took soldiers and centurions, and ran down to them. And when they saw the commander and the soldiers, they stopped beating Paul. 33 Then the [b]commander came near and took him, and [c]commanded him to be bound with two chains; and he asked who he was and what he had done. 34 And some among the multitude cried one thing and some another.

So when he could not ascertain the truth because of the tumult, he commanded him to be taken into the barracks. 35 When he reached the stairs, he had to be carried by the soldiers because of the violence of the mob. 36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying out, [d]"Away with him!"

Addressing the Jerusalem Mob

37 Then as Paul was about to be led into the barracks, he said to the commander, "May I speak to you?"

He replied, "Can you speak Greek? 38 [e]Are you not the Egyptian who some time ago stirred up a rebellion and led the four thousand assassins out into the wilderness?"

39 But Paul said, [f]"I am a Jew from Tarsus, in Cilicia, a citizen of no [1]mean city; and I implore you, permit me to speak to the people."

40 So when he had given him permission, Paul stood on the stairs and [g]motioned with his hand to the people. And when there was a great silence, he spoke to them in the [h]Hebrew language, saying,

22 "Brethren[a] and fathers, hear my defense before you now." 2 And when they heard that he spoke to them in the [b]Hebrew language, they kept all the more silent.

Then he said: 3 [c]"I am indeed a Jew, born in Tarsus of Cilicia, but brought up in this city [d]at the feet of [e]Gamaliel, taught [f]according to the strictness of our fathers' law, and [g]was zealous toward God [h]as you all are today. 4 [i]I persecuted this Way to the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women, 5 as also the high priest bears me witness, and [j]all the council of the elders, [k]from whom I also received letters to the brethren, and went to Damascus [l]to bring in chains even those who were there to Jerusalem to be punished.

6 "Now [m]it happened, as I journeyed and came near Damascus at about noon, suddenly a great light from heaven shone around me. 7 And I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me?' 8 So I answered, 'Who are You, Lord?' And He said to me, 'I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom you are persecuting.'

9 "And [n]those who were with me indeed saw the light [1]and were afraid, but they did not hear the voice of Him who spoke to me. 10 So I said, 'What shall I do, Lord?' And the Lord said to me, 'Arise and go into Damascus, and there you will be told all things which are appointed for you to do.' 11 And since I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of those who were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 "Then [o]a certain Ananias, a devout man according to the law, [p]having a good testimony

■ 21:37 Can you speak Greek. The tribune was surprised to hear Paul speak Greek; he had thought him to be an insurrectionist Jew from Egypt, who three years before had appeared there claiming to be a prophet (Josephus, Jewish War 2.261–263).

■ 21:38 assassins. Lit. "dagger men," militant Jewish nationalists.

■ 21:40 on the stairs. Probably the stairs leading from the temple area to the Antonian Fortress (rebuilt by Herod the Great and named after Mark Antony) on the north edge of the temple platform.

Hebrew language. That is, Aramaic, as commonly spoken by Jews in Palestine, although the priests and Levites would also have known Hebrew. Greek was the common language of the Roman and Mediterranean world.

■ 22:3 Tarsus. An important city, located in Cilicia on the eastern Mediterranean coast north of Cyprus. It was a noted intellectual center.

■ 22:12 Ananias. An appropriate person to meet Saul, who was a zealous Pharisee, "a Hebrew of the Hebrews" (Phil. 3:5, 6). Being known to with all the [q]Jews who dwelt there, [13] came to me; and he stood and said to me, 'Brother Saul, receive your sight.' And at that same hour I looked up at him. [14] Then he said, [r]"The God of our fathers [s]has chosen you that you should [t]know His will, and [u]see the Just One, [v]and hear the voice of His mouth. [15] [w]For you will be His witness to all men of [x]what you have seen and heard. [16] And now why are you waiting? Arise and be baptized, [y]and wash away your sins, [z]calling on the name of the Lord.'

[17] "Now [a]it happened, when I returned to Jerusalem and was praying in the temple, that I was in a trance [18] and [b]saw Him saying to me, [c]'Make haste and get out of Jerusalem quickly, for they will not receive your testimony concerning Me.' [19] So I said, 'Lord, [d]they know that in every synagogue I imprisoned and [e]beat those who believe on You. [20] [f]And when the blood of Your martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by [g]consenting [2]to his death, and guarding the clothes of those who were killing him.' [21] Then He said to me, 'Depart, [h]for I will send you far from here to the Gentiles.' "

Paul's Roman Citizenship

[22] And they listened to him until this word, and then they raised their voices and said, [i]"Away with such a fellow from the earth, for [j]he is not fit to live!" [23] Then, as they cried out and [3]tore off their clothes and threw dust into the air, [24] the commander ordered him to be brought into the barracks, and said that he should be examined under scourging, so that he might know why they shouted so against him. [25] And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said to the centurion who stood by, [k]"Is it lawful for you to scourge a man who is a Roman, and uncondemned?"

[26] When the centurion heard that, he went and told the commander, saying, "Take care what you do, for this man is a Roman."

[27] Then the commander came and said to him, "Tell me, are you a Roman?"

He said, "Yes."

[28] The commander answered, "With a large sum I obtained this citizenship."

And Paul said, "But I was born a citizen."

[29] Then immediately those who were about to examine him withdrew from him; and the commander was also afraid after he found out that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

The Sanhedrin Divided

[30] The next day, because he wanted to know for certain why he was accused by the Jews, he released him from his bonds, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down and set him before them.

23 Then Paul, looking earnestly at the council, said, "Men and brethren, [a]I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." [2] And the high priest Ananias commanded those who stood by him [b]to strike him on the mouth. [3] Then Paul said to him, "God will strike you, you whitewashed wall! For you sit to judge me according to the law, and [c]do you command me to be struck contrary to the law?"

[4] And those who stood by said, "Do you revile God's high priest?"

[5] Then Paul said, [d]"I did not know, brethren, that he was the high priest; for it is written, [e]'You shall not speak evil of a ruler of your people.'"

[6] But when Paul perceived that one part were Sadducees and the other Pharisees, he cried out Ananias would recommend Paul to other Jews in the city who would otherwise be suspicious of him (9:10–19).

■ 22:16 be baptized. Baptism in the New Testament is an outward sign of an inward cleansing. As such, it parallels circumcision in the Old Testament (Deut. 10:16; 30:6; Ezek. 44:7).

■ 22:24 scourging. The Roman scourge was a whip of leather thongs loaded with bits of metal or bone; it could maim for life or kill. Jesus was scourged with such a whip (John 19:1). Paul had been beaten (2 Cor. 11:24, 25) but had never endured this particular punishment.

■ 22:25 bound him. The soldiers either stretched Paul's arms around a pole to expose his back or tied his hands and hoisted him from the ground to administer the whipping.

■ 22:26 Roman. Paul appealed again to his Roman citizenship, knowing that he was going to be punished without trial (16:37). Roman citizenship was highly prized, usually given only to those of high position or those who had performed some valuable service to the state. It was then passed on to one's family.

■ 23:2 high priest Ananias. Son of Nebedaeus, a brutal and violent man who ruled as high priest from A.D. 48–59. This is not the earlier Annas of John 18:13. Ananias was assassinated early in the the war with Rome (A.D. 66–70).

■ 23:3 you whitewashed wall. Tombs were often whitewashed to make them more visible (Matt. 23:27, 28). Paul paid a fitting tribute to a corrupt official.

contrary to the law. According to Jewish law, Paul had to be tried and found guilty before being punished.

■ 23:6 Sadducees . . . Pharisees. These two groups emerged during the period between the Old and New Testaments. They had different political and religious views. Paul seized the opportunity to emphasize their religious differences by identifying himself as a Pharisee and a believer in the resurrection of the dead, against the Sadducees who denied the resurrection and the existence of angels and spirits (Matt. 22:23–32).

in the council, "Men and brethren, [f]I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; [g]concerning the hope and resurrection of the dead I am being judged!"

7 And when he had said this, a dissension arose between the Pharisees and the Sadducees; and the assembly was divided. 8 [h]For Sadducees say that there is no resurrection—and no angel or spirit; but the Pharisees confess both. 9 Then there arose a loud outcry. And the scribes of the Pharisees' party arose and protested, saying, [i]"We find no evil in this man; [j]but [j]if a spirit or an angel has spoken to him, [k]let us not fight against God."

10 Now when there arose a great dissension, the commander, fearing lest Paul might be pulled to pieces by them, commanded the soldiers to go down and take him by force from among them, and bring him into the barracks.

The Plot Against Paul

11 But [l]the following night the Lord stood by him and said, [2]"Be of good cheer, Paul; for as you have testified for Me in [m]Jerusalem, so you must also bear witness at [n]Rome."

12 And when it was day, [o]some of the Jews banded together and bound themselves under an oath, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had [p]killed Paul. 13 Now there were more than forty who had formed this conspiracy. 14 They came to the chief priests and [q]elders, and said, "We have bound ourselves under a great oath that we will eat nothing until we have killed Paul. 15 Now you, therefore, together with the council, suggest to the commander that he be brought down to you [3]tomorrow, as though you were going to make further inquiries concerning him; but we are ready to kill him before he comes near."

16 So when Paul's sister's son heard of their ambush, he went and entered the barracks and told Paul. 17 Then Paul called one of the centurions to him and said, "Take this young man to the commander, for he has something to tell him." 18 So he took him and brought him to the commander and said, "Paul the prisoner called me to him and asked me to bring this young man to you. He has something to say to you."

19 Then the commander took him by the hand, went aside, and asked privately, "What is it that you have to tell me?"

20 And he said, [r]"The Jews have agreed to ask that you bring Paul down to the council tomorrow, as though they were going to inquire more fully about him. 21 But do not yield to them, for more than forty of them lie in wait for him, men who have bound themselves by an oath that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him; and now they are ready, waiting for the promise from you."

22 So the commander let the young man depart, and commanded him, "Tell no one that you have revealed these things to me."

Sent to Felix

23 And he called for two centurions, saying, "Prepare two hundred soldiers, seventy horsemen, and two hundred spearmen to go to [s]Caesarea at the third hour of the night; 24 and provide mounts to set Paul on, and bring him safely to Felix the governor." 25 He wrote a letter in the following manner:

26 Claudius Lysias,

To the most excellent governor Felix:

■ 23:23, 24 Heavily equipped infantry and cavalry delivered Paul safely to Felix, the procurator of the imperial province of Judea. The official provincial headquarters was at Caesarea.

■ 23:26 governor Felix. Felix was a former slave, and as a freedman had ascended to an influential position in the Roman government. In A.D. 52, the emperor Claudius sent him as governor to Caesarea. Felix was addressed as "most noble Felix" (24:3) during his eight-year administration. The Roman historian Tacitus said that Felix "occupied the office of a king while having the mind of a slave, saturated with cruelty and lust" (History 5.9).

Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, as they were commanded, took Paul and brought him by night to Antipatris. 32 The next day they left the horsemen to go on with him, and returned to the barracks. 33 When they came to [z]Caesarea and had delivered the [a]letter to the governor, they also presented Paul to him. 34 And when the governor had read it, he asked what province he was from. And when he understood that he was from [b]Cilicia, 35 he said, [c]"I will hear you when your accusers also have come." And he commanded him to be kept in [d]Herod's [5]Praetorium.

Accused of Sedition

24 Now after [a]five days [b]Ananias the high priest came down with the elders and a certain orator named Tertullus. These gave evidence to the governor against Paul.

2 And when he was called upon, Tertullus began his accusation, saying: "Seeing that through you we enjoy great peace, and [1]prosperity is being brought to this nation by your foresight, 3 we accept it always and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness. 4 Nevertheless, not to be tedious to you any further, I beg you to hear, by your [2]courtesy, a few words from us. 5 [c]For we have found this man a plague, a creator of dissension among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes. 6 [d]He even tried to profane the temple, and we seized him, [3]and wanted [e]to judge him according to our law. 7 [f]But the commander Lysias came by and with great violence took him out of our hands, 8 [g]commanding his accusers to come to you. By examining him yourself you may ascertain all these things of which we accuse him." 9 And the Jews also [4]assented, maintaining that these things were so.

The Defense Before Felix

10 Then Paul, after the governor had nodded to him to speak, answered: "Inasmuch as I know that you have been for many years a judge of this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself, 11 because you may ascertain that it is no more than twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem [h]to worship. 12 [i]And they neither found me in the temple disputing with anyone nor inciting the crowd, either in the synagogues or in the city. 13 Nor can they prove the things of which they now accuse me. 14 But this I confess to you, that according to [j]the Way which they call a sect, so I worship the [k]God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in [l]the Law and in the Prophets. 15 [m]I have hope in God, which they themselves also accept, [n]that there will be a resurrection [5]of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. 16 [o]This being so, I myself always strive to have a conscience without offense toward God and men.

17 "Now after many years [p]I came to bring alms and offerings to my nation, 18 [q]in the midst of which some Jews from Asia found me [r]purified in the temple, neither with a mob nor with tumult. 19 [s]They ought to have been here before you to object if they had anything against me. 20 Or else let those who are here themselves say [6]if they found any wrongdoing in me while I stood before the council, 21 unless it is for this one statement which I cried out, standing among them, [t]'Concerning the resurrection of the dead I am being judged by you this day.' ■ 24:21 the resurrection of the dead. Paul made one critical statement that pertained not to Roman political interests but to Jewish and Christian theology.

Felix Procrastinates

22 But when Felix heard these things, having more accurate knowledge of the [u]Way, he adjourned the proceedings and said, "When [v]Lysias the commander comes down, I will make a decision on your case." 23 So he commanded the centurion to keep Paul and to let him have liberty, and [w]told him not to forbid any of his friends to provide for or visit him.

24 And after some days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, who was Jewish, he sent for Paul and heard him concerning the [x]faith in Christ. 25 Now as he reasoned about righteousness, self-control, and the judgment to come. Felix was afraid and answered, "Go away for now; when I have a convenient time I will call for you." 26 Meanwhile he also hoped that [y]money would be given him by Paul, [7]that he might release him. Therefore he sent for him more often and conversed with him.

27 But after two years Porcius Festus succeeded Felix; and Felix, [z]wanting to do the Jews a favor, left Paul bound.

Paul Appeals to Caesar

25 Now when Festus had come to the province, after three days he went up from [a]Caesarea to Jerusalem. 2 [b]Then the [l]high priest and the chief men of the Jews informed him against Paul; and they petitioned him, 3 asking a favor against him, that he would summon him to Jerusalem—[c]while they lay in ambush along the road to kill him. 4 But Festus answered that Paul should be kept at Caesarea, and that he himself was going there shortly. 5 "Therefore," he said, "let those who have authority among you go down with me and accuse this man, to see [d]if there is any fault in him."

6 And when he had remained among them more than ten days, he went down to Caesarea. And the next day, sitting on the judgment seat, he commanded Paul to be brought. 7 When he had come, the Jews who had come down from Jerusalem stood about [e]and laid many serious complaints against Paul, which they could not prove, 8 while he answered for himself, [f]"Neither against the law of the Jews, nor against the temple, nor against Caesar have I offended in anything at all."

9 But Festus, [g]wanting to do the Jews a favor, answered Paul and said, [h]"Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem and there be judged before me concerning these things?"

10 So Paul said, "I stand at Caesar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged. To the Jews I have done no wrong, as you very well know. 11 [i]For if I am an offender, or have committed anything deserving of death, I do not object to dying; but if there is nothing in these things of which these men accuse me, no one can deliver me to them. [j]I appeal to Caesar."

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, "You have appealed to Caesar? To Caesar you shall go!"

Paul Before Agrippa

13 And after some days King Agrippa and Bernice came to Caesarea to greet Festus. 14 When they had been there many days, Festus laid Paul's case before the king, saying: [k]"There is a certain man left a prisoner by Felix, 15 [l]about whom the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, when I was in Jerusalem, asking for a judgment against him. 16 [m]To them I answered, 'It is not the custom of the Romans to deliver any man [2]to destruction before the accused meets the accusers face to face, and has opportunity to answer for himself concerning the charge against him.' 17 Therefore when they had come together, [n]without any delay, the next day I sat on the judgment seat and commanded the man to be brought in. 18 When the accusers stood up, they brought no accusation against him of such things as I [3]supposed, 19 [o]but had some questions against him about their own religion and about a certain Jesus, who had died, whom

■ 24:23 keep Paul . . . liberty. As a Roman citizen whose case was still pending, Paul was given some freedom (28:16).

■ 24:24 Drusilla. Daughter of Herod Agrippa I (12:1–23) and sister of Herod Agrippa II (25:13; 26:3 note) and Bernice (25:13 note), Drusilla left Azizus, king of Emesa in Syria, to marry Felix. She probably died along with her son Agrippa in the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius at Pompeii, A.D. 79.

■ 24:27 Porcius Festus. Festus from a noble family in Rome. Though Felix had been greedy and evil, Festus was wise and honorable.

■ 25:4 Felix had to protect Paul while he was in Roman custody and he refused the request of the Jews, saving Paul from their plot.

■ 25:11 I appeal to Caesar. Fearing that Festus was going to grant the Jews their request, Paul exercised his right as a Roman citizen to be tried before Caesar (Nero) in Rome. At this time Nero was under the benevolent influence of the Stoic philosopher Seneca, and had not yet shown his hostility to Christianity. Paul could hope to be acquitted by Nero.

■ 25:13 King Agrippa. This was Herod Agrippa II, son of Agrippa I and great-grandson of Herod the Great (26:3 note).

Bernice. The oldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I, Bernice was twice widowed before entering into an incestuous relationship with her brother, Paul affirmed to be alive. 20 And because I was uncertain of such questions, I asked whether he was willing to go to Jerusalem and there be judged concerning these matters. 21 But when Paul [p]appealed to be reserved for the decision of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I could send him to Caesar."

22 Then [q]Agrippa said to Festus, "I also would like to hear the man myself."

"Tomorrow," he said, "you shall hear him."

23 So the next day, when Agrippa and Bernice had come with great [4]pomp, and had entered the auditorium with the commanders and the prominent men of the city, at Festus' command [r]Paul was brought in. 24 And Festus said: "King Agrippa and all the men who are here present with us, you see this man about whom [s]the whole assembly of the Jews petitioned me, both at Jerusalem and here, crying out that he was [t]not fit to live any longer. 25 But when I found that [u]he had committed nothing deserving of death, [v]and that he himself had appealed to Augustus, I decided to send him. 26 I have nothing certain to write to my lord concerning him. Therefore I have brought him out before you, and especially before you, King Agrippa, so that after the examination has taken place I may have something to write. 27 For it seems to me unreasonable to send a prisoner and not to specify the charges against him."

Paul's Early Life

26 Then Agrippa said to Paul, "You are permitted to speak for yourself."

So Paul stretched out his hand and answered for himself: 2 "I think myself [a]happy, King Agrippa, because today I shall answer [b]for myself before you concerning all the things of which I am [c]accused by the Jews, 3 especially because you are expert in all customs and questions which have to do with the Jews. Therefore I beg you to hear me patiently.

4 "My manner of life from my youth, which was spent from the beginning among my own nation at Jerusalem, all the Jews know. 5 They knew me from the first, if they were willing to testify, that according to [d]the strictest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee. 6 [e]And now I stand and am judged for the hope of [f]the promise made by God to our fathers. 7 To this promise [g]our twelve tribes, earnestly serving God [h]night and day, [i]hope to attain. For this hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused by the Jews. 8 Why should it be thought incredible by you that God raises the dead?

9 [j]"Indeed, I myself thought I must do many things [l]contrary to the name of [k]Jesus of Nazareth. 10 [l]This I also did in Jerusalem, and many of the saints I shut up in prison, having received authority [m]from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I cast my vote against them. 11 [n]And I punished them often in every synagogue and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly enraged against them, I persecuted them even to foreign cities.

Paul Recounts His Conversion

12 [o]"While thus occupied, as I journeyed to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests, 13 at midday, O king, along the road I saw a light from heaven, brighter than the sun, shining around me and those who journeyed with me. 14 And when we all had fallen to the ground, I heard a voice speaking to me and saying in the Hebrew language, 'Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.' 15 So I said, 'Who are You, Lord?' And He said, 'I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting. 16 But rise and stand on your feet; for I have appeared to you for this purpose, [p]to make you a minister and a witness both of the things which you have seen and of the things which I will yet reveal to you. 17 I will [2]deliver you from the Jewish people, as well as from the Gentiles, [q]to whom I [3]now send you, 18 [r]to open their eyes, in order [s]to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, [t]that they may receive forgiveness of sins and [u]an inheritance among those who are [v]sanctified[4] by faith in Me.'

Herod Agrippa II. Despite the scandal of this relationship, she was frequently presented as Herod's queen on official occasions (e.g., vv. 13, 23).

■ 26:3 expert in all customs and questions . . . with the Jews. As the great-grandson of Herod the Great and son of Herod Agrippa I, who had persecuted the church (12:1–23), Herod Agrippa II (A.D. 27–c. 100) had an intimate knowledge of Jewish matters. Although influential in Jewish religious affairs because he had political authority to appoint the high priest, Agrippa II was unpopular with the Jews because of his incestuous relationship with his sister Bernice (25:13 note).

■ 26:5 strictest sect . . . I lived a Pharisee. Knowing the background of Agrippa, Paul stressed his dependence on the God of his fathers (cf. 24:14) and his link with the Pharisees (Phil. 3:5, 6) to show the legitimacy of the Judaism. Paul argued that God had promised the resurrection of the body. Although this was the belief of Jews in general and the Pharisees in particular, it was being used as the basis of charges against him.

■ 26:12–14 Paul's experience on the road to Damascus (9:1–19) was so important to him that he recounted it twice, once before the Jewish crowd in Jerusalem (22:6–16), and again before this mainly pagan audience in Caesarea.

Paul's Post-Conversion Life

19 "Therefore, King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, 20 but [w]declared first to those in Damascus and in Jerusalem, and throughout all the region of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent, turn to God, and do [x]works befitting repentance. 21 For these reasons the Jews seized me in the temple and tried to kill me. 22 Therefore, having obtained help from God, to this day I stand, witnessing both to small and great, saying no other things than those [y]which the prophets and [z]Moses said would come— 23 [a]that the Christ would suffer, [b]that He would be the first to rise from the dead, and [c]would proclaim light to the Jewish people and to the Gentiles."

Agrippa Parries Paul's Challenge

24 Now as he thus made his defense, Festus said with a loud voice, "Paul, [d]you are beside yourself! Much learning is driving you mad!"

25 But he said, "I am not [5]mad, most noble Festus, but speak the words of truth and reason. 26 For the king, before whom I also speak freely, [e]knows these things; for I am convinced that none of these things escapes his attention, since this thing was not done in a corner. 27 King Agrippa, do you believe the prophets? I know that you do believe."

Repentance

Repentance means changing one's mind, so that one's views, values, goals, and ways are changed, and one's whole life is lived differently. Mind and judgment, will and affections, behavior and lifestyle, motives and plans: all are involved. Repenting means starting to live a new life.

The call to repent was the fundamental summons in the preaching of John the Baptist (Matt. 3:2), Jesus (Matt. 4:17), the Twelve (Mark 6:12), Peter at Pentecost (Acts 2:38), Paul to the Gentiles (Acts 17:30; 26:20), and the glorified Christ to five of the seven churches in Asia (Rev. 2:5, 16, 22; 3:3, 19). It was part of Jesus' summary of the gospel that was to be taken to all the world (Luke 24:47). It corresponds to the constant summons of the Old Testament prophets to Israel to return to the God from whom they had strayed (e.g., Jer. 23:22; 25:4, 5; Zech. 1:3–6). Repentance is always set forth as the path to remission of sins and restoration to God's favor, while impenitence is the road to ruin (e.g., Luke 13:1–8).

Faith and repentance are themselves fruits of regeneration. But as a practical matter, repentance is inseparable from faith. Turning towards Christ in faith is impossible without turning away from sin in repentance. The idea that there can be saving faith without repentance, and that one can be justified by embracing Christ as Savior while refusing Him as Lord, is a dangerous error. True faith acknowledges Christ as what He is, our God-appointed king as well as our God-given priest, and faith that trusts in Him as Savior will submit to Him as Lord also. To refuse this is to seek justification with an impenitent faith, which is no faith.

The Westminster Confession says that in repenting > a sinner, out of the sight and sense, not only of the danger, but also the filthiness and odiousness of his sins, as contrary to the holy nature and righteous law of God, and upon the apprehension of His mercy in Christ to such as are penitent, so grieves for and hates his sins as to turn from them all unto God, purposing and endeavoring to walk with Him in all the ways of His commandments (Westminster Confession, 15.2).

Feelings of remorse, self-reproach, and sorrow for sin generated by fear of punishment, without any wish or resolve to forsake sinning should not be confused with repentance. David expresses true repentance in Ps. 51, having in his heart the serious purpose of sinning no more, and of living a righteous life (Luke 3:8; Acts 26:20). □

■ 26:20 See 2:38; 3:19 and note; 17:20; 20:21; theological note "Repentance."

■ 26:23 Christ would suffer . . . rise from the dead. The Jews had difficulty accepting the idea that the Messiah would suffer and die. Jesus and His apostles taught this doctrine from the Scriptures (17:2, 3; Luke 24:27; 1 Cor. 15:3, 4), yet the Jews rejected it, arrested Paul, and wanted to kill him.

■ 26:27 do you believe the prophets. Agrippa faced a dilemma: if he said no, he would anger the Jews; if he said yes, he would lose face because Paul would ask him to believe the gospel.

28 Then Agrippa said to Paul, "You almost persuade me to become a Christian."
29 And Paul said, [f]"I would to God that not only you, but also all who hear me today, might become both almost and altogether such as I am, except for these chains."
30 When he had said these things, the king stood up, as well as the governor and Bernice and those who sat with them; 31 and when they had gone aside, they talked among themselves, saying, [g]"This man is doing nothing deserving of death or chains."
32 Then Agrippa said to Festus, "This man might have been set [h]free [i]if he had not appealed to Caesar."

The Voyage to Rome Begins

27 And when [a]it was decided that we should sail to Italy, they delivered Paul and some other prisoners to one named Julius, a centurion of the Augustan Regiment. 2 So, entering a ship of Adramyttium, we put to sea, meaning to sail along the coasts of Asia. [b]Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, was with us. 3 And the next day we landed at Sidon. And Julius [c]treated Paul kindly and gave him liberty to go to his friends and receive care. 4 When we had put to sea from there, we sailed under the shelter of Cyprus, because the winds were contrary. 5 And when we had sailed over the sea which is off Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia. 6 There the centurion found [d]an Alexandrian ship sailing to Italy, and he put us on board.
7 When we had sailed slowly many days, and arrived with difficulty off Cnidus, the wind not permitting us to proceed, we sailed under the shelter of [e]Crete off Salmone. 8 Passing it with difficulty, we came to a place called Fair Havens, near the city of Lasea.

■ 26:28 You almost persuade me to become a Christian. The king used a delaying tactic, arguing that a half-hour speech is insufficient time to become a Christian. In the first century, "Christian" (cf. 11:26) was probably a term of contempt (1 Pet. 4:16).

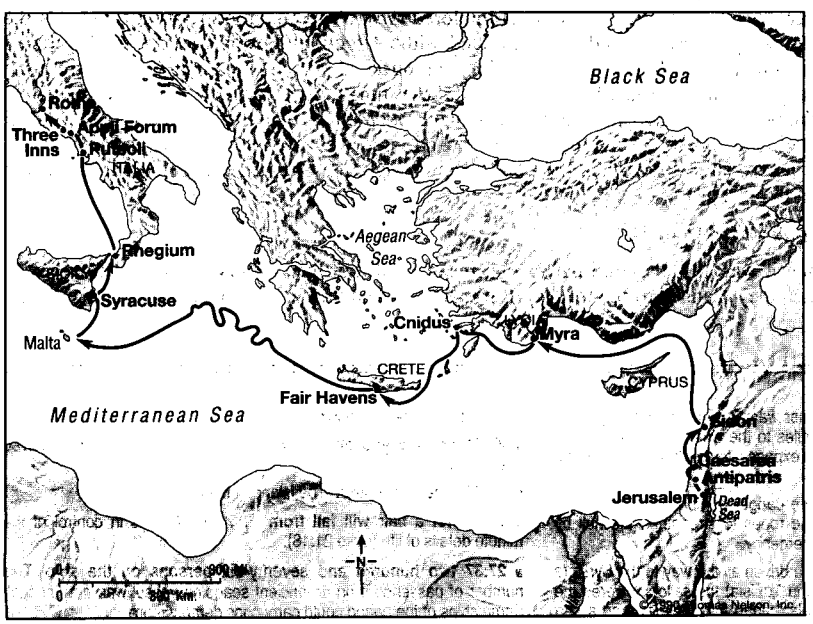
Aristarchus . . . us. Paul had two companions with him: Luke as his physician (Col. 4:14) and Aristarchus (Col. 4:10; Philem. 24) from Thessalonica, probably his attendant.

■ 27:3 landed at Sidon. An eastern Mediterranean port, today in Lebanon.

■ 27:4 under the shelter of Cyprus. That is, close under the eastern point of the island in order to be protected from the westerly winds of the summer and fall.

■ 27:5 off Cilicia and Pamphylia. The ship went up the Syrian coast, past Antioch of Syria and then west to Myra. Myra was an important port of call for grain ships sailing between Alexandria and Rome.



On to Rome (Paul's Fourth Journey, Acts 27:1—28:16). In Jerusalem following his third missionary journey, Paul struggled with Jews who accused him of profaning the temple (Acts 21:26–34). He was placed in Roman custody in Caesarea for two years, but after appealing to Caesar, was sent by ship to Rome. After departing the island of Crete, Paul's party was shipwrecked on Malta by a great storm. Three months later he finally arrived at the imperial city.

Paul's Warning Ignored

9 Now when much time had been spent, and sailing was now dangerous [f]because [1]the Fast was already over, Paul advised them, 10 saying, "Men, I perceive that this voyage will end with disaster and much loss, not only of the cargo and ship, but also our lives." 11 Nevertheless the centurion was more persuaded by the helmsman and the owner of the ship than by the things spoken by Paul. 12 And because the harbor was not suitable to winter in, the majority advised to set sail from there also, if by any means they could reach Phoenix, a harbor of Crete opening toward the southwest and northwest, and winter there.

In the Tempest

13 When the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their desire, putting out to sea, they sailed close by Crete. 14 But not long after, a tempestuous head wind arose, called [2]Euroclydon. 15 So when the ship was caught, and could not head into the wind, we let her [3]drive. 16 And running under the shelter of an island called [4]Clauda, we secured the skiff with difficulty. 17 When they had taken it on board, they used cables to undergird the ship; and fearing lest they should run aground on the [5]Syrtis Sands, they struck sail and so were driven. 18 And because we were exceedingly tempest-tossed, the next day they lightened the ship. 19 On the third day [g]we threw the ship's tackle overboard with our own hands. 20 Now when neither sun nor stars appeared for many days, and no small tempest beat on us, all hope that we would be saved was finally given up.

21 But after long abstinence from food, then Paul stood in the midst of them and said, "Men, you should have listened to me, and not have sailed from Crete and incurred this disaster and loss. 22 And now I urge you to take [6]heart, for there will be no loss of life among you, but only of the ship. 23 [h]For there stood by me this night an angel of the God to whom I belong and [i]whom I serve, 24 saying, 'Do not be afraid, Paul; you must be brought before Caesar; and indeed God has granted you all those who sail with you.' 25 Therefore take heart, men, [j]for I believe God that it will be just as it was told me. 26 However, [k]we must run aground on a certain island."

27 Now when the fourteenth night had come, as we were driven up and down in the Adriatic Sea, about midnight the sailors sensed that they were drawing near some land. 28 And they took soundings and found it to be twenty fathoms; and when they had gone a little farther, they took soundings again and found it to be fifteen fathoms. 29 Then, fearing lest we should run aground on the rocks, they dropped four anchors from the stern, and [7]prayed for day to come. 30 And as the sailors were seeking to escape from the ship, when they had let down the skiff into the sea, under pretense of putting out anchors from the prow, 31 Paul said to the centurion and the soldiers, "Unless these men stay in the ship, you cannot be saved." 32 Then the soldiers cut away the ropes of the skiff and let it fall off.

33 And as day was about to dawn, Paul implored them all to take food, saying, "Today is the fourteenth day you have waited and continued without food, and eaten nothing. 34 Therefore I urge you to take nourishment, for this is for your survival, [l]since not a hair will fall from the head of any of you." 35 And when he had said these things, he took bread and [m]gave thanks to God in the presence of them all; and when he had broken it he began to eat. 36 Then they were all encouraged, and also took food themselves. 37 And in all we were two hundred and seventy-six [n]persons on the ship. 38 So when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship and threw out the wheat into the sea.

Shipwrecked on Malta

39 When it was day, they did not recognize the land; but they observed a bay with a beach, onto which they planned to run the ship if possible. 40 And they [8]let go the anchors and left them

■ 27:11, 12 The captain and the owner wanted to reach the larger and safer harbor of Phoenix about forty miles to the west, but in going west past Cape Matala the ship would be exposed to winds from the northwest.

■ 27:17 used cables. Because of the danger of violent storms on the Mediterranean, ancient vessels carried ropes to strengthen the hull by being tied around it sideways in an emergency.

struck sail. Fearing that they might be driven all the way to the Syrtis (a region of sands near modern Libya and Tunisia) the sailors lowered the sail. The description in Greek could also mean that they lowered a sea anchor to slow the ship down.

■ 27:24 granted you all . . . with you. In His kindness God saved everyone in the ship.

■ 27:26 a certain island. The island of Malta, south of Sicily.

■ 27:34 not a hair will fall from . . . any. God is in control of the minute details of life (Luke 21:18).

■ 27:37 two hundred and seventy-six persons on the ship. This number of passengers on an ancient seagoing vessel was not unusual. Some ships of the period could carry considerably more.

in the sea, meanwhile loosing the rudder ropes; and they hoisted the mainsail to the wind and made for shore. 41 But striking [g]a place where two seas met, [o]they ran the ship aground; and the prow stuck fast and remained immovable, but the stern was being broken up by the violence of the waves.

42 And the soldiers' plan was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim away and escape. 43 But the centurion, wanting to save Paul, kept them from their purpose, and commanded that those who could swim should jump overboard first and get to land, 44 and the rest, some on boards and some on parts of the ship. And so it was [p]that they all escaped safely to land.

Paul's Ministry on Malta

28 Now when they had escaped, they then found out that [a]the island was called Malta. 2 And the [b]natives[r] showed us unusual kindness; for they kindled a fire and made us all welcome, because of the rain that was falling and because of the cold. 3 But when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks and laid them on the fire, a viper came out because of the heat, and fastened on his hand. 4 So when the natives saw the creature hanging from his hand, they said to one another, "No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he has escaped the sea, yet justice does not allow to live." 5 But he shook off the creature into the fire and [c]suffered no harm. 6 However, they were expecting that he would swell up or suddenly fall down dead. But after they had looked for a long time and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds and [d]said that he was a god.

7 In that region there was an estate of the [z]leading citizen of the island, whose name was Publius, who received us and entertained us courteously for three days. 8 And it happened that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and dysentery. Paul went in to him and [e]prayed, and [f]he laid his hands on him and healed him. 9 So when this was done, the rest of those on the island who had diseases also came and were healed. 10 They also honored us in many [g]ways; and when we departed, they provided such things as were [h]necessary.

Arrival at Rome

11 After three months we sailed in [i]an Alexandrian ship whose figurehead was the [3]Twin Brothers, which had wintered at the island. 12 And landing at Syracuse, we stayed three days. 13 From there we circled round and reached Rhegium. And after one day the south wind blew; and the next day we came to Puteoli, 14 where we found [j]brethren, and were invited to stay with them seven days. And so we went toward Rome. 15 And from there, when the brethren heard about us, they came to meet us as far as Appii Forum and Three Inns. When Paul saw them, he thanked God and took courage.

16 Now when we came to Rome, the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard; but [k]Paul was permitted to dwell by himself with the soldier who guarded him.

Paul's Ministry at Rome

17 And it came to pass after three days that Paul called the leaders of the Jews together. So when they had come together, he said to them: "Men and brethren, [l]though I have done nothing against our people or the customs of our fathers, yet [m]I was delivered as a prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans, 18 who, [n]when they had examined me, wanted to let me go, because there was no cause for putting me to death. 19 But when the [4]Jews spoke against it, [o]I

■ 27:41 But striking a place where two seas met. See text note. This is the narrow channel in St. Paul's Bay between Malta and the island of Salmonetta, where the currents create sandbars. This sort of nautical detail indicates that Luke was an eyewitness of the event.

■ 28:1 Malta. Ancient Melita (the name means "a place of refuge") was settled by Phoenicians who came there about 1000 B.C. Malta measures 8 by 18 miles and is 60 miles south of Sicily and 180 miles northeast of Cyrene, North Africa.

■ 28:3–5 Being cold-blooded, snakes can become stiff and motionless in cold weather, and Paul must have picked up the serpent along with the brush. Some have suggested that the snake was nonpoisonous, but the Greek word translated "creature" in v. 4 is one applied to dangerous animals and poisonous snakes, and there is little reason to doubt the islanders' identification of the snake as poisonous.

■ 28:6 they changed their minds. There is some irony in the islanders' reappraisal of Paul's character—from murderer destined for death to that of a god. This recalls the events in Lystra, where first the people hailed Paul and Barnabas as gods, and then nearly stoned Paul to death (14:11–20).

■ 28:7 leading citizen . . . Publius. See text note. Octavius Augustus installed a Roman governor on Malta who according to inscriptions was "the chief man over all the municipality of Malta". This fits Luke's description of Publius as "the leading citizen of the island." Publius showed the visitors hospitality at his island estate.

■ 28:8 sick of a fever and dysentery. The Greek words suggest repeated feverish attacks. The ailment has been diagnosed in modern times as Malta fever, caused by the milk of Maltese goats.

■ 28:16 dwell by himself . . . guarded. Under house arrest, Paul lived in his own rented home. There he could entertain his friends and minister to groups such as the Roman Jews.

"Hearing you will hear, and shall not understand;
And seeing you will see, and not perceive;
27 For the hearts of this people have grown dull.
Their ears are hard of hearing,
And their eyes they have closed.
Lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears,
Lest they should understand with their hearts and turn,
So that I should heal them."'

31 [x]Acts 4:31; Eph. 6:19

■ 28:30, 31 From A.D. 60–62 Paul was under house arrest preaching and teaching to anyone who wanted to hear. His subject is summarized as the kingdom of God and Jesus Christ. At the end of Acts, Paul has not yet been tried before Nero, as the Lord said was going to happen (27:24). It appears that Paul expected to be acquitted and released (Phil. 1:25; 2:24; Philem. 22). This must have occurred before A.D. 64, when Nero set fire to Rome and accused Christians of that crime. When released, Paul seems to have taken up his ministry again, going as far as Greece (Nicopolis, Titus 3:12; Thessalonica, 2 Tim. 4:10), Crete (Titus 1:5), and Asia Minor (Ephesus, 2 Tim. 1:18; 4:12; Troas, 2 Tim. 4:13; Miletus, 2 Tim. 4:20). Possibly he went as far west as Spain (Rom. 15:23, 24, 28), as the first-century writing 1 Clement may indicate. About A.D. 67, Paul was imprisoned again by Nero and executed. In 2 Tim. 4:6–8, Paul anticipates the end of his life.

■ 28:31 with all confidence, no one forbidding him. For Paul, Luke, and those who followed, the message about Jesus and the glorious kingdom of God was to go on in triumph.

Introduction to the

EPISTLES

Of the twenty-seven books in the New Testament, twenty-one are letters written either to individual churches (Philippians, 2 John), groups of churches (Galatians, 1 Peter), or specific persons (Philemon, 3 John). Two other books contain letters within them (Acts 15:22–29; Rev. 1:4—3:22). Clearly this style of writing has a prominent place in the New Testament. However, beginning with the apostle Paul, Christians not only used but also modified the conventions of letter writing followed in Hellenistic culture. To better understand the epistles of the New Testament, it is helpful to consider the functions and conventions of letter writing in the Greco-Roman world, as well as how the apostles used and adapted that literary tradition.

Greek and Roman Letter Writing. Letter writing has a long history in the ancient Near East. It began as a means of official communication for military affairs and governmental administration, and examples of such letters may be found even in the Old Testament (2 Sam. 11:14, 15; Ezra 4:6–23; 7:11–26). With the development of paper made from papyrus, letter writing became a more common form of communication, but even then it was complicated by the restriction of the postal couriers to government correspondence. The rich could dispatch servants to deliver their letters, but most people had to rely on the travels of friends or even strangers to carry their mail.

Letter writing in the New Testament era was almost exclusively a product of previously existing relationships; people wrote to family members or others whom they had already met personally. Their letters were meant to fulfill three basic purposes: to provide basic or necessary information, to make requests of a social superior or give instructions to a subordinate, and to maintain and develop the personal relationship between the correspondents. The letter served as a substitute for the actual presence of the writer. Very often if the courier who delivered the letter was well known to the formal correspondents, he or she would expand or clarify the contents of the letter (cf. 1 Cor. 1:11; 7:1).

The form of Hellenistic letters had three major components: an opening, body, and conclusion. The opening and conclusion were primarily concerned with the personal relationship between the correspondents, and their language can reveal much about that relationship. When writing to a social equal or subordinate, it was customary to put the name of the sender first and then the recipient ("A to B, greetings"), followed by a health wish (cf. 3 John 1, 2). If the recipient was a superior, that name would be placed first ("To B, greetings from A"), and the health wish would be omitted. The body of a letter was concerned with providing information or instructions. Letters primarily intended to maintain or build a personal relationship usually had more lengthy openings and conclusions, and the body could be almost nonexistent.

The Letters of Paul. Because Paul's missionary travels forced him to be separated from the churches he founded, it was natural that he would choose to write letters to maintain his relationship with the congregations. His letters were not, however, of the simple "staying in touch" variety; each of them was prompted by specific concerns or situations within the churches that required his instruction. The only exception to this pattern is possibly Romans, which appears to have been written to a church Paul did not know personally, and which does not seem to have raised specific matters prompting Paul to write. Paul's letters, then, served as a means of apostolic presence and instruction for the churches when the apostle himself could not be present.

Paul's apostolic office and function had significant influence on his use of letter-writing conventions. Rather than including a wish for health or prosperity in his openings, Paul called for God's grace upon the recipients and offered a prayer of thanksgiving on their behalf (but cf. Gal. 1:6–9, where Paul's strained relations with these churches led him to replace his usual thanksgiving with a rebuke). In this manner he adapted the traditional formulas for the physical health of the recipients to the religious function of concern for their spiritual well-being. Similarly he replaced the customary words of "farewell" in his closings with words of benediction and grace. Although his practice of giving his own name first in the opening salutation might be understood as assuming a position of greater social standing than his readers, Paul tempers this tone of authority by addressing them in the familial terms "brethren" and "beloved." His letters are a combination of the conventional features of family letters and the formal speeches of instruction found in contemporary philosophical epistles.

Like many writers of letters during this period, Paul seems generally to have used an amanuensis (a professional scribe) to write his letters. The scribe Tertius, who wrote Romans, inserted his own personal greetings in the conclusion (Rom. 16:22). Elsewhere Paul seems to call attention to portions of letters that he wrote in his own distinctive hand (1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; cf. 1 Pet. 5:12). When Paul was responding to communications from the churches, he apparently had his letters carried back by the representatives from the congregation (Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus in 1 Cor. 16:17; cf. 7:1; Epaphroditus in Phil. 4:18). Otherwise the letters would be delivered by close associates (Titus in 2 Cor. 8:16, 17).

The General Epistles. The question of the degree of influence that Paul's letters had on the choice of this literary form by other apostles is currently being reexamined. This much at least is certain: the epistle became an important form of Christian writing not only for authors of the later New Testament books, but also for the "Apostolic Fathers," such as Ignatius of Antioch, Polycarp, and Clement of Rome.

The letters of James, Peter, John, and Jude, and the letter to the Hebrews all have significant differences from the Pauline letters. As a general rule, they do not follow the formal conventions of Hellenistic letters as closely as Paul. Hebrews and 1 John have no formal opening, nor do 1 John and James have a clear example of the usual closing greetings. Except for 2 and 3 John, it is difficult to determine what, if any, specific problems these letters were intended to address, nor is it clear whether they were written for particular recipients. For these reasons they are often called "General Epistles." In their form and content alike they are more like philosophical epistles than ordinary correspondence. □

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

ROMANS

Author The opening word of the letter (1:1), as well as the biographical details recorded in chs. 1, 15, and 16 show that Romans was written by the apostle Paul. The letter was already cited and listed as Paul's during the second century. Its authenticity has been disputed only rarely and never convincingly.

Date and Occasion Paul wrote Romans shortly before his visit to Jerusalem with the gift from the Gentile congregations (15:25; Acts 24:17). Internal indications suggesting that at this time he was a resident of Corinth include the reference to Phoebe, a member of the church at Cenchrea, the port of Corinth (16:1, 2), the references to Gaius as his host (1 Cor. 1:14), and to Erastus (Acts 19:22; 2 Tim. 4:20). The time of writing was probably during his three months in Greece, described in Acts 20:2, 3. While it is not possible to fix a date, it is known that Gallio (before whom Paul appeared in Acts 18:12) was proconsul (normally a one-year appointment) in Achaia in A.D. 52. Paul was in Corinth for "a good while" (Acts 18:18 and text note), presumably during the period A.D. 51–53. He then sailed to Ephesus for a brief visit, and went to Caesarea and probably Jerusalem as well as Antioch (Acts 18:22). Returning through Galatia and Phrygia (Acts 18:23) to Ephesus, he was a resident there for about three years (Acts 19:8, 10) before deciding to go to Jerusalem via Macedonia and Achaia (Acts 19:21). The earliest possible date for the writing of Romans, therefore, is towards the end of A.D. 54; but a later date leaves more leeway for Paul's many activities, so the letter is best dated some time between the end of A.D. 55 and the early months of A.D. 57.

That the faith of the Roman Christians was well known (1:8), and that Paul had desired to visit them for some time (1:13), suggest that the Christian faith had been established in the capital of the empire for a considerable period. These facts are supported by the statement of the Roman historian Suetonius that Claudius had expelled the Jews (in A.D. 49) for rioting "at the instigation of Chrestus" (evidently a reference to Christ). Visitors from Rome were present on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:10, 11) and may have been the first to bring the good news to the city. Its strategic importance and the large number of Jews living there would have brought the gospel message to Rome as though attracted by a magnet. Despite tradition stretching back through Irenaeus, it is certain that the church was not founded by Peter or Paul. It is clear that Paul had never visited the church (1:8–13), and the absence of any reference to Peter or the other apostles suggests that the Roman church had not experienced direct apostolic ministry.

Both Jews and Gentiles were members of the church in Rome, and 1:13 indicates a predominance of Gentiles, as possibly does the warning to Gentile Christians not to be proud (11:13–24). The conflict between weak and strong in 14:1—15:13 may have arisen in a similar context. It is even possible that the several house churches in which the Christians met reflected these divisions (cf. 16:5, 14, 15).

Paul perceived his ministry to be at a turning point when Romans was written. He believed that he had fulfilled his ministry in the eastern Mediterranean (15:17–23) and that the time was ripe to move west and evangelize in Spain (15:24). He hoped to visit the Roman Christians on the way, fulfilling his long-time ambition, and perhaps gaining their assistance as a supporting church (15:24).

In light of this, it was essential for him to present his apostolic credentials (note "my gospel" in 2:16 and 16:25), so that they might recognize the authenticity of his ministry. Paul may also have thought it necessary to defend his ministry from the false insinuations of rumormongerers (3:8).

At the time of writing Romans, Paul was also deeply concerned that the Christian church should be a fellowship of Jews and Gentiles together in the one body of Christ. This is clear from the importance he attaches to the Gentile love-gift to the Jerusalem church. It also surfaces throughout Romans in the theme of the unifying of Jew and Gentile—in sin because of Adam, and through grace in Christ. The saving righteousness of the gospel is needed by both, since all have sinned; it may be received by both, since it comes by grace through faith. The outworking of this saving righteousness in history is the clue to God's ultimate purposes for both; and this saving righteousness is to be expressed in the lives of both—personally, communally, and socially—in the body of Christ as the new people of God. The opportunity for writing while in Corinth, the pressing burden of his visit to Jerusalem, and the prospect of visiting Rome before preaching the gospel at the limits of the then-known world, all conspired to bring him to write this letter.

Characteristics and Themes Romans is Paul's fullest, grandest, most comprehensive statement of the gospel. Its compressed declarations of vast truths are like coiled springs—once loosed, they leap through mind and heart to fill one's horizon and shape one's life. John Chrysostom, the fifth century's greatest preacher, had Romans read aloud to him once a week. Augustine, Luther, and Wesley, three supremely significant contributors to the Christian heritage, all came to assured faith through the impact of Romans. All the Reformers saw Romans as the God-given key to understanding all Scripture, since here Paul brings together all the Bible's greatest themes—sin, law, judgment, human destiny, faith, works, grace, justification, sanctification, election, the plan of salvation, the work of Christ and of the Spirit, the Christian hope, the nature and life of the church, the place of Jew and non-Jew in the purposes of God, the philosophy of church and world history, the meaning and message of the Old Testament, the duties of Christian citizenship, and the principles of personal godliness and morality. From the vantage point given by Romans, the whole landscape of the Bible is open to view, and the relation of the parts to the whole becomes plain. The study of Romans is vitally necessary for the spiritual health and insight of the Christian. □

PAUL, a bondservant of Jesus Christ, [a]called to be an apostle, [b]separated to the gospel of God
2 [c]which He promised before [d]through His prophets in the Holy Scriptures, 3 concerning His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who [1]was [e]born of the seed of David according to the flesh, 4 and [f]declared to be the Son of God with power according [g]to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. 5 Through Him [h]we have received grace and apostleship for [i]obedience to the faith among all nations [j]for His name, 6 among whom you also are the called of Jesus Christ;

7 To all who are in Rome, beloved of God, [k]called to be saints:

[l]Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Desire to Visit Rome

8 First, [m]I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that [n]your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world. 9 For [o]God is my witness, [p]whom I serve [2]with my spirit in the gospel of His Son, that [q]without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers, 10 making request if, by some means, now at last I may find a way in the will of God to come to you. 11 For I long to see you, that [r]I may impart to you some spiritual gift, so that you may be established— 12 that is, that I may be encouraged together with you by [s]the mutual faith both of you and me.

13 Now I do not want you to be unaware, brethren, that I often planned to come to you (but [t]was hindered until now), that I might have some [u]fruit among you also, just as among the other Gentiles. 14 I am a debtor both to Greeks and to barbarians, both to wise and to unwise. 15 So, as much as is in me, I am ready to preach the gospel to you who are in Rome also.

■ 1:1 Paul. Ancient letters began with the general formula, "A to B sends greetings." Using his Roman name, Paul fills out this formula with Christian significance both in his self-description (vv. 1–6) and in the style of his greeting (vv. 7, 8).

bondservant. Someone totally at the disposal of a master.

apostle. An official messenger of the gospel. See 2 Cor. 1:1 note.

gospel of God. God is both the source and the theme of the message; it is the message "of" God. Here and elsewhere, Paul's trinitarianism surfaces (1:3, 4; 5:1–5; 8:3, 4, 9–11, 16, 17; 14:17, 18; 15:16, 30).

■ 1:2 which He promised before. The gospel was announced in promise form in the biblically recorded preaching of the prophets, from which the apostolic presentation of the gospel is drawn (16:25–27).

■ 1:3, 4 A description of the two stages of the Savior's ministry, rather than of His two natures. Although Son of God, He was "born of the seed of David" in order to share our weakness, but was transformed by the "Spirit of holiness" at the Resurrection, and was brought into a new epoch of His personal human existence (1 Cor. 15:45; 2 Cor. 13:4).

■ 1:5, 6 Paul sees Christ as the author of his salvation and also of his calling to be an evangelist to the Gentiles (11:13, 14; Acts 9:15; Eph. 3:8).

■ 1:5 obedience to the faith. Lit. "obedience of faith," indicating both the obedience that flows from faith and the fact that faith implies obedient submission to the call of God (16:26).

■ 1:7 Rome. Capital of the empire. We have no certain knowledge of the founding of the Roman church, although visitors from Rome were among those who heard the gospel preached on the day of Pentecost (Acts 1:10).

beloved of God, called to be saints. The terms used in the greeting will prove to be keynotes of the letter itself, as God's calling, love, grace, and peace are explained at length.

■ 1:8 I thank my God. Gratitude for God's work of grace in others was a constant feature of Paul's life (1 Cor. 11:4; Phil. 1:3; Col. 1:3; 1 Thess. 1:2; 2 Thess. 1:3; 2 Tim. 3:1; Philem. 4).

throughout the whole world. News had spread to the entire empire of the presence of Christians in its capital city.

■ 1:9 I make mention of you. Paul's constant prayerfulness is an expression of his wholehearted service and desire for spiritual usefulness. He prays in full submission to God's will (vv. 9–12; cf. Eph. 1:15; Phil. 1:9; Col. 1:9; 1 Thess. 1:3; 2 Thess. 1:11; 2 Tim. 1:3).

■ 1:11 spiritual gift. Here the term is not used in the functional sense of 1 Cor. 12:1; Paul has in view rather the benefit that flows from exercising functional gifts in ministry to others.

■ 1:12 encouraged together with you. Ministry is for the mutual strengthening of the whole body of Christ (Eph. 4:15, 16).

■ 1:13 often planned. No record of these many occasions exists, but see Acts 19:21; 23:11 for Paul's sense of being driven by God towards Rome.

hindered. Probably by other, regular responsibilities. See Acts 16:6, 7 for interruptions in Paul's plans caused either by the inward counsel of the Holy Spirit or by prophetic utterance.

among the other Gentiles. This suggests that Paul thought of the Roman church as predominantly Gentile.

■ 1:14 debtor. Paul's planning (v. 13) and his expectation (v. 14) are rooted in a sense of obligation. He has been given the gospel for the Gentiles (11:13, 14; cf. Eph. 3:1–8).

Greeks. The cultured Hellenistic world (the "wise").

barbarians. The uncultured, "unwise" of the ancient world.

The Just Live by Faith

16 For [v]I am not ashamed of the gospel [3]of Christ, for [w]it is the power of God to salvation for everyone who believes, [x]for the Jew first and also for the Greek. 17 For [y]in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, [z]"The just shall live by faith."

Mankind's Guilty Knowledge of God

All people are naturally inclined to some form of religion, yet they fail to worship their Creator, whose general revelation makes Him universally known. Sinful egoism and aversion to our Creator's claims have driven humanity into idolatry, the error of giving worship and homage to any power or object other than God (Is. 44:9–20; Rom. 1:21–23; Col. 3:5). In their idolatry, apostate humans "suppress the truth" and have "changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like corruptible man—and birds and four-footed animals and creeping things" (Rom. 1:18, 23). They smother and quench, as far as they can, the awareness that general revelation provides of the transcendent Judge and Creator, and they transfer the ineradicable sense of deity to unworthy objects. This in turn leads to drastic moral decline and misery, as a first manifestation of God's wrath against apostasy (Rom. 1:18, 24–32).

God will not allow human beings to suppress entirely their sense of God and of His judgment. Some sense of right and wrong, as well as of accountability to God, always remains. Even in the fallen world everyone is endowed with a conscience that from time to time condemns them, telling them that they ought to suffer for wrongs they have done. When conscience speaks in these terms it speaks with the voice of God.

In one sense, fallen humanity does not know God, since what people believe about the objects of their worship falsifies and distorts the truth about God. In another sense all human beings do know God, but in guilt, with uncomfortable inklings of the judgment they cannot avoid. Only the gospel of Christ can speak peace to this aspect of the human condition. □

■ 1:16 I am not ashamed of the gospel. Although the gospel is folly to the cultured, Paul sees his message as divine wisdom (1 Cor. 1:22–25, 30), and is not embarrassed by God's way of salvation. See "Salvation" at Acts 4:12.

power. The regenerating, life-changing impact of the gospel word through the Holy Spirit is essential because of humanity's bondage to sin and Satan, and weakness and spiritual inability on account of sin (5:6; 8:5–9).

believes. Salvation is unmerited, but it is not universally enjoyed; faith is required for it.

for the Jew first. While this was true in terms of the history of redemption (2:9, 10; John 4:22; cf. Mark 7:24–30), it was also the pattern of Paul's missionary outreach. Hence, in visiting the cities of the Roman world he began by expounding Scripture in the synagogues where possible, and he preached Christ as the fulfillment of the Old Testament promises (Acts 9:20; 13:5, 14; 14:1; 17:1, 17; 18:4, 19, 26; 19:8). Throughout Romans, Paul is careful not to deny the validity of the God-given privileges of His own people (3:11, 12; 9:4, 5).

■ 1:17 righteousness of God. This is a key phrase in Romans (3:21; 5:19; 10:3), regularly explained in the letter as "righteousness . . . through (or of) faith" (3:22; 9:30; 10:6). God's righteousness is shown in the righteousness of Christ that is imputed to, or considered by God to belong to, the one who believes. This imputation of righteousness to sinners who believe is fully consistent with the personal righteousness of God. As a just and righteous judge (2:5–16), God through the death of His Son justifies, or declares righteous, those sinners who come to true faith in Christ (3:21–26; 5:10). Luther's reading of this verse had a decisive impact on his understanding of justification.

from faith to faith. Paul emphasizes that at every point of its influence the gospel depends on faith, not works.

as it is written. Hab. 2:4 provides the biblical basis for and summary of what follows, indicating that the way of life by faith was already known in the Old Testament.

shall live. Life in contrast with spiritual death, and life in the sense of continuing in fellowship with God. From first to last, godly living means trusting in God and depending on His grace.

■ 1:18 wrath. The divine Judge's righteous retribution and personal revulsion evoked by moral evil.

is revealed. God's judgment is not limited to the future; His antagonism to sin is already shown in the world. Its effects are visible even now.

ungodliness and unrighteousness. The order may be significant—since moral decay follows theological rebellion. Or Paul may be using the two words together to express one idea, wicked ungodliness.

suppress the truth. It is not that the truth is sought but cannot be found, but rather that, confronted with the truth (which is "clearly seen," v. 20), fallen humanity seeks to hinder and obstruct its influence, and is therefore "without excuse" (v. 20). The "excuse" in view is an appeal to ignorance.

■ 1:19 what may be known of God. Paul stresses the reality and universality of divine revelation, which is perpetual ("since the creation,"

[5]manifest [6]in them, for [d]God has shown it to them. [20] For since the creation of the world [e]His invisible attributes are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and [7]Godhead, so that they are without excuse, [21] because, although they knew God, they did not glorify Him as God, nor were thankful, but [f]became futile in their thoughts, and their foolish hearts were darkened. [22] [g]Professing to be wise, they became fools, [23] and changed the glory of the [h]incorruptible [i]God into an image made like [8]corruptible man—and birds and four-footed animals and creeping things.

[24] [j]Therefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, in the lusts of their hearts, [k]to dishonor their bodies [l]among themselves, [25] who exchanged [m]the truth of God [n]for the lie, and worshiped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen.

[26] For this reason God gave them up to [o]vile passions. For even their [9]women exchanged the natural use for what is against nature. [27] Likewise also the [1]men, leaving the natural use of the [2]woman, burned in their lust for one another, [1]men with [1]men committing what is shameful, and receiving in themselves the penalty of their error which was due.

[28] And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a debased mind, to do those things [p]which are not fitting; [29] being filled with all unrighteousness, [3]sexual immorality, wickedness, [4]covetousness, [5]maliciousness; full of envy, murder, strife, deceit, evil-mindedness; they are whisperers, [30] backbiters, haters of God, violent, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, [31] [6]undiscerning, untrustworthy, unloving, [7]unforgiving, unmerciful; [32] who, [q]knowing the righteous judgment of God, that those who practice such things [r]are deserving of death, not only do the same but also [s]approve of those who practice them.

God's Righteous Judgment

2 Therefore you are [a]inexcusable, O man, whoever you are who judge, [b]for in whatever you judge another you condemn yourself; for you who judge practice the same things. [2] But we know that the judgment of God is according to truth against those who practice such things. [3] And do you think this, O man, you who judge those practicing such things, and doing the same, that you will escape the judgment of God? [4] Or do you despise [c]the riches of His goodness, [d]forbearance, and [e]longsuffering, [f]not knowing that the goodness of God leads you to repentance?

v. 20) and perspicuous ("clearly seen," v. 20). Divine invisibility, eternity, and power are all expressed in and through the created order (see "General Revelation" at Ps. 19:1). The invisible God is revealed through the visible medium of creation. This revelation is manifest; it is not obscured but clearly seen. See theological note "Mankind's Guilty Knowledge of God."

■ 1:21 knew God. Here Paul stresses that humanity not only has the opportunity to know God through general revelation, but that the revelation yields real knowledge. Humanity's sin is the individual refusal to acknowledge what is already known to be true. While knowing God, people refuse to honor Him as God or give thanks to Him. The consequence of rejecting God was that their minds and hearts grew dark. A refusal to honor God leads all intellectual pursuits to frustration.

■ 1:22, 23 Professing to be wise, they became fools . . . changed the glory of the incorruptible God. Intellectual arrogance before God displays a reversed sense of values; the worship of God is exchanged for devotion to man-made and man-reflecting idols. The indelible instinct to worship is perverted by being centered on the wrong object (v. 25).

■ 1:24 God also gave them up. Judgment involves the removal of divine restraints, both on sinful actions and on their consequences (vv. 26, 28).

■ 1:26, 27 The effect of perverting the instinct to worship God is the perversion of other instincts from their proper functions. Scripture views all homosexual actions in this light (Lev. 18:22; 21:13). The consequence is degradation of the body (v. 24), domination by lust, the disintegration of what is truly "natural" (v. 26), and bondage to uncontrollable passions (v. 27).

■ 1:27 receiving in themselves the penalty. Even in a morally fallen and therefore (to humanity) unpredictable world, the harvest reaped is related to the crop sown (Gal. 6:7, 8).

■ 1:28 did not like . . . God gave them over. Sin brings a disdain for true values, and risks abandonment by God to a spirit of licentiousness (vv. 29–31).

■ 1:32 knowing the righteous judgment of God. Paul sees as evidence of the guilt and bondage of sin that the knowledge of divine judgment no longer acts as a restraint, but becomes a spur to further rebellion in the form of encouraging others to sin. This text confirms that part of God's revelation in nature communicates His moral character and a sense of moral duty in humanity.

■ 2:1–16 In what follows, Paul turns to an imaginary representative of a real and identifiable group of people. Although he specifically mentions Jews only at v. 17, he probably has them in mind already. They agree with his statement about God's wrath, but assume they stand outside of it (hence his stern warning in v. 5). But the nature of this presumption, if not its specific form, is not limited to Jews. In this context Paul sets forth the principles of the divine judgment all must face. It is based on truth (v. 2) and marked by righteousness (v. 5). It is according to works (v. 6), impartial in nature (v. 11), and executed through Christ (v. 16). Such judgment will bring agonizing ruin to all sinners (vv. 8, 9).

■ 2:1 inexcusable. Paul unmasks those who will agree with his exposition of divine wrath on sin (1:18–32) but assume they are immune to it.

practice the same things. Their judgment of others is also in effect a self-condemnation (v. 3).

■ 2:2 according to truth. A link with 1:18. God's judgment is based on the reality of the individual's response or non-response to Him, not on other considerations.

■ 2:4 despise. They refuse to acknowledge that the kindness of God is intended to produce sorrow for sin and a turning away from it. They despise this purpose of divine generosity, and thereby show disdain for God Himself. See "God Is Love: Divine Goodness and Faithfulness" at Ps. 136:1.

5 But in accordance with your hardness and your [1]impenitent heart [g]you are [2]treasuring up for yourself wrath in the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, 6 who [h]"will render to each one according to his deeds": 7 eternal life to those who by patient continuance in doing good seek for glory, honor, and immortality; 8 but to those who are self-seeking and [i]do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness—indignation and wrath, 9 tribulation and anguish, on every soul of man who does evil, of the Jew [j]first and also of the [3]Greek; 10 [k]but glory, honor, and peace to everyone who works what is good, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. 11 For [l]there is no partiality with God.

12 For as many as have sinned without law will also perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law will be judged by the law 13 (for [m]not the hearers of the law are just in the sight of God, but the doers of the law will be justified; 14 for when Gentiles, who do not have the law, by nature do the things in the law, these, although not having the law, are a law to themselves, 15 who show the [n]work of the law written in their hearts, their [o]conscience also bearing witness, and between themselves their thoughts accusing or else excusing them) 16 [p]in the day when God will judge the secrets of men [q]by Jesus Christ, [r]according to my gospel.

The Jews Guilty as the Gentiles

17 [4]Indeed [s]you are called a Jew, and [t]rest[5] on the law, [u]and make your boast in God, 18 and [v]know His will, and [w]approve the things that are excellent, being instructed out of the law, 19 and [x]are confident that you yourself are a guide to the blind, a light to those who are in darkness, 20 an instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, [y]having the form of knowledge and truth in the law. 21 [z]You, therefore, who teach another, do you not teach yourself? You who preach that a man should not steal, do you steal? 22 You who say, "Do not commit adultery," do you commit adultery? You who abhor idols, [a]do you rob temples? 23 You who [b]make your boast in the law, do you dishonor God through breaking the law? 24 For [c]"the name of God is [d]blasphemed among the Gentiles because of you," as it is written.

Circumcision of No Avail

25 [e]For circumcision is indeed profitable if you keep the law; but if you are a breaker of the law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision. 26 Therefore, [f]if an uncircumcised man

■ 2:5 treasuring up . . . wrath. Religious presumption is "hardness," since continued resistance to God's purposes in showing grace is a refusal of God's will, and increases guilt while protesting innocence. Wrath is stored up (see text note), pointing forward to proportionate punishment in hell.

■ 2:6–10 The ground of judgment will be what people have been or done (v. 6). Paul is not here denying what he elsewhere emphasizes: that salvation is a gift, not a reward (5:15, 17; 6:23). Divine judgment is based on every aspect of a person's relationship to God. Only those who receive grace do in fact seek "glory, honor and immortality" (v. 7). Others are "self-seeking" (v. 8), not God-honoring. Paul teaches that while salvation is by grace, judgment is according to works (2 Cor. 5:10). Apart from grace there is only one verdict possible "to the Jew first and also to the Greek" (v. 10; cf. 1:16).

■ 2:11 Right standing with God is not on the basis of ethnic background, nor any natural or self-generated distinctions among humanity (9:6–13; Gal. 6:15).

■ 2:12–16 The Jews were ready to appeal to the Law of Moses, which they had and the Gentiles did not. The implication was that in this connection God does show "partiality" (v. 11). The role of the law is a major theme in Romans (3:27–31; 4:13–15; 5:13–15; 6:14, 15; 7:1–25; 13:8–10). Here in his first discussion of it, Paul shows that what pleases God is not knowledge of the law but obedience to God's will revealed in it. Therefore, "there is no partiality with God" (v. 11).

■ 2:12 as many as have sinned. This category includes everyone, as is made clear in 3:19, 20, 23.

law. The law of Moses, crystallized in the Ten Commandments (Ex. 20:1–17; Deut. 5:1–22). The Mosaic law already reveals God's condemnation of sin, but the cause of sin lies in our hearts, that is, deeply rooted in our natures, and not in the law (7:13). The knowledge of "the work of the law" (v. 15) also resides in the heart, because mankind was created in the image of God (Gen. 1:26, 27). Since God judges people in accordance with standards known to them, a defense based on ignorance of the Mosaic law is irrelevant and illegitimate. It is not the degree of revelation received, but response to the revelation itself, however received, that will prove critical "in the day when God will judge" (v. 16).

■ 2:14 by nature do the things in the law. No one can be justified on the basis of personal righteousness, but the universal presence of moral standards (although in various degrees of clarity), and the common sense of obligation to such standards, indicate a universal moral constitution and sense of accountability to God. This is evidenced by "their conscience also bearing witness" (v. 15). See "Conscience and the Law" at 1 Sam. 24:5.

■ 2:16 by Jesus Christ. All judgment has been placed in His hand (Matt. 7:21–23; 25:31–33; John 5:22; 2 Cor. 5:10). Such judgment will be infallible, penetrating to "the thoughts and intents of the heart"; nothing will be concealed from the Judge (Heb. 4:12, 13). Nor will anyone say that it is unfair for the human to be judged by the divine, since the agent of judgment will be the incarnate Christ, Himself a man. See "The Final Judgment" at Matt. 25:41.

my gospel. The gospel Paul preaches. In this gospel, the bad news of judgment precedes the good news of grace.

■ 2:17–29 Paul now turns directly to the Jewish claim to special privilege, dealing in more detail with the possession of the law (vv. 17–24) and circumcision (vv. 25–29). In connection with the law, he presses home the claim of v. 1 that the Jews were guilty of the sins for which they condemned others. In connection with circumcision, he argues that the sign without the reality is meaningless.

■ 2:17–20 Paul lists the privileges of which the Jews boasted, thinking that these blessings gave them superiority over others.

■ 2:21–23 The responsibilities that accompany privilege have not been fulfilled. Paul specifies the commandments against adultery, sacrilege, and theft (Ex. 20:4, 5, 14, 15).

■ 2:25 circumcision . . . profitable. Paul's argument in ch. 2 now moves to a climax. Condemnation results from failure to obey revelation keeps the righteous requirements of the law, will not his uncircumcision be counted as circumcision? 27 And will not the physically uncircumcised, if he fulfills the law, [g]judge you who, even with your [6]written code and circumcision, are a transgressor of the law? 28 For [h]he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh; 29 but he is a Jew [i]who is one inwardly; and [j]circumcision is that of the heart, [k]in the Spirit, not in the letter; [l]whose [7]praise is not from men but from God.

God's Judgment Defended

3 What advantage then has the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision? 2 Much in every way! Chiefly because [a]to them were committed the [1]oracles of God. 3 For what if [b]some did not believe? [c]Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect? 4 [d]Certainly not! Indeed, let [e]God be [2]true but [f]every man a liar. As it is written:

[g]"That You may be justified in Your words,
And may overcome when You are judged."

5 But if our unrighteousness demonstrates the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust who inflicts wrath? [h](I speak as a man.) 6 Certainly not! For then [i]how will God judge the world?

7 For if the truth of God has increased through my lie to His glory, why am I also still judged as a sinner? 8 And why not say, [j]"Let us do evil that good may come"?—as we are slanderously reported and as some affirm that we say. Their [3]condemnation is just.

All Have Sinned

9 What then? Are we better than they? Not at all. For we have previously charged both Jews and Greeks that [k]they are all under sin.

10 As it is written:

[l]"There is none righteous, no, not one;
11 There is none who understands;
There is none who seeks after God.
12 They have all turned aside;
They have together become unprofitable;
There is none who does good, no, not one."

of whatever kind. Jews have transgressed the Mosaic law in particular, emptying circumcision of its real significance. Paul recognizes the privilege of Jewishness (9:4, 5) and of circumcision in particular (3:1, 2; 4:11). But physical circumcision is a symbol of sanctification and renewal of life (v. 25; Deut. 30:6). The reality, not the sign, is the vital thing and may be possessed irrespective of Jewishness (vv. 26, 27).

■ 2:29 he is a Jew. The work of the Spirit, issuing in a God-centered life, not the possession of "circumcision . . . which is outward" (v. 28) and the "written code" (v. 27), makes one a member of God's covenant people. As Paul will show, his conclusion might shock the Jews he addresses, but it is rooted in the teaching of the Old Testament itself (cf. 9:6).

■ 3:1 Paul's statement that there is no favoritism with God (2:11) does not mean that there is no "advantage" in being a Jew, only that disobedience nullifies that advantage.

■ 3:2 the oracles of God. See text note. The phrase reveals the apostolic belief that the inspiration of the Old Testament extended to its words (Matt. 4:4).

■ 3:3, 4 The response of unbelief does not nullify the faithfulness of God to the promises in His word. He keeps them (9:6, 7; 2 Tim. 2:13), as the Old Testament underlines.

■ 3:5–8 Two related questions are presented here. The first is that if people's unrighteousness is an occasion for the righteousness of God to act, is it not unfair for God to execute His wrath upon unrighteousness? Paul's answer is brief. It is a "given" that God is going to judge the world and that His judgment will be fair. In the second step Paul reduces the objection to an absurd conclusion. If God somehow accepts the unrighteousness that is an occasion for His mercy, should He not welcome even more acts of unrighteousness from us? This conclusion is foolish (6:1, 2, 15). The ends do not justify the means.

■ 3:5 I speak as a man. Although it is only expressed as a possibility in a discussion, the suggestion that God could be unjust calls for an immediate correction.

■ 3:6 The justice of God will be displayed in the Last Judgment. Obviously it will be no excuse for sins that they had a part in making judgment necessary. God's justification of sinners will not undo the elementary truth that He will judge the world in righteousness.

■ 3:8 slanderously reported. Foolish as the false conclusion is, it seems that Paul was accused of teaching it. A similar, but not identical issue, is discussed in 5:20—6:1.

■ 3:10 As it is written. This is the common New Testament wording when appeal is made to the authority of Scripture (1:17; 3:3). The biblical texts, taken together, stress the universal reign of sin and the consequent depravity and condemnation of all mankind.

15 "Their[p] feet are swift to shed blood;
16 Destruction and misery are in their ways;
17 And the way of peace they have not known."
18 "There[q] is no fear of God before their eyes."

19 Now we know that whatever [r]the law says, it says to those who are under the law, that [s]every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become [5]guilty before God. 20 Therefore [t]by the deeds of the law no flesh will be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

God's Righteousness Through Faith

21 But now [u]the righteousness of God apart from the law is revealed, [v]being witnessed by the Law [w]and the Prophets, 22 even the righteousness of God, through faith in Jesus Christ, to all [6]and on all who believe. For [x]there is no difference; 23 for [y]all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, 24 being justified [7]freely [z]by His grace [a]through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, 25 whom God set forth [b]as a [8]propitiation [c]by His blood, through faith, to demonstrate His righteousness, because in His forbearance God had passed over [d]the sins that were previously committed, 26 to demonstrate at the present time His righteousness, that He might be just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus.

■ 3:18 no fear of God. In the Old Testament, the essence of a proper attitude to God is "fear," the absence of which is practical atheism.

■ 3:19 the law. Here "law" is a reference to the Old Testament Scriptures in general, since Paul's quotes come from Psalms, Ecclesiastes, and Isaiah.

says. A further indication that Paul sees Scripture as the living voice of God.

under the law. Not in the sense of 6:14, 15, but as in 2:12 (those who possess the Old Testament revelation, i.e., the Jews in particular).

every mouth . . . stopped . . . guilty. See text note. No one, whether Jew or Gentile, has grounds for appeal; none can claim to be free from guilt before God. All are lost.

■ 3:20 by the law is the knowledge of sin. See "The Three Purposes of the Law" at Deut. 13:10. While the Jews appeal to their possession of the law as proof of their privileged position before God, Paul has now demonstrated that any Jew's sin is unveiled and condemned, not hidden and condoned, by the law (note Paul's self-description in 7:7–11). At the Last Judgment, all argument with a perfectly just and omniscient Judge will be futile.

■ 3:21–31 Having shown the need of both Jew and Gentile for the righteousness of God revealed in the gospel (1:16), Paul now explains how it is provided in Christ (vv. 21–26), and underlines two of the implications (vv. 27–31).

■ 3:21 But now. The law of Moses, seen as demand, cannot save. Yet the gospel is not contrary to the law of Moses (1:2). The gospel was already proclaimed in both "the Law and the Prophets." But "now" (the time filled with redemptive significance because of the coming of Christ, v. 26) God's righteousness comes to historical realization through Christ and His work.

apart from the law. Righteousness with God is not achieved by our acts of obedience to the law. Nevertheless, Paul insists that the gospel is not lawless (v. 31; 6:15; 8:3, 4; 13:8, 10).

■ 3:22 through faith in Jesus Christ, to all . . . who believe. The righteousness of God must be received now that it "is revealed" (v. 21). To believe, for Paul, involves knowledge of the gospel's content, mental assent to its testimony about Christ (10:14), and obedient trust and reliance on Him as Savior and Lord (1:5). The righteousness of God is exclusively for those who have faith ("there is no difference; for all have sinned"), whether Jew or Gentile (1:16, 17).

■ 3:23 fall short of the glory of God. See "Original Sin and Total Depravity" at Ps. 51:5. A poignant description of the consequence of sin. Made in the image of the glorious God (Gen. 1:26, 27), humanity has exchanged God's glory for idolatry (1:23) and distorted the divine image. Now people are morally and spiritually ugly and depraved. Grace renews and restores humanity's lost glory in believers (5:2; 8:18; 1 Cor. 15:42–49; 2 Cor. 3:18; Eph. 4:24; Phil. 3:20, 21; Col. 3:10).

■ 3:24 justified. In Scripture, justification is the opposite of condemnation (e.g., Prov. 17:15). It is the declaration of the believing sinner to be just, and it comes about by virtue of the imputed righteousness of Christ, the "gift of righteousness," as 5:17 terms it. Christ's righteousness is now legally considered to be the possession of the sinner. Justification is final and irreversible (8:1; 33, 34). It is grounded in Christ's lifelong obedience, in which He fulfilled the precepts of God's law for us, and in His death on the cross, bore the penalty of God's judgment against us. Believers now share the same righteous status as the risen Christ Himself, with whom they are united now and forever (2 Cor. 5:21).

freely by His grace. Paul's repetition of the same idea in different words emphasizes the divine initiative and mercy in freely granting our salvation.

redemption. Freedom gained through the payment of a price; here specifically, release from the former condition of bondage in sin. This is accomplished through Christ's death, the ransom price for our salvation (Mark 10:45; 1 Tim. 2:6; Heb. 9:15).

■ 3:25 whom God set forth. See theological note "The Atonement." Christ died as a propitiatory sacrifice that satisfies the divine judgment against sinners, bringing about forgiveness and justification. But Paul is careful to indicate that the sacrifice does not cause God to love us. The opposite is true—God's love caused Him to offer His Son (5:8; 8:32; John 3:16).

through faith. The emphasis of v. 22 is repeated and thereby underscored. "Through" indicates the means of our being linked to the righteousness of Christ. Faith is the instrumental cause, not the ultimate cause, of justification.

■ 3:26 to demonstrate . . . His righteousness. God's judicial righteousness is demonstrated in the gospel. Under the Mosaic sacrificial system, forgiveness was offered through (but not on the basis of) animal sacrifice. As the New Testament recognizes (Heb. 9:11–15; 10:1–4), such sacrifices cannot substitute for the sins of humans. The real significance of the Old Testament sacrifices lay in the way they pointed forward to Christ through whom God would deal with human sin in an appropriate and final way. In view of what He would later do, God could righteously pass over "the sins that were previously committed" (v. 25). The work of Christ reveals both the justice of God (He does punish sin in the Person of His own Son, 8:32), and the righteousness of God's way of salvation by "faith in Jesus" (v. 26). In dealing with Christ as sin-bearer and the human person as sinner, God does not compromise His own holiness, nor the necessity of sin's being atoned for. Yet He graciously provides a salvation that mankind was incapable of obtaining. In this respect, Paul sees the Cross as the manifestation of the glorious wisdom of God (1 Cor. 1:23, 24).

Boasting Excluded

27 [e]Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? Of works? No, but by the law of faith. 28 Therefore we conclude [f]that a man is [g]justified by faith apart from the deeds of the law. 29 Or is He the God of the Jews only? Is He not also the God of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also, 30 since [g]there is one God who will justify the circumcised by faith and the uncircumcised through faith. 31 Do we then make void the law through faith? Certainly not! On the contrary, we establish the law.

The Atonement

An atonement is a reconciliation of alienated parties, the restoration of a broken relationship. Atonement is accomplished by making amends, blotting out offenses, and giving satisfaction for wrongs done.

According to Scripture every person sins and needs to make atonement, but lacks the power and resources for doing so. We have offended our Creator, whose nature it is to hate sin (Jer. 44:4; Hab. 1:13) and to punish it (Ps. 5:4–6; Rom. 1:18; 2:5–9). Those who have sinned cannot be accepted by and do not have fellowship with God unless atonement is made. Since there is sin in even the best actions of sinful creatures, anything we do in the hope of making amends can only increase our guilt or worsen our situation, for the "sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD" (Prov. 15:8). There is no way to establish one's own righteousness before God (Job 15:14–16; Is. 64:6; Rom. 10:2, 3); it simply cannot be done.

But against this background of human hopelessness, Scripture reveals the grace and mercy of God, who Himself provides the atonement that sin has made necessary. God's amazing grace is the focus of Biblical faith; from Genesis to Revelation it shines out with breathtaking glory.

When God brought Israel out of Egypt, He set up as part of the covenant relationship a system of sacrifices that had at its heart the shedding of the blood of animals "to make atonement for your souls" (Lev. 17:11). These sacrifices were "typical"; that is, as "types" they pointed forward to something better. Sins were forgiven when sacrifices were faithfully offered, but it was not the blood of animals that blotted out sins (Heb. 10:4). It was the blood of the "antitype," Jesus Christ, whose death on the cross atoned for sins already committed, as well as sins that would be committed afterwards (Rom. 3:25, 26; 4:3–8; Heb. 9:11–15).

According to the New Testament, Christ's blood was shed as a sacrifice (Rom. 3:25; 5:9; Eph. 1:7; Rev. 1:5). Christ redeemed His people by means of a ransom; His death was the price that freed us from guilt and from enslavement to sin (Rom. 3:24; Gal. 4:4, 5; Col. 1:14). In Christ's death, God reconciled us to Himself, overcoming His own hostility that our sins provoked (Rom. 5:10; 2 Cor. 5:18, 19; Col. 1:20–22). The Cross propitiated God. That is to say, it quenched His wrath against us by expiating our sins, and so removing them from His sight (Rom. 3:25; Heb. 2:17; 1 John 2:2; 4:10). The Cross had this effect because in His suffering Christ assumed our identity and endured the retributive judgment due to us, that is, "the curse of the law" (Gal. 3:13). He suffered as our substitute, with the damning record of our transgressions nailed by God to His cross as the list of crimes for which He died (Col. 2:14; cf. Matt. 27:37; Is. 53:4–6; Luke 22:37). □

■ 3:27 Where is boasting then. The point made in 2:17, 23 resurfaces. Since Jew and Gentile alike are under wrath for their sin, and since the law does not protect Jews, but rather reveals their condemnation, and since the gospel exposes a person's unrighteousness while revealing God's righteousness, no one, not even a Jew, has grounds for boasting (4:2, 3). Indeed, boasting "is excluded," since faith alone (vv. 27, 28, 30), not human achievement, brings salvation.

■ 3:28 justified by faith. See "Justification and Merit" at Gal. 3:11.

■ 3:30 there is one God. Salvation does not come by the possession of the law. This implies that salvation is available to others as well as Jews. Paul confirms this truth in the face of Jewish opposition by appeal to the fundamental confession of Old Testament religion, that God is one (Deut. 6:4). This principle was implied already in the Old Testament prophets' composite lawsuits against the nations for their sins and against the Jews for theirs (e.g., Amos 1; 2). Paul stresses that justification comes to Jew ("the circumcised") and to Gentile ("the uncircumcised") in the same way—by faith alone.

■ 3:31 Do we then make void the law through faith. See "Antinomianism" at 1 John 3:7. Paul is rejecting the law as the way of salvation. But since the law as moral demand was not given to sinners in order to justify them (vv. 19, 20), the principle of salvation by grace through faith cannot be a contradiction of the law. As he later demonstrates, the gospel upholds and furthers the law's ultimate goal (8:3, 4; 13:8–10).

Abraham Justified by Faith

4 What then shall we say that [a]Abraham our [b]father[1] has found according to the flesh? 2 For if Abraham was [c]justified by works, he has something to boast about, but not before God. 3 For what does the Scripture say? [d]"Abraham believed God, and it was [2]accounted to him for righteousness." 4 Now [e]to him who works, the wages are not counted [3]as grace but [3]as debt.

David Celebrates the Same Truth

5 But to him who [f]does not work but believes on Him who justifies [g]the ungodly, his faith is accounted for righteousness, 6 just as David also [h]describes the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works:

7 "Blessed[i] are those whose lawless deeds are forgiven,
And whose sins are covered;
8 Blessed is the man to whom the LORD shall not impute sin."

Abraham Justified Before Circumcision

9 Does this blessedness then come upon the circumcised only, or upon the uncircumcised also? For we say that faith was accounted to Abraham for righteousness. 10 How then was it accounted? While he was circumcised, or uncircumcised? Not while circumcised, but while uncircumcised. 11 And [j]he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had while still uncircumcised, that [k]he might be the father of all those who believe, though they are uncircumcised, that righteousness might be imputed to them also, 12 and the father of circumcision to those who not only are of the circumcision, but who also walk in the steps of the faith which our father [l]Abraham had while still uncircumcised.

The Promise Granted Through Faith

13 For the promise that he would be the [m]heir of the world was not to Abraham or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. 14 For [n]if those who are of the law are heirs, faith is made void and the promise made of no effect, 15 because [o]the law brings about wrath; for where there is no law there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith that it might be [p]according to grace, [q]so that the promise might be

■ 4:1–25 Paul confirms his argument that justification is by grace through faith in Christ (3:22–25) by an appeal to the life of Abraham. As spiritual father of the Jews (v. 1), Abraham provides a test case for Paul's doctrine. If he can show that Abraham was justified by faith, his earlier exposition becomes irrefutable in a Jewish context.

■ 4:2, 3 Contrary to the view that Abraham was considered righteous and sustained in covenant with God on the basis of his obedience and faithfulness, Paul intends to demonstrate that the general statement in 3:27 is true of Abraham in particular. Abraham had nothing "to boast about," for Gen. 15:6 proves that it was by faith, not by law-keeping, that he was counted righteous. James also points to Abraham as an example of one who demonstrates true faith by his works (James 2:21). See "Justification and Merit" at Gal. 3:11.

■ 4:4, 5 It is a general principle that wages are earned by work, not received "as grace" (see text note). But Gen. 15:6 makes no mention of works on Abraham's part, only of the trust he had in God. Although faith was Abraham's action, it contributed nothing to Abraham's resultant righteousness before God, which was God's own gift (v. 4). In this sense, while faith as the instrument of justification involves human activity, it is not a "work" of merit. The righteousness of God was "accounted" to Abraham (v. 3 and text notes, v. 9) and not earned by him. See "Faith and Works" at James 2:24.

■ 4:6–8 That Paul's exegesis of Gen. 15:6 is correct is confirmed by an appeal to David's words in Ps. 32:1, 2. Blessedness, fellowship with God together with all its accompaniments, and salvation are not earned, but are the effect of the gift of forgiveness. It is by Christ's work, not ours, that we are justified. Human merit of any sort is excluded.

■ 4:9–12 Paul now addresses a further criticism of his argument. Even if he has shown that righteousness comes by grace through faith in the case of Abraham, has he forgotten that Abraham was the father of the circumcised (and therefore not of the uncircumcised)? The apostle provides a devastating answer: Gen. 15:6 describes Abraham before he was circumcised (v. 10). The righteousness signified and sealed for him by circumcision had already been credited to him when he was still uncircumcised. He serves as the prototype for all believers, both Jew and Gentile. For the Jew, he serves as prototype because his circumcision pointed back to his justification; for the Gentile, because he received justification apart from circumcision.

■ 4:13–15 The argument is now taken a stage further. The promise given to Abraham was that he would be the father of a multitude who would possess the land of Canaan, and he would also be the fountain of blessing for all nations (Gen. 12:2, 3, 7). Christ is the Seed of Abraham (Gal. 3:16) and has already begun to inherit the earth (Ps. 2:8; cf. Matt. 28:18, 19). This promise was received by Abraham through faith, "not . . . through the law" (v. 13). Paul assumes the truth of what he demonstrates in Gal. 3:17, that since the law came 430 years after the promise, the promises cannot be dependent on the law. If the inheritance were dependent on obedience to the law, faith would have no place in the divine scheme of things, and the promise would be void, since the law cannot bring about the obedience it requires for its fulfillment. Only "where there is no law" is there "no transgression"; where there is law, it "brings about wrath" (v. 15). Given the established truth of the sinfulness of all people, it is impossible that the promise could be received on the basis of law-keeping.

■ 4:16 Therefore it is of faith. Because the promise in all its elements is received by faith, it is also "according to grace" and "sure to all the seed . . . Abraham." Had it been on the basis of works, the promise would have failed; had it been on the basis of circumcision, it could have been received only by Jews. Because it is by faith, and therefore by grace (by God's action, not man's), it is "sure" to come to Abraham's true spiritual offspring, or all believers whether Jew or Gentile by birth.

[20]He did not waver at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strengthened in faith, giving glory to God, [21]and being fully convinced that what He had promised [y]He was also able to perform. [22]And therefore [z]"it was accounted to him for righteousness."

[23]Now [a]it was not written for his sake alone that it was imputed to him, [24]but also for us. It shall be imputed to us who believe [b]in Him who raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, [25][c]who was delivered up because of our offenses, and [d]was raised because of our justification.

Faith Triumphs in Trouble

5 Therefore, [a]having been justified by faith, [f]we have [b]peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, [2][c]through whom also we have access by faith into this grace [d]in which we stand, and [e]rejoice in hope of the glory of God. [3]And not only that, but [f]we also glory in tribulations, [g]knowing that tribulation produces [2]perseverance; [4][h]and perseverance, [3]character; and character, hope. [5][i]Now hope does not disappoint, [j]because the love of God has been poured out in our hearts by the Holy Spirit who was given to us.

Christ in Our Place

[6]For when we were still without strength, [4]in due time [k]Christ died for the ungodly. [7]For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet perhaps for a good man someone would even dare to die. [8]But [l]God demonstrates His own love toward us, in that while we were still sinners,

6 [k][Rom. 4:25; 5:8; 8:32] [4]at the right time 8 [l][John 3:16; 15:13]

■ 4:17 as it is written. Again Paul appeals to Scripture (Gen. 17:5) for confirmation of his exposition. Rather than be father of Jews (the circumcised) only, it was already clear in Genesis that Abraham was to be the spiritual patriarch of all believers, Jew and Gentile alike. Nor is it unbelievable that the promise of God should be received by Gentiles also, for the one in whom Abraham believed "gives life to the dead." This is evidenced in the new life that came from the apparently dead womb of Sarah (v. 19), in the life given back to Isaac when he was under the sentence of death (Gen. 22), and ultimately in the life restored in the resurrection of Christ (4:24, 25).

calls those things which do not exist as though they did. This may refer to God's creation of the world out of nothing (see Gen. 1; Is. 41:4; 48:13 for creation summoned into being by God's word), or to the birth of Isaac (in which a nation emerges from a barren womb). Perhaps this also alludes to the words of Hos. 1:10; 2:23 (9:25, 26).

■ 4:18 contrary to hope. In the natural course of events, believing that Sarah would bear his child (the first requirement for receiving what was promised) was utterly futile, for reasons given in v. 19.

in hope believed. Trusting in God's power (v. 17), Abraham gained assurance that the promise would be fulfilled. Paul indicates that true faith is directed toward God and not humanity, toward the divine word and not toward the human situation.

■ 4:19 about a hundred years old. See Gen. 17:1, 17.

■ 4:20 giving glory to God. Giving glory to God is a hallmark of faith, since it is dependence on God's power and trust in His word of promise (v. 21). Abraham's life of faith was one in which God's attributes formed the foundation (1:20), and therefore in which God's glory was displayed (cf. 1:21). It was through exercising this kind of faith that he was justified (v. 22).

■ 4:25 The proof of justification by faith in Abraham's case leads Paul back to the foundation of justification in the work of Christ (3:24–26). Christ's death and resurrection are two aspects of one saving work. In the first part, Christ bore the legal penalty for our guilt. In the second, He rose from the dead, His resurrection confirming that His death was a sufficient and effective offering for sin, pleasing the Supreme Judge.

■ 5:1–11 The implications of justification by grace through faith are now drawn out. The transition from wrath (1:18) to grace (3:21) transforms both the status and the experience of the believer. Instead of estrangement (3:10–17) there is now peace (5:1); in place of falling short of God's glory through sin (3:23), there is the hope of glory (5:2); instead of suffering as judgment (2:5, 6), there is joy in tribulation because of what God produces through it (5:3); instead of fearful uncertainty, there is assurance of God's love (vv. 6–8) and joy in Him (v. 11).

■ 5:1 we have peace. See text note. Numerous manuscripts support "let us have" peace, but the flow of Paul's logic supports the first rendering. That "we have now received the reconciliation" (v. 11) implies that we are at peace with God already. With peace established, we now have access to God's presence. The wall of partition has been removed. This peace is not a guarded truce subject to new warfare. It is a permanent peace.

■ 5:2 hope. New Testament hope is the assurance of something not yet fully experienced, and quite different from uncertain, wishful thinking. That this hope will not be frustrated is guaranteed here and now by the love of God that the Holy Spirit pours into believers' hearts (vv. 4, 5).

■ 5:4 character. See text note. It confirms our confidence that the glory we hope for will one day be ours (8:17–25).

■ 5:6 Christ died. The nature of this outpoured love (v. 5) is seen in the Cross. There God acted "in due time" (see text note), both in the sense that the death of Christ took place according to the divine timetable (John 17:1; Acts 2:23; Gal. 4:4), and also because it meets us in the moment of our deepest need. This is Paul's point when he says "still without strength" (v. 6), "still sinners" (v. 8), "when we were enemies" (v. 10).

■ 5:8–11 Like 8:1–4, 32, this passage highlights the special purpose and effectiveness that Paul regularly ascribes to Christ's death. That is, Christ died specifically "for us" (v. 8) who now believe and are justified through our faith, and His death actually achieved for us the "reconciliation" that "we have now received" (v. 11). See "Definite Redemption" at John 10:15.

Christ died for us. [9] Much more then, having now been justified [m]by His blood, we shall be saved [n]from wrath through Him. [10] For [o]if when we were enemies [p]we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son, much more, having been reconciled, we shall be saved [q]by His life. [11] And not only that, but we also [r]rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received the reconciliation.

Death in Adam, Life in Christ

[12] Therefore, just as [s]through one man sin entered the world, and [t]death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned— [13] (For until the law sin was in the world, but [u]sin is not imputed when there is no law. [14] Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those who had not sinned according to the likeness of the transgression of Adam, [v]who is a type of Him who was to come. [15] But the free gift is not like the [5]offense. For if by the one man's offense many died, much more the grace of God and the gift by the grace of the one Man, Jesus Christ, abounded [w]to many. [16] And the gift is not like that which came through the one who sinned. For the judgment which came from one offense resulted in condemnation, but the free gift which came from many [6]offenses resulted in justification. [17] For if by the one man's [7]offense death reigned through the one, much more those who receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness will reign in life through the One, Jesus Christ.)

[18] Therefore, as through [8]one man's offense judgment came to all men, resulting in condemnation, even so through [x]one[9] Man's righteous act the free gift came [y]to all men, resulting in justification of life. [19] For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so also by [z]one Man's obedience many will be made righteous.

[20] Moreover [a]the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace [b]abounded much more, [21] so that as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

■ 5:9 Much more. Paul argues from the greater to the less. If God would do for us the work of reconciliation, at the cost of the suffering and death of His Son, He will not withhold the final salvation that is "through Him," and by "His blood" as the ascendant Mediator. Keeping for final salvation those who have already been justified is simply God following through His initial purpose of love to them. The decisive, and more costly, expression of this loving purpose was Christ's actual reconciling death, which guarantees the justification and glorification of those for whom he died (8:32).

■ 5:10 reconciled. Paul alone in the New Testament describes the sin-bearing work of Christ as reconciliation (11:15; 2 Cor. 5:18–20; Eph. 2:16; Col. 1:20, 22), although the idea is already present in the Old Testament, especially in Hosea. God's alienation from us is ended by removing the cause of alienation (our sin, guilt, and condemnation) by the death of Christ (cf. 2 Cor. 5:21). In this sense, reconciliation is objective (2 Cor. 5:18, 19). However, it must be "received" (v. 11; cf. 2 Cor. 5:20), by the laying aside of our own alienation and hostility, that is, by repentance and faith in Christ.

■ 5:12–21 Paul's "Therefore" (v. 12) indicates that what follows is connected in Paul's mind with what has preceded, so that the comparison and contrast he draws between Adam and Christ is his theological elaboration on what has already been said. Paul's stress on the "one man" throughout the passage (vv. 12, 15–17, 19) indicates that he viewed both Adam and Christ as historical individuals. In the case of Adam, the focus of attention is on his "one offense" (vv. 16, 18, and text note) by which all "were made sinners" (v. 19). They had solidarity with Adam as their representative before God, and this constituted them sinners when Adam sinned.

■ 5:12 just as . . . sin entered. Paul here begins a comparison that is not concluded until vv. 18–21. The comparison is interrupted by a meditation extending through v. 17.

through one man. Death is not natural to humanity, but is the direct result of sin (Gen. 2:17).

because all sinned. The universal reign of death is the consequence of sin. Paul does not explain how all mankind was involved with Adam in his sinning, but simply asserts the fact. All sinned in the sin of Adam. See "Original Sin and Total Depravity" at Ps. 51:5.

■ 5:14 death reigned. All people were subject to death before the law of Moses was given.

a type of Him who was to come. Adam, the first man, was the divinely appointed head of the whole of humanity, and his sin forfeited righteousness for all those he represented ("all men," vv. 12, 18; the "many," vv. 15, 19). In the same way, God made Christ the representative head of a new humanity so that His obedience to death might gain their justification. Inherent in this teaching is the thought that the restoration provided in salvation must follow the pattern, but reverse the content, of the original constitution of humanity before God (1 Cor. 15:45–49; Heb. 2:14–18).

■ 5:15 But the free gift is not like the offense. See text note. Paul spells out the contrast between Christ and Adam in vv. 15–17. Not only are the acts of the two men antithetical, but the grace of the work of Christ is seen to be greater than the sin, judgment, and condemnation of Adam in the way it brings justification, righteousness, and life to ruined souls ("much more," vv. 15, 17).

■ 5:16 the judgment . . . from one. See "The Fall" at Gen. 3:6.

■ 5:18, 19 Paul returns to the main thrust of his analogy, namely that there is a parallel between Adam and Christ in that condemnation and justification are the direct fruits of their actions. On the basis of the actions of "one," "many" are constituted either sinners or righteous. Adam is the representative head as well as the physical root of all, and all sinned and fell when he sinned. In contrast, "by one Man's obedience" those whom Christ represents are "made righteous" in Him (see "The Humble Obedience of Christ" at John 5:19). Christ is their representative Head, as well as the spiritual root of the new humanity, for through His resurrection they are given new birth and a living hope (1 Pet. 1:3; Eph. 2:1–7).

■ 5:20 the law entered. It was given as an additional (post-Fall) element in God's dealings with His people, so "that the offense might abound." While sin was in the world before the law was given (v. 13), the law reveals sin in its specific character as trespass, lapsing from a set standard. Such lapses "abound" because the law's demands stir up contrary cravings in sinners' hearts (7:5, 8). But in the face of this increase of sin, "grace abounded much more," not only keeping pace with the offense, but outdoing it, in the great salvation accomplished through Christ.

Baptism

Christian baptism, which has the form of a ceremonial washing (like John's pre-Christian baptism), is a sign from God that signifies inward cleansing and remission of sins (Acts 22:16; 1 Cor. 6:11; Eph. 5:25–27), Spirit-wrought regeneration and new life (Titus 3:5), and the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit as God's seal testifying and guaranteeing that one will be kept safe in Christ forever (1 Cor. 12:13; Eph. 1:13, 14). Fundamentally, baptism signifies union with Christ in His death, burial, and resurrection (Rom. 6:3–7; Col. 2:11, 12), and this union with Christ is the source of every element in our salvation (1 John 5:11, 12). Receiving the sign of baptism in faith assures those baptized that God's gift of new life in Christ is freely given to them. At the same time, it commits them to live in a new way as disciples of Jesus.

Christ told His disciples to baptize in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit (Matt. 28:19). This formula means that the covenant relation which baptism formally confers is with all three Persons of the Godhead. When Paul says that the Israelites were "baptized into Moses" (1 Cor. 10:2), he means that they were put under Moses' control and direction. Baptism into the name of the triune God signifies control and direction by God.

The outward signs do not automatically or magically convey the inward blessings that they signify. No prescription of a particular mode of baptism can be found in the New Testament. The command to baptize may be fulfilled by immersion, dipping, or sprinkling; all three modes satisfy the meaning of the Greek verb baptizo and the symbolic requirement of passing under, and emerging from, cleansing water. □

■ 6:1–14 Paul's insistence that the increase of sin is met by the increase of grace (5:20) leads to the question he now raises. So great was his emphasis on the freeness of God's grace in the face of sin that his preaching had been accused of antinomian tendencies, or ignoring the ethical requirements of the law (3:8). Now he makes the point that to continue in sin would involve a contradiction of the Christian's new identity in Christ. In view of this new identity (v. 11), Christians are to refuse to allow sin to usurp authority in their lives, and instead are to yield the whole of life to God (vv. 12, 13) in the assurance that since they are under grace, not law, as the means of their salvation, sin is no longer their master.

■ 6:2 Certainly not. A frequently used expression of shocked recoil (3:31; 6:15; 7:7, 13; 9:14; 11:1, 11).

we who died to sin. Paul's point is that believers have been really united with Jesus Christ in both His death and His resurrection, and that this has so altered their condition that for them to continue sinning as before is not only inappropriate but actually impossible.

■ 6:3, 4 Baptism, the sign and seal of initial union with Christ, is the burial service for the "old man" (v. 6) as well as the inauguration ceremony for the new person in Christ (v. 4). As such, it proclaims that those united to Christ have died to sin. From 5:20 to 8:4, sin is presented as the driving energy that produces sinful acts, and is personified as a tyrannical taskmaster, demanding dominion and needing to be resisted. See theological note "Baptism."

■ 6:6 our old man was crucified with Him. While the "old man" includes pre-conversion life, it includes much more, and should be interpreted in the light of 5:12–21 to mean all that we were through our union with Adam. We are to think of all this as having been nailed to the cross to die.

body of sin. Perhaps in the sense of sin as a mass, or body, but probably the physical body seen as the sphere in which sin reigned (cf. "body of death" in 7:24).

might be done away with. Union with Christ in His death does not destroy the body as such, but it does end the body's role as the inescapable tool of sin by destroying the reign of sin in the body. Christians' bodies are now dedicated to Christ and bear holy fruit in His service (6:13, 22; 7:4; 12:1). We are no longer "slaves of sin," since bodily existence dominated by the cravings of sin has given way to bodily existence dominated by a passion for righteousness and holiness (v. 18).

■ 6:7 freed from sin. Lit. "justified." See text note. Here the language has an additional nuance of "delivered from," for Paul is discussing the reign of sin, and not merely its guilt (vv. 17–22). Paul personifies sin as a monarch (5:21); as a general who uses various parts of the body for weapons ("instruments," v. 13 and text note); and as an employer who pays wages (v. 23).

■ 6:8 we shall also live with Him. This includes the idea of resurrection, but also implies present participation in the risen life of Christ as one who is "alive to God" (v. 11).

also live with Him, 9 knowing that [n]Christ, having been raised from the dead, dies no more. Death no longer has dominion over Him. 10 For the death that He died, [o]He died to sin once for all; but the life that He lives, [p]He lives to God. 11 Likewise you also, [3]reckon yourselves to be [q]dead indeed to sin, but [r]alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

12 [s]Therefore do not let sin reign in your mortal body, that you should obey it in its lusts. 13 And do not present your [t]members as [4]instruments of unrighteousness to sin, but [u]present yourselves to God as being alive from the dead, and your members as [4]instruments of righteousness to God. 14 For [v]sin shall not have dominion over you, for you are not under law but under grace.

From Slaves of Sin to Slaves of God

15 What then? Shall we sin [w]because we are not under law but under grace? Certainly not! 16 Do you not know that [x]to whom you present yourselves slaves to obey, you are that one's slaves whom you obey, whether of sin leading to death, or of obedience leading to righteousness? 17 But God be thanked that though you were slaves of sin, yet you obeyed from the heart [y]that form of doctrine to which you were [5]delivered. 18 And [z]having been set free from sin, you became slaves of righteousness. 19 I speak in human terms because of the weakness of your flesh. For just as you presented your members as slaves of uncleanness, and of lawlessness leading to more lawlessness, so now present your members as slaves of righteousness [6]for holiness.

20 For when you were [a]slaves of sin, you were free in regard to righteousness. 21 [b]What fruit did you have then in the things of which you are now ashamed? For [c]the end of those things is death. 22 But now [d]having been set free from sin, and having become slaves of God, you have your fruit [7]to holiness, and the end, everlasting life. 23 For [e]the wages of sin is death, but [f]the [8]gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Freed from the Law

7 Or do you not know, brethren (for I speak to those who know the law), that the law [1]has dominion over a man as long as he lives? 2 For [a]the woman who has a husband is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lives. But if the husband dies, she is released from the law of her husband. 3 So then [b]if, while her husband lives, she marries another man, she will be

3 [b][Matt. 5:32]

■ 6:11 reckon yourselves. See text note. Recognize that what has been said in vv. 1–10 is already the truth about yourself.

■ 6:12 do not let sin reign. Since the reign of sin has been broken, all attempts on sin's part to recover dominion can and must be resisted. The body (v. 13), once ruled by sinful desires, must no longer be yielded to them.

■ 6:13 present yourselves to God. Paul sees the secret of sanctification to lie in giving the whole person to God, from which follows the offering of the various parts of the body to Him.

being alive from the dead. All this is to be done in conscious awareness, and as a deliberate expression, of our new identity in Christ.

■ 6:14 sin shall not have dominion. This is an indicative statement, a promise, and not an imperative or exhortation.

not under law but under grace. The controlling principle in the life of the believer is the reign of grace that sets free from the reign of sin (5:21) and transforms into the likeness of Christ.

■ 6:15–23 That the Christian is not under law but under grace might appear to provide license for moral carelessness. This Paul denies, since under the reign of grace Christians have become slaves of God. The freedom of grace is therefore freedom for obedience and service, not for license. See "The Freedom and Bondage of the Will" at Jer. 17:9.

■ 6:17 God be thanked. While Paul stresses the activity of the individual in conversion ("present yourselves," v. 16; "obeyed," v. 17), he gratefully traces all right spiritual responses to the grace of God. While the individual is active in conversion, it is in a non-contributory and non-meritorious way, so that neither divine grace nor divine sovereignty is compromised.

that form of doctrine to which you were delivered. See text note. The opposite of slavery to sin is commitment to the new life-style that grace produces. In view here are both the gospel itself and the kind of teaching given in chs. 12—16, perhaps with Christ Himself as the model (cf. Eph. 4:20, 21).

■ 6:18 having been set free. See "Christian Liberty" at Gal. 5:1.

■ 6:19 I speak in human terms because of the weakness of your flesh. The illustration of slavery is an inadequate representation of the Christian life, especially in the Roman context, because it could convey harsh connotations of human slavery and inadequately express the truth that the yoke of Christ is easy (Matt. 11:28–30). Nevertheless, Paul retains the metaphor, perhaps believing that the greater danger is of failing to fulfill personal moral responsibility to the Lord.

leading to more lawlessness. Sinfulness does not stand still, but declines and grows worse.

■ 6:23 The triple contrast of wages, sin, and death, with gift, God, and eternal life, brings Paul's argument to a memorable focus.

■ 7:1–12 Paul now expands on the theme of the believer's relationship to the law. Although the law is holy, just, and good (v. 12), the sinner's subjection to it resulted only in condemnation, because law in its justice uncovered every transgression and failure. In this section the relationship of the sinner to the law is compared with marriage. The point of the comparison is that death brings an end to these relationships, and the widowed partner is free to be in a new relationship. Because the "marriage" with the law was broken by death, the believer is not an adulteress and cannot be condemned by the law. The believer dies through being united with Christ in His death, breaking the chain of disobedience and death that bound the sinner together with Adam in his destiny (5:12–21). The other side of the illustration is that union with Christ in His resurrection gives the believer a new relationship, in which a true, if not yet perfect, obedience is offered to God in love and gratitude. In the new relationship with Christ, the energy of the Spirit ensures that there will be life and fruitfulness.

■ 7:3 Paul assumes that remarriage after the death of a spouse is wholly consistent with the Christian gospel (1 Tim. 5:14).

called an adulteress; but if her husband dies, she is free from that law, so that she is no adulteress, though she has married another man. 4 Therefore, my brethren, you also have become [c]dead to the law through the body of Christ, that you may be married to another—to Him who was raised from the dead, that we should [d]bear fruit to God. 5 For when we were in the flesh, the sinful passions which were aroused by the law [e]were at work in our members [f]to bear fruit to death. 6 But now we have been delivered from the law, having died to what we were held by, so that we should serve [g]in the newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter.

Sin's Advantage in the Law

7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! On the contrary, [h]I would not have known sin except through the law. For I would not have known covetousness unless the law had said, [i]"You shall not covet." 8 But [j]sin, taking opportunity by the commandment, produced in me all manner of evil desire. For [k]apart from the law sin was dead. 9 I was alive once without the law, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died. 10 And the commandment, [l]which was to bring life, I found to bring death. 11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it killed me. 12 Therefore [m]the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good.

Law Cannot Save from Sin

13 Has then what is good become death to me? Certainly not! But sin, that it might appear sin, was producing death in me through what is good, so that sin through the commandment might become exceedingly sinful. 14 For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, [n]sold under fruit. A metaphor meaning result or natural consequence.

■ 7:6 we were held by. The complex of sin, condemnation, and death in Adam and under the law.

■ 7:7 Is the law sin. Paul's allusions to the law thus far have been negative in tone, especially his statement that the law arouses sinful passions (v. 5). Now he explains that recognizing the negative effect the law had on the life of fallen humanity is not a devaluation of the law itself (note the vehement language in 3:31). The God-ordained role of the law in a fallen world is to reveal the nature of human sin. The law not only defines sin, but acts as a catalyst, provoking the precise sinful reactions that it forbids and condemns (vv. 8–11). In itself the law, which brings us to know the reality of sin in our moral and spiritual system (3:20; 5:13, 20), is "holy and just and good" (v. 12). The law is a faithful revelation of what is right or wrong, and does not lose its validity to measure and direct our moral behavior.

■ 7:8 sin was dead. In the sense that either sin or its real offensiveness was not recognized.

■ 7:9 I was alive once without the law . . . I died. He was alive, not in the sense of having spiritual life (6:11), but in his own estimation. Knowing the law, which promised life for obedience (v. 10), made Paul realize that law-keeping was required. Trying to obey it made him realize that inwardly, in the desires of his heart (especially coveting, v. 8, the sin forbidden in the tenth commandment), he was constantly breaking the law even before he knew it, and when he saw what he was doing he could not stop it. Thus, Paul writes that sin, the anti-God, anti-law driving force within him, "deceived me, and . . . killed me" (v. 11). He became convinced that spiritually he was lifeless and lost. Paul offers his personal experience as an index of how sin and law relate in everyone.

■ 7:10 was to bring life. See Lev. 18:5; Deut. 30:15, 19. In itself, the law marks out a path that guarantees God's favor and humanity's happiness. But where sin reigns, the law brings only misery and death.

■ 7:11 sin . . . deceived me. Here, as elsewhere in Romans, the shadow of Eden emerges in Paul's language (Gen. 3:13; cf. 2 Cor. 11:3; 1 Tim. 2:14).

■ 7:12 holy and just and good. The law reflects God's character ("holy"); it is the objective norm for humanity's covenantal response to God ("just"); and it is beneficial for each one of us personally, since we have been created in the image of God ("good").

■ 7:13 Has then what is good become death to me. No, says Paul, it was sin in me that became the cause of my spiritual death by leading me to break God's good law. Sin is seen to be "exceedingly sinful."

■ 7:14–25 The sudden change to the present tense in vv. 15–25, by contrast with the statements describing the past in vv. 7–13, raises the question whether Paul is now describing his present experience. A variety of interpretations exists, including the following: (a) Paul is describing the unregenerate person or perhaps the Jew in particular from the standpoint of the gospel; (b) Paul is describing a Christian in an unnatural and unhealthy spiritual condition, one failing to draw on the indwelling Spirit's resources; (c) Paul is describing the transitional experience, possibly his own, of one who has been awakened to his true spiritual need, but has not yet entered a full experience of justification by faith; (d) Paul is describing himself and Christians generally who, although in Christ and free from the condemnation of the law, do not yet perfectly fulfill the requirements of the law. The last view is the most probable interpretation. It accounts for Paul's shift to the present tense while his theme in vv. 7–25 (God's holy law stimulating and exposing sin) continues, and for the presence in Paul's self-analysis here of elements found only in persons who have been united with the risen Christ to new life in the Spirit (6:4–11; 7:6; 8:4–9). Paul is aware that God's law is "spiritual" (v. 14). He actually delights in God's law, desiring to fulfill it perfectly (vv. 15–23), and he is distressed that sin in him opposes that desire. He is grateful at the prospect of future deliverance from this frustration (v. 24; 8:23). He distinguishes between his "mind," which aims at obedience, and his "flesh," which continues to sin (v. 25). All of these observations show that Paul is describing his experience as a new man in Christ.

Paul is actually describing a profound conflict that every Christian finds inherent in his life in Christ: Christ dwells in him (Gal. 2:20), yet sin also dwells in him (vv. 17, 20). Perfect conformity to God's will is at present out of his reach. Salvation has "already" and "not yet" dimensions.

It is important to remember that Paul is still discussing the role of the law. He highlights the frustrations of the present Christian experience simply to show how, for Christians as for Jews, God's good law provokes, exposes, and condemns sin without either being tainted by it or bringing deliverance from it.

■ 7:14 the law is spiritual. A further description of the law, in addition to v. 12. Far from repudiating the law (3:31), Paul declares that it sets forth the standard to which life governed by the Spirit should conform. By contrast, he calls himself "carnal" (that is, "fleshy") because he cannot fully reach this standard. As a moral ruin, now under reconstruction, he displays the marks of what he has been as a result of Adam as well as of what he will be as a result of Christ.

sin. 15 For what I am doing, I do not understand. [o]For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do. 16 If, then, I do what I will not to do, I agree with the law that it is good. 17 But now, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me. 18 For I know that [p]in me (that is, in my flesh) nothing good dwells; for to will is present with me, but how to perform what is good I do not find. 19 For the good that I will to do, I do not do; but the evil I will not to do, that I practice. 20 Now if I do what I will not to do, it is no longer I who do it, but sin that dwells in me.

21 I find then a law, that evil is present with me, the one who wills to do good. 22 For I [q]delight in the law of God according to [r]the inward man. 23 But [s]I see another law in [t]my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. 24 O wretched man that I am! Who will deliver me [u]from this body of death? 25 [v]I thank God—through Jesus Christ our Lord!

So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin.

Free from Indwelling Sin

8 There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus, [a]who[1] do not walk according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit. 2 For [b]the law of [c]the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from [d]the law of sin and death. 3 For [e]what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, [f]God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin: He condemned sin in the flesh, 4 that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us who [g]do not walk according to the flesh but according to the Spirit. 5 For [h]those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit, [i]the things of the Spirit. 6 For [j]to be [2]carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. 7 Because [k]the [3]carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, [l]nor indeed can be. 8 So then, those who are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But you are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if indeed the Spirit of God dwells in you. Now sold under sin. While not the whole truth about him (v. 25), Paul recognizes that from the viewpoint of God's holy law, this is the truth about his bodily existence and behavior (Christian though he is) and he proceeds to explain it.

■ 7:15 I do not understand. Paul is able to analyze, but not to explain, the contrast between himself and the "sin that dwells in me" (vv. 17, 20). There is a real and bewildering conflict between the energies of sin and of grace in his life. He hints, however, that indwelling sin is a temporary lodger in him. While sin still accompanies his new identity in Christ in this life, the new identity will result in the final triumph over indwelling sin (6:2–14).

■ 7:24 Who will deliver me. This is not a cry of despair, for Paul knows and provides the answer in v. 25.

body of death. The physical body, viewed as the means by which sin is expressed. Paul's desire here is not for death as such, but for the deliverance that will ultimately be consummated in resurrection (8:23; Phil. 3:20; 2 Cor. 5:2–4).

■ 7:25 So then . . . sin. Paul here summarizes the state of frustration that he has been describing since v. 14.

I myself. This means "I, one and the same person." Paul totally approves God's good law, yet "the flesh" still serves sin. New life in the Spirit is experienced by individuals in mind, body, and spirit that continue to bear the marks of sin.

■ 8:1–39 A vast rhapsodic expansion of the analysis of Christian assurance and hope contained in 5:1–11. Paul wants the glory of their salvation, rather than the depressing reminder just given of their continuing sinfulness, to fill his readers' minds and bring joy to their hearts.

■ 8:1 therefore. The apostle's concern here is pastoral. Paul is telling his readers, in light of the foregoing reminder of their continuing sinfulness, they must now recall their acceptance, immunity, and security in Christ.

no condemnation. Probably in both senses—the judgment and the punishment.

■ 8:2 the law of the Spirit of life . . . the law of sin and death. The law of the Spirit means His operative power (7:23). The law of sin is the operative power of sin, or else the divine law as used by sin to produce death (7:8–13).

■ 8:3 what the law could not do. Paul does not criticize the moral law, but notes once more that because of humanity's sinfulness it cannot bring salvation.

His own Son. The words are reminiscent of the binding of Isaac in Gen. 22:2, and point to the tremendous cost of our redemption (v. 32).

in the likeness of sinful flesh. The word "likeness" means similarity to a prototype; "sinful flesh" is human nature, which through the Fall came to be corrupted and controlled by sin. Christ's humanity was like ours in that He could be tempted, and lived His life as a part of a fallen world full of frailty and exposed to vast pressures. But He did not sin, and there was no moral and spiritual corruption in Him. Had Jesus been corrupted by sin in any way, He could not have fulfilled the Old Testament pattern, which required a sin offering to be "without blemish" (Lev. 4:3).

condemned sin in the flesh. Paul seems to mean that in the crucifixion of the incarnate Son of God sin was judged and condemned, so that now all its claims to have us condemned have become invalid. There is no condemnation remaining for those who are in Christ. See "Christian Liberty" at Gal. 5:1.

■ 8:4–8 Paul's contrast between the old pattern of life and the new, between life in the flesh and in the Spirit (7:6), is now worked out in detail in terms of two settled attitudes or mind-sets: one under the influence of the "flesh," the other under the influence of Christ through the Spirit within believers.

■ 8:7 enmity against God. Pure anti-God hostility, incapable of being anything else, is the real mind-set of everyone who is not yet renewed by the Spirit (3:9–18). The natural person regards God as an enemy.

■ 8:9–11 Christians are not in Adam, dominated by "the flesh," but are under the rule of Christ, because the Spirit who dwells in them is the Spirit of Christ (see "The Holy Spirit" at John 14:26). Though the body is still subject to death, life prevails because those united with Christ live to God in the sphere of the Spirit. The duality in view here is not simply the distinction between the physical and spiritual sides of a believer's life, but between two spheres of existence—bodily life in a fallen world with its ever present physical death, and life in the Spirit, a participation in the resurrection of Christ (1:4).

if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is not His. 10 And if Christ is in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. 11 But if the Spirit of [m]Him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, [n]He who raised Christ from the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies [q]through His Spirit who dwells in you.

Sonship Through the Spirit

12 [o]Therefore, brethren, we are debtors—not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh. 13 For [p]if you live according to the flesh you will die; but if by the Spirit you [q]put to death the deeds of the body, you will live. 14 For [r]as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God. 15 For [s]you did not receive the spirit of bondage again [t]to fear, but you received the [u]Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, [v]"Abba,[5] Father." 16 [w]The Spirit Himself bears witness with our spirit that we are children of God, 17 and if children, then [x]heirs—heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, [y]if indeed we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together.

From Suffering to Glory

18 For I consider that [z]the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. 19 For [a]the earnest expectation of the creation eagerly waits for the revealing of the sons of God. 20 For [b]the creation was subjected to futility, not willingly, but because of Him who subjected it in hope; 21 because the creation itself also will be delivered from the bondage of [6]corruption into the glorious [c]liberty of the children of God. 22 For we know that the whole creation [d]groans and labors with birth pangs together until now. 23 Not only that, but we also who have [e]the firstfruits of the Spirit, [f]even we ourselves groan [g]within ourselves, eagerly waiting for the adoption, the [h]redemption of our body. 24 For we were saved in this hope, but [i]hope that is seen is not hope; for why does one still hope for what he sees? 25 But if we hope for what we do not see, we eagerly wait for it with perseverance.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helps in our weaknesses. For [j]we do not know what we should pray for as we ought, but [k]the Spirit Himself makes intercession [7]for us with groanings which cannot

■ 8:10 the Spirit is life. This phrase could refer to the renewed spirit of the believer, but it probably means the Holy Spirit. The passage itself emphasizes the Holy Spirit, His work, and His close association with Christ. The indwelling "Spirit of God" is called the "Spirit of Christ" (v. 9), and His indwelling is the means whereby "Christ is in you" (v. 10). Paul views this relationship as so close that he can even say "the Lord is the Spirit" (2 Cor. 3:17; cf. 1 Cor. 15:45). These passages do not take away the distinction between Christ and the Spirit as separate Persons of the Trinity. Rather, Paul teaches that Christ and the Holy Spirit work together in applying the resurrected life of Christ to the believer. The Spirit's presence now is a guarantee of the future bodily resurrection of the believer (v. 11).

■ 8:11 A Trinitarian account of the realization of salvation, presupposing the unity of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit in their essential being, just as they are united in the complex work of redemption.

■ 8:12 From this point to the end of the chapter, Paul is generalizing about himself and all believers with him.

■ 8:13 put to death the deeds of the body. See "Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh" at 1 Cor. 6:11. The body is not evil of itself. Sin originates in the heart, the spiritual center of our being, including the will (Mark 7:18–23). But since we live in physical bodies, sin finds expression through the body. Therefore, not only at the inner points of origin, but also in its bodily expressions, sin must be put to death, that is, terminated (6:12, 13; 12:1).

■ 8:14 This way of holiness is now further described as the leading of the Spirit and is specified as the mark of God's sons. The language of "leading" is reminiscent of the "adoption" and leading of Israel in the Exodus and wilderness, which may be the background to Paul's thought here (9:4; Deut. 8:2, 15; 29:5). See "Adoption" at Gal. 4:5.

■ 8:15 Spirit of adoption. In addition to justification and freedom from condemnation (v. 1), believers are taken into the family of God and are inwardly persuaded by the Spirit that they belong there. The cry of the believer, "Abba, Father" (the Aramaic word Abba was used by Jesus Himself for God, Mark 14:36) indicates how vividly union with Christ was realized in the experience of the New Testament church. The cry is an expression of an assured awareness of sonship. The idea of adoption does not appear in the Old Testament legal system, and Paul seems to have borrowed this apt concept from Roman law, filling it out with the biblical theology of God's fatherhood over His people.

■ 8:16 bears witness. This joint witness of our own spirit and the Holy Spirit surfaces in the cry "Abba, Father" (Gal. 4:6).

■ 8:17–21 As all the children in a human family are heirs of the father along with the oldest brother, so believers are God's heirs in and with Christ. But receiving the inheritance that comes to us in Christ involves sharing in His suffering, the pathway to sharing in His glory (2 Cor. 4:17). "Glorified," "glory," and "glorious" in vv. 17–21 (cf. v. 30) mean the transforming, ennobling, joy-bringing manifestation of God in one's personal being. The glory to be revealed (v. 18) will appear as the sons of God are revealed in their new nature (v. 19), and the creation is liberated from its present state of imperfection and decay (vv. 20, 21). The revelation of this glory will more than wipe out all the harm and loss ("futility," v. 20) that the created order has suffered as a result of Adam's fall (Gen. 3:17). The regeneration of all things (Matt. 19:28; Acts 3:21; Rev. 21:1) in the created order corresponds to the freedom in glory (vv. 17, 18) enjoyed by the children of God.

■ 8:22–25 The present condition of creation is not its final one; it is like a mother groaning in labor pains. The entire creation has a destiny planned by God, and longs to be fulfilled, much as believers do (vv. 23, 26). Our salvation has begun—we have the Holy Spirit as a down payment—but it will not be consummated until the resurrection (the full realization of adoption in Christ, v. 23). Inevitably, therefore, the Christian life involves patient waiting in hope.

■ 8:24 we were saved in this hope. See "Hope" at Heb. 6:18. Travail (pain and grief because of how things are, 7:24, 25; 8:18, 36) is permeated with expectation, not disappointment and frustration (5:5), and with patience (v. 25) as well as eagerness (v. 23).

■ 8:26 the Spirit also helps. See "Prayer" at Luke 11:2. The Holy Spirit strengthens us in our state of weakness, of which we are constantly conscious. Perplexity as to how to pray for oneself is a universal Christian experience. Our inarticulate longings to pray properly are an indication to us that the indwelling Spirit is already helping us by interceding for us in our hearts, making requests that the Father will certainly answer.

be uttered. 27 Now [l]He who searches the hearts knows what the mind of the Spirit is, because He makes intercession for the saints [m]according to the will of God.

28 And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those [n]who are the called according to His purpose. 29 For whom [o]He foreknew, [p]He also predestined [q]to be conformed to the image of His Son, [r]that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. 30 Moreover whom He predestined, these He also [s]called; whom He called, these He also [t]justified; and whom He justified, these He also [u]glorified.

Perseverance of the Saints

In declaring the eternal security of God's people it is perhaps clearer to speak of their preservation than, as is usually done, of their perseverance. Perseverance means continued adherence to a belief despite discouragement and opposition. The reason that believers persevere in faith and obedience, however, is not the strength of their own commitment, but that Jesus Christ through the Holy Spirit preserves them.

John tells us that Jesus Christ is under promise to His Father (John 6:37–40) and to His people directly (John 10:28, 29) to keep them so that they never perish. In His prayer for the disciples at the close of the Last Supper, Jesus asked that those whom the Father had given Him (John 17:2, 6, 9, 24) would be preserved to glory. Christ continues to intercede for His people (Rom. 8:34; Heb. 7:25), and it is inconceivable that His prayer for them will go unanswered.

Paul celebrates the present and future security of the saints in the almighty love of God (Rom. 8:31–39). He rejoices in the certainty that God will complete the good work that He began in the lives of believers (Phil. 1:6; cf. 1 Cor. 1:8, 9; 1 Thess. 5:23, 24; 2 Thess. 3:3; 2 Tim. 1:12; 4:18).

The Westminster Confession says,

> They, whom God hath accepted in His Beloved, effectually called, and sanctified by His Spirit, can neither totally nor finally fall away from the state of grace, but shall certainly persevere therein to the end, and be eternally saved (17.1).

The regenerate are saved through persevering in faith and Christian living to the end (Heb. 3:6; 6:11; 10:35–39) as God preserves them.

This doctrine does not mean that all who ever professed to be Christians will be saved. Those who try to live a Christian life in their own abilities will fall away (Matt. 13:20–22). The false profession of many who say to Jesus, "Lord, Lord," will not be acknowledged (Matt. 7:21–23). Those who pursue holiness of heart and love of neighbor and so show themselves to have been regenerated by God are entitled to believe themselves secure in Christ. Belief in perseverance properly understood does not lead to careless living and arrogant presumption. The regenerate may backslide and fall into sin. In so doing they oppose their own new nature, and the Holy Spirit convicts them of their sin (cf. John 16:8) and compels them to repent and be restored to righteousness. When regenerate believers manifest a humble, grateful desire to please the God who saved them, the knowledge that He has pledged to keep them safe forever increases that desire. □ called. Brought to faith (v. 30; cf. 1:6).

■ 8:28 And we know. Christians assess the present in the light of their assurance about the future. As true Israelites, in whom the first and great commandment is fulfilled (Matt. 22:37, 38), our love for God is evoked by knowledge of His love for us (5:5–8).

according to His purpose. The purpose of God guarantees "good" for His people. For them this is not necessarily ease and quiet, but being like Christ (vv. 17–23, 29). God's providence rules in such a way as to ensure everything that happens to us is working for our ultimate good.

■ 8:29 foreknew . . . predestined. See "The Purpose of God: Predestination and Foreknowledge" at Mal. 1:2. Vv. 29, 30 explain God's "purpose" (v. 28). It is a plan of sovereign saving grace, entitling all who now believe to trace their faith and salvation back to an eternal decision by God to bring them to glory, and to look forward to that glory as a guaranteed certainty. The destiny appointed for believers (conformity to Christ and glorification with Him) flows from divine foreknowledge. Here it is persons, not facts or events, that God is said to foreknow. God does foresee events, but Paul's point is that God has of His own initiative chosen the objects of His active, saving love. "Know" implies intimate personal relationship, not merely awareness of facts and circumstances (Gen. 4:1; Amos 3:2; Matt. 1:25); it is virtually the equivalent of "elect."

■ 8:30 Those predestined are, in due time, "called," or effectively summoned through the gospel into saving fellowship with Christ (1:6; cf.

God's Everlasting Love

31 What then shall we say to these things? [v]If God is for us, who can be against us? 32 [w]He who did not spare His own Son, but [x]delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? 33 Who shall bring a charge against God's elect? [y]It is God who justifies. 34 [z]Who is he who condemns? It is Christ who died, and furthermore is also risen, [a]who is even at the right hand of God, [b]who also makes intercession for us. 35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? 36 As it is written:

> [c]"For Your sake we are killed all day long;
> We are accounted as sheep for the slaughter."

37 [d]Yet in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us. 38 For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor [e]principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, 39 nor height nor depth, nor any other created thing, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Israel's Rejection of Christ

9 I [a]tell the truth in Christ, I am not lying, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Spirit, 2 [b]that I have great sorrow and continual grief in my heart. 3 For [c]I could wish that I myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my [f]countrymen according to the flesh, 4 who are Israelites, [d]to whom pertain the adoption, [e]the glory, [f]the covenants, [g]the giving of the law, [h]the service of God, and [i]the promises; 5 [j]of whom are the fathers and from [k]whom, according to the flesh, Christ came, [l]who is over all, the eternally blessed God. Amen.

1 Cor. 1:9). We note that all of those "called" are also "justified." The call cannot refer to the outward call of the gospel that many reject. It is an inward call of God that performs what He intends. All who are predestined are called in this way. Predestination includes God's determination that a person will receive such an effective call (that is, the "effectual call"). Predestination is not based on God's knowing beforehand how people will respond to the gospel. Just as the predestined are called, so the called are both justified and certain to be finally glorified. The past tense of "glorified" indicates that from God's standpoint the work is as good as done. He will complete it as planned. See theological note "The Perseverance of the Saints."

■ 8:31–39 Paul now draws the entire argument of 1:16—8:39 to a triumphal conclusion in a series of challenges to every influence that might thwart the church's confident assurance of present preservation and future glory. The passage is reminiscent of the third Servant Song in Is. 50:4–9, on which it in part depends.

■ 8:31 What then shall we say to these things. Vv. 28–30 may be primarily in view here, but they should not be separated from 1:16—8:27, and especially not from 8:1–27. "These things" embraces the whole display of free grace to lost sinners in the letter thus far.

who can be against us. There will certainly be opposition, but Paul's point is that it lacks the ability to destroy faith. Since "God is for us," victorious spiritual survival is assured. "For us" expresses the eternal commitment of almighty love that is spelled out in vv. 38, 39.

■ 8:32 He who did not spare His own Son. Paul's words are an effective echo of the Septuagint (Greek translation) text of Gen. 22:12.

delivered Him up. The phrase is used elsewhere of active participation in the judicial condemnation of Christ (Matt. 20:19; 26:15, 16; 27:2, 18, 26; cf. Is. 53:6, 10).

for us all. Even for the worst of us who now believe (3:9–18; 5:6–8). Once more, as in 5:9, 10, Paul reasons from the greater to the less: for God to give His Son to die for us was the supreme gift, guaranteeing the subsequent gift of everything else that we need for our full and final glory (v. 30).

■ 8:33 It is God who justifies. The Judge has already dealt with all charges against us in the death and resurrection of Christ (4:25). Self-justification is futile.

■ 8:34 at the right hand of God. The position of honor and executive authority (cf. Ps. 110:1). There can be no condemnation for us (in either sense of the term, v. 1 note), if our enthroned sin-bearer intercedes for us in heaven (1 John 2:1) while the Holy Spirit intercedes in our hearts (v. 27).

■ 8:35 the love of Christ. The ease with which Paul uses this phrase interchangeably with "the love of God . . . in Christ" (v. 39) testifies to his underlying assumption of the identity of essence between the Father and the Son.

■ 8:36 Paul's appeal to Old Testament Scripture indicates that suffering is not an unexpected novelty for God's people. But in Christ such sufferings become stepping stones on the pathway to glory (5:1–5; 8:17–23).

■ 8:37 more than conquerors. The strength shown in enduring the hostility of persecutors and the pain of circumstances is astonishing.

■ 8:38, 39 No aspect of the created order, nor any event or being within it, can end our enjoyment of the active love of God to us in Christ.

■ 9:1–5 Paul himself now accounts for rejection of the gospel by most of his fellow Jews.

■ 9:1 my conscience . . . witness. Scripture nowhere defines "conscience." Here as in 2:15 and 13:5, Paul clearly thinks of it as moral self-awareness informed by divine revelation. Paul is taking a lawful oath to swear to his sincerity.

■ 9:3 I could wish that I myself were accursed. Although Paul is the apostle to the Gentiles, he echoes the sentiments of Moses in the face of the unbelief of the Jews (Ex. 32:30–32). They are his own countrymen and he agonizes over them (v. 2). To be willing to suffer God's curse for them is a strong statement of love.

■ 9:4 to whom . . . the adoption. The unbelief of Israel is magnified by the multiplied blessings they have experienced. In the eightfold privileges Paul lists in vv. 4, 5, he confirms his earlier statement in 3:1, 2.

■ 9:5 Christ . . . the eternally blessed God. The text correctly translates Paul's words as directly ascribing deity to Christ. See "Jesus Christ, God and Man" at John 1:14.

Israel's Rejection and God's Purpose

6 [m]But it is not that the word of God has taken no effect. For [n]they are not all Israel who are of Israel, 7 [o]nor are they all children because they are the seed of Abraham; but, [p]"In Isaac your seed shall be called." 8 That is, those who are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but [q]the children of the promise are counted as the seed. 9 For this is the word of promise: [r]"At this time I will come and Sarah shall have a son."

10 And not only this, but when [s]Rebecca also had conceived by one man, even by our father Isaac 11 (for the children not yet being born, nor having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works but of [t]Him who calls), 12 it was said to her, [u]"The older shall serve the younger." 13 As it is written, [v]"Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated."

Israel's Rejection and God's Justice

14 What shall we say then? [w]Is there unrighteousness with God? Certainly not! 15 For He says to Moses, [x]"I will have mercy on whomever I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whomever I will have compassion." 16 So then it is not of him who wills, nor of him who runs, but of God who shows mercy. 17 For [y]the Scripture says to the Pharaoh, [z]"For this very purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth." 18 Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He [a]hardens.

19 You will say to me then, "Why does He still find fault? For [b]who has resisted His will?" 20 But indeed, O man, who are you to reply against God? [c]Will the thing formed say to him who formed it, "Why have you made me like this?" 21 Does not the [d]potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make [e]one vessel for honor and another for dishonor?

22 What if God, wanting to show His wrath and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering [f]the vessels of wrath [g]prepared for destruction, 23 and that He might make known [h]the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had [i]prepared beforehand for glory, 24 even us whom He [j]called, [k]not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?

25 As He says also in Hosea:

> And her beloved, who was not beloved."

■ 9:6 word of God. His promise and plan to be the God of Abraham's seed (Gen. 17:7, 8). In the Old Testament era, natural descent did not automatically guarantee inheritance of the promise. God chose who should inherit it. This principle is evident in the families of Abraham and Isaac.

■ 9:11 the children. The case of Jacob and Esau clinches the argument in three ways: (a) because they were twins, as nearly equal in nature as possible; (b) because the purpose of God reversed even the small distinction that did exist, by causing the older brother to serve the younger; (c) because the purpose of God was stated before they were born (and therefore was not dependent on their actions). Election is not based on foreseen actions, deeds, or faith. Rather, it is based on God's sovereign predestinating grace.

■ 9:13 Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated. This distinguishing purpose of God in election (v. 11) is further confirmed by the words of Mal. 1:2, 3, which explain God's love to Israel as rooted in His free choice of Jacob rather than Esau. "Hated" here cannot be reduced to "loved less," as the context of Mal. 1:3, 4 makes clear. It must carry the sense of rejection and antipathy.

■ 9:14 What shall we say then. Cf. 8:31. Paul recognizes that his previous statement cannot be allowed to pass without further comment. Could the distinguishing sovereign purpose of God throw into jeopardy His attribute of perfect righteousness? The idea is clearly unthinkable—"Certainly not!" (6:2, 15; 7:7). Paul explains why by citing two biblical texts (Ex. 33:19; 9:16) in vv. 15, 17, from which he concludes that God is righteous in showing mercy to some while He hardens the hearts of others. When God shows mercy it is not a person receiving a reward earned by one's own efforts, but God's sovereign free grace extended to persons who are morally incapable of any acceptable effort (1:18—3:20). God owes mercy to none, so there is no injustice when mercy is not shown. Mercy is a divine prerogative; it rests on God's good pleasure. When God "hardens" Pharaoh's heart (v. 18), He does not create fresh evil in it, but gives Pharaoh over to his already evil desires as an act of judgment, resulting eventually in God's display of "power" (v. 22) in the destruction of Pharaoh's army (Ex. 14:17, 18, 23–28).

■ 9:17 the Scripture says to the Pharaoh. It was God who thus spoke to Pharaoh through Moses (Ex. 9:16), but for Paul the words of Scripture and the voice and authority of God are one.

■ 9:18 whom He wills. See theological note "Election and Reprobation."

■ 9:19 Why does He still find fault. By what right can God lay the blame for their sins on those He has hardened against Himself? Paul answers partially in terms of human experience (vv. 20, 21). It is unreasonable and irreverent for anyone to question the rightness of God's ways. Potters have every right to do as they please with the clay (Is. 64:8). All belong to "the same lump" (cf. vv. 10–13) of fallen humanity in Adam (5:12–14); all actively sin even before God hardens them in sinning (1:18–28). That God should show mercy to any from the Adamic lump and create vessels of honor from it is the kindness of grace; that others should become vessels for lesser use is a matter of His sovereign prerogative and is itself a display of perfect justice towards them.

■ 9:23 which He had prepared beforehand. See "The Purpose of God: Predestination and Foreknowledge" at Mal. 1:2. Paul does not elaborate on the preparation in view. The addition of "beforehand" in connection with the vessels of mercy may be pointing to the mercy that originates in God's good pleasure from eternity (8:29, 30), while the wrath in view is in direct response to existing ungodliness and unrighteousness (cf. 1:18–32). The distinction between elect and reprobate does not lie in anything in themselves (all deserve wrath), but exclusively in the will of God. Within that context, however, the objects prepared for destruction experience wrath that is the only possible and just reward for sin.

Present Condition of Israel

30 What shall we say then? [s]That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have attained to righteousness, [t]even the righteousness of faith; 31 but Israel, [u]pursuing the law of righteousness,

Election and Reprobation

To "elect" means to select or choose. According to the Bible, before creation God selected from the human race those whom He would redeem, justify, sanctify, and glorify in Jesus Christ (Rom. 8:28–39; Eph. 1:3–14; 2 Thess. 2:13, 14; 2 Tim. 1:9, 10). The divine choice is an expression of free and sovereign grace. It is not merited by anything in those who are chosen. God owes sinners no mercy of any kind, only condemnation; so it is a wonder that He should choose to save any of us.

Like every truth about God, the doctrine of election involves mystery, and it sometimes stirs controversy. But in Scripture it is a pastoral doctrine, helping Christians to see how great is the grace that saves them, and moving them to respond with humility, confidence, and praise. We do not know what others God has chosen among those who do not yet believe, nor why He chose us in particular. We do know that we believe now only because we were chosen, and we know that as believers we can rely on God to finish the good work He has begun (1 Cor. 1:8, 9; Phil. 1:6; 1 Thess. 5:23, 24; 2 Tim. 1:12; 4:18). For these reasons the knowledge of election is a source of gratitude and confidence.

Peter tells us we should be "diligent to make [our] call and election sure" (2 Pet. 1:10)—that is, certain to us. Election is known by its fruits. Paul knew that the Thessalonians had been chosen because he saw their faith, hope, and love, the transformation of their lives brought about by the gospel (1 Thess. 1:3–6).

Reprobation is the name given to God's eternal decision regarding those sinners whom He has not chosen for life. In not choosing them for life, God has determined not to change them. They will continue in sin, and finally will be judged for what they have done. In some cases God may further remove the restraining influences that keep a person from extremes of disobedience. This abandonment, called "hardening," is itself a penalty for sins (Rom. 9:18; 11:25; cf. Ps. 81:12; Rom. 1:24, 26, 28).

Reprobation is taught in the Bible (Rom. 9:14–24; 1 Pet. 2:8), but as a doctrine its bearing on Christian behavior is indirect. God's decree of election is secret; which persons are elect and which are reprobate will not be revealed before the Judgment. Until that time, God's command is that the call to repent and believe be preached to everyone.

■ 9:30 What shall we say then. See v. 14. Having accounted for Jewish unbelief in terms of divine sovereignty, Paul now diagnoses it as due to a fatal prior commitment to a false way of righteousness. Divine sovereignty and the guilt of human willfulness are for Paul two aspects of reality. By God's grace and sovereignty, Gentiles who did not seek God's righteousness have now received it through faith in Christ, but Israel as a people have failed to receive it because they sought it by a legal means in which it could not be found. Christ has been to the Jews a stumbling stone (the image is from Is. 8:14; 28:16) over which they have fallen (vv. 32, 33; 1 Pet. 2:8).

■ 9:31 the law of righteousness. Paul probably has the Mosaic law in view again. The mistake that the Jews have made lies not in what they

[v]has not attained to the law [4]of righteousness. 32 Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, [5]by the works of the law. For [w]they stumbled at that stumbling stone. 33 As it is written:

> [x]"Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense,
> And [y]whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame."

Israel Needs the Gospel

10 Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for [1]Israel is that they may be saved. 2 For I bear them witness [a]that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. 3 For they being ignorant of [b]God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own [c]righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God. 4 For [d]Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes.

5 For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, [e]"The man who does those things shall live by them." 6 But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, [f]"Do not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?'" (that is, to bring Christ down from above) 7 or, [g]"'Who will descend into the abyss?'" (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). 8 But what does it say? [h]"The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (that is, the word of faith which we preach): 9 that [i]if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. 10 For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. 11 For the Scripture says, [j]"Whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame." 12 For [k]there is no distinction between Jew and Greek, for [l]the same Lord over all [m]is rich to all who call upon Him. 13 For [n]"whoever calls [o]on the name of the LORD shall be saved."

Israel Rejects the Gospel

14 How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear [p]without a preacher? 15 And how shall they preach unless they are sent? As it is written:

> [q]"How beautiful are the feet of those who [2]preach the gospel of peace,
> Who bring glad tidings of good things!"

16 But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Isaiah says, [r]"LORD, who has believed our report?" 17 So then faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

pursued, but in the manner of pursuing it ("not . . . by faith, but . . . by the works of the law," v. 32 and text note).

■ 10:1 Brethren. A heartfelt appeal to the sympathy of his fellow Christians, the pathos of which is underlined by his recent reference to his relatives in the flesh (9:3, text note).

that they may be saved. Paul's concern in ch. 9 was with the salvation of the Jews, not merely with their role in redemptive history.

■ 10:2 zeal for God. Paul speaks here from personal experience, as to both the reality of the zeal and its wrong-headed and wrong-hearted character (Phil. 3:4–6).

■ 10:3 being ignorant of God's righteousness. Paul contrasts the divinely established righteousness with a person's efforts to establish one's own. See "Faith and Works" at James 2:24.

establish. Covenant language (Gen. 6:18; 17:7). Even in the context of the covenant God had made with them, they perverted His grace by seeing it as dependent on their own law-keeping.

■ 10:4 Christ is the end of the law. The interpretation followed here is that Christ is the goal or purpose of the law (Gal. 3:24). Another interpretation is that for believers Christ makes the law obsolete because they no longer strive to establish their own righteousness by it.

■ 10:5 the righteousness which is of the law. Paul's quotation from Lev. 18:5 is set originally in the context of God's redemptive grace requiring a person's responsive obedience (Lev. 18:2; cf. Ex. 20:1–17); it is not a statement about self-established righteousness.

■ 10:6–8 Deuteronomy exhibits God's salvation as achieved not by humanity's strenuous efforts, but by divine grace bringing it near. In particular, Deut. 30 sets this in the context of an anticipated return from exile-judgment (Deut. 30:1–6). Paul sees this fulfilled in the new covenant in Christ (Jer. 31:31–34; cf. 2 Cor. 3:7–18). Thus Christ was the end (goal) of the Mosaic law. To seek a self-established righteousness now is the equivalent of attempting to do what God alone could do and has done, in Christ's incarnation and resurrection. By contrast with all human efforts, God has brought near the word of salvation, and with it salvation itself. See "The Word of God: Scripture as Revelation" at Ex. 32:16.

■ 10:9, 10 confess . . . believe . . . believes . . . confession. In the parallelism of v. 10 Paul reverses the order of verbs in v. 9 and thereby indicates that heart-belief and mouth-confession belong together for justification ("righteousness") and salvation.

■ 10:12 there is no distinction. This is confirmed not only by the unity and universal kindness of God (v. 12), but specifically again by the teaching of the Old Testament in Joel 2:32, the statement fulfilled so dramatically at Pentecost (Acts 2:21).

■ 10:14, 15 An analysis of what is involved when anyone calls on the name of the Lord in order to be saved.

■ 10:14 Him in whom. Lit. "Him whom," an indication that for Paul, Christ Himself is the one true preacher of the gospel (cf. Eph. 2:17; John 10:16). The ministry of preaching Christ is therefore one of great honor, hence the quotation from Is. 52:7 (2 Cor. 5:18–20).

18 But I say, have they not heard? Yes indeed:

[s] "Their sound has gone out to all the earth,
And their words to the ends of the world."

19 But I say, did Israel not know? First Moses says:

[t] "I will provoke you to jealousy by those who are not a nation,
I will move you to anger by a [u]foolish nation."

20 But Isaiah is very bold and says:

[v] "I was found by those who did not seek Me;
I was made manifest to those who did not ask for Me."

21 But to Israel he says:

[w] "All day long I have stretched out My hands
To a disobedient and contrary people."

Israel's Rejection Not Total

11 I say then, [a]has God cast away His people? [b]Certainly not! For [c]I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. 2 God has not cast away His people whom [d]He foreknew. Or do you not know what the Scripture says of Elijah, how he pleads with God against Israel, saying, 3 [e]"LORD, they have killed Your prophets and torn down Your altars, and I alone am left, and they seek my life"? 4 But what does the divine response say to him? [f]"I have reserved for Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to Baal." 5 [g]Even so then, at this present time there is a remnant according to the election of grace. 6 And [h]if by grace, then it is no longer of works; otherwise grace is no longer grace. [i]But if it is of works, it is no longer grace; otherwise work is no longer work.

7 What then? [j]Israel has not obtained what it seeks; but the elect have obtained it, and the rest were [k]blinded. 8 Just as it is written:

[l] "God has given them a spirit of stupor,
Eyes that they should not see
And ears that they should not hear,
To this very day."

■ 10:18 Their sound has gone out to all the earth. The immediate context of the citation from Ps. 19:4 is that of God's general revelation (Ps. 19:1–3). Paul's use of it to prove from Scripture that Israel has heard the message of God implies that his quotation of this section of the psalm carries with it the teaching of the entire psalm, which speaks of both general revelation in nature and special revelation in His word. The latter takes place in the context of the former. The underlying logic may be: If those without special revelation have "heard" the message of God's glory in creation, how much more have those who received special revelation heard that message.

■ 10:19–21 The failure of the Jews cannot be excused because they did not hear the message, or because they could not understand it. Moses and Isaiah contrast God's own people with those who lack understanding (Deut. 32:21), and with those who were not God-seekers but who were brought to know Him (Is. 65:1).

■ 11:1–10 Paul now pointedly asks whether God has rejected His people. The apostle himself is evidence that God has not fully and finally rejected the people on whom He set His love. Just as a believing remnant could be found in Israel in Elijah's day, so there continues to be a remnant formed by God's grace. By grace the elect obtained the salvation they sought. The rest were hardened.

■ 11:1 has God cast away. The verb conveys the sense of vigorous pushing away from Himself. The form of the question in Greek anticipates a negative answer.

I also am an Israelite. See Phil. 3:5, 6. Paul's impeccable lineage is traced back to Abraham, the great patriarch, but also to Benjamin, the only son of Jacob to be born in Israel. It was the tribe in whose territory Jerusalem was and also the tribe of Saul, the first king.

■ 11:2 whom He foreknew. Paul hints that God's special love and gracious choice of them makes it unthinkable that He should finally reject them as a people, even though they have now rejected Him by rejecting Christ.

■ 11:5 a remnant according to the election. In Elijah's time there was wholesale apostasy, and yet the presence of a remnant of the faithful indicated that God had not fully and finally rejected His people. Paul's thinking about the remnant is rooted in the teaching of Isaiah, whose son Shear-Jashub's name means "a remnant shall return" (Is. 7:3 and text note; cf. 9:27; Is. 1:9; 6:13; 10:20–22; 11:11–16).

■ 11:6 And if by grace, then it is no longer of works. Again the way of grace is contrasted with works of the law (3:20, 27, 28; 4:2, 6; 9:12, 32).

■ 11:8–10 The passages cited (Deut. 29:4; Is. 29:10; Ps. 69:22, 23) describe a biblical pattern of divine activity in the judicial hardening of hearts—a pattern Paul sees repeated in his own day.

9 And David says:

m "Let their table become a snare and a trap,
A stumbling block and a recompense to them.
10 Let their eyes be darkened, so that they do not see,
And bow down their back always."

Israel's Rejection Not Final

11 I say then, have they stumbled that they should fall? Certainly not! But n through their [2]fall, to provoke them to o jealousy, salvation has come to the Gentiles. 12 Now if their [3]fall is riches for the world, and their failure riches for the Gentiles, how much more their fullness!

13 For I speak to you Gentiles; inasmuch as p I am an apostle to the Gentiles, I magnify my ministry, 14 if by any means I may provoke to jealousy those who are my flesh and q save some of them. 15 For if their being cast away is the reconciling of the world, what will their acceptance be r but life from the dead?

16 For if s the firstfruit is holy, the lump is also holy; and if the root is holy, so are the branches. 17 And if t some of the branches were broken off, u and you, being a wild olive tree, were grafted in among them, and with them became a partaker of the root and [4]fatness of the olive tree, 18 v do not boast against the branches. But if you do boast, remember that you do not support the root, but the root supports you.

19 You will say then, "Branches were broken off that I might be grafted in." 20 Well said. Because of w unbelief they were broken off, and you stand by faith. Do not be haughty, but fear. 21 For if God did not spare the natural branches, He may not spare you either. 22 Therefore consider the goodness and severity of God: on those who fell, severity; but toward you, [5]goodness, x if you continue in His goodness. Otherwise y you also will be cut off. 23 And they also, z if they do not continue in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again. 24 For if you were cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and were grafted contrary to nature into a cultivated olive tree, how much more will these, who are natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?

25 For I do not desire, brethren, that you should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be

23 z [2 Cor. 3:16]

■ 11:11–24 The rejection of the Jewish people is neither total nor final. Just as the rejection of Christ among the Jews has led to the acceptance of the gospel among the Gentiles, so God means to use the Gentiles to provoke the Jews to envy the Gentiles' blessings, leading to their salvation and correspondingly greater riches.

■ 11:11 have they stumbled that they should fall. Once again the form of Paul's question anticipates (and receives) a negative answer. The Jews' rejection of Christ is not irreversible. Paul sees a divine pattern and purpose behind the unbelief of which the Jews are guilty. The pattern of his thought in v. 11, therefore, is as follows: (a) the transgression of the Jews has led to the justification of the Gentiles; (b) the salvation of the Gentiles will cause the Jews to envy; (c) the envy of the Jews will draw them to the same salvation as the Gentiles.

■ 11:12 their fullness. In the context of Paul's argument, "fullness" here can only signify their reception of Christ and their restoration to God. The more difficult question is whether the term "fullness" points to a full restoration of the remnant or to the restoration of the full number of the nation in some sense. The second seems to fit better the general direction of the passage (vv. 25–32).

■ 11:13 I speak to you Gentiles. Why he singles out the Gentiles in the Roman church is made clear in vv. 17–24.

apostle to the Gentiles. Paul here provides a unique insight into his thinking about his own ministry to the Gentiles: it too has his own Jewish people in view, in terms of 9:19 and 11:11 (Acts 9:15; Eph. 3:1; Gal. 2:8).

■ 11:15 life from the dead. This phrase may simply denote unprecedented blessing. Although the wording is slightly different from Paul's normal usage ("resurrection from the dead," 1:4; cf. 1 Cor. 15:12, 13, 21, 42), some take the phrase to refer to the general resurrection of the last day, understanding the conversion of the Jews to be an event of the end times, an immediate herald of the final resurrection.

■ 11:16 the lump is also holy. Paul applies spiritually the principle that the firstfruits serve as the pledge of the final harvest (cf. Num. 15:17–21).

■ 11:17 a wild olive tree . . . grafted in. See Jer. 11:16; Hos. 14:6 for Israel as an olive tree. Wild olive shoots do seem to have been grafted into cultivated trees to bring fresh vitality to them. Paul's words, however, probably intentionally stretch beyond strict horticulture. Gentiles have been grafted into the people of God "contrary to nature" (v. 24).

■ 11:18 do not boast. Because their salvation is entirely by grace, they have no cause for boasting or despising Jewish believers. Such Gentile arrogance in relation to Jews would simply mirror the same spiritual pride that has led to the Jews' hardening (2:17).

■ 11:20 While the rejoinder to Paul in v. 19 is formally true, the breaking off of the Jewish branches was an act of righteous judgment on unbelief, and the ingrafting of the Gentiles is a matter of grace and therefore of faith. Their ingrafting (v. 19) is not therefore based on any superior quality in the Gentiles.

fear. Tender-spirited awe, not arrogance, is the appropriate response to God's grace.

■ 11:22 consider the goodness and severity of God. See "The Purpose of God: Predestination and Foreknowledge" at Mal. 1:2. Gentile believers are urged to take seriously the revelation of God's character in these events of providence. God's kindness bears fruit only when His people continue in it (2:4).

■ 11:23, 24 The cutting off of Israel is because of unbelief, and not because the Gentiles were inherently better qualified for life in the olive tree. Moreover, Gentile believers should never forget that the gospel came to the Jew first (1:16, 17).

■ 11:25–32 Paul's close reasoning here has been understood in three major ways: (a) He is showing how God saves all of His elect people ("all Israel" in v. 26 being taken as basically synonymous with the church, that is, spiritual Israel). (b) He is showing how God saves all the elect of Israel who are to be saved. (c) He is showing how God will, in the future, bring such widespread salvation to the Jewish people that, in an obvious general sense, it can be said that "all Israel will be saved" (v. 26). While

[a]wise in your own [b]opinion, that [c]blindness in part has happened to Israel [d]until the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. [26] And so all Israel will be [7]saved, as it is written:

[d]"The Deliverer will come out of Zion,
And He will turn away ungodliness from Jacob;
[27] For [e]this is My covenant with them,
When I take away their sins."

[28] Concerning the gospel they are enemies for your sake, but concerning the election they are [f]beloved for the sake of the fathers. [29] For the gifts and the calling of God are [g]irrevocable. [30] For as you [h]were once disobedient to God, yet have now obtained mercy through their disobedience, [31] even so these also have now been disobedient, that through the mercy shown you they also may obtain mercy. [32] For God has [8]committed them [i]all to disobedience, that He might have mercy on all.

not without difficulties, some form of this last view seems most likely for the following reasons. First, hints of it seem to appear already in vv. 11, 12, 15, 16, 24. Second, v. 25 suggests that an end to the partial hardening of Israel is in view. Third, "Israel" in v. 26 is not naturally interpreted as signifying a different entity from the Israel in view in vv. 1–24 and vv. 28–31, where national Israel (not spiritual Israel) is in view. Fourth, "mystery" in v. 25 would seem inappropriate and exaggerated if Paul's teaching were simply that all elect Jews will be saved. Finally, this view accords well with the quotations in vv. 26, 27 from Is. 59:20, 21; 27:9; Jer. 31:33, 34, which appear to speak of a comprehensive banishment of that sin that has been the cause of Israel's alienation from God.

■ 11:25 mystery. In Paul, and Jewish thought generally, a divine secret that has now been revealed. Some interpreters conclude that what immediately follows constitutes the mystery (probably the widespread conversion of the Jews). Others hold that the mystery is the pattern of God's working in the Jew-Gentile interrelationship referred to in v. 11.

fullness. The term may be taken to have a specifically numerical connotation.

has come in. An expression used infrequently by Paul, but commonplace in the Gospels to describe entrance into life or the kingdom of God (e.g., Mark 9:47).

■ 11:26 all Israel. A critical expression at this point in Paul's argument, and one whose meaning is much debated. It could mean "all (spiritual) Israel," that is, all elect persons both Jew and Gentile. Alternately, it may mean "all" Israel in the sense of "all Jews destined to be saved throughout history." Or, as suggested above, it may point to a time of mass conversion among Jewish people. See 11:25–32 note, points (a), (b), and (c). The exegesis of "all Israel" will depend on the interpretation and weighing of other factors in the passage.

The Deliverer will come out of Zion. The quotation is from Ps. 14:7, Is. 27:9, and Is. 59:20, 21.

■ 11:29 the gifts . . . are irrevocable. See "Gifts and Ministries" at Eph. 4:7.

■ 11:30 Paul's argument concludes in a manner parallel to 3:19–21, stressing that Jew and Gentile are united in two things: the disobedience of sin, and the offer to them of the mercy of God. The wisdom and sovereignty of God's grace are demonstrated in the way in which His purposes are fulfilled: the disobedience of the Jew leads to God's mercy reaching the Gentiles; the mercy of God to the Gentiles leads to the reception of mercy by the Jews. There is no difference—all (Jew and Gentile alike) have sinned (3:23), and God has mercy on both (1:16).

■ 11:33–36 Having drawn together the various strands of his argument, Paul now responds in lyrical fashion with a song of praise that reaches heights that correspond to the depth of concern he had sounded in 9:2, 3. God's dealings with Jew and Gentile display a cross-section of His majesty in which His sovereign will ("of Him"), His sovereign activity ("through Him") and His sovereign glory ("to Him") are richly displayed (v. 36).

■ 12:1 The doxology at the end of ch. 11 and the nature of the opening verses of ch. 12 signal a new stage in Paul's exposition. From now until the conclusion of the letter he is concerned to apply his teaching.

mercies of God. Love for the poor and needy, and support for those who cannot support themselves in a sinful world (cf. Luke 10:36, 37). The doctrine of grace in chs. 3—11 leads to a life motivated by gratitude.

present your bodies a living sacrifice. Jew and Gentile now belong together as the people of God for whom the final blood sacrifice has been made (3:25). The sacrifice that remains is that of thankful response (cf. 6:17). "Bodies" means whole persons as embodied individuals (6:12, 13, 19; 8:13).

reasonable service. The worship that is appropriate for redeemed creatures to offer.

■ 12:2 do not be conformed . . . be transformed by the renewing of your mind. The Christian's mind-set is to be determined and reshaped by knowledge of the gospel, by the power of the Spirit, and by the concerns of the age to come (8:5–9; 13:11–14), rather than by the passing fashion of this age (2 Cor. 4:18; 1 John 2:17). Only by such sanctifying renewal is the Christian made sufficiently sensitive to "prove" (discern) the behavior that is God's will in each situation.

not be conformed to this world, but [d]be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may [e]prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

Serve God with Spiritual Gifts

3 For I say, [f]through the grace given to me, to everyone who is among you, [g]not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly, as God has dealt [h]to each one a measure of faith. 4 For [i]as we have many members in one body, but all the members do not have the same function, 5 so [j]we, being many, are one body in Christ, and individually members of one another. 6 Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is [k]given to us, let us use them: if prophecy, let us [l]prophesy in proportion to our faith; 7 or ministry, let us use it in our ministering; [m]he who teaches, in teaching; 8 [n]he who exhorts, in exhortation; [o]he who gives, with liberality; [p]he who leads, with diligence; he who shows mercy, [q]with cheerfulness.

■ 12:3 through the grace given to me. Paul's ministry exists only because of grace (1:5), as do spiritual gifts (Greek charismata, v. 6). Realistic assessment of one's gift ("think soberly") is essential, and involves a recognition of one's "measure of faith," that is, knowing to what extent one has the faith suited for exercising particular gifts (v. 6). The faith by which we are justified is a separate question.

■ 12:4–8 As in 1 Cor. 12, Paul makes use of the analogy of the body and its various parts to illustrate the nature of the church. He stresses its unity (v. 5), its diversity (v. 6), and the need to recognize one's gift and to use it appropriately (vv. 6–8).

■ 12:6 Having then gifts . . . let us use them. See "Gifts and Ministries" at Eph. 4:7.

prophecy. To prophesy is to speak the word of God, but the nature of New Testament prophecy is nowhere defined and is much debated. Prophecy is distinguished here and elsewhere from teaching (v. 7; Acts 13:1; 1 Cor. 12:29; Eph. 4:11), perhaps because of the greater sense of immediacy and spontaneity attached to it (Acts 13:1–3; 21:10, 11).

in proportion to our faith. Some interpreters see "faith" as the prophet's own faith (cf. vv. 3, 6). Others understand "faith" to mean the truth content of the gospel as the standard and measure of each prophetic utterance, testing whether the utterance conforms to "the pattern of sound words" (2 Tim. 1:13).

■ 12:7, 8 Paul recognizes the wide variety and practicality of these gifts (Greek charismata) and the intertwining of natural endowments with them. Throughout, it is clear that the blessing of those ministered to is the paramount consideration in using the gifts.

■ 12:9–21 As in 1 Cor. 12—13, when discussing the church as the body of Christ, Paul stresses the importance of love. His series of rapid exhortations carries echoes of Jesus' teaching, and is expressed in vivid language.

■ 12:9 without hypocrisy. In classical Greek drama, the hypokrites (actor) wore a face-mask. The Christian's loving behavior should not be acting a part or wearing a mask, but an authentic expression of goodwill.

■ 12:10 kindly affectionate . . . with brotherly love. An unusual linguistic combination of brotherly love with the love of natural affection. The church is a family, the "house of God" (1 Tim. 3:15; cf. 1 Tim. 5:1, 2).

■ 12:11 There must be no hesitation or sloth in Christian living. The Christian should be "fervent," living for Christ with enthusiasm and energy.

■ 12:13 hospitality. Hospitality for visiting Christians was an important part of early Christian life (Heb. 13:2; 3 John 5–8).

■ 12:14 See Luke 6:27, 28.

■ 12:15 See Luke 6:31. The genuine unity of the body of Christ is especially evident in the empathy of its members in moments of high joy or deep sorrow.

■ 12:16 Paul's language gives the idea of Christians sharing the same thoughts with respect to one another, another indication of the strategic role of the mind in sanctification (vv. 1, 2). One manifestation of this will be an absence of conceit and pride in worldly position (Phil. 2:1–8). Christians should be distinguished by their readiness to "associate with the humble."

Do not be wise in your own opinion. See Prov. 3:7. A further focus on the thought-world, How we think determines how we live.

■ 12:17 The unifying theme in vv. 17–21 is the way the Christian reacts to the non-Christian environment.

■ 12:18 live peaceably with all. The Christian is a peacemaker by obligation and aim. Harmony is not always possible, since truth divides as well as unites. Paul's double qualification ("If . . . as much as") recognizes this, but the obligation to strive for peace in personal relations with others remains.

■ 12:19–21 The Christian must be free from the desire to "get even." Such release from the instinct for revenge is possible because the believer knows that God will right all wrongs in His own perfect judgment (Deut. 32:35). Moreover, Scripture urges us, while God remains patient with the wrongdoer, to show grace to him (Prov. 25:21, 22).

■ 12:20 heap coals of fire on his head. This may lead to conversion, or at least to such a sense of shame that evil behavior is modified.

For there is no authority except from God, and the authorities that exist are appointed by God. 2 Therefore whoever resists *b*the authority resists the ordinance of God, and those who resist will *l*bring judgment on themselves. 3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to evil. Do you want to be unafraid of the authority? *c*Do what is good, and you will have praise from the same. 4 For he is God's minister to you for good. But if you do evil, be afraid; for he does not bear the sword in vain; for he

Christians and Civil Government

Civil government is a means ordained by God for ruling and maintaining order in communities. It is one of a number of such means, including ministers in the church and parents in the home. Each such means has its own sphere of authority under Christ, who now rules and sustains creation, and the limits of each sphere are set by reference to the others. In our fallen world these authorities are institutions of God's "common grace" (kindly providence), standing as a bulwark against anarchy and the dissolution of ordered society.

With reference to Rom. 13:1–7 and 1 Pet. 2:13–17, the Westminster Confession explains the sphere of civil government as follows:

> God, the supreme Lord and King of all the world, hath ordained civil magistrates, to be, under Him, over the people, for His own glory, and the public good; and, to this end, hath armed them with the power of the sword, for the defence and encouragement of them that are good, and for the punishment of evil doers . . . Civil magistrates may not assume to themselves the administration of the Word and sacraments; or the power of the keys of the kingdom of heaven (23.1, 3).

Because civil government exists for the welfare of the whole society, God gives it the "power of the sword," the lawful use of force to administer just laws (Rom. 13:4). Christians must acknowledge this as part of God's order (Rom. 13:1, 2). A government may collect taxes for the services it renders (Matt. 22:15–21; Rom. 13:6, 7). But if it forbids what God requires or requires what God forbids, Christians cannot submit, and some form of civil disobedience becomes inescapable (Acts 4:18–31; 5:17–29).

The church's sphere of authority relates to the civil government at the level of morality. The church has the responsibility to comment on the morality of governments and their policies on the basis of God's word, but should not appropriate to itself the power to set such policies. Whereas these assessments may foster political action among Christians, they should act in their capacity as citizens rather than as representatives of the church. In this way the gospel works through moral persuasion and the working of God's grace among citizens.

Christians should urge governments to fulfill their proper role. They are to pray for, obey, and yet watch over civil governments (1 Tim. 2:1–4; 1 Pet. 2:13, 14), reminding them that God ordained them to rule, protect, and keep order. □

■ 13:1 Christians have a distinct rationale for an appropriate submission to the governing authorities: the recognition that God Himself is the source of government in society (Prov. 8:15, 16; Dan. 2:21). See theological note "Christians and Civil Government."

■ 13:2, 3 Rebellion against the authority implies rebellion against God's ordinance.

■ 13:4 God's minister to you for good. The state's authority is for society's benefit; this is its normal function, and Paul assumes it may be realized in practical terms even when governments are professedly non-Christian.

the sword. The power of life and death. Capital punishment is undoubtedly in view. Elsewhere Paul accepts the principle of such punishment where appropriate (Acts 25:11).

to execute wrath. What the individual must not do out of a motive of revenge (12:19), the state may legitimately do in the pursuit of justice.

is God's minister, an avenger to execute wrath on him who practices evil. 5 Therefore [d]you must be subject, not only because of wrath [e]but also for conscience' sake. 6 For because of this you also pay taxes, for they are God's ministers attending continually to this very thing. 7 [f]Render therefore to all their due: taxes to whom taxes are due, customs to whom customs, fear to whom fear, honor to whom honor.

Love Your Neighbor

8 Owe no one anything except to love one another, for [g]he who loves another has fulfilled the law. 9 For the commandments, [h]"You shall not commit adultery," "You shall not murder," "You shall not steal," [z]"You shall not bear false witness," "You shall not covet," and if there is any other commandment, are all summed up in this saying, namely, [i]"You shall love your neighbor as yourself." 10 Love does no harm to a neighbor; therefore [j]love is the fulfillment of the law.

Put on Christ

11 And do this, knowing the time, that now it is high time [k]to awake out of sleep; for now our salvation is nearer than when we first believed. 12 The night is far spent, the day is at hand. [l]Therefore let us cast off the works of darkness, and [m]let us put on the armor of light. 13 [n]Let us walk [3]properly, as in the day, [o]not in revelry and drunkenness, [p]not in lewdness and lust, [q]not in strife and envy. 14 But [r]put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and [s]make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill its lusts.

The Law of Liberty

14 Receive[a] one who is weak in the faith, but not to disputes over doubtful things. 2 For one believes he [b]may eat all things, but he who is weak eats only vegetables. 3 Let not him who eats despise him who does not eat, and [c]let not him who does not eat judge him who eats; for God has received him. 4 [d]Who are you to judge another's servant? To his own master he stands or falls. Indeed, he will be made to stand, for God is able to make him stand.

■ 13:6 you also pay taxes. Christian submission is a response of the conscience instructed by divine revelation. Because the task of government is divinely ordained and requires financial support, the Christian can pay taxes with a distinctive motive and understanding, as an element of devotion to God.

■ 13:7 Render . . . to all their due. See Matt. 22:21. Paul was evidently familiar with Jesus' statement, and here indicates how it is applied.

■ 13:8–10 Paul now applies further his basic principle of Christian consecration. The connecting link between vv. 7 and 8 is found in the exhortation of v. 7, that the Christian has a financial obligation to the state. This is an application of a general principle now stated, that all obligations must be met. One obligation is permanent—to love others.

■ 13:8 has fulfilled the law. See "Antinomianism" at 1 John 3:7.

■ 13:9 love your neighbor as yourself. See Lev. 19:18; "Love" at 1 Cor. 13:13. Not an exhortation to self-love, but rather the concern assumed for oneself as created in the image of God (Gen. 1:26, 27) is to be exhibited to others (Luke 6:31).

■ 13:11 knowing the time. Spiritual discernment is rooted in the apprehension of divine revelation. Paul's stress on the role of the mind is again evident.

salvation. Here in the sense of future, final redemption (8:23).

■ 13:12 The night is far spent. Paul speaks here of the "night" of this present age. The "light of the world" has come (John 8:12), and we must prepare for the Second Advent of Christ and the age to come.

let us cast off . . . put on. The use of the metaphor "armor of light" stresses that developing positive spiritual graces, not merely rejecting vices, is essential to spiritual defense.

■ 13:13 Let us walk properly. See text note. Paul's warning against a sinful life-style strikingly includes not only the traditional sins of the flesh ("revelry and drunkenness . . . lewdness and lust") but also insidious vices that can be harbored or even paraded in the heart of the church ("strife and envy").

■ 13:14 But put on the Lord Jesus Christ. A further exposition of what it means to "put on the armor of light" (v. 12), showing that those who are in Christ must live consistently with their new status (Eph. 4:1).

■ 14:1 Receive one who is weak. The Christian's basic attitude to a fellow-Christian is one of welcome and acceptance based on God's attitude to us in Christ (v. 3; 15:7). There must be charity toward the "weak" person whose conscience is still bound by scruples from which the gospel normally sets us free (v. 2).

disputes over doubtful things. In this instance, questions of food, drink, and the religious observation of days. While Paul does not regard these controversies as insoluble, he regards the unity of the church's fellowship as more important than resolving them (cf. 12:5, 10, 16). The issues in view here did not belong to the gospel, but to the relative strength or weakness of the individual's faith in the gospel. Where essentials of the gospel were at stake, Paul's response was very different (e.g., Gal. 1:6, 7; 3:1–5; Phil. 3:2, 18, 19).

■ 14:2 eats only vegetables. Vegetarianism was not required by the Old Testament, though it appears there (e.g., Dan. 1:12).

■ 14:3 despise . . . judge. The tendency of those who better understand the gospel is to be impatient with the inhibitions of the "weak" as legalistic bondage. The temptation of the "weak" is to condemn the "strong" for behavior that seems to be lawless license. These mistaken responses should yield to the light of God's gracious acceptance of both "weak" and "strong." Furthermore, a fellow-believer is God's servant, not ours, and is answerable to Him, not to us. It must be understood that the issues in such possible disputes are not matters of real morality, but of morally indifferent things.

■ 14:5 One person esteems one day above another. A pattern of holy days characterized the Jewish year, and it is probably to these that Paul refers, and not the Sabbath. If the Sabbath were in view it would have been more natural to say, "One man considers the Sabbath above the other days."

Let each be fully convinced. See 4:21.

fully convinced in his own mind. 6 He who [f]observes the day, observes it to the Lord; [f]and he who does not observe the day, to the Lord he does not observe it. He who eats, eats to the Lord, for [g]he gives God thanks; and he who does not eat, to the Lord he does not eat, and gives God thanks. 7 For [h]none of us lives to himself, and no one dies to himself. 8 For if we [i]live, we live to the Lord; and if we die, we die to the Lord. Therefore, whether we live or die, we are the Lord's. 9 For [j]to this end Christ died [2]and rose and lived again, that He might be [k]Lord of both the dead and the living. 10 But why do you judge your brother? Or why do you show contempt for your brother? For [l]we shall all stand before the judgment seat of [3]Christ. 11 For it is written:

[m] "As I live, says the LORD,
Every knee shall bow to Me,
And every tongue shall confess to God."

12 So then [n]each of us shall give account of himself to God. 13 Therefore let us not judge one another [4]anymore, but rather resolve this, [o]not to put a stumbling block or a cause to fall in our brother's way.

The Law of Love

14 I know and am convinced by the Lord Jesus [p]that there is nothing unclean of itself; but to him who considers anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean. 15 Yet if your brother is grieved because of your food, you are no longer walking in love. [q]Do not destroy with your food the one for whom Christ died. 16 [r]Therefore do not let your good be spoken of as evil; 17 [s]for the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and [t]peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. 18 For he who serves Christ in [5]these things [u]is acceptable to God and approved by men.

19 [v]Therefore let us pursue the things which make for peace and the things by which [w]one may [6]edify another. 20 [x]Do not destroy the work of God for the sake of food. [y]All things indeed are pure, [z]but it is evil for the man who eats with [7]offense. 21 It is good neither to eat [a]meat nor drink wine nor do anything by which your brother stumbles [8]or is offended or is made weak. 22 [9]Do you have faith? Have it to yourself before God. [b]Happy is he who does not condemn himself in what he approves. 23 But he who doubts is condemned if he eats, because he does not eat from faith; for [c]whatever is not from faith is [1]sin.

Bearing Others' Burdens

15 We [a]then who are strong ought to bear with the [1]scruples of the weak, and not to please ourselves. 2 [b]Let each of us please his neighbor for his good, leading to [2]edification.

■ 14:6, 7 An appeal to what is shared by both groups (v. 3), namely the desire to honor the same Lord. That both belong to Him puts minor divisions into perspective. See "The Kingdom of God" at Luke 17:20.

■ 14:9–12 Christ alone is the Lord (v. 8) and Judge of His people (see "The Final Judgment" at Matt. 25:41). The cost to Him of this privilege was immense and exposes the inappropriateness of believers judging or despising their brothers. We must give an account of our own lives to the Lord, as those being judged, not as those who judge.

■ 14:13—15:4 While Paul's own conscience has been liberated by the teaching of Christ (v. 14; cf. Mark 7:18, 19) he recognizes that not all believers have come to enjoy such freedom. Consideration for such brethren ("walking in love," v. 15) means avoiding behavior that might distress them. Two specific injunctions to this effect follow in vv. 15, 16.

■ 14:15 Do not destroy with your food the one for whom Christ died. In the context of Jewish faith, "destroy" means to cut off from the covenant community (Deut. 28:21, 45, 48, 51, 61, 63). To encourage behavior that weak believers' consciences forbid is to encourage them to go against their conscience, a serious and dangerous act.

■ 14:16–18 The strong are urged to weigh the importance of exercising their freedom against two considerations: (a) the use of their freedom may bring division and disrepute on the church; (b) God's kingdom (and therefore our freedom) is not a matter of food and drink, but of the blessings of grace (5:1, 2). Since freedom does not consist in these things, it cannot be lost by our refraining from them.

■ 14:18 approved by men. See v. 16. While God alone is our Judge (v. 12), the impact of our actions on others plays a vital role in fellowship and evangelism.

■ 14:19–21 The believer's responsibility is now stated positively: avoiding the destruction of others is complemented by promoting "peace" and the things that "edify" (v. 19). For the "strong," (15:1) this includes both maintaining fellowship with the "weak" and also encouraging them to understand the liberty that is theirs in Christ. When such aims are in view, freedom to eat and drink will be made subservient to them; the well-being of the brother will take precedence over the enjoyment of meat and wine.

■ 14:22, 23 Paul further urges the "strong" (15:1) to enjoy the fact of their liberty of conscience in God's presence (while refraining from publicly exercising it). See "Conscience and the Law" at 1 Sam. 24:5.

■ 15:1–4 We then who are strong ought to bear with the scruples of the weak. Paul considers himself one of the "strong." He sees the misinformed conscience of the "weak" as real weakness, yet he emphasizes the responsibility of the "strong" to support the "weak." He does not encourage feelings of pride, or flaunting one's freedom in matters offensive to the weak.

■ 15:2 See 14:19; 1 Cor. 8:1; 10:23.

3 [c]For even Christ did not please Himself; but as it is written, [d]"The reproaches of those who reproached You fell on Me." 4 For [e]whatever things were written before were written for our learning, that we through the [3]patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. 5 [f]Now may the God of patience and comfort grant you to be like-minded toward one another, according to Christ Jesus, 6 that you may [g]with one mind and one mouth glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Glorify God Together

7 Therefore [h]receive one another, just [i]as Christ also received [4]us, to the glory of God. 8 Now I say that [j]Jesus Christ has become a [5]servant to the circumcision for the truth of God, [k]to confirm the promises made to the fathers, 9 and [l]that the Gentiles might glorify God for His mercy, as it is written:

[m]"For this reason I will confess to You among the Gentiles,
And sing to Your name."

10 And again he says:

[n]"Rejoice, O Gentiles, with His people!"

11 And again:

[o]"Praise the LORD, all you Gentiles!
Laud Him, all you peoples!"

12 And again, Isaiah says:

[p]"There shall be a root of Jesse;
And He who shall rise to reign over the Gentiles,
In Him the Gentiles shall hope."

13 Now may the God of hope fill you with all [q]joy and peace in believing, that you may abound in hope by the power of the Holy Spirit.

From Jerusalem to Illyricum

14 Now [r]I myself am confident concerning you, my brethren, that you also are full of goodness, [s]filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish [6]one another. 15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written more boldly to you on some points, as reminding you, [t]because of the grace given to me by God, 16 that [u]I might be a minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the [v]offering [7]of the Gentiles might be acceptable, sanctified by the Holy Spirit. 17 Therefore I have reason to glory in Christ Jesus [w]in the things which pertain to God. 18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things [x]which Christ has not accomplished through

■ 15:3 Paul quotes from Ps. 69:9, one of the most frequently quoted psalms in the New Testament. The willingness of the Messiah to deny Himself and suffer for the benefit of others should serve as an example to the Christians in Rome.

■ 15:4 written for our learning. It is basic New Testament teaching that the Old Testament Scriptures were written by divine inspiration for the benefit of Christians (1 Cor. 10:11; 2 Tim. 3:15–17; 1 Pet. 1:10–12).

■ 15:6 with one mind and one mouth. See 10:9, 10. Unity in the church is essential if God is to be glorified. Paul has demonstrated that humanity, which has fallen short of God's glory, is restored to it in Christ's reconciling work (1:21, 23; 3:23; 5:2, 11; 8:17, 30).

■ 15:8 Christ . . . a servant to the circumcision. The mutual acceptance of believers is rooted in Christ's humility (Mark 10:45).

■ 15:13 See "Hope" at Heb. 6:18. What was described as the effect of Scripture in v. 4 (having hope) is now attributed to the work of the Holy Spirit. Paul here follows a pattern evident throughout the New Testament in which God's saving acts are attributed to God's Word as well as to the work of the Holy Spirit (e.g., regeneration, 1 Pet. 1:23; sanctification, John 17:17; salvation, Rom. 1:16; searching the heart, Heb. 4:12).

■ 15:14–22 Paul now begins to draw his letter to a close by returning to the theme of its introduction—his own ministry and his vision for the expansion of the influence of the gospel.

■ 15:14 my brethren. A further indication of deeply felt emotion (1:13; 7:1, 4; 11:25; 12:1). Paul graciously assures the Romans that his lengthy exposition of the gospel is not intended to raise doubts about their spiritual understanding. Their knowledge of the gospel and ability to apply it practically in mutual admonition ("able also to admonish one another"; cf. Col. 3:16) is not in question.

■ 15:16 ministering the gospel of God. Paul sees the preaching of the gospel as the means by which the Gentiles will be brought to God as a sacrificial thank-offering (12:1).

■ 15:17–20 Paul describes his ministry very naturally in Trinitarian terms (God the Father, vv. 17, 18; the Son, vv. 17–20; the Spirit, v. 19; cf. v. 16).

me, in word and deed, [y]to make the Gentiles obedient— 19 [z]in mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God, so that from Jerusalem and round about to Illyricum I have fully preached the gospel of Christ. 20 And so I have made it my aim to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, [a]lest I should build on another man's foundation, 21 but as it is written:

[b] "To whom He was not announced, they shall see;
And those who have not heard shall understand."

Plan to Visit Rome

22 For this reason [c]I also have been much hindered from coming to you. 23 But now no longer having a place in these parts, and [d]having a great desire these many years to come to you, 24 whenever I journey to Spain, [g]I shall come to you. For I hope to see you on my journey, [e]and to be helped on my way there by you, if first I may [f]enjoy your company for a while. 25 But now [g]I am going to Jerusalem to [9]minister to the saints. 26 For [h]it pleased those from Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor among the saints who are in Jerusalem. 27 It pleased them indeed, and they are their debtors. For [i]if the Gentiles have been partakers of their spiritual things, [j]their duty is also to minister to them in material things. 28 Therefore, when I have performed this and have sealed to them [k]this fruit, I shall go by way of you to Spain. 29 [l]But I know that when I come to you, I shall come in the fullness of the blessing [l]of the gospel of Christ.

30 Now I beg you, brethren, through the Lord Jesus Christ, and [m]through the love of the Spirit, [n]that you strive together with me in prayers to God for me, 31 [o]that I may be delivered from those in Judea who [2]do not believe, and that [p]my service for Jerusalem may be acceptable to the saints, 32 [q]that I may come to you with joy [r]by the will of God, and may [s]be refreshed together with you. 33 Now [t]the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

Sister Phoebe Commended

16 I commend to you Phoebe our sister, who is a servant of the church in [a]Cenchrea, 2 [b]that you may receive her in the Lord [c]in a manner worthy of the saints, and assist her in whatever business she has need of you; for indeed she has been a helper of many and of myself also.

■ 15:19 signs and wonders. See Ex. 7:3; Deut. 4:34; 6:22; 7:19; Is. 8:18; Dan. 6:27. A phrase rooted in the authentication of Moses' ministry at the time of the Exodus. God periodically gave such miracles at critical junctures of redemptive history, such as the Exodus, the prophetic ministries of Elijah and Elisha, the preserving of His people in the time of Daniel, and the ministry of Christ and the apostles. These events are unusual rather than normal and point to the successive stages of redemptive history and the new revelation that accompanies them.

from Jerusalem and round about to Illyricum. Paul's journeys, according to Acts, had stretched from the eastern Mediterranean as far west as Macedonia. There is no record of his personally entering Illyricum (northwest of Macedonia). While he may have done so, it seems more likely that he means he went as far as Macedonia. He established centers of mission, rather than preached personally in every village. From such centers, even Illyricum may have been reached with the gospel.

■ 15:23, 24 Two things now make the visit to Rome possible: (a) the present phase of Paul's commission has been fulfilled; (b) the new phase involving outreach to Spain is imminent, and Paul seeks their fellowship in it.

■ 15:24 Spain. The western extremity of the ancient world. Some suggest Paul thought of Spain as the Tarshish of Is. 66:19, and saw the extension of his preaching there as significant for the Christian mission (Matt. 24:14; Acts 1:8).

■ 15:25–33 Paul now discloses his immediate plans to visit Jerusalem with the gifts the churches had raised for the Christians there. Jerusalem was an impoverished city in general; in addition, the Christians there would suffer particular hardship as a suspect minority. But Paul sees a significance deeper than charity in the gift. It is a duty (v. 27), a solemn obligation of the Gentiles in view of the privilege they have received in being grafted into God's olive tree (11:17). This conforms to the general principle that those who receive spiritual blessings should share their own material blessings (1 Cor. 9:3–14; Gal. 6:6).

■ 15:29 fullness of the blessing of the gospel. A striking comment in view of the manner in which Paul's aspirations were fulfilled (Acts 28:11–16).

■ 15:31 Paul's concern is twofold: (a) that he may be protected from the hostility of the Jews that has marked the whole of his ministry; (b) that Jewish Christians in Jerusalem will respond to the Gentile gift, sealing the apostle's ministry (v. 32).

■ 15:33 the God of peace. One of Paul's favorite designations for God (16:20; 2 Cor. 13:11; Phil. 4:9; 1 Thess. 5:23; 2 Thess. 3:16), but particularly appropriate here in regard to his present struggle (v. 30).

■ 16:1–27 Paul's letters typically end with personal news and greetings. The closing chapter of Romans is remarkable for the large number of fellow believers mentioned. These verses give an insight into the warmth of the apostle's personal relationships as well as the fellowship of the early Christians.

■ 16:1 Phoebe. Probably the bearer of Paul's letter. The name is common in Greek mythology and indicates a Gentile background.

a servant. Paul's word (Greek diakonos) is variously translated as "servant," "minister" (1 Tim. 4:6), or "deacon" (Phil. 1:1; 1 Tim. 3:8). It is uncertain whether Paul uses the term to refer to the specific church office of deacon, or describes Phoebe as a servant of the church in a more general sense.

Cenchrea. The port of Corinth on the Saronic Gulf, indicating Paul's location when Romans was sent.

Greeting Roman Saints

3 Greet [d]Priscilla and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus, 4 who risked their own necks for my life, to whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles. 5 Likewise greet [e]the church that is in their house.

Greet my beloved Epaenetus, who is [f]the firstfruits of [f]Achaia to Christ. 6 Greet Mary, who labored much for us. 7 Greet Andronicus and Junia, my countrymen and my fellow prisoners, who are of note among the [g]apostles, who also [h]were in Christ before me.

8 Greet Amplias, my beloved in the Lord. 9 Greet Urbanus, our fellow worker in Christ, and Stachys, my beloved. 10 Greet Apelles, approved in Christ. Greet those who are of the household of Aristobulus. 11 Greet Herodion, my [2]countryman. Greet those who are of the household of Narcissus who are in the Lord.

12 Greet Tryphena and Tryphosa, who have labored in the Lord. Greet the beloved Persis, who labored much in the Lord. 13 Greet Rufus, [i]chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine. 14 Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren who are with them. 15 Greet Philologus and Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints who are with them.

16 [j]Greet one another with a holy kiss. [3]The churches of Christ greet you.

Avoid Divisive Persons

17 Now I urge you, brethren, note those [k]who cause divisions and offenses, contrary to the doctrine which you learned, and [l]avoid them. 18 For those who are such do not serve our Lord [4]Jesus Christ, but [m]their own belly, and [n]by smooth words and flattering speech deceive the hearts of the simple. 19 For [o]your obedience has become known to all. Therefore I am glad on your behalf; but I want you to be [p]wise in what is good, and [5]simple concerning evil. 20 And [q]the God of peace [r]will crush Satan under your feet shortly.

[s]The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

Greetings from Paul's Friends

■ 16:3 Priscilla and Aquila. The couple were tentmakers like Paul (Acts 18:3). He was with them in Corinth. They had left Rome following the decree of Claudius and accompanied Paul to Ephesus (Acts 18:18). They taught Apollos (Acts 18:24–26) and later returned to Rome.

■ 16:5 Epaenetus. Evidently the first of a harvest of converts in Asia.

■ 16:6 Mary, who labored much for us. Paul recognizes the devoted service of women (v. 12).

■ 16:7 Andronicus and Junia. Early commentators understood these to be a husband and wife. They were fellow Jews, and had been converted ("in Christ") before Paul himself. They had apparently been in prison at some time with Paul (cf. 2 Cor. 11:23) and had served with distinction as special envoys ("apostles") of the churches. This use of "apostle" is broader than the strict sense of the Twelve plus Paul (see 2 Cor. 1:1 note).

■ 16:8 Amplias. This may be Ampliatus, probably a slave, whose name appears on a tomb in the Catacomb of Domitilla, niece of the Emperor Domitian.

■ 16:9 Urbanus . . . Stachys. Common slave names, the former Roman, the latter Greek.

■ 16:10 Apelles. A common Greek name, borne by one who had distinguished himself through trial and remained faithful (12:2).

Aristobulus. This may be the grandson of Herod the Great and friend of the Emperor Claudius.

■ 16:11 Herodion. Perhaps a freedman of the household of Herod, since freedmen took the name of their patron.

Narcissus. Perhaps to be identified with Narcissus, the aide of Claudius, who was forced to commit suicide by Agrippina after Nero's accession.

■ 16:12 Tryphena and Tryphosa, who have labored in the Lord. Two women with names from a common root ("gentle," "delicate") and therefore possibly sisters.

■ 16:13 Rufus, chosen in the Lord. One of the most intriguing of the names listed in view of Mark 15:21, a gospel possibly written from Rome. "Chosen" may reflect the unique circumstances that brought his family into contact with Christ. Paul's allusion to the mother as "his . . . and mine" suggests deep affection for the family.

■ 16:16 holy kiss. The kiss is a common token of greeting in the East. Here Paul urges the believers to sanctify their greetings as symbols of fellowship.

■ 16:17–20 Reflection on his knowledge of these believers, their problems in Rome (ch. 14), and the divisive activity of Satan (v. 20), evokes an urgent summons to guard their unity (Eph. 4:3). They are to avoid those "who cause divisions . . . contrary to the doctrine which you learned." Bluntly he indicates that their divisive spirit is sinful, a mark of life in the flesh, and a form of self-indulgence (Gal. 5:19, 20). Christians must learn not to be deceived by "smooth words and flattering speech" (v. 18).

■ 16:19 simple. See text note. The Romans need spiritual wisdom and hearts without any alloy of evil.

■ 16:20 Prior to the closing greetings and doxology, Paul includes a promise of a prophetic nature, rooted in the first biblical deliverance promise in Gen. 3:15. Satan is the source of all "evil" (v. 19; cf. Gen. 3:12; also see "Satan" at Job 1:6). "The God of peace" (wholeness and integrity as well as tranquillity) will act as the Divine Warrior to overcome him. This will take place "shortly." Paul may be speaking here of matters in the near future, or about the last things, which by faith is always seen as near at hand.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. A characteristically Pauline ending (Gal. 6:18; 1 Thess. 5:28).

■ 16:21 Along with Silas, Timothy was Paul's closest coworker following the disagreement with Barnabas (Acts 15:36–40), and is mentioned in ten of Paul's letters. Lucius (whom some identify with Luke), Jason (possibly Paul's host in Thessalonica, Acts 17:5–9) and Sosipater (Acts 20:4)

22 I, Tertius, who wrote this epistle, greet you in the Lord.

23 [x]Gaius, my host and the host of the whole church, greets you. [y]Erastus, the treasurer of the city, greets you, and Quartus, a brother. 24 [z]The[6] grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

Benediction

25 [7]Now [a]to Him who is able to establish you [b]according to my gospel and the preaching of Jesus Christ, [c]according to the revelation of the mystery [d]kept secret since the world began 26 but [e]now made manifest, and by the prophetic Scriptures made known to all nations, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, for [f]obedience to the faith— 27 to [g]God, alone wise, be glory through Jesus Christ forever. Amen.

were possibly church delegates accompanying Paul to deliver the collection in Jerusalem.

■ 16:22 I, Tertius. Paul regularly used a secretary, identifying his letters as his own by a brief greeting written in his own handwriting (1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; Col. 4:18; 2 Thess. 3:17).

■ 16:23 Paul may have been residing with Gaius at the time of writing. He is presumably to be identified with the Gaius of 1 Cor. 1:14, and may be the (Gaius?) Titius Justus of Acts 18:7. An Erastus is mentioned in Acts 19:22 and 2 Tim. 4:20. We do not know whether this is the same man. Of greater interest is that a Christian held such a responsible post in the local government of Corinth. Of Quartus nothing is known.

■ 16:25–27 The authenticity of this closing doxology is questioned by some on the grounds of its length, its emphasis on mystery, and its textual history (it is found at different points in the letter, or even omitted altogether in various ancient manuscripts). There is, however, a certain appropriateness about its length, coming at the end of a letter like Romans. Its themes draw to a fitting conclusion much that has already been said. In particular, Paul draws attention to his own teaching of the gospel (2:16; cf. 1 Thess. 1:5; 2 Tim. 2:8) and its power to edify (1:11), to the revelation of God's mystery (11:25; cf. Eph. 3:2–6), to faith and obedience among the nations (1:5), and to the wisdom of God in redemption (11:33; cf. Eph. 3:10–12).

■ 16:26 but now . . . by the prophetic Scriptures made known. Paul's "now" might suggest that he is referring to the New Testament Scriptures, but his emphasis is that it is only now, in the light of Christ's coming, that the message already enshrined in the Old Testament is spread to the nations.

The First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

CORINTHIANS

Author This letter bears the name of Paul as the author. No one has seriously questioned that Paul was the author of the Corinthian letters. These epistles are acknowledged on all sides as fundamental for our understanding of the apostle Paul, his ministry, and his message.

Date and Occasion Paul makes it clear in 16:8 that he wrote this letter from Ephesus during the third missionary journey (A.D. 53–57). Since the apostle stayed in Ephesus well over two years (Acts 19:8, 10), 1 Corinthians was written about A.D. 55.

Although Luke says nothing about this correspondence in the Book of Acts, he does provide some important information about the founding of the church in Corinth during Paul's second missionary journey (A.D. 50–52; Acts 18:1–11). Paul arrived in Corinth after his visit to Athens (Acts 17:16–34), an experience that had impressed on his mind afresh the foolishness of worldly wisdom. Evidently, this incident with the Athenian philosophers had made Paul more determined than ever to preach the simple message of the cross, however offensive it might appear to some (2:1–5). Second, with the support of an influential Christian couple, Aquila and Priscilla (16:19), Paul preached in the synagogue until Jewish opposition forced him to focus his ministry on Gentiles. Third, the Christian congregation in Corinth, composed of both Jews and Gentiles, flourished dramatically (Acts 18:8–10). Finally, Paul's ministry in Corinth lasted a fairly long time (more than eighteen months according to Acts 18:11, 18). Paul had reason to expect some spiritual maturity from the Corinthian Christians.

This letter reveals that the Corinthian church, instead of maturing in the intervening period, had developed a remarkable number of serious problems, such as division, abuse of the sacraments, disorder during worship services, theological problems, and the extremes of moral laxity and unhealthy asceticism. What had happened? Corinth was one of the largest cities in the Roman world and one of the most corrupt (Acts 18:1 note). A strategic commercial center, the city sought to provide international pleasures. In that setting the Christians polarized, some insisting that association with sinners was permissible and necessary, others arguing that a measure of isolation was essential to preserve holiness. These opposing tendencies grew out of control in Corinth and endangered the future of the congregation.

We may infer from 5:9 that Paul had sent the church an earlier letter (which has not survived) exhorting the Corinthian believers to separate from immoral Christians. That letter must also have contained a request for an offering (16:1–4), and probably other instructions related to problems in the congregation. The troubles did not subside. Eventually, the apostle received reports that the church in Corinth was being torn apart by internal divisions, especially as a result of some in the congregation who viewed themselves as more spiritual and knowledgeable than their fellow-believers (1:11, 12; 3:1–4; 8:1–3). Paul also learned about other matters: criticisms hurled at him, gross immorality, and lawsuits between Christians (4:1–4; 5:1; 6:1–6). Moreover, the church itself had written to Paul requesting instruction about such matters as marriage and divorce, food offered to idols, spiritual gifts, and the method Paul was using for his collection (7:1, 25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1). They also asked for a visit from Apollos (16:12). The apostle was confronted with a massive task, and this long letter to the Corinthians was an attempt to deal with the problem.

Characteristics and Themes The contents of the letter are determined by the kinds of problems that had surfaced in Corinth. Many scholars have suggested that the letter is roughly organized on the basis of a distinction between matters that had been reported to Paul (chs. 1—6) and problems that the Corinthians had raised in their letter (chs. 7—16). Such an outline does provide a valuable overview. Behind the great diversity of issues treated in this letter there lie some deep and recurring problems. Challenges to Paul's authority, pride in personal spirituality, and especially a lack of love were fundamental questions that the apostle needed to address. In the course of dealing with these issues, the apostle sets forth his teaching on important doctrines including God's sovereignty, the nature of the church, sanctification, and the bodily resurrection. □

1 [a]Rom. 1:1 [b]2 Cor. 1:1 [c]Acts 18:17

PAUL, [a]called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ [b]through the will of God, and [c]Sosthenes our brother,

2 [d][Acts 15:9] [e]Rom. 1:7 [f][1 Cor. 8:6] [g][Rom. 3:22] [1]set apart

2 To the church of God which is at Corinth, to those who [d]are [1]sanctified in Christ Jesus, [e]called to be saints, with all who in every place call on the name of Jesus Christ [f]our Lord, [g]both theirs and ours:

■ 1:1 apostle. Someone commissioned directly by Christ as His authoritative messenger (2 Cor. 1:1 note). Paul stresses the significance of this office elsewhere (ch. 9; 15:1–11; 2 Cor. 10—12; Gal. 1). Some of the problems in the Corinthian church involved challenges to Paul's authority.

Sosthenes. Perhaps the same person mentioned in Acts 18:17, ruler of the synagogue in Corinth at the time of Paul's first visit to the city.

■ 1:2 sanctified . . . called to be saints. The word "saints" (lit. "holy ones") calls attention to the distinctive status of God's people. Paul often uses it to identify the Christians to whom he writes (e.g., Rom. 1:7). The description "sanctified" (see text note) underlines this aspect of Christian life. The Corinthians were plagued by ethical problems and this letter touches repeatedly on the subject of sanctification. At the very beginning Paul calls special attention to it. Significantly, however, he encourages them in a pastoral way by reminding them that they are sanctified (6:11). The goal of holiness is realistic because God has already changed their hearts (Rom. 6:1–14; Gal. 5:24, 25).

3 [h]Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Spiritual Gifts at Corinth

4 [i]I thank my God always concerning you for the grace of God which was given to you by Christ Jesus, 5 that you were enriched in everything by Him [j]in all [2]utterance and all knowledge, 6 even as [k]the testimony of Christ was confirmed [3]in you, 7 so that you come short in no gift, eagerly [l]waiting for the revelation of our Lord Jesus Christ, 8 [m]who will also confirm you to the end, [n]that you may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9 [o]God is faithful, by whom you were called into [p]the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

Sectarianism Is Sin

10 Now I plead with you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, [q]that you all [4]speak the same thing, and that there be no [5]divisions among you, but that you be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. 11 For it has been declared to me concerning you, my brethren, by those of Chloe's household, that there are [6]contentions among you. 12 Now I say this, that [r]each of you says, "I am of Paul," or "I am of [s]Apollos," or "I am of [t]Cephas," or "I am of Christ." 13 [u]Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were you baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I thank God that I baptized [v]none of you except [w]Crispus and [x]Gaius, 15 lest anyone should say that I had baptized in my own name. 16 Yes, I also baptized the household of [y]Stephanas. Besides, I do not know whether I baptized any other. 17 For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to preach the gospel, [z]not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of no effect.

Christ the Power and Wisdom of God

18 For the [7]message of the cross is [a]foolishness to [b]those who are perishing, but to us [c]who are being saved it is the [d]power of God. 19 For it is written:

[e]"I will destroy the wisdom of the wise,
And bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent."

20 [f]Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the [8]disputer of this age? [g]Has not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? 21 For since, in the [h]wisdom of God, the world through

■ 1:5 enriched in everything. The Corinthians were tempted to become puffed up by their gifts of "knowledge" and of speaking "with tongues" (8:1; 14:23). Paul needs to rebuke them for their moral weakness and abuse of those gifts, but he does not deny or minimize the blessings they have received (v. 7).

■ 1:8 will . . . confirm. Paul encourages his readers by assuring them that God, who began a work of grace in them, can be trusted to complete it. Indeed, they will be presented "blameless" at the time of Christ's return. Note the similarities between vv. 8, 9 and Phil. 1:6, 10 (cf. Eph. 5:26, 27; 1 Thess. 5:23, 24).

■ 1:10 I plead with you. This exhortation begins the body of the letter and announces Paul's primary concern. He has heard (vv. 11, 12) that the unity of the Corinthian church has broken down. Many of the problems addressed in this letter reflect the spirit of dissension that was in the community.

■ 1:11 Chloe's household. Chloe must have been an influential Christian, perhaps a member of the Corinthian church, although she is not mentioned elsewhere.

■ 1:12 Apollos. An effective preacher from Alexandria who had ministered in Ephesus and Corinth (Acts 18:24—19:1).

Cephas. Simon Peter's Aramaic name. He was obviously popular among some groups in Corinth (perhaps the Jewish Christians), but it is unclear whether he had actually visited the church.

■ 1:13 Is Christ divided. With this question Paul anticipates one of his fundamental teachings about the church. Just as a physical body, though made up of many members, is one, so also the church, which is the body of Christ, cannot be divided (10:16, 17; 11:29; 12:12 note).

■ 1:14 Crispus. The synagogue ruler whose conversion is recorded in Acts 18:8.

Gaius. A common name. Perhaps this is the Gaius described in Acts 19:29.

■ 1:16 the household of Stephanas. Paul's first converts in Corinth, respected for their dedication. Stephanas himself was one of the representatives who brought a communication from the Corinthians to Paul (16:15–17). See "Infant Baptism" at Gen. 17:12.

■ 1:17 wisdom of words. The Corinthian church had an unhealthy regard for rhetorical display. Paul will focus attention on what true wisdom is (1:18—2:16; 3:18–23). In this verse he reminds the Corinthians that the power of his own preaching did not depend on such skills (2:1–5).

cross of Christ. In the opinion of those who are wise according to this world, proclaiming the crucified Lord is foolishness. Paul therefore treats "wisdom" and "the cross" as opposites (v. 23 note).

■ 1:18 perishing . . . being saved. According to the Bible there will be two types of response to the gospel arising from God's elective purpose (Is. 6:9, 10; Luke 2:34; Rom. 9:10–12; 2 Cor. 2:15, 16). This truth does not make God responsible for the perishing of unbelievers; they perish because of their own sin and stubborn impenitence. Those who believe and are saved, on the other hand, are "those who are called" (v. 24; Rom. 9:16).

this age . . . this world. Much of Paul's theology is built on the basic opposition between "this present evil age" (Gal. 1:4), or world, which is characterized by "the flesh," and the coming age, which has already dawned for those who have received the Spirit (10:11; Gal. 5:16, 17; Eph. 1:13, 14; 2:6; Phil. 3:20).

wisdom did not know God, it pleased God through the foolishness of the message preached to save those who believe. 22 For [i]Jews request a sign, and Greeks seek after wisdom; 23 but we preach Christ crucified, [j]to the Jews a [g]stumbling block and to the [f]Greeks [k]foolishness, 24 but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ [l]the power of God and [m]the wisdom of God. 25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

Glory Only in the Lord

26 For [2]you see your calling, brethren, [n]that not many wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many [3]noble, are called. 27 But [o]God has chosen the foolish things of the world to put to shame the wise, and God has chosen the weak things of the world to put to shame the things which are mighty; 28 and the [4]base things of the world and the things which are despised God has chosen, and the things which are not, to bring to nothing the things that are, 29 that no flesh should glory in His presence. 30 But of Him you are in Christ Jesus, who became for us wisdom from God—and [p]righteousness and sanctification and redemption— 31 that, as it is written, [q]"He who glories, let him glory in the LORD."

Christ Crucified

2 And I, brethren, when I came to you, did not come with excellence of speech or of wisdom declaring to you the [1]testimony of God. 2 For I determined not to know anything among you [a]except Jesus Christ and Him crucified. 3 [b]I was with you [c]in weakness, in fear, and in much trembling. 4 And my speech and my preaching [d]were not with persuasive words of [2]human wisdom, [e]but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, 5 that your faith should not be in the wisdom of men but in the [f]power of God.

Spiritual Wisdom

6 However, we speak wisdom among those who are mature, yet not the wisdom of this age, nor of the rulers of this age, who are coming to nothing. 7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a

■ 1:21 the foolishness of the message preached. This passage is filled with intense irony. Those who are wise according to the standards of the world think the gospel is foolish. But even the most "foolish" thing about God is wiser than human wisdom (vv. 25, 27). God can use the simplicity of the gospel to demonstrate that real foolishness belongs to those who oppose Him (v. 27). The arrogance of human wisdom blinds unbelievers to the truth. Jesus thanked the Father for His good pleasure in hiding these things from the wise and learned but revealing them to little children (Matt. 11:25, 26).

■ 1:23 we preach Christ crucified. Paul identifies precisely what the world finds offensive about the gospel (cf. v. 17; 2:2). Possibly these words also reflect the reason for Paul's opposition to the gospel before his conversion. The thought that the Messiah (God's anointed) had been hanged on a tree and had come under the divine curse (Gal. 3:13; Deut. 21:23) was intolerable to many Jews.

■ 1:24 Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. God's wisdom and power are not abstract forces but personal qualities that manifest themselves fully in the life, teachings, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ (v. 30; Rom. 1:4, 16; Col. 2:3).

■ 1:26 you see your calling. Salvation, by its very nature, does not depend on human values. Even those in the Corinthian church who might have been justly admired could not have claimed that they were chosen because of their good qualities. Rather, God has mercy on all who acknowledge their sinfulness (Mark 2:17; John 9:39–41). See "Effectual Calling and Conversion" at 2 Thess. 2:14.

■ 1:29 no flesh should glory in His presence. This principle, which Paul underscores in v. 31 by quoting Jer. 9:24, provides the foundation for the biblical doctrine of salvation: it is a gracious gift from God that rules out human boasting (Eph. 2:8, 9).

■ 1:30 who became for us wisdom. See note on v. 24.

■ 2:1 when I came to you. Paul must be referring to his first visit to Corinth, recorded in Acts 18:1–17 (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

excellence of speech or of wisdom. Influenced by Greek culture, some of the Christians in Corinth may have been critical of Paul for not using the rhetorical techniques of their contemporaries (2 Cor. 11:5, 6). See notes on 4:1, 8–13; 9:3, 19; 10:30; 16:3.

■ 2:2 Jesus Christ and Him crucified. See note on 1:23.

■ 2:3–5 Taken by themselves, these verses might suggest that Paul was timid, uneducated, and unable to speak with force and eloquence. Both the Book of Acts (e.g., 19:8) and Paul's own letters (ch. 13) prove otherwise. "Self-confidence," if it rests on arrogance concerning one's own strength, reflects a desire to be independent from God. Paul had learned that God can use human weakness to show forth His own glory (2 Cor. 12:7–10). Because he knew that men and women will be persuaded only "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power," Paul used his talents and training with full confidence.

■ 2:6 we speak wisdom. The gospel, the proclamation of Christ crucified.

mature. Lit. "perfect." The apostle does not have in mind a special category of elite Christians, an idea that may have been present among the Corinthians. The expression here is no doubt equivalent to "spiritual" (vv. 13, 15; 3:1), referring to the influence of the Holy Spirit. The mature or spiritual person is the person who has the Holy Spirit (cf. v. 14). Since every true believer has received the Spirit, every believer is spiritual and can understand God's wisdom, the gospel of Jesus Christ.

■ 2:7 the wisdom of God in a mystery. This passage should not be interpreted as a reference to mysteries accessible only to superior Christians. The riches of the gospel, though "hidden" during the Old Testament period, have now been revealed by the Spirit (v. 10). Eph. 3:2–6 makes plain that the word "mystery," used by Paul to emphasize the distinctiveness of his message to the Gentiles, has a strong temporal meaning. The "mystery" is a truth that "in other ages was not made known" (Eph. 3:5); it was "kept secret since the world began" (Rom. 16:25). But now the truth has been clearly revealed to those who have the Spirit, who live in "the ends of the ages" (10:11).

ordained. See text note. The word is used also in Rom. 8:29, 30 and Eph. 1:5 to express the certainty of God's goodwill for His people.

> The things which God has prepared for those who love Him."

[10] But [j]God has revealed them to us through His Spirit. For the Spirit searches all things, yes, the deep things of God. [11] For what man knows the things of a man except the [k]spirit of the man which is in him? [l]Even so no one knows the things of God except the Spirit of God. [12] Now we Christians' knowledge of divine things is more than a knowledge of biblical words and theological ideas. It is an understanding of the reality and relevance of the works of God testified to by Scripture. The "natural man" (1 Cor. 2:14) who does not have the Spirit, even though familiar with Christian ideas, still lacks this deeper understanding, and is like the blind leaders of the blind (Matt. 15:14). Only the Holy Spirit, who searches "the deep things of God" (1 Cor. 2:10), can bring this understanding to minds and hearts darkened by sin. It is called a "spiritual understanding" because it is an understanding given by the Holy Spirit (Col. 1:9; cf. Luke 24:25; 1 John 5:20). Those who, along with correct instruction from the Scriptures, "have an anointing from the Holy One . . . know all things" (1 John 2:20).

Illumination and Conviction

The work of the Spirit in imparting this understanding is called "illumination," or enlightening. It is not a giving of new revelation, but a work within us that enables us to grasp and to affirm the revelation of the Bible, as it is read, preached, and taught. Sin clouds our minds and wills so that we miss and resist the force of Scripture. The Spirit, however, opens and unveils our minds and attunes our hearts so that we understand what God has revealed (2 Cor. 3:14–16; 4:6; Eph. 1:17, 18; 3:18, 19). Illumination is the application of God's revealed truth to our hearts, so that we grasp as reality for ourselves what the sacred text says.

Protestant theologians shortly after the Reformation spoke of illumination as an act of grace that proceeds in two stages. The first stage of illumination takes place when one encounters the ministry of the Word. This external illumination prepares a person for the second stage, the internal ministry of the Holy Spirit that leads to salvation. The Spirit speaks through the law, that convicts a person of sin, and the gospel, that conveys knowledge of God's grace and forgiveness (cf. Luke 1:79). It is through the illumination of the Spirit that the ministry of the Word conveys the effectual calling to salvation.

Although illumination by the Spirit begins the process, or order, of salvation (Heb. 6:4; 10:32), it continues throughout the life of the believer. The Holy Spirit leads us to a deeper understanding of God (John 16:13), prompting both repentance for the sins that we commit and assurance of God's grace and the certainty of our election. We receive this illumination through the ministry of the Word and through prayer, meditation on God and His revelation, and the struggle to live our lives in a manner consistent with revelation. □

■ 2:8 none of the rulers of this age knew. Unbelievers are still part of the old age and so have not received God's wisdom (v. 14). Paul emphasizes this point by focusing on the most influential members of society (1:20).

■ 2:9 In contrast to the wise of this world (who cannot even conceive the greatness of divine salvation), those who love God know and partake of His blessings. The quotation is based on Is. 64:4, but includes other ideas found in the Old Testament.

■ 2:10 revealed them to us. See theological note "Illumination and Conviction."

searches all things. The idea of divine searching (cf. Ps. 139:1; Rom. 8:27) emphasizes God's omniscience, particularly His power to see what is invisible to humans (John 2:25). It does not imply that the Holy Spirit needs to seek knowledge of the Father that He otherwise lacks. The Spirit probes the depths of divine knowledge for our benefit.

■ 2:11 the spirit . . . in him. This verse intends to make a common-sense observation, not to give an analysis of human personality. "Spirit" refers generally to the immaterial part of a human being, especially to the mental faculties (v. 16 note).

■ 2:12 that we might know. See "The Authentication of Scripture" at 2 Cor. 4:6.

have received, not the spirit of the world, but [m]the Spirit who is from God, that we might know the things that have been freely given to us by God.

13 These things we also speak, not in words which man's wisdom teaches but which the [q]Holy Spirit teaches, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. 14 [n]But the natural man does not receive the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; nor can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. 15 But he who is spiritual judges all things, yet he himself is rightly judged by no one. 16 For [o]"who has known the mind of the LORD that he may instruct Him?" [p]But we have the mind of Christ.

Sectarianism Is Carnal

3 And I, brethren, could not speak to you as to spiritual people but as to carnal, as to [a]babes in Christ. 2 I fed you with [b]milk and not with solid food; [c]for until now you were not able to receive it, and even now you are still not able; 3 for you are still carnal. For where there are envy, strife, and divisions among you, are you not carnal and [r]behaving like mere men? 4 For when one says, "I am of Paul," and another, "I am of Apollos," are you not carnal?

Watering, Working, Warning

5 Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but [d]ministers through whom you believed, as the Lord gave to each one? 6 [e]I planted, [f]Apollos watered, [g]but God gave the increase. 7 So then [h]neither he who plants is anything, nor he who waters, but God who gives the increase. 8 Now he who plants and he who waters are one, [i]and each one will receive his own reward according to his own labor.

9 For [j]we are God's fellow workers; you are God's field, you are [k]God's building. 10 [l]According to the grace of God which was given to me, as a wise master builder I have laid [m]the foundation, and another builds on it. But let each one take heed how he builds on it. 11 For no other foundation can anyone lay than [n]that which is laid, [o]which is Jesus Christ. 12 Now if anyone builds on this foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw, 13 each one's work will become clear; for the Day [p]will declare it, because [q]it will be revealed by fire; and the fire will test each one's work, of what sort it is. 14 If anyone's work which he has built on it endures, he will receive a reward. 15 If anyone's work is burned, he will suffer loss; but he himself will be saved, yet so as through fire.

16 [r]Do you not know that you are the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwells in you? 17 If anyone [s]defiles the temple of God, God will destroy him. For the temple of God is holy, which temple you are.

■ 2:13 comparing spiritual things with spiritual. The precise meaning of this clause is disputed. Probably Paul had been criticized for not using human eloquence and wisdom (v. 1 note). In reply he says that the truths revealed by the Spirit must be explained in a way that is harmonious with the Spirit. See "The Authority of Scripture" at 2 Tim. 3:16.

■ 2:14 natural. The "natural" (Greek psychikos) person, who still belongs to the old age, is contrasted with the one who is "spiritual" (pneumatikos; see 15:44, 45 and notes).

■ 2:15 judges. The apostle may be responding to individuals who opposed him and passed negative judgments on him (v. 1 note).

■ 2:16 the mind of the LORD. See "Understanding the Word of God" at Ps. 119:34. Through the Spirit of the Lord, Paul has the mind of Christ, and therefore the mind of the Lord. Those opponents who do not see that the Spirit of Christ and the Spirit of the Lord are one and the same have no warrant to instruct or examine him. By implication, those who accept Paul's teaching have the blessing of the Spirit and understand the things of God.

■ 3:1 spiritual. That is, belonging to the Holy Spirit (2:6 note).

carnal. That is, characterized by the flesh, Paul's main word for describing the present evil age. Since the Corinthians had received the Holy Spirit, they were spiritual in the most fundamental sense, but their behavior was so inconsistent with that truth that Paul had to treat them as people who had little spiritual understanding.

■ 3:3 envy, strife. See note on 1:10.

■ 3:6 I planted. Paul's aim was to preach the gospel in places where the message of Christ had not been heard (Rom. 15:20).

Apollos. See note on 1:12.

■ 3:9 God's fellow workers. Paul may mean either that Christian workers are co-laborers with God or that Christians who are co-laborers with one another belong to God. Paul's point is clear from the context: God alone is responsible for the success of Christian ministry.

■ 3:10 wise. A clear allusion to the previous discussion of true wisdom (1:17; 2:9, 10 notes).

foundation. As one called to proclaim the gospel where it was not known (v. 6 note), Paul had resolved to preach nothing but Christ crucified (2:2).

■ 3:12–15 These verses address the evaluation of Christian ministry. Some who were seeking to build God's building in Corinth, but who depend on human wisdom, were using perishable materials ("wood, hay, straw") that will not survive the judgment of God's fire, while the builders themselves will barely escape destruction. Paul warns the church that they, like Solomon's temple (1 Chr. 22:14–16), should be built up with what is lasting. See "The Final Judgment" at Matt. 25:41.

■ 3:16 the temple of God. God signified His presence in the temple by filling it with the cloud of His glory (1 Kin. 8:10, 11). Now He lives in His people by filling them with the Holy Spirit. Paul's focus here is on God's people as a corporate whole; in 6:19 the emphasis shifts to the individual Christian's body.

■ 3:17 God will destroy him. Paul leaves open the possibility that some of the Christian builders in Corinth are not only using perishable material but are actively destroying God's work. They will not be spared at the Judgment.

Avoid Worldly Wisdom

18 [s]Let no one deceive himself. If anyone among you seems to be wise in this age, let him become a fool that he may become wise. 19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, "He catches the wise in their own craftiness"; 20 and again, [u]"The LORD knows the thoughts of the wise, that they are futile." 21 Therefore let no one boast in men. For [v]all things are yours: 22 whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas, or the world or life or death, or things present or things to come—all are yours. 23 And [w]you are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

Stewards of the Mysteries of God

4 Let a man so consider us, as [a]servants of Christ [b]and stewards of the mysteries of God. 2 Moreover it is required in stewards that one be found faithful. 3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged by you or by a human [1]court. In fact, I do not even judge myself. 4 For I know of nothing against myself, yet I am not justified by this; but He who judges me is the Lord. 5 [c]Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord comes, who will both bring to [d]light the hidden things of darkness and [e]reveal the [2]counsels of the hearts. [f]Then each one's praise will come from God.

Fools for Christ's Sake

6 Now these things, brethren, I have figuratively transferred to myself and Apollos for your sakes, that you may learn in us not to think beyond what is written, that none of you may be [3]puffed up on behalf of one against the other. 7 For who [4]makes you differ from another? And [g]what do you have that you did not receive? Now if you did indeed receive it, why do you boast as if you had not received it?

8 You are already full! [h]You are already rich! You have reigned as kings without us—and indeed I could wish you did reign, that we also might reign with you! 9 For I think that God has displayed us, the apostles, last, as men condemned to death; for we have been made a [i]spectacle[5] to the world, both to angels and to men. 10 We are [j]fools for Christ's sake, but you are wise in Christ! [k]We are weak, but you are strong! You are distinguished, but we are dishonored! 11 To the present hour we both hunger and thirst, and we are poorly clothed, and beaten, and homeless. 12 [l]And we labor, working with our own hands. [m]Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we endure; 13 being defamed, we [6]entreat. [n]We have been made as the filth of the world, the offscouring of all things until now.

Paul's Paternal Care

14 I do not write these things to shame you, but [o]as my beloved children I warn you. 15 For though you might have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet you do not have many fathers; for [p]in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel. 16 Therefore I urge you, [q]imitate me. 17 For this reason I have sent [r]Timothy to you, [s]who is my beloved and faithful son in the Lord, who will [t]remind you of my ways in Christ, as I [u]teach everywhere [v]in every church.

all things are yours. This principle demonstrates the pettiness and absurdity of the Corinthians' quarreling. If we belong to Christ, then because of Him all things belong to us (Rom. 8:17, 38, 39; Heb. 1:2), and jealousy can have no place in our lives. How little the Corinthians appreciated their Christian privileges is pointed out again in 6:2.

bring to light the hidden things. At the Judgment, nothing will escape God's searching light (Matt. 10:26 and parallels).

■ 4:8–13 In this powerful passage the apostle makes use of biting irony to show the Corinthians how trivial are their concerns and how unfair their criticisms. The sufferings of Paul are comparable to the pain and public humiliation of captives condemned to die (2 Cor. 11:23–30). In contrast, some of the Corinthians think of themselves as notably successful, but only because they do not understand what it means to be "fools for Christ's sake" (v. 10).

■ 4:14 not . . . to shame you. Paul's pastoral heart is revealed in these words. The harsh language of the previous passage was not intended to make them feel inferior but to raise their sensitivity to the truth.

■ 4:15 ten thousand instructors. The Corinthians boasted of their allegiance to Apollos, Peter, and others, with the implication that they had no need for Paul. The apostle reminds them that his fatherly relationship to them is unique and they have no good reason to attack him.

18 [w]Now some are [7]puffed up, as though I were not coming to you. 19 [x]But I will come to you shortly, [y]if the Lord wills, and I will know, not the word of those who are puffed up, but the power. 20 For [z]the kingdom of God is not in word but in [a]power. 21 What do you want? [b]Shall I come to you with a rod, or in love and a spirit of gentleness?

Immorality Defiles the Church

5 It is actually reported that there is sexual immorality among you, and such sexual immorality as is not even [f]named among the Gentiles—that a man has his father's [a]wife! 2 [b]And you are [z]puffed up, and have not rather [c]mourned, that he who has done this deed might be taken away from among you. 3 [d]For I indeed, as absent in body but present in spirit, have already judged (as though I were present) him who has so done this deed. 4 In the [e]name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when you are gathered together, along with my spirit, [f]with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, 5 [g]deliver such a one to [h]Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord [3]Jesus.

6 [i]Your glorying is not good. Do you not know that [j]a little leaven leavens the whole lump? 7 Therefore [4]purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed [k]Christ, our [l]Passover, was sacrificed [5]for us. 8 Therefore [m]let us keep the feast, [n]not with old leaven, nor [o]with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

Immorality Must Be Judged

9 I wrote to you in my epistle [p]not to [6]keep company with sexually immoral people. 10 Yet I certainly did not mean with the sexually immoral people of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or idolaters, since then you would need to go [q]out of the world. 11 But now I have written to you not to keep company [r]with anyone named a brother, who is sexually immoral, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner—[s]not even to eat with such a person.

12 For what have I to do with judging those also who are outside? Do you not judge those who are inside? 13 But those who are outside God judges. Therefore [t]"put away from yourselves the evil person."

13 [t]Deut. 13:5; 17:7, 12; 19:19; 21:21; 22:21, 24; 24:7

■ 4:18 as though I were not coming to you. A group of Corinthians argued that Paul was bold only when absent and that he was afraid to meet them face to face (2 Cor. 10:1, 2). He has sent Timothy to them (v. 17), apparently to avoid an ugly confrontation, but he will not hesitate to come in person. It is up to them what will happen when that visit takes place (v. 21; 2 Cor. 13:1–10).

■ 5:1 a man has his father's wife. The man's father may have died, or the woman may have been a stepmother. In any case, the sexual relationship in view is the incestuous union explicitly condemned in Lev. 18:8. Though the Greco-Roman culture of Paul's day tolerated a wide array of immoral activities, even Gentiles censured this kind of incest.

■ 5:2 you are puffed up. This verse is the key to Paul's real concern. The fundamental problem here was not the sin of one individual, but the failure of the Corinthian church to deal with the sin—indeed, their sense of pride in tolerating it (v. 6). Possibly, the Corinthians had developed a theology that could accommodate such immorality. Instead, they had the responsibility of exercising discipline by excommunicating the offender ("taken away from among you").

■ 5:3–5 A very difficult passage. Though Paul is physically absent from the Corinthian community, he claims to pass a prophetic judgment in their midst. The apostle is commanding the church to expel the offender from their fellowship ("deliver such a one to Satan"). The purpose of this judgment is the man's salvation, but that can be achieved only if his sinful tendencies are overcome ("the destruction of the flesh"). According to one interpretation of 2 Cor. 2:5–11, this man did repent of his sin. See "Church Discipline and Excommunication" at Matt. 18:15.

■ 5:6 glorying. See notes on v. 2; 1:29.

leaven. Leaven was a common metaphor for a corrupting influence. During the annual Feast of Passover the Israelites removed all leaven from their houses (Ex. 12:15).

■ 5:7 you truly are. Paul makes this important qualification to encourage the Corinthians; in a fundamental sense, they are already purified (1:2 note).

Christ, our Passover. The apostle develops the imagery by suggesting that the Passover sacrifice, as a shadow of better things to come (Heb. 10:1), pointed forward to the death of Christ.

■ 5:8 let us keep the feast. The final, and especially beautiful, step in Paul's argument is to draw a parallel between the Feast of Unleavened Bread and the life of purity that Christians should lead.

■ 5:9–11 Prior to the writing of 1 Corinthians, Paul had sent a letter (no longer in existence) instructing the Corinthians to separate themselves from believers who practiced immorality. The Corinthians either misunderstood Paul, as if he were commanding complete separation from the world, or they tried to sidestep the issue by arguing that his request was unreasonable. The apostle explains that he had in mind anyone thought to be a Christian whose life openly contradicted the faith. The injunction to expel offenders ("not even to eat with such a person") has primary reference to community life within the church and probably does not mean that all personal contact must be avoided (2 Thess. 3:15, "admonish him as a brother").

■ 5:12, 13 By quoting the frequent command in Deuteronomy (e.g., Deut. 17:7) to purge or expel the wicked from Israel, Paul draws an important parallel between the Old Testament covenant community and the Christian church (10:1–11). The church has authority to exercise discipline within its own fellowship, not to regulate the behavior of non-Christians.

Do Not Sue the Brethren

6 Dare any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unrighteous, and not before the [a]saints? 2 Do you not know that [b]the saints will judge the world? And if the world will be judged by you, are you unworthy to judge the smallest matters? 3 Do you not know that we shall [c]judge angels? How much more, things that pertain to this life? 4 If then you have [1]judgments concerning things pertaining to this life, do you appoint those who are least esteemed by the church to judge? 5 I say this to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you, not even one, who will be able to judge between his brethren? 6 But brother goes to law against brother, and that before unbelievers!

7 Now therefore, it is already an utter failure for you that you go to law against one another. [d]Why do you not rather accept wrong? Why do you not rather let yourselves be cheated? 8 No, you yourselves do wrong and cheat, and you do these things to your brethren! 9 Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. [e]Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor [2]homosexuals, nor [3]sodomites, 10 nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners will inherit the kingdom of God. 11 And such were [f]some of you. [g]But you were washed, but you were [4]sanctified, but you were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God.

Glorify God in Body and Spirit

12 [h]All things are lawful for me, but all things are not [5]helpful. All things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of [6]any. 13 [i]Foods for the stomach and the stomach for foods, but God will destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for [j]sexual immorality but [k]for the Lord, [l]and the Lord for the body. 14 And [m]God both raised up the Lord and will also raise us up [n]by His power.

15 Do you not know that [o]your bodies are members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ and make them members of a harlot? Certainly not! 16 Or do you not know that he who

■ 6:1 Dare any . . . go to law before the unrighteous. With this verse, Paul appears to change the topic from the evils of immorality to the problem of lawsuits among Christians. It is important, however, to notice the connection. In the first place, the topic of immorality has not been abandoned, but will recur in v. 9. Secondly, the failings of the Corinthians with regard to lawsuits are an expression of the problem already discussed in ch. 5, namely, a weak doctrine of the church. Just as Christians are not responsible to regulate the lives of non-Christians, so non-Christians have no power to discipline in the church. If the Corinthians understood the relation between the Israelite community and the Christian fellowship (5:12, 13 note), they would realize it was absurd for believers to go outside the church to solve their disputes. Who could imagine a pagan Gentile settling disputes among Israelites in the wilderness? This text does not comment on the legitimate role of civil authorities to judge matters that God has put under them. See "Christians and Civil Government" at Rom. 13:1.

■ 6:2–5 The absurdity of the situation in Corinth becomes clearer when one recognizes that, in the consummation of history (but not before; 5:12, 13), Christians will participate with Christ in judging not only unbelievers but angels. Even the least qualified among the Corinthians is in a better position than an unbeliever to arbitrate disputes in the church.

■ 6:7 Why . . . not rather accept wrong. This remarkable question makes obvious how critical is the principle of community for the apostle. The point is certainly not that Christians should be encouraged to take abuse from others. After all, cheating and injustice should not even exist within the Christian community. That such injustices do exist, and are indeed performed by Christians against one another, demonstrates how far the Corinthians have fallen. Nevertheless, if the Corinthians understood the serious implications of all the improprieties in their church, and if they appreciated the qualities that should characterize believers (cf. 13:4–7), they would much sooner bear injustice than bring disgrace upon the Christian community by publicly exposing their misdeeds in the civil courts.

■ 6:9 the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God. See "Antinomianism" at 1 John 3:7. That the things of this world are incompatible with the kingdom of God is a recurring principle in Scripture (15:50; Gal. 5:21). The question arises whether anyone at all can be saved, since all are wicked. Paul's answer is twofold: on the one hand, God delights in justifying the wicked (Rom. 4:5); on the other hand, those whom God justifies (declares righteous because of Christ's death) He also sanctifies (leads into a holy way of life; Rom. 6:1–4). Paul is confident that the Corinthians are true believers, justified and sanctified (v. 11 note), and that their present misbehavior is an anomaly that can be corrected. But it must be corrected. Persistence in wickedness would be an indication that their faith is false and that they have no place in the kingdom.

■ 6:11 But you were washed. See notes on 1:2; 5:7; theological note "Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh."

■ 6:12, 13 Paul may be quoting sayings, probably common in Corinth, that were used to excuse immoral behavior. The apostle's response suggests that, even if there is an element of truth in these slogans, the Corinthians have perverted it. Indeed, his qualifications have the effect of denying the very point of the sayings, and he ends by emphasizing the noble purpose for which God has given us a body.

■ 6:14 will also raise us up. This reference to the Resurrection is unexpected here, and probably reflects the connection between inadequate doctrine and deficient life. Being exposed to Greek thought, many of the Corinthians appear to have had contempt for the body, even to the extent of denying the future bodily resurrection (ch. 15; 15:35 note). With such a weak doctrine, some of them may have regarded sexual relationships as inherently sinful because they take place through the body (7:1–5). A different group, influenced by the same false doctrine, apparently took the opposite view: since what one does with the body does not matter, even promiscuous sexual behavior is not wrong.

■ 6:15 your bodies are members of Christ. The doctrine of the believer's union with Christ is one of the most fundamental teachings of the apostle. What is significant about this verse is that it represents that union as involving the whole person, not only the body (Rom. 12:1). The Corinthians are wrong in thinking that sexual union with a prostitute, just because it is physical, does not affect their relationship with Christ.

■ 6:16, 17 is one body with her. . . is one spirit with Him. The contrast is not that union with Christ is spiritual while union with a prostitute is physical; Paul has emphasized in v. 15 that union with Christ involves the body, a point developed in vv. 18–20. "One spirit" probably refers to the Holy Spirit (see 15:45 note). Through the Holy Spirit we (spirit and body) have become one with Christ, and this sublime union forbids giving

18 [r]Flee sexual immorality. Every sin that a man does is outside the body, but he who commits sexual immorality sins [s]against his own body. 19 Or [t]do you not know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit who is in you, whom you have from God, [u]and you are not your own?

19 [t]2 Cor. 6:16 [u]Rom. 14:7

Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh

According to the Westminster Shorter Catechism (Q. 35), sanctification is "the work of God's free grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin, and live unto righteousness." It is a continuing change worked by God in us, freeing us from sinful habits and forming in us Christlike affections, dispositions, and virtues. It does not mean that sin is instantly eradicated, but it is also more than a counteraction, in which sin is merely restrained or repressed without being progressively destroyed. Sanctification is a real transformation, not just the appearance of one.

The basic meaning of "sanctify" is to set apart to God, for His use. But God works in those whom He claims as His own to conform them "to the image of His Son" (Rom. 8:29). This moral renovation, in which we are increasingly changed from what we once were, flows from the agency of the indwelling Holy Spirit (Rom. 8:13; 12:1, 2; 1 Cor. 6:11, 19, 20; 2 Cor. 3:18; Eph. 4:22–24; 1 Thess. 5:23; 2 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 13:20, 21). God calls His children to holiness, and graciously gives what He commands (1 Thess. 4:4; 5:23).

Regeneration is birth; sanctification is growth. In regeneration, God implants desires that were not there before: desire for God, for holiness, and for glorifying God's name in the world; desire to pray and worship; desire to love and bring benefit to others. In sanctification, the Holy Spirit "works in you both to will and to do" according to God's purpose, enabling His people to fulfill their new, godly desires (Phil. 2:12, 13). Christians become increasingly Christlike, as the moral profile of Jesus (the "fruit of the Spirit") is progressively formed in them (2 Cor. 3:18; Gal. 4:19; 5:22–25).

Regeneration is a momentary act, bringing a person from spiritual death to life. It is exclusively God's work. Sanctification is an ongoing process, dependent on God's continuing action in the believer, and consisting of the believer's continuous struggle against sin. God's method of sanctification is neither activism (self-reliant activity) nor apathy (God-reliant passivity), but human effort dependent on God (2 Cor. 7:1; Phil. 3:10–14; Heb. 12:14). Knowing that without Christ's enabling we cannot do good works, but also that He is ready to strengthen us for all we have to do (Phil. 4:13), we "abide" in Christ, asking for His help constantly—and we receive it (Col. 1:11; 1 Tim. 1:12; 2 Tim. 1:7; 2:1).

The standard to which God's work of sanctifying His saints is directed is His own revealed moral law, expounded and modeled by Christ Himself. Christ's love, humility, and patience are a supreme standard for Christians (Rom. 13:10; Eph. 5:2; Phil. 2:5–11; 1 Pet. 2:21).

Believers find within themselves contrary urgings. The Spirit sustains their regenerate desires and purposes, but their fallen instincts (the "flesh") obstruct their path and drag them back. The conflict of these two is sharp. Paul says he is unable to do what is right, and unable to restrain himself from doing what is wrong (Rom. 7:14–25). This conflict and frustration will be with Christians as long as they are in the body. Yet by watching and praying against temptation, and cultivating opposite virtues, they may through the Spirit's help "put to death" particular bad habits (Rom. 8:13; Col. 3:5). They will experience many particular deliverances and victories in their battle with sin, while not being exposed to temptations that are impossible to resist (1 Cor. 10:13). □ our bodies to prostitutes. If what Paul condemns here had to do with the prostitutes who served at the temple of the goddess Aphrodite, the religious implications of the Corinthians' immorality would be even more obvious (10:20).

■ 6:18 outside the body. The meaning of this passage is disputed. There seem to be many sins that are against the body. Nevertheless, in Paul's teaching the physical union involved in sexual immorality has special consequences because it interferes with our Christian identity as people who have been united with Christ through the Holy Spirit. It is perhaps significant that Paul's prohibition in this verse ("Flee sexual immorality") is expressed in the same way as the command against idolatry (10:14).

■ 6:19 the temple of the Holy Spirit. Here Paul applies to the individual the concept of the church as the new temple where God dwells (3:16

Principles of Marriage

7 Now concerning the things of which you wrote to me:
[a]It is good for a man not to touch a woman. 2 Nevertheless, because of sexual immorality, let each man have his own wife, and let each woman have her own husband. 3 [b]Let the husband render to his wife the affection due her, and likewise also the wife to her husband. 4 The wife does not have authority over her own body, but the husband does. And likewise the husband does not have authority over his own body, but the wife does. 5 [c]Do not deprive one another except with consent for a time, that you may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again so that [d]Satan does not tempt you because of your lack of self-control. 6 But I say this as a concession, [e]not as a commandment. 7 For [f]I wish that all men were even as I myself. But each one has his own gift from God, one in this manner and another in that.

8 But I say to the unmarried and to the widows: [g]It is good for them if they remain even as I am; 9 but [h]if they cannot exercise self-control, let them marry. For it is better to marry than to burn with passion.

Keep Your Marriage Vows

10 Now to the married I command, yet not I but the [i]Lord: [j]A wife is not to depart from her husband. 11 But even if she does depart, let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband. And a husband is not to divorce his wife.

12 But to the rest I, not the Lord, say: If any brother has a wife who does not believe, and she is willing to live with him, let him not divorce her. 13 And a woman who has a husband who does not believe, if he is willing to live with her, let her not divorce him. 14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband; otherwise [k]your children would be unclean, but now they are holy. 15 But if the unbeliever departs, let him depart; a brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases. But God has called us [l]to note). While we must be aware of this personal character of the Holy Spirit's indwelling, the emphasis in Scripture is on the corporate identity of God's people as a holy temple and a spiritual house (Eph. 2:19–22; 1 Pet. 2:4, 5).

■ 7:1 Now concerning the things of which you wrote. See Introduction: Date and Occasion.

It is good for a man not to touch a woman. Very possibly this saying was used by an ascetic group among the Corinthian Christians who condemned sexual promiscuity and argued that Christians should avoid marriage and abstain from sexual relations even in marriage. The apostle had to be careful lest his teaching be distorted in one direction or another. Paul does not simply dismiss the slogan; he too opposes sexual immorality, and he recognizes a certain value in remaining unmarried (vv. 7, 8). He can give specific and valid reasons why a Christian may decide to stay single (vv. 29–35). But he must correct those who demand celibacy. In different contexts, Paul will speak of marriage in only positive terms (e.g., Eph. 5:22–33; 1 Tim. 3:2) and he condemns those who forbid marriage (1 Tim. 4:3).

■ 7:3–5 These are remarkable verses in that they reveal viewpoints that appear to be far ahead of their time: a healthy perception of the woman's sexuality, and an understanding of the complete equality that exists between a man and a woman in the most intimate area of their relationship. The Scripture gives no support whatever to the notion that sexual relations are solely at the direction and for the enjoyment of the husband. The apostle allows for temporary abstention from sex (in a way similar to fasting; v. 5), but he does not allow protracted abstinence. God requires sexual union as part of marriage.

■ 7:6–9 The "concession" probably refers to the brief periods of abstinence in v. 5: spouses may—but need not—deprive each other for a short period and for a specific reason. There are certain advantages for the work of the kingdom in remaining unmarried, and so Paul personally can wish that every believer would give his or her life exclusively to the advance of the gospel. But the apostle realizes that such a situation is not possible for everyone and would only lead many Christians into sexual temptation. Moreover, there are other reasons why one should marry that are not relevant to the present discussion (v. 1 note).

■ 7:10 not I but the Lord. In v. 12, Paul says, "I, not the Lord," but Paul is not suggesting that there is an opposition between what he says and what the Lord says. With regard to the problem treated in vv. 10, 11, there was a well-known instruction given by Jesus during His earthly ministry (Mark 10:1–12). In vv. 12–16, however, Paul discusses a difficult situation that had not been addressed by the Lord. His apostolic commands, however, come by inspiration and have divine authority, as 14:37 makes clear.

■ 7:11 if she does. In spite of the Lord's command, it appears that some of the wives in Corinth, influenced by an ascetic viewpoint (v. 1), had in fact left their husbands. Because spouses are committed to each other until death (v. 39), even if they depart they may not remarry.

■ 7:12 I, not the Lord. See note on v. 10.

who does not believe. This is the special circumstance about which Jesus had left no direct instructions. If one spouse has been converted and the other not, should the marriage be dissolved, especially if the unbelieving spouse separates?

■ 7:14 sanctified . . . holy. A striking affirmation of the special character of the home in which at least one parent is a believer (1:2 note). In Old Testament language, the whole family is regarded as being in covenant with God. Even the spouse who refuses to believe comes under the influence of God's work—much more so the children who are not old enough to profess their faith. Accordingly, Reformed theology has viewed this verse as providing part of the rationale for the baptism of children.

■ 7:15 is not under bondage. Some interpret this statement to mean that if the unbelieving spouse deserts the marriage, the believing partner may remarry. The thrust of this passage, however, is simply that a Christian is not obligated to insist that the marriage remain intact. Such an insistence would prevent them from living in "peace."

peace. 16 For how do you know, O wife, whether you will [m]save your husband? Or how do you know, O husband, whether you will save your wife?

Live as You Are Called

17 But as God has distributed to each one, as the Lord has called each one, so let him walk. And [n]so I [1]ordain in all the churches. 18 Was anyone called while circumcised? Let him not become uncircumcised. Was anyone called while uncircumcised? [o]Let him not be circumcised. 19 [p]Circumcision is nothing and uncircumcision is nothing, but [q]keeping the commandments of God is what matters. 20 Let each one remain in the same calling in which he was called. 21 Were you called while a slave? Do not be concerned about it; but if you can be made free, rather use it. 22 For he who is called in the Lord while a slave is [r]the Lord's freedman. Likewise he who is called while free is [s]Christ's slave. 23 [t]You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men. 24 Brethren, let each one remain with [u]God in that state in which he was called.

To the Unmarried and Widows

25 Now concerning virgins: [v]I have no commandment from the Lord; yet I give judgment as one [w]whom the Lord in His mercy has made [x]trustworthy. 26 I suppose therefore that this is good because of the present distress—[y]that it is good for a man to remain as he is: 27 Are you bound to a wife? Do not seek to be loosed. Are you loosed from a wife? Do not seek a wife. 28 But even if you do marry, you have not sinned; and if a virgin marries, she has not sinned. Nevertheless such will have trouble in the flesh, but I would spare you.

29 But [z]this I say, brethren, the time is short, so that from now on even those who have wives should be as though they had none, 30 those who weep as though they did not weep, those who rejoice as though they did not rejoice, those who buy as though they did not possess, 31 and those who use this world as not [a]misusing it. For [b]the form of this world is passing away.

32 But I want you to be without [2]care. [c]He who is unmarried [3]cares for the things of the Lord—how he may please the Lord. 33 But he who is married cares about the things of the world—how he may please his wife. 34 There is a difference between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman [d]cares about the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit. But she who is married cares about the things of the world—how she may please her husband. 35 And this I say for your own profit, not that I may put a leash on you, but for what is proper, and that you may serve the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man thinks he is behaving improperly toward his [4]virgin, if she is past the flower of youth, and thus it must be, let him do what he wishes. He does not sin; let them marry.

■ 7:16 whether you will save. Paul may be returning to the thought of v. 14 and giving a reason why Christians should not leave their unbelieving spouses: since they are in some sense "sanctified," there is a good possibility that they will be saved. Alternatively, v. 16 may explain v. 15: let the unbeliever go, because you have no assurance that he or she will be saved by being forced to stay married.

■ 7:17 as the Lord has called . . . so let him walk. The following verses make clear that the phrase "the Lord has called" is not a reference to a social position but to conversion itself. Note that vv. 17–24 set forth a principle that gives coherence to the whole chapter: becoming a believer does not require a change in status, whether marital, ethnic, or social (vv. 8, 20, 26). This verse has sometimes been misused as evidence that Christians should not attempt to improve their social or economic standing. On the contrary, Paul encourages slaves to obtain their freedom if the opportunity arises (v. 21).

■ 7:19 The first part of this verse is paralleled in Gal. 5:6 and 6:15. It would seem that the second part ("keeping the commandments of God") is another way of saying, "faith working through love" (Gal. 5:6), and that such working faith is what characterizes the "new creation" (Gal. 6:15).

■ 7:21 Do not be concerned. The desire to attain a better condition is not wrong, as the rest of the verse makes clear. However, Paul does not want Christians troubling themselves about a situation that cannot be changed. Dissatisfaction and complaint can be fatal spiritually (10:10): they reflect lack of confidence in God.

■ 7:23 bought at a price. This statement supports v. 22 (cf. 6:20). If we truly understood whose we are, we would realize that even slavery cannot damage our privileged position in Christ. Conversely, even the greatest human master is only a humble servant before Christ. Therefore, Christians need not, and must not, "become slaves of men."

■ 7:25 Now concerning virgins. A new, but related topic that the Corinthians had raised in their letter to Paul (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

I have no commandment from the Lord. See note on v. 10.

I give judgment. This language suggests that the comments Paul is about to make are not absolute commandments concerning right-or-wrong moral choices, but recommendations for a particular situation. This interpretation is confirmed by the statement in v. 28 and by the concluding words in v. 38.

■ 7:26 the present distress. Lit. "the present necessity." Some believe that Paul is referring to a specific and unusual problem in Corinth. However, the language of v. 28 ("will have trouble in the flesh") suggests a more general idea: the predicament that faces all Christians as they seek to serve Christ in the present evil age (Gal. 1:4). We must consider this factor when making a decision about marriage, though other considerations should also be kept in mind (vv. 6–9 note).

■ 7:29–31 the time is short . . . this world is passing away. The Christian life must be lived in the realization that there is no time to waste (Rom. 13:11, 12).

■ 7:36–38 There are two different ways of understanding this passage. We simply do not know for certain whether Paul is addressing men who have deferred marriage to their fiancee ("virgin") or fathers who have not permitted their daughters to marry ("virgin daughter"; see text note). However, the main idea is clear: both married and unmarried status are good options, even though Paul sees a particular benefit in remaining unmarried.

[37] Nevertheless he who stands steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but has power over his own will, and has so determined in his heart that he will keep his [5]virgin, does well. [38] [e]So then he who gives [6]her in marriage does well, but he who does not give her in marriage does better.

[39] [f]A wife is bound by law as long as her husband lives; but if her husband dies, she is at liberty to be married to whom she wishes, [g]only in the Lord. [40] But she is happier if she remains as she is, [h]according to my judgment—and [i]I think I also have the Spirit of God.

Be Sensitive to Conscience

8 Now [a]concerning things offered to idols: We know that we all have [b]knowledge. [c]Knowledge [1]puffs up, but love [2]edifies. [2] And [d]if anyone thinks that he knows anything, he knows nothing yet as he ought to know. [3] But if anyone loves God, this one is known by Him.

[4] Therefore concerning the eating of things offered to idols, we know that [e]an idol is nothing in the world, [f]and that there is no other God but one. [5] For even if there are [g]so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth (as there are many gods and many lords), [6] yet [h]for us there is one God, the Father, [i]of whom are all things, and we for Him; and [j]one Lord Jesus Christ, [k]through whom are all things, and [l]through whom we live.

[7] However, there is not in everyone that knowledge; for some, [m]with consciousness of the idol, until now eat it as a thing offered to an idol; and their conscience, being weak, is [n]defiled. [8] But [o]food does not commend us to God; for neither if we eat are we the better, nor if we do not eat are we the worse.

[9] But [p]beware lest somehow this liberty of yours become [q]a [3]stumbling block to those who are weak. [10] For if anyone sees you who have knowledge eating in an idol's temple, will not [r]the conscience of him who is weak be emboldened to eat those things offered to idols? [11] And [s]because of your knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died? [12] But [t]when you thus sin against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, you sin against Christ. [13] Therefore, [u]if food makes my brother stumble, I will never again eat meat, lest I make my brother stumble.

A Pattern of Self-Denial

9 Am [a]I not an apostle? Am I not free? [b]Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? [c]Are you not my work in the Lord? [2] If I am not an apostle to others, yet doubtless I am to you. For you are [d]the [1]seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

■ 7:39 is bound. Marriage is a life commitment.

at liberty to be married. A widow, no less than the others treated in this chapter, has the choice to remain unmarried or to marry. The only consideration is that if she marries again the new spouse must be a Christian.

■ 8:1 Now concerning things offered to idols. The Corinthians had raised the issue of idolatry dealt with in chs. 8—10, but the precise nature of their question is difficult to determine. According to some interpreters, the issues discussed in ch. 8 and in 10:25–30 are one and the same. Others, on the basis of 8:10, argue that ch. 8 deals with the serious problem that some Christians were attending pagan feasts and eating the food served there, while 10:25–30 concerns the lesser problem of meat purchased in the market.

we all have knowledge. Paul addresses the sin of arrogance as an introduction to the subject of idolatry (vv. 1–3). These comments reveal that behind the behavior of the Corinthians (or at least an important group among them) lay a serious problem of attitude. Their conduct was not guided by love (cf. ch. 13) but by pride.

■ 8:3 known by Him. The Corinthians should be less concerned about what they know than about who knows them (cf. 13:12).

■ 8:4 an idol is nothing. Apparently some of the Corinthians used the doctrine of monotheism as an argument supporting their practice: if there is only one God, who teaches us to mock idols (Is. 46:6, 7), why should we worry about eating food offered to them? Paul acknowledges this truth and affirms it (vv. 4–6), but goes on to point out an error in the Corinthians' use of this doctrine.

■ 8:7 not in everyone. Believers who have weak consciences are unable to dissociate various elements in pagan rituals from idolatry itself. When they eat food offered to idols, their conscience becomes "defiled." Such strong language (cf. "perish" in v. 11) suggests that these weak Christians are sinning not merely because they think they are doing something wrong, but because they have fallen back into their idolatrous ways.

■ 8:10 eating in an idol's temple. See note on v. 1 (cf. 10:18–22).

■ 8:11 because of your knowledge. What was a source of pride for some of the Corinthians became the instrument that harmed others (v. 1 note).

perish. See note on v. 7.

■ 8:12 wound their weak conscience. Although the conscience is not infallible, it is a serious matter to violate it or tempt others to do so.

■ 8:13 I will never again eat meat. This concluding comment is intended to set forth the basic principle of love: seeking the good of others above one's own (10:24, 33; 13:5; Phil. 2:4).

■ 9:1 Am I not free. Paul's willingness to forgo some of his rights is an illustration of the principle he stated in 8:9. The questions in v. 1 indicate that some of the Corinthians defended their conduct by questioning Paul's authority and criticizing his behavior.

3 My defense to those who examine me is this: 4 [e]Do we have no [2]right to eat and drink? 5 Do we have no right to take along [3]a believing wife, as do also the other apostles, [f]the brothers of the Lord, and [g]Cephas? 6 Or is it only Barnabas and I [h]who have no right to refrain from working? 7 Who ever [i]goes to war at his own expense? Who [j]plants a vineyard and does not eat of its fruit? Or who [k]tends a flock and does not drink of the milk of the flock?

8 Do I say these things as a mere man? Or does not the law say the same also? 9 For it is written in the law of Moses, [l]"You shall not muzzle an ox while it treads out the grain." Is it oxen God is concerned about? 10 Or does He say it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written, that [m]he who plows should plow in hope, and he who threshes in hope should be partaker of his hope. 11 [n]If we have sown spiritual things for you, is it a great thing if we reap your material things? 12 If others are partakers of this right over you, are we not even more?

[o]Nevertheless we have not used this right, but endure all things [p]lest we hinder the gospel of Christ. 13 [q]Do you not know that those who minister the holy things eat of the things of the [r]temple, and those who serve at the altar partake of the offerings of the altar? 14 Even so [s]the Lord has commanded [t]that those who preach the gospel should live from the gospel.

15 But [u]I have used none of these things, nor have I written these things that it should be done so to me; for [v]it would be better for me to die than that anyone should make my boasting void. 16 For if I preach the gospel, I have nothing to boast of, for [w]necessity is laid upon me; yes, woe is me if I do not preach the gospel! 17 For if I do this willingly, [x]I have a reward; but if against my will, [y]I have been entrusted with a stewardship. 18 What is my reward then? That [z]when I preach the gospel, I may present the gospel [4]of Christ without charge, that I [a]may not abuse my authority in the gospel.

Serving All Men

19 For though I am [b]free from all men, [c]I have made myself a servant to all, [d]that I might win the more; 20 and [e]to the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might win Jews; to those who are under the law, as under the [5]law, that I might win those who are under the law; 21 [f]to [g]those who are without law, as without law [h](not being without [6]law toward God, but under [7]law toward Christ), that I might win those who are without law; 22 [i]to the weak I became [8]as weak, that I might win the weak. [j]I have become all things to all men, [k]that I might by all means save some. 23 Now this I do for the gospel's sake, that I may be partaker of it with you.

■ 9:3 those who examine me. This statement makes explicit that Paul had indeed been criticized, though scholars debate the specific nature of the complaint (2:1 note). The next ten verses contain more than a dozen rhetorical questions that reflect Paul's deep emotion and provide clues about the historical situation. Paul defends his right to be supported by the churches, only to emphasize his choice not to receive support (vv. 15–18). Perhaps some of the Corinthians were upset because Paul refused their patronage, and concluded from this that he was not a legitimate apostle (2 Cor. 11:7–12). If not, why should they listen to his instruction?

■ 9:5 a believing wife. The Corinthians themselves may have raised this issue, as though the lack of a wife discredited Paul and Barnabas, or it may be Paul's choice of an illustration to indicate the distinction between having a right and exercising it. Both Paul and Barnabas were unmarried at the time of their missionary work. Paul takes for granted that if he were to be married, it would be with a believer.

■ 9:10 For our sakes, no doubt. It may appear that Paul denies the original meaning of Deut. 25:4, which commands Israelites to allow their oxen to eat as they work. We should remember that the whole complex of laws in Israel constantly reminded the community of religious principles. Some scholars have suggested that the command not to muzzle the ox was intended to reinforce the instructions about human relationships mentioned in the immediate context (Deut. 24:5—25:4).

■ 9:12 we have not used this right. In spite of the strain caused by his secular work added to the heavy demands of his apostolic ministry, Paul was determined not to become a burden to the churches (1 Thess. 2:6–9). It appears from 2 Cor. 11:7–12 that the Corinthians misinterpreted Paul's motives. For reasons that are unclear, the apostle did make an exception in the case of the Philippian church in Macedonia (Phil. 4:15, 16).

■ 9:14 live from the gospel. This principle is reflected not only in the Old Testament priesthood (v. 13) but also in several New Testament passages (e.g., Luke 10:7; Gal. 6:6; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18).

■ 9:15, 16 make my boasting void. As the rest of the passage makes clear, Paul considered that he could hardly boast about preaching since he was compelled by God's will to preach. So his ground for boasting (his "reward") is that he preaches free of charge (v. 18), and he will not allow anyone to take this away from him.

■ 9:19 though I am free. Paul returns to the first question of v. 1. It appears that Paul must defend himself from the charge of inconsistency: he exercised freedom in his own behavior and therefore should not deprive others from doing the same. The apostle will return to this theme again in 10:23–33.

■ 9:20 as under the law. When ministering to Jews, Paul conformed to the Old Testament ceremonial regulations even though he knew that these matters were not essential. See "The Three Purposes of the Law" at Deut. 13:10.

■ 9:21 as without law. When ministering to Gentiles, Paul was willing to live like them, while recognizing that he was never free to disobey God.

■ 9:22 as weak. A restatement of the point made in 8:13.

Striving for a Crown

24 Do you not know that those who run in a race all run, but one receives the prize? [f]Run in such a way that you may [g]obtain it. 25 And everyone who competes for the prize [l]is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a perishable crown, but we for [m]an imperishable crown. 26 Therefore I run thus: [n]not with uncertainty. Thus I fight: not as one who beats the air. 27 [o]But I discipline my body and [p]bring it into subjection, lest, when I have preached to others, I myself should become [q]disqualified.

Old Testament Examples

10 Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under [a]the cloud, all passed through [b]the sea, 2 all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, 3 all ate the same [c]spiritual food, 4 and all drank the same [d]spiritual drink. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. 5 But with most of them God was not well pleased, for their bodies [e]were scattered in the wilderness.

6 Now these things became our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as [f]they also lusted. 7 [g]And do not become idolaters as were some of them. As it is written, [h]"The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play." 8 [i]Nor let us commit sexual immorality, as [j]some of them did, and [k]in one day twenty-three thousand fell; 9 nor let us [l]tempt Christ, as [l]some of them also tempted, and [m]were destroyed by serpents; 10 nor complain, as [n]some of them also complained, and [o]were destroyed by [p]the destroyer. 11 Now [2]all these things happened to them as examples, and [q]they were written for our [3]admonition, [r]upon whom the ends of the ages have come.

12 Therefore [s]let him who thinks he stands take heed lest he fall. 13 No temptation has overtaken you except such as is common to man; but [t]God is faithful, [u]who will not allow you to be tempted beyond what you are able, but with the temptation will also make the way of escape, that you may be able to [4]bear it.

■ 9:24 Run in such a way that you may obtain. Paul elsewhere uses the illustration of a race and its prize to emphasize the need for single-mindedness, determination, and perseverance (Phil. 3:12–14; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

■ 9:27 I discipline my body. He continues the athletic metaphor by reminding his readers that fighters must discipline their bodies if they expect to win. Similarly, Christians must be willing to set aside their selfish interests for the sake of their primary goal.

lest . . . I myself should become disqualified. This statement has often been used as evidence that Christians can lose their salvation. The witness of the New Testament and of Paul in particular is that those whom God has brought to Himself are His forever (Rom. 8:28–30) because the life they have been given is eternal in character (John 5:24; Heb. 7:16). What God has begun He will bring to completion (Phil. 1:6). However, it would be wrong to dismiss or minimize Paul's concern (cf. 15:2; Phil. 3:11; Col. 1:23) by suggesting that it is merely hypothetical or relates only to rewards and not salvation. Paul was confident that absolutely nothing would be able to separate him from God's love (Rom. 8:38–39), but he never presumed that he was saved regardless of what he did. No Christian can afford to take lightly the warnings of Scripture (10:12).

■ 10:2 all were baptized into Moses. Christian baptism stresses the union of the believer with Christ, Paul uses the language of baptism in comparing the Israelites and the Corinthians (5:12, 13 note). All the Israelites went through the ordeal and deliverance of the Exodus by virtue of their identification with their leader, Moses. Note the repetition of "all" in vv. 1–3 (also 12:13). "All" the members of the Corinthian church have been baptized into Christ, and have therefore had a taste of God's deliverance, but that does not guarantee that God is pleased with each one without exception. This passage illustrates and explains the warning in 9:24–27.

■ 10:3, 4 the same spiritual food . . . the same spiritual drink. Following the analogy with baptism, Paul warns the Corinthians not to find false comfort in their participation in the Lord's Supper (vv. 14–22). The Israelites also experienced divinely given food and drink. Here "spiritual" does not mean "immaterial"; nor does it merely suggest that the manna and the water had a deeper significance. Paul probably has in mind the activity of the Holy Spirit (2:6, 14; 3:1; 15:44–46; and notes). The Israelites had received a supernatural provision associated with the work of the Spirit.

that Rock was Christ. In the Old Testament, God is often compared with a rock, and Israel (called "Jeshurun") is described as having forsaken God, the "Rock of his salvation" (Deut. 32:15; cf. Ex. 17:6). The analogy between the Israelites and the Corinthians is not an arbitrary illustration; there is a theological connection. Without minimizing the privileges enjoyed by Christians (v. 11 note), Paul reminds us that the Deliverer of the Israelites was none other than our crucified and risen Savior.

■ 10:6 examples. The Greek word is related to the English term "type" (so also in v. 11). Possibly the use of this word further indicates that the events of the wilderness have a divinely intended correspondence with the experiences of the Christian church.

■ 10:11 the ends of the ages have come. This statement reflects Paul's conviction that the coming of Christ inaugurated the "last days" (Heb. 1:2), the time when the great promises of the Old Testament come to pass (cf. 1:20 note). By pointing out this theme, Paul helps the Corinthians to realize that the Old Testament events looked forward and applied to them. Moreover, these facts suggest that, given their privileged position, the Corinthians ought to recognize their greater responsibility (cf. Heb. 11:39, 40).

■ 10:12 take heed lest he fall. See note on 9:27.

■ 10:13 This well-known verse has provided great encouragement to Christians faced by temptations. At the same time, Paul's words contain an implicit rebuke. If God keeps us from temptations greater than we can withstand, we cannot plead our temptations as an excuse for sinning. Sin is never a necessity for a believer.

Flee from Idolatry

14 Therefore, my beloved, [v]flee from idolatry. 15 I speak as to [w]wise men; judge for yourselves what I say. 16 [x]The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the [5]communion of the blood of Christ? [y]The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? 17 For [z]we, though many, are one bread and one body; for we all partake of that one bread.

18 Observe [a]Israel [b]after the flesh: [c]Are not those who eat of the sacrifices [6]partakers of the altar? 19 What am I saying then? [d]That an idol is anything, or what is offered to idols is anything? 20 Rather, that the things which the Gentiles [e]sacrifice [f]they sacrifice to demons and not to God, and I do not want you to have fellowship with demons. 21 [g]You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and [h]the cup of demons; you cannot partake of the [i]Lord's table and of the table of demons. 22 Or do we [j]provoke the Lord to jealousy? [k]Are we stronger than He?

All to the Glory of God

23 All things are lawful [7]for me, but not all things are [l]helpful; all things are lawful [7]for me, but not all things [8]edify. 24 Let no one seek his own, but each one [m]the other's well-being.

25 [n]Eat whatever is sold in the meat market, asking no questions for conscience' sake; 26 for [o]"the earth is the LORD's, and all its fullness."

27 If any of those who do not believe invites you to dinner, and you desire to go, [p]eat whatever is set before you, asking no question for conscience' sake. 28 But if anyone says to you, "This was offered to idols," do not eat it [q]for the sake of the one who told you, and for conscience' sake; [9]for [r]"the earth is the LORD's, and all its fullness." 29 "Conscience," I say, not your own, but that of the other. For [s]why is my liberty judged by another man's conscience? 30 But if I partake with thanks, why am I evil spoken of for the food [t]over which I give thanks?

31 [u]Therefore, whether you eat or drink, or whatever you do, do all to the glory of God. 32 [v]Give no offense, either to the Jews or to the Greeks or to the church of God, 33 just [w]as I also please all men in all things, not seeking my own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

11 Imitate[a] me, just as I also imitate Christ.

■ 10:14 flee from idolatry. This command is related to Paul's previous remarks about eating food offered to idols (8:1 note). Specifically, Paul is grieved that some of the Corinthians are participating in pagan meals that had an inseparable element of idolatry.

■ 10:16 The cup of blessing . . . The bread which we break. These statements about the Lord's Supper demonstrate the significance of taking part in a distinctively religious meal. Just as it would be impossible to take the Lord's Supper and claim that it had no religious significance, so it is naive for the Corinthians to think they can participate in temple feasts without being involved in idolatry. Another point is that the unity "of the body of Christ" symbolized by taking the bread and wine excludes union with idols. See "The Sacraments" at Matt. 28:19.

■ 10:20 fellowship with demons. Although idols are nothing (v. 19), behind pagan rituals is the reality of Satan's work, and Christians should have nothing to do with that.

■ 10:23 All things are lawful. See note on 6:12, 13.

■ 10:25 Eat whatever is sold in the meat market. In spite of his strong words against taking part in idolatrous feasts, Paul does not want the Corinthians to be overly scrupulous. The fact that food is offered to an idol does not change what the food is; it is still part of God's creation. Therefore, the Corinthian believers do not have to ask whether food in the market was brought from the temple, nor do they need to raise the question when invited to a meal (v. 27). They may freely eat what God has provided.

■ 10:28 do not eat it. A different problem arises if someone announces that the meat comes from a pagan sacrifice. Presumably, such a comment indicates that the person has problems of conscience about it. In that case, it is right to abstain "for the sake of the one who told you."

■ 10:30 why am I evil spoken of. This question makes plain that Paul had been accused of eating meat offered to idols, with the suggestion that he has no right forbidding the Corinthians to do the same (9:19 note).

■ 10:31 do all to the glory of God. See "The Glory of God" at Ezek. 1:28.

■ 10:33 not seeking my own profit, but the profit of many. In combination with the desire to do everything for God's glory (v. 31), this principle provided Paul with his criterion of behavior. It is in fact the principle of Christian love, which "does not seek its own" (13:5).

■ 11:1 The apostle does not set himself up as an absolute example; he is to be imitated to the extent that he imitates Christ.

■ 11:3 the head. The significance of this metaphor has long been debated by scholars—it may indicate leadership and authority, or source and origin. The evidence from Greek literature is ambiguous, and the present context does not resolve the problem. The two ideas should probably not be regarded as excluding each other. In two other contexts where Paul speaks of Christ as head (Eph. 4:15; Col. 2:19), the notion of "source" may be present (cf. v. 8). Elsewhere Paul uses the metaphor with explicit reference to authority or submission (Eph. 1:22; 5:23, 24; Col. 1:18; 2:10). Here the stress probably falls on authority rather than source (cf. v. 10).

head of woman is man, and [d]the head of Christ is God. 4 Every man praying or [e]prophesying, having his head covered, dishonors his head. 5 But every woman who prays or prophesies with her head uncovered dishonors her head, for that is one and the same as if her head were [f]shaved. 6 For if a woman is not covered, let her also be shorn. But if it is [g]shameful for a woman to be shorn or shaved, let her be covered. 7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, since [h]he is the image and glory of God; but woman is the glory of man. 8 For man is not from woman, but woman [i]from man. 9 Nor was man created for the woman, but woman [j]for the man. 10 For this reason the woman ought to have a symbol of authority on her head, because of the angels. 11 Nevertheless, [k]neither is man independent of woman, nor woman independent of man, in the Lord. 12 For as woman came from man, even so man also comes through woman; but all things are from God.

13 Judge among yourselves. Is it proper for a woman to pray to God with her head uncovered? 14 Does not even nature itself teach you that if a man has long hair, it is a dishonor to him? 15 But if a woman has long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given [l]to her for a covering. 16 But [l]if anyone seems to be contentious, we have no such custom, [m]nor do the churches of God.

Conduct at the Lord's Supper

17 Now in giving these instructions I do not praise you, since you come together not for the better but for the worse. 18 For first of all, when you come together as a church, [n]I hear that there are divisions among you, and in part I believe it. 19 For [o]there must also be factions among you, [p]that those who are approved may be [2]recognized among you. 20 Therefore when you come together in one place, it is not to eat the Lord's Supper. 21 For in eating, each one takes his own supper ahead of others; and one is hungry and [q]another is drunk. 22 What! Do you not have houses to eat and drink in? Or do you despise [r]the church of God and [s]shame [3]those who have nothing? What shall I say to you? Shall I praise you in this? I do not praise you.

Institution of the Lord's Supper

dishonors his head. Probably a reference to Christ as the head (v. 7). Neither the Bible nor other documents explain why such a practice would dishonor Christ (cf. v. 10 note).

■ 11:5 with her head uncovered. Given the contrast with the previous verse, this comment suggests that women in the first century normally worshiped with a head covering. Some scholars think that Paul refers to a particular hair style (in Num. 5:18, loosening a woman's hair is part of the test for an unfaithful wife). See note on v. 15.

the same as if her head were shaved. In v. 6, shaving a woman's head is compared to having the hair cut short, presumably like a man's. It appears then that Paul is opposing a practice that tended to obliterate the distinction between the sexes. Possibly, the controversy reflects the idea of some Corinthians that they had achieved perfection and were no longer subject to the normal rules (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 11:7 woman is the glory of man. See "The Image of God" at Gen. 1:27.

■ 11:9 woman for the man. See "Body and Soul, Male and Female" at Gen. 2:7.

■ 11:10 because of the angels. Many interpretations of this phrase have been suggested, but they are all speculative. Paul's argument is closely tied to a specific historical situation, and we should be cautious about applying all its details universally (vv. 4, 16 notes).

■ 11:11, 12 These verses appear to be a qualification of the previous comments. With specific reference to our relationship "in the Lord," men and women are mutually dependent, since we are one in Him (Gal. 3:28).

■ 11:14 nature. Interpreters differ about the meaning of this term. Some believe it refers to the created order. Others argue the apostle is here appealing to the common practices of his day.

■ 11:15 for a covering. Paul may mean that since the woman's long hair serves as a covering, it is equally appropriate for her to wear a veil. Some argue that the hair is "in place of" a covering. This would support the view that Paul refers not to veils but a particular hair style (v. 5 note).

■ 11:16 we have no such custom. Paul does not use exactly this kind of argument elsewhere in any of his letters. Such a conclusion to a difficult passage may give some support to the view that the apostle was not prescribing permanent forms of worship, but dealing with questions of cultural appropriateness. To be sure, such questions have theological implications (v. 5 note).

■ 11:17 I do not praise you. The contrast between these words and v. 2 indicates the seriousness of the problem that Paul now addresses.

■ 11:19 there must also be factions among you. Paul recognizes that nothing occurs outside the divine will and that God may use human sin to further His own purposes. Or, Paul may be using irony, trying to make the Corinthians see that their infighting has the unworthy motive of seeing who can argue the best.

■ 11:20 not . . . the Lord's Supper. Their mishandling of this observance has turned it into something quite different from what it should be.

■ 11:21 one is hungry and another is drunk. Paul's concern here is not with drunkenness as such but with the humiliation of the poor. The Lord's Supper symbolizes, among other things, the unity of God's people (10:17). Those Corinthians who were well-off apparently did not share with the less fortunate among them at the feasts where the Lord's Supper was celebrated. This selfish behavior openly contradicted the meaning of the ceremony.

■ 11:23–25 Paul's account of the institution of the Lord's Supper is in all essentials the same as what is in the Gospels (Matt. 26:26–29; Mark 14:22–25; Luke 22:17–20).

■ 11:23 the Lord Jesus . . . took bread. See theological note "The Lord's Supper."

[25] In the same manner He also took the cup after supper, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in My blood. This do, as often as you drink it, in remembrance of Me."

The Lord's Supper

The Lord's Supper is an act of worship taking the form of a ceremonial meal, in which Christ's servants share bread and wine to commemorate Christ's death and to celebrate the new covenant relationship they enjoy with God.

> Our Lord Jesus, in the night wherein He was betrayed, instituted the sacrament of His body and blood, called the Lord's Supper, to be observed in His church, unto the end of the world, for the perpetual remembrance of the sacrifice of Himself in His death; the sealing of all benefits thereof unto true believers, their spiritual nourishment and growth in Him, their further engagement in and to all duties which they owe unto Him; and, to be a bond and pledge of their communion with Him, and with each other, as members of His mystical body (Westminster Confession 29.1).

The biblical passages dealing with the Supper, on which the above statement is based, are found in Matt. 26:26–29; Mark 14:22–25; Luke 22:17–20; and 1 Cor. 10:16–21; 11:17–34. Jesus' sermon (John 6:35–58) about Himself as the bread of life, and the need to feed on Him by eating His flesh and drinking His blood, was preached before the Supper was instituted, and is better understood as being about what the Supper signifies, communion with Christ by faith, than about the Supper itself.

At the time of the Reformation, questions about the nature of Christ's presence in the Supper and the relation of the Supper to His atoning death were centers of stormy controversy. The Roman Catholic church teaches that Christ is present by transubstantiation, as defined by the Fourth Lateran Council in 1215. "Transubstantiation" means that the substance of the bread and wine is miraculously transformed into Christ's body and blood. The bread and wine are no longer bread and wine, though they appear to be. Luther's doctrine, later called "consubstantiation," was that Christ's body and blood are present "in, with, and under" the form of the bread and wine, which in itself remains bread and wine. The Eastern Orthodox churches and some Anglicans have a similar belief. Zwingli denied that the glorified Christ, now in heaven, is present in any way that such words as "bodily," "physically," or "locally" might suggest. Calvin taught that while the bread and wine remained unchanged, the Spirit raises the believer through faith to enjoy the presence of Christ in a way that is glorious and real, though indescribable.

All the Reformers insisted that at the table we give thanks to Christ for a finished and accepted work of atonement. They denounced the Roman Catholic doctrine of the Mass because in it the sacrifice of the cross was said to be repeated, renewed, or presented again in a way that obscured its sufficiency.

The Lord's Supper has a past reference to Christ's death. It has a present reference to our corporate participation in Him through faith. It has a future reference in that it is a pledge of His return. It encourages the faithful in their daily walk and in their expectation. This service of worship in which Christians remember the suffering that Christ endured for them is a distinctive mark of the Christian religion all over the world. □

■ 11:26 you proclaim the Lord's death till He comes. Note the connection between preaching the gospel and celebrating the Lord's Supper. The Supper sets forth God's Word through visible rather than verbal means. Note also that celebrating the Supper gives expression to our sure hope of the Lord's return.

■ 11:27–34 It is important to take this whole section together as a unit, and vv. 33, 34 make plain Paul still has in mind the abuses mentioned in vv. 21, 22. Phrases such as "in an unworthy manner" (v. 27) and "let a man examine himself" (v. 28) can be extended and applied to many circumstances, but we should be careful not to wrench them from their context. In particular, it would be a misreading of v. 30 to think that God routinely brings illness and death to Christians who, in spite of their spiritual failings, partake of the Supper. The problem in Corinth was much more eats and drinks judgment to himself, not discerning the [8]Lord's body. 30 For this reason many are weak and sick among you, and many [9]sleep. 31 For [y]if we would judge ourselves, we would not be judged. 32 But when we are judged, [z]we are chastened by the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world.

33 Therefore, my brethren, when you [a]come together to eat, wait for one another. 34 But if anyone is hungry, let him eat at home, lest you come together for judgment. And the rest I will set in order when I come.

Spiritual Gifts: Unity in Diversity

12 Now [a]concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I do not want you to be ignorant: 2 You know [b]that[1] you were Gentiles, carried away to these [c]dumb[2] idols, however you were led. 3 Therefore I make known to you that no one speaking by the Spirit of God calls Jesus [3]accursed, and [d]no one can say that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit.

4 [e]There are [4]diversities of gifts, but [f]the same Spirit. 5 [g]There are differences of ministries, but the same Lord. 6 And there are diversities of activities, but it is the same God [h]who works [5]all in all. 7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to each one for the profit of all: 8 for to one is given [i]the word of wisdom through the Spirit, to another [j]the word of knowledge through the same Spirit, 9 [k]to another faith by the same Spirit, to another [l]gifts of healings by [6]the same Spirit, 10 [m]to another the working of miracles, to another [n]prophecy, to another [o]discerning of spirits, to another [p]different kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues. 11 But one and the same Spirit works all these things, [q]distributing to each one individually [r]as He wills.

Unity and Diversity in One Body specific and serious. Some of the Corinthians were tearing apart the unity of the Christian body represented by the one loaf (10:17). The warning in v. 29 about "discerning the Lord's body" almost surely refers to this failure to maintain the unity of the church as the body of Christ (see text note; 12:12 note). Because some of the believers in Corinth were celebrating the Supper in a way that destroyed the unity it represents, God had brought judgment upon the community. God's purpose in judging these believers, however, was to prevent them from being "condemned with the world" (v. 32).

■ 12:1 Now concerning spiritual gifts. See "Gifts and Ministries" at Eph. 4:7.

■ 12:2, 3 As an introduction to the subject of spiritual gifts in Corinth, Paul reminds his readers of the contrast between their pagan and Christian experience. It is not clear whether anyone was actually uttering curses against Jesus (the statement may be only an illustration), but the focus of v. 3 is on the content of religious speech. In view of 14:6–19, we may infer that the apostle is anticipating his argument for understandable speech. Pagans too may have experienced miraculous speech, but what really matters is what is said.

■ 12:4 diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. Apparently, the Corinthians exaggerated the importance of the gift of tongues, so Paul must remind them that one and the same Spirit distributes a variety of gifts to His people. The added references to "the same Lord" (v. 5) and "the same God" (v. 6) reflect the importance of the doctrine of the Trinity for Paul; they also support his concern for unity within diversity.

■ 12:7 for the profit of all. We completely misunderstand the purpose of the Spirit's gifts (here called a "manifestation") if we use them for selfish reasons. Because there are different needs in the Christian community, different gifts are required.

■ 12:8–10 This list of gifts is not intended as a complete catalog (others are included in v. 28); possibly it reflects gifts that were especially evident in Corinth. We need not assume that all of the gifts were manifested in every church. The list in Rom. 12:6–8, for example, includes only two of the gifts mentioned here (prophesying and faith) and omits those that might be thought of as miraculous, such as healing and tongues. In determining the character of some of the gifts listed here, we are hindered by the absence of descriptions of them anywhere in the New Testament. "The word of wisdom" may have been an ability to resolve difficult spiritual problems and "the word of knowledge" a special revelation of some sort, but we cannot be certain. Similarly, it is not clear why Paul lists separately the gifts of "faith," "healings," and "working of miracles." The reference to "discerning of spirits" perhaps should be understood in the light of 14:29. Our inability to determine the precise function of some of these gifts is not an obstacle to understanding the thrust of this passage, which aims not at giving detailed instruction about them but rather at emphasizing the variety of God's endowments to His church (v. 11).

■ 12:10 different kinds of tongues. The proper description of this gift has generated much debate. According to one view, it refers to some kind of ecstatic speech, possibly related to "the tongues . . . of angels" mentioned in 13:1. On the other hand, the New Testament gives explicit and unequivocal evidence that the Holy Spirit granted to the early Christians the ability to speak in foreign, human languages (Acts 2:4–11). Though objections can be raised against this view as well (14:2 note), it can at least be supported by biblical precedent.

■ 12:11 as He wills. This brief clause sets the preceding list of gifts in the proper perspective. Whether an individual or a church possesses a particular gift is not for us to decide. It is the Spirit who sovereignly provides for the people of God. That factor may explain why no New Testament passage gives a complete catalog of gifts or a precise definition of them, since they may vary significantly according to God's plans in changing situations. A church may appropriately pray for God to grant gifts to meet its needs, but such prayers must be offered in submission to His sovereign will and perfect wisdom.

■ 12:12 the body is one. See "The Church" at Eph. 2:19. The description of Christ's church as a body is one of the most distinctive and significant teachings of Paul (1:13 note). Indeed, the apostle tells us that he was given a special revelation concerning this "mystery," which was hidden for many ages; namely, that God's people, both Jews and Gentiles, are now constituted one body by virtue of Christ's exaltation (Eph. 1:22, 23; 3:2–6). Both the existence and the growth of the church derive from this unity established by Christ through the Spirit (Eph. 4:3–6, 11–16; Col. 2:19; 3:14, 15).

■ 12:13 all baptized . . . into one Spirit. The emphasis on the word "all" and the allusion to the sacraments recalls the similar description of body—[v]whether Jews or Greeks, whether slaves or free—and [w]have all been made to drink [7]into one Spirit. 14 For in fact the body is not one member but many.

15 If the foot should say, "Because I am not a hand, I am not of the body," is it therefore not of the body? 16 And if the ear should say, "Because I am not an eye, I am not of the body," is it therefore not of the body? 17 If the whole body were an eye, where would be the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where would be the smelling? 18 But now [x]God has set the members, each one of them, in the body [y]just as He pleased. 19 And if they were all one member, where would the body be?

20 But now indeed there are many members, yet one body. 21 And the eye cannot say to the hand, "I have no need of you"; nor again the head to the feet, "I have no need of you." 22 No, much rather, those members of the body which seem to be weaker are necessary. 23 And those members of the body which we think to be less honorable, on these we bestow greater honor; and our unpresentable parts have greater modesty, 24 but our presentable parts have no need. But God composed the body, having given greater honor to that part which lacks it, 25 that there should be no [8]schism in the body, but that the members should have the same care for one another. 26 And if one member suffers, all the members suffer with it; or if one member is honored, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now [z]you are the body of Christ, and [a]members individually. 28 And [b]God has appointed these in the church: first [c]apostles, second [d]prophets, third teachers, after that [e]miracles, then [f]gifts of healings, [g]helps, [h]administrations, varieties of tongues. 29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Are all workers of miracles? 30 Do all have gifts of healings? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret? 31 But [i]earnestly desire the [9]best gifts. And yet I show you a more excellent way.

The Greatest Gift

13 Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I have become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal. 2 And though I have the gift of [a]prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, [b]so that I could remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing. 3 And [c]though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body [f]to be burned, but have not love, it profits me nothing.

4 [d]Love suffers long and is [e]kind; love [f]does not envy; love does not parade itself, is not [2]puffed up; 5 does not behave rudely, [g]does not seek its own, is not provoked, [3]thinks no evil;

the Israelites in 10:2–4 (notes). One of the truths signified and sealed by water baptism is the baptism of the Holy Spirit that incorporates believers into the one body of Christ. Baptism replaces circumcision as the sign of admission into God's covenant (Col. 2:11–14). Similarly, partaking of the Lord's Supper signifies our continued communion with Christ and His church (10:17; 11:29 note).

■ 12:14–20 Having established the unity of Christ's church, Paul sets forth its diversity. Some scholars have commented that the Corinthians' most fundamental problem was not their rejection of the church's unity, but rather their failure to acknowledge its diversity. Paul corrects their error through a comparison with the human body. He appeals to the sovereign will of God, who "has set the members, each one of them, in the body just as He pleased" (v. 18; cf. v. 11). If the Corinthians denied the validity of certain gifts, they were really questioning God's authority to distribute the gifts. Paul stresses unity, but not a uniformity that squelches valid forms of diversity.

■ 12:22, 23 weaker . . . less honorable. This comparison manifests the problem that has occupied Paul throughout most of the letter, namely, a sense of spiritual superiority among some of the Corinthians and their consequent disdain for those who appear to be "weaker" and "less honorable." Their devaluing of certain gifts (possibly in favor of the gift of tongues) is Paul's concern here.

■ 12:27 members individually. See "The Local Church" at Rev. 2:1.

■ 12:28 See "Gifts and Ministries" at Eph. 4:7. The items in this verse are different from those in vv. 8–10— confirmation that Paul is not interested in giving a complete list. Here Paul begins with "apostles" and "prophets," whom he considers the foundation (Eph. 2:20), and adds as a third category "teachers," so that this listing is similar to that in Eph. 4:11. Though the Greek words for "helps" and "administrations" do not occur elsewhere in the New Testament, Paul probably has in mind the gifts of one who "shows mercy" or "leads" (Rom. 12:8).

■ 12:29, 30 These rhetorical questions bring to a climax Paul's argument that we should not expect everyone to have the same gifts, since God has apportioned them as He wills (vv. 11, 18). Also see "The Apostles" at Acts 1:26.

■ 12:31 desire the best gifts. The meaning of this sentence is disputed. Some believe it refers to the more important gifts in v. 28 (especially prophecy, 14:1); others argue that it introduces the discussion of love in ch. 13. Most likely, Paul is anticipating what he will say later about gifts "for the edification of the church" (14:12), i.e., speaking "words with my understanding, that I may teach others" (14:19).

a more excellent way. Before explaining what the "best gifts" are, as he will in ch. 14, Paul must point out what is the essential condition for the proper exercise of any gift—love.

■ 13:1–3 Using intentional exaggeration, Paul emphasizes the uselessness of gifts exercised without love. The expression "tongues of men" probably refers to the gift of speaking in foreign languages (Acts 2:4–11), while the addition "and of angels" may be a deliberate exaggeration (similarly with "understand all mysteries" and "remove mountains"). Whether the Corinthians claimed to use angelic speech is impossible to determine (12:10 note). The expression "give my body to be burned" may also be a dramatic overstatement.

■ 13:4–7 Paul personifies love as a person who acts in the ways Christians should imitate. The total picture suggests a description of Christ Himself. Considering the kinds of problems this epistle addresses, these verses are a rebuke to the Corinthians, who were failing to conduct themselves with love.

■ 13:5 thinks no evil. Paul may mean that those who love do not devise evil against others. More likely he means that those who love do not focus their attention on the wrongs that others do to them (see text note).

6 [h]does not rejoice in iniquity, but [i]rejoices in the truth; 7 [j]bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.

8 Love never fails. But whether there are prophecies, they will fail; whether there are tongues, they will cease; whether there is knowledge, it will vanish away. 9 [k]For we know in part and we prophesy in part. 10 But when that which is [4]perfect has come, then that which is in part will be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things. 12 For [l]now we see in a mirror, dimly, but then [m]face to face. Now I know in part, but then I shall know just as I also am known.

13 And now abide faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love.

■ 13:7 all. Paul uses this word four times for rhetorical effect as he brings his description of love to a climax.

■ 13:8 Love never fails. One could view this statement as a summary of the previous verse, especially in the light of the comment that love "endures all things." At the same time, the statement allows Paul to build a contrast between love, which always remains (v. 13), and the spiritual gifts, which will cease.

prophecies . . . tongues . . . knowledge. It is likely that Paul mentions these three items as representative of all the spiritual gifts, which have a temporary, earthly function until the end of the age. Others suggest that Paul mentions these three in particular because they have a revelatory function that came to an end with the completion of the New Testament canon (v. 10 note).

■ 13:10 perfect. The context (especially v. 12) suggests strongly that Paul here is referring to the Second Coming of Christ as the final event in God's plan of redemption and revelation. In comparison with what we will receive then, the present blessings are only partial and thus imperfect. It is therefore a sign of immaturity for the Corinthians to treat the temporary, incomplete gifts of the Spirit as having ultimate significance. According to another view, Paul may be referring to the "complete" (see text note) revelation contained in the New Testament Scriptures, which make prophecy and other revelatory gifts obsolete. Still other interpretations have been suggested, such as the maturity in love that the Corinthians should aim for, the maturing of the early church, or the death of the individual Christian.

■ 13:12 I shall know just as I also am known. Perhaps because the Corinthians liked to boast of their knowledge (8:1 note), Paul concludes by stressing the partial character of all present knowledge. The shift from the active ("know") to the passive ("am known") is found elsewhere in the apostle's letters and serves to emphasize dependence on God's grace (8:3; Gal. 4:9). Here the focus is on the intimacy and immediacy of God's knowing, which we will share someday.

■ 13:13 the greatest . . . is love. See theological note "Love."

■ 14:1 especially that you may prophesy. Having set the discussion within the proper framework of love, Paul now encourages the Corinthians to recognize the value of the spiritual gifts. Because the Corinthians have exaggerated the importance of the gift of tongues, however, the emphasis of ch. 14 is on the understandable gifts (v. 19)—primarily prophecy, but also the interpretation of tongues (vv. 27, 28).

■ 14:2 does not speak to men but to God . . . speaks mysteries. This verse (cf. v. 14) describes the gift of tongues in a way that seems inconsistent with the gift of speaking in foreign languages mentioned in Acts 2:4–11 (although some believe that the miracle on Pentecost was a miracle of hearing). Accordingly, many argue that Paul is dealing with something different—a kind of ecstatic speech used for intimate prayer (Rom. 8:26). However, the word translated "tongue" is the normal Greek term for "language." Secondly, Paul's use of the term "mystery" is to indicate a divine truth not yet disclosed; it does not have the meaning of the English word "mysterious" (2:7 note). Thirdly, vv. 10, 11, as well as v. 21, support the idea that even here Paul is speaking of human languages (12:8–10 note).

in the spirit. That is, as opposed to speaking with his mind (vv. 13–15); even the speaker does not understand what he is saying. But this phrase should probably be translated "in the Spirit," to stress the divine inspiration involved in uttering a mystery.

A More Excellent Way (13:1–13)

Love is...	Without Love...	Love is Greater Than...
Patient, kind, unselfish, truthful, hopeful, enduring (vv. 4–7) Not envious, proud, self-centered, rude, or provoked to anger (vv. 4, 5)	Tongues are mere noise (v. 1) Prophecy, mysteries, knowledge, and faith amount to nothing (v. 2) Good deeds are unprofitable (v. 3)	Prophecies, which will fail (v. 8) Tongues, which will cease (v. 8) Knowledge, which will vanish (v. 8)

Love is one of the dynamic terms Paul uses to speak of the holy life enabled by the fullness of the Holy Spirit. It encompasses motive and deed. Love is characteristic of the mature believer.

[e]exhortation and comfort to men. [4] He who speaks in a tongue edifies himself, but he who prophesies edifies the church. [5] I wish you all spoke with tongues, but even more that you prophesied; [f]for he who prophesies is greater than he who speaks with tongues, unless indeed he interprets, that the church may receive edification.

Tongues Must Be Interpreted

[6] But now, brethren, if I come to you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you unless I speak to you either by [f]revelation, by knowledge, by prophesying, or by teaching? [7] Even things without life, whether flute or harp, when they make a sound, unless they make a distinction in the sounds, how will it be known what is piped or played? [8] For if the trumpet makes an uncertain sound, who will prepare for battle? [9] So likewise you, unless you utter by the tongue words easy to understand, how will it be known what is spoken? For you will be speaking into the air. [10] There are, it may be, so many kinds of languages in the world, and none of them is without [2]significance. [11] Therefore, if I do not know the meaning of the language, I shall be a [3]foreigner to him who speaks, and he who speaks will be a foreigner to me. [12] Even so you, since you are [4]zealous for spiritual gifts, let it be for the [5]edification of the church that you seek to excel.

[13] Therefore let him who speaks in a tongue pray that he may [g]interpret. [14] For if I pray in a tongue, my spirit prays, but my understanding is unfruitful. [15] What is the conclusion then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will also pray with the understanding. [h]I will sing with the spirit, and I will also sing [i]with the understanding. [16] Otherwise, if you bless with the spirit, how will he who occupies the place of the uninformed say "Amen" [j]at your giving of thanks, since he does not understand what you say? [17] For you indeed give thanks well, but the other is not edified.

Love

New Testament Christianity is the human response to the revelation of the Creator as the God of love. Out of love for those who did not love, the Father gave the Son, the Son gave His life, and the Father and Son together have sent the Spirit, to save sinners from misery and lead them into glory. Believing in and being overwhelmed by this amazing reality of divine love sustains the love for God and neighbor that the two great commandments require (Matt. 22:35–40). Our love expresses our gratitude for God's gracious love to us, and imitates it as a model (Eph. 4:32–5:2; 1 John 3:16).

The indispensable mark of Christian life is Christian love. The measure and test of love to God is whole-hearted obedience (John 14:15, 21, 23; 1 John 5:3); the measure and test of love to our neighbors is laying down our lives for them (1 John 3:16; cf. John 15:12, 13). This sacrificial love involves giving, spending, and impoverishing ourselves for their well-being. Jesus' story of the Samaritan's kindness to a traditional enemy is His model definition of how to love one's neighbor (Luke 10:25–37).

Christian love is described in 1 Corinthians 13. Its total lack of self-concern is breathtaking. It seeks the neighbor's good, and its true measure is how much it gives to that end. Love is a principle of action rather than of emotion. It is a matter of doing things for people out of compassion for them, whether or not we feel personal affection for them. It is by their active love to one another that Jesus' disciples can be recognized (John 13:34, 35). □

■ 14:4 edifies himself. Those speaking in an uninterpreted language were encouraged and comforted, despite their not understanding the message.

■ 14:6 what shall I profit you. This principle of benefiting others by edifying them becomes the key point of the passage. Paul is applying the teaching of 12:7 that God has granted a variety of gifts "for the profit of all."

■ 14:7, 8 These verses illustrate the principle mentioned in v. 6. Musical instruments convey nothing to those who listen unless they are played with intelligent purpose.

■ 14:13 pray that he may interpret. Without minimizing the significance of the gift of tongues, Paul encourages the Corinthians to use it in a way that makes it valuable for the congregation.

■ 14:14 my spirit prays, but my understanding is unfruitful. Whatever spiritual benefit he might receive from the experience, his understanding is not built up. In the next verse, Paul emphasizes that he would rather have both benefits.

■ 14:16 say "Amen" at your giving of thanks. The members of the congregation, if they are to participate in public worship, must be able to agree with the message of the hymns being sung and the prayers being offered. The custom of expressing their approval with an audible "Amen" ("So it is!") cannot be followed if no one understands what has been said.

18 I thank my God I speak with tongues more than you all; 19 yet in the church I would rather speak five words with my understanding, that I may teach others also, than ten thousand words in a tongue.

Tongues a Sign to Unbelievers

20 Brethren, [k]do not be children in understanding; however, in malice [l]be babes, but in understanding be mature.

21 [m]In the law it is written:

> [n]"With men of other tongues and other lips
> I will speak to this people;
> And yet, for all that, they will not hear Me,"

says the Lord.

22 Therefore tongues are for a [o]sign, not to those who believe but to unbelievers; but prophesying is not for unbelievers but for those who believe. 23 Therefore if the whole church comes together in one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those who are uninformed or unbelievers, [p]will they not say that you are [6]out of your mind? 24 But if all prophesy, and an unbeliever or an uninformed person comes in, he is convinced by all, he is convicted by all. 25 [7]And thus the secrets of his heart are revealed; and so, falling down on his face, he will worship God and report [q]that God is truly among you.

Order in Church Meetings

26 How is it then, brethren? Whenever you come together, each of you has a psalm, [r]has a teaching, has a tongue, has a revelation, has an interpretation. [s]Let all things be done for [8]edification. 27 If anyone speaks in a tongue, let there be two or at the most three, each in turn, and let one interpret. 28 But if there is no interpreter, let him keep silent in church, and let him speak to himself and to God. 29 Let two or three prophets speak, and [t]let the others judge. 30 But if anything is revealed to another who sits by, [u]let the first keep silent. 31 For you can all prophesy one by one, that all may learn and all may be encouraged. 32 And [v]the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets. 33 For God is not the author of [9]confusion but of peace, [w]as in all the churches of the saints.

34 [x]Let [l]your women keep silent in the churches, for they are not permitted to speak; but they are to be submissive, as the [y]law also says. 35 And if they want to learn something, let them ask their own husbands at home; for it is shameful for women to speak in church.

■ 14:18, 19 It may be that some of the Corinthians justified their emphasis on the gift of tongues by arguing that Paul himself exercised this gift. Without denying the fact, the apostle puts the gift in proper perspective by pointing out how much more valuable is doing something that "may teach others."

■ 14:20–25 Up to this point, Paul has been discussing the use of tongues among believers. But what about unbelievers who hear the tongues? The Corinthians have ignored them, and Paul admonishes the church for this display of spiritual immaturity. He appeals to "the law," (the Old Testament) to show that God uses unintelligible speech as a sign of judgment. Is. 28:11 explains how God judged the Israelites through Assyrians speaking a foreign language. If non-Christians come to the worship and hear an unintelligible language, they will be repelled (v. 23) and reject the gospel. In this situation uninterpreted tongues are a sign of judgment "to unbelievers" (v. 22). But the Corinthians should aim at bringing unbelievers to repentance and to the recognition that God is present (v. 25). Because God uses the understandable words of prophecy to accomplish this purpose, prophecy is a sign "for those who believe"; it is evidence of God's goodness to them (v. 22).

■ 14:26 for edification. See note on v. 6; "God's Pattern for Worship" at 1 Chr. 16:29.

■ 14:27 let one interpret. This concern for understanding has informed the whole discussion (v. 1 note). Paul's instructions in this verse and the following demonstrate that those who spoke in tongues controlled their utterance, although they may not have understood it.

■ 14:29–33 Having given instructions for the proper exercise of the gift of tongues, Paul moves on to other directives that also affect the order of public worship. Since he had emphasized the importance of prophecy, he points out that even this gift should be exercised in an orderly fashion—"Let two or three prophets speak" (during the course of, or perhaps at various points in, the service), while "the others" who have the gift of prophecy should evaluate the message to ascertain that it is not false. Apparently the Corinthians were speaking in tongues and prophesying without regard for each other or for the content of the message (12:2, 3 note). Their disorder was a threat to the unity of the body and was incompatible with the God "of peace" (v. 33).

■ 14:34, 35 These verses have created debate among Christians, at least partly because it is not known what problem exactly Paul was seeking to correct. It has even been proposed that these verses were not part of Paul's original letter. In view of 11:5 and other New Testament passages, it is certain that Paul is not absolutely forbidding women to speak in every church situation. Paul may have been addressing a particular problem in Corinth, such as women creating disorder during the worship service. He may have in mind a specific function, such as the evaluation of prophecy (vv. 29, 32), in which women should not participate. It has been suggested that vv. 34, 35 are a quotation from the Corinthians themselves that Paul rejects in v. 36.

■ 14:36 These sarcastic questions show that Paul is not giving general instructions for worship. Rather, he is addressing serious problems arising out of the Corinthians' boastful arrogance.

anyone thinks himself to be a prophet or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things which I write to you are the commandments of the Lord. 38 But [2]if anyone is ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Therefore, brethren, [a]desire earnestly to prophesy, and do not forbid to speak with tongues. 40 [b]Let all things be done decently and in order.

The Risen Christ, Faith's Reality

15 Moreover, brethren, I declare to you the gospel [a]which I preached to you, which also you received and [b]in which you stand, 2 [c]by which also you are saved, if you hold fast that word which I preached to you—unless [d]you believed in vain.

3 For [e]I delivered to you first of all that [f]which I also received: that Christ died for our sins [g]according to the Scriptures, 4 and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day [h]according to the Scriptures, 5 [i]and that He was seen by [j]Cephas, then [k]by the twelve. 6 After that He was seen by over five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain to the present, but some have [2]fallen asleep. 7 After that He was seen by James, then [k]by all the apostles. 8 [l]Then last of all He was seen by me also, as by one born out of due time.

9 For I am [m]the least of the apostles, who am not worthy to be called an apostle, because

■ 14:38 is ignorant, let him be ignorant. See note on 13:12 for the contrast between knowing and being known. The present verse may be a warning that those who are stubborn will be disciplined by Paul or by the church (2 Thess. 3:14), but the language suggests that they will come under direct divine judgment.

■ 14:39, 40 These verses are a concise summary of ch. 14.

■ 15:1 With this verse, Paul shifts to a new topic of great concern to him—the integrity of the gospel message as it focuses on the doctrine of the Resurrection.

■ 15:2 if you hold fast. See note on 9:27.

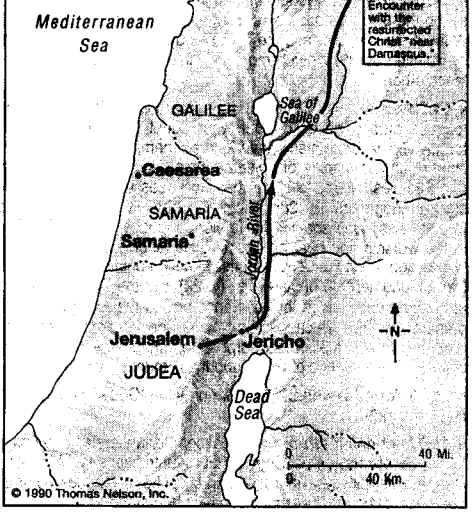
believed in vain. Denying the resurrection of Christ makes our faith useless (v. 14).

■ 15:3–5 These verses give the essence not only of Paul's preaching but of the early church's teaching as a whole ("that which I also received"): Christ's vicarious death and His resurrection as the fulfillment of the Old Testament message.

■ 15:5–8 The fourfold repetition of "He was seen" indicates Paul's emphasis in this passage—the eyewitness proof that Christ was raised from the dead. Most of those who witnessed the resurrection appearances were still living at the time Paul wrote this letter, so it was possible for anyone to check the facts. Particularly significant is the reference to "over five hundred brethren at once," for it shows that the appearances cannot be explained away as mere personal hallucinations.

■ 15:7 James. This is not John's brother, the apostle executed by Herod Agrippa (Acts 12:2), but the half brother of Jesus (John 7:5; Acts 12:17; 15:13; Gal. 1:19).

■ 15:8 as by one born out of due time. This self-deprecating remark may be an ironic criticism of the Corinthians who held Paul in low esteem (2:1 note). What the apostle means is suggested by the phrase "last of all." The appearances of the risen Lord had ceased, and Paul was a persecutor of the church when he received his calling to be an apostle (Gal. 1:13, 23; Phil. 3:6; 1 Tim. 1:13–16). Although Paul had not been with Jesus during His earthly ministry, he was granted the privilege of seeing Jesus risen from the dead, and was commissioned as an apostle with a special ministry to the Gentiles (Acts 9:3–5, 15; Gal. 1:15, 16). What Paul says strongly suggests that the apostolic office was a unique, foundational gift to the church (Eph. 2:20).



Paul on the Road to Damascus. Armed with letters from the high priest, Saul set out from Jerusalem to Damascus in order to persecute Christians. As he approached Damascus, he was confronted by the resurrected Jesus in a blinding encounter (Acts 9:1–9). Saul who had "persecuted the church of God" (1 Cor. 15:9) became Paul who now preached convincingly that Jesus was the Messiah.

[n]I persecuted the church of God. 10 But [o]by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace toward me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all, [p]yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me. 11 Therefore, whether it was I or they, so we preach and so you believed.

The Risen Christ, Our Hope

12 Now if Christ is preached that He has been raised from the dead, how do some among you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? 13 But if there is no resurrection of the dead, [q]then Christ is not risen. 14 And if Christ is not risen, then our preaching is empty and your faith is also empty. 15 Yes, and we are found false witnesses of God, because [r]we have testified of God that He raised up Christ, whom He did not raise up—if in fact the dead do not rise. 16 For if the dead do not rise, then Christ is not risen. 17 And if Christ is not risen, your faith is futile; [s]you are still in your sins! 18 Then also those who have [3]fallen [t]asleep in Christ have perished. 19 [u]If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most pitiable.

The Last Enemy Destroyed

20 But now [v]Christ is risen from the dead, and has become [w]the firstfruits of those who have [4]fallen asleep. 21 For [x]since by man came death, [y]by Man also came the resurrection of the dead. 22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ all shall [z]be made alive. 23 But [a]each one in his own order: Christ the firstfruits, afterward those who are Christ's at His coming. 24 Then comes the end, when He delivers [b]the kingdom to God the Father, when He puts an end to all rule and all authority and power. 25 For He must reign [c]till He has put all enemies under His feet. 26 [d]The last enemy that will be destroyed is death. 27 For [e]"He has put all things under His feet." But when He says "all things are put under Him," it is evident that He who put all things under Him is excepted. 28 [f]Now when all things are made subject to Him, then [g]the Son Himself will also be subject to Him who put all things under Him, that God may be all in all.

Effects of Denying the Resurrection

29 Otherwise, what will they do who are baptized for the dead, if the dead do not rise at all? Why then are they baptized for the dead? 30 And [h]why do we stand in [5]jeopardy every hour?

■ 15:10 the grace of God. Having freely admitted the abnormal and undeserving character of his experience, Paul moves on to stress that his past life is no reason to reject his message. Where sin abounds, God's effectual grace abounds all the more (Rom. 5:20); where we are weak, God's grace is strong (2 Cor. 12:9, 10). Divine grace did not make Paul lazy, but caused him to labor "more abundantly" than anyone else.

■ 15:12 there is no resurrection. Paul finally addresses the problem that needs correction. Some of the Corinthians, perhaps without denying that Jesus had been raised, were questioning the doctrine of the resurrection because of their unbiblical understanding of the human body (v. 35 note). Paul needed to show them that the resurrection of Jesus cannot be separated from the resurrection of those who are His (vv. 20–23). If their resurrection is not true, neither is His. But to deny, even by implication, that Jesus' body was raised from the tomb destroys the message of the gospel.

■ 15:14 our preaching is empty and your faith is also. Cf. v. 17. The truth of the Christian message is tied to the historical reality of Christ's death and exaltation. The apostle cannot conceive of his message having any spiritual value if its historical foundation does not exist.

■ 15:19 we are . . . most pitiable. Though Paul would not deny that in the spiritual sense Christians enjoy a better present life than non-Christians, this verse emphasizes the greatness of what God has promised for the life to come. Our hope of salvation is so glorious that if we were still in our sins and lost (vv. 17, 18), we would have experienced the greatest and cruelest of all deceptions (vv. 31, 32).

■ 15:20 the firstfruits. At harvesttime the Israelites were required to bring an offering from the first part of the crop (Lev. 23:10). This offering was a token of the whole harvest, that all belonged to God. Jesus is called the "firstfruits" because His resurrection and the resurrection of believers are closely related events. Jesus was "the first to rise from the dead" (Acts 26:23), rising as our representative. His resurrection caused us to be raised spiritually (Rom. 6:4; Eph. 2:6), and at the same time guarantees that we will be raised bodily. Another use of the metaphor is found in Rom. 8:23 (cf. also 2 Cor. 1:22; 5:5; Eph. 1:14).

■ 15:21 This passage succinctly states one of Paul's most profound teachings—our twofold solidarity with the first man, Adam, and with the last man, Christ. By virtue of our humanity, we are united with Adam in our present natural existence, in sin, and in death; by virtue of our faith, we are united with Christ in spiritual existence, in righteousness, and in the life to come (vv. 45–49; Rom. 5:17–19). See theological note "Resurrection and Glorification."

■ 15:22 in Adam all die. See "The Fall" at Gen. 3:6.

■ 15:24–28 See "Jesus' Heavenly Reign" at Acts 7:55. Although Paul's argument in this section is difficult in its details, its thrust is clear and powerful. The Corinthians must understand that the Resurrection is not an isolated event with limited repercussions. It is rather an integrating and culminating event in God's sovereign rule over history. Redemption is not complete "till He has put all enemies under His feet" (v. 25, a clear reference to Ps. 110:1), and since death is "the last enemy" (v. 26), Christ's work is not done until death is destroyed. Paul's statement that the Son "will also be subject" to the Father (v. 28) does not mean that the Son is inferior in dignity and being. Rather, in His messianic work the Son subjects Himself to the will of the Father "when He delivers the kingdom to God the Father" (v. 24). The climax of Christ's submissive, messianic work is this total conquest over His enemies, "that God may be all in all," when His absolute rule is universally acknowledged.

■ 15:29 baptized for the dead. Apparently some in Corinth were being baptized on behalf of others who had already died. This practice is not mentioned elsewhere in the Bible or in other ancient writings. Numerous explanations of the practice have been proposed, all of them speculative and none persuasive. Paul mentions the rite only to show the logical inconsistency of his opponents' position.

33 Do not be deceived: [m]"Evil company corrupts good habits." 34 [n]Awake to righteousness, and do not sin; [o]for some do not have the knowledge of God. [p]I speak this to your shame.

A Glorious Body

35 But someone will say, [q]"How are the dead raised up? And with what body do they come?" 36 Foolish one, [r]what you sow is not made alive unless it dies. 37 And what you sow, you do not

Resurrection and Glorification

Jesus was the first to be raised from the dead to a glorified existence no longer subject to death as the punishment for sin (Acts 26:23). When He returns to this world He will raise His servants to a resurrection life like His own (1 Cor. 15:20–23; 2 Cor. 5:1–5; Phil. 3:20–21). He will, indeed, raise the whole human race from the dead, but those who are not His will be raised for condemnation (John 5:29) and subject to the "second death" for their sins (Rev. 2:11; 21:8). Christians alive at His coming will at that instant undergo a marvelous transformation (1 Cor. 15:50–54).

There is a continuity between the mortal and the immortal body. Jesus was raised in the same body in which He died. Paul compares the mortal body and the resurrection body to a seed and the plant that grows from it (1 Cor. 15:35–44). While there is continuity, there is discontinuity as well. Our present bodies, like Adam's, are natural and earthly, subject to weakness and death. The resurrection body, like Christ's, will be spiritual, created and sustained by the Holy Spirit, and will belong to the eternal, imperishable, heavenly order (1 Cor. 15:45–54).

After His resurrection, Jesus' disciples could recognize Him despite the differences in His new body. In the same way, Christians will recognize one another, and there will be joyful reunions when the separations caused by death are ended. This is apparent from 1 Thess. 4:13–18. In this passage Paul assured those who were grieving that they would see their Christian loved ones again.

Glorification is the work of transformation that removes all sin from us and makes us fit to be with God in perfect communion (1 Cor. 13:12). The saints will worship and serve God with a nature made whole and a heart set free. Our desire to be with God and enjoy His love will be fulfilled in the presence of the triune God (Job 19:26; Matt. 5:8; Rev. 22:3, 4).

Paul's description in Rom. 8:30 of the process whereby God saves His elect concludes with a striking past tense: "He also glorified" those who were saved. Literally, glorification is still in the future for everyone other than Jesus Himself. Paul's thought apparently is that our glorification has already been decided by God as part of His sovereign plan and can be spoken of as absolutely certain. □

■ 15:32 beasts. Probably a reference to Paul's enemies in Ephesus (where this letter was written) who wanted to condemn him (cf. "the mouth of the lion," 2 Tim. 4:17 note). The hope of resurrection strengthens Paul to endure severe trials and persecutions (v. 19 note).

■ 15:33 Evil company corrupts good habits. Derived from a comedy written by the popular Greek author Menander (342–292 B.C.), this proverb was common in the ancient world (note the comparable Jewish saying in 5:6). Those Christians in Corinth with a defective view of the Resurrection not only had been influenced by the bad company they kept, but in their turn they were corrupting others in the congregation.

■ 15:34 some do not have the knowledge of God. Probably a reference to members of the church who boasted of their knowledge (8:1 note) but whose denial of the Resurrection showed deep ignorance regarding the things of God.

■ 15:35 with what body do they come. In this verse Paul considers what was apparently the primary objection raised by some of the Corinthians against a bodily resurrection. They were probably influenced by dualism, a pagan philosophy that contrasted the immaterial with the physical and argued that the immaterial was good but the material was evil. Along such lines some of the Christians had developed disdain for the human body, probably distorting their ideas about sexual relationships (6:14 note). They seem to have thought that since body was evil, the doctrine of the Resurrection meant that dishonorable bodies would be raised. Paul regards their position as foolish (v. 36) and gives an extensive discussion of the matter (vv. 36–49).

■ 15:36 unless it dies. Because God is the creator of the world, the processes of nature reflect in various ways how He works. Nature provides useful metaphors and analogies of the divine work of salvation (Is. 55:10, 11). Jesus uses a seed ("if it dies, it produces much grain") as an illustration of spiritual truth (John 12:24). Here Paul uses the same picture, but to illustrate the striking difference between what is planted and what eventually grows from the seed (v. 37). The same sort of analogy can be found in Plato's dialogue Symposium.

sow that body that shall be, but mere grain—perhaps wheat or some other grain. 38 But God gives it a body as He pleases, and to each seed its own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh, but there is one kind [6]of flesh of men, another flesh of animals, another of fish, and another of birds.

40 There are also [7]celestial bodies and [8]terrestrial bodies; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. 41 There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differs from another star in glory.

42 [s]So also is the resurrection of the dead. The body is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption. 43 [t]It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. 44 It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. 45 And so it is written, [u]"The first man Adam became a living being." [v]The last Adam became [w]a life-giving spirit.

46 However, the spiritual is not first, but the natural, and afterward the spiritual. 47 [x]The first man was of the earth, [y]made[9] of dust; the second Man is [1]the Lord [z]from heaven. 48 As was the [2]man of dust, so also are those who are [2]made of dust; [a]and as is the heavenly Man, so also are those who are heavenly. 49 And [b]as we have borne the image of the man of dust, [c]we[3] shall also bear the image of the heavenly Man.

Our Final Victory

50 Now this I say, brethren, that [d]flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; nor does corruption inherit incorruption. 51 Behold, I tell you a [4]mystery: [e]We shall not all sleep, [f]but we shall all be changed— 52 in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. [g]For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. 53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and [h]this mortal must put on immortality. 54 So when this corruptible has put on incorruption, and this mortal has put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: [i]"Death is swallowed up in victory."

55 "O[5] Death, where is your sting?
O Hades, where is your victory?"

56 The sting of death is sin, and [k]the strength of sin is the law. 57 [l]But thanks be to God, who gives us [m]the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

■ 15:38 to each seed its own body. At this point Paul shifts the illustration to emphasize the variations among different plants. He goes on to apply the idea to living creatures (v. 39) and heavenly bodies (vv. 40, 41).

■ 15:42, 43 Finally the illustration is applied to the human body that dies and is buried, and is transformed in its resurrection. Paul does not suggest that the resurrection body is a different body altogether. Just as a plant arises directly from its seed, so the resurrection body is in essence the same as the body that "is sown." But the apostle's emphasis is on the astounding change that will take place: from "corruption," "dishonor," and "weakness," to "incorruption," "glory," and "power."

■ 15:44 natural body . . . spiritual body. This last contrast is difficult to understand but of great importance. Paul does not have in mind a contrast between physical and nonphysical, material and immaterial. The resurrection body is a physical body, not an intangible ghost. The apostle has already used the words "natural" and "spiritual" to distinguish the individual who does not have the Holy Spirit from the one who does (2:6, 14 notes). The natural person belongs to the present age (1:20), while the spiritual person is a citizen of heaven (Phil. 3:20). Christians have received the Holy Spirit and are on that account "spiritual." They have not yet received the spiritual "body," the body that will be fully conformed to the life given by the Spirit. See Rom. 8:22–25 and note.

■ 15:45 living being . . . life-giving spirit. Paul clarifies his meaning by continuing the contrast between the first and the last Adam (vv. 21, 22 note). The Greek word translated "being" (psyche) is related to the word translated "natural" in v. 44 (psychikos), while the word "spirit" (pneuma) corresponds to "spiritual" (pneumatikos). The words "life-giving spirit" are most probably a reference to the Holy Spirit. Jesus and the Holy Spirit are not the same Person, but He and the Spirit are identified in terms of their presence and activity in the church. This identity, known to us because Jesus too is life-giving, is the fulfillment of Jesus' role as Messiah and commenced with His resurrection and ascension. To be in Christ is to be in the Spirit also (6:11, 15, 19; 12:19). The association of Christ, the Holy Spirit, and life is apparent in Rom. 8:9–11 and 2 Cor. 3:6, 17, 18.

■ 15:48 of dust . . . heavenly. Here is a final contrast, suggesting that vv. 42–44 refer to the distinction between earthly and heavenly human bodies. In this context the distinction, however, is not one of substance but of time; the present evil age is contrasted with the coming perfect age. Believers already enjoy some of the blessings of the coming age (10:11 note) but still await its consummation. God's work of redemption will not be complete until the bodily resurrection. We have borne the image of the first Adam, and since we belong to Christ, we are destined to bear the image of the last Adam (v. 49).

■ 15:50 flesh and blood. This phrase alludes to the weakness of earthly, human existence and is an equivalent to "corruption." Paul is warning the Corinthians that without new bodies of "incorruption" we "cannot inherit the kingdom of God." How then can some deny the doctrine of the Resurrection?

■ 15:51 mystery. See note on 2:7.

We shall not all sleep. Paul recognizes that many Christians will not die but will be alive at the time of Christ's return. Though these Christians will not be raised from death, they too will be transformed and receive imperishable and immortal bodies (1 Thess. 4:13–18 and notes).

■ 15:54–57 This is one of the most eloquent and powerful passages in Scripture. With paraphrases of Isaiah and Hosea (based on the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament), Paul alludes to his earlier argument in vv. 24–28 and vigorously assures us of the finality of death's destruction on the day of Resurrection. The Day will also mark the destruction of "sin" and "the law." In the letter to the Romans, Paul explains in detail how sin is the venom bringing death to all (Rom. 5:12), and how the law, though itself holy, becomes an instrument through which sin can deceive (Rom. 7:7–12).

58 [n]Therefore, my beloved brethren, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing [o]that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

Collection for the Saints

16 Now concerning [a]the collection for the saints, as I have given orders to the churches of Galatia, so you must do also: 2 [b]On the first day of the week let each one of you lay something aside, storing up as he may prosper, that there be no collections when I come. 3 And when I come, [c]whomever you approve by your letters I will send to bear your gift to Jerusalem. 4 [d]But if it is fitting that I go also, they will go with me.

Personal Plans

5 Now I will come to you [e]when I pass through Macedonia (for I am passing through Macedonia). 6 And it may be that I will remain, or even spend the winter with you, that you may [f]send me on my journey, wherever I go. 7 For I do not wish to see you now on the way; but I hope to stay a while with you, [g]if the Lord permits.

8 But I will tarry in Ephesus until [h]Pentecost. 9 For [i]a great and effective door has opened to me, and *i*there are many adversaries.

10 And [k]if Timothy comes, see that he may be with you without fear; for [l]he does the work of the Lord, as I also do. 11 [m]Therefore let no one despise him. But send him on his journey [n]in peace, that he may come to me; for I am waiting for him with the brethren.

12 Now concerning our brother [o]Apollos, I strongly urged him to come to you with the brethren, but he was quite unwilling to come at this time; however, he will come when he has a convenient time.

Final Exhortations

13 [p]Watch, [q]stand fast in the faith, be brave, [r]be strong. 14 [s]Let all that you do be done with love.

15 I urge you, brethren—you know [t]the household of Stephanas, that it is [u]the firstfruits of Achaia, and that they have devoted themselves to [v]the ministry of the saints— 16 [w]that you also submit to such, and to everyone who works and [x]labors with us.

17 I am glad about the coming of Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, [y]for what was lacking on your part they supplied. 18 [z]For they refreshed my spirit and yours. Therefore [a]acknowledge such men.

■ 15:58 be steadfast. In the face of false teaching and various temptations, the hope of the Resurrection should encourage the Corinthians to persevere in their faith. The exhortation to be "immovable," however, does not imply inactivity. On the contrary, the Corinthians must be fully active in "the work of the Lord." We can become easily discouraged by thinking that our labor may come to nothing (Gal. 2:2; Phil. 2:16; 1 Thess. 3:5), but we can remember the promise that when God creates the new heavens and new earth His people will enjoy the fruits of their toil, and see that their efforts are never "in vain" (Is. 65:17–25).

■ 16:1 Now concerning the collection. From 2 Cor. 8:1–4 and Rom. 15:25–27 it appears that one of the purposes of Paul's third missionary journey was to raise an offering from the Gentiles for Jewish Christians in Judea who were in need, possibly as a result of persecution. Apparently, Paul had already told the Corinthians about this project in an earlier letter (5:9). They had asked for more information and perhaps expressed reservations about it (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

for the saints. See 1:2 note.

■ 16:2 On the first day of the week. The reference is to Sunday, the day on which the resurrected Lord met with His disciples (John 20:19, 26; cf. also "the Lord's Day" in Rev. 1:10). Acts 20:7 indicates that the early Christians met on Sunday "to break bread" (part of their worship), and it would have been appropriate to designate that day for collecting the offering.

■ 16:3 whomever you approve. This comment possibly reflects doubts on the part of some whether Paul should be given sole responsibility for the money (2:1 note).

■ 16:5–9 These verses make clear that Paul wrote the letter from Ephesus and intended to visit Corinth by way of the northern land route around the Aegean Sea. Both Acts 20:1, 2 and 2 Cor. 2:12, 13 indicate that he carried out this plan. What Paul did not foresee at this time was the prior need to make a short and unpleasant visit to Corinth soon after writing 1 Corinthians (2 Cor. 1:23; 2:1; 13:2; Introduction to 2 Corinthians: Date and Occasion).

■ 16:10 if Timothy comes. Earlier (4:17), Paul had mentioned that Timothy was coming as his representative (Acts 19:22). Paul wants them to treat his younger coworker with respect.

■ 16:12 Now concerning our brother Apollos. Apparently, the Corinthians in their letter had asked for Apollos to return to them (Introduction: Date and Occasion; Acts 18:27—19:1). In spite of the improper attitude of the Corinthians (4:6; 4:15 note), Paul honored their request. Apollos was "unwilling" to go at this time, but would come later.

■ 16:15–18 This passage commends "Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus," who probably had carried the letter from the church in Corinth. Paul's emphasis (especially in the words "I urge you, brethren . . . that you also submit") suggests that these men, Stephanas in particular, were appointed leaders but did not enjoy proper respect from the congregation. The phrase "what was lacking on your part" does not necessarily imply a criticism (the Greek at the end of Phil. 2:30 is almost identical), but here it may suggest that the church as a whole failed to refresh his spirit.

Greetings and a Solemn Farewell

19 The churches of Asia greet you. Aquila and Priscilla greet you heartily in the Lord, [b] with the church that is in their house. 20 All the brethren greet you.

[c] Greet one another with a holy kiss.

22 If anyone [e] does not love the Lord Jesus Christ, [f] let him be [1] accursed. [g] O [2] Lord, come!

23 [h] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. 24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

■ 16:19 Asia. Ephesus, where 1 Corinthians was written, was the most important city in the Roman province of Asia, the southwestern part of the Anatolian peninsula, now part of modern Turkey (Acts 19:10).

Aquila and Priscilla. This couple played an important role during Paul's initial visit to Corinth (Acts 18:1–3), so the congregation knew them well.

■ 16:20 holy kiss. A normal greeting in the early church. Though this practice was not uncommon in Judaism and Roman culture, the word "holy" indicates the added significance such a greeting had among the saints, since it represented the special relationship of brothers and sisters in Christ.

■ 16:21 with my own hand. The letter up to this point would have been written by a trained scribe (Rom. 16:22), but Paul's custom was to add a few words himself as a personal signature.

■ 16:22 let him be accursed. These strong words, written in Paul's own hand, assert the apostolic authority behind the whole letter. This is not a curse on unbelievers in general but on those who reject the authority of the letter (Gal. 1:8, 9; 2 Thess. 3:14, 15).

O Lord, come. Paul gives a transliteration of the Aramaic words Marana tha (or Maran atha, "Our Lord has come"), reflecting the worship of the early church in Palestine.

■ 16:24 My love be with you all. After a long letter consisting primarily of severe rebukes, these affectionate words come as a surprise. Paul has not forgotten the pastoral needs of his congregation (1:2 note).

The Second Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

CORINTHIANS

Author That the apostle Paul was the author of this letter (1:1) is universally acknowledged. It is an intensely personal letter in which Paul gives many details of his movements and associations.

Date and Occasion The most likely date for the epistle is A.D. 55. Paul wrote it after he had left Ephesus (Acts 20:1) but before he arrived again in Corinth (Acts 20:2).

After founding the church at Corinth in A.D. 51–52 (Acts 18:1–18), Paul returned to Antioch, ending his second missionary journey (Acts 18:22). On his third missionary journey Paul traveled to Ephesus and stayed there three years (Acts 19:1–41; 20:31). During his stay at Ephesus, messengers had come from Corinth with questions Paul answered in 1 Corinthians (1 Cor. 16:17, 18). Sometime later, Paul apparently heard of difficulties at Corinth and made a quick voyage by sea from Ephesus to Corinth and back. This visit did not go well and Paul later referred to it as a visit made "in sorrow" (2:1). Though not recorded in Acts, this visit is indirectly attested when Paul writes in 2 Corinthians that he is coming to them for the "third time" (12:14; 13:1). We do not know many details about what made this visit sorrowful, but apparently someone at Corinth had opposed or seriously offended Paul (2:5, 10).

Most commentators think that after the sorrowful visit, Paul wrote the Corinthians a strong letter, commonly called the "severe letter," rebuking them and encouraging them to repent (2:3, 4; 7:8). It seems most likely that the letter referred to in these verses has not been preserved. But some hold that the letter referred to is 1 Corinthians. Others think that the originally separate letter has been preserved as 2 Corinthians 10–13. Paul sent Titus ahead by sea to Corinth, carrying the strong letter, while Paul took the longer land route around through Troas and Macedonia (2:12, 13; 7:5–9, 13–15; Acts 20:1, 2).

Paul did not know how the Corinthians would receive Titus and the strong letter. When he left Ephesus and traveled to Troas he experienced considerable anxiety because of his concern for the Corinthian church (2:13; 7:5). Though there was an opportunity for effective ministry when he reached Troas (2:12), Paul's spirit was still deeply troubled. He left Troas and went on to Philippi in Macedonia, hoping to meet Titus there. When Titus finally arrived (probably at Philippi but perhaps at Thessalonica) Paul was overwhelmed with joy as he heard about the genuine repentance of the Corinthians and their deep affection and loyalty to Paul (7:6–15).

Paul then wrote 2 Corinthians from Macedonia to express thanksgiving for the repentance and renewed obedience of the Corinthian church (7:5–16). He also wrote to encourage them to complete their collection for the poor Christians in Jerusalem (chs. 8; 9). Moreover, Paul shows concern throughout the epistle to defend his ministry against the accusations of "false apostles" (11:13) at Corinth who were challenging Paul's authority and the integrity of his ministry (chs. 10—13; also 3:1–6; 7:2).

Finally, Paul arrived in Corinth and stayed for three months (Acts 20:2, 3) before departing for Jerusalem with the collection that had been sent from many churches for the Christians there (Acts 20:3—21:17).

Characteristics and Themes Second Corinthians is a personal letter, filled with expressions of deep emotion. As such, it affords us extraordinary insight into the gospel ministry as carried out by Paul. Two chief themes reveal the nature of Paul's apostolic ministry. In chs. 1—7 it is a service of divine comfort and encouragement in the midst of suffering and troubles (1:3–7; 7:4, 7, 13), and in chs. 10—13 it is an experience of God's strength manifested in human weakness (12:9, 10).

Supporting themes include the blameless nature of Paul's conduct (1:12, 17, 18; 6:3–10; 7:2, 3), his frequent suffering for the sake of the church and for God's glory (1:5–11; 4:8–12; 6:4–10; 11:23—12:9), his strong love for all his churches, especially the Corinthian church (2:4; 11:2, 7–11; 12:14, 15), his apostolic authority to build them up and defeat any opposition (2:9; 10:8; 13:8–10), and the frequent emphasis that Paul judges not according to worldly standards but according to the invisible spiritual realm known to the eyes of faith (1:12). Other distinctive emphases are the glory of the ministry of the new covenant (ch. 3) and the principles of Christian stewardship (chs. 8; 9).

Interpretive Difficulties Even though the authorship of 2 Corinthians is not disputed, many question the unity of the letter, most frequently proposing that chs. 10—13 should be considered a separate letter written on a different occasion and only later appended to chs. 1—9. The basic support for this argument is that Paul's tone and attitude toward the church at Corinth seems so positive and encouraging in chs. 1—9, but so severe and threatening in chs. 10—13. Could both sections have been written on the same occasion to the same church?

Certainly there is a change of tone at 10:1. But this can be accounted for by the change of subject matter. In the first part of the letter, Paul was primarily concerned to share his joy and thanksgiving at the repentance of the Corinthians. He also wanted to give an extensive and positive description of his own ministry. Having done that, he then appealed to them to complete the collection for the Jerusalem Christians (chs. 8, 9). Finally, leaving the most distasteful task until last, he took up the problem of the false apostles and their accusations against him (chs. 10—13). In light of the circumstances, a change in tone is understandable. From the earliest times in the history of the church there has been no indication of division in this letter, either in the manuscript tradition or in the early historical writings of the church. It has always been read and understood as one letter. This still seems the best solution. □

Greeting

PAUL, [a]an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and [b]Timothy our brother,

To the church of God which is at Corinth, [c]with all the saints who are in all Achaia:

2 [d]Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Comfort in Suffering

3 [e]Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, 4 who [f]comforts us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort those who are in any [1]trouble, with the comfort with which we ourselves are comforted by God. 5 For as [g]the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our [2]consolation also abounds through Christ. 6 Now if we are afflicted, [h]it is for your consolation and salvation, which is effective for enduring the same sufferings which we also suffer. Or if we are comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation. 7 And our hope for you is steadfast, because we know that [i]as you are partakers of the sufferings, so also you will partake of the consolation.

Delivered from Suffering

8 For we do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, of [j]our [3]trouble which came to us in Asia: that we were burdened beyond measure, above strength, so that we despaired even of life. 9 Yes, we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should [k]not trust in ourselves but in God who raises the dead, 10 [l]who delivered us from so great a death, and [4]does deliver us; in whom we

■ 1:1 apostle. Paul describes himself as "apostle," but not his associate (also 1 Cor. 1:1; Col. 1:1). An apostle was an eyewitness of the Resurrection (Acts 1:22; 1 Cor. 15:8) who had been personally appointed by Christ (Matt. 10:1–7; Acts 1:24–26; Gal. 1:1) to govern the early church (1 Thess. 4:8; 2 Thess. 3:6, 14), and to teach or write with authority (1 Cor. 14:37; 1 Thess. 2:13; 4:15; 2 Pet. 3:15, 16). The term is used as a title of the twelve disciples and Paul. It is also used in a broader sense (Rom. 16:7), while in general or nontechnical use it means a "messenger" or "representative" (8:23; Phil. 2:25).

by the will of God. It is God's sovereign choice that ultimately places people in church offices and ministries. The apostolic office was extraordinary and temporary, and did not continue when there were no surviving eyewitnesses of the Resurrection, and when the canon of Scripture was complete. The ordinary offices continue to be necessary, and are filled by elders (Acts 20:28) and others whose gifts equip them for ministries (1 Cor. 12:7, 11, 28). Calls to the ordinary offices are confirmed by the people of God as the church discerns who has received the gifts and qualifications for the work (Eph. 4:11).

saints. A term commonly used by Paul to refer to all Christians (Rom. 15:25; Phil. 1:1).

in all Achaia. Though the letter was intended primarily for the church at Corinth, Paul apparently realized that it would be read by neighboring churches in the region of Achaia, the southern part of modern Greece. On Corinth, see Acts 18:1 note.

■ 1:2 Grace. Grace is God's undeserved favor—not just in initial forgiveness of sins, but in the ordinary events of everyday life as well.

peace. The outward blessing of social order and the inward blessing of a good relationship with God (Rom. 5:1; 1 Tim. 2:2).

God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. It is evidence of the deity of Christ that He with the Father should be mentioned equally as the origin of grace and peace for the Corinthian church.

■ 1:3 Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The three Persons of the Trinity are equally divine, yet they are one God, not three. As the names Father, Son, and Holy Spirit suggest, certain roles and activities correspond more closely to one Person than another. For example, the role of the Father is to initiate and direct.

Father of mercies and God of all comfort. A key theme of chs. 1—9. All consolation and encouragement in the world has its origin in God Himself.

■ 1:4 that we may be able to comfort. God has a sovereign purpose both in our troubles and in the comfort that He gives us in them. If we have experienced God's comfort in suffering, we may be able to support others whose sufferings are like ours.

■ 1:5 sufferings of Christ abound in us. Not that we can add anything to Christ's suffering for us (Is. 53:11; John 19:30; Heb. 9:26–28), but God has called us to suffer for Christ and so to follow in Christ's steps (Rom. 8:17; Col. 1:24; Heb. 12:2, 3; 1 Pet. 2:21). Because believers are united to Christ and are spiritually part of His body, both our sufferings for the gospel and the comfort God provides in Christ are a result of our participation in Him (Phil. 3:10, 11). Here Paul hints at a persistent feature of his teaching. The key experiences of Christ, especially His suffering, death, and resurrection, are the pattern by which Christians can understand their own suffering and final triumph.

■ 1:6 Paul sees God's sovereign hand and redemptive purpose in everything that happens to him, whether distress or comfort.

■ 1:7 partakers of the sufferings. Behind this verse lies Paul's teaching that all believers, as members of one body of Christ, are joined together so that every dimension of life in Christ is shared among them (1 Cor. 12:26). The more fully this reality influences the attitudes and actions of believers toward each other, the more fully they experience satisfying fellowship through Christ with one another.

■ 1:8 our. In this letter Paul normally uses the editorial plural "we" or "our" to refer to himself alone.

trouble which came to us in Asia. Apparently he refers to some hardship, persecution, illness, or injury that he suffered since he last saw his readers. These hardships would have occurred either in Ephesus or between Ephesus and Macedonia, although they are not mentioned in the summary statement of Acts 20:1.

■ 1:9 we had the sentence of death. Paul was convinced that God had decided it was time for him to die.

we should not trust in ourselves. God's purpose in our afflictions often is to drive us to this conclusion.

who raises the dead. The resurrection of the dead is a revelation of God's unsurpassable power (Eph. 1:20).

trust that He will still deliver us, [11] you also [m]helping together in prayer for us, that thanks may be given by many persons on [5]our behalf [n]for the gift granted to us through many.

Paul's Sincerity

[12] For our boasting is this: the testimony of our conscience that we conducted ourselves in the world in [6]simplicity and [o]godly sincerity, [p]not with fleshly wisdom but by the grace of God, and more abundantly toward you. [13] For we are not writing any other things to you than what you read or understand. Now I trust you will understand, even to the end [14] (as also you have understood us in part), [q]that we are your boast as [r]you also are ours, in the day of the Lord Jesus.

Sparing the Church

[15] And in this confidence [s]I intended to come to you before, that you might have [t]a second benefit— [16] to pass by way of you to Macedonia, [u]to come again from Macedonia to you, and be helped by you on my way to Judea. [17] Therefore, when I was planning this, did I do it lightly? Or the things I plan, do I plan [v]according to the flesh, that with me there should be Yes, Yes, and No, No? [18] But as God is [w]faithful, our [7]word to you was not Yes and No. [19] For [x]the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us—by me, [y]Silvanus, and [z]Timothy—was not Yes and No, [a]but in Him was Yes. [20] [b]For all the promises of God in Him are Yes, and in Him Amen, to the glory of God through us. [21] Now He who establishes us with you in Christ and [c]has anointed us is God, [22] who [d]also has sealed us and [e]given us the Spirit in our hearts as a guarantee.

[23] Moreover [f]I call God as witness against my soul, [g]that to spare you I came no more to Corinth. [24] Not [h]that we [8]have dominion over your faith, but are fellow workers for your joy; for [i]by faith you stand.

■ 1:11 helping together in prayer. Prayer has real results. God has ordained His relationship to the world in such a way that He will respond to our prayers, and even Paul needed the prayers of others.

thanks may be given. These thanks go to God because He delivered Paul from death (v. 10). One of God's purposes in answering prayer is that we will praise Him for it.

■ 1:12 boasting. Paul boasts not in his own ability, but in having a clear conscience and morally upright conduct. Paul's simplicity and godly sincerity are not the result of following the conventional wisdom of the world, but depend on "the grace of God." When Paul boasts he takes no credit for himself. It is the triumph of God's grace in him.

fleshly wisdom. In this verse Paul introduces his denial of the charge that he had worldly motives for changing his plans to visit Corinth. Distinguishing divine wisdom (expressed in the cross of Christ) from "fleshly" wisdom was a problem for some Corinthian believers. Worldly wisdom led to divisions in the church (1 Cor. 1:10—4:7), and by the standards of such wisdom Paul was not acceptable as an apostle (10:2–6).

■ 1:13 Paul reminds the Corinthians that his writings, like his ministry, are not dishonest or tricky, full of hidden meanings and concealed aims, as perhaps some of his opponents at Corinth had claimed. Paul's writings were clear enough. In the same way all Scripture is written not mainly for scholars but for all believers. It is understandable to those who will read it, seeking God's help in understanding and being willing to obey it (Deut. 6:6, 7; Ps. 19:7; 119:130; Matt. 12:3, 5; 19:14; 21:42; Col. 4:16).

■ 1:14 we are your boast. They should be proud of what God has done for them in Paul.

the day of the Lord Jesus. The day of Christ's return.

■ 1:15 a second benefit. Another translation is, "have double grace." Paul knows that his visits impart God's grace to churches.

■ 1:17 according to the flesh. Such plans would be unreliable, vacillating, and unpredictable. Opponents were discrediting the apostle by charging that his change in plans showed weakness of character and lack of integrity. They did not have all the facts, however, and were using these circumstances to attack someone they had already condemned.

■ 1:18 as God is faithful. Paul calls on God's faithfulness as the pattern and guarantee for his own faithfulness.

word. See text note. Paul reminds them that his gospel message was absolutely reliable and led to their salvation.

■ 1:19 The absolute truthfulness and reliability of God's words in Christ are the standard that Paul follows in his own speech. This is consistent with Paul's general pattern of deriving moral absolutes from the moral character of God.

■ 1:20 in Him are Yes. Christ fulfills all the promises of God to us, and all our confidence in God's promises must come from our trust in Jesus Christ as a person whom we know and can rely on.

■ 1:21, 22 Christ . . . God . . . Spirit. This Trinitarian passage points to the roles of all three divine Persons in salvation.

■ 1:21 He . . . establishes us. The ability to persevere, that is, to continue in the Christian life, is not from ourselves; it is a gift from God. God continues to give this ability to all who are born again (Phil. 1:6; 1 Pet. 1:5). Those who are guarded by God in this way continue to trust in Christ throughout their lives (13:5; Col. 1:23; Heb. 3:14), because God protects them through the faith He gives them (v. 24).

anointed. To "anoint" literally is to pour oil on the head, often as a sign of divine calling and empowerment (1 Sam. 2:10; 16:13 and notes). Paul reminds us that just as God anointed Jesus for a particular service and ministry, so He has anointed us for our ministries, not with oil, but with the power of the Holy Spirit (1 John 2:20, 27).

■ 1:22 sealed us. An official seal indicated authority or ownership and guaranteed protection (Esth. 8:8; Dan. 6:17; Matt. 27:66; Rev. 7:3). God has sealed us, not with a physical seal of wax, but with the Holy Spirit in our hearts (Eph. 1:13; 4:30). This inward work takes place in a person once, at the time of first becoming a Christian.

guarantee. The Greek word means a deposit or down payment that is part of the total and that guarantees the whole payment will be made. The Holy Spirit is the guarantee of the complete salvation yet to be realized (5:5; Rom. 8:23; Eph. 1:14). We already have heavenly life within us, before we reach heaven (1 Cor. 3:16; Col. 1:27).

■ 1:23 God as witness against my soul. Paul uses a solemn oath to persuade the Corinthians of his truthfulness. He says in effect, "If I am not telling the truth, I ask God to take my life."

16 [p]Luke 2:34

2 But I determined this within myself, [a]that I would not come again to you in sorrow. 2 For if I make you [b]sorrowful, then who is he who makes me glad but the one who is made sorrowful by me?

Forgive the Offender

3 And I wrote this very thing to you, lest, when I came, [c]I should have sorrow over those from whom I ought to have joy, [d]having confidence in you all that my joy is the joy of you all. 4 For out of much [f]affliction and anguish of heart I wrote to you, with many tears, [e]not that you should be grieved, but that you might know the love which I have so abundantly for you.

5 But [f]if anyone has caused grief, he has not [g]grieved me, but all of you to some extent—not to be too severe. 6 This punishment which was inflicted [h]by the majority is sufficient for such a man, 7 [i]so that, on the contrary, you ought rather to forgive and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one be swallowed up with too much sorrow. 8 Therefore I urge you to reaffirm your love to him. 9 For to this end I also wrote, that I might put you to the test, whether you are [j]obedient in all things. 10 Now whom you forgive anything, I also forgive. For [2]if indeed I have forgiven anything, I have forgiven that one for your sakes in the presence of Christ, 11 lest Satan should take advantage of us; for we are not ignorant of his devices.

Triumph in Christ

12 Furthermore, [k]when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and [l]a [3]door was opened to me by the Lord, 13 [m]I had no rest in my spirit, because I did not find Titus my brother; but taking my leave of them, I departed for Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be to God who always leads us in triumph in Christ, and through us [4]diffuses the fragrance of His knowledge in every place. 15 For we are to God the fragrance of Christ [n]among those who are being saved and [o]among those who are perishing. 16 [p]To the one we are to spare you. Paul would come with the Lord's authority and power on his next visit (10:3, 4; 13:2–4, 10), and he wanted to give them a chance to repent. This was the reason he changed his plans and did not come back to Corinth before going to Macedonia. It was not worldly vacillation or cowardice, as some were saying.

■ 2:1 in sorrow. See Introduction: Date and Occasion.

■ 2:3 I wrote this very thing. After the sorrowful visit (v. 1), Paul wrote a letter of rebuke to the Corinthian church, sending it by the hand of Titus (2:13; 7:6, 7, 13, 14).

■ 2:4 not . . . be grieved. Paul's purpose in writing the unpleasant letter was not simply to make the Corinthians sorrowful. He was seeking their best interests, even when that meant bringing pain both to them and to him.

■ 2:5 if anyone has caused grief. This could be a reference to the man living with his father's wife (1 Cor. 5:1–8), but that is doubtful because the offense seems to be something directed against Paul himself (vv. 5, 10).

■ 2:6 punishment . . . inflicted by the majority. Apparently after Paul had left Corinth, or at least after Titus had come with the unpleasant letter, the Corinthians had exercised church discipline against the offender (cf. Matt. 18:15–20).

■ 2:7 The purpose of church discipline is to restore, not to destroy or take revenge (10:8).

■ 2:10 Paul will accept the judgment of the Corinthian congregation on this matter.

in the presence of Christ. A common theme in this epistle. All our actions are carried out not in secrecy but in the presence of Christ, the Lord of the church. If both Paul and Christ have forgiven the offender, the Corinthians should as well (cf. Matt. 16:19; John 20:23).

■ 2:11 lest Satan should take advantage. Satan will win a victory if we either neglect church discipline entirely, or if we attend to it but remain harsh and unforgiving when there has been a change of heart.

■ 2:12 Troas. A city in far northwest Asia Minor (now Turkey), across the Aegean Sea from Greece. Paul sailed from here to Philippi. It was in Troas that Paul had seen a vision of a man from Macedonia imploring him to come and help (Acts 16:8).

a door was opened to me. God provided opportunities for preaching the gospel.

■ 2:13 I had no rest in my spirit. Paul had hoped that Titus would meet him at Troas and report that the letter of rebuke had been well received. When Titus failed to appear, Paul was deeply troubled.

taking my leave of them. A great opportunity for effective ministry did not make Paul turn aside from his prior commitment to care for the Corinthian church and straighten out its problems. Paul continued to feel a deep concern for all his churches (11:28, 29).

for Macedonia. Paul went first to Philippi, then perhaps to Thessalonica or Berea before Titus came. Acts 16:8—18:1 describes the previous journey of Paul along this route. At this point the narrative of his relationship with the Corinthian church is interrupted until 7:5, and Paul inserts an extensive digression on the nature of the new covenant ministry in which he is engaged.

■ 2:14 who always leads us in triumph. Paul's narrative suddenly shifts from the visible reality of his anxiety for the Corinthians and his disappointment at not finding Titus in Troas, to the spiritual realm. Paul sees himself as part of God's triumphal procession into the heavenly city, much like a victory parade that an ancient general would lead upon returning to his own city with vanquished captives following behind the chariots. But here Paul—God's former enemy—is a joyful captive and one who participates in the blessings of the King's victory. We too have such a participation in the spiritual realm, marching in the victory procession of our great King, as the forces of the enemy crumble before His advance. Despite setbacks like Paul's at Troas, the eyes of faith can see the unrelenting progress of the kingdom of God.

■ 2:15 we are to God the fragrance of Christ. That we are a sweet aroma to God means that He delights in us and in our lives. This is the more real and final fulfillment of the Old Testament sacrifices that were a sweet aroma to God (Lev. 1:17).

■ 2:16 Figuratively speaking there is a pleasant fragrance, spiritually perceived, about true Christians. On the other hand, this fragrance is an "aroma of death" to unbelievers, for it warns them that they are unprepared for the day of judgment (Phil. 1:28).

sufficient for these things. Carrying a message of eternal life or death is a sobering responsibility. No one is worthy of this solemn task, but God qualifies us for it nonetheless (3:6).

the aroma of death leading to death, and to the other the aroma of life leading to life. And [q]who is sufficient for these things? 17 For we are not, as [s]so many, [r]peddling[6] the word of God; but as [s]of sincerity, but as from God, we speak in the sight of God in Christ.

Christ's Epistle

3 Do [a]we begin again to commend ourselves? Or do we need, as some others, [b]epistles of commendation to you or letters of commendation from you? 2 [c]You are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read by all men; 3 clearly you are an epistle of Christ, [d]ministered by us, written not with ink but by the Spirit of the living God, not [e]on tablets of stone but [f]on tablets of flesh, that is, of the heart.

The Spirit, Not the Letter

4 And we have such trust through Christ toward God. 5 [g]Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think of anything as being from ourselves, but [h]our sufficiency is from God, 6 who also made us sufficient as [i]ministers of [j]the new covenant, not [k]of the letter but of the [l]Spirit; for [i]the letter kills, [m]but the Spirit gives life.

Glory of the New Covenant

7 But if [n]the ministry of death, [o]written and engraved on stones, was glorious, [p]so that the children of Israel could not look steadily at the face of Moses because of the glory of his countenance, which glory was passing away, 8 how will [q]the ministry of the Spirit not be more glorious? 9 For if the ministry of condemnation had glory, the ministry [r]of righteousness exceeds much more in glory. 10 For even what was made glorious had no glory in this respect, because of the glory that excels. 11 For if what is passing away was glorious, what remains is much more glorious.

■ 2:17 not, as so many. It is tragic that then and now many preach the gospel or teach Christianity as no more than a means of earning a living. Paul's goal was not personal benefit or financial reward, but the glory of God.

in the sight of God. All Paul's ministry was carried out in the sight of God, providing him a strong motive for keeping his conscience clear (1:12; Acts 23:1; 1 Tim. 1:5; 2 Tim. 1:3).

■ 3:1 Both questions in this verse expect the answer "no." Paul does not reject letters of commendation generally (Acts 15:25, 26; 18:27; 1 Cor. 16:10, 11), but apparently Paul's opponents had brought some misleading letters of commendation to the church at Corinth, letters that the bearers were not worthy of. Paul shows that his letter is far better, because it consists of the lives of the Corinthian believers (v. 2).

■ 3:2 written in our hearts. The Corinthians have a fixed place in his affections. Some manuscripts read "in your hearts." On this reading, Paul is telling the Corinthians that as a church they are an effective letter of recommendation for him (2:17; 1 Cor. 9:2).

■ 3:3 epistle of Christ, ministered by us. The Corinthian church was a work of God's grace, but in this work Paul and his co-workers had been God's instruments.

tablets of stone. The Ten Commandments.

tablets of flesh . . . of the heart. Paul's point is twofold. First, the "letter," which the Corinthians are, is superior to the pen-and-ink letters of his opponents as well as the stone tablets of the law. Second, Paul presents the fruits of his apostleship as the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. As predicted in Jer. 31:33 and Ezek. 11:19; 36:26, in the new covenant God writes His laws on the hearts of His people, giving them a new desire and ability to obey Him. The law that is written in the heart is the unchanging and pure law of God, that is, His absolute moral standard.

■ 3:4—6:13 After explaining his change of plans about visiting the Corinthians, Paul describes what true ministry is. It means being ministers of a glorious new covenant (3:4—4:6), trusting God in the midst of troubles (4:7—5:10), and speaking the message of reconciliation (5:11—6:13). Paul insists throughout the rest of the letter that faithfulness to these tasks—not eloquence, deep philosophical thought, or worldly standards of personal excellence—is the basis of a valid ministry.

■ 3:4 such trust. Paul is confident before God that his ministry is authentic and that the Corinthians are "letters of commendation" testifying to it. Paul's confidence is not in himself, but "through Christ."

■ 3:5 sufficient. Paul answers the question of 2:16 ("who is sufficient for these things?"). Earlier he had disavowed any dependence on merely human ability (1 Cor. 2:1–5). Unfortunately, Paul's opponents valued worldly ability more than the sufficiency that comes from God alone.

our sufficiency is from God. A major theme of 2 Corinthians. All ability and power in ministry comes from God, not from ourselves.

■ 3:6 new covenant. The new legal relationship that God established with His people through Jesus Christ, His life, death, resurrection, and ascension.

the letter. The written law by itself, which demands perfect obedience but gives no power to obey.

the Spirit gives life. This is new life in Christ. In it the Holy Spirit writes God's law on our hearts (Jer. 31:31–34; Heb. 8:8–12; 9:13, 14), giving love for God's moral standards and power to obey them (Rom. 8:4; 1 Cor. 7:19). Saying that life is "not of the letter," Paul does not imply that there was no spiritual life whatever under the old covenant. He means that the written law, which was characteristic of the old covenant, did not by itself produce life in the believing community. The Holy Spirit, whose powerful, life-giving ministry is characteristic of the new covenant, does bring new life in much greater measure than under the old covenant.

■ 3:7 the ministry of death. The written words of the Old Testament law by themselves condemned people who did not obey, without giving them life.

could not look steadily at the face of Moses. The old covenant was not without glory, even though it was written on stone (Ex. 34:29–35).

■ 3:8 more glorious. The new covenant is more powerful, beautiful, and inward.

■ 3:9 ministry of righteousness. Righteousness is given in justification, the gracious legal declaration that begins the Christian life. It continues in sanctification, the progressive growth of a believer in righteous thoughts, words, and deeds. Sanctification takes place by grace through faith, but it also requires study, prayer, and conscious effort.

■ 3:11 what is passing away. The old covenant (Heb. 8:13).

12 Therefore, since we have such hope, [s]we use great boldness of speech— 13 unlike Moses, [t]who put a veil over his face so that the children of Israel could not look steadily at [u]the end of what was passing away. 14 But [v]their minds were blinded. For until this day the same veil remains unlifted in the reading of the Old Testament, because the veil is taken away in Christ. 15 But even to this day, when Moses is read, a veil lies on their heart. 16 Nevertheless [w]when one turns to the Lord, [x]the veil is taken away. 17 Now [y]the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is [z]liberty. 18 But we all, with unveiled face, beholding [a]as in a mirror [b]the glory of the Lord, [c]are being transformed into the same image from glory to glory, just as [2]by the Spirit of the Lord.

The Light of Christ's Gospel

4 Therefore, since we have this ministry, [a]as we have received mercy, we [b]do not lose heart. 2 But we have renounced the hidden things of shame, not walking in craftiness nor [1]handling the word of God deceitfully, but by manifestation of the truth [c]commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God. 3 But even if our gospel is veiled, [d]it is veiled to those who are perishing, 4 whose minds [e]the god of this age [f]has blinded, who do not believe, lest [g]the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, [h]who is the image of God, should shine on them. 5 [i]For we do not preach ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and [j]ourselves your bondservants for Jesus' sake. 6 For it is the God [k]who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who boldness of speech. Paul is not at all ashamed to stand before the world and proclaim the excellent gospel. The reference to "boldness" links the discussion of vv. 7–11 with Paul's defense of his apostleship (10:1, 2). He is bold, not vacillating as his opponents accused him (1:17—2:4); and his boldness, taking the form of the fearless speech so evident in this epistle, is a great contrast to the deceitful selfishness of his opponents (2:17).

■ 3:12 such hope. The splendor of the new covenant, which will not fade or pass away, provides the apostle's hope and fuels his boldness.

■ 3:13 Some think that Moses' veil was to protect the Israelites from being harmed or frightened by the brightness. More likely, the veil was to keep them from seeing that the glory was fading away because of the temporary and inadequate character of the old covenant (Ex. 34:29–35). By contrast, Paul needs no veil, for the glory of the new covenant ministry does not fade away.

■ 3:14 the same veil remains. Even today, Paul says, many Jewish people cannot see that the Mosaic covenant is temporary, and that its glory fades.

■ 3:15 a veil lies on their heart. The metaphor shifts somewhat, as it often does in Paul's writings. The veil is now not on Moses' face but on their hearts. The effect is the same—they cannot see that the old covenant fades.

■ 3:16 the veil is taken away. See "Understanding the Word of God" at Ps. 119:34.

■ 3:17 the Lord is the Spirit. Here Paul stresses the close relationship between Christ and the Holy Spirit. By virtue of His resurrection and ascension, Christ and the life-giving Spirit are closely identified in function (1 Cor. 15:45). It is also possible to translate this phrase, "Now the Spirit is the Lord." The Holy Spirit is truly God; like the Father and the Son, He is the One who is known simply as "the Lord" in the Old Testament. Such a translation gives a natural sense to the word "is."

there is liberty. The bondage was to death, sin, and hopeless effort to obey the law by our own power.

■ 3:18 we all. All Christians. A characteristic experience of new covenant believers is described here.

beholding as in a mirror. Unlike Moses (v. 13), who went before the people with a veil to hide the fading glory on his face, Paul stands before people "with unveiled face," knowing that the new covenant glory will never diminish. Likewise "we all" stand unashamedly before the world, reflecting in our own lives the glory of Christ. And far from a fading glory, our glory is ever-increasing, as we are changed more and more into the likeness of Christ. See "The Transfiguration of Jesus" at Mark 9:2.

into the same image. A reference to continual growth throughout life into increasing Christlikeness. This growth is moral and spiritual transformation "from glory to glory." We are being progressively restored to greater and greater possession of the image of God which was corrupted at the fall of Adam.

■ 4:1 Paul does not give up hope because the new covenant ministry in the power of the Holy Spirit is so excellent and powerful.

■ 4:2 handling . . . deceitfully. This means "adulterate, falsify." Paul says he will never water down the Word of God or distort it to please the hearers. He implies that his opponents did practice such deception and distortion.

■ 4:3 The veil imagery continues from 3:14–16. Those who are presently perishing (not believing in Christ) are blinded to the truth.

■ 4:4 the god of this age. Satan (cf. 1 John 5:19) strongly influences this fallen, evil world that continues until the time Christ returns and brings in fully the age to come (cf. Gal. 1:4).

has blinded. The result is that unbelievers cannot appreciate or fully understand the claims of the gospel, unless God through the gospel enlightens them (4:6; John 3:3).

■ 4:5 we do not preach ourselves. The crucial issue is not whether people accept or reject Paul, but how they respond to Christ. Paul's opponents apparently focused on themselves, and veiled Christ's glory with their own pride.

■ 4:6 For. One reason for not preaching ourselves is that only God gives new spiritual life.

commanded light. God's sovereign initiative is necessary to enable us to embrace the gospel message. Just as God's original creative word made light where there was no light, so now God's creative word gives spiritual life and understanding of the gospel where previously there was none. See theological note "The Authentication of Scripture."

glory of God. In the Old Testament the glory of God was the bright light that surrounded the presence of God. It had led the people of Egypt as a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night (Ex. 13:21–22). Later, it had filled the tabernacle under Moses (Ex. 33:8–13; 40:34–38), and had then filled Solomon's temple (1 Kin. 8:10, 11). But it departed from the temple in the time of Ezekiel because of the sins of the people (Ezek. 10:4, 18, 19; 11:23). It returned only in Jesus, who became flesh and dwelt among us. John says, "We beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (John 1:14). In contrast to the face of Moses, from which God's glory faded (3:13), God's glory forever shines brightly "in the face of Jesus Christ."

The Authentication of Scripture

Why do Christians believe that the Bible is the Word of God, sixty-six books that together reveal God's redemption through Jesus Christ the Savior? The answer is that God Himself has confirmed this through what is called the "inward witness of the Holy Spirit." In the words of the Westminster Confession (1647):

> We may be moved and induced by the testimony of the Church to an high and reverent esteem of the holy Scripture; and the heavenliness of the matter, the efficacy of the doctrine, the majesty of the style, the consent of all the parts, the scope of the whole (which is to give all glory to God), the full discovery it makes of the only way of man's salvation, the many other incomparable excellencies, and the entire perfection thereof, are arguments whereby it doth abundantly evidence itself to be the Word of God; yet, notwithstanding, our full persuasion and assurance of the infallible truth, and divine authority thereof, is from the inward work of the Holy Spirit, bearing witness by and with the Word in our hearts (Westminster Confession 1.5).

The Spirit's witness to Scripture is like His witness to Jesus, which we find spoken of in John 15:26 and 1 John 5:7 (cf. 1 John 2:20, 27). It is not a matter of imparting new information, but of enlightening otherwise darkened minds to discern divinity through sensing its unique impact—the impact in the one case of the Jesus of the gospel, and in the other case of the words of Holy Scripture. The Spirit shines in our hearts to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 4:6), but also the light of His glory in the teaching of Holy Scripture. The result of this witness is a state of mind in which both the Savior and the Scriptures have evidenced themselves to us as divine—Jesus, a divine person; Scripture, a divine word—in a way as direct and immediate as the way tastes and colors impress themselves on our senses. As a result, we no longer find it possible to doubt the divinity of Christ or the divine origin of the Bible.

God Himself authenticates Holy Scripture to us as His Word, going beyond human argument (strong as this may be), and the church's testimony (impressive as this is). God does it, rather, by opening our hearts and enlightening our minds to perceive the searching light and transforming power whereby Scripture evidences itself to be divine. This impact is itself the Spirit's witness "by and with the Word in our hearts." Argument, testimony from others, and our own particular experiences may support and clarify this witness, but the imparting of it, like the imparting of faith in Christ's divine Saviorhood, is the prerogative of the sovereign Holy Spirit alone. □ earthen vessels. Our weak human natures, including but not limited to our physical bodies. They are a great contrast to the glory of the gospel, and Paul reminds us that God's way is to work through those who are weak or unimpressive in the world's eyes.

of God. A characteristic theme in the epistle. Paul's concern is always to give glory to God, not himself.

■ 4:8 The great evangelist and theologian also faced great discouragements.

■ 4:10 Paul's suffering and apparent defeats are evidence to all that he has no effective strength in himself and that, as Christ died, so also Paul knows he is "dead" in terms of his own ability to accomplish anything of eternal significance. Paul uses the key experiences of Christ (death and resurrection) as a pattern for understanding his own experiences as an apostle. Thus, Paul sees his own sufferings as an imitation of Christ's (1:5 and note).

of Jesus also may be manifested in our mortal flesh. 12 So then death is working in us, but life in you.

13 And since we have [t]the same spirit of faith, according to what is written, [u]"I believed and therefore I spoke," we also believe and therefore speak, 14 knowing that [v]He who raised up the Lord Jesus will also raise us up with Jesus, and will present us with you. 15 For [w]all things are for your sakes, that [x]grace, having spread through the many, may cause thanksgiving to abound to the glory of God.

Seeing the Invisible

16 Therefore we [y]do not lose heart. Even though our outward man is perishing, yet the inward man is [z]being renewed day by day. 17 For [a]our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, 18 [b]while we do not look at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen are temporary, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

Assurance of the Resurrection

5 For we know that if [a]our earthly [1]house, this tent, is destroyed, we have a building from God, a house [b]not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. 2 For in this [c]we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed with our [2]habitation which is from heaven, 3 if indeed, [d]having been clothed, we shall not be found naked. 4 For we who are in this tent groan, being burdened, not because we want to be unclothed, [e]but further clothed, that mortality may be swallowed up by life. 5 Now He who has prepared us for this very thing is God, who also [f]has given us the Spirit as [3]a guarantee.

6 So we are always confident, knowing that while we are at home in the body we are absent from the Lord. 7 For [g]we walk by faith, not by sight. 8 We are confident, yes, [h]well pleased rather to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord.

The Judgment Seat of Christ

9 Therefore we make it our aim, whether present or absent, to be well pleasing to Him. 10 [i]For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, [j]that each one may receive the things

■ 4:12 Though Paul suffers much hardship (as Jesus did), the result of his ministry is spiritual life and resurrection power in others. This is a paradox that the world will not understand. The recipients of a ministry may seem to fare much better in this world than the person who brings them the ministry, because the one who brings it may be suffering for the sake of the gospel (8:9).

■ 4:13 Faith expresses itself in words that affirm confidence in what God has promised. Here Paul quotes the Septuagint (the Greek Old Testament translation) of Ps. 116:10.

■ 4:15 to the glory of God. God's ultimate goal in answering prayer and bringing us the blessings of salvation is for thanksgiving and glory to be offered to Him (Is. 43:7; Eph. 1:12; Rev. 4:11).

■ 4:16 we do not lose heart. This phrase repeats v. 1. God brings glory to Himself even through the weaknesses and discouragements of Paul's ministry.

our outward man is perishing. The contrast between outward and inward is not simply between the body and the soul, but between the old fallen nature and the renewed humanity.

■ 4:17 our light affliction . . . for a moment. An understatement. See the descriptions of these troubles in 4:8–12; 6:4–10; 11:23–33. These troubles are preparing a great reward for believers. Our faith and obedience in suffering pleases God, and He will not forget (Rom. 8:17, 18; 1 Pet. 1:6, 7).

eternal weight of glory. Troubles in this life are light and insignificant compared to the important and significant glory that we will enjoy for eternity.

■ 4:18 things . . . not seen are eternal. A frequent theme in this book. The unseen world is what is most real and most important; the visible world is passing away.

■ 5:1 tent. Our physical bodies. If Paul's sufferings must lead even to physical death, something far greater awaits him.

a house . . . in the heavens. This probably refers to our resurrection bodies, though some have argued that it signifies the heavenly place that God has prepared for us.

■ 5:2 we groan. Sighing with frustration at the limitations of this present life, with its sin, weakness, and corruption (Rom. 8:22, 23).

■ 5:3 naked. Without a body.

■ 5:4 Paul longs for the resurrection body, free of the weaknesses and imperfections of this life.

mortality. Our present physical bodies.

swallowed up by life. The new, heavenly life to come will overtake our present existence. See "Resurrection and Glorification" at 1 Cor. 15:21.

■ 5:5 guarantee. See note on 1:22. The Holy Spirit's work in us now in daily renewal and spiritual strengthening (3:18; 4:16) is a foretaste and guarantee of future completion of that work in resurrection bodies and complete sanctification.

■ 5:7 Again Paul specifies a contrast between the unseen spiritual realm of God's presence and activity and the present visible world.

■ 5:8 The doctrine of the intermediate state between our death and Christ's return teaches that when Christians die they, that is, their spirits, go immediately into Christ's presence and are "present with the Lord," while their bodies remain here and are buried in the grave (Luke 23:43; Phil. 1:23). When Christ returns, the bodies of believers will be raised from the dead and reunited with their spirits (1 Cor. 15:22, 23; 1 Thess. 4:14, 16). See "Death and the Intermediate State" at Phil. 1:23.

■ 5:9 well pleasing to Him. See "Pleasing God" at 1 Thess. 2:4.

■ 5:10 Degrees of reward in heaven are taught in this verse. Though Christians have their sins forgiven and will never suffer the punishments of hell (Rom. 6:23; 8:1), they will all nonetheless stand before Christ at the Day of Judgment, to receive various degrees of reward for what they have done in this life (Matt. 6:20; Luke 19:11–27; 1 Cor. 3:12–15). This judgment will include a disclosure and evaluation of the motives of our hearts (1 Cor. 4:5).

done in the body, according to what he has done, whether good or bad. 11 Knowing, therefore, [k]the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but we are well known to God, and I also trust are well known in your consciences.

Be Reconciled to God

12 For [l]we do not commend ourselves again to you, but give you opportunity [m]to boast on our behalf, that you may have an answer for those who boast in appearance and not in heart. 13 For [n]if we are beside ourselves, it is for God; or if we are of sound mind, it is for you. 14 For the love of Christ compels us, because we judge thus: that [o]if One died for all, then all died; 15 and He died for all, [p]that those who live should live no longer for themselves, but for Him who died for them and rose again.

16 [q]Therefore, from now on, we regard no one according to the flesh. Even though we have known Christ according to the flesh, [r]yet now we know Him thus no longer. 17 Therefore, if anyone [s]is in Christ, he is [t]a new creation; [u]old things have passed away; behold, all things have become [v]new. 18 Now all things are of God, [w]who has reconciled us to Himself through Jesus Christ, and has given us the ministry of reconciliation, 19 that is, that [x]God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not [4]imputing their trespasses to them, and has committed to us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then, we are [y]ambassadors for Christ, as though God were pleading through us: we implore you on Christ's behalf, be reconciled to God. 21 For [z]He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become [a]the righteousness of God in Him.

Marks of the Ministry

6 We then, as [a]workers together with Him also [b]plead with you not to receive the grace of God in vain. 2 For He says:

CHAPTER 6

1 [a]1 Cor. 3:9 [b]2 Cor. 5:20

■ 5:11 the terror of the Lord. Not a terror of eternal condemnation, but a healthy, reverent fear of Christ's displeasure at the choices we have made, the "things done in the body" (v. 10). Such a fear would have been a healthy corrective for those Corinthians who were making trouble for Paul, and it could also have corrected the lives of many careless Christians throughout history.

well known. Again, a spiritual viewpoint, not always evident to those in this world.

■ 5:12 who boast in appearance. This is the world's method of evaluation, contrary to that of a true apostle, who endures troubles by focusing on the unseen and eternal (4:18). The false apostles at Corinth (11:13) were also typical representatives of the world, taking pride in their outward appearance, relying on the self, and loving money, power, and prestige. If the Corinthians understood Paul's self-defense in a spiritual way, they would have an answer for the false apostles and their superficial standards of judgment (1 Sam. 16:7).

■ 5:13 beside ourselves. This probably refers to times of worship and prayer when Paul was caught up in intense awareness of the presence of God. Paul's language does not imply complete loss of awareness of one's surroundings, for the same Greek word is used of people who were "amazed" at Christ's miracles (Mark 5:42; 6:51). The apostle's point is that whether engaged in private worship or in public ministry, he lives for God and for others, not for himself (v. 15). His opponents cannot make this claim.

■ 5:14 the love of Christ. Grammatically this could be the love we have for Christ or the love Christ has for us. Since Paul is speaking of what Christ has done for him, he probably means the love that comes from Christ.

One died for all. The ones He died for are the same as the "all" who "died" with Him as a result of His death, who are mentioned at the end of the verse.

■ 5:16 Paul emphasizes spiritual judgment and spiritual insight into people's lives and situations. Our experience of Christ's love moves us to stop viewing others according to worldly standards and to learn how to view them from the standpoint of God's great act of salvation in Jesus Christ.

according to the flesh. When Christ was regarded from a worldly point of view, men rejected and crucified Him as a blasphemer and troublemaker. But from the divine viewpoint, Christ is the Messiah and Son of God, in whom the new creation and reconciliation with God is given.

■ 5:17 in Christ. Union with Christ summarizes our experience of redemption. Believers are elected (Eph. 1:4, 11), justified (Rom. 8:1), sanctified (1 Cor. 1:2), and glorified (3:18) "in Christ." Here Paul focuses on the momentous significance of the believer's union with the Savior. Because Christ is the "last Adam," the One in whom humanity is recreated (1 Cor. 15:45; Gal. 6:16; Eph. 2:10) and who inaugurates the new age of messianic blessing (Gal. 1:4; cf. Matt. 11:2–6), the believer's spiritual union with Christ is nothing less than participation in the "new creation." Translating "there is a new creation" instead of "he is a new creation" draws this conclusion more clearly, but the thought is there either way.

■ 5:18 all things are of God. The whole plan of salvation and history of redemption is God-centered. Paul realizes that it is from Him, through Him, and for His glory (Rom. 11:36).

■ 5:20 Paul may be appealing directly to the Corinthians to "be reconciled to God." But he is also summing up the appeal he gives to all the world. Reconciliation is the establishment or restoration of loving fellowship after estrangement. For Christians, reconciliation to God is renewed each day, in one sense (Matt. 6:12; 1 John 1:9).

■ 5:21 An important summary of the gospel message. The verse explains how God imputed our sin to Christ. God as judge assigned the responsibility of our sin to Christ, making it possible for Him to be punished justly for that sin (Is. 53:6; 1 Pet. 2:24). The verse shows that Christ was our substitute, accepting the penalty of sin in our place. See "The Sinlessness of Jesus" at Heb. 4:15.

we might become the righteousness of God. Not only did God impute our sin to Christ, He also imputed Christ's perfect righteousness to us (that is, He counted it as belonging to us). This imputation is the basis for the progressive realization of God's righteousness in our moral character. Our thoughts and deeds are sanctified in increasing measure until we receive perfect righteousness in heaven.

■ 6:1 in vain. If the Corinthians allow their church to be swept away by the "false apostles" (11:13), or if they refuse to purify themselves from "all filthiness of the flesh and spirit" (7:1), their lives will glorify God less and less, and the gospel they heard will bear little lasting fruit.

■ 6:2 now is the day of salvation. When God offers deliverance, it is wise to respond immediately, before the offer is withdrawn. "Now" in a broad sense refers to the gospel age, while in a specific sense it refers to the time when an individual hears God's offer of salvation.

[c] "In an acceptable time I have heard you,
And in the day of salvation I have helped you."

Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.

3 [d]We give no offense in anything, that our ministry may not be blamed. 4 But in all things we commend ourselves [e]as ministers of God: in much [f]patience, in tribulations, in needs, in distresses, 5 [g]in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in sleeplessness, in fastings; 6 by purity, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Spirit, by [g]sincere love, 7 [h]by the word of truth, by [h]the power of God, by [i]the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, 8 by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report; as deceivers, and yet true; 9 as unknown, and [j]yet well known; [k]as dying, and behold we live; [l]as chastened, and yet not killed; 10 as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many [m]rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

Be Holy

11 O Corinthians! [o]We have spoken openly to you, [n]our heart is wide open. 12 You are not restricted by us, but [o]you are restricted by your own affections. 13 Now in return for the same [p](I speak as to children), you also be open.

14 [q]Do not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. For [r]what [s]fellowship has righteousness with lawlessness? And what [s]communion has light with darkness? 15 And what accord has Christ with Belial? Or what part has a believer with an unbeliever? 16 And what agreement has the temple of God with idols? For [t]you[s] are the temple of the living God. As God has said:

[t] "I will dwell in them
And walk among them.
I will be their God,
And they shall be My people."

17 Therefore

[u] "Come out from among them
And be separate, says the Lord.
Do not touch what is unclean,
And I will receive you."

18 "I [v]will be a Father to you,

■ 6:6 A true minister of the gospel is known by pure speech, pure conduct, pure motives, and deep love for people.

by the Holy Spirit. The power of the Holy Spirit was evident in Paul's ministry, whether bringing power to his preaching, convicting unbelievers of sin (cf. John 16:8–11), or giving spiritual gifts (1 Cor. 12:7–11). This work of the Holy Spirit was another way by which Paul's ministry was commended.

■ 6:7 by the word of truth. Paul will not compromise the sanctity of truth or tell a lie to accomplish some desirable goal.

the power of God. Often to work miracles, bring healing, or silence enemies (cf. Acts 14:3, 9, 10; 19:11, 12; 20:10; 28:8, 9; Rom. 15:19).

by the armor of righteousness. That is, all the weaponry to be used against human or demonic opposition (10:5, 6; Acts 13:11; 16:18; Eph. 6:10–18).

■ 6:8–10 A series of paradoxes again highlighting the contrast between the viewpoint of this world and the standpoint of the age to come, the standpoint invisible to the natural eye but seen by the eye of faith.

■ 6:11 our heart is wide open. Paul reveals his inner feelings in this letter more than in any other. His "open heart" reveals his love for them.

■ 6:14 yoked together. Paul sees a deeper spiritual reality in the prohibition against unequal yoking found in Deut. 22:10.

with unbelievers. Note that the false apostles in Corinth claimed to be Christians but were in reality servants of Satan (11:14, 15). To join with them would distort all life and ministry in the church. The prohibition against being yoked together with unbelievers must be considered in situations where significant control over one's actions would be willingly yielded to an unbeliever through a voluntary partnership or association. Neither Paul nor the rest of the New Testament tells us to have no association at all with unbelievers (Mark 2:15–17; 1 Cor. 5:9, 10). But we are told not to be "yoked together" with them in such a way that they significantly influence the direction and outcome of our moral decisions and spiritual activities.

■ 6:15 Belial. A name for Satan.

■ 6:16 you are the temple of the living God. In the Old Testament God's dwelling place with His people was the tabernacle and later the temple built by Solomon. When Christ came, He was Himself the true temple or dwelling place of God (Matt. 1:23; John 2:21; Col. 2:9). Now God the Holy Spirit lives in us, and for this reason we are the new temple of God (1 Cor. 6:19; 1 Pet. 2:5).

As God has said. The Old Testament promise that God would dwell among His people (Paul's quotation is from Lev. 26:11, 12) has become the new covenant promise that God would live in those who trust in Christ.

■ 6:17 The quotation is mostly from Is. 52:11 and Ezek. 20:34, though the word order is changed. These commands to be separate all have to do with unbelievers (cf. v. 14; note that Is. 52:11 commands Israel to go out of unbelieving Babylon). The verses do not encourage separation from believers who hold different views on certain matters.

■ 6:18 See 2 Sam. 7:14, 27. Paul has combined several Old Testament promises of God's presence and favor, but he makes their fulfillment depend clearly on Christians separating themselves from moral impurity. To give up moral defilement and gain the presence of the living God in return is a wise and desirable choice.

And you shall be My [w]sons and daughters,
Says the LORD Almighty."

7 Therefore,[a] having these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

The Corinthians' Repentance

[2] Open your hearts to us. We have wronged no one, we have corrupted no one, [b]we have cheated no one. [3] I do not say this to condemn; for [c]I have said before that you are in our hearts, to die together and to live together. [4] [d]Great is my boldness of speech toward you, [e]great is my boasting on your behalf. [f]I am filled with comfort. I am exceedingly joyful in all our tribulation.

[5] For indeed, [g]when we came to Macedonia, our bodies had no rest, but [h]we were troubled on every side. [i]Outside were conflicts, inside were fears. [6] Nevertheless [j]God, who comforts the downcast, comforted us by [k]the coming of Titus, [7] and not only by his coming, but also by the [l]consolation with which he was comforted in you, when he told us of your earnest desire, your mourning, your zeal for me, so that I rejoiced even more.

[8] For even if I made you [l]sorry with my letter, I do not regret it; [m]though I did regret it. For I perceive that the same epistle made you sorry, though only for a while. [9] Now I rejoice, not that you were made sorry, but that your sorrow led to repentance. For you were made sorry in a godly manner, that you might suffer loss from us in nothing. [10] For [n]godly sorrow produces repentance leading to salvation, not to be regretted; [o]but the sorrow of the world produces death. [11] For observe this very thing, that you sorrowed in a godly manner: What diligence it produced in you, what [p]clearing of yourselves, what indignation, what fear, what vehement desire, what zeal, what vindication! In all things you proved yourselves to be [q]clear in this matter. [12] Therefore, although I wrote to you, I did not do it for the sake of him who had done the wrong, nor for the sake of him who suffered wrong, [r]but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear to you.

The Joy of Titus

[13] Therefore we have been comforted in your comfort. And we rejoiced exceedingly more for the joy of Titus, because his spirit [s]has been refreshed by you all. [14] For if in anything I have boasted to him about you, I am not ashamed. But as we spoke all things to you in truth, even so our boasting to Titus was found true. [15] And his affections are greater for you as he remembers [t]the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him. [16] Therefore I rejoice that [u]I have confidence in you in everything.

all filthiness Paul means all kinds of sin, however they come to expression in life. Physical cleanliness is not in view (Matt. 7:15; Pet. 3:21).

■ 7:2 We have wronged no one. Once again in defense against those who accuse him, Paul appeals to a blameless record in ministry.

■ 7:3 Paul reveals how deeply he loves the church at Corinth; this is not deceitful speech, but an expression of his "sincere love" (6:6).

■ 7:5 This verse resumes the narrative that broke off at 2:13. It shows Paul's turmoil of soul when a church he deeply loved strayed from obedience to the Lord.

Macedonia. Northern Greece, on the way to Corinth (2:12, 13 notes).

■ 7:6 Titus had finally arrived in Macedonia with good news about the Corinthians and their response to Paul's "severe letter."

■ 7:8 Paul's "severe letter" (no longer extant) was written to rebuke the Corinthians for their conduct during his earlier visit (2:3, 4 notes and Introduction: Date and Occasion). The problem was probably their failure as a church to defend Paul against the person who had wronged him. This verse shows clearly that a loving pastor must sometimes cause sorrow to those he cares for, if they fall into sin.

■ 7:10 repentance. Turning from sin, a sincere decision to forsake a specific sin (or sins) and begin to obey God. Here, the term does not specifically refer to initial repentance that must accompany true saving faith (Mark 1:15; Acts 3:19; 17:30; 26:20), but to a turning from sin in the life of a Christian.

leading to salvation. "Salvation" here means not initial conversion, but growth and progress in the Christian life. Ordinary Christian growth will include times of profound sorrow for remaining sin.

sorrow of the world. Regret and sorrow of different kinds that do not seek forgiveness in Christ.

■ 7:11 The Corinthians responded as Paul had hoped when Titus brought the letter of rebuke.

■ 7:12 him who had done the wrong. Probably not the man guilty of incest in 1 Cor. 5:1, though many have understood it this way (2:5 note).

in the sight of God. The Christian life is lived before the face of God.

■ 7:13 his spirit has been refreshed. The personal contact of the Corinthians and Titus had encouraged Titus spiritually, making a noticeable change in him.

■ 7:15 with fear and trembling. Apparently, even before Titus arrived with the letter of rebuke, the Holy Spirit had worked repentance in the Corinthian church.

Excel in Giving

8 Moreover, brethren, we make known to you the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia: 2 that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and [a]their deep poverty abounded in the riches of their liberality. 3 For I bear witness that according to their ability, yes, and beyond their ability, they were freely willing, 4 imploring us with much urgency [r]that we would receive the gift and [b]the fellowship of the ministering to the saints. 5 And not only as we had hoped, but they first [c]gave themselves to the Lord, and then to us by the [d]will of God. 6 So [e]we urged Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also complete this grace in you as well. 7 But as [f]you abound in everything—in faith, in speech, in knowledge, in all diligence, and in your love for us—see [g]that you abound in this grace also.

Christ Our Pattern

8 [h]I speak not by commandment, but I am testing the sincerity of your love by the diligence of others. 9 For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, [i]that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that you through His poverty might become [j]rich.

10 And in this [k]I give advice: [l]It is to your advantage not only to be doing what you began and [m]were desiring to do a year ago; 11 but now you also must complete the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to desire it, so there also may be a completion out of what you have. 12 For [n]if there is first a willing mind, it is accepted according to what one has, and not according to what he does not have.

13 For I do not mean that others should be eased and you burdened; 14 but by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may supply their lack, that their abundance also may supply your lack—that there may be equality. 15 As it is written, [o]"He who gathered much had nothing left over, and he who gathered little had no lack."

churches of Macedonia. Philippi, Thessalonica, Berea.

■ 8:3 Paul tells the comparatively wealthy Corinthian church about the generosity of the impoverished churches in Macedonia, to the north.

■ 8:5 not only as we had hoped. They did much more than he expected.

gave themselves. They rededicated their lives to service for the Lord, and then to Paul as His servant.

■ 8:7 you abound in everything. Despite its troubles, Corinth was a strong church in many ways. They had many spiritual gifts (1 Cor. 12—14), several of them listed here.

■ 8:8 not by commandment. Paul wants giving to be voluntary. In general, though Paul had great authority, he preferred to ask rather than command (Philem. 14 and note), a good pattern for those in authority (Matt. 20:25, 26).

■ 8:9 though He was rich. In the glory and honor that was eternally His in heaven.

He became poor. He gave up His heavenly glory and came to earth to live as a man and to suffer and die. The Corinthians, like Christ, should give of themselves for the sake of others. See "The Humble Obedience of Christ" at John 5:19.

■ 8:10 They had begun to give in accordance with Paul's instructions in 1 Cor. 16:1–3.

■ 8:11 As in all of the Christian life, so it is in giving. Good motives are not enough, but must lead to good actions in accordance with our abilities.

■ 8:12 As the widow's offering in Mark 12:41–44 teaches, willingness to give generously is pleasing to God, even though the gift may have to be small because the giver is poor.

not according to what he does not have. This is a warning against giving or promising to give an amount that you really do not have, hoping that God will repay it. Doing this forces a test on God (Luke 4:12). People should give as God causes them to prosper (1 Cor. 16:2). Even so, the more common offense is failing to give immediately and generously when God brings additional income.

■ 8:14 equality. Not that Paul wanted all Christians to have equal possessions or equal income, but that there might be a fair distribution of burdens. The word translated "equality" can also be translated "fair" (Col. 4:1). Paul calls for equity rather than strict equality.

■ 8:15 When the people gathered manna in the wilderness, those who gathered more shared with those who had less, and here with respect to money, the rich should share with those in need.

■ 8:17 Paul is sending Titus back to Corinth ahead of him.

■ 8:18 the brother. No name is given. Luke is a frequent suggestion.

■ 8:19 chosen by the churches. There was some congregational role in selecting representatives to accompany Paul.

to the glory of the Lord Himself. Giving money and administering it well is not mundane or unspiritual, but in itself honors the Lord.

mind, [20] avoiding this: that anyone should blame us in this lavish gift which is administered by us— [21] [s]providing honorable things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men.

[22] And we have sent with them our brother whom we have often proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, because of the great confidence which we have in you. [23] If anyone inquires about [t]Titus, he is my partner and fellow worker concerning you. Or if our brethren are inquired about, they are [u]messengers[3] of the churches, the glory of Christ. [24] Therefore show to them, [4]and before the churches, the proof of your love and of our [v]boasting on your behalf.

Administering the Gift

9 Now concerning [a]the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you; [2] for I know your willingness, about which I boast of you to the Macedonians, that Achaia was ready a [b]year ago; and your zeal has stirred up the majority. [3] [c]Yet I have sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this respect, that, as I said, you may be ready; [4] lest if some Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared, we (not to mention you!) should be ashamed of this [1]confident boasting. [5] Therefore I thought it necessary to [2]exhort the brethren to go to you ahead of time, and prepare your generous gift beforehand, which you had previously promised, that it may be ready as a matter of generosity and not as a [3]grudging obligation.

The Cheerful Giver

[6] [d]But this I say: He who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and he who sows [4]bountifully will also reap [4]bountifully. [7] So let each one give as he purposes in his heart, [e]not grudgingly or of [5]necessity; for [f]God loves a cheerful giver. [8] [g]And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that you, always having all sufficiency in all things, may have an abundance for every good work. [9] As it is written:

> [h] "He has dispersed abroad,
> He has given to the poor;
> His righteousness endures forever."

[10] Now [6]may He who [i]supplies seed to the sower, and bread for food, [7]supply and multiply the seed you have sown and increase the fruits of your [j]righteousness, [11] while you are enriched in everything for all liberality, [k]which causes thanksgiving through us to God. [12] For the administration of this service not only [l]supplies the needs of the saints, but also is abounding through many thanksgivings to God, [13] while, through the proof of this ministry, they [m]glorify God for the obedience of your confession to the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal [n]sharing with them and all men, [14] and by their prayer for you, who long for you because of the exceeding [o]grace of God in you. [15] Thanks be to God [p]for His indescribable gift!

The Spiritual War

10 Now [a]I, Paul, myself am pleading with you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ— [b]who in presence am lowly among you, but being absent am bold toward you. [2] But I

CHAPTER 10

1 [a]Rom. 12:1 [b]1 Thess. 2:7

■ 8:20, 21 Paul would not have misused any part of the gift sent to Jerusalem. He insisted that trusted representatives from several churches accompany him (Acts 20:4) so as to avoid even the suspicion of wrongdoing. On this passage Calvin comments that "nothing more certainly invites slanderous attacks than to be handling public money." Moreover, the representatives would have been a sort of bodyguard for someone carrying valuables.

■ 8:22 our brother. Not identified.

■ 9:2 Achaia. Southern Greece, where Corinth was located.

■ 9:5 your generous gift. Paul wants to preserve the motive of willing, generous giving, and the actual amount he takes to Jerusalem is of secondary importance.

■ 9:6 sows . . . reap. An agricultural metaphor—the farmer who plants much seed reaps a large crop, but a small planting yields a small harvest. This promise is also true in the spiritual realm. Those who give generously will reap abundantly for the kingdom. What is given is never lost; it is sown. While God may at times provide a generous harvest in the physical and material realm to those who give, this is not the New Testament promise or pattern (8:9; 11:27; Luke 6:20, 21, 24, 25; James 2:5).

■ 9:7 God loves a cheerful giver. Giving can and should be joyful.

■ 9:14 Through such giving needs are met, and God is thanked. The recipients' prayers for the givers are no small reward.

■ 9:15 Our giving is only a small imitation of God's own excellent generosity to us, especially in the "indescribable gift" of His Son (John 3:16).

■ 10:1—13:10 In these four chapters, Paul deals with the problem of false apostles (11:13) who had come to Corinth and who were opposing Paul's authority. Titus had brought good news about the previous problems at Corinth, but a new problem demanded Paul's attention. Paul was confident of the Corinthian church (7:16), but not all the Corinthians were equally confident of Paul. Between 9:12–15 and 10:1, the tone changes abruptly from something positive to exasperation as Paul defends the genuineness of his calling as an apostle. For a discussion of this shift in tone see Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties.

beg you [c]that when I am present I may not be bold with that confidence by which I intend to be bold against some, who think of us as if we walked according to the flesh. 3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh. 4 [d]For the weapons [e]of our warfare are not [f]carnal but [g]mighty in God [g]for pulling down strongholds, 5 [h]casting down arguments and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ, 6 [i]and being ready to punish all disobedience when [j]your obedience is fulfilled.

Reality of Paul's Authority

7 [k]Do you look at things according to the outward appearance? [l]If anyone is convinced in himself that he is Christ's, let him again consider this in himself, that just as he is Christ's, even [2]so [m]we are Christ's. 8 For even if I should boast somewhat more [n]about our authority, which the Lord gave [3]us for [4]edification and not for your destruction, [o]I shall not be ashamed— 9 lest I seem to terrify you by letters. 10 "For his letters," they say, "are weighty and powerful, but [p]his bodily presence is weak, and his [q]speech contemptible." 11 Let such a person consider this, that what we are in word by letters when we are absent, such we will also be in deed when we are present.

Limits of Paul's Authority

12 [r]For we dare not class ourselves or compare ourselves with those who commend themselves. But they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise. 13 [s]We, however, will not boast beyond measure, but within the limits of the sphere which God appointed us—a sphere which especially includes you. 14 For we are not overextending ourselves (as though our authority did not extend to you), [t]for it was to you that we came with the gospel of Christ; 15 not boasting of things beyond measure, that is, [u]in other men's labors, but having hope, that as your faith is increased, we shall be greatly enlarged by you in our sphere, 16 to preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's sphere of accomplishment.

17 But [v]"he who glories, let him glory in the LORD." 18 For [w]not he who commends himself is approved, but [x]whom the Lord commends.

■ 10:3 A repeated theme in this epistle is living not according to worldly standards or life-views but according to spiritual power and spiritual reality.

■ 10:4 weapons. Prayer, the proclamation of the powerful Word of God, and the authority to drive away demonic opposition (Acts 16:18; Eph. 6:10–18). Also, there was a kind of powerful apostolic authority not often discussed, but apparent in the fate of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 15:1–11) and Elymas (Acts 13:8–12).

strongholds. Paul is talking about spiritual strongholds, that is, centers of demonic opposition to the gospel (1 Pet. 5:8, 9; 1 John 5:19). Paul knew his opponents at Corinth were servants of Satan (11:14, 15), but that did not frighten him, for the power of the Holy Spirit within him was far greater.

■ 10:5 casting down arguments. False wisdom and sophisticated arguments were some of the weapons used by the servants of Satan in their attack against Paul. The apostle had earlier stressed the difference between the wisdom of the world and the spiritual wisdom of the cross, and he warned the Corinthians against being deluded by the wisdom of the world (1 Cor. 1:18—2:16). Now Paul sees that his opponents have made such inroads with their false wisdom that he must oppose it again in the strongest terms and, at the same time, regain the loyalty and obedience of the Corinthians.

every thought into captivity. If every thought, then the whole person—our every idea, motive, desire, and decision—belongs to Christ.

■ 10:6 If the Corinthians join ranks in opposing the false apostles, Paul is ready to punish them for the harm they do.

■ 10:8 Paul knows that he must now call upon the authority Christ has given him and warn the Corinthians that he is ready to use it (v. 4 note).

■ 10:10 his speech contemptible. Paul did not depend on the kind of trained oratory prized by the world and designed to get glory for the speaker. Those influenced by the opponents attacked Paul's ministry by saying he lacked this skill.

■ 10:11 See note on v. 4.

■ 10:12 class ourselves or compare ourselves. Now the matter surfaces that caused Paul to defend his apostleship so vigorously. Encouraged by rival "apostles," some influential Corinthians had begun to compare these latecomers to Paul—with Paul coming out the loser. He was judged deficient as a speaker (v. 10; 11:5), weak in his relationship with the church (vacillating between boldness while absent and timidity when present, vv. 10, 11), unloving toward them (in refusing a monetary gift which, in their view, snubbed them as inferiors, 11:7–11; 12:14–18), and deficient in certain religious experiences of "power" (12:1–5 and notes). But Paul refuses to compare himself with his opponents on their shabby terms of self-boasting and self-promotion. When he yields and boasts to them (11:16–18), he does so ironically, using the form of comparison but always refusing their false values.

■ 10:13 not boast beyond measure. Paul will take credit only for things that God has permitted him to do, but this includes having come to Corinth as their apostle. He implies that the opponents in Corinth with their boasting were intruding into his area of responsibility.

■ 10:16 beyond you. Paul was hoping the Corinthians would prosper spiritually and become a base from which he could go on and evangelize beyond them, presumably to Rome and then to Spain (Acts 19:21; Rom. 15:22–29).

■ 10:17 A quotation from Jer. 9:24. To "glory" in something means to declare how great something is, to boast about something. All of Paul's boasting in this letter ultimately ends up giving glory to God.

■ 10:18 whom the Lord commends. The Lord's judgment is final, and will set aside every human judgment. Paul has been careful not to make any claim except what is based on God's purposes and on what God has done. He concludes the section with the very basic principle that a person should look for the approval of God and not man (Matt. 6:1–4; John 5:44; Rom. 2:29; Gal. 1:10).

Concern for Their Faithfulness

11 Oh, that you would bear with me in a little [a]folly—and indeed you do bear with me.
2 For I am [b]jealous for you with godly jealousy. For [c]I have betrothed you to one husband, [d]that I may present you [e]as a chaste virgin to Christ. 3 But I fear, lest somehow, as [f]the serpent deceived Eve by his craftiness, so your minds [g]may be corrupted from the [f]simplicity that is in Christ. 4 For if he who comes preaches another Jesus whom we have not preached, or if you receive a different spirit which you have not received, or a [h]different gospel which you have not accepted—you may well put up with it!

Paul and False Apostles

5 For I consider that [i]I am not at all inferior to the most eminent apostles. 6 Even though [j]I am untrained in speech, yet I am not [k]in knowledge. But [l]we have [2]been thoroughly manifested among you in all things.

7 Did I commit sin in [3]humbling myself that you might be exalted, because I preached the gospel of God to you [m]free of charge? 8 I robbed other churches, taking wages from them to minister to you. 9 And when I was present with you, and in need, [n]I was a burden to no one, for what I lacked [o]the brethren who came from Macedonia supplied. And in everything I kept myself from being burdensome to you, and so I will keep myself. 10 [p]As the truth of Christ is in me, [q]no one shall stop me from this boasting in the regions of Achaia. 11 Why? [r]Because I do not love you? God knows!

12 But what I do, I will also continue to do, [s]that I may cut off the opportunity from those who desire an opportunity to be regarded just as we are in the things of which they boast. 13 For such [t]are false apostles, [u]deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. 14 And no wonder! For Satan himself transforms himself into [v]an angel of light. 15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also transform themselves into ministers of righteousness, [w]whose end will be according to their works.

Reluctant Boasting

16 I say again, let no one think me a fool. If otherwise, at least receive me as a fool, that I also may boast a little. 17 What I speak, [x]I speak not according to the Lord, but as it were, foolishly, in this confidence of boasting. 18 Seeing that many boast according to the flesh, I also will boast. 19 For you put up with fools gladly, [y]since you yourselves are wise! 20 For you put up with it [z]if one brings you into bondage, if one devours you, if one takes from you, if one exalts himself, if one strikes you on the face. 21 To our shame [a]I say that we were too weak for that! But [b]in whatever anyone is bold—I speak foolishly—I am bold also.

■ 11:2 I am jealous for you. Paul longs for the Corinthians to remain loyal to Christ. He uses a metaphor of engagement and marriage. If the Corinthians follow the false apostles they will stray from Christ and be unfaithful to Him. Then they could no longer come to Him as a "chaste virgin." It is assumed that God's ideal for marriage is no prior sexual relations—that a bride would come as a "chaste virgin" to her husband, as her husband would also come to her.

■ 11:3 Paul knows that the false apostles are a dangerous spiritual threat, comparable to the serpent (vv. 14, 15; Gal. 3:1).

■ 11:4 another Jesus . . . different spirit . . . different gospel. The strongholds, arguments, and pretensions (10:4, 5) of Paul's opponents so distort the truth that their so-called "Jesus," "spirit," and "gospel" differ radically from what Paul has preached (1 Cor. 1:18—2:16; cf. Gal. 1:6–9). The "different gospel" of the opponents conforms to worldly ways of thinking so much that Paul and his apostolic ministry—a ministry manifesting the death of Jesus through adversity and suffering (4:7–18; 6:4–10; cf. 1 Cor. 4:8–13)—is despised and rejected in favor of ministries which satisfy the current taste for eloquence, philosophical wisdom, and spectacular displays of spiritual power (cf. 1 Cor. 1:22–25).

■ 11:5 the most eminent apostles. There is a hint of mockery in Paul's use of this inflated title (lit. "super apostles") for his opponents in Corinth. It may even be a name they had applied to themselves. Some think that they used it to refer to the Jerusalem apostles.

■ 11:6 untrained in speech. See note on 10:10.

■ 11:7 free of charge. When Paul was at Corinth he supported himself (Acts 18:3) and accepted help from other churches as well (v. 8). Some of the Corinthians seem to have been offended by Paul's refusal to accept their gift, probably offered to him in response to his preaching of the gospel to them. In ancient times, gift giving and receiving were often used to establish and maintain friendships among social equals. In this system Paul's refusal of a gift might be taken as an insult, a proud refusal to be involved with inferiors. But the apostle views his relationship with the Corinthians, not from the standpoint of worldly social convention (5:16), but from the standpoint of the new creation (5:17) in which he has been called to be an apostle and spiritual father. As a father, he may rightly give to his children without receiving anything in return (12:14, 15).

■ 11:9 from Macedonia. Probably from Philippi (Phil. 4:15, 16).

■ 11:10 this boasting. Paul had ministered to the Corinthians at great personal sacrifice and expense—unlike the false apostles who apparently were demanding support from the church (cf. vv. 7, 20).

the regions of Achaia. The area around Corinth.

■ 11:13 Paul's opponents at Corinth are not just fellow Christians who differ in certain non-essential matters; they are actual servants of Satan inside the church, competing for its leadership.

■ 11:14 One of Satan's tricks is to claim to be doing good, and specifically to send to a church servants of his who purport to be Christians, but who bring only division, slander, immorality, and all kinds of destruction. Jesus told His disciples, "by their fruits you will know them" (Matt. 7:20; cf. Acts 20:29, 30; 2 Pet. 2).

■ 11:15 whose end. Final judgment by God.

Suffering for Christ

22 Are they [c]Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? So am I. 23 Are they ministers of Christ?—I speak as a fool—I am more: [d]in labors more abundant, [e]in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequently, [f]in deaths often. 24 From the Jews five times I received [g]forty [h]stripes minus one. 25 Three times I was [i]beaten with rods; [j]once I was stoned; three times I [k]was shipwrecked; a night and a day I have been in the deep; 26 in journeys often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, [l]in perils of my own countrymen, [m]in perils of the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; 27 in weariness and toil, [n]in sleeplessness often, [o]in hunger and thirst, in [p]fastings often, in cold and nakedness— 28 besides the other things, what comes upon me daily: [q]my deep concern for all the churches. 29 [r]Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is made to stumble, and I do not burn with indignation?

30 If I must boast, [s]I will boast in the things which concern my [4]infirmity. 31 [t]The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, [u]who is blessed forever, knows that I am not lying. 32 [v]In Damascus the governor, under Aretas the king, was guarding the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desiring to arrest me; 33 but I was let down in a basket through a window in the wall, and escaped from his hands.

The Vision of Paradise

12 It is [1]doubtless not profitable for me to boast. I will come to [a]visions and [b]revelations of the Lord: 2 I know a man [c]in Christ who fourteen years ago—whether in the body I do not know, or whether out of the body I do not know, God knows—such a one [d]was caught up to the third heaven. 3 And I know such a man—whether in the body or out of the body I do not know, God knows— 4 how he was caught up into [e]Paradise and heard inexpressible words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. 5 Of such a one I will boast; yet of myself I will not [f]boast, except in my infirmities. 6 For though I might desire to boast, I will not be a fool; for I

2 [c]Rom. 16:7 [d]Acts 22:17 4 [e]Luke 23:43 5 [f]2 Cor. 11:30

■ 11:22—12:10 This part of the letter is known as the "Fool's Speech." In it Paul describes his ministry in terms that could not possibly be equaled by the false apostles. Yet he does not boast about his own knowledge or speaking skills or other abilities, but about how much he has suffered for the sake of Christ. Here Paul's boasting is ironic—he "boasts" of things normally considered shameful, signs of weakness and defeats. Thus, his boasts are an imitation or parody of the boasting of his opponents, who praised themselves to the Corinthians in extravagant speeches. The topics in this section progress to a climax where Paul deals with what may have been uppermost in the minds of his critics—unusual religious experiences (12:1–9).

■ 11:22 Are they Hebrews. Paul's opponents were Jews, perhaps coming from Jerusalem and claiming to be endorsed by the Jerusalem apostles.

■ 11:23–27 Paul, in recounting the marks of a true servant of Christ, points to suffering and humiliation, emphasizing again (as he did in 1 Cor. 1—4) Christ crucified.

■ 11:23 Paul reveals his extreme hesitancy to speak at all in his own behalf.

■ 11:24 forty stripes minus one. Forty lashes was the maximum that could be inflicted on a person, according to Deut. 25:3. It was Jewish practice to set the limit a little lower as a safeguard against miscounting.

■ 11:25 beaten with rods. One such occasion is reported in Acts 16:22.

once I was stoned. In Lystra on Paul's first missionary journey (Acts 14:19), where the crowd thought they had killed Paul.

three times I was shipwrecked. A shipwreck is found in Acts 27:39–44, but 2 Corinthians was written earlier, at the time described in Acts 20:2 (when Paul was in Macedonia). The three shipwrecks must have happened during his earlier missionary journeys.

■ 11:26 Paul's goal was not his own personal comfort or safety. Many of the hardships he records in this larger section are not recorded at all in Acts. It is hard to imagine a more hazardous existence than Paul had, yet he was obedient to God and put his life in God's hands.

false brethren. People pretending to be Christians, who came into the church to stir up trouble.

■ 11:28 Paul felt deeply the needs and suffering of his churches. His trust in God's sovereign care did not make him cold or unemotional.

■ 11:32, 33 This incident is narrated from a different standpoint in Acts 9:24, 25. Apparently Paul's Jewish opponents in Damascus persuaded the governor to cooperate in their plot against Paul. Although these two verses may seem somewhat surprising in the context, they mention Paul's first—and rather humiliating—experience of being persecuted (rather than persecuting others) for the sake of the gospel. The apostle makes a precarious escape from a relatively minor civil authority, like a common fugitive. He is not presenting himself as a hero.

■ 12:1–6 In these verses Paul continues his "boasting" with the topic of a vision of heaven. His account contains some unexpected elements. Paul is not permitted to repeat the things he heard in the vision, and afterward he receives a painful "thorn" (v. 7 note) sent by God to keep him humble.

■ 12:2 a man in Christ. Although he speaks indirectly, Paul clearly means himself.

third heaven. According to a common enumeration, the first heaven was the atmosphere of the birds and clouds, the second was the sky in which we see the stars, and the third would be heaven, the dwelling place of God. For fourteen years Paul had not made this experience a focus of his teaching, as some would have done. His focus was the message of Christ: "we do not preach ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord" (4:5).

■ 12:4 Paradise. That is, the "third heaven" of v. 2. The Greek word for "Paradise" is used with various meanings outside the New Testament, but in the New Testament all three occurrences refer to heaven, the place where the saints dwell with God (Luke 23:43; Rev. 2:7; and here).

■ 12:6 I refrain. Paul wanted people to evaluate him on the basis of their firsthand knowledge of him.

will speak the truth. But I refrain, lest anyone should think of me above what he sees me to be or hears from me.

The Thorn in the Flesh

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure by the abundance of the revelations, a [g]thorn in the flesh was given to me, [h]a messenger of Satan to [2]buffet me, lest I be exalted above measure. 8 [i]Concerning this thing I pleaded with the Lord three times that it might depart from me. 9 And He said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for My strength is made perfect in weakness." Therefore most gladly [j]I will rather boast in my infirmities, [k]that the power of Christ may rest upon me. 10 Therefore [l]I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in needs, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake. [m]For when I am weak, then I am strong.

Signs of an Apostle

11 I have become [n]a fool [3]in boasting; you have compelled me. For I ought to have been commended by you; for [o]in nothing was I behind the most eminent apostles, though [p]I am nothing. 12 [q]Truly the signs of an apostle were accomplished among you with all perseverance, in signs and [r]wonders and mighty [s]deeds. 13 For what is it in which you were inferior to other churches, except that I myself was not burdensome to you? Forgive me this wrong!

Love for the Church

14 [t]Now for the third time I am ready to come to you. And I will not be burdensome to you; for [u]I do not seek yours, but you. [v]For the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children. 15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent [w]for your souls; though [x]the more abundantly I love you, the less I am loved.

16 But be that as it may, [y]I did not burden you. Nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you by cunning! 17 Did I take advantage of you by any of those whom I sent to you? 18 I urged Titus, and sent our [z]brother with him. Did Titus take advantage of you? Did we not walk in the same spirit? Did we not walk in the same steps?

19 [a]Again,[4] do you think that we excuse ourselves to you? [b]We speak before God in Christ. [c]But we do all things, beloved, for your edification. 20 For I fear lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I wish, and that [d]I shall be found by you such as you do not wish; lest there be contentions, jealousies, outbursts of wrath, selfish ambitions, backbitings, whisperings, conceits, tumults; 21 lest, when I come again, my God [e]will humble me among you, and I shall mourn for

■ 12:7 a thorn in the flesh. Many possibilities have been suggested for this "thorn," such as a physical ailment of some sort ("in the flesh"), a harassing demon ("a messenger of Satan"), or the constant harassment of Jewish persecutors. Throughout the history of the church no agreement has been reached among hundreds of commentators. As it stands, the "thorn" of Paul's experiences is readily applied to a variety of trials faced in this life. Few of God's servants have been free from at least some kind of hindrance, weakness, or opposition.

■ 12:8 the Lord. Paul's usual expression to refer to Christ, not to God the Father. Although prayers in the New Testament are most often directed to God the Father, this is an example of prayer directed to Christ (others are in Acts 1:24; 7:59; 1 Cor. 16:22; Rev. 22:20). It is striking that in his "boasting" Paul testifies about a request God did not fulfill.

■ 12:9 My strength is made perfect in weakness. God will accomplish His purposes without taking from His servant the thorn that seems to hinder him. Despite human weaknesses, God's grace attains His purposes in a fallen world. This promise from God no doubt gave Paul strength and encouragement in subsequent sufferings. Paul shortly ties the general principle to its source—the cross of Christ (13:4). Paul's whole response to attacks on his apostolic authority has been patterned consciously on Christ, and Him crucified, and not on the so-called "Jesus" and the different "gospel" that his opponents have foisted on the erring Corinthians (11:4 note).

■ 12:10 Paul's spiritual view was so clear that he could see his sufferings as reasons for rejoicing, because he knew that in them all of Christ's power was at work.

■ 12:11 you have compelled me. Paul had to "boast" about his apostolic weakness because the Corinthians, who knew him well, had not defended him against the false apostles, but instead had been seduced (11:1–3) by inflated self-claims and untrue criticism of Paul.

■ 12:12 the signs of an apostle. According to common understanding, the "signs of an apostle" were simply miracles, "wonders and mighty deeds." Yet throughout this epistle Paul points to other marks that distinguish him from the false apostles: the changed lives of the Corinthians (3:2, 3), the blameless character of his ministry (6:3–10; 7:2; 8:20, 21), his genuine love for his churches (6:11, 12; 7:3; 11:7–11), and his sacrificial endurance of suffering (6:3–10; 11:23–33). In addition to these marks, Paul is ready to mention miraculous signs, but not to dwell on them. See 1 Cor. 13:2; "The Apostles" at Acts 1:26.

■ 12:14 for the third time. See Introduction: Date and Occasion. The first visit was on Paul's second missionary journey (Acts 18:1–18). The second visit is not recorded but occurred sometime during Paul's stay at Ephesus (Acts 19:1–41).

I do not seek yours, but you. Unlike those preachers whose goal was their own financial reward.

■ 12:16 I caught you by cunning. Perhaps Paul's opponents were saying that his apparent selflessness was a trick to deceive them. Paul answers that he never exploited them through others (v.17).

■ 12:18 Titus was coming ahead of Paul (8:6, 16, 17).

■ 12:19 Paul again emphasizes that he has not been speaking for his own reputation or glory but for the good of the church and for the glory of God. Again he reveals a strong awareness that all he writes and does is "before God."

■ 12:21 Paul's fatherly ties with the Corinthian church are strong, and he knows that if he returns to find some of them (his "children," v. 14) still unruly, it will be humiliating for him, just as parents are humiliated by the misbehavior of their children.

Coming with Authority

13 This will be [a]the third time I am coming to you. [b]"By the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." [2][c]I have told you before, and foretell as if I were present the second time, and now being absent [d]I write to those [d]who have sinned before, and to all the rest, that if I come again [e]I will not spare— [3]since you seek a proof of Christ [f]speaking in me, who is not weak toward you, but mighty [g]in you. [4][h]For though He was crucified in weakness, yet [i]He lives by the power of God. For [j]we also are weak in Him, but we shall live with Him by the power of God toward you.

Paul Prefers Gentleness

[7]Now [3]I pray to God that you do no evil, not that we should appear approved, but that you should do what is honorable, though [m]we may seem disqualified. [8]For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth. [9]For we are glad [n]when we are weak and you are strong. And this also we pray, [o]that you may be made complete. [10][p]Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the [q]authority which the Lord has given me for edification and not for destruction.

Greetings and Benediction

[11]Finally, brethren, farewell. Become complete. [r]Be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love [s]and peace will be with you.

[12][t]Greet one another with a holy kiss.

[13]All the saints greet you.

[14][u]The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and [v]the [4]communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all. Amen.

■ 13:1 the third time. See note on 12:14. Paul quotes Deut. 17:6 and 19:15. The "two or three witnesses" very likely does not mean Paul's two or three visits to Corinth (for Paul is still only one witness), but is rather a reminder that when he comes all charges will be considered fairly and dealt with in a just way.

■ 13:3 Christ speaking in me. A strong statement of Paul's apostolic authority. Christ Himself was speaking through Paul, and Christ's words through Paul would powerfully silence any offenders.

■ 13:4 Paul's life (as that of all Christians) was united with Christ in His death and resurrection, and he continued to share in the resurrection power of Christ as long as he lived.

■ 13:5 Examine . . . Test. See 1 Cor. 11:28; Gal. 6:4. Paul's words help clarify the doctrine of assurance of faith. Paul asks the Corinthians to examine their own lives for evidence of salvation. Such evidence would include trust in Christ (Heb. 3:6), obedience to God (Matt. 7:21), growth in holiness (Heb. 12:14; 1 John 3:3), the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22, 23), love for other Christians (1 John 3:14), positive influence on others (Matt. 5:16), adhering to the apostolic teaching (1 John 4:2), and the testimony of the Holy Spirit within them (Rom. 8:15, 16).

■ 13:13 All the saints. Christians in the church from which Paul was writing (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 13:14 A trinitarian benediction. See "One and Three: The Trinity" at Is. 44:6.

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

GALATIANS

Author The apostle Paul wrote Galatians (1:1). He mentions a group of his coworkers who had some role in sending the letter (1:2), but the letter's style and theology demonstrate that Paul was the immediate author. Since the eighteenth century, a few scholars have considered the letter pseudonymous (that is, that the name "Paul" was used by another, unknown author) but their arguments are generally regarded as having no foundation.

Date and Occasion The question of the letter's date is intertwined with the problem of its destination. Paul names his addressees as "Galatians" (3:1; cf. 1:2), but to which "Galatians" was he writing? He may have been writing specifically to the Celtic people who lived in northern Galatia and who were widely known as "Galatians," or he might have been addressing the people who lived in the entire province of Galatia. When we follow the course of Paul's first and second missionary journeys (Acts 13; 14; 15:36—18:22) we discover that this question has implications for the epistle's date and for its relationship to Paul's other letters. Paul visited Pisidian Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe (all cities in south Galatia) on his first and second missionary journeys. If Paul wrote to southern Galatia, he probably wrote to those churches early in his career, shortly after the first missionary journey, or about the time of the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15; cf. Gal. 2:11–14). The date most often given by those who hold this view is A.D. 49. If this is correct, Galatians may be Paul's earliest epistle in existence today.

Many scholars think that Galatians was written to the ethnic Galatians in the north. If this view is correct, Paul probably wrote the letter after passing through "Galatia and Phrygia" (Acts 18:23) on his third missionary journey. Many who follow the "north Galatian theory" believe that Paul wrote the letter either during his two-year stay in Ephesus (Acts 19) or as he was traveling through Macedonia on his way to Greece at the end of his third missionary journey (Acts 20:1–6; cf. 2 Cor. 2:13). If this is correct, Galatians was probably written in A.D. 54 or 55. Theories that date the letter late in Paul's career have the merit of placing Galatians in the same period as 2 Corinthians, Romans, and perhaps Philippians—letters that share with Galatians some matters of common concern.

Galatians was written to answer specific problems in particular churches. In order to understand the epistle, some knowledge of the situation that provoked Paul to write is essential. Not long after the Galatians had accepted the gospel, agitators came among them who attacked Paul personally (4:17) and preached a distorted form of Christianity (1:6, 7). Their "gospel" required circumcision for salvation (6:12). Since the Galatians were uncircumcised Gentiles, the agitators insisted that the Galatians not only believe in Christ for salvation but also accept circumcision (2:3–5; 5:2, 6, 11; 6:12, 13, 15).

The zeal of these agitators likely reflects Jewish pressure as well as their own pride. Probably they were attempting to convert the Gentile Galatians to Judaism under pressure from nationalistic Jewish groups in Judea who, according to the Jewish historian Josephus, were becoming increasingly intolerant of contact between Jews and Gentiles during the last half of the first century.

The agitators were not content merely to preach their brand of the gospel. They also attempted to discredit Paul, who had founded the Galatian churches (4:17). Their attacks took three forms: First, they claimed that Paul was a renegade who had defied his superiors, the Jerusalem apostles. Paul responds to this attack in 1:11—2:10. Second, they said that Paul had recently argued with Peter over whether the gospel required Gentiles to become Jews in order to become Christians. Paul gives his account of the encounter with Peter in 2:11–14. Third, the agitators spread the notion that Paul had originally preached circumcision for salvation (5:11) but had recently changed his gospel so that he might more easily accommodate the Gentiles (1:10).

The Galatians, for their part, were showing interest both in the rumors about Paul and in the agitators' new form of the gospel. By the time Paul wrote, they were in the process of deserting the true gospel and, consequently, God Himself (1:6, 7). They now wanted to be "under the law" (4:21; cf. 5:1) and, specifically, to become circumcised (5:2). This transition to "a different gospel" (1:6) was not smooth. Dissension appears to have broken out within the community (5:15; 6:3–5).

Paul's purpose in writing was to persuade the Galatians that no Gentile needs to accept circumcision in order to belong to God's covenant people. The "truth of the gospel" (2:5, 14) is that entrance into communion with the people of God comes by faith in Jesus Christ. Anyone who seeks to violate that sacred sphere of faith by adding other requirements adulterates the gospel and must be resisted at all costs (1:8, 9). In order for his argument to be persuasive, Paul had to demonstrate that the rumors about him were false, and that both his gospel and his authority to preach it came from God Himself (1:11—2:14; cf. 5:11; 6:17).

Characteristics and Themes

The Galatian letter stands like a sentinel over the truth that salvation is the gift of God's grace, unearned and undeserved, to be received by faith alone (2:15, 16). Indeed, faith itself is God's free gift (1:3, 6, 15; 2:19, 21; 6:18). Quite simply, this is "the truth of the gospel" (2:5, 14). Paul shows deep anger over the agitators' denial of it (3:1; 5:12), warning that those who reject it cannot expect to be saved (1:8; 5:4).

Faith alone is the key because Christ alone is the Savior. He bore the curse of the law in our place on the cross (3:13; 6:14). Made one with Him, we are clothed with His righteousness (3:26, 27), our sure hope (5:5). Because we are united to Christ, we receive the rights of His sonship (4:4, 5), and the Spirit of the Son becomes ours, enabling us to live in the Spirit, in fellowship with our Lord (2:20; 4:6, 7; 5:16–18, 25). The gift of the Spirit is the full blessing promised long ago to Abraham (3:6–9, 14). Against the proud imagination of sinners that they can earn their own salvation by keeping God's law, Paul boasts only in the cross, in faith receiving the promise of God (6:14). □

CHAPTER 1

PAUL, an apostle (not from men nor through man, but [a]through Jesus Christ and God the Father [b]who raised Him from the dead), [2] and all the brethren who are with me,

To the churches of Galatia:

[3] Grace to you and peace from God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ, [4] [c]who gave Himself for our sins, that He might deliver us [d]from this present evil age, according to the will of our God and Father, [5] to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

Only One Gospel

[6] I marvel that you are turning away so soon [e]from Him who called you in the grace of Christ, to a different gospel, [7] [f]which is not another; but there are some [g]who trouble you and want to [h]pervert[i] the gospel of Christ. [8] But even if [j]we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other apostle. The word means "messenger." Paul could on occasion use it to refer to an envoy such as Epaphroditus (Phil. 2:25), but he uses it here to denote the original apostles at Jerusalem (1:19; 1 Cor. 15:9). Paul claims the authority of an apostle to lay the foundation of the church (1 Cor. 3:10; 9:1; 14:37, 38; Eph. 2:20; 3:3–5). His apostleship and calling came from God Himself (1:11—2:10). See 2 Cor. 1:1 note.

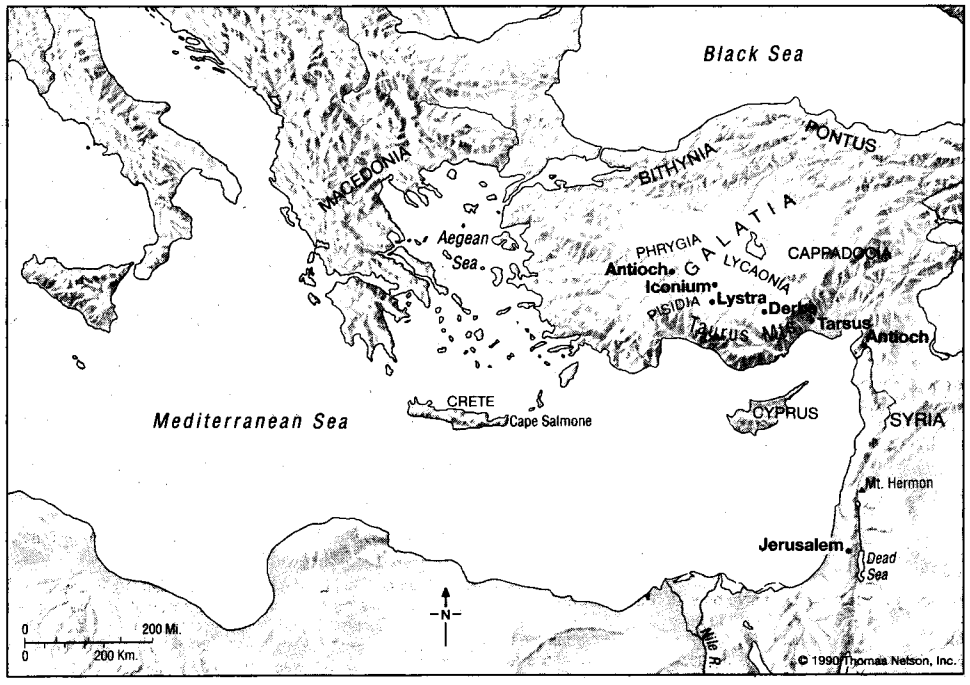
■ 1:3 Grace to you and peace. Each of Paul's letters begins with a reference to these two blessings from God. "Grace" translates the Greek charis, which means "an undeserved act of kindness." Paul uses this word more often than any other New Testament writer and gives it immense theological significance. It refers to all that God has given us in Christ, nothing of which we have earned or can repay. "Peace" refers to the relationship that Christ's death and resurrection (1:4) have established with God for those who believe the gospel. For Paul's own comments on the meaning of these two terms, see Rom. 5:1, 2.

■ 1:6 called you in the grace. God's grace comes to us at His initiative, by His call, and not because of anything we have done to deserve it (1:15; Rom. 4:4–8; 8:30; 9:11–13).

■ 1:7 some who trouble. Probably Jewish Christians from Jerusalem who insisted that Gentiles must not only believe in Jesus Christ but must also accept circumcision and thereby become Jews (2:3–5, 12; 6:12, 13). Various shades of this idea were widespread among early Jewish Christians (Acts 15:1; 21:20, 21; Phil. 3:2, 3).

■ 1:8, 9 Those who add any additional requirements for salvation to faith in Jesus Christ, no matter how excellent their credentials, twist the gospel into another form. The preachers of the false gospel are under God's condemnation.



The Churches of Galatia. Two possible regions are suggested for locating the "churches of Galatia." The "North Galatia" theory suggests a territory in the heart of Asia Minor whose boundaries included Bithynia and Pontus on the north, Phrygia on the southwest, and Cappadocia on the east. The "South Galatia" theory understands Galatia to refer to the Roman province of Paul's day which included Pisidia, Lycaonia, and parts of Phrygia and Cappadocia.

gospel to you than what we have preached to you, let him be [2]accursed. [9] As we have said before, so now I say again, if anyone preaches any other gospel to you [j]than what you have received, let him be accursed.

[10] For [k]do I now [l]persuade men, or God? Or [m]do I seek to please men? For if I still pleased men, I would not be a bondservant of Christ.

Call to Apostleship

[11] [n]But I make known to you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me is not according to man. [12] For [o]I neither received it from man, nor was I taught it, but it came [p]through the revelation of Jesus Christ.

[13] For you have heard of my former conduct in Judaism, how [q]I persecuted the church of God beyond measure and [r]tried to destroy it. [14] And I advanced in Judaism beyond many of my contemporaries in my own nation, [s]being more exceedingly zealous [t]for the traditions of my fathers.

[15] But when it pleased God, [u]who separated me from my mother's womb and called me through His grace, [16] [v]to reveal His Son in me, that [w]I might preach Him among the Gentiles, I did not immediately confer with [x]flesh and blood, [17] nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me; but I went to Arabia, and returned again to Damascus.

[18] Then after three years [y]I went up to Jerusalem to see [3]Peter, and remained with him fifteen days. [19] But [z]I saw none of the other apostles except [a]James, the Lord's brother. [20] (Now concerning the things which I write to you, indeed, before God, I do not lie.)

■ 1:9 accursed. Paul's usual thanksgiving for his readers is here replaced by the threat of a curse, repeated for emphasis. The Greek word is anathema, used also in Rom. 9:3.

■ 1:10 seek to please men. Paul's opponents in Galatia attacked not only the gospel but also its messenger, Paul. One of their charges was that Paul preached an easy form of the gospel, requiring neither circumcision nor obedience to the Sabbath laws and dietary restrictions (4:10; 5:11).

■ 1:11 not according to man. Paul defends himself against his opponents' charge that he is in rebellion against the Jerusalem apostles who gave him his authority in the first place. Paul contends that his authority comes from God alone, the Jerusalem apostles merely confirming it.

■ 1:12 through the revelation. See Acts 9:3–5; 22:6–10; 26:13–18; 1 Cor. 15:8.

■ 1:13 persecuted the church of God. Paul's persecution of the church before his call was well known to the early Christians (Acts 7:58; 8:3; 9:1, 2). Paul himself was profoundly ashamed of this part of his past (1 Cor. 15:9), although he looked on it as evidence that God's grace can overcome even the most rebellious sinners (Acts 22:4, 5; 26:9–11; 1 Cor. 15:10; Phil. 3:6; 1 Tim. 1:13, 14).

■ 1:14 exceedingly zealous. Paul was fond of pointing out to opponents like those in Galatia that being a Jew, even a zealous Jew, is not sufficient for salvation. Paul considered his own experience proof that zeal for the law would not save (Rom. 9:30—10:4; 2 Cor. 11:22; Phil. 3:4–6).

■ 1:15 from my mother's womb. Paul consciously echoes the call of Jeremiah (Jer. 1:5) and, perhaps, the Servant spoken of by Isaiah (Is. 49:1, 5), who both like Paul were called to be God's messengers to Gentiles. Paul was conscious that his apostleship (v. 1 note) was in continuity with the Old Testament prophetic tradition.

called me through His grace. See note on v. 3; "Effectual Calling and Conversion" at 2 Thess. 2:14. Paul's call to be an apostle, like the faith of every believer, was the product of God's prior grace. Before our birth, and therefore before we could do anything good or bad, God chose to create faith in us (Rom. 9:10–13; Eph. 1:4–6). No one can earn God's call; it is a free gift.

■ 1:16 Gentiles. Both "nations" and "Gentiles" are correct translations of the Greek word used here. Jewish writers used the term to refer to everyone that was not a Jew. Paul was called to preach to the Gentiles (2:9; Acts 9:15; 22:21; 26:17; Rom. 1:5; 15:16), but he did not regard this as a call to preach exclusively to Gentiles. In Acts 13—28 he frequently preaches to Jews, and such passages as Rom. 1:14–16; 9:1–5; 1 Cor. 9:20 show that he was ready to evangelize Jews.

confer with flesh and blood. Paul did, of course, meet with Ananias three days after his conversion (Acts 9:10–19; 22:12–16). The word translated "confer," however, suggests laying something before someone or submitting it for comment and approval. Paul certainly did not consult Ananias in this sense. Ananias's role was to confirm Paul's calling to preach to the Gentiles and to baptize him.

■ 1:17 Jerusalem . . . Arabia . . . Damascus. Paul's conversion and call took place near Damascus (Acts 9:3; 22:6; 26:12). He spent several days in the city after his conversion (Acts 9:19). This ancient city is on a fertile plain between two rivers, and the traveler from there must literally "go up" to Jerusalem in the Palestinian highlands. Jerusalem was the cultural and religious center of Palestine, and home to James, Peter, and John, who are prominent in Acts and Galatians as leaders of the early Christian community in Jerusalem (2:9). Paul stresses that his call to preach to the Gentiles came from God and not from the leaders of the Jerusalem church. Arabia was ruled by a Nabatean king, Aretas IV, who struggled with Rome for control of Damascus. When Paul was converted, Aretas's governor was in control of the city and apparently aided angry Jews in an effort to kill Paul (Acts 9:23–25; 2 Cor. 11:32, 33).

■ 1:18 three years. The "many days" of Acts 9:23.

to Jerusalem. Paul's first trip to Jerusalem after his conversion (Acts 9:26–30).

see. This translates a Greek word that means visiting someone for the purpose of getting information. Paul may have interviewed Peter about Jesus' life and teaching.

Peter. Peter's Aramaic name was "Cephas" (see text note). Both "Cephas" and "Peter" mean "rock."

■ 1:19 James, the Lord's brother. See Matt. 13:55 and Mark 6:3. This James is not the disciple James who is frequently coupled with Peter and John in the Gospels. Herod murdered that James in the church's earliest days (Acts 12:2). James, the Lord's brother, at first did not believe in Jesus (John 7:5) but later was converted, perhaps as a result of seeing the risen Lord (1 Cor. 15:7).

■ 1:21 Syria and Cilicia. See Acts 9:30. Paul returned home to Tarsus (Acts 9:11; 21:39; 22:3), the most important city in Cilicia. This part of Cilicia was under the administration of the Roman province of Syria during the early first century. Paul's use of the two names is accurate.

■ 1:22 Judea. Paul could be referring to the specific region of Old Testhe churches of Judea which [c]were in Christ. 23 But they were [d]hearing only, "He who formerly [e]persecuted us now preaches the faith which he once tried to destroy." 24 And they [f]glorified God in me.

Defending the Gospel

2 Then after fourteen years [a]I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and also took Titus with me. 2 And I went up [1]by revelation, and communicated to them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but [b]privately to those who were of reputation, lest by any means [c]I might run, or had run, in vain. 3 Yet not even Titus who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised. 4 And this occurred because of [d]false brethren secretly brought in (who came in by stealth to spy out our [e]liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, [f]that they might bring us into bondage), 5 to whom we did not yield submission even for an hour, that [g]the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But from those [h]who seemed to be something—whatever they were, it makes no difference to me; [i]God [2]shows personal favoritism to no man—for those who seemed to be something [j]added nothing to me. 7 But on the contrary, [k]when they saw that the gospel for the uncircumcised [l]had been committed to me, as the gospel for the circumcised was to Peter 8 (for He who worked effectively in Peter for the apostleship to the [m]circumcised [n]also [o]worked effectively in me toward the Gentiles), 9 and when James, [3]Cephas, and John, who seemed to be [p]pillars, perceived [q]the grace that had been given to me, they gave me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, [r]that we should go to the Gentiles and they to the circumcised. 10 They desired only that we should remember the poor, [s]the very thing which I also was eager to do.

again to Jerusalem. This may refer to a second visit following his conversion, or to a third visit, recorded in Acts 15:2. The purpose of the visit mentioned here corresponds well with the purpose of the visit in Acts 15, but it is difficult, on this theory, to explain why Paul leaves the second visit (Acts 11:27–30) out of his narrative. If, as some scholars believe, Galatians was written after Paul's first missionary journey (Acts 13; 14) but before the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15), then the journey spoken of here is the Acts 11 journey, and the Acts 15 journey has not yet occurred.

Barnabas. A native of Cyprus and one of the earliest Christians (Acts 4:36). Barnabas's name means in Aramaic "Son of Encouragement," and his appearances in Acts demonstrate that he lived up to his name (Acts 4:36, 37; 11:22–24, 30).

Titus. Although not mentioned in Acts, Titus was one of Paul's trusted companions and messengers. See 2 Cor. 2:12, 13; 7:6; 8:6; Titus 1:4, 5.

■ 2:2 by revelation. If this is the Acts 11 visit, the revelation may have been the prophecy of Agabus (11:28). If not, it was probably similar to other special revelations that Paul received from God (Acts 9:4–6; 16:9; 18:9, 10; 2 Cor. 12:1–6).

in vain. While the Jerusalem leaders were not the source of Paul's authority, his efforts to preach the gospel would have been hindered if these influential men had opposed him.

■ 2:3 compelled to be circumcised. See 5:12 and Acts 15:1. Circumcision was the distinguishing mark of the Jew, and the final step in the conversion of a male Gentile to the Jewish religion. Some Jewish Christians believed that Gentiles also had to accept circumcision and thus become Jews before they could be Christians and belong to God's chosen people. Paul was vehemently opposed to this teaching and maintains throughout Galatians that we are justified by faith in Christ alone.

■ 2:4 false brethren. Paul considered the doctrine of salvation by grace through faith alone to be so important that he excluded from the church all who did not hold to it (1:8, 9; 5:2–4).

liberty. The freedom of the believer is not freedom to sin, but freedom from the curse the law pronounces on sin (3:10–14; 5:1, 13).

bondage. Probably bondage to sin (Rom. 6:15–23; 7:25) and to the curse that the law pronounces on those who sin (3:10).

■ 2:5 truth of the gospel. See v. 14; 1:8, 9 and notes. Entrance into the community of God's covenant people (the church) comes only by faith that is graciously given to the believer by God (1:6, 15; Eph. 2:8). Any attempt to add entrance requirements, such as circumcision, is a denial of the sufficiency of faith in Christ's merits for satisfying God's justice, and therefore is a perversion of the gospel.

■ 2:6 personal favoritism. Just as the external mark of circumcision does not define the boundary of God's people, so worldly prestige is not important to God (1 Sam. 16:7; Rom. 2:25–29).

■ 2:7 the uncircumcised. See note on 1:16.

circumcised . . . to Peter. Peter was apparently the chief spokesman of the early Jerusalem church (Acts 1—12). Only with great reluctance did he respond to God's command to associate with the Gentile Cornelius (Acts 10). Although Peter recognized the necessity of including Gentiles within God's people (Acts 10:34, 35; 11:17; 15:7–11), he evidently felt God's call to preach the gospel specifically to Jews.

■ 2:9 James, Cephas, and John. See notes on v. 7; 1:18, 19. These three men had special authority in the early Jerusalem church. Peter and John are frequently seen together (Acts 3; 4), and James was prominent in the Jerusalem church (Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18). "Pillars" was used as a metaphor in Greek as in English for persons in important leadership positions.

grace . . . given to me. Regarding Paul's conversion and call, see 1:15 and note. Paul frequently referred to his call as God's grace, given to him (Rom. 1:5; 12:3; 15:15, 16; 1 Cor. 3:10).

we should go to the Gentiles. Barnabas, like Paul, was chiefly a missionary to the Gentiles (Acts 13; 14; 15:36–41).

■ 2:10 remember the poor. Some refer these words to the purpose of Paul's second visit to Jerusalem (Acts 11:27–30). On that visit, Paul and Barnabas were commissioned to take an offering from Antioch to the Christians in Judea who were suffering because of a famine. In this case,

No Return to the Law

11 [t]Now when [4]Peter had come to Antioch, I [5]withstood him to his face, because he was to be blamed; 12 for before certain men came from James, [u]he would eat with the Gentiles; but when they came, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing [6]those who were of the circumcision. 13 And the rest of the Jews also played the hypocrite with him, so that even Barnabas was carried away with their hypocrisy.

14 But when I saw that they were not straightforward about [v]the truth of the gospel, I said to Peter [w]before them all, [x]"If you, being a Jew, live in the manner of Gentiles and not as the Jews, [7]why do you compel Gentiles to live as [8]Jews? 15 [y]We who are Jews by nature, and not [z]sinners of the Gentiles, 16 [a]knowing that a man is not [9]justified by the works of the law but [b]by faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ and not [c]by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified.

17 "But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found [d]sinners, is Christ therefore a minister of sin? Certainly not! 18 For if I build again those things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor. 19 For I [e]through the law [f]died to the law that I might [g]live to God. 20 I have been [h]crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ lives in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh [i]I live by faith in the Son of God, [j]who loved me and gave Himself for me. 21 I do not set aside the grace of God; for [k]if righteousness comes through the law, then Christ died [l]in vain."

the poverty of which Paul speaks would be literal poverty. Others believe that these words refer to Paul's collection for the Jerusalem saints (Acts 24:17; Rom. 15:26; 1 Cor. 16:1–3; 2 Cor. 8; 9), to which the Galatians contributed (1 Cor. 16:1).

■ 2:11 Antioch. The capital of the Roman province of Syria and the largest city of that province. Antioch was home to a large Jewish community and, not surprisingly, was the first place mentioned in Acts where Jewish Christians preached the gospel to Gentiles (Acts 11:19, 20). Not only was the church at Antioch the first church in our records to bring Jewish and Gentile Christians together in worship and fellowship, but, as far as we know, it was the first church to send missionaries to preach the gospel specifically to Gentiles (Acts 13:1–3).

■ 2:12 withdrew. Many Jewish Christians resisted God's commandment that Gentiles who believed in Christ should be received without having to follow the ceremonial law (Acts 10:28; 11:2, 3, 19; 15:1). Both Peter and Barnabas (v. 13) succumbed to pressure from a group that believed that to be circumcised, that is, to become a full Jewish proselyte, was necessary for becoming a Christian.

■ 2:14 truth of the gospel. See note on v. 5.

live in the manner of Gentiles. Before the arrival of the "circumcision" group Peter had eaten freely with Gentiles (v. 12). Now, inconsistently, he was acting as if Gentiles must become Jews in order to become full members of God's people.

■ 2:15, 16 These verses are central in Galatians. Paul's point is that everyone (circumcised Jew as well as uncircumcised Gentile) is placed in a right relationship with God through faith in Jesus Christ alone. The Greek words translated "righteousness," "righteous," "justify," and "justification" are all from the same root and have related meanings.

■ 2:16 See "Faith and Works" at James 2:24. In the Old Testament, God rules and judges with perfect justice (1 Sam. 26:23), and pronounces His verdict of innocence or guilt. To "justify" is to declare to be right (Deut. 25:1). But if no one living is righteous before God (Ps. 143:2), how can there be hope of that verdict (Job 9:2)? As God is the Judge, whose verdict is final and just, so He is the Savior who can provide deliverance from His own judgment (Jon. 2:9). God's righteousness is revealed, not only as His requirement, but as His gift (Is. 45:24, 25; 54:14–17). That gift comes at last through the Messiah (Is. 53:8; Jer. 23:5, 6; 33:14–16). Paul proclaims the fulfillment of the Old Testament promise (Rom. 3:21–26). Faith receives the gift of Christ's righteousness as well as forgiveness through His atonement.

works of the law. Paul has been referring to the "works" that distinguish Jews from Gentiles (v. 15), such as circumcision, dietary restrictions, and Sabbath-keeping. His phrase, however, includes all the efforts of fallen humanity to keep God's law so as to merit His justifying verdict.

no flesh shall be justified. A near quotation of Ps. 143:2. No one can keep the law fully, so legal observances such as circumcision cannot establish a right relationship with God. Something other than the law is needed for that, and God has provided it in the gift of Christ's righteousness and the blood of His atonement. Faith does not merit God's acceptance; it accepts Christ's merit before God (Phil. 3:9).

■ 2:17 we . . . are found sinners. The Galatian agitators and the "men . . . from James" (v. 12) considered Paul a "sinner" (like the Gentiles of v. 15) for breaking the Jewish dietary food laws. They had probably also accused Paul's gospel of promoting sin (Rom. 3:8).

■ 2:18 destroyed. The Greek word translated "destroyed" is used in the New Testament to mean the tearing down of an edifice (Matt. 24:2; Mark 13:2; Luke 21:6; Rom. 14:20). Paul may be thinking of Peter's mistaken attempt to rebuild the wall between Jew and Gentile that was torn down by the gospel (v. 14; Eph. 2:14). To rebuild the wall of the law is to bring in again the condemnation of the law. The lawbreaker is not the one who turns from the law to Christ for justification; it is the one who turns back again from Christ to the law.

■ 2:19 Paul died to the law in the death of Christ; he was crucified with Christ (v. 20), for he was united to Christ who died in his place (3:13; Rom. 4:25; 5:6). So too, he was raised with Christ and lived in relation to God (Col. 2:12; 3:1). Death to the law does not violate the law, for Christ met the law's demands. It is therefore "through the law" that believers are released from the bondage and condemnation of the law. See "The Three Purposes of the Law" at Deut. 13:10.

■ 2:20 Union with Christ means that He represented us in His death and resurrection. But it means more, for it is a living union. Jesus is present with the believer; by the Spirit the Lord lives in inward fellowship with His own. Paul does not mean that the individuality of a person is suppressed or absorbed; he lives "in the flesh" by "faith." The union is a spiritual relationship of the utmost intimacy.

Justification by Faith

3 O foolish Galatians! Who has bewitched you [1]that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was clearly portrayed [2]among you as crucified? 2 This only I want to learn from you: Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law, [a]or by the hearing of faith? 3 Are you so foolish? [b]Having begun in the Spirit, are you now being made perfect by [c]the flesh? 4 [d]Have you suffered so [3]many things in vain—if indeed it was in vain?

5 Therefore He who supplies the Spirit to you and works miracles among you, does He do it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?— 6 just as Abraham [e]"believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness." 7 Therefore know that only [f]those who are of faith are sons of Abraham. 8 And [g]the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel to Abraham beforehand, saying, [h]"In you all the nations shall be blessed." 9 So then those who are of faith are blessed with believing Abraham.

The Law Brings a Curse

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse; for it is written, [i]"Cursed is everyone who does not continue in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them." 11 But that no one is [4]justified by the law in the sight of God is evident, for [j]"the just shall live by faith." 12 Yet [k]the law is not of faith, but [l]"the man who does them shall live by them."

13 [m]Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, [n]"Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree"), 14 [o]that the blessing of Abraham might come upon the [p]Gentiles in Christ Jesus, that we might receive [q]the promise of the Spirit through faith.

The Changeless Promise

15 Brethren, I speak in the manner of men: [r]Though it is only a man's covenant, yet if it is confirmed, no one annuls or adds to it. 16 Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, "And to seeds," as of many, but as of [s]one, [t]"And to your Seed," who is [u]Christ. 17 And this I say, that the law, [v]which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God [5]in Christ, [w]that it should make the promise of no effect. 18 For if [x]the inheritance is of the law, [y]it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

■ 3:1 clearly portrayed. Perhaps in Paul's preaching.

■ 3:2 Spirit. Paul appeals to the Galatians' own experience of the Holy Spirit to prove that becoming Jewish is not necessary for becoming a Christian (Acts 10:47; 11:17; 15:8).

■ 3:3 by the flesh. Perhaps Paul has in mind not simply attempting to keep the law without the Spirit (Rom. 7:7—8:17) but also the attempting to gain favor with God by cutting the flesh in circumcision (Phil. 3:2, 3). In either case, Paul warns his readers against the attempt to win salvation by performing some work. Salvation comes only through God's grace by faith in Jesus Christ (2:16).

■ 3:6 Abraham was the father of the Jews and the person with whom God first established circumcision as a covenantal sign (Gen. 17:10). Even this revered patriarch was placed in a right relationship with God by faith (Rom. 4:11). Paul reverses the charge that he is undercutting God's covenant with Abraham. The true children of Abraham share his faith, whether they are physically descended from him or not. The promise to Abraham is also a promise of blessing to the Gentiles, a blessing that must be received with faith like Abraham's.

■ 3:10 Paul's point is that no one can keep the law in its entirety, and he supports his point by quoting Deut. 27:26. Following the passage from which Paul quotes, Deuteronomy lists the curses that will fall upon Israel for disobedience. Most Jews of Paul's day realized that Israel had broken the law and had received the curses that were predicted (Deut. 28:15—30:20).

■ 3:11 See theological note "Justification and Merit."

■ 3:12 the law is not of faith. Here Paul speaks of the law as God's requirement, apart from the promise of God's covenant. Leviticus (18:5) states the requirement and predicts the failure and curse that followed (26:14–38). The promise is also repeated (26:40–45), for it is not voided (3:15–22).

■ 3:13 a curse for us. Since we broke God's covenant by violating the law, we deserve to receive the law's curse and God's condemnation. But Christ bore the law's curse in our place, giving us peace with God (Rom. 3:21–26; 4:25; 5:1–8; 2 Cor. 5:21; Col. 2:13–15; cf. Mark 10:45; John 1:29; 1 Pet. 2:24). See "The Atonement" at Rom. 3:25.

■ 3:14 the blessing of Abraham. See v. 8; Gen 12:3; "Christ the Mediator" at 1 Tim. 2:5. Believing Gentiles, whose lives are marked by the indwelling Spirit, fulfill the promise that through Abraham all nations will be blessed. The Spirit is the blessing promised to Abraham.

■ 3:15–18 God promised saving blessing to the nations through Abraham "and his Seed"—Christ, descended from Abraham in His human nature. That covenant promise was not cancelled by the later giving of the law through Moses. The law does not oppose the promises (v. 21), but assumes them. Its requirements show the hopelessness of earning salvation and point God's people to faith in Christ (v. 24).

■ 3:16 Seed. Paul is aware that the noun "seed" in the singular may be collective as well as individual (v. 29; Rom. 4:18). He is affirming that Christ is the Seed (descendant) to whom the promise finally refers. See "God's Covenant of Grace" at Gen. 12:1.

■ 3:17 four hundred and thirty years. In Ex. 12:40 this figure is given for the length of Israel's stay in Egypt. In the Greek Old Testament (Septuagint) version of Exodus, the time of the patriarchs' stay in Canaan is included in the 430 years. But Paul is not necessarily following the Septuagint in alluding to the passage. It is enough for his purpose to show that centuries passed before the law was given at Sinai (cf. Gen. 15:13; Acts 7:6).

Purpose of the Law

19 What purpose then does the law serve? [z]It was added because of transgressions, till the [a]Seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was [b]appointed through angels by the hand [c]of a mediator. 20 Now a mediator does not mediate for one only, [d]but God is one.

Justification and Merit

The doctrine of justification, the storm-center of the Reformation, was for Paul the heart of the gospel (Rom. 1:17; 3:21—5:21; Gal. 2:15—5:1), shaping his message (Acts 13:38, 39) and his devotion (2 Cor. 5:13–21; Phil. 3:4–14). Though other New Testament writers affirm the same doctrine in substance, the terms in which Protestants have affirmed and defended it for almost five centuries are drawn primarily from Paul.

Justification is God's act of pardoning sinners and accepting them as righteous for Christ's sake. In it, God puts permanently right their previously estranged relationship with Himself. This justifying sentence is God's bestowal of a status of acceptance for Jesus' sake (2 Cor. 5:21).

God's justifying judgment seems strange, for pronouncing sinners righteous may appear to be precisely the kind of unjust action by a judge that God's own law forbids (Deut. 25:1; Prov. 17:15). Yet it is a just judgment, for its basis is the righteousness of Jesus Christ. As "the last Adam" (1 Cor. 15:45), our representative head acting on our behalf, Christ obeyed the law that bound us and endured the punishment for lawlessness that we deserved, and so "merited" our justification. Our justification is on a just basis (Rom. 3:25, 26; 1 John 1:9), with Christ's righteousness reckoned to our account (Rom. 5:18, 19).

God's justifying decision is in effect the judgment of the Last Day regarding where we will spend eternity, brought forward into the present and pronounced here and now. It is a judgment on our eternal destiny; God will never go back on it, however much Satan may appeal against the verdict (Zech. 3:1; Rom. 8:33, 34; Rev. 12:10). To be justified is to be eternally secure (Rom. 5:1–5; 8:30).

The necessary means of justification is personal faith in Jesus Christ as crucified Savior and risen Lord (Rom. 4:23–25; 10:8–13). Faith is necessary because the meritorious ground of our justification is entirely in Christ. As we give ourselves in faith to Jesus, Jesus gives us His gift of righteousness, so that in the very act of "closing with Christ," as older Reformed teachers put it, we receive the divine pardon and acceptance we can find nowhere else (Gal. 2:15, 16; 3:24).

Historic Roman Catholic theology includes sanctification in the definition of justification, considered as a process rather than a single decisive event, and affirms that while faith contributes to our acceptance with God, our works of satisfaction and merit must contribute too. Catholics see baptism as conveying the sanctifying grace that first justifies us. Afterward the sacrament of penance allows supplementary merit to be achieved through works, securing justification if the grace of God's initial acceptance is lost through mortal sin. This supplementary merit does not oblige God to be gracious although it is the normal context for receiving it. On the Roman Catholic view, believers effect their own salvation with the help of the grace that flows from Christ through the church's sacramental system. The Reformers pointed out that this view of salvation undercuts the sense of confidence that only free grace can provide to those who have no merits. Paul had already showed that all people, of whatever piety, are without merit, and need a free justification if they are to be saved. A justification that needs to be completed by the recipient is no resting place. □

■ 3:19 because of transgressions. Probably in order to define sin specifically as sin against God's explicitly stated will, and so to make sin that much worse (Rom. 5:13, 20).

Seed. In Gen. 17:19 God promises Abraham a son, Isaac, and says that He will establish a covenant with Isaac and his "descendants" (a singular noun in Hebrew that may also be translated "seed"). Paul regards this use of a singular noun as a pointer to Jesus who healed the broken covenant between God and His chosen people.

through angels. See Deut. 33:2; Acts 7:53; Heb. 2:2.

■ 3:20 mediator. Moses mediated between God and Israel when God made His covenant with Israel at Mount Sinai (Ex. 19—34). The promise given to Abraham, however, required no mediator and therefore takes precedence over the covenant at Sinai.

God is one. See Deut. 6:4. God's covenant with Abraham, because it did not involve a mediator, demonstrated God's unity and sovereignty more perfectly than the covenant at Sinai. The fulfillment of God's covenant with Abraham by the inclusion of the Gentiles in the people of God also demonstrates the unity of God more clearly than the Sinai covenant because it shows His sovereignty over all creation (Rom. 3:29, 30).

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? Certainly not! For if there had been a law given which could have given life, truly righteousness would have been by the law. 22 But the Scripture has confined [e]all under sin, [f]that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to those who believe. 23 But before faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, [6]kept for the faith which would afterward be revealed. 24 Therefore [g]the law was our [7]tutor to bring us to Christ, [h]that we might be justified by faith. 25 But after faith has come, we are no longer under a tutor.

Sons and Heirs

26 For you [i]are all sons of God through faith in Christ Jesus. 27 For [j]as many of you as were baptized into Christ [k]have put on Christ. 28 [l]There is neither Jew nor Greek, [m]there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all [n]one in Christ Jesus. 29 And [o]if you are Christ's, then you are Abraham's [p]seed, and [q]heirs according to the promise.

4 Now I say that the heir, as long as he is a child, does not differ at all from a slave, though he is master of all, 2 but is under guardians and stewards until the time appointed by the father. 3 Even so we, when we were children, [a]were in bondage under the elements of the world. 4 But [b]when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, [c]born[1] [d]of a woman, [e]born under the law, 5 [f]to redeem those who were under the law, [g]that we might receive the adoption as sons.

6 And because you are sons, God has sent forth [h]the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying out, [2]"Abba, Father!" 7 Therefore you are no longer a slave but a son, [i]and if a son, then an heir [3]of God [4]through Christ.

■ 3:21 Humanity's inability to keep the law, not the law itself, is the source of humanity's broken relationship with God.

against the promises of God. Paul strongly denies this mistaken conclusion from his argument. The law could be in competition with the gospel only if it could impart life by delivering sinners from its own condemnation. Although the law is good and shows what is pleasing to God (Lev. 18:5; Rom. 7:10), it was not able to give life to lawbreakers (2 Cor. 3:6). The Jews, possessing the law, were condemned by it. Scripture takes full account of this, showing that all are condemned sinners and pointing to the need for the promised Savior.

■ 3:24 tutor. A "tutor" was a slave responsible for a child's training, especially for pointing out and punishing misbehavior. Like a tutor, the law pointed out sin and punished it. Another important function of tutors was to separate and protect the child from the influence of outsiders. The law functioned in a similar way to separate Israel from the Gentiles. That function of the ceremonial law has also ended. See "The Law of God" at Ex. 20:1.

■ 3:26 you are all sons of God. We are adopted "sons" because we are united to the true Son, Jesus Christ. Baptism seals that union with Christ. It is a vital union; Christ lives in us (2:20). It is also a representative union; Christ died and lives for us (Rom. 6:5–11). To be clothed with Christ implies both, in that His righteousness is our covering, and we are a new creation in Christ (Rom. 13:14; Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10).

■ 3:28 you are all one in Christ Jesus. The wall of separation between Jew and Gentile is removed for those united to Christ: all in Christ are Abraham's seed (Eph. 2:14–16; Col. 3:11). Indeed, no human distinctions avail as advantages in the matter of salvation. Paul does not obliterate these distinctions, such as those between the sexes, but indicates they give no preferential status in terms of our union with Christ. Until Christ returns, the created order remains and order in the church takes account of it (1 Cor. 11:3; 14:34; 1 Tim. 2:11–14). See "The Church" at Eph. 2:19.

■ 4:1–7 Paul has compared the law to a prison warden (3:23) and a tutor (3:24 note). Now he compares its preparatory role to that of guardians or trustees of a minor. The full right reserved for one who has grown up is adoption as a son and receiving the inheritance.

■ 4:3 under the elements. The Greek phrase refers to the basic elements that make up the world; in ancient thought, these were earth, wind, water, and fire. Sometimes these elements were revered as deities governing the universe. Here Paul may be thinking especially of the sacred calendar of the law, its seasons determined by the heavenly bodies (cf. Col. 2:8, 20–22). Legalism subjected life to the control of the structures of the world.

■ 4:4 the fullness of the time. The time set by the Father (v. 2), "the ends of the ages" (1 Cor. 10:11), when the promises of God are realized.

God sent forth His Son. His eternal Son, sent to be born of a woman.

under the law. Although Christ was without sin (2 Cor. 5:21), He was born under the law, not only as One obligated to fulfill it, but also as One identified with sinners who are under the curse of the law. His death freed us from that curse (3:10–14).

■ 4:5 to redeem. The concept of redemption comes from the institution of slavery. In both the Jewish and Greco-Roman worlds, a slave could buy his freedom (or someone else could buy it for him) by paying a redemption price to his owners. The price of our redemption was paid by the Father in the blood of His Son (1 Pet. 1:17, 18), and by the Son in giving His life a ransom for many (Matt. 20:28).

those . . . under the law. Not only Jews, circumcised under the law of Moses, but also Gentiles, for both are under the curse of the law (3:13, 14).

the adoption as sons. Paul has been speaking of God's people under the law as children (Ex. 4:23; Is. 1:2). He now describes the only way in which the children become full members of the household, no longer minors. God seals our adoption by giving us the Spirit of His Son (Rom. 8:9–17). See theological note "Adoption."

■ 4:6 Abba. The Aramaic word for "Father," used by Jesus (Mark 14:6). It was natural for Jesus, God's Son in a unique sense, to use this term. Now the Spirit puts the same word on the lips of men and women who are adopted in Christ.

Adoption

The gift of justification (that is, of present acceptance by God, the world's Judge) is accompanied by the gift of adoption, that is, of becoming a child of the heavenly Father (Gal. 3:26; 4:4–7). In Paul's world, adoption was ordinarily of young adult males of good character to become heirs and maintain the family name for rich people who otherwise had no children. Paul, however, proclaims God's gracious adoption of persons of bad character to become "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8:17).

Justification is the basic blessing on which adoption is founded; adoption is the crowning blessing for which justification clears the way. Adopted status belongs to all who receive Christ (John 1:12). In and through Christ God loves His adopted children as He loves His only begotten Son, and will share with them the glory that is Christ's now (Rom. 8:17, 38, 39). Believers are under God's fatherly care and discipline (Matt. 6:26; Heb. 12:5–11). They are to pray to God as their own Father in heaven (Matt. 6:5–13), imitate His virtues (Matt. 5:44–48; 6:12, 14, 15; 18:21–35; Eph. 4:32—5:2), and trust His fatherly love (Matt. 6:25–34), thus expressing the filial instinct that the Holy Spirit has implanted in them (Rom. 8:15–17; Gal. 4:6).

Adoption and regeneration accompany each other as two aspects of the salvation that Christ brings (John 1:12, 13) but they should be distinguished. Adoption results in a new relationship, while regeneration is a change of our moral nature. Yet the connection is clear. God wants His children whom He loves to have His character, and He takes action accordingly. □ turn again. Amazingly, Paul likens the bondage of ceremonial legalism to the bondage of pagan superstition. To accept circumcision as necessary for salvation is to turn back from the liberty of grace to the bondage of the world with its times and seasons (v. 10; Col. 2:8, 20–22), whether these times be Jewish or Gentile.

■ 4:9 known by God. Their knowledge of God was not the result of their own inquiry, but the sovereign work of the One who opened their understanding. See "True Knowledge of God" at Jer. 9:24.

weak . . . elements. Before their conversion, the Galatians were subject to the "elements" of a pagan world: its false gods, its astrology, its seasonal rituals (v. 3 note).

■ 4:10 Paul may be referring to the observance of Jewish festivals. The Jewish agitators among the Galatians probably required not only circumcision for salvation but also adoption of the whole law, including the food laws and religious festivals.

■ 4:12 become like me, for I became like you. In order to bring the gospel to the Gentile Galatians, Paul had to leave behind the legal restrictions of the Mosaic ceremonial law that forbade Jewish interaction with Gentiles (1 Cor. 9:19–23). Paul became "like" the Galatians in freedom from the law and he now encourages them to be "like" him in freedom from legalistic bondage.

You have not injured me. Paul's positive characterization of his previous relationship with the Galatian Christians (developed further in vv. 13–16) contains an implicit plea for good relations to continue. Paul's depth of concern for the Galatians is evident throughout this section.

■ 4:13 because of physical infirmity. It is not known what Paul suffered from. Eye difficulties (v. 15; 6:11), as well as malaria and epilepsy, have been suggested. There may or may not be a connection with Paul's "thorn in the flesh" (2 Cor. 12:7). Paul's illness apparently made him stay longer in Galatia, where he had continuing opportunities to minister.

■ 4:17 zealously. See 6:12. The source of their zeal may have been a desire to avoid persecution, perhaps by Jewish nationalists who were not Christians and who saw the inclusiveness of the Christian movement as a threat to their cause.

■ 4:19, 20 A touching witness to the depth of Paul's feeling for those whom he brought to faith in Christ. Paul's anger in this epistle (1:6, 9; 3:1; 5:12) reflects not only the seriousness with which he regards the task of preserving the truth of the gospel, but also the love which he had for his "children" in Christ.

you, 20 I would like to be present with you now and to change my tone; for I have doubts about you.

Two Covenants

21 Tell me, you who desire to be under the law, do you not hear the law? 22 For it is written that Abraham had two sons: [w]the one by a bondwoman, [x]the other by a freewoman. 23 But he who was of the bondwoman [y]was born according to the flesh, [z]and he of the freewoman through promise, 24 which things are symbolic. For these are [7]the two covenants: the one from Mount [a]Sinai which gives birth to bondage, which is Hagar— 25 for this Hagar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and corresponds to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children— 26 but the [b]Jerusalem above is free, which is the mother of us all. 27 For it is written:

> [c]"Rejoice, O barren,
> You who do not bear!
> Break forth and shout,
> You who are not in labor!
> For the desolate has many more children
> Than she who has a husband."

28 Now [d]we, brethren, as Isaac was, are [e]children of promise. 29 But, as [f]he who was born according to the flesh then persecuted him who was born according to the Spirit, [g]even so it is now. 30 Nevertheless what does [h]the Scripture say? [i]"Cast out the bondwoman and her son, for [j]the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman." 31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman but of the free.

Christian Liberty

5 Stand[a][1] fast therefore in the liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a [b]yoke of bondage. 2 Indeed I, Paul, say to you that [c]if you become circumcised, Christ will profit you nothing. 3 And I testify again to every man who becomes circumcised [d]that he is [2]a debtor to keep the whole law. 4 [e]You have become estranged from Christ, you who attempt to be justified by law; [f]you have fallen from grace. 5 For we through the Spirit eagerly [g]wait for the hope of righteousness by faith. 6 For [h]in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision avails anything, but [i]faith working through love.

■ 4:22 two sons. The older son Ishmael was born to Hagar (Gen. 16); the younger son Isaac to Sarah (Gen. 21:1–6). Hagar was Sarah's slave.

■ 4:23 Ishmael, the son of Abraham and Hagar, was born after Abraham and Sarah despaired of having the son God had promised. Isaac was born to Sarah by a miracle long after her child-bearing years had ended. God showed that none of His promises are empty (Gen. 18:14; Luke 1:37).

■ 4:24 symbolic. Their historical occurrence has a deeper significance.

■ 4:25 Mount Sinai. The place where God established His covenant with Israel (Ex. 19—34).

corresponds to Jerusalem. In both Paul's day and our own, most Jews remain, like all unbelievers, in slavery to sin and under the curse that the covenant of Sinai pronounces upon all who disobey its conditions.

■ 4:26 Jerusalem above. Jerusalem was the city where God had set His name, the place of His dwelling in the midst of His people (Ps. 78:68, 69). The reality of God's dwelling with us was accomplished in Christ, the true temple (John 2:19). The true Jerusalem is in heaven where He is (Heb. 12:22; Rev. 21:2).

■ 4:30 the freewoman. We are not slaves to sin or under the curse of the law (Rom. 6:1—7:6).

■ 5:1 yoke. Jewish literature of the time compares the law to a yoke to which the obedient submit. Paul does not want his Gentile readers to let the law take the place of Christ in their lives (Matt. 11:29; Acts 15:10). See theological note "Christian Liberty."

■ 5:2 Regarding Christ and circumcision as necessary for salvation is the same as denying the sufficiency of Christ's death for salvation. For those set free in Christ, to be circumcised for salvation is to undertake to do what they can never do (2:21), and to reject what Christ has done for them. It is to return again to the dominion of sin and the law's curse.

■ 5:4 fallen from grace. That is, they would be renouncing God's grace by no longer relying on it. Those who are chosen in Christ will be kept from such a renunciation of the gospel, and Paul continues to have confidence that his warning will be heeded (v. 10). There may be those, however, who appear to us to be true members of Christ who will abandon the gospel (Rom. 11:22; 1 John 2:19). Scripture admonishes us, therefore, to be "diligent to make [our] call and election sure" (2 Pet. 1:10) by living in a way that demonstrates the reality of the Spirit's presence within us (5:16—6:10; Heb. 10:26, 27; 2 Pet. 1:5–11).

■ 5:5 the hope of righteousness by faith. The sure hope of righteousness by faith is in contrast to the vain hope of righteousness by legal works. The Holy Spirit gives eager anticipation of justification on the last Day because we have already been justified in Christ (Rom. 5:1–5, 9, 10). That same Spirit, imparting to us the saving benefits of our risen Savior, is our foretaste of the fulfilled heritage in glory (2 Cor. 5:5; Eph. 1:13).

■ 5:6 Paul is not arguing against circumcision itself (6:15; 1 Cor. 7:19; cf. Acts 16:3) but against the attempt to make the rite a requirement for salvation. The one who believes in Jesus Christ, and demonstrates the reality of his belief through a sanctified life, is saved. See "Faith and Works" at James 2:24.

Christian Liberty

Salvation in Christ is liberation, and the Christian life is one of liberty—Christ has set us free (Gal. 5:1; cf. John 8:32, 36). Christ's liberating action is not basically social, political, or economic improvement, as is sometimes suggested today; it is liberation from the law as a means to salvation, from the power of sin, and from superstition.

First, Christians have been set free from the law as a system of salvation. Being justified by faith in Christ, they are no longer under God's law, but under His grace (Rom. 3:19; 6:14, 15; Gal. 3:23–25). Their standing with God (the "peace" and "access" of Rom. 5:1, 2) is assured because they have been accepted and adopted in Christ. It does not, nor ever will, depend on what they do, nor will it ever be imperiled by what they fail to do. They live, not by being perfect, but by being forgiven.

Although they are fallen, human beings think they can gain a right relationship with God through disciplines of obedience, ritual, and asceticism. Without God's righteousness, they go about "seeking to establish their own righteousness"—as Paul describes the Jews (Rom. 10:3). Paul knew that this is a hopeless enterprise. No human performance is ever good enough, and there are always wrong desires in the heart, no matter how correct the outward actions are (Rom. 7:7–11; cf. Phil. 3:6). God looks at the heart first.

Far from opening the way of life, the law's work is to arouse, expose, and condemn the sin that permeates our moral lives, making us aware of its reality and consequences (Rom. 3:19; 1 Cor. 15:56; Gal. 3:10). The futility of treating the law as a system of salvation, and seeking righteousness by it, is plain (Gal. 3:10–12; 4:21–31). This futility is the bondage to the law from which Christ sets us free.

Second, Christians have been set free from sin's dominion (John 8:34–36; Rom. 6:14–23). They have been supernaturally regenerated and made alive to God through union with Christ in His death and risen life (Rom. 6:3–11). The desire of their heart now is to serve God in righteousness (Rom. 6:18, 22). Sin's dominion involves not only constant acts of disobedience, but also a constant disregard for God's moral law, rising sometimes to resentment or even hatred towards the law. Now, however, being changed in heart, motivated by thankfulness for the gift of grace, and energized by the Holy Spirit, Christians "serve in the newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter" (Rom. 7:6).

Third, Christians have been set free from superstitions, including the idea that matter and physical pleasure are intrinsically evil. Against this idea, Paul insists that Christians are free to enjoy as God's good gifts all created things (1 Tim. 4:1–5), provided we do not transgress the moral law, nor hinder our own spiritual well-being or that of others (1 Cor. 6:12, 13; 8:7–13). □

■ 5:11 still preach circumcision. Paul may be referring to his life before his conversion, or he may be refuting a false charge from his opponents that he preaches the necessity of circumcision for salvation when the Jerusalem apostles are present but leaves out that requirement when in the company of Gentiles (1:10).

offense of the cross. See 1 Cor. 1:18—2:5.

■ 5:12 cut themselves off. See text note. Paul's anger is a result of seeing young believers led astray. Jesus had some equally strong words of warning for those who dared to lead others into error (Luke 17:1, 2).

■ 5:13 liberty. Christian liberty is freedom from sin, not liberty to sin (Rom. 6:1—7:6). See "The Freedom and Bondage of the Will" at Jer. 17:9.

for the flesh, but [r]through love serve one another. 14 For [s]all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: [t]"You shall love your neighbor as yourself." 15 But if you bite and devour one another, beware lest you be consumed by one another!

Walking in the Spirit

16 I say then: [u]Walk in the Spirit, and you shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. 17 For [v]the flesh lusts against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary to one another, [w]so that you do not do the things that you wish. 18 But [x]if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law.

19 Now [y]the works of the flesh are evident, which are: [4]adultery, [5]fornication, uncleanness, lewdness, 20 idolatry, sorcery, hatred, contentions, jealousies, outbursts of wrath, selfish ambitions, dissensions, heresies, 21 envy, [6]murders, drunkenness, revelries, and the like; of which I tell you beforehand, just as I also told you in time past, that [z]those who practice such things will not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But [a]the fruit of the Spirit is [b]love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, [c]goodness, [d]faithfulness, 23 [7]gentleness, self-control. [e]Against such there is no law. 24 And those who are Christ's [f]have crucified the flesh with its passions and desires. 25 [g]If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. 26 [h]Let us not become conceited, provoking one another, envying one another.

Bear and Share the Burdens

6 Brethren, if a man is [1]overtaken in any trespass, you who are spiritual restore such a one in a spirit of [a]gentleness, considering yourself lest you also be tempted. 2 [b]Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill [c]the law of Christ. 3 For [d]if anyone thinks himself to be something, when [e]he is nothing, he deceives himself. 4 But [f]let each one examine his own work, and then he will have rejoicing in himself alone, and [g]not in another. 5 For [h]each one shall bear his own load.

Be Generous and Do Good

6 [i]Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches.

7 Do not be deceived, God is not mocked; for [j]whatever a man sows, that he will also reap.

■ 5:14 all the law. Paul's letter to the Galatians does not nullify the law. Christ fulfilled the law; He did not abolish it (Matt. 5:17). Certain provisions of the law such as its dietary requirements are no longer applicable in the new covenant, but the ethical commands of the law remain as declarations of God's will for Christian behavior (Rom. 8:2–8; 13:8–10).

love. See Rom. 13:10; 1 Cor. 13; cf. Matt. 19:19.

■ 5:16 Walk in the Spirit. The Holy Spirit's dwelling within the believer is a sign that the believer is part of God's people and an heir of the covenant promises given to Abraham (3:14; 4:6; 5:5). The Spirit's presence is also a sign that in the final day God will declare the believer righteous (5:5; 2 Cor. 1:22; 5:5).

■ 5:17 the flesh. See "Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh" at 1 Cor. 6:11. Paul says in 6:13 that the agitators in Galatia want to circumcise the Galatians in order to glory in their "flesh," and in 2:16 Paul says that by observing the law "no flesh" (that is, no one) will be justified. The word "flesh" is used at least three ways by Paul. The broadest use is a simple reference to humanness. Another use is for the physical body. The narrowest use, especially when placed in contrast to "spirit," is to refer to the sinful human nature, which includes the mind and soul. If the Galatians abandon Christ and place their confidence in the law, they will be turning back to reliance on the flesh, and thus to existence under the law's curse. There is hope as well as warning in Paul's words. Although the desires of the flesh oppose the Spirit, the desires given by the Holy Spirit deliver us from the flesh and the law.

■ 5:20 contentions . . . heresies. Paul lists gross sins that the legalists would condemn, but follows them with the very sins they were guilty of (v. 15).

■ 5:21 will not inherit the kingdom of God. One of four occurrences of this phrase in the Pauline letters (1 Cor. 6:9, 10; 15:50; cf. Eph. 5:5). Paul's point is that those who do not exhibit the graces of the Spirit (v. 22) in their lives will not take part in God's eternal kingdom.

■ 5:22 fruit of the Spirit. Paul uses the metaphor of fruit to describe the conduct of the believer in Rom. 6:22; Eph. 5:9; and Phil. 1:11. John the Baptist likewise claimed that true repentance would produce the "fruit" of concrete ethical behavior (Matt. 3:8; Luke 3:8). The love produced by the Spirit is like the love of Christ. It goes far beyond the performance of legalistic self-righteousness (Luke 10:25–37).

■ 5:24 have crucified the flesh. See 2:20; 6:14; Rom. 6:6. For the people of Christ, the Cross broke the grip of the law (2:19) and also the grip of the flesh. By faith they recognize the reality of their union with Christ in His death. So, too, they have been raised to new life in the Spirit of Christ and therefore walk in the Spirit (Col. 3:1, 3, 5).

■ 6:1 you . . . spiritual. Those who are in step with the Spirit (5:25) should reach out to the believer whom sin has ensnared, but should be cautious lest sin also ensnare them in the process.

■ 6:2 the law of Christ. This includes loving, not only one's neighbor (5:14; Matt. 22:39), but one's enemy as well (Matt. 5:43), with God's love as the model.

■ 6:4 examine his own work. Paul urges the Galatian Christians to examine themselves as individuals before God, rather than drawing false confidence from relative comparisons with others (cf. 2 Cor. 13:5, 6).

have rejoicing in himself. Lit. "have reason to boast in himself." As Paul subsequently makes clear, reason for "boasting" is not to be found in one's obedience to the law. While the Judaizers "boasted" of their success in encouraging legalism (v. 13), Paul "boasts" in the cross of Christ alone (v. 14; cf. 2 Cor. 11:16—12:10).

■ 6:5 load. This is a different Greek word from the "burden" of v. 2, signaling a shift in the metaphor. Paul encouraged Christians to help others with the "burden" of overcoming temptation (v. 2). Here Paul means that we should not take pride in how much better we are than others, for God alone is our Judge.

Glory Only in the Cross

11 See with what large letters I have written to you with my own hand! 12 As many as desire to make a good showing in the flesh, these would compel you to be circumcised, [q]only that they may not suffer persecution for the cross of Christ. 13 For not even those who are circumcised keep the law, but they desire to have you circumcised that they may boast in your flesh. 14 But God forbid that I should boast except in the [r]cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by [2]whom the world has been crucified to me, and [s]I to the world. 15 For [t]in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision avails anything, but a new creation.

Blessing and a Plea

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace and mercy be upon them, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From now on let no one trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.

18 Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

■ 6:10 The church has a responsibility to help relieve the suffering of those outside its fellowship, but it has a special responsibility to help brothers and sisters in Christ who are in need (1 Thess. 3:12).

■ 6:11 Paul sometimes dictated his letters to a secretary (Rom. 16:22) but customarily wrote the conclusion himself (1 Cor. 16:21; Col. 4:18; 2 Thess. 3:17). His "large letters" may mean that his eyesight was poor (cf. 4:15).

■ 6:12 circumcised. See note on 2:3.

may not suffer persecution. It is possible that those advocating circumcision in Galatia were doing so under pressure from extremely zealous Jewish nationalists in Judea (4:17 note).

■ 6:14 boast . . . in the cross. For a more detailed outworking of this concept, see 1 Cor. 1:18—2:5.

■ 6:15 circumcision. See note on 5:6.

a new creation. The Holy Spirit's activity in the believers' lives reverses the effects of the Fall and produces a renewed people (2 Cor. 5:17) who will eventually take their place in the new heavens and the new earth (Rev. 21:1).

■ 6:16 Israel of God. This phrase may refer to the newly constituted people of God, whose identifying mark is the Holy Spirit and not circumcision. Such people would include both Gentiles and Jews. But it could also refer to the "fullness" of Israel, the elect of the Jewish nation for whose salvation Paul was deeply concerned (cf. Rom. 9:1–5; 11:12, 26, 31).

■ 6:17 marks. The Greek word denotes the brands used to mark a slave as the property of a certain master. The word was also used to refer to the mark that pagan priests carried to identify the god they served. Paul uses the word to refer to the scars he received during his missionary activity (2 Cor. 11:23–25). These scars branded him as a slave of Christ (Rom. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Titus 1:1).

■ 6:18 A fitting conclusion to the letter in which Paul is most intensely concerned with God's grace. The benediction summarizes Paul's hope that among the Galatians the gospel of God's grace will triumph.

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

EPHESIANS

Author In a straightforward way this letter claims to be by Paul (1:1; 3:1). Themes and language common in his earlier letters are frequently encountered in Ephesians. The verbal similarities with Colossians are especially striking.

In the modern era, however, the question has been raised whether Paul was the author. For some, Ephesians appears to be too dependent on Colossians. Although the letter sounds like Paul, phrases tend to build and multiply more than in the earlier letters. The letter is less instructional and more prayerful. Doctrine has given way to doxology, reasoned argument to awe. Ideas that are only implicit in his earlier letters (e.g., that beyond local churches there is one worldwide church) become explicit here. Such considerations lead many to say that Ephesians was written by one of Paul's students who was attempting to develop some of Paul's ideas, especially those in Colossians.

The language and style of Ephesians certainly differ in some respects from Paul's other letters. Still, they are so like Paul that even if the letter did not bear his name, it is difficult to imagine the church ever crediting it to anyone else. Ephesians and Colossians are very similar. But those who doubt Pauline authorship do not sufficiently appreciate how awkward it is to imagine a person so anxious to imitate his teacher that he transcribes some verses from Colossians word-for-word, yet so creative that he transforms Paul's style from one of doctrine and persuasion into one of doxology and prayer, and so daring as to move dramatically beyond Paul's theology of the exalted and reigning Christ to one of a universal church.

The verbal similarities with Colossians are most easily explained by assuming that Paul wrote Ephesians shortly after completing Colossians. Paul adopted a devotional and prayerful approach as he contemplated the eternal and universal significance of Christ's church, thus continuing his reflections on the subject that dominated his correspondence with the Colossians—the eternal and universal significance of Christ Himself.

Date and Occasion The imprisonment mentioned in 3:1 and 6:20 is the same as that referred to in Col. 4:3, 10, 18, and is probably Paul's two-year house arrest in Rome (A.D. 60–62) recounted in Acts 28.

Ephesus was the capital of the Roman province of Asia on the west coast of Asia Minor. It lay between the eastern and western halves of the Roman Empire and was among the top five cities of the empire in the first century. It was important to the spread of Christianity. During Paul's unusually long stay in Ephesus, it became the center for evangelizing the western part of Asia Minor (Acts 19:10). Paul's affectionate ties with this church are revealed in his farewell speech to its elders (Acts 20:16–38).

Ephesus' most prominent civic monument was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, the temple of the goddess Diana. In one inscription, the city describes itself as the "nurturer" of the goddess, and the goddess in turn makes Ephesus the "most glorious" of the Asian cities. People from the area would appreciate the irony of Paul's words about Christ nourishing His own body, the church (5:29). They would appreciate the point of contrast when Paul describes Christ's church as a "glorious" or radiant bride (5:27). It is also in Ephesus that Paul's preaching of Christ comes into dramatic conflict with an important trade dependent on pagan worship (Acts 19:23–41), and that the gospel inspires a great turning away from the occult (Acts 19:17–20). Paul's call to expose the deeds of darkness (5:8–14) and prepare for war against "spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places" (6:12) would strike the original readers with special force.

The letter probably had a broader audience than Ephesus alone. Some of the oldest Greek manuscripts do not include "in Ephesus" in the address of the letter (1:1), reading instead: "to the saints who are also faithful in Christ Jesus." Several early Christian writers seem unaware of a specifically Ephesian address. The letter lacks the personal references and greetings Paul almost always includes in his correspondence. At the same time, no manuscripts name any other city as the address of the epistle. Many scholars believe Ephesians was written as a general letter to a number of churches in the region. This would be in keeping with the sweeping contents of the letter as a whole.

It is likely that Paul originally sent the letter to Ephesus, but as the letter was sent from church to church the address was omitted because the contents had little to do with Ephesus in particular. Or it may be that the letter was originally in two forms, one for the Ephesians and one for general circulation.

Characteristics and Themes Like the letter to the Romans, Ephesians provides a special view into Paul's thought, since he had the luxury of addressing an important issue without the distraction of having to settle a local controversy. The focus of Ephesians is the mystery of the church.

The church is God's new humanity, a colony where the Lord of history has established a foretaste of the renewed unity and dignity of the human race (1:10–14; 2:11–22; 3:6, 9–11; 4:1—6:9). The church is a community where God's power to reconcile people to Himself is experienced and shared in transformed relationships (2:1–10; 4:1–16; 4:32—5:2; 5:22—6:9). It is a new temple, a building of people, grounded in the sure revelation of what God has done in history (2:19–22; 3:17–19). The church is an organism where power and authority are exercised after the pattern of Christ (1:22; 5:25–27), and its stewardship is a means of serving Him (4:11–16; 5:22—6:9). The church is an outpost in a dark world (5:3–17), looking for the day of final redemption. Above all, the church is the bride preparing for the approach of her lover and husband (5:22–32). □

1 PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God,

To the saints who are in Ephesus, and faithful in Christ Jesus:

2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 [a]2 Cor. 1:3
4 [b]Rom. 8:28 [c]1 Pet. 1:2

■ 1:3–14 One long sentence in Greek, this is an expansion of the condensed praise of God's purpose in Rom. 8:28–30. Praise goes to the Father who elects (vv. 4–6), the Son who redeems (vv. 7–12), and the Spirit who seals (vv. 13, 14). Paul reflects on believers' election from eternity, their forgiveness in the present, and their inheritance in the future. Key throughout is the repetition of the phrases "in Christ" or "in Him," referring to the intimate union God has established between Christ and His people.

■ 1:3 in the heavenly places. Two of the other five instances where this phrase appears in Ephesians have a bearing on its meaning here.

Christ was raised from the dead and seated at the right hand of the Father "in the heavenly places," from where He governs "all things to [for the sake of] the church" (v. 22). Moreover, believers have also been raised up and seated with Him "in the heavenly places" (2:6). Christ's victory over death has won believers a series of benefits for which Paul blesses the Father.

■ 1:4 He chose us in Him. See "Election and Reprobation" at Rom. 9:18. Paul rejoices that God chooses people for a relationship with Himself (Rom. 8:29–33; 9:6–26; 11:5, 7, 28; 16:13; Col. 3:12; 1 Thess. 1:4; 2 Thess. 2:13; Titus 1:1). Some suggest "in Him" means God foresaw who would have faith in Christ and elected them. Not only does this add a thought that is not in the text, but elsewhere Paul teaches that the very state of being "in Christ" is something to which one is chosen (1 Cor. 1:26–31). Paul says explicitly that the ground of God's predestinating love is His own good pleasure (vv. 5, 10; cf. Deut. 7:7, 8), not anything we have done or will do (Rom. 9:11, 16). "In Him" means that God's choice always had in view a fallen people in union with their Redeemer (2 Tim. 1:9). See also 1 Pet. 1:18–21; Rev. 13:8.

holy and without blame. See 5:27; Col. 1:22. God intends to bring His elect all the way from spiritual death in sin (2:1–5) to the forgiveness of sins in Christ (1:7), and finally to the elimination of all sin from their experience (Rom. 8:29, 30).

in love. If "in love" belongs with the preceding phrase, it helps explain the nature of the holiness and blamelessness to which believers are called; this is consistent with the use of the phrase elsewhere in Ephesians (3:17; 4:2, 15, 16; 5:2). If it belongs with v. 5, the phrase explains predestination not simply as a matter of God's decision, but as an act of His love (Hos. 11:1). This understanding is probably better. It is consistent with 2:4, 5.

■ 1:5 adoption. See Rom. 8:14–17, 29; Gal. 3:26, 27; "Adoption" at Gal. 4:5.

■ 1:6 The thought of God's almighty love leads to an extravagant outpouring of praise (vv. 12, 14) to God, who has not only the power but the will to overcome all obstacles in bringing the spiritually dead into a living relationship with Himself (expanded in 2:1–10).

grace . . . accepted in the Beloved. This recalls the language of Col. 1:13, but also brings into view the Redeemer as Himself an object of God's electing love (1 Pet. 1:18–21; Rev. 13:8). The language of grace dominates vv. 6–8.

■ 1:7 See notes on Col. 1:14; 2:13.

redemption. This means deliverance, as from slavery or captivity, by paying a price or ransom. For the redemption that is yet to come, see v. 14; 4:30.

■ 1:9 mystery. See 3:3, 5, 6, 10, and notes; Col. 1:27.

■ 1:10 in . . . the fullness of the times. This does not refer simply to the future. Christ has already come to bring redemption and adoption (Gal. 4:4). By virtue of His death and resurrection, He has already assumed headship over the church, and, though behind the scenes, He already rules the universe (Acts 2:32–36; Col. 1:15–20). Still, a future emphasis dominates. The visible unity of the church is a foretaste of Christ's eventual visible rule over all things. This is why Paul stresses the unity of Jew and Gentile in the church (vv. 11–14; 2:11–22), and the practice of love among Christians (4:2, 15; 4:32—5:2, 21–23). The theme introduced here in vv. 9–12 is expanded in 3:2–12.

■ 1:11–14 Paul anticipates what he will say in 3:6 about Jews and Gentiles being "fellow heirs" of the promise in Christ. Believing Jews of Paul's day, "who first trusted in Christ" (v. 12), have become heirs by the will of God. Gentiles who have now received the same promise that was made to Israel—the gift of the Holy Spirit—have likewise become heirs to the praise of God's glory.

■ 1:11 all things . . . His will. A sweeping statement on the extent of God's will.

the Holy Spirit of promise. As Jesus says in Luke 24:49, the Holy Spirit is the promise of the Father. Remarkably, this promise is extended to Gentiles, as well as Jews, on the basis of their trusting Christ (Ezek. 36:26, 27; Joel 2:28; John 14—16; Acts 1:4, 5; 2:33, 38, 39; Gal. 3:14; 4:6).

■ 1:14 guarantee. The Spirit is not only a fulfillment of God's promise to indwell His people, but also is a guarantee that He will bring them to their final inheritance. purchased possession. The Old Testament teaches that God chose a people as His inheritance (Deut. 32:9; Ps. 33:12) and purchased them out of bondage to become a prized possession (Ex. 19:5; Deut. 7:6). Peter agrees with Paul's striking application of this idea to Gentiles as well as to Jews (1 Pet. 2:9).

■ 1:15 after I heard. See Introduction: Date and Occasion. Paul had ministered in Ephesus for over two years, but the time of writing may be as much as five years later. The church had grown considerably since then. It may be that Paul mentions people whose faith and love he knows only by report because Ephesians was a circular letter for several churches.

■ 1:18 that you may know. See "True Knowledge of God" at Jer. 9:24.

■ 1:19–23 These verses distill the New Testament's teaching on the resurrection and enthronement of Jesus (Col. 1:18 note). They also make two vital contributions to understanding Jesus' resurrection and the status of believers. First, the same power that raised Jesus from the dead is at work in believers (2:4, 5; 3:16, 17). Second, Christ enjoys His position as head over everything for the sake of the church. Not only is Christ at the most exalted position in the universe, He is there representing believers (2:6; Col. 3:3) and governing the universe for their sake. The principles of conduct in Ephesians emphasize that authority exists for the sake of service. Jesus' majestic use of power and authority in the interest of His people is the Christian's model (4:1, 2, 7–13; 4:32—5:2, 22–33). Paul reminds his Gentile readers of two specific ways Christ's power has blessed them: He brought them from death to life (2:1–10), and from alienation from God's people to inclusion with them (2:11–22).

this age . . . that which is to come. See 1 Cor. 15:24.

■ 2:1–3 The natural state of all human beings is a kind of spiritual death. This spiritual condition is universal: both Gentiles (v. 2) and Jews (v. 3) are "by nature children of wrath" (v. 3; on Paul's view of "nature" see Rom. 1). Second, they are in active rebellion against God; note the use of "walked" in regard to Gentiles in v. 2 and "conducted ourselves" in reference to Jews in v. 3. Third, they are subject to the evil rule of Satan (called in v. 2 "the prince of the power of the air"; cf. Gal. 4:3; Col. 1:13). Fourth, they are totally unable to change themselves from rebellion against God (John 3:3). Fifth, they are exposed to the just anger of God (v. 3; 5:6; Rom. 1:18–20).

■ 2:1 you He made alive. See "Regeneration: The New Birth" at John 3:3.

■ 2:4 But God. Paul paints this bleak portrait of the human situation to throw into relief God's gracious and merciful response to it.

because of His great love. God loves His people of His own will. Paul excludes any consideration of merit, effort, or ability on the part of those who come to life (cf. Deut. 7:7, 8). The hopeless condition of sinners apart from Christ that Paul has described in vv. 1–3 is the basis for understanding his teaching on God's election in 1:4–6, and on His gift of life here in vv. 4–10. Note the summary in Rom. 8:29, 30.

■ 2:5, 6 made us alive . . . raised us up . . . made us sit. These are when we were dead in trespasses, [l]made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), [6] and raised us up together, and made us sit together [m]in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, [7] that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in [n]His kindness toward us in Christ Jesus. [8] [o]For by grace you have been saved [p]through faith, and that not of yourselves; [q]it is the gift of God, [9] not of [r]works, lest anyone should [s]boast. [10] For we are [t]His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared beforehand that we should walk in them.

Brought Near by His Blood

[11] Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called [u]the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands— [12] that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. [13] But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ.

Christ Our Peace

[14] For He Himself is our peace, who has made both one, and has broken down the middle wall of separation, [15] having abolished in His flesh the enmity, that is, the law of commandments contained in ordinances, so as to create in Himself one [v]new man from the two, thus making peace, [16] and that He might [w]reconcile them both to God in one body through the cross, thereby [x]putting to death the enmity. [17] And He came and preached peace to you who were afar off and to those who were near. [18] For [y]through Him we both have access [z]by one Spirit to the Father.

historical events in the life of Christ: His resurrection from the dead and enthronement at the right hand of God. But Paul also applies them to what has happened to believers. Paul teaches a union between Christ and those who come to trust Him (1:3; Col. 3:1–4), so that what is said of the Redeemer can also be said of the redeemed. What once happened to Jesus will one day happen to believers as well (2 Cor. 4:16): they will be resurrected to glory at His return (Rom. 8:11; 1 Cor. 15). For the present, there is a new mind (4:23, 24; Rom. 12:1, 2), a new identity as God's children (Rom. 8:14–17), and a new ability to live free from the control of Satan (Rom. 8:1–4; 2 Cor. 5:17).

■ 2:7 The ground of our salvation is God's love and mercy, and its goal is the promotion of His grace and kindness (3:6 note).

■ 2:8 you have been saved. Salvation is a completed action that has a present effect. In his earlier letters Paul usually refers to salvation either as a future event (Rom. 5:9, 10) or as a present process (1 Cor. 1:18; 2 Cor. 2:15). One exception is Rom. 8:24, where Paul puts salvation in the past, but qualifies it as needing completion at Christ's return: "For we were saved in this hope."

and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. This parenthesis is thought by many to refer to the whole complex of salvation by grace through faith as a gift of God. Others, however, take "that" as referring specifically to "faith." Sinners are dependent on God's gracious gift for their believing response to Christ from the moment of conversion. Paul makes explicit here what is implicit elsewhere in the New Testament about the ultimate source of saving faith (Acts 13:48; Phil. 1:29).

■ 2:9 works. Only faith, not works, can bring us acceptance with God. But good works are the vital consequence and evidence of life with God (Titus 2:14; 3:8, 14; James 2:14–26). God chose us to make us holy sons and daughters (1:4, 5), and He has now fashioned us to be new bearers of His image (4:24), designed for the kind of life that conforms to God's character (4:1—6:20). Also see "Antinomianism" at 1 John 3:7.

■ 2:10 that we should walk in them. See 4:1; 5:2, 8, 15; note the ironic comparison with 2:2; 4:17.

■ 2:11 made in the flesh by hands. The opposite of this circumcision is the spiritual circumcision of the heart (Deut. 10:16; Jer. 4:4), applied to Gentiles as well as Jews (Rom. 2:28, 29; Phil. 3:3; Col. 2:11–13).

■ 2:12 at that time. Contrast with "But now" in v. 13; see also 5:8. In Rom. 9:3–5, Paul lists the privileges of Jews. Here he lists five disadvantages of Gentiles.

aliens . . . strangers from the covenants of promise. They were not citizens of the nation with whom God was in covenant relation. Though God's relationship with Israel included a promise to bless the nations (Gen. 12:3), Gentiles had no awareness of that hope.

without God in the world. God had revealed Himself to all humanity in nature and in the conscience. But Gentiles had suppressed what truth they did know, turning instead to idolatry (Acts 17:22–31; Rom. 1:18—2:16).

■ 2:13 in Christ Jesus . . . by the blood of Christ. There are two dimensions to Gentiles' being brought near to God. The first is their experience of spiritual union with Christ (vv. 4–10); the second is the historical basis of that experience in Christ's sacrificial death (vv. 14–16; 1:7).

far off . . . near. See v. 17.

■ 2:14–16 See 4:22–24; Col. 3:9–12 and notes.

■ 2:14 the middle wall of separation. This refers to the courts of the temple in Jerusalem. A wall separated Gentiles and Jews, and signs were posted excluding Gentiles from the inner courts where sacrifices for sin were performed.

■ 2:15 abolished . . . the law of commandments. Christ offered in His own body the final sacrifice to which the temple's sacrifices merely pointed. The ceremonial laws of the Old Testament that separated Jews and Gentiles are no longer appropriate after their fulfillment in Christ.

■ 2:17, 18 Isaiah had prophesied a day when God's peace would be proclaimed to those "far off" and "near" (Is. 57:19). Through the gospel of Christ the Spirit brings Gentiles ("you who were afar off") and Jews ("those who were near") together before the Father, in fulfillment of Isaiah's promise.

■ 2:19–22 These verses describe the reversal of the Gentile disadvantages outlined in vv. 11, 12 (cf. 3:6). The building of a new spiritual temple replaces the outmoded one in Jerusalem.

■ 2:19 no longer strangers. The kingdom of God is now international. See theological note "The Church."

■ 2:20 The foundation of God's house was laid once for all by the New Testament apostles and prophets. The cornerstone is Christ (1 Cor. 3:10, 11).

The Church

The church exists in and through Jesus Christ, and so is a distinctive New Testament reality. At the same time it is continuous with Israel, the seed of Abraham and God's covenant people. The new covenant under which the church lives (1 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 8:7–13) is a new form of the relationship in which God says to His chosen community, "I will be your God, and you shall be My people" (Jer. 7:23; 31:33; cf. Ex. 6:7).

Under the new covenant, the Old Testament priests, sacrifices, and sanctuary have been superseded by the mediation of Jesus (Heb. 1—10). Believers in Christ are the seed of Abraham and the people of God (Gal. 3:29; 1 Pet. 2:4–10). Second, the limitation of the old covenant to one nation (Deut. 7:6; Ps. 147:19, 20) is replaced by the inclusion in Christ on equal terms of believers from every nation (Eph. 2; 3; Rev. 5:9, 10). Third, the Spirit is poured out on the church, so that fellowship with Christ (1 John 1:3), ministry from Christ (John 14:18; Eph. 2:17), and foretastes of heaven (2 Cor. 1:22; Eph. 1:14) become realities in the experience of the church.

The unbelief of most Jews (Rom. 9—11) and the majority of Gentiles in the church is depicted by Paul as God's breaking off the natural branches of His olive tree (the historical covenant community) and replacing them with wild olive shoots (Rom. 11:17–24). The new covenant does not exclude Jews, and Paul taught that their general rejection of it will one day be reversed (Rom. 11:15, 23–31).

The New Testament teaches that the church is the fulfillment of the Old Testament hopes and patterns, brought about by Jesus Christ. The church is the family and flock of God (John 10:16; Eph. 2:18; 3:15; 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:2–4), His Israel (Gal. 6:16), the body and bride of Christ (Eph. 1:22, 23; 5:23–32; Rev. 19:7; 21:2, 9–27), and the temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 3:16; cf. Eph. 2:19–22).

The church is a single worshiping community, permanently gathered in the true sanctuary, the heavenly Jerusalem (Gal. 4:26; Heb. 12:22–24) and the place of God's presence. The church is one, although the worshiping community consists of the church militant—those who are still on earth—and the church triumphant—those who have died and entered glory. On earth, the church appears in its local congregations, each one a microcosm of the church as a whole. According to Paul the one church universal is the body of Christ (1 Cor. 12:12–26; Eph. 1:22, 23; 3:6; 4:4), but so is each local congregation (1 Cor. 12:27; "The Local Church" at Rev. 2:1).

The church on earth is one in Christ despite the great number of local congregations and denominations (Eph. 4:3–6). It is holy because it is consecrated to God corporately, as each Christian is individually (Eph. 2:21). It is catholic (meaning "universal") because it is worldwide. Finally, it is apostolic because it is founded on apostolic teaching (Eph. 2:20). All four qualities may be seen in Eph. 2:19–22.

There is a distinction to be drawn between the church as people see it and as God alone sees it. This difference is the historic distinction between the "visible church" and the "invisible church." "Invisible" does not mean that no part of it can be seen, but that its exact boundary is not known to us. Only God knows (2 Tim. 2:19) which members of the earthly congregations are inwardly born again, and so belong to the church as an eternal and spiritual fellowship. Jesus taught that in the organized church there would always be people who seemed to be Christians, not excluding leaders, who were nevertheless not renewed in heart and would be exposed and rejected at the Judgment (Matt. 7:15–23; 13:24–30, 36–43, 47–50; 25:1–46). There are not two churches, one visible and another hidden in heaven, but one church only, known perfectly to God and known imperfectly on earth.

The New Testament assumes that all Christians will share in the life of a local congregation, worshiping in the body, accepting its nurture and discipline (Matt. 18:15–20; Gal. 6:1), and sharing its ministry and witness. Christians who refuse to join other believers disobey God and spiritually impoverish themselves (Heb. 10:25). □

The Mystery Revealed

3 For this reason I, Paul, the prisoner of Christ Jesus for you Gentiles— [2] if indeed you have heard of the [1]dispensation of the grace of God [a]which was given to me for you, [3][b]how that by revelation [c]He made known to me the mystery (as I have briefly written already, [4] by which, when you read, you may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ), [5] which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it has now been revealed by the Spirit to His holy apostles and prophets: [6] that the Gentiles [d]should be fellow heirs, of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ through the gospel, [7] [e]of which I became a minister [f]according to the gift of the grace of God given to me by [g]the effective working of His power.

Purpose of the Mystery

[8] To me, [h]who am less than the least of all the saints, this grace was given, that I should preach among the Gentiles [i]the unsearchable riches of Christ, [9] and to make all see what is the [2]fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the ages has been hidden in God who [j]created all things [3]through Jesus Christ; [10][k]to the intent that now [l]the [4]manifold wisdom of God might be made known by the church [m]to the [5]principalities and powers in the heavenly places, [11] [n]according to the eternal purpose which He accomplished in Christ Jesus our Lord, [12] in whom we have boldness and access [o]with confidence through faith in Him. [13][p]Therefore I ask that you do not lose heart at my tribulations for you, [q]which is your glory.

Appreciation of the Mystery

[14] For this reason I bow my knees to the [r]Father [6]of our Lord Jesus Christ, [15] from whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, [16] that He would grant you, [s]according to the riches of His glory, [t]to be strengthened with might through His Spirit in [u]the inner man, [17] [v]that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; that you, [w]being rooted and grounded in love, [18] [x]may be

■ 2:21, 22 grows . . . being built. God's house grows through the continued addition and integration of people as "living stones" (1 Pet. 2:5). The house is also a temple because God Himself lives in this new building of people.

■ 3:1 Paul begins a prayer that his Gentile readers will be filled with the presence of Christ and be able to grasp the truth about their Redeemer's love and power (vv. 14–21). Paul interrupts himself to explain the nature of his own ministry and insight into the union of Jew and Gentile in Christ (vv. 2–13).

prisoner. Paul is under house arrest in Rome (Acts 28:16, 30).

■ 3:3 as I have briefly written already. See 1:9, 10.

■ 3:5 as it has now been revealed. The Old Testament's silence about Paul's mystery—the union of Jews and Gentiles in the church (v. 6)—was relative, not absolute. It was anticipated by the prophets ("Blessed is Egypt My people, and Assyria the work of My hands, and Israel My inheritance," Is. 19:25). If the idea had been altogether absent from the Old Testament, Paul could not have said, as he did in Rom. 4, that the Abrahamic covenant included all who were of a like faith with Abraham, including Gentiles. Paul told Agrippa that his proclamation of light to both Jews and Gentiles did not go beyond what had been promised by Moses and the prophets (Acts 26:22, 23).

■ 3:6 Gentiles should be fellow heirs. Although the Old Testament gives occasional glimpses of a unified human race, only in the light of Christ's sacrifice does God's plan become clear: in one magnificent act He removed the enmity between Himself and humanity and also took away the divisions that fracture humanity (2:14–18). Paul had reflected before on the unusual way God included Gentiles among His people: contrary to the rules of agriculture, the Gentiles were a wild branch grafted into a cultivated tree (Rom. 11:11–24).

■ 3:8 Compare the progression of Paul's self-description from 1 Cor. 15:9 to Eph. 3:8 to 1 Tim. 1:15, 16.

■ 3:10 the principalities . . . in the heavenly places. Paul has already mentioned "the prince of the power of the air" (2:2), and will return to the Christians' battle against their spiritual enemies in the universe (6:10–17). It is helpful here to recall Paul's recent controversy with the false teachers in Colosse. He had argued in his letter to that church that Jesus is Lord of all things, including the spirit world, and further that it is only in Jesus that heaven and earth are reconciled (Col. 1:15–20; 2:8–23). Accordingly, the establishment of peace between Jews and Gentiles in the church is a signal to all powers in the universe. For Paul, there is no deeper division in the human race than that between Jew and Gentile. That they could be united with each other in Christ displays the profound wisdom of God (Is. 55:8, 9; 1 Cor. 2:6–10), and proves even to supernatural powers that Jesus is Lord of the universe (1:20–23).

■ 3:14 bow my knees. Jews normally prayed standing (Matt. 6:5; Luke 18:11, 13). Kneeling appears to have been an expression of humility and urgency (Ezra 9:5; Luke 22:41; Acts 7:59, 60). This verse returns to the prayer Paul had begun introducing in v. 1 (note).

■ 3:15 the whole family in heaven. Or, "every family." Jewish intertestamental and rabbinic literature refers to families of angels.

■ 3:16 in the inner man. This is some of Paul's most pointed language about the work of the Holy Spirit within individuals (2 Cor. 5:17). Much of Ephesians addresses believers' corporate identity (e.g., 4:3–6, 12–16). But Christ also dwells in individual hearts. Christianity is neither a common confession to the exclusion of individual experience, nor a private piety without corporate vision.

■ 3:18 width and length and depth and height. These measures of space recall the temple image of 2:21. As the "living stones" (1 Pet. 2:5) are linked in love, God's dwelling grows and is filled with Christ Himself. God uses the love among "all the saints"—Jew and Gentile alike—to build a whole that is greater than any of its individual parts. The spatial language exalts Christ's love for His people—a love that is inclusive, inexhaustible, and self-sacrificing.

Walk in Unity

4 I, therefore, the prisoner [1]of the Lord, [2]beseech you to [a]walk worthy of the calling with which you were called, [2] with all lowliness and gentleness, with longsuffering, bearing with one another in love, [3] endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit [b]in the bond of peace. Spiritual Gifts

[7] But [i]to each one of us grace was given according to the measure of Christ's gift. [8] Therefore He says:

■ 3:20 the power that works in us. See 1:19–23; 2:5, 6. The first half of the letter climaxes as Paul considers the overwhelming power of God, who carries out His gracious (2:7) and all-wise (v. 10) plan for the reconciliation of the human race.

■ 3:21 glory. Because of the power that God has given to the church, Paul gives glory to Him.

in the church by Christ Jesus. In this letter Paul uses a variety of images to describe the mutual relationship between the church and Christ: the body and the head (1:22, 23), the reconciled and the reconciler (2:14–18; 4:3), and the bride and her groom (5:22, 33).

■ 4:1 walk. Throughout the second half of this letter, Paul unfolds the "walk," or life of good works, first mentioned in 2:10. This figure of speech for moral conduct is common in Scripture.

calling. Paul earlier spoke of a hope to which believers are called (1:18; 4:4); now he focuses on the life to which they are called. He has already provided strong indications of its shape and significance (1:4; 2:10).

■ 4:4–6 one. This word is repeated seven times in vv. 4–6—three times for Persons of the Godhead, and four times for aspects of His salvation.

■ 4:7 But to each one of us. All Christians share the grace of salvation through faith (2:5, 8). Each Christian is also given some particular gift of grace to benefit the church (Paul speaks of his own in 3:2, 8). See theological note "Gifts and Ministries."

■ 4:8 Ps. 68 celebrates God's triumphant march from Mount Sinai in the desert to Mount Zion in Jerusalem and His enthronement there. Paul regards this as prefiguring Christ's victorious ascent into heaven.

captivity captive. The spiritual forces of darkness were defeated at the Cross (Col. 2:15 and note). While Ps. 68:18 describes the victorious Lord receiving gifts from men, Paul pictures Christ as sharing His tribute with men. Paul may have thought of this psalm because it was associated with Pentecost. This was the day the ascended Christ poured out the Spirit on the church (Acts 2:32, 33).

■ 4:9 Christ came to the exalted position He now enjoys through humiliation. His incarnation was His taking on a human nature here in "the lower parts of the earth"; cf. 1:20–23; Phil. 2:1–11. This pattern of service is to be imitated by believers.

■ 4:11 apostles. In a restricted sense, those who had been with Jesus and witnessed His resurrection (or received a special revelation of the risen Jesus) and who had been commissioned by Jesus to be founders of the church (Acts 1:21, 22; 1 Cor. 15:1–9). The word was also used in a broader sense of people sent out as delegates of particular churches (2 Cor. 8:23; Phil. 2:25), though these do not appear to be the ones Paul has in mind in this passage. See 2 Cor. 1:1 note.

prophets. The New Testament prophets conveyed special revelation to the early church. Their functions included prediction, exhortation, encouragement, warning, and explanation (Acts 15:32; 21:9–11; 1 Cor. 14:3). The teaching of the New Testament prophets and apostles laid the foundation of the church (2:20), and certain aspects of their work related to that unique task have been discontinued.

evangelists. People especially gifted to proclaim the gospel (Acts 21:8; 1 Cor. 1:17).

pastors and teachers. The two words go together to refer to a single set of individuals who both shepherd and instruct God's flock. See "Pastors and Pastoral Care" at 1 Pet. 5:2.

■ 4:12, 13 It is not primarily those mentioned in v. 11 who do the work of the ministry; it is the people they equip. Effective teachers help each believer to find their own way of benefiting the rest of the church.

in love, may grow up in all things into Him who is the [t]head—Christ— [16] [u]from whom the whole body, joined and knit together by what every joint supplies, according to the effective working by which every part does its share, causes growth of the body for the edifying of itself in love.

The New Man

[17] This I say, therefore, and testify in the Lord, that you should [v]no longer walk as [6]the rest of the Gentiles walk, in the futility of their mind, [18] having their understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the [w]blindness of their heart; [19] [x]who, being past feeling, [y]have given themselves over to lewdness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

[20] But you have not so learned Christ, [21] if indeed you have heard Him and have been taught by Him, as the truth is in Jesus: [22] that you [z]put off, concerning your former conduct, the old

Gifts and Ministries

The New Testament depicts two broad types of ministry within local churches. While all Christians fulfill informal ministering roles, some held formal and official ministerial offices. Paul addressed these official ministers as "bishops and deacons" (Phil. 1:1), and sometimes referred to the "bishops" (lit. "overseers") as "elders" (Titus 1:5, 7 and notes). The "bishops" or "elders" bore primary responsibility for ruling and teaching the church (1 Tim. 5:17 note), and the "deacons" were apparently especially charged with ministering to the material needs of the believers (Acts 6:1–6; 1 Tim. 3:8 note; cf. James 2:15, 16).

It is clear, however, that these officers who oversee local churches should not restrict the informal ministries, but rather should facilitate them (Eph. 4:11–13). Conversely those who minister informally should not be defiant or disruptive, but should allow the elders to direct their ministries in ways that are orderly and edifying (i.e., strengthening and upbuilding, 1 Cor. 14:3–5, 12, 26, 40; Heb. 13:17). The body of Christ grows to maturity in faith and love as "every part does its share" (Eph. 4:16) and fulfills its particular form of service as granted by God's grace (Eph. 4:7, 12).

The word "gift" (lit. "donation") appears in connection with spiritual service only in Eph. 4:7, 8. Paul explains the phrase "He . . . gave gifts to men" (Eph. 4:8 note) as the ascended Christ giving to His church persons called to and equipped for the ministries of apostle, prophet, evangelist, pastor, and teacher (Eph. 4:11 note). Also, through the enabling ministry of these persons, Christ bestows a ministry role on every Christian. Elsewhere (Rom. 12:4–8; 1 Cor. 12—14) Paul calls the divinely given abilities to serve charismata (specific manifestations of charis, "grace," 1 Cor. 12:4) and pneumatika (specific demonstrations of the ministry of the Holy Spirit, God's pneuma, 1 Cor. 12:1).

Amid many debated questions regarding spiritual gifts in the New Testament, three certainties stand out. First, a spiritual gift is an ability to express, celebrate, display, and so communicate Christ in a way that builds up and strengthens the faith of other Christians and enlarges the church. Second, spiritual gifts may be broadly classified as either abilities of speech or of loving, practical helpfulness. In Rom. 12:6–8, Paul's list of gifts alternates between the categories: prophecy, teaching, and exhorting are gifts of speech; serving, giving, leading, and showing mercy are gifts of helpfulness. However much they differ as forms of human activity, all are of equal dignity when one properly uses the gift one has (1 Pet. 4:10, 11). Third, no Christian is without some gift of ministry (1 Cor. 12:7; Eph. 4:7). It is every believer's responsibility to find, develop, and fully use whatever capacities for service God has given. □

■ 4:16 body. Paul uses the analogy of the human body. Believers are not given gifts for their own private benefit, and no one can grow to maturity in isolation. Paul himself strives for a knowledge of the Son of God that comes to maturity only when all believers attain it as well.

■ 4:17–19 This passage closely resembles the critique of Gentile culture in Rom. 1. While the letter to the Romans shows God as giving Gentiles over to a reckless and wanton life (Rom. 1:24–31), Ephesians presents the same progression from the human side: those who have turned aside "have given themselves over" (v. 19). Similarly in Exodus God is said to harden Pharaoh's heart (e.g., Ex. 4:21; 7:3), but Pharaoh also hardens his own heart (Ex. 8:15, 32; 9:34).

■ 4:21 heard Him. That is, in the message proclaimed about Him.

as the truth is in Jesus. God has broken the cycle of death by giving them an understanding of His Son and His work on their behalf (1:13, 15).

■ 4:22–24 put off . . . be renewed . . . put on. Belonging to Christ man which grows corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, 23 and [a]be renewed in the spirit of your mind, 24 and that you [b]put on the new man which was created according to God, in true righteousness and holiness.

Do Not Grieve the Spirit

25 Therefore, putting away lying, [c]"Let each one of you speak truth with his neighbor," for [d]we are members of one another. 26 [e]"Be angry, and do not sin": do not let the sun go down on your wrath, 27 [f]nor give [7]place to the devil. 28 Let him who stole steal no longer, but rather [g]let him labor, working with his hands what is good, that he may have something [h]to give him who has need. 29 [i]Let no corrupt word proceed out of your mouth, but [j]what is good for necessary [8]edification, [k]that it may impart grace to the hearers. 30 And [l]do not grieve the Holy Spirit of God, by whom you were sealed for the day of redemption. 31 [m]Let all bitterness, wrath, anger, [9]clamor, and [n]evil speaking be put away from you, [o]with all malice. 32 And [p]be kind to one another, tenderhearted, [q]forgiving one another, even as God in Christ forgave you.

Walk in Love

5 Therefore[a] be imitators of God as dear [b]children. 2 And [c]walk in love, [d]as Christ also has loved us and given Himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God [e]for a sweet-smelling aroma.

3 But fornication and all [f]uncleanness or [g]covetousness, let it not even be named among you, as is fitting for saints; 4 [h]neither filthiness, nor [i]foolish talking, nor coarse jesting, [j]which are not fitting, but rather [k]giving of thanks. 5 For [l]this you know, that no fornicator, unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, has any [l]inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and God. 6 Let no one deceive you with empty words, for because of these things the wrath of God comes upon the sons of disobedience. 7 Therefore do not be [m]partakers with them.

Walk in Light

8 For you were once darkness, but now you are [n]light in the Lord. Walk as children of light 9 (for [o]the fruit of the [2]Spirit is in all goodness, righteousness, and truth), 10 [p]finding out what is acceptable to the Lord. 11 And have [q]no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather [3]expose them. 12 [r]For it is shameful even to speak of those things which are done by them in secret. 13 But [s]all things that are [4]exposed are made manifest by the light, for whatever makes manifest is light. 14 Therefore He says:

involves repudiating an old life and embracing a new one. The image is that of taking off fraying clothes and putting on new ones.

■ 4:25—5:5 Paul outlines six concrete ways that Christians "put off" their old lives and "put on" life in Christ: they must turn from lying to telling the truth (4:25, 26); from uncontrolled anger to self-control (4:26, 27); from stealing to useful labor (4:28); from harmful to helpful speech (4:29, 30); from bitterness to love (4:31—5:2); and from unrestrained sexual desires to a thankful acknowledgement of God's good gifts (5:3–5). In each case, Paul offers a reason for the change from old to new.

■ 4:27 Because practical unity among believers displays God's reconciling power (vv. 1–10; 2:14–16), the devil especially prizes its disruption (2:2; 6:11).

■ 4:30 do not grieve. That is, by the destructive use of speech described in v. 29. That the Holy Spirit can be saddened is an indication of His being a Person and not an impersonal force. The idea is not new to the New Testament, as is clear from Paul's quotation of the prophet Isaiah (Is. 63:10).

■ 4:32—5:2 even as God . . . as Christ also. Believers must extend to others the forgiveness and love God has extended to them. In the same way, because Israel was purchased from slavery in Egypt, they were to have a special regard for aliens, slaves, and the dispossessed in their own midst (Ex. 22:21; 23:9; Lev. 19:33, 34; Deut. 5:15). The same logic is found in Jesus' new commandment: "as I have loved you, that you also love one another" (John 13:34).

■ 5:1 as dear children. See note on Col. 3:12. A firm knowledge of God's love and of one's place in His family (1:5) motivates the self-sacrifice necessary for Christian life (cf. v. 2).

■ 5:3, 4 fitting . . . not fitting. To trivialize the sexual relationship ("coarse jesting"), or on the other hand to idolize it, is out of step with our identity as "saints." As those called out of the human race (1:4–6) to bear God's restored image (4:24), we can accept God's gifts, including sexuality, with thanksgiving, and restore them to their proper use (Prov. 5:18, 19; 1 Tim. 4:1–5; Heb. 13:4).

■ 5:6 Although the day of reckoning may be denied with "empty words" (cf. 2 Pet. 3:3, 4), God's judgment will make a final separation between "the sons of disobedience" (2:2; cf. 5:5) and God's beloved children (1:4, 5; 5:1).

■ 5:7 partakers with them. Christians must consider the fearful destiny of non-believers and refuse to join them in their folly. Instead, they should remember their status as partakers with the Jews in the promise of God in Christ (3:6).

■ 5:8 once . . . but now. See 2:11, 13. Paul wants believers to do more than abstain from the things that bring God's wrath. They should live as "children of light" (Col. 1:13 note). A result of the believers' union with Christ is that He who is "the light of the world" (John 8:12; 9:5) has made them also "the light of the world" (Matt. 5:14).

■ 5:13 for whatever makes manifest is light. Paul assumes that certain sins are so shameful that bringing them to light will shame some non-believers into repentance. The Christians' presence alone may expose sins through contrast or they may openly denounce them. Paul quotes what may be an early Christian hymn reminiscent of a number of Old Testament passages (e.g., Is. 60:1) and calling upon the spiritually dead to rise up and receive the light of Christ (cf. 2:1–10).

14 [f]"Awake, you who sleep,
Arise from the dead,
And Christ will give you light."

Walk in Wisdom

15 [u]See then that you walk [5]circumspectly, not as fools but as wise, 16 [v]redeeming the time, [w]because the days are evil.

17 [x]Therefore do not be unwise, but [y]understand [z]what the will of the Lord is. 18 And [a]do not be drunk with wine, in which is dissipation; but be filled with the Spirit, 19 speaking to one another [b]in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making [c]melody in your heart to the Lord, 20 [d]giving thanks always for all things to God the Father [e]in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, 21 [f]submitting to one another in the fear of [6]God.

Marriage—Christ and the Church

22 Wives, [g]submit to your own husbands, as to the Lord. 23 For [h]the husband is head of the wife, as also [i]Christ is head of the church; and He is the Savior of the body. 24 Therefore, just as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands [j]in everything.

25 [k]Husbands, love your wives, just as Christ also loved the church and [l]gave Himself for her, 26 that He might [7]sanctify and cleanse her [m]with the washing of water [n]by the word, 27 [o]that He might present her to Himself a glorious church, [p]not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that she should be holy and without blemish. 28 So husbands ought to love their own wives as be filled with the Spirit. While the sealing of the Spirit (1:13, 14; 4:30) is a once-for-all initiation into the Christian life, the filling of the Spirit applies to all the Christian life. This filling is not only repeatable, but is to be sought again and again. In the parallel passage in Colossians, Paul tells Christians to let the "peace of God" govern their hearts and to allow the "word of Christ" to dwell in them richly (Col. 3:15, 16). The one who is filled with the Spirit is filled with Christ and His word (John 14:16, 26; 16:12–15; 17:17).

■ 5:18 drunk with wine. This is more than a prohibition of simple drunkenness. Paul probably refers to an orgiastic form of worship such as was practiced by the cult of Dionysus (Bacchus), the god of wine. Worship of Dionysus involved drunken states in which the god was thought to enter the bodies of worshipers, inspiring prophecy and frenzied dancing and music. Such worship is "dissipation."

■ 5:19 to one another . . . to the Lord. Worship is offered to God alone. At the same time, in corporate worship there is a human audience as well since people worship together and address each other for their mutual benefit (1 Cor. 14; Heb. 10:24).

psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. See "Music in the Church" at Col. 3:16.

■ 5:21 This transitional verse is last in a series of expressions explaining the effects of being filled with the Spirit (vv. 19–21 note). Regardless of their social rank, all Christians should pattern their social behavior on the humility and kindness of Christ (4:32—5:2; cf. Luke 22:24–27; John 13:14–16). This submission "to one another" is the basis for the forms of authority in specific relationships discussed in 5:22—6:9.

■ 5:22—6:9 At least as far back as Aristotle (fourth century B.C.), Greek ethics had addressed relationships within the household in a familiar pattern: husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and slaves. Consistently, the interest was to help the male head of household learn to govern his family and slaves. In their treatment of such rules, Paul and Peter transform the question from how husbands, fathers, and masters dominate to how they can imitate the love of Christ they know in their own lives by nurturing those in their care. Simultaneously, as wives, children, and slaves define their roles in terms of service to Christ, they turn from being passive objects in a social world that devalues them, and become instead active partners with God in His plan to bring unity to a race divided by gender, age, and economics.

■ 5:22–32 Jesus gives life to a new community of love—the church, His own body. His love also defines the marriage relationship for His people. Paul teaches that the genders are complementary, and a man and a woman are equal before God. Yet in marriage the husband has leadership. This leadership is not absolute but gives the husband the initiative in marriage, to which the wife responds. Paul's understanding is grounded in the creation order (1 Cor. 11:8, 9; 1 Tim. 2:13), and he takes account of the lingering effects, even among Christians, of the Fall (1 Tim. 2:14). Redemption in Christ restores the intimacy men and women were created to enjoy in marriage.

■ 5:22 submit. A Christian wife is called to grateful acceptance of her husband's care and leadership. See theological note "The Christian Family."

as to the Lord. See v. 24.

■ 5:23 head of the wife . . . head of the church. In other passages on Christ's headship in this letter, Paul speaks of the way Christ governs the universe and the church (1:22), and serves as the source of the body's health and growth to maturity (4:14–16).

the Savior. It is especially in His role as Savior that Christ serves as the husband's model (vv. 25–27 and notes).

the body. That is, the church as His body—Christ Himself indwells the church (vv. 28–30).

■ 5:24 just as the church . . . so let the wives. The church's subjection to Christ is a revealed and heavenly order, not a natural order. Christ's disciples were His friends, not just His servants, and He died for them (John 15:12–15; cf. Luke 22:25–27).

■ 5:25 Husbands, love. The emphasis in the passage is not the husband's authority to govern, but his responsibility to love.

just as Christ . . . loved the church and gave Himself for her. Nowhere in the New Testament is Christ's self-sacrificing love applied more directly to a specific relationship as a pattern to be emulated (cf. v. 2).

■ 5:26, 27 Paul outlines in these verses the entire process to which Christ has committed Himself in His relationship with the church: He has washed her from sin and is preparing her for a glorious destiny with Himself (see text note, v. 26). Husbands are called in like manner to adapt their lives to their wives' needs, and to provide for their growth and development.

■ 5:28–32 A person's union with his or her own body is intimate and permanent, and marriage creates a similiar union (Gen. 2:24). Christ has joined the church to Himself through the bonds of the covenant He fulfilled, and this intimate union forms an analogy for Christian marriage (see 2:6 and note).

their own bodies; he who loves his wife loves himself. 29 For no one ever hated his own flesh, but nourishes and cherishes it, just as the Lord does the church. 30 For [q]we are members of His body, [s]of His flesh and of His bones. 31 [r]"For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the [s]two shall become one flesh." 32 This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church. 33 Nevertheless [t]let each one of you in particular so love his own wife as himself, and let the wife see that she [u]respects her husband.

Children and Parents

6 Children, [a]obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. 2 [b]"Honor your father and mother," which is the first commandment with promise: 3 "that it may be well with you and you may live long on the earth."

4 And [c]you, fathers, do not provoke your children to wrath, but [d]bring them up in the training and admonition of the Lord.

The Christian Family

The family is the oldest and most basic of human institutions. In both the Israelite culture of the Old Testament and the Hellenistic culture of the New Testament, the household might consist of parents and children, relatives from several generations, servants, and even friends, depending on the economic resources of the head of the family. The Bible stresses its importance as a spiritual unit and a training ground for mature adult character.

The Bible pictures a clear authority structure within the family, whereby the husband is to lead the wife and the parents are to lead the children. But just as all leadership should be a form of ministry rather than tyranny, so these domestic leadership roles must be fulfilled in love (Eph. 5:22—6:4; Col. 3:18–21; 1 Pet. 3:1–7). The fourth commandment requires the head of the household to lead his whole family in sabbath observance; the fifth requires children to respect and submit to their parents (Ex. 20:8–12; Eph. 6:1–3). Jesus Himself set an example in this as a child (Luke 2:51). Later, He fiercely opposed supposed gestures of piety that were really evasions of responsibility toward parents (Mark 7:6–13), and His own last act before death was to provide for His mother's future (John 19:25–27).

The family is to be a community of teaching and learning about God and godliness. Children must be instructed (Gen. 18:18, 19; Deut. 4:9; 6:6–8; 11:18–21; Prov. 22:6; Eph. 6:4) and encouraged to use that instruction as a basis for their lives (Prov. 1:8; 6:20). Discipline should be used as a means of corrective training to lead children beyond childish folly to self-controlled wisdom (Prov. 13:24; 19:18; 22:15; 23:13, 14; 29:15, 17). Just as there is purposeful, loving discipline in God's family (Prov. 3:11, 12; Heb. 12:5–11), so there must be in the human family.

The family is meant to function as a spiritual unit. The Old Testament Passover was a family observance (Ex. 12:3). Joshua set an example when he said, "as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD" (Josh. 24:15). Households became the units of Christian commitment in New Testament times (Acts 11:14; 16:15, 31–33; 1 Cor. 1:16). The fitness of candidates for church office was assessed by observing whether they had led their own family well (1 Tim. 3:4, 5, 12; Titus 1:6).

Building strong family life is always a priority in serving God. □

■ 6:1–3 Children have responsibility for carrying out part of Christ's plan to bring unity to the human race—this time, unity between generations. For Paul, part of what characterizes Gentile culture as standing under God's judgment is that it is marked by children's disobedience to their parents (Rom. 1:30; 2 Tim. 3:2).

■ 6:2 the first commandment with promise. The law of God has lost its power to condemn those who are in Christ (Col. 2:13, 14), and the observance of the ceremonial law is inappropriate following their fulfillment in Christ (2:15; Col. 2:16, 17). However the "weightier matters of the law" (Matt. 23:23) are revelations of God's character, and establish permanent ethical principles. One of these is that children must honor their parents.

■ 6:4 fathers. Conversely, to parents Paul stresses the responsibility of those in authority.

bring them up. The Greek suggests the idea of nurturing and helping to flourish (cf. 5:29). Parents are entrusted with the minds, feelings, and bodies of tender bearers of the divine image. Accordingly, children do not exist for parents, but parents for children—to help them come into their own personhood before God.

training. The shaping of the will through discipline.

admonition. The shaping of the mind through teaching.

Bondservants and Masters

5 [e]Bondservants, be obedient to those who are your masters according to the flesh, [f]with fear and trembling, [g]in sincerity of heart, as to Christ; 6 [h]not with eyeservice, as men-pleasers, but as bondservants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, 7 with goodwill doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men, 8 [i]knowing that whatever good anyone does, he will receive the same from the Lord, whether he is a slave or free.

9 And you, masters, do the same things to them, giving up threatening, knowing that [l]your own [j]Master also is in heaven, and [k]there is no partiality with Him.

The Whole Armor of God

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. 11 [l]Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the [2]wiles of the devil. 12 For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against [m]principalities, against powers, against [n]the rulers of [3]the darkness of this age, against spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places. 13 [o]Therefore take up the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand [p]in the evil day, and having done all, to stand.

14 Stand therefore, [q]having girded your waist with truth, [r]having put on the breastplate of righteousness, 15 [s]and having shod your feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace; 16 above all, taking [t]the shield of faith with which you will be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one. 17 And [u]take the helmet of salvation, and [v]the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; 18 [w]praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, [x]being watchful to this end with all perseverance and [y]supplication for all the saints— 19 and for me, that utterance may be given to me, [z]that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel, 20 for which [a]I am an ambassador in chains; that in it I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

20 [a]2 Cor. 5:20

■ 6:5–8 Slaves follow the example of Christ through obedient submission (Phil. 2:1–11). All believers are called to share Christ's humiliation and sufferings in this age, in order to be exalted and glorified with Him in the next (Rom. 8:17). Paul is not interested in making anyone's share of suffering greater than it has to be (1 Cor. 7:21). He also does not pretend there is an easy route around it. As slaves serve the exalted Christ, and not merely an earthly master, they do so in the new reality inaugurated by Christ (2 Cor. 5:17). Paul would insist that being owned by Christ makes all other definitions of our personhood irrelevant: "You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men" (1 Cor. 7:23). By rendering ungrudging service to their true heavenly owner, slaves can work not for their value in the marketplace, but for their value to the One who poured out His own life for them.

■ 6:9 do the same things. If masters can expect their Christian slaves to serve them willingly, slaves can expect from Christian masters to be treated the way Christ treats His own.

■ 6:10–17 The Christian duty of unity and purity is complicated by the presence of hostile spiritual powers. Christ's cross and resurrection are the devil's undoing (Col. 2:15 note), and at Christ's Second Coming, Satan's defeat will be completed (Rom. 16:20). But the peace of the Cross is experienced in the meantime in the midst of spiritual struggle. The forces of darkness are defeated, but not yet harmless.

■ 6:10 be strong . . . the power of His might. Paul uses similar terms in 1:19 to describe the power that raised Jesus from the dead. We are not encouraged to face the evil hosts of darkness in our own strength, but in the strength that raised Jesus and believers with Him (2:4–6; 3:16–19).

■ 6:11 Put on the whole armor of God. The new set of clothes (4:22–24 note) now becomes a warrior's battle gear (Col. 3:10, 12 notes).

stand. Repeated three times in vv. 11, 13, 14 (the related term "withstand" in v. 13 has the same meaning). The "walking" image of chs. 4 and 5 (4:1 note) gives way to the picture of a soldier standing firm in battle.

■ 6:12 See 1:21; 2:2; 3:10.

principalities . . . spiritual hosts. These terms all refer to powerful spiritual beings that make up the "power of the air" (2:2) ruled by Satan.

darkness. See 5:8–14.

■ 6:13 the whole armor of God. Paul combines the weapons of a Roman foot soldier with a number of Old Testament images of God, or the Messiah, as a warrior. Strikingly, what is said of God and the Messiah in the Old Testament is applied to believers.

■ 6:14 girded . . . with truth. The Roman soldier's leather belt supported and protected his lower abdomen, gathered his tunic together, and held his sword. Paul seems to have in mind the confidence that comes from certainty about the truthfulness of God's Word.

breastplate of righteousness. Believers are protected by the righteousness of Christ imputed to them (Rom. 4:6–11; Phil. 3:9), and they can stand up to the accusations of the devil; the word in Greek means "slanderer" (Rom. 8:31–34). Simultaneously, Paul sees believers taking on the righteous character of Christ (4:25; 5:9), while their growing conformity to His image gives them confidence in resisting temptation.

■ 6:15 shod your feet. Despite a clear allusion to Is. 52:7, Paul does not have in mind the barefooted messenger who takes the gospel to others. The image here is of the Roman soldier's sturdy sandals, which gave him stability and protection in battle. Ironically, the peace that comes from the gospel readies one for war against evil (2:14, 15, 17).

■ 6:16 shield of faith. The Roman shield was large enough to cover the whole body; it was made of wood, covered with hide, and bound with iron at the top and bottom. When dipped in water before a battle, it could extinguish fire arrows that had been dipped in pitch and set ablaze.

■ 6:17 helmet of salvation. For Paul, salvation is a present experience (2:8 and note) as well as a future hope (1 Thess. 5:8). The believer's final ground of confidence is the faithfulness of God to complete the salvation He has begun (Phil. 1:6).

sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. The one offensive weapon in the believer's arsenal is compared to the Roman sword, short and designed for hand-to-hand combat. See Jesus' use of Scripture in Matt. 4:1–11; Luke 4:1–13.

■ 6:18–20 The battle theme in this passage ends with an urgent call to militant prayer on behalf of all believers and on behalf of Paul's ministry. See 1:15–23 for Paul's dependence on prayer.

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

PHILIPPIANS

Author The author identifies himself as Paul (1:1), and the early church unanimously attributed this letter to him. It has many personal references, and is similar to the other Pauline writings. These facts together leave no doubt that Paul is the author.

The beginning of Paul's involvement with the church at Philippi is recorded in Acts 16. Prompted by a vision (Acts 16:6–10), Paul and his colleagues traveled to Philippi (Acts 16:12). During their brief visit, God did mighty works and a church was established (Acts 16:40), Paul's first on European soil. Paul himself returned on at least two more occasions to strengthen the believers (Acts 20:1–6; 2 Cor. 2:13).

Date and Occasion Paul writes from prison (1:12–30), but the location of the imprisonment is a matter of discussion. Some think he wrote from Ephesus, though Acts 19 says nothing of his being imprisoned during his lengthy Ephesian ministry. A stronger case can be made for his having written the letter during his imprisonment in Caesarea (Acts 23:23—26:32). But it is probable, in accord with long-standing tradition, that Paul wrote Philippians during the Roman imprisonment described in Acts 28 and that he did so toward the end of this period, around A.D. 61. His references to "the palace guard" (1:13) and "Caesar's household" (4:22) accord best with a Roman setting, and the language of 1:7–26 suggests legal proceedings at the highest level. Finally, the continuing success of Paul's ministry during his imprisonment (1:12–14) is in keeping with his freedom to preach during his confinement in Rome (Acts 28:16–31).

The city of Philippi was named for Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great. One reason for its importance is that it lay on the main road between the eastern provinces and Rome. A Roman colony populated in part by retired Roman soldiers, its inhabitants enjoyed the privileges of Roman citizenship. The absence of Old Testament quotations and Jewish names in the letter indicates that the church of Philippi was largely Gentile.

Philippians rings with joy and gratitude for the way God is carrying forward His saving work among the Philippians and for the special bond that exists between Paul and his readers. At the same time, there is a gravity to the letter. The Philippians face persecution (1:27–30) and feel the pressures exerted on them by false teachings (3:2–21). Conflicts in the church jeopardize the believers' witness to the world and their ability to withstand its assaults (1:27—2:18; 4:2, 3).

Characteristics and Themes

1. Paul's Affection for His Readers. This epistle amply attests to the special bond of love Paul felt for the Philippians (1:3–8; 4:10–19). The church at Philippi had faithfully supported Paul's ministry, and their willingness to suffer with him for Christ was a source of encouragement for Paul.

2. Joy. Even though he was in jail, Paul's letter resounds with the theme of joy. Forms of the word "joy" occur sixteen times in the letter. Paul's joy is grounded in the peace of God, the antidote to all anxiety (4:4–7).

3. The Triune God. Paul uses the word "God" to refer to the Father (1:2; 2:11; 4:20). Paul's favorite designation for Jesus Christ is "the Lord" (kyrios in Greek; see 1:2; 2:11, 19; 3:8, 20; 4:23). On the one hand, Paul affirms in this letter that the Father and the Son are identical in being. Both are divine and worship is due to both (2:6–11). In calling Jesus Christ "the Lord," Paul identifies Him with Yahweh, the God of Israel. Yet by calling the Father "God" and Jesus "the Lord," Paul shows that there is a distinction of Persons within the Godhead. Finally, the Holy Spirit is united with God the Father (3:3) and with Jesus Christ (1:19). Paul's theology is Trinitarian, confessing one God in three Persons. See "One and Three: The Trinity" at Is. 44:6.

4. The Example of Christ's Humility. The majestic "hymn to Christ" (2:6–11) offers a model for believers. Before He was incarnated ("became flesh," John 1:14), Christ Jesus was truly God. Nevertheless, He emptied Himself and took the form of a slave by abandoning His divine privileges and taking on human nature. Yet in relinquishing these privileges He did not cease to be God. Rather, Christ manifested His divine character by becoming a human being.

5. Justification by Grace Through Faith. Against those who require obedience to the Old Testament law as a way of meriting salvation, Paul stresses God's will that His people should be saved by receiving His righteousness as a gift and not by striving to establish their own. Although Paul had been scrupulous in his obedience to the law, he came to realize that his confidence in such obedience was a great sin, for it kept him from trusting God. Paul views his former boasting with disgust (3:7, 8) and Christ alone is now his confidence (3:3, 9).

6. The Christian Life. The letter is filled with instruction on practical Christianity. Just as Christ became a slave, so also the Christian becomes the slave of Christ (1:1). Only the person enslaved to Christ is free to love and serve others (2:3–5).

Paul stresses the importance of identification with Christ in His death and resurrection. As it was for Christ, suffering for the believer is the prelude to resurrection (3:10, 11). For the present, it is in the midst of ongoing struggle that the Christian experiences joy and power (3:10; 4:13).

The importance of striving toward the goal of full salvation is highlighted. Confident of God's calling, Paul pushes forward toward the heavenly prize (3:13, 14). As Christians work they realize that God is working in them (2:12, 13). Human effort is precisely the area where the power of God is manifested. □

Greeting

1 PAUL and Timothy, bondservants of Jesus Christ,

To all the saints in Christ Jesus who are in Philippi, with the [f]bishops and [a]deacons:

2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thankfulness and Prayer

3 [b]I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, 4 always in [c]every prayer of mine making request for you all with joy, 5 [d]for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now,

■ 1:1 Paul and Timothy. Timothy, present at the founding of the Philippian church (Acts 16), is known to the readers (2:22). Elsewhere Paul calls himself "an apostle" and Timothy "our brother" (2 Cor. 1:1; Col. 1:1).

bondservants. A "bondservant" is a slave. Timothy is like a son to Paul (2:22), but both are under Christ the Lord.

in Christ Jesus. One of Paul's favorite ways of describing the believer's union with Christ. This phrase occurs ten times in Philippians.

bishops and deacons. These terms designate the twofold leadership in the church at Philippi (1 Tim. 3:1–13).

■ 1:2 Grace . . . and peace. These two words, a concise expression of the effect of Christ's saving work, appear together in all thirteen of Paul's salutations. The common source of grace and peace is "God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ."

■ 1:3, 4 Paul's memory of the Philippians prompts him to pray for them frequently ("in every prayer of mine") and gratefully ("I thank my God").

■ 1:4 with joy. Joy is a dominant theme in Philippians (vv. 18, 26; 3:1; 4:4, 10). See Introduction.

■ 1:5 your fellowship. The Philippians' financial support is especially in view (4:10–20).

[6] being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun [e]a good work in you will complete it until the day of Jesus Christ; [7] just as it is right for me to think this of you all, because I have you in my heart, inasmuch as both in my chains and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel, you all are partakers with me of grace. [8] For God is my witness, how greatly I long for you all with the affection of Jesus Christ.

[9] And this I pray, that your love may abound still more and more in knowledge and all discernment, [10] that you may approve the things that are excellent, that you may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ, [11] being filled with the fruits of righteousness [f]which are by Jesus Christ, [g]to the glory and praise of God.

Christ Is Preached

[12] But I want you to know, brethren, that the things which happened to me have actually turned out for the furtherance of the gospel, [13] so that it has become evident [h]to the whole [2]palace guard, and to all the rest, that my chains are in Christ; [14] and most of the brethren in the Lord, having become confident by my chains, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

[15] Some indeed preach Christ even from envy and strife, and some also from goodwill: [16] [3]The former preach Christ from selfish ambition, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my chains; [17] but the latter out of love, knowing that I am appointed for the defense of the gospel. [18] What then? Only that in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is preached; and in this I rejoice, yes, and will rejoice.

To Live Is Christ

[19] For I know that [i]this will turn out for my deliverance through your prayer and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, [20] according to my earnest expectation and hope that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but [j]with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ will be magnified in my body, whether by life [k]or by death. [21] For to me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain. [22] But if I live on in the flesh, this will mean fruit from my labor; yet what I shall choose I [4]cannot tell. [23] [5]For I am in the gospel. The word "gospel," Paul's favorite term for his message, occurs nine times in Philippians (more, proportionately, than in any other letter). Paul and the Philippians are bound together by their common commitment to the gospel (v. 7).

from the first day. That is, since the gospel first came to Philippi (4:15; Acts 16:12–40).

■ 1:6 He . . . will complete it. The perseverance of the saints depends upon God's preserving them by grace. See "Perseverance of the Saints" at Rom. 8:30. God's saving purpose will be fulfilled on "the day of Christ" (v. 10; 2:16), when He returns in glory to raise His people from the dead (3:11, 20, 21) and to receive universal homage (2:9–11).

■ 1:7 have you in my heart. The Greek words could be rendered, "you have me in your heart." The Philippians are "partakers . . . of grace" with Paul through supporting his ministry (cf. v. 5).

defense and confirmation. The terms suggest apostolic witness during a trial (cf. v. 16; Mark 13:9–11).

■ 1:8 affection. The Greek noun, like the related verb used often of Jesus in the Gospels (e.g., Matt. 9:36; 14:14), indicates deep emotion.

■ 1:9, 10 Paul tells the Philippians not only that he prays for them (v. 4), but also the content of that prayer. Christian belief ("knowledge and all discernment") comes to expression in Christian love and in behavior that is "sincere and without offense" (cf. Col. 1:9–11). The absence of love shows that supposed knowledge is worthless (1 Cor. 13:1–3), and love is itself knowledge of the deepest kind (1 Cor. 8:1–3). The seriousness of Paul's prayer that "love may abound" among the Philippians will become more apparent in 2:1–18.

■ 1:11 Not only is the sinner justified through faith in Christ (3:9), but "the fruits of righteousness," or the righteous life that ensues, is also "by Jesus Christ" through the work of His Spirit (Gal. 5:22, 23), "to the glory and praise of God" the Father. All three Persons of the Godhead are active in the sanctification of believers.

■ 1:12 for the furtherance of the gospel. Because of Paul's imprisonment, the gospel has moved irresistibly through the palace guard and beyond.

■ 1:13 all the rest. Paul's imprisonment for Christ had become known not only to the soldiers assigned to the emperor, but also to the imperial household (cf. 4:22) and perhaps to the Roman populace beyond.

■ 1:14 brethren. Paul uses this term to address both men and women.

in the Lord. This important Pauline phrase points to the believer's union with Christ and to the divine resources available through Christ to those united with Him (4:13). The phrase occurs nine times in Philippians (counting 2:19). By means of Paul's imprisonment, the Lord strengthens and encourages the Christians to proclaim the gospel fearlessly.

■ 1:15–18 There are not rival messages, since both parties preach Christ, but opposing motives and attitudes. The motive of one group is goodwill and love for Christ, and Paul's defense of the gospel explains why they love the apostle (vv. 15, 17). The dominant motive of the other group is "selfish ambition" (v. 16), the very attitude against which Paul warns the Philippians (2:1–5). They preach Christ so that they themselves can seem important, an attitude quite different from Paul's (vv. 20, 21), and they respond to Paul's success by seeking to increase his suffering (v. 16).

■ 1:19 deliverance. Paul expects to be released from prison, but he cannot be certain of it (vv. 20–27; 2:24). God will deliver him (v. 28) through His appointed agencies, both human and divine ("your prayer" and "the Spirit of Jesus Christ").

Spirit of Jesus Christ. Paul identifies the third Person of the Trinity as the Spirit of God and as the Spirit of Christ (Rom. 8:9; Gal. 4:6).

■ 1:20 Paul's passion is neither to live nor to die, but to see Christ magnified whatever happens (2:17; cf. Rom. 12:1, 2).

■ 1:21 to live is Christ. Christ is Paul's reason for being.

to die is gain. Far from severing Paul's union with Christ, death will bring Paul into a deeper experience of that union.

■ 1:23 hard-pressed. Paul wants to be with Christ but also to remain on earth for the sake of the church. This is his dilemma. However, the outcome is in God's hands, and Paul is confident that God has further work for him to do among the Philippians (vv. 24, 25).

hard-pressed between the two, having a [l]desire to depart and be with Christ, which is [m]far better. [24] Nevertheless to remain in the flesh is more needful for you. [25] And being confident of this, I know that I shall remain and continue with you all for your progress and joy of faith, [26] that [n]your rejoicing for me may be more abundant in Jesus Christ by my coming to you again.

Striving and Suffering for Christ

[27] Only [o]let your conduct be worthy of the gospel of Christ, so that whether I come and see you or am absent, I may hear of your affairs, that you stand fast in one spirit, [p]with one mind [q]striving together for the faith of the gospel, [28] and not in any way terrified by your adversaries, which is to them a proof of perdition, but [6]to you of salvation, and that from God. [29] For to you [r]it has been granted on behalf of Christ, [s]not only to believe in Him, but also to [t]suffer for His sake, [30] [u]having the same conflict [v]which you saw in me and now hear is in me.

Death and the Intermediate State

We do not know how humans would have left this world had there been no Fall; some doubt whether they ever would have done so. But as it is, the fruit of sin and God's judgment on it brings about the separation of body and soul through bodily death (Gen. 2:17; 3:19, 22; Rom. 5:12; 8:10; 1 Cor. 15:21), making it a certainty for everyone. This separation of soul and body is a consequence of the spiritual separation from God that first brought about physical death (Gen. 2:17; 5:5) and that will be deepened after death for those who leave this world without Christ. In itself death is an enemy (1 Cor. 15:26) and a terror (Heb. 2:15).

For Christians the final terror of physical death is abolished. Jesus, the risen Savior, Himself passed through a terrible death, enduring the anger of God. He takes from us God's anger, and He lives to help us as we leave this world for the place He has prepared in the next (John 14:2, 3). Christians know that their own forthcoming death is an appointment to meet their Savior, that He will faithfully keep. Paul could say, "For to me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain." He longed "to depart and be with Christ, which is far better" (Phil. 1:21, 23), knowing that "to be absent from the body" is "to be present with the Lord" (2 Cor. 5:8).

At death the souls of believers are made perfect in holiness and enter into the worshipping life of heaven (Heb. 12:22–24). In a word, they are glorified. Some have not accepted this, but teach instead that there is a purgatorial discipline after death amounting to a further stage of sanctification. In this purgatory the soul is prepared over a period of time, to be purified for the vision of God. This doctrine is not found in the Bible. The saints living on earth at Christ's coming will be perfected morally to be with Him in the moment when their body is transformed (1 Cor. 15:51–54), and it seems that Paul, and the thief on the cross, expected the same admission to God's presence. Others say that believers pass into a soul-sleep and are unconscious between death and resurrection. The Bible, however, consistently represents the departed as conscious (Luke 16:22; 23:43; Phil. 1:23; 2 Cor. 5:8; Rev. 6:9–11; 14:13).

In itself to be without the body is a disadvantage; we live through our bodies, and to be without a body is to be limited and impoverished. Paul longs to be "clothed" with the resurrection body, and wants not at all to be "unclothed" (2 Cor. 5:4). The resurrection of the body is a distinctive Christian hope confessed by every branch of the church on earth.

Death is decisive for destiny. The Bible does not teach that after death there is another possibility of salvation for the lost (Luke 16:26; Heb. 9:27). After death, both the godly and the ungodly reap what they sowed in this world (Gal. 6:7, 8). □ be with Christ. Paul's language here sheds light on the character of the intermediate state (i.e., the condition of a person between the times of physical death and the resurrection). See theological note "Death and the Intermediate State."

■ 1:27 one spirit . . . one mind. Paul is appealing for unity among the believers.

striving. Paul urges readers not to break under the pressure of opposition, but instead to exert pressure of their own. This means proclaiming the gospel they have believed (Eph. 1:13), and living worthy of it.

■ 1:28–30 Paul offers the Philippian believers four assurances. (a) Their courage in the face of opposition is a sign of the divine judgment facing the persecutors (2 Thess. 1:5–10). (b) Their courage is also a sign of the believers' own salvation in the full, redemptive sense (Rom. 1:16; 13:11). (c) Suffering for Christ is an honor given by God (3:10). (d) Paul shares in their struggle (vv. 7–26; Acts 16:19–24; 1 Thess. 2:2), and his example can encourage them just as it does "the brethren" (v. 14).

Unity Through Humility

2 Therefore if there is any [1]consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any [a]affection and mercy, [2][b]fulfill my joy [c]by being like-minded, having the same love, being of [d]one accord, of one mind. [3][e]Let nothing be done through selfish ambition or conceit, but [f]in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than himself. [4][g]Let each of you look out not only for his own interests, but also for the interests of [h]others.

The Humbled and Exalted Christ

[5][i]Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, [6]who, [j]being in the form of God, did not consider it [2]robbery to be equal with God, [7][k]but [3]made Himself of no reputation, taking the form [l]of a bondservant, and [m]coming in the likeness of men. [8]And being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself and [n]became [o]obedient to the point of death, even the death of the cross. [9][p]Therefore God also [q]has highly exalted Him and [r]given Him the name which is above every name, [10][s]that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those in heaven, and of those on earth, and of those under the earth, [11] and [t]that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

■ 2:1–4 The poetic quality of these verses makes Paul's words especially forceful. The fourfold appeal of v. 1 (note the repeated phrase "if any") is the basis for the exhortations of vv. 2–4.

■ 2:1 consolation in Christ. In their union with the Savior they find encouragement to pursue unity with each other. To follow Christ's example, they must first be in Christ (cf. v. 5).

comfort of love. Believers are encouraged because Christ loves them (Gal. 2:20), and because they love Christ and one another (v. 2).

fellowship of the Spirit. This phrase may also be rendered "fellowship produced by the Spirit."

■ 2:2 like-minded . . . same love . . . one accord . . . one mind. The accent on unity is strong (cf. 1:27).

■ 2:3 selfish ambition. Pride is competitive by nature and tries to lift a person above others, so promoting conflicts rather than harmony (vv. 2, 14; 1:27). By contrast, humility accepts a place of service, with concern for the needs and interests of others (v. 4). Love (v. 2) is essential for humility (1:9; 1 Cor. 13:4, 5).

■ 2:5 This verse connects the exhortations (vv. 1–4) to the hymn (vv. 6–11). Addressing the pride that lies at the root of the Philippians' discord (1:27—2:4), Paul points to Christ as the supreme example of humility. But Christ is not only an example (Rom. 15:1–3; 2 Cor. 10:1); He is first of all Lord and Savior (v. 11; 3:20).

■ 2:6–11 This "hymn to Christ" may be divided into six stanzas. The first three (vv. 6–8) celebrate Christ's humiliation, the last three (vv. 9–11) His exaltation.

■ 2:6 being in the form of God. The word "form" refers to the underlying reality and not to appearance only. Jesus' being in "the form of God" means that He is divine.

not . . . robbery. This figure of speech means that something desirable was already possessed. Jesus was not trying to become God, and did not cling to the privileges that were always His.

■ 2:7 made Himself of no reputation. Lit. "emptied Himself." Christ is not said to have removed from Himself His identity as God. The phrase means that He humbled Himself, relinquishing His heavenly status, not His divine being. The nature of His self-emptying is defined in three phrases that follow ("taking . . . coming . . . being found"). See "The Humanity of Jesus" at 2 John 7.

a bondservant. That is, a slave. This language vividly expresses Christ's willingness to deprive Himself of His exalted status (v. 6 note).

the likeness of men. Christ is truly human. "Likeness" means more than similarity. In order to die (v. 8), He had to be completely human. At the same time, Paul makes a distinction between Christ and other human beings. Unlike them, He has no sin (2 Cor. 5:21). And regarding His divine nature He remains transcendent over created reality; He cannot cease to be a heavenly being even in His humiliation.

■ 2:8 in appearance as a man. Christ's "appearance" as a man was not an illusion. He revealed Himself through a complete and genuine human nature united with His divine nature in one Person, who is both human and divine.

He humbled Himself. The language here is parallel to the phrase "made Himself of no reputation" in v. 7. Each act occurs by the free exercise of Christ's own will.

obedient. Submission to the Father's will (Heb. 10:5–9) is more significant for the One who is equal with the Father (v. 6) than for anyone else. Paul's words embrace Christ's whole lifetime of obedience, while emphasizing that the supreme expression of obedience was His death.

the cross. The accent is on Christ's willingness to suffer the most shameful and painful of deaths, rather than on the atoning significance of the event (cf. Rom. 3:21–26).

■ 2:9 Therefore God. The Father's act is a direct response to Christ's obedience.

highly exalted Him. Christ is restored to the glorious status He had at the beginning but voluntarily relinquished for a time in order to become a human being (John 16:28; Heb. 2:9, 14).

■ 2:10 at the name of Jesus. This may mean "the name belonging to Jesus," i.e., "Lord" (v. 11). Paul more likely means that the utterance of the name "Jesus" is the signal that "every knee should bow" to offer Him worship and acclaim Him Lord.

■ 2:11 Lord. Christ's humility is His glory (cf. Matt. 23:12). The "name which is above every name" (v. 9) is "Lord." In the Septuagint (the Greek translation of the Old Testament), God's name is represented by the title "Lord" (Greek kyrios). Christ is now acclaimed to be what He has always been, the true God (1 John 5:20). The ascription of praise embraces both the humanity ("Jesus") and the deity ("Lord") of Christ; He is worshiped as the God-Man. See "Jesus Christ, God and Man" at John 1:14.

God the Father. Jesus Christ is the Son of the Father. So united are the Persons of the Godhead that the act of worshiping the Son glorifies the Father. Although he does so elsewhere (Rom. 8:3; Gal. 4:4), Paul does not refer to Jesus as the Son of God in Philippians.

Light Bearers

12 Therefore, my beloved, [u]as you have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, [v]work out your own salvation with [w]fear and trembling; 13 for [x]it is God who works in you both to will and to do [y]for His good pleasure.

14 Do all things [z]without [4]complaining and [a]disputing,[5] 15 that you may become blameless and [6]harmless, children of God without fault in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom you shine as [b]lights in the world, 16 holding fast the word of life, so that [c]I may rejoice in the day of Christ that [d]I have not run in vain or labored in [e]vain.

17 Yes, and if [f]I am being poured out as a drink offering on the sacrifice [g]and service of your faith, [h]I am glad and rejoice with you all. 18 For the same reason you also be glad and rejoice with me.

Timothy Commended

19 But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send [i]Timothy to you shortly, that I also may be encouraged when I know your [7]state. 20 For I have no one [j]like-minded, who will sincerely care for your state. 21 For all seek their own, not the things which are of Christ Jesus. 22 But you know his proven character, [k]that as a son with his father he served with me in the gospel. 23 Therefore I hope to send him at once, as soon as I see how it goes with me. 24 But I trust in the Lord that I myself shall also come shortly.

Epaphroditus Praised

25 Yet I considered it necessary to send to you [l]Epaphroditus, my brother, fellow worker, and [m]fellow soldier, [n]but your messenger and [o]the one who ministered to my need; 26 [p]since he was longing for you all, and was distressed because you had heard that he was sick. 27 For indeed he was sick almost unto death; but God had mercy on him, and not only on him but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow. 28 Therefore I sent him the more eagerly, that when you see him again you may rejoice, and I may be less sorrowful. 29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness, and hold such men in esteem; 30 because for the work of Christ he came close to death, [8]not regarding his life, [q]to supply what was lacking in your service toward me.

■ 2:12 Therefore. On the basis of Christ's supreme example, Paul resumes his appeal. The apostle's presence encourages the Philippians to obey, but the basic motivation is from "God who works" in them (v. 13), and their obedience will flourish in Paul's absence as well (1:27).

your own salvation. As in 1:28, this is salvation in the full, redemptive sense with particular stress on the sanctification of the believer. The sanctifying process calls for obedience to the exhortation of vv. 1–5. See "Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh" at 1 Cor. 6:11.

fear and trembling. This is awe and reverence rather than panic and alarm. The right emotions are stirred by the presence of God (v. 13), and not by questions or doubts about eternal security.

■ 2:13 God who works in you. The use of human effort (v. 12), far from violating God's will, is just what He commands for achieving His saving purpose (Eph. 2:8–10). Having invoked the example of Christ, Paul reassures the Philippians that they do not will and work on their own, but their wills and their actions are the very arenas where God's own power is working (4:13; 1 Thess. 2:13).

■ 2:14 without complaining and disputing. The Philippians must not imitate the ancient Israelites (Ex. 15:24; 16:7–9; 1 Cor. 10:10). Note also the allusion in v. 15 to Deut. 32:5. The Philippians may well have been guilty of grumbling against church leaders, as the Israelites did against Moses (v. 29; 1 Thess. 5:12, 13).

■ 2:15 that you may become. The corporate witness of a united church is in view.

blameless and harmless . . . without fault. The meanings of these terms overlap considerably. Paul describes the quality of life required of "children of God." Such persons will "shine as lights in the world," in marked contrast to their "crooked and perverse" contemporaries, but offering hope to them at the same time (cf. Matt. 5:14–16; Acts 2:40).

■ 2:16 holding fast. Paul is concerned with the Philippians' own fidelity to the gospel of Jesus Christ (1:27; 2:1–5).

the word of life. This refers to both the gospel and the ethical teachings founded on it (1:27; 4:8, 9).

I may rejoice. Paul's pride on the "day of Christ" (1:10; cf. 1:6) will be the Philippians' spiritual growth rather than his own (1:9–11).

■ 2:17 if I am being poured out. Paul here refers not to his present suffering, but to the possibility that he will die as a martyr.

drink offering. A libation normally of wine, not blood, that accompanied sacrifices.

sacrifice and service of your faith. The Philippians' gifts to Paul (4:10–20).

I am glad and rejoice. For Paul, suffering can cause joy to flourish. It is to be the same for the Philippians (v. 18).

■ 2:21 their own. This verse echoes the same thought as v. 4. Timothy's life is a model of the humility to which Paul calls his readers, and an image of Christ's own humility (vv. 5–11).

■ 2:22 as a son with his father. Timothy worked closely with Paul for Christ; both are His servants (1:1). As Christ's servant, Timothy "will sincerely care" for the welfare of others (v. 20).

■ 2:23 to send him. Amid difficult circumstances (1:29, 30), perhaps including a forthcoming trial, Paul needs a person of Timothy's character. In vv. 23, 24 Paul echoes the confidence expressed in 1:19–26.

■ 2:24 in the Lord. The plans concerning both Timothy and Paul are submitted to the divine will (v. 19).

■ 2:25 Epaphroditus. This fellow worker of Paul, like Timothy, is worthy of honor. Like Timothy and like Jesus Himself, he is a man for others. He obeys Christ by enlisting as a servant to other believers, both the Philippians (4:18) and Paul, for whose sake he risks his life (vv. 26, 27, 30).

■ 2:26 distressed. Such is the attitude of Epaphroditus that he is less concerned about his sickness than about the effect of this news on the Philippians.

All for Christ

3 Finally, my brethren, [a]rejoice in the Lord. For me to write the same things to you is not tedious, but for you it is safe.

2 [b]Beware of dogs, beware of [c]evil workers, [d]beware of the mutilation! 3 For we are [e]the circumcision, [f]who worship [1]God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh, 4 though [g]I also might have confidence in the flesh. If anyone else thinks he may have confidence in the flesh, I [h]more so: 5 circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, [i]of the tribe of Benjamin, [j]a Hebrew of the Hebrews; concerning the law, [k]a Pharisee; 6 concerning zeal, [l]persecuting the church; concerning the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

7 But [m]what things were gain to me, these I have counted loss for Christ. 8 Yet indeed I also count all things loss [n]for the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them as rubbish, that I may gain Christ 9 and be found in Him, not having [o]my own righteousness, which is from the law, but [p]that which is through faith in Christ, the righteousness which is from God by faith; 10 that I may know Him and the [q]power of His resurrection, and [r]the fellowship of His sufferings, being conformed to His death, 11 if, by any means, I may [s]attain[2] to the resurrection from the dead.

Pressing Toward the Goal

12 Not that I have already [t]attained,[3] or am already [u]perfected; but I press on, that I may lay hold of that for which Christ Jesus has also laid hold of me. 13 Brethren, I do not count myself to the same things. This refers to what Paul is about to say in vv. 2–21 (cf. v. 18). Here Paul repeats material he had previously communicated, either personally or by letter, that the Philippians might be "safe" against false teaching in the church.

■ 3:2 dogs . . . the mutilation. Paul's opponents here may be either Christians (as in Galatians) or non-Christians who champion the law of Moses and insist on circumcision as the badge of salvation (cf. Acts 15:1).

■ 3:3 we are the circumcision. In response to the Judaizers and their mistaken emphasis upon the external physical rite of circumcision, Paul asserts that Christians are the true circumcision, i.e., the spiritual Israel (Gal. 3:6—4:7).

rejoice in Christ Jesus. This stands in stark contrast to "confidence in the flesh."

flesh. As used by Paul, this term often embraces all that is natural and human. In this verse, however, the physical act of circumcision is probably in view (v. 5; Gal. 6:12–15).

■ 3:4–6 These verses list Paul's sevenfold pedigree under the law.

■ 3:5 the eighth day. Paul was circumcised in accordance with Gen. 17:12.

of Israel. See Rom. 9:3, 4; 11:1.

of the tribe of Benjamin. Paul, formerly Saul of Tarsus, may have been named for King Saul, also from Benjamin (1 Sam. 9:1, 2).

a Pharisee. Paul's life was one of scrupulous obedience to the law, both the Torah and associated Jewish traditions (Acts 22:3; 26:5; Gal. 1:14).

■ 3:6 persecuting the church. See Acts 9:13, 14; 22:4, 5; 26:9–11; 1 Cor. 15:9; Gal. 1:13, 14.

blameless. This is not a claim of sinlessness (Rom. 7:7–13), but of fidelity to the Old Testament's prescribed way of life. Paul's obedience to the law was honorable, but his resulting "confidence" (the word is repeated three times in vv. 3 and 4) was the worst of sins.

■ 3:7 what things were gain. Paul is obviously not thinking of his transgressions of the law but of his scrupulous obedience to its commands (v. 6).

I have counted loss. This decision is the more meaningful, because it is (at least in part) a virtue that he renounces, perhaps even harder than renouncing vice. Yet as Paul now grasps, the nobler one's lineage and the higher one's attainments, the greater the temptation to pride and self-confidence (Luke 18:9–14; Eph. 2:8, 9). Paul freely discards all sources of self-confidence and personal profit "for Christ."

■ 3:8 rubbish. The Greek word is graphic; it means "refuse" and was once translated "dung." Paul flings away in disgust whatever interferes with "the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord."

■ 3:9–11 Verse 9 speaks of justification, v. 10 of sanctification, and v. 11 of glorification. The sequence of privilege-death-exaltation suggests a connection with 2:6–11.

■ 3:9 not having my own righteousness. Paul now recognizes that salvation is based not upon human attainments of obedience to the law, but entirely and exclusively upon "the righteousness which is from God," given to those united with Christ (Rom. 1:16, 17; 3:21–26).

faith in Christ. Christ is the object of faith (Gal. 2:16), and now that he trusts Christ alone, Paul abandons all reliance on his own credentials (vv. 7, 8). Faith is the instrument, not the ground, of salvation, and Paul declares that we are saved "through faith," never that we are saved "on account of faith." The ground of salvation is the merit of Christ. Faith as the instrument does not provide value of its own but links us to Christ and His merit.

by faith. This phrase might be translated, "based on faith" or "upon faith." Faith receives God's gift of righteousness (Rom. 3:22; 5:17), and on the ground of this righteousness the verdict of justification is given when a person believes (Rom. 4:3; 5:1; Gal. 3:6). In this way faith and justification occur at the same time, although faith is logically first.

■ 3:10 I may know Him. This is Paul's most passionate longing (1:20–23); he speaks not merely of greater mental awareness, but of deepened personal union. The following two clauses explain how knowing Christ is presently experienced.

His resurrection. For Paul, identification with the crucified and risen Christ is fundamental to Christian living. Elsewhere (2 Cor. 4:7, 10, 11), Paul teaches that it is through participation in the sufferings of Christ that the power of Christ's resurrection is manifested in the life of the Christian. This identification with the sufferings of Christ is not exclusively in martyrdom (2:17) but for all of life.

■ 3:11 by any means. Paul recognizes that the believer's perseverance depends on the will and the working of the sovereign God (1:6; 2:13; 3:12–14, 21; cf. Heb. 6:3).

the resurrection. Sharing in Christ's suffering prepares for sharing in His glory at the resurrection from the dead (vv. 20, 21; Rom. 8:17).

■ 3:12 Not that I have already attained. The prize of salvation in its have [d]apprehended; but one thing I do, [v]forgetting those things which are behind and [w]reaching forward to those things which are ahead, [14] [x]I press toward the goal for the prize of [y]the upward call of God in Christ Jesus.

[15] Therefore let us, as many as are [z]mature, [a]have this mind; and if in anything you think otherwise, [b]God will reveal even this to you. [16] Nevertheless, to the degree that we have already [5]attained, [c]let us walk [d]by the same [6]rule, let us be of the same mind.

Our Citizenship in Heaven

[17] Brethren, [e]join in following my example, and note those who so walk, as [f]you have us for a pattern. [18] For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are [g]the enemies of the cross of Christ: [19] [h]whose end is destruction, [i]whose god is their belly, and [j]whose glory is in their shame—[k]who set their mind on earthly things. [20] For [l]our citizenship is in heaven, [m]from which we also [n]eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, [21] [o]who will transform our lowly body that it may be [p]conformed to His glorious body, [q]according to the working by which He is able even to [r]subdue all things to Himself.

4 Therefore, my beloved and [a]longed-for brethren, [b]my joy and crown, so [c]stand fast in the Lord, beloved.

Be United, Joyful, and in Prayer

[2] I implore Euodia and I implore Syntyche [d]to be of the same mind in the Lord. [3] [1]And I urge you also, true companion, help these women who [e]labored with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and the rest of my fellow workers, whose names are in [f]the Book of Life.

[4] [g]Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I will say, rejoice!

fullness has not yet been won, a point Paul emphasizes against ideas of perfectionism (cf. 1 Cor. 4:8; 2 Tim. 2:18; 1 John 1:8). Yet the saving process that will be consummated on the day of Christ (1:6, 10) and the resurrection from the dead (3:11) has already begun.

■ 3:14 the goal. The objective of Paul's striving promises a splendid trophy—salvation in all its fullness (cf. 1:28; Rom. 13:11).

the upward call of God. God has already called Paul (Rom. 8:30; Gal. 1:15). It is because "Christ Jesus has also laid hold of" Paul (v. 12) that he presses forward toward the goal of life in glory (v. 13).

■ 3:15 as many as are mature. These words may be a tribute to persons who in fact think and live maturely. Another possibility is that here Paul is speaking ironically to people who consider themselves already "perfected" (v. 12), and whose thinking Paul needs to correct.

have this mind. This refers to the teaching of vv. 12–14.

if . . . you think otherwise. These words may reinforce the preceding appeal to agree with Paul, but the repeated phrases ("have this mind . . . think") recall 2:1–5 and suggest that the apostle is also concerned that the Philippians agree among themselves.

God will reveal. Whether spiritual discernment and understanding or agreement among believers is in view, the grace of God is necessary (1:9–11). In the meantime, believers' conduct should accord with the degree of insight which God has already granted (v. 16).

■ 3:17 my example. Paul's example is the opposite of what follows in vv. 18, 19. Paul is faithful to the Cross (Gal. 6:14), Christ is his glory (v. 21; cf. v. 3), and his mind is set on heavenly things (vv. 20, 21).

■ 3:18, 19 These verses could describe all sorts of opponents (1 Cor. 1:23), including the Judaizers (vv. 2–6; Gal. 2:15–21). Paul may be thinking especially of persons who conceive of Christ as pure spirit, and who scorn the idea of His bringing salvation by means of the Incarnation and a "body of His flesh" that could die (Col. 1:22). Such persons consider themselves to be living on an exalted spiritual plane, which frees them to enjoy sensual pleasures, whether food ("whose god is their belly") or sex ("whose glory is in their shame"; cf. 1 Cor. 6:9, 10).

■ 3:18 weeping. Paul weeps, not because he fears someone can undo what Christ has done, but because of the destruction in store for opponents of the gospel. This destiny (v. 19) completes the destructive process initiated by their own sin (Rom. 1:18–32; Gal. 6:7, 8).

■ 3:20 our citizenship. Just as Philippi was a Roman colony (Acts 16:12), the church is a colony of heaven.

we also eagerly await. This anticipation is a counterpart to the longing of 1:23. All other instances of this verb in Paul's epistles have a similar focus (Rom. 8:19, 23, 25; 1 Cor. 1:7; Gal. 5:5).

■ 3:21 transform our lowly body. In the face of a contempt for the physical (vv. 18, 19 note), Paul celebrates Christ's transformation of our bodies (cf. 1 Cor. 15:50–53). See "Resurrection and Glorification" at 1 Cor. 15:21.

conformed to His glorious body. Christ Himself rose bodily from the grave, the "firstfruits" of a great harvest (1 Cor. 15:20–23). As the Father vindicated Christ's obedience (2:6–11), so too the believers' faithfulness in affliction will end in the glorious resurrection prepared for them.

subdue all things. See 1 Cor. 15:20–28.

■ 4:1 so stand fast. Paul may be anticipating the exhortations that follow, especially the difficult ones of vv. 2 and 3. This helps to explain the presence of so many terms of affection in v. 1. The challenge to "stand fast" harks back to 1:27 (where the same command occurs), and rests immediately upon the declaration of hope in 3:20, 21. Paul is thinking of Christ's return when he calls his readers a "joy" and "crown" (1 Thess. 2:19, 20).

■ 4:2 I implore. Paul pleads rather than commands, and by addressing each woman in turn strengthens the appeal.

Euodia . . . Syntyche. These women are mentioned only here in the New Testament. They are courageous fellow workers of Paul and apparently persons of influence in the church.

the same mind. Paul's main concern is not that they should agree with each other, as is sometimes suggested, but that they should both have the attitude commended in 2:2.

■ 4:3 companion. The Greek word (syzygos) may be a proper name.

with Clement. The name occurs only here in the New Testament.

Book of Life. The names of all God's elect are inscribed in this book (Rev. 3:5; 20:15).

■ 4:4 Rejoice. The theme of joy is prominent in Philippians. The command to rejoice can always be obeyed, even in the midst of conflict, ad-

5 Let your [2]gentleness be known to all men. [h]The Lord is at hand.
6 [i]Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with [j]thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God; 7 and [k]the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

Meditate on These Things

8 Finally, brethren, whatever things are [l]true, whatever things are [m]noble, whatever things are [n]just, [o]whatever things are pure, whatever things are [p]lovely, whatever things are of good report, if there is any virtue and if there is anything praiseworthy—meditate on these things. 9 The things which you learned and received and heard and saw in me, these do, and [q]the God of peace will be with you.

Philippian Generosity

10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly that now at last [r]your[3] care for me has flourished again; though you surely did care, but you lacked opportunity. 11 Not that I speak in regard to need, for I have learned in whatever state I am, [s]to be content: 12 [t]I know how to [4]be abased, and I know how to [5]abound. Everywhere and in all things I have learned both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. 13 I can do all things [u]through [6]Christ who strengthens me.

14 Nevertheless you have done well that [v]you shared in my distress. 15 Now you Philippians know also that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, [w]no church shared with me concerning giving and receiving but you only. 16 For even in Thessalonica you sent aid once and again for my necessities. 17 Not that I seek the gift, but I seek [x]the fruit that abounds to your account. 18 Indeed I [7]have all and abound. I am full, having received from [y]Epaphroditus the things sent from you, [z]a sweet-smelling aroma, [a]an acceptable sacrifice, well pleasing to God. 19 And my God [b]shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus. 20 [c]Now to our God and Father be glory forever and ever. Amen.

versity, and deprivation, because joy rests not on favorable circumstances, but "in the Lord." Paul uses repetition to emphasize this truth.

■ 4:5 gentleness. The Greek word denotes the generous spirit that rises above offenses, or a forbearing spirit, of which Jesus provides the supreme example (2 Cor. 10:1). Such a person does not insist on his rights (2:1–4). Only such persons learn the secret of joy.

The Lord is at hand. This may be understood temporally, looking to Christ's coming as a future event (3:20, 21), and taking hope from this. Or Paul may also be speaking of Christ's abiding presence with those united to Him (1:1).

■ 4:6 Be anxious for nothing. Although the same word is used in 2:20 of a loving concern for others, here it denotes an anxiety that is incompatible with trust in God. The word is translated "worry" in Matt. 6:25.

in everything. Paul's language is deliberately all-inclusive; there are no restrictions on applying it.

prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving . . . requests. The four terms used here make up two couplets. Paul is not defining separate types of prayers. Rather, the cluster of words shows what importance he attaches to the practice of prayer. Presenting requests in prayer provides an outlet for anxiety (1 Pet. 5:7). Doing so "with thanksgiving" is itself an antidote to worry.

■ 4:7 peace of God. This is the direct answer to the prayer of anxiety. Things that cannot be fully comprehended can nonetheless be peacefully experienced by those who are "in Christ" (1:1; cf. Eph. 3:18, 19).

■ 4:8 Concluding these exhortations, Paul calls his readers to a life of obedience, the right response to the peace of God. The virtues listed are not exhaustive but representative, and they come to expression in countless ways (note the repeated "whatever things"). Thinking on such things is not an end in itself, but preparation for purposeful action (v. 9).

the God of peace. An even richer promise than "the peace of God" (v. 7). Its fulfillment depends on obedience.

■ 4:10–20 Paul returns to a theme of ch. 1—the Philippians' partnership in the gospel (1:5), especially their financial support.

■ 4:10 you lacked opportunity. Paul adds a qualification, lest they think he is rebuking them.

■ 4:11–13 These verses do not deny the reality of Paul's need, but rather testify that he is content to live both in plenty and in want.

■ 4:13 I can do all things. Relying on Christ's power and following His example (2:5; 3:10), Paul is able to face all circumstances with contentment. He wants to impress the same lesson on his readers (vv. 6, 7, 19).

■ 4:14 The qualifications of vv. 10–13 call for the restatement of Paul's gratitude for their assistance to him in his time of real need (1:17).

■ 4:15, 16 Even before Paul left Macedonia, the Philippians were repeatedly generous to him.

■ 4:15 in the beginning of the gospel. That is, upon the arrival of the gospel in Philippi (1:5).

when I departed. Paul left Macedonia to go to Achaia during his second missionary journey (Acts 16:40—18:18).

■ 4:17, 18 As is made emphatically clear in v. 18, Paul is amply supplied and wants to place no further strain on the church's resources. Yet the main cause of Paul's rejoicing (v. 10) is not that his needs have been fully met. Rather he perceives that the Philippians' gifts are an act of worship pleasing to God (Heb. 13:15, 16), and he knows that God will richly bless them in return (2 Cor. 9:6). See "Pleasing God" at 1 Thess. 2:4.

■ 4:19 all your need. This refers to material and spiritual needs (vv. 6, 7). The promise is for those who are in Christ Jesus (v. 21; 1:1).

■ 4:21 every saint. This recalls 1:1.

brethren. Here, as elsewhere, fellow-believers of both sexes. Paul frequently addresses the Philippians with this term (1:12; 3:1).

who are with me. See 1:1, 14.

■ 4:22 All the saints greet you. This points to the corporate unity of believers, within a single congregation and among local churches, like Philippi and Rome.

Caesar's household. Not members of the royal family, but servants in the palace, the Roman believers with whom Paul has most contact (1:13).

Amen. This word coming at the end of a sentence is a response of trust and commitment to what has been said (v. 20). It confirms the truthfulness and reliability of what has been declared.

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

COLOSSIANS

Author Colossians was written by Paul the apostle (1:1; 4:18). Though many modern scholars have doubts about Paul's authorship of this letter, compelling grounds for questioning its authenticity are lacking. The language and style are well within the range Paul displays elsewhere and, while aspects of the vocabulary of Colossians are distinctive (e.g., terms such as "fullness," "mystery," "basic principles," and "humility"), these stem largely from Paul's use of the language of his opponents in order to refute them.

That no hierarchical church order is in evidence, nor any reference to any formal authority in the church, points tellingly to the period when Paul and his associates were themselves at work in the churches they founded.

Date and Occasion Paul never visited Colosse (2:1). The church there was founded by a Colossian named Epaphras, apparently in the wake of Paul's ministry in Ephesus (A.D. 53–55), from where "all who dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks" (Acts 19:10). Some five to seven years later, the founder of the Colossian church joined Paul in prison at Rome (Acts 28; Col. 4:12, 13) to tell the apostle of a strange teaching threatening the health of his home church and to remain with Paul to pray for the churches of the Lycus Valley.

In earlier days, Colosse, a city on the Lycus River in southeastern Asia Minor, had been a prosperous and large city, enjoying a thriving wool industry and a strategic location on a main overland trade route between Ephesus one hundred miles to the west and the Euphrates some four hundred miles to the east. In Roman times, however, Colosse had declined in the face of the growth of two sister cities in the Lycus Valley: Laodicea, the district capital ten miles to the west, and Hierapolis, famous for its healing springs some twelve miles to the northwest. In Paul's day, Colosse was a fairly unimportant market town, easily the least significant city to which any of Paul's surviving letters were addressed.

Characteristics and Themes The Christians Paul addresses in this letter were struggling with a Greek-influenced form of Jewish philosophy that viewed Christians as still vulnerable to spiritual forces. It was thought that these forces needed to be placated through veneration, through some sort of asceticism of food and drink, and by honoring certain days prescribed in Old Testament ceremonial law. The epistle is designed to help Christians understand that in order for them to gain acceptance before God, they need Christ only. God has already accepted them by virtue of their union with Christ in His death and resurrection. While there is a perfection, or maturity, that still stands before them as a goal (1:22, 23, 28), they are already "complete in Him," the perfect One (2:10).

Interpretive Difficulties Paul addresses the false teaching at Colosse. Phrygia, the region in south central Asia Minor where Colosse was located, is an area with a peculiar religious history. In ancient times, the region had given birth to the worship of the goddess Cybele, whose cult (renewed during the Roman era) was characterized by ritual cleansing in the blood of a bull, ecstatic states, prophetic rapture, and inspired dancing. In the latter half of the second century A.D., Phrygia became the center of a distorted version of Christianity known as Montanism, a teaching that prized ecstatic and apocalyptic prophecy, freedom from the responsibilities of daily life, and rigorous fasts and penances for ritual purity.

Within a few years of the inception of Christianity among these Phrygians, Epaphras and Paul found that an appetite had emerged for something more than the crucified and risen Christ. It is notoriously difficult to reconstruct the false teaching to which Paul was responding because the letter is less a critique of error than a positive statement of the sufficiency of the person and work of Christ. However, certain features of the false teaching do surface.

It claimed to be a "philosophy" (2:8), a term that often in the Hellenistic age referred not to rational inquiry, but to occult speculations and practices based on a body of tradition.

The teaching appears to have been largely Jewish, as evidenced by the value placed on legal ordinances, food regulations, Sabbath and New Moon observance, and other prescriptions of the Jewish calendar (2:16). Though circumcision is mentioned, it was not necessarily seen as one of the legal requirements (2:11).

The role of angelic spirits was also an important element in this teaching. Three key factors point to this. There is stress on Christ's superiority to and victory over "dominions" and "powers" (1:16; 2:10, 15).

The phrase "basic principles of the world" (2:8, 20; cf. Gal. 4:3) also points to angelic beings. An old and popular line of interpretation views Paul arguing against the "basic principle" that life with God comes through works-righteousness. However, the letter's implied competition between Christ and spirit-beings suggests a more transcendent and sinister background. The Greek word translated "basic principles" was used in this time period to refer to gods of stars and planets, and even to the physical elements (earth, wind, fire, and water) that were thought to control the destiny of men and women. The Phrygian god Cybele and her lover Attis were transformed at some time by popular pagan piety into astral and cosmic powers.

Along this line, even some Jewish thinking merged the angels with astral powers who protect the planets. Moreover, intertestamental Jewish literature envisioned Israel caught between two kingdoms, one good and one evil, that both claimed allegiance. The victory of the good and the overthrow of the evil power was understood to be promised if Israel repented, obeyed fully, and kept the Sabbath perfectly. The Colossians appear to have come under the influence of a combination of Jewish and pagan piety presenting itself as a philosophical system and encouraging submission to these occult astral or cosmic powers.

The role of angels in the Colossian error is evident in the phrase "worship of angels" (2:18). Early Christians knew that there were angels who had been agents at creation and in the giving of the law (Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19; Heb. 2:2). The false teaching in Colosse had confused the limited and legitimate role of angels as "ministering spirits" (Heb. 1:14), with the larger role attributed to angels in some parts of Judaism, not to mention the astral powers of the Gentiles. As a means of overcoming fear of these astral or cosmic powers, and under the guise of revelations which so-called "philosophers" received in ecstatic states, the Colossians were being urged to become ascetics and to worship angels. □

Greeting

1 PAUL, [a]an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timothy our brother,

2 To the saints [b]and faithful brethren in Christ who are in Colosse:

[c]Grace to you and peace from God our Father [1]and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Their Faith in Christ

3 [d]We give thanks to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, 4 [e]since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus and of [f]your love for all the saints; 5 because of the hope [g]which is laid up for you in heaven, of which you heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel, 6 which has come to you, [h]as it has also in all the world, and [i]is bringing forth [2]fruit, as it is also among you since the day you heard and knew [j]the grace of God in truth; 7 as you also learned from [k]Epaphras, our dear fellow servant, who is [l]a faithful minister of Christ on your behalf, 8 who also declared to us your [m]love in the Spirit.

Preeminence of Christ

9 [n]For this reason we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to ask [o]that you may be filled with [p]the knowledge of His will [q]in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; 10 [r]that you may walk worthy of the Lord, [s]fully pleasing Him, [t]being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the [u]knowledge of God; 11 [v]strengthened with all might, according to His glorious power, [w]for all patience and longsuffering [x]with joy; 12 [y]giving thanks to the Father who has qualified us to be partakers of [z]the inheritance of the saints in the light. 13 He has delivered us from [a]the power of darkness [b]and [3]conveyed us into the kingdom of the Son of His love, 14 [c]in whom we have redemption [4]through His blood, the forgiveness of sins.

15 He is [d]the image of the invisible God, [e]the firstborn over all creation. 16 For [f]by Him all

■ 1:2 Timothy. See Introduction to 1 Timothy: Date and Occasion.

■ 1:4 faith in Christ Jesus. In the face of a teaching circulating in Colosse that questioned whether Christ alone could be sufficient, Paul reminds the readers through his prayer of thanksgiving that what they already have "in Christ" is enough.

■ 1:5 because of the hope. Faith, hope, and love, are central to Paul's understanding of the Christian life (Rom. 5:2–5; 1 Cor. 13:13; Gal. 5:5, 6; 1 Thess. 1:3; 5:8; cf. Heb. 10:22–24). He treats them as gifts of God rather than as virtues produced by the believers themselves. Paul emphasizes the sovereignty of God in salvation and the believers' security in their relationship with Christ (Eph. 1:4; 2:8).

■ 1:6 in all the world. See note on v. 23.

■ 1:7 Epaphras. See Introduction: Date and Occasion.

■ 1:10 fully pleasing Him. See "Pleasing God" at 1 Thess. 2:4.

■ 1:12–14 Paul expresses his gratitude for the Colossians' good beginning (vv. 3–8) and encourages them to recognize that their heavenly Father has decisively rescued them from the powers of darkness. They can therefore be thankful for the redemption they enjoy (2:7; 3:17; 4:2).

■ 1:12 qualified us. The false teaching in Colosse resulted in cowardice before the pagan supernatural beings thought to have the power to disqualify even believers from life with God (2:16, 18, 20–23). This accounts for Paul's use of "qualified" here—no power in the universe can question the credentials of those who are "in Christ" (vv. 2, 4).

■ 1:13 delivered us. This language recalls God's rescue of Israel first from slavery in Egypt and then from captivity in Babylon. Paul envisions humanity outside of Christ as being helplessly under the "power of darkness," the evil rule of Satan (cf. Eph. 2:1–3; 6:11). Believers are rescued from this world order (Gal. 1:4) and brought under the dominion and protection of God's Son. The image of light is appropriate here, for elsewhere Paul speaks of the light of the gospel shining in the darkness and penetrating the blindness of those who are perishing (2 Cor. 3:15; 4:4–6; 6:14; Eph. 5:8–14; Phil. 2:15; 1 Thess. 5:5).

the Son of His love. Note the portrayal of Jesus in the Synoptic Gospels as God's beloved son (Matt. 3:17; 17:5; Mark 1:11; 9:7; Luke 3:22), and the rich Old Testament background out of which the designation arises (Deut. 18:15; Ps. 2:7; Is. 42:1).

■ 1:14 redemption. In Rom. 8:23 Paul speaks of a bodily redemption still to be anticipated. Here redemption is understood as the forgiveness of sins and is something that has already been given (note the "once . . . now" pattern of vv. 21, 22; cf. 2:13, 17, 20; 3:9, 10). Compare Paul's approach to the Corinthians, who overemphasized the "already" of salvation and neglected what is yet to come (1 Cor. 4:8–13; ch. 15).

the forgiveness of sins. See 2:13 and note.

■ 1:15–20 Paul breaks into a doxology to the grandeur and glory of Jesus Christ. Many believe Paul is appropriating an early Christian hymn. By pointing to the supremacy of Christ both in creation (vv. 15–17) and in redemption (vv. 18–20), he points out what was missing in the false teaching at Colosse—an adequate view of the person of Christ. By doing this in a kind of hymn, he invites the readers to worship the Son of God.

■ 1:15 image of the invisible God. For Paul, belief in the deity of Christ (Rom. 9:5; Phil. 2:6; Titus 2:13) is practical. Since He is by nature God, Christ reveals the God who is otherwise invisible (1 Tim. 1:17; 6:16). The thought is also found in John 1:1–18 and Heb. 1:3. Calvin observes that "we must be careful not to look for Him anywhere else, for apart from Christ whatever offers itself to us in the name of God will turn out to be an idol" (Commentary on Col. 1:15).

the firstborn over all creation. Paul is not saying that the Son was the first created being (v. 17 note). In the Old Testament, a firstborn son would be the principal heir of an estate (Deut. 21:17; cf. Ex. 4:22; Ps. 89:27). Used of Christ, the term "firstborn" means that He has such honor and dignity, not that He was the oldest child in a family. Christ is especially loved by His Father (v. 13), and all things were created in Him, by Him, and for Him (vv. 16, 17).

■ 1:16 All things were created through Him and for Him. Because He is both agent and goal of creation, Christ is Lord of all that is, even of the angelic hierarchy which the Colossians think they must placate or revere.

things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or [g]dominions or [5]principalities or [6]powers. ■ 1:17 A strong restatement of the temporal priority and universal significance of Christ, this verse makes explicit what was implicit in v. 16: Christ existed before all creation. He is Himself not created. Nor can it be said, as followers of Arius (c. A.D. 250–336) later maintained, that "there was a time when he was not." The thought that Jesus is the moment-by-moment sustainer and unifying power of the universe is echoed in Heb. 1:2, 3.

■ 1:18 head of the body, the church. Using this theme of the second section of the hymn, Paul explains the image in Eph. 1:21–23, and works out its implications in Eph. 4:15 and 5:23.

the beginning, the firstborn from the dead. Jesus' resurrection marks the beginning of a new creation (3:10 note; 2 Cor. 5:17). As the first to rise from the dead, Christ inaugurates the new age anticipated by the Old Testament prophets (Acts 2:29–36; 13:32–35) and founds a new humanity in Himself to replace the old humanity in Adam. His own resurrection is an anticipation and a guarantee of the resurrection that all His brothers and sisters will enjoy (Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor. 15:20–28; Heb. 1:6; 12:23).

that . . . preeminence. Without detracting from the glory the preexistent Son already had with the Father, the New Testament teaches that Christ's resurrection marks out for Him a new and higher standing, and wins for Him an even greater name (Acts 13:33, 34; Rom. 1:4; Eph. 1:20–23; Phil. 2:1–11; Heb. 1:4, 5). By virtue of His resurrection from the dead, Jesus Christ is Lord of the universe that was created by Him, that He has always sustained, and which now He has redeemed.

■ 1:19 See 2:9.

■ 1:20 The high point of the hymn. Humankind's fall into sin brought with it the corruption of all creation, seen and unseen (Gen. 3; Rom. 5:12; 8:20; Eph. 2:2; 6:12). Through Christ's incarnation and atoning death, God's righteousness is satisfied (Rom. 3:21–26), peace between God and humankind is restored (2 Cor. 5:17–21), the eventual glorification of the created order is assured (Rom. 8:18–21), and the rebellious spirit beings have their powers limited (2:15 note).

■ 1:21–23 Having considered Christ's majestic role in creation and in the reconciliation and pacification of the universe, Paul returns to the Colossians themselves. Once God's enemies and alienated from His life, they have now been given peace with God (Rom. 5:1, 2).

■ 1:21 alienated . . . wicked works. The text may be taken as indicating either that mental alienation from God has a behavioral root or that mental alienation is expressed behaviorally. Paul's point is that mind and will cooperate in their rebellion against God.

■ 1:22 Christ's death in the flesh means that the reconciliation God has accomplished is not merely a matter of the universal pacification of the hostile powers; it brings with it the personal renewal and purification of those who grasp and adhere to the gospel (2:13; Rom. 5:6–11; Eph. 2:4–10).

■ 1:23 continue in the faith . . . not moved away from the hope. Saving faith is persevering and enduring faith (v. 11), anchored in hope (v. 5). But contrary to the opponents' teaching, true faith and hope are nowhere else than in Christ. This relationship with Christ is confirmed by faith and hope, rather than by rigorous ascetic disciplines.

preached to every creature. Paul can speak of one of the conditions of the consummation of the ages, the worldwide proclamation of the gospel (v. 6; Matt. 24:14; Mark 13:10), as already having been completed. Paul here is using hyperbole (literary exaggeration for emphasis). Still, by aiming his ministry at the urban centers of the Roman Empire, he understood himself to be reaching the civilized world (Acts 19:10; Rom. 15:18–25).

■ 1:24—2:5 Paul has reminded the Colossians of the cosmic scope of Christ's lordship (1:15–20) and the way Christ's redemptive work has come to bear on their lives (1:21, 23). Now he turns to his own role in God's redemptive plan and the relationship he hopes to establish between himself and the Colossians, most of whom he has not met, in order to woo them from the captivity of the so-called "philosophy" in their midst (2:8).

■ 1:24 fill up . . . what is lacking. Given the context of this passage, which stresses the total sufficiency of Christ, as well as what he says elsewhere (e.g., Rom. 3:21–26; 2 Cor. 5:17–21), Paul does not mean that Christ's saving work on the cross is deficient in some respect. Rather, because the church is called to suffer for Christ (2 Cor. 4:7–12; 1 Thess. 3:2–4), there is a divinely appointed requisite of suffering to be endured by Christians. Paul may also have in view here the sufferings which will accompany the endtimes (Matt. 24:21, 22), a period ushered in by the death and resurrection of Christ (Rom. 13:11–14; 1 Cor. 7:29). This also explains the reference to Paul's suffering for the sake of the church (Eph. 3:13; 2 Tim. 2:10). As a servant of the gospel, Paul rejoices in his opportunity to participate in the sufferings of God's people. The passage does not mean that the church is a continuing incarnation of Christ whose members by suffering add saving merit beyond what Christ achieved.

■ 1:26 mystery. In contemporary pagan religion the "mysteries" were secret insights given (usually for a fee) to a select, initiated few. With some irony Paul uses the term for the revelation God has made available freely to the nations (v. 27; 2:2; 4:3; Eph. 1:9; 3:3, 4, 9; 5:32; 6:19). In Paul's use, "mystery" refers to what once was hidden, but is now being revealed.

hidden. God's saving purpose for Gentiles was largely hidden from them prior to the coming of Christ. Previous generations were allowed to "walk in their own ways" (Acts 14:16; cf. Rom. 1:24–32; Eph. 2:12). The Old Testament revealed in shadows, signs, and hints that God would personally take up residence in His people (v. 27; Ezek. 36:25–27), and that He would create a new humanity uniting Gentiles and Jews through the Messiah (Gen. 12:3; Zech. 9:9, 10; Eph. 3:5, 6 notes).

■ 2:1 Laodicea. See Introduction: Date and Occasion. Though Paul had not visited this church either, he expected this letter to be read there (4:16).

■ 2:6, 7 A good example of Paul's pastoral style, in which the "ought" of the Christian life builds upon the "is" of having received the gift of life in Christ. Although Paul sometimes describes the good news of Jesus Christ as a tradition that can be received, his use of "tradition" does not refer to human custom or historical opinion but to the "handing over" of a divine message from God (1 Cor. 11:2; 2 Thess. 3:6). Because the Colossians will continue on the basis of what they have already come to know of Christ, their further obedience will be grounded in thankfulness (3:17) rather than in frustrated, anxious guilt (3:1 note).

■ 2:8 the basic principles of the world. See Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties.

■ 2:9, 10 A stunning rebuttal of the false teachers who encourage submission to the "basic principles" (v. 8) as a means of overcoming fears of not being acceptable before God. As outlined in the following verses, the "fullness" of God that the false teachers pretend to offer resides in Christ and is obtained only through Him (1:19, 20). See "Jesus Christ, God and Man" at John 1:14.

Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead [6]bodily; [10] and you are complete in Him, who is the [l]head of all [7]principality and power.

Not Legalism but Christ

[11] In Him you were also [m]circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, by [n]putting off the body [8]of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ, [12] [o]buried with Him in baptism, in which you also were raised with Him through [p]faith in the working of God, [q]who raised Him from the dead. [13] And you, being dead in your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He has made alive together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses, [14] [r]having wiped out the [9]handwriting of requirements that was against us, which was contrary to us. And He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross. [15] [s]Having disarmed [t]principalities and powers, He made a public spectacle of them, triumphing over them in it.

[16] So let no one [u]judge you in food or in drink, or regarding a [l]festival or a new moon or sabbaths, [17] [v]which are a shadow of things to come, but the [z]substance is of Christ. [18] Let no one cheat you of your reward, taking delight in false humility and worship of angels, intruding into those things which he has [3]not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind, [19] and not holding fast to [w]the Head, from whom all the body, nourished and knit together by joints and ligaments, [x]grows with the increase that is from God.

[20] [4]Therefore, if you [y]died with Christ from the basic principles of the world, [z]why, as though living in the world, do you subject yourselves to regulations— [21] [a]"Do not touch, do not taste, do not handle," [22] which all concern things which perish with the using—[b]according to the commandments and doctrines of men? ■ 2:11 circumcision. It is often thought that Paul mentions circumcision at this point because the false teachers in Colosse were commending it, much as those in Galatia were. However, in this letter there is no direct argument made against circumcision, as there is in Galatians. It is better to think of Paul as introducing the topic to show that something of what the Colossians are promised by the false teachers—power over the flesh (v. 23)—is already theirs in their relationship with Christ.

As the initiating rite of the old covenant, circumcision had signified cutting away sin, undergoing a change of heart, and being included in the household of faith (Deut. 10:16; 30:6; Jer. 4:4; 9:25, 26; Ezek. 44:7, 9). Dramatically, Paul says that in their baptism into Christ and into His body, these Gentiles have already been circumcised. Baptism is "the circumcision of Christ," and it signifies the washing away of sin, personal renewal by the Spirit of God, and membership in the body of Christ (cf. v. 13; Acts 2:38; Rom. 6:4; 1 Cor. 12:13; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 3:21). The passage makes an important point about the unity of the covenant of grace in both the Old and New Testament era: Gentile believers are not expected to follow the old covenant mode of identification with God and His people (Acts 15). But their faith in Christ has nevertheless made them as much children of Abraham as if they were ethnic Jewish believers (Rom. 2:28, 29; Gal. 3:26–29; Phil. 3:3). Baptism is not identical to circumcision, but it corresponds to it in essence (Rom. 4:11) and has replaced it as the sign of the covenant.

■ 2:13 forgiven you all trespasses. It is more characteristic of Paul to speak of justification than of forgiveness, and of sin in the singular than of sins in the plural (Rom. 5:12–21). His purpose here may be to emphasize that God has not only overcome sin as a general power, but He has also put away the guilt that stems from particular acts. See "Regeneration: The New Birth" at John 3:3.

■ 2:14 wiped out the handwriting. The law is compared to a certificate of indebtedness written in the debtor's own hand. Jesus was born "under the law," subject to its demands and curses (Gal. 4:4). On the cross He was "made . . . to be sin for us" (2 Cor. 5:21) and endured the law's curse against unrighteousness (Gal. 3:13). In the execution of the death sentence on Jesus when He was nailed to the cross, Paul sees the cancellation of the death warrant that stood against transgressors of the law. The believer is no longer subject to the threat of the law's condemnation.

■ 2:15 made a public spectacle. The image is of a conquering Roman general parading his vanquished and humiliated enemies behind his chariot. An invisible cosmic struggle took place at the cross, and the prince of this age was "cast out" (John 12:31), "cast to the earth" (Rev. 12:9), and "bound" (Rev. 20:2; see also Matt. 12:29; Luke 10:18). Through Jesus' death for sinners, Satan was robbed of his power to intimidate and control people through the threat of death and eternal separation from God (Ezek. 18; Rom. 5:12; 6:23; Heb. 2:14, 15). The struggle with Satan and his legions will not see its conclusion until the Lord's return in glory (2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 6:10–18; 1 Pet. 5:8), but the devil's power is broken. As Luther sang, "Lo, his doom is sure." With the ground of their constant accusations taken away, the hostile powers of Satan have lost their advantage forever. See "Demons" at Deut. 32:17.

■ 2:16, 17 In Colosse, the Sabbath was kept and festivals observed in order to placate supernatural powers or angels thought to direct the course of the stars, regulate the calendar, and determine human destiny. This, Paul says, is a form of bondage from which Christ came to liberate men and women.

■ 2:18 worship of angels. This can be taken as a reference to practices found among some Jewish mystics, whose goal was to participate in angelic worship before the throne of God and to attain to ecstatic prayer through asceticism and strict observance of the Torah. In this case, "worship of angels" would mean "worship along with angels." This line of interpretation assumes that the false teachers actually practiced a more-or-less orthodox Judaism and wanted to worship God. But the appearance given by Colossians is that the church was being tempted to worship not God but spirits intermediate between God and humans (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 2:19 To seek the favor of angelic beings is to fail to honor Christ for what He is as the fullness of deity (v. 9; 1:19); and secondly, not to enjoy the totality of the redemption that has been won in His death and resurrection (vv. 10–15; 1:20–22).

Head . . . body. This language looks back at 1:18, and ahead to the way Paul develops the idea of the Christian life under Christ's headship in the context of membership in the church in 3:1—4:6.

■ 2:20 basic principles. See Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties; theological note "Christians in the World."

■ 2:23 self-imposed religion. God accepts worship offered according to His will revealed in Scripture, not religious exercises done at the dictate of presumptuous human whim (Matt. 15:9). The idea that God must be worshiped only in the way He has instituted has had a profound influence in Reformed churches.

self-imposed religion, false humility, and [5]neglect of the body, but are of no value against the indulgence of the flesh.

CHAPTER 3

1 [a]Col. 2:12 [b]Eph. 1:20

2 [c][Matt. 6:19–21]

Christians in the World

The word "world" in the New Testament is sometimes used as in the Old Testament to mean this earth, the good natural order that God created. Usually, however, it designates humanity as a whole, now fallen into sin and moral disorder, radically opposed to God. People in the world incur guilt and shame by their misuse of created things. Paul can even speak of creation itself yearning for deliverance from the evil occasioned by the fall of Adam and Eve (Rom. 8:20–23).

Christians are sent into the world of fallen humanity by their Lord (John 17:18) to witness to it about God's Christ and His kingdom (Matt. 24:14; cf. Rom. 10:18; Col. 1:6, 23) and to serve its needs. But they are to do so without falling victim to its materialism (Matt. 6:19–24, 32), its lack of concern about God and eternity (Luke 12:13–21), and its pursuit of pleasure and status above all else (1 John 2:15–17). The outlook and mindset of human societies reflect more of the pride seen in Satan, who for now continues to influence them (John 14:30; 2 Cor. 4:4; 1 John 5:19; cf. Luke 4:5–7), than the humility seen in Christ. Christians, like Christ Himself, are to empathize with people's anxieties and needs in order to serve them and communicate God's love for them effectively.

Christians are to consider themselves pilgrims in this fallen world, through which they momentarily pass as they travel home to God (1 Pet. 2:11). The Bible sanctions neither monastic withdrawal from this world (John 17:15) nor worldliness (Titus 2:12). Jesus encourages His disciples to match the ingenuity of the unredeemed who use their resources to further their goals, but specifies that the disciples' proper goals have to do, not with earthly security, but with heavenly glory (Luke 16:9). Christians are to be different from those around them, observing God's moral absolutes, practicing love, and not losing their dignity as bearers of God's image (Rom. 12:2; Eph. 4:17–24; Col. 3:5–11). Separation from fallen humanity's values and lifestyles is a prerequisite for practicing Christlikeness in positive terms (Eph. 4:25—5:17).

The Christian's appointed task, therefore, is threefold. The church's main mandate is evangelism (Matt. 28:19, 20; Luke 24:46–48), and every Christian must seek to further the conversion of unbelievers, not least by the example of one's own changed life (1 Pet. 2:12). Also, love of neighbor should constantly lead the Christian into deeds of mercy for all people, believers and unbelievers alike. Finally, Christians are called to fulfill the "cultural mandate" that God gave to mankind at creation (Gen. 1:28–30; Ps. 8:6–8). Humanity was created to manage God's world, and this stewardship is part of the human vocation in Christ, with God's honor and the good of others as its goal. The Protestant "work ethic" is essentially a religious discipline, the fulfillment of a divine "calling" to be stewards of God's creation.

Knowing that God in providential kindness and forbearance continues, in the face of human sin, to preserve and enrich His erring world (Acts 14:16, 17), Christians are to involve themselves in all forms of lawful human activity. By acting in accord with Christian values they will become salt (a preservative agent) and light (an illumination that shows the way) in the human community (Matt. 5:13–16). As Christians thus fulfill their vocation, they will transform the cultures around them. □ of no value. The Greek of this verse is very difficult. It apparently means not only that the ascetic disciplines Paul is opposing are worthless, but that they are actively harmful, exciting their own sort of "indulgence of the flesh." This is precisely what the Reformers—pre-eminently Luther—saw themselves up against in the extra-biblical rituals that had emerged in the medieval church.

■ 3:1—4:6 The route to maturity is not the path of secret revelations, or of self-punishing disciplines. It consists in understanding and living on the basis of the believer's death and resurrection "with Christ" (3:1). The Colossians have a false notion of heavenly reality, which ironically leads them to fruitless efforts on the earthly plane.

■ 3:1 If then you were raised with Christ. Note the parallel statements of fact in this section: believers have died with Christ (v. 3; 2:11, 12, 20); they have been raised with Him (v. 1; 2:12, 13); they are with Christ in heaven (v. 3; Eph. 2:6); they will be with Him at His return (v. 4); they have "put off the old man" (v. 9), and "put on the new man" (v. 10). Paul's instructions for behavior come only after his description of the redemption God has richly bestowed on His people (2:6, 7 note). Obedience is a response to God's favor, and not a means of gaining it.

sitting at the right hand of God. A pivotal, exultant theme in the New Testament (Acts 2:33–35; 5:31; 7:55, 56; Rom. 8:34; Eph. 1:20; Heb. 1:3, 13; 8:1; 10:12; 12:2; 1 Pet. 3:22; Rev. 3:21).

5 [i]Therefore put to death [j]your members which are on the earth: [k]fornication, uncleanness, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, [l]which is idolatry. 6 [m]Because of these things the wrath of God is coming upon [n]the sons of disobedience, 7 [o]in which you yourselves once walked when you lived in them.

8 [p]But now you yourselves are to put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy language out of your mouth. 9 Do not lie to one another, since you have put off the old man with his deeds, 10 and have put on the new man who [q]is renewed in knowledge [r]according to the image of Him who [s]created him, 11 where there is neither [t]Greek nor Jew, circumcised nor uncircumcised, barbarian, Scythian, slave nor free, [u]but Christ is all and in all.

■ 3:3 hidden with Christ in God. Some understand this to mean that the new life of the Christian is not obvious to others and is "hidden" or concealed in that sense. However, comparison with 2:3 indicates that more is in view. The believer is inseparably united with Christ (John 6:51–58 note; cf. Gal. 2:20). The full reality of the new life is not yet fully revealed, but to be "hidden with Christ in God" means that the new life is secure in Christ. What God has freely given neither man nor angel can take away (John 10:29).

■ 3:4 When Christ . . . appears. The hope of Christ's return is central to the ethics of this section (vv. 5–11).

■ 3:5 put to death. The first of a series of behavioral imperatives that continue through 4:6. Although Paul rejects legalistic asceticism, he calls upon believers to become in practice what they are in principle: dead to sin and alive to God (Rom. 6:1–14). There is a way of living incompatible with life in Christ, and Paul calls for a rigorous departure from that old life. In v. 5 he lists five vices; four have to do with sex, the fifth is covetousness; in v. 8 he lists five more vices, all having to do with anger and abusive speech.

■ 3:7 in which you . . . once walked. That is, before they were brought "into the kingdom of the Son" whom God loves (1:13).

■ 3:10 new man. In Christ, God's second Adam (1 Cor. 15:20–28, 45–49), the human race is reconstituted. Each of the attributes Paul lists in v. 12 can be traced to the character of God generally, or to Christ specifically. This demonstrates how literally Paul understood the idea of believers taking on the "image" of their Creator. See "The Image of God" at Gen. 1:27.

■ 3:11 This verse was probably written with an eye to the exclusiveness of the Colossian false teachers. However, the cross-cultural unity of all those who belong to Christ is an idea that comes readily enough to Paul's mind (Gal. 3:28; 1 Cor. 7:17–24).

barbarian. Those who did not speak Greek were considered uncivilized by Greeks.

Scythian. By reputation, an uncultured slave class drawn from tribes around the Black Sea. Scythians were lampooned in Greek comedy because of their uncouth ways and speech, and Josephus called them "little better than wild beasts."

slave nor free. In the body of Christ, distinctions of social position are irrelevant (1 Cor. 7:17–24). Simultaneously, as Paul's separate instructions to slaves and slaveholders in 3:22—4:1 make clear, unity in Christ does not imply or mandate a uniformity of function or capacity. What is important is to recognize that "Christ is all and in all." In the Pauline churches, diverse social positions continued to exist and were not subject to a uniform leveling process. Rather, they become opportunities for expressing Christ's love across traditional social boundaries.

■ 3:12–14 These verses outline the obligations all Christians have toward one another; 3:18—4:2 will focus on opportunities for service within specified relationships.

■ 3:12 as the elect of God; holy and beloved. In contrast to the Colossians' fear of cosmic powers, believers are entitled to a clear sense that God guarantees their relationship with Him (John 6:37, 44, 65; 15:16; Eph. 1:4, 5; Phil. 1:6). They can know that they have been declared holy on the basis of a righteousness that is not their own (Rom. 3:21–26; 1 Cor. 1:2, 30), and that God genuinely, even passionately, loves them (John 3:16; Rom. 8:32; Gal. 2:20; Titus 3:4; 1 John 4:9, 10).

put on. Paul envisions believers taking on the character of the Lord Himself. The "new man" of v. 10 is not something believers must construct by their own power. Their new identities take shape as they come to know Christ better, since He is the image of the invisible God and the One in whom all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hidden (1:15; 2:3).

tender mercies. An emotional, caring relationship with those whose lives are hurt and broken (Matt. 9:36; 14:14; Rom. 12:1).

kindness. Readiness to do good, even when it may be undeserved (Rom. 2:4; Titus 3:4).

humility. A posture of lowliness and servanthood (Mark 10:45; Phil. 2:1–11).

meekness. Or, "gentleness" in offering help, a non-coercive approach to encouraging change in others' lives (Matt. 11:29; 2 Cor. 10:1; Gal. 6:1; 2 Tim. 2:25).

longsuffering. Willingness to take the long view in the face of human frailty (Rom. 2:4; 1 Tim. 1:16).

■ 3:13, 14 See Eph. 4:32—5:2, where Paul grounds Christian forbearance, forgiveness, and love explicitly in the example provided by the redemptive pattern of Christ's work.

■ 3:15 the peace of God. In its practice of love, forgiveness, and graciousness, the Christian community is to be a showcase of the reconciliation and peace Christ has brought between heaven and earth (1:20–22; 2:14, 15), and within a fractured humanity (vv. 11, 13). Many early manuscripts read "the peace of Christ" in this verse.

■ 3:16 dwell in you richly. Because the believer is united with Christ (3:3 note), not only the "word of Christ," but Christ Himself lives in the hearts of the faithful (Gal. 2:20; Eph. 3:17; cf. Rom. 8:9). With God's wisdom present in this way (3:3; cf. 1 Cor. 1:30), the ethical demands of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another [f]in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. 17 And [g]whatever you do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through Him.

21 [n]Fathers, do not provoke your children, lest they become discouraged.
22 [o]Bondservants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not with eyeservice, as men-pleasers, but in sincerity of heart, fearing God. 23 [p]And whatever you do, do it heartily, as to the Lord and not to men, 24 [q]knowing that from the Lord you will receive the reward of the inheritance; [r]for [s]you serve the Lord Christ. 25 But he who does wrong will be repaid for what he has done, and [s]there is no partiality.

Music in the Church

Some branches of the Reformed faith, eager to protect the church from the addition of human tradition, impressed by the continuity between Israel and the church, and noticing that the terms "psalms," "hymns," and "songs" are used in the Book of Psalms, believe that Paul envisioned only the singing of the psalms from the Old Testament in public worship. This restriction appears, however, to miss his point. He piles up the terms to highlight the wide range of musical expression that grateful and heartfelt praise to God calls forth from the body of Christ.

The word "psalms" refers at least to the use of the Old Testament psalter (Luke 20:42; 24:44; Acts 1:20; 13:33), but may also refer to fresh compositions for worship (1 Cor. 14:26). The word "spiritual" (Greek pneumatikos) qualifies the potentially secular term "songs" as being taught or led by the Spirit (cf. 1 Cor. 2:6; 15:44, 45 notes).

Christ's redemptive work brought an outpouring of hymns of praise from His people, often patterned after the songs of the Old Testament (e.g., Luke 1:46–53, 67–79; 2:14, 29–32). Paul personally employed music within his own worship (Acts 16:25), and it has long been observed that his letters contain portions of early Christian hymns (Eph. 5:14; Phil. 2:6–11; Col. 1:15–20; 1 Tim. 3:16 and notes). Early Christian songs of praise appear also to underlie John 1:1–14; Heb. 1:3; 1 Pet. 1:18–21; 2:21–25; 3:18–22. The "new songs" of the Book of Revelation are themselves a study in the vibrancy of early Christian worship (Rev. 4:8, 11; 5:9, 10, 12, 13; 7:10, 12; 11:15, 17, 18; 12:10–12; 15:3, 4; 19:1–8; 21:3, 4). □ teaching and admonishing. The first half of this verse is strongly reminiscent of 1:28. In the ministry of the Colossians to one another, the word of Christ will be as effective as the presence of the apostle himself.

Christian love can be lived out in every part of life, including the everyday responsibilities that are reviewed in 3:18—4:6).

psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. In the Greek translation of the Old Testament, the three nouns used in this phrase are often synonymous. It is not likely that in Colossians they designate three separate types of song (Eph. 5:19). See theological note "Music in the Church."

■ 3:17 do all in the name of the Lord Jesus. See "God's Pattern for Worship" at 1 Chr. 16:29.

■ 3:18, 19 See note on Eph. 5:22–32; "The Christian Family" at Eph. 5:22.

■ 3:20, 21 See notes on Eph. 6:1–3, 4.

■ 3:22—4:1 This treatment of slave and free in Colossians is probably related to the subject matter of the letter to Philemon. Onesimus was a runaway slave whom Paul was returning with a letter to his owner Philemon. Onesimus was accompanying Tychicus with the letter to the Colossians (4:7–9), and they were probably carrying the letter to Philemon as well (Introduction to Philemon).

■ 4:2–6 Two other ways in which believers can set their "mind on things above" (3:2) are praying (Eph. 6:18–20 note) and telling their faith wisely and persuasively to outsiders so that they may be drawn to the fullness of life in Christ.

Final Greetings

7 [n]Tychicus, a beloved brother, faithful minister, and fellow servant in the Lord, will tell you all the news about me. 8 [o]I am sending him to you for this very purpose, that [2]he may know your circumstances and comfort your hearts, 9 with [p]Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They will make known to you all things which are happening here.

10 [q]Aristarchus my fellow prisoner greets you, with [r]Mark the cousin of Barnabas (about whom you received instructions: if he comes to you, welcome him), 11 and Jesus who is called Justus. These are my only fellow workers for the kingdom of God who are of the circumcision; they have proved to be a comfort to me.

12 [s]Epaphras, who is one of you, a bondservant of Christ, greets you, always [t]laboring fervently for you in prayers, that you may stand [u]perfect and [3]complete in all the will of God. 13 For I bear him witness that he has a great [4]zeal for you, and those who are in Laodicea, and those in Hierapolis. 14 [v]Luke the beloved physician and [w]Demas greet you. 15 Greet the brethren who are in Laodicea, and [5]Nymphas and [x]the church that is in [6]his house.

Closing Exhortations and Blessing

16 Now when [y]this epistle is read among you, see that it is read also in the church of the Laodiceans, and that you likewise read the epistle from Laodicea. 17 And say to [z]Archippus, "Take heed to [a]the ministry which you have received in the Lord, that you may fulfill it."

18 [b]This salutation by my own hand—Paul. [c]Remember my chains. Grace be with you. Amen.

18 [b]1 Cor. 16:21 [c]Heb. 13:3

■ 4:7–17 The letter ends with a brief look at the complex and fluid network of leaders that tied Paul's churches together. Some of the same names occur in Philem. 23, 24.

■ 4:7 Tychicus. The primary carrier of the letters to the Colossians, Philemon, and the Ephesians (Eph. 6:21, 22). First mentioned as part of Paul's entourage in Acts 20:4, Tychicus was from the Roman province of Asia (in modern Turkey), and appears to have been one of Paul's more trusted emissaries toward the end of his ministry (2 Tim. 4:12; Titus 3:12).

■ 4:9 Onesimus. See Introduction to Philemon.

■ 4:10 Aristarchus. This Jew from Thessalonica had been publicly associated with Paul's tumultuous ministry in Ephesus (Acts 19:29). He had traveled with Paul's company through Greece (Acts 20:4) and on to Jerusalem and Rome (Acts 27:2), where he now shared the apostle's imprisonment.

Mark. The rift that had emerged more than a decade earlier between Paul and the cousins Barnabas and John Mark (author of the Gospel of Mark, Acts 13:13; 15:37–40) had healed (2 Tim. 4:11; Philem. 24). Paul's special mention of Mark testifies to the power of the reconciling work of Christ (1:20–22) and to the peace that is to rule within Christ's body (3:15).

■ 4:11 Jesus who is called Justus. Otherwise unknown.

■ 4:12 Epaphras. See 1:7; Introduction: Date and Occasion.

■ 4:13 Hierapolis. See Introduction: Date and Occasion.

■ 4:14 Luke. This traveling companion of Paul in Acts was with Paul on what may have been the eve of his death (2 Tim. 4:11). As author of the Gospel of Luke and Acts, he was also Paul's chronicler. Though his writing shows him to be exceptionally literate, the mention of his occupation does not necessarily mark him as a man of high social standing, since physicians were often slaves.

Demas. Demas abandoned Paul during his second imprisonment in Rome (2 Tim. 4:10). He is mentioned one other time (Philem. 24).

■ 4:15 Nymphas. See text notes. Some manuscripts identify this person, who hosted the Laodicean house-church, as a woman. There are several references to women (whose marital status is not mentioned) as patrons or hosts of churches, or as workers in ministry (Acts 12:12; 16:13–15; Rom. 16:1, 2, 6, 7, 12, 13; Phil. 4:2, 3; 2 John 1, 5). The standard of relationships between men and women, particularly husbands and wives, set out in 3:18 and parallels (1 Cor. 14:33–35; Eph. 5:22–33; 1 Tim. 2:11–15) was not inconsistent with the partnership in ministry that existed between men and women in the early church.

church . . . in his house. There is no evidence of churches owning separate property for worship until the middle of the third century. Until then, house churches were the norm. Those who exercised a ministry of hospitality by having churches in their homes were important benefactors of the early church (Acts 12:12; Rom. 16:5; 1 Cor. 16:19; Philem. 2). On hospitality, see Rom. 12:13; 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:8; Heb. 13:2; 1 Pet. 4:9.

■ 4:16 epistle from Laodicea. Some suggest that Paul is referring to the letter to the Ephesians, which in some ancient manuscripts lacks a destination, and which may have gone out as a circular letter (Introduction to Ephesians: Date and Occasion). Since Tychicus is the bearer of Ephesians as well (Eph. 6:21, 22), the conclusion that the Ephesian and Laodicean letters were one and the same would imply that Colossians and Ephesians were written at about the same time, and that Tychicus traveled first to Laodicea and then to Colosse. However, it may be more natural to assume, on the basis of the more reflective style of Ephesians, that it was written some time after Colossians, and that Tychicus brought the Ephesian letter around to the churches on a subsequent trip (if, indeed, it was a circular letter). The best proposal for the identity of the letter from Laodicea is that it was a separate letter that has not survived.

■ 4:17 Archippus. If Philemon was host of the house church in Colosse, which had seen the Onesimus incident, this verse may well suggest that Archippus was its spiritual leader.

■ 4:18 by my own hand. Paul's general practice was to dictate his letters, but to write the closing sentences himself. These concluding sections would vary, depending on the circumstances. Sometimes they include personal greetings to strengthen the bond between himself, his workers, and his churches (vv. 7–17; Rom. 16); sometimes they include a summary of the contents of the letter (e.g., Gal. 6:11–17); and sometimes they had a signature that guaranteed the authenticity of the letter (1 Cor. 16:21; Philem. 19).

The First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

THESSALONIANS

Author The author of this epistle identifies himself as the apostle Paul (1:1; 2:18). The authenticity of 1 Thessalonians has occasionally been challenged but with notable lack of success.

The contributions of Silas and Timothy to the substance of the Thessalonian letters cannot be detected with any certainty. It remains possible that certain peculiarities of these letters, in comparison with the rest of Paul's writings, are due to the influence of either of these close associates of Paul.

Date and Occasion Paul wrote the first letter to the Thessalonians almost certainly from Corinth, where Silas and Timothy, senders with him of the letters, were reunited with him (Acts 18:5; 2 Cor. 1:19). The letter was most likely written in A.D. 50 or 51, with 2 Thessalonians following shortly. Therefore, 1 and 2 Thessalonians are among the earliest letters we have from the hand of Paul, with only Galatians having any reasonable claim to be earlier (Introduction to Galatians).

Paul wrote 1 Thessalonians after receiving a report from Timothy regarding the state of the Thessalonian congregation (3:6, 7). Paul writes with joy and relief that the Thessalonians were continuing firm in the faith despite the premature departure of Paul and his coworkers, and despite the harassment they still suffered from hostile factions.

The city of Thessalonica was named for Alexander the Great's half sister. It was founded about 315 B.C. by her husband, King Cassander of Macedonia. In Roman times Thessalonica was a provincial capital with over 200,000 inhabitants.

On his second missionary tour, Paul and his companions Silas and Timothy had come to Thessalonica by road from Philippi, where they had been "spitefully treated" (2:2). Acts 17:2 records that Paul preached and debated in the synagogues for three successive Sabbaths.

The congregation was predominantly Gentile. This indicates that a successful ministry among Gentiles continued after Paul's access to the synagogue was cut off. During their stay in Thessalonica, which cannot have lasted more than a few months, the missionaries apparently received more than one contribution for their support from the congregation at Philippi (Phil. 4:15, 16). This, combined with earnings from their own labors (2:9; 2 Thess. 3:7, 8), meant that they were able to support themselves without depending on the Thessalonians. Their example of humble, industrious behavior was a rebuke to the minority in the church who wanted to refrain from working for a living.

Eventually, members of the Jewish community enlisted unscrupulous men to stir up animosity against the Christians. A riot ensued, and a number of Christians including a Jewish convert named Jason were dragged before the authorities. Jason and the others were forced to post security money to guarantee that the church would not cause trouble. Paul, Silas, and Timothy were whisked away by the believers under cover of night and soon found themselves in Berea to the west (Acts 17:5–10).

Characteristics and Themes

A rich vein of teaching about the last days runs through the Thessalonian letters. Paul's preaching at Athens, recorded in Acts 17, confirms that his strategy among non-Jewish audiences at this time was to stress the coming judgment (4:6) that God has placed in the hands of the risen Christ.

The return of Christ would occur on what Paul calls the "day of the Lord," (5:2; 2 Thess. 2:1 note). On this day there will be a resurrection of the just to inherit salvation in the Lord's presence (4:16; 5:10), and of the unjust (presupposed by Paul though never explicitly stated) to be eternally separated from Christ (2 Thess. 1:9). The end will be preceded by a widespread apostasy and the appearance of a diabolical "man of sin" (2 Thess. 2:3). Since this person had not yet appeared, those in the congregation who were saying that the "day of the Lord" had already arrived were wrong and should be silenced.

Another notable characteristic of the letters is Paul's affirmation that Christ is divine, the more striking because of the early date of the letters and the spontaneous and unguarded nature of the references. Several times Christ and God the Father are linked together as the common source of divine blessings and as the object of prayer (1:1; 3:11; 2 Thess. 1:1, 2, 12; 2:16; 3:5). In Paul's use of the Old Testament expression "day of the Lord," in which "the Lord" is now revealed to be the Lord Jesus Christ (5:2; 2 Thess. 2:2), there is a similar assignment of the prerogatives of deity to Jesus Christ (5:2 note). The united work of the three Persons of the Trinity is mentioned in 2 Thess. 2:13, 14. □

Greeting

PAUL, [a]Silvanus, and Timothy,

To the church of the [b]Thessalonians in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

Grace to you and peace [f]from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Their Good Example

2 [c]We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers, 3 remembering without ceasing [d]your work of faith, [e]labor of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ in the sight of our God and Father, 4 knowing, beloved brethren, [f]your election by God. 5 For [g]our gospel did not come to you in word only, but also in power, [h]and in the Holy Spirit [i]and in much assurance, as you know what kind of men we were among you for your sake.

6 And [j]you became followers of us and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, [k]with joy of the Holy Spirit, 7 so that you became examples to all in Macedonia and Achaia who believe. 8 For from you the word of the Lord [l]has sounded forth, not only in Macedonia and

■ 1:1 Silvanus. The Latin name of Silas, a prophet of the Jerusalem church delegated to accompany Paul and Barnabas to Antioch to deliver the decision of the Jerusalem council (Acts 15:22, 27, 32, 40). Silas was chosen by Paul to be his associate on this second missionary journey.

Timothy. The son of a Greek father and a devout Jewish mother, he was at the time of writing a relative newcomer to the Christian mission. Paul and Silas had drafted this young but highly regarded disciple to join in their ministry roughly a year earlier in Lystra (Acts 16:1).

in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. This points to the unique intimacy between the Father and the Son, because the church is said to be "in" both (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes).

■ 1:3 work of faith. The faith of the Thessalonians, obviously a chief concern for Paul, is referred to again in v. 8; 3:2, 5–7, 10; 5:8.

labor of love. Their love was shown especially in the welcome they gave to the travelers (v. 9). Paul commends their love again in 4:9, 10, where he says they are "taught by God" in their love for one another.

patience of hope. Their eschatological hope is their assurance that the Lord Jesus will return to deliver them from their present troubles and from God's coming wrath. For the triad of "faith," "hope," and "love," see 5:8; Rom. 5:2–5; 1 Cor. 13:13; Gal. 5:5, 6; Col. 1:4, 5; Heb. 6:10–12; 10:22–24; 1 Pet. 1:3–8, 21, 22.

■ 1:4 your election by God. Divine election is a theme of both Thessalonian epistles (5:9; 2 Thess. 2:13). Paul is not afraid to assure this young, predominantly Gentile congregation that they were elected by God. Paul sees in them the fruit of God's electing grace, manifested in their response to the preaching of the gospel and their early progress in sanctification (2 Thess. 2:13 note).

■ 1:6 followers. The Spirit plays an especially prominent role in sustaining the believer who undergoes persecution for Christ (Matt. 10:19, 20; 1 Pet. 4:12–14).

■ 1:7, 8 Paul is writing from Achaia, having traversed Macedonia and come through Athens to Corinth. Along the way he has found that the Christians already know of his work in Thessalonica and have learned of the faith of the Thessalonians. The Thessalonian Christians, beginners in Christ though they were, are examples to others of faith, love, and hope.

Achaia, but also [m]in every place. Your faith toward God has gone out, so that we do not need to say anything. [9] For they themselves declare concerning us [n]what manner of entry we had to you, [o]and how you turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, [10] and [p]to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus who delivers us [q]from the wrath to come.

Paul's Conduct

2 For you yourselves know, brethren, that our coming to you was not in vain. [2] But [r]even after we had suffered before and were spitefully treated at [a]Philippi, as you know, we were [b]bold in our God to speak to you the gospel of God in much conflict. [3] [c]For our exhortation did not come from error or uncleanness, nor was it in deceit.

[4] But as [d]we have been approved by God [e]to be entrusted with the gospel, even so we speak, [f]not as pleasing men, but God [g]who tests our hearts. [5] For [h]neither at any time did we use flattering words, as you know, nor a [2]cloak for covetousness—[i]God is witness. [6] [j]Nor did we seek glory from men, either from you or from others, when [k]we might have [l]made demands [m]as apostles of Christ. [7] But [n]we were gentle among you, just as a nursing mother cherishes her own children. [8] So, affectionately longing for you, we were well pleased [o]to impart to you not only the

Pleasing God

It is a familiar truth that every Christian's overriding purpose must be to glorify God. Everything we say and do, our relationships with others, the use we make of the gifts and opportunities God gives us, and even our enduring of adverse situations and human hostility, must be managed so as to give God honor and praise for His wisdom and goodness (1 Cor. 10:31; cf. Matt. 5:16; Eph. 3:10; Col. 3:17).

Equally important is the truth that every Christian has a personal calling to please God. Jesus did not live to please Himself, nor may we (John 8:29; Rom. 15:1–3). Faith (Heb. 11:5, 6), praise (Ps. 69:30, 31), generosity (Phil. 4:18; Heb. 13:16), obedience to divinely instituted authority (Col. 3:20), and single-mindedness in Christian service (2 Tim. 2:4), are all ways of pleasing our Creator. God enables us to live according to the Bible and takes pleasure in us as we serve Him. In His sovereign grace He gives what He commands and delights in the result (Heb. 13:21; cf. Phil. 2:12, 13).

We please God through our relationship with Him. Abraham was called God's friend (2 Chr. 20:7; Is. 41:8; James 2:23), and Christ called His disciples His friends (Luke 12:4; John 15:14). Under divine inspiration, Paul compares the church to the Bride of Christ (Eph. 5:32; cf. Rev. 21:2). Like friends and family members, God and His people have pleasure in each other.

We also please God through imitating His deeds. His love in us is living and active, compelling His people to use their talents and energies in all kinds of activities. But Christians are especially called to works of mercy, because God is merciful (Deut. 10:17–19; Luke 6:35, 36). □

■ 1:9, 10 These verses parallel the preaching of Paul at Athens (Acts 17:22–31). In preaching to the Jews, Paul could presuppose knowledge of the existence of the true God and the authority of the Old Testament Scriptures, and go on to proclaim the advent of God's promised Messiah. To those uninstructed in the faith of Israel, Paul stresses two things: first, acknowledging the true and living God and forsaking dead idols; second, preparing for God's coming universal judgment to be executed by Jesus Christ, the God-Man, who died and rose from the dead (4:6; Acts 17:29–31).

■ 1:10 from heaven. See 4:16; 2 Thess. 1:7; cf. Acts 1:11; Phil. 3:20.

Jesus who delivers us from the wrath to come. Jesus' death turned away God's wrath long ago, but the full import of this saving work will not be displayed until Judgment Day. Then, through Christ's intervention, believers will be spared the condemnation and punishment their sins would otherwise deserve.

■ 2:1–12 Paul seems to respond to certain doubts or criticisms of his ministry. He implicitly defends his ministry of the gospel, and at the same time, by recalling the work he and his companions have done, he gives the Thessalonians a pattern of loving service to follow.

■ 2:2 we were bold in our God. Despite being called by God to enter Macedonia (Acts 16:9, 10), Paul and Silas had been severely beaten and chained in a Macedonian prison (at Philippi). The missionaries had to be courageous and selflessly devoted to God's purpose.

the gospel of God. Paul stresses the pure, and indeed divine, source of his message and ministry. Note the repetition of the phrase in vv. 8 and 9. The gospel is always carried as a trust from God Himself.

■ 2:4 See theological note "Pleasing God."

■ 2:8 Apparent throughout this section (vv. 17–20; 3:6–12) is Paul's deep affection for his spiritual children, who but months before were complete strangers to him, alienated by race, culture, and religion.

gospel of God, but also [p]our own lives, because you had become dear to us. 9 For you remember, brethren, our [q]labor and toil; for laboring night and day, [r]that we might not be a burden to any of you, we preached to you the gospel of God.

10 [s]You are witnesses, and God also, [t]how devoutly and justly and blamelessly we behaved ourselves among you who believe; 11 as you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and [3]charged every one of you, as a father does his own children, 12 [u]that you would walk worthy of God [v]who calls you into His own kingdom and glory.

Their Conversion

13 For this reason we also thank God [w]without ceasing, because when you [x]received the word of God which you heard from us, you welcomed it [y]not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which also effectively [z]works in you who believe. 14 For you, brethren, became imitators [a]of the churches of God which are in Judea in Christ Jesus. For [b]you also suffered the same things from your own countrymen, just as they did from the Judeans, 15 [c]who killed both the Lord Jesus and [d]their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they do not please God [e]and are [4]contrary to all men, 16 [f]forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they may be saved, so as always [g]to fill up the measure of their sins; [h]but wrath has come upon them to the uttermost.

Longing to See Them

17 But we, brethren, having been taken away from you for a short time [i]in presence, not in heart, endeavored more eagerly to see your face with great desire. 18 Therefore we wanted to come to you—even I, Paul, time and again—but [j]Satan hindered us. 19 For [k]what is our hope, or joy, or [l]crown of rejoicing? Is it not even you in the [m]presence of our Lord Jesus Christ [n]at His coming? 20 For you are our glory and joy.

Concern for Their Faith

3 Therefore, when we could no longer endure it, we thought it good to be left in Athens alone, 2 and sent [a]Timothy, our brother and minister of God, and our fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you and encourage you concerning your faith, 3 [b]that no one should be shaken by these afflictions; for you yourselves know that [c]we are appointed to this. 4 [d]For, in fact, we told you before when we were with you that we would suffer tribulation, just as it happened, and you know. 5 For this reason, when I could no longer endure it, I sent to know your faith, [e]lest by some means the tempter had tempted you, and [f]our labor might be in vain.

4 [d]Acts 20:24
5 [e]1 Cor. 7:5 [f]Gal. 2:2

■ 2:12 This verse summarizes Paul's exhortation and charge during his initial visit in Thessalonica. In contrast to the idols the Thessalonians had forsaken (1:9), the true and living God has a "kingdom and glory," and in His fathomless mercy He chooses to share this kingdom with those who worship Him through Jesus Christ. Called to enter this kingdom, believers know its power and enjoy its life here and now (Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 4:20; Col. 1:13, 14) while they long for the day they will enter its fullness.

■ 2:13 effectively works. The Word of God, though it comes through human agency, is a divine message that works in believers through the Holy Spirit (Is. 55:11; Acts 20:32; 2 Tim. 2:15–17; Heb. 4:12).

■ 2:14 suffered . . . from your own countrymen. The power of God's word in them was proved as they faced fierce persecution from their kinsmen and, like the churches in Judea, endured it with faith and joy (Acts 17:5–9).

■ 2:15 Just as Jesus noted the continuity of those who persecuted the prophets with those who persecuted Him (Matt. 23:29–32), so Paul (also Stephen, Acts 7:52) sees the same continuity extending to those Jews (with whom he formerly worked) who persecute Christ by opposing the gospel (Acts 9:4). Paul's fullest elaboration of his approach to this problem of Jewish opposition to the gospel is found in Rom. 9—11.

■ 2:16 wrath has come upon them to the uttermost. These last two words may also be translated "the end" (Matt. 10:22; 1 Cor. 1:8; 15:24). This may be a prophecy of the catastrophe which overtook Jerusalem in A.D. 70, within twenty years of Paul's writing, or it may refer to the sequence of calamities that had already begun and were to reach their culmination in that momentous disaster. Or it may refer to the punitive hardening of a large segment of Israel in their culpable rejection of Christ, a hardening that Jesus saw as the fulfillment of Isaiah's dire prophecy (Is. 6:9, 10; Matt. 13:14, 15). Compare a similar outworking of God's wrath upon Gentiles outlined in Rom. 1:18–32. As Paul would later write (Rom. 11:25), a "blindness in part" has befallen Israel and will remain until the full number of Gentiles are brought in (i.e., until the end). The part of Israel not subject to hardening is the remnant (Is. 6:13) that in the gospel era continues as the object of God's mercy, finding salvation in Jesus the Messiah.

■ 2:17 taken away. The Greek word means "orphaned," a word used for parents as well as children who have been separated. Paul continues to use the family imagery of vv. 7 and 11 in depicting his relationship with the Thessalonian congregation.

■ 2:19 at His coming. The Greek word parousia ("coming") is used for the Second Coming of Christ six times in the Thessalonian correspondence (see also 3:13; 4:15; 5:23; 2 Thess. 2:1, 8). Paul's only other use of the term in this sense is in 1 Cor. 15:23. Christ's coming is presented as the time when the outcome of our works of faith is disclosed. Paul's joy and crown at that day will be his beloved spiritual children, those converted under his ministry (2 Cor. 1:14; Phil. 2:16).

■ 3:3, 4 Paul did not promise the followers of Jesus a life of ease or public approval, nor did Jesus (Mark 8:34; John 15:18–21).

Encouraged by Timothy

6 [g]But now that Timothy has come to us from you, and brought us good news of your faith and love, and that you always have good remembrance of us, greatly desiring to see us, [h]as we also to see you— 7 therefore, brethren, in all our affliction and distress [i]we were comforted concerning you by your faith. 8 For now we live, if you [j]stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we render to God for you, for all the joy with which we rejoice for your sake before our God, 10 night and day praying exceedingly that we may see your face [k]and perfect what is lacking in your faith?

Prayer for the Church

11 Now may our God and Father Himself, and our Lord Jesus Christ, [l]direct our way to you. 12 And may the Lord make you increase and [m]abound in love to one another and to all, just as we do to you, 13 so that He may establish [n]your hearts blameless in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all His saints.

Plea for Purity

4 Finally then, brethren, we urge and exhort in the Lord Jesus [a]that you should abound more and more, [b]just as you received from us how you ought to walk and to please God; 2 for you know what commandments we gave you through the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is [c]the will of God, [d]your sanctification: [e]that you should abstain from sexual immorality; 4 [f]that each of you should know how to possess his own vessel in sanctification and honor, 5 [g]not in passion of lust, [h]like the Gentiles [i]who do not know God; 6 that no one should take advantage of and defraud his brother in this matter, because the Lord [j]is the avenger of all such, as we also forewarned you and testified. 7 For God did not call us to uncleanness, [k]but in holiness. 8 [l]Therefore he who rejects this does not reject man, but God, [m]who[l] has also given us His Holy Spirit.

A Brotherly and Orderly Life

9 But concerning brotherly love you have no need that I should write to you, for [n]you yourselves are taught by God [o]to love one another; 10 and indeed you do so toward all the brethren who are in all Macedonia. But we urge you, brethren, [p]that you increase more and more; 11 that you also aspire to lead a quiet life, [q]to mind your own business, and [r]to work with your own hands, as we commanded you, 12 [s]that you may walk properly toward those who are outside, and that you may lack nothing.

■ 3:11 Paul addresses God the Father and the Lord Jesus jointly in prayer (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes). The answer to this prayer for reunion came several years later (Acts 20:1).

■ 3:13 at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The work of sanctification already begun in believers is brought to glorious completion at the Second Coming of the Lord (5:23; cf. 1 Cor. 1:8; Phil. 1:6; 2 Thess. 3:3; Jude 24).

His saints. Lit. "holy ones." Either the angels who will accompany Christ at His return (2 Thess. 1:7; cf. Matt. 13:39, 48, 49; 16:27) or human saints (2 Thess. 1:10; Rev. 19:14) or both.

■ 4:1 Paul praises the Thessalonians for their progress in learning how to please God, but challenges them to excel further. Paul recognized the constant need for growth and for "reaching forward" (Phil. 3:13). Spiritual complacency contradicts a believer's confession.

■ 4:2 Again Paul stresses that the authority for his instructions was not his own and not of human origin, but from the risen Lord (2:13).

■ 4:3 the will of God, your sanctification. Scripture generally conceives of the will of God in one of two senses. Sometimes, as in Eph. 1:11, what is meant is the eternal purpose of God that determines history, and that we cannot know except by observing the outworking of history or through a special revelation (prophecy). This is often called by theologians the "decretive," "hidden," or "secret" will of God. Elsewhere, as here and in 5:18, what is meant is the duty God has announced through revelation, the "preceptive" or "revealed" will of God (Deut. 29:29).

■ 4:5 like the Gentiles. Pagan society in Paul's day provided little inducement to sexual purity. Marital infidelity, at least for men, was the norm, and some of the pagan religions from which the Thessalonians had been freed sanctioned gross sexual misconduct in their rituals. The Christian gospel brings a moral awakening and a fresh revelation of God's righteous standards.

■ 4:6 defraud his brother. Illicit sexual involvement affects not only the consenting parties. Spouses are wronged and families, friends, and fellow Christians shamed. Ultimately, these sins like all others are sins against God.

■ 4:8 Paul claims divine authority, not merely for his spoken proclamation, but for his written instructions as well (see also 5:27).

given us His Holy Spirit. Paul pointedly reminds them of their renewed capacities for holiness resulting from God's continual endowment of the Holy Spirit who dwells within them (1 Cor. 6:19; Gal. 3:5). The construction in Greek emphasizes the term "Holy," which is especially fitting in this context.

■ 4:11 aspire. The Greek word for this term often denoted the attempt to garner civic honor and recognition through outward displays of generosity by the wealthy. Paul's use of the term turns it on its head: the Thessalonians should be zealous for the honor that comes not through self-assertion or an ostentatious show of personal greatness, but through humble, industrious, and unimpeachable behavior. This exhortation, pertinent to all Christians, had a particular urgency in Thessalonica where the Christians had already been falsely accused of sedition (Acts 17:6–9). By living lives that were respectable and unpretentious, the Christians were to allay any lingering suspicions.

The Return of Jesus Christ

The New Testament repeatedly announces that Jesus Christ will one day return. His second "coming" or "presence" (Greek parousia) will be a royal visit. Christ's return will be personal and physical (Matt. 24:44; Acts 1:11; Col. 3:4; 2 Tim. 4:8; Heb. 9:28), visible and triumphant (Mark 8:38; 2 Thess. 1:10; Rev. 1:7).

At the Second Coming, Jesus will bring an end to history. He will raise the dead and judge the world (John 5:28, 29), and impart to God's children their final glory (Rom. 8:17, 18; Col. 3:4). Paul says that Christ will then "hand over the kingdom" and become subject to the Father (1 Cor. 15:24–28 note). In saying this, Paul does not mean that Christ is reduced in honor, but that He will have completed the plan God assigned to Him for redeeming the elect. In heaven, the elect will honor the Lamb who opened the book of God's salvation (Rev. 5).

According to 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, Christ's coming will be a descent from the sky, heralded by a trumpet, a shout, and the voice of the archangel. Those who have died in Christ will be raised, and Christians living on earth will be caught up to meet Christ. This event will mark the end of life in this world as we have known it, and the beginning of life in unbroken communion with God. The idea that Christians will be taken out of this world for a period after which Christ will appear still a third time for the "Second Coming" has been widely held, but lacks scriptural support.

The New Testament specifies much that will take place between Christ's two comings. However, apart from the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 (Luke 21:20, 24), these predictions are of ongoing processes rather than single events, and do not yield even an approximate date for Jesus' reappearance. The Gentile world will be summoned to faith (Matt. 24:14), and Jews will be brought into the kingdom (Rom. 11:25–29, a passage that may or may not anticipate a national conversion). There will be false prophets and false christs (Matt. 24:5, 24; 1 John 2:18, 22; 4:3). There will be apostasy from the faith and tribulation for the faithful (2 Thess. 2:3; 1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; Rev. 7:13, 14; cf. 3:10). A "man of sin" must appear (2 Thess. 2:3–12). No dates can be deduced from these predictions; the time of Jesus' return remains completely unknown (Matt. 24:36).

Christ teaches that it will be a tragic disaster for anyone who is not ready when He returns (Matt. 24:36–51). The thought of His return should be constantly in our minds, encouraging us in our present Christian service (1 Cor. 15:58) and teaching us to live ready to meet Christ at any time (Matt. 25:1–13). □

■ 4:13 asleep. This was a standard metaphor for death among pagans as well as Jews and Christians. The term has no particular reference to the state of the soul or consciousness of the deceased, since it is used freely by groups with widely diverging beliefs on this subject. For the New Testament understanding of a conscious and blessed existence between death and the Resurrection, see Luke 16:19–31; 23:42, 43; John 14:1–3; 2 Cor. 5:6–8; Phil. 1:23; Rev. 6:9–11; 7:9–17; 20:4–6. See "Death and the Intermediate State" at Phil. 1:23.

sorrow. Christ's resurrection affords Christians a deeply seated hope and assurance of never-ending fellowship with Him. Therefore their grief over departed brethren is softened, and they are upheld in hope.

■ 4:14 God will bring with Him. Probably this is to be understood as a "bringing" into God's presence (3:13) and kingdom by resurrection (1 Cor. 6:14; 2 Cor. 4:14), though some believe it signifies a bringing of the saints to earth when Christ returns.

■ 4:15 by no means precede. According to 2 Esdras, a Jewish work of the second century A.D., those who survive until the coming of the glorious Messiah are more blessed than those who have died before (2 Esdras 13:14–24). Some of the Thessalonians may have caught wind of a similar misconception. Paul to the contrary assures the Thessalonians that both groups will be on equal footing (1 Cor. 15:52), that both will enter the fullness of the kingdom together.

■ 4:16 the dead in Christ will rise first. For Paul, those "in Christ" constitute a subcategory of those "in Adam" (the whole human race), and comprise all who participate in the salvation of Christ (1 Cor. 15:22, 23), whether they lived before or after Christ. Therefore, this rising of the "dead in Christ" is a resurrection of all the righteous dead, and not merely of New Testament believers, at the time of Christ's return (as in 1 Cor. 15:23; cf. John 5:28, 29). The resurrection of the unrighteous is mentioned explicitly by Paul only in Acts 24:15, though he also presupposes it in his warnings of a universal judgment of individuals at the time of Christ's return (Acts 17:31; Rom. 2:5–16). See theological note "The Return of Jesus Christ."

will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with [a]the trumpet of God. [b]And the dead in Christ will rise first. 17 [c]Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [d]in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And thus [e]we shall always be with the Lord. 18 [f]Therefore comfort one another with these words.

The Day of the Lord

5 But concerning [a]the times and the seasons, brethren, you have no need that I should write to you. 2 For you yourselves know perfectly that [b]the day of the Lord so comes as a thief in the night. 3 For when they say, "Peace and safety!" then [c]sudden destruction comes upon them, [d]as labor pains upon a pregnant woman. And they shall not escape. 4 [e]But you, brethren, are not in darkness, so that this Day should overtake you as a thief. 5 You are all [f]sons of light and sons of the day. We are not of the night nor of darkness. 6 [g]Therefore let us not sleep, as others do, but [h]let us watch and be [i]sober. 7 For [j]those who sleep, sleep at night, and those who get drunk [j]are drunk at night. 8 But let us who are of the day be sober, [k]putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and as a helmet the hope of salvation. 9 For [l]God did not appoint us to wrath, [m]but to obtain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, 10 [n]who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with Him.

11 Therefore [2]comfort each other and [3]edify one another, just as you also are doing.

Various Exhortations

12 And we urge you, brethren, [o]to recognize those who labor among you, and are over you in the Lord and [4]admonish you, 13 and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. [p]Be at peace among yourselves.

14 Now we [5]exhort you, brethren, [q]warn those who are [6]unruly, [r]comfort the fainthearted, [s]uphold the weak, [t]be patient with all. 15 [u]See that no one renders evil for evil to anyone, but always [v]pursue what is good both for yourselves and for all.

16 [w]Rejoice always, 17 [x]pray without ceasing, 18 in everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you.

19 [y]Do not quench the Spirit. 20 [z]Do not despise prophecies. 21 [a]Test all things; [b]hold fast what is good. 22 Abstain from every form of evil.

■ 4:17 caught up. This description of the catching-up or "rapture" of the church is not presented so as to satisfy all our cravings for detailed knowledge of end-time chronology. For instance, we are not told whether the assembled company will descend to earth or return to heaven. The presentation is pastoral, to comfort those grieved and confused by the death of beloved Christians. The assurance that all the righteous without distinction will be with the Lord forever, and united at the coming of Christ, is the burden of this passage (v. 18). The "shout," "voice," and "trumpet" of v. 16 give the distinct impression that the rapture will be public and not secret (Luke 17:24; 21:35; Rev. 1:7). See note on 5:1–11.

■ 5:1–11 The Thessalonians are told to prepare for the same thing that will come unexpectedly upon the ungodly—the day of the Lord (vv. 2, 4). Paul assumes that Christians and non-Christians alike will be alive and present when the Day arrives, Christians watchful and ready, non-Christians surprised as by a thief who comes at night. In other words, the rapture of Christians spoken of in 4:17 will not occur before the arrival of the Day that will also bring sudden and inescapable destruction to the wicked (2 Thess. 2:1, 2 notes). See "The Return of Jesus Christ" at 4:16.

■ 5:2 day of the Lord. A prominent designation of the day on which Christ returns. It is well known from the Old Testament (e.g., Joel 2:1, 31; Amos 5:18; Zeph. 1:7, 14; Mal. 4:5), where it is used of God's drawing near in judgment. This prominent association of the day of the Lord with judgment is carried on in the New Testament, where the last judgment and final rewards and punishments are in view (Acts 17:31; Rom. 2:5, 16; 2 Cor. 1:14). According to 2 Pet. 3:10–13, the heavens, the earth, and the elements will be destroyed to make way for a new heaven and new earth.

as a thief in the night. See Matt. 24:43, 44; 2 Pet. 3:10; Rev. 3:3; 16:15. Paul seems to be familiar with at least some of Jesus' "Olivet Discourse" (Matt. 24:3—25:46; Mark 13:3–37; Luke 21:5–36).

■ 5:9 God did not appoint us to wrath. God has appointed His people to obtain salvation and glory in Jesus Christ (1:10; 2 Thess. 2:14). Yet the Thessalonians and many other Christians have been appointed by God to undergo and withstand tribulation of every kind (3:2–4; 2 Thess. 1:4; James 1:2–4; 1 Pet. 4:12–14; Rev. 1:9). The "wrath" in this context is evidently the condemnation and punishment that will fall in "the day of wrath" (Rom. 2:5) upon the impenitent (Eph. 5:6; Col. 3:6; Rev. 6:16, 17; 11:18).

■ 5:12 Even at this early stage in the life of the congregation there were leaders who had spiritual care and oversight. Paul endorses a proper esteem for church workers and leaders, asking love and respect for them. Some Thessalonians named elsewhere who may have been in Paul's mind here are Jason (Acts 17:6–9), Aristarchus (Acts 20:4; 27:2; Col. 4:10; Philem. 24), Secundus (Acts 20:4), and possibly Gaius (Acts 19:29).

■ 5:14 brethren. This address (also v. 12) indicates that the exhortations that follow assign the responsibility for ministry to all the congregation, not just to acknowledged leaders.

those who are unruly. The contexts here and in 2 Thess. 3:6, 7, 11 show that the form of unruly conduct in view is an irresponsible refusal to work for a living. Many think this behavior was fed by an overripe expectancy of Christ's Second Coming (Introduction to 2 Thessalonians).

■ 5:15 A Christian must seek justice for others (Is. 56:1; 58:6–8). It is a remarkable part of Christian morality that the Christian, following the example of Christ (1 Pet. 2:21–23), should refuse to seek personal retaliation (Matt. 5:38–42; Rom. 12:17–21; 1 Cor. 6:7; 1 Pet. 3:9).

■ 5:19–21 Paul admonishes the Thessalonians not to despise legitimate prophecy; both Silas and Paul were "prophets" (Acts 13:1; 15:32). Nevertheless, claims to divine prophecy must be tested and not accepted uncritically (2 Thess. 2:2; cf. 1 Cor. 14:29).

■ 5:23 sanctify. The complete mending of all human imperfection is not only possible but certain. God is faithful and will accomplish it (v. 24). The time element must be remembered. Ultimate perfection, to include a glorified body as well, will be accomplished at the Second Coming of Jesus Christ (Phil. 1:6). See "Sanctification: The Spirit and the Flesh" at 1 Cor. 6:11.

your whole spirit, soul, and body. Three words are used to emphasize the wholeness of the perfection. "Spirit" and "soul" are used as virtual synonyms in the Bible for the spiritual component of a person. When the terms occur together (as here and in Heb. 4:12) it is difficult to find any significant difference in meaning. Compare the fourfold representation of "heart," "soul," "mind," and "strength" in Mark 12:30.

■ 5:27 I charge you. The Greek verb is unusually strong and in effect puts the readers under oath. Paul is laying a solemn weight upon them that the whole congregation must learn the contents of this epistle—so important did he consider his apostolic teaching for their spiritual good (2:13; 4:2 notes).

The Second Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the

THESSALONIANS

Author The author of 2 Thessalonians claims to be Paul (1:1; 3:17), and in the first half of the second century the epistle was apparently known to Ignatius of Antioch, Polycarp, and Justin Martyr. Despite this early attestation, 2 Thessalonians has suffered more frequent and more influential attacks on its authenticity than has 1 Thessalonians. The close similarities in subject matter and even in phrasing between the two letters have been seen by some scholars as an indication of imitation. But this evidence can be read the other way. Who is more capable of echoing Paul's thought than Paul himself?

Some have said that the two letters teach contradictory eschatologies (doctrines of the end time and eternal future) and therefore cannot be from one author. The first letter is thought to teach an imminent return of Christ, whereas 2 Thessalonians insists that certain intervening events must occur before Christ returns. But the conflict is illusory. Nothing definite about the imminence of the Second Coming of Christ is stated in 1 Thessalonians, which stresses only the suddenness and unexpectedness with which the day of the Lord will overtake the unwary. The second letter specifies an order of events so as to counteract a new misunderstanding at Thessalonica that the day of the Lord had already arrived.

In 2:5 and 3:10 Paul reminds the Thessalonians of what he had taught while he was with them. If these statements were written by someone else using Paul's name and were not by Paul, they could have been exposed without difficulty at any time during the first generation after the events reported. Also, it is difficult to explain why anyone using Paul's name falsely as a means of gaining influence would include such a sharp attack on some of the readers as is found in 3:10, 11. On such counts the proposal that the letter is not by Paul creates more difficulties than it solves.

Date and Occasion Second Thessalonians 2:15 mentions an earlier letter from Paul. Very probably 1 Thessalonians was this earlier letter, and 2 Thessalonians is to be dated shortly after it, about A.D. 51. Both letters were written from Corinth.

Characteristics and Themes

1. Eschatology. Since sending the first letter, Paul had received further reports concerning the congregation. There was cause for rejoicing in their continued growth in faith, love, and patience (1:3, 4), as well as cause for concern in certain doctrinal and behavioral matters. Second Thessalonians was written mainly to supplement Paul's earlier teaching by correcting a premature and unsettling announcement that the day of the Lord had already arrived (2:1–11). This misguided claim may have been due in part to wrong inferences drawn from Paul's own teaching, coupled with the congregation's painful experience of persecutions thought to be indicative of end-time disturbances.

2. The Importance of Work. A second motive for writing was to deal with the chronic idleness of some members (3:6–15). Their behavior had continued uncorrected since the last letter (1 Thess. 4:11, 12; 5:14) and, indeed, ever since the missionaries had been present (3:10, 11). Exhortations were made even then in an attempt to rectify the situation but, according to fresh reports (3:11), matters had only grown worse. Many scholars believe the cause of idleness was the erroneous expectation that the Lord's return might happen so soon (2:1–3) that working for a living amounted to a denial of faith. Some connection between a faulty eschatology and faulty conduct of this sort is likely in the Thessalonian context. Yet it must be said that Paul never draws the connection himself. Since 3:10 shows that the problem had surfaced while the missionaries were still in Thessalonica, it is unlikely that eschatological errors gave birth to the problem, though they may have provided a convenient excuse for continuing in it. □

PAUL, Silvanus, and Timothy,

To the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 [a]Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

God's Final Judgment and Glory

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is fitting, because your faith grows exceedingly, and the love of every one of you all abounds toward each other, 4 so that [b]we ourselves boast of you among the churches of God [c]for your patience and faith [d]in all your persecutions and [1]tribulations that you endure, 5 which is [e]manifest[2] evidence of the righteous judgment of God, that you may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, [f]for which you also suffer; 6 [g]since it is a righteous thing with God to repay with [3]tribulation those who trouble you, 7 and to give you who are troubled [h]rest with us when [i]the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, 8 in flaming fire taking vengeance on those who do not know God, and on those who do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9 [j]These shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and [k]from the glory of His power, 10 when He comes, in that Day, [l]to be [m]glorified in His saints and to be admired among all those who [4]believe, because our testimony among you was believed.

11 Therefore we also pray always for you that our God would [n]count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of His goodness and [o]the work of faith with power, 12 [p]that the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and you in Him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

■ 1:1 See note on 1 Thess. 1:1.

■ 1:4 persecutions and tribulations. One instance of persecution is recounted in Acts 17:5–9, and the Thessalonian correspondence reveals that antagonism had not disappeared (1 Thess. 1:6; 2:14; 3:3).

■ 1:5 counted worthy. A life worthy of God (1 Thess. 2:12), of God's calling (1:11; Eph. 4:1), of the Lord (Col. 1:10), of the gospel (Phil. 1:27, 28), or of the kingdom (v. 5) is a life of patient, joyful discipleship even in the face of life-threatening abuse from those hostile to the faith. Such lives are sure evidence that God's judgment is right.

for which you also suffer. Even while enjoying the benefits of citizenship in the heavenly kingdom (1 Thess. 2:12 note), Christians still must suffer for its sake (Acts 14:22), since the kingdom will inevitably confront diabolical opposition.

■ 1:6 repay with tribulation. In Rom. 2:9 the same Greek word for "tribulation" (trouble) is used for the woe brought upon evildoers at the Last Judgment. Paul appears to be speaking of the same judgment here, as the next verses are concerned with ultimate bliss and woe.

■ 1:8 obey the gospel. The gospel must be accepted, believed, and obeyed (1 Pet. 4:17). Its divine command is for absolute surrender to God through the peace made by Jesus Christ.

■ 1:9 everlasting destruction. The fearful doctrine of eternal punishment (Is. 66:24; Matt. 25:42, 46; Mark 9:43, 48), staggering as it is, assured the hounded Thessalonian Christians of final and perfect justice. They were to refrain from taking personal revenge (1 Thess. 5:15; cf. Rom. 12:17–21) for the atrocities they suffered (v. 4), entrusting themselves instead to the God "who judges righteously" (1 Pet. 2:23; cf. Jer. 17:10; Acts 17:31; Rom. 2:6, 11, 16; Rev. 22:12).

■ 1:10 in that Day. The "day of the Lord" (1 Thess. 5:2). Although we have no way of knowing how long the Day will last, the impression given is that the final judgment of the ungodly closely accompanies the coming of Christ for His saints.

■ 1:11 this calling. Such "calling" should be related to 1 Thess. 2:12, where God is the One who calls; what we are called to is God's own kingdom and glory (2:14).

■ 1:12 our God and the Lord Jesus Christ. As it stands the Greek can also be translated, "our God and Lord, Jesus Christ." This would be a distinct use of the term "God" in reference to Jesus Christ. Arguing against such a translation is the infrequent application of this term to Christ in the New Testament (Rom. 9:5; Titus 2:13; 2 Pet. 1:1). On the other hand, Paul often brings Christ and God the Father together into close unity in other phrases in these letters (e.g., vv. 1, 2; 2:16; 1 Thess. 1:1; 3:11), and he clearly ascribes attributes of deity to Christ. In either translation the joint dignity of the Father and the Son is clear.

The Great Apostasy

2 Now, brethren, [a]concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ [b]and our gathering together to Him, we ask you, [2][c]not to be soon shaken in mind or troubled, either by spirit or by word or by letter, as if from us, as though the day of [f]Christ had come. [3] Let no one deceive you by any means; for that Day will not come [d]unless the falling away comes first, and [e]the man of [2]sin is revealed, [f]the son of perdition, [4] who opposes and [g]exalts himself [h]above all that is called God or that is worshiped, so that he sits [3]as God in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God.

[5] Do you not remember that when I was still with you I told you these things? [6] And now you know what is restraining, that he may be revealed in his own time. [7] For [i]the [4]mystery of lawlessness is already at work; only [5]He who now restrains will do so until [5]He is taken out of the way. [8] And then the lawless one will be revealed, [j]whom the Lord will consume [k]with the breath of His mouth and destroy [l]with the brightness of His coming. [9] The coming of the lawless one is [m]according to the working of Satan, with all power, [n]signs, and lying wonders, [10] and with all unrighteous deception among [o]those who perish, because they did not receive [p]the love of the truth, that they might be saved. [11] And [q]for this reason God will send them strong delusion, [r]that they should believe the lie, [12] that they all may be condemned who did not believe the truth but [s]had pleasure in unrighteousness.

Stand Fast

[13] But we are [6]bound to give thanks to God always for you, brethren beloved by the Lord, because God [t]from the beginning [u]chose you for salvation [v]through [7]sanctification by the Spirit and belief in the truth, [14] to which He called you by our gospel, for [w]the obtaining of the glory of

■ 2:1 concerning the coming . . . and our gathering together to Him. This is the rapture of the saints spoken of in 1 Thess. 4:17 (note). Paul appears to equate the time of Christ's coming and the rapture with the "day of the Lord" (1 Thess. 5:2; cf. 1 Cor. 1:7, 8; Phil. 2:16). In this scene all believers are gathered before the Lord "at His coming" (1 Thess. 2:19) and "in the day of the Lord Jesus" (2 Cor. 1:14). The "falling away" must come and the "man of sin" (v. 3) must be revealed before the day of the Lord arrives, and therefore they must also occur before the rapture of the saints. If the false teachers were saying that the day of the Lord had arrived (v. 2) and were anticipating the rapture at any moment, they could be proved wrong by the absence of these prior signs.

■ 2:2 letter. This reference does not prove there was a forged letter bearing Paul's name already in existence, but only that Paul saw this as a possibility. Word may have reached him that the new teaching was circulating with some pretense of having his authority. Paul's injunction is meant to ensure that no vehicle of instruction—even one supposed to have come from him—should be heeded if it asserts that the day of the Lord has already come (cf. Gal. 1:8).

■ 2:3 the falling away. This might refer to a falling away of many within the church (1 Tim. 4:1; 2 Tim. 3:1–9; Jude 17–19), to an apostasy of the Jewish people, or to a worldwide rebellion against God.

man of sin. This is an individual embodiment of wickedness, whose arrogant blasphemies Paul lists (cf. 1 John 2:22). He will draw away by deception those already inclined against the true God (v. 10) and will ultimately commit the sacrilege of thrusting himself upon humanity as its object of worship (v. 4). He comes by the power of Satan, as Christ came by the power of God, and he works fraudulent wonders as Christ worked true ones (v. 9; cf. Acts 2:22). Paul depicts this imposter as a parody or antithesis of the true Christ. Paul himself does not use the term "antichrist" (1 John 2:18, 22; 4:3), but it is a fitting designation. His fate is sealed; he will be destroyed by the coming of Christ. See "The Return of Christ" at 1 Thess. 4:16.

■ 2:4 exalts himself above all that is called God. This description of the man of sin echoes that of Daniel's little "horn" (Dan. 7:8, 20, 25; 8:9–12; cf. 11:31, 36) and foreshadows John's description of the beast from the sea (Rev. 13:1–8).

sits as God in the temple of God. Some conclude from this verse that the temple in Jerusalem, still standing when Paul wrote but destroyed in A.D. 70, must be rebuilt for the use of "the man of sin." Others understand "temple" in another of its New Testament meanings, as the church (Eph. 2:19–22; 1 Pet. 2:5). The reference may be an intentionally exaggerated way of talking about the imposter's aspirations to heavenly power. Just as another prototype of sin, the king of Babylon wanted to set his throne in heaven (Is. 14:13, 14; cf. the king of Tyre in Ezek. 28:2), so the man of sin will boast of himself as the possessor of God's heavenly sanctuary (Rev. 13:6).

■ 2:6 The identity of what is "restraining" the man of sin (vv. 6, 7; cf. Rev. 20:1–3) is no longer self-evident to readers of 2 Thessalonians. Interpreters have proposed numerous alternatives. The restraining power seems to be both impersonal (v. 6, "what is restraining") and personal (v. 7, "He who now restrains"). Hence it may be an institution that can also be represented by a single person, such as the Roman state with its emperor, the Jewish state with its leader, or the universal ministry of the gospel with Paul as its chief minister. Whatever the precise reference, it is clear that behind the restraining power is the will of God.

■ 2:7 already at work. Though the man of sin has not yet appeared, Paul will not allow his readers to let down their guard. The same satanic power that will ultimately spawn this unholy deceiver was already at work in Paul's day (1 John 2:18) and is at work in ours. Because it is now restrained, the church has a strong encouragement to carry out its mission.

■ 2:8 with the breath of His mouth. The description is from Is. 11:4. It reappears in Rev. 19:15, 21 where the beast and his false prophet meet their final end.

■ 2:9 The coming of Christ is to be preceded by the "coming of the lawless one."

■ 2:13, 14 There is a wealth of instruction in these two verses. Major elements in the biblical doctrine of salvation—election, calling, faith, sanctification, and glorification—are presented in their mutual relations. There is a harmonious working of all three Persons of the Trinity: God the Father choosing and calling, God the Son sharing His glory with His people, and God the Holy Spirit imparting His sanctifying grace (1 Pet. 1:2).

■ 2:13 But. With this word Paul begins to assure his readers that he does not include them with those he has just mentioned in vv. 11 and 12, who refuse to love the truth and will fall prey to deception.

Effectual Calling and Conversion

"Effectual calling" is the title of ch. 10 of the Westminster Confession (1647). The chapter begins:

> All those whom God hath predestinated unto life, and those only, He is pleased, in His appointed and accepted time, effectually to call, by His Word and Spirit, out of that state of sin and death, in which they are by nature, to grace and salvation, by Jesus Christ; enlightening their minds spiritually and savingly to understand the things of God, taking away their heart of stone, and giving unto them a heart of flesh; renewing their wills, and, by His almighty power, determining them to that which is good, and effectually drawing them to Jesus Christ: yet so, as they come most freely, being made willing by His grace.
>
> What is described here is the process of Christian conversion, involving illumination, regeneration, and the transformation of the will. It is a sovereign work of God, "effectually" (that is, effectively) performed by the power of the Holy Spirit. The doctrine corresponds to Paul's use of the word "call" in the sense of "to bring to faith," and his use of "called" to mean "converted" (Rom. 1:6; 8:28, 30; 9:24; 1 Cor. 1:9, 24, 26; 7:18, 21; Gal. 1:15; Eph. 4:1, 4; 2 Thess. 2:14). This calling is different from the general invitation, as described in Jesus' explanation of the parable of the wedding feast (Matt. 22:14). The general, external invitation can fail to be answered, but the effectual calling is a particular act of God resulting in regeneration. It cannot be refused (John 10:3, 4).
>
> Original sin means that all human beings are by nature "dead," or unresponsive to God. Through the effectual calling, God gives life to the dead. The outward call of God to faith in Christ is communicated everywhere through reading, preaching, and explaining the gospel. In the inner, effectual call the Holy Spirit enlightens the mind and renews the heart of those God has chosen so that the gospel is accepted as the truth of God, and God in Christ becomes the object of love and affection. When once regenerated and having the will set free to choose God and the good, a sinner turns away from the former pattern of living and receives Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior, to start a new life with Him. □

God . . . chose you. See note on 1 Thess. 1:4. From the beginning (Eph. 1:4), God chose them "through" sanctification and believing the truth, not "because of" these actions. According to Paul, the elect cannot continue to live in a godless fashion after they are converted.

■ 2:14 to which. That is, to salvation.

by our gospel. The gospel, which concerns God's Son (Rom. 1:3), is the means employed by God to call sinners to glory.

obtaining . . . the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is another way of speaking about the salvation to which God has called us (Rom. 8:30; 1 Thess. 2:12; 1 Pet. 5:10).

■ 2:15 hold the traditions. Paul passed on authoritative practical and doctrinal traditions, by word and by letter (Rom. 6:17; 1 Cor. 11:2, 23; 15:3; 2 Tim. 1:13).

epistle. Probably 1 Thessalonians.

■ 3:1, 2 Paul requests prayer for the success of the gospel and for the protection of those who bring it. Paul faced almost constant physical danger during his years of ministry. This text, along with Rom. 15:30, 31; 2 Cor. 1:11; Phil. 1:19, shows how much he relied on the prayers of God's people for the continuation of his ministry, if not for his own survival.

■ 3:3 faithful. Contrasting with the faithlessness mentioned in the previous verse is the steadfast faithfulness of our unchanging God (Mal. 3:6; 1 Cor. 1:9; 10:13; 2 Cor. 1:18; James 1:17).

have confidence in the Lord concerning you, both that you do and will do the things we command you.

5 Now may [s]the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patience of Christ.

Warning Against Idleness

6 But we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, [h]that you withdraw [i]from every brother who walks [j]disorderly and not according to the tradition which [1]he received from us. 7 For you yourselves know how you ought to follow us, for we were not disorderly among you; 8 nor did we eat anyone's bread [2]free of charge, but worked with [k]labor and toil night and day, that we might not be a burden to any of you, 9 not because we do not have [l]authority, but to make ourselves an example of how you should follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, we commanded you this: If anyone will not work, neither shall he eat. 11 For we hear that there are some who walk among you in a disorderly manner, not working at all, but are [m]busybodies. 12 Now those who are such we command and [3]exhort through our Lord Jesus Christ [n]that they work in quietness and eat their own bread.

13 But as for you, brethren, [o]do not grow weary in doing good. 14 And if anyone does not obey our word in this [4]epistle, note that person and [p]do not keep company with him, that he may be ashamed. 15 [q]Yet do not count him as an enemy, [r]but [5]admonish him as a brother.

Benediction

16 Now may [s]the Lord of peace Himself give you peace always in every way. The Lord be with you all.

■ 3:5 love of God . . . patience of Christ. Our hearts should journey to these safe spiritual harbors of meditation; it is a journey directed by the Lord.

■ 3:6–15 See Introduction: Characteristics and Themes. Paul takes firm measures against an ongoing problem of idleness and its consequences (v. 10; cf. 1 Thess. 4:11). Paul obviously regards the offense as serious, but he treats the offenders as fellow believers.

■ 3:6 withdraw. Paul may have had in mind Jesus' instructions on church discipline recorded in Matt. 18:15–17. He gives similar charges in vv. 14, 15; Rom. 16:17; 1 Cor. 5:9–13; 2 Tim. 3:1–5; Titus 3:10, 11.

■ 3:9 have authority. Paul consistently teaches that those who labor in the gospel deserve their wages (1 Cor. 9:6–18). Paul normally accepted support for his ministry, but when he feared his motives would be called into question, or when (as in Thessalonica) a strong example was needed for those who refused to work, Paul forsook his rights and would not accept compensation.

■ 3:10 Apparently the problem of idleness had surfaced before Paul and his companions left the city. Even then they had felt it necessary to urge the "disorderly" to work (vv. 6, 11).

■ 3:11 not working . . . but are busybodies. Without any business of their own, these idlers attended to the business of others.

■ 3:14 do not keep company. See note on vv. 6–15; "Church Discipline and Excommunication" at Matt. 18:15.

be ashamed. This is not retribution, but an attempt to elicit repentance and, ultimately, restoration to fellowship in the church.

■ 3:17 Though Paul had the help of secretaries in writing his letters, he customarily penned the final greeting or benediction in his own hand. He calls attention to this practice, as a mark of the letter's authenticity, here and in 1 Cor. 16:21; Col. 4:18. From Gal. 6:11 and Philem. 19, it appears that Paul wrote more than just the concluding phrases of those two letters.

The First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to

TIMOTHY

Author According to the salutations of the letters, the author of the three Pastoral Letters (1 and 2 Timothy, Titus) was the apostle Paul. The tradition of the early church is in agreement. Nevertheless, some New Testament scholars have questioned the Pauline authorship of these letters, citing alleged differences in vocabulary, style, and theology. Such arguments fail to carry conviction, and there is no persuasive reason to deny that Paul wrote these letters.

Date and Occasion The apparent inconsistencies between Paul's travels as reflected in the Pastoral Letters and his three missionary journeys as recorded in Acts have led to the suggestion that the Pastorals were written during what might be called Paul's "fourth" missionary journey. Acts ends not with Paul's death but with his house arrest in Rome (Acts 28:16, 30, 31). While the late first-century writing 1 Clement suggests that Paul was martyred in Rome, it does not link his martyrdom with the imprisonment recorded in Acts 28. The fourth-century church historian Eusebius preserves a tradition that Paul was released from that imprisonment, continued his missionary labors, and was martyred by Nero on his second visit to Rome. This tradition is supported not only by the Pastoral Letters but by Philippians and Philemon as well, which, if they were written during the Roman imprisonment recorded in Acts 28, provide evidence that Paul expected to be released (Phil. 1:25, 26; Philem. 22). A fourth missionary journey and a second imprisonment, after the imprisonment recorded in Acts 28, is the most probable setting for the Pastorals.

If there were two imprisonments, Paul was released from his first around A.D. 62. According to later tradition, he was martyred by Nero, who died in A.D. 68. Paul composed 1 Timothy while the apostle was still in the midst of his fourth missionary journey, probably during the earlier part of this period, between A.D. 62 and 64.

Timothy was a native of Lystra, a Roman colony in the province of Galatia. The son of a mixed marriage, his father was a Gentile and his mother was a Jew (Acts 16:1). Little is known about his father, who seems not to have become a Christian, but his mother and grandmother must have been converted as a result of Paul's visit to Lystra on his first missionary journey (2 Tim. 1:5). From his childhood, they had instructed Timothy in the Jewish Scriptures (2 Tim. 3:14, 15), and they were undoubtedly influential in Timothy's own conversion to Christianity.

When Paul returned to Lystra on his second missionary journey, some of the Christians called his attention to this young believer and Paul decided to take him along on his journey (Acts 16:2, 3). Two specific actions seem to have taken place at this time. First, since Paul would be evangelizing Jews, he circumcised Timothy according to Jewish custom (Acts 16:3). Second, Paul and the elders of the church laid their hands upon Timothy to set him apart and equip him for ministry (1:18; 4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6; 2:2).

Timothy traveled with Paul throughout most of his second and third missionary journeys (Acts 17:14, 15; 18:5; 19:22; 20:4), and for part of the fourth. He seems to have become Paul's protégé, and Paul speaks figuratively of himself as Timothy's "father" (Phil. 2:22) and of Timothy as his "son" (1:2, 18; 1 Cor. 4:17; 2 Tim. 1:2; 2:1). As Paul's coworker, Timothy served as Paul's representative in the churches of Thessalonica (1 Thess. 3:2, 6), Corinth (1 Cor. 4:17; 16:10), Philippi (Phil. 2:19, 23), and Ephesus (1:3).

Paul himself seems to characterize Timothy as having a "spirit of fear" (2 Tim. 1:7). Paul felt it necessary to ask the church at Corinth to receive Timothy in a manner which would set him at ease (1 Cor. 16:10, 11). In the Pastorals he had to exhort Timothy not to let anyone despise him on account of his youth (4:12), not to neglect the spiritual gift which he had received (4:14), and not to be ashamed to speak out boldly for the gospel (2 Tim. 1:8).

Apart from the statement in Heb. 13:23 that Timothy had been "set free" (presumably from prison), little is known about what happened to Timothy after the writing of 2 Timothy.

Paul wrote 1 Timothy while he was in Macedonia (1:3). He thought it necessary to leave Timothy behind in Ephesus because of the presence of false teachers in that city (1:3). Paul had established the Ephesian church early on his third missionary journey, spending about three years there (Acts 19; 20:31). At the close of that journey he had warned the Ephesian elders that false teachers, some coming from the leadership itself, would plague the church (Acts 20:29, 30), and this letter indicates that his prediction apparently came true (1:6, 19; 4:1, 2; 6:3–5, 10, 21). There is evidence that some of the false teachers either came from or moved into positions of leadership in the church (1:7, 20; 2:12; 3:6; 5:19, 20; 6:3–5, 10), and the false teachers seem especially to have made inroads among some of the women in the church (2:9–15; 3:11; 5:11–15).

Characteristics and Themes

The letter is noteworthy for its interest in church organization. It provides the longest description in the New Testament on the qualifications for "bishop" or elder (3:2–7), along with evidence for two kinds of elders, ruling and teaching (5:17); comments about supporting and rebuking elders (5:17–20); and the only explicit description in the New Testament of the qualifications for deacons (3:8–10, 12, 13). Paul's specific directives to Timothy also contain much practical advice on how a church leader is to function.

This letter is also noteworthy for its emphasis on sound doctrine (1:10; 3:9; 4:6; 6:3) and contains two theological meditations on the salvation God extends in Jesus Christ (1:13–16; 2:3–6). These include affirmations of salvation by grace (1:13–16), Christ as the one Mediator between God and humanity (2:5), and the substitutionary atonement of Christ (2:6). First Timothy also includes a poetic meditation on the work of Christ which affirms His incarnation, resurrection, and ascension (3:16); an anticipation of the Second Coming of Christ (6:14); a marvelous doxology (6:15, 16); and evidence of the expansion of the concept of "Scripture" beyond the Old Testament to include elements of the New Testament revelation (5:18, where the words of Christ as recorded in Luke 10:7 are cited).

Also distinctive about 1 Timothy are its comments about women (2:9–15), which include a lengthy section on proper care for widows in the church (5:3–16), and the background information that the book provides about Timothy, including probable references to both his baptism (6:12) and his ordination (1:18; 4:14).

Interpretive Difficulties

The details of Paul's fourth missionary journey are sketchy, since the journey must be reconstructed largely from hints in the Pastoral Letters. There is some evidence that Paul fulfilled his earlier wish to go to Spain (Rom. 15:24, 28). Either on his return from Spain or, if the contemplated journey to Spain never took place, upon his departure from Rome, he seems to have returned to the east, probably first sailing to Crete (Titus 1:5). He then traveled north to Ephesus (1:3), perhaps making a side excursion to Colosse (cf. Philem. 22), and then on to Macedonia (1:3; cf. Phil. 1:25, 26). From that point on things become less clear. Paul seems to have planned (possibly at two different times) to leave Macedonia for both Ephesus (3:14, 15; 4:13) and Nicopolis (Titus 3:12). The last we hear is that he is back in Rome awaiting execution (2 Tim. 1:8, 12; 2:9; 4:6, 7, 16), having visited Troas (2 Tim. 4:13), Miletus, and perhaps Corinth (2 Tim. 4:20).

Greeting

1 PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the commandment of God our Savior and the Lord Jesus Christ, our hope,

2 To Timothy, a [a]true son in the faith:

[b]Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

No Other Doctrine

3 As I urged you [c]when I went into Macedonia—remain in Ephesus that you may [f]charge some [d]that they teach no other doctrine, 4 [e]nor give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which cause disputes rather than godly edification which is in faith. 5 Now [f]the purpose of the commandment is love [g]from a pure heart, from a good conscience, and from [z]sincere faith, 6 from which some, having strayed, have turned aside to [h]idle talk, 7 desiring to be teachers of the law, understanding neither what they say nor the things which they affirm.

8 But we know that the law is [i]good if one uses it lawfully, 9 knowing this: that the law is not made for a righteous person, but for the lawless and insubordinate, for the ungodly and for sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, 10 for fornicators, for sodomites, for kidnappers, for liars, for perjurers, and if there is any other thing that is [y]contrary to sound doctrine, 11 according to the glorious gospel of the [j]blessed God which was [k]committed to my trust.

Glory to God for His Grace

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord who has [l]enabled me, [m]because He counted me faithful, [n]putting me into the ministry, 13 although [o]I was formerly a blasphemer, a persecutor, and an

■ 1:1, 2 Opening salutation, including sender, recipient, and benediction.

■ 1:1 apostle of Jesus Christ. One sent out as an official representative of Christ. This phrase is commonly used by Paul as a self-designation in the openings of his letters.

God our Savior. As Author of the covenant of grace, God is Savior (2:3; 4:10; Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4).

Jesus Christ, our hope. Jesus is the basis for Christian hope, because He is the Mediator of the covenant of grace (2:5; 4:10; 5:5; 6:17). See "Hope" at Heb. 6:18.

■ 1:2 true son. Cf. Titus 1:4. Paul views Timothy as his spiritual son (v. 18; 1 Cor. 4:17; Phil. 2:22; 2 Tim. 1:2; 2:1; Introduction: Date and Occasion).

Grace, mercy and peace. Paul commonly substitutes "grace" for the more standard salutation "greetings" (e.g., James 1:1). He typically adds the Jewish greeting "peace," meaning "health, wholeness of life." Here and in 2 Tim. 1:2 he also adds "mercy."

■ 1:3–7 Paul moves into the body of the letter. His intention is to instruct Timothy in how to act as Paul's representative at Ephesus (Introduction: Date and Occasion). He begins with the problem of false teaching at Ephesus (Introduction to 2 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 1:3 teach no other doctrine. The conflict in Ephesus centers on proper teaching (v. 10; 4:1, 2; 6:3; 2 Tim. 2:18).

■ 1:4 fables. See 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:4. In Titus 1:14 Paul speaks of "Jewish fables," perhaps referring to the kinds of legends about Old Testament figures that are found in many of the apocryphal Jewish writings.

endless genealogies. Perhaps a reference to an early form of the detailed speculations (often combined with Jewish myths) that developed in Gnosticism concerning the origins of the world and the innumerable spiritual beings supposedly involved in creation (cf. Titus 3:9).

■ 1:5 love. Paul's command highlights the close connection between Christian belief and practice (cf. Gal. 5:6).

■ 1:7 the law. The law of Moses.

■ 1:8–11 Paul's comments about the false teachers lead him into a digression on the purpose of the law.

■ 1:8 the law is good. See Rom. 7:7–12; Gal. 3:19–25.

■ 1:10 sound doctrine. Or "sound teaching," a running theme throughout the Pastoral Letters (3:9; 4:6; 6:3; 2 Tim. 1:13, 14; 2:2; 4:3; Titus 1:9, 13; 2:1, 2).

■ 1:11 according to the glorious gospel. The good news of what God has done in Christ is the standard by which doctrine, as well as one's understanding of the law, is judged to be sound.

■ 1:12–17 From his comments about the law Paul turns to his call by Christ and provides an exposition of the gospel as the grace God pours out upon sinners in Jesus Christ.

■ 1:13 a blasphemer, a persecutor, and an insolent man. Before his conversion Paul persecuted the church (Acts 8:3; 9:1–5; 22:4, 5; 26:9, 11; Gal. 1:13; Phil. 3:6).

because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. God did not grant Paul what he deserved, but what he needed (cf. Acts 3:17–20).

[4]insolent man; but I obtained mercy because [p]I did it ignorantly in unbelief. [14][q]And the grace of our Lord was exceedingly abundant, [r]with faith and love which are in Christ Jesus. [15][s]This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance, that [t]Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief. [16]However, for this reason I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show all longsuffering, as a pattern to those who are going to believe on Him for everlasting life. [17]Now to [u]the King eternal, [v]immortal, [w]invisible, to [5]God [x]who alone is wise, [y]be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen.

Fight the Good Fight

[18]This [6]charge I commit to you, son Timothy, according to the prophecies previously made concerning you, that by them you may wage the good warfare, [19]having faith and a good conscience, which some having rejected, concerning the faith have suffered shipwreck, [20]of whom are [z]Hymenaeus and [a]Alexander, whom I delivered to Satan that they may learn not to [b]blaspheme.

Pray for All Men

2 Therefore I [1]exhort first of all that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men, [2][a]for kings and [b]all who are in [2]authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and [3]reverence. [3]For this is [c]good and acceptable in the sight [d]of God our Savior, [4][e]who desires all men to be saved [f]and to come to the knowledge of the truth. [5][g]For there is one God and [h]one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, [6][i]who gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time, [7][j]for which I was appointed a preacher and an apostle—I am speaking the truth [4]in Christ and not lying—[k]a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and truth.

■ 1:15 This is a faithful saying and worthy of all. This expression calls attention to an important point. In the New Testament it is found only in the Pastoral Letters (3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 3:8).

I am chief. Lit. "I am the first." This is not a characterization of himself prior to his conversion. Rather, as Paul has grown in Christ he has become increasingly aware of his own sinfulness.

■ 1:16 everlasting life. God grants to all who believe in Christ not just "everlasting" life, but life in all its fullness (cf. 4:8; 6:12, 19; 2 Tim. 1:1, 10; Titus 1:2; 3:7).

■ 1:18–20 Paul returns to the theme of vv. 3–7, focusing less on Timothy's potential for success as Paul's representative than on Timothy's continued faithfulness to Christ, especially in contrast to two members (perhaps leaders) of the church at Ephesus who "concerning the faith have suffered shipwreck" (v. 19).

■ 1:18 prophecies previously made concerning you. This refers to an event, mentioned also in 4:14 and in 2 Tim. 1:6 (cf. 2 Tim. 2:2), in which a group of elders, along with Paul, laid hands on Timothy (perhaps when Timothy was set apart for ministry). At that time Timothy received a spiritual gift, along with a word of prophecy appointing him for service (cf. Acts 13:1–3).

■ 1:19 a good conscience. See "Conscience and the Law" at 1 Sam. 24:5.

■ 1:20 Hymenaeus and Alexander. Singling out these two individuals raises the question whether they were leaders in the church. Hymenaeus is mentioned again in 2 Tim. 2:17, 18 as one who has "strayed concerning the truth." It is unclear whether the name "Alexander" here and in Acts 19:33, 34 and 2 Tim. 4:14, 15 all refer to the same person.

I delivered to Satan. This is probably a reference to putting these two individuals outside the fellowship of the church and, hence, back into the world—the domain of Satan (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:2). Paul uses a similar expression in 1 Cor. 5:5 (cf. Matt. 18:17).

may learn not to blaspheme. The purpose of this excommunication is disciplinary—that the two would recognize their errors and repent (2 Tim. 2:25, 26; Titus 3:10).

■ 2:1–15 Paul moves to a series of instructions by prayer and worship, probably in response to abuses caused by the false teachers (see Introduction to 2 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 2:1 all men. As can be seen from the next expression ("for kings and all who are in authority"), this does not mean "every human being," but rather "all types of people," whatever their station in life.

■ 2:4 who desires all men to be saved. This does not mean that God sovereignly wills every human being to be saved (i.e., that God saves everyone). It may refer to God's general benevolence in taking no delight in the death of the wicked, or to God's desire that all types of people (v. 1 note) be saved (i.e., God does not choose His elect from any single group).

■ 2:5 there is one God. This is the fundamental affirmation of the Jewish religion (Deut. 6:4; cf. Rom. 3:30; 1 Cor. 8:6; Gal. 3:20; Eph. 4:6).

one Mediator between God and men. There is One who arbitrates between God and humanity and reconciles them. See theological note "Christ the Mediator."

the Man Christ Jesus. Paul's focus is on Christ's humanity, perhaps because the false teachers had denied that Christ was truly human. The full humanity of Christ is essential to His serving as Mediator of the covenant of grace.

■ 2:6 who gave Himself a ransom. By His death on the cross, Christ paid the price necessary to free people from their sins (Matt. 20:28; Mark 10:45; Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19). Thus, He is the "one Mediator" (v. 5).

all. In keeping with vv. 1 and 4, this is probably a reference to all types of people. Alternately, it expresses Paul's conviction that Christ's death was sufficient to ransom all humanity, yet by sovereign design and effect not all are redeemed. See "Definite Redemption" at John 10:15.

■ 2:7 I am speaking the truth . . . not lying. An odd statement to make to a close friend, but Paul may have intended for the letter to be read to the whole church (6:21 note). Presumably the false teachers had questioned Paul's call and mission.

Christ the Mediator

The saving ministry of Jesus Christ is summed up in the statement that He is the "Mediator between God and men" (1 Tim. 2:5). A mediator is one who brings together parties who are out of communication and who may be alienated, estranged, or at war with each other. The mediator must have links with both sides so as to identify with and maintain the interests of both, and represent each to the other on a basis of goodwill. Thus Moses was mediator between God and Israel (Gal. 3:19), speaking to Israel on God's behalf when God gave the law (Ex. 20:18–21) and speaking to God on Israel's behalf when Israel had sinned (Ex. 32:9—33:17).

Every member of our fallen and rebellious race is by nature in "enmity against God" (Rom. 8:7), standing under God's wrath, the punitive rejection whereby as Judge He expresses active anger at our sins (Rom. 1:18; 2:5–9; 3:5, 6). Reconciliation of the alienated parties is needed, but can only occur if God's wrath is quenched and the human heart, that opposes God and motivates a life against God, is changed. In mercy, God sent His Son into the world to bring about the needed reconciliation. It was not that the kindly Son acted to placate the harsh Father; the initiative was the Father's own. In Augustine's words, "in a wonderful and divine way even when He hated us, He loved us" (Commentary on John 110.6; cf. John 3:16; Rom. 5:5–8; 1 John 4:8–10). In all His mediatorial ministry the Son was doing His Father's will (see "The Humble Obedience of Christ" at John 5:19).

Objectively and once for all, Christ achieved reconciliation for His people through penal substitution. On the cross He took our place, carried our identity as it were, bore the curse due to us (Gal. 3:13), and by His sacrificial shedding of blood made peace for us (Eph. 2:16–18; Col. 1:20). Peace here means an end to hostility, guilt, and exposure to the retributive punishment that was otherwise unavoidable—in other words, forgiveness for all the past, and eternal, personal acceptance for the future. Those who have received reconciliation through faith in Christ are justified and have peace with God (Rom. 5:1, 10). The Mediator's present work, which He carries forward through human messengers, is to persuade those for whom He achieved reconciliation actually to receive it (John 12:32; Rom. 15:18; 2 Cor. 5:18–21; Eph. 2:17).

Jesus is "the Mediator of the new covenant" (Heb. 9:15; 12:24), the initiator of a new relationship of conscious peace with God, going beyond what was known under the Old Testament arrangements for dealing with the guilt of sin (Heb. 9:11—10:18).

One of Calvin's great contributions to Christian understanding was his observation that the New Testament writers expound Jesus' mediatorial ministry in terms of the three "offices" (defined roles) of prophet, priest, and king. These three aspects of Christ's work are found together in the letter to the Hebrews, where Jesus is both the messianic King, exalted to His throne (1:3, 13; 4:16; 2:9), as well as the great High Priest (2:17; 4:14—5:10; chs. 7—10), who offered Himself to God as a sacrifice for our sins. In addition, Christ is the messenger ("Apostle," 3:1), who preached the message concerning Himself (2:3). In Acts 3:22 Jesus is called a "Prophet" for the same reason that Hebrews calls Him "Apostle," namely, because He instructed people by declaring to them the word of God.

While in the Old Testament the mediating roles of prophet, priest, and king were fulfilled by separate individuals, all three offices now coalesce in the one person of Jesus. It is His glory, given Him by the Father, to be in this way the all-sufficient Savior. We who believe are called to understand this, and to show ourselves His people by obeying Him as our king, trusting Him as our priest, and learning from Him as our prophet and teacher. To center on Jesus Christ in this way is the hallmark of authentic Christianity. □

■ 2:8–15 Paul moves to the problem of the divisive spirit of the false teachers, with specific admonitions for men and women (note on vv. 1–15).

■ 2:8 men. Paul assumes in 1 Cor. 11:5 that women, too, will pray when the church meets for worship. Here he is addressing a specific problem at Ephesus.

everywhere. Lit. "in every place." This probably refers to corporate worship.

priety and [5]moderation, not with braided hair or gold or pearls or costly clothing, [10] [o]but, which is proper for women professing godliness, with good works. [11] Let a woman learn in silence with all submission. [12] And [p]I do not permit a woman to teach or to have authority over a man, but to be in silence. [13] For Adam was formed first, then Eve. [14] And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived, fell into transgression. [15] Nevertheless she will be saved in childbearing if they continue in faith, love, and holiness, with self-control.

3 This is a faithful saying: If a man desires the position of a [1]bishop, he desires a good work. [2] A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, temperate, sober-minded, of good behavior, hospitable, able to teach; [3] not [2]given to wine, not violent, [3]not greedy for money, but gentle, not quarrelsome, not [4]covetous; [4] one who rules his own house well, having his children in submission with all reverence [5] (for if a man does not know how to rule his own house, how will he take care of the church of God?); [6] not a [5]novice, lest being puffed up with pride he fall into the same condemnation as the devil. [7] Moreover he must have a good testimony among those who are outside, lest he fall into reproach and the [q]snare of the devil.

lifting up holy hands. On this posture in prayer, see Ps. 63:4; 141:2.

without wrath and doubting. Paul is not concerned to mandate a particular posture, but to encourage a proper attitude (1:5).

■ 2:9 modest apparel . . . costly clothing. Paul is not concerned with clothing and jewelry as such, but with the attitude of the one wearing them (1 Pet. 3:3, 4). Greco-Roman society was characterized by extravagance in dress.

■ 2:11 in silence. As 1 Cor. 11:5 indicates, Paul does not forbid all vocal participation by women in the worship service. Rather, Paul enjoins silence of a particular sort—a silence that respects the authoritative teaching and governing role assigned to the leaders of the church (v. 12).

all submission. Submission does not necessarily indicate a lower status. Elsewhere Paul applies the concept to wives (Eph. 5:22; Col. 3:18; Titus 2:5; cf. 1 Cor. 14:34), husbands and wives (Eph. 5:21), children (3:4), slaves (Titus 2:9), prophets (1 Cor. 14:32), Christians (Rom. 13:1, 5; 1 Cor. 16:16; Titus 3:1), the church (Eph. 5:24), and even Christ Himself (1 Cor. 15:28).

■ 2:12 I do not permit. Here Paul exercises his apostolic authority in restricting women from exercising a certain kind of authority and teaching.

to have authority over. This Greek word, appears only here in the New Testament and is probably used by Paul to refer to some level of judicial or governing authority. Under the influence of the false teachers, certain women have apparently moved into positions of governing authority within the church, which Paul prohibited (1 Cor. 14:34).

in silence. See note on v. 11.

■ 2:13 Paul appeals to creation (Gen. 2:7, 21, 22). He uses a similar argument, though with some qualification, in 1 Cor. 11:8–12.

■ 2:14 Again Paul alludes to Genesis, this time to the account of the Fall (Gen. 3:1–6). The argument might seem unfair, since both Adam and Eve sinned. But Paul's point is correct: Eve was the one who was "deceived" by the serpent. Paul's argument here, with its emphasis on who was deceived, is probably a reflection of the relative success that the false teachers at Ephesus have had in leading women astray (5:11–15; 2 Tim. 3:6, 7). Elsewhere Paul has no qualms about blaming the Fall on Adam (Rom. 5:12–19; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22).

■ 2:15 she. This probably refers to any woman who has been deceived.

will be saved. Probably not "brought safely," as some hold. Paul uses his normal word meaning "redemption from sin," thereby contrasting being deceived into sin (v. 14) with being saved from it. Alternately, the term "saved" may indicate the reception of some important though unspecified, benefit from God.

in childbearing. The interpretation "through the birth of the Child" (Jesus), however attractive it might be theologically, is doubtful. Clearly Paul intends another allusion to Genesis, this time to God's statement to Eve after the Fall concerning her role in childbearing (Gen. 3:16).

if they continue in faith, love, and holiness, with self-control. This qualification shows that Paul is not suggesting that childbearing is an act that merits salvation, which would contradict his doctrine of justification by faith. Rather, his point seems to be that those women at Ephesus who have been deceived by the false teachers need to focus on their proper role, and especially their attitudes (vv. 8–10; 1:5, 19). Given his use of Gen 2; 3 in his argument and the false teachers' disparagement of marriage (4:3), Paul finds "childbearing" to be a convenient symbol for that role (5:14).

■ 3:1–13 Paul now turns to the subject of leadership in the church. He discusses first bishops (vv. 1–7; text note, v. 1), then deacons (vv. 8–10, 12, 13, with a digression on women in v. 11). Paul's focus on the personal qualities of those who would serve in these positions, rather than their duties, indicates his concern to install the right people, perhaps because some of the false teachers have come from, or are seeking, positions of leadership.

■ 3:1 This is a faithful saying. See note on 1:15. The use of this expression here reflects the importance Paul attaches to the task of the bishop.

bishop. See text note. One of a group of individuals charged with the general care of the church (v. 5; Phil. 1:1). The word is used interchangeably with "elder" (Acts 20:17, 28; Titus 1:5–7). See "Pastors and Pastoral Care" at 1 Pet. 5:2.

■ 3:2 blameless. A general heading to the qualifications for bishop or elder. This expression does not mean "without sin," which would disqualify everyone, but "above scandalous reproach." Paul's overriding concern is that bishops (elders) have a good standing among non-Christians (v. 7). On the qualifications for bishops (elders), see Titus 1:6–9.

the husband of one wife. This difficult expression (v. 12; Titus 1:6; cf. 5:9) has been understood to prohibit polygamy, remarriage after a divorce, or marital infidelity. Given the widespread immorality in the Greco-Roman world, the last would seem to fit Paul's focus the best.

able to teach. To mention the teaching aspect of the bishop's (elder's) task is important, given the problem at Ephesus (5:17).

■ 3:5 take care of the church of God. A general statement of the bishop's (elder's) responsibility.

■ 3:6 not a novice, lest . . . puffed up with pride. For a Christian to move too quickly into this position could be an occasion for pride.

fall into the same condemnation as the devil. Paul does not view lightly the fall of those holding this office, perhaps because some bishops had become involved in the false teaching (v. 1).

Qualifications of Deacons

8 Likewise deacons must be reverent, not double-tongued, [b]not given to much wine, not greedy for money, 9 holding the [6]mystery of the faith with a pure conscience. 10 But let these also first be tested; then let them serve as deacons, being found blameless. 11 Likewise, their wives must be reverent, not [7]slanderers, temperate, faithful in all things. 12 Let deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. 13 For those who have served well as deacons [c]obtain for themselves a good standing and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

The Great Mystery

14 These things I write to you, though I hope to come to you shortly; 15 but if I am delayed, I write so that you may know how you ought to conduct yourself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and [8]ground of the truth. 16 And without controversy great is the [9]mystery of godliness:

[d]God[1] was manifested in the flesh,
[e]Justified in the Spirit,
[f]Seen by angels,
[g]Preached among the Gentiles,
[h]Believed on in the world,
[i]Received up in glory.

The Great Apostasy

4 Now the Spirit [1]expressly says that in latter times some will depart from the faith, giving heed [a]to deceiving spirits and doctrines of demons, 2 [b]speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their own conscience [c]seared with a hot iron, 3 forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from foods which God created to be received with thanksgiving by those who believe and know the truth. 4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing is to be refused if it is received with thanksgiving; 5 for it is [2]sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

■ 3:8 deacons. Deacons are officers in the church alongside bishops or elders (cf. Phil. 1:1). The precise tasks of the deacon are not spelled out in this passage. The church has usually viewed the ministry in terms of the role of the seven chosen to help the apostles in Acts 6:1–6, although "deacon" is not used in regard to the seven in that passage.

■ 3:9 the mystery. A term used elsewhere by Paul to refer to the revealed truth of the gospel (v. 16; Rom. 16:25, 26; 1 Cor. 2:7; 4:1; Eph. 1:9; 3:3–9; 6:19; Col. 1:26, 27; 2:2; 4:3). Perhaps some of the deacons at Ephesus had been taken in by the false teaching.

■ 3:10 first be tested. This is probably not a reference to a specific testing period, but rather a careful examination of their conduct and their commitment to sound teaching.

being found blameless. Paul uses the same Greek word in regard to bishops in Titus 1:6, 7; his requirement that bishops be "blameless" in v. 2 (note) uses a Greek synonym.

■ 3:11 their wives. Lit. "women." This verse abruptly interrupts the section on deacons. Its meaning is contested. The "women" are probably either the wives of the deacons or themselves deacons.The abruptness of the insertion probably reflects Paul's concern that women, in particular, have not fared well at the hands of the false teachers (2:14; 5:15).

■ 3:12 the husbands of one wife. See note on v. 2.

■ 3:14–16 Having provided Timothy with specific instructions on prayer, worship, and church offices, Paul now states his reason for writing the letter (Introduction: Date and Occasion). He discusses the nature of the church and offers a poetic meditation on the work of Christ.

■ 3:15 pillar and ground. Both terms have the connotation of providing support. Paul's intent is to emphasize, over against the false teachers, that the truth of the gospel is found in and sustained by God's church (2 Tim. 2:19).

■ 3:16 mystery of godliness. See note on v. 9. What follows may be a fragment of an early Christian hymn.

God was manifested in the flesh. A reference to the Incarnation, with a hint at Christ's pre-existence.

Justified in the Spirit. A reference to Christ's resurrection (Rom. 1:4).

Seen by angels. A reference to the Ascension (Acts 1:10, 11).

Preached among the Gentiles. See "The Authentication of Scripture" at 2 Cor. 4:6.

Received up in glory. A reference to Christ's exaltation to the right hand of God (Acts 7:56).

■ 4:1–5 Returning to his main theme again (1:3–20), Paul continues his attack on the false teachers and their teachings.

■ 4:1 the Spirit expressly says. Presumably a specific revelation the Holy Spirit granted to someone, perhaps Paul himself (Acts 20:22–31; cf. 21:11).

in latter times. This is not a period just prior to the Second Coming of Christ. Rather, in keeping with the overall New Testament perspective, it is the era inaugurated by Christ's First Advent and completed at His second (Acts 2:17; Heb. 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:20; 1 John 2:18; cf. 2 Tim. 3:1).

some will . . . demons. A reference to the false teachers, who have arisen within the church.

■ 4:3 forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from foods. The false teachers promote a rigorous lifestyle (cf. Col. 2:20–23). Some Gnostics argued that since the material world was evil, the spiritual individual should avoid it.

which. The following argument focuses on foods. Paul has already affirmed marriage in 3:2, 12.

■ 4:4 every creature of God is good. Contrary to the false teachers, the Christian affirms the essential goodness of God's creation (Gen. 1).

A Good Servant of Jesus Christ

6 If you instruct the brethren in these things, you will be a good minister of Jesus Christ, [d]nourished in the words of faith and of the good doctrine which you have carefully followed. 7 But [e]reject profane and old wives' fables, and [f]exercise yourself toward godliness. 8 For [g]bodily exercise profits a little, but godliness is profitable for all things, [h]having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. 9 This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance. 10 For to this end [3]we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, [i]who is the Savior of all men, especially of those who believe. 11 These things command and teach.

Take Heed to Your Ministry

12 Let no one [4]despise your youth, but be an [j]example to the believers in word, in conduct, in love, [5]in spirit, in faith, in purity. 13 Till I come, give attention to reading, to exhortation, to [6]doctrine. 14 [k]Do not neglect the gift that is in you, which was given to you by prophecy [l]with the laying on of the hands of the eldership. 15 Meditate on these things; give yourself entirely to them, that your progress may be evident to all. 16 Take heed to yourself and to the doctrine. Continue in them, for in doing this you will save both yourself and those who hear you.

3 Honor widows who are really widows. 4 But if any widow has children or grandchildren, let them first learn to show piety at home and [a]to repay their parents; for this is [l]good and acceptable before God. 5 Now she who is really a widow, and left alone, trusts in God and continues in supplications and prayers [b]night and day. 6 But she who lives in [2]pleasure is dead while she lives. 7 And these things command, that they may be blameless. 8 But if anyone does not provide

■ 4:6—5:2 Having exposed the false teachers for what they are, Paul continues with a series of personal admonitions to Timothy regarding his ministry.

■ 4:6 nourished. The "good minister" must be continually nourished by true doctrine.

■ 4:7 profane and old wives' fables. See note on 1:4.

exercise . . . toward godliness. Throughout this section, Paul intertwines spiritual discipline with official duties.

■ 4:9 See note on 1:15.

■ 4:10 Savior of all men. The general call to repentance and salvation is extended to all people (Matt. 11:28). See "Definite Redemption" at John 10:15.

especially of those who believe. Salvation is God's gift, in particular to those who trust in His provision in Christ (Matt. 22:14; Rom. 8:30).

■ 4:12 Let no one despise your youth. The negative commands here and in v. 14 may indicate that Timothy had a tendency towards shyness or timidity. Furthermore, some in the church at Ephesus may not have accepted his authority (Introduction: Date and Occasion). Timothy was probably in his thirties, and therefore was younger than many of the Christians (and elders) at Ephesus.

be an example . . . in purity. Timothy is to establish his authority, not by flaunting it but by setting an example of godly living (Titus 2:7).

give attention . . . to doctrine. These are positive methods for exposing the false teaching and neutralizing its impact (cf. 1:3, 4).

■ 4:14 the gift. See note on 1:18.

■ 4:15 your progress. A reference to the advancement of Timothy's spiritual life, his ministry, or perhaps both. Noteworthy is the fact that it is "progress," not arrival.

■ 4:16 to yourself and to the doctrine. That Paul summarizes his instructions to Timothy in this manner is an indication of where the false teachers have gone astray, and, hence, where Christians in general can go astray.

you will save. God alone grants salvation (v. 10; 1:1; 2:3), but He is pleased to use His people as instruments in bringing salvation to others. Salvation is not completed when one comes to faith. To be sure, faith brings justification and the assurance of salvation. But faith also begins the lifelong process of sanctification that continues until the Christian's final glorification in heaven.

yourself. Sanctification is a work of God which demands the cooperative activity of the Christian (Phil. 2:12).

■ 5:1 Do not rebuke an older man. A command that balances that in 4:12. Timothy is not to abuse the authority he possesses.

exhort. Or, "encourage." The good minister appeals to other believers with the respect deserved by members of one's family.

■ 5:3—6:2 Paul now turns his attention to three groups in which problems had apparently arisen in the church at Ephesus: widows, elders, and slaves.

■ 5:3–16 Paul's concern to identify needy widows and provide for their proper care forms the backdrop for a discussion of the problems of younger widows, some of whom have apparently become influenced by the false teaching at Ephesus (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 5:3 Honor. That is, care for.

who are really widows. The care of widows, who frequently had great material needs, is a major theme in the Old Testament (Deut. 24:19–21; Is. 1:17; Jer. 22:3; Zech. 7:9, 10; Mal. 3:5) and was a special concern of the early church (v. 16; Acts 6:1; James 1:27).

■ 5:4 But if any widow has children or grandchildren. The truly needy widow had no family from which to receive support (vv. 8, 16).

■ 5:5 trusts in God. Genuine poverty often drove widows to exemplary lives of prayer and faithful dependence upon God. For such widows, the church is to be the visible hand of God in providing for needs.

■ 5:6 dead. Spiritually dead.

■ 5:7 command, that they may be blameless. Perhaps a reference not to the whole church, but just to the widows.

for his own, [c]and especially for those of his household, [d]he has denied the faith [e]and is worse than an unbeliever.

[9] Do not let a widow under sixty years old be taken into the number, and not unless she has been the wife of one man, [10] well reported for good works: if she has brought up children, if she has lodged strangers, if she has washed the saints' feet, if she has relieved the afflicted, if she has diligently followed every good work.

[11] But [3]refuse the younger widows; for when they have begun to grow wanton against Christ, they desire to marry, [12] having condemnation because they have cast off their first [4]faith. [13] And besides they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house, and not only idle but also gossips and busybodies, saying things which they ought not. [14] Therefore I desire that the younger widows marry, bear children, manage the house, give no opportunity to the adversary to speak reproachfully. [15] For some have already turned aside after Satan. [16] If any believing [5]man or woman has widows, let them [6]relieve them, and do not let the church be burdened, that it may relieve those who are really widows.

Honor the Elders

[17] Let the elders who rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in the word and doctrine. [18] For the Scripture says, [f]"You shall not muzzle an ox while it treads out the grain," and, [g]"The laborer is worthy of his wages." [19] Do not receive an accusation against an elder except [h]from two or three witnesses. [20] Those who are sinning rebuke in the presence of all, that the rest also may fear.

[21] I charge you before God and the Lord Jesus Christ and the [7]elect angels that you observe these things without [i]prejudice, doing nothing with partiality. [22] Do not lay hands on anyone hastily, nor [j]share in other people's sins; keep yourself pure.

[23] No longer drink only water, but use a little wine for your stomach's sake and your frequent [8]infirmities.

[24] Some men's sins are [k]clearly evident, preceding them to judgment, but those of some men follow later. [25] Likewise, the good works of some are clearly evident, and those that are otherwise cannot be hidden.

■ 5:9 a widow . . . be taken into the number. Some have seen here an official order of widows with duties to perform (vv. 5, 10); others have seen an agreement whereby some widows provide certain services for the church in exchange for material support. More likely the list is simply of widows who are to receive support from the church (v. 16). This list constitutes a portion of the larger group of widows dealt with in vv. 3–5.

the wife of one man. See note on 3:2.

■ 5:10 has brought up children. The verbs in this verse are in the past tense. Paul's concern is not with what the widow might still do for the church but with what she has accomplished in her life.

washed the saints' feet. A conventional expression of hospitality in a culture where people wore sandals and walked dusty roads (cf. John 13:4, 5). Jesus commanded His disciples to wash each others' feet (John 13:14, 15).

■ 5:11 to grow wanton. Lit. "when they live sensually."

■ 5:12 have cast off their first faith. This probably does not refer to a vow of celibacy or of devotion to the church, but to their basic commitment to Christ (vv. 11, 15).

■ 5:13 gossips. Lit. "those who talk nonsense." This is probably a reference to the false teachings (v. 15; 1:3; 4:7).

■ 5:14 bear children. See note on 2:15.

■ 5:15 Paul gives much attention to widows because some of the younger widows had come under the influence of the false teachers (2 Tim. 3:6, 7).

■ 5:17–25 As with widows, Paul addresses the twin issues of proper honor for elders and how to deal with those who sin.

■ 5:17 elders. See note on 3:1; "Pastors and Pastoral Care" at 1 Pet. 5:2.

double honor. The honor of the position as well as financial remuneration (v. 18).

especially . . . doctrine. This is a reference to two kinds of elders: those who govern the church and those who, in addition, carry out the more specialized ministry of preaching and teaching.

■ 5:18 For the Scripture says. That Paul cites both Deut. 25:4 and a saying of Jesus recorded in Luke 10:7 as "Scripture" is an indication of how soon Christian writings were being placed on the same level of authority as the Old Testament (2 Pet. 3:15, 16).

■ 5:20 Those who are sinning. Elders who sin (some had apparently become involved in the false teaching).

■ 5:21 the elect angels. Those who will presumably serve as witnesses at the Judgment (cf. Matt. 25:31; Rev. 14:10).

■ 5:22 Do not lay hands . . . hastily. To participate in the ordination of an elder known to be unqualified is to approve of his sins and to risk sharing the guilt for them.

keep yourself pure. See 4:12, 16.

■ 5:23 No longer . . . only water. The practice of abstaining from wine as a matter of principle perhaps reflects the influence of the false teachers' concept of purity (4:3).

use a little wine . . . infirmities. Paul recognizes a medicinal value of wine.

■ 5:24 Some men's sins . . . judgment. Another reference to the importance of care in screening candidates for ordination.

Honor Masters

6 Let as many [a]bondservants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honor, so that the name of God and His doctrine may not be blasphemed. 2 And those who have believing masters, let them not despise them because they are brethren, but rather serve them because those who are benefited are believers and beloved. Teach and exhort these things.

Error and Greed

3 If anyone teaches otherwise and does not consent to [b]wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, [c]and to the [1]doctrine which accords with godliness, 4 he is proud, knowing nothing, but is obsessed with disputes and arguments over words, from which come envy, strife, reviling, evil suspicions, 5 [2]useless wranglings of men of corrupt minds and destitute of the truth, who suppose that godliness is a means of gain. [3]From [d]such withdraw yourself.

6 Now godliness with [e]contentment is great gain. 7 For we brought nothing into this world, [4]and it is [f]certain we can carry nothing out. 8 And having food and clothing, with these we shall be [g]content. 9 But those who desire to be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and harmful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition. 10 For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, for which some have strayed from the faith in their greediness, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

The Good Confession

11 But you, O man of God, flee these things and pursue righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, gentleness. 12 Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, to which you were also called and have confessed the good confession in the presence of many witnesses. 13 I urge you in the sight of God who gives life to all things, and before Christ Jesus [h]who witnessed the good confession before Pontius Pilate, 14 that you keep this commandment without spot, blameless until our Lord Jesus Christ's appearing, 15 which He will manifest in His own time, He who is the blessed and only [5]Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, 16 who alone has immortality, dwelling in [i]unapproachable light, [j]whom no man has seen or can see, to whom be honor and everlasting power. Amen.

Instructions to the Rich

17 Command those who are rich in this present age not to be haughty, nor to trust in uncertain [k]riches but in the living God, who gives us richly all things [l]to enjoy. 18 Let them do good, that

■ 6:3–10 Paul returns one last time to the problem of the false teachers, noting especially their divisiveness and their greed. This leads him to reflect upon the proper perspective one should have on material possessions.

■ 6:4 disputes and arguments over words. Contentiousness was one of the prominent characteristics of the false teachers (1:4; 2 Tim. 2:14, 23; Titus 3:9).

■ 6:5 a means of gain. Perhaps some of the false teachers were seeking the position of elder out of greed (v. 10; Titus 1:11).

■ 6:6 contentment. Christians can be content because their needs are met by Christ (2 Cor. 12:9, 10; Phil. 4:11, 13).

■ 6:10 some have strayed from the faith. See note on v. 5.

■ 6:11–16 As he has done previously, Paul follows his comments about the false teachers with personal exhortations to Timothy, concluding with a marvelous doxology.

■ 6:13 the good confession before Pontius Pilate. This may refer to Jesus' trial before Pilate (Matt. 27:11; Mark 15:2; Luke 23:3; John 18:33–37; 19:8–11), but is more likely an allusion to His death.

■ 6:17–19 Having condemned the love of money and affirmed the future orientation of Christian hope, Paul provides an exhortation for those who do find themselves rich in this world (presumably not from greed).

■ 6:17 to enjoy. See note on 4:4.

Guard the Faith

20 O Timothy! [n]Guard what was committed to your trust, [o]avoiding the profane and [6]idle babblings and contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge— 21 by professing it some have strayed concerning the faith.

Grace be with you. Amen.

■ 6:20, 21 Paul brings the letter to a close with one final charge to Timothy, once again set within the context of dealing with the false teachers.

what is falsely called knowledge. The false teachers emphasize "knowledge" (Greek gnosis, from which the word Gnosticism is derived; see Introduction to 2 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 6:21 Grace be with you. This abrupt conclusion, lacking Paul's usual personal greetings, suggests that Paul saw the situation he was addressing to be quite serious. Some of the earliest Greek manuscripts have the plural form of "you" (as in 2 Tim. 4:22; Titus 3:15) in this benediction, suggesting that Paul intended for the letter to be read to the entire church.

The Second Epistle of Paul the Apostle to

TIMOTHY

Author The second letter to Timothy was written by Paul. See "Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author."

Date and Occasion Although it does not appear last in the section of Paul's letters in the New Testament, 2 Timothy is the last letter written by Paul. He prepared it after his fourth missionary journey, probably between A.D. 64 and 68. See "Introduction to 1 Timothy: Date and Occasion."

Paul wrote 2 Timothy during his second Roman imprisonment (1:8; 2:9). Why he was under arrest, or even where he was arrested, is unknown. Paul had received no support at his preliminary hearing (4:16). His trial still awaited him, but he knew that it would end in his execution (4:6). Most of his friends found it convenient to be elsewhere (4:10, 11). He had been troubled by the actions of Phygellus and Hermogenes (1:15, 16) and Alexander the coppersmith (4:14), although a Christian named Onesiphorus had been an encouragement to him (1:16, 17).

Timothy was still in Ephesus (4:19), where Paul had left him previously (1 Tim. 1:3), and where the false teaching that Paul had addressed in his first letter to Timothy continued to be a problem (2:17, 18; 3:1–8). Remembering their longstanding friendship, Paul desired to see Timothy one last time before his death (1:4).

Paul seems to have written 2 Timothy with two purposes in mind. First, he directs Timothy to come to Rome (4:9, 21), providing instructions on who and what (4:11–13) to bring with him. Second, he wants to provide Timothy with a final letter of personal encouragement in his ministry (1:5–14; 2:1–16, 22–26; 3:10—4:5).

Characteristics and Themes Both of Paul's letters to Timothy provide important background information about the apostle's young protégé. This second letter names his mother (Eunice) and his grandmother (Lois), identifying them both as Christians (1:5). It speaks of Timothy's early training in the Scriptures (3:15) and includes a probable reference to his ordination (1:6; cf. 2:2).

Also like the earlier letter, 2 Timothy exhibits a strong concern for sound doctrine (1:13, 14; 2:2; 4:3) and contains marvelous meditations on the grace of God (1:9–11), the faithfulness of Christ (2:11–13), and the nature and function of Scripture (3:15–17). There are affirmations of salvation by grace (1:9), election (1:9; 2:10, 19), and the divine inspiration of Scripture (3:16). Second Timothy also affirms the resurrection (2:8) and the Second Coming (4:1, 8) of Christ.

As the last of Paul's letters, 2 Timothy provides an important final picture of Paul. His situation was bleak. No longer could he look forward to fruitful ministry (cf. Phil. 1:22–26), and most of his friends had left him (4:10, 11). Yet Paul remained confident. He was not ashamed to suffer for the gospel (1:12) and he was willing to endure everything for the sake of the elect (2:10). He knew that he had been faithful to Christ (4:7) and that Christ Himself is faithful (1:12; 2:13). Paul had confidence that the One who in the past had rescued him from death (3:11; 4:17) would rescue him through death for eternal life (4:8, 18).

Interpretive Difficulties There was false teaching at Ephesus that Paul describes as coming from within the church (2 Tim. 2:18; 4:4; 1 Tim. 1:6, 19; 4:1; 6:10, 21). It was characterized by a concern with fables or myths (4:4; 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7), genealogies (1 Tim. 1:4), quarrels about words (2:14; 23; 1 Tim. 6:4), controversies (1 Tim. 1:4; 6:4), knowledge (1 Tim. 6:20), meaningless talk (1 Tim. 1:6), and godless chatter (2:16; 1 Tim. 6:20). The false doctrines included the prohibition of marriage and of certain foods (1 Tim. 4:3) and the belief that the resurrection had already taken place (2:18). Those who taught these false doctrines also sought to interpret the Jewish law (1 Tim. 1:7) and accordingly placed restrictions on prayer (1 Tim. 2:1–7).

Specific leaders of the movement included Hymenaeus (2:17; 1 Tim. 1:20), Alexander (1 Tim. 1:20), and Philetus (2:17). Some who sought leadership positions in the movement did so for financial gain (1 Tim. 6:5, 10). The false teachers had been divisive (1 Tim. 6:4, 5) and seem to have been particularly effective in deceiving the female members of the church (3:6, 7; 1 Tim. 2:14; 5:11–15), perhaps by offering them positions of leadership (1 Tim. 2:11, 12).

A number of these features—the specific doctrinal teachings, the interest in myths and genealogies, and the concern for "knowledge" (Greek gnosis)—suggest that the false teaching at Ephesus might have been an early form of Gnosticism, a heretical movement that became a strong competitor to the developing church in the second and third centuries. However, some of the more characteristic aspects of later Gnosticism are lacking, and some assert that the movement can be explained in terms of Jewish and Hellenistic influences. These two suggestions need not be seen as contradictory, for Gnosticism itself was a product of both Jewish and Hellenistic ideas. But the precise nature of the false teaching at Ephesus remains elusive. □

Greeting

PAUL, an apostle of [1]Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the [a]promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

[2]To Timothy, a [b]beloved son:

Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

Timothy's Faith and Heritage

[3]I thank God, whom I serve with a pure conscience, as my [c]forefathers did, as without ceasing I remember you in my prayers night and day, [4]greatly desiring to see you, being mindful of your tears, that I may be filled with joy, [5]when I call to remembrance [d]the [2]genuine faith that is in you, which dwelt first in your grandmother Lois and [e]your mother Eunice, and I am persuaded is according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus. The role of the apostle is to proclaim the life that is in Christ (1 Tim. 1:16 note).

Grace . . . our Lord. See note on 1 Tim. 1:2.

■ 1:3–5 As in most of his letters (the exceptions are Galatians, 1 Timothy, and Titus), Paul follows his salutation with a section giving thanks to God for the recipients of the letter. Here he focuses on his relationship with Timothy and his confidence in Timothy's faith.

in you also. 6 Therefore I remind you [f]to stir up the gift of God which is in you through the laying on of my hands. 7 For [g]God has not given us a spirit of fear, [h]but of power and of love and of a sound mind.

Not Ashamed of the Gospel

8 [i]Therefore do not be ashamed of [j]the testimony of our Lord, nor of me [k]His prisoner, but share with me in the sufferings for the gospel according to the power of God, 9 who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, [l]not according to our works, but [m]according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus [n]before time began, 10 but [o]has now been revealed by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, 11 [p]to which I was appointed a preacher, an apostle, and a teacher [3]of the Gentiles. 12 For this reason I also suffer these things; nevertheless I am not ashamed, [q]for I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep what I have committed to Him until that Day.

Be Loyal to the Faith

13 [r]Hold fast [s]the pattern of [t]sound words which you have heard from me, in faith and love which are in Christ Jesus. 14 That good thing which was committed to you, keep by the Holy Spirit who dwells in us.

15 This you know, that all those in Asia have turned away from me, among whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes. 16 The Lord grant mercy to the [u]household of Onesiphorus, for he often refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain; 17 but when he arrived in Rome, he sought me out very zealously and found me. 18 The Lord [v]grant to him that he may find mercy from the Lord [w]in that Day—and you know very well how many ways he [x]ministered [4]to me at Ephesus.

Be Strong in Grace

2 You therefore, [a]my son, [b]be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. 2 And the things that you have heard from me among many witnesses, commit these to faithful men who will be able to teach others also. 3 You therefore must [c]endure [1]hardship [d]as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. 4 [e]No one engaged in warfare entangles himself with the affairs of this life, that he may

4 [e][2 Pet. 2:20]

■ 1:6–14 Paul moves into the body of letter. As he exhorts Timothy to boldness and faithfulness, Paul discusses the gospel and his own role in proclaiming it.

■ 1:6 stir up the gift of God. This strong expression suggests that Timothy was being less forceful than he should have been in using the spiritual gift God had given him.

laying on of my hands. See note on 1 Tim. 1:18.

■ 1:7 fear. Or, "cowardice." This strong expression was necessary, given Timothy's natural timidity and the gravity of his situation.

■ 1:8 me His prisoner. Paul is in prison in Rome (2:9; Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 1:9 with a holy calling. The goal of God's election and calling is the sanctification of His people (Eph. 1:4).

not . . . grace. This is a marvelous affirmation that salvation is by grace, not by human merit (Eph. 2:8, 9).

according to His own purpose. God's decree of redemption is based solely on His own purpose and good pleasure. Elsewhere, this divine purpose is identified as mercy (Titus 3:5) and love (Eph. 1:4, 5).

before time began. An affirmation that the divine decree of redemption through Christ is from eternity (Eph. 1:4; Titus 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:20; Rev. 13:8).

■ 1:10 our Savior Jesus Christ. Christ is the Mediator of the covenant of grace (Titus 1:4; 2:13; 3:6).

who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light. That is, through His death and resurrection (Heb. 2:14, 15; Rev. 1:18).

■ 1:11 preacher. See 1 Tim. 2:7.

■ 1:12 I also suffer. Paul is in prison (v. 8; 2:9).

I am not ashamed. Having exhorted Timothy not to be ashamed to speak out for Christ (v. 8), Paul presents himself as a model of boldness in the face of suffering (2:8–10; 3:10, 11).

that Day. Judgment Day (v. 18; 4:8).

■ 1:13 sound words. This theme runs throughout the Pastoral Letters (1 Tim. 1:10 note).

■ 1:14 That good thing . . . committed to you. See note on 1 Tim. 6:20.

■ 1:15–18 Paul's concern that Timothy be faithful leads him to set forth specific examples of unfaithfulness and faithfulness.

■ 1:15 all. Paul is probably writing with intentional exaggeration to make sure his readers see the extent of the disloyalty.

Asia. A Roman province across the Aegean Sea from Greece and today part of western Turkey. Ephesus, where Timothy was serving as Paul's representative, was the leading city of this province.

Phygellus and Hermogenes. Not mentioned elsewhere in the New Testament. Probably Paul mentions them because he had counted on their support.

■ 1:16 Onesiphorus. A member of the church at Ephesus who distinguished himself through his loyalty to Paul (v. 18; cf. 4:19).

■ 1:17 when he arrived in Rome. Onesiphorus may have come to Rome to aid Paul.

■ 1:18 that Day. The Day of Judgment (v. 12; 4:8).

■ 2:1–13 Paul again exhorts Timothy to be faithful, beginning with three analogies from everyday life that emphasize wholehearted devotion to a task.

■ 2:1 my son. See note on 1:2.

■ 2:2 among many witnesses. This may refer to Timothy's ordination (1:6; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:14).

Approved and Disapproved Workers

14 Remind them of these things, [t]charging them before the Lord not to [4]strive about words to no profit, to the ruin of the hearers. 15 [u]Be diligent to present yourself approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. 16 But shun profane and [5]idle babblings, for they will [6]increase to more ungodliness. 17 And their message will spread like cancer. [v]Hymenaeus and Philetus are of this sort, 18 who have strayed concerning the truth, [w]saying that the resurrection is already past; and they overthrow the faith of some. 19 Neverthe-

■ 2:5, 6 crowned . . . crops. These two analogies add a promise of future reward (vv. 10–12).

■ 2:8 of the seed of David. Jesus fulfills God's promise to grant to one of David's descendants an eternal kingship (2 Sam. 7:12–16; Matt. 1:1; Mark 12:35; Luke 1:32, 33; John 7:42; Acts 2:30–36; Rev. 5:5). raised from the dead. The resurrection of Christ is at the center of Paul's theology (Rom. 6:4–10; 1 Cor. 15:12–22). It is the basis for the hope expressed in vv. 11, 12.

■ 2:9 I suffer. See note on 1:8.

■ 2:10 the elect. Those whom God has chosen to be saved (Titus 1:1).

eternal glory. This glory is the final, complete salvation of the elect in the new order of God. The saints will have resurrection bodies and transformed human natures (1 Cor. 15:42–49). They will experience the triumph of Christ over sin and death, and know fullness of joy in a life secured for them by Christ's death, resurrection, and ascension (v. 11; Matt. 13:43; 1 Tim. 1:16 note; cf. Ps. 16:11).

■ 2:11 This is a faithful saying. See note on 1 Tim. 1:15. What follows may be part of an early Christian hymn.

if we died with Him. A reference to the believer's union with Christ in His death on the cross (Rom. 6:3–11).

■ 2:12 If we endure. This refers to perseverance in the face of hardship (v. 10).

We shall also reign with Him. A New Testament image for the eternal glory that Christians receive through Christ (Matt. 19:28; Rom. 5:17; Rev. 3:21; 5:10; 20:4, 6; 22:5).

If we deny Him, He also will deny us. A sober warning against apostasy (Matt. 10:33).

■ 2:13 If we are faithless, He remains faithful. This is a wonderful affirmation of assurance that although we are called to endure and be faithful, salvation does not rest ultimately on our faithfulness, but upon that of Christ (v. 19).

He cannot deny Himself. Christian hope is rooted firmly in the unchanging character of God (Num. 23:19; Titus 1:2).

■ 2:14 strive about words. One of the characteristics of the false teachers (v. 23; 1 Tim. 1:4; 6:4; Titus 3:9).

■ 2:15 the word of truth. The gospel (2:8, 9; 4:2).

■ 2:17 Hymenaeus. Mentioned also in 1 Tim. 1:19, 20 as one who has made "shipwreck" of his faith.

Philetus. Mentioned nowhere else in the New Testament.

■ 2:18 the resurrection is already past. This Gnostic belief denied the future bodily resurrection of Christians and affirmed instead a spiritual resurrection at conversion; it resulted in an overemphasis on present experience (1 Cor. 15:12–14).

they overthrow the faith of some. The doctrines of the false teachers are incompatible with the gospel. Timothy must warn the church against them (v. 14).

■ 2:19 the solid foundation of God. The church (cf. 1 Tim. 3:15), which is God's elect.

seal. An expression of ownership and security.

The Lord knows those who are His. A quotation of Num. 16:5 (according to the Septuagint translation). Inscribed on the people of God is His eternal decree of election (v. 11), which ensures the security of the body of Christ (John 10:29).

Let everyone . . . depart. Also inscribed on the membership of God's church is His call to holiness (v. 21), including the repudiation of false teaching.

less [x]the solid foundation of God stands, having this seal: "The Lord [y]knows those who are His," and, "Let everyone who names the name of [7]Christ depart from iniquity."

[20] But in a great house there are not only [z]vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and clay, some for honor and some for dishonor. [21] Therefore if anyone cleanses himself from the latter, he will be a vessel for honor, [s]sanctified and useful for the Master, [a]prepared for every good work. [22] [b]Flee also youthful lusts; but pursue righteousness, faith, love, peace with those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart. [23] But avoid foolish and ignorant disputes, knowing that they generate strife. [24] And [c]a servant of the Lord must not quarrel but be gentle to all, [d]able to teach, [e]patient, [25] [f]in humility correcting those who are in opposition, [g]if God perhaps will grant them repentance, [h]so that they may know the truth, [26] and that they may come to their senses and [i]escape the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him to do his will.

Perilous Times and Perilous Men

3 But know this, that [a]in the last days [1]perilous times will come: [2] For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, [3] unloving, [2]unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, [4] [b]traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, [5] [c]having a form of godliness but [d]denying its power. And [e]from such people turn away! [6] For [f]of this sort are those who creep into households and make captives of gullible women loaded down with sins, led away by various lusts, [7] always learning and never able [g]to come to the knowledge of the truth. [8] [h]Now as Jannes and Jambres resisted Moses, so do these also resist the truth: [i]men of corrupt minds, [j]disapproved concerning the faith; [9] but they will progress no further, for their folly will be manifest to all, [k]as theirs also was.

The Man of God and the Word of God

[10] [l]But you have carefully followed my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, love, perseverance, [11] persecutions, afflictions, which happened to me [m]at Antioch, [n]at Iconium, [o]at Lystra—what persecutions I endured. And [p]out of them all the Lord delivered me. [12] Yes, and [q]all who desire to live godly in Christ Jesus will suffer persecution. [13] [r]But evil men and impostors will grow worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. [14] But you must [s]continue in the things which you have learned and been assured of, knowing from whom you have learned them, [15] and that from childhood you have known [t]the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

■ 2:20, 21 These verses provide an example from everyday life of the importance of holiness—being set apart for a noble (godly) task.

■ 2:23 disputes . . . strife. See note on 2:14.

■ 2:25, 26 The Christian must never assume that those who are ensnared by the devil's false teaching are irretrievably lost. The gospel must be proclaimed to all.

■ 3:1–9 Paul continues on the theme of false teaching by turning to an attack on the false teachers themselves, noting their impact upon the church at Ephesus, but concluding with the affirmation that they will not succeed in the end.

■ 3:1 the last days. The era inaugurated by Christ's First Advent and completed by His second (1 Tim. 4:1 note).

■ 3:5 having a form of godliness but denying its power. What makes the false teachers so dangerous is that they appear to be Christians (Matt. 7:15, 21–23).

■ 3:6 gullible women. Paul's point is not that all women are this way, but that some have been especially vulnerable to deception. The false teachers at Ephesus had been especially successful in deceiving women (1 Tim. 2:14; 5:13–15).

■ 3:8 Jannes and Jambres. In Jewish tradition, these names were given to two Egyptian magicians who opposed Moses before Pharaoh (Ex. 7; 8).

■ 3:10–17 With the problem of the false teachers fully in view, Paul once more turns to exhorting Timothy to faithfulness, first in terms of the example which Paul has set, and then as obedience to Scripture.

■ 3:10, 11 Once again Paul appeals to his own life as an example for Timothy (1:11–13; 2:8–10).

■ 3:11 Antioch . . . Iconium . . . Lystra. Three cities in the Roman province of Galatia where Paul preached the gospel on his first missionary journey (Acts 13:14—14:20). Against significant opposition, Paul succeeded in establishing a church in each city (Acts 14:21–23). Paul mentions these cities, including Timothy's home of Lystra, in order to appeal to the roots of Timothy's faith (vv. 14, 15; 1:5).

■ 3:14 from whom you have learned. A reference to Timothy's mother and grandmother (1:5), as well as to Paul himself.

you have known the Holy Scriptures. The false teachers have been misinterpreting the Old Testament (1 Tim. 1:7; Titus 3:9). The New Testament did not yet exist as a collection. Indeed, some of the New Testament books had probably not yet been written.

The Authority of Scripture

The Christian principle of biblical authority means that God is the author of the Bible, and has given it to direct the belief and behavior of His people. Our ideas about God and our conduct should be measured, tested, and where necessary corrected and enlarged, by reference to the Bible. Authority is also the right to command. God's written Word in its truth and wisdom is the way God has chosen to exercise His rule over us, and Scripture is the instrument of Christ's lordship over the church. The work of the Scripture in the church is illustrated by the seven letters of Revelation (Rev. 2; 3).

The Roman Catholic view of the Bible has compromised its unique authority by combining it with the tradition of the church. Roman Catholics accept the Bible as God-given truth, but insist that it is incomplete without the official interpretation of the church as it is led by the Spirit. In the past, giving the church authority over the Bible has led to discouraging or prohibiting ordinary Christians from reading it. At the present time, the Roman Catholic church encourages all Christians to read the Bible.

Many Protestants regard the Bible as having its unique authority in its subject matter, or in the experience and insights of the human authors. The central assumption is that the Bible remains fundamentally a human book and not a divine revelation. The Bible is a guide for their religious experience, but it is not clearly distinguished from other sources, such as political movements and social forces. All too often, the Bible is displaced by voices that oppose it.

Historic Protestantism accepts the Scripture as the only written revelation of God. It is inspired, or "God-breathed" (2 Tim. 3:16), distinguishing it from all other words. As a result, the Scriptures are infallible and true in all that they affirm. They are sufficient, containing everything that is necessary to know for salvation and eternal life. They are clear, so that a person without special preparation can understand what God requires without the intervention of an official interpreter.

The canonical Scripture is the voice of God in the world. It has an authority, or right to command, corresponding to its divine Author. For this reason, we submit our thoughts and moral standards to the Bible. It was through the recognition that the Bible cannot be subject to any person or group, however exalted, that the Reformers freed their consciences from human traditions and authorities. □

■ 3:16 All Scripture. The Old Testament (v. 15 note).

given by inspiration of God. Or, "God-breathed." This is one of the most important expressions in the New Testament of the doctrine of the divine inspiration of Scripture. The Bible has been breathed out by the Spirit of God (2 Pet. 1:21). God is the source and ultimate Author of Scripture. Though written by human authors, Scripture nevertheless has the full weight of His authority. See theological note "The Authority of Scripture."

■ 4:1–5 Paul brings to a conclusion the appeal to Timothy begun in 1:6.

■ 4:1 before God. Paul mentions witnesses to impress on Timothy the utmost seriousness of the charge.

poured out as a drink offering. This metaphor for death (cf. Phil. 2:17) is taken from the language of the Old Testament sacrificial system. A drink offering of wine was poured out in the sanctuary as an offering to God (Num. 15:5, 7, 10; 28:7). Paul understands his impending death as an offering to Christ.

my departure. Another metaphor for death (Phil. 1:23). Paul held steadfastly to the hope and assurance of a destination beyond the grave (v. 18).

■ 4:7 With these three metaphors Paul signifies the end of his ministry. His concern is not that he has been a success, but rather that he has been faithful to his Lord.

■ 4:8 the crown of righteousness. Perhaps the crown awarded for the faithful life of one who has received the righteousness of Christ through faith (Rom. 3:22). More likely, this is the crown consisting of perfect righteousness—eternal life that is given the believer as the climax of the process of sanctification (2:10; James 1:12; 1 Pet. 5:4; Rev. 2:10).

■ 4:9–18 Paul now turns to his primary reason for writing the letter: he wants to see Timothy one last time. Paul gives Timothy various instructions regarding his journey to Rome, informs Timothy of his present status, and concludes with a profound expression of trust in his Lord.

■ 4:9 Be diligent to come to me. Paul had hinted at his desire to see Timothy in 1:4.

Crescens. Mentioned nowhere else in the New Testament, he was apparently another of Paul's coworkers.

Galatia. A Roman province Paul visited on his first missionary journey (3:11 note).

Titus. Another of Paul's coworkers. See Introduction to Titus: Date and Occasion.

Dalmatia. Another name for the Roman province of Illyricum, the westernmost province reached by Paul on his first three missionary journeys (Rom. 15:19).

■ 4:11 Luke. The "beloved physician," mentioned in Col. 4:14 and Philem. 24, who traveled with Paul throughout much of his second and third missionary journeys (Introduction to Luke: Author).

Get Mark and bring him with you. A beautiful example of Christian forgiveness. John Mark's desertion of Paul and Barnabas during their first missionary journey (Acts 13:13) had resulted in the dissolution of the partnership between Paul and Barnabas (Acts 15:37–39). Later Mark regained Paul's favor (Col. 4:10; Philem. 24). Now, at the end of his life, Paul wants to see him, "for he is useful."

Timothy's Ministry (4:5)

Timothy must...	Because...
Continue in sound doctrine (1:13; 2:15)	False doctrine spreads and leads to ungodliness (2:16, 17)
Avoid contentiousness (2:23–25)	He must gently lead others to the truth (2:24–26)

Luke is with me. Get [t]Mark and bring him with you, for he is useful to me for ministry. 12 And [u]Tychicus I have sent to Ephesus. 13 Bring the cloak that I left with Carpus at Troas when you come—and the books, especially the parchments.

14 [v]Alexander the coppersmith did me much harm. May the Lord repay him according to his works. 15 You also must beware of him, for he has greatly resisted our words.

16 At my first defense no one stood with me, but all forsook me. [w]May it not be charged against them.

The Lord Is Faithful

17 [x]But the Lord stood with me and strengthened me, [y]so that the message might be preached fully through me, and that all the Gentiles might hear. ■ 4:19–21 As is his custom, Paul closes the letter with personal greetings and a benediction.

■ 4:19 Prisca and Aquila. "Prisca" is a shortened form of "Pricilla," as it is spelled elsewhere in Acts and Paul's letters. She and her husband Aquila had been friends of Paul from the time he first visited Corinth on his second missionary journey. They were Jews, and like Paul were tentmakers (Acts 18:2, 3). They had come to Corinth from Rome. Later they accompanied Paul to Ephesus (Acts 18:18, 19) and hosted a house church there for several years before returning to Rome (Rom. 16:3, 4; 1 Cor. 16:19). They had now apparently returned to Ephesus where Timothy was (1 Tim. 1:3).

the household of Onesiphorus. See note on 1:16. This greeting indicates that Timothy was still in Ephesus (1:18).

■ 4:20 Erastus. Presumably the same person as Corinth's treasurer mentioned in Rom. 16:23.

Corinth. The provincial capital of the Roman province of Achaia, it was visited by Paul on his second and third missionary journeys. Corinth is fifty miles west of Athens.

Trophimus. A member of the church at Ephesus who accompanied Paul to Jerusalem at the close of his third missionary journey (Acts 20:4; 21:29).

Miletus. A seaport just south of Ephesus, which Paul had visited at the end of his third missionary journey (Acts 20:15, 17). When Paul visited Miletus on his fourth and final journey is not clear.

■ 4:21 before winter. Winter weather would prevent travel by ship. Paul may have felt that if Timothy waited too long, he would not arrive before Paul's execution (v. 9). In any event, he needed his cloak before winter (v. 13).

Eubulus . . . Pudens, Linus, Claudia. These would be Christians in Rome, although none is mentioned elsewhere in the New Testament. According to Roman Catholic tradition Linus succeeded Peter as bishop of Rome.

■ 4:22 Grace be with you. Here, the Greek word for "you" is plural. Presumably Paul intended the letter to be read to the entire church (1 Tim. 6:21 note; Titus 3:15).

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to

TITUS

Author Titus was written by Paul. See "Introduction to 1 Timothy: Author."

Date and Occasion Titus, like 1 Timothy, was composed while Paul was still in the midst of his fourth missionary journey and probably dates to between A.D. 62 and 64. See "Introduction to 1 Timothy: Date and Occasion."

Titus was a Gentile Christian who was probably converted by Paul (1:4). The New Testament provides little information about him, and he is not mentioned in Acts. Paul took him to Jerusalem early in his missionary labors, where he refused to have Titus circumcised (Gal. 2:1–3), and Titus apparently traveled with Paul on his second and third missionary journeys and for part of the fourth. He was a trusted associate of Paul, upon whom Paul could count in delicate situations, such as that at Corinth (2 Cor. 2:13; 7:6, 13, 14; 8:6, 16, 23; 12:18). Titus later served as Paul's representative on the island of Crete (1:5) and in the province of Dalmatia (2 Tim. 4:10).

Paul wrote to Titus from Macedonia (3:12). On an earlier leg of his journey he and Titus had been involved in missionary activity on the island of Crete. When Paul departed, he left Titus behind to continue the work (1:5). In this letter Paul wrote to Titus to encourage him to bring his ministry on the island to a close. Specifically, Paul wanted Titus to complete the organization of the churches (1:5–9), to deal with the false teachers who were present (1:10–14; 3:9–11), and to give instructions to the churches on proper conduct (2:1—3:8). When a replacement arrived, Titus was to meet Paul in Nicopolis (3:12).

Characteristics and Themes Like 1 Timothy, Titus is noteworthy for its information on church organization. It provides a lengthy description of the qualifications for the office of bishop and elder (1:6–9), as well as important evidence that the terms "bishop" and "elder" refer to one rather than two distinct offices (1:7).

Also like 1 Timothy, Titus exhibits a strong concern for sound doctrine (1:9, 13; 2:1, 2) and contains two marvelous theological meditations on the grace that God has extended in Jesus Christ (2:11–14; 3:4–7). These include affirmations of the Second Coming of Christ (2:13), the substitutionary atonement of Christ (2:14), regeneration by the Holy Spirit (3:5), and justification by grace (3:5, 7). Titus also affirms the deity of Christ in a striking manner—the title "Savior" is applied freely, and in the same contexts, to both God (1:3; 2:10; 3:4) and Christ (1:4; 2:13; 3:6), and 2:13 speaks of "our great God and Savior, Jesus Christ."

Paul's concern in this letter for sound doctrine is balanced by an emphasis on proper Christian conduct. For Paul, the two clearly go hand in hand. In particular, he stresses the quality of sober-mindedness (in the Greek, 1:8; 2:2, 4–6, 12) and the importance of doing what is good (2:7, 14; 3:1, 8, 14).

Interpretive Difficulties Paul describes the false teaching on Crete as something that had come from within the church (1:10, 16). It was characterized by a concern with Jewish myths (1:14), genealogies and quarrels about the law (3:9), and human commandments (1:14). The false teachers came from a narrowly Jewish-Christian perspective (1:10) and sought leadership positions for financial gain (1:11). They had been effective in leading people astray and were divisive (1:10; 3:10).

Virtually everything that Paul says in Titus about the false teaching on Crete has parallels with what he says in 1 and 2 Timothy about that in Ephesus (Introduction to 2 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties). It is not clear why this should be the case. There is no reason to believe that there was some sort of direct link between the two false teachings, or that everything being taught in one place was being taught in the other. On the other hand, the false teachings in the two areas may have been similar manifestations of a more general syncretistic movement in the Roman Empire at this time (compare the problems which Paul addresses in his letters to the Colossians and Ephesians).

On the evidence for a "fourth" missionary journey by Paul, see "Introduction to 1 Timothy: Interpretive Difficulties." □

Greeting

PAUL, a bondservant of God and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect and [a]the acknowledgment of the truth [b]which accords with godliness, 2 in hope of eternal life which God, who [c]cannot lie, promised before time began, 3 but has in due time manifested His word through preaching, which was committed to me according to the commandment of God our Savior;

4 To [d]Titus, a true son in our common faith:

Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father and [f]the Lord Jesus Christ our Savior.

Qualified Elders

5 For this reason I left you in Crete, that you should [e]set in order the things that are lacking, and appoint elders in every city as I commanded you— 6 if a man is blameless, the husband of promised before time began. Affirmation of the eternal nature of the divine decree of redemption through Christ (2 Tim. 1:9).

■ 1:3 God our Savior. As author of the covenant of grace, God is Savior (2:10; 3:4; 1 Tim. 1:1; 2:3; 4:10).

■ 1:4 true son. Lit. "legitimate son" (1 Tim. 1:2). This probably indicates that Titus was one of Paul's converts.

Grace, mercy, and peace. See note on 1 Tim. 1:2.

Jesus Christ our Savior. As mediator of the covenant of grace, Christ is Savior (2:13; 3:6; 2 Tim. 1:10). Paul uses the title "Savior" interchangeably for both God and Christ throughout this letter (v. 3 note), thereby reflecting his belief in the deity of Christ (2:13).

■ 1:5–9 Paul moves into the body of the letter. His intention is to instruct Titus regarding how to act as Paul's representative on Crete (Introduction: Date and Occasion). He begins by discussing church organization.

■ 1:5 set in order the things that are lacking. As the rest of the verse makes clear, what was left unfinished was the organization of the newly formed churches.

elders. A group of individuals charged with the general care of a local church (Acts 14:23; 20:17; 1 Tim. 5:17). As v. 7 makes clear, Paul used the term interchangeably with "bishop" (i.e., overseer, v. 7 text note). Paul discusses the qualifications for bishops in similar terms, yet with some differences, in 1 Tim. 3:2–7. Paul intends neither list to be complete, but simply to indicate the personal qualities of those who would serve as church leaders.

■ 1:6 the husband of one wife. Probably a reference to marital fidelity, (1 Tim. 3:2 note).

one wife, *f*having faithful children not accused of [2]dissipation or insubordination. 7 For a [3]bishop must be blameless, as a steward of God; not self-willed, not quick-tempered, *g*not given to wine, not violent, not greedy for money, 8 but hospitable, a lover of what is good, sober-minded, just, holy, self-controlled, 9 holding fast the faithful word as he has been taught, that he may be able, by sound doctrine, both to exhort and convict those who contradict.

The Elders' Task

10 For there are many insubordinate, both idle *h*talkers and deceivers, especially those of the circumcision, 11 whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole households, teaching things which they ought not, *i*for the sake of dishonest gain. 12 *j*One of them, a prophet of their own, said, "Cretans are always liars, evil beasts, lazy gluttons." 13 This testimony is true. *k*Therefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith, 14 not giving heed to Jewish fables and *l*commandments of men who turn from the truth. 15 *m*To the pure all things are pure, but to those who are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure; but even their mind and conscience are defiled. 16 They profess to *n*know God, but *o*in works they deny Him, being *d*abominable, disobedient, *p*and disqualified for every good work.

Qualities of a Sound Church

2 But as for you, speak the things which are proper for sound doctrine: 2 that the older men be sober, reverent, temperate, sound in faith, in love, in patience; 3 the older women likewise, that they be reverent in behavior, not slanderers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things— 4 that they admonish the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, 5 to be discreet, chaste, *a*homemakers, good, *b*obedient to their own husbands, *c*that the word of God may not be blasphemed.

6 Likewise, exhort the young men to be sober-minded, 7 in all things showing yourself to be *d*a

7 *d*Phil. 3:17; 1 Tim. 4:12

■ 1:7 For a bishop. That is, an overseer (see text note). Paul's casual shift from "elder" to "bishop" shows that he understands the two terms as referring to the same office: "elder" suggesting one's character (spiritually mature) and "bishop" suggesting one's task (Acts 20:17, 28).

greedy for money. One should not view church leadership as an opportunity for making money (v. 11; 1 Tim. 6:5, 10). Paul does support the concept of remuneration for certain church leaders (1 Tim. 5:17).

■ 1:8 sober-minded. Or, sensible. A major emphasis in this letter (2:2, 4–6, 12).

■ 1:9 the faithful word as he has been taught. As in his letters to Timothy, Paul is concerned with the transmission of and commitment to sound doctrine in accordance with the gospel (1 Tim. 1:10 note).

exhort and convict those who contradict. Two tasks of the elder that are especially relevant in view of the false teachers on Crete are teaching sound doctrine and refuting that which is false. See "Pastors and Pastoral Care" at 1 Pet. 5:2.

■ 1:10–16 Paul's mention of the necessity to refute false teaching leads him into a discussion of the false teachers and how Titus is to deal with them.

■ 1:10 those of the circumcision. Those who come from a narrowly Jewish-Christian perspective are in view (Acts 15:1, 5; Gal. 6:12, 13). See Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties.

■ 1:11 subvert whole households. This may refer to the false teachers' activity in local house churches, thus the necessity for better organization (v. 5).

teaching things which they ought not. Their teaching was not in accord with "sound doctrine" (v. 9).

dishonest gain. See note on v. 7.

■ 1:12 a prophet of their own. Paul quotes Epimenides, a sixth century B.C. poet and religious reformer from Knossos on Crete, who was known for his predictions and wisdom. Paul is not placing Epimenides on the same level as the Old Testament prophets; he is simply appealing to the esteem in which Epimenides was held in the ancient world.

■ 1:13 them . . . they. He means the false teachers (2 Tim. 2:25, 26), and probably also their followers.

■ 1:14 Jewish fables. Perhaps a reference to the kinds of legends about Old Testament figures that are found in many of the apocryphal Jewish writings (1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:4).

commandments. These are probably related to the false teachers' distinctive interpretations of the Jewish law (3:9; 1 Tim. 1:7; 4:3).

■ 1:15 To the pure all things are pure. The false teachers have apparently prohibited the use of certain things (1 Tim. 4:3 note). For Paul's response, see 1 Tim. 4:3–5.

■ 1:16 in works. Paul condemns not only the doctrine of the false teachers, but also their actions (2 Tim. 3:2–5). Both sound doctrine and actions in accordance with a changed life are necessary for Christians.

they deny Him. The New Testament teaches that the lack of actions consistent with a changed life renders one's faith in Christ suspect (Matt. 7:16–20; James 2:14–16; 1 John 3:17).

■ 2:1–15 Paul now turns to the kinds of things which Titus, in contrast with the false teachers, ought to teach and concludes with a meditation on the grace of God.

■ 2:1 sound doctrine. See note on 1:9.

■ 2:2–6 See 1 Tim. 5:1, 2.

■ 2:2 sober. The quality of sober-mindedness dominates Paul's advice in this section (vv. 4–6, 12; 1:8 and note).

■ 2:3 teachers of good things. Probably, as the next verse suggests, in the sense of their manner in the home.

■ 2:4 admonish. That is, "bring them to their senses." This is a verbal form of the adjective translated "sober" (v. 2) and "discreet" (v. 5) throughout this section. Paul probably has in mind the problems that some of the younger widows encountered at Ephesus (1 Tim. 5:11–13).

■ 2:5 discreet. Lit. "sober-minded" (vv. 2, 4, 6, 12; 1:8 note).

homemakers. Or, "busy at home." Contrast the behavior of some of the younger widows at Ephesus (1 Tim. 5:13).

obedient. See note on 1 Tim. 2:11.

that the word of God may not be blasphemed. Paul's overriding concern throughout this section is that the behavior of Christians reflect positively on the gospel (vv. 8, 10).

■ 2:7 be a pattern. Paul gives similar counsel to Timothy (1 Tim. 4:12 note).

pattern of good works; in doctrine showing integrity, reverence, [e]incorruptibility,[1] [8] sound speech that cannot be condemned, that one who is an opponent may be ashamed, having nothing evil to say of [2]you.

[9] Exhort [f]bondservants to be obedient to their own masters, to be well pleasing in all things, not answering back, [10] not [3]pilfering, but showing all good [4]fidelity, that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things.

Trained by Saving Grace

[11] For [g]the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men, [12] teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, [13] [h]looking for the blessed [i]hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, [14] [j]who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed [k]and purify for Himself [l]His own special people, zealous for good works.

[15] Speak these things, [m]exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no one despise you.

Graces of the Heirs of Grace

3 Remind them [a]to be subject to rulers and authorities, to obey, [b]to be ready for every good work, [2] to speak evil of no one, to be peaceable, gentle, showing all humility to all men. our great God and Savior Jesus Christ. This is one of the clearest affirmations in the New Testament of the deity of Christ.

■ 2:14 who gave Himself for us. That is, on the cross. Paul follows with two aspects of the work of Christ.

redeem us from every lawless deed. Paul's first point focuses on the individual: Christ paid the price necessary to free people from their sins (Matt. 20:28; Mark 10:45; 1 Tim. 2:6; 1 Pet. 1:18, 19).

purify for Himself His own special people. Paul's second point focuses on the church: Christ purifies individuals from their sins (Heb. 9:14; 1 John 1:7, 9) so that together they might constitute a people special to Him (Ezek. 37:23). On Christ purifying the church, see Eph. 5:25–27.

zealous for good works. See note on v. 7.

■ 2:15 exhort, and rebuke. An appropriate summation of the contrasting aspects of Paul's charge to Titus in vv. 2–10 and 1:10–16.

with all authority. That is, as Paul's representative.

Let no one despise you. See v. 8; 1 Tim. 4:12.

■ 3:1–8 Having provided instructions for specific groups, Paul now gives Titus general counsel, sandwiched around another meditation on the grace of God, on encouraging the people to do "every good work" (v. 1).

■ 3:1 rulers and authorities. On Christian submission to governing authorities, see Rom. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:13–17; cf. 1 Tim. 2:2.

every good work. The theme for this section is doing good (v. 8; 2:7 note).

■ 3:3 This verse presents a graphic description of human depravity apart from Christ (Eph. 2:1–3).

■ 3:4 But when the kindness and the love of God our Savior . . . appeared. In keeping with v. 3, Paul's primary concern here is with the sinner's experience of God's grace, rather than the First Advent of Christ (2 Tim. 1:10).

Titus's Teachings (2:15)

To the Cretans:	Ignore fables and false commandments (1:14)
To the older men:	Be sober, reverent, temperate, faithful, loving, and patient (2:2)
To the older women:	Be reverent, teach good things, do not slander nor drink much wine (2:3)
To the younger women:	Be discreet, pure, domestic, and love your husbands and children (2:4, 5)
To the young men:	Be sober-minded, do good works, and maintain right doctrine (2:6–8)
To servants:	Be obedient and respectful of masters (2:9, 10)

the love of [e]God our Savior toward man appeared, [5][f]not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, through [g]the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit, [6][h]whom He poured out on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior, [7] that having been justified by His grace [i]we should become heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

[8][j]This is a faithful saying, and these things I want you to affirm constantly, that those who have believed in God should be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable to men.

Avoid Dissension

[9] But [k]avoid foolish disputes, genealogies, contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and useless. [10][l]Reject a divisive man after the first and second [l]admonition, [11] knowing that such a person is warped and sinning, being self-condemned.

Final Messages

[12] When I send Artemas to you, or [m]Tychicus, be diligent to come to me at Nicopolis, for I have decided to spend the winter there. [13] Send Zenas the lawyer and [n]Apollos on their journey with haste, that they may lack nothing. [14] And let our people also learn to maintain good works, to meet urgent needs, that they may not be unfruitful.

Farewell

[15] All who are with me greet you. Greet those who love us in the faith.
Grace be with you all. Amen.

■ 3:5 not by works . . . but according to His mercy. Salvation is by grace, not works (v. 6; Eph. 2:8, 9; 2 Tim. 1:9).

He saved us. See 2 Tim. 1:9.

washing. Spiritual cleansing, of which baptism is the sign and seal (1 Cor. 6:11; Eph. 5:26).

of regeneration and renewing. Both words characterize the "washing." "Regeneration" is the new life that begins when a person comes to faith in Christ (John 3:3, 5; 1 Pet. 1:3, 23). Renewal is closely related to rebirth; it signifies the complete transformation of a person's life that begins when one is regenerated (Rom. 12:2; 2 Cor. 5:17). See "Regeneration: The New Birth" at John 3:3.

of the Holy Spirit. The Spirit applies to individuals the grace of God that is extended in Christ (John 3:5, 6). Note the trinitarianism of vv. 4–6.

■ 3:7 justified. Declared righteous before God.

by His grace. Left to ourselves (vv. 3, 4), we could never stand righteous before God. The point of vv. 3–7 is that righteousness comes through God's grace alone (Rom. 3:21–25).

heirs. God's purpose in extending His grace to sinners is not only to save them from eternal judgment, but to make them part of His family through adoption and thus heirs of His promises (Rom. 8:17; Gal. 3:29; 4:7).

■ 3:8 This is a faithful saying. See note on 1 Tim. 1:15. The expression points back to vv. 4–7.

maintain good works. See note on v. 1.

■ 3:9–11 By way of contrast with the instructions that he has just given, Paul returns one last time to the problem of the false teachers.

■ 3:9 disputes. A prominent characteristic of the false teachers was their contentiousness (1 Tim. 1:4; 6:4).

about the law. The law of Moses (1:10 note; cf. 1 Tim. 1:7).

unprofitable. To be contrasted with doing what is good, which is "profitable" (v. 8).

■ 3:10 Church discipline is to be based on a series of warnings (Matt. 18:15–17).

divisive man. The false teachers had caused division in the churches (1 Tim. 6:4, 5).

■ 3:12–15 Paul closes the letter with personal instructions to Titus, final greetings, and a benediction.

■ 3:12 Artemas. Mentioned nowhere else in the New Testament, he is apparently one of Paul's coworkers.

Tychicus. A coworker of Paul mentioned in Acts 20:4; Eph. 6:21; Col. 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:12.

come to me. Titus's ministry on Crete is nearing its end (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

Nicopolis. A city on the west coast of the Roman province of Epirus (modern Albania).

I have decided to . . . winter there. Paul is probably in Macedonia.

■ 3:13 Zenas . . . Apollos. Probably the bearers of this letter. Zenas is mentioned nowhere else in the New Testament; he is apparently one of Paul's coworkers. Apollos was a native of Alexandria and noted for his eloquence (Acts 18:24–26). He is best known for his ministry at Corinth (Acts 18:27—19:1; 1 Cor. 1:12; 3:4–22; 16:12).

■ 3:14 maintain good works. See note on 2:7.

■ 3:15 you all. Presumably Paul intended the letter to be read to the entire church (1 Tim. 6:21; 2 Tim. 4:22).

The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to

PHILEMON

Author The letter to Philemon was written by the apostle Paul, and its authenticity has not been seriously challenged.

Date and Occasion The letter was written while Paul was in prison in Rome (c. A.D. 60), and was probably sent to Philemon together with the letter to the Colossians. Philemon was a Christian brother and slaveholder in Colosse. His slave Onesimus had run away and had somehow met Paul in Rome. Through Paul's teaching, Onesimus had become a Christian.

Paul's purpose in writing was to ask Philemon to receive Onesimus back not as a slave but as a Christian brother. In pursuit of this goal, Paul barely restrains himself from demanding the favor. He writes as powerful an appeal as he can.

Characteristics and Themes Philemon shows us the apostle using all his personal force to bring about a Christian answer to a very serious problem. Paul's judgment appears to be that Philemon should free the offending slave, for the sake of Christian love toward a fellow Christian. Paul's letter is passionate but carefully composed to achieve the desired end. The document was written in his own hand, and is much more than an example of rhetoric. It brings us close to Paul's ministry, so that we can practically feel his profound desire to make Christian love the first rule of human action. □

Greeting

PAUL, a [a]prisoner of Christ Jesus, and Timothy our brother,

To Philemon our beloved friend and fellow laborer, [2] to [f]the beloved Apphia, [b]Archippus our fellow soldier, and to the church in your house:

[3] Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

Philemon's Love and Faith

[4] [c]I thank my God, making mention of you always in my prayers, [5] [d]hearing of your love and faith which you have toward the Lord Jesus and toward all the saints, [6] that the sharing of your faith may become effective [e]by the acknowledgment of [f]every good thing which is in [2]you in Christ Jesus. [7] For we [3]have great [4]joy and [5]consolation in your love, because the [6]hearts of the saints have been refreshed by you, brother.

■ 1 prisoner. Paul knows that he belongs to Christ, and if he is in prison it is by Christ's permission (Phil. 1:7).

■ 2 Apphia, Archippus. These are probably members of Philemon's household, since they are mentioned in addition to the church.

in your house. The early Christians met in believers' homes (1 Cor. 16:19; Col. 4:15).

■ 6 may become effective. Paul is going to suggest a good work that will call on Philemon's generosity in an important and visible way.

■ 7 hearts. The word translated "hearts" is used also in vv. 12 and 20 (see text note). It emphasizes the emotions more than the usual Greek word for "heart."

The Plea for Onesimus

8 Therefore, though I might be very bold in Christ to command you what is fitting, 9 yet for love's sake I rather appeal to you—being such a one as Paul, the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ— 10 I appeal to you for my son [g]Onesimus, whom I have begotten while in my chains, 11 who once was unprofitable to you, but now is profitable to you and to me.

12 I am sending him [7]back. You therefore receive him, that is, my own [8]heart, 13 whom I wished to keep with me, that on your behalf he might minister to me in my chains for the gospel. 14 But without your consent I wanted to do nothing, [h]that your good deed might not be by compulsion, as it were, but voluntary.

15 For perhaps he departed for a while for this purpose, that you might receive him forever, 16 no longer as a slave but more than a slave—a beloved brother, especially to me but how much more to you, both in the [i]flesh and in the Lord.

Philemon's Obedience Encouraged

17 If then you count me as a partner, receive him as you would me. 18 But if he has wronged you or owes anything, put that on my account. 19 I, Paul, am writing with my own [j]hand. I will repay—not to mention to you that you owe me even your own self besides. 20 Yes, brother, let me have joy from you in the Lord; refresh my heart in the Lord.

21 [k]Having confidence in your obedience, I write to you, knowing that you will do even more than I say. 22 But, meanwhile, also prepare a guest room for me, for [l]I trust that [m]through your prayers I shall be granted to you.

Farewell

23 [n]Epaphras, my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, greets you, 24 as do [o]Mark, [p]Aristarchus, [q]Demas, [r]Luke, my fellow laborers.

25 [s]The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

10 [g]Col. 4:9

12 [7]NU back to you in person, that is, my own heart, [8]See v. 7.

16 [i]Eph. 6:5; Col. 3:22

19 [j]1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; 2 Thess. 3:17

21 [k]2 Cor. 7:16

22 [l]Phil. 1:25; 2:24 [m]2 Cor. 1:11

23 [n]Col. 1:7; 4:12

24 [o]Acts 12:12, 25; 15:37–39; Col. 4:10 [p]Acts 19:29; 27:2; Col. 4:10 [q]Col. 4:14; 2 Tim. 4:10 [r]2 Tim. 4:11

25 [s]2 Tim. 4:22

■ 9 the aged. Paul appeals for mercy by describing himself as old and in prison. He does this "for love's sake," not for his own sake.

■ 10 my son Onesimus. Onesimus is Paul's spiritual son because he was converted through Paul's ministry.

■ 11 unprofitable . . . profitable. Paul makes a play on words—Onesimus's name means "useful" or "profitable." The pun softens the effect on Philemon of having to hear about someone who had injured him. Onesimus had run away and had probably been stealing (v. 18).

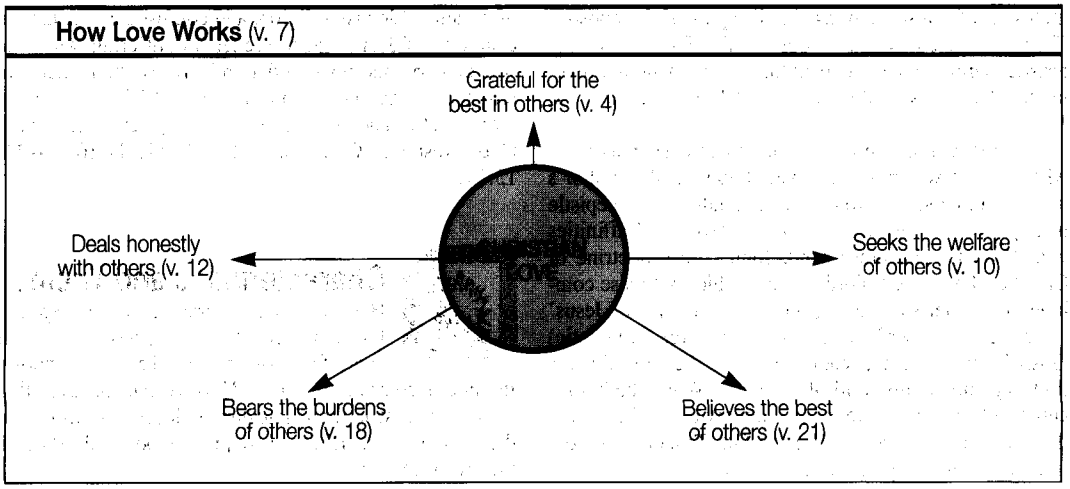
■ 14 voluntary. In his letters Paul appeals more than once to the principle that a free and voluntary action is of more value than one that is compulsory (1 Cor. 9:16, 17; 2 Cor. 9:7).

■ 16 more than a slave. Paul seems to be asking Philemon to set Onesimus free. It is implied that the Christians' common freedom in Christ is incompatible with the state of slavery, marked as it is by compulsion (v. 14 note), not to mention chains (v. 10, 13, 14; see 1 Pet. 2:18 note).

■ 17 as you would me. Paul is willing to throw his friendship with Philemon into the balance to make sure that Philemon will not refuse his request for Onesimus. Paul's offer to pay Onesimus's debts (v. 18) is real, but secondary by comparison.

■ 19 even your own self. This means that Philemon, like Onesimus, owed his Christian faith to the ministry of Paul.

■ 22 a guest room. Paul anticipates being released, which apparently happened. Whether he reached Colosse is not known.



The Epistle to the

HEBREWS

Author The author of Hebrews was skilled in Greek and Hellenistic literary style, immersed in the Old Testament (in the Greek translation, the Septuagint), sensitive to the history of redemption culminating in Jesus, and pastorally concerned for the original readers, who knew him personally (13:22, 23) and whose background he knows (10:32–34). Like his readers, he came to faith not through direct contact with Jesus, but through the apostles' preaching (2:3, 4). In addition, he was acquainted with Timothy (13:23).

But the epistle does not tell us his name, leaving a tantalizing mystery. In the Eastern church by the time of Clement of Alexandria (c. A.D. 150–215) and Origen (A.D. 185–253) the epistle was attributed to Paul, although both of these theologians recognized the stylistic differences between Hebrews and the Pauline epistles. In the West, Tertullian (c. A.D. 155–220) proposed Barnabas, a Levite of the Jewish Dispersion who was noted for his encouragement of others (Acts 4:36). Other early suggestions were Luke and Clement of Rome (c. A.D. 95). From the fifth to the sixteenth centuries Paul's authorship was accepted in East and West. During the Reformation Luther proposed Apollos, a Jewish Christian from Alexandria who was skilled in speech and powerful in the Scriptures (Acts 18:24). Suggestions in the modern period have included Priscilla (but cf. 11:32, where the author refers to himself with a masculine gender participle), Epaphras (Col. 1:7), and Silas (Acts 15:22, 32, 40; 1 Pet. 5:12). While it is difficult to rule out many of these candidates, it is equally hard to make a convincing case for any one of them. From the standpoint of early tradition, Paul has the strongest claim, but as Calvin observed, Hebrews differs from Paul in style, teaching method, and in the author's inclusion of himself among the disciples of the apostles (2:3)—a statement at odds with Paul's characteristic claim to have received his appointment and revelation of the gospel directly from Christ (Gal. 1:1, 11, 12).

If the author is not Paul (or someone such as Luke whose other writings we have), knowing the author's name would add little to our understanding of the epistle in any case. The epistle does have theological affinities with Paul. On the other hand, John's lofty doctrine of Christ as the divine "Word" is detectable. But these combined characteristics, along with the portrayal of Jesus' suffering as described in the first three (Synoptic) Gospels, are to be expected in view of the Holy Spirit's unifying authorship of all of Scripture. While the human author of this book remains unknown, the important thing is that this writing, like the Old Testament before it, is what "the Holy Spirit says" (3:7).

Date and Occasion Hebrews offers a fair amount of information about the original recipients and their situation, while leaving questions of date and destination without certain answers. The original readers spoke Greek and used the Greek translation of the Old Testament. They could follow arguments drawn from the Old Testament and were interested in the Old Testament sanctuary, sacrificial system, and priesthood. They had not heard the gospel directly from Jesus, but from apostles (2:3), had faced previous persecution (10:32–34) and were facing present persecution, including expulsion from Jewish institutions (13:12, 13). They were in danger of falling away, perhaps fearing death (2:14–18), although their faith had not yet led to martyrdom (12:4). In addition, they may have been undergoing a transition in church leadership (13:7, 17), and were therefore concerned about security and permanence (6:19; 11:10; 13:8, 14). Finally, they receive greeting through the author from "those from Italy" (13:24).

Drawing these features together, we conclude that the recipients were Jewish Christians of the Dispersion (the scattering of Jews outside Palestine), probably in Italy. This would take 13:24 to be a greeting sent "home" by expatriates. The earliest evidence of acquaintance with the epistle is from Rome, in 1 Clement, a work dating from about A.D. 96. Apparently the temple was still standing and its sacrificial rituals were being performed (10:2, 3, 11). Perhaps the situation is that of the persecutions under Nero (c. A.D. 64). In that case, the suffering mentioned in 10:32–34 could have been caused by the edict of Claudius, which expelled Jews from Rome in A.D. 49 (Acts 18:2).

Subject to suffering and shame for their confession of Jesus, stripped of the familiar and visible institutions of organized Jewish religion, and confused by the hidden character of Jesus' glory (veiled in suffering when He was on earth and now hidden in heaven), the readers are tempted to turn away from the faith (10:38, 39), to fall into unbelief and so to give up their pilgrimage toward God's rest and God's city (4:1, 2, 11; 11:10, 14–16; 13:14).

Characteristics and Themes Hebrews' high literary style and special focus on Christ's high priesthood set it apart from other New Testament books. Its unique contribution to the New Testament revelation of Jesus Christ is the disclosure of Jesus' fulfillment of the sanctuary, sacrifices, and priesthood established in the law of Moses.

The author refers to his work as a "word of exhortation" (13:22). Since the same Greek expression in Acts 13:15 refers to a synagogue speech, the term may identify this "epistle" as an expository sermon in written form. Hebrews is aptly described as a "word of exhortation," for exhortation or encouragement is the heart of the book's purpose (3:13; 6:18; 10:25; 12:5). The author repeatedly calls his readers to an active and courageous response (4:11, 14, 16; 6:1; 10:19–25).

The exhortation to persevere in the pilgrimage of faith is grounded in the author's proof that the Old Testament itself testified to the imperfection of the covenant at Sinai and its sacrificial system, thereby pointing ahead to a new High Priest—Jesus Christ. Jesus is better than the mediators, sanctuary, and sacrifices of the old order. He is worthy of "more glory" than Moses (3:3). The arguments from lesser to greater of 2:2, 3; 9:13, 14; 10:28, 29; and 12:25 ("if . . . how much more") underscore the greater grace and glory, and the greater accountability, which have now arrived in the new covenant mediated by Jesus. Unlike the earthly and external aspects of the Old Testament sanctuary, Jesus sanctifies us for the true worship of God, so that we draw near to heaven itself with clean consciences. He is the guarantee of this better covenant bond, for He links us inseparably with the God of grace. □

God's Supreme Revelation

GOD, who [1]at various times and [a]in various ways spoke in time past to the fathers by the prophets, [2]has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, through whom also He made the [2]worlds; [3][b]who being the brightness of His glory and the express [c]image of His person, and [4]upholding all things by the word of His power, [e]when He had [3]by Himself [4]purged [5]our sins, [f]sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, [4]having become so much better than the angels, as [g]He has by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

The Son Exalted Above Angels

[5]For to which of the angels did He ever say:

[h]"You are My Son,
Today I have begotten You"?

And again:

[i]"I will be to Him a Father,
And He shall be to Me a Son"?

[6]But when He again brings [j]the firstborn into the world, He says:

[k]"Let all the angels of God worship Him."

■ 1:1–4 The prologue introduces the two time periods in God's speaking to His people: "time past" (v. 1) and "these last days" (v. 2). The Son's coming marks our time period as the "latter days" of salvation promised through the prophets (Jer. 23:20; Hos. 3:5; Mic. 4:1; cf. 1 Cor. 10:11).

■ 1:1 God . . . spoke. An important theme in Hebrews (2:2, 3; 4:12; 6:5; 11:3; 12:25).

at various times. The piecemeal character of prophetic revelation showed its incompleteness, just as the repetition of animal sacrifices showed that they could not remove guilt (10:1).

in various ways. These ways included visions, dreams, and dark sayings (Num. 12:6–8, alluded to later in 3:5).

■ 1:2 His Son. This revelation is qualitatively superior to that given through the prophets. Moses, the greatest prophet, was only a servant in God's house; Christ is "a Son over His own house" (3:6). The Son speaks, as the prophets did, but speaks as the Son whose revelation is final.

heir of all things. The Son's supremacy will be displayed at the end of history, for "all things were created . . . for Him" (Col. 1:16). He is the firstborn (v. 6), the preeminent heir, whose enemies will be put under His feet (v. 13, citing Ps. 110:1). As God's adopted sons through Jesus, we too are heirs (v. 14; 6:12, 17; Gal. 4:6, 7; Rom. 8:14–17).

through whom . . . He made the worlds. The Son's supremacy was displayed at the dawn of history, for "by Him all things were created" (Col. 1:16; cf. John 1:3). The Greek word rendered "worlds" is lit. "ages" (also in 11:3), highlighting the successive periods of history in the created order. Vv. 10–12 quote Ps. 102:25–27 as testimony to the Son's role in creation and His eternal permanence, in contrast to the created universe.

■ 1:3 brightness of His glory. The Greek word rendered "brightness" describes divine wisdom personified in the Jewish intertestamental book Wisdom of Solomon (Wis. 7:25–28). But Hebrews speaks not merely of a personified divine attribute, but of a divine Person who entered history to purify sinners.

express image of His person. This verse expresses both the Son's oneness with the Father and the distinction of divine persons. As One whose being corresponds exactly to the Father, the Son accurately reveals the Father. Christ is "the image of the invisible God" (Col. 1:15), through whom we see the Father (John 14:9; 2 Cor. 4:4–6).

upholding all things by the word of His power. In the midst of history the Son's command holds the created order in existence (Col. 1:17; 2 Pet. 3:4–7), preserving it from destruction until that day when His voice will remove all but the unshakable kingdom of God and its heirs (12:26–28).

purged our sins. A change of verb tense focuses attention on the Son's atoning death in history, the priestly act that cleanses us to worship in God's presence (9:14).

sat down at the right hand . . . on high. The Son's enthronement at God's "right hand" in heaven, promised in Ps. 110:1 (1:13), reveals His superiority in two ways. At the "right hand" of the Majesty Christ is ministering in the true, heavenly sanctuary and not an earthly copy (8:1, 2, 5). Secondly, He "sat down" because His sacrificial work (unlike that of Levitical priests) was finished once for all (10:11, 12).

■ 1:4 better than the angels. This is proved by the series of Old Testament quotations that follow (vv. 5–14).

by inheritance . . . a more excellent name. The eternal Son took on a human nature to rescue us from sin and death (2:14, 15). Now, having for a time voluntarily taken a position "lower than the angels" (2:7), as the resurrected and ascended Messiah He is "declared to be the Son of God with power" (Rom. 1:4) to save His people (v. 5 note). Christ's exaltation thus inaugurates a new phase of His messianic and redemptive Sonship, and gives Him a dignity far above that of angels.

■ 1:5, 6 The series of quotations begins with examples from the Psalms (v. 5, from Ps. 2:7), the Prophets (v. 5, from 2 Sam. 7:14; in the Hebrew Bible the books of Samuel are counted with the Prophets), and the Law (v. 6, from Deut. 32:43). Verse 6 is probably from the Greek translation (Septuagint) of Deut. 32:43, although it also recalls Ps. 97:7.

■ 1:5 You are My Son. The Father's decree declaring the Messiah to be His Son is identified with Christ's exaltation (v. 4 note; 5:5; Acts 13:32–35; Rom. 1:4). Though Jesus is the eternal and divine Son of God (Mark 1:11; John 3:16), the declaration of redemptive Sonship prophesied in Ps. 2:7 was conferred on Him in time, when He completed His messianic work. Believers cannot become divine and share in Christ's eternal divine Sonship, but their adoption as sons of God means that they participate in Christ's redemptive Sonship through union with the "captain of their salvation" (2:10; cf. 3:14 note; Rom. 8:29).

■ 1:6 brings . . . into the world. As the Son condescends to assume our human nature, angels worship Him (Luke 2:13, 14).

firstborn. As in Ps. 89:27, the term means "of the highest rank," above the kings of the earth, and not "first in order of birth." In Ex. 4:22 it means "chosen" or "most desired" (Col. 1:15 note).

7 And of the angels He says:

[l]"Who makes His angels spirits
And His ministers a flame of fire."

8 But to the Son He says:

[m]"Your throne, O God, is forever and ever;
A [6]scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your kingdom.
9 You have loved righteousness and hated lawlessness;
Therefore God, Your God, [n]has anointed You
With the oil of gladness more than Your companions."

10 And:

[o]"You, LORD, in the beginning laid the foundation of the earth,
And the heavens are the work of Your hands.
11 [p]They will perish, but You remain;
And [q]they will all grow old like a garment;
12 Like a cloak You will fold them up,
And they will be changed.
But You are the [r]same,
And Your years will not fail."

13 But to which of the angels has He ever said:

[s]"Sit at My right hand,
Till I make Your enemies Your footstool"?

14 [t]Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for those who will [u]inherit salvation?

Do Not Neglect Salvation

2 Therefore we must give [1]the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest we drift away. 2 For if the word [a]spoken through angels proved steadfast, and [b]every transgression and disobedience received a just [2]reward, 3 [c]how shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation, [d]which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was [e]confirmed to us by those who heard Him, 4 [f]God also bearing witness [g]both with signs and wonders, with various miracles, and [h]gifts[3] of the Holy Spirit, [i]according to His own will?

7 [r]Ps. 104:4

8 [m]Ps. 45:6, 7 [6]A ruler's staff

■ 1:7 The storm clouds of Ps. 104 adorn the Lord's heavenly court. "Spirits" (the Greek term may also be rendered "winds") and "flames" associate angels with the created world's mutability in contrast to the Son's eternal permanence (vv. 10–12).

ministers. In contrast to the Son's royal enthronement (vv. 8, 9), the angels are merely "ministers," or "servants."

■ 1:8, 9 From Ps. 45:6, 7. The one who addresses the Son with the words "O God" is Himself "God, Your God." The Son is God, and yet distinct from the Father (John 1:1).

■ 1:9 loved righteousness. On the Son's obedience and righteousness, see 4:15; 5:8; 7:26.

■ 1:10 On the Son as Creator, see v. 2 and note.

■ 1:11 You remain. The Son's unchanging eternity as God is essential to His high priesthood (7:3, 23, 24). Through Him the inheritance of believers remains forever (10:34; 12:27, 28; 13:14).

■ 1:13, 14 The Son's position of heavenly authority (v. 3; 8:1) is contrasted to the angels' role as servants to "those who will inherit salvation" (that is, who share as co-heirs in the Son's rights as heir, vv. 2, 5; 2:10; 6:12; cf. Rom. 8:17, 29). The angels are servants to Christ, but also to His people, who inherit salvation through union with Him. In this His people are favored above the angels (cf. 2:16; 1 Cor. 6:3).

■ 2:1 Compare similar exhortations in 3:12–14; 4:1, 11; 6:11, 12; 10:22–25; 12:1–13; and especially 12:25–29, another reminder of Sinai.

■ 2:2, 3 The argument is from the lesser to the greater. If what the angels said was "steadfast," then what comes from One superior to angels must be more so. The Greek word for "steadfast" is legal terminology, as is "witness" in v. 4.

■ 2:2 spoken through angels. The role of the angels in the giving of the law is suggested in Deut. 33:2 (where the Hebrew term translated "saints" is lit. "holy ones" and refers to angels) and became a standard element of Jewish and Christian (Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19) descriptions of Sinai.

just reward. Illustrated in 10:28, 29 (cf. 6:6). Violators of the Lord's covenant were purged from the covenant community through death.

■ 2:3 salvation. First mentioned in 1:14, this salvation includes inheritance of the world to come (v. 5; 11:16), entry into glory as God's adopted sons (v. 10), purification from sins (1:3; 2:11, 17), freedom from the fear of death (vv. 14, 15), and the privilege of drawing near to God (4:16; 10:22) to offer worship that pleases Him (12:28; 13:15, 16).

those who heard. The apostles were witnesses of what Jesus said and did in His ministry, death, and resurrection (Acts 1:21, 22; 10:39–41; 1 Pet. 5:1; 2 Pet. 1:15). The writer and his readers have heard the gospel through them (Introduction: Author).

■ 2:4 signs and wonders . . . various miracles. These terms are used in the New Testament for the special miracles that God used to demonstrate the authority of the Savior (Acts 2:22), as well as to certify the ministries of the apostles and Stephen (Acts 6:8; 14:3; Rom. 15:19; 2 Cor. 12:12).

The Son Made Lower than Angels

5 For He has not put *j*the world to come, of which we speak, in subjection to angels. 6 But one testified in a certain place, saying:

k "What is man that You are mindful of him,
Or the son of man that You take care of him?
7 You have made him 4a little lower than the angels;
You have crowned him with glory and honor,
5 And set him over the works of Your hands.
8 l You have put all things in subjection under his feet."

For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now *m*we do not yet see all things put under him. 9 But we see Jesus, *n*who was made *6*a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death *o*crowned with glory and honor, that He, by the grace of God, might taste death *p*for everyone.

Bringing Many Sons to Glory

10 For it was fitting for Him, *q*for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of their salvation *r*perfect through sufferings. 11 For *s*both He who *7*sanctifies and those who are being sanctified *t*are all of one, for which reason *u*He is not ashamed to call them brethren, 12 saying:

v "I will declare Your name to My brethren;
In the midst of the assembly I will sing praise to You."

13 And again:

w "I will put My trust in Him."

And again:

x "Here am I and the children whom God has given Me."

■ 2:5–9 The author uses the contrast between angels and human beings in v. 5 to point to the way that the Son, in assuming a full and complete humanity (vv. 14, 17), restores man's dignity and divinely-intended place in creation.

■ 2:6 one testified. Such vagueness in scriptural references is characteristic of the author of Hebrews, who stresses the divine authorship of Scripture rather than the human authors (e.g., 1:5, 7, 8; 2:12; 3:7; 4:3; 5:5, 6). This way of citing a well-known Old Testament proof text about man in creation is evidence for the Jewish background of the recipients.

■ 2:8 we do not yet. Ps. 8 describes the glorious status of man as the head of all creation. But it is obvious that man is far from enjoying any such status and some explanation is required.

■ 2:9 we see Jesus. Jesus has the crown of glory and honor. It must now be shown that He received it as a man, and so can satisfy the words of the psalm quoted.

a little lower. See text note. The expression can refer to status or to time (that is, "a little while," Luke 22:58; Acts 5:34). If it refers to time, it indicates the temporary character of Jesus' humiliation.

taste death for everyone. Here, "everyone" must be understood in the light of the context and of the results of Jesus' death described elsewhere in Hebrews. It refers to the "many sons" whom God brings to glory (v. 10), whom Jesus calls "brethren" (v. 11). Those for whom Jesus tasted death were made holy and perfect once for all by His sacrifice (10:10, 14), their consciences cleansed from acts that lead to death (9:14), so they are freed from the fear of death (2:14, 15). By contrast, there are those (even within Christian congregations) who do not trust the Son but subject Him to ridicule (6:6). For them, "there no longer remains a sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful expectation of judgment" (10:26, 27). Thus "everyone" here includes all those (but only those) who persevere in trusting Jesus (3:6, 14).

■ 2:10–18 For God's adopted sons to reach the glory promised in Ps. 8, the unique Son had to suffer death on their behalf, destroying their enemy, freeing them from slavery, and atoning for their sins. Bonds of kinship in the eternal plan of God unite the redeemed to the "captain of their salvation" (vv. 10, 11).

■ 2:10 captain. The Greek term can also be translated "author" or "prince" (12:2; Acts 3:15; 5:31). Jesus went first on the path of suffering, and He guides us as our captain to the glory that He achieved.

make . . . perfect. See note on 5:9.

■ 2:11 He who sanctifies. See "The Atonement" at Rom. 3:25.

are all of one. Or, "have the same origin," that is, God. Another interpretation is, "are of one nature," that is, human nature.

not ashamed. In view of the Son's glory portrayed in ch. 1, we might expect Him to recoil from identification with fallible human beings, but He willingly calls us brothers and sisters. Such a family relationship is essential to His compassionate, priestly ministry (v. 17; 5:1; 7:5).

■ 2:12 Introduced here primarily because of the words "My brethren," Ps. 22:22 is the turning point in a psalm of the Anointed One's passage through suffering to deliverance. The context of the words quoted corresponds to their use in Hebrews.

■ 2:13 I will put My trust in Him. This confession of faith appears in 2 Sam. 22:3; Is. 8:17; 12:2—in all three a servant of God expresses trust in the face of danger. For the Son—"the author and finisher of our faith" (12:2)—to take these words on His lips implies His condescension, in regard to His human nature, to live by faith as we must.

I and the children whom God has given Me. As Isaiah and his children were signs of God's faithfulness to their generation (Is. 8:18), so the Son who is greater than the prophets (1:1, 2; 3:3–6) now has His circle of "children," given to Him by the Father (John 17:6).

[14] Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He [y]Himself likewise shared in the same, [z]that through death He might destroy him who had the power of [a]death, that is, the devil, [15] and release those who [b]through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. [16] For indeed He does not [g]give aid to angels, but He does [g]give aid to the seed of Abraham. [17] Therefore, in all things He had [c]to be made like His brethren, that He might be [d]a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God, to make propitiation for the sins of the people. [18] [e]For in that He Himself has suffered, being [f]tempted, He is able to aid those who are tempted.

The Son Was Faithful

3 Therefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our confession, Christ Jesus, [2] who was faithful to Him who appointed Him, as [a]Moses also was faithful in all His house. [3] For this One has been counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as [b]He who built the house has more honor than the house. [4] For every house is built by someone, but [c]He who built all things is God. [5] [d]And Moses indeed was faithful in all His house as [e]a servant, [f]for a testimony of those things which would be spoken afterward, [6] but Christ as [g]a Son over His own house, [h]whose house we are [i]if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope [f]firm to the end.

Be Faithful

[7] Therefore, as [j]the Holy Spirit says:

7 [j]Acts 1:16

■ 2:14–18 Christ is presented first as our Redeemer and Warrior who defeats our oppressor and sets us free, then as our merciful High Priest who helps us in our trials.

■ 2:14 flesh and blood. This is an idiomatic way of saying "human." The same Greek phrase is seen at Matt. 16:17; 1 Cor. 15:50; Gal. 1:16; Eph. 6:12; it may emphasize the limitations of the human condition.

shared in the same. That is, the same humanity, a phrase stressing the completeness of the Son's incarnation. In order for Christ to triumph over death and the devil by enduring God's judgment upon sinners, it was necessary for Him to share their "flesh and blood" nature.

him who had the power of death. Having tempted humanity to sin, the devil then acts as an accuser (Rev. 12:10), demanding that a just punishment be exacted; and "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23; cf. 1 Cor. 15:56). The devil's power to kill is destroyed only when our sin has been punished—in Christ's death. Then his accusations have no ground (Col. 2:14, 15).

■ 2:16 This verse resumes the contrast of v. 5. The background is Is. 41:8–14, where Israel is called "descendants of Abraham," whom the Lord "will hold" and whom He promises to "help" (Is. 41:13; cf. Heb. 2:18), so they need not "fear" (Is. 41:10; Heb. 2:15; cf. 13:5, 6). On Abraham and his descendants, see 6:15–17; 11:9; Rom. 4:11–18; 9:7, 8; Gal. 3:29.

give aid. Another translation is "takes on" or "lays hold of," as of "taking on" human nature (text note) in the Incarnation. Either way, the point is that the sort of incarnation described in v. 14 is determined by the sort of creatures whom God wills to save. These are human beings, and the eternal Word must be incarnated as a human being: "the Word became flesh" (John 1:14).

■ 2:17 He had to be made like His brethren. Only the One who had been tested in every way as we are could be the merciful High Priest (4:15; 5:2). Only the One who had responded to every test in perfect obedience could be the faithful High Priest, without sin (4:15; 7:26) and worthy to offer Himself as the unblemished sacrifice (9:14).

merciful and faithful High Priest. This echoes the prophecy that pronounced judgment on Eli's house, of Aaron's family, and the coming of a faithful High Priest who would minister forever (1 Sam. 2:35). The faithfulness (3:6) and mercy of Christ (5:2) are explained in what follows.

make propitiation for. This term means that He bore God's wrath and curse that rested on "the people" who sinned (Rom. 3:25, 26). See "Christ the Mediator" at 1 Tim. 2:5.

■ 2:18 He Himself has suffered. See "The Humanity of Jesus" at 2 John 7.

■ 3:1 holy brethren. This typical Christian title of address (3:12; 10:19; Acts 1:16; 1 Cor. 3:1) has special significance here, since Jesus has made us His "brethren" and "sanctified" us (2:11).

heavenly calling. The Lord calls from heaven, summoning us to enduring faith (12:25). He also calls us to heaven, the better country (11:16) and the eternal inheritance of those who are called (9:15).

consider. Since Christ is able to deal with the most important problems we face, the reader should be eager to give close attention to what will now be said about Him.

Apostle. This title is applied to Jesus only here in the New Testament. It stresses His faithful accomplishment of the mission on which the Father sent Him (v. 2; cf. 10:5–10; John 6:38; 20:21).

■ 3:2–6 With reference to Num. 12:7, Moses and Christ are compared as to faithfulness and contrasted as to honor. Though privileged to speak to God face to face and to see His form (Num. 12:8), Moses was still only "a servant" in the house of God (v. 5). Christ, as agent of creation (1:2, 10), deserves honor as divine builder of all things and as "Son over His own house" (v. 6).

■ 3:3 built the house. The necessary implication is that Jesus is the builder of the house, and therefore that He is divine (v. 4). This passage points both to Christ's identity as God ("He who built") and to His personal distinction from the Father (v. 6).

■ 3:5 faithful in all His house. Since the writer alludes to Num. 12:7, the emphasis is on the dignity of Moses' service. Moses is the unique minister of the law, but Jesus' ministry is higher still.

testimony . . . spoken afterward. Moses' ministry was to testify to Christ's coming (John 5:46, 47). The Mosaic law by its shadows pointed toward the coming good things brought by Christ (9:11; 10:1), for in its regulations the Holy Spirit showed that access into God's presence would come only when the earthly tabernacle was replaced by something better (9:8).

■ 3:6 over His own house. Note the prepositions: Moses was "in" the house, but Christ is "over" the house (10:21).

whose house we are. God's house consists of His people (1 Sam. 2:35; 2 Sam. 7:16; Eph. 2:19–22; 1 Tim. 3:15; 1 Pet. 2:5), an important theme throughout Scripture.

if we hold fast. This condition tells the readers how they can know that they belong to God—their faith must prove itself by persevering (v. 14; 6:11; 10:23). The note of warning is a fitting introduction to the quotation from Ps. 95 that follows.

■ 3:7—4:13 The writer quotes Ps. 95:7–11, and then uses numerous

1 [q]2 Cor. 6:1; [Gal. 5:4]; Heb. 12:15
2 [1]NU, M since they were not united by faith with those who heeded it
3 [b]Ps. 95:11; Heb. 3:11

[k] "Today, if you will hear His voice,
8 Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion,
In the day of trial in the wilderness,
9 Where your fathers tested Me, tried Me,
And saw My works forty years.
10 Therefore I was angry with that generation,
And said, 'They always go astray in their heart,
And they have not known My ways.'
11 So I swore in My wrath,
'They shall not enter My rest.'"

12 Beware, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; 13 but [2]exhort one another daily, while it is called "Today," lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. 14 For we have become partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast to the end, 15 while it is said:

[l] "Today, if you will hear His voice,
Do not harden your hearts as in the rebellion."

Failure of the Wilderness Wanderers

16 [m]For who, having heard, rebelled? Indeed, was it not all who came out of Egypt, led by Moses? 17 Now with whom was He angry forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, [n]whose corpses fell in the wilderness? 18 And [o]to whom did He swear that they would not enter His rest, but to those who did not obey? 19 So we see that they could not enter in because of [p]unbelief.

The Promise of Rest

4 Therefore, since a promise remains of entering His rest, [q]let us fear lest any of you seem to have come short of it. 2 For indeed the gospel was preached to us as well as to them; but the word which they heard did not profit them, [1]not being mixed with faith in those who heard it. 3 For we who have believed do enter that rest, as He has said:

[b] "So I swore in My wrath,
'They shall not enter My rest,'"

brief quotations and echoes of it to keep his exposition to the point. Important key words in this section are "today" (3:13, 15; 4:7) and "rest" (4:3, 5, 6, 8–11); the treatment of "rest" is developed from the Sabbath teaching of Gen. 2:2. Corresponding to this teaching is the exhortation to "enter that rest" (4:11) and the warning not to "harden your hearts" (3:15; 4:7).

■ 3:8 day of trial. A significant occasion of testing occurred at Rephidim (Ex. 17:1–7), where the people grumbled and Moses struck the rock to give them water. The entire forty-year period of disobedience and resistance while wandering in the desert may also be in view (vv. 9, 10; Ps. 78:40).

■ 3:11 swore. Num. 14:21–30 records God's promise not to allow that generation to enter the Promised Land. Hebrews understands this oath to point also to a divine, eternal Sabbath rest (4:1–11).

My rest. See note on 4:8.

■ 3:12, 13 The author addresses his readers in terms of their confession of faith (v. 1) as "brethren," yet also recognizes that some within the Christian fellowship may have an "evil heart of unbelief" (cf. 12:15–17). Christ saves completely those who come to God through Him (7:25), but Christians must guard their own and each other's endurance by encouraging one another (10:24, 25), as the author does throughout this letter (13:22).

■ 3:12 heart of unbelief. That is, a heart like that of "your fathers" (v. 9), which kept them from entering God's rest (v. 19).

■ 3:13 Today. See note on 4:7.

deceitfulness of sin. Sin promotes the illusion that disobedience is more secure (Ex. 17:3) or pleasurable (11:25, 26; Ex. 16:3) than the pilgrimage of faith.

■ 3:14 partakers of Christ. The Greek can be taken to mean that we are partakers with Christ, His companions (1:9), sharing new life with Him. It is also possible to translate "partakers of Christ," indicating that He is the benefit we share in, through our intimate union with Him.

■ 3:16–19 Neither the blessing of the Exodus from Egypt nor the privilege of hearing God's voice guaranteed to the generation that was in the desert that they would enter God's rest, the rest that is the goal of our pilgrimage (4:8 note). Their rebellion (v. 16), sin (v. 17), and disobedience (v. 18; 4:6) was rooted in unbelief, in their failure to cling permanently to God's promise (v. 19; 4:2, 3).

■ 4:1 let us fear. The divine judgment inspires fear (10:27, 31; 12:21), but we should not fear what men may do (11:27; 13:6).

■ 4:2 the gospel . . . preached to us. The good news of deliverance and God's love that Israel heard at Sinai was not as clear as the salvation spoken now through the Lord (2:3), but it would have been of value to the hearers, ushering them into God's rest, if they had combined it with faith.

■ 4:3–5 The basic theme of these verses is that a "rest" of God has existed from the seventh day of Creation (v. 4; Gen. 2:2), even though the disobedient generation could not enter it. The writer understands the promises about the physical land to point ultimately to the divine rest (3:11 note), which only those who believe may enter (v. 3).

although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. [4] For He has spoken in a certain place of the seventh day in this way: [c]"And God rested on the seventh day from all His works"; [5] and again in this place: [d]"They shall not enter My rest."

[6] Since therefore it remains that some must enter it, and those to whom it was first preached did not enter because of disobedience, [7] again He designates a certain day, saying in David, "Today," after such a long time, as it has been said:

> [e]"Today, if you will hear His voice,
> Do not harden your hearts."

[8] For if [2]Joshua had [f]given them rest, then He would not afterward have spoken of another day. [9] There remains therefore a rest for the people of God. [10] For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His.

The Word Discovers Our Condition

[11] [g]Let us therefore be diligent to enter that rest, lest anyone fall according to the same example of disobedience. [12] For the word of God is [h]living and powerful, and [i]sharper than any [j]two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is [k]a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. [13] [l]And there is no creature hidden from His sight, but all things are [m]naked and open to the eyes of Him to whom we must give account.

Our Compassionate High Priest

[14] Seeing then that we have a great [n]High Priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, [o]let us hold fast our confession. [15] For [p]we do not have a High Priest who cannot sympathize with our weaknesses, but [q]was in all points tempted as we are, [r]yet without sin. [16] [s]Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

CHAPTER 5

1 [a]Heb. 2:17; 8:3

2 [1]deal gently with

■ 4:7 Today. The readers have already learned that they live in the time called "Today" (3:13); therefore they must heed the promises and the warnings. Through David the offer of entry (and a warning against failure to enter) is continued to a new generation, who "today" must respond to God's voice.

■ 4:8 Another indication (cf. vv. 3–5) that the physical land of Canaan did not fulfill the promise of God's rest. When David wrote, Israel long ago had entered Canaan under Joshua. If the land they entered under Joshua had fulfilled the promise of divine rest, the psalm's warning to David's generation would have been pointless. The patriarchs' hope was fixed on a better, heavenly country (11:16). There are similar arguments from the Old Testament in 7:11; 8:7.

■ 4:9 There remains . . . a rest. The final Sabbath celebration awaits God's people in the future.

■ 4:10 ceased from his works. The reference is probably not to conversion, in which we transfer trust from our works to Christ, but to our final deliverance from suffering, testing, and effort (v. 11). Those who die in the Lord "rest from their labors" (Rev. 14:13).

■ 4:12, 13 The preceding argument (3:7—4:11) has illustrated how the word of God's power exposed the faithlessness of the desert generation and how Scripture (e.g., Ps. 95) penetrates and judges those whom it invites today, as it warns about the deceitfulness of sin (3:13) and the possibility of falling short (v. 1).

■ 4:12 division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow. Though some find support here for the view that a human being is basically a trichotomy consisting of body, soul, and spirit, the context is against it. It stresses the power of God's word to enter the deepest recesses of a person's being, and not a sort of division into constituent parts. Also, if the idea of division were intended, we would expect the author to say "bone and marrow" instead of "joints and marrow."

■ 4:14–16 The sobering thought of our complete exposure before God draws us to the merciful High Priest who, having been tempted, can help us in our weakness (themes announced in 2:17, 18). An exhortation to "hold fast our confession" (v. 14) caps the preceding section, and an invitation to approach God's throne introduces the discussion of Christ as the merciful High Priest.

■ 4:14 passed through the heavens. Christ was raised, ascended, and sits at God's right hand (8:1), where He ministers as our great and eternal High Priest (7:26; 9:11, 24).

the Son of God. See note on 1:5 (cf. 5:5).

■ 4:15 In all points tempted. This is a vivid restatement of 2:17, 18. As temptation is again mentioned, the author is careful to add that Christ was "without sin" despite His knowledge of our weakness. See theological note "The Sinlessness of Jesus."

■ 4:16 Let us therefore come boldly. Confident access to God is a priestly privilege reserved for those who have been purified from sin's pollution by Jesus' sacrifice (7:19; 10:19, 22), and so can offer sacrifices of thanksgiving pleasing to God (12:28; 13:15, 16). On the priestly privilege of Christian believers see Rom. 5:1, 2; Eph. 2:13–22; 1 Pet. 2:4–10.

mercy . . . grace to help. Mercy addresses our need for forgiveness when we have succumbed to temptation, and grace brings timely support to sustain us in the midst of temptation (2:18).

■ 5:1–10 As the Old Testament priests were identified with the weak and erring people whom they represented (vv. 1–3) and served at God's appointment (v. 4), so also Christ became High Priest by the Father's appointment (vv. 5, 6) and was identified with His people through suffering (vv. 7–10).

■ 5:1 offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins. The phrase "gifts and sacrifices" covers offerings of several different kinds called for in the work of Old Testament priests (8:3; Lev. 1—7). But the main interest here is in those offered for sins.

■ 5:2 can have compassion. The weakness of the Old Testament high those who are ignorant and going astray, since he himself is also subject to [b]weakness. 3 Because of this he is required as for the people, so also for [c]himself, to offer sacrifices for sins. 4 And no man takes this honor to himself, but he who is called by God, just as [d]Aaron was.

A Priest Forever

5 [e]So also Christ did not glorify Himself to become High Priest, but it was He who said to Him:

[f]"You are My Son,
Today I have begotten You."

6 As He also says in another place:

[g]"You are a priest forever

The Sinlessness of Jesus

The New Testament teaches that Jesus was entirely free from sin (John 8:46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15; 7:26; 1 Pet. 2:22; 1 John 3:5). This assertion means not only that He never disobeyed His Father, but that He loved God's law and found whole-hearted joy in keeping it. In fallen human beings there is always some reluctance to obey God, and sometimes resentment amounting to hatred at the claims He makes on us (Rom. 8:7). But Jesus' moral nature was unfallen, as was Adam's prior to his sin, and in Jesus there was no prior inclination away from God for Satan to exploit, as there is in us. Jesus loved His Father and His Father's will with all His heart, mind, soul, and strength.

Heb. 4:15 says that Jesus was "in all points tempted as we are," though without sinning. The temptations we face—temptations to wrongfully indulge natural desires, to evade moral and spiritual issues, to cut moral corners and take easy ways out, to be less than loving and sympathetic to others, to be self-centered and lost in self-pity—all these came upon Jesus, but He yielded to none of them (see "The Humanity of Jesus" at 2 John 7). In Gethsemane and on the Cross He fought temptation and resisted sin to the point of death. Christians must learn from Him to do likewise (Luke 14:25–33; Heb. 12:3–13).

For our salvation it was necessary that Jesus be free from sin. He was "a lamb without blemish and without spot," able to offer His "precious" blood for us (1 Pet. 1:19). If He had been sinful He would have needed a savior Himself, and His death would not have helped us. Christ obeyed on our behalf the moral commandments applying to all humanity. He also fulfilled all the will of God applying to Him in particular, as the One called to be the Messiah. His perfect obedience qualifies Him to be our all-sufficient Savior. □ priest in the face of his own temptations compelled him to moderate his indignation over others' sins and "have compassion" for them. Jesus' sympathy also is strongly motivated, since He fully identifies with the struggles of His people. Yet Jesus never succumbed to temptation (4:15).

ignorant and going astray. The law (Num. 15:27–31) distinguished between sins committed out of weakness or ignorance, and sins committed in defiance of the Lord's authority (10:26, 27).

■ 5:3 The Old Testament high priest was himself in need of atonement and forgiveness (7:27; 9:7; Lev. 16:11), unlike our sinless High Priest (4:15; 7:26).

■ 5:4 called by God, just as Aaron was. The initial call of Aaron (Ex. 28:1) was confirmed in response to the challenge of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram (Num. 16) through the budding of Aaron's staff (9:4; Num. 17:1–10). The priestly privilege of approach to God is by invitation only—mediated through physical descent for the Old Testament Levitical priests, but finally established through the divine oath to Jesus the Son (7:11–28).

■ 5:5 You are My Son. Ps. 2:7 is quoted twice in Hebrews (1:5), both times in a leading position. Here it is the opening step of a long and detailed discussion of Melchizedek.

■ 5:6 Melchizedek. This mysterious figure is mentioned only twice in the Old Testament (Gen. 14:18; Ps. 110:4). But the association here of the title "priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek" with the words "My Son" (v. 5) shows the exalted character of this priesthood, and justifies the author's fuller explanation in ch. 7.

■ 5:7 vehement cries and tears. Jesus' anguish at the prospect of the Cross (Mark 14:33–36; John 12:27) shows that He is not aloof from the weakness and fears that threaten us.

His godly fear, [8] though He was a Son, yet He learned [l]obedience by the things which He suffered. [9] And [m]having been perfected, He became the author of eternal salvation to all who obey Him, [10] called by God as High Priest [n]"according to the order of Melchizedek," [11] of whom [o]we have much to say, and hard to explain, since you have become [p]dull of hearing.

Spiritual Immaturity

[12] For though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you again the first principles of the [2]oracles of God; and you have come to need [q]milk and not solid food. [13] For everyone who partakes only of milk is unskilled in the word of righteousness, for he is [r]a babe. [14] But solid food belongs to those who are [3]of full age, that is, those who by reason of [4]use have their senses exercised [s]to discern both good and evil.

The Peril of Not Progressing

6 Therefore, [a]leaving the discussion of the elementary principles of Christ, let us go on to [1]perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from [b]dead works and of faith toward God, [2] [c]of the doctrine of baptisms, [d]of laying on of hands, [e]of resurrection of the dead, [f]and of eternal judgment. [3] And this [2]we will do if God permits.

[4] For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted [g]the heavenly gift, and [h]have become partakers of the Holy Spirit, [5] and have tasted the good word of God and the was heard. The psalmists praised God that He heard their cries of distress (Ps. 22:24; 30:23; 116:1). Jesus' plea for salvation from death was answered not through escape from the ordeal of the Cross, but through His Resurrection from death.

■ 5:8 He learned obedience. Though entirely free from sin (4:15), Jesus' struggle against temptation was real (2:18). As One who came into the world to do the Father's will (10:7), Christ successfully met each increasingly difficult challenge to His integrity, climaxing in the shameful and painful death on the cross (Phil. 2:8). This life of learned obedience offsets the disobedience of Adam (Rom. 5:19) and qualifies Christ to serve as the eternal High Priest (2:17, 18; 4:15).

■ 5:9 having been perfected. This does not mean that Jesus finally became sinless, since He was always without sin (4:15), but that He finished the course of suffering that was set before Him, including the sacrificial death. Having done this, He was "perfected," or completely qualified to serve as the uniquely effective High Priest. The language here may allude to the concept of priestly consecration.

eternal salvation. Jesus lives forever to intercede as our High Priest (7:24, 25).

■ 5:10 Melchizedek. See ch. 7.

■ 5:11—6:12 Christ's priestly ministry after the order of Melchizedek is "hard to explain" (5:11) because of the readers' immaturity. The exhortation in this section focuses on the dangers posed by a failure to "go on to perfection" (6:1 text note).

■ 5:11 dull of hearing. The Greek word translated "dull" reappears in 6:12 ("sluggish," text note), suggesting that the danger of spiritual laziness is in view throughout this section.

■ 5:12 first principles of the oracles of God. Such truths are listed in 6:1, 2.

■ 5:13 milk. Although milk is nourishing for infants (1 Pet. 2:2), the author desires that his readers become mature Christians, for whom solid food is appropriate (1 Cor. 3:1, 2).

■ 5:14 The maturity needed to grasp Christ's priestly ministry is not intellectual sophistication, but spiritual discernment arising from consistent obedience to God's will (Phil. 1:9–11).

■ 6:1 the elementary principles of Christ. These are the ABC's of Christian doctrine, which are now briefly enumerated (vv. 1, 2). All these doctrines can be found in the Book of Acts.

repentance . . . and of faith. See Mark 1:15; Acts 20:21.

■ 6:2 baptisms. The plural is unexpected; there is only one Christian baptism (Eph. 4:5). Yet even today when Christian baptism is discussed other baptisms, at least John the Baptist's, must be mentioned . This was certainly true in New Testament times (9:10; Matt. 3:11; 28:19; Mark 1:4; John 4:1; Acts 1:5). Another possibility is that the word refers specifically to Old Testament ceremonial washings (see 9:10) as part of the essential background for Christ's work.

laying on of hands. This action accompanied blessing, healing the sick, ordination of church officers, and especially the gift of the Spirit, which was also associated with baptism (Matt. 19:13–15; Luke 4:40; Acts 6:6; 8:17; 9:17; 28:8; 1 Tim. 4:14). Alternatively, as is possible with "baptisms," the writer may be referring to the Old Testament foundations of Christ's work.

■ 6:3 if God permits. This conventional phrase acknowledges the need for God's help in learning and teaching Christian doctrine. Its use suggests that the material to follow is difficult, as indeed it is.

■ 6:4–12 This sober warning has been variously interpreted. Some understand the author to refer to genuine Christians who lose their salvation, but such a reading conflicts with passages which teach that those whom God has truly saved will persevere in faith to the end (John 10:28, 29; Rom. 8:28–30; "Perseverance of the Saints" at Rom. 8:30). Others interpret the warning as an argument directed against a Judaizing heretical sect, followers of a heresy serious enough that embracing it would lead to the loss of all hope of salvation. Another interpretation holds that the author is describing the apostates of vv. 4–8 in terms of their profession and the blessings they appeared to share with genuine believers up to the moment of their apostasy. Although Jesus saves completely (7:25) and has made perfect forever (10:13) those who hear His word with faith, the author exhorts the readers to prove the faith they profess by their perseverance. Without faith, proximity to God in the fellowship of His covenant people is no blessing; rather, it subjects apostates to more severe judgment.

■ 6:4 once enlightened. That is, had the knowledge of God disclosed in the gospel message (10:26; John 1:9; 2 Cor. 4:4–6) and publicly confessed in baptism. In early Christian writings, conversion and baptism was sometimes termed "enlightenment." The Greek word for "once" is prominent in Hebrews. It is used in connection with the once-for-all sacrifice of Christ in 10:2, 10.

tasted the heavenly gift. Some see here a reference to participation in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Or the phrase could be paired with "enlightened" as a broad description of apparent conversion.

partakers of the Holy Spirit. They had some experience with the gifts of the Holy Spirit, but it is not necessary to conclude that regeneration is specifically intended.

powers of the age to come, 6 [3]if they fall away, to renew them again to repentance, [i]since they crucify again for themselves the Son of God, and put Him to an open shame.

7 For the earth which drinks in the rain that often comes upon it, and bears herbs useful for those by whom it is cultivated, [j]receives blessing from God; 8 [k]but if it bears thorns and briers, it is rejected and near to being cursed, whose end is to be burned.

A Better Estimate

9 But, beloved, we are confident of better things concerning you, yes, things that accompany salvation, though we speak in this manner. 10 For [l]God is not unjust to forget [m]your work and [4]labor of love which you have shown toward His name, in that you have [n]ministered to the saints, and do minister. 11 And we desire that each one of you show the same diligence [o]to the full assurance of hope until the end, 12 that you do not become [5]sluggish, but imitate those who through faith and patience [p]inherit the promises.

God's Infallible Purpose in Christ

13 For when God made a promise to Abraham, because He could swear by no one greater, [q]He swore by Himself, 14 saying, [r]"Surely blessing I will bless you, and multiplying I will multiply you." 15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the [s]promise. 16 For men indeed swear by the greater, and [t]an oath for confirmation is for them an end of all dispute. 17 Thus God, determining to show more abundantly to [u]the heirs of promise [v]the [6]immutability of His counsel, [7]confirmed it by an oath, 18 that by two [8]immutable things, in which it is impossible for God to [w]lie, we [9]might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope [x]set before us.

19 This hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, [y]and which enters the

■ 6:6 renew them again to repentance. There is a kind of falling away that is irreversible (1 John 5:16). Christian salvation is final (10:4), and the decision to reject it, if made at a certain level, cannot be reversed. According to 1 John 2:19, anyone who makes such a decision was not really a member of the household of faith, although they may have seemed to be. Judas Iscariot is the clearest example of someone who participated in the coming of the kingdom, but did not enter it (Matt. 26:47–49; cf. Matt. 7:21–23). This warning is not to encourage speculation about whether others are irretrievably lost, but urges us to cling closely to the Savior ourselves. See "The Unpardonable Sin" at Mark 3:29.

crucify again . . . the Son of God. By renouncing their faith in Christ they declare that Christ's cross is not a holy sacrifice for others' sins, but the deserved execution of a guilty criminal (10:29). Such apostates have returned to a point where the Cross does nothing but condemn them as accomplices in murder (Acts 18:5, 6).

There is an analogy between the once-for-all character of Christ's sacrifice for sin and the believer's symbolic participation in that crucifixion through baptism (v. 4 note). Christ's sacrificial death cannot be repeated. In the same way, the believer's participation in His death, sealed by baptism (Rom. 6:3, 4; Col. 2:12), cannot be withdrawn and then repeated.

open shame. The apostasy described in ch. 6 is not a matter of private, internal doubt. It is the forceful, complete, and public rejection of a faith once confessed. As such, it has bad effects for others as well as for the apostate (12:15).

■ 6:7, 8 According to the prophetic imagery of the Old Testament, the ground is God's people (Is. 5:1–7), and the rain falling on it is the Word (Is. 55:10, 11) or the Spirit of God (Is. 44:3, 4). The unproductive field is destroyed (Is. 5:4–6). See also Matt. 13:7, 8, 22, 23.

■ 6:9–12 By bearing firstfruits of a useful crop, the readers give reason for confidence that they will prove to be the land that receives God's blessing of salvation. Still, they must shake off their present sluggishness to receive the inheritance promised to patient believers. The severity of the previous warning should not lead to despair.

■ 6:10 ministered . . . and do minister. For example, through standing with those ridiculed or imprisoned for their faith (10:32–34).

■ 6:11 hope. Because the goal of faith is in the future, the faithful must hold on "until the end" (cf. 3:14; 6:18, 19; 11:1).

■ 6:12 sluggish. This term (translated "dull" in 5:11) marks the beginning and end of the exhortation.

through faith and patience inherit the promises. Abraham is the preeminent example (vv. 15, 17; 11:8–19); but biblical history is full of witnesses who have run the course of patient faith ahead of us (11:4–38), and have now received the promised inheritance through Christ's perfecting work (11:13, 39, 40).

■ 6:13–20 Faith can endure patiently because God's oath secures His promise to us, as it did to Abraham. Our confidence rests in the eternal high priesthood of Jesus after the order of Melchizedek, a priesthood secured by divine promise and oath (7:20–22, 28).

■ 6:13 He swore by Himself. That God, whose "word is truth" (John 17:17; cf. Titus 1:2), should reinforce the surety of that infallible promise through an oath underscores the permanence and seriousness of the divine promise (Gen. 15:8–21; 22:17). While sinful and fallible human beings "swear by the greater" than themselves (v. 16), God, the highest authority, "swore by Himself" (v. 13).

■ 6:15 after he had patiently endured, he obtained. The divine promise and oath (Gen. 22:17) was God's response to Abraham's attempted sacrifice of Isaac, the child of divine promise (Gen. 12:2; 15:4–6), in obedience to divine direction (Gen. 22:2). In the birth and then the rescue of Isaac (Gen. 21:1–3; 22:11, 12), Abraham did receive the promised blessing of offspring. Nevertheless, he did not see the complete fulfillment of those covenantal promises (11:39, 40; cf. Rom. 4:13, 16, 17).

■ 6:17 His counsel. See text note. God's unchanging purpose was to bless the world through the seed of Abraham (Gen. 12:3); the meaning of this was revealed in the gospel (Gal. 3:6–9).

the heirs of promise. God's oath-bound promise was not only for Abraham but for all who follow his footsteps of faith (1:14; 6:12; 10:36; Rom. 4:23, 24).

■ 6:18 two immutable things. The unchanging promise God conveyed to Abraham and the oath that confirmed it, raising it above all uncertainty or distrust (vv. 13, 14 note). The oath confirms that the promise was indeed the purpose of God.

the hope set before us. See theological note "Hope."

■ 6:19 the Presence behind the veil. Our life's anchor is secured in the innermost section of the heavenly tabernacle, the original from which the earthly sanctuary was modeled (8:2; 9:11, 12, 24, 25; 10:19, 20).

Presence behind the veil, 20 [z]where the forerunner has entered for us, even Jesus, [a]having become High Priest forever according to the order of Melchizedek.

The King of Righteousness

7 For this [a]Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings and blessed him, 2 to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all, first being translated "king of righteousness," and then also king of Salem, meaning "king of peace," 3 without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like the Son of God, remains a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, to whom even the patriarch Abraham gave a tenth of the [1]spoils. 5 And indeed [b]those who are of the sons of Levi, who receive the priesthood, have a commandment to receive tithes from the people according to the law, that is, from their brethren, though they have come from the loins of Abraham; 6 but he whose genealogy is not derived from them received tithes from Abraham [c]and blessed [d]him who had the promises. 7 Now beyond all contradiction the lesser is blessed by the better. 8 Here mortal men receive tithes, but there he

Hope

Christians look forward with hope to the joy of being with Christ in glory forever. Faith is defined as "the substance of things hoped for" (Heb. 11:1) because the invisible things hoped for in the future are grasped through faith. Hope is certain; it is "an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast" (Heb. 6:18, 19). According to the Bible, Christ is "our hope" (1 Tim. 1:1), and our God is called "the God of hope" (Rom. 15:13).

An ethic of hope pervades the New Testament. It is an ethic of pilgrimage for strangers on their way home (Heb. 11:13; 1 Pet. 2:11). It is an ethic of purity, as the one who hopes to be like Jesus when He appears "purifies himself, just as He is pure" (1 John 3:3). It is an ethic of preparedness, since we should be ready to leave this world at any time (2 Cor. 5:6–8; Phil. 1:21–24; cf. Luke 12:15–21). Hope calls us to be patient (Rom. 8:25; cf. 5:1–5). Hope gives strength and confidence for running the race, fighting the good fight, and enduring the tribulations that continue in this life (John 16:33; Acts 14:22; Rom. 8:18; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

Though the Christian life is marked more by suffering than by triumph (Acts 14:22; 1 Cor. 4:8–13; 2 Cor. 4:7–18), our hope is sure and our mood should be free from despair (1 John 4:18). □

■ 6:20 the forerunner has entered. Entrance to the inner sanctuary is not possible without Jesus. He went in first, so that His people could follow. But His entrance, and how His people have a part in it, requires a lengthy explanation. This verse begins the discussion of Christ's priesthood "according to the order of Melchizedek," announced in 5:6 but delayed until now.

■ 7:1–28 The central point of this chapter is that the solemn promise of Ps. 110:4 was fulfilled only in Jesus Christ. Jesus' eternal priesthood is explained in terms of the two Old Testament texts that mention Melchizedek: Gen. 14:17–20 and Ps. 110:4.

■ 7:1 king of Salem. The introduction of Melchizedek emphasizes that he was a king as well as a priest. As such he is a type of Christ, who is our prophet, priest, and king. "Salem" was apparently an ancient name for Jerusalem (Ps. 76:2).

■ 7:2 king of righteousness. "Melchizedek" is interpreted by the Hebrew words melek, "king," and zedek, "righteousness."

■ 7:3 Some believe that Melchizedek is a preincarnate appearance of Christ, but this is unlikely since terms of comparison and analogy are used: (a) he is "like the Son of God" (a comparison of the Son with Himself would be odd); (b) the Son became High Priest "according to the order of Melchizedek" (6:20) later, through His incarnation, atoning death, and exaltation. In addition, in Gen. 14 Melchizedek is presented as one who has a recognized political position (king of Salem), whereas Old Testament theophanies are brief and exceptional.

without father . . . mother . . . beginning of days nor end of life. While most figures in Genesis are located in a genealogical line, Melchizedek appears without ancestors or progeny, and without notice of his birth or death. The Holy Spirit has described him in a way that is prophetic of Christ.

without genealogy. The appointment of priests in the line of Melchizedek is without regard to ancestry, since no genealogy is recorded for this line.

■ 7:4–10 Two actions show Melchizedek's priestly superiority to Abraham's Levite descendants: Abraham gave a tithe to Melchizedek (vv. 4–6, 8–10), and Melchizedek blessed Abraham (vv. 6, 7).

■ 7:5 the sons of Levi. The Levitical priests inherited a right to tax even persons descended from Abraham (Num. 18:21–29).

■ 7:7 the better. Giving the blessing, like receiving the tenth, clearly demonstrates superiority, in this case the superiority of Melchizedek over Abraham.

■ 7:8 mortal men . . . it is witnessed that he lives. The "mortal men" are the Levites, whose office and authority is transmitted through descent and inheritance, in association with the provisions of the law (v. 5). Melchizedek, however, "lives." The declaration that he is living is found in Ps. 110:4, quoted in 5:6, and returned to the foreground with the allusions in 6:20 and 7:3. In the next section (vv. 11–28), the importance of this declaration or "oath" is explained (vv. 20–22).

receives them, [e]of whom it is witnessed that he lives. 9 Even Levi, who receives tithes, paid tithes through Abraham, so to speak, 10 for he was still in the loins of his father when Melchizedek met him.

Need for a New Priesthood

11 [f]Therefore, if perfection were through the Levitical priesthood (for under it the people received the law), what further need was there that another priest should rise according to the order of Melchizedek, and not be called according to the order of Aaron? 12 For the priesthood being changed, of necessity there is also a change of the law. 13 For He of whom these things are spoken belongs to another tribe, from which no man has [2]officiated at the altar.

14 For it is evident that [g]our Lord arose from [h]Judah, of which tribe Moses spoke nothing concerning [3]priesthood. 15 And it is yet far more evident if, in the likeness of Melchizedek, there arises another priest 16 who has come, not according to the law of a fleshly commandment, but according to the power of an endless life. 17 For [4]He testifies:

> [i]"You are a priest forever
> According to the order of Melchizedek."

18 For on the one hand there is an annulling of the former commandment because of [j]its weakness and unprofitableness, 19 for [k]the law made nothing [5]perfect; on the other hand, there is the bringing in of [l]a better hope, through which [m]we draw near to God.

Greatness of the New Priest

20 And inasmuch as He was not made priest without an oath 21 (for they have become priests without an oath, but He with an oath by Him who said to Him:

> [n]"The LORD has sworn
> And will not relent,
> 'You are a priest [6]forever
> According to the order of Melchizedek' "),

22 by so much more Jesus has become a [7]surety of a [o]better covenant.

23 Also there were many priests, because they were prevented by death from continuing. 24 But He, because He continues forever, has an unchangeable priesthood. 25 Therefore He is also [p]able

■ 7:9 paid tithes through Abraham. The argument depends on Abraham's representative status as the progenitor of a priestly system based on physical descent; those priests cannot rise above Abraham. The argument does not mean that every person who descended from Abraham participated in whatever Abraham did, simply by reason of physical descent. The text does not imply any pre-existence of Levi.

■ 7:11 if perfection were through the Levitical priesthood. That is, if the Levitical priests had been able to give the people permanent, free access to God. As in 4:8 and 8:7, the author argues that certain promises in the Old Testament itself indicate that the law was imperfect and would be replaced in the "last days" (1:2). The rhetorical question announces that the effectiveness of the Levitical system will be compared with that of "another priest."

under it the people received the law. Because of sin and the need for a ministry of reconciliation, the Levitical priesthood was instituted, together with the Mosaic law that provided for it. The law and the priesthood are being considered together, as one system of religious life. If defective, they will both be changed (v. 12).

■ 7:13–28 The differences between Jesus and the Levites are now quickly reviewed. His descent is from Judah, not Levi (v. 14); He lives eternally (v. 16); His priesthood is founded on the divine oath (v. 20).

■ 7:16 power of an endless life. Christ's eternal priesthood (Ps. 110:4) is grounded in the indomitable power of His resurrection (Rom. 6:9, 10).

■ 7:19 See note on v. 11.

a better hope. This hope, together with the divine promise and oath, was mentioned in 6:17, 18. Vv. 20–28 continue the emphasis on the connection between our hope and the certainty of God's promise and oath.

■ 7:21 oath. The divine oath expressed in Ps. 110:4 ("The LORD has sworn") demonstrates the unchangeable permanence of the new priesthood of Jesus (6:17, 18).

■ 7:22 surety. This renders a Greek word found only here in the New Testament. Jesus Himself, as the substance of what was promised and the possessor of indestructible resurrection life (v. 16), is the guarantee of a new and better covenant (text note).

covenant. The first of seventeen occurrences of this important word (Greek diatheke) in Hebrews. It is the usual translation of the Old Testament word for "covenant" (Hebrew berith) in the Greek Old Testament. A "new covenant" was promised in Jer. 31:31–34, which will be cited in 8:8–12 and 10:16, 17.

■ 7:23 many priests. The reference is to the many high priests who succeeded one another in office. The law of priestly succession (Ex. 29:29, 30) presupposed the eventual death of the priest. This lack of permanence, together with the repetition of the Old Testament sacrifices (10:11), shows the inadequacy of the old order.

■ 7:25 Jesus' eternal life and priesthood make possible His eternal intercession for worshipers who "come to God through Him," leading to their complete and eternal salvation. "Uttermost" may refer to comprehensive salvation (meeting our every need) or to eternal salvation (especially as it is grounded in Jesus' always living to pray for us).

to save [s]to the uttermost those who come to God through Him, since He always lives [q]to make intercession for them.

[26] For such a High Priest was fitting for us, [r]who is holy, [s]harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, [s]and has become higher than the heavens; [27] who does not need daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifices, first for His [t]own sins and then for the people's, for this He did once for all when He offered up Himself. [28] For the law appoints as high priests men who have weakness, but the word of the oath, which came after the law, appoints the Son who has been perfected forever.

The New Priestly Service

8 Now this is the main point of the things we are saying: We have such a High Priest, [a]who is seated at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens, [2] a Minister of [b]the [l]sanctuary and of [c]the true tabernacle which the Lord erected, and not man.

[3] For [d]every high priest is appointed to offer both gifts and sacrifices. Therefore [e]it is necessary that this One also have something to offer. [4] For if He were on earth, He would not be a priest, since there are priests who offer the gifts according to the law; [5] who serve [f]the copy and [g]shadow of the heavenly things, as Moses was divinely instructed when he was about to make the tabernacle. For He said, [h]"See that you make all things according to the pattern shown you on the mountain." [6] But now [i]He has obtained a more excellent ministry, inasmuch as He is also Mediator of a [j]better covenant, which was established on better promises.

A New Covenant

[7] For if that [k]first covenant had been faultless, then no place would have been sought for a second. [8] Because finding fault with them, He says: [l]"Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah— [9] not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they did not continue in My covenant, and I disregarded them, says the LORD. [10] For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the [m]LORD: I will put My laws in their mind and write them on their hearts; and [n]I will be their God, and they shall be My people. [11] [o]None of them shall teach his

■ 7:26 holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners. In 2:18 and 4:15—5:3, the author showed the importance of Jesus' identification with us in undergoing temptation. But it is also imperative that He be "without sin" (4:15) to be qualified to enter the heavenly sanctuary on our behalf (8:1, 2; 9:11, 12, 24, 25). See "The Sinlessness of Jesus" at 4:15.

■ 7:27 The contrast between the Levitical priests' repeated daily (and yearly) sacrifices and Jesus' once-for-all offering of Himself is developed in 9:25—10:18.

■ 7:28 This verse summarizes the contrast between the old and new covenant priesthood. First, the old covenant priesthood was appointed by law without a divine oath (v. 20), while the eternal priesthood of Christ was appointed by an oath (v. 21). Second, the temporary appointment of weak and sinful (v. 27) men is contrasted with the eternal appointment of the sinless "Son . . . perfected forever."

■ 8:1–6 The discussion of Jesus' qualifications and appointment as the ultimate High Priest now leads to a description of His ministry in the heavenly sanctuary.

■ 8:1 the main point. The writer pauses to summarize what has been said thus far. He has explained how Jesus is the new High Priest in the order of Melchizedek—One who "was fitting for us" (7:26). Now he will tell what Jesus does in this role. The pause reminds us that the writer knows his argument is difficult but that he has a clear purpose in what he says.

■ 8:2 the true tabernacle. The heavenly temple of God is the original after which the earthly tent and temple were copied (v. 5).

not man. See 9:11, 24. God appointed an earthly sanctuary as a means of His presence among His people, but "the Most High does not dwell in temples made with hands" (Acts 7:48, 49; cf. 1 Kin. 8:27).

■ 8:3 something to offer. Jesus' offering was Himself (7:27), His own blood (9:12) and body (10:10).

■ 8:4 He would not be a priest. Under the provisions of the Mosaic law, Jesus could not be a priest (7:13). Jesus' priestly service is of a different order; it is not a mere supplement to the old system.

■ 8:5 copy and shadow. The tabernacle made by Moses provided for worship modeled after the spiritual realm in which Christ ministers. That tabernacle and its worship pointed forward to God's plan of salvation that would be revealed in Christ.

■ 8:6 The new covenant was better because it was made with an oath (7:22), and now it is seen to rest on "better promises" as well (cited in vv. 8–12). On both counts, the ministry that serves the new covenant is "more excellent."

Mediator. A legal intermediary who represents two parties and through whose work a new relationship is established. Moses is described as the mediator of the law (Gal. 3:19, 20). Crucial to Christ's mediatorial work was His offering of Himself as an atoning sacrifice for sin (9:14, 15; 12:24; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6).

■ 8:7–13 The promise of a new covenant in Jer. 31:31–34 is a unifying theme of 8:7—10:18, where the word translated "covenant" occurs fourteen times. In addition, it occurs three other places in Hebrews (7:22; 12:24; 13:20) and sixteen times elsewhere in the New Testament.

■ 8:7 God's promise of a new covenant through Jeremiah implied that the first covenant with Israel at Sinai was not faultless. As in 4:8 and 7:11, an Old Testament promise is shown to imply the insufficiency of the old covenant order.

■ 8:8 finding fault with them, He says. While the law was "holy and just and good" (Rom. 7:12), it could not in itself empower obedience (7:18, 19), as the quotation from Jer. 31:31–34 makes clear. The result was that the people "did not continue" in that covenant.

■ 8:10 put My laws in their mind. Unlike the law's sacrifices, Christ's death cleanses the conscience (9:9–14), so that we do the will of God (10:36; 13:21).

■ 8:11 all shall know Me. Under the law, access to God's presence was restricted (9:7, 8). But now all who come to God through Jesus Christ may enter the true sanctuary (10:19–22).

neighbor, and none his brother, saying, 'Know the [p]LORD,' for all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them. [12] For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, [q]and their sins [2]and their lawless deeds I will remember no more."

[13] [r]In that He says, "A new covenant," He has made the first obsolete. Now what is becoming obsolete and growing old is ready to vanish away.

The Earthly Sanctuary

9 Then indeed, even the first covenant had ordinances of divine service and [a]the earthly sanctuary. [2] For a tabernacle was prepared: the first part, in which was the lampstand, the table, and the showbread, which is called the [1]sanctuary; [3] [b]and behind the second veil, the part of the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of All, [4] which had the [c]golden censer and [d]the ark of the covenant overlaid on all sides with gold, in which were [e]the golden pot that had the manna, [f]Aaron's rod that budded, and [g]the tablets of the covenant; [5] and [h]above it were the cherubim of glory overshadowing the mercy seat. Of these things we cannot now speak in detail.

Limitations of the Earthly Service

[6] Now when these things had been thus prepared, [i]the priests always went into the first part of the tabernacle, performing the services. [7] But into the second part the high priest went alone [j]once a year, not without blood, which he offered for [k]himself and for the people's sins committed in ignorance; [8] the Holy Spirit indicating this, that [l]the way into the Holiest of All was not yet made manifest while the first tabernacle was still standing. [9] It was symbolic for the present time in which both gifts and sacrifices are offered [m]which cannot make him who performed the service perfect in regard to the conscience— [10] concerned only with [n]foods and drinks, [o]various [2]washings, [p]and fleshly ordinances imposed until the time of reformation.

The Heavenly Sanctuary

[11] But Christ came as High Priest of [q]the good things [3]to come, with the greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, that is, not of this creation. [12] Not [r]with the blood of goats and calves, but [s]with His own blood He entered the Most Holy Place [t]once for all, [u]having ob-

■ 8:12 their sins . . . I will remember no more. Unlike the repeated sacrifices of the law, which were an annual reminder of sins (10:3), Jesus' offering of Himself has brought forgiveness, holiness, and perfection once for all (10:10, 13, 18).

■ 8:13 becoming obsolete . . . ready to vanish away. The author advances a definition of "obsolete" in order to say that the first covenant was as good as dead from the moment Jeremiah announced the new.

■ 9:1 service . . . sanctuary. This verse begins a lengthy comparison of Old Testament sacrifice and the sacrifice of Christ, that continues into ch. 10. The first part is a summary of the Old Testament sanctuary and its activities.

■ 9:3 veil. This veil, or curtain, closed off the Most Holy Place, where God's presence among His people was most intensely revealed (6:19). With Jesus' death, this curtain was torn in two (10:20; Matt. 27:51).

■ 9:4 golden censer. Although this "censer," or incense altar, was just outside the curtain (Ex. 40:26), its function was so closely associated with the inner chamber and the ark therein (Ex. 30:6) that it was considered to belong there (1 Kin. 6:22). When the high priest entered the Most Holy Place, he burned incense, producing smoke to hide the mercy seat on top of the ark of the Testimony, shielding himself from the Lord's burning purity (Lev. 16:12, 13).

Aaron's rod. The rod, or staff, that budded to show that priestly privilege comes only by God's appointment (Num. 17:10), as taught in 5:4, 5.

■ 9:5 cherubim of glory. The "mercy seat," comprising the lid of the ark, had on it two figures of cherubim facing each other, representative of God's heavenly courtiers, who serve constantly in His presence.

Of these things . . . cannot now speak in detail. First-century Jewish writers such as Philo gave great attention to the symbolism of the sanctuary furniture. The author of Hebrews, however, desires to address what took place in the tabernacle, and he says no more about the furniture, whatever symbolic value it might have.

■ 9:6 priests always went into the first part. Their task was to replace the showbread (Ex. 25:30; Lev. 24:5–9), to keep the lampstand burning (Ex. 27:20, 21; Lev. 24:1–4), and to burn fragrant incense twice daily, symbolizing the people's prayers (Ex. 30:7–9; Luke 1:8–10; Rev. 8:3).

■ 9:7, 8 That only one person, once a year, and only with special preparation, could enter the Most Holy Place, was the Holy Spirit's revelation through the law that the earthly sanctuary could not be the means of open, confident approach to God. The new covenant promise, "all shall know Me" (8:11), could not be fulfilled in the earthly tent.

■ 9:7 for himself. Levitical priests were themselves in need of atonement, unlike our High Priest, Jesus (5:3; 7:26, 27).

committed in ignorance. See note on 5:2.

■ 9:9 symbolic for the present time. The writer interprets the tabernacle ceremonies as prophetic of the time of the gospel (8:5 note). In this case, the ritual requirements display the weakness that the gospel would overcome.

■ 9:11 good things to come. See text note. Cleansing of conscience and confidence to draw near to God were still to come while the first covenant's sanctuary and sacrifices were in force (10:1), but they have arrived through Christ. The author of Hebrews views the benefits of the age to come as already experienced (in part) by the church (6:5; 12:22–24).

greater and more perfect tabernacle. The heavenly reality behind the law's earthly copy (8:5; 9:24).

■ 9:12 blood of goats and calves. This was used by the high priest on the yearly Day of Atonement to cleanse the Most Holy Place (Lev. 16:11–16).

once for all. In contrast to the repetition of sacrifices by the Levitical priests (10:2, 3, 10–14), This emphatic word anticipates the climactic statement in vv. 26–28.

eternal redemption. A redemption is a purchase by payment of a price or ransom. The effect of Christ's redemption is permanent because it was by His own blood.

tained eternal redemption. 13 For if [v]the blood of bulls and goats and [w]the ashes of a heifer, sprinkling the unclean, [4]sanctifies for the [5]purifying of the flesh, 14 how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without [6]spot to God, [x]cleanse your conscience from [y]dead works [z]to serve the living God? 15 And for this reason [a]He is the Mediator of the new covenant, by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, that [b]those who are called may receive the promise of the eternal inheritance.

The Mediator's Death Necessary

16 For where there is a testament, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. 17 For [c]a testament is in force after men are dead, since it has no power at all while the testator lives. 18 [d]Therefore not even the first covenant was dedicated without blood. 19 For when Moses had spoken every [7]precept to all the people according to the law, [e]he took the blood of calves and goats, [f]with water, scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people, 20 saying, [g]"This is the [h]blood of the covenant which God has commanded you." 21 Then likewise [i]he sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle and all the vessels of the ministry. 22 And according to the law almost all things are [8]purified with blood, and [j]without shedding of blood there is no [9]remission.

Greatness of Christ's Sacrifice

23 Therefore it was necessary that [k]the copies of the things in the heavens should be [l]purified with these, but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these. 24 For [l]Christ has not entered the holy places made with hands, which are [2]copies of [m]the true, but into heaven itself, now [n]to appear in the presence of God for us; 25 not that He should offer Himself often, as [o]the high priest enters the Most Holy Place every year with blood of another— 26 He then would purifying of the flesh. They became eligible again for their duties of worship.

■ 9:14 how much more. As in 2:2, 3, the writer uses an argument from the lesser to the greater. The lesser is the blood of animals offered by the high priest on earth; the greater is the blood shed by Christ. The lesser had ceremonial power; the greater can take away guilt from the conscience.

without spot. A sacrifice must be without defect in order to be an atoning substitute for sinners (Num. 6:14; 1 Pet. 1:19).

dead works. Not works of the law that are useless for justification (Gal. 3:1–14), but sinful deeds that deserve the covenant curse of death (6:1). See "Conscience and the Law" at 1 Sam. 24:5.

to serve the living God. The goal of forgiveness is ultimately God-centered—not merely to free us from the fear of judgment, but to qualify us to worship before God in a way that brings Him pleasure (12:28; 13:15, 16, 21).

■ 9:15 Christ's death inaugurates the new covenant, even as it brings redemption from the curse that rested on violators of the first covenant. See "Christ the Mediator" at 1 Tim. 2:5.

the redemption. A payment to release someone from captivity (cf. v. 12). Violation of God's covenant creates a liability to condemnation that can only be satisfied through the violator's death, or by redemption through a substitute.

■ 9:16 where there is a testament. The Greek word for "testament" (diatheke) is the same word translated "covenant" in this passage and elsewhere. The point being made is that a death is required in order to secure what God promised to do. If the writer is not speaking of a last will, he is probably referring to the ratification of a covenant by means of a representative sacrifice such as is found in Gen. 15.

■ 9:19 Moses . . . took the blood. The immediate reference is to Ex. 24:4–8. In this ceremony God, the author of the scroll, and the people of the congregation were sworn to the covenant with its penalties.

■ 9:20 This is the blood. The covenant was written down on the scroll, but it had to be ratified with the offering of blood. This blood was not shed by those who might have broken the covenant, but by animals that substituted for them (cf. Gen. 15:9–18; Jer. 34:18–20). All this was a vivid demonstration that the ultimate sanction, or penalty, of the covenant was death.

■ 9:21–24 The sanctuary, the meeting place of the holy God with sinful people, must itself be purified through sacrificial blood, the only means of forgiveness. This is true not only of the earthly tent of the old covenant (vv. 21, 22) but also of the heavenly reality (vv. 23, 24), which was purified by Christ's sacrifice on the cross (v. 23 note).

■ 9:22 almost all things. The tent and its furniture were so closely identified with the worshipers who met God there that the sacrificial blood needed for the worshipers to be forgiven (10:18) was also required to cleanse the instruments and environment of their worship (Lev. 16:16).

without shedding of blood there is no remission. This is the fundamental principle (Lev. 17:11), now restated after being introduced in vv. 16–18. Having established it, the writer turns his attention from the earthly sanctuary to the heavenly.

■ 9:23 the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices. The heavenly sanctuary itself does not need to be purified from defilement by human sin. However, just as the earthly sanctuary was purified by sacrificial blood and set apart as the place where sinful humans could approach God, so also the true, heavenly sanctuary has now been set apart by the sacrifice of Christ as a meeting place for sinful people to enter, drawing near to God through the blood of Jesus (10:19–22; 12:24).

■ 9:24 appear in the presence of God for us. Just as the high priest appeared for Israel on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:32, 33).

■ 9:25 often. The same Greek word is in v. 26 and in 10:11 ("repeatedly"). The repetition of sacrifices was evidence that they were not effective to remove guilt (10:2), and it was a recurring reminder of sins (10:3). The author earlier stressed that the Day of Atonement ceremonies took place only once a year (v. 7); here the emphasis is that they are repeated again and again (10:1).

blood of another. The high priest's offering contrasts with Christ's offering of Himself. As one who himself needed atonement (v. 7), no Levitical high priest could offer himself as an unblemished substitute for others (v. 14).

■ 9:26 foundation of the world . . . end of the ages. These phrases set forth a vast span of time, during all of which Christ had to offer Himself only once. The "end of the ages" is the same as the "last days" (1:2), a period ushered in by the death, resurrection, and ascension of Christ.

have had to suffer often since the foundation of the world; but now, once at the end of the ages, He has appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. 27 [p]And as it is appointed for men to die once, [q]but after this the judgment, 28 so [r]Christ was [s]offered once to bear the sins [t]of many. To those who [u]eagerly wait for Him He will appear a second time, apart from sin, for salvation.

Animal Sacrifices Insufficient

10 For the law, having a [a]shadow of the good things to come, and not the very image of the things, [b]can never with these same sacrifices, which they offer continually year by year, make those who approach perfect. 2 For then would they not have ceased to be offered? For the worshipers, once [1]purified, would have had no more consciousness of sins. 3 But in those sacrifices there is a reminder of sins every year. 4 For [c]it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats could take away sins.

Christ's Death Fulfills God's Will

5 Therefore, when He came into the world, He said:

[d]"Sacrifice and offering You did not desire,
But a body You have prepared for Me.
6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin
You had no pleasure.
7 Then I said, 'Behold, I have come—
In the volume of the book it is written of Me—
To do Your will, O God.'"

8 Previously saying, "Sacrifice and offering, burnt offerings, and offerings for sin You did not desire, nor had pleasure in them" (which are offered according to the law), 9 then He said, "Behold, I have come to do Your will, [2]O God." He takes away the first that He may establish the second. 10 [e]By that will we have been [3]sanctified [f]through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

■ 9:27 to die once, but after this the judgment. Thus both reincarnation and the belief that physical death is the end of personal existence are excluded. Christ suffered the common human destiny of death and judgment (v. 28), but for Him the judgment consisted in resurrection and vindication (1 Tim. 3:16). This vindication will be fully manifested when He comes again (1 Thess. 1:10). See "Death and the Intermediate State" at Phil. 1:23.

■ 9:28 to bear the sins of many. An intentional reference to the Suffering Servant in Is. 53:12.

■ 10:1 a shadow of the good things to come. The "good things" were future with respect to the law, which foreshadowed them; with Christ's coming they are present (9:11 note).

make . . . perfect. The worshipers could not be "once purified" for all time (v. 2). The law could not remove guilt from them and give them permanent access to God (7:11, 19; 9:9).

■ 10:2 The sacrifices were repeated again and again, showing that they provided no lasting solution to the problem of sin.

■ 10:3 reminder of sins. The Old Testament sacrifices were a public notice, before God and humanity, that the people were still sinners (Num. 5:15). In the new covenant, God will "remember" their sins "no more" (8:12; 10:17).

■ 10:4 The inadequacy of the Old Testament sacrifices is sharply expressed in such passages as 1 Sam. 15:22; Is. 1:10–17; Amos 5:21–24; Mic. 6:6–8. The law was frustrated by the sin of the people (8:8–12; Rom. 8:3, 4).

■ 10:5–10 Ps. 40:6–8 is here interpreted to point to the replacement of the Old Testament system of animal sacrifice by the obedience and atoning death of Christ.

■ 10:5 a body You have prepared for Me. The Hebrew text of Ps. 40:6 reads, "My ears You have opened" (cf. Is. 50:5). Hebrews follows the Septuagint (Greek Old Testament) translation of the verse, speaking of the readiness of the whole person ("the body") and not only a representative part (the ears). The "body . . . prepared for Me" is the humanity assumed by Christ in the course of His full obedience to the Father (2:14; 5:8).

■ 10:7 the book. Ultimately the Old Testament as a whole, which points to Christ (Luke 24:27, 45–47).

■ 10:8 Sacrifice and offering, burnt offerings, and offerings for sin. These terms sum up the whole Levitical sacrificial system. Over against all this (called "the first" in v. 9) Christ has another sacrifice ("the second"). Although instituted by God in the Law (2:2; 8:9; 12:18–21, 25), the Levitical system was not the means willed by God to remove His people's sin permanently.

■ 10:9 to do Your will. He will be obedient through suffering (2:10; 5:8), atoning for sin through the sacrifice of His body (v. 10).

takes away the first. That is, the Levitical sacrificial system of the Old Testament (8:13).

■ 10:10 By that will. The unchanging purpose of God, which Jesus Christ willingly accomplished, brought salvation to us (vv. 7, 9 and notes).

we have been sanctified. Here and in v. 14 the topic is not the process of sanctification (as in 12:14), but the once-for-all change in our status when we are united with Christ by faith, and in this way are separated from sin's pollution and qualified for the worship of God. Being "cleansed," "sanctified," and "made perfect" are virtually synonymous in Hebrews.

■ 10:11 every priest stands ministering daily. The daily morning and evening sacrifices, no less than the yearly Day of Atonement offerings, announce by their repetition that they cannot take sin's guilt away. A further contrast (standing versus sitting) emblematic of the difference between the Levitical priesthood and the priesthood of Christ is introduced.

■ 10:12 sat down. In contrast to the Levitical priests who stand and ever, sat down [i]at the right hand of God, [13] from that time waiting [j]till His enemies are made His footstool. [14] For by one offering He has perfected forever those who are being [4]sanctified.

[15] But the Holy Spirit also witnesses to us; for after He had said before, [16] [k]"This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, says the LORD: I will put My laws into their hearts, and in their minds I will write them," [17] then He adds, [l]"Their sins and their lawless deeds I will remember no more." [18] Now where there is [5]remission of these, there is no longer an offering for sin.

Hold Fast Your Confession

[19] Therefore, brethren, having [m]boldness[6] to enter [n]the Holiest by the blood of Jesus, [20] by a new and [o]living way which He consecrated for us, through the veil, that is, His flesh, [21] and having a High Priest over the house of God, [22] let us [p]draw near with a true heart [q]in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. [23] Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering, for [r]He who promised is faithful. [24] And let us consider one another in order to stir up love and good works, [25] [s]not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as is the manner of some, but exhorting one another, and [t]so much the more as you see [u]the Day approaching.

The Just Live by Faith

[26] For [v]if we sin willfully [w]after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there [x]no longer remains a sacrifice for sins, [27] but a certain fearful expectation of judgment, and [y]fiery indignation which will devour the adversaries. [28] Anyone who has rejected Moses' law dies without mercy on the testimony of two or three [z]witnesses. [29] [a]Of how much worse punishment, do you suppose, will he be thought worthy who has trampled the Son of God underfoot, [b]counted the blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified a common thing, [c]and insulted the Spirit of grace? [30] For we know Him who said, [d]"Vengeance is Mine, I will repay," [7]says the Lord. And whose work is never done, Jesus "sat down at the right hand of God," as Ps. 110:1 announces (1:3; cf. 1:13; 8:1).

■ 10:15 the Holy Spirit also witnesses. With other New Testament books, Hebrews affirms that the Spirit is the primary author of Scripture (3:7; 9:8; Acts 4:25). The two quotations following from Jer. 31 mark the beginning (8:8) and the end of the important argument developed from that passage.

■ 10:16, 17 The two quotations from Jer. 31 demonstrate that Christ's once-for-all sacrifice results in both the inner transformation or sanctification of the believer (v. 16), and in the forgiveness of sins or justification (v. 17).

■ 10:19 Therefore, brethren. The writer includes himself with the readers in a renewed appeal for confidence, or boldness, in approaching God. This confidence is grounded, not in any merits we possess, but in the person and work of our great High Priest who is able to "sympathize with our weaknesses" (4:15).

to enter . . . by the blood of Jesus. Not only Jesus on our behalf (9:24), but also we ourselves enter into God's heavenly sanctuary through dependence on Jesus' sacrifice.

■ 10:20 the veil, that is, His flesh. In a surprising figure of speech, the author identifies the veil of the temple and Jesus' body. The analogy lies in that just as the veil of the temple was torn to open the way into the Most Holy Place (6:19; 9:3; Matt. 27:51), so also Christ's body was torn so that His blood might be shed to open the way into the heavenly sanctuary (v. 19). The parallel is figurative and is not to be pressed.

■ 10:21 over the house of God. See note on 3:6.

■ 10:22 draw near. See note on 4:16.

full assurance of faith. The call for faith hints at the subject of ch. 11.

having our hearts sprinkled . . . and our bodies washed. The inner cleansing of conscience that makes Jesus' death superior to the sacrifices under the law (9:13, 14) is visibly symbolized in baptism (Eph. 5:26). As the high priest washed his body with water in preparation for entering the Most Holy Place (Lev. 16:4; Ex. 29:4), so we may enter now as priests into God's presence.

■ 10:23 hold fast the confession of our hope. In another Hebrews passage mentioning "the house of God" (v. 21; cf. 3:1–14), there is a similar exhortation to be "steadfast" (3:14), and a similar assurance that Christ "is faithful" (cf. 3:5, 6). Probably "the beginning of our confidence" (3:14), like the "confession of our hope" (v. 23), refers to the time of baptism (note the term "water" in v. 22) and entrance into the church (v. 32).

■ 10:24 consider one another . . . stir up. The duty of encouraging one another can find expression in the church meetings (v. 25). "Love" completes a familiar triad with "faith" (v. 22) and "hope" (v. 23). This triad seems to have played a prominent role in the teaching of the early church (1 Cor. 13:13; Col. 1:4, 5; 1 Thess. 1:3).

■ 10:25 not forsaking the assembling. The believers had been severely persecuted (vv. 32–34). Assembling with other believers is an important part of Christian life. See "The Local Church" at Rev. 2:1.

the Day approaching. The day of Jesus' appearance a second time to bring salvation to those who wait for Him (9:28; 12:26, 27).

■ 10:26 sin willfully. Christians who claim to be sinless are self-deluded (1 John 1:8), and those who sin should not despair of grace (4:16; 1 John 2:1, 2). The willful sin here is abandoning one's confession altogether, trampling the Son underfoot, treating His sacrificial blood as unclean, and insulting God's gracious Spirit (6:6 note; 10:29). The seriousness of the charge is indicated by its willfulness (cf. Lev. 15:30) and the measure of knowledge or enlightenment it refuses (cf. 6:4; 10:32).

no longer remains a sacrifice for sins. Since God has set aside the Levitical system of animal sacrifices (v. 9), those who abandon their confession of trust in Christ have nowhere to turn for forgiveness.

■ 10:28 rejected Moses' law. That is, turned from God to idols (Deut. 17:2–7).

■ 10:29 This argument, from the law as the lesser to the gospel as the greater, is also found in 2:2, 3. If contemptuous violation of the law given through Moses the servant (3:5) warranted the punishment of death, then scorn for the Son of God (1:2, 3; 3:6; 6:6; 2 Pet. 2:1), His sacrificial blood (9:20; cf. Ex. 24:8; Mark 14:24), and the Spirit of grace through whom He offered Himself (9:14) deserves nothing less than "fiery indignation which will devour the adversaries" (v. 27).

■ 10:30 The Lord will judge His people. The two quotations from the Song of Moses (Deut. 32:35, 36) show that God is ready to judge according to His covenant, discriminating those who are truly His own from apostates (cf. 1 Pet. 4:17).

again, e*"The LORD will judge His people."* 31 fIt is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But grecall the former days in which, after you were gilluminated, you endured a great struggle with sufferings: 33 partly while you were made ha spectacle both by reproaches and tribulations, and partly while iyou became companions of those who were so treated; 34 for you had compassion on jme jin my chains, and kjoyfully accepted the plundering of your lgoods, knowing that lyou have a better and an enduring possession for yourselves 2in heaven. 35 Therefore do not cast away your confidence, mwhich has great reward. 36 nFor you have need of endurance, so that after you have done the will of God, oyou may receive the promise:

■ 10:31 A fitting conclusion to the grave warning of this passage.

■ 10:32–39 As in 6:9–12, the writer now balances his severe warning with an encouraging reminder that his readers have exhibited the fruits of grace, especially by their mutual support in the face of earlier suffering.

■ 10:32 endured a great struggle. Even when they were new in the faith, these Christians suffered persecution.

■ 10:33 Public insult, imprisonment, and the seizure of property (but not martyrdom, 12:4) were among the forms of persecution that the recipients previously suffered. These may reflect conditions after the edict of Claudius (A.D. 49) evicted Jews from Rome (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 10:34 you had compassion . . . joyfully accepted. It would encourage the readers to remember the solidarity and joy they shared, despite persecution.

better and an enduring possession. The heavenly city and country of God (11:10, 16; 12:22), that cannot be shaken by the cataclysm that will destroy the present created order (12:27, 28). In comparison to this eternal inheritance (9:15), property lost for Christ's sake is of no value.

■ 10:35 great reward. Like Moses, we must fix our eyes on the future reward (11:26).

■ 10:36 done the will of God. His laws are written in their hearts (8:10; 10:16), so they follow in the footsteps of Jesus, who came to do God's will (vv. 9, 10; 13:21).

receive the promise. See note on 6:12.

■ 10:37, 38 Three elements from Hab. 2:3, 4 will be illustrated in the lives of Old Testament people of faith: (a) faith fixes its sights on the One who is coming, hoping in His future appearing (11:1, 7, 10, 13, 20, 22, 27); (b) faith receives God's verdict of righteousness (11:4, 7; 12:23); (c) faith does not draw back in the face of suffering (11:24–26, 35–38).

■ 10:39 The substance of this encouragement is like that of 6:9, 10. Here the writer has included himself, saying "we" instead of "you."

■ 11:1–40 This famous discourse on faithful men and women of the Old Testament begins and ends with commentary that alerts the reader to the specific aspect of Old Testament faith highlighted here—the certainty of receiving what God has promised but not yet given (vv. 1, 2, 39, 40).

■ 11:1 things hoped for . . . things not seen. For the time being, only faith can see the future, as it receives the promises of God.

■ 11:2 obtained a good testimony. God declared that they were righteous by faith (v. 4 note), as is explicitly stated regarding Abel and Enoch (vv. 4, 5; cf. v. 39).

■ 11:3 Although no human witnessed the creation, we know from Scripture that God brought the world into being through His Word (Ps. 33:6, 9). We discern that "things which are seen" are not ultimate, self-existent reality.

■ 11:4 a more excellent sacrifice. The principle that sacrifices were worthless without faith was true from the beginning (cf. 10:4 note). It was for Christ alone to offer not only a better but a perfect sacrifice.

obtained witness . . . testifying. The Greek word used twice in this verse is also found in vv. 2, 5, and 39. Abel is the first example of one who received this divine commendation as a righteous one who lived by faith (cf. 10:38; Rom. 1:17). The entire chapter offers such examples.

still speaks. As one of the "cloud of witnesses" (12:1).

■ 11:5 As one who "did not see death" (cf. Gen. 5:18–24), Enoch prefigured the deliverance from death into which Jesus leads the faithful.

pleased God. Pleasing God is the criterion of appropriate worship (12:28; 13:16, 21; Rom. 12:1; Phil. 4:18).

■ 11:6 Faith is an absolute necessity, whether to perceive the things for which we should hope (v. 1), to understand that God is the Creator of all (v. 3), or to offer acceptable worship (v. 4). See "Pleasing God" at 1 Thess. 2:4.

without faith it is impossible to please Him, for he who comes to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him.

7 By faith [f]Noah, being divinely warned of things not yet seen, moved with godly fear, [g]prepared an ark for the saving of his household, by which he condemned the world and became heir of [h]the righteousness which is according to faith.

Faithful Abraham

8 By faith [i]Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to the place which he would receive as an inheritance. And he went out, not knowing where he was going. 9 By faith he dwelt in the land of promise as in a foreign country, [j]dwelling in tents with Isaac and Jacob, [k]the heirs with him of the same promise; 10 for he waited for [l]the city which has foundations, [m]whose builder and maker is God.

11 By faith [n]Sarah herself also received strength to conceive seed, and [o]she[A] bore a child when she was past the age, because she judged Him [p]faithful who had promised. 12 Therefore from one man, and him as good as [q]dead, were born as many as the [r]stars of the sky in multitude—innumerable as the sand which is by the seashore.

The Heavenly Hope

13 These all died in faith, [s]not having received the [t]promises, but [u]having seen them afar off [5]were assured of them, embraced them and [v]confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. 14 For those who say such things [w]declare plainly that they seek a homeland. 15 And

■ 11:7 things not yet seen. Although faith perceives things that are invisible because they transcend the physical universe (11:3, 27), in this section the emphasis is on faith concerning things that are future but nevertheless certain because God has promised them. The coming flood of judgment was not yet visible when God's word of warning came to Noah. Noah built the ark in reverent response to God's warning, and through his active faith his family received salvation. The unbelieving world was condemned for its preoccupation with the present, and Noah inherited the righteousness that comes by faith (10:38; Rom. 4:13).

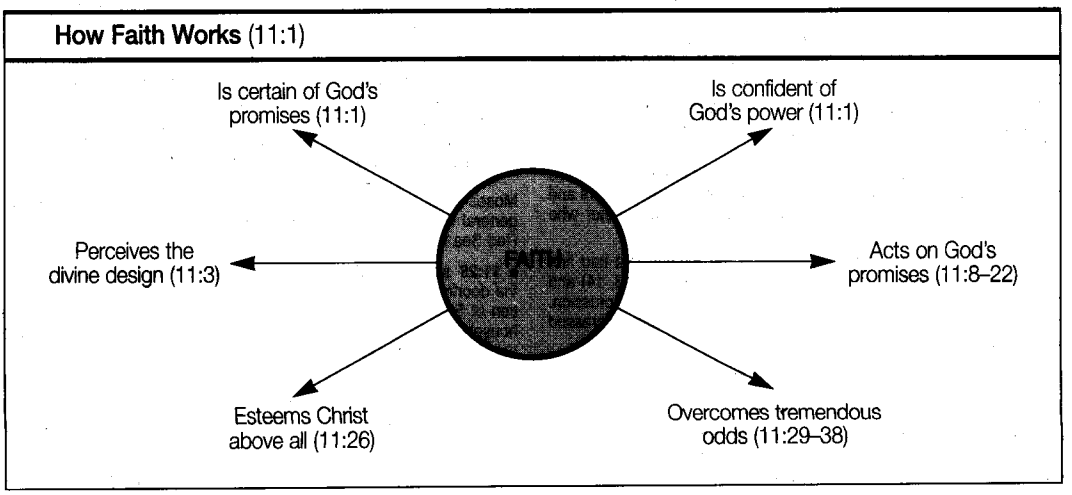
■ 11:8–10 Abraham's faith regarding the promise of a homeland was demonstrated: (a) when he obeyed God's voice, leaving Ur for a future inheritance, the location of which he did not know (v. 8); (b) when he lived as a stranger in the land promised to him (vv. 9, 13); and (c) when he looked beyond Canaan to a lasting, heavenly country and city, designed and built by God Himself (vv. 10, 14–16; 13:14).

■ 11:11, 12 Abraham's faith regarding the promise of descendants was rewarded with the conception of Isaac, which was miraculous, since Sarah was barren and Abraham was (with respect to the possibility of reproduction) "already dead" (Rom. 4:19). Despite misguided alternatives (Gen. 16:1–4) and questioning doubts (Gen. 17:17, 18), in the end Abraham and Sarah "judged Him faithful who had promised" (v. 11).

■ 11:13–16 The inheritance on which the patriarchs' faith was fixed was invisible for two reasons: it was heavenly, not earthly; and future, not present. See notes on vv. 8–10, 20, 21, 22.

■ 11:13 having seen them afar off. Abraham saw from afar the day that Jesus the Messiah would come, and rejoiced (John 8:56).

strangers and pilgrims on the earth. All the heirs of salvation are homeless refugees on the earth (v. 38) because, until Christ's return, we are in exile from the home we are waiting to inherit (1 Pet. 1:1, 4, 5, 17; 2:11).



truly if they had called to mind [x]that country from which they had come out, they would have had opportunity to return. 16 But now they desire a better, that is, a heavenly country. Therefore God is not ashamed [y]to be called their God, for He has [z]prepared a city for them.

The Faith of the Patriarchs

17 By faith Abraham, [a]when he was tested, offered up Isaac, and he who had received the promises offered up his only begotten son, 18 [6]of whom it was said, [b]"In Isaac your seed shall be called," 19 concluding that God [c]was able to raise him up, even from the dead, from which he also received him in a figurative sense.

20 By faith [d]Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was dying, [e]blessed each of the sons of Joseph, and worshiped, leaning on the top of his staff.

22 By faith [f]Joseph, when he was dying, made mention of the departure of the children of Israel, and gave instructions concerning his bones.

The Faith of Moses

23 By faith [g]Moses, when he was born, was hidden three months by his parents, because they saw he was a beautiful child; and they were not afraid of the king's [h]command.

24 By faith [i]Moses, when he became of age, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, 25 choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the [7]passing pleasures of sin, 26 esteeming [j]the [8]reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures [9]in Egypt; for he looked to the [k]reward.

27 By faith [l]he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured as seeing Him who is invisible. 28 By faith [m]he kept the Passover and the sprinkling of blood, lest he who destroyed the firstborn should touch them.

29 By faith [n]they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land, whereas the Egyptians, attempting to do so, were drowned.

By Faith They Overcame

30 By faith [o]the walls of Jericho fell down after they were encircled for seven days. 31 By faith [p]the harlot Rahab did not perish with those who [1]did not believe, when [q]she had received the spies with peace.

■ 11:16 a better . . . country. The Old Testament believers themselves realized that the hope and promises to which they looked forward in faith were heavenly, and not merely physical.

■ 11:17–19 The ultimate test of Abraham's faith was the sacrifice of Isaac. Isaac was the "only begotten son" (cf. John 3:16) so far as the promises were concerned (v. 19)—neither Abraham's servant Eliezer (Gen. 15:2) nor his other son Ishmael (Gen. 17:20, 21) would do. If Isaac were to perish without offspring, the promises of God would fail. Abraham's readiness to slay the son of promise at God's command could arise from nothing less than the conviction that "God was able to raise . . . the dead" (v. 19). Isaac's "resurrection" was only figurative, but believers who have died for their faith look forward to a literal resurrection (cf. v. 35), in which Jesus has led the way (13:20).

■ 11:20 things to come. That Jacob would possess a fruitful land, and have dominion over nations, including the descendants of Esau (Gen. 27:27–29).

■ 11:21 In his blessing, Jacob foresaw that the descendants of Joseph's younger son would surpass those of Joseph's older son, in numbers and influence (Gen. 48:13–20). Jacob himself was a younger brother who had been elevated over an older one.

■ 11:22 Joseph remembered the promise of the Exodus that had first been spoken to Abraham long before Isaac's birth (Gen. 15:13, 14) and that would await fulfillment through four more centuries of oppression. Joseph's instructions to take his bones to the Promised Land expressed faith in things not yet seen (Ex. 13:19).

■ 11:23–28 Prominent aspects of the faith associated with Moses are fearlessness (vv. 23, 27), and willingness to suffer disgrace instead of enjoying sin's temporary pleasure (vv. 24–26).

■ 11:23 a beautiful child. The description is quoted from Ex. 2:2 (cf. Acts 7:20). Moses' parents understood upon seeing Him that the child would have a special role in God's redemptive plan.

■ 11:25, 26 Moses' decision to forfeit "the treasures in Egypt" and to suffer "the reproach of Christ" should encourage those who have lost possessions and suffered insult for their faith (10:33, 34). In their present trials, in which identification with Christ means expulsion from the camp of Israel, they must be willing to bear His disgrace (13:13). Moses' choice exemplifies certainty of what he hoped for (v. 1), since he was looking ahead to his reward (10:35; 11:6, 13).

■ 11:27 forsook Egypt, not fearing. This is often taken to refer to the first time Moses left Egypt. Moses, having chosen to identify himself with his own people against the Egyptians (vv. 24, 25), had killed an Egyptian and had to flee. About this departure, Ex. 2:14 says that he "feared." If this verse does refer to the flight to Midian, the phrase "not fearing" probably refers to Moses' unshakable faith in God's redemptive plan. Although Moses experienced the quite natural apprehension that Pharaoh would do him personal harm if he stayed in Egypt, he did not fear that his divine commission to rescue God's people was in jeopardy. With this hope in God's purposes he left and "endured" in Midian.

It is possible, however, that this verse refers to the Exodus; here Moses clearly was without fear. If so, v. 27 mentions the Exodus in a general way, with details such as the Passover and the parting of the Red Sea following in vv. 28, 29.

■ 11:28 sprinkling of blood. Moses directed that blood be sprinkled on the doorframes of Israelite homes in expectation of the coming destruction of firstborn children in the land, and of the deliverance of Israelite households from this awful event (Ex. 12:7, 12, 13). This was yet another act of confidence in what was not yet seen.

■ 11:30 The Israelites marched around Jericho seven times in obedience to the Lord's command. Their only knowledge that this would defeat the city was provided by God's promise, "I have given Jericho into your hand" (Josh. 6:2).

■ 11:31 Rahab proved her allegiance to God when she protected the Is-

32 And what more shall I say? For the time would fail me to tell of [r]Gideon and [s]Barak and [t]Samson and [u]Jephthah, also of [v]David and [w]Samuel and the prophets: 33 who through faith subdued kingdoms, worked righteousness, obtained promises, [x]stopped the mouths of lions, 34 [y]quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, became valiant in battle, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. 35 [z]Women received their dead raised to life again.

Others were [a]tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. 36 Still others had trial of mockings and scourgings, yes, and [b]of chains and imprisonment. 37 [c]They were stoned, they were sawn in two, [2]were tempted, were slain with the sword. [d]They wandered about [e]in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented— 38 of whom the world was not worthy. They wandered in deserts and mountains, [f]in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And all these, [g]having obtained a good testimony through faith, did not receive the promise, 40 God having provided something better for us, that they should not be [h]made perfect apart from us.

The Race of Faith

12 Therefore we also, since we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses, [a]let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which so easily ensnares us, and [b]let us run [c]with endurance the race that is set before us, 2 looking unto Jesus, the [1]author and [2]finisher of our faith, [d]who for the joy that was set before Him [e]endured the cross, despising the shame, and [f]has sat down at the right hand of the throne of God.

raelite spies. She was justified (James 2:25) and became an ancestor of Jesus Christ (Matt. 1:5), even though she had been a prostitute.

■ 11:32 what more shall I say. The question is rhetorical. The author proceeds to mention in passing many more names and acts of heroism to show the power of faith (vv. 32–38).

■ 11:32–38 The list of accomplishments through faith moves from those in which faith's victory was manifest in history (vv. 33–35) to those in which faith entailed suffering and apparent defeat (vv. 35–38). For the specific events in view, see cross references.

■ 11:33 obtained promises. That is, they saw answers to particular promises along the way. For the promise of Christ's coming they still waited in faith (v. 39). For the promises made to Abraham were partly fulfilled in this world, as his descendants multiplied (v. 12) and lived in the Promised Land (vv. 9, 33). But to the extent that these promises referred to the heavenly reality, "His rest" (4:10), they could not be fulfilled until Christ came.

■ 11:35 Women received their dead. A reference to events recorded in 1 Kin. 17:22, 23; 2 Kin. 4:36, 37.

Others were tortured. An apparent reference to events during the Maccabean revolt (c. 167–157 B.C.), which occurred after the close of the Old Testament, but which are recorded in 2 Maccabees 6; 7 in the Apocrypha.

■ 11:37 sawn in two. According to tradition, the prophet Isaiah died in this way.

■ 11:39 having obtained a good testimony. See note on v. 4.

did not receive the promise. Although some Old Testament promises were fulfilled, their true hope (the promise of the coming Messiah) was yet to come (v. 33 and note). This verse summarizes the message of vv. 13–16 and applies it to the second half of the chapter.

■ 11:40 something better . . . apart from us. This verse asserts both the redemptive-historical difference between the Old Testament and New Testament periods, and the unity of the people of God in both eras. Though the Old Testament believers lived by faith (10:38), they were not privileged to witness on earth the fulfillment of the great promise of God. Nevertheless, they too participate in the benefits of Christ's high-priestly work, and, along with new covenant saints, they are "made perfect." Those of the old and new eras together await the perfection that will appear only at the Second Coming (12:26; 13:14; Rom. 8:18; Eph. 1:9, 10).

■ 12:1 cloud of witnesses. The readers are in effect running a race before a great crowd of people who have already finished the race with honors. Their example encourages the readers, and admonishes them if they should stumble.

every weight, and the sin which so easily ensnares. Among the burdens to be thrown off are fear that shrinks back in the face of suffering (10:38, 39), bitter discouragement that defiles others through doubt (v. 15), and sensuality that seeks immediate gratification (v. 16).

run . . . the race. The athletic competitions of the Greeks provided a common New Testament analogy for the Christian life (1 Cor. 9:24–27; Phil. 2:16; 2 Tim. 2:5; 4:7, 8). Like a runner, the Christian must be in constant motion toward the goal despite opposition. This demands strenuous effort and endurance, which is learned from constant discipline.

■ 12:2 looking unto Jesus. The cloud of Old Testament witnesses inspires us, but our principal encouragement is found in the person and work of Christ, who has gone before us as the "author and finisher of our faith," and is the supreme example of faith in the race (v. 3).

author. See note on 2:10.

finisher of our faith. As "finisher" Jesus has brought the faith of all who approach God through Him to its intended goal: thankful worship acceptable to God, presented in His presence (10:14; 11:40; 12:28).

for the joy that was set before Him. Jesus endured the cross in anticipation of the joy of being Savior of His people when the necessary suffering was over. As Moses looked to his reward (11:26), so Jesus was aware of His own reward.

A less probable, though possible, interpretation is to translate "in place of the joy set before Him." On this reading, Jesus chose suffering instead of the joy that would have been His if He had refused to die, and instead remained in heaven (Phil. 2:6), or at least avoided the Cross on earth (John 10:17, 18; 12:27).

despising the shame. Crucifixion was so shameful a form of execution that it was forbidden to be inflicted on Roman citizens; in addition, the Jews believed that "everyone who hangs on a tree" is cursed by God (Gal. 3:13; cf. Deut. 21:23).

The Discipline of God

3 [g]For consider Him who endured such hostility from sinners against Himself, [h]lest you become weary and discouraged in your souls. 4 [i]You have not yet resisted to bloodshed, striving against sin. 5 And you have forgotten the exhortation which speaks to you as to sons:

> [j]"My son, do not despise the [3]chastening of the LORD,
> Nor be discouraged when you are rebuked by Him;
> 6 For [k]whom the LORD loves He chastens,
> And scourges every son whom He receives."

7 [l]If [4] you endure chastening, God deals with you as with sons; for what [m]son is there whom a father does not chasten? 8 But if you are without chastening, [n]of which all have become partakers, then you are illegitimate and not sons. 9 Furthermore, we have had human fathers who corrected us, and we paid them respect. Shall we not much more readily be in subjection to [o]the Father of spirits and live? 10 For they indeed for a few days chastened us as seemed best to them, but He for our profit, [p]that we may be partakers of His holiness. 11 Now no [5]chastening seems to be joyful for the present, but painful; nevertheless, afterward it yields [q]the peaceable fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.

Renew Your Spiritual Vitality

12 Therefore [r]strengthen the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees, 13 and make straight paths for your feet, so that what is lame may not be dislocated, but rather be healed.

14 [s]Pursue peace with all people, and holiness, [t]without which no one will see the Lord: 15 looking carefully lest anyone [u]fall short of the grace of God; lest any [v]root of bitterness springing up cause trouble, and by this many become defiled; 16 lest there be any [w]fornicator or [6]profane person like Esau, [x]who for one morsel of food sold his birthright. 17 For you know that discouraged. A warning from Prov. 3:11, 12, quoted in vv. 5, 6.

■ 12:3 hostility. Like Jesus, the readers had also experienced the hostility of sinners (10:33).

■ 12:4 bloodshed. The readers have known persecution, but nothing as serious as what Jesus suffered, or indeed, what has been cataloged in 11:35–38. It is not time for them to think of giving up.

■ 12:5 sons. God's plan to lead many sons to glory meant that the author of their salvation was to be perfected through suffering (2:10), even though He was the Son who deserved no suffering (5:8). It is not surprising, then, that the adopted sons who follow Him should be prepared for their inheritance through painful discipline.

■ 12:8 Many Roman nobles had illegitimate sons, who were financially supported but left virtually without discipline. On the other hand, the son of a nobleman's legal wife, who would carry the father's name and inherit the estate, was subjected to a training regimen comparable to slavery (Gal. 4:1, 2).

■ 12:9 human fathers. Lit. "fathers of our flesh," in direct contrast to "Father of spirits." This argument from the lesser to the greater—from the lesser of the human parental relationship to the greater of divine fatherhood—is completed in v. 10.

■ 12:10 The discipline of our earthly fathers is limited by time and by their fallible wisdom. The heavenly Father's discipline is planned by His infinite wisdom for "our profit," and it makes us holy, as He is holy (v. 14; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16).

■ 12:11 peaceable fruit of righteousness. This gives some idea what holiness involves (vv. 10, 14).

trained. The writer returns to the athletic analogy of v. 1.

■ 12:12, 13 The race will be completed successfully only if action is taken to heal spiritual injuries of the past (v. 12) and avoid pitfalls in the future (v. 13). The context of Is. 35:3, 4 (from which Hebrews has taken "strengthen the hands . . . the feeble knees") is one of encouraging the fearful. Compare Hebrews' calls for mutual encouragement (e.g., 3:13), including that which follows in 12:15, and the warning against losing heart (vv. 3, 5). The context of Prov. 4:25–27 (source of "make straight paths for your feet") is a call to single-minded adherence to the path of righteousness. The metaphor of strengthening and healing injured limbs to run the race is explained in specific commands (vv. 14–17).

■ 12:14 Pursue peace with all people. Despite being tempted in persecution to repay evil for evil, believers should live at peace with everyone "as much as depends on you" (Rom. 12:18), just as our Lord Jesus did not retaliate with insults or threats (1 Pet. 2:23).

holiness. Hebrews has declared how Jesus' sacrifice makes us holy once for all in status (10:10) giving us confident access to God. In this verse "holiness" is purity of life. It is provided by God (13:21) and guided by His discipline (v. 10), but we must "pursue" it.

see the Lord. That is, be with God, the goal of salvation (Rev. 22:4). Those who now by grace through faith pursue and receive the holiness of Christ will indeed see the Lord, and become like Him (2 Cor. 3:18; 1 John 3:2).

■ 12:15 The readers are responsible to each other, to watch out for one another "lest anyone fall short" of God's grace (cf. 4:1).

root of bitterness. In Deut. 29:18, the "root bearing bitterness" is a person who spreads doubt and disloyalty toward the Lord among the covenant people. Here, too, this "root of bitterness" is a person who may "cause trouble" and cause others to be "defiled." To sustain each other's faith, we must encourage the weak, but also oppose apostates, who may influence others.

■ 12:16 Esau is presented as an example of one who despised the promises of God (in contrast to the people of faith in ch. 11), and whose loss was irrevocable (v. 17). Moses traded Egypt's treasures for the disgrace of Christ because he saw the reward (11:26); Esau traded his birthright for a bowl of food because lentil stew was all he could see (Gen. 25:29–34).

sold his birthright. As firstborn son, Esau had a special "birthright" (Gen. 25:31–34; 27:36). Later, under the Mosaic law, the right was to a double share of property (Deut. 21:17). In actuality, Esau despised his place in the line of covenant promises, and not property alone.

■ 12:17 you know that afterward. The readers will remember the second stage of Esau's loss, when his brother Jacob took his place as their father Isaac gave the solemn blessing (Gen. 27). This blessing included the substance of the promise made to Abraham (Gen. 12:2, 3; 27:29).

afterward, when he wanted to inherit the blessing, he was [y]rejected; for he found no place for repentance, though he sought it diligently with tears.

The Glorious Company

18 For you have not come [7]to [z]the mountain that may be touched and that burned with fire, and to blackness and [8]darkness and tempest, 19 and the sound of a trumpet and the voice of words, so that those who heard it [a]begged that the word should not be spoken to them anymore. 20 (For they could not endure what was commanded: [b]"And if so much as a beast touches the mountain, it shall be stoned [9]or shot with an arrow." 21 And so terrifying was the sight that Moses said, [c]"I am exceedingly afraid and trembling.")

22 But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, 23 to the [f]general assembly and church of [d]the firstborn [e]who are registered in heaven, to God [f]the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men [g]made perfect, 24 to Jesus [h]the Mediator of the new covenant, and to [i]the blood of sprinkling that speaks better things [j]than that of Abel.

Hear the Heavenly Voice

25 See that you do not refuse Him who speaks. For [k]if they did not escape who refused Him who spoke on earth, much more shall we not escape if we turn away from Him who speaks from heaven, 26 whose voice then shook the earth; but now He has promised, saying, [l]"Yet once more I [2]shake not only the earth, but also heaven." 27 Now this, "Yet once more," indicates the [m]removal of those things that are being shaken, as of things that are made, that the things which cannot be shaken may remain.

28 Therefore, since we are receiving a kingdom which cannot be shaken, let us have grace, by which we [3]may [n]serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. 29 For [o]our God is a consuming fire.

no place for repentance. Though Esau mourned his loss with tears (Gen. 27:38; cf. 2 Cor. 7:10), he did not actually repent of the sin of despising God's promises. Another view is that the repentance he sought was a change in his father's mind.

■ 12:18–24 The old and new covenants are compared in terms of the mountains (Sinai and Zion) associated with each. Fear was the dominant theme at Sinai, a touchable (and thus earthly and mutable) mountain on which the law was given (vv. 18–21). Joy and confidence characterize the heavenly (and thus eternal) Zion, because the Savior is there with the blood of forgiveness (vv. 22–24).

■ 12:18 that may be touched. Like the sanctuary established by the first covenant (9:1, 11, 24), the mountain on which the law was given was part of the "things that are made," that are destined to be "shaken" and removed by God's voice from heaven (v. 27). As something that can be "touched," Sinai testifies to the impermanence of the first covenant (8:13).

■ 12:19 begged that the word should not be spoken to them. Afraid that direct contact with the Lord's awesome holiness would destroy them (Ex. 20:19), the Israelites pleaded with Moses to mediate God's words to them.

■ 12:21 The giving of the law took place with an awesome demonstration of God's power. Fear was a proper reaction (cf. Is. 6:4, 5; Matt. 17:6; Rev. 1:17).

■ 12:22 you have come. We are still in our earthly pilgrimage, and like the patriarchs (11:13), still look for the "city . . . to come" (13:14). Nevertheless, because of Jesus our forerunner, we have arrived by faith at the heavenly Jerusalem and may enter into the Most Holy Place in worship (10:19–22). See "Heaven" at Rev. 21:1.

innumerable company of angels. They always serve God's majesty (Deut. 33:2; Ps. 68:17; Dan. 7:10). Here they are assembled as for a festival, or holiday celebration.

■ 12:23 church of the firstborn. All the firstborn in Israel were sanctified at the time of the Passover and consecrated to service in God's presence, but the Levites served the sanctuary in the place of the firstborn (Num. 3:11–13). In the heavenly assembly all believers, redeemed from destruction, are "firstborn," consecrated to God, and enrolled as His priests. Unlike Esau, who scorned his right as the firstborn (v. 16), believers share gratefully in the inheritance of Jesus, the firstborn (1:6, 14; 2:11, 12). In the heavenly assembly all believers may worship, in heaven and on earth (10:22, 25). See "The Church" at Eph. 2:19.

just men made perfect. These are the spirits of those who have died in the Lord (2 Cor. 5:8; Rev. 14:13). Particularly in view are the Old Testament and intertestamental saints to whose righteousness by faith God Himself testified (11:2, 4, 5, 39), and who are now perfected (11:40) through the sacrifice of Jesus.

■ 12:24 Jesus' presence in the heavenly Zion explains its atmosphere of joy and confidence. The blood of Abel cried for vengeance from the ground (Gen. 4:10), but the blood of Jesus, to use the same figure, "speaks better things" (that is, cries out for forgiveness for the children of God, 9:12–15; 10:19–22).

■ 12:25–27 God's voice speaking the gospel must be listened to with even greater attention and faith than the law spoken at Sinai (2:1–4; 3:1–5; 10:28, 29).

■ 12:25 The contrast between the Old Testament message and the message through the Son from heaven goes back to 1:1–4. By closing the circle, the writer is bringing his argument toward conclusion.

■ 12:27 the removal . . . being shaken. Christ will roll up the heavens and the earth "like a cloak," but He will remain (1:12). The passing of the first covenant, which is "obsolete and growing old" (8:13), with its sanctuary (9:8) and sacrifices (10:9), is the foretaste of this final shaking.

■ 12:28 serve God acceptably. Gratitude derives from knowing that our names are written in heaven (Luke 10:20) and from our experience of God's "indescribable gift"—Jesus Christ (2 Cor. 9:15). Reverence and awe come from an appreciation of who God is (v. 29). Acceptable worship combines these motives.

■ 12:29 a consuming fire. This solemn quotation from Deut. 4:24 provides a fitting conclusion to an exhortation that stresses the holiness of God and the finality of His judgment on apostates (10:27).

Concluding Moral Directions

13 Let [a]brotherly love continue. [2][b]Do not forget to entertain strangers, for by so doing [c]some have unwittingly entertained angels. [3][d]Remember the prisoners as if chained with them—those who are mistreated—since you yourselves are in the body also.

[4][e]Marriage is honorable among all, and the bed undefiled; [f]but fornicators and adulterers God will judge.

[5] Let your conduct be without covetousness; be content with such things as you have. For He Himself has said, [g]"I will never leave you nor forsake you." [6] So we may boldly say:

> [h]"The LORD is my helper;
> I will not fear.
> What can man do to me?"

Concluding Religious Directions

[7] Remember those who [i]rule over you, who have spoken the word of God to you, whose faith follow, considering the outcome of their conduct. [8] Jesus Christ is [j]the same yesterday, today, and forever. [9] Do not be carried [2]about with various and strange doctrines. For it is good that the heart be established by grace, not with foods which have not profited those who have been occupied with them.

[10] We have an altar from which those who serve the tabernacle have no right to eat. [11] For the bodies of those animals, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned outside the camp. [12] Therefore Jesus also, that He might [3]sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered outside the gate. [13] Therefore let us go forth to Him, outside the camp, bearing [j]His reproach. [14] For here we have no continuing city, but we seek the one to come. [15][k]Therefore by Him let us continually offer [l]the sacrifice of praise to God, that is, [m]the fruit of unwittingly entertained angels. Abraham, himself a stranger (11:13), showed hospitality to "three men" (Gen. 18:2) who proved to be the Lord Himself with two of His supernatural messengers (Gen. 18:1—19:22).

■ 13:1–3 Here the readers' responsibility to guard and encourage each other's perseverance in faith takes tangible forms: brotherly love to all fellow-believers (Rom. 12:10; 1 Pet. 1:22), hospitality to those needing shelter or food (11:38), identification with prisoners (10:34), and compassionate support for those mistreated because of their confession (10:33; 11:25; cf. Matt. 25:35–37).

■ 13:2 Do not forget. The pressure of suffering can drive fundamental responsibilities of love from our minds (vv. 3, 7, 16).

■ 13:3 Remember the prisoners. Paul's commendation of Onesiphorus, who "was not ashamed of my chain," shows the importance of this encouragement even for an apostle (2 Tim. 1:16–18).

■ 13:4 A second hint that sexual immorality may tempt the readers (12:16). The antidote to immorality is not ascetic self-denial, but a proper appreciation of the honor God has bestowed on the marriage relationship (Eph. 5:22–33; 1 Cor. 7:3–5).

■ 13:5, 6 Those tempted by the love of money and discontent are particularly people who seek their security in financial resources (Matt. 6:19–21, 24–34). But God's promise to stay with Joshua gives greater confidence: "I will not leave you nor forsake you" (Josh. 1:5). Our confident response reaffirms that the Lord our helper (2:18; 4:16) sets us free from all kinds of fear (2:15; 11:23, 27).

■ 13:7 who rule over you. The ministry of the congregation's first generation of teachers (2:3) has been completed, and the author will later exhort his readers to submit to the new leaders, as their leaders' pastoral role requires (v. 17).

whose faith follow. We must imitate those who inherit the promises through enduring faith (6:12).

■ 13:8 Though human leaders pass from the scene, Jesus Christ is "the same" (1:12) "yesterday" (in which God spoke through prophets, 1:1), "today" (as God summons us to enter His rest through faith, 3:7, 13; 4:7), and "forever" (1:8; 7:17, 21, 24, 28). He is the strong anchor amid sufferings and uncertainties (6:19).

■ 13:9 strange doctrines. These doctrines, or teachings, apparently maintained that because the readers were not taking part in the ritual life of the temple (v. 13), including the sacrificial feasts, they had no access to God. The author responds that grace, not ceremonial food, strengthens our hearts, for by grace we participate in the worship at the heavenly altar where Jesus ministers.

which have not profited. Just as the sin offering could not secure cleansing of the conscience (9:9), so also the peace offering could not guarantee that the worshiper had peace and communion with God (Lev. 7:11–18; 1 Cor. 10:18).

■ 13:10 The Levitical priests had the right to a portion of every animal sacrificed as a peace offering at the Old Testament tabernacle (Lev. 6:18, 29; 7:6, 28–36). As long as those priests and others depend on the old system of animal sacrifices for atonement and peace with God, they cannot benefit from Christ's heavenly high priestly ministry.

■ 13:11, 12 The symbolism of the Day of Atonement expressed two important aspects of Christ's atoning work. First, the blood brought into the Most Holy Place declared that only through the death of a blameless substitute could anyone approach the holy God. Second, the bodies of the animals burned outside the camp indicated that the substitute became unclean as the bearer of the people's sins.

■ 13:13 go forth to Him, outside the camp. Jesus' suffering outside the city gate symbolized not only the curse He bore as our sin-bearer, but also His rejection by the Jewish religious establishment and its leaders. The readers are now summoned to accept with courage their own expulsion from Jewish institutions (synagogue and temple, and perhaps family as well), in the confident expectation of the city that is to come (v. 14).

bearing His reproach. See 11:25, 26 and note; Ps. 69:7–9; Rom. 15:3.

■ 13:15 continually offer. The time of animal sacrifice is past, but the servants of God, like all priests, still have gifts and offerings for Him. These spiritual sacrifices (1 Pet. 2:5) include praises toward God (v. 15) and acts of love toward other people (v. 16).

the sacrifice of praise. In the Greek translation of Lev. 7:11–21, this phrase refers to a kind of "peace offering," which was an animal sacrifice. But the meaning here is closer to Ps. 50:14, 23 where the Lord calls for "thanksgiving" instead of animal sacrifices.

the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to His name. In Hos. 14:12 this attractive figure of speech is used for the words that one offers to God when one's sins are forgiven. This is "the sacrifice of praise."

our lips, [q]giving thanks to His name. [16][n]But do not forget to do good and to share, for [o]with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

[17][p]Obey those who [5]rule over you, and be submissive, for [q]they watch out for your souls, as those who must give account. Let them do so with joy and not with grief, for that would be unprofitable for you.

Prayer Requested

[18][r]Pray for us; for we are confident that we have [s]a good conscience, in all things desiring to live honorably. [19] But I especially urge you to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.

Benediction, Final Exhortation, Farewell

[20] Now may [t]the God of peace [u]who brought up our Lord Jesus from the dead, [v]that great Shepherd of the sheep, [w]through the blood of the everlasting covenant, [21] make you [6]complete in every good work to do His will, [x]working in [7]you what is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

[22] And I appeal to you, brethren, bear with the word of exhortation, for I have written to you in few words. [23] Know that our brother Timothy has been set free, with whom I shall see you if he comes shortly.

[24] Greet all those who [8]rule over you, and all the saints. Those from Italy greet you.

■ 13:16 do not forget. Sacrifices of words must be accompanied by deeds of love toward others (James 1:27). Paul calls material gifts a "sweet-smelling aroma, an acceptable sacrifice" in Phil. 4:18. See note on v. 2.

■ 13:17 Obey . . . be submissive. The new generation of leaders (13:7) was apparently not receiving the respectful submission that their task warranted.

they watch out. Faithful church leaders are like faithful shepherds (Jer. 23:4; Acts 20:28; 1 Pet. 5:2–4) or watchmen who call out danger alarms to the city (Ezek. 33:6). The leaders' care is deep and genuine because they were appointed by God and will give their account to Him (cf. 4:13). Everyone will suffer if their ministry is resisted.

■ 13:18 Pray for us. Believers have the privilege of acting as priests by praying for each other, in reliance upon their open access to the throne of grace (4:16).

we have a good conscience. Perhaps the author wants to reassure his readers that he is exercising his own leadership in a careful way, according to the guidelines he has just given (v. 17; cf. 2 Cor. 1:12).

■ 13:19 restored to you the sooner. The precise circumstances of the author are unknown. He has previously been with the group he addresses, and is anxious to see them again.

■ 13:20, 21 This benediction gathers together the letter's prominent themes, as well as introducing new ones.

■ 13:20 that great Shepherd of the sheep. The Good Shepherd leads and protects His sheep (Ps. 23; Ezek. 34:11–16, 31), and He has laid down His life for them (John 10:11; 1 Pet. 2:24, 25).

through the blood of the everlasting covenant. The sacrifice of Christ defeated death (2:14) and inaugurated the new and eternal covenant (9:12–15). After being raised, "Christ . . . dies no more" (Rom. 6:9); the effects of His sacrifice are eternal.

■ 13:21 to do His will. God has made full provision for our growth in godliness (2 Pet. 1:3), and He is always ready to help in time of need or temptation (2:18; 4:16).

through Jesus Christ. All of salvation, forgiveness of sins and renewal of life, is through Jesus Christ.

■ 13:22 the word of exhortation. This sermon, in the form of a letter, would take an hour or so to read aloud. The writer could have expanded certain sections if he had wished (9:5).

■ 13:24 Greet all those who rule over you. The author goes out of his way to ensure appropriate recognition of the congregation's leaders (cf. v. 17).

The Epistle of

JAMES

Author The author of this letter identifies himself as James. Though several different persons named "James" are mentioned in the New Testament church, it is almost certain that the author of this book is James the brother of Jesus. The author assumes a position of authority in the church, which certainly was accorded James, the Lord's brother. The James who was a leader of the Jerusalem church and who presided at the council of Jerusalem (Acts 15) is identified in Gal. 1:19 as "the Lord's brother." He was considered one of the pillars of the church along with Peter and John (Gal. 2:9). The New Testament lists James as one of the sons of Mary, Jesus' mother (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3). James, along with his brothers, was skeptical of Jesus during His earthly ministry (John 7:5), but was converted when he became an eyewitness of the Resurrection (1 Cor. 15:7). The early church historian Hegesippus identified him as "James the Just," testifying to his extraordinary godliness, his zeal for obedience to the law of God, and his singular devotion to prayer. It was said that James's knees became so calloused from prayer that they resembled the knees of camels. Josephus records that James was martyred in A.D. 62. Eusebius says he was beaten to death with a club after being thrown from the temple parapet; Hegesippus also records that he was thrown from the pinnacle of the temple.

Date and Occasion James was written between A.D. 44, the beginning of the persecution that spread to the Diaspora (Acts 12), and A.D. 62, the year of James's death. Since no mention is made of the controversy leading to the council of Jerusalem (Acts 15), it is probable that James was written before A.D. 49. James is possibly the earliest New Testament writing.

Characteristics and Themes James has been variously considered an epistle, a sermon (to be read aloud in the churches), a form of wisdom literature, a diatribe, and a moral exhortation. These categories are not mutually exclusive, and there are elements of all these forms in James.

The epistle has a markedly Jewish flavor and refers frequently to the Old Testament. The literary structure of parallelism is used (1:9, 10), along with aphorisms, concrete images drawn from nature, and groups of sayings that have a clear similarity to the style of Jesus. The epistle teaches a high christology and stresses the importance of dealing with affliction from the standpoint of faith. The crucial relationship between faith and active works of obedience receives special attention (2:14–26).□

Greeting to the Twelve Tribes

JAMES, [a]a bondservant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ,

To the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad:

Greetings.

Profiting from Trials

2 My brethren, [b]count it all joy [c]when you fall into various trials, 3 [d]knowing that the testing of your faith produces [1]patience. 4 But let patience have its perfect work, that you may be [2]perfect and complete, lacking nothing. 5 [e]If any of you lacks wisdom, [f]let him ask of God, who gives to all liberally and without reproach, and [g]it will be given to him. 6 [h]But let him ask in faith, with no doubting, for he who doubts is like a wave of the sea driven and tossed by the wind. 7 For let not that man suppose that he will receive anything from the Lord; 8 he is [i]a double-minded man, unstable in all his ways.

The Perspective of Rich and Poor

9 Let the lowly brother glory in his exaltation, 10 but the rich in his humiliation, because [j]as a flower of the field he will pass away. 11 For no sooner has the sun risen with a burning heat than it withers the grass; its flower falls, and its beautiful appearance perishes. So the rich man also will fade away in his pursuits.

Loving God Under Trials

12 [k]Blessed is the man who endures temptation; for when he has been approved, he will receive [l]the crown of life [m]which the Lord has promised to those who love Him. 13 Let no one say

■ 1:1 James, a bondservant. James identifies himself as a slave of God and of Christ. A bondservant is one purchased and owned by a master or "lord." This indicates not only humility on the part of the writer but a profound testimony to his conversion to faith in his earthly half brother as his Redeemer (1 Cor. 15:3). James is a servant to both God and Jesus, a crucial theological bracketing.

■ 1:2 brethren. Fellow believers are addressed in familial terms befitting those who have God as Father.

count it all joy. This is a call to understand suffering from the vantage point of confidence in God's sovereignty. What follows requires careful thinking from a theological perspective.

trials. Various kinds of trying circumstances, often related to persecution such as the early Christians endured.

■ 1:3 testing. Trials can be considered pure joy only when there is knowledge that they are designed by God for a purpose. They are tests of faith given in order to develop perseverance. In turn, perseverance produces mature Christian character (Rom. 5:3).

■ 1:5 wisdom. To be wise in biblical terms is to know and understand godliness, to do what is pleasing to God (Heb. 5:14). Ch. 3 elaborates this theme.

ask of God. God is the source of wisdom. He grants it to those who sincerely seek it from Him.

■ 1:8 double-minded man. This rare expression was possibly coined by James. It suggests a man who has two souls; he is as unstable as a person with a split personality.

■ 1:9, 10 glory. Both the poor and the rich are exhorted to take pride in their positions. The poor brother is wealthy in spiritual treasure. He has high status in the kingdom of God. If the term "rich" refers to wealthy Christians, James means they can rejoice that they have learned where true treasure is found. If "rich" refers to the ungodly, the reference to their "glory" is ironic.

■ 1:11 See Job 14:2; Ps. 103; Is. 40:6, 7.

■ 1:12 Blessed. This echoes the prophetic oracles of salvation used by Old Testament prophets and by Jesus (Matt. 5:3–11).

■ 1:13 tempted. There is an important difference between the concepts "test" and "tempt." God tests people, but never tempts them in the sense of enticing them to sin. Jesus, in the wilderness, was tested by God and tempted by Satan. There is also a difference between temptations that arise from our own sinful inclinations (internal) and those coming from without (external). Jesus, being free of original sin, was tempted externally but not internally. The testing of our faith may be the occasion for temptations to come, both internal and external, yet the temptations never have God as their author.

when he is tempted, "I am tempted by God"; for God cannot be tempted by evil, nor does He Himself tempt anyone. 14 But each one is tempted when he is drawn away by his own desires and enticed. 15 Then, [n]when desire has conceived, it gives birth to sin; and sin, when it is full-grown, [o]brings forth death.

16 Do not be deceived, my beloved brethren. 17 [p]Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and comes down from the Father of lights, [q]with whom there is no variation or shadow of turning. 18 [r]Of His own will He brought us forth by the [s]word of truth, [t]that we might be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures.

Qualities Needed in Trials

19 [3]So then, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, [u]slow to speak, [v]slow to wrath; 20 for the wrath of man does not produce the righteousness of God.

Doers—Not Hearers Only

21 Therefore [w]lay aside all filthiness and [4]overflow of wickedness, and receive with meekness the implanted word, [x]which is able to save your souls.

22 But [y]be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves. 23 For [z]if anyone is a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like a man observing his natural face in a mirror; 24 for he observes himself, goes away, and immediately forgets what kind of man he was. 25 But [a]he who looks into the perfect law of liberty and continues in it, and is not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the work, [b]this one will be blessed in what he does.

26 If anyone [5]among you thinks he is religious, and [c]does not bridle his tongue but deceives his own heart, this one's religion is useless. 27 [d]Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: [e]to visit orphans and widows in their trouble, [f]and to keep oneself unspotted from the world.

Beware of Personal Favoritism

2 My brethren, do not hold the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, [a]the Lord of glory, with [b]partiality. 2 For if there should come into your assembly a man with gold rings, in [1]fine apparel, and there should also come in a poor man in [2]filthy clothes, 3 and you [3]pay attention to the one wearing the fine clothes and say to him, "You sit here in a good place," and say to the poor man, "You stand there," or, "Sit here at my footstool," 4 have you not [4]shown partiality among yourselves, and become judges with evil thoughts?

5 Listen, my beloved brethren: [c]Has God not chosen the poor of this world to be [d]rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom [e]which He promised to those who love Him? 6 But [f]you have dishon-

■ 1:17 Father of lights. Nature's luminaries vary in magnitude and are subject to phases, eclipses, and shadows. God is the ultimate Author of light. In Him there are no changes of brightness or clarity. There is no fluctuation in His character.

■ 1:18 He brought us forth. Lit. "gave birth to us." This refers to the grace of regeneration by which we are adopted into God's family (1 Pet. 1:23).

■ 1:19 swift to hear, slow to speak. Though the Christian community places high regard on the talent of eloquent speech, James places the accent on listening. It is the person who listens intently to the Word of truth who progresses in godliness.

■ 1:22 be doers. True hearing of the Word must lead to godly action.

■ 1:23 mirror. In the ancient world mirrors were made of polished metal, not glass. Scripture is a mirror of the soul's need for grace. It reveals our true character to us.

■ 1:25 perfect law. James uses this phrase as a synonym for sacred Scripture (Ps. 19).

liberty. The law of God sets us free (John 8:36; Rom. 8:2, 15; Gal. 5:13).

■ 1:26 tongue. See ch. 3.

■ 1:27 Pure and undefiled religion. James stresses concern for widows and orphans as a true measure of obedience that is pleasing to God. It reflects the concerns of God Himself (Deut. 10:18; Ps. 9:18 note; 68:5; 146:9). Israel was given this responsibility in the Old Testament (Deut. 14:29; Ezek. 22:7).

■ 2:1 Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory. This may be rendered, "our Lord Jesus Christ, the glory." Here Jesus may be identified with the glory of God. He is Immanuel, "God with us," the dwelling of God with man.

partiality. The expression is similar to that found in Gal. 2:6 (see text note there). James forbids having a respect for persons based purely on externals. It is contrary to the behavior of God who is no respecter of persons (Rom. 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25). In the light of Christ's divine glory it is foolish to show favoritism based on inferior levels of human glory.

■ 2:4 shown partiality. Though God calls us to discern and to discriminate between good and evil, discrimination based on mere externals such as economic status, racial or ethnic differences, and the like is considered an evil form of judgment.

■ 2:5 Has God not chosen. Inheritance in the kingdom is based on God's sovereign election. He chooses not according to merit or worldly status. The standards of this world have no influence on God's gracious election (1 Cor. 1:28, 29; Eph. 1:4). The text does not warrant any form of "poverty mysticism" by which poverty in itself renders a person good (Ps. 9:18 note).

■ 2:6 rich oppress. The verb is a strong word and is used to refer to the oppressive work of Satan (Acts 10:38). The rich used political and judicial power to exploit the poor and needy of the nation. As a group, the rich have a strong tendency to rely upon wealth and power rather than to find their redemption in Christ.

ored the poor man. Do not the rich oppress you [g]and drag you into the courts? [7] Do they not blaspheme that noble name by which you are [h]called?

[8] If you really fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself," you do well; [9] but if you [5]show partiality, you commit sin, and are convicted by the law as [j]transgressors. [10] For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet [k]stumble in one point, [l]he is guilty of all. [11] For He who said, [m]"Do not commit adultery," also said, [n]"Do not murder." Now if you do not commit adultery, but you do murder, you have become a transgressor of the law. [12] So speak and so do as those who will be judged by [o]the law of liberty. [13] For [p]judgment is without mercy to the one who has shown [q]no [r]mercy. [s]Mercy triumphs over judgment.

Faith Without Works Is Dead

[14] [t]What does it profit, my brethren, if someone says he has faith but does not have works? Can faith save him? [15] [u]If a brother or sister is naked and destitute of daily food, [16] and [v]one of you says to them, "Depart in peace, be warmed and filled," but you do not give them the things which are needed for the body, what does it profit? [17] Thus also faith by itself, if it does not have works, is dead.

[18] But someone will say, "You have faith, and I have works." [w]Show me your faith without [6]your works, [x]and I will show you my faith by [7]my works. [19] You believe that there is one God. You do well. Even the demons believe—and tremble! [20] But do you want to know, O foolish man, that faith without works is [8]dead? [21] Was not Abraham our father justified by works [y]when he offered Isaac his son on the altar? [22] Do you see [z]that faith was working together with his works, and by [a]works faith was made [9]perfect? [23] And the Scripture was fulfilled which says, [b]"Abraham believed God, and it was [1]accounted to him for righteousness." And he was called [c]the friend of God. [24] You see then that a man is justified by works, and not by faith only.

■ 2:8 royal law. The supreme law of God.

love your neighbor. James regards the sin of favoritism as a violation of the great commandment (Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5; Matt. 22:36–39), making the perpetrator a lawbreaker.

■ 2:10 whole law . . . one point. This text does not negate the biblical concept of gradation of evil. Some sins are more heinous than others. However, even in the smallest sin a serious offense is made against God. To sin at one point is to sin against the law and therefore against the Law-giver. James, like Jesus, warns against a superficial understanding of the law of God (Matt. 5:17–20).

■ 2:13 See Zech. 7:9; Matt. 5:7; 18:21–35. Though God is never obligated to show mercy, He freely chooses to do so in abundance. He reserves the divine prerogative to show mercy upon whom He wills (Rom. 9). By His law, however, we are commanded to temper justice with mercy. He warns that if we refuse to show mercy we will not receive mercy from Him.

■ 2:14 Can faith save. This introduces the crucial issue of the relationship between faith and works. The question under scrutiny is, What kind of faith is saving faith? James's question is rhetorical; the obvious answer is that faith without works cannot save. Faith that yields no deeds is not saving faith. The New Testament does not teach justification by the profession of faith or the claim to faith; it teaches justification by the possession of true faith.

■ 2:15, 16 Describes a "faith" of words without actions.

■ 2:17 faith by itself . . . is dead. When Luther and the Reformers insisted on the formula "Justification by faith alone," they meant to insist that justification rests upon reliance on the merit of Christ alone. The "alone" does not mean that the faith exists alone without any subsequent fruit of obedience. Luther insisted that saving faith is a living faith. "Dead" faith does not mean a faith that has perished. Rather, the image suggests a faith that never had any true life in it. A dead faith cannot make one alive, cannot "save your souls" (1:21), and is therefore false and useless.

■ 2:18 Show me your faith. James challenges anyone who claims to have faith to demonstrate it, to make it visible. The only evidence visible to human eyes is the deeds of obedience. Though God can read the heart, our only view of the heart is by the sight of outward fruit.

■ 2:19 You believe that there is one God. To believe that God is one can be a mere intellectual assertion. To believe "in" God requires personal trust. To believe that He is, is to assent to a proposition even the demons acknowledge. Saving faith includes cognitive knowledge but goes beyond it to personal trust and submission.

■ 2:20 O foolish man. This is a strong rebuke. It is a moral judgment more than an intellectual judgment, recalling the judgment that falls upon "the fool" in the wisdom literature of the Old Testament.

dead. Barren of fruit.

■ 2:21 justified. James appeals to Abraham as his chief exhibit of one who is justified by his works. This involves no conflict with Paul who also appeals to Abraham as the chief exhibit of one justified by faith. Note that James appeals to Gen. 22, while Paul appeals to Gen. 15. In the sight of God Abraham is justified in Gen. 15, long before he offers Isaac on the altar. God knew Abraham's faith to be genuine. Abraham is justified to us, to human eyes, in Gen. 22 when he shows his faith through his obedience. Jesus used the same verb in Luke 7:35 when he declared "wisdom is justified by all her children" (i.e., shown to be genuine wisdom by its results). Here, to "justify" does not mean to be reconciled to God but to demonstrate the truth of a prior claim. Just as true wisdom is demonstrated by its fruit, Abraham's claim to faith is justified by his outward obedience. Yet his works were not the meritorious cause of his salvation; they added no merit to the perfect and sufficient merit of Christ.

■ 2:22 faith was made perfect. The full outworking of faith is seen in works. True faith always produces fruit. Faith and works may be distinguished, but never separated or divorced.

■ 2:24 not by faith only. A person is not shown to be just by the mere profession of faith or by having a faith that remains alone. A person is only shown to be just by what he or she does. None of our deeds are worthy of ultimate justification in the sight of God. Only the merit of Christ avails for that kind of justification. Only by trusting in Christ alone can we be made righteous in the sight of God. Here James attacks all forms of antinomianism that seek to have Jesus as Savior without embracing Him as Lord. Just as Paul demonstrated that trusting in one's own works is deadly, so James teaches that resting on empty or dead faith is deadly. See theological note "Faith and Works."

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

The Untamable Tongue

3 My brethren, [a]let not many of you become teachers, [b]knowing that we shall receive a stricter judgment. 2 For [c]we all stumble in many things. [d]If anyone does not stumble in word, [e]he is a [f]perfect man, able also to bridle the whole body. 3 [g]Indeed, [f]we put bits in horses' mouths that they may obey us, and we turn their whole body. 4 Look also at ships: although they are so large and are driven by fierce winds, they are turned by a very small rudder wherever the pilot desires. 5 Even so [g]the tongue is a little member and [h]boasts great things.

Faith and Works

Faith is the means or instrument by which a person is saved. Christians are justified before God by faith (Rom. 3:26; 4:1–5; Gal. 2:16), and by faith they live their lives (2 Cor. 5:7) and sustain their hope (Heb. 10:35—12:3).

Faith cannot be defined in subjective terms, as a feeling or optimistic decision. Neither is it a passive orthodoxy. Faith is a response, directed toward an object and defined by what is believed. Christian faith is trust in the eternal God and His promises secured by Jesus Christ. It is called forth by the gospel as the gospel is made understandable through the gracious work of the Holy Spirit. Christian faith is a personal act, involving the mind, heart, and will, just as it is directed to a personal God, and not an idol or an idea.

It is usual to analyze faith as involving three steps: knowledge, agreement, and trust. First is knowledge, or acquaintance with the content of the gospel; second is agreement, or recognition that the gospel is true; and third is trust, the essential step of committing the self to God. These steps go together in the sense that there can be Christian faith only when the gospel is known and its truth is accepted (Rom. 10:14). Calvin defined faith as "a firm and sure knowledge of the divine favor towards us, founded on the truth of a free promise in Christ, and revealed to our minds and sealed on our hearts by the Holy Spirit" (Calvin, Institutes III.2.7).

Through faith we receive Christ, who satisfied the law on our behalf. In this way we are justified through faith alone, without doing the works of the law. But since faith unites us with Christ, it cannot be lifeless. Directed toward God and resting in Him, it is active, "working through love" (Gal. 5:6), seeking to do all the "good works, which God prepared beforehand" for us (Eph. 2:10). Justification is by faith alone, but justifying faith can never be alone.

When James says that faith without works is dead, he is describing a faith that knows the gospel and even agrees with it, but has fallen short of trust in God. Failure to grow, develop, and bear the fruits of righteousness shows that the free gift of God in Christ has never been received. The answer for those with such a faith is not to save themselves by establishing a righteousness of their own, as if they could create faith by their own efforts, but to call on the name of the Lord (Rom. 10:13). God alone can save those for whom it is otherwise impossible (Mark 10:27). Paul shows that good works cannot break this impossibility; James shows that the faith required is faith that rests in the living God.

Even when we have believed, the good works we do are never perfect. They are acceptable to God only because of the mercy of Christ (Rom. 7:13–20; Gal. 5:17). We express our love for God through doing what pleases Him, and He in His kindness promises to reward us for what we do (Phil. 3:12–14; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8). In this we are not making God our debtor, any more than when we first believed in Him. As Augustine noted, God in rewarding us is graciously crowning His own gracious gifts. □

■ 3:1–12 James echoes Jesus' emphasis on the crucial importance of the use of words in daily life (Matt. 12:36; Mark 7:20–23).

■ 3:1 receive a stricter judgment. James gives a sober warning concerning the responsibility of teachers. Teachers exert influence over trusting students, a relationship that makes the students vulnerable to serious error. The teacher is held in strict account for what he or she teaches. This strict judgment should restrain teachers from careless words. The tongue of the teacher can be a devastating peril. The early church gave high esteem to the office of the teacher (Matt. 5:19; 18:6; cf. Rom. 14:10–12).

■ 3:3–5 James uses metaphors from common experience to illustrate his cardinal point that great results can be achieved by small means. The tongue is a small part of the body that is capable of creating great disasters.

See how great a forest a little fire kindles! 6 And [i]the tongue is a fire, a world of [3]iniquity. The tongue is so set among our members that it [j]defiles the whole body, and sets on fire the course of [4]nature; and it is set on fire by [5]hell. 7 For every kind of beast and bird, of reptile and creature of the sea, is tamed and has been tamed by mankind. 8 But no man can tame the tongue. It is an unruly evil, [k]full of deadly poison. 9 With it we bless our God and Father, and with it we curse men, who have been made [l]in the [6]similitude of God. 10 Out of the same mouth proceed blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not to be so. 11 Does a spring send forth fresh water and bitter from the same opening? 12 Can a [m]fig tree, my brethren, bear olives, or a grapevine bear figs? [7]Thus no spring yields both salt water and fresh.

Heavenly Versus Demonic Wisdom

13 [n]Who is wise and understanding among you? Let him show by good conduct that his works are done in the meekness of wisdom. 14 But if you have [o]bitter envy and [8]self-seeking in your hearts, [p]do not boast and lie against the truth. 15 [q]This wisdom does not descend from above, but is earthly, sensual, demonic. 16 For [r]where envy and self-seeking exist, confusion and every evil thing are there. 17 But [s]the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, full of mercy and good fruits, [t]without partiality [u]and without hypocrisy. 18 [v]Now the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace by those who make peace.

defiles. Evil speech (including blasphemy, gossip, slander, lying, false vows, and the like) has the power to spoil, stain, and corrupt the entire moral character of a person.

■ 3:8 no man can tame the tongue. The tongue is harder to tame than wild beasts. It is filled with poison more venomous than a viper's (Ps. 58:4; 140:3; Rom. 3:13, 14).

■ 3:9 bless . . . curse. The tongue is capable of use for both virtue and vice. The same mouth uses the tongue for these contradictory purposes.

■ 3:11, 12 Note the similarity here between James's metaphors and those used by Jesus in Matt. 7:16.

■ 3:13 wise . . . show. Just as James exhorts believers to demonstrate their faith through works, so he also calls for the demonstration of wisdom by godly living.

meekness. The sign of wisdom is a gentle and humble spirit. As arrogance and foolishness go together, so do humility and wisdom.

■ 3:14 bitter envy and self-seeking. Envy and covetousness poison the spirit. They are linked to self-centered and self-serving ambition. These vices blind one from true understanding and are contrary to the love of neighbor.

■ 3:15 earthly, sensual, demonic. Divine wisdom is set in bold contrast with the wisdom of this world. The wisdom of the flesh reflects the deception of Satan and is foolishness in the sight of God.

■ 3:16 every evil thing. As James earlier showed that the tongue is capable of creating disastrous evil, so here he emphasizes the destructive power of envy and selfish ambition. From them flow all kinds of evil, including vandalism, murder, adultery, warfare, theft, slander, and other sins that violate people and provoke chaos in the community.

■ 3:17 wisdom . . . from above. Wisdom that is a gift of God (1:5) reflects the purity of God Himself. Again wisdom is linked to godliness as God Himself is the source and fountainhead of true wisdom.

peaceable. This is authentic peace, free of a quarrelsome attitude.

gentle. Thoughtful and respectful of other people's feelings.

willing to yield. Willing to listen to and obey others.

full of mercy. The wise person is not stingy in mercy but demonstrates charity in broad measure.

without partiality and . . . hypocrisy. The wise person is fair and without deception, deceit, or fraud.

■ 3:18 fruit of righteousness. The fruit reaped by the planting of wisdom is a bountiful crop of righteousness.

A Living Faith (2:26)

Described as:	Results in:
Tested (1:2, 3)	Patience (1:3)
Without doubt (1:6–8)	Answered prayer (1:5)
Enduring temptation (1:12)	Eternal life (1:12)
More than belief (2:19, 20)	Faith perfected by works (2:22)
Believing God (2:23–25)	Righteousness before God (2:23)

James contrasts living faith to dead, or empty, faith. Dead faith does not result in the transformed life that is characteristic of living faith.

Pride Promotes Strife

4 Where do [1]wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure [a]that war in your members? [2] You lust and do not have. You murder and covet and cannot obtain. You fight and [2]war. [3]Yet you do not have because you do not ask. [3][b]You ask and do not receive, [c]because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your pleasures. [4] [4][d]Adulterers and adulteresses! Do you not know that [d]friendship with the world is enmity with God? [e]Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God. [5] Or do you think that the Scripture says in vain, [f]"The Spirit who dwells in us yearns jealously"?

[6] But He gives more grace. Therefore He says:

[g] "God resists the proud,
But gives grace to the humble."

Humility Cures Worldliness

[7] Therefore submit to God. [h]Resist the devil and he will flee from you. [8] [i]Draw near to God and He will draw near to you. [j]Cleanse your hands, you sinners; and [k]purify your hearts, you double-minded. [9] [l]Lament and mourn and weep! Let your laughter be turned to mourning and your joy to gloom. [10] [m]Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He will lift you up.

Do Not Judge a Brother

[11] [n]Do not speak evil of one another, brethren. He who speaks evil of a brother [o]and judges his brother, speaks evil of the law and judges the law. But if you judge the law, you are not a doer of the law but a judge. [12] There is one [5]Lawgiver, [p]who is able to save and to destroy. [q]Who[6] are you to judge [7]another?

Do Not Boast About Tomorrow

[13] Come now, you who say, "Today or tomorrow [8]we will go to such and such a city, spend a year there, buy and sell, and make a profit"; [14] whereas you do not know what will happen tomorrow. For what is your life? [r]It is even a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away. [15] Instead you ought to say, [s]"If the Lord wills, we shall live and do this or that." [16] But now you boast in your arrogance. [t]All such boasting is evil.

[17] Therefore, [u]to him who knows to do good and does not do it, to him it is sin.

Rich Oppressors Will Be Judged

5 Come now, you [a]rich, weep and howl for your miseries that are coming upon you! [2] Your [b]riches [1]are corrupted, and [c]your garments are moth-eaten. [3] Your gold and silver are cor-

■ 4:1 fights. James probes the root cause of divisions among the saints. They are caused by evil desires. Envy is still in view as an evil desire that is destructive.

■ 4:2 you do not ask. That is, "you do not ask" from "God, who gives to all liberally" (1:5). Envy is a sin against God. It flows from a lack of gratitude toward God who bestows gifts upon His people. It also results from a failure to seek one's own gifts from God rather than from the world.

■ 4:3 amiss. God refuses to grant our petitions when they proceed from evil desires. To pray from wrong motives is not to pray in faith (Rom. 14:23; Heb. 11:6).

■ 4:4 Adulterers. Spiritual infidelity is in view here.

■ 4:5 Scripture says. James probably did not have one specific text in mind, a problem similar to that found in Matt. 2:23. The idea may derive partly from Ex. 20:5; Deut. 4:24. If the verse is understood as speaking of the human spirit, James is thinking of texts like Gen. 6:3; 8:21, about the consequences of original sin.

■ 4:6 See Prov. 3:34.

■ 4:7 submit. This requires a willing act of accepting the authority of God. We are under His authority whether we submit to it or not. Here "submit" means "to obey."

Resist the devil and he will flee. Satan is not equal in power or authority to God. Though Satan is powerful, he is not invincible. He flees from saints wearing the armor of God who resist him.

■ 4:9 Lament and mourn and weep. This is a call to genuine repentance by which we mourn for our sins.

■ 4:11 speak evil. A sin of speech, slander flows out of envy and reflects the work of Satan. The Greek word for "devil" means "slanderer." Slandering other Christians destroys fellowship and breaks the royal law. When we speak falsely against a fellow believer, we speak not only against the person but against the law of God. The slanderer sets himself above the law.

■ 4:14 know what will happen. James rebukes the person who lives life and makes future plans without any regard for the providence of God. Such a person lives without regard for divine sovereignty.

■ 4:15 If the Lord wills. The word "if" refers to future events that are conditional. Here the primary consideration in all future planning is the will of the sovereign God.

■ 4:16 boast. Boasting of one's own power and accomplishments is evil. The Christian is to boast only of the Lord (2 Cor. 11:30; 12:5, 9).

■ 4:17 sin. The sins of neglect and of omission are in view here.

■ 5:1 rich. The Bible nowhere condemns wealth itself. It is often viewed as the blessing of God (Prov. 10:22). However, the rich, as a social class, are often guilty of exploiting and oppressing the poor. God reserves severe judgment for this (Luke 6:24).

■ 5:2, 3 corrupted . . . moth-eaten . . . corroded. Earthly treasures roded, and their corrosion will be a witness against you and will eat your flesh like fire. [d]You have heaped up treasure in the last days. [4]Indeed [e]the wages of the laborers who mowed your fields, which you kept back by fraud, cry out; and [f]the cries of the reapers have reached the ears of the Lord of [2]Sabaoth. [5]You have lived on the earth in pleasure and [3]luxury; you have [4]fattened your hearts [5]as in a day of slaughter. [6]You have condemned, you have murdered the just; he does not resist you.

Be Patient and Persevering

[7]Therefore be patient, brethren, until the coming of the Lord. See how the farmer waits for the precious fruit of the earth, waiting patiently for it until it receives the early and latter rain. [8]You also be patient. Establish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord [6]is at hand.

[9]Do not [7]grumble against one another, brethren, lest you be [8]condemned. Behold, the Judge is standing at the door! [10][g]My brethren, take the prophets, who spoke in the name of the Lord, as an example of suffering and [h]patience. [11]Indeed [i]we count them blessed who [j]endure. You have heard of [k]the perseverance of Job and seen [l]the end intended by the Lord—that [m]the Lord is very compassionate and merciful.

[12]But above all, my brethren, [n]do not swear, either by heaven or by earth or with any other oath. But let your "Yes" be "Yes," and your "No," "No," lest you fall into [9]judgment.

Meeting Specific Needs

[13]Is anyone among you suffering? Let him [o]pray. Is anyone cheerful? [p]Let him sing psalms. [14]Is anyone among you sick? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, [q]anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. [15]And the prayer of faith will save the sick, and the Lord will raise him up. [r]And if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. [16][l]Confess your trespasses to one another, and pray for one another, that you may be healed. [s]The effective, [2]fervent prayer of a righteous man avails much. [17]Elijah was a man [t]with a nature like ours, and [u]he prayed earnestly that it would not rain; and it did not rain on the land for three years and six months. [18]And he prayed [v]again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth produced its fruit.

are subject to decay and eventually perish. James echoes the teaching of Jesus (Matt. 6:20).

■ 5:4 wages . . . you kept back. This is a violation of the law of God. Wages are not only to be paid, they are to be paid on time (Lev. 19:13; Deut. 24:14, 15).

■ 5:5 fattened your hearts. Like animals fattened for slaughter, the rich are unaware of the disaster awaiting them.

■ 5:6 condemned . . . murdered. The unjust use of power often causes the death of innocent people. The verse could also be understood figuratively, since to rob people of their wages and livelihood is to commit a kind of murder against them.

■ 5:7 patient. The saints require patience as they await God's promised vindication of His people. God promises justice to correct prevailing forms of injustice in this world (Luke 18:1–8).

■ 5:9 Judge is standing at the door. This verse reflects the urgent sense of the nearness of Christ's coming. James is echoing the New Testament hope of the return of Jesus who comes at the end of the age. James may also be thinking of the radical nearness of judgment facing every person whose life will soon be over and who will stand before the judgment of God. See v. 3 where James mentions the "last days."

■ 5:12 above all. This emphatic exhortation signals a weighty priority for godliness. To exalt refraining from false oaths and vows to a high level of priority may seem strange to some, but is consistent with the biblical concern for covenant-keeping and the sanctity of the faith.

do not swear. This is not a prohibition against cursing or the use of vulgarity. It concerns taking oaths by appealing to objects as witnesses (which in biblical terms is a form of idolatry). Only God has the power to be an omnipresent, omniscient witness to oaths and vows. Just and godly vows are not prohibited because they form a vital part of all covenants.

"Yes" be "Yes." The Christian is expected to be a person whose word can be trusted. James's teaching here echoes that of Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5:34–37).

■ 5:13 Let him sing psalms. See "Music in the Church" at Col. 3:16.

■ 5:14 elders. See Acts 14:23; Titus 1:5.

anointing him with oil. Olive oil was commonly used in medicine in the ancient world (Mark 6:13; Luke 10:34). The oil may also have a symbolic reference to the healing power of God.

■ 5:15 prayer of faith. There is no special "prayer of faith" that has healing power. The power of trusting and faithful prayer is accented here; the Christian community should be devoutly engaged in intercessory prayer for the sick. This verse is the classic proof text for the institution of the Roman Catholic sacrament of extreme unction. Extreme unction is a healing rite that has come to be thought of primarily as the "last rites" in preparation for death.

committed sins. Sin and illness are not unrelated. Forgiveness is therapeutic to the body as well as to the soul.

■ 5:16 Confess your trespasses. Though confession to a priest is not required by Scripture, confession to God and to one another is. Overreaction against the Roman Catholic sacrament of penance may lead to a neglect of authentic godly confession.

righteous man. A godly person who prays in faith is a just or righteous person.

■ 5:17 Elijah. Though Elijah held the special office of Old Testament prophet, he shares a common humanity with all believers. His effectual prayer life is a model for the saints.

Bring Back the Erring One

19 Brethren, if anyone among you wanders from the truth, and someone [w]turns him back, 20 let him know that he who turns a sinner from the error of his way [x]will save [z]a soul from death and [y]cover a multitude of sins.

■ 5:19 wanders from the truth. To stray into sinful patterns.

■ 5:20 turns a sinner. The care of the souls of the community is a matter of concern for every member, not only church officers or the clergy. Mutual help and encouragement are required.

cover. Refers to God's covering of sins with forgiveness (Ps. 32:1; 85:2).

The First Epistle of

PETER

Author The author identifies himself as "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ" (1:1). That he is the well-known apostle of the Gospels and Acts is confirmed by both internal and external evidence. The author describes himself as "a witness of the sufferings of Christ" (5:1), and there are numerous echoes of Jesus' teaching and deeds in the epistle (e.g., 5:2, 3; John 21:15–17). Parallels of thought and phrase between 1 Peter and Peter's speeches in Acts lend further support to Peter's authorship (e.g., 2:7, 8; Acts 4:10, 11).

The external attestation of 1 Peter as a genuine epistle of Peter is widespread, early, and clear; there is no evidence that it was ever attributed to anyone else. Apart from the possible witness of 2 Pet. 3:1 (note), Irenaeus (c. A.D. 185; Against Heresies 4.9.2), Tertullian (c. A.D. 160–225), Clement of Alexandria (c. A.D. 150–215), and Origen (c. A.D. 185–253) all attributed the epistle to Peter. By the time of Eusebius (c. A.D. 265–339) there was no question of its authenticity (Ecclesiastical History 3.3.1).

Although the case for Peter's authorship is strong, linguistic and historical objections have been raised in the last two centuries. The Greek of 1 Peter is said to be too polished and too influenced by the Septuagint (the Greek translation of the Old Testament) to have come from an uneducated Galilean fisherman like Peter (Acts 4:13). The persecutions alluded to in the epistle (4:12–19; 5:6–9) are alleged to reflect a situation later than Peter's lifetime.

None of these objections is decisive against Peter's authorship. In response to the linguistic objection, several points can be made. First-century Galilee was bilingual (Aramaic and Greek), and it is not unlikely that a commercial fisherman would have known the language of commerce. The description of Peter and John as "uneducated and untrained men" in Acts 4:13 may refer only to their lack of formal training in the Scriptures. The thirty years that elapsed between Peter's days as a fisherman and the time the epistle was written would have provided ample opportunity for him to improve his proficiency in Greek. Finally, Silvanus' possible role as secretary (5:12) could account for the smoother style of 1 Peter as compared to 2 Peter.

With regard to the historical objections, the sufferings alluded to by Peter can just as well be accounted for by local, sporadic harassment, which was the routine experience of early Christians from the days of the apostles on, as by official persecution in the days of Domitian (c. A.D. 95) or Trajan (c. A.D. 111).

Date and Occasion According to 5:13, Peter was in "Babylon" when he wrote the epistle. Various identifications of the location have been suggested, among them (a) a military outpost in Egypt, (b) the ancient Mesopotamian city itself, and (c) Rome. Several lines of evidence favor the latter. Mark, who was with Peter when he wrote (5:13), is known to have been with Paul in Rome (Col. 4:10; Philem. 24). Rome is often seen as the "Babylon" of Revelation (Rev. 17:5, 9). This interpretation has been generally accepted since the second century. The uniform testimony of early church history is that Peter was in Rome at the end of his life.

If Rome is the place of origin, the epistle must have been composed between A.D. 60 and 68. The first limit is established by Peter's familiarity with Ephesians and Colossians (cf. 2:18 with Col. 3:22; and 3:1–6 with Eph. 5:22–24), the second limit by the tradition that Peter was crucified upside down in Rome in A.D. 68 at the latest.

While the introduction ("the Dispersion," 1:1 and note) and the frequent Old Testament quotations and allusions in the epistle might imply Jewish Christian recipients (so Calvin), there are stronger indications that most were from a pagan background. The reference in 1:18, for example, to "your aimless conduct received by tradition from your fathers" hardly seems fitting for Jews. Furthermore, the sins listed in 4:3 are typically pagan.

It is apparent from the letter that the readers were suffering persecution for their faith (1:6, 7; 3:13–17; 4:12–19; 5:8, 9). But nothing in the letter indicates official, legislative persecution or requires a date of composition later than the 60s. Their sufferings were the trials common to first-century Christians, and included insults (4:4, 14) and slanderous accusations of wrongdoing (2:12; 3:16). Beatings (2:20), social ostracism, sporadic mob violence, and local police action may have been involved as well.

Characteristics and Themes Peter writes to encourage persecuted and bewildered Christians and to exhort them to stand fast in their faith (5:12). To that end he repeatedly turns their thoughts to the joys and glories of their eternal inheritance (1:3–13; 4:13; 5:1, 4) and instructs them about proper Christian behavior in the midst of unjust suffering (4:1, 19). While addressed primarily to persecuted Christians, the principles Peter teaches apply to all suffering, regardless of the cause, provided it is not occasioned by one's own sin. On the basis of this epistle, Peter has with justice been called "the apostle of hope" (cf. 1:3, 13, 21; 3:15). The central exhortation of the entire epistle can be summed up in the phrase "trust and obey" (cf. 4:19). □

CHAPTER 1

Greeting to the Elect Pilgrims

1 PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ,

To the [1]pilgrims [a]of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,
2 [b]elect [c]according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, [d]in sanctification of the Spirit, for [e]obedience and [f]sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ:

[g]Grace to you and peace be multiplied.

1 [a]James 1:1 [1]sojourners, temporary residents

2 [b]Eph. 1:4 [c][Rom. 8:29] [d]2 Thess. 2:13 [e]Rom. 1:5 [f]Heb. 10:22; 12:24 [g]Rom. 1:7

■ 1:1 Peter. The name (which means "rock") was given by Jesus (Matt. 16:18; John 1:42) in anticipation of the disciple's role in the early church. His given Hebrew name was probably "Simeon," or "Simon" in Greek. "Cephas" (John 1:42; 1 Cor. 1:12) is the transliteration of the Aramaic word for "rock."

apostle. See note on 2 Cor. 1:1.

pilgrims. See text note. This word (seen again in 2:11) emphasizes the temporary nature of a sojourner's stay in a place. As pilgrims, Christians live in the world, but their real homeland is in heaven (Phil. 3:20; Heb. 11:13–16) and their hope is anchored there.

the Dispersion. This word (Greek diaspora) was a technical term among Greek-speaking Jews for the Jews living outside Palestine (John 7:35). Here it is probably used figuratively to describe Christians as people who are away from their true homeland.

Pontus. Although 1 Peter has the character of a general letter (like James, 2 Peter, 1 John, Jude), it differs from the other General Epistles in that it specifies the areas in which the readers lived.

■ 1:2 elect. Peter reminds his readers of their privileged and secure position as the objects of God's sovereign, gracious, eternal choice to be His people in and through Jesus Christ (2:9, 10).

foreknowledge. Includes God's sovereign, loving, effective choice and purpose (Rom. 8:29 note). The corresponding verb ("foreordained") is used of Christ in v. 20.

in sanctification of the Spirit. Note the close connection of the Father's electing love with the Spirit's work of applying redemption to the elect (2 Thess. 2:13). This "sanctification" includes all the Spirit's operations in setting sinners apart from sin (including regeneration and faith) and purifying them for God's service (sanctification in the progressive sense).

A Heavenly Inheritance

3 [h]Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who [i]according to His abundant mercy [j]has begotten us again to a living hope [k]through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, 4 to an inheritance [2]incorruptible and undefiled and that does not fade away, [l]reserved in heaven for you, 5 [m]who are kept by the power of God through faith for salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

6 [n]In this you greatly rejoice, though now [o]for a little while, if need be, [p]you have been [3]grieved by various trials, 7 that [q]the genuineness of your faith, being much more precious than

3 [h]Eph. 1:3 [i]Gal. 6:16 [j][John 3:3, 5] [k]1 Cor. 15:20

6 [n]Matt. 5:12 [o]2 Cor. 4:17 [p]James 1:2 [3]distressed obedience. The initial act of obedience is faith in Christ (John 6:28, 29) and the fundamental element of all obedience is continued faith. To suggest that election is on the basis of God's foreknowledge (that is, mere foresight) of faith would introduce a contradiction into this verse, since election is "for" or with the goal of faith (obedience), and not because of it (Eph. 1:3, 4; 2 Tim. 1:9).
7 [q]James 1:3

the blood of Jesus Christ. Sprinkling of blood was part of the Old Testament ritual service. In general, the appearance of blood advertises the death of a victim. Abel's blood cried for vengeance (Gen. 4:10), and Jesus' blood cries for forgiveness (Luke 23:34; Heb. 12:24). In the worship of the Old Testament, the death of the victim establishes a covenant, and the sprinkling incorporates the worshipers as participants, making them publicly liable for the covenant's benefits and responsibilities (Ex. 24:8).

Grace . . . and peace. This greeting is also a blessing, and would have special relevance for suffering Christians. Grace is God's loving favor to sinners in Christ, while peace is the objective condition of being right with God through Christ (Rom. 5:1, 2), together with all that flows from that relationship. This verse proclaims all three persons of the one God who blesses. See "One and Three: The Trinity" at Is. 44:6.

■ 1:3 according to His abundant mercy. This emphasizes that salvation is based entirely on God's loving initiative.

begotten us again. Although the verb used here and in 1:23 occurs nowhere else in the New Testament, the thought is found frequently (John 1:12, 13; 3:3–8; Titus 3:5; James 1:18).

living hope. A key word in this epistle is "hope" (1:13, 21; 3:15). In the Bible, hope is not uncertainty or wishful thinking, but a confident expectation of future blessing based on facts and promises. "Living" indicates the undying and permanent character of this hope.

■ 1:4 inheritance. As God's children by the New Birth, Christians are heirs of God and co-heirs with Christ (Rom. 8:16, 17). Their inheritance is called "salvation" (v. 5; Heb. 1:14).

■ 1:5 who are kept by the power of God through faith. This verse stresses both the priority of divine grace and the importance of the human action that results from grace. Faith is the gift of God, but believers are still responsible for exercising that faith, or steadfast trust, in spiritual battle (5:8, 9; Eph. 6:16; Phil. 2:12, 13). The strength of God's protection is conveyed by means of a military term, here translated "kept," signifying vigilant defense of a fortress.

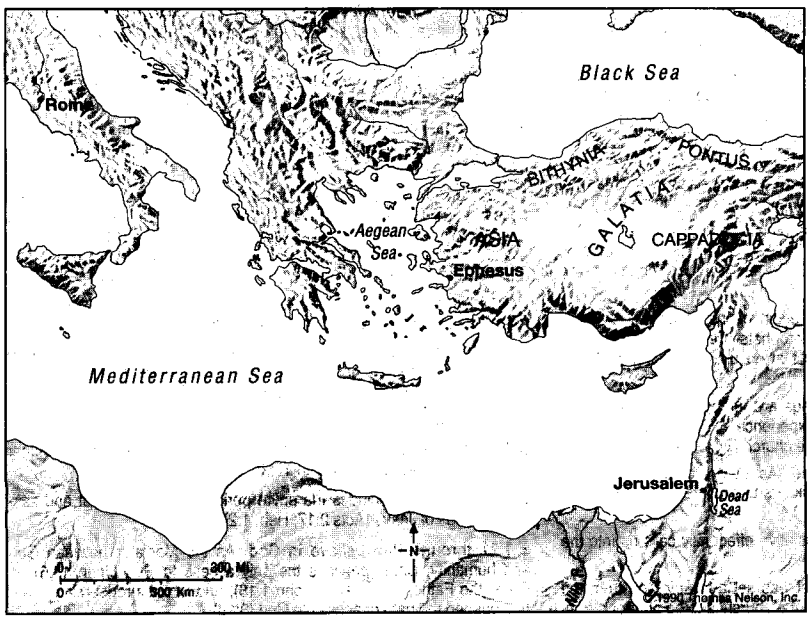
salvation. Here the word means complete and final future deliverance from sin and full enjoyment of eternal glory (v. 9; 4:13, 14; 5:1, 4).

the last time. Christ's return and the final manifestation of His power and glory.

■ 1:6 if need be. Although God never tempts anyone to sin (James 1:13), He allows or sends trials when necessary and in the right measure for strengthening faith (v. 7).

■ 1:7 This explains why trials might "need" to come (v. 6; cf. Rom. 5:3, 4; James 1:2–4).

tested by fire. As men use fire to refine precious metals, so God uses trials to distinguish genuine faith from superficial profession, and at the same time to strengthen faith (Job 23:10).



A Letter to Christians Abroad. The First Epistle of Peter is addressed to "the pilgrims of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." Writing from Rome (indicated by the code name "Babylon" in 1 Pet. 5:13), the author encourages them to be strong in the faith as they encounter persecutions.

gold that perishes, though [r]it is tested by fire, [s]may be found to praise, honor, and glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ, [8][t]whom having not [4]seen you love. [u]Though now you do not see Him, yet believing, you rejoice with joy inexpressible and full of glory, [9]receiving the end of your faith—the salvation of your souls.

[10]Of this salvation the prophets have inquired and searched carefully, who prophesied of the grace that would come to you, [11]searching what, or what manner of time, [v]the Spirit of Christ who was in them was indicating when He testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glories that would follow. [12]To them it was revealed that, not to themselves, but to [5]us they were ministering the things which now have been reported to you through those who have preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven—things which [w]angels desire to look into.

Living Before God Our Father

[13]Therefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and rest your hope fully upon the grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; [14]as obedient children, not [x]conforming yourselves to the former lusts, as in your ignorance; [15][y]but as He who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, [16]because it is written, [z]"Be holy, for I am holy."

[17]And if you call on the Father, who [a]without partiality judges according to each one's work, conduct yourselves throughout the time of your [6]stay here in fear; [18]knowing that you were not redeemed with [7]corruptible things, like silver or gold, from your aimless conduct received by tradition from your fathers, [19]but [b]with the precious blood of Christ, [c]as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. [20][d]He indeed was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was [8]manifest [e]in these last times for you [21][f]who through Him believe in God, [f]who raised Him from the dead and [g]gave Him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God.

be found to praise, honor, and glory. The ultimate goal of trials is the reward of glorification (5:1, 4).

at the revelation of Jesus Christ. This is the Second Coming (v. 5; 4:13; 5:1; 1 Cor. 4:3–5).

■ 1:9 receiving. Believers already enjoy certain essential elements of salvation (e.g., peace and fellowship with God), but full possession awaits the return of Christ (v. 5).

souls. Used here to mean "self" or "person"; compare the same usage in 3:20.

■ 1:11 what . . . time. The prophets knew the Messiah would come (Is. 7:14; 9:6; 11:1), but they did not know when or how (cf. Dan. 12:6, 9).

the Spirit of Christ. This exact phrase appears only here and in Rom. 8:9 (cf. Acts 16:6, 7; Gal. 4:6; Phil. 1:19). The Holy Spirit is called this because He is sent by Christ (John 15:26) and because after the Resurrection, Christ and the Spirit act as one in applying redemption to the believer. See notes on Rom. 8:10; 1 Cor. 15:45.

■ 1:12 To them it was revealed. Peter does not say how or when the prophets learned that they were actually serving future generations.

things . . . reported. The sufferings and glories of Christ (v. 11) are the content of the gospel (Luke 24:25–27, 45–47). The events predicted by the prophets are the events fulfilled in Christ and told to the church by the gospel messengers.

Holy Spirit sent from heaven. The origin of the gospel message is God. The same Spirit who inspired the prophets directed the gospel messengers. The Old and New Testaments are a unity centering on Christ and His salvation.

angels desire to look. Celestial beings are intensely interested in redemption, but their knowledge and experience of it are limited. God's plan is made known to them through the church (Eph. 3:10).

■ 1:13 gird up the loins of your mind. As we would say, "fasten your belt" or "roll up your sleeves." Peter asks us to prepare for vigorous and sustained spiritual exertion.

■ 1:15 called you. God's gracious initiative effectually calls us into the new life in Christ.

be holy. Just as Old Testament Israel was set apart by God from the surrounding nations to be holy, so also the church is to be set apart from sin to the service of God (2:9; Lev. 19:2). The Christian's standard of and motivation for holiness is the absolute moral perfection of God Himself (v. 16; Matt. 5:48; Eph. 5:1).

■ 1:17 Father, who without partiality judges. Though Christians will not be condemned for their sins (2:24; Is. 53:4, 5), they will be judged for their deeds as Christians and rewarded accordingly (Rom. 14:10–12; 1 Cor. 3:12–15). The reward promised, however, is not based strictly on merit; though it is bestowed according to works, the reward is still gracious. Augustine called it God's crowning His own gifts.

stay. See text note. The Greek word suggests those who live in a place as unnaturalized aliens, and emphasizes the Christian's temporary, pilgrim status in the world.

in fear. God is both Father and Judge, and believers must approach Him with humble reverence and awe (Ps. 34:11).

■ 1:18 redeemed. Freed from the bondage of sin by the payment of a price (Rom. 8:2; Gal. 3:13; Eph. 1:7). The price of redemption is the blood of Christ (v. 19).

aimless conduct received by tradition. The emptiness and worthlessness of pagan worship is a frequent theme of scriptural writers (Jer. 2:5; Acts 14:15). Although the New Testament condemns certain Jewish traditions that added to the demands of the Old Testament law (Mark 7:8–13), Peter here seems to have Gentile paganism in view (1:14; 4:3).

■ 1:19 lamb. The lamb is from the Old Testament sacrificial system, especially the Passover (Ex. 12:3; Is. 53:7; John 1:29).

without blemish and . . . spot. In order to be acceptable, a sacrifice had to be free from all defect (Lev. 22:20–25). Christ's sinless life qualified Him to die for the sins of others (Heb. 4:15; 7:26, 27).

■ 1:20 foreordained. Lit. "foreknown" (v. 2 note).

before the foundation of the world. Christ was chosen as Redeemer of the elect in eternity past (John 17:24; Eph. 1:4).

these last times. Includes the entire period between the first and second comings of Jesus (Acts 2:17; Heb. 1:2).

■ 1:21 through Him believe in God. As the Mediator between God and humanity, Christ provides the only access to God (John 14:6). In Christ the Father is revealed (John 1:18), and Christ's redeeming death has opened the path of access to God (3:18).

The Enduring Word

22 Since you [h]have purified your souls in obeying the truth [g]through the Spirit in [1]sincere [i]love of the brethren, love one another fervently with a pure heart, 23 [j]having been born again, not of [2]corruptible seed but [3]incorruptible, [k]through the word of God which lives and abides [4]forever, 24 because

[l]"All flesh is as grass,
And all [5]the glory of man as the flower of the grass.
The grass withers,
And its flower falls away,
25 [m]But the [6]word of the LORD endures forever."

[n]Now this is the word which by the gospel was preached to you.

2 Therefore, [a]laying aside all malice, all deceit, hypocrisy, envy, and all evil speaking, 2 [b]as newborn babes, desire the pure [c]milk of the word, that you may grow [1]thereby, 3 if indeed you have [d]tasted that the Lord is gracious.

The Chosen Stone and His Chosen People

4 Coming to Him as to a living stone, [e]rejected indeed by men, but chosen by God and precious, 5 you also, as living stones, are being built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. 6 Therefore it is also contained in the Scripture,

[f]"Behold, I lay in Zion

And he who believes on Him will by no means be put to shame."

■ 1:23 Genuine and enduring love for others (v. 22) is possible only because of the love God has first shown to us in giving us the new birth in Christ (John 13:35; 1 John 4:7–11).

born again. See note on 1:3; "Regeneration: The New Birth" at John 3:3.

corruptible . . . incorruptible. Peter compares and contrasts human procreation with the life-giving power of God's Word (Luke 8:11).

through the word of God. God's Word is used by the Holy Spirit as an instrument to bring sinners to a knowledge of God's grace in Jesus Christ (Heb. 4:12; James 1:18).

■ 2:2 newborn babes. Peter continues the imagery of new birth (1:23). Believers should have the same yearning for spiritual food that a healthy infant has for its mother's milk.

pure milk. Although the churches to which Peter writes no doubt included many recent converts, the emphasis at this point is not that teaching should be elementary, like the "milk" of 1 Cor. 3:1–3, but that it should be pure. If it is founded on God's Word, teaching will be pure and nourishing (1:22–25).

■ 2:4 Coming to Him. "Coming" to Christ includes initial repentance and faith, but the Greek tense implies a continual drawing near as well.

living stone. Christ is this stone (1 Cor. 10:4). The image of "rock" and "stone" is common in the Old Testament (Ps. 118:22; Is. 8:14; 28:16) and is applied by Jesus to Himself (Matt. 21:42). "Living" indicates that Christ is the source and giver of life (John 1:4; 1 Cor. 15:45). Jesus often uses imagery drawn from stonemasonry, a trade He was intimately acquainted with. Carpenters in antiquity worked with stones as well as wood.

■ 2:5 living stones. A phrase emphasizing both Christians' union with and resemblance to Christ, the "living stone" (v. 4).

spiritual house. The background of the symbolism is the Old Testament temple as the house or dwelling place of God. The church, indwelt by the Holy Spirit, is the true temple of God (2 Cor. 6:16; Eph. 2:19–22; Heb. 3:6).

holy priesthood. Every true believer is a priest (v. 9) in the sense of having equal and immediate access to God and serving Him personally.

spiritual sacrifices. While Christ's once-for-all sacrifice of propitiation on the cross has fulfilled the Old Testament sacrificial system and rendered it obsolete (Heb. 8:13; 10:9, 10, 18), the appropriateness of "sacrifice" (understood as the grateful response of a redeemed people) remains. These sacrifices are "spiritual" in contrast to all the material sacrifices prescribed in the Old Testament sacrificial system. Such sacrifice is seen both in the Christian's worship and pattern of living (Rom. 12:1; Phil. 4:18; Heb. 13:5; Rev. 8:3, 4; cf. Ps. 51:16, 17).

acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. The priesthood of all believers depends on the eternal high priesthood of Christ, through whose once-for-all sacrifice and continual intercession both Christians personally and their sacrifices are acceptable to God (Heb. 13:15, 16).

■ 2:6 cornerstone. The great stone laid for the foundation at the place where two walls come together and of special importance for the stability of the entire building. The church is established on the prophets and apostles, who are held together by the chief cornerstone—Christ (Eph. 2:20).

■ 2:7 chief cornerstone. Lit. "the head of the corner."

■ 2:8 they also were appointed. This verse teaches both divine sovereignty and human responsibility. People are condemned ("stumble") because they are "disobedient," but this disobedience does not occur apart from the sovereign will of God (Rom. 9:14–24).

9 But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, His own special people, that you may proclaim the praises of Him who called you out of [k]darkness into His marvelous light; 10 [l]who once were not a people but are now the people of God, who had not obtained mercy but now have obtained mercy.

Living Before the World

11 Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts [m]which war against the soul, 12 [n]having your conduct honorable among the Gentiles, that when they speak against you as evildoers, [o]they may, by your good works which they observe, glorify God in the day of visitation.

Submission to Government

13 [p]Therefore submit yourselves to every [3]ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether to the king as supreme, 14 or to governors, as to those who are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers and for the praise of those who do good. 15 For this is the will of God, that by doing good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men— 16 [q]as free, yet not [r]using liberty as

■ 2:9, 10 Peter's language in these verses, applying the Old Testament terms for Israel to the church, asserts the continuity between Old Testament Israel and the New Testament church, representing them as the one people of God.

■ 2:9 But you. This marks a sharp contrast between the destiny of unbelievers (v. 8) and the status of the elect. The theme of God's sovereign choice of both Christ and the church is prominent in this passage (vv. 6, 9).

that you may proclaim. The election and calling of God's people is not only for salvation but for service as well. All believers are called to bear joyful witness to the saving acts of God.

■ 2:10 not a people but are now the people of God. The Greek word translated "people" (laos) is used in the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament, primarily for Israel. Continuing to apply to the church Old Testament texts dealing with Israel, Peter draws on the Septuagint of Hos. 1:6, 9, 10; and 2:23. In its original context, this is a prophecy about God's embracing Israel after He had rejected her. Peter, like Paul (Rom. 9:25, 26), interprets the Hosea passages to include the reception of Gentiles into the people of God. God's mercy extends to undeserving Jews and Gentiles alike, and there is essential continuity between Old Testament Israel and the New Testament church.

■ 2:11 fleshly lusts. Bodily desires are not wrong in themselves, but are perverted by man's sinful nature. The expression includes not just sins of the body, but other desires of our fallen nature (Gal. 5:19–21).

■ 2:12 speak against you as evildoers. Among the charges against Christians in Peter's time were disloyalty to the emperor (John 19:12), propagation of unlawful customs (Acts 16:20, 21), defamation of the gods (Acts 19:23–27), and general troublemaking (Acts 17:6, 7).

glorify God in the day of visitation. God's "visitation" is His drawing near either for judgment or mercy.

■ 2:13 submit yourselves to every ordinance. This introduces the theme of voluntary submission and obedience to those in authority developed in 2:13—3:6.

for the Lord's sake. A person should submit to ordinances because this will commend Christ to others and keep reproach from His name. Submission to others also in itself is a service to Christ (Col. 3:23, 24).

the king as supreme. Chiefly the Roman emperor, at this time Nero (A.D. 54–68). The king is supreme, relative to governors and other rulers. Though Peter does not discuss the origin of kingly authority (cf. Rom. 13:1–7), Scripture teaches elsewhere that submission is required as long as it does not involve violation of the law of God (Matt. 22:21; Acts 4:19; 5:29).

■ 2:16 as free. Submission does not mean a denial of Christian freedom, but is the act of God's truly free people.

not . . . as a cloak for vice. Christian freedom must not be used as a pretext for rebellion (1 Cor. 7:20–24) or a license to sin (Gal. 5:13; 2 Pet. 2:19, 20).

as bondservants of God. Christian freedom rests not on escape from service but on a change of masters (Rom. 6:22).

Christian Behavior in a Pagan Society (2:11, 12)

Christians are exhorted to be...	Because...
Good citizens (2:13, 14)	Foolish men will be silenced (2:15)
Obedient servants (2:18)	Christ is our example (2:21)
Submissive wives (3:1)	Some unbelieving husbands will be won by their example (3:1, 2)
Considerate husbands (3:7)	Their prayers will be heard (3:7)
Compassionate brothers and sisters (3:8)	They will inherit a blessing (3:9) a cloak for [4]vice, but as bondservants of God. [17] Honor all people. Love the brotherhood. Fear [s]God. Honor the king.

Submission to Masters

[18] [t]Servants, be submissive to your masters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but also to the harsh. [19] For this is [u]commendable, if because of conscience toward God one endures grief, suffering wrongfully. [20] For [v]what credit is it if, when you are beaten for your faults, you take it patiently? But when you do good and suffer, if you take it patiently, this is commendable before God. [21] For [w]to this you were called, because Christ also suffered for [5]us, [x]leaving [6]us an example, that you should follow His steps:

22 "Who[y] committed no sin,
Nor was deceit found in His mouth";

[23] [z]who, when He was reviled, did not revile in return; when He suffered, He did not threaten, but [a]committed Himself to Him who judges righteously; [24] [b]who Himself bore our sins in His own body on the tree, [c]that we, having died to sins, might live for righteousness—[d]by whose [7]stripes you were healed. [25] For [e]you were like sheep going astray, but have now returned [f]to the Shepherd and [8]Overseer of your souls.

Submission to Husbands

3 Wives, likewise, be [a]submissive to your own husbands, that even if some do not obey the word, [b]they, without a word, may [c]be won by the conduct of their wives, [2] [d]when they observe your chaste conduct accompanied by fear. [3] [e]Do not let your adornment be merely outward—arranging the hair, wearing gold, or putting on fine apparel— [4] rather let it be [f]the hidden person of the heart, with the [1]incorruptible beauty of a gentle and quiet spirit, which is very precious in the sight of God. ■ 2:17 Honor all people. The exhortation is either to recognize the value of every person as a bearer of the image of God, or what is more likely in this context, to respect all those in positions of authority.

Fear God. See note on 1:17.

■ 2:18 Servants. The vast majority of such servants were slaves and were treated as property. To a large extent the economy of the ancient world depended on slavery. Like other New Testament writers, Peter does not condemn slavery, and slaves are commanded to obey their masters. Nevertheless, the New Testament requires that slaves be treated with respect, and masters are not to mistreat their slaves (Eph. 6:9; Col. 4:1). Furthermore, the spiritual equality of slave and free in the church community is strongly emphasized (Gal. 3:28; cf. 1 Cor. 12:13; Col. 3:11), and slaves are encouraged to seek their freedom by lawful means (1 Cor. 7:21–24). In the late 1700's, when slavery came under attack, these teachings helped to undermine the institution of slavery.

■ 2:21 to this you were called . . . leaving us an example. Suffering is a part of the Christian's calling (2 Tim. 3:12) because it was first part of Christ's (John 15:18–20). Christians are united with Christ in His sufferings as well as His resurrection (2 Cor. 1:5; 4:10; Phil. 3:10, 11), and the example of Christ provides a pattern by which Christians are to understand their own lives.

■ 2:22 See "The Sinlessness of Jesus" at Heb. 4:15.

■ 2:24 bore our sins. See Is. 53:12. Christ is more than an example; He is the sin-bearer. As the perfect sacrifice (1:19; 2:24), Christ suffered the curse of sin, accepting the punishment our sins deserved and providing forgiveness and freedom.

tree. The cross (Acts 10:39). This Old Testament idiom emphasizes that Christ died bearing a curse (Deut. 21:22–23; Gal. 3:13).

■ 2:25 but have now returned. This refers to the readers' initial conversion to Christ and suggests redirection of life and new personal attachment.

Shepherd. Familiar Old Testament imagery for God's care of His covenant people (Ps. 23:1; Ezek. 34; 37:24) is applied to Christ (5:4; John 10:11; Heb. 13:20; Rev. 7:17).

■ 3:1 Wives, likewise, be submissive. The word "likewise" refers back to the general principle of submission in 2:13 and is not intended to equate the wife's submission to the husband with that of a slave to a master. The word "likewise" recurs in v. 7, establishing that just as the wife submits to her husband, so also the husband must give understanding and honor to the wife (cf. Eph. 5:25). The relationship of men and women involves both spiritual equality ("heirs together," v. 7; cf. Gal. 3:28) and some differentiation of roles and functions in the home and church (Eph. 5:22–33; 1 Tim. 2:8–15).

without a word. In ancient Roman culture the wife was expected to adopt the religion of her husband, and some of the Christian women in the Asian churches apparently had unbelieving spouses. Peter urges these Christian wives not to rely on argument, which might be seen as insubordination by the already suspicious husbands. Rather, the wives' gentle responsiveness will recommend the gospel to their unbelieving spouses. The enduring principle involved in this statement is not silence (v. 15), but a sensitivity to the concerns of the unbelieving husband so that the gospel may be presented in the best light.

■ 3:3 hair . . . gold . . . apparel. Not a blanket prohibition of modest adornment, but a warning against preoccupation with outward appearances (1 Tim. 2:9, 10). Excess in this area is well attested in the pagan literature and art of the first century. The principle enjoined is modesty.

■ 3:6 calling him lord. A conventional Eastern expression of respect and submission (Gen. 18:12).

daughters. That is, those who resemble Sarah in her submissive attitude.

do good. Here submission to husbands is primarily in view (cf. 2:15), but this probably includes continued allegiance to Christ as well.

not afraid. In dealing with unbelieving husbands (v. 1 note), the Christian wives were to maintain their commitment to Christ while at the same time showing proper deference to their husbands. The difficulties involved could lead to displeasure and intimidation on the husband's part and thus to "terror" on the wife's.

Abraham, [g]calling him lord, whose daughters you are if you do good and are not afraid with any terror.

A Word to Husbands

7 [h]Husbands, likewise, dwell with them with understanding, giving honor to the wife, [i]as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life, [j]that your prayers may not be hindered.

Called to Blessing

8 Finally, all of you be of one mind, having compassion for one another; love as brothers, be tenderhearted, be [2]courteous; 9 [k]not returning evil for evil or reviling for reviling, but on the contrary [l]blessing, knowing that you were called to this, [m]that you may inherit a blessing. 10 For

13 [s]And who is he who will harm you if you become followers of what is good? 14 [t]But even if you should suffer for righteousness' sake, you are blessed. Christ's Suffering and Ours your prayers . . . hindered. Estrangement from others often affects our relationship with God (Matt. 5:23, 24). In particular, the failure to observe God's will for the marriage relationship can disrupt our spiritual relationship with God. The importance of healthy family relationships is apparent from the typological comparison of Christ and church with husband and wife (Eph. 5:23, 24), and by the persistent New Testament characterization of the church as the family of God (1:14–17; Rom. 8:14–17; 1 Tim. 3:14, 15; 5:1, 2).

■ 3:8, 9 Note the parallel teaching in Rom. 12:9–21.

■ 3:9 not returning . . . blessing. Christians are not to retaliate in response to persecution, but instead are to "bless" their enemies (1 Cor. 4:12; cf. 1 Thess. 5:15). Such blessing may take the form of prayer (Matt. 5:44).

■ 3:13 who is he who will harm you. Peter is not denying that the Asian Christians (Introduction: Date and Occasion) may suffer for their faith (4:12). This statement may be interpreted either as a truism teaching that mistreatment is less likely if one's behavior is exemplary, or, more likely, as a statement that, whatever happens to the Christian, no external force can cause spiritual harm (Ps. 56:4; Luke 12:4, 5).

■ 3:14 blessed. Recalls Matt. 5:10–12. Christians who suffer for the truth are blessed by God, even if their reward is delayed.

■ 3:15 always be ready. Readiness to confess Christ is an important aspect of setting apart Christ as Lord.

defense. The word may suggest response to abusive or derisive inquiries from hostile people. Such a response includes an explanation of the main points of Christianity.

■ 3:16 revile your good conduct. By their conduct Christians show that accusations against them are unfounded (2:12, 15).

■ 3:17 if it is the will of God. Unjust suffering is within the providence of God and is for the good of His children and His own glory (1:6, 7; 4:19).

■ 3:18 once. Christ's substitutionary death is sufficient, and no further sacrifices are necessary (Heb. 9:12, 26–28).

made alive by the Spirit. See Rom. 1:4; 8:11.

■ 3:19 preached to the spirits in prison. Four main interpretations of vv. 19, 20 may be mentioned: (a) Christ as preincarnate and preaching through Noah (2 Pet. 2:5) to the people before the Flood (Gen. 6—8). Noah called them to repentance, but they disobeyed and are now imprisoned. The point of Peter's argument would then be that as God vindicated Noah then, He would vindicate Christians now. (b) Christ's preaching in the short interval between His death and Resurrection, during a "descent into hell." It is said that Christ announced His victory to the spirits of Noah's wicked contemporaries confined in the realm of the dead. (c) A similar idea is that Christ proclaimed His victory to fallen angels, often identified with the "sons of God" of Gen. 6:2, 4 (cf. Job 1:6; 2:1), in preached to the spirits in prison, [20] who formerly were disobedient, [7]when once the Divine long-suffering waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was being prepared, in which a few, that is, eight souls, were saved through water. [21] [y]There is also an antitype which now saves us—baptism [z](not the removal of the filth of the flesh, [a]but the answer of a good conscience toward God), through the resurrection of Jesus Christ, [22] who has gone into heaven and [b]is at the right hand of God, [c]angels and authorities and powers having been made subject to Him.

4 Therefore, since Christ suffered [1]for us in the flesh, arm yourselves also with the same mind, for he who has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin, [2] that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh for the lusts of men, [a]but for the will of God. [3] For we have spent enough of our past [2]lifetime in doing the will of the Gentiles—when we walked in lewdness, lusts, drunkenness, revelries, drinking parties, and abominable idolatries. [4] In regard to these, they think it strange that you do not run with them in the same flood of dissipation, speaking evil of you. [5] They will give an account to Him who is ready [b]to judge the living and the dead. [6] For this reason [c]the gospel was preached also to those who are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but [d]live according to God in the spirit.

■ 3:21 antitype which now saves us—baptism. Baptism is a sign and seal of God's grace in Jesus Christ. The startling statement that baptism "saves us" shows how close is the relationship between the sign and the reality it signifies. Noah's physical salvation through the waters of the Flood prefigured the waters of baptism and the salvation they signify. Baptism symbolizes judgment on sin in the death of Christ and then also renewal of life (Rom. 6:4). The floodwaters were judgment to the wicked, and at the same time physical salvation for the just, Noah and his family.

not the removal of the filth of the flesh. Lest his readers mistakenly attribute a magical or mechanical power to the sacrament, Peter states that the means of salvation is not performance of the external rite, but what it symbolizes—union with Christ in His death and Resurrection.

■ 3:22 at the right hand of God. The place of supreme privilege and sovereignty in the universe (Eph. 1:20–23; Heb. 1:3).

■ 4:1 has ceased from sin. Some interpret this to refer to the character-building effects of suffering. But the preceding reference to baptism (3:21; cf. Rom. 6:1–10) indicates that Peter is thinking of the union of believers with Christ in His suffering and death, a union particularly symbolized by baptism (Rom. 6:4). Though Christ was always sinless (2:22; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15), He nevertheless fully identified with sinful humanity by coming "in the likeness of sinful flesh" (Rom. 8:3) and becoming subject to temptation, suffering, and death (Mark 1:12, 13; Heb. 2:10; 4:15). Christ "died to sin" (Rom. 6:10) in the sense that after His death and Resurrection He was no longer subject to the power of sin and death.

■ 4:3 This catalog of sins closely resembles Rom. 13:13 and Gal. 5:19–21, and is strong evidence for the pagan background of most of Peter's audience (1:14, 18; Introduction: Date and Occasion).

lewdness. Unrestrained indulgence of one's desires, especially for sensual pleasure (Rom. 13:13; 2 Cor. 12:21; Eph. 4:19).

lusts. The usual word for evil desire, often relating to sexual immorality.

revelries. Excessive feasting, often in honor of a pagan god.

drinking parties. The excessive use of alcohol is frequently condemned in Scripture (Rom. 13:13; Gal. 5:21).

■ 4:6 For this reason. This verse follows on the idea of a universal divine judgment just stated, but the reason or purpose of the preaching is not given until the end of the verse.

was preached also to those who are dead. Although some connect this preaching with 3:19, 20, it is more likely unrelated. These people may have been Christians who had heard Peter preach, but who had died by the time of the letter.

be judged . . . in the flesh. Probably a reference to the physical death of the hearers. Although Christ has triumphed over physical death in His death and Resurrection (Rom. 6:9), the full extent of that victory has not yet been manifested in the lives of God's people, and physical death is a reality Christians still face. Nevertheless, we now enjoy spiritual resurrection through union with Christ, and we have full assurance that Christ's victory will be extended to our physical bodies (1 Cor. 15:25, 26; cf. Rom. 8:11).

■ 4:7 is at hand. The "end of all things" may refer to the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 or, more comprehensively, to the final consummation of Christ's kingdom at His return. The call to vigilance is frequent in the New Testament. The entire period between the Resurrection of Christ and His Second Coming is seen as the "last days" (1:20 note; Acts 2:17; 1 Tim. 4:1 note).

■ 4:8 love will cover . . . sins. Love keeps no record of wrongs but forgives in response to God's forgiveness (Prov. 10:12; Matt. 18:21, 22; 1 Cor. 13:4–7; James 5:20). See "Love" at 1 Cor. 13:13.

■ 4:9 hospitable. One of the fruits of love (v. 8). Situations necessitating hospitality would include homelessness due to persecution, Christians traveling on business, and itinerant missionaries (Rom. 12:13; 3 John 5–8).

■ 4:10 each one . . . minister. See Rom. 12:3–8.

■ 4:13 but rejoice. The same paradox of exultation in suffering is found in 1:6, 7.

Shepherd the Flock

5 The elders who are among you I exhort, I who am a fellow elder and a [a]witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the [b]glory that will be revealed: 2 [c]Shepherd the

Pastors and Pastoral Care

The apostles told all Christians to watch over each other with loving care and prayer (Gal. 6:1, 2; Heb. 12:15, 16; 1 John 3:16–18; 5:16), but they also appointed in each congregation guardians, called "elders" (Acts 14:23; Titus 1:5), who would look after the people as shepherds look after sheep (Acts 20:28–31; 1 Pet. 5:1–4), leading them by example (1 Pet. 5:3) away from all that is harmful into all that is good. By virtue of their role, the elders (presbyters) are also called "shepherds" ("pastors," Eph. 4:11) and "overseers" (Acts 20:28, cf. v. 17; "bishops," Titus 1:7, cf. v. 5; 1 Pet. 5:1, 2), and are spoken of in other terms that express leadership (1 Thess. 5:12; Heb. 13:7, 17, 24). The congregation, for its part, is to acknowledge the God-given authority of its leaders and to follow their lead (Heb. 13:17).

This pattern is already present in the Old Testament, where God is the shepherd of Israel (Ps. 80:1) and kings, prophets, priests, and elders (local rulers) are called to act as His agents in an under-shepherd role (Num. 11:24–30; Deut. 27:1; Ezra 5:5; 6:14; 10:8; Ps. 77:20; Jer. 23:1–4; Ezek. 34; Zech. 11:16, 17). In the New Testament, Jesus the Good Shepherd (John 10:11–30) is also the Chief Shepherd (1 Pet. 5:4), and the elders are His subordinates. The apostle Peter calls himself an "elder" under Christ (1 Pet. 5:1), remembering perhaps that shepherding was the specific task Jesus gave him when restoring him to ministry (John 21:15–17).

Some but not all elders teach (1 Tim. 5:17; Titus 1:9; Heb. 13:7), and Eph. 4:11–16 says that Christ gave the church "pastors and teachers" to equip everyone for service through the discovery and development of each person's spiritual gifts (vv. 12–16). In the congregational leadership envisaged by the apostles, there may have been teachers who were not elders, as well as elders who did not teach, and also those who both ruled and taught.

The pastoral role of elders demands mature and stable Christian character, and a well-ordered personal life (1 Tim. 3:1–7; Titus 1:5–9). The elder who serves faithfully will be rewarded (Heb. 13:17; 1 Pet. 5:4; cf. 1 Tim. 4:7, 8). □ partake of Christ's sufferings. Christians share in Christ's sufferings, not by contributing to Christ's finished work of atonement for sin, but by experiencing similar mistreatment because they are identified and united with Christ (vv. 14, 16; Rom. 8:17; 2 Cor. 1:5 and note; Phil. 1:29; Col. 1:24 and note).

■ 4:17 judgment . . . at the house of God. Peter returns to the theme of divine sovereignty over the suffering of God's people. This judgment may have the purpose of purification (Mal. 3:2–4; Heb. 12:9–11), or of strengthening faith (1:6, 7).

■ 4:18 righteous one is scarcely saved. It is not that final salvation is uncertain, but that the way to it is through hard discipline (Matt. 7:14; Acts 14:22).

■ 5:1 a fellow elder. Although Peter has already mentioned his office as an apostle (1:1), here he stresses his solidarity and shared eldership with the leaders of the Asian churches so as to encourage them.

■ 5:2 Shepherd the flock of God. This phrase broadly describes the functions of elders. The shepherd imagery suggests care, protection, discipline, and guidance (2:25 note). Jesus portrayed His own care for the church (John 10:1–18) and God's gracious interest in sinners (Luke 15:3–7) as works of shepherding. The use of the word by Peter recalls his own recommissioning (John 21:15–17). See theological note "Pastors and Pastoral Care."

not for dishonest gain. Peter condemns not fair compensation, but love of gain and the abuse of trust (1 Cor. 9:14; 1 Tim. 5:17, 18).

8 Be [3]sober, be [4]vigilant; [5]because your adversary the devil walks about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. 9 Resist him, steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same sufferings are experienced by your brotherhood in the world. 10 But [6]may the God of all grace, [n]who called [7]us to His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after you have suffered a while, [8]perfect, establish, strengthen, and settle you. 11 [o]To Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. ■ 5:3 nor as being lords . . . but being examples. Peter warns against haughty abuse of power and exhorts his audience to be like Jesus (Mark 10:42–45; John 13:1–17; Phil. 2:5–11).

■ 5:4 Chief Shepherd. Christ (2:25). The title brings out the relationship of Christ's pastoral care and work to that of church leaders, who serve as undershepherds responsible to the Chief Shepherd.

■ 5:5 elders. In v. 1 the Greek word is used in the technical sense of a church office holder, but here there is probably a more general reference to older people (cf. 1 Tim. 5:1).

■ 5:8 adversary the devil. The Greek word translated "adversary" was in common use for an opponent in a lawsuit, and "devil" (Greek diabolos) is the usual translation of the Hebrew Satan, which means "slanderer" or "accuser" and also serves as a proper name for the devil (Job 1:6; Zech. 3:1, 2; cf. Rev. 12:9, 10). The phrase reveals the ultimate source behind all persecution.

lion. The imagery is perhaps borrowed from the Book of Psalms where the psalmist's enemies and the wicked are compared to lions (Ps. 7:2; 10:9, 10). The metaphor conveys the strength and destructiveness of the devil and accentuates the need for alertness on the part of believers.

■ 5:10 God of all grace. God bestows help and strength sufficient for every occasion and need.

by Christ Jesus. All the blessings of God's grace in this life and the next come through the believer's union with Christ. See note on 2 Cor. 5:17.

■ 5:12 by Silvanus. Probably this is Silas, Paul's companion on the second missionary journey (Acts 15:40). Silvanus may simply have carried the epistle, or he may have acted as a secretary, perhaps even helping Peter draft the letter.

■ 5:13 She . . . in Babylon. Probably a reference to the church in Rome (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

Mark my son. John Mark (Acts 12:12, 25; 13:5, 13; 15:37–39). According to Papias (c. A.D. 60–130), Mark worked closely with Peter and derived much of the information for the Gospel of Mark from the apostle.

■ 5:14 kiss of love. The kiss was and is a common form of greeting in the Near East (Matt. 26:48, 49; Luke 15:20), corresponding to today's handshake. For the Christians, the cultural form became an outward sign of their love and unity (a "holy kiss," Rom. 16:16; 1 Thess. 5:26).

The Second Epistle of

PETER

Author This epistle claims to have been written by Simon Peter (1:1), and several things in the epistle support the claim. The author refers to his own imminent death in terms that recall Jesus' words to Peter (1:14; cf. John 21:18, 19); he claims to have been an eyewitness of the Transfiguration (1:16–18; cf. Matt. 17:1–8 and parallels); and he seems to imply a connection between this epistle and 1 Peter (3:1).

Although there are possible allusions to 2 Peter in Christian literature of the late first and early second centuries, it is not as well attested as 1 Peter or other New Testament books. Origen (c. 185–254) was the first to attribute the epistle explicitly to Peter, but he recorded that others doubted Peter's authorship. Eusebius (c. 265–339) listed it among the disputed books, and Jerome (c. 342–420), while noting some disagreement regarding its authenticity, suggested that stylistic differences with 1 Peter were due to Peter's use of different secretaries. The epistle was accepted as authentic and canonical by influential fourth-century church fathers such as Athanasius, Cyril of Jerusalem, Ambrose, and Augustine, as well as by the late fourth-century church councils of Hippo and Carthage, and its subsequent place in the New Testament canon was assured.

Notwithstanding the epistle's own claims, a number of objections have been raised to Peter's authorship. Among the more common ones are the lack of early attestation, slow recognition by the church, stylistic differences with 1 Peter, and the apparent use of Hellenistic religious and philosophical language. The usual alternative to Peter's authorship is pseudonymity, i.e., that 2 Peter was written by a later unknown author who attributed the work to a well-known writer as a literary device to commend his message. While several of the objections must be taken seriously (especially attestation and style), their force should not be exaggerated, and none is conclusive against Peter's authorship.

There is great stylistic diversity between 1 and 2 Peter. Many of the favorite words and expressions of 1 Peter, for example, are absent in 2 Peter. The differences are not absolute, however, and several striking similarities do exist between the two epistles. There are also a number of parallels between 2 Peter and Peter's speeches in Acts (e.g., the use of the Greek word eusebeia, "godliness," in 1:3, 6, 7; 3:11 and Acts 3:12, a word occurring elsewhere in the New Testament only in the Pastoral Epistles).

The claim that 2 Peter is pseudonymous is weak. Genuine examples of pseudepigraphy (writings by authors pretending to be someone else of greater authority) in early Christian literature are almost all heretical, an indication that the device was used to commend works whose content was suspect. There is strong evidence that the church did not tolerate the practice, but in fact strictly rejected pseudepigrapha.

The case against Peter's authorship is, in conclusion, not proved, and the epistle's own claim to have been written by Peter can be taken at face value.

Date and Occasion Assuming Peter's authorship, 2 Peter must have been written before the apostle's death in A.D. 67–68. The reference to his imminent death in 1:14 suggests a time near the end of his life. If 3:1 refers to 1 Peter, the date of composition must be sometime after 63–64 (Introduction to 1 Peter: Date and Occasion). A date between 65–67 is therefore plausible.

The place of origin of 2 Peter is uncertain. Rome is a likely suggestion, given Peter's location there in 1 Peter (1 Pet. 5:13 note) and the tradition that he was martyred there under Nero.

Unlike 1 Peter, there is little information in this epistle about its recipients. If 3:1 refers to 1 Peter, the recipients, Christians in Asia Minor, are the same in both epistles. If 3:1 is not a reference to 1 Peter, but to a lost epistle instead, there are no firm data to determine the recipients.

Characteristics and Themes Second Peter is written to Christians being threatened by false teaching from within (2:1). As an antidote, Peter stresses the truth and ethical implications of the gospel against the false teachers.

Although the false teaching is difficult to define precisely, it appears to be an early precursor of Gnosticism. This term designates any of a variety of heretical movements in the early Christian centuries (especially the second century) that combined ideas from Greek philosophy, oriental mysticism, and Christianity, and emphasized salvation through intuitive, esoteric knowledge (the Greek word for "knowledge" is gnosis) rather than through faith in Christ.

Because in the gnostic system the physical body was regarded as evil, second-century Gnostics were usually characterized by either blatant immorality or rigorous asceticism. Asceticism is not addressed as a problem in 2 Peter, but immorality is (2:13–19). The false teachers seem to be using Christian liberty as a license to sin, especially to commit sexual immorality (2:14). In addition, they are guilty of denying the Lord (2:1), despising authority and slandering celestial beings (2:10), and scoffing at the Second Coming of Christ (3:3, 4).

Interpretive Difficulties Some relationship between 2 Peter and Jude is virtually certain. Although verbatim agreement is rare (2:17; cf. Jude 13), they have similar ideas, words, Old Testament illustrations, and order of text (2:1–18; cf. Jude 4–16). Several explanations are possible. Either 2 Peter used Jude (the scholarly consensus), or Jude used 2 Peter, or there was a common source unknown to us. □

Greeting the Faithful

CHAPTER 1

SIMON PETER, a bondservant and [a]apostle of Jesus Christ,

To those who have [1]obtained [b]like[2] precious faith with us by the righteousness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ:

[2] [c]Grace and peace be multiplied to you in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord, [3] as His [d]divine power has given to us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the apostle. See note on 2 Cor. 1:1.

like precious faith. Though some interpret this to refer to "the faith" as a body of belief (Jude 3), it more likely refers to the subjective experience of the believer. As an apostle writing to those who will live on after his death (vv. 13–15), Peter assures his readers that they do not have a second-class Christianity, inferior to Peter's and the other apostles' (cf. John 20:29).

by the righteousness. This probably refers to God's fairness and impartiality in bestowing the gift of faith upon all types of people, rather than to the vicarious righteousness of Christ by which Christians are justified (Rom. 3:22; 4:6). The word "righteousness" is generally used in an ethical sense in Peter's letters (2:5, 21; 3:13; 1 Pet. 2:24; 4:18).

our God and Savior Jesus Christ. Since one definite article governs both nouns in the Greek (lit. "the God of us and Savior"), this phrase ascribes deity to Jesus.

■ 1:2 knowledge of God and of Jesus. "Knowledge" is an important theme in 2 Peter (related words occur eleven times); here it is likely a subtle attack on false teachers and their preoccupation with esoteric knowledge. Peter seems to reserve the particular Greek word used here (epignosis) for the fundamental saving knowledge of God gained in conversion (1:2, 3, 8; 2:20). Knowledge of God and of Jesus are connected because God is known savingly only in and through Jesus Christ (Matt. 11:27).

knowledge of Him [e]who called us by glory and virtue, 4 [f]by which have been given to us exceedingly great and precious promises, that through these you may be [g]partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the [3]corruption that is in the world through lust.

Fruitful Growth in the Faith

5 But also for this very reason, [h]giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, to virtue [i]knowledge, 6 to knowledge self-control, to self-control [4]perseverance, to perseverance godliness, 7 to godliness brotherly kindness, and [j]to brotherly kindness love. 8 For if these things are yours and abound, you will be neither [5]barren [k]nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9 For he who lacks these things is [l]shortsighted, even to blindness, and has forgotten that he was cleansed from his old sins.

10 Therefore, brethren, be even more diligent [m]to make your call and election sure, for if you do these things you will never stumble; 11 for so an entrance will be supplied to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Peter's Approaching Death

12 For this reason [n]I will not be negligent to remind you always of these things, [o]though you know and are established in the present truth. 13 Yes, I think it is right, [p]as long as I am in this [6]tent, [q]to stir you up by reminding you, 14 [r]knowing that shortly I must [7]put off my tent, just as [s]our Lord Jesus Christ showed me. 15 Moreover I will be careful to ensure that you always have a reminder of these things after my [8]decease.

The Trustworthy Prophetic Word

16 For we did not follow [t]cunningly devised fables when we made known to you the [u]power and [v]coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were [w]eyewitnesses of His majesty. 17 For He received from God the Father honor and glory when such a voice came to Him from the Excellent Glory: [x]"This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." 18 And we heard this voice which came from heaven when we were with Him on [y]the holy mountain.

19 [9]And so we have the prophetic word confirmed, which you do well to heed as a [z]light that

■ 1:4 partakers of the divine nature. Believers are not absorbed into deity, nor do they become divine. Rather, they have received the Holy Spirit and are sons of God (John 1:12; Rom. 8:9–21). As such they are being conformed to the likeness of Christ (Rom. 8:29) and the image of God in them is being renewed in true righteousness.

■ 1:5–7 The order of virtues here ("faith . . . love") is not a sequence in time, as if stages of the Christian life were being described (vv. 8, 9). Peter is using a rhetorical figure that builds a series of elements to a climax. The beginning and conclusion of the series are significant, however. Early Christian virtue lists often begin with "faith," the starting point of the Christian life, and end with "love" (Rom. 5:1–5; 1 Cor. 13), the preeminent fruit of the Christian life.

■ 1:7 brotherly kindness. Greek philadelphia, the family affection among believers as brothers and sisters in God's family (Rom. 12:10; Heb. 13:1; 1 Pet. 1:22).

■ 1:9 shortsighted . . . blindness. Lit. "blind, being nearsighted." The combination of terms here is strange, since the two physical conditions are mutually exclusive. Some suggest on the basis of the etymology of the Greek word for "nearsighted" that Peter is alluding to the squinting or narrowing of the eyes, and that a deliberate rejection of the truth is in view. However, because the nearsighted person squints in order to see better, it is possible that Peter is simply multiplying related terms for effect.

■ 1:10 make your call and election sure. While God's choice of the elect is firm and certain in God (2 Tim. 2:19), it may not always be obvious to the individual Christian. Assurance of God's call comes through the evidence of the Holy Spirit's work in our lives (1 John 3:10, 14) as well as through the internal testimony of the Spirit in our hearts (Gal. 4:6).

if you do these things. God's promise of salvation is to those with a genuine, persevering faith (Matt. 10:22; 24:12, 13; Heb. 3:6). True faith perseveres to the end and will inevitably bear fruit (Gal. 5:6, 22, 23).

■ 1:13 in this tent. This phrase emphasizes the transitory nature of human life this side of Christ's return (2 Cor. 5:1, 4).

■ 1:15 be careful. Again, Peter's purpose in writing this epistle is to establish his readers firmly in the truth of the gospel (v. 12).

decease. Lit. "exodus." Death is a "going out" or "departure" from this life (Luke 9:31 note).

■ 1:16 we. Peter links his message with that of the other apostles to affirm that they all preach the same message.

fables. This word is always used in the New Testament in a negative sense and in contrast to the truth of the gospel (1 Tim. 1:4; 2 Tim. 4:4).

the power and coming of . . . Christ. The Greek word translated "coming" is parousia, the usual New Testament term for Christ's Second Coming in glory (3:4, 12; Matt. 24:27; 1 Thess. 3:13). "Power" is elsewhere associated with Christ's coming (Matt. 24:30).

eyewitnesses of His majesty. Peter was present at Christ's transfiguration (Matt. 17:1–8 and parallels). The eyewitness testimony of the apostles to the Transfiguration establishes the truth of Peter's message in general, and in particular provides the historical basis for the apostolic expectation of the Second Coming. The Transfiguration was understood by the apostles to have been a brief anticipation of the divine glory with which Christ will return to earth (Matt. 16:27—17:8).

■ 1:17 Excellent Glory. An indirect way, typical of Jewish speech, of referring to God Himself. The reason for speaking indirectly was to avoid any possible misuse of the sacred name of God.

■ 1:19 we have the prophetic word confirmed. As translated, this means that the Transfiguration confirms the truth of prophecy, making it certain that the future Second Coming will occur. Another, more natural interpretation of the Greek is that the prophetic word of Scripture is a more solid proof than even the spectacular experience of witnessing the Transfiguration (see text note).

the morning star. This probably alludes to Num. 24:17, a passage that is interpreted messianically (Rev. 2:28; 22:16). If so, the symbol refers to Christ in His Second Coming.

rises in your hearts. A difficult phrase, since "day dawns" and "morning star" apparently refer to the Second Coming of Christ, an external event. Peter probably refers to the effect on believers of the full revelation that shines in a dark place, [a]until [b]the day dawns and the morning star rises in your [c]hearts; 20 knowing this first, that [d]no prophecy of Scripture is of any private [1]interpretation, 21 for [e]prophecy never came by the will of man, [f]but [2]holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit.

Destructive Doctrines

2 But there were also false prophets among the people, even as there will be [a]false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Lord who bought them, and bring on themselves swift destruction. 2 And many will follow their destructive ways, because of whom the way of truth will be blasphemed. 3 By covetousness they will exploit you with deceptive words; for a long time their judgment has not been idle, and their destruction [1]does not slumber.

Doom of False Teachers

4 For if God did not spare the angels who sinned, but cast them down to [2]hell and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved for judgment; 5 and did not spare the ancient world, but saved Noah, one of eight people, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood on the world of the ungodly; 6 and turning the cities of [b]Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them to destruction, making them an example to those who afterward would live ungodly; 7 and [c]delivered righteous Lot, who was oppressed by the filthy conduct of the wicked 8 (for that righteous man, dwelling among them, [d]tormented his righteous soul from day to day by seeing and hearing their lawless deeds)— 9 then [e]the Lord knows how to deliver the godly out of temptations and to reserve the unjust under punishment for the day of judgment, 10 and especially will accompany Christ's return. His readers must pay attention to the sure "prophetic word" until the day when that word will be superseded by the full revelation to come.

■ 1:20 of any private interpretation. Some take this verse to be about the interpretation of prophecy, to the effect that no one is allowed to interpret Scripture on their own, privately. But Peter's concern here is the reliability of Scripture itself, and not the authority of those who interpret it. That point comes up later (3:16). In the present context, Peter is arguing that the prophetic testimony in Scripture comes altogether from God, including not only visions but also words used to describe and interpret them (Dan. 8:15–19; Zech 1:9).

■ 1:21 moved by the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the source of prophecy, enabling the prophets to speak and write as God's representatives (2 Tim. 3:16; 1 Pet. 1:10–12).

■ 2:1 heresies. The Greek term at one time referred to groups or sects in a neutral sense (cf. "sect," Acts 24:5). It was used by Paul of divisive groups (1 Cor. 11:19; Gal. 5:20), and it came to denote the specific teachings of such groups. Here, teachings regarding Christian conduct are probably in view—conduct that placed the teachers under judgment (v. 3; 3:7).

denying the Lord who bought them. Peter is not saying Christians can lose their salvation (John 10:28, 29; Rom. 8:28–30), but is describing the false teachers in terms of their own profession of faith (vv. 20, 21). By teaching and practicing immorality they despise the lordship of Christ and prove their profession to be false (1 John 2:3, 4, 19).

Though the phrase "the Lord who bought them" is taken by some to mean that Christ's substitutionary death applies to all rather than to the elect only (see "Definite Redemption" at John 10:15), Peter's concern here is to highlight the responsibility of the false teachers rather than to advance a theory of the Atonement. With their claim to be redeemed by Christ, their "destructive ways" (v. 2) bring particular dishonor on Christ and His sacrifice for sin.

■ 2:2 destructive ways. Incorrigible and reckless sensual indulgence, especially in sexual immorality ("lewdness," 1 Pet. 4:3).

blasphemed. Immoral behavior by those who claim to be Christians gives Christianity a bad name among unbelievers. Christians are often urged to exemplary behavior so that the cause of the gospel will not be hindered (1 Tim. 6:1; Titus 2:5, 9, 10).

■ 2:3 By covetousness. See 2 Cor. 9:14, 15; 12:17, 18; 1 Tim. 6:5; 1 Pet. 5:2 and note.

■ 2:4 angels who sinned. The meaning of this phrase is disputed. Many view this as an allusion to the sin of the "sons of God" in Gen. 6:1–4 (cf. Jude 6). On this reading, Peter may be assuming for illustrative purposes the elaboration of the Gen. 6 narrative in the apocryphal book of 1 Enoch (Jude 14 note). While "sons of God" can refer to angels (e.g., Job 1:6; 2:1), this interpretation is not without difficulties (Gen. 6:2 note). Others speculate that the "angels who sinned" are the evil angels who sinned before the Fall of humanity in Gen. 3. Either way, the point is that if God judged evil angels, He will certainly judge ungodly people as well.

cast them down to hell. The verb means "to cast into Tartarus." In Greek mythology Tartarus was the place of punishment for departed spirits. Just as Paul can quote an apt verse from a pagan writer for his own purposes (cf. Acts 17:28; Titus 1:12), so Peter here uses Homeric imagery to convey the idea of a special place of confinement until final judgment.

■ 2:5 preacher of righteousness. This description of Noah is unique in Scripture, but is well-known in Jewish tradition. It refers either to exhortations that were not recorded in the Old Testament, or to Noah's lifestyle, that condemned sin and recommended righteous living to his contemporaries (Gen. 6:9).

■ 2:7 righteous Lot. A surprising description in view of the portrait of Lot in Genesis (Gen. 19). Lot's righteousness may have been inferred (either by Peter or extrabiblical tradition) from Abraham's intercession for the righteous of Sodom and Lot's subsequent deliverance.

■ 2:9 then the Lord. The implication of the three examples in vv. 4–8 is clear: God will surely judge the wicked and deliver the righteous.

reserve . . . under punishment. Some commentators and most English translations see here a reference to preliminary punishment before the final judgment. This is the most natural reading of the Greek, although some commentators including Calvin understand it as a reference to future punishment on Judgment Day ("reserve the unjust for punishment on the day of judgment"). Because Peter's concern in this passage is the certainty of final judgment, the latter seems more appropriate to the argument than the former.

■ 2:10 speak evil of dignitaries. Lit. "blaspheming glories," probably a reference to angels. The statement in v. 11 that "whereas angels . . . do not bring a reviling accusation against them" (cf. Jude 10, 11) indicates that evil angels are in view. When warned of the danger of falling into the power of the spiritual forces of evil (cf. 1 Cor. 5:5; 1 Tim. 1:20), the false teachers apparently mocked the power of the devil and his demons.

[f]those who walk according to the flesh in the lust of uncleanness and despise authority. [g]They are presumptuous, self-willed. They are not afraid to speak evil of [3]dignitaries, [11] whereas [h]angels, who are greater in power and might, do not bring a reviling accusation against them before the Lord.

Depravity of False Teachers

[12] But these, [i]like natural brute beasts made to be caught and destroyed, speak evil of the things they do not understand, and will utterly perish in their own corruption, [13][j]and will receive the wages of unrighteousness, as those who count it pleasure [k]to [4]carouse in the daytime. [l]They are spots and blemishes, [5]carousing in their own deceptions while [m]they feast with you, [14] having eyes full of [6]adultery and that cannot cease from sin, enticing unstable souls. [n]They have a heart trained in covetous practices, and are accursed children. [15] They have forsaken the right way and gone astray, following the way of [o]Balaam the son of Beor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness; [16] but he was rebuked for his iniquity: a dumb donkey speaking with a man's voice restrained the madness of the prophet.

[17][p]These are wells without water, [7]clouds carried by a tempest, for whom is reserved the blackness of darkness [8]forever.

Deceptions of False Teachers

[18] For when they speak great swelling words of emptiness, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through lewdness, the ones who [9]have actually escaped from those who live in error. [19] While they promise them liberty, they themselves are slaves of [1]corruption; [q]for by whom a person is overcome, by him also he is brought into [2]bondage. [20] For if, after they [r]have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are [s]again entangled in them and overcome, the latter end is worse for them than the beginning. [21] For [t]it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than having known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered to them. [22] But it has happened to them according to the true proverb: [u]"A dog returns to his own vomit," and, "a sow, having washed, to her wallowing in the mire."

God's Promise Is Not Slack

3 Beloved, I now write to you this second epistle (in both of which [a]I stir up your pure minds by way of reminder), [2] that you may be mindful of the words [b]which were spoken before by

Even today, a flippant attitude toward Satan and his power can lead to spiritual danger.

■ 2:13 their own deceptions while they feast with you. The false teachers were not promoting love at their feasts (Jude 12), but harmful lies. Peter uses a Greek word for "deceptions" which sounds similar to the Greek for "love."

■ 2:14 eyes full of adultery. Lit. "eyes full of an adulterous woman," a vivid portrayal of their insatiable sensuality (v. 2 note).

enticing unstable souls. The word translated "enticing" is translated "allure" in v. 18 (cf. James 1:14). In contrast to the "established" believers of 1:12, the "unstable" lack a firm foundation in the Christian faith, and are easy prey to the enticements of false teachers.

trained in covetous practices. An athletic metaphor, lit. "having a heart exercised (or trained) in greed." At least part of their purpose in making disciples was to profit financially from them (vv. 3, 15).

■ 2:15 way of Balaam. Jewish exegetical tradition had made Balaam proverbial for his greed, so the false teachers with their desire for gain are compared with him (Jude 11). According to Num. 31:16 he was also guilty of leading others into sin.

■ 2:16 dumb donkey. Peter probably intends an ironic contrast with v. 12. While the false teachers resembled "brute beasts" in their slavery to greed, their prototype Balaam was himself rebuked by a beast.

■ 2:17 wells without water. Just as water sustains physical life, so true spiritual teaching nourishes spiritual life (Prov. 13:14; John 4:13–15)—a vivid image in a culture where water was a treasured resource. Like the dry well that only disappoints the thirsty (Jer. 14:3), the false teachers can only deceive and disappoint.

clouds carried by a tempest. Like hazy clouds that provide no refreshing rain (Jude 12), the false teaching cannot provide spiritual sustenance.

■ 2:18 allure . . . the ones who have actually escaped. New converts or those not yet well grounded in the faith fall prey to the false teachers (v. 14 and note).

■ 2:19 they promise them liberty. The false teachers may have used Paul's declaration that the Christian is not under law as the basis for their mistaken teaching that the Christian is free from the restraint of God's moral law (cf. Rom. 6:15; 1 Cor. 9:21; Gal. 5:18).

slaves of corruption. A profound irony of sin is evident here: the quest for freedom from God leads only to slavery to sin and self. True freedom from sin involves joyful "slavery" to God (cf. Rom. 6:18).

■ 2:20–22 The false teachers rather than those who have "actually escaped" (v. 18) are probably in view. These false teachers apparently professed to be Christians, but their return to their old sinful way of life showed that their knowledge of Christ and the way of righteousness was only superficial (v. 1 note).

■ 2:21 better . . . not to have known the way of righteousness. Deliberate rejection of the truth increases one's responsibility before God (Luke 12:47, 48). The phrase "to have known the way" refers to an intellectual knowledge of the ethical teachings and mode of life characteristic of Christians (note the phrase "holy commandment"). Their conversion was illusory. Scripture elsewhere teaches that those who are truly regenerate will persevere in the faith (John 10:26–30; cf. 1 John 2:19).

■ 2:22 A dog . . . a sow. In contrast to the modern view of dogs as "man's best friend," the ancient Jews despised them (Ex. 22:31; Prov. 26:11; Rev. 22:15). Swine were avoided as unclean (Lev. 11:7; Is. 65:4). Peter's point is that mere religious profession or even outward change does not change a person's heart. The apostasy of the false teachers reveals their true nature.

■ 3:1 second epistle. The first letter may well be 1 Peter, and, if so, the recipients of the two letters are the same.

the holy prophets, [c]and of the commandment of [1]us, the apostles of the Lord and Savior, [3] knowing this first: that scoffers will come in the last days, [d]walking according to their own lusts, [4] and saying, "Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of [e]creation." [5] For this they willfully forget: that [f]by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth [g]standing out of water and in the water, [6] [h]by which the world that then existed perished, being flooded with water. [7] But [i]the heavens and the earth which are now preserved by the same word, are reserved for [j]fire until the day of judgment and [2]perdition of ungodly men.

[8] But, beloved, do not forget this one thing, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and [k]a thousand years as one day. [9] [l]The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but [m]is longsuffering toward [3]us, [n]not willing that any should perish but [o]that all should come to repentance.

The Day of the Lord

[10] But [p]the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in which [q]the heavens will pass away with a great noise, and the elements will melt with fervent heat; both the earth and the works that are in it will be [4]burned up. [11] Therefore, since all these things will be dissolved, what manner of persons ought you to be [r]in holy conduct and godliness, [12] [s]looking for and hastening the coming of the day of God, because of which the heavens will [t]be dissolved, being on fire, stir up . . . by way of reminder. If 1 Peter is in view, the reminder is probably Peter's general concern, quite evident in both epistles, that his readers should live holy lives worthy of the gospel.

■ 3:3 the last days. See note on 1 Pet. 1:20.

■ 3:4 the promise of His coming. From the delay in Christ's return, the false teachers wrongly concluded that He would never return to judge them. Peter portrays their scoffing as ironic evidence that the last days are indeed present.

since the fathers fell asleep. Perhaps a reference to Old Testament forefathers (John 6:31; Acts 3:13), though many interpret this as a reference to the deaths of people belonging to the first Christian generation, especially Christian leaders such as Stephen (Heb. 13:7).

■ 3:5, 6 Against the false teacher's denial that God would intervene in history, Peter cites creation and the Flood as prime examples of God's intimate involvement and intervention in the process of history.

■ 3:5 the word of God. His creative command (Gen. 1:3–30; Ps. 33:6; Heb. 11:3). God preceded history; the heavens and earth came into existence only at His command. He created all things out of nothing, by the word of God.

out of water and in the water. God created the earth by separating and gathering the waters (Gen. 1:2, 6–10).

■ 3:6 world . . . perished, being flooded. God also intervened, in judgment, with the Flood (2:5; Gen. 6—8).

■ 3:7 by the same word. The same divine word that created the world and brought judgment at the Flood. Whether manifested by water or fire, the role of God's all-powerful word in creation, in the Flood, and in final judgment is stressed.

reserved for fire. Sodom and Gomorrah serve for Peter as a paradigm of final fiery judgment (2:6). Although this picture of a universal inferno at the last judgment is unique to Peter, the idea of divine judgment by fire is common in the Old Testament (e.g., Deut. 32:22; Is. 66:15, 16; Mal. 4:1) and is found in the New Testament as well (e.g., Matt. 3:12; 1 Cor. 3:13; 2 Thess. 1:7, 8).

■ 3:8 one day . . . a thousand years. Though this passage—and Ps. 90:4 upon which it is based—is sometimes implausibly cited in support of the theory that when a "day" is mentioned in biblical prophecy a literal thousand years is meant, Peter's point is to assert that God is sovereign over time and that His perspective on time differs radically from ours.

■ 3:9 as some count slackness. See v. 4.

longsuffering . . . all should come to repentance. Peter's Christian readers must realize that the apparent delay of divine judgment is a sign of God's forbearance and mercy toward them, particularly toward the believers in their midst who have been confused and misled by the false teachers. Note that the scope of "all" is qualified by the word "us." The repentance in view, for the sake of which God delays judgment, is that of God's people rather than the world at large. God is not willing that any of His elect should perish (John 6:39).

■ 3:10 day of the Lord. The time of divine intervention and judgment (Is. 13:9–13; Joel 1:15; 3:14; 1 Thess. 5:2), synonymous with the Second Coming of Christ (v. 12).

as a thief. Jesus used this metaphor to convey how unexpected the event would be (Luke 12:39, 40).

the heavens . . . with a great noise. The language is reminiscent of the Old Testament and of Jesus Himself (Is. 34:4; 64:1–4; Matt. 24:29–31).

elements. Greek stoicheia, a term used for (a) the elements making up the world (according to the philosophers these were earth, air, fire, and water); (b) heavenly bodies such as the sun, moon, and stars; (c) angelic beings with power over nature (Introduction to Colossians: Interpretive Difficulties). Most interpreters favor (b) or a combination of (b) and (c).

will be burned up. The Greek text of this phrase is disputed (text note). Some manuscripts say "will be found" instead of "will be burned," presumably to mean that the earth and human history will be "found out" or "laid bare" before the eye of God's judgment.

■ 3:12 hastening the coming. Though sometimes translated "eagerly awaiting," the Greek word usually means "hasten." The time of Christ's coming is determined by the sovereign counsel of God, but it does not take place without reference to other events (these too are ordained by God). That God's delay is merciful (v. 9 and note) indicates that the evangelization of the elect is one relevant factor (Mark 13:10). Other factors include prayer (Luke 11:2) and obedience (v. 11). Such a teaching should profoundly encourage Christians. Our actions do matter.

the day of God. An unusual expression (Rev. 16:14), equivalent to "the day of the Lord" (v. 10). The use of the phrases "day of the Lord" and "day of God" for Christ's Second Coming indicates Peter's high Christology: the coming One is none other than God Himself.

Be Steadfast

14 Therefore, beloved, looking forward to these things, be diligent [x]to be found by Him in peace, without spot and blameless; 15 and consider that [y]the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation—as also our beloved brother Paul. according to the wisdom given to him, has written to you, 16 as also in all his [z]epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which are some things hard to understand, which untaught and unstable people twist to their own destruction, as they do also the [a]rest of the Scriptures.

17 You therefore, beloved, [b]since you know this beforehand, [c]beware lest you also fall from your own steadfastness, being led away with the error of the wicked; 18 [d]but grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

wisdom given to him. Tantamount to a claim of divine inspiration for Paul's letters (v. 16 note; cf. Eph. 3:2–7).

■ 3:16 rest of the Scriptures. Peter views Paul's letters in the same category as the inspired, authoritative writings of the Old Testament (v. 15; 1:20, 21), and in harmony with Paul's own claims to unique apostolic authority (Rom. 1:1; 1 Cor. 2:13; Gal. 1:1).

■ 3:17 fall from your own steadfastness. Not that true believers can lose their salvation (2:21 note), but a warning to them of their own weakness and the dangers that surround them, to motivate them to watchfulness and growth in godly living.

the wicked. The false teachers, characterized as people who ignore all moral restraints.

■ 3:18 grow in . . . knowledge. This knowledge is the ever-deepening experience of Christ and understanding of His truth that should characterize the entire course of the believer's life, as opposed to the pretentious, esoteric "knowledge" of the false teachers.

To Him be the glory. This statement presupposes the deity of Christ (v. 12; 1:1 notes). It ascribes glory directly to Him (Rev. 1:5, 6).

forever. Lit. "on the day of eternity." Glory belongs to Christ both now and throughout the endless day that will dawn when He comes again (1:19; Is. 60:19, 20).

The First Epistle of

JOHN

Author In style, diction, and content, 1 John follows the fourth Gospel closely. It is almost certainly by the same author (Introduction to John: Author). While both writings are anonymous, their traditional assignment to John, son of Zebedee, cannot be disproved. It rests on firmer evidence than more speculative proposals, such as John the Elder or John Mark. The emphasis in the opening verse on authoritative proclamation and eyewitness testimony is most naturally seen as a reflection of John's apostolic calling (John 19:35; 20:3–8; 21:24).

Date and Occasion First John was written to warn and instruct the readers about a kind of false teaching that denied Jesus Christ had come in the flesh (4:2, 3). The teaching was that Christ only appeared to be human, so that there was no real incarnation, and no divine Savior who was able to die for sinners. Christ only seemed to die. Such teaching is known from early Christian history and is called "docetism" (from Greek dokeo, "to seem").

Some scholars think that the false teaching was a variety of Gnosticism, a religious movement that connected salvation with an experience of individual, esoteric revelation (gnosis is the Greek word for "knowledge"). An example would be the teaching of the late first-century teacher Cerinthus. Later writers did regard Cerinthus as both Gnostic and docetic, but there is little in 1 John to connect the false teaching opposed there with the specific ideas attributed to Cerinthus, or even to Gnosticism more generally.

Several considerations indicate that 1 John was written after the Gospel of John. First, it refers very briefly to ideas that the Gospel unfolds much more clearly and fully. Apparently the readers are presumed to have knowledge of the Gospel. Second, the conflict with docetism is absent from the Gospel and appears to be a later development. Third, there is no hint in 1 John of the ideological conflict with "the Jews" that pervades the first half of the Gospel. The Gospel shows the Christian community painfully distinguishing itself from the Jewish people, while 1 John reflects a later time, when Christian self-identification was well-established and could be presupposed.

Another indication for the date of 1 John comes from comparison with the letters of Ignatius (about A.D. 110) and Polycarp. These writings criticize false teachings similar to but more developed than those addressed in 1 John. To accommodate this development, 1 John should be dated some years earlier than 110.

Characteristics and Themes

Although 1 John has traditionally been regarded as a letter, it lacks key distinguishing features of a letter (salutation, introductory greeting, final greeting). On the other hand, John addresses the readers as "my little children" (2:1). He seems to be writing to a specific group of people with whom he has a close relationship. In its basic purposes of admonition and instruction, 1 John is similar to most of the New Testament letters.

It is notoriously difficult to outline this brief letter. Its themes seem to be linked loosely together. The language is not difficult or technical, but the ideas are profound. John says that God has been revealed in Christ in order to communicate eternal life to those who believe. God is light, truth, and love—each of these characteristics is the subject of some meditation, but always in connection with the development of corresponding virtues in the believers.

The ideals of purity and love that are held out to the reader are gifts of God, communicated from His self-revelation. At the same time, they are real only in action. This reality is possible through being born again and through the forgiveness of sins.

The enemy of the gospel attacks at every point. He impugns the self-revelation of God by trying to deny that Jesus Christ was incarnated. With this he threatens to undermine the believer's confidence before God. Moreover, the adversary tries to make the case that someone can believe in God without taking part in the love and kindness that is God's nature. This would make salvation also a mere appearance. To the light and truth of the gospel, the antichrist opposes darkness and lies, or the rule of hatred and mental confusion.

Unlike those of Paul, John's ideas are not reasoned logically from point to point. The final statements, that God is light, and that Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sin, are already stated in the first few verses. These he elaborates in a spiritual way throughout what follows. □

What Was Heard, Seen, and Touched

THAT [a]which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have [b]seen with our eyes, [c]which we have looked upon, and [d]our hands have handled, concerning the [e]Word of life— 2 [f]the life [g]was manifested, and we have seen, [h]and bear witness, and declare to you that eternal life which was [i]with the Father and was manifested to us— 3 that which we have seen and heard we declare to you, that you also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is [j]with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ. 4 And these things we write to you [k]that [l]your joy may be full.

Fellowship with Him and One Another

5 [l]This is the message which we have heard from Him and declare to you, that [m]God is light and in Him is no darkness at all. 6 [n]If we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in

■ 1:1–4 The central event of history is the appearance of eternal life in Jesus Christ. John is one of the chosen witnesses who saw, heard, and touched One who had existed from the beginning—the Son of God, whose eternal fellowship with the Father is now extended to others. This extension takes place through the apostolic proclamation, including the writing of 1 John itself.

■ 1:1 the beginning. This verse echoes John 1:1, as that verse in turn echoes Gen. 1:1. The two New Testament verses highlight the Incarnation as an event as significant as creation itself.

heard . . . seen . . . looked upon . . . handled. These vivid verbs defend the reality of the human nature of Christ against the docetic speculation that is later rejected explicitly (2:22; 4:2, 3; Introduction: Date and Occasion).

the Word of life. The subject of John's proclamation is Jesus, the incarnate Word (John 1:1–14).

■ 1:5–10 Like John's Gospel, 1 John begins with a contrast between light and darkness. In the Gospel, the incarnate Christ is the light that continues to shine in the darkness of a world that tries to exclude Him. Believers are faced with a choice: either to "walk in the light," coming to Him and opening their hearts to Him in confession of sin, or to "walk in darkness," denying that they are sinners. The contrast between light and darkness is inseparably linked to a contrast between those who "practice darkness, we lie and do not practice the truth. 7 But if we [o]walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and [p]the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanses us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. 9 If we [q]confess our sins, He is [r]faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to [s]cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 10 If we say that we have not sinned, we [t]make Him a liar, and His word is not in us.

2 My little children, these things I write to you, so that you may not sin. And if anyone sins, [a]we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. 2 And [b]He Himself is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only but [c]also for the whole world.

The Test of Knowing Him

3 Now by this we know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments. 4 He who says, "I know Him," and does not keep His commandments, is a [d]liar, and the truth is not in him. 5 But [e]whoever keeps His word, truly the love of God [1]is perfected [f]in him. By this we know that we are in Him. 6 [g]He who says he abides in Him [h]ought himself also to walk just as He walked.

7 [2]Brethren, I write no new commandment to you, but an old commandment which you have had [i]from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which you heard [3]from the beginning. 8 Again, [j]a new commandment I write to you, which thing is true in Him and in you, [k]because the darkness is passing away, and [l]the true light is already shining.

9 [m]He who says he is in the light, and hates his brother, is in darkness until now. 10 [n]He who loves his brother abides in the light, and [o]there is no cause for stumbling in him. 11 But he who [p]hates his brother is in darkness and [q]walks in darkness, and does not know where he is going, because the darkness has blinded his eyes.

the truth" and agree with God, and those who make God "a liar." It is an inescapable reality that believers sin; the remedy for sin—confession, and cleansing by the blood of Jesus—is God's continuing irrevocable gift to believers. Because Jesus' death has paid in full the penalty for sin, and because God has recognized Jesus as His true Son by raising Him from the dead, God grants forgiveness and cleansing as a matter of faithfulness and justice. He will not and cannot refuse.

■ 1:5 God is light. This description of God emphasizes His attributes of moral purity and omniscience, reinforcing John's focus on our need to confess sin.

■ 1:7 the blood of Jesus Christ. As Heb. 9:22 indicates, "without shedding of blood there is no remission." The shedding of the blood of Christ was a voluntary substitutionary sacrifice of infinite value for the elect; it paid in full God's penalty for sin (Heb. 9:27, 28).

■ 1:9 If we confess our sins. God's forgiveness is given as soon as we admit our need of it, not on the basis of any acts we have done to earn it, but solely because of His grace. The free gift of forgiveness carries with it purification from unrighteousness. God accepts us as righteous because He imputes to us the righteousness of Christ. That is, the very righteousness of Christ our sin-bearer is reckoned to our account.

■ 1:10 If we say that we have not sinned. Perhaps the "sin leading to death" mentioned in 5:16 is a stubborn refusal to accept God's diagnosis of our need and His offer of forgiveness.

■ 2:1–6 Forgiveness does not remove the moral obligation to obey the commands of God. Some readers may take the promise of 1:9 as a license to sin, but John makes clear that this would be to abuse and misapply the promise (v. 1). "Jesus Christ the righteous" is presented as sacrifice, advocate, and example. His atonement is effective for the elect of Israel and of the whole world.

In the Bible, to "know" someone includes close communion and love. To know Christ means to "keep His commandments." This knowledge of Christ is called a "perfected" love of God (v. 5), not because it makes us personally sinless, but because it is irrevocably established in those who live by it. Anyone who presumes to have received forgiveness from God but who spurns the gift of obedient love as unnecessary is a "liar." Instead of receiving "Jesus Christ the righteous" as Savior, such a person manufactures a false christ, a savior who is indifferent to righteousness.

■ 2:1 that you may not sin. John wants his readers to respond to God's mercy with a life of obedience. This is an expression of concern for those among whom he has served (2 John 4–6; 3 John 3, 4). 1 John does not give details about the sins of the readers or of their heretical opponents (unlike, e.g., 1 Corinthians).

Advocate. The Greek word is parakletos, a "helper," such as an attorney in a legal matter. In the Gospel of John it is used of the Holy Spirit (John 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7). The word is not found elsewhere in the New Testament, although it is common in other literature.

■ 2:2 propitiation. A propitiation is a sacrifice to God meant to take away the enmity brought by sin between God and the worshiper. Only Christ can be an effective propitiation.

for the whole world. Christ's sacrifice is sufficient not only for John and his immediate community, but is valid anywhere in the world. It is a sacrifice that requires no addition or supplement.

■ 2:6 walk just as He walked. John assumes that his readers have the kind of knowledge about Jesus' life and purposes that is found in the Gospel.

■ 2:7–11 The commandment of God in Christ is both "old" and "new." It is old, because it dates to the dawn of the Christian era; believers had this command "from the beginning," when Jesus Christ began to teach. It is new because it is continually reapplied in new acts of love, with their source in Him and their outworking "in you." Love belongs to the realm of light, as over against darkness, where hatred still has sway. John speaks of love for the "brother," which Jesus gave as a commandment to His disciples just before His death. John draws sharply the contrast between a Christian community ruled by love, and the hatred that rules outside (John 15:18, 19).

■ 2:7 from the beginning. While John sometimes uses this word to refer to the beginning of all things (vv. 13, 14; 1:1), here he refers to the beginning of the Christian movement in the life and teaching of Jesus (v. 24; 3:11). As the next verse shows, the coming of Jesus was the critical turning point ushering in a new epoch, the dawning of a new day.

Their Spiritual State

12 I write to you, little children,
Because r[your sins are forgiven you for His name's sake.
13 I write to you, fathers,
Because you have known Him who is s[from the beginning.
I write to you, young men,

14 I have written to you, fathers,
Because you have known Him who is from the beginning.
I have written to you, young men,
Because u[you are strong, and the word of God abides in you,
And you have overcome the wicked one.

Do Not Love the World

15 v[Do not love the world or the things in the world. w[If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 16 For all that is in the world—the lust of the flesh, x[the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life—is not of the Father but is of the world. 17 And y[the world is passing away, and the lust of it; but he who does the will of God abides forever.

Deceptions of the Last Hour

18 z[Little children, a[it is the last hour; and as you have heard that b[the e[Antichrist is coming, c[even now many antichrists have come, by which we know d[that it is the last hour. 19 e[They went out from us, but they were not of us; for f[if they had been of us, they would have continued with us; but they went out g[that they might be made manifest, that none of them were of us.

■ 2:12–14 The three groups addressed in these verses are actually one group, the recipients of the letter, characterized in different ways. They are "children" because with the forgiveness of sins they have been welcomed into the family of God their Father. They are "fathers" because their knowledge of God in Jesus Christ qualifies them to hand this knowledge down to future generations. They are called "young men" because their decisive rejection of the evil one is a victory like that of Jesus, who fought with Satan in the desert and won (Matt. 4:1–11).

■ 2:12 for His name's sake. The power of the name of Jesus is central to early Christian proclamation (Acts 2:38; 3:6; 4:12). John 17:11, 12 indicates that God has given His own name to Jesus to protect His disciples and keep them safe. God's name would come to dishonor if His forgiveness should fail.

■ 2:13 you have overcome the wicked one. The theme of overcoming is picked up again in 5:4, 5; there the victory is over "the world" that opposes God. The victory John describes is resisting temptation and keeping faithful to God's word. It contrasts with the defeat of the human race at the Fall (Gen. 3). For John, victory in the battle against temptation has in effect already been won, since our union with God cannot be broken (John 10:27–30).

■ 2:15–17 The moral admonition not to love the world is also practical advice, for it is already clear that the world is passing away (v. 17). As in John's Gospel, the "world" is the system of rebellion and pride that seeks to displace God and His rule. It is this system rather than the created order itself which is "not of the Father" and which has already been marked for judgment and destruction (John 12:31). Those who are not of the world receive the word of the Father from Jesus (John 17:14) and show by their response to it that they are chosen for salvation and eternal life.

■ 2:16 lust . . . pride. Those who love this world (v. 15) are shortsighted; they want to be satisfied and honored now (Luke 6:24–26). In contrast, those who love the Father have a long-term perspective and wait for God's reward (Luke 6:20–23).

■ 2:17 he who does the will of God abides forever. John is not teaching that our obedience merits eternal life. Only the obedience of Jesus could satisfy God's demands. Believers receive eternal life as a gift (5:11), and the gift of love transforms them so that they do God's will in gratitude (3:16).

■ 2:18–28 From the time that Jesus pronounced judgment on this world, "the last hour" has been upon it, a final intensification of opposition to God that ends with the final Judgment. The prediction of "the Antichrist" is not from the Old Testament but from Jesus (Matt. 24:5, 24). This prediction began to be fulfilled in the New Testament era with those who denied the Father and the Son (v. 22) and left the church to propagate their false teaching (v. 19). Their denial of the Son was a rejection of the Father who sent Him (2:23; John 15:23). In contrast to the antichrists, believers have an anointing from the Holy Spirit (vv. 20, 27) that opens their hearts and minds to know the saving truth. The Spirit Himself is the best teacher; He will remain with us always and protect us from falsehoods that could lead us away from Christ. The Spirit abides wherever the message of the gospel is received, and wherever the Spirit abides, the Son and the Father are present as well (v. 24).

■ 2:18 it is the last hour. John will not satisfy the desire to "know times or seasons which the Father has put in His own authority" (Acts 1:7); he characterizes the whole time between the first and the second comings of Christ as "the last hour" (cf. Acts 2:17; 1 Cor. 10:11). No matter how long this "hour" may extend in terms of calendar time, it remains true that "the time is near" (Rev. 1:3; cf. Rev. 1:1; 22:20) for all of God's promises to be fulfilled.

the Antichrist is coming . . . many antichrists have come. This is commonly seen as a distinct prediction of many antichrists through the course of history, followed by a final Antichrist at the end (2 Thess. 2:3–10; Rev. 13:11–18). John, however, may be referring only to the sort of false teachers who already trouble the church (v. 22; 4:3).

■ 2:19 They went out from us. Paul too warns against false teachers who will arise from among the believers (Acts 20:29–31). As in the case of Simon the sorcerer (Acts 8:9–24), visible membership in the church does not guarantee salvation. Inward apathy or hostility to the gospel may be masked by outward conformity. The false teachers revealed their hostility not just by leaving, but by the way they left. Because they went out to oppose the word of the gospel, their departure was as much a renunciation of the church and its message as was Judas's departure from the Last Supper (John 13:30).

20 But [h]you have an anointing [i]from the Holy One, and [j]you[5] know all things. 21 I have not written to you because you do not know the truth, but because you know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 [k]Who is a liar but he who denies that [l]Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist who denies the Father and the Son. 23 [m]Whoever denies the Son does not have the [n]Father either; [o]he who acknowledges the Son has the Father also.

Let Truth Abide in You

24 Therefore let that abide in you [p]which you heard from the beginning. If what you heard from the beginning abides in you, [q]you also will abide in the Son and in the Father. 25 [r]And this is the promise that He has promised us—eternal life.

26 These things I have written to you concerning those who try to [6]deceive you. 27 But the [s]anointing which you have received from Him abides in you, and [t]you do not need that anyone teach you; but as the same anointing [u]teaches you concerning all things, and is true, and is not a lie, and just as it has taught you, you [7]will abide in Him.

The Children of God

28 And now, little children, abide in Him, that [8]when He appears, we may have [v]confidence and not be ashamed before Him at His coming. 29 [w]If you know that He is righteous, you know that [x]everyone who practices righteousness is born of Him.

3 Behold [a]what manner of love the Father has bestowed on us, that [b]we should be called children of [1]God! Therefore the world does not know [2]us, [c]because it did not know Him. 2 Beloved, [d]now we are children of God; and [e]it has not yet been revealed what we shall be, but we know that when He is revealed, [f]we shall be like Him, for [g]we shall see Him as He is. 3 [h]And everyone who has this hope in Him purifies himself, just as He is pure.

Sin and the Child of God

4 Whoever commits sin also commits lawlessness, and [i]sin is lawlessness. 5 And you know [j]that He was manifested [k]to take away our sins, and [l]in Him there is no sin. 6 Whoever abides in Him does not sin. Whoever sins has neither seen Him nor known Him.

■ 2:20 an anointing from the Holy One. "Christ" means "Anointed," referring to the unique office of Jesus as God's Savior. God anointed Jesus directly with the Holy Spirit to be the consummate Prophet, Priest, and King (Acts 10:38; Heb. 1:1–9). Believers also have prophetic, priestly, and kingly responsibilities and are anointed with the Holy Spirit (2 Cor. 1:21, 22) for these duties (1 Cor. 12).

■ 2:22 denies that Jesus is the Christ. To separate Christ the Savior from Jesus the man was a hallmark of docetism, the heresy that Christ only appeared to be a human being (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

■ 2:25 eternal life. This is the supreme gift of God, mediated by Jesus Christ (John 5:24–27) and given freely to the redeemed through faith in Christ (5:11, 13; John 3:16).

■ 2:27 you do not need that anyone teach you. Believers have an illumination from God through the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who accompanies the Word and keeps us in the truth of the gospel. It is no contradiction that we should listen receptively to other believers, especially when they admonish and instruct us. They also have the Spirit, and the confusion generated by false teaching is a real danger (Matt. 24:24).

■ 2:28 at His coming. John refers to the visible and final return of Christ at the end of the age. At that time Christ will come as the Judge, but those who "abide in" Him by continuing to trust in the gospel message (v. 24) need have no fear of condemnation (John 3:17, 18). See "The Return of Jesus Christ" at 1 Thess. 4:16.

■ 2:29—3:3 As those taught by the Spirit, believers know an entire system of truth and life that remains hidden to those who are in the world. Essential to this is knowing that although for the time being it may not be outwardly recognized, we can still be sure that we are "children of God" and "born of Him." The public revelation of this truth waits for the public revelation of God Himself "when He is revealed," at the Second Coming. True children of God will bear the family likeness, both now, as our hope lends our lives a focused purity resembling His, and at the end, when "we shall be like Him." Only then will our knowledge of Him be complete, but even now our knowledge that "He is righteous" will bring increasing righteousness to our own lives.

■ 3:3 this hope. The promise of His appearing fills believers, not with apprehension, but with confidence (1 Thess. 5:4).

■ 3:4–10 The basic contrast between light and darkness, between the children of God and of the world, is now explained as a contrast between those who sin and those who do not. Jesus was sinless, and what is more He came to take away sin (v. 5; John 1:29). The New Birth sets a person irrevocably against sin, and because the seed of new life "remains" in that person (v. 9; cf. John 10:28, 29), the defeat of corruption and death for him is inevitable. In this sense sin will be impossible (Rom. 6:8, 9). John addresses this absolute aspect of being born again and speaks accordingly. He is not denying that sin and death have influence until the very end (1 Cor. 15:26; Rev. 20:14). He says clearly that in this life no one can be without sin (1:8).

■ 3:4 lawlessness. Though the Old Testament is not quoted explicitly in 1 John, its authority is presupposed. In particular, the moral law, summed up in the law of love, is still the norm for God's people (Rom. 13:8–10). "Lawlessness" is disobedience to that law.

■ 3:6 does not sin. Whoever sins. The present tense of the Greek suggests behavior that is characteristic or usual. In this way John acknowledges, but does not excuse, the possibility of occasional sin. Another possibility is that John has in mind the specific sin of apostasy, mentioned in 2:19 (cf. also 5:16–18). If so, John means that true believers will not totally abandon their faith.

7 Little children, let no one deceive you. He who practices righteousness is righteous, just as He is righteous. 8 [m]He who sins is of the devil, for the devil has sinned from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, [n]that He might destroy the works of the devil. 9 Whoever has been [o]born of God does not sin, for [p]His seed remains in him; and he cannot sin, because he has been born of God.

The Imperative of Love

10 In this the children of God and the children of the devil are manifest: Whoever does not practice righteousness is not of God, nor is he who does not love his brother. 11 For this is the message that you heard from the beginning, [q]that we should love one another, 12 not as [r]Cain who was of the wicked one and murdered his brother. And why did he murder him? Because his works were evil and his brother's righteous.

13 Do not marvel, my brethren, if [s]the world hates you. 14 We know that we have passed from

Antinomianism

Antinomianism means "opposed to law." Antinomian views are those denying that God's law in Scripture should directly control the Christian's life.

Dualistic antinomianism appeared early in the Gnostic heresies, like those opposed by Peter and Jude (2 Pet. 2; Jude 4–19). The Gnostics taught that salvation was for the soul only, making bodily behavior irrelevant both to God's interest and to the soul's health. The conclusion was that one may behave riotously and it will not matter.

A "spiritual" antinomianism puts such trust in the Holy Spirit's inward prompting as to deny any need to be taught by the law how to live. Freedom from the law as a way of salvation is assumed to bring with it freedom from the law as a guide to conduct. In the first 150 years of the Reformation era this kind of antinomianism was common. The Corinthian church may have been in the grip of this error, since Paul warns them that a truly spiritual person acknowledges the authority of God's Word (1 Cor. 14:37; cf. 7:40).

Another kind of antinomianism begins from the point that God does not see the sin in believers, because they are in Christ, who kept the law for them. From this they draw the false conclusion that their behavior makes no difference, provided they keep on believing. But 1 John 1:8—2:1 and 3:4–10 point in a different direction. It is not possible to be in Christ and at the same time to embrace sin as a way of life.

Some dispensationalists have held that since Christians live under a dispensation of grace, not law, keeping the moral law is at no stage necessary for them. Rom. 3:31 and 1 Cor. 6:9–11 clearly show, however, that keeping the law is a continuing obligation for Christians.

It is sometimes said that the motive and intention of "love" is the only law God requires of Christians. The commands of the Decalogue and other ethical parts of Scripture, although they are ascribed to God directly, are regarded as no more than guidelines that love may at any time disregard. But Rom. 13:8–10 teaches that specific commands reveal what true love is. The law of God exposes the counterfeit love that will not accept its responsibilities toward God and neighbor.

The moral law revealed in the Decalogue and expounded in other parts of the Bible is an expression of God's righteousness, given to be a code of practice for God's people in every age. The law is not opposed to the love and goodness of God, but shows what it is in action. The Spirit gives Christians the power to observe the law, making us more and more like Christ, the archetypal observer of the law (Matt. 5:17). □

■ 3:7 practices righteousness. See theological note "Antinomianism."

■ 3:8 destroy the works of the devil. The opposition between Christ and Satan was foretold as early as Gen. 3:15. Satan used the righteous law of God as a tool to hold sinners captive to the fear of death and condemnation. By accepting in His own Person the penalty due to sinners under the law, Christ took away the foundation of Satan's plan (Heb. 2:14, 15).

■ 3:11–15 The history of the world is the story of hatred, right back to the archetypal conflict between Cain and Abel. John traces Cain's hatred to the radical difference of his motivations from those of Abel (John 3:19; 8:37), a difference that will always exist between the world and the people of God (v. 13). When the fellowship of believers is free from animosity, as John expects it will be, we know that we "have passed from death to life" (v. 14). But if such animosity invades the fellowship, it does so only by rejection of "the message that you heard from the beginning" (v. 11).

■ 3:11 love one another. The command of Christ, founded on His own gift of love (v. 16; John 13:34, 35).

■ 3:12 Cain. Gen. 4:5 explains that Cain envied Abel because Abel's offering was accepted by God.

death to life, because we love the brethren. He who does not love [3]his brother abides in death. [15] [t]Whoever hates his brother is a murderer, and you know that [u]no murderer has eternal life abiding in him.

The Outworking of Love

[16] [v]By this we know love, [w]because He laid down His life for us. And we also ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. [17] But [x]whoever has this world's goods, and sees his brother in need, and shuts up his heart from him, how does the love of God abide in him?

[18] My little children, [y]let us not love in word or in tongue, but in deed and in truth. [19] And by this we [4]know [z]that we are of the truth, and shall [5]assure our hearts before Him. [20] [a]For if our heart condemns us, God is greater than our heart, and knows all things. [21] Beloved, if our heart does not condemn us, [b]we have confidence toward God. [22] And [c]whatever we ask we receive from Him, because we keep His commandments [d]and do those things that are pleasing in His sight. [23] And this is His commandment: that we should believe on the name of His Son Jesus Christ [e]and love one another, as He gave [6]us commandment.

The Spirit of Truth and the Spirit of Error

[24] Now [f]he who keeps His commandments [g]abides in Him, and He in him. And [h]by this we know that He abides in us, by the Spirit whom He has given us.

4 Beloved, do not believe every spirit, but [a]test the spirits, whether they are of God; because [b]many false prophets have gone out into the world. [2] By this you know the Spirit of God: [c]Every spirit that confesses that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh is of God, [3] and every spirit that does not confess [1]that Jesus [2]Christ has come in the flesh is not of God. And this is the spirit of the Antichrist, which you have heard was coming, and is now already in the world.

[4] You are of God, little children, and have overcome them, because He who is in you is greater than [d]he who is in the world. [5] [e]They are of the world. Therefore they speak as of the world, and [f]the world hears them. [6] We are of God. He who knows God hears us; he who is not of God does not hear us. [g]By this we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error.

Knowing God Through Love

[7] [h]Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God; and everyone who [i]loves is born of God and knows God. [8] He who does not love does not know God, for God is love. [9] [j]In this the

■ 3:16–24 Mutual love in the fellowship is evidence of new life. It is based on the love of Jesus Christ, who "laid down His life" in our place. Measuring ourselves against such an example, our heart may "condemn us" (v. 20), and our confidence can only be restored by someone greater than our hearts—God Himself. God, who "knows all things," has proved His love for sinners by the gift of His Son (4:10; Rom. 5:8). Confidence founded on this reality carries with it the assurance that our deeds are also accepted by God (v. 22), and when guilt is dealt with we are released to pray unhindered (v. 22). Confident prayer is a hallmark of the children of God (John 15:7; Rom. 8:15, 16).

■ 3:16 laid down His life. Christ accepted the painful death of the Cross so that we might be saved from eternal punishment (John 10:11). Our love for one another may not require such a costly decision as this, but there must be some decision and action. John mentions material assistance as one example (v. 17; James 1:27).

■ 3:20 God is greater than our heart. The Word of God which acquits us must prevail over the word of our hearts that condemns us.

■ 3:22 whatever we ask. Jesus expressed such confidence in the Father (John 11:41, 42) and encouraged His disciples to have similar confidence (John 14:13, 14). This confidence depends on the awareness that our desires are attuned to God's (5:14, 15).

■ 3:23 this is His commandment. The two parts of this commandment parallel the two parts of the Ten Commandments, reminding us that our relationship with God takes precedence over our relationship with our neighbor. Faith in Christ relates us rightly to God, and His renewing grace enables us to love one another.

■ 4:1–6 God's gift of His one Holy Spirit stands in contrast to the many lying spirits that drive false prophets into the world to spread opposition to Christ (2:18). Like Paul in 1 Cor. 12:3, John shows how to distinguish the Spirit of Truth from spirits of error: those who confess Jesus as the Messiah are from God, while those who will not confess Jesus are not. This confession is the great divide between those "of God" and those who are "of the world."

■ 4:1 gone out into the world. See note on 2:19.

■ 4:2 Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. John distinguishes the gospel from the error of the docetists who said that Jesus Christ was not truly human (Introduction: Date and Occasion). The humanity of Christ was essential if He was to die for our sins.

■ 4:3 the Antichrist. See note on 2:18.

■ 4:4 he who is in the world. In its hostility to God, the world is pervaded by the purposes of the devil, who has captured the human race through temptation (5:19).

■ 4:6 of God. The Holy Spirit unites believers. See "The Local Church" at Rev. 2:1.

■ 4:7–12 The love of God the Father for "His only begotten Son" (v. 9) is the source of the love that binds the fellowship of believers together as a family. By giving us His Son, the Father introduced us to the perfect love and eternal life that the Father and the Son have always enjoyed.

■ 4:9 only begotten Son. This means that Jesus is God's Son in eternity, as the Second Person of the Trinity. The Greek can also be translated "one and only Son," referring to Christ's uniqueness rather than to His eternal generation.

love of God was manifested toward us, that God has sent His only begotten [k]Son into the world, that we might live through Him. 10 In this is love, [l]not that we loved God, but that He loved us and sent His Son [m]to be the propitiation for our sins. 11 Beloved, [n]if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another.

Seeing God Through Love

12 [o]No one has seen God at any time. If we love one another, God abides in us, and His love has been perfected in us. 13 [p]By this we know that we abide in Him, and He in us, because He has given us of His Spirit. 14 And [q]we have seen and testify that [r]the Father has sent the Son as Savior of the world. 15 [s]Whoever confesses that Jesus is the Son of God, God abides in him, and he in God. 16 And we have known and believed the love that God has for us. God is love, and [t]he who abides in love abides in God, and God [u]in him.

The Consummation of Love

17 Love has been perfected among us in this: that [v]we may have boldness in the day of judgment; because as He is, so are we in this world. 18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casts out fear, because fear involves torment. But he who fears has not been made perfect in love. 19 [w]We love [3]Him because He first loved us.

Obedience by Faith

20 [x]If someone says, "I love God," and hates his brother, he is a liar; for he who does not love his brother whom he has seen, [4]how can he love God [y]whom he has not seen? 21 And [z]this commandment we have from Him: that he who loves God must love his brother also.

5 Whoever believes that [a]Jesus is the Christ is [b]born of God, and everyone who loves Him who begot also loves him who is begotten of Him. 2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and [c]keep His commandments. 3 [d]For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments. And [e]His commandments are not burdensome. 4 For [f]whatever is born of God overcomes the world. And this is the victory that [g]has overcome the world—[1]our faith. 5 Who is he who overcomes the world, but [h]he who believes that Jesus is the Son of God?

The Certainty of God's Witness

6 This is He who came [i]by water and blood—Jesus Christ; not only by water, but by water and blood. [j]And it is the Spirit who bears witness, because the Spirit is truth. 7 For there are three that

■ 4:10 propitiation for our sins. See note on 2:2. Christ turned away the righteous anger of God and satisfied the demands of His justice on our behalf. It was to fulfill God's love that He did this.

■ 4:14 Savior of the world. See note on 2:2.

■ 4:16 God is love. God's love is shown in His covenant faithfulness and in His relentless pursuit of sinners in spite of their rebellion or indifference (v. 8; Ex. 34:5–7).

■ 4:17 so are we. Though not like Christ in the completeness of our obedience, we are like Him in our basic orientation, and stand out as He did by contrast with the world at large (John 17:16).

■ 4:18 not been made perfect in love. God's love is perfect in itself, and it brings to us the sure promise of perfection as soon as we receive it (vv. 12, 17; 2:5). But because we are being made perfect in His love over time (3:2), the remnants of fear may temporarily coexist with love. "Perfect love" from God "casts out fear" progressively rather than instantaneously.

■ 5:4 overcomes the world. See note on 2:13.

■ 5:6 by water and blood. Some suggest that the water refers to the Baptism of Jesus and the blood to the Crucifixion. This is unlikely, since John in his Gospel does not directly recount the baptism of Jesus. Others

The Quality of Love (4:19)

The Source of Love	The Effect of Love
God personifies love (4:8, 16)	We reflect God's love in the world (4:7)
God loved us (4:19)	We love God; fear is cast out; we keep His commands (4:18, 19; 5:3)
God gave His Son for us (4:9, 10)	We give our substance for others (3:17; 4:11)
Christ laid down His life for us (3:16)	We lay down our lives for others (3:16) bear witness [2]in heaven: the Father, [k]the Word, and the Holy Spirit; [l]and these three are one. [8] And there are three that bear witness on earth: [m]the Spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three agree as one.

[9] If we receive [n]the witness of men, the witness of God is greater; [o]for this is the witness of [3]God which He has testified of His Son. [10] He who believes in the Son of God [p]has the witness in himself; he who does not believe God [q]has made Him a liar, because he has not believed the testimony that God has given of His Son. [11] And this is the testimony: that God has given us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. [12] [r]He who has the Son has [4]life; he who does not have the Son of God does not have [4]life. [13] These things I have written to you who believe in the name of the Son of God, that you may know that you have eternal life, [5]and that you may continue to believe in the name of the Son of God.

Confidence and Compassion in Prayer

[14] Now this is the confidence that we have in Him, that [s]if we ask anything according to His will, He hears us. [15] And if we know that He hears us, whatever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we have asked of Him.

[16] If anyone sees his brother sinning a sin which does not lead to death, he will ask, and [t]He will give him life for those who commit sin not leading to death. [u]There is sin leading to death. [v]I do not say that he should pray about that. [17] [w]All unrighteousness is sin, and there is sin not leading to death.

Knowing the True—Rejecting the False

[18] We know that [x]whoever is born of God does not sin; but he who has been born of God [y]keeps[6] [7]himself, and the wicked one does not touch him.

[19] We know that we are of God, and [z]the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one.

[20] And we know that the [a]Son of God has come and [b]has given us an understanding, [c]that we may know Him who is true; and we are in Him who is true, in His Son Jesus Christ. [d]This is the true God [e]and eternal life.

[21] Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

suggest that "water and blood" refers to the two sacraments, baptism and the Lord's Supper. This is also unlikely, since John does not recount the institution of the sacraments in his Gospel. The difficult saying of this verse probably reflects John 19:34. In John's Gospel, the testimony God bears to Jesus His Son is a key theme. The blood and water that flowed from Jesus after His death attested to the reality of His death; the wound in Jesus' side later confirmed the reality of His bodily resurrection (John 20:20, 25–27). Both the death and the resurrection were denied by the docetists, who denied the humanity of Christ (4:2).

■ 5:7 three that bear witness. See "One and Three: The Trinity" at Is. 44:6.

■ 5:9 the witness of God is greater. By appealing directly to God as witness, John, like Jesus, overrules all human dispute (John 5:31–39).

■ 5:11 eternal life . . . in His Son. This is the cardinal truth of the Christian message.

■ 5:13 John's Gospel was written to move readers to faith in Jesus that they might receive eternal life (John 20:31). This letter was written to assure those who have believed that they actually possess the priceless gift.

■ 5:16 sin leading to death. Some connect this sin with the unforgivable sin mentioned in Matt. 12:31, 32; Mark 3:28–30; Luke 12:8–10. More likely, John is referring to a stubborn refusal to accept the message of the gospel (1:10 note; John 8:24). See "The Unpardonable Sin" at Mark 3:29.

■ 5:18 does not sin. See note on 3:6.

■ 5:19 the sway of the wicked one. No one can escape the devil's net of temptation, sin, and condemnation without divine help. But neither can people escape their responsibility by trying to blame another agent, even the devil, for their own condition (Gen. 3:12, 13). Paradoxically, enslavement to sin is voluntary (James 1:13–15). Only the Son of God can break this bondage and replace it with a life of forgiveness, gratitude, and obedience (3:8).

■ 5:20 in Him who is true. Being in God who is true and being in His Son Jesus Christ go together inseparably. The grammar of this verse is difficult, but it is most reasonable to understand that "the true God and eternal life" is Jesus Christ. If the phrase refers back to the Father the verse becomes needlessly repetitive. Moreover, the phrase "eternal life" is applied to Christ in 1:2 as well.

The Second Epistle of

JOHN

Author The style, diction, and content of 2 John mark it as written by the same author as 1 John and the Gospel of John. This author has been traditionally identified as the apostle John, son of Zebedee, and no more plausible ascription has been proposed.

Date and Occasion Second John was written to warn against the same strain of false teaching which 1 John opposes, namely "docetism" (see "Introduction to 1 John: Date and Occasion"). It must have been written at about the same time, in the last two decades of the first century. While it repeates ideas from 1 John, it does not presuppose knowledge of 1 John on the part of the reader.

Characteristics and Themes

Second John is a letter, with salutation, introductory greeting, and final greeting. It is written to a Christian lady and her family, either her natural family or the fellowship of believers associated with her. Like the early letters of Paul, it is a letter of encouragement and warning written to a specific fellowship for which the author has pastoral responsibility. □

Outline of 2 John

I. Salutation and Greeting (vv. 1–3)
II. Love and Obedience (vv. 4–6)
III. The Danger of False Teaching (vv. 7–11)
IV. Conclusion and Farewell (vv. 12, 13)

Greeting the Elect Lady

1 THE Elder,

To the [1]elect lady and her children, whom I love in truth, and not only I, but also all those who have known [a]the truth, [2] because of the truth which abides in us and will be with us forever:

3 [b]Grace, mercy, and peace will be with [2]you from God the Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.

1 [a]Col. 1:5
[1] chosen

3 [b]Rom. 1:7; 1 Tim. 1:2 [2]NU, M us

■ 1–3 The author identifies himself only as "the Elder" and the addressee only as "the elect lady." These terms are appropriate for a relationship of mutual love and respect in which the author has had pastoral responsibility for the addressee. John's concern for her depends on the truth all Christians share and is an example of the love that binds all Christians together.

■ 1 the Elder. There is no real difficulty with an apostle identifying himself as an elder, since the responsibilities of an apostle toward each individual congregation were the same as the responsibilities of an elder (1 Pet. 5:1–4).

the elect lady. Some consider this expression and the similar expression in v. 13 as a metaphor for a church, but such usage is otherwise unknown.

■ 3 Grace, mercy, and peace. Like the apostle Paul, John begins his greeting with mention of the rich Christian blessings of grace and peace (Gal. 1:3 note), but adds "mercy." The source of this blessed "grace, mercy, and peace" is none other than God Himself, who is truth (John 14:6; 1 John 5:6) and love (1 John 4:8).

Walk in Christ's Commandments

4 I [c]rejoiced greatly that I have found some of your children walking in truth, as we received commandment from the Father. 5 And now I plead with you, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment to you, but that which we have had from the beginning: [d]that we love one another. 6 [e]This is love, that we walk according to His commandments. This is the commandment, that [f]as you have heard from the beginning, you should walk in it.

Beware of Antichrist Deceivers

7 For [g]many deceivers have gone out into the world [h]who do not confess Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh. [i]This is a deceiver and an antichrist. 8 [j]Look to yourselves, [k]that [3]we do not lose those things we worked for, but that [3]we may receive a full reward.

The Humanity of Jesus

Jesus was a man who convinced those closest to Him that He was also God; His humanness is not in doubt. John's condemnation of those who denied that "Jesus Christ has come in the flesh" (1 John 4:2, 3; 2 John 7) was aimed at teachers who replaced the Incarnation with the idea that Jesus was a supernatural being (not God) who seemed human but was really only so in appearance, a messenger who could not die for sins.

The Gospels show Jesus experiencing human limitations (hunger, Matt. 4:2; fatigue, John 4:6; ignorance of fact, Luke 8:45–47) and sorrow (John 11:35, 38). Hebrews stresses that if Christ had not shared all these facets of human experience—weakness, temptation, pain—He would not be qualified to help us as we face such trials (Heb. 2:17, 18; 4:15, 16; 5:2, 7–9). As it is, His full human experience guarantees that in every moment of our relationship with God we may go to Him, confident that He has been there before us, and is the helper we need.

Christians, focusing on Jesus' deity, have sometimes thought that it honors Jesus to minimize His humanness. For example, it is sometimes suggested that Jesus was always consciously omniscient, and only pretended to be ignorant of facts. Or it might be thought that He only pretended to be hungry and weary, because as a kind of superman He was above the needs of daily existence. But the Incarnation means that the Son of God has only one Person, existing in two natures, and there is nothing lacking from His human nature, sin only excepted. The idea that Jesus' two natures were like alternating electrical circuits, so that sometimes He acted in His humanity and sometimes in His divinity, is also mistaken.

Jesus could not sin, but he was able to be tempted. Satan tempted Him to disobey the Father through self-gratification, self-display, and self-aggrandizement (Matt. 4:1–11), and the temptation to retreat from the Cross was constant (Luke 22:28; cf. Matt. 16:23; and Jesus' prayer in Gethsemane). Being human, Jesus could not conquer temptation without a struggle, but being divine it was His nature to do His Father's will (John 5:19, 30), and therefore to resist and fight temptation until He had overcome it. Since His human nature was conformed to His divine nature, it was impossible that He should fail in the course of His resistance. It was inevitable that He would endure temptations to the end, feeling their entire force, and emerge victorious for His people. From Gethsemane we know how acute and agonizing His struggles were. The happy result for us is that because "He Himself has suffered, being tempted, He is able to aid those who are tempted" (Heb. 2:18). □

■ 4–6 The elder and the lady share the joy of seeing members of her household continue to be faithful to the truth. The mark of Christian faithfulness is love for one another, the central command given to Christians by Jesus Himself (John 13:34). That love is defined by all the commands Christ gave His followers.

■ 5 not . . . a new commandment. See note on 1 John 2:7–11.

■ 7–11 False teachers had been troubling some of the Christian communities by attacking the central truth of the gospel—that Jesus is the Anointed One, the eternal Son of God who took on human nature to accomplish salvation (1 John 2:22; 4:2, 3). To reject this truth is to reject all hope of reconciliation with God, while to receive it is to receive God Himself. John warns the lady and her household that the work of false teachers threatens their spiritual progress and even their hope of eternal reward. In the face of such dangers, the only safe course is to avoid all involvement with the false teachers.

■ 10 do not receive him into your house nor greet him. This stern measure contrasts sharply with the exhortation given in 3 John 5–8 to welcome believers who proclaim the truth.

■ 12, 13 A letter is no substitute for personal fellowship. John hopes to share with his readers the mutual encouragement that can only take place in person. He closes by bringing greetings from one Christian community to another, a common practice in apostolic letters and a reminder of Christian unity.

The Third Epistle of

JOHN

Author The third letter of John is by the author of 2 John, as indicated by key similarities of style and structure. Like the Gospel of John and 1 and 2 John, the traditional ascription to the apostle John cannot be disproved and is more likely than any alternative.

Date and Occasion While 1 and 2 John celebrate truths that unite all Christians, 3 John laments the petty rivalry that sets Christians against one another. In particular, the letter was occasioned by a sharp conflict between Diotrephes (apparently an elder in a congregation under John's care) and others in the congregation over hospitality shown to traveling missionaries. It is likely that Demetrius, who is commended to Gaius by the letter, was himself such a traveling missionary in need of temporary lodging.

There is no trace in 3 John of the christological conflict that looms large in 1 and 2 John, and it may be that 3 John was written earlier than either 1 or 2 John, possibly in the eighties of the first century.

Characteristics and Themes Third John is marked by its salutation, introductory greeting, and final greeting as a letter. More specifically, it is a letter of commendation introducing Demetrius to the recipient, Gaius. □

Greeting to Gaius

THE Elder,

To the beloved Gaius, [a]whom I love in truth:

[2] Beloved, I pray that you may prosper in all things and be in health, just as your soul prospers. [3] For I [b]rejoiced greatly when brethren came and testified of the truth that is in you, just as you walk in the truth. [4] I have no greater [c]joy than to hear that [d]my children walk in [1]truth.

Gaius Commended for Generosity

[5] Beloved, you do faithfully whatever you do for the brethren [2]and for strangers, [6] who have borne witness of your love before the church. If you send them forward on their journey in a manner worthy of God, you will do well, [7] because they went forth for His name's sake, [e]taking

Diotrephes and Demetrius

9 I wrote to the church, but Diotrephes, who loves to have the preeminence among them, does not receive us. 10 Therefore, if I come, I will call to mind his deeds which he does, [g]prating[4] against us with malicious words. And not content with that, he himself does not receive the brethren, and forbids those who wish to, putting them out of the church.

11 Beloved, [h]do not imitate what is evil, but what is good. [i]He who does good is of God, [5]but he who does evil has not seen [j]God.

12 Demetrius [k]has a good testimony from all, and from the truth itself. And we also [6]bear witness, [l]and you know that our testimony is true.

Farewell Greeting

13 [m]I had many things to write, but I do not wish to write to you with pen and ink; 14 but I hope to see you shortly, and we shall speak face to face.

gospel (1 John 4:1–3; 2 John 10, 11). Those who proclaim the message and those who encourage and support them work together in serving the truth.

■ 7 Gentiles. Those who are not God's people. Such usage indicates that the Christian community (made up of ethnic Jews and Gentiles) had come to see itself as the new Israel.

■ 9, 10 The cooperation and love that should be normal among Christians had been broken by the behavior of Diotrephes, who abused his position of leadership in the congregation by attacking other Christian workers. Evidently Diotrephes regarded other Christian teachers as threats rather than as coworkers. Proud and selfish, he turned away traveling evangelists and punished with excommunication those who welcomed them.

■ 9 I wrote to the church. A previous letter that has not survived.

■ 10 If I come, I will call to mind his deeds. The author's understated response to Diotrephes's severe provocation indicates his pastoral sensitivity, but also leaves no doubt that his visit will put a decisive stop to Diotrephes's behavior. The apostle's personal presence was an extension of the authoritative presence of Christ, both for encouragement and for warning (2 Cor. 13:1–3, 10).

■ 11 Tyranny like that of Diotrephes reflects the opposite of the love of God; the temptation to respond in kind must be resisted.

■ 12 The body of the letter closes with a commendation of Demetrius, the bearer of the letter, as a faithful Christian. Such commendation by name, like the naming of the addressee of the letter, was necessary to ensure that the letter was neither suppressed nor misused by those who, like Diotrephes, would disrupt the unity of the congregation (v. 9). Demetrius may have been a traveling teacher himself; if so, John's letter would encourage Gaius to show hospitality.

■ 13, 14 The letter concludes in a way similar to 2 John 12, 13, with some difference of wording but the same personal touch.

The Epistle of JUDE

Author The author of this epistle identifies himself as "Jude, a bondservant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James" (v. 1). The name "Judah" (Greek Judas; English "Jude") was common among first-century Jews, and at least eight different persons of that name are mentioned in the New Testament, including two of Jesus' disciples (Luke 6:16). The author cannot, therefore, be identified on the basis of name alone.

The best clue to his identity is the description "brother of James" (v. 1). The only James known well enough in the early church to be referred to in this unqualified way is James, the prominent church leader (Acts 12:17; 15:13), author of the epistle that bears his name, and half brother of Jesus (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3; Gal. 1:19). If this identification of James is correct, the author of the present epistle is Jude, the half brother of Jesus (Matt. 13:55; Mark 6:3), who along with his other brothers did not believe in Jesus until after the Resurrection (Mark 3:21, 31; John 7:5; Acts 1:14).

Jude might be one of those referred to at another point in the New Testament, in Paul's reference to the itinerant ministry of the Lord's brothers and their wives (1 Cor. 9:5). Probably it is Jude's humility that explains why he does not mention that he was related to Jesus (note the similar reserve in James 1:1).

Several objections to the authenticity of Jude have been raised, but all rest on questionable assumptions or exegesis. Most are linked with proposing a date too late for Jude's lifetime ("Date and Occasion" below). Some argue that the quality of the Greek used in this epistle is better than one could expect of a Galilean, but Galilee was bilingual (Greek and Aramaic) in the first century, and too little is known about Jude's Greek to conclude that he could not have written this letter. We can accept that the author is Jude, the brother of Jesus.

Despite its brevity, the epistle was widely used in the early church because of its obvious orthodoxy and value. Questions about its canonical status arose largely because of its use of apocryphal literature (vv. 9, 14, 15 and notes; "Interpretive Difficulties" below). In addition to possible allusions in the so-called "Apostolic Fathers" (e.g., Clement of Rome; the Shepherd of Hermas; the Epistle of Barnabas; all prior to 150), Jude is listed in the Muratorian Canon (c. 200) and was accepted as authentic by Clement of Alexandria (c. 150–c. 215), Tertullian (c. 160–c. 225), Origen (c. 185–c. 253), and Athanasius (c. 296–373).

Date and Occasion Practically the only evidence for the date of Jude is what can be inferred about the time of its author and of the heresy he combats. If Jude was younger than Jesus and James, as his position in the lists of brothers in Matt. 13:55 and Mark 6:3 suggests, he could have survived well into the last quarter of the first century. Assuming that Peter wrote 2 Peter, and with most scholars that 2 Peter uses Jude (Introduction to 2 Peter: Interpretive Difficulties), Jude would have been written before A.D. 65–67, the likely date for 2 Peter.

Some argue for a second-century date on the grounds that Jude is combatting Gnosticism. While the teachings Jude opposes may have been precursors of Gnosticism, they cannot be identified with the fully-developed Gnostic heresies of the second century (Introduction to 2 Peter: Characteristics and Themes).

There is no indication in the letter of its place of writing or its destination. While some believe Jude's use of the Old Testament and Jewish apocryphal literature points to a Jewish Christian audience, this material reveals more about his own background than that of his readers. Perhaps Jude wrote the letter as a circular letter to a number of churches whose conditions he knows from having conducted an itinerant ministry among them (cf. 1 Cor. 9:5).

Characteristics and Themes

1. The Jewish Christian Character of the Epistle. This letter strongly reflects the milieu of first-century Jewish Christianity, as one would expect from an author like Jude. Evidence for the author's Jewish background includes his many allusions to the Old Testament (though he does not quote directly), his familiarity with Jewish apocryphal tradition, and his strong ethical concern.

2. Denunciation of False Teachers. Jude confronts a threat similar to that opposed in 2 Peter—false teachers who were using Christian liberty and the free grace of God as a license for immorality (v. 4; cf. 2 Pet. 2:1–3). Most of the epistle (vv. 4–19) is devoted to stern denunciation of the false teachers in order to impress the readers with the seriousness of the threat. But Jude's strategy is more than mere negative opposition. He urges his readers to grow in their knowledge of Christian truth (v. 20), to bear a firm witness for the truth (v. 3), and to seek to reclaim those whose faith was wavering (vv. 22, 23). This prescription for confronting spiritual error is as effective today as when it was first written.

Interpretive Difficulties

1. The Relationship of Jude to 2 Peter. See "Introduction to 2 Peter: Interpretive Difficulties."

2. The Use of Nonbiblical and Apocryphal Materials. As noted above, Jude's use of apocryphal Jewish materials was the chief obstacle to the epistle's acceptance in the New Testament canon.

Allusion to or citation of extrabiblical materials is rare in the New Testament. But given the currency of apocryphal religious works during the period, and the desire of the New Testament writers to communicate the gospel in terms familiar to their readers, it is not surprising to find some occasional use. Examples include 2 Tim. 3:8, which uses Jewish traditions about Ex. 7:11; and the quotation of pagan poets in Acts 17:28; 1 Cor. 15:33; and Titus 1:12.

The inclusion of such quotations in the inspired canon, for illustrative purposes or as an appeal to conventional wisdom, does not imply that the apocryphal and nonbiblical documents were themselves inspired, nor that everything in them is being endorsed by the Bible. It is the use of the particular reference that is inspired, not the source of that reference. □ preserved in Jesus Christ. The Greek could also be translated "kept for Jesus Christ." The elect will persevere in faith because God preserves them (v. 24; John 10:27–30; 1 Pet. 1:5).

■ 2 Mercy, peace, and love. Jude fills a traditional Jewish greeting ("mercy and peace") with profound Christian meaning by adding "love." God's mercy to undeserving sinners and the peace that results are grounded in His love manifested in Jesus Christ (John 3:16).

■ 3 I found it necessary. Instead of the doctrinal treatise he had intended to write, Jude feels compelled to address the problem of false teachers (v. 4). We do not know whether his original intention was fulfilled at some other time.

contend earnestly for the faith. Here "faith" indicates the content of the message taught by the apostles and held in common by all Christians, rather than the personal exercise of trust by a believer. Christianity infor all delivered to the saints. [4] For certain men have crept in unnoticed, who long ago were marked out for this condemnation, ungodly men, who turn the grace of our God into lewdness and deny the only Lord [2]God and our Lord Jesus Christ.

Old and New Apostates

[5] But I want to remind you, though you once knew this, that [g]the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed those who did not believe. [6] And the angels who did not keep their [3]proper domain, but left their own abode, He has reserved in everlasting chains under darkness for the judgment of the great day; [7] as [h]Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities around them in a similar manner to these, having given themselves over to sexual immorality and gone after strange flesh, are set forth as an example, suffering the [4]vengeance of eternal fire.

[8] [i]Likewise also these dreamers defile the flesh, reject authority, and [j]speak evil of [5]dignitaries. [9] Yet Michael the archangel, in [6]contending with the devil, when he disputed about the body of Moses, dared not bring against him a reviling accusation, but said, [k]"The Lord rebuke you!" [10] [l]But these speak evil of whatever they do not know; and whatever they know naturally, like brute beasts, in these things they corrupt themselves. [11] Woe to them! For they have gone in the way [m]of Cain, [n]have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit, and perished [o]in the rebellion of Korah.

cludes an authoritative body of belief given by God to the church through the apostles (1 Cor. 15:3–8), Together with the Old Testament (Eph. 2:20), this apostolic witness, as found in the New Testament, is the standard for the church (2 John 9, 10).

marked out for this condemnation. This difficult phrase probably refers to various prophecies about the coming and condemnation of ungodly men like the false teachers, perhaps including the prophecy of Enoch in vv. 14, 15 and the apostolic prophecies in vv. 17, 18. Or less likely, it may refer to the fate of the wicked being written in heavenly books (Jer. 22:30; Rev. 17:8).

turn the grace of our God into lewdness. Jude's opponents were guilty of antinomianism—the belief that Christians are under no obligation to follow the moral law as a rule of life. Such teaching was a persistent problem in the early church (Rom. 3:8; 6:15; 1 Cor. 6:12–15; Gal. 5:13), especially where Paul's emphasis upon justification by grace through faith was misunderstood and perverted.

deny . . . Lord God . . . Lord Jesus Christ. By their godless and immoral behavior the false teachers deny Christ. The designation of Christ as "Lord" recognizes Christ's deity.

■ 5 destroyed those who did not believe. God judged Israel with forty years of wandering in the desert for unbelief when they refused to enter Canaan following the report of the spies (Num. 14:27–34; Heb. 3:16–19). Just as judgment fell on the apostate Israelites after their deliverance from Egypt, so also it will fall on apostate church members (Heb. 4:1, 2).

■ 8 dreamers. Probably a reference to the false teachers' claims to divine revelation through visionary experiences, claims they might use to justify the three actions that follow.

reject authority. Though some take this to be human or angelic authority, a reference to the lordship and authority of Jesus Christ is more likely (v. 4).

speak evil of dignitaries. See note on 2 Pet. 2:10.

■ 9 Evidence indicates that this incident is based on The Assumption of Moses, an apocryphal Jewish work (of which only fragments have survived), which expands on the narrative of the burial of Moses in Deut. 34:5, 6 (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties). The story concerns a confrontation between the archangel Michael and the devil over possession of the body of Moses. As usually interpreted, Jude's point is that the rash talk of the false teachers contrasts with the temperate speech of Michael (2 Pet. 2:10 and note). Others interpret Jude as contrasting Michael's appeal to God's authority with the false teachers' claim to having their own spiritual authority.

Michael the archangel. According to Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1, Michael is one of the chief angels and the special guardian of Israel. In Rev. 12:7, Michael leads the angelic host in war against the devil and his angels. See "Angels" at Zech. 1:9.

■ 11 way of Cain. See Gen. 4:1–15; Heb. 11:4; 1 John 3:12. According to Jewish tradition, to which Jude may be referring, Cain was the archetypal sinner and the instructor of others in sin.

rebellion of Korah. Korah, along with Dathan and Abiram, led 250 men in rebellion against the authority of Moses and Aaron (Num. 16). Korah's rebellion and the resulting divine judgment provide an apt parallel to the defiance of the false teachers against church authority and the false teachers' dangerous ability to lead others astray, as well as a graphic illustration of the divine judgment awaiting the false teachers (Num. 16:31–33).

■ 12 spots. The Greek word translated "spots" usually means "rocks" or "hidden reefs," which are a danger to ships. If Jude is making a play without fruit, twice dead, pulled up by the roots; 13 [p]raging waves of the sea, [q]foaming up their own shame; wandering stars [r]for whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever.

14 Now Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied about these men also, saying, "Behold, the Lord comes with ten thousands of His saints, 15 to execute judgment on all, to convict all who are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have committed in an ungodly way, and of all the [s]harsh things which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him."

on words, it is to the effect that teachers are "dangerous, rocky blemishes" in what should be calm waters.

love feasts. See note on 2 Pet. 2:13; cf. 1 Cor. 11:20–34.

feast with you without fear. The false teachers may have made the love feasts occasions for blatant immorality. Even apart from this their presence at the meals would have been a concern to Jude. Because teaching took place at the love feasts (Acts 20:7, 11), there was opportunity for the false teachers to advance their ideas.

clouds without water. A metaphor for a form of hypocrisy that fails to produce what is promised (2 Pet. 2:17 note).

without fruit, twice dead . . . by the roots. Like trees failing to bear fruit at harvesttime, the lives of these people are barren and fall under God's judgment (Matt. 7:16–20; Luke 13:6–9).

■ 13 wandering stars. Shooting stars, comets, or most probably, planets. Either the opponents' teaching is short-lived (like the light of a shooting star) or untrustworthy and useless (as when an unpredictable heavenly body is used for navigation).

■ 14 Enoch, the seventh from Adam. The Enoch of Gen. 5:24 is seventh from Adam if Adam is counted as first. In vv. 14, 15, Jude quotes almost verbatim from a popular apocryphal work, the Book of Enoch or 1 Enoch. In doing so Jude does not imply that 1 Enoch is divinely inspired or that it was written by Enoch himself (Gen. 5:24). The source he uses was familiar to his readers and would be useful for confirming his theme of coming divine judgment on the ungodly (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties).

prophesied. In saying that Enoch "prophesied about these men," Jude neither confirms nor denies the popular attribution of this apocryphal text to the biblical Enoch. The quotation from 1 Enoch, in agreement with a host of Old Testament prophecies (e.g., Dan. 7:9, 10; Zech. 14:3–5), teaches that God will come with His heavenly hosts to judge the wicked, and Jude is justified in applying this biblical idea to his specific situation.

saints. Probably a reference to the angelic host that will accompany the Lord's return (Zech. 14:5; Matt. 25:31).

■ 15 ungodly . . . ungodly. The repetition of this term is important; the same Greek word is used in vv. 4 and 18. Rebellion by the false teachers is first and foremost against God and His authority, and it will meet with God's certain judgment (v. 4 note).

■ 16 grumblers, complainers. Like Israel in the wilderness (v. 5; 1 Cor. 10:10), the false teachers resist God's will, perhaps by complaining about the law's restrictions on their behavior.

great swelling words. Or, "arrogant words." These may have been claims to having visionary experiences (v. 8), freedom from the law (vv. 4, 8), or possession of the Holy Spirit (vv. 18, 19).

flattering people to gain advantage. They show partiality to the rich members of the church (James 2:1–4), and perhaps go on to adapt their teaching to please the influential in their audience.

■ 18 mockers. They mock especially the moral law of God and the certainty of divine punishment on the disobedient (Ps. 1:1; 35:16; Prov. 14:9; 2 Pet. 3:3, 4).

last time. See note on 1 Pet. 1:20.

■ 19 sensual persons . . . not having the Spirit. Against his opponents' claims, Jude argues that the false teachers themselves are the ones who live entirely at the level of natural, earthly life (v. 10).

cause divisions. Division in the church was an inevitable result of the false teachers' arrogance (v. 16) and their claim, against the church leadership and ordinary Christians, to possess the Spirit. The false teachers may have been classifying people as the later Gnostics did into the "spiritual" (themselves) and the "natural" (ordinary Christians).

■ 20–23 Jude now turns from denunciation of the false teachers to positive exhortation of his readers. To contend for the faith when it is under attack means more than opposing false teachers with words. It involves a positive life faithful to the gospel. The Trinitarian form of Jude's exhortation should be noted ("Holy Spirit . . . God . . . Lord Jesus Christ").

■ 20 building . . . holy faith. Jude, like Peter (1 Pet. 2:5) and Paul (1 Cor. 3:16, 17), compares the church to a building. As in v. 3, "faith" refers to the foundational message of the prophets and apostles (Eph. 2:20–22).

praying in the Holy Spirit. In contrast to the false teachers, the prayers of Jude's readers are controlled by the Spirit, as indeed their whole lives should be (Gal. 5:16–18; Eph. 6:18).

■ 22, 23 The exact Greek text of these verses is disputed, and it is hard to tell whether two or three groups of sinners are in view (v. 23 text note). Whatever the textual solution, Jude clearly recognizes that different pastoral strategies are to be employed with different people. Some can profit from gentle counseling (Gal. 6:1). Others will require confrontation or action of some sort, to pull them "out of the fire."

■ 23 save with fear. See Gal. 6:1.

garment defiled by the flesh. A vivid metaphor for the contaminating influence of the false teachers, this phrase underscores the care that Jude's readers must exercise in their contact with the false teachers and those under their influence (1 Cor. 5:11; 2 John 10, 11). On the metaphor, see Is. 64:6; Zech. 3:1–5; Matt. 22:12; Rev. 3:4, 5, 18; 19:8.

Glory to God

And [e]to present you faultless

25 To [5]God our Savior,
[6]Who alone is wise,
Be glory and majesty,

Amen.

25 [5]NU the only God our [6]NU Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Be glory [7]NU adds Before all time,

■ 24, 25 Like Rom. 16:25–27, Jude's conclusion is a doxology expressing confidence in God's power to preserve His people to the end, and acknowledging God's eternal greatness in His "glory and majesty, Dominion and power."

THE REVELATION

of Jesus Christ

Author The writer identifies himself as John (1:1, 4, 9; 22:8). He was well known to the churches in Asia Minor (1:9; "Date and Occasion" below). As early as the second century A.D., Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, and others identified the author as the apostle John. In the third century however, Dionysius, bishop of Alexandria, compared the style and themes of Revelation with the Gospel of John and concluded that the two must have different authors. On balance it is still probable that the apostle John was the author. Revelation stresses that its message and content derive ultimately from Jesus Christ and from God the Father (1:1, 10, 11; 22:16, 20). It possesses full divine authority (22:18, 19).

Date and Occasion Revelation was written during a time of persecution, probably near the end of the reign of the Roman Emperor Nero (A.D. 54–68) or during the reign of Domitian (A.D. 81–96). Most scholars favor a date about A.D. 95.

Revelation is addressed to seven churches in Asia Minor (1:4, 11), in an area now part of western Turkey. Each church receives rebukes and encouragement in accord with its condition (2:1—3:22). Persecution had fallen on some Christians (1:9; 2:9, 13) and more was coming (2:10; 13:7–10). Roman officials would try to force Christians to worship the emperor. Heretical teachings and declining fervor tempted Christians to compromise with pagan society (2:2, 4, 14, 15, 20–24; 3:1, 2, 15, 17). Revelation assures Christians that Christ knows their condition and that He calls them to stand fast against all temptation. Their victory has been secured through the blood of the Lamb (5:9, 10; 12:11). Christ will come soon to defeat Satan and all his agents (19:11—20:10), and Christ's people will enjoy everlasting peace in His presence (7:15–17; 21:3, 4).

Interpretive Difficulties

1. Approaches to the Book. Interpreters disagree concerning the period of time and the manner in which the visions of 6:1—18:24 are fulfilled. "Preterists" think fulfillment occurred in the fall of Jerusalem (if Revelation was written in A.D. 67–68), the fall of the Roman Empire, or both. "Futurists" think fulfillment will occur in a period of final crisis just before the Second Coming. "Historicists" think that 6:1—18:24 offers a basically chronological outline of the course of church history from the first century (6:1) until the Second Coming (19:11). "Idealists" think that the scenes of Revelation depict not specific events but principles of spiritual war. The principles are operative throughout the church age and may have repeated embodiments.

A combination of these views is probably closest to the truth. The imagery in Revelation is multifaceted and is in principle capable of multiple embodiments. Idealists maintain that general principles are expressed. If so, those principles had a particular relevance to the seven churches and their struggles in the first century (1:4; "Date and Occasion" above), but the principles will also come to climactic expression in the final crisis of the Second Coming (22:20; cf. 2 Thess. 2:1–12). Christians throughout history are involved in the same spiritual war and so must apply the principles to themselves and their own time (1:3 note). Hence, many passages have at least three main applications: to the first century, to the final crisis, and to whatever time in which Christians live.

On the other hand, suppose that the preterists are basically correct in thinking that Revelation refers mainly to the events of the early church period. They can easily acknowledge that the underlying principles of conflict have wider bearing. Then the practical results will be similar to the idealist approach. Patience and humility are needed when one confronts disagreements on these matters. In the meantime, Revelation has broad lessons from which all can profit.

2. The Millennium. The thousand-year period of Christ's rule described in 20:1–10, commonly called the "millennium," is variously understood by interpreters. "Premillennialists" believe that the thousand years follow the Second Coming that is described in 19:11–21. After the Second Coming, Satan is bound and Christ ushers in a long period of earthly peace and prosperity. Some think of this as a literal thousand years and others consider the number to mean a very long period of time. Christians receive resurrection bodies at the beginning of the millennium, but the final judgment for all others takes place at the end, after a rebellion led by Satan. In the second century, Justin Martyr and Papias were among those holding a premillennial view.

"Amillennialists" understand the millennium to be a picture of the present reign of Christ and of the saints in heaven (analogous to 6:9, 10). The "first resurrection" (20:5) is either the life of Christians who have died and are with Christ in heaven, or life in Christ that starts with spiritual new birth (Rom. 6:8–11; Eph. 2:6; Col. 3:1–4). Satan has been bound through the triumph of Christ in His crucifixion and resurrection (John 12:31; Col. 2:15).

"Postmillennialists" believe that the kingdom of Christ and the church will experience much more expansion on earth before the Second Coming. The thousand years are understood by some as a final period of earthly Christian triumph following the spread of the gospel (19:11–21 note). Others agree with amillennialists in identifying 20:1–6 with the entire period that begins with the resurrection of Christ.

The dispute partly concerns the chronological relation of 20:1–10 to 19:11–21. Premillennialists believe that the events described in 20:1–10 simply follow the Second Coming, which is depicted in 19:11–21. But 20:1–15 might also represent a seventh cycle of judgments leading up to the Second Coming (see "Characteristics and Themes: Literary Form"). The final battle in 20:7–10 seems to be the same as the final battle in 16:14, 16; 17:14; 19:11–21. Similar language from Ezek. 38; 39 is used in the various descriptions. The judgment of Satan in 20:10 parallels the judgments against Babylon (chs. 17; 18) and against the Beast and the False Prophet (19:11–21). These enemies of God are consigned to everlasting punishment, and the visions depicting their judgment may be parallel descriptions rather than different events in a sequence. Certain features in 20:11–15 correspond to earlier descriptions of the Second Coming (6:14; 11:18). Most important, all of Christ's enemies have been judged in 19:11–21. If 20:1–6 represents later events, there would be no one left for Satan to deceive in 20:3.

Caution is needed because the different millennial positions depend on the interpretation of Old Testament prophetic texts as well as these verses in Revelation. Moreover, like most of Revelation, 20:1–10 uses language that in principle may legitimately be capable of multiple fulfillments. These facts make precise interpretation difficult (it is God's prerogative to reveal only as much about the order of future events as is good for us to know—Acts 1:7). The major point is that Satan will finally be defeated, and that even before that time God takes care of His saints and blesses them through His triumphant rule. This assurance ought to comfort Christians, whatever their millennial position.

Characteristics and Themes

1. Content. In the opening vision Christ appears as the majestic King and Judge of the universe and Ruler of the churches (1:12–20). In 2:1—3:22 Christ addresses specific needs of each church. His powerful promises also remind the churches of the scope and profundity of their calling (2:7, 10, 11, 17, 26–28; 3:5, 12, 21). The selection of exactly seven churches suggests the wider relevance of the message (1:4 note).

In 4:1—22:5 Christ's rebukes and encouragement take a new form. Through Christ and His angels (22:8, 9, 16) John receives a series of visions intended to open Christians' eyes to the kingship and majesty of God, the nature of spiritual warfare, God's judgments on evil, and the outcome of the conflict. God and His army must win the battle (17:14; 19:1, 2), but His forces are opposed by Satan, the "great . . . dragon" (12:3), who leads the whole world astray (12:9). Satan has two agents, the "beast" and the "false prophet," who together with him make up a counterfeit trinity (ch. 13; 16:13; see "Characteristics and Themes: Other Features" below). In opposition to these threats the saints must maintain a true and faithful witness, even to the point of martyrdom (12:11), and must maintain true spiritual purity (14:4; 19:8). In the new heaven and new earth, their witness finds its fulfillment in the final light of God's truth (21:22–27), and their purity takes perfect form in the spotless bride of the Lamb (21:9).

The principal theme of Revelation is that God rules history and will bring it to a triumphal climax in Christ. At the center are the visions of Christ (1:12–16) and of God (4:1—5:14). God displays His majesty, authority, and righteousness as the Ruler and Judge of the universe (1:12–20 note). These central visions already foreshadow the consummation of history, when God's glory will fill all things (21:22, 23; 22:5; 4:1—5:14 note). Detailed elements in the visions flesh out these truths, and are to be seen as part of a larger picture. Revelation is thus a picture book, a dramatic presentation to enable Christians to have a God-centered view of history. It is not a puzzle book to serve as a source of mysterious calculations.

2. Literary Form. The Greek title of Revelation is Apokalypsis, meaning "revelation" or "disclosure." Hence, the book is an "apocalypse," a revelation concerning the ultimate goal of history. The Book of Revelation is apocalyptic literature; like portions of Ezekiel, Daniel, and Zechariah, it contains visions with many symbolic elements. Using visual imagery as well as verbal promises and warnings, it weaves together into a poetic tapestry the themes of the whole of Scripture. Its depths are displayed through its multiple allusions. Yet as a revelation, or disclosure, it is intended to nourish all who are servants of Christ (1:1).

The Prologue of Revelation (1:1–3) explains its basic purpose. Rev. 1:4—22:21 is a letter with a greeting (1:4, 5), body (1:5—22:20), and farewell (22:21). The formal features of this common arrangement are also found in Paul's letters.

The main portion of the book (4:1—22:5) consists of seven cycles of judgments, each of which leads to a description of the Second Coming (4:1—8:1; 8:2—11:19; 12:1—14:20; 15:1—16:21; 17:1—19:10; 19:11–21; 20:1–15). A final, eighth portion presents the supreme vision of the New Jerusalem (21:1—22:5). Each cycle is best understood as depicting the same spiritual war, but from a fresh vantage point. Later cycles concentrate more and more on the most intense phases of conflict and on the Second Coming itself.

Symbolic personages are introduced into the drama one by one, and their destinies are revealed in the reverse order, as follows:

A. The People of God Depicted with the Imagery of Light and Creation (12:1, 2)
  B. The Dragon—Satan (12:3–6)
    C. The Beast and the False Prophet (13:1–18)
      D. The Bride: The People of God in the Imagery of Sexual Purity (14:1–5)
        E. Babylon the Harlot (17:1–6)
        E. Babylon Destroyed (17:15—18:24)
      D. The Bride Is Blessed with Marriage (19:1–10)
    C. The Beast and the False Prophet Are Destroyed (19:11–21)
  B. The Dragon Is Destroyed (20:1–10)
A. The People of God in the Imagery of Light and Creation (21:1—22:5)

3. Other Features. Many thematic features unify the book. Repeated use of the number seven signifies completeness. God's plan and power determine the outcomes. Praise to God rises from the angels and saints (1:6 note). The present struggles of the church (2:1—3:22) contrast with its final rest. The church must maintain its witness and purity. Everything moves forward to the victory of Christ at His coming.

One of the most prominent features of the book is the presentation of Satanic counterfeits that oppose God in a spiritual war of cosmic proportions. The beast introduced in 13:1–10 is a counterfeit of Christ. Note the following parallels: (a) The beast is an image of Satan, whom Satan brought forth (13:1), just as Christ is the exact image of God, begotten by the Father (Ps. 2:7; Col. 1:15; Heb. 1:3); (b) the beast has ten crowns and blasphemous names (13:1), while Christ has many crowns and worthy names (19:12); (c) the dragon gave the beast his power, throne, and great authority (13:2), just as Christ has power (5:12, 13), throne (3:21), and authority (12:10) from the Father (John 5:21–23); (d) the beast has a seemingly fatal wound from which he has recovered (13:3), counterfeiting Christ's resurrection, and the beast's recovery is one of the principal features that attracts followers (13:4), just as the resurrection of Christ is one of the principal points of evangelistic proclamation; (e) worship is directed both to the dragon and the beast (13:4), just as Christians worship both the Father and the Son (John 5:23); (f) the beast attracts the worship of the whole world (13:7), just as Christ will be worshiped universally; (g) the beast utters blasphemies (13:5), while Christ utters the praises of God (Heb. 2:12); (h) the beast makes war against the saints (13:7), while Christ makes war against the beast (19:11–21). The song of praise to the beast in 13:4 counterfeits the song to God in Ex. 15:11. The striking juxtaposition of Christ and the beast in 19:11–21 shows that these are the two main warriors in the battle: Christ is the divine warrior, fulfilling the imagery of Ex. 15:3; Is. 59:16–18; 63:1–6; Hab. 3:3–15; Zech. 9:13–15; 14:1–5; and the beast is the unholy, counterfeit warrior, fulfilling the imagery of Dan. 7:1–8.

Satan himself attempts to counterfeit God the Father. He engages in a mock creation, in which he brings forth his image out of chaotic waters (13:1; parallel to Gen. 1:2). Similarly, the false prophet, or beast from the earth (13:11–18), counterfeits the work of the Holy Spirit. He desires that people worship not himself, but the beast, just as the Holy Spirit glorifies Christ (John 16:14). He works false miraculous signs (13:13, 14), counterfeiting the miracles of the Holy Spirit. He forces a mark on his subjects (13:16), just as Christians are sealed with the Holy Spirit (Eph. 1:13).

Together—Satan, the beast, and the false prophet—form an unholy trio (16:13), counterfeiting the Holy Trinity. Satan as a deceiver is always trying to make his ways look attractive (2 Cor. 11:14, 15). When divine revelation opens our eyes, there is a world of difference between his horrors and God's beauties. Satan is an imitator, not a creator, and his productions are always bestial and degenerate like himself. Beasts must give way before Christ the King (19:11–21).

One final counterfeit figure exists, namely Babylon the harlot, the counterfeit of the bride of Christ (17:1—19:10). Her corruptions are contrasted with the purity of the bride of the Lamb (19:7–9). Babylon sums up in herself the worship of the godless world. By contrast the bride, the church, represents the worshipers of the true God. Satan attacks the saints in two main ways. The beast attacks with power and persecution, endeavoring to destroy the witness of the saints and force them to worship the beast. Babylon attacks with seduction, endeavoring to destroy the purity of the saints. □

Introduction and Benediction

CHAPTER 1

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, [a]which God gave Him to show His servants—things which must [f]shortly take place. And [b]He sent and signified it by His angel to His servant John,

1 [a]John 3:32 [b]Rev. 22:6 [f]quickly or swiftly

■ 1:1–3 The main portion of Revelation (1:4—22:21) has the form of a letter, with greetings, body, and farewell. This Prologue helps orient readers to the content they may expect. Stress is placed on the divine authority of the message (from God and Jesus Christ), its certainty (note the word "must" in v. 1), and its crucial relevance (v. 3). God makes thorough provision for the communication process: the message originates with God the Father, is given to Jesus Christ, and is made known to John through an angel (v. 1). John testifies by writing it (v. 2), and all are encouraged to read and hear (v. 3).

Revelation stresses that though it comes in symbolic form, it is understandable. It is "revelation," disclosing rather than hiding truth (v. 1). It is for "His servants," not a special elite (v. 1). God expects Christians to "keep those things which are written," to profit spiritually (v. 3). A blessing encourages people to read and hear (v. 3).

■ 1:1 shortly. See text note and 22:6, 7, 10, 12, 20. Spiritual war takes place throughout the church age, and the seven churches will soon experience all dimensions of the conflict. Moreover, the "last days" spoken of by Old Testament prophecy have been inaugurated by Christ's resurrection (Acts 2:16, 17). The time of waiting is over, and God is conducting the final phase of His victorious warfare against evil. By such reckoning, today is "the last hour" (1 John 2:18).

Greeting the Seven Churches

[4] John, to the seven churches which are in Asia:

Grace to you and peace from Him [g]who is and [h]who was and who is to come, [i]and from the seven Spirits who are before His throne, [5] and from Jesus Christ, [j]the faithful [k]witness, the [l]firstborn from the dead, and [m]the ruler over the kings of the earth.

To Him [n]who [z]loved us [o]and washed us from our sins in His own blood, [6] and has [p]made us [3]kings and priests to His God and Father, [q]to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen.

■ 1:2 testimony of Jesus Christ. Because of the imminence of persecution threatening to suppress Christian witness (17:6), Revelation is full of the theme of witness. Jesus Christ is the preeminent witness (v. 5; 3:14; 19:11). Imitation of Him may include martyrdom (12:11). Revelation itself is a testimony intended to strengthen the testimony of its readers. Its message carries full divine authority and authenticity (19:10; 22:6, 16, 20).

■ 1:3 Blessed. Revelation not only pronounces judgment on the faithless, but blessing on the faithful (14:13; 16:15; 19:9; 20:6; 22:7, 14).

prophecy. See 22:7–10, 18, 19. Like Old Testament prophecy, Revelation combines visions of God's future with exhortation to faithfulness. This prophecy is a distinctive and inspired form of the witness that all Christians are to give (v. 2 note).

keep those things. Revelation is not intended to tickle our fancy but to strengthen our hearts (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Content).

■ 1:4 to the seven churches. See v. 11; 2:1—3:22. Revelation is organized in sevens; the biblical number symbolic of completeness (Gen. 2:2, 3). The choice of seven churches expresses this theme and hints at the wider relevance of the message to all churches (vv. 1, 3; 2:7, 11, 17, 29; 3:6, 13, 22; 22:7, 11–14, 16, 18–21).

Asia. The Roman province of Asia lies in what is now western Turkey.

Him who is and who was and who is to come. Similar to the divine name in Ex. 3:14, 15. See note on v. 8.

seven Spirits. The Holy Spirit is described in sevenfold fullness (4:5; Zech. 4:2, 6). Note the origin of grace and peace from the Trinity: God the Father ("Him who is"), the Son (1:5), and the Spirit (cf. 2 Cor. 13:14; 1 Pet. 1:1, 2).

■ 1:5–8 John praises God, in a way similar to the beginning of most Pauline letters. The themes of God's sovereignty, redemption, and the Second Coming of Christ recur throughout Revelation.

■ 1:5 The key role of Jesus Christ in the whole of Revelation is already anticipated in this description.

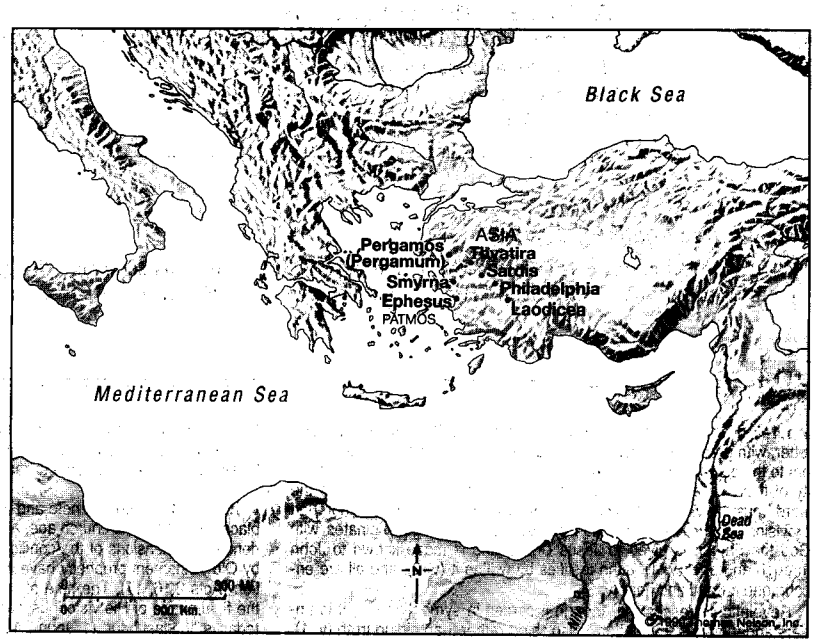
ruler. See note on chs. 4; 5.

washed us. See note on ch. 5.

■ 1:6 The theme of worship and praise of God extends throughout Revelation. Note the praises in 4:8, 11; 5:9, 13; 7:12; 11:15; 12:10–12; 15:3, 4; 19:1–8. Utterances of praise are an integral part of the spiritual war.



The Seven Churches of the Apocalypse. The churches of seven cities were recipients of an apocalyptic letter from the Lord through John. By commendation, rebuke and warning, the people of God were exhorted to remain faithful in adversity. These churches held significant roles in the Christian experience of Asia Minor as a result of their location within a transportation network linking different parts of the region.

Vision of the Son of Man

9 I, John, [6]both your brother and [w]companion in the tribulation and [x]kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was on the island that is called Patmos for the word of God and for the testimony of Jesus Christ. 10 [y]I was in the Spirit on [z]the Lord's Day, and I heard behind me [a]a loud voice, as of a trumpet, 11 saying, [7]"I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last," and, "What you see, write in a book and send it to the seven churches [8]which are in Asia: to Ephesus, to Smyrna, to Pergamos, to Thyatira, to Sardis, to Philadelphia, and to Laodicea."

12 Then I turned to see the voice that spoke with me. And having turned [b]I saw seven golden lampstands, 13 [c]and in the midst of the seven lampstands [d]One like the Son of Man, [e]clothed with a garment down to the feet and [f]girded about the chest with a golden band. 14 His head and [g]hair were white like wool, as white as snow, and [h]His eyes like a flame of fire; 15 [i]His feet were like fine brass, as if refined in a furnace, and [j]His voice as the sound of many waters; 16 [k]He had in His right hand seven stars, [l]out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword, [m]and His countenance was like the sun shining in its strength. 17 And [n]when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead. But [o]He laid His right hand on me, saying [p]to me, "Do not be afraid; [p]I am the First and the Last. 18 [q]I am He who lives, and was dead, and behold, [r]I am alive forevermore. Amen. And kings and priests. Saints enjoy God's rule and as priests have intimate access to Him (Heb. 10:19–22; 1 Pet. 2:5–9). In the future, they will reign with Him (2:26, 27; 3:21; 5:10; 20:4, 6). All nations now share in the priestly privileges given to Israel in Ex. 19:6. The purposes of redemption that are seen in the Exodus from Egypt, and the purposes of dominion given to humanity at creation, are both fulfilled through Christ (5:9, 10). The theme of priestly worship and access to God is complementary to the temple theme in Revelation (chs. 4; 5 note).

■ 1:8 the Alpha and the Omega. The first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. God is Alpha (Creator) and Omega (the One who ushers in the new heaven and new earth). He is Lord of all—past, present, and future—as suggested by "who is . . . is to come" (cf. chs. 4; 5 note). His sovereignty in creation guarantees the fulfillment of His purposes in re-creation (Rom. 8:18–25).

who is to come. In the future God will come to fulfill all His purposes (21:1—22:5).

■ 1:9–11 An identification of John and his circumstances (in which he represents the whole church) prepares the way for the first main vision in 1:12—3:22.

■ 1:9 patience. The exhortation to endure and remain faithful runs through Revelation (2:2, 3, 13, 19; 3:10; 6:11; 13:10; 14:12; 16:15; 18:4; 20:4; 22:7, 11, 14). Here is practical exhortation in the midst of persecution and temptation (Introduction: Date and Occasion).

Patmos. A small island off the west coast of Asia Minor. Patmos had a Roman penal settlement used for persons considered dangerous to good order.

■ 1:10 in the Spirit. The Spirit provides John with the special visions and transports him to vantage points to view them (4:2; 17:3; 21:10).

the Lord's Day. Sunday, the Christian day of worship celebrating Christ's resurrection. The Sunday celebration anticipates the celebration of God's final victory (19:1–10).

loud voice. The voice of Christ. Loud voices and noises indicate the power and universal relevance of the messages and events (1:15; 4:1, 5; 5:2, 12; 6:1; 7:2, 10; 8:5, 13; 10:3; 11:12, 15, 19; 12:10; 14:7, 9, 15, 18; 19:1, 3, 6, 17).

■ 1:11 seven churches. See note on v. 4.

■ 1:12–20 Christ appears in overwhelming glory (cf. 21:22–24). "Like the Son of Man" alludes to Dan. 7:13. The features of vv. 12–16 are reminiscent of Dan. 7:9, 10; 10:5, 6; and Ezek. 1:25–28, but include more distant similarities to many Old Testament appearances of God. The vision shows Christ as Judge and Ruler—first of all over the churches (1:20—3:22), but also over the whole universe (2:27; 3:21). His deity, authority, and conquest of death guarantee final victory (vv. 17, 18; 17:14; 19:11–16). This vision of God's sovereignty exercised through Christ is a fundamental point of the message of Revelation (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties). Christ's war-like appearance (v. 16) anticipates His role in the final battle (19:11–21) and looks backward to God's battles in the Old Testament (Ex. 15:3; Deut. 32:41, 42; Is. 59:17, 18; Zech. 14:3). Christ presents the pattern in which the destiny of the whole universe is summed up (Eph. 1:10; Col. 1:16, 17). Because all things hold together in Christ (Col. 1:17), the trinitarian imagery of vv. 12–20 and chs. 4; 5 forms a foundation for the whole of Revelation. Because the Trinity is deeply mysterious, the imagery of Revelation has inexhaustible profundity.

■ 1:12 seven golden lampstands. The lampstands symbolize the churches in their light-bearing or witness-bearing function (1:20; Matt. 5:14–16). Christ walks among the churches as Lord and Shepherd (v. 13), just as God's cloud of glory descended to dwell in the tabernacle and the temple, which had their lampstands (Ex. 25:31–40; 1 Kin. 7:49). God's character as light (1 John 1:5) is supremely manifested in Christ (John 1:4, 5; 8:12; 9:5; Acts 26:13), but is also reflected in various ways in His creation: in fiery angels (10:1; Ezek. 1:13), in natural light (21:23; Gen. 1:3), in the temple lampstands, in the churches, and in each individual person (Matt. 5:14–16).

■ 1:15 sound of many waters. See note on v. 10.

■ 1:16 sword. See 19:15; Is. 11:4; Heb. 4:12.

the sun. See 21:22–25; Is. 60:1–3, 19, 20.

■ 1:17 the First and the Last. Essentially the same as the Alpha and the Omega (v. 8 note; 2:8; 22:13; Is. 41:4; 44:6; 48:12).

■ 1:18 He who lives. Christ's resurrection and new life provide for the new life of His people (2:8; 5:9, 10; 20:4, 5) and the renewal of the world itself (22:1).

The Loveless Church

2 "To the [1]angel of the church of Ephesus write,

'These things says [a]He who holds the seven stars in His right hand, [b]who walks in the midst of the seven golden lampstands: [2][c]"I know your works, your labor, your [2]patience, and that you cannot [3]bear those who are evil. And [d]you have tested those [e]who say they are apostles

CHAPTER 2 1 [a]Rev. 1:16 [b]Rev. 1:13 [1]Or messenger 2 [c]Ps. 1:6 [d]1 John 4:1 [e]2 Cor. 11:13 [2]perseverance [3]endure

■ 1:19 This verse probably suggests a threefold division of Revelation into past (vv. 12–16), present (chs. 2; 3), and future (4:1—22:5). But the division is only a rough one, since each portion contains some references to all three periods.

■ 1:20 the angels. The Greek word means "messengers." It may refer to human messengers, specifically the pastors of the churches, or to angels. The prominence of angels in Revelation would support the latter meaning here (22:6; Dan. 10:10–21).

■ 2:1—3:22 See theological note "The Local Church." Christ shows care for the churches by addressing each according to its needs, with encouragement, rebuke, exhortation, and promise. He shows detailed knowledge of them ("I know"). In all the letters there are allusions to circumstances or traditions of the particular city, probably including some that are no longer recognized. At the same time, all the churches are included in a universal calling to faithfulness and endurance until the promises reach their fulfillment in the heavenly Jerusalem. Their struggles contrast with the peace and satisfaction pictured in 21:1—22:5. The exhortations are reinforced by an opening allusion to some element of the majestic vision of 1:12–20, and therefore have universal bearing (1:4 note).

Each message has the same basic form:

1. Addressee: "to the angel of the church . . . write."
2. Identification of Christ, alluding back to His majesty displayed in 1:12–20: "These things says He."
3. Claim of knowledge: "I know."
4. Evaluation: rebukes or commendations.
5. Promise or threat: usually "I will."
6. Promise to "him who overcomes."
7. Exhortation to listen: "He who has an ear."

Note that (6) and (7) can occur in reverse order, and (5) can be included with (4).

The Seven Churches of the Apocalypse (1:20)

	Commendation	Criticism	Instruction	Promise
Ephesus (2:1–7)	Rejects evil, perseveres, has patience	Love for Christ no longer fervent	Do the works you did at first	The tree of life
Smyrna (2:8–11)	Gracefully bears suffering	None	Be faithful until death	The crown of life
Pergamos (2:12–17)	Keeps the faith of Christ	Tolerates immorality, idolatry, and heresies	Repent	Hidden manna and a stone with a new name
Thyatira (2:18–29)	Love, service, faith, patience are greater than at first	Tolerates cult of idolatry and immorality	Judgment coming; keep the faith	Rule over nations and receive morning star
Sardis (3:1–6)	Some have kept the faith	A dead church	Repent; strengthen what remains	Faithful honored and clothed in white
Philadelphia (3:7–13)	Perseveres in the faith, keeps the word of Christ, honors His name	None	Keep the faith	A place in God's presence, a new name, and the New Jerusalem
Laodicea (3:14–22)	None	Indifferent	Be zealous and repent	Share Christ's throne

[6] But this you have, that you hate the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.

The Persecuted Church

[8] "And to the [4]angel of the church in Smyrna write,

'These things says [k]the First and the Last, who was dead, and came to life: [9] "I know your works, tribulation, and poverty (but you are [l]rich); and I know the blasphemy of [m]those who say they are Jews and are not, [n]but are a [5]synagogue of Satan. The Local Church

Each local church is a manifestation of the one universal church, and will embody the nature of that church as the Father's regenerate family, Christ's ministering body, and a fellowship sustained by the Holy Spirit. In the course of separating from the Roman Catholic church, the Reformers needed to be sure about what were the marks of the true church. From Scripture, they found the answer in terms of two criteria.

1. The faithful preaching of the Word of God: This means that the church teaches the Christian gospel according to the Scripture. Any group that denies the Trinity, the deity of Christ, the sin-bearing Atonement, or justification by faith alone, is like the separatists of earlier times whose denials of the Incarnation (1 John 4:1–3) caused John to say, "they were not of us" (1 John 2:19).

2. The right use of the sacraments: This criterion means that baptism and the Lord's Supper are used and explained as setting forth the gospel of faith in Christ. Turning these sacraments into superstitions that take away the sufficiency of faith in Christ undercuts the identity of the church, like anything else that obstructs faith in Christ. One purpose of baptism is to mark those who are received into the visible church. The Lord's Supper confirms for the faithful their membership in the church and their community with each other and with Christ.

Christians have found other marks of identity alongside these minimal two. Luther specified the keys of discipline (Matt. 16:19), an authorized ministry (Acts 14:23; 20:28), public worship (Heb. 10:25), and "suffering under the cross" (Acts 14:22; 20:29). The Reformed churches specified a functioning system of discipline, often calling discipline the third mark of the visible church (Titus 1:13; 2:15; 3:10). Charismatics point to the active ministry of every member as a mark of the true church (Eph. 4:7–16).

These additional marks are not, however, essential in the way that the first two are. A church that lacks the additional marks is seriously deficient, but it would not be true to say that it is no church at all. □

■ 2:5 remove your lampstand. The city of Ephesus had been relocated because of the gradual silting up of its river, the Cayster, and had been "removed" from earlier sites. By analogy, Christ threatens to remove the church unless its people repent.

■ 2:6 Nicolaitans. A heretical group, probably holding views similar to the teaching of Balaam and Jezebel (vv. 14, 20 notes).

■ 2:7 him who overcomes. In this and parallel verses to the other churches, faithful saints are promised participation in all aspects of the new Jerusalem (2:11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21; 21:1—22:5).

tree of life. See note on 22:2.

■ 2:9 synagogue of Satan. The Jewish synagogue in Smyrna was composed of Jews who had refused the message concerning the coming of the Messiah. Though they professed to worship God, their opposition to Christians showed that they were in fact under the power of satanic darkness (2 Cor. 4:4).

■ 2:10 Be faithful. The city of Smyrna prided itself on faithfulness to Rome.

crown of life. Smyrna's goddess Cybele is pictured in coins with a crown patterned after a city battlement. The buildings on Smyrna's Mt. Pagos were said to look like a crown. Over against these claims, Jesus offers to give the true crown.

The Compromising Church

12 "And to the [6]angel of the church in Pergamos write.

'These things says [t]He who has the sharp two-edged sword: 13 "I know your works, and where you dwell, where Satan's throne is. And you hold fast to My name, and did not deny My faith even in the days in which Antipas was My faithful martyr, who was killed among you, where Satan dwells. 14 But I have a few things against you, because you have there those who hold the doctrine of [u]Balaam, who taught Balak to put a stumbling block before the children of Israel, [v]to eat things sacrificed to idols, [w]and to commit sexual immorality. 15 Thus you also have those who hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, [7]which thing I hate. 16 Repent, or else I will come to you quickly and [x]will fight against them with the sword of My mouth.

17 "He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches. To him who overcomes I will give some of the hidden [y]manna to eat. And I will give him a white stone, and on the stone [z]a new name written which no one knows except him who receives it."

The Corrupt Church

18 "And to the [8]angel of the church in Thyatira write,

'These things says the Son of God, [a]who has eyes like a flame of fire, and His feet like fine brass: 19 [b]"I know your works, love, [9]service, faith, and your [1]patience; and as for your works, the last are more than the first. 20 Nevertheless I have [2]a few things against you, because you allow [3]that woman [c]Jezebel, who calls herself a prophetess, [4]to teach and seduce My servants [d]to commit sexual immorality and eat things sacrificed to idols. 21 And I gave her time [e]to [5]repent of her sexual immorality, and she did not repent. 22 Indeed I will cast her into a sickbed, and those who commit adultery with her into great tribulation, unless they repent of [6]their deeds. 23 I will kill her children with death, and all the churches shall know that I am He who [f]searches[7] the minds and hearts. And I will give to each one of you according to your works.

24 "Now to you I say, [g]and to the rest in Thyatira, as many as do not have this doctrine, who have not known the [g]depths of Satan, as they say, [h]I [9]will put on you no other burden. 25 But hold fast [i]what you have till I come. 26 And he who overcomes, and keeps [j]My works until the end, [k]to him I will give power over the nations—as I also have received from My Father; 28 and I will give him [m]the morning star.

29 "He who has an ear, let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches."'

The Dead Church

3 "And to the [1]angel of the church in Sardis write,

'These things says He who [a]has the seven Spirits of God and the seven stars: "I know your works, that you have a name that you are alive, but you are dead. 2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die, for I have not found your works perfect before [2]God. 3 [b]Remember therefore how you have received and heard; hold fast and [c]repent. [d]Therefore if you will not watch, I will come upon you [e]as a thief, and you will not know what

■ 2:13 where Satan's throne is. Pergamos (Pergamum) possessed the oldest temple in Asia Minor devoted to emperor worship.

■ 2:14 Balaam. Balaam (Num. 22:5) gave Balak advice leading to Israel's "harlotry" in Moab (Num. 25:1–4). Jezebel (v. 20) and other professing Christians in the seven churches were indulging in pleasures offered by their pagan environment (17:1—19:10 note).

■ 2:15 Nicolaitans. See note on v. 6.

■ 2:17 hidden manna. Perhaps an allusion to the manna preserved in the Most Holy Place of the tabernacle (Ex. 16:33–35; Heb. 9:4). Christ promises to nourish the faithful with an unfailing supply of heavenly, spiritual food (John 6:32–58).

■ 2:18 fine brass. Or, bronze. Thyatira had a famous guild of bronze workers.

■ 2:20 Jezebel. See 1 Kin. 16:31; 19:1, 2; 21:5–26; 2 Kin. 9:30–37. The woman at Thyatira is called Jezebel because, like the Old Testament figure, she seduced people to sexual immorality and idolatry, two major forms of indulgence in pagan Asia Minor. See notes on 14:8 and 17:1—19:10.

■ 3:3 I will come . . . as a thief. The seemingly impregnable fortress of Sardis had in wartime been captured twice by surprise, probably at night. Christ warns that a similar experience will befall the church, unless its people wake up.

■ 3:9 synagogue of Satan. See note on 2:9.

■ 3:12 a pillar in the temple. Philadelphia had suffered from earthquakes, making the promise of security and stability particularly pointed.

■ 3:15 neither cold nor hot. Laodicea's water supply had to be provided from a distant source through pipes. The resulting water was lukewarm and barely drinkable. By contrast, the neighboring town of Hierapolis had medicinal hot springs, and neighboring Colosse was supplied by a cold mountain stream. Christ urges the church to be refreshing (cold) or medicinally healing (hot), rather than like the Laodicean water supply.

■ 4:1—5:14 God appears in a beautiful scene of worship as the King of heaven and earth. He is surrounded by angelic courtiers (1 Kin. 22:19; Job 1:6; 2:1; Ps. 89:6, 7; Ezek. 1; Dan. 7:9, 10). His rule was established in creation (4:11), is exercised in the panorama of history (6:1—22:5), is brought to fulfillment through the Lamb (ch. 5; 22:1) and is celebrated in songs of praise (1:6 note). Revelation is preeminently a book about God and His greatness. The secrets of history and of spiritual conflict center on God Himself. The whole universe is destined to be filled with the glory (21:22, 23) and goodness of God (22:1–5), and with His praise (5:13). Hence the pattern for the outcome of history is revealed in miniature here (Matt. 6:10).

When God's people are beset by temptation or persecution, a revelation of God's character and glory is the best remedy. His power guarantees the final victory, His justice guarantees vindication of the right, His goodness and magnificence guarantee blessing and comfort. The blood of the Lamb demonstrates that redemption has already been accomplished.

[j]Seven lamps of fire were burning before the throne, which are [k]the[4] seven Spirits of God.

6 Before the throne there [5]was [l]a sea of glass, like crystal. a throne set in heaven. God's kingly rule is a fundamental theme of the book. In the Old Testament, the tabernacle (Ex. 25—40) and temple (1 Kin. 5—7; 2 Chr. 2—4) were shadows of God's throne room in heaven (Ex. 25:40; Heb. 8:5, 6; 9:1–14). John sees the heavenly original rather than an earthly copy. Revelation fittingly contains many allusions to the temple (3:12; 7:15; 11:19; 14:15, 17; 15:5—16:1; 16:17; 21:22) and to elements within it. For example, there are the lamps (1:12; 4:5), the living creatures like cherubim (4:6–9), incense and prayer (5:8), songs of praise like those offered by the Levitical singers in the Old Testament (4:8, 11; 5:9–13; 1 Chr. 16), a sacrifice (5:6, 9), the ark of the covenant (11:19), the altar (11:1), and the outer court (11:2).

One sat on the throne. The details of God's appearance are not described, reminding us that His greatness and glory always exceed human comprehension. See note on 1:12–20.

■ 4:4 twenty-four elders. These angelic ministers (7:13) are here called "elders" because of their wisdom. As God's cabinet officers, they must reflect His own wisdom, which is symbolized by age (Dan. 7:9). The term "elder" also suggests an analogy with the church's elders who serve on earth; hence, some have suggested the elders here are simply a representation of the church.

■ 4:5 lightnings. God exhibits His power in a manner analogous to His self-revelation at Mount Sinai (Ex. 19:16–19) and other divine appearances (8:5; 11:19; 16:18; Ps. 18:11–15; Ezek. 1:4). He reminds the church of the power of His voice (1:10, 15 and notes) and the final shaking of creation still to come (11:19; 21:1; Heb. 12:25–27).

Seven lamps. See note on 1:12; cf. Zech. 4:2, 6. The sevenfold light of the Holy Spirit is the original light of which the seven-branched lampstand of Ex. 25:31–40 was a copy. The similarities with 1:12 suggest that the seven churches, as a true temple of God, are to give out light reflecting the very presence of God through His Spirit.

seven Spirits of God. The Holy Spirit (1:4 note).

■ 4:6 sea of glass. See 15:2; Ex. 24:10. This imagery might suggest a number of associations. The parallel verse in 15:2 calls to mind the waters of the Red Sea. The defeat of Pharaoh and the pushing back of the waters foreshadowed God's final victory over evil (Is. 51:9–11). If so, the sea of glass pictures waters subdued under God's power. Moreover, the extent and beauty of the crystal-like sea, when taken together with the precious stones in v. 3 and 21:18–21, suggest the magnificence and preciousness of God's throne. The numerous parallels elsewhere with the temple (4:2 note) might suggest that this sea is the heavenly counterpart of the sea in Solomon's temple (1 Kin. 7:23–25). Finally, the picture of heavenly water might suggest that God faithfully supplies water from heaven (Deut. 11:11). It is consistent with the style of Revelation to weave together a number of Old Testament images.

four living creatures. These angelic ministers of God are reminiscent of the living creatures or cherubim of Ezek. 1 and 10 and the seraphim of Is. 6. They are guardians and bearers of the throne of God, as in Gen. 3:24; Ex. 25:17–22; Ps. 18:10; 1 Chr. 28:18.

■ 4:11 God's servants bring songs of praise as a fitting response to His glory and deeds (1:6 note; Ex. 15:11; Is. 6:3).

You created. The praise and imagery of ch. 4 focus on creation, asserting God's sovereignty over the universe (1:8 note).

■ 5:1–14 John recounts two parts of a single magnificent vision of God's glory in chs. 4 and 5 (chs. 4; 5 note). A second dramatic act within the vision is introduced in 5:1. From creation in 4:11, the action shifts to a focus on redemption and re-creation. God's purposes of redemption and

[c]"Who is worthy to open the scroll and to loose its seals?" [3] And no one in heaven or on the earth or under the earth was able to open the scroll, or to look at it.

[4] So I wept much, because no one was found worthy to open [l]and read the scroll, or to look at it. [5] But one of the elders said to me, "Do not weep. Behold, [d]the Lion of the tribe of [e]Judah, [f]the Root of David, has [g]prevailed to open the scroll [h]and [2]to loose its seven seals."

[6] And I looked, [3]and behold, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood [i]a Lamb as though it had been slain, having seven horns and [j]seven eyes, which are [k]the seven Spirits of God sent out into all the earth. [7] Then He came and took the scroll out of the right hand [l]of Him who sat on the throne.

Worthy Is the Lamb

[8] Now when He had taken the scroll, [m]the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders fell down before the Lamb, each having a harp, and golden bowls full of incense, which are the [n]prayers of the saints. [9] And [o]they sang a new song, saying:

And to open its seals;
For You were slain,
And [q]have redeemed us to God [r]by Your blood
Out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation,
[10] And have made [4]us [s]kings[5] and [t]priests to our God;
And [6]we shall reign on the earth."

[11] Then I looked, and I heard the voice of many angels around the throne, the living creatures, and the elders; and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands, [12] saying with a loud voice:

"Worthy is the Lamb who was slain
To receive power and riches and wisdom,
And strength and honor and glory and blessing!"

[13] And [u]every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, I heard saying:

[v]"Blessing and honor and glory and power
Be to Him [w]who sits on the throne,
And to the Lamb, forever and [7]ever!"

[14] Then the four living creatures said, "Amen!" And the [8]twenty-four elders fell down and worshiped [9]Him who lives forever and ever.

rule can be accomplished only through One who is uniquely worthy—Jesus Christ. He is simultaneously the fierce Lion of the tribe of Judah, warring against God's enemies (17:14; 19:11–21), and the gentle Lamb that has been slain, who purchased His people with the blood of His atoning sacrifice (vv. 9, 10). Only God in His trinitarian fullness can accomplish these magnificent purposes. Note the presence of the Father ("Him who sat on the throne," vv. 1, 7), the Son ("Lamb," vv. 6, 7), and the Spirit of God (v. 6; 1:4 note), who is the horns and eyes of the Lamb.

This chapter constitutes the opening scene for the first cycle of judgments that lead up to the Second Coming of Christ (Introduction: Outline). The Lamb and the sealed scroll are introduced. The opening of the seals in 6:1—8:1 sets in motion a series of judgments that have their origin in God's throne and purpose, and that issue in His final manifestation as Judge. See notes on 6:12–17 and 8:1.

■ 5:1 scroll. The scroll might represent a number of things—God's covenant, His law, His promises, His plans, or perhaps a legal will. The close parallel with Dan. 12:4 makes it likely that the scroll is a heavenly book containing God's plan and the destiny of the world. The unsealing of the book implies the accomplishment of the things God has purposed. John weeps (v. 4) because he longs for God's purposes to be accomplished (Matt. 6:10), and it is hard to see how that can happen. However, through Christ's decisive sacrifice a whole host is redeemed (v. 9), and the purposes of the Exodus and of man's original dominion are finally fulfilled (v. 10).

■ 5:6 as though it had been slain. "As though" is used because the Lamb was slain, but is now alive "forevermore" (1:18). Only on the basis of Christ's death and resurrection can God's purposes for history be accomplished.

seven horns. Horns frequently represent power (Ps. 89:17; 92:10; Dan. 7:8; 8:3), in this case the power of Christ's Spirit-filled eternal life (John 3:34; Rom. 8:11; 1 Cor. 15:45).

seven Spirits of God. See note on 1:4.

■ 5:9 every tribe and tongue and people and nation. In spiritual battle, both God and Satan claim allegiances on a universal scale (7:9; 10:11; 11:9; 12:5; 13:7; 14:6, 8; 15:4; 17:15; 18:3; 19:15; 20:3). Through the merit and power of Christ's sacrifice, God's purposes will be accomplished, fulfilling the Abrahamic promise of blessing to all nations (7:9–17; 21:24–27; Gen. 12:3; 22:18; Is. 60:1–5).

■ 5:10 kings and priests. See note on 1:6.

■ 5:11–14 Praises that started in the inner circles of worship around the throne now extend outwards until they fill the universe.

First Seal: The Conqueror

6 Now [a]I saw when the Lamb opened one of the [f]seals; and I heard [b]one of the four living creatures saying with a voice like thunder, "Come and see." 2 And I looked, and behold, [c]a white horse. [d]He who sat on it had a bow; [e]and a crown was given to him, and he went out [f]conquering and to conquer.

Second Seal: Conflict on Earth

3 When He opened the second seal, [g]I heard the second living creature saying, "Come [z]and see." 4 [h]Another horse, fiery red, went out. And it was granted to the one who sat on it to [i]take peace from the earth, and that people should kill one another; and there was given to him a great sword.

Third Seal: Scarcity on Earth

5 When He opened the third seal, [j]I heard the third living creature say, "Come and see." So I looked, and behold, [k]a black horse, and he who sat on it had a pair of [l]scales[3] in his hand. 6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four living creatures saying, "A [4]quart of wheat for a [5]denarius, and three quarts of barley for a denarius; and [m]do not harm the oil and the wine."

Fourth Seal: Widespread Death on Earth

7 When He opened the fourth seal, [n]I heard the voice of the fourth living creature saying, "Come and see." 8 [o]So I looked, and behold, a pale horse. And the name of him who sat on it was Death, and Hades followed with him. And [6]power was given to them over a fourth of the earth, [p]to kill with sword, with hunger, with death, [q]and by the beasts of the earth.

Fifth Seal: The Cry of the Martyrs

9 When He opened the fifth seal, I saw under [r]the altar [s]the souls of those who had been slain [t]for the word of God and for [u]the testimony which they held. 10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, [v]"How long, O Lord, [w]holy and true, [x]until You judge and avenge our blood on those who dwell on the earth?" 11 Then a [y]white robe was given to each of them; and it was said to them [z]that they should rest a little while longer, until both the number of their fellow servants and their brethren, who would be killed as they were, was completed.

Sixth Seal: Cosmic Disturbances

12 I looked when He opened the sixth seal, [a]and [7]behold, there was a great earthquake; and [b]the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the [8]moon became like blood. 13 [c]And the stars

■ 6:1—8:1 Judgments from God's throne unfold as the seven seals are opened one by one. The participation of the Lamb reminds us that such judgments are based on His unique qualifications and accomplishments (ch. 5). In formal structure, 5:1—8:1 runs parallel to 8:2—11:19. Each has an opening scene introducing the origin of the judgments (ch. 5; 8:2–6). Six judgments follow (ch. 6; 8:7—9:21). A dramatic interlude promises care for God's people (ch. 7; 10:1—11:14). The seventh and climactic judgment follows the interlude (8:1; 11:15–19; Introduction: Outline). The seven judgments move forward toward the Second Coming, which occurs in 6:12–17 and 11:15–19. The first four of the seven judgments have an inner unity. The four living creatures of 4:6 and the four horsemen of Zech. 1:8 are reflected in 6:1–8. The four major regions of the world (dry land, sea, fresh water, and sky) are considered in 8:7–12.

■ 6:1–8 The four horsemen represent conquest, war, famine, and death. These calamities characterize an indefinite period before the Second Coming (Mark 13:6–8). Such things occurred in the tumults of the Roman Empire, and may be expected to occur now and before the Second Coming. The imagery is capable of multiple applications throughout the history of the church (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties). The seven churches were exhorted to put their confidence, not in the peace and prosperity supposedly achieved by Roman rule, but in God and His promises of a new world (2:17; 3:12; 21:4). When tumults occurred, they were assured that the Lamb was still in control—in fact, the tumults issued from His worthiness to break the seals and from the voice of the living creatures. Such judgments represented the chastening hand of God on a rebellious world (9:20, 21). The saints would be cared for in the midst of such trials (ch. 7). They were sealed as a mark of ownership and protection (7:1–10; 9:4) and given perfect rest in the end (7:15–17). Such promises hold for saints throughout the church age, no less than for the seven churches.

■ 6:2 white horse. On the basis of similarities with 19:11, some think that Christ appears here, conquering through the gospel. More probably, the white horse symbolizes conquest as one form of earthly calamity. Thus the calamity of vv. 1, 2 is parallel to the calamities of vv. 3–8 (6:1—8:1 note).

■ 6:6 a quart of wheat. Famine will come, so severe that a laborer's entire wages will go merely for food. Families will have to buy barley, a lower quality of grain. Oil and wine are spared, perhaps an indication that the rich will still be able to indulge themselves.

■ 6:9–11 Martyred saints cry out for justice, not because of selfish desires, but in tune with the justice of God's throne (v. 10). They desire to see God's justice fully manifested.

■ 6:10 those . . . on the earth. Revelation shows that humanity consists of two groups: the people of God, whose citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20), and, in opposition to them, the rebellious earth-dwellers (v. 15; 8:13; 11:10; 13:3, 8, 12, 14; 17:2, 8).

■ 6:12–17 All dwellers on earth and in the created universe itself experience God's judgment. These verses give the first of seven descriptions in Revelation of events associated with the Second Coming (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Literary Form). In Luke 21:25–27 and Mark 13:24–26 the coming of the Son of Man immediately follows unusual phenomena involving the sun, moon, and stars. The mention of seven of heaven fell to the earth, as a fig tree drops its late figs when it is shaken by a mighty wind.

14 [d]Then the sky [g]receded as a scroll when it is rolled up, and [e]every mountain and island was moved out of its place. 15 And the [f]kings of the earth, the great men, [l]the rich men, the commanders, the mighty men, every slave and every free man, [g]hid themselves in the caves and in the rocks of the mountains, 16 [h]and said to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us and hide us from the face of Him who [i]sits on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb! 17 For the great day of His wrath has come, [j]and who is able to stand?"

The Sealed of Israel

7 After these things I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, [a]holding the four winds of the earth, [b]that the wind should not blow on the earth, on the sea, or on any tree. 2 Then I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God. And he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom it was granted to harm the earth and the sea, 3 saying, [c]"Do not harm the earth, the sea, or the trees till we have sealed the servants of our God [d]on their foreheads." 4 [e]And I heard the number of those who were sealed. [f]One hundred and forty-four thousand [g]of all the tribes of the children of Israel were sealed:

5 of the tribe of Judah twelve thousand were sealed; of the tribe of Reuben twelve thousand were [l]sealed;
of the tribe of Gad twelve thousand were sealed;
6 of the tribe of Asher twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Naphtali twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Manasseh twelve thousand were sealed;
7 of the tribe of Simeon twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Levi twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Issachar twelve thousand were sealed;
8 of the tribe of Zebulun twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Joseph twelve thousand were sealed;
of the tribe of Benjamin twelve thousand were sealed.

A Multitude from the Great Tribulation

9 After these things I looked, and behold, [h]a great multitude which no one could number, [i]of all nations, tribes, peoples, and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, [j]clothed with white robes, with palm branches in their hands, 10 and crying out with a loud voice, saying, [k]"Salvation belongs to our God [l]who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb!" 11 [m]All the angels stood around the throne and the elders and the four living creatures, and fell on their faces before the throne and [n]worshiped God, 12 [o]saying:

"Amen! Blessing and glory and wisdom,
Thanksgiving and honor and power and might,
Be to our God forever and ever.
Amen."

13 Then one of the elders answered, saying to me, "Who are these arrayed in [p]white robes, and where did they come from?"
14 And I said to him, [2]"Sir, you know."
So he said to me, [q]"These are the ones who come out of the great tribulation, and [r]washed types of people (v. 15) suggests complete judgment, as does the characterization of "the great day of His wrath" (vv. 16, 17). Since this world is to be so thoroughly shaken, saints must place their hope in God (Luke 12:32–34; 1 Cor. 7:29–31; Heb. 12:25–29).

■ 7:1–17 The announcement of the seventh seal is dramatically delayed while the saints receive assurance that God knows them and protects them in the midst of the calamities depicted in ch. 6.

■ 7:3 sealed. The faithful are sealed as a sign of protection and ownership (9:4; 14:1; Ezek. 9:4).

■ 7:4–8 The balanced numbering suggests that "twelve" is a symbolic number for the fullness of the people of God. The early association of the tribe of Dan with idolatry (Judg. 18) may explain its omission from this list (21:8; 22:15). Some think that the 144,000 here includes only Jewish believers. But the "servants of our God" in v. 3 must include Gentile saints as well. The equal status of Gentiles and Jews in the seven churches (Eph. 2:11–22) and the promises associated only with the 144,000 (9:4; 14:1–5) confirm this. According to vv. 1–8, the saints are known by God individually, and none slips by His care (Matt. 10:30); according to vv. 9–17, no human can count their number.

■ 7:14 great tribulation. Many identify the "great tribulation" with a final period of persecution shortly before the Second Coming. But tribulations for Christians occur throughout the church age, so that the whole age can also be characterized as a time of tribulation (2 Thess. 1:5, 6; 2 Tim. 3:1, 12). The passage was intended to comfort first-century Christians as well as those in the final crisis. See note on 11:2.

Seventh Seal: Prelude to the Seven Trumpets

8 When[a] He opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven for about half an hour. 2 [b]And I saw the seven angels who stand before God, [c]and to them were given seven trumpets. 3 Then another angel, having a golden censer, came and stood at the altar. He was given much incense, that he should offer it with [d]the prayers of all the saints upon [e]the golden altar which was before the throne. 4 And [f]the smoke of the incense, with the prayers of the saints, ascended before God from the angel's hand. 5 Then the angel took the censer, filled it with fire from the altar, and threw it to the earth. And [g]there were noises, thunderings, [h]lightnings, [i]and an earthquake.

6 So the seven angels who had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

First Trumpet: Vegetation Struck

7 The first angel sounded: [j]And hail and fire followed, mingled with blood, and they were thrown [k]to the [l]earth. And a third [l]of the trees were burned up, and all green grass was burned up.

Second Trumpet: The Seas Struck

8 Then the second angel sounded: [m]And something like a great mountain burning with fire was thrown into the sea, [n]and a third of the sea [o]became blood. 9 [p]And a third of the living creatures in the sea died, and a third of the ships were destroyed.

Third Trumpet: The Waters Struck

10 Then the third angel sounded: [q]And a great star fell from heaven, burning like a torch, [r]and it fell on a third of the rivers and on the springs of water. 11 [s]The name of the star is Wormwood. [t]A third of the waters became wormwood, and many men died from the water, because it was made bitter.

Fourth Trumpet: The Heavens Struck

12 [u]Then the fourth angel sounded: And a third of the sun was struck, a third of the moon, and a third of the stars, so that a third of them were darkened. A third of the day [2]did not shine, and likewise the night.

■ 8:1 silence in heaven. The next event after 6:12–17 would most naturally be the appearing of Christ Himself as the final Warrior and Judge (Mark 13:24–26). The silence may indicate that heaven stands in awe at His presence (Hab. 2:20; Zeph. 1:7). At this early point, the seer is not given a fuller picture disclosing the events of final judgment and recreation. This reserve maintains the reader's interest for later cycles of judgment.

■ 8:2—11:19 Seven angels blow seven trumpets. The trumpets set in motion seven judgments leading up to the Second Coming. The trumpets form the second cycle out of several that depict God's rule over history from various angles. On the structure of these judgments, see note on 6:1—8:1. Like the trumpets used in the battle of Jericho (Josh. 6), these trumpets lead up to the fall of the worldly city (11:8 note, 11:13), and in the seventh trumpet the complete victory of God arrives. The trumpet plagues are reminiscent of the plagues on Egypt, signifying God's judgments on idolatrous power.

The seven seals began with announcements of riders commissioned to bring calamities (6:1–8 note). The seven trumpets, by contrast, contain descriptions of the calamities themselves. The intensity of judgment has increased. Yet still some things are spared: most of the trumpet plagues fall on a third of the people or the land, not on all; the locust plague of 9:1–12 is over after five months; some people survive the collapse of the city in 11:13. By contrast, the later judgments with the bowls (15:1—16:21) are thoroughly devastating.

■ 8:2–6 The trumpet judgments issue from God's angels, who stand before His throne (v. 2). The vision of chs. 4; 5 remains an anchor point for this new cycle of visions. Like the seal judgments of 6:1—8:1, these judgments are executed according to God's plan and in accord with His orders. The prayers of the saints play a notable part in originating the judgments (vv. 3, 4).

■ 8:7–12 The first four trumpet plagues strike the four major regions of creation: land, sea, fresh water, and sky. The first four bowls affect the same four regions (16:1–9). Within the period of the early church, these visions were fulfilled both through natural calamities and through analogous spiritual calamities afflicting the souls of the wicked. In such apocalyptic imagery, the one type of calamity can represent the other. The general principles can be applied more broadly. Both human beings and the natural world undergo stress until the time of final renewal (Rom. 8:18–25). Final destruction of the natural universe, as well as the judgment of human beings, accompanies the Second Coming (2 Pet. 3:10, 12).

■ 8:7 hail and fire. Parallel to Ex. 9:23, 24.

■ 8:8 blood. Parallel to Ex. 7:14–24.

■ 8:12 darkened. Parallel to Ex. 10:21–23.

13 And I looked, [v]and I heard an [3]angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, [w]"Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, because of the remaining blasts of the trumpet of the three angels who are about to sound!"

Fifth Trumpet: The Locusts from the Bottomless Pit

9 Then the fifth angel sounded: [a]And I saw a star fallen from heaven to the earth. To him was given the key to [b]the [1]bottomless pit. 2 And he opened the bottomless pit, and smoke arose out of the pit like the smoke of a great furnace. So the [c]sun and the air were darkened because of the smoke of the pit. 3 Then out of the smoke locusts came upon the earth. And to them was given power, [d]as the scorpions of the earth have power. 4 They were commanded [e]not to harm [f]the grass of the earth, or any green thing, or any tree, but only those men who do not have [g]the seal of God on their foreheads. 5 And [2]they were not given authority to kill them, [h]but to torment them for five months. Their torment was like the torment of a scorpion when it strikes a man. 6 In those days [i]men will seek death and will not find it; they will desire to die, and death will flee from them.

7 [j]The shape of the locusts was like horses prepared for battle. [k]On their heads were crowns of something like gold, [l]and their faces were like the faces of men. 8 They had hair like women's hair, and [m]their teeth were like lions' teeth. 9 And they had breastplates like breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was [n]like the sound of chariots with many horses running into battle. 10 They had tails like scorpions, and there were stings in their tails. Their power was to hurt men five months. 11 And they had as king over them [o]the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in Hebrew is [3]Abaddon, but in Greek he has the name [4]Apollyon.

12 [p]One woe is past. Behold, still two more woes are coming after these things.

Sixth Trumpet: The Angels from the Euphrates

13 Then the sixth angel sounded: And I heard a voice from the four horns of the [q]golden altar which is before God, 14 saying to the sixth angel who had the trumpet, "Release the four angels who are bound [r]at the great river Euphrates." 15 So the four angels, who had been prepared for the hour and day and month and year, were released to kill a [s]third of mankind. 16 Now [t]the number of the army [u]of the horsemen was two hundred million; [v]I heard the number of them. 17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision: those who sat on them had breastplates of fiery red, hyacinth blue, and sulfur yellow; [w]and the heads of the horses were like the heads of lions; and out of their mouths came fire, smoke, and brimstone. 18 By these three plagues a third of mankind was killed—by the fire and the smoke and the brimstone which came out of their mouths. 19 For [5]their power is in their mouth and in their tails; [x]for their tails are like serpents, having heads; and with them they do harm.

20 But the rest of mankind, who were not killed by these plagues, [y]did not repent of the works of their hands, that they should not worship [z]demons, [a]and idols of gold, silver, brass, stone, and wood, which can neither see nor hear nor walk. 21 And they did not repent of their murders [b]or their [6]sorceries or their sexual immorality or their thefts.

■ 8:13 Woe. A typical beginning to a prophetic oracle (e.g., Amos 5:18; 6:1). The three last trumpets are grouped together as three woes (9:12; 11:14). These plagues explicitly differentiate between the righteous and the wicked, as did the later Egyptian plagues.

■ 9:1–12 The trumpet blast sets in motion a horrific army of locusts, energized by demonic sources (vv. 1, 2). The imagery derives from Ex. 10:13–15 and Joel 2:1–11, where a literal locust plague foreshadows even more devastating judgment coming from a divinely commissioned army (Joel 2:11). Their terrorizing powers compare only to those of the beast (13:1–10). These infernal monsters attack only the wicked, not the saints (v. 4).

The wicked sometimes suffer even in this life as a preview of their final punishment (20:11–15). According to idealist interpreters (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties), the vision depicts the self-defeating and tormenting nature of wickedness in the human soul. Powers from the abyss attack not the saints but only the wicked. Historicists have generally seen the vision as a depiction of Islamic conquest of a degenerate Western Europe (A.D. 612–762), but such an application would be only one embodiment of the principle, and an imperfect one at that. Futurists understand the vision as a supernatural plague of demonic spirits, to be loosed on the earth shortly before the Second Coming. The fundamental principle is the same in all these interpretations, and multiple applications of the principle are possible.

■ 9:5 five months. A normal locust swarm would move on after a few days. This demonic swarm stays for the whole period during which locusts might be seen.

■ 9:11 Apollyon. Hebrew Abaddon and Greek Apollyon both mean "destroyer." There may be an ironic allusion to Nero or Domitian, both of whom saw themselves as similar to the Greek god Apollo.

■ 9:13–21 The Roman Empire feared an attack of the Parthians from beyond the Euphrates (v. 14), the eastern border of the empire. But all such fears are dwarfed by what Revelation pictures. Outside threats experienced by the Roman Empire presage the final day of cosmic battle (16:14). The events of these verses are similar to those of 16:14, but the consequences are less severe, leaving time for repentance (vv. 18–21).

The Mighty Angel with the Little Book

10 I saw still another mighty angel coming down from heaven, clothed with a cloud. [a]And a rainbow was on [b]his head, his face was like the sun, and [c]his feet like pillars of fire. 2 He had a little book open in his hand. [d]And he set his right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land, 3 and cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roars. When he cried out, [e]seven thunders uttered their voices. 4 Now when the seven thunders [1]uttered their voices, I was about to write; but I heard a voice from heaven saying [2]to me, [f]"Seal up the things which the seven thunders uttered, and do not write them."

5 The angel whom I saw standing on the sea and on the land [g]raised up his [3]hand to heaven 6 and swore by Him who lives forever and ever, [h]who created heaven and the things that are in it, the earth and the things that are in it, and the sea and the things that are in it, [i]that there should be delay no longer, 7 but [j]in the days of the sounding of the seventh angel, when he is about to sound, the mystery of God would be finished, as He declared to His servants the prophets.

John Eats the Little Book

8 Then the voice which I heard from heaven spoke to me again and said, "Go, take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel who stands on the sea and on the earth."

9 So I went to the angel and said to him, "Give me the little book."

And he said to me, [k]"Take and eat it; and it will make your stomach bitter, but it will be as sweet as honey in your mouth."

10 Then I took the little book out of the angel's hand and ate it, [l]and it was as sweet as honey in my mouth. But when I had eaten it, [m]my stomach became bitter. 11 And [4]he said to me, "You must prophesy again about many peoples, nations, tongues, and kings."

The Two Witnesses

11 Then I was given [a]a reed like a measuring rod. [1]And the angel stood, saying, [b]"Rise and measure the temple of God, the altar, and those who worship there. 2 But leave out [c]the court which is outside the temple, and do not measure it, [d]for it has been given to the Gentiles. And they will [e]tread the holy city underfoot for [f]forty-two months. 3 And I will give power to

■ 10:1—11:14 Between the sixth and seventh trumpet there is an interlude with two scenes (ch. 10 and 11:1–14). Both scenes concern the role of God's people and their prophetic witness during the time of trial. In the first scene John receives prophetic messages and is commissioned to proclaim them. The second depicts the history of the two witnesses and their larger environment.

■ 10:1–11 Dan. 10:5, 6 and the call of Ezekiel (Ezek. 2:1—3:11) are paralleled in this chapter. John receives the prophetic messages of a "little book." Some have thought that the book (actually a scroll, the same Greek word as in 5:1) contains the contents of 12:1—22:5, and that 12:1 begins a new major division in the structure of Revelation. More likely, the vision of this chapter speaks in a general fashion of John's receiving power to continue to prophesy. Though John's role is unique, he is still in many ways an example and pattern for the church's witness (1:2 note). The church must take to heart the message of the book (1:3), live by it, and be ready to communicate its implications to "peoples, nations, tongues, and kings" (v. 11).

■ 10:1, 2 A mighty angel appears, reflecting the very glory of God and His throne room (cf. 1:14–16; Ezek. 1:27, 28; Dan. 10:5, 6). The angel's majesty reinforces the authority and divine source of the message.

■ 10:9 make your stomach bitter. The contents of the book contain news of suffering.

sweet as honey. See Ps. 19:10; 119:103; Ezek. 2:3. The Word of God provides communion with God and His goodness; hence, sweetness accompanies even the message of woe.

■ 10:11 many peoples. See note on 5:9.

■ 11:1–14 This second part of the interlude concentrates on the story of the two witnesses. Like Moses and Elijah, these witnesses perform striking miracles (vv. 5, 6). Other Old Testament backgrounds are woven into the vision. The mention of two olive trees and lampstands (v. 4) likens the witnesses to the vision of Zech. 4, in which the trees probably symbolize the ruling and priestly offices of Zerubbabel and Joshua. Thus the witnesses are prominent representatives of God. The witnesses' stand against "the beast" (vv. 7–10) reminds us of the conflicts against bestial kingdoms in Daniel. There is a reminder of wicked, oppressive cities and powers in v. 8: Sodom, Egypt, and the Jerusalem that crucified Jesus. The resurrection in vv. 11, 12 recalls of the resurrection of Christ, but also the language of Ezek. 37 and the rapture of Elijah. The two witnesses, along with John (ch. 10), are models for the saints. All are to be faithful to the testimony of Jesus, even in the face of violent persecution from the beast. They must be willing to face martyrdom, God guaranteeing their vindication (vv. 11, 12).

■ 11:1, 2 The description is reminiscent of the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. Assuming that Revelation was written before A.D. 70, some interpreters see chs. 6—11 or even larger portions of Revelation as prophecy concerning the fall of Jerusalem. But these verses may just as easily be a figure of the preservation of God's people in the midst of attacks. The temple represents the presence of God on earth, especially through His people (chs. 4; 5 note). Measurement signifies God's knowledge and care (Ezek. 40; 41). The altar and those who worship there represent the true worshipers of God, who are sealed and protected (ch. 7). The destruction of the outer court represents the attack of outsiders on God's people.

■ 11:2 forty-two months. A time of distress and intense conflict between God's people and their opponents (13:5). It is also described as 1,260 days (v. 3; 12:6) or "a time and times and half a time" (i.e., three and a half years, 12:14). It is half of seven years, which from a symbolic point of view suggests a complete period of suffering, cut short by half. The main background is found in Dan. 7:25, which in turn is related to other passages (Dan. 9:27; 12:7, 11, 12). Some futurist interpreters look for a period of time of this length shortly before the Second Coming. But like other numbers in Revelation, this one may be symbolic in character, relating to the three and a half days in vv. 9, 11. It would then designate a persecution of limited length.

■ 11:3 two witnesses. Possibly two literal individual human beings are in view: either two Christian prophets who were martyred shortly before the fall of Jerusalem, or two prophets who will appear shortly before the Second Coming. But their identification with two lampstands (v. 4) sugmy two [g]witnesses, [h]and they will prophesy [i]one thousand two hundred and sixty days, clothed in sackcloth."

4 These are the [j]two olive trees and the two lampstands standing before the [2]God of the earth. 5 And if anyone wants to harm them, [k]fire proceeds from their mouth and devours their enemies. [l]And if anyone wants to harm them, he must be killed in this manner. 6 These [m]have power to shut heaven, so that no rain falls in the days of their prophecy; and they have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to strike the earth with all plagues, as often as they desire.

The Witnesses Killed

7 When they [n]finish their testimony, [o]the beast that ascends [p]out of the bottomless pit [q]will make war against them, overcome them, and kill them. 8 And their dead bodies will lie in the street of [r]the great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, [s]where also [3]our Lord was crucified. 9 [t]Then those from the peoples, tribes, tongues, and nations [4]will see their dead bodies three-and-a-half days, [u]and not allow their dead bodies to be put into graves. 10 [v]And those who dwell on the earth will rejoice over them, make merry, [w]and send gifts to one another, [x]because these two prophets tormented those who dwell on the earth.

The Witnesses Resurrected

11 [y]Now after the three-and-a-half days [z]the breath of life from God entered them, and they stood on their feet, and great fear fell on those who saw them. 12 And [5]they heard a loud voice from heaven saying to them, "Come up here." [a]And they ascended to heaven [b]in a cloud, [c]and their enemies saw them. 13 In the same hour [d]there was a great earthquake, [e]and a tenth of the city fell. In the earthquake seven thousand people were killed, and the rest were afraid [f]and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 [g]The second woe is past. Behold, the third woe is coming quickly.

Seventh Trumpet: The Kingdom Proclaimed

15 Then [h]the seventh angel sounded: [i]And there were loud voices in heaven, saying, [j]"The [6]kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, [k]and He shall reign forever and ever!" 16 And [l]the twenty-four elders who sat before God on their thrones fell on their faces and [m]worshiped God, 17 saying:

"We give You thanks, O Lord God Almighty,
The One [n]who is and who was [7]and who is to come,
Because You have taken Your great power [o]and reigned.
18 The nations were [p]angry, and Your [8]wrath has come,
And the time of the [q]dead, that they should be judged,
And that You should reward Your servants the prophets and the saints,
And those who fear Your name, small and great,
And should destroy those who destroy the earth."

19 Then [r]the temple of God was opened in heaven, and the ark of [9]His covenant was seen in His temple. And [s]there were lightnings, noises, thunderings, an earthquake, [t]and great hail.

gests they might be symbolic figures standing for the witness of the lampstand churches of 1:20. If this is the case, they would symbolize churches rather than specific individuals. Two lampstands, rather than seven, are mentioned to imitate the pattern of Zech. 4 and of Moses and Elijah (11:1–14 note; cf. Deut. 17:6; Matt. 17:3, 4; Luke 10:1).

■ 11:7 the beast. See note on 13:2 and Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Other Features.

■ 11:8 the great city. This verse suggests to many that ancient Jerusalem is in view throughout this chapter (11:1, 2 note). But the symbolism has many potential applications. The city is the worldly city, representing humanity and human civilization in its rebellion against God. Babel, Sodom, Egypt, Jerusalem, ancient Rome, modern cities, and a final apostasy before the Second Coming are all examples. See Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties and note on 17:1—19:10.

three-and-a-half days. See note on v. 2.

■ 11:10 those who dwell on the earth. See note on 6:10.

■ 11:11, 12 If the two witnesses are individuals, their resurrection should presumably be interpreted literally. If the witnesses are symbolic of the churches, their resurrection symbolizes the victory of Christian witness after a time of intense persecution (6:9, 10; 20:1–6). See note on v. 3.

■ 11:15–19 The second cycle of judgments (8:2—11:19) closes with a second description of the Second Coming by focusing on the last judgment (v. 18) and the triumph of God's kingly rule (vv. 15, 17).

■ 11:19 the temple of God. See note on 4:2.

ark. The ark of the covenant was the most holy object in the tabernacle (Ex. 25:10–22). It was normally concealed from sight behind the tabernacle curtains. The revealing of this innermost object signifies that God has revealed His glory, both the glory of His law (the covenant words) and of His mercy (as signified by the atonement cover).

The Woman, the Child, and the Dragon

12 Now a great sign appeared in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, with the moon under her feet, and on her head a garland of twelve stars. 2 Then being with child, she cried out [a]in labor and in pain to give birth.

3 And another sign appeared in heaven: behold, [b]a great, fiery red dragon having seven heads and ten horns, and seven diadems on his heads. 4 [c]His tail drew a third [d]of the stars of heaven [e]and threw them to the earth. And the dragon stood [f]before the woman who was ready to give birth, [g]to devour her Child as soon as it was born. 5 She bore a male Child [h]who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron. And her Child was [i]caught up to God and His throne. 6 Then [j]the woman fled into the wilderness, where she has a place prepared by God, that they should feed her there [k]one thousand two hundred and sixty days.

Satan Thrown Out of Heaven

7 And war broke out in heaven: [l]Michael and his angels fought [m]with the dragon; and the dragon and his angels fought, 8 but they [l]did not prevail, nor was a place found for [2]them in heaven any longer. 9 So [n]the great dragon was cast out, [o]that serpent of old, called the Devil and Satan, [p]who deceives the whole world; [q]he was cast to the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 Then I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, [r]"Now salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ have come, for the accuser of our brethren, [s]who accused them before our God day and night, has been cast down. 11 And [t]they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, [u]and they did not love their lives to the death. 12 Therefore [v]rejoice, O heavens, and you who dwell in them! [w]Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and the sea! For the devil has come down to you, having great wrath, [x]because he knows that he has a short time."

The Woman Persecuted

13 Now when the dragon saw that he had been cast to the earth, he persecuted [y]the woman who gave birth to the male Child. 14 [z]But the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, [a]that she might fly [b]into the wilderness to her place, where she is nourished [c]for a time and times and half a time, from the presence of the serpent. 15 So the serpent [d]spewed water out of his mouth like a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away by the flood. 16 But the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened its mouth and swallowed up the flood which the

■ 12:1—14:20 This third cycle of visions consists primarily of histories of key symbolic characters: the dragon, the woman, the beast, the false prophet, the 144,000, angelic announcers, and the Son of Man (Introduction: Outline). Unlike the cycles of seven seals (5:1—8:1) and seven trumpets (8:2—11:19), these visions have no explicit numbering. But, like the preceding cycles, they lead to a vision of the Second Coming (14:14–20). The two preceding cycles focused on the judgments issuing from God's throne. This cycle depicts in depth the nature of the spiritual conflict. Characters appear in symbolic form to represent the forces on the two sides of a cosmic spiritual war.

God Himself has already been revealed in chs. 4; 5. Opposing God are Satan (the dragon) and his agents, the beast (13:1–10) and the false prophet (13:11–18; 16:13). On God's side are His people, portrayed as a light-bearing woman (12:1–6, 13–17) and as a chaste, numbered, and protected multitude (14:1–5). These two complementary pictures show the saints in their capacity as witnesses of God's light and as separated from the corruptions of the world. Thus the saints are exhorted to remain faithful to Christ in response to the persecution by the beast, and to remain pure by resisting the seduction by the harlot (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Content). The symbolic pictures show the two sides stripped of all inconsistency and confusion to clearly express the nature of spiritual warfare (Eph. 6:10–20). The present conflicts will be followed by the peace of 21:1—22:5 when the fulfillment of God's plans takes effect.

■ 12:1 a woman. The imagery calls to mind Joseph's dream (Gen. 37:9, 10) and the picture of Jerusalem bringing forth the Messiah and His remnant (Is. 54:1–4; 66:7–13; Mic. 5:3). The Old Testament saints collectively are in view. Mary the mother of Jesus is included in this group, but only as an outstanding member of the whole. The later history shows that the New Testament saints also are included (vv. 13–17). The light-bearing character of the woman foreshadows the glory of the new Jerusalem (21:11, 22–27). In her privileges the church now already partakes in the blessings to come. But she is still buffeted by Satan (chs. 12—14 note).

■ 12:3 a great, fiery red dragon. This figure is identified as Satan, the devil, in v. 9. The image of a dragon depicts Satan in his monstrous power and hideous enmity against God. Satan has constantly opposed the plans of God and has been repeatedly defeated in the great acts of God's saving power (Gen. 3:1, 15; Ps. 74:13, 14; Is. 27:1; 51:9, 10; Ezek. 29:3; Luke 10:18; 11:14–23; John 12:31; Col. 2:15). He rises against the Messiah (vv. 4, 5) and His servants (v. 17) but will finally be consigned to everlasting punishment (20:10).

■ 12:5 a male Child. In fulfillment of Mic. 5:3, Christ is born and His triumphant rule over the nations will be established, as certified by His resurrection and ascension.

■ 12:6 God promises protection for a persecuted church. On the 1,260 days, see note on 11:2.

■ 12:7–12 The victory of Christ (v. 5) results in sweeping consequences, beginning with the expulsion of Satan by Michael, who is functioning as an agent of Christ. The passage does not speak of the fall of Satan at the time of creation but of the defeat of Satan in the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ (v. 12; John 12:31; Col. 2:15).

■ 12:13–17 Having failed to destroy Christ (vv. 4, 5), the Dragon tries to destroy the people of Christ. He uses his mouth, representing deceit (vv. 15, 9; 2 Thess. 2:9, 10). When deceit fails, he tries persecuting power (12:17—13:10).

■ 12:14 a time and times and half a time. See note on 11:2.

dragon had spewed out of his mouth. 17 And the dragon was enraged with the woman, and he went to make war with the rest of her offspring, who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus [3]Christ.

The Beast from the Sea

13 Then [1]I stood on the sand of the sea. And I saw [a]a beast rising up out of the sea, [b]having [2]seven heads and ten horns, and on his horns ten crowns, and on his heads a [c]blasphemous name. 2 Now the beast which I saw was like a leopard, his feet were like the feet of a bear, and his mouth like the mouth of a lion. The [d]dragon gave him his power, his throne, and great authority. 3 And I saw one of his heads [e]as if it had been mortally wounded, and his deadly wound was healed. And [f]all the world marveled and followed the beast. 4 So they worshiped the dragon who gave authority to the beast; and they worshiped the beast, saying, [g]"Who is like the beast? Who is able to make war with him?"

5 And he was given [h]a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and he was given authority to [3]continue for [i]forty-two months. 6 Then he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme His name, [j]His tabernacle, and those who dwell in heaven. 7 It was granted to him [k]to make war with the saints and to overcome them. And [l]authority was given him over every [4]tribe, tongue, and nation. 8 All who dwell on the earth will worship him, [m]whose names have not been written in the Book of Life of the Lamb slain [n]from the foundation of the world.

9 [o]If anyone has an ear, let him hear. 10 [p]He who leads into captivity shall go into captivity; [q]he who kills with the sword must be killed with the sword. [r]Here is the [5]patience and the faith of the saints.

The Beast from the Earth

11 Then I saw another beast [s]coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb and spoke like a dragon. 12 And he exercises all the authority of the first beast in his presence, and causes the earth and those who dwell in it to worship the first beast, [t]whose deadly wound was healed. 13 [u]He performs great signs, [v]so that he even makes fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men. 14 [w]And he deceives [6]those who dwell on the earth [x]by those signs which he was granted to do in the sight of the beast, telling those who dwell on the earth to make an image to the beast who was wounded by the sword [y]and lived. 15 He was granted power to give breath to the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak [z]and cause as many as would not worship the image of the beast to be killed. 16 He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, [a]to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads,

■ 13:1–10 A beast rising out of the sea represents persecuting power, especially the power of a demonized state. See Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Other Features.

■ 13:2 leopard . . . bear . . . lion. This beast combines features from the four beasts of Dan. 7:1–8, 17–27, which represent idolatrous kingdoms. This beast in Revelation must be a worldly kingdom summing up all of them. In this way the state persecutions of Daniel and his friends suggest the nature of the persecution that the seven churches must face from the Roman state—and possibly persecutions of later ages. Interpreters disagree about which particular persecution the beast most directly represents (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties). In Asia Minor, local officials threatened to kill Christians if they refused to worship the Roman Emperor. A similar opposition to godly worship will crop up just before the Second Coming (2 Thess. 2:4). Persecutions come sporadically in the period between these two times (Matt. 24:9; 2 Tim. 3:12, 13; 1 Pet. 4:12–19). Both a repeated pattern of Satanic opposition and a final, climactic outbreak are apparently suggested in 2 Thess. 2:7, 8. Christians must not be surprised by these pressures. They must face martyrdom, if necessary, knowing that God is in control and that His triumph is certain.

■ 13:5 forty-two months. See note on 11:2.

■ 13:7 war with the saints. The beast compels worship (v. 8), and when the saints refuse to submit, they are martyred. But despite their apparent defeat, martyrs enjoy victory with Christ both immediately (6:9–11) and when their prayers for the final defeat of the beast are answered (19:11–21).

tribe, tongue, and nation. See note on 5:9.

■ 13:8 Book of Life. The Greek may also be rendered "written in the slain Lamb's Book of Life from the foundation of the world" (cf. 17:8). The book is the heavenly roster of those destined to new life through the purchase of Christ's blood (3:5; 5:9). In the midst of persecution and the immense power of the beast, the saints may find security in God's guarantee of their heavenly citizenship (17:8; 20:12, 15; 21:27). A similar guarantee is found in ch. 7.

■ 13:10 patience. See note on 1:9.

■ 13:11–18 The beast from the earth, also called the false prophet (16:13; 19:20; 20:10), functions as a propagandist for the beast. His actions counterfeit the witness of the Holy Spirit (see Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Other Features). In first-century Asia Minor, the main propagandists would have been priests of the emperor cult and the "Commune of Asia," a council of distinguished city representatives promoting loyalty to the emperor. In modern times as well, totalitarianism enlists propagandists. Just before the Second Coming, counterfeit miracles will accompany the appearance of the "man of sin" (2 Thess. 2:3, 9). The false prophet embodies a repeatable pattern (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties).

■ 13:16 a mark. The mark of the beast is a counterfeit for the seal of God's name on the saints (7:2–8; 14:1; Ezek. 9). The beast owns those who are marked, and they are his slaves (14:9; 19:20; 20:4). Speculations about a visible mark miss the main point of the spiritual distinction between the two groups.

18 [d]Here is wisdom. Let him who has [e]understanding calculate [f]the number of the beast, [g]for it is the number of a man: His number is 666.

The Lamb and the 144,000

14 Then I looked, and behold, [1]a [a]Lamb standing on Mount Zion, and with Him [b]one hundred and forty-four thousand, [2]having His Father's name [c]written on their foreheads. 2 And I heard a voice from heaven, [d]like the voice of many waters, and like the voice of loud thunder. And I heard the sound of [e]harpists playing their harps. 3 They sang as it were a new song before the throne, before the four living creatures, and the elders; and no one could learn that song [f]except the hundred and forty-four thousand who were redeemed from the earth. 4 These are the ones who were not defiled with women, [g]for they are virgins. These are the ones [h]who follow the Lamb wherever He goes. These [i]were [3]redeemed from among men, [j]being first-fruits to God and to the Lamb. 5 And [k]in their mouth was found no [4]deceit, for [l]they are without fault [5]before the throne of God.

The Proclamations of Three Angels

6 Then I saw another angel [m]flying in the midst of heaven, [n]having the everlasting gospel to preach to those who dwell on the earth—[o]to every nation, tribe, tongue, and people— 7 saying with a loud voice, [p]"Fear God and give glory to Him, for the hour of His judgment has come; [q]and worship Him who made heaven and earth, the sea and springs of water."

8 And another angel followed, saying, [r]"Babylon[6] is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because [s]she has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication."

9 Then a third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, [t]"If anyone worships the beast and his image, and receives his [u]mark on his forehead or on his hand, 10 he himself [v]shall also drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is [w]poured out full strength into [x]the cup of His indignation. [y]He shall be tormented with [z]fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb. 11 And [a]the smoke of their torment ascends forever and ever; and they have no rest day or night, who worship the beast and his image, and whoever receives the mark of his name."

12 [b]Here is the [7]patience of the saints; [c]here[8] are those who keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus.

13 Then I heard a voice from heaven saying [9]to me, "Write: [d]'Blessed are the dead [e]who die in the Lord from now on.' "

"Yes," says the Spirit, [f]"that they may rest from their labors, and their works follow [g]them."

Reaping the Earth's Harvest

14 Then I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and on the cloud sat One like the Son of Man, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle. 15 And another angel [h]came

■ 13:18 666. By the time of Domitian, the earlier emperor Nero had become a traditional antichrist figure, and 666 was probably already known to be the numerical value associated with the name Nero Caesar in Hebrew. The number then designates either Nero himself (who was to rise from the dead and lead an invasion against Rome according to a widespread belief during Domitian's reign) or a later figure imitating Nero's godlessness. Many have tried to identify the final Antichrist on the basis of the number, but its connections with Nero may well be its only significance. We need to be always watchful for Christ's coming, without falling into trying to set dates (Matt. 24:36–51).

■ 14:1–5 The 144,000 represent the saints in their complete number (7:4–8 note). They form a priestly company (5:10) consecrated to offer praise to God on the holy mount.

■ 14:4 virgins. Sexual imagery is used to denote spiritual purity. Christ's faithful followers keep away from Babylon the harlot (v. 8; 17:1–6) and are loyal to Him exclusively, as His pure bride (19:7, 8; Eph. 5:26, 27). Purity in sexual behavior is included as one element in this comprehensive purity (1 Cor. 6:15–20).

wine . . . of her fornication. Sexual immorality, as well as idolatry (which is spiritual adultery), were major temptations for the seven churches (2:20 note). But the effect, like that of drunkenness, is shame, foolishness, and disgrace (17:2, 4; 18:3; 19:2; Prov. 9:13–18; Jer. 51:7).

■ 14:12 patience of the saints. See note on 1:9.

■ 14:14–20 A description of the Second Coming as the harvest over which Christ presides (Matt. 13:36–43; cf. Joel 3:12–16)—the "One like the Son of Man" (1:13; Dan. 7:13, 14). Two harvests are described, grain (vv. 14–16) and grapes (vv. 17–20). These are perhaps two aspects of the same events of judgment. However, the grain harvest may symbolize the harvest of the righteous (Luke 3:17), followed by the harvest of the wicked (grapes).

out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to Him who sat on the cloud, [i]"Thrust in Your sickle and reap, for the time has come [j]for You to reap, for the harvest [j]of the earth is ripe." 16 So He who sat on the cloud thrust in His sickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

Reaping the Grapes of Wrath

17 Then another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, [k]who had power over fire, and he cried with a loud cry to him who had the sharp sickle, saying, [l]"Thrust in your sharp sickle and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe." 19 So the angel thrust his sickle into the earth and gathered the vine of the earth, and threw it into [m]the great winepress of the wrath of God. 20 And [n]the winepress was trampled [o]outside the city, and blood came out of the winepress, [p]up to the horses' bridles, for one thousand six hundred [2]furlongs.

Prelude to the Bowl Judgments

15 Then [a]I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvelous: [b]seven angels having the seven last plagues, [c]for in them the wrath of God is complete.

2 And I saw something like [d]a sea of glass [e]mingled with fire, and those who have the victory over the beast, [f]over his image and [f]over his mark and over the [g]number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, [h]having harps of God. 3 They sing [i]the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the [j]Lamb, saying:

[k]"Great and marvelous are Your works,
Lord God Almighty!
[l]Just and true are Your ways,
O King of the [2]saints!
4 [m]Who shall not fear You, O Lord, and glorify Your name?
For You alone are [n]holy.
For [o]all nations shall come and worship before You,
For Your judgments have been manifested."

5 After these things I looked, and [3]behold, [p]the [4]temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened. 6 And out of the [5]temple came the seven angels having the seven plagues, [q]clothed in pure bright linen, and having their chests girded with golden bands. 7 [r]Then one of the four living creatures gave to the seven angels seven golden bowls full of the wrath of God [s]who lives forever and ever. 8 [t]The temple was filled with smoke [u]from the glory of God and from His power, and no one was able to enter the temple till the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.

16 Then I heard a loud voice from the temple saying [a]to the seven angels, "Go and pour out the [1]bowls [b]of the wrath of God on the earth."

CHAPTER 16

1 [a]Rev. 15:1 [b]Rev. 14:10 [1]NU, M seven bowls

■ 15:1—16:21 The cycle of seven bowls of God's wrath composes the fourth cycle of visions leading up to the Second Coming (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Literary Form). The opening scene of worship (15:1—16:1) calls to mind the worship around God's throne in chs. 4; 5. The overcomers rejoice in God's presence (15:3, 4). Seven resplendent angels receive bowls from the presence of God in the temple. The bowls symbolize the cup of God's wrath, which makes the nations drunk (14:10; 16:19; Is. 51:17, 20, 22; Jer. 25:15–29; Lam. 4:21; Ezek. 23:31–34; Hab. 2:16). The bowls are poured out at God's command (16:1), resulting in seven last plagues. The plagues lead up to the Second Coming, since "in them the wrath of God is complete" (15:1).

The seven bowls show notable similarities with the seven trumpets. The first four bowls, like the first four trumpets, result in devastation on the four major regions of creation: land, sea, fresh water, and sky. Like the trumpets, the bowls are reminiscent of the plagues against Egypt. But the bowls result in more severe judgments than did the trumpets. The trumpet judgments typically affected a third of the total, but the bowls affect the whole.

These bowls symbolize the judgments of God against evildoers. The general pattern may include both the judgments against the godless Roman Empire and the final crisis leading up to the Second Coming (Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties).

those who have the victory. The saints through their prayers have a role to play in the judgments of God (6:9–11). As in ch. 7, they are protected from the judgments that fall on the earth.

■ 15:3 song of Moses. An allusion to Ex. 15. Like the Israelites, the saints are delivered from idolatrous oppression through plagues sent from God.

Just. God's acts of judgment are never arbitrary or spiteful, but just payment for evil deeds (v. 4; 16:5, 7; 19:2, 11).

■ 15:5 the temple. The inner area of God's heavenly dwelling has already been pictured in chs. 4; 5 (note).

■ 15:6 pure bright linen. Linen was an Old Testament priestly clothing (Ex. 28:42; Lev. 16:4). The holiness of God's judgments is thereby emphasized (v. 3 note).

■ 15:7 four living creatures. See note on 4:6.

■ 15:8 smoke. Smoke or thick cloud frequently accompanies God's presence, especially when He is angry. The associations include Mount Sinai (Ex. 19:9, 16, 18; 20:18) and the visions of Isaiah and Ezekiel (Is. 6:4; Ezek. 1:4; cf. Num. 12:5; Ps. 18:8, 11; 74:1).

First Bowl: Loathsome Sores

2 So the first went and poured out his bowl [c]upon the earth, and a [2]foul and [d]loathsome sore came upon the men [e]who had the mark of the beast and those [f]who worshiped his image.

Second Bowl: The Sea Turns to Blood

3 Then the second angel poured out his bowl [g]on the sea, and [h]it became blood as of a dead man; [i]and every living creature in the sea died.

Third Bowl: The Waters Turn to Blood

4 Then the third angel poured out his bowl [j]on the rivers and springs of water, [k]and they became blood. 5 And I heard the angel of the waters saying:

[l]"You are righteous, [3]O Lord,
The One [m]who is and who [4]was and who is to be,
Because You have judged these things.
6 For [n]they have shed the blood [o]of saints and prophets,
[p]And You have given them blood to drink.
[5]For it is their just due."

7 And I heard [6]another from the altar saying, "Even so, [q]Lord God Almighty, [r]true and righteous are Your judgments."

Fourth Bowl: Men Are Scorched

8 Then the fourth angel poured out his bowl [s]on the sun, [t]and power was given to him to scorch men with fire. 9 And men were scorched with great heat, and they [u]blasphemed the name of God who has power over these plagues; [v]and they did not repent [w]and give Him glory.

Fifth Bowl: Darkness and Pain

10 Then the fifth angel poured out his bowl [x]on the throne of the beast, [y]and his kingdom became full of darkness; [z]and they gnawed their tongues because of the pain. 11 They blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and did not repent of their deeds.

Sixth Bowl: Euphrates Dried Up

12 Then the sixth angel poured out his bowl [a]on the great river Euphrates, [b]and its water was dried up, [c]so that the way of the kings from the east might be prepared. 13 And I saw three unclean [d]spirits like frogs coming out of the mouth of [e]the dragon, out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of [f]the false prophet. 14 For they are spirits of demons, [g]performing signs, which go out to the kings [7]of the earth and of [h]the whole world, to gather them to [i]the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 [j]"Behold, I am coming as a thief. Blessed is he who watches, and keeps his garments, [k]lest he walk naked and they see his shame."

16 [l]And they gathered them together to the place called in Hebrew, [8]Armageddon.

Seventh Bowl: The Earth Utterly Shaken

17 Then the seventh angel poured out his bowl into the air, and a loud voice came out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, [m]"It is done!" 18 And [n]there were noises and thunder-

■ 16:2 sore. Like the Egyptian plague of boils (Ex. 9:8–12).

■ 16:3, 4 blood. Like the Egyptian plague of blood (Ex. 7:14–24).

■ 16:5 righteous. See note on 15:3.

■ 16:10 darkness. Like the Egyptian plague of darkness (Ex. 10:21–23).

■ 16:14 to gather them to the battle. In the climactic battle all the forces of wickedness are assembled to make war against the warrior Lamb (17:14). The imagery alludes to the battle between God and Pharaoh in Ex. 15:2, but the panorama is universal in scope. Several passages in Revelation describe the battle with increasing detail and precision (17:13, 14; 19:11–21; 20:7–10; cf. 6:12–17), all based on the eschatological battle of Gog and Magog in Ezek. 38; 39. Throughout the church age there are times of intense confrontation between God and the forces of Satan (2:10, 13), but the most intense takes place at the Second Coming (19:11–21).

■ 16:16 Armageddon. A transliteration of the Hebrew for "mount of Megiddo." In ancient Israel, Megiddo was a key city overlooking a major travel route between the great kingdoms of Mesopotamia and Egypt. Huge armies could assemble in the neighboring Plain of Esdraelon. Thus it is a fitting name for the location of the climactic battle.

■ 16:17–21 The seventh bowl brings the cycle of judgments to an end. Like the other cycles, this one ends with the Second Coming (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Literary Form), though the symbols of ings and lightnings; [o]and there was a great earthquake, such a mighty and great earthquake [p]as had not occurred since men were on the earth. [19] Now [q]the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell. And [r]great Babylon [s]was remembered before God, [t]to give her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of His wrath. [20] Then [u]every island fled away, and the mountains were not found. [21] And great hail from heaven fell upon men, each hailstone about the weight of a talent. Men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail, since that plague was exceedingly great.

The Scarlet Woman and the Scarlet Beast

17 Then [a]one of the seven angels who had the seven bowls came and talked with me, saying [1]to me, "Come, [b]I will show you the judgment of [c]the great harlot [d]who sits on many waters, [2] [e]with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication, and [f]the inhabitants of the earth were made drunk with the wine of her fornication."

[3] So he carried me away in the Spirit [g]into the wilderness. And I saw a woman sitting [h]on a scarlet beast which was full of [i]names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. [4] The woman [j]was arrayed in purple and scarlet, [k]and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls, [l]having in her hand a golden cup [m]full of abominations and the filthiness of [2]her fornication. [5] And on her forehead a name was written:

[n]MYSTERY,
BABYLON THE GREAT,
THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

[6] I saw [o]the woman, drunk [p]with the blood of the saints and with the blood of [q]the martyrs of Jesus. And when I saw her, I marveled with great amazement.

The Meaning of the Woman and the Beast

[7] But the angel said to me, "Why did you marvel? I will tell you the [3]mystery of the woman and of the beast that carries her, which has the seven heads and the ten horns. [8] The beast that you saw was, and is not, and [r]will ascend out of the bottomless pit and [s]go to [4]perdition. And the Second Coming are not as obvious as in some other cases. Note the following features: the readers have been told that the end of the wrath of God would come with the seventh bowl (15:1); the removal of all islands and mountains in v. 20 corresponds to the final shaking of the earth in 6:14 and 20:11 (Heb. 12:26, 27); elsewhere the fall of Babylon is immediately followed by the marriage supper of the Lamb (19:1–10); in 17:14–17 the fall of Babylon is associated with the last battle, which takes place at the Second Coming (19:11–21). Moreover, that final battle was imminent in v. 16. The judgment of the seventh bowl continues the practice of drawing the imagery of the final battle from the conflict with Gog and Magog (v. 14 note) by grouping together an earthquake, the overturning of the mountains, and hail, as in Ezek. 38:19–23. Hence it describes the divine plague-judgments accompanying the battle; a description of other aspects of the battle is delayed until 19:11–21 in keeping with the dramatic plan of Revelation.

■ 17:1—19:10 Babylon the harlot appears, representing the seductions of the world (17:4; 18:3; see Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Other Features). "Babylon" is probably a symbol for the city of Rome (17:9 note, 17:18) with its immorality. Paganism made each of the cities of Asia Minor into a small manifestation of this Babylon. Full economic and social participation (13:17) involved attendance at pagan religious feasts and celebrations. Worship of the emperor was an expected expression of political allegiance. Pagans called Christians atheists because they did not worship the many gods, and called them haters of humankind because they withdrew from compromised forms of social life (1 Pet. 2:12; 4:3, 4). In reaction to this pressure, some professing Christians argued that participation in idolatrous feasts and sexual immorality were acceptable (2:12, 20; 1 Cor. 6:12–20). The woman Jezebel in 2:20–23 was a key seducer whose work is generalized and more deeply symbolized in Babylon the harlot (2:21, 22; cf. 17:2).

A few interpreters favor identifying Babylon, "the great harlot," with Jerusalem. In refusing to accept the Messiah, she became a prostitute in the imagery of the Old Testament (Is. 1:21; Ezek. 16; 23; Hos. 2; cf. Luke 11:47–51; 21:9–18). But Jerusalem was only one instance of a society seducing people away from true worship. Ancient Babylon was another, and accordingly Revelation takes up the language of the prophetic condemnations of Babylon and Tyre (Jer. 50; 51; Ezek. 27). Modern cities with their false religions and sexual exploitation are also forms of Babylon. Thus the symbolism of Babylon is capable of many historical embodiments, including the final, climactic manifestation of this "Babylon" just before the Second Coming.

When the destruction of false worship is complete (17:1—18:24), the true worshipers, the bride of the Lamb, stand out in their splendor and joy (19:1–10).

■ 17:3 in the Spirit. See note on 1:10.

scarlet beast. This prostitute rides upon a hideous beast, evidently the same beast as in 13:1–10. The beast, representing the Roman Empire, supports the city of Rome in its luxurious idolatry. It also spreads the practices of Rome throughout the empire. Eventually, however, the beast turns against the prostitute and destroys her (vv. 16, 17). The rapacious powers of Roman government and the Roman legions destroy prosperity, and eventually the military powers of surrounding tribes destroy the city of Rome completely. The lesson from Roman times can be generalized: idolatrous states end up destroying the very powers, riches, privileges, and people that they originally supported. False worship is self-destructive.

■ 17:4 fornication. See note on 2:20.

■ 17:7—18:24 Seven messages of judgment on Babylon are arranged into larger groups: three angelic messages of doom (17:7–18; 18:1–3; 18:4–8), three laments by those committed to Babylon (18:9–10, 11–17a, 17b–19), and a climactic pronouncement of the permanence of her fall (18:21–24). Note also the many allusions to Jer. 50; 51 and Ezek. 27.

■ 17:8 was, and is not, and will ascend. The description is a counterfeit of the sovereignty of God, which is proclaimed in 1:4, 8; 4:8. "And is not" indicates that persecution is at an ebb but will rise with renewed intensity in the future. The beast represents a repeated pattern of persecution, as did the four successive beasts of Dan. 7 (13:2 note).

Book of Life. See note on 13:8.

those who [t]dwell on the earth [u]will marvel, [v]whose names are not written in the Book of Life from the foundation of the world, when they see the beast that was, and is not, and [5]yet is.

9 [w]"Here is the mind which has wisdom: [x]The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sits. 10 There are also seven kings. Five have fallen, one is, and the other has not yet come. And when he comes, he must [y]continue a short time. 11 The [z]beast that was, and is not, is himself also the eighth, and is of the seven, and is going to [6]perdition.

12 [a]"The ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have received no kingdom as yet, but they receive authority for one hour as kings with the beast. 13 These are of one mind, and they will give their power and authority to the beast. 14 [b]These will make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb will [c]overcome them, [d]for He is Lord of lords and King of kings; [e]and those who are with Him are called, chosen, and faithful."

15 Then he said to me, [f]"The waters which you saw, where the harlot sits, [g]are peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues. 16 And the ten horns which you [7]saw on the beast, [h]these will hate the harlot, make her [i]desolate [j]and naked, eat her flesh and [k]burn her with fire. 17 [l]For God has put it into their hearts to fulfill His purpose, to be of one mind, and to give their kingdom to the beast, [m]until the words of God are fulfilled. 18 And the woman whom you saw [n]is that great city [o]which reigns over the kings of the earth."

The Fall of Babylon the Great

18 After[a] these things I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great authority, [b]and the earth was illuminated with his glory. 2 And he cried [1]mightily with a loud voice, saying, [c]"Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and [d]has become a dwelling place of demons, a prison for every foul spirit, and [e]a cage for every unclean and hated bird! 3 For all the nations [f]have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, [g]and the merchants of the earth have become rich through the [2]abundance of her luxury."

4 And I heard another voice from heaven saying, [h]"Come out of her, my people, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive of her plagues. 5 [i]For her sins [3]have reached to heaven, and [j]God has remembered her iniquities. 6 [k]Render to her just as she rendered [4]to you, and repay her double according to her works; [l]in the cup which she has mixed, [m]mix double for her. 7 [n]In the measure that she glorified herself and lived [5]luxuriously, in the same measure give her torment and sorrow; for she says in her heart, 'I sit as [o]queen, and am no widow, and will not see sorrow.' 8 Therefore her plagues will come [p]in one day—death and mourning and famine. And [q]she will be utterly burned with fire, [r]for strong is the Lord God who [6]judges her.

■ 17:9 seven mountains. Rome was built on seven mountains, or hills.

■ 17:10 Five have fallen. If Revelation was written about A.D. 67, these five may be the first five Roman emperors, beginning with Julius Caesar. The sixth is Nero, the currently reigning emperor. But it might also be the case that five simply represents an indefinite number of previous persecuting states (such as the beasts of Dan. 7). The presence of the sixth indicates in symbolic fashion that Christians are near the end, but not quite there.

■ 17:12 ten horns. The number "ten" goes back through v. 7 and 13:1 to Dan. 7:7, 24. But the beast of Revelation cannot simply be identified with the fourth beast of Daniel; rather, he is a combination of the characteristics of all four of Daniel's beasts. In Revelation, the ten horns are kingly confederates of the beast. In view of 16:12, 14, 16; 19:19; 20:8, the political powers beyond the borders of the Roman Empire are most directly in mind. Rome was eventually overrun by barbarian tribes. But the picture rises beyond the limitations of Rome and opens up a picture of the final battle in which the beast will enlist large-scale assistance.

■ 17:15 peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues. See note on 5:9.

■ 17:16 will hate the harlot. See note on 17:1—19:10.

■ 17:17 God has put it into their hearts. In the midst of trials, the saints are assured that God is in control even of this appalling conflict.

■ 18:1 his glory. Because of his exalted commission, the angel's splendor reflects that of God Himself (10:1, 2 note).

■ 18:2 dwelling place. See Jer. 50:39.

■ 18:3 wine of . . . her fornication. See note on 2:20.

■ 18:4 Come out. See Is. 48:20; 52:11; Jer. 50:8; 51:6, 45; 2 Cor. 6:17.

■ 18:5 reached to heaven. An ironic reminiscence of Gen. 11:4; Jer. 51:9.

■ 18:6 Render to her. Judgment fits the nature of the offense (Ex. 21:23–25).

■ 18:8 burned with fire. See Jer. 50:32.

fear of her torment, saying, [r]'Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! [w]For in one hour your judgment has come.'

11 "And [x]the merchants of the earth will weep and mourn over her, for no one buys their merchandise anymore: 12 [y]merchandise of gold and silver, precious stones and pearls, fine linen and purple, silk and scarlet, every kind of citron wood, every kind of object of ivory, every kind of object of most precious wood, bronze, iron, and marble; 13 and cinnamon and incense, fragrant oil and frankincense, wine and oil, fine flour and wheat, cattle and sheep, horses and chariots, and bodies and [z]souls of men. 14 The fruit that your soul longed for has gone from you, and all the things which are rich and splendid have [7]gone from you, and you shall find them no more at all. 15 The merchants of these things, who became rich by her, will stand at a distance for fear of her torment, weeping and wailing, 16 and saying, 'Alas, alas, [a]that great city [b]that was clothed in fine linen, purple, and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls! 17 [c]For in one hour such great riches [8]came to nothing.' [d]Every shipmaster, all who travel by ship, sailors, and as many as trade on the sea, stood at a distance 18 [e]and cried out when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, [f]'What is like this great city?'

19 [g]"They threw dust on their heads and cried out, weeping and wailing, and saying, 'Alas, alas, that great city, in which all who had ships on the sea became rich by her wealth! [h]For in one hour she [9]is made desolate.'

20 [i]"Rejoice over her, O heaven, and you [l]holy apostles and prophets, for [j]God has avenged you on her!"

Finality of Babylon's Fall

21 Then a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone and threw it into the sea, saying, [k]"Thus with violence the great city Babylon shall be thrown down, and [l]shall not be found anymore. 22 [m]The sound of harpists, musicians, flutists, and trumpeters shall not be heard in you anymore. No craftsman of any craft shall be found in you anymore, and the sound of a millstone shall not be heard in you anymore. 23 [n]The light of a lamp shall not shine in you anymore, [o]and the voice of bridegroom and bride shall not be heard in you anymore. For [p]your merchants were the great men of the earth, [q]for by your sorcery all the nations were deceived. 24 And [r]in her was found the blood of prophets and saints, and of all who [s]were slain on the earth."

Heaven Exults over Babylon

19 After these things [a]I [l]heard a loud voice of a great multitude in heaven, saying, "Alleluia! [b]Salvation and glory and honor and power belong to [2]the Lord our God! 2 For [c]true and righteous are His judgments, because He has judged the great harlot who corrupted the earth with her fornication; and He [d]has avenged on her the blood of His servants shed by her." 3 Again they said, "Alleluia! [e]Her smoke rises up forever and ever!" 4 And [f]the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshiped God who sat on the throne, saying, [g]"Amen! Alleluia!" 5 Then a voice came from the throne, saying, [h]"Praise our God, all you His servants and those who fear Him, [i]both[3] small and great!"

6 [j]And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, as the sound of many waters and as the sound of mighty thunderings, saying, "Alleluia! For [k]the[4] Lord God Omnipotent reigns! 7 Let us be glad and rejoice and give Him glory, for [l]the marriage of the Lamb has come, and His wife has made herself ready." 8 And [m]to her it was granted to be arrayed in fine linen, clean and bright, [n]for the fine linen is the righteous acts of the saints.

9 Then he said to me, "Write: [o]'Blessed are those who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb!' " And he said to me, [p]"These are the true sayings of God." 10 And [q]I fell at his feet to

■ 18:11 buys their merchandise. Kings, merchants, and sailors have been seduced to worship luxury.

■ 18:21 The finality of Babylon's fall is depicted by the irreversible act of throwing a large stone into the sea (Jer. 51:63, 64).

■ 19:1–10 The triumph of the pure bride is contrasted with the destruction of the corrupt false church (Babylon). Note the repeated "Alleluia!" (vv. 1, 3–6).

■ 19:2 righteous. See note on 15:3.

■ 19:4 twenty-four elders . . . four living creatures. See notes on 4:4, 6. The final celebration of God's victory fittingly takes place before His presence in the company of the heavenly host (Heb. 12:22–24).

■ 19:7 marriage of the Lamb. The wedding imagery expresses the intimacy, love, and joy between Christ and His people. It fulfills the commitments expressed earlier in Scripture (Is. 54:5–8; Hos. 2:19, 20; Eph. 5:26, 27).

■ 19:9 marriage supper. Note the contrasts between this blessed feast and the horrific feast of vv. 17, 18.

■ 19:10 the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. The angel is a fellow servant of the prophets (22:9). John has the spirit of prophecy (22:6); he receives the testimony (witness) that Jesus gives and presents it to the church (1:2; 6:9). John's ministry compares to that of the angels.

Christ on a White Horse

11 [v]Now I saw heaven opened, and behold, [w]a white horse. And He who sat on him was called [x]Faithful and True, and [y]in righteousness He judges and makes war. 12 [z]His eyes were like a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns. [a]He [5]had a name written that no one knew except Himself. 13 [b]He was clothed with a robe dipped in blood, and His name is called [c]The Word of God. 14 [d]And the armies in heaven, [e]clothed in [6]fine linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses. 15 Now [f]out of His mouth goes a [7]sharp sword, that with it He should strike the nations. And [g]He Himself will rule them with a rod of iron. [h]He Himself treads the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. 16 And [i]He has on His robe and on His thigh a name written:

[j]KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS.

The Beast and His Armies Defeated

17 Then I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the birds that fly in the midst of heaven, [k]"Come and gather together for the [8]supper of the great God, 18 [l]that you may eat the flesh of kings, the flesh of captains, the flesh of mighty men, the flesh of horses and of those who sit on them, and the flesh of all people, [9]free and slave, both small and great."

19 [m]And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army. 20 [n]Then the beast was captured, and with him the false prophet who worked signs in his presence, by which he deceived those who received the mark of the beast and [o]those who worshiped his image. [p]These two were cast alive into the lake of fire [q]burning with brimstone. 21 And the rest [r]were killed with the sword which proceeded from the mouth of Him who sat on the horse. [s]And all the birds [t]were filled with their flesh.

Satan Bound 1000 Years

20 Then I saw an angel coming down from heaven, [a]having the key to the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. 2 He laid hold of [b]the dragon, that serpent of old, who is the Devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years; 3 and he cast him into the bottomless

CHAPTER 20

1 [a]Rev. 1:18; 9:1

2 [b]2 Pet. 2:4

■ 19:11–21 The sixth cycle of judgments leading to the Second Coming (Introduction: Characteristics and Themes: Literary Form) is presented in these verses. In the latter cycles the imagery concentrates more and more intensively on the Second Coming and the events that immediately precede it. In this cycle, all the events are actually part of the Second Coming. But, as is typical of Revelation, they reveal principles of spiritual war that have been operative throughout the church age (Eph. 6:10–20; 1 John 5:4, 5). At the end, Jesus Christ is revealed (22:13; Heb. 13:8).

Christ appears to wage final battle against all the enemies of God, led by the beast and the false prophet. Christ's holy attributes contrast markedly with the unholy counterfeit attributes of the beast (13:1–10 note). This final war brings to a climax all the wars that God has waged on behalf of His people (Ex. 15:2; Deut. 20; Is. 59:16–18; Ezek. 38; 39; Hab. 3:8–15; Zech. 12:1–9; 14:3–5) and consummates the triumph achieved by Christ on the cross (5:9, 10; 12:10, 11; John 12:31; Col. 2:15). Some have interpreted the imagery as a reference to the spread of Christ's rule through submission to the gospel, but the parallels with other visions show that the final battle is primarily in view (16:14, 16–21 and notes; 17:14; 20:7–10).

■ 19:11 heaven opened. In contrast to 4:1, the heavenly presence of God is now revealed not merely to John the seer but to the whole of humanity. The appearance of Christ in His majesty must mean the end of the battle and the destruction of all enemies before Him.

■ 19:17 the supper. See Ezek. 39:4, 17–20.

■ 19:19 beast. See note on 13:1–10.

armies, gathered together. See note on 16:14.

■ 19:20 lake of fire. Hell, the place of everlasting torment for the wicked (14:9, 10; 20:10, 14, 15; 21:8; Is. 66:24). Fire is frequently associated with all-consuming judgment (Is. 66:15, 16; Joel 2:3). See "Hell" at Mark 9:43.

■ 20:1–10 An angel descending from heaven binds Satan for a thousand years (see Introduction: Interpretive Difficulties: The Millennium). The faithful martyrs (v. 4) come to life and reign with Christ. After the thousand years, Satan is released, gathers the nations for battle, and is finally rendered powerless (v. 10).

■ 20:2 bound him. Satan's power to influence the nations is suppressed. Premillennialists and some postmillennialists associate this event with the beginning of an extraordinary future era of peace and prosperity, contrasting with the present (1 Thess. 2:18; 1 Pet. 5:8). Amillennialists think that the binding of Satan has already taken place through Christ's death and resurrection (12:9; Matt. 12:29; John 12:31; Col. 2:15). The present spread of the gospel to the nations, as initiated in Acts, is the result of a restriction on Satan's power to deceive. Possibly this restriction on Satan's power is closely associated with the present temporary demise of the beast (17:8).

■ 20:3 deceive the nations. See vv. 8, 10; 13:14; 16:14; 19:20.

pit, and shut him up, and [c]set a seal on him, [d]so that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years were finished. But after these things he must be released for a little while.

The Saints Reign with Christ 1000 Years

4 And I saw [e]thrones, and they sat on them, and [f]judgment was committed to them. Then I saw [g]the souls of those who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, [h]who had not worshiped the beast [i]or his image, and had not received his mark on their foreheads or on their hands. And they [j]lived and [k]reigned with Christ for [l]a thousand years. 5 But the rest of the dead did not live again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. 6 Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection. Over such [l]the second death has no power, but they shall be [m]priests of God and of Christ, [n]and shall reign with Him a thousand years.

Satanic Rebellion Crushed

7 Now when the thousand years have expired, Satan will be released from his prison 8 and will go out [o]to deceive the nations which are in the four corners of the earth, [p]Gog and Magog, [q]to gather them together to battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea. 9 [r]They went up on the breadth of the earth and surrounded the camp of the saints and the beloved city. And fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them. 10 The devil, who deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone [s]where[2] the beast and the false prophet are. And they [t]will be tormented day and night forever and ever.

The Great White Throne Judgment

11 Then I saw a great white throne and Him who sat on it, from whose face [u]the earth and the heaven fled away. [v]And there was found no place for them. 12 And I saw the dead, [w]small and great, standing before [3]God, [x]and books were opened. And another [y]book was opened, which is the Book of Life. And the dead were judged [z]according to their works, by the things which were written in the books. 13 The sea gave up the dead who were in it, [a]and Death and Hades delivered up the dead who were in them. [b]And they were judged, each one according to his works. 14 Then [c]Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. [d]This is the second [4]death. 15 And anyone not found written in the Book of Life [e]was cast into the lake of fire.

All Things Made New

21 Now [a]I saw a new heaven and a new earth, [b]for the first heaven and the first earth had passed away. Also there was no more sea. 2 Then I, [f]John, saw [c]the holy city, New Jerureigned. See 2:26, 27; 3:21.

■ 20:5, 6 the first resurrection. If this resurrection means bodily resurrection, it coincides with the Second Coming (1 Cor. 15:51–57; 1 Thess. 4:13–18) and the premillennialists are correct (vv. 1–10 note). On the other hand, the language concerning the second death in vv. 6, 14 and 21:8 suggests a contrast between the first death and the second. The first death is bodily death, but it is only preliminary, not ultimate. The second death is ultimate and spiritual in character. Likewise, the first and second resurrections may be preliminary and ultimate, respectively. The first is spiritual, the second is of the body. The first resurrection is then to be understood as coinciding either with spiritual new birth (John 5:24, 25) or with going to be with Christ at the time of bodily death (6:9, 10; 2 Cor. 5:8; Phil. 1:23). In view of the concern in Revelation for vindicating martyrs (v. 4 note), the latter alternative seems preferable.

■ 20:6 priests. See note on 1:6.

■ 20:8 Gog and Magog. These names, taken from Ezek. 38; 39, represent the final enemies of God.

gather them together to battle. See 16:14.

■ 20:11–15 God appears in a scene of final judgment. God's authority to judge has already been anticipated in chs. 4; 5. Now He executes the judgment that befits His character and power over the created universe. The vision shares features with Ps. 7:6–8; 47:8, 9; Dan. 7:9, 10 and other Old Testament judgment scenes (cf. Matt. 25:31–46).

Injustices and sufferings in history never escape God's eye. Those who persecute and practice injustice cannot ultimately win. God will judge every deed, all wrongs will be righted, and all attempts to dethrone God and enthrone anything or anyone else will be turned around to frustrate God's enemies completely. The prospect of final judgment ought to be a terror to God's enemies but a foundation of assurance to the saints.

This judgment follows the thousand years of vv. 2, 7. Premillennialists believe that the Second Coming precedes the thousand years, and hence must include a distinct judgment of its own. At the Second Coming Christians receive their reward, and this later judgment is for the wicked and those living in untransformed bodies during the thousand years. Amillennialists and postmillennialists, on the other hand, have generally understood this passage as one among many references to a universal final judgment at the Second Coming (vv. 1–10 note).

■ 20:11 throne. See 4:2 note.

Heaven

"Heaven" is the biblical term for God's dwelling place (Ps. 33:13, 14; Matt. 6:9), the place of His presence to where the glorified Christ has returned (Acts 1:11). The church militant and triumphant unites there for worship (Heb. 12:22–25), and one day Christ's people will be there with Christ forever (John 17:5, 24; 1 Thess. 4:16, 17). Heaven is the place of God's rest (John 14:2). It is described as a city (Heb. 11:10) and a country (Heb. 11:16).

To think of heaven as a "place" is more right than wrong, though the word could mislead. Scripture describes heaven as a spatial reality that touches and interpenetrates created space. According to Ephesians, the throne of Christ at the Father's right hand (Eph. 1:20), and the life of Christians in Christ, are both in "heavenly places" (Eph. 1:3, 20; 2:6). Paul alludes to his experience in the "third heaven" or "Paradise" (2 Cor. 12:2, 4). A resurrection body, adapted to heaven's life, awaits us (2 Cor. 5:1–8). While we are in our present bodies the realities of heaven are unseen, and we know them only by faith (2 Cor. 4:18; 5:7). The hope founded on what faith sees gives us the courage to endure (Rom. 8:25; cf. Gal. 5:5; 1 John 3:3).

We can form an idea of the perfect life of heaven from what we know imperfectly now (1 Cor. 13:12). Our communion with God and with other Christians will be unbroken (Ps. 23:6). According to Revelation, there will be no tears, sorrow, or death (Rev. 21:4). According to Romans, the earth itself together with life on it has been "subjected to futility" on account of sin (Rom. 8:20). Through the Spirit, we know that this "corruption" will be undone, and the possibilities dimly perceived in the fallen creation will be fulfilled in "the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. 8:21).

According to the Shorter Catechism, we were created "to glorify God, and enjoy Him forever." The crowns, feasts, and celebrations of victory described in the Scripture bring one aspect of this joy before our eyes. The triumph of the Lamb that was slain and His saints with Him (Rev. 5:6; 14:1) is another. At the center is the union of God with His people (Rev. 22:4). This was held out as the promise of the covenant (Jer. 30:22), and it is destined to be realized in a way beyond imagination (Eph. 2:7; 3:9; cf. 1 Cor. 2:9). □

salem against the backdrop of total renovation—a new heaven and a new earth. God is the Alpha (1:8 note), the Creator whose purposes were expressed from the beginning, and the Omega, the Consummator who brings His purposes to final realization. God's glory, power, and beauty within sphere of heaven (ch. 4) now extend to all His people (v. 3). Evil and pain are abolished in the new creation, in contrast to the pain, suffering, and struggles running through the earlier parts of Revelation. The promises made to overcomers are now fulfilled (2:7 note).

The final visions of Revelation weave into a beautiful unity a host of biblical themes. Note the themes of creation (v. 1), the holy city of Jerusalem, communion with God expressed through marriage imagery (v. 2), the dwelling of God, including the tabernacle and temple (chs. 4; 5 note), saints as God's own people (v. 3), the end of suffering and death (v. 4), new deeds of salvation, trustworthiness of God's Word (v. 5), living water (v. 6), becoming a son of God (v. 7), warnings to the faithless, and judgment (v. 8).

These verses are usually grouped with 21:9—22:5. The two passages present two aspects of the final vision of the new Jerusalem. Many realities are introduced in vv. 1–8 that appear with greater elaboration and in more visionary description in 21:9—22:5. But vv. 1–8 also have close relations to 20:11–15. The final judgment of God, in fact, has two sides: the negative side (the judgment of the wicked) is expressed in 20:11–15, while the positive side (the reward for the righteous) is expressed here. Within the negative message of 20:11–15 there is a positive note, the Book of Life (20:15). Similarly, within the positive message of vv. 1–8 there is one negative note, the lake of fire (v. 8). These verses and 20:11–15 are symmetric scenes depicting judgment both negatively and positively.

■ 21:1 a new heaven and a new earth. Some have thought that the new universe will be an entirely new world with no connection with the old. But Is. 65:17–25 and Rom. 8:21–23 indicate that a transfiguration of the old world is in view, like the way in which our new bodies will be transfigurations of the old (1 Cor. 15:35–57). Everything is new (v. 5), which indicates the thoroughness of transfiguration, but the result is redemption and not simply abolition of the old. See theological note "Heaven."

6 And He said to me, [l]"It[3] is done! [m]I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End. [n]I will give of the fountain of the water of life freely to him who thirsts. 7 He who overcomes [4]shall inherit all things, and [o]I will be his God and he shall be My son. 8 [p]But the cowardly, [5]unbelieving, abominable, murderers, sexually immoral, sorcerers, idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in [q]the lake which burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death."

The New Jerusalem

9 Then one of [r]the seven angels who had the seven bowls filled with the seven last plagues came [6]to me and talked with me, saying, "Come, I will show you [s]the [7]bride, the Lamb's wife." 10 And he carried me away [t]in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me [u]the [8]great city, the [9]holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, 11 [v]having the glory of God. Her light was like a most precious stone, like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. 12 Also she had a great and high wall with [w]twelve gates, and twelve angels at the gates, and names written on them, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel: 13 [x]three gates on the east, three gates on the north, three gates on the south, and three gates on the west.

14 Now the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and [y]on them were the [1]names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. 15 And he who talked with me [z]had a gold reed to measure the city, its gates, and its wall. 16 The city is laid out as a square; its length is as great as its breadth. And he measured the city with the reed: twelve thousand [2]furlongs. Its length, breadth, and height are equal. 17 Then he measured its wall: one hundred and forty-four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of an angel. 18 The construction of its wall was of jasper; and the city was pure gold, like clear glass. 19 [a]The foundations of the wall of the city were adorned with all kinds of precious stones: the first foundation was jasper, the second sapphire, the third chalcedony, the fourth emerald, 20 the fifth sardonyx, the sixth sardius, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh jacinth, and the twelfth amethyst. 21 The twelve gates were twelve [b]pearls: each individual gate was of one pearl. [c]And the street of the city was pure gold, like transparent glass.

The Glory of the New Jerusalem

22 [d]But I saw no temple in it, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are its temple. 23 [e]The city had no need of the sun or of the moon to shine [3]in it, for the [4]glory of God illuminated it. The Lamb is its light. 24 [f]And the nations [5]of those who are saved shall walk in its light, and the

■ 21:8 second death. See note on 20:14.

■ 21:9—22:5 The picture of the New Jerusalem now unfolds in detail. The final dwelling place of the saints is simultaneously the fulfillment of earlier revelations of God appearing in glory and reigning in His heavenly court (21:22, 23; 22:1, 3; cf. ch. 4), the holy city Jerusalem (21:10), the Garden of Eden (22:1–3), the bride, the marriage partner of the Lord (21:9), and the temple as the dwelling place of God (21:22, 23). The central figure and the central blessing of the city is God Himself and the Lamb (21:22, 23; 22:1–5). The final revelation of God necessarily brings to a climax all earlier revelations. It completes God's purpose of bringing all things under one Head—Christ (11:15; Eph. 1:10). It harmonizes with the creation of all things by Christ at the beginning (1:17; 4:11; Col. 1:15–17) and the redemption of all things through Christ in the middle (5:9–14; Rom. 11:36; Col. 1:18–20). Because of the fluid character of the imagery, it is wise not to distinguish rigidly between the inhabitants of the city (the saints) and the city itself (saints together with the glorified creation).

mountain. The mountain as God's special meeting place with human beings, alluding to 14:1; Ex. 15:17; 19:1–25; Ps. 48:1, 2; 68:15, 16; Ezek. 28:14; Mic. 4:1, 2; and other passages.

■ 21:11 glory of God. Closely associated with the imagery of light, glory represents the majesty, awesomeness, and beauty of God. Glory, a prominent theme in 21:9—22:5, is associated with the temple and the appearing of God in the Old Testament (vv. 22, 23; 15:8; 22:5; Ex. 16:10; 24:16, 17; 40:34, 35; Is. 6:3; 40:3; 60:1, 2, 19, 20; Hab. 2:14; Zech. 2:5; John 1:14). God's heavenly splendor as seen in ch. 4 now fills the new world.

■ 21:16 length, breadth, and height. The city is a perfect cube, the same shape as the Most Holy Place in the tabernacle and the temple. The whole city is architecturally perfect, and has become the most intimate dwelling place of God (vv. 22, 23; 22:4).

■ 21:17 one hundred and forty-four cubits. That is, twelve times twelve cubits. All the dimensions of the city reveal its associations with the twelve tribes of Israel and the twelve apostles (vv. 12, 14). "Twelve" symbolically designates the people of God.

■ 21:19 all kinds of precious stones. The list of precious stones shows the beauty and magnificence of the city and the way it reflects the beauty of God, who fills it with His glory (4:3). The list also corresponds roughly to the twelve precious stones of Aaron's breastplate (Ex. 28:15–21). The prerogatives once reserved for the high priest now belong to the entire city.

The River of Life

22 And he showed me [a]a [l]pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb. 2 [b]In the middle of its street, and on either side of the river, was [c]the tree of life, which bore twelve fruits, each tree yielding its fruit every month. The leaves of the tree were [d]for the healing of the nations. 3 And [e]there shall be no more curse, [f]but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His [g]servants shall serve Him. 4 [h]They shall see His face, and [i]His name shall be on their foreheads. 5 [j]There shall be no night there: They need no lamp nor [k]light of the sun, for [l]the Lord God gives them light. [m]And they shall reign forever and ever.

The Time Is Near

6 Then he said to me, [n]"These words are faithful and true." And the Lord God of the [2]holy prophets [o]sent His angel to show His servants the things which must [p]shortly take place.

7 [q]"Behold, I am coming quickly! [r]Blessed is he who keeps the words of the prophecy of this book."

8 Now I, John, [3]saw and heard these things. And when I heard and saw, [s]I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel who showed me these things.

9 Then he said to me, [t]"See that you do not do that. [4]For I am your fellow servant, and of your brethren the prophets, and of those who keep the words of this book. Worship God." 10 [u]And he said to me, "Do not seal the words of the prophecy of this book, [v]for the time is at hand. 11 He who is unjust, let him be unjust still; he who is filthy, let him be filthy still; he who is righteous, let him [5]be righteous still; he who is holy, let him be holy still."

■ 21:27 Book of Life. See note on 13:8.

■ 22:1–5 The final description of paradise contains elements alluding to the Garden of Eden. The intimacy of God with His people (vv. 3, 4) and the abundance of His blessing (vv. 1, 2, 5) are stressed even more than in the preceding verses. The final state restores the unbroken, idyllic communion between God and human beings. But the apex of history is more magnificent than the beginning. The garden is now also a city, and the light has driven out all night.

Revelation is designed not only to inform and assure Christians about God's final purposes, but to increase their longing for God and the realization of His purpose. The certainty of that consummation comforts saints during times of temptation and persecution.

■ 22:1 river of water of life. Abundant supply of life-giving water comes from God. Revelation weaves together allusions to Gen. 2:10–14; Ps. 46:4; Ezek. 47:1–12; Joel 3:18; John 4:10–14; 7:37–39.

■ 22:2 tree of life. Access to God's life-giving blessings, barred after the Fall, is here renewed (vv. 14, 19; 2:7; Gen. 2:9; 3:22–24; Ezek. 47:12).

■ 22:6–21 The central visionary part of Revelation ends with v. 5. The book now concludes with promise, exhortation, and confirmation in order to drive home the message of the visions and to stir up hope for the coming of the Lord Jesus (v. 20). Its major themes continue to be woven into this concluding section. There are many allusions to ch. 1.

come, Lord Jesus. The whole of Revelation is meant to stir Christians' longing and prayers for the realization of God's purposes accompanying the Second Coming. Revelation ends on this note (1 Cor. 16:22).

What Is the Bible About?

Edmund Clowney

What makes the Bible different from every other book? It is different because it is God's book: He gave it to us to tell us about Himself (2 Pet. 1:21). Because the Bible is about God and His salvation, it is also about the Son of God, our Savior. Jesus knew this. He rebuked two downcast disciples whom He found trudging away from Jerusalem on Easter day. They had been devastated by His death and confused by the empty tomb.

"Then He said to them, 'O foolish ones, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not the Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?' And beginning at Moses and all the Prophets, He expounded to them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself" (Luke 24:25–27).

During the forty days between His resurrection and ascension, Jesus continued His teaching. From all the Old Testament He showed the gospel promises that He had fulfilled, promises that must be preached to the nations (Luke 24:44–47). His teaching gave the apostles the key to the Scriptures. Peter preached the sufferings and the glory of Christ from Moses and the prophets (Acts 2:18–24); so did Paul (Acts 17:2, 3; Rom. 1:1–5; 1 Cor. 15:3, 4). They did not rely on the prophecies that spoke directly of the Messiah; they knew that all prophecy was inspired by the Spirit of Christ (1 Pet. 1:11).

The written Word comes from the living Word; the Son of God is the Creator who was with God from the beginning, and who, like the Father is fully God (John 1:1–3). The Lord God of the Old Testament is present in our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Simon Peter, who had taken Jesus on board his fishing boat, confessed His deity (Matt. 16:16). He quotes Isaiah's call to revere the Lord Himself, and identifies the Lord of our worship as the Christ (1 Pet. 3:15; Is. 8:12, 13).

When God disclosed Himself to Israel at Mount Sinai He was already pointing forward to His revelation in Christ. God's design for the tabernacle, given on the mountain, was threatened by Israel's worship of a golden calf. God said that it was too dangerous for stiff-necked Israel to have the holy God living in His tabernacle in the middle of their camp. Instead, God proposed to stay outside the camp and to meet with Moses there. He would go before the people to lead them into Canaan, but He would not dwell in their midst (Ex. 33:1–6). Moses knew that if God were not to dwell with His people there would be no point in their going to Canaan. He could only plead with God to show His glory and grace. God heard his prayer; He proclaimed His name to Moses as the God who is full of grace and truth. He promised to dwell in the tabernacle and to receive Israel's sacrifices for the forgiveness of their sins. John's Gospel tells us that the glory Moses asked to see has been revealed in Jesus Christ. The grace and truth declared to Moses is given in Christ, for in Christ God comes to dwell with us. The tabernacle was filled with the cloud of glory to symbolize God's dwelling with His people; the Incarnation is the reality that the tabernacle pictured. John testifies, "And the Word became flesh and dwelt [lit. 'tabernacled'] among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (John 1:14).

We are not surprised, therefore, to find in the Old Testament anticipations of the coming of the Son of God. The angel of the Lord is both distinguished from God and identified with Him (Gen. 18:1–33; Ex. 23:20–23; Judg. 6:11–23; 13:3–23; Is. 63:9). In the form of an angel the Lord wrestled with Jacob (Gen. 32:34–42) and gave orders to Joshua (Josh. 5:13–15). So, too, the figures that describe God in the Old Testament are transferred to Christ in the New. Jesus Christ is the Shepherd (Ps. 23; John 10), the Rock (Deut. 32:4; Ex. 17:6; 1 Cor. 10:4), the Judge (Ps. 96:13; Matt. 25:31–33), the King (Is. 6:1–5; John 12:41), the Wisdom of God (Prov. 8:22–31), our Lord and Savior (Jon. 2:9; Matt. 1:21).

The story of God's work of salvation leads us to Jesus Christ, the Savior. Only God can deliver sinners. He must take the initiative; the plan of salvation must be His. After the sin of our first parents in Eden, God came seeking them. He promised the victory of the Son of the woman over the serpent (Gen. 3:15). God delivered Noah and his family from the flood of judgment; He called Abraham and promised to bless him so that through his progeny all the families of the earth would be blessed. Keeping His word to Abraham, God delivered Israel from slavery in Egypt, made His covenant with them, and gave them the land of promise. But all along the way God's goodness was opposed by human wickedness. Even the saints were sinners. Abraham laughed at God's promise in unbelief; Jacob stole his blind father's blessing; Moses struck the rock that symbolized God's presence; David was guilty of both adultery and murder.

The Bible tells the story of what God does to save His people, not only from their enemies, but from their sins. What distinguishes the true people of God in spite of their sins is their faith in God's promise of salvation (Heb. 11).

When God's just verdict condemned Israel to destruction and captivity it seemed that all hope was gone. Ezekiel's vision saw the captives as dry bones scattered on the valley floor (Ezek. 37). But God's Spirit can raise the dead. God promised first to spare a remnant. The destruction would not be total: a stump would be left when the cedar of Israel's pride was cut down. More than that: God would bring renewal. Out of the stump would grow a shoot, a shoot that would stand as an ensign for the gathering of the nations. That shoot would be the Branch, God's Messiah (Is. 10:33—11:5).

Two lines of promise are joined in the prophets: first, God must come; second, the Messiah must come as the Servant of the Lord. God must come because the situation of the people is so hopeless that only God can save them. The people need not merely deliverance from their enemies; they need new hearts, turned from rebellion to love. God must come, too, because His promises are so great that only He can make good on them. God can take away hearts of stone and give hearts of flesh; He can form a new creation. In the great day of God's power, the very pots of Jerusalem will be like holy temple vessels, the lowliest citizen of the city will be like King David—and what of the King himself? He will be as an angel of God among them (Zech. 12:8). In the glory of fulfillment the coming of God and the coming of the Messiah are drawn together. God himself will put on the helmet of salvation and the breastplate of righteousness to deliver His people, yet their Deliverer is also their Messiah, who will be Prince among them (Is. 59:16, 17; 61:1–3; Ezek. 34:11, 24). The Messiah, indeed, will bear the divine Name: "Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" (Is. 9:6). He is David's Lord, the Son of Man who will receive at the right hand of the Father the eternal kingdom (Ps. 110:1, 2; Dan. 7:13, 14; Mal. 3:1; Is. 40:3, 10, 11). John the Baptist, the "voice of one crying in the wilderness" announces the coming of the Lord (Is. 40:3).

By the miraculous power of the Holy Spirit the Virgin Mary conceived the Son of promise. His name is Jesus, for it is He who saves His people from their sins (Matt. 1:21). The miraculous sign of the virgin birth fulfills the ancient prophecy and shows Him to be Immanuel, "God with us" (Matt. 1:23; Is. 7:14). The angels announce to the shepherds the birth of the One who is not only the Lord's Christ, but Christ the Lord (Luke 2:11, 26).

The Old Testament, then, promises the Lord's coming; the New Testament announces that the Lord has come. But for the Lord to do His saving work, even the Incarnation was not enough. He took our human nature that He might do for us what we could never do for ourselves: bear the penalty of sin and merit eternal life. Jesus came, not only as the Lord, but as the Servant of the Lord. He who is one with God became one with us that He might bring us back to God. God's covenant promise was, "I will walk among you and be your God, and you shall be My people" (Lev. 26:12). God, the Lord of the covenant, claimed His people to be His servants. Jesus came to fulfill both sides of the covenant: He is the Lord and the Servant. As the Lord, He claims His people for God; as the Servant, He claims God for His people.

The Old Testament, as well as the New, shows us Christ's work as the Servant of the Lord. In the "Servant Songs" of Isaiah (Is. 42:1–9; 49:1–13; 50:4–11; 52:13—53:12) the individual Servant of the Lord is closely related to Israel as God's servant, yet the distinction is clear. God promises His Servant that He will not only bring back the remnant of Israel, but that He will be a light to the Gentiles, "That You should be My salvation to the ends of the earth" (Is. 49:6).

Especially in His sufferings, the Servant represents God's people, for He will bear their punishment: "He shall see the labor of His soul, and be satisfied. By His knowledge My righteous Servant shall justify many, For He shall bear their iniquities" (Is. 53:11). On the cross, Jesus cried out in the opening words of Ps. 22: "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?" David's lament of suffering was his own cry to God, but he wrote as a prophet, and his words have their fulfillment in his Son, the suffering Servant. The author of Hebrews reminds us that the other words of the Psalm also belong to Christ (Heb. 2:12; Ps. 22:22). From the cry of abandonment, to the thank offering of praise, this psalm, and others like it, belongs to Jesus, who sings the Father's praise (Matt. 26:30; Ps. 69:9; John 2:17).

As God's Servant, Jesus stands in the place of His people and bears the punishment of their sins; as the victorious Servant, He is exalted to God's right hand. He is both the King and the righteous worshiper of Ps. 24: "Who may ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who may stand in His holy place?"

That question runs through the Old Testament: "But how can a man be righteous before God?" (Job 9:2). God's covenant people plead His righteousness to deliver them from their persecutors (Ps. 31:1; 71:2, 24). Amazingly, they even plead His righteousness to deliver them from their sins (Ps. 143:1, 2; 51:14). How can God show His righteousness by justifying the unrighteous? In part, no doubt, by keeping His marvelous promises of salvation. But those very promises must then include a righteousness that is God's gift, rather than His demand. That righteousness God will provide through the Messiah. The Branch of righteousness that will grow up to David will be called "THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer. 23:5, 6; 33:15, 16).

Jesus came to fulfill all righteousness (Matt. 3:15). It is He who has kept God's law perfectly, so that there may be righteousness for everyone who believes (Rom. 10:4). Christ was made to be sin for us, so that in Him we might gain God's righteousness (2 Cor. 5:21; 3:9). Only so God could be just and the justifier of the one who believes in Christ (Rom. 3:26).

Jesus Christ is therefore the theme of the whole Old Testament. When we read of God's saving acts in the Old Testament, we are always being pointed to the full accomplishment of His salvation in the New. The Exodus no less than the Passover, the victories of Samson no less than those of David, show us that God can deliver through His chosen One. They speak to us of the Mighty One who came to destroy the powers of evil on the cross. The whole ceremonial law has a symbolic purpose. The blood of bulls and goats cannot take away sin; only the blood of Christ can. The prophets, priests, and kings of the Old Testament are set apart to represent the people before God, and God before the people. The calling that they have prepares us to understand the only Mediator between God and man, Jesus Christ (1 Tim. 2:5). There is no strand in the history of God's salvation (or of His work of judgment) that does not lead to Jesus Christ, "that in all things He may have the preeminence" (Col. 1:18). Jesus Christ is in all the Old Testament, not merely in a few messianic passages. His lordship and His servanthood are intertwined in it like the threads of a fabric. The pattern of the fabric remains a puzzle to us until we see Him of whom Moses and the prophets wrote, the Alpha and Omega of our faith. □

Reformed Theology

James Montgomery Boice

Reformed theology gets its name from the sixteenth century Protestant Reformation, with its distinct theological emphases, but it is theology solidly based on the Bible itself. Believers in the reformed tradition regard highly the specific contributions of such people as Martin Luther, John Knox, and particularly John Calvin, but they also find their strong distinctives in the giants of the faith before them, such as Anselm and Augustine, and ultimately in the letters of Paul and the teachings of Jesus Christ.

Reformed Christians hold to the doctrines characteristic of all Christians, including the Trinity, the true deity and true humanity of Jesus Christ, the necessity of Jesus' atonement for sin, the church as a divinely ordained institution, the inspiration of the Bible, the requirement that Christians live moral lives, and the resurrection of the body. They hold other doctrines in common with evangelical Christians, such as justification by faith alone, the need for the new birth, the personal and visible return of Jesus Christ, and the Great Commission.

What, then, is distinctive about reformed theology?

1. The Doctrine of Scripture. The reformed commitment to Scripture stresses the Bible's inspiration, authority, and sufficiency. Since the Bible is the Word of God and so has the authority of God Himself, reformed people affirm that this authority is superior to that of all governments and all church hierarchies. This conviction has given reformed believers the courage to stand against tyranny and has made reformed theology a revolutionary force in society. The sufficiency of Scripture means that it does not need to be supplemented by new or ongoing special revelation. The Bible is the entirely sufficient guide for what we are to believe and how we are to live as Christians.

The Reformers, and particularly John Calvin, stressed the way the objective, written Word and the inner, supernatural ministry of the Holy Spirit work together, the Holy Spirit illuminating the Word to God's people. The Word without the illumination of the Holy Spirit remains a closed book. The supposed leading of the Spirit without the Word leads to errors and excess. The Reformers also insisted upon the believers' right to study the Scripture for themselves. Though not denying the value of trained teachers, they understood that the clarity of Scripture on matters essential for salvation makes the Bible the property of every believer. With this right of access always comes the responsibility of careful and accurate interpretation.

2. The Sovereignty of God. For most reformed people the chief and most distinctive article of the creed is God's sovereignty. Sovereignty means rule, and the sovereignty of God means that God rules over His creation with absolute power and authority. He determines what is going to happen, and it does happen. God is not alarmed, frustrated, or defeated by circumstances, by sin, or by the rebellion of His creatures.

3. The Doctrines of Grace. Reformed theology emphasizes the doctrines of grace, best known by the acronym TULIP, though this does not correspond to the best possible names for the five doctrines.

T stands for total depravity. This does not mean that all persons are as bad as they could possibly be. It means rather that all human beings are affected by sin in every area of thought and conduct so that nothing that comes out of anyone apart from the regenerating grace of God can please God. As far as our relationships to God are concerned, we are all so ruined by sin that no one can properly understand either God or God's ways. Nor do we seek God, unless He is first at work within us to lead us to do so.

U stands for unconditional election. An emphasis on election bothers many people, but the problem they feel is not actually with election; it is with depravity. If sinners are as helpless in their depravity as the Bible says they are, unable to know and unwilling to seek God, then the only way they could possibly be saved is for God to take the initiative to change and save them. This is what election means. It is God choosing to save those who, apart from His sovereign choice and subsequent action, certainly would perish.

L stands for limited atonement. The name is potentially misleading, for it seems to suggest that reformed people want somehow to restrict the value of Christ's death. This is not the case. The value of Jesus' death is infinite. The question rather is what is the purpose of Christ's death, and what He accomplished in it. Did Christ intend to make salvation no more than possible? Or did He actually save those for whom He died? Reformed theology stresses that Jesus actually atoned for the sins of those the Father had chosen. He actually propitiated the wrath of God toward His people by taking their judgment upon Himself, actually redeemed them, and actually reconciled those specific persons to God. A better name for "limited" atonement would be "particular" or "specific" redemption.

I stands for irresistible grace. Left to ourselves we resist the grace of God. But when God works in our hearts, regenerating us and creating a renewed will within, then what was undesirable before becomes highly desirable, and we run to Jesus just as previously we ran away from Him. Fallen sinners do resist God's grace, but His regenerating grace is effectual. It overcomes sin and accomplishes God's purpose.

P stands for perseverance of the saints. A better name might be "the perseverance of God with the saints," but both ideas are actually involved. God perseveres with us, keeping us from falling away, as we would certainly do if He were not with us. But because He perseveres we also persevere. In fact, perseverance is the ultimate proof of election. We persevere because God preserves us from full and final falling away from Him.

4. The Cultural Mandate. Reformed theology also emphasizes the cultural mandate, or the obligation of Christians to live actively in society and work for the transformation of the world and its cultures. Reformed people have had various views in this area, depending on the extent to which they believe such a transformation possible. But on the whole they agree on two things. First, we are called to be in the world and not to withdraw from it. This sets reformed believers apart from monasticism. Second, we are to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and visit the prisoner. But the chief needs of people are still spiritual, and social work is no adequate substitute for evangelism. In fact, efforts to help people will only be truly effective as their hearts and minds are changed by the gospel. This sets reformed believers apart from mere humanitarianism.

It has been objected to reformed theology that anyone who believes along reformed lines will lose all motivation for evangelism. "If God is going to do the work, why should I bother?" But it does not work that way. It is because God does the work that we can be bold to join Him in it, as He commands us to do. We do it joyfully, knowing that our efforts will never be in vain. □

Interpreting the Bible

Bruce Waltke

Biblical hermeneutics, the art of interpreting the Bible, aims to develop rules for its interpretation. This article presents two basic rules with important refinements for each, and two final words of encouragement to the reader. These rules are based on the conviction that the triune God for the sake of His elect progressively revealed Himself, according to His own immutable counsel, through the inspired authors, and providentially superintended the collection of their writings into the canon, the Bible, to His own eternal glory.

Rule One: Interpret the Words of the Bible in the Light of Their Historical Context

The different parts of the Bible must be interpreted according to the grammatical-historical method, that is, by studying the meaning of its words in the light of the time and place they were originally written. The books of the Bible are quite old, much older than other books most people have ever read. The world of the Bible is so different from ours that sometimes a translation cannot bridge the gap between these ancient texts and modern readers. But translators of this Bible and the contributors of the notes have not reinterpreted the Bible to suit modern attitudes; neither should the reader.

The application of the first rule is complex because the biblical writings were continually relocated as the canon of Scripture progressively expanded. In this unfolding context earlier texts take on fuller senses. For example, the individual psalms addressed to the people in the first temple period became finally the written Word of God to the covenant people as a whole after they were collected and arranged in the Book of Psalms. From this point, the psalms had to be read and meditated upon (Ps. 1) in the light of their new literary and social contexts. For example, Ps. 2, which proclaims Israel's king as the ideal son of God with a mandate to rule the earth through prayer and power, was sung before the Exile in the first temple, probably at the coronation of Israel's kings. When the Book of Psalms was edited after the Exile, however, Israel's throne was vacant, waiting for a promised king, "the Messiah." In that light Ps. 2 became purely prophetic. After the coming of Christ the Psalms became part of the Bible that included the New Testament; in that light "the Messiah" of Ps. 2 takes on its fullest and clearest sense: He is none other than the Lord Jesus Christ. Understanding the Bible fully means keeping an eye on the developing stages of revelation.

Rule Two: Interpret the Parts of the Bible in the Light of the Whole

The second important rule of interpretation is often called "the analogy of faith." This rule asserts that Scripture interprets Scripture. The Bible itself says that all its parts are inspired by God (2 Tim. 3:16), who is not a God of disorder (1 Cor. 14:33). The rule is corroborated by the existence of the Bible as a single volume. The collection of sixty-six books, written over a span of fifteen hundred years, into one book, reflects the church's conviction that the transcendent Author superintended the collection of the many writings into a harmonious whole. Interpretation that pits Scripture against Scripture dishonors the Alpha and Omega, who sees and rules from the beginning to the end of all things.

More specifically, the Old Testament must be interpreted in the light of the New Testament. This is required for both literary and theological reasons. In a linguistic discourse the flow of thought keeps screening out unintended meanings. For example, the word "before" in the statement, "she sang before the Queen," is ambiguous until the speaker adds "before the Queen rose to speak," or "before the Queen on her throne." In a similar way, as God's story of revealing and establishing His kingdom unfolds, ambiguous texts become more clear. For example, the ambiguous "offspring" (one or many?) in God's promise to Abraham (Gen. 22:18) becomes focused on Christ (Gal. 3:16). The unidentified maiden and Immanuel of Is. 7:14 are seen to be the Virgin Mary and her Son (Matt. 1:23), and the anonymous Servant in Isaiah (42:1–4; 49:1–6; 52:13—53:12; 61:1, 2) is revealed as Jesus, the suffering and yet triumphant Savior (Matt. 12:18–21; Luke 24:44–49; 1 Pet. 1:11).

This rule is required theologically. Christ, who through the Holy Spirit administers His Word to the apostles, is not only the final but also the best revelation of God. God spoke at various times in various ways in time past (Heb. 1:1), including his revelation to Moses and to the prophets. In spite of their varying psychologies by which God revealed Himself to them, all biblical authors write with infallible authority. But they are not of equal weight in interpretation, as the conflict of Aaron and Miriam against Moses makes evident. Moses' brother and sister, themselves both prophets, challenged the priority of Moses' words over theirs (Num. 12:1, 2). In reply, God censured them for their pride, arguing that Moses' words were superior because God gave Moses a more intimate and clearer revelation than He gave to them (vv. 6–8). The story establishes the important principle that the forms of revelation require a hierarchy of interpretive priorities. Christ is as much greater than Moses as a Son over a house is greater than a slave within it (Heb. 3:5, 6). If Aaron and Miriam should have feared to make themselves equal with Moses, how much more should readers fear to make the Old Testament equal to the New Testament that completes it. In fact, as the conversation between Philip and the Ethiopian official shows (Acts 8:30, 31), the Old Testament cannot be fully understood without the New Testament. If there is any tension between interpretations of the Old Testament and the New Testament, priority must be given to the New Testament. This does not mean that the New Testament corrects the Old Testament, but that it provides greater clarity in understanding the Old Testament.

Interpreting the Different Kinds of Literature in the Bible

With these two fundamental rules in hand we can now proceed to refine them. The grammatical-historical method recognizes that different kinds of literature, or "genres," such as history, law, and prophecy, in the Old Testament, and parables, and letters in the New, will require different rules of interpretation. For example, in contrast to legal literature, prophetic literature, as Num. 12:6, 7 makes plain, is frequently symbolic and full of figures of speech, such as metaphor, personification, and metonymy. Moreover, the prophet's symbolic visions and dreams have taken their hue and coloring from their historical situations. For example, at the threshold of prophecy God warns the serpent: "He [the woman's offspring] shall bruise your head, And you shall bruise His heel." This is not a myth about the antipathy between humans and snakes, but a statement about the conflict between Christ and Satan (Rom. 16:20); the prophecy took its coloring from the situation in the garden.

This kind of symbolic language becomes even more intensified and extensive in apocalyptic literature such as Daniel in the Old Testament and Revelation in the New. The Ishtar Gate of Nebuchadnezzar, now in a museum in Germany, will readily explain why Daniel had fanciful dreams of animals. On that gate through which Daniel passed many times, the patron deity of Babylon is depicted in embossed, golden bricks against a background of blue, as an animal with the head of a dragon, the torso of a lion, and the claws of an eagle. No wonder Daniel, Babylon's chief administrator, saw a lion with the wings of an eagle leading a train of other bizarre animals representing Babylon and successive kingdoms (Dan. 7).

The Old Testament prophets, using the images of their world to show the greatness of Christ's rule from His heavenly throne, supercharged the old figures. To portray the heavenly character of Christ's rule, for example, Mount Zion is described as the highest mountain, presumably, were it known, higher than Mt. Everest (Mic. 4:1). To show the holiness of His kingdom, even the equipment of horses bears the inscription formerly reserved for the diadem of the high priest, HOLINESS TO THE LORD (Zech. 14:20). Jesus used enigmatic parables in order to conceal His meaning from unbelievers and to reveal it to His disciples (Matt. 13). Emphatically, the first rule of hermeneutics does not mean that words are always to be taken in their plain, "natural" sense; the interpreter has to take careful note of figures of speech and literary genres.

Prophetic and apocalyptic literature in the Old Testament and Christ's parables in the New must not be read in the same way as Paul's letters. Just as encyclopedia articles cannot be read as poems, so also the Psalms ought not to be read as Chronicles. Relatively clear texts like the epistles ought not to be interpreted in the light of the less clear prophetic and apocalyptic literature; instead, the unclear should be read in light of the clear. More subtly, even such letters of Paul as those to the Corinthians, which assume the reader knows the situation the apostle is addressing, are less clear than an epistle like Romans, that logically sets forth the Christian faith within a particular historical context.

Even what appears to be straightforward history, such as Kings and Chronicles in the Old Testament, and the Gospels in the New, is not as straightforward as may appear upon first reading. The inspired historians of both Testaments have carefully chosen and arranged their material to teach spiritual lessons according to the needs of their audiences. Sometimes incidents are arranged in topical or dramatic order rather than in a purely chronological sequence. For example, the Table of Nations in Gen. 10 chronologically came after Gen. 11, the story about the Tower of Babel, but Moses wanted his audience to view the nations under God's blessing (Gen. 9:1–17) and not under His judgment (Gen. 11:9). Sometimes the line between historical and symbolic literature is attenuated as in the stories of the early chapters of Genesis and, as some think, in Jonah. Specifically, no one thinks that Eve only was sentenced to pain in childbirth and that Adam only was sentenced to return to the ground upon death (Gen. 3:16–19). Every reader intuitively perceives that Adam and Eve represent every man and woman. Nevertheless, the genealogies of the Old Testament and the teachings of the New Testament validate their historical character as well.

The second rule, the "analogy of faith," needs to be refined particularly with reference to the political history of the Old Testament and its relation to the New. God is not pursuing two programs, one with earthly Israel and a second with the heavenly Church, as popularized in dispensational teaching. Rather, the earthly presentation of the kingdom in the Old Testament is typical of its heavenly and spiritual manifestation in the New Testament. For example, the political and religious deliverance of Israel from Egypt through the Passover lamb, Israel's baptism in the Red Sea and the pilgrimage through the wilderness, sustained by manna from heaven and water from a rock, and then entrance into the land of Canaan, depict in concrete terms the spiritual experience of the Church. The Old Testament history graphically portrays the exodus of the New Israel from the Satanic world with its bondage of sin and death through the Passover Lamb, Christ (1 Cor. 5:17), baptism into His death and resurrection, that is a death to the world and rising to the newness of His resurrection life (Rom. 6:3, 4; Gal. 6:14), pilgrimage to the heavenly city, nourished by the sacraments of bread and wine (1 Cor. 10:1–17), and final rest in the Promised Land (Heb. 4:6–11; 11:39, 40). Israel's ritual, with its consecrated site at Mount Zion, its sacred sabbaths and seasons, its holy priests and kings, and its hallowed institutions such as animal sacrifice, symbolized the heavenly realities (Ex. 25:9) now fulfilled since Christ entered the heavenly sanctuary (Heb. 9; 10). The earthly and temporal rituals were typical and became forever obsolete when Christ brought His glorified church to the eternal, heavenly realms. Today the church "is hidden with Christ" in the heavenly domains (Col. 3:1–4) and in the future He without a veil will be seen (1 John 3:2, 3). The Christian must read Israel's history and ceremonies not only with a view to understanding what Israel's history and ritual meant at the time, but also with an eye to their antitypical significance according to the New Testament.

Moreover, the prophetic promises, molded according to the political expressions of the kingdom as known before Christ, must not be interpreted as having a future, carnal fulfillment based on the typical model that has forever been done away (Heb. 8:13), as some dispensational teaching has supposed. Rather, the promises must be read in light of the antitypical, heavenly, and spiritual realities that endure forever (2 Cor. 4:18).

Two final words. First, although the Bible is a very old book, it is addressed to you. When introducing citations from the Old Testament, the New Testament writers frequently use the present tense, "God says," rather than "God said," and they reinforced the present relevance of His ancient Word by adding, "to us" and "to you," rather than "to them" (1 Cor. 9:9, 10). Both Moses and Paul say, "The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (Deut. 30:14; Rom. 10:8). Second, because the Bible is God's Word, do not read the Bible in the same way as other books. Biblical writers consistently use such expressions as "God says" (Is. 1:18–20; Matt. 19:4; Acts 4:25). Often God says directly, "I say" (Mic. 1:6–8). Accept God's word in faith and meditate upon it with memorization, imagination, and reflection. Before reading the sacred pages, pray, "O God, speak to me" (Prov. 2:1–6). You too will say with others, "Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us" (Luke 24:32). □

Higher Criticism

J. I. Packer

Criticism of a document is the exercising of one's judgment on all the questions that are involved in seeing its meaning, checking its truth, and appreciating its worth. Criticism is essentially a discipline of appreciation, not a commitment to fault-finding, and it is not necessarily destructive. The questions that critical study raises concern sources drawn on and the use made of them; the writer's identity, credentials, and purpose; and the style and structure of the document itself.

Biblical Criticism explores these questions as they relate to the sixty-six books that make up canonical Scripture. Traditionally, the questions have been divided between what was called lower criticism, which compares existing manuscripts of the Old Testament and New Testament, in order to determine as accurately as possible the original Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek texts, and higher criticism, which investigates the authorship, dates, sources, literary forms, compositional stages, and historical backgrounds of the various books.

Higher Criticism in popular usage has designated a particular cluster of theories that suppose various biblical books not to be what they seem. In this usage, the phrase refers to the skeptical assumptions on which the theories rest and the bleak conclusions that they offer, rather than to argument and analysis itself. Those who oppose and reject "higher" criticism are using the phrase in this limited way. Two theories draw the most frequent objections:

1. The Development Hypothesis Concerning the Pentateuch. This is a working hypothesis, developed by the German scholars Graf and Wellhausen, that is today commonly taught as a starting point for academic biblical study. In 1950 H. H. Rowley, a prominent Old Testament scholar, wrote:

> A mere concentration on the acknowledged difficulties of the Graf-Wellhausen view, and then on a selection of points that may seem to give support to a rival view, will not do. For none of the rival views can accommodate so many of the facts . . . Yet having said this, it remains true that the Graf-Wellhausen view is only a working hypothesis, which can be abandoned with alacrity when a more satisfying view is found, but cannot with profit be abandoned until then (The Growth of the Old Testament [London: Hutchinson's University Library, 1950], p. 46).

Many Old Testament experts would echo Rowley's words today.

The hypothesis is complex. It starts with the supposition that the five books of Moses are a composite of four distinct sources: two historical narratives (J and E); Deuteronomy (D); and a document concerned mainly with worship and ritual (P, thought to have been composed by priests). Wellhausen believed that Israel's worship pattern developed away from rough-and-ready local sanctuaries to a single temple in Jerusalem, that became the only place where sacrifices might be offered. On this account D and P were written at least in part to claim Moses' sanction for this arrangement. Wellhausen dated J and E in the early monarchy, since they reflect unquestioning acceptance of local shrines. He identified Deuteronomy as the law book found in the temple during Josiah's renovations (621 B.C.; 2 Kin. 22:8–20), and described it as a seventh-century pseudo-Mosaic tract enforcing centralization of worship. The P document he placed after the exile, during the time when, according to his theory, the final compilation was taken in hand and carried through under the direction of Ezra.

On this view none of the material in the five books was written by Moses; D and P were later than Moses and expressed ideas that Moses (a very shadowy figure, to Wellhausen's mind) could never have had. Not surprisingly, Wellhausen's speculative denial of Mosaic authorship and his assertion that the figure of Moses was used deceptively to promote a non-Mosaic position was held to raise grave questions about the authority of the Bible. Can divine authority attach to fiction masquerading as fact?

2. The Second-century Date Proposed for the Book of Daniel. This second theory can be dated as far back as a third-century anti-Christian writer named Porphyry. Porphyry held that Daniel was written when Antiochus Epiphanes was persecuting the Jews, and that its purpose was to encourage the persecuted. Not accepting that Daniel is predictive prophecy, the theory treats the panoramas of world empires in chs. 2; 7; 8; and 11 as written after the event, to sustain confidence that God had all along been in control, and would soon bring Antiochus to grief and set up his own kingdom in visible form. For the book to have this effect, however, it had to be passed off as a sixth-century production, in which the visionary chapters were written by Daniel himself. Here again was a theory involving a deceptiveness and falsity in questions of fact that denies to part of the Bible the authority of truth.

Other widely held theories that are sometimes cited as examples of higher criticism are problematic in the same way, raising again and again the question whether written material that depends for its effect on giving the reader false impressions about questions of fact can conceivably be the authoritative word of God. What is in view here is not the kind of transparent dramatization that most scholars find in Ecclesiastes, where the preacher portrays Solomon for two chapters (2; 3) with telling impact, but illusions that must stay undetected if the desired results are to be secured. The biblical writers always assume that, because God is truthful and Scripture is His Word to us, all scriptural affirmations must be true. Higher critics who think there are good reasons to conclude that, for instance, the letters bearing Paul's name and claiming his apostolic authority were not by him, or that other chapters attached to books bearing the names of prophets were not written by or known to those prophets (e.g., Is. 40—66; Zech. 9—14), or that narratives purporting to be factual (e.g., Adam and Eve, the patriarchs, the Exodus, the miracle stories of the Gospels) are really fictions, ought to advocate dropping them from the biblical canon. The fact that they do not shows not reverence towards Scripture, but lack of clarity as to its nature.

There is clear evidence in the world of scholarship that the higher critical theories that have been described are unnecessary and, indeed, unnatural. They were produced against a background of prejudice against divine sovereignty, divine speech, and the miraculous, and of craving for naturalistic explanations of the seemingly supernatural. Nowadays these theological currents are less strong. Though the Wellhausen hypothesis is still often taught to beginners as if it were a certainty, professionals of all schools of thought are currently querying it from all angles. The authenticity of all Paul's letters, all the prophetic books of the Old Testament, all the history of Genesis and the Gospels, and indeed all the Bible facts that have been questioned at any time in the past, are currently defended by scholars with at least as much cogency as appeared in the skepticism of the skeptics.

But that is not to say that the proper work of biblical criticism, both higher and lower, is finished, or ever will be. The way into the revealed mind of God is through the expressions of His human writers, and therefore the work of exploring what they wrote from all angles must go on. The techniques of criticism are so many tools for that task. Up to the mid-twentieth century the biblical writers had been viewed by critics mainly as collectors, guardians, and servants of traditions, and critical interest had centered on their sources and on the literary forms of their material. More recently interest has centered on the writers as thinkers and communicators in their own right, and the techniques chiefly cultivated have been those related to literary and social criticism, investigating how awareness of the matters the writers were addressing conditioned what they said. All these are proper and necessary lines of inquiry, and there are right answers to be given to these questions, and we should not be discouraged from the search for them by the fact that wrong answers sometimes emerge. The theories we form, however, must always keep in view what the theorists of "higher criticism" forgot—that Holy Scripture is the true and trustworthy Word of God. □

Evangelism and Missions

Luder G. Whitlock

The Necessity of Evangelism. To be biblical is to be evangelistic because the gospel is the central message of the Bible. From beginning to end, it points to the Savior who was to come, has come, and will come again. The only way to become acceptable to the Father is through faith in Him. Since people cannot believe in Him unless they know about Him, someone must tell them (Rom. 10:14). That requires evangelism. That is why the apostle Paul, evangelist and missionary par excellence, insisted that, if he did nothing else, he would preach Christ crucified (1 Cor. 1:17; 2:2). John Calvin said, "We must, as much as lies within us, endeavor to draw all men on earth to God" (Commentary on Deut. 33:18, 19), adding that nothing could be more inconsistent with the nature of our faith then to withhold the truth about God from others (Is. 2:3).

God wants all people everywhere to hear the gospel. There is and always has been a definite multinational dimension to His plan for redemption. When He made His covenant with Abraham, promising to make his descendants a great nation, God also promised to bless all the families of the earth through Abraham (Gen. 12:1–3). Israel was God's select nation, but Israel was also used by God to attract others to Himself, such as Ruth the Moabite, Naaman the Syrian, and the people of Nineveh. In time God promised to send the Messiah as a light for the nations living in darkness (Is. 60:1–3). The Messiah would become the perfect sacrifice for human sin, bringing cleansing to the nations so that the salvation of God would be carried to the ends of the earth (Is. 53:10, 15). The temple itself was a house of prayer and worship for all the nations (Mark 11:17, 18).

The Great Commission to make disciples of all the nations has roots in the Abrahamic covenant. At Pentecost the multinational thrust of the gospel appeared as the Holy Spirit made the believers witnesses in Judea, Samaria, and the far parts of the world (Acts 1:8; 2:5–15, 17, 21). All nations will be represented in heaven (Rev. 5:9; 7:9; 21:22–26). Therefore, Christians have an enduring obligation to communicate the gospel to everyone everywhere in the world. That requires missions.

The Responsibility of Every Believer. Clergy and Christian leaders are not the exclusive agents of evangelism, rather every Christian, as opportunity arises in the ebb and flow of daily life, is to be a witness to Christ, confessing Him in word and deed. Evangelism inevitably accompanies the presence of the Holy Spirit because He is the Spirit of truth and witness to Jesus (John 15:26, 27). The Book of Acts describes ordinary believers actively evangelizing as a natural result of their conversions and circumstances (Acts 8:1–4; 11:9, 20).

Moreover, the transformed life of the believer is, in and of itself, insufficient to bring anyone to an understanding of the gospel. It may testify magnetically to the grace of God, but it is incomplete if not expressed in words. It is necessary to live the Christian life so that others can see the difference it makes, but that does not satisfy the responsibility to evangelize. Just as general revelation is inadequate to reveal Christ to unbelievers, requiring God's special revelation in the Bible to explain who He is and why He came, so Christian behavior must be augmented by an explanation of the gospel.

What Is the Evangelistic Gospel? There is no particular order in which the evangelistic message must be presented, and the words to explain the gospel are not specifically prescribed in the Scriptures, but there is an essential core of information to be communicated, and eventually it must be assembled logically in the hearer's mind.

The mission of Christ the Savior makes no sense apart from the problem of sin He came to deal with, and sin makes no sense apart from a realization of the majesty and holiness of the Creator to whom we are accountable. God wants everyone to be holy and perfect (1 Pet. 1:16; Matt. 5:48). Failure to conform to God's will means a person is unacceptable to Him. And, no one conforms; "all have sinned" (Rom. 3:23; 1 John 1:8, 10). The consequences of sin are death and judgment (Gen. 3:3; Rom. 6:23). No amount of effort and no plan of improvement can restore innocence before God.

Since human beings are unable to save themselves, how will anyone be saved? God sent His Son Jesus Christ into the world to live the perfect, sinless life necessary to please Him. Jesus was without sin. As a human being, He could identify with us and become our substitute. Christ died on the cross to suffer God's punishment against sin. He was a substitute for those who believe in Him (Rom. 5:12–21; 2 Cor. 5:21). Having accomplished His mission, He conquered sin and death in His resurrection and ascended to the right hand of the Father, where He now rules with all authority and power.

God requires everyone to respond to the gospel with an acknowledgment of sin and its consequences, accompanied by genuine repentance, the sincere desire to turn away from sin. Salvation is by grace through faith (Eph. 2:8, 9). When anyone trusts in Christ as Savior, God forgives and accepts that person as covered completely with the righteousness of Christ. The believer becomes a child of God and is assured of everlasting life with Him (John 3:16).

The Sovereignty of God and Evangelism. As the Lord's people obey His command to take the gospel into all the world, they do so with the confidence that their efforts will be fruitful and that His word will not return empty (Is. 55:11). The success of evangelism does not depend on human effort alone, but on the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit. In witnessing, Christians are humbly and prayerfully dependent upon God's superintendence and help. A Christian must be patient, waiting on God's timing, realizing that the most important thing is to be faithful and diligent in carrying out God's commands. When someone is converted and confesses Christ, Christians, like the apostle Paul, will rejoice in the Lord and give Him the glory (1 Cor. 1:31; 2:5). □
