PUBLISHER'S PREFACE TO THE NEW EDITION.

THE Englishman's Greek Concordance of the New Testament originally appeared in 1839, the result of years of labor by several Greek scholars. Since its appearance, this unique concordance has helped generations of English-speaking Bible students to better understand the New Testament. Englishman's Greek gives the reader with no knowledge of Greek unprecedented insight into the Greek words used by the New Testament writers. For those who do know Greek, Englishman's Greek serves as a handy reference for a quick scan of a given Greek word's occurrences in the New Testament.

The present volume is based upon the ninth edition of 1903, with the addition of the numbering system from Strong's Exhaustive Concordance. This numbering makes the work invaluable in Bible study for those who do not know Greek. An example of the kind of word study possible with Englishman's Greek follows below. Additional corrections of errors and misprintings found in this ninth edition have also been made. The Greek and English indexes have been retained at the back of the volume, and the section on proper names has also been coded to Strong's numbers. In addition, a new index of out-of-sequence Strong's numbers allows the reader to quickly and easily locate any word by its Strong's number.

A translation, by its nature, is always an interpretation, and the English Bible is no exception. Since no English word carries exactly the same meaning as any one Greek word, serious Bible students need to look at the range of occurrences of given Greek words, in their biblical contexts, to understand the meaning of the original Greek.

For example, the English reader of Hebrews might wonder what exactly is meant by the "unholy thing" in 10:29 (KJV). The search begins in Strong's Exhaustive Concordance. Strong's gives the number 2839 to the Greek word translated as "unholy" in Hebrews 10:29. This particular word assigned number 2839 is translated as "unholy" only in Hebrews 10:29. But with Englishman's Greek the non-

Greek reader can learn more about other occurrences of this Greek word, number 2839. The Strong's number is the key that unlocks the wealth of information contained in Englishman's Greek.

The Strong's numbers listed throughout Englishman's Greek are in sequence (the few out-of-sequence numbers are listed in a special index at the back of this volume), and so the number 2839 is found on page 426 of Englishman's Greek, next to the Greek word κοινός (koinos). What follows are all occurrences of the word koinos in context, with their biblical references. The English word or phrase translating this particular Greek word is italicized. This arrangement enables the reader to see easily, in context, the various ways a particular Greek word has been rendered. The entries in Englishman's Greek also constitute a visual representation of the frequency of the word koinos and of its usage by different New Testament authors in different New Testament books.

As becomes quickly evident from scanning this entry, koinos in the New Testament is translated variously by the KJV as common (in the sense of shared), unclean, common (in the sense of unclean), and unholy. A more thorough word study continues when the reader consults the contexts of the different verses that contain the word koinos. Asking simple questions of the text—such as noting who is using the word and who or what koinos refers to, or what the larger context is (such as the ceremonial laws referred to in Mark 7:2 or the community of faith in Acts 2:33 and Titus 1:4), reveal vital information. Such a study reveals the widely divergent meanings that a single word can have. The same word that refers to rejecting God in Hebrews is used in Titus 1:4 to describe the faith in God that unites all believers.

To take a slightly different tack, it is also possible for the reader to use the English and Greek index at the back of the volume. Here one can find, for example, the different Greek words translated by the KJV as "unholy" and the pages on which those words occur in Englishman's Greek. This index is yet another useful tool for unearthing the rich meaning of the biblical language.

NOTA BENE.

In the present Edition, the symbol 000 . . . . . 000 has been adopted (in both the English and Greek and in the Greek and English Index) as the sign of matter which has been omitted.

When a Greek word has nothing which represents it in the translation, the mark)(has been introduced therein, to point out its place.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THIS work is an attempt at a verbal connexion between the Greek and the English texts of the New Testament. Such an idea, though novel to him whose studies have been limited to the English language, is not so to the student: for it is but a modification of that developed by Marius in his Hebrew and Latin Concordance; by Kircher in his Hebrew and Greek Concordance for the LXX; by Trommius in his somewhat similar work; by Romaine in his edition of Marius; and by Taylor in his Hebrew and English Concordance.

PLAN.—The PLAN proposed was this: to present, in alphabetical succession, every word which occurs in the Greek New Testament, with the series of passages (quoted from the English translation) in which each such word occurs; the word or words exhibiting the Greek word under immediate consideration being printed in italic letters.

MANNER.—The MANNER in which the plan was carried into execution was simple and plain. Schmid's Concordance to the New Testament was taken as the basis. In this work we have, for the Greek New Testament, what Cruden's work was intended to be toward the whole English Bible; it is an alphabetical arrangement of each word which occurs, each word being immediately followed by the series of passages in which it occurs; this series is, of course, made up of such quotations, from the respective passages, as best exhibit the word under consideration.

It may be well to notice that the edition of Schmid used, was that printed in Glasgow, 1819. The copy used was, however, diligently corrected throughout before being accredited.*

* The revision of Schmid was thus conducted. Every word as cited in Schmid was found in a Greek New Testament, interleaved for the purpose, and therein underlined with black ink. When the whole of Schmid had thus been verified, of course it was only needful carefully to look through the Greek Testament thus marked, in order to discover how many words were omitted in Schmid; for if every word which actually occurred in Schmid was thus underlined in the New Testament, the words NOT underlined were of course not in Schmid. About 620 such were found, besides many errors, &c., &c.

A copy of Schmid's Greek Concordance was then put into the hand of a writer, with these directions:—

First. Place Schmid open before you. Write from it the first Greek heading, and under it successively all the references, i. e., the books, chapters, and verses. Thus,

A, alpha.

Rev. 1 : 8.
11.
21 : 6.
22 : 13.

Secondly. Open an interleaved Greek and English New Testament; compare the two texts together, selecting the seven consecutive words which best illustrate the Greek word under consideration, and write them down against each reference, UNDERLINING the word which is to be put in italics. Thus,

Rev. 1 : 8 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning
11 I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the
21 : 6 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning
22 : 13 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning

REVISION.—When thus prepared, the manuscript was, first, examined, and each citation compared with an interleaved English and Greek Testament, in order to see that the right passage was quoted, and the right word underlined.

It was, secondly, read carefully by one accustomed to the press, and each line compared with an English Bible to verify the references (i. e., books, chapters, and verses), and the spelling, capital letters, stops, &c.

Thirdly. It was compared with the corrected Schmid, and then sent to press.

When the letter-press had been twice carefully read with the copy, every line was

First, Again compared with an English Bible, to verify the references, spelling, capitals, stops, &c. [The Bible used in both cases was the Oxford small pica 8vo. 1836, with marginal readings, No. 8 in the Oxford Series.]

Secondly, It was then read out by one person to a second, who had Schmid before him, and read each line therein. The object of this was to see, first, that nothing was omitted; and, secondly, that the right words were underlined.

It may be remarked here, that this is a very sure guard against the accidental quotation of a wrong part of a verse. The average number of words in each quotation in Schmid is three: now, if it be considered in how many verses in the New Testament are there three consecutive words, interchangeable, from being synonymous, with three other consecutive words, the efficiency of the guard thus provided will appear.

ITALICS.—As to the word put in ITALICS; the general rule has been to print in italics that word which in the English is "to the eye" equivalent to the Greek word under consideration. The exceptions are where the English contains that which is a CONVENTIONAL mark, in grammar, of something not found in the Greek text: for instance, in translating a verb, attention had not, in our authorised version, always been paid to the conventional signs of mood and tense: thus, a subjunctive is translated not "that they might see," but "to see." In the senses of the two renderings there is no difference; but observe that "to" in such cases is not put in italics, because it is the conventional sign of the infinitive mood; but the Greek verb is not the infinitive but the subjunctive.

Again, if an infinitive were translated, "that they might not see," "see" only would be in italics, because the Greek verb is in the infinitive mood, and "might" is the conventional sign of the subjunctive.

Again, if a Greek participle is translated otherwise than by an English participle, it will generally be found that there is that, and, when, &c. before or after the verb, by which it is expressed, in italics.

The pronouns I, thou, he, &c. when simply IMPLIED in the verb, are never in italics.

Where the versification of the English differs from the Greek text, both verses are placed, the English first and the Greek after it, in parentheses.

For the sake of those who cannot read Greek, the English pronunciation of the Greek word at the heading is added in English characters; ī has been used for ει, ū for ευ, ee for η, and ō for ω, when so placed as if not especially rested upon to distort the word, as anapleeroō; in which, without such a rest upon the second "o," the two would coalesce into a diphthong.

In order to call attention, first, to peculiar combinations of words; secondly, to the variation of government by prepositions; and, thirdly, to the different forms of the same word, conventional marks have been occasionally introduced into the headings; see αἰών, διά, ἄχρι, &c., &c. To these many other such like remarks might be added; but none of them need observation in order for the book to be used, and they will all pass before the reader's eye as he uses it. It may, however, be remarked that the sign)(has been used when there is nothing in English answering to the Greek word.

 Where all the occurrences of a word are not given in the body of the work, as in the case of ἀλλά, αὐτός, γάρ, a full list is given in the Appendix, in which also will be found a few remarks on δέ, καί, ὁ, and ὅς, the four words which Schmid passes by unnoticed, by reason of their too frequent occurrence.

March, 1840.

A SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE MAKING AND PERFECTING OF THE ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE.

A DETAILED account of the formation, etc., of the Englishman's Greek Concordance, has been the desire of several. This I shall now endeavour to meet. The task is rather an arduous one; because, whilst the credit of exhibiting in English the exemplifications of each Greek word in the New Testament is due to another,—on myself are supposed to meet the offices of Corrector, Enlarger, Improver, and Editor. Simplicity, however, will pass through all difficulties, howsoever great they may seem. I would only state (as bespeaking a more favourable hearing) that my narrative will shew that the supposition, referring to myself, is without foundation. I am not Corrector, not Enlarger, not Improver, not Editor. Proprietor of the copyright, through the gift of another, I am; and mine, too, is that sort of place which belongs to one who, having the right to direct, may have chanced upon some good suggestions for the workmen.

As the book is a dry Concordance, I would crave the liberty to be as free as I can in my narrative.

My preparation for the work. It was in the year 1827 or 1828, that I began to prepare some Essays explanatory and illustrative of the "Terms conventional to the Scriptures;" e. g. Righteousness, Sanctification, Justification, etc. One of these I thought much of; and I may give the course pursued in the preparation of it as an explanation of my general plan. 1st. After making a list of the places (books, chapters, and verses) in which the words occurred, I carefully examined all the passages in the Greek Testament in which the word δίκη or any kindred term occurred, endeavouring to seize on the abstract thought common to all the places in which it was found. 2ndly. I considered how many English words it would be necessary to use in order to express the varieties of shades of meaning. And, 3rdly. I wrote down after each citation, either the word which would do for the translation in that place, or (where it had occurred before) some sign for it. This, when arranged, formed the skeleton of the explanation, and the object of illustration.

Mr. W. Burgh's plan. Full of these Essays, I spoke of them to many. In September, 1830, I went to Ireland, still labouring therein. Between that month and March, 1831, Mr. W. Burgh, till that time a perfect stranger to me, came to stay a few days at Powerscourt. In the course of a walk with him, I spoke of part of the subject then interesting me; and he, I think, in reply referred to the advantage he had found in doing much the same thing himself; only his preparation was better and far more simple than mine. His plan was to arrange the passages in which the word occurred, according to the order of the books in the English Bible, from Taylor's Hebrew and Schmid's Greek Concordances, and then write after each, a quotation from the English Bible, to present the word to the eye.

The design was so novel to me, and so admirable, that it delighted me much; and I urged his devoting all his time to the accomplishment of such a work. If he would have allowed me, I should gladly have supported him while so doing; but this he positively declined. With his usual ingenuity, however, he kindly devised a manner of meeting my wishes, by offering to engage lads to do the mechanical part of the writing under him. How singular it is to look back upon the past scenes of life! My going to Ireland had been quite unexpected;—his being asked to the house at that special time;—our lighting, in a walk as perfect strangers, upon that which had occupied our minds, "how to elucidate Scripture;"—and the free blending together which followed in an effort to accomplish this object after the manner proposed by Mr. B.: and how different the motives which may operate! Mr. B.'s object I know not;—my joy in the project was the opening of a door for me, by which the plan of my Essays might be acted upon in Hebrew as well as in Greek.

Though Mr. W. B. had commenced, he says, Articles of the Greek previous to this, it was the Hebrew which, as the more difficult task, held the place of pre-eminence in his mind, and the one which he first mentioned to me. The Hebrew was arranged for between us first; (for the further account of it see that Concordance). Knowing a little of Greek (though then nothing of Hebrew), and being still labouring at my "Essays," I asked Mr. W. Burgh, whether he would permit me to adopt his plan for the Greek. Though not systematically from the beginning, yet small portions had been written out, according to his own need, perhaps, previously. To this he consented, and further agreed to endeavour to get as much of it written for me (at so many pence per page, of so many lines) as he could. About 800 pages in MS. of this was beautifully executed under his care, i.e., about 290 pages in letterpress of the 900 pages seen in the volume. Finding difficulty in proceeding with the making of the MS. further, he handed it over to me, to be continued or not, as I liked. As he had most distinctly warned me at the outset, he would not undertake to have more done than might be quite convenient to him, I of course only felt thankful for this aid, superadded to the gift of leave to do the work. For whilst he charged it only like blank paper, what it cost by the foot, to me it was the acquisition of so much "painting," for it was most accurately and beautifully done; so that it is now, though soiled by having passed through the press, MS. in a very good state of order. The 1800 remaining pages of MS. were made by various hands; some a gift, some purchased between 1831 and 1839. At Plymouth, in 1831, I gave away all that was done to a friend, in the hopes that he would correct and finish it; and from him I received it back as a present. While a lady at the same place was writing part of it for me, she complained that it would be of no use to her, unless I gave "a key" to it, "English and Greek;" this remark, repeated by several, decided me to try and make the design and plan of "A Greek and English Concordance," as opened out and given to me by Mr. Burgh, subservient to another design and plan, as expressed by the present title, "The Englishman's Greek Concordance"; by which I mean a Greek Concordance, such as one who can read English, and English only—the mere English reader—could consult. For great as the aid, to one who could read Greek, from Mr. W. B.'s Greek and English Concordance would have been, the mere English reader could not, by himself, have benefited much by it, from his want of knowing Greek.

I may give now a condensed account of—

First, Schmid's Concordance. Secondly, Mr. B.'s plan, and—Thirdly, What was afterwards added in matter and design by others.

SCHMID—

Schmid's design appears to have been to give, in alphabetical order, the whole vocabulary of the Greek Testament (some few words of minor importance being excepted), each word being followed by the series of its occurrences, books, chapters, and verses; and the citation in Greek consisting generally of three or four words.

We may suppose Schmid to have made his work, first, a vocabulary.

A ἀβαρής ἀββᾶ

2ndly, to have written down, under each, the guide to the places where it occurred, as—

A	ἀβαρής
Rev. 1 : 8	2 Cor. 11 : 9
11
21 : 6
22 : 13

And lastly, to have written down after each such reference, the three or four Greek words in immediate connection with the word standing in the heading, thus—

A

Rev. 1 : 8. ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ A καὶ τὸ Ω
11. ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ A καὶ τὸ Ω
21 : 6. ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ A καὶ τὸ Ω
22 : 13. ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ A καὶ τὸ Ω

and so on through the whole work. This work could of course only be used by a Greek scholar, and but few know Greek enough to use it with comfort to themselves.

Mr. W. B.'s Plan—

Was to write down, in place of the Greek citation, the English which was equivalent to it, printing in different type (italic letter) the portion which translated the Greek word at the head of the article. And this, when done, made the book.

This plan was original, and clearly is such as to enable any one who knows Greek sufficiently to look at a verse in the New Testament, if he knows English well, to consult a Greek Concordance with as much comfort as he could Cruden.

All that was effected under my management, was—

1st. The MS. had to be made from επι, p. 281, to χρονιζω, p. 803, in the Appellatives, i.e. MS. for 521 pages of letter-press.

2ndly. Mistrusting Schmid's accuracy, we re-made a copy for ourselves thus :—

Every word, as cited by Schmid, was found in a Greek New Testament, interleaved for the purpose, and then underlined with black ink. When the whole of Schmid had thus been verified, of course it was only needful carefully to look through the Greek Testament thus marked, in order to discover how many words were omitted in Schmid, for if every word which actually occurred in Schmid was thus underlined in the New Testament, the words not underlined in it were of course not in Schmid. About 620 such were found, besides many errors, etc., etc. This was the kind labour of L. C. L. Brenton, in the year 1836.

3rdly. The MS. had to be lifted off its old basis, Schmid, and placed upon the larger one of the corrected Schmid.

Improvements.

1.—The blending into one, many words which Schmid had divided into two, making oft what was really only an adjective to be sometimes such and sometimes a substantive. A comparison of the two books will show how far this has been done.

2.—The blending of some forms, which, contrary to his principle, he had separated, as some cases in the pronouns αὐτου, αὐτην, αυτοις, etc.

3.—Sundries ; see page v. in the Introduction.

Lastly,—There were made and added,—

1.—The proper names which (though in Schmid under one alphabet with the appellatives) had been omitted in the MS., occupying from 818—872, i.e. 54 pages.

2.—An Index, English and Greek, which, besides its value to the mere English reader (his only key to the book), is a fair English and Greek Dictionary, and the best key extant to the Scripture Greek synonyms, 873—942, i.e. 68 pages.

3.—An Appendix I. containing the occurrences of ἀλλα, αὐτος, γαρ, and—

4.—An Appendix II. containing cursory suggestions on δε, και, ὁ, ὁς, the four words which Schmid passes by unnoticed, on account of their too frequent occurrences. The 2nd and 4th were the labours of different persons.

The greater part of this, as first published, was edited by Mr. George H. Stoddart, and under him, as corrector of the press, etc., by W. Chalk.

The printing establishment deserves my thanks for its ready aid and attention.

The only originality, then, in this work, is the primary design of Mr. Burgh, by a Greek and English Concordance, to enable the tyro in Greek to consult a Greek Concordance with ease; and a secondary design (which is really the reverse of this) the subordinating it by the means of an English and Greek key to the use of the mere English reader. And this is just what the title for it, "The Englishman's Greek Concordance," was meant to designate. My relation to it then is just marked by the terms Proprietor and Nursing Father. Honour or thanks I desire none. Indeed, when I think of the origin of this book; of the progress of its developement; of the innumerable difficulties which again and again threatened its destruction; and, above all, of its tendency (as contrasted with the now prevailing increase of Romanism); I cannot but bow my head before the God of Providence, and be ashamed at His having vouchsafed any connection with it to one so unworthy as

GEORGE V. WIGRAM.

VOCABULARY.

This Vocabulary is added to give the English reader the meaning, in short, of each Greek word, and throw light upon the different translations of the words in the Authorised Version, as notified by italics in the Concordance.

Many of the Greek words are compounds of two or more words: these are shewn by the use of the hyphen.

Some of the roots of the words are given for the assistance of those who may wish to trace the words further, and meanings are added to those roots which do not occur in the Concordance.

Words marked with a * are those not found in the common Greek text (and therefore not in the body of the Concordance), but which have been introduced by the Editors of the various editions of the Greek Testament, most of which will be found in the Concordance of VARIOUS READINGS at the end of the volume.
