6:17+ caused the Aramaeans in their camp to hear a noise of chariots and horses, the noise of a great army; and they had said to one another, 'Listen! The king of Israel has hired the Hittite and Egyptian[a] kings against us, to attack us.' ·So in the dusk 7
they had made off and fled, abandoning their tents, their horses and their donkeys; leaving the camp just as it was, they had fled for their lives. ·The men with skin- 8 disease, then, reached the confines of the camp. They went into one of the tents and ate and drank, and from it carried off silver and gold and clothing; these they took and hid. Then they came back and, entering another tent, looted it too, and took and hid their booty.

The siege at an end; the famine ceases

Then they said to one another, 'We are doing wrong. This is a day of good news, 9 yet we are holding our tongues! If we wait till morning, we shall certainly be punished. Come on, let us go and take the news to the palace.' ·Off they went and 10 shouted out to the guards on the city gate, 'We have been to the Aramaean camp.

There was not a soul there, no sound of anyone, only tethered horses and tethered 11 donkeys, and their tents just as they were.' •The gatekeepers shouted the news, which was reported inside the palace.
12 The king got up while it was still dark and said to his officers, 'I can tell you what the Aramaeans have done to us. They know we are starving, so they have left the camp to hide in the open country. "They will come out of the city," they think, 13 "we shall catch them alive and get into the city." ' •One of his officers replied, 'Five of the surviving horses still left us had better be taken—they would die in any case 14 like all the rest.[b] Let us send them and see.' •So they took two chariot teams and 15 the king sent them after the Aramaean army, saying, 'Go and see.' •They followed them as far as the Jordan, finding the whole way strewn with clothes and gear which the Aramaeans had thrown away in their panic. The scouts returned and informed the king.
16 Then the people went out and plundered the Aramaean camp: a measure of finest flour sold for one shekel, and two measures of barley for one shekel, as 17 Yahweh had promised they would. •The king had detailed the equerry, on whose arm he leaned, as commander of the guard on the gate, but the people trampled on 7:2
him in the gateway and he died, as the man of God had foretold when the king had 18 come down to him. •(What Elisha had said to the king came true, 'Two measures of barley will sell for one shekel, and a measure of finest flour for one shekel, by 19 this time tomorrow at the gate of Samaria.' •And the equerry in question had replied to the man of God, 'Even if Yahweh made windows in the sky, could this word come true?' 'You will see it with your own eyes,' Elisha had answered 'though 20 you will eat none of it.' •And that was what happened to him: for the people trampled on him in the gateway and he died.[c])

Epilogue to the story of the woman of Shunem[a]

1 8 Elisha had said to the woman whose son he had raised to life, 'Move away with your family, and live where you can in some foreign country, for Yahweh has 2 called up a famine—it is already coming on the country—for seven years.' •The woman hurried to do what the man of God had told her: she set out, she and her 3 family, and for seven years she lived in Philistine territory. •When the seven years were over, the woman returned from Philistine territory and went to lodge a claim with the king for her house and land.[b] 4 Now the king was talking to Gehazi, the servant of the man of God. 'Tell me', he 5 was saying, 'all about the marvels which Elisha did.' •Gehazi was just telling the king how Elisha had raised the dead child to life, when the woman whose son Elisha had raised lodged her claim with the king for her house and land. 'My lord king,' Gehazi said, 'this is the very woman, and that is her son whom Elisha raised 6 to life.' •The king questioned the woman, who told him the story. The king then delegated one of the officials to her with this order, 'See that all her property is

Elisha and Hazael of Damascus

Elisha went to Damascus. Ben-Hadad[c] king of Aram was ill, and was told, 'The 7 man of God has come all the way to us.' ·Then the king said to Hazael,[d] 'Take a 8 5:1:2 present with you and go and meet the man of God; consult Yahweh through him, and find out if I shall recover from my illness.'

So Hazael went to meet Elisha, taking with him as a present the best that 9
Damascus could offer, a load for forty camels. He arrived and, presenting himself, 6:21g said, 'Your son Ben-Hadad king of Aram has sent me to ask you, "Shall I recover from my illness?" ' ·Elisha replied, 'Go and tell him, "You might recover," though 10
1 K 19:15 Yahweh has shown me that he will certainly die.'[e] ·Then the face of the man of 11
God went rigid, and his look grew strangely fixed,[f] and he wept. ·'Why', Hazael 12 asked, 'does my lord weep?' 'Because I know', Elisha replied, 'what harm you will do to the Israelites: you will burn down their fortresses, put their picked warriors 15:16 Am 1:13 to the sword, dash their little children to pieces, disembowel their pregnant women.' ·'But what is your servant?' Hazael said. 'How could this dog[g] achieve 13 anything so great?' 'In a vision from Yahweh,' Elisha replied, 'I have seen you king of Aram.'

Leaving Elisha, Hazael went back to his master who asked, 'What did Elisha say 14 to you?' He replied, 'He told me that you might recover.' ·Next day he took a 15 blanket, soaked it in water, and spread it over his face.[h] So died Ben-Hadad, and Hazael succeeded him.

The reign of Jehoram in Judah (848–841)

In the fifth year of Jehoram son of Ahab, king of Israel,[i] Jehoram son of Jeho- 16 ‖2Ch 21:5–7 shaphat became king of Judah. ·He was thirty-two years old when he came to the 17 throne, and he reigned for eight years in Jerusalem. ·He followed the example of 18
the kings of Israel as the House of Ahab were doing; he had married one of Ahab's daughters;[j] and he did what is displeasing to Yahweh. ·But Yahweh was unwilling 19
2 S 7:11–16,14e 1 K 11:36i to destroy Judah, because of his servant David, and was faithful to the promise which he had made him to leave him a lamp for ever in his presence.[k]

‖2 Ch 21:8–10 Gn 27:40h In his time Edom threw off the domination of Judah and set up a king for itself.[l] 20
Jehoram crossed to Zair,[m] and with him all the chariots . . . Under cover of dark, 21
he and his chariot commanders broke through the Edomites surrounding him; the people fled to their tents. ·Even so, Edom threw off the domination of Judah, 22 remaining free to the present day. Libnah[n] also revolted at that time.

The rest of the history of Jehoram, his entire career, is this not recorded in the 23
‖2 Ch 21:20 Book of the Annals of the Kings of Judah? ·Then Jehoram fell asleep with his 24 ancestors and was buried with them in the City of David; his son Ahaziah succeeded him.

‖2 Ch 22:1–6 The reign of Ahaziah in Judah (841)

In the twelfth year of Jehoram son of Ahab, king of Israel, Ahaziah son of 25
Jehoram, king of Judah, became king. ·Ahaziah was twenty-two years old when he 26 came to the throne, and he reigned for one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Athaliah granddaughter of Omri king of Israel. ·He followed the example of 27 the House of Ahab and did what is displeasing to Yahweh, as the House of Ahab were doing, to whom he was related by marriage.

9:14–15 1 K 22:3–4 He went with Jehoram son of Ahab to make war on Hazael king of Aram at 28
Ramoth in Gilead, but the Aramaeans wounded Jehoram. ·King Jehoram returned 29 to Jezreel to recover from the wounds which he had received at Ramah, fighting against Hazael king of Aram. Ahaziah son of Jehoram, king of Judah, went down to Jezreel to visit Jehoram son of Ahab because he was ailing.

E: THE HISTORY OF JEHU

A disciple of Elisha anoints Jehu king

1 9 The prophet Elisha summoned a member of the prophetic brotherhood to him, 'Hitch up your clothes, take this flask of oil, and go to Ramoth in Gilead.
2 When you arrive there, look for Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi. Then, when you find him, tell him to get up and leave his companions, and take him into 3 an inner room. •Take the flask of oil then and pour it over his head, and say,
"Yahweh says this: I have anointed you king of Israel." Then open the door and 1 K 19:16 flee as fast as you can.'
4, 5 The young man[a] left for Ramoth in Gilead •and when he arrived, found the senior officers of the army sitting together. 'I have a message for you, commander,' 6 he said. 'For which of us?' asked Jehu. 'For you, commander,' he answered. •Jehu then got up and went into the house. And the young man poured the oil on his head, saying, 'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "I have anointed you king of 7 Yahweh's people, of Israel. •You will strike down the family of Ahab your master, 1 K 16:4,13; 19:10,21 and I shall avenge the blood of my servants the prophets and all of Yahweh's 8 servants, on Jezebel •and on[b] the whole family of Ahab. I shall destroy every 1 K 21:21–24 9 manjack of Ahab's family, fettered or free in Israel. •I shall make the House of Ahab like the House of Jeroboam son of Nebat and of Baasha son of Ahijah. 1 K 14:10–11
10 As for Jezebel, the dogs will eat her in the field of Jezreel; no one will bury her." '[c] 1 K 16:3–4
With this, he opened the door and made his escape.

Jehu proclaimed king

11 Jehu came out to his master's officers. 'Is all well?' they asked him.[d] 'Why did this madman[e] come to you?' 'You know the fellow and how he talks,' he answered.
12 'Evasion!' they cried, 'Come on, tell us.' He replied, 'He said this and that to me. He said, "Yahweh says this: I have anointed you king of Israel." ' 13 Whereupon they all took their cloaks and spread them under him[f] on the bare steps; they sounded the trumpet and shouted, 'Jehu is king!'

Jehu prepares to usurp power

14 Jehu son of Jehoshaphat, son of Nimshi plotted against Jehoram. (At the time, Jehoram, with all Israel, was holding Ramoth in Gilead[g] against an attack by 1 K 22:3 15 Hazael king of Aram, •but King Jehoram had gone back to Jezreel to recover from the wounds which he had received from the Aramaeans while he was fighting against Hazael king of Aram.) 'If you agree,' Jehu said, 'let no one leave the town

c. Ben-Hadad II, as in 1 K 20:1.

d. Evidently an official of Ben-Hadad; he was to seize the throne later, v. 15.

e. 'You might recover', idiomatic use of the infinitive absolute, see Gn 2:16. To absolve Elisha from deceit, Hebr. replaces 'him' by 'not' (lo by lo'): 'go and say, "You will not recover" ', thus hiding the deliberate ambiguity of Elisha's words. Whether or not the prophet implanted the thought of murder in Hazael's head, see v. 13, the revelation concerns Hazael rather than Ben-Hadad and Elisha sees the coming event as inevitably pre-ordained.

f. 'his face went rigid' wayyiśhom conj.; Hebr. wayyasem 'he placed'. The physical signs of prophetic ecstasy.

g. 'dog', here merely an expression of humility, see 1 S 24:15; 2 S 9:8: Hazael is surprised by this prophecy of future greatness.

h. The subject of the phrase is not expressed. Presumably Hazael murdered Ben-Hadad, rather than Ben-Hadad committing suicide.

i. Hebr. adds 'Jehoshaphat being king of Judah', absent from versions.

j. 'from the House' mibbet conj.; Hebr. bat 'the daughter'. • The woman in question was Athaliah, see ch. 11, daughter of Omri and sister, see v. 26 and 2 Ch 22:2, or daughter of Ahab, here (Hebr.) and 2 Ch 21:6. Chronology favours the first alternative.

k. 'in his presence', see 1 K 11:36; 'to his sons' Hebr.

l. Edom, see Nb 20:23, was a vassal and protectorate of Judah under Jehoshaphat, 3:8–10 seq.; 1 K 22:48.

m. Unidentified site in Transjordan; the remainder of the passage has been mutilated in an attempt to expunge the record of a defeat. So also in v. 22.

n. The town passed to the Philistines.

9 a. After 'The young man', text adds 'the young man, the prophet'.

b. 'and on' Gk; 'and will perish' Hebr.

c. vv. 7–10[a] have been added by the author of Kings: in the original story the young man must have fled immediately after anointing Jehu, as ordered by Elisha, v. 3.

d. 'they asked him' versions; Hebr. has singular.

e. Attitude of the people at large to the prophets, Jr 29:26; Ho 9:7. The term is not a direct insult though containing an element of mockery, and Jehu adopts the same tone.

f. As the crowd offered royal honours to Jesus, Mt 21:8 par.

g. The town had evidently been recaptured by the Israelites, despite the disaster related in 1 K 22; the Aramaeans were now trying to re-take it.

to go and take the news to Jezreel.' ·Jehu then mounted his chariot and left for 16
Jezreel; Jehoram had taken to his bed there, and Ahaziah king of Judah had gone down to visit him.

The lookout posted on the tower of Jezreel saw Jehu's troop approaching. 'I can 17 see a body of men,' he shouted. Jehoram gave the order: 'Have a horseman sent to meet them and ask, "Is all well?" '[h] ·The horseman went to meet Jehu and said, 18
'The king says, "Is all well?" ' 'What has it to do with you whether all is well?' Jehu replied. 'Fall in behind me.' The lookout reported, 'The messenger has reached them and is not coming back.' ·The king sent a second horseman who reached 19 them and said, 'The king says, "Is all well?" ' 'What has it to do with you whether all is well?' Jehu replied. 'Fall in behind me.' ·The lookout reported, 'He has 20 reached them and is not coming back. The manner of driving is like that of Jehu son of Nimshi: he drives like a madman.' ·'Harness!' Jehoram cried; and they 21 ‖2 Ch 22:7–8 harnessed his chariot. Then Jehoram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah, each in his chariot, set out to meet Jehu. They reached him in the field of Naboth of Jezreel.

The assassination of Jehoram

As soon as Jehoram saw Jehu he asked, 'Is all well, Jehu?' 'What a question!' he 22 replied, 'when all the while the prostitutions[i] and countless sorceries of your mother Jezebel go on.' ·At this, Jehoram wheeled and fled, saying to Ahaziah, 23
'Treason, Ahaziah!' ·But Jehu had drawn his bow; he struck Jehoram between the 24 shoulder-blades, the arrow went through the king's heart, and he sank down in his chariot. ·'Pick him up,' Jehu said to Bidkar, his equerry, 'and throw him into the 25 1 K 21 field of Naboth of Jezreel. Remember how, when you and I manned a chariot together behind Ahab his father, Yahweh pronounced this sentence against him,
"This I swear. Yesterday I saw the blood of Naboth and the blood of his sons— 26 1 K 21:19 Yahweh says this. And in this same field I shall requite you—Yahweh says this."
So pick him up, and throw him into the field, as Yahweh declared should happen!'

‖2 Ch 22:8–9 The assassination of Ahaziah

When Ahaziah king of Judah saw this, he fled along the Beth-ha-Gan road, but 27 Jehu went in pursuit of him. 'Strike him down too,' he said. And they wounded him[j] in his chariot at the slope of Gur, which is near Ibleam, and he took refuge in Megiddo, where he died. ·His servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem and 28 buried him in his tomb[k] in the City of David. ·Ahaziah had become king of Judah 29 in the eleventh year of Jehoram son of Ahab.

The assassination of Jezebel

When Jehu went back to Jezreel, Jezebel was told. She made up her eyes with 30 mascara, adorned her head and appeared at the window. ·As Jehu came through 31 1 K 16:9–18 the gateway she said, 'How did Zimri get on after killing his master?'[l] ·Jehu looked 32 up to the window and said, 'Who is on my side? Who?' And two or three officials looked down at him. ·'Throw her down,' he said. They threw her down and her 33 blood spattered the walls and the horses; and Jehu rode over her. ·He went in and 34 ate and drank, then said, 'See to this accursed woman, and give her burial; after all, she was a king's daughter.' ·But when they went to bury her, they found 35 nothing but her skull, feet and hands. ·They came back and told Jehu, who said, 36
'This is the word of Yahweh which he spoke through his servant Elijah the Tishbite, 9:10 "The dogs will eat the flesh of Jezebel in the field of Jezreel; ·the corpse of Jezebel 37
1 K 21:23 will be like dung spread on the fields,[m] so that no one will be able to say: This was Ps 68:23m Jezebel." '
Jr 8:2

11:1 The massacre of the royal family of Israel
Jg 9:5
1 K 15:29;16:11

10 There were seventy of Ahab's sons in Samaria.[a] Jehu sent to Samaria, to 1
the authorities of the city, to the elders and to the guardians of Ahab's

2 children. He said, •'Now, when this letter reaches you, you have your master's sons with you; you also have chariots and horses, a fortified city and weapons.
3 See which of your master's sons is the best and worthiest, put him on his father's 4 throne and fight for your master's dynasty!' •They were utterly terrified. 'We have seen how the two kings could not stand up to him,' they said, 'so how could we?'
5 Consequently the master of the palace, the governor of the city, the elders and the guardians sent word to Jehu, 'We are your servants. We shall do whatever you order us. We shall not proclaim a king; act as you think best.' 6 Jehu then wrote them a second letter. He said, 'If you are for me and if you are prepared to accept orders from me, take the heads[b] of the men of your master's family and come to me at Jezreel by this time tomorrow.' (There were seventy of 7 Ahab's sons being educated there by the leading men of the city.) •When this letter reached them, they took the king's sons and butchered all seventy of them, put their heads in baskets and sent them to him at Jezreel.
8 The messenger came and told Jehu, 'They have brought the heads of the king's sons.' 'Leave them in two heaps at the entrance to the gate until morning,' he 9 replied. •When morning came, he went out and, standing, said to all the people,
'No guilt attaches to you! I did indeed plot against my master and have killed him;
10 but what about all these? Who struck them? •Know, then, that nothing will fail to 1 K 21:21-24 be fulfilled of the prophecy uttered by Yahweh against the House of Ahab; Yahweh 11 has done what he said through his servant Elijah.' •Jehu then killed every member of the House of Ahab surviving in Jezreel, all his leading men, his close friends, his priests; he did not leave a single one alive.

The massacre of the princes of Judah ‖2 Ch 22:8

12 Jehu then set out for Samaria. As he was on his way, at Beth-Eked of the 13 Shepherds, •he met the brothers[c] of Ahaziah king of Judah. 'Who are you?' he asked. 'We are Ahaziah's brothers,' they replied, 'and we are on our way to pay 14 our respects to the king's sons and the queen mother's sons.' •'Take them alive,' he said. They took them alive, and he slaughtered them at the storage-well of Beth-Eked, forty-two of them; he did not spare a single one.

Jehu and Jehonadab

15 Leaving there, he came on Jehonadab son of Rechab who was on his way to meet Jr 35:1-11 him. He greeted him and said, 'Is your heart true to mine,[d] as my heart is to yours?'
Jehonadab replied, 'Yes.' 'If so,' Jehu said, 'give me your hand.' Jehonadab gave 16 him his hand, and Jehu took him up beside him in his chariot. •'Come with me,' he 17 said, 'and witness my zeal for Yahweh,' and took him along in his chariot. •When he entered Samaria, he killed all the survivors of Ahab's family in Samaria; he destroyed it, as Yahweh had told Elijah it would happen.

The destruction of Baal's adherents and temple

18 Then Jehu assembled all the people. 'Ahab did Baal some small service,' he said

h. The king does not at first suspect treason, but is uneasy about the news from Ramoth in Gilead.

i. As in the Prophets, in the metaphorical sense of worshipping false gods, with a possible allusion to sacred prostitution, see Dt 23:29f, a feature of Phoenician religion.

j. 'they wounded him' Syr.; Hebr. omits.

k. Hebr. adds 'with his ancestors'.

l. Sarcastic allusion to Zimri who reigned for only eight days after assassinating Elah, king of Israel.

m. Hebr. adds 'in the field of Jezreel', a gloss omitted by most Gk MSS.

10 a. 'Seventy': conventional number used to indicate the entire offspring. Gn 46:27; Jg 8:30; 9:2; 12:14. Here it means the sons and grandsons of Ahab, but more particularly the sons of Jehoram. • 'of the city' Gk-Luc.; 'of Jezreel' Hebr. 'of the children' Gk-Luc.; Hebr. omits.

b. The Hebrew rosh means both 'leader' and 'head'. Jehu's correspondents take grim advantage of the ambiguity, v. 7; perhaps they were intended to, though Jehu subsequently throws the responsibility on them, v. 9; see Elisha's ambiguous prophecy to Hazael for Ben-Hadad, 8:7-15.

c. 'brothers' in the extended sense of 'relations'. They were on their way to visit the sons of Jehoram and Jezebel respectively. It is unlikely that, having already passed Samaria, they could have known nothing of the massacre of vv. 6-7. The incident is misplaced.

d. 'Is your heart . . . mine' Gk; Hebr. uncertain. • Jehonadab son of Rechab was an ardent Yahwist and had imposed the simple desert régime on his clan, Jr 35:1-11. It was natural for him to support Jehu, but this episode, like the preceding, is certainly misplaced.

'but Jehu will do him a great one. ·Now call me all the prophets of Baal[e] and all his 19 priests. Not one is to be absent: I have a great sacrifice to offer to Baal. If anyone is absent, he will forfeit his life.' This was a trick on Jehu's part to destroy the devotees of Baal. ·'Summon a sacred assembly for Baal,' he commanded; and they 20 summoned it. ·Jehu sent messengers throughout Israel, and all the devotees of 21 1 K 16:32 Baal arrived, not a man was left who did not attend. They crowded into the temple of Baal until it was full from wall to wall. ·Jehu then said to the keeper of the 22 wardrobe, 'Bring out vestments for all the devotees of Baal';[f] he brought out the vestments for them. ·Jehu then went into the temple of Baal with Jehonadab son 23 of Rechab and said to Baal's devotees, 'Make quite sure that there are no devotees of Yahweh in here with you, but only devotees of Baal.' ·He[g] then proceeded to 24 present sacrifices and burnt offerings.

Now Jehu had stationed eighty of his men outside, having said, 'Whoever lets one of the people go whom I am now putting within your clutches, will pay for it with his life.'[h] ·When he had finished making the burnt offering, he gave the order 25 to the guards and equerries, 'Go in, strike them down! Let no one out!'
The guards and equerries went in, putting everyone to the sword all the way to the sanctuary of Baal's temple.[i] ·They took the sacred pole[j] out of Baal's temple and 26 burned it. ·They demolished Baal's image and demolished Baal's temple too, 27 making it into a latrine, which it still is today.

The reign of Jehu in Israel (841–814)

Thus Jehu rid Israel of Baal. ·Even so, Jehu did not give up the sins into which 28, 29
1 K 12:28–29 Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel, the golden calves of Bethel and Dan.[k] Yahweh said to Jehu, 'Since you have done well in carrying out what pleases me, 30 and have done everything I required to be done to the House of Ahab, your sons will occupy the throne of Israel down to the fourth generation.' ·Jehu, however, 31 did not faithfully and wholeheartedly follow the law of Yahweh, God of Israel;
he did not give up the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.

At that time Yahweh began to whittle Israel down, and Hazael defeated the 32
Israelites throughout the territory east of the Jordan: ·the whole territory of 33 Gilead—of the Gadites, the Reubenites and the Manassehites—from Aroer on the River Arnon: Gilead and Bashan.[l]

The rest of the history of Jehu, his entire career, all his prowess, is this not 34 recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel? ·Then he fell asleep with 35 his ancestors and was buried in Samaria; his son Jehoahaz succeeded him.
Jehu's reign over Israel in Samaria lasted twenty-eight years. 36

F: FROM THE REIGN OF ATHALIAH TO THE DEATH OF ELISHA

‖2 Ch 22:9–23:21 Athaliah (841–835)[a]

11 When Athaliah mother of Ahaziah learned that her son was dead, she 1 promptly murdered all those of royal stock.

But Jehosheba,[b] daughter of King Jehoram and sister of Ahaziah, surreptitiously 2 rescued Jehoash son of Ahaziah from among the princes who were to be murdered, and put him with his nurse in the sleeping quarters; in this way she hid him from Athaliah, and he was not killed. ·He stayed, hidden with her in the 3 Temple of Yahweh for six years, while Athaliah governed the country.

In the seventh year, Jehoiada[c] sent for the regimental commanders of the 4
Carians[d] and the guards, and had them brought to him in the Temple of Yahweh.
He made a pact with them, put them on oath,[e] then showed them the king's son.
He gave them this order,[f] ·'This is what you must do: a third of you who come on 5 duty on the Sabbath must mount guard at the royal palace, ·and your two other (6)7 sections who come off duty on the Sabbath and mount guard at the Temple of 8 Yahweh[g] must surround the king, each man with his weapons in his hand; anyone forcing his way through the ranks is to be killed. And you will escort the king as he leaves and as he comes in.'

9 The regimental commanders did everything as Jehoiada the priest had ordered, and each one brought his men, those coming on duty on the Sabbath and those 10 going off duty on the Sabbath, and reported to Jehoiada the priest. The priest then issued the regimental commanders with King David's spears and shields, 2 S 8:7 11 which were kept in the Temple of Yahweh.[h] The guards then took position, each man with his weapons in his hand, from the south corner of the Temple to the north 12 corner of the Temple, all round the altar and the Temple.[i] Then Jehoiada brought the king's son out—crowned him and gave him a copy of the covenant; and they made him king[j] and anointed him, and they clapped their hands and shouted,
'Long live the king!'
13 On hearing the people[k] shouting, Athaliah joined the people in the Temple of 14 Yahweh. When she looked, there stood the king on a dais, as the custom was, 23:3 with the officers and trumpeters at the king's side, and all the people of the country rejoicing and blowing the trumpets; then Athaliah tore her clothes and shouted, 15 'Treason, treason!' Jehoiada the priest then gave the orders to the commanders[l] in charge of the troops, 'Take her out under guard and put to death anyone who follows her.' 'For', the priest had already said, 'she must not be killed inside the 16 Temple of Yahweh.' They seized her, and when she reached the horses' entry to the palace, she was killed there.
17 Jehoiada made a covenant between Yahweh, the king and the people that they would remain Yahweh's people; and another one between the king and the 18 people.[m] All the people of the country then went to the temple of Baal and demolished it; they smashed its altars and its images and killed Mattan the priest of Baal in front of the altars.[n] 19 The priest made arrangements for the security of the Temple of Yahweh. He then took the regimental commanders, the Carians, the guards and all the people

e. The text adds 'all his devotees', but see vv. 20–21.

f. The change of clothing was a purificatory observance before participation in public worship, attested among the Phoenicians and the pre-Islamic Arabs; see Gn 35:2.

g. 'He' Gk, in line with v. 25; 'They' Hebr., to spare Jehu's reputation for orthodox Yahwism.

h. 'Whoever lets go' conj.; 'If anyone gets away' Hebr.

i. Text obscure; trans. conj. 'The guards and the equerries went in, putting everyone to the sword and throwing them out, and went all the way to the city of Baal's temple.'

j. 'the sacred pole' conj., see 1 K 16:33; 'the pillar' or cultic stele (but this was of stone and would be difficult to burn).

k. The author's own verdict; the source he was following in the preceding narratives gave unstinted praise, v. 30, to Jehu's sincere, if brutal, zeal for Yahweh. By wiping out Baal's devotees, Jehu probably also intended to eliminate any remaining support for the dynasty of Ahab.

l. Thus the Israelites lost all their Transjordanian territory. The v. is overloaded with glosses inspired by Dt 3:12 seq.

11 a. Two combined narratives are recognisable here. The first, vv. 1–12 and 18[b]–20, attributes the fall of Athaliah to the action of the priesthood, supported by the royal guard. The second, which is incomplete, vv. 13–18[a], attributes it to a popular uprising.

b. According to 2 Ch 22:11 she was the wife of Jehoiada the priest, v. 4, which explains how she could keep Jehoash hidden in the Temple, v. 3.

c. Head of the Jerusalem priesthood, 12:8.

d. Mercenaries from Asia Minor. They were different from the Cherethites, who are not mentioned after the reign of Solomon, 1 K 1:38.

e. Hebr. adds 'in the Temple of Yahweh', missing in Gk and Syr.

f. On weekdays, it seems, one-third of the guard was posted at the Temple, two-thirds at the palace; on the Sabbath the proportion was reversed, Jehoiada takes advantage of a Sabbath: the two-thirds go on duty at the Temple as usual but he keeps the other third there too. We omit v. 6 'and one-third at the Gate Sur (?) and one-third at the gate behind the guards, and you are to go on duty at the house of (word unknown)'; obscure text, perhaps composed of several corrupt glosses.

g. The text adds 'at the king's side'.

h. Probably a gloss from the parallel narrative of 2 Ch 23:9 in which the Levites assume the role of the guards and have to be armed.

i. Last words uncertain. The Hebr. has a different order and adds 'at the king's side'.

j. At the moment of their anointing, the kings of Judah were apparently handed a copy of the covenant made between Yahweh and the Davidic dynasty. See the 'protocol' drawn up for the Pharaohs at their coronation. The same word in Aramaic and Assyrian means 'clause of a covenant'.

k. Hebr. inserts 'and guards', gloss.

l. 'commanders' peqide following Gk; Hebr. pequde 'enlisted men'. Hebr. inserts 'regimental commanders' before the word, probably a gloss.

m. The last words are possibly an addition: they are absent from 2 Ch 23:16. Even so, the existence of a pact between king and people is attested by 1 S 10:25 (Saul); 2 S 5:3 (David); 1 K 12:1 seq. (Rehoboam).

n. This revolution is parallel to that of Jehu's in the Northern Kingdom, 10:18–28. But here it had the support of the 'people of the country', the Judaean populace at large who were loyal to the Yahwist tradition, as opposed to the capital which had been infected by foreign and non-Yahwist influences.

of the country, and they escorted the king down from the Temple of Yahweh, entering the palace through the Gate of the Guards. Jehoash took his seat on the throne of the kings. ·All the people of the country were delighted; the city, 20 however, made no move. And Athaliah was put to death inside the palace.

‖2 Ch 24:1–16 The reign of Jehoash in Judah (835–796)

12 Jehoash was seven years old when he came to the throne. ·Jehoash became 1; 2 21; 12:1
king in the seventh year of Jehu, and reigned for forty years in Jerusalem.
His mother's name was Zibiah of Beersheba. ·All his life Jehoash did what Yahweh 32 regards as right, having been instructed by Jehoiada the priest,[a] ·The high places, 4 3 however, were not abolished, and the people still offered sacrifices and incense on the high places.

Jehoash said to the priests, 'All the money from the sacred revenues brought to 5 4
the Temple of Yahweh, the money from personal taxes,[b] and all the money voluntarily offered to the Temple—·the priests are to receive this individually from 6 5 people of their acquaintance and will carry out all the repairs to the Temple which need to be made.'[c] ·Now in the twenty-third year of King Jehoash the priests had 7 6 done no repairs to the Temple; ·so King Jehoash summoned Jehoiada the priest 8 7 and the other priests. 'Why are you not repairing the Temple?' he asked. 'You are no longer to accept money from people of your acquaintance but are to hand it over for the Temple repairs.' ·The priests agreed to accept no money from the 9 8 people and no longer to be responsible for repairs to the Temple.

Jehoiada the priest took a chest, bored a hole in the lid and placed it beside the 10 9 pillar, to the right of the entry to the Temple of Yahweh; in it the priests who guarded the threshold put all the money which was given for the Temple of Yahweh.[d] ·Whenever they saw that there was a great deal of money in the chest, 11 10 the king's secretary would come, and they would empty it out and reckon the money then in the Temple of Yahweh.[e] ·Once checked, they paid this money over 12 11 to the masters of works attached to the Temple of Yahweh, and these in turn spent it on carpenters and builders working on the Temple of Yahweh, ·on masons and 13 12 stonecutters, and on buying timber and dressed stone to be used for repairs to the Temple of Yahweh; in short, for all the costs of the Temple repairs. ·But no silver 14 13 basins, knives, sprinkling bowls, trumpets or gold or silver objects were made for the Temple of Yahweh out of the money presented, ·which was all given to the 15 14 masters of works for repairing the Temple of Yahweh. ·No accounts were kept 16 15 with the men to whom the money was paid over to be spent on the workmen, since Lv 5:14f they were honest in their work. ·Money offered in expiation of an offence or of a 17 16 sin was not given to the Temple of Yahweh; that was for the priests.

‖2 Ch 24:23–27 8:7–15 At that time Hazael king of Aram went to war against Gath, and captured it; he 18 17 then prepared to attack Jerusalem. ·Jehoash king of Judah took all the sacred 19 18 offerings dedicated by his ancestors, the kings of Judah, Jehoshaphat, Jehoram and Ahaziah, with those which he himself had dedicated, and all the gold which was to be found in the treasuries of the Temple of Yahweh and of the palace; he sent it all to Hazael king of Aram, who retired from Jerusalem.

The rest of the history of Joash, his entire career, is this not recorded in the Book 20 19 of the Annals of the Kings of Judah? ·His own retainers rebelled and hatched a 21 20 plot; they murdered Joash in the palace of the Millo . . .[f] ·Jozacar son of Shimeath 22 21 and Jehozabad son of Shomer were the retainers who struck the blows from which he died. He was buried with his ancestors in the City of David; his son Amaziah succeeded him.

The reign of Jehoahaz in Israel (814–798)

13 In the twenty-third year of Joash son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, Jehoahaz 1 son of Jehu became king of Israel in Samaria. He reigned for seventeen years. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh and copied the sin[a] into which 2 Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel; he did not give it up.

3 This aroused Yahweh's anger against the Israelites, and he delivered them without respite into the power of Hazael king of Aram and of Ben-Hadad[b] son of 4 Hazael. ·Jehoahaz, however, tried to placate Yahweh, and Yahweh heard him, 14:26–27 for he had seen the oppression which the king of Aram was inflicting on Israel.
5 Yahweh gave Israel a saviour who freed them[c] from the grip of Aram, and the 6 Israelites lived in their tents as in the past. ·But they did not give up the sin into which Jeroboam[d] had led Israel; they persisted in it, and even the sacred pole Ex 34:13e 7 stayed standing in Samaria.[e] ·Of Jehoahaz's army Yahweh left only fifty horsemen, ten chariots and ten thousand foot soldiers. The king of Aram had destroyed them, making them like dust trampled under foot.
8 The rest of the history of Jehoahaz, his entire career, his prowess, is this not 9 recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel? ·Then Jehoahaz fell asleep with his ancestors, and was buried in Samaria; his son Joash succeeded him.

The reign of Jehoash in Israel (798–783)

10 In the thirty-seventh year of Joash king of Judah, Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, became 11 king of Israel in Samaria. He reigned for sixteen years. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, he did not give up the sin into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel; he persisted in it.
12 The rest of the history of Joash, his entire career, his prowess, how he waged =14:15–16
war on Amaziah king of Judah, is this not recorded in the Book of the Annals of 14:8–14 13 the Kings of Israel? ·Then Joash fell asleep with his ancestors, and Jeroboam ascended his throne. Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

The death of Elisha

14 When Elisha had fallen ill of the illness of which he was to die, Joash king of Israel went down to him and shedding tears over him said, 'Father! Father! Chariot of Gn 50:1 15 Israel and its chargers!' ·Elisha said to him, 'Bring bow and arrows,' and he sent 2:12
16 for a bow and arrows. ·Then Elisha said to the king,[f] 'Draw the bow,' and he drew 17 it. Elisha put his hands over the hands of the king, ·then he said, 'Open the window towards the east,' and he opened it. Then Elisha said, 'Shoot!' And he shot. Elisha said, 'Arrow of victory over Aram! You will defeat Aram at Aphek—completely.'[g] 18 Elisha said, 'Take the arrows,' and he took them. Then he said to the king, 19 'Strike the ground,' and he struck it three times, then stopped. ·At this the man of God grew angry with him. 'You should have struck half a dozen times,' he said
'and you would have beaten Aram completely; now you will beat Aram only three times.'
20 Elisha died and was buried. Bands of Moabites were making incursions into the 21 country every year.[h] ·Some people happened to be carrying a man out for burial; at the sight of one of these bands, they flung the man into the tomb of Elisha and made off. The man had no sooner touched the bones of Elisha than he came to life Si 48:13–14,13c and stood up on his feet.

12 a. And not as it is sometimes translated to harmonise with 2 Ch 24:2,17 seq. 'as long as the priest Jehoiada was his instructor'.

b. Text doubtful, restored from Gk. • Hebr. adds 'the money from the persons whom he (the priest?) has assessed', explanatory gloss.

c. First of the new king's dispositions; payment for the repair of the Temple is to be made out of the revenues of the priesthood.

d. 'pillar' Gk; 'altar' Hebr. • The new royal edict is put into effect.

e. After 'secretary' Hebr. adds 'and the high priest'. • 'melt down' wayyiseru conj.; Hebr. wayyasuru 'attach'.

g. By laying his hands on the king Elisha bestows divine strength on him. The flight of the arrow is eastward, against the Aramaeans. The prophet's gesture prefigures the event and thus brings it about. See Jr 18:1a.

h. 'every year' shanah beshanah conj.; Hebr. ba'shanah corrupt.

Victory over the Aramaeans

Hazael king of Aram had oppressed the Israelites throughout the lifetime of 22 Jehoahaz, ·but Yahweh was kind and took pity on them. Because of the covenant 23 which he had made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, he relented towards them; he had no wish to destroy them, he did not cast them out of his presence.[i] ·Hazael 24 king of Aram died, and his son Ben-Hadad succeeded him. ·From Ben-Hadad son 25 of Hazael, Jehoash son of Jehoahaz recaptured the towns which Hazael had seized 13:19 from his father Jehoahaz by force of arms. Joash defeated him three times and recovered the Israelite towns.

VII: THE TWO KINGDOMS TO THE FALL OF SAMARIA

‖2 Ch 25:1–4, 11–12,17–28 The reign of Amaziah in Judah (796–781)

14 In the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel, Amaziah son of 1
Joash became king of Judah. ·He was twenty-five years old when he came 2 to the throne, and he reigned for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddin of Jerusalem. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, though 3 not like his ancestor David; he imitated his father Joash in all respects. ·The high 4 places, however, were not abolished, and the people still offered sacrifices and incense on the high places.

12:21–22 Once the kingdom was firmly under his control, he killed those of his retainers 5 who had murdered the king his father. ·But he did not put the murderers' sons to 6 death, in accordance with what is written in the Book of Moses, where Yahweh has Dt 24:16b Ezk 14:12d commanded: 'Parents may not be put to death for their children, nor children for parents, but each must be put to death for his own crime.'

2 S 8:13 It was he who slaughtered the Edomites in the Valley of Salt, ten thousand of 7 them, and captured the Rock; he gave it the name Joktheel, which it bears to the present day.

Amaziah then sent messengers to Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel, 8 saying, 'Come and make a trial of strength!' ·Jehoash king of Israel sent back word 9 Jg 9:8–15 to Amaziah king of Judah, 'The thistle of Lebanon sent a message to the cedar of Lebanon, saying, "Give my son your daughter in marriage"; but a wild animal of the Lebanon ran over the thistle and squashed it. ·You have conquered Edom and 10 now aspire to even greater glory. Stay where you belong! Why challenge disaster, to your own and Judah's ruin?'

But Amaziah would not listen, so Jehoash king of Israel marched to the attack. 11
And at Beth-Shemesh, which belongs to Judah, he and Amaziah king of Judah made their trial of strength. ·Judah was defeated by Israel, and everyone fled to his 12 tent. ·The king of Judah, Amaziah son of Jehoash, son of Ahaziah, was taken 13 prisoner at Beth-Shemesh by Jehoash king of Israel who led him off[a] to Jerusalem, where he demolished four hundred cubits of the city wall between the Ephraim Gate and the Corner Gate;[b] ·all the gold and silver, and all the vessels to be found 14 in the Temple of Yahweh and in the palace treasury, and hostages besides, he then took back with him to Samaria.

=13:12–13 The rest of the history of Jehoash, his entire career, his prowess, how he waged 15
war on Amaziah king of Judah, is this not recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel? ·Then Joash fell asleep with his ancestors, and was buried in 16 Samaria with the kings of Israel; his son Jeroboam succeeded him.

Amaziah son of Joash, king of Judah, lived for fifteen years after the death of 17
Jehoash son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel.

The rest of the history of Amaziah, is this not recorded in the Book of the Annals 18 of the Kings of Judah? ·A plot having been hatched against him in Jerusalem, he 19 fled to Lachish; but he was followed to Lachish where he was murdered. ·He was 20 then transported by horse and buried in Jerusalem with his ancestors in the City of David. ·All the people of Judah then chose Uzziah,[c] who was sixteen years old, ‖2 Ch 26:1–2 and made him king in succession to his father Amaziah. ·It was he who rebuilt Elath,[d] recovering it for Judah, after the king had fallen asleep with his ancestors.

The reign of Jeroboam II in Israel (783–743)

In the fifteenth year of Amaziah son of Joash, king of Judah, Jeroboam son of Joash became king of Israel in Samaria. He reigned for forty-one years. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh and did not give up any of the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.
It was he who recovered the territory of Israel from the Pass of Hamath to the Sea of the Arabah, in accordance with the word which Yahweh, God of Israel, had spoken through his servant Jonah[e] son of Amittai, the prophet from Gath-Hepher.
For Yahweh had seen how very bitter[f] the affliction of Israel was, with no one, 13:4–5 either fettered or free, to come to Israel's help. ·But Yahweh had resolved not to 1 K 14:10 blot out the name of Israel under heaven; he rescued them by means of Jeroboam son of Joash.
The rest of the history of Jeroboam, his entire career, his prowess, what wars he waged, how he brought Damascus and Hamath back to their allegiance to Judah and Israel, is this not recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel?[g] Then Jeroboam fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried[h] with the kings of Israel; his son Zechariah succeeded him.

The reign of Uzziah in Judah (781–740) ‖2 Ch 26:3–4, 21–23

15 In the seventeenth year of Jeroboam king of Israel, Uzziah son of Amaziah became king of Judah. ·He was sixteen years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah of Jerusalem. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, just as his father Amaziah had done. ·The high places, however, were not abolished, and the people still offered sacrifices and incense on the high places.
But Yahweh struck the king, and he was afflicted with a virulent skin-disease till his dying day. He lived confined to his room,[a] while Jotham the king's son, who 1 K 4:2a was master of the palace, governed the country.
The rest of the history of Uzziah, his entire career, is this not recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Judah? ·Then Uzziah fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried[b] in the City of David; his son Jotham then succeeded him.

The reign of Zechariah in Israel (743)

In the thirty-eighth year of Uzziah king of Judah, Zechariah son of Jeroboam became king of Israel in Samaria for six months. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, as his fathers had done; he did not give up the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.
Shallum son of Jabesh plotted against him, murdered him at Ibleam,[c] ·and
succeeded him.

i. Hebr. adds 'yet', a gloss.

14 a. 'who led him off' versions, 2 Ch 25:23; 'and he came' qere; 'and they came' ketib.
b. The wall on the western height, see 2 S 5:9f. It was later moved further north, 2 Ch 32:5. Outside this new 'Ephraim Gate' (Ne 8:16; 12:39) lie Calvary and the Holy Sepulchre. A third wall, still further north, was built by Herod Agrippa I.
c. The text names him Azariah here and several times subsequently but, apart from 2 K, the usual form is Uzziah. The one may have been his personal and the other his regnal name.
d. An Edomite town very near Ezion-Geber, 1 K 9:28h, and later confused with it. Elath had been lost under Jehoram, 8:20–21.
e. The 'Book of Jonah' is pseudonymously assigned to him.
f. 'bitter' Gk; 'rebellious' Hebr.
g. Jeroboam II is represented as restoring the empire of David and Solomon, Damascus and Hamath having the status of vassal or allied kingdoms. The parallel justifies the mention of Judah, given the minor correction 'Judah and Israel'; 'Judah in Israel' Hebr. One may doubt the historical value of this statement but, apart from the small correction above, the text is certain.
h. 'they buried him in Samaria' Gk-Luc.; omitted by Hebr.

15 a. Translation uncertain. The expression translated 'confined to his room' occurs nowhere else in the Bible.
b. Hebr. adds 'with his ancestors; similarly in v. 38.
c. 'at Ibleam' Gk-Luc.; Hebr. corrupt.

The rest of the history of Zechariah is recorded in the Book of Annals of the 11
10:30 Kings of Israel. 12 This was the word which Yahweh had spoken to Jehu, 'Your sons 12 will sit on the throne of Israel to the fourth generation.' And so it turned out.

The reign of Shallum in Israel (743)

Shallum son of Jabesh became king in the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah king of 13 Judah and reigned for one month in Samaria.

Then Menahem son of Gadi marched from Tirzah, entered Samaria, murdered 14
Shallum son of Jabesh there and succeeded him.

The rest of the history of Shallum, and the plot he hatched, is recorded in the 15
Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel. 16 Menahem then sacked Tappuah[d]— 16 killing all who were in it—and its territory from Tirzah onwards, because it had not 8:12+ opened its gates to him; he sacked the town and disembowelled all the pregnant women.

The reign of Menahem in Israel (743–738)

In the thirty-ninth year of Uzziah king of Judah, Menahem son of Gadi became 17 king of Israel. He reigned for ten years in Samaria. 18 He did what is displeasing to 18 Yahweh, he did not give up the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.

In his days[e] 19 Pul[f] king of Assyria invaded the country. Menahem gave Pul a 19 thousand talents of silver in return for his support in strengthening his hold on the royal power. 20 Menahem levied this sum from Israel, from all the men of rank, at 20
the rate of fifty shekels a head, to be given to the king of Assyria, who then withdrew and did not stay in the country.

The rest of the history of Menahem, his entire career, is this not recorded in the 21
Book of the Annals of the Kings of Israel? 22 Then Menahem fell asleep with his 22 ancestors; his son Pekahiah succeeded him.

The reign of Pekahiah in Israel (738–737)

In the fiftieth year of Uzziah king of Judah, Pekahiah son of Menahem became 23 king of Israel in Samaria. He reigned for two years. 24 He did what is displeasing to 24 Yahweh; he did not give up the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.

Pekah son of Remaliah, his equerry, plotted against him and assassinated him in 25 the palace keep . . .[g] He had fifty Gileadites with him. He killed the king and
succeeded him.

The rest of the history of Pekahiah, his entire career, is recorded in the Book of 26
the Annals of the Kings of Israel.

The reign of Pekah in Israel (737–732)

In the fifty-second year of Uzziah king of Judah, Pekah son of Remaliah became 27 king of Israel in Samaria. He reigned for twenty years.[h] 28 He did what is displeasing 28 to Yahweh; he did not give up the sins into which Jeroboam son of Nebat had led Israel.

In the days of Pekah king of Israel, Tiglath-Pileser king of Assyria came and 29 captured Ijon, Abel-beth-Maacah, Janoah, Kedesh, Hazor, Gilead and Galilee—the whole territory of Naphtali[i] and deported the population to Assyria.[j] Hoshea son of Elah hatched a plot against Pekah son of Remaliah; he murdered 30
the king and succeeded him.[k]

The rest of the history of Pekah, his entire career, is recorded in the Book of the 31
Annals of the Kings of Israel.

‖2 Ch 27:1–4, 7–9 The reign of Jotham in Judah (740–736)

In the second year of Pekah son of Remaliah, king of Israel, Jotham son of Uzziah 32 became king of Judah. 33 He was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, 33 and he reigned for sixteen years[l] in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerusha 34 daughter of Zadok. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, just as his father Uzziah

35 had done. ·The high places, however, were not abolished, and the people still offered sacrifices and incense on the high places.

It was he who built the Upper Gate of the Temple of Yahweh.

36 The rest of the history of Jotham, his entire career, is this not recorded in the 37 Book of the Annals of the Kings of Judah? ·At that time Yahweh began sending 38 Razon[m] king of Aram and Pekah son of Remaliah against Judah. ·Then Jotham Is 7:1
fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried in the City of David, his ancestor; his son Ahaz succeeded him.

The reign of Ahaz in Judah (736–716)

1 16 In the seventeenth year of Pekah son of Remaliah, Ahaz son of Jotham
2 became king of Judah. ·Ahaz was twenty years old when he came to the ‖2 Ch 28:1–4 throne, and he reigned for sixteen years in Jerusalem. He did not do what Yahweh 3 his God regards as right, as his ancestor David had done. ·He followed the example of the kings of Israel, even causing his son to pass through the fire of sacrifice,[a] also Lv 18:21h copying the disgusting practices of the nations whom Yahweh had dispossessed for 4 the Israelites. ·He offered sacrifices and incense on the high places, on the hills and Dt 12:2b under every luxuriant tree.

5 Then it was that Razon king of Aram and Pekah son of Remaliah, king of Israel, 2 Ch 28:5seq. Is 7–8 ·Ho 5:8–6:6 ·‖2Ch 28:17 launched their campaign against Jerusalem. They besieged it but could not reduce 6 it.[b] ·(At that time, the king of Edom recovered Elath for Edom; he drove the Judaeans out of Elath, and the Edomites occupied it and have been there ever 7 since.)[c] ·Ahaz then sent messengers to Tiglath-Pileser king of Assyria to say, 'I am ‖2Ch 28:16 your servant and your son.[d] Come and rescue me from the king of Aram and the 8 king of Israel who are making war on me.' ·And Ahaz took what silver and gold ‖2 Ch 28:21 was to be found in the Temple of Yahweh and in the palace treasury, and sent this 9 as a present to the king of Assyria. ·The king of Assyria granted his request and, constructed the altar; all the instructions sent by King Ahaz from Damascus were carried out by Uriah the priest before King Ahaz returned from Damascus.

The reign of Hoshea in Israel (732–724) of Israel in Samaria, and reigned for nine years. ·He did what is displeasing 2 to Yahweh, though not like the preceding kings of Israel.

Am 3:11 Shalmaneser[a] king of Assyria made war on Hoshea who submitted to him and 3 double game with him; he had sent messengers to Sais,[b] to the king of Egypt, and had not, as in previous years, handed over the tribute to the king of Assyria. For this the king of Assyria imprisoned him in chains.[c]

18:12 ### Observations on the fall of the Northern Kingdom[g]

This happened because the Israelites had sinned against Yahweh their God who 7 had brought them out of Egypt, out of the grip of Pharaoh king of Egypt. They worshipped other gods, ·they followed the practices of the nations which Yahweh 8 had dispossessed for them.[h] ·The Israelites spoke slightingly of Yahweh their God. 9
They built themselves high places wherever they lived, from watchtower to forti-
Ex 23:24k; 34:13e Dt 12:2b fied town. ·They set up pillars and sacred poles for themselves on every high hill 10 and under every luxuriant tree. ·They sacrificed on all the high places like the 11 nations which Yahweh had expelled for them, and did wicked things there, provoking Yahweh's anger. ·They served idols, although Yahweh had told them, 'This 12 you must not do.'
And yet through all the prophets and the seers, Yahweh had given Israel and 13
Judah this warning, 'Turn from your wicked ways and keep my commandments and my laws in accordance with the entire Law which I laid down for your fathers and delivered to them through my servants the prophets.' ·But they would not 14
Dt 9:13+ listen, they were as stubborn as their ancestors, who had no faith in Yahweh their
God. ·They despised his laws and the covenant which he had made with their 15 Jr 2:5 ancestors and the warnings which he had given them. Pursuing futility, they themselves became futile through copying the nations round them, although Yahweh had ordered them not to act as they did. ·They rejected all the command- 16
1 K 12:28 ·Ex 34:13e Dt 4:19;17:3 ments of Yahweh their God and cast themselves metal idols, two calves; they made themselves sacred poles, they worshipped the whole array of heaven, and they

17 served Baal. ·They caused their sons and daughters to pass through the fire of sacrifice, also they practised divination and sorcery, they sold themselves to doing 18 what displeases Yahweh, provoking his anger. ·Because of which, Yahweh became enraged with Israel and thrust them away from him. The tribe of Judah was the only one left.
19 Judah did not keep the commandments of Yahweh their God either but copied
20 the practices which Israel had introduced. ·Yahweh rejected the whole race of Israel; he brought them low, delivering them into the hands of marauders, until at 21 length he thrust them away from him. ·And indeed he had torn Israel away from the House of David, and they had made Jeroboam son of Nebat king; Jeroboam
22 had drawn Israel away from Yahweh and led them into a great sin. ·The Israelites 23 copied the sin which Jeroboam had committed; they did not give it up, ·until at length Yahweh thrust Israel away from him, as he had foretold through all his servants the prophets; he deported the Israelites from their own country to Assyria, where they have been ever since.

The origin of the Samaritans[i]

24 The king of Assyria brought people from Babylon, Cuthah, Avva, Hamath and Sepharvaim, and settled them in the towns of Samaria to replace the Israelites; these took possession of Samaria and lived in its towns.
25 When they first came to live there, they did not worship Yahweh; hence, Yahweh
26 set lions on them, which killed a number of them. ·Consequently, the king of Assyria was informed as follows, 'The nations whom you deported and settled in the towns of Samaria do not know how to worship the local god, and he has set lions on them; and now these are killing them because they do not know how to 27 worship the local god.' ·So the king of Assyria gave this order, 'Send back one of the priests whom I deported from there;[j] let him go and live there and teach them
28 how to worship the local god.' ·Accordingly, one of the priests who had been deported from Samaria came to live in Bethel; he taught them how to worship Yahweh.
29 Each nationality made gods of its own and put them in the shrines on the high places built by the Samaritans; each nationality did this in the towns where it lived.
30 The people from Babylon had made a Succoth-Benoth, the people from Cuthah a

g. The king himself consecrates the altar by exercising priestly functions, as on other special occasions. The king is also the administrator of the Temple, and lays down the ceremonial (see 12:5–17); Uriah figures only as a royal official.

h. The bronze altar (as the Hebr. gloss correctly notes) installed by Solomon, 1 K 8:64; 9:25, in front of the Temple entrance.

i. Trans. uncertain. lit. 'that will be for me to examine' (the entrails of victims for auguries?).

j. Hebr. text disturbed. • It is not known whether the changes introduced by Ahaz had a ceremonial purpose or whether they were made to provide him with the bronze which he needed (to pay his tribute to the Assyrian king?).

k. 'he removed from the Temple' conj.; 'he modified the Temple' Hebr. • 'the dais for the throne' Gk; Hebr. uncertain. Meaning uncertain. Probably 'the dais' and 'the royal entry' are symbols of sovereignty which Tiglath-Pileser makes his vassal remove.

17 a. Shalmaneser V (726–722) successor of Tiglath-Pileser III.

b. Hebr. has 'to So king of Egypt', but instead of So, unknown in the Egyptian king-lists, it is preferable to read a place-name, Sais in the Delta, residence of the Pharaoh Tefnakht, Hoshea's contemporary.

c. The imprisonment of Hoshea, who had marched against Shalmaneser or had fled from Samaria, took place at the beginning of the siege of Samaria and marked the end of his reign (9th year).

d. Shalmaneser had laid siege to the city in 724, but it held out until the beginning of the reign of Sargon his successor, probably early in 721. The 'ninth year of Hoshea' refers to the beginning of the siege.

e. Not far from Haran, to the extreme north of Mesopotamia.

f. East of Mesopotamia. Israelite settlements here replaced those of the natives whom Tiglath-Pileser had deported. This terrain forms the setting for the Book of Tobit.

g. These observations do not come from one source. For the principal author of the book the grievous fault of Israel is the religious schism, 1 K 12:26–33, an 'original sin' of which every king of Israel is accused in 2 K 17:7[a] and 21–23. A development rich in reminiscences of Dt and the prophets (especially Jr) has been added; it denounces religious compromise and the local shrines, vv. 7[b]–18. A second addition extends the condemnation to Judah, vv. 19–20.

h. Hebr. adds a few words 'and (the practices) of the kings of Israel which they made their own', gloss (to harmonise with v. 21) intended for the beginning of v. 9..

i. vv. 24–28 and 41 offer a simplified view of the resettlement of the Northern Kingdom; they presuppose a wholesale deportation of the Israelite population and fuse several successive colonisations; by the story of vv. 25–28 they explain the persistence of Yahwistic worship in these non-Jewish surroundings. The details of vv. 29–34[a] were added during the Exile. The development in vv. 34[b]–40 reverts to the sins responsible for the ruin of Israel, and would be more appropriately placed in the first part of the chapter.

j. 'I deported from there' Targ.; 'you deported from there' Hebr. 'let him go' versions; 'let them go' Hebr.

Nergal, the people from Hamath an Ashima, ·the Avvites a Nibhaz and a Tartak; 31 while the Sepharvites caused their children to pass through the fire of sacrifice to Adrammelech and Anammelech, gods of Sepharvaim. ·They worshipped Yahweh 32
1 K 12:31 as well, and they appointed priests out of their own number for the high places, and these officiated in the shrines on the high places. ·They worshipped Yahweh 33 and served their own gods at the same time, with the rites of the countries from which they had been deported. ·They still follow their old rites even now. 34

They did not worship Yahweh [k] and did not conform to his statutes or ritual, or the law or the commandments, which Yahweh had laid down for the sons of Jacob
Gn 32:29 to whom he gave the name Israel. ·Yahweh had made a covenant with them and 35
Ex 19:1a had given them this command, 'You are not to worship alien gods, you are not to bow down to them or serve them or offer them sacrifices. ·You are to bow down 36 and offer sacrifice only to Yahweh who brought you out of Egypt with great power and outstretched arm. ·You are to observe the statutes and ritual, the law and the 37 commandments which he has given you in writing and to which you are always to conform; you are not to worship alien gods. ·Do not forget the covenant which I 38 have made with you, and do not venerate alien gods. ·But venerate Yahweh your 39
God, and he will deliver you from the clutches of all your enemies.' ·But they 40 would not listen and still followed their old rites.

These nationalities, then, worshipped Yahweh and served their idols as well, as 41 did their children; and their children's children still behave today as their ancestors behaved in the past.

VIII: THE LAST YEARS OF THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH

A: HEZEKIAH, THE PROPHET ISAIAH, ASSYRIA

Introduction to the reign of Hezekiah (716–687)

‖2 Ch 29:1–2 18 In the third year of Hoshea [a] son of Elah, king of Israel, Hezekiah son of 1 Ahaz became king of Judah. ·He was twenty-five years old when he came to 2 the throne, and he reigned for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abijah [b] daughter of Zechariah. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, just as 3 ‖2 Ch 31:1 his ancestor David had done. ·He abolished the high places, broke the pillars, cut 4
Ex 23:24k; 34:13e down the sacred poles [c] and smashed the bronze serpent which Moses had made;
Dt 12:2b
Nb 21:4–9,4d for up to that time the Israelites had offered sacrifices to it; it was called Ws 16:6 Nehushtan. [d]

He put his trust in Yahweh, God of Israel. No king of Judah after him could be 5 compared with him—nor any of those before him. ·He was devoted to Yahweh, 6 never turning from him, but keeping the commandments which Yahweh had laid Gn 39:2 down for Moses. ·And so Yahweh was with him, and he was successful in all that 7 he undertook. He rebelled against the king of Assyria [e] and refused to serve him.
He beat the Philistines back to Gaza, laying their territory waste from watchtower 8 to fortified town.

=17:5–6 The fall of Samaria; recapitulation [f]

In the fourth year of Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah, 9 king of Israel, Shalmaneser king of Assyria marched on Samaria and laid siege to it. ·He captured it after three years. Samaria fell in the sixth year of Hezekiah, 10 which was the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel. ·The king of Assyria deported 11
the Israelites to Assyria and settled [g] them in Halah on the Habor, a river of Gozan, 17:7–18 and in the cities of the Medes. ·This happened because they had not obeyed the 12 voice of Yahweh their God and had broken his covenant, everything that Moses servant of Yahweh had laid down. They neither listened to it nor put it into practice.

Sennacherib's invasion

13 In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib king of Assyria advanced on ‖2 Ch 32 ‖Is 36:1
14 all the fortified towns of Judah and captured them. [h] •Then Hezekiah king of Judah sent this message to the king of Assyria at Lachish, 'I have been at fault. Call off the attack, and I will submit to whatever you impose on me.' The king of Assyria exacted three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold from Hezekiah 15 king of Judah, •and Hezekiah gave him all the silver in the Temple of Yahweh and 16 in the palace treasury. •At which time, Hezekiah stripped the facing from the leaves and jambs of the doors of the Temple of Yahweh, which an earlier [i] king of Judah had put on, and gave it to the king of Assyria. 1 K 6:20–22

The embassy of the cupbearer-in-chief

17 From Lachish the king of Assyria sent the cupbearer-in-chief with a large force to ‖2 Ch 32:9–19 ‖Is 36:2–22 King Hezekiah in Jerusalem. [j] He marched on Jerusalem and, on his arrival, [k] took up position near the conduit of the upper pool which is on the road to the Fuller's Is 7:3

19 Shebnah the secretary and the herald Joah son of Asaph went out to him. •The Is 22:15–25 cupbearer-in-chief said to them, 'Say to Hezekiah,"The great king, the king of 20 Assyria, says this: What makes you so confident? •Do you think empty words are as good as strategy and military strength? Who are you relying on, to dare to rebel and Jerusalem: Here, in Jerusalem, is the altar before which you must worship?

23 Very well, then, make a wager with my lord the king of Assyria: I will give you two 24 thousand horses if you can find horsemen to ride them. •How could you repel a single one [m] of the least of my master's soldiers? And yet you have relied on Egypt
25 for chariots and horsemen. •And lastly, have I marched on this place to lay it waste without warrant from Yahweh? Yahweh himself said to me: March on this country and lay it waste." '
26 Eliakim, [n] Shebnah and Joah said to the cupbearer-in-chief, 'Please speak to your servants in Aramaic, [o] for we understand it; do not speak to us in the Judaean 27 language within earshot of the people on the ramparts.' •But the cupbearer-in-chief said, 'Do you think my lord sent me here to say these things to your master or to you? On the contrary, it was to the people sitting on the ramparts who, like you, are doomed to eat their own dung and drink their own urine.' [p]

k. Not the non-Yahwists of the previous vv., but the faithless Israelites of vv. 14 seq. • 'his statutes' conj.; 'their statutes' Hebr. • vv. 34[b]–40 are additional, piling up general formulae unrelated to the historical situation.

b. 'Abijah' 2 Ch 29:1; 'Abi' Hebr.

c. 'sacred poles' versions; 'sacred pole' Hebr. • By thus centralising the cult and declaring war on idolatry Hezekiah prepares the way for the reforms of Josiah, ch. 23, and well deserves the eulogy of vv. 3 and 5–6.

d. The name alludes to the material of which it was made (nehoshet, bronze) and to its shape (nahash, serpent). It was said to be the image made by Moses in the desert, Nb 21:8–9, and was the object of idolatrous worship, Ws 16:6–7.

e. Either in 711 or, more probably, after Sargon's death in 705.

f. This passage recapitulates the events of 17:5–6, adding a reflection in the spirit of 17:7.

g. 'settled' versions; 'led' Hebr.

h. Sennacherib was son and successor of Sargon; his Palestinian campaign took place in 701. The Annals of his reign record it in detail, confirming the data of vv. 13–16, but saying nothing about his final failure and so containing nothing corresponding to 18:17–19:37. In the biblical text there are two parallel narratives: first, 18:17–19:9[a] with 19:36–37, and second, 19:9[b]–35; these report the events in the same order but in a slightly different way. Conceivably, the two accounts relate to two distinct campaigns waged by Sennacherib, see 19:9e. The whole of 18:13–19:37 is repeated with minor variations in Is 36–37.

i. 'an earlier' supplied; by an oversight the text reads 'Hezekiah'.

j. Hebr. inserts 'the commander-in-chief and the chief eunuch' (with verbs agreeing accordingly in vv. 17–18), missing in Is 32:2. These dignitaries do not figure in the rest of the episode.

k. Hebr. reads 'so they marched on Jerusalem and they arrived and they marched and they arrived'.

l. Attempts to form an alliance with Egypt were condemned by Isaiah.

m. 'a single one' conj.; 'a single satrap' Hebr.

n. 'Eliakim' Is 36:11; Hebr. adds 'son of Hilkiah'.

o. Aramaean was coming into use in the Middle East as the language of international relations and was later to be the language commonly spoken in Palestine. In the days of Hezekiah, however, the people only understood 'Judaean', the brand of Hebrew spoken in Jerusalem.

p. Graphic description of the straits to which the beleaguered city will be reduced.

The cupbearer-in-chief then drew himself up and shouted loudly in the Judaean 28 and of his own fig tree and to drink the water of his own storage-well •until I come 32 and take you away to a country like your own, a land of corn and good wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil and honey: and so you will survive and not die. Do not listen to Hezekiah; he is deluding you when he says: Yahweh will save us. •Has any god of any nation been able to save his country from the king of 33

Did they save Samaria from my clutches? •Of all the local gods, which ones have 35 saved their countries from my clutches, for Yahweh to be able to save Jerusalem from my clutches?" '

The people, [t] however, kept quiet and said nothing in reply, since the king had 36 given the order, 'You are not to answer him.' •The master of the palace, Eliakim 37 son of Hilkiah, Shebnah the secretary and the herald Joah son of Asaph, with their clothes torn, went to Hezekiah and reported what the cupbearer-in-chief had said.

‖Is 37:1–7 The prophet Isaiah is consulted

1 K 21:27 19 On hearing this, King Hezekiah tore his clothes, put on sackcloth and went 1 to the Temple of Yahweh. •He sent Eliakim master of the palace, Shebnah 2

‖Is 37:8–9 The cupbearer returns to his master

The cupbearer turned about and rejoined the king of Assyria, who was then 8 attacking Libnah, as the cupbearer had learnt that the king had already left Lachish on hearing that Tirhakah [e] king of Cush was on his way to attack him. 9

‖2 Ch 32:17 ‖Is 37:9–20 Sennacherib's letter to Hezekiah

Sennacherib again sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, 'Tell Hezekiah king of 10 Judah this, "Do not let your God on whom you are relying deceive you with the 20 Isaiah son of Amoz then sent the following message to Hezekiah, 'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "I have heard the prayer which you have addressed to me about from days of old I actually planned it, now I carry it out.

q. 'my' versions; 'his' Hebr.

r. 'Ivvah', otherwise Avva, 17:24. These Syrian cities had been conquered by Sennacherib's immediate predecessors, 17:24.

s. 'Where are the local gods of Samaria?' versions; Hebr. omits.

t. 'The people' Hebr.; 'they' Is 36:21 and Gk.

19 a. Hezekiah consults Isaiah in the way in which earlier kings of Israel and Judah consulted the prophets Elijah and Elisha as their councillors in war, see 1:9 seq.; 3:11 seq.; 6:8 seq.; 1 K 22:8 seq.

b. Probably a proverbial expression for a desperate situation.

c. The saving of a 'remnant' of the chosen people is one of the themes of Isaiah's preaching, see Is 4:3c and, here, vv. 30–31.

d. Here not a celestial personal spirit, but an imperative inspiration from God.

e. Pharaoh of the XXVth Dynasty, of Ethiopian origin, hence his title 'king of Cush'. He reigned from 690 to 664 and was born in 715 at the earliest. In 701, he was not yet king and was not old enough to command an army. It may be that the Biblical account juxtaposes or combines accounts of two of Sennacherib's campaigns, the first waged in 701 and recorded in his Annals, the second in 689–688 and not mentioned in Assyrian documents. If the campaign of 701 was the only one, the mention here of Tirhakah must be a mistake, attributable to the great military reputation which he later acquired.

f. 'Tel Basar' conj.; 'Telassar' Hebr.

g. Uncertain, see Is 37:13.

h. 'letter' Gk-Luc.; 'letters' Hebr.

i. Hebr. adds 'and their countries'.

j. The poem, though Isaian in style, has been retouched by one of the prophet's disciples. Of the three prophecies assembled here, only the third, vv. 32–34, has any direct bearing on the deliverance of 701.

k. In vv. 23–25 the verbs are in the past tense, with the Gk; Hebr. has them in the future.

l. The first Assyrian king to invade Egypt was actually Esarhaddon, Sennacherib's successor.

You were to lay walled cities in heaps of ruins;
that was why their inhabitants, 26
feeble of hand,
were dismayed and discomfited,
were weak as grass,
were frail as plants,
were like grass of housetop and meadow under the east wind. [m] Ps 139:2–3 But whether you stand up [n] or you sit down, 27
whether you go out or you come in, I know it.
Because you have raved against me, 28
and your arrogance has reached my ears,
I shall put a hook through your nostrils
and a muzzle on your lips, and make you return by the road
by which you came.

1 S 14:10c
Is 37:30–32 A sign for Hezekiah

"And this will be the sign [o] for you: 29
this year will be eaten the self-sown grain,
next year what sprouts in the fallow;
but in the third year sow and reap,
plant vineyards and eat their fruit.
The surviving remnant of the House of Judah will bring forth 30 new roots below and fruits above;
for a remnant will issue from Jerusalem, 31
and survivors from Mount Zion.
Dt 4:24f Yahweh Sabaoth's jealous love will accomplish this.

"This, then, is what Yahweh says about the king of Assyria: 32
Is 37:33–35 "He will not enter this city, will shoot no arrow at it,
confront it with no shield,
throw up no earthwork against it.
By the road by which he came, by that he will return; 33
he will not enter this city, declares Yahweh.
2 S 7:12–17,14e
Ho 1:7+ I shall protect this city and save it 34 for my sake and my servant David's sake."

Si 48:21 Sennacherib is punished

That same night the angel of Yahweh went out and struck down a hundred and 35 eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp. In the early morning when it was time to get up, there they lay, so many corpses. [p]

Sennacherib struck camp and left; he returned home and stayed in Nineveh. 36
One day when he was worshipping in the temple of his god Nisroch, [q] his sons 37
Adrammelech and Sharezer struck him down with the sword and escaped into the territory of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon succeeded him.

‖2 Ch 32:24
‖Is 38:1–8 The illness and cure of Hezekiah [a]

20 About then [b] Hezekiah fell ill and was at the point of death. The prophet 1
Isaiah son of Amoz came and said to him, 'Yahweh says this, "Put your affairs in order, for you are going to die, you will not live." ' ·Hezekiah turned his 2 face to the wall and addressed this prayer to Yahweh, ·'Ah, Yahweh, remember, 3
I beg you, that I have behaved faithfully and with sincerity of heart in your presence and done what you regard as right.' And Hezekiah shed many tears.

4 Isaiah had not left the middle court,[c] before the word of Yahweh came to him, 5 'Go back and say to Hezekiah, prince of my people, "Yahweh, the God of your ancestor David, says this: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I shall cure 6 you: in three days' time you will go up to the Temple of Yahweh. ·I shall add fifteen years to your life. I shall save you and this city from the king of Assyria's clutches and defend this city for my sake and my servant David's sake." ' 7 'Bring a fig poultice,' Isaiah said; they brought one, applied it to the ulcer, and the king recovered.
8 Hezekiah[d] said to Isaiah, 'What is the sign to tell me that Yahweh will cure me 1 S 14:10c
9 and that I shall be going up to the Temple of Yahweh in three days' time?' ·'Here', Isaiah replied, 'is the sign from Yahweh that he will do what he has said; would you 10 like the shadow to go forward[e] ten steps, or to go back ten steps?' ·'It is easy for the shadow to lengthen ten steps,' Hezekiah replied. 'No, I would rather the 11 shadow went back ten steps.' ·The prophet Isaiah then called on Yahweh, who made the shadow cast by the declining sun on the steps—the steps to Ahaz's roof-room—go back ten steps.[f]

The Babylonian embassy ‖Is 39

12 At that time the king of Babylon, Merodach-Baladan son of Baladan,[g] sent letters 13 and a gift to Hezekiah, for he had heard of his illness and his recovery.[h] ·Hezekiah ‖2 Ch 32:23 was delighted at this[i] and showed the ambassadors his entire treasury, the silver, ‖2 Ch 32:25–29 gold, spices, precious oil, his armoury too, and everything to be seen in his storehouses. There was nothing in his palace or in his whole domain that Hezekiah did not show them.
14 The prophet Isaiah then came to King Hezekiah and asked him, 'What have these men said, and where have they come from?' Hezekiah answered, 'They have 15 come from a distant country, from Babylon.' ·Isaiah said, 'What have they seen in your palace?' 'They have seen everything in my palace,' Hezekiah answered.
'There is nothing in my storehouses that I have not shown them.'
16, 17 Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, 'Listen to the word of Yahweh, ·"The days are coming when everything in your palace, everything that your ancestors have amassed until now, will be carried off to Babylon. Not a thing will be left," Yahweh 18 says. ·"Sons sprung from you, sons fathered by you, will be abducted to be eunuchs 19 in the palace of the king of Babylon." ' ·Hezekiah said to Isaiah, 'This word of Yahweh that you announce is reassuring,' for he was thinking, 'And why not? So long as there is peace and security during my lifetime.'[j]

m. 'and meadow' Is 37:27; 'and burnt' (?) Hebr. • 'under the east wind' liphneh qadim conj.; Hebr. liphneh qamah 'before growing' (?).

n 'when you stand up' conj.; Hebr. omits, see Is 37:28. At end of v., text adds 'and your raving against me', doublet from v. 28; Gk omits.

o. Isaiah addresses Hezekiah. The 'sign' is hard to interpret; for two years it is impossible to sow, and at first they eat whatever springs from the grain dropped during the previous harvest, and after that whatever the neglected land has to offer; but Sennacherib did not stay even one year in Palestine, and deliverance came immediately, v. 35. Alternative explanations; either the prophecy was pronounced on some different occasion, or else its import is a very general one, namely that after lean days prosperity follows.

p. Apparently the Assyrian army was decimated by plague, see 2 S 24:15 seq. and Ps 91.

q. 'Nisroch' is unknown, probably a distorted from of Ninurta or Nusku, Assyrian deities. • 'his sons' versions and Is 37:38; Hebr. omits. Sennacherib was in fact assassinated in 681.

20 a. Ch. 20 is repeated in Is 38–39 with an abbreviated text, a somewhat different ordering of vv. and the addition of the song of Hezekiah.

b. Vague time indication. If Hezekiah died in 687, the 15 years of v. 6 would point to a time immediately preceding Sennacherib's invasion, to which the end of the same v. refers. This date seems to be confirmed by that ascribable to Merodach-Baladan's embassy, related to the king's cure in v. 12.

c. 'the court' versions; 'the city' Hebr.

d. vv. 8–11 are additional; Hezekiah has already been cured in v. 7.

e. 'Would you like the shadow to go forward' conj.; 'The shadow has gone forward' Hebr.

f. 'the sun', see Is 38:8, Gk, Syr., conj., conditioned by following verb. 'roof-room' Qumran MS Isaiah 38:8. Not therefore a sun-dial, but the stairs leading up to the roof-room built by Ahaz, see 23:12m.

g. In Assyrian: Marduch-Apal-Iddina ('Marduch has given me a son'), champion (against Assyria) of Babylonian independence. He reigned in Babylon first from 721 to 710 and again for nine months in 703. It was probably in 703 that he tried to make Hezekiah his ally against Assyria.

h. 'and his recovery' Is 39:1; 'Hezekiah' Hebr.

i. 'was delighted at this' versions, Is 39:2; 'heard' Hebr.

j. Isaiah foretells the sack of Jerusalem and the deportation of the nobility, see 24:13 seq. Hezekiah selfishly infers that his own reign at least will be peaceful; but the second half of the v., missing from some Gk MSS, may be a gloss. In this case, Hezekiah's answer would merely have expressed his resignation.

The end of the reign of Hezekiah

‖2 Ch 32:30 Si 48:17 The rest of the history of Hezekiah, all his prowess, how he constructed the pool 20 and the conduit to bring water into the city,[k] is this not recorded in the Book of the son Manasseh succeeded him.

B: TWO WICKED KINGS

‖2 Ch 33:1–10 The reign of Manasseh in Judah (687–642)

21 Manasseh was twelve years old when he came to the throne and he reigned 1 for fifty-five years[a] in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hephzibah. ·He 2 did what is displeasing to Yahweh, copying the disgusting practices of the nations whom Yahweh had dispossessed for the Israelites.

18:4 He rebuilt the high places which his father Hezekiah had destroyed, he set up 3 17:16 1 K 16:32–33 altars to Baal and made a sacred pole as Ahab king of Israel had done, he worshipped the whole array of heaven and served it. ·He built altars[b] in the Temple 4 of Yahweh of which Yahweh had said, 'Jerusalem is where I shall put my name.'
He built altars to the whole array of heaven in the two courts of the Temple of 5
Lv 18:21h Yahweh. ·He caused his son to pass through the fire of sacrifice, he also practised 6 soothsaying and divination and set up mediums and spirit guides. He did very many more things displeasing to Yahweh, thus provoking his anger. ·He had an 7 image of Asherah[c] carved and placed it inside the Temple of which Yahweh had 1 K 8:16 said to David and his son Solomon, 'In this Temple and in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I shall put my Name forever.
Nor shall I ever again set Israel's footsteps wandering outside the country which I 8 gave to their ancestors, provided they are careful to observe all I have commanded them as laid down in the whole Law which my servant Moses prescribed for them.'[d]
But they would not listen, and Manasseh misled them into doing worse things than 9 the nations whom Yahweh had destroyed for the Israelites.

Then Yahweh spoke through his servants the prophets as follows, ·'Since Man- 10, 11 1 K 21:26 asseh king of Judah has done these shameful deeds, doing more wicked deeds than anything which the Amorites did before him, and has led Judah too into sin with his idols, ·Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "Look, I shall bring such disas- 12 ter on Jerusalem and Judah as will make the ears of all who hear of it tingle.
Is 34:11 Lm 2:8 Am 7:7–9 Over Jerusalem I shall stretch the same measuring line as over Samaria, the same 13 plumb-rule as for the House of Ahab; I shall scour Jerusalem as someone scours a dish and, having scoured it, turns it upside down.[e] ·I shall cast away the remnant of 14 my heritage,[f] delivering them into the clutches of their enemies and making them the prey and booty of all their enemies, ·because they have done what is displeasing 15 to me and have provoked my anger from the day their ancestors came out of Egypt until now." '

Manasseh shed innocent blood, too, in such great quantity that he flooded 16 Jerusalem from one end to the other,[g] besides the sins into which he led Judah by doing what is displeasing to Yahweh.

‖2 Ch 33:18–20 The rest of the history of Manasseh, his entire career, the sins he committed, is 17
this not recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Judah? ·Then Manasseh 18 fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried in the garden of his palace, the Garden of Uzza; his son Amon succeeded him.

‖2 Ch 33:21–25 The reign of Amon in Judah (642–640)

Amon was twenty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for 19 two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Meshullemeth daughter of Haruz, of Jotbah. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, as Manasseh his father had 20 done. ·In every respect he followed the example of his father, serving the idols 21

22 which his father had served, and worshipping them. ·He abandoned Yahweh, God of his ancestors; he did not follow the way of Yahweh.
23.24 Amon's retinue plotted against the king and killed him in his own palace. ·The people of the country,[h] however, slaughtered all those who had plotted against King Amon and proclaimed his son Josiah as his successor.
25 The rest of the history of Amon, his entire career, is this not recorded in the

C: JOSIAH AND THE RELIGIOUS REFORM

Introduction to the reign of Josiah (640–609)

‖2 Ch 34:1–2

1 22 Josiah was eight years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for thirty-one years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jedidah daughter of 2 Adaiah, of Bozkath. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, and in every respect followed the example of his ancestor David, not deviating from it to right or left.

The Book of the Law discovered

‖2 Ch 34:8–18

3 In the eighteenth year of King Josiah, the king sent the secretary Shaphan son of 4 Azaliah, son of Meshullam to the Temple of Yahweh. ·'Go to Hilkiah the high 12:11–16 priest,' he told him, 'and tell him to melt down[a] the silver contributed to the Temple of Yahweh and collected by the guardians of the threshold from the 5 people. ·He is to hand it over to the masters of works attached to the Temple of Yahweh, for them to pay it over to men working on the Temple of Yahweh, to 6 repair the damaged parts of the Temple: ·to the carpenters, builders and masons, 7 and for buying timber and dressed stone for the Temple repairs.' ·The latter were not required to render account of the money handed over to them, since they were conscientious in their work.
8 The high priest Hilkiah said to Shaphan the secretary, 'I have found the Book of the Law in the Temple of Yahweh.'[b] And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, who 9 read it. ·Shaphan the secretary went to the king, reporting furthermore to him as follows, 'Your servants have melted down the silver which was in the Temple and have handed it over to the masters of works attached to the Temple of Yahweh.' 10 Then Shaphan the secretary informed the king, 'The priest Hilkiah has given me a book'; and Shaphan read it aloud in the king's presence.

The prophetess Huldah consulted

11, 12 On hearing the words of the Book of the Law he tore his clothes. ·Then the king gave the following order to the priest Hilkiah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Achbor 13 son of Micaiah, Shaphan the secretary and Asaiah the king's minister:·'Go and consult Yahweh on behalf of me and the people about the words of the book that has been discovered; for Yahweh's furious wrath has been kindled against us

k. The spring of Gihon, 1 K 1:33, was outside the city. Hezekiah had a tunnel dug through the rock to bring the water to the pool called Siloam, Jn 9:7, the reservoir of Si 48:17 and Is 22:1, inside the city walls. This aqueduct replaced an older one which, for some of its length, lay open to the sky, on the eastern slopes of Mt Zion, and brought the water to a different pool, situated below the level of the Pool of Siloam, 18:17; Is 7:3; 22:9; 36:2.

i. 'his father's tomb' Gk; 'his tomb' Hebr.

22 a. 'melt down' Gk, see v. 9; 'total up' Hebr.
b. This 'Book of the Law', called 'Book of the Covenant' in 23:2,21, was Deuteronomy or at least its legislative section, the prescriptions of which determined the ensuing reform. It was the document of the covenant with Yahweh, possibly edited in connection with Hezekiah's reform, 18:4, and hidden, or lost, or forgotten during the wicked reign of Manasseh. The discovery was not a fraud on the part of the priests in Jerusalem, see 23:9.

because our ancestors disobeyed the word of Yahweh by not doing what this book says they ought to have done.'[c]

The priest Hilkiah, Ahikam, Achbor, Shaphan and Asaiah went to the prophet- 14 ess Huldah[d] wife of Shallum son of Tikvah, son of Harhas the keeper of the wardrobe; she lived in Jerusalem in the new town. They put the matter to her, and she replied, 'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "To the man who sent you to 15 me say this: •Yahweh says this: I am going to bring disaster on this place and the 16 people who live in it—all the words of the book read by the king of Judah. Because they have abandoned me and sacrificed to other gods, so as to provoke 17
my anger by their every action, my wrath is kindled against this place, and nothing can stop it. •As for the king of Judah who sent you to consult Yahweh, say this to 18 him: As regards the words you have heard[e] . . . •But since your heart has been 19 touched and you have humbled yourself before Yahweh on hearing what I have decreed against this place and the people who live in it, how they will become an object of horror and cursing, and have torn your clothes and wept before me, I too have heard—Yahweh says this. •So look, when I gather you to your ancestors, you 20 will be gathered into your grave[f] in peace; you will not live to see the great disaster that I am going to bring on this place." ' They took this answer to the king.

‖2 Ch 34:29–31 The solemn reading of the Law and renewal of the covenant

23 The king then had all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem summoned to 1
him, •and the king went up to the Temple of Yahweh with all the people of 2 Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, priests, prophets and the whole populace, high and low. In their hearing he read out the entire contents of the Book of the Covenant[g] discovered in the Temple of Yahweh. •The king then, standing on 3 the dais, bound himself by the covenant before Yahweh, to follow Yahweh, to keep his commandments, decrees and laws with all his heart and soul, and to carry out the terms of the covenant as written in this book. All the people pledged their allegiance to the covenant.

‖2 Ch 34:3–5 Religious reform in Judah

The king ordered Hilkiah[h] with the priest next in rank[c] and the guardians of the 4 21:3,7 threshold to remove all the cult objects which had been made for Baal, Asherah and the whole array of heaven; he burnt them outside Jerusalem in the fields of the Kidron and had the ashes taken to Bethel. •He exterminated the spurious priests 5 whom the kings of Judah had appointed and who offered sacrifice[d] on the high places, in the towns of Judah and the neighbourhood of Jerusalem; also those who Dt 17:3 offered sacrifice to Baal, to the sun, the moon, the constellations and the whole
Dt 16:21+ 1 K 14:23 array of heaven.[e] •And from the Temple of Yahweh he took the sacred pole 6 outside Jerusalem to the Kidron valley and in the Kidron valley he burnt it, reducing it to ashes and throwing its ashes on the common burial-ground. •He 7
Dt 23:18–19,19f 1 K 14:24 pulled down the house[f] of the sacred male prostitutes which was in the Temple of Yahweh and where the women wove veils for Asherah.

He brought all the priests in from the towns of Judah, and from Geba to 8
Dt 12 Beersheba he rendered unsanctified the high places where these priests had offered sacrifice.[g] He pulled down the High Place of the Gates,[h] which stood at the gate of Joshua, the governor of the city, to the left of the entry to the city. •The priests of 9
the high places, however, did not officiate at the altar of Yahweh in Jerusalem, although they did share the unleavened bread of their brother-priests.[i] •He ren- 10
Lv 18:21h dered unsanctified Tophet[j] in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, so that no one could pass his son or daughter through the fire of sacrifice to Molech. •He destroyed the 11 horses which the kings of Judah had dedicated to the sun[k] at the entrance to the Temple of Yahweh, near the apartment of Nathan-Melech the official, in the 21:5 precincts, and he burned the solar chariot.[l] •The king pulled down altars which 12
the kings of Judah had built on the roof[m] and those which Manasseh had built in the two courts of the Temple of Yahweh, and broke them to pieces on the spot,[n]

13 throwing their rubble into the Kidron valley. ·The king rendered unsanctified the high places facing Jerusalem, to the south of the Mount of Olives,[o] which Solomon 1 K 11:7
king of Israel had built for Astarte the Sidonian abomination, for Chemosh the 14 Moabite abomination, and for Milcom the Ammonite abomination. ·He also smashed the sacred pillars, cut down the sacred poles, and covered with human Dt 16:21–22+ 1 K 14:23 bones the places where they had stood.[p]

The reform is extended to the former Northern Kingdom[q]

15 As for the altar which was at Bethel, the high place built by Jeroboam son of Nebat 1 K 12:31–32 who had led Israel into sin, he demolished this altar and this high place as well, in the same way, breaking up its stones[r] and reducing them to powder. The sacred pole he burned.

16 On looking round, Josiah saw the tombs there on the hillside; he had the bones fetched from the tombs and burned them on the altar. This he rendered unsanctified, in accordance with the word of Yahweh which the man of God had proclaimed 1 K 12:33–13:32 when Jeroboam was standing by the altar at the time of the feast. On looking round, Josiah caught sight of the tomb of the man of God[s] who had foretold these 17 things. ·'What is that monument I see?' he asked. The townspeople replied, 'It is 18 the tomb of the man of God who came from Judah and foretold what you have done to the altar.'[t] ·'Let him rest,' the king said, 'and let no one disturb his bones.' So they left his bones untouched, with the bones of the prophet who came from 1 K 13:31
Samaria.[u]

19 Josiah also destroyed all the shrines on the high places which were in the ‖2 Ch 34:6–7 towns of Samaria and which the kings of Israel had built to provoke Yahweh's[v] 20 anger; he treated these places exactly as he had treated the one at Bethel. ·All the priests of the high places who were there he slaughtered on the altars, and on those altars burned human bones. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

The Passover ‖2 Ch 35:1, 18–19

21 The king gave this order to the whole people: 'Celebrate a Passover to Yahweh
22 your God, as prescribed in this Book of the Covenant.' ·No Passover like this had Dt 16:1–8 ever been celebrated since the days when the judges ruled Israel, nor throughout

c. After 'the people', Hebr. adds 'and for all Judah', gloss.

d. A prophetess not mentioned elsewhere.

e. The sentence breaks off. Perhaps supply 'they will be fulfilled'.

f. 'your grave' versions; 'your graves' Hebr. This narrative was composed after Josiah's tragic death, 23:29–30.

23 a. see 22:8b. Dt is presented as the code of the covenant with Yahweh, Dt 5:2–3; 28:69.

b. Hebr. adds 'the high priest', a post-exilic title.

c. 'the priest' Targ.; 'the priests' Hebr. Next in rank to the high priest, that is. The 'guardians of the threshold', see 12:10, were also priests of high rank; see also 25:18.

d. 'and who offered sacrifice' Gk, Targ.; 'and he offered sacrifice' Hebr.

e. vv. 4[b]–5 are possibly an addition.

f. 'the house', Gk; 'the houses' Hebr. 'veils' saddim conj.; Hebr. battim 'houses'.

g. Josiah imposed the law of the unique sanctuary by force; all worship in Judah was to be centralised in Jerusalem, Dt 12. The 'high places', 1 K 3:2, were Yahwistic shrines, condemned only because they contravened this law.

h. 'the high place' Gk; 'the high places' Hebr. Nothing is known about this shrine.

i. The law, Dt 18:6–8, provided that provincial priests who came to Jerusalem should enjoy the same privileges as their 'brothers', the priests of the city. But when all the 'priests of the high places' settled in Jerusalem it is probable that the city priests saw to it that their status was reduced.

j. A place where children were sacrificed as burnt offerings to Molech, Lv 18:21h. The word probably means 'burner' and seems to be described in Is 30:33.

k. A shrine dateable to the reign of Jehoshaphat (870–848), complete with sacred pillar and models of solar horses, has recently been excavated against the cliff-face of the City of David.

l. An isolated and puzzling reference 'at the entrance to' versions; 'so as not to enter' Hebr. 'the precincts' conj. 'chariot' Gk; 'chariots' Hebr.

m. Small altars dedicated to astral deities, Jr 19:13; Zp 1:5. After 'roof', Hebr. adds 'Ahaz's roof-room', a gloss and probably accurate.

n. 'broke them on the spot, wayyerussem sham conj.; Hebr. wayyaras mishsham 'ran from there'.

o. lit. 'of Oil' Targ.; 'of Perdition' Hebr.

p. To render the sites unsanctified once and for all, see vv. 16 and 20. Josiah takes steps, first to destroy the local shrines where a more or less contaminated worship of Yahweh was performed, and secondly to wipe out practices that were completely non-Yahwist, with gods and ritual borrowed from the Canaanites or, in the case of astral cults, imported from Assyria. All this gives a sad picture of the religious situation in Judah; the impression is confirmed by Jeremiah, Zephaniah and Ezekiel.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOKS OF CHRONICLES, EZRA AND NEHEMIAH

§1 The Old Testament contains a second group of historical books which in large measure duplicate but ultimately extend the 'Deuteronomic' history beginning with Joshua and ending with Kings. These are the two Books of Chronicles, then the Book of Ezra and, according to generally received opinion, the Book of Nehemiah. Originally, the two Books of Chronicles were one book and those of Ezra and Nehemiah were part of the same collection, the whole being the work of one author. That the same style and the same fundamental ideas are found throughout, and that the closing verses of 2 Ch 36 are repeated at the beginning of Ezr 1, are evidence that the whole was composed as one work.

§2 The Books of Chronicles

The Books of Chronicles (to give them their Hebrew title; the Greek Bible and the Vulgate call them the Books of Paralipomena, of 'things left out' therefore 'complementary' books) are a work of post-exilic Judaism, in a period when the nation, despite its political dependence, enjoyed a measure of self-rule by favour of its eastern overlords. The priesthood was its guide, the Law its charter. The Temple and its ritual were the centre of national life. But this framework of law and ritual was quickened by a current of personal devotion, by wisdom doctrines, by the memory of past glories and failures, and by faith in the promises of the prophets.

The author of Chronicles, a Levite of Jerusalem, essentially belongs in such surroundings. He writes after Ezra and Nehemiah, considerably later, since he is in a position to make his own synthesis of sources concerning them. The beginning of the Greek period, before 300 BC, seems to be the most probable date. The work was later expanded by one or more hands, e.g. the genealogical tables in 1 Ch 2–9, additional lists of names, probably those of David's supporters, 1 Ch 12, those of the priests and Levites, 1 Ch 15, and the long addition, 23:3–27:34, listing David's cultic and administrative staff.

These additions are consistent with the Chronicler's dominant preoccupations. The Chronicler shows great interest in the Temple. Throughout his work the clergy play a leading part, not merely the priests and Levites (as in Deuteronomy and the Priestly sections of the Pentateuch) but also the inferior clergy, the gate-keepers and cantors who are henceforth associated with the Levites. The sacred character of the clergy extends to the laity by their participation in communion sacrifices to which the Chronicler restores their primitive importance. This community of the faithful is restricted not merely to the citizens of Judah; despite the Northern Kingdom's apostasy, of which he says as little as possible, he contemplates the union of the twelve tribes under the sceptre of David; undismayed by the times in which he lives, he confidently awaits the ingathering of all the children of Israel. Not even the gentiles are excluded from praying in the Temple. For him 'Israel' means the community of God's faithful people with whom God made a covenant long ago, renewing this sacred covenant in the person of David. The kingdom of God on earth having achieved its highest form in the Davidic theocracy, the community must live in the spirit of David, always alert to the need for reform, that is to say, a return to tradition, if God is to continue his favour and fulfil his promises.

The permanent centre of interest throughout this long history is the Temple in Jerusalem and the worship offered there – from the preparations made by David to the restoration achieved by the community on its return from the Babylonian Captivity.

These dominant ideas of the Chronicler account for the form his work has taken. The earlier chapters, 1 Ch 1–8, give genealogical lists, principally concerned with the tribe of Judah and the descent of David. Ch. 9:2–34 lists those first to resettle Jerusalem after the Exile. This serves to introduce the history of David with which the remainder of the first book is concerned, 9:35–ch. 29. The hostility of Saul, David's sin with Bathsheba, the domestic disputes and dissensions, are all omitted; prominence, however, is given to the prophecy of Nathan, ch.17, and to religious activities, such as the transportation of the ark, the organisation of worship in Jerusalem, ch. 13; 15–16, and the preparations for the building of the Temple, ch. 21–29. David is responsible for the design, the collection of materials, the detailed assignment of clerical functions, leaving the task of putting all this into effect to his son Solomon. In the history of Solomon, 2 Ch 1–9, most of the space is devoted to the building of the Temple, the king's prayer at its dedication and the promises God makes in answer to that prayer. For the period following the schism the Chronicler treats only of the kingdom of Judah and the dynasty of David. The kings are assessed according to their fidelity or infidelity to the principles of the covenant and to the example set by David, 2 Ch 10–36. Religious infidelity is followed by reforms, of which the most radical are those of Hezekiah and Josiah, but the latter is succeeded by kings whose evil ways lead to disaster, and the Books of Chronicles end with Cyrus' permission to rebuild the Temple. The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah then continue the story.

The sources of Chronicles are, in the first place, the canonical books: Genesis and Numbers for the opening genealogies, Samuel and Kings for much of the rest. The author treats his sources with freedom, adding to them, subtracting, selecting what suits his purpose. Though we are able to identify these main sources, the author never explicitly mentions them. On the other hand, he appeals to certain other works like the 'Books' of the kings of Israel, or of the kings of Israel and Judah, a midrash on the Books of Kings, the 'words' or the 'visions' of such and such a prophet. These writings are not extant and their contents and mutual relationships are disputed. Possibly they were accounts of the various reigns from the point of view of the part the prophets played in them. It is unlikely that the Chronicler also made use of oral traditions.

Merely because the Chronicler has used sources which, though unknown to us, may well have been trustworthy, there is no a priori reason to suspect what he adds to our canonical books. Each case must be judged on its own merits, and recent research has vindicated Chronicles on several points against many commentators who in the past have held a low opinion of the books. Nevertheless, there are times when the Chronicler gives facts at variance with the account offered by Samuel and Kings, or when he even deliberately modifies these accounts. This would be unforgivable in a historian of today whose job is to narrate and explain the sequence of events. But the author of Chronicles has no such intention. He is not a historian; he is a theologian. Contemplating the long history of Israel and particularly the Davidic episode, he paints a picture of the ideal kingdom. Past, present and future merge into one; into the age of David he projects a ritual organisation of his own, omitting all that might diminish his hero, David. Apart from certain fresh items of information, the value of which must be independently tested, the work is not so much a record of the past as a picture of the conditions and interests of the author's own period.

For he is writing for his contemporaries. He reminds them that the nation can truly live only if it remains faithful to God, that is to say, obedient to his Law, and worships in a spirit of sincere devotion. He wants his people to be a devout community for whom the promises made to David can come true.

§3 The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah

The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah formed only one 'Book of Esdras' in the Hebrew Bible and Septuagint. As the latter retained the apocryphal Greek Book of Esdras and accorded it pride of place (Esdras I), the Book of Ezra-Nehemiah is known in the LXX as Esdras II. In the Christian period, it was divided into two, and this usage was followed by the Vulgate, in which Esdras I is called Ezra and Esdras II is called Nehemiah, the apocryphal Greek Book of Esdras being known as Esdras III. In the present edition, the books of Ezra and Nehemiah are named after their respective leading characters, and apocryphal Esdras, when referred to in the notes, is called 1 Esd. For the relevance of 1 Esd to the canonical books, see Ezr 1:6g.

The Books of Ezra and of Nehemiah are, as we have said, a continuation of the Chronicler's work. After the fifty years of Exile, on which he is silent, he resumes his history with the edict of Cyrus, 538 BC, permitting the Jews to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the Temple. The return begins forthwith, but the work of rebuilding is halted by the hostility of the Samaritans and not resumed until the reign of Darius I. The Temple is finished in 515. For the next fifty years attempts to restore the walls of Jerusalem are hindered, again by the Samaritans, Ezr 1–6. Under Artaxerxes, the scribe Ezra, representative for Jewish affairs at the Persian court, arrives in Jerusalem with a new contingent of returning exiles, bringing with him an official authorisation to impose the Mosaic Law, now approved by the king. He has to take severe measures against those Jews already married to foreigners, Ezr 7–10. Next, Nehemiah, cupbearer to Artaxerxes, secures the king's commission to go to Jerusalem and rebuild the walls. Despite opposition, the work is soon finished and the city once more inhabited, Ne 1:1–7:72[a]. Meanwhile, Nehemiah has been appointed high commissioner. With all solemnity the Law is read to the people by Ezra, the feast of Shelters is celebrated, the people confess their sins and promise to observe the Law, Ne 7:72[b]–10:40. Then follow various lists of names, a few supplementary measures, and the dedication of the city walls, 11:1–13:3. After again visiting Persia, Nehemiah returns; on his second mission he finds it necessary to deal with certain irregularities which have already crept into the community, Ne 13:4–31.

This summary demonstrates the importance of these books for the history of the Jewish Restoration after the Exile. The first chapters of Ezra complement the information supplied by Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. The two books are the only source we have on the work of Ezra and Nehemiah. Their date is earlier than that of Chronicles, and, most important, they use, and quote verbatim, documents that are contemporary with the events recounted; lists of returned exiles, of the population of Jerusalem, acts of the kings of Persia, correspondence with the chancery, and in particular Ezra's report of his own mission and Nehemiah's apologetic memoir.

But for all this wealth of source material the interpretation of Ezra and Nehemiah is extremely difficult, because the documents are arranged in a baffling order. The list of immigrants is given twice, Ezr 2 and Ne 7; in Ezr 4:6–6:18, written in Aramaic, the events that took place under Darius are narrated after the events of the reigns of Xerxes and Artaxerxes, though in fact they occurred half a century before. Writings composed by Ezra and Nehemiah themselves have been dismembered and recombined. The dates given in those writings enable us to restore Ezra's report thus: Ezr 7:1–8:36; Ne 7:72[b]–8:18; Ezr 9:1–10:44; Ne 9:1–37.

Ezra's report has however been rewritten by the Chronicler, who has put certain passages into the third person; various additions have also been made: the list of the guilty in Ezr 10:18, 20–44, and the prayers in Ezr 9:6–15 and Ne 9:6–37. Nehemiah's memoir consists of the following passages: Ne 1–2; 3:33–7:5; 12:27–13:31. Into it, the Chronicler has inserted a document relating to the rebuilding of the city walls, 3:1–32. The list of the first returning exiles, 7:6–72[a], is taken from Ezr 2. Ch. 10 is another document from the archives, recording the promise made by the community at the time of Nehemiah's second mission, ch. 13. Ch. 11–12 consist of various lists to do with the repopulation of Jerusalem, the resettlement of the countryside, also priestly and Levitical families after the Exile.

Apparently the Chronicler wanted to proceed by a series of broad surveys. The main subject of Ezra 1–6 is the rebuilding of the Temple under Darius; the successive returns from Exile are all dealt with together; the figure of Sheshbazzar is blocked out to throw Zerubbabel into relief; various hostile activities of the Samaritans are narrated in adjacent sections. In the following chapters the books represent Ezra and Nehemiah as working side by side for the one great purpose.

Such methods of composition create grave problems for the historian, the most vexed and difficult being that of the order and dating of events within the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah. If we accept the book's own sequence, Ezra reached Jerusalem in 458, the seventh year of Artaxerxes I, Ezr 7:8. Nehemiah joined him in 445, the twentieth year of the same reign, Ne 2:1. He stayed for twelve years, Ne 13:6; it was therefore in 433 that he returned to Persia for an unstated period; he went back to Palestine before the death of Artaxerxes I, i.e. 423. This traditional order of events is upheld by able commentators who, however, restrict the mission of Ezra to a single year, accepting the precise figures given in the book, and make Ezra leave before the arrival of Nehemiah. Others reverse the order, judging that the work done by Ezra could have been done only after Nehemiah had finished his. In this hypothesis, the dates assigned to Ezra relate to the reign of Artaxerxes II, not, as for Nehemiah, to that of Artaxerxes I; Ezra did not therefore reach Palestine until 398. A third and recent school admits that Ezra followed Nehemiah but objects that the text gives no indication that two different reigns are being referred to; it therefore places the mission of Ezra between the two missions of Nehemiah. This theory requires a textual emendation of Ezr 7:8; Ezra arrives not in the seventh but in the thirty-seventh year of Artaxerxes, i.e. in 428.

Any one of these solutions has good arguments to support it and each encounters difficulties; the question is still open. One thing is certain: Nehemiah was active in Jerusalem from 445 to 433 BC.

In any case, so far as a religious appreciation of the books is concerned, the problem is of minor importance. The author's intention is to present a composite, though not misleading, picture of the Jewish Restoration; and to assess the significance of this event it is more important to appreciate the ideas inspiring it than to discover the precise sequence of its various stages. Taking advantage of the liberal religious policy that the Achaemenids applied in their empire, the Jews return to their Promised Land, restore the ancient worship, rebuild the Temple and the city walls, and live as a community governed by men of their own race and regulated by the Law of Moses. All that the imperial power requires is loyalty, no great price to pay when that power shows such respect for Jewish customs. This is an event of great importance—nothing less than the birth of Judaism, prepared by long meditation in Exile and assisted by the actions of leaders raised up by God.

After Zerubbabel, who rebuilt the Temple (but on whom the Chronicler does not confer the messianic titles awarded by Haggai and Zechariah, Hg 2:23; Zc 6:12seq.), come Ezra and Nehemiah as pioneers of this restoration. The real father of Judaism is Ezra with his three dominant conceptions: the chosen race, the Temple, the Law. If his reforming measures seem severe and his isolationism narrow, it is because his zeal was great and the need to safeguard the infant community urgent. He is the pattern of all scribes, the great and growing hero of Judaic tradition. Nehemiah, though inspired by the same ideals, acts in a different sphere, restoring and repopulating Jerusalem, and making it possible and attractive for its citizens to lead a national life. The record he has left us, more intimate than that of Ezra, reveals a vivid and human personality, ungrudging of effort yet prudent and deliberate, trusting in God whose help he seeks in frequent prayer. Behind him he left a noble memory and Ben Sira sings the praises of the man who 'rebuilt our walls which lay in ruins', Si 49:13.

It is not surprising that in this restored community, gathered round the Temple and obedient to the Law, the Chronicler sees a realisation of the ideal God-governed society for which he has pleaded in the Books of Chronicles. He well knows that the realisation is not perfect, that the future has something better in store, but here he is more dependent on documents, which he reproduces, than he was in the Chronicles. He retains their exclusivist tone prompted by circumstances, and respects their silence—no doubt for reasons of political prudence—about their messianic aspirations. He writes midway through the fourth and third centuries BC, a time of which we know little and during which the community in Jerusalem, withdrawn into itself, grew quietly to maturity and deepened its spirituality.

‖Gn 36:31–39

43 These are the kings who ruled in Edom before an Israelite king ruled: Bela son of 44 Beor; his city was called Dinhabah. ·Bela died and Jobab son of Zerah, from 45 Bozrah, succeeded. ·Jobab died and Husham from the territory of the Temanites 46 succeeded. ·Husham died and Hada son of Bedad succeeded; he defeated the 47 Midianites in Moab, and his city was called Avith. ·Hadad died and Samlah of 48 Masrekah succeeded. ·Samlah died and Shaul of Rehoboth-ha-Nahar succeeded.
49, 50 Shaul died and Baal-Hanan son of Achbor succeeded. ·Baal-Hanan died and Hadad succeeded. His city was called Pai; his wife's name was Mehetabel daughter of Matred, daughter of Mezahab.

The chiefs of Edom

‖Gn 36:40–43

51 Hadad died, and then there were chiefs in Edom: Chief Timna, Chief Aliah, Chief 52, 53 Jetheth, ·Chief Oholibamah, Chief Elah, Chief Pinon, ·Chief Kenaz, Chief Te-54 man, Chief Mibzar, ·Chief Magdiel, Chief Iram. These were the chiefs of Edom.

B: JUDAH

The sons of Israel

‖Gn 35:23–26

3 Sons of Judah: Er, Onan and Shelah. These three were born to him by Bath-shua the Canaanite woman. Er, Judah's first-born, displeased Yahweh who put him to ‖Gn 38:7 4 death. ·Tamar, Judah's daughter-in-law, bore him Perez and Zerah. Judah had ‖Gn 38:27–30 five sons in all.

1 a. Ch. 1–9 consist almost entirely of genealogical lists. The genealogies of Gn 1–12 issued in Abraham; those of 1 Ch issue in Saul, and thus prepare for David, the Chronicler's main hero. Compare the genealogies of Christ, Mt 1:1–17; Lk 3:23–28. The Chronicler makes use of the Pentateuch in its final form, as also of the earlier historical books; to these sources, he adds information, probably authentic, from other sources available to him. Additional material has also been contributed by later editors. As elsewhere in the Bible, these genealogies often indicate only vague links of relationship or vicinity. Geographical names are treated as personal ones. • Hebr. and versions show numerous variants, not noted in detail here.

b. Abridging the long treatments of Gn 5 and 11 and copying substantial passages from Gn 10, the Chronicler omits all those peoples descended from the first human couple, to concentrate on the Semite Abraham and then his sons Isaac and Jacob.

2 a. The Chronicler begins with Judah, the tribe of David, vv. 3–17. The remainder of the chapter consists of lists from various sources (two genealogies of Caleb) concerning groups integrated into Judah. They may well be later additions.

‖Gn 46:12 Sons of Perez: Hezron and Hamul. 5
‖1 K 5:11 Sons of Zerah: Zimri, Ethan, Heman, Calcol and Dara, five in all. 6
Jos 7 Sons of Carmi: Achar, who brought trouble on Israel by being unfaithful to the curse of destruction. 7
Sons of Ethan: Azariah. 8

The ancestors of David

Sons of Hezron: there were born to him Jerahmeel, Ram, Chelubai.[b] 9
‖Nb 1:7 ‖Rt 4:19–22 Ram fathered Amminadab, Amminadab fathered Nahshon chief of the sons of Judah, ·Nahshon fathered Salma, Salma fathered Boaz. ·Boaz fathered Obed, Obed fathered Jesse. ·Jesse fathered Eliab, his first-born, Abinadab second, Shimea third, ·Nethanel fourth, Raddai fifth, ·Ozem sixth, David seventh. ·Their sisters were Zeruiah and Abigail. Sons of Zeruiah: Abishai, Joab and Asahel: three. ·Abigail gave birth to Amasa; father of Amasa was Jether the Ishmaelite. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14–16, 17

Jos 14:6b Caleb

Caleb son of Hezron fathered Jerioth by Azubah his wife;[c] these are her sons: Jesher, Shobab and Ardon. ·Azubah died, and Caleb married Ephrath, who bore him Hur. ·Hur fathered Uri, Uri fathered Bezalel. 18, 19, 20
Afterwards, Hezron married the daughter of Machir, father of Gilead; he married her when he was sixty years old and she bore him Segub. ·Segub fathered Jair who held twenty-three towns in the territory of Gilead. ·From them, however, Geshur and Aram took the Encampments of Jair and Kenath with its dependencies: sixty towns. All these used to belong to[d] the sons of Machir father of Gilead. 21, 22, 23
After Hezron's death, Caleb married Ephrathah,[e] wife of Hezron his father, who bore him Ashhur father of Tekoa. 24

Jerahmeel

Jerahmeel, Hezron's eldest son, fathered Hezron, his first-born, Ram, Bunah, Oren, Ozem, Ahijah. ·Jerahmeel had another wife called Atarah; she was the mother of Onam. 25, 26
Sons of Ram, Jerahmeel's first-born: Maaz, Jamin and Eker. 27
Sons of Onam: Shammai and Jada. Sons of Shammai: Nadab and Abishur. Abishur's wife was called Abihail; she bore him Ahban and Molid. ·Sons of Nadab: Seled and Ephraim. Seled died leaving no son. ·Son of Ephraim: Ishi; son of Ishi: Sheshan; son of Sheshan: Ahlai. ·Sons of Jada, Shammai's brother: Jether and Jonathan. Jether died leaving no sons. ·Sons of Jonathan: Peleth and Zaza. 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33
These were the sons of Jerahmeel.
Sheshan had no sons,[f] only daughters. He had an Egyptian slave Jarha ·to whom Sheshan gave his daughter in marriage. She bore him Attai. ·Attai fathered Nathan, Nathan fathered Zabad, ·Zabad fathered Ephlal, Ephlal fathered Obed, Obed fathered Jehu, Jehu fathered Azariah, ·Azariah fathered Helez, Helez fathered Eleasah, ·Eleasah fathered Sismai, Sismai fathered Shallum, ·Shallum fathered Jekamiah, Jekamiah fathered Elishama. 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41

Caleb[g]

2:18seq.;2.24 2:50i;4:11seq. Nb 32:41–42 1 S 27:10 Jos 14:6b Sons of Caleb, Jerahmeel's brother: Mesha, his first-born, who fathered Ziph. His son was[h] Mareshah, father of Hebron. ·Sons of Hebron: Korah, Tappuah, Rekem and Shema. ·Shema fathered Raham, father of Jorkeam. Rekem fathered Shammai. ·Shammai's son was Maon, and Maon fathered Beth-Zur. 42, 43, 44, 45
Ephah, Caleb's concubine, gave birth to Haran, Moza and Gazez. Haran fathered Gazez. 46
Sons of Jahdai: Regem, Jotham, Geshan, Pelet, Ephah and Shaaph. 47
Maacah, Caleb's concubine, gave birth to Sheber and Tirhanah. ·She gave birth to Shaaph, who fathered Madmannah, and Sheva, who fathered Machbenah and Gibea. 48, 49

The daughter of Caleb was Achsah. Jos 15:16–19 50 These were the sons of Caleb.

Hur [i]

51 Sons of Hur, the first-born of Ephrathah: Shobal fathered Kiriath-Jearim; ·Salma 2:19;4:1seq.
52 fathered Bethlehem; Hareph fathered Beth-Gader. ·Shobal, father of Kiriath-53 Jearim, had sons: Haroeh, that is, half of the Manahathites, ·and the clans of Kiriath-Jearim: the Ithrites, Puthites, Shumathites and Mishraites. Their descendants are the people of Zorah and Eshtaol. Jg 13:2;18:2
54 Sons of Salma: Bethlehem, the Netophathites, Atroth Beth-Joab, half of the 55 Manahathites, the Zorathites, ·the Sophrite clans living at Jabez, the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, the Sucathites. They were the Kenites descended from Hammath, father of the House of Rechab. Nb 24:21k 2 K 10:15

C: THE HOUSE OF DAVID [a]

The sons of David

1 3 These are the sons of David who were born to him in Hebron: the first-born ||2 S 3:2–5
2 Amnon, by Ahinoam of Jezreel; second, Daniel, by Abigail of Carmel; ·third, Absalom son of Maacah, daughter of Talmai king of Geshur; fourth, Adonijah son
3, 4 of Haggith; ·fifth, Shephatiah by Abital, sixth, Ithream by his wife Eglah. ·Six, therefore, were born to him in Hebron, where he reigned for three years and six months.
5 He reigned for thirty-three years in Jerusalem. ·These are the sons who were =14:3–7 ||2 S 5:14–16
born to him in Jerusalem: Shimea, Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, the four of them 6 children of Bath-Shua [b] daughter of Ammiel; ·Ibhar, Elishama, Eliphelet, 7, 8 Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, ·Elishama, Eliada, Eliphelet: nine.
9 All these were sons of David, not counting the sons of the concubines. Tamar 2 S 13:1seq.
was their sister.

The kings of Judah [c]

10 Sons of Solomon: Rehoboam; Abijah his son, Asa his son, Jehoshaphat his son, 11, 12 Joram his son, Ahaziah his son, Joash his son, ·Amaziah his son, Azariah his son, 13, 14 Jotham his son, ·Ahaz his son, Hezekiah his son, Manasseh his son, ·Amon his 15 son, Josiah his son. ·Sons of Josiah: Johanan, [d] the first-born, Jehoiakim second, 16 Zedekiah third, Shallum fourth. ·The sons of Jehoiakim: Jeconiah his son, Zedekiah his son. 2 Ch 36:1seq.

The royal line after the exile [e]

17, 18 Sons of Jeconiah the captive: Shealtiel his son, ·then Malchiram, Pedaiah, Shen-19 azzar, Jechamiah, Hoshama, Nedabiah. ·Sons of Pedaiah: Zerubbabel [f] and

b. Chelubai, like Chelub, 4:11, is apparently to be identified with Caleb, 2:18, see Jos 14:6b.

c. 'by Azubah his wife' versions and see v. 19; fathered Azubah' Hebr.

d. 'used to belong to' Gk; 'were' Hebr.

e. 'Caleb married Ephrathah' Gk; 'in Caleb of Ephrathah' Hebr.

f. According to a tradition differing from that in v. 31.

g. Another genealogical record of Caleb's descendants, cf. vv. 18seq., no doubt representing a different period when the relationships of the clans had changed.

h. 'His son' conj.; 'son of (Mareshah)' Hebr.

i. Hur, 'first-born of Ephrathah', is only once mentioned as a son of Caleb, v. 20, but see vv. 24,42; 3:15. Unlike Caleb, see Jos 14:6b, Hur apparently represents a pure Judaean line which, originating in Ephrathah-Bethlehem, spread north-west to Kiriath-Jearim, Zorah and Eshtaol.

3 a. This chapter, continuing the Davidic line into post-exilic times, is out of place in the tribal survey, where it ought by rights to follow 2:17. It is probably an addition. The list of David's sons born in Jerusalem, vv. 5–8, is repeated in 14:3–7.

b. Same as Bathsheba, 2 S 11–12; 1 K 1, and so written in Gk.

c. The list derives from 1 and 2 K. • Shallum son of Josiah is the same as Jehoahaz in 2 K 23:30seq., see Jr 22:11.

d. Some MSS read 'Joahaz' for 'Johanan'.

e. This list probably extends to the author's own day.

f. In all the other texts, see Ezr 3:2; Hg 1:1, Zerubbabel is son of Shealtiel.

Shimei. Sons of Zerubbabel: Meshullam and Hananiah; Shelomith was their sister.
Sons of Meshullam: [g] Hashubah, Ohel, Berechiah, Hasadiah, Jushab-Hesed: five. 20
Sons of Hananiah: Pelatiah; Jeshaiah his son, Rephaiah his son, Arnan his son, 21
Ezr 8:3 Obadiah his son, Shecaniah his son. [h] ·Sons of Shecaniah: Shemaiah, Hattush, 22
Igal, Bariah, Neariah, Shaphat: six. ·Sons of Neariah: Elioenai, Hizkiah, Azrikam: 23 three. ·Sons of Elioenai: Hodaviah, Eliashib, Pelaiah, Akkub, Johanan, Delaiah, 24 Anani: seven.

D: THE SOUTHERN TRIBES [a]

Judah. Shobal

2:3 4 Sons of Judah: Perez, Hezron, Carmi, Hur, Shobal. ·Reaiah son of Shobal 1, 2 fathered Jahath, and Jahath fathered Ahumai and Lahad. These are the Zoreathite clans.

2:50h Hur

These are Abi-Etam, Jezreel, Ishma, and Idbash, whose sister was called 3 Hazzelelponi.
Penuel fathered Gedor, and Ezer fathered Hushah. 4
These were the sons of Hur, first-born of Ephrathah and father of Bethlehem.

Ashhur

Ashhur, father of Tekoa, had two wives: Helah and Naarah. 5 Naarah bore him Ahuzzam, Hepher, the Timnites, and the Ahashtarites—these 6 were the sons of Naarah.
Sons of Helah: Zereth, Zohar, Ethnan. 7
Koz fathered Anub, Hazzobebah and the clans of Aharhel son of Harum. 8
Jabez was better known than his brothers. His mother gave him the name 9
2:55 Gn 35:18 Jabez, 'because', she said, 'in distress I gave birth to him.' [b] ·Jabez called on the 10
God of Israel. 'If you truly bless me,' he said, 'you will extend my lands, your hand will be with me, you will keep harm away and my distress will cease.' God granted him what he had asked.

2:18seq.,42seq. Jos 14:6b Caleb

2:9b Chelub, Shuhah's brother, fathered Mehir, who fathered Eshton. ·Eshton fathered 11, 12 Bethrapha, Paseah and Tehinnah father of Irnahash. These were the men of Recab.
‖Jg 1:13 Sons of Kenaz: Othniel and Seraiah. Sons of Othniel: Hathath and Meonothai; 13
Meonothai fathered Ophrah. Seraiah fathered Joab, father of Geharashim—for 14
Ne 11:35 they were craftsmen. [c]
‖Nb 13:6 Sons of Caleb son of Jephunneh: Iru, Elah and Naam. Sons of Elah: Kenaz. 15
Sons of Jehallelel: Ziph, Ziphah, Tiria, Asarel. 16
Sons of Ezrah: Jether, Mered, Epher, Jalon. She [d] conceived Miriam, Shammai, 17 and Ishbah, the father of Eshtemoa, ·whose Judaean wife gave birth to Jered 18 father of Gedor, Heber father of Soco, and Jekuthiel, father of Zanoah. These were the sons of Bithiah the daughter of Pharaoh whom Mered had married.
The sons of Hodiah's wife, sister of Naham father of Keilah the Garmite and of 19
Eshtemoa the Maacathite . . .
Sons of Shimon: Amnon, Rinnah, Ben-Hanan, Tilon. 20 Sons of Ishi: Zoheth and Ben-Zoheth.

Shelah [e]

2:3 Sons of Shelah son of Judah: Er father of Lecah, Laadah father of Mareshah, and 21
the clans of linenworkers at Beth-Ashbea, ·Jokim, the men of Cozeba, Joash and 22 Saraph where Moab found wives [f] and then returned to Bethlehem. [g] (These are 23 old traditions.) •These were potters and lived at Netaim and Gederah; they resided there, working for the king.

Simeon[h]

24, 25 Sons of Simeon: Nemuel, Jamin, Jarib, Zerah, Saul; •Shallum was his son, ‖Gn 46:10 ‖Nb 26:12seq.
26 Mibsam his son, Mishma his son. •The sons of Mishma: Hammuel his son, Zaccur
27 his son, Shimei his son. •Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters, but his brothers 1:29–30 Gn 25:13–14 did not have many children, and the sum of their clans did not multiply as the sons of Judah did.
28, 29 They lived in Beersheba, Moladah and Hazar-Shual, •Bilhah, Ezem and Tolad, ‖Jos 19:1–8
30, 31 Bethuel, Hormah and Ziklag, •Beth-Marcaboth, Hazar-Susim, Beth-Biri, Shaa-32 raim. •These were their towns until the reign of David. Their settlements were:
33 Etam, Ain, Rimmon, Tochen and Ashan, five towns, •and all the dependencies surrounding these towns as far as Baalath. That was where they lived and they had 34, 35 an official genealogy. •Meshobab, Jamlech, Joshah son of Amaziah, •Joel, Jehu 36 son of Joshibiah, son of Seraiah, son of Asiel, •Elioenai, Jaakobah, Jeshohaiah, 37 Asaiah, Adiel, Jesimiel, Benaiah, •Ziza, Ben-Shiphi, Ben-Allon, Ben-Jedaiah, 38 Ben-Shimri, Ben-Shemaiah—•these above named were princes in their clans in Nb 1:2
39 their ancestral home. Their numbers increased enormously. •In search of pasture for their flocks, they spread from the Pass of Gerar[i] to the eastern end of the 40 valley, •where they found good, fat pasture; the land was broad, untroubled, peaceful. Hamites[j] had been living there before them.
41 These Simeonites, recorded by name, arrived there in the time of Hezekiah king of Judah; they overran their tents and the dwellings[k] which they found there. They put them under a curse of destruction still in force today and settled in their place, Jos 6:17c since there was pasturage for their flocks.
42 Five hundred of them, of the Simeonites, went to Mount Seir, their leaders being Pelatiah, Neariah, Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi.
43 They defeated the surviving fugitives of Amalek and still live there today. Ex 17:8d

E: THE TRANSJORDANIAN TRIBES

Reuben

1 5 Sons of Reuben, first-born of Israel. He was indeed the first-born but, when he defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given to the sons of Joseph son of Gn 35:22
Israel, and he was no longer reckoned as the eldest son.
2 Although Judah grew greater than his brothers and a leader came from him, the Mi 5:2b birthright was Joseph's.[a] 3 Sons of Reuben, first-born of Israel: Henoch, Pallu, Hezron, Carmi. ‖Gn 46:9 ‖Nb 26:5seq.

g. 'Sons of Meshullam' restored; alternatively, a second family of Zerubbabel.

h. 'his son' (all four times), Gk; 'the sons of' Hebr.

4 a. The tables for Judah, Hur and Caleb are parallel to those of ch. 2 though differing considerably from them, with additional notices on Ashhur and Shelah. This section may be a later addition to the original work, using other ancient material. The original text possibly passed directly from the notice on Judah, 2:3–17, to the one on Simeon, 4:24–43.

b. Playing on ya'betz and 'otzeb 'distress'.

c. The name means 'Valley of Craftsmen (in wood and iron)', see Ne 11:35.

d. Bithiah, v. 18.

e. This notice is out of character with the foregoing lists. Family relationships between Bethlehem and Moab are also emphasised in the Book of Ruth and in 1 S 22:3. The practice of a craft was a hereditary, family affair, see v. 14 above; where it was practised depended on geographical and economic factors.

f. see Rt 1. • Alternative translation 'ruled in Moab'.

g. 'returned to Bethlehem' wayyashubu bet lehem conj.; Hebr. wayyashube lahem corrupt.

h. The notice consists of a genealogy, vv. 24–27, a list of towns, vv. 28–33, and the movements of the Simeonite clans, vv. 34–43. v. 31[b] indicates that the integration of Simeon with Judah took place during the reign of David; compare the list in Jos 15 where these towns are reckoned as belonging to Judah. The Simeonites retained their semi-nomadic way of life for another three centuries, see v. 39seq.

i. 'Gerar' Gk; 'Gedor' Hebr.

j. According to 1:8, the sons of Ham lived in both Canaan and Africa. Here the expression merely means non-Israelites.

k. Alternative translation 'and the Meunites', see 2 Ch 20:1.

5 a. The Chronicler, so attached to David and his dynasty, reconciles the pre-eminence given to Judah by Gn 49:10 with the tradition which considered Joseph a first-born, see Dt 33:17j. The Gk text corrects 'birthright' to 'blessing'.

Joel [b]

Sons of Joel: Shemaiah his son, Gog his son, Shimei his son, ·Micah his son, 4, 5
Reaiah his son, Baal his son. ·Beerah his son, whom Tiglath-Pileser king of 6 Assyria [c] carried off into exile, was the chief of the Reubenites.

His brothers, by families, were grouped according to relationship. Jeiel was first, 7 then Zechariah ·and Bela son of Azaz, son of Shema, son of Joel. 8

Territory of Reuben

‖Nb 32:37seq. It was Reuben who lived in Aroer and his territory extended as far as Nebo and Baal-Meon. ·To eastward, what he occupied extended to the edge of the desert 9 and the River Euphrates, for they had many herds in Gilead.

In the time of Saul, they made war on the Hagrites, whom they defeated and 10 who were then living in their tents throughout the eastern front of Gilead.

Gad [d]

Gn 46:16 Next to them, in Bashan as far as Salecah, lived the sons of Gad. ·Joel was the first, 11, 12
Nb 26:15–18 Shapham the second, then Janai and Shaphat in Bashan.
Dt 3:10seq.
Jos 13:24–28

Their brothers, by families, were Michael, Meshullam, Sheba, Jorai, Jacan, Zia, 13
Eber: seven. ·These were the sons of Abihail: Ben-Huri, Ben-Jaroah, Ben-Gilead, 14
Ben-Michael, Ben-Jeshishai, Ben-Jahdo, Ben-Buz. ·Ahi son of Abdiel, son of 15
Guni, was the head of their families. ·They inhabited Gilead, Bashan and its 16 dependencies, as well as all the pasture lands of Sharon [e] on their extremities.
In the time of Jotham king of Judah and in the time of Jeroboam king of Israel, all 17 of them were included in the official genealogy.

The sons of Reuben, the Gadites and the half-tribe of Manasseh had warriors, 18 men armed with shield and sword who could handle the bow and were trained for war, to the number of forty-four thousand seven hundred and sixty fit for service.

Gn 25:15 They made war on the Hagrites, on Jetur, Naphish and Nodab. ·God came to 19, 20 their help, and the Hagrites and all their allies fell into their hands, for they called Dt 33:20–21 on God as they fought, and because they put their trust in him he heard their prayer. ·Of their livestock they carried off fifty thousand camels, two hundred 21 and fifty thousand sheep, two thousand donkeys and a hundred thousand people.
Because the war was of God, the slaughter was great. They continued to live in 22 their territory until the exile. [f]

The half-tribe of Manasseh

‖Nb 32:39 The sons of the half-tribe of Manasseh lived in the territory between Bashan and 23
Baal-Hermon, Senir and Mount Hermon.

They were numerous. ·These were the heads of their families: Epher, Ishi, Eliel, 24 Azriel, Jeremiah, Hodaviah, Jahdiel—stout fighting men, men of renown, heads of their families.

But since they were unfaithful to the God of their ancestors and prostituted 25 themselves to the gods of the peoples of the country whom God had destroyed before them, ·the God of Israel roused the hostility of Pul, [g] king of Assyria, that is 26 the wrath of Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria who deported them—the Reubenites, the Gadites and the half-tribe of Manasseh—taking them off to Halah, Habor, Hara and the river of Gozan. [h] They are still there today.

The singers [b]

31 16 32 17 These are the men whom David nominated to lead the singing in the Temple of Yahweh after the ark had come to rest there. ·They were responsible for the singing before the Dwelling, the Tent of Meeting, until Solomon had built the Temple of Yahweh in Jerusalem and then continued their customary duties.

33 18 These were the persons in office, with their sons: [c]

b. This material is unique to the Chronicler, who leaves the relationship between Reuben and Joel unexplained.

c. The deportation by Tiglath-Pileser in 732, see 2 K 15:29, had struck also Gilead, home of the tribe of Reuben.

d. The lists of Gad and the half-tribe of Manasseh are unique to the Chronicler and may be derived from a census taken in the reign of Jeroboam II, see v. 17.

e. Not the Sharon of the coastal plain of Palestine but an unidentified area in Transjordan, mentioned on the Mesha Stone.

f. The incident related in vv. 18–22, not mentioned elsewhere in the OT, the figures of which are out of all proportion, preserves the memory of the periodic conflicts between the Transjordanian tribes and their turbulent Arab neighbours. The exile in question was Tiglath-Pileser's deportation, see vv. 6 and 26.

g. Tiglath-Pileser III (745–727 BC) reigned over the dual empire of Assyria-Babylon. As monarch of Babylon, his regal name was Pula (Hebr. Pul), see 2 K 15:19.

h. The Chronicler combines the deportation of Gilead by Tiglath-Pileser, 2 K 15:29, with the localities to which the inhabitants of Samaria were deported by Sargon II in 721 BC.

i. These long lists are for the most part additional to the original work, being worked up from biblical material, unverifiable sources and arbitrary juxtapositions. The original work may not have contained much more about Levi than 6:1–4.34–38.

6 a. Gershom (called Gershon in Nb) was, according to the northern traditions, Ex 2:22; Jg 18:30, probably a descendant of Moses. This family had been in charge of the schismatic shrine at Dan; for this reason the 'Priestly' tradition gives preference to the Kohathites.

b. Sharing the outlook of Is 12; 25 and 26; Ho 14:3 and presumably Ml 1:11, the Chronicler regards sacred song (praise, confession, thanksgiving) as the essential element of sacrificial worship. He attributes its institution to David.

c. Here David's three singers, Heman, Asaph and Ethan (Jeduthun in 25:1.3, see ch. 16) are incorporated in the three levitical lines of Kohath, Gershom and Merari. Heman and Ethan were poet-sages of antiquity; Heman is specifically called 'native-born', i.e. a member of the indigenous, pre-Israelite population of Palestine, in the title of Ps 88, and Ethan is similarly described in 1 K 5:11 and in the title of Ps 89. David apparently co-opted Canaanite experts to organise and perform the Temple music in the first instance. • The inclusion of Heman and Ethan in the pedigree of Judah, 2:6, was probably due to confusion between the word 'ezrah, 'native-born', and the proper name Zerah son of Judah, see Gn 38:30; 46:12.

Zephaniah, ·son of Tahath, son of Assir, son of Ebiasaph, son of Korah, ·son of 22, 23 38
Izhar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, son of Israel.
His brother Asaph stood on his right: Asaph son of Berechiah, son of Shimea, 24 39 son of Michael, son of Baaseiah, son of Malchijah, ·son of Ethni, son of Zerah, 25 40, 26 41 son of Adaiah, ·son of Ethan, son of Zimmah, son of Shimei, ·son of Jahath, son 27 42, 28 43 of Gershom, son of Levi.
On the left, the sons of Merari: Ethan son of Kishi, son of Abdi, son of Malluch, 29 44 son of Hashabiah, son of Amaziah, son of Hilkiah, ·son of Amzi, son of Bani, son 30 45, 31 46 of Shemer, ·son of Mahli, son of Mushi, son of Merari, son of Levi. 32 47

The other Levites

Their brother Levites were dedicated for all the other duties of the Dwelling, the 33 48
Temple of God, ·but Aaron and his sons burned the offerings on the altar of burnt 34 49
Lv 1:4;2:3b offering and on the altar of incense; they were entirely responsible for the most holy things and for the ritual of expiation for Israel, in accordance with all that Moses, servant of God, had commanded.
These were the sons of Aaron: Eleazar his son, Phinehas his son, Abishua his 35 50 son, ·Bukki his son, Uzzi his son, Zerahiah his son, ·Meraioth his son, Amariah 36 51, 37 52 his son, Ahitub his son, ·Zadok his son, Ahimaaz his son. 38 53

Jos 21:4–40 Towns of the Aaronites

These were their places of settlement within their prescribed territory: 39 54
‖Jos 21:4,10–19 The sons of Aaron of the Kohathite clan—for to these the first lot fell— ·were 40 55 given Hebron in the territory of Judah with its surrounding pasture lands. ·But the 41 56 open country of the town and its dependencies were given to Caleb son of Jephunneh. ·The sons of Aaron were also given the cities of refuge, Hebron, Libnah with 42 57 its pasture lands, Jattir, Eshtemoa with its pasture lands. ·Hilen with its pasture 43 58 lands, Debir with its pasture lands, ·Ashan with its pasture lands and Beth-Shemesh with its pasture lands; ·and, from the tribe of Benjamin, Geba with its 44 59 45 60 pasture lands, Alemeth with its pasture lands and Anathoth with its pasture lands. In all, the towns distributed among their clans numbered thirteen.

Towns of the other Levites

‖Jos 21:5–8 The remaining sons of Kohath were allotted ten towns from the clans of the tribe, 46 61 that is, from the half-tribe of Manasseh. ·The sons of Gershom and their clans were 47 62 allotted thirteen towns from the tribe of Issachar, from the tribe of Asher, from the tribe of Naphtali and from the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan. ·The sons of Merari 48 63 and their clans were allotted twelve towns from the tribe of Reuben, from the tribe of Gad and from the tribe of Zebulun. ·The Israelites gave these towns with their 49 64
‖Jos 21:9 pasture lands to the Levites. ·From the tribe of the sons of Judah, from the tribe of 50 65
the sons of Simeon and from the tribe of the sons of Benjamin, they also allotted them those towns to which they gave their names.
‖Jos 21:20–39 Towns from the tribe of Ephraim were also assigned to the territory of some 51 66 clans of the sons of Kohath. ·They were given the cities of refuge: Shechem in the 52 67 highlands of Ephraim with its pasture lands, Gezer and its pasture lands, Jokmeam with its pasture lands, Beth-Horon with its pasture lands, ·Aijalon 53 68, 54 69 with its pasture lands and Gath-Rimmon with its pasture lands ·and from the half-tribe of Manasseh, Aner with its pasture lands and Bileam with its pasture lands. 55 70
So much was given to the remaining families of the sons of Kohath.
From the half-tribe of Manasseh, the sons of Gershom according to family were 56 71 given Golan in Bashan with its pasture lands and Ashtaroth with its pasture lands; from the tribe of Issachar, Kedesh with its pasture lands, Daberath with its pasture 57 72 lands, ·Ramoth with its pasture lands and Anem with its pasture lands; ·from the 58 73, 59 74 tribe of Asher: Mashal with its pasture lands, Abdon with its pasture lands. Hukok with its pasture lands and Rehob with its pasture lands; ·from the tribe of 60 75, 61 76

Naphtali, Kedesh in Galilee with its pasture lands, Hammon with its pasture lands and Kiriataim with its pasture lands.
77 62 To the remainder of the sons of Merari: from the tribe of Zebulun, Rimmon 78 63 with its pasture lands and Tabor with its pasture lands; ·in Transjordan, near Jericho, east of the Jordan, from the tribe of Reuben: Bezer in the desert with its 79 64 pasture lands, Jahzah with its pasture lands, ·Kedemoth with its pasture lands and 80 65 Mephaath with its pasture lands; ·from the tribe of Gad: Ramoth in Gilead with its 81 66 pasture lands, Mahanaim with its pasture lands, ·Heshbon with its pasture lands and Jazer with its pasture lands.

G: THE NORTHERN TRIBES [a]

Issachar

1 7 For the sons of Issachar: Tola, Puah, Jashub, Shimron: four. ‖Gn 46:13
2 Sons of Tola: Uzzi, Rephaiah, Jeriel, Jahmai, Ibsam, Shemuel, heads of ‖Nb 26:23–24 Jg 10:1
their families of Tola. In the time of David, these numbered twenty-two thousand six hundred stout fighting men, grouped according to their kinship.
3 Sons of Uzzi: Izrahiah. Sons of Izrahiah: Michael, Obadiah, Joel, Isshiah. In all 4 five chiefs, ·responsible for fighting companies amounting to thirty-six thousand troops, according to relationship and family, for they had many women and 5 children. ·They had kinsmen belonging to all the clans of Issachar, eighty-seven thousand stout fighting men, all belonging to one related group.

Benjamin

8:1seq.
‖Gn 46:21
‖Nb 26:38

6 Sons of Benjamin: Bela, Becher, Jediael: three.
7 Sons of Bela: Ezbon, Uzzi, Uzziel, Jerimoth and Iri: five, chiefs of families and warriors. Their official genealogy included twenty-two thousand and thirty-four members.
8 Sons of Becher: Zemirah, Joash, Eliezar, Elioenai, Omri, Jeremoth, Abijah, 9 Anathoth, Alemeth, all these were the sons of Becher. ·The official genealogy of Jos 21:18 the descendants of the chiefs of their families included twenty thousand two hundred warriors.
10 Sons of Jediael: Bilhan. Sons of Bilhan: Jeush, Benjamin, Ehud, Chenaanah, 11 Zethan, Tarshish, Ahishahar. ·All these sons of Jediael, became heads of families, stout fighting men, numbering seventeen thousand two hundred men fit for active service.

Naphtali

‖Gn 46:24
‖Nb 26:48–50

12 Shuppim and Huppim. Son of Ir: Hushim; his son: Aher. ‖Nb 26:39 13 Sons of Naphtali: Jahziel, Guni, Jezer, Shallum.
These were the sons of Bilhah.

Manasseh [b]

14 Sons of Manasseh: Asriel, born of his Aramaean concubine. She gave birth to 15 Machir, father of Gilead. ·Machir took a wife for Huppim and Shuppim. His sister's name was Maacah.
The name of the second son was Zelophehad. Zelophehad had daughters. Nb 26:33 16 Maacah the wife of Machir gave birth to a son whom she called Peresh. His brother was called Sheresh and his sons Ulam and Rakem.

7 a. The material in this ch. is drawn from various sources, not all of them identified. The figures relating to Issachar, Benjamin and Asher suggest the use of a census list, not however, that of Nb 1 and 26.
b. Some disorder has apparently crept into this notice, including Huppim and Shuppim who seem to have wandered from v. 12. Maacah appears as sister, v. 15, and wife, v. 16, of Machir. But the list concerns primarily Machir, settled in Gilead, that is the 'half-tribe' of Manasseh. Nb 32:39seq.

Sons of Ulam: Bedan. These were the sons of Gilead son of Machir, son of Manasseh. 17

Jg 6:11seq. His sister Hammoleketh gave birth to Ishod, Abiezer and Mahlah. 18
Shemida had sons: Ahian, Shechem, Likhi and Aniam. 19

Ephraim [c]

‖Nb 26:35 Sons of Ephraim: Shuthelah, Bered his son, Tahath his son, Eleadah his son, 20 Tahath his son, ·Zabad his son, Shuthelah his son and Ezer and Elead [d] whom the 21 men of Gath, natives of the country, killed when they came down to raid their cattle. ·Their father Ephraim mourned for a long time and his brothers came to 22 comfort him. ·He had intercourse with his wife, who conceived and gave birth to a 23 8:13 son whom he called Beriah because his house was in misfortune. [e] ·He had a 24
Jos 16:3 daughter, Sheerah, who built Upper and Lower Beth-Horon and Uzzen-Sheerah.
Rephah was his son, Shuthelah his son, [f] Tahan his son, ·Ladan his son, Ammi- 25, 26
Nb 1:10 hud his son, Elishama his son, ·Nun his son, Joshua his son. 27
Ex 33:11
They had lands and settlements in Bethel and its dependencies from Naaran on 28
the east to Gezer and its dependencies on the west, as well as Shechem [g] and its dependencies as far as Ayyah and its dependencies. ·Beth-Shean with its depen- 29 dencies, Taanach and its dependencies, Megiddo and its dependencies and Dor with its dependencies were in the hands of the sons of Manasseh. There lived the sons of Joseph son of Israel.

Asher [h]

‖Gn 46:17 Sons of Asher: Imnah, Ishvah, Ishvi, Beriah; their sister Serah. 30
‖Nb 26:44seq.
Sons of Beriah: Heber and Malchiel. He fathered Birzaith. ·Heber fathered 31, 32
Japhlet, Shomer, Hotham and their sister Shua.
Sons of Japhlet: Pasach, Bimhal and Ashvath. These were the sons of Japhlet. 33
Sons of Shomer his brother: Rohgah, Hubbah and Aram. 34
Sons of Helem his brother: Zophah, Imna, Shelesh and Amal. ·Sons of Zophah: 35, 36
Suah, Harnepher, Shual, Beri and Imrah. ·Bezer, Hod, Shamma, Shilshah, Ithran 37 and Beerah. ·Sons of Ithran: Jephunneh, Pispa, Ara. 38 Sons of Ulla: Arah, Hanniel, Rizia. 39
All these were the sons of Asher, heads of families, picked men, warriors and 40 senior princes. They were registered in fighting companies to the number of twenty-six thousand men.

H: BENJAMIN AND JERUSALEM

The line of Benjamin [a]

‖Gn 46:21 8 Benjamin was father of Bela, his first-born, Ashbel second, Ahiram [b] third, 1
‖Nb 26:38–40 Nohah fourth, Rapha fifth. ·Bela had sons: Addar, Gera father of Ehud, [c] 2, 3
Jg 3:15seq. Abishua, Naaman, Ahoah, ·Gera, Shephuphan and Huram. 4, 5

In Geba [d]

These are the sons of Ehud. They were heads of families of the inhabitants of Geba 6 and led them into exile at Manahath: ·Naaman, Ahijah and Gera. It was he who 7 led them into exile; he became the father of Uzza and Ahihud.

In Moab

Shaharaim had children in the Plains of Moab after he had dismissed his wives, 8
Hushim and Baara. ·By his new wife he had sons: Jobab, Zibia, Mesha, Malcam, 9 Jeuz, Sachia, Mirmah. These were his sons, heads of families. 10

In Ono and Lud

11, 12 By Hushim he had sons: Abitub and Elpaal. ·The sons of Elpaal were Eber, Misham and Shemed, who built Ono and Lud and its dependencies.

In Aijalon

13 Beriah and Shema were the chiefs of the families who lived at Aijalon; they routed 7:23e
the inhabitants of Gath.
14 His brother was Shashak.

In Jerusalem

15, 16 Jeremoth, ·Zebadiah, Arad, Eder, ·Michael, Ishpah, Joha were the sons of Beriah.
17, 18 Zebadiah, Meshullam, Hizki, Haber, ·Ishmerai, Izliah, Jobab were the sons of Elpaal.
19, 20, 21 Jakim, Zichri, Zabdi, ·Elienai, Zillethai, Eliel, ·Adaiah, Beraiah, Shimrath were the sons of Shimei.
22, 23, 24 Ishpan, Eber, Eliel, ·Abdon, Zichri, Hanan, ·Hananiah, Elam, Anthothijah, 25 Iphdeiah, Penuel were the sons of Shashak.
26, 27 Shamsherai, Shehariah, Athaliah, ·Jaareshaiah, Elijah, Zichri were the sons of Jeroham.
28 These were chiefs of families according to their relationship. They lived in =9:34
Jerusalem.

In Gibeon =9:35–38

29, 30 At Gibeon lived Jeiel the father of Gibeon, whose wife was called Maacah. ·His 31 first-born son was Abdon, then Zur, Kish, Baal, Ner, Nadab, ·Gedor, Ahio, 32 Zecher ·and Mikloth. Mikloth fathered Shimeah. But they, unlike their brothers, lived at Jerusalem with their brothers. [e]

Saul and his family [f]

33 Ner fathered Kish, Kish fathered Saul, Saul fathered Jonathan, Malchishua, Abi- =9:39–43
34 nadab and Eshbaal. ·Son of Jonathan: Meribbaal. Meribbaal fathered Micah. ‖1 S 14:49–51
35, 36 Sons of Micah: Pithon, Melech, Tarea, Ahaz. ·Ahaz fathered Jehoaddah, Jehoad-37 dah fathered Alemeth, Azmaveth and Zimri. Zimri fathered Moza, ·Moza fath-38 ered Binea, Raphah his son, Eleasah his son and Azel his son. ·Azel had six sons, whose names were these: Azrikam, his first-born, then [g] Ishmael, Shearíah, Obadiah, Hanan. All these were sons of Azel.
39 Sons of Eshek his brother: Ulam, his first-born, Jeush second, Eliphelet third.

c. The pedigree of Ephraim ends with Joshua, v. 27, being interrupted by the anecdote of vv. 21[b]–24.

d. To the list in Nb 26:35seq., the Chronicler adds a further list containing two Benjaminite names: Zabad (Zabdi), 8:19, and Ezer, 4:4. Ephraim and Benjamin were neighbours and some clans seem to have passed from one tribe to the other.

e. The name Beriah is supposedly connected with the words bera'ah, 'in misfortune'. Beriah was an Ephraimite clan which later joined Benjamin, see 8:13.

f. Following v. 20 and Nb 26:35; 'Resheph and Telah'.

g. Shechem is elsewhere attributed to Manasseh. vv. 28–29 treat Ephraim and Manasseh, the 'sons of Joseph' as one entity.

h. Asher's territory lay between Carmel and Phoenicia, Jos 19:24–31, but this list contains place names south of the highlands of Ephraim. This is either a memory of Asher's original homeland, or more probably a record of Asherite groups migrating south to merge with the tribes of Ephraim and Benjamin.

8 a. Another Benjaminite list, differing in style and content from the previous one, 7:6–11. Here the Benjaminite families are classified according to where they lived. Source and date of the information contained in it are alike unknown.

b. 'Ahiram' according to Nb 26:38; 'Aharah' Hebr.

c. 'father of Ehud' according to Jg 3:15; 'Abihud' Hebr.

d. Ehud was the judge who liberated Benjamin from the Moabites, Jg 3:11–30, but the notice is far from clear. The exile of the inhabitants of Geba (confused with Gibeah?) is possibly a garbled sequel to the events related in Jg 20.

e. i.e. 'lived at Jerusalem with their other brothers'. Another possible translation of the last phrase is: 'they also, near their brothers, lived at Jerusalem.' • 'Jeiel', 'Ner' and first 'Mikloth' are restored in line with 9:35seq. • On Benjaminites living in Jerusalem, see Jg 1:21; Ne 11:7–9.

f. Saul's ancestors are different from those given in 1 S 9:1. In v. 30 and 1 S 14:50–51, Ner and Kish appear as brothers, not as father and son. From v. 35 onwards, the descendants of Saul, repeated in 9:41–44, are unparalleled elsewhere in the Bible. The line is traced to the twelfth generation, probably down to the Exile.

g. 'his first-born' Gk, but one of Azel's sons has dropped out of the list; 'Becheru' Hebr.

The sons of Ulam were warriors—archers. [k] They had as many as a hundred and 40 fifty sons and grandsons.
All these belonged to the sons of Benjamin.

Jerusalem, the holy city of Israel

9 Thus, all Israel's official genealogies had been entered in the records of 1 the kings of Israel and Judah before they were deported to Babylon for their infidelity.

Uthai son of Ammihud, son of Omri, son of Imri, son of Bani, one of the sons of 4
Perez son of Judah. ·Of the descendants of Shelah: Asaiah, the first-born, 5 and his sons. ·Of the sons of Zerah: Jeuel. And six hundred and ninety of 6 their kinsmen.
And of the sons of Benjamin: Sallu son of Meshullam, son of Hodaviah, son of 7
Hassenuah; ·Ibneiah son of Jeroham; Elah son of Uzzi, son of Michri; and Me- 8 shullam son of Shephatiah, son of Reuel, son of Ibnijah. ·Their kinsmen, according 9 to their relationship, numbered nine hundred and fifty-six. All these men were chiefs of their families.
Of the priests there were Jedaiah, Jehoiarib, Jachin, ·Azariah son of Hilkiah, 10, 11 son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, the chief of the Temple of God; ·Adaiah son of Jeroham, son of Pashhur, son of Malchijah; and 12
Maasai son of Adiel, son of Jahzerah, son of Meshullam, son of Meshillemith, son of Immer. ·Their kinsmen, heads of families, numbered one thousand seven 13 hundred and sixty—men expert in the ministerial service of the Temple of God.
Of the Levites there were Shemaiah son of Hasshub, son of Azrikam, son of 14
Hashabiah of the sons of Merari, ·Bakbakar, Heresh, Galai, Mattaniah son of 15
Mica, son of Zichri, son of Asaph. ·Obadiah son of Shemaiah, son of Galal, 16 son of Jeduthun and Berechiah son of Asa, son of Elkanah, who lived in the dependencies of the Netophathites.
The gatekeepers [c] were Shallum, Akkub, Talmon, Ahiman and their kinsmen. 17 Shallum was the chief ·and is still gatekeeper of the King's Gate to the east. They 18 were the gatekeepers of the camps of the sons of Levi.
Shallum son of Kore, son of Ebiasaph, son of Korah, and his brothers belonging 19 to his family, the Korahites, were also in charge of the ministerial service as doorkeepers of the Tent, as their ancestors had been keepers of the entrance to the camp of Yahweh. [d] ·Formerly, Phinehas son of Eleazar had been in charge of 20 them—Yahweh be with him! ·Zechariah son of Meshelemiah was gatekeeper at 21 the door of the Tent of Meeting. ·All the keepers of the gate at the thresholds were 22 picked men; there were two hundred and twelve of them. They were grouped by relationship in their various villages. These were confirmed in office by David and Samuel the seer because of their dependability. ·They and their sons continued in 23 charge as guards of the gates of the Temple of Yahweh, the house of the Tent.
The gatekeepers were assigned to the four sides, east, west, north and south, 24 and their brothers in their villages were required to assist them from time to time 25 for a week, ·since the four head gatekeepers were permanently on duty. 26
They were Levites and were in charge of the accommodation and supplies of the Temple of God. ·They spent the night in the precincts of the Temple of God, their 27 duties being to guard it and open it every morning. ·Some of them were in charge 28 of the implements of worship, having to count them when they took them out and when they put them away. ·Others of them were put in charge of the implements, 29 of all the objects in the sanctuary and of the flour, the wine, the oil, the incense and the perfume. ·Members of the priestly caste, however, mixed the ointment for the 30 perfume.
One of the Levites, Mattithiah—he was the first-born of Shallum the Korahite— 31

32 had regular charge of baking operations. •Some of their kinsmen the Kohathites Lv 2:4-7 were responsible for the loaves to be set out in rows Sabbath by Sabbath.
33 In addition, there were the singers,[e] the heads of the levitical families, who were accommodated in the Temple, free of other responsibilities because they were on duty day and night.
34 Such were the chiefs of the levitical families, according to their relationship; =8:28
these lived in Jerusalem.

I: SAUL, DAVID'S PREDECESSOR

The ancestors of Saul

35, 36 Jeiel father of Gibeon lived at Gibeon and his wife was called Maacah. •His first- =8:29-38
37 born son was Abdon, then Zur, Kish, Baal, Ner, Nadab, •Gedor, Ahio, Zechariah 38 and Mikloth. •Mikloth fathered Shimeam. But they, unlike their brothers, lived at Jerusalem with their brothers.[f]
39 Ner fathered Kish, Kish fathered Saul, Saul fathered Jonathan, Malchishua, 40 Abinadab and Eshbaal. •Son of Jonathan: Meribbaal. Meribbaal fathered Micah.
41, 42 Sons of Micah: Pithon, Melech, Tahrea. •Ahaz fathered Jarah, Jarah fathered
43 Alemeth, Azmaveth and Zimri; Zimri fathered Moza, •Moza fathered Binea, 44 Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son and Azel his son. •Azel had six sons; their names were these: Azrikam his first-born, Ishmael, Sheariah, Obadiah, Hanan. These were the sons of Azel.

Death of Saul[a]

‖1 S 31:1-13

1 10 The Philistines gave battle to Israel and the Israelites, fleeing from the 2 Philistines, fell and were slaughtered on Mount Gilboa. •The Philistines bore down on Saul and his sons, and they killed Jonathan, Abinadab and Malchi-3 shua, Saul's sons. •The fighting grew fiercer round Saul; the archers came upon 4 him, and he was wounded by the archers. •Saul then said to his armour-bearer, 'Draw your sword and run me through with it. I do not want these uncircumcised men to come and make fun of me.' But his armour-bearer was very much afraid 5 and would not do it. So Saul took his own sword and fell on it. •His armour-bearer,
6 seeing that Saul was dead, fell on his sword too and died with him. •Thus died Saul, 7 his three sons and his entire household together. •When all the Israelites who were in the valley saw that the Israelites had been routed and that Saul and his sons were dead, they abandoned their towns and fled. The Philistines then came and occupied them.
8 When the Philistines came on the following day to strip the dead, they found 9 Saul and his sons lying on Mount Gilboa. •They stripped him and, taking his head and his armour, had these carried round the territory of the Philistines to proclaim

h. A Benjaminite speciality, 12:2; 2 S 1:22; 2 Ch 14:7, also attributed to the Ephraimites, Ps 78:9.

9 a. This list, which v. 1 dates from before the Exile, in fact depends on the list of exiles returning to Jerusalem under Nehemiah, Ne 11; with certain differences which perhaps reflect the situation at an even later date. The whole chapter seems to be an addition.

b. Ephraim and Manasseh stand for the survivors of the Northern Kingdom. In this book Jerusalem, the holy city, is the city of all the tribes. But in the enumeration to follow, only Benjamin, Judah and Levi feature.

c. Of the Temple personnel, most space is devoted to the gatekeepers, vv. 17–26: their functions are said to date from the desert shrine, vv. 19–21, and to have continued under Samuel and David at 'the house of the Tent', v. 23; they are praised for their dependability, v. 22; they are all descended from Korah, who was descended from Levi, v. 19. In point of fact, the gatekeepers were assimilated to the Levites only at a period considerably later than the return from exile, see Ezr 2:42; Ne 7:45 and the list in Ne 11, where they still figure as a separate (and inferior) group. Once upgraded to levitical status, they aspire to parity of rank with the singers, see vv. 17–18,27 and 2 Ch 20:19—twelve psalms are attributed to the sons of Korah.

d. The Chronicler assimilates Jerusalem to the Israelite camp described in the 'Priestly' texts.

e. One would expect a list of singers, as in the case of the other groups.

f. see 8:32e.

10 a. As preface to the story of David, which takes up the rest of the first book, the Chronicler recalls the tragic end of the first King of Israel, rejected by God.

the good news to their idols and their people. •They placed his armour in the 10 temple of their gods and nailed his head up in the temple of Dagon.

When all the inhabitants of Jabesh in Gilead [b] heard everything that the Philis- 11
tines had done to Saul, •the warriors all set out and took the bodies of Saul and his 12 sons away; they brought them to Jabesh and buried their bones under the tamarisk of Jabesh and fasted for seven days.

Thus died Saul in the infidelity of which he had been guilty towards Yahweh, in 13 that he had not obeyed the word of Yahweh and because he had consulted a necromancer for guidance. •He had not consulted Yahweh, who therefore caused 14 his death and transferred the monarchy to David son of Jesse. [c]

II: DAVID, FOUNDER OF THE TEMPLE LITURGY

A: DAVID THE KING

‖2 S 5:1–3 David is anointed as king of Israel [a]

11 All Israel then rallied to David at Hebron and said, 'Look, we are your own 1 flesh and bone. •In days past when Saul was king, it was you who led Israel 2 on its campaigns, and Yahweh your God promised you, "You are to shepherd my people Israel and be leader of my people Israel." ' •So all the elders of Israel came 3 to the king at Hebron, and David made a pact with them in Yahweh's presence at 1 S 16:1–13 Hebron, and they anointed David as king of Israel, in accordance with the word of Yahweh through Samuel.

‖2 S 5:6–10 The capture of Jerusalem

Jg 19:10d David and all Israel [b] then marched on Jerusalem (that is to say, Jebus); the 4 inhabitants of the territory were the Jebusites. •The inhabitants of Jebus said to 5 David, 'You will not get in here.' But David captured the citadel of Zion, that is, the City of David. •David said, 'The first man to kill a Jebusite will be made army 6 commander and chief.' Joab son of Zeruiah was the first man to go up, and was made commander of the army. •David went to live in the citadel, and that is how it 7 came to be called the City of David. •He then built a wall round the city, all round, 8 beginning from the Millo, and Joab restored the rest of the city. [c] •Thus David grew 9 stronger and stronger, for Yahweh Sabaoth was with him.

David's champions

These are David's principal champions who joined forces with him in his kingdom, 10 with all Israel, to make him king in accordance with the word of Yahweh concern-‖2 S 23:8–39 ing Israel. •This is the roll of David's champions: Jashobeam son of Hachmoni, 11 head of the Three; [d] he it was who brandished his spear over three hundred men whom he had killed at one time.

Next, there was Eleazar son of Dodo, the Ahohite, one of the three champions. 12
He was with David at Pas-Dammim when the Philistines mustered for battle 13 there. There was a field full of barley there; and the people fled from the Philistines.
And they took their stand in the middle of the field, held it and cut down the 14
Philistines; and Yahweh brought about a great victory.

Three members of the Thirty went down to David at the rock near the Cave of 15 Adullam while a company of Philistines was encamped in the Valley of the Rephaim. •David was then in the stronghold and there was a Philistine garrison in 16
Bethlehem. •Longingly, David said, 'If only someone would fetch me a drink of 17 water from the well that stands by the gate at Bethlehem!' •At this the three 18 champions, forcing their way through the Philistine camp, drew water from the well that stands by the gate of Bethlehem and, bringing it away, presented it to David. David, however, would not drink any of it, but poured it out as a libation to 19 Yahweh. ·'God preserve me', he said, 'from doing such a thing! Am I to drink these men's blood? For at the risk of their lives they brought it.' And so he would not drink. Such were the deeds of the three champions.

20 Abishai, brother of Joab, was leader of the Thirty.[e] He it was who brandished his spear over three hundred men whom he had killed, winning himself a name 21 among the Thirty. ·He was a most illustrious member of the Thirty and became their captain, but he was not equal to the Three.[f] 22 Benaiah son of Jehoiada from Kabzeel was the hero of many exploits; he it was who slaughtered two formidable Moabites and, one snowy day, climbed down and 23 slaughtered the lion in the storage-well. ·He also slaughtered an Egyptian, a man who was seven and a half feet tall. The Egyptian was armed with a spear in his hand like a weaver's beam, but he took him on with a staff, tore the spear from the 24 Egyptian's hand and killed the man with it. ·Such were the exploits of Benaiah son 25 of Jehoiada, winning him a name among the thirty champions. ·He was a most illustrious member of the Thirty, but he was not equal to the Three. David put him in command of his bodyguard.
26 The military champions were:[g]

Asahel brother of Joab; Elhanan son of Dodo, of Bethlehem;
27 Shammoth of Haror;
Helez the Pelonite;
28 Ira son of Ikkesh, of Tekoa;
Abiezer of Anathoth;
29 Sibbecai of Hushah;
Ilai of Ahoh;
30 Maharai of Netophah;
Heled son of Baanah, of Netophah.
31 Ithai son of Ribai, of Gibeah in Benjamin.
Benaiah of Pirathon;
32 Hurai of the Torrents of Gaash;
Abiel of Beth-ha-Arabah;
33 Azmaveth of Bahurim;
Eliahba of Shaalbon;
34 the sons of Hashem of Gizon;
Jonathan son of Shagee, of Harar;
35 Ahiam son of Sachar, of Harar; Eliphelet son of Ur;
36 Hepher of Mecherah;
Ahijah the Pelonite;
37 Hezro of Carmel;
Naarai son of Ezbai;
38 Joel brother of Nathan;
Mibhar son of Hagri;
39 Zelek the Ammonite;
Naharai of Beeroth, armour-bearer to Joab son of Zeruiah;
40 Ira of Jattir;
Gareb of Jattir;

b. 'the inhabitants of Jabesh in Gilead', conj. following 1 S 31:11; 'all Jabesh in Gilead' Hebr.

c. The last two verses express the Chronicler's judgement on the reign of Saul, about which he recalls only the unfavourable elements.

11 a. In fact, the rallying of the northern tribes to David took place some years after Saul's death, but the Chronicler sees David primarily as the man who united the tribes around Yahweh.

b. According to 2 S 5:6, Jerusalem was captured by David and his little private army on their own.

c. David dealt with the fortifications, while Joab had the less urgent task of making the city habitable.

d. 'Three' Gk-Luc.; 'Thirty' Hebr., but see v. 20.

e. 'Thirty' Syr., Gk MSS; 'Three' Hebr., as in v. 24, but see vv. 21 and 25.

f. A gloss adds: 'among the two'.

g. As far as Uriah, v. 41[a], the list corresponds with that of 2 S 23:24–39. The sixteen additional heroes, vv. 41[b]–47, are for the most part natives of Transjordan, from a list available to the Chronicler or a later editor.

Uriah the Hittite; 41
Zabad son of Ahlai;
Adina son of Shiza the Reubenite, chief of the Reubenites and 42 commander of the Thirty;
Hanan son of Maacah; 43
Joshaphat the Mithnite;
Uzzia of Ashteroth; 44
Shama and Jeiel sons of Hotham of Aroer;
Jediael son of Shimri, and Joha his brother, the Tizite; 45
Eliel the Mahavite; 46
Jeribai and Joshaviah sons of Elnaam; Ithmah the Moabite;
Eliel, Obed, and Jaasiel of Zobah. 47

Early defections to David [a]

12 These are the men who rallied to David at Ziklag while he was still being 1 kept away from Saul son of Kish; they were among the champions, the 8:40h warriors. ·They were equipped with bows and could sling stones or shoot arrows 2 from the bow with either right hand or left.

Of Saul's fellow-tribesmen from Benjamin: ·Ahiezer the leader, and Joash, sons 3 of Hassemar of Gibeah, Jeziel and Peleth, sons of Azmaveth, Berachah and Jehu of Anathoth, ·Ishmaiah of Gibeon, one of the champions in the Thirty and 4 commander of the Thirty, ·Jeremiah, Jahaziel, Johanan and Jozabed of Gederoth, 5 Eluzai, Jerimoth, Bealiah, Shemariah, Shephatiah of Hariph, ·Elkanah, Isshiah, 6, 7 Azarel, Joezer and Jashobeam the Korahites, ·Joelah, Zebadiah, sons of Jeroham 8 of Gedor.

From the Gadites, some good, capable fighting men defected and came to David 9 8 Dt 33:20 at the stronghold in the desert—all skilled with shield and spear, fierce as lions and nimble as mountain gazelles. ·Ezer was the leader, Obadiah second, Eliab third, 10 9 Mishmannah fourth, Jeremiah fifth, ·Attai sixth, Eliel seventh, ·Johanan eighth, 11–13 10–12
Elzabad ninth, ·Jeremiah tenth, Machbannai eleventh. ·These Gadites were the 14, 15 13, 14 leaders of the troops, the least of them a match for a hundred men and the greatest a match for a thousand. ·These were the men who once crossed the Jordan in the 16 15 first month, when it had overflowed its banks and had driven out all the lowlanders to east and west.

Some of the Benjaminites and Judahites also joined David at the stronghold. 17 16
When David came forward to meet them, he responded to them by saying, 'If you 18 17 have come to me with peaceful intent to help me, you will find me a good friend.
But if it is to betray me to my enemies, seeing that I have done nothing wrong, may the God of our ancestors take note and condemn you.'

Then the Spirit invested Amasai the leader of the Thirty: 19 18

'We are your men, David; with you, son of Jesse!
Peace be with you, peace be with you; peace be with those who help you!
For your God has helped you!'

And David accepted them, including them among his more senior officers.

Some Manassehites also defected to David as he was setting out with the 20 19
Philistines to fight Saul. But he did not help the Philistines because, after consul-
1 S 29 tation, their chiefs sent him away, saying, 'He will defect to his master Saul and it will cost us our heads!' ·He was on his way to Ziklag when these Manassehites 21 20 deserted to him: Adnah, Jozabad, Jediael, Michael, Jozabad, Elihu, Zillethai, chiefs of thousands in Manasseh. ·They helped David and his band, since they 22 21 were all men of standing and became officers in the army.

Indeed reinforcements reached David day after day, so that his camp grew into 23 22
a camp of prodigious size. [b]

The warriors who assured David's kingship

23 24 These are the numbers of fully armed men who joined David at Hebron to transfer Saul's kingdom to him in accordance with the order of Yahweh:
24 25 Judahites carrying shield and spear: six thousand eight hundred fully armed warriors;
25 26 Simeonites; seven thousand one hundred champions valiant in war;
27, 28 / 26, 27 Levites: four thousand six hundred, •in addition to Jehoiada,[c] in command of 28 29 the Aaronites, with three thousand seven hundred of these, •Zadok, a young and valiant champion, and twenty-two commanders of his family; 29 30 Benjaminites: three thousand kinsmen of Saul, most of them hitherto in the service of the House of Saul; 30 31 Ephraimites: twenty thousand eight hundred valiant champions, men famous in their families;
31 32 of the half-tribe of Manasseh: eighteen thousand men assigned by name to go and proclaim David king; 32 33 Issacharites, sound judges of the times when Israel should take action, and the way to do it: two hundred chiefs and all their kinsmen under their command; 33 34 Zebulunites: fifty thousand men fit for service, marshalled for battle, with warlike weapons of every kind, staunch-hearted auxiliaries; 34 35 Naphtalites: a thousand commanders, and with them thirty-seven thousand men armed with shield and spear;
35 36 Danites: twenty-eight thousand six hundred men marshalled for battle;
36 37 Asherites: forty thousand men fit for service, marshalled for battle; 37 38 from Transjordan: a hundred and twenty thousand men of Reuben, Gad and the half-tribe of Manasseh, with warlike weapons of every kind.
38 39 All these warriors in battle array came to David at Hebron with the firm determination of making David king of all Israel; and the rest of Israel, too, was of 39 40 one mind in wanting to make David king. •For three days they stayed there with David, eating and drinking, their fellow-tribesmen having made preparations for 40 41 them; •their neighbours too, from as far away as Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali, came bringing food on donkeys, camels, mules and oxen—supplies of flour, fig cakes, bunches of raisins, wine, oil, quantities of oxen and sheep—for there was joy in Israel.

The ark brought back from Kiriath-Jearim[a]

1 13 David conferred with the commanders of the thousands and the hundreds,
2 in fact with all the leaders. •Then, to the whole assembly of Israel, David said, 'If this has your approval, and if Yahweh our God wills it so, we shall send messengers to the rest of our brothers throughout the territories of Israel, and also to the priests and Levites in their towns and pasture lands, bidding them join us.
3 And then we will go and recover the ark of our God, for in the days of Saul we neglected to do it.'
4 The whole assembly agreed to this, because all the people thought that this was 5 the right thing to do. •So David summoned all Israel from the Shihor of Egypt to Jg 20:1a
6 the Pass of Hamath, to bring the ark of God from Kiriath-Jearim. •David and all ||2 S 6:2–11

12 a. The ch. falls into two parts: David's supporters before he came to power, vv. 1–23, and the companies from the twelve tribes who made him king of all Israel, vv. 24–41. The ch. has no parallel in Samuel. The first part probably relies on an early source. If the Chronicler was himself responsible for the second part—which may, however, be an addition—his intention was to show that David was brought to power by the entire nation, see 11:1, and not by a faction.

b. lit. 'a camp of the gods', a Hebr. form of the superlative.

c. The name Jehoiada has been substituted for that of Abiathar, which ought to appear here, see 2 S 8:17. Abiathar was, however, stripped of office for disloyalty by Solomon, 1 K 2:26–27. A Jehoiada was chief priest in Jerusalem, but very much later, see 2 K 11–12.

13 a. David's first action after taking Jerusalem, 11:4–9, was to recover the ark from Kiriath-Jearim. The Chronicler places this section before the victory over the Philistines, 14:8–16, which the Book of Samuel places after the return of the ark, and which historically should precede the capture of Jerusalem. The Chronicler's interest in the reign of David is centred on what concerns the sanctuary. Here he depends closely on the text of 2 S, but he adds the introduction, vv. 1–3, where once again the whole assembly of Israel features.

Israel then went up to Baalah, to Kiriath-Jearim in Judah, from there to bring up the ark of God, which bears the title 'Yahweh enthroned on the winged creatures'. They transported the ark of God out of Abinadab's house on a new cart. Uzzah 7 and Ahio drove the cart. ·David and all Israel danced before God with all their 8 might, singing to the accompaniment of harps, lyres, tambourines, cymbals and trumpets. ·When they came to the threshing-floor of the Javelin, Uzzah reached 9 out his hand to steady the ark, as the oxen were making it tilt. ·This roused 10
Yahweh's anger against Uzzah, and he struck him down because he had laid his hand on the Ark, and there he died before God. ·David resented Yahweh's having 11 broken out against Uzzah, and the place was given the name Perez-Uzzah, which it still has today.

That day David felt afraid of God. 'How can I bring the ark of God to be with 12 me?' he said. ·So David did not take the ark with him into the City of David but 13 had it put in the house of Obed-Edom of Gath. ·The ark of God remained with 14 Obed-Edom, in his house, for three months, and Yahweh blessed Obed-Edom's family and everything that belonged to him.

David in Jerusalem, his palace, his children [a]

‖2 S 5:11–16 14 Hiram king of Tyre sent envoys to David, with cedar wood, stone-cutters 1 and carpenters, to build him a palace. ·David then knew that Yahweh had 2 confirmed him as king of Israel and, for the sake of his people, had extended his sovereignty.

=3:5–8 David took more wives in Jerusalem and fathered more sons and daughters. 3
These are the names of the children born to him in Jerusalem: Shammua, 4
Shobab, Nathan, Solomon, ·Ibhar, Elishua, Elpelet, ·Nogah, Nepheg, Japhia, 5, 6
Elishama, Beeliada, Eliphelet. 7

‖2 S 5:17–25 Victories over the Philistines

When the Philistines heard that David had been anointed as king of all Israel, they 8 all invaded to seek him out. On hearing this, David marched out towards them. When the Philistines arrived, they deployed in the Valley of the Rephaim. 9 David consulted God and asked, 'Shall I attack the Philistines? Will you deliver 10 them into my power?' Yahweh replied to him, 'Attack! I shall deliver them into your power.' ·Accordingly, they went up to Baal-Perazim and there David de- 11 feated them. David said, 'Through me God has made a breach in my enemies, as though they had been breached by a flood.' This is why the place was given the name Baal-Perazim. ·They had left their gods behind there, and David ordered 12 them to be burnt.

Again the Philistines deployed in the valley. ·David again consulted God, and 13, 14
God replied, 'Do not attack them from the front; go round and engage them opposite the balsam trees. ·When you hear the sound of footsteps in the tops of the 15
balsam trees, launch your attack, for that will be God going out ahead of you to defeat the Philistine army.' ·David did as God had ordered, and they beat the 16 Philistine army from Gibeon to Gezer.

David's fame then spread to every country, and Yahweh made him feared by 17 every nation.

B: THE ARK IN THE CITADEL OF DAVID

Preparations for moving the ark [a]

Nb 1:50;3:5 seq.;4:7–9 Dt 31:25 15 After he had put up buildings for himself in the City of David, he prepared 1 a place for the ark of God and pitched a tent for it. ·David then said, 'No 2
one but the Levites should carry the ark of God, since Yahweh has chosen them to carry the ark of Yahweh and to minister to him for ever.' [b]

David then summoned all Israel to Jerusalem, to move the ark of Yahweh to the place which he had prepared for it. ·David also called the sons of Aaron and the Levites together: ·of the sons of Kohath: Uriel the chief and his hundred and twenty kinsmen; ·of the sons of Merari: Asaiah the chief and his two hundred and twenty kinsmen; ·of the sons of Gershom: Joel the chief and his hundred and thirty kinsmen; ·of the sons of Elizaphan: Shemaiah the chief and his two 9, 10 hundred kinsmen; ·of the sons of Hebron: Eliel the chief and eighty kinsmen; ·of the sons of Uzziel: Amminadab the chief and his hundred and twelve kinsmen.
11 David then sent for the priests Zadok and Abiathar, and the Levites Uriel, 12 Asaiah, Joel, Shemaiah, Eliel and Amminadab. ·To them he said, 'You are the heads of the levitical families. Sanctify yourselves, you and your kinsmen, so that you can move the ark of Yahweh, God of Israel, to the place which I have prepared 13 for it. ·Because you were not there the first time, Yahweh our God broke out at 14 us [c] because we did not handle it properly.' ·So the priests and the Levites sanctified 15 themselves, to move the ark of Yahweh, God of Israel, ·and the Levites carried Nb 7:9
the ark of God with the shafts on their shoulders, as Moses had ordered in accordance with the word of Yahweh.
16 David also told the heads of the Levites to appoint their kinsmen as singers with the accompaniment of musical instruments, lyres, harps, and cymbals to play 17 joyfully. ·The Levites then appointed Heman son of Joel, Asaph son of Berechiah, one of his brothers, Ethan son of Kushaiah, one of their Merarite kinsmen; 18 and with them their kinsmen of the second rank: Zechariah, Uzziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, Mikneiah, 19 and Obed-Edom and Jehiel the gatekeepers. ·The singers, Heman, Asaph and 20 Ethan, were to play the bronze cymbals. ·Zechariah, Uzziel, Shemiramoth, Jehiel, 21 Unni, Eliab, Maaseiah and Benaiah were to play the lyre. ·Mattithiah, Eliphelehu, Mikneiah, Obed-Edom, Jehiel and Azaziah, giving the beat, were to play the 22 harp. [d] ·Chenaniah, the levitical director of transport was in charge of the transport, 23, 24 being skilful at it. ·Berechiah and Elkanah were gatekeepers for the ark. ·The priests Shebaniah, Joshaphat, Nethanel, Amasai, Zechariah, Benaiah and Eliezer blew trumpets before the ark of God, while Obed-Edom and Jehiah were also gatekeepers for the ark.

The ark is brought to Jerusalem ‖2 S 6:12–19

25 David, the elders of Israel and the commanders of the thousands accordingly went, amid great rejoicing, to bring the ark of the covenant of Yahweh up from Obed-26 Edom's house. ·and since God was helping the Levites who carried the ark of the 27 covenant of Yahweh, they sacrificed seven bulls and seven rams. ·David, all the Levites who carried the ark, the singers and Chenaniah, director of transport, [e] 28 wore cloaks of fine linen. David also wore a linen ephod. ·Thus, with war-cries and the sounding of the horn, the trumpets and the cymbals, and the music of lyres and 29 harps, all Israel transported the ark of the covenant of Yahweh. ·Now, as the ark of the covenant of Yahweh entered the City of David, Michal daughter of Saul was watching from the window and, when she saw King David dancing and playing, the sight of him filled her with contempt.

14 a. The Chronicler uses the three-month interval when the ark was in the house of Obed-Edom, 13:14, to fit in material about David's new palace, his family, his defeat of the Philistines and his preparations for the reception of the ark, 15:1–3.

15 a. Before continuing the narrative of 2 S at 1 Ch 15:25, the original book of Ch seems to have contained only vv. 1–3,11–15: the erection of the tent for the ark, and the restatement of the levitical laws, breach of which caused the tragic incident at Perez-Uzzah, 13:9seq. Additions have been made since: a list of priests and Levites, vv. 4–10; and a description of the orchestra accompanying the ark, vv. 16–24.

b. The Chronicler is about to define the part played in the ceremony by priests and Levites, after the fashion of the 'Priestly' texts.

c. The absence of the Levites accounts for the disaster, to the author's way of thinking, 13:10seq; see 2 S 6:8g.

d. Translation doubtful. The other names of instruments recur in the Ps.

e. After 'transport' Hebr. adds 'singers' by dittography.

16 They brought the ark of God in and put it inside the tent which David had 1 erected for it, and brought burnt offerings and made communion sacrifices in God's presence. ·And when David had finished making burnt offerings and 2 communion sacrifices, he blessed the people in the name of Yahweh. ·To all the 3 Israelites, both men and women, to each, he then distributed a loaf of bread, a portion of meat and a raisin cake.

The service of the Levites before the ark [a]

He appointed some of the Levites as ministers before the ark of Yahweh, to extol, 4 glorify and praise Yahweh, God of Israel; ·first Asaph, second Zechariah, then 5 Uzziel, [b] Shemiramoth, Jehiel, Mattithiah, Eliab, Benaiah, Obed-Edom and Jeiel, who played the lyre and harp, while Asaph played the cymbals. ·The priests 6 Benaiah and Jahaziel continually blew the trumpet before the ark of the covenant of God. ·On that day, David was the first to assign to Asaph and his kinsmen the 7 giving of thanks to Yahweh: [c]

‖Ps 105:1–15

Give thanks to Yahweh, call his name aloud, 8 proclaim his deeds to the peoples.
Chant to him, play to him, 9
sing about all his wonders!

Take pride in his holy name, 10
let your heart rejoice, you seekers of Yahweh!
Seek out Yahweh, seek his strength, 11 continually seek out his presence!

Remember what wonders he has done, 12
what miracles, what rulings he has given, you offspring of Israel his servant, 13
you children of Jacob his chosen one!

For he is Yahweh our God, 14
his authority extends throughout the world.

For ever remember his covenant, 15
the pact imposed for a thousand generations,
which he concluded with Abraham, 16
which was sworn by him to Isaac,

since he confirmed it as a law for Jacob, 17
as an eternal covenant for Israel, saying, 'I will give you the country; 18
Canaan is the measure of your inheritance,

'though you are few in number, 19
only a few strangers there!'

As they wandered from nation to nation, 20
from this kingdom to that people, he would not let anyone oppress them 21
and on their account he admonished kings,
'You are not to touch my anointed ones, 22
my prophets are not to be harmed!'

‖Ps 96

Sing to Yahweh, all the earth, 23
day after day proclaim his salvation!
Declare his glory among the nations, 24
his marvels to every people!

Great is Yahweh, worthy of all praise, 25

more awesome than any of the gods.
26 Nothingness, all the gods of the nations.

Yahweh it was who made the heavens,
27 in his presence are splendour and majesty,
in his sanctuary strength and joy.

28 Give Yahweh his due, families of peoples, give Yahweh his due of glory and power,
29 give Yahweh the glory due to his name!

Bring an offering and enter his courts,
bow down to Yahweh in his sacred court,
30 tremble before him, all the earth!

The world is firm, it cannot be moved,
31 let the heavens rejoice and earth be glad!
Say among the nations, 'Yahweh is king!'
32 Let the sea thunder and all it holds,
the countryside exult and everything that is in it, 33 and all the trees of the forest cry out for joy
at Yahweh's approach, for he is coming to judge the earth.

34 Give thanks to Yahweh, for he is good, ‖Ps 106:1,47–48 for his faithful love lasts for ever!

35 Say, 'Save us, God of our salvation, gather us together and free us from the nations,
so that we may give thanks to your holy name—
to be extolled whenever you are praised!'

36 Blessed be Yahweh, God of Israel,
from everlasting to everlasting!

To which all the people said, 'Amen, Alleluia!'

37 There before the ark of the covenant of Yahweh David left Asaph and his kinsmen to maintain a permanent ministry before the ark as each day's ritual 38 required, ·and also Obed-Edom with his sixty-eight kinsmen. Obed-Edom son of Jeduthun, and Hosah [d] were gatekeepers.
39 Zadok the priest and the priests, his kinsmen, he left before the dwelling of 40 Yahweh on the high place at Gibeon [e] ·to bring burnt offerings to Yahweh unfailingly, morning and evening, on the altar of burnt offering, and to carry out all that 41 is written in the Law of Yahweh laid down for Israel. ·With them were Heman and Jeduthun and the rest of those who were chosen and assigned by name to give 42 thanks to Yahweh, 'for his faithful love lasts for ever'. ·With them were Heman and Jeduthun to play trumpets and cymbals, as well as instruments for accompanying sacred song. The sons of Jeduthun were in charge of the gates.

16 a. The Chronicler logically dates the institution of the sung liturgy to the installation of the ark in its tent at Jerusalem, v. 7. According to him, the entire Temple liturgy could be traced back to David and conformed even in those remote times to the prescriptions of the Priestly Code. But see 15:16–24 where the addition dates the sung liturgy to even earlier.

b. 'Uzziel', see 15:18; 'Jeiel' Hebr.

c. The psalmody consists of Ps 105:1–15, a slightly disordered and shortened version of 96, and the antiphon and concluding lines of 106: with minor variants. For commentary, see Psalms.

d. Ps 39, 62 and 77 are ascribed to Jeduthun. Here he appears as father of Obed-Edom, v. 38, and hence of the gatekeepers, v. 42. Some Levites at the time of Nehemiah were descended from him, Ne 11:17. For Hosah, see 26:10.

e. The sanctuary at Gibeon had probably replaced the one at Shiloh after the Philistines captured the ark. Under Solomon, it was the most important of the high places, 1 K 3:4–15. The Chronicler takes historical account of this, justifying it on the grounds that the 'Dwelling', i.e. the Desert Tent, was there. see 21:29; 2 Ch 1:3. Hence he divides the cultic personnel between the sanctuary of the Dwelling and the new sanctuary of the ark in Jerusalem.

Then all the people went back to their homes, and David went back to bless his household. 43

Nathan's prophecy [a]

17 It happened, once David had settled into his palace, that David said to the prophet Nathan, 'Here am I living in a cedar-wood palace, while the ark of the covenant of Yahweh is under awnings.' ·Nathan said to David, 'Do whatever you have in mind, for God is with you.' 1 2

But that very night the word of God came to Nathan, as follows: 3

'Go and tell my servant David, "Yahweh says this: You must not build a temple for me to live in. ·I have never lived in a house from the day when I brought Israel out until today, but have kept travelling from tent to tent and from shelter to shelter. ·In all my travels with all Israel, did I say to any of the judges of Israel, whom I had commanded to shepherd my people: Why do you not build me a cedar-wood temple? ·This is what you must say to my servant David: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: I took you from the pasture, from following the sheep, to be leader of my people Israel. ·I have been with you wherever you went; I have got rid of all your enemies for you. I am going to make your fame like that of the greatest men on earth. ·I am going to provide a place for my people Israel; I shall plant them there and there they will live and never be disturbed again; nor will they be oppressed by the wicked as they were in former times ·ever since I instituted judges to govern my people Israel; I shall subdue all your enemies. Yahweh moreover tells you that he will build you a dynasty. [b] ·And when your days are over and you have gone to join your ancestors, I shall appoint your heir—who will be one of your sons—to succeed you, and I shall make his sovereignty secure. He will build a temple for me and I shall make his throne secure for ever. ·I shall be his father and he will be my son, and I shall not withdraw my favour from him, as I withdrew it from your predecessor. ·I shall set him over my temple and kingdom for ever and his throne will be for ever secure." ' 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12, 13 14

Nathan related all these words and this whole revelation to David. 15

‖2 S 7:18–29

David's prayer

King David then went in, sat down in Yahweh's presence and said: 16

'Who am I, Yahweh God, and what is my lineage, that you have led me as far as this? ·Yet, to you, O God, this seemed too little, and now you extend your promises for your servant's family into the distant future, making me see as it were a whole succession of men, and it is Yahweh God himself who raises it up. ·What more can David reply to you for the honour you have given to your servant? You yourself have singled out your servant. ·For your servant, and since you were so inclined, you have had the generosity to reveal all this greatness to come. Yahweh, there is no one like you, no God but you alone, as everything that we have heard confirms. ·Is there another people on earth like your people Israel, whom a god has proceeded to redeem, to make them his people and to make them famous and do for them great and terrible deeds, by driving out nations before your people, whom you redeemed from Egypt? [c]—·for you made your people Israel your own people for ever and you, Yahweh, became their God. 17 18 19 20 21 22

'Now, Yahweh, may the promise which you have made for your servant and as regards his family hold good for ever, and do as you have said. ·May it hold good, so your name will be exalted for ever and people will say, "Israel's God is Yahweh Sabaoth; he is God for Israel." Your servant David's dynasty will be secure before you ·since you, my God, have disclosed to your servant that you are going to build him a dynasty. Hence, your servant has ventured to offer this prayer to you. ·Yes, Yahweh, you are God indeed, and you have made this generous promise to your servant. ·What is more, you have deigned to bless your servant's dynasty, so that it may remain for ever before you; and since you, Yahweh, have blessed it, blessed will it be for ever.' 23 24 25 26 27

18 After this David defeated the Philistines and subdued them. From the grip of the Philistines he wrested Gath and its dependencies. •He also defeated the Moabites; the Moabites became David's subjects and paid him tribute.
David also defeated Hadadezer king of Zobah, which lies in the direction of Hamath, when the latter mounted an expedition to assert his rule on the River Euphrates. •David captured one thousand chariots, seven thousand charioteers and twenty thousand foot soldiers from him; David hamstrung all the chariot teams, keeping only a hundred of them. •The Aramaeans of Damascus came to the help of Hadadezer king of Zobah, but David killed twenty-two thousand of the Aramaeans. •David then imposed governors in Aram of Damascus, and the Aramaeans became David's subjects and paid him tribute. Wherever David went, Yahweh gave him victory. •David took the golden shields carried by Hadadezer's guards and brought them to Jerusalem. •From Tibhath and from Cun, towns belonging to Hadadezer, David captured a great quantity of bronze, with which 22:3
Solomon made the bronze Sea, the pillars and the bronze implements.
When Tou king of Hamath heard that David had defeated the entire army of Hadadezer king of Zobah, •he sent his son Hadoram to King David to greet him and to congratulate him on having made war on Hadadezer and on having defeated him, since Hadadezer was at war with Tou. He also sent all sorts of objects made of gold, silver and bronze, •which King David also consecrated to Yahweh, as well as the silver and gold which he had levied from all the nations, from Edom, Moab, the Ammonites, the Philistines and Amalek.
Abishai son of Zeruiah defeated the Edomites in the Valley of Salt—eighteen thousand of them. •He stationed garrisons in Edom, and all the Edomites became David's subjects. Wherever David went, Yahweh gave him victory.

The administration of the kingdom

David ruled over all Israel, administering law and justice to all his people. •Joab ‖2 S 8:15–18 son of Zeruiah was in command of the army; Jehoshaphat son of Ahilud was herald; •Zadok son of Ahitub and Abiathar son of Ahimelech were priests; [b] Shusha was secretary; •Benaiah son of Jehoiada was in command of the Cherethites and Pelethites; David's sons took first place after the king. [c]

David's ambassadors are insulted ‖2 S 10:1–5

19 After this, when Nahash king of the Ammonites died and his son Hanun succeeded him, •David thought, 'I shall show Hanun son of Nahash the same faithful love as his father showed me.' And David sent representatives to offer him condolences over his father. But when David's representatives reached Hanun in the Ammonites' country to present these condolences, •the Ammonite leaders said to Hanun, 'Do you really think David means to honour your father when he sends you messengers with sympathy? On the contrary, the reason why his representatives have come to you is to explore, overthrow and reconnoitre the country.' •Whereupon Hanun seized David's representatives, shaved them, cut their clothes off half-way up, right by their buttocks, and sent them away. •As soon as David was told how the men had been treated, he sent someone to meet them, 17 a. The Chronicler has taken over Nathan's prophecy in 2 S 7 almost word for word. It is a key text for him, since it embodies the covenant with David and the permanence of his dynasty as the recipient of the messianic promise. His only modifications are to make clear that the promise made to David will come true first of all in the person of one of his sons (Solomon), v. 11, and to suppress the possibility of misconduct in any of David's successors (2 S 7:14).

b. 'Yahweh, moreover, tells you that he will build you a dynasty' following 2 S 7: 'I tell you that Yahweh will build you a dynasty' Hebr.

c. Verse corrected, following parallel passage of Samuel, see 2 S 7:23k.

18 a. From the detailed history of David's reign, 2 S 9—1 K 2, the Chronicler omits anything which might tarnish the reputation of the king and his immediate family, e.g. the murders, intrigues and revolts, only mentioning the king's victories, to emphasise that David was not to build the Temple, 17:4–13, because he had been a man of war, 22:8; 28:3. The spoils of his victories, however, were to finance the building of it, vv. 7–8,10–11; 29:2–5.

b. The Chronicler uses the already retouched 2 S 8:17 to make Zadok of levitical descent.

c. According to 2 S 8:18, they were priests; but by the Chronicler's times the idea that priests could come from non-levitical families was no longer acceptable.

since the men were overcome with shame. 'Stay in Jericho,' the king said, 'until your beards have grown, and come back then.'

‖2 S 10:6–14 The first Ammonite campaign

When the Ammonites realised that they had antagonised David, Hanun and the 6 Ammonites sent a thousand talents of silver to hire chariots and cavalry from the Aramaeans of Upper Mesopotamia, of Maacah and of Zobah. ·They hired thirty- 7 two thousand chariots and the king of Maacah with his people, who came and encamped before Medeba, while the Ammonites, having left their towns and mustered, were advancing to the war. ·When David heard this, he sent Joab with 8 the whole army, the champions. ·The Ammonites marched out and drew up their 9 line of battle at the city gate, while the kings who had come kept their distance in the open country. ·Joab, seeing that he had to fight on two fronts, to his front and 10 to his rear, chose the best of Israel's picked men and drew them up in line facing the Aramaeans. ·He entrusted the rest of the army to his brother Abishai, and 11 drew them up in line facing the Ammonites. ·'If the Aramaeans prove too strong 12 for me,' he said, 'you must come to my help; if the Ammonites prove too strong for you, I shall come to yours. ·Be brave and let us fight valiantly, for the sake of our 13 people and for the cities of our God! And let Yahweh dispose as he thinks fit!'
Joab and the force with him joined battle with the Aramaeans, who fled at his 14 onslaught. ·When the Ammonites saw that the Aramaeans had fled, they too fled 15 from his brother Abishai and withdrew into the city. Joab then returned to Jerusalem.

‖2 S 10:15–19 Victory over the Aramaeans

The Aramaeans, realising that Israel had got the better of them, sent messengers 16 and mobilised the Aramaeans living on the other side of the River, with Shophach, commander of Hadadezer's army, at their head. ·David, being informed of this, 17 mustered all Israel, crossed the Jordan, made contact with them and took up position near them. David drew up his line of battle facing the Aramaeans, who then engaged him. ·But the Aramaeans fled from Israel, and David killed seven 18 thousand of their chariot teams and forty thousand men; and also Shophach, the commander of the army. ·When Hadadezer's vassals saw that Israel had got the 19 better of them, they made peace with David and became his subjects. The Aramaeans were unwilling to give any more help to the Ammonites.

The second Ammonite campaign

‖2 S 11:1 20 At the turn of the year, at the time when kings go campaigning, Joab led out 1
the troops and, having ravaged the Ammonites' territory, proceeded to lay ‖2 S 12:26 siege to Rabbah. David, however, remained in Jerusalem. Joab reduced Rabbah
‖2 S 12:30–31 and dismantled it. ·David took the crown off Milcom's[a] head and found that it 2 weighed a talent of gold, and in it was set a precious stone which went on David's head instead. He carried off great quantities of booty from the city. ·And he 3 expelled its inhabitants, setting them to work with saws, iron picks and axes. David treated all the Ammonite towns in the same way. David and all the people then returned to Jerusalem.

Various exploits against the Philistines

‖2 S 21:18–22 After this war broke out with the Philistines at Gezer. This was when Sibbecai of 4 Dt 1:28g Hushah killed Sippai, one of the Rephaim, and the Philistines were subdued.

Again, war with the Philistines broke out, and Elhanan son of Jair killed Lahmi 5 brother of Goliath of Gath,[b] the shaft of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

There was further warfare at Gath, where there was a man of huge stature with 6 six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot, twenty-four in all. He too was a son of Rapha. ·When he defied Israel, Jonathan son of Shimea, brother of David 7 cut him down.

8 These men were sons of Rapha in Gath and fell at the hands of David and his guards.

C: PRELUDE TO THE BUILDING OF THE TEMPLE[a]

The census[b]

||2 S 24:1–9

1 21 Satan[c] took his stand against Israel and incited David to take a census of 2 Israel. •David said to Joab and the people's princes, 'Go, and take a census of Israel, from Beersheba to Dan, then bring it back to me and let me know the
3 total.' •Joab replied, 'May Yahweh multiply his people to a hundred times what they are today! But my lord king, are they not all my lord's servants in any case?
4 Why should my lord insist on this? Why should he involve Israel in guilt?' •But the king enforced his order on Joab, and Joab set out, travelled throughout all Israel,
5 and then returned to Jerusalem. •Joab gave David the census results for the people: all Israel had eleven hundred thousand men who could wield a sword; Judah had 6 four hundred and seventy thousand men who could wield a sword.[d] •Joab had found the king's command so distasteful that he did not include Levi and Benjamin.

The pestilence. God's forgiveness

7, 8 God looked with displeasure on this and punished Israel in consequence. •David then said to God, 'I have committed a grave sin by doing this. But now I beg you to 9 forgive your servant for this fault, for I have acted very foolishly.' •Yahweh then
10 spoke to Gad, David's seer, •'Go and say to David, "Yahweh says this: I offer you 11 three things; choose which one of them I am to inflict on you." ' •So Gad went to 12 David and said, 'Yahweh says this, •"Take your choice between three years of famine; or three months of disaster at the hands of your enemies, with your enemies' sword overtaking you; or three days of Yahweh's sword, an epidemic in the country, while the angel of Yahweh wreaks havoc throughout the territory of 13 Israel." Now decide how I am to answer him who sends me.' •David said to Gad, 'I am very apprehensive. Better for me to fall into Yahweh's hand, since his mercies are very great, than for me to fall into the hands of human enemies.'

14 So Yahweh unleashed an epidemic on Israel, and seventy thousand Israelites
15 succumbed. •Next, God sent the angel to Jerusalem to destroy it, but as he was about to destroy it, Yahweh looked down and felt sorry about the calamity; and he said to the destroying angel, 'Enough now! Hold your hand!' The angel of Yahweh
16 was standing by the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite. •[e]David, raising his eyes, saw the angel of Yahweh standing between earth and heaven, a drawn sword Jos 5:13e in his hand stretched out towards Jerusalem. David and the elders then put on 17 sackcloth and fell on their faces, •and David said to God, 'Did I not order the people to be counted? I was the one who sinned and actually committed the wrong. But these, the flock, what have they done? Yahweh my God, let your hand lie heavy on me and on my family; but spare your people from the plague!'

20 a. 'Milcom' LXX and Vulg.; 'their king' Hebr. • Between vv. 1 and 2, the Chronicler suppresses the long narrative of David and Bathsheba, 2 S 11:2–12:25.

b. The Chronicler thus interprets 2 S 21:19 with an eye to 1 S 17 where David is credited with defeating Goliath.

21 a. This chapter begins a most important section: the organisation of worship and sacred officials in the Davidic community to which the messianic promises of Nathan's prophecy were addressed.

b. The Chronicler has kept this episode, although David figures as a sinner in it, v. 8, since it ends with the building of an altar on the site where the future Temple was to stand, v. 18f.

c. The Chronicler, with his developed theology, attributes to Satan (see Jb 1:6g) what 2 S, with the ultimate cause in mind, ascribed to 'the anger of Yahweh'.

d. The figures in 2 S 24 are different, see 1 Ch 27:24. Levi is excluded from the census, as in Nb 1.

e. This passage, found only in Ch, presupposes a new conception of angels, close to that of Dn 9:21 and 2 M 10:29.

‖2 S 24:18–25 The altar is built [f]

The angel of Yahweh then ordered Gad to tell David that David should go up and 18 erect an altar to Yahweh on the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite. ·So, at 19
Gad's bidding, given in Yahweh's name, David went up. ·Ornan had turned 20 round and seen the angel, and he and his four sons with him had hidden. ·When 21 David arrived Ornan was threshing wheat. He looked up and saw David and came off the threshing-floor and prostrated himself on the ground at David's feet.
David then said to Ornan, 'Let me have the site of the threshing-floor, so that I 22 can build an altar to Yahweh on it; let me have it at the full price—so that the plague may be lifted from the people.' Ornan said to David, ·'Take it, and let my 23 lord the king do what he thinks fit. Look, I shall give you the oxen for burnt offerings, the threshing-sleds for the wood and the wheat for the oblation. I shall give everything.'

'No,' said King David to Ornan, 'I insist on buying it at the full price. I will not 24 offer Yahweh what belongs to you or bring burnt offerings which have cost me nothing.' ·So David gave Ornan six hundred shekels of gold by weight 25 for the site.

There David built an altar to Yahweh and brought burnt offerings and peace 26 1 K 18:38 offerings. He called on Yahweh, and Yahweh answered him with fire from heaven on the altar of burnt offering. ·Then Yahweh ordered the angel to sheathe his 27 sword. ·Whereupon, seeing that Yahweh had answered him on the threshing-floor 28 of Ornan the Jebusite, David offered sacrifice there. ·The Dwelling which Moses 29 had made in the desert and the altar of burnt offering were at that time on the high place at Gibeon, ·but David could not go there to consult God because he was 30 terrified of the angel's sword. [g]

22 David then said, 'This is to be the house of Yahweh God and this the altar 1 of burnt offering for Israel.'

Preparations for the building of the Temple [a]

David then gave orders for all foreigners in Israel to be rounded up, and appointed [b] 2 1 K 5:31–32 quarrymen to cut dressed stone for building the house of God. ·David also pre- 3 pared great quantities of iron to make nails for the leaves of the doors and for the clamps, and more bronze than could be weighed, ·as well as innumerable cedar- 4 wood logs, as the Sidonians and Tyrians had brought cedar logs to David in great quantities.

David then said, 'My son Solomon is young and immature, and the house to be 5 built for Yahweh must be superlatively fine, the most famous and splendid in any country. I shall now make the preparations for it.' And so, before he died, David made ample preparations. ·He then summoned his son Solomon and commanded 6 2 S 7:1–16,1a him to build a house for Yahweh, God of Israel. ·'My son,' David said to Solomon, 7
'my heart was set on building a house for the name of Yahweh my God. ·But the 8 word of Yahweh came to me, "You have shed much blood and fought great wars;
it is not for you to build a house for my name, since you have shed much blood in my sight on earth. [c] ·Look, a son will be born to you. He will be a man of peace, 9 and I shall give him peace from his enemies on all sides; for Solomon is to be his name, [d] and in his days I shall give Israel peace and tranquillity. ·He must build a 10 house for my name; he will be my son and I shall be his father, and I shall make the throne of his kingdom secure over Israel for ever." ·Now, my son, may Yahweh be 11 with you and give you success in building a house for Yahweh your God, as he has promised about you. ·And especially, may Yahweh give you discretion and dis- 12 cernment, may he give you his orders for Israel, so that you may observe the Law of Yahweh your God. ·Success will be yours, only if you observe the statutes and 13 Dt 31:23 ordinances which Yahweh gave Moses as regulations for Israel. Be strong and stand fast, be fearless, be dauntless. ·Now, poor as I am, I have set aside for the 14 house of Yahweh a hundred thousand talents of gold, a million talents of silver and more bronze and iron than can be weighed, there being so much. I have also 15 provided timber and stone, to which you may add more. •Furthermore, you have a large number of workmen, quarrymen, masons, carpenters and all sorts of 16 craftsmen for every kind of work, •while your gold and silver, bronze and iron will be beyond reckoning. Set to work, then, and may Yahweh be with you!'

17 David then commanded all the leaders of Israel to help his son Solomon.
18 'Has not Yahweh your God been with you and given you peace on all sides, having put the inhabitants of the country into my power and the country now having been 19 subdued for Yahweh and his people? •So now devote heart and soul to searching for Yahweh your God. Set to and build the sanctuary of Yahweh God, so that you can bring the ark of the covenant of Yahweh and the holy vessels of God into the house built for the name of Yahweh.'

The orders and functions of the Levites [a]

1 23 When David had become old and full of days, he made his son Solomon 1 K 1:1–2:1
2 king of Israel, •and then summoned all the leaders of Israel, with the priests and Levites.
3 A census was taken of those Levites thirty years old and upwards. On a count of Nb 4:3 4 heads, they numbered thirty-eight thousand men; [b] •twenty-four thousand were responsible for the service [c] of the House of Yahweh, six thousand were officials 5 and judges, •four thousand were gatekeepers and four thousand praised Yahweh on the instruments which David had [d] made for praising him. Am 6:5 6 David then divided the Levites into classes: [e] Gershon, Kohath and Merari.
7, 8 Of the Gershonites [f] there were Ladan and Shimei. •Sons of Ladan: Jehiel first, 26:21seq.
9 Zetham, Joel; three in all. •Sons of Shimei: Shelomoth, Haziel, Haran; three in 10 all. These are the heads of families of Ladan. •Sons of Shimei: Jahath, Zina, Jeush, 11 Beriah; these were the sons of Shimei; four in all. •Jahath was the eldest, Zizah the second, then Jeush and Beriah, who had not many children and were reckoned as one family.
12, 13 Sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron, Uzziel; four in all. •Sons of Amram: Aaron and Moses. Aaron was set apart to consecrate the things that were especially holy, he and his sons for ever, to burn incense in the presence of Yahweh, to serve 14 him and to bless in his name for ever. •Moses, man of God, and his sons were 15, 16 reckoned with the tribe of Levi. •Sons of Moses: Gershom and Eliezer. •Sons of 17 Gershom: Shebuel, the first. •Of the sons of Eliezer, Rehabiah was the first. 24:20–30; 26:24–25

f. The Chronicler elaborates the episode in 2 S 24; 18:25 into an account of the founding of the Temple: the altar raised by David will be the altar of the future Temple, 22:1. The Chronicler alone explicitly relates Solomon's Temple to Ornan's threshing-floor. After the exile similarly, the building of the altar preceded the building of the Temple, Ezr 3:1seq.

g. These two vv. use the intervention of the Angel of Yahweh to explain the transfer of the cult of Gibeon to Jerusalem (see 16:39–40), where was the Dwelling of Yahweh at which he was to be consulted. Ex 29:42; 30:36; 33:7seq.

22 a. Isolated vv. apart, this ch. has no biblical parallel. The Chronicler may have had other sources at his disposal or have worked up traditions deriving from the reign of Solomon. He may be right in assuming a short period during which David and Solomon reigned as co-sovereigns, see the hint of this in 1 K 1; 2:1–9. Information concerning ancient weights and measures will be found in the Tables of measures and money.

b. Like the Deuteronomic editor of Kings, see 1 K 9:20–22, the Chronicler finds the thought of Israelites' doing forced labour repugnant, although this is explicitly attested in 1 K 5:27; 11:28. According to Is 60:10, the messianic Jerusalem was to be built by foreigners.

c. see 18:1a.

d. The name Solomon comes from shalom, 'peace'. There is an intentional contrast between Solomon and David the man of war.

23 a. Ch. 23–27 consist of one unit, possibly additional to the main narrative. Ch. 23:1 is continued in 28:2. Ch. 23:2 is a link verse to introduce the priests and Levites who are the subject of the addition.

b. As in Nb 4:3,23,30; but twenty years according to 1 Ch 23:24.

c. These must be the singers; the categories are the same as in ch. 25 and 26: singers, see 25, gatekeepers, 26:1seq., scribes and judges, 26:29, finally instrumentalists, see 15:19seq.

d. 'David had' conj.; 'I have' Hebr.

e. vv. 6–32 are an introduction, modelled on Nb 8:5seq., to the organisation of the clergy. But the functions of the Levites are not those contemplated by Nb. God having chosen a settled home, they no longer have to see to transport, Nb 3–4, but stay in the Temple and help the priests in the tasks prescribed in Lv. True, the Aaronites have special powers, vv. 13seq., but the author does not distinguish here between priests and Levites. This new disposition, definitive and established, derives from David, just as the old unstable and provisional one derived from Moses.

f. This list is most closely related to 26:21seq.; it differs from the other Gershonite lists, 6:2,5; Ex 6:17; Nb 3:18.

Eliezer had no other sons, but the sons of Rehabiah were very numerous. ·Sons of 18
Izhar: Shelomith, the first. ·Sons of Hebron: Jeriah first, Amariah second, Jahaziel 19 third, Jekameam fourth. ·Sons of Uzziel: Micah first, Isshiah second. 20

Sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi. Sons of Mahli: Eleazar and Kish. ·Eleazar 21, 22 died without sons, but he did have daughters, whom their cousins, the sons of Kish, married. ·Sons of Mushi: Mahli, Eder, Jeremoth: three in all. 23

These were the sons of Levi by their families, the heads of families, and those 24 registered by name, individually; whoever was twenty years old or upwards had his function in the service of the Temple of Yahweh.

For David said, 'Since Yahweh, God of Israel, has given rest to his people Israel 25 and has taken up residence in Jerusalem for ever, ·the Levites need no longer carry 26
the Dwelling or any of the objects required for its service.' ·For, according to the 27 23:3,24 last words of David, the Levites who had been registered were of twenty years and upwards. ·Their duty now is to help the sons of Aaron in the service of the House 28 of Yahweh, in the care of the courts and rooms, the purification of all the holy things, the work for the service of the House of God, ·the loaves of permanent 29 offering, the flour for the oblation, the wafers of unleavened bread, the pan-baked materials, the unmixed materials and all measures of volume and length. [g] ·Fur- 30
Nb 28–29 thermore, they have to be present every morning to give thanks and praise to Yahweh, and also in the evening, ·and at the bringing of every burnt offer- 31
ing to Yahweh on Sabbath, New Moon or solemn feast, appearing regularly before Yahweh in accordance with the numbers required of them. ·In serving the 32 Temple of Yahweh they observe the ritual of the Tent of Meeting, the ritual of the sanctuary and the ritual of their kinsmen, the sons of Aaron.'

The classification of the priests

‖Nb 3:2–4 24 Orders of the sons of Aaron: Sons of Aaron: Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, 1 Ithamar. ·Nadab and Abihu died in their father's lifetime leaving no child- 2 ren, so Eleazar and Ithamar filled the office of priest. ·With Zadok of the sons of 3 Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, [a] David allocated them according to the classification of their duties. ·Since the sons of Eleazar were found to have 4 more headmen than the sons of Ithamar, they allocated sixteen heads of families to the sons of Eleazar and eight heads of families to the sons of Ithamar. ·They 5 allocated them by lot, both alike, there being religious officials and officials of God among the sons of Eleazar, as among the sons of Ithamar. ·The levitical scribe 6 Shemaiah son of Nethanel, recorded them in the presence of the king, the leaders, Zadok the priest, Ahimelech son of Abiathar and the heads of the priestly and levitical families, so that two families were selected for Eleazar for each one selected for Ithamar. [b]

The first lot fell to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah, ·the third to Harim, the 7, 8 fourth to Seorim, ·the fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin, ·the seventh to 9, 10 Hakkoz, the eighth to Abijah, [c] ·the ninth to Jeshua, the tenth to Shecaniah, ·the 11, 12 eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim, ·the thirteenth to Huppah, the four- 13 teenth to Ishbaal, ·the fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer, ·the seventeenth 14, 15 to Hezir, the eighteenth to Happizzez, ·the nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth 16 to Jehezkel, ·the twenty-first to Jachin, the twenty-second to Gamul, ·the twenty- 17, 18
third to Delaiah and the twenty-fourth to Maaziah. [d]

These were their classifications for their duties when they entered the House of 19
Yahweh in accordance with their prescriptions laid down by Aaron their ancestor as Yahweh, God of Israel, had commanded him.

As regards the rest of the sons of Levi: 20
23:16seq. Of the sons of Amram: Shubael. Of the sons of Shubael: Jehdeiah. ·As regards 21
Rehabiah, of the sons of Rehabiah: Isshiah, the first one. ·Of the sons of Izhar: 22
Shelomoth; of the sons of Shelomoth: Jahath. ·Of the sons of Hebron: Jeriah the 23 first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth. ·The son of 24
Uzziel was Micah; of the sons of Micah: Shamir. ·The brother of Micah was 25

26 Isshiah; of the sons of Isshiah, Zechariah. ·The sons of Merari were Mahli and 27 Mushi; of his sons: Jaaziah his son. ·The sons of Merari by his son Jaaziah were 28, 29 Shoham, Zaccur and Ibri. ·Of Mahli, there was Eleazar who had no sons, ·and 30 Kish; and of the sons of Kish: Jerahmeel. ·The sons of Mushi were Mahli, Eder and Jerimoth.
31 These were the Levites according to families. ·Like their kinsmen, the sons of Aaron, these heads of families, senior and junior alike, also drew lots in the presence of King David, Zadok, Ahimelech, and the heads of the priestly and levitical families.

The cantors

1 25 For the liturgy, David and the religious officials selected the sons of Asaph, 16:37–43 of Heman and of Jeduthun, who were to prophesy[a] to the accompaniment of harps, lyres and cymbals. The list of ministrants for this service was as follows:
2 Of the sons of Asaph: Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, Asharelah; the sons of Asaph were under the direction of Asaph who prophesied at the king's direction.
3 Of Jeduthun there were the sons of Jeduthun: Gedaliah, Zeri, Jeshaiah, Hashabiah and Mattithiah, six, under the direction of their father Jeduthun who, with the harp, prophesied when thanks and praise were to be given to Yahweh. 2 K 3:15
4 Of Heman there were the sons of Heman: Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Uzziel, Shebuel, Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, Romamti-Ezer, Joshbekashah,
5 Mallothi, Hothir, Mahazioth.[b] ·All these were sons of Heman, the king's seer, at God's word they blew the horn.[c] God gave Heman fourteen sons and three
6 daughters. ·Under the king's direction all these had the duty of singing to the accompaniment of cymbal, lyre and harp for the liturgy of the house of God under the direction of their fathers.
7 Asaph, Jeduthun and Heman, ·trained in the songs of Yahweh, with their 8 brothers, numbered two hundred and eighty-eight, all expert. ·Junior and senior,
9 master and pupil alike, they drew lots for their term of duty. ·The first to whom the lot fell was the Asaphite, Joseph. The second was Gedaliah, who with his sons and 10 brothers made twelve. ·The third was Zaccur, who with his sons and brothers made 11, 12 twelve. ·The fourth was Izri, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The 13 fifth was Nethaniah, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The sixth was 14 Bukkiah, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The seventh was Jesharelah, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The eighth was Jeshaiah, who 16 with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The ninth was Mattaniah, who with his 17 sons and brothers made twelve. ·The tenth was Shimei, who with 18 his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The eleventh was Azarel, who with his sons
19 and brothers made twelve. ·The twelfth was Hashabiah, who with his sons 20 and brothers made twelve. ·The thirteenth was Shubael, who with his sons and 21 brothers made twelve. ·The fourteenth was Mattithiah, who with his sons and 22 brothers made twelve. ·The fifteenth was Jeremoth, who with his sons and brothers

g. The Levites were not to be inspectors of weights and measures as such, but to check that the offerings were of the quantity specified by the ritual.

24 a. The passage bears witness to the dying down of antagonism in post-exilic times between the two rival priestly houses: that of the descendants of Zadok in charge of the Temple until the exile, and that of the descendants of Abiathar (and Eli) ejected from the sanctuary by Solomon, 1 K 2:27. They were attributed Aaron's two sons as ancestors, see v. 1–2; Zadok stemming from Eleazar, see 5:30–34, and Abiathar, of sound levitical origin, see 1 S 2:27, from Ithamar, though with no genealogical details given. Thus, all the priests were 'sons of Aaron'.

b. Text obscure, but see v. 4.

c. Zacharias, father of John the Baptist, was a member of this group, Lk 1:5.

d. Ne 12 contains two lists of priestly families, giving only 22 (or 21) names and probably older than Ch.

25 a. Chronicles alone accord the singers the title of 'prophet', see vv. 2,3, or 'seer', v. 5. The author considers the composing and singing of psalms as to some degree inspired, but he does not consider them to be cultic prophets.

b. Parallel with the 24 orders of priests, 1 Ch puts 24 orders of singers linked to the three famous names, Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun. The only names well attested elsewhere are Zaccur son of Asaph, see 9:15 (Zichri); Ne 12:35; Mattithiah 1 Ch 15:18,21; 16:5, and Mattaniah, 1 Ch 9:15; Ne 11:17. The last nine names, v. 4[b], making up the total of twenty-four, seem to have been obtained, not from a list but by cutting up the lines of a psalm. With slight changes in vocalisation and word division, the names give: 'Take pity on me, Yahweh, take pity on me', 'You are my God', 'I have magnified and will exalt (my) helper', 'Sitting (in) adversity I said . . . Give clear signs plentifully!'

c. lit. 'to raise the horn' but the implications of this are not clear. Some understand 'to enhance his prestige as God had promised'.

made twelve. ·The sixteenth was Hananiah, who with his sons and brothers 23 made twelve. ·The seventeenth was Joshbekashah, who with his sons and brothers 24 made twelve. ·The eighteenth was Hanani, who with his sons and brothers made 25 twelve. ·The nineteenth was Mallothi, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. 26
The twentieth was Eliathah, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The 27, 28 twenty-first was Hothir, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. ·The 29 twenty-second was Giddalti, who with his sons and brothers made twelve.
The twenty-third was Mahazioth, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. 30
The twenty-fourth was Romamti-Ezer, who with his sons and brothers made twelve. 31

9:17–27 The gatekeepers [a]

26 As regards the orders of the gatekeepers: 1
Of the Korahites there was Meshelemiah son of Kore, one of the sons of Ebiasaph, [b] ·and Meshelemiah's sons: Zechariah the first-born, Jediael the second, 2
Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth, ·Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, 3 Elioenai the seventh.
15:21 Obed-Edom's sons were: Shemaiah the first-born, Jehozabad the second, Joah 4
2 S 6:10seq. the third, Sacar the fourth, Nethanel the fifth, ·Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the 5 seventh, Peullethai the eighth; God had indeed blessed him. ·His son Shemaiah 6 also had sons who wielded authority in their family, because they were men of outstanding quality. ·The sons of Shemaiah were: Othni, Rephael, Obed and 7 Elzabad, whose brothers Elihu and Semachiah were outstanding men. ·All these 8 were sons of Obed-Edom, who with their sons and brothers were men of standing, well fitted for their task.
Obed-Edom had sixty-two, ·Meshelemiah had eighteen outstanding sons and 9
Gn 48:13–20 brothers.
Hosah, one of the sons of Merari, had sons: Shimri was the first, for although he 10 was not the first-born his father had made him the chief. ·Hilkiah was the second, 11 Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: Hosah had thirteen sons and brothers in all.
These orders of gatekeepers, allocated according to their headmen, had duties, 12
just like their brothers, of serving in the house of Yahweh. ·Similarly, they drew 13 9:24 lots for each gate, whether their families were large or small. ·For the eastern one, 14
the lot fell to Shelemiah; and when they drew lots for Zechariah his son, a shrewd counsellor, his lot came out for the north. ·To Obed-Edom went the south, and to 15 his sons the storehouses. ·To Shuppim and Hosah went the west with the Gate of 16 the Felled Tree-trunk on the upper road. The corresponding guards were as follows: ·for the east gate, six per day; [c] for the north gate, four per day; for the 17 south gate, four per day; for the storehouses, two each; ·for the Parbar [d] at the west 18 gate, four by the road and two for the Parbar. ·These were the orders of the 19 gatekeepers of the sons of Korah and the sons of Merari.

Other levitical duties

The Levites, their brothers, [e] who were responsible for the treasures of the house 20 of God and for the treasures of consecrated gifts, ·were the sons of Ladan and 21 belonged to the Gershonites—the heads of the families of Ladan were descended from Ladan the Gershonite—that is to say, the Jehielites. ·The sons of the Jehie- 22 lites, Zetham and Joel [f] his brother, were responsible for the treasures of the house of Yahweh.
Over the Amramites, Izharites, Hebronites, and Uzzielites ·was Shebuel son of 23, 24
Gershom, son of Moses, who was governor of the treasures; ·and his brothers of 25
the line of Eliezer were Rehabiah his son, Jeshaiah his son, Joram his son, Zichri his son and Shelomoth his son. ·This Shelomoth and his kinsmen were responsible 26 18:11 for all the consecrated treasures dedicated by King David, by the heads of families, Nb 31:48–54 by the commanders of the thousands and hundreds and by the commanders of the army, ·who had dedicated a part of the spoils of war to the service of the house of 27

28 Yahweh, •and also for all that Samuel the seer, Saul son of Kish, Abner son of Ner and Joab son of Zeruiah had dedicated. In fact, whatever was dedicated was the responsibility of Shelomoth and his kinsmen.
29 Of the Izharites, Chananiah and his sons were assigned to secular duties[g] for 15:22
Israel as officials and judges.
30 Of the Hebronites, Hashabiah and his kinsmen, one thousand seven hundred 27:17 outstanding men were in charge of Israel west of Jordan in everything pertaining to 31 Yahweh and to the service of the king. •Of the Hebronites, Jerijah was the head.
In the fortieth year of David's reign research was done on the lineage and relationships of the Hebronites, and men of outstanding quality from among them were 32 found at Jazer in Gilead. •there were twenty-seven hundred outstanding men, heads of families, whom King David put in charge of the Reubenites, the Gadites and the half-tribe of Manasseh in all matters pertaining to God and the king.

Military and civil organisation[a]

1 27 The Israelites listed according to heads of families, commanders of thousands and hundreds, with their officials in the king's service who dealt with all matters affecting the companies on monthly duty, month by month throughout the year, each company consisting of twenty-four thousand men: 11:11 2 The commander of the first company detailed for the first month was Jasho-beam son of Zabdiel, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
3 He belonged to the family of Perez and was the senior military officer of all those detailed for the first month. 11:12 4 The commander of the company for the second month was Dodai the Ahohite, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
5 The officer commanding the third body of men for the third month was Benaiah 12:28 son of Jehoiada, the chief priest, whose company consisted of twenty-four thou- 2 S 8:18*f* 6 sand men. •This was the Benaiah who was an important member of the Thirty and his company. His son was Ammizabad. 2 S 8:18–23 7 The fourth for the fourth month was Asahel brother of Joab, and his son Zebadiah after him, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
8 The fifth officer commanding for the fifth month was Shamhuth the Zerahite,
whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
9 The sixth for the sixth month was Ira son of Ikkesh of Tekoa, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
10 The seventh for the seventh month was Helez the Pelonite, one of the Ephraimites, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
11 The eighth for the eighth month was Sibbecai of Hushah, a Zerahite, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
12 The ninth for the ninth month was Abiezer of Anathoth, a Benjaminite, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
13 The tenth for the tenth month was Maharai of Netophah, a Zerahite, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.
14 The eleventh for the eleventh month was Benaiah of Pirathon, an Ephraimite, whose company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.

26 a. The most detailed of the three lists of gatekeepers, see 9:17–27; 16:37–42.
b. 'Ebiasaph' conj., see 9:19; 'Asaph' Hebr.
c. 'six per day' Gk; 'six Levites' Hebr.
d. Etymology and meaning uncertain.
e. 'their kinsmen' Gk; 'Ahijah' Hebr.
f. Zethan and Joel, with Shebuel and Shelomoth, formed a commission in charge of the public treasury, analogous to that which existed in Nehemiah's and Ezra's time, Ezr 8:33; Ne 13:3.
g. Duties not strictly concerned with the Temple and its services, delegated to the Levites by the king, see vv. 30,32; 2 Ch 19:4–11; Ne 11:16.

27 a. This chapter is made up of four different lists: 1 Officials for the monthly duty vv. 1–15. 2 Officials for the tribes of Israel, vv. 16–24. 3 Officials for the royal supplies, vv. 25–31. 4 The king's advisers, vv. 32–34. With regard to the first list, it is possible that David already thought of an administrative organisation, but the one here described seems to be inspired by the twelve prefectures of Solomon which provided food each month for the king and his household, see 1 K 5:7. From another point of view, the classification suggests a military organisation, and the names of the officials are taken from among David's warriors. Perhaps they are the companies of a conscript army which, at the end of the monarchy, did monthly garrison duty.

The twelfth for the twelfth month was Heldai of Netophah, of Othniel, whose 15 company consisted of twenty-four thousand men.

List of tribal chiefs

Responsible for the tribes of Israel[b] were chief Eliezer son of Zichri for the 16
Reubenites, Shephatiah son of Maacah for the Simeonites, ·Hashabiah son of 17
Kemuel for the Levites, Zadok for the Aaronites, ·Elihu, one of David's brothers, 18 for Judah, Omri son of Michael for Issachar, ·Ishmaiah son of Obadiah for 19
Zebulun, Jerimoth son of Azriel for Naphtali, ·Hoshea son of Azaziah for the 20
Ephraimites, Joel son of Pedaiah for the half-tribe of Manasseh, ·Iddo son of 21 Zechariah for the half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Jaasiel son of Abner for Benjamin, ·and Azarel son of Jeroham for Dan. 22

These were the tribal chiefs of Israel.

The uncompleted census

21 Now in the census David did not include those who were twenty years old and 23 under, since Yahweh had promised to make Israel as numerous as the stars of heaven. ·Joab son of Zeruiah began the count but never finished. This is why 24 retribution came upon Israel, and the number did not come up to that recorded in the annals of King David.[c]

Overseer of the king's supplies:[d] Azmaveth son of Adiel. Overseer of supplies 25 in the countryside, towns, villages and fortresses: Jonathan son of Uzziah.
Overseer of the farmers who tilled the land: Ezri son of Chelub. ·Overseer of 26, 27 vineyards: Shimei of Ramah. Overseer of those in the vineyards who looked after the wine cellars: Zabdi of Shepham. ·Overseer of olive and sycamore trees in the 28 Shephelah: Baal-Hanan of Geder. Overseer of oil supplies: Joash. ·Overseer of 29 cattle at pasture in the plains of Sharon: Shitrai of Sharon. Overseer of cattle in the valleys: Shaphat son of Adlai. ·Overseer of camels: Obil the Ishmaelite. 30 Overseer of donkeys: Jehdeiah of Meranoth. Overseer of flocks: Jaziz the 31 Hagrite.

All the above supervised the property belonging to King David.

The king's personal advisers

Jonathan, David's uncle, a councillor, wise man and scribe, and Jehiel son of 32
2 S 15:31seq.; 16:17 Hachmoni took care of the king's sons. ·Ahitophel was the king's counsellor and 33
Hushai, the Archite, was Friend of the King. ·Jehoiada son of Benaiah and 34
Abiathar succeeded Ahitophel—Joab was commander of the king's army.[e]

David's instructions for the Temple[a]

28 David then summoned to Jerusalem all the officials of Israel—the tribal 1 chiefs, the senior officials in the royal service, the commanders of the thousands, the commanders of the hundreds and the overseers of all the property and livestock belonging to the king and to his sons—including the court officials, the champions and all the men of standing. ·King David then rose to his 2 feet and said:

'My brothers and my people, listen to me. I have set my heart on building a Ps 132:7 settled home for the ark of the covenant of Yahweh, for the footstool for our God, 22:8 but when I was ready to build it, ·God said to me, "You must not build a house for 3 my name, for you have been a man of war and have shed blood."

'Even so, out of my entire family, it was I whom Yahweh, God of Israel, chose 4 to reign over Israel for ever. Having chosen Judah as leader, and my family out of the House of Judah, it pleased him out of all my father's sons to make me king of all Israel. ·Out of all my sons—for Yahweh has given me many—he has chosen my 5 son Solomon to sit on Yahweh's sovereign throne over Israel. ·Furthermore, he 6 17:12seq.; 22:10seq. has told me, "Solomon your son is the man to build my house and my courts, for I
2 S 7:1–16,1a have chosen him to be my son and I shall be his father. ·I shall make his sovereignty 7 secure for ever if he sturdily carries out my commandments and ordinances as he does now."

8 'So now in the sight of all Israel, the assembly of Yahweh, and in the hearing of our God, I charge you to observe and adhere strictly to all the commandments of Dt 4:5
Yahweh your God, so that you may retain possession of this fine country and leave it to your sons after you as a heritage for ever.

9 'And you, Solomon my son, know the God of your father and serve him with an undivided heart and willing mind; for Yahweh scrutinises all hearts and understands whatever plans they may devise. If you seek him, he will let you find him;
10 but forsake him and he will cast you off for ever. •So, since Yahweh has chosen you to build a house for his sanctuary, go resolutely to work!' [b]

11 David then gave his son Solomon the plans for the portico, [c] the plans for the buildings, its storehouses, its upper rooms, its inner rooms and the room for 12 the throne of mercy •as well as the plans for everything that he had in mind: [d] for the courts of the house of Yahweh, for all the surrounding rooms, for the treasuries Ezk 42
13 of the house of God and for the sacred treasuries, •for the orders of priests and 26:20
Levites, for all the duties to be carried out in the service of the house of Yahweh, 14 and for all the liturgical objects to be used in the house of Yahweh; •for the gold bullion, for all the golden liturgical objects of various uses; for the silver bullion,
15 for all the silver liturgical objects of various uses; •for the gold bullion for the golden lamp-stands [e] and for their lamps, and for the silver bullion for the silver 16 lamp-stands and their lights, depending on the function of each lamp-stand; •for the gold bullion for each of the tables for the loaves of permanent offering and the 17 silver for the silver tables; [f] •for the pure gold for the forks, the bowls and the jars, Ex 27:3
for the gold bullion for each of the golden basins and for the silver bullion for each Nb 4:14 18 of the silver basins; •and for the refined gold bullion for the altar of incense; also for the gold for the model of the chariot [g] and of the great winged creatures which
19 cover the ark of the covenant of Yahweh with wings outspread—•all this was in the document conveying Yahweh's instructions, by which he revealed the pattern of what was to be done.

20 David then said to his son Solomon, 'Be resolute and courageous in your work, do not be afraid or disheartened, because Yahweh God, my God, is with you. He will not fail you or forsake you before you have finished all the work to be done for 21 the house of Yahweh. •And besides, there are the orders of priests and Levites for whatever is needed in connection with the house of God, and you have at your disposal every kind of craftsman for whatever has to be done, as well as the officials and all the people entirely at your command.'

b. David probably maintained the tribal organisation of Israel, but this list is artificial: it follows the order of the sons of Jacob given in 2:1–2, retains Reuben, Simeon and Levi, who had ceased to be autonomous tribes by the reign of David, and, having divided Joseph into three (Ephraim and the two half-tribes of Manasseh), omits Gad and Asher to avoid exceeding the number of twelve.

c. These verses refer to ch. 21 and are apparently intended to explain why the figures there are lower than those in 2 S 24:9.

d. These are the overseers of the royal lands, already in existence under David, see 28:1. This list is no invention, as the non-Israelite names in it show, but we can check neither date nor detail of it.

e. Apart from Joab, the list is not the same as that of David's senior officials given in 18:14–17; 2 S 8:15–16; 20:23–26, being concerned with David's private, as opposed to public, advisers. It is probably derived from a good source dating from the end of David's reign. Abiathar is presumably the priest of that name, 1 S 22:20seq., but his priestly character has been passed over, owing perhaps to the more dominant position won by the rival family of Zadok.

28 a. This ch. resumes the narrative interrupted at 23:1. The Chronicler omits the account of Solomon's accession to the throne, 1 K 1–2, to concentrate on his own historical interests: God having chosen David from Judah to be king of Israel, has now chosen his son Solomon to succeed him and build the Temple.

b. This moral exhortation in the style of Dt, immediately preceding a catalogue of cultic furniture, is influenced by the teachings of the prophets on spiritual religion.

c. Moses had received the pattern of the tabernacle from God, Ex 25:9. David whom the Chronicler regards as the founder of these new institutions, himself announces the model of the Temple in greatest detail, even to the weight of precious metal to be used in the various furnishings. In so doing, David acts under divine inspiration, vv. 12,19.

d. Alternative translation 'had come into his mind through the Spirit'.

e. There are several, 1 K 7:49; the Tent only had one, Ex 25:31–40.

f. According to 2 Ch 4:8 there were ten of these. There was only one in the Tent, Ex 25:23seq., and one in Solomon's Temple, 1 K 7:48.

g. The ark of the covenant represented a throne, not a chariot, but the Chronicler is thinking of the chariot in Ezk 1 and 10.

The voluntary offerings [a]

29 David then addressed the whole assembly, 'Solomon my son, whom 1 Yahweh has specifically chosen, is young and immature, and the work is great; this palace is not for any human being but for Yahweh God. ·With all the 2 resources I can command, for the house of my God I have provided gold for what must be made of gold, silver for what must be made of silver, bronze for what must be made of bronze, iron for what must be made of iron, wood for what must be made of wood, as well as cornelian for inlay work, slabs of multi-coloured mosaic, every kind of precious stone and quantities of alabaster. ·Furthermore, because 3 my affections are set on the house of my God, I have also given what gold and silver I personally own for the house of my God, over and above everything which I have already provided for the holy Temple—·that is to say, three thousand talents 4 of gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver for overlaying the walls of the buildings, ·the gold being for what must be made of gold, and the silver 5 for what must be made of silver: and for whatever the craftsmen must make. Who, then, is willing to devote himself to Yahweh's service today?'

At this, the heads of families, the tribal chiefs of Israel, the commanders of the 6 thousands and the hundreds and those who managed the king's affairs, Nb 7 ·volunteered a gift of five thousand talents and ten thousand darics of gold, ten 7 thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze and a hundred thousand talents of iron, ·while those who owned precious stones presented them 8 to the treasury of the house of Yahweh in the custody of Jehiel the Gershonite.
·The people rejoiced at what these had given so readily, since they had presented 9 their freewill offerings wholeheartedly to Yahweh. King David too was filled with joy.

David's thanksgiving [b]

Hence, in the presence of the whole assembly David blessed Yahweh. David said: 10
'May you be blessed, Yahweh, God of Israel our ancestor, for ever and for ever!
·Yours, Yahweh, is the greatness, the power, the splendour, length of days and 11 glory, everything in heaven and on earth is yours. Yours is the sovereignty, Yahweh; you are exalted, supreme over all. ·Wealth and riches come from you, 12
you are ruler of all, in your hand lie strength and power, and you bestow greatness and might on whomsoever you please. ·So now, our God, we give thanks to you 13 and praise your majestic name, ·for who am I and what is my people, for us to be 14 able to volunteer offerings like this?—since everything has come from you and we have given you only what you bestowed in the first place, ·and we are guests before 15
Ps 39:12 Ws 2:5+ you, and passing visitors as were all our ancestors, our days on earth fleeting as a shadow and without hope. ·Yahweh our God, all this wealth, which we have 16 provided to build a house for your holy name, has come from you and all belongs to you.

'Knowing, my God, how you examine our motives and how you delight in 17 integrity, with integrity of motive I have willingly given all this and have been overjoyed to see your people, now present here, willingly offering their gifts to you. ·Yahweh, God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel our ancestors, watch over this 18 for ever, shape the purpose of your people's heart and direct their hearts to you, and give an undivided heart to Solomon my son to keep your commandments, your 19 decrees and your statutes, to put them all into effect and to build the palace for which I have made provision.'

David then addressed the whole assembly: 'Now bless Yahweh your God!' And 20 the whole assembly blessed Yahweh, God of their ancestors, bowing down in homage to Yahweh, and to the king.

Accession of Solomon and the end of the reign of David

Ex 24:5 On the day following this, they slaughtered sacrifices and brought burnt offerings 21 to Yahweh on behalf of Israel—a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, a thousand 22 lambs with their libations, as well as many other sacrifices—•and they ate and Ex 24:11 drank [c] that day in Yahweh's presence with great joy. They then made Solomon son of David king a second time, [d] anointing him as leader for Yahweh, and Zadok 1 K 1:39 23 as priest. [e] •Solomon took his seat on Yahweh's throne, to reign in succession to 24 David his father. He prospered, and all Israel obeyed him. •All the chiefs, all the leading citizens and all King David's other sons pledged allegiance to King Solo-25 mon. •Yahweh made Solomon exceedingly powerful, as all Israel could see, and gave him a reign of such splendour as no previous king of Israel ever had.

26, 27 David son of Jesse was king of all Israel. •He was king of Israel for a period of 1 K 2:11 forty years; he reigned at Hebron for seven years, and in Jerusalem for thirty-28 three. •He died at a good old age, full of days, riches and honour. Then his son 29 Solomon succeeded him. •The history of King David, from first to last, is all written down in the records of Samuel the seer, the records of Nathan the prophet and the 30 records of Gad the seer, [f] •with his entire reign, his mighty deeds and the times which he, Israel and all the kings of other countries, [g] had experienced.

THE SECOND BOOK OF CHRONICLES

III: SOLOMON AND THE BUILDING OF THE TEMPLE [a]

God confers wisdom on Solomon [b]

1 1 Solomon son of David then made himself secure over his kingdom. Yahweh
2 his God was with him, making him more and more powerful. • Solomon then spoke to all Israel, to the commanders of thousands and of hundreds, to the judges 3 and to every leader in all Israel, the heads of families. •Solomon, and the whole ‖1 K 3:4–15 assembly with him, then went to the high place at Gibeon, where God's Tent of 1 Ch 16:39; 21:29 4 Meeting was, which Moses, servant of God, had made in the desert. •The ark of the covenant, however, David had brought from Kiriath-Jearim to the place which 2 S 6:1–17, 1a+ 5 he had prepared for it, having pitched a tent for it in Jerusalem. •The bronze altar Ex 27:1–2; 2:31:2
which Bezalel son of Uri, son of Hur, had made was there, in front of Yahweh's 1 Ch 2:20 6 Dwelling, where Solomon and the assembly consulted him. •There Solomon presented a burnt offering before Yahweh on the bronze altar of the Tent of Meeting, making on it one thousand burnt offerings. [c]
7 That night God appeared to Solomon and said, 'Ask what you would like me to 29 a. For the building of the Temple, David gives all the treasure he has collected for the purpose and all his personal wealth as well. The magnates added their contributions, too. The amazing figures given underline the importance which David accords to the project, as also the splendour of the Temple once it was built. In the Chronicler's eyes, David had prepared everything, and Solomon needed only to put it into action.

b. In this very fine prayer of offering, David acknowledges that God is the originator of all the gifts just made for his Temple. The gifts have been given back to God in the open-hearted spirit of which God approves, v. 17.

c. As after the first alliance, see Ex 24; 5,11.

d. 'a second time' Hebr., perhaps added to harmonise with 23:1; Gk. omits.

e. The Chronicler relates the anointing of the high priest to these remote times, though the custom probably began only after the Exile. According to 1 K 1:39, Zadok in fact anointed Solomon.

f. Evidently prophetic sources give the same picture, at least in this case, as the canonical books of Samuel and Kings, which in the Hebrew Bible belong to the 'Early Prophets'.

g. i.e. neighbouring countries.

1 a. Of the events in Solomon's reign, 2 Ch 1–9 concentrate almost exclusively on the building of the Temple and the completing of the task envisaged by David. The shadows of the reign are ignored and, at beginning and end (ch. 1 and 9), Solomon's wealth and glory are emphasised as being the fruits of divine favour.

b. Omitting the struggles following David's death, 1 K 2, the Chronicler begins his account of the reign with Solomon's dream at Gibeon. He justifies the consultation at Gibeon by the presence there of the Tent of Meeting see 1 Ch 16:39e, to which he now adds the desert altar, see v. 6. He thus emphasises the continuity with Mosaic institutions. The wisdom received at Gibeon will be the basis of Solomon's glory.

c. The Deuteronomic author of 1 K excused the offering of sacrifices elsewhere than in the Temple on the excellent grounds that the Temple had not yet been built, 1 K 3:2, hence the continued use of the high places. The Chronicler makes the high place and sacrifices lawful by supposing that the Tent and altar were at Gibeon, see v. 3 and marginal references.

give you.' ·Solomon replied to God, 'You showed most faithful love to David my 8 father, and you have made me king in succession to him. ·Yahweh God, the 9 promise you made to David my father has now been fulfilled, since you have made me king over a people as numerous as the dust of the earth. ·Therefore give me 10 wisdom and knowledge to act as leader of this people, for how could one otherwise govern such a great people as yours?'

'Since that is what you want,' God said to Solomon, 'since you have asked, not 11 for riches, treasure, honour, the lives of your enemies, or even for a long life, but for wisdom and knowledge to govern my people of whom I have made you king, Mt 6:33 therefore wisdom and knowledge are granted you. I give you riches too, 12 and treasure, and honour such as no king had before you and none will have after you.'

So Solomon came away from the high place at Gibeon, from the Tent of 13 Meeting, to Jerusalem and reigned over Israel.

=9:25 ‖1 K 10:26–29 Solomon then built up a force of chariots and cavalry; he had one thousand four 14 hundred chariots and twelve thousand horses; these he kept in the chariot towns and near the king at Jerusalem. ·In Jerusalem the king made silver and gold as 15 common as stones, and cedar wood as plentiful as sycamore in the lowlands.
Solomon's horses were imported from Muzur and Cilicia.[d] The king's dealers 16 acquired them in Cilicia at the prevailing price. ·A chariot was imported from 17 Egypt for six hundred silver shekels and a horse from Cilicia for a hundred and fifty. They also supplied the Hittite and Aramaean kings, who all used them as middlemen.

The final preparations. Huram of Tyre

Solomon then gave the order to build a house for the name of Yahweh and a palace 18 2:1
in which to reign.

=2:17 1 K 5:29–30 2 And Solomon allocated seventy thousand men to be porters and eighty thou- 1 2 sand to quarry in the hills and three thousand six hundred overseers for them.

‖1 K 5:15–20 1 Ch 14:1 ·And Solomon sent this message to Huram king of Tyre, 'Do as you did for my 2 3 father David when you sent him cedars for him to build himself a palace to live in.

Lv 24:6 Nb 17:5;20:12 You see, I am building a house for the name of Yahweh my God, to acknowledge 3 4 his holiness so that perfumed incense may be burnt before him, the loaves of Nb 28–29 permanent offering be perpetually laid out and the burnt offerings be made morning and evening, on the Sabbaths, New Moons and solemn festivals[e] of Yahweh our God, as prescribed for Israel for ever; ·and the house which I am 4 5 building must be large, for our God is greater than all gods; ·even so, who would 5 6 6:18 not find it an impossible task to build a house for him, when the heavens and the heavens of the heavens cannot contain him? And who am I to build a house for him except to burn incense before him? ·So now send me a man skilled at working in 6 7 gold, silver, bronze, iron, scarlet, crimson and violet materials, and who knows the art of engraving too; he is to work with my skilled men in Judah and Jerusalem, whom my father David has provided.[b] ·Also send me cedar, juniper and algum[c] 7 8 trunks from the Lebanon, for I know that your servants know the art of felling timber in the Lebanon. And my servants will work with your servants ·in preparing 8 9 a vast quantity of timber for me, since the house which I intend to build is to be of a size to marvel at. ·Furthermore, for the upkeep of[d] the woodcutters whom you 9 10 employ to cut the timber, I shall provide twenty thousand kor of wheat, twenty thousand kor of barley, twenty thousand bat of wine and twenty thousand bat of oil.'

In a letter sent to King Solomon, Huram king of Tyre replied, 'Because Yahweh 10 11 loves his people he has made you their king!' ·Huram went on to say, 'Praised be 11 12 Yahweh, God of Israel, who made heaven and earth and has given King David a wise son, endowed with discretion and discernment, to build a house for Yahweh and a palace in which to reign!—·I am now sending you a skilled and intelligent 12 13 Ex 31:2seq. man, Huram-Abi ·the son of a Danite woman by a Tyrian father. He knows the 13 14

arts of working in gold, silver, bronze, iron, stone, wood, scarlet, violet, fine linen and crimson materials, and is competent to carry out any kind of engraving and to execute any design which may be entrusted to him, in collaboration with your skilled men and those of my lord David, your father. ▶‖1 K 7:14

15 14 'So now let my lord send his servants the wheat, barley, oil and wine as promised 16 15 and we will fell all the wood you need from Lebanon, and bring it you in rafts by ‖1 K 5:22–26 sea to Jaffa; and it will be your responsibility to transport it to Jerusalem.'

16 Solomon then took a census of all the aliens resident in Israel similar to the 1 Ch 22:2b census which his father David had taken; it was found that there were a hundred 17 and fifty-three thousand six hundred. ·He impressed seventy thousand of them as =2:1
porters, eighty thousand as quarrymen in the hills and three thousand six hundred as overseers to make sure the people worked.

Solomon builds the Temple [a]

1 3 Solomon then began building the house of Yahweh in Jerusalem on Mount ‖1 K 6
Moriah where David his father had had a vision—on the site which David had Gn 22:2
2 prepared—on the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite. ·He began building it on 1 Ch 21:15seq.
3 the second day of the second month of the fourth year of his reign. ·These are the dimensions which Solomon fixed for the structure of the house of God: its length in cubits, according to the old standard, was sixty cubits and its width twenty cubits; Ex 40:5e
4 and the portico in front of the house was the full width of the house, that is, twenty cubits, and its height was a hundred and twenty cubits; on the inside he overlaid it
5 with pure gold. ·The Great Hall he lined with juniper, which he overlaid with fine
6 gold and ornamented with palm trees and festoons, ·and he decorated the hall
7 beautifully with precious stones and with gold from Parvaim, ·overlaying the hall, its beams and its thresholds, its walls and its doors, with gold and engraving the walls with great winged creatures.

8 He also made the Holy of Holies, [b] the length of which corresponded to the width of the Great Hall, being twenty cubits, with a width of twenty cubits, and this he 9 overlaid with fine gold weighing six hundred talents, ·while the weight of the gold
10 nails was fifty shekels. He also overlaid the upper rooms with gold. ·In the Holy of Holies he modelled two winged creatures of wrought metal work and overlaid
11 them with gold. ·The total span of their wings was twenty cubits; one wing, being five cubits long, touched the wall of the house and the other wing, being five cubits
12 long, touched the wing of the other winged creature; ·while one wing of the other, five cubits long, touched the other wall of the house and the other wing, five cubits
13 long, touched the wing of the other winged creature. ·The spread of these creatures' wings was twenty cubits. They stood in an upright position, with their faces towards the Hall.

14 He also made the Curtain [c] of violet, scarlet, crimson and fine linen, working a design of winged creatures on it.

15 In front of the Hall he made two pillars thirty-five cubits high, and on the top of ‖1 K 7:15–22
16 each a capital measuring five cubits. ·He made festoons, in the Debir, to go at the

d. As in the parallel passage in K, the text has 'Egypt' mitzrayim instead of 'Muzur', and in the following verse' miqwe'(assembly?) instead of 'miqqoweh from Cilicia' (whose ancient name is 'Kue').

2 a. 'be offered' Gk; Hebr. omits. • In the 'Priestly' texts of the Pentateuch, these expressions describe the liturgy of the Tent.

b. The author combines the texts of 1 K 5:32 and 7:13–15 with reminiscences of the structure of the Tent, Ex 26:1; 31:2seq.

c. In 1 K 10:11, the wood is called almug but is said to have come from Ophir, not from the Lebanon.

d. 'upkeep' ma'akolet versions; Hebr. makkot 'blows'.

3 a. Despite the importance which the Chronicler attaches to the Temple he radically abridges the description in 1 K 6–7, modifying a number of details and figures. He is more interested in liturgy than in buildings, which, in the post-exilic Temple he knew, no longer had the splendour of Solomon's Temple. The old cubit referred to was probably 10 per cent longer than the ordinary cubit. Further information concerning ancient weights and measures will be found in the Tables of measures and money.

b. For the 'Debir' of 1 K, the Chronicler uses 'Holy of Holies' (see 4:22 etc.), already used by Ezekiel (Ezk 41:3–4) in his vision of the future Temple, and by Ex 26:34 in describing the desert Tent; henceforth this was to be the normal term.

c. This is the curtain of the Tent in Ex 26:31. Solomon's Temple had wooden doors carved with living creatures, 1 K 6:31–32, which the Chronicler converts into tapestry.

tops of the pillars, and made a hundred pomegranates to go on the festoons. ·He 17 erected the pillars in front of the Temple, one on the right, the other on the left;
the one on the right he called Jachin and the one on the left, Boaz.

4 He made a bronze altar, twenty cubits long, twenty cubits wide and ten cubits 1
‖1 K 7:23–26 high.[a] ·He made the Sea of cast metal, ten cubits from rim to rim, circular in 2 shape and five cubits high; a cord thirty cubits long gave the measurement of its girth. ·Under it and completely encircling it were things like oxen, ten to the cubit 3 round the entire Sea; the oxen were in two rows, of one and the same casting with the rest. ·It rested on twelve oxen, three facing north, three facing west, three 4 facing south, three facing east; on these, their hindquarters all turned inwards, stood the Sea. ·It was a hand's breadth in thickness, and its rim was shaped like the 5 rim of a cup—lily-shaped. It could hold three thousand bat.

‖1 K 7:38–39 He made ten basins, putting five on the right and five on the left, for washing in; 6
the things to be offered as burnt offerings were to be rinsed in these, but the Sea ‖1 K 7:49 was for the priests to wash in. ·He made the ten golden lamp-stands according to 7 pattern and placed them in the Hekal, five on the right and five on the left. ·He 8 ‖1 K 7:50 made ten tables which he set up in the Hekal, five on the right and five on the left.
1 Ch 28:16f He also made a hundred golden sprinkling bowls.

1 K 7:12 He made the court of the priests[b] and the great court with its gates and plated 9
the gates with bronze. ·The Sea he placed on the right-hand side of the Temple, to 10
the south-east.

1 K 7:40–51 Huram made the ash containers, the scoops and the sprinkling bowls. Thus 11
Huram completed all the work done for King Solomon for the Temple of God:
the two pillars; the mouldings of the capitals surmounting the two pillars; the 12 two sets of filigree to cover the two mouldings of the capitals surmounting the pillars; ·the four hundred pomegranates for the two sets of filigree—two rows of 13 pomegranates for each set of filigree;[c] ·the ten[d] stands and the ten basins on the 14 stands; ·the one Sea and the twelve oxen beneath it; ·the ash containers, scoops 15, 16 and forks.

All these utensils made by Huram-Abi for King Solomon for the Temple of Yahweh were of burnished bronze. ·the King made them by the process of sand 17 casting, in the plain of the Jordan between Succoth and Zeredah. ·There was such 18 an enormous quantity of them that the weight of the bronze could not be calculated.

Solomon made all the objects designed for the Temple of God, as well as the 19 golden altar and the tables for the loaves of permanent offering; ·the lamp-stands 20 with their lamps to burn, as prescribed, in front of the Debir, of pure gold; ·the 21 floral work, the lamps, the tongs, of gold (and it was pure gold); ·the snuffers, 22
the sprinkling bowls, incense ladles and the pans, of real gold; and the entrance to the Temple, the inner doors (for the Holy of Holies) and the doors of the Temple itself, that is of the Hekal, were also made of gold.

5 Thus all the work done by Solomon for the Temple of Yahweh was completed, 1 and Solomon brought in the gifts which his father David had consecrated; and he had the silver, the gold and all the utensils put into the treasuries of the Temple of God.

‖1 K 8:1–9 The ark is brought to the Temple

Solomon then assembled the elders of Israel in Jerusalem, all the tribal chiefs, the 2 princes of the families of Israel, to bring the ark of the covenant of Yahweh up from the City of David, that is, Zion. ·All the men of Israel assembled round the 3 king at the time of the feast, that is, in the seventh month. ·When all the elders of 4
Israel had arrived, the Levites[e] took up the ark; ·they brought up the ark and the 5
Tent of Meeting and all the sacred utensils which were in the Tent; the levitical priests brought them up.

King Solomon and the whole assembly of Israel present with him before the ark 6 sacrificed countless, innumerable sheep and oxen. ·The priests brought the ark of 7
the covenant of Yahweh to its place, in the Debir of the Temple, that is, in the 8 Holy of Holies, under the wings of the winged creatures; ·for they spread their wings over the place where the ark stood, forming a canopy over the ark and its 9 shafts. ·The shafts were so long, however, that the ends of the shafts of the ark could be seen in front of the Holy Place in front of the Debir, though they could 10 not be seen from outside. They are still there today. [b] ·There was nothing in the ark except the two tablets which Moses had placed in it at Horeb, when Yahweh made a covenant with the Israelites when they came out of Egypt.

The Lord takes possession of his Temple ‖1 K 8:10–13

11 Now when the priests came out of the Holy Place [c]—for all the priests present had 12 sanctified themselves regardless of the orders to which they belonged, ·and all the 1 Ch 24 levitical singers, Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun with their sons and brothers, dressed in linen, were standing to the east of the altar with cymbals, lyres and harps and 13 with them one hundred and twenty priests blowing the trumpets, ·and the harmony between trumpeters and singers was such that only one melody could be heard as they praised and gave thanks to Yahweh—and the singing began, to the accompaniment of trumpets, cymbals and musical instruments, and they praised Yahweh 'for he is good, for his faithful love is everlasting'—then the Temple was 14 filled with the cloud of the glory of Yahweh, ·and because of the cloud the priests could not stay and perform their duties. For the glory of Yahweh filled the Temple of God.

1 6 Then Solomon said:

Yahweh has chosen to dwell in thick cloud,
2 and I have built you a princely dwelling,
a residence for you for ever.

Solomon addresses the people [a] ‖1 K 8:14–21

3 Then the king turned round and blessed the whole assembly of Israel, while the 4 whole assembly of Israel stood. ·He said, 'Blessed be Yahweh, God of Israel, who has carried out by his hand what he promised verbally to my father David, when he 5 said, ·"From the day I brought my people out of Egypt I chose no city, in any of the tribes of Israel, to have a temple built where my name should be, nor did I 6 choose anyone to be prince of my people Israel; ·but I did choose Jerusalem for my 7 name to be there, and I did choose David to rule my people Israel." ·My father David had set his heart on building a temple for the name of Yahweh, God of 8 Israel, ·but Yahweh said to my father David, "You have set your heart on building 9 a temple for my name, and in this you have done well; ·and yet, you are not the man to build the temple; but your son, yet to be born to you, will be the one to 10 build the temple for my name." ·Yahweh has kept the promise which he made: I have succeeded my father David and am seated on the throne of Israel, as Yahweh 11 promised; I have built the temple for the name of Yahweh, God of Israel, ·and I have placed in it the ark containing the covenant of Yahweh, which he made with the Israelites.'

4 a. The parallel texts of 1 K 8:64 and 9:25 do not record the dimensions of the bronze altar in Solomon's Temple. The Chronicler is possibly giving the measurements of the stone altar of the post-exilic Temple.

b. In 1 K 6:36, this appears as 'the inner court'. The Chronicler makes the more specific distinction of his own day.

c. As in 1 K 7:42, Hebr. adds 'to cover the two mouldings . . .', doublet of previous v.

d. 'ten' (twice) 'aser following 1 K 7:43; Hebr. 'asah 'he made'.

5 a. 1 K reads 'the priests' here, but the Chronicler is thinking of Nb 1:50seq. see 1 Ch 15:2. The deuteronomic expression 'the levitical priests' at the end of v. 5 combines the two traditions; see 23:18; 30:27.

b. The Chronicler is quoting 1 K 8:8. By his own day the ark had long since disappeared.

c. Here the account taken from 1 K is interrupted by a long parenthesis, either by the Chronicler himself or by the editor who, in 1 Ch 25, emphasises the importance of the singers. The sentence is continued at v. 13[b].

6 a. This whole ch. follows 1 K 8 very closely, the Deuteronomic cast of and post-exilic additions to which anticipated the Chronicler's own preoccupations.

‖1 K 8:22–29 Solomon's prayer for himself

Then in the presence of the whole assembly of Israel, he stood facing the altar of 12
Yahweh and stretched out his hands—•for Solomon had made a bronze platform, 13 five cubits long, five cubits wide and five cubits high, which he had placed in the middle of the court and on which he was standing; he knelt down in front of the whole assembly of Israel, [b] stretched out his hands to heaven—•and said, 'Yahweh, 14 God of Israel, there is no god like you in heaven or on earth, you who are loyal to the covenant and show faithful love to your servants as long as they walk wholeheartedly in your way. •You have kept it with your servant, my father David, as 15 you promised him you would. What you promised verbally today you have carried out by your hand. •And now, Yahweh, God of Israel, keep the promise which you 16 made to your servant David when you said, "You will never lack for a man to sit in my presence before me on the throne of Israel, provided that your sons are careful how they behave, following my law as you yourself have done." •So now, God of 17
Israel, let the words come true which you spoke to your servant, my father David.
Yet will God really live with people on earth? Why, the heavens and the heavens 18 of the heavens cannot contain you! How much less this temple built by me! •Even 19 so, listen favourably to the prayer and entreaty of your servant, Yahweh my God;
listen to the cry and to the prayer which your servant makes to you: •Day and 20 night, may your eyes watch over this temple, over this place in which you have promised to put your name. Listen to the prayer which your servant offers in this place.

‖1 K 8:30–51 Solomon's prayer for the people

'Listen to the entreaties of your servant and of your people Israel; whenever they 21 pray in this place, listen from the place where you reside in heaven; and when you hear, forgive.

'If someone has wronged his neighbour and a curse is laid [c] on him to make him 22 swear here before your altar in this Temple, •then listen from heaven and do justice 23 between your servants, paying back the guilty one by making him suffer for his conduct, and acquitting the upright by rewarding him as his uprightness deserves.

'If your people Israel are defeated by the enemy because they have sinned 24 against you, but then return to you and acknowledge your name, and pray and seek your favour in this temple, •then listen from heaven; forgive the sin of 25 your people Israel, and bring them back to the country which you gave to them and their ancestors.

'When the heavens are shut and there is no rain because they have sinned against 26
you, if they pray in this place and praise your name and, having been humbled by you, desist from their sin, •then listen from heaven and forgive the sin of your 27 servant and of your people Israel—for you are constantly showing them the good way which they must follow—and send rain on your country, which you have given to your people as their heritage.

'Should there be famine in the country, or pestilence, wind-blast or mildew, 28 locust or caterpillar; should their enemy lay siege to their territory; should there be any plague or any disease; •whatever be the prayer or entreaty of any individual, 29 or of all your people Israel, each being aware of his own affliction and pain; when he stretches out his hands towards this Temple, •then listen from heaven where 30 you reside; forgive and, since you know what is in his heart, deal with each as his conduct deserves—for you alone know what is in the human heart—•so that they 31 may revere you by following your directions, which you gave to our ancestors, throughout their lives on earth.

'Even the foreigner, not belonging to your people Israel but coming from a 32 distant country, attracted by your great name, your mighty hand and outstretched arm, if he comes and prays in this Temple, •then listen from heaven where you 33 reside, and grant all that the foreigner asks of you, so that all the peoples of the earth may acknowledge your name and, like your people Israel, revere you, and know that this Temple, which I have built, bears your name.

34 'If your people go out to war against their enemies, on whatever mission you send them, and they pray to you, turning towards this city which you have chosen
35 and towards the Temple which I have built for your name, ·then listen from heaven to their prayer and their entreaty, and uphold their cause.

36 'When they sin against you—for there is no one who does not sin—and you are angry with them and abandon them to the enemy, and their captors carry them off
37 to a country be it far away or near, ·if they come to their senses in the country to which they have been taken as captives and pray to you once again in the country of their captivity, saying, "We have sinned, we have acted wrongly and wickedly," 38 and turn back to you with all their heart and soul in the country of their captivity to which they have been carried away as captives, and pray, turning towards the country which you gave to their ancestors, towards the city you have chosen, and 39 towards the Temple which I have built for your name, ·then listen from heaven where you reside, hear their prayer and entreaties, uphold their cause and forgive your people for having sinned against you.

Conclusion of the prayer [d] ‖1 K 8:52

40 'Now, O my God, may your eyes be open and your ears attentive to prayer offered
41 in this place. ·And now

‖Ps 132:8–10

Yahweh God, go up to your resting-place,
you and your fortress, the Ark!
Let your priests, Yahweh God, be robed in salvation,
let your faithful rejoice in what is good!
42 Yahweh God, do not rebuff your Anointed—remember the faithful love of your servant David!'

The dedication [a]

1 7 When Solomon had finished his prayer, fire came down from heaven and 1 Ch 21:26+ consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of Yahweh filled
2 the Temple. ·The priests could not enter the Temple of Yahweh, because the glory =5:14 Ex 24:16f
3 of Yahweh filled the Temple of Yahweh. ·When all the Israelites saw the fire come down and the glory of Yahweh resting on the Temple, they bowed down on the pavement with their faces to the earth, worshipping and praising Yahweh with 'For 5:13 Ps 136:1
he is good, for his faithful love lasts for ever!'

4, 5 Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before Yahweh. ·King ‖1 K 8:62–63
Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand oxen and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep; and thus the king and all the people dedicated the Temple
6 of God. ·The priests stood in their places, as did the Levites with Yahweh's musical instruments which King David had provided, to render 'Give thanks to Yahweh, Ps 136:1 Nb 10:1–10 for his faithful love lasts for ever!' whenever David offered praise to their accompaniment. Opposite them, the priests blew trumpets, while all Israel stood.

7 Solomon also consecrated the middle part of the court in front of the Temple of ‖1 K 8:64–68
Yahweh; for that was where he presented the burnt offerings and the fatty parts of the communion sacrifices, since the bronze altar which Solomon had made could

b. The v. is unique to the Chronicler but possibly preserves an authentic tradition; there was some kind of dais reserved for the king in the Temple, see 2 K 16:18; 23:3.

c. 'a curse is laid' nasa' following Gk; Hebr. nasha' 'he engages himself'.

d. The Chronicler omits the references to the exodus from Egypt, to Moses and to God's choice of Israel, 1 K 8:51–53, substituting a free quotation from Ps 132:8–10, which celebrates the arrival of the ark in Jerusalem, the Davidic covenant and the promises for the stability of the dynasty.

7 a. To the account in 1 K 8, the Chronicler adds: a second theophany, 2 Ch 7:2, parallel to that at the installation of the ark in the Holy of Holies, 2 Ch 5:14; fire from heaven consuming the sacrifices, 2 Ch 7:1, 3, as at the inauguration of David's altar, 1 Ch 21:26; 2 Ch 7:6 on the music of the liturgy; and the prolongation of the festivities, see 2 Ch 7:10b.

not hold the burnt offering, the oblation and the fatty parts. ·And then Solomon 8 and with him all Israel from the Pass of Hamath to the Torrent of Egypt—a very great assembly—celebrated the feast for seven days. ·On the eighth day they held 9 the assembly, for they had devoted seven days to the dedication of the altar and seven days to the feast. ·On the twenty-third day [b] of the seventh month Solomon 10 dismissed the people to their homes, rejoicing and happy of heart over the goodness which Yahweh had shown to David, to Solomon and to his people Israel.

‖1 K 9:1–9 Yahweh appears and gives a warning [c]

Thus Solomon finished the Temple of Yahweh and the royal palace, and he 11 successfully concluded everything that he was of a mind to do in the Temple of Yahweh and in his own palace. ·Then Yahweh appeared to Solomon in the night 12 and said, 'I have heard your prayer and have chosen this place for myself as a house of sacrifice. ·If I shut the heavens so that there is no rain, or if I command the 13 locusts to devour the country, or if I send pestilence among my people, ·if my 14 people who bear my name humble themselves, and pray and seek my presence and turn from their wicked ways, then I will listen from heaven and forgive their sins and restore their country. ·Now and for the future my eyes are open and my ears 15 attentive to prayer offered in this place, ·for now I have chosen and consecrated 16
this Temple, for my name to be there for ever; my eyes and my heart will constantly be there. ·And if, for your part, you walk before me as your father David did, and 17 do everything that I have commanded you to do, and keep my laws and my ordinances, ·I shall make your royal throne secure, as I covenanted with your 18 father David when I said: You will never lack for a male to rule in Israel. ·But if 19 you turn away and forsake my laws and commandments which I have laid down for you, and go and serve other gods and worship them, ·then I shall uproot them from 20 the country which I have given them, and shall disown this Temple which I have consecrated for my name and make it a proverb and a byword among all the peoples. ·And at this once-exalted Temple, everyone who passes by will be appal- 21 led, and will say, "Why has Yahweh treated this country and this Temple like this?" ·And the answer will be, "Because they deserted Yahweh, the God of their 22 ancestors, who brought them out of Egypt, and adopted other gods and worshipped and served them; that is why he has brought all these disasters on them." '

‖1 K 9:10–25 Conclusion: The completion of the building programme

8 At the end of the twenty years which it took Solomon to build the Temple of 1 Yahweh and his own palace, ·and to rebuild the towns which Huram had given 2 him and settle them with Israelites, [a] ·Solomon mounted an expedition against 3 Hamath-Zobah [b] and captured it. ·He also fortified Tadmor in the desert [c] and all 4 the storage towns which he had built in Hamath. ·He also built Upper Beth-Horon 5 and Lower Beth-Horon as fortified towns with walls and gates and bars, ·also 6 Baalath and all Solomon's storage towns, all the towns for his chariots and horses, and everything which Solomon was pleased to build in Jerusalem, in the Lebanon and throughout the territory under his rule. ·All those who survived of the Hittite, 7 Amorite, Perizzite, Hivite and Jebusite peoples, who did not belong to Israel—those of their descendants still remaining in the country, whom the Israelites had 8 not exterminated, these Solomon levied for forced labour, as is still the case today.
Solomon did not, however, impose forced labour on the Israelites for his work— 9 for they were soldiers, his senior officers and his chariot and cavalry commanders.
There were two hundred and fifty of King Solomon's officials in charge of the 10 foremen who supervised the people.

Solomon moved Pharaoh's daughter up from the City of David to the palace 11 which he had built for her. 'I must not be responsible', he said, 'for a woman living in the palace of David king of Israel, for these buildings to which the ark of Yahweh has come are sacred.' [d]

Thereafter, Solomon made burnt offerings to Yahweh on the altar of Yahweh 12

13 which he had built in front of the portico, ·in accordance with the regular prescrip- Ex 23:14d tions for burnt sacrifice as commanded by Moses, on the Sabbaths, New Moons Nb 28–29 and the three annual feasts; the feast of Unleavened Bread, the feast of Weeks and 14 the feast of Shelters. ·Following the prescriptions of his father David, he assigned the orders of priests to their duties and the Levites to their tasks of praise and of 1 Ch 23–26 assisting the priests in accordance with day-to-day requirements; as also the gatekeepers in their various orders to each gate—for such was the command of David, 15 man of God. ·Nor was there deviation on any point from the king's command as regards the priests, the Levites or even the storehouses.
16 Thus, all the work was over which Solomon had put in hand when the Temple of Yahweh was founded until it was finished. The Temple of Yahweh was complete in every detail. [e]

Solomon in his glory

17 Solomon then mounted an expedition to Ezion-Geber and Elath on the sea-coast ‖1 K 9:26–28
18 of Edom. ·Huram sent him ships through his agents, as well as experienced sailors, who went to Ophir with men in Solomon's service, where they took on four hundred and fifty talents of gold, which they brought back to King Solomon.
1 9 The queen of Sheba heard of Solomon's fame and came to Jerusalem to test ‖1 K 10:1–13
Solomon with difficult questions, with a very large retinue with camels laden with spices and an immense quantity of gold and precious stones. Having reached 2 Solomon, she discussed everything that she had in mind with him, ·and Solomon had an answer for all her questions; not one of them was too obscure for Solomon 3 to answer for her. ·When the queen of Sheba saw how wise Solomon was, the 4 palace which he had built, ·the food at his table, the accommodation for his officials, the organisation of his staff and the way they were dressed, his cupbearers and the way they were dressed, and the burnt offerings, [a] which he made in the 5 Temple of Yahweh, it left her breathless, ·and she said to the king, 'The report I heard in my own country about you and about your wisdom in handling your affairs 6 was true, then! ·Until I came and saw for myself, I did not believe the reports, but clearly I was told less than half about the true extent of your wisdom. You surpass 7 what was reported to me. ·How fortunate your people are! [b] How fortunate your 8 courtiers, continually in attendance on you and listening to your wisdom! ·Blessed be Yahweh your God. [c] Because your God loved Israel and meant to keep it secure 9 for ever, he has made you its king to administer law and justice.' ·And she presented the king with a hundred and twenty talents of gold and great quantities of spices and precious stones. There never were such spices as those which the

b. Whereas 1 K 8 merely made the dedication of the Temple coincide with the feast of Shelters, the Chronicler imagines the feast of Dedication to have been followed by the feast of Shelters. According to Dt 16:13 15, the feast of Shelters lasted for only seven days, and that was how it was celebrated in 1 K 8:65–66: on the eighth day Solomon sent the people home. According to the ritual of Lv 23:33–43; Nb 29:35–38, however, the feast ended with a solemn gathering on the eighth day, and this is what the Chronicler has in mind; thus, from the 8th to the 14th of the 7th month, feast of Dedication; from the 15th to the 21st, feast of Shelters; the 22nd, final assembly; and 23rd, dismissal of the people. The text of Ch has reacted on 1 K, where a gloss on 1 K 8:65 has added another seven days of festivities.

c. vv. 13–16 (unique to the Chronicler) are the answer to the king's great prayer in the previous ch.

8 a. Presumably the towns in Galilee which Solomon had given to the king of Tyre, 1 K 9:11–12, who did not find them satisfactory. He seems to have refused them, which the Chronicler interprets as his having given them back.

b. The books of Samuel and Kings make a distinction between Hamath and Zobah. This campaign is not mentioned elsewhere and it may be that the Chronicler has attributed David's victory, 2 S 8:3; 10:8 (see 1 Ch 18:3f; 19:16), to Solomon to enhance the latter's reputation.

c. The Chronicler has transformed the village of Tamar, south west of the Dead Sea, 1 K 9:18, into the major city of Tadmor, later known as Palmyra.

d. This explanation does not occur in 1 K 9. Circumstances of ritual impurity peculiar to women excluded them from certain consecrated places. Preoccupation with this grew stronger after the Exile, ending with the establishing of a women's court in Herod's Temple.

e. The Chronicler transforms 1 K 9:25 (v. 12) and adds vv. 13–16, in which he shows Solomon's work as the implementation of rules laid down by David in conformity with Mosaic regulations elaborated in the Priestly Code.

9 a. 'burnt offerings which he made', versions, 1 K 10:15; Hebr. 'upper rooms where he went'.

b. Gk text of 1 K 10:8 reads 'your wives', which is doubtless original. The Chronicler has changed this, not wishing to mention Solomon's harem, see 1 K 11:1–8.

c. By adding these words, the Chronicler emphasises that Yahweh is the real king of Israel, however magnificent the human monarch deputising for him.

queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon. ·Similarly, the men employed by Huram 10 and the men employed by Solomon, who brought the gold from Ophir, also brought back algum wood and precious stones. ·Of the algum wood the king made 11 steps for the Temple of Yahweh and for the royal palace, and harps and lyres for the musicians, the like of which had never before been seen in Judah. ·And King 12 Solomon, in his turn, presented the queen of Sheba with everything that she expressed a wish for, besides what he gave her in exchange for what she had brought to the king. [d] After which, she went home to her own country, she and her servants.

‖1 K 10:14–15 The weight of the gold received annually by Solomon amounted to six hundred 13 and sixty-six talents of gold, ·besides what tolls and foreign trade brought in; all 14 the Arab kings and the provincial governors also brought gold and silver to ‖1 K 10:16–17 Solomon. ·King Solomon made two hundred great shields of beaten gold, six 15 hundred shekels of beaten gold going into one shield; ·also three hundred small 16 shields of beaten gold, three hundred shekels of gold going into one shield; and the ‖1 K 10:18–20 king put these into the House of the Forest of Lebanon. ·The king also made a 17 great ivory throne which he overlaid with refined gold. ·The throne had six steps 18 with a golden foot-rest attached to the throne, and arms on each side of the seat and two lions standing beside the arms, ·and twelve lions stood on either side of 19 the six steps. Nothing like it had ever been made in any other kingdom.

‖1 K 10:21–25 All King Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the plate in the House 20 of the Forest of Lebanon was of pure gold; silver was little thought of in Solomon's days, ·since the king's ships went to Tarshish with Huram's employees, and once 21 every three years the merchantmen would come back laden with gold and silver, ivory, apes and baboons. ·For riches and for wisdom, King Solomon surpassed all 22 kings on earth, ·and all the kings in the world consulted Solomon to hear the 23 wisdom which God had implanted in his heart, ·and everyone would bring a 24 present with him: objects of silver and of gold, robes, armour, spices, horses and mules; and this went on year after year.

=1:14 Solomon also had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve 25
‖1 K 5:6;10:26 thousand cavalrymen; these he stationed in the chariot towns and near the king in
‖1 K 5:1 Jerusalem. ·He was overlord of all the kings from the River to the territory of the 26
=1:15 Philistines and the Egyptian border. ·In Jerusalem the king made silver as common 27
‖1 K 10:27–8 as stones, and cedar wood as plentiful as sycamore in the Lowlands. ·Horses were 28 imported for Solomon from Muzur [e] and all the other countries too.

‖1 K 11:41–43 The death of Solomon

The rest of the history of Solomon, from first to last, is this not all written down in 29 the records of Nathan the prophet, in the Prophecy of Ahijah of Shiloh, and in the Vision of Iddo the seer [f] concerning Jeroboam son of Nebat? ·Solomon reigned in 30
Jerusalem over all Israel for forty years. ·When Solomon fell asleep with his 31 ancestors, he was buried in the City of his father David; Rehoboam his son succeeded him.

IV: FIRST REFORMS OF THE MONARCHICAL PERIOD

A: REHOBOAM AND THE REGROUPING OF THE LEVITES

‖1 K 12:1–19 The schism [a]

10 Rehoboam then went to Shechem, all Israel having come to Shechem to 1 proclaim him king. ·As soon as Jeroboam son of Nebat heard the news—he 2 was in Egypt, where he had taken refuge from King Solomon —he returned from Egypt. ·They now sent for him, so Jeroboam and all Israel came and spoke as 3 follows to Rehoboam, ·"Your father laid a cruel yoke on us; if you will lighten your 4 father's cruel slavery, that heavy yoke which he imposed on us, we are willing to 5 serve you.' •He said to them, 'Come back to me in three days' time.' And the people went away.

6 King Rehoboam then consulted the elders, who had been in attendance on his father Solomon while he was alive, and said, 'How do you advise me to answer this
7 people?' •They replied, 'If you are kind to these people, pleasant to them and give
8 them a fair reply, they will remain your servants for ever.' •But he rejected the advice given him by the elders and consulted the young men in attendance on him,
9 who had grown up with him. •He said, 'How do you advise us to answer these people who have been saying, "Lighten the yoke which your father imposed on 10 us"?' •The young men who had grown up with him replied, 'This is the way to answer the people who have been saying, "Your father made our yoke heavy, you must lighten it for us!" This is the right thing to say to them, "My little finger is 11 thicker than my father's loins! •Although my father laid a heavy yoke on you, I shall make it heavier still! My father controlled you with the whip, but I shall apply 12 a spiked lash!" ' •On the third day, Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam in obedience to the king's instructions, 'Come back to me in three days' 13 time.' •And the king gave them a harsh answer. King Rehoboam, rejecting the 14 advice of the elders, •spoke to them as the young men had recommended, 'My father made [b] your yoke heavy, but I shall add to it. My father controlled you with 15 the whip, but I shall apply a spiked lash.' •Thus the king refused to listen to the people, and this was brought about by God, so that Yahweh might fulfil the promise which he had made through Ahijah of Shiloh to Jeroboam son of Nebat.
16 When all Israel saw that the king refused to listen to them, the people answered the king thus:

What share have we in David?
—no heritage in the son of Jesse!
Each of you, to your tents, Israel!
Now look to your own house, David!

17 So Israel went home again. •Rehoboam, however, reigned over those Israelites
18 who lived in the towns of Judah. •When King Rehoboam sent Adoram who was in charge of forced labour, the Israelites stoned him to death, while King Rehoboam 19 managed to mount his chariot and escape to Jerusalem. •And Israel has remained in rebellion against the House of David from that day to this.

1 11 When Rehoboam reached Jerusalem, he mustered a hundred and eighty ‖1 K 12:21–24 thousand picked warriors of the House of Judah and Benjamin to fight 2 Israel and win back the kingdom for Rehoboam. •But the word of Yahweh came to 3 Shemaiah, man of God, •'Say this to Rehoboam son of Solomon, king of Judah,
4 and to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, •"Yahweh says this: Do not go and make war on your brothers; let everyone go home, for this is my doing." ' They obeyed Yahweh's command and went back instead of marching against Jeroboam.
5 Rehoboam, residing in Jerusalem, fortified a number of towns for the defence of 6, 7, 8 Judah. •He built Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, •Beth-Zur, Soco, Adullam, •Gath, 9, 10 Mareshah, Ziph, •Adoraim, Lachish, Azekah, •Zorah, Aijalon, Hebron, these 11 being the fortified towns in Judah and Benjamin. [a] •He equipped these fortresses, 12 stationing commanders in them, with supplies of food, oil and wine, •and shields

d. 'what he gave her in exchange for' supplied for clarity. The different text of 1 K 10:15 explains this.
e. 'Muzur' conj., 'Egypt' Hebr., see 1:16.
f. see 12:15: possibly the anonymous 'man of God' in 1 K 13. For Nathan, see 1 K 1. For Ahijah, see 1 K 11:26–39.

10 a. The ch. follows 1 K 12 almost word for word. The Chronicler can hardly avoid the fact of the schism, but he omits any reference to Jeroboam's earlier revolt, 1 K 11:26seq. and alludes only briefly, 11:14–15, to the religious schism recounted at length in 1 K 12:26–13:32.
b. 'My father made', 1 K 12:14; 'I shall make' Hebr.

11 a. Although the list of Rehoboam's fortified towns has no parallel in 1 K it comes from a sound historical source. Rehoboam's action may have followed Shishak's invasion, 12:9, which showed how vulnerable his territory was. The fortresses named did not lie along the frontier of Rehoboam's kingdom but would have presented strategic obstacles to attacks from Egypt, Philistia and Edom. They were garrisoned by regular troops, vv. 11–12.

and spears in each of these towns, making them extremely strong and thus retaining control of Judah and Benjamin.

The priests and Levites migrate to Judah [b]

The priests and the Levites from all over Israel left their districts to put themselves 13
Nb 35:2 at his disposal. ·The Levites, indeed, abandoned their pasture lands and their 14 holdings and came to Judah and Jerusalem because Jeroboam and his sons had 1 K 12:30 excluded them from the priesthood of Yahweh. ·Jeroboam had appointed his own 15
Lv 17:7c priests for the high places dedicated to the satyrs and calves which he had made.
And those members of all the tribes of Israel who were determined to seek 16
Yahweh, God of Israel, followed those priests and Levites to Jerusalem to sacrifice to Yahweh, God of their ancestors. ·These added strength to the kingdom of Judah 17 and gave their support to Rehoboam son of Solomon for three years. For three years they remained loyal to David and Solomon.

1 K 11:1–13 Rehoboam's family [c]

Rehoboam married Mahalath daughter of Jerimoth, son of David, and of Abihail [d] 18 daughter of Eliab son of Jesse, ·and she bore him sons; Jeush, Shemariah and 19
1 K 15:2 Zaham. ·After her, he married Maacah daughter of Absalom, who bore him 20
Abijah, Attai, Ziza and Shelomith. ·Rehoboam loved Maacah daughter of Absa- 21 lom, more than all his other wives and concubines. He had in fact a total of eighteen wives and sixty concubines and fathered twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters. ·Rehoboam named Abijah son of Maacah as head, hence leader, of his 22 brothers, with a view to making him king, [e] ·and acted wisely by distributing his 23 sons throughout the territories of Judah and Benjamin, some in each fortified town, where he provided plenty of food for them and found them wives. [f]

Rehoboam's unfaithfulness [a]

12 When Rehoboam had consolidated the kingdom and become strong, he, 1
1 K 14:22 and all Israel with him, abandoned the Law of Yahweh; ·and thus it 2 ‖1 K 14:25 happened that in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, Shishak king of Egypt marched on Jerusalem, because they had been unfaithful to Yahweh—·with twelve hundred 3 chariots and sixty thousand cavalry and countless hordes of Libyans, Sukkiim and Cushites who came from Egypt with him. ·They captured the fortified towns of 4 11:2 Judah and reached Jerusalem. ·The prophet Shemaiah then came to Rehoboam 5 and the generals of Judah, who had fallen back on Jerusalem before Shishak's advance, and said to them, 'Yahweh says this, "You have abandoned me and so I have abandoned you into Shishak's clutches." ' ·At this, the Israelite generals and 6 the king humbled themselves and said, 'Yahweh is just!' ·When Yahweh saw that 7 they had humbled themselves, the word of Yahweh came to Shemaiah as follows,
'They have humbled themselves. I shall not destroy them but shall grant them some degree of deliverance. My retribution will not be poured out on Jerusalem by means of Shishak; ·they are nonetheless to become his slaves, so that 8 they may learn the difference between serving me and serving kings of other countries.'
‖1 K 14:26–28 So Shishak king of Egypt advanced on Jerusalem and carried off the treasures of 9 the Temple and the treasures of the royal palace. He took everything away, including the golden shields which Solomon had made. ·To replace these, King 10
Rehoboam made bronze shields, entrusting them to the commanders of the guard who guarded the king's palace gate. ·Whenever the king went to the Temple of 11 Yahweh, the guards would come out carrying them, returning them to the guard-room afterwards.

Summary of the reign

Because King Rehoboam had humbled himself, the retribution of Yahweh turned 12 away from him so as not to destroy him completely; and there were also some good

13 features in Judah. ·Thus he was able to strengthen his position in Jerusalem and continue as king; for Rehoboam was forty-one years old when he came to the ‖1 K 14:21 throne and remained king for seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city chosen by Yahweh from all the tribes of Israel to put his name there. His mother's name 14 was Naamah the Ammonite. ·But he did wrong in not setting his heart on seeking Yahweh.
15 The history of Rehoboam, from first to last, is this not all written down in the ‖1 K 14:29–31 records of Shemaiah the prophet and of Iddo the seer? [b] Warfare between Reho-16 boam and Jeroboam went on throughout the period. ·When Rehoboam fell asleep with his ancestors, he was buried in the City of David; his son Abijah succeeded him.

B: ABIJAH AND LOYALTY TO THE LEGITIMATE PRIESTHOOD

War breaks out

1 13 In the eighteenth year of King Jeroboam, Abijah [a] became king of Judah ‖1 K 15:1–2,7 2 ·and reigned for three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Micaiah [b] daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. When war broke out between Abijah and Jeroboam, 3 Abijah took the field with an army of four hundred thousand picked warriors, while Jeroboam took the field against him with eight hundred thousand picked warriors.

Abijah addresses the Israelites [c]

4 Abijah took position on Mount Zemaraim, in the highlands of Ephraim. 'Jero-5 boam and all Israel,' he cried, 'listen to me! ·Do you not know that Yahweh, God of Israel, has given eternal sovereignty of Israel to David and his sons by an 6 inviolable covenant? [d] ·Yet Jeroboam son of Nebat, the slave of Solomon son of 7 David, rose in revolt against his master. ·Worthless men, scoundrels, rallied to Dt 13:14b him, proving too strong for Rehoboam son of Solomon, as Rehoboam was then 8 inexperienced and timid and unable to resist them. ·And now you propose to resist Yahweh's sovereignty as exercised by the sons of David because there is a great number of you and you have the golden calves that Jeroboam made you for gods!
9 Have you not driven out the priests of Yahweh, the sons of Aaron and the Levites, to make priests of your own like the peoples of foreign countries? Anyone who comes with a bull and seven rams to get himself consecrated can become priest of 10 these gods that are no gods. ·But for our part, our God is Yahweh, and we have not abandoned him; our priests are sons of Aaron who minister to Yahweh, and 11 those who serve are Levites; ·morning after morning, evening after evening, they present burnt offerings and perfumed incense to Yahweh, they put the bread of permanent offering on the clean table and nightly light the lamps on the golden lamp-stand; for we keep the decree of Yahweh our God, although you have

b. According to the Chronicler, Jeroboam's schism provoked a migration of priests, Levites and faithful laity to Jerusalem as the only legitimate sanctuary. An emigration of this sort did indeed occur after the fall of Samaria, two centuries later.

c. These details are unique to the Chronicler. Having passed over Solomon's many wives in silence, he makes a point of noting the harem of the apostate Rehoboam, see 11:21.

d. 'daughter (of Jerimoth)' Gk; 'son' Hebr. • 'and of Abihayil' Gk; 'Abihail' Hebr.

e. Rehoboam, like David, chose the son of his favourite wife to succeed him, regardless of seniority of birth, just as David had chosen Solomon.

f. 'found them wives' wayyissah lahem nashim conj.; Hebr. wayyissheal hamon nashim 'consulted many wives'.

12 a. To the account of Shishak's campaign in 1 K 14, the Chronicler adds vv. 2[b]-8 and 12 from an independent source, possibly the writings of the prophet Shemaiah, mentioned in v. 15.

b. Hebr. adds 'as also the official genealogy'.

13 a. The Abijam of 1 K 14:31; 15:1, 7, 8.

b. In 11:20; 1 K 15:2 and Gk she is called Maacah with descent from Absalom.

c. This composition, unique to the Chronicler, is a good example of levitical preaching of his own times, using past events to draw a lesson for a present situation. Through the Israelites of the times of Abijah, the Chronicler is addressing the people of Samaria, reminding them that Judah has the only true jurisdiction, the only true God, the only legitimate priesthood and the only liturgy conforming to the laws of the Pentateuch.

d. lit. 'covenant of salt', see Lv 2:13.

Nb 10:9 abandoned him. ·See how God is with us, at our head, and his priests with trumpets 12
2 M 7:19 Ac 5:39 to sound the alarm against you! Israelites, do not make war on Yahweh, God of your ancestors, for you will not succeed.'

The battle [e]

Now Jeroboam had sent a party round to ambush them from the rear; thus the 13 main force confronted Judah and the ambush lay to their rear. ·And when Judah 14 looked round, they found themselves being attacked from front and rear. They called on Yahweh, the priests sounded the trumpets, ·and the men of Judah raised 15 the war cry and, as they raised the cry, God routed Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. ·So the Israelites fled before Judah, because God had given 16 Judah the upper hand, ·and Abijah and his army inflicted a great slaughter on 17 them: five hundred thousand of Israel's picked men fell, killed. ·So the Israelites 18 were humbled on that occasion, while the Judaeans won, since they had relied on Yahweh, God of their ancestors.

The end of the reign of Abijah

Abijah pursued Jeroboam, taking from him the towns of Bethel with its depend- 19
encies, Jeshanah with its dependencies and Ephron with its dependencies,[f] ·nor 20 did Jeroboam regain strength during Abijah's lifetime. Eventually Yahweh struck him and he died, ·but Abijah grew stronger than ever; he married fourteen wives 21
‖1 K 15:7–8 and fathered twenty-two sons and sixteen daughters. ·The rest of the history of 22
Abijah, his conduct and his sayings, are recorded in the midrash of the prophet 12:15;14:1 Iddo. ·When Abijah fell asleep with his ancestors, he was buried in the City of 23 14:1
David; his son Asa succeeded him.

C: ASA AND HIS REFORM OF PUBLIC WORSHIP

Peace under Asa

In his time the country was at peace for ten years.

‖1 K 15:11–12 14 Asa did what Yahweh his God regards as good and right. ·He abolished the 1, 2 2, 3
Ex 23:24k; 34:13e foreign altars and the high places, broke the pillars, cut down the sacred 1 S 9:12f poles, ·and urged Judah to seek Yahweh, God of their ancestors, and to observe 3 4 the law and commandment.[g] ·Because he abolished the high places and incense 4 5 altars through the towns of Judah, the kingdom under him was undisturbed. ·He 5 6 rebuilt the fortified towns of Judah, since the country was at peace and free of war during those years, because Yahweh had granted him peace.

'Let us rebuild these towns,' he told Judah, 'let us surround them with wall and 6 7 tower, with gate and bar while the country is still ours, for we have sought Yahweh our God and he has sought us and given us peace all around.' They built and prospered.

Asa had an army of three hundred thousand men of Judah armed with shields 7 8 and spears and two hundred and eighty thousand men of Benjamin armed with 1 Ch 8:40h shields and bows, all of them outstanding soldiers.

Invasion by Zerah [h]

Zerah the Cushite took the field against them with an army a million strong and 8 9 three hundred chariots, and penetrated to Mareshah. ·Asa took the field against 9 10 him and the battle-lines were drawn up in the Valley of Zephathah, at Mareshah.
Asa then called on Yahweh his God and said, 'Yahweh, numbers and strength 10 11 make no difference to you when you give your help. Help us, Yahweh our God, for, relying on you, we are confronting this horde in your name. Yahweh, you are our God. Human strength cannot prevail against you!'

Yahweh routed the Cushites before Asa and Judah. The Cushites fled, ·and Asa 11, 12 12, 13 pursued them with his army as far as Gerar. So many of the Cushites fell that they were unable to survive. They were cut to pieces by Yahweh and his army.

14 13 They carried off a great deal of booty, ·they destroyed all the towns round Gerar—for a panic from Yahweh had seized the towns—and plundered all the 15 14 towns since they were full of loot. ·They also routed the cattle-owners and carried off great numbers of sheep and camels; then they returned to Jerusalem.

Azariah's sermon and the reform

1. 2 15 The spirit of God then came on Azariah son of Oded; ·he went out to meet Asa and said, 'Listen to me, Asa, and all you in Judah and in Benjamin: Yahweh will be with you so long as you are with him. If you seek him, he will let Ws 1:1c+ Jr 29:13–14+
3 you find him; but if you desert him, he will desert you. ·For a long time Israel did Ho 3:4–5
4 not have the true God or a teacher-priest or a law. ·but when in their distress they 5 turned to Yahweh, God of Israel, and sought him, he let them find him. ·In those Dt 4:29–30,30h times there was no security for people as they went about their business, but great 6 unrest affecting the inhabitants of all countries, ·nation being crushed by nation Is 19:2
and city by city, since God caused confusion among them by every kind of distress.
7 So be strong, do not be discouraged, for your deeds will be rewarded.' Is 7:4 Jr 31:16

Asa's religious reforms[a]

8 When Asa heard these words and the prophecy,[b] he took courage and removed the abominable idols throughout the land of Judah and Benjamin as well as from the towns which he had captured in the highlands of Ephraim, and repaired the 9 altar of Yahweh which stood in front of the portico of Yahweh. ·He summoned all Judah and Benjamin as well as those Ephraimites, Manassehites and Simeonites who had settled with them—for a great many people from Israel had gone over to 10 Asa when they saw that Yahweh his God was with him. ·They assembled in 11 Jerusalem in the third month of the fifteenth year of Asa's reign, ·that day sacrificing to Yahweh seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep from the 12 booty which they had brought back. ·They then made a covenant to seek Yahweh, 13 God of their ancestors, with all their heart and soul; ·anyone who would not seek Ne 10:30 Yahweh, God of Israel, was to be put to death, whether high or low, man or 14 woman. ·They pledged their oath to Yahweh in ringing tones, with shouts of joy,
15 to the sound of trumpet and horn; ·all Judah rejoiced over the oath, for they had sworn it wholeheartedly, and sought him so earnestly that he allowed them to find him; Yahweh gave them peace all round.

16 King Asa even deprived his mother Maacah of the dignity of Great Lady for 1 K 15:13–15 having made an obscenity for Asherah; Asa cut down her obscenity, smashed it
17 and burnt it in the ravine of the Kidron. ·Though the high places were not abolished
18 in Israel, Asa's heart was loyal throughout his life. ·He deposited his father's and his own dedicated gifts of silver, gold and sacred vessels, in the Temple of Yahweh.

19 Up to the thirty-fifth year of Asa's reign there was no war.

e. The battle is described in terms reminiscent of the capture of Ai, Jos 8, and Gibeah, Jg 20 (the ambush) and of the narratives of holy war (war cry, trumpets and ascription of the victory to God), see Jos. 6.

f. This territorial conquest is probable enough, but did not last. In the constant skirmishes between Judah and Israel, there was alternate gain and loss on each side, 15:8; 16:1–6; 17:2; 1 K 15:16–23.

14 a. The Chronicler improves on the eulogy of Asa in 1 K 15 by crediting him with religious reforms, about which he says more in ch. 15.

b. Although this incident is not mentioned in 1 K, the precision over place names and inconsistency with the general picture of Asa's peaceful reign, see vv. 5–6; 15:19, seem to vouch for its authenticity. Zerah, otherwise unknown, may have been the leader of a group of Ethiopian mercenaries, stationed in the Negeb by Shishak, see ch. 12, to garrison the area of Gerar. But Cush could indicate also the nomads of Negeb (see Moses' Cushite wife, Nb 12:1b) who had come to raid Judah, v. 14. The numbers involved are doubtless exaggerated.

15 a. The Chronicler amplifies the theme stated in 14:1–4. The reforms are inspired by a prophet, v. 1, see v. 8b, and comprise the suppression of idols throughout the country, repairs to the Temple, a solemn sacrifice and a renewal of the covenant. The narrative seems to be based on the reforms of Hezekiah, ch. 29–31, cf. Jr 26:18–19, and more particularly those of Josiah, 2 Ch 34–35, where the same features occur: suppression of idols and high places throughout the country, repairs to the Temple, prophetic preaching, renewal of the alliance and solemn sacrifices.

b. Hebr. adds 'of the prophet Oded', though in v. 1 the event is related to his father.

War with Israel [a]

‖1 K 15:16–22

16 In the thirty-sixth year of Asa's reign, Baasha king of Israel marched on 1 Judah and fortified Ramah to block the communications of Asa king of Judah. ·Asa then took silver and gold from the treasuries of the Temple of Yahweh 2 and the royal palace and sent this with the following message to Ben-Hadad king of Aram, who lived in Damascus, ·'Let us make an alliance between me and you, 3 between my father and your father! Look, I have sent you silver and gold. Come, break off your alliance with Baasha king of Israel, which will make him withdraw from me.' ·Ben-Hadad listened favourably to King Asa and sent the generals of his 4 armies to attack the towns of Israel; he ravaged Ijon, Dan, Abel-Maim and all the storage towns of Naphtali. ·When Baasha heard this he gave up fortifying Ramah, 5 abandoning this work. ·King Asa then had all Judah carry away the stones and 6 timber with which Baasha had been fortifying Ramah, and used them to fortify Geba and Mizpah.

Then it was that Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah and said, 'Because 7
you relied on the king of Aram and not on Yahweh your God, the king of Aram's 14:8–14 army will slip through your fingers. ·Did not the Cushites and Libyans form a vast 8 army with great numbers of chariots and cavalry? Even so, because you relied on Ps 33:13–15 Yahweh, he gave you the upper hand; ·for Yahweh's eyes rove to and fro across 9 the whole world to support those whose hearts are loyal to him. You have acted Jr 20:2 like a fool in this respect; hence, from now on you will have wars.' ·Enraged with 10
the seer, Asa had him put in the stocks in prison, being angry with him over this; at the same time Asa ill-treated some of the people too.

‖1 K 15:23–24 The end of the reign of Asa

The history of Asa, from first to last, is recorded in the Book of the Kings of Judah 11 and Israel. ·In the thirty-ninth year of his reign, Asa contracted a disease in his 12 feet, which became very severe; in his illness, however, he consulted not Yahweh but the doctors. [b] ·Asa then fell asleep with his ancestors, dying in the forty-first 13 year of his reign. ·He was buried in the tomb [c] which he had ordered to be cut for 14 him in the City of David. He was laid in the burial chamber which was filled with perfume blended from all sorts of oils, and a very great funeral fire was made for him. [d]

D: JEHOSHAPHAT AND HIS GOVERNMENT

Jehoshaphat's military policy [a]

17 When his son Jehoshaphat succeeded him, he made himself stronger against 1
Israel ·by stationing troops in all the fortified towns in Judah and by 2 garrisoning Judah and the towns of Ephraim which his father Asa had captured.

His devotion to religion

Yahweh was with Jehoshaphat because he followed the example of his father's 3 earlier days and did not have recourse to Baal, [b] ·but sought Yahweh, the God of 4 his father, following his commandments and not behaving as Israel did. ·Because 5 of this, Yahweh put him in secure control of the kingdom, while all Judah gave Jehoshaphat presents until ample riches and honour were his. ·He was so enthu- 6
Ex 34:13e
1 S 9:12+ siastic about obeying Yahweh that once again he abolished the high places and sacred poles in Judah.

In the third year of his reign he sent his leading men—Ben-Hail, Obadiah, 7
Zechariah, Nethanel and Micaiah, to give instruction in the towns of Judah. [c] ·With 8 19:8 them went the Levites: Shemaiah, Nethaniah, Zebadiah, Asahel, Shemiramoth, Jehonathan, Adonijah and Tobijah, the Levites; Elishama and Jehoram the priests

9 went with them. •They gave instruction in Judah, having with them the book of the Law of Yahweh, and went round all the towns of Judah instructing the people. Ezr 7:25
10 A panic from Yahweh seized all the kings of the countries surrounding Judah, as 11 a result of which they did not make war on Jehoshaphat. •Some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents and a load of silver and the Arabs[d] brought him seven thousand seven hundred rams and seven thousand seven hundred he-goats. Is 16:1 12 Jehoshaphat became more and more powerful. He built fortresses and storage towns in Judah.

The army[e]

13 He accumulated ample supplies in the towns of Judah.
14 He also had warriors, outstanding men, in Jerusalem. •According to family, this is how they were classified:
Over the commanders of the thousands of Judah was General Adnah, who had three hundred thousand outstanding men;
15 Under him was General Jehohanan, who had two hundred and eighty thousand;
16 Under him was Amasiah son of Zichri, who had volunteered for Yahweh and who had two hundred thousand outstanding men;
17 That outstanding soldier, Eliada, represented Benjamin, and he had two hundred thousand men armed with bow and shield; 1 Ch 8:40h
18 And under him Jehozabad, who had one hundred and eighty thousand equipped for war.
19 These were in attendance on the king, apart from those whom the king had stationed in the fortified towns all over Judah.

His alliance with Ahab and the intervention of the prophets[a] ‖1 K 22:1–35

1 18 Although Jehoshaphat enjoyed great wealth and honour, he allied himself
2 by marriage to Ahab.[b] •After some years he paid a visit to Ahab in Samaria. Ahab slaughtered an immense number of sheep and oxen for him and his retinue,
3 to induce him to attack Ramoth-Gilead.[c] •Ahab king of Israel then said to Jehoshaphat king of Judah, 'Will you come with me to Ramoth-Gilead?' He replied, 'I will share in battle with you, my men with yours.'

The spurious prophets predict success

4 Jehoshaphat, however, said to the king of Israel, 'First, please consult the word of 5 Yahweh.' •So the king of Israel called the prophets together, four hundred of them. 'Should we go and attack Ramoth-Gilead,' he asked, 'or should I hold back?' 'March,' they replied, 'for God will deliver it into the king's power.
6 Jehoshaphat, however, said, 'Is there no other prophet of Yahweh here, for us to 16 a. To the parallel account in 1 K 15:16–24, the Chronicler adds the precise date, v. 1, probably from a good source, and the intervention of a prophet, vv. 7–10, who condemns the appeal for foreign help, compare Isaiah in the case of Egypt, Is 30:1–7; 31:1–3; also Ho 5:13, 7:11; 12:2.

b. In those times medicine was often mixed with magic, but the text means primarily that Asa sought a remedy from the doctors for an illness, which was a punishment from God, cf. v. 10.

c. Hebr. 'tombs'.

d. Not a cremation but the burning of spices, to celebrate the interment of kings who died at peace with God, Jr 34:5, and beloved by their subjects, as here; cf. Jehoram, of whom the Chronicler disapproves, refusing him this final accolade, 21:19–20.

17 a. As the Chronicler sees Asa as a type of the peaceful, so he sees Jehoshaphat as the type of the strong king. The King's name means 'Yahweh-is-judge'. With Hezekiah and Josiah he is one of the Chronicler's favourites.

b. 'his father' Gk, see 20:32; 'David his father' Hebr.

c. This mission of teaching the Law, entrusted to five laymen, eight Levites and two priests, can hardly belong to the reign of Jehoshaphat. Rather does it reflect the Chronicler's own period, by which time the teaching function of the Levites (preparing for the synagogue and teachers of the Law) was developing.

d. Not the inhabitants of distant Arabia but groups which had infiltrated into the Negeb, see 21:16.

e. Apart from the inflated numbers this note comes from a reliable source. Jehoshaphat had a conscript army, recruited by families, distributed by companies in which Judah and Benjamin are distinct. There was also garrison-duty.

18 a. The Chronicler, having no interest in the history of the Northern Kingdom, omits all material about Elijah, 1 K 17–18, and Elisha, 2 K 2–8, but includes this passage since it concerns his hero and the activities of a true prophet as opposed to Ahab's spurious ones.

b. His son Jehoram married Athaliah, daughter or sister of Ahab, see 2 K 8:18j.

c. An ill-omened sacrificial feast since not offered in Jerusalem (not mentioned in 1 K 22).

consult?' ·The king of Israel answered Jehoshaphat, 'There is one more man 7 through whom we can consult Yahweh, but I hate him because he never has a favourable prophecy for me, always unfavourable ones; he is Micaiah son of Imlah.' 'The king should not say such things,' said Jehoshaphat. ·The king of Israel 8 then summoned a court official and said, 'Bring Micaiah son of Imlah immediately.'

The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah were sitting each on his throne, 9 wearing their robes; in an open space just outside the gate of Samaria, with all the prophets prophesying before them, ·Zedekiah son of Chenaanah, who had made 10 himself some iron horns, said, 'Yahweh says, "With horns like these, you will gore the Aramaeans till you make an end of them." ' ·And all the prophets prophesied 11 in the same vein, saying, 'March on Ramoth-Gilead! Success is sure, for Yahweh has already given it to the king!'

The prophet Micaiah predicts defeat

The messenger who had gone to summon Micaiah said to him, 'Look! What the 12 prophets are saying is uniformly favourable to the king. So I hope you will say the same as they do and speak favourably.' ·Micaiah said, 'As Yahweh lives, I shall 13 speak exactly as Yahweh tells me!' ·When he came to the king, the king said, 14
'Micaiah, should we march to attack Ramoth-Gilead, or should I hold back?' He replied, 'Go and conquer, Yahweh will deliver them into your power!' ·The king 15 went on 'How often must I put you on oath to tell me nothing but the truth in the name of Yahweh?' ·Then he spoke out. 16

I saw all Israel scattered on the mountains
like sheep without a shepherd.
And Yahweh said, 'These have no master,
let them all go peacefully home!'

At this the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'Did I not tell you that he never 17 gives me favourable prophecies, but only unfavourable ones?' ·Micaiah went on, 18
'Now listen to the word of Yahweh. I saw Yahweh seated on his throne with the whole array of heaven standing on his right and on his left. ·Yahweh said, "Who 19 will entice Ahab king of Israel into marching to his death at Ramoth-Gilead?" At which some answered one way, and some another. ·A spirit then came forward 20 and stood before Yahweh and said, "I will entice him." "How?" Yahweh asked.
He replied, "I shall go and be a deceptive spirit in the mouths of all his prophets." 21 Yahweh said, "You will succeed in enticing him. Go and do it." ·And now, you 22 see, Yahweh has put a deceptive spirit into the mouths of your prophets here, for in fact Yahweh has pronounced disaster on you.'

Zedekiah son of Chenaanah then came up, struck Micaiah on the cheek and 23 said, 'Which way did Yahweh's spirit leave me, to speak to you?' ·'That is what 24 you will find out,' Micaiah retorted, 'the day you go from room to room, trying to hide.' ·The king of Israel said, 'Seize Micaiah and hand him over to Amon governor 25 of the city, and Joash the king's son, ·and say, "These are the king's orders: Put 26 this man in prison and feed him on nothing but bread and water until I am safely home.' ·Micaiah said, 'If you ever do get home safely, Yahweh has not spoken 27 through me.'[d]

The battle

The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah marched on Ramoth-Gilead. 28
The king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, 'I shall disguise myself to go[e] into battle, 29 but you put on your robes.' So the king of Israel disguised himself, and they went into battle. ·Now, the king of Aram had given his chariot commanders the 30 following order, 'Do not attack anyone of whatever rank, except the king of Israel.'
So, when the chariot commanders saw Jehoshaphat, they thought, 'That is the king 31 of Israel,' and surrounded him to attack. But when Jehoshaphat shouted his war cry, Yahweh came to his help, God drew them away from him, ·for 32

the chariot commanders, realising that he was not the king of Israel, broke off their pursuit.

33 Someone, however, drawing his bow without any special aim, shot the king of Israel between the joints of his armour. 'Turn about!' he said to his charioteer.
34 'Get me out of the fighting;[f] I am collapsing.' ·But the battle grew fiercer as the day went on, and the king of Israel had to be held upright in his chariot facing the Aramaeans until the evening, and at sunset he died.[g]

Jehoshaphat is rebuked by a prophet

1 19 Jehoshaphat king of Judah returned home safely, however, to Jerusalem.
2 Jehu[a] son of Hanani the seer went to meet him and said to King Jehoshaphat, 'Should a man give help to the wicked? Should you love those who hate
3 Yahweh and so bring his retribution on yourself? ·All the same, there are good things to your credit, since you have removed the sacred poles from the country and have set your heart on seeking God.'

His judicial reforms[b]

4 Jehoshaphat resided in Jerusalem but regularly went on progress among the people, from Beersheba to the highlands of Ephraim, to convert them to Yahweh, 5 God of their ancestors. ·He also appointed judges in the country in every one of 6 the fortified towns of Judah, ·saying to the judges, 'Be careful what you do, since Dt 1:16–17; 16:19 you are judging not by any human power but in the name of Yahweh, who will be 7 with you when you pronounce sentence. ·This being so, let fear of Yahweh govern you; be careful what you do, for Yahweh our God will not tolerate malpractice, Dt 10:17f partiality or the taking of bribes.'
8 Jehoshaphat also appointed some of the Levites, priests and heads of Israelite Dt 17:8–13
9 families in Jerusalem to settle disputes. They lived at Jerusalem[c] ·and Jehoshaphat gave them the following charge: 'In fear of Yahweh and with conscientious integ-
10 rity, this is how you are to act: ·whatever case your brothers living in other towns refer to you, whether involving blood feuds or law and commandment, statutes and judgements, you are to instruct them in such manner that they do not incur guilt before Yahweh and that you and your brothers do not incur his anger. If you
11 act thus, you will not incur guilt. ·Amariah the chief priest himself will be your president in all religious cases, and Zebadiah son of Ishmael, leader of the House of Judah, in all civil ones, while the Levites will act as officers of the court. Be firm, put this into practice and may Yahweh protect the right!'

A holy war[a]

1 20 Some time later, the Moabites and Ammonites, and with them the Meun-2 ites,[b] advanced to war against Jehoshaphat. ·Jehoshaphat received the

e. 'I shall disguise myself to go' Gk; 'Disguise yourself to go' Hebr., but see the sequel.

f. 'fighting' Gk; 'camp' Hebr.

g. The Chronicler, interested only in Jehoshaphat and Judah, leaves out the details of 1 K 22: 35[b]–38 on the death of Ahab.

19 a. The prophet Jehu does not feature in the Book of Kings, but appears here to express the Chronicler's opinion of the alliance with Ahab; it displeased God, but nevertheless Jehoshaphat's good deeds earned him pardon.

b. Although this reform is not mentioned in the Book of Kings it must be historical, even if the editing has been influenced by Dt and by the situation at the time of the Chronicler. Jehoshaphat instituted a central jurisdiction besides the district courts, and relieved the king of his office as supreme judge. This reform may have influenced the account of analogous measures attributed to Moses, see Ex 18:13g; and is the basis for the laws of Dt 16:18–20; 17:8–13, This measure was part of a religious reform, v. 4; the courts give judgment in the name of Yahweh, vv. 6, 8, and have authority over religious matters, vv. 10–11.

c. 'they lived at' wayyeshebu conj., Hebr. wayyashubu 'they returned to'; Gk 'to judge the inhabitants of'.

20 a. This episode, vv. 1–30, has no parallel in 1 K but seems, to judge from the exactness of the place names, to be based on a solid tradition, even though the style is influenced by the Deuteronomist and earliest accounts of holy warfare, see particularly vv. 15–18, 22–23, 29. Its historical nucleus could be an attack by elements coming from Transjordan and the Negeb in one of those periodical thrusts which ended in the settlement of the Edomites in the south of Palestine.

b. 'Meunites' Gk; Hebr. corrupt. Their name is generally connected with Maan in Transjordan, east of Petra, but the connection is not certain. In the sequel of the story they are replaced by the people of Mount Seir. 'Seir' is the equivalent of Edom, but is applied also to the central mountainous area of the northern Negeb.

following intelligence, 'A vast horde is advancing on you from the other side of the Sea, from Edom; [c] they are already at Hazazon-Tamar, that is, En-Gedi.'

1 K 21:9 Jr 36:6 Jl 1:14 Jehoshaphat was alarmed and resolved to have recourse to Yahweh; he pro- 3 claimed a fast throughout all Judah. ·So Judah assembled to seek help from 4 Yahweh; to seek Yahweh they came from every town in Judah.

Then, standing in the Temple of Yahweh in front of the new court among the 5
Dt 4:35j.39 assembled people of Judah and Jerusalem, Jehoshaphat ·said, [d] 'Yahweh, God of 6 our ancestors, are you not God in heaven, and do you not rule all the kingdoms of the nations? Your power and might are such that no one can resist you. ·Did not 7 you, our God, dispossess the inhabitants of this country for your people Israel and Is 41:8 give it to the descendants of Abraham, your friend, for ever? ·They have lived in it 8 and built you a sanctuary there for your name, ·saying, "If disaster, war, flood, 9 pestilence or famine befall us, and we stand in front of this Temple, before you—for your name is in this Temple—and cry to you in our distress, then you will listen and rescue us."

'Now see, the Ammonites and Moabites and the people of Mount Seir, whom 10 Dt 2:4seq., 9seq.;18seq. you would not allow Israel to invade when they came out of Egypt—on the contrary, Israel avoided them, and did not destroy them—·see how they reward 11 us, by coming to drive us out of your possession which you allotted to us! ·Our 12
God, will you not pass sentence on them, since we are helpless against this vast horde about to attack us? Because we do not know what to do, we look to you.'

All Judah, including their families, wives and children, were standing before 13
Yahweh, ·when, in the middle of the assembly, the spirit of Yahweh came on 14
1 Ch 9:15 Ne 11:17,22 Jahaziel [e] son of Zechariah, son of Benaiah, son of Jeiel, son of Mattaniah the Levite, a member of the clan of Asaph, ·who then cried, 'Listen, all Judah and 15
you citizens of Jerusalem, and you, King Jehoshaphat! Yahweh says this to you, "Do not be afraid, do not be daunted by this vast horde, for the war is not your affair but God's. ·Go down against them tomorrow; they are coming up by the 16 Slope of Ziz and you will encounter them at the end of the ravine near the desert of Jeruel. ·You will not need to fight in this battle. Take up your position, stand firm, 17 and see what salvation Yahweh has in store for you. Judah and Jerusalem!
Is 8:10 Be fearless, be dauntless; march out against them tomorrow and Yahweh will be with you." '

Jehoshaphat bowed his head, his face to the ground, and all Judah and the 18 citizens of Jerusalem fell down before Yahweh to worship Yahweh. ·Then the 19
Levites—both the Kohathites and Korahites—stood up to praise Yahweh, God of Israel, at the top of their voices.

Early next morning they prepared to set out for the desert of Tekoa. As they 20 were setting out, Jehoshaphat stood up and said, 'Listen to me, Judah and you Is 7:9 citizens of Jerusalem! Believe in Yahweh your God and you will be secure; believe in his prophets and you will be successful.' ·Then, having conferred with the 21 people, he appointed singers who were to praise Yahweh and go out ahead of the army in sacred vestments, singing

Ps 136:1
Praise Yahweh,
for his faithful love endures for ever!

The moment they began their shouts of praise, Yahweh sprang an ambush on 22
the Ammonites, Moabites and the people of Mount Seir who were invading Judah, and that was the end of them, ·for the Ammonites and Moabites turned on the 23
Jos 6:17c people of Mount Seir, and put them under the curse of destruction and then,
Ezk 38:21 having finished off the people of Seir, set to work slaughtering one another.

When Judah reached the point overlooking the desert and looked towards the 24 horde, there were nothing but corpses lying on the ground; no one escaped. When Jehoshaphat arrived to take the booty, they found quantities of cattle and 25 innumerable possessions, clothes and valuables, [f] which they seized for themselves; it was impossible to carry it, and it took them three days to collect it. ·On the 26 fourth day they assembled in the Valley of Beracah, where they blessed Yahweh—hence the place was given the name Valley of Beracah, which it still has today.

27 Then all the men of Judah and Jerusalem returned joyfully to Jerusalem with Jehoshaphat at their head as Yahweh had given them cause to rejoice over their 28 enemies. ·To the sound of lyre, harp and trumpet they came to Jerusalem, to the 29 Temple of Yahweh, ·and a panic from Yahweh seized all the neighbouring kings Dt 2:25 30 when they heard how Yahweh had fought against the enemies of Israel. ·And henceforth Jehoshaphat's reign was undisturbed, for his God gave him peace all around.

The end of the reign of Jehoshaphat ‖1 K 22:41–51

31 So Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name 32 was Azubah daughter of Shilhi. ·He followed the example of his father Asa 33 undeviatingly, doing what Yahweh regards as right. ·The high places, however, 17:6 were not abolished; the people had still not set their hearts on the God of their 34 ancestors. ·The rest of the history of Jehoshaphat, from first to last, is written down in the records of Jehu son of Hanani, which are quoted in the Book of the Kings of Israel.
35 Afterwards, Jehoshaphat formed a partnership with Ahaziah king of Israel, 36 which was very wrong of him. ·He joined him in building some ships to go to 37 Tarshish; they built them at Ezion-Geber. ·Eliezer son of Dodavahu of Mareshah then prophesied against Jehoshaphat as follows, 'Because you have become Ahaziah's partner, Yahweh has wrecked your efforts.' The ships were wrecked and were never fit to sail for Tarshish. [g] 1 21 Then Jehoshaphat fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried with them in the city of David; his son Jehoram succeeded him.

E: IMPIETY AND DISASTERS UNDER JEHORAM, AHAZIAH, ATHALIAH AND JOASH

Accession of Jehoram; he massacres his brothers

2 Jehoram's brothers, sons of Jehoshaphat, were Azariah, Jehiel, Zechariah, Aza-riahu, Michael and Shephatiah—all of them sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel. [c] 3 Their father had lavishly given them presents of silver, gold and other valuables as well as fortified towns in Judah, but the throne he bequeathed to Jehoram since he 4 was the first-born. ·Jehoram, having taken control of his father's kingdom and secured his own position, put all his brothers to the sword and some officials of Israel too.
5 Jehoram was thirty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned ‖2 K 8:17–19
6 for eight years in Jerusalem. ·He followed the example of the kings of Israel as the House of Ahab were doing, he having married one of Ahab's daughters; and he 7 did what is displeasing to Yahweh. ·But Yahweh would not destroy the House of David, [b] because of the covenant which he had made with David, promising to provide him and his sons with a lamp for ever. 1 K 11:36i

c. 'Edom' with 1 MS; 'Aram' Hebr., the two names being frequently confused.

d. The opening of this prayer repeats the themes of Solomon's prayer, 6:1seq.

e. The Chronicler attributes a prophetic spirit to this singer, 1 Ch 25:1a, as he does to Zechariah, son of the priest Jehoiada, 2 Ch 24:20.

f. 'of cattle' behemah conj.; Hebr. bahem 'among them'. • 'clothes' begadim MSS; Hebr. pegarim 'corpses'.

g. The Chronicler modifies the story in 1 K 22:49–51 by attributing the disaster to Jehoshaphat's business partnership with the heterodox King Ahaziah of Israel, 1 K 22:52–2 K 1:18. On Tarshish see 1 K 10:22f.

21 a. The versions amend to 'Judah', but see 28:19 for same usage. In v. 4, therefore, it is not clear whether the officials were Judaeans or visitors from the friendly court of Samaria.

b. To 2 K 8:19 the Chronicler adds mention of the House of David and the Davidic Covenant, these being the principal theme of his book.

The disasters of his reign

‖2 K 8:20–22 In his time Edom threw off the domination of Judah and set up a king for itself. 8
Jehoram crossed the frontier, and with him his commanders and all his chariots. 9
Under cover of dark, he and his chariot commanders broke through the Edomites surrounding him. ·Thus Edom threw off the domination of Judah and has re- 10 mained free to the present day. Libnah revolted against him at the same time, because he had abandoned Yahweh, God of his ancestors. ·What is more, he set 11 up high places in the highlands of Judah, leading the citizens of Jerusalem and the people of Judah into apostasy.

Something written by the prophet Elijah[c] then came into his hands. It said, 12
'Yahweh, God of your ancestor David, says this, "Since you have not followed the example of your father Jehoshaphat or of Asa king of Judah, ·but have followed 13 the example of the kings of Israel and have led Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem into apostasy, just as the House of Ahab has led Israel into apostasy, and have even murdered your brothers, your own family, who were better men than you, Yahweh is going to afflict your people, your sons, your wives and all your property 14 with a great calamity, ·and you yourself with a severe[d] disease affecting your 15 bowels, as a result of which disease, continuing day after day, you will suffer protrusion of your bowels." '

Yahweh then roused the hostility of the Philistines and of the Arabs living near 16
14:8b the Cushites against Jehoram. ·They invaded Judah, forcing their way into it and 17 carrying off all the property to be found in the king's palace, as well as his sons and his wives, so that he was left no sons at all except his youngest son Jehoahaz.[e]
And after all this, Yahweh afflicted him with an incurable disease of the bowels; 18 in due time, after about two years, his bowels protruded as a result of his disease 19 16:14 and he died in acute pain. His people did not make a funeral pyre for him, as they had for his ancestors.

He was thirty-two years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for eight 20 2 K 8:24[a] years in Jerusalem. He passed away unlamented and was buried in the City of David, though not in the tombs of the kings.

Reign of Ahaziah

2 K 8:24[b]–29 22 The inhabitants of Jerusalem then made his youngest son Ahaziah king in 1 succession to him, since the marauders who had attacked the camp with the Arabs had killed all the older ones. That was why Ahaziah son of Jehoram, king of Judah became king. ·Ahaziah was forty-two[e] years old when he came to the throne 2 and he reigned for one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Athaliah, descendant of Omri. ·He too followed the example of the House of Ahab, for his 3 mother being his adviser brought about his condemnation. ·He did what is displeas- 4 10:6seq. Qo 10:16 ing to Yahweh as the House of Ahab did, for they were his advisers after his father's death, to his undoing. ·He followed their advice and went with Jehoram 5 son of Ahab, king of Israel, to make war on Hazael king of Aram at Ramoth-Gilead. But the Aramaeans[b] wounded Jehoram, ·who returned to Jezreel to 6 recover from the wounds which he had received at Ramoth, fighting against Hazael king of Aram. Ahaziah son of Jehoram, king of Judah, went down to Jezreel to visit Jehoram son of Ahab because he was ailing. ·Through this visit to Jehoram 7 ‖2 K 9:21 God brought ruin on Ahaziah. On his arrival he went out with Jehoram to meet Jehu son of Nimshi whom Yahweh had anointed to make an end of the House of ‖2 K 10:12–14 Ahab. ·While Jehu was executing sentence on the House of Ahab and came across 8 the officers of Judah and Ahaziah's nephews who were in attendance on Ahaziah, he killed them, ·and then went in search of Ahaziah. The latter was captured while 9 hiding in Samaria, and taken to Jehu who put him to death. But they gave him ‖2 K 9:28–29 burial because, they said, 'He was the grandson of Jehoshaphat who sought Yahweh with all his heart.'

As a result, there was no member of Ahaziah's family left who was strong enough to rule the kingdom.

Athaliah massacres the royal family of Judah ‖2 K 11:1–3

10 When Athaliah mother of Ahaziah learned that her son was dead, she promptly
11 did away with [c] all the royal stock of the House of Judah. •But Jehosheba the king's daughter, surreptitiously rescued Joash son of Ahaziah from among the chiefs who were to be murdered, and put him with his nurse in the sleeping quarters; in this way Jehosheba daughter of King Joram and wife of Jehoiada the priest—she was the sister of Ahaziah—hid him from Athaliah, and he was not put to death.
12 He stayed hidden with them in the Temple of God for six years while Athaliah governed the country.

Accession of Joash and death of Athaliah [a] ‖2 K 11:4–16

1 23 In the seventh year Jehoiada decided to take action and made a pact with the regimental commanders, Azariah son of Jeroham, Ishmael son of Jehohanan, Azariah son of Obed, Maaseiah son of Adaiah and Elishaphat son of Zichri.
2 These went all over Judah, gathering the Levites from all the towns of Judah, and 3 the heads of the Israelite families, who then came to Jerusalem, •and the whole assembly made a pact with the king in the Temple of God. Jehoiada said to them, 'Look, the king's son is now to be king, as Yahweh has promised of the sons of 4 David! •This is what you must do: a third of you priests and Levites who come on 5 duty on the Sabbath must guard the gates, •a third the royal palace, a third the Foundation Gate, while the people must all stay in the courts of the Temple of 6 Yahweh. •No one must enter the Temple of Yahweh except the priests and the ministering Levites; they may come in because they are consecrated. But 7 the people must all observe Yahweh's regulations. •The Levites must surround the king, each man with his weapons in his hands; anyone who enters the Temple must be killed. And you will escort the king when he comes in and when he leaves.'
8 The Levites and all Judah did everything as Jehoiada the priest had ordered, and each one brought his men, those coming on duty on the Sabbath and those going off duty on the Sabbath, for Jehoiada the priest had not released any of the 1 Ch 24:19
9 divisions from duty. •Jehoiada the priest then issued the regimental commanders with King David's spears and large and small shields, which were kept in the 10 Temple of God. •He then positioned all the people, each man with his weapon in his hand, from the south side of the Temple to the north side of the Temple, close 11 to the altar and the Temple, to form a circle round the king. •Then they brought the king's son out, crowned him, gave him a copy of the covenant and made him king. When Jehoiada and his sons [b] had anointed him, they shouted, 'Long live the king!'
12 On hearing the people shouting as they ran to acclaim the king, Athaliah joined 13 the people in the Temple of Yahweh. •When she looked, there stood the king on his dais by the entrance, with the officers and trumpeters at the king's side, and all the people of the country rejoicing and blowing the trumpets, and the singers with their musical instruments leading the hymns of praise. [c] Then Athaliah tore her 14 clothes and shouted, 'Treason, treason!' •Jehoiada the priest then gave the order

c. The only mention of Elijah in the book; 1 and 2 K say nothing of any activity of Elijah in Judah. According to the chronology of 2 K, Elijah had disappeared before Jehoram of Israel came to the throne, 2 K 2 and 3:1, and so before Jehoram of Judah, see 2 K 8:16; cf., however, 2 K 1:17. The Chronicler seems to have made use of an apocryphal tradition.

d. 'severe' Gk; 'many' Hebr.

e. As also in 25:23; otherwise Ahaziah, ch. 22. The palace in question can hardly have been in Jerusalem; more probably it was a royal residence lying in the path of the marauders and serving as Jehoram's battle headquarters; see 21:1, where a distinction seems to be drawn between 'Jerusalem' and 'the camp'.

22 a. 'twenty-two' according to 2 K 8:26.

b. 'Aramaeans' ha'arammim conj.; Hebr. harammim 'archers'.

c. 'did away with' te'abbed as 2 K 11:1; tedabber 'said', Hebr.

23 a. The Chronicler's views are reflected in a number of changes and additions to the parallel 2 K 11: the foreign mercenaries in the royal service are replaced by Israelites; the people are kept outside in the precincts; the Levites form the Temple guard and carry out Jehoiada's plan; everything is done according to 'Yahweh's regulations', v. 6, that is to say according to the Priestly Code. The coup d'état, originally conducted with the help of the military, is represented here as a clerical, almost indeed as a liturgical, action. Again, v. 3, the Chronicler stresses the Davidic Covenant.

b. An elaboration on 2 K 11:12, which does not specify who anointed the king.

c. An elaboration on 2 K 11:14.

to the regimental commanders in charge of the troops, 'Take her out between the ranks and put to the sword anyone who follows her.' For the priest had already said, 'Do not kill her inside the Temple of Yahweh.' ·So they made way for her, 15 and when she reached the entrance to the Horses' Gate of the palace, they killed her there.

‖2 K 11:17–20 Jehoiada's reform

Jehoiada made a covenant between himself, all the people and the king to remain 16
Yahweh's people. ·All the people then went to the temple of Baal and demolished 17
it; they smashed its altars and its images and killed Mattan the priest of Baal in front of the altars.

Jehoiada entrusted the security of the Temple of Yahweh to the priests and 18
Levites, whom David had put in charge of the Temple of Yahweh to present the 1 Ch 25 burnt offerings of Yahweh as laid down in the Law of Moses, [d] with joy and song as
1 Ch 23:13 ordained by David. ·He also appointed gatekeepers for the gates of the Temple of 19
1 Ch 26 Yahweh, so that no one who was unclean might enter for any purpose at all. [e]

He then took the regimental commanders, the nobles, the government officials 20 and all the people of the land and he escorted the king down from the Temple of Yahweh. Entering the palace through the Upper Gate, they placed the king on the royal throne. ·All the people of the land were delighted, and the city made no 21 move after Athaliah had been put to death.

24 Joash was seven years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for 1 forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah of Beersheba.
Joash did what Yahweh regards as right throughout the lifetime of Jehoiada 2 the priest. ·Jehoiada found him two wives and he fathered several sons 3 and daughters.

‖2 K 12:1–17 Joash repairs the Temple [e]

Later, Joash made up his mind to repair the Temple of Yahweh. ·Calling the 4, 5 priests and the Levites together, he said, 'Go out to the towns of Judah and collect money from all Israel for annual repairs to the Temple of Yahweh. Do this quickly.' But the Levites were in no hurry, [b] ·so the king summoned Jehoiada the 6
Ex 25:1–9; 38:24–31 chief priest and said, 'Why have you not insisted on the Levites' bringing in the tax from Judah and Jerusalem for the Tent of Witness, as imposed by Moses servant of Yahweh and the community of Israel?'—·Athaliah and her sons, whom she 7 corrupted, despoiled the Temple of God and even assigned all the sacred revenues of the Temple of Yahweh to Baal. ·So, at the king's order, a chest was made and 8 put outside the gate of the Temple of Yahweh, ·and a proclamation was issued 9 throughout Judah and Jerusalem that the tax, which Moses servant of God had imposed on Israel in the desert, was to be brought to Yahweh. ·Then all the 10 officials and all the people gladly brought in their contributions, depositing them in the chest until the payment was complete.

Whenever the chest was brought by the Levites for royal inspection and 11 found to contain a large sum of money, the king's secretary and the chief priest's representative would come and empty the chest and then have it returned to its place. This was done day after day and a great deal of money was collected. ·The 12
king and Jehoiada handed it over to the foreman attached to the Temple of Yahweh, and the hired masons and carpenters set about repairing the Temple of Yahweh; and iron-workers and bronze-workers worked to repair the Temple of Yahweh. ·The workmen got on with the work—the repair work made good 13 progress at their hands—until they had restored the Temple of God to its former state and reconditioned it. ·When they had finished, they brought the balance of 14 the money to the king and Jehoiada, and with this vessels were made for the Temple of Yahweh, vessels for the liturgy and for the burnt offerings, bowls and other gold and silver vessels. And the perpetual burnt offering was offered in the Temple of Yahweh throughout Jehoiada's lifetime.

15 But Jehoiada, growing old, had his fill of days and died. He died at the age of a 16 hundred and thirty years, ·and was buried with the kings in the City of David because he had served Israel and God and his Temple well.[c]

Joash's decline and death

17 After Jehoiada's death the officials of Judah came to pay court to the king, and 18 the king listened to their advice,[d] ·and they abandoned the Temple of Yahweh, God of their ancestors, for the worship of sacred poles and idols. Judah and Ex 34:13e 19 Jerusalem incurred wrath because of this guilt of theirs. ·He sent their prophets to lead them back to Yahweh; these put the case against them, but they would not Jr 25:4 20 listen. ·The spirit of God then invested Zechariah son of Jehoiada the priest. He stood up before the people and said, 'God says this, "Why transgress Yahweh's commands to your certain ruin? For if you abandon Yahweh, he will abandon 21 you." ' ·They then plotted against him and, at the king's order, stoned him in the ↗Mt 23:35o 22 court of the Temple of Yahweh. ·Thus King Joash, forgetful of the devotion which Jehoiada father of Zechariah had displayed on his behalf, murdered his son, who cried out as he died, 'Yahweh will see this and avenge it!'
23 At the turn of the year, the Aramaean army made war on Joash.[e] When they ‖2 K 12:18–22 reached Judah and Jerusalem, they massacred all the nation's government officials 24 and sent all their booty to the king of Damascus. ·Although the invading Aramaean army was only a small body of men, Yahweh allowed them to defeat a very large Dt 32:30 army because they had abandoned Yahweh, God of their ancestors; thus they executed judgement on Joash.
25 After they had retired—for they left him seriously wounded—·his own retainers plotted against him to avenge the blood of the son[f] of Jehoiada the priest and murdered him in his bed. When he died he was buried in the City of David, but not 26 in the tombs of the kings. ·These were the conspirators: Zabad son of Shimeath 27 the Ammonite and Jehozabad son of Shimrith the Moabite. ·As regards his sons, the heavy tribute imposed on him, and the restoration of the Temple of God, this is recorded in the Commentary on the Book of the Kings. His son Amaziah succeeded him.

F: THE HALF-HEARTED PIETY AND PARTIAL SUCCESS OF AMAZIAH, UZZIAH AND JOTHAM

Accession of Amaziah ‖2 K 14:2–6

1 25 Amaziah was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoad-2 dan of Jerusalem. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, though not wholeheart-3 edly. ·Once the kingdom was firmly under his control, he killed those of his

d. This and 30:16 are possibly the earliest examples of the term 'Law of Moses' being used to designate not only Deuteronomy, see Jos. 8:31; 23:6, but all five books known to us as the Pentateuch, see Introduction to Ecclesiasticus and Si 24:23. Recognition of the decisive role played by Moses is joined to consciousness of the link between Yahweh himself and the people of the alliance, see Dt 4:8.

e. In vv. 18–19, the Chronicler presents Jehoiada's reform as a restoration of Davidic institutions as he conceived them to be from his knowledge of the post-exilic Temple.

24 a. Basically the Chronicler's account follows 2 K 12. Where he diverges, he seems to be using a parallel account, possibly the 'Commentary on the Book of the Kings' mentioned in v. 27.

b. The Chronicler has replaced the offerings made to the Temple 2 K 12:5, by this collection inspired by prescriptions attributed to Moses, Ex 25:1–9; 30:12–16; 38:25–28, and repeated by Nehemiah, Ne 10:35, also Mt 17:24seq.

c. vv. 14–16 have no equivalent in the Book of Kings.

d. This change of policy is not mentioned in 2 K, but it seems likely that after Jehoiada's death Joash threw off clerical tutelage and adopted lay advisers. As in the case of other unsatisfactory kings, the Chronicler introduces prophets to admonish him, vv. 19–20.

e. 2 K mentions a war between Philistines and Aramaeans, who split off from Judah after paying a heavy tribute, and afterwards mentions the assassination of Joash. The Chronicler seems to have had another source which perhaps already represented the violent death of Joash as a punishment of his impiety.

f. 'son' LXX; 'sons', Hebr.

retainers who had murdered the king his father. ·But he did not put their sons to 4 death; this was in accordance with what is written in the Law, in the book of Moses, Dt 24:16 where Yahweh had commanded, 'Parents may not be put to death for children, nor children for parents, but each must be put to death for his own crime.'

His victorious campaign against Edom [a]

Amaziah summoned Judah and organised all Judah and Benjamin by families 5 under commanders of thousands and commanders of hundreds. He also made a register of those who were twenty years old and upwards, and found there were three hundred thousand picked men, ready for service and capable of wielding spear and shield. ·Furthermore, he hired a hundred thousand tough fighting men 6 from Israel for a hundred talents of silver. ·A man of God then came to him and 7 said, 'My lord king, do not let the Israelite troops march with you, for Yahweh is not with Israel or with any of the Ephraimites. ·For however valiantly you act in 8 war, God will bring you down before the enemy, for God has the power to uphold or to throw down.' ·Amaziah said to the man of God, 'But what about the hundred 9 talents which I have paid for the Israelite troops?' 'Yahweh can give you far more than that,' said the man of God. ·At this, Amaziah dismissed the troops who had 10 come to him from Ephraim and sent them home again. They were furious with Judah and went home in a great rage.

Amaziah then, coming to a decision, led out his own troops and, having reached 11
‖2 K 14:7 the Valley of Salt, struck down ten thousand Seirites. ·The men of Judah captured 12
ten thousand more alive and, taking them to the summit of the Rock, threw them off the summit of the Rock so that they were all dashed to pieces. ·Meanwhile, the 13 troops whom Amaziah had dismissed and not allowed to go into battle with him rased the towns of Judah, from Samaria to Beth-Horon, killing three thousand of their inhabitants and capturing great quantities of plunder.

On returning from his slaughter of the Edomites, Amaziah brought the gods of 14
the Seirites with him; he set these up as his gods, bowing down before them and burning incense to them. ·Yahweh's anger was aroused by Amaziah and he sent 15 him a prophet, who said to him, 'Why do you consult those people's gods when they could not save their own people from your clutches?' ·He was still speaking 16 when Amaziah interrupted him. 'Have we appointed you a royal counsellor? Stop, as you value your life!' So the prophet stopped, and then said, 'I know that God has decided to destroy you for having done this and for not listening to my advice.'

‖2 K 14:8–14 His disastrous campaign against Israel

After consultation, Amaziah king of Judah then sent a message to Joash son of 17
Jehoahaz son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, 'Come and make a trial of strength!'
Jg 9:7–15 Joash king of Israel sent back word to Amaziah king of Judah, 'The thistle of 18
Lebanon sent a message to the cedar of Lebanon, saying, "Give my son your daughter in marriage"; but a wild animal of the Lebanon ran over the thistle and squashed it. ·"Look at me, the conqueror of Edom," you say, and now aspire to 19 even greater glory. But stay where you belong! Why challenge disaster, to your own and Judah's ruin?'

But Amaziah would not listen, for this was an act of God to deliver them up for 20 having consulted the gods of Edom. ·So Joash king of Israel marched to the attack. 21
And at Beth-Shemesh, which belongs to Judah, he and Amaziah king of Judah made their trial of strength. ·Judah was defeated by Israel, and everyone fled to his 22 tent. ·The king of Judah, Amaziah son of Joash, son of Ahaziah, [b] was taken 23 prisoner at Beth-Shemesh by Joash king of Israel who led him off to Jerusalem, where he demolished four hundred cubits of the city wall between the Ephraim Gate and the Corner Gate; ·he then took back with him to Samaria all the gold and 24 1 Ch 26:15 silver, and all the vessels to be found in the Temple of God in the care of Obed-Edom, the treasures in the palace, and hostages besides.

His death

25 Amaziah son of Joash, king of Judah, lived for fifteen years after the death of Joash ‖2K 14:17–20 son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel.
26 The rest of the history of Amaziah, from first to last, is this not recorded in the 27 Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel? ·Some time after Amaziah had defected from Yahweh, a plot having been hatched against him in Jerusalem, he fled to 28 Lachish where he was murdered. ·He was then transported by horse and buried with his ancestors in the city of David. [c]

Accession of Uzziah

1 26 All the people then chose Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him ‖2 K 14:21–22
2 king in succession to his father Amaziah. ·It was he who rebuilt Elath,
3 recovering it for Judah, after the king had fallen asleep with his ancestors. ·Uzziah ‖2 K 15:2–4 was sixteen years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for fifty-two years 4 in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecoliah of Jerusalem. ·He did what is 5 pleasing to Yahweh, just as his father Amaziah [a] had done; ·he consulted God 24:2
throughout the lifetime of Zechariah, who instructed him in the fear of God. [b] And as long as he consulted Yahweh, God gave him success.

His military strength [c]

6 He went on campaign against the Philistines, demolished the walls of Gath, the walls of Jabneh and the walls of Ashdod, and built towns in the area of Ashdod and 7 elsewhere in Philistine territory. ·God helped him against the Philistines, the 8 Arabs living at Gur-Baal [d] and the Meunites. ·The Meunites paid tribute to Uzziah 20:1b and his fame spread as far as the frontier of Egypt, since he kept growing stronger and stronger.
9 Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem, at the Corner Gate, at the Valley Gate and at 10 the Angle, and fortified them. [e] ·He built towers in the desert too, and dug many storage-wells, for he had large herds in the lowlands and on the tableland, and farmers and vine dressers in the hills and fertile lands: for he loved 1 Ch 27:25–31
the land.
11 Uzziah had a trained army ready to go on campaign, organised in companies manned as detailed by the scribe Jeiel and the staff-officer Maaseiah, and com-12 manded by Hananiah one of the king's generals. ·The heads of families of the 13 military champions numbered in all two thousand six hundred. ·Under them was an army of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred men ready for war, a 14 powerful force to support the king against the enemy. ·Uzziah provided shields, 15 spears, helmets, armour, bows and sling-stones for the entire army. ·He also erected expertly contrived devices for the towers and angles of Jerusalem from which to shoot arrows and drop large stones. [f] His fame spread far and wide, for he was miraculously helped to become strong.

He is struck with a virulent skin-disease for his pride

16 But once he was strong, his arrogance was such that it led to his downfall; he was unfaithful to Yahweh his God by entering the Temple of Yahweh to burn incense 25 a. The section vv. 5–16 corresponds to a single v. in 2 K (14:7). The Chronicler seems to have drawn on a more developed source. The Israelite mercenaries, deprived of the booty which they might have won in the Edomite campaign, sack the towns of Judah in revenge. Their action leads to a punitive war against Israel, v. 17seq. The only reason given for the war in 2 K 14 is Amaziah's pride at having conquered Edom. Note the further intervention by prophets, vv. 7 and 15.

b. 'Ahaziah' conj.; 'Jehoahaz' Hebr.

c. 'David' 2 K 14:20; 'Judah' Hebr.

26 a. The sentence, taken from 2 K 15:3, is hardly reconcilable with 2 Ch 25.

b. 'fear of God' Gk; 'vision of God' Hebr. • Zechariah, otherwise unknown, was to Uzziah what Jehoiada had been to Joash.

c. The Chronicler was evidently able to draw on a good independent source for the reign of Uzziah and one much more extensive than 2 K 15:1–8. Uzziah's building activity in the desert, v. 10, is known from archaeology.

d. 'dwelling-place of Baal.'; this name occurs only here, and the site of the place is unknown.

e. He repairs the damage caused in the late war, 25:23.

f. Defensive screens projecting from the stonework, not platforms for catapults which were still unknown at that epoch.

on the altar of incense.[g] •Azariah the priest with eight brave priests of Yahweh 17
Nb 17:5 followed him in; •confronting King Uzziah, they said to him, 'Uzziah, you are not 18 allowed to burn incense to Yahweh; only the Aaronite priests consecrated for the purpose may burn incense. Leave the sanctuary, for you have been unfaithful and will have no honour from Yahweh God.' •Uzziah, censer in hand to burn incense, 19
Nb 12:10 flew into a rage. But while he was raging at the priests, a virulent skin-disease[h] broke out on his forehead in the presence of the priests, in the Temple of Yahweh, there by the altar of incense. •When Azariah the chief priest and all the other 20 priests turned towards him, there was skin-disease on his forehead and they hurried him outside, and he himself was equally anxious to get out, because Yahweh had struck him.

‖2 K 15:5–7 King Uzziah was afflicted with skin-disease till his dying day. Because of this, he 21
Lv 13:46 Nb 19:20 lived confined to his room and was excluded from the Temple of Yahweh, while Jotham his son, who was master of the palace, governed the people of the country.

The rest of the history of Uzziah, from first to last, has been written by the 22 prophet Isaiah son of Amoz.[i] •Then Uzziah fell asleep with his ancestors and was 23 buried with them in the field beside the burial ground of the kings[j] since, it was reasoned, he was afflicted with virulent skin-disease. His son Jotham then succeeded him.

‖2 K 15:32–38 The reign of Jotham

27 Jotham was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne and he 1 reigned for sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerushah daughter of Zadok. •He did what Yahweh regards as right, just as his father Uzziah 2 had done. Only he did not enter Yahweh's sanctuary.[a] But the people continued to do wrong.

It was he who built the Upper Gate of the Temple of Yahweh and carried out 3 considerable work on the wall of the Ophel. •He also built towns in the highlands 4 of Judah and built forts and towers in the wooded areas.

He also went to war against the king of the Ammonites[b] and defeated them; and 5 the Ammonites had to give him a hundred talents of silver, ten thousand kor of wheat and ten thousand of barley that year. And the Ammonites paid him the same amount, the second and third years afterwards. •Jotham became powerful 6 because he kept an unswerving course before Yahweh his God.

The rest of the history of Jotham, all his wars and his policy, are recorded in the 7
Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah. •He was twenty-five years old when he came 8 to the throne and he reigned for sixteen years in Jerusalem. •Then Jotham fell 9 asleep with his ancestors, and was buried in the City of David; his son Ahaz
succeeded him.

V: THE GREAT REFORMS UNDER HEZEKIAH AND JOSIAH

A: THE SINS OF AHAZ, FATHER OF HEZEKIAH

‖2 K 16:2–4 Accession of Ahaz: his idolatry

28 Ahaz was twenty years old when he came to the throne and he reigned for 1 sixteen years in Jerusalem. He did not do what Yahweh regards as right, as his ancestor David had done. •He followed the example of the kings of Israel, even 2 having images cast for the Baals; •he burned incense in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom,[a] 3 Lv 18:21h caused his sons to pass through the fire of sacrifice, copying the disgusting practices of the nations whom Yahweh had dispossessed for the Israelites. •He 4 offered sacrifices and incense on the high places, on the hills and under every green tree.

The Syro-Ephraimite War [b] 2 K 16 Is 7–9

5 So Yahweh his God put him at the mercy of the king of Aram, who defeated him and took large numbers of captives, carrying them off to Damascus. He also put him at the mercy of the king of Israel, who inflicted heavy casualties on him.
6 In a single day, Pekah son of Remaliah killed a hundred and twenty thousand in Judah, all of them prominent men, because they had abandoned Yahweh, God of 7 their ancestors. ·Zichri, an Ephraimite champion, killed Maaseiah the king's son, Azrikam the controller of the household and Elkanah the king's second-in-com-
8 mand. ·Of their brothers, the Israelites took two hundred thousand captive including wives, sons, daughters; they also took quantities of booty, carrying everything off to Samaria.

The Israelites obey the prophet Oded [c]

9 Now there was a prophet of Yahweh there by the name of Oded, who went out to meet the troops returning to Samaria and said, 'Look, because Yahweh, God of your ancestors, was angry with Judah, he put them at your mercy, but you have 10 slaughtered them with such fury as reached to heaven, ·and now you propose to reduce the children of Judah and Jerusalem to being your male and female slaves!
11 Have you not yourselves committed sins against Yahweh your God? ·Now listen to me: release the captives you have taken from your brothers, for the fierce anger of Yahweh hangs over you.'
12 Some of the Ephraimite chieftains—Azariah son of Jehohanan, Berechaiah son of Meshillemoth, Jehizkiah son of Shallum and Amasa son of Hadlai—then pro-13 tested to those returning from the war ·and said to them, 'You must not bring the captives here, for we have already sinned against Yahweh and you propose to add to our sin and guilt, although our guilt is already great, and fierce anger is hanging 14 over Israel.' ·So in the presence of the officials and whole assembly, the soldiers 15 gave up the captives and the booty. ·Men nominated for the purpose then took charge of the captives. From the booty they clothed all those of them who were naked; they gave them clothing and sandals, provided them with food and drink, 2 K 6:22 mounted on donkeys all those who were infirm and took them back to Jericho, the Lk 10:29–37 city of palm trees, to their brothers. Then they returned to Samaria.

Ahaz appeals to Assyria; his apostasy

16 This was when King Ahaz sent asking the king of Assyria to come to his assistance. [d] ‖2 K 16:7 Is 7–8 17, 18 The Edomites again invaded, defeated Judah, and carried off captives, ·while the Philistines raided the towns in the lowlands and in the Negeb of Judah, capturing Beth-Shemesh, Aijalon, Gederoth, Soco and its dependencies, Timnah 19 and its dependencies and Gimzo and its dependencies, and settled there. ·For Yahweh brought Judah low because of Ahaz king of Israel, [e] since he behaved

g. 2 K 15:5 mentions the punishment but not the cause. The kings performed certain liturgical actions without arousing protest. But in post-exilic times the offering of incense became the exclusive privilege of the Aaronite priesthood, see Nb 17:5; 1 Ch 23:13.

h. Miriam was punished in the same way for laying claim to the privileges of Moses, Nb. 12:10. Anyone afflicted with skin-disease was impure and forbidden to enter the sanctuary, Lv 13:45,

i. A lost work, attributed to the great prophet. Uzziah is mentioned in Is in the titles only, Is 1:1; 6:1; 7:1.

j. That is in the field, not in the tomb itself.

27 a. Praiseworthy conduct apparently as contrasted with that of Uzziah, 26:16seq.

b. This war is not mentioned in 2 K. Judah had no common frontier with Ammon.

28 a. Gehenna, valley to the south of Jerusalem where there was a shrine of Molech, see Lv 18:21; 2 K 23:10; Jr 32:35.

b. This narrative of the Syro-Ephraimite war is told from a standpoint very different from that of the other Judaean sources, 2 K 16 and Is 7–9. The Chronicler seems to have used an Ephraimite source.

c. It is remarkable that, despite his hostility to the Northern Kingdom, the Chronicler should have accepted this tradition, not found in 2 K, about the intervention of a Samaritan prophet who is a true Yahwist, who calls the Judaeans his 'brothers' and who persuades the Israelite leaders to release their prisoners. Such breadth of mind is not found elsewhere in the book, and is a presage of the parable of the Good Samaritan.

d. According to the Chronicler's source, Ahaz was threatened not only by the Aramaeans and Israelites, see 2 K 16:7, but by the Edomites and Philistines as well. The Assyrian Annals mention a campaign of Tiglath-Pileser III against the Philistines. The price of his help was heavy tribute and reduction to vassalage. The Chronicler interprets these events as a punishment.

e. For this use of Israel, see also v. 27; 21:2. The Gk has 'Judah'.

without restraint in Judah and had been unfaithful to Yahweh. ·Tiglath-Pileser 20 king of Assyria attacked and besieged him; but he could not overpower him.[f]
2 K 16:8 Although Ahaz robbed the Temple of Yahweh and the palaces of the king and 21 princes and gave the proceeds to the king of Assyria, he received no help from him.

During the time when he was under siege he disobeyed Yahweh even more 22
‖2 K 16:12–13 grossly, this King Ahaz. ·For he offered sacrifices to the gods of Damascus who 23 had defeated him. 'Since the gods of the kings of Aram', he thought, 'have supported them, I shall sacrifice to them, and perhaps they will help me.' But they proved to be his and all Israel's downfall.

‖2 K 16:17 Ahaz then collected the equipment of the Temple of God, broke up the equip- 24 ment of the Temple of God, sealed the doors of the Temple of Yahweh and put his own altars in every corner of Jerusalem; ·he set up high places in every town of 25 Judah to burn incense to other gods, thus provoking the anger of Yahweh, God of his ancestors.[g]

‖2 K 16:19–20 The rest of his history, his whole policy, from first to last, is recorded in the Book 26 of the Kings of Judah and Israel. ·Then Ahaz fell asleep with his ancestors and was 27 buried in the City, in Jerusalem, though he was not taken to the tombs of the kings of Israel. His son Hezekiah succeeded him.

B: REFORM UNDER HEZEKIAH

‖2 K 18:1–3 Accession of Hezekiah

29 Hezekiah was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne and he 1 reigned for twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Abijah daughter of Zechariah. ·He did what Yahweh regards as right, just as his ancestor 2 David had done.

The purification of the Temple[a]

28:24 In the first month of the first year of his reign, he opened the doors of the Temple 3 of Yahweh, having repaired them. ·He then brought in the priests and the Levites, 4 assembled them in the eastern square, ·and said to them, 5

'Listen to me, Levites! First sanctify yourselves, then sanctify the Temple of Yahweh, God of your ancestors, and remove the filth from the sanctuary. ·Our 6 ancestors were unfaithful,[b] and did what is displeasing to Yahweh our God. They abandoned him, turned their faces away from Yahweh's home and turned their backs on him. ·They even closed the doors of the portico, put out the lamps and 7 2:3 stopped burning incense and making burnt offerings in the sanctuary of the God of Israel. ·This was why Yahweh's anger fell on Judah and Jerusalem and he made 8
Lv 26:32 Dt 28:25 Jr 25:18 them an object of terror, astonishment and derision, as you can see for yourselves.
Yes, our ancestors were put to the sword, and our sons, our daughters and our 9 wives were taken captive because of this. ·I am now determined to make a covenant 10 with Yahweh, God of Israel, so that his fierce anger may turn away from us. ·Now, 11 my sons, do not be remiss, for Yahweh has chosen you to stand in his presence and serve him by conducting his worship and offering him incense.'

The Levites[c] set about it—Mahath son of Amasai and Joel son of Azariah, from 12
the Kohathites; Kish son of Abdi and Azariah son of Jehallel, from the Merarites;
Joah son of Zimmah and Eden son of Joah, from the Gershonites; ·Shimri and 13
Jeuel, of the sons of Elizaphan; Zechariah and Mattaniah of the sons of Asaph;
Jehiel and Shimei of the sons of Heman; Shemaiah and Uzziel of the sons of 14
Jeduthun—·and gathered their brothers together; they sanctified themselves, and 15 in obedience to the king's order, in accordance with the words of Yahweh, they came to purify the Temple of Yahweh.

The priests[d] went into the inner part of the Temple of Yahweh to purify it. They 16 brought all the unclean things which they found in Yahweh's sanctuary, out into 15:16

the court of the Temple of Yahweh, where the Levites collected them and took 17 them out to the Kidron Valley. •They began sanctifying on the first day of the first month, and by the eighth day of the month had reached Yahweh's portico; thus they took eight days to sanctify the Temple of Yahweh, and by the sixteenth day of the first month everything was finished.

The sacrifice of expiation

18 They then waited on King Hezekiah and said, 'We have purified the whole Temple of Yahweh, the altar of burnt offering with all its equipment and the table for the 19 loaves of permanent offering with all their equipment. •We have also got ready and sanctified all the equipment which King Ahaz in his infidelity had removed during his reign. It is all ready in front of Yahweh's altar.'
20 King Hezekiah lost no time but called the officials of the city together and went 21 up to the Temple of Yahweh. •They brought seven bulls, seven rams, seven lambs and seven goats as a sin sacrifice for the royal house, for the sanctuary and for 22 Judah, and he ordered the Aaronite priests to offer them on Yahweh's altar. •So they slaughtered the bulls and the priests took the blood and sprinkled it over the altar. They then slaughtered the rams and sprinkled the blood over the altar; and 23 they slaughtered the lambs and sprinkled the blood over the altar. •Then they brought the goats, the sacrifice for sin, before the king and the assembly who laid 24 their hands on them. •The priests slaughtered them and made a sacrifice for sin with their blood at the altar to expiate for all Israel, ᵉ since the king had ordered the burnt offering and the sacrifice for sin on behalf of all Israel.
25 He positioned the Levites in the Temple of Yahweh with cymbals, lyres and harps, in accordance with the ordinance of David, of Gad the king's seer and of Nathan the prophet, for such was Yahweh's order conveyed through his prophets.
26 When the Levites stood with David's musical instruments, and the priests with the 27 trumpets, •Hezekiah ordered the burnt offering to be presented on the altar. And as the burnt offering began, the hymns of Yahweh began too, and the trumpets 28 sounded, to the accompaniment of the instruments of David king of Israel, •while the whole congregation worshipped, the singers singing and the trumpeters sounding the trumpets, continuously until the burnt offering was over.

The cult begins again ᶠ

29 When the burnt offering was finished, the king and all those present with him fell 30 to their knees and worshipped. •Then King Hezekiah and the officials told the Levites to sing praise to Yahweh in the words of David and Asaph the seer; and joyfully they sang their praises, then knelt in worship.
31 Hezekiah spoke again, 'Now that you have consecrated yourselves to Yahweh, come forward and bring thankgiving sacrifices to the Temple of Yahweh.' Then the congregation brought thanksgiving sacrifices and those who were generous Lv 7:11a 32 brought burnt offerings. •The number of burnt offerings brought by the congregation was seventy bulls, a hundred rams and two hundred lambs, all as burnt

f. This is confirmed neither by the Assyrian texts nor by 2 K. It seems that the Chronicler has set in Ahaz's reign events which really occurred under Hezekiah, 2 Ch 32.

g. From v. 22 onwards the Chronicler rehandles 2 K, emphasising only the fact which has a religious significance, Ahaz's subservience to victorious foreign deities.

29 a. The Chronicler devotes three chapters, 29–31, to Hezekiah's religious reforms, as opposed to the single verse in 2 K 18:4 which he repeats at 2 Ch 31:1. He regarded these centralising reforms as very important, describing them in terms inspired by the reforms of Josiah, 34:3–35:18.

b. What follows is a public confession as in Ezr 9:6–15; Ne 9; Ba 1:15–3:8; Dn 9:4–19, see also Jr 3:22–25; Lm 5.

c. Here Levites descended from Kohath, Merari and Gershon are grouped together with singers descended from Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun. This assimilation of singers to Levites reflects a post-exilic situation, see also 1 Ch 6:18–32.

d. On the part played by the priests in purification, see Lv 13–16.

e. The ritual is inspired by Lv 4:13–21, though on a much more lavish scale. The purification of the Temple in Maccabaean times seems to have been inspired by Hezekiah's procedure, 1 M 4:42–59.

f. After the purification of the Temple and the ceremony of expiation, the normal cult can begin again, and it is inaugurated by a solemn liturgy.

offerings for Yahweh. ·The consecrated gifts amounted to six hundred bulls and 33 three thousand sheep. ·The priests were too few, however, and were unable to 34
1 Ch 15:12 dismember all the burnt offerings, so their brothers, the Levites, helped them until the work was finished and the priests had sanctified themselves; for the Levites had been more conscientious about sanctifying themselves than the priests had.[g] ·In 35 addition to the abundance of burnt offerings, there were also the fatty pieces for communion sacrifices and the libations for the burnt offerings.

And so the liturgy of Yahweh's Temple was restored, ·and Hezekiah and all the 36 people rejoiced over what God had provided the the people, since everything had happened so suddenly.

Preparations for the Passover[a]

30 Hezekiah sent messengers to all Israel and Judah, and also wrote letters to 1 Ephraim and Manasseh, bidding them come to the Temple of Yahweh in Ex 12:1a Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover in honour of Yahweh, God of Israel. ·For the 2 king and his officials and the whole congregation in Jerusalem had agreed to celebrate the Passover in the second month, ·having been unable to celebrate it at 3
Nb 9:6:13 the proper time,[b] since the priests had not purified themselves in sufficient number, and the people were not assembled in Jerusalem. ·And since this arrangement 4 seemed fitting to the king and the whole congregation, ·they resolved to send a 5 proclamation throughout Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, calling on the people to come to Jerusalem and celebrate a Passover in honour of Yahweh, God of Israel, since they had not celebrated it in a body as prescribed. ·So, by order of the king, 6 courtiers set out with letters from the king and his officials for every part of Israel and Judah, saying, 'Israelites, return to Yahweh, God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, and he will return to those of you who are left and have escaped the grasp of the kings of Assyria. ·Do not be like your fathers and brothers who were unfaithful 7 to Yahweh, God of their ancestors; he brought them to ruin, as you can see. ·Do 8 not be stubborn like your ancestors. Submit to[c] Yahweh, come to his sanctuary which he has consecrated for ever, and serve Yahweh your God, so that his fierce anger may turn away from you. ·For if you return to Yahweh, your brothers and 9
1 K 8:50 your sons will be treated mercifully by their captors and be allowed to return to this country; for Yahweh your God is gracious and merciful and will not turn his face away from you, if you return to him.'[d]

The courtiers went from town to town through the territory of Ephraim and 10 Manasseh and as far as Zebulon but the people laughed and scoffed at them; even so, some people from Asher and Manasseh and Zebulon were humble 11 enough to come to Jerusalem, ·while in Judah the hand of God was also at work 12 inspiring a unanimous desire to obey the order of the king and the officials in accordance with the word of Yahweh.

The Passover and feast of Unleavened Bread[e]

A huge crowd assembled in Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of Unleavened Bread 13
28:24–25 in the second month. An immense crowd ·set to work removing the altars then in 14 Jerusalem; they also removed all the incense altars and threw them into the Kidron Valley. ·They then slaughtered the Passover victims on the fourteenth day of the 15
Ezr 9:6 second month. Ashamed of themselves, the priests and Levites had in the meanwhile sanctified themselves and brought burnt offerings to the Temple of Yahweh, so they now stood in their positions prescribed in the Law of Moses man of God, 16 the priests sprinkling the blood handed to them by the Levites. ·Since many people 17 in the congregation had not sanctified themselves, the Levites took care of the slaughter of the Passover victims to consecrate them to Yahweh for all who were not clean.[f] ·For a great many people, especially from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar 18 and Zebulon, had not purified themselves, since they did not eat the Passover as prescribed. But Hezekiah prayed for them as follows, 'May Yahweh in his goodness pardon ·everyone whose heart is set on seeking God, Yahweh, God of his 19

20 ancestors, even if he has not been purified as holy things demand.' ·Yahweh listened to Hezekiah and left the people unharmed. [g] 21 Amid great rejoicing, the Israelites present in Jerusalem celebrated the feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days, while day after day the Levites and the priests 22 praised Yahweh with all their might. ·Hezekiah then encouraged all the Levites who had such understanding of Yahweh.
Having finished the seven-day festival, during which they sacrificed communion 23 sacrifices and praised Yahweh, God of their ancestors, [h] ·the whole congregation decided to celebrate for a further seven days. So they joyfully celebrated for 24 another seven days, ·Hezekiah king of Judah contributing a thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep for the congregation, and the officials another thousand bulls and ten thousand sheep. And a large number of priests sanctified themselves.
25 The whole congregation of Judah, the priests, the Levites, the whole congregation coming from Israel and the foreigners coming from the territory of Israel as well as 26 those resident in Judah, rejoiced. ·There was great rejoicing in Jerusalem, for since the days of Solomon son of David, king of Israel, nothing comparable had 27 ever occurred in Jerusalem. [i] ·The levitical priests then stood up and blessed the people and their voice was heard, and their prayer reached his holy dwelling in heaven.

The purification of the country

1 31 When all this was complete, all Israel present went out to the towns of ‖2 K 18:4
Judah, broke the pillars, cut down the sacred poles, wrecked the high places and the altars, and did away with them entirely throughout Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh. Then all the Israelites returned to their towns, everyone to his property.

The reorganisation of the priests and Levites [a]

2 Hezekiah re-established the priestly and levitical orders, each man in his proper order according to his duties, whether priest or Levite, to bring burnt offerings and communion sacrifices, to serve and to give thanks and praise within the gates of 1 Ch 9:19
3 Yahweh's camp. ·He also established a king's portion from his possessions for the 1 Ch 29:3
Ezk 45:17
morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the Sabbaths, 4 New Moons and festivals, as laid down in the Law of Yahweh. ·He furthermore Nb 28–29 requested the people living in Jerusalem to present the portion for the priests and 5 Levites so that they might devote themselves to the Law of Yahweh. ·As soon as the order had been promulgated, the Israelites provided the first fruits of grain, new wine, olive oil, honey and every other kind of agricultural produce in abun-
6 dance; they brought in an abundant tithe of everything. ·The Israelites and Nb 18:8–24

Judaeans living in the towns of Judah also brought in the tithe of cattle and Ne 12:44–47;

sheep, and the tithe of sacred gifts consecrated to Yahweh their God, [b] laying them 7 in heaps. ·They began accumulating the heaps in the third month and had finished

g. The v. favours the Levites at the expense of the priests. By taking part in sacrificial activity, the Levites were encroaching on priestly privilege; ill-feeling may have arisen in consequence.

30 a. The Chronicler has Nb 9:1–14 in mind, where the same features occur: state of ritual impurity and a long journey to be made, reflecting conditions after the Exile when Jews from the Dispersion took part.

b. It was usually celebrated in the first month (Nisan), but the Temple had not been ready, see 29:17.

c. lit. 'Stretch out your hand to Yahweh', a covenantal gesture.

d. This appeal, resembling the exhortations of Dt, reveals a concern for brother Israelites after the fall of Samaria, v. 9. The Chronicler's contemporaries dreamed of the ingathering of all the Jews of the Dispersion.

e. Hezekiah's Passover has less in common with the regulations in Dt 16 than with those of the Priestly Code, where the feast of Unleavened Bread still forms part of the Passover, see Lv 23:5b.

f. It was the duty of the donor himself to sacrifice the victim, Lv 1:5; 3:2, 8, 13. When he was not in a state of ritual purity and at great public festivals, Ezk 44:11, the act was performed by the inferior clergy.

g. The passage reacts against too rigid an interpretation of the laws of purity, see Mt 15:1–20 and par.

h. The 'communion sacrifice with praise' of Lv 7:12seq.

i. The Chronicler draws a parallel between the restoration of the Temple under Hezekiah and its dedication under Solomon.

31 a. Hezekiah is represented as restoring the institutions inaugurated by Solomon, 8:12–14, who for his part had been carrying out orders given by David.

b. Here the tithe seems to extend to voluntary offerings.

them by the seventh.[c] ·When Hezekiah and the officials came to inspect the heaps 8
they praised Yahweh and his people Israel.

While Hezekiah was questioning the priests and Levites about the heaps, 9 Azariah, the chief priest, of the family of Zadok, replied as follows, 'Since they 10 began bringing the contributions to the Temple of Yahweh,' he said, 'we have had Lv 25:19–22 enough to eat and quantities left over, for Yahweh has blessed his people; this mass of stuff is left.'[d] ·Hezekiah then ordered them to have storerooms prepared in the 11
Temple of Yahweh and, when they had got them ready, ·they conscientiously 12 brought in the contributions, tithes and consecrated gifts, Conaniah the Levite was put in charge of them, with Shimei his brother as his assistant, ·and with Jehiel, 13
Azaziah, Nahath, Asahel, Jeremith, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath, and Benaiah as overseers under Conaniah and his brother Shimei, by order of King
Hezekiah and of Azariah, the chief of the Temple of God. ·Kore son of Jimnah the 14
Levite, keeper of the eastern gate, was made responsible for the voluntary offerings to God and for providing the portion set aside for Yahweh and the most holy gifts.
Supporting him loyally in the priestly towns were Eden, Miniamin, Jeshua, She- 15 maiah, Amariah and Shechaniah, who made the distributions to their brothers in 1 Ch 23:3seq. their various orders, whether high or low, ·irrespective of their official gene- 16 alogy, to the males of thirty years[e] and upwards—to each one who attended the Temple of Yahweh to fulfil his daily obligations—for the performance of their 1 Ch 23:7–23 duties appropriate to their orders: ·the priests being registered according to family 17 and the Levites of twenty years and upwards according to their duties within their orders. ·And the official genealogy included all their household, their wives, their 18 sons and their daughters, throughout the community, since these men were obliged to keep sanctifying themselves anew.[f] ·The Aaronite priests who lived on the 19 pasture lands belonging to their towns, had men named[g] in every town to distribute portions to every male among the priests and to everyone included in the official genealogy of the Levites.

Hezekiah did this throughout all Judah. He did what Yahweh his God regards as 20 good and right and loyal. ·Everything that he undertook, whether in the service of 21 the Temple of God or in connection with the law or the commandments, he did in absolute devotion to his God, and so succeeded.

Sennacherib's invasion[a]

‖2 K 18:13 32 After these loyal actions, Sennacherib king of Assyria advanced and in- 1 vaded Judah, and laid siege to the fortified towns, intending to demolish them. ·Hezekiah, realising that Sennacherib's advance was the preliminary to an 2 attack on Jerusalem, ·consulted his officers and warriors about sealing off the 3 waters of the springs outside the city, and they supported him. ·So a large number 4
Is 22:9–11 of people were called out to block all the springs and cut off the watercourse flowing through the country. 'Why', they said, 'should the kings of Assyria find plenty of water when they arrive?'

Ne 2:17seq. Acting with determination, he also repaired all the damaged parts of the wall, 5 built towers on it, constructed a second wall on the outer side, strengthened the Millo of the City of David and made quantities of missiles and shields. ·he then 6 appointed generals to command the people, summoned them to him in the square by the city gate and spoke as follows to encourage them, ·'Be strong and brave; do 7 14:10;20:6–12 not be afraid or tremble when you face the king of Assyria and the whole horde he Is 31:3 brings with him, for there are more on our side than on his. ·He has only human 8 strength, but we have Yahweh our God to help us and fight our battles.' The people took heart at the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

Sennacherib's blasphemous ultimatum and downfall

‖2 K 18:17–37 Next, Sennacherib king of Assyria, who was then besieging Lachish with all his 9
‖Is 36:1–22 forces, sent his representatives to Jerusalem, to Hezekiah king of Judah, and all

10 Judah at Jerusalem, with the following message, ·'Sennacherib king of Assyria says this, "What gives you the confidence to remain in the fortress of Jerusalem?
11 Isn't Hezekiah deluding you, only to condemn you to die of famine and thirst, when he says: Yahweh our God will save us from the King of Assyria's clutches?
12 Isn't Hezekiah the very man who has suppressed his high places and altars, and given the order to Judah and to Jerusalem: You must worship before one altar and 13 on that alone offer incense? ·Don't you know what I and my ancestors have done to all the peoples of the other countries? Have the national gods of those countries 14 had the slightest success in saving their countries from my clutches? ·Of all the gods of those nations whom my ancestors devoted to destruction, which one has been able to save his people from my clutches, for your god to be able to save you from 15 my clutches? ·Do not let Hezekiah mislead you. Do not let him delude you like this. Do not believe him, for no god of any nation or kingdom has been able to save his people from me or from my ancestors' clutches. No more will your god be able 16 to save you from my clutches." ' ·And his representatives said a great deal more, maligning Yahweh God, and his servant Hezekiah.
17 He also wrote a letter to insult Yahweh, God of Israel, maligning him as follows, ‖2 K 19:9–13 ‖Is 37:9–13
'Just as the national gods of the other countries could not save their peoples from 18 my clutches, so Hezekiah's god cannot save his people from my clutches.' ·They then shouted loudly in the Judaean language to the people of Jerusalem on the 19 ramparts to frighten and confuse them, in the hope of capturing the city, ·maligning the God of Jerusalem as though he were one of the man-made gods of other peoples in the world.
20 Then King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz prayed and cried out ‖2 K 19:15 ‖Is 37:15
21 to Heaven about this, ·and Yahweh sent an angel who destroyed every warrior, ‖2 K 19:35–37 ‖Is 37:36–38 commander and officer in the king of Assyria's camp. So he had to retire shame-facedly to his own country and when he went into the temple of his god, some of 22 his own sons there struck him down with the sword. ·So Yahweh saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the clutches of Sennacherib king of Assyria 23 and of everyone else, and gave them peace[b] on every side. ·Many people then 14:6
brought gifts to Yahweh in Jerusalem and valuable presents to Hezekiah king of ‖2 K 20:12 Judah; from then on, all the other nations held him in high esteem.

The closing years of Hezekiah's reign

24 About then Hezekiah fell ill and was at the point of death. He prayed to Yahweh, ‖2 K 20:1seq. ‖Is 38:1seq.
25 who heard him[c] and granted him a sign. ·But Hezekiah made no return for the benefit which he had received; he became proud and brought retribution on himself ‖2 K 20:12–19 ‖Is 39:1–8 26 and on Judah and Jerusalem. ·Then, however, Hezekiah did humble himself in his pride, and so did the inhabitants of Jerusalem; as a result of which, Yahweh's retribution did not overtake them during Hezekiah's lifetime.[d] 27 Hezekiah enjoyed immense riches and honour. He built himself treasuries for ‖2 K 20:13 ‖Is 39:2
gold, silver, precious stones, spices, jewels[e] and every kind of desirable object, 28 as well as storehouses for his returns of grain, new wine and olive oil, and stalls for 29 all kinds of cattle and pens for the flocks. ·He also provided himself with donkeys[f]

Having much elaborated the brief mention of Hezekiah's religious reforms in 2 K 18:4–6, the Chronicler is very much briefer than his source for the other events of his reign; to which he does, however, add an account of Hezekiah's military preparations when threatened by Sennacherib's advance, v. 3seq. Sympathetic to Hezekiah, he depicts him as brave and determined, exhorting the people to put their trust in Yahweh's help, vv. 7–8, in words identical to those used by the prophet Elisha in 2 K 6:16.

||2 K 20:20–21 2 K 20:20k It was Hezekiah who stopped the upper outlet of the waters of Gihon and 30 directed them straight down on the west side of the City of David. Hezekiah succeeded in all that he undertook, ·although when the envoys were sent to him by 31 the rulers of Babylon to enquire about the extraordinary thing which had taken place in the country, God left him alone to test him and discover what lay in his heart. [h]

The rest of the history of Hezekiah, and his deeds of faithful love, are recorded 32 in the Vision of the prophet Isaiah son of Amoz, in the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel. ·Then Hezekiah fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried in the 33 upper section [i] of the tombs of the sons of David. All Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem paid him honours at his death. His son Manasseh succeeded him.

C: THE SINS OF MANASSEH AND OF AMON

||2 K 21:1–18 Manasseh undoes the work of Hezekiah

33 Manasseh was twelve years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned 1 for fifty-five years in Jerusalem. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, 2 copying the disgusting practices of the nations whom Yahweh had dispossessed for
the Israelites.

He rebuilt the high places which his father Hezekiah had demolished, he set up 3 altars to Baal and made sacred poles, he worshipped the whole array of heaven and served it. ·He built altars in the Temple of Yahweh, of which Yahweh had 4 said, 'My name will be in Jerusalem for ever.' ·He built altars to the whole array of 5 heaven in the two courts of the Temple of Yahweh. ·He caused his sons to pass 6 through the fire of sacrifice in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom. He practised soothsaying, divination and sorcery, and had dealings with mediums and spirit-guides. He did very many more things displeasing to Yahweh, thus provoking his anger. ·He 7 put a sculpted image, an idol which he had had made, inside the Temple of which God had said to David and his son Solomon, 'In this Temple and in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I shall put my name for ever.
Nor shall I ever again remove Israel's foot from the soil on which I established your 8 ancestors on condition that they were careful to observe all I commanded them as laid down in the whole Law, the statutes and the ordinances, given through Moses.' ·But Manasseh misled Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem into doing 9 worse things than the nations which Yahweh had destroyed for the Israelites.
When Yahweh spoke to Manasseh and his people, they would not listen. 10

Manasseh's captivity and conversion [a]

Yahweh then brought down on them the generals of the king of Assyria's army 11
Ezk 19:9 who captured Manasseh with hooks, put him in chains and took him to Babylon.
While in his distress, he placated Yahweh his God by genuinely humbling himself 12 before the God of his ancestors. ·When he prayed to him, he was moved by his 13 entreaty, heard his supplication and brought him back to Jerusalem to his kingdom.
Manasseh realised then that Yahweh is God.

Afterwards, he rebuilt the outer wall of the City of David, to the west of Gihon, 14 in the valley, up to the Fish Gate and round the Ophel, and made it very much higher. And he stationed military governors in all the fortified towns of Judah.

14:2 He also removed the foreign gods and the idol from the Temple of Yahweh, as 15 well as all the altars which he had built on the mountain of the Temple of Yahweh and in Jerusalem, and threw them out of the city. [b] ·He repaired the altar of 16 Yahweh and offered communion sacrifices and thanksgiving offerings on it, and commanded Judah to serve Yahweh, God of Israel. ·The people, however, went 17 on sacrificing at the high places, although only to Yahweh their God.

18 The rest of the history of Manasseh, his prayer to his God,[c] and the prophecies ‖2 K 21:17–18 of the seers who spoke to him in the name of Yahweh, God of Israel, can be found 19 in the Annals of the Kings of Israel. ·His prayer and how God was moved by his entreaty, all his sins, his infidelity, the sites where he built high places and set up sacred poles and idols before humbling himself, are set down in the records of 20 Hozai[d] ·Then Manasseh fell asleep with his ancestors and was buried in the garden of his palace. His son Amon succeeded him.

The obduracy of Amon[e]

21 Amon was twenty-two years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for ‖2 K 21:19–26
22 two years in Jerusalem. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, as his father Manasseh had done, for Amon sacrificed to all the images which his father Man-23 asseh had made, and served them. ·He did not humble himself before Yahweh as his father Manasseh had done; on the contrary, Amon wilfully added to his guilt.
24, 25 His retinue plotted against him and killed him in his own palace. ·The people of the country, however, slaughtered all those who had plotted against King Amon and proclaimed his son Josiah as his successor.

D: REFORM UNDER JOSIAH[a]

Accession of Josiah

1 34 Josiah was eight years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for ‖2 K 22:1–2
2 thirty-one years in Jerusalem. ·He did what is pleasing to Yahweh, and Jr 3:6–13,14f followed the example of his ancestor David, not deviating from it to right or to left.

The first reforms ‖2 K 23:4–20

3 In the eighth year of his reign, when he was still a youth, he began to seek the God of his ancestor David. In the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem 14:1–4;31:1 4 of the high places, the sacred poles and the sculpted and cast images. ·He superintended the smashing of the altars of Baal, he broke up the incense altars standing above them, he shattered the sacred poles and the sculpted and cast images and reduced them to powder, scattering the powder on the graves of those who had 5 sacrificed to them. ·He burned the bones of their priests on their altars and 6 so purified Judah and Jerusalem. ·In the towns of Manasseh, Ephraim and 7 Simeon, as far as Naphtali, and round their open spaces, ·he smashed the altars and sacred poles, reduced the sculpted images to powder and broke up all the incense altars throughout the territory of Israel. Then he returned to Jerusalem.

g. The enumeration of Hezekiah's wealth, more elaborate than in 2 K, indicates that he enjoyed the blessing of God, like David, 1 Ch 29:2, see 27:25–31, and Solomon, 2 Ch 9:10–28.

h. A new interpretation (see v. 26) of the narrative in 2 K 20:12–19.

i. This could signify an important position in the royal necropolis.

33 a. Assyrian texts mention Manasseh of Judah as vassal of Esarhaddon and Ashurbanipal, but neither Assyrian texts nor the Book of Kings mentions any captivity of Manasseh. It may be connected with the revolts against Assyria which were afoot in Palestine at this time, or else could represent an interpretation by the Chronicler of a gathering of all Esarhaddon's vassals mentioned in other Assyrian texts. The return of Manasseh, v. 13, is interpreted by the Chronicler as the fruit of his conversion.

b. The Chronicler credits Manasseh with reforms on the lines of those of Asa, Hezekiah and Josiah.

c. There is an apocryphal psalm called 'The Prayer of Manasseh', probably inspired by this passage.

d. An unknown prophet whose name means 'seer'.

e. To Amon the Chronicler applies the condemnation of Manasseh in 2 K 21:12. Amon's reign was remarkably short, just as Manasseh's was remarkably long; long life was considered a reward for uprightness, Ps 34:12; Pr 4:10.

34 a. 2 K 22–23 present the reform as a consequence of the discovery of the Book of the Law while work was being carried out on the Temple. The Chronicler represents this work itself as a purifying of the Temple, 34:8, and second phase in a general purifying of Jerusalem, Judah and Israel from idolatry, vv. 3–7. The reform would thus have begun in the twelfth year of the reign, when Josiah was twenty, and not in the eighteenth, 2 K 22:3. This chronology is probable, the repairs in the Temple may have been inspired by reforming zeal, and the opposition to foreign cults is the expression of a national renewal which seized the opportunity of the weakness of Assyria in the last years of Ashurbanipal. We may envisage that the reform occurred in stages. It is all joined together in 2 K after the discovery of the Law, and the Chronicler used this source to describe the earlier stages, keeping for the end only the renewal of the covenant and the solemn Passover.

‖2 K 22:3–7 Work on the Temple

In the eighteenth year of his reign, after purging the country and the Temple, he 8 commissioned Shaphan son of Azaliah, Maaseiah governor of the city and the herald Joah son of Joahaz, to repair the Temple of Yahweh his God. ·When they 9 24:8seq. came to the high priest Hilkiah, they handed over the money contributed to the Temple of God and collected by the levitical guardians of the threshold from Manasseh and Ephraim, from all the rest of Israel, from all Judah and Benjamin, and from the inhabitants of Jerusalem. [b] ·They handed it over to the masters of 10 works attached to the Temple of Yahweh, and these gave it to the men working on the Temple of Yahweh to repair and restore the Temple; ·they gave it to the 11 craftsmen and builders for buying dressed stone and timber for beams, to underpin the buildings which the kings of Judah had allowed to fall into decay.

The men were conscientious in doing their work; their foremen were Jahath and 12 Obadiah, Levites descended from Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam, descended from Kohath, who supervised. The Levites—all of whom were skilled instrumentalists [c]—·were in charge of the carriers and supervised all the workmen 13 at their various jobs, while some of the Levites acted as secretaries, book-keepers and gatekeepers.

‖2 K 22:8–13 The Book of the Law discovered

While bringing out the money contributed to the Temple of Yahweh, the priest 14
Hilkiah found the book of the Law of Yahweh given through Moses. ·Hilkiah then 15 said to Shaphan the secretary, 'I have found the Book of the Law in the Temple of Yahweh.' And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan. ·Shaphan took the book to the 16 king, reporting furthermore to him as follows, 'Your servants have done everything entrusted to them. ·They have melted down the silver which was in the Temple of 17
Yahweh and have handed it over to the supervisors and the masters of works.'
Shaphan the secretary also informed the king, 'The priest Hilkiah has given me a 18 book'; and Shaphan read extracts from it [d] in the king's presence.

On hearing the words of the Law, the king tore his clothes. ·Then the king gave 19, 20
the following order to Hilkiah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Abdon son of Micah, Shaphan the secretary and Asaiah the king's minister, ·'Go and consult Yahweh 21 on behalf of me and of those left in Israel and Judah about the words of the book that has been discovered: for Yahweh's furious wrath has been pouring down on us because our ancestors did not obey the word of Yahweh by doing what this book says they ought to have done.'

Huldah the prophetess is consulted

2 K 22:14–20 Hilkiah and those whom the king had designated went to the prophetess Huldah 22 wife of Shallum, son of Tokhath, son of Hasrah, the keeper of the wardrobe; she lived in Jerusalem in the new town. They spoke to her about this, ·and she replied, 23
'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "To the man who sent you to me reply:
Yahweh says this: I am going to bring disaster on this place and the people who 24 live in it—all the curses set down in the book read in the king of Judah's presence.
Because they have abandoned me and burnt incense to other gods, so as to 25 provoke my anger by their every action, my wrath is about to be poured down on this place, and nothing can stop it. ·As for the king of Judah who sent you to 26 consult Yahweh, say this to him: Yahweh, God of Israel, says this: The words you have heard . . . ·But since your heart has been touched and you have humbled 27 yourself before God on hearing what he has decreed against this place and the people who live in it, have torn your clothes and wept before me, I too have heard"—Yahweh says this. ·"Look, when I gather you to your ancestors, you will 28 be gathered into your grave in peace; you will not live to see the great disaster that I am going to bring on this place and on the people who live in it." ' They took this answer to the king.

The renewal of the covenant

‖2 K 23:1–3

29, 30 The king then had all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem summoned, ·and the king went up to the temple of Yahweh, with all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, priests, Levites and all the people, high and low. In their hearing he read out the entire contents of the Book of the Covenant discovered in 31 the Temple of Yahweh. ·The king then, standing on the dais [e] bound himself by the covenant before Yahweh, to follow Yahweh, to keep his commandments, decrees and laws with all his heart and soul and to carry out the terms of the covenant as 32 written in this book. ·He made all those present in Jerusalem and Benjamin pledge their allegiance to it.

The citizens of Jerusalem took action in keeping with the covenant of God, the 33 God of their ancestors, [f] ·while Josiah removed all the abominations throughout the territories belonging to the Israelites and required all inhabitants of Israel to serve Yahweh their God; throughout his lifetime they did not deviate from following Yahweh, God of their ancestors.

2 K 23:4seq.

Preparations for the Passover

1 35 Josiah then celebrated a Passover to Yahweh in Jerusalem. The Passover victims were slaughtered on the fourteenth day of the first month.

Ex 12:1a
‖2 K 23:21

2 He assigned the priests to their posts, encouraging them to do their duty in the 3 Temple of Yahweh. [a] ·Then he said to the Levites, who had understanding [b] for all Israel and were consecrated to Yahweh, 'Put the sacred ark in the Temple built by Solomon son of David, king of Israel. You need not carry it about on your 4 shoulders any more. Now serve Yahweh your God and Israel his people! ·Prepare yourselves by families according to your orders, as laid down in the decree of David
5 king of Israel and that of Solomon his son, ·and take up positions in the sanctuary corresponding to the family divisions of your brothers the laity, so that there are 6 Levites for each family division. ·Slaughter the Passover, sanctify yourselves and prepare it so that your brothers can observe it in the way the word of Yahweh through Moses requires.'

Dt 12:18–19

7 For the laity Josiah provided small livestock, that is, lambs and young goats—everything for the Passover offerings for all who attended—to the number of thirty thousand, as well as three thousand bullocks; these were from the king's own
8 possessions. ·His officials also made voluntary contributions for the people, the priests and the Levites; and Hilkiah, Zechariah and Jehiel, the chiefs of the Temple of God, gave two thousand six hundred lambs and three hundred bullocks to the 9 priests for the Passover offerings; ·while Conaniah, Shemaiah, Nethanel his brother, Hashabiah, Jeiel and Jozabad, the head Levites, provided five thousand lambs and five hundred bullocks as Passover offerings for the Levites.

The celebration of the Passover [c]

10 So the service was arranged, the priests stood in their places and the Levites in 11 their orders as the king had commanded. ·Then they slaughtered the Passover victims and while the priests sprinkled the blood as they received it from the

b. Thus all the Israelites contributed to the repairs. The Chronicler invariably insists on the unity of Yahweh's people, see Ezk 37:15seq.

c. vv. 12[b]-13 are peculiar to the Chronicler, who attributes to the Levites and singers the management of the repairs.

d. 2 K 22:10 has 'read it', but the Chronicler takes it to be the Pentateuch—too long for a single reading.

e. 'on the daïs' conj., see 23:13; 2 K 11:14; 'in his place' Hebr.

f. The Chronicler briefly touches on the data of 2 K 23:4seq, which he has moved to the beginning of his account, 2 Ch 34:3seq.

35 a. As in the case of Hezekiah, the ceremony is preceded by a restoration of the clergy, see 31:2seq, according to the rules ascribed to David. Here again, the Chronicler's primary interest is in the Levites.

b. Understanding, in the sense which wisdom literature gives the term, discernment of the things of God.

c. Briefly mentioned in 2 K 23:21, the feast is described in detail here. The ritual is that of Dt 16, but with additions probably inspired by customs current in the Chronicler's own times. The Levites play a predominant role in the Chronicler's account of the ceremony. The Passover sacrifice is accompanied by burnt offerings and communion sacrifices.

Levites, the latter did the skinning.[d] ·Next they put the burnt offering aside for 12 presentation to the family divisions of the laity, so that they could offer it to Yahweh in the way prescribed in the Book of Moses; they did the same with the Ex 12:2–11 bullocks. ·They roasted the Passover victim[e] over an open fire in accordance with 13 the regulation and boiled the consecrated offerings in pots, kettles and pans, which they then distributed to all the laity as quickly as they could.

Afterwards they provided for themselves and the priests, since the Aaronite 14 priests were kept busy till nightfall making the burnt offerings and offering the fat;
that was why the Levites prepared the Passover for themselves and for the Aaronite priests. ·The Asaphite singers were at their places, in accordance with the com- 15 mand of David and Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun the king's seer; so were the gatekeepers at each gate. Because they could not leave their duties, their brothers the Levites prepared the Passover for them.

So the whole service of Yahweh was arranged that day to celebrate the Passover 16 and to bring burnt offerings on the altar of Yahweh, in accordance with King Josiah's command. ·On that occasion the Israelites who were present celebrated 17
‖2 K 23:22 the Passover and the feast of Unleavened Bread for seven days. ·No Passover like 18 this one had ever been celebrated in Israel since the days of the prophet Samuel, nor had any of the kings of Israel ever celebrated a Passover like the one celebrated by Josiah, the priests, the Levites, all Judah and Israel who were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.[f]

Death of Josiah[g]

‖2 K 23:23, 29–30 This Passover was celebrated in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign.[h] 19

After all this, when Josiah had provided for the Temple, Necho king of Egypt 20 advanced to give battle at Carchemish on the Euphrates and Josiah went to intercept him. ·Necho however sent him messengers to say, 'Why be concerned 21 about me, king of Judah? I have not come today to attack you; my quarrel is with another dynasty. God has commanded me to move quickly, so keep well clear of the god who is with me!' ·But Josiah was not to be deflected from his determination[i] 22 to fight him, and would not listen to Necho's words, which came from the mouth of 18:33–34 God. He gave battle in the plain of Megiddo. ·The archers shot King Josiah. The 23 king them said to his retainers, 'Take me away; I am badly wounded.' ·So his 24 retainers lifted him out of his own chariot, transferred him to one which he had in reserve and brought him to Jerusalem, where he died and was buried in the tombs of his ancestors. All Judah and Jerusalem held mourning for Josiah. ·Jeremiah 25 composed a lament for Josiah and all the male and female singers to this day lament Josiah in their dirges; they have made it a rule in Israel; they are recorded in the Lamentations.[j]

The rest of the history of Josiah, his deeds of faithful love conforming to what is 26 prescribed in the Law of Yahweh, ·his history from first to last, are recorded in the 27 Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

E: ISRAEL IN THE CLOSING YEARS OF THE MONARCHY[a]

‖2 K 23:30–34 Jehoahaz

36 The people of the land then took Jehoahaz son of Josiah and proclaimed 1 him king of Jerusalem in succession to his father. ·Jehoahaz was twenty- 2 three years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for three months in Jerusalem.[b] ·The king of Egypt deposed him in Jerusalem and imposed a levy of a 3 hundred talents of silver and one talent of gold on the country. ·The king of 4 Egypt then made his brother Eliakim king of Judah and Jerusalem, and changed his name to Jehoiakim. Carrying off his brother Jehoahaz, Necho took him to Egypt.

Jehoiakim

Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned ‖2 K 23:36–37 for eleven years in Jerusalem. He did what is displeasing to Yahweh his God.
Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon attacked him, loaded him with chains and took ‖2 K 24:1seq.
him to Babylon.[c] ·To Babylon Nebuchadnezzar also took some of the objects belonging to the Temple of Yahweh and put them in his palace in Babylon. ·The rest of the history of Jehoiakim, the shameful things that he did and what happened ‖2 K 24:5
to him in consequence, these are recorded in the Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah. His son Jehoiachin succeeded him.

Jehoiachin

Jehoiachin was eighteen[d] years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for ‖2 K 24:8–9 three months and ten days in Jerusalem. He did what is displeasing to Yahweh.
At the turn of the year, King Nebuchadnezzar sent for him and had him taken to ‖2 K 24:10–16
Babylon, with the valuables belonging to the Temple of Yahweh, and made his ‖2 K 24:17 brother[e] Zedekiah king of Judah and Jerusalem.

Zedekiah ‖2 K 24:18–20

Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned ‖Jr 52:1–3 for eleven years in Jerusalem. ·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh his God. He did not listen humbly to the prophet Jeremiah who spoke for Yahweh. Jr 37–39
Furthermore, he rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar who had made him swear Ezk 17:13–16 allegiance to him by God. He became stubborn, and obstinately refused to return to Yahweh, God of Israel.

The nation[f]

Furthermore, all the leaders of Judah, the priests and the people too, added infidelity to infidelity, copying all the shameful practices of the nations and defiling the Temple of Yahweh which he himself had consecrated in Jerusalem. ·Yahweh, God of their ancestors, continuously sent them word through his messengers Heb 1:1
because he felt sorry for his people and his dwelling, ·but they ridiculed the Mt 23:34–36par.
messengers of God, they despised his words, they laughed at his prophets, until Yahweh's wrath with his people became so fierce that there was no further remedy.

Ruin

So against them he summoned the king of the Chaldaeans and he put their young Lm 1:15;5:11–14 men to the sword within the very building of their Temple, not sparing young man or girl, or the old and infirm; he put them all at his mercy. ·All the things ‖2 K 25:14seq.
belonging to the Temple of God, whether large or small, the treasures of the Temple of Yahweh, the treasures of the king and his officials, everything he took

d. According to Lv 1:6, this was a function for laymen.

e. Not the bitter herbs and unleavened bread but the communion sacrifices connected with the Passover.

f. The novelty of Josiah's Passover lay in its being celebrated by the entire nation in Jerusalem as a result of the centralisation of the cult decreed by Dt. The Chronicler masks this to some extent by his anachronistic account of Hezekiah's Passover, 30:13–27. The Passover had hitherto been celebrated as a family festival. The reference to the time of Samuel here, and to the period of the Judges in the parallel 2 K 23:22, if not merely rhetorical, seems to imply that in remoter times the Passover had been a communal festival held at a central shrine.

g. The Chronicler seems to have had available a more detailed source than 2 K. which he interpreted according to his theology of retribution, v. 22.

h. Gk here inserts the eulogy on Josiah from 2 K 23:24–27.

i. lit. 'he was determined' Gk; 'he disguised himself', Hebr., see 2 K 23:30.

j. Jr 22:10 alludes to the death of Josiah, but the Book of Lamentations, ascribed to the prophet, contains nothing specifically relating to this king. The text mentioned by the Chronicler is now lost.

36 a. Summary of events recorded in 2 K 23:31–25:30. The Chronicler has little to say about the dark period between Josiah's reforms and the national and religious restoration after the Exile, see his presentation of the post-exilic documents, Ezr and Ne.

b. Here Gk adds 2 K 23:31–33.

c. This captivity and spoliation are not reported elsewhere. It would appear that a later age credited the wicked Jehoiakim with some of his son Jehoiachin's misfortunes, but see Dn 1:1–2 which seems to draw on a different source, if it is not merely a literary device.

d. 'eighteen' versions, 2 K 24:8; 'eight' Hebr.

e. Actually his uncle, 2 K 24:17. But 1 Ch 3:15–16 lists two Zedekiahs, one an uncle, the other a son of Jehoiachin.

f. A general judgement on how continual apostasy led to the ruin of Judah. The Chronicler has the writings of Jeremiah and Ezekiel in mind.

‖2 K 25:9seq. to Babylon. ·He burned down the temple of God, demolished the walls of Jerusa- 19 lem, burned all its palaces to the ground and destroyed everything of value in it.
And those who had escaped the sword he deported to Babylon, where they were 20 enslaved by him and his descendants until the rise of the kingdom of Persia—·to 21 fulfil Yahweh's prophecy through Jeremiah: Until the country has paid off its Sabbaths, it will lie fallow for all the days of its desolation—until the seventy years are complete.

‖Ezr 1:1–3 A new hope [g]

In the first year of Cyrus king of Persia—to fulfil the word of Yahweh through 22
Jeremiah—Yahweh roused the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia to issue a proclamation and to have it publicly displayed throughout his kingdom: ·'Cyrus king of Persia 23 says this, "Yahweh, the God of Heaven, has given me all the kingdoms of the earth and has appointed me to build him a Temple in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Whoever there is among you of all his people, may his God be with him!
Let him go up." '

g. The concluding vv. are the same as Ezr 1:1–3[a] but their positioning here alters their emphasis. Whereas in Ezr they introduce a story of painful endurance, here they herald the triumphal rebuilding of the Temple and hence the restoration of Davidic institutions, conceived as eternal by the Chronicler.

THE BOOK OF

EZRA

I: THE RETURN FROM EXILE

AND THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE

The return of the exiles

1 1 In the first year of Cyrus king of Persia [a]—to fulfil the word of Yahweh spoken through Jeremiah [b]—Yahweh roused the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia to issue a proclamation and to have it publicly displayed throughout his kingdom: ‖2 Ch 36:22–23 Jr 25:11–12; 29:10 Zc 1:12

2 'Cyrus king of Persia says this, "Yahweh, the God of heaven, [c] has given me Is 45:1
all the kingdoms of the earth and has appointed me to build him a Temple in 3 Jerusalem, in Judah. ·Whoever among you belongs to the full tally of his people, [d] may his God be with him! Let him go up to Jerusalem, in Judah, and 4 build the Temple of Yahweh, God of Israel, who is the God in Jerusalem. ·And let each survivor, [e] wherever he lives, be helped by the people of his locality with silver, gold, equipment and riding beasts, as well as voluntary offerings for the Temple of God which is in Jerusalem." '[f]

5 Then the heads of families of Judah and of Benjamin, the priests and the Levites, in fact all whose spirit had been roused by God, prepared to go and rebuild the Hg 1:14 6 Temple of Yahweh in Jerusalem; ·and all their neighbours gave them every kind of Ex 3:22;11:2; 12:35 help: silver, gold, equipment, riding beasts and valuable presents, [g] in addition to their voluntary offerings.
7 Furthermore, King Cyrus handed over the articles belonging to the Temple of Yahweh which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put in the 8 temple of his god. ·Cyrus king of Persia handed them over to Mithredath the 9 treasurer who checked them out to Sheshbazzar the prince of Judah. [h] ·The inventory was as follows: thirty gold dishes; one thousand silver dishes, twenty-nine 10 repaired; ·thirty gold bowls; a thousand silver bowls, four hundred and ten

1 a. The conquest of Babylon by Cyrus dates from the autumn of 539; the first year of his reign (over the Babylonian empire) begins in Nisan (March–April) 538.

b. The 'seventy' years of captivity foretold by Jeremiah is a round number, though it could be understood literally by making the subjection of Judah begin with the reign of Jehoiakim (609), see 2 K 24:1. • For the part to be played by Cyrus, see Is 44:28; 45:1seq.

c. The Persian kings were as a whole extremely generous to the temples of conquered peoples, restoring and actively supporting them while keeping a measure of control. Their attitude towards the Jewish religion was no exception, the Jews perhaps enjoying a particular advantage since Yahweh, always called 'the God of heaven' in official Persian documents, seems to have been equated with the supreme god Ahura-Mazda, worshipped by the Persian kings.

d. The expression apparently includes no exiles from the Northern Kingdom. But see v. 5.

e. The 'survivors', 9:8, 13–15; Ne 1:2, constitute the remnant spared by God and identified, after Ezr 6:8–10, with the Babylonian exiles, see Is 4:3c.

f. The edict takes the form here of a proclamation in Hebr., by public heralds to the exiled Jews and no doubt drawn up by Jews employed in the Persian chancellery. 6:3–5, on the other hand, is a memorandum for the use of Persian officials.

g. 'every kind of help: silver' following 1 Esd 2:6; 'help with silver articles' Hebr. • By 1 Esd is meant that apocryphal book called Esdras A in the Gk Bible and Esdras III in MSS and certain editions of the Vulgate. It partly reproduces the canonical book, and its Gk text, translated from a Semitic original, sometimes provides better readings than MT.

Immer, could not prove that their families and ancestry were of Israelite origin:
the sons of Delaiah, the sons of Tobiah, the sons of Nekoda: six hundred and 60

62 the Gileadite, whose name he adopted. •These had looked for their entries in the official genealogies but were not to be found there, and were hence disqualified
63 from the priesthood.[e] •Consequently, His Excellency[f] forbade them to eat any of the consecrated food[g] until a priest appeared who could consult urim and thummim.[h]

64 The whole assembly numbered forty-two thousand, three hundred and sixty 65 people, •not counting their male and female slaves to the number of seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven. They also had two hundred male and female 66 singers. •Their horses numbered seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two 67 hundred and forty-five, •their camels four hundred and thirty-five and their donkeys six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 When they arrived at the Temple of Yahweh in Jerusalem, a certain number of heads of families made voluntary offerings for the Temple of God, for its rebuilding

70 The priests, the Levites and some of the people settled in Jerusalem;[i] the singers, the gatekeepers and the temple slaves in their appropriate towns; and all the other Israelites in their own towns.

Resumption of the sacrificial liturgy

1 3 When the seventh month came after the Israelites had been resettled in their
2 towns, the people gathered as one person in Jerusalem.[a] •Then Jeshua son of Jozadak, with his brother priests, and Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, with his brothers,[b] set about rebuilding the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings on

i. vv. 8–11[a] reproduce a mutilated Aramaic document. The total number of articles does not tally with the figures of the items listed.

2 a. This list is also found in Ne 7 and 1 Esd 5 but with variants of names, figures and the alternation of 'sons of' and 'men of'. Of these three stages of the same text, the one in 1 Esd seems in certain respects to be the best preserved but it would be arbitrary to correct one by means of the other. The list is composite, classifying some of the people by family and some by locality, and gives a population survey of Judaea for the period immediately following the first wave of resettlement after the Exile. The Chronicler uses it here to illustrate the history of the return, and again in Ne 7 in connection with the resettlement of Jerusalem.

b. Twelve in all; the number of tribes of Israel.

c. Not reckoned among the Levites, unlike 3:10. One group only is mentioned, unlike 1 Ch 6:16seq.

d. The origin of the temple slaves (lit. 'dedicated ones') is described in Jos 9:27. The 'sons of Solomon's slaves' (vv. 55–58, see Ne 11:3, 21) were the descendants of prisoners of war or of foreigners subject to forced labour. These two groups did the menial work of the Temple, see Ezk 44:7–9; see 8:20.

e. The decision was later reversed, at least for the sons of Hakkoz, 8:33; Ne 3:4, 21.

f. i.e. the governor, referred to by his title of honour, tirshata, a Persian word apparently meaning 'His Reverence'; it recurs in Ne 7:65, 69; 8:9; 10:2. The governor does not interfere in religious affairs. Ezekiel's instructions have borne fruit, see Ezk 45:7–17; 46:1–10, 12, 16–18.

g. On this priestly privilege see Lv 10:14–15; 22:10seq.

h. To consult God by means of the sacred lots, see 1 S 14:41r. No high priest had as yet been appointed, see Hg 1:1; Zc 3.

i. 'in Jerusalem' Gk. 1 Esd 5:45; Hebr. omits.

3 a. The same expression (after correction) describes the gathering organised by Ezra, Ne 7:72[b]–8:1.

b. The mention of Zerubbabel and Jeshua as beginning the rebuilding (here and v. 8) is editorial. The work had been officially assigned to Sheshbazzar, 5:13–16; 6:3–5.

c. 'site' Gk, Syr., see 2:28; 'foundation' Hebr.

d. The expression 'people of the country' basically means all of the free population enjoying full civil rights in a given territory under their own rulers. In the OT, political changes modify its meaning. Thus, in 2 K 11:18, it seems to mean the conservative rural population as opposed to the citizens of Jerusalem. In post-exilic times, see 4:4; 9:1–2; 10:2, 11; Ne 10:29, the term is used (almost always in the plural) to designate the Samaritans, Ammonites, Moabites, etc., who had occupied the land vacated by the deported Jews and had in the interim acquired political rights of their own. A distinction is drawn between them and 'the people of Judah'. Later, in the rabbinical period, the term came to be applied to those who did not observe the religious law, see already Jn 7:49.

e. 'for the Sabbaths' 1 Esd 5:51, see 2 Ch 2:3. Hebr. omits.

f. 'Voluntary' sacrifices as opposed to those prescribed by the Law or obligatory as the result of a vow, see Lv 7:11a.

They also contributed money for the masons and carpenters, and food, drink 7

2 Ch 2:9,14 to Jaffa, for which Cyrus king of Persia had given permission.[h] ·It was in the 8 second month of the second year[i] after their arrival at the Temple of God in Jerusalem that Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel and Jeshua son of Jozadak, with the rest of their brothers, the priests, the Levites and all the people who had returned to Jerusalem from captivity, began the work by appointing some of the Levites who were twenty years old or more to superintend the work on the Temple of Yahweh.[j] ·The Levites, Jeshua, his sons and his brothers, with Kadmiel, Binnui 9

Nb 10:5a people raised a mighty shout of praise to Yahweh, since the foundations of the Temple of Yahweh had now been laid. ·Many of the older priests, Levites and 12
Hg 2:3 heads of families, who had seen the first temple, wept very loudly when the Tb 14:5 foundations of this one were laid before their eyes, but many others shouted aloud for joy, ·so that nobody could distinguish the noise of the joyful shout from the 13 noise of the people's weeping; for the people shouted so loudly that the noise could be heard far away.

and the heads of families and said, 'Let us help you build, for we resort to your God as you do and we have been sacrificing[c] to him since the time of Esarhaddon king of Assyria, who brought us here.'[d] ·Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and the other heads 3 of Israelite families replied, 'It is out of the question that you should join us in building a Temple for our God. We shall build for Yahweh, God of Israel, on our own, as King Cyrus king of Persia has commanded us.' ·The people of the country 4 then set about demoralising the people of Judah and deterring them from building;
they also bribed counsellors[e] against them to frustrate their purpose throughout 5
the lifetime of Cyrus king of Persia right on into the reign of Darius king of Persia.

Samaritan tactics under Xerxes and Artaxerxes[f]

In the reign of Xerxes, at the beginning of his reign,[g] they[h] drew up an accusation 6 against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

In the days of Artaxerxes,[i] Mithredath, Tabeel and their other associates wrote 7 to Artaxerxes king of Persia against Jerusalem;[j] the text of the letter was written in Aramaic writing and dialect.

Then Rehum the governor[k] and Shimshai the secretary wrote a letter to King 8
Artaxerxes, denouncing Jerusalem as follows:

'From Rehum the governor and Shimshai the secretary and their other associ- 9
ates, the judges, the legates, the Persian officials, the people of Uruk, Babylon and Susa—that is, the Elamites—·and the other peoples whom the great and 10 illustrious Ashurbanipal deported and settled in the towns of Samaria and in the rest of Transeuphrates.'[l]

This is the text of the letter which they sent him: 11

'To King Artaxerxes, from your servants the people of Transeuphrates:

'May the king now please be informed that the Jews, who have come up from 12
you to us, have arrived in Jerusalem and are rebuilding the rebellious and evil

13 city; they have begun rebuilding the walls and are laying the foundations; ·and now the king should be informed that once this city is rebuilt and the walls are restored, they will refuse to pay tribute, tax or toll, thus the king will incur a 14 loss; [m] ·and now, because we eat the palace salt, it is not proper for us to see this 15 affront offered to the king; we therefore send this information to the king ·so that a search may be made in the archives of your ancestors: in which archives you will find and learn that this city is a rebellious city, the bane of kings and provinces, and that sedition has been stirred up there from ancient times; that is 16 why this city was destroyed. ·We inform the king that if this city is rebuilt and its walls are restored, you will soon have no territories left in Transeuphrates.'

17 The king sent this reply:

'To Rehum the governor, to Shimshai the secretary, and to their other associates resident in Samaria and elsewhere in Transeuphrates: Greetings!

18 'And now, the document which you sent us has been accurately translated for 19 me, ·and by my orders search has been made, and it has been found that this city has rebelled against the kings in the past and that revolt and sedition have been 20 contrived in it; ·and that powerful kings have reigned in Jerusalem, governing 21 the whole of Transeuphrates [n] and exacting tribute, tax and toll; ·now give orders for these men to cease work; this city is not to be rebuilt until I give the order.
22 Beware of acting negligently in this matter. Why should the harm grow, to endanger the king?'

23 As soon as the text of King Artaxerxes' document had been read to Rehum the governor, [o] Shimshai the secretary and their associates, they hurried to the Jews in Ne 1:3d Jerusalem and stopped their work by force of arms.

The rebuilding of the Temple (520–515 BC)

24 Work on the Temple of God in Jerusalem then ceased, and was discontinued until the second year of the reign of Darius King of Persia. [p]

1 5 When the prophets Haggai and Zechariah son of Iddo prophesied to the Jews who were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel who was

The initial enthusiasm for building the Temple, stimulated by Sheshbazzar, 5:16, had petered out, and in the autumn of 520 there was still nothing to show but ruins, Hg 1:4. It may therefore be said that the work began only then. The leading part played by Zerubbabel is stressed by Hg and Zc, but here the 'elders' come to the fore, v. 5.

associates came to them and asked, 'Who gave you the order to rebuild this Temple and complete this structure? • [b]What are the names of the men putting up this 4 building?' •But the eyes of their God were watching over the elders of the Jews, so 5 they were not forced to stop until a report could reach Darius and an official reply about the matter could be received from him.

The governor's letter to King Darius

A copy of the letter which Tattenai, governor of Transeuphrates, Shethar-Bozenai 6 and his associates, the officials in Transeuphrates, sent to King Darius. •They sent 7 him a report which ran as follows:

'To King Darius, hearty greetings!

'The king should be informed that we went to the province of Judah, to the 8 Temple of the great God, which is being rebuilt with large stones; beams are being embedded in the walls; the work is being carried out energetically and is making good progress. •Questioning these elders, we asked them, "Who gave 9 you permission to rebuild this Temple and complete this structure?" •We also 10 asked them their names, to inform you, so that we could record the names of the men who were their leaders.

'They gave us the following answer, "We are the servants of the God of 11 heaven and earth; we are rebuilding the Temple built many years ago, which a great king of Israel had built and completed. •But because our ancestors angered 12 the God of heaven, he handed them over to Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldaean king of Babylon who destroyed this Temple and deported the people to Babylon. In the first year of Cyrus king of Babylon, however, King Cyrus issued an 13 official order that this Temple of God should be rebuilt; •furthermore, those 14
gold and silver articles belonging to the Temple of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had removed from the temple in Jerusalem and brought to the temple of Babylon, King Cyrus in turn removed from the temple of Babylon and handed back to a certain Sheshbazzar whom he had appointed governor. •He said to 15 him, 'Take these articles; go and return them to the Temple which is in Jerusalem and let the Temple of God be rebuilt on its original site;' •this Sheshbazzar then 16 came and laid the foundations of the Temple of God in Jerusalem, and it has been under construction ever since, [c] and is not yet finished."

'Hence, if it please the king, let search be made in the royal treasuries in 17
Babylon, to find out if it is true that an official order was issued by King Cyrus for this temple of God in Jerusalem to be rebuilt; and let the king's decision on this matter be sent to us.'

King Darius replies

6 Then, on the order of King Darius, search was made in the archives deposited 1 in the treasuries in Babylon [a] •and a scroll was found in the fortress of Ecbatana, 2 which ran as follows:

1:4f 'Memorandum.

'In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued this order: 3

"Temple of God in Jerusalem.

"The Temple is to be rebuilt as a place of offering sacrifice and its foundations retained. Its height is to be sixty cubits, its width sixty cubits, [b] •with three layers 4 of large stones and one layer of timber. [c] The cost is to be met by the royal treasury. •Furthermore, the gold and silver articles belonging to the Temple of 5
God which Nebuchadnezzar took from the Temple in Jerusalem and brought to Babylon are to be given back and returned to the temple in Jerusalem, each to its proper place, and deposited in the Temple of God." [d]

'Hence, Tattenai governor of Transeuphrates, Shethar-Bozenai and your 6 associates, the officials of Transeuphrates, keep away from there! •Leave the 7 governor of the Jews [e] and the elders of the Jews alone, to get on with their work on that Temple of God; they are permitted to rebuild that Temple of God on 8 that site. ·And herewith are my instructions as to how you will assist these elders of the Jews in the rebuilding of that Temple of God: the cost is to be paid in full to these men from the royal revenue, that is, from the taxes of Transeuphrates, 9 and without interruption. ·And whatever is required—young bulls, rams, lambs for burnt offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, oil, as the priests in 10 Jerusalem request—is to be given them day by day without fail, ·so that they may offer sacrifices acceptable to the God of heaven and pray for the life of the 1 Tm 2:2b 11 king and his sons.[f] ·Furthermore I have issued an instruction that if anyone disobeys this order, a beam is to be torn from his house, he is to be impaled on it 12 and his house is to be reduced to a rubbish-heap for his offence; ·and may the God who has caused his name to live there overthrow the king of any people who dares to defy this and destroy that Temple of God in Jerusalem! I, Darius, have issued this order. Let it be punctiliously obeyed!'

The Temple is completed

13 Tattenai governor of Transeuphrates, Shethar-Bozenai and their associates punc-14 tiliously obeyed the instructions sent by King Darius; ·and the elders of the Jews made good progress over their building, thanks to the prophetic activity of the prophet Haggai and Zechariah son of Iddo, completing the reconstruction in accordance with the command of the God of Israel and the order of Cyrus and of 15 Darius.[g] ·This Temple was completed on the twenty-third day of the month of 16 Adar, in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius.[h] ·The Israelites—the priests, the Levites and the remainder of the exiles[i]—joyfully celebrated the dedication of 17 this Temple of God; ·for the dedication of this Temple of God they offered one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs and, as a sin offering for all 18 Israel, twelve he-goats, corresponding to the number of the tribes of Israel. ·Then they installed the priests in their orders and the Levites in their positions for the ministry of the Temple of God[j] in Jerusalem, as prescribed in the Book of Moses.[k]

The Passover of 515 BC

19, 20 The exiles celebrated the Passover on the fourteenth day of the first month. ·The Ex 12:1a Levites, as one man, had purified themselves; all were pure, so they sacrificed the 21 Passover for all the exiles, for their brothers the priests and for themselves.[l] ·So the Israelites who had returned from exile and all those who had renounced the filthy practices of the people of the country to join them in resorting to Yahweh, 22 God of Israel, ate the Passover.[m] ·For seven days they joyfully celebrated the feast of Unleavened Bread, for Yahweh had given them cause to rejoice, having moved the heart of the king of Assyria in their favour to support them in their work on the Temple of God, the God of Israel.

II: THE ORGANISATION OF THE COMMUNITY BY EZRA AND NEHEMIAH

The mission and personality of Ezra [a]

7 After these events, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra son of 1 Seraiah, son of Azariah, son of Hilkiah, ·son of Shallum, son of Zadok, son 2 of Ahitub, ·son of Amariah, son of Azariah, son of Meraioth, ·son of Zerahiah, 3, 4 son of Uzzi, son of Bukki, ·son of Abishua, son of Phinehas, son of Eleazar, son of 5 the chief priest Aaron [b]—·this Ezra came up from Babylon. He was a scribe [c] 6 versed in the Law of Moses, which Yahweh, God of Israel, had given. The king 7:28;8:18 Ne 2:8,18 gave him everything that he asked for, since the hand of Yahweh his God was over him. ·A number of Israelites, priests, Levites, singers, gatekeepers and temple 7 slaves went up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of the reign of King Artaxerxes.
Ezra arrived in Jerusalem in the fifth month, in the seventh year of the king's reign; 8 for he had ordered the departure from Babylon on the first day of the first month, 9 and he arrived in Jerusalem on the first day of the fifth month, since the kindly hand of his God was over him. ·For Ezra had devoted himself to studying the Law 10 of Yahweh so as to put into practice and teach its statutes and rulings.

The order of Artaxerxes [d]

This is the text of the document which King Artaxerxes gave to Ezra, the priest- 11 scribe, a student of matters pertaining to Yahweh's commandments and statutes relating to Israel:

·"Artaxerxes, king of kings, to the priest Ezra, Secretary of the Law of the 12
1:2c God of heaven: greetings![e]

'Now here are my orders. All members of the people of Israel in my kingdom, 13 including their priests and Levites, who freely choose to go to Jerusalem, may go with you, ·for you are being sent by the king and his seven counsellors to 14 investigate how the Law of your God, in which you are expert, is being applied in Judah and Jerusalem, ·and to transport the silver and gold which the king 15 and his counsellors have voluntarily offered to the God of Israel who resides in Jerusalem, ·as well as all the silver and gold which you receive throughout the 16 province of Babylon and the voluntary offerings freely contributed by the people and the priests for the Temple of their God in Jerusalem.

'This money you will punctiliously use for the purchase of bulls, rams, lambs 17 and the materials for the oblations and libations which go with them, offering these on the altar of the Temple of your God in Jerusalem, ·and using the 18 remainder of the silver and gold in accordance with the will of your God [f] as you and your brothers may think fit.

'You will deliver the articles which have been given you for the ministry of the 19
Temple of your God, to the God of Jerusalem, ·and whatever else is needed and 20 you are obliged to supply for the Temple of your God, you will supply from the royal treasury.

'I, King Artaxerxes, have issued the following instruction to all the treasurers 21 of Transeuphrates: Whatever the priest Ezra, Secretary of the Law of the God of heaven, may request of you is to be punctiliously complied with: ·up to one 22 hundred talents of silver, one hundred kor of wheat, one hundred bat of wine, one hundred bat of oil, and unlimited salt. ·Whatever the God of heaven 23 demands for the Temple of the God of heaven must be diligently provided; why should retribution come on the realm of the king and of his sons? ·You are 24 further informed that it is against the law to impose tribute, tax or toll on any of the priests, Levites, singers, gatekeepers, temple slaves or other servants of this temple of God.

25 'And you, Ezra, by virtue of the wisdom of your God, which you possess, [h] are to appoint magistrates and scribes to administer justice for the whole people of Transeuphrates, that is, for all who know the Law [i] of your God; and you are to 26 teach it to those who do not know it. ·And on anyone who will not comply with the Law of your God and the Law of the king let sentence be swiftly executed, whether it be death, banishment, fine or imprisonment.'

Ezra's journey from Babylonia to Palestine

27 Blessed be Yahweh, God of our ancestors, who moved the king's heart in this way 28 to restore the beauty of the Temple of Yahweh in Jerusalem, ·won for me the faithful love of the king, his counsellors and all the most powerful of the king's officials! Taking heart since the hand of Yahweh my God was over me, I assembled those Israelite heads of families who were to go with me.

1 8 These, with their genealogies, were the heads of families who set out from Babylon with me in the reign of King Artaxerxes: [a]

2 Of the sons of Phinehas: Gershom; of the sons of Ithamar: [b] Daniel; of the sons
3 of David: Hattush ·son of Shechaniah; of the sons of Parosh: Zechariah, and with 4 him a hundred and fifty males officially registered; ·of the sons of Pahath-Moab:
5 Elioenai son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males; ·of the sons of Zattu:
6 Shechaniah son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males; ·of the sons of 7 Adin: Ebed son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males; ·of the sons of Elam:
8 Jeshaiah son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males; ·of the sons of Shephatiah:
9 Zebadiah son of Michael, and with him eighty males; ·of the sons of Joab: Obadiah
10 son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males; ·of the sons of Bani:
11 Shelomith son of Josiphiah, and with him a hundred and sixty males; ·of the sons 12 of Bebai: Zechariah son of Bebai, and with him twenty-eight males; ·of the sons of 13 Azgad: Johanan son of Hakkatan, and with him a hundred and ten males; ·of the sons of Adonikam: the younger sons, whose names are: Eliphelet, Jeiel and 14 Shemaiah, and with them sixty males; ·and of the sons of Bigvai: Uthai son of Zabud, and with him seventy males.

15 I assembled them near the canal which runs to Ahava, [c] where we camped for three days. I noticed laymen and priests, but I could not discover any Levites there.
16 I then sent for Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, 17 Zechariah and Meshullam, judicious men, [d] ·and sent them to Iddo, the leading

7 a. vv. 1–11 are by the Chronicler; he uses Ezra's report, see Introduction.

b. Ezra's genealogy reflects the exiles' anxiety to see a duly accredited priesthood, 2:62; 8:2. But it has probably been constructed by the Chronicler on the basis of 1 Ch 5:28seq.

c. Skill in the art of writing made scribes indispensable officials in an oriental court. Hence the title 'scribe' (vv. 12 and 21) indicates that Ezra was a kind of minister for Jewish affairs at the Persian court. But the Chronicler, thinking of Ezra's activity in Jerusalem, Ne 8:8f, gives the official title a religious meaning; the scribe is the man who reads, translates, expounds the Law to God's people. Ezra is the father of these scribes who did much good work in the post-exilic period, which was continued by the scribes (grammateis) of the time of Christ.

d. Note three points about the order: 1 The permission for Jews living in Babylon to settle in Judah, v. 13. 2 The elevation of the Mosaic Law to the status of law of the state, vv. 25–26; not only the Palestinian community, v. 14, but also the Jewish communities west of the Euphrates, v. 25, are to be governed on the basis of this Law, which is to be obligatory for all, v. 26. 3 The financial arrangements, vv. 15–20. On the religious policy of the Persian kings, see 1:2c.

e. vv. 12–26 are in Aramaic.

f. 'greetings!' 1 Esd 8:9 and Syr.; 'done' Aram. If, however, the Aramaic reading is good, it presumably means 'irrevocable' or something of the sort.

g. i.e. the Law, as in v. 25.

h. In concrete terms, the Law, see v. 18.

i. Knowing the Law implies obeying it.

8 a. This list, interrupting Ezra's report from 7:28 to 8:15, consists of two priests descended from Phinehas and Ithamar, a descendant of the royal line of David and twelve families, the heads of which (with one exception) occur in ch. 2= Ne 7. It is the work either of the Chronicler or of an editor. The text is defective at various points and has been emended on the basis of 1 Esd 8 and the versions.

b. The descendant of Phinehas belongs to the Zadokite line, which is the only one to be represented in the list of ch. 2 = Ne 7. The descendant of Ithamar belongs to the line of Abiathar, which had been excluded from the Temple, 1 K 2:27. His presence in this list indicates the reconciliation of the two rival families which, in the Second Temple, were to share the priesthood of 'the sons of Aaron', the Zadokites, however, maintaining their preponderance with sixteen orders, as against the Ithamarites with their eight orders, 1 Ch 24:4.

c. Site unknown, see v. 21 where the canal takes its name from the place. (This waterway was an irrigation canal, not a natural river.)

d. 'judicious men' Gk and 1 Esd 8:43; 'heads, and Joharib and Elnathan, judicious ones' Hebr.

man of a place called Casiphia; I told them what they were to say to Iddo and his kinsmen,[e] living at the place called Casiphia, that is, to provide us with people to serve the Temple of our God. ·And because the hand of God was good to us, they 18 sent us a wise man of the sons of Mahli son of Levi, son of Israel, a certain Sherebiah with his sons and kinsmen: eighteen men; ·also Hashabiah and with him 19 his brother Jeshaiah[f] of the sons of Merari with his kinsmen and sons: twenty men;
2:43d and two hundred and twenty temple slaves—descendants of the temple slaves 20 whom David and the princes had assigned to serve the Levites—all of them designated by name.

There, beside the Ahava Canal, I then proclaimed a fast, to humble ourselves 21 before our God and to pray to him for a successful journey for us, our dependants and all our belongings. ·For I should have been ashamed to ask the king for a 22 Ne 2:9 company of cavalry to protect us from hostile people on our road, as we had already said to the king, 'The hand of our God is over all who seek him for their protection, but his mighty retribution befalls all those who forsake him.' ·So we 23
fasted and pleaded with our God about this, and he heard us.

I next chose twelve of the leading priests, and also Sherebiah and Hashabiah 24 with ten of their kinsmen. ·To them I weighed out the silver, the gold and the 25 utensils, the contributions which the king, his counsellors, his notables and all the Israelites there present had made for the Temple of our God. ·To them I weighed 26 out and handed over six hundred and fifty talents of silver, one hundred utensils of silver valued at two talents,[g] one hundred talents of gold, ·twenty golden bowls 27 valued at a thousand darics and two utensils of fine burnished copper as precious as gold. ·I said to them, 'You are consecrated to Yahweh; these utensils are conse- 28
crated too; the silver and gold are a voluntary offering to Yahweh, God of your ancestors. ·Guard them carefully until you weigh them out to the leading priests, 29
the Levites, and the heads of families of Israel in Jerusalem in the rooms of the Temple of Yahweh.' ·The priests and Levites then took charge of the silver, the 30 gold and the utensils thus weighed, to bring them to Jerusalem to the Temple of our God.

On the twelfth day of the first month we left the Ahava Canal to make our way 31 to Jerusalem; the hand of our God was over us and protected us from enemies and surprise attacks on our way. ·When we arrived in Jerusalem, we rested for three 32 days. ·On the fourth day the silver, the gold and the utensils were weighed in the 33 Temple of our God and handed over to the priest Meremoth son of Uriah and, with him, Eleazar son of Phinehas; with them were the Levites Jozabad son of Jeshua and Noadiah son of Binnui. ·By number and weight all was there. The total 34 weight was recorded at the same time.

When the exiles arrived from their captivity, they offered burnt offerings to the 35
God of Israel—twelve bulls on behalf of all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-two[h] lambs, and as a sin offering twelve he-goats: the whole of this as a burnt offering to Yahweh.

They also delivered the king's instructions to the king's satraps and the governors 36 of Transeuphrates, who then supported the people and the Temple of God.

Ml 2:10–22 The marriages with foreigners dissolved[a]

9 Once this was done, the officials approached me to say, 'The people of Israel, 1
the priests and the Levites, have not renounced the disgusting practices of the Dt 7:1a people of the country—the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Moabites, the Egyptians and the Amorites—·since they and their sons have 2
Ne 9:2 married some of their women, as a result of which the holy race has been contaminated by the people of the country. The officials and leaders have been the worst offenders in this act of infidelity.' ·On hearing this, I tore my clothes and my cloak; 3
Is 66:2,5 I pulled hair from my head and beard and sat down in horror. ·All who trembled at 4
the words of the God of Israel gathered round me, when faced with the infidelity of the exiles,[b] while I went on sitting there in horror until the evening sacrifice. ·At 5

the evening sacrifice I came out of my stupor and, falling on my knees in my torn 6 clothes and cloak, stretched out my hands to Yahweh my God, ·and said: [c]
'My God, I am ashamed, I blush to lift my face to you, my God. For our iniquities have increased, until they are higher than our heads, and our guilt has 7 risen as high as heaven. ·From the days of our ancestors until now we have been deeply guilty and, because of our iniquities, we, our kings and our priests, have been handed over to the kings of other countries, to the sword, to captivity, to 8 pillage, to shame, as is the case today. ·And now, for a brief moment, the favour of Yahweh our God has allowed a remnant of us to escape and given us a stable home Is 4:3c in his holy place, so that our God can raise our spirits and revive us a little in our 9 slavery. ·For we are slaves; but God has not forgotten us in our slavery; he has extended his faithful love to us even under the kings of Persia and revived us to rebuild the Temple of our God, restore its ruins and provide us with a refuge in 10 Judah and in Jerusalem. ·But now, our God, what can we say after this? For we 11 have abandoned your commandments, ·which you gave through your servants the prophets in these terms, "The country which you are about to possess is a polluted country, polluted by the people of the country and their disgusting practices, which Lv 18:24seq. Ezk 36:17
12 have filled it with their filth from end to end. [d] ·Hence you are not to give your Dt 7:3
daughters in marriage to their sons, or let their daughters marry your sons, or ever concern yourselves about peace or good relations with them, if you want to grow stronger, to live off the fat of the land and bequeath it to your sons for ever."
13 'After all that has befallen us because of our evil deeds and our deep guilt—though you, our God, have punished us less than our iniquities deserved and have Ps 103:10 14 allowed us to escape like this—·are we to break your commandments again and intermarry with people with these disgusting practices? Would you not be enraged with us to the point of destroying us, leaving neither remnant nor survivor?
15 Yahweh, God of Israel, you are upright. [e] We survive only as the remnant we are today. We come before you in our guilt; because of it we cannot stand in your Ps 130:3 presence.'

1 10 While Ezra, weeping and prostrating himself in front of the Temple of God, was praying and making confession, a very large crowd of men, women and
2 children of Israel gathered round him, the people weeping bitterly. ·Then Shechaniah son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, spoke up and said to Ezra, 'We have been unfaithful to our God by marrying foreign women from the people of the 3 country. But, in spite of this, there is still some hope for Israel. ·We will make a covenant with our God to send away all the foreign wives and their children in obedience to the advice of my lord [a] and of those who tremble at the commandment
4 of our God. Let us act in accordance with the Law. ·Go ahead, do your duty; we 5 support you. Be brave, take action!' ·Then Ezra stood up and put the leading priests and Levites and all Israel on oath to do what had been said. They took the 6 oath. ·Ezra then left his place in front of the Temple of God and went to the room of Jehohanan son of Eliashib, where he spent the night [b] without eating food or drinking water, because he was still mourning over the exiles' infidelity.
7 A proclamation was issued throughout Judah and Jerusalem that all the exiles

The text does not imply that there was a cult-centre at Casiphia; if there was a concentration of Levites there, it was because the exiles had been resettled according to their family groups and original communities.

Gn 41:45; 48:5seq.; Nb 12:1seq.; Rt 1:4; 2 S 3:3, though later forbidden by Dt in order to combat idolatry, which gentile women tended to bring with them into the home, Dt 7:1–4, see Dt 23:4seq. The danger increased after the Exile probably because the majority of the returning exiles were men. The reason for the divorce is still religious, 9:1, 11, but a second reason now emerges: concern for racial purity, 9:2.

were to assemble in Jerusalem, ·and that anyone who failed within three days to 8 answer the summons of the officials and elders was to forfeit all his possessions[c] and himself be excluded from the community of the exiles. ·As a result, all the men 9 of Judah and Benjamin assembled in Jerusalem within the three days; it was the twentieth day of the ninth month. All the people sat down in the square in front of the Temple of God, trembling because of the matter in hand and because of the heavy rain. ·The priest Ezra then stood up and said to them, 'You have been 10 unfaithful and have married foreign wives, thus adding to Israel's guilt. ·So now 11 give thanks to Yahweh, God of your ancestors, and do his will by holding aloof from the people of the country and from foreign wives.' ·In ringing tones, the 12 whole assembly answered, 'Yes, our duty is to do as you say. ·But there are many 13 people here and it is the rainy season; we cannot stay out in the open; besides, this is not something that can be dealt with in one or two days, since many of us have been unfaithful over this. ·Let our officials deputise for the whole community,[d] 14 and all the people in our towns who have married foreign wives can come at stated times, accompanied by elders and judges from each town, until our God's fierce anger over this is turned away from us.' ·Only Jonathan son of Asahel and Jahzeiah 15 son of Tikvah, supported by Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite, were opposed to this.[e] ·The exiles did as had been proposed. And the priest Ezra selected[f] the 16 family heads of the various families, all of them by name, who began their sittings on the first day of the tenth month to look into the matter. ·And by the first day of 17 the first month they had dealt with all the men who had married foreign women.

The list of the guilty[g]

Among the priests who were found to have married foreign wives were: 18 of the sons of Jeshua son of Jozadak and his brothers: Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib and Gedaliah, ·who agreed to send their wives away; their guilt offering[h] was a 19 ram from the flock for their guilt;
of the sons of Immer: Hanani and Zebadiah; 20 of the sons of Harim: Maaseiah, Elijah, Shemaiah, Jehiel and Uzziah; 21 of the sons of Pashhur: Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethanel, Jozabad and 22
Elasah;
Ne 8:7;10:11 of the Levites: Jozabad, Shimei, Kelaiah—that is, Kelita—Pethahiah, Judah, 23
and Eliezer;
of the singers: Eliashib and Zaccur;[i] 24 of the gatekeepers: Shallum, Telem and Uri;
and of the Israelites: 25 of the sons of Parosh: Ramiah, Izziah, Malchijah, Mijamin, Eleazar, Malchijah and Benaiah;
of the sons of Elam: Mattaniah, Zechariah, Jehiel, Abdi, Jeremoth and Elijah; 26 of the sons of Zattu: Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, Jeremoth, Zabad and Aziza; 27 of the sons of Bebai: Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, Atlai; 28 of the sons of Bigvai: Meshullam, Malluch, Jedaiah, Jashub, Sheal, Jeremoth; 29 of the sons of Pahath-Moab: Adna, Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, 30 Bezalel, Binnui and Manasseh; of the sons of Harim: Eliezer, Isshijah, Malchijah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 31
Benjamin, Malluch, Shemariah; 32 of the sons of Hashum: Mattenai, Mattattah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Man- 33 of the sons of Bani: Maadai, Amram, Uel, ·Benaiah, Bediah, Jeluhi, ·Vaniah, 34-36 Meremoth, Eliashib, ·Mattaniah, Mattenai and Jaasau; 37 of the sons of Binnui: Shimei, ·Shelemiah, Nathan and Adaiah; 38, 39 of the sons of Zaccai: Shashai, Sharai, ·Azarel, Shelemiah, Shemariah, 40, 41 Shallum, Amariah, Joseph; 42 of the sons of Nebo: Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jaddai, Joel, Benaiah. 43

All these had married foreign wives but sent them away with their children.[j] 44

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

Nehemiah's call: his mission to Judah

1 The words of Nehemiah son of Hacaliah. [a] It happened in the month of Chislev, in the twentieth year, [b] while I was in the citadel of Susa, ·that Hanani, one of my brothers, arrived with some men from Judah. I asked them about the Jews—those who had escaped and those who survived from the captivity [c]—and about Jerusalem. ·They replied, 'The survivors remaining there in the province since the captivity are in a very bad and demoralised condition: the walls of Jerusalem are in ruins and its gates have been burnt down.' [d] ·On hearing this I sat down and wept; for some days I mourned, fasting and praying before the God of heaven.
Dt 7:9,12 I said, [e] 'Yahweh, God of heaven—the great and awe-inspiring God who keeps a covenant of faithful love with those who love him and obey his commandments—2 Ch 6:40 let your ear be attentive and your eyes open, to listen to your servant's prayer, which I now offer to you day and night on behalf of your servants the Israelites. I admit the sins of the Israelites, which we have committed against you. Both I and my father's House have sinned; ·we have acted very wickedly towards you by not keeping the commandments, laws and rulings which you enjoined on your servant Dt 30:1–4 Moses. ·Remember, I beg you, the promise which you solemnly made to your servant Moses, "If you are unfaithful, I shall scatter you among the peoples; ·but if you come back to me and keep my commandments and practise them, even though ‖Dt 30:4 those who have been banished are at the very sky's end, I shall gather them from there and bring them back to the place which I have chosen as a dwelling-place for Dt 9:29 my name." ·Since they are your servants, your people, whom you have redeemed with your mighty power and strong hand, ·O Lord, let your ear now be attentive to your servant's prayer and to the prayer of your servants who want to revere your name. I beg you let your servant be successful today and win this man's compassion.'
At the time I was cupbearer to the king.
2 In the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, [a] since I was in charge of the wine, I took the wine and offered it to the king. Now, he had never seen me looking depressed before. [b] ·So the king said to me, 'Why are you looking depressed? You are not sick! This must be a sadness of the heart.'
Thoroughly alarmed by this, ·I said to the king, 'May the king live for ever! How can I not look depressed when the city where the tombs of my ancestors are lies in ruins and its gates have been burnt down?' ·The king then said to me, 'What would you like me to do?' Praying to the God of heaven, ·I said to the king, 'If the king approves and your servant enjoys your favour, send me to Judah, to the city of the tombs of my ancestors, so that I can rebuild it.' ·The king—with the queen sitting beside him—said, 'How long will your journey take, and when will you come back?' Once I had given him a definite time, the king approved my mission.
I then said to the king, 'If the king approves, may I be given orders for the 8 governors of Transeuphrates to let me pass through on my way to Judah? •Also an order for Asaph, keeper of the king's forest, to supply me with timber for the beams of the gates of the citadel of the Temple, for the city walls and for the house which I am to occupy?' These the king granted me because the kindly hand of my God was over me.

9 When I reached the governors of Transeuphrates, I gave them the king's orders.
The king had sent an escort of army officers and cavalry along with me. Ezr 8:22
10 When Sanballat the Horonite and Tobiah the official of Ammon [c] heard about this, they were exceedingly displeased that someone had come to promote the welfare of the Israelites.

The decision to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem

11, 12 And so I reached Jerusalem. After I had been there three days, •I got up during the night with a few other men—I had not told anyone what my God had inspired me to do for Jerusalem—taking no animal with me other than my own mount.
13 Under cover of dark I went out through the Valley Gate towards the Dragon's Fountain as far as the Dung Gate, and examined the wall of Jerusalem where it 14 was broken down [d] and its gates burnt out. •I then crossed to the Fountain Gate 15 and the King's Pool, but it was impassable to my mount. •So I went up the Valley [e] in the dark, examining the wall; I then went in again through the Valley Gate, 16 coming back •without the officials knowing where I had gone or what I had been doing. So far I had said nothing to the Jews: neither to the priests, the nobles, the officials nor any other persons involved in the undertaking.
17 I then said to them, 'You see what a sorry state we are in: Jerusalem is in ruins and its gates have been burnt down. Come on, we must rebuild the walls of 18 Jerusalem and put an end to our humiliating position!' •And I told them how the kindly hand of my God had been over me, and the words which the king had said to me. At this they said, 'Let us start building at once!' and they set their hands to the good work.
19 When Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the official of Ammon, and Geshem [f] the Arab heard about this, they laughed at us and jeered. They said, 'What is this you 20 are doing? Are you going to revolt against the king?' •But I gave them this answer,
'The God of heaven will grant us success and we, his servants, mean to start building; as for you, you have neither share nor right nor memorial in Jerusalem.'

How the walls were rebuilt [a]

1 3 Eliashib the high priest with his brother priests then set to work and rebuilt the Is 58:12e
Sheep Gate; they made the framework, [b] hung its doors, fixed its bolts and bars and proceeded as far as the Tower of the Hundred and the Tower of Hananel. Jr 31:38

d. The ambition to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem was born during the Exile, Is 54:11–12, and subsequently grew, Is 60:10–17; Zc 2:5seq. The first step was taken probably in the reign of Xerxes, Ezr 4:6, and we have clear evidence for the reign of Artaxerxes, Ezr 4:12–13,16. It was seen as a claim to independence and a threat to the more recently acquired rights of Samaria; hence the antagonism of the Samaritans who extorted permission from the Persian authorities to bring the work to a halt by force, Ezr 4:23. It is to this recent event that Hanani alludes.

It contains invaluable information on the topography of Jerusalem (see plan), see 2 S 5:9f; 2 K 14:13b, and on the political geography of the province, which had five chief towns: Jerusalem, Beth-ha-Cherem, Mizpah, Beth-Zur, Keilah (see map at end of book).

Ezr 2:35 sons of Ha-Senaah rebuilt the Fish Gate; they made the framework, hung its doors and fixed its bolts and bars. ·Meremoth son of Uriah, son of Hakkoz, carried out 4 repairs next to them; Meshullam son of Berechiah, son of Meshezabel, carried out repairs next to him; and Zadok son of Baana carried out repairs next to him. ·The 5 men of Tekoa carried out repairs next to him, though their nobles would not demean themselves to help their masters.[c] ·Joiada son of Paseah and Meshullam 6 son of Besodeiah repaired the gate of the New Quarter;[d] they made the framework, hung its doors and fixed its bolts and bars. ·Next to them repairs were carried 7 out by Melatiah of Gibeon, Jadon of Meronoth, and the men of Gibeon and Mizpah, for the sake of the governor of Transeuphrates.[e] ·Next to them repairs 8 were carried out by Uzziel son of Harhaiah, a member of the metal-workers' guild,[f] and next to him repairs were carried out by Hananiah of the perfumers' guild. These renovated the wall of Jerusalem as far as the Broad Wall.

Next to them repairs were carried out by Rephaiah son of Hur, who was head of 9
one half of the district of Jerusalem. ·Next to them Jedaiah son of Harumaph 10 carried out repairs opposite his own house; next to him repairs were carried out by Hattush son of Hashabneiah. ·Malchijah son of Harim and Hasshub son of 11
Pahath-Moab repaired another section as far as the Furnace Tower.[g] ·Next to 12 them repairs were carried out by Shallum son of Hallohesh, head of the other half of the district of Jerusalem, by him and his sons. ·[h]Hanun and the inhabitants of 13
Zanoah repaired the Valley Gate: they rebuilt it, hung its doors and fixed its bolts and bars; they also repaired a thousand cubits of wall up to the Dung Gate.[i] Malchijah son of Rechab, head of the district of Beth-ha-Cherem, repaired the 14
Dung Gate; he rebuilt it, hung its doors and fixed its bolts and bars.

Shallum son of Col-Hozeh, head of the district of Mizpah, repaired the Fountain 15 Gate; he rebuilt it, roofed it, hung its doors and fixed its bolts and bars. He also rebuilt the wall of the Pool of Siloah, adjoining the king's garden, as far as the steps going down from the City of David.[j] ·After him, Nehemiah son of Azbuk, head of 16 half the district of Beth-Zur, carried out repairs from a point opposite the Davidic Tombs to the artificial pool[k] and the House of the Champions.[l] ·After him, repairs 17 were carried out by the Levites: Rehum son of Bani; and next to him Hashabiah, head of one half of the district of Keilah, carried out repairs for his own district.
After him, repairs were carried out by their brothers: Binnui son of Henadad, head 18 of the other half of the district of Keilah. ·Next to him, Ezer son of Jeshua, 19 headman of Mizpah, repaired another section in front of the ascent to the armoury at the Angle.

After him, Baruch son of Zabbai repaired[m] another section from the Angle to 20
the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest. ·After him, Meremoth son of 21 Uriah, son of Hakkoz, repaired another section from the door of Eliashib's house as far as the end of Eliashib's house. ·And after him repairs were carried out by the 22 priests who lived in the district. ·After them repairs were carried out by Benjamin 23 and Hasshub, opposite their own house. After them repairs were carried out by Azariah son of Maaseiah, son of Ananiah, beside his own house. ·After him, 24
Binnui son of Henadad repaired another section from Azariah's house as far as the Angle at the corner. ·After him, Palal son of Uzai carried out repairs[n] in front of 25 the Angle and the tower projecting from the king's Upper Palace by the Court of the Guard; and after him, Pedaiah son of Parosh carried out the repairs[o] ·to a point 26
Ezk 40:6 by the Water Gate to the east and the projecting tower. ·After him, the men of 27 Tekoa repaired another section from in front of the great projecting tower as far as the wall of Ophel.

From the Horse Gate onwards repairs were carried out by the priests, each in 28 front of his own house. ·After them repairs were carried out by Zadok son of 29 Immer in front of his house, and after him repairs were carried out by Shemaiah son of Shechaniah, keeper of the East Gate. ·After him[p] Hananiah son of Shele- 30 miah and Hanun sixth son of Zalaph repaired another section, after whom repairs were carried out by Meshullam son of Berechiah in front of his room. ·After him 31

Malchijah, of the metal-workers' guild, repaired as far as the Hall of the temple slaves and merchants, in front of the Muster Gate, as far as the upper room at the 31 32 corner. ·And between the upper room at the corner and the Sheep Gate repairs were carried out by the goldsmiths and the merchants.

The effect on the Jews' opponents

4:1 33 When Sanballat heard that we were rebuilding the wall, he became furiously angry.
2 34 He ridiculed the Jews and in front of his kinsmen and the aristocracy of Samaria he exclaimed, 'What are these pathetic Jews doing . . . ? Are they going to give up? Or offer sacrifices? [q] Or complete the work in a day? Can they put new life into
3 35 stones taken from rubbish heaps and even charred?' ·And beside him Tobiah of Ammon remarked, 'If a jackal were to jump on what they are building, it would
4 36 knock their stone wall down!' ·Listen, our God, for we are despised! Make their sneers fall back on their own heads! Send them as booty to a land of captivity!
5 37 Do not pardon their wickedness, may their sin never be erased before you, for they Is 58:12e Jr 18:23 have insulted the builders to their face!
6 38 Meanwhile we were rebuilding the wall, which was soon joined up all the way round to mid-height; the people put their hearts into the work.

7 1 4 When Sanballat, Tobiah, the Arabs, the Ammonites and the Ashdodites heard that repairs to the walls of Jerusalem were going forward—that the gaps were 8 2 beginning to fill up—they became very angry, ·and they all plotted to come and attack Jerusalem and upset my plans. [a]
9 3 We, however, prayed to our God and organised a guard day and night to protect
10 4 the city from them. [b] ·But in Judah the saying went, 'The strength of the carrier falters, the rubbish heap is so vast that by ourselves we cannot rebuild the wall!'
11 5 And our opponents said, 'They will never know or see a thing, until we are in there among them, and then we shall massacre them and put a stop to the work.'
12 6 Now when the Jews who lived near them had warned us ten times over, 'They 13 7 are coming up against us from every place they live in,' [c] ·men took up position [d] in the space behind the wall at those points where it was lowest, and I organised the 14 8 people by families with their swords, spears and bows. ·Aware of their anxiety, [e] I then addressed the nobles, the officials and the rest of the people, 'Do not be afraid of them. Remember the great and awe-inspiring Lord and fight for your kinsmen,
15 9 your sons, your daughters, your wives and your homes.' ·Once our enemies heard that we were forewarned and that God had thwarted their plan, they withdrew [f] and we all went back to the wall, each one to his work.
16 10 From then on, half my own retainers went on working, while the other half stood by, armed with spears, shields, bows and armour to protect [g] the whole House of and holding a spear in the other. •Each builder had his sword strapped to his side 12 18 as he built. Beside me stood a trumpeter. •I then said to the nobles, the officials 13 19 and the rest of the people, 'The work is great and widely spread out, and we are deployed along the wall some way from one another. •Rally to us wherever you 14 20 hear the trumpet sounding; our God will fight for us.' •And so we went on with the 15 21 work[i] from break of day until the stars came out. •At the same time I also told the 16 22 people, 'Let every man, with his attendant, spend the night inside Jerusalem; we shall spend the night on guard and the day at work.'[j] •Neither I, nor my brothers, 17 23 nor my attendants, nor my bodyguards, ever took off our clothes; each one kept his spear in his right hand.[k]

The social problems of Nehemiah. He vindicates his administration

Jr 34:8–22 5 There was a great outcry from the people, and from their wives, against their 1 brother Jews. •Some said, 'We are having to pledge[a] our sons and daughters 2 to get enough grain to eat and keep us alive.' •Others said, 'We are having to 3 mortgage our fields, our vineyards and our houses to get grain because of the shortage.' •Still others said, 'We have had to borrow money on our fields and our 4 vineyards to pay the royal tax; •and though we belong to the same race as our 5
Ex 21:7 Lv 25:39 brothers, and our children are as good as theirs, we shall have to sell our sons and our daughters into slavery; some of our daughters have been sold into slavery already. We can do nothing about it, since our fields and our vineyards now belong to others.'[b]

When I heard their complaints and these words I was very angry. •Having turned 6, 7
the matter over in my mind, I reprimanded the nobles and the officials as follows,
'Each of you is imposing a burden[c] on his brother.' Summoning a great assembly to deal with them, •I said to them, 'To the best of our power, we have redeemed 8 our brother Jews who were forced to sell themselves to foreigners, and now you in turn are selling your brothers, for them to be bought back by us!'[d] They were silent and could find nothing to say. •'What you are doing', I went on, 'is wrong. Do you 9 not want to walk in the fear of our God and escape the sneers of the nations, our enemies? •I too, with my brothers and retainers, have lent them money and grain. 10
Let us cancel these pledges. •This very day return them their fields, their vineyards, 11 their olive groves and their houses, and cancel the claim[e] on the money, grain, new wine and olive oil, which you have lent them.' •'We shall make restitution,' they 12 replied, 'we shall claim nothing more from them; we shall do as you say.' Summoning the priests, I then made them swear to do as they had promised. •Then, 13 Jr 18:1a shaking out the fold of my garment, I said, 'May God thus shake out of house and possessions anyone who does not make good this promise; may he be shaken out thus and left empty!' And the whole assembly answered, 'Amen' and praised Yahweh. And the people kept this promise.

What is more,[f] from the time when the king[g] appointed me to be their governor 14 in Judah, from the twentieth to the thirty-second year of King Artaxerxes, for twelve years, neither I nor my brothers ever levied[h] the governor's subsistence allowance, •whereas the former governors, my predecessors,[i] had been a burden 15 on the people, from whom they took forty silver shekels a day[j] for food and wine, while their attendants oppressed the people too. But I, fearing God, never did this.
Also, not acquiring any land, I concentrated on the work of this wall and all my 16 attendants joined in the work together, too.

Furthermore, magistrates[k] and officials to the number of a hundred and fifty ate 17 at my table, not to mention those who came to us from the surrounding nations.
Every day, one ox, six fine sheep, as well as poultry, were prepared for me; every 18 ten days, skins of wine[l] were brought in bulk. But even so, I never claimed the governor's subsistence allowance, since the people already had burden enough to bear.

To my credit, my God, remember all I have done for this people. 19

The intrigues of Nehemiah's enemies. The wall is finished [a]

1 6 When Sanballat, Tobiah, Geshem the Arab and our other enemies heard that I had rebuilt the wall and that not a single gap was left—though at that time I 2 had not fixed the doors to the gates—•Sanballat and Geshem sent me this message,
'Come and meet us at Ha-Chephirim in the Vale of Ono.' But they had evil designs 3 on me. •So I sent messengers to them to say, 'I am engaged in a great undertaking, so I cannot come down. Why should the work stop while I leave it and come down
4 to you?' •Four times they sent me the same invitation and I made them the same
5 reply. •The fifth time, with the same purpose in mind, Sanballat sent me his servant
6 bearing an open letter. •It ran, 'There is a rumour among the nations—and Gashmu [b] confirms it—that you and the Jews are thinking of rebelling, which is why 7 you are rebuilding the wall, and you intend to become their king; [c] •and that you have even briefed prophets [d] to acclaim you in Jerusalem with the cry, "There is a king in Judah!" Now, these rumours are going to reach the king; so you had better 8 come and discuss them with us.' •To this I sent him the following reply, 'As regards what you say, nothing of the sort has occurred; it is a figment of your own 9 imagination.' •For they were all trying to terrorise us, thinking, 'They will become demoralised over the work and it will not get finished.' But my morale rose even higher. [e]

10 Then, when I went to visit Shemaiah son of Delaiah, son of Mehetabel, since he was prevented from coming to me, [f] he said:

We must gather at the Temple of God,
inside the sanctuary itself;
we must shut the sanctuary doors,
for they are coming to kill you,
they are coming to kill you tonight!

11 But I retorted, 'Should a man like me run away? Would a man like me go into 12 the Temple to save his life? [g] I shall not go in!' •I realised that God had not sent him to say this, but that he had produced this prophecy for me because Tobiah [h] was 13 paying him •to terrorise [i] me into doing as he said and committing a sin, so that they would have grounds for blackening my reputation and blaming me.

14 Remember Tobiah, my God, for what he did; and Noadiah the prophetess, and the other prophets who tried to terrorise me.

h. 'were armed' Gk; 'did their loading' Hebr.

i. Hebr. adds 'half of them armed with spears', possibly a gloss from v. 10.

j. As well as ensuring their safety and protecting the city, it prevented those who would normally have gone home to their villages from deserting. It also cut off one of Sanballat's sources of intelligence.

k. 'in his right' bimino conj.; Hebr. hammayim 'the water'.

5 a. 'We . . . pledge' 'orpebim conj.; Hebr. rabbim 'We are numerous'.

b. The crisis cannot have had the work on the wall as its sole cause; this particular social evil was endemic, see 2 K 4:1; Is 50:1; Am 2:6; 8:6.

c. 'burden' massa' conj.; Hebr. mashsha' debt.

d. 'for them to be brought back to us' Vulg.; 'for them to sell themselves to us' Hebr.

e. 'claim' mashsha't conj.; Hebr. me'at 'hundredth part'. Here Nehemiah, like Jr 34:8–22, reflects the spirit of Dt 15, though his action is dictated by compassion and practical politics and has nothing to do with the sabbatical year, Lv 25:1a.

f. This passage is connected with v. 10 and offers further proof of Nehemiah's selflessness.

g. 'The king' Vulg.; 'he' Hebr.

h. The subsistence allowance was a charge on the populace.

c. Such hopes may indeed have been entertained as regards Nehemiah, as they had been of Zerubbabel, Zc 6:9–14.

d. Haggai and Zechariah had supported Zerubbabel by similar means.

e. lit. 'And now I strengthened my hands' versions; 'And now strengthen my hands!' Hebr.

f. lit. 'confined', but what this means is not clear. Perhaps it is simply that the prophet was prevented from coming and invited the governor in order to communicate a prophecy to him.

g. The whole episode is obscure and probably owes much to the editor. Shemaiah seems to advise Nehemiah to claim sanctuary, a privilege attached first to the altar, 1 K 1:50seq.; 2:28seq., and extended later to the whole Temple, 1 M 10:43; Ps 27:5 (?). But by specifying 'inside the sanctuary itself', where a layman might not enter, he would involve Nehemiah in a grave fault, v. 11, 13; see Nb 18:7.

h. Hebr. adds 'and Sanballat' as also Gk here and at v. 14.

i. Omitting 'for he was being paid' (a gloss) at the beginning of the verse.

The wall was finished within fifty-two days, on the twenty-fifth of Elul. [k] 15, 16
When all our enemies heard about it and all the surrounding nations saw it, they thought Ps 118:22–23; 127:1 it a wonderful thing, [l] because they realised that this work had been accomplished by the power of our God.

During this same period, the nobles of Judah kept sending letter after letter to 17
Tobiah, and letters from Tobiah kept arriving for them; for he had many sworn to 18 his interest in Judah, since he was son-in-law to Shecaniah son of Arah, and his son Jehohanan had married the daughter of Meshullam son of Berechiah. They even 19 cried up his good deeds in my presence, and they reported what I said back to him. And Tobiah kept sending letters to terrorise me.

7 Now, when the wall had been rebuilt and I had hung the doors, the gatekeepers 1
(the singers and the Levites) [a] were then appointed. I entrusted the administra- 2 tion of Jerusalem to my brother Hanani, and to Hananiah the commander of the citadel, for he was a more trustworthy, God-fearing man than many others. I said 3 to them, 'The gates of Jerusalem must not be opened until the sun gets hot; and the doors must be shut and barred before it begins to go down. [b] Detail guards from the residents of Jerusalem, each to his post, in front of his own house.'

The repopulation of Jerusalem [c]

The city was large and spacious but the population was small, and the houses had 4 not been rebuilt. [d] My God then inspired me to assemble the nobles, the officials 5 and the people for the purpose of taking a census by families. I discovered the genealogical register of those who had returned in the first group, and there I found entered:

‖Ezr 2:1–70 List of the first exiles to return [e]

These are the people of the province who returned from the captivity of the Exile, 6 those whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had deported, and who returned to Jerusalem and Judah, each to his own town. They were the ones who arrived with 7 Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah.

The number of the men of the people of Israel: sons of Parosh, two thousand 8 one hundred and seventy-two; sons of Shephatiah, three hundred and seventy- 9 two; sons of Arah, six hundred and fifty-two; sons of Pahath-Moab, that is to say 10, 11 sons of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and eighteen; sons of Elam, 12 one thousand two hundred and fifty-four; sons of Zattu, eight hundred and forty- 13 five; sons of Zaccai, seven hundred and sixty; sons of Binnui, six hundred and 14, 15 forty-eight; sons of Bebai, six hundred and twenty-eight; sons of Azgad, two 16, 17 thousand three hundred and twenty-two; sons of Adonikam, six hundred and 18 sixty-seven; sons of Bigvai, two thousand and sixty-seven; sons of Adin, six 19, 20 hundred and fifty-five; sons of Ater, that is to say of Hezekiah, ninety-eight; 21 sons of Hashum, three hundred and twenty-eight; sons of Bezai, three hundred 22, 23 and twenty-four; sons of Hariph, one hundred and twelve; sons of Gibeon, 24, 25 ninety-five; men of Bethlehem and Netophah, one hundred and eighty-eight; 26 men of Anathoth, one hundred and twenty-eight; men of Beth-Azmaveth, 27, 28 forty-two; men of Kiriath-Jearim, Chephirah and Beeroth, seven hundred and 29 forty-three; men of Ramah and Geba, six hundred and twenty-one; men of 30, 31
Michmas, one hundred and twenty-two; men of Bethel and Ai, one hundred and 32 twenty-three; men of the other Nebo, fifty-two; sons of the other Elam, one 33, 34 thousand two hundred and fifty-four; sons of Harim, three hundred and twenty; 35 sons of Jericho, three hundred and forty-five; sons of Lod, Hadid and Ono, seven 36, 37 hundred and twenty-one; sons of Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty. 38

The priests: sons of Jedaiah, of the House of Jeshua, nine hundred and seventy- 39 three; sons of Immer, one thousand and fifty-two; sons of Pashhur, one thousand 40, 41
two hundred and forty-seven; sons of Harim, one thousand and seventeen. 42

The Levites: sons of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, of the sons of Hodiah, seventy-four. 43

44 The singers: sons of Asaph, one hundred and forty-eight.
45 The gatekeepers: sons of Shallum, sons of Ater, sons of Talmon, sons of Akkub, sons of Hatita, sons of Shobai, one hundred and thirty-eight.
46, 47 The temple slaves: sons of Ziha, sons of Hasupha, sons of Tabbaoth, ·sons of 48 Keros, sons of Sia, sons of Padon, ·sons of Lebana, sons of Hagaba, sons of 49, 50 Shalmai, ·sons of Hanan, sons of Giddel, sons of Gahar, ·sons of Reaiah, sons 51 of Rezin, sons of Nekoda, ·sons of Gazzam, sons of Uzza, sons of Paseah, 52, 53 sons of Besai, sons of the Meunites, sons of the Nephusites, ·sons of Bakbuk, 54 sons of Hakupha, sons of Harhur, ·sons of Bazlith, sons of Mehida, sons of Harsha, 55, 56 sons of Barkos, sons of Sisera, sons of Temah, ·sons of Nezaiah, sons of Hatipha.
57 The sons of Solomon's slaves: sons of Sotai, sons of Sophereth, sons of Perida, 58, 59 sons of Jaala, sons of Darkon, sons of Giddel, ·sons of Shephatiah, sons of Hattil, 60 sons of Pochereth-ha-Zebaim, sons of Amon. ·The total of the temple slaves and the sons of Solomon's slaves: three hundred and ninety-two.
61 The following, who came from Tel-Melah, Tel-Harsha, Cherub, Addon and Immer, could not prove that their families and ancestry were of Israelite origin:
62 the sons of Delaiah, the sons of Tobiah, the sons of Nekoda: six hundred and
63 forty-two. ·And among the priests: the sons of Hobaiah, the sons of Hakkoz, the sons of Barzillai—who had married one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite, 64 whose name he adopted. ·These had looked for their entries in the official genealogies but were not to be found there, and were hence disqualified from the 65 priesthood. ·Consequently, His Excellency forbade them to eat any of the consecrated food until a priest appeared who could consult urim and thummim.
66 The whole assembly numbered forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty 67 people, ·not counting their slaves and maidservants to the number of seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven. They also had two hundred and forty-five 68 male and female singers. ·They had four hundred and thirty-five camels and six thousand seven hundred and twenty donkeys.
69 A certain number of heads of families contributed to the work. His Excellency contributed one thousand gold drachmas, fifty bowls, and thirty priestly robes to 70 the fund. ·And heads of families gave twenty thousand gold drachmas and two 71 thousand two hundred silver minas to the work fund. [f] ·The gifts made by the rest of the people amounted to twenty thousand gold drachmas, two thousand silver minas, and sixty-seven priestly robes.
72 The priests, the Levites and some of the people lived in Jerusalem and thereabouts; the singers, the gatekeepers, and the temple slaves in their appropriate towns; and all the other Israelites, in their own towns. [g]

Judaism is born. Ezra reads the Law. The feast of Shelters [h]

Now when the seventh month came round—the Israelites being in their towns— | Ezr 3:1

and asked the scribe Ezra to bring the Book of the Law of Moses which 2 Yahweh had prescribed for Israel. [b] ·Accordingly, on the first day of the seventh

c. The repopulation of Jerusalem by Nehemiah, 7:4–72[a]; 11:1–2,20,25[a], may be compared with the Greek synoikismos, i.e. either the unification of several previously scattered groups, or the centralisation in one city of the civil and religious administration of a whole region.

g. 7:72–8:1 restored in line with parallel Ezr 2:70–3:1.

h. Logically and chronologically, Ne 8 should follow Ezr 8:36, Ezra having arrived from Babylon to promulgate the Law, Ezr 7:25–26. The Chronicler uses Ezra's report at this point.

month,[c] the priest Ezra brought the Law before the assembly, consisting of men, women and all those old enough to understand. ·In the square in front of the Water 3 Gate, in the presence of the men and women, and of those old enough to understand, he read from the book from dawn till noon; all the people listened attentively to the Book of the Law.

The scribe Ezra stood on a wooden dais erected for the purpose; beside him 4 stood, on his right, Mattithiah, Shema, Anaiah, Uriah, Hilkiah and Maaseiah; on his left, Pedaiah, Mishael, Malchijah, Hashum, Hashbaddanah, Zechariah, and Meshullam.[d] ·In full view of all the people—since he stood higher than them all— 5
Ezra opened the book; and when he opened it, all the people stood up. ·Then Ezra 6 blessed Yahweh, the great God, and all the people raised their hands and answered, 'Amen! Amen!'; then they bowed down and, face to the ground, prostrated themselves before Yahweh. ·And Jeshua, Bani, Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, 7 Shabbethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabab, Hanan, Pelaiah, who were Levites,[e] explained the Law to the people, while the people all kept their Ezr 7:6c places. ·Ezra[f] read from the book of the Law of God, translating and giving the 8 sense; so the reading was understood.

Then His Excellency[g] Nehemiah and the priest-scribe Ezra and the Levites who 9 were instructing the people said to all the people, 'Today is sacred to Yahweh your God. Do not be mournful, do not weep.' For the people were all in tears as they listened to the words of the Law.

He then said, 'You may go; eat what is rich, drink what is sweet and send a 10 helping to the man who has nothing prepared. For today is sacred to our Lord. Do not be sad: the joy of Yahweh is your stronghold.' ·And the Levites calmed all the 11 people down, saying, 'Keep quiet; this is a sacred day. Do not be sad.' ·Then all 12 the people went off to eat and drink and give helpings away and enjoy themselves to the full, since they had understood the meaning of what had been proclaimed to them.

On the second day, the heads of families of the whole people, and the priests 13 and Levites, gathered round the scribe Ezra to study the words of the Law. ·And 14
Ex 23:14d written in the Law that Yahweh had prescribed through Moses they found that the Lv 23:33–36, 39–43 Israelites were to live in shelters during the feast of the seventh month.[h] ·So they 15 issued a proclamation and had it circulated in all their towns and in Jerusalem: 'Go into the hills and bring branches of olive, pine, myrtle, palm and other leafy trees to make shelters, as it says in the book.' ·The people went out; they brought 16 branches and made shelters for themselves, each man on his roof, in their courtyards, in the precincts of the Temple of God, in the square of the Water Gate and in the square of the Ephraim Gate. ·The whole assembly, all who had returned 17 from the captivity, put up shelters and lived in them; this the Israelites had not done from the days of Joshua son of Nun till that day[i], and there was very great merrymaking.

Each day, from the first day to the last one, Ezra read from the Book of the Law 18 of God. They celebrated the feast for seven days; on the eighth day, as prescribed, they held a solemn assembly.

The ceremony of expiation[a]

9 On the twenty-fourth day of this month the Israelites, in sackcloth and with 1 dust on their heads, assembled for a fast.[b] ·Then those of Israelite stock who 2 Ezr 9:1–2,1a; 10:11 had severed relations with all foreigners stood up and confessed their sins and the iniquities of their ancestors. ·Standing, each man in his place, they read from the 3
Book of the Law of Yahweh their God for one quarter of the day; for another quarter they confessed their sins and worshipped Yahweh their God.[c] ·On the 4
Levites' platform stood Jeshua, Binnui,[d] Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani and Chenani, calling to Yahweh their God in ringing tones. ·The Levites, 5
Jeshua, Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabneiah, Sherebiah, Hodiah, Shebaniah and Pethahiah said, 'Stand up and bless Yahweh your God!

'Blessed are you, Yahweh our God
from everlasting to everlasting,
and blessed be your glorious name,

g. 1 Esd. omits 'Nehemiah'; Gk omits 'His Excellency'; these are additions.

h. Lv 23:33–36,39–43 also puts the feast of Shelters in the 7th month; the feast lasts 8 days. But in Lv 23:40 the branches are used in the procession, whereas in Ne 8:15 they are for building shelters. According to Lv 23:34,39; Nb 29:12–38, the feast begins on the 15th of the 7th month, but Lv 23:27 states that it starts on the 10th day of Expiation, Lv 16, which must have been celebrated (being on the 10th of the 7th month Lv 23:27) between the reading of the Law by Ezra and the feast of Shelters.

i. see 2 K 23:22; 2 Ch 35:18, where somewhat similar claims are made for a particularly well-attended festival. The shelters themselves were no innovation, see Dt 16:13 and it is not clear what distinction the writer is trying to make.

d. 'Binnui' conj., see 10:10; 12:8, 24; 'Bani' Hebr.

e. The Chronicler represents the Levites as addressing a liturgical invitation to the people and reciting the psalm given here, probably taken from the liturgy of his own times. The psalm is full of biblical reminiscences, see also Si 36:1–17. The first line has been reconstructed by conjecture.

Dt 4:5–8 you gave them right rules, reliable laws,

You gave them your good spirit to instruct them, 20
you did not withhold your manna from their mouths,
you gave them water for their thirst.

so that they went short of nothing,
Dt 8:4 their clothes did not wear out,
nor were their feet swollen.

Nb 21:21–35 Dt 1:4; 2:26–3:11 'You gave them kingdoms and peoples, 22
allotting them these as frontier lands;
they occupied the country of Sihon king of Heshbon,[h]
and the country of Og king of Bashan.
Dt 1:10 You gave them as many children 23
as there are stars in the sky,
and brought them into the country which you had promised their ancestors that they would enter and possess.
The children entered 24
and took possession of the country and before them you subdued
the country's inhabitants, the Canaanites, whom you put at their mercy,
with their kings and the peoples of the country,
for them to treat as they pleased:

25 they captured fortified towns — Dt 3:5; 6:10–11
and a fertile countryside,
they took possession of houses stocked with all kinds of goods,
of storage-wells ready-hewn, of vineyards, olive groves
and fruit trees in profusion;
so they ate, were full, grew fat — Dt 32:15
and revelled in your great goodness.

26 'But they grew disobedient, rebelled against you and thrust your law behind their backs;
they slaughtered your prophets who had reproved them
to bring them back to you,
and committed monstrous impieties. — Ws 2:10–20 27 So you put them at the mercy of their enemies
who oppressed them.
But when they were being oppressed and called to you,
you heard them from heaven
and because of your great compassion you gave them deliverers
who rescued them from their oppressors' clutches.
28 But once at peace again,
again they did what was wrong before you;
so you put them at the mercy of their enemies
who then became their rulers.
When they called to you again,
you heard them from heaven
and, because of your compassion, rescued them many times.
29 You warned them, to bring them back to your law,
but they became arrogant,
did not obey your commandments
and sinned against your rules,
in whose observance is life;
they turned a stubborn shoulder,
were obstinate, and disobeyed.
30 You were patient with them for many years and warned them by your spirit
through your prophets,
but they would not listen; — Ac 7:51p
so you put them at the mercy of the people of the country.
31 But, because of your great compassion, you did not destroy them completely
nor abandon them,
for you are a gracious, compassionate God.
32 Now, our God—the great God, the Mighty and Awe-inspiring One, — Lm 5; Si 36:1–9 maintaining the covenant and your faithful love—count as no small thing this misery which has befallen us, our kings, our princes, our priests, our prophets, [i] and all your people from the times of the Assyrian kings to the present day.

f. One or other of these words has been added on the basis of v. 13; the line is hypermetrical.
g. 'in Egypt' Gk, some Hebr. MSS; 'in their rebellion' Hebr.
h. Before 'king of Heshbon', Hebr. repeats 'the country of', dittography.
i. Hebr. adds 'our ancestors'.

You have been upright 33
in all that has happened to us,
for you acted faithfully,
while we did wrong.
Our kings, our princes, our priests 34
and our ancestors did not keep your law or pay attention to your commandments and obligations which you imposed upon them.
Even in their own kingdom, 35
despite your great goodness
which you bestowed on them,
despite the wide and fertile country which you had lavished on them, they did not serve you
or renounce their evil deeds.
See, we are slaves today, 36 slaves in the country which you gave to our ancestors for them to eat the good things it produces.
Its abundant produce goes to the kings 37
whom, for our sins, you have set over us, who rule over our persons
and over our cattle as they please.
We are in great distress.'

A record of the promises made by the community [a]

10 In view of all this we make a firm agreement, in writing. Our princes, our 1 38 Levites, our priests and the rest of the people have put their names to the document under seal. [b]

On the sealed document were the names of: Nehemiah, son of Hacaliah, and 2 10:1
12:12–26 Zedekiah; [c] ·Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah, ·Pashhur, Amariah, Malchijah, 3 2, 4 3
Hattush, Shebaniah, Malluch, ·Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, ·Daniel, Ginnethon, 5 4, 6 5, 7 6 Baruch, ·Meshullam, Abijah, Mijamin, ·Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah: these were [l] 8 7, 9 8
the priests.

The Levites were: Jeshua son of Azaniah, Binnui of the sons of Henadad, 10 9
Kadmiel, ·and their kinsmen Shebaniah, Hodaviah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, ·Mica, 11 10, 12 11
Rehob, Hashabiah, ·Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah, ·Hodiah, Bani, Chenani. 13 12, 14 13

The leaders of the people were: Parosh, Pahath-Moab, Elam, Zattu, Bani, 15 14
Bunni, Azgad, Bebai, ·Adonijah, Bigvai, Adin, ·Ater, Hezekiah, Azzur, 16 15, 17 16, 18 17
Hodiah, Hashum, Bezai, ·Hariph, Anathoth, Nebai, ·Magpiash, Meshullam, 19 18, 20 19, 21 20
Hezir, ·Meshezabel, Zadok, Jaddua, ·Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah, ·Hoshea, Han- 22 21, 23 22, 24 23
aniah, Hasshub, ·Hallohesh, Pilha, Shobek, ·Rehum, Hashabnah, Maaseiah, 25 24, 26 25
Ahijah, Hanan, Anan, ·Malluch, Harim, Baanah. 27 26, 28 27

And the rest of the people, the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, 29 28
the temple slaves and all those who had severed relations with the people of the country to adhere to the law of God, as also their wives, their sons, their daughters, that is, all those who had reached the age of discretion, ·have joined their esteemed 30 29 brothers in a solemn oath to follow the law of God given through Moses, servant of God, and to observe and practise all the commandments of Yahweh our Lord, with his rules and his statutes.

13:23–27 We will not give our daughters in marriage to the peoples of the country, nor 31 30 allow their daughters to marry our sons. [d]

If the people of the country bring goods or foodstuff of any kind to sell on the 32 31
13:15–22 Ex 20:8f Sabbath day, we will buy nothing from them on Sabbath or holy day.
5:1–13,11e Lv 25:1a In the seventh year, we will forgo the produce of the soil [e] and the exaction of all debts.

We recognise the following obligations: 33 32

to give one-third of a shekel yearly for the service of the Temple of our God: Ex 30:11seq. 2 Ch 24:6,9 33 34 for the loaves of permanent offering, for the perpetual oblation, for the perpetual Lv 24:5–9 burnt offering, for the sacrifices on Sabbaths, on New Moons and on festivals, for Nb 28:3–8
the consecrated gifts, the sin offerings to expiate for Israel, in short, for the whole work of the Temple of our God;[f]

35 36 [g]and further, to bring yearly to the Temple of our God the first-fruits of our soil 13:31
36 37 and the first-fruits of all our orchards, ·also the first-born of our sons and of our Gn 22:1a cattle, as the law prescribes, the first-born of our herds and flocks should be taken Dt 26:1a to the Temple of our God for the priests officiating in the Temple of our God. Ex 13:11b

37 38 Furthermore, we shall bring the best of our dough,[h] of every kind of fruit, of the 13:10–14 new wine and of the oil to the priests, to the storerooms of the Temple of our God, and the tithe on our soil to the Levites—the Levites will themselves collect Nb 38 39 the tithes from all the towns of our religion. ·An Aaronite priest will accompany 18:21,24 seq.
the Levites when they collect the tithes, and the Levites will bring a tenth part Dt 14:22d 40a. b 39a. b of the tithes to the Temple of our God, into the treasury storerooms; ·for these Nb 18:26 rooms are where the Israelites and the Levites are to bring the contributions of corn, wine and oil, and where the vessels of the sanctuary are, and the officiating priests, the gatekeepers and the singers.

34 35 Furthermore, as regards deliveries of wood for burning on the altar of our God 13:31 as the law prescribes, we have arranged, by drawing lots, how these deliveries are to be made at the Temple of our God by the priests, the Levites and the people by families, at stated times every year.

40c 39c We will no longer neglect the Temple of our God.

Nehemiah's method of repopulating Jerusalem[a] 7:4c

1 11 Now the leaders of the people took up residence in Jerusalem; so the rest of the people drew lots: one man in ten was to come and live in Jerusalem, 2 the holy city,[b] while the other nine were to stay in the towns outside. ·The people praised all those who volunteered to live in Jerusalem.

3 In the towns of Judah each man lived on his own property, but these are the provincial leaders, the Israelites, the priests, the Levites, the temple slaves and the ‖1 Ch 9:2
descendants of Solomon's slaves, who made their homes in Jerusalem:

The Jewish population at Jerusalem[c] ‖1 Ch 9:4–17

4 Of the sons of Judah and the sons of Benjamin who made their homes in Jerusalem
there were:

Of the sons of Judah: Athaiah son of Uzziah, son of Zechariah, son of Amariah, 5 son of Shephatiah, son of Mehalalel, of the descendants of Perez; ·and Maaseiah son of Baruch, son of Col-Hozeh, son of Hazaiah, son of Adaiah, son of Joiarib,

10 a. After the reading of the Law and the penitential ceremony, ch. 8–9, the author gives a document which comes neither from Ezra's report nor from Nehemiah's Memoir, but which must have been taken from the Temple archives and modified; vv. 31–39 have close links with 13:10–31. The list of vv. 2–28 is a later insertion, see note c.

b. The document continues in v. 29.

c. This supposed list of signatories, vv. 2–28, is an artificial composition: in vv. 3–9 the lists of 12:1–6,12–18 are used, and family names given where one would expect individual names; vv.10–14 are a selection of levitical names almost all of which occur elsewhere; the names of laymen, vv. 15–21, come from the list of Ezr 2 = Ne 7. The new names in vv. 12–14 and 22–28 must be those of contemporaries of the author of the list, who is later than Nehemiah. Some names have been corrected in accordance with the versions.

d. A commitment for the future; it is no longer a question, as in Ezr 9–10, of breaking off existing marriages. Was this matter already settled? See Ezr 10:44.

e. 'the produce of the soil' conj. following Ex 23:10; Hebr. omits.

f. v. 35 is to be read after v. 40[ab].

g. vv. 36–40 have been retouched, in v. 37 and especially 38[b]–39 which harmonise the practice of the levitical tithe with the more recent text of Nb 18:21,24seq. Adjustments of this kind are usual in texts with the force of law.

h. Hebr. adds 'and our contributions'; Gk omits.

11 a. Ch. 11 has two different literary layers: vv. 1–2,20,25[a], 36 are a composition of the Chronicler on the basis of 7:1–5[a] (Memoirs of Nehemiah); an editor has inserted the lists of vv. 4–19 and 25[b]–35, which he found among the documents of the archives. He has introduced them by a heading, v. 4, and added (either himself or someone else) the notes of vv. 21–24.

b. The name is given to Jerusalem in Is 48:2; 52:1; see Ne 11:18; Tb 13:9; Dn 9:24; Mt 4:5; 27:53; Rv 11:2. But the notion itself is older, see 2 S 5:9f.

c. This list on which 1 Ch 9:1–18 depends, appears to give the state of the population of Jerusalem a generation or more after Nehemiah.

son of Zechariah, descendant of Shelah. [d] •The total number of the descendants of 6
Perez living in Jerusalem was four hundred and sixty-eight outstanding people.
These are the sons of Benjamin: Sallu son of Meshullam, son of Joed, son of 7
Pedaiah, son of Kolaiah, son of Maaseiah, son of Ithiel, son of Jeshaiah, •and his 8 brothers [e] Gabbai and Sallai; nine hundred and twenty-eight.
Joel son of Zichri was their chief, and Judah son of Hassenuah was second in 9 command of the city.
Of the priests there were Jedaiah son of [f] Joiakim, son of •Seraiah, son of 10, 11 Hilkiah, son of Meshullam, son of Zadok, son of Meraioth, son of Ahitub, the chief of the Temple of God, [g] •and their kinsmen who performed the Temple 12 liturgy: eight hundred and twenty-two; Adaiah son of Jeroham, son of Pelaliah, son of Amzi, son of Zechariah, son of Pashhur, son of Malchijah, •and his kinsfolk, 13 heads of families: two hundred and forty-two; and Amashai son of Azarel, son of Ahzai, son of Meshillemoth, son of Immer, •and his kinsfolk, outstanding people: 14 one hundred and twenty-eight.
Their chief was Zabdiel son of Haggadol.
Of the Levites there were Shemaiah son of Hasshub, son of Azrikam, son of 15
Hashabiah, son of Bunni; •Shabbethai and Jozabad, the levitical leaders respon- 16
sible for work outside the Temple of God; •Mattaniah son of Mica, son of Zabdi, 17 son of Asaph, [h] who led the praises [i] and intoned the thanksgiving associated with the prayer, Bakbukiah being his junior colleague; and Obadiah son of Shammua, son of Galal, son of Jeduthun. •The total number of Levites in the holy city was 18 two hundred and eighty-four.

Supplementary notes

The gatekeepers: Akkub, Talmon and their kinsmen, who kept watch at the gates: 19
one hundred and seventy-two. [j]
The temple slaves [k] lived on Ophel; Ziha and Gishpa were in charge of the 21 temple slaves. •The official in charge of the Levites in Jerusalem was Uzzi son of 22 Bani, son of Hashabiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Mica, of the sons of Asaph, who led the singing in the liturgy of the Temple of God; •for the singers were under 23 royal orders, with regulations laying down what was required of them day by day.
Petahiah son of Meshezabel, of the sons of Zerah son of Judah, was the king's 24 sinister for all matters connected with the people.

The Jewish population outside Jerusalem [l]

The rest of Israel, including the priests and Levites, made their homes throughout 20 the towns of Judah, each man on his own inheritance, •and in the villages near 25 their lands. Some of the sons of Judah made their homes in Kiriath-Arba and its dependencies, Dibon and its dependencies, Jekabzeel and its dependencies, Jeshua, Moladah, Beth-Pelet, •Hazar-Shual, Beersheba and its dependencies, 26, 27
Ziklag, Meconah and its dependencies, •En-Rimmon, Zorah, Jarmuth, 28, 29
Zanoah, Adullam and their villages, Lachish and its lands, and Azekah and its 30 dependencies; thus, they settled from Beersheba as far as the Valley of Hinnom.
And some Benjaminites made their homes in Geba, [m] Michmash, Aija, Bethel 31 and its dependencies, •Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, •Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim, 32, 33
Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat, •Lod, Ono and the Valley of Craftsmen. 34, 35
Some levitical groups lived in Judah, some in Benjamin. [n] 36

Priests and Levites who returned under Zerubbabel and Jeshua

12 These are the priests and the Levites who came back with Zerubbabel son 1 of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: [a] Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, •Amariah, Malluch, Hattush, Shecaniah, Rehum, 2, 3 Meremoth, •Iddo, Ginnethoi, Abijah, •Mijamin, Maadiah, Bilgah, •Shemaiah, 4, 5, 6 and Joiarib, Jedaiah, •Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah—these were the heads of the 7 priests and their kinsmen in the days of Jeshua.

8 The Levites were Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, Mattaniah—this 9 last, with his brothers, was in charge of the songs of praise, ·while Bakbukiah and Unno, their colleagues, formed the alternate choir to theirs.

Genealogical list of high priests [b]

10 Jeshua fathered Joiakim, Joiakim fathered Eliashib, Eliashib fathered Joiada, 11 Joiada fathered Johanan, and Johanan fathered Jaddua.

Priests and Levites in the time of the High Priest Joiakim [c] 10:3–14;12:1a

12 In the days of Joiakim the heads of the priestly families were: family of Seraiah, 13 Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah; ·of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan;
14, 15 of Malluch, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph; ·of Harim, Adna; of Meremoth, 16, 17 Helkai; ·of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam; ·of Abijah, Zichri; of 18 Minjamin, . . .; of Moadiah, Piltai; ·of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehona-19, 20 than; ·and of Jojarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi; ·of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, 21 Eber; ·of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethanel.
22 In the time of Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan and Jaddua, the heads of the families of priests [d] were registered in the Book of Chronicles, [e] up to the reign of Darius the Persian. [f]
23 The Levites who were heads of families were registered in the Book of the Chronicles up to the time of Johanan, grandson of Eliashib.
24 The heads of the Levites were Hashabiah, Sherebiah, Jeshua, Binnui, [g] Kadmiel, Ezr 2:40 while their brothers who formed an alternate choir for the hymns of praise and thanksgiving, as David, man of God, had prescribed, section corresponding to 25 section, ·were Mattaniah, Bakbukiah and Obadiah. Meshullam, Talmon and 11:17
Akkub were the gatekeepers guarding the stores at the gates. [h]
26 These lived in the days of Joiakim son of Jeshua, son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor and of Ezra the priest-scribe. [i]

The dedication of the wall of Jerusalem [j]

27 At the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem the Levites were sent for, wherever they lived, to come to Jerusalem and joyfully perform the dedication with hymns of thanksgiving and songs to the accompaniment of cymbals, lyres and harps.
28 Accordingly, the levitical singers [k] assembled from the district round Jerusalem, 29 from the villages of the Netophathites, ·from Beth-Gilgal and from their farms at

i. The Chronicler represents these three as contemporaries.
j. Historically, the ceremony took place after 6:16, but the Chronicler makes it match Ezr 6:15–18 (dedication of the Temple). Thus two dedications conclude two epochs, one dominated by the figure of Zerubbabel, the other—as the Chronicler sees it—by Ezra and Nehemiah. One may reconstruct the ceremony thus: after the customary purifications two processions make their way along the top of the wall from the Valley Gate, one going south, the other north. They meet at the Temple for the closing ceremony of the feast. Each half of the procession is headed by a choir of priests who are followed by distinguished laymen. The Chronicler has interrupted the narrative with a list of priests of the first (vv. 33–36) and of the second (vv. 40–42) choirs. He has also made Ezra figure in the procession.
k. 'levitical' Gk MS; 'priestly' Hebr.

Geba and Azmaveth—for the singers had built themselves villages all round Jerusalem. ·When the priests and Levites had purified themselves, they then 30 purified the people, the gates and the wall.

I then made the leaders of Judah come on to the top of the wall and appointed 31 two large choirs. One made its way [f] along the top of the wall, to the right, towards the Dung Gate; ·bringing up the rear were Hoshaiah and half the leaders of 32
Judah, ·and also Azariah, Ezra, Meshullam, ·Judah, Benjamin, Shemaiah and 33, 34
Jeremiah, ·of the priests, with trumpets; then Zechariah son of Jonathan, son of 35
Shemaiah, son of Mattaniah, son of Micaiah, son of Zaccur, son of Asaph, ·with 36
his kinsmen, Shemaiah, Azarel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethanel, Juda, Hanani, 1 Ch 23:5 Am 6:5 with the musical instruments of David, man of God. The scribe Ezra walked at their head. ·At the Fountain Gate they went straight on up the steps of the City of 37
David, along the top of the rampart by the stairway of the wall, above the Palace [m] of David as far as the Water Gate, on the east.

The other choir made its way to the left; I and half the leaders of [n] the people 38 followed them along the top of the wall from the Tower of the Furnaces to the Broad Wall, ·from the Ephraim [o] Gate, the Fish Gate, the Tower of Hananel and 39 the Tower of the Hundred as far as the Sheep Gate, and they came to a halt at the Prison Gate.

The two choirs then took their places in the Temple of God. But I had half the 40 magistrates with me ·as well as the priests, Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Micaiah, 41
Elioenai, Zechariah, Hananiah with the trumpets, ·and Maaseiah, Shemaiah, 42
Eleazar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Malchijah, Elam and Ezer. The singers sang loudly under the direction of Jezrahiah. ·There were great sacrifices offered that day and 43
the people rejoiced, God having given them good cause for rejoicing;
the women and children rejoiced too, and the joy of Jerusalem could be heard from far away.

A golden age [p]

For the rooms intended for the treasures, contributions, first-fruits and tithes, 44 13:10seq. supervisors were then appointed whose business it was to collect in them those portions from the town lands [q] awarded by the Law to the priests and Levites. For Judah rejoiced in the officiating priests and Levites, ·since they—with the singers 45
1 Ch 23–25 2 Ch 8:14 and gatekeepers—performed the liturgy of their God and the rites of purification as ordained by David and his son Solomon. ·For from ancient times, from the days 46 2 Ch 29:30; 35:15 of David and Asaph, they had been the leaders in rendering hymns of praise and thanksgiving to God. ·In the days of Zerubbabel and Nehemiah, all Israel supplied 47 13:10seq. 10:39 Nb 18:26 regular daily portions for the singers and gatekeepers, and gave the dedicated contributions to the Levites; and the Levites gave the dedicated contributions to the Aaronites.

13 At that time they were reading to the people from the Book of Moses, when 1 Dt 23:4–6 they found this written in it, 'No Ammonite or Moabite is to be admitted to the assembly of God, and this is for all time, ·since they did not come to meet the 2 Israelites with bread and water, and even hired Balaam to oppose them by cursing them [r]; but our God turned the curse into a blessing.' ·Having heard the Law, they 3 13:4–9, 23–27.28 excluded all foreigners from Israel. [b]

10 ### The second mission of Nehemiah

Earlier, [c] Eliashib the priest, [d] who was in charge of the rooms [e] of the Temple of 4 12:44 our God, and who was close to Tobiah, ·had provided him with a large room where 5 they previously used to store the meal offerings, incense, utensils, tithes of corn, wine and oil, that is, the part [f] of the Levites, singers and gatekeepers, and the contributions for the priests. ·While all this was going on I was away from Jerusa- 6 lem, for in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon [g] I had gone to see the king. But after some time I asked the king for permission to leave, ·and 7 returned to Jerusalem, where I learned about the crime which Eliashib had committed for Tobiah's benefit, by providing him with a room in the courts of the Mt 21:12–13 par.

8 Temple of God. 9 I was extremely displeased and threw all Tobiah's household Jn 2:13–17 goods out of the room and into the street. 9 I then gave orders for the room to be purified, and had the utensils of the Temple of God, the meal offerings and the incense, all replaced.

10 I also learned that the Levites had not been receiving their allocations, as a result 12:44,47 of which the Levites and singers who performed the liturgy had all withdrawn to 11 their farms. 11 I then reprimanded the officials. 'Why is the Temple of God deserted?' I asked. And I collected them [h] together again and brought them back to 12 their posts; 12 and all Judah then delivered the tithe of corn, wine and oil to the 13 storehouses. 13 As supervisors of the storehouses I appointed [i] Shelemiah the priest, 10:38seq.
Zadok the scribe, Pedaiah one of the Levites and, as their assistant, Hanan son of Zaccur, son of Mattaniah, since they were considered reliable people; their duty was to make the distributions to their kinsmen.

14 Remember me for this, my God, and do not blot out the good deeds which I have done for the Temple of my God and its observances!

15 At the same time I saw people in Judah treading the winepress, bringing in sacks of grain and loading donkeys on the Sabbath; they were also bringing wine, grapes, 10:32 Ex 20:8f figs and every kind of merchandise into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. So I forbade Jr 17:21 16 them to sell the food. [j] 16 Tyrians living there were bringing in fish and every kind of merchandise which they were selling to the Judaeans on the Sabbath in Jerusalem 17 itself. 17 So I also reprimanded the leading men of Judah, saying to them, 'What a 18 wicked way to behave, profaning the Sabbath day! 18 Was this not exactly what your ancestors did, with the result that our God brought all this misery down on us and on this city? And now you are adding to the wrath hanging over Israel by profaning 19 the Sabbath yourselves!' 19 So when the gates of Jerusalem were getting dark at the approach of the Sabbath, [k] I gave orders for the doors to be shut and directed that they were not to be opened again until the Sabbath was over. I stationed some of my attendants at the gates to make sure that no merchandise was brought in on the 20 Sabbath day. 20 So the traders and dealers in goods of all kinds spent the night 21 outside Jerusalem once or twice, 21 until I reprimanded them. I said to them, 'Why are you spending the night in front of the wall? Do it again, and I shall use force on 22 you.' After this, they did not come on the Sabbath. 22 I then ordered the Levites to purify themselves and act as guards at the gates, so that the Sabbath day might be kept holy.

Remember this also to my credit, have pity on me in the greatness of your faithful love.

23 At that time too, I saw Jews who had married wives from Ashdod, Ammon and 10:31; 13:1–3,3b 24 Moab; 24 as regards their children, half of them spoke the language of Ashdod [l] or the language of one of the other peoples, but could no longer speak the language

INTRODUCTION TO
TOBIT, JUDITH AND ESTHER

§1 In the Vulgate, the three Books of Tobit, Judith and Esther are placed after the historical books. Some important manuscripts of the Greek version put them after the wisdom writings. Together they constitute a small literary group with several distinctive characteristics of its own.

1 Their text is difficult to determine. Behind Tobit is a semitic original which is no longer extant. Fragments of one Hebrew manuscript and four Aramaic manuscripts of Tobit have been discovered in a cave at Qumran. The Greek, Syriac and Latin versions between them represent four different recensions of the text, of which the two most important are, first, that of the Vaticanus (B) and Alexandrinus (A) codices and, second, that of Codex Sinaiticus (S) and the Old Latin (Vet. Lat.). This last recension, now supported by the Qumran fragments, seems to be the most ancient, and forms the basis for the present translation, due attention being paid to the other witnesses.

The Hebrew original of Judith is also lost. It is unlikely that it was represented in any of the Hebrew texts in circulation during the Middle Ages. The Greek texts take three widely divergent forms. The Vulgate presents yet another, very different, text; apparently Jerome merely revised an existing Latin translation with the help of an Aramaic paraphrase.

The Book of Esther has two forms: one short, in Hebrew; one long, in Greek. Of the Greek text there are two principal types; that of the current Greek Bible and that of the widely variant recension of Lucian of Antioch. The Greek version contains the following passages not found in the Hebrew: the dream of Mordecai, 1:1[a-r] and its explanation, 10:3[a-k]; two edicts of Ahasuerus, 3:13[a-g] and 8:12[a-v], the prayer of Mordecai, 4:17[a-i] the prayer of Esther, 4:17[k-z] a second account of Esther's appeal to Ahasuerus, 5:1[a-f] and 5:2[a-b]; an appendix explaining the origin of the Greek version, 10:3[l]. Jerome placed his translation of these passages after the translated Hebrew text (Vulg. 10:4–16:24); in our own translation they have been left where the Greek text has them, but in italics and with their own system of references.

2 All three books were admitted to the Canon at a late date. Tobit and Judith were not accepted by the Hebrew Bible, and in the Protestant Churches are numbered among the Apocrypha. They are 'deuterocanonical', that is to say, recognised by the Church only after a certain hesitancy in the patristic period. But they have been read and quoted from early days and appear in the official canonical lists in the West from the time of the Roman Synod of 382 and, in the East, from 692 (the 'in Trullo' Council of Constantinople). The Greek passages of Esther also are deuterocanonical, their history being the same as that of Tobit and Judith. The status of the Hebrew Esther was still being discussed by the rabbis in the first century AD, but the book has subsequently become very popular with Jews.

3 The books all belong to the same type of literature. These stories treat history and geography with a good deal of freedom. According to the Book of Tobit, Tobit was a young man when the kingdom was divided at the death of Solomon (931), Tb 1:4; he was deported with the tribe of Naphtali (734), Tb 1:5, 10; his son did not die until after the fall of Nineveh (612), Tb 14:5. The same book makes Sennacherib the immediate successor of Shalmaneser, Tb 1:15, saying nothing of the reign of Sargon. Similarly, Rhages is said to be in the hill country, only two days' journey from Ecbatana in the plain, Tb 5:6; in fact the altitude of Ecbatana (over 6000 feet) was much greater than that of Rhages which, moreover, was nearly two hundred miles away. The Book of Esther is somewhat closer to history: the city of Susa is correctly described and certain Persian customs are accurately observed; Ahasuerus (Hebrew transcription of Xerxes) is a well-known historical figure and the delineation of his character agrees with what Herodotus says of him. On the other hand, it is strange that one of the tolerant Achmenid dynasty should agree to sign the order for a Jewish pogrom, and still stranger that he should authorise a massacre of his own subjects and that those 75,000 Persians should offer no resistance. Moreover, at the time indicated by the narrative, the queen of Persia and consort of Xerxes was Amestris; history leaves no room for either Vashti or Esther. And if Mordecai was indeed deported under Nebuchadnezzar, Est 2:6, he would have been one hundred and fifty years old by the reign of Xerxes.

§2 The Book of Judith in particular shows a bland indifference to history and geography. The scene is set in the time of 'Nebuchadnezzar who reigned over the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh', Jdt 1:1, but Nebuchadnezzar was king of Babylonia and Nineveh had been destroyed by Nabopolassar, his father. Despite this, the return from exile under Cyrus is regarded as having taken place already, Jdt 4:3; 5:19. And whereas Holofernes and Bagoas have Persian names, there are also obvious allusions to Greek customs, 3:7–8; 15:13. We may add that the itinerary of the army of Holofernes, 2:21–28, is a geographical impossibility. Even when Holofernes reaches Samaria where we are on more familiar ground, the place-names, though increasing in number, are largely unknown and have an unusual ring. Bethulia itself, the town round which the drama revolves, defies identification despite the apparent concern for details that should help us to locate it.

The only explanation of this surprising indifference is that the authors are not trying to write history. No doubt they build on actual events but we have no means of knowing what these were, since the superstructure conceals them. But it is precisely this superstructure that is the real work of the author and conveys his message. The important thing is to discover the exact purpose of each book and to extract the teaching contained in it.

§3 The Book of Tobit is a domestic story. At Nineveh there lives a man named Tobit, exiled with his tribe of Naphtali, devout, law-abiding, charitable, and now blind. In Ecbatana lives his kinsman Raguel; this man's daughter Sarah has lost seven bridegrooms in succession, killed on the wedding night by the demon Asmodeus. Both Tobit and Sarah beg God to let them die, but God answers their prayers in his own way. He sends his angel Raphael who brings Tobit's son, Tobias, safely to Raguel, marries him to Sarah and gives him a cure for his father's blindness. It is an edifying story, in which the emphasis falls on almsgiving and duties towards the dead; true family life is shown at its best; the ideal of marriage anticipates Christian teaching. The divine benevolence is at once revealed and hidden in the angel Raphael, the agent of God. That this providence is with us, day by day, is the lesson of the book.

Tobias is modelled on biblical narratives, especially on those of the patriarchs in Genesis; as a work of literature its place is between Job and Esther, between Zechariah and Daniel. There are points of contact with the Wisdom of Ahikar (see Tb 1:22; 2:10; 11:18; 14:10), an apocryphal work which, basically, goes back at least to the fifth century BC. The Book of Tobit seems to have been written about 200 BC, possibly in Palestine and probably in Aramaic.

§4 The Book of Judith is the story of a victory won by the chosen people over its enemies, thanks to the intervention of a woman. The tiny Jewish nation faces the mighty army of Holofernes whose ambition is to lay the whole world at the feet of Nebuchadnezzar and to destroy all other religions but that of the deified Nebuchadnezzar. The Jews are besieged in Bethulia; the water supply has failed and they are on the point of surrender. At this stage Judith appears, a beautiful young widow, intelligent, devout, resolute; she overcomes first the cowardice of her own people and finally the Assyrian army itself. She rebukes the leading men of the city for their lack of faith in God; she then falls to prayer and, having duly adorned herself, leaves Bethulia and is led into the presence of Holofernes, on whom she exercises all her charm and wit. Once left alone with this drunken braggart, she cuts off his head. The Assyrians, panic-stricken, take to their heels and the Jews sack their camp. The people sing the praises of Judith and go to Jerusalem for a solemn thanksgiving.

The author seems deliberately to have defied history to distract the reader's attention from the historical context and focus it exclusively on the religious conflict and outcome. The narrative is neatly put together and has a close affinity with apocalyptic writings. Holofernes, the henchman of Nebuchadnezzar, is the incarnation of the powers of evil. Judith (her name means 'the Jewess') represents the cause of God, that is to say, of Jewry. This cause is apparently forlorn, but God makes use of the weak hands of a woman to procure his triumph, and his chosen people go in triumph to Jerusalem. This book has clear points of contact with Daniel, Ezekiel and Joel; the action takes place on the plain of Esdraelon near the plain of Armageddon, where the great eschatological battle of Revelation, Rv 16:16, also takes place. Judith's triumph is the reward of prayer and exact observance of the rules of legal purity; yet the horizon of the book is not narrowly nationalistic: the safety of Jerusalem is assured at Bethulia, in that very Samaria so hated by all 'rightminded' Jews, and the religious significance of the struggle is expressed by Achior, who is an Ammonite, Jdt 5:5–21, and is later converted to the true God, Jdt 14:5–10. The Book was written in Palestine towards the middle of the second century BC, in the atmosphere of nationalistic and religious fervour generated by the Maccabaean Revolt.

§5 The Book of Esther, like that of Judith, tells of the deliverance of the nation by the actions of a woman. The Jews settled in Persia are threatened with extermination by Haman, a hostile and all-powerful vizir, and are saved by Esther, a young Jewess who has become queen, and who acts on the advice of her cousin, Mordecai. There is a complete reversal of situation: Haman is hanged, Mordecai assumes his position, the Jews massacre their enemies. To commemorate this triumph the feast of Purim is instituted and the Jews are instructed to celebrate it every year.

This story illustrates the hatred which the Jews experienced in ancient times, as a result of their unique way of life which brought them into conflict with their autocratic rulers (compare the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes). Their exaggerated nationalism was no more than a defensive reaction. The blood-thirstiness of the book shocks us, but we should remember that it pre-dates the Christian revelation. We must also remember literary conventions: the harem intrigues and the massacres serve to dramatise a thesis; the thesis is a religious one. The promotion of Mordecai and Esther and the rescue resulting from it recall the story of Daniel, and more particularly that of Joseph, first oppressed and later elevated for the saving of his people. In the Genesis story of Joseph, God makes no outward manifestation of his power, yet directs events. In the Hebrew book of Esther, similarly, though God's name is not mentioned, his providence governs every factor in the drama. The actors know it, and trust implictly in God to work out his saving plan even if his chosen human instruments falter, see Est 4:13–17, which gives the key to the book. The Greek additions are more religious in tone (they provide all the passages from Esther found in the liturgy) but they only state explicitly what the Hebrew author left to his reader's intelligence.

The Greek version was in existence in 114 (or 78) BC when it was sent to Egypt to authenticate the feast of Purim, Est 10:3[l] and note. The Hebrew text is earlier; in 160 BC according to 2 M 15:36, the Palestinian Jews were celebrating a 'Day of Mordecai', which presupposes that the story, and probably the book, of Esther were well known. The book was probably composed in the second quarter of the second century BC. That it was connected with the feast of Purim originally is doubtful: Est 9:20–32 is written in a different style and reads like an addition. The origin of the feast itself is obscure, and it is possible that the book came to be connected with it later (2 M 15:36 does not use the term 'Purim' but 'Day of Mordecai') to give it an historical basis.

TOBIT[a]

1 1 The tale of Tobit[b] son of Tobiel, son of Ananiel, son of Aduel, son of
2 Gabael, of the lineage of Asiel and tribe of Naphtali. ·In the days of Shalmaneser[c] king of Assyria, he was exiled from Thisbe, which is south of Kedesh-Naphtali in Upper Galilee, above Hazor, some distance to the west, north of Shephat.

I: TOBIT THE EXILE

3 I, Tobit, have walked in paths of truth and in good works all the days of my life.[d] I
4 have given much in alms to my brothers and fellow country-folk, exiled like me to Nineveh in the country of Assyria. ·In my young days, when I was still at home in the land of Israel, the whole tribe of Naphtali my ancestor broke away from the House of David and from Jerusalem, though this was the city chosen out of all the tribes of Israel for their sacrifices; here, the Temple—God's dwelling-place—had
5 been built and hallowed for all generations to come. ·All my brothers and the House of Naphtali sacrificed on every hill-top in Galilee to the calf that Jeroboam king of Israel had made at Dan. 1 K 12:26–32

6 Often I was quite alone in making the pilgrimage to Jerusalem, fulfilling the Law that binds all Israel perpetually. I would hurry to Jerusalem with the first yield of Dt 16:16
7 fruits and beasts, the tithe of cattle and the sheep's first shearings. ·I would give these to the priests, the sons of Aaron, for the altar. To the Levites ministering at Jerusalem I would give my tithe of wine and corn, olives, pomegranates and other fruits. Six years in succession I took the second tithe in money and went and paid it
8 annually at Jerusalem. ·I gave the third[e] to orphans and widows and to the strangers who live among the Israelites; I brought it them as a gift every three years. When we ate, we obeyed both the ordinances of the law of Moses and the exhortations of Deborah the mother of our ancestor Ananiel; for my father had 9 died and left me an orphan. ·When I came to man's estate, I married a woman from our kinsfolk whose name was Anna;[f] she bore me a son whom I called Tobias. Dt 14:22d Nb 18:12seq. Dt 18:3–5 Dt 14:22–27 Dt 14:28–29

11 10 When the banishment into Assyria came, I was taken away and went to Nineveh.
12 11 All my brothers and the people of my race ate the food of the heathen, ·but for my 13 12 part I was careful not to eat the food of the heathen.[g] ·And because I had kept 13 faith with my God with my whole heart, ·the Most High granted me the favour of 16 14 Shalmaneser, and I became the king's purveyor. ·Until his death I used to travel to Dn 2:48.49

1 a. In many places the Vulg. text differs considerably from Gk, which is followed by our translation (see Introduction). The verse numbering is therefore often different. The verse numbering of the Vulg. will be found in the margin whenever it differs from the Gk and when the Vulg. text is in agreement (at least in substance) with the Gk text.

b. The father's name is Tobeit, written Tobit in English; the son's Tobeias or Tobias. The other proper names in the book vary considerably, depending on the witnesses. ·Sinaiticus (S) extends this genealogy by adding after 'Gabael': 'son of Raphael, son of Raguel', omitted by Alexandrinus (Al), and Vaticanus (Vat.).

c. A stylised summary of the historical setting. See Introduction, p. 622.

d. Tobit's piety lies not so much in the thoughtful study of the Law, see Ps 119; etc., as in practising the good works the Law inculcates: almsgiving, burial of the dead, pilgrimage, tithe-paying, etc.

e. 'the third' Syr.; 'that of the third year' Vet. Lat.; omitted by S.

f. 'whose name was Anna' Al., Vat., Vet. Lat.; omitted by S.

g. Prepared without regard for the prohibitions of the Law, see Lv 11; Dt 14.

Media, where I transacted business on his behalf, and I deposited sacks of silver worth ten talents[h] with Gabael the brother of Gabrias at Rhages in Media.

On the death of Shalmaneser his son Sennacherib succeeded; the roads into 15 18
Media were barred, and I could no longer go there. •In the days of Shalmaneser I 16
Jb 31:16–20 had often given alms to the people of my race; •I gave my bread to the hungry and 17 clothes to those who lacked them; and I buried, when I saw them, the bodies of my country-folk thrown over the walls of Nineveh.

I also buried those who were killed by Sennacherib. When Sennacherib was 18 21 beating a disorderly retreat from Judaea after the King of heaven had punished his blasphemies, he killed a great number of Israelites in his rage. So I stole their bodies to bury them; Sennacherib looked for them and could not find them. •A 19 22 Ninevite went and told the king it was I who had buried them secretly. When I knew that the king had been told about me and saw myself being hunted by men who would put me to death, I was afraid and fled. •All my goods were seized; they 20 were all confiscated by the treasury; nothing was left me but my wife Anna and my son Tobias.

Less than forty days after this, the king was murdered by his two sons, who then 21 24 fled to the mountains of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon succeeded. Ahikar[i] the son of my brother Anael, was appointed chancellor of the exchequer for the kingdom and given the main ordering of affairs. •Ahikar then interceded for me and I was 22 allowed to return to Nineveh, since Ahikar had been chief cupbearer, keeper of the signet, administrator and treasurer under Sennacherib king of Assyria, and Esarhaddon had kept him in office. He was a relation of mine; he was my nephew.

II: TOBIT BLINDED

2 In the reign of Esarhaddon, therefore, I returned home, and my wife Anna 1 Ex 23:14d was restored to me with my son Tobias. At our feast of Pentecost (the feast of Weeks) there was a good dinner. I took my place for the meal; •the table was 2 brought to me and various dishes were brought. I then said to my son Tobias, 'Go, my child, and seek out some poor, loyal-hearted man among our brothers exiled in Nineveh, and bring him to share my meal. I will wait until you come back, my child.' •So Tobias went out to look for some poor man among our brothers, but he 3 came back again and said, 'Father!' I replied, 'What is it, my child?' He went on, 'Father, one of our nation has just been murdered; he has been strangled and then thrown down in the market place; he is there still.' •I sprang up at once, left my 4 meal untouched, took the man from the market place and laid him in one of my rooms, waiting until sunset to bury him. •I came in again and washed myself and 5 ate my bread in sorrow, •remembering the words of the prophet Amos concerning 6 Bethel:

Am 8:10 I shall turn your festivals into mourning
and all your singing into lamentation.

And I wept. When the sun was down, I went and dug a grave and buried him. 7
My neighbours laughed and said, 'See! He is not afraid any more.' (You must 8 remember that a price had been set on my head earlier for this very thing.) 'Once before he had to flee, yet here he is, beginning to bury the dead again.'

That night I took a bath; then I went into the courtyard and lay down by the 9 10 courtyard wall. Since it was hot I left my face uncovered. •I did not know that there 10 11 were sparrows in the wall above my head; their hot droppings fell into my eyes. This caused white spots to form, which I went to have treated by the doctors. But Mk 5:26 the more ointments they tried me with, the more the spots blinded me, and in the end, I became completely blind. I remained without sight four years; all my brothers were distressed on my behalf; and Ahikar provided for my upkeep for two years, until he left for Elymais.

19 11 My wife Anna then undertook woman's work; she would spin wool and take 12 cloth to weave; [a] •she used to deliver whatever had been ordered from her and then receive payment. Now on the seventh day of the month of Dystros, [b] she 20 finished a piece of work and delivered it to her customers. They paid her all that 21 13 was due, and into the bargain presented her with a kid for a meal. •When the kid came into my house, it began to bleat. I called to my wife and said, 'Where does this creature come from? Suppose it has been stolen! Let the owners have it back; 14 we have no right to eat stolen goods'. •She said, 'No, it was a present given me over and above my wages.' I did not believe her, and told her to give it back to the 22 owners (I felt deeply ashamed of her). To which she replied, 'What about your Jb 2:9 own alms? What about your own good works? Everyone knows what return you have had for them.'

1 3 Then, sad at heart, I sighed and wept, and began this prayer of lamentation:

2 You are just, O Lord, Ps 119:137
and just are all your works. Dn 3:27–32
All your ways are grace and truth, Ps 25:10
and you are the Judge of the world.

3 Therefore, Lord,
remember me, look on me.
Do not punish me for my sins
or for my needless faults or those of my ancestors. Ex 34:7 Ba 1:17–18
Dn 9:5–6

4 For we have sinned against you and broken your commandments; Ba 2:4seq.;3:8
and you have given us over to be plundered,
to captivity and death,
to be the talk, the laughing-stock and scorn
of all the nations among whom you have dispersed us.

5 And now all your decrees are true
when you deal with me as my faults deserve, and those of my ancestors. [a]
For we have neither kept your commandments
nor walked in truth before you.

6 So now, do with me as you will; Nb 11:15 be pleased to take my life from me; 1 K 19:4
so that I may be delivered from earth
and become earth again.
Better death than life for me, Jb 7:15 for I have endured groundless insult Jon 4:3,8 and am in deepest sorrow.

Lord, be pleased to deliver me from this affliction.

h. A talent of silver, or 60 minas, was the equivalent of approximately 97lb (44 kg.).

i. The reference to Ahikar, 1:22; 2:10; 11:18; 14:10, see Jdt 5:5b, connects the story of Tobit with the Book (or Wisdom) of Ahikar, an ancient work known to us in various forms and languages. The story it tells provides a setting for two collections of wisdom sayings which are echoed in Tb and Si. Ahikar the sage, chancellor to Sennacherib and Esarhaddon, kings of Assyria, had educated his nephew Adab; this situation introduces the first series of maxims. The ungrateful Nadab, now chancellor, has his benefactor condemned to death. Ahikar escapes death by a subterfuge and goes into hiding. Esarhaddon, commanded by Pharaoh to produce a sage capable of solving his challenges, regrets the loss of Ahikar. The old chancellor emerges from his hiding place, successfully takes up Pharaoh's challenge, is restored to office and punishes his nephew; his rebuke of Nadab constitutes the second series of maxims.

2 a. 'she would spin . . . weave' added with Vet. Lat.
b. The Macedonian month of Dystros corresponded to the Jewish month of Adar (February–March).

3 a. 'and those of my ancestors' added with Vat., Vet. Lat., Syr.

Let me go away to my everlasting home;
do not turn your face from me, O Lord.
Better death for me than life prolonged
in the face of unrelenting misery:
I can no longer bear to listen to insults.

III: SARAH

It chanced on the same day that Sarah the daughter of Raguel, who lived in Media 7 at Ecbatana, also heard insults from one of her father's maids. ·For she had 8 been given in marriage seven times, and Asmodeus,[b] the worst of demons, had killed her bridegrooms one after another before ever they had slept with her as man with wife. The servant-girl said, 'Yes, you kill your bridegrooms yourself.
That makes seven already to whom you have been given, and you have not once been in luck yet.[c] ·Just because your bridegrooms have died, that is no reason for 9 punishing us. Go and join them, and may we be spared the sight of any child of yours!' ·That day, she grieved, she sobbed, and she went up to her father's room 10 intending to hang herself. But then she thought, 'Suppose they were to blame my father! They would say, "You had an only daughter whom you loved, and now she 6:15 has hanged herself for grief." I cannot cause my father a sorrow which would bring Gn 37:35;42:38; 44:29,31 down his old age to the dwelling of the dead.[d] I should do better not to hang myself, but to beg the Lord to let me die and not live to hear any more insults.'
1 K 8:44,48 Ps 5:7;28:2; 134:2;138:2 Dn 6:11 And at this, by the window, with outstretched arms she said this prayer: 11

You are blessed, O God of mercy!
May your name be blessed for ever,
and may all things you have made bless you everlastingly.

And now I turn my face 12 14
and I raise my eyes to you.
3:6+ Let your word deliver me from earth; 13 15
I can hear myself insulted no longer.

O Lord, you know 14 16
that I have remained pure;
no man has touched me;
I have not dishonoured your name 15 17
or my father's name
in this land of exile.

I am my father's only daughter,
he has no other child as heir;
he has no brother at his side,
nor has he any kinsman left for whom I ought to keep myself.

I have lost seven husbands already;
why should I live any longer?
If it does not please you to take my life,
then look on me with pity;
I can no longer bear to hear myself defamed.[e]

12:12 This time the prayer of each of them found favour before the glory of God, 16 24 and Raphael[f] was sent to bring remedy to them both. He was to take the white 17 25 spots from the eyes of Tobit, so that he might see God's light with his own eyes;
and he was to give Sarah the daughter of Raguel as bride to Tobias son of Tobit, and to rid her of Asmodeus, that worst of demons. For it was to Tobias before all other suitors that she belonged by right. Tobit was coming back from the courtyard into the house at the same moment as Sarah the daughter of Raguel was coming down from the upper room. 4:12–13;6:12a

IV: TOBIAS

4 The same day Tobit remembered the silver that he had left with Gabael at Rhages in Media •and thought, 'I have come to the point of praying for death; I should do well to call my son Tobias and tell him about the money before I die.' He summoned his son Tobias and told him, 'When I die,[a] give me an honourable burial. Honour your mother, and never abandon her all the days of your life. Do all that she wants, and give her no reason for sorrow. •Remember, my child, all the risks she ran for your sake when you were in her womb. And when she dies, bury her at my side in the same grave.

b. 'Asmodeus' probably means 'the destroyer', cf. the destroying angel of 2 S 24:16; Ws 18:25; Rv 9:11. Asmodeus recurs in the Testament of Solomon (where again he is the enemy of the marriage act) and in post-biblical Judaism; some think Asmodeus is related to Aesma, a demon of the Parsees.

5 Tobias then replied to his father Tobit, 'Father, I shall do everything you have 1 told me. ·But how am I to recover the silver from him? He does not know me, 2 nor I him. What token am I to give him for him to believe me and hand the silver over to me? And besides, I do not know what roads to take for this journey into Media.' ·Then Tobit answered his son Tobias, 'Each of us set his signature to a 3 note which I cut in two, so that each could keep half of it. I took one piece, [e] and put the other with the silver. To think it was twenty years ago I left this silver in his keeping! And now, my child, find a trustworthy travelling companion—we shall 4 pay him for his time until you arrive back—and then go and collect the silver from Gabael.'
Tobias went out to look for a man who knew the way to go with him to Media. 4 5 3:17f Outside he found Raphael the angel [f] standing facing him, though he did not guess he was an angel of God. ·He said, 'Where do you come from, friend?' The angel 5 7 replied, 'I am one of your brother Israelites; I have come to these parts to look for work.' Tobias asked, 'Do you know the road to Media?' ·The other replied, 6 8
'Certainly I do, I have been there many times; I have knowledge and experience of all the ways. I have often been to Media and stayed with Gabael one of our kinsmen who lives at Rhages in Media. [g] It usually takes two full days to get from Ecbatana to Rhages; Rhages lies in the mountains, and Ecbatana is in the middle of the plain.' [d] ·Tobias said, 'Wait for me, friend, while I go and tell my father; I 7 9 need you to come with me; I shall pay you for your time.' ·The other replied, 8
'Good, I shall wait; but do not be long.'
Tobias went in and told his father that he had found one of their brother 9 10 Israelites. And the father said, 'Fetch him in; I want to find out about his family and tribe. I must see if he is going to be a reliable companion for you, my child.' So Tobias went out and called him, 'Friend,' he said, 'my father wants you.'
The angel came into the house; Tobit greeted him, and the other answered, 10 11 wishing him happiness in plenty. Tobit replied, 'Can I ever he happy again? I am a 12 blind man; I no longer see the light of heaven; I am sunk in darkness like the dead who see the light no more. I am a man buried alive; I hear people speak but cannot see them.' The angel said, 'Take comfort; before long God will heal you. Take 13 comfort.' Tobit said, 'My son Tobias wishes to go to Media. Will you join him as 14 his guide? Brother, I will pay you.' He replied, 'I am willing to go with him; I know all the ways; I have often been to Media, I have crossed all its plains and mountains, and I know all its roads.' ·Tobit said, 'Brother, what family and what tribe do you 11 16 belong to? Will you tell me, brother?' ·'What does my tribe matter to you?' the 12 17 angel said. Tobit said, 'I want to be quite sure whose son you are and what your name is.' ·The angel said, 'I am Azarias, son of the great Ananias, one of your 13 18 kinsmen.' ·'Welcome and greetings, brother! Do not be offended at my wanting to 14 19 know the name of your family; I find you are my kinsman of a good and honourable line. I know Ananias and Nathan, the two sons of the great Shemaiah. They used to go to Jerusalem with me; we have worshipped together there and they have never strayed from the right path. Your brothers are worthy men; you come of good stock; welcome.'

15 He went on, 'I engage you at a drachma a day, with the same expenses as my 16 own son's. Complete the journey with my son •and I shall go beyond the agreed 20 wage.' The angel replied, 'I shall complete the journey with him. Do not be afraid. Gn 24:7,40 Ex 23:20i
On the journey outward all will be well; on the journey back all will be well; the 17 road is safe.' •Tobit said, 'Blessings on you, brother!' Then he turned to his son.
'My child', he said 'prepare what you need for the journey, and set off with your 21 brother. May God in heaven protect you abroad and bring you both back to me safe and sound! May his angel go with you and protect you, my child!'

22 Tobias left the house to set out and kissed his father and mother. Tobit said, 'A 23 18 happy journey!' •His mother burst into tears and said to Tobit, 'Why must you send my child away? Is he not the staff of our hands, as he goes about before us?
24 19 Surely money is not the only thing that matters? Surely it is not as precious as 25 20 our child?[e] •The way of life God had already given us was good enough.'
26 21 He said, 'Do not think such thoughts. Going away and coming back, all will be well with our child. You will see for yourself when he comes back safe and sound! Do 27 22 not think such thoughts; do not worry on their account, my sister.[f] •A good angel will go with him; he will have a good journey and come back to us well and happy.'
28 1 6 And she dried her tears.

VI: THE FISH

6:1 2 The boy left with the angel, and the dog followed behind. The two walked on, and 2 3 when the first evening came they camped beside the Tigris. •The boy had gone down to the river to wash his feet, when a great fish leapt out of the water and tried 3,4 4 to swallow his foot. The boy gave a shout •and the angel said, 'Catch the fish; do
5 not let it go.' The boy mastered the fish and pulled it onto the bank. •The angel said, 'Cut it open; take out gall, heart and liver; set these aside and throw the 6 entrails away, for gall and heart and liver have curative properties.' •The boy cut the fish open and took out gall and heart and liver. He fried part of the fish for his meal and kept some for salting. Then they walked on again together until they were nearly in Media.

7 Then the boy asked the angel this question, 'Brother Azarias, what can the fish's 8 heart, liver and gall cure?' •He replied, 'You burn the fish's heart and liver, and their smoke is used in the case of a man or woman plagued by a demon or evil 9 spirit; any such affliction disappears for good, leaving no trace. •As regards the gall, this is used as an eye ointment for anyone having white spots on his eyes; after using it, you have only to blow on the spots to cure them.'

10, 11 They entered Media and had nearly reached Ecbatana •when Raphael said to the boy, 'Brother Tobias.' 'Yes?' he replied. The angel went on, 'Tonight we are 12 to stay with Raguel, who is a kinsman of yours. He has a daughter called Sarah, •but

b. With the exception of 'the angel of Yahweh' or 'the angel of God', which in the earliest texts are phrases used to express the visible manifestation of God, see Gn 16:7c, the angels are creatures distinct from God and inferior to him, the members of his heavenly court, called 'sons of God', Jb 1:6; see Ps 29:1b, 'holy ones', Jb 5:1, 'host of heaven', 1 K 22:19; Ne 9:6; Ps 103:21; 148:2. The prologue of Job evokes the angelic gathering, Jb 1:6; 2:1, from which God sends his messengers (the meaning of the word 'angel') down to earth. Some are destroying angels see Ex 12: 23j; 2 K 19:35; Ps 78:49; Ezk 9:1, others guardian angels, either of nations or of individuals, see Ex 23:20b; Dn 10:13. Raphael is sent as guide to Tobias 3:17; see Gn 24:7. On the mediatory function of angels in prophecy, see Ezk 40:3d. The doctrine is further developed in Judaism and the NT.

c. 'Rhages (in Media)' Vet. Lat., see 1:14; 4:1; 'Ecbatana (in Media)' S.

d. The geography is inexact; Ecbatana, now Hamadan, is a considerable distance from Rhages, now Rai, near Teheran, see p. 622. The author, however, is not concerned with detail; he merely wishes to set his story in a distant land.

e. 'money' conj.; 'money to money' Gk. •Other possible translations of this difficult verse; 'Let the money (at Rhages) not be added to the money (here at Nineveh) but be the ransom for our child'; or, by emendation; 'Let not the money take primacy over the son, but let it be valueless as against our child.' The idea that the money should not take primacy over the child seems most suitable to the context.

f. The same term is used of wife or bride in 8:4, 7, 21 and in Sg 4:9seq; 5:1, 2; see 8:1.

apart from Sarah he has no other son or daughter. Now you are her next of kin;[a] she belongs to you before anyone else and you may claim her father's inheritance.
She is a thoughtful, courageous and very lovely girl, and her father loves her dearly.[b] •You have the right to marry her. Listen, brother; this very evening I shall 13 speak about the girl to her father and arrange for her to be betrothed to you, and when we come back from Rhages we can celebrate the marriage. I assure you, Raguel has no right whatever to refuse you or to betroth her to anyone else. That would be asking for death, as prescribed in the Book of Moses, once he is aware that kinship gives you the pre-eminent right to marry his daughter. So listen, brother. This very evening we shall speak about the girl and ask for her hand in marriage. When we come back from Rhages we shall fetch her and take her home with us.'

Tobias replied to Raphael, 'Brother Azarias, I have been told that she has 14 already been given in marriage seven times and that each time her bridegroom has died in the bridal room. He died the same night as he entered her room; and I have heard people say it was a demon that killed them, •and this makes me afraid. To 15 her the demon does no harm because he loves her,[c] but as soon as a man tries to approach her, he kills him. I am my father's only son, and I have no wish to die. I 3:10+ do not want my father and mother to grieve over me for the rest of their lives; they have no other son to bury them.' •The angel said, 'Have you forgotten your father's 16 4:12–13 advice? After all, he urged you to choose a wife from your father's family. Listen then, brother. Do not worry about the demon; take her. This very evening, I promise, she will be given you as your wife. •Then once you are in the bridal room, 17 take the heart and liver of the fish and lay a little of it on the burning incense. The reek will rise, •the demon will smell it and flee, and there is no danger that he will 18 ever be found near the girl again. Then, before you sleep together, first stand up, both of you, and pray. Ask the Lord of heaven to grant you his grace and Gn 24:44 protection. Do not be afraid; she was destined for you from the beginning, and you are the one to save her. She will follow you, and I pledge my word she will give you children who will be like brothers to you. Do not worry.' And when Tobias heard Raphael say this, when he understood that Sarah was his sister, a kinswoman of his father's family, he fell so deeply in love with her that he could no longer call his heart his own.

VII: RAGUEL

7 As they entered Ecbatana, Tobias said, 'Brother Azarias, take me at once to 1 our brother Raguel's.' And he showed him the way to the house of Raguel, whom they found sitting beside his courtyard door. They greeted him first, and he replied, 'Welcome and greetings, brothers.' And he took them into his house.
He said to his wife Edna, 'How like my brother Tobit this young man is!' •Edna 2, 3 asked them where they came from; they said 'We are sons of Naphtali exiled in Gn 29:4–6; 43:27–30 Nineveh.' •'Do you know our brother Tobit?' 'Yes.' 'How is he?' •'He is alive 4, 5 and well.' And Tobias added, 'He is my father.' •Raguel leapt to his feet and 6 Gn 33:4; 45:14 Lk 15:20 kissed him and wept. •Then, finding words, he said, 'Blessings on you, child! You 7 are the son of a noble father. How sad it is that someone so bright and full of good deeds should have gone blind!' He fell on the neck of his kinsman Tobias and wept.
And his wife Edna wept for him, and so did his daughter Sarah. •Raguel killed a 8, 9 ram from the flock, and they gave them a warm welcome.

They washed and bathed and sat down to table. Then Tobias said to Raphael,
'Brother Azarias, will you ask Raguel to give me my sister Sarah?' •Raguel 10 overheard the words, and said to the young man, 'Eat and drink, and make the most of your evening; no one else has the right to take my daughter Sarah— no one but you, my brother. In any case even I am not at liberty to give her to anyone else, since you are her next of kin. However, my boy, I must be frank with you: •I have 11 tried to find a husband for her seven times among our kinsmen, and all of them have died the first evening, on going to her room. But for the present, my boy, eat and drink; the Lord will grant you his grace and peace.' [a] Tobias spoke out, 'I will not hear of eating and drinking till you have come to a decision about me.' Raguel answered, 'Very well. Since, by the prescription of the Book of Moses she is given to you, Heaven itself decrees she shall be yours. I therefore entrust your sister to you. From now on you are her brother and she is your sister. She is given to you from today for ever. The Lord of heaven favour you tonight, my child, and grant 12 you his grace and peace.' ·Raguel called for his daughter Sarah, took her by the hand and gave her to Tobias with these words, 'I entrust her to you; the law and the ruling recorded in the Book of Moses assign her to you as your wife. Take her; bring her home safe and sound to your father's house. The God of heaven grant 13 you a good journey in peace.' ·Then he turned to her mother and asked her to fetch him writing paper. He drew up the marriage contract, and so he gave his daughter as bride to Tobias according to the ordinance of the Law of Moses.

14, 18 15 After this they began to eat and drink. ·Raguel called his wife Edna and said, 19 16 'My sister, prepare the second room and take her there.' ·She went and made the 20 bed in this room as he had ordered, and took her daughter to it. She wept over her, then wiped away her tears and said, 'Courage, daughter! May the Lord of heaven turn your grief to joy! Courage, daughter!' And she went out.

VIII: THE GRAVE

1 8 When they had finished eating and drinking and it seemed time to go to bed,
2 the young man was taken from the dining room to the bedroom. ·Tobias remembered Raphael's advice; he went to his bag, took the fish's heart and liver
3 out of it and put some on the burning incense. ·The reek of the fish distressed the demon, who fled through the air to Egypt. [a] Raphael pursued him there, shackled him and strangled him forthwith.

Mt 12:22–30, 43–45par.

4 The parents meanwhile had gone out and shut the door behind them. Tobias rose from the bed, and said to Sarah, 'Get up, my sister! You and I must pray and 6 5 petition our Lord to win his grace and his protection.' ·She stood up, and they
7 began praying for protection, and this was how he began:

You are blessed, O God of our fathers; Dn 3:26 blessed too is your name
for ever and ever.
Let the heavens bless you and all things you have made for evermore.

8 6 You it was who created Adam,
you who created Eve his wife to be his help and support;
and from these two the human race was born.
You it was who said,
'It is not right that the man should be alone; Gn 2:18
let us make him a helper like him.'

6 a. In conformity with the patriarchal custom of marriage within the clan see 4:12–13 and the story of the marriage of Isaac in Gn 24. (The levirate law, Dt 25:5a, possibly derives from this custom.) For the tribes settled in Palestine this practice preserved the tribal boundaries established after the conquest of Canaan, see Nb 36, In the Dispersion, this survived in the notion of keeping the family goods within the family and the determination to remain true to the ancestral law of Israel.

b. 'loves her dearly' Vet. Lat.; 'is handsome' S.

c. 'because he loves her' added following Vat., Vet. Lat., Syr.

And so I take my sister 7 9
not for any lustful motive,
but I do it in singleness of heart.
Be kind enough to have pity on her and on me
and bring us to old age together.

And together they said, 'Amen, Amen,' ·and lay down for the night. 8, 9
But Raguel rose and called his servants, who came and helped him dig a grave. 11
He had thought, 'Heaven grant he does not die! We should be overwhelmed with 10 12 ridicule and shame.' ·When the grave was ready, Raguel went back to the house, 11 13 called his wife ·and said, 'Will you send a maid to the room to see if Tobias is still 12 14 alive? For if he is dead, we may be able to bury him without anyone else knowing.'
They sent the maid, lit the lamp, opened the door and the maid went in. She found 13 15 the two fast asleep together; ·she came out again and whispered, 'He is not dead; 14 16
all is well.' ·Then Raguel blessed [b] the God of heaven with these words: 15 17

You are blessed, my God,
with every blessing that is pure;
may you be blessed for evermore!

You are blessed for having made me glad. 16
What I feared has not happened, instead you have shown us
your boundless mercy.

You are blessed for taking pity 17 19
on this only son, this only daughter.
Grant them, Master, your mercy and your protection;
let them live out their lives
in happiness and in mercy.

And he made his servants fill the grave in before dawn broke. 18 20
He told his wife to make an ovenful of bread; he went to his flock, brought back 19
two oxen and four sheep and gave orders for them to be cooked; and preparations Gn 24:54–55 Jg 14:10–18 began. ·He called Tobias and said, 'I will not hear of your leaving here for a 20 23 fortnight. You are to stay where you are, eating and drinking, with me. You will make my daughter happy again after all her troubles. ·After that, take away a half 21 24 of all I have, and take her safe and sound back to your father. [c] When my wife and I are dead you shall have the other half. Courage, my boy! I am your father, and Edna is your mother. We are your parents in future, as we are your sister's.
Courage, my son!'

IX: THE WEDDING FEAST

9 Then Tobias turned to Raphael. ·'Brother Azarias,' he said, 'take four servants 1, 2 and two camels and leave for Rhages. ·Go to Gabael's house, give him the 3 receipt and see about the money; then invite him to come with you to my wedding feast. ·You know that my father must be counting the days and that I cannot lose a 4 single one without worrying him. ·You see what Raguel has pledged himself to do; 5
I am bound by his oath.' So Raphael left for Rhages in Media with the four servants 6 and two camels. They stayed with Gabael, and Raphael showed him the receipt.
He told him about the marriage of Tobias son of Tobit and gave him his invitation 7 to the wedding feast. Gabael started counting out the sacks to him—the seals were intact—and they loaded them on to the camels. [a] ·Early in the morning they set off 6 together for the feast, and reached Raguel's house where they found Tobias dining.
He rose to greet Gabael, who burst into tears and blessed him with the words, 8
'Excellent son of a father beyond reproach, just and generous in his dealings! The 9

Lord give heaven's blessing to you, to your wife, to your wife's father and mother![b]
Blessed be God for granting me the sight of this living image of my cousin Tobit![c]

1 10 Every day, meanwhile, Tobit kept reckoning the days required for the journey there and the journey back. The full number went by, and still his
2 son had not come. •Then he thought, 'I hope he has not been delayed there! I hope
3 Gabael is not dead, so that no one will give him the silver.' •And he began to 4 worry. •His wife Anna kept saying, 'My son is dead! He is no longer among the 5 living!' And she began to weep and mourn over her son. She kept saying, •'Alas! I 6 should never have let you leave me, my child, you, the light of my eyes.' •And Tobit would reply, 'Hush, my sister! Do not worry. All is well with him. Something has happened there to delay them. His companion is someone we can trust, one of 7 our kinsmen at that. Do not lose heart, my sister. •He will soon be here.' But all she would say was, 'Leave me alone; do not try to deceive me. My child is dead.'
And every day she would go abruptly out to watch the road by which her son had left. She trusted no eyes but her own. Once the sun had set she would come home again, only to weep and moan all night, unable to sleep.

Gn 44:18–34
Lk 15:20
Gn 45:26

After the fourteen days of feasting that Raguel had sworn to keep for his daughter's marriage, Tobias came to him and said, 'Let me go now; my father and mother must have lost all hope of seeing me again. So I beg you, father, to let me return to my father's house; I have told you the plight he was in when I left him.'
8 Raguel said to Tobias, 'Stay, my son, stay with me. I shall send messengers to 9 your father Tobit to give him news of you.' •But Tobias pressed him, 'No, I beg 10 you to let me go back to my father's house.' •Without more ado, Raguel committed Sarah his bride into his keeping. He gave Tobias half his wealth, slaves, men and women, oxen and sheep, donkeys and camels, clothes and money and house-11 hold things. •And so he let them leave happily. To Tobias he said these parting words, 'Good health, my son, and a happy journey! May the Lord of heaven be gracious to you and to your wife Sarah! I hope to see your children before I die.'
13 12 To his daughter Sarah he said, 'Go now to your father-in-law's house, since henceforward they are as much your parents as those who gave you life. Go in peace, my daughter, I hope to hear nothing but good of you, as long as I live.' He said goodbye to them and let them go.

Gn 24:54–61
Gn 24:35;30:43
Gn 45:28

Edna in her turn said to Tobias, 'Dear son and brother, may it please the Lord to bring you back again! I hope to live long enough to see the children of you and my daughter Sarah before I die. In the sight of the Lord I give my daughter into your keeping. Never make her unhappy as long as you live. Go in peace, my son.
Henceforward I am your mother and Sarah is your sister. May we all live happily 12 for the rest of our lives!' And she kissed them both and saw them set out happily.
13 Tobias left Raguel's house with his mind at ease. In his gladness he blessed the Lord of heaven and earth, the King of all that is, for the happy issue of his travels.
He gave this blessing to Raguel and his wife Edna, 'May it be my happiness to honour you for the rest of my life![a]

X: TOBIT'S SIGHT RESTORED

1, 2 11 They were nearly at Kaserin, opposite Nineveh, •when Raphael said, 'You 3 know the plight in which we left your father; •let us go on ahead of your wife and prepare the house ourselves while she travels behind with the others.'

Gn 46:28

b. 'Raguel blessed' Vet. Lat.; 'they blessed' Gk.

c. The account of the marriage of Sarah has many details in common with the stories of Rebekah, Gn 24; Rachel, Gn 29; Dinah, Gn 34; the wife of Samson, Jg 14; Michal, 1 S 18. Here, however, there is no mohar (the sum paid by the groom to the bride's father, Gn 34:12; 1 S 18:25); it is the father who dowers the bride.

9 a. 'on to the camels' Vet. Lat., Syr.; omitted by S.

b. 'to (your wife's) father and mother' Vet. Lat.; 'to your father' Gk.

c. Some textual witnesses omit Gabael's blessing.

10 a. Text amended following Vat. and Vet. Lat.

They went on together (Raphael warned Tobias to take the gall with him) and the dog followed them. [a] 4

Anna was sitting, watching the road by which her son would come. ·She was sure at once it must be he and said to the father, 'Here comes your son, with his companion.' 5, 6

Raphael said to Tobias before he reached his father, 'I give you my word that your father's eyes will open. ·You must put the fish's gall to his eyes; the medicine will smart and will draw a filmy white skin off his eyes. And your father will no more be blind but will be able to see the light.' 7 8

Gn 33:4;45:14; 46:29–30 Lk 15:20 The mother ran forward and threw her arms round her son's neck. 'Now I can die,' she said, 'I have seen you again.' And she wept. ·Tobit rose to his feet and stumbled across the courtyard through the door. Tobias came on towards him (he had the fish's gall in his hand). He blew into his eyes and said, steadying him, 'Take courage, father!' With this he applied the medicine, left it there a while, then with both hands peeled away a filmy skin from the corners of his eyes. Then his father fell on his neck ·and wept. He exclaimed, 'I can see you, my son, the light of my eyes!' And he said: 9 10 11 13 12 13, 14

Blessed be God!
Blessed be his great name!
Blessed be all his holy angels!
Blessed be his great name
for evermore! [b]

13:2 Dt 32:39 For, having afflicted me, 15
he has had pity on me and now I see my son Tobias!

Tobias went indoors, joyfully blessing God at the top of his voice. [c] Then he told his father everything; how his journey had been successful and he had brought the silver back; how he had married Sarah the daughter of Raguel; how she was following him now, close behind, and could not be far from the gates of Nineveh.

Tobit set off to the gates of Nineveh to meet his daughter-in-law, giving joyful praise to God as he went. When the people of Nineveh saw him walking without a guide and stepping forward as briskly as of old, they were astonished. ·Tobit described to them how God had taken pity on him and had opened his eyes. Then Tobit met Sarah the bride of his son Tobias, and blessed her in these words. 'Welcome, daughter! Blessed be your God for sending you to us, my daughter. Blessings on your father, blessings on my son Tobias, blessings on yourself, my daughter. Welcome now to your own house in joyfulness and in blessedness. Come in, my daughter.' That day brought joy to the Jews of Nineveh, ·and his cousins Ahikar and Nadab came to share in Tobit's happiness. [d] 16 17 18 20

XI: THE REVELATION

Gn 30:25–31 12 When the wedding feast was over, Tobit called his son Tobias and said, 'My son, you ought to think about paying the amount due to your fellow traveller; give him more than the figure agreed on.' ·'Father,' he replied, 'how much am I to give him for his help? Even if I give him half the goods he brought back with me, I shall not be the loser. ·He has brought me back safe and sound, he has cured my wife, he has brought the money back too, and now he has cured you as well. How much am I to give him for all this?' ·Tobit said, 'He has richly earned half what he brought back'. ·So Tobias called his companion and said, 'Take half of what you brought back, in payment for all you have done, and go in peace.' 1 2 3 4 5

Then Raphael took them both aside and said, 'Bless God, utter his praise before all the living for the favour he has shown you. Bless and extol his name. 6

b. 'and who read them' restored following Vet. Lat. •The angel, see 5:4b, now becomes the intercessor. Raphael presents a 'memoir' of Tobit's prayers and good works to God. The term suggests an official abstract; it also has sacrificial overtones, the portion of the victim burnt on the altar as a 'pleasing smell' is called the 'memorial' of the sacrifice, Lv 2: 1a, 2. The angel of the centurion Cornelius, Ac 10:4, similarly tells him that his prayers and almsgiving have ascended as a 'memorial' before God.

c. Like Satan to Job (Jb 1–2) though with a difference.

d. Only three angels' names appear in the Bible; Gabriel, Dn 8:16; 9 21; Lk 1:19; Michael, Dn 10;13, 21; 21:1; Jude 9; and Raphael, here and 3:17. Apocryphal writers complete the list of the Seven in a very imaginative way. There is an echo of Tb in the seven angels of the Apocalypse Rv 8:2.

e. Following Vet. Lat.; 'You see that I have eaten nothing and that you have had a vision.'

13 a. Tobit's concluding song (see Ex 15; Jdt 16) forms two parts. The first, vv. 1–8, is a song of thanksgiving, borrowing themes from hymns and psalms of the kingdom. The second, vv. 9–17, apostrophises Jerusalem in the style of the prophets; it expresses the exiles' hopes of an ideal Jerusalem. There are considerable divergencies among the textual authorities, and some lacunae; the restoration is at times conjectural.

XIII: NINEVEH

2 Tobit died when he was a hundred and twelve years old and received an 3 2 honourable burial in Nineveh. ·He had been sixty-two when he went blind; and 4 after his cure, he lived in comfort, practising almsgiving and continually praising
3 God and extolling his greatness. ·When he was at the point of death he summoned 4:2–3 Gn 47:29

b. The author knows that these events have already taken place, but makes Tobit foretell them as one living at the apogee of the Assyrian empire; this is a characteristic device of apocalyptic literature. When we come to the author's own day, however, apocalypse becomes prophecy and he speaks of the future messianic age (when 'the time has fully come' v. 5).

JUDITH[a]

I: THE CAMPAIGN OF HOLOFERNES

Nebuchadnezzar and Arphaxad

1 It was the twelfth year of Nebuchadnezzar[b] who reigned over the Assyrians in the great city of Nineveh. Arphaxad[c] was then reigning over the Medes in Gn 10:22 2 Ecbatana. •He surrounded this city with walls of dressed stones three cubits thick and six cubits long, making the rampart seventy cubits high and fifty cubits wide.
3 At the gates he placed towers one hundred cubits high and, at the foundations, 4 sixty cubits wide, •the gates themselves being seventy cubits high and forty wide to allow his forces to march out in a body and his infantry to parade freely.
5 About this time King Nebuchadnezzar gave battle to King Arphaxad in the 6 great plain lying in the territory of Ragae. •Supporting him were all the peoples from the highlands,[d] all from the Euphrates and Tigris and Hydaspes, and those from the plains who were subject to Arioch, king of the Elymaeans.[e] Thus many nations had mustered to take part in the battle of the Cheleoudites.[f] 7 Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians sent a message to all the inhabitants of Persia, to all the inhabitants of the western countries, Cilicia, Damascus, Lebanon, 8 Anti-Lebanon, to all those along the coast, •to the peoples of Carmel, Gilead, 9 Upper Galilee, the great plain of Esdraelon, •to the people of Samaria and its outlying towns, to those beyond Jordan, as far away as Jerusalem, Bethany, Chelous, Kadesh, the river of Egypt, Tahpanhes, Rameses and the whole territory 10 of Goshen, •beyond Tanis too and Memphis, and to all the inhabitants of Egypt as 11 far as the frontiers of Ethiopia.[g] •But the inhabitants of these countries ignored the summons of Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians and did not rally to him to make war. They were not afraid of him, since in their view he appeared isolated.[h]
Hence they sent his ambassadors back with nothing achieved and in disgrace.
12 Nebuchadnezzar was furious with all these countries.[i] He swore by his throne and kingdom to take revenge on all the territories of Cilicia, Damascus and Syria, of the Moabites and of the Ammonites, of Judaea and Egypt as far as the limits of the two seas,[j] and to ravage them with the sword.

The campaign against Arphaxad

13 In the seventeenth year, he gave battle with his whole army to King Arphaxad and

1 a. The Vulg. text differs considerably from the Gk. Its most important additions will be found in the footnotes, and where its verse numbering is different from Gk this will be noted.

b. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon (605–562 BC) was never styled 'king of Assyria' and never had his capital at Nineveh, which had been destroyed in 612 by his father Nabopolassar. • On the liberties the author takes with history, see p. 622. Here, Nebuchadnezzar typifies any mighty and irreligious monarch, hostile to the People of God.

c. Arphaxad is unknown to historians. His name perhaps suggests Phraortes founder of the kingdom of Media, of which Ecbatana (modern Hamadan) was the capital.

d. The high plateaux of west Iran.

e. The author is presumably referring to Elymais, the eastern province of the Persian Empire see 1 M 6:1. • The 'Hydaspes' must be the River Choaspes, which flows through Susa.

f. Probably the Chaldaeans.

g. The list mentions all the vassals or allies of Nebuchadnezzar.

h. lit. 'one man only', i.e. left dependent on any help he can find; though possibly 'a man of straw'.

i. lit. 'the whole earth'. The phrase, common in Jdt either means the district referred to in the context (the whole country) or is a hyperbolic expression.

j. To the list in vv. 7–11, are now added Moab, Ammon and Judaea. The expression 'the limits of the two seas', i.e. extending from the Mediterranean to the Indian Ocean, is a figure of speech for universal domination, see Ps 72:8; Mi 7:12; Zc 9:10.

in this battle defeated him. He routed Arphaxad's entire army and all his cavalry and chariots; ·he occupied his towns and advanced on Ecbatana; he seized its 14 towers and plundered its market places, reducing its former magnificence to a mockery. ·He later captured Arphaxad in the mountains of Ragae and, thrusting 15 him through with his spears, destroyed him once and for all.

He then retired with his troops and all who had joined forces with him: a vast 16
Est 1:3–4 horde of armed men. Then he and his army gave themselves up to carefree feasting for a hundred and twenty days.

The campaign in the west

2 In the eighteenth year,[a] on the twenty-second day of the first month, a rumour 1 ran through the palace that Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians was to have his revenge on all the countries, as he had threatened. ·Summoning his general 2 staff and senior officers, he held a secret conference with them, and with his own lips pronounced utter destruction on the entire area. ·It was then decreed that 3 everyone should be put to death who had not answered the king's appeal.

When the council was over, Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians sent for 4 Holofernes,[b] general-in-chief of his armies and subordinate only to himself. He said to him, ·"Thus speaks the Great King, lord of the whole world,[c] "Go; take 5 men of proven valour, about a hundred and twenty thousand foot soldiers and a strong company of horse with twelve thousand cavalrymen; ·then advance against 6
all the western lands, since these people have disregarded my call. ·Bid them have 7 earth and water ready,[d] because in my rage I am about to march on them; the feet of my soldiers will cover the whole face of the earth, and I shall plunder it. ·Their 8 wounded will fill the valleys and the torrents, and rivers, blocked with their dead, will overflow. ·I shall lead them captive to the ends of the earth. ·Now go! Begin by 9, 10 conquering this whole region for me. If they surrender to you, hold them for me until the time comes to punish them. ·But if they resist, look on no one with 11 clemency, hand them over to slaughter and plunder throughout the territory entrusted to you. ·For by my life and by the living power of my kingdom I have 12 spoken. All this I shall do by my power. ·And you, neglect none of your master's 13 commands, act strictly according to my orders without further delay." '

Leaving the presence of his sovereign, Holofernes immediately summoned all 14
the marshals, generals and officers of the Assyrian army ·and detailed the picked 15 troops as his master had ordered, about a hundred and twenty thousand men and a further twelve thousand mounted archers. ·He organised these in the normal 16 battle formation. ·He then secured vast numbers of camels, donkeys and mules to 17 8 carry the baggage, and innumerable sheep, oxen and goats for food supplies. Every man received full rations and a generous sum of gold and silver from the 18 10 king's purse.

He then set out for the campaign with his whole army, in advance of King 19 11
Nebuchadnezzar, to overwhelm the whole western region with his chariots, his horsemen and his picked body of foot. ·A motley gathering followed in his rear, as 20
Jg 7:12 numerous as locusts or the grains of sand on the ground; there was no counting Jl 2:2–7,11 their multitude.

The stages of Holofernes' advance[e]

Thus they set out from Nineveh and marched for three days towards the Plain of 21 12
Bectileth. From Bectileth they went on to pitch camp near the mountains that lie to the north of Upper Cilicia. ·From there Holofernes advanced into the highlands 22
Gn 10:6,13,22 with his whole army, infantry, horsemen, chariots. ·He cut his way through Put 23 13 and Lud, carried away captive all the sons of Rassis and sons of Ishmael living on the verge of the desert south of Cheleon, ·marched along the Euphrates, crossed 24 14 Mesopotamia, rased all the fortified towns controlling the Wadi Abron and reached the sea. ·Next he attacked the territories of Cilicia, butchering all who offered him 25 15 resistance, advanced on the southern frontiers of Japheth, facing Arabia, ·com- 26 16 pletely encircled the Midianites, burned their tents and plundered their sheep-17 27 folds, •made his way down to the Damascus plain at the time of the wheat harvest,[f] set fire to the fields, destroyed the flocks and herds, sacked the towns, 18 28 laid the countryside waste and put all the young men to the sword. •Fear and trembling seized all the coastal peoples; those of Sidon and Tyre, those of Sur, Ex 15:15–16 Ocina and Jamnia. The populations of Azotos and Ascalon were panic-stricken.

1, 2 3 They therefore sent envoys to him to sue for peace, to say, •"We are servants of the great King Nebuchadnezzar; we lie prostrate before you. Treat us as you 3 think fit. •Our cattle-farms, all our land, all our wheat fields, our flocks and herds, all the sheep-folds in our encampments are at your disposal. Do with them as you 4 please. •Our towns and their inhabitants too are at your service; go and treat them 5 as you think fit." •These men came to Holofernes and delivered the message as above.
7, 8 6 He then made his way down to the coast with his army and stationed garrisons in 9 7 all the fortified towns, levying outstanding men there as auxiliaries. •The people of 10 these cities and of all the other towns in the neighbourhood welcomed him, wearing 8 garlands and dancing to the sound of tambourines. •But he demolished their Ex 34:13*o* shrines[a] and cut down their sacred trees, carrying out his commission to destroy all 2 Ch 17:6
local gods so that the nations should worship Nebuchadnezzar alone and people of every language and nationality should hail him as a god.[b] 9 Thus he reached the edge of Esdraelon, in the neighbourhood of Dothan, a 10 village facing the great ridge of Judaea. •He pitched camp between Geba and Scythopolis and stayed there a full month to re-provision his forces.

Judaea on the alert

1 4 When the Israelites living in Judaea heard how Holofernes, general-in-chief of Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians, had treated the various nations, plun-2 dering their temples and destroying them, •they were thoroughly alarmed at his approach and trembled for Jerusalem and the Temple of the Lord their God.
3 They had returned from captivity only a short time before, and the resettlement of the people in Judaea and the reconsecration of the sacred furnishings, of the altar, and of the Temple, which had been profaned, were of recent date.[a] 3 4 They therefore alerted the whole of Samaria, Kona, Beth-Horon, Belmain, 5 Jericho, Choba, Aesora and the Salem valley. •They occupied the summits of the 4 highest mountains and fortified the villages on them; they laid in supplies for the 5 6 coming war, as the fields had just been harvested. •Joakim the high priest, resident in Jerusalem at the time, wrote to the inhabitants of Bethulia and of Betomes-6 7 thaim,[b] two towns facing Esdraelon, towards the plain of Dothan. •He ordered them to occupy the mountain passes, the only means of access to Judaea, for there it would be easy for them to halt an attacking force, the narrowness of the approach 7 8 not allowing men to advance more than two abreast. •The Israelites carried out the

b. Holofernes and Bagoas, 12:11, are Persian names, and two officers of Artaxerxes III Ochos were so named. The author may have wished to include the campaigns of this king too under the (comprehensive) name of Nebuchadnezzar.

c. Official title of the Persian kings.

d. Persian formula for all the facilities required by a conqueror for transit and occupation.

e. The itinerary contains a number of names which are either unknown or hard to identify; and those names which are known seem oddly arranged. The line of advance, as described, is impossible. Either the author knew nothing of local geography, or he was not interested in factual accuracy.

f. The Hebrews distinguish the barley harvest in April see 2 S 21:9, from the wheat harvest, at the end of May, see Gn 30:14.

b. Neither the Assyrian nor the Babylonian kings ever insisted on this. The Seleucids, following Alexander's lead, were the first to claim divine honours.

4 a. The author ignores time (see p. 622) to place the return from exile and the repopulation of Jerusalem (539–400), even perhaps the purification of the Temple, after the persecution of Antiochus IV (165), all in the lifetime of Nebuchadnezzar.

A nation at prayer

All the men of Israel cried most fervently to God and humbled themselves before 9 8
Jon 3:7–8 him, [d] ·They, their wives. their children, their cattle, all their resident aliens, hired 10 or slave, wrapped sackcloth round their loins. ·All the Israelites in Jerusalem, 11 9 including women and children, lay prostrate in front of the Temple, and with ashes Est 4:1seq. on their heads stretched out their hands [e] before the Lord. ·They draped the altar 12 itself in sackcloth [f] and fervently joined together in begging the God of Israel not to let their children be carried off, their wives distributed as booty, the towns of their heritage destroyed, the Temple profaned and desecrated for the heathen to gloat over. ·The Lord heard them and looked kindly on their distress. 13

Est 4:16 The people fasted for many days throughout Judaea as well as in Jerusalem before the sanctuary of the Lord Almighty. ·Joakim the high priest and all who 14 Jl 2:17 stood before the Lord, the Lord's priests and ministers, wore sackcloth round their loins as they offered the perpetual burnt offering and the votive and voluntary offerings of the people. ·With ashes on their turbans they earnestly called on the 15
Lord to look kindly on the House of Israel.

A council of war in Holofernes' camp

5 Holofernes, general-in-chief of the Assyrian army, received the intelligence 1 that the Israelites were preparing for war, that they had closed the mountain passes, fortified all the high peaks and laid obstructions in the plains. ·Holofernes 2 Nb 21:21 Dt 2:19e was furious. He summoned all the princes of Moab, all the generals of Ammon and all the satraps of the coastal regions. ·'Men of Canaan,' he said, 'tell me: what 3 people is this that occupies the hill-country? What towns does it inhabit? How large is its army? What are the sources of its power and strength? Who is the king who rules it and commands its army? ·Why have they disdained to wait on me, as 4
all the western peoples have?' [a]

11:9–19 Achior, [b] leader of all the Ammonites, replied, 'May my lord be pleased to listen 5 to what your servant is going to say. I shall give you the facts about these mountain folk whose home lies close to you. You will hear no lie from the mouth of your Gn 11:31g servant. ·These people are descended from the Chaldaeans. ·They once came to 6, 7 live in Mesopotamia, because they did not want to follow the gods of their ancestors who lived in Chaldaea. ·They abandoned the way of their ancestors to worship the 8 God of heaven, [c] the God they learnt to acknowledge. Banished from the presence of their own gods, they fled to Mesopotamia where they lived for a long time.
Gn 11:31–12:5 When God told them to leave their home and set out for Canaan, they 9 settled there and accumulated gold and silver and great herds of cattle. ·Next, 10
Gn 42:1–5; 46:1–7 Ex 1:7 famine having overwhelmed the land of Canaan, they went down to Egypt where they stayed till they were well nourished. There they became a great multitude, a Ex 1:8–14 race beyond counting. ·But the king of Egypt turned against them and exploited 11 them by forcing them to make bricks; he degraded them, reducing them to slavery.
They cried to their God, who struck the entire land of Egypt with incurable 12
Ex 7–12; 14; 21–22 plagues, and the Egyptians expelled them. ·God dried up the Red Sea [d] before 13 11 them ·and led them forward by way of Sinai and Kadesh-Barnea. Having driven 14 12 off all the inhabitants of the desert, ·they settled in the land of the Amorites and in 15
Nb 21:21–32 their strength exterminated the entire population of Heshbon. Then, having

Dt 28–30 Ps 106:40–46 Girgashites, and lived there for many years. ·All the while they did not sin before 17
Is 59:2 their God, prosperity was theirs, for they have a God who hates wickedness. ·But 18 22
when they turned from the path he had marked out for them some were exterminated 2 K 25 in a series of battles, others were taken captive to a foreign land. The Temple of their God was rased to the ground and their towns were seized by their enemies.

23 19 Then having turned once again to their God, they came back from the places to which they had been dispersed and scattered, regained possession of Jerusalem, where they have their Temple, and reoccupied the hill-country which had been left 24 20 deserted. ·So, now, master and lord, if this people has committed any fault, if they have sinned against their God, let us first be sure that they really have this reason 25 21 to fail, then advance and attack them. ·But if their nation is guiltless, my lord 11:10 would do better to abstain, for fear that their Lord and God should protect them.
We should then become the laughing-stock of the whole world.'
26 22 When Achior had ended this speech, all the people crowding round the tent began protesting. Holofernes' own senior officers, as well as all the coastal peoples 27 23 and the Moabites, threatened to tear him limb from limb. ·Why should we be 28 afraid of the Israelites? They are a weak and powerless people, quite unable to 24 stand a stiff attack. ·Forward! Advance! Your army, Holofernes our master, will swallow them in one mouthful!' [c]

Achior handed over to the Israelites

1 6 When the uproar of those crowding round the council had subsided, Holofernes, general-in-chief of the Assyrian army, reprimanded Achior in front of 2 the whole crowd of foreigners and Ammonites. [a] ·'Achior, who do you think you are, you and the Ephraimite mercenaries, playing the prophet like this with us today, and trying to dissuade us from making war on the people of Israel? You 2 K 18:32–35 claim their God will protect them. And who is God if not Nebuchadnezzar? He 3:8 himself will display his power and wipe them off the face of the earth, and their Dn 3:14–18 3 God will certainly not save them. ·But we, his servants, shall destroy them as easily Is 36:18–20;
4 as a single individual. They can never resist the strength of our cavalry. ·We shall 37:4,16–20 burn them all. Their mountains will be drunk with their blood and their plains filled with their corpses. Far from being able to resist us, every one of them will die; thus says King Nebuchadnezzar, lord of the whole world. For he has spoken, and his 5 words will not prove empty. ·As for you, Achior, you Ammonite mercenary, who in a rash moment said these words, you will not see my face again until the day 6 when I have taken my revenge on this brood from Egypt. ·And then the swords of 5:12;16:12 my soldiers and the spears [b] of my officers will pierce your sides. You will fall 7 among their wounded, the moment I turn on Israel. ·My servants will now take 8 you into the hill-country and leave you near one of the towns in the passes; ·you 9 will not die, until you share their ruin. ·No need to look so sad if you cherish the secret hope that they will not be captured! I have spoken; none of my words will prove idle.'
10 Holofernes having commanded his tent-orderlies to seize Achior, to take him to 8 11 Bethulia and to hand him over to the Israelites, ·the orderlies took him, escorted him out of the camp and across the plain, and then, making for the hill-country, 12 reached the springs below Bethulia. ·As soon as the men of the town sighted them, they snatched up their weapons, left the town and made for the mountain tops, while all the slingers pelted them with stones to prevent them from coming up.

c. A 'Council of Elders' associated with the high priest is not found in pre-exilic times but appears as an established institution in the Gk period.

d. After 'humbled themselves', we omit: 'with sustained ardour', a dittography.

e. 'their hands' conj.; 'their sackcloth' Gk.

f. Sacking was commonly used as penitential dress, but this is a surprising development.

5 a. On Jewish refusal to conform, see Est 3:8b.

b. The figure of Achior the Ammonite seems to be modelled on Ahikar the virtuous non-Yahwist sage, see Tb 1:21i. Into his mouth the author puts a summary of the history of Israel, conceived of in terms of the acts of God, a favourite OT theme, see especially Ps 78; 105; 106; see Ws 10seq; Ezk 16,20 and in NT Ac 7; cf. the episode of Balaam the non-Yahwist soothsayer, Nb 22–24. This prepares the way for the discourse of Judith 11:5–19.

c. Persian expression, see Ezr 5:11seq; 6:9seq. and the Elephantine papyri, which, in the Bible, is often put into the mouth of a non-Jew to designate the God of Israel, see Dn 2:18d.

d. The site of the miraculous exodus from Egypt is not called 'the Red Sea' in any ancient text; normally it is called 'the Sea of Reeds', or merely 'the Sea', see Ex 13:18g.

e. Against Achior's religious interpretation of history they urge the human argument, brute force. The entire book demonstrates Achior's contention, which Judith develops in 11:10b.

However, they managed to take cover at the foot of the slope, where they bound 13 9 Achior and left him lying at the bottom of the mountain and returned to their master.

The Israelites then came down from their town, stopped by him, unbound him 14 10 and took him to Bethulia, where they brought him before the chief men of the town, ·who at that time were Uzziah son of Micah of the tribe of Simeon, [c] Chabris 15 11 son of Gothoniel and Charmis son of Melchiel. ·These summoned all the elders of 16 the town. The young men and the women also hurried to the assembly. Achior was made to stand with all the people surrounding him, and Uzziah questioned him about what had happened. ·He answered by telling them what had been said at 17 12 Holofernes' council, and what he himself had said in the presence of the Assyrian leaders, and how Holofernes had bragged of what he would do to the House of Israel. ·At this the people fell to the ground and worshipped God. ·'Lord God of 18, 19 14, 15
heaven,' they cried, 'take notice of their arrogance and have pity on the humiliation of our race. Look kindly today on those who are consecrated to you.' [d] ·They then 20 16 spoke reassuringly to Achior and praised him warmly. ·After the assembly Uzziah 21 19 took him home and gave a banquet for the elders; all that night they called on the God of Israel for help.

II: THE SIEGE OF BETHULIA

The campaign against Israel

7 The following day Holofernes issued orders to his whole army and to the whole 1 host of auxiliaries who had joined him, to break camp and march on Bethulia, to occupy the mountain passes and so open the campaign against the Israelites.
The troops broke camp that same day. The actual fighting force numbered one 2 hundred and twenty thousand [a] infantry and twelve thousand cavalry, not to mention the baggage train with the vast number of men on foot concerned with that. ·They penetrated the valley in the neighbourhood of Bethulia, near the 3 spring, and deployed on a wide front from Dothan to Balbaim and, in depth, from Bethulia to Cyamon, which faces Esdraelon. ·When the Israelites saw this horde, 4
they were all appalled and said to each other, 'Now they will lick the whole country clean. Not even the loftiest peaks, the gorges or the hills will be able to stand the 1 M 12:28–29 weight of them.' ·Each man snatched up his arms; they lit beacons on their towers 5 and spent the whole night on watch.

On the second day Holofernes deployed his entire cavalry in sight of the Israel- 6 ites in Bethulia. ·He reconnoitred the slopes leading up to the town, located the 7 6 water-points, seized them and posted pickets over them and returned to the main body. ·The chieftains of the sons of Esau, all the leaders of the Moabites [b] and the 8 8 generals of the coastal district then came to him and said, ·'If our master will be 9 pleased to listen to us, his forces will not sustain a single wound. ·These Israelites 10 1 K 20:23,28 Ps 68:14,16 do not rely so much on their spears as on the height of the mountains where they live. And admittedly it is not at all easy to scale these heights of theirs.

'This being the case, master, avoid engaging them in a pitched battle and then 11
you will not lose a single man. ·Stay in camp, keep all your troops there too, while 12 9 your servants seize the spring which rises at the foot of the mountain, ·since that is 13 what provides the population of Bethulia with their water supply. Thirst will then force them to surrender their town. Meanwhile, we and our men will climb the nearest mountain tops and form advance posts there to prevent anyone from leaving the town. ·Hunger will waste them, with their wives and children, and 14 before the sword can reach them they will already be lying in the streets outside their houses. ·And you will make them pay dearly for their defiance and their 15 refusal to meet you peaceably.'

Their words pleased Holofernes as well as all his officers, and he decided to do 16 10 as they suggested. ·Accordingly, a troop of Moabites [c] moved forward with a 17 further five thousand Assyrians. They penetrated the valley and seized the Israel-18 ites' waterpoints and springs. ·Meanwhile the Edomites and Ammonites went and took up positions in the highlands opposite Dothan, sending some of their men to the south-east opposite Egrebel near Chous on the Wadi Mochmur. The rest of the Assyrian army took up positions in the plain, covering every inch of the ground; their tents and equipment made an immense encampment, so vast were their numbers.

19 The Israelites called on the Lord their God, dispirited because the enemy had 11 20 surrounded them and cut all line of retreat. ·For thirty-four days the Assyrian army, infantry, chariots, cavalrymen, had them surrounded. Every water-jar the 21 inhabitants of Bethulia had was empty, ·their storage-wells were drying up; on no
22 day could a man drink his fill, since their water was rationed. ·Their little children pined away, the women and young men grew weak with thirst; they collapsed in the streets and gateways of the town; they had no strength left.

12 23 Young men, women, children, the whole people thronged clamouring round Uzziah and the chief men of the town, shouting in the presence of the assembled 13 24 elders, ·'May God be judge between you and us! For you have done us great harm, 25 by not suing for peace with the Assyrians. ·And now there is no one to help us.
14 God has delivered us into their hands to be prostrated before them in thirst and 15 26 utter helplessness. ·Call them in at once; hand the whole town over to be sacked by 16 27 Holofernes' men and all his army. ·After all, we should be much better off as their booty than we are now; no doubt we shall be enslaved, but at least we shall be alive and not see our little ones dying before our eyes or our wives and children
17 28 perishing. ·By heaven and earth and by our God, the Lord of our fathers, who is punishing us for our sins and the sins of our ancestors, we implore you to take this 18 29 course[d] now, today.' ·Bitter lamentations rose from the whole assembly, and they all cried loudly to the Lord God.

23 30 Then Uzziah spoke to them, 'Take heart, brothers! Let us hold out five days 24 more. By then the Lord our God will take pity on us, for he will not desert us
25 31 altogether. ·At the end of this time, if no help is forthcoming, I shall do as you 32 have said.' ·With that he dismissed the people to their various quarters. The men went to man the walls and towers of the town, sending the women and children home. The town was full of despondency.

III: JUDITH

Description of Judith

1 8 Judith[a] was informed at the time of what had happened. She was the daughter of Merari son of Ox, son of Joseph, son of Oziel, son of Elkiah, son of Ananias, son of Gideon, son of Raphaim, son of Ahitub, son of Elijah, son of Hilkiah, son
2 of Eliab, son of Nathanael, son of Salamiel, son of Sarasadai, son of Israel.[b] ·Her husband Manasseh, of her own tribe and family, had died at the time of the barley
3 harvest. ·He was supervising the men as they bound up the sheaves in the field when he caught sunstroke and had to take to his bed. He died in Bethulia, his home

c. The author of the book seems to be particularly interested in the tribe of Simeon which plays so inconspicuous a part in Israelite history. The name of Uzziah recalls that of Uzziel, 1 Ch 4:42. In 9:2–4 Judith rehabilitates the patriarch censured in Gn 34:30 and 49:5–7.

d. i.e. the whole nation of Israel, by virtue of the covenant.

7 a. '120 000' with Vulg., cf. 2:15; '170 000' Gk.

b. The Edomites ('sons of Esau') and Moabites are traditional enemies of Israel.

c. 'Moabites' Vet. Lat. and Syr.; 'Ammonites' Text. rec.

d. Following Vet. Lat. and Syr.; Gk adds a negative, but this is no more than a literal translation of the Hebrew formula for oaths, the sense of which, however, is positive. • Punishment for individual faults here involves collective punishment for the nation, in accordance with Israel's ancient conviction that the guilt and punishment of one meant the guilt and punishment of all.

8 a. The name of Judith (see Gn 26:34) seems to have been chosen by the author for its meaning 'the Jewess', Judith, whose action rivals that of Jael, Jg 4:–17–22, is the model of a true daughter of Israel. In her song of triumph. 16:2,4, etc., the voice is that of the whole nation personified in her.

b. This genealogy omits the name of Simeon (found in certain MSS and versions), see 9:2. But v. 2 presupposes some tribal name.

town, and was buried with his ancestors in the field that lies between Dothan and Balamon. ·As a widow, Judith stayed inside her home for three years and four 4 Jg 3:20 months. ·She had had an upper room built for herself on the roof. She wore 5
2 K 4:10 sackcloth next to the skin and dressed in widow's weeds. ·She fasted every day of 6 her widowhood except for the Sabbath eve, the Sabbath itself, the eve of New Moon, the feast of New Moon and the joyful festivals of the House of Israel. ·Now 7 she was very beautiful, charming to see. Her husband Manasseh had left her gold and silver, menservants and maidservants, herds and land; and she lived among all her possessions ·without anyone finding a word to say against her, so devoutly did 8 she fear God.

Judith and the elders

Hearing how the water shortage had demoralised the people and how they had 9 complained bitterly to the headman of the town, and being also told what Uzziah had said to them and how he had given them his oath to surrender the town to the Assyrians in five days' time, ·Judith immediately sent the serving-woman who 10 ran her household to summon Chabris and Charmis, two elders of the town. When these came in she said: 11

'Listen to me, leaders of the people of Bethulia. You were wrong to speak to the people as you did today and to bind yourself by oath, in defiance of God, to surrender the town to our enemies if the Lord did not come to your help within a Jb 38:2;40: 2seq.;7seq.;42:3 set number of days. ·Who are you, to put God to the test today, you, of all people, 12 to set yourselves above him? ·You put the Lord Almighty to the test! You do not 13 Pr 14:10 1 Co 2:11 ·Ps 139:16–17 Rm 11:33–34 understand anything, and never will. ·If you cannot sound the depths of the human 14 heart or unravel the arguments of the human mind, how can you fathom the God who made all things, or sound his mind or unravel his purposes? No, brothers, do not provoke the anger of the Lord our God. ·Although it may not be his will to 15 help us within the next five days, he has the power to protect us for as many days as he pleases, just as he has the power to destroy us before our enemies. ·But you 16 have no right to demand guarantees where the designs of the Lord our God are concerned. For God is not to be threatened as a human being is, nor is he, like a 15 mere human, to be cajoled. ·Rather, as we wait patiently for him to save, let us 17 plead with him to help us. He will hear our voice if such is his good pleasure. [c]

5:20–21;11:10 'And indeed of recent times and still today there is not one tribe of ours, or 18 family, or village, or town that has worshipped gods made by human hand, as once
Ps 78:56seq.; 106:13seq. was done, ·which was the reason why our ancestors were delivered over to sword 19
Jr 7:17–20; 14:7–15:9 and notes Ezk 16:15–58 and sack, and perished in misery at the hands of our enemies. ·We for our part 20 acknowledge no other God but him; and so we may hope he will not look on us disdainfully or desert our nation. [d]

'If indeed they capture us, as you expect, then all Judaea will be captured too, 21 and our holy places plundered, and we shall answer with our blood for their profanation. ·The slaughter of our brothers, the captivity of our country, the 22
unpeopling of our heritage, will recoil on our own heads among the nations whose slaves we shall become, and our new masters will look down on us as an outrage and a disgrace; ·for our surrender will not reinstate us in their favour; no, the Lord 23
our God will make it a thing to be ashamed of. ·So now, brothers, let us set an 24 example to our brothers, since their lives depend on us, and the sanctuary—Temple and altar—rests on us.

'All this being so, let us rather give thanks to the Lord our God who, as he tested 25 21
Gn 22:1–19;28; 5:29:22–30;31 our ancestors, is now testing us.' [e] ·Remember how he treated Abraham, all the 26 22
ordeals of Isaac, all that happened to Jacob in Syrian Mesopotamia while he kept the sheep of Laban, his mother's brother. ·For as these ordeals were intended by 27
him to search their hearts, so now this is not vengeance that God is exacting on us, Dt 4:7 but a warning inflicted by the Lord on those who are near his heart.'

Uzziah replied, 'Everything you have just said comes from an honest heart and 28
no one will contradict a word of it. ·Not that today is the first time your wisdom has 29

been displayed; from your earliest years all the people have known how shrewd 28 30 you are and of how sound a heart. ·But, parched with thirst, the people forced us
29 31 to act as we had promised them and to bind ourselves by an inviolable oath. ·You are a devout woman; pray to the Lord, then, to send us a downpour to fill our storage-wells, so that our faintness may pass.'
30 32 Judith replied, 'Listen to me, I intend to do something, the memory of which 32 33 will be handed down to the children of our race from age to age. ·Tonight you must be at the gate of the town. I shall make my way out with my attendant. Before the time fixed by you for surrendering the town to our enemies, the Lord will make use 33 34 of me to rescue Israel. ·You must not ask what I intend to do; I shall not tell you 34 35 until I have done it.' ·Uzziah and the chief men said, 'Go in peace. May the Lord 36 show you a way to take revenge on our enemies.' ·And leaving the upper room they went back to their posts.

Judith's prayer

1 9 Judith threw herself face to the ground, scattered ashes on her head, undressed as far as the sackcloth she was wearing and cried loudly to the Lord. At the same time in Jerusalem the evening incense was being offered in the Temple of God. [a] Judith said: Ex 30:7,8 Ps 141:2

2 Lord, God of my ancestor Simeon, 6:15c Gn 34
you armed him with a sword to take vengeance on the foreigners who had undone a virgin's belt [b] to her shame, laid bare her thigh to her confusion,
violated her womb to her dishonour,
since, though you said, 'This must not be,' they did it.
3 For this you handed their leaders over to slaughter,
and their bed, defiled by their treachery,
was itself betrayed in blood.
You struck the slaves with the chieftains
and the chieftains with their retainers. [c] 4 You left their wives to be carried off, their daughters to be taken captive,
and their spoils to be shared out
among the sons you loved,
who had been so zealous for you,
had loathed the stain put on their blood
and called on you for help.

O God, my God,
now hear this widow too;
5 for you have made the past, and what is happening now, and what will follow. Is 44:7
What is, what will be, you have planned;
what has been, you designed. Ps 115:3;135:6 6 Your purposes stood forward;
'See, here we are!' they said. Jb 38:35 Is 46:9–13 Ba 3:35

c. Like Job, the elders of Bethulia were wrong to question God's intentions, Jb 38:2 etc; like him they should submit in silence. But the author of Jdt teaches a more filial trust than Jb, and his conception of the power of prayer is impressive.

d. This conviction, already stated by Achior, will be repeated by Judith in the presence of Holofernes. Judith joins her compatriots in a national examination of conscience, which acquits them of the idolatry long since denounced by the prophets but not rooted out until the period of the second Temple.

e. The lesson of patriarchal history (which the author of Jb had not detected); the suffering of the virtuous is not punishment but trial.

9 a. The author frequently refers to Jerusalem, the Temple, the liturgy, the high priest 4:2,3, 6–8; 5:19; 8:21–24; 9:8,13; 15:8; 16:18.

b. 'belt' conj.; 'womb' Gk; The expression 'undo the belt' means 'get married', here: 'have sexual relations'.

c. Line corrected in accordance with 9:10; see Ws 18:11; 'and the princes on their thrones' Gk.

IV: JUDITH AND HOLOFERNES

Judith goes to the camp of Holofernes

10 Thus Judith called on the God of Israel. When she had finished praying, •she 1, 2 got up from the floor, summoned her maid and went down into the rooms 8:6 which she used on Sabbath days and festivals. •There she removed the sackcloth 3

she was wearing and taking off her widow's dress, she washed all over, anointed herself plentifully with perfumes, dressed her hair, wrapped a turban round it and put on the robe of joy she used to wear when her husband Manasseh was alive.
4 She put sandals on her feet, put on her necklaces, bracelets, rings, earrings and all her jewellery, and made herself beautiful enough to beguile the eye of any man 9:13+
5 who saw her. ·Then she handed her maid a skin of wine and a flask of oil, filled a bag with barley girdle-cakes, cakes of dried fruit and pure loaves,[a] and wrapping Lv 17:10–14 Est 4:17ᵏ
6 all these provisions up gave them to her as well. ·They then went out, making for the town gate of Bethulia. There they found Uzziah waiting with the two elders of 7 the town, Chabris and Charmis. ·When they saw Judith, her face so changed and her clothes so different, they were lost in admiration of her beauty. They said to her:

8 May the God of our ancestors keep you in his favour!
May he crown your designs with success to the glory of the children of Israel,
to the greater glory of Jerusalem!

9 Judith worshipped God, and then she said, 'Have the town gate opened for me so that I can go out and fulfil all the wishes you expressed to me.' They did as she 10 asked and gave orders to the young men to open the gate for her. ·This done, Judith went out accompanied by her maid, while the men of the town watched her all the way down the mountain and across the valley, until they lost sight of her.
11 As the women were making straight through the valley, an advance unit of 12 Assyrians intercepted them, ·and, seizing Judith, began to question her. 'Which side are you on? Where do you come from? Where are you going?' 'I am a daughter of the Hebrews,' she replied, 'and I am fleeing from them since they will soon be 13 your prey. ·I am on my way to see Holofernes, the general of your army, to give him trustworthy information.[b] I shall show him the road to take if he wants to 14 capture all the hill-country without losing one man or one life.' ·As the men listened to what she was saying, they stared in astonishment at the sight of such a 15 beautiful woman. ·'It will prove the saving of you,' they said to her, 'coming down to see our master of your own accord. You had better go to his tent; some of our 16 men will escort you and hand you over to him. ·Once you are in his presence do not be afraid. Tell him what you have just told us and you will be well treated.'
17 They then detailed a hundred of their men as escort for herself and her attendant, and these led them to the tent of Holofernes.
18 News of her coming had already spread through the tents, and there was a general stir in the camp. She was still outside the tent of Holofernes waiting to be 19 announced, when a crowd began forming round her. ·They were immediately
18 impressed by her beauty and impressed with the Israelites because of her. 'Who could despise a people who have women like this?' they kept saying. 'Better not leave one of them alive; let any go and they could twist the whole world round their fingers!'
20 The bodyguard and adjutants of Holofernes then came out and led Judith into 19 21 the tent. ·Holofernes was resting on his bed under a canopy of purple and gold 22 studded with emeralds and precious stones. ·The men announced her and he came out to the entrance to the tent, with silver torches[c] carried before him.

d. The presumption of the non-Yahwists vaunting their military superiority was always a matter of outrage for Israel, and a reason for relying on the help of God, see Is 30:15; 31 1–3; Hab 1:12–17.

e. Expressions characteristic of the religion of 'the afflicted', and of much OT piety, see Zp 2:3d.

f. Here and in 13:11 the Gk reads 'God, God', the phraseology of the Psalms edited by the Elohist, see Ps 45:7; 50:7.

10 a. Judith seems more scrupulous about legal purity than Esther, more exacting even than the Law itself, see 11:17; 12:6–9.

b. The protestations of truthfulness see 11:5, 10, ascribed to Judith, who is determined to deceive Holofernes, 11:12–19, are to be taken in the moral context of the patriarchal age see Gn 27:1–25; 34:13–29; 37:32–34, or of the wars of Yahweh in the days of the Judges (Jos 2:1–7; Jg 4:17–22), when the story is supposed to take place.

c. Holofernes' tent, see also 12:1; 13:1–3; 14:14–15, is apparently a richly decorated and spacious pavilion. The author allows his descriptive faculties free rein in depicting the camp of an army on campaign, though it is true they are the general-in-chief's headquarters.

When Judith confronted the general and his adjutant, the beauty of her face 23 astonished them all. She fell on her face and did homage to him, but his servants raised her from the ground.

The first meeting of Judith with Holofernes

11 'Courage, woman,' Holofernes said, 'do not be afraid. I have never hurt 1 anyone who chose to serve Nebuchadnezzar, king of the whole world.
Even now, if your nation of mountain dwellers had not insulted me, I would not 2 have raised a spear against them. This was their fault, not mine. ·But tell me, why 3 have you fled from them and come to us? . . . Anyhow, this will prove the saving of you. Courage! You will live through this night, and many after. ·No one will hurt 4
you. On the contrary, you will be treated as well as any who serve my lord King Nebuchadnezzar.'

Judith said, 'Please listen favourably to what your slave has to say. Permit your 5 4
10:13b servant to speak in your presence, I shall speak no word of a lie to my lord tonight.[a]
You have only to follow your servant's advice and God will bring your work to a 6 successful conclusion; in what my lord undertakes he will not fail. ·Long life to 7 5 Nebuchadnezzar, king of the whole world, who has sent you to set every living soul to rights; may his power endure! Since, thanks to you, he is served not only by Jr 27:6 Ba 3:16–17 Dn 2:38 human beings, but through your compulsion the wild animals themselves, the cattle, and the birds of the air are to live in the service of Nebuchadnezzar and his whole House.

'We have indeed heard of your genius and adroitness of mind. It is known 8 6 everywhere in the world that throughout the empire you have no rival for ability, wealth of experience and brilliance in waging war. ·We have also heard what 9 7 Achior said in his speech to your council. The men of Bethulia having spared him, he has told them everything that he said to you. ·Now, master and lord, do not 10 disregard what he said; keep it in your mind, since it is true;[b] our nation will not be 8 punished, the sword will indeed have no power over them, unless they sin against their God. ·But as it is, my lord need expect no repulse or setback, since death is 11 9 about to fall on their heads, for sin has gained a hold over them, provoking the anger of their God each time that they commit it. ·As they are short of food and 12 10 their water is giving out, they have resolved to fall back on their cattle and decided 11 to make use of all the things that God has, by his laws, forbidden them to eat. ·Not 13 12 Dt 14:22 only have they made up their minds to eat the first-fruits of corn and the tithes of wine and oil, though these have been consecrated by them and set apart for the priests who serve in Jerusalem in the presence of our God, and may not lawfully even be handled by ordinary people,[c] ·but they have sent men to Jerusalem— 14 where the inhabitants are doing much the same—to bring them back authorisation from the Council of Elders. ·Now this will be the outcome: when the permission 15 arrives and they act on it, that very day they will be delivered over to you for destruction.

'When I, your servant, came to know all this, I fled from them. God has sent me 16 13 11:5a to do things with you at which the world will be astonished when it hears. ·Your 17 14 servant is a devout woman; she honours the God of heaven day and night. I therefore propose, my lord, to stay with you. I, your servant, shall go out every 15 night into the valley and pray to God to let me know when they have committed their sin. ·I shall then come and tell you, so that you can march out with your whole 18
army; and none of them will be able to resist you. ·I shall be your guide right across 19 Judaea until you reach Jerusalem; there I shall enthrone you in the very middle of the city. And then you can round them up like shepherd-less sheep, with never a dog daring to bark at you. Foreknowledge tells me this; this has been foretold to 16 me and I have been sent to reveal it to you.' 17

Her words pleased Holofernes, and all his adjutants. Full of admiration at her 20 18 wisdom they exclaimed, ·'There is no woman like her from one end of the earth to 21 19
the other, so lovely of face and so wise of speech!' ·Holofernes said, 'God has done 22 20 well to send you ahead of the others. Strength will be ours, and ruin theirs who 21 23 have insulted my lord. ·As for you, you are as beautiful as you are eloquent; if you do as you have promised, your God shall be my God, and you yourself shall make your home in the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar and be famous throughout the world.'

1 12 With that he had her brought in to where his silver dinner service was already laid, and had his own food served to her and his own wine poured 2 out for her. ·But Judith said, 'I would rather not eat this, in case I incur some fault. 10:5a
3 What I have brought will be enough for me.' ·Suppose your provisions run out,' Est 4:17ˣ Dn 1:8
Holofernes asked, 'how could we get more of the same sort? We have no one 4 belonging to your race here.' ·May your soul live, my lord,' Judith answered, 'the Lord will have used me to accomplish his plan, before your servant has finished
5 these provisions.' ·Holofernes' adjutants then took her to a tent where she slept 6 until midnight. A little before the morning watch, she got up. ·She had already sent this request to Holofernes, 'Let my lord kindly give orders for your servant to 7 be allowed to go out and pray,' ·and Holofernes had ordered his guards not to 7 prevent her. She stayed in the camp for three days; she went out each night to the 8 8 valley of Bethulia and washed at the spring where the picket had been posted. ·As she went she prayed to the Lord God of Israel to guide her in her plan to relieve the 9 children of her people. ·Having purified herself, she would return and stay in her tent until her meal was brought her in the evening.

Judith at the banquet of Holofernes

10 On the fourth day Holofernes gave a banquet, inviting only his own staff and none 11 of the other officers. ·He said to Bagoas, the eunuch in charge of his personal affairs, 'Go and persuade that Hebrew woman you are looking after to come and 11 12 join us and eat and drink in our company. ·We shall be disgraced if we let a woman like this go without seducing her. [a] If we do not seduce her, everyone will laugh at 12 13 us!' ·Bagoas then left Holofernes and went to see Judith. 'Would this young and lovely woman condescend to come to my lord?' he asked. 'She will occupy the seat of honour opposite him, drink the joyful wine with us and be treated today like one 13, 14 14 of the Assyrian ladies who stand in the palace of Nebuchadnezzar.' ·'Who am I', Judith replied, 'to resist my lord? I shall not hesitate to do whatever he wishes, and doing this will be my joy to my dying day.'

15 15 So she got up and put on her dress and all her feminine adornments. Her maid preceded her, and on the floor in front of Holofernes spread the fleece which Bagoas had given Judith for her daily use to lie on as she ate. [b]

16 16 Judith came in and took her place. The heart of Holofernes was ravished at the sight; his very soul was stirred. He was seized with a violent desire to sleep with her; and indeed since the first day he saw her, he had been waiting for an 17 17 opportunity to seduce her. ·'Drink then!' Holofernes said, 'Enjoy yourself,with 18 us!' ·'I am delighted to do so, my lord, for since my birth I have never felt my life 19 more worthwhile than today.' ·She took what her maid had prepared, and ate and 20 drank facing him. ·Holofernes was so enchanted with her that he drank far more wine than he had drunk on any other day in his life.

1 13 It grew late and his staff hurried away. Bagoas closed the tent from the outside, having shown out those who still lingered in his lord's presence.
2. 3. 4 2 They went to their beds wearied with too much drinking, ·and Judith was left alone in the tent with Holofernes who had collapsed wine-sodden on his bed.
5 3 Judith then told her maid to stay just outside the bedroom and wait for her to come

11 a. Judith's speech is ingeniously ambiguous. The 'work' and the 'lord' mentioned in v. 6 mean one thing for her, another for Holofernes. Same ambiguity in v. 16. In v. 8 Judith praises Holofernes' perspicacity at the very moment she hoodwinks him.

b. Another ambiguity; Achior's words had been true, but Judith's prophecy of what the Jews will do is not.

c. Here again the author exaggerates the demands of the Law, possibly following a Pharisaic tradition.

12 a. lit. 'without enjoying her company', euphemism, see Dn 13:54,58.

b. As in Esther, the fate of Israel is to be settled in the course of a banquet.

out, as she did every morning. She had let it be understood she would be going out to her prayers and had also spoken of her intention to Bagoas.

By now everyone had left Holofernes, and no one, either important or unimportant, was left in the bedroom. Standing beside the bed, Judith murmured to herself:

Lord God, to whom all strength belongs, prosper what my hands are now to do for the greater glory of Jerusalem;
now is the time to recover your heritage and to further my plans
to crush the enemies arrayed against us.

With that she went up to the bedpost by Holofernes' head and took down his scimitar; coming closer to the bed she caught him by the hair and said, 'Make me
Jg 4:21 strong today, Lord God of Israel!' Twice she struck at his neck with all her might, and cut off his head. She then rolled his body off the bed and pulled down the canopy from the bedposts. After which, she went out and gave the head of Holofernes to her maid who put it in her food bag. The two then left the camp together, as they always did when they went to pray. Once they were out of the camp, they skirted the ravine, climbed the slope to Bethulia and made for the gates.

Judith brings the head of Holofernes to Bethulia

From a distance, Judith shouted to the guards on the gates, 'Open the gate! Open!
Ex 15:1–2 Ps 48:7–11; 68;98:1–3 For the Lord our God is with us still, displaying his strength in Israel and his might against our enemies, as he has done today!' Hearing her voice, the townsmen hurried down to the town gate and summoned the elders. Everyone, great and small, came running down, since her arrival was unexpected. They threw the gate open, welcomed the women, lit a fire to see by and crowded round them. Then Judith raised her voice and said, 'Praise God! Praise him! Praise the God who has not withdrawn his mercy from the House of Israel, but has shattered our enemies by my hand tonight!' She pulled the head out of the bag and held it for them to see. 'This is the head of Holofernes, general-in-chief of the Assyrian army; here is the canopy under which he lay drunk! The Lord has struck him down by the hand of a woman! Glory to the Lord who has protected me in the course I took! My face seduced him, only to his own undoing; he committed no sin with me to shame me or disgrace me.' [a]

Overcome with emotion, the people all prostrated themselves and worshipped God, exclaiming with one voice, 'Blessings on you, our God, for confounding your people's enemies today!' Uzziah then said to Judith:

May you be blessed, my daughter, by God Most High,
beyond all women on earth;
Jg 5:24 ↗Lk 1:28,42 and blessed be the Lord God, Creator of heaven and earth,
who guided you to cut off the head of the leader of our enemies!
The trust which you have shown will not pass from human hearts, as they commemorate
the power of God for evermore.
God grant you may be always held in honour and rewarded with blessings, since you did not consider your own life
when our nation was brought to its knees,
but warded off our ruin,
walking in the right path before our God.

26 And the people all said, 'Amen! Amen!'

V: VICTORY

The Jews attack the Assyrian camp

1 14 Judith said, 'Listen to me, brothers. Take this head and hang it on your 2 battlements. •When morning comes and the sun is up, let every man take his arms and every able-bodied man leave the town. Appoint a leader for them, as if you meant to march down to the plain against the Assyrian advanced post. But 3 you must not do this. •The Assyrians will gather up their equipment, make for their 4 camp and wake up their commanders; they in turn will rush to the tent of Holofernes and not be able to find him. They will then be seized with panic and flee at 5 4 your advance. •All you and the others who live in the territory of Israel will have to do is to give chase and slaughter them as they retreat.
5 'But before you do this, call me Achior the Ammonite, for him to see and identify the man who held the House of Israel in contempt, the man who sent him 13:27,28 6 to us as someone already doomed to die.' •So they had Achior brought from 29 Uzziah's house. No sooner had he arrived and seen the head of Holofernes held by 30 7 a member of the people's assembly than he fell on his face in a faint. •They lifted him up. He then threw himself at Judith's feet and, prostrate before her, exclaimed:

31 May you be blessed in all the tents of Judah and in every nation;
those who hear your name
will be seized with dread!

8 'Now tell me everything that you have done in these past few days.' And surrounded by the people, Judith told him everything she had done from the day 9 she left Bethulia to the moment when she was speaking. •When she came to the 10 end, the people cheered at the top of their voices until the town echoed. •Achior, recognising all that the God of Israel had done, believed ardently in him and, accepting circumcision, was permanently[a] incorporated into the House of Israel. Dt 23:4–5 14:7 11 At daybreak they hung the head of Holofernes on the ramparts. Every man took 8 12 his arms and they all went out in groups to the slopes of the mountain. •Seeing this, the Assyrians sent word to their leaders, who in turn reported to the generals, the 9,11 13 captains of thousands and all the other officers; •and these in their turn reported to 12 the tent of Holofernes. 'Rouse our master,' they said to his major-domo, 'these slaves have dared to march down on us to attack—and to be wiped out to a man!'
13 14 Bagoas went inside and struck the curtain dividing the tent, thinking that Holo-14 15 fernes was sleeping with Judith. •But as no one seemed to hear, he drew the curtain and went into the bedroom, to find him thrown down dead on the threshold, with 16 his head cut off. •He gave a great shout, wept, sobbed, shrieked and rent his 15 17 clothes. •He then went into the tent which Judith had occupied and could not find 16 18 her either. Then, rushing out to the men, he shouted, •'The slaves have rebelled!
A single Hebrew woman has brought shame on the House of Nebuchadnezzar. 13:15;16:5–9 Holofernes is lying dead on the ground, without his head!' Jg 9:54 17, 18 19 When they heard this, the leaders of the Assyrian army tore their tunics in consternation, and the camp rang with their wild cries and their shouting.
1 15 When the men who were still in their tents heard the news they were 2 appalled. •Panic-stricken and trembling, no two of them could keep

The Lord has not allowed his handmaid to be defiled, but has brought me back to you unstained by sin, rejoicing at his victory, at my escape, and at your deliverance. [21] Glorify him, all of you, since he is good, since his mercy is everlasting.' see Ps 136:1.

together, the rout was complete, with one accord they fled along every track across the plain or through the mountains. •The men who had been bivouacking in the 3 mountains round Bethulia were fleeing too. Then all the Israelite warriors charged down on them. •Uzziah sent messengers to Betomasthaim, Bebai, Choba, Kola, 4 throughout the whole territory of Israel, to inform them of what had happened and to urge them all to hurl themselves on the enemy and annihilate them. •As soon as 5 the Israelites heard the news, they fell on them as one man and massacred them all the way to Choba. The men of Jerusalem and the entire mountain country[a] also rallied to them, once they had been informed of the events in the enemy camp. Then the men of Gilead and Galilee attacked them on the flank and struck at them fiercely till they neared Damascus and its territory. •All the other inhabitants of 6 7
Est 9:5,16 Bethulia fell on the Assyrian camp and looted it to their great profit. •The Israelites 7 returning from the slaughter seized what was left. The hamlets and villages of the mountain country and the plain also captured a great deal of booty, since there were vast stores of it.

Thanksgiving

Joakim the high priest and the entire Council of Elders of Israel, who were in 8 9
Jerusalem, came to gaze on the benefits that the Lord had lavished on Israel and to see Judith and congratulate her. •On coming to her house, they blessed her with 9 10
one accord, saying:

You are the glory of Jerusalem!
You are the great pride of Israel!
You are the highest honour of our race!

By doing all this with your own hand 10 11
you have deserved well of Israel,
and God has approved what you have done.
May you be blessed by the Lord Almighty
in all the days to come!

And the people all said, 'Amen!' 12

The people looted the camp for thirty days. They gave Judith the tent of 11 13, 14 Holofernes, all his silver plate, his divans, his drinking bowls and all his furniture. She took this, loaded her mule, harnessed her carts and heaped the things into Ex 15:20 Jg 11:34 1 S:18:6 Jr 31:4,13 them. •All the women of Israel, hurrying to see her, formed choirs of dancers in 12 her honour. Judith took wands of vine-leaves in her hand and distributed them to the women who accompanied her;[b] •she and her companions put on wreaths of 13 olive. Then she took her place at the head of the procession and led the women as they danced. All the men of Israel, armed and garlanded, followed them, singing hymns. •With all Israel round her, Judith broke into this song of thanksgiving and 14 16:1
the whole people sang this hymn:[c]

Ps 81:1–3; 135: 1–3; 149:1–3 16 Break into song for my God, to the tambourine, 1

extol his name, invoke it!

to deliver me from the hands of my oppressors.

Assyria came down from the mountains of the north, 3 came with tens of thousands of his army.
Their multitude blocked the ravines,
their horses covered the hills.

8 6 For their hero did not fall at the young men's hands,
it was not the sons of Titans struck him down,
no proud giants made that attack,
but Judith, the daughter of Merari,
who disarmed him with the beauty of her face.
9 7 She laid aside her widow's dress
to raise up those who were oppressed in Israel; 10 she anointed her face with perfume,

put on a linen gown to seduce him.

the Medes were daunted by her daring.
11 These were struck with fear when my lowly ones raised the war cry, these were seized with terror when my weak ones shouted,
and when they raised their voices these gave ground.

b. Processions of this sort are well enough known (see marginal references), but the wearing of olive chaplets, v. 13, is a Greek custom. Similarly, such wands—branches or sticks decorated with greenery—occur only once elsewhere in the Bible, 2 M 10:7. The Jews were, however, in the habit of waving branches in times of rejoicing, Lv 23:40, see Jn 12:13, Rv 7:9.

1 a. The Church has accepted those passages in the Gk version not contained in the Hebr. text; they are printed here in italics with the LXX verse numbering. The corresponding v. numbers in Vulg. are given in small type.

b. Ahasuerus (Hebr. Ahashwerosh) is a Latin-English transcription of the Hebrew form of the Persian name Kshajarsha, in Gk Xerxes, see Ezr 4:6. Here the Gk has Artaxerxes, confusing Ahasuerus with his successors.

c. The Gk text, alone in recording this dream, outlines the story in advance in enigmatic and apocalyptic terms (the key to it is found in 10:3[a-k]), thus emphasising the part played by God in subsequent events.

d. A city lying to the east of Babylon, formerly the capital of Elam, winter residence of the Persian kings.

e. The author makes free with chronology: Mordecai's genealogy, 2:5, consists of three names to cover five or six centuries. He himself is represented as being a courtier of Ahasuerus (about 480) though exiled in the reign of Jeconiah (= Jehoiakim, about 598).

f. Although the proper names vary according to the texts, they have been regularised for this translation.

I: AHASUERUS AND VASHTI

Ahasuerus' banquet

1 It was in the days of Ahasuerus, the Ahasuerus whose empire stretched from 1
India to Ethiopia and comprised one hundred and twenty-seven provinces.
In those days, when King Ahasuerus was sitting on his royal throne in the citadel 2 of Susa, ·in the third year of his reign, he gave a banquet at his court for all his 3 officers-of-state and ministers, Persian and Median army-commanders,[g] nobles and provincial governors. ·Thus he displayed the riches and splendour of his 4 empire and the pomp and glory of his majesty; the festivities went on for a long time, a hundred and eighty days.

When this period was over, for seven days the king gave a banquet for all the 5 people living in the citadel of Susa, to high and low alike, on the esplanade in the gardens of the royal palace. ·There were white and violet hangings fastened with 6 cords of fine linen and purple thread to silver rings on marble columns, couches of gold and silver on a pavement of porphyry, marble, mother-of-pearl and precious stones. ·For drinking there were golden cups of various design and plenty of wine 7 provided by the king with royal liberality. ·The royal edict did not, however, make 8 drinking obligatory, the king having instructed the officials of his household to treat each guest according to the guest's own wishes.

Disgrace of Queen Vashti

Queen Vashti,[h] for her part, gave a banquet for the women in the royal palace of 9
Dn 5:1–4 King Ahasuerus. ·On the seventh day, when the king was merry with wine, he 10 commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar and Carkas, the seven eunuchs in attendance on the person of King Ahasuerus, ·to bring Queen 11 Vashti before the king, crowned with her royal diadem, in order to display her beauty to the people and the officers-of-state, since she was very beautiful. ·But 12 Queen Vashti refused to come at the king's command delivered by the eunuchs.
The king was very angry at this and his rage grew hot. ·Addressing himself to the 13 wise men who were versed in the law[i]—it being the practice to refer matters affecting the king to expert lawyers and jurists—·he summoned Carshena, Shethar, 14 Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena and Memucan, seven Persian and Median officers-of-state who had privileged access to the royal presence[j] and occupied the leading positions in the kingdom. ·'According to law,' he said, 'what is to be done 15 to Queen Vashti for not obeying the command of King Ahasuerus delivered by the eunuchs?' ·In the presence of the king and the officers-of-state, Memucan replied, 16
'Queen Vashti has wronged not only the king but also all the officers-of-state and all the peoples inhabiting the provinces of King Ahasuerus. ·The queen's conduct 17 will soon become known to all the women, who will adopt a contemptuous attitude towards their own husbands. They will say, "King Ahasuerus himself commanded Queen Vashti to appear before him and she did not come." ·Before the day is out, 18 the wives of the Persian and Median officers-of-state will be telling every one of the king's officers-of-state what they have heard about the queen's behaviour; and that will mean contempt and anger all round. · If it is the king's pleasure, let him issue 19 a royal edict, to be irrevocably incorporated into the laws of the Persians and Medes,[k] to the effect that Vashti is never to appear again before King Ahasuerus,
3:12;8:5,8 and let the king confer her royal dignity on a worthier woman. ·Let this edict issued 20
Dn 6:8,10, 13,16 by the king be proclaimed throughout his empire—which is great—and all the women will henceforth bow to the authority of their husbands, both high and low alike.'

This speech pleased the king and the officers-of-state, and the king did as 21
Memucan advised. ·He sent letters to all the provinces of the kingdom, to each 22
Dn 3:4;6:26 province in its own script and to each nation in its own language, ensuring that every husband should be master in his own house.[l]

II: MORDECAI AND ESTHER

Esther becomes queen

2 Some time after this, when the king's wrath had subsided, Ahasuerus remembered Vashti, how she had behaved, and the measures taken against her. [a] ·The king's gentlemen-in-waiting said, 'A search should be made on the king's behalf for beautiful young virgins, ·and the king appoint commissioners throughout the provinces of his realm to bring all these beautiful young virgins to the citadel of Susa, to the harem under the authority of Hegai the king's eunuch, custodian of the women. Here he will give them whatever they need for enhancing their beauty, ·and the girl who pleases the king can take Vashti's place as queen.' This advice pleased the king and he acted on it.

Now in the citadel of Susa there lived a Jew called Mordecai son of Jair, son of 1:1[a-c]
Shimei, son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, ·who had been deported from Jerusalem among the captives taken away with Jeconiah king of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, ·and was now bringing up a certain Hadassah, otherwise called Esther, [b] his uncle's daughter, who had lost both father and mother; the girl had a good figure and a beautiful face, and on the death of her parents Mordecai had adopted her as his daughter. [c]

On the promulgation of the royal command and edict a great number of girls Dn 1:3–20 were brought to the citadel of Susa where they were entrusted to Hegai. Esther, too, was taken to the king's palace and entrusted to Hegai, the custodian of the women. ·The girl pleased him and won his favour. Not only did he quickly provide her with all she needed for her dressing room and her meals, but he gave her seven special maids from the king's household and transferred her and her maids to the best part of the harem. ·Esther had not divulged her race or parentage, since Mordecai had forbidden her to do so. [d] ·Mordecai walked up and down in front of the courtyard of the harem all day and every day, to learn how Esther was and how she was being treated.

Each girl had to appear in turn before King Ahasuerus after a delay of twelve 4:11 months fixed by the regulations for the women; this preparatory period was occupied as follows: six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with spices and lotions commonly used for feminine beauty treatment. ·When each girl went to the king, she was given whatever she wanted to take with her, since she then moved from the harem into the royal household. ·She went there in the evening, and the following morning returned to another harem entrusted to the care of Shaashgaz, the king's eunuch, custodian of the concubines. She did not go to the king any more, unless he was particularly pleased with her and had her summoned by name.

But when it was the turn of Esther the daughter of Abihail, whose nephew Mordecai had adopted her as his own daughter, to go into the king's presence, she did not ask for anything beyond what had been assigned her by Hegai, the king's eunuch, custodian of the women. Esther won the approval of all who saw her. She was brought to King Ahasuerus in his royal apartments in the tenth month,

g. 'army-commanders' conj.: 'the army' Hebr. • Banquets of this sort were given quite often, see Gn 40:20; 1 K 3:15; Dn 5:1; Mk 6:21.

h. Vashti, like Esther, is unknown to history.

i. 'law' conj.: 'times' Hebr.

j. i.e. in the king's confidence, see 2 K 25:19. • The practice of consulting the sages is also attested in Dn 2:2seq.; 5:7–12.

k. The theme of an irrevocable decree which is promptly revoked is common in the books of the Bible showing Persian influence; Jewish irony here, no doubt.

l. Hebr. adds: 'and speak the language of his own people', omitted by Gk.

2 a. The Hebr. implies that the king regrets his treatment of Vashti. The Gk and Rec. Luc. suggest that he has forgotten her.

b. The name Esther is probably of Babylonian origin (Ishtar) like Mordecai (Marduk), though compare Persian, stareh, 'star'. Hadassah is a Hebr. name ('myrtle').

c. Gk has at the end 'he had brought her up to be his wife'. Post-Christian Jewish tradition accepts this reading, and makes Esther the wife of Mordecai.

d. A situation reminiscent of Daniel and his three companions, Dn 1. But in Dn, the king knows the origin of the Hebrew youths and his favour is directly linked to their loyalty to the law.

which is called Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign; ·and the king liked Esther 17 better than any of the other women; none of the other girls found so much favour 4:17 u-y and approval with him. So he set the royal diadem on her head and proclaimed her queen instead of Vashti.

The king then gave a great banquet, Esther's banquet, for all his officers-of-state 18 and ministers, decreed a holiday for all the provinces and distributed largesse with royal prodigality.

Mordecai and Haman

2:14 When Esther, like the other girls, had been transferred to the second harem,[e] 19
she did not divulge her parentage or race, in obedience to the orders of Mordecai, 20 whose instructions she continued to follow as when she had been under his care.[f]
At this time Mordecai was attached to the Chancellery[g] and two malcontents, 21
Bigthan and Teresh, eunuchs in the king's service as Guards of the Threshold, plotted to assassinate King Ahasuerus. ·Mordecai came to hear of this and 22 informed Queen Esther, who in turn, on Mordecai's authority, told the king.
The matter was investigated and proved to be true. The two conspirators were 23 sent to the gallows, and the incident was recorded in the Annals, in the royal presence.

3 Shortly afterwards, King Ahasuerus singled out Haman son of Hammedatha, 1 a native of Agag,[a] for promotion. He raised him in rank, granting him precedence over all his colleagues, the other officers-of-state, ·and all the royal 2 officials employed at the Chancellery used to bow low and prostrate themselves 4:17 d-e whenever Haman appeared—such was the king's command. Mordecai refused either to bow or to prostrate himself.[b] ·'Why do you flout the royal command?' the 3 officials of the Chancellery asked Mordecai. ·Day after day they asked him this, 4 but he took no notice of them. In the end they reported the matter to Haman, to see whether Mordecai would persist in his attitude, since he had told them that he was a Jew. ·Haman could see for himself that Mordecai did not bow or prostrate 5 himself in his presence; he became furiously angry. ·And, on being told what race 6 Mordecai belonged to, he thought it beneath him merely to get rid of Mordecai, but made up his mind to wipe out all the members of Mordecai's race, the Jews, living in Ahasuerus' entire empire.

III: THE JEWS IN PERIL

The decree of extermination against the Jews

In the first month, that is the month of Nisan, of the twelfth year of King Ahasu- 7 9:24–26 erus, the pur[c] (that is, the lot) was cast in Haman's presence, to determine the day and the month. The lot falling on the twelfth month, which is Adar, ·[d] Haman said 8 3:13 d-e to King Ahasuerus, 'There is a certain unassimilated nation scattered among the Ws 2:14–15
Dn 3:8–12 other nations throughout the provinces of your realm; their laws are different from those of all the other nations, and the royal laws they ignore;[e] hence it is not in the king's interests to tolerate them. ·If their destruction be signed, so please the king, 9
I am ready to pay ten thousand talents of silver to the king's receivers, to be 7:4 credited to the royal treasury.'
Gn 41:42 The king then took his signet ring off his hand and gave it to Haman son of 10
Hammedatha, the persecutor of the Jews. ·'Keep the money,' he said, 'and you 11 can have the people too; do what you like with them.'

The royal scribes were therefore summoned for the thirteenth day of the first 12 month, when they wrote out the orders addressed by Haman to the king's satraps, Dn 3:4–7 to the governors ruling each province and to the principal officials of each people, to each province in its own script and to each people in its own language. The edict

13 was signed in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with his ring, ·and letters were sent by runners to every province of the realm, ordering the destruction, slaughter and annihilation of all Jews, young and old, including women and children, on the same day—the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is Adar—and the seizing of their possessions.

13[a] The text of the letter was as follows:

13:1 'The Great King, Ahasuerus, to the governors of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces stretching from India to Ethiopia, and to their subordinate district commissioners:

2 13[b] 'Being placed in authority over many nations and ruling the whole world, I have resolved never to be carried away by the insolence of power, but always to rule with moderation and clemency, so as to assure for my subjects a life ever free from storms and, offering my kingdom the benefits of civilisation and free transit Jdt 2:5 Dn 3:31

3 13[c] from end to end, to restore that peace which all men desire. ·In consultation with our advisers as to how this aim is to be effected, we have been informed by one of them, eminent among us for prudence and well proved for his unfailing devotion and unshakeable trustworthiness, and in rank second only to our majesty, Haman

4 13[d] by name, ·that there is, mingled among all the tribes of the earth, a certain ill-disposed people, opposed by its laws to every other nation and continually defying the royal ordinances, in such a way as to obstruct that form of government assured by us to the general good. 3:8d

5 13[e] 'Considering therefore that this people, unique of its kind, is in complete opposition to all humanity from which it differs by its outlandish laws, that it is hostile to our interests and that it commits the most heinous crimes, to the point of endangering the stability of the realm:

6 13[f] 'We command that those persons designated to you in the letters written by Haman, who was appointed to watch over our interests and is a second father to us, be all destroyed, root and branch, including women and children, by the swords of their enemies, without any pity or mercy, on the fourteenth day of the 8:12[l] Gn 45:8

7 13[g] twelfth month, Adar, of the present year, ·so that, these past and present malcontents being in one day forcibly thrown down to Hades, our government may henceforward enjoy perpetual stability and peace.'

14 Copies of this decree, to be promulgated as law in each province, were published to the various peoples, so that each might be ready for the day aforementioned.
15 At the king's command, the runners set out with all speed; the decree was first promulgated in the citadel of Susa.

e. Text emended. Hebr. 'When the girls were reassembled the second time, Mordecai was sitting at the Gate'; Gk 'Mordecai was on duty at the palace.' The mention of Mordecai and his job here seems wrong and is probably a dittography of v. 21.

f. The Gk, more religious in tone than the Hebr., reads 'Esther had not disclosed what country she came from. Mordecai had bidden her fear God and keep the commandments just as she did when she was with him, and Esther had not changed her way of life.'

g. The expression (lit. 'the king's gate') sometimes means the business of administration, sometimes the buildings in which this work was carried.

3 a. Country not known; the name is that of an Amalekite king conquered by Saul, 1 S 15:7–9, and may have been chosen to emphasise the antagonism of Haman and Mordecai who, like Saul, is a Benjaminite and a descendant of Kish.

b. The gesture in itself could not be objectionable for a Jew; it was the act of respect customary in the oriental court and also practised in Israel, see 1 K 1:23;2 K 4:37; etc. Mordecai's refusal is not therefore a protest of fidelity to God and his Law, as in Dn 1:8; 3:12; 6:14, but a reaction of racial pride; the prayer in the Gk text gives it a religious significance, 4:17[d-e].

c. A Babylonian word. Haman has already decided on the pogrom; he consults the lots only to learn the most propitious day. The Gk, complementing the Hebr., adds that Haman issued a decree in the 12th year of the king, that he cast lots to extirpate the race of Mordecai and that the lot fell on the 14th of the month called Adar. • The v. is perhaps an addition, inserted at the same time as the section about the feast of Purim, 9:23–27.

d. Rec. Luc. paraphrases 'Haman in his jealousy and shaken to the core blushed, and averted his eyes from him. Then with base heart he spoke evil to the king about Israel. "There is a race", he said, "scattered throughout every kingdom, a bellicose and truculent people with its own laws. But of your laws, O king, they take no account, for they are, as every nation knows, an obstinate race. They defy your orders to the ruin of your honour." '

e. Complaints of this kind against the Jews are found in several documents of the hellenistic period, see 3:13[a-e]; Ezr 4:12seq.; Jdt 12:2; Ws 2:14seq. and the apocryphal 3 Maccabees.

While the king and Haman gave themselves up to feasting and drinking, consternation reigned in the city of Susa.[f]

Mordecai and Esther try to avert the danger

4 When Mordecai learned what had happened, he tore his garments and put on sackcloth and ashes. Then he walked into the centre of the city, wailing loudly 1 and bitterly, ·until he arrived in front of the Chancellery, which no one clothed in 2 sackcloth was allowed to enter. ·And in every province, no sooner had the royal 3 command and edict arrived, than among the Jews there was great mourning, fasting, weeping and wailing, and many lay on sackcloth and ashes.[a]

When Queen Esther's maids and eunuchs came and told her, she was overcome 4 with grief. She sent clothes for Mordecai to put on instead of his sackcloth,[b] but he refused them. ·Esther then summoned Hathach, a eunuch whom the king had 5 appointed to wait on her, and ordered him to go to Mordecai and enquire what the matter was and why he was acting in this way.

Hathach went out to Mordecai in the city square in front of the Chancellery, 6 and Mordecai told him what had happened to him personally, and also about the 7 sum of money which Haman had offered to pay into the royal treasury to procure the destruction of the Jews. ·He also gave him a copy of the edict of extermination 8 published in Susa for him to show Esther for her information, with the message that she was to go to the king and implore his favour and plead with him for the race to which she belonged. · 'Remember your humbler circumstances,' he said, 8a
'when you were fed by my hand. Since Haman, the second person in the realm, has petitioned the king for our deaths, ·invoke the Lord, speak to the king for us and 8b save us from death!'[c]

Hathach came back and told Esther what Mordecai had said;[d] ·and she replied 9, 10 with the following message for Mordecai, ·'Royal officials and people living in the 11 provinces alike all know that for anyone, man or woman, who approaches the king in the private apartments without having been summoned there, there is only one law: he must die, unless the king, by pointing his golden sceptre towards him, grants him his life. And I have not been summoned to the king for the last thirty days.'

These words of Esther were reported to Mordecai, ·who sent back the following 12, 13 reply, 'Do not suppose that, because you are in the king's palace, you are going to be the one Jew to escape. ·No; if you persist in remaining silent at such a time, 14
Gn 45:7 relief and deliverance will come to the Jews from another quarter,[e] but both you and your father's whole family will perish. Who knows? Perhaps you have come to the throne for just such a time as this.'

Whereupon Esther sent this reply to Mordecai, ·'Go and assemble all the Jews 15, 16 now in Susa and fast for me. Do not eat or drink day or night for three days. For my part, I and my waiting-women shall keep the same fast, after which I shall go to the king in spite of the law; and if I perish, I perish.' ·Mordecai went away and 17 carried out Esther's instructions.

Mordecai's prayer[f]

Esther's prayer

14:1 17k Queen Esther also took refuge with the Lord in the mortal peril which had overtaken
2 her. She took off her sumptuous robes and put on sorrowful mourning. Instead of 3 expensive perfumes, she covered her head with ashes and dung. She mortified her body severely, and the former scenes of her happiness and elegance were now littered with tresses torn from her hair. She besought the Lord God of Israel in these words:

17l My Lord, our King, the Only One,
come to my help, for I am alone and have no helper but you and am about to take my life in my hands. 4:11,16

5 17m I have been taught from infancy Dt 6:20–25

f. In Vet. Lat. the Jews now pray, expressing sorrow for the sins of the nation and appealing to the faithfulness of God.

b. So that he could enter the palace and talk to her.

c. Vet. Lat. here has in addition to the Gk 'Rise! Why do you sit in silence? Since you are set free, you and your House and your father's House, all your people and all your descendants. Rise! Let us see if we can fight and suffer for our own people that God may show mercy on them.'

d. Vet. Lat. thus describes Esther's distress 'As Esther read her brother's letter she tore her garments and lamented loudly. She shed many tears, her body trembled and her flesh became weak.'

e. The author of the Hebr. text avoids using the name of God.

f. The prayers of Mordecai and Esther are rich in OT piety, but they betray an introspective interest and a concern with self-justification that is not found in the older texts.

g. The family was the primary means of transmitting the tradition of the marvels worked by God on behalf of his people, Israel, see Dt 6:20–25.

Esther intrudes on the royal presence

15:4 1a 5 On the third day, [a] when she had finished praying, she took off her suppliant's
5 mourning attire and dressed herself in her full splendour. Radiant as she then appeared, she invoked God who watches over all people and saves them. With her, 6 she took two ladies-in-waiting. With a delicate air she leaned on one, while the other
8 1b accompanied her carrying her train. •Rosy with the full flush of her beauty, her face
9 1c radiated joy and love: but her heart shrank with fear. •Having passed through door after door, she found herself in the presence of the king. He was sitting on his royal throne, dressed in all his robes of state, glittering with gold and precious stones—a 10 1d formidable sight. •He looked up, afire with majesty and, blazing with anger, saw her. The queen sank to the floor. As she fainted, the colour drained from her 11 1e face and her head fell against the lady-in-waiting beside her. •But God changed the king's heart, inducing a milder spirit. He sprang from his throne in alarm and took her in his arms until she recovered, comforting her with 12, 13 1f soothing words. •'What is the matter, Esther?' he said. 'I am your brother. Take heart, you are not going to die; our order applies only to ordinary people. Come to 14, 15 2 me.' •And raising his golden sceptre he laid it on Esther's neck, embraced her and 16 2a said, 'Speak to me.' •'Sire,' she said, 'to me you looked like one of God's angels, and 17 my heart was moved with fear of your majesty. For you are a figure of wonder, my 18, 19 2b lord, and your face is full of graciousness.' •But as she spoke she fell down in a faint.
The king grew more agitated, and his courtiers all set about reviving her.
3 'What is the matter, Queen Esther?' the king said. 'Tell me what you want; even if 5:6;7:2; 9:12 Mk 6:23
4 it is half my kingdom, I grant it you.' •'Would it please the king,' Esther replied, 'to 5 come with Haman today to the banquet I have prepared for him?' •The king said,
'Tell Haman to come at once, so that Esther may have her wish.'
6 So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared and, during the banquet, the king again said to Esther, 'Tell me your request; I grant it to you. Tell me what you want; even if it is half my kingdom, it is yours for the 7, 8 asking.' •'What do I want, what is my request?' Esther replied. •'If I have found favour in the king's eyes, and if it is his pleasure to grant what I ask and to agree to my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet I intend to give them tomorrow, and then I shall do as the king says.'
9 Haman left full of joy and high spirits that day; but when he saw Mordecai at the Chancellery, neither standing up nor stirring at his approach, he felt a gust of 10 anger. •He restrained himself, however. Returning home, he sent for his friends 11 and Zeresh his wife •and held forth to them about his dazzling wealth, his many children, how the king had raised him to a position of honour and promoted him 12 over the heads of the king's officers-of-state and ministers. •'What is more,' he added, 'Queen Esther has just invited me and the king—no one else except me—to a banquet she was giving, and better still she has invited me and the king again 13 tomorrow. •But what do I care about all this when all the while I see Mordecai the 14 Jew sitting there at the Chancellery?' •'Have a fifty-cubit gallows run up,' said Zeresh his wife and all his friends, 'and in the morning ask the king to have Mordecai hanged on it. Then you can go with the king to the banquet, without a care in the world!' Delighted with this advice, Haman had the gallows erected.

h. lit. 'put their hands in the hands of their idols'.

5 a. The Hebr. text of vv. 1–2 is much shorter. v.1: 'Three days later Esther put on her royal apparel and presented herself in the inner court of the palace, which was in front of the king's apartments. He was seated on the royal throne in the Royal Hall, facing the door. v.2: No sooner had he seen Queen Esther standing in the court than she won his favour and he held out to her the golden sceptre he had in his hand. Esther approached and touched the end of it.' • v.3 is the same in the Gk and Hebr.

IV: THE JEWS' REVENGE

The discomfiture of Haman [a]

6 That night the king could not sleep; he called for the Record Book, or Annals, 1
2:21–23 to be brought and read to him. ·They contained an account of how Mordecai 2 had denounced Bigthan and Teresh, two of the king's eunuchs serving as Guards of the Threshold, who had plotted to assassinate King Ahasuerus. ·'And what 3 1:19 honour and dignity', the king asked, 'was conferred on Mordecai for this?' 'Nothing
Qo 9:13–16 has been done for him,' the gentlemen-in-waiting replied. [b] ·The king then said, 4
'Who is outside in the antechamber?' Haman had, that very moment, entered the outer antechamber of the private apartments, to ask the king to have Mordecai hanged on the gallows which he had just put up for the purpose. ·So the king's 5 gentlemen-in-waiting replied, 'It is Haman out in the antechamber.' 'Bring him in,' the king said, ·and, as soon as Haman came in, went on to ask, 'What is the right 6 way to treat a man whom the king wishes to honour?' 'Whom', thought Haman, 'would the king wish to honour, if not me?' ·So he replied, 'If the king wishes to 7
Gn 41:42seq. honour someone, ·royal robes should be brought from the king's wardrobe, and a 8
1 K 1:33
Dn 5:29 horse from the king's stable, sporting a royal diadem on its head. ·The robes and 9 horse should be entrusted to one of the noblest of the king's officers-of-state, who should then array the man whom the king wishes to honour and lead him on horseback through the city square, proclaiming before him: "This is the way a man shall be treated whom the king wishes to honour." ' ·'Hurry,' the king said to 10 Haman, 'take the robes and the horse, and do everything you have just said to Mordecai the Jew, who works at the Chancellery. On no account leave anything out that you have mentioned.'

So taking the robes and the horse, Haman arrayed Mordecai and led him on 11
horseback through the city square, proclaiming before him: 'This is the way a man shall be treated whom the king wishes to honour.' ·After this Mordecai returned to 12 2 S 15:30k the Chancellery, while Haman went hurrying home in dejection and covering his face. ·He told his wife Zeresh and all his friends what had just happened. His wife 13 Zeresh and his friends [c] said, 'You are beginning to fall, and Mordecai to rise; if he is Jewish, you will never get the better of him. With him against you, your fall is certain.' [d]

Haman at Esther's banquet

While they were still talking, the king's eunuchs arrived in a hurry to escort Haman 14 to the banquet that Esther was giving.

7 The king and Haman went to Queen Esther's banquet, ·and this second day, 1, 2 during the banquet, the king again said to Esther, 'Tell me your request, Queen Esther. I grant it to you. Whatever you want; even if it is half my kingdom, it is yours for the asking.' ·'If I have found favour in your eyes, O king,' Queen 3 Esther replied, 'and if it please your majesty, grant me my life—that is my request; and the lives of my people—that is what I want. ·For we have been handed over, 4 my people and I, to destruction, slaughter and annihilation; had we merely been sold as slaves and servant-girls, I should not have said anything; but in the present 3:8–9 case, it will be beyond the persecutor's means to make good the loss that the king is about to sustain.' [a] ·King Ahasuerus interrupted Queen Esther, 'Who is this 5 man?' he exclaimed. 'Where is the man who has thought of doing such a thing?'
Esther replied, 'The persecutor, the enemy? Why, this wretch Haman!' Haman 6 quaked with terror in the presence of the king and queen. ·In a rage the king got up 7 from the banquet and went into the palace garden; while Haman, realising that the king was determined on his ruin, stayed behind to beg Queen Esther for his life.

When the king came back from the palace garden into the banqueting hall, he 8 found Haman sprawled across the couch where Esther was reclining. 'What!' the king exclaimed. 'Is he going to rape the queen in my own palace?' The words were 9 scarcely out of his mouth than a veil was thrown over Haman's face. [b] ·In the royal presence, Harbona, one of the eunuchs, said, 'There is that fifty-cubit gallows, too, which Haman ran up for Mordecai, who spoke up to the king's great advantage. It

10 is all ready at his house.' [c] 'Hang him on it,' said the king. ·So Haman was hanged on the gallows which he had erected for Mordecai, and the king's wrath subsided.

The royal favour passes to the Jews

1 8 That same day King Ahasuerus gave Queen Esther the house of Haman, the persecutor of the Jews. Mordecai was presented to the king, Esther having 2 revealed their mutual relationship. ·The king, who had recovered his signet ring from Haman, took it off and gave it to Mordecai, while Esther gave Mordecai charge of Haman's house.

Pr 11:8; 26:27
Mt 7:2
Pr 13:22
Dn 2:48–49

3 Esther again went to speak to the king. She fell at his feet, weeping and imploring his favour, to frustrate the malice that Haman the Agagite had been plotting against 4 the Jews ·The king held out the golden sceptre to her, whereupon Esther stood up
5 and faced him. ·'If such is the king's good pleasure,' she said, 'and if I have found favour before him, if my petition seems proper to him and if I myself am pleasing to his eyes, may he be pleased to issue a written revocation of the letters which Haman son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, has had written, ordering the destruc-
6 tion of the Jews throughout the royal provinces. ·For how can I look on, while my people suffer what is proposed for them? How can I bear to witness the extermination of my relatives?'

7 King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther and to Mordecai the Jew, 'I for my part have given Esther Haman's house, and have had him hanged on the gallows for 8 planning to destroy the Jews. ·You, for your part, write what you please as regards the Jews, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's signet; for any edict written 1:19;3:12
9 in the king's name and sealed with his signet is irrevocable.' [a] ·The royal scribes were summoned at once—it was the third month, the month of Sivan, on the twenty-third day [b]—and at Mordecai's dictation an order was written to the Jews, the satraps, governors and principal officials of the provinces stretching from India to Ethiopia, a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, to each province in its own script, and to each people in its own language, and to the Jews in their own script
10 and language. ·These letters, written in the name of King Ahasuerus and sealed with the king's signet, were carried by couriers mounted on horses from the king's 11 own stud-farms. ·In them the king granted the Jews, in whatever city they lived, the right to assemble in self-defence, with permission to destroy, slaughter and annihilate any armed force of any people or province that might attack them,
12 together with their women and children, and to plunder their possessions, ·with effect from the same day throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus—the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is Adar.

6 a. In ch. 6 and 7. Rec. Luc. generously paraphrases all the passages that flatter Mordecai or belittle Haman.

b. The author of the Hebr. text is unaware of the tradition preserved by the Gk text, see 1:1q.

c. 'friends' Gk; 'advisers' Hebr.

d. The Hebr. text hints at the outcome without explicitly mentioning God's help, which the Gk makes clear by adding 'for the living God is with him'.

7 a. Just as Haman had invoked reasons of state for destroying the Jews, 3:8, so Esther now does the same to save them.

b. The action was equivalent to a death sentence; people who were going to be hanged had their heads covered.

c. Compare the sayings about people who fall into the pit that they themselves have dug, Ps 7:16; 9:16; 35:7–8; 57:6; Pr 26:27; 28:10; Qo 10:8; Si 27:26.

8 a. In 8:12[c-o], the Gk text explains, by Mordecai's writing in the king's name, how the king's trust had been abused when the 'irrevocable' decree was issued. Rec. Luc. dwells on Esther's part in the massacre.

b. Gk 'the third month of that year, that of Nisan, on the twenty-third day'.

The decree of rehabilitation

The text of the letter was as follows: 12a 16:1

'The great King, Ahasuerus, to the satraps of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces which stretch from India to Ethiopia, to the provincial governors and to all our loyal subjects, greeting: 12b

'Many people, repeatedly honoured by the extreme bounty of their benefactors, only grow the more arrogant. It is not enough for them to seek our subjects' injury, but unable as they are to support the weight of their own surfeit they turn to scheming against their benefactors themselves. •Not content with banishing gratitude from the human heart, but elated by the plaudits of people unacquainted with goodness, notwithstanding that all is for ever under the eye of God, they expect to escape his justice, so hostile to the wicked. •Thus it has often happened to those placed in authority that, having entrusted friends with the conduct of affairs and allowed themselves to be influenced by them, they find themselves sharing with these the guilt of innocent blood and involved in irremediable misfortunes, •the right intentions of rulers having been misled by false arguments of the evilly disposed. •This may be seen without recourse to the history of earlier times to which we have referred; you have only to look at what is before you, at the crimes perpetrated by a plague of unworthy officials. •For the future, we shall exert our efforts to assure the tranquillity and peace of the realm for all, •by adopting new policies and by always judging matters that are brought to our notice in the most equitable spirit. 12c 2 3 12d 4 12e 5 12f 6 12g 7 12h 8 12i 9

'Thus Haman son of Hammedatha, a Macedonian, [c] without a drop of Persian blood and far removed from our goodness, enjoyed our hospitality •and was treated by us with the benevolence which we show to every nation, even to the extent of being proclaimed our 'father' and being accorded universally the prostration of respect as second in dignity to the royal throne. •But he, unable to keep within his own high rank, schemed to deprive us of our realm and of our life. Furthermore, by tortuous wiles and arguments, he would have had us destroy Mordecai, our saviour and constant benefactor, with Esther the blameless partner of our majesty, and their whole nation besides. •He thought by these means to leave us without support and so to transfer the Persian empire to the Macedonians. 12k 10 12l 11 12m 12 12n 13 12o 14

'But we find that the Jews, marked out for annihilation by this arch-scoundrel, are not criminals: they are in fact governed by the most just of laws. •They are children of the Most High, the great and living God to whom we and our ancestors owe the continuing prosperity of our realm. •You will therefore do well not to act on the letters sent by Haman son of Hammedatha, since their author has been hanged at the gates of Susa with his whole household: a fitting punishment, which God, Master of the Universe, has speedily inflicted on him. •Put up copies of this letter everywhere, allow the Jews to observe their own customs without fear, and come to their help against anyone who attacks them on the day originally chosen for their maltreatment, that is, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is Adar. For the all-powerful God has made this day a day of joy and not of ruin for the chosen people. •You, for your part, among your solemn festivals celebrate this as a special day with every kind of feasting, so that now and in the future, for you and for Persians of good will, it may commemorate your rescue, and for your enemies may stand as a reminder of their ruin. 12p 15 12q 16 12r 17, 18 12s 19 20 12t 21 12u 22 23

'Every city and, more generally, every country, which does not follow these instructions, will be mercilessly devastated with fire and sword, and made not only inaccessible to human beings but hateful to wild animals and even birds for ever.' 12v 24

Copies of this edict, to be promulgated as law in each province, were published to the various peoples, so that the Jews could be ready on the day stated to avenge themselves on their enemies. •The couriers, mounted on the king's horses, set out 13 14 in great haste and urgency at the king's command. The edict was also published in 15 the citadel of Susa. ·Mordecai left the royal presence in a princely gown of violet and white, with a great golden crown and a cloak of fine linen and purple. The city 16 of Susa shouted for joy. ·For the Jews there was light and gladness, joy and honour.

17 In every province and in every city, wherever the king's command and decree arrived, there was joy and gladness among the Jews, with feasting and holiday-making. Of the country's population many became Jews, since now 9:27e the Jews were feared.

The great Day of Purim

1 9 The king's command and decree came into force on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar, and the day on which the enemies of the Jews had hoped to crush them produced the very opposite effect: the Jews it was who crushed their 4:17[g];8:1+ Gn 22:17 2 enemies. ·In their towns throughout the provinces of King Ahasuerus, the Jews assembled to strike at those who had planned to injure them. No one resisted 3 them, since the various peoples were now all afraid of them. ·Provincial officers-of-state, satraps, governors and royal officials, all supported the Jews for fear of 4 Mordecai. ·And indeed Mordecai was a power in the palace and his fame was spreading through all the provinces; Mordecai was steadily growing more powerful.
5 So the Jews struck down all their enemies with the sword, with resulting slaughter
6 and destruction, and worked their will on their opponents. [a] ·In the citadel of Susa
7 alone, the Jews put to death and slaughtered five hundred men, ·notably Parshan-
8, 9 datha, Dalphon, Aspatha, ·Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, ·Parmashtha, Arisai, Ari-10 dai and Jezatha, ·the ten sons of Haman son of Hammedatha, the persecutor of 3:13;9:15 Jdt 15:6–7,11
the Jews. But they took no plunder.
11 The number of those killed in the citadel of Susa was reported to the king that 12 same day. ·The king said to Queen Esther, 'In the citadel of Susa the Jews have killed five hundred men and also the ten sons of Haman. What must they have done in the other provinces of the realm? Tell me your request; I grant it to you.
13 Tell me what else you would like; it is yours for the asking.' ·'If such is the king's pleasure,' Esther replied, 'let the Jews of Susa be allowed to enforce today's decree tomorrow as well. And as for the ten sons of Haman, let their bodies be hanged on 14 the gallows.' ·Whereupon, the king having given the order, the edict was promul-15 gated in Susa and the ten sons of Haman were hanged. ·Thus the Jews of Susa reassembled on the fourteenth day of the month of Adar and killed three hundred men in the city. But they took no plunder.
16 The other Jews who lived in the king's provinces also assembled to defend their lives and rid themselves of their enemies. They slaughtered seventy-five thousand [b] 17 of their opponents. But they took no plunder. ·This was on the thirteenth day of the month of Adar. On the fourteenth day they rested and made it a day of feasting 18 and gladness. ·But for the Jews of Susa, who had assembled on the thirteenth and fourteenth days, the fifteenth was the day they rested, making that a day of feasting 19 and gladness. [c] ·This is why Jewish country people, those who live in undefended villages, keep the fourteenth day of the month of Adar as a day of gladness, feasting and holiday-making, and the exchanging of presents with one another, Ne 8:10–12 Rv 11:10 19a whereas for those who live in cities the day of rejoicing and exchanging presents with their neighbours is the fifteenth day of Adar.

c. The word 'Macedonian', attested here and at v. 12[k], is surprising. 'Mede' would have seemed more likely, since the historical context seems to allude to power-struggles between Medes and Persians within Xerxes' empire.

9 a. The account of these massacres is unhistorical (see Introduction), nor must it be taken for a eulogy of, or recommendation to, revenge. The very extravagance of the situations, the wildly exaggerated numbers and the rhetoric of the account betray the author's purpose. His dominant intention is to illustrate a very familiar biblical theme, the reversal of a situation to the advantage of the oppressed; to do this he assumes the outlook of those who recorded the wars of Israel, the 'eye for eye' mentality.

b. Gk 'fifteen thousand'.

c. Banquets, which feature largely in Est, later become features of the Day of Purim, a feast more popular than religious.

V: THE FEAST OF PURIM

The official institution of the feast of Purim

Mordecai committed these events to writing. Then he sent letters to all the Jews 20 living in the provinces of King Ahasuerus, both near and far, ·enjoining them to 21 celebrate the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar every year, ·as 22 the days on which the Jews had rid themselves of their enemies, and the month in which their sorrow had been turned into gladness, and mourning into a holiday.
He therefore told them to keep these as days of festivity and gladness when they were to exchange presents and make gifts to the poor.

Once having begun, the Jews continued observing these practices, Mordecai 23 having written them an account ·of how Haman son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, 24
the persecutor of all the Jews, had plotted their destruction and had cast the pur, 3:7 that is, the lot, for their overthrow and ruin; ·but how, when he went back to the 25 king[d] to ask him to order the hanging of Mordecai, the wicked scheme which he 6:5–13 had devised against the Jews recoiled on his own head, and both he and his sons were hanged on the gallows; ·and that, hence, these days were called Purim, from 26 the word pur. And so, because of what was written in this letter, and because of what they had seen for themselves and of what had happened to them, ·the Jews 27 willingly bound themselves, their descendants and all who should join them,[e] to celebrate these two days without fail, in the manner prescribed and at the time 8:12[u],17 Is 56:3,6 Zc 2:15 appointed, year after year. ·Thus commemorated and celebrated from generation 28 to generation, in every family, in every province, in every city, these days of Purim will never be abrogated among the Jews, nor will their memory perish from their race.

Queen Esther, the daughter of Abihail,[f] wrote with full authority to ratify this 29
second letter, ·and sent letters to all the Jews of the hundred and twenty-seven 30 9:23–26 provinces of the realm of Ahasuerus, in terms of peace and loyalty ·enjoining them 31 to observe these days of Purim at the appointed time, as Mordecai the Jew had recommended, and in the manner prescribed for themselves and their descendants, with additional ordinances for fasts and lamentations.[g] ·The ordinance of Esther 32 fixed the law of Purim, which was then recorded in a book.

Praise of Mordecai

10 King Ahasuerus put not only the mainland under tribute but the Mediter- 1 ranean islands as well. ·All his feats of power and valour, and the account of 2
the high honour to which he raised Mordecai: all this is recorded in the Book of the Annals of the Kings of Media and Persia.[a]

And Mordecai the Jew was next in rank to King Ahasuerus. He was a man held 3 in respect among the Jews, esteemed by thousands of his brothers, a man who 2 M 15:14 sought the good of his people and cared for the welfare of his entire race.[b]

And Mordecai said, 'All this is God's doing. ·I remember the dream I had about 3[a], 3[b] 10:4, 5
these matters, nothing of which has failed to come true: ·the little spring that became 3[c] 6 a river, the light that shone, the sun, the flood of water. Esther is the river—she whom the king married and made queen. ·The two dragons are Haman and 3[d] 7 myself. ·The nations are those that banded together to blot out the name of Jew. 3[e] 8
·The single nation, mine, is Israel, those who cried out to God and were saved. Yes, 3[f] 9 the Lord has saved his people, the Lord has delivered us from all these evils, God has worked such signs and great wonders as have never occurred among the nations.

'Two destinies he appointed, one for his own people, one for the nations at large. 3[g] 10
And these two destinies were worked out at the hour and time and day laid down by 3[h] 11
God, involving all the nations. ·In this way God has remembered his people and 3[i] 12 vindicated his heritage;[c] ·and for them these days, the fourteenth and fifteenth of the 3[k] 13 month of Adar, are to be days of assembly, of joy and of gladness before God, through all generations and for ever among his people Israel.'

Note to the Greek translation of the book [d]

3[l] In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who affirmed that he was a priest and Levite, and Ptolemy his son brought the foregoing letter concerning Purim. They vouched for its authenticity, the translation having been made by Lysimachus son of Ptolemy, a member of the Jerusalem community.

d. Following Gk. Hebr. 'But when she (Esther) went in to the king, he said . . .' (following word unintelligible).

e. The nationalistic character of the book does not exclude a wider outlook; proselytes share in the celebrations.

f. Conjectural translation. Hebr. reads: 'Esther, daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew', but see v. 31, and Esther figures alone in v. 32.

g. These two unexpected injunctions doubtless have reference to 4:16; fasting has earned deliverance. From 9:20 onwards, the text appears to be a compound of documents of varying origin.

10 a. The Gk ascribes this entry to the king.

b. The last verse in the Hebr. and the concluding passage of the Gk tend to make this book more than ever 'the Book of Mordecai' rather than 'the Book of Esther', see 9:4. He, the man enlightened by God, has managed the whole affair. He is typically 'the Jew', just as Judith will become 'the Jewess'. This commemorative festival was first known as 'the Day of Mordecai', 2 M 15:36.

c. At this point, Rec. Luc. gives a brief thanksgiving: 'And all the people shouted and uttered loud cries: Blessed be you, O Lord, who remember the covenants made with our ancestors! Amen.'

d. From this appendix to the Gk text, we learn that the Jewish community in Egypt received the Book of Esther from the community in Palestine, see 2 M 2:14–15. But there is no mention of the authorities in Jerusalem, and a certain suspicion of Dositheus 'who affirmed that he was a priest and Levite'. The King Ptolemy in question must be Ptolemy VIII, whose wife was called Cleopatra; the date would therefore be 114 BC.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOKS OF MACCABEES

§1 The two books of Maccabees were not in the Jewish Canon of scripture, but their inspiration has been recognised by the Church (they are 'deutero-canonical' books). They treat of the Jewish struggle for religious and political independence against the Seleucid kings. The title of the books is derived from the name Maccabaeus, conferred on the central figure of the story, 1 M 2:4, and later passed on to his brothers.

§2 The First Book of Maccabees places before us at the outset (Introduction, ch. 1–2) two irreconcilable enemies: a triumphant Hellenism with some admiring Jewish supporters; and, opposed to it, the main body of the Jewish nation, faithful to the Law and the Temple. On the one hand, Antiochus Epiphanes, desecrator of the Temple and persecutor; on the other, Mattathias, initiator of the crusade for religious freedom. The body of the book is divided into three parts, one for each of Mattathias' three sons who succeeded one another as leaders of the resistance movement. Judas Maccabaeus (166–160 BC) 3:1–9:22, wins a series of victories over Antiochus' generals, reconsecrates the Temple and secures religious freedom for his people. Under Demetrius I he is hampered at home by the intrigue of Alcimus the high priest, but he is still successful in the field and Nicanor, whose objective is to destroy the Temple, is defeated and killed. To consolidate his position Judas seeks alliance with Rome. He dies in battle. Jonathan, his brother, succeeds him (160–142), 9:23–12:53. Military gives way to political activity and Jonathan cleverly plays off one competitor for the Syrian throne against the other: his appointment as high priest by Alexander Balas is recognised by Demetrius II and confirmed by Antiochus VI. He seeks alliance with the Romans and Spartans. More and more territory comes under his control and peace at home seems assured, when Jonathan falls into the hands of Trypho, who murders both him and the young king, Antiochus VI. Simon, Jonathan's brother (142–134), 13:1–16:24, lends his support to Demetrius II, who wins back the throne and (like his successor, Antiochus VII) recognises Simon as high priest, military governor and ethnarch of the Jews. Political independence is thus achieved, and the nation decrees that Simon's titles be approved. The treaty with Rome is then renewed; it is an era of prosperity and peace. But Antiochus VII turns against the Jews, and his son-in-law, currying favour, assassinates Simon and his two sons.

The narrative covers forty years, from the accession of Antiochus Epi-phanes in 175 BC to the death of Simon and the accession of John Hyrcanus in 134 BC. The book was written in Hebrew but has come down to us only in a Greek translation. Its author is a Palestinian Jew writing after 134 but before the capture of Jerusalem by Pompey in 63 BC. The last lines of the book, 16:23–24, show that it was written, at the earliest, around the end of the reign of John Hyrcanus, most probably shortly after his death, in about 100 BC. The book is invaluable as a history of the times, though allowances must always be made in such types of literature for the influence of the ancient chronicles of Israel on which they are modelled, and also for the intentions of the author.

For despite the space he devotes to battle and political intrigue, the author means to write a religious history. For him the nation's distress is a punishment for sin, and the successes of his leading figures are won by the help of God. He is a Jew, jealous for the faith which he perceives to be at stake in the struggle between gentile infiltration and ancestral custom. He is therefore an uncompromising foe of hellenisation and an ardent admirer of the heroes who fought for Law and Temple, winning, first, religious liberty and, next, national independence. His story tells how Judaism, the trustee of revelation, was preserved for the world.

§3 The Second Book of Maccabees is not the continuation of the first. It is in part parallel to it: its starting-point is a little earlier (end of the reign of Seleucus IV, father of Antiochus Epiphanes), but it ends with the defeat of Nicanor by Judas Maccabaeus. It therefore covers only about fifteen years, corresponding to the first seven chapters of First Maccabees.

Its literary form is very different. Originally written in Greek, it claims to be a summary of the work of one Jason of Cyrene, 2:19–32, and is preceded by two letters from the Jews of Jerusalem, 1:1–2:18. The style is that of hellenistic writers, though not of the best: at times it is turgid, frequently pompous; more a sermon than a history, although the author shows a far more accurate knowledge of Greek institutions and the personalities of the period than does the author of 1 M.

The author's aim is to entertain and to edify, 2:25; 15:39. Judas Maccabaeus' campaign of liberation is supported by apparitions from heaven and triumphantly concluded by divine intervention, 2:19–22; the persecution itself is a manifestation of God's faithful love, bringing his people to their senses before the accumulation of sin works final ruin, 6:12–17. The author is writing for the Jews of Alexandria, to awaken their feeling of solidarity with their Palestinian brothers. He is particularly anxious to stir their interest in the fortunes of the Temple, round which the life of law-abiding Jewry must revolve and against which the fury of the gentiles is unleashed. This preoccupation shows itself in the way the book is arranged.

After the Heliodorus episode, 3:1–40, bringing out the inviolable sanctity of the Temple, the first part, 4:1–10:8, ends with the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, the persecutor who had defiled the Temple, and with the institution of the feast of Dedication. The second part, 10:9–15:36, also ends with the death of a persecutor (Nicanor) who had threatened the Temple, and with the institution of a commemorative feast. The two letters with which the book opens spring from the same theme, 1:1–2:18, being invitations from the Jews in Jerusalem to their co-religionists in Egypt to celebrate the feast of the purification of the Temple, the feast of Dedication.

Since the last event to be reported is the death of Nicanor, Jason of Cyrene's work must have been composed soon after 160 BC. If the abbreviator himself added the two introductory letters of 1–2—although this is disputed—the date of the work in its present, reduced form can be fixed from a hint in 1:10a as being 124 BC. The historical value of the book should not be underestimated. Admittedly, the abbreviator (or an editor, perhaps) has accepted the apocryphal stories contained in the letter of 1:10b–2:18, and has reproduced the moving stories of Heliodorus, ch. 3, of the martyrdom of Eleazar, 6:18–31, and of the seven brothers, ch. 7, which he found in Jason and which conveniently illustrated his own religious theses. This notwithstanding, the general agreement with 1 M guarantees the historicity of the events reported by these two independent sources. On one important point, where the two sources are in conflict, 2 M is the more accurate: 1 M 6:1–13 puts the purification of the Temple before the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 M 9:1–29 puts it afterwards; a recently published Babylonian chronological tablet proves 2 M right: Antiochus died in October–November 164, before the re-dedication of the Temple at the end of December in the same year. In the sections peculiar to 2 M, there is no reason for doubting the information given in ch. 4 about the years preceding the spoliation of the Temple by Antiochus. Nonetheless, the abbreviator, rather than Jason, is responsible for one serious error: to a letter of Antiochus V, 2 M 11:22–26, he has, in 11–12:9, added other letters and an account of events belonging to the latter part of the reign of Antiochus IV which ought to have been inserted between ch. 8 and 9.

The book is important for its affirmation of the resurrection of the dead, see 7:9c; 14:46; sanctions in the afterlife, 6:26; prayer for the dead, 12:38j, 41–46seq.; the spiritual fruits of martyrdom, 6:18–7:41; the intercession of the saints, 15:12–16, 14, 14e. Other Old Testament writings had left these teachings vague: but these teachings justify the authority accorded to Second Maccabees by the Church.

The chronological system followed in each of the books can now be better understood, thanks to the discovery of a cuneiform tablet which is a fragmentary date-list of the Seleucid kings, and which allows us to fix the date of death of Antiochus Epiphanes. The Macedonian calendar is followed by 1 M, beginning in October, 312 BC, while 2 M follows the Jewish computation, in line with the Babylonian method, beginning in Nisan (3 April) 311. There are, however, two exceptions: in 1 M, events pertaining to the Temple and to Jewish history are dated by the Jewish-Babylonian calendar (1:54; 2:70; 4:52; 9:3,54; 10:21; 13:41,51; 14:27; 16:14), whereas the letters quoted in 2 M 11 are dated by the Macedonian reckoning, as might be expected.

The text has come down to us in three uncial manuscripts, Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus and Venetus, and in thirty or so minuscules, but in Sinaiticus (the best witness) the part corresponding to 2 M is unfortunately missing. The minuscules, deriving from the recension made by the priest Lucian (AD 300), occasionally preserve a more ancient text than that of other Greek manuscripts, and one used by the historian Flavius Josephus in his Antiquities of the Jews, who generally follows 1 M, to the exclusion of 2 M. The Vetus

Latina also follows a lost Greek text which is frequently better than that of the manuscripts known to us.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MACCABEES

I: INTRODUCTION

Alexander and his successors

1 Alexander of Macedon son of Philip had come from the land of Kittim[a] and defeated Darius king of the Persians and Medes, whom he succeeded as ruler, at first of Hellas.[b] ·He undertook many campaigns, gained possession of many fortresses, and put the local kings to death. ·So he advanced to the ends of the earth, plundering nation after nation; the earth grew silent before him, and his ambitious heart swelled with pride. ·He assembled very powerful forces and subdued provinces, nations and princes, and they became his tributaries. ·But the time came when Alexander took to his bed, in the knowledge that he was dying. He summoned his officers[c], noblemen who had been brought up with him from his youth, and divided his kingdom among them while he was still alive. ·Alexander had reigned twelve years when he died. ·Each of his officers established himself in his own region. ·All assumed crowns after his death, they and their heirs after them for many years, bringing increasing evils on the world.

Antiochus Epiphanes:[d] Israel infected with Hellenism

2 M 4:7 From these there grew a wicked offshoot, Antiochus Epiphanes son of King Antiochus; once a hostage in Rome,[e] he became king in the 107th year of the
‖2 M 4:9–17 kingdom of the Greeks.[f] ·It was then that there emerged from Israel a set of renegades[g] who led many people astray. 'Come,' they said, 'let us ally ourselves with the gentiles surrounding us, for since we separated ourselves from them many misfortunes have overtaken us.' ·This proposal proved acceptable, ·and a number of the people eagerly approached the king, who authorised them to practise the gentiles' observances.[h] ·So they built a gymnasium in Jerusalem, such as the
1 Co 7:18 gentiles have, ·disguised their circumcision, and abandoned the holy covenant, submitting to gentile rule as willing slaves of impiety.[i]

First Egyptian campaign and pillage of the Temple[j]

Once Antiochus had seen his authority established, he determined to make himself
2 M 5:1 Dn 11:25–28 king of Egypt and the ruler of both kingdoms. ·He invaded Egypt in massive strength, with chariots and elephants[k] (and cavalry) and a large fleet. ·He engaged Ptolemy king of Egypt in battle, and Ptolemy turned back and fled before his advance, leaving many casualties. ·The fortified cities of Egypt were captured, and Antiochus plundered the country. ·After his conquest of Egypt, in the year 143,
‖2 M 5:11–16 Antiochus turned about and advanced on Israel and Jerusalem in massive strength. Insolently breaking into the sanctuary, he removed the golden altar and the lamp-stand for the light with all its fittings, ·together with the table for the loaves of permanent offering, the libation vessels, the cups, the golden censers, the veil, the crowns, and the golden decoration on the front of the Temple, which he stripped of everything. ·He made off with the silver and gold and precious vessels; he 2 M 5:21 discovered the secret treasures and seized them ·and, removing all these, he went back to his own country, having shed much blood and uttered words of extreme arrogance. [l]

There was deep mourning for Israel throughout the country:

Rulers and elders groaned;
girls and young men wasted away;
the women's beauty suffered a change;
every bridegroom took up a dirge,
the bride sat grief-stricken on her marriage-bed.
The earth quaked because of its inhabitants and the whole House of Jacob was clothed with shame. [m]

Intervention of the Mysarch and construction of the Acra

Two years later the king sent the Mysarch [n] through the cities of Judah. He came to 2 M 5:24–26
Jerusalem with an impressive force, ·and addressing them with what appeared to be peaceful words, he gained their confidence; then suddenly he fell on the city, dealing it a terrible blow, and destroying many of the people of Israel. ·He pillaged the city and set it on fire, tore down its houses and encircling wall, ·took the women and children captive and commandeered the cattle. ·They then rebuilt the City of David with a great strong wall and strong towers and made this their Citadel. [o]
There they installed a brood of sinners, of renegades, who fortified themselves inside it, ·storing arms and provisions, and depositing there the loot they had collected from Jerusalem; they were to prove a great trouble.

It became an ambush for the sanctuary,
an evil adversary for Israel at all times.
They shed innocent blood all round the sanctuary Ps 79:1–3 and defiled the sanctuary itself.
The citizens of Jerusalem fled because of them,

1 a. The Kittim were the inhabitants of Kition in Cyprus, and so by extension Cypriots in general, Gn 10:4; 1 Ch 1:7; Is 23:1. Later, the term was further extended to the Mediterranean islands, Jr 2:10; Ezk 27:6, and to regions further west, such as Macedonia, 1 M 8:5, and finally, to the whole Roman world.

b. Not restricted to Greece proper. The Hebr. javan, Is 66:19; Ezk 27:13, which corresponds to it, primarily means Ionia in Asia Minor.

c. In June 323 BC. This summoning of the generals gave rise to the legend of the partitioning of the empire at Alexander's death; in fact, however, the attempts to divide the empire succeeded only after the battle of Ipsus, in 301. Dn 8:8,22 also alludes to the splitting of the empire.

d. 175–64. Younger brother of Seleucus IV and son of Antiochus III. The royal epithet epiphanes ('who reveals himself in splendour') indicates the king's claim to be the earthly manifestation of Zeus.

e. Antiochus IV had been among the hostages handed over to the Romans by his father in 189, after his defeat at Magnesia in Sipyle.

f. i.e. of the Seleucid era, beginning in Syria in the autumn of 312 (theoretical date of the founding of Antioch), and in Babylonia in the spring of 311.

g. lit. 'breakers of the Law', an expression which in LXX usually translates Hebr. 'sons of Belial', Dt 13:14.

h. lit. 'observances of the nations', that is, of the Hebr. goyim, often applied to the gentile nations as opposed to 'the people (of Israel)', though with some exceptions, 3:59; 8:23seq.; 9:29; see Gn 12:2; Ex 32:10.

i. Religion, the Law and ancestral custom isolated the Jews as a foreign community inside the oriental world which had been unified and hellenised since Alexander's conquest. Assimilation by the new culture offered material benefits, but could not be achieved without breaking down the barriers which safeguarded the integrity of the Jewish faith. At this point, the innovations were not yet identified with the idolatrous practices which the king was to impose seven years later, but they increased the opportunities for taking part in such rites; and here lies the underlying theme of the two books of Maccabees. This movement among the hellenising Jews was sure of support from Antiochus Epiphanes, a devotee of Greek culture see vv. 41–51.

j. This was the first campaign against Ptolemy Philometor, in 169. The author of 2 M omits it, mentioning only the 'second attack', 2 M 5:1, which is omitted here. The sequence of events is easier to follow in the Book of Daniel, 11:25–27: first campaign; v. 28: pillage of the Temple; v. 29: second campaign and intervention of the Romans; v. 30: repression in Jerusalem; vv. 31–39: suppression of public worship.

k. They came from India; the training centre for these beasts of combat, see ch. 6, was Apamaea.

l. The pride of Epiphanes, who considered himself the equal of Zeus, amazed his contemporaries, who, punning on his name, used to call him epimanes, 'the mad man'; see 2 M 5:17,21; 9:4–11; Dn 7:8,25; 11:36.

m. First of the poetical compositions in the book; others occur at vv. 36–42; 2:8–13,51–64; 3:3–9,45; 14:4–15.

n. 'the Mysarch' conj. following 2 M 5:24 (which gives his name: Apollonius); Gk 'tribute collector'; the two words are much alike in Hebr. He was in command of the mercenaries from Mysia and went to Jerusalem in 167. He reappears in 3:10.

o. The name City of David had grown to cover the large western hill of Jerusalem. When converted into the Citadel, the Acra in Greek, this quarter housed the Syro-Macedonian garrison and the hellenising Jews. It was to prove a threat to the Temple which stood lower down to the east, on what was called Mount Zion. Place-names of this period differ from those of the time of David, see 2 S 5:9f.

she became a dwelling-place of strangers;
estranged from her own offspring,
her children forsook her.
Her sanctuary became as forsaken as a desert, 39 41
her feasts were turned into mourning,
her Sabbaths into a mockery,
her honour into reproach.
Her dishonour now fully matched her former glory, 40 42
her greatness was turned into grief.

Installation of gentile cults

The king then issued a proclamation to his whole kingdom that all were to become 41 43
a single people, each nation renouncing its particular customs. ·All the gentiles 42 44 conformed to the king's decree, ·and many Israelites chose to accept his religion, 43 45 sacrificing to idols and profaning the Sabbath. ·The king also sent edicts[p] by 44 46 messenger to Jerusalem and the towns of Judah, directing them to adopt customs foreign to the country, ·banning burnt offerings, sacrifices and libations from the 45 47, 48 sanctuary, profaning Sabbaths and feasts, ·defiling the sanctuary and everything 46 49 holy, ·building altars, shrines and temples for idols, sacrificing pigs and unclean 47 50 beasts, ·leaving their sons uncircumcised, and prostituting themselves to all kinds 48 51 of impurity and abomination, ·so that they should forget the Law and revoke all 49 observance of it. ·Anyone not obeying the king's command was to be put to death. 50 52 Writing in such terms to every part of his kingdom, the king appointed inspectors 51 53, 54 for the whole people and directed all the towns of Judah to offer sacrifice city by city. ·Many of the people—that is, every apostate from the Law—rallied to them 52 55 and so committed evil in the country, ·forcing Israel into hiding in any possible 53 56 place of refuge.

On the fifteenth day of Chislev in the year 145[q] the king built the appalling 54 57 6:7 abomination on top of the altar of burnt offering;[r] and altars were built in the Dn 9:27;11:31 Mt 24:15h surrounding towns of Judah ·and incense offered at the doors of houses and in the 55 58 streets. ·Any books of the Law[s] that came to light were torn up and burned. 56 59
Whenever anyone was discovered possessing a copy of the covenant or practising 57 60 the Law, the king's decree sentenced him to death. ·Month after month they took 58 61 harsh action against any offenders they discovered in the towns of Israel. ·On the 59 62 twenty-fifth day of each month,[t] sacrifice was offered on the altar erected on top of ||2 M 6:10 the altar of burnt offering. ·Women who had had their children circumcised were 60 63
put to death according to the edict ·with their babies hung round their necks, and 61 64
the members of their household and those who had performed the circumcision were executed with them.

Yet there were many in Israel who stood firm and found the courage to refuse 62 65 unclean food. ·They chose death rather than contamination by such fare or profan- 63 66
ation of the holy covenant, and they were executed. ·It was a truly dreadful 64 67 retribution that visited Israel.

II: MATTATHIAS UNLEASHES THE HOLY WAR[a]

Mattathias and his sons

2 About then, Mattathias son of John, son of Simeon, a priest of the line of 1
1 Ch 24:7 Joarib,[b] left Jerusalem and settled in Modein. ·He had five sons, John known 2 as Gaddi, ·Simon called Thassi, ·Judas called Maccabaeus, ·Eleazar, called 3, 4, 5 Avaran, and Jonathan called Apphus.[c] ·When he saw the blasphemies being 6 committed in Judah and Jerusalem, ·he said, 'Alas that I should have been born to 7 Ne 11:1b witness the ruin of my people and the ruin of the Holy City, and to sit by while she is delivered over to her enemies, and the sanctuary into the hand of foreigners.

8 'Her Temple has become like someone of no repute,[d]
9 the vessels that were her glory have been carried off as booty, her babies have been slaughtered in her streets,
her young men by the enemy's sword.
10 Is there a nation that has not claimed a share of her royal prerogatives, that has not taken some of her spoils?
11 All her ornaments have been snatched from her,
her former freedom has become slavery.
12 See how the Holy Place, our beauty, our glory,
is now laid waste,
see how the gentiles have profaned it!
13 What have we left to live for?'

14 Mattathias and his sons tore their garments, put on sackcloth, and observed deep mourning.

The ordeal of the sacrifice at Modein

15 The king's commissioners who were enforcing the apostasy came to the town of 16 Modein for the sacrifices. ·Many Israelites gathered round them, but Mattathias
17 and his sons drew apart. ·The king's commissioners then addressed Mattathias as follows, 'You are a respected leader, a great man in this town; you have sons and 18 brothers to support you. ·Be the first to step forward and conform to the king's decree, as all the nations have done, and the leaders of Judah and the survivors in Jerusalem; you and your sons shall be reckoned among the Friends of the King,[e] you and your sons will be honoured with gold and silver and many presents.'
19 Raising his voice, Mattathias retorted, 'Even if every nation living in the king's dominions obeys him, each forsaking its ancestral religion to conform to his 20 decrees, ·I, my sons and my brothers will still follow the covenant of our ances-
21, 22 tors. ·May Heaven[f] preserve us from forsaking the Law and its observances. ·As for the king's orders, we will not follow them: we shall not swerve from our own
23 religion either to right or to left.' ·As he finished speaking, a Jew came forward in the sight of all to offer sacrifice on the altar in Modein as the royal edict required.
24 When Mattathias saw this, he was fired with zeal; stirred to the depth of his being, he gave vent to his legitimate anger,[g] threw himself on the man and slaughtered

p. Antiochus Epiphanes, in his efforts to unify his empire, imposed gentile practices on the Jews, thus abrogating the charter granted them by Antiochus III in 198, by which the Mosaic Law was recognised as Jewish civil law (also recognised as such by the Persian kings when the Jews returned from exile). Loyalty to the Law thus became political rebellion; hence the persecution. Religious freedom returned with the edict of Antiochus V, 6:57–61; 2 M 11:22–26.

q. Of the Seleucid era, reckoning from spring: hence, December 167.

r. 'The appalling abomination', Dn 9:27; 11:31, was the altar of Baal Shamem or Olympian Zeus erected on the Jewish altar of burnt offering.

s. Book of the 'Covenant' or books of the 'Law': here, meaning the Pentateuch.

t. Monthly commemoration of the king's birthday, see 2 M 6:7, which also happened to be the anniversary of the inauguration of the altar. Three years later, to the day, Judas was to celebrate the dedication of the new altar, 4:52seq.

2 a. Persecution produces a revival of religious awareness. Jewish opposition to Hellenism takes the form of physical violence, 2:15–28, passive resistance, 2:29–38, and ultimately a war of religion under the leadership of Mattathias, 2:39–48, but particularly under Judas Maccabaeus, ch. 3–5. Judas had realised that religious and political independence were interconnected; for this reason the struggle continued even after religious freedom had been won, 6:57–62. But the shift from the religious to a political ground led to the compromises and party squabbles occupying the last part of the book. These in the end were to oust religious zeal and discredit the Maccabees' successors, the Hasmonaeans, in the estimation of their devout contemporaries.

b. Head of the first of the twenty-four priestly orders; that of Jedaiah who, according to Josephus, was the ancestor of the Oniad high priests, being only the second in seniority, see 1 Ch 24:7. But this pre-eminence may be due to an adjustment of the text after the Maccabees had succeeded to the high-priestly office, 10:20.

c. The nicknames: Gaddi, Avaran, Apphus can mean 'Fortunate', 'Alert', 'Favoured'; Maccabaeus may mean 'hammer-headed', or is perhaps a shortened form of maqqabyahu, 'Yahweh's Designate', see Is 62:2. The meaning of Thassi is uncertain.

d. 'no repute' Gk MSS and Lat.; 'high repute' Gk. The original text presumably read 'not of high repute' (a Hebraism) and the negative later was lost, either by accident or because of scruples.

e. Title of honour, a survival from the court of Persia; there were various grades. The 'Friends of the King' had free access to the sovereign who from time to time assigned them certain responsibilities, see 3:38; 7:8; 10:16,20,60,65; 11:27,57; 14:39; 15:28; 2 M 8:9.

f. A common biblical expression, here, as elsewhere in the book, standing for 'God'.

g. lit. '(anger) appropriate to the Law', see Dt 13:7–12. Zeal for the Law characterises the piety of the times. In the following century, piety takes a more political flavour with the party of the Zealots.

him on the altar. ·At the same time he killed the king's commissioner who was 25
there to enforce the sacrifice, and tore down the altar. ·In his zeal for the Law he 26
Nb 25:6–15 acted as Phinehas had against Zimri son of Salu. ·Then Mattathias went through 27
the town, shouting at the top of his voice, 'Let everyone who has any zeal for the Law and takes his stand on the covenant come out and follow me.' ·Then he fled 28
2 M 5:27 with his sons into the hills, leaving all their possessions behind in the town.

The ordeal of the Sabbath in the desert

Many people who were concerned for virtue and justice went down to the desert 29 and stayed there, ·taking with them their sons, their wives and their cattle, so 30 oppressive had their sufferings become. ·Word was brought to the royal officials 31 and forces stationed in Jerusalem, in the City of David, that those who had repudiated the king's edict had gone down to the hiding places in the desert. ·A 32 ‖2 M 6:11 strong detachment went after them, and when it came up with them ranged itself against them in battle formation, preparing to attack them on the Sabbath day, and said, 'Enough of this! Come out and do as the king orders and you will be 33 spared.' ·The others, however, replied, 'We refuse to come out, and we will not 34 obey the king's orders and profane the Sabbath day.'[h] ·The royal forces at once 35 went into action, ·but the others offered no opposition; not a stone was thrown, 36
there was no barricading of the hiding places. ·They only said, 'Let us all die 37 innocent; let heaven and earth bear witness that you are massacring us with no pretence of justice.' ·The attack was pressed home on the Sabbath itself, and they 38 were slaughtered, with their wives and children and cattle, to the number of one thousand persons.

The activity of Mattathias and his associates

When the news reached Mattathias and his friends, they mourned them bitterly 39 and said to one another, 'If we all do as our brothers have done, and refuse to fight 40 the gentiles for our lives and institutions, they will only destroy us the sooner from the earth.' ·So then and there they came to this decision, 'If anyone attacks 41 us on the Sabbath day, whoever he may be, we shall resist him; we must not all be killed, as our brothers were in the hiding places.'

Soon they were joined by the Hasidaean[i] party, stout fighting men of Israel, 42
each one a volunteer on the side of the Law. ·All the refugees from the persecution 43 rallied to them, giving them added support. ·They organised themselves into an 44 armed force, striking down the sinners in their anger, and the renegades in their fury, and those who escaped them fled to the gentiles for safety. ·Mattathias and 45 his friends made a tour, overthrowing the altars ·and forcibly circumcising all the 46 boys they found uncircumcised in the territories of Israel. ·They hunted down the 47
upstarts and managed their campaign to good effect. ·They wrested the Law out of 48
the control of the gentiles and the kings and reduced the sinners to impotence.[j]

The testament and death of Mattathias[k]

As the days of Mattathias were drawing to a close, he said to his sons, 'Arrogance 49 and outrage are now in the ascendant; it is a period of turmoil and bitter hatred.
This is the time, my children, for you to have a burning zeal for the Law and to give 50 your lives for the covenant of our ancestors.

Remember the deeds performed by our ancestors, each in his generation, 51 and you will win great honour and everlasting renown.
Was not Abraham tested and found faithful, 52
Gn 15:6c was that not considered as justifying him?
Gn 37:39–41 Joseph in the time of his distress maintained the Law, 53
and so became lord of Egypt.
Nb 25:6–13 Phinehas, our father,[l] in return for his burning zeal, 54 received the covenant of everlasting priesthood.

55 Joshua, for carrying out his task, — Jos passim became judge of Israel.
56 Caleb, for his testimony before the assembled people, — Nb 13:30; 14:24 received an inheritance in the land.
57 David for his generous heart — 2 S 7 inherited the throne of an everlasting kingdom.
58 Elijah for his consuming fervour for the Law — 1 K 19:10,14; 2 K 2:11–12 was caught up to heaven itself.
59 Hananiah, Azariah and Mishael, for their fidelity, — Dn 3 were saved from the flame.
60 Daniel for his singleness of heart — Dn 6
was rescued from the lion's jaws.
61 Know then that, generation after generation,
no one who hopes in him will be overcome.
62 Do not fear the threats of the sinner, [m] all his brave show must come to the dunghill and the worms.
63 Exalted today, tomorrow he is nowhere to be found, for he has returned to the dust he came from
and his scheming is brought to nothing.
64 My children, be resolute and courageous for the Law,
for it will bring you glory.

65 'Here is your brother Simeon, [n] I know he is a man of sound judgement. Listen 66 to him all your lives; let him take your father's place. ·Judas Maccabaeus, strong and brave from his youth, let him be your general and conduct the war against the 67 gentiles. ·The rest of you are to enrol in your ranks all those who keep the Law, 68 and to assure the vengeance of your people. ·Pay back the gentiles to the full, and 69 hold fast to the ordinance of the Law.' ·Then he blessed them and was joined to his 70 ancestors. ·He died in the year 146 and was buried in his ancestral tomb at Modein, and all Israel mourned him deeply.

III: JUDAS MACCABAEUS, LEADER OF THE JEWS (166–160 BC)

The eulogy of Judas Maccabaeus

1. 2 3 His son, Judas, known as Maccabaeus, then took his place. ·All his brothers, and all who had attached themselves to his father, supported him, and they fought for Israel with a will.

3 He extended the fame of his people.
Like a giant, he put on the breastplate
and buckled on his war harness;

h. Ex 16:29 forbids anyone to leave home on the Sabbath day, cf. Ex 20:8f; the Damascus Document, one of the Qumran texts, following Nb 35:4seq., limits a Sabbath day's journey out of town to 1000 cubits (583 yd, 533m), and to 2000 cubits (1166 yd, 1066 m), to pasture flocks, thus precluding virtually all activity, see Ne 13:15seq. The insurgents were soon to learn that they had to defend themselves, even on the Sabbath day, v. 40seq.

i. Gk form of the Hebr. hasidim, the 'Devout'; the Jewish party devoted to the Law; resisting gentile influence even before the Maccabaean period, they became Judas' shock-troops, see 2 M 14:6, without, however, embracing Hasmonaean policies, see 1 M 7:13. Josephus says (see Ant. XIII, 17seq.), that under the principate of Jonathan, in about 150, they split into the two groups known as Pharisees (Mt 3:7f; Ac 4:1a) and Essenes, the latter better known since the discoveries at Qumran.

j. lit. 'did not give a horn to the sinner': for this biblical symbol of strength, see Ps 18:2d; see also Dn 7–8.

k. The testament of Mattathias is reminiscent of the Eulogy of the Ancestors in Si 44–50.

l. The author derives the descent of the contemporary high priest, Simon II, from Eleazar, son of Aaron and father of Phinehas, the ancestor of Zadok and the Oniads: he casts no doubt, therefore, on the legitimacy of the Hasmonaean priesthood.

m. Presumably Antiochus Epiphanes, see 1:10 (and 2:48 ?); 2 M 9:9.

n. Simeon is the Semitic name of Mattathias' second son, see 2:2, while Simon is a Gk name, chosen because it sounds much the same. Despite his age and qualities, he was only third in assuming leadership of the nation, see ch. 13.

he engaged in battle after battle,
protecting the ranks with his sword.
He was like a lion in his exploits, 4
like a young lion roaring over its prey.
He pursued and tracked down the renegades, 5
he consigned those who troubled his people to the flames.
The renegades quailed with the terror he inspired, 6
all evil-doers were utterly confounded,
and deliverance went forward under his leadership.
He brought bitterness to many a king 7
and rejoicing to Jacob by his deeds,
his memory is blessed for ever and ever.
He went through the towns of Judah 8
eliminating the irreligious from them,
and diverted the Retribution from Israel.
His name resounded to the ends of the earth, 9
he rallied those who were on the point of perishing.

‖2 M 8:1–7 Initial successes of Judas [a]

Next, Apollonius [b] mustered the gentiles and a large force from Samaria to make 10 war on Israel. ·When Judas learned of it, he went out to meet him and routed and 11 killed him. Many fell wounded, and the survivors took to flight. ·Their spoils were 12 seized and the sword of Apollonius was taken by Judas, who used it to fight with throughout his life. ·On hearing that Judas had raised a mixed force of believers 13 and seasoned fighters, ·Seron, commander of the Syrian troops, said, 'I shall make 14 a name for myself and gain honour in the kingdom if I fight Judas and those supporters of his who are so contemptuous of the king's orders.' ·He therefore 15 launched another expedition, with a strong army of unbelievers to support him in taking revenge on the Israelites. ·He had nearly reached the descent of Beth- 16 Horon when Judas went out to confront him with a handful of men. ·But as soon as 17 these saw the force advancing to meet them, they said to Judas, 'How can we, few as we are, engage such overwhelming numbers? We are exhausted as it is, not having had anything to eat today.' ·'It is easy', Judas answered, 'for a great number 18
2:21f to be defeated by a few; indeed, in the sight of Heaven, [c] deliverance, whether by 1 S 14:6 many or by few, is all one; ·for victory in war does not depend on the size of the 19 fighting force: Heaven accords the strength. ·They are coming against us in full- 20 blown insolence and lawlessness to destroy us, our wives and our children, and to plunder us; ·but we are fighting for our lives and our laws, ·and he will crush them 21, 22 before our eyes; do not be afraid of them.' [d] ·When he had finished speaking, he 23 made a sudden sally against Seron and his force and overwhelmed them. ·Judas 24 Jos 10:10 pursued them down from Beth-Horon as far as the plain. About eight hundred of their men fell, and the rest took refuge in the country of the Philistines. [e] ·Judas 25 and his brothers began to be feared, and alarm seized the surrounding peoples.
His name even reached the king's ears, and among the nations there was talk of 26
Judas and his battles.

Antiochus prepares to invade Persia and Judaea. [f] Regency of Lysias

The news of these events infuriated Antiochus, and he ordered mobilisation of all 27
the forces in his kingdom, a very powerful army. ·Opening his treasury, he 28 distributed a year's pay to his troops, telling them to be prepared for any eventuality. ·He then found that the money in his coffers had run short and that the 29 tribute of the province had decreased, as a result of the dissension and disaster brought on the country by his own abrogation of laws that had been in force from antiquity. ·He began to fear that, as had happened more than once, he would not 30 have enough to cover the expenses and the lavish bounties he had previously been accustomed to make on a larger scale than his predecessors on the throne. ·In this 31 grave quandary he resolved to invade Persia, there to levy tribute on the provinces 32 and so accumulate substantial funds. ·He therefore left Lysias, a nobleman and member of the royal family, to manage the royal affairs between the River Eu-33 phrates and the Egyptian frontier,[g] ·making him responsible for the education of 34 his son Antiochus,[h] until he should come back. ·To him Antiochus made over half his forces, with the elephants, giving him instructions about what he wanted 35 done, particularly with regard to the inhabitants of Judaea and Jerusalem, ·against whom he was to send a force, to crush and destroy the power of Israel and the 36 remnant of Jerusalem, to wipe out their very memory from the place, ·to settle 37 foreigners in all parts of their territory and to distribute their land into lots.[i] ·The king took the remaining half of his troops with him and set out from Antioch, the capital of his kingdom, in the year 147; he crossed the River Euphrates and made his way through the Upper Provinces.[j]

Gorgias and Nicanor lead the Syrian army into Judaea ‖2 M 8:8–15

38 Lysias chose Ptolemy son of Dorymenes, with Nicanor and Gorgias, influential 2 M 4:45;
39 men from among the Friends of the King,[k] ·and, under their command, despatched 8:8seq.;10:14 forty thousand foot and seven thousand horse to invade the land of Judah and ·2:18e 40 devastate it, as the king had ordered. ·The entire force set out and reached the 41 neighbourhood of Emmaus in the lowlands, where they pitched camp. ·The local merchants, hearing the news of this, arrived at the camp, bringing with them a large amount of gold and silver, and fetters[l] as well, proposing to buy the Israelites as slaves; they were accompanied by people from Idumaea and the Philistine 42 country.[m] ·Judas and his brothers saw that the situation was going from bad to worse and that armies were camping in their territory; they were also well aware 43 that the king had ordered the people's total destruction. ·So they said to each other, 'Let us restore the ruins of our people and fight for our people and our 44 sanctuary.' ·The Assembly was summoned, to prepare for war, to offer prayer and to implore compassion and mercy.

45 Jerusalem was as empty as a desert,
none of her children to go in and out.
The sanctuary was trodden underfoot,
men of an alien race held the Citadel,
which had become a lodging for gentiles.
There was no more rejoicing for Jacob,
the flute and lyre were mute.

3 a. These first two engagements are not mentioned in 2 M.

b. According to Josephus, Apollonius, see 1:29n, was governor of Samaria.

c. 'of Heaven' Gk MSS, Vet. Lat.; 'of the God of heaven' remaining Gk, but from motives of respect 1 M systematically avoids the word 'God'.

d. Exhortation in the style of Deuteronomy, see Dt 1:29seq.; 3:18–22; 9:1seq. Jewish literature of the period is frequently modelled on the stories of the Patriarchs and of the Conquest. v. 21 admirably sums up the basic reason for the early Maccabaean resistance.

e. Deliberately archaic expression to denote the coastal region, see 15:38.

f. The author's natural bias makes the Jewish problem central to Antiochus IV's preoccupations. In reality, the Asiatic campaign was not intended merely to replenish the royal exchequer, but also to reconquer Armenia.

g. That is to say, the Transeuphratene province of the Persian period. Lysias (known also to the historian Polybius) was evidently general officer commanding Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, see 2 M 10:11, as well as Upper Syria. • The expression 'member of the royal family' corresponds to 'King's Cousin', 2 M 11:1, the highest title of honour in the Seleucid court, see 1 M 10:89.

h. The future Antiochus V Eupator, 6:17, whose upbringing was two years later entrusted to Philip, the king's intimate friend, 6:14; 2 M 9:29.

i. The rebellious Jews were intended to be wiped out or sold into slavery, 2 M 8:9–11, and their lands to be confiscated and then partly redistributed to foreigners, see Dn 11:39. Judaea would thus have become crown land, rented to settlers in individual lots. The rent exacted was a more severe imposition than the older form of tribute.

j. Other name for the Iranian plateau, see 6:1; 2 M 9:25. • The date is now spring 165.

k. Ptolemy was general of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, 2 M 8:8. Gorgias was a general in the limited, military sense and it was he who directed operations, although Nicanor took precedence over him as 'First Friend' of the king, 2 M 8:9. The latter reappears directing a campaign five years later, 7:26.

l. 'fetters' pedas conj. following Syr. and Josephus; 'children' paidas Gk, Lat.

m. 'Idumaea' conj.; Gk and versions have 'Syria', which presumably translates Hebr. 'aram, read instead of 'edom, a common mistake, see Jg 3:8; 1 K 11:25; 2 K 16:6; etc. • 'Philistine country', lit. 'land of the foreigners', in Gk allophyles, which in LXX designates the Philistines, see 5:68.

The Jews muster at Mizpah

Jg 20:1–3
1 S 7:5–6,5c

After mustering, they made their way to Mizpah,[n] opposite Jerusalem, since 46
Mizpah was traditionally a place of prayer for Israel. ·That day they fasted and put 47 on sackcloth, covering their heads with ashes and tearing their garments. ·For the 48 guidance that the gentiles would have sought from the images of their false gods,[o]
2 M 8:23 they opened the Book of the Law. ·They also brought out the priestly vestments, 49
Nb 6:1a with first-fruits and tithes, and marshalled the Nazirites who had completed the 2:21f period of their vow.[p] ·Then, raising their voices to Heaven, they cried, 'What shall 50
we do with these people, and where are we to take them? ·Your holy place has 51 been trampled underfoot and defiled, your priests mourn in their humiliation, ·and 52 now the gentiles are in alliance to destroy us: you know what they have in mind for us. ·How can we stand up and face them if you do not come to our aid?' ·Then they 53, 54 sounded the trumpets and raised a great shout.

Ex 18:21seq. Next, Judas appointed leaders for the people, to command a thousand, a 55 hundred, fifty or ten men.[q] ·Those who were in the middle of building a house, or 56
Jg 7:3c were about to be married, or were planting a vineyard, or were afraid, he told to go
Dt 20:5–9 home again, as the Law allowed. ·The column then marched off and took up a 57 position south of Emmaus. ·'Stand to your arms,' Judas told them, 'acquit your- 58 selves bravely, in the morning be ready to fight these gentiles massed against us to destroy us and our sanctuary. ·Better for us to die in battle than to watch 59 2:21f the ruin of our nation and our Holy Place. ·Whatever be the will of Heaven, he will 60 perform it.'

||2M 8:23–29

The battle of Emmaus

4 Gorgias took with him five thousand foot and a thousand picked cavalry, and 1
the force moved off by night ·with the object of attacking the Jewish position 2 1:33 and dealing them an unexpected blow; the men from the Citadel were there to guide him. ·Judas got wind of it and himself moved off with his fighters to strike at 3
the royal army at Emmaus, ·while its fighting troops were still dispersed outside 4 the camp. ·Hence, when Georgias reached Judas' camp, he found no one and 5 began looking for the Jews in the mountains. 'For', he said, 'we have got them on the run.' ·First light found Judas in the plain with three thousand men, although 6 these lacked the armour and swords they would have wished. ·They could now see 7 the gentile encampment with its strong fortifications and cavalry surrounding it, clearly people who understood warfare.

Judas said to his men,[a] 'Do not be afraid of their numbers, and do not flinch at 8
2:21f their attack. ·Remember how our ancestors were delivered at the Red Sea when 9
Pharaoh was pursuing them in force. ·And now let us call on Heaven: if he cares 10 for us, he will remember his covenant with our ancestors and will destroy this army confronting us today; ·then all the nations will know for certain that there is One 11 who ransoms and saves Israel.'

The foreigners looked up and, seeing the Jews advancing against them, ·came 12, 13 out of the camp to join battle. Judas' men sounded the trumpet ·and engaged 14 them. The gentiles were defeated and fled towards the plain ·and all the stragglers 15 fell by the sword. The pursuit continued as far as Gezer[b] and the plains of Idumaea, Azotus and Jamnia, and the enemy lost about three thousand men.

Breaking off the pursuit, Judas returned with his men ·and said to the people, 16, 17
'Never mind the booty, for we have another battle ahead of us. ·Gorgias and his 18 troops are still near us in the mountains. First stand up to our enemies and fight them, and then you can safely collect the booty.' ·The words were hardly out of 19 Judas' mouth, when a detachment came into view, peering down from the mountain. ·Observing that their own troops had been routed and that the camp had been 20 fired—since the smoke, which they could see, attested the fact—·they were panic- 21 stricken at the sight; and when, furthermore, they saw Judas' troops drawn up for battle on the plain, ·they all fled into Philistine territory. ·Judas then turned back 22, 23 to plunder the camp, and a large sum in gold and silver, with violet and sea-purple[c] stuffs, and many other valuables were carried off. •On their return, the Jews chanted praises to Heaven, singing, 'He is kind and his love is everlasting!' [d] •That day had seen a remarkable deliverance in Israel. •Those of the foreigners who had escaped came and gave Lysias an account of all that had happened. [e] •The news shocked and dismayed him, for affairs in Israel had not gone as he intended, and the result was quite the opposite to what the king had ordered. Ps 118:1–3,1a

First campaign of Lysias ‖2 M 11:1–12

The next year he mobilised sixty thousand picked troops and five thousand cavalry with the intention of finishing off the Jews. •They advanced into Idumaea and made their base at Beth-Zur,[f] where Judas met them with ten thousand men. When he saw their military strength he offered this prayer, 'Blessed are you, Saviour of Israel, who shattered the mighty warrior's attack at the hand of your servant David, and delivered the Philistine camp into the hands of Jonathan son of Saul, and his armour-bearer. •Crush this expedition in the same way at the hands of your people Israel; let their troops and cavalry bring them nothing but shame. Sow panic in their ranks, confound the confidence they put in their numbers and send them reeling in defeat. •Overthrow them by the sword of those who love you, and all who acknowledge your name will sing your praises.' •The two forces engaged, and five thousand men of Lysias' troops fell in hand-to-hand fighting. Seeing the rout of his army and the courage of Judas' troops and their readiness to live or die nobly, Lysias withdrew to Antioch,[g] where he recruited mercenaries for a further invasion of Judaea in even greater strength. 1 S 17 1 S 14 1–23

Purification and dedication of the Temple [h] ‖2 M 10:1–8

Judas and his brothers then said, 'Now that our enemies have been defeated, let us go up to purify the sanctuary and dedicate it.' •So they marshalled the whole army, and went up to Mount Zion. •There they found the sanctuary deserted, the altar desecrated, the gates burnt down, and vegetation growing in the courts as it might in a wood or on some mountain, while the storerooms were in ruins. •They tore their garments and mourned bitterly, putting dust on their heads. •They prostrated themselves on the ground, and when the trumpets gave the signal they cried aloud to Heaven. Ps 74:2–7 2:21f

Judas then ordered his men to keep the Citadel garrison engaged until he had purified the sanctuary. •Next, he selected priests who were blameless and zealous for the Law •to purify the sanctuary and remove the stones of the 'Pollution' [i] to some unclean place.

n. Traditional rallying-place for Israel, Jg 20:1; 1 S 7:5; 10:17; see Jr 40:6, about 8 miles (13 km) north of Jerusalem.

o. 2 M 8:23 throws light on this passage. Since there were no more prophets, the Book of the Law was opened at random to ask divine guidance on the advisability of joining battle and the probable result.

p. On expiry of their vow, Nazirites had to offer a sacrifice in the Temple, Nb 6:13. But the Temple was now desecrated and inaccessible.

q. These units have little place in the Hellenistic armies of the day; the Jews were still using their ancient type of judicial and military organisation, Ex 18:21 (cf. Ex 18:13g); Nb 31:48; Dt 1:15; 2 S 18:1; 2 K 1:9–14. The Essenes of later times preserved the same organisation.

4 a. see 3:22d. Exhortation before battle, ordered by Dt 20:2, seems to have been universal in antiquity as now; see also 2 M 16–20.

b. Gezer, though attacked by Judas, 2 M 10:32, was first taken by Simon, who made it into a residence for his son (John Hyrcanus), 1 M 13:43seq.; 14:7.34; 16:1.21. See also Jos 10:33.

c. 'Sea-purple' or Tyrian purple is a deep red, and the same as the 'scarlet-purple' of Ex 25–29.

d. lit. 'his faithful love'. They evidently sang Ps 118, see 2 Ch 20:21.

e. see 3:37 and 2 M 11:21. We are now at the beginning of the year 164.

f. The army had marched down the Judaean flank through the flat lands. The Seleucid citadel of Beth-Zur, see 6:7, lay at the southernmost limit of Judaea, about 18 miles (29 km) from Jerusalem, on the Hebron road.

g. The author seems not to know about the elaborate bargaining that followed this decisive clash between Judas and Lysias' superior forces, 2 M 11:13seq.

h. The Temple is one of the principal objectives of the rebels, see 2:7; 3:43; 2 M 13:11, as the centre of Jewish religious life, without which the Law could not be observed in its fullness. The gentiles had sacked and profaned it, 1:21seq.; 1:54; now, as soon as the first victories are won, it is purified and reconsecrated. The death of Antiochus Epiphanes, which our author mistakenly places after the expeditions against the Idumaeans and Ammonites, ch. 5, doubtless had something to do with it too. The concept of the holiness of the Temple will be a dominant theme in the second book, 2 M 3:12; 5:15; 13:11; 15:18; 15:37m.

i. The Gk word probably renders Hebr. shiqqutz, often used to mean idols (the 'horrors', see Dt 29:16; Jr 4:1; 7:30; etc.; Ezk 5:11; 7:20; 11:18; etc.), and here means the idolatrous altar, see 1 M 1:54.

1 K 8:64s They discussed what should be done about the altar of burnt offering which had 44 been profaned, ·and very properly decided to pull it down, rather than later be 45 embarrassed about it since it had been defiled by the gentiles. They therefore demolished it ·and deposited the stones in a suitable place on the hill of the 46 Dwelling to await the appearance of a prophet[j] who should give a ruling about Ex 20:25 them. ·They took unhewn stones, as the Law prescribed, and built a new altar on 47
the lines of the old one. ·They restored the Holy Place and the interior of the 48
Ex 25:23–30, 31–39;30:1–10 Dwelling, and purified the courts. ·They made new sacred vessels, and brought the 49 lamp-stand, the altar of incense, and the table into the Temple. ·They burned 50 incense on the altar and lit the lamps on the lamp-stand, and these shone inside the Temple. ·They placed the loaves on the table and hung the curtains and completed 51 all the tasks they had undertaken.

On the twenty-fifth of the ninth month, Chislev, in the year 148[k] they rose at 52 dawn ·and offered a lawful sacrifice on the new altar of burnt offering which they 53 had made. ·The altar was dedicated, to the sound of hymns, zithers, lyres and 54 cymbals, at the same time of year and on the same day on which the gentiles had originally profaned it. ·The whole people fell prostrate in adoration and then 55 praised Heaven who had granted them success. ·For eight days they celebrated the 56 dedication of the altar, joyfully offering burnt offerings, communion and thanksgiving sacrifices. ·They ornamented the front of the Temple with crowns and bosses 57 of gold, renovated the gates and storerooms, providing the latter with doors. ·There 58 was no end to the rejoicing among the people, since the disgrace inflicted by the gentiles had been effaced. ·Judas, with his brothers and the whole assembly of 59 Israel, made it a law that the days of the dedication of the altar should be celebrated yearly at the proper season, for eight days beginning on the twenty-fifth of the month Chislev, with rejoicing and gladness.[l]

They then proceeded to build high walls with strong towers round Mount Zion, 60 to prevent the gentiles from coming and riding roughshod over it as in the past.
Judas stationed a garrison there to guard it; he also fortified Beth-Zur,[m] so that the 61 people would have a fortress confronting Idumaea.

The expedition against the Idumaeans and Ammonites[a]

5 When the surrounding nations heard that the altar had been rebuilt and the 1 sanctuary restored to what it had been before, they became very angry ·and 2 decided to destroy the descendants of Jacob living among them; they began to murder and evict our people.

‖2 M 10:15–23 Judas made war on the sons of Esau in Idumaea, in the region of Acrabattene[b] 3 where they were besieging the Israelites. He dealt them a serious blow, drove them off and despoiled them. ·He also remembered the wickedness of the sons of 4 Baean,[c] who were a menace and a trap for the people with their ambushes on the roads. ·Having blockaded them in their town and besieged them, he put them 5
Jos 6:17c under the curse of destruction; he then set fire to their towers and burned them
Dt 2:5c down with everyone inside. ·Next, he crossed over to the Ammonites where he 6 found a strong fighting force and a numerous people, commanded by Timotheus.
He fought many battles with them, defeated them and cut them to pieces. 7
Having captured Jazer and its dependent villages, he retired to Judaea. 8

Preliminaries to campaigns in Galilee and Gilead

Next, the gentiles of Gilead[d] banded together to destroy the Israelites living in 9 their territory. The latter, however, took refuge in the fortress of Dathema, ·and 10 sent the following letter to Judas and his brothers:

'The gentiles round us have banded themselves together against us to destroy us, ·and they are preparing to storm the fortress in which we have taken refuge; 11
Timotheus is in command of their forces. ·Come at once and rescue us from their 12 clutches, for we have already suffered great losses. ·All our countrymen living in 13

Tobias' country[e] have been killed, their women and children have been taken into captivity, their property has been seized, and about a thousand men have been destroyed there.'

14 While the letter was being read, other messengers arrived from Galilee with 15 their garments torn, bearing similar news, •'The people of Ptolemais,[f] Tyre and Sidon have joined forces with the whole of gentile Galilee to destroy us!' Is 8:23
16 When Judas and the people heard this, they held a great assembly to decide what should be done for their oppressed countrymen who were under attack from their 17 enemies. •Judas said to his brother Simon, 'Pick your men and go and relieve your countrymen in Galilee, while my brother Jonathan and I make our way into 18 Gilead.' •He left Joseph son of Zechariah and the people's leader Azariah with the 19 remainder of the army in Judaea to keep guard, and gave them these orders, •'You are to be responsible for our people. Do not engage the gentiles until we return.'
20 Simon was allotted three thousand men for the expedition into Galilee, Judas eight thousand for Gilead.

The expeditions in Galilee and Gilead

21 Simon advanced into Galilee, engaged the gentiles in several battles and swept all
22 before him; •he pursued them to the gate of Ptolemais, and they lost about three 23 thousand men, whose spoils he collected. •With him, he took away the Jews of Galilee and Arbatta,[g] with their wives and children and all their possessions, and brought them into Judaea with great rejoicing.
24 Meanwhile Judas Maccabaeus and his brother Jonathan crossed the Jordan and ‖2 M 12:10–31
25 made a three-days' march through the desert, •where they encountered the Nabataeans,[h] who gave them a friendly reception and told them everything that had 26 been happening to their brothers in Gilead, •many of whom, they said, were shut up in Bozrah and Bosor, Alema, Chaspho, Maked and Carnaim,[i] all large fortified
27 towns. •Others were blockaded in the other towns of Gilead, and the enemy planned to attack and capture these strongholds the very next day, and destroy all the people inside them on one day.
28 Judas and his army at once turned off by the desert road to Bozrah. He took the town and, having put all the males to the sword and collected the booty, burned it 29 down. •When night came, he left the place, and they continued their march until 30 they reached the fortress.[j] •In the light of dawn they looked, and there was an

l. The feast of Dedication, Hanukkah in Hebr., is one of the most recent in the Jewish calendar, see Ex 23:14d. The Hallel was sung (Ps 113–118), leafy branches and palms were carried. These similarities to the feast of Shelters are stressed in 2 M 1:9d; 10:6; the feast of Shelters itself commemorated the inauguration of the Temple of Solomon, 1 K 8:2.62–66. The lamps lit at Dedication soon gave it its other name, 'feast of Lights'. The fact that these lamps, symbolising the Law, were placed not only in the Temple but also in private houses, assured the survival and popularity of the feast after the desecration of the Temple. It is given great prominence in 2 M, see the two introductory letters and 2 M 10:1–8. It is mentioned in Jn 10:22.

m. Gk adds 'to guard it', dittography.

5 a. The campaigns against the peoples on the frontiers of Judaea, reported in ch. 5, cover a period from the beginning to the autumn of 163, and hence take place after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes. The raids launched against Joppa and Jamnia, 2 M 12:1–9, the previous year, were the prelude to these more sustained efforts.

b. 'Idumaea' Gk form of the name Edom, country of the 'Sons of Esau'. • 'Acrabattene': district of Acrabatta, modern Aqrabah, south-east of Shechem.

c. Semi-nomadic tribe, who probably held travellers to ransom on the Jerusalem–Jericho road.

d. Gilead, primitively speaking, was the country south of the River Jabbok, but soon came to include the region between the Rivers Jabbok and Jarmuk, and in the Hellenistic period the Syrian plateau north of the Jarmuk, where the Jews had numerous colonies.

e. The region between Amman and the River Jordan, ruled by the Jewish family of that name, see Ne 2:10seq.; 6:17seq.; 13:8. This savage episode perhaps accounts for the reprisals ordered by Judas, 2 M 12:17seq.

f. Ptolemais was the name given by Ptolemy II in 261 BC to Acco (see Jos 19:30; Jg 1:31), modern Acre.

g. The region of Arbatta (name perhaps corrupt in the text) is apparently the Narbatene of Josephus, between Galilee and Samaria. The author of 2 M, who is exclusively interested in Judas, does not mention this campaign in Galilee.

h. These are the 'Arabs' of 2 M 5:8; 12:10, and Jonathan later retains their friendship, 1 M 9:35, after a violent engagement, see 2 M 5:11seq. Their centre was Petra, but in the following century they came to dominate a great part of the Transjordanian plateau and even for some time Damascus. Here, they are evidently bringing a caravan from Bozrah (v. 28, modern Basra, in southern Syria) where the desert routes converge, and from the Hauran, where they had witnessed the events which they reported to Judas.

innumerable horde, setting up ladders and engines to capture the fortress; the assault was just beginning. 31 ·When Judas saw that the attack had begun and that the war cry was rising to heaven from the city, mingled with trumpet calls and a great clamour, 32 ·he said to the men of his army, 'Into battle today for your brothers!' Dividing them into three commands, he advanced on the enemy's rear, with 33 trumpets sounding and prayers shouted aloud. 34 ·The troops of Timotheus, recognising that this was Maccabaeus, fled before his advance; Maccabaeus dealt them a crushing defeat; about eight thousand of their men fell that day. 35 ·Then, wheeling on Alema,[k] he attacked and captured it and, having killed all the males and collected the booty, burned the place down. 36 ·From there he moved on and took Chaspho, Maked, Bosor and the remaining towns of Gilead. 37 ·After these events, Timotheus mustered another force and pitched camp opposite Raphon, on the far side of the stream-bed. 38 ·Judas sent men to reconnoitre the camp, and these reported back as follows, 'With him are massed all the gentiles surrounding us, making a very numerous army, 39 ·with Arab mercenaries as auxiliaries; they are encamped on the far side of the stream-bed, and ready to launch an attack on you.' Judas then advanced to engage them, 40 ·and was approaching the watercourse with his troops when Timotheus told the commanders of his army, 'If he crosses first we shall not be able to resist him, because he will have a great advantage over us; 41 ·but if he is afraid and camps on the other side of the stream, we shall cross over to him and the advantage will then be ours.'

As soon as Judas reached the watercourse, he posted people's scribes[l] along it, 42 giving them this order: 'Do not let anyone pitch his tent; all are to go into battle!' He was himself the first across to the enemy side, with all the people following. He 43 defeated all the opposing gentiles, who threw down their arms and ran for refuge in the sanctuary of Carnaim.[m] 44 ·The Jews first captured the town and then burned down the temple with everyone inside. And so Carnaim was overthrown, and the enemy could offer no further resistance to Judas.

Next, Judas assembled all the Israelites living in Gilead, from the least to the 45 greatest, with their wives, children and belongings, an enormous muster, to take them to Judaea. 46 ·They reached Ephron, a large town straddling the road and strongly fortified. As it was impossible to by-pass it either to right or to left, there was nothing for it but to march straight through. 47 ·But the people of the town denied them passage and barricaded the gates with stones. 48 ·Judas sent them a conciliatory message in these terms, 'We want to pass through your territory to reach our own; no one will do you any harm, we only want to go through on foot.' But they would not open up for him. 49 ·So Judas sent an order down the column for everyone to halt where he stood. 50 ·The fighting men took up their positions; Judas attacked the town all day and night, and the town fell to him. 51 ·He put all the males to the sword, rased the town to the ground, plundered it and marched through the town square over the bodies of the dead. 52 ·They then crossed the Jordan into the Great Plain, opposite Beth-Shean, 53 ·Judas all the time rallying the stragglers and encouraging the people the whole way until they reached Judaea. 54 ·They climbed Mount Zion in joy and gladness and presented burnt offerings[n] because they had returned safe and sound without having lost a single man.

Reversal at Jamnia

While Judas and Jonathan were in Gilead and Simon his brother in Galilee outside 55 Ptolemais, 56 ·Joseph son of Zechariah, and Azariah, who were in command of the army, heard of their valiant deeds and of the battles they had been fighting, 57 ·and said, 'Let us make a name for ourselves too and go and fight the nations around us.' 58 ·So they issued orders to the men under their command and marched on Jamnia.[o] 59, 60 ·Gorgias[p] and his men came out of the town and gave battle. ·Joseph and Azariah were routed and pursued as far as the frontiers of Judaea. That day about two thousand Israelites lost their lives. 61 ·Our people thus met with a great reverse, because they had not listened to Judas and his brothers, thinking that they would 62 do something equally valiant. •They were not, however, of the same breed of men as those to whom the deliverance of Israel was entrusted.

Successes in Idumaea and Philistia

63 The noble Judas and his brothers, however, were held in high honour throughout
64 Israel and among all the nations wherever their name was heard, •and people
65 thronged round to acclaim them. •Judas marched out with his brothers to fight the Edomites in the country towards the south; he stormed Hebron and its dependent villages, threw down its fortifications and burned down its encircling towers.
66 Leaving there, he made for the country of the Philistines and passed through 67 Marisa.[q] •Among the fallen in that day's fighting were some priests who sought to 68 prove their courage there by joining in the battle, a foolhardy venture. •Judas next turned on Azotus,[r] which belonged to the Philistines; he overthrew their altars, burned the statues of their gods and, having pillaged their towns, withdrew to Judaea.

The last days of Antiochus Epiphanes[a]

1 6 King Antiochus, meanwhile, was making his way through the Upper Provinces;
he had heard that in Persia there was a city called Elymais,[b] renowned for its 2 riches, its silver and gold, •and its very wealthy temple[c] containing golden armour, breastplates and weapons, left there by Alexander son of Philip, the king of
3 Macedon, the first to reign over the Greeks. •He therefore went and attempted to take the city and pillage it, but without success, the citizens having been fore-
4 warned. •They resisted him by force of arms. He was routed, and began retreating,
5 very gloomily, towards Babylon. •But, while he was still in Persia, news reached
6 him that the armies which had invaded Judaea had been routed, •and that Lysias in particular had advanced in massive strength, only to be forced to turn and flee before the Jews; that the latter were now stronger than ever, thanks to the arms,
7 supplies and abundant spoils acquired from the armies they had cut to pieces, •and that they had pulled down the abomination which he had erected on the altar in 1:54;4:45 Jerusalem, had encircled the sanctuary with high walls as in the past, and had
8 fortified Beth-Zur, one of his cities. •When the king heard this news he was amazed and profoundly shaken; he threw himself on his bed and fell sick with grief, since 9 things had not turned out for him as he had planned.[d] •And there he remained for many days, subject to deep and recurrent fits of melancholy, until he realised that 10 he was dying. •Then, summoning all his Friends, he said to them, 'Sleep evades my 11 eyes, and my heart is cowed by anxiety. •I have been wondering how I could have come to such a pitch of distress, so great a flood as that which now engulfs me—I 12 who was so generous and well-loved in my heyday. •But now I recall how wrongly I acted in Jerusalem when I seized all the vessels of silver and gold there and 13 ordered the extermination of the inhabitants of Judah for no reason at all. •This, I

The accession of Antiochus V

He summoned Philip, [f] one of his Friends, and made him regent of the whole 14 kingdom. ·He entrusted him with his diadem, his robe and his signet, on the 15 understanding that he was to educate his son Antiochus and train him for the throne. ·King Antiochus then died, in the year 149. [g] ·Lysias, learning that the 16, 17 king was dead, established on the throne in succession to him his son Antiochus, whom he had brought up from childhood—and styled him Eupator.

The siege of the Citadel of Jerusalem by Judas Maccabaeus

1:33–35 The people in the Citadel at the time were blockading Israel round the sanctuary 18 and were taking every opportunity to harm them and to support the gentiles.
Judas decided that they must be destroyed, and he mobilised the whole people 19 to besiege them. ·They assembled and laid siege to the Citadel in the year 150, [h] 20 building batteries and siege-engines. ·But some of the besieged broke through 21
the blockade, and to these a number of renegades from Israel attached themselves.
They made their way to the king and said, 'How much longer are you going to 22 wait before you see justice done and avenge our fellows? ·We were content to 23 serve your father, to comply with his orders, and to obey his edicts. · [i] As a result 24 our own people will have nothing to do with us; what is more, they have killed all those of us they could catch, and looted our family property. ·Nor is it on us alone 25 that their blows have fallen, but on all your territories. [j] ·At this moment, they are 26 laying siege to the Citadel of Jerusalem, to capture it, and they have fortified the sanctuary and Beth-Zur. ·Unless you forestall them at once, they will go on to even 27 bigger things, and then you will never be able to control them.'

Campaign of Antiochus V and Lysias. The battle of Beth-Zechariah

The king was furious when he heard this and summoned all his Friends, the 28 generals of his forces and the marshals of horse. [k] ·He recruited mercenaries from 29 other kingdoms and the Mediterranean islands. ·His forces numbered a hundred 30 thousand foot soldiers, twenty thousand cavalry and thirty-two elephants with experience of battle conditions. ·They advanced through Idumaea [l] and besieged 31 Beth-Zur, pressing the attack for days on end; they also constructed siege-engines, but the defenders made a sortie and set these on fire, putting up a brave resistance.

At this, Judas left the Citadel and pitched camp at Beth-Zechariah [m] opposite 32
the royal encampment. ·The king rose at daybreak and marched his army at top 33 speed down the road to Beth-Zechariah, where his forces took up their battle formations and sounded the trumpets. ·The elephants were given a syrup of grapes 34 and mulberries to prepare them for the battle. ·These animals were distributed 35 among the phalanxes, to each elephant being allocated a thousand men dressed in coats of mail with bronze helmets on their heads; five hundred picked horsemen were also assigned to each beast. ·The horsemen anticipated every move their 36 elephant made; wherever it went they went with it, never quitting it. ·On each 37 elephant, to protect it, was a stout wooden tower, kept in position by girths, each with its three combatants, [n] as well as its mahout. ·The remainder of the cavalry 38 was stationed on one or other of the two flanks of the army, to harass the enemy and cover the phalanxes. [o]

When the sun glinted on the bronze and golden shields, [p] the mountains caught 39
the glint and gleamed like fiery torches. ·One part of the royal army was deployed 40 on the upper slopes of the mountain and the other in the valley below; they advanced in solid, well-disciplined formation. ·Everyone trembled at the noise 41 made by this vast multitude, the thunder of the troops on the march and the clanking of their armour, for it was an immense and mighty army. ·Judas and his 42 army advanced to give battle, and six hundred of the king's army were killed.

43 Eleazar, called Avaran, noticing that one of the elephants was royally caparisoned and was also taller than all the others, and supposing that the king was 44 mounted on it, ·sacrificed[q] himself to save his people and win an imperishable 45 name. ·Boldly charging towards the creature through the thick of the phalanx, dealing death to right and left, so that the enemy scattered on either side at his 46 onslaught, ·he darted in under the elephant, thrust at it from underneath, and 47 killed it. The beast collapsed on top of him, and he died on the spot. ·The Jews however realising how strong the king was and how ferocious his army, retreated ahead of them.

The capture of Beth-Zur and siege of Mount Zion by the Syrians

48 The royal army moved up to encounter them outside Jerusalem, and the king
49 began to blockade Judaea and Mount Zion. ·He granted peace terms to the people of Beth-Zur, who evacuated the town; it lacked store of provisions to withstand a
50 siege, since the land was enjoying a sabbatical year.[r] ·Having occupied Beth-Zur, Lv 25:1a
51 the king stationed a garrison there to hold it. ·He besieged the sanctuary for a long time, erecting batteries and siege-engines, flame-throwers and ballistas, scorpions[s]
52 to discharge arrows, and catapults. ·The defenders countered these by constructing 53 their own engines and were thus able to prolong their resistance. ·But they had no food in their stores[t] since it was the seventh year, and because those who had taken 54 refuge in Judaea from the gentiles had eaten up the last of their reserves. ·Only a few men were left in the Holy Place, owing to the severity of the famine; the rest had dispersed and gone home.

The king grants the Jews religious freedom

55 Meanwhile Philip, whom King Antiochus before his death had appointed to train
56 his son Antiochus for the throne, ·had returned from Persia and Media with the forces that had accompanied the king, and was planning to seize control of affairs.
57 On hearing this, Lysias at once decided to leave, and said to the king, the generals ‖2 M 11:13–33 of the army and the men, 'We are growing weaker every day, we are short of food, and the place we are besieging is well fortified; moreover the affairs of the kingdom
58 demand our attention. ·Let us offer the hand of friendship to these men and make 59 peace with them and with their whole nation. ·Let us grant them permission to follow their own customs as before, since it is our abolition of these customs that
60 has provoked them into acting like this.'[u] ·The king and his commanders approved
61 this argument, and he offered the Jews peace terms, which they accepted. ·The king and the generals ratified the treaty by oath, and the besieged accordingly left

‖2 M 14:1–10 Demetrius I becomes king, and sends Bacchides and Alcimus to Judaea

7 In the year 151, Demetrius son of Seleucus left Rome and arrived with a few 1 men at a town on the coast, where he inaugurated his reign.[a] ·It so happened 2 that, as he was entering the royal residence of his ancestors, the army captured Antiochus and Lysias, and intended to bring them to him. ·On hearing this, he 3 said, 'Keep them out of my sight.' ·The army put them to death, and Demetrius 4 ascended his throne. ·Next, all those Israelites without law or piety, led by Alci- 5 mus, whose ambition was to become high priest, ·approached the king and de- 6 nounced our people to him. 'Judas and his brothers', they said, 'have killed all your friends, and he has driven us out of our country. ·Send someone now whom you 7 can trust; let him go and see the wholesale ruin Judas has brought on us and on the king's dominions, and let him punish the wretches and all who assist them.'

him with the godless Alcimus,[c] whom he confirmed in the high priesthood, with orders to exact retribution from the Israelites. ·So they set out with a large force 10 and, on reaching Judaea, sent emissaries to Judas and his brothers with proposals peaceable yet treacherous. ·The latter, however, did not put any faith in their 11 words, aware that they had come with a large force. ·Nevertheless, a commission 12 of scribes[d] presented themselves before Alcimus and Bacchides, to sue for just terms. ·The first among the Israelites to ask them for peace terms[e] were the 13 2:42i Hasidaeans, ·who reasoned thus, 'This is a priest of Aaron's line who has come 14 with the armed forces; he will not wrong us.' ·He did in fact discuss peace terms 15 with them and gave them his oath, 'We shall not attempt to injure you or your friends.' ·They believed him, but he arrested sixty of them and put them to death 16
Ps 79:2–3 on one day, fulfilling the words of scripture:[f] ·They have scattered the bodies of 17 your faithful, and shed their blood all round Jerusalem, leaving no one to bury them!
·At this, fear and dread gripped the whole people. 'There is no truth or virtue in 18 them,' they said, 'they have broken their agreement and their sworn oath.'

Bacchides then left Jerusalem and encamped at Beth-Zeth, and from there sent 19 and arrested many of the men who had deserted him and a few of our people too;
he had them killed and thrown down the great well.[g] ·He then put Alcimus in 20 charge of the province, leaving an army with him to support him; Bacchides himself returned to the king. ·Alcimus continued his struggle to become high priest, ·and 21, 22 all who were disturbing the peace of their own people rallied to him, and, having won control of Judaea, did much harm in Israel. ·Seeing that all the wrongs done 23 to the Israelites by Alcimus and his supporters exceeded what the gentiles had done, ·Judas went right round the whole territory of Judaea to take vengeance on 24 those who had deserted him and to prevent their free movement about the country.

Nicanor in Judaea and battle of Caphar-Salama

When Alcimus saw how strong Judas and his supporters had grown and realised 25 that he was powerless to resist them, he went back to the king, to whom he made 3:38 malicious accusations against them. ·The king sent Nicanor, one of his generals 26
2 M 8:9, 34–36; 14:12–14;15:3 ranking as Illustrious and a bitter enemy of Israel, with orders to exterminate the people. ·Reaching Jerusalem with a large force, Nicanor sent a friendly, yet 27 treacherous, message to Judas and his brothers, as follows: ·'Let us have no 28 fighting between you and me; I shall come with a small escort for a peaceful meeting with you.' ·He met Judas and they exchanged friendly greetings; the 29 ‖2 M 14:15–24 enemy, however, had made preparations to abduct Judas. ·When Judas became 30 aware of Nicanor's treacherous purpose in coming to see him, he took fright and 31 refused any further meeting. ·Nicanor then realised that his plan had been discov-32 ered, and took the field against Judas, to give battle near Caphar-Salama. [h] ·About five hundred of Nicanor's men fell; the rest took refuge in the City of David.

Threats against the Temple ‖2 M 14:30

33 After these events Nicanor went up to Mount Zion. Some of the priests came out of the Holy Place with some elders, to give him a friendly welcome and show him 34 the burnt offering being presented for the king. ·But he ridiculed them, laughed at 35 them, defiled them [i] and used insolent language, swearing in his rage, ·'Unless Judas is handed over to me this time with his army, as soon as I am safely back, I 36 promise you, I shall burn this building down!' ·Then he went off in a fury. At this, the priests went in again, and stood weeping in front of the altar and the Temple, 37 saying, ·'You [j] have chosen this house to be called by your name, to be a house of 38 prayer and petition for your people. ·Take vengeance on this man and on his army, and let them fall by the sword; remember their blasphemies and give them no respite.'

The 'Day of Nicanor' at Adasa

39 Nicanor left Jerusalem and encamped at Beth-Horon, where he was joined by an 40 army from Syria. ·Judas, meanwhile, camped at Adasa [k] with three thousand men, 41 and offered this prayer, ·'When the king's [l] envoys blasphemed, your angel went 2 K 18:17–19:37
42 out and struck down one hundred and eighty-five thousand of his men. ·In the 2 M 14:31–36;15:22–24 same way let us see you crush this army today, so that everyone else may know that Is 36–37;56:7
this man has spoken blasphemously against your sanctuary: pass judgement on him as his wickedness deserves!'

43 The armies met in battle on the thirteenth of the month Adar, and Nicanor's ‖2 M 15:25–36
44 army was crushed, he himself being the first to fall in the battle. ·When Nicanor's
45 soldiers saw him fall, they threw down their arms and fled. ·The Jews pursued them a day's journey, from Adasa to the approaches of Gezer; they sounded their 46 trumpets in warning as they followed them, ·and people came out of all the surrounding Judaean villages to encircle the fugitives, who then turned back on 47 their own men. All fell by the sword, not one being left alive. ·Having collected the spoils and booty, they cut off Nicanor's head and the right hand he had stretched out in a display of insolence; these were taken and displayed within sight of 48 Jerusalem. ·The people were overjoyed and kept that day as a great holiday:

v. The king's rescript, 2 M 11:25, gave the Jews back their Temple but said nothing about the city walls; the author of 1 M regards Temple and fortifications as inseparable and hence accuses the king of having broken his promise.

7 a. Demetrius I, who had taken Antiochus Epiphanes' place as a hostage in Rome, 176, had escaped in 161, with the complicity of Polybius, who describes what happened. Demetrius first landed at Tripoli, proceeding thence to Antioch (v. 2). Rome recognised him as king in 160.

b. The western half of the Seleucid Empire, lying between the River Euphrates and Egypt, which had been entrusted to Lysias by Antiochus Epiphanes, 3:32. Bacchides is given the job of pacifying the area, while the new king goes off to repress a revolt in Media.

c. Alcimus ('valiant', a Gk name chosen for its resemblance to the Jewish name Jacim) is described as godless because he flirted with the Greeks and was an obstacle to Hasmonaean ambitions; but his membership of the House of Aaron made his nomination legitimate, besides winning him the support of the Hasidaeans, see vv. 12seq.

d. Either Levites or priests versed in the Law, 2 Ch 34:13; Ezr 7:6seq.

e. The 'Devout', who had initially rallied to Judas, 2:42, now begin to take a more independent line, no doubt supposing that religious freedom was sufficiently guaranteed by the king's concessions, 6:59. Judas, less easily convinced, takes no direct part in these negotiations, although at this point the king has not yet proscribed him, see 2 M 14:12.

f. lit. 'the words he wrote', i.e. David (MS 56), Asaph (Eusebius), or the Prophet (Gk-Luc.).

g. 'Beth-Zeth' ('olive-grove') is the best-attested reading, but the MSS differ. The name is still borne by the village of Beit-Zaita, 4 miles (6 km) to the north of Beth-Zur, where a well with a spiral staircase has been found. • Bacchides has no hesitation in suppressing all those whom he considers to have been involved in the revolt, even if they have since gone over to his side.

A eulogy of the Romans[a]

8 Now Judas had heard of the reputation of the Romans: how strong they were, 1 and how well disposed towards any who made common cause with them, making a treaty of friendship with anyone who approached them. ·(And, indeed, 2 they were extremely powerful.) He had been told of their wars and of their prowess among the Gauls,[b] whom they had conquered and put under tribute; ·and of all 3 they had done in the province of Spain to gain possession of the silver and gold mines there, ·making themselves masters of the whole country by their determi- 4 nation and perseverance, despite its great distance from their own; of the kings who came from the ends of the earth to attack them, only to be crushed by them and overwhelmed with disaster, and of others who paid them annual tribute; Philip, Perseus king of the Kittim, and others who had dared to make war on 5 them, had been defeated and reduced to subjection,[c] ·while Antiochus the Great, 6 king of Asia, who had advanced to attack them with a hundred and twenty elephants, cavalry, chariots and a very large army, had also suffered defeat at their hands; ·they had taken him alive[d] and imposed on him and his successors, on 7 agreed terms, the payment of an enormous tribute, the surrender of hostages, and the cession ·of the Indian territory, with Media, Lydia, and some of their best 8 provinces, which they took from him and gave to King Eumenes. ·Judas had also 9 heard how, when the Greeks planned an expedition to destroy the Romans, ·the 10 latter had got wind of it and, sending a single general against them, had fought a campaign in which they inflicted heavy casualties, carried their women and children away into captivity, pillaged their goods, subdued their country, tore down their fortresses and reduced them to a slavery lasting to the present day;[e] ·and how they 11 had destroyed and subjugated all the other kingdoms and islands that resisted them.

But where their friends and those who relied on them were concerned, they had 12 always stood by their friendship. They had subdued kings far and near, and all who heard their name went in terror of them. ·One man, if they determined to help him 13 and advance him to a throne, would certainly occupy it, while another, if they so determined, would find himself deposed; their influence was paramount. ·In spite 14 of all this, no single one of them had assumed a crown or put on the purple for his own aggrandisement. ·They had set up a senate, where three hundred and twenty 15 councillors deliberated daily, constantly debating how best to regulate public affairs. ·They entrusted their government to one man[f] for a year at a time, with 16 absolute power over their whole empire, and this man was obeyed by all without envy or jealousy.

The alliance between the Jews and Romans

2 M 4:11 Having chosen Eupolemus son of John, of the family of Accos, and Jason son of 17 Eleazar, Judas sent them to Rome to make a treaty of friendship and alliance[g] with these people, ·in the hope of being rid of the yoke, for they could see that Greek 18 rule was reducing Israel to slavery. ·The envoys made the lengthy journey to Rome 19 and presented themselves before the Senate with their formal proposal: ·'Judas 20 Maccabaeus and his brothers, with the Jewish people, have sent us to you to conclude a treaty of alliance and peace with you, and to enrol ourselves as your allies and friends.'

The proposal met with the approval of the senators. ·Here is a copy of the 21, 22 14:18 rescript which they engraved on bronze tablets and sent to Jerusalem to be kept there by the Jews as a record of peace and alliance:

'Good fortune attend the Romans and the Jewish nation by sea and land for 23 ever; may sword or enemy be far from them!

24 'If war comes first to Rome or any of her allies throughout her dominions, 25 the Jewish nation will take action as her ally, as occasion may require, and do it 26 wholeheartedly. ·They will not give or supply to the enemy any grain, arms, money or ships: thus has Rome decided, and they are to honour their obligations 27 without guarantees. ·In the same way, if war comes first to the Jewish nation, 28 the Romans will support them energetically as occasion may offer, ·and the aggressor will not be furnished with grain, arms, money or ships: such is the Roman decision, and they will honour these obligations without treachery.
29 Such are the articles under which the Romans have concluded their treaty with 30 the Jewish people. ·If, later, either party should decide to make any addition or deletion, they will be free to do so, and any such addition or deletion will be binding. [h]
31 'As regards the wrongs done to them by King Demetrius, we have written to him in these terms: Why have you made your yoke lie heavy on our friends and 32 allies the Jews? ·If they appeal against you again, we shall uphold their rights and make war on you by sea and land.'

Battle of Beer-Zaith and death of Judas Maccabaeus [a]

1 9 Demetrius, hearing that Nicanor and his army had fallen in battle, sent Bacchides and Alcimus a second time into Judaea, and with them the right wing of 2 his army. ·They took the road to Galilee and besieged Mesaloth [b] in Arbela, and 3 captured it, putting many people to death. ·In the first month of the year 152, [c] they 4 encamped outside Jerusalem; ·they then moved on, making their way to Beer-
5 Zaith [d] with twenty thousand foot and two thousand horse. ·Judas lay in camp at 6 Elasa, [e] with three thousand picked men. ·When they saw the huge size of the enemy forces they were terrified, and many slipped out of the camp, until no more 7 than eight hundred of the force were left. ·With battle now inevitable, Judas realised that his army had melted away; he was aghast, for he had no time to rally 8 them. ·Yet, dismayed as he was, he said to those who were left, 'Up! Let us face 9 the enemy; we may yet have the strength to fight them.' ·His men tried to dissuade him, declaring, 'We have no strength for anything but to escape with our lives this time; then we can come back with our brothers to fight them; by ourselves we are 10 too few.' ·Judas retorted, 'That I should do such a thing as run away from them! If our time has come, at least let us die like men for our countrymen, and leave nothing to tarnish our reputation.' 11 The army marched out of camp and drew up, facing the enemy. The cavalry was drawn up in two squadrons; the slingers and archers marched in the van of the 12 army, and all the best fighters were put in the front rank; ·Bacchides was on the right wing. The phalanx advanced from between the two squadrons, sounding 13 the trumpets; the men on Judas' side also blew their trumpets, ·and the earth

m. 13 Adar, 151, of the Seleucid era falls on about 28 March 160 BC. 13 Adar became, in the festal calendar, the 'Day of Nicanor', see 2 M 15:36. The Jews observed it for only a short period.

n. 2 M's narrative ends here.

8 a. The eulogy of the Romans introduces the treaty made between Judas and Rome, vv. 17seq. It was Roman policy to support rebels, with a view to weakening those monarchies not yet entirely subject to Roman rule.

b. lit. 'Galatians'. The reference is presumably to the reduction of the Cisalpine Gauls in 222.

c. Philip, king of Macedonia, was beaten at Cynoscephalae in 197, and his son Perseus at Pydna in 168.

d. Defeat of Antiochus the Great at Magnesia in Sipyle in 189, followed by the very harsh Treaty of Apamaea, see 2 M 3:1a.

e. These vv. apparently refer to the defeat of the Achaean League, the destruction of Corinth and the reduction of Greece into a Roman province, in 146. If so, the author has gone well beyond the times of Judas.

f. There were in fact two consuls, but the author may have heard only of the one responsible for eastern affairs.

g. This embassy must have taken place before the death of Nicanor (which itself happened only two months before that of Judas): it should therefore perhaps be identified with the one mentioned by Josephus for the year 161.

h. This is the end of the treaty-text, stylistically similar to others extant. The following paragraph is a summary of the verbal answer given to the envoys.

9 a. The narrative is resumed from 7:50.

b. 'Galilee' conj. following Josephus; 'Galgala' Gk and Lat. 'Mesaloth', Hebr. place-name meaning 'paths': they presumably led to the caves of Arbela, which on many occasions served as places of refuge.

c. April–May, 160.

d. 'Beer Zaith' Gk-Luc., Vet. Syr. and Josephus: the present-day Bir-Zait, about 12 miles (20 km) north of Jerusalem. If Gk and Lat. reading 'Berean' or 'Beret' is retained, the camp would have been sited at Al-Bir, biblical Beeroth, Jos 9:17,about 8 miles (13 km) south of Bir-Zait.

e. 'Eleasa' MSS; 'Elasa' or 'Alasa' Gk. If this is Khirbet Il'asa, near Beth-Horon, Judas' camp must have been a long way from Bacchides', which hardly tallies with the text, unless his rear headquarters is meant.

shook with the noise of the armies. The engagement lasted from morning until evening.

Judas saw that Bacchides and the main strength of his army lay on the right; all 14
the stout-hearted rallied to him, ·and they crushed the right wing, pursuing them 15 as far as the Azara Hills.[f] ·But when the Syrians on the left wing saw that the right 16 had been broken, they turned and followed hot on the heels of Judas and his men to take them in the rear. ·The fight became desperate, and there were many 17 casualties on both sides. ·Judas himself fell, and the remnant fled. 18

The funeral of Judas Maccabaeus

Jonathan and Simon took up their brother Judas and buried him in his ancestral 19 tomb at Modein. ·All Israel wept and mourned him deeply and for many days they 20 2 S 1:27 repeated this dirge. ·'What a downfall for the strong man, the man who kept Israel 21 safe!' ·The other deeds of Judas, the battles he fought, the exploits he performed, 22 and all his titles to greatness have not been recorded; but they were very many.

IV: JONATHAN, LEADER OF THE JEWS AND HIGH PRIEST (160–143 BC)

The triumph of the Greek party. Jonathan leads the resistance

After the death of Judas, the renegades came out of hiding throughout Israel and 23 all the evil-doers reappeared. ·At that time there was a severe famine, and the 24 country went over to their side. ·Bacchides deliberately chose the enemies of 25 religion to administer the country. ·These traced and searched out the friends of 26
Judas and brought them before Bacchides, who ill-treated and mocked them. ·A 27 terrible oppression began in Israel; there had been nothing like it since the disap-4:46j pearance of prophecy among them.

The friends of Judas then all united in saying to Jonathan, ·'Since your brother 28, 29 Judas died, there has been no one like him to head the resistance against our enemies, people like Bacchides and others who hate our nation. ·Accordingly, we 30 have today chosen you to take his place as our ruler and leader and to fight our campaigns.' ·Whereupon, Jonathan took command, in succession to his brother 31 Judas.

Jonathan in the desert of Tekoa. Bloody encounters round Medeba

Bacchides, when he heard the news, made plans to kill Jonathan. ·But this became 32, 33 known to Jonathan, his brother Simon and all his supporters, and they took refuge in the desert of Tekoa, camping by the water-supply at Asphar[g] storage-well.
(Bacchides came to know of this on the Sabbath day, and he too crossed the 34 Jordan[h] with his entire army.)

Jonathan sent his brother, who was one of his commanders, to ask his friends the 35
5:25h Nabataeans to store their considerable baggage for them. ·The sons of Amrai,[i] 36 however, those of Medeba, intercepted them, captured John and everything he had and made off with their prize. ·Later, Jonathan and his brother Simon were 37 told that the sons of Amrai were celebrating an important wedding, and were escorting the bride, a daughter of one of the great notables of Canaan, from Nabata[j] with a large retinue. ·Remembering the bloody end of their brother 38
John, they went up and hid under cover of the mountain. ·As they were keeping 39 watch, a noisy procession came into sight with a great deal of baggage, and the bridegroom, with his groomsmen and his family, came out to meet it with tambourines and a band, and rich, warlike display. ·The Jews rushed down on them 40 from their ambush and killed them, inflicting heavy casualties; the survivors escaped to the mountain, leaving their entire baggage train to be captured. ·Thus, 41 Am 8:10 the wedding was turned into mourning and the music of their band into lamentation.

42 Having in this way avenged in full the blood of their brother, they returned to the marshes of the Jordan.

Crossing the Jordan

43 As soon as Bacchides heard this, he came on the Sabbath day with a considerable 44 force to the steep banks of the Jordan. •Jonathan said to his men, 'Up! Let us fight 45 for our lives, for today it is not as in the old days. •You can see, we shall have to fight on our front and to our rear; we have the waters of the Jordan on one side, the 46 marsh and scrub on the other, and we have no line of withdrawal. •This is the moment to call on Heaven, to deliver you from the clutches of your enemies.'
47 The engagement was begun by Jonathan, who aimed a blow at Bacchides, but 48 the Syrian disengaged himself and withdrew, •whereupon Jonathan and his men leapt into the Jordan and swam to the other bank; the enemy did not, however,
49 cross the Jordan in pursuit.[k] •That day, Bacchides lost about a thousand men.

Bacchides builds fortifications. The death of Alcimus

50 Bacchides went back to Jerusalem and began fortifying some of the Judaean towns: the fortresses of Jericho, Emmaus, Beth-Horon, Bethel, Timnath, Pharathon and 51 Tephon,[l] with high walls and barred gates, •and stationed a garrison in each of 52 them to harass Israel. •He also fortified the town of Beth-Zur, Gezer and the 53 Citadel, and placed troops in them with supplies of provisions. •He took the sons of the leading men of the country as hostages, and had them placed under guard in the Citadel of Jerusalem.

54 In the year 153, in the second month,[m] Alcimus ordered the demolition of the wall of the inner court of the sanctuary, destroying the work of the prophets.[n]
55 Alcimus had just begun the demolition •when he suffered a stroke, and his work was interrupted. His mouth became obstructed, and his paralysis made him incap-
56 able of speaking at all or giving directions to his household; •it was not long before 57 he died in great agony. •On the death of Alcimus, Bacchides went back to the king, and Judaea was left in peace for two years.

The siege of Beth-Bassi

58 The renegades then all agreed on a plan. 'Now is the time,' they said, 'while Jonathan and his supporters are living in peace and are full of confidence, for us to 59 bring back Bacchides, and he will arrest the lot of them in one night.' •So they went 60 to him and reached an understanding. •Bacchides at once set out with a large force, and sent secret instructions to all his allies in Judaea to seize Jonathan and his supporters. But they were unable to do this because their plan became known, 61 and Jonathan and his men arrested some fifty of the men of the country who were ringleaders in the plot, and put them to death.

62 Jonathan and Simon then retired with their partisans to Beth-Bassi[o] in the

f. 'Azara' following Josephus; 'Azotus' Gk and Lat., but there is no hilly country near Azotus (ancient Ashdod).

g. 'Tekoa', home of the prophet Amos, south-east of Bethlehem, dominates an arid area, 2 Ch 20:20, and its ravines, leading down to the Dead Sea, had served as refuge for David's guerillas, 1 S 24–26, as they were later to serve for Simon Bar Kokba's partisans in the Second Jewish Revolt (AD 132–5). • The place-name 'Asphar' has not been identified.

h. Doublet of v. 43.

i. 'Amrai' following Josephus and Syr.; 'Ambrei' or 'Iambri' Gk, Lat. The Beni Amrai are an Arab tribe, not the same people as the Nabataeans.

j. 'Nabata' following Josephus; 'Gabadan' or 'Nabadath' Gk, Lat. Probably an Aramaean strongpoint in Nebo, Nb 32:3, on the edge of the Plains of Moab, here called 'Canaan', a name covering all the indigenous gentiles.

k. With Josephus, we site the battle on the west bank of the Jordan, where Jonathan had pitched camp, intending to retire into the area west of the Dead Sea. Bacchides forces him to retreat to the east bank of the river without, however, following him.

l. 'Timnath, Pharathon' Lat., Syr., Josephus; Gk and Lat. MSS make these into one name. Timnath is the Timnah of Jos 15:10; Pharathon is Pirathon, Jg 12:15; and Tephon is probably Tappuah, Jos 12:17. Archaeological excavations at Gezer, Beth-Zur, Bethel and Jericho confirm the Seleucid occupation.

n. Presumably the post-exilic prophets, Haggai and Zechariah. The wall may have corresponded to the balustrade that was later to separate the Court of the Gentiles from the Court of the Jews in the Temple of Herod, see Ezk 44:9, but the two courts suggested by the text may perhaps have been those already in existence in the days of Manasseh, 2 K 21:5.

desert; they rebuilt the ruinous parts of the place and fortified it. ·When Bac- 63 chides heard this, he mustered his whole force and notified his adherents in Judaea.
He then proceeded to lay siege to Beth-Bassi, the fighting was protracted, and 64
he constructed siege-engines. ·Jonathan, however, leaving his brother Simon in 65
the town, broke out into the countryside with a handful of men. ·He launched a 66 blow at Odomera and his brothers, and at the sons of Phasiron in their encampment;[p] whereupon, these too came into the struggle, joining forces with him.
Simon and his people, meanwhile, made a sortie from the town and set fire to 67
the siege-engines. ·Taking the offensive against Bacchides, they defeated him. 68
He was greatly disconcerted to find that his plan and his assault had come to nothing, ·and vented his anger on those renegades who had induced him to enter 69
the country, putting many of them to death; he then decided to take his own troops home. ·Discovering this, Jonathan sent envoys to negotiate peace terms and the 70 release of prisoners with him. ·Bacchides agreed to this, accepting his proposals 71 and swearing never to seek occasion to harm him for the rest of his life. ·Having 72 surrendered to Jonathan those prisoners he had earlier taken in Judaea, he turned about and withdrew to his own country, and never again came near their frontiers.
The sword no longer hung over Israel, and Jonathan settled in Michmash, where 73
Dt 19:19; 22:22 he began to judge the people[q] and to rid Israel of the godless.

Alexander Balas competes for Jonathan's support and appoints him high priest

10 In the year 160, Alexander, son of Antiochus Epiphanes,[a] raised an army 1 and occupied Ptolemais. He was well received, and there inaugurated his reign.[b] ·On hearing this, King Demetrius assembled a very large army and marched 2 off to do battle with him. ·Demetrius furthermore sent Jonathan a most concili- 3 atory letter, promising to promote him in rank, ·for, as he said, 'We had better 4 move first to come to terms with these people before he makes common cause with Alexander against us; ·he will not have forgotten all the wrongs we inflicted on him 5 and his brothers, and on his nation.' ·He even authorised him to raise an army, to 6 manufacture arms, and to describe himself as his ally, and ordered the hostages in the Citadel to be surrendered to him.

Jonathan went straight to Jerusalem and read the letter in the hearing of the 7 whole people and of the men in the Citadel. ·They were terrified when they heard 8 that the king had given him authority to raise an army. ·The men in the Citadel 9 surrendered the hostages to Jonathan, who handed them back to their parents.
Jonathan then took up residence in Jerusalem and began the rebuilding and 10 restoration of the city. ·He ordered those responsible for the work to build the 11 walls and the defences round Mount Zion of squared stone blocks[c] to make them stronger, and this was done. ·The foreigners in the fortresses built by Bacchides 12 abandoned them, ·one after another leaving his post to go back to his own country. 13
Only at Beth-Zur were a few left of those who had forsaken the Law and the 14 precepts, since this was their refuge.

King Alexander heard of all the promises Demetrius had sent to Jonathan, and 15
he was also given an account of the battles and exploits of this man and his brothers and of the hardships they had endured. ·'Shall we ever find another man like him?' 16
he exclaimed. 'We must make him our friend and ally!' ·He therefore wrote him a 17 letter, addressing him in these terms:

'King Alexander to his brother Jonathan, greetings. 18
'You have been brought to our notice as a strong man of action and as 19
someone who deserves to be our friend. ·Accordingly, we have today appointed 20 2:18e you high priest of your nation,[d] with the title of "Friend of the King" '—he also sent him a purple robe and a golden crown—'and you are to study our interests and maintain friendly relations with us.'

Jonathan put on the sacred vestments in the seventh month of the year 160,[e] on 21

the feast of Shelters; he then set about raising troops and manufacturing arms in quantity.

A letter from Demetrius I to Jonathan

22, 23 Demetrius was displeased when he heard what had happened. •'What have we been doing,' he said, 'for Alexander to forestall us in winning the friendship of the 24 Jews and so improving his own position? •I too shall address an appeal to them, 25 offering them advancement and riches as an inducement to support me.' •And he wrote to them as follows:

'King Demetrius to the Jewish nation, greetings.

26 'We have heard how you have kept your agreement with us and have maintained friendly relations with us and have not gone over to our enemies, and it
27 has given us great satisfaction. •If you now continue to keep faith with us, we 28 shall make you a handsome return for what you do on our behalf. •We shall accord you many exemptions and grant you privileges.

29 'Henceforth I release you and exempt all the Jews from the tribute, the salt
30 dues and the crown levies, •and whereas I am entitled to one-third of the grain and one-half of the fruit of the trees,[f] I release from this levy, from today and for the future, Judaea and the three districts annexed to it from Samaria-Galilee,[g] 11:34
31 from this day henceforth in perpetuity. •Jerusalem will be sacred and exempt, 32 with its territory, from tithes and dues. •I relinquish control of the Citadel in Jerusalem and make it over to the high priest, so that he may man it with a 33 garrison of his own choosing. •Every Jewish person taken from Judaea into captivity in any part of my kingdom I set free without ransom, and decree that 34 all will be exempt from taxes, even on their livestock. •All festivals, Sabbaths, New Moons and days of special observance, and the three days before and three days after a festival, will be days of exemption and quittance[h] for all the Jews in 35 my kingdom, •and no one will have the right to exact payment from, or to molest, any of them for any matter whatsoever.

36 'Jews will be enrolled in the king's forces to the number of thirty thousand men and receive maintenance on the same scale as the rest of the king's forces.
37 Some of them will be stationed in the king's major fortresses, and from among others appointments will be made to positions of trust in the kingdom. Their officers and commanders will be appointed from their own number and will live under their own laws, as the king has prescribed for Judaea.

38 'As regards the three districts annexed to Judaea from the province of Samaria, these will be integrated into Judaea and considered as coming under 39 one governor, obeying the high priest's authority and no other. •Ptolemais

p. Arab tribes who were supposed to co-operate with Bacchides.

q. Like Judas, Jonathan too is assimilated to the ancient Judges of Israel, see 3:11; 4:3; etc. Michmash, southeast of Bethel, was famous for the exploit of Jonathan son of Saul, 1 S 14.

10 a. The title Epiphanes appears on his coinage but history knows him under the name of Alexander Balas. He claimed to be the son of Antiochus Epiphanes.

b. The defection of Ptolemais to Alexander Balas took place in 152. At the beginning of the same year, he had received recognition from the Senate.

c. lit. 'four-faced', Gk-Luc., Lat.; 'four-foot' Gk.

d. Jonathan was descended from Joarib, head of one of the priestly classes, see 2:1.54, and Alexander, as recognised sovereign, had the right to nominate him, see 7:9; 2 M 4:24. The Oniad family, who traditionally filled the high-priestly office, were thus evicted. And it was doubtless then that the son of Onias III took refuge in Egypt, where he founded the Temple of Leontopolis, 2 M 1:1, and another priest, the 'Teacher of Righteousness', mentioned in the Essene composition known as the Damascus Document, took refuge in Qumran. Jonathan inaugurates a dynasty of prince-priests, such as existed elsewhere at the same period. With his successors (the Hasmonaeans), political interests were later to become more important than religious ones.

e. October 152.

f. 'one third' Vet. Lat., Vet. Syr.; 'in exchange for the third' Gk. • The 'salt dues' (lit. 'the price of salt') are those levied on salt from the Dead Sea, payable to the king, see 11:35. The 'crowns' ('palms' or 'olive branches') are gifts presented to the sovereign, though these in fact took the form of hard cash. These heavy taxes, which, since 165, had replaced tribute, see 3:36i, are explicable on the grounds that the Seleucids, like the Ptolemies of Egypt, claimed to be universal landlords, their native subjects being only lessees. The tribute seems, however, to have been re-imposed: 'in exchange for 300 talents' (just over 10 tons, 10 160 kg) should probably be supplied to the text, 11:28.

g. The districts conquered by Judas, which the Jews considered as belonging to them, and which Bacchides had in any case included in Judaea, 9:50.

h. Generalisation of the tradition whereby debts and customs duty were suspended during the pilgrimage festivals.

and the land thereto pertaining I present to the sanctuary in Jerusalem, to meet the necessary expenses of public worship.[i] ·And I make a personal grant of 40 fifteen thousand silver shekels annually chargeable to the royal revenue from appropriate places. ·And the entire surplus, which has not been paid in by the 41
officials as in previous years, will henceforth be paid over by them for work on the Temple. ·In addition, the sum of five thousand silver shekels, levied annually 42 on the profits of the sanctuary, as shown in the annual accounts, is also relinquished as the perquisite of the priests who perform the liturgy. ·Anyone who 43 takes refuge in the Temple in Jerusalem or any of its precincts, when in debt to the royal exchequer or otherwise, will be discharged in full possession of all the goods he owns in my kingdom. ·As regards the building and restoration of the 44 sanctuary, the expense of the work will be met from the royal exchequer. The reconstruction of the walls of Jerusalem and the fortification of the 45 perimeter will also be a charge on the royal exchequer, as also the reconstruction of other city walls in Judaea.'

Jonathan rejects Demetrius' offers; death of Demetrius

When Jonathan and the people heard these proposals, they put no faith in them 46 and refused to accept them, remembering what great wrongs Demetrius had done to Israel and how cruelly he had oppressed them. ·They decided in favour of 47
Alexander, since he seemed to offer the better inducements of the two,[j] and they became his constant allies. ·King Alexander now mustered large forces and 48 advanced against Demetrius. ·The two kings met in battle. Demetrius' army was 49 defeated, and Alexander pursued him energetically. ·He continued the battle with 50 vigour until sunset. And that day Demetrius was killed.

Alexander's marriage with Cleopatra. Jonathan as commander-in-chief and governor-general

Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemy king of Egypt, with this message: 51

'Since I have returned to my kingdom, have ascended the throne of my 52 ancestors, have gained control by crushing Demetrius, and so recovered our country— ·for I fought him and we crushed both him and his army, and I now 53 occupy his royal throne—·let us now make a treaty of friendship. Give me 54 your daughter in marriage: as your son-in-law, I shall give you, and her, presents which are worthy of you.'

King Ptolemy replied as follows: 55

'Happy the day when you returned to the land of your ancestors and ascended their royal throne! ·I shall at once do for you what your letter proposes; but 56 meet me at Ptolemais, so that we can see one another, and I shall become your father-in-law, as you have asked.'

Ptolemy left Egypt with his daughter Cleopatra and reached Ptolemais in the 57 year 162.[k] ·King Alexander went to meet him, and Ptolemy gave him the hand of 58 his daughter Cleopatra and celebrated her wedding in Ptolemais with great magnificence, as kings do. ·King Alexander then wrote to Jonathan to come and meet 59 him. ·Jonathan made his way in state to Ptolemais and met the two kings; he gave 60 them and their friends silver and gold, and many gifts, and made a favourable impression on them. ·A number of scoundrels, the pest of Israel, combined to 61 denounce him, but the king paid no attention to them.[l] ·In fact, the king com- 62 manded that Jonathan should be divested of his own garments and clothed in the purple, which was done. ·The king then seated him by his side and said to his 63 officers, 'Escort him into the centre of the city and proclaim that no one is to bring 64 charges against him on any count; no one is to molest him for any reason.' ·And so, when his accusers saw the honour done him by this proclamation, and Jonathan 65 himself invested in the purple, they all fled. ·The king did him the honour of enrolling him among the First Friends, and appointed him commander-in-chief 2:18e;11:27 66 and governor-general.[m] ·Jonathan then returned to Jerusalem in peace and gladness.

Demetrius II. Apollonius, governor of Coele-Syria, defeated by Jonathan

67 In the year 165, Demetrius son of Demetrius came from Crete to the land of his 68 ancestors.[n] ·When King Alexander heard of it he was plunged into gloom, and 69 retired to Antioch. ·Demetrius confirmed Apollonius as governor of Coele-Syria;[o] the latter assembled a large force, encamped at Jamnia and sent the following message to Jonathan the high priest:

70 'You are entirely alone in rising against us, and now I find myself ridiculed and reproached on your account. Why do you use your authority to our disad-71 vantage in the mountains? ·If you are so confident in your forces, come down now to meet us on the plain and let us take each other's measure there; on my 72 side I have the strength of the towns. ·Ask and learn who I am and who the others supporting us are. You will hear that you cannot stand up to us, since 73 your ancestors were twice routed on their own ground,[p] ·nor will you now be able to withstand the cavalry or so great an army on the plain, where there is neither rock, nor stone, nor refuge of any kind.'

74 On hearing Apollonius' words, Jonathan's spirit was roused; he picked ten thousand men and left Jerusalem, and his brother Simon joined him with reinforce-75 ments. ·He drew up his forces outside Joppa, the citizens having shut him out, 76 since Apollonius had a garrison in Joppa. When they began the attack, ·the citizens 77 took fright and opened the gates, and Jonathan occupied Joppa. ·Hearing this, Apollonius marshalled three thousand cavalry and a large army and made his way to Azotus as though intending to march through, while in fact pressing on into the 78 plain, since he had a great number of cavalry on which he was relying. ·Jonathan
79 pursued him as far as Azotus, where the armies joined battle. ·Now, Apollonius 80 had left a thousand horsemen in concealment behind them. ·Jonathan knew of this enemy position behind him; the horsemen surrounded his army, firing their arrows 81 into his men from morning till evening. ·But the troops stood firm, as Jonathan 82 had ordered. Once the cavalry was exhausted, ·Simon sent his own troops into 83 attack against the phalanx, which he cut to pieces and routed. ·The cavalry scattered over the plain and fled to Azotus, where they took sanctuary in Beth-84 Dagon, the temple of their idol. ·Jonathan, however, set fire to Azotus and the 11:4 surrounding towns, plundered them, and burned down the temple of Dagon, with 1 S 5:1seq.
85 all the fugitives who had crowded into it. ·The enemy losses, counting those who fell by the sword and those burnt to death, totalled about eight thousand men.
86 Jonathan then left and pitched camp outside Ascalon, where the citizens came out 87 to meet him with great ceremony. ·Jonathan then returned to Jerusalem with his followers, laden with booty. ·In the event, when King Alexander heard what had happened, he awarded Jonathan further honours: ·he sent him the golden brooch, of the kind customarily presented to the King's Cousins,[q] and gave him proprietary rights over Ekron and the land adjoining it. 88 89

Ptolemy VI supports Demetrius II but dies, as does Alexander Balas

11 The king of Egypt then assembled an army as numerous as the sands of the seashore, with many ships, and set out to take possession of Alexander's kingdom by a ruse and add it to his own kingdom. ·He set off for Syria with protestations of peace, and the people of the towns opened their gates to him and came out to meet him, since King Alexander's orders were to welcome him, Ptolemy being his father-in-law. ·On entering the towns, however, Ptolemy[a] quartered troops as a garrison in each one. ·When he reached Azotus he was 10:84 shown the burnt-out temple of Dagon, with Azotus and its suburbs in ruins, corpses scattered here and there, and the charred remains of those whom Jonathan had burnt to death in the battle, piled into heaps along his route. ·They explained to the king what Jonathan had done, hoping for his disapproval; but the king said nothing. ·Jonathan went in state to meet the king at Joppa, where they greeted each other and spent the night. ·Jonathan accompanied the king as far as the river called Eleutherus,[b] and then returned to Jerusalem. ·King Ptolemy for his part occupied the coastal towns as far as Seleucia on the coast,[c] all the while maturing his wicked designs against Alexander. ·He sent envoys to King Demetrius to say, 'Come and let us make a treaty; I shall give you my daughter, whom Alexander now has,[d] and you shall rule your father's kingdom. ·I regret having given my daughter to that man, since he has tried to kill me.' ·He made this accusation because he coveted his kingdom.[e] ·Having carried off his daughter and bestowed her on Demetrius, he broke with Alexander, and their enmity became open. Ptolemy next entered Antioch and assumed the crown of Asia;[f] he now wore on his head the two crowns of Egypt and Asia. ·King Alexander was in Cilicia at the time, since the people of those parts had risen in revolt, ·but when he heard the news, he advanced on his rival to give battle, while Ptolemy for his part also took the field, met him with a strong force and routed him.[g] ·Alexander fled to Arabia for refuge, and King Ptolemy reigned supreme. ·Zabdiel the Arab[h] cut off Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemy. ·Three days later King Ptolemy died, and the Egyptian garrisons in the strongholds were killed by the local inhabitants. So Demetrius became king in the year 167. 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19

Early relations between Demetrius and Jonathan

At the same time, Jonathan mustered the men of Judaea for an assault on the Citadel of Jerusalem, and they set up numerous siege-engines against it.[i] ·But some renegades who hated their nation made their way to the king and told him that Jonathan was besieging the Citadel. ·The king was angered by the news. No sooner had he been informed than he set out and came to Ptolemais. He wrote to Jonathan, telling him to raise the siege and to meet him for a conference in Ptolemais as soon as possible. ·When Jonathan heard this, he gave orders for the siege to continue; he then selected a deputation from the elders of Israel and the priests, and took the deliberate risk ·of himself taking silver and gold, clothing and numerous other presents, and going to Ptolemais to face the king, whose favour he succeeded in winning; ·and although one or two renegades of his nation brought charges against him, ·the king treated him as his predecessors had treated him, and promoted him in the presence of all his friends. ·He confirmed him in the high-priesthood and whatever other distinctions he already held, and had him ranked 2:18e;10:65m among the First Friends. ·Jonathan asked the king to exempt Judaea and the three 10:30;11:34 Samaritan districts from taxation, promising him three hundred talents in return.[j] The king consented, and wrote Jonathan a rescript covering the whole matter, in these terms: 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29

A new charter favouring the Jews [k] 10:26–45

30 'King Demetrius to Jonathan his brother, and to the Jewish nation, greetings.
31 'We have written to Lasthenes our cousin concerning you, and now send you this copy of our rescript for your own information:
32 "King Demetrius to his father Lasthenes, greetings.
33 "The nation of the Jews is our ally; they fulfil their obligations to us, and in 34 view of their goodwill towards us we have decided to show them our bounty. •We confirm them in their possession of the territory of Judaea and the three districts 10:30 of Aphairema, Lydda and Ramathaim;[l] these were annexed to Judaea from Samaritan territory, with all their dependencies, in favour of all who offer sacrifice in Jerusalem, instead of the royal dues which the king formerly received 35 from them every year, from the yield of the soil and the fruit crops. •As regards 10:29 our other rights over the tithes and taxes due to us, over the salt marshes, and 36 the crown taxes due to us, as from today we release them from them all.[m] •None
37 of these grants will be revoked henceforth or anywhere. •You will make yourself responsible for having a copy of this made, to be given to Jonathan and displayed on the holy mountain in a conspicuous place." '

Demetrius II rescued by Jonathan's troops at Antioch

38 When King Demetrius saw that the country was at peace under his rule and that no resistance was offered him, he dismissed his forces, and sent all the men home, except for the foreign troops that he had recruited in the foreign island,[n] thus 39 incurring the enmity of the veterans who had served his ancestors. •Now Trypho, one of Alexander's former supporters, noting that all the troops were muttering against Demetrius, went to see Iamleku,[o] the Arab who was bringing up Anti-40 ochus, Alexander's young son, •and repeatedly urged him to let him have the boy, so that he might succeed his father as king; he told him of Demetrius' decision and of the resentment it had aroused among his troops. He spent a long time there.
41 Jonathan, meanwhile, sent to ask King Demetrius to withdraw the garrisons from the Citadel in Jerusalem and from the other fortresses, since they were 42 constantly fighting Israel. •Demetrius sent word back to Jonathan, 'Not only will I do this for you and for your nation, but I shall heap honours on you and your 43 nation if I find a favourable opportunity. •For the present, you would do well to

q. Alexander, for good measure, raises Jonathan to the rank of 'King's Cousin', see 3:32. The golden brooch, which fastened the purple cloak, was the insignia of this rank, which was higher even than that of 'First Friend', v. 65.

b. As much to pay his court to Ptolemy as to show the Jews and gentiles how much he enjoyed Ptolemy's favour. • The River Eleutherus is north of Tripoli.
c. The port of Antioch.
d. Some MSS read 'used to have'. It is not known whether, as Josephus supposes, Ptolemy had already taken his daughter away from Alexander.
e. Alexander's attempt to assassinate Ptolemy is recorded by Josephus but, like the historian Diodorus, the author of 1 M, familiar with the story, does not credit it.
f. According to Diodorus, Trypho, who had gone over to Alexander Balas and was holding Antioch in his name, offered the crown to Ptolemy. The latter would have kept only Coele-Syria, which he regarded as the patrimony of his mother, Cleopatra I, and would have left Asia for Demetrius II.
g. Battle of the Oenoparos (river flowing through the Plain of Antioch), late August or September 145. Ptolemy VI was wounded there, dying of the effects four days later.
h. Diodorus calls him Diocles, which was his Greek name, and explains that Alexander had entrusted him with his son Antiochus, see v. 39.
i. The article in 10:32 had evidently remained a dead letter.
j. The traditional amount of tribute annually payable by the high priest, see 2 M 4:8. Jonathan is asking the king to replace the land-tax by direct tribute, as had already been granted by the king's father, Demetrius I, see 10:30f. Demetrius II apparently consents, but excludes the three annexed districts from the concession, vv. 34seq.
k. This charter in part repeats that of Demetrius I, which had been rejected by Jonathan. The title of 'brother' applied in it to Jonathan, v. 30, suggests that he has been nominated 'King's Cousin' and not merely 'First Friend', v. 27, a title he had already received from Alexander Balas, 10:89. • The original of the letter is addressed to Lasthenes, Demetrius' Cretan minister.
l. The three districts, see 10:30.38; 11:28, are the territories of: Ephraim (or Ophra), Jos 18:23; 2 S 13:23 about 12 miles (20 km) north-east of Jerusalem; Lud, 1 Ch 8:11; and Ramah, 1 S 1:1.19 (Arimathaea of Mt 27:57).
m. The tribute of 300 talents is certainly not included in the remission, v. 28. The charter of Demetrius II is less favourable than his father's: there is no further mention, for instance, of handing over the Citadel or of providing for public worship.
n. An economy measure, probably dictated by Lasthenes, who retained only the mercenaries, the majority of whom were Cretans.
o. 'Iamleku' following Syr. and Diodorus; 'Imalkuah' or 'Simalkuah' Gk. Perhaps he was Zabdiel's son, v. 17. This Arab prince probably resided at Chalcis, south of Aleppo, where Antiochus VI was later crowned, v. 54.

send me reinforcements, since all my troops have deserted.' ·Jonathan sent three 44 thousand experienced soldiers to him in Antioch; when they reached the king, he was delighted at their arrival. ·The citizens crowded together in the centre of the 45 city, to the number of some hundred and twenty thousand, intending to kill the king. ·The king took refuge in the palace, while the citizens occupied 46
the thoroughfares of the city and began to attack. ·The king then called on the 47 Jews for help; and these all rallied round him, then fanned out through the city, and that day killed about a hundred thousand of its inhabitants. ·They fired the 48 city, seizing a great deal of plunder at the same time, and secured the king's safety.
When the citizens saw that the Jews had the city at their mercy, their courage 49 failed them, and they made an abject appeal to the king, ·'Give us the right hand of 50 peace, and let the Jews stop their fight against us and the city.' ·They threw down 51 their arms and made peace. The Jews were covered in glory, in the eyes of the king and of everyone else in his kingdom. Having won renown in his kingdom, they returned to Jerusalem laden with booty. ·Thus, King Demetrius sat all the more 52 securely on his royal throne, and the country was quiet under his government. ·But 53 he gave the lie to all the promises he had made, and changed his attitude to Jonathan, giving nothing in return for the services Jonathan had rendered him, but thwarting him at every turn. [p]

Jonathan opposes Demetrius II. Simon retakes Beth-Zur. The Hazor incident

After this, Trypho came back with the little boy Antiochus, [q] who became king and 54 was crowned. ·All the troops that Demetrius had summarily dismissed rallied to 55 Antiochus, and made war on Demetrius, who turned tail and fled. ·Trypho cap- 56
tured the elephants and seized Antioch.

Young Antiochus then wrote as follows to Jonathan: 'I confirm you in the high- 57
2:18e priesthood and set you over the four districts [r] and appoint you one of the Friends of the King.' ·He sent him a service of gold plate, and granted him the right to 58 drink from gold vessels, and to wear the purple and the golden brooch. [s] ·He 59 appointed his brother Simon commander-in-chief of the region from the Ladder of Tyre to the frontiers of Egypt. ·Jonathan then set out and made a progress through 60 Transeuphrates and its towns, and the entire Syrian army rallied to his support. He came to Ascalon and was received in state by the inhabitants. ·From there he 61 proceeded to Gaza, [t] but the people of Gaza shut him out, so he laid siege to it, burning down its suburbs and plundering them. ·The people of Gaza then pleaded 62 with Jonathan, and he made peace with them; but he took the sons of their chief men as hostages and sent them away to Jerusalem. He then travelled through the country as far as Damascus.

Jonathan now learned that Demetrius' generals had arrived at Kadesh in Gali- 63
lee [u] with a large army, intending to remove him from office, ·and went to engage 64 them, leaving his brother Simon inside the country. ·Simon laid siege to Beth-Zur, 65 attacking it day after day, and blockading the inhabitants ·till they sued for peace, 66 which he granted them, though he expelled them from the town and occupied it, stationing a garrison there. [v] ·Jonathan and his army, meanwhile, having pitched 67 camp by the Lake of Gennesar, rose early, and by morning were already in the plain of Hazor. [w] ·The foreigners' army advanced to fight them on the plain, having 68 first positioned an ambush for him in the mountains. While the main body was advancing directly towards the Jews, ·the troops in ambush broke cover and 69 attacked first. ·All the men with Jonathan fled; no one was left, except Mattathias 70 son of Absalom and Judas son of Chalphi, the generals of his army. ·At this, 71 Jonathan tore his garments, put dust on his head, and prayed. ·Then he returned 72 to the fight and routed the enemy, who fled. ·When the fugitives from his own 73 forces saw this, they came back to him and joined in the pursuit as far as Kadesh where the enemy encampment was, and there they themselves pitched camp.
About three thousand of the foreign troops fell that day. Jonathan then returned 74 to Jerusalem.

Jonathan's relations with Rome and Sparta

12 When Jonathan saw that circumstances were working in his favour, he sent a select mission to Rome to confirm and renew his treaty of friendship with 8:17–32
the Romans.[a] ·He also sent letters to the same effect to the Spartans and to other places. ·The envoys made their way to Rome, entered the Senate and said,
'Jonathan the high priest and the Jewish nation have sent us to renew your treaty of friendship and alliance with them as before.' ·The Senate gave them letters to the authorities of each place, to procure their safe conduct to Judaea.
The following is the copy of the letter Jonathan wrote to the Spartans:

'Jonathan the high priest, the senate of the nation, the priests and the rest of the Jewish people to the Spartans their brothers, greetings.
'In the past, a letter was sent to Onias, the high priest, from Areios,[b] one of 12:20–23 your kings, stating that you are indeed our brothers, as the copy subjoined 2 M 5:9
attests. ·Onias received the envoy with honour, and accepted the letter, in which a clear declaration was made of friendship and alliance. ·For our part, though we have no need of these, having the consolation of the holy books[c] in our Rm 15:4 possession, ·we venture to send to renew our fraternal friendship with you, so that we may not become strangers to you, a long time having elapsed since you last wrote to us. ·We, for our part, on every occasion, at our festivals and on other appointed days, unfailingly remember you in the sacrifices we offer and in our prayers, as it is right and fitting to remember brothers. ·We rejoice in your renown.
'We ourselves, however, have had many trials and many wars, the neighbouring kings making war on us. ·We were unwilling to trouble you or our other allies and friends during these wars, ·since we have the support of Heaven to help us, thanks to which we have been delivered from our enemies, and they are 14:22;15:15
the ones who have been brought low. ·We have therefore chosen Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, and sent them to the Romans to renew our former treaty of friendship and alliance, ·and we have ordered them also to visit you, to greet you and deliver you this letter of ours concerning the renewal of our brotherhood; ·we shall be grateful for an answer to it.'

The following is the copy of the letter sent to Onias:

'Areios[d] king of the Spartans, to Onias the high priest, greetings.
'It has been discovered in records regarding the Spartans and Jews that they are brothers, and of the race of Abraham.[e] ·Now that this has come to our

q. Antiochus VI Dionysos (144–142).

r. The fourth district was presumably Acrabatta, see 5:3.

s. Antiochus renews the privileges granted by his father, Alexander Balas, see 10:89 (and by his rival Demetrius II). He also nominates Jonathan commander-in-chief of Coele-Syria, v. 60, and his brother Simon commander-in-chief of the Coastal region, v. 59. These honours from the Syrian kings show that the Hasmonaean principality wielded real influence.

t. The southernmost of the cities of the ancient Philistine Pentapolis, 1 S 6:17. Gaza was a hellenistic centre and peculiarly hostile to the Jews. Alexander Jannaeus captured it in about BC 100 after besieging it for a year, sacked the town and massacred its inhabitants.

u. The Kadesh of Jos 12:22, about 22 miles (35 km) from Tyre where the generals had been able to land their troops.

v. Jonathan, as commander-in-chief of Coele-Syria, was entitled to control this royal strongpoint. (Simon's victory was to be added to the list of lucky days in the calendar.)

w. The ancient Canaanite metropolis of Hazor, Jos 11:10, by now no more than a fortress, situated about 6 miles (10 km) north of Lake Tiberias.

12 a. Such renewals of alliance are characteristic of the period. see 14:18,22. For the text of the original treaty, see 8:22seq.

b. 'Areios' conj. following Josephus; 'Darius' Gk. Areios II having died at the age of eight, this can only be Areios I (309–265) and therefore Onias I, who was a contemporary of Alexander the Great. The answer to the letter has thus taken one and a half centuries to arrive (see v. 10). Josephus, who did not realise that this first document was no more than a diplomatic fiction, dates the episode to the reign of Onias III (died in 174).

c. The 'holy books' represent a larger grouping than 'the book of the Law', 3:48, or 'the holy book', 2 M 8:23; they are all the books recognised as possessing divine authority. The OT canon is in process of formation: one of the Psalms is quoted as 'scripture', 7:17, and soon afterwards the prologue of Ecclesiasticus (132 BC) speaks of the division into Law, prophets, and 'other books' (see 2 M 2:13), which was to remain the classification of the Hebr. Bible, see Rm 1:2; 2 Tm 3:15d.

d. 'Areios, to Onias' conj. following Josephus; 'to Oniares' Gk.

e. This legend, typical of the diplomatic fictions of the age, was already current in Sparta when Jason took refuge there, 2 M 5:9.

Jonathan in Coele-Syria. Simon in Philistia

Jonathan learned that Demetrius' generals had returned with a larger army than 24 before to make war on him. ·He therefore left Jerusalem and went to engage 25 them in the area of Hamath, not giving them the time to invade his own territory.
He sent spies into their camp, who told him on their return that the enemy were 26 taking up positions for a night attack on the Jews. ·At sunset, Jonathan ordered 27 his men to keep watch with their weapons at hand, in readiness to fight at any time during the night, and posted advance guards all round the camp. ·On learning 28 that Jonathan and his men were ready to fight, the enemy took fright and, with quaking hearts, lit fires in their bivouac and decamped.[g] ·Jonathan and his men, 29 watching the glow of the fires, were unaware of their withdrawal until morning, and although Jonathan pursued them, he failed to overtake them, for they had 30 already crossed the river Eleutherus.[h] ·So Jonathan wheeled round on the Arabs 31 called Zabadaeans,[i] beat them and plundered them; ·then, breaking camp, he 32 went to Damascus, thus crossing the whole province. ·Simon, meanwhile, had also 33 set out and had penetrated as far as Ascalon and the neighbouring towns. He then turned on Joppa and moved quickly to occupy it, ·for he had heard of their 34 intention to hand over this strong point to the supporters of Demetrius; he stationed a garrison there to hold it.[j]

Building work in Jerusalem

Jonathan, on his return, called a meeting of the elders of the people and decided 35 with them to build fortresses in Judaea ·and to heighten the walls of Jerusalem 36 and erect a high barrier between the Citadel[k] and the city, to cut the former off from the city and isolate it, to prevent the occupants from buying or selling.
Rebuilding the city was a co-operative effort: part of the wall over the eastern 37 ravine had fallen down; he restored the quarter called Chaphenatha.[l] ·Simon, 38 meanwhile, rebuilt Adida[m] in the lowlands, fortifying it, and erecting gates with bolts.

Jonathan falls into the hands of his enemies

11:39seq.; 54seq. Trypho's ambition was to become king of Asia, assume the crown, and overpower 39
King Antiochus. ·He was apprehensive that Jonathan might not allow him to do 40 this, and might even make war on him, so he set out and came to Beth-Shean, in the hopes of finding some pretext for having him arrested and put to death.

Jonathan went out to intercept him, with forty thousand picked men in battle 41 order, and arrived at Beth-Shean. ·When Trypho saw him there with a large force, 42
he hesitated to make any move against him. ·He even received him with honour, 43 commended him to all his friends, gave him presents and ordered his friends and his troops to obey him as they would himself. ·He said to Jonathan, 'Why have you 44 given all these people so much trouble, when there is no threat of war between us?
Send them back home; pick yourself a few men as your bodyguard, and come with 45 me to Ptolemais, which I am going to hand over to you, with the other fortresses and the remaining troops and all the officials;[n] after which, I shall take the road for home. This was my purpose in coming here.' ·Jonathan trusted him and did as he 46 said; he dismissed his forces, who went back to Judaea. ·With him he retained 47 three thousand men, of whom he left two thousand in Galilee, while a thousand accompanied him. ·But as soon as Jonathan had entered Ptolemais, the people of 48 Ptolemais closed the gates, seized him, and put all those who had entered with him to the sword. ·Trypho sent troops and cavalry into Galilee and the Great Plain to 49 destroy all Jonathan's supporters. ·These, concluding that he had been taken and 50 had perished with his companions, encouraged one another, marching with closed 51 ranks and ready to give battle, ·and when their pursuers saw that they would fight 52 for their lives, they turned back. ·All reached Judaea safe and sound, and there they lamented Jonathan and his companions, being very frightened indeed; all 53 Israel was plunged into mourning. ·The surrounding nations were all now looking for ways of destroying them: 'They have no leader,' they said, 'no ally; we have only to attack them now, and we shall blot out their very memory from mankind.'

V: SIMON, HIGH PRIEST AND ETHNARCH OF THE JEWS (143–134 BC)

Simon takes command

1 13 Simon heard that Trypho had collected a large army to invade and devastate
2 Judaea, ·and when he saw how the people were quaking with fear, he went 3 up to Jerusalem, called the people together, ·and exhorted them thus, 'You know yourselves how much I and my brothers and my father's family have done for the laws and the sanctuary; you know what wars and hardships we have experienced.
4 That is why my brothers are all dead,[a] for Israel's sake, and I am the only one
5 left. ·Far be it from me, then, to be sparing of my own life in any time of oppression, 6 for I am not worth more than my brothers. ·Rather will I avenge my nation and the sanctuary and your wives and children, now that the foreigners are all united in 7 malice to destroy us.' ·The people's spirit rekindled as they listened to his words, 5:2,12:53
8 and they shouted back at him, 'You are our leader in place of Judas and your 9 brother Jonathan. ·Fight our battles for us, and we will do whatever you tell us.'[b] 10 So he assembled all the fighting men and hurried on with completing the walls of 11 Jerusalem, fortifying the whole perimeter. ·He sent a considerable force to Joppa under Jonathan son of Absalom who drove out the inhabitants and remained there in occupation.[c]

Simon repels Trypho from Judaea

12 Trypho now left Ptolemais with a large army to invade Judaea, taking Jonathan 13, 14 with him under guard. ·Simon pitched camp in Adida, facing the plain. ·When Trypho learned that Simon had taken the place of his brother Jonathan and that he 15 intended to join battle with him, he sent envoys to him with this message, ·'Your brother Jonathan was in debt to the royal exchequer for the offices he held; that is 16 why we are detaining him. ·If you send a hundred talents of silver and two of his sons as hostages, to make sure that on his release he does not revolt against us, we 17 shall release him.' ·Although Simon was aware that the message was a ruse, he sent for the money and the boys for fear of incurring great hostility from the 18 people, ·who would have said that Jonathan had died because Simon would not 19 send Trypho the money and the children. ·He therefore sent both the boys and the

g. 'and decamped' 2 MSS, Gk-Luc., Syr., Josephus; omitted by Gk and Lat.

h. The present-day Nahr el-Kebir, separating Lebanon from Syria. Presumably the northern frontier of the province of Coele-Syria, for which Jonathan was militarily responsible.

i. The name is still to be found among the place-names of Anti-Lebanon, e.g. Zebdani.

j. Simon acts thus by virtue of his appointment by Antiochus VI, 11:59, but the author, in eulogising Simon, emphasises the importance that the capture of this much disputed port had for the Jews, 14:5.

k. Still in the hands of Demetrius' mercenaries, 11:20, whom nothing prevented from going out into the city.

l. cf. Aramaean kaphelta 'the double one': trans. of Hebr. ha-mishnah, meaning the new quarter to the north-west of the Temple, see 2 K 22:14. • The 'ravine' is the bed of the River Kedron.

m. The Hadid of Ezr 2:33, 4 miles (6 km) north-east of Lydda, where Simon apparently had his base, 1 M 13:13.

n. Trypho recognises, or rather, feigns to recognise, Jonathan's position as commander-in-chief of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia.

13 a. Like everyone else, Simon thought that Jonathan was dead. He was still only a prisoner, v. 12.

b. Simon is nominated by acclamation, as Jonathan was, 9:30, whereas Judas had been designated by his father, 2:66; the latter had asked his sons to regard Simon as their second father, but up to this moment he had played a self-effacing role as regards his younger brothers.

c. Simon's Jewish policy is more radical than Jonathan's. He had already expelled the entire gentile population from Beth-Zur, 11:66.

hundred talents, but Trypho broke his word and did not release Jonathan. ·Next, 20
Trypho set about the invasion and devastation of the country; he made a detour along the Adora[d] road, but Simon and his army confronted him wherever he attempted to go. ·The men in the Citadel kept sending messengers to Trypho, 21 urging him to get through to them by way of the desert and send them supplies.
Trypho organised his entire cavalry to go, but that night it snowed so heavily 22 that he could not get through for the snow, so he left there and moved off into Gilead. ·As he approached Baskama[e] he killed Jonathan, who was buried there. 23
Trypho turned back and regained his own country. 24

Jonathan is buried in the mausoleum built by Simon at Modein

Simon sent and recovered the bones of his brother Jonathan, and buried him in 25
Modein, the town of his ancestors. ·All Israel kept solemn mourning for him and 26 long bewailed him. ·Over the tomb of his father and brothers, Simon raised a 27 monument high enough to catch the eye, using dressed stone back and front. ·He 28 erected seven pyramids facing each other, for his father and mother and his four brothers,[f] ·surrounding them with a structure consisting of tall columns sur- 29 mounted by trophies of arms to their everlasting memory and, beside the trophies of arms, ships sculpted on a scale to be seen by all who sail the sea. ·Such was the 30 monument he constructed at Modein, and it is still there today.

The favours of Demetrius II to Simon

Now Trypho, betraying the trust of young King Antiochus, put him to death.[g] 31
He usurped his throne, assuming the crown of Asia, and brought great havoc on 32
the country. ·Simon built up the fortresses of Judaea, surrounding them with high 33 towers, great walls and gates with bolts, and stocked these fortresses with food.
He also sent a delegation to King Demetrius, to get him to grant the province a 34 remission, since all Trypho did was to despoil.[h] ·King Demetrius replied to his 35 request in a letter framed as follows:

'King Demetrius to Simon, high priest and Friend of Kings, and to the elders 36 and nation of the Jews, greetings.

'It has pleased us to accept the golden crown and the palm you have sent us, 37 and we are disposed to make a general peace with you, and to write to the officials to grant you remissions. ·Everything that we have decreed concerning 38 you remains in force, and the fortresses you have built may remain in your hands. ·We pardon all offences, unwitting or intentional, hitherto committed, 39 and remit the crown tax you now owe us;[i] and whatever other taxes were levied in Jerusalem are no longer to be levied. ·If any of you are suitable for enrolment 40 in our bodyguard, let them be enrolled, and let there be peace between us.'

The gentile yoke was thus lifted from Israel[j] in the year 170, ·when our people 41, 42 began engrossing their documents and contracts: 'In the first year of Simon, eminent high priest, commander-in-chief and ethnarch[k] of the Jews'.

‖2M10:32–38 The capture of Gezer by Simon

About that time Simon laid siege to Gezer,[l] surrounding it with his troops. He 43 constructed a mobile tower, brought it up to the city, opened a breach in one of the bastions and took it. ·The men in the mobile tower sprang out into the city, where 44 great confusion ensued. ·The citizens, accompanied by their wives and children, 45 mounted the ramparts with their garments torn and loudly implored Simon to make peace with them: ·'Treat us', they said, 'not as our wickedness deserves, but 46 as your mercy prompts you.' ·Simon came to terms with them and stopped the 47 fighting; but he expelled them from the city, purified the houses which contained idols, and then made his entry with songs of praise. ·He banished all impurity from 48 it, settled in it people who observed the Law, and having fortified it, built a residence there for himself.

Simon occupies the Citadel in Jerusalem

49 The occupants of the Citadel in Jerusalem, prevented as they were from coming out and going into the countryside to buy and sell,[m] were in desperate need of 50 food, and numbers of them were being carried off by starvation. ·They begged Simon to make peace with them, and he granted this, though he expelled them and 51 purified the Citadel from its pollutions. ·The Jews made their entry on the twenty- 2 M 10:7 Jn 12:13 third day of the second month in the year 171,[n] with acclamations and carrying palms, to the sound of lyres, cymbals and harps, chanting hymns and canticles, since a great enemy had been crushed and thrown out of Israel. Simon made it a 52 day of annual rejoicing. ·He fortified the Temple hill on the Citadel side, and took 53 up residence there with his men. ·Since his son John had come to manhood, Simon appointed him general-in-chief, with his residence in Gezer.

Eulogy of Simon

1 14 In the year 172,[a] King Demetrius assembled his forces and marched into 2 Media to raise help for the fight against Trypho. ·When Arsaces king of Persia and Media[b] heard that Demetrius had entered his territory, he sent one of 3 his generals to capture him alive. ·The general defeated the army of Demetrius, 4 seized him and brought him to Arsaces, who imprisoned him. ·The country was at peace throughout the days of Simon.[c]

He sought the good of his nation 3:3–9
and they were well pleased with his authority,
as with his magnificence, throughout his life.
5 To crown his titles to glory,
he took Joppa and made it a harbour,
gaining access to the Mediterranean Isles.
6 He enlarged the frontiers of his nation, Ex 34:24
keeping his mastery over the homeland,
7 resettling a host of captives.
He conquered Gezer, Beth-Zur and the Citadel,[d] ridding them of every impurity,
and no one could resist him.
8 The people farmed their land in peace;
the land gave its produce, Zc 8:12

e. On the western tip of the Carmel promontory: otherwise known as Sycaminos, where Ptolemy IX was to land in about 100 BC. • 'Gilead' seems out of place here and is perhaps a mistake for 'Galilee'. • Trypho seems to have executed Jonathan before re-embarking.

f. Pyramidal monuments are characteristic of the funerary art of the day.

g. Here, as in Diodorus, the murder precedes the accession of Trypho (dating 142/141), but according to Livy and Josephus, it followed the capture of Demetrius (in 139, see 14:2).

Renewal of the alliances with Sparta and with Rome

When it became known in Rome and as far as Sparta that Jonathan was dead, 16 people were deeply grieved. ·But as soon as they heard that his brother Simon 17 had succeeded him as high priest and was master of the country and the cities in it, 8:17seq., 22; 12:3 they wrote to him on bronze tablets to renew the treaty of friendship and alliance 18 which they had made with his brothers,[f] Judas and Jonathan, ·and the document 19 was read out before the assembly in Jerusalem.
This is the copy of the letter sent by the Spartans: 20

'The rulers and the city of Sparta, to Simon the high priest and to the elders and priests and the rest of the people of the Jews, greetings.
'The ambassadors whom you sent to our people have informed us of your 21 glory and prosperity, and we are delighted with their visit. ·We have recorded 22 12:16 their declarations in the minutes of our public assemblies, as follows, "Numenius son of Antiochus, and Antipater son of Jason, ambassadors of the Jews, came to us to renew their friendship with us. ·And it was the people's pleasure to 23 receive these personages with honour and to deposit a copy of their statements in the public archives, so that the people of Sparta might preserve a record of them. A copy was also made for Simon the high priest." '

After this, Simon sent Numenius to Rome as the bearer of a large golden shield 24 weighing a thousand mina, to confirm the alliance with them.

Official honours decreed for Simon

When these events were reported to our people, they said, 'What mark of appreci- 25
ation shall we give to Simon and his sons? ·He stood firm,[g] he and his brothers and 26 his father's house: he fought off the enemies of Israel and secured its freedom.' So they recorded an inscription on bronze tablets and set it up on pillars on Mount Zion. ·This is a copy of the text: 27

'The eighteenth of Elul, in the year 172, being the third year of Simon, eminent high priest:
'In Asaramel,[h] in the Grand Assembly of priests and people, of princes of 28
the nation and of elders of the country:
'We are acquainted with the matters following:
'When there was almost incessant fighting in the country Simon, son of 29
Mattathias, a priest of the line of Joarib, and his brothers courted danger and withstood their nation's enemies to safeguard the integrity of their sanctuary and of the Law, and so brought their nation great glory;
'For when, Jonathan having rallied his nation and become its high priest and 30 having then been gathered to his ancestors, ·the enemy planned to invade the 31 country, intending to devastate their territory and to lay hands on their sanctu-32 ary, ·Simon next came forward to fight for his nation: spending much of his personal wealth [i] on arming his nation's fighting men and on providing their pay; 33 ·fortifying the towns of Judaea, as well as Beth-Zur on the Judaean frontier where the enemy arsenal had formerly been, and stationing in it a garrison of 34 Jewish soldiers; ·fortifying Joppa on the coast, and Gezer on the borders of Azotus, a place formerly inhabited by the enemy, founding a Jewish colony there, and providing the settlers with everything they needed to set them on their feet;

35 'In consequence of which, the people, aware of Simon's loyalty and of the glory which he was determined to win for his nation, have made him their ethnarch and high priest, for all his services and for the integrity and loyalty which he has shown towards his nation, and for having by every means sought to enhance his people's power;

36 'It has fallen to him in his time to expel the foreigners from his country,[j] including those in the City of David in Jerusalem, who had converted it into a citadel for their own use, from which they would sally out to defile the surround-37 ings of the sanctuary and to violate its sacred character; ·to station Jewish soldiers there instead for the security of the country and the city; and to heighten the walls of Jerusalem;

38 'And since King Demetrius has heard that the Romans call the Jews their 39 friends, allies and brothers, [k] ·and that they have given an honourable reception 40 to Simon's ambassadors, and, furthermore, ·that the Jews and priests are happy that Simon should, pending the advent of a genuine prophet, be their ethnarch 41 and high priest for life ·therefore he has confirmed him in the high-priestly 4:46j office, has raised him to the rank of Friend and has showered great honours [l] on 42 him, also confirming him as their commander-in-chief, ·with the right to appoint 2:18e officials to oversee the fabric of the sanctuary and to administer the country, 43 munitions and fortresses; ·he is to have personal charge of the sanctuary, [m] and to be obeyed by all; all official documents in the country must be drawn up in his name; and he may assume the purple and may wear golden ornaments;

44 'Furthermore, it is against the law for any member of the public or of the priesthood to contravene any of these enactments or to contest his decisions, or to convene a meeting anywhere in the country without his permission, or to 45 assume the purple or wear the golden brooch; ·and anyone acting contrary to, or rejecting any article of, these enactments is liable to punishment;

46 'And since the people have unanimously agreed to grant Simon the right to 47 act as aforesaid, and ·since Simon, for his part, has given his assent, and has consented to assume the high-priestly office and to be commander-in-chief and ethnarch of the Jews and their priests, [n] and to preside over all:

48 'So, be it now enacted: that this record be inscribed on bronze tablets and be 49 erected at some conspicuous place within the precincts of the Temple, ·and that copies be deposited in the Treasury for Simon and his descendants.'

e. The tone of the v. is almost messianic. The order of the lines has been adjusted, following Gk-Luc. and Syr. MSS, and the requirements of logic. Respect for the Law was characteristic of the age, and peculiarly so of Simon, 13:3; 14:29; see 2 M 13:10–11,14.

f. see 8:22. In point of fact, the renewal of alliance must have been requested by Simon soon after his accession in 142, since the reply from Rome bears the date of that same year (consulate of Lucius, 15:16). Such must have been the objective of Numenius' mission. It was clumsy of the author to try to weave these documents into the narrative, instead of keeping them all together.

g. 'He stood firm' conj. trans. of a verb which is normally transitive.

h. In September 140. • 'Asamarel' (and not the corrupt form 'Samaral' found in some MSS) is the transcription of an expression meaning 'The Court of the People of God'—probably the outer courtyard of the Temple, see v. 48; 9:54.

i. A point often made in honorific decrees. The volunteers of the Revolt have gradually been replaced by a standing army.

j. 'his country' 1 Lat. MS; 'their country' Gk and Lat.

k. The formula 'friends and allies' is well attested; 'brothers', however, must be an editorial interpolation, for such a title would imply an (at least fictitious) common origin, as with the Jews and the Spartans, 12:21.

l. see 13:36. There is still a firm link with Antioch.

m. Perhaps a dittography, see v. 42.

n. The explicit mention of the priests, here and at v. 41, is perhaps because of opposition from that part of the clergy still loyal to the evicted Oniads. Simon's powers are to be traditional (high priest), respectful of his Seleucid suzerain (commander-in-chief), but above all national (ethnarch, head of a virtually autonomous group within the empire).

Letter of Antiochus VII and siege of Dora

15 Antiochus son of King Demetrius addressed a letter from the Mediterranean Isles[a] to Simon, priest and ethnarch of the Jews, and to the whole nation; ·this was how it read:

'King Antiochus to Simon, high priest and ethnarch, and to the Jewish nation, greetings.

'Whereas certain scoundrels have seized control of the kingdom of our fathers, and I propose to claim back the kingdom so that I may re-establish it as it was before, and whereas I have accordingly recruited very large forces and fitted out warships, ·intending to make a landing in the country and to hunt down the men who have ruined it and laid waste many towns in my kingdom;

'I now, therefore, confirm in your favour all remissions of taxes granted to you by the kings my predecessors, as well as the waiving of whatever presents they may have conceded.[b] ·I hereby authorise you to mint your own coinage as legal tender for your own country.[c] ·I declare Jerusalem and the sanctuary to be free; all the arms you have manufactured and the fortresses you have built and now occupy may remain yours. ·All debts to the royal treasury, present or future, are cancelled henceforth in perpetuity. ·Furthermore, when we have won back our kingdom, we shall bestow such great honour on yourself, your nation and the sanctuary as will make your glory known throughout the world.'

Antiochus invaded the land of his ancestors in the year 174[d] and, since the troops all rallied to him, Trypho was left with few supporters. ·Antiochus pursued the usurper, who took refuge in Dora[e] on the coast, ·knowing that misfortunes were piling up on him and that his troops had deserted him. ·Antiochus pitched camp outside Dora with a hundred and twenty thousand fighting men and eight thousand cavalry. ·He laid siege to the city while the ships closed in from the sea, so that he had the city under attack from land and sea, and allowed no one to go in or come out.

The ambassadors return from Rome to Judaea. The alliance with Rome proclaimed Numenius and his companions, meanwhile, arrived from Rome, bringing letters addressed to various kings and states, in the following terms:

8:17;12:16; 14:22,24

'Lucius,[f] consul of the Romans, to King Ptolemy, greetings.

'The Jewish ambassadors have come to us as our friends and allies to renew our original friendship and alliance in the name of the high priest Simon and the Jewish people. ·They have brought a golden shield worth a thousand mina.[g] Accordingly, we have seen fit to write to various kings and states, warning them neither to molest the Jewish people nor to attack either them or their towns or their country, nor to ally themselves with any such aggressors. ·We have seen fit to accept the shield from them. ·If, therefore, any scoundrels have fled their country to take refuge with you, hand them over to Simon the high priest, to be punished by him according to their law.'

The consul sent the same letter to King Demetrius, to Attalus, Ariarathes and Arsaces,[h] ·and to all states, including Sampsames, the Spartans, Delos, Myndos, Sicyon, Caria, Samos, Pamphylia, Lycia, Halicarnassus, Rhodes, Phaselis, Cos, Side, Arados, Gortyn, Cyprus and Cyrene.[i] ·They also drew up a copy for Simon the high priest.

Antiochus VII, besieging Dora, becomes hostile to Simon and sends him a reprimand

Antiochus, meanwhile, from his positions on the outskirts of Dora, was continually throwing detachments against the town. He constructed siege-engines, and blockaded Trypho, preventing movement in or out. ·Simon sent him two thousand picked men to support him in the fight, with silver and gold and plenty of equip-27 ment. ·But Antiochus would not accept them; instead, he repudiated all his previous agreements with Simon and completely changed his attitude to him.

28 He sent him Athenobius, one of his Friends, to confer with him and say, 'You 2:18e are now occupying Joppa and Gezer and the Citadel in Jerusalem, which are towns 29 in my kingdom.[j] ·You have laid waste their territory and done immense harm to the country; and you have seized control of many places[k] properly in my kingdom.
30 Either now surrender the towns you have taken and the taxes from the places 31 you have seized outside the frontiers of Judaea, ·or else pay me five hundred talents of silver in compensation for them and for the destruction you have done, and another five hundred talents for the taxes from the towns; otherwise we shall 32 come and make war on you.' ·When the King's Friend, Athenobius, reached Jerusalem and saw Simon's magnificence, his cabinet of gold and silver plate and 33 the state he kept, he was dumbfounded. He delivered the king's message, ·but Simon gave him this answer, 'We have not taken foreign territory or any alien property but have occupied our ancestral heritage, for some time unjustly wrested 34 from us by our enemies; ·now that we have a favourable opportunity, we are 35 merely recovering our ancestral heritage. ·As regards Joppa and Gezer, which you claim, these were towns that did great harm to our people and laid waste our country;[l] we are prepared to give a hundred talents for them.' Without so much as 36 a word in answer, ·the envoy went back to the king in a rage and reported on Simon's answer and his magnificence, and on everything he had seen, at which the king fell into a fury.

Cendebaeus, governor of the coastal region, harasses Judaea

37, 38 Trypho now boarded a ship and escaped to Orthosia.[m] ·The king appointed Cendebaeus military governor of the coastal region and allotted him a force of 39 infantry and cavalry. ·He ordered him to deploy his men facing Judaea, and instructed him to rebuild Kedron and fortify its gates, and to make war on our 40 people, while the king himself went in pursuit of Trypho. ·Cendebaeus arrived at Jamnia and began to provoke our people forthwith, invading Judaea, taking 41 prisoners, and massacring. ·Having rebuilt Kedron,[n] he stationed cavalry and troops there to make sorties and patrol the roads of Judaea, as the king had ordered.

15 a. While in Rhodes, Antiochus VII learned of his brother Demetrius II's captivity. Brought up at Cnidus and Side, he was nicknamed Sidetes, but on his coinage took the regal title Euergetes ('benefactor').

b. 13:39. Antiochus includes, at least by implication, the taxes due from the three districts, 15:30seq., see 11:34*l*.

c. The privilege was soon revoked (v. 27), and no Jewish coin hitherto discovered can be attributed to Simon. There are, however, a large number of small bronze coins issued in the name of 'John and the community of the Jews', probably struck by John Hyrcanus, Simon's son.

d. 139/138—the earliest coins of Antiochus date from 138; his landing took place in autumn, 139, at the instance of his sister-in-law Cleopatra Thea.

e. South of Carmel. This ancient district-capital, 1 K 4:11, was still a prosperous port.

f. Lucius Caecilius Metellus Calvus, consul in 142; his circular letter is hence misplaced, see 14:18.

g. About 96 lb (44 kg) of gold, therefore; such decorative shields are attested elsewhere. The author's statement in 14:24 'weighing a thousand mina' should be accepted with caution, for that would have weighed nearly half a ton (508 kg).

h. Attalus II (159–138) king of Pergamum. Ariarathes V (162–131) king of Cappadocia. • For Arsaces, see 14:2.

i. The list gives a good idea of the political situation in the Eastern Mediterranean in the middle of the second century BC. Besides a few large kingdoms, there were numerous city-states (Side in Pamphylia, Sicyon in the Peloponnese etc.), islands (Delos, Samos, Rhodes, Arados, present-day Ruad, north of Tripoli), and more or less independent territories (Caria, Lycia etc.), with Jewish settlements scattered among them. Cyprus and Cyrene still belonged to Egypt, but the Romans did not hesitate to give orders to other rulers' vassal-states.

j. The Citadel in Jerusalem was so large as to count as a town in its own right, see 1:33. Naturally, Simon refused to give it up or to pay a tax on it, though in the case of the other two strongpoints, forming no part either of Judaea or of the Four Districts, he was prepared to agree, v. 29.

k. In Gk topos, a vague expression, here probably meaning the Four Districts, see 11:57.

l. 'and laid waste our country' 1 MS; 'and our country' or 'and to our country' Gk.

m. Between Tripolis and the River Eleutherus. Thirty-three tetradrachmas of Trypho have been found there, and the rarity of these coins suggests some connection with the events related here. Trypho fled to Apamaea where he was put to death (unless he committed suicide, if Strabo, rather than Josephus, is to be believed).

n. Present-day Qatra, about 3 miles (5 km) south-east of Jamnia.

The victory of Simon's sons over Cendebaeus

16 John then went up from Gezer and reported to his father Simon what 1
Cendebaeus was busy doing. ·At this, Simon summoned his two elder sons, 2 Judas and John, and said to them, 'My brothers and I, and my father's House, have fought the enemies of Israel[a] from our youth until today, and many a time we have been successful in rescuing Israel. ·But now I am an old man, while you, by the 3 mercy of Heaven,[b] are the right age; take the place of my brother and myself, go out and fight for our nation, and may Heaven's aid be with you.' ·He then selected 4 twenty thousand of the country's fighting men and cavalry, and these marched against Cendebaeus, spending the night at Modein. ·Making an early start, they 5 marched into the plain, to find a large army opposing them, both infantry and cavalry; there was, however, a stream-bed[c] in between. ·John[d] drew up facing 6 them, he and his army and, seeing that the men were afraid to cross the streambed, crossed over first himself. When his men saw this, they too crossed after him.
He divided his army into two, with the cavalry in the centre and the infantry[e] on 7 either flank, as the opposing cavalry was very numerous. ·The trumpets rang out; 8 Cendebaeus and his army were put to flight, many of them falling mortally wounded and the rest of them fleeing to the fortress. ·Then it was that Judas, 9
John's brother, was wounded, but John pursued them until Cendebaeus reached Kedron, which he had rebuilt. ·Their flight took them as far as the towers in the 10 countryside of Azotus, and John burnt these down. The enemy losses amounted to ten thousand men; John returned safely to Judaea.

Simon's tragic death at Dok. His son John succeeds him

Ptolemy son of Abubos had been appointed general in command of the Plain of 11
Jericho;[f] he owned a great deal of silver and gold, ·and was the high priest's son- 12 in-law. ·His ambition was fired; he hoped to make himself master of the whole 13 country and therefore treacherously began to plot the destruction of Simon and his sons. ·Simon, who was inspecting the towns up and down the country and 14 attending to their administration, had come down to Jericho with his sons Matta-thias and Judas, in the year 172, in the eleventh month, the month of Shebat.[g]
The son of Abubos lured them into a small fortress called Dok,[h] which he had 15 built, where he offered them a great banquet, having previously hidden men in the place. ·When Simon and his sons were drunk, Ptolemy and his men reached for 16 their weapons, rushed on Simon in the banqueting hall and killed him with his two sons[i] and some of his servants. ·He thus committed a great act of treachery and 17 rendered evil for good.

Ptolemy wrote a report of the affair and sent it to the king, in the expectation of 18 being sent reinforcements and of having the cities and the province made over to him. ·He also sent people to Gezer to murder John, and sent written orders to the 19 military commanders[j] to come to him so that he could give them silver, gold and presents; ·and he also sent others to seize control of Jerusalem and the Temple 20 mount. ·But someone had been too quick for him and had already informed John 21 in Gezer that his father and brothers had perished, adding, 'He is sending someone to kill you too!' ·Overcome as John was by the news, he arrested the men who had 22 come to kill him and put them to death, being forewarned of their murderous design.[k] ·The rest of John's acts, the battles he fought and the exploits he per- 23 formed, the city walls he built, and all his other achievements, ·from the day he 24 succeeded his father as high priest, are recorded in the annals of his pontificate.[l]

16 a. 'the enemies' 1 Gk MS and Lat.; 'the wars' Gk. • John is John Hyrcanus, who succeeded his father in 134. Simon's words recall the testament of Mattathias, 2:49seq. see also 2:66; 12:15; 14:26,36.

b. lit. 'by the mercy'; but the implication is clear, see 2:21.

c. Perhaps the Wadi Qatra, running about half a mile (1 km) north of Qatra, between Modein (about 15 miles–about 24 km–away) and Azotus (v. 10, about 8 miles–13 km).

d. The subject is not expressed, but it cannot be Simon, see v. 3.

e. These tactics were practised by the ancients and made it easier to withstand a superior number of horse. This is the first mention of Hasmonaean cavalry.

f. Ptolemy had perhaps been stationed at Jericho by Simon, like John at Gezer. In any case, this military command included Judaea, 9:50, later becoming one of the Herodian administrative districts.

g. January–February 134.

h. On the top of Jebel Qaruntul, dominating Jericho.

i. Simon's two sons were not in fact put to death until later. Ptolemy kept them hostage, as well as their mother. To save their lives, John Hyrcanus was unable to press home the siege of Dok. Josephus relates that Ptolemy, taking advantage of a relaxation of the siege, killed them and fled to Philadelphia (Amman).

j. lit. 'commanders of a thousand men' see 3:55; Jdt 14:12.

k. According to Josephus, John Hyrcanus took refuge in Jerusalem, where the people welcomed him and repelled Ptolemy. Ptolemy appealed for help to Antiochus, the latter besieged the city but finally came to an agreement with Hyrcanus. After Antiochus' death in 129, he became independent. The author omits all this, his subject being limited to the exploits of Mattathias and his sons.

l. Extracts from these annals appear in the work of Josephus. The closing formula intentionally echoes those of the Books of Kings, see for instance, 2 K 10:34, and seems to make best sense if written after John Hyrcanus' death, i.e. after 104 BC.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MACCABEES

I: LETTERS TO THE JEWS OF EGYPT[a]

FIRST LETTER

1 'To their brothers, the Jews living in Egypt,[b] from their brothers, the Jews in 1
Jerusalem and Judaea, greetings and untroubled peace.

'May God prosper you, remembering his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and 2
Jacob, his faithful servants. ·May he give you all a heart to worship him and to 3
1 Ch 28:9 do his will with a generous mind and a willing spirit. ·May he open your hearts to 4 his Law and his precepts, and give you peace. ·May he hear your prayers and be 5 reconciled with you, and not abandon you in time of evil. ·Such is our prayer for 6
you.

'During the reign of Demetrius, in the year 169, we Jews wrote to you as 7 4:7seq. follows,[c] "In the extremity of trouble that befell us in the years after Jason and his associates had betrayed the Holy Land and the kingdom, ·burning down 8 the Temple gateway and shedding innocent blood, we prayed to the Lord and were then heard. And we then offered a sacrifice, with wheat-flour, we lit the lamps and we set out the loaves."

'And we now recommend you too to keep the feast of Shelters in the month 9 of Chislev, in the year one hundred and eighty-eight.'[d]

SECOND LETTER[e]

Address

'The people of Jerusalem and of Judaea, the senate and Judas,[f] to 10
Aristobulus,[g] tutor to King Ptolemy and one of the family of the anointed priests, and to the Jews in Egypt, greetings and good health.

Thanksgiving for the punishment of Antiochus

'Since we have been rescued by God from great danger, we give him great 11 thanks for championing our cause against the king, ·for he it was who carried off 12
those who had taken up arms against the Holy City. ·For when their leader 13 9:1–29 reached Persia with his seemingly irresistible army, he was cut to pieces in the 1 M 6:1–13 temple of Nanaea,[h] as the result of a ruse employed by the priests who served that goddess. ·On the pretext of marrying Nanaea, Antiochus came to the 14 place with his friends, intending to take its many treasures as a dowry. ·The 15 priests of Nanaea had put these on display, and he for his part had entered the temple precincts with only a small retinue. As soon as Antiochus had gone inside the temple, the priests shut him in, ·opened a trap-door hidden in the ceiling and 16 struck the leader down by hurling stones like thunderbolts. They then cut him

17 into pieces and threw his head[i] to those who were waiting outside. •Blessed in all things be our God, who has delivered the sacrilegious over to death!

The miraculous preservation of the sacred fire[j]

18 'As we shall be celebrating the purification of the Temple on the twenty-fifth of Chislev, we consider it proper to notify you, so that you too may celebrate it, as you do the feast of Shelters and the fire that appeared when Nehemiah,[k] the 19 builder of the Temple and the altar, offered sacrifice. •For when our ancestors were being deported to Persia, the devout priests of the time took some of the fire from the altar and hid it secretly in a hole like a dry well, where they 20 concealed it in such a way that the place was unknown to anyone. •When some years had elapsed, in God's good time, Nehemiah, commissioned by the king of Persia,[l] sent the descendants of the priests who had hidden the fire to look for it.
When they reported that in fact[m] they had found not fire but a thick liquid, 21 Nehemiah ordered them to draw some out and bring it back. •When they had done this, Nehemiah ordered the priests to pour this liquid over the sacrificial 22 materials, that is, the wood and what lay on it. •When this had been done, and when in due course the sun, which had previously been clouded over, shone out, 23 a great fire flared up, to the astonishment of all. •While the sacrifice was being burned, the priests offered prayer, Jonathan intoning with all the priests,[n] and 24 the rest responding with Nehemiah. •The prayer took this form, "Lord, Lord God, Creator of all things, awesome, strong, just, merciful, the only king and 25 benefactor, •the only provider, who alone are just, almighty and everlasting, the deliverer of Israel from every evil, who made our fathers your chosen ones and 26 sanctified them, •accept this sacrifice on behalf of all your people Israel, and 27 protect your heritage and consecrate it. •Bring together those of us who are Dt 30:3–5 dispersed,[o] set free those in slavery among the heathen, look favourably on those held in contempt or abhorrence, and let the heathen know that you are 28 our God. •Punish those who oppress us and affront us by their insolence, 29 and plant your people firmly in your Holy Place, as Moses promised."
30, 31 'The priests then chanted hymns accompanied by the harp. •When the sacrifice had been burnt, Nehemiah ordered the remaining liquid to be poured over 32 large stones, •and when this was done a flame flared up, to be absorbed in a 33 corresponding blaze of light from the altar. •When the matter became known

1 a. These two letters are invitations to celebrate the feast of Dedication, see 1 M 4:59*l*. The first part of 2 M, up to 10:8, provides the historical justification for this feast.

b. There had long been Jewish colonies in Egypt. The best known of these is the one at Elephantine, dating back to the early sixth century. About the year 150 BC, the priest Onias IV son of the Onias III killed at Daphne, 4:33seq. founded a temple in Leontopolis, a smaller model of the Temple in Jerusalem, see 1 M 10:20d. The Jews of Jerusalem wished to maintain community of worship with their brothers in Egypt, then persecuted by Ptolemy VIII.

c. Reference to an earlier letter, written by the Egyptian Jews in 169 of the Seleucid era (142 BC, see 1 M 1:10f), about the misfortunes of the Judaean Jews as a result of Jason's defection, see 2 M 4:7seq. When the Temple and its loyal supporters were re-dedicated to the Lord these misfortunes ceased. Hence the instruction to celebrate this new dedication of the Temple of Jerusalem.

d. 124 BC. This 'feast of Shelters' (see also v. 18) of the month Chislev (December) is the feast of Dedication, see 1 M 4:59*l*; it resembles the feast of Shelters of the month Tishri (October), see 2 M 10:6; Lv 23:34seq., hence this alternative name.

e. The second letter purports to be a document 40 years older than the preceding one, being an invitation, v. 18, to the actual dedication of the Temple, which occurred on 25 Chislev 148 of the Seleucid era (15 December 164 BC). The content combines rumours about the death of Antiochus Epiphanes with popular traditions about Nehemiah and Jeremiah. The author, while inserting it at the beginning of his book, does not guarantee its historical accuracy.

f. Judas Maccabaeus.

g. An Alexandrian Jew known for his allegorical expositions of the Pentateuch. He dedicated his work to Ptolemy VI Philometor (180–145).

h. A Mesopotamian goddess assimilated to the Ephesian Artemis. The temple which Antiochus IV proposed to plunder was that of Artemis in Elymais.

i. 'head' 1 Syr. MS; 'heads' Gk and Lat. (scribal error induced by plural 'pieces'). This popular account of the death of Antiochus corresponds neither to that of 9:1seq., nor to that of 1 M 6:1seq. The true circumstances of his death were as yet unknown. Popular imagination seems to have been influenced by the death of Antiochus III, who perished in an ambush with his entire army, after pillaging a temple of Bel, also in Elymais.

j. The object of this anecdote is to show that the sanctuary at Jerusalem has lost none of its privileges, since it has even preserved the original sacred fire, see Lv 6:5–6.

k. To Nehemiah, who with Ezra founded the new Jewish community in about 445–425, apocryphal memoirs (2:13) attribute the restoration of the altar and the Temple, although the altar had been dedicated in 538 and the Temple in 515, Ezr 3:1seq.; 6:14seq. Note that the inauguration of the altar by Zerubbabel is also associated with the feast of Shelters, Ezr 3:4.

l. Probably Artaxerxes I (464–423).

m. 'in fact' e men conj.; 'to us' hemin Gk and Lat.

n. 'all the priests' Vulg.; 'the priests and everyone' Gk and Vet. Lat. This is an anachronism: the high priests in the time of Nehemiah were Eliashib and Jehoiada, Ne 3:1; 13:28, but see Ne 12:11.

o. lit. 'our dispersion' (Diaspora), see Dt 30:11; Ne 1:8seq.; Ps 147:2; Is 49:6.

and the king of the Persians heard that, in the place where the exiled priests had hidden the fire, a liquid had appeared, with which Nehemiah and his people had purified the sacrificial offerings,[p] ·the king, after verifying the 34 facts, had the place enclosed and pronounced sacred. ·To the people on whom 35
the king bestowed it, he granted a part of the considerable revenue he derived from it. ·Nehemiah and his people termed this stuff "nephtar", which means 36
"purification", but it is commonly called "naphta".[q]

Jeremiah conceals the tent, ark and altar

2 'It is on record that the prophet Jeremiah[a] ordered the deportees to take 1
the fire, as we have described, ·and how, having given them the Law, the 2
Ba 6. Vulg. prophet warned the deportees never to forget the Lord's precepts, nor to let their thoughts be tempted by the sight of gold and silver statues or the finery adorning them. ·Among other similar admonitions, he urged them not to let the 3 Law depart from their hearts.

'The same document also describes how the prophet, warned by an oracle, 4 gave orders for the tent and the ark to go with him, when he set out for the mountain which Moses had climbed to survey God's heritage. ·On his arrival, 5
Jeremiah found a cave-dwelling, into which he put the tent, the ark and the altar of incense, afterwards blocking up the entrance. ·Some of his companions went 6 back later to mark out the path but were unable to find it. ·When Jeremiah 7 learned this, he reproached them, "The place is to remain unknown", he said, "until God gathers his people together again and shows them his mercy. ·Then 8
the Lord will bring these things once more to light, and the glory of the Lord will Ex 24:16 1 K 8 10–11 be seen, and so will the cloud, as it was revealed in the time of Moses and when Solomon prayed that the holy place[b] might be gloriously hallowed."

'It was also recorded how Solomon in his wisdom offered the sacrifice of the 9 dedication and completion of the sanctuary. ·As Moses had prayed to the Lord 10
Lv 9:24 2 Ch 7:1 and fire had come down from heaven and burned up the sacrifice, so Solomon also prayed, and the fire from above consumed the burnt offerings. ·Moses had 11
Lv 10:16–17 said, "Because the sacrifice for sin had not been eaten, it was burnt instead."
1 K 8:65–66 Solomon similarly observed the eight-day festival. 12

Nehemiah's library

'In addition to the above, it was also recorded, both in these writings and in the 13
Memoirs of Nehemiah,[c] how Nehemiah founded a library and made a collection of the books dealing with the kings and the prophets, the writings of David and 1 M 1:56–57 the letters of the kings on the subject of offerings.[d] ·Similarly, Judas made a 14 complete collection of the books dispersed in the late war, and these we still have. ·If you need any of them, send someone to fetch them. 15

An invitation to the dedication

1 M 4:59k 'Since we are about to celebrate the purification, we now write, requesting you 16 to observe the same days. ·God, who has saved his whole people, conferring 17 heritage, kingdom, priesthood and sanctification on all of us, ·as he has promised 18
Dt 30:3–5 in the Law, will surely, as our hope is in him, be swift to show us mercy and gather us together from everywhere under heaven to the holy place, since he has rescued us from great evils and has purified it.'

II: COMPILER'S PREFACE

The story of Judas Maccabaeus and his brothers, the purification of the great 19
Temple, the dedication of the altar, ·together with the wars against Antiochus 20
Epiphanes and his son Eupator, ·and the celestial manifestations that came to 21 hearten the brave champions of Judaism, so that, few though they were, they 22 pillaged the whole country, routed the barbarian hordes, •recovered the sanctuary renowned the whole world over, liberated the city and re-established the laws by then all but abolished, the Lord showing his favour by all his gracious help to 23 them—•all this, already related in five books by Jason of Cyrene, we shall attempt 24 to condense into a single work.[c] ••Considering the spate of figures and the difficulty encountered, because of the mass of material, by those who wish to immerse 25 themselves in historical records, •we have aimed at providing diversion for those who merely want something to read, a saving of labour for those who enjoy 26 committing things to memory, and profit for each and all. •For us who have undertaken the drudgery of this abridgement, it has been no easy task but a matter 27 of sweat and midnight oil, •comparable to the exacting task of someone organising a banquet, whose aim is to satisfy a variety of tastes. Nevertheless, for the sake of 28 rendering a general service, we remain glad to endure this drudgery, •leaving accuracy of detail to the historian, and concentrating our effort on tracing the 29 outlines in this condensed version. •Just as the architect of a new house is responsible for the construction as a whole, while the man undertaking the ceramic painting has to take into consideration only the decorative requirements, so, I 30 think, it is with us. •To make the subject his own, to explore its by-ways, to be 31 meticulous about details, is the business of the original historian, •but the person making the adaptation must be allowed to aim at conciseness of expression and to forgo any exhaustive treatment of his subject.

32 So now let us begin our narrative, without adding any more to what has been said above; there would be no sense in expanding the preface to the history and curtailing the history itself.

III: THE STORY OF HELIODORUS[a]

The arrival of Heliodorus in Jerusalem

1 3 While the holy city was inhabited in all peace and the laws were observed as Ne 11:1b perfectly as possible, owing to the piety of Onias[b] the high priest and his hatred 15:12
2 of wickedness, •it came about that the kings themselves honoured the holy place
3 and enhanced the glory of the Temple with the most splendid offerings, •even to the extent that Seleucus king of Asia defrayed from his own revenues all the 4 expenses arising out of the sacrificial liturgy.[c] ••But a certain Simon, of the tribe of

p. This was what the king was told; the preceding account is different.

q. Obscure popular etymology of the Persian word naft. The story combines recollections of Persian fire worship, v. 34, with some knowledge of the properties of naphta—crude petroleum—which so impressed the Greek and Roman geographers and naturalists.

2 a. Jeremiah is one of the great figures revered in Judaism, see 15:13–15. Lm was attributed to him, as also the 'Letter against the Idols' of Ba 6 (Vulg.), and several apocrypha. One of these apocrypha, now lost, recounted the events described in this passage. This description is not historical: the Tent of Meeting did not exist after the building of Solomon's Temple, the ark disappeared when the Temple was destroyed, and the historical Jeremiah did not regret it, Jr 3:16. The purpose of the narrative, however, is to assert the continuity of orthodox worship, see 1:18j, and to associate this ceremony of dedication with the dedication of the first Temple by Solomon and of the Tent of Meeting by Moses, see vv. 8–12.

b. lit. 'the place', as in 2:18; 3:2,18,30,38; 5:16–20; 10:7; 13:23; 15:34, occurring more often than 'the holy place', 1:29; 2:18; 8:17, but meaning the same.

c. Uncanonical book otherwise unknown.

d. A collection of writings considered not as canonical but as useful to the Jewish community. This project is paralleled by that of Judas Maccabaeus, v. 14.

e. The two reigns, v. 20, cover the years 175–162. In fact, however, Jason—a man of letters belonging to the important Jewish community of Cyrenaica—had worked to a larger time-scale: the victory over Nicanor occurred in March 160, under Demetrius I; while the episode of Heliodorus, with which the author begins his story, is set in the reign of Seleucus IV, elder brother of Antiochus Epiphanes and father of Demetrius I.

3 a. The author has retained this colourful episode from Jason's book as illustrative of his thesis, set out in v. 39. The event occurs in the reign of Seleucus IV Philopator (187–175). It is not surprising that this monarch wanted to acquire the wealth of the Temple: he was particularly short of money, owing to the heavy debt to Rome incurred by his father Antiochus III after his defeat at Magnesia (189), see 1 M 8:7.

b. Onias III, son of Simon II whose praises are sung in Si 50:1seq.; Onias also has his eulogy, in 2 M 4:5–6; 15:12. The Oniad family perpetuates the high-priestly line of the Persian period, being descended from Jeshua, see Ne 12:10seq., himself descended from Zadok, see 2 S 8:17; 1 Ch 5:27seq.

c. Ptolemy II and Ptolemy III of Egypt, as well as Antiochus III of Syria, had also in the previous century honoured the Temple by their presents. See 1 M 10:39seq. (for the liberalities of Demetrius I).

Bilgah, on being appointed administrator of the Temple,[d] came into conflict with the high priest over the regulation of the city markets. ·Unable to get the better of 5
Onias, he went off to Apollonius, son of Thraseos, who was at that time commander-in-chief of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, ·and made out to him that the 6
Treasury in Jerusalem was groaning with untold wealth, that the amount contributed was incalculable and out of all proportion to expenditure on the sacrifice, but that it could all be brought under the control of the king. ·Apollonius met the king 7 and told him about the wealth that had been disclosed to him; whereupon the king selected Heliodorus, his chancellor, and sent him with instructions to effect the removal of the reported wealth. ·Heliodorus lost no time in setting out, ostensibly 8 to inspect the towns of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, but in fact to accomplish the king's purpose. ·On his arrival in Jerusalem, and after a hospitable reception from 9
the high priest and the city, he announced what had been disclosed, thus revealing the reason for his presence, and asked if this was indeed the true situation. ·The 10 high priest explained that there were funds set aside for widows and orphans, ·with 11
some belonging to Hyrcanus son of Tobias, a man occupying a very exalted position,[e] and that the whole sum, in contrast to what the evil Simon had alleged, amounted to four hundred talents of silver and two hundred of gold.[f] ·He also 12 added that it was entirely out of the question that an injustice should be done to those who had put their trust in the sanctity of the place and in the inviolable majesty of a Temple venerated throughout the entire world.

Consternation in Jerusalem

But Heliodorus, because of his instructions from the king, peremptorily insisted 13 that the funds must be confiscated for the royal exchequer. ·Fixing a day for the 14 purpose, he went in to draw up an inventory of the funds. There was no little consternation throughout the city; ·the priests in their sacred vestments prostrated 15 themselves before the altar and prayed to Heaven, to the Author of the law governing deposits, to preserve these funds intact for the depositors. ·The appear- 16
ance of the high priest was enough to pierce the heart of the beholder, his expression and his altered colour betraying the anguish of his soul; ·the man was so 17 overwhelmed by fear and bodily trembling that those who saw him could not possibly mistake the distress he was suffering. ·People rushed headlong from the 18 houses, intent on making public supplication because of the indignity threatening the holy place. ·Women thronged the streets swathed in sackcloth below their 19
breasts; girls secluded indoors came running, some to the doorways, some to the city walls, while others leaned out of the windows, ·all stretching out their hands to 20
Heaven in entreaty. ·It was pitiful to see the people crowding together to prostrate 21 themselves, and the foreboding of the high priest in his deep anguish. ·While they 22 were calling on the all-powerful Lord to preserve the deposits intact for the depositors, in full security, ·Heliodorus set about his appointed task. 23

The punishment of Heliodorus

He had already arrived with his bodyguard near the Treasury, when the Sovereign 24 of spirits and of every power caused so great an apparition that all who had dared to accompany Heliodorus were dumbfounded at the power of God and reduced to 5:4b abject terror. ·Before their eyes appeared a horse richly caparisoned and carrying 25 a fearsome rider. Rearing violently, it struck at Heliodorus with its forefeet. The rider was seen to be accoutred entirely in gold. ·Two other young men of outstand- 26
ing strength and radiant beauty, magnificently apparelled, appeared to him at the same time and, taking their stand on each side of him, flogged him unremittingly, inflicting stroke after stroke. ·Suddenly Heliodorus fell to the ground, enveloped 27 in thick darkness. His men came to his rescue and placed him in a litter, ·this man 28 who but a moment before had made his way into the Treasury, as we said above, with a great retinue and his whole bodyguard; and as they carried him away, powerless to help himself, they openly acknowledged the sovereign power of God.

29 While Heliodorus lay prostrate under the divine visitation, speechless and bereft 30 of all hope of deliverance, ·the Jews blessed the Lord who had miraculously glorified[g] his own holy place. And the Temple, which a little while before had been filled with terror and commotion, now overflowed with joy and gladness at the 31 manifestation of the almighty Lord. ·Some of Heliodorus' companions quickly begged Onias to entreat the Most High to grant the man his life, lying as he did at the very point of death.
32 The high priest, afraid that the king might suspect the Jews of some foul play
33 concerning Heliodorus, did indeed offer a sacrifice for the man's recovery. ·And while the high priest was performing the rite of expiation, the same young men again appeared to Heliodorus, wearing the same apparel and, standing beside him, said, 'Be very grateful to Onias the high priest, since it is for his sake that the Lord 34 has granted you your life. ·As for you, who have been scourged by Heaven, you must proclaim to all men the grandeur of God's power.' So saying, they vanished.

The conversion of Heliodorus

35 Heliodorus offered sacrifice to the Lord and made most solemn vows to the preserver of his life, and then took courteous leave of Onias and marched his forces
36 back to the king. ·He openly testified to all men about the works of the supreme 37 God which he had seen with his own eyes. ·When the king asked Heliodorus what sort of man would be the right person to send to Jerusalem on a second occasion, 38 he replied, ·'If you have some enemy or anyone disloyal to the state, send him there, and you will get him back well flogged, if he survives at all, since some 39 peculiarly divine power attaches to the holy place. ·He who has his dwelling in heaven watches over the place and defends it, and he strikes down and destroys 40 those who come to harm it.' ·This was the outcome of the affair of Heliodorus and the preservation of the Treasury.

IV: HELLENISTIC PROPAGANDA AND PERSECUTION UNDER ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES

The misdeeds of Simon, administrator of the Temple

1 4 The Simon mentioned above as the informer against the funds and against his country began slandering Onias, insinuating that the latter had been responsible for the assault on Heliodorus and himself had contrived this misfortune.[a]
2 Simon now had the effrontery to name this benefactor of the city, this protector of
3 his compatriots, this zealot for the laws, as an enemy of the public good. ·This hostility reached such proportions that murders were actually committed by some
4 of Simon's agents, ·and at this point Onias, recognising how mischievous this rivalry was, and aware that Apollonius son of Menestheus, the general command-
5 ing Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, was encouraging Simon in his malice, ·went to see the king, not to play the accuser of his fellow-citizens, but having the public and 6 private welfare of the entire people at heart. ·He saw that, without some intervention by the king, an orderly administration would no longer be possible, nor would Simon put a stop to his folly.

Jason, the high priest, introduces Hellenism

7 When Seleucus had departed this life and Antiochus styled Epiphanes[b] had 1 M 1:10

d. 'Bilgah' Vet. Lat. and Arm.; 'Benjamin' Gk. This was a priestly line, see Ne 12:5,18. • The administrator was responsible for the Temple finances.

e. Governor of Ammanitis, see 1 M 5:13e.

f. The equivalent of 13.5 tons (13 717kg) of silver and 6.7 tons (6808 kg) of gold: an unlikely figure.

g. In Greek epiphainesthai, see 2:21. Jewish and gentile literature of the Graeco-Roman period is full of these 'epiphanies' and 'theophanies', illustrative of divine omnipotence. In 2 M, the interventions take the form either of apparitions or of victories against overwhelming odds.

4 a. i.e. by some trick to frighten Heliodorus.

b. Antiochus IV (175–164), brother of Seleucus IV.

succeeded to the kingdom, Jason, brother of Onias,[c] usurped the high priesthood: he approached the king with a promise of three hundred and sixty talents of silver, 8 with eighty talents to come from some other source of revenue. ·He further 9 1 M 1:11–15 committed himself to paying another hundred and fifty, if the king would empower him to set up a gymnasium and youth centre, and to register the Antiochists of Jerusalem.[d] ·When the king gave his assent, Jason, as soon as he had seized power, 10 imposed the Greek way of life on his fellow-countrymen. ·He suppressed the 11 liberties which the kings had graciously granted to the Jews at the instance of John,
1 M 8:17 father of that Eupolemus who was later to be sent on an embassy to negotiate a treaty of friendship and alliance with the Romans and, overthrowing the lawful institutions, introduced new usages contrary to the Law. ·He went so far as to 12
found a gymnasium at the very foot of the Citadel,[e] and to fit out the noblest of his young men in the petasos.[f] ·Godless wretch that he was and no true high priest, 13
Jason set no bounds to his impiety; indeed the hellenising process reached such a pitch ·that the priests ceased to show any interest in serving the altar; but, scorning 14
the Temple and neglecting the sacrifices. they would hurry, on the stroke of the gong, to take part in the distribution, forbidden by the Law, of the oil on the exercise ground;[g] ·setting no store by the honours of their fatherland, they es- 15 teemed hellenic glories best of all. ·But all this brought its own retribution; the 16
very people whose way of life they envied, whom they sought to resemble in everything, proved to be their enemies and executioners. ·It is no small thing to 17 violate the divine laws, as the period that followed will demonstrate.

On the occasion of the quadrennial games at Tyre in the presence of the king, 18
4:9 the vile Jason sent an embassy of Antiochists from Jerusalem, taking with them 19 three hundred silver drachmas for the sacrifice to Hercules. But even those who brought the money did not think it would be right to spend it on the sacrifice and decided to reserve it for some other item of expenditure; ·and so what the sender 20 had intended for the sacrifice to Hercules was in fact applied, at the suggestion of those who brought it, to the construction of triremes.

Antiochus Epiphanes is acclaimed in Jerusalem

Apollonius son of Menestheus had been sent to Egypt to attend the wedding of 21
King Philometor.[h] Antiochus, having learnt that the latter had become hostile to his affairs, began thinking about his own safety: that was why he had come to Joppa. He then moved to Jerusalem, ·where he was given a magnificent welcome 22 by Jason and the city, and escorted in by torchlight with acclamation. After which, he marched his army into Phoenicia.[i]

Menelaus becomes high priest

When three years had passed, Jason sent Menelaus, brother of the Simon men- 23 3:4 tioned above, to convey the money[j] to the king and to complete negotiations on various essential matters. ·But Menelaus, on being presented to the king, flattered 24 him by his own appearance of authority, and so secured the high priesthood for himself, outbidding Jason by three hundred talents of silver. ·He returned with the 25
royal mandate, bringing nothing worthy of the high priesthood and supported only by the fury of a cruel tyrant and the rage of a savage beast. ·Thus Jason, who had 26 supplanted his own brother, was in turn supplanted by a third, and obliged to take refuge in Ammanitis. ·As for Menelaus, he secured the office, but defaulted 27 altogether on the sums promised to the king, ·although Sostratus, the commandant 28 of the Citadel, whose business it was to collect the revenue, kept demanding payment. The pair of them in consequence were summoned before the king, Menelaus leaving his brother Lysimachus as deputy high priest, while Sostratus left 29
Crates, the commander of the Cypriots,[k] to act for him.

The murder of Onias

While all this was going on, it happened that the people of Tarsus and Mallus 30 revolted, because their towns had been given as a present to Antiochis, the king's 31 concubine. ·The king therefore hurried off to settle the affair, leaving Andronic-

32 cus, one of his dignitaries, to act as his deputy. ·Thinking he had found a favourable opportunity, Menelaus abstracted a number of golden vessels from the Temple and presented them to Andronicus, and managed to sell others to Tyre
33 and the surrounding cities. ·On receiving clear evidence to this effect, Onias retired to a place of sanctuary at Daphne near Antioch and then taxed him with it.
34 Menelaus then had a quiet word with Andronicus, urging him to get rid of Onias. Andronicus sought out Onias and, resorting to the trick of offering him his right hand on oath, succeeded in persuading him, despite the latter's lingering suspicions, to leave sanctuary; whereupon, in defiance of all justice, he immediately put Dn 9:26
35 him to death. ·The result was that not only Jews but many people of other nationalities were appalled and outraged by the unjust murder of this man.
36 On the king's return from the region of Cilicia, the Jews of the capital, and those Greeks who shared their hatred of the crime, appealed to him about the unjustified
37 murder of Onias. ·Antiochus was profoundly grieved and filled with pity, and he 38 wept for the prudence and moderation of the dead man. ·Burning with indignation, he immediately stripped Andronicus of the purple, tore his garments off him and, parading him through the length of the city, rid the world of the assassin on the very spot where he had laid impious hands on Onias, the Lord dealing out to him the punishment he deserved. l

Lysimachus killed in an insurrection

39 Now Lysimachus with the connivance of Menelaus had committed many sacrilegious thefts in the city, and when the facts became widely known, the populace rose against Lysimachus, who had already disposed of many pieces of gold plate.
40 The infuriated mob was becoming menacing, and Lysimachus armed nearly three thousand men and took aggressive action; the troops were led by a certain Au-
41 ranus, a man advanced in years and no less in folly. ·Recognising this act of aggression as the work of Lysimachus, some snatched up stones, others cudgels, while others scooped up handfuls of ashes lying at hand, m and all hurled everything 42 indiscriminately at Lysimachus' men, ·to such effect that they wounded many of them, even killing a few, and routed them all; the sacrilegious thief himself they killed near the Treasury.

Menelaus buys his acquittal

43, 44 As a result of this, legal proceedings were taken against Menelaus. ·When the king came down to Tyre, three men deputed by the Senate pleaded their case before 45 him. ·Menelaus, seeing the case had gone against him, promised a substantial sum

c. The death of Seleucus, engineered by Heliodorus in 175, defeated the aspirations of Onias. Joshua, brother of Onias, showed his approval of the hellenising policy by changing his name to Jason.

d. 'youth centre', lit. ephebia: an organisation of youths between 18 and 20 years of age for military, physical and, to some extent, cultural training. • The formula 'Antiochists of Jerusalem' (as also 'Antiochists of Ptolemais' appearing on coins) testifies to a transformation of the holy city into a hellenistic city where the citizens were registered by census.

e. Where the Syrian garrison was stationed. The acropolis, or citadel, of the period overlooked the north-west corner of the Temple court, see Ne 7:2 (later becoming the Antonia of Herod the Great). The sports ground was therefore adjacent to the sanctuary.

f. lit. 'brought . . . under the petasos': to introduce to gymnastic training; the athletes wore a broad-brimmed hat (petasos), the conventional head-dress of Hermes, patron of athletes.

g. The oil with which the athletes rubbed themselves. It was distributed by their instructors.

h. 'wedding', lit. 'presidency (over the wedding banquet)' protoklisia, some Gk and Lat. MSS, Mt 23:6; 'proclamation' (? unattested word) protoklesia, Gk. It was the marriage of Ptolemy VI Philometor with his sister Cleopatra II.

i. Phoenicia, administratively speaking, included the coast of Palestine. Joppa (Jaffa) may have been the king's headquarters.

j. The annual tribute, see 4:8; 1 M 11:28, and possibly other sums promised as well, see 4:9.

k. Mercenary soldiers.

l. Onias is the Anointed Prince of Dn 9:25seq. and the Prince of the Covenant of Dn 11:22. His death opens the 70th and final week of years, the mid-point of which is marked by the cessation of lawful sacrifice and the installation of the 'appalling abomination', Dn 9:27; see 2 M 1:9; 6:2; 10:5; 1 M 1:54; 4:52; Dn 7:25; 8:11–14; 11:31; 12:11seq. This period of three and a half years (half a 'week of years') presumably corresponds to fact, since it gave the author of Dn his reason for transposing the prophecy of Jeremiah (Jr 25:11–12; 29:10). The date given in 1 M 1:54 (December 167) therefore indicates that the murder of Onias occurred in the summer of 170.

m. The ashes of sacrifice; the riot took place in the Temple court.

8:8;10:12 1 M 3:38 to Ptolemy son of Dorymenes if he would influence the king in his favour. ·Ptolemy 46 then took the king aside into a colonnade, as though for a breath of fresh air, and persuaded him to change his mind; ·the king then dismissed the charges against 47 Menelaus, the cause of all this evil, while he condemned to death the other poor wretches who, had they pleaded even before Scythians, would have been let off scot-free. ·No time was lost in carrying out this unjust punishment on those who 48 had championed the cause of the city, the townships and the sacred vessels. ·Some 49 Tyrians even were so outraged by the crime that they provided sumptuously for their funeral, ·while, as a result of the greed of the powerful, Menelaus remained 50 in power, growing more wicked than ever and establishing himself as the chief enemy of his fellow-citizens.

Second Egyptian campaign

5 At about this time, Antiochus was preparing for his second attack on Egypt.[a] 1
It then happened that all over the city for nearly forty days there were appari- 2 tions of horsemen galloping through the air in cloth of gold, troops of lancers fully armed, ·squadrons of cavalry in order of battle, attacks and charges this way and 3 that, a flourish of shields, a forest of pikes, a brandishing of swords, a hurling of missiles, a glittering of golden accoutrements and armour of all kinds. ·So everyone 4 prayed that this manifestation might prove a good omen.[b]

Jason's insurrection; counteraction by Antiochus Epiphanes

Then, on the strength of a false report that Antiochus was dead, Jason took at least 5 a thousand men and launched an unexpected attack on the city. When the walls had been breached and the city was finally on the point of being taken, Menelaus took refuge in the Citadel. ·Jason, however, made a pitiless slaughter of his 6 fellow-citizens, oblivious of the fact that success against his own countrymen was the greatest of disasters, but rather picturing himself as winning trophies from some enemy, and not from his fellow-countrymen. ·Even so, he did not manage to 7 seize power; and, in the end, his machinations brought him nothing but shame, and he took refuge once more in Ammanitis. ·His career of wickedness was thus 8 brought to a halt: imprisoned by Aretas, the Arab despot, escaping from his town,[c] hunted by everyone, detested for having overthrown the laws, abhorred as the butcher of his country and his countrymen, he drifted to Egypt. ·He who had 9 exiled so many from their fatherland, himself perished on foreign soil, having 1 M 12:7 travelled to Sparta, hoping that, for kinship's sake, he might find harbour there.
Jr 22:18–19 So many carcases he had thrust out to lie unburied; now he himself had none to 10 mourn him, no funeral rites, no place in the tomb of his ancestors.

When the king came to hear of what had happened, he concluded that Judaea 11 was in revolt. He therefore marched from Egypt, raging like a wild beast, and began by storming the city. ·He then ordered his soldiers to cut down without 12 mercy everyone they encountered, and to butcher all who took refuge in their houses. ·It was a massacre of young and old, a slaughter of women and children, a 13 butchery of young girls and infants. ·There were eighty thousand victims in the 14 course of those three days, forty thousand dying by violence and as many again being sold into slavery.

‖1 M 1:20–24 Pillage of the Temple

Not content with this, he had the audacity to enter the holiest Temple in the entire 15 world, with Menelaus, that traitor to the laws and to his country, as his guide; with impure hands he seized the sacred vessels; with impious hands he seized the 16 offerings presented by other kings for the aggrandisement, glory and dignity of the holy place.

Holding so high an opinion of himself, Antiochus did not realise that the Lord 17 6:12–16; 7:16–19, 32–38 was temporarily angry at the sins of the inhabitants of the city, hence his unconcern for the holy place. ·Had they not been entangled in many sins, Antiochus too, like 18

Heliodorus when King Seleucus sent him to inspect the Treasury, would have been 19 flogged the moment he arrived and checked in his presumption. ·The Lord, 3:1
however, had not chosen the people for the sake of the holy place, but the holy 1 Ch 17:9 20 place for the sake of the people;[d] ·and so the holy place itself, having shared the Mk 2:27 disasters that befell the people, in due course also shared their good fortune;
having been abandoned by the Almighty in his anger, once the great Sovereign was placated it was reinstated in all its glory.
21 Antiochus, having extracted eighteen hundred talents from the Temple, hurried back to Antioch; in his pride he would have undertaken to make the dry land 22 navigable and the sea passable on foot, so high his arrogance soared. ·But he left officials behind to plague the nation: in Jerusalem, Philip, a Phrygian by race,[e] and 23 by nature more barbarous than the man who appointed him; ·on Mount Gerizim, Andronicus;[f] and, besides these, Menelaus, who lorded it over his countrymen worse than all the others.

Activities of Apollonius the Mysarch

24 In his rooted hostility to the Jews, ·the king also sent the Mysarch Apollonius at 1 M 1:29–37
the head of an army twenty-two thousand strong, with orders to put to death all 25 men in their prime and to sell the women and children. ·Arriving in Jerusalem and posing as a man of peace, this man waited until the holy day of the Sabbath and then, taking advantage of the Jews as they rested from work, ordered his men to 26 parade fully armed; ·all those who came out to watch he put to the sword; then, rushing into the city with his armed troops, he cut down an immense number of people.
27 Judas, also known as Maccabaeus, however, with about nine others, withdrew 1 M 2:28 into the desert. He lived like the wild animals in the hills with his companions, eating nothing but wild plants to avoid contracting defilement.[g]

Gentile cults imposed

‖1 M 1:45–51

1 6 Shortly afterwards, the king sent Gerontes the Athenian to force the Jews to 2 violate their ancestral customs and live no longer by the laws of God; ·and to profane the Temple in Jerusalem and dedicate it to Olympian Zeus, and the one on Mount Gerizim to Zeus, Patron of Strangers, as the inhabitants of the latter 3 place had requested.[a] ·The advent of these evils was painfully hard for all the 4 people to bear. ·The Temple was filled with revelling and debauchery by the gentiles, who took their pleasure with prostitutes and had intercourse with women 5 in the sacred precincts,[b] introducing other indecencies besides. ·The altar of 6 sacrifice was loaded with victims proscribed by the law as profane. ·No one might either keep the Sabbath or observe the traditional feasts, or so much as admit to 7 being a Jew. ·People were driven by harsh compulsion to take part in the monthly ritual meal commemorating the king's birthday; and when a feast of Dionysus occurred, they were forced to wear ivy wreaths and walk in the Dionysiac

5 a. According to the author of 2 M, the violent intervention of Antiochus IV, see 5:11seq., was provoked by sedition in Jerusalem, vv. 5seq., and he dates the event to 168, during the second Egyptian expedition. The order of 1 M is preferable: sack of the Temple after the first expedition in 169, 1 M 1:16–24; sedition in the summer of 168, put down in 167 by Apollonius the Mysarch, 1 M 1:29–35; see also 2 M5:24–26.

b. Heavenly apparitions are a favourite literary device of the author, 3:25; 10:29; 30; 11:8; he promises them in his preface, 2:21; compare an analogous apparition before the ruin of the Temple in 70, reported by Josephus in his Jewish War.

c. 'from his town', lit. 'from the town' (i.e. from Petra, the capital) Vet. Lat.; 'from town to town' Gk. • The despot was Aretas I, king of the Nabataeans, see 1 M 5:25h.

d. The choice of God falls first on his people, only second on religious institutions: a remarkable anticipation of the gospel, Jr 7:14; Mk 2:27.

e. Philip the Phrygian, who appears in 6:11 and 8:8, is not the same man as Philip, the King's Friend, of 9:29; 1 M 6:14.

f. Andronicus, not the one of 4:31seq., was, like Philip, an epistates, representative of the royal authority in a town. He presumably lived at the foot of Mount Gerizim, at Shechem.

g. The author rearranges the events related in 1 M 1:53; 2:28.

6 a. 'as (the inhabitants) had requested' enetynchanon conj. following Josephus (Ant. Jud.); 'as (the inhabitants) found themselves to be' etynchanon Gk, Lat.; which would mean that, being themselves hospitable, the Samaritans chose this epithet. But the Gk construction would be very awkward. The Samaritans, not wishing to receive the same treatment as the Jews, go beyond the royal wishes.

b. In the Graeco-Roman period, temple precincts comprised porticoes and banqueting rooms for ritual meals, which often degenerated into orgies. Sacred prostitution was still being practised in the temples of Syria.

procession. •A decree was issued at the instance of the people of Ptolemais [c] for the 8 neighbouring Greek cities, enforcing the same conduct on the Jews there, obliging them to share in the sacrificial meals, •and ordering the execution of those who 9 would not voluntarily conform to Greek customs. So it became clear that disaster was imminent.

‖1 M 1:60–61 For example, two women were charged with having circumcised their children. 10
They were paraded publicly round the town, with their babies hung at their breasts, ‖1 M 2:32–38 and then hurled over the city wall. •Other people, who had assembled in some 11 near-by caves to keep the seventh day without attracting attention, were denounced to Philip, and were then all burnt to death together, since their con-sciences would not allow them to defend themselves, out of respect for the holiness of the day.

5:17–20; 7:16–19, 32–38 Providential significance of the persecution

Now, I urge anyone who may read this book not to be dismayed at these calamities, 12 but to reflect that such visitations are intended not to destroy our race but to discipline it. •Indeed, when evil-doers are not left for long to their own devices but 13 incur swift retribution, it is a sign of great benevolence. •In the case of other 14
Ws 11:9–10; 12:2,22 nations, the Master waits patiently for them to attain the full measure of their sins
1 Th 2:16 before he punishes them, but with us he has decided to deal differently, •rather 15 than have to punish us later, when our sins come to full measure. [d] •And so he 16 never entirely withdraws his mercy from us; he may discipline us by some disaster, but he does not desert his own people. •Let this be said simply by way of reminder; 17
we must return to our story without more ado.

The martyrdom of Eleazar

Eleazar, one of the foremost teachers of the Law, a man already advanced in years 18
Lv 11:7–8 and of most noble appearance, had his mouth forced open, to make him eat a piece
Heb 11:35 of pork. •But he, resolving to die with honour rather than to live disgraced, 19 walked of his own accord to the torture of the wheel, •having spat the stuff out, as 20 befits those with the courage to reject what is not lawful to taste, rather than live.
The people supervising the ritual meal, forbidden by the Law, because of the 21 length of time for which they had known him, took him aside and privately urged him to have meat brought of a kind he could properly use, prepared by himself, and only pretend to eat the portions of sacrificial meat as prescribed by the king;
this action would enable him to escape death, by availing himself of an act of 22 kindness prompted by their long friendship. •But having taken a noble decision 23 worthy of his years and the dignity of his great age and the well-earned distinction of his grey hairs, worthy too of his impeccable conduct from boyhood, and above all of the holy legislation established by God himself, he answered accordingly, telling them to send him at once to Hades. •'Pretence', he said, 'does not befit our 24 time of life; many young people would suppose that Eleazar at the age of ninety had conformed to the foreigners' way of life •and, because I had played this part 25 for the sake of a paltry brief spell of life, might themselves be led astray on my account; I should only bring defilement and disgrace on my old age. •Even though 26 for the moment I avoid execution by man, I can never, living or dead, elude the grasp of the Almighty. •Therefore if I am man enough to quit this life here and 27
now, I shall prove myself worthy of my old age, •and I shall have left the young a 28 noble example of how to make a good death, eagerly and generously, for the venerable and holy laws.' [e]

So saying, he walked straight to the wheel, •while those who were escorting him, 29 recently so well disposed towards him, turned against him after this declaration, which they regarded as sheer madness. •He for his part, just before he died under 30
the blows, gave a sigh and said, 'The Lord whose knowledge is holy sees clearly that, though I might have escaped death, from awe of him I gladly endure these agonies of body under the lash, and that in my soul I am glad to suffer.'

31 This was how he died, leaving his death as an example of nobility and a record of virtue not only for the young but for the greater part of the nation.

The martyrdom of the seven brothers [a] ↗Heb 11:35

1 7 It also happened that seven brothers were arrested with their mother. The king Jr 15:9
tried to force them to taste some pork, which the Law forbids, by torturing 2 them with whips and scourges. •One of them, acting as spokesman for the others, said, 'What are you trying to find out from us? We are prepared to die rather than 3 break the laws of our ancestors.' •The king, in a fury, ordered pans and cauldrons 4 to be heated over a fire. •As soon as these were red-hot, he commanded that their spokesman should have his tongue cut out, his head scalped and his extremities cut 5 off, while the other brothers and his mother looked on. •When he had been rendered completely helpless, the king gave orders for him to be brought, still breathing, to the fire and fried alive in a pan. As the smoke from the pan drifted about, his mother and the rest encouraged one another to die nobly, with such 6 words as these, •'The Lord God is watching and certainly feels sorry for us, as Moses declared in his song, which clearly states that "he will take pity on his Dt 32:36 servants." '
7 When the first had left the world in this way, they brought the second forward to be tortured. After stripping the skin from his head, hair and all, they asked him, 8 'Will you eat some pork, before your body is tortured limb by limb?' •Replying in his ancestral tongue, [b] he said, 'No!' So he too was put to the torture in his turn.
9 With his last breath he exclaimed, 'Cruel brute, you may discharge us from this present life, but the King of the world will raise us up, since we die for his laws, to 12:38–46,38f live again for ever.' [c]
10 After him, they tortured the third, who on being asked for his tongue promptly
11 thrust it out and boldly held out his hands, •courageously saying, 'Heaven gave me these limbs; for the sake of his laws I have no concern for them; from him I hope to 12 receive them again.' [d] •The king and his attendants were astounded at the young man's courage and his utter indifference to suffering.
13 When this one was dead they subjected the fourth to the same torments and 14 tortures. •When he neared his end he cried, 'Ours is the better choice, to meet death at men's hands, yet relying on God's promise that we shall be raised up by him; whereas for you there can be no resurrection to new life.' 15, 16 Next they brought forward the fifth and began torturing him. •But he looked at the king and said, 'You have power over human beings, mortal as you are, and can 17 act as you please. But do not think that our race has been deserted by God. •Only wait, and you will see in your turn how his mighty power will torment you and your descendants.'

c. 'people of Ptolemais' conj.; 'of the Ptolemies' or 'of Ptolemy' Gk and Lat. The Greek city of Ptolemais, ancient Acco (Acre), was hostile to the Jews, see 13:25; 1 M 5:15; 12:48.

d. The author of Ws will later develop this dual aspect of divine justice, while showing that, even for gentile nations, God will be indulgent, Ws 11:10; 12:20–22. For the full measure of sins, see Dn 8:23; 9:24; 1 Th 2:16. The expression is an ancient one, see Gn 15:16.

e. The expression belongs to Greek jurisprudence, but for the author 'the laws' are essentially the Law, 7:30; 10:26; 12:40; 15:9, identical to the covenant, see 1 M 2:20, and pledge of the divine favour, see 2 M 7:36; 8:15.

7 a. Having given the example of a venerable teacher of the Law, the author now gives that of a mother and her sons. The persecution, in which exceptionally savage methods were adopted, did indeed extend to women and children, see 1 M 1:60seq. The story, therefore, has a historical basis, behind the literary elements, such as the speeches ascribed to the characters. The cult of 'the seven Maccabaean brothers' spread into Europe, where several churches were dedicated in their honour. The composition known as the 'Passion of the Holy Maccabees' became widely diffused and served as model for several Martyrs' Lives.

b. This expression recurs in vv. 21 and 27, and the author apparently understands it as meaning Hebrew, see 12:37; 15:29. More probably, however, the woman spoke Aramaic.

c. lit. 'for an eternal requickening of life'. Belief in the resurrection of the body, not clearly expressed in Jb 19:26–27 and Is 26:19 (see notes) is here asserted for the first time, vv. 11,14,23,29,36, and in Dn 12:2–3 (again in the context of Antiochus Epiphanes' persecution, Dn 11), see also 2 M 12:38–45; 14:46. By the power of the Creator, the martyrs will rise again, v. 23, to a life, v. 14, see Jn 5:29, which is eternal, 2 M 7: 9,36. At this point we encounter the doctrine of immortality which will be developed, in the atmosphere of Gk thought and without reference to the resurrection of the body, by Ws 3:1–5:16. For Hebr. thought, however, which makes no distinction between soul and body, the notion of survival implied a physical resurrection, as we see here. The text does not explicitly teach universal resurrection, and is concerned only with the case of the upright, see v. 14. Dn 12:2–3 is clearer.

d. This verse is omitted by several Lat. MSS.

5:17–20; 6:12–16 After him, they led out the sixth, and his dying words were these, 'Do not delude 18 yourself: we are suffering like this through our own fault, having sinned against 2 Ch 13:12 Ac 5:39 our own God; hence, appalling things have befallen us—•but do not think you 19 yourself will go unpunished for attempting to make war on God.'

But the mother was especially admirable and worthy of honourable remem- 20 brance, for she watched the death of seven sons in the course of a single day, and bravely endured it because of her hopes in the Lord. •Indeed she encouraged each 21 of them in their ancestral tongue; filled with noble conviction, she reinforced her Jb 10:8–12 Ps 139:13–15 Qo 11:5 womanly argument with manly courage, saying to them, •'I do not know how you 22 appeared in my womb; it was not I who endowed you with breath and life, I had not the shaping of your every part. •And hence, the Creator of the world, who 23 made everyone and ordained the origin of all things, will in his mercy give you back breath and life, since for the sake of his laws you have no concern for yourselves.'

Antiochus thought he was being ridiculed, suspecting insult in the tone of her 24 voice; and as the youngest was still alive he appealed to him not with mere words but with promises on oath to make him both rich and happy if he would abandon the traditions of his ancestors; he would make him his Friend and entrust him with public office. •The young man took no notice at all, and so the king then appealed 25 to the mother, urging her to advise the youth to save his life. •After a great deal of 26 urging on his part she agreed to try persuasion on her son. •Bending over him, she 27 fooled the cruel tyrant with these words, uttered in their ancestral tongue, 'My son, have pity on me; I carried you nine months in my womb and suckled you three years, fed you and reared you to the age you are now, and provided for you. •I 28 implore you, my child, look at the earth and sky and everything in them, and consider how God made them out of what did not exist,[e] and that human beings come into being in the same way. •Do not fear this executioner, but prove yourself 29 worthy of your brothers and accept death, so that I may receive you back with them in the day of mercy.'

She had hardly[f] finished, when the young man said, 'What are you all waiting 30 for? I will not comply with the king's ordinance; I obey the ordinance of the Law given to our ancestors through Moses. •As for you, who have contrived every 31 kind of evil against the Hebrews,[g] you will certainly not escape the hands of God.
5:17–20; 6:12–16 We are suffering for our own sins; •and if, to punish and discipline us, our 32, 33 living Lord is briefly angry with us, he will be reconciled with us in due course.
But you, unholy wretch and wickedest of villains, what cause have you for pride, 34 nourishing vain hopes and raising your hand against his servants?[h]—•for you have 35 not yet escaped the judgement of God the almighty, the all-seeing. •Our brothers, 36 2 Co 4:17 having endured brief pain, for the sake of ever-flowing life have died for the covenant of God,[i] while you, by God's judgement, will have to pay the just penalty for your arrogance. •I too, like my brothers, surrender my body and life for the 37 laws of my ancestors, begging God quickly to take pity on our nation, and by trials and afflictions to bring you to confess that he alone is God,[j] •so that with my 38 brothers and myself there may be an end to the wrath of the Almighty, rightly let loose on our whole nation.'

The king fell into a rage and treated this one more cruelly than the others, for he 39 was himself smarting from the young man's scorn. •And so the last brother met his 40 end undefiled and with perfect trust in the Lord. •The mother was the last to die, 41 after her sons.

But let this be sufficient account of the ritual meals and monstrous tortures. 42

V: THE VICTORY OF JUDAISM

THE DEATH OF THE PERSECUTOR AND PURIFICATION OF THE TEMPLE

Judas Maccabaeus and the resistance [a]

8 1 Judas, otherwise known as Maccabaeus, and his companions made their way secretly among the villages, rallying their fellow-countrymen; they recruited 2 those who remained loyal to Judaism and assembled about six thousand. ·They called on the Lord to have regard for the people oppressed on all sides, to take pity 3 on the Temple profaned by the godless, ·to have mercy on the city now being destroyed and levelled to the ground, to hear the blood of the victims that cried 4 aloud to him, ·to remember too the criminal slaughter of innocent babies and to 5 avenge the blasphemies perpetrated against his name. ·As soon as Maccabaeus had an organised force, he at once proved invincible to the foreigners, the Lord's 6 anger having turned into compassion. ·Making surprise attacks on towns and villages, he fired them; he captured favourable positions and inflicted very heavy 7 losses on the enemy, [b] ·generally availing himself of the cover of night for such enterprises. The fame of his valour spread far and wide.

1 M 3:3–9

Campaign of Nicanor and Gorgias

‖1 M 3:38–4:25

8 When Philip [c] saw Judas was making steady progress and winning more and more frequent successes, he wrote to Ptolemy, the general officer commanding Coele- 9 Syria and Phoenicia, asking for reinforcements in the royal interest. ·Ptolemy chose Nicanor son of Patroclus, one of the king's First Friends, and sent him without delay at the head of an international force of at least twenty thousand men to exterminate the entire Jewish race. As his associate he appointed Gorgias, a 10 professional general of wide military experience. ·Nicanor for his part proposed, by the sale of Jewish prisoners of war, to raise the two thousand talents of tribute 11 money owed by the king to the Romans. ·He lost no time in sending the seaboard towns an invitation to come and buy Jewish manpower, promising delivery of ninety head for one talent; but he did not reckon on the judgement from the Almighty that was soon to overtake him.

4:45;10:12

1 M 2:18e

1 M 3:38

12 When news reached Judas of Nicanor's advance, he warned his men of the 13 enemy's approach, ·whereupon the cowardly ones and those who lacked confi- 14 dence in the justice of God took to their heels and ran away. ·The rest sold all their remaining possessions, at the same time praying the Lord to deliver them from the godless Nicanor, who had sold them even in advance of any encounter— 15 if not for their own sakes, then at least out of consideration for the covenants made with their ancestors, and because they themselves bore his sacred and majestic name. [d]

e. First explicit allusion to the creation ex nihilo, but see earlier, Is 44:24; see also Jn 1:3; Col 1:15seq. Some MSS and Syr. read 'from things which are not', an expression by which the Jewish philosopher Philo designates inchoate matter; see Ws 11:17.

f. 'hardly' arti conj.; 'still' eti Gk.

g. Intentionally archaic term, here and at 11:13; 15:37; see Jdt 10:12; 12:11; 14:18. LXX rarely uses the word except in the Pentateuch.

h. 'his servants' some MSS and versions; 'the heavenly servants' Gk.

i. 'for the sake of ever-flowing life' Lat. MSS; 'died for' conj., see 6:28; Gk unintelligible.

j. Antiochus IV claimed to be the equal of the gods, see 9:12d. For the notion of a God who is absolutely universal and without possible rival, see 1 Ch 17:20; Si 36:4, and earlier Is 45:14.

8 a. These vv. follow on from 5:27. The author amalgamates deeds attributed to Mattathias in 1 M 2 with the activities of Judas before the intervention of Antiochus, see 1 M 3:1–16.

b. 'very heavy losses', lit. 'many corpses', following Lat.; 'many enemies (put to flight)' Gk; some MSS read both 'enemies' and 'corpses'.

c. Philip is the epistates (see 5:22,23f) of Jerusalem, subordinate to Ptolemy, Military Governor of Coele-Syria and Phoenicia.

d. lit. 'because of the invocation of his name on them', see 1 M 7:37, a hebraism, see Dt 28:10; 2 S 12:28; 1 K 8:43; Is 4:1.

Maccabaeus marshalled his men, who numbered about six thousand, and ex- 16 horted them not to be dismayed at the enemy or discouraged at the vast horde of gentiles wickedly advancing against them, but to fight bravely, ·keeping before 17 their eyes the outrage committed by them against the holy place and the infamous and scornful treatment inflicted on the city, not to mention the destruction of their Ps 20:7 traditional way of life. ·'They may put their trust in their weapons and their 18 exploits,' he said, 'but our confidence is in almighty God, who is able with a single nod to overthrow both those marching on us and the whole world with them.' ·He 19 reminded them of the occasions on which their ancestors had received help: that 2 K 19:35 Is 37:36 time when, under Sennacherib, a hundred and eighty-five thousand men had perished; ·that time in Babylonia when in the battle with the Galatians the Jewish 20 combatants numbered only eight thousand, [e] with four thousand Macedonians, yet when the Macedonians were hard pressed, the eight thousand had destroyed a hundred and twenty thousand, thanks to the help they had received from Heaven, and had taken great booty as a result.

Having so roused their courage by these words that they were ready to die for 21
the laws and their country, he then divided his army into four, ·putting his brothers, 22
Simon, Joseph and Jonathan in command of one division each, and assigning them
1 M 3:48o fifteen hundred men apiece. ·Next, he ordered Esdrias [f] to read the Holy Book 23 aloud and gave them their watchword 'Help from God'. [g] Then, putting himself at the head of the first division, he attacked Nicanor. ·With the Almighty for their 24 ally they slaughtered over nine thousand of the enemy, wounded and crippled the greater part of Nicanor's army and put them all to flight. ·The money of their 25 prospective purchasers fell into their hands. After pursuing them for a good while, they turned back, since time was pressing: ·it was the eve of the Sabbath, and for 26 that reason they did not prolong their pursuit. ·They collected the enemy's 27 weapons and stripped them of their spoils, and because of the Sabbath even more heartily blessed and praised the Lord, who had saved them and who had chosen that day for the first manifestation of his compassion. ·When the Sabbath was over, 28 they distributed some of the booty among the victims of the persecution and the widows and orphans; the rest they divided among themselves and their children.
They then joined in public supplication, imploring the merciful Lord to be fully 29 reconciled with his servants.

The defeat of Timotheus and Bacchides [h]

They also challenged the forces of Timotheus and Bacchides and destroyed over 30 twenty thousand of them, gaining possession of several high fortresses. They divided their enormous booty into two equal shares, one for themselves, the other for the victims of the persecution and the orphans and widows, not forgetting the aged. ·They carefully collected the enemy's weapons and stored them in suitable 31 places. The rest of the spoils they took to Jerusalem. ·They killed the tribal 32 chieftain [i] on Timotheus' staff, an extremely wicked man who had done great harm to the Jews. ·In the course of their victory celebrations in Jerusalem, they burned 33 1:8 the men who had fired the Holy Gates [j]; with Callisthenes they had taken refuge in one small house; so these received a fitting reward for their sacrilege.

The flight and testimony of Nicanor

The triple-dyed scoundrel Nicanor, who had brought the thousand merchants to 34 8:23–24 buy the Jews, ·finding himself with the Lord's help humbled by men he had 35 himself reckoned as of very little account, stripped off his robes of state, and made his way across country unaccompanied, like a runaway slave, reaching Antioch by a singular stroke of fortune, since his army had been destroyed. ·Thus the man 36 who had promised the Romans to make good their tribute money by selling the prisoners from Jerusalem, bore witness that the Jews had a defender and that they were in consequence invulnerable, since they followed the laws which that defender had ordained.

The last days of Antiochus Epiphanes

1:11–17
‖1 M 6:1–16

1 9 At about the same time, Antiochus was beating a disorderly retreat from 2 Persia. ·He had entered the city called Persepolis, planning to rob the temple[a] and occupy the city; but the population at once sprang to arms to defend themselves, with the result that Antiochus was routed by the inhabitants and forced to 3 beat a humiliating retreat. ·On his arrival in Ecbatana[b] he learned what had 4 happened to Nicanor and to Timotheus' forces. ·Flying into a passion, he resolved to make the Jews pay for the disgrace inflicted by those who had routed him, and with this in mind he ordered his charioteer to drive without stopping and get the journey over. But the sentence of Heaven was already hanging over him. In his pride, he had said, 'When I reach Jerusalem, I shall turn it into a mass grave for the 5 Jews.' ·But the all-seeing Lord, the God of Israel, struck him with an incurable and unseen complaint. The words were hardly out of his mouth when he was seized
6 with an incurable pain in his bowels and with excruciating internal torture; ·and this was only right, since he had inflicted many barbaric tortures on the bowels of
7 others. ·Even so, he in no way diminished his arrogance; still bursting with pride, breathing fire in his wrath against the Jews, he was in the act of ordering an even keener pace when the chariot gave a sudden lurch and out he fell and, in this
8 serious fall, was dragged along, every joint of his body wrenched out of place. ·He who only a little while before had thought in his superhuman boastfulness he could command the waves of the sea, he who had imagined he could weigh mountain Jb 38:8–11 Ps 65:6–7
peaks in a balance, found himself flat on the ground and then being carried in a Is 40:12; 51:15
9 litter, a visible demonstration to all of the power of God, ·in that the very eyes of this godless man teemed with worms and his flesh rotted away while he lingered on Si 7:17 Ac 12:23
10 in agonising pain,[c] and the stench of his decay sickened the whole army. ·A short while before, he had thought to grasp the stars of heaven; now no one could bring Is 14:13+ himself to act as his bearer, for the stench was intolerable.

11 Then and there, as a consequence, in his shattered state, he began to shed his excessive pride and come to his senses under the divine lash, spasms of pain
12 overtaking him. ·His stench being unbearable even to himself, he exclaimed, 'It is right to submit to God; no mortal should aspire to equality with the Godhead.'[d]
13 The wretch began to pray to the Master, who would never take pity on him now, 14 declaring ·that the holy city, towards which he had been speeding to rase it to the 15 ground and turn it into a mass grave, should be declared free; ·as for the Jews, whom he had considered as not even worth burying, so much carrion to be thrown out with their children for birds and beasts to prey on, he would give them all equal
16 rights with the Athenians; ·the holy Temple which he had once plundered he would now adorn with the finest offerings; he would restore all the sacred vessels many times over; he would defray from his personal revenue the expenses incurred for 17 the sacrifices; ·and, to crown all, he would himself turn Jew and visit every inhabited place, proclaiming the power of God.

e. Possibly Jews who had fought against Gaulish mercenaries in the pay of Molon, the rebellious satrap of Media.

f. 'Esdrias' (or 'Esdras' following Lat. and Arm.) cf. 12:36; 'Eleazar' Gk; identical with Azariah of 1 M 5:18,56.

g. Similar formulae were used in the hellenistic and Roman armies, and are also mentioned in the Qumran War Rule.

h. This fragment has been placed here by the summarist as a further illustration of the punishment meted out to persecutors. The narrative continues at v. 34.

i. Presumably the chieftain of the Arabs defeated at the beginning of the campaign against Timotheus, 12:10seq.

j. The Mysarch had probably been responsible for the fire, 1 M 1:31. The Holy Gates are those of the Temple, rather than those of the outer court.

9 a. The temple in question was actually in Elymais, to the north of Persepolis, 1 M 6:1seq., but Jason or the summarist may have preferred to site this event in a city well known to everyone.

b. Present-day Hamadan, 450 miles (724 km) north-east of Persepolis. In point of fact, Antiochus Epiphanes died at Tabae, half-way between these two places.

c. 'eyes' Vet. Lat., Arm.; 'body' Gk (except 1 MS: 'eyes of the body'). Antiochus' fatal illness does not correspond to any medical diagnosis. The description belongs to a literary genre appropriate to the death of tyrants, cf. Jdt 16:17; Is 14:11; Ac 12:23; compare also the death of Herod the Great as described by Josephus (Ant. Jud.). The parallel account in 1 M 6:9 is much more restrained.

d. 'not aspire to equality with the Godhead', MSS and versions; 'not entertain proud thoughts' some Gk; Gk-Luc. combines the two. The Gk term refers to the divine honours accorded to kings and the illustrious. Cf. the similar expression in Ph 2:6 applied to Christ.

Antiochus writes to the Jews

Finding no respite at all from his suffering, God's just sentence having overtaken him, he abandoned all hope for himself and wrote the Jews the letter transcribed below, which takes the form of an appeal in these terms: 18

'To the excellent Jews, to the citizens, Antiochus, king and commander-in-chief, [e] sends hearty greetings, wishing them all health and prosperity. 19

'If you and your children are well and your affairs as you would wish, we are profoundly thankful. [f] 20

·For my part, I cherish affectionate memories of you. [g] 21

'On my return from the country of Persia I fell seriously ill, and thought it necessary to make provision for the common security of all. ·Not that I despair of my condition, for I have great hope of shaking off the malady, ·but considering how my father, whenever he was making an expedition [h] into the uplands, would designate his successor ·so that, in case of any unforeseen event or disquieting rumour, the people of the provinces might know to whom he had left the conduct of affairs, and thus remain undisturbed; ·furthermore, being well aware that the sovereigns on our frontiers and the neighbours of our realm are watching for opportunities and waiting to see what will happen, I have designated as king my son Antiochus, whom I have more than once entrusted and commended to most of you when I was setting out for the upland satrapies; a transcript of my letter to him is appended hereto. [i] ·I therefore urge and require you, being mindful of the benefits both public and personal received from me, that you each persist in those sentiments of goodwill that you harbour towards me. ·I am confident that he will pursue my own policy with benevolence and humanity, and will prove accommodating to your interests.' 22 23 24 25 26 27

And so this murderer and blasphemer, having endured sufferings as terrible as those which he had made others endure, met his pitiable fate, and ended his life in the mountains far from his home. [j] ·His comrade Philip brought back his body, and then, fearing Antiochus' son, withdrew to Egypt, to the court of Ptolemy Philometor. [k] 28 29

‖1 M 4:36–61 The purification of the Temple

10 Maccabaeus and his companions, under the Lord's guidance, restored the Temple and the city, ·and pulled down the altars erected by the foreigners in the market place, as well as the shrines. ·They purified the sanctuary and built another altar; then, striking fire from flints and using this fire, they offered the first sacrifice for two years, burning incense, lighting the lamps and setting out the loaves. ·When they had done this, prostrating themselves on the ground, they implored the Lord never again to let them fall into such adversity, but if they should ever sin, to correct them with moderation and not to deliver them over to blasphemous and barbarous nations. ·This day of the purification of the Temple fell on the very day on which the Temple had been profaned by the foreigners, the twenty-fifth of the same month, Chislev. [a] ·They kept eight festal days with rejoicing, in the manner of the feast of Shelters, remembering how, not long before at the time of the feast of Shelters, they had been living in the mountains and caverns like wild beasts. ·Then, carrying thyrsuses, leafy boughs and palms, they offered hymns to him who had brought the cleansing of his own holy place to a happy outcome. ·They also decreed by public edict, ratified by vote, that the whole Jewish nation should celebrate those same days every year. VI: THE STRUGGLE OF JUDAS AGAINST THE NEIGHBOURING PEOPLES AND AGAINST LYSIAS, MINISTER OF ANTIOCHUS V

Reign of Antiochus V: early years

9 Such were the circumstances attending the death of Antiochus styled Epiphanes.
10 Our task now is to unfold the history of Antiochus Eupator, son of that godless 1 M 6:17
11 man, and briefly to relate the evil effects of the wars.[c] ·On coming to the throne, this prince put at the head of affairs a certain Lysias, the general officer command-
12 ing Coele-Syria and Phoenicia, ·whereas Ptolemy, known as Macron, and the first 8:8 person to govern the Jews justly, had done his best to govern them peacefully to 13 make up for the wrongs inflicted on them in the past. ·Denounced, in consequence, to Eupator by the Friends of the King, he heard himself called traitor at every turn: for having abandoned Cyprus,[d] which had been entrusted to him by Philometer, for having gone over to Antiochus Epiphanes, and for having shed no lustre on his illustrious office: he committed suicide by poisoning himself.

Gorgias and the Idumaean fortresses

14 Gorgias now became general of the area; he maintained a force of mercenaries and 15 a continual state of war with the Jews. ·At the same time, the Idumaeans, who ‖1 M 5:1–8 controlled important fortresses, were harassing the Jews, welcoming outlaws from 16 Jerusalem and endeavouring to maintain a state of war. ·Maccabaeus and his men, after making public supplication to God, entreating him to support them, 8:23–24
17 began operations against the Idumaean fortresses. ·Vigorously pressing home their attack, they seized possession of these vantage points, beating off all who fought on the ramparts; they slaughtered all who fell into their hands, accounting
18 for no fewer than twenty thousand. ·Nine thousand at least took refuge in two exceptionally strong towers with everything they needed to withstand a siege, 19 whereupon, Maccabaeus left Simon and Joseph, with Zacchaeus and his forces, in sufficient numbers to besiege them, and himself went off to other places requiring 20 his attention. ·But Simon's men were greedy for money and allowed themselves to be bribed by some of the men in the towers; accepting seventy thousand drachmas, 21 they let a number of them escape. ·When Maccabaeus was told what had happened, he summoned the people's commanders and accused the offenders of having sold their brothers for money by releasing their enemies to fight them.
22 Having executed them as traitors, he at once proceeded to capture both towers.
23 Successful in all that he undertook by force of arms, in these two fortresses he slaughtered more than twenty thousand men.[e]

Judas defeats Timotheus and captures Gezer[f]

24 Timotheus, who had been beaten by the Jews once before, now assembled an

e. The title designates the chief magistrate of a city, here Antioch, the capital, of which Antiochus had already had himself nominated aedile and tribune. The letter seems originally to have been addressed to the 'excellent citizens' of Antioch, the Jews having been inserted as a gloss by Jason of Cyrene.

j. The violent language of the summarist is in marked contrast to that of the letter, which is a good example of hellenistic style in matters of protocol.

k. A detail hard to reconcile with 1 M 6:55 and 63. Philip probably stayed in Egypt until the end of 163, see 13:23.

The second section ends similarly, with an invitation to celebrate the Day of Nicanor, 15:36.

f. This episode seems to be chronologically misplaced, since Timotheus, who dies here, is alive and well in the summer of the same year 163, during the Gilead campaign, 12:10–31. The capture of Gezer causes problems too, see v. 32.

enormous force of mercenaries, mustering cavalry from Asia in considerable numbers, and soon appeared in Judaea, expecting to conquer it by force of arms. At his approach, Maccabaeus and his men made their supplications to God, 25 sprinkling earth on their heads and putting sackcloth round their waists. Prostrating themselves on the terrace before the altar, they begged him to support 26
Ex 23:22 them and to show himself the enemy of their enemies, the adversary of their adversaries, as the Law clearly states.

After these prayers, they armed themselves and advanced a fair distance from 27
the city, halting when they were close to the enemy. ·As the first light of dawn 28 began to spread, the two sides joined battle, the one having as their pledge of success and victory not only their own valour but their recourse to the Lord, the other making their own ardour their mainstay in the fight. ·When the battle was at 29 5:4b its height, the enemy saw five magnificent men appear from heaven on horses with golden bridles and put themselves at the head of the Jews; ·surrounding Macca- 30
baeus and screening him with their own armour, they kept him unscathed, while they rained arrows and thunderbolts on the enemy until, blinded and confused, they scattered [g] in complete disorder. ·Twenty thousand five hundred infantry and 31
six hundred cavalry were slaughtered. ·Timotheus himself fled to a strongly 32
‖1 M 13:43–48 guarded citadel called Gezer, where Chaereas was in command. [h] ·For four days [i] 33
Maccabaeus and his men eagerly besieged the fortress, ·while the defenders, 34 confident in the security of the place, hurled fearful blasphemies and godless insults at them. ·At daybreak on the fifth day, twenty young men of Maccabaeus' forces, 35 fired with indignation at the blasphemies, manfully assaulted the wall, with wild courage cutting down everyone they encountered. ·Others, in a similar scaling 36 operation, took the defenders in the rear, and set fire to the towers, lighting pyres on which they burned the blasphemers alive. The first, meanwhile, breaking open the gates, let the rest of the army in and, at their head, captured the town. Timotheus had hidden in a storage-well, but they killed him, with his brother 37
Chaereas, and Apollophanes. ·When all this was over, with hymns and thanksgiv- 38
ing they blessed the Lord, who had shown such great kindness to Israel and given them the victory.

‖1 M 4:26–35 The first campaign of Lysias [a]

11 Almost immediately afterwards, Lysias, the king's tutor and cousin, chief 1 minister of the realm, much disturbed at the turn of events, ·mustered about 2 eighty thousand foot soldiers and his entire cavalry and advanced against the Jews, intending to make the city a place for Greeks to live in, ·to levy a tax on the Temple 3
as on other national shrines, and to put the office of high priest up for sale every year; ·he took no account at all of the power of God, being sublimely confident in 4 his tens of thousands of infantrymen, his thousands of cavalry, and his eighty elephants.

Invading Judaea, he approached Beth-Zur, a fortified position about twenty 5 miles from Jerusalem, and began to subject it to strong pressure. ·When Macca- 6 baeus and his men learned that Lysias was besieging the fortresses, they and the Ex 23:20i populace with them begged the Lord with lamentation and tears to send a good angel to save Israel. ·Maccabaeus himself was the first to take up his weapons, and 7
he urged the rest to risk their lives with him in support of their brothers; so they sallied out resolutely, as one man. ·They were still near Jerusalem when a rider 8 5:4b attired in white appeared at their head, brandishing golden weapons. ·With one 9 accord they all blessed the God of mercy, and found themselves filled with such courage that they were ready to lay low not men only but the fiercest beasts and walls of iron. ·They advanced in battle order with the aid of their celestial ally, the 10
Lord having had mercy on them. ·Charging like lions on the enemy, they laid low 11 eleven thousand of the infantry and sixteen hundred horsemen, and routed all the rest. ·Of those, the majority got away, wounded and weaponless. Lysias himself 12 escaped only by ignominious flight.

Lysias makes peace with the Jews. Four letters concerning the treaty

↗1 M 6:57–61

13 Now Lysias was not lacking in intelligence and, as he reflected on the reverse he had just suffered, he realised that the Hebrews were invincible because the mighty
14 God fought for them. He therefore sent them a delegation ·to persuade them to accept reasonable terms all round, and promised to compel the king to become 15 their friend.[b] ·Maccabaeus, thinking only of the common good, agreed to all that Lysias proposed, and whatever Maccabaeus submitted to Lysias in writing concerning the Jews was granted by the king.[c]

16 Here is the text of the letter Lysias wrote to the Jews:

'Lysias to the Jewish people, greetings.

17 'John and Absalom,[d] your envoys, have delivered to me the communication 18 transcribed below, requesting me to approve its provisions. ·Anything requiring the king's attention I have put before him;[e] whatever was possible, I have 19 granted. ·Provided you maintain your goodwill towards the interests of the 20 State, I shall do my best in the future to promote your well-being. ·As regards the details, I have given orders for your envoys and my own officials to discuss 21 these with you. ·May you prosper.

'The twenty-fourth day of Dioscorus,[f] in the year one hundred and forty-eight.'

22 The king's letter ran as follows:

'King Antiochus[g] to his brother Lysias, greetings.

23 'Now that our father has taken his place among the gods,[h] our will is that the 24 subjects of the realm be left undisturbed to attend to their own affairs. ·We understand that the Jews do not approve our father's policy, the adoption of Greek customs, but prefer their own way of life and ask to be allowed to observe 25 their own laws. ·Accordingly, since we intend this people to be free from vexation like any other, our ruling is that the Temple be restored to them and that they conduct their affairs according to the customs of their ancestors.

26 'It will therefore be your concern to send them a mission of friendship, so that on learning our policy they may have confidence and happily go about their business.'

27 The king's letter to the Jewish nation was in these terms:

'King Antiochus to the Jewish Senate and the rest of the Jews, greetings.

28 'If you are well, that is as we would wish; we ourselves are in good health.

29 'Menelaus informs us that you wish to return home and attend to your own
30 affairs. ·Accordingly, all those who return before the thirtieth day of Xanthicus 31 may rest assured that they have nothing to fear. ·The Jews may make use of their own kind of food and their own laws as formerly, and none of them is to be

g. 'scattered' several Gk MSS; 'were massacred' Gk and Lat.

h. Concentrating exclusively on the exploits of Judas, 2 M credits him with the famous capture of Gezer, the fame of which lingered in popular tradition. 1 M 13:43, see 1 M 14:34, rightly attributes its capture to Judas' brother, Simon.

i. 'four days' Lat.; 'forty' or 'twenty-four' Gk.

11 a. The events related in 11:1–21 and 11:27–12:9 belong to the year 164, while Antiochus Epiphanes was still alive, and in the work of Jason of Cyrene must have followed 8:36 (hence, and correctly, the 'almost immediately afterwards' of v. 1). The summarist has transferred the action to the reign of Antiochus V, see. vv. 22seq.

b. 'to compel' Vet. Lat., Vulg.; 'to persuade' Lat. MSS; 'to persuade to compel' Gk. The original word probably seemed too forceful to a copyist, who must have written 'persuade' against it in the margin, which was later incorporated into the text of some MSS. • For the summarist, the king in question is Antiochus V, who, being a child, could hardly exert such pressure.

c. This explains why Judas had no further trouble during the year 164.

d. John here is possibly the eldest of the sons of Mattathias, 1 M 2:2; Absalom was evidently someone of importance, since two of his sons are later given military commands, see 1 M 11:70; 13:11.

e. i.e. Antiochus IV. Had it been the young Antiochus V, as the summarist supposes, the actions of the all-powerful minister, Lysias, would not make sense.

f. 'Dioscorus' Lat.; 'of Corinthian Jupiter' (dioscorinthios) Gk. The name of a Cretan month, equivalent to 'Xanthicus', see v. 30, i.e. spring 164.

g. This really is Antiochus V, see following v., and concerns the rescript granted to the Jews after the second campaign of Lysias, see 13:23; 1 M 6:59.

The Romans also sent the Jews a letter, which read as follows: 34

'Quintus Memmius, Titus Manilius, Manius Sergius, [j] legates of the Romans, to the people of the Jews, greetings.

'Whatever Lysias, the king's Cousin, has granted you we also approve. ·As 35, 36
for the matters he decided to refer to the king, consider them carefully and send someone without delay, if we are to interpret them to your advantage, because we are leaving for Antioch. ·Lose no time, therefore, in sending us those who 37
can tell us what your intentions are. ·Farewell. 38

Incidents at Joppa and Jamnia

12 These agreements once concluded, Lysias returned to the king [a] and the 1
Jews went back to their farming. ·Among the local generals, Timotheus and 2
Apollonius son of Gennaeus, as also Hieronymus and Demophon, and Nicanor the Cypriarch as well, would not allow the Jews to live in peace and quiet.

The people of Joppa committed a particularly wicked crime: they invited the 3 Jews living among them to go aboard some boats they had lying ready, taking their wives and children. There was no hint of any intention to harm them; ·there had 4 been a public vote by the citizens, and the Jews accepted, as well they might, being peaceable people with no reason to suspect anything. But once out in the open sea they were all sent to the bottom, a company of at least two hundred.

When Judas heard of the cruel fate of his countrymen, he issued his orders to his 5 men ·and after invoking God, the just judge, he attacked his brothers' murderers. 6
Under cover of dark he set fire to the port, burned the boats and put to the sword everyone who had taken refuge there. ·As the town gates were closed, he with- 7 drew, intending to come back and wipe out the whole community of Joppa. ·But 8 hearing that the people of Jamnia were planning to treat their resident Jews in the same way, ·he made a night attack on the Jamnites and fired the port with its fleet; 9
the glow of the flames was seen as far off as Jerusalem, thirty miles away.

||1 M 5:24–54 The expedition in Gilead

When they had left the town barely a mile [b] behind them in their advance on 10
Timotheus, Judas was attacked by an Arab force of at least five thousand foot soldiers, with five hundred cavalry. ·A fierce engagement followed, and with God's 11 help Judas' men won the day; the defeated nomads begged Judas to offer them the right hand of friendship, and promised to surrender their herds and make themselves generally useful to him. ·Realising that they might indeed prove valuable in 12
many ways, Judas consented to make peace with them and after an exchange of pledges the Arabs withdrew to their tents.

Judas also attacked a certain fortified town, closed by ramparts and inhabited by 13
a medley of races; its name was Caspin. ·Confident in the strength of their 14 walls and their stock of provisions, the besieged adopted an insolent attitude to Judas and his men, reinforcing their insults with blasphemies and profanity.
But Judas and his men invoked the great Sovereign of the world who without 15
Jos 6 battering-ram or siege-engine had overthrown Jericho in the days of Joshua; they then made a fierce assault on the wall. ·By God's will, having captured the town, 16 they made such indescribable slaughter that the nearby lake, a quarter of a mile across, seemed filled to overflowing with blood.

||1 M 5:37–44 The battle of the Carnaim

Ninety-five miles further on from there, they reached the Charax, in the country of 17
1 M 5:13 Jews known as Tubians. [c] ·They did not find Timotheus himself in that neighbour- 18

hood; he had already left the district, having achieved nothing apart from leaving 19 a very strong garrison at one point. ·Dositheus and Sosipater, two of the Macca-baean generals, marched out and destroyed the force Timotheus had left behind in 20 the fortress, amounting to more than ten thousand men. ·Maccabaeus himself divided his army into cohorts to which he assigned commanders, and then hurried in pursuit of Timotheus, whose troops numbered one hundred and twenty thou-21 sand infantry and two thousand five hundred cavalry. ·Timotheus' first move on learning of Judas' advance was to send away the women and children and the rest of the baggage train to the place called the Carnaim,[d] since it was an impregnable 1 M 5:43m 22 position, difficult of access owing to the narrowness of all the approaches. ·Judas' cohort came into sight first. The enemy, seized with fright and panic-stricken by the manifestation of the All-seeing, began to flee, one running this way, one running that, often wounding one another in consequence and running on the 23 points of one another's swords. ·Judas pursued them with a will, cutting the sinners 24 to pieces and killing something like thirty thousand men. ·Timotheus himself, having fallen into the hands of Dositheus and Sosipater and their men, very craftily pleaded with them to let him go with his life, on the grounds that he had the relatives and even the brothers of many of them in his power, and that these could 25 otherwise expect short shrift. ·When at long last he convinced them that he would honour his promise and return these people safe and sound, they let him go for the sake of saving their brothers.

26 Reaching the Carnaim and the Atargateion,[e] Judas slaughtered twenty-five thousand men.

The return by way of Ephron and Scythopolis

27 Having defeated and destroyed them, he led his army against Ephron, a fortified town, where Lysanias[f] was living. Stalwart young men drawn up outside the walls offered vigorous resistance, while inside there were quantities of war-engines and 28 missiles in reserve. ·But the Jews, having invoked the Sovereign who by his power shatters enemies' defences, gained control of the town and cut down nearly 29 twenty-five thousand of the people inside. ·Moving off from there, they pressed on 30 to Scythopolis,[g] ·seventy-five miles from Jerusalem. But as the Jews who had settled there assured Judas that the people of Scythopolis had always treated them 31 well and had been particularly kind to them when times were at their worst, ·he and his men thanked them and urged them to extend the same friendship to his race in the future.

They reached Jerusalem shortly before the feast of Weeks.

i. The importance conferred on the high priest expelled by the rebels shows that the king had no intention of recognising their leader, Judas. But the religious objectives of the revolt, that is to say the repeal of the decree abolishing the Jewish religion, had been achieved.

j. 'Manilius' and 'Sergius' are restored, following 2 Gk MSS; the remaining Gk read only 'Titus Manius', but this name, made up of two praenomina, is impossible. Titus Manilius and Manius Sergius are both known to history. Quintus Memmius is not, though a Titus Memmius had been legate in 170.

k. 'Dioscorus' Vet. Lat.; 'Xanthicus' Gk.

12 a. The summarist supposes the king to be at Antioch, thinking of him as Antiochus V. The two raids on the coastal towns, however, must have taken place after the first campaign of Lysias, when Antiochus IV was in Persia, see 9:1, and fit easily into the year 164.

b. The mile (1.5 km) cannot be reckoned to start at Jamnia but at some point situated in Gilead, see v. 13. The summarist has made an awkward start in the material taken from Jason. For details of this expedition in the summer of 163, see 1 M 5:9seq. The 'Arabs' are Nabataeans, see 1 M 5:25, whose leader was presumably the chieftain mentioned in 2 M 8:32.

c. Ammanitis, ruled by the Tobiad family, see 1 M 5:13, and noted for its horse-breeding. A contingent of Tubian horsemen distinguished itself in Idumaea, v. 35. • The Charax is probably the fortress or Birta of Ammanitis (present-day Araq el-Emir), the residence of the governor.

d. Site of the temple of Horned Astarte, see 1 M 5:43. The 'narrow approaches' probably mean the bed of the torrent mentioned in 1 M 5:37 (the Nahr el-Ehreir, a tributary of the River Jarmuk); the country gets difficult only further to the south, but the summarist wants to emphasise the military prowess of Judas' contingent and the resultant terror that it provoked.

e. The temple of Atargatis, the Great Goddess of the Syrians, identified with the local Astarte.

f. 'where Lysanias was living' Lat. MSS (other MSS read 'Lysias'); 'where troops of all nationalities lived' Gk; 'where Lysias and troops of all nationalities lived' Gk-Luc., Lat. and Syr. MSS. Even if the reading 'Lysias' is preferred, it cannot be the military government of Coele-Syria, who presumably resided at Tyre, but merely some local ruler. The name was common at the time.

g. Gk name for the town of Beth-Shean, 1 M 5:52.

The campaign against Gorgias

Ex 23:14d After Pentecost, as it is called, they marched against Gorgias, the general com- 32
manding Idumaea. ·He came out at the head of three thousand infantry and four 33 hundred cavalry; ·in the course of the ensuing battle a few Jews lost their lives. 34

A man called Dositheus, a horseman of the Tubian contingent, a valiant man, 35 overpowered Gorgias and, gripping him by the cloak, [h] was forcibly dragging him along, intending to take the accursed man alive, but one of the Thracian cavalry, hurling himself on Dositheus, slashed his shoulder, and Gorgias escaped to Marisa.
Meanwhile, since Esdrias and his men had been fighting for a long time and were 36 exhausted, Judas called on the Lord to show himself their ally and leader in battle.

Then, chanting the battle cry and hymns [i] at the top of his voice in his ancestral 37 tongue, by a surprise attack he routed Gorgias' troops.

The sacrifice for the fallen [j]

Judas then rallied his army and moved on to the town of Adullam [k] where, as it was 38 the seventh day of the week, they purified themselves according to custom and kept the Sabbath. ·Next day, they came to find Judas [l] (since the necessity was by 39 now urgent) to have the bodies of the fallen taken up and laid to rest among their relatives in their ancestral tombs. ·But when they found on each of the dead men, 40 Dt 7:25 under their tunics, objects dedicated to the idols of Jamnia, [m] which the Law prohibits to Jews, it became clear to everyone that this was why these men had lost their lives. ·All then blessed the ways of the Lord, the upright judge who brings 41 1 Co 4:5 hidden things to light, ·and gave themselves to prayer, begging that the sin com- 42 mitted might be completely forgiven. Next, the valiant Judas urged the soldiers to keep themselves free from all sin, having seen with their own eyes the effects of the sin of those who had fallen; ·after this he took a collection from them individually, 43 amounting to nearly two thousand drachmas, and sent it to Jerusalem to have a sacrifice for sin offered, an action altogether fine and noble, prompted by his belief 7:9c in the resurrection. ·For had he not expected the fallen to rise again, it would have 44 been superfluous and foolish to pray for the dead, ·whereas if he had in view the 45 splendid recompense reserved for those who make a pious end, the thought was holy and devout. [n] Hence, he had this expiatory sacrifice offered for the dead, so that they might be released from their sin.

The campaign of Antiochus V and Lysias. Horrible death of Menelaus

13 In the year one hundred and forty-nine, [a] Judas and his men discovered that 1
Antiochus Eupator was advancing in force against Judaea, ·and with him 2 1 M 6:30 Lysias his tutor and chief minister; he had moreover a Greek force of one hundred and ten thousand infantry, five thousand three hundred cavalry, twenty-two elephants, and three hundred chariots fitted with scythes.

Menelaus, too, joined them and very craftily kept urging Antiochus on, not for 3
the welfare of his own country but in the hope of being restored to office. ·But the 4
King of kings stirred up the anger of Antiochus against the guilty wretch, and when Lysias made it clear to the king that Menelaus was the cause of all the troubles, Antiochus gave orders for him to be taken to Beroea and there put to death by the local method of execution. [b] ·In that place there is a tower fifty cubits high, full of 5 ash, with an internal lip all round overhanging the ashes. ·If anyone is convicted of 6 sacrilegious theft or of some other heinous crime, he is taken up to the top and pushed over to perish. [c] ·In such a manner was the renegade fated to die; Menelaus 7 had not even the privilege of burial. ·Deserved justice, this; since he had committed 8 many sins against the altar, the fire and ashes of which were holy, it was in ashes that he met his death.

The prayers and success of the Jews near Modein

The king, then, was advancing, his mind filled with barbarous designs, to give the 9

Jews a demonstration of far worse things than anything that had happened under 10 his father. ·When Judas heard of this, he ordered the people day and night to call on the Lord as never before, to come to the help of those who were in peril of being 11 deprived of the Law, their fatherland and the holy Temple, ·and not to allow the 1 M 4:36h people, just when they were beginning to breathe again, to fall into the power of 12 ill-famed foreigners. ·When they had all, with one voice, obeyed his instructions and had made their petitions to the merciful Lord, weeping, fasting and prostrating themselves for three days continuously, Judas spoke words of encouragement and 13 told them to keep close to him. ·After separate consultation with the elders, he resolved not to wait for the king's army to invade Judaea and take possession of the city, but to march out and settle the whole matter with the Lord's help.
14 Having thus committed the outcome to the Creator of the world, and having exhorted his soldiers to fight bravely to the death for the laws, the Temple, the city, their country and their way of life, he encamped his army near Modein.
15 Giving his men the password 'Victory from God', he made a night attack on the 8:23 king's pavilion with a picked band of the bravest young men. Inside the camp he destroyed about two thousand, and his men cut down the largest of the elephants 1 M 6:43seq.
16 with its mahout; ·having eventually filled the camp with terror and confusion, they 17 successfully withdrew, ·just as dawn was breaking. This was achieved, thanks to the protection which the Lord granted Judas.

Antiochus V negotiates with the Jews

‖1 M 6:48–63

18 The king, having had a taste of Jewish daring, now tried to capture their positions 19 by trickery. ·He advanced on Beth-Zur, a strong fortress of the Jews, but was checked, overcome and so repulsed.
20, 21 Judas supplied the garrison with what they needed, ·but Rhodocus, of the Jewish army, supplied the enemy with secret information; the man was identified, 22 arrested, and dealt with. ·A second time, the king parleyed with the garrison of Beth-Zur; he offered and accepted pledges of friendship, retired, then attacked 23 Judas and his men, but lost the battle. ·He was then told that Philip, left in charge of affairs, had rebelled in Antioch. He was stunned by this, opened negotiations with the Jews, came to an agreement, and swore to abide by all reasonable conditions. Agreement reached, he offered a sacrifice, honoured the Temple, and made generous gifts to the holy place. [d] 24 He received Maccabaeus kindly and, leaving Hegemonides to exercise command 25 from Ptolemais to the territory of the Gerrenians, [e] ·went to Ptolemais. The

j. Even purged of its glosses, see v. 45n, this text expresses the conviction that prayer and expiatory sacrifice are efficacious for the remission of sins for the dead. This is the first evidence in the OT of this belief. The sacrifice ordered by Judas, however, can have had the aim only of purifying the community, collectively defiled by the sins of a few, cf. Jos 7, and it may be that the author, writing forty years after the event, has attributed his own convictions to his hero. Be that as it may, this marks a new and important stage in Jewish theology.

Lat.*: 'because he hoped that those who had fallen would rise again (it is superfluous and a waste of time to pray for the dead), thinking that a very fine reward is in store for those who have fallen asleep devoutly (a holy and edifying thought).'

The high priest Menelaus, having returned to Jerusalem, see 11:32, had evidently not been able to maintain his position there, but his execution should rather be dated after the capture of Jerusalem by Antiochus, as Josephus relates (Ant. Jud.). Beroea is the name of the Macedonian town, Ac 17:10, given to Aleppo by Seleucus I.

d. 1 M 6:55–62 is not so enthusiastic, though insisting that religious freedom was restored to the Jews, 6:59, which is not stated here: the author of 2 M does not seem to have grasped the relationship between the rescript of Antiochus V, 11:22seq., and this second campaign of Lysias.

e. This then marks the beginning (though still unofficial) of Hasmonaean power, since Judas is recognised as the de facto authority, while the new governor's writ is only for the coastal regions.

inhabitants of the place disapproved of the treaty; they complained furiously and wanted to annul its provisions.[f] ·Lysias mounted the rostrum and made a convinc- 26
ing defence of the provisions which convinced and calmed them and won their goodwill. He then withdrew to Antioch.

So much for the episode of the king's offensive and retreat.

VII: THE CONFLICT WITH NICANOR, GENERAL OF DEMETRIUS I. THE DAY OF NICANOR

‖1 M 7:1-21 Alcimus the high priest intervenes

14 Three years after this,[a] Judas and his men learned that Demetrius son of 1
Seleucus had landed at the port of Tripolis with a strong army and a fleet, and that he had occupied the country and had killed Antiochus and his tutor 2
Lysias. ·A certain Alcimus, a former high priest, had wilfully incurred defilement[b] 3 at the time of the insurrection; realising that whichever way he turned there was no security for him, nor any further access to the holy altar, ·he went to King 4
Demetrius in about the year one hundred and fifty-one and presented him with a 1 M 10:30f golden crown and a palm, together with the traditional olive branches from the Temple; there, for that day, he let the matter rest.

Presently he found an opportunity to further his mad plan. When Demetrius 5 called him into his council and questioned him about the dispositions and intentions of the Jews, he replied, ·'Those Jews called Hasidaeans, who are led by Judas 6 Maccabaeus, are war-mongers and rebels who are preventing the kingdom from finding stability. ·That is why, after being deprived of my hereditary dignity—I 7 mean the high priesthood—I have come here now, ·first out of genuine concern for 8
the king's interests, and secondly, out of a regard for our own fellow-citizens, because the irresponsible behaviour of those I have mentioned has brought no slight misery on our entire race. ·When your majesty has taken note of all these 9 points, may it please you to make provision for the welfare of our country and our oppressed nation, as befits the gracious benevolence you extend to all; ·for, as long 10
as Judas remains alive, the State will never enjoy peace.'

1 M 2:18e No sooner had he spoken thus than the rest of the King's Friends, who were 11
‖1 M 7:26 hostile to Judas' activities, stoked Demetrius' anger. ·The latter at once selected 12
Nicanor, then commander of the elephants, promoted him to the command of Judaea[c] and despatched him ·with instructions to dispose of Judas, disperse his 13 followers and instal Alcimus as high priest of the greatest of temples. ·The for- 14
eigners in Judaea, who had fled before Judas, flocked to join Nicanor, thinking that the misfortunes and troubles of the Jews would be to their own advantage.

‖1 M 7:27-28 Nicanor makes friends with Judas

When the Jews heard that Nicanor was coming and that the foreigners were about 15 to attack, they sprinkled dust over themselves and made supplication to him who had established his people for ever and who never failed to support his own heritage by direct manifestations. ·On their leader's orders, they at once left the 16
1 M 7:31 place where they were and confronted the enemy at the village of Dessau.[d] Simon, brother of Judas, engaged Nicanor but, owing to the sudden arrival of the 17 enemy, suffered a slight reverse.[e] ·Nicanor, however, had heard how brave Judas 18 and his men were and how resolutely they always fought for their country, and he did not dare allow bloodshed to decide the issue. ·And so he sent Posidonius, 19
Theodotus and Mattathias to offer the Jews pledges of friendship and to accept theirs.

After careful consideration of his terms, the leader communicated them to his 20 troops, and since they were all clearly of one mind they agreed to the treaty. ·A day was fixed on which the respective leaders were to meet as individuals. A litter came out from either side and seats were set up. ·Judas had posted armed men in strategic positions, in case of a sudden treacherous move by the enemy. The leaders held their conference and reached agreement. ·Nicanor took up residence in Jerusalem and did nothing out of place there; indeed, he sent away the crowds that had flocked to join him. ·He kept Judas constantly with him, becoming deeply attached to him ·and encouraged him to marry and have children. Judas married, settled down and led a normal life.[f]

Alcimus rekindles hostilities, and Nicanor threatens the Temple

When Alcimus saw how friendly the two men had become, he went to Demetrius with a copy of the treaty they had signed and told him that Nicanor was harbouring thoughts against the interests of the State, and was planning that Judas, an enemy of the realm, should fill the next vacancy among the Friends of the King.

The king flew into a rage; roused by the slanders of this villain, he wrote to Nicanor, telling him of his strong displeasure at these agreements and ordering him immediately to send Maccabaeus to Antioch in chains.

When the letter reached Nicanor, he was very much upset, for he disliked the prospect of breaking an agreement with a man who had done nothing wrong. Since, however, there was no way of opposing the king, he waited for an opportunity[g] to carry out the order by a stratagem. ·Maccabaeus began to notice ‖1 M 7:29–30 that Nicanor was treating him more sharply and that his manner of speaking to him was more abrupt than it had been, and he concluded that such sharpness could have no very good motive. He therefore collected a considerable number of his followers and got away from Nicanor. ·The latter, realising that the man had well ‖1 M 7:33–38 and truly outmanoeuvred him, went to the greatest and holiest of Temples when the priests were offering the customary sacrifices, and ordered them to surrender Judas. ·When they protested on oath that they did not know where the wanted man could be, ·he stretched out his right hand towards the Temple and swore this oath, 'If you do not hand Judas over to me as prisoner, I shall rase this dwelling of God to the ground, I shall demolish the altar, and on this very spot I shall erect a splendid temple to Dionysus.' ·With these words he left them. The priests stretched out their hands to heaven, calling on him who has at all times done battle for our nation; this was their prayer: ·'O Lord in need of nothing, it has pleased you that the Temple where you dwell should be here with us. ·Now, therefore, holy Lord of all holiness, preserve for ever from all profanation this House, so newly purified.'

The death of Razis[h]

Now, a man called Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, was denounced to Nicanor. He was a man who loved his countrymen and stood high in their esteem, and he was known as the father of the Jews because of his kindness. ·In the earlier days of the insurrection he had been convicted of Judaism, and he had risked both life and limb for Judaism with the utmost zeal. ·Nicanor, by way of demonstrating the enmity he had for the Jews, sent over five hundred soldiers to arrest him,

When the troops were on the point of capturing the tower and were forcing the 41 outer door and calling for fire to set the doors alight, Razis, finding himself 1 S 31:4c completely surrounded, fell on his own sword, ·nobly resolving to die rather than 42 fall into the clutches of these villains and suffer outrages unworthy of his noble birth. ·But in the heat of conflict he missed his thrust, and while the troops swarmed 43

Nicanor's blasphemies

15 Nicanor heard that Judas and his men were in the neighbourhood of Sa- 1 maria, so he decided to attack them, at no risk to himself, on the day of rest.
Those Jews who had been compelled to follow him, said, 'Do not massacre them 2 in such a savage, barbarous way. Respect the day on which the All-seeing has conferred a special holiness.' ·At this the triple-dyed scoundrel asked if there 3 were in heaven a sovereign who had ordered the keeping of the Sabbath day.
When they answered, 'The living Lord himself, the Heavenly Sovereign, has 4 ordered the observance of the seventh day,' ·he retorted, 'And I, as sovereign on 5 earth, order you to take up arms and do the king's business.' For all that, he did not manage to carry out his wicked plan.

Judas harangues his men. His dream

While Nicanor, in his unlimited boastfulness and pride, was planning to erect a 6 general trophy [a] with the spoils taken from Judas and his men, ·Maccabaeus 7 remained firm in his confident conviction that the Lord would stand by him. ·He 8 urged his men not to be dismayed by the foreigners' attacks but, keeping in mind the help that had come to them from Heaven in the past, to be confident that this time too victory would be theirs with the help of the Almighty. ·He put fresh heart 9 into them by citing the Law and the Prophets [b] and, by stirring up memories of the battles they had already won, he filled them with new enthusiasm. ·Having thus 10 aroused their courage, he ended his exhortation by demonstrating the treachery of the foreigners and how they had violated their oaths.

Having armed each one of them not so much with the safety given by shield and 11 lance as with that confidence which springs from noble language, he encouraged them all by describing to them a convincing dream—a vision, as it were. [c] ·What he 12 3:1b had seen was this: Onias, the former high priest, that paragon of men, modest of bearing and gentle of manners, suitably eloquent and trained from boyhood in the practice of every virtue—Onias was stretching out his hands and praying for the whole Jewish community. [d] ·Next, there appeared a man equally remarkable for 13 his great age and dignity and invested with a marvellous and impressive air of majesty. ·Onias began to speak: 'This is a man', he said, 'who loves his brothers 14 and prays much for the people and the holy city—Jeremiah, the prophet of God.' [e] Jeremiah then stretched out his right hand and presented Judas with a golden 15 sword, saying as he gave it, ·'Take this holy sword as a gift from God; with it you 16 will shatter the enemy.'

The disposition of the combatants

Encouraged by the noble words of Judas, which had the power to inspire valour 17 and give the young the spirit of mature men, they decided not to entrench themselves in a camp, but bravely to take the offensive and, in hand-to-hand fighting, to commit the result to the fortune of war,[f] since the city, their holy religion and the 18 Temple were in danger. ·Their concern for their wives and children, their brothers and relatives, had shrunk to minute importance; their chief and greatest fear was 19 for the consecrated Temple. ·Those left behind in the city felt a similar anxiety, 1 M 4:36h alarmed as they were about the forthcoming encounter in the open country.

20 Everyone now awaited the coming issue. The enemy had already concentrated their forces and stood formed up in order of battle, with the elephants drawn up in 21 a strategic position and the cavalry disposed on the wings.[g] ·Maccabaeus took note of these masses confronting him, the glittering array of armour and the fierce aspect of the elephants; then, raising his hands to heaven, he called on the Lord who works miracles, in the knowledge that it is not by force of arms but as he sees 22 fit to decide, that victory is granted by him to such as deserve it. ·His prayer was 8:19 ‖1 M 7:40–42 worded thus: 'You, Master, sent your angel in the days of Hezekiah king of Judaea, 2 K 19:35 and he destroyed no less than one hundred and eighty-five thousand of Sennach- Is 37:36 23 erib's army; ·now, once again, Sovereign of heaven, send a good angel before us to 24 spread terror and dismay. ·May these men be struck down by the might of your arm, since they have come with blasphemy on their lips to attack your holy people.'
And on these words he finished.

The defeat and death of Nicanor ‖1 M 7:43–50

25, 26 Nicanor and his men advanced to the sound of trumpets and war songs, ·but the 27 men of Judas closed with the enemy uttering invocations and prayers. ·Fighting with their hands and praying to God in their hearts, they cut down at least thirty-28 five thousand men and were greatly cheered by this manifestation of God. ·When the engagement was over and they were withdrawing in triumph, they recognised Nicanor, lying dead in full armour.

29 With shouting and confusion all around, they blessed the sovereign Master in 30 their ancestral tongue. ·He who, as protagonist,[h] had devoted himself, body and soul, to his fellow-citizens, and had preserved the love he felt even in youth for those of his own race, gave orders for Nicanor's head to be cut off, with his arm up 31 to the shoulder, and taken to Jerusalem. ·When he arrived there himself, he called his countrymen together, stationed the priests in front of the altar and then sent for 32 the people from the Citadel. ·He showed them the head of the abominable Nicanor, and the hand which this infamous man had stretched out so insolently 33 against the holy House of the Almighty. ·Then, cutting out godless Nicanor's tongue, he gave orders for it to be fed piecemeal to the birds, and for the salary of 34 his folly[i] to be hung up in front of the Temple. ·At this, everyone sent blessings heavenwards to the glorious Lord, saying, 'Blessed be he who has preserved his holy place from pollution!'

35 He hung Nicanor's head from the Citadel,[j] a clear and evident sign to all of the 1 S 31:9–10
36 help of the Lord. ·They all decreed by public vote never to let that day go by

So ends the episode of Nicanor, and as, since then, the city has remained in the 37 possession of the Hebrews,[m] I shall bring my own work to an end here too. ·If it is 38 mediocre, that is all I could manage. ·Just as it is injurious to drink wine by itself, 39

the understanding of those who read the book. And here I close.

l. The Day of Mordecai eventually becomes the feast of Purim, see Est 9. But at the time of the summarist, c. 124 BC, the feasts still seem to have been distinct. The 'Scroll of Fasting' (first century AD) names Nicanor's day as one of those when people should not fast.

m. He means the religious city (Mount Zion in 1 M), since the Citadel, remaining in Syrian hands, does not concern the author. Judas' victory over Nicanor has saved the sanctuary, the threats to which have now been removed. And the author, having attained the aim which he intended, brings his work to a close.

THE WISDOM BOOKS

INTRODUCTION TO THE WISDOM BOOKS

§1 Five books of the Old Testament are called 'wisdom' books: Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes or Qoheleth, Ecclesiasticus or Ben Sira, Wisdom. With these are grouped, somewhat ineptly, the Psalms and the Song of Songs. They represent a current of thought also to be found in parts of the books of Tobit and Baruch.

Wisdom literature flourished throughout the ancient East. Egypt produced wisdom writings in every period of its history. In Mesopotamia, from the Sumerian period onwards, proverbs and fables were being composed, as well as poems on human suffering showing affinities with Job. Mesopotamian wisdom made its influence felt in Canaan: wisdom texts, written in Accadian, have been discovered at Ras Shamra. From Aramaic-speaking areas we have the Wisdom of Ahikar, Assyrian in origin and translated into several ancient languages. This 'wisdom' ignores national boundaries. It is not primarily religious in character, being concerned rather with human solutions. It treats of the meaning of life, not philosophically in the Greek manner but by appeal to experience. It offers the recipe for a successful way of life and is furthermore the sign of a good education. It teaches people how to conform to the order of the universe and should, in theory at least, confer the secret of happiness and success. The experience, however, that this does not in fact always occur lies at the root of the pessimism characterising some wisdom compositions, in Egypt as in Mesopotamia.

The Israelites were acquainted with this wisdom. The highest praise the Bible can give to Solomon is that his wisdom excelled the wisdom of the sons of the East and the wisdom of Egypt, 1 K 5:10. Arab and Edomite sages were well known, Jr 49:7; Ba 3:22–23; Ob 8. Job and the three sages who were his friends lived in Edom. The author of Tobit knew the Wisdom of Ahikar, and Pr 22:17–23:11 very faithfully follows the Egyptian maxims of Amenemophis. Several Psalms are attributed to Heman and Ethan, Canaanite sages according to 1 K 5:11. Proverbs includes the Words of Agur, Pr 30:1–14, and the Words of Lemuel, Pr 31:1–9, both from Massa, a tribe in northern Arabia, Gn 25:14.

It is not surprising that the earliest wisdom works of Israel closely resemble those of neighbouring races; they are plants of the same soil. In the older sections of Proverbs we find little else than maxims born of human wisdom. With the exception of the latest books, Ecclesiasticus and Wisdom, this group of biblical literature does not touch on the great themes of the Old Testament: Law, Covenant, Election, Salvation. The sages of Israel show no concern for the past and future fortunes of their nation: like their gentile counterparts they are absorbed in the individual and his destiny. This, however, they view in a more exalted light, that of the religion of Yahweh. Though the wisdom of Israel springs from the same root as, and thus resembles, the common wisdom of the East, it is essentially distinctive, and the effects of this become more marked as revelation progresses. The contrast once drawn between wisdom and folly now becomes an opposition between uprightness and vice, between true religion and false. Real wisdom is found in the fear of God which is the very foundation of true religion. The wisdom of the East may be called a kind of humanism; the wisdom of Israel is a religious humanism.

§2 The religious aspect of wisdom was slow to develop. The Hebrew term has a wide range of meaning, embracing manual and professional skill, political sense, discernment, astuteness, knowing how to get on, and magic arts. Human wisdom can be used for good or evil ends: hence the hostile attitude of the prophets to the sages, see Is 5:21; 29:14; Jr 8:9. And this perhaps explains why the sages began talking about divine wisdom only at a relatively late date, although the divine is the source of human wisdom and although, in Ugaritic texts, which are early, wisdom is held to be an attribute of the great god El. Not, however, until the post-exilic period do we read that God alone is wise, with a transcendental wisdom that human beings can observe at work in the creation, but which is beyond their powers to understand, Jb 28; 38–39; Si 1:1–10; 16:24seq.; 39:12seq.; 42:15–43:33. In the impressive prologue to Proverbs, Pr 1–9, divine Wisdom speaks as a person, at once present in God from eternity, and acting with him in the work of creation, see especially Pr 8:22–31. In Jb 28, Wisdom is presented as distinct from God who alone knows where she lies hidden. In Si 24 Wisdom says of herself that she has come from the mouth of the Most High, that her home is in heaven whence God sends her to Israel. In Ws 7:22–8:1, she is an outpouring of the glory of the Almighty, an image of his perfection. Thus Wisdom as a divine attribute is distinguished from him and assumes a personality of her own. Striking though these expressions may be within the context of the Old Testament faith, it does not seem that they amount to more than a literary convention. Nevertheless they remain mysterious and prepare the way for the revelation of a plurality of Persons in God. John's Logos, the Word, is at once in God and outside him, like divine Wisdom, and all these impressive texts justify the title 'Wisdom of God' accorded to Christ by Paul, 1 Co 1:24.

§3 Since the question of the individual and personal destiny was the chief preoccupation of the sages, the problem of retribution was of primary importance for them. It was in their circles and by dint of their hard thinking that this doctrine developed. In the older sections of Proverbs, wisdom (which is to say, uprightness) is sure to bring happiness, and folly (or vice) ruin. Thus God rewards the good and punishes the wicked. And such is still the position in the prologue of Proverbs, 3:33–35; 9:6 and 18. This is the doctrine, therefore, on which the teaching of wisdom is based, maintaining, as it does, that the world is ruled by a God who is just and wise. In its support it claims experience, despite the fact that experience often contradicts it. This contradiction is dramatically demonstrated in the Book of Job where the three friends defend the traditional thesis. But to the problems of the virtuous in affliction there is no intellectually satisfactory answer as long as we hold the theory of adequate retribution on earth; unquestioning faith in God is the only recourse. The Book of Ecclesiastes, however different in its approach, reaches the same conclusion; it too rejects the traditional thesis, maintaining that no human being has a right to call God to account or demand happiness as a due. Ben Sira is of the same mind; true, he writes enthusiastically of the happiness of the wise, 14:20–15:10, but he is haunted by the thought of death and he knows that everything depends on that final hour: 'Yet it is a trifle for the Lord on the day someone dies to repay him as his conduct deserves,' 11:26, see 1:13; 7:36; 28:6; 41:9. He has a presentiment of 'the four last things' but does not express it clearly. Shortly after him, Dn 12:2 makes a clear act of faith in retribution after death, which is here coupled with faith in the resurrection of the body, since the Hebrew mentality could not conceive the survival of a spirit separated from the flesh. Among the Jews of Alexandria greater progress was to be achieved by another, parallel course; once Platonic philosophy, with its doctrine of an immortal soul, has freed Hebrew thought of its limitations, the Book of Wisdom can declare that 'God made human beings to be imperishable', 2:23, and that after death the faithful soul will enjoy unending happiness with God while the wicked will receive their punishment, 3:1–12. The sages of Israel at last have the answer to their great problem.

The oldest and simplest form of wisdom literature is the mashal. And this is (in the plural) the title of the book we call 'Proverbs', though, strictly speaking, the mashal is a striking sentence that catches the imagination, a popular saying, or a maxim. The older collections in Proverbs consist only of short sentences. Later, the mashal develops into more elaborate forms, becoming parable, allegory, discourse, argument. This development, already perceptible in the short appended sections of Proverbs and still more so in the prologue, Pr 1–9, crystallises in the subsequent books; with Job or Wisdom the mashal becomes a great literary composition.

The origin of even the simplest of these literary forms is to be sought in the life of family and clan. Observations of nature and of people, accumulated over many generations, have crystallised into maxims, peasant sayings, short poems, with a moral application and inculcating rules of behaviour. And similarly with the earliest formulations of customary Law, which often have the same content and form as wisdom maxims. While the great collections of wisdom were being compiled, popular wisdom flowed on unabated; from it derive the proverbs in 1 S 24:14; 1 K 20:11, and the fables in Jg 9:8–15; 2 K 14:9, the prophets themselves too making use of popular material, Is 28:24–28; Jr 17:5–11.

These short, easily memorised sentences were intended for oral instruction. Parents taught them to their children, Pr 1:8; 4:1; 31:1; Si 3:1, and the name 'son' is retained when master teaches pupil, since the sages ran schools, Si 51:23,26; see also Pr 7:1seq.; 9:1seq. 'Wisdom' became a privilege of the educated and therefore lettered classes; sages and scribes appear side by side in Jr 8:8–9 and Si 38:24–39:11 puts the scribe above the manual worker because his profession enables him to acquire wisdom. Scribes were needed for secretarial duties at court and it was at court that the doctrines of wisdom first began to develop. All these characteristics find their precise parallel in the other centres of oriental wisdom, whether in Egypt or in Mesopotamia. One of the Solomonic collections in Proverbs was made by 'the men of Hezekiah king of Judah', Pr 25:1. But the sages were not merely collectors of old sayings, they were also authors. Two literary works, probably composed at the court of Solomon, the story of Joseph and the account of David's accession to the throne, may also be regarded as wisdom compositions.

The school of sages is therefore very different from the circles that produced the Priestly and the prophetic writings, and Jr 18:18 carefully distinguishes three classes: priests, sages, prophets. The sages had their own preoccupations: they were not particularly interested in the liturgy, nor do they seem to have been stirred by the misfortunes of their people or stimulated by the great hope that held the nation together. But from the Exile onwards, these three separate streams begin to merge. The prologue of Proverbs assumes the manner of a preaching prophet; Ben Sira, ch. 44–49, and Wisdom, ch. 10–19, dwell at some length on the history of salvation; Ben Sira shows his veneration for the priesthood, he is a devout worshipper, and finally he identifies wisdom with the Law, Si 24:23–24: here we have the alliance of scribe (or sage) with teacher of the Law that we find in gospel times.

At the beginning of this long search for wisdom stands the figure of Solomon. Here again we find oriental parallels: two Egyptian wisdom writings were thought to be the teachings given by a pharaoh to his son. From 1 K 5:9–14, see also 3:9–12, 28; 10:1–9, to Si 47:12–17, Solomon is held up to admiration as the greatest sage of Israel, and the two oldest and most important collections in Proverbs, ch. 10–22 and ch. 25–28, are attributed to him (hence the title of the book, Pr 1:1). Ecclesiastes, Wisdom and the Song were similarly attributed to him. All this teaching, gradually dispensed to the chosen people, was preparing the revelation of Wisdom incarnate: 'there is something greater than Solomon here,' Mt 12:42.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK OF JOB

§1 The Book of Job is the literary masterpiece of the wisdom movement. It opens with a prose narrative. There was once a faithful servant of God whose name was Job, a rich and happy man. God allows Satan to test him to see if he will remain faithful despite misfortune. Job loses his possessions and his children, but is resigned to God's taking back what he had given. Next, his own person is attacked, his sickness is revolting and painful, but still he is resigned; his wife advises him to curse God but he rebukes her. At this point, three of his friends, Eliphaz, Bildad and Zophar, come to offer sympathy, ch. 1–2. After this introduction the long dialogue poem begins which constitutes the body of the book. It opens with a four-cornered conversation. In three series of speeches, ch. 3–14; 15–21; 22–27, Job and his friends oppose their different conceptions of divine justice; there is no very steady development of ideas, but rather an elaboration of principles laid down at the beginning. Eliphaz speaks with the moderation of advanced age but also with the severity learned of long human experience; Zophar has the excitability of youth; Bildad is a prosy person of measured discourse. All three, however, defend the traditional thesis of retribution on earth: if Job suffers, it is because he has sinned; his own opinion may acquit him, but not God's. When Job protests his innocence they grow still more obstinate. Job confronts this theorising with his own sad experience and with the universal experience of injustice. He comes back to this repeatedly, and as repeatedly is brought up against the mystery of a God of justice who makes the virtuous suffer. Thus groping in the dark he makes no progress towards a solution. His tortured soul matches his suffering body: the body has its paroxysms and its times of ease, the soul its revolts and its surrenders. This alternating motion has two climaxes: its first in the act of faith of ch. 19, its second in the final protestation of innocence in ch. 31. A new character, Elihu, now appears: both Job and his friends are mistaken, he says, and then in a spate of words attempts to vindicate God's ways, ch. 32–37. Yahweh himself cuts him short and 'from the heart of the tempest' (the traditional setting of theophanies) gives Job his answer. Or rather there is no answer, since no human being can put in the dock a God whose wisdom and power are infinite. Thereupon Job realises the folly of his words, 38:1–42:6. The book ends with an epilogue in prose: Yahweh rebukes the three friends, rewards Job with sons and daughters and doubles his possessions, 42:7–17.

§2 The main character, Job, is a figure famous in ancient history, Ezk 14:14,20, believed to have lived in the patriarchal age on the borders of Arabia and Edom, a region which is well known for its wise men, Jr 49:7; Ba 3:22–23; Ob 8, and from which his three friends also come. Job was traditionally regarded as a model of virtue, see Ezk 14, whose loyalty to God remained unshaken despite grievous trials. Our author has used this old story as the framework of his book and, though the dialogue poem is in style and tone so different from the prose prologue and epilogue, it can at no time have existed without them.

§3 The authenticity of certain passages in the dialogue has been questioned. The poem on Wisdom, ch. 28, should not be delivered by Job, containing as it does a concept of wisdom quite different from that held either by Job or by his friends, and indeed having more affinity with Yahweh's discourse, ch. 38–39. Nevertheless, it is a product, if not of the same author, at least of the author's school of thought, and is closely associated with the theme of the book; but why it has been inserted just here, where it is alien to the context, is difficult to say. It has been argued too that the speeches of Yahweh, ch. 38–41, did not belong to the original poem. The argument is, however, based on a misunderstanding of the book's meaning. It is true that ch. 38–41 ignore all the preceding debate as well as Job's own plight, by transferring the discussion from the human plane to the divine; but it is for this very reason that these speeches of Yahweh provide what, in the author's eyes, is the only solution to the problem, namely the mysterious nature of the ways of God. Other scholars believe that two passages of this section at least are not authentic: the description of the ostrich, 39:13–18, and the long descriptions of Behemoth and Leviathan, 40:15–41:26. If the descriptions of the two exotic animals are removed, there is almost nothing of Yahweh's second discourse left: originally, perhaps there was only one discourse, later made longer and then cut in two by a first, short answer from Job, 40:3–5. Attractive as this theory is, it is impossible to prove, nor is the matter of great importance. Finally, the arrangement of ch. 24–27 is not entirely satisfactory; the carelessness of copyists, or editorial readjustments, may be the explanation here.

The arguments against the authenticity of the speeches of Elihu, ch. 32–37, are weightier. Elihu appears abruptly and unannounced and Yahweh, who speaks next, ignores him completely. This is all the more strange in that Elihu anticipates the words of Yahweh, even giving the impression that his purpose is to supplement them. Moreover, he repeats to no purpose what the three friends have already said. Lastly, the vocabulary and style are different and the Aramaisms much more numerous than elsewhere. It seems, therefore, that these chapters have been added to the book by another author, making a further contribution to the poem's religious message.

§4 The author of Job is known to us only from his work: the book shows that he was without doubt an Israelite, brought up on the works of the prophets and the teachings of the sages. His home was most probably in Palestine but he must have visited other countries, particularly Egypt, or lived in them for a time. His date is conjectural. The prose narrative smacks of patriarchal times and made early writers think that the book was, like Genesis, the work of Moses. But this argument applies only to the prose framework of the book and, even here, traditional sources or literary imitation may explain the style. The book is later than Jeremiah and Ezekiel (with which it has certain expressions and ideas in common) and its language has a strong Aramaic flavour. We are therefore in post-exilic times, when absorption in the destiny of the nation as a whole was giving way to an interest in the individual. The likeliest, though still uncertain, date is the beginning of the fifth century BC.

The writer puts the case of the good person who suffers. This is a paradox for the conservative view then prevalent that actions are rewarded or punished here on earth. This iron rule is plainly enunciated, so far as a nation as a whole is concerned, by the classic texts of Dt 28 and Lv 26; its working-out in history is demonstrated by the Books of Judges and Kings, and the same idea underlies the preaching of the prophets. With Ezekiel (ch. 18) the conception of individual responsibility finds clear expression, though it was already latent and occasionally expressed, Dt 24:16; 2 K 14:6; Jr 31:29–30. But even Ezekiel has only earthly retribution in mind and is therefore brought sharply up against harsh reality. Where a community is concerned, it may well be that the faults of the society as a society prevail, and that the good are therefore punished with the wicked. But if it is the rule that individuals are to be recompensed for their own actions, how is it that the good suffer? Yet this is the fact, and Job is an example. The reader is indeed informed in the prologue that Job's distress is not God's doing but Satan's and that it is a test of his fidelity. But Job does not know this, nor do his friends. These offer the old solutions: the happiness of the wicked is short-lived, see Ps 37 and 73; the sufferings of the good test their fortitude, see Gn 22:12, or possibly punish faults committed unwittingly or out of weakness, see Ps 19:12; 25:7. The three friends propose these explanations while they still think Job more or less innocent. But the cries that pain wrings from him and his impatience with God persuade them that his guilt goes deep: only grave sin can explain distress like this. The speeches of Elihu take up and develop these solutions: the suffering of those who are commonly judged upright is an expiation for sins of omission or of thoughtlessness, or possibly (the most original contribution of this section) a safeguard against still more serious faults and a cure for pride. But like the three friends, though not as harshly, Elihu holds that sin and suffering are connected, one with the other.

Job protests against this rigorous theory of cause and effect with the vigour of conscious innocence. He does not deny the principle of earthly recompense, indeed he lives in hope of it, and God gives it in the end (see the epilogue). But the recompense is, here and now, withheld; this is Job's problem and he seeks in vain for the meaning of it all. In his anguish he reaches out for God; God eludes him, but Job still trusts to his goodness. When God does appear it is to tell how inscrutable are his person and his designs, and Job falls to silence. This is the book's lesson: faith must remain even when understanding fails. At this stage of divine revelation, the author could go no further. More light cannot be thrown on the mystery of suffering innocence until God opens up the prospect of a future life in which recompense is made and reveals the worth of suffering when it is united with the sufferings of Christ. Two texts of Paul give Job his answer: 'All that we suffer in this life is nothing in comparison with the glory which is destined to be disclosed for us,' Rm 8:18, and: 'It makes me happy to be suffering for you now, and in my own body to do what I can to make up all that has still to be undergone by Christ for the sake of his Body, the Church,' Col 1:24.

THE BOOK OF

JOB

I: PROLOGUE [a]

Satan tests Job

1 There was once a man in the land of Uz [b] called Job: a sound and honest man who feared God and shunned evil. Ezk 14:14e
2 •Seven sons and three daughters were born
3 to him. •And he owned seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen and five hundred she-donkeys, and many servants besides. This man Gn 12:16; 13:2;26:14
4 was the most prosperous of all the Sons of the East. [c] •It was the custom of his sons to hold banquets in one another's houses in turn, and to invite their three sisters to 5 eat and drink with them. •Once each series of banquets was over, Job would send for them to come and be purified, [d] and at dawn on the following day he would 1 S 16:5
make a burnt offering for each of them. 'Perhaps', Job would say, 'my sons have sinned and in their heart blasphemed [e].' So that was what Job used to do each time.
6 One day when the sons of God [f] came to attend on Yahweh, among them came Gn 6:1a
7 Satan. [g] •So Yahweh said to Satan, 'Where have you been?' 'Prowling about on 1 K 22:19–23
8 earth,' he answered, 'roaming around there.' •So Yahweh asked him, 'Did you pay Gn 3:1
any attention to my servant Job? There is no one like him on the earth: a sound Zc 3:1–2 9 and honest man who fears God and shuns evil.' •'Yes,' Satan said, 'but Job is not Lk 22:31
10 God-fearing for nothing, is he? •Have you not put a wall round him and his house and all his domain? You have blessed all he undertakes, and his flocks throng the 11 countryside. •But stretch out your hand and lay a finger on his possessions: then, I 12 warrant you, he will curse you to your face.' •'Very well,' Yahweh said to Satan, 'all he has is in your power. But keep your hands off his person.' So Satan left the presence of Yahweh.
13 On the day when Job's sons and daughters were eating and drinking in their 14 eldest brother's house, •a messenger came to Job. 'Your oxen', he said, 'were at 1 a. In this prose narrative the author has preserved the flavour of a folk tale.

b. Probably in the south of Edom, see Gn 36:28; Lm 4:21.

c. The phrase is used of all who lived east of Palestine, more particularly in Edomite or Arab territory, see Nb 24:21k.

d. lit. 'sanctified'; i.e. conducted purificatory rites to remove pollution, which would have made them unfit to take part in religious activities, see Lv 11:1a.

e. Hebr. 'blessed'. So also in 1:11 and 2:5,9. The original word 'curse, blaspheme' has been replaced in Hebr. by a euphemism that avoids a pejorative term applied to a divine name.

f. As kings do, God also holds receptions and audiences on certain days. • On the 'sons of God', see 38:7; Gn 6:1–4; Ps 29:1; 82:6; 89:6. These are superhuman creatures who make up God's court and council. They are identified with the angels (LXX translates 'the angels of God', see Tb 5:4b).

g. lit. 'the Satan'. When preceded by the article, as in Zc 3:1–2, the term is still not a proper name, it becomes so only in 1 Ch 21:1. According to Hebrew etymology, it means 'the adversary', see 2 S 19:23; 1 K 5:18; 11:14,23,25, or 'the accuser', Ps 109:6, but here a kind of supernatural spy. The Satan is an equivocal figure, distinct from the sons of God, sceptical as regards human beings, anxious to find fault in them, capable of unleashing all sorts of disaster on them and even of impelling them into sin, see also 1 Ch 21:1. If he is not deliberately hostile to God, he is nonetheless sceptical about God's success in creating humanity. Behind the cynicism and cold, malicious sarcasm, lurks a pessimistic being, whose hostility to human beings is based on envy. The text, however, does not elaborate on the reasons for his attitude. The foregoing characteristics relate the Satan to other sketches or portraits of the spirit of evil, particularly to that of the serpent, Gn 3, from which he will ultimately become indistinguishable, see Ws 2:24; Rv 12:9; 20:2, as the incarnation of diabolic power, see Lk 10:18.

1 K 10:1a the plough, with the donkeys grazing at their side, ·when the Sabaeans[h] swept 15 down on them and carried them off, and put the servants to the sword: I alone have escaped to tell you.' ·He had not finished speaking when another messenger 16 20:26h arrived. 'The fire of God',[i] he said, 'has fallen from heaven and burnt the sheep and shepherds to ashes: I alone have escaped to tell you.' ·He had not finished 17 speaking when another messenger arrived. 'The Chaldaeans,' he said, 'three bands of them, have raided the camels and made off with them, and put the servants to the sword: I alone have escaped to tell you.' ·He had not finished speaking when 18 another messenger arrived. 'Your sons and daughters', he said, 'were eating and drinking at their eldest brother's house, ·when suddenly from the desert a gale 19 sprang up, and it battered all four corners of the house which fell in on the young people. They are dead: I alone have escaped to tell you.'

Then Job stood up, tore his robe and shaved his head.[j] Then, falling to the 20 ground, he prostrated himself ·and said: 21

Gn 2:7;3:19
Ps 139:15
Qo 5:14,18
Si 11:14;40:1
1 Tm 6:7

Naked I came from my mother's womb, naked I shall return again.[k]
Yahweh gave, Yahweh has taken back.
Blessed be the name of Yahweh!

In all this misfortune Job committed no sin, and he did not reproach God. 22

1:6g 2 Another day, the sons of God came to attend on Yahweh and Satan came with 1 them too.[a] ·So Yahweh said to Satan, 'Where have you been?' 'Prowling about 2 on earth,' he answered, 'roaming around there.' ·So Yahweh asked him, 'Did you 3 pay any attention to my servant Job? There is no one like him on the earth: a sound and honest man who fears God and shuns evil. He persists in his integrity still; you achieved nothing by provoking me to ruin him.' ·'Skin after skin![b] Satan replied. 4
'Someone will give away all he has to save his life. ·But stretch out your hand and 5 lay a finger on his bone and flesh; I warrant you, he will curse you to your face.'
'Very well,' Yahweh said to Satan, 'he is in your power. But spare his life.' 6
So Satan left the presence of Yahweh. 7

He struck Job down with malignant ulcers[c] from the sole of his foot to the top of his head. ·Job took a piece of pot to scrape himself, and went and sat among the 8 2 K 6:33 ashes. ·Then his wife said to him, 'Why persist in this integrity of yours? Curse 9
Tb 2:14+ God and die.' ·'That is how a fool of a woman talks,' Job replied. 'If we take 10 happiness from God's hand, must we not take sorrow too?' And in all this misfortune Job uttered no sinful word.

The news of all the disasters that had fallen on Job came to the ears of three of 11 his friends. Each of them set out from home—Eliphaz of Teman, Bildad of Shuah and Zophar of Naamath[d]—and by common consent they decided to go and offer him sympathy and consolation. ·Looking at him from a distance, they could not 12 Is 52:14 recognise him; they wept aloud and tore their robes and threw dust over their heads.[e] ·They sat there on the ground beside him for seven days and seven nights. 13
To Job they spoke never a word, for they saw how much he was suffering.

II: THE DIALOGUE

A: FIRST CYCLE OF DISCOURSES

Job curses the day of his birth

Jr 20:14–18 3 In the end it was Job who broke the silence and cursed the day of his birth. 1
This is what he said: 2

Si 23:14
Mt 26:24

Perish the day on which I was born 3
and the night that told of a boy conceived.[a]

May that day be darkness,
may God on high have no thought for it,
may no light shine on it.
May murk and shadow dark as death claim it for their own,
clouds hang over it,
eclipse swoop down on it. [b]
See! Let obscurity seize on it, from the days of the year let it be excluded, [c]
into the reckoning of the months not find its way.
And may that night be sterile,
devoid of any cries of joy!
Let it be cursed by those who curse certain days [d]
and are ready to rouse Leviathan. [e]
Dark be the stars of its morning, 10:21–22, 22i Is 9:1
let it wait in vain for light
and never see the opening eyes of dawn.
Since it would not shut the doors of the womb on me
to hide sorrow from my eyes.

Why was I not still-born, 10:18–19 Qo 6:3
or why did I not perish as I left the womb?
Why were there knees to receive me,
breasts for me to suck?
Now I should be lying in peace,
wrapped in a restful slumber,
with the kings and high viziers of earth Is 14:9–11 Ezk 32:18–32
who have built their dwellings in desolate places, [f] or with princes who have quantities of gold and silver cramming their tombs; [g] or, put away like an abortive child, I should not have existed, Qo 6:3
like little ones that never see the light.

h. Sabaeans and Chaldaeans (v. 17) here mean predatory nomads.

i. The thunderbolt, see 2 K 1:10,12,14.

j. This double gesture, expressive of sorrow or mourning, is often mentioned in the Bible, see, in the first case, Gn 37:34; Jos 7:6; 2 S 1:11; 3:31; etc.; in the second, Ezr 9:3; Jr 7:29; 48:37; Ezk 7:18.

k. Apparently likening mother earth to the womb.

2 a. Hebr. adds 'to attend on Yahweh', not found in 1:6 and omitted by Gk.

b. A proverbial expression, doubtless in popular use, the meaning of which can be deduced from the sentence following. Playing on the word 'skin', which can either mean clothes made of skins (Gn 3:21; 27:16) or leather, it seems to mean that someone will let himself be progressively stripped of everything he wears or possesses, rather than lose his own skin. Once his personal, physical being is affected, he then shows the real person he is. Other explanations have also been suggested, on the basis of the translation 'skin for skin'.

c. The word, properly meaning 'inflammation', is used elsewhere to designate the sixth plague of Egypt, Ex 9:9–11, an endemic disease in Egypt, Dt 28:27, the illness of Hezekiah, 2 K 20:7, or possibly refers to some virulent skin-disease, Lv 13:18–20,23. Here it means a pernicious condition affecting the whole body, as in Dt 28:35, but it is not susceptible of precise diagnosis.

d. The three towns are situated in Idumaean and Arab territory. Edom and 'the East', see 1:3c, were regarded by the Israelites as the homeland of the sages 1 K 5:10–11; 10:1–3; Pr 30:1; 31:1; Jr 49:7; Ba 3:22–23; Ob 8–9; Mt 2:1.

e. Penitential gesture and common sign of mourning, see Jos 7:6; 2 S 13:19; Ezk 27:30. The three friends consider Job as good as dead. The text adds 'towards heaven', a gloss omitted by the Gk, possibly inspired by Ex 9:8,10, which would turn the action into a gesture of indignation calling heaven to witness, either to invoke its vengeance or to avert such vengeance from themselves, see Ac 22:23.

3 a. Two parallel curses: one of the day of birth, the other of the night of conception.

b. 'deep shadow' tzalmut conj.; Hebr. tzalmawet 'shadow of death'. • 'eclipse' kamrir yom conj.; Hebr. kimerire yom 'like bitternesses of the day'.

c. 'Yes' taken from v. 7, and suppress 'that night' due to contamination by same v. • 'be excluded' Syr.; 'not rejoice' Hebr.

d. Either the enemies of light, those who work in the dark, see 24:13seq.; 38:15; or those who, like Job, curse the day they were born; or, more probably, sorcerers or magicians whose curses and spells were believed capable of making lucky days unlucky or even of producing eclipses, when 'Leviathan' temporarily swallowed the sun.

e. Leviathan (also called the Dragon or Fleeing Serpent), see 40:25j; Ps 74:14; 104:26; Is 27:1; 51:9; Am 9:3, was a monster of primeval chaos, see 7:12f; there was a common superstitious fear that a powerful curse against the present order might stir him to action. The Dragon of Rv 12:3, who embodies Evil's hostility to God, has certain characteristics in common with this serpent of chaos.

f. lit. 'who build ruins for themselves'. In the light of Is 58:12 and 61:4, the expression could mean 'rebuild ruins': the Babylonian and Assyrian kings often used to boast of having done so. But the pronoun 'for themselves' rather suggests funerary dwellings, built in advance in waste or lonely places, as was customary in Egypt. It may be that the Hebrew word for 'ruins' was commonly used for the Egyptian mastabas and pyramids.

g. lit. 'their houses', i.e. their 'houses of eternity', see Qo 12:5, or funerary dwellings, see also Ps 49:11. Archaeological excavation, notably at Ur and in Egypt, has revealed immense wealth stored away in the tombs of royal and princely families.

Down there,[h] the wicked bustle no more, 17
there the weary rest.
Prisoners, all left in peace, 18
hear no more the shouts of the oppressor.
High and low are there together, 19
and the slave is free of his master.
Why give light to a man of grief? 20
Why give life to those bitter of heart,
↗Rv 9:6 who long for a death that never comes, 21
and hunt for it more than for buried treasure?
They would be glad to see the grave-mound[i] 22
and shout with joy if they reached the tomb.
19:8 Why give light to one who does not see his way, 23
Pr 4:18–19
Is 26:7 whom God shuts in all alone?

Ps 42:3 My only food is sighs, 24
and my groans pour out like water.
Pr 10:24 Whatever I fear comes true, 25
whatever I dread befalls me.
For me, there is no calm, no peace; 26
my torments banish rest.

Confidence in God[a]

4 Eliphaz of Teman spoke next. He said: 1

If we say something to you,[b] will you bear with us? 2
Who in any case could refrain from speaking now?
You have schooled many others, 3
giving strength to feeble hands;
your words supported any who wavered 4
and strengthened every failing knee.
Pr 24:10 And now your turn has come, and you lose patience, 5 at the first touch on yourself you are overwhelmed!
Does not your piety give you confidence, 6
and your integrity of life give you hope?
Ps 37:25 Can you recall anyone guiltless that perished? 7
Pr 12:21;22:8
Si 2:10; 7:3 Where then have the honest been wiped out?
2 P 2:9
Ho 10:13 I speak from experience: those who plough iniquity 8
Ga 6:7,8 and sow disaster, reap just that.
Under the breath of God, they perish: 9
Ps 18:15 a blast of his anger, and they are destroyed;
2 Th 2:8
Ps 17:12; the lion's roars, his savage growls, 10
22:14;22
Pr 28:15 like the fangs of a lion cub, are broken off.
The lion dies for lack of prey 11
and the lioness's whelps are dispersed.
I have received a secret revelation,[c] 12
a whisper has come to my ears;
by night when dreams confuse the mind 13
and slumber lies heavy on everyone,
a shiver of horror ran through me 14
and filled all my bones with fright.
A breath slid over my face, 15
the hairs of my body bristled.
Someone stood there—I did not know his face, 16
but the form stayed there before my eyes.
1 K 19:12–13 Silence—then I heard a voice,

17 'Can a mortal seem upright to God, would anybody seem pure in the presence of his Maker? 14:4c; 15:14; 25:4–6 Ps 143:2 18 God cannot rely even on his own servants, 15:15–16
even with his angels [d] he finds fault.
19 What then of those who live in houses of clay, 2 Co 4:7;5:1
who are founded on dust?
20 They are crushed as easily as a moth,
between morning and evening they are ground to powder.
They vanish for ever, with no one to bring them back. [e] 21 Their tent-peg is snatched from them, and they die devoid of wisdom.' [f]

1 5 Make your appeal then. Will you find an answer?
To which of the holy ones [a] will you turn?
2 Resentment kills the senseless,
and anger brings death to the fool.
3 I have seen the senseless taking root,
when a curse fell suddenly on his house. [b] 4 His children are deprived of prop and stay, ruined at the gate, [c] and no one to defend them; Ps 127:5 Pr 22:22e 5 their harvest goes to feed the hungry,
God snatches it from their mouths, [d]
and covetous people thirst for their possessions.
6 No, misery does not grow out of the soil,
nor sorrow spring from the ground.
7 It is people who breed trouble for themselves 15:35 Gn 3:17–19
as surely as eagles fly to the height. [e] 8 If I were you, I should appeal to God and lay my case before him. [f] 9 His works are great, past all reckoning, =9:10 Si 43:32 marvels beyond all counting.
10 He sends down rain to the earth, Ps 65:9,10
pours down water on the fields.

h. In Sheol, see Nb 16:33f.

i. 'to see the grave-mound' gal or golel conj.; Hebr. gil '(to the point) of jubilation'.

4 a. Eliphaz replies with a fairly harsh exposition of the traditional doctrine of retribution, basically speaking, an affirmation of faith in the providential justice of the God of the covenant. Though dubious of its universal efficacy, the poet restates it with great vigour.

b. 'If we say something to you', Aq. Sym. Theod.; 'Has anyone tried' Hebr.

c. lit. 'A word came stealthily to me', i.e. a word from heaven, spoken by a mysterious person, see v. 16, and heard during heavy sleep (the same word in Gn 2:21; 15:12), provoking a shudder of awe. This mode of supernatural knowledge contrasts with the rational nature of the teaching of the sages and indicates further development of this, at least in certain circles. But the revelation claimed by Eliphaz is not of quite the same type as the usual experiences of the prophets, who commonly received the Word when awake, nor of Ben Sira in later times, 39:1–15, but is more closely related to dreams and nocturnal visions, see Zc 1:8, of terrifying content, deliberately emphasised by the apocalyptic style of writing, see Dn 4:2; 5:5–6.

d. 'Servants of God' and angels are the same thing. If these beings, who are near God, still have a radical weakness, how much the more so, carnal and perishable human beings.

e. 'no one to bring them back' meshib conj.; Hebr. meshim 'no one to bother' (?).

f. 'tent-peg' yetedam conj.; Hebr. yitram 'cord'. • 'devoid of wisdom', lit. 'and not with wisdom'; or possibly 'for lack of wisdom' or 'and it is not Wisdom's fault'. But the immediate context, insisting on human frailty in general and the brevity of life, suggests that human beings have not found, or cannot find, time (see Ps 90:12) to acquire wisdom, or that what little they have acquired is powerless against death.

5 a. The angels, see 15:15 (in the light of 4:18); Dn 4:10,14,20; 8:13; Zc 14:5. Their intercession is mentioned again in 33:23–24, see Tb 12:12; Zc 1:12. Eliphaz's question is ironical: if the angels themselves are judged by God, it is useless to count on them for help against God. But the question presupposes the custom of having recourse to this sort of intercession, a custom perhaps with its roots far back in polytheism: the god of an individual intervened in the assembly of the gods to defend his client.

b. 'a curse fell' following Gk and Syr.; 'I cursed' Hebr. The text of vv. 3–4 is uncertain and the translation conj.

c. The main gate of the town, common meeting place where justice was dispensed.

d. 'from their mouths' (lit. 'from their teeth') mish-shinim conj.; Hebr. mitztzinim ('out of the thorns').

e. 'who breeds' yolid conj.; Hebr. yullad 'who is born'. • 'eagles' according to the versions, which read nesher; Hebr. reads 'sons of Resheph' which perhaps means the same thing. Resheph, the god of thunder and lightning, may have had the eagle as his symbol.

f. After Eliphaz's ironical question in v. 1 (see explanatory note a above), the Temanite now apparently draws a distinction between those who have recourse to angels, and those who, like himself, are not afraid to address God directly. On this score, he invites Job to correct his attitude towards God and to behave with greater loyalty to his Creator.

1 S 2:7–8
Ps 75:7–8
If his will is to raise up the downcast, 11
or exalt the afflicted to the heights of prosperity, 12:23–25
he frustrates the plans of the artful 12
so that they cannot succeed in their intrigues.
↗1 Co 3:19
He traps the crafty in the snare of their own trickery, 13 throws the plans of the cunning into disarray.
Dt 28:29
Jn 12:35
In daylight they come up against darkness, 14
and grope their way as if noon were night.
He rescues the bankrupt[g] from their jaws, 15
and the needy from the grasp of the mighty.
Hope springs afresh for the weak, 16
Ps 107:41–42
and wickedness must shut its mouth.

Gn 17:1b
Pr 3:11–12+
Blessed are those whom God corrects! 17

Is 5:2; 11:6–8
Ho 2:20
You will have a pact with the stones of the field,[m] 23
and live in amity with wild beasts.
You will know that your tent is secure, 24
and your sheepfold unharmed when you inspect it.
Dt 28:4,11
You will see your descendants multiply, 25
your offspring grow like the grass in the fields.
At a ripe age you will go to the grave, 26
like a wheatsheaf stacked in due season.
All this we have observed and it is so! 27
Heed it, you will be the wiser for it!

Only the sufferer knows his own grief

6 Job spoke next. He said: 1

If only my misery could be weighed, 2
and all my ills be put together on the scales!
But they outweigh the sands of the seas: 3
what wonder then if my words are wild?
7:20; 16:13
Ps 38:2
The arrows of Shaddai stick fast in me, 4
Ps 88:16
my spirit absorbs their poison,
God's terrors stand paraded against me.
Does a wild donkey bray when it has grass, 5
or an ox low when its fodder is within reach?
Is not food insipid, eaten without salt, 6
is there any taste in egg-white?[a]
But the very things my appetite revolts at 7
are now my diet in sickness.[b]
Will no one hear my prayer, 8
will not God himself grant my hope?
7:15
Nb 11:15
1 K 19:4
May it please God to crush me, 9
to give his hand free play and do away with me!

10 This thought, at least, would give me comfort
(a thrill of joy in unrelenting pain), that I never rebelled against the Holy One's decrees. [c] Lv 17:1a Is 6:3g 11 But have I the strength to go on waiting?
And why be patient, when doomed to such an end?
12 Is mine the strength of stone,
is my flesh made of bronze?
13 Can I support myself on nothing?
Has not all help [d] deserted me?
14 Refuse [e] faithful love to your neighbour 29:12–13; 31:16–20
and you forsake the fear of Shaddai. [f] 1 Jn 3:17

15 Like the torrent, my brothers have proved deceptive, Jr 15:18
as fleeting torrents they flow:
16 the ice makes their waters turgid when, above them, the snow melts, [g] 17 but, come the burning summer, they run dry,
they vanish in the heat of the sun.
18 Caravans leave the trail to find them, go deep into wastelands, and are lost.
19 The caravans of Tema look to them, Is 21:14+ 1 K 10:1a and on them Sheba's convoys build their hopes.
20 Their trust brings only embarrassment,
they reach them only to be thwarted. [h]

21 And this is how you now treat me, [i] terrified at the sight of me, you take fright.
22 Have I said to you, 'Give me something, Jr 15:10
make some present for me at your own cost, 23 snatch me from the grasp of an oppressor,
ransom me from the grip of a violent man'?
24 Put me right, and I shall say no more;
show me where I have been at fault. [j] 25 Fair comment can be borne without resentment, but what are your strictures aimed at?
26 Do you think mere words deserve censure,
desperate speech that the wind blows away?
27 Soon you will be haggling over the price of an orphan,
and selling your friend at bargain price!
28 Come, I beg you, look at me:
man to man, I shall not lie.
29 Relent then, no harm is done;
relent then, since I am upright.

g. 'bankrupt', lit. 'despoiled' moharab conj.; Hebr. mehereb 'from the sword'.

h. Job's misfortunes are therefore disciplinary, a painful but salutary lesson. Elihu says the same, 33:19seq.

i. Name for God in the patriarchal period, see Gn 17:1b; a deliberate archaism in Jb.

J. Eliphaz uses the style of the 'numerical proverbs', see Pr 6:16–19; 30:15seq.

k. 'despoiler' conj.; 'spoliation' Hebr.

l. 'drought and frost' lesharab ulekephor conj.; Hebr. leshod ulekaphan 'pillage and famine', but these two scourges have been mentioned already.

m. In Palestine the soil must be cleared of these, see 2 K 3:19,25; Is 5:2.

6 a. 'egg-white' following Targ.; others conjecture a plant: purslain- or mallow-juice.

b. This very difficult v. is translated according to the Vulg. (which joins the two lines into a single sentence). • 'in sickness', lit. 'in my illness' conj.; 'like an illness' Hebr. Job's repugnance for his wretched food (both real and symbolic) signifies his disgust with life itself. To his well-nourished friends this is incomprehensible.

c. By rebellion against Providence. 'The Holy One' here means Yahweh, see Is 6:3g; Hab 3:3.

d. 'help' Gk, Syr.; 'sagacity' Hebr.

e. 'refuse' Hebr. MSS; 'dissolve' MT.

f. Kindness to others is a sign of true religion.

g. Difficult text: lit. 'blackened (or: troubled) because of the ice, on them the snow disappears'.

h. 'Their trust', lit. 'They have hoped', Syr. Targ.; 'He has hoped' Hebr. • 'them' conj.; 'her' Hebr.

i. 'This is how' ken conj.; Hebr. ki 'For'. • 'me' li conj.; Hebr. lo' 'not'.

j. Sinning either inadvertently or through ignorance, see Lv 4; Nb 15:22–29; Ps 19:11.

Is evil to be found on my lips?
Can I not recognise misfortune when I taste it?

14:14 Si 40:1seq. 7 Is not human life on earth just conscript service? [a] 1
Do we not live a hireling's life? [b]
Like a slave, sighing for the shade, 2 or a hireling with no thought but for his wages, Qo 2:25 Si 30:17 I have months of futility assigned to me, 3 nights of suffering to be my lot.
Dt 28:67 Lying in bed I wonder, 'When will it be day?' 4
No sooner up than, 'When will evening come?' [c]
And crazy thoughts obsess me till twilight falls.
Vermin and loathsome scabs cover my body; 5
my skin is cracked and oozes pus.
Is 38:12 Swifter than a weaver's shuttle my days have passed, 6
and vanished, leaving no hope behind.
Ps 78:39; 89:47 Remember that my life is but a breath, 7
and that my eyes will never again see joy. [d]
The eye that once saw me will look on me no more, 8
your eyes will turn my way, and I shall not be there.
Ws 2:1,4 A cloud dissolves and is gone, 9
so no one who goes down to Sheol ever comes up again, [e] ever comes home again, 10
and his house knows that person no more.
That is why I cannot keep quiet: 11
in my anguish of spirit I shall speak,
in my bitterness of soul I shall complain.
3:8e; 9:13; 26:12 Am I the Sea, or some sea monster, [f] 12 that you should keep me under guard?
If I say, 'My bed will comfort me, 13
my couch will lighten my complaints,' you then frighten me with dreams 14
and terrify me with visions, 6:9 so that strangling [g] would seem welcome in comparison, 15
yes, death preferable to what I suffer. [h]
I am wasting away, my life is not unending; 16
Ps 144:4 leave me then, for my days are but a breath.
Ps 8:4;144:3 What are human beings that you should take them so seriously, 17
subjecting them to your scrutiny, [i] Ps 139 that morning after morning you should examine them 18 and at every instant test them?
Will you never take your eyes off me 19
long enough for me to swallow my spittle?
Suppose I have sinned, what have I done to you, [j] 20
you tireless watcher of humanity?
Why do you choose me as your target?
Why should I be a burden to you? [k]
Can you not tolerate my sin, 21
not overlook my fault?
For soon I shall be lying in the dust,
you will look for me and I shall be no more. [l]

The unswerving course of God's justice

8 Bildad of Shuah spoke next. He said: 1

How much longer are you going to talk like this 2
and go blustering on in this way?

3 Can God deflect the course of right — 34:10–12 or Shaddai falsify justice? [a] — Dt 32:4 4 If your sons sinned against him, — 1:19
he has punished them for their wrong-doing.
6a You for your part, if you are pure and honest,
5 must now seek God, plead with Shaddai. [b] 6b Forthwith his light will shine on you [c] and he will restore an upright man's house to prosperity.
7 Your former state will seem as nothing to you,
so great will your future be.

8 Question the generation that has passed, — Dt 4:32; 32:7
meditate [d] on the experience of its ancestors— — Si 8:9 9 for we children of yesterday, we know nothing, our life on earth passes like a shadow— — 14:2
Ws 2:5
10 but they will teach you, they will tell you,
and their thought is expressed in these sayings, [e]
11 'Can papyrus flourish except in marshes?
Without water can the rushes grow?
12 Even when green and before being cut,
fastest of all plants they wither.
13 Such is the fate [f] of all who forget God; — Ps 37:1–2
so perishes the hope of the godless. — Pr 10:28 14 His hope is nothing but gossamer, his confidence a spider's web. — 27:18 15 Let him lean on his house; it will not stand firm;
cling to it, it will not hold. — Mt 7:26–27 16 Like some lush plant in the sunlight,
he sent his young shoots sprouting over the garden;
17 but his roots were twined in a heap of stones,
he drew his life among the rocks. [g] 18 Snatch him from his bed,
and it denies it ever saw him.
19 Now he rots [h] on the roadside,
and others are springing up in the soil.
20 Believe me, God neither spurns anyone of integrity, nor lends his aid to the evil.

7 a. In the sense of military service, see 14:14, which involves both fighting and forced labour. Greek translates 'trial'; Vulg. militia, warfare or war service.

b. The hired labourer, paid by the day, Dt 24:15; Mt 20:8, works for another from morning to night, as the slave does, Lv 25:39–40.

c. 'day' Gk; omitted by Hebr. • 'when will evening come?' mi yitten 'ereb conj.; Hebr. middad unintelligible.

d. Accepting the human lot of suffering and death, Job breaks momentarily into prayer asking God for a few moments of peace before he dies.

e. The author expresses the current view here and in 10:21; 14:7–22; 16:22; see 2 S 12:23; Ps 88:10; etc., that return from Sheol is impossible, see Nb 16:33f.

f. In the Babylonian cosmogonies Tiamath (the Sea) co-operated in the birth of the gods and was then conquered and subdued by one of their number. The imagination of the people, or of poets, seized on this story: Yahweh became the conqueror who then set Chaos in order and ever after held the Sea and its monsters in control, see 3:8e; 9:13; 26:12; 40:25seq.; Ps 65:7; 74:13–14; 77:16; 89:9–10; 93:3–4; 104:7,26; 107:29; 148:7; Is 27:1; 51:9.

g. Unlike the figure in an ancient Egyptian text who is 'tired of life', Job does not contemplate suicide. Suicide occurs very rarely in the OT, see 2 S 17:23e.

h. 'what I suffer' 'atztzebotay, conj.; Hebr. 'atzemotay 'my bones'.

i. Bitterly ironical, the author seems to echo phrases from Ps 8. God's 'care' for human beings here becomes relentless scrutiny. The author of Ps 139 finds in this a cause for trust, but Job sees hostility in it. Reacting against a legalistic view of religion and of sin, he is groping his way towards a God of mercy, v. 21.

j. Sin cannot harm God.

k. 'to you' Gk; 'to myself' Hebr.

l. These last unexpected words re-introduce the idea of God mysteriously interested in human beings.

8 a. 'falsify' Gk; Hebr. repeats 'deflect'.

b. Verse corrected; Hebr. 'If you seek God and plead with Shaddai'.

c. 'his light will shine' yair conj.; Hebr. ya'ir 'he will wake up'.

d. 'meditate' bonen conj.; Hebr. konen 'made firm by'.

e. Ancestral tradition is the foundation of the wisdom teaching, and maintains that the punishment of the wicked is as certain and observable as the laws of nature, vv. 11seq.

f. 'fate' Gk; 'paths' Hebr.

g. 'he drew his life' Gk; 'he saw' Hebr. • 'among' ben conj.; Hebr. bet 'house'.

h. Translation conj.

Once again [i] laughter may fill your mouth 21
and cries of joy break from your lips.
Ps 6:10 Pr 14:11 Your enemies will be covered with shame 22 and the tent of the wicked will vanish!'

God's justice is above all law

9 Job spoke next. He said: 1

Indeed, I know it is as you say: 2
38–42 Ps 143:2 how could anyone claim to be upright before God?
Anyone trying to argue matters with him, 3
could not give him one answer in a thousand.
Among the wisest and the hardiest, 4
who then can successfully defy him?
Is 13:10,13 Jl 2:10;4: 15–16 He moves the mountains, though they do not know it; 5
he throws them down when he is angry.
He shakes the earth, and moves it from its place, 6
Heb 12:26 making all its pillars tremble. [a]
Ps 19:4–6 The sun, at his command, forbears to rise, 7
Ba 3:34–35 and on the stars he sets a seal. [b]
Ps 104:2 Is 40:22;42:5 He and no other has stretched out the heavens 8
and trampled on the back of the Sea. [c] 38:31–32 Am 5:8 He has made the Bear and Orion, 9
the Pleiades and the Mansions of the South. [d] =5:9 The works he does are great and unfathomable, 10
and his marvels cannot be counted.
23:8–9 If he passes me, I do not see him; 11
he slips by, imperceptible to me.
Ws 12:12 If he snatches his prey, who is going to stop him 12 or dare to ask, 'What are you doing?'
God does not renounce his anger: 13
Ps 89:10 beneath him, Rahab's minions still lie prostrate. [e]

9:32;13:13seq., 18seq.;23:1–7 And here am I, proposing to defend myself [f] 14
and select my arguments against him! [g]
Even if I am upright, what point is there in answering him? 15
I can only plead for mercy with my judge!
Rm 9:20–21 And if he deigned to answer my citation, 16
I cannot believe he would listen to what I said,
he who crushes me for one hair, [h] 17 7:19 who, for no reason, wounds and wounds again, not even letting me regain my breath, 18
with so much bitterness he fills me!
Shall I try force? Look how strong he is! 19
Or go to court? But who will summon him? [i]
If I prove myself upright, his mouth [j] may condemn me, 20
even if I am innocent, he may pronounce me perverse.
But am I innocent? I am no longer sure, 21
and life itself I despise!
It is all one, and hence I boldly say: 22
Qo 9:2–3 he destroys innocent and guilty alike.
When a sudden deadly scourge descends, 23
he laughs at the plight of the innocent.
When a country falls into the power of the wicked, 24
he veils the faces of its judges.
12:9 Or if not he, who else? [k]

My days pass: more swiftly than a runner
they flee away with never a glimpse of happiness,
they skim past like a reed canoe,
like an eagle swooping on its prey.
If I decide to stifle my complaining,
change countenance, and wear a smiling face,
fear seizes me at the thought of all my woes,
for I know you do not regard me as innocent. [l]
And if I have done wrong,
why should I put myself to useless trouble?
If I wash myself in melted snow, Is 1:18 Ps 51:7 Jr 2:22
clean my hands with soda, [m]
you will only plunge me into the dung, [n]
till my clothes themselves recoil from me!
For he is not human like me: impossible for me to answer him or appear alongside him in court. Qo 6:10
There is no arbiter between us,
to lay his hand on both,
to stay his rod from me,
or keep away his daunting terrors. 13:21
Nonetheless, unafraid of him, I shall speak:
since I do not see myself like that at all! [o]

10 Since I have lost all taste for life, 7:11,15
I shall give free rein to my complaining;
I shall let my embittered soul speak out.
I shall say to God, 'Do not condemn me,
tell me what your case is against me.
Is it right for you to attack me,
in contempt for what you yourself have made,
thus abetting the schemes of the wicked?
Are your eyes mere human eyes, 1 S 16:7 Jr 11:20+
do you see as human beings see?
Are you mortal like human beings?
do your years pass as human days pass? [a]

i. 'Once again' 'od conj.; Hebr. 'ad 'until'.

9 a. The earth rests on 'pillars' which God 'shakes' in time of earthquake, 38:6; 1 S 2:8; Ps 75:3; 104:5. vv. 5–7 recall current eschatological imagery, see Am 8:9h.

b. To prevent them from appearing and shining. Ba 3:34 speaks of the opposite process.

c. From actual physical phenomena, the author reverts to the origins of creation, when God 'trampled on the Sea's back', i.e. imposed his authority on it, mastering it at the beginning of the world; the same expression is used in Dt 33:29. On the personification of the sea, see 7:12f.

d. Gk 'the Pleiades, Venus, Arcturus and the Mansions of the South'. That these are the constellations referred to is not certain.

e. Rahab, a monster of Chaos, doubling with Leviathan or Tannin, is the mythical personification of the primal waters, the Sea (Tiamath). To emphasise the creative mastery of Yahweh, the popular and the poetic imagination alike celebrated him as the conqueror or splitter of Rahab, see 7:12f; 26:12+; Ps 89:10; Is 51:9. In a historical context, Rahab personifies the Red Sea, and then Egypt, see Ps 87:4; Is 30:7.

f. lit. 'answer him'. The verb frequently has a forensic sense: to speak as a witness, or to plead one's own cause.

g. God being at once judge and interested party, Job cannot conduct the case by human rules of procedure. (The longing for self-justification by form of law recurs in other passages of the dialogue.) Job ends by doubting his own innocence, vv. 20–21. He fastens on the apparent caprice, v. 24, rather than the infinite wisdom (defended by Zophar, ch. 11) of the judgements of God.

h. 'for one hair' Syr., Targ.; 'in a tempest' Hebr.

i. 'Look how strong he is.' lit. 'He is the strong one', Targ.; 'The strong one, behold' Hebr. • 'will summon him' Gk, Syr.; 'will summon me' Hebr.

j. 'his mouth' conj.; 'my mouth' Hebr.

k. With implicit faith in an all-embracing Providence, Job does not hesitate to credit God with responsibility for all these outrages.

l. Eliphaz and Bildad have counselled meekness, 5:17; 8:5–6, but Job knows that such an assumed attitude can change neither his real one nor God's attitude to him.

m. Only God can wash sin away; the sinner himself, though powerless, finds relief in an appeal to God's mercy, as in Ps 51. Job, with no sin on his conscience, feels powerless too but cannot share the relief.

n. 'into the dung' Gk; 'into the pit' Hebr.

o. Job will not acknowledge guilt which he does not feel.

10 a. God knows the heart and does not need to sound Job's innocence by torture, v. 4, see vv. 6–7[a]. God, the master of time, has no need of immediate vengeance and can afford to be patient, v. 5, see v. 7[b].

You, who enquire into my faults 6
and investigate my sins,
you know very well that I am innocent, 7
Dt 32:39 Ws 16:15 and that no one can rescue me from your grasp.
Gn 2:7 Your hands having shaped and created me, 8
now you change your mind [b] and mean to destroy me!
33:6 Having made me, remember, as though of clay, 9
now you mean to turn me back into dust!
Ps 139:13,15 Ws 7:2 Did you not pour me out like milk, 10
and then let me thicken like curds, [c] clothe me with skin and flesh, 11
and weave me of bone and sinew?
Gn 2:7 In your love you gave me life, 12
and in your care watched over my every breath.
Yet, all the while, you had a secret plan: [d] 13
I know that you were biding your time to see if I should sin 14
and then not acquit me of my faults.
Woe to me, if I am guilty; 15
even if I am upright, I dare not lift my head, so overwhelmed with shame and drunk with pain [e] am I!
Proud [f] as a lion, you hunt me down, 16
multiplying your exploits at my expense, attacking me again and again, 17
your fury against me ever increasing,
your troops assailing me, wave after wave. [g]

3:11–16 Why did you bring me out of the womb? 18
I should have perished then, unseen by any eye,
a being that had never been, 19
to be carried from womb to grave.
7:7;14:1 The days of my life are few enough: 20
turn your eyes away, leave me a little joy, [h]
Ps 39:13 before I go to the place of no return, 21
to the land of darkness and shadow dark as death, Nb 16:33f where dimness and disorder hold sway, 22
and light itself is like dead of night. [i]

Job must acknowledge God's wisdom

11 Zophar of Naamath spoke next. He said: 1

Is babbling to go without an answer? 2
Is wordiness a proof of uprightness?
Do you think your talking strikes people dumb, 3
will you jeer with no one to refute you?
These were your words, 'My conduct [a] is pure, 4
in your eyes I am free of blame!'
Will no one let God speak, 5
open his lips and give you answer, Rm 11:33 show you the secrets of wisdom 6
which put all cleverness to shame?
Then you would realise that God is calling you to account for your sin. [b]
Can you claim to fathom the depth of God, 7
can you reach the limit of Shaddai?
Ps 139:8 ↗Ep 3:18 It is higher than the heavens: [c] what can you do? 8
It is deeper than Sheol: what can you know?

It would be longer to measure than the earth and broader than the sea.
If he intervenes to close or convoke the assembly,
who is to prevent him?
He knows how deceptive human beings are,
and he sees their misdeeds too, and marks them well. [d]
Hence empty-headed people would do well to study sense and people who behave like wild donkeys to let themselves be tamed. [e] 39:5–8 Gn 16:12 Come, reconsider your attitude, stretch out your hands towards him! [f]
If you repudiate the sin which you have doubtless committed and do not allow wickedness to live on in your tents,
you will be able to raise an unsullied face,
unwavering and free from fear,
for you will forget about your misery,
thinking of it only as a flood that passed long ago.
Then begins an existence more radiant than noon, and the very darkness will be bright as morning. Jn 8:12b Confident because there is hope;
after your troubles, you will sleep secure. [g]
When you lie down to rest, no one will trouble you,
and many will seek your favour.
But as for the wicked, their eyes are weary,
there is no refuge for them;
their only hope is to breathe their last. [h]

God's wisdom is best seen in the awesome works of his omnipotence

12 Job spoke next. He said:

Doubtless, you are the voice of the people, [a]
and when you die, wisdom will die with you!
But I have a brain, as well as you, 13:2
I am in no way inferior to you, and who, in any case, does not know all that?
Anyone becomes [b] a laughing-stock to his friends
if he cries to God and expects an answer.
People laugh at anyone who has integrity and is upright.
'Add insult to injury,' think the prosperous,
'strike the fellow now that he is staggering!'
And yet the tents of brigands are left in peace:
those who provoke God dwell secure

c. 'The creeping things' zohale conj.; Hebr. siah la 'speak to (the earth)'.

d. 'God' seven Hebr. MSS; 'Yahweh' MT, but the poet avoids using the divine name since he is putting words into the mouths of foreigners.

e. If, as all creation witnesses, God is the cause of all things, vv. 7–10, his is the ultimate responsibility for the prevalence of injustice, vv. 4–6.

f. Human wisdom, cut and dried with reassuring maxims, cannot compare with God's wisdom which is demonstrated by mighty works, vv. 14–16, and baffles the wisest of people, vv. 16–25.

g. Suppressing 'he makes walk' from the beginning of the v., see v. 19. • 'He robs of their wits' yesakkel conj.; Hebr. solel 'barefoot'. • 'a country's' Gk; omitted by Hebr.

h. Text obscure: read 'rope' (moser) instead of 'discipline' (musar) (with Targ.) and transpose with 'belt' ('ezor). The reference is apparently to the stripping and roping together of captives.

i. 'suppresses' wayyimehem conj.; Hebr. wayyanehem 'leads'.

j. 'a country's' Gk; 'he leads them astray' Hebr.

13 a. Job returns to legal procedure, see v. 18 and 9:14g. He himself elects to cross-examine God, spurning the so-called sages who presume to plead his cause.

b. Omitting the first two words, as a dittography from v. 13. • These expressions, with their proverbial ring, mean to gamble for life, to stake all, see Jg 12:3; 1 S 19:5; 28:21.

c. Job is out not to win back his happiness but to vindicate his innocence before man and, in particular, before God.

d. Job imagines a legal action between himself and God. On this occasion he forgets that there is no independent judge, 9:32–33; he no longer sees God as a judge but only as an opponent.

e. Job turns against God the legal accusation which Yahweh, Is 1:18; Ho 2:4; Mi 6:1–2, and his servant, Is 50:8, have already hurled at his people. The second line, lit. 'for now I shall be silent and die' may be another legal formula. He who challenges his opponents is already prepared to be proved wrong and take the consequences. Sure of his case, Job accepts this.

f. The first: to face God as an equal and to recover his liberty; the second: to speak first in the debate.

g. God 'hides his face' when he withholds signs of his benevolent presence.

B: SECOND CYCLE OF DISCOURSES

Job's own words condemn him

15 Eliphaz of Teman spoke next. He said:

Does anyone wise respond with windy arguments,
or feed on an east wind?
Or make a defence with ineffectual words
and speeches good for nothing?
You do worse: you suppress reverence,
you discredit discussion before God. [a]
Your very fault incites you to speak like this,
hence you adopt this language of cunning.
Your own mouth condemns you, and not I;
your own lips bear witness against you. [b]

Are you the first-born of the human race, Pr 8:25 brought into the world before the hills? [c] Si 49:16
Have you been a listener at God's council, Jr 23:18 or established a monopoly of wisdom? Rm 11:34
What knowledge do you have that we have not,
what understanding that is not ours too?
One of us is an old, grey-headed man
loaded with more years than your father!
Can you ignore these divine consolations
and the moderate tone of our words?
How passion carries you away!
And how you roll your eyes,
when you vent your anger on God
and speeches come tripping off your tongue!
How can anyone be pure, 4:17–18;14:4c
anyone born of woman be upright? [d]
God cannot rely even on his holy ones, to him, even the heavens seem impure.

h. i.e. a human being, see the following verse. Some critics suggest reading v. 28 after 14:2 or 14:6.

14 a. Elegy on human misery. Job, see 7:1, sees his own suffering as the state of every human being and thence draws his argument: why God should use his strength against such a mean creature is incomprehensible.

b. 'you bring (him)' versions; 'you bring me' Hebr.

c. Job acknowledges human vileness but pleads it as an excuse. The emphasis is laid on the physical (and therefore ritual) uncleanness which a human being contracts from the moment of conception, see Lv 15:19seq. and birth, see Lv 12:2seq., being born of woman, Jb 14:1, see Ps 51:5. This ritual uncleanness involves a corresponding moral weakness, a tendency to sin.

d. 'will wear out' Syr.; Hebr. corrupt.

e. The eschatological imagery, by indefinitely postponing the possibility of awakening, is here used to stress the fact that human beings disappear without hope of return. The expectation of a resurrection at the end of time is apparently not yet within the scope of the author, see 19:25g.

f. The text does not say that death would be followed by a period in Sheol, after which Job would return to life. The situation as imagined, does, however, bring this possibility to mind. Job in his desperation longs for refuge in the only place that he can think of, other than the earth: heaven being reserved to God, see Ps 115:16. If Job could hide somewhere until God's fury is exhausted, he might once more look on a God of mercy. The idea is developed in vv. 14–17: we see Job awaiting his 'relief' while God, no longer angry, longs to see Job again; every possible fault has been forgiven and therefore all question of sin is forgotten.

g. 'eventually falls down' Syr.; Hebr. corrupt.

h. 'cloudburst' sehipah conj.; Hebr. sepiheha must be corrupt.

i. lit. 'his soul laments over him', see Ps 6:5c. In Sheol, therefore, there is a certain consciousness of the self; see Nb 16:33f. The author means either that the shade has no thought and no concern except for itself, or else that it looks back with longing to the days of its earthly life.

15 a. The term translated thus means the application of the mind to religious truths, coupled with the idea of speech: meditation and study of the Law often took the form of real utterance.

b. Job's tongue betrays him: his protestations of innocence reveal anxiety to conceal guilt.

c. The first question contrasts Job with the first member of the human race, a being who could have claimed great wisdom. The second goes so far as to contrast him with Wisdom herself, brought forth before the hills were made, Pr 8:25, and ever afterwards a member of God's council, Pr 8:22–31; but see Jb 28:12–28; Ws 8:3–4.

d. Eliphaz resumes his earlier theme, 4:17, and that of Job, 14:4, but gives it another direction. Human intrinsic impurity is not now considered as the reason for frailty, 4:17–19, or as an excuse for unavoidable transgression, 14:1–4, but as the root from which great sins grow, 'iniquity' in the vocabulary of Eliphaz.

How much more, this hateful, corrupt thing, 16 34:7 humanity, which soaks up wickedness like water!
Listen to me, I have a lesson for you: 17
I am going to impart my own experience and the tradition of the sages 18 8:8–10 Dt 32:7–8 who have remained faithful to their ancestors, to whom alone the land was given— 19
Ws 17:3seq. no foreigner included among them.
The life of the wicked is unceasing torment, 20 18:11 the years allotted to the tyrant are numbered.
A cry of panic echoes in his ear; 21
when all is peace, his destroyer swoops down on him.
No more can he count on escaping from the dark, 22
but knows that he is destined for the sword, [e] marked down as meat for the vulture. 23
He knows that his ruin is at hand. [f]
The hour of darkness terrifies him, 24 distress and anguish assail him
as when a king is poised for the assault.
He raised his hand against God, 25
boldly he defied Shaddai!
Head lowered, he charged him, 26
with his massively bossed shield.
His face had grown full and fat, 27
and his thighs too heavy with flesh.
He had occupied the towns he had destroyed, 28
with their uninhabited houses
about to fall into ruins;
but no great profit to him, his luck will not hold, 29
he will cast his shadow over the country no longer, [g]
(he will not escape the dark). 30
A flame will scorch his young shoots,
the wind will carry off his blossom. [h] 20:6–7 Let him not trust in his great height [i] 31 or delusion will be his.
His palm trees will wither before their time [j] 32
and his branches never again be green.
Like the vine, he will shake off his unripe fruit, 33
like the olive tree, shed his blossom.
Yes, sterile is the spawn of the sinner, 34
and fire consumes the tents of the venal.
5:6–7 Ps 7:14 Pr 22:8 Ga 6:8 Whoever conceives malice, breeds disaster, 35
bears as offspring only a false hope. [k]

Human injustice and divine justice

16 Job spoke next. He said: 1

How often have I heard all this before! 2
What sorry comforters you are!
'When will these windy arguments be over?' 3 or again, 'What sickness drives you to defend yourself?'
Oh yes! I too could talk as you do, 4
if you were in my place;
I could overwhelm [a] you with speeches,
Mt 27:39 shaking my head [b] over you,

and speak words of encouragement,
and then have no more to say.
6 When I speak, my suffering does not stop;
if I say nothing, is it in any way reduced? [c]
7 And now it is driving me to distraction;
you have struck my whole acquaintanceship with horror, 30:12e 8 now it rounds on me, my slanderer has now turned witness, he appears against me, accusing me face to face; [d] 9 his anger tears and hounds me with gnashing teeth.
My enemies look daggers at me,
10 and open gaping jaws.
Their sneers strike like slaps in the face;
and they all set on me at once.
11 Yes, God has handed me over to the godless, [e]
and cast me into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was living at peace, until he made me totter,
taking me by the neck to shatter me.
He has set me up as his target:
13 he shoots his arrows at me from all sides,
pitilessly pierces my loins,
and pours my gall out on the ground.
14 Breach after breach he drives through me,
charging on me like a warrior.
15 I have sewn sackcloth over my skin,
thrown my forehead in the dust.
16 My face is red with tears,
and shadow dark as death covers my eyelids.
17 Nonetheless, my hands are free of violence,
and my prayer is pure. 33:9d
18 Cover not my blood, O earth, [f] and let my cry mount without cease! Rv 8:3–4 19 Henceforth I have a witness in heaven,
my defender is there on high. 19:25g 20 Interpreter of my thoughts there with God, before whom flow my tears, [g] 21 let my anguish plead the cause of a man at grips with God, just as a man might defend his fellow.

e. 'destined' tzapun conj.; tzapu Hebr. 'lain in wait for' (?).

f. 'marked down' mo'ad conj.; Hebr. noded 'he wanders', 'vulture' Gk; Hebr. arrangement of vowels faulty. 'his ruin' Gk; 'his hand' Hebr.

g. 'his shadow' Gk; Hebr. has an unknown word.

h. The first line, being a partial repetition of v. 22[a], is probably either a gloss or the corruption of another text. • 'his blossom' Gk; 'his mouth' Hebr. 'will carry off' wiso 'ar conj.; Hebr. weyasur 'he will remove himself'.

i. 'his height' si'o conj., see 20:6; Hebr. shaw 'futility', and remove nite'ah 'he has gone astray'.

j. 'will wither' version; 'will be filled' Hebr. • 'his palm trees', reading as timorato the redundant word temurato in the previous v.

k. lit. 'carries within himself' Gk, Syr.; 'prepares' Hebr. The same notion is presented in identical form in Is 59:4, in almost identical form in Ps 7:14, and with a different image in Jb 4:8; 5:6–7; Pr 22:8; see also with eschatological elaboration, Ga 6:8.

16 a. 'overwhelm' 'akbidah conj.; Hebr. 'ahbirah 'dispose'.

b. The gesture can mean sympathy or else contempt or mockery.

c. Job, unlike his comforters, whose interest in his case is confined to words, continues to suffer whether he speaks or is silent. This is how he justifies the tone of his words, see 6:26, in rebuttal of Eliphaz, see 15:5–6.

d. 'my slanderer', (lit. 'my liar') kehashi conj.; Hebr. kehasi 'my thinner'. • vv. 7–8 are obscure: the translation follows MT (except for the emendation above) but MT is possibly corrupt.

e. 'the godless', lit. 'a godless man' (collective) versions; 'a lad' Hebr.

f. Blood, if not covered with earth, cries to heaven for vengeance. Gn 4:10; 37:26; Is 26:21; Ezk 24:8. Job, mortally wounded (v. 12seq.) wishes to leave behind a lasting appeal for vindication: on earth, his blood; with God, the cry of his prayer. His cry is personified and hence can be the 'witness' and Job's 'defender' in the presence of God, v. 19. But these same terms might be applied to God himself, the God of faithfulness and kindness, to whom Job may be appealing in a sudden access of hope. Or again, there may be a reference to a mediator on Job's behalf. In the context, however, the first interpretation seems the most satisfactory.

g. 'Interpreter' melitz conj.; Hebr. melitzay 'My interpreters' or 'My mockers' Hebr. • 'before whom' Gk; omitted in Hebr.

For the years of my life are numbered, 22
10:21 and I am leaving by the road of no return. [h]

17 My breathing is growing weaker 1
Qo 12:1–7 and the gravediggers are gathering for me. [a] Scoffers are my only companions, 2 their harshness haunts my nights.
So you must go bail for me to yourself, 3
for which of them cares to clap his hand on mine? [b]
For you have shut their hearts to reason, 4
hence not a hand is lifted. [c]
Just so is a man who invites his friends to share his property 5 while the eyes of his own children languish.

30:9 I have become a byword [d] among foreigners, 6
and a creature on whose face to spit, since I am nearly blind with grief 7
and my limbs are reduced [e] to a shadow.
Is 52:15 Any honest person is appalled at the sight, [f] 8
the innocent is indignant at the sinner.
Anyone upright grows stronger step by step: 9
and anyone whose hands are clean grows ever in vigour!

Come on then, all of you, back to the attack! 10
I shall not find one wise man among you!

My days are over, so are my plans, [g] 11
my heart-strings are broken;
yet they would have me believe that night is day, 12
5:17–26; 8:6–7;11:17 that light to dispel the darkness is at hand, [h]
Jn 8:12b when all I want, in fact, is to dwell in Sheol 13 and in that darkness there to make my bed!
To the tomb, I cry, 'You are my father!'— 14
to the worm, 'You are my mother—you, my sister!'
Where then is my hope? 15
Who can see any happiness for me? [i] unless they come down to Sheol with me, 16
all of us sinking into the dust together? [j]

The inevitable fate of the wicked

18 Bildad of Shuah spoke next. He said: 1

What prevents you others from saying something? [a] 2
Think—for it is our turn to speak!
12:7–8 Why do you regard us as animals, 3
considering us no more than brutes? [b] 16:9–10 Tear yourself to pieces if you will, 4
but the world, for all your rage, will not turn to desert,
the rocks will not shift from their places.
Jr 25:10 The light of the wicked must certainly be put out, 5
Jn 8:12b the lamp that gives him light cease to shine.
In his tent the light is dimmed, 6
the lamp that shone on him is snuffed.
Ps 18:36 His vigorous stride loses its power, 7
Pr 4:12 his own designs falter.
Ps 35:7–8; 140:5 For into the net his own feet carry him, 8
he walks into the snares.

A spring grips him by the heel,
a trap snaps shut, and he is caught.
Hidden in the ground is a snare to catch him,
pitfalls lie across his path.
Terrors threaten him from all sides — 15:21 Ws 17:10–14
following him step by step.
Hunger becomes his companion, [c]
by his side Disaster stands.
Disease devours his skin, [d]
Death's First-Born [e] gnaws his limbs.
He will be torn from the shelter of his tent,
and you will drag him to the King of Terrors. [f]
You can live in the tent, since it is no longer his,
and brimstone will be scattered on his sheepfold. [g] — Dt 29:22 Ps 11:6 Is 34:9
Below, his roots dry out and his branches are blasted above.
His memory fades from the land, — Ps 9:5;34:16 Pr 10:7
his name is forgotten in the countryside.
Driven from the light into the darkness,
he is banished from the world,
without issue or posterity among his own people — Ps 37:28 or a single survivor where he used to live.
His end appals the west
and fills the east with terror.
Such indeed is the fate of the places where wickedness dwells—
the home of everyone who knows not God.

Faith at its height in total desertion

19 Job spoke next. He said:

How much longer are you going to torment me
and crush me by your speeches?
You have insulted me ten times already:
have you no shame at maltreating me?
Even if I had gone astray,
my error would still be my own affair. [a]

h. Possibly Job hopes for vindication before his death and wants God to hear him because time is running out. Or possibly he gives up hope of this and simply awaits death.

17 a. 'My' 'immi conj.; Hebr. 'yamay 'my days'. • 'grave-diggers' qoberim conj.; Hebr. qebarim 'graves'. • 'are gathering' nize'aqu conj.; Hebr. nize'aku are being extinguished'. Literal translation of the Hebr. would give 'my breath is growing weaker, my days are being extinguished, for me—the tombs.'

b. Gesture of legal procedure, see Pr 6:1; 17:18; 22:26; Si 29:14–20, by which the guarantor went surety for the debtor to defer distraint and offered bail. His friends being unhelpful, Job, apparently, asks God himself to be his guarantor.

c. 'not a hand is lifted' lo' tarum yadam conj.; Hebr. lo' teromem 'you will not stand up'.

d. 'a byword' versions; 'to rule over' Hebr. (wrong vowel arrangement).

e. 'are reduced' kalim conj.; Hebr. kullam 'all'.

f. 'appalled' Biblical expression for the emotion of those who witness divine punishment inflicted on the guilty. So it is with Job's friends: seeing his sufferings they expatiate in conventional terms on the justice of God. Job derides this ready-made wisdom and formal piety.

g. 'so are my plans' conj.; Hebr. makes 'plans' the subject of the following verb.

h. 'to dispel' mepanneh conj.; Hebr. mippene 'in face of (the darkness)' or 'more than (the darkness)'.

i. 'happiness' Gk; Hebr. repeats 'hope'.

j. 'with me' Gk; 'to the locks (of Sheol)' Hebr. • 'sinking' Gk; 'rest' Hebr. (straightforward vowel emendation).

18 a. This v. is presumably addressed to Zophar and Eliphaz.

b. 'considering us no more than brutes' nidminu kabba'ar conj.; Hebr. nitminu 'are we impure?'.

c. 'Hunger' conj.; 'hungers' Hebr. • 'his companion' 'itto conj.; Hebr. 'ono 'his strength' or 'his misfortune'.

d. 'Disease devours' ye'akel bidway conj.; Hebr. yo'kal badde 'He devours scraps (of skin)'.

e. i.e. the worst disease of all, probably the plague.

f. A figure from oriental and Greek mythology (Nergal, Pluto, etc.), seems here to have infernal spirits (Furies) at command to plague criminals even during their lifetime.

g. Literal translation, but the text is perhaps corrupt. Some critics suggest 'his tent will be set on fire' (reading toshkan mabbel instead of tishkan mibbeli lo) to complete the parallelism with brimstone, symbolic of sterility, see Dt 29:22; Ps 11:6; Is 34:9, and perhaps here a disinfectant.

19 a. A fault excused by suffering, see 6:24j. Greek adds 'by speaking words that are unbefitting, words erroneous and untimely'.

But, whereas you take this superior attitude 5
and claim that my disgrace is my own fault,
I tell you that God has wronged me 6
and enveloped me in his net. [b] Lm 3:7–9 If I protest against such violence, I am not heard, 7
if I appeal against it, judgement is never given.
He has built an impassable wall across my path 8
and covered my way with darkness.
29:14 He has deprived me of my glory 9
and taken the crown from my head.
14:7seq.; 17:15 He assails me from all directions to make me vanish; 10
he uproots my hope as he might a tree.
Inflamed with anger against me, 11
33:10 he regards me as his foe.
His troops have come in force, 12 directing their line of advance towards me,
they are now encamped round my tent.

Ps 38:11;69:8; 88:8,18 He has alienated my brothers from me, 13
my relatives take care to avoid me, my intimate friends have gone away 14
and the guests in my house [c] have forgotten me.
My slave-girls regard me as an intruder, 15
a stranger as far as they are concerned.
My servant does not answer when I call him, 16
I am obliged to beg favours from him!
My breath is unbearable to my wife, 17
my stench to my own brothers. [d]
Even the children look down on me, 18
whenever I stand up, they start jeering at me.
All my dearest friends recoil from me in horror: 19
Ps 41:9 Si 6:8 those I loved best have turned against me.
Jn 13:18 My flesh is rotting under my skin, 20
my bones are sticking out like teeth. [e] Pity me, pity me, my friends, 21
since I have been struck by the hand of God.
Must you persecute me just as God does, 22
Ps 27:2 and give my body no peace?

16:18–21,18f Is 30:8 Will no one let my words be recorded, 23
inscribed on some monument with iron chisel and engraving tool, [f] 24 cut into the rock for ever?
I know that I have a living Defender [g] 25 and that he will rise up last, on the dust of the earth. [h]
After my awakening, he will set me close to him, [i] 26
and from my flesh I shall look on God.
Ps 17:15d He whom I shall see will take my part: 27
my eyes will be gazing on no stranger.
My heart sinks within me.
When you say, 'How can we confound him? 28
What pretext can we discover against him?'
You yourselves had best beware the sword, 29
since the wrath bursts into flame [j] at wicked deeds and then you will learn that there is indeed a judgement!

The course of justice admits of no exception 27:13–23

20 Zophar of Naamath spoke next. He said:

My thoughts urge me to reply to this,
and hence the impatience that grips me.
I have put up with prating that outrages me
and now my mind inspires me with an answer.
Do you not know, that since time began Ps 37;73
and human beings were set on the earth,
the triumph of the wicked has always been brief,
and the sinner's gladness has never lasted long?
Towering to the sky he may have been, Ps 37:35
his head touching the clouds; [a]
but he vanishes, like a phantom, once for all, while those who used to see him, ask, 'Where is he?'
Like a dream that leaves no trace he takes his flight, Ps 73:20 like a vision in the night he flies away. Ws 5:14 Is 29:8
The eye accustomed to see him sees him no more,
his home will never set eyes on him again.
His sons will have to reimburse the poor 27:16–17
and his children [b] pay back his riches.
His bones used to be full of youthful vigour:
and there it lies, in the dust with him, now!
Evil was sweet to his mouth, Pr 20:17
he would shelter it under his tongue;
cultivating it carefully,
he would let it linger on his palate.
Such food goes bad in his belly,
working inside him like the poison of a viper.
Now he has to vomit up the wealth that he has swallowed,
God makes him disgorge it.
He used to suck vipers' venom, Dt 32:32–33
and the tongue of the adder kills him.
No more will he know the streams of oil [c] 29:6
or the torrents of honey and cream.

b. God, not Job's sins, casts the net, cf. 18:8.

c. The phrase 'the guests in my house' taken from the beginning of v. 15.

d. lit. 'the sons of my womb'. The formula is unusual for meaning the children of a father, though the expression 'fruit of the womb' may occasionally mean this (see Dt 28:53; Ps 132:11; Mi 6:7). As the poet in any case tells us that Job's sons are all dead (see 8:4; 29:5), he presumably means sons of the same mother, i.e. Job's brothers, which seems to be confirmed by 3:10 (see also Ps 69:8: 'the sons of my mother').

e. v. corrected following the Gk. Hebr.: 'my bones cling to my skin and to my flesh, and I escape by the skin of my teeth'.

f. 'engraving tool' wetzipporen following Jr 17:1; Hebr. we'oparet 'lead'.

g. The word go'el, approximately translated 'defender', is a technical term of Israelite law, see Nb 35:19c. It is often used of God, the Saviour of his people and avenger of the oppressed. The early Jewish rabbis applied the term to the Messiah, and this probably induced St Jerome to translate here 'my Redeemer'. Job, slandered and condemned by his friends, awaits a Defender who this time (cf. 16:18–21g) is God himself, unless a celestial mediator is meant, who would undertake to defend Job and reconcile him with God, cf. 16:19. But Job still believes his happiness to be lost for ever and his death to be at hand: when God undertakes to avenge his cause, it will be after his death. Nonetheless Job hopes to witness this and to 'see' his vindication. In 14:10–14 he envisaged the possibility of a temporary shelter in Sheol, and here it would seem that he is counting on a brief return to earthly life to see his vindication accomplished; in this he is prompted by his faith in a God who can bring people back from Sheol, see 1 S 2:6; 1 K 17:17–24; Ezk 37. Job's faith thus momentarily defies horizons of mortality in his desperate need for justice; it prepares us for the explicit revelation of bodily resurrection, see 2 M 7:9c.

h. 'will rise up to stand', legal expression, used often of witness or of judge, 31:14; Dt 19:16; Ps 12:5; Is 2:19,21, 'last' recalls Is 44:6; 48:12.

i. 'my awakening' 'uri conj.; Hebr. 'ori 'my skin'. • 'he will set me close to him' zeqapani 'itto conj.; Hebr. niqqepu zo't 'they have destroyed that'.

j. 'bursts into flame' Gk; Hebr. unintelligible.

20 a. The OT often alludes to the monstrous pride of the first human beings, see Gn 11:4; Is 14:13–14; Ezk 28:2,17. This tradition, which has a mythological colouring, is in line with the Gn 3 tradition which makes pride the cause of the fall.

b. 'his children' wiladayw conj.; Hebr. weyadayw 'his hands'.

c. 'of oil' yitzehar conj.; Hebr. nahare 'the rivers' (joined to what follows).

When he gives back his winnings, his cheerfulness will fade, [d] 18 and the satisfied air he had when business was thriving.
Since he once destroyed the huts [e] of the poor, 19
plundering houses instead of building them up, since his avarice could never be satisfied, 20
now all his hoarding will not save him; [f] since nothing could escape his greed, 21
his prosperity will not last.
When he has everything he needs, want will seize him, 22
and misery will light on him with all its force.
On him God looses all his burning wrath, 23
hurling against his flesh a hail of arrows. [g] Dt 32:41–42 Ws 5:17–23 If he escapes the weapons of iron, 24
the bow of bronze will transfix him.
Out of his back sticks an arrow, [h] 25
from his gall a shining point.
15:21;18:14 Ps 88:15–16 The terrors advance on him, all the hidden darknesses are waiting to carry him off. [i] 26 1:16;15:34 A fire [j] unlit by human hand devours him,
and consumes what is left in his tent.
The heavens lay bare his iniquity, 27
and the earth rises up against him.
The income of his house pours away, 28
Is 24:18 like the torrents, on the day of retribution.
=27:13 Rv 21:8 Such is the fate God reserves for the wicked, 29
the inheritance he assigns to the accursed! [k]

Facts give the lie

21 Job spoke next. He said: 1

Listen carefully to my words; 2
let this be the consolation you allow me.
Permit me to speak in my turn; 3
you may jeer when I have spoken.
Is my complaint just about a fellow-mortal? 4 6:3,26; 16:4–6 I have good grounds to be perturbed!
29:9;40:4 Give your attention to me; you will be dumbfounded 5 and will place your hand over your mouth. [a] I myself am appalled at the very thought, 6
and my flesh creeps.
Ps 73:3–12 Jr 12:1–2 Ml 3:15,18–19 Why do the wicked still live on, 7 their power increasing with their age?
They see their posterity assured, 8
and their offspring secure [b] before their eyes.
The peace of their houses has nothing to fear, 9
the rod that God wields is not for them.
No mishap with their bull at breeding-time, 10
nor miscarriage with their cow at calving.
They let their infants frisk like lambs, 11
their children dance like deer. [c]
Is 5:12 Am 6:5 They sing to the tambourine and harp, 12
and rejoice to the sound of the pipe.
They end their lives in happiness 13
and go down [d] in peace to Sheol.

22:17 Jr 2:31 Ml 3:14–15 Yet these are the ones who say to God, [e] 'Go away! 14
We do not want to learn your ways.

What is the point of our serving Shaddai?
What should we gain from praying to him?'
Surely they have won their own prosperity,
since God is kept so far from their plans?

Do we often see the light of the wicked put out, 18:5;20:22, 26–28
or disaster overtake him,
or the retribution of God destroy his possessions,[f] or the wind blow him away like a straw, Ps 1:4
or a whirlwind carry him off like chaff? Ps 75:8+
So God is storing up punishment for his children?[g]
But the wicked himself should be punished, and should know it!
He himself should witness his own ruin,[h]
and himself drink the anger of Shaddai.
Once he is gone, what joy can he gain from his family, 14:21–22
once the number of his months has been cut off? 2 K 20:19 Qo 9:5–6
But who can teach wisdom to God,
to him who is judge of those on high?
And again: one person dies in the fullness of strength, in all possible happiness and ease,[i] thighs padded with fat[j]
and the marrow in the bones good and moist.
Another dies in bitterness of heart,
never having tasted happiness.
They lie together down in the dust and the worms soon cover them both. Qo 9:2–3

Oh, I know what is in your minds,
what you so spitefully think about me!
'What has become of the great lord's house,' you say,
'where is the tent where the wicked used to live?'
Have you never questioned people who travel,
do you not understand the testimony they give:
on the day of disaster, the wicked is spared, Pr 11:4 Am 5:18m Rm 2:3–6 on the day of retribution, he is kept safe?
And who is there then to reproach him for his deeds and to pay him back for the things he has done?
He is carried away to the cemetery,
and a watch is kept at his tomb.
The clods of the ravine lie easy on him,
and the whole population walk behind.[k]

d. 'cheerfulness' yablig conj.; Hebr. yibla' 'he swallows'. • 'his winnings' yegi'o conj.; Hebr. yaga '(fruit of his) effort'.

e. 'huts' 'ezeb Targ.; Hebr. 'azab 'he has abandoned'.

f. 'his hoarding will not save him' conj.; 'by his hoarding, he will not save' Hebr.

g. The Hebr. has at the beginning 'While he filled his belly', omitted by Gk. • 'arrows' 'olmayw conj.; Hebr. 'alemo 'on him'. The same metaphors are used to describe the collective punishment of Israel or of the gentiles. God the Warrior deploys his arms, see Dt 32:41; Ws 5:18–20, sends illnesses and other disasters, and the earth, shaken by his fury, co-operates in the work of destruction, as later at the last judgement see Is 24:18.

h. 'an arrow' following the Gk; 'he has shot' Hebr.

i. 'to carry him off' lisepoto conj.; Hebr. litzeponayw 'for his hidden things'. • The dark powers of Sheol, prefigured in one of the plagues of Egypt, Ex 10:21.

j. A thunderbolt.

k. 'accursed' mur'ar conj.; Hebr. 'imro 'of his word'.

21 a. Since to speak would be useless or unwise.

b. 'secure' 'omedim conj.; Hebr. 'immam 'with them' (linked to the first line).

c. 'like deer' conj., an addition by analogy with Ps 114:4–6.

d. 'go down' Syr.; 'they are terrified' Hebr.

e. 'God', lit. 'him' conj.; Hebr. has first person.

f. '(the wrath) destroy his possessions' yehubbal helqo' conj.; Hebr. habalim yehalleq 'does he destroy the wicked' or 'does he allocate portions'.

g. An old and respectable theory, Ex 34:7; Dt 5:9, later qualified, Dt 24:16; Jr 31:29; Ezk 18; see also Jn 9:1–3. Job demonstrates its inadequacy: the sinner will neither know nor feel the punishment, see 14:21–22.

h. 'his ruin' versions; Hebr. corrupt.

i. Another shocking consideration: death strikes indiscriminately.

j. 'thighs', lit. 'sides' Syr.; Hebr. obscure. • 'fat' versions; 'milk' Hebr.

k. The text adds 'and in front of him countless numbers', probably a gloss.

So what sense is there in your empty consolation? 34
your answers are the left-overs of infidelity!

C: THIRD CYCLE OF DISCOURSES

Admission of guilt leads to reconciliation with God

22 Eliphaz of Teman spoke next. He said: 1

Can a human being contribute anything to God, 2
when even someone intelligent can benefit only himself?
35:7 Lk 17:7–10 Does Shaddai derive any benefit from your uprightness, 3 or profit from your blameless conduct?
Do you think he is punishing you for your piety 4
and bringing you to justice for that?
29:11–17;31 No, for your great wickedness, more likely, 5
for your unlimited sins!
Ex 22:25–26 Is 58:7 Ezk 18:7 Mt 25:42seq. You have exacted unearned pledges from your brothers, 6 stripped people naked of their clothes, failed to give water to the thirsty 7
and refused bread to the hungry;
handed the land over to a strong man, 8
for some favoured person to move in,
31:16–20 Ex 22:21 sent widows away empty-handed 9
and crushed the arms of orphans. [a] 18:8–11;19:6 No wonder, then, if snares are all around you, 10 and sudden terrors make you afraid;
Is 58:10–11 if light has turned to darkness, [b] so that you cannot see, 11
Ps 69:1–2 and you have been submerged in the flood.

Is 40:26–27 Does not God live high in the heavens, 12
does he not see [c] the zenith of the stars?
And because he is up there, you have said, 'What does God know? [d] 13
Ps 73:11 Is 29:15 Can he judge through the dark cloud?
Jr 23:23–24 The clouds, to him, are an impenetrable veil, 14 as he goes his way on the rim of the heavens.'
And will you still follow the ancient trail 15
trodden by the wicked,
those who were borne off before their time, 16
whose foundations were swamped by a flood, 21:14 for having said to God, 'Go away! 17
What can Shaddai do to us?' [e]
Yet he himself had filled their houses with good things, 18
although excluded from the plans of the wicked!
Ps 58:10 At such a spectacle, the upright rejoice, 19
and the innocent deride them:
'See how our enemies have been destroyed! 20
See how their wealth has perished in the flames!'

5:17seq. Well then! Make peace with him, be reconciled, 21 and all your happiness will be restored to you.
Welcome the teaching from his lips, 22
and keep his words close to your heart.
If you return, humbled, [f] to Shaddai 23
and drive wickedness far from your tent,
if you lay your gold down on the dust, 24
28:16 Ophir down among the pebbles of the torrent,

25 Shaddai will be bars of gold to you and silver piled in heaps. Ps 4:7;16:5–6; 63:3–5; 84:10 Is 58:14 •27:10 26 Then Shaddai will be all your delight, and you will lift your face to God.
27 You will pray, and he will hear;
and you will be able to fulfil your vows.
28 Whatever you undertake will go well,
and light will shine on your path;
29 for he casts down the pride of the arrogant, [g] Ps 18:27 Is 2:11–17 Lk 1:52–53
but he saves those of downcast eyes.
30 He rescues anyone who is innocent;
have your hands clean, and you will be saved.

God is far off, and evil triumphant

1 23 Job spoke next. He said:
2 My lament is still rebellious;
despite my groans, his hand [a] is just as heavy.
3 Will no one help me to know how to travel to his dwelling?
4 I should set out my case to him, 9:14g advancing any number of grievances.
5 Then I could learn his defence, every word of it,
taking note of everything he said to me.
6 Would he put all his strength into this debate with me?
No, he would only have to give his attention to me,
7 to recognise his opponent as upright and so I should win my case for ever. [b] 8 If I go to the east, he is not there; Ps 139:7–10 or to the west, I still cannot see him.
9 If I seek him in the north, he is not to be found, invisible as ever, if I turn to the south. [c]
10 And yet he knows every step I take! [d] Ps 139:1–6 Jr 11:20+
Let him test me in the crucible: I shall come out pure gold.
11 My footsteps have followed close in his, Ps 17:5
I have walked in his way without swerving;
12 I have not neglected the commandment of his lips,
in my heart [e] I have cherished the words of his mouth.
13 But once he has made up his mind, [f] who can change it?
Whatever he plans, that he carries out. Is 55:10–11 14 No doubt, then, but he will carry out my sentence,
like so many other decrees that he has made.
15 That is why I am full of fear before him, Ps 119:120
and the more I think, the greater grows my dread of him.

22 a. The list of faults with which Eliphaz unfairly taxes Job is notable for its insistence on sins against justice and charity towards others, even by omission. This recalls the teaching of the prophets, cf. Job's apologia, 29:11–17; 31.

b. 'light has turned to darkness' Gk; 'or the darkness' Hebr.

c. 'does he not see' conj.; 'and see!' Hebr.

d. 'because he is up there': linking the last two words of v. 12 to v. 13 and reading them ki ram hu'; Hebr. ki ramu. Job has not said this, but Eliphaz is drawing conclusions from his words, among them this blasphemous conclusion: if God is not concerned, it is because he does not know.

e. 'do to us' versions; 'do to them' Hebr.

f. 'humbled', lit. 'and humble yourself' wete'anah following Gk; Hebr. tibbaneh 'you will be built'.

g. Line emended; Hebr. unintelligible (lit. 'for they cast down, and you have said, "Pride!" ').

23 a. 'his hand' versions; 'my hand' Hebr.

b. 'my case' versions; 'over my judge' Hebr.

c. 'if I seek him' conj.; 'if he acts' Hebr. • 'if I turn' conj.; 'if he turns' Hebr.

d. 'every step I take', lit. 'my walking and my stopping' Syr.; 'the way with me' Hebr.

e. 'in my heart' Gk; Hebr. unintelligible. Job is referring to the Law.

f. 'made up his mind' bahar conj.; Hebr. be'ehad 'in one'.

God has undermined my courage, 16
Shaddai has filled me with fear.
The darkness having failed to destroy me, 17
I am plunged back into obscurity by him! [g]

24 Why does Shaddai make known the times he has fixed; 1
why do his faithful never see his Days? [a] Dt 27:17 The wicked move boundary-marks away, 2
they carry off flock and shepherd. [b]
They drive away the orphan's donkey, 3
Dt 24:17 as security, they seize the widow's ox.
30:2–8 Dt 15:11 The needy have to keep out of the way, 4
poor country people have to keep out of sight.
Like wild desert donkeys, they go out to work, 5
searching from dawn for food,
and at evening for something on which to feed their children. [c]
They go harvesting in the field of some scoundrel, [d] 6
they go pilfering in the vineyards of the wicked.
They go about naked, lacking clothes, 10
and starving while they carry the sheaves.
Two little walls, [e] their shelter at high noon; 11
parched with thirst, they have to tread the winepress.
Dt 24:12–13 They spend the night naked, lacking clothes, 7 with no covering against the cold.
Mountain rainstorms cut them through, 8
unsheltered, they hug the rocks.
The orphan child is torn from the breast, 9
the child of the poor is exacted as security. [f]
From the towns come the groans of the dying [g] 12
and the gasp of the wounded crying for help.
Rv 6:10–11 Yet God remains deaf to prayer! [h]

In contrast, there are those who reject the light: [i] 13
Jn 3:20 Ep 5:8–14 1 Th 5:4–8 who know nothing of its ways and who do not frequent its paths.
When all is dark the murderer leaves his bed 14
Ps 10:8–9; 37:32 to kill the poor and needy.
During the night the thief goes on the prowl, [j]
breaking into houses while the darkness lasts. 16a
Pr 7:9–10 The eye of the adulterer watches for twilight, 15
'No one will see me,' he mutters
as he masks his face.
In the daytime they keep out of sight, 16b
these people who do not want to know the light.
For all of them, morning is a time of shadow dark as death, 17
since that is when they know what fear is. [k]

Is this not so? Who can prove me a liar 25 or show that my words have no substance?'

A hymn to God's omnipotence [a]

25 Bildad of Shuah spoke next. He said: 1

What sovereignty, what awe, is his 2 who creates peace on his heights! [b]
Who can count his armies? 3
Against whom does his lightning not surge forth?

Could anyone think God regards him as virtuous, 4:17+;15:14d
the child of woman as pure!
Why, the very moon lacks lustre, [c]
the very stars seem impure to him!
How much less a human, this maggot,
the child of man, this worm!

26 [a]

The Shadows [b] tremble underneath the earth,
the waters [c] and their denizens are afraid.
Before his eyes, Sheol is bare, Ps 139:8, 11–12
Perdition [d] itself is uncovered. Pr 15:11 Am 9:2
He it was who spread the North [e] above the void and poised the earth on nothingness. [f] 38:6
He fastens up the waters in his clouds,
without the clouds giving way under their weight.
He covers the face of the full moon,
spreading his cloud across it. [g]
He has traced a ring [h] on the surface of the waters, 22:14 Gn 1:7,14 at the boundary between light and dark.
The pillars of the heavens tremble, [i] awe-struck at his threats.
By his power, he has whipped up the Sea, 7:12f Ps 65:7+ 9:13e
by his skill, he has crushed Rahab. Is 51:9–10
His breath has made the heavens luminous, his hand transfixed the Fleeing Serpent. [j] 3:8e Is 27:1
This is only a fraction of what he has done
and all we catch of it is the feeblest echo.
But who can conceive the thunder of his power?

g. 'I' panay conj.; Hebr. mippanay 'before me'. A very obscure verse, taken to mean that Job regrets not having been set free by death before the dread hour of darkness. But the negative can also be understood as referring to both halves of the verse and translate, 'I am not yet plunged back into obscurity by him.'

24 a. 'make known the times he has fixed' lit. 'not have times in reserve'. A store of 'times' from which to lengthen a human life and so provide opportunity for punishment: 'Days' i.e. for the punishment of wicked individuals, analogous to the 'Day of Yahweh' which is the day of universal retribution, see Am 5:18*m*.

b. 'The wicked' Gk; omitted by Hebr. • 'and shepherd' Gk; 'and make him feed' Hebr. • With wicked tyrants, vv. 2–4, Job contrasts the oppressed poor, vv. 5–12, whose wretchedness cries to heaven.

c. 'from dawn (mishshahar) looking for food', lit. 'from dawn, for food' conj.; Hebr. 'looking (meshahare) for food' • 'to dusk for something, etc.' 'ereb lallehem conj.; Hebr. 'arabah lo lehem 'on the upland, for him, bread'.

d. 'of some scoundrel' beliyya'al conj.; Hebr. belilo 'his fodder'.

e. 'Two little walls' ben shurotayim conj.; Hebr. ben shurotam 'between their walls'.

f. 'breast' Gk; 'devastation' Hebr. (different vowel arrangement). 'child' 'ul conj.; Hebr. 'al 'on'.

g. 'the dying' Syr.; 'men' Hebr.

h. Following the Syr.; 'God does not apply (his attention) to folly' Hebr.

i. This attack on the enemies of light (possibly an independent poem inserted here by the author) brings us back to the oppressors: God allows them to work in the dark. But here 'light' also has a moral sense, see Jn 8:12b.

j. 'When all is dark' belo'or conj.; Hebr. la 'or 'in the light'. • 'goes on the prowl' yehallek conj.; Hebr. yehi ka 'he is like'.

k. Line corrupt. Hebr. 'because he is familiar with the terrors of deep darkness'. vv. 18–24 are placed after 27:23.

25 a. This discourse (possibly mutilated) seems to anticipate the Discourse of Yahweh. It may, however, be integral to the Dialogue, if regarded as Bildad's reply to Job's insinuation that God is unable to intervene on the side of justice in human affairs.

b. Peace among the angels, see Is 24:21; Rv 12:7–12, and the stars, see Is 40:26; Si 43:10.

c. 'lacks lustre' versions; Hebr. corrupt.

26 a. For 26:1–4 see after 26:14. Apparently vv. 5–14 (rather than the continuance of Job's speech beginning at 26:1) complete the fragmentary speech of Bildad.

b. lit. 'the Rephaim', either the dead, see Ps 88:10, or the weak and powerless.

c. The waters of the abyss, peopled in popular imagination by the monsters subdued at the creation, see 7:12f. • 'are afraid', by restoring yehattu, which had disappeared through haplography after mittahat 'under the earth' (which Hebr. joins to next line).

d. In Hebr. 'Abaddon', see Rv 9:11, synonym for 'Sheol'; originally the word perhaps indicated a deity of the underworld.

e. The northern quarter of the firmament, on which the firmament was thought to revolve.

f. The earth rests on pillars, 9:6, but what these stand on is beyond human knowledge, 38:6. The only verse in the Bible that hints at infinite space.

g. At times of eclipse. 'the full moon' keseh conj.; Hebr. kisseh 'throne'. • 'spreading', parosh in preference to the Hebr. parshez, a hybrid form combining the roots parash and paraz.

h. 'traced a ring' haq hug conj.; Hebr. hoq hag 'circumscribed a limit'.

i. The high mountains, which support the vault of heaven, are rocked by thunder, the voice of God, Ps 29, or by earthquake, Ps 18:7.

j. Leviathan, see 3:8e and 7:12f.

Bildad's rhetoric is beside the point

26 Job spoke next. He said:

To one so weak, what a help you are,
for the arm that is powerless, what a rescuer!
What excellent advice you give the unlearned,
you are never at a loss for a helpful suggestion!
For whom are these words of yours intended
1 K 22:24 and whence comes that wit you are now displaying? [k]

Job reaffirms his innocence while acknowledging God's power

27 And Job continued his solemn discourse. He said:

34:5 I swear by the living God who denies me justice, by Shaddai who has filled me with bitterness,
that as long as a shred of life is left in me, 33:4 Gn 2:7 and the breath of God breathes in my nostrils, my lips will never speak evil
nor my tongue utter any lie.
Far from admitting you to be in the right,
I shall maintain my integrity to my dying day.
I take my stand on my uprightness, I shall not stir:
in my heart I need not be ashamed of my days. [a] Let my enemy meet the fate of the wicked,
my adversary, the lot of the evil-doer!
For what hope does the godless have when he prays and raises his soul to God? [b]
Is God likely to hear his cries when disaster descends on him?
22:26 Did he make Shaddai all his delight, calling on him at every turn? [c]
But I am showing you the way that God works, making no secret of Shaddai's designs. [d]
And if you had all understood them for yourselves,
you would not have wasted your breath in empty words.

Discourse of Zophar [e]
The fate of the wicked

=20:29 This is the fate that God assigns [f] to the wicked, the inheritance that the violent receive from Shaddai.
Though he have many children, it is but for the sword;
his descendants will never have enough to eat.
Plague [g] will bury those he leaves behind him,
and their widows will have no chance to mourn them.
Though he amass silver like dust
20:10,15 Qo 2:26g and gather fine clothes like clay, let him gather!—some good man will wear them,
while his silver is shared among the upright.
8:14 All he has built himself is a spider's web, made himself a watchman's shack. [h]
He goes to bed rich, but never again: [i]
he wakes to find it has all gone.
20:25 Terror assails him in broad daylight, [j]
and at night a whirlwind sweeps him off.
An east wind picks him up and drags him away,
snatching him up from his homestead.

22 Pitilessly he is turned into a target,
and forced to flee from the hands that menace him.
23 His downfall is greeted with applause,
he is hissed wherever he goes.
18acb 24 [k] He is no more than a straw floating on the water,
his estate is accursed throughout the land,
nobody goes near his vineyard.
19 As drought and heat make snow disappear,
so does Sheol anyone who has sinned. [l] 20 The womb that shaped him forgets him and his name is recalled no longer. [m]
Thus wickedness is blasted as a tree is struck.
21 He used to ill-treat [n] the childless woman and show no kindness to the widow.
22 But he who lays mighty hold on tyrants
rises up to take away a life that seemed secure.
23 He let him build his hopes on false security,
but kept his eyes on every step he took.
24 He had his time of glory, now he vanishes, wilting like the saltwort once it is picked, [o]
and withering like an ear of corn.

D: A HYMN IN PRAISE OF WISDOM

Wisdom is beyond human reach [a]

Si 24 and notes

1 28 Silver has its mines,
and gold a place for refining.
2 Iron is extracted from the earth,
the smelted rocks yield copper.
3 Man makes an end of darkness, to the utmost limit he digs
the black rock in shadow dark as death.

k. Job's ironical rejoinder to Bildad, who seems to have lost sight of the precise point under discussion.

27 a. 'be ashamed of for my days' yehephar conj.; Hebr. yeheraph 'not insult'.

b. 'prays' yipga' conj.; Hebr. yibtza 'cuts off' or 'draws out his profits'. • 'raises to God' Gk, Syr.; 'God takes back' Hebr.

c. Job repeats what Eliphaz has said about the punishment of the wicked but refuses to apply it to himself.

d. Job is apparently saying that he has given a true and factual account of God's disconcerting and mysterious attitude. His friends have shut their eyes to the plain facts.

e. The fragmentary speech in 27:13–23 can hardly belong to Job; it repeats the argument of one of his friends, most probably that of Zophar.

f. 'that God assigns'. lit. 'on the part of God' me'el conj.; Hebr. 'im'el 'with God'.

g. lit. 'Death', but this word sometimes means the worst of diseases; here it is personified. See 18:13; Jr 15:2; 43:11; Rv 6:8.

h. 'spider's' Gk, Syr.; 'moth's' Hebr. Two images of instability.

i. lit. 'he will not begin again' Gk, Syr.; 'he is not put together again' Hebr.

j. 'in broad daylight' yomam conj.; Hebr. kammayim 'like waters'.

k. This section, 24:18–24, is placed here only conjecturally. The text is in a bad state and requires many corrections.

l. 'snow', lit. 'the snow-waters'. • 'anyone who has sinned' conj.; 'they have sinned' Hebr.

m. 'that shaped him' petaqo conj.; Hebr. metaqo 'gave him pleasure'. • 'his name' shemoh conj.; Hebr. rimmah 'maggot'.

n. 'ill-treat' hera' Targ.; Hebr. ro'eh 'pasturing'.

o. v. corrected in accordance with Gk; 'they faint, they run utterly to waste'. Saltwort is a green, edible plant found on the shores of the Dead Sea. v. 25 is after 24:17.

28 a. The original position and significance of this poem in the Dialogue are far from clear (see Introduction, p. 754). The poem offers certain analogies with Pr 8:22seq., where, however, Wisdom, envisaged as the inspirer of the works of God at the beginning of the world, later becomes the inspirer of humanity. Here, however, the poet is speaking of a Wisdom inaccessible to human beings. Ba 3:9–4:4 will later adopt the same theme, though speaking of a Wisdom revealed by special favour to Israel in the Law. Here, then, the description is of a completely transcendental Wisdom, incarnating the mystery of the ways of God and hard to distinguish from Wisdom as divine attribute, though in this case personified in an unusual way. The notion of a mysterious Wisdom, having her own dwelling-place, where she is finally discovered by God, is perhaps the echo of some ancient myth. The idea may be stated thus: Wisdom, having inspired God's plan, having the key to all his works and incarnating his Providence, is beyond the intellectual reach of human beings; despite all efforts and discoveries, they can never penetrate the final mystery of a Wisdom far surpassing their scope.

Foreigners bore into ravines [b] 4
in unfrequented places,
swinging suspended far from human beings.
That earth from which bread comes 5
is ravaged underground by fire. [c]
There, the rocks have veins of sapphire 6
and their dust contains gold.
That is a path unknown to birds of prey, 7
unseen by the eye of any vulture;
a path not trodden by the lordly beasts, [d] 8
where no lion ever walked.
Man attacks the flint, 9
upturning mountains by their roots.
He cuts canals [e] through the rock, 10
on the watch for anything precious.
He explores the sources of rivers, [f] 11
bringing hidden things to light.
Qo 7:24 Si 1:6 Ba 3:15 But where does Wisdom come from? [g] 12
Where is Intelligence to be found?

Ba 3:29–31 No human being knows the way to her, [h] 13
she is not to be found on earth where they live.
'She is not in me,' says the Abyss; 14
'Nor here,' replies the Sea.
She cannot be bought with solid gold, 15
nor paid for with any weight of silver, nor valued against gold of Ophir, 16 precious agate or sapphire.
Ws 7:9 Neither gold nor glass compares with her, 17
for her, a vase of fine gold would be no exchange, let alone coral or crystal: 18
better go fishing for Wisdom than for pearls!
Topaz from Cush is worthless in comparison, 19
and gold, even refined, is valueless.
But where does Wisdom come from? 20
Where is Intelligence to be found?

She cannot be seen by any living creature, 21
she is hidden from the birds of the sky.
26:6d Perdition and Death both say, 22
'We have heard only rumours of her.'
Pr 2:6;8:27–30 Ba 3:37 God alone understands her path 23
and knows where she is to be found.
(For he sees to the remotest parts of the earth, 24 and observes all that lies under heaven.)
When he willed to give weight to the wind 25
36:27–33 Is 40:12–14 and measured out the waters with a gauge, when he imposed a law on the rain 26
and mapped a route for thunderclaps to follow, Si 1:8–9,19 then he saw and evaluated her, 27
looked her through and through, assessing her. [i]
Then he said to human beings, 28
111:10 Pr 1:7a;8:13 'Wisdom?—that is fear of the Lord;
Intelligence?—avoidance of evil.'

E: CONCLUSION OF THE DIALOGUE

Job's complaints and apologia [a]

a. His former happiness

29 And Job continued his solemn discourse. He said:

Will no one bring back to me the months that have gone,
and the days when God was my guardian,
when his lamp shone over my head,
and his light was my guide in the darkness? (Ps 18:28+)
Shall I ever see my days of harvest again when God protected my tent; [b] (1:10)
when Shaddai still dwelt with me, and my children were around me; (Ps 127:3–5; 128:3)
when my feet were bathed in milk, (20:17) and streams of oil poured from the rocks? [c] (Dt 32:13–14)
When I went out to the gate of the city, (5:4c)
when I took my seat in the square, as soon as I appeared, the young men stepped aside, (Lv 19:32)
and the old men rose to their feet.
Men of note broke off their speeches, (Ws 8:10–12)
and put their hands over their mouths;
the voices of rulers were silenced,
and their tongues stayed still in their mouths.
[d]They waited anxiously to hear me,
and listened in silence to what I had to say.
When I had finished, no one contradicted,
my words dropping on them, one by one.
They waited for me as though for rain, (Dt 32:2)
open-mouthed as though for a late shower.
If I smiled at them, it was too good to be true, (Pr 16:15)
they watched my face for the least sign of favour.
As their chief, I told them which course to take,
like a king living among his troops,
and I led them wherever I chose. [e]

On hearing me, people congratulated me, (22:6–9)
on seeing me, people deferred to me, because I freed the poor in distress (Ps 72:12; Is 11:4–5)
and the orphan who had no helper.
The dying man's blessing rested on me and I gave the widow's heart cause to rejoice.

b. 'Foreigners (bore into) ravines' nehalim 'am ger conj.; Hebr. nehal me'im gar unintelligible. Mining was left to foreign slaves and prisoners of war. It usually took place in deserted parts of the country, notably in the desert of Sinai.

c. 'by fire' Vulg.; 'as if by fire' Hebr.

d. lit. 'the sons of pride', cf. 41:26.

e. lit. 'Niles'.

f. Which rise from the subterranean abyss. • 'explores' hippes conj.; Hebr. hibbesh 'binds'. • 'sources' mabbeka conj.; Hebr. mibbeki 'of weeping' (?).

g. 'where does (Wisdom) come from' following one Hebr. MS, cf. v. 20; 'where is she found' MT.

h. 'road' Gk; 'price' Hebr.

i. 'looked her through and through' hebinah following five MSS; MT reads hekinah 'established her', 'founded her'. Should the latter translation be adopted, the second verb should be rendered 'putting her to the test'.

29 a. Conceivably part of this discourse (30–31) may originally have belonged to Bildad's reply in the third cycle of discourses. The note: 'Job continued his solemn discourse' perhaps indicates that originally the passage belonged in another context. Attempts at subdividing the speech do not, however, give satisfactory results, and it has an internal unity which it is preferable not to disturb. It opens with a picture of happy life, which is of historic value in understanding the ideals of the Israelites.

b. 'protected' Gk, Syr.; 'in intimacy' Hebr.

c. Hebr. adds 'with me'.

d. vv. 21–25 are placed before v. 11: they follow on from v. 10 and apparently lead up to v. 11. Their displacement is probably due to a copyist's error.

e. 'I led them wherever I chose' ba'asher 'obilam yannahu conj.; Hebr. ka'asher 'abelim yenahem 'like someone who consoles the afflicted'.

19:9 Uprightness I wore as a garment, 14
Ps 132:9 fair judgement was my cloak and my turban.
Is 59:17
Ep 6:14
I was eyes for the blind, 15
and feet for the lame.
Who but me was father of the poor? 16
Pr 29:7 The stranger's case had a hearing from me.
Pr 30:14 I used to break the fangs of the wicked, 17
and snatch their prey from their jaws.

And I used to say, 'I shall die in honour,[f] 18
after days as numerous as the sand.
Ps 1:1–3 My roots can reach the water, 19
the dews of night settle on my leaves.
My glory will be for ever new 20
and the bow[g] in my hand forever strong.'

b. His present misery

30 And now I am the laughing-stock 1 of people who are younger than I am and whose parents I would have disdained to put with the dogs guarding my flock.[a] 24:4seq. And what use to me was the strength of their hands?— 2 enfeebled as they were,[b] worn out by want and hunger, 3 for they used to gnaw the roots[c] of the thirsty ground—that place of gloom, ruin and desolation—24:24o they used to pick saltwort among the scrub, 4 making their meals off roots of broom.
Outlawed from human company, 5
which raised hue and cry against them, as against thieves, they made their homes in the sides of ravines, 6
in holes in the earth or in clefts of rock.
You could hear them braying from the bushes 7
as they huddled together in the thistles.
Children of scoundrels, worse, nameless people, 8
the very outcasts of society![d]
16:7–11 And these are the ones who now make up songs about me 9
Ps 69:11–12 and use me as a byword!
Lm 3:14
Filled with disgust, they keep their distance, 10
on seeing me, they spit without restraint.
29:20g And since God has loosened my bow-string and afflicted me, 11
they too throw off the bridle in my presence.
Ps 109:5 Their brats surge forward on my right, 12
Zc 3:1 to see when I am having a little peace,
and advance on me with threatening strides.[e]
They cut off all means of escape 13
seizing the chance to destroy me, and no one stops them.[f]
They move in, as if through a wide breach, 14
and I go tumbling[g] beneath the rubble.
Terror rounds on me, 15
my confidence is dispersed[h] as though by the wind,
my hope of safety vanishes like a cloud.

16:12–17 And now the life in me trickles away, 16 days of grief have gripped me.
At night-time sickness[i] saps my bones 17
I am gnawed by wounds that never sleep.

18 Violently, he has caught me[j] by my clothes,
has gripped me by the collar of my coat.
19 He has thrown me into the mud;
I am no more than dust and ashes.

20 I cry to you, and you give me no answer;
I stand before you, but you take no notice.[k]
21 You have grown cruel to me,
and your strong hand torments me unmercifully.
22 You carry me away astride the wind and blow me to pieces in a tempest.
23 Yes, I know that you are taking me towards death,
to the common meeting-place of all the living.

24 Yet have I ever laid a hand on the poor
when they cried out for justice in calamity?[l] 25 Have I not wept for those whose life is hard, felt pity for the penniless?
26 I hoped for happiness, but sorrow came;
I looked for light, but there was darkness.
27 My stomach seethes, is never still,
days of suffering have struck me.
28 Sombre I go, yet no one comforts[m] me,
and if I rise in the council, I rise to weep.
29 I have become brother to the jackal and companion to the ostrich.
30 My skin has turned black on me,
my bones are burnt with fever.
31 My harp is tuned to dirges,
my pipe to the voice of mourners.

Job's apologia[a]

1 31 I had made an agreement with my eyes not to linger on any virgin.[b] 2 Now what portion does God allot from above, what fate does Shaddai apportion from his heaven—
3 if not the disasters appropriate to the wicked and the calamities fit for evil-doers?
4 But surely he sees how I behave,
does he not count all my steps?
5 Have I been a fellow-traveller with falsehood, or hastened my steps towards deceit?[c]

31 a. In this protestation of innocence, OT morality reaches its highest stage of development, directly prefiguring the morality taught in the gospel. The form of this protestation of innocence is that of a conditional imprecation against oneself, required of the accused by law, Ex 22:9–10; Nb 5:20–22; 1 K 8:31–32.

without his having cause to bless me from his heart, 20
as he felt the warmth of the fleece from my lambs?
Have I raised my hand against an orphan, [m] 21
presuming on my credit at the gate?
If so, let my shoulder fall from its socket, 22
let my arm break off at the elbow!
For the terror of God would fall on me [n] 23
and I could not then stand my ground before his majesty.

or kept my fault a secret in my breast?
34 Have I ever stood in fear of common gossip,
or dreaded any family's contempt,
and so kept quiet, not venturing out of doors?[t]
35 Will no one give me a hearing?
I have said my last word;[u] now let Shaddai reply!
When my adversary has drafted his writ against me 36 I shall wear it on my shoulder, and bind it round my head like a royal turban.[v] 37 I shall give him an account of my every step and go as boldly as a prince to meet him.

40b End of the words of Job.[w]

III: THE DISCOURSES OF ELIHU[a]

Elihu joins the discussion

1 32 These three men stopped arguing with Job, because he was convinced of his
2 uprightness.[b] ·But Elihu son of Barachel the Buzite, of the clan of Ram, Gn 22:21 Jr 25:23 became very angry. He fumed with rage against Job for thinking that he was right 3 and God was wrong; ·and he was equally angry with the three friends for giving 4 up the argument and thus putting God in the wrong.[c] ·While they and Job were 5 talking,[d] Elihu had waited, because they were older than he was; ·but when he saw that the three men had not another word to say in answer, his anger burst out.
6 And Elihu son of Barachel the Buzite began to speak. He said:

d. Other sins against the neighbour: Job has not coveted or stolen the possessions of others.

e. The sin of adultery.

f. This v. is probably a gloss.

g. 'devoured' tiseroph conj.; Hebr. tesharesh 'uprooted'.

h. Relations between master and servant had always been humanely regulated by the Law. v. 15 bases the rights of slaves on the fact that all human beings are God's creatures. Paul observes that slaves and master have the one Lord.

i. Another sin against society: the dishonest acquisition of land. • vv. 38–40[a] are repositioned here; the text mistakenly puts them at the end of Job's apologia.

j. Translation approximate: some plant the name of which has the root-meaning 'bad smell'.

k. After the sins against justice, next the sins against active love and kindliness—a duty required out of gratitude to God.

l. 'guided (me)' conj.; 'I guided her' (my mother) Hebr.

m. To show hostility or to intimidate, see Is 11:15; 19:16; Zc 2:13, and so defeat him at law.

n. 'of God would fall on me' 'el ye'eta'li conj.; Hebr. 'elay 'ed 'el 'for me, disaster from God'.

o. Greed and arrogance of the rich who think they can do without God.

p. After the cult of Mammon, next the cult of the celestial bodies. Kissing the hand was a gesture of adoration.

q. Job does not mean an appropriate revenge, regarded as perfectly normal practice (see, however, Ex 23:4–5; Lv 19:18; Pr 20:22; 25:21–22), but goes even further, not allowing himself to rejoice over the misfortunes of an enemy, or to curse him.

r. 'to the traveller' versions; 'on the road' Hebr. In the ancient East, hospitality was regarded as a major virtue.

s. 'from others', lit. 'from men' conj.; 'like a man' Hebr., with alternative readings 'like most people' or 'like Adam'.

t. vv. 33–34 do not refer to any specific sin but to an attitude that presupposes guilt. Job has never had to hide from human beings; he is even prepared to appear before God.

u. lit. 'Here is my taw' (last letter of the alphabet).

v. The scroll with the accusation written on it. Job, confident of refuting the charge, would wear it as a badge of honour.

w. An editorial note. • vv. 38–40[a] will be found before v. 16.

32 a. There is nothing leading up to Elihu's intervention in the Dialogue and no reference to him in the Epilogue. Argument, vocabulary and style are all very different from those of the previous speakers; some passages duplicate the discourses of Yahweh. It may be, therefore, that the discourses of Elihu have been added to the book by another hand.

b. Nothing being able to shake Job's conviction of his own innocence, they abandon the discussion as useless.

c. Hebr. reads 'thus leaving Job in the wrong': scribal correction.

d. 'While they were talking' conj.; 'in words' Hebr.

Prologue

I am still young,
and you are old,
so I was shy and hesitant
to tell you what I know.
12:12;15:10 Si 25:4–6 I thought, 'Age ought to speak, 7 advancing years will convey wisdom.'
There is, you see, a spirit residing in humanity, 8
1 K 3:12 Jm 1:5 the breath of God conferring intelligence. [e] Ws 4:8 Great age does not give wisdom, 9
nor seniority fair judgement.
And so I ask you for a hearing; [f] 10
now it is my turn to tell what I know.
Up to now, I was hanging on your words, 11
I paid attention to your arguments
as each of you chose his words.
I paid very close attention; 12
and I see that none of you has confounded Job, not one of you has refuted what he says.
4:12seq.;11:6 So do not say, 'We have found wisdom; 13
our teaching is divine and not human.' [g]
I am not going to follow the same line of argument; [h] 14
my reply to Job will be couched in different terms.

They are nonplussed for an answer, 15
words have failed them.
I have been waiting. Since they do not speak, 16
since they have given up the argument,
now I shall have my say, 17
my turn has come to say what I know.
For I am full of words 18
and forced to speak by a spirit within me;
Jr 20:9 within me, it feels like new wine seeking a vent, 19
Mt 9:17par. bursting out of new wine-skins. [i]
To gain relief, I must speak, 20
I must open my lips and reply.
I shall not take anyone's side, 21
I shall not flatter anyone.
I do not know how to flatter— 22
or my Creator would make short work of me.

Job's presumption

33 So, Job, please listen to my words 1 and attend to all I have to say.
Now as I open my mouth, 2
and my tongue shapes words against my palate,
I shall utter words of wisdom from the heart, [a] 3
my lips will speak in all sincerity.
Refute me, if you can. 5
Prepare yourself, take up your position!
Look, I am your equal, not some god, [b] 6
10:8–12 Gn 2:7 like you I was moulded out of clay.
God's was the spirit that made me, 4
Shaddai's the breath that gave me life.
13:21 No fear of me, therefore, need affright you, 7
my hand will not lie heavy over you. [c]

How could you say in my hearing—
for the sound of your words did not escape me—
'I am clean, and sinless, 10:7;16:17; 23:10;27:5
I am pure, without fault. [d]
But he keeps inventing excuses against me [e]
and regards me as his enemy. 13:24;19:11
He puts me in the stocks, 13:27
he watches my every path'?
In saying so, I tell you, you are wrong:
for God is greater than any human being.
Why then quarrel with him
for not replying to you, word for word?
God speaks first in one way,
and then in another, although we do not realise it.
In dreams and in night-visions, 4:12–16
when slumber has settled on humanity Gn 20:3; 41:1seq.
and people are asleep in bed, Dn 4:2seq.
he speaks in someone's ear,
frightens him with apparitions [f]
to turn him from what he is doing and to put an end to his pride. [g]
And thus he preserves his soul from the abyss,
his life from passing down the Canal.
Or again, he corrects by the sufferings of the sick-bed, [h] Dt 8:5+ Pr 3:12
when someone's bones tremble continuously and the thought of food revolts him, Ps 107:18
however tasty it is,
and his flesh rots away while you watch it 19:20
and the bones beneath begin to show,
and his soul is drawing nearer to the abyss
and his life to the dwelling of the dead. [i] Then, if there is an Angel near him, a Mediator, [j] one in a thousand,
to remind him where his duty lies,
to take pity on him and to say,
'Spare him from going down to the abyss:
I have found the ransom for his life,' [k]

e. Elihu contrasts 'charismatic' wisdom, revealed by the spirit, with the wisdom of experience. The traditional wisdom of the East, brought into Israel by the sages, insisted on the primacy of divine wisdom, see Pr 21:30, the connection between wisdom and uprightness, see Ps 119:99–100; Pr 1:7; 10:31; 15:33, and the conviction that God is the giver of wisdom, Pr 2:6; 15:33. Inspired wisdom was also known outside the schools of the sages, see Gn 41:38–39; Is 11:2. In Dn 5:11,12,14, Wisdom is the sphere of operation of the spirit. This is developed in Ws (1:5–7; 7:22–23; 9:17) in preparation for the new revelation of the Spirit in the NT see 1 Co 2:6–16.

f. lit. 'hear me' (plural) versions; 'hear me' (singular) Hebr.

g. 'our teaching', lit. '(God) teaches us' yallephenu conj.; Hebr. yiddephennu '(God) chases him'. Elihu exaggerates the claims of those whom he criticises.

h. 'the same line of argument' lit. 'thus', following Gk; 'an argument directed to me' Hebr.

i. Line emended; 'it bursts like new bottles' Hebr.

33 a. 'shall utter' yishereh conj.; Hebr. yosher 'right'. 'wisdom' is taken from the second line.

b. 'not some god' lo' 'el conj.; Hebr. la'el 'for God'.

c. 'my hand' kappi following Gk; Hebr. 'akeppi not clear.

d. Summary of several of Job's protestations.

e. Summarising Job's many claims to have been baselessly persecuted by God. • 'excuses' Syr.; 'enmities' Hebr.

f. Following the Gk; 'and he seals by their correction (or: their bond)' Hebr.

g. 'what he is doing', lit. 'his works' Targ.; 'the work' Hebr. • 'put an end' yekasseah conj.; Hebr. yekasseh 'hide, cover'.

h. After the method of revelation, vv. 15–18, a second method (cf. v. 14) by which God speaks to humanity: by ordeal, such as Job is experiencing.

i. 'dwelling of the dead' Gk; 'those who cause death' Hebr.

j. lit. 'an interpreter'. The angel 'interprets' the meaning of suffering to the sick, makes him realise his sinfulness, v. 27, and intercedes for him with God, v. 24, see 5:1a. The idea is found elsewhere in the OT: the just person's intercession, see 42:8e, and his expiation for others, Is 53:10; the angels are intermediaries of prophetic revelation (Ezekiel, Daniel and Zechariah) and as protectors of human beings, Ps 91:11–13, conveying their prayers to God, Tb 12:12; but see Rv 8:3seq. Later Jewish apocryphal literature gives specific illustrations of this doctrine. There is an easy transition from this to the 'guardian angel', or mediating angel, of Christian doctrine, see Tb 5:4b; Mt 18:10; Ac 12:15.

k. 'spare him' Syr.; Hebr. unintelligible. 'for his life' is restored.

Ps 103:5 his flesh will recover its childhood freshness, [l] 25
he will return to the days of his youth.
He will pray to God who has restored him to favour, 26
and will come into his presence with joy.
He will tell others [m] how he has received saving justice and sing this hymn before his companions, 27
'I sinned and left the path of right, but God has not punished me as my sin deserved. [n]
He has spared my soul from going down to the abyss 28
and is making my life see the light.'
All this is what God keeps doing 29
again and yet again for human beings, Ps 56:13 to snatch souls back from the abyss 30
and to make the light of the living still shine.

Pay attention, Job, listen to me: 31
keep quiet, I have more to say.
If you have anything to say, refute me, 32 speak out, for I would gladly accept that you are upright.
If not, then listen to me: 33
keep quiet, and I will teach you wisdom.

The three sages have failed to justify God

34 Elihu continued his speech. He said: 1

And now, you sages, listen to what I say, 2 lend me your ears, you learned men.
=12:11 The ear distinguishes the value of what is said, 3
just as the palate can tell one food from another.
Let us consider together God's ruling 4
and decide what we all mean by good.
Job has been saying, 'I am upright 5
27:2 and God denies me fair judgement.
9:15;30:21 My judge is treating me cruelly, 6
my wound is incurable, for no fault of mine.' [a]
Can anyone else exist like Job, 7 15:16 who laps up mockery like water, [b] who consorts with evil-doers 8
and marches in step with the wicked?
Did he not say, 'No one derives any benefit 9
from enjoying the society of God'?

Listen to me then, like intelligent people. 10
8:3–7 Far be evil from God
Ps 92:15 or injustice from Shaddai!
Ps 62:12 For he pays people back for what they do, 11
Pr 24:12 treating each as his own conduct deserves. [c]
Si 16:14
↗Mt 16:27
↗Rm 2:6 Be sure of it: God never does wrong, 12
Shaddai does not pervert what is just.
Did someone else entrust the world to his care 13
was he given charge of the universe by someone else? [d] Ps 104:29–30 If he were to recall his spirit, [e] 14
to concentrate his breath back in himself,
Gn 6:3 all flesh would instantly perish 15
Gn 3:19 and all people would return to dust.
If you have any intelligence, listen to this, 16
lend your ear to the sound of my words.

17 Could an enemy of fair judgement ever govern?
Would you dare condemn the Upright One, the Almighty, 18 who says to a king, 'You are a scoundrel!' Is 40:23–24
and to nobles, 'You are wicked!', 19 who is unimpressed by princes and makes no distinction between rich and poor, Dt 10:17f
since all alike have been made by him?
20 They die suddenly, at dead of night, Ex 12:29
they perish—these great ones—and disappear:[f] Ws 18:14–16
it costs him no effort to remove a tyrant.
21 For his eyes keep watch on human ways, Ps 33:14–15 and he observes every step. Jr 32:19 22 No darkness, no shadow dark as death
where wrong-doers can hide!
23 He serves no writ[g] on anyone,
no summons to appear before God's court:
24 he breaks the powerful without enquiry Dn 2:21
and sets up others in their places.
25 He knows the sort of things they do!
He overthrows them at night, to be trampled on.
26 He beats them like criminals
chained up for all to see,[h] 27 since they have turned their backs on him, having understood so little of his ways 28 as to make the cries of the weak rise to him and let him hear the appeal of the afflicted.

29 But if he is still silent and no one can move him, if he veils his face, so that no one can see him, he is taking pity on nations and individuals,[i] Ws 11:23; 12:2 30 is setting some wrong-doer free from the meshes of affliction.[j]
31 When such a one says to God,
'I was misled,[k] I shall not do wrong any more;
32 although I have sinned,[l] instruct me;
although I did wrong, I will not do it again,' 33 in your opinion, should he punish such a one—
you who have rejected his decisions?[m]
This is for you to decide—not for me!—
so kindly enlighten us!

l. 'recover freshness' yirtah conj.; the unknown Hebr. word (rutapash) possibly comes from a related root.

m. 'tell' yebasser conj.; Hebr. yasheb 'give back'. • 'others', lit. 'to man'.

n. Line emended following the Gk; 'and he has not had equality for me' Hebr.

34 a. 'my judge . . . cruelly' 'alay meshopti 'akzar conj.; Hebr. 'al mishpati 'akazzeb 'I lie about being in the right'. • 'my wound' mahatzi conj.; Hebr. hitztzi 'my arrow'.

b. Misreading Job's attitude, Elihu classifies him as one of the 'scornful' attacked in wisdom literature, cf. Pr 21:24.

c. Classic formulation of the doctrine of retribution. In the NT, this is usually deferred to the Last Day.

d. The argument seems to be this: God is not the vice-regent of the universe; he does not administer the laws of someone else; they are the creation of his own omnipotence. Neither self-interest, therefore, nor force, can make him violate justice, see Ws 11:20–26; 12:11–18.

e. 'recall' Gk, Syr.; 'apply' Hebr. • 'his breath' is attached to the first line and 'his heart' omitted as superfluous.

f. 'great ones perish' yigwa'u sho'im conj.; Hebr. yego 'ashu 'am 'they are shaken, the people'.

g. 'writ' mo'ed conj.; Hebr. 'od unintelligible.

h. The text of vv. 26–33 is very corrupt and the translation is uncertain. Gk omits vv. 28–33. • 'chained up' 'asaram is restored on analogy with 36:13 and the first word of v. 27 'asher.

i. 'can move' yare'ish conj.; Hebr. yareshi'a 'condemned'. • 'is taking pity' yahon conj.; Hebr. yahad 'together'. To the classic objection that punishment sometimes seems to spare the wicked, Elihu replies that on these occasions justice is being tempered with mercy; see Ws 11:23; 12:2.

j. v. emended; Hebr. corrupt, lit. 'so that no wicked man may reign, snares for the people'.

k. 'I was misled' nishshe'iti conj.; Hebr. nasa'ti 'I have carried'.

l. 'although I have sinned' Vulg.; 'that I may see' Hebr.

m. 'his decisions' added for the sense; the verb is never used without an object. Job's criticism of God's methods is based on too rigid an idea of distributive justice which, if it were accurate, would admit of no exception and would forbid God ever to pardon. It would follow that Job should not apply this rigid idea to his own case; he should rather believe that God is testing him from a different motive. Elihu's own conclusion, however, is that Job adds contumacy to sin, v. 37.

Ordinary sensible people, however, will say to me, 34
and so will any sage who has been listening to me,
'Job's words are spoken without any knowledge, 35
what he says shows no intelligence.
Kindly examine him thoroughly, 36
since his answers imply that he is a criminal. [n]
For to his sin he now adds rebellion, 37 bringing law to an end among us [o]
and heaping abuse on God.'

God's transcendence

35 Elihu continued his speech. He said: 1

Do you think you can prove yourself upright 2
and establish your uprightness before God 7:20 by daring to say to him, 'What does it matter to you, 3 or how does it benefit me, whether I have sinned or not?' [a] Very well, I shall tell you 4
and your friends as well. [b]

Take a look at the skies and see, 5 observe how high the clouds are above you. [c]
If you sin, how can you affect him? 6
If you heap up crimes, what effect has it on him?
22:3 If you are upright, what do you give him, 7
what benefit does he receive at your hands?
Your wickedness affects only your fellows, 8
your uprightness, other human beings.
They too groan under the weight of oppression, 9
they cry for help under the tyranny of the mighty, [d]
but none of them thinks of saying, 'Where is God, my Maker, 10 who makes glad songs ring out at night, who has made us more intelligent than wild animals 11
wiser than birds in the sky?'
Cry they may, but get no answer, 12
to be spared from the arrogance of the wicked.
Of course God does not listen to trivialities, 13
Shaddai pays no attention to them.
And how much less when you say, 'I cannot see him, 14
my case is open and I am waiting for him.' [e] 21 Or, 'His anger never punishes, 15
he does not seem aware of human rebellion.' [f]
Hence, when Job speaks, he talks nonsense, 16 ignorantly babbling on and on.

5:17; 22:23–30 The real meaning of Job's sufferings [a]

36 Elihu went on speaking. He said: 1

Be patient a little longer while I explain, 2
for I have more to say on God's behalf.
I shall range far afield for my arguments 3
to prove my Maker just.
I guarantee, nothing I shall say will be untrue: 4
you have a man of sound learning here.
God does not reject anyone whose heart is pure [b] 5 or let the sinner live on in all his power. [c] 6

He does accord fair judgement to the afflicted;
7 he does uphold what the upright deserve.
When he raises kings to thrones, 2 Ch 33: 11–13
if they grow proud of their unending rule, [d] 8 then he fetters them with chains,
they are caught in the bonds of affliction.
9 He shows them the import of their deeds,
of the sins of pride they have committed.
10 In their ears he sounds a warning, 33:23
ordering them to turn back from doing wrong.
11 If they take notice and obey him,
the rest of their days are prosperous
and the years pass pleasantly.
12 If not, they go down the Canal and perish in their stupidity.
13 The stubborn, who cherish [e] their anger and do not cry for help when he chains them, 14 die in the bloom of youth
or live among the male prostitutes of the temple. [f] 15 But God saves the afflicted by his affliction, warning him [g] in his misery.
16 You, too, he would like to snatch from torment.
While you were enjoying boundless abundance,
with rich food piled high on your table, [h] 17 you did not bring the wicked to trial and did not give fair judgement to the orphan. [i] 18 Beware [j] of being led astray by abundance, of being corrupted by expensive presents.
19 Take the powerful to law, not merely the penniless,
those whose arm is strong, not merely the weak.
20 Do not crush people you do not know to install your relations in their place. [k] 21 Avoid any tendency to wrong-doing, for this is why affliction is testing you now.

n. 'Kindly' conjectural translation; the Hebr. word ('abi) apparently expresses a wish or plea. • 'imply that he is a' ke conj.; Hebr. be 'among'.

o. 'bringing law to an end' yasiph hoq conj.; Hebr. yispoq 'clapping his hands'.

35 a. Alternative translation: 'what good is it to me (to be) without sin?' Gk; 'how do I affect you if I sin?' Hebr.

b. Elihu takes up other sayings of Job (3:13, 15) to refute them, particularly those in which he reproaches God for unjustly rewarding human actions and for acting as though he took no interest in human activities, whether good or bad; see especially 7:20; 9:22.

c. Implying that God is still further beyond human reach.

d. Elihu seems to be thinking of those who are victims of the malice of others, v. 8. If God does not help them, it is because they do not have faith in him and rely on self-sufficiency instead of asking him to save them.

e. Elihu is referring especially to 23:3–9; see also 13:18–22.

f. 'human rebellion' following versions; Hebr. corrupt.

36 a. Eliphaz has already stated, 5:17, and elaborated, 22:23–30, the theme of this speech. The text is obscure, and it is hard to identify Elihu's fresh contribution at this point.

b. Line emended; 'God is powerful and does not reject, powerful by force of heart (?)' Hebr.

c. 'in all his power' taken from previous line (lit. 'powerful in strength').

d. 'rights' conj.; 'eyes' Hebr. • 'When he raises' bise'et conj.; Hebr. 'et (accusative particle). • 'of their rule', lit. 'who hold unending rule' conj.; 'and he gives them unending rule' Hebr.

e. 'cherish' yishmeru conj.; Hebr. yasimu 'place'.

f. lit. 'their life, among the male temple prostitutes'.

g. lit. 'opening his ear': making him understand, see Ps 40:6; Is 40:5.

h. Before 'with rich food' omit nahat, diplography of the previous word.

i. This verse, evidently corrupt, is variously translated. The conjectural translation here divides and arranges the vowels of the text in a different way from Hebr. Others suggest 'you will judge the judgement of the wicked and (your hands) will grasp justice' or, without making any emendation, 'if you incur a verdict of guilty, verdict and sentence will carry the day.'

j. 'Beware' hameh conj.; Hebr. ki hemah 'for anger'.

k. The text of vv. 19–20 seems irremediably corrupt and the translation is therefore uncertain. The emendations produce a likely meaning in the context, but the verses may in any case be misplaced. lit. the Hebr. reads 'will he cite your cry, not in anguish and all efforts of force? Do not sigh for the night, so that people can climb into their place'.

Si 42:15–43:33 Hymn to God's omnipotence [l]

See, God is sublime in his strength 22
and who can teach lessons as he does?
Is 40:13 Rm 11:33–34 Who has ever told him which course to take, 23
or dared to say to him, 'You have done wrong'?
Consider, rather, how you may praise his work, 24
a theme that many have sung.
This is something that everyone can see, 25
gazing, as we do, from afar.
Yes, the greatness of God exceeds our knowledge, 26
the number of his years is past counting.
It is he who makes the raindrops small 27
and pulverises the rain into mist.
And the clouds then pour this out, 28
sending it streaming down on the human race.
Ps 104:13seq. By these means, he sustains the peoples, [m] 31 giving them plenty to eat.
Ps 18:9–14 And who can fathom how he spreads the clouds, 29
or why such crashes thunder from his tent? [n]
He spreads a mist before him 30
and covers the tops of the mountains. [o]
He gathers up [p] the lightning in his hands, 32
assigning it the mark where to strike.
His crashing gives warning of its coming, 33
anger flashes out against iniquity. [q]

37 At this, my very heart quakes 1
and leaps out of its place.
Ps 18:13–14; 29 Listen, oh listen, to the blast of his voice 2 and the sound that issues from his mouth.
His lightning is hurled across the heaven, 3
it strikes to the extremities of earth.
After it comes a roaring sound, 4
God thunders with majestic voice.
He does not check his thunderbolts [a]
until his voice resounds no more.
5:9 Yes, certainly God shows us marvels [b] 5
and does great deeds that we cannot understand.
Ps 104:19–23 When hé says to the snow, 'Fall on the earth!' 6 to the showers, 'Now rain hard!' [c] he brings all human activity to a standstill, 7
for everyone to acknowledge his work.
The animals go back to their dens 8
and take shelter in their lairs.
9:9 The storm wind comes from the Mansion of the South, 9
and the north winds usher in the cold. [d] Ps 147:17 At the breath of God, ice comes next, 10
the surface of the waters hardens over.
He weighs the clouds down with moisture, 11
and the storm clouds radiate his lightning.
He himself guides their wheeling motion 12
presiding over their seasonal changes. [e]
They carry out his orders to the letter
all over this earthly world.
Whether to punish earth's peoples 13
or as a work of faithful love, he despatches them. [f]

14 Listen to this, Job, without flinching
and reflect on the marvellous works of God.
15 Do you know how God controls them or how his clouds make the lightning flash?
16 Do you know how he balances the clouds— Pr 8:28
a miracle of consummate skill?
17 When your clothes are hot to your body and the earth lies still under the south wind, 18 can you, like him, stretch out the sky, Gn 1:6
tempered like a mirror of cast metal? [g] 19 Teach me what we should say to him:
but better discuss no further, since we are in the dark.
20 Does he take note when I speak?
When human beings give orders, does he take it in?
21 There are times when the light vanishes,
behind darkening clouds;
then comes the wind, sweeping them away.
22 and brightness [h] spreads from the north.
God is clothed in fearful splendour: Ex 24:16f 23 he, Shaddai, is far beyond our reach.
Supreme in power, in equity,
excelling in saving justice, yet no oppressor—24 no wonder then that people fear him:
everyone thoughtful holds him in awe! [i]

IV: THE DISCOURSES OF YAHWEH

FIRST DISCOURSE

Job must bow to the Creator's wisdom

1 38 Then from the heart of the tempest [a] Yahweh gave Job his answer. He said:

2 Who is this, obscuring my intentions 42:3
with his ignorant words?
3 Brace yourself like a fighter;
I am going to ask the questions, and you are to inform me! [b]
4 Where were you when I laid the earth's foundations?
Tell me, since you are so well-informed!

l. After interpreting the ways of God, Elihu proceeds to a eulogy of God's power and wisdom. Same procedure in Rm 11:33.

m. v. 31 is repositioned after v. 28 on the strength of its introductory words, referring to the clouds. • 'sustains' yazun conj.; Hebr. yadin 'judges'.

n. 'who' Syr.; 'if (he understands)' Hebr. • The cloud, 'tent of Yahweh', is the stormcloud spreading across the sky to the growling of the thunder, his 'voice'. As the cloud lowers, God shoots his lightning like an arrow. See Ex 13:22h; 19:16g; Ps 18:9–14; 29.

o. 'mist', lit. 'his vapour', Targ.; 'his light' Hebr. • 'tops of the mountains' ra'she harim conj.; Hebr. shoreshe hayyam Hebr.

p. 'gathers up' nissah conj.; Hebr. kissah 'covers'.

q. 'flashes out' meqanneh conj.; Hebr. miqneh 'flock'. • 'against iniquity' 'al 'awlah conj.; Hebr. 'al 'oleh 'against the one who rises'.

37 a. 'does not check his thunderbolts' conj.; 'does not check them' Hebr.

b. Line emended. 'God thunders wonderfully with his voice' Hebr.

c. After 'to the showers' we omit dittography 'and to the showers of rain'. • 'Now rain hard!', lit. 'be strong!' conj.; 'its strength' Hebr.

d. The 'Mansion of the South', see 9:9: lit. the 'mansion', or storehouse (see 38:22; Ps 135:7) of the hurricane, which is a southerly wind. The 'north winds': lit. 'the scatterers'.

e. Text emended: a literal translation of the Hebr. would give, 'and it (the lightning) in whirling circles according to his orders'.

f. 'earth's peoples' le'amme ha'aretz conj.; Hebr. 'im le'artzo 'if (it is) for his earth'. • 'he despatches them' yotzi'am conj.; Hebr. yametzi'ehu 'he causes it to find'.

g. The firmament, the brazen summer sky.

h. 'brightness' zohar conj.; Hebr. zahab 'gold'.

i. 'hold him in awe' lo yire'at conj.; see Gk; Hebr. lo' yire'eh 'he does not see (all thoughtful people)'.

38 a. The familiar imagery for a theophany, evoking the overwhelming power of God, see Ps 18:7–15; 50:3; Ezk 1:4; Na 1:3, see Ex 13:22h; 19:16g.

b. 'like a fighter' one Hebr. MS, Syr., Targ.; 'like a man' MT (emendation of vowels), as also in 40:7. • The situation is reversed: Yahweh now attacks, asking Job to present his defence.

Who decided its dimensions, do you know? 5
Zc 1:16 Or who stretched the measuring line across it?
26:7f What supports its pillars at their bases? 6
Ps 118:22 Who laid its cornerstone
Ba 3:34 to the joyful concert of the morning stars 7
Ps 148:2–3 Zc 4:7 and unanimous acclaim of the sons of God?
Who pent up [c] the sea behind closed doors 8
when it leapt tumultuous from the womb, when I wrapped it in a robe of mist 9
and made black clouds its swaddling bands;
when I cut out the place I had decreed for it 10
and imposed gates and a bolt?
7:12f Ps 104:6–9 Pr 8:29 'Come so far,' I said, 'and no further; 11
here your proud waves must break!' [d]

Have you ever in your life given orders to the morning 12
or sent the dawn to its post, to grasp the earth by its edges 13
and shake the wicked out of it?
She turns it as red as a clay seal, 14
she tints it [e] as though it were a dress, 24:13–17 stealing the light from evil-doers [f] 15
and breaking the arm raised to strike.
Have you been right down to the sources of the sea [g] 16
and walked about at the bottom of the Abyss?
Have you been shown the gates of Death, 17
10:21–22 have you seen the janitors of the Shadow dark as death? [h]
Have you an inkling of the extent of the earth? 18
Tell me all about it if you have!
Which is the way to the home of the Light, [i] 19
and where does darkness live?—
You could then show them the way to their proper places, 20
you could put them on the path [j] home again!
If you do know, you must have been born when they were, 21
you must be very old by now!

Have you visited the place where the snow is stored? 22
Ex 9:18–26 Jos 10:11 Is 28:17; 30:30 Have you seen the stores of hail, which I keep for times of distress, 23
for days of battle and war?
From which direction does the lightning fork, 24
where in the world does the east wind blow itself out?
Who bores a channel for the downpour 25
or clears the way for the rolling thunder so that rain may fall on lands where no one lives, 26
and the deserts void of human dwelling, to meet the needs of the lonely wastes 27
and make grass sprout on the thirsty ground? [k]
Has the rain a father? 28
Who begets the dewdrops?
What womb brings forth the ice, 29
who gives birth to the frost of heaven,
when the waters grow hard [l] as stone 30
and the surface of the deep congeals?

9:9d Am 5:8 Can you fasten the harness of the Pleiades, 31 or untie Orion's bands?

32 Can you guide the Crown season by season and show the Bear and its cubs which way to go? [m] 33 Have you grasped the celestial laws?
Could you make their writ run on the earth?
34 Can your voice carry as far as the clouds and make the pent-up waters do your bidding? [n] 35 Will lightning flashes come at your command and answer, 'Here we are'? Ba 3:35 36 Who endowed the ibis with wisdom and gave the cock his intelligence? [o] 37 Whose skill details every cloud and tilts the water-skins of heaven 38 until the dust solidifies and the cracks in the ground close up?

39 Do you go hunting prey for the lioness; [p] Ps 104:20–22
do you satisfy the hunger of young lions 40 where they crouch in their den, waiting eagerly in the bushes?
41 Who makes provision for the raven Ps 147:9
when his little ones cry out to God
craning their necks in search of food? [q]

1 39 Do you know when mountain goats give birth? [a]
Have you ever watched deer in labour?
2 Have you ever counted the months that they carry their young?
Do you know when they give birth?
3 They crouch to drop [b] their young,
they get rid of their burdens
4 and the calves, having grown big and strong, go off into the desert and never come back to them.
5 Who has given the wild donkey his freedom,
who has undone the harness of the brayer?
6 I have given him the wastelands as his home, Lk 12:24
the salt plain as his habitat.
7 He scorns the turmoil of the town,
obeys no donkey-man's shouts.
8 The mountains are the pastures that he ranges
in quest of anything green.

c. 'Who pent up' Vulg.; 'he has pent up' Hebr.

d. 'must break' yishtabber following Gk; Hebr. yashit bi 'he will put to (pride)'.

e. 'tints it', lit. 'is tinted' titztzabu' conj.; Hebr. yiteyatztzebu 'they keep upright'.

f. Not the light of day: night is their 'light', cf. 24:13seq.

g. The springs from which, it was thought, the seas were supplied.

h. 'janitors' Gk; 'gates' Hebr. • 'Shadow dark as death' is Sheol, Nb 16:33f. On 'the gates of Death', see Is 38:10; Ps 9:13; 107:18; Ws 16:13.

i. Light is personified as an entity distinct from the sun. She goes home every evening, when Darkness replaces her.

j. 'put them on the path', lit. 'lead them (by the paths) . . . again' tebi'ennu conj.; Hebr. tabin 'for you to understand (the paths)'.

k. 'on the thirsty ground' mitztzivyah conj.; Hebr. motza' 'place of origin'. • vv. 26–27 emphasise the generosity of God, or possibly his care for creatures other than human beings.

l. 'grow hard' yitehamma'u conj.; Hebr. yithabba'u 'hide'.

m. 'the Crown', i.e. the northern Crown, according to one of the possible derivations of the word. Alternatives: 'the shepherd's star' (compare Vulg. 'Lucifer') or 'the Hyades' since Aldebaran marked the rainy season and time for ploughing. The Bear's 'cubs' are perhaps the constellation of the Little Bear.

n. 'make do your bidding' Gk; 'make cover you' Hebr.

o. 'ibis' and 'cock': translation uncertain. The word translated 'cock' occurs only here, but is rendered thus by a Targum. tuhot, 'ibis', seems to be a transcription of Thoth, the Egyptian ibis-god of wisdom. The word occurs once elsewhere, Ps 51:6, but with a totally different meaning. Both these birds were credited with having the faculty of foreknowledge: the ibis announcing the flooding of the Nile, the cock announcing the coming of day and, according to certain popular beliefs, rain.

p. From inanimate nature to the animal kingdom. The fiercest and wildest species, and also the most bizarre, are selected. God provides for them all.

q. 'craning their necks', lit. 'standing up' yite 'alu conj.; Hebr. yite'u 'wandering'.

39 a. The wild goats and the hinds are selected because their breeding goes unobserved and uncared for except by God; so too the ostrich.

b. 'to drop' tephalletnah conj.; Hebr. tephallahenah 'to cleave' (?).

Is the wild ox willing to serve you 9 or spend a night beside your manger?
If you tie a rope round his neck 10
will he harrow the furrows for you? [c]
Can you rely on his massive strength 11
and leave him to do your heavy work?
Can you depend on him to come home 12
and pile your grain on your threshing-floor?

Can the wing of the ostrich be compared [d] 13
with the plumage of stork or falcon? [e]
She leaves her eggs on the ground 14
with only earth to warm them;
forgetting that a foot may tread on them 15
or a wild animal crush them.
Lm 4:3 Cruel to her chicks as if they were not hers, 16
little she cares if her labour goes for nothing.
God, you see, has deprived her of wisdom 17
and given her no share of intelligence.
Yet, if she bestirs herself to use her height, 18
she can make fools of horse and rider too.

Are you the one who makes the horse [f] so brave 19
and covers his neck with flowing mane?
Do you make him leap like a grasshopper? 20
His haughty neighing inspires terror.
Exultantly he paws the soil of the valley, 21
and charges the battle-line in all his strength.
He laughs at fear; he is afraid of nothing, 22
he recoils before no sword.
On his back the quiver rattles, 23
the flashing spear and javelin.
Trembling with impatience, he eats up the miles; 24
when the trumpet sounds, there is no holding him.
At each trumpet blast he neighs exultantly. 25
He scents the battle from afar,
the thundering of the commanders and the war cry.

Jr 8:7 Is it your wisdom that sets the hawk flying 26
when he spreads his wings to travel south? [g]
Does the eagle soar at your command 27 to make her eyrie in the heights?
She spends her nights among the crags 28
with a needle of rock as her fortress,
from which she watches for prey, 29
fixing it with her far-ranging eye.
Even her young drink blood; 30
Mt 24:28par. where anyone has been killed, she is there.

40 Still speaking to Job, Yahweh said: [a] 1 31

Is Yahweh's opponent going to give way? [b] 2 32
Has God's critic thought up an answer?

Job replied to Yahweh: 3 33

My words have been frivolous: what can I reply? 4 34
I had better lay my hand over my mouth.

35 5 I have spoken once, I shall not speak again; [c]
I have spoken twice, I have nothing more to say. Ps 62:11d

SECOND DISCOURSE

God is master of the forces of evil

40:1 6 Yahweh gave Job his answer from the heart of the tempest. He said:

2 7 Brace yourself like a fighter,
I am going to ask the questions, and you are to inform me!
3 8 Do you really want to reverse my judgement,
put me in the wrong and yourself in the right?
4 9 Has your arm the strength of God's,
can your voice thunder as loud?
5 10 Come on, display your majesty and grandeur,
robe yourself in splendour and glory.
6 11 Let the fury of your anger burst forth,
humble the haughty at a glance!
7 12 At a glance, bring down all the proud, [d]
strike down the wicked where they stand.
8 13 Bury the lot of them in the ground, Nb 16:31–34
shut them, every one, in the Dungeon. [e] 9 14 And I shall be the first to pay you homage, since your own right hand is strong enough to save you.

Behemoth [f]

10 15 But look at Behemoth, my creature, just as you are!
He feeds on greenstuff like the ox,
11 16 but what strength he has in his loins,
what power in his stomach muscles!
12 17 His tail is as stiff as a cedar,
the sinews of his thighs are tightly knit.
13 18 His bones are bronze tubes,
his frame, like forged iron.
14 19 He is the first of the works of God.
His Maker threatened him with the sword, Gn 3:24 15 20 forbidding him the mountain regions [g]
and all the wild animals that play there.
16 21 Under the lotus he lies,
he hides among the reeds in the swamps.
17 22 The leaves of the lotus give him shade,
the willows by the stream shelter him.

c. Conjectural emendation; Hebr., if translated literally, would give, 'If you tie a wild ox to a furrow his rope, will he harrow the valleys behind you?'

d. The whole section on the ostrich, vv. 13–18, is absent from the Gk and is thought by some scholars to be an addition.

e. 'Can the wing be compared with' hakenaph . . . ne'erkah conj.; Hebr. kenaph . . . ne'elasah 'the wing is bright'. The rest of the v. follows Targ.; Hebr. corrupt.

f. Here the war horse.

g. Migration, proof of the instinctive wisdom infused by the Creator, Jr 8:7.

40 a. This introductory verse is absent from Gk. Job had wanted debate with God. God confronts him with the mystery of his wisdom, manifest in his works.

b. 'opponent', lit. 'he who disputes' harab conj.; Hebr. harob 'the multitude'. • 'give way' yasur conj.; Hebr. yissor 'the critic'.

c. 'speak again' 'eshneh conj.; Hebr. 'e'eneh 'answer'.

d. 'proud' Gk; Hebr. repeats 'haughty'.

e. The 'Dungeon' is Sheol, Nb 16:33f, where the Shades are dumb.

f. This is the plural form of a word meaning 'beast', 'cattle'. The plural may perhaps indicate the typical 'beast' or 'brute', hence any sort of monster. Behemoth has often been identified with the elephant, or with a mythical buffalo mentioned in Ugaritic texts. Here, however, Behemoth is the hippopotamus, as symbol of brute force, controlled by God but beyond human power to tame.

g. Line emended gebul harim yissa' lo. Hebr. ki bul harim yise'u reads 'for the mountains yield him their produce', which seems inappropriate in the context.

If the river overflows, [h] he does not worry: 23 18
Jordan might come up to his mouth, but he would not care.
Who is going to catch him by the eyes 24 19 or put poles through his nose? [i]

3:8e Leviathan [j]

Leviathan, too! Can you catch him with a fish-hook 25 20 or hold his tongue down with a rope?
Can you put a cane through his nostrils 26 21
or pierce his jaw with a hook?
Ezk 19:4,9; 29:4;38:4
Will he plead lengthily with you, 27 22
addressing you in diffident tones?
Will he strike a bargain with you 28 23
to become your slave for life?
Will you make a pet of him, like a bird, 29 24
keep him on a lead to amuse your little girls?
Is he to be sold by the fishing guild 30 25
and then retailed by merchants? [k]
Riddle his hide with darts? 31 26
Or his head with fishing spears?
You have only to lay a finger on him 32 27
never to forget the struggle or risk it again!

41 Any hope you might have would be futile, 1 28
the mere sight of him would overwhelm you. [a]
When roused, he grows ferocious, 2 41:1
who could ever stand up to him? [b]
Who has ever attacked him with impunity? 3 2
No one beneath all heaven! [c]
Next I will talk of his limbs 4 3 and describe his matchless strength [d]— who can undo the front of his tunic 5 4 or pierce the double armour of his breastplate? [e]
Who dare open the gates of his mouth? 6 5
Terror reigns round his teeth!
His back is like rows of shields, 7 6
sealed with a stone seal, [f]
touching each other so close 8 7 that no breath could pass between, sticking to one another 9 8
making an impervious whole.
His sneezes radiate light, [g] 10 9
his eyes are like the eyelashes of the dawn.
Rv 9:17
From his mouth come fiery torches, 11 10
sparks of fire fly out of it.
His nostrils belch smoke 12 11
like a cauldron boiling on the fire. [h]
His breath could kindle coals, 13 12
flame issues from his mouth.
His strength resides in his neck, 14 13
violence leaps before him as he goes. [i]
When he stands up, the waves take fright 17 16
and the billows of the sea retreat. [j]
The strips of his flesh are jointed together, 15 14 firmly set in and immovable.
His heart is as hard as rock 16 15
unyielding as the lower millstone.

17 18 Sword may strike but will not stick in him,
no more will spear, javelin or lance.
18 19 Iron means no more to him than straw,
nor bronze than rotten wood.
19 20 No arrow can make him flee,
a sling-stone tickles him like hay.
20 21 Club seems to him like straw,
he laughs at the whirring javelin.
21 22 He has sharp potsherds underneath,
and moves across the slime like a harrow.
22 23 He makes the depths seethe like a cauldron,
he makes the sea fume like a scent burner.
23 24 Behind him he leaves a glittering wake—
a white fleece seems to float on the deeps. [k] 24 25 He has no equal on earth,
being created without fear.
25 26 He looks the haughtiest in the eye;
of all the lordly beasts [l] he is king.

Job's final answer

1 42 This was the answer Job gave to Yahweh:

2 I know that you are all-powerful:
what you conceive, you can perform.
3 I was the man who misrepresented your intentions 38:2
with my ignorant words. [a]
You have told me about great works that I cannot understand, about marvels which are beyond me, of which I know nothing.
4 (Listen, please, and let me speak:
I am going to ask the questions, and you are to inform me.) [b]
5 Before, I knew you only by hearsay but now, having seen you with my own eyes, [c] 6 I retract what I have said,
and repent in dust and ashes. [d]

h. 'overflows' Gk; 'oppresses' Hebr.
i. Restoring 'Who' (mi hu') which has fallen out after the last word (pihu) of v. 23. • 'poles' to lead him about like a bull? 'traps' Hebr.
j. The name, in its strict sense, indicates a monster of primeval Chaos, 3:8e, believed still to be living in the ocean. Here it is used of the crocodile, though the description still bears traces of the primeval monster which Yahweh subdued, see 7:12f, and which symbolised all powers hostile to God.
k. Teams of fishermen; 'merchants', lit. 'Canaanites', the merchants of the East.

41 a. 'Any hope you' Syr.; 'any hope he' Hebr. In the second line, the interrogative pronoun has been suppressed. In some modern versions in English, 41:1 is numbered 41:9 and subsequent verses accordingly.
b. 'he grows', lit. 'isn't he' conj.; 'he is not' Hebr. • 'to him', lit. 'in front of him' conj.; 'in front of me' Hebr., is a theological emendation. God being the only person who is irresistible.
c. 'attacked him with impunity' miqedimo wayyishelam conj.; Hebr. mieqeddimani wa'ashallem 'attacked me to make me give back'. Hebr. • 'No one' lo'hu' conj.; Hebr. li hu' 'to me, him'.
d. 'talk of his limbs' conj.; 'the word of strengths' Hebr. • 'incomparable' 'en 'erek conj.; Hebr. hen 'ereko corrupt.
e. 'breastplate' Gk; 'bridle' Hebr.
f. 'His back' Gk; 'pride' Hebr. • 'sealed with a stone seal' Gk.; 'shut, a tight seal' Hebr.
g. A shower of water drops, shining in the sun.
h. 'boiling' ('ogem) Syr.; Hebr. 'agmon 'a reed' (?).
i. 'violence' deba'ah conj.; Hebr. de'abah 'terror' (?).
j. v. repositioned for the sake of the context. • 'waves' gallim conj.; Hebr. 'elim 'gods'. • 'the billows of the sea' mishbere yam conj.; Hebr. mishshebarim 'because of the ruptures'.
k. When he dives the air bubbles rise; as he swims he leaves a gleaming furrow.
l. The 'lordly beasts' are the wild animals, see 28:8, type of the powerful things of the earth which God alone can control, 40:7–14.

42 a. 'I was the man', lit. 'Who is he', as in 38:2. • 'with words' added, with Gk, Syr., and on analogy with 38:2.
b. Probably a gloss, see 33:31; 38:3.
c. Not, strictly speaking, a vision, see Ex 33:20i, but a fresh appreciation of the true nature of God. Previously Job's conception of God had been conventional and secondhand, but now he experiences the mystery for himself and bows down before the Almighty. His questions have not been answered but he has come to understand that God cannot be called to account, and that his wisdom may give an unsuspected meaning to such realities as suffering and death.
d. The common gesture of sorrow and repentance, see 2:8.

V: EPILOGUE

Yahweh rebukes the three sages

When Yahweh had finished saying this to Job, he said to Eliphaz of Teman, 'I burn 7 with anger against you and your two friends, for not having spoken correctly about me as my servant Job has done. ·So now find seven bullocks and seven rams, and 8 take them back with you to my servant Job and make a burnt offering for yourselves, while Job, my servant, offers prayers for you. I shall show him favour [e] and shall not inflict my displeasure on you for not having spoken about me correctly, as my servant Job has done.' ·Eliphaz of Teman, Bildad of Shuah and Zophar of 9 Naamath went away to do as Yahweh had ordered, and Yahweh listened to Job with favour.

Yahweh restores Job's fortunes

Jm 5:11 And Yahweh restored Job's condition, while Job was interceding for his friends. 10
More than that, Yahweh gave him double what he had before. ·And all his 11 brothers and all his sisters and all his friends of former times came to see him. Over dinner in his house, they showed their sympathy and comforted him for all the evils Yahweh had inflicted on him. Each of them gave him a silver coin, [f] and each a gold ring. ·Yahweh blessed Job's latter condition even more than his former one. He 12 came to own fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen and a thousand she-donkeys. ·He had seven sons [g] and three daughters; 13 his first daughter he called 'Turtledove', the second 'Cassia' and the third 'Mas- 14
cara'. ·Throughout the land there were no women as beautiful as the daughters of 15
Job. And their father gave them inheritance rights like their brothers. [h]

After this, Job lived for another one hundred and forty years, and saw his 16
Gn 25:8;35:29 children and his children's children to the fourth generation. ·Then, old and full of 17 days, Job died. [i]

e. 'I shall show him favour' reading ki (or ki'et) instead of ki'im conj. i. The Gk has two additions. The first shows that the doctrine of the resurrection was thought in the second century BC to be implicit in the book: 'It is written that he will rise again with those whom the Lord will raise up.' The second tells us that Job lived in the land of Ausitis on the borders of Idumaea and Arabia; it identifies Ausitis with Jobab, Gn 36:33.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PSALMS

§1 Lyric poetry in all its forms was popular in Israel from the earliest times, as it was among her neighbours in Egypt, Mesopotamia and Canaan. Some samples are to be found in the historical books: the Song of Moses, Ex 15, the Song of the Well, Nb 21:17–18, the victory song of Deborah, Jg 5, David's elegy on Saul and Jonathan, 2 S 1, etc., and many years later the panegyric of Judas Maccabaeus, 1 M 3:3–9, and of his brother Simon, 1 M 14:4–15; in the New Testament, the Magnificat, Benedictus and Nunc Dimittis. In the prophetic books many passages belong to the same type of literature. Ancient collections once existed of which only the name or a few scraps survive: the Book of the Wars of Yahweh, Nb 21:14, and the Book of the Just, Jos 10:13; 2 S 1:18. But the bulk of the religious poetry of Israel is preserved in the Psalter.

§2 Designation

The psalter (Greek, psalterion, the stringed instrument used for the accompaniment of such songs or psalms) is a collection of one hundred and fifty psalms. From Ps 10 to Ps 148 the numbering of the Hebrew Bible (adopted here) is one figure ahead of the Greek and the Vulgate, which join 9 and 10 and also 114 and 115, but divide both 116 and 147 into two.

The Hebrew name for the Psalter is tehillim, 'hymns', but this designation fits only a certain number of psalms. Among the 'inscriptions' at the head of most of the psalms the word 'hymn of praise' is in fact used only once (Ps 145). The usual inscription is mizmor, which implies musical accompaniment. Some of these 'psalms' are also entitled 'songs', and this term, standing alone, is found in the inscription of every psalm in the collection known as the 'Songs of Ascents', 120–134. Other designations are less frequent and sometimes difficult to explain.

§3 Literary forms

A more satisfying classification is obtained by study of the various literary types of which there are, broadly speaking, three: hymn, entreaty, thanksgiving. The classification is not exhaustive since there are secondary forms which are exceptional or composite; nor does it always correspond to a grouping of the psalms by subject-matter or purpose.

1 Hymns (Ps 8, 19, 29, 33, 46–48, 76, 84, 87, 93, 96–100, 103–106, 113, 114, 117, 122, 135, 136, 145–150) Their structure is fairly uniform. Each opens with an invitation to praise God. The body of the hymn indicates motives for praise, the wonders of God as shown in nature, particularly in his work of creation, and as shown in human history, particularly in his saving work for his people. The conclusion either repeats the introductory formula or expresses a prayer.

Within this group two subdivisions may be identified according to subject-matter. The 'Songs of Zion', 46, 48, 76, 87, in markedly eschatological terms, hymn the glories of the Holy City, which is both dwelling-place of the Most High and goal of pilgrimage, see 84 and 122. The 'Psalms of the Kingship of God', particularly 47, 93, 96–98, in a style reminiscent of the prophets, celebrate the universal sovereignty of Yahweh. Since they make use of the vocabulary and metaphors of human coronation ceremonies, the theory has been advanced that these were associated with a feast of the Enthroning of Yahweh possibly celebrated annually in Israel, as the Enthroning of Marduk was in Babylon. But there is little evidence of the existence of such a feast in Israel.

2 Entreaties These supplicatory psalms (or psalms of suffering, laments), unlike the hymns, do not describe the glories of God but are addressed directly to him. They usually begin by invoking God, adding either an appeal for help, a prayer, or an expression of confidence. In the body of the psalm an effort is made to win God's sympathy by a description of the psalmist's misfortunes. Here conventional images are used, so that it is rarely possible to define the historical or personal background of the prayer: waters of the abyss, snares of death or of Sheol, savage beasts (lions, bulls, dogs) symbolising the psalmist's enemies, bones that grow dry or break, heart wildly beating and overcome with fear; all these conventional images recur. In these psalms there are protestations of innocence, 7, 12, 26, and acknowledgment of God's former kindnesses or reproaches for his seeming absence or forgetfulness, 9–10,22,44. But expressions of persistent confidence are also common, 3, 5, 42–43, 55–57, 63, 130, etc. and at times the psalm of entreaty is one long confident appeal, 4, 11, 16, 23, 62, 121, 125, 131. Not infrequently the entreaty ends, abruptly on occasion, with a sense of assurance that the prayer is heard, and with an act of thanksgiving, 6, 22, 69, 140.

These entreaties may be collective or individual.

a Collective entreaties (Ps 12, 44, 60, 74, 79, 80, 83, 85, 106, 123, 129, 137) Some national catastrophe is the occasion: defeat, the destruction of Jerusalem, a national emergency; on these occasions God is entreated to save and restore his people. Two psalms at least, 74 and 137, as also the collection of Lamentations attributed to Jeremiah, reflect the situation after the destruction of Jerusalem in 587, and 85 expresses the emotions of those who came back from exile. Ps 106 is a general confession of the sins of the nation.

b Individual entreaties (Ps 3, 5–7, 13, 17, 22, 25, 26, 28, 31, 35, 38, 42–43, 51, 54–57, 59, 63, 64, 69–71, 77, 86, 102, 120, 130, 140–143) This type is especially common and the content widely varied: besides the perils of death, persecution, exile and old age, these individual prayers beg for deliverance in particular from sickness, slander, and sin. The enemies complained of, or denounced, 'those who do evil', are barely defined; but whoever they may be, they are certainly not sorcerers, as some have thought, whose spells these psalms are intended to repel. It was at one time thought that the 'I' of these psalms was collective; this is not the case. Nor is it always the king speaking in the name of the people, as has been suggested. The accent is too individual and the absence of allusion to the king's person or office too marked to make these theories tenable. It is doubtless true that several of these psalms have been adapted to serve as national laments, thus 22, 28, 59, 69, 71, 102; it is also true that some, which we shall discuss later, are 'royal' psalms; and lastly, it is true that all these psalms did ultimately come into collective use (which is why they are found in the Psalter). Nonetheless, these prayers were composed for, or by, individuals to meet individual needs; the faith they express is entirely personal, and their entreaty comes straight from the heart.

3 Thanksgiving The psalms of entreaty may end, as we have seen, with gratitude to God for granting the request. In the thanksgiving psalms this gratitude becomes the main theme. These are relatively few in number: 18, 21, 30, 33, 34, 40, 65–68, 92, 116, 118, 124, 129, 138, 144. Some are collective, others individual. The people as a whole thanks God for danger averted, a successful harvest, divine favour shown to the king. The individual, having recalled past distress and God's answer to his prayer, expresses his gratitude and exhorts all the devout to join him in praising God. This last is often the occasion for a doctrinal development. The literary structure of the thanksgiving psalms resembles that of the hymns.

4 Exceptional and composite forms The three forms we have just described are not in watertight compartments: there is very often a mutual infiltration. Lamentation may be preceded by confident prayer, 27, 31, or followed by thanksgiving, 28, 57. Ps 89 begins as a hymn, passes into a long prophetic poem and ends with a lament. Ps 119 throughout is a hymn to the Law but it is also an individual lament and it develops a theme of the wisdom literature. This last characteristic, already noticed in certain thanksgiving psalms, shows that not a few topics are found in the Psalter which in themselves are unnatural to lyric poetry. Wisdom themes may take such a prominent place that we speak, somewhat inaccurately, of 'Didactic Psalms'. Ps 1, 112, 127 are wisdom literature pure and simple. Other psalms, however, preserve something of their lyrical quality: 25 is akin to the lamentations, 32, 37, 73 to the thanksgiving psalms, etc.

Certain other psalms incorporate prophetic sayings, or are simply expanded prophecies, 2, 50, 75, 81, 82, 85, 95, 110. These have recently been explained as actual prophecies delivered in the course of Temple ceremonies by priest or prophet. But it is still often maintained that they had no direct connection with the Temple worship and merely adopted the prophetic style. It is an open question; but there is no doubt that on the one hand the relationship between Psalms and prophetic literature extends beyond the sayings themselves to many other themes (theophanies, metaphors of fire, chalice, crucible, etc.) and, on the other hand, that some connection must be recognised between Psalms and Temple worship. We shall return to this point.

§4 Royal psalms and messianic psalms

We have already drawn attention to the prophetic element in the Psalter by mentioning the eschatological character of the Songs of Zion and of the Psalms of the Kingship of God. The universal renewal foretold by these poems is the messianic age; other psalms, more specifically, speak of the Messiah in person.

Scattered throughout the Psalter, and of varying literary form, is a group of royal psalms. These are divine pronouncements addressed to the king, 2, 110, prayers for the king, 20, 61, 72, a thanksgiving for the king, 21, prayers of the king himself, 18, 28, 63, 101, a royal processional song, 132, a hymn of the king, 144, even a bridal ode for a royal marriage, 45. They are ancient poems dating from the time of the monarchy and reflecting the idiom and ceremonial of the court. They concerned a king of their own period, and Ps 2, 72, 110 could have been enthronement psalms. The king is said to be son of God, his reign to be endless and stretching to the ends of the earth; he is to make peace and justice triumph and to be the saviour of his people. These expressions may seem extravagant, but they do not go beyond what other neighbouring people said of their sovereign and what Israel hoped of hers.

But in Israel the king is anointed, which makes him the vassal of Yahweh and his lieutenant on earth. He is the Anointed of Yahweh, in Hebrew the 'Messiah' and the religious relationship established with God makes the conception specifically Israelite, different from those of Egypt and Mesopotamia, in spite of the use of a common terminology. 'Royal Messianism', which begins with the prophecy of Nathan, 2 S 7, is expressed in the commentaries on that passage given by Ps 89 and 132, and especially in Ps 2, 72, 110. They kept alive among the people the hope of the promises made to David's dynasty. If messianism is defined as the expectation of a future king who will definitely bring salvation and inaugurate the kingship of God on earth, none of these Psalms is properly messianic. But a number of these ancient royal chants, still in use after the fall of the monarchy, and incorporated into the Psalter, perhaps with alterations and additions, fostered the expectation on the eve of our era, and Christians saw the realisation of this hope in Christ (a title which signifies Anointed in Greek, as Messiah does in Hebrew).

The messianic character of 2, 72, 110 is plain. Psalm 110 is more frequently quoted in the New Testament than any other. Even the wedding song of 45, interpreted in the light of the marriage allegory beloved of the prophets, came to express the union of the Messiah with his new Israel, and Heb 1:8 applies it to Christ. Following the same trend, the New Testament and early Christian tradition apply other psalms to Christ which, although not royal psalms, anticipated the situation and mind of the Messiah, the essentially Good Man, thus 16 and 22 and selected passages from many psalms, particularly 8, 35, 40, 41, 68, 69, 97, 102, 118, 119. Similarly, the Kingship Psalms have been applied to the kingship of Christ. Even if these applications go beyond the immediate literal sense of the text applied, they are legitimate in that the hopes inspiring the Psalter could not be fully realised until the coming of Christ to earth.

§5 The psalms and public worship

The Psalter is Israel's hymn-book. The Temple seems to have had its cantors from the beginning, though they are not mentioned until after the Exile. The festivals of Yahweh were celebrated with song and dance, Jg 21:19–21; 2 S 6:5,16. According to Am 5:23, sacrifice was offered to the accompaniment of song, and since the court had its cantors in David's day, 2 S 19:36, and (according to the Annals of Sennacherib) in the time of Hezekiah, the Temple of Solomon, like all the great sanctuaries of the East, must have had its cantors also. Psalms are in fact attributed to Asaph, to the sons of Korah, to Heman and to Ethan (or Jeduthun) who, according to Chronicles, were all cantors in the pre-exilic Temple. Tradition attributes many psalms to David and also credits him with organising public worship, including the cantors, 1 Ch 25; and this harmonises with those ancient texts representing him as dancing and singing in the presence of Yahweh, 2 S 6:5,16.

Many of the psalms carry musical or liturgical directions. The text of some refers to a public liturgy, 20, 26, 27, 66, 81, 107, 116, 134, 135. These last, and others, 48, 65, 95, 96, 118, were evidently recited in the Temple court. The Songs of Ascents, 120–134, like 84, were songs used on the Temple pilgrimage. These are some of the clearest examples, and suffice to show that many psalms, even individual psalms, were composed for Temple worship. Others, if not composed primarily for this purpose, have at least been adapted for it by the addition of blessings, 125, 128, 129.

It is therefore certain that the psalms were related to public worship and that the Psalter, taken as a whole, is liturgical in character. But there is rarely enough evidence to identify the ceremony or feast for which any given psalm was used. The Hebrew title of 92 assigns it to the Sabbath day, and the Greek titles of 24, 48, 93, 94 apportion them severally to other days of the week. Ps 30 was used, according to the Hebrew, for the feast of Dedication, and 29, according to the Greek, for the feast of Shelters. These instructions are perhaps later additions, but, like the detailed allocations made in post-exilic Judaism, prove that the Psalter was the hymn-book of Temple and synagogue before it was adopted by the Christian Church.

The inscriptions relate seventy-three psalms to David, twelve to Asaph, eleven to the sons of Korah, one each to Heman, Ethan (or Jeduthun), Moses and Solomon. The inscriptions in the Greek version do not always correspond with the Hebrew text and credit David with eighty-two psalms. The Syriac version shows still greater divergence.

It is possible that the original purpose of these inscriptions was not to name the actual author. The Hebrew formula used merely establishes some kind of relationship between the psalm and the person named, either because of an aptness of theme or because the psalm belonged to a collection named after him. The psalms 'for (or 'of') the sons of Korah' were part of the repertoire of this family of cantors, just as the numerous psalms 'for the choirmaster', 4, 5, 6, 8, etc., were pieces performed under his direction. Similarly there was Asaph's collection and a Davidic collection. But it was not long before these notices of origin were taken to be indications of authorship, and to the inscription 'of David' at the head of some psalms were added details of the exact circumstances in the life of the king at the time when these psalms were composed, 3, 7, 18, 34, 51, 52, 54, etc. Finally tradition made David the author not only of the psalms that bear his name but of the whole Psalter.

Notwithstanding mistaken deductions of this kind, it would be wrong to neglect the ancient and valuable information embodied in the inscriptions. It is reasonable to admit that the collections of Asaph and the sons of Korah were composed by poets attached to the Temple. It is equally reasonable to hold that there must be some connection between the Davidic collection and David himself. Taking into account what the historical books have to say of his musical talent, 1 S 16:16–18; cf. Am 6:5, his poetic gifts, 2 S 1:19–27; 3:33–34, and his love of the liturgy, 2 S 6:5,15–16, it would seem inevitable that these qualities should be expressed in the Psalter. Indeed, Ps 18 is simply a different edition of a poem attributed to David in 2 S 22. Not all the psalms of the Davidic collection are by him, no doubt, but the collection may have had a few of these for nucleus. It is difficult, however, to be more definite than this. The Hebrew inscriptions are not decisive, as we have seen, and when the New Testament writers quote a psalm as being by David, they are speaking as their contemporaries spoke. Even so, the traditional connection of David with the psalms should not be wholly rejected, and David, who 'sang the songs of Israel', 2 S 23:1, must be conceded an essential part in the formation of the religious poetry of the chosen people.

The original impulse given by David continued to have effects, and the Psalter covers several centuries of poetic activity. After an erroneous assessment, assigning a very late date to the majority of the psalms, less extreme views now prevail. Apart from those psalms which may have been composed by David, many go back to the monarchical period, in particular all the royal psalms, but their content is too general for more than conjectural dating. The Psalms of the Kingship of God, on the other hand, with their many echoes of earlier psalms and of the second part of Isaiah, must have been written during the Exile, as also those, such as 137, which speak of the destruction of Jerusalem and the deportation. Ps 126 celebrates the return from exile. The period that followed seems to have been fertile in psalmody. The restored Temple saw a reflorescence of public worship, the status of the cantors was so raised that they became assimilated with the Levites, while sages like Ben Sira adopted psalm form to popularise their teaching. Are any psalms of later date than the end of the Persian period? Are there any Maccabaean psalms? The question arises in particular connection with 44, 74, 79, 83, but the arguments advanced are not strong enough to prove so late a date of composition.

§7 Formation of the Psalter

The Psalter as we have it is the result of lengthy activity. At first there were partial collections. Ps 72 (though its title assigns it to Solomon) is followed by the note: 'End of the prayers of David', although there are non-Davidic psalms before it and Davidic psalms after it. In fact there are two Davidic groups, 3–41 and 51–72, in which every psalm (except 72 and four anonymous psalms) is attributed to David. Originally there must have been other separate collections of the same sort: the psalters of Asaph, 50 and 73–83, of the sons of Korah, 42–49 and 84, 85, 87, 88, of Ascents, 120–134, of the Hallel, 105–107, 111–118, 135, 136, 146–150. That there were several collections existing side by side is proved by the way certain psalms duplicate each other almost word for word, thus 14 and 53; 40:13–17 and 70; 108 with 57:7–11 and 60:5–12.

Furthermore, the activities of the collectors can be detected in the use of the divine names: 'Yahweh' is almost exclusively used in 1–41 (first Davidic group), 'Elohim' in 42–83 (covering the second Davidic group; part of the psalter of the sons of Korah; psalter of Asaph), all the remainder are 'Yahwistic' with the exception of 108 (combination of the two 'Elohistic' psalms 57 and 60). This second 'Yahwistic' group, in which many of the psalms are anonymous and in which there is considerable quotation of, or borrowing from, earlier literature, must be the most recent group of all; though this does not prejudice the dating of individual psalms within the group.

The Psalter was ultimately divided into five books, perhaps on the model of the Pentateuch; the books were divided from each other by short doxologies: 41:13; 72:18–20; 89:51; 106:48. Ps 150 is a protracted final doxology while 1 serves as an introduction to the whole Psalter.

This canonical shape of the Psalter became definitive only very late and after some competition. The Greek psalter counts 151 psalms, the ancient Syriac version 155. The discoveries at the Dead Sea have restored to us the Hebrew of the Greek Ps 151, in fact two psalms combined, and the last two Syriac psalms; they have also given us three new poetical compositions, inserted in the MSS of the Psalter in which, in any case, the Psalms do not always follow the canonical order. The Psalter therefore remained an open collection right up to the beginning of our era, at least in some circles.

§8 Spiritual value

The spiritual riches of the Psalter need no commendation. The psalms were the prayers of the Old Testament in which God inspired the feeling that his children ought to have towards him and the words they ought to use when speaking to him. They were recited by Jesus himself, by the Virgin Mary, the apostles and the early martyrs. The Christian Church has adopted them unchanged for her official prayer. Unchanged: the cries of praise, entreaty and thanksgiving, wrung from the psalmists by events of their own times and by their personal experiences, have a universal note, expressing as they do the attitude that every human being should have towards God. Unchanged as regards the words, but with a great enrichment of the sense: in the New Covenant, the faithful singer praises and thanks God for unveiling the secret of His inmost nature, for redemption by the blood of his Son, for the indwelling of his Spirit; hence each psalm ends with the trinitarian doxology: Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Spirit. The ancient entreaties have become more ardent since the last supper, the cross and the resurrection have taught the infinite quality of the love of God, the universality and gravity of sin, the glory promised to the faithful. The hopes sung by the psalmists have been fulfilled, the Messiah has come, he reigns and all nations are summoned to praise him.

1 a. Ps 1 and 2 serve as preface to the Psalter; they summarise its moral teaching and its messianic ideas. Ps 1, contrasting the 'two ways', hymns the Law, the true way to happiness. See 19:7–14 and 119.

b. Reading in an undertone, a meditative prayer (63:6; 77:12; 143:5) as opposed to the loud cry of the prayer under trial (3:4; 5:2).

c. The second 'how different' is given by the Gk, omitted by the Hebr.

d. The great Judgement to come, according to MT; any divine judgement in this life, according to the Gk.

2 a. Jewish and Christian tradition regard this Psalm as messianic in the same way as 110, on which it possibly depends. Its horizon is the future messianic age.

b. The 'mountain of God' was in the first place Sinai, Ex 3:1; 18:5, where Moses had encountered God and received the Law from him, Ex 24:12–18; Dt 33:2; see 1 K 19:8. Once Solomon had built the Temple on the hill of Zion, 2 S 5:7–9, this hill became the unique mountain where God resided, to which his people 'went up' to listen to him and to adore him, see Dt 12:2–3b, and it gave its name to the whole city of Jerusalem, the messianic city where all peoples would gather together, 48:1a; Is 2:1–3; 11:9; 24:23; 56:7; Jl 3:5; Zc 14:16–19; see also Heb 12:22; Rv 14:1; 21:1a.

c. The rebels speak, v. 3, then Yahweh himself, v. 6, finally the Messiah, v. 7seq. By consecrating him king of Israel, v. 6, God pronounces him 'his son'; the phrase in this context is familiar in the ancient East, but in conjunction with the messianic promise of 2 S 7 it will be given a deeper meaning; Heb 1:5 applies v. 7 to the eternal generation of the Word.

d. The messianic King is here represented as a warrior, a traditional portrayal.

e. 'kiss his feet', nashshequ beraglayw conj.; 'shake with trembling; . . . kiss the son' or '. . . kiss what is pure' (the Scroll of the Law), wegilu . . . nashshequ Hebr., also Gk and Targ., see 19:8. Hebr. no doubt wanted to remove the anthropomorphism.

3 a. The Fathers apply this passage to the death and resurrection of Christ.

3 my spirit is shaken to its very depths.
But you, Yahweh . . . how long?

4 Yahweh, relent and save my life [b]
rescue me because of your faithful love,

4 a. Trust and thanks; God is the one source of happiness. vv. 4 and 8 show that it is an evening prayer.

b. 'will you be heavy of heart' Gk: 'will my glory be dishonoured' Hebr. with faulty division of words.

c. An obscure and no doubt corrupt text, which has not been satisfactorily emended. The general sense is that we should shrink from offending God and pray to him in the calm silence of adoration.

d. Biblical phrase, common in the Psalter, for royal or divine favour. The 'face' is the visible aspect of something, 104:30; Gn 2:6 ('surface'), or of a person, whose thoughts and emotions it makes visible, Gn 4:5; 31:2. Hence it can stand for the personality ('of my face' = my, 42:6,11; 43:5) and presence, especially in the case of human beings meeting God. As it is impossible for human beings to see God, Ex 33:20i; 34:29–35, God can 'let his face shine' on them, see Ps 31:16; 44:3; 80:3, only in a restricted sense. In the same way must passages be understood in which a human being seeks God, 24:6; 27:8b; Jb 33:26; Am 5:4c, or beholds him, Ps 11:7e; 42:2.

5 a. Dawn is the moment of divine favours, 17:15d.

b. Translations vary: I present my request; I offer my prayer; I prepare my sacrifice; etc.

c. Such appeals for vengeance on the enemies of God by the psalmist are very frequent in the Psalter, for example 10:15; 31:17; 54:5; 58:6seq.; 59:11seq.; 69:22–28; 79:12; 83:9–18; 104:35; 109:6–20; 125:5; 137:7–9; 139:19–22; 140:9–11. Under the old covenant, retribution in this life was still the rule, and against this background these appeals betray simply a hunger for justice. Personal experience and growing revelation will show the inadequacy of this outlook: the way to God's justice must remain a mystery (but see Job). The NT refines the outlook still further: justice must give way to love, Mt 5:43–48. Thus purged of personal resentment, the psalms of revenge remain, for the Church and the individual Christian, an expression of the same hunger for justice in the face of forces which are always present in the world.

6 a. First of the seven 'Penitential Psalms' (32,38,51,102,130,143). A sick person appeals to God.

b. The Hebr. word nephesh, see Gn 2:7, means the life-giving breath (and by extension 'throat') which is the source of life and which disappears at death. The word is often used to denote person or animal as a living individual, Gn 12:1; 14:21; Ex 1:5; 12:4, or in the different aspects of bodily and affective life, always linked to one another, see Gn 2:21m. The expression 'my nephesh' is often equivalent to the reflexive pronoun 'myself', see 3:2; 44:25; 124:7; Gn 12:13; Ex 4:19; 1 S 1:26; 18:1–3, as are also 'my life', 'my face', 'my glory'. These different meanings of 'soul' are to be found also in the NT (psyche), see Mt 2:20; 10:28; 16:25–26; 1 Co 12:15e; 15:44w.

Is 38:18+ for in death there is no remembrance of you; 5 who could sing your praises in Sheol? [c]

I am worn out with groaning, 6
every night I drench my pillow
and soak my bed with tears.
My eyes waste away with vexation. 7
Arrogance from all my foes! [d]
119:115
↗Mt 7:23 Away from me, all evil-doers! 8

For Yahweh has heard the sound of my weeping, Yahweh has heard my pleading. 9
Yahweh will accept my prayer.

let them retreat in sudden confusion.

The power of God's name

19:1–6;104

For the choirmaster On the . . . of Gath [a] Psalm Of David

Ep 1:22

7 sheep and cattle, all of them,
and even the wild beasts,

c. In Sheol, see Nb 16:33f, the dead are silent shadows of their former selves and can have no relationship with God. Ps 30:9; 88:5, 10–12; Is 38:18.

d. 'Arrogance' 'ateqah conj.; Hebr. 'atqah 'he has grown old'. The psalmist's 'foes' regard the misfortune of the sick as a punishment for some hidden sin (cf. Job's friends). The theme is elaborated elsewhere (31; 35; 38; 69).

7 a. Two protestations of innocence have been combined in this Psalm. The first, vv. 1–5,12[b]–16, in the wisdom style, demands strict retaliation; the second, vv. 6–12[a], modelled on Jeremiah, appeals for the intervention of God the Judge. V. 17 is a liturgical conclusion.

b. The versions read 'Cushite', see 2 S 18:21, the messenger who informed David of the death of Absalom. But 'the Benjaminite' suggests rather one of David's enemies.

c. The law of talio, see Ex 21:25f, required that good be rendered for good, evil for evil. The text must not be watered down as in the versions 'if I requited with evil the man who wronged me', or (following the Aram.) 'robbed (my persecutor)'; the morality of the Gospel is yet to come, Mt 5:38seq.

d. lit. 'my glory', but the word also means 'liver', for the Semites the seat of thought and emotion. 'Glory' also means 'soul'. The 'dust' is that of the tomb.

e. 'my God' ('eli) Gk; Hebr. 'elay 'towards me'.

f. The text adds a word that means literally 'on me', and might be translated 'that is in me'.

g. 'slow to anger' Gk, absent from Hebr.

h. 'the enemy' added to make sense, this verse being the continuation of v. 5.

i. 'Most High' conj.; 'Yahweh, Most High' Hebr. • The Hebr. verb zamar, Gk psallein, strictly means to play on a stringed instrument, or to sing with musical accompaniment.

8 a. Perhaps a harp of Gath, or a melody of Gath (of Philistine origin).

b. As soon as he can pronounce it, the divine name enables the believer to share in the glory of Yahweh, see v. 5. Made in the image of God, see v. 5, a human being is in this way associated with God's sovereignty, see 20:2; 54:1,6; Is 63:17. It is probably this theme that is responsible for the juxtaposition of this Psalm with the preceding one.

c. 'keeps singing of' tinnah conj.; Hebr. tenah 'may give'.

d. As in Pr 18:10, the divine name confounds all idolatry by revealing the one true God, Yahweh, see Ex 3:14.

e. The author is thinking of human beings in comparison with the mysterious beings that constitute the court of Yahweh, 45:6d; Tb 5:4b.

birds in the sky, fish in the sea, when he makes his way across the ocean. 8

Yahweh our Lord,
how majestic your name throughout the world! 9

Na 2:1

9 a. Ps 9 and 10 were originally one poem (as they are in Gk and Vulg.). The spokesman of the 'poor', see Zp 2:3d, describes in a hymn and invokes in a prayer the execution of God's judgement on the wicked. The Psalm is 'alphabetical' (see Pr 31:10f) but in our present text, which is in a poor state, several letters have no corresponding strophe.

b. Translation uncertain. The Hebr. can also be translated literally 'to (the tune of) dying for a son'.

c. The divine judgement is regarded as already given; the 'Day of Yahweh' will reveal its content. This eschatological theme is common in the Ps.

d. 'see' hinneh conj.; Hebr. hemmah we 'they and'.

e. Hebr. adds 'because of those who hate me'.

10 a. The text of vv. 3–4 is uncertain and probably altered for theological reasons (the lit. Hebr. for 'blaspheming' is 'blessing', a euphemism, as in 1 K 21:10, 13 and Jb 1:5,11; 2:5,9). There are variations in the versions.

b. Denying the action of Providence, he speaks and acts as if there were no God at all.

c. 'undergrowth' hatzirim conj., see Is 35:7; Hebr. hatzerim 'settlements'.•'he watches intently', lit. 'his eyes watch'. versions: 'hide' Hebr.

d. 'he watches out', conj. to restore the letter Zade, omitted by Hebr. 'crouching down low', lit. 'crushes himself' qere, Gk; 'crushes' ketib.

e. To save, 138:7, and to strike, Is 11:15; Ezk 36:7; Mi 5:8.

f. Text uncertain.

Taw Yahweh, you listen to the laments of the poor, 17
you give them courage, you grant them a hearing,

b. 'the world', versions; omitted by Hebr.
c. 'red-hot coals' Symm.; 'snares' Hebr.
d. lit. 'part of the cup'. This is a metaphor for destiny (the cup may have been used to contain lots), either happy (16:5; 23:5) or more frequently unhappy (75:8; Mt 20:22; Rv 14:10; 16:19). The cup of divine anger is one of the themes of the prophets. Is 51:17h; Jr 25:15; Lm 4:21; Ezk 23:31seq.; Hab 2:16.
e. conj.; the Hebr. reading 'his face will look on the honest' is perhaps the result of a theological scruple, since human beings cannot see God, see Ex 33:20i. Nevertheless, the expression 'to contemplate God's face' is common in the Ps in the sense of standing in the presence of God like servants before a kindly master (15:1), see 16:11; 17:15; 24:6; 27:8b; 105:4; Gn 33:10; Jb 33:26; Is 38:11.

who can dwell on your holy mountain?

119:1 Whoever lives blamelessly, 2
who acts uprightly,
who speaks the truth from the heart,
who keeps the tongue under control, 3

who does not wrong a comrade, who casts no discredit on a neighbour,
who looks with scorn on the vile, 4
but honours those who fear Yahweh, [c]

who stands by an oath at any cost,
Ex 22:24+; 23:8+ who asks no interest on loans, 5
who takes no bribe to harm the innocent.
No one who so acts can ever be shaken.

PSALM 16 V 15

Yahweh my heritage

In a quiet voice [a] Of David

Protect me, O God, in you is my refuge. 1

To Yahweh I say, 'You are my Lord, 2
my happiness is in none •of the sacred spirits of the earth.' 3

They only take advantage of all who love them. [b]
People flock to their teeming idols. [c] 4
Never shall I pour libations to them!
Never take their names on my lips.

Nb 18:20
Dt 10:9
Si 45:20–22
Lm 3:24

My birthright, my cup is Yahweh; 5
you, you alone, hold my lot secure.
The measuring-line marks out for me a delightful place, 6
my birthright is indeed lovely. [d]

7 I bless Yahweh who is my counsellor, even at night my heart ᶜ instructs me.
8 I keep Yahweh before me always,
for with him at my right hand, nothing can shake me. 121:5

9 So my heart rejoices, my soul ᶠ delights,
my body too will rest secure,
10 for you will not abandon me to Sheol, ↗Ac 2:25–28; ↗13:35• 49:15;73:24
you cannot allow your faithful servant to see the abyss. ᵍ unbounded joy in your presence, at your right hand delight for ever.

PSALM 17 V 16

The plea of the innocent

Prayer Of David

1 Listen, Yahweh, to an upright cause, pay attention to my cry,
lend an ear to my prayer,
my lips free from deceit.
2 From your presence will issue my vindication,
your eyes fixed on what is right.

3 You probe my heart, examine me at night, 26:2;139:23 Jb 7:18;23:10
you test me by fire and find no evil.
4 I have not sinned with my mouth •as most people do.

I have treasured the word from your lips, Jb 23:11–12 5 my steps never stray from the paths you lay down, from your tracks; so my feet never stumble. 18:36 6 I call upon you, God, for you answer me;
turn your ear to me, hear what I say.
7 Show the evidence of your faithful love, saviour of those who hope in your strength against attack.

c. Figure of speech frequent in the prophets.

d. i.e. in Zion, v. 7; see also 48:2; 76:2; 87:5–7; Ezk 48:35.

e. 'where there is no need for fear' Gk and Ps 53, omitted by Hebr. Mysterious fear without apparent cause, see Lv 26:36; Dt 28:67; 1 S 14:15; 2 Ch 14:13; Jb 3:25. There may be an allusion to the annihilation of the Assyrians in 701, suddenly struck down when they had no apparent reason to fear, see 2 K 19:35; Is 37:36.

f. The Hebr. verb (85:1; 126:1; Dt 30:3; Jb 42:10; Jr 29:14; Ezk 16:53; Ho 6:11; Am 9:14) means primarily the return from exile, but frequently has the wider sense of re-establishing, restoring, making a change of fortune.

15 a. Summary of moral conduct, compare with this the moral precepts of the Decalogue, Ex 20:1a.

b. The sanctuary at Jerusalem is sometimes called a 'tent', retaining the image of the ancient sanctuary in the desert, commemorated each year by the feast of Shelters, Ex 23:14d.

c. God's loyal subjects. The expression, common in Ps, is synonymous with 'faithful', 'pious', 'devout'. Later it is used for all in sympathy with Judaism, see Ac 2:11g; 10:2b.

16 a. Meaning uncertain. This rubric occurs before Psalms whose public recitation could arouse the anger of the non-Jewish political masters of Jerusalem.

b. The very obscure text of vv. 2–3 is translated conjecturally with some vowel changes. The Hebr. reads literally: 'My Lord, you are my happiness, none above you. To the holy ones, those who are in the earth, these and those who take advantage(?), all my pleasure is in them.' These vv. could be addressed to those who claimed to combine the worship of God with that of local deities; this syncretism was Israel's great and persistent temptation, see Is 57:6; 65:5; 66:3seq.

c. 'people run after them' versions; Hebr. corrupt. 'idols', lit. 'weaknesses' (euphemism).

d. Alluding to the levitical state. Their portion (the traditional 'cup', see 11:6d, or 'measuring line', Mi 2:4–5) is Yahweh. The name Hilkiah, 'Yahweh-is-my-portion', is common.

e. lit. 'loins', like the heart, the seat of intimate thought and sentiment, see 7:9; Pr 23:16; Jr 12:2.

f. lit. 'my glory', see 7:5d.

g. The psalmist has set his heart on Yahweh. His lively faith and total commitment to God call for a union that defies dissolution, hence he must pray to escape death which would break that union, 6:5; see also 49:15g. The hope, though vague as yet, is leading towards a belief in resurrection, 2 M 7:9c; Dn 12:2.

36:7;61:4; 63:7;91:4 Guard me as the pupil of an eye, 8
Dt 32:10–11 shelter me in the shadow of your wings
Rt 2:12 from the presence of the wicked who would maltreat me; 9
Zc 2:12 deadly enemies are closing in on me.
Mt 23:37 Engrossed in themselves 10
they are mouthing arrogant words.
They are advancing against me,[a] now they are closing in, 11 watching for the chance to hurl me to the ground, 10:9;22:13; 35:17;57:4 like a lion preparing to pounce, 12 like a young lion crouching in ambush.

Jr 15:15–16 Arise, Yahweh, confront him and bring him down, 13 with your sword save my life from the wicked, Yahweh, from mortals, by your hand, 14
from mortals whose part in life is in this world.[b]

73:12 You fill their bellies from your store,[c]
their children will have all they desire,
and leave their surplus to their children.
4:6;73:25–26 But I in my uprightness will see your face, 15
Nb 12:8+ ↗Rv 22:4 and when I awake I shall be filled with the vision of you.[d]

PSALM 18

V 17

A king's thanksgiving[a]

For the choirmaster Of David, the servant of Yahweh, who addressed the words of this song to Yahweh when Yahweh had delivered him from all his enemies and from the clutches of Saul. He said:

I love you, Yahweh, my strength 1
(my Saviour, you have saved me from violence).[b]

Gn 49:24 Yahweh is my rock and my fortress, 2
Dt 32:4,15, 18,37 my deliverer is my God.
I take refuge in him, my rock,[c]
75:5 my shield, my saving strength,[d]
Dt 33:17 my stronghold, my place of refuge.
Lk 1:69hh

I call to Yahweh who is worthy of praise, 3
and I am saved from my foes.

With Death's breakers[e] closing in on me, 4
Dt 13:14b Belial's torrents ready to swallow me,
Nb 16:33f Sheol's snares every side of me, 5
Death's traps lying ahead of me,

I called to Yahweh in my anguish, 6
I cried for help to my God;[f]
from his Temple he heard my voice,
my cry came to his ears.

Ex 19:16,18 Then the earth quaked and rocked,[g] 7
Jg 5:4–5 the mountains' foundations shuddered,
Hab 3:3–6; 8–13 they quaked at his blazing anger.
Smoke rose from his nostrils, 8
from his mouth devouring fire (coals were kindled at it).

9 He parted the heavens and came down,
a storm-cloud underneath his feet;
10 riding one of the winged creatures,[h] he flew, 68:4+ soaring on the wings of the wind. Dt 33:26

11 His covering he made the darkness, Ex 13:21+;
his pavilion dark waters and dense cloud. 19:16 12 A brightness lit up before him,[i] Dt 4:11
hail and blazing fire.

13 Yahweh thundered from the heavens, 29;77:17–18
the Most High made his voice heard.[j] Ex 19:19 14 He shot his arrows and scattered them, Jb 36:29–30
he hurled his lightning and routed them.

15 The very springs of ocean[k] were exposed, 77:16
the world's foundations were laid bare,
at your roaring, Yahweh,
at the blast of breath from your nostrils! Ex 15:8

16 He reached down from on high, snatched me up, pulled me from the watery depths, 17 rescued me from my mighty foe, 1 S 17:37
from my enemies who were stronger than I.

18 They assailed me on my day of disaster
but Yahweh was there to support me; 19 he freed me, set me at large,
he rescued me because he loves me.

20 Yahweh rewards me for my uprightness,
as my hands are pure, so he repays me, 21 since I have kept the ways of Yahweh,
and not fallen away from my God.

22 His judgements are all before me,
his statutes I have not put away from me.
23 I am blameless before him, Dt 18:13
I keep myself clear of evil.

24 So Yahweh repaid me for acting uprightly because he could see I was pure.[l]

17 a. 'They are advancing against me' Vulg.; Hebr. 'our steps'.

b. Text uncertain. It can also be understood 'from mortals whose part in life is transitory'. The ambiguity is perhaps intentional.

c. lit. 'from that which you hide'. Scarcely a question of punishment here, as many think, but of passing pleasures to which the psalmist prefers God's friendship.

d. The morning awakening is God's chosen hour for granting favours, 5:3; 30:5; 46:5; 49:14; 57:8; 73:20; 90:14; 130:6; 143:8. It is also the time when justice is done, 101:8d. Dawn and light are symbols of deliverance, Is 8:20; 9:1; 33:2; 58:10; Lm 3:23; Zp 3:5; cf. Jn 1:4–5d; 8:12b. Evening and darkness symbolise trial and sorrow, v. 3; 30:5; 59:6; 88:18; 107:10; Is 17:14; 50:10. The word 'awakening' has sometimes been taken as a subtle reference to the resurrection, see 16:10g; 2 K 4:31; Is 26:19; Dn 12:2.

18 a. A triumphal ode combining a thanksgiving prayer, vv. 4–27, with a royal victory song, vv. 31–50, ending on a messianic note. Several textual corrections have been made in accordance with the parallel version in 2 S 22.

b. Line absent from Hebr.; 2 S 22 places it after v. 3; but it should be connected with v. 1, which alone addresses God in the second person.

c. In Ps God is often called the Rock of Israel, i.e. the bulwark of his people and especially of the Davidic dynasty; cf. Mt 16:18.

d. lit. 'my horn', symbol of power and vigour, 75:5; 89:17; 92:10, cf. Dt 33:17; 1 K 22:11; Zc 2:4, often with messianic overtones, Ps 132:17; Ezk 29:11.

e. 'breakers' 2 S; cf. v. 5; 'nets' Hebr. The waters symbolise deadly perils, see 32:6; 40:2; 42:7; 66:12; 69:1seq., 14seq.; 88:17; 130:1; Jb 22:11; 27:20; Is 8:7; 30:28; Jon 2:6.

f. Hebr. adds 'before his face', omitted by 2 S.

g. Here begins a description of the triumphant intervention of God on behalf of the psalmist, vv. 7–17, Ex 13:22h; 19:16g.

h. The winged creatures above the ark, Ex 25:18i, inspiring Ezekiel's vision of the chariot of God, Ezk 1:5seq, 10d; they form a throne for Yahweh, 1 S 4:4; 2 S 6:2; 2 K 19:15. From the destruction of the Temple onwards they symbolise heavenly beings.

i. 'a brightness lit up' 2 S; Hebr. corrupt.

j. Hebr. repeats here v. 12^b, omitted by Gk and 2 S.

k. 'of ocean' 2 S; 'of the waters' Hebr.

l. 'I was pure' 2 S; 'my hands were pure' Hebr. harmonising with v. 20^b.

You are faithful to the faithful, 25
blameless with the blameless, sincere to the sincere, 26

but cunning to the crafty,
Jb 22:29 Pr 3:34 you save a people that is humble 27

Jb 29:3 Yahweh, you yourself are my lamp, [m] 28
my God lights up my darkness;
with you I storm the rampart, [n] 29
with my God I can scale any wall.

12:6 Dt 32:4 ||Pr 30:5 This God, his way is blameless; 30
the word of Yahweh is refined in the furnace, for he alone is the shield
of all who take refuge in him.

Is 44:8;45:21 For who is God but Yahweh, 31
who is a rock but our God?
This God who girds me with strength, 32
who makes my way free from blame,

Hab 3:19 who makes me as swift as a deer 33
Dt 32:13 Is 58:14 and sets me firmly on the heights, who trains my hands for battle, 34

you never cease to listen to me, [o]
you give me the strides of a giant, 36
give me ankles that never weaken.

I pursue my enemies and overtake them, 37
not turning back till they are annihilated;
I strike them down and they cannot rise, 38
they fall, they are under my feet.

You have girded me with strength for the fight, 39
bent down my assailants beneath me, 21:12 made my enemies retreat before me; 40
and those who hate me I destroy.

They cry out, there is no one to save; 41
to Yahweh, but no answer comes.
I crumble them like dust before the wind, 42
trample them like the mud of the streets.

You free me from the quarrels of my people, [p] 43
2:8–9 Rv 2:26–28 you place me at the head of the nations, a people I did not know are now my servants;

foreigners come wooing my favour, 44
no sooner do they hear than they obey me;
foreigners grow faint of heart, 45
Mi 7:17 they come trembling out of their fastnesses.

Life to Yahweh! Blessed be my rock! 46
Exalted be the God of my salvation,

47 the God who gives me vengeance, and subjects whole peoples to me, 2:1a;20:6b; 89:19–37; 144:10c

48 who rescues me from my raging enemies.
You lift me high above those who attack me,
you deliver me from the man of violence.

49 For this I will praise you, Yahweh, among the nations, 7:17i and sing praise to your name. ↗Rm 15:9

50 He saves his king time after time, displays his faithful love for his anointed,
for David and his heirs for ever. [q]

PSALM 19 V 18

Yahweh, sun of saving justice [a]

For the choirmaster Psalm Of David

1 The heavens declare the glory of God, 93;104;147: 4–5,15–20
the vault of heaven proclaims his handiwork, Gn 1:1–8, 14–19 2 day discourses of it to day, Jb 38:7,31–33 night to night hands on the knowledge. Pr 8:22–31 Si 43:1seq. Rm 1:20+

3 No utterance at all, no speech, not a sound to be heard, [b]
4 but from the entire earth the design stands out,
this message reaches the whole world. ↗Rm 10:18

High above, he pitched a tent for the sun,
5 who comes forth from his pavilion like a bridegroom, delights like a champion in the course to be run. [c]

6 Rising on the one horizon 65:8
he runs his circuit to the other,
and nothing can escape his heat.

7 The Law of Yahweh is perfect, 119
refreshment to the soul;
the decree of Yahweh is trustworthy,
wisdom for the simple.

8 The precepts of Yahweh are honest,
joy for the heart;
the commandment of Yahweh is pure,
light for the eyes.

m. 'are my lamp': Hebr. 'you light my lamp', a gloss omitted in 2 S, and intended to soften the materialism of the image.

n. 'I storm the rampart' 'arotz geder 2 S; Hebr. 'arutz gedud 'I hasten to raid'.

o. 'you never cease to listen to me', lit. 'you multiply answers to me' 'anoteka following Gk and 2 S. cf. Ps 20:6; Hebr. 'anewateka 'your humility makes me increase'.

p. 'my people' 2 S; 'a people' Hebr.; 'peoples' Gk (both Ps and 2 S). The reading of 2 S must be the original one; it was generalised afterwards because of the rest of the v., and perhaps also to remove the criticism of Israel.

q. Liturgical conclusion recalling the promises of victory and salvation made to the Davidic dynasty, cf. 89:1seq., 28seq; 1 S 2:10.

19 a. This hymn celebrates Yahweh as Creator of the heavens, and particularly of the sun (vv. 4[b]–6) and the author of the Law; nature and Law both manifest the perfection of God. In the ancient East the sun symbolised justice, see Ws 5:6; Ml 3:20; hence the conjunction of the Psalm's two sections. v. 4 is applied to the apostles, see also Rm 10:18.

b. The versions interpret 'whose sound cannot be heard'; but in what follows there is allusion to the Assyro-Babylonian idea that the stars are the silent 'writing of the heavens'.

c. The psalmist, speaking of the sun as a creature of God, uses expressions found also in Babylonian mythology.

The fear of Yahweh is pure, 9 lasting for ever;
the judgements of Yahweh are true,
upright, every one,

119:127 more desirable than gold, 10
even than the finest gold; 119:103 his words [d] are sweeter than honey,
that drips from the comb.

Thus your servant is formed by them; 11
observing them brings great reward.
But who can detect his own failings? 12
Wash away my hidden faults.

And from pride [e] preserve your servant, 13
never let it be my master.
So shall I be above reproach,
free from grave sin.

May the words of my mouth always [f] find favour, 14
and the whispering of my heart,
in your presence, Yahweh,
my rock, my redeemer. [g]

For a coronation ceremony [a]

1 Yahweh, the king rejoices in your power;
How your saving help fills him with joy!
2 You have granted him his heart's desire,
not denied him the prayer of his lips. Pause

you gladden him with the joy of your presence. Gn 12:2; 48:20n

the faithful love of the Most High will keep him from falling.

8 Your hand will reach all your enemies,
your right hand all who hate you. 18:37
9 You will hurl them into a blazing furnace Ml 3:19h
on the day when you appear; [b] Yahweh will engulf them in his anger,
and fire will devour them.
10 You will purge the earth of their descendants, 109:13 Jb 18:19
the human race of their posterity.

11 They have devised evil against you but, plot as they may, they will not succeed, 12 since you will make them turn tail, 18:40
by shooting your arrows in their faces.

13 Rise, Yahweh, in your power!
We will sing and make music in honour of your strength.

d. 'his words' debarayw conj., see 119:103, 127: Hebr. rab 'plentiful' (at the end of the verse).

e. 'pride', lit. 'the proud'; Gk 'alien (gods)'. Ps 119 persistently opposes pride to obedience to the Law.

f. 'always' Gk, omitted by Hebr.

g. In Hebr. go'el. This word, which denotes the avenger of blood, Nb 35:19, and the redeemer, Lv 25:25, 47–49, is applied by Jb 19:25; Ps 19:14; 78:35; Jr 50:34, and often in the second part of Isaiah, Is 41:14; 43:14; 44:6, 24; 49:7; 59:20 to Yahweh as avenger, Saviour and rescuer from death of his people and his servants.

20 a. Prayer for the king as he sets out for war, cf. 1 K 8:44; 2 Ch 20:18seq. Each of the two sections is followed by a choral antiphon.

b. Or his 'Christ', his 'Messiah' (see Ex 30:22d; 1 S 9:26n), the king of Israel.

c. 'answer us' versions; 'he answers us' Hebr.

21 a. This Psalm of two sections followed by choral antiphons, vv. 7 and 13, strikes a messianic and christological note.

b. i.e., when you come to judge, vv. 8–12 are addressed to the king, but the expression 'on the day of your face' and the mention of fire suggest an eschatological perspective. It is possible that in the original text (see Gk MSS) this passage was addressed to Yahweh.

PSALM 23 V 22

The good Shepherd [a]

Psalm Of David

1 Yahweh is my shepherd, I lack nothing. Ezk 34:1a Jn 10:1–16
2 In grassy meadows he lets me lie.

By tranquil streams he leads me Is 40:31 Jr 31:25
3 to restore my spirit. Jn 4:1a
He guides me in paths of saving justice Pr 4:11
as befits his name. 115:1

4 Even were I to walk in a ravine as dark as death Jb 10:21–22 Is 50:10
I should fear no danger, for you are at my side. [b]
Your staff and your crook are there to soothe me.

22 a. This lament and entreaty of the innocent under persecution ends in thanksgiving for his rescue, vv. 22–26, and earns its place in the national liturgy by virtue of v. 23 and the universalist conclusion, vv. 27–31, where the coming of the kingdom of God throughout the world seems to result from the ordeal of the faithful servant.

b. Possibly the first words of a familiar song. Versions: 'For morning solace'.

c. Or 'You who dwell in the sanctuary, the praise of Israel', see Gk.

d. 'He trusted himself' versions; 'Trust yourself' Hebr.

e. 'My mouth' hikki conj.; Hebr. kohi 'my strength'.

f. 'as if to hack off' ke'ero (from the verb 'arah) conj.; Hebr. ka'ari 'as a lion', unintelligible; Gk 'they have dug into'; Syr. 'they have wounded'. • The passage recalls Is 53:5 but the evangelists did not make use of it in the Passion narratives.

g. 'my poor life (lit. 'soul')' 'anniyati conj.; Hebr. 'anitani 'you have answered me'.

h. Allusion to the messianic banquet, Is 55:1seq., rather than to the ritual meal following the communion sacrifice, Lv 3:1a.

i. 'him' versions; 'you' Hebr.

j. 'him' 'ak lo conj.; Hebr. 'aklu 'they have eaten'.

k. A difficult passage; it can also be interpreted 'He (the wicked) will not live, but generations will serve him.' Some MSS and the Gk have 'my soul shall live for him', an adjustment relating to belief in the resurrection.

l. 'still to come' Gk; 'they will come' Hebr.

23 a. The care of God for the upright, illustrated by two images: the shepherd, vv. 1–4, and the host of the messianic banquet, vv. 5–6.

b. 'for you are' a later addition to the text, probably to harmonise with 1 S 22:23, and to stress the allusion to David. The original text was probably: 'at my side are your crook and your staff . . .

22:26h Ex 16:1a
You prepare a table for me 5
under the eyes of my enemies;
you anoint my head with oil; [c]
16:5+;63:5 my cup brims over.

Kindness and faithful love pursue me 6
every day of my life.
27:4 I make my home [d] in the house of Yahweh
for all time to come.

For a solemn entry into the sanctuary [a]

Psalm Of David

89:11 Dt 10:14 Is 66:1–2 ↗1 Co 10:26
To Yahweh belong the earth and all it contains, 1
the world and all who live there;
it is he who laid its foundations on the seas, 2 75:3 Is 42:5 on the flowing waters fixed it firm. [b]

15
Who shall go up to the mountain of Yahweh? 3
Who shall take a stand in his holy place?

Mt 5:8
The clean of hands and pure of heart, 4
whose heart is not set on vanities, who does not swear an oath in order to deceive.

Such a one will receive blessing from Yahweh, 5 saving justice from the God of his salvation.
Such is the people that seeks him, 6
27:8–9 that seeks your presence, God of Jacob. [c] Pause

118:19–20 2 S 6:12–16 Ezk 44:2 Ml 3:1
Gates, lift high your heads, 7
raise high the ancient gateways,
and the king of glory shall enter!

1 Co 2:8
Who is he, this king of glory? 8
It is Yahweh, strong and valiant,
Yahweh valiant in battle.

Gates, lift high your heads, 9
raise high the ancient gateways,
and the king of glory shall enter!

Who is he, this king of glory? 10
1 S 1:3c Yahweh Sabaoth,
Ex 24:16f he is the king of glory. Pause

Prayer in danger

Of David

=86:4 Aleph ADORATION I offer, Yahweh, 1
to you, my God. 2

22:5;40:14seq. Is 49:23;50:7 Bet BUT in my trust in you do not put me to shame, let not my enemies gloat over me.

3 Gimel CALLING to you, none shall ever be put to shame,
but shame is theirs who groundlessly break faith.

4 Dalet DIRECT me in your ways, Yahweh, 27:11;86:11; 119:35;143:8
and teach me your paths. Ex 33:13 Jn 14:6;16:13

5 He ENCOURAGE me to walk in your truth and teach me
since you are the God who saves me.

(Waw) FOR my hope is in you all day long—7c such is your generosity, Yahweh.

6 Zain GOODNESS and faithful love have been yours for ever,
Yahweh, do not forget them.

7 Het HOLD not my youthful sins [a] against me, 106:4+ Jb 13:26 Is 64:8
but remember me as your faithful love dictates.

8 Tet INTEGRITY and generosity are marks of Yahweh for he brings sinners back to the path.

9 Yod JUDICIOUSLY he guides the humble, instructing the poor [b] in his way.

10 Kaph KINDNESS unfailing and constancy mark all Yahweh's paths, 85:9–10 Tb 3:2
for those who keep his covenant and his decrees.

11 Lamed LET my sin, great though it is, be forgiven,
Yahweh, for the sake of your name.

12 Mem MEN who respect Yahweh, what of them? Pr 19:23
He teaches them the way they must choose.

13 Nun NEIGHBOURS to happiness will they live, and their children inherit the land. [c] 37:9,29 Is 57:13

14 Samek ONLY those who fear Yahweh possess his secret [d] and his covenant, for their understanding.

15 Ain PERMANENTLY my eyes are on Yahweh, 123:1;141:8–9
for he will free my feet from the snare.

16 Pe QUICK, turn to me, pity me, 86:16;119:132
alone and wretched as I am!

17 Zade RELIEVE [e] the distress of my heart,
bring me out of my constraint.

18 (Qoph) SPARE a glance for my misery and pain,
take all my sins away.

19 Resh TAKE note how countless are my enemies,
how violent their hatred for me.

20 Shin UNLESS you guard me and rescue me 16:1
I shall be put to shame, for you are my refuge.

c. Gesture of hospitality in the East, 92:10; 133:2; Qo 9:8; Am 6:6; Lk 7:46.

d. 'my home' versions; 'I shall return to' Hebr. (a simple correction of vowels).

24 a. Possibly vv. 7–10 refer to the transfer of the ark in the days of David, 2 S 6:12–16, cf. Ps 68:24seq.; 132. The first part, vv. 1–6, seems to be of later date, cf. Ps 15: the Creator of the universe is also the befriender of the upright.

b. The earth is represented as resting on the waters of the nether ocean, see Ex 20:4.

c. 'your presence, God of Jacob' 2 Hebr MSS, Syr; 'your presence, Jacob' Hebr.; 'the presence of the God of Jacob' Gk.

25 a. Hebr. here adds 'and my faults', a doublet omitted by Syr.

b. 'poor' Syr.; Hebr. repeats 'humble'.

c. The sages of Israel had taught that the upright would receive a reward on earth; to this is now added the hope, nursed by those back from exile, of the unconditional enjoyment of the land of their ancestors.

d. Not so much the mystery of God himself, Ws 2:22, as an intimacy with God, Ps 73:28; Ex 33:20; Jb 29:5; Pr 3:32, together with an understanding of the ways of God, Jr 16:21; 31:34; Ho 6:6.

e. 'relieve' conj.; 'they have relieved' Hebr.

Taw VIRTUE and integrity be my protection, 21
for my hope, Yahweh,[f] is in you.

130:8 Ransom Israel, O God, 22
from all its troubles.[g]

my trust in Yahweh never wavers.

7:9;17:3; 139:23 Probe me, Yahweh, examine me, 2
Test my heart and my mind in the fire.
For your faithful love is before my eyes, 3
119:30 and I live my life by your truth.

No sitting with wastrels for me, 4
no associating with hypocrites;
1:1 I hate the company of sinners, 5
I refuse to sit down with the wicked.

=73:13 Dt 21:6–7 Mt 27:4 I will wash my hands in innocence 6 and join the procession round your altar, Yahweh, to make heard the sound of thanksgiving, 7
to proclaim all your wonders.
29:9;63:2 Ex 24:16f; 25:8d Yahweh, I love the beauty[b] of your house 8 and the place where your glory dwells.

28:3 Do not couple me with sinners, 9
nor my life with men of violence, whose hands are stained with guilt, 10
Ex 23:8+ Dt 16:19 their right hands heavy with bribes.

In innocence I will go on my way; 11
25:16 ransom me, take pity on me.

In God's company there is no fear

Of David

18:28;36:9; 43:3 Is 10:17; 60:20 Mi 7:8 Yahweh is my light and my salvation, 1 whom should I fear?
Yahweh is the fortress of my life,
whom should I dread?

When the wicked advance against me 2 14:4 Jb 19:22 to eat me up,
they, my opponents, my enemies,
are the ones who stumble and fall.

3 Though an army pitch camp against me,
my heart will not fear,
though war break out against me,
my trust will never be shaken.

4 One thing I ask of Yahweh, one thing I seek:
to dwell in Yahweh's house =23:6;42:2
all the days of my life,
to enjoy the sweetness of Yahweh,
to seek out his temple.

5 For he hides me away under his roof Rv 7:15–16
on the day of evil,
he folds me in the recesses of his tent,[a] 18:2;31:20
sets me high on a rock.

6 Now my head is held high above the enemies who surround me;
in his tent I will offer sacrifices of acclaim.

I will sing, I will make music for Yahweh.

7 Yahweh, hear my voice as I cry, pity me, answer me!
8 Of you my heart has said,
'Seek his face!'[b]
Your face, Yahweh, I seek;
9 do not turn away from me. 24:6;105:4 Ho 5:15

Do not thrust aside your servant in anger, without you I am helpless.

because of my enemies;
12 do not abandon me to the will of my foes—
false witnesses have risen against me,
and are breathing out violence.

13 This I believe: I shall see[c] the goodness of Yahweh, in the land of the living. 116:9;142:5 14 Put your hope in Yahweh, be strong, let your heart be bold, put your hope in Yahweh.

f. 'Yahweh' Gk, omitted by Hebr.

g. This v., which is outside the alphabetical series, could be a post-exilic liturgical antiphon. Similarly 34:22.

26 a. As in Ps 7 and 17 the believer protests his innocence.
b. 'beauty' Gk; 'house' Hebr. (mere change of vowels).
c. 'you' Gk, omitted by Hebr.

27 a. 'his roof' and 'his tent' denote the sanctuary in Jerusalem.

b. 'seek his face' conj.; 'seek (plur) my face' Hebr. This expression, see Am 5:4c, originally signifying 'to consult Yahweh' in his sanctuary, 2 S 21:1, took on a wider sense: to seek to know God, to live in his presence. To 'seek God', 40:16; 69:6; 105:3; Dt 4:29, see Am 5:4c, is to serve him faithfully.

c. Or 'If only I were sure of seeing!' In Maccabaean times this passage was understood in function of a future life.

28 a. 'Yahweh' here and in v. 4 is absent from the Hebr.
b. 'my body has recovered its vigour, with all my heart' Gk; 'my heart rejoices; with my song'. Hebr.
c. The parallelism suggests that the 'anointed' is here the people of God consecrated to his service, see 105:15; Ex 19:3b; Hab 3:13, and not the king, Ps 20:6, or the high priest, Ps 84:9.

29 a. The tempest, see Ex 13:22h; 19:16f evokes the power and glory of God, subduing the enemies of Israel and assuring peace to the chosen people.
b. lit. 'sons of the gods', cf. 82:1; 89:6; Jb 1:6f, i.e. the angels who constitute the heavenly court. The passage is sometimes applied to Israel, the 'son of God', Ex 4:22; Dt 14:1; Ho 11:1. Gk adds 'Bring sons of rams to Yahweh'.
c. Or 'in the courts of his holiness' (Gk, Syr.); this would be heaven, the invisible counterpart of the temple of Jerusalem, 11:4; 78:69.
d. Sidonian-name for Lebanon, Dt 3:9.
e. God hews out arrows to transfix his enemies, cf. 18:14; Dt 32:23, 42; Hab 3:11; Zc 9:14.
f. 'the terebinths' 'elot conj.; Hebr. 'ayyalot '(makes) the hinds (calve)'. • The great trees, here and in v. 5, perhaps symbolise the proud enemies of God and of his people, cf. Is 2:13; 10:18,33; 32:19; Jr 21:14; 46:23; Ezk 21:2; Zc 11:2.
g. Either in heaven, v. 2, or in the Temple where the liturgy echoes the praise of the heavenly court, or else in the Holy Land, consecrated to Yahweh, 114:2, and his dwelling-place, Jr 12:7; Zc 9:8.
h. The first manifestation of divine justice.

30 a. lit. 'in the evening, tears pass the night'.
b. Text conjectural; Hebr. reads 'by your favour you have set up a force on my mountain.'
c. 'my God' Gk; 'Lord' Hebr.
d. lit. 'in my blood', for blood contains life, 72:14; 116:15; Gn 9:6b; Lv 1:5e.

Prayer in time of ordeal [a]

For the choirmaster Psalm Of David

=71:1–2

In you, Yahweh, I have taken refuge, 1
let me never be put to shame,
in your saving justice deliver me, rescue me, [b] turn your ear to me, make haste. 2

18:2;71:3

Be for me a rock-fastness,
a fortified citadel to save me.
You are my rock, my rampart; 3
true to your name, lead me and guide me!

Draw me out of the net they have spread for me, 4
for you are my refuge;
↗Lk 23:46 ↗Ac 7:59 to your hands I commit my spirit, 5
by you have I been redeemed.

God of truth, ·you hate [c] 6 worshippers of ineffectual idols;
but my trust is in Yahweh:
I will delight and rejoice in your faithful love! 7

You, who have seen my misery,
and witnessed the miseries of my soul,
have not handed me over to the enemy, 8
but have given me freedom to roam at large.

35;38;69;71

Take pity on me, Yahweh, 9
for I am in trouble.
Vexation is gnawing away my eyes,
my soul deep within me.

For my life is worn out with sorrow, 10
and my years with sighs.
My strength gives way under my misery, [d]
6:2 and my bones are all wasted away.

The sheer number of my enemies 11
makes me contemptible, 38:11 Jb 19:13–19 loathsome [e] to my neighbours,
and my friends shrink from me in horror.

When people see me in the street
they take to their heels.
I have no more place in their hearts than a corpse, 12 or something lost.

41:5 ‖Jr 20:10

All I hear is slander 13
—terror wherever I turn—
as they plot together against me, scheming to take my life.

But my trust is in you, Yahweh;
I say, 'You are my God,' every moment of my life is in your hands, rescue me from the clutches of my foes who pursue me;
let your face shine on your servant, 4:6d
save me in your faithful love.

I call on you, Yahweh, so let disgrace fall not on me,
but on the wicked.
Let them go down to Sheol in silence,
muzzles on their lying mouths,
which speak arrogantly against the upright
in pride and contempt.

Yahweh,[f] what quantities of good things
you have in store for those who fear you,
and bestow on those who make you their refuge,
for all humanity to see.

Safe in your presence you hide them, 27:5;109:3 Rv 7:15–16 Jb 5:21
far from human plotting,
shielding them in your tent,
far from contentious tongues.[g]

Blessed be Yahweh who works for me miracles of his faithful love
(in a fortified city)! 60:9 Is 26:1
In a state of terror I cried,
'I have been cut off[h] from your sight!'
Yet you heard my plea for help
when I cried out to you.

Love Yahweh, all his faithful: 37:34seq.
Yahweh protects his loyal servants,
but he repays the arrogant
with interest.
Be brave, take heart,
all who put your hope in Yahweh.

the people he has chosen as his heritage. Dt 7:6b

13 From heaven Yahweh looks down, Jb 34:21 Jr 16:17
he sees all the children of Adam, 14 from the place where he sits he watches
all who dwell on the earth;
15 he alone moulds their hearts, 94:9–11; 139:1–16
he understands all they do. Zc 12:1

16 A large army will not keep a king safe, 1 S 14:6; 17:47 Jdt 9:7
nor his strength save a warrior's life;
17 it is delusion to rely on a horse for safety, Ho 1:7+
for all its power it cannot save.

18 But see how Yahweh watches over those who fear him, 32:8;34:15 those who rely on his faithful love, 19 to rescue them from death
and keep them alive in famine.

20 We are waiting for Yahweh;
he is our help and our shield, 115:9seq.
21 for in him our heart rejoices,
in his holy name we trust.
22 Yahweh, let your faithful love rest on us, 90:17
as our hope has rested in you.

PSALM 34 V 33

In praise of God's justice [a]

Of David, when he had feigned insanity before Abimelech, and Abimelech sent him away 1 S 21:11–16

1 Aleph I will bless Yahweh at all times, his praise continually on my lips.
2 Bet I will praise Yahweh from my heart;
let the humble hear and rejoice.

c. 'my heart' one MS. lacking in MT. 'stubble', lit 'a field' lesaday conj.; Hebr. leshaddi 'my sap'.

d. 'forgave' salahta conj., lacking in Hebr., perhaps through haplography before selah 'pause'.

e. 'distress' matzor or matzoq conj.; Hebr. metzo' raq 'to find only'; raq ('only') could come from the juxtaposition of the final consonants of the two versions.

f. 'with songs' a dubious word, probably dittography with the end of previous verse.

g. 'if you advance' 'aduy conj.; Hebr. 'edyo 'his advance'.

33 a. This word originally indicated the war cry that preceded attack, Ex 32:17; Jos 6:5; Jg 7:20–21; 1 S 17:20, 52; Jr 4:19; 49:2; Ho 5:8; Am 1:14; it hailed Yahweh as king and leader, Nb 23:21; Zp 1:14; cf. 1 S 10:24, and his palladium, the ark, 1 S 4:5; 2 S 6:15. After the Exile this ritual war cry assumes a ceremonial and liturgical character; it acclaims Yahweh as king of Israel and of the nations, 47:1,5; 89:15; 95:1; 98:4,6, Saviour, Is 44:23, and judge, Jl 2:1; it hails his Messiah also, Zc 9:9. It is shouted on feast days, Ezr 3:11, cf. Jb 38:7, at thanksgiving sacrifices, Ps 27:6; 65:13; 100:1; Jb 33:26, and in religious processions, Ps 95:1,2; 100:1seq.; see Nb 10:5a.

b. The versions correct the arrangement of the vowels to read 'like a wineskin', but there is an allusion to the miracle of the Sea in Ex 15:8; see also Ps 18:13.

34 a. An alphabetical Wisdom Psalm, cf. Pr 31:10 (though the sequence of strophes is upset); a thanksgiving, vv. 1–10, and an instruction in the style of Pr on the fates of the upright and the wicked, vv. 11–22.

Gimel Proclaim with me the greatness of Yahweh, 3 let us acclaim his name together.
Dalet I seek Yahweh and he answers me, 4 frees me from all my fears.

He Fix your gaze on Yahweh and your face will grow bright, 5
you will never hang your head in shame.
Zain A pauper calls out and Yahweh hears, 6
Ne 9:17 Jon 4:2 saves him from all his troubles.

Gn 16:7c Het The angel of Yahweh encamps 7
around those who fear him, and rescues them.
↗1 P 2:3 Tet Taste and see that Yahweh is good. 8
=2:12 How blessed are those who take refuge in him.

Yod Fear Yahweh, you his holy ones; 9
those who fear him lack for nothing.
Kaph Young lions [b] may go needy and hungry, 10
but those who seek Yahweh lack nothing good.

Pr 1:8;4:1 Lamed Come, my children, listen to me, 11
I will teach you the fear of Yahweh.
↗1 P 3:10–12 Mem Who among you delights in life, 12
longs for time to enjoy prosperity?

Nun Guard your tongue from evil, 13
your lips from any breath of deceit.
=37:27 Samek Turn away from evil and do good, 14
Mt 5:9 Heb 12:14 seek peace and pursue it.

Ain The eyes of Yahweh are on the upright, 15
his ear turned to their cry.
Jr 44:11 Pe But Yahweh's face is set against those who do evil, 16 to cut off the memory of them from the earth.

Zade They cry in anguish and Yahweh hears, 17
and rescues them from all their troubles.
51:17 Mt 11:29–30 Qoph Yahweh is near to the broken-hearted, 18
he helps those whose spirit is crushed.

Resh Though hardships without number beset the upright, 19
Yahweh brings rescue from them all.
Shin Yahweh takes care of all their bones, 20 ↗Jn 19:36 not one of them will be broken.

Taw But to the wicked evil brings death, 21
those who hate the upright will pay the penalty.
Yahweh ransoms the lives of those who serve him, 22
and there will be no penalty for those who take refuge in him.

PSALM 35 V 34

Prayer of the virtuous in persecution [a]

Of David

Accuse my accusers, Yahweh, 1 attack my attackers.
Grasp your buckler and shield, 2
up, and help me.

3 Brandish spear and pike [b]
to confront my pursuers,
give me the assurance, 'I am your Saviour.' 27:1

4 Shame and humiliation on those 40:15;=71:13
who are out to kill me!
Defeat and repulse in dismay Jn 18:6
on those who plot my downfall.

5 May they be like chaff before the wind, 1:4;83:13
with the angel of Yahweh to chase them. 34:7 6 May their way be dark and slippery, Jr 23:12 with the angel of Yahweh to hound them.

7 Unprovoked they laid their snare for me,
unprovoked dug a trap to kill me. [c]
8 Ruin comes upon them unawares; 7:15+
the snare they have laid will catch them, Is 47:11 and into their own trap [d] they will fall. 1 Th 5:3

9 Then I shall delight in Yahweh, rejoice that he has saved me.
10 My very bones will all exclaim, Yahweh, who can compare with you 51:8;86:8+
in rescuing the poor from the oppressor;
the needy from the exploiter? [e]

11 False witnesses come forward against me 27:12
asking me questions I cannot answer, Mt 26:59seq.
12 they cross-examine me, ·repay my kindness with cruelty, 38:20;109:5 make my life barren.

13 But I, when they were ill, had worn sackcloth, and mortified myself with fasting,
praying ever anew in my heart,
14 as if for a friend or brother; I had wandered restless,
as if mourning a mother,
so bowed had I been in sorrow.

15 When I stumble they gather in glee, gather around me;
strangers [f] I never even knew
tear me apart incessantly.
16 If I fall they surround me, [g] grinding their teeth at me.

17 How much longer, Lord, will you look on?
Rescue me from their onslaughts, [h]
from young lions rescue the one life that I have. 17:12;22:20seq. 22:22

18 I will give you thanks in the great assembly praise you where the people gather.

b. Wild animals often denote the wicked, 3:7; 22:21; Jb 4:9–10; Ezk 38:13; Zc 11:3. Gk interprets by translating 'the rich'.

35 a. A long lament and imprecation, similar to 22; 55; 59; 69; 70; 109.

b. 'pike' wesagar conj. following a Qumran text; Hebr. usegor 'halt'.

c. Text corrected, following Syr.; Hebr. corrupt.

d. 'in their own trap' Syr.; 'in the ruin' Hebr., with dittography.

e. Before 'the needy' Hebr. repeats 'the poor'.

f. 'Strangers' nokrim conj.; Hebr. nekim 'smitten ones'.

g. 'if I fall they surround me' correcting the arrangement of the vowels and division of words; Gk 'riddling me with gibe after gibe'.

h. Meaning unclear.

38:16 Let not my lying enemies 19
gloat over me;
69:4 those who hate me unprovoked
↗Jn 15:25 look askance at me.

120:6–7 They have no greeting of peace 20
to the peace-loving people of the land;
they think up deceptive speeches.
Their mouths wide open to accuse me, 21
Lm 2:16 they say, 'Come on now, we saw you.' [i]

You saw it, Yahweh, do not stay silent; 22 =38:21 Lord, do not stand aloof from me.
Up, awake, to my defence, 23
my God and my Lord, to my cause.
In your saving justice give judgement for me, Yahweh my God, 24 and do not let them gloat over me.

40:15 Do not let them think, 'Just as we hoped,' 25
Ezk 25:3;26:2 nor, 'Now we have swallowed him up.'
Shame and dismay on them all 26
who gloat over my misfortunes.
Let all who profit at my expense
be covered with shame and disgrace.

But let all who delight in my uprightness 27
shout for joy and gladness;
let them constantly say,
40:16 'Great is Yahweh,
who delights to see his servant in peace.'

And my tongue shall recount your saving justice, 28
all day long sing your praise.

PSALM 36 V 35

The perversity of sinners and the benevolence of God [a]

For the choirmaster Of the servant of Yahweh Of David

Sin is the oracle of the wicked 1 in the depths of his heart; [b] ↗Rm 3:18 there is no fear of God
before his eyes.

He sees himself with too flattering an eye 2
Mt 7:3–5 to detect and detest his guilt; [c] all he says is malicious and deceitful, 3
he has turned his back on wisdom.

Mi 2:1 To get his way •he hatches malicious plots 4
even in his bed;
once set on his evil course
no wickedness is too much for him.

57:10;71:19 Yahweh, your faithful love is in the heavens, 5 your constancy reaches to the clouds, your saving justice is like towering mountains, [d] 6
your judgements like the mighty deep.

Yahweh, you support both man and beast;
7 how precious, God, is your faithful love.
So the children of Adam take refuge in the shadow of your wings. 17:8+

8 They feast on the bounty of your house, 63:5
you let them drink from your delicious streams;
9 in you is the source of life,[e] 16:11;46:4 Is 55:1 Jr 2:13+ Jn 4:14
by your light we see the light.[f]

10 Maintain your faithful love to those who acknowledge you, and your saving justice to the honest of heart.
11 Do not let the foot of the arrogant overtake me or wicked hands drive me away.

12 There they have fallen, the evil-doers, flung down, never to rise again.

PSALM 37

V 36 73 Jb 21:7–26

The fate of the upright and the wicked[a]

Of David

1 Aleph Do not get heated about the wicked Pr 23:17; 24:1.19 Ml 2:17; 3:14 or envy those who do wrong.
2 Quick as the grass they wither, 90:6;103:15 Is 40:7
fading like the green of the fields.

3 Bet Put your trust in Yahweh and do right, make your home in the land[b] and live secure.
4 Make Yahweh your joy
and he will give you your heart's desires.

5 Gimel Commit your destiny to Yahweh, Pr 3:5
be confident in him, and he will act,
6 making your uprightness clear as daylight, Ws 5:6 Is 58:10 and the justice of your cause as the noon.

7 Dalet Stay quiet before Yahweh, wait longingly for him, do not get heated over someone who is making a fortune,
succeeding by devious means.

8 He Refrain from anger, leave rage aside,
do not get heated—it can do no good;
9 for evil-doers will be annihilated, while those who hope in Yahweh shall have the land for their own. 25:13

i. They falsely accuse the psalmist of some crime.

36 a. The two parts of the Psalm, vv. 1–4 and 5–12, may have existed separately.

b. The voice of sin, here personified, takes the place of the word of God.

c. Text uncertain.

d. lit. 'the mountains of God', cf. 68:15; 80:10.

e. 'life' means prosperity, peace, happiness, cf. 133:3. The 'fountain of life' in Pr is wisdom, Pr 13:14; 16:22; 18:4; and the fear of God 14:27. This passage is applied to Christ, the life and light of all people, see Jn passim.

f. The 'light of the face' of God is his benevolence, 27:1; 89:15; Jb 29:3, see also Ps 4:6d; in it human beings find the 'light' of happiness.

37 a. This alphabetical Psalm, 'a mirror of Providence' (Tertullian) counters the indignation of those outraged by the prosperity of the ungodly with the teachings of the sages on earthly rewards and punishments for the upright and the wicked respectively. The debate is continued in Qo (8:11–14) and Jb.

b. The Holy Land, see 25:13; Dt 16:20. • 'live secure', lit. 'feed securely', see Is 14:30. These promises are taken up in a spiritual sense by the Beatitudes, Mt 5:3–4, cf. Rm 4:13.

Waw
A little while and the wicked will be no more, 10
however well you search for the place, the wicked will not be there;
Mt 5:4 but the poor will have the land for their own, 11
to enjoy untroubled peace.

Zain
The wicked plots against the upright 12
and gnashes his teeth at him,
but Yahweh only laughs at his efforts, 13
knowing that his end is in sight.

Het
Though the wicked draw his sword 14
and bend his bow to slaughter the honest and bring down the poor and the needy, his sword will pierce his own heart, 15
and his bow will be shattered.

Pr 15:16;16:8 Tet
What little the upright possesses 16
outweighs all the wealth of the wicked;[c]
for the weapons of the wicked shall be shattered, 17 while Yahweh supports the upright.

Yod
The lives of the just are in Yahweh's care, 18
their birthright will endure for ever;
they will not be put to shame when bad times come, 19
in time of famine they will have plenty.

Kaph
The wicked, enemies of Yahweh, will be destroyed, 20
they will vanish like the green of the pasture,
they will vanish in smoke.

Lamed
The wicked borrows and will not repay, 21
but the upright is generous in giving;
those he blesses will have the land for their own, 22
and those he curses be annihilated.[d]

‖Pr 20:24 Mem
Yahweh guides a strong man's steps and keeps them firm; 23
and takes pleasure in him.
When he trips he is not thrown sprawling, 24
since Yahweh supports him by the hand.

Nun
Now I am old, but ever since my youth 25
I never saw an upright person abandoned, or the descendants of the upright forced to beg their bread.
The upright is always compassionate, always lending, 26
so his descendants reap a blessing.

=34:15 Samek
Turn your back on evil and do good, 27
you will have a home for ever,
for Yahweh loves justice 28
and will not forsake his faithful.

Ain
Evil-doers will perish eternally,[e]
the descendants of the wicked be annihilated, but the upright shall have the land for their own, 29
there they shall live for ever.

Pe
Wisdom comes from the lips of the upright, 30
and his tongue speaks what is right; Dt 6:3,6 Jr 31:33 the law of his God is in his heart, 31
his foot will never slip.

32 Zade The wicked keeps a close eye on the upright, looking out for a chance to kill him;
33 Yahweh will never abandon him to the clutches of the wicked, nor let him be condemned if he is tried.

34 Qoph Put your hope in Yahweh, keep to his path, he will raise you up to make the land your own;
you will look on while the wicked are annihilated.

35 Resh I have seen the wicked exultant, Jb 20:6–7 Is 2:13;14:13 Ezk 31:10 towering like a cedar of Lebanon.[f]
36 When next I[g] passed he was gone,
I searched for him and he was nowhere to be found.

37 Shin Observe the innocent, consider the honest, for the man of peace will not lack children. Pr 23:18; 24:14 38 But the wicked will all be destroyed together,
and their children annihilated.

39 Taw The upright have Yahweh for their Saviour, their refuge in times of trouble; =9:9 40 Yahweh helps them and rescues them,
he will rescue them from the wicked,
and save them because they take refuge in him.

Prayer in distress[a]

Psalm Of David In commemoration

1 Yahweh, do not correct me in anger, =6:1
do not discipline me in wrath.
2 For your arrows have pierced deep into me, Jb 6:4 Lm 3:12
your hand has pressed down upon me.[b] 3 Your indignation has left no part of me unscathed, Is 1:5–6 my sin has left no health in my bones.

4 My sins stand higher than my head, Gn 4:13 Ezr 9:6
they weigh on me as an unbearable weight.
5 I have stinking, festering wounds,
thanks to my folly.
6 I am twisted and bent double,
I spend my days in gloom.

7 My loins burn with fever,
no part of me is unscathed.
8 Numbed and utterly crushed 102:3–5
I groan in distress of heart.

9 Lord, all my longing is known to you,

Insignificance of human beings before God [a]

For the choirmaster For Jeduthun Psalm Of David

I said, 'I will watch how I behave 1
so that I do not sin by my tongue.
I will keep a muzzle on my mouth
as long as any sinner is near.'
I stayed dumb, silent, speechless, 2
37:1a but the sinner's prosperity [b] redoubled my torment.

My heart had been smouldering within me, 3
but at the thought of this it flared up and the words came bursting out,
'Yahweh, let me know my fate, 4
how much longer I have to live.
89:47 Show me just how frail I am.

62:9;73:20; 90:9–10;94:11 'Look, you have given me but a hand's breadth or two of life, 5
Jb 7:6,16; 14:1,5 the length of my life is as nothing to you.
Is 40:7 Every human being that stands on earth is a mere puff of wind, Qo 2:21seq.;6:2 every human being that walks only a shadow; 6

a mere puff of wind is the wealth [c] stored away—
no knowing who will profit from it.'

7 So now, Lord, what am I to hope for?
My hope is in you.
8 Save me from all my sins,
do not make me the butt of fools.
9 I keep silence, I speak no more since you yourself have been at work.

10 Take your scourge away from me.
I am worn out by the blows you deal me.
11 You correct human beings by punishing sin,
like a moth you eat away all their desires—
a human being is a mere puff of wind.

12 Yahweh, hear my prayer,

Song of praise and prayer for help [a]

For the choirmaster Of David Psalm

1 I waited, I waited for Yahweh, then he stooped to me
and heard my cry for help.

2 He pulled me up from the seething chasm, 18:4;69:1–2, 14–15 from the mud of the mire. Jr 38:6
He set my feet on rock,
and made my footsteps firm.

3 He put a fresh song in my mouth, praise of our God.

c. 'without cause' hinnam conj.; Hebr. hayyim 'living'.
d. Some Gk MSS and versions add 'They have rejected me, the loved one, like a hideous corpse' (cf. Is 14:19), an allusion to the crucified Christ. The Coptic version, still more explicitly, 'They have nailed my flesh.'

39 a. cf. Ps 88. The psalmist expresses his dismay at the prosperity of the godless and the shortness of life, vv. 1–6; he commends himself to God and begs for his favour.
b. lit. 'because of his prosperity' mittobo conj.; Hebr. wrongly divided, mittob u 'without prosperity and'.
c. 'wealth' hamon conj.; Hebr. yehemayun 'they are in turmoil'.
d. lit. 'that I may look cheerful', see Jb 9:27; 10:20.

40 a. The hymn of thanksgiving, vv. 1–11, is followed by a cry of distress, vv. 13–17, identical with Ps 70. In the present arrangement the first part seems to be a review of past happiness as contrasted with present misery, leading up to the appeal to Yahweh.

35:21, 25
those who say to me, 'Aha, aha!'

But joy and happiness in you 16
69:6,32
to all who seek you!
35:27;104:1
Let them ceaselessly cry, 'Great is Yahweh'
who love your saving power.

Poor and needy as I am, 17
the Lord has me in mind.
You, my helper, my Saviour,
my God, do not delay.

PSALM 41

V 40

Prayer of a sufferer deserted

For the choirmaster Psalm Of David

1 Blessed is anyone who cares for the poor [a] and the weak; Pr 14:21 Tb 4:7–11 in time of trouble Yahweh rescues him.
2 Yahweh protects him, gives him life and happiness on earth.
Do not abandon him to his enemies' pleasure!
3 Yahweh sustains him on his bed of sickness;
you transform altogether the bed where he lies sick. [b]

4 For my part I said, 'Yahweh, take pity on me!
Cure me for I have sinned against you.'
5 My enemies speak to me only of disaster, 31:11–13; 38:11–12; 88:8
'When will he die and his name disappear?'
6 When people come to see me their talk is hollow, Jr 20:10 Jb 19:13–19 when they get out they spread the news with spite in their hearts.

7 All who hate me whisper together about me and reckon I deserve the misery I suffer. [c] 8 'A fatal sickness [d] has a grip on him;
now that he is down, he will never get up again.'
9 Even my trusted friend on whom I relied, 55:13 ↗Jn 13:18 who shared my table, takes advantage of me. [e]

10 But you, Yahweh, take pity on me!
Put me on my feet and I will give them their due.
11 This will convince me that you delight in me,
if my enemy no longer exults over me.
12 Then you will keep me unscathed,
and set me in your presence for ever.

13 Blessed be Yahweh, the God of Israel, Ne 9:5 Dn 2:20 from eternity to eternity.
Amen, Amen. [f]

PSALM 42–43

V 41–42

Lament of a Levite in exile [a]

For the choirmaster Poem Of the sons of Korah

1 As a deer yearns
for running streams, Jn 4:1a 63:1;84:2 Is 26:9

b. lit 'dug out'. God sees to it that his servant knows his will, cf. Is 50:5. A Gk variant, 'you have fashioned a body for me' was interpreted messianically and applied to Christ, Heb 10:5seq.

c. Obedience is better than sacrifice, 1 S 15:22. The prophets often put Israel on their guard against practices which involved no interior commitment, Am 5:21n, see Gn 8:21c, or against a presumptuous confidence in the presence of God in his Temple, see Jr 7:3–4. In post-exilic Judaism, whatever the continued importance of the Temple as a sign of salvation, Zc 1:16, interior cult becomes more and more important and the dispositions of the heart, prayer, obedience and love, themselves take on the value of cult, Ps 50; 51:17; 69:30–31; 141:2; Pr 21:3; see also Tb. 4:11; Si 34:18–35:10. This development prepares for the survival of Judaism after the destruction of the Temple, and continues also in the NT, Rm 1:9f; 12:1a.

d. 'Yahweh' is transposed from the end of the last stanza to maintain the rhythm of the rest of the Psalm.

41 a. 'the poor' Gk, Targ.; lacking in Hebr.

b. Text uncertain.

c. Sickness is regarded as a punishment for sin, see Jb; Ps 38:3; 107:17.

d. lit. 'a thing of Belial', see Dt 13:14b.

e. lit. 'lifts his heel against me'. • The 'trusted friend' has sometimes been identified with Ahitophel, David's counsellor, 2 S 15:12; 17:23, cf. 2 S 12:19.

f. This doxology closes the first book of the Psalter, cf. 72:18; 106:48.

42 a. Exile, a symbol of the troubles of the devout, 'exiled far from the Lord', 2 Co 5:6–8, here means absence from the Temple which is God's dwelling-place, and from the festivals uniting his people there.

so I yearn
for you, my God.

I thirst for God, 2
Jn 7:37 36:9 the living God;
when shall I [b] go to see 27:4 the face of God?

I have no food but tears 3
day and night,
79:10 Mi 7:10 Ml 2:17 as all day long I am taunted,
'Where is your God?'

Lm 3:20 This I remember 4
as I pour out my heart,
how I used to pass under the roof of the Most High [c] 27:4–5 used to go to the house of God, among cries of joy and praise,
the sound of the feast.

Why be so downcast, 5
why all these sighs?
Hope in God! I will praise him still,
6:4b my Saviour, [d] my God. 6

When I am downcast
I think of you:
from the land of Jordan and Hermon,
43:3;68:16 I think of you, humble mountain. [e]

Deep is calling to deep 7
by the roar of your cataracts, 32:6;69:2;88:7 ‖Jon 2:4 all your waves and breakers have rolled over me.

In the daytime God sends his faithful love, 8
and even at night;
the song it inspires in me
is a prayer to my living God.

18:2c I shall say to God, my rock, 9
'Why have you forgotten me?
Why must I go around in mourning,
harrassed by the enemy?'

With death in my bones, 10
my enemies taunt me,
all day long they ask me,
'Where is your God?'

Why so downcast, 11
why all these sighs?
Hope in God! I will praise him still,
my Saviour, my God.

43

Judge me, God, defend my cause 1
against a people who have no faithful love;
from those who are treacherous and unjust,
rescue me.

2 For you are the God of my strength;
why abandon me?
Why must I go around in mourning,
harrassed by the enemy?

3 Send out your light and your truth; 57:3
they shall be my guide,
to lead me to your holy mountain
to the place where you dwell.

4 Then I shall go to the altar of God,
to the God of my joy. [a]
I will rejoice and praise you on the harp, 63:5;81:2; 108:2
O God, my God.

5 Why so downcast,
why all these sighs?
Hope in God! I will praise him still,
my Saviour, my God.

V 43 74;79;80 Is 63:7f;64:11

National lament [a]

For the choirmaster Of the sons of Korah Poem

1 God, we have heard for ourselves, 2 S 7:22–23
our ancestors have told us, 78:3
of the deeds you did in their days, 2 in days of old, ·by your hand.

To establish them in the land you drove out nations, 78:55
to make room for them you harried peoples.
3 It was not their own sword that won the land, Dt 8:17–18+ Jos 24:12 Ho 1:7+ nor their own arms which made them victorious,
but your hand it was and your arm,
and the light of your presence, for you loved them. 4:6d

4 You are my king, my God, who decreed [b] Jacob's victories;
5 through you we conquered our opponents, in your name we trampled down those who rose up against us. 60:12

6 For my trust was not in my bow,
my victory was not won by my sword;
7 it was you who saved us from our opponents,
you who put to shame those who hate us.

b. 'to see' versions. 'To see the face of God' (contrast Hebr. 'appear before') here means to visit his sanctuary, the Temple in Jerusalem, see 27:8b; Dt 31:11. The Hebr. comes from a scribe shocked by the immediacy of the phrase, see Ex 33:20i.

c. 'Most High', lit. 'admirable' (with a plural of majesty) Gk, Syr.; Hebr. unintelligible. • 'roof', lit. 'hut' is the Temple where God resides, and which every pious Israelite visited each year, Ex 23:14–17.

d. 'Saviour', lit. 'saviour of my face' Hebr. MSS, Gk MS, Syr., cf. v. 11; 'his face' Hebr.

e. 'from you, humble mountain' conj. Hebr. has 'from the humble mountain' or 'from the hill of Mizar', alluding to Zaorah not far from the sources of the Jordan, which could be a stage on the route of the Exile. The earlier 'of you' would refer to God.

43 a. 'my joy' one Hebr. MS; 'the joy of my delight' MT. Gk interprets 'God who makes joyful my youth'.

44 a. This Psalm, contrasting past victories with present humiliations may, like 74; 79; 80, refer to the destruction of Jerusalem in 587. • vv. 17–22 have perhaps been added later to adapt the Psalm to the persecutions of the Maccabaean period.

b. 'my God, who decreed' versions; 'God, decree' Hebr.

Our boast was always of God, 8
we praised your name without ceasing. Pause

68:7 =60:10 Lv 26:17 Dt 28:25 Jg 5:4 Yet now you have abandoned and humiliated us, 9 you no longer take the field with our armies, you leave us to fall back before the enemy, 10
those who hate us plunder us at will.

You hand us over like sheep for slaughter, 11
Lv 26:33 Dt 28:64 you scatter us among the nations, Dt 32:30 Is 52:3 you sell your people for a trifle 12
and make no profit on the sale.

79:4 You make us the butt of our neighbours, 13
the mockery and scorn of those around us, you make us a by-word among nations, 14
other peoples shake their heads over us.

All day long I brood on my disgrace, 15
the shame written clear on my face, from the sound of insult and abuse, 16
from the sight of hatred and vengefulness.

All this has befallen us though we had not forgotten you, 17
nor been disloyal to your covenant, our hearts never turning away, 18
our feet never straying from your path.
Is 34:13 Jr 9:10 Yet you have crushed us in the place where jackals live,[c] 19
and thrown over us shadow dark as death.

Had we forgotten the name of our God 20
and stretched out our hands[d] to a foreign god, would not God have found this out, 21
139:1-3 for he knows the secrets of the heart?
↗Rm 8:36 For your sake we are being massacred all day long, 22 treated as sheep to be slaughtered.[e]

74:1;79:5;89:46 Wake, Lord! Why are you asleep? 23
Awake! Do not abandon us for good.
Why do you turn your face away, 24
forgetting that we are poor and harrassed?

7:5;=119:25 For we are bowed down to the dust, 25
and lie prone on the ground.
Arise! Come to our help! 26
Ransom us, as your faithful love demands.

Royal wedding song[a]

60:inscr.; 69:inscr.; 80:inscr. For the choirmaster Tune: 'Lilies . . .'[b] Of the sons of Korah Poem Love song

My heart is stirred by a noble theme, 1
I address my poem to the king,
my tongue the pen of an expert scribe.

Sg 5:10-16 Of all men you are the most handsome, 2

gracefulness is a dew upon your lips,
for God has blessed you for ever.

3 Warrior, strap your sword at your side,
4 in your majesty and splendour advance, ·ride on 21:5
in the cause of truth, gentleness and uprightness.

Stretch the bowstring tight, [c] lending terror to your right hand.
5 Your arrows are sharp, nations lie at your mercy,
the king's enemies lose heart.

6 Your throne is from God, [d] for ever and ever, Heb 1:8–9
the sceptre of your kingship a sceptre of justice,
7 you love uprightness and detest evil.

This is why God, your God, has anointed you with oil of gladness, as none of your rivals,
8 your robes all myrrh and aloes.

From palaces of ivory, harps bring you joy,
9 in your retinue [e] are daughters of kings,
the consort at your right hand in gold of Ophir.

10 Listen, my daughter, attend to my words and hear; forget your own nation and your ancestral home, [f] Gn 21:1
Jos 24:2
11 then the king will fall in love with your beauty; Ezk 16:3
he is your lord, bow down before him.
12 The daughter of Tyre will court your favour with gifts, 72:10–11
13 and the richest of peoples ·with jewels set in gold. [g] Is 60:5seq.

14 Clothed ·in brocade, the king's daughter is led within [h] Ezk 16:10–13 to the king with the maidens of her retinue;
her companions are brought to her, [i] 15 they enter the king's palace with joy and rejoicing.
16 Instead of your ancestors you will have sons;
you will make them rulers over the whole world. Gn 17:6;35:11

17 I will make your name endure from generation to generation, Is 60:15;
so nations will sing your praise for ever and ever. 61:9;62:2,7

c. Either the devastated country, Is 34:13; Jr 9:10, or the desert, a refuge for persecuted Jews, 1 M 2:29; 9:33.

d. Attitude of prayer, 28:2; 141:2; Is 1:15.

e. Probably an allusion to the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes.

45 a. According to some scholars, this Psalm may be a secular song to celebrate the marriage of an Israelite king, Solomon, Jeroboam II, or Ahab (whose bride was a Tyrian princess, 1 K 16:31). But the Jewish and Christian tradition understand it as celebrating the marriage of the messianic king with Israel (prefiguring the Church), see Sg 3:11; Is 62:5; Ezk 16:8–13. The poet addresses first the messianic King, vv. 2–9, crediting him with the attributes of Yahweh (145:4–7,12–13) and of Emmanuel (Is 9:5–6), then the queen, vv. 10–16.

b. 'Lilies' must be a Maccabaean alteration linking up with Sg. The original reference lying behind the title can be traced from the Gk 'Those who alter (the Charter = the Law)', see headings Ps 60;69;80; an allusion to apostate Jews.

c. 'stretch tight the bowstring' wehadrek yitreka conj; Hebr. wehadareka (from beginning of v.) wetoreka. 'and your majesty . . . and teach you'.

d. Gk translates 'Your throne, God', seeing in the word 'elohim a vocative addressing the king; in fact this title is applied to the Messiah, Is 9:5, to leaders and to judges, Ps 82:6; Ex 22:6, to Moses, Ex 4:16; 7:1, and to the House of David, Zc 12:8.

e. The non-Jewish nations, converted to the true God, Sg 1:3; 6:8; Is 60:3seq.; 61:5, and following Israel into his service, vv. 14–15.

f. Like the ancestral figure Abraham, Israel must sever all links with the surrounding non-Jewish world, and will receive 'sons' in return for the 'fathers' thus left.

g. The homage of the non-Jewish peoples, promised for the messianic times.

h. Hebr. lit. 'the king's daughter inside' before 'in brocade'

i. 'her' 2 MSS, cf. Syr; 'you' MT.

Zion, the mountain of God [a]

Song Psalm Of the sons of Korah

1 Great is Yahweh and most worthy of praise =96:4
in the city of our God,
2 the holy mountain, ·towering in beauty, 50:2 Lm 2:15
the joy of the whole world:

Mount Zion in the heart of the north, [b]
the settlement of the great king; Mt 5:35 3 God himself among its palaces has proved himself its bulwark.

4 For look, kings made alliance,
together they advanced;
5 without a second glance, when they saw,
they panicked and fled away.

6 Trembling seized them on the spot, Ex 15:14 pains like those of a woman in labour; Jr 4:31+ 7 it was the east wind,
that wrecker of ships from Tarshish. [c]

8 What we had heard we saw for ourselves
in the city of our God,
in the city of Yahweh Sabaoth,
which God has established for ever. Pause

9 We reflect on your faithful love, God,
in your temple!
10 Both your name and your praise, God, 113:3 Ml 1:11
are over the whole wide world.

46 a. Canticle of Zion. God's presence in the Temple safeguards the holy city, while symbolic waters purify it and fertilise it, making it a second Eden.

b. Images of a return of chaos. The earth rests on the waters of the nether ocean, 24:2, supported by pillars, see 75:3; 104:5; Jb 9:6; Pr 8:27. These columns totter and the waters are released and dash against the mountains.

c. The refrain, lacking in Hebr., is restored from vv. 7 and 11.

d. 'sanctifies' Gk; 'the (most) holy (or dwellings)' Hebr.

e. Hour of God's favour, 17:15d. Probable allusion to the withdrawal of Sennacherib's forces in 701, 2 K 19:35; Is 17:14.

47 a. Eschatological hymn: first of the 'Psalms of Kingship', see 93seq.; it elaborates the acclamation, 'Yahweh is King!' The King of Israel goes up to the Temple in triumphal procession to the sound of ritual acclamation, 33:3a. His empire extends to all nations who will one day join the chosen people.

b. 'our' Greek.

c. 'to' versions, absent from Hebr. The covenant with Abraham is extended to the whole human race. • The 'shields' are the kings, defenders of their peoples.

48 a. A hymn extolling Mount Zion, the nucleus of ancient Jerusalem, site of the royal palace and the Temple, see 2 S 5:9f. It may contain an allusion, vv. 4 and 5, to the defeat of the Syro-Ephraimite alliance against Ahaz in 735 and the hasty retreat of Sennacherib in 701.

b. In Canaanite poetry 'the mountain of the north' is the home of the gods; the psalmist adopts the expression, applying it to Mount Zion.

c. Sea-going vessels capable of sailing to 'Tarshish', but see Is 23:1b.

Worship in spirit and truth [a]

Psalm Of Asaph

The God of gods, Yahweh, is speaking, Dt 10:17 Jos 22:22
from east to west he summons the earth.
From Zion, perfection of beauty, he shines forth;
he is coming, our God, and will not be silent. Is 63:19

d. The neighbouring towns.
e. The Psalm may date from the rebuilding of the walls by Nehemiah. Ne 6:15; 12:27.
f. Hebr. adds 'to death', a corrupt rubric belonging to the following Psalm.

49 a. Like 37 and 73, this Psalm deals with the problem of retribution and the apparent prosperity of the godless, resolving it in the traditional fashion of the sages. An ironical dictum provides the theme, vv. 12 and 20.
b. 'dogs me' conj., following Hexapla; 'of my heels' Hebr.
c. 'tombs' versions; 'inside' Hebr.
d. 'lose their good sense', versions, cf. v. 20; 'spend the night' Hebr.
e. Translation uncertain.
f. Here personified, see Jb 18:13; 28:22; Jr 9:20; Ho 13:14.
g. 'their home' zebul lamo conj.; Hebr. mizebul lo 'without a home from him'. • Morning is the time of eschatological judgement and the triumph of the upright, see 17:15d.
h. The psalmist trusts God to keep him beyond the reach of Sheol. It cannot be asserted that here he glimpses the possibility of being 'taken up' to heaven like Enoch and Elijah, see 16:10g; 73:24; but he does think that the ultimate fate of the upright must differ from that of the godless and that the friendship of God can have no end. This implicit faith in a retribution to come prepares for the later revelation of the resurrection of the dead, and eternal life, 2 M 7:9c.
i. By contrast, God will glorify the upright, 73:24; 91:15.

50 a. God comes to judge Israel, vv. 1–7; he arraigns the formalism of sacrifice, vv. 8–15, accompanied by contempt for the commandments, vv. 16–23.

I will not accept any bull from your homes, 9
nor a single goat from your folds.

'For all forest creatures are mine already, 10
the animals on the mountains in their thousands.
I know every bird in the air, [b] 11
whatever moves in the fields is mine.

'If I am hungry I shall not tell you, 12
24:1 since the world and all it holds is mine.
Am I to eat the flesh of bulls 13
or drink the blood of goats?

Ho 14:3 'Let thanksgiving be your sacrifice to God, 14 fulfil the vows you make to the Most High;
then if you call to me in time of trouble 15
I will rescue you and you will honour me.'

But to the wicked, God says: [c] 16

Rm 2:17–24 'What right have you to recite my statutes, to take my covenant on your lips,
when you detest my teaching, 17
and thrust my words behind you?

'You make friends with a thief as soon as you see one, 18
you feel at home with adulterers,
your conversation is devoted to wickedness, 19
and your tongue to inventing lies.

'You sit there, slandering your own brother, 20
you malign your own mother's son.
You do this, and am I to say nothing? 21
Do you think that I am really like you?
I charge you, indict you to your face.

Dt 32:39

PSALM 51 V 50

A prayer of contrition [e]

2 S 11–12 For the choirmaster Of David When the prophet Nathan had come to him because he had gone to Bathsheba

Ezk 18:23+ Have mercy on me, O God, in your faithful love, 1 in your great tenderness wipe away my offences;
wash me thoroughly from my guilt, 2 purify me from my sin.

Is 59:12
Ezk 6:9 For I am well aware of my offences, 3
my sin is constantly in mind.
Is 59:12 Against you, you alone, I have sinned, 4
I have done what you see to be wrong,

↗Rm 3:4 that you may show your saving justice when you pass sentence, and your victory may appear when you give judgement, [b]

remember, I was born guilty,
a sinner from the moment of conception. [c]

But you delight in sincerity of heart, and in secret you teach me wisdom. [d]
Purify me with hyssop [e] till I am clean, wash me till I am whiter than snow.

Let me hear the sound of joy and gladness,
and the bones you have crushed will dance.
Turn away your face from my sins,
and wipe away all my guilt.

God, create [f] in me a clean heart,
renew within me a resolute spirit,
do not thrust me away from your presence,
do not take away from me your spirit of holiness. [g]

Give me back the joy of your salvation, sustain in me a generous spirit.
I shall teach the wicked your paths,
and sinners will return to you.

Deliver me from bloodshed, [h] God, God of my salvation,
and my tongue will acclaim your saving justice.
Lord, open my lips,
and my mouth will speak out your praise.

Sacrifice gives you no pleasure,
burnt offering you do not desire.
Sacrifice to God is a broken spirit,
a broken, contrite heart you never scorn.

In your graciousness do good to Zion, rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. [i] Then you will delight in upright sacrifices,
—burnt offerings and whole oblations [j]—
and young bulls will be offered on your altar.

b. 'air' versions; 'mountains' Hebr.

c. So far God has addressed all Israel indiscriminately; this line could have been added to exclude the upright from what follows.

d. 'the upright', lit. 'the man of perfect way' wetam derek conj.; Hebr. wesam derek 'he has placed his way'.

51 a. Penitential Psalm, see 6:1a, with close affinity to prophetic literature, especially Is and Ezk.

b. God is wholly pure and upright, and by pardoning demonstrates his power over evil and his victory over sin.

c. Human beings are born in a state of impurity, Jb 14:4c. See Pr 20:9, which is an implicit recognition of their tendency to evil, Gn 8:21. This basic impurity is here pleaded as a mitigating circumstance, cf. 1 K 8:46, which God should take into account.

d. The vocabulary of this v. ('of heart', lit. 'that which is covered', and 'secret', lit. 'that which is closed') should be compared with 7:9; 16:7; 33:15. God penetrates human nature and can transform it. A symbolic sense may also be discerned if the v. is connected with Ezk 13:10seq., on the lying prophets who 'plaster over' cracked walls instead of rebuilding them (see also Lv 14:43 on infection of walls). Here, on the contrary, even what is hidden and plastered over will be purified and renewed by divine wisdom.

e. Plant used for sprinkling in purifications, Lv 14:4; Nb 19:18.

f. This verb always has God for its subject; it designates the act by which he brings something new and wonderful into being, Gn 1:1; Ex 34:10 ('worked'); Is 48:7; 65:17; Jr 31:21–22. The justification of the sinner is the most wonderful of all the works of God, and is analogous to the act of creation, see Ezk 36:25seq., see also Jr 31:33; 32:39–40.

g. Here considered as the principle (a human quality but given by God) of moral and religious activity, whether of the individual, 143:10; Ws 1:5; 9:17, or of the nation as a whole, Ne 9:20; Is 63:11; Hg 2:5.

h. The prophet Ezekiel, see Ezk 7:23; 9:9; 22:2; 24:6, calls Jerusalem 'city of blood'. This has sometimes been considered to be an allusion to the murder of Uriah by David, 2 S 12:9. It has also been understood as the expression of the sudden death of the wicked, traditionally the punishment for sin.

i. After the return from exile the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem was eagerly looked forward to as a sign of divine forgiveness, Is 60–62; Jr 30:15–18; Ezk 36:33.

j. Liturgical annotation; inserted later. • In the restored Jerusalem sacrifice will recover its value because it will be offered with devotion (lit. 'upright sacrifice').

The fate of the godless [a]

For the choirmaster In sickness Poem Of David

The fool has said in his heart, 1
'There is no God!'
They are corrupt, vile and unjust,
not one of them does right.

God looks down from heaven 2
at the children of Adam,
to see if a single one is wise,
a single one seeks God.

All have proved faithless, 3
all alike turned sour,

not one of them does right,
not a single one.

4 Are they not aware, these evil-doers?
They are devouring my people;
this is the bread they eat,
and they never call upon God.

Against the wicked [a]

For the choirmaster Tune: 'Do not destroy' Of David In a quiet voice 1 S 19:11seq.
When Saul sent men to watch David's house in order to have him killed

1 Rescue me from my enemies, my God, be my stronghold from my assailants,
2 rescue me from evil-doers,
from men of violence save me.

e. There is perhaps an allusion here to the tears of Hezekiah, 2 K 20:5; Is 38:3–5. Each tear of the just will have its eschatological compensation, Is 25:8, cf. Rv 7:17. • The text adds a gloss on this theme 'Is it not "in your ledger"?', cf. 139:16; Jb 19:23; Ml 3:16.

f. Hebr. adds 'Should this not be "my feet from falling"?', and certain Gk MSS add 'my eyes from tears', borrowed from 116:8 and suggested by v. 8.

57 a. The psalmist wants God to manifest his sovereignty by rescuing the oppressed and destroying the godless.

b. Personified as in Jb 3:9; 38:12; 41:10. Dawn is the hour of rescue, 17:15d.

58 a. Like the prophets of old the poet apostrophises unjust judges, and calls divine judgement down on them.

b. Gods 'elim conj.; Hebr. 'elem 'in silence'. The expression here embraces judges and rulers. See 45:6,7; 82; Ex 21:6; 22:7; Dt 19:17; 2 S 14:17.

c. 'like trampled grass' hatzir conj.; Hebr. hitztzayw 'he tramples his arrows as'.

d. corr., 'before they sprout thorns', corr. of the Hebr. text, following Symmachus and Jerome. Hebr. has 'your pots feel the thorn'.

59 a. This Psalm with its mixture of praise and imprecation has two refrains: vv. 6 and 14; 9 and 17. The author may have been a Jew of the Dispersion, surrounded by hostile pagans, or a devout man living in a half-paganised Jerusalem.

Look at them, lurking to ambush me, 3 violent men are attacking me, for no fault, no sin of mine, Yahweh, ·for no guilt, 4
they come running to take up position.

Wake up, stand by me and keep watch,
Yahweh, God of Sabaoth, God of Israel, 5
rise up, to punish all the nations, [b]
Is 26:10 show no mercy to all these malicious traitors. Pause

Back they come at nightfall, 6
snarling like curs,
55:10 prowling through the town. [c]

Look how they rant in speech 7 52:2;55:21; 57:4;64:3 with swords on their lips,
'Who is there to hear us?' [d]

2:4;37:13 For your part, Yahweh, you laugh at them, 8
you make mockery of all nations.
My strength, I keep my eyes fixed on you. 9

For my stronghold is God,
the God who loves me faithfully [e] is coming to meet me, 10 54:7 God will let me feast my eyes on those who lie in wait for me.

Do not annihilate them, or my people may forget; 11
shake them in your power, bring them low, [f]
Lord, our shield.

Pr 12:13;18:7 Sin is in their mouths, sin on their lips, 12
so let them be trapped in their pride for the curses and lies that they utter.

Ezk 5:13; 6:12;13:13; 46:9–10;83:18 Destroy them in your anger, destroy them till they are no more, 13
and let it be known that God is Master in Jacob and the whole wide world. Pause

Back they come at nightfall, 14
snarling like curs,
prowling through the town,
scavenging for something to eat, 15
growling [g] unless they have their fill.

17:15d And so I will sing of your strength, 16
in the morning acclaim your faithful love;
you have been a stronghold for me,
a refuge when I was in trouble.

My strength, I will make music for you, 17
for my stronghold is God,
the God who loves me faithfully. [h]

For the choirmaster To the tune 'The decree is a lily' In a quiet voice Of David To be learnt When he was at war with Aram-Naharaim and Aram-Zobah, and Joab marched back to destroy twelve thousand Edomites in the Valley of Salt — 2 S 8:2,3,13; 1 Ch 18:2,3,12

9 Who will lead me against a fortified city,
who will guide me into Edom,

any human help is worthless.
12 With God we shall do deeds of valour, — Ho 1:7+; 44:5
he will trample down our enemies.

b. Eschatological style, cf. Is 26:21.

c. The image suggests, see vv. 14–15, the packs of stray dogs found in the villages of the east.

d. A form of blasphemy, cf. 10:4; 14:1; 64:5; 94:7.

e. 'my strength'; MSS and versions, see v. 17; 'his strength'; 'who loves me', lit. 'of my love': MSS and versions, 'his love': Text rec.

f. Like Cain, Gn 4:14–15, non-Jewish nations must survive to witness the divine justice.

g. 'growling' versions; 'spending the night' Hebr.

h. The last antiphon seems incomplete, cf. v. 10.

60 a. This Psalm implies the same historical situation as 44 and 80. V. 7 introduces a prophecy of hope, repeated in 108:7–14, foretelling the restoration of an enlarged and unified kingdom, as in the early days of the monarchy, with control over Edom, Ephraim, Gilead, see Is 11:13–14; Ob.

b. The defeat is described in apocalyptic terms.

c. The banner, or rallying signal, is a common feature (Ex 17:15; Is 5:26; 11:10; 49:22; 62:10; Sg 2:4); here, however, it is the signal for retreat, see v. 10.

d. Or 'by his holiness', i.e. guaranteeing his promises.

e. An anti-Samaritan sally, cf. Ne 3:33seq. The mention together of Shechem and Succoth, see Gn 33:17–18, is no doubt an allusion to the conquest of the Promised Land, recalled with regret but also with hope.

f. An ancient custom, Dt 25:9, in Rt 4:7, it signifies appropriation.

g. Ironical, softened in Ps 108:9: 'Over Philistia I cry victory.'

h. An expression of the psalmist's nostalgia, who, in a country divided and plundered by its neighbours, thinks back to the golden age of the holy war, the conquest and the Davidic kingdom.

Yearning for God

Psalm Of David When he was in the desert of Judah [a] 1 S 22–24

1 God, you are my God, I pine for you; [b] 36:7–9
my heart thirsts for you, 42:1
my body longs for you,
as a land parched, dreary and waterless. 143:6 2 Thus I have gazed on you in the sanctuary, seeing your power and your glory.

3 Better your faithful love than life itself;
my lips will praise you.
4 Thus I will bless you all my life,
in your name lift up my hands.
5 All my longings fulfilled as with fat and rich foods, 36:8
a song of joy on my lips and praise in my mouth.

6 On my bed when I think of you,
I muse on you in the watches of the night,
7 for you have always been my help; in the shadow of your wings I rejoice; 17:8+ 8 my heart clings to you,
your right hand supports me.

9 May those who are hounding me to death 5:10c go down to the depths of the earth,

61 a. Lament of a Levite in exile from Mt Zion, vv. 1–5, followed by a prayer for the king, vv. 6–7.

b. i.e. the Rock of the Temple for which the psalmist longs. This Psalm could date from the first deportation (598), cf. 2 K 24:14seq., when the Temple had not yet been destroyed.

c. These personified divine attributes will accompany the messianic king, 85:10seq.; 89:14,24, as they protect the king, Pr 20:28, or the faithful Levite, Ps 40:11. Vv. 6–7 may be an ancient prayer for the king, but their emphasis on a reign indefinitely prolonged recalls the prophecy of Nathan, 2 S 7:16; 1 Ch 17:14, and their close resemblance to the messianic passages of Ps 72 and 89 makes them applicable to the royal Messiah.

62 a. Didactic Psalm: human malice, hollowness of things created, vanity of riches, impartiality of the divine judge. The theme of the refrain, vv. 1–2,5–6, is that of the following Psalm.

b. 'Trickery' mashshu'ot conj.; Hebr. misse'eto 'from his eminence'.

c. lit. 'sons of men', 'people of value', ordinary people and people of rank respectively, as in 49:2.

d. The literary device of numerical proverbs is found in Jb 40:5; Pr 6:16; 30:15; Am 1:3seq.

e. Doctrine of individual retribution taught by the prophets (especially Ezekiel, 14:12d), the wisdom writers and the psalmists Ps 37:1a, and by the NT, Mt 16:27; Rv 2:23.

63 a. This Psalm was applied to David wandering in the desert, and was perhaps slightly altered accordingly.

b. Versions: 'from early morning I am with you.

PSALM 66 V 65

Corporate prayer of thanksgiving[a]

For the choirmaster Song Psalm

1 Acclaim God, all the earth,

c. By Yahweh, cf. Dt 6:13; Jr 12:16; or by the king; the text is ambiguous.

64 a. By the law of retaliation, the arrow of God, v. 7, avenges the arrow of the wicked word, v. 3.

b. The text has been here corrected by changing two consonants and redividing the words; the Hebr., corrupt, lit. 'they reason out (contrive) wicked deeds; we are ready (MSS: 'they hide'), a plot they hatch; and the depths.'

c. 'he brings them down because of . . .' conj.; 'he makes him stumble against them (is their tongue)' Hebr., with letters transposed.

65 a. After a good year with plentiful rain the people thank the Creator. The first part, vv. 1–8, with its world-wide outlook, is reminiscent of Is. The second, vv. 9–13, with a change of rhythm in v. 10, is an enthusiastic description of spring in Judah.

b. lit. 'is due to you' versions; 'silence (is praise)' Hebr.

c. 'blot out' lit. 'cover the sin': expression in the 'Priestly' vocabulary for divine pardon, granted especially on the Day of Expiation, Lv 1:4c; 16:1a; see Ps 78:38; 79:9.

d. 'islands' Targ., 'seas' Hebr., perhaps an anti-universalist alteration, since 'the islands' represent non-Jewish nations.

e. 'are in uproar' Gk; 'and the uproar (of the nations)' Hebr.

f. These gates through which the sun was thought to pass each day represent the most distant countries.

g. The poet is thinking about the storehouses above the vault of the sky where the waters are kept, 104:3; Gn 1:7; 7:11; Jb 38:25, rather than the symbolic river of Zion, Ps 46:4d.

h. The chariot of God, 68:4, 17; Is 66:15, traverses the earth dispensing fertility.

i. lit. 'they acclaim, yes they sing'.

66 a. This liturgical thanksgiving on behalf of the community, the leader of which speaks from v. 13 onwards, recalls in style and worldwide outlook the second half of Is.

sing psalms to the glory of his name, 2
Ep 1:12,14 glorify him with your praises, say to God, 'How awesome you are! 3

'Your achievements are the measure of your power, 18:44;81:15 your enemies woo your favour,
all the earth bows down before you, 4

Come and see the marvels of God, 5
his awesome deeds for the children of Adam:
114:3 he changed the sea into dry land, 6
Is 44:27;50:2 they crossed the river on foot. [b]

So let us rejoice in him,
who rules for ever by his power; 7
his eyes keep watch on the nations to forestall rebellion against him. Pause

Nations, bless our God, 8
let the sound of his praise be heard;
he brings us to life [c] 9
and keeps our feet from stumbling.

God, you have put us to the test, 10
Is 48:10 refined us like silver,
let us fall into the net; 11
you have put a heavy strain on our backs, let men ride over our heads; 12
32:6;81:7 but now the ordeal by fire and water is over,
Is 43:2 you have led us out to breathe again. [d]

I bring burnt offerings to your house, 13
I fulfil to you my vows,
the vows that rose to my lips, 14
that I pronounced when I was in trouble.

I will offer you rich burnt offerings, 15
with the smoke of burning rams.
I will sacrifice to you bullocks and goats. Pause

Come and listen, all who fear God, 16
while I tell what he has done for me.

To him I cried aloud, 17
high praise was on my tongue.
Jn 9:31 Had I been aware of guilt in my heart, 18
the Lord would not have listened, but in fact God did listen, 19
attentive to the sound of my prayer.

Blessed be God 20
who has not turned away my prayer,
nor his own faithful love from me.

An epic of Israel's glory [a]

For the choirmaster Of David Psalm Song

1 Let God arise, let his enemies scatter, Nb 10:35
let his opponents flee before him. Is 33:3 2 You disperse them like smoke;
as wax melts in the presence of a fire,
so the wicked melt at the presence of God.

3 The upright rejoice in the presence of God,

Ba 6:37

b. The crossing of the Sea of Reeds, Ex 14–15, and of the Jordan, Jos 3: two great 'typical' events of Israel's history, also found together in 74:13–15; 114.

c. Hence the title 'Resurrection Psalm' given to this Psalm by some Gk MSS. The Easter liturgy uses this verse.

d. 'to breathe again', versions; Hebr. 'to saturation'.

67 a. Probably recited at the harvest festival, see Ex 23:14d

b. This refrain is in the spirit of the second part of Is: by the example of the chosen people and the lessons of its history the non-Jewish nations also are summoned to serve the one God.

c. 'the world with justice, you judge' Sin., cf. 9:8; 96:13; 98:9, omitted by Hebr.

68 a. This hymn of thanksgiving covers the chief stages in the history of the people of God, like those of a triumphal progress by Yahweh: the Exodus from Egypt, the journey through the desert, the victories of the period of the Judges (Deborah, Gideon), the installation of the ark on Zion, the story of Elijah and Elisha, the tragic fate of the family of Ahab, the solemn Passover of Hezekiah, and finally the worldwide perspectives of the closing chapters of Is. Between Prelude (vv. 1–6) and Conclusion (vv. 32–35) are six groups of two strophes, the strophes being paired off on the basis of subject-matter. A copyist's error has upset the order of strophes 6 and 7.

b. 'rejoice' simhu conj.; Hebr. shemo 'his name'.

Lament[a]

For the choirmaster Tune: 'Lilies . . .' Of David 45:inscr.

1 Save me, God, for the waters 18:4e;124:4–5 have closed in on my very being.[b] Jon 2:6

2 I am sinking in the deepest swamp
and there is no firm ground.

c. A Hebr. gloss adds 'that is, Sinai' cf. Jg 5:5, 'him of Sinai'. This strophe shows Yahweh taking the field; his departure from Egypt in the cloud, Ex 13:21; Nb 14:14, and the theophany of Sinai, Ex 19:16g.

d. The miracles of the Exodus: the manna, the quails and the entry into the Promised Land.

e. 'a command', 'the good news' conj.; 'his couriers the news' Hebr.

f. The victories of the conquest. The fair one means possibly Jael, Jg 5:24, or perhaps the wives of the conquerors, see Jg 5:30; 11:34; 1 S 18:6.

g. The little walls enclosing a sheepfold.

h. The Dove is the symbol of Israel, see 74:19; Ho 7:11, decking itself out with the finery won in battle, see Jos 22:8; Jg 8:24seq.

i. The 'Dark Mountain' is probably a wooded hill near Shechem, Jg 9:48–49. Abimelech sowed salt (white as snow, see Si 43:18–19) on the ruins of this town, Jg 9:45. The passage is highly obscure, but one imagines the poet, imitating Jg 5, questioning the isolationist clans who were not present at the battle, and vaunting to them the precious booty which the women of Israel are sharing out, and which shines on their brown skin like the plumage of a dove.

j. Not the chariots of Solomon, 1 K 10:26, but the heavenly chariots seen by Elisha, 2 K 6:17, cf. 2 K 7:6; Is 66:15. What follows refers to the victories of the monarchical period.

k. At the time of the Second Temple the Hebr. text of this v. was altered by changing the division of words; literally it translates: 'The Lord is in them, Sinai is in the sanctuary'. Sinai is thus identified with Zion, from where the Law issues, Is 2:3. This is the first sign of an adaptation of this Psalm in function of the liturgical feast of Pentecost, which commemorated the gift of the Law on Sinai, see the gloss of v. 8.

l. Zion.

m. Allusion to the death of Ahab, 1 K 21:19; 22:38, of Jehoram, 2 K 9:24, and of Jezebel, 2 K 9:36.

n. Liturgical antiphon.

o. 'bright-coloured robes' riqmatam conj.; Hebr. rigmatam 'heaped up'. • vv. 24–27 evoke the Pasch of Hezekiah, 2 Ch 30, in which the tribes of the North took part.

p. Line corrected, following versions: 'your God has commanded your strength' Hebr. The text and rhythm of the two following strophes are rather uncertain.

q. An insulting allusion to Egypt, its chieftains and people. It must be at the time of the great Jewish deportation to Egypt in the reign of Ptolemy Soter, c. 320.

r. 'nobles' (lit. 'fat [people]') hashshemenim or mishmannim conj.; following Gk; Hebr. hashmannim 'bronze objects' (?). • 'will stretch out' yitrotz conj.; Hebr. taritz 'will send'.

s. Hebr. adds 'the Lord. Pause'.

t. 'his sanctuary' Vulg; 'his sanctuaries' Hebr.

69 a. This messianic Psalm is composed of two laments of differing rhythms, each containing a lamentation followed by a prayer. The first, vv. 1–6 and 13–15, elaborates the themes of the nether waters, Ps 18:4e and enemies, Ps 35 etc. The second, vv. 7–12 and 16seq., is a cry of distress of one who suffers for his zeal, see Ps 22; Is 53:10; Jr 15:15. The Psalm ends as a hymn of national application, vv. 32 seq., cf. 22:27seq., and 102:13seq.

b. Or 'up to my neck'.

I have stepped into deep water and the waves are washing over me.

I am exhausted with calling out, my throat is hoarse, 3
my eyes are worn out with searching for my God.

40:12 More numerous than the hairs of my head 4

PSALM 70 V 69

A cry of distress[a]

For the choirmaster Of David In commemoration 38 inscr.

1 Be pleased, God, to rescue me,
Yahweh, come quickly and help me!
2 Shame and dismay to those who seek my life!

Back with them! Let them be humiliated who delight in my misfortunes.
3 Let them shrink away covered with shame, 3
those who say to me, 'Aha, aha!'

c. Hebr. inserts 'Lord' before 'Yahweh'.
d. 'mortify myself' Gk, Syr.; 'weep' Hebr.
e. Conjectural translation; the order of lines and words in vv. 19–20 has been upset, but no reconstruction is satisfactory.
f. 'redoubling' Gk, Syr.; 'recounting' Hebr. • In v. 26 the object is in the plural, an adaptation to the national liturgy.

70 a. Doublet of 40:13–17.

But joy and happiness in you 4
to all who seek you.
Let them ceaselessly cry, 'God is great',
who love your saving power.

Poor and needy as I am, 5
God, come quickly to me!
Yahweh, my helper, my Saviour,
do not delay!

PSALM 71 V 70

A prayer in old age

=31:1-3 In you, Yahweh, I take refuge, 1
25:2 I shall never be put to shame.
In your saving justice rescue me, deliver me, 2
listen to me and save me.

Be a sheltering rock [a] for me, 3
always accessible;
you have determined to save me,
for you are my rock, my fortress.
140:1 My God, rescue me from the clutches of the wicked, 4 from the grasp of the rogue and the ruthless.

For you are my hope, Lord, 5
my trust, Yahweh, since boyhood.
On you I have relied since my birth, 6
since my mother's womb you have been my portion, [b]
22:3;109:1 Jr 17:14 the constant theme of my praise.

Many were bewildered at me, [c] 7
31:11 Is 52:14 but you are my sure refuge.
My mouth is full of your praises, 8 filled with your splendour all day long.

22:11,19 Do not reject me in my old age, 9
nor desert me when my strength is failing,
for my enemies are discussing me, 10
those with designs on my life are plotting together.

3:2;22:8; 69:26 'Hound him down, for God has deserted him! 11
Seize him, there is no one to rescue him.'
22:11+ God, do not stand aloof, 12
my God, come quickly to help me.

=40:14;=35:4 Shame and ruin 13
on those who slander me,
may those intent on harming me
be covered with insult and infamy.

As for me, my hope will never fade, 14
I will praise you more and more.
35:28;109:30 My lips shall proclaim your saving justice, 15
your saving power all day long. [d]

I will come in the power of Yahweh [e] 16
to tell of your justice, yours alone.

17 God, you have taught me from boyhood, and I am still proclaiming your marvels. 129:1–2 Is 46:3–4 Jr 2:1 Ho 2:17

18 Now that I am old and grey-haired,
God, do not desert me,[f]
till I have proclaimed your strength[g] 22:30+
to generations still to come,
19 your power ·and justice to the skies. 36:6

You have done great things, 72:18; 86:8+
God, who is like you?
20 You have shown me much misery and hardship,
but you will give me life again,
You will raise me up again from the depths of the earth, 9:13;40:2 21 prolong my old age, and comfort me again.

22 For my part, I will thank you on the lyre for your constancy, my God.
I will play the harp in your honour,
Holy One of Israel. Is 6:3g

23 My lips sing for joy as I play to you, 7:17i because you have redeemed me, 24 and all day long my tongue
muses on your saving justice.
Shame and disgrace
on those intent to harm me!

71 a. 'sheltering' ('of security') MSS, versions. 'a walled fortress' Gk and 31:2.
b. Meaning uncertain (versions 'my strength'?).
c. Because of his sufferings: they are surprised to see a good person suffer, cf. Jb.
d. Hebr. adds 'I have not known how to read the letters' doubtless the gloss of a scribe puzzled by the following word.
e. Meaning uncertain, lit. 'I shall come in the powers of the Lord Yahweh.' Possibly the first letter should be changed to read 'I shall proclaim the powerful deeds of Yahweh.'
f. This passage could be applied to Israel, whose 'youth' and 'old age' were often referred to by the prophets.
g. lit. 'your arm', a figure of speech found in the prophets, Is 51:9; 53:1, referring to the miracles of the Exodus.

72 a. This Psalm, dedicated to Solomon, whose wealth, glory and just and peaceful reign it celebrates (1 K 3:9,12, 28; 4:20; 10:1–29; 1 Ch 22:9), evokes the image of the future ideal king. Jewish and Christian tradition see it as a portrait of the messianic King foretold by Isaiah, 9:5; 11:1–5; and Zechariah, 9:9seq.
b. Division of verse according to Gk. Text uncertain.

V 72

The triumph of justice [a]

Psalm Of Asaph

Indeed God is good to Israel, 1
the Lord [b] to those who are pure of heart.

My feet were on the point of stumbling, 2
a little more and I had slipped,
37:1a
Jb 21:13–26
envying the arrogant as I did, 3
and seeing the prosperity of the wicked.

4 For them no such thing as pain, untroubled, their comfortable portliness;[c] 5 exempt from the cares which are the human lot,
they have no part in Adam's afflictions.

6 So pride is a necklace to them,
violence the garment they wear.
7 From their fat oozes out malice,[d] 17:10; 119:70
their hearts drip with cunning. Jb 15:27
Jr 5:28

8 Cynically they advocate evil,
loftily they advocate force.
9 Their mouth claims heaven for themselves, and their tongue is never still on earth.

10 That is why my people turn to them,
and enjoy the waters of plenty,[e]
11 saying, 'How can God know? 10:11+
What knowledge can the Most High have?'
12 That is what the wicked are like,
piling up wealth without any worries.

13 Was it useless, then, to have kept my own heart clean, Ml 3:14
to have washed my hands in innocence? =26:6

14 When I was under a hail of blows all day long,
and punished every morning, Jb 7:18
15 had I said, 'I shall talk like them,'
I should have betrayed your children's race.

16 So I set myself to understand this:
how difficult I found it!
17 Until I went into the sanctuaries of the gods[f]
and understood what was destined to become of them.
18 You place them on a slippery slope and drive them down into chaos.

19 How sudden their hideous destruction!
They are swept away, annihilated by terror!
20 Like a dream upon waking, Lord,
when you awake,[g] you dismiss their image. 49:14

d. The versions translate 'fleece'. see Jg 6:37seq.
e. 'uprightness' MSS, versions: 'the upright' (Hebr.), a messianic adaptation, cf. Jr 23:5; Zc 9:9.
f. The messianic age will last till the end of time.
g. The boundaries of an ideal Palestine. see Jg 20:1a.
h. The word used of animals or demons of the desert. Is 13:21; 34:14; Jr 50:39; Ezk 34:28, here refers to subjugated heathen states, cf. Is 27:1; Dn 7:3; Rv 13:1.
i. 'be given him' versions; 'he give' Hebr.
j. An obscure passage; the subject of the verb is not explicit. Israel is praying for the success of the Messiah's saving mission. But it could also be understood: 'He (the Messiah) will pray for him (the poor man) and will bless him.'
k. 'and flowers' conj.; 'let them flower' Hebr.
l. 'blessed' and 'every race in the world' Gk, lacking in Hebr. • 'endure' yikkon versions; Hebr. yinnon 'multiply'. In the present state of the text it could be translated: 'Let his name be ever before the sun. "He-shall-flower" is his name', this would be an adaptation alluding to the stock of Jesse, Is 11:1, and to the messianic name of Branch, Is 4:2; Jr 23:5; 33:15; Zc 6:12.
m. The colophon and preceding doxology close the second book of the Psalter.

73 a. The poet-sage is troubled by the prosperity of the godless and the sufferings of the upright, cf. Jb 21:1seq.; Qo 7:15; Jr 12:1; Ml 3:15, but goes on to contrast the passing pleasures of the sinner with the enduring peace of God's friendship.
b. 'the Lord' conj.; 'and I' Hebr. (after 'hearts').
c. 'For them . . . untroubled' lamo tam conj.; Hebr. (wrongly divided) lamotam 'at their death'.
d. 'malice' versions; 'eye' Hebr.
e. Following the versions; Hebr. corrupt, lit. 'That is why his people come back this side (or: 'He makes his people come back this side'), the waters of plenty are empty.'
f. Those of the non-Jewish gods, support of the impious and responsible for evil in the world, Ps 82. It has been understood also of the Temple, Jr 51:51, or of divine mysteries, Ps 119:130; Ws 2:22, but the context suggests rather the ruin of non-Jewish sanctuaries.
g. On God's awakening see 35:23; 44:23; 59:5; 78:65; Is 51:9. • On the 'image' see 49:14; 90:5; Jb 20:8; Is 29:7–8.

My heart grew embittered, 21
my affections dried up,
I was stupid and uncomprehending, 22
a clumsy animal [h] in your presence.

Even so, I stayed in your presence, 23
you grasped me by the right hand;
you will guide me with advice, 24
16:10+ and will draw me in the wake of your glory. [i]

Who else is there for me in heaven? 25
And, with you, I lack nothing on earth.
My heart and my flesh are pining away [j]: 26
16:5g my heart's rock, my portion, God for ever!

Truly, those who abandon you will perish; 27
you destroy those who adulterously desert you, [k]
whereas my happiness is to be near God. 28
I have made the Lord Yahweh my refuge, to tell of all your works. [l]

Lament on the sack of the Temple [a]

Poem Of Asaph

God, why have you finally rejected us, 1
your anger blazing against the flock you used to pasture?
Remember the people you took to yourself long ago, 2
Ex 15:17 your own tribe which you redeemed,
Dt 7:6b
Is 51:19;63:17 and this Mount Zion where you came to live.
Jr 10:16

Come up to these endless ruins! 3
The enemy have sacked everything in the sanctuary; your opponents made uproar in the place of assemblies, 4
they fixed their emblems over the entrance, emblems ·never known before. [b] 5

Their axes deep in the wood, ·hacking at the panels, [c] 6 they battered them down with axe and pick;
Is 64:10 they set fire to your sanctuary, 7
profanely rased to the ground the dwelling-place of your name.

They said to themselves, 'Let us crush them at one stroke!' [d] 8
They burned down every sacred shrine in the land.
77:8 We see no signs, no prophet any more, 9
Lm 2:9
Ezk 7:26 and none of us knows how long it will last. [e]

6:3;89:46 How much longer, God, will the enemy blaspheme? 10
Is the enemy to insult your name for ever?
Why hold back your hand, 11
Is 52:10 keep your right hand hidden [f] in the folds of your robe?

Yet, God, my king from the first, 12
author of saving acts throughout the earth, 89:9–10 by your power you split the sea in two, 13
Jb 7:12f
Is 51:9–10 and smashed the heads of the monsters on the waters.

14 You crushed Leviathan's heads,[g] Jb 3:8e;40:25j gave him as food to the wild animals.[h] 15 You released the springs and brooks, and turned primordial rivers into dry land.[i]

16 Yours is the day and yours the night, Gn 1
you caused sun and light to exist, 17 you fixed all the boundaries of the earth,
you created summer and winter.

18 Remember, Yahweh, the enemy's blasphemy,
a foolish people insults your name.
19 Do not surrender your turtledove[j] to the beast;
do not forget for ever the life of your oppressed people.

20 Look to the covenant!
All the hiding-places of the land are full,
haunts of violence.
21 Do not let the downtrodden retreat in confusion,
give the poor and needy cause to praise your name.

22 Arise, God, champion your own cause, remember how fools blaspheme you all day long!
23 Do not forget the shouting of your enemies,
the ever-mounting uproar of your adversaries.

PSALM 75 V 74

The universal judge[a]

For the choirmaster Tune: 'Do not destroy' Psalm Of Asaph Song

1 We give thanks to you, God, we give thanks to you, as we call upon your name, as we recount your wonders.[b]

2 'At the appointed time
I myself shall dispense justice.

h. lit. 'Behemoth', crassness personified, see Jb 40:15f.

i. Glory here seems to be the divine attribute personified, recalling the Cloud of Exodus. The versions translate 'with glory', giving the word its usual sense when used of human beings; this interpretation suggests that God preserves the just from an early and shameful death and will vindicate them, even though the upright dies while the wicked survive. Moreover, as in 16:9seq., the psalmist yearns for unbreakable union with God: this is a milestone on the road to an explicit belief in resurrection and eternal life, see 16:10g.

j. With desire, cf. 84:2; Jb 19:27, not with weakness, cf. Ps 143:7.

k. In prophetic literature the expression means infidelity to God, see Ho 1:2b.

l. Gk adds: 'at the gates of the daughter of Zion!' cf. 9:14.

74 a. According to Targ., the madman (v. 22) is Antiochus Epiphanes, the 'mad king' who burned the Temple gates, 1 M 4:38; 2 M 1:8, and profaned the sanctuary, 1 M 1:21seq., 39; 2 M 6:5. But the Psalm can also apply to the sack of the Temple by the army of Nebuchadnezzar, 2 K 25:9; Is 64:10, from which epoch the voice of prophecy ceased, v. 9, see Ps 77:8; Lm 2:9; Ezk 7:26 and 1 M 4:46; 9:27; 14:41.

b. 'over the entrance', lit. 'as at the entrance, on high' versions; 'as one who grants entry' Hebr. • 'emblems unfamiliar' Gk; 'emblems, he is known' Hebr.—probably gloss of v. 4[b].

c. 'hacking at the panels' Gk; 'and now its carvings' Hebr.

d. 'let us crush them', ninem, see Syr.; Hebr. ninam 'their offspring'.

e. Jeremiah had spoken of 70 years of exile, Jr 25:11; 29:10, a figure symbolising long duration.

f. 'keep . . . hidden' keluyah conj.; Hebr. kalleh 'destroy'.

g. Allusion to the crossing of the Sea of Reeds, Ex 14:30, and the defeat of the Egyptians, Ezk 29:3; 32:4.

h. 'wild animals', lit. 'to people, to animals'.

i. Allusion to the miracles of the Exodus, Ex 17:1–7; Nb 20:2–13, and to the crossing of the Jordan, Jos 3, as manifestations of the power of the Creator. This recapitulation of divine favours in the past, vv. 12–17, preludes the closing entreaty, vv. 18–23.

j. Hosea compared Israel to a dove, Ho 7:11; 11:11, cf. Sg 5:2. Gk and Syr. 'the soul that gives you thanks'.

75 a. An antiphon, v. 1, introduces a divine pronouncement addressed to the wicked, and foretelling judgement on them vv. 2–5. Vv. 6–8 describe the universal judgement at which the psalmist rejoices, vv. 9–10.

b. 'as we call upon your name, as we recount', versions, 'your name is near; it is recounted', Hebr.

46:2;60:2;93: 1seq.;96:10 1 S 2:8 The earth quakes and all its inhabitants; 3
it is I who hold its pillars firm. Pause

1 S 2:3 'I said to the boastful, "Do not boast!" 4
Zc 2:1–4 to the wicked, "Do not flaunt your strength! [c]
Do not flaunt your strength so proudly, 5
94:4 Jb 15:25 do not talk with that arrogant stance.' "

Mt 24:23–28 No longer from east to west, 6
no longer in the mountainous desert, is God judging in uprightness, 7
1 S 2:7 Dn 2:21 bringing some down, raising others. [d]
60:3 Jb 21:20 Is 51:17h Yahweh is holding a cup 8 filled with a heady blend of wine;
he will pour it, they will drink it to the dregs,
all the wicked on earth will drink it.

But I shall speak out for ever, 9 shall make music for the God of Jacob.
I shall break down all the strength of the wicked, 10
92:10 and the strength of the upright will rise high.

Meditation on Israel's past [a]

For the choirmaster . . . Jeduthun Of Asaph Psalm

1 I cry to God in distress,
I cry to God and he hears me.

2 In the day of my distress I sought the Lord; 50:15;88:1 Is 26:16
all night I tirelessly stretched out my hands,
my heart refused to be consoled.
3 I sigh as I think of God, Jon 2:8
my spirit faints away as I ponder on him. Pause

4 You kept me from closing my eyes,
I was too distraught to speak;
5 I thought of former times, =143:5
6 years long past ·I recalled; Dt 32:7
through the night I ponder [b] in my heart,
as I reflect, my spirit asks this question:

7 Is the Lord's rejection final? 74:1;89:46seq. Lm 3:21–23
Will he never show favour again?
8 Is his faithful love gone for ever?
Has his Word come to an end for all time?
9 Does God forget to show mercy? 74:9
In anger does he shut off his tenderness? Pause Is 49:14seq.; 63:15

10 And I said, 'This is what wounds me, the right hand of the Most High has lost its strength.' Ml 3:6 11 Remembering [c] Yahweh's great deeds, remembering your wonders in the past, 12 I reflect on all that you did,
I ponder all your great deeds. 143:5

13 God, your ways are holy! 18:30–31; 89:6
What god is as great as our God? Ex 15:1–18 14 You are the God who does marvellous deeds, Dt 32:4
brought nations to acknowledge your power, 15 with your own arm redeeming your people, Ne 1:10
the children of Jacob and Joseph. Pause Gn 46:26–27

16 When the waters saw you, God, Jb 8:12f when the waters saw you they writhed in anguish, Na 1:4
the very depths shook with fear. Hab 3:10–11

c. lit. 'your horn', cf. 18:2d.

d. The 'mountainous desert' must be the plateau of Edom. The divine judgement is exercised no longer against Moab, Edom or Philistia, but in all places and against all the wicked, see Zc 2:1. • The image of the cup, v. 8, see 11:6d, comes from Jeremiah, Jr 25:15; 48:26; 49:12; 51:7; see also Is 51:17h; Ezk 23:31; Rv 14:10.

76 a. Eschatological hymn. Like 46 and 48:6, it apparently refers to the defeat of Sennacherib in 701 at the gates of Jerusalem, 2 K 19:35, which defeat is now symbolic of the rescue which the 'humble' may hope for, v. 10. The Greek title includes 'Concerning the Assyrian'.

b. Abridged name of Jerusalem, see Gn 14:18; Jdt 4:4, the city of peace (shalom).

c. Arrows.

d. Others translate 'the weapons of war'.

e. lit. 'you will gird them on', an image taken from Jeremiah, cf. Ps 109:19, symbolising close union. The divine anger seems to be personified here, cf. 58:9, whereas impotent human anger only witnesses to the power and justice of God.

f. As his belt, v. 10; cf. Is 49:18.

77 a. In the hard times after the return from exile the psalmist recalls Yahweh's past favours to Israel, the miracles attending the Exodus from Egypt, as an earnest of Yahweh's future interventions on behalf of his people.

b. 'I ponder' Gk, Syr.; '(I remember) my music' Hebr. Division of vv. 5–6 as in versions.

c. 'Remembering' qere, versions; 'I will make known' ketib.

V 77

105;106;136;144 The lessons of Israelite history [a]

Ne 9:9–37
Ws 16–19 Psalm Of Asaph
Is 63:7seq.
Dt 32:1 My people, listen to my teaching, 1
pay attention to what I say.
49:4 I will speak to you in poetry, [b] 2
↗Mt 13:35 unfold the mysteries of the past.

44:1;145:4 What we have heard and know, 3
Ex 10:2;13:14
Dt 4:9+
Jb 8:8;15:18 what our ancestors have told us we shall not conceal from their descendants, 4
but will tell to a generation still to come:

the praises of Yahweh, his power,
the wonderful deeds he has done.
He instituted a witness in Jacob, 5
147:19 he established a law in Israel,
Dt 33:4

Dt 4:9;6:7 he commanded our ancestors
to hand it down to their descendants, 22:30+ that a generation still to come might know it, 6
children yet to be born.

They should be sure to tell their own children, and should put their trust in God, 7
never forgetting God's great deeds, always keeping his commands,

and not, like their ancestors, 8
Dt 31:27; be a stubborn and rebellious generation, 32:5,20 a generation weak of purpose,
their spirit fickle towards God.

Ho 7:13–16 The archer sons of Ephraim 9
turned tail when the time came for fighting; [c]
they failed to keep God's covenant, 10
they refused to follow his Law;

they had forgotten his great deeds, 11
the marvels he had shown them; [d]
he did marvels in the sight of their ancestors 12
in Egypt, in the plains of Tanis.

He split the sea and brought them through,
made the waters stand up like a dam;
he led them with a cloud by day,
and all the night with the light of a fire;

he split rocks in the desert,
let them drink as though from the limitless depths;
he brought forth streams from a rock,
made waters flow down in torrents.

But they only sinned against him more than ever,
defying the Most High in barren country;
they deliberately challenged God
by demanding food to their hearts' content.

They insulted God by saying,
'Can God make a banquet in the desert?
True, when he struck the rock,
waters gushed out and flowed in torrents;
but what of bread? Can he give that,
can he provide meat for his people?'

When he heard them Yahweh vented his anger,
fire blazed against Jacob,
his anger mounted against Israel,
because they had no faith in God,
no trust in his power to save.

Even so he gave orders to the skies above,
he opened the sluice-gates of heaven;
he rained down manna to feed them,
he gave them the wheat of heaven;
mere mortals ate the bread of the Mighty,[e]
he sent them as much food as they could want.

He roused an east wind in the heavens,
despatched a south wind by his strength;
he rained down meat on them like dust,
birds thick as sand on the seashore,
tumbling into the middle of his camp,
all around his dwelling-place.

They ate as much food as they wanted,
he satisfied all their cravings;
but their cravings were still upon them,
the food was still in their mouths,
when the wrath of God attacked them,
slaughtering their strongest men,
laying low the flower of Israel.

Despite all this, they went on sinning,[f]
they put no faith in his marvels.

d. The miracle of the Sea of Reeds is presented in a cosmic perspective, see Jb 7:12f. V. 18 evokes the theophany of Sinai, Ex 19:16g.

78 a. A didactic meditation, in the manner of Dt, on the history of Israel, the sins of the nation and their punishment. The Psalm stresses the responsibility of Ephraim, the ancestor of the Samaritans, the choice of Judah and the call of David.

b. lit 'mashal': rhythmical maxim expressed in poetic parallelism.

c. The psalmist blames the sins of the nation on Ephraim, thus anticipating the future history of the Northern Kingdom (or possibly alluding to the Samaritan schism, see Zc 11:14); see also v. 67.

d. The miracles of the Exodus, vv. 12–31.

e. 'The Mighty' are the angels, cf. Ps 103:20.

f. A general review, vv. 32–39, of the inconstancy of Israel and the patience of God.

He made their days vanish in mist,
their years in sudden ruin. 33

Dt 32:15,18 Nb 21:7 Is 26:16 Ho 5:15
Whenever he slaughtered them, they began to seek him, 34
they turned back and looked eagerly for him, [g] recalling that God was their rock, 35
God the Most High, their redeemer.

Ho 6:4
They tried to hoodwink him with their mouths, 36
their tongues were deceitful towards him;
Is 29:13 Ho 8:1
their hearts were not loyal to him, 37
they were not faithful to his covenant.

65:3;85:3 Ex 32:14 Nb 14:20 Is 48:9 Ezk 20:22 Ho 11:8–9
But in his compassion he forgave their guilt 38
instead of killing them,
time and again repressing his anger
instead of rousing his full wrath, remembering they were creatures of flesh, 39
a breath of wind that passes, never to return.

Dt 9:22
How often they defied him in the desert! 40
How often they grieved him in the wastelands!
Repeatedly they challenged God, 41
Is 6:3g
provoking the Holy One of Israel, not remembering his hand, 42
the time when he saved them from the oppressor,

Ex 7:14–11:10; 12:29–36 Ws 16–18
he who did his signs in Egypt, [h] 43
his miracles in the Plains of Tanis, turning their rivers to blood, 44
their streams so that they had nothing to drink.

He sent horseflies to eat them up, 45
and frogs to devastate them, consigning their crops to the caterpillar, 46
the fruit of their hard work to the locust;

he killed their vines with hail, 47
their sycamore trees with frost, delivering up their cattle to hail, 48
and their flocks to thunderbolts.

He loosed against them the full heat of his anger, 49
fury, rage and destruction,
a detachment of destroying angels;
he gave free course to his anger. 50

He did not exempt their own selves from death, delivering up their lives to the plague.
=105:36
He struck all the first-born in Egypt, 51
the flower of the youth in the tents of Ham.

77:20
He brought out his people like sheep, [i] 52
guiding them like a flock in the desert,
Ex 14:26–28
leading them safe and unafraid, 53
while the sea engulfed their enemies.

He brought them to his holy land, 54
the hill-country won by his right hand;
44:2 Jos 24:8–13
he dispossessed nations before them, 55

measured out a heritage for each of them,
and settled the tribes of Israel in their tents.

56 But still they challenged the Most High God and defied him, refusing to keep his decrees;[j] 57 as perverse and treacherous as their ancestors, they gave way like a faulty bow, Ho 7:16 58 provoking him with their high places, rousing his jealousy with their idols. Dt 32:16,21

59 God listened and vented his wrath,
he totally rejected Israel;
60 he forsook his dwelling in Shiloh, Jos 18:1 1 S 1:3d
the tent where he used to dwell on the earth. Jr 7:12;26:6

61 He abandoned his power to captivity, his splendour[k] to the enemy's clutches; 1 S 4:11,22
62 he gave up his people to the sword, Jr 12:7
he vented his wrath on his own heritage.

63 Fire devoured their young men,
their young girls had no wedding-song;
64 their priests fell by the sword Dt 32:22–25
Jr 7:34
and their widows sang no dirge. Jb 27:15

65 The Lord arose as though he had been asleep,
like a strong man fighting-mad with wine, 66 he struck his enemies on the rump,[l] 1 S 5:6seq.
and put them to everlasting shame.

67 Rejecting the tents of Joseph,[m] passing over the tribe of Ephraim, 68 he chose the tribe of Judah,
his well-loved mountain of Zion;
69 he built his sanctuary like high hills,[n] 48:2;87:2
2 S 5:9f
like the earth set it firm for ever.

70 He chose David to be his servant, 89:20
1 S 13:14;
took him from the sheepfold, 16:11–13
71 took him from tending ewes 2 S 7:8
Ezk 34:23;
to pasture his servant Jacob, 37:24
and Israel his heritage.
72 He pastured them with unblemished heart, 77:20
with a sensitive hand he led them.

b. 'pilgrimage' lit. 'ascents' Gk; 'pathways' Hebr. The Psalms entitled 'Songs of Ascent', 120seq., were sung by pilgrims on their way.

c. In seven MSS and in the versions, 'the Valley of Tears' (the two words are identical when spoken), see Jg 2:5. The Balsam (or 'the weeper tree') must here be the 'nettle-tree,' see 2 S 5:23–24. The 'Valley of the Nettle Tree', to the north of the Hinnom valley, was the last stage of the pilgrimage, the junction of roads coming from north, west and south, cf. 2 S 5:17–25.

d. Text uncertain. Gk 'the lawgiver will bestow blessings'. A possible correction 'the leader will call out the blessings'. We follow the Hebr. text. • The allusion to the first rains of autumn make it feasible to connect the Psalm with the feast of Shelters, Ex 23:14d.

e. 'from height to height'; others translate 'from strength to strength' or (Targ.) 'from battlement to battlement'. • 'God . . . to them' 'alehem conj.; Hebr. 'elohim 'God of gods'.

f. Here the 'anointed' ('messiah') is probably the high priest, chief authority in the post-exilic community.

g. 'at my own devices', lit. 'in my liberty,' beheruti conj.; Hebr. baharti 'I have chosen'.

85 a. The Psalm promises the returned exiles the peace of the messianic age foretold by Isaiah and Zechariah.

b. The glory of Yahweh, Ex 24:16f, which had deserted the Temple and the holy city, is to return to the restored Temple, Ezk 43:2; Hg 2:9.

c. Personified attributes of God; these will inaugurate the kingdom of God on earth and in human hearts.

Yahweh will himself give prosperity, 12
=67:6+ and our soil will yield its harvest.
Zc 8:12
Is 58:8 Justice will walk before him, 13
treading out a path. [d]

Prayer in time of trial [a]

Prayer Of David

Listen to me, Yahweh, answer me, 1
for I am poor and needy.
Guard me, for I am faithful, 2
save your servant who relies on you.

You are my God, [b] ·take pity on me, Lord, 3
for to you I cry all the day.
Fill your servant's heart with joy, Lord, 4 =25:1 for to you I raise up my heart.

Lord, you are kind and forgiving, 5
Ex 34:6 rich in faithful love for all who call upon you.
5:1–2 Yahweh, hear my prayer, 6
listen to the sound of my pleading.

In my day of distress I call upon you, 7
because you answer me, Lord;
35:10;89:8 among the gods there is none to compare with you, 8
Ex 15:11
Jr 10:6 no great deeds to compare with yours.

22:27 All nations [c] will come and adore you, Lord, 9
↗Rv 15:9 and give glory to your name.
For you are great and do marvellous deeds, 10
you, God, and none other.

=27:11 Teach me, Yahweh, your ways, 11
26:3 that I may not stray from your loyalty;
let my heart's one aim be to fear your name.

I thank you with all my heart, Lord my God, 12
I will glorify your name for ever,
for your faithful love for me is so great 13
88:6 that you have rescued me from the depths of Sheol.

=54:3 Arrogant men, God, are rising up against me, 14
a brutal gang is after my life,
in their scheme of things you have no place.

=Ex 34:6c But you, Lord, God of tenderness and mercy, 15
103:8;145:8 slow to anger, rich in faithful love and loyalty, =25:16 turn to me and pity me. 16

Give to your servant your strength, 116:16 to the child of your servant your saving help, give me a sign of your kindness. 17

My enemies will see to their shame 18
that you, Yahweh, help and console me.

Zion, mother of nations [a]

Of the sons of Korah Psalm Song

With its foundations on the holy mountains, Yahweh loves his city,
he prefers the gates of Zion
to any dwelling-place in Jacob.

He speaks [b] of glory for you,
city of God, Pause

'I number Rahab and Babylon
among those that acknowledge me;
look at Tyre, Philistia, Ethiopia,
so and so was born there.'

But of Zion it will be said,
'Every one was born there,' [c]
her guarantee is the Most High.

Yahweh in his register of peoples [d]
will note against each, 'Born there', Pause
princes no less than native-born;

Prayer in great distress [a]

Song Psalm Of the sons of Korah In sickness In suffering Poem For Heman the native-born

Yahweh, God of my salvation,
when I cry out to you in the night,
may my prayer reach your presence,
hear my cry for help.

For I am filled with misery,
my life is on the brink of Sheol;
already numbered among those who sink into oblivion,
I am as one bereft of strength,

Jb 10:15;17:1
Nb 16:33f
143:7

d. God's saving justice blazes the trail; it is the condition of peace and happiness.

86 a. A hellenistic composition without much literary unity, reflecting the state of mind of pious Jews, precursors of the Hasidaeans at the time of the Maccabees.

b. 'who relies on you. You are my God' conj.; 'You are my God who trusts in you' Hebr.

c. Hebr. here adds 'you have made', words misplaced from the preceding line.

87 a. Holy Zion, the city of God, 2 S 5:9f, is to become the sacred metropolis and mother of all peoples. All the non-Jewish neighbours of Israel: Egypt ('Rahab'), Ethiopia, Syro-Palestine, Mesopotamia, are summoned to acknowledge the true God and to provide him with converts. Such is the will of Yahweh as expressed in the pronouncement of vv. 4–5. The Psalm draws on Isaiah and Zechariah. Isaiah had already spoken of Zion as mother, fruitful spouse of Yahweh and, as such, a foreshadowing of the Church.

b. 'He speaks' conj., 'it is said', Hebr.

c. The non-Jews, wherever born, are adopted by Zion, which becomes their true country.

d. Reference to the roll of citizenship, Is 4:3; Ezk 13:9, not to the apocalyptic book of dooms, Ps 69:28. The non-Jews are listed as citizens of Zion.

e. 'princes' MSS and versions; 'singers' MT (confusion of two letters almost identical). • 'all make their home' Gk; 'all my sources (are in you)' Hebr., with wrong vowels. • God writes down foreign princes as children of Zion.

88 a. With this anguished prayer, compare the complaints of Job.

left alone [b] among the dead, 5
like the slaughtered lying in the grave, whom you remember no more,
cut off as they are from your protection.

You have plunged me to the bottom of the grave, 6
in the darkness, in the depths;
weighted down by your anger, 7
18:4e;42:7 kept low by your waves. Pause

38:11+ You have deprived me of my friends, 8
made me repulsive to them, 142:7 Lm 3:7 imprisoned, with no escape;
my eyes are worn out with suffering. 9
I call to you, Yahweh, all day,
I stretch out my hands to you.

Do you work wonders for the dead, 10
6:5c Is 38:18+ can shadows rise up to praise you? Pause
Do they speak in the grave of your faithful love, 11
of your constancy in the place of perdition? [c] Are your wonders known in the darkness, 12
your saving justice in the land of oblivion?

But, for my part, I cry to you, Yahweh, 13
every morning my prayer comes before you;
why, Yahweh, do you rebuff me, 14
turn your face away from me?

Wretched and close to death since childhood, 15
I have borne your terrors—I am finished! [d]
Your anger has overwhelmed me, 16
your terrors annihilated me. [e]

They flood around me all day long, 17
close in on me all at once.
You have deprived me of friends and companions, 18
Jb 17:13–14 and all that I know is the dark.

Hymn and prayer to God the faithful [a]

88 inscr. Poem For Ethan the native-born

I shall sing the faithful love of Yahweh for ever, 1
from age to age my lips shall declare your constancy, for you have said: [b] love is built to last for ever, 2
you have fixed your constancy firm in the heavens.

2 S 7:1a, 8–16 'I have made a covenant with my Chosen One, 3 sworn an oath to my servant David:
I have made your dynasty firm for ever, 4
built your throne stable age after age.' Pause

The heavens praise your wonders, Yahweh, 5
Jb 5:1a your constancy in the gathering of your faithful.
Who in the skies can compare with Yahweh? 6
29:1;82:1 Jb 1:6f Who among the sons of god can rival him?

7 God, awesome in the assembly of holy ones,[c]
great[d] and dreaded among all who surround him,
8 Yahweh, God Sabaoth, who is like you? 86:8+
Mighty Yahweh, your constancy is all round you!

9 You control the pride of the ocean, Jb 7:12f when its waves ride high you calm them. 65:7+ 10 You split Rahab[e] in two like a corpse, scattered your enemies with your mighty arm.

11 Yours are the heavens and yours the earth, 24:1–2
the world and all it holds, you founded them; 1 Ch 29:11 12 you created the north and the south,
Tabor and Hermon hail your name with joy.

13 Yours is a strong arm,
mighty your hand, your right hand raised high;
14 Saving Justice and Fair Judgement the foundations of your throne, 85:10;97:2
Faithful Love and Constancy march before you. Ex 34:6–7

15 How blessed the nation that learns to acclaim you! 47:1a;61:7c
They will live, Yahweh, in the light of your presence.
16 In your name they rejoice all day long,
by your saving justice they are raised up.

17 You are the flower of their strength,
by your favour our strength is triumphant;
18 for to Yahweh belongs our shield,
to the Holy One of Israel our king. 47:9
Is 6:3g

19 Once you spoke in a vision, 132:11–12 to your faithful[f] you said, 2 S 7:1a, 8–16+
'I have given strength to a warrior,
I have raised up a man chosen from my people.

20 'I have found David my servant, 78:70+
and anointed him with my holy oil.
21 My hand will always be with him, Is 42:1
my arm will make him strong.

22 'No enemy will be able to outwit him,
no wicked man overcome him;
23 I shall crush his enemies before him,
strike his opponents dead.

24 'My constancy and faithful love will be with him,
in my name his strength will be triumphant.
25 I shall establish his power over the sea,
his dominion over the rivers.

b. Or 'freed' (Gk); in the tomb the servant is free of his master, cf. Jb 3:19. It is the same with the poor in distress: there is no more link with God.

c. In Hebr., 'Abaddon', Jb 26:6; 28:22; Pr 15:11; Rv 9:11.

d. 'I am finished' 'aphugah conj., cf. 77:3; Hebr. 'aphunah unintelligible.

e. 'have annihilated me' tzimmetuni conj.; Hebr. tzimmetutuni unintelligible. Corrections were probably made in order to soften a text shocking by its pessimism.

89 a. The prelude, vv. 1–2, followed by the rehearsal of the Davidic covenant, vv. 3–4, and a hymn to the Creator, vv. 5–18, introduces a messianic oracle, vv. 19–37, and, in contrast, an account of the humiliations of the nation, vv. 38–45, concluded by a prayer, vv. 46–51. • The pairing of 'love' with 'faithfulness' is a central feature of this Psalm.

b. 'you have said' Gk; 'I have said' Hebr.

c. lit. 'sons of the gods', i.e. the angels; so also the 'holy ones' in v. 7.

d. 'great' Gk; Hebr. joins 'great' with 'assembly'.

e. A mythical monster personifying the watery chaos, see Jb 7:12f; it also sometimes means Egypt, Ps 87:4.

f. Samuel and Nathan.

Yet you yourself—you have spurned and rejected, 38
and have vented your wrath on your anointed, [h]
you have repudiated the covenant with your servant, 39 dishonoured his crown in the dust.

80:12–13 You have pierced all his defences, 40
and laid his strongholds in ruins, everyone passing by plunders him, 41
he has become the butt of his neighbours.

You have raised high the right hand of his opponents, 42
have made all his enemies happy;
you have snapped off his sword on a rock, [i] 43
and failed to support him in battle.

You have stripped him of his splendid sceptre, [j] 44
and toppled his throne to the ground.
You have aged him before his time, 45
enveloped him in shame. Pause

=79:5 How long, Yahweh, will you remain hidden? For ever? 46
Is your anger to go on smouldering like a fire?
39:4 Remember me; how long have I left? 47
For what pointless end did you create all the children of Adam?
90:3seq. Who can live and never see death? 48
Who can save himself from the clutches of Sheol? Pause

Lord, what of those pledges of your faithful love? 49
You made an oath to David by your constancy.
Do not forget the insults to your servant; 50

I take to heart the taunts of the nations, 51 which your enemies have levelled, Yahweh,
have levelled at the footsteps of your anointed!

52 Blessed be Yahweh for ever. =106:48
Amen, Amen. [k]

On human frailty [a]

Prayer Of Moses, man of God [b]

1 Lord, you have been our refuge [c]
from age to age.

2 Before the mountains were born, Gn 1:1 Pr 8:25
before the earth and the world came to birth, from eternity to eternity you are God. 93:2 Hab 1:12

3 You bring human beings to the dust, Gn 3:19+
by saying, 'Return, children of Adam.'
4 A thousand years are to you ↗2 P 3:8
like a yesterday which has passed,
like a watch of the night.

5 You flood them with sleep 37:2;103:15–16 Jb 14:1–2;20:8 Is 40:7+
—in the morning they will be like growing grass:
6 in the morning it is blossoming and growing,
by evening it is withered and dry.

7 For we have been destroyed by your wrath,
dismayed by your anger.
8 You have taken note of our guilty deeds,
our secrets in the full light of your presence.

9 All our days pass under your wrath,
our lives are over like a sigh. [d]
10 The span of our life is seventy years— Gn 6:3 Pr 10:27 Si 18:8–9 eighty for those who are strong—but their whole extent is anxiety and trouble, Qo 12:1–7
they are over in a moment and we are gone.

11 Who feels the power of your anger,
or who that fears you, your wrath?

12 Teach us to count up the days that are ours,
and we shall come to the heart of wisdom. [e]
13 Come back, Yahweh! How long must we wait?
Take pity on your servants. [f]

g. 'withdraw' 13 MSS, Syr.; 'break' Hebr.
h. The term here denotes the whole Davidic dynasty.
i. 'you have snapped off . . . on a rock' sha'aphta batz-tzur conj.; Hebr. 'aph tashib tzur 'you have even made his blade retire'.
j. 'his splendid sceptre' matteh hodo conj.; Hebr. mit-teharo 'his lustre(?)'.
k. Doxology terminating the third book of the Psalter.

90 a. Prayer of a sage well versed in the Scriptures (allusions to Gn, Jb, Dt), who is meditating on human weakness and the shortness of human life, made shorter still by sin.
b. This Psalm is unique in being attributed to Moses, perhaps because of its contacts with Gn and Dt 32.
c. 'refuge' Gk; 'dwelling-place' Hebr.
d. The Syr. paraphrases 'like a spider', which is added by Gk.
e. Awareness of human weakness leads to wisdom, which is fear of God, Pr 1:7a.
f. In vv. 14–17, the meditation and prayer, concerned initially with the fate of the individual, are extended to the whole of Israel.

17:15d Each morning fill us with your faithful love, 14
we shall sing and be happy all our days;
Nb 14:34 let our joy be as long as the time that you afflicted us, 15
the years when we experienced disaster.

The song of the upright [a]

Psalm Song For the Sabbath

1 It is good to give thanks to Yahweh, 33:1–3 to make music for your name, Most High, 2 to proclaim your faithful love at daybreak,
and your constancy all through the night,
3 on the lyre, the ten-stringed lyre,
to the murmur of the harp.

4 You have brought me joy, Yahweh, by your deeds,
at the work of your hands I cry out,
5 'How great are your works, Yahweh, 8;111:2; 139:6,17–18 ↗Rv 15:3 immensely deep your thoughts!'
6 Stupid people cannot realise this, Ws 13:1
fools do not grasp it.

7 The wicked may sprout like weeds, 37:35–36
and every evil-doer flourish,
but only to be eternally destroyed;
8 whereas you are supreme for ever, Yahweh.

9 Look [b] how your enemies perish, 68:1–2
how all evil-doers are scattered!
10 You give me the strength of the wild ox, 23:5;75:10 Dt 33:17
you anoint [c] me with fresh oil;
11 I caught sight of the ambush against me, [d]
overheard the plans of the wicked.

12 The upright will flourish like the palm tree, 1:3
will grow like a cedar of Lebanon.
13 Planted in the house of Yahweh, 52:9
they will flourish in the courts of our God.

14 In old age they will still bear fruit,
will remain fresh and green, 15 to proclaim Yahweh's integrity;
my rock, in whom no fault can be found. Dt 32:4

g. Hebr. adds 'our God' after 'Lord', and, in conclusion, 'over us, and make the work of our hands succeed'.

91 a. This Psalm elaborates the traditional teaching of the Sages, see Jb 5:19seq., on God's protection of the upright person. The concluding divine utterance, vv. 14–16, assumes that the upright will be tested, but that God will deliver them.

b. Four divine names in this one strophe: Elyon (the Most High'), Shaddai (Gn 17:1b; here translated 'the God of heaven' by Gk, elsewhere 'the Almighty'). Yahweh (Ex 3:13,14, 13g), Elohim (God).

c. 'saying' versions; 'I say' Hebr.

d. 'set on' medabber versions; Hebr. middeber 'from the plague'.

e. The versions translate: 'from the noonday devil'.

f. 'you who say' 'amarta conj.; Hebr. 'atta 'you'. • 'refuge' Gk; 'dwelling-place' Hebr.

g. Translation uncertain; Gk and Syr. 'asp'.

92 a. Didactic hymn which develops the traditional doctrine of the Sages: happiness of the just and ruin of the impious, see Ps 37; 49.

b. At the beginning of the v. Hebr. adds: 'For look how your enemies perish', a doublet.

c. 'you anoint' Syr., Targ: 'I anoint' Hebr.

d. 'the ambush against me' beshoreray versions; Hebr. (beshuray) is faulty, and has been glossed 'my adversaries'.

the peaks of the mountains are his;
5 the sea belongs to him, for he made it, and the dry land, moulded by his hands. 24:1–2

6 Come, let us bow low and do reverence;
kneel before Yahweh who made us!
7 For he is our God, =100:3
and we the people of his sheepfold, 23:1–4;80:1
the flock of his hand. Ezk 34:1a

93 a. The sovereignty of God, displayed by the laws he imposes on the physical world, and the Law which he gives. According to the title in Greek and Talmud, this Psalm was recited 'on the eve of the Sabbath, when the earth was inhabited' (cf. Gn 1:24–31).

b. The heavens are the palace of God, 8:2. The waters, vv. 3–4, probably represent powers hostile to God and his people, see 18:4c; Jb 7:12f; Is 8:7; 17:12; Dn 7:2; Rv 17:15.

c. 'more majestic than the breakers' conj.; 'majestic, the breakers' Hebr.

d. These 'decrees' are the revealed Law, as immutable as the physical universe, and the basis of Yahweh's absolute sovereignty over Israel, as over the creation.

e. i.e., the Temple, consecrated for ever, 1 K 8:13; 9:3, and consecrating all who approach the holy God there, Ex 19:6; Lv 10:3; 19:2; Ezk 42:14.

94 a. This Psalm expresses the traditional teaching of the sages, in the manner of Pr.

b. lit. 'breath', a favourite word of Qoheleth. Perhaps this was added to comment on the previous stanza.

c. In the broadest sense of revelation and moral teaching.

d. i.e. Sheol.

95 a. Processional hymn, perhaps recited at the feast of Shelters, cf. Dt 31:11.

b. Allusion, repeated in v. 8, to the rock that yielded water in the desert, Ex 17:1seq., or to the rock on which the Temple was built, 2 S 24:18.

PSALM 96

V 95

Yahweh, king and judge [a]

=98:1

Sing a new song to Yahweh! 1
Sing to Yahweh, all the earth!
Sing to Yahweh, bless his name! 2

98:2
105:1

Proclaim his salvation day after day,
declare his glory among the nations, 3
his marvels to every people!

=48:1; 145:3

Great is Yahweh, worthy of all praise, 4
more awesome than any of the gods.
97:7
Is 40:17–20; 1 Co 8:4–6
All the gods of the nations are idols! [b] 5

It was Yahweh who made the heavens;
in his presence are splendour and majesty, 6
in his sanctuary power and beauty.

=29:1–2

Give to Yahweh, families of nations, 7
give to Yahweh glory and power, give to Yahweh the glory due to his name! [c] 8

Bring an offering and enter his courts,
29:2
adore Yahweh in the splendour of his holiness. 9
Tremble before him, all the earth.

93:1+
=93:1

Say among the nations, 'Yahweh is king.' 10
The world is set firm, it cannot be moved.
He will judge the nations with justice.

Let the heavens rejoice and earth be glad! 11
=98:7
Let the sea thunder, and all it holds!
Is 55:12
Let the countryside exult, and all that is in it, 12
and all the trees of the forest cry out for joy,

=98:9

at Yahweh's approach, for he is coming, 13
coming to judge the earth;
Is 11:1–9,3d
he will judge the world with saving justice,
and the nations with constancy.

PSALM 97

V 96

The triumph of Yahweh [a]

1 Yahweh is king! Let earth rejoice, 93:1a
the many isles be glad!
2 Cloud, black cloud enfolds him, saving justice and judgement the foundations of his throne. 85:10c

3 Fire goes before him, =18:8;50:3
sets ablaze his enemies all around;
4 his lightning-flashes light up the world, =77:18
the earth sees it and quakes.

5 The mountains melt like wax, [b] 68:2
before the Lord of all the earth.
6 The heavens proclaim his saving justice, =50:6
all nations see his glory.

7 Shame on all who serve images, who pride themselves on their idols; 96:5
bow down to him, all you gods!

8 Zion hears and is glad, =48:11
the daughters of Judah [c] exult, because of your judgements, Yahweh.

9 For you are Yahweh, =83:18
Most High over all the earth,
far transcending all gods.

10 Yahweh loves those who hate [d] evil, Pr 8:13
he keeps safe his faithful,
rescues them from the clutches of the wicked.

11 Light dawns [e] for the upright, 4:6;36:9;112:4
and joy for honest hearts.
12 Rejoice in Yahweh, you who are upright, praise his unforgettable holiness. =30:4

PSALM 98

V 97

The judge of the world [a]

Psalm

1 Sing a new song to Yahweh, =96:1
for he has performed wonders,

c. 'meribah' means 'dispute', 'massah' means 'temptation'.

d. 'that generation' versions; 'a generation' Hebr. • 'always' 'ad one MS and Gk; Hebr. 'am 'a people of'. The Gk has preserved the original readings, corrected in the Hebr. to soften the accusations against the Israel of the Exodus, an era which later tradition transformed into a golden age.

e. The Promised Land, and the Temple where God dwells.

96 a. A hymn, possibly combining two poems, in honour of the sovereignty of God and of his coming as judge of the world, composed of material from Psalms and from Is. The order is different in the version of 1 Ch 16:23–33.

b. Greek here translates 'the demons'. This theme appears frequently in the second part of Is (40:18seq.), cf. 1 Co 8:4.

c. The poet adapts 29:1–2 and stresses the universalist aspect, cf. 47:9; 14:17.

97 a. Eschatological hymn with numerous reminiscences of other Psalms.

b. Hebr. adds 'before Yahweh'.

c. i.e. the other towns of Judah.

d. lit. 'loves those who hate' conj.; 'those who love (Yahweh) hate' Hebr.

e. 'dawns' versions; 'is sown' Hebr.

98 a. Eschatological hymn, inspired by the closing chapters of Is, and very similar to Ps 96.

his saving power is in his right hand
Is 52:10; 59:16;63:5 and his holy arm.

96:2 Yahweh has made known his saving power, 2 revealed his saving justice for the nations to see, mindful of his faithful love and his constancy 3
to the House of Israel.

The whole wide world has seen the saving power of our God.
96:1 Acclaim Yahweh, all the earth, 4
Is 52:9 burst into shouts of joy! [b]

Play to Yahweh on the harp, [c] 5
to the sound of instruments;
47:5 to the sound of trumpet and horn, [d] 6
Ex 19:16 acclaim the presence of the King.

=96:11 Let the sea thunder, and all that it holds, 7
the world and all who live in it.
Let the rivers clap their hands, 8
Is 55:12 and the mountains shout for joy together,

96:13 at Yahweh's approach, for he is coming 9
to judge the earth;
he will judge the world with saving justice
67:4 and the nations with fairness.

PSALM 99 V 98

God, the upright and holy king [a]

Yahweh is king, the peoples tremble; 1 18:7,10;48:1; 80:1 he is enthroned on the winged creatures, the earth shivers;
Yahweh is great in Zion. 2

He is supreme over all nations;
let them praise your name, great and awesome; 3
Is 6:3g holy is he ·and mighty! [b] 4

72:1seq. You are a king who loves justice, you established honesty, justice and uprightness;
in Jacob it is you who are active.

Exalt Yahweh our God, 5
bow down at his footstool;
holy is he!

Moses and Aaron are among his priests, and Samuel, [c] 6 calling on his name; they called on Yahweh and he answered them.

Ex 19:18–19; 33:9 He spoke with them in the pillar of fire, 7
Nb 12:5 they obeyed his decrees, the Law he gave them.

Ex 32:11e Yahweh our God, you answered them, 8
Nb 20:12c you were a God of forgiveness to them, but punished them for their sins. [d]

Exalt Yahweh our God, 9

bow down at his holy mountain;
holy is Yahweh our God!

PSALM 100 V 99

Invitation to praise [a]

Psalm For thanksgiving

1 Acclaim Yahweh, all the earth,
2 serve Yahweh with gladness,
come into his presence with songs of joy!

3 Be sure that Yahweh is God,
he made us, we belong to him, =95:7
his people, the flock of his sheepfold. Dt 32:39
Is 43:10–13; 64:7

4 Come within his gates giving thanks, to his courts singing praise,
give thanks to him and bless his name!

5 For Yahweh is good, =106:1;107:1; 118:1seq.; 136:1seq.
his faithful love is everlasting, [b] ‖Jr 33:11
his constancy from age to age.

PSALM 101 V 100

The ideal ruler [a]

Of David Psalm

1 I will sing of faithful love and judgement;
to you, Yahweh, will I make music.
2 I will go forward in the path of the blameless; 26:11–12
when will you come to me? [b] 50:3

I will live in purity of heart, 1 K 9:4
in my house, Is 33:15
3 I will not set before my eyes
anything sordid. [c]

I hate those who act crookedly; Pr 11:20
this has no attraction for me.
4 Let the perverse of heart keep away from me;
the wicked I disregard.

b. Hebr. adds 'and sing'.
c. Hebr. repeats 'on the harp'.
d. These fanfares, reserved in Israel for the accession of a new king, 2 S 15:10; 1 K 1:34, accompany the enthronement of Yahweh, Ps 47:5, for whom they had rung out on Sinai, Ex 19:16.

99 a. Eschatological hymn, the two parts of which, vv. 1–4,6–8, end with a refrain, vv. 5 and 9, celebrating the holiness of the King of Israel.
b. 'mighty' we'az conj.; Hebr. we'oz 'the might'.
c. The great intercessors, cf. 106:23; Ex 32:11e; Nb 17:11–13.
d. Some alter the vowels to read 'forgiving them their sins', but Moses and Aaron were punished by being excluded from the Promised Land, see Nb 27:14; Dt 3:26.

100a. This hymn of praise concludes the series of Psalms of the kingship of Yahweh (Ps 93 seq.) It was perhaps recited on entering the sanctuary to offer communion sacrifices, see Lv 7:11–12.
b. An ancient refrain, Jr 33:11, often repeated in Ps as antiphon or prelude, and quoted in 2 Ch 5:13; 7:3;20:21; Ezr 3:11; Jdt 13:21 (Vulg.); 1 M 4:24; cf. Mi 7:20.

101a. Portrait of the upright ruler; reminiscent of several passages in Pr.
b. Perhaps an allusion to the expected coming of the Messiah, 'he who comes', Mt 11:3; Jn 4:25.
c. lit. 'matters of Belial', i.e. idolatrous practices.

Pr 17:20; 30:10 One who secretly slanders a comrade, 5
I reduce to silence;
Pr 21:4 haughty looks, proud heart,
these I cannot tolerate.

I look to the faithful of the land 6
to be my companions, 26:11;14:35; 20:6 only he who walks in the path of the blameless shall be my servant.

There is no room in my house 7
Pr 25:5 for anyone who practises deceit;
no liar will stand his ground
5:5 where I can see him.

Morning after morning [d] I reduce to silence 8
all the wicked in the land, banishing from the city of Yahweh
all evil-doers.

PSALM 102

V 101

Prayer in misfortune [a]

Prayer of someone afflicted, who in misfortune pours out sorrows before Yahweh

Yahweh, hear my prayer, 1
let my cry for help reach you.
=69:17;143:7 Do not turn away your face from me 2
when I am in trouble;
bend down and listen to me,
when I call, be quick to answer me!

For my days are vanishing like smoke, 3
my bones burning like an oven;
like grass struck by blight, my heart is withering, 4
I forget to eat my meals.
From the effort of voicing my groans 5
my bones stick out through my skin.

I am like a desert-owl in the wastes, 6
a screech-owl among ruins,
I keep vigil and moan [b] 7
like a lone bird on a roof.
All day long my enemies taunt me, 8
those who once praised me now use me as a curse. [c]

Ashes are the food that I eat, 9 42:3 my drink is mingled with tears, because of your fury and anger, 10
since you have raised me up only to cast me away;
my days are like a fading shadow, 11
90:6 I am withering up like grass.

Lm 5:19 But you, Yahweh, are enthroned for ever, 12
each generation in turn remembers you.
Rise up, take pity on Zion! 13

the time has come to have mercy on her,
the moment has come;
14 for your servants love her very stones, are moved to pity by her dust. Is 52:2

15 Then will the nations revere the name of Yahweh, Is 59:19; 66:18 and all the kings of the earth your glory;
16 when Yahweh builds Zion anew,
he will be seen in his glory; Is 60:1 17 he will turn to hear the prayer of the destitute,
and will not treat their prayer with scorn.

18 This shall be put on record for a future generation, 22:30–31+ and a people yet to be born shall praise God: [d] 19 Yahweh has leaned down from the heights of his sanctuary, has looked down from heaven to earth, 20 to listen to the sighing of the captive, 79:11
and set free those condemned to death, 21 to proclaim the name of Yahweh in Zion,
his praise in Jerusalem;
22 nations will gather together, Is 60:3seq.
and kingdoms to worship Yahweh.

23 In my journeying my strength has failed on the way; [e]
let me know ·the short time I have left. [f] 39:4;90:10 24 Do not take me away before half my days are done,
for your years run on from age to age.

25 Long ago you laid earth's foundations, ‖Is 51:6–8;65:17;66:22 Lm 5:19
the heavens are the work of your hands.
26 They pass away but you remain; ↗Heb 1:10–12;13:8 Rv 20:11;21:1
they all wear out like a garment,
like outworn clothes you change them;
27 but you never alter, and your years never end.

28 The children of those who serve you will dwell secure, 69:35–36 and their descendants live on in your presence.

God is love

Of David

1 Bless Yahweh, my soul,
from the depths of my being, his holy name;
2 bless Yahweh, my soul,
never forget all his acts of kindness.

3 He forgives all your offences, cures all your diseases, 41 Ex 15:26;34:7 Is 33:24 Jb 42:10

d. lit. 'each morning'. Morning is the hour of divine favours, 17:15d, as also of human and divine justice, 46:6; 73:14; 2 S 15:2; Jb 7:18; Is 33:2; Jr 21:12; Zp 3:5.

102a. The Psalm of repentance combines two poems of differing rhythm: a personal complaint, vv. 1–11 and 23–27, cf. Ps 69, and a prayer for the restoring of Zion, vv. 12–22 and 28.

b. 'I moan' wa'ehemayah conj.; Hebr. wa'ehyeh 'I am'.

c. 'Giving me as an example of the fate they want for their enemies', cf. Jr 29:22. • 'those who used to praise me' Gk MSS, Syr.; 'those who are angry with me' Hebr., with different arrangement of vowels.

d. 'God' conj.; 'Yah' Hebr.

e. 'has failed' conj.; 'He has made to fail' Hebr.

f. Line translated following Gk and Syr.; Hebr. has 'He has shortened my days. I say: my God' (incorrect vowels).

he redeems your life from the abyss, 4 crowns you with faithful love and tenderness;
he contents you with good things all your life, [a] 5
Is 40:31 renews your youth like an eagle's.

Yahweh acts with uprightness, 6
with justice to all who are oppressed;
he revealed to Moses his ways, 7
his great deeds to the children of Israel.

=86:15;145:8 Yahweh is tenderness and pity, 8
Ex 34:6-7,6c slow to anger and rich in faithful love; [b]
Jl 2:13
Jm 5:11 his indignation does not last for ever, 9
Is 57:16 nor his resentment remain for all time;
Jr 3:12
Jon 4:2 he does not treat us as our sins deserve, 10
nor repay us as befits our offences.

As the height of heaven above earth, 11
so strong is his faithful love for those who fear him.
As the distance of east from west, 12
so far from us does he put our faults.

As tenderly as a father treats his children, 13
145:9 so Yahweh treats those who fear him; Ml 3:17
he knows of what we are made, 14
90:3+ he remembers that we are dust.

90:5-6+ As for a human person—his days are like grass, 15
Is 40:7+ he blooms like the wild flowers;
as soon as the wind blows he is gone, 16
Jb 7:10 never to be seen there again.

Ex 20:6 But Yahweh's faithful love for those who fear him 17 is from eternity and for ever;
and his saving justice to their children's children;
as long as they keep his covenant, 18
and carefully obey his precepts.

22:28 Yahweh has fixed his throne in heaven, 19
his sovereign power rules over all.
Bless Yahweh, all his angels, 20
mighty warriors who fulfil his commands, attentive to the sound of his words.

Bless Yahweh, all his armies, 21 servants who fulfil his wishes.
Bless Yahweh, all his works, 22
in every place where he rules.

Bless Yahweh, my soul.

The glories of creation [a]

Gn 1
Ac 17:28 Bless Yahweh, my soul, 1
Yahweh, my God, how great you are!
Clothed in majesty and splendour,
Gn 1:3 wearing the light as a robe! 2

You stretch out the heavens like a tent, 19:1seq.;68:4b
3 build your palace on the waters above, Gn 1:6–7 making the clouds your chariot, Am 9:6
gliding on the wings of the wind, 4 appointing the winds your messengers, ↗Heb 1:7
flames of fire your servants.

5 You fixed the earth on its foundations,
for ever and ever it shall not be shaken;
6 you covered it with the deep like a garment,
the waters overtopping the mountains.

7 At your reproof the waters fled, Jb 7:12f
at the voice of your thunder they sped away, 8 flowing over mountains, down valleys, to the place you had fixed for them; Gn 1:9;9: 11–15
9 you made a limit they were not to cross, Jb 38:8–11
they were not to return and cover the earth.

10 In the ravines you opened up springs,
running down between the mountains, 11 supplying water for all the wild beasts;
the wild asses quench their thirst, 12 on their banks the birds of the air make their nests, Ezek 31:6,13 they sing among the leaves.

13 From your high halls you water the mountains,
satisfying the earth with the fruit of your works:
14 for cattle you make the grass grow, Gn 1:11–12,
29–30; 2:16
and for people the plants they need, Gn 2:15;3:17–19; 5:29;9:20
to bring forth food from the earth, Jg 9:13;19:5,8 15 and wine to cheer people's hearts, Si 31:27 oil to make their faces glow, Zc 10:7
food to make them sturdy of heart.

16 The trees of Yahweh drink their fill,
the cedars of Lebanon which he sowed;
17 there the birds build their nests,
on the highest branches [b] the stork makes its home;
18 for the wild goats there are the mountains,
in the crags the coneys [c] find refuge.

19 He made the moon to mark the seasons,
the sun knows when to set.
20 You bring on darkness, and night falls,
when all the forest beasts roam around;
21 young lions roar for their prey, Jb 38:39
asking God for their food.

22 The sun rises and away they steal, Jb 37:8
back to their lairs to lie down, 23 and man goes out to work,
to labour till evening falls.

103a. 'your life' 'odeki conj.; Hebr. 'edyek 'your coiffure'.
b. These are the attributes of Yahweh revealed to Moses, Ex 34:6c, which the whole Psalm develops, putting the accent on tenderness and pity, see vv. 17–18 and Ex 20:6, thus preparing for 1 Jn 4:8.

104a. This hymn follows the sequence of the creation narrative in Gn 1.
b. 'on the highest branches' bero'sham following Gk; Hebr. beroshim 'on the juniper trees'.
c. Little mammals like marmots and living in groups.

8:1
Pr 8:22–31,22e

How countless are your works, Yahweh, 24
all of them made so wisely!
The earth is full of your creatures.

Then there is the sea, with its vast expanses 25
teeming with countless creatures, creatures both great and small;
there ships pass to and fro, 26
Jb 3:8e;40:25j and Leviathan whom you made to sport with.

They all depend upon you, 27
to feed them when they need it.
You provide the food they gather, 28
your open hand gives them their fill.

Turn away your face and they panic; 29

Gn 3:19
Jb 34:14–15 and revert to dust.
Qo 12:7
•Gn 1:2;2:7 Send out your breath and life begins; [d] 30
Ac 2:2seq. you renew the face of the earth.

Gn 1:31 Glory to Yahweh for ever! 31
Hab 3:6 May Yahweh find joy in his creatures!
At his glance the earth trembles, 32
=144:5 at his touch the mountains pour forth smoke.

146:2 I shall sing to Yahweh all my life, 33
7:17i make music for my God as long as I live.
May my musings be pleasing to him, 34
for Yahweh gives me joy.
May sinners vanish from the earth, 35
and the wicked exist no more!

The wonderful history of Israel [a]

Alleluia!

18:49;96:3;145:5 Give thanks to Yahweh, call on his name, 1
‖1 Ch 16:8–22 proclaim his deeds to the peoples!
Is 12:4–5 Sing to him, make music for him, 2
recount all his wonders!
Glory in his holy name, 3
let the hearts that seek Yahweh rejoice!

Dt 4:29–31;27:8 Seek Yahweh and his strength, 4 tirelessly seek his presence!
Remember the marvels he has done, 5
his wonders, the judgements he has spoken.

Is 45:4;51:2 Stock of Abraham, his servant, 6
children of Jacob whom he chose!
He is Yahweh our God, 7
his judgements touch the whole world.

He remembers his covenant for ever, 8

the promise he laid down for a thousand generations, Gn 15:1a;26:3 9 which he concluded with Abraham,
the oath he swore to Isaac.

10 He established it as a statute for Jacob, Gn 28:13–14
an everlasting covenant with Israel,
11 saying, 'To you I give a land, Gn 15:18
Canaan, your allotted birthright.'

12 When they were insignificant in numbers,
a handful of strangers in the land, Dt 26:5 13 wandering from country to country,
from one kingdom and nation to another,

14 he allowed no one to oppress them;
for their sake he instructed kings, Gn 12:10–20; 20;26:1–11 15 'Do not touch my anointed ones, [b]
to my prophets you may do no harm.'

16 He called down famine on the land, Gn 41:54
he took away their food supply; Lv 26:26
17 he sent a man ahead of them, Gn 37:28;45:5
Joseph, sold as a slave.

18 So his feet were weighed down with shackles, Gn 39:20
his neck was put in irons.
19 In due time his prophecy was fulfilled, Gn 40;41:9–13
the word of Yahweh proved him true.

20 The king sent orders to release him, Gn 41:14
the ruler of nations set him free;
21 he put him in charge of his household, Gn 41:39–44
the ruler of all he possessed,

22 to instruct [c] his princes as he saw fit,
to teach his counsellors wisdom.
23 Then Israel migrated to Egypt, Gn 46:1–47:12
Jacob settled in the country of Ham.

24 He made his people increase in numbers, Ex 1:7
he gave them more strength than their enemies, 25 whose heart he turned to hate his own people, Ex 1:8seq.
to double-cross his servants.

26 He sent his servant Moses, Ex 3:10 and Aaron, the man of his choice. Ex 4:27 27 They worked there the wonders he commanded, marvels in the country of Ham.

28 Darkness he sent, and darkness fell, Ex 10:21–29
but that nation defied [d] his orders.
29 He turned their rivers to blood, Ex 7:14–25
and killed all the fish in them.

d. The spirit of God is the source of all being and life.
e. Hebr. places here the 'Alleluia' which Gk has at the beginning of 105.

105a. The Psalm successively recalls the story of the patriarchs, vv. 8–15, the story of Joseph, vv. 16–23, the mission of Moses, vv. 24–27, the plagues of Egypt, vv. 28–36, the Exodus and journey through the desert, vv. 37–43, and finally the entry into Canaan, the land promised to Abraham, vv. 44–45.

b. Israel is a kingdom of priests, Ex 19:6; Is 61:6; see also Ps 28:8; Hab 3:13.
c. 'to instruct' versions; 'to bind' Hebr.
d. 'defied' versions; 'did not defy' Hebr. By reading shameru instead of maru it is possible to translate 'disregarded'.

Ex 7:26–8:11 Their country was overrun with frogs, 30
even in the royal apartments;
Ex 8:12–15 at his word came flies, 31
and mosquitoes throughout the country.

Ex 9:13–35 He gave them hail as their rain, 32
flames of fire in their land;
he blasted their vine and their fig tree, 33
and shattered the trees of the country.

Ex 10:1–20 At his word came locusts, 34
hoppers beyond all counting;
they devoured every green thing in the land, 35
devoured all the produce of the soil.

=78:51 He struck all the first-born in their land, 36
Ex 12:29–36 the flower of all their manhood;
he led Israel out with silver and gold; 37
in their tribes there was none who stumbled.

Ex 12:33 Egypt was glad at their leaving, 38
for terror of Israel had seized them.
=78:14 He spread out a cloud to cover them, 39
Ex 13:21–22 and fire to light up the night.

=78:24 They asked [e] and he brought them quails, 40
Ex 16:1a, 2–36 food from heaven to their hearts' content;
=78:15 he opened a rock, the waters gushed out, 41
Ex 17:1–7a and flowed in dry ground as a river.

Faithful to his sacred promise, 42
given to his servant Abraham,
Ex 15 he led out his people with rejoicing, 43
his chosen ones with shouts of joy.

Dt 4:37–40; He gave them the territories of nations, 44
6:20–25; they reaped the fruit of other people's labours,
7:8–11 on condition that they kept his statutes, 45
and remained obedient to his laws. [f]

PSALM 106 V 105

National confession of guilt [a]

Alleluia! 1

=107:1;=100 Give thanks to Yahweh, for he is good,
:5b his faithful love is everlasting!
‖1 Ch 16:34 Who can recount all Yahweh's triumphs, 2
who can fully voice his praise?

Is 56:1–2 How blessed are those who keep to what is just, 3 whose conduct is always upright!
25:7 Remember me, Yahweh, 4
Ne 5:19;13:14, 22,31 in your love for your people.

Come near to me with your saving power,
let me share the happiness of your chosen ones, 5
let me share the joy of your people,
the pride of your heritage.

6 Like our ancestors, we have sinned, 78:11–17
we have acted wickedly, guiltily; Lv 26:40 7 our ancestors in Egypt never grasped 1 K 8:47
the meaning of your wonders. Dn 9:5

They did not bear in mind your countless acts of love, at the Sea of Reeds they defied the Most High; [b] 78:17 8 but for the sake of his name he saved them, Ezk 28:8–9, 14;36:20–22; 39:25 to make known his mighty power.

9 At his rebuke the Sea of Reeds dried up, 89:9+
he let them pass through the deep as though it were desert, Ex 14 10 so he saved them from their opponents' clutches, Is 63:11–14 rescued them from the clutches of their enemies. Na 1:4

11 The waters enveloped their enemies, not one of whom was left.
12 Then they believed what he had said, Ex 14:31
and sang his praises. Ex 15:1–21

13 But they soon forgot his achievements,
they did not even wait for his plans;
14 they were overwhelmed with greed in the wastelands, 78:18 in the solitary wastes they challenged God. Ex 15:24;16:3 Nb 11:4–6 Lm 3:26

15 He gave them all they asked for, but struck them with a deep wasting sickness; [c] Nb 11:33 16 in the camp they grew jealous of Moses, Nb 16 and of Aaron, Yahweh's holy one. Dt 11:6

17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, closed in on Abiram's faction;
18 fire flamed out against their faction, Is 26:11
the renegades were engulfed in flames.

19 At Horeb they made a calf, Ex 32 bowed low before cast metal; Dt 9:8–21; 25:29 20 they exchanged their glory [d] ‖Jr 2:11 for the image of a grass-eating bull. Rm 1:23

21 They forgot the God who was saving them, 78:42
who had done great deeds in Egypt, Dt 32:18 22 such wonders in the land of Ham, Jr 2:32
such awesome deeds at the Sea of Reeds.

23 He thought of putting an end to them, Dt 9:25 had not Moses, his chosen one, Ex 32:11e taken a stand in the breach and confronted him, Ezk 22:30
to turn his anger away from destroying them.

24 They counted a desirable land for nothing, Nb 13:25–14:37
they put no trust in his promise; Dt 1:25–26 25 they stayed in their tents and grumbled,
they would not listen to Yahweh's voice.

e. 'they asked' versions; 'he asked' Hebr.
f. Hebr. here adds 'Alleluia' omitted by the versions.

106a. vv. 1–5 and 48 provide a liturgical setting for a historical Psalm, inspired by Dt and Nb, forming a national confession, in which the repentant nation rehearses its collective sins committed in the past and confesses them to God. Cf. 1 K 8:33–34; Ne 9:5–37; Is 63:7–64:11; Ba 1:15–3:8.

b. 'the Most High' 'elyon conj.; Hebr. 'al yam 'at the sea'.

c. Word of uncertain meaning. Greek translates 'a glut'.

d. The original reading must have been 'his glory' (i.e. God's), but the text was changed to eliminate an expression which seemed disrespectful or nearly blasphemous.

Lv 26:33
Nb 14:29seq.
Ezk 20:15,23

So he lifted his hand against them, 26
to strike them down in the desert, to strike down their descendants among the nations, 27
to scatter them all over the world.

Nb 25
Dt 26:14c
Tb 4:17

They committed themselves to serve Baal-Peor, 28
and ate sacrifices made to lifeless gods.
They so provoked him by their actions 29
that a plague broke out among them.

Nb 25:7seq.
Si 45:23–24.

Then up stood Phinehas to intervene, 30
and the plague was checked;

Nb 25:11–13

for this he is the example of uprightness, 31
from age to age for ever.

95:8–9
Ex 17:1–7
Nb 20:2–13

At the waters of Meribah they so angered Yahweh, 32
that Moses suffered on their account, for they had embittered [e] his spirit, 33

Nb 20:12c

and he spoke without due thought.

Dt 7:1
Jg 1:21seq.
Ezr 9:1a, 2

They did not destroy the nations, 34
as Yahweh had told them to do,

Lv 18:3
Jg 2:1–5

but intermarried with them, 35
and adopted their ways.

Jg 2:11–13

They worshipped those nations' false gods, 36
till they found themselves entrapped,

Lv 18:21h
Dt 32:17
Ba 4:7
1 Co 10:20

and sacrificed their own sons 37
and their daughters to demons.

Innocent blood they shed, 38
the blood of their sons and daughters;
offering them to the idols of Canaan,

Nb 35:33

they polluted the country with blood.

They defiled themselves by such actions, 39
their behaviour was that of a harlot. [f] Yahweh's anger blazed out at his people, 40 his own heritage filled him with disgust.

Jg 2:14–23

He handed them over to the nations, 41
and their opponents became their masters;
their enemies tyrannised over them, 42
crushing them under their rule.

Is 63:7–9

Time and again he rescued them, 43
but they still defied him deliberately,
and sank ever deeper in their guilt;
even so he took pity on their distress, 44
as soon as he heard them cry out.

Lv 26:42
Jr 42:10

Bearing his covenant with them in mind, 45
he relented in his boundless and faithful love;

Ezr 9:9

he ensured that they received compassion, 46
in their treatment by all their captors.

1 Ch 16:35–36

Save us, Yahweh our God, 47
gather us from among the nations, that we may give thanks to your holy name,
and may glory in praising you.

48 Blessed be Yahweh, the God of Israel, =89:52
from all eternity and for ever!
Let all the people say, 'Amen'. [g]

PSALM 107 V 106

God, a refuge in every danger [a]

Alleluia!

1 Give thanks to Yahweh for he is good, =106:1
his faithful love lasts for ever. =100:5b

2 So let them say whom Yahweh redeemed, Is 62:12
whom he redeemed from the power of their enemies, 3 bringing them back from foreign lands, Is 43:5–6; 49:12 from east and west, north and south. [b] Zc 8:7–8

4 They were wandering in the desert, in the wastelands, Dt 8:15;32:10 could find no way to an inhabited city;
5 they were hungry and thirsty, Is 49:10
their life was ebbing away.

6 They cried out to Yahweh in their distress, Is 63:9 Ho 5:15
he rescued them from their plight,
7 he set them on the road, Dt 6:10 Is 35:8;40:3; 43:19
straight to an inhabited city. [c]

8 Let them thank Yahweh for his faithful love,
for his wonders for the children of Adam!
9 He has fed the hungry to their hearts' content, Is 49:10;55:1 ↗Lk 1:53 filled the starving with good things.

10 Sojourners in gloom and shadow dark as death, fettered in misery and chains, Jb 36:8seq. Is 42:7,22 11 for defying the orders of Yahweh, for scorning the plan of the Most High— 106:43 Lv 26:40–41 12 he subdued their spirit by hard labour;
if they fell there was no one to help.

13 They cried out to Yahweh in their distress,
he rescued them from their plight,
14 he brought them out from gloom and shadow dark as death, Is 42:7,16; 49:9;51:14; 52:2;61:1
and shattered their chains.

15 Let them thank Yahweh for his faithful love,
for his wonders for the children of Adam!
16 He broke open gates of bronze Is 45:2;61:1
and smashed iron bars.

17 Fools for their rebellious ways,

e. 'embittered' hemeru conj.; Hebr. himeru 'defied'.

f. Adultery, 73:27, and prostitution denote, in the prophets, unfaithfulness to God and idolatry, see Ho 1:2b.

g. Doxology marking the end of the fourth book of the Psalter and followed by a liturgical rubric. • Hebr. adds 'Alleluia', placed by Gk at the beginning of the next Psalm.

107a. Hymn of thanksgiving, inspired by the second part of Is, for the mercies of Providence: the Exodus, vv. 4–9, the return from exile, vv. 10–16, the help given to those who suffer, vv. 17–22, and to those on the high seas, vv. 23–32. The epilogue, vv. 33–43, elaborates the wisdom theme of the reversal of situations. There is a two-part refrain; vv. 6 and 8,13 and 15,19 and 21,28 and 31.

b. 'south' yamin conj., Hebr. yam 'sea'. This prelude calls on the returned exiles to praise God.

c. Probable reference to Canaan. The Exodus and the installation in the Promised Land had already, in Is 40seq., served as prototype of the return from exile.

wretched because of their sins, Jb 6:6–7 finding all food repugnant, 18

he rescued them from their plight,
147:15 Ws 16:12 Is 55:11 Mt 8:8 he sent out his word and cured them, 20
and rescued their life from the abyss. [d]

Let them thank Yahweh for his faithful love, 21
for his wonders for the children of Adam!
Let them offer thanksgiving sacrifices, 22
and recount with shouts of joy what he has done!

Voyagers on the sea in ships, 23
plying their trade on the great ocean, have seen the works of Yahweh, 24
his wonders in the deep.

Jon 1:4seq. By his word he raised a storm-wind, 25 lashing up towering waves.
Up to the sky then down to the depths! 26
Their stomachs were turned to water;
Is 29:9 they staggered and reeled like drunkards, 27
and all their skill went under.

Jon 1:14–15 They cried out to Yahweh in their distress, 28
he rescued them from their plight,
65:7+;89:9 s 43:2;54:11; 57:20 Mt 8:26par. he reduced the storm to a calm, 29 and all the waters subsided, and he brought them, overjoyed at the stillness, 30
to the port where they were bound.

Let them thank Yahweh for his faithful love, 31
for his wonders for the children of Adam!
Let them extol him in the assembly of the people, 32
and praise him in the council of elders.

Is 42:15 He has turned rivers into desert, 33
bubbling springs into arid ground,
Gn 13:10; 19:23–28 Dt 29:22 Si 39:23 fertile country into salt-flats, 34 because the people living there were evil.

But he has turned desert into stretches of water, 35
=114:8 Is 41:18+ arid ground into bubbling springs, and has given the hungry a home, 36
107:4,7 Ezk 36:35 where they have built themselves a city.

Is 65:21 Jr 31:5 There they sow fields and plant vines, 37
and reap a harvest of their produce.
Dt 7:13seq. Is 49:21 He blesses them and their numbers increase, 38 he keeps their cattle at full strength.

Their numbers had fallen, they had grown weak, 39
under pressure of disaster and hardship;
he covered princes in contempt, 40
‖Jb 12:21,24 left them to wander in trackless wastes.

58:10;63:11; 113:7–9 ‖Jb 5:16; But the needy he raises from their misery, 41 makes their families as numerous as sheep.

42 At the sight the honest rejoice, and the wicked have nothing to say. ▶ 22:19 Is 65:12seq. Jr 31:27

43 Who is wise? Such a one should take this to heart, and come to understand Yahweh's faithful love. ‖Ho 14:10

PSALM 108 V 107

Morning hymn and national prayer[a]

Song Psalm Of David

1 My heart is ready, God, =57:7–11
I will sing and make music;
come, my glory!
2 Awake, lyre and harp,
I will awake the Dawn!

3 I will praise you among the peoples, Yahweh,
I will play to you among nations,
4 for your faithful love towers to heaven,
and your constancy to the clouds.

5 Be exalted above the heavens, God.
Your glory over the whole earth!

6 To rescue those you love, =60:5–12
save with your right hand and answer us.

7 God has spoken from his sanctuary,
'In triumph I will divide up Shechem, and share out the Valley of Succoth.

8 'Mine is Gilead, mine Manasseh,
Ephraim the helmet on my head,
Judah my commander's baton,

9 'Moab a bowl for me to wash in,
on Edom I plant my sandal, Rt 4:7–8,8b
over Philistia I cry victory.'

10 Who will lead me against a fortified city,
who will guide me into Edom,
11 if not you, the God who has rejected us?
God, you no longer march with our armies.

12 Bring us help in our time of crisis,
any human assistance is worthless.
13 With God we shall do deeds of valour,
he will trample down our enemies.

d. 'their life from the abyss' mishshahat hayyatam conj.; Hebr. mishshehitotam 'from their abysses'.

108a. A late composition, subsequent to the Elohistic collection, see p. 815. An editor has here joined together, with a few variants, 57:7–11 and 60:5–12, see notes on those Psalms.

An imprecation [a]

For the choirmaster Of David Psalm

35:22 God whom I praise, do not be silent! 1 Wicked and deceiving words 2
are being said about me,
false accusations are cast in my teeth.
Words of hate fly all around me, 3
though I give no cause for hostility.

Jr 18:20 In return for my friendship they denounce me, 4
35:13 and all I can do is pray! [b]
35:12;38:20 They repay my kindness with evil, 5
and friendship with hatred.

'Set up a wicked man against him 6
as accuser to stand on his right. [c]
At his trial may he emerge as guilty, 7
even his prayer construed as a crime!

'May his life be cut short, 8
↗Ac 1:20 someone else take over his office, Ex 22:23 Jr 18:21 his children be orphaned, 9
his wife be widowed.

'May his children wander perpetually, 10
Jb 5:4–5 beggars, driven from [d] the ruins of their house, Jb 20:18 a creditor seize all his goods, 11
and strangers make off with his earnings.

Is 14:21 'May there be none left faithful enough to show him love, 12
no one take pity on his orphans, Jb 18:19 Pr 10:7 the line of his descendants cut off, 13
his name wiped out in one generation.

Ex 20:5 Jr 18:23 'May Yahweh never forget the crimes of his ancestors, 14 and his mother's sins not be wiped out; =34:16;90:8; 139:16 may Yahweh keep these constantly in mind, 15 to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.'

Jb 20:19 He had no thought of being loyal, 16
but hounded the poor and the needy
and the broken-hearted to their death.
He had a taste for cursing; let it recoil on him! 17
No taste for blessing; let it never come his way! [e]

Cursing has been the uniform he wore; 18
Nb 5:24 let it soak into him like water, [f]
like oil right into his bones.
73:6 Let it be as a robe which envelops him completely, 19 76:10e a sash which he always wears.

Let this be the salary Yahweh pays 20
the accusers who blacken my name.
Yahweh, treat them as your name demands; 21
103:8b as your faithful love is generous, deliver me.

22 Poor and needy as I am,
my wounds go right to the heart;
23 I am passing away like a fading shadow, 102:11
they have shaken me off like a locust. Jb 30:22

24 My knees are weak from lack of food, 69:10
my body lean for lack of fat.
25 I have become the butt of their taunts, 22:6seq.
they shake their heads at the sight of me. Mt 27:39par.

26 Help me, Yahweh my God,
save me as your faithful love demands.
27 Let them know that yours is the saving hand, that this, Yahweh, is your work. 22:31;64:9

28 Let them curse, provided that you bless; Nb 22:2seq.
let their attacks bring shame to them and joy to your servant! 2 S 16:12
29 Let my accusers be clothed in disgrace, Is 65:13–15
enveloped in a cloak of shame. Jr 20:11

30 With generous thanks to Yahweh on my lips, 22:25seq.;
I shall praise him before all the people, 71:22seq.
31 for he stands at the side of the poor, to save their lives from those who sit in judgement on them.

PSALM 110

V 109 2

The Priest Messiah [a]

Of David Psalm

1 Yahweh declared to my Lord, 'Take your seat at my right hand, ↗Mt 22:44p; 26:64u till I have made your enemies your footstool.' [b] ↗Ac 2:34–35,33t ↗Heb 1:13; 10:12–13
2 Yahweh will stretch out the sceptre of your power; ↗1 P 3:22 from Zion you will rule your foes all around you.

3 Royal dignity has been yours from the day of your birth, sacred honour from the womb, from the dawn of your youth. [c]

4 Yahweh has sworn an oath he will never retract, Gn 14:18g
you are a priest for ever of the order of Melchizedek. ↗Heb 5:6; 7:11–26,11c

5 At your right hand, Lord,
he shatters kings when his anger breaks out. 2:9 6 He judges nations, heaping up corpses, Is 2:4
he breaks heads over the whole wide world.

109a. Slandered and falsely accused, the psalmist invokes divine vengeance, see 5:10c; Jr 11:20; 18:19seq. In the oriental manner, the litany of imprecations, vv. 6–20, piles up highly coloured curses. Perhaps vv. 6–15 (within quotation marks here) express the accuser's enmity, cf. vv. 2–3, and what follows is the psalmist's retort, invoking the law of retaliation, vv. 16–20, see Ex 21:25f.

b. lit. 'and I a prayer'.

c. lit. 'let the accuser stand at his right hand'. The Accuser (Hebr. satan) was a name later given to the devil, see Jb 1:6g. He, like the advocate, v. 31, stands on the right of the accused, Jb 30:12; Zc 3:1.

d. Gk, Hebr. 'seeking'.

e. Cursing and blessing are here personified.

f. Probable allusion to the old ritual of 'the water of bitterness' described in Nb 5:11–31.

110a. The prerogatives of the Messiah, worldwide sovereignty and perpetual priesthood, 2 S 7:1a; Zc 6:12–13, are no more conferred by earthly investiture than were those of the mysterious Melchizedek, Gn 14:18g.

b. Cf. Jos 10:24; Dn 7:14.

c. Verse corr.; Hebr. 'Your people is generosity on the day of your strength, in sacred splendours, from (or: from the time of) the womb of the dawn (meaning uncertain), to you the dew of your youth.' Gk 'With you is the royal dignity . . . , from the womb before the dawn I begot you' (cf. 2:7). In place of 'sacred splendours', 83 Hebr. MSS, Symm. and Jerome have 'on the holy mountains'.

He drinks from a stream as he goes,[d] 7 and therefore he holds his head high.

Passover hymn [a]

Alleluia! [b]

1 When Israel came out of Egypt,
the House of Jacob from a people of foreign speech,

d. The Messiah drinks of the torrent of ordeal 18:4e; 32:6; 66:12, or of the torrent of divine favours, 36:8; 46:4. Or possibly he is compared to the warrior pursuing his enemies, pausing only a moment to quench his thirst, Jg 7:5; 15:18; 1 S 30:9.

111a. 'Alphabetical' Psalm, like the following which is akin to it in doctrine, style, and poetic structure.

b. By instituting the yearly feasts, see Ex 23:14d.

c. Allusion to the miracles of manna and quails, Ex 16:1a.

112a. Expressions used of God in the preceding Psalm are here applied to the virtuous individual.

b. The word indicates both the virtue and the happiness that rewards it.

c. lit. 'he rises'. What has been said of God, 18:28; 27:1, is here applied to the upright. Others translate 'For the honest in darkness a light arises; the upright is kind and compassionate.'

d. Or 'To his glory his strength increases.'

113a. Opening hymn of the Hallel (Ps 113–118) which the Jews recited at the great feasts, including the Passover supper, see Mt 26:30 and par.

b. Like Sarah, Gn 16:1; 17:15–21; 18:9–15; 21:1–7, and Anne, 1 S 1–2. The stress is on the honour done to her, for a woman normally remained standing to serve.

114a. This hymn, which the versions wrongly unite with the following, treats in parallel, cf. 66:6b, of the crossing of the Sea of Reeds and the crossing of the Jordan, Ex 14 and Jos 3.

b. Gk, Hebr. puts the 'Alleluia' at the end of the preceding Psalm.

Thanksgiving

Alleluia![a]

1 I am filled with love when Yahweh listens to the sound of my prayer, 2 when he bends down to hear me,
as[b] I call.

3 The bonds of death were all round me, 18:4–6
the snares[c] of Sheol held me fast; Jon 2:3
distress and anguish held me in their grip, 4 I called on the name of Yahweh.

Deliver me, Yahweh, I beg you.

5 Yahweh is merciful and upright, Ex 34:6+

PSALM 119

V 118

In praise of the divine Law [a]

1:1;112:1 Mt 5:3seq. Aleph How blessed are those whose way is blameless, 1 who walk in the Law of Yahweh!
Blessed are those who observe his instructions, 2
Dt 4:29 2 Ch 31:21 who seek him with all their hearts, and, doing no evil, 3
who walk in his ways.
You lay down your precepts 4
to be carefully kept.
May my ways be steady 5
in doing your will.
Then I shall not be shamed, 6
if my gaze is fixed on your commandments.
I thank you with a sincere heart 7
for teaching me your upright judgements.
I shall do your will; 8
do not ever abandon me wholly.

Bet How can a young man keep his way spotless? 9
By keeping your words.
With all my heart I seek you, 10
do not let me stray from your commandments.
In my heart I treasure your promises, 11
to avoid sinning against you.
Blessed are you, Yahweh, 12
25:4;143:10 teach me your will!
With my lips I have repeated 13
all the judgements you have given.
In the way of your instructions lies my joy, 14
a joy beyond all wealth.
I will ponder your precepts 15
and fix my gaze on your paths.
I find my delight in your will, 16
I do not forget your words.

Gimel Be generous to your servant and I shall live, [b] 17 and shall keep your words.
Open my eyes and I shall fix my gaze 18
on the wonders of your Law.
39:12+ Wayfarer though I am on the earth, 19
do not hide your commandments from me.
My heart is pining away with longing 20
at all times for your judgements.
You have rebuked the arrogant, [c] the accursed, 21
who stray from your commandments.
Set me free from taunts and contempt 22
since I observe your instructions.
Though princes sit plotting against me, 23
your servant keeps pondering your will.

24 Your instructions are my delight,
your wishes [d] my counsellors.

25 Dalet Down in the dust I lie prostrate; =44:25
true to your word, revive me.
26 I tell you my ways and you answer me;
teach me your wishes.
27 Show me the way of your precepts,
that I may reflect on your wonders.
28 I am melting away for grief;
true to your word, raise me up.
29 Keep me far from the way of deceit,
grant me the grace of your Law.
30 I have chosen the way of constancy,
I have moulded myself to your judgements.
31 I cling to your instructions,
Yahweh, do not disappoint me.
32 I run the way of your commandments,
for you have given me freedom of heart.

33 He Teach me, Yahweh, the way of your will,
and I will observe it. [e] 19:11
34 Give me understanding [f] and I will observe your Law,
and keep it wholeheartedly.
35 Guide me in the way of your commandments,
for my delight is there.
36 Bend my heart to your instructions,
not to selfish gain.
37 Avert my eyes from pointless images,
by your word give me life. [g]
38 Keep your promise to your servant
so that all may hold you in awe.
39 Avert the taunts that I dread,
for your judgements are generous.
40 See how I yearn for your precepts;
in your saving justice give me life.

41 Waw Let your faithful love come to me, Yahweh,
true to your promise, save me!
42 Give me an answer to the taunts against me,
since I rely on your word.
43 Do not deprive me of that faithful word, [h]
since my hope lies in your judgements.
44 I shall keep your Law without fail
for ever and ever.
45 I shall live in all freedom
because I have sought your precepts. [i] Ezr 7:10

119a. 'Alphabetical' Psalm. The 8 verses of each strophe begin with one of the 22 letters of the Hebr. alphabet and each verse (excepting only v. 122) contains one of the terms for the Law; decree, precept, statute, commandment, promise, word, judgement, way. The word 'Law' and its synonyms are here to be understood in the widest sense of revealed teaching, as handed on by the prophets. The Psalm is one of the most remarkable monuments of Israelite devotion to the divine revelation.

b. 'Life' in this Psalm is to be understood in its fullest sense: happiness, security, liberation; a theme recurrent in Ezk 3:21; 18:33; but see Dt 4:1 and Ps 133:3, etc.

c. The greatest of God's enemies, vv. 51,69,78,85,122; 19:13; 86:14; Is 13:11; Mt 3:19.

d. 'Your wishes' Gk; lacking in Hebr.

e. Faithfulness to the commandments is the joy and immediate reward of the upright.

f. A wish often repeated in this Psalm and reiterated by the sages.

g. 'by your word' MSS, Targ; 'in your way' MT.

h. Hebr adds 'much', cf. v. 47 and Gk, Syr.

i. The faithful wish both to understand the Law and to make it a rule of life. This study is at the origin of 'midrashic' literature (the term derives from darash 'search').

Mt 10:18

I shall speak of your instructions before kings 46
and will not be shamed.
Your commandments fill me with delight, 47
I love them dearly.
I stretch out my hands to your commandments that I love, 48 and I ponder your judgements.

Zain

Keep in mind your promise to your servant 49
on which I have built my hope.
It is my comfort in distress, 50
that your promise gives me life.
Endlessly the arrogant have jeered at me, 51
but I have not swerved from your Law.
I have kept your age-old judgements in mind, 52
Yahweh, and I am comforted.
Fury grips me when I see the wicked 53
who abandon your Law.
Your judgements are my song 54
where I live in exile.
All night, Yahweh, I hold your name in mind, 55
I keep your Law.
This is what it means to me, 56
observing your precepts.

Het

My task, I have said, Yahweh, 57
is to keep your word.
Wholeheartedly I entreat your favour; 58
true to your promise, take pity on me!
I have reflected on my ways, 59
and I turn my steps to your instructions.
I hurry without delay 60
to keep your commandments.
Though caught in the snares of the wicked, 61
I do not forget your Law.
At midnight I rise to praise you 62
for your upright judgements.
I am a friend to all who fear you 63
and keep your precepts.
=33:5 Your faithful love fills the earth, 64
Yahweh, teach me your judgements.

Tet

You have been generous to your servant, Yahweh, 65
true to your promise.
Teach me judgement and knowledge, 66
for I rely on your commandments.
Before I was punished I used to go astray, 67
but now I keep to your promise.
You are generous and act generously, 68
teach me your will.
The arrogant blacken me with lies 69
though I wholeheartedly observe your precepts.
17:10;73:7 Their hearts are gross like rich fat, 70
but my delight is in your Law.
It was good for me that I had to suffer, 71
the better to learn your judgements.
The Law you have uttered is more precious to me 72 than all the wealth in the world.

73 Yod Your hands have made me and held me firm, Dt 32:6 Jb 10:8
give me understanding and I shall learn your commandments.
74 Those who fear you rejoice at the sight of me
since I put my hope in your word. 130:5 75 I know, Yahweh, that your judgements are upright, and in punishing me you show your constancy.
76 Your faithful love must be my consolation,
as you have promised your servant.
77 Treat me with tenderness and I shall live,
for your Law is my delight.
78 Let the arrogant who tell lies against me be shamed, while I ponder your precepts.
79 Let those who fear you rally to me,
those who understand your instructions.
80 My heart shall be faultless towards your will;
than I shall not be ashamed.

81 Kaph I shall wear myself out for your salvation,
for your word is my hope.
82 My eyes, too, are worn out waiting for your promise,[j] when will you have pity on me?
83 For I am like a smoked wineskin, 35:14 Jb 30:30
but I do not forget your will.
84 How long has your servant to live?
When will you bring my persecutors to judgement?
85 The arrogant have dug pitfalls for me
in defiance of your Law.
86 All your commandments show constancy.
Help me when they pursue me dishonestly.
87 They have almost annihilated me on earth,
but I have not deserted your precepts.
88 True to your faithful love, give me life,
and I shall keep the instructions you have laid down.

89 Lamed For ever, Yahweh, your word 19:9 Pr 8:22seq. Is 40:8 Mt 24:35 is planted firm in heaven.
90 Your constancy endures from age to age;
you established the earth and it stands firm.
91 Through your judgements all stands firm to this day,
for all creation is your servant.
92 Had your Law not been my delight,
I would have perished in my misery.
93 I shall never forget your precepts,
for by them you have given me life.
94 I am yours, save me,
for I seek your precepts.
95 The wicked may hope to destroy me,
but all my thought is of your instructions.
96 I have seen that all perfection is finite,
but your commandment has no limit.

97 Mem How I love your Law!
I ponder it all day long.
98 You make me wiser than my enemies
by your commandment which is mine for ever.

j. Hebr. adds 'saying' (dittography of beginning of previous word), 'I have worn myself out,' lit. 'my soul is coming to its end' . . 'my eyes are coming to their end.'

I am wiser than all my teachers 99
because I ponder your instructions.
Jb 32:6seq. Ws 4:8–9 I have more understanding than the aged 100 because I keep your precepts.
I restrain my foot from evil paths 101
to keep your word.
I do not turn aside from your judgements, 102
because you yourself have instructed me.
19:10 Jr 15:16 How pleasant your promise to my palate, 103 sweeter than honey in my mouth!
From your precepts I learn wisdom, 104
so I hate all deceptive ways.

18:28 Pr 6:23 Nun Your word is a lamp for my feet, 105
a light on my path.
I have sworn—and shall maintain it— 106
to keep your upright judgements.
I am utterly wretched, Yahweh; 107
true to your promise, give me life.
50:14,23 Heb 13:15 Accept, Yahweh, the tribute from my mouth, 108 and teach me your judgements.
My life is in your hands perpetually, [k] 109
I do not forget your Law.
The wicked have laid out a snare for me, 110
but I have not strayed from your precepts.
Your instructions are my eternal heritage, 111
they are the joy of my heart.
I devote myself to obeying your statutes, 112
their recompense is eternal.

Samek I hate a divided heart, 113
I love your Law.
You are my refuge and shield, 114
I put my hope in your word.
=6:8 Leave me alone, you wicked, 115
I shall observe the commandments of my God.
True to your word, support me and I shall live; 116
do not disappoint me of my hope.
Uphold me and I shall be saved, 117
my gaze fixed on your will.
You shake off all who stray from your will; 118
deceit fills their horizon.
In your sight [l] all the wicked of the earth are like rust, 119
Ezk 22:18–22 so I love your instructions.
My whole body trembles before you, 120
88:16 Jb 4:14–15 your judgements fill me with fear.

Ain All my conduct has been just and upright, 121
do not hand me over to my oppressors.
Guarantee the well-being of your servant, 122
do not let the proud oppress me.
My eyes are languishing for your salvation 123
and for the saving justice you have promised.
Show your faithful love to your servant, 124
teach me your judgements.
Your servant am I; give me understanding 125
and I shall know your instructions.

126 It is time to take action, Yahweh,[m]
your Law is being broken.
127 So I love your commandments
more than gold, purest gold.
128 So I rule my life by your precepts,[n]
I hate all deceptive paths.

129 Pe Wonderful are your instructions,
so I observe them.
130 As your word unfolds it gives light, 73:17
and even the simple understand.
131 I open wide my mouth,
panting eagerly for your commandments.
132 Turn to me, pity me; 5:11;=25:16; 91:14
those who love your name deserve it.
133 Keep my steps firm in your promise;
that no evil may triumph over me.
134 Rescue me from human oppression,
and I will observe your precepts.
135 Let your face shine on your servant, 4:6d
teach me your will.
136 My eyes stream with tears Ezr 9:3seq. Ezk 9:4
because your Law is disregarded.

137 Zade You are upright, Yahweh, and your judgements are honest.
138 You impose uprightness as a witness to yourself,
it is constancy itself.
139 My zeal[o] is burning me up 69:9
because my oppressors forget your word.
140 Your promise is well tested,
your servant holds it dear.
141 Puny and despised as I am,
I do not forget your precepts.
142 Your saving justice is for ever just,
and your Law is trustworthy.
143 Though anguish and distress grip me your commandments are my delight.
144 Your instructions are upright for ever,
give me understanding and I shall live.

145 Qoph I call with all my heart; answer me, Yahweh, and I will observe your judgements.
146 I call to you; save me,
and I will keep your instructions.
147 I am awake before dawn to cry for help,
I put my hope in your word.
148 My eyes are awake before each watch of the night, 63:6;77:4
to ponder your promise.

k. i.e. I am prepared to sacrifice my life at any moment.

as you promised, give me life.
Salvation is far from the wicked, 155
for they do not seek your will.
Your kindnesses to me are countless, Yahweh; 156
true to your judgements, give me life.
Though my enemies and oppressors are countless, 157
I do not turn aside from your instructions.
The sight of these renegades appals me; 158
they do not observe your promise.

79:11;88:2 May my prayer come into your presence, 170 rescue me as you have promised.
May my lips proclaim your praise, 171
for you teach me your will.
May my tongue recite your promise, 172
for all your commandments are upright.
May your hand be there to help me, 173

The enemies of peace [a]

Song of Ascents

1 To Yahweh when I am in trouble
I call and he answers me.
2 Yahweh, save me from lying lips and a treacherous tongue!

p. With 12 MSS and versions; 'those who pursue (wickedness)' MT.

q. The 'lost sheep' theme of the prophets, Ezk 34:1a, is here applied to the individual.

b. This question and the similar exclamation 'may he bring unnameable ills on you and worse ills too' was a customary form of imprecation; see Rt 1:17f; 1 S 3:17; 14:44; 20:13; 25:22.

c. The country of a Caucasian people, Gn 10:2; Ezk 27:13, where Gog is later to be king, Ezk 38:2. The Arabs of Kedar lived in the Syrian desert. The psalmist makes 'Meshech' and 'Kedar' synonymous with 'barbarian'.

120a. The 'Songs of Ascents' (Ps 120–134) were probably sung by pilgrims on their way to Jerusalem, see 84:6c; Is 30:29. With the exception of 132 their verses are 'elegiac' (unequal lines: 3 + 2 accents) and the 'step' device is often used (a verse takes up a word or expression from its predecessor, see 120:2–3,5,6 and 7).

121a. This Psalm is equally appropriate for pilgrims on the hard road to Jerusalem, and for those on their pilgrimage to the heavenly Jerusalem.

God protects his faithful

Song of Ascents

Whoever trusts in Yahweh is like Mount Zion:
unshakeable, it stands for ever.
Jerusalem! The mountains encircle her:
so Yahweh encircles his people,
henceforth and for ever.

The sceptre of the wicked will not come to rest
over the heritage of the upright;
or the upright might set their own hands to evil.

Pr 10:25
Dt 32:10
Mt 28:20
119:134

122a. The pilgrims halt at the gates and salute the holy city with 'shalom!' ('Peace!'), alluding to the popular etymology of 'Jerusalem', 'city of peace', see 76:1. This 'peace' plays a prominent part in the messianic hope, see Is 11:6e; Ho 2:20s. Affection for holy Zion, 2 S 5:9e, is a characteristic of Jewish piety, see Ps 48; 84; 87; 133; 137.

b. Jerusalem solidly restored, Ne 2:17seq., is a symbol of the unity of the chosen people (versions 'that is one in fellowship').

c. The holy city is the visible sign of divine favours, the pledge of messianic promises.

d. lit. 'tents' 'ohalayk 1 MS; Hebr. 'ohabayk 'those who love you'.

123a. Probably composed shortly after the return from exile or in the time of Nehemiah; the restored community was exposed to the contempt and hostility of surrounding Gentiles, see Ne 2:19; 3:36.

b. An addition from the Maccabaean era, possibly under the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. The text is obscure: qere: 'scorn is for the proud Greeks'; but in the consonantal text and the versions the word for 'Greeks' has been attached to the preceding word (giving a possible form of 'proud') in order to camouflage the xenophobic allusion.

124a. Thanksgiving for dangers overcome, described in conventional metaphors.

b. The congregation is invited to repeat the first phrase as an antiphon.

18:25seq. Ex 21:25f

b. Which, nearly always dry, see Jb 6:15, fill swiftly in winter and make the soil fruitful.

127a. Without God, human toil is useless; daily bread and children are gifts from God.

b. lit. 'he gives to his loved one in sleep', or 'he gives sleep'; versions 'while he gives sleep to those he loves'. The Hebr. title of the Psalm identifies the 'loved one' with Solomon, cf. 2 S 12:25, and possibly the 'sleep' with Solomon's dream at Gibeon, 1 K 3:5.

c. lit. 'when he speaks with his enemies in the gate', i.e. the gate of the city, where business is transacted.

128a. This Psalm celebrates the domestic happiness granted by God to the upright, in accordance with the teaching of the sages on earthly retribution.

129a. The early days of Israel's history, the years in Egypt and the entry into Canaan.

b. Translation uncertain. The word translated 'before' occurs nowhere else. It has been proposed to correct, following the Targ., Syr. and Is 37:27 (1QIs[a]), to 'which the east wind scorches'.

130a. Penitential Psalm, cf. 6:inscr. but still more a Psalm of hope.

b. 'that you may be revered'; Gk translates 'because of your Law', a legalist adaptation.

c. Translated following Gk. The corrupt Hebr. would translate literally: 'I rely on Yahweh, my whole being relies, and in his promise have I hoped. My whole being for the Lord more than watchmen for daybreak, watchmen for daybreak. Let Israel hope in Yahweh.'

131a. The soul at peace abandons itself to God, laying aside anxiety and ambition. The same childlike trust is demanded, v. 3, of the people of God, see Is 30:15.

132a. Messianic Psalm, see especially vv. 17–18. The divine promises, 2 S 7:1a, here take the form of the divine answer to an oath pronounced by David. A processional hymn, vv. 6seq., recalls the finding and translation of the ark, 1 S 6:13seq.; 2 S 6.

b. The ark.

c. Place-name akin to Kiriath-Jearim ('town of the woodlands') which, like Bethlehem, was in the district of Ephrathah.

d. Yahweh.

e. The anointed of Yahweh, the descendant of David awaited by Israel. He will share power with the priests, Ps 110:3; Zc 4:14; 6:13.

PSALM 137

V 136

Song of the exiles [a]

1 By the rivers of Babylon
we sat and wept — Ezk 3:15; Lm 3:48
at the memory of Zion.
2 On the poplars there
we had hung up our harps. — Is 24:8; Jr 25:10; Lm 5:14 3 For there our gaolers had asked us
to sing them a song,
our captors [b] to make merry,
'Sing us one of the songs of Zion.'
4 How could we sing a song of Yahweh on alien soil?
5 If I forget you, Jerusalem, — Jr 51:50
may my right hand wither! [c] 6 May my tongue remain stuck to my palate
if I do not keep you in mind,
if I do not count Jerusalem — 122:1a
the greatest of my joys.
7 Remember, Yahweh, to the Edomites' cost, — Lm 4:21–22; Ezk 25:12–14+;35; Ob 10–14
the day of Jerusalem, [d] how they said, 'Down with it! Rase it to the ground!'
8 Daughter of Babel, doomed to destruction, — Is 47:10; Is 14:22; Jr 50–51; ↗Rv 18:6
a blessing on anyone who treats you as you treated us, 9 a blessing on anyone who seizes your babies — Ho 14:1
and shatters them against a rock!

Hymn of thanksgiving

Of David

1 I thank you, Yahweh, with all my heart, — =9:1
for you have listened to the cry I uttered. [a]
In the presence of angels [b] I sing to you,
2 I bow down before your holy Temple. — =5:7; Dn 6:11b

I praise your name for your faithful love and your constancy;
your promises surpass even your fame. [c]

c. Hebr. adds 'great', which is redundant.
d. Hebr. repeats 'in the Sea of Reeds', a doublet drawn from v. 13.

137a. This Psalm recalls the fall of Jerusalem in 587 and the Babylonian exile.
b. 'captors' sholelenu Targ.; Hebr. tolalenu unintelligible.
c. 'wither' tikhash conj.; Hebr. (which seems to have wanted to soften the curse). tishkah 'forget'.
d. The 9th day of the 4th month (June–July, 587), when the Chaldaeans breached the walls of Jerusalem, Jr 39:2; 52:7; or else the 10th day of the 5th month when the Temple was burnt down, Jr 52:13, cf. Zc 7:5; 8:19. The Edomites, Nb 20:20–23, then joined forces with the besieging army; a number of prophetic pronouncements invokes the vengeance of Yahweh on them Is 34:5seq.; Jr 49:17; Jl 4:19; Ml 1:3seq.

138a. Gk. Line omitted by Hebr.
b. With Gk. Some versions interpret 'gods' (idols), 'kings', 'judges'.
c. lit. 'you have made your promise great above all your name'. Text uncertain.

You heard me on the day when I called, 3
Is 40:29 and you gave new strength to [d] my heart.

68:32 All the kings of the earth give thanks to you, Yahweh, 4 Ml 1:11 when they hear the promises you make;
they sing of Yahweh's ways, 5
'Great is the glory of Yahweh!'
Is 57:15 Sublime as he is, Yahweh looks on the humble, 6
Lk 1:51–52 the proud he picks out from afar.

Though I live surrounded by trouble 7
23:5 you give me life—to my enemies' fury!
You stretch out your right hand and save me,
57:2 Yahweh will do all things for me. 8
100:5b Yahweh, your faithful love endures for ever,
do not abandon what you have made.

my being held no secrets from you, 15

when I was being formed in secret, textured in the depths of the earth.

16 Your eyes could see my embryo.
In your book all my days were inscribed,
every one that was fixed is there. [e]

17 How hard for me to grasp your thoughts,
how many, God, there are!

18 If I count them, they are more than the grains of sand;
if I come to an end, [f] I am still with you.

19 If only, God, you would kill the wicked!—
Men of violence, keep away from me!—

20 those who speak blasphemously about you,
and take no account of your thoughts. [g]

21 Yahweh, do I not hate those who hate you,
and loathe those who defy you?

22 My hate for them has no limits,
I regard them as my own enemies.

Against the wicked

For the choirmaster Psalm Of David

1 Rescue me, Yahweh, from evil men,
protect me from violent men,

2 whose heart is bent on malice,
day after day they harbour strife;

3 their tongues as barbed as a serpent's, viper's venom behind their lips. Pause ↗Rm 3:13

4 Keep me, Yahweh, from the clutches of the wicked,
protect me from violent men, who are bent on making me stumble, 56:6;57:6
Si 12:16
5b laying out snares where I walk, [a] Jr 18:22
5a in their arrogance hiding pitfall and noose
5c to trap me as I pass. Pause

6 I said to Yahweh, 'You are my God.' 31:14
Listen, Yahweh, to the sound of my prayer.

d. 'gave new strength to' Syr; Hebr. 'troubled the strength of'.

139a. Compare this meditation on God's omniscience with the reflections of Job on the awesome fear of human beings under the eye of God. Jb 7:17–20i.

b. 'wrap itself around' 'ezor 11QPs[a]; MT 'or 'be a light for'.

c. The text adds an Aramaic gloss 'As the darkness so the light'.

d. 'You knew me' conj.; 'knowing' Hebr.

e. 'is there' qere of some MSS; 'is not there' MT. a difficult text. The Psalmist is meditating on the divine omniscience; God knows a person's destiny even before he is born, 22:10; 71:16, while for that person the mystery is impenetrable.

f. 'if I come to an end' haqitztzoti 3 MSS; MT heqitzoti 'I wake up'.

g. 'your thoughts' re'eka conj.; see vv. 2,17; Hebr. 'areka 'your cities'. • All this v. is uncertain.

140a. lit. 'for my feet' Gk; omitted by Hebr.

Yahweh my Lord, my saving strength, 7
you shield my head when battle comes.
Yahweh, do not grant the wicked their wishes, 8
do not let their plots succeed. Pause

Do not let my attackers ·prevail, [b] 9
but let them be overwhelmed by their own malice.
11:6;55:23 Gn 19:24 Nb 16:31seq. May red-hot embers rain down [c] on them, 10 may they be flung into the mire once and for all.
May the slanderer [d] find no rest anywhere, 11
may evil hunt down violent men implacably.

I know that Yahweh will give judgement for the wretched, 12 justice for the needy.
The upright shall praise your name, 13

Against the attractions of evil

Psalm Of David

Yahweh, I am calling, hurry to me, 1
listen to my voice when I call to you.
Ex 30:8 Lv 2:2 Nb 28:4 May my prayer be like incense in your presence, 2
my uplifted hands like the evening sacrifice. [a]

Yahweh, mount a guard over my mouth, 3
a guard at the door of my lips.
Check any impulse to speak evil, 4
to share the foul deeds of evil-doers.

I shall not sample their delights!
Pr 9:8;25:12; 27:6,9 May the upright correct me with a friend's rebuke; 5
but the wicked shall never anoint my head with oil,
for that would make me party to their crimes. [b]

They are delivered into the power of the rock, their judge, [c] 6
those who took pleasure in hearing me say,
'Like a shattered millstone [d] on the ground 7
our bones are scattered at the mouth of Sheol.'

To you, Yahweh, I turn my eyes, 8
in you I take refuge, do not leave me unprotected.
Save me from the traps that are set for me, 9
the snares of evil-doers.

Let the wicked fall each into his own net, 10
while I pass on my way.

Prayer in persecution [a]

57 inscr. Psalm Of David When he was in the cave Prayer

To Yahweh I cry out with my plea. 1
To Yahweh I cry out with entreaty.

2 I pour out my worry in his presence, in his presence I unfold my troubles.
3 However faint my spirit;
you are watching over my path. 139:24

On the road I have to travel
they have hidden a trap for me. 141:9 4 Look on my right [b] and see— 121:5
there is no one who recognises me.
All refuge is denied me,
no one cares whether I live or die.

5 I cry out to you, Yahweh,
I affirm, 'You are my refuge, 91:2,9;16:5
my share in the land of the living!' [c] 6 Listen to my calling, for I am miserably weak. 79:8

A humble entreaty

Psalm Of David [a]

1 Yahweh, hear my prayer,
listen to my pleading;
in your constancy answer me,
in your saving justice;
2 do not put your servant on trial, for no one living can be found guiltless at your tribunal. [b] Jb 9:2;14:3–4 Qo 7:20 ↗Rm 3:20

4 My spirit is faint, 142:3
and within me my heart is numb with fear. Jb 17:1

b. We follow the Gk for 9[b] and 10. The Hebr. is very uncertain.

c. 'rain down' yamter conj.; qere and versions yimmotu 'be shaken'; ketib yamitu 'shake'. • 'red-hot' Gk; 'in the fire' Hebr.

d. lit. 'the man of tongue'.

141a. A prescribed daily offering, Jewish piety thus associates prayer with sacrifice. see 51:16; cf. Rv 5:8; 8:4.

b. 'the wicked' rasha' Gk, Syr; Hebr. ro'sh 'excellent'. • 'that would make me party' hitlaphatti following 11QPs[a]; Hebr. tephilati 'my prayer'. • The text is very obscure. It seems that the Psalmist fears the advances of the wicked which could seduce him.

c. Yahweh, 'Rock of Israel': 18:2; 19:14; 42:9. • 'their judge' is in the plural in Hebr., a plural of majesty as in 58:11.

d. 'a shattered millstone' pelah yebuqqa' Gk and Syr.; Hebr. poleh uboqe'a 'shattering and splitting'.

142a. This Psalm has been applied to Christ in his sufferings.

b. The right hand is where a defender stands, see 109:31; Is 63:12.

c. In this life, see 27:13; 52:5; cf. 16:5; 46:1; 91:2.

d. Gk and Syr. translate 'the upright hope'. • All God's friends form one body, they join in the thanksgiving for the faithful saved by God, see 64:10; 107:42.

143a. Gk details 'when his son (Absalom) was pursuing him', cf. 3:heading; 2 S 15:13seq.

b. Cf. 51:5; 130:3 Paul uses this passage somewhat freely, Rm 3:20; Gn 2:16.

=77:5;77:11–12 I recall the days of old, 5
reflecting on all your deeds,
I ponder the works of your hands.
I stretch out my hands to you, 6
63:1 my heart like a land thirsty for you. Pause

Answer me quickly, Yahweh, 7
my spirit is worn out;
10:1;28:1;69:17;88:4;102:2 do not turn away your face from me,
or I shall be like those who sink into oblivion.

17:15d Let dawn bring news of your faithful love, 8

show me the road I must travel 25:1–2;86:4 for you to relieve my heart.

Rescue me from my enemies, Yahweh, 9
since in you I find protection. [c] 25:4–5 Teach me to do your will, 10
for you are my God.
May your generous spirit lead me
on even ground.

Yahweh, for the sake of your name, 11
in your saving justice give me life,
rescue me from distress.

Praise to Yahweh the King [a]

Hymn of Praise Of David

1 Aleph I shall praise you to the heights, God my King, 44:4
I shall bless your name for ever and ever. 34:1;68:19
2 Bet Day after day I shall bless you,
I shall praise your name for ever and ever.
3 Gimel Great is Yahweh and worthy of all praise, 48:1;95:3
Jb 36:26
his greatness beyond all reckoning.

4 Dalet Each age will praise your deeds to the next, 71:18;78:4
proclaiming your mighty works.
5 He Your renown is the splendour of your glory,
I will ponder the story of your wonders.

6 Waw They will speak of your awesome power,
and I shall recount your greatness.
7 Zain They will bring out the memory of your great generosity,
and joyfully acclaim your saving justice.

8 Het Yahweh is tenderness and pity, 103:8b slow to anger, full of faithful love.

c. 'I find protection' Vulg.; 'I am protected' Hebr.; 'I have fled' Gk.

144a. The first part, vv. 1–11, a summary of liturgical prayer for the king, is inspired by Ps 18 and others. The second, vv. 12–15, is original and describes the prosperity of the messianic age.

b. 'the peoples' MSS, versions; 'my people' Hebr and Gk; the correction is intended to allude to David.
c. 'David my servant' has become a messianic title, Jr 33:21; Ezk 34:23–24; 37:24.
d. Rare word suggesting caryatids.

PSALM 149

Song of triumph [a]

1 Alleluia!

Sing a new song to Yahweh: 40:9
his praise in the assembly of the faithful!
2 Israel shall rejoice in its Maker,
the children of Zion delight in their king;
3 they shall dance in praise of his name, 68:25;81:2; 87:7;150:4
play to him on tambourines and harp! 62:4–5 1 S 2:8 Is 61:9

4 For Yahweh loves his people,
he will crown the humble with salvation.
5 The faithful exult in glory,
shout for joy as they worship him, [b]
6 praising God to the heights with their voices, a two-edged sword in their hands, Ne 4:10–12 2 M 15:27

7 to wreak vengeance on the nations, Zc 9:13–16
punishment on the peoples, 8 to load their kings with chains
and their nobles with iron fetters, 9 to execute on them the judgement passed [c]—
to the honour of all his faithful.

PSALM 150

Final chorus of praise [a]

1 Alleluia!

Praise God in his holy place,
praise him in the heavenly vault of his power,
2 praise him for his mighty deeds,
praise him for all his greatness.

3 Praise him with fanfare of trumpet,
praise him with harp and lyre,
4 praise him with tambourines and dancing,
praise him with strings and pipes,
5 praise him with the clamour of cymbals,
praise him with triumphant cymbals, [b]
6 Let everything that breathes praise Yahweh. Rv 5:13

Alleluia!

f. The word of God is represented here as a messenger, almost as a person, cf. 107:20; Is 55:11; Jn 1:14m,n.

g. Hebr. adds 'Alleluia', lacking in Gk. Similarly in the next two Psalms.

148a. Heaven, earth and all creation are here called together to hymn Yahweh, restorer of the chosen people. This Psalm is recited each morning by the Jews.

b. Gk here adds 33:9[a].

c. One of only two cases, with 103:7, where the Psalms use the expression 'child of Israel', which becomes very frequent after the Exile, in the deutero-canonical and Priestly writings.

149a. This national hymn of the hellenistic period (compare 1 M 4:24 and 2 M 15:25–27) looks to the eschatological future, see Is 61:2seq., and makes Israel the instrument of divine justice, see Zc 9:13–16.

b. lit. 'on their couches', i.e. from the place where they lie prostrate in worship, cf. 95:6; Jdt 6:18, or it may mean praise that does not cease, even at night. Cf. 4:4; 63:6; Ho 7:14.

c. Allusion to the declarations against the nations in the prophetic books.

150a. A more elaborate doxology than those concluding the first four books of the Psalter, 41:13; 72:18–20; 89:51; 106:48; this one invites every musical instrument and every living being to praise Yahweh.

b. lit. 'cymbals of acclamation', cf. 33:3a; Nb 10:5.

INTRODUCTION TO
THE PROVERBS

§1 The Book of Proverbs is the most representative work of Israelite wisdom literature, see also Introduction to the Wisdom Books. The body of the book is made up of two collections: 10–22:16, called 'The proverbs of Solomon' (375 aphorisms) and ch. 25–29, introduced by 'Some more of Solomon's proverbs, transcribed at the court of Hezekiah' (128 aphorisms). Appendices have been added to each of these two collections: to the first, 'Sayings of the sages' (22:17–24:22) and 'The following are also taken from the sages' (24:23–34); to the second, 'The sayings of Agur' (30:1–14), followed by numerical proverbs (30:15–33) and 'The sayings of Lemuel' (31:1–9). The whole is preceded by a long introduction, ch. 1–9, in which a father commends wisdom to his child and in which Wisdom herself intervenes. The book closes with an alphabetical poem in praise of the ideal wife, 31:10–31.

The order in which the central sections are arranged is of little importance: it differs in the Greek Bible, and the maxims inside the various sections are juxtaposed without concern for logical sequence. The book is therefore a collection of collections within the framework of a prologue and epilogue. It reflects a literary development outlined in the general Introduction to the Wisdom Books. The two main collections show the mashal in its most primitive form and consist exclusively of brief aphorisms, usually of a single couplet. In the appendices, however, the form is more elaborate; the short numerical poems of 30:15–33, cf. 6:16–19, add the charm of a presentation that joins riddles to their edifying matter, a device already practised in earlier times, see Am 1. The prologue, ch. 1–9, consists of a long discourse interrupted by two exhortations from Wisdom personified; the epilogue, 31:10–31, is a 'learned' composition.

This evolution of form corresponds to successive periods of literary activity. The earliest sections consist of two great collections, ch. 10–22 and 25–29. These are attributed to Solomon who, according to 1 K 5:12, was the author of 'three thousand proverbs' and who was always considered to have been the greatest sage of Israel. The impersonal tone of the proverbs makes it impossible for us to assign any particular maxim to the king, but there is no reason to doubt that this collection as a whole dates from his time; the maxims of the second collection were already ancient when they were transcribed at the court of Hezekiah in about 700 BC. These two collections form the core of the book and give it its full name, 'The proverbs of Solomon', 1:1. The sub-titles of the smaller sections, however, show that this title is not to be taken too literally, embracing as it does the aphorisms of anonymous sages, 22:17–24:34, and the sayings of Agur and Lemuel, 30:1–31:9. Even if the names of these two Arabian sages are fictitious and did not belong to real people, they testify to a respect for the wisdom of other lands, see Introduction to the Wisdom Books §1. Clear proof of this respect is to be found in some of the 'sayings of the sages', 22:17–23:11, which are based on the Egyptian maxims of Amenemophis, committed to writing at the beginning of the first millennium BC.

§2 The discourses of Pr 1–9 are modelled on 'Instructions', a classic form of Egyptian wisdom literature, but also on the 'Counsels of a Father to his Son', recently discovered in an Accadian text from Ugarit. Even the personification of Wisdom had literary antecedents in Egypt, where Justice-Truth was personified as Maath. The imitation, however, is not slavish; it both preserves the originality of the Israelite thinker, and is transformed by his Yahwistic faith. The nucleus of the book, ch. 10–29, may therefore safely be dated in the pre-exilic period; the date of ch. 30–31 is uncertain. The prologue, ch. 1–9, is certainly later; it has literary affinities with post-exilic writings which suggest the fifth century as the date of its composition. This is also presumably when the whole book was given its definitive form.

Since, then, the book represents several centuries of thought on the part of the sages, developments of doctrine are discernible in it. In the two primitive collections the dominant tone is that of human, worldly wisdom, disconcerting to the Christian reader, though even here one proverb in every seven is religious in theme. This religious teaching is not speculative but practical: God rewards truth, charity, purity of heart, humility, and punishes their contrary vices. The source and the sum of all these virtues is wisdom, that is to say the fear of Yahweh, 15:16,33; 16:6; 22:4, who alone is worthy of trust, 20:22, 29:25. The opening chapters offer the same principles of human and sacred wisdom; they emphasise vices of which the earlier sages do not speak, such as adultery, 2:16seq.; 5:2seq.,15seq. The epilogue, too, bears witness to a greater respect for women. More important still, the prologue offers the first example of a logically ordered doctrine of wisdom, its worth and its function as guide and controller of behaviour. The speaker is Wisdom herself; she sings her own praise and explains her relationship with God, in whom she has been from all eternity and whom she assisted when he made the world, 8:22–31. This is the earliest of all the texts (listed on p. 750, see also 8:22e) to deal with Wisdom personified.

§3 The teaching of the Book of Proverbs has undoubtedly been far transcended by that of Christ, the Wisdom of God; even so, several maxims anticipate the moral teaching of the gospel. It should also be remembered that true religion can develop only on the foundations of human decency; while the frequent use of the book (fourteen quotations and about twenty allusions) made by the New Testament, commands the respect of Christians for these thoughts of the ancient sages of Israel.

THE PROVERBS

Title and purpose of the book

1 The proverbs of Solomon son of David, king of Israel: 1 for learning what wisdom and discipline are, 2

for understanding words of deep meaning, for acquiring a disciplined insight, 3 uprightness, justice and fair dealing;
for teaching sound judgement to the simple, 4
and knowledge and reflection to the young;
for perceiving the meaning of proverbs and obscure sayings, 6
the sayings of the sages and their riddles.
22:17 Qo 9:17 Let the wise listen and learn yet more, 5 and a person of discernment will acquire the art of guidance.

9:10;15:33 Jb 28:28 ‖Ps 111:10 Si 1:14 The fear of Yahweh is the beginning of knowledge; [a] 7 fools spurn wisdom and discipline.

I: PROLOGUE

COMMENDATION OF WISDOM

The sage speaks: avoid bad company

=6:20 Listen, my child, to your father's instruction, 8
do not reject your mother's teaching:
4:9 they will be a crown of grace for your head, 9
3:22 Si 6:24.29 a circlet for your neck.
My child, if sinners try to seduce you, 10
Ps 1:1 do not go with them.
If they say, 'Come with us: 11
let us lie in ambush to shed blood;
Ps 10:8 Si 11:32 if we plan an ambush for the innocent without provocation,
Nb 16:33f we can swallow them alive, like Sheol, 12
and whole, like those who sink into oblivion.
We shall find treasures of every sort, 13
we shall fill our houses with plunder;
throw in your lot with us: 14
one purse between us all.'
My child, do not follow them in their way, 15
keep your steps out of their path
6:18 =Is 59:7 for their feet hasten to evil, 16
they are quick to shed blood; [b] for the net is spread in vain 17
if any winged creature can see it. [c]

18 It is for their own blood such people lie in wait, their ambush is against their own selves!
19 Such are the paths of all who seek dishonest gain: 15:27 which robs of their lives all who take it for their own.

Wisdom speaks: a warning to the heedless

20 Wisdom calls aloud in the streets, [d] 8:1–3;9:3 Si 24
she raises her voice [e] in the public squares; Jn 7:37 21 she calls out at the street corners, [f]
she delivers her message at the city gates.
22 'You simple people, how much longer will you cling Ps 94:8
to your simple ways?
How much longer will mockers revel in their mocking and fools go on hating knowledge?
23 Pay attention to my warning.
To you I will pour out my heart and tell you what I have to say.
24 Since I have called and you have refused me, Ps 107:11 Is 65:2,12; 66:4
since I have beckoned and no one has taken notice, 25 since you have ignored all my advice Jr 7:13
and rejected all my warnings,
26 I, for my part, shall laugh at your distress, Dt 28:63
I shall jeer when terror befalls you,
27 when terror befalls you, like a storm, Jr 23:19
when your distress arrives, like a whirlwind,
when ordeal and anguish bear down on you.
28 Then they will call me, but I shall not answer, Jr 11:11+ they will look eagerly for me and will not find me. Ho 5:6+ Jn 7:34 29 They have hated knowledge,
they have not chosen the fear of Yahweh, 30 they have taken no notice of my advice, they have spurned all my warnings: Jr 6:19 31 so they will have to eat the fruits of their own ways of life,
and choke themselves with their own scheming.
32 For the errors of the simple lead to their death, 8:36
the complacency of fools works their own ruin; Jr 5:12–13 Am 6:1 33 but whoever listens to me may live secure, will have quiet, fearing no mischance.'

Wisdom, a safeguard against bad company

1 2 My child, if you take my words to heart, [a]
if you set store by my commandments, 2 tuning your ear to wisdom,
tuning your heart to understanding,

1 a. The biblical expression 'the fear of Yahweh', see Ex 20:20i; Dt 6:2a, means approximately what we call religion or devotion to God. It is at once the basis, 9:10; 15:33; Jb 28:28; Ps 111:10; Si 1:14,20, and the crown, Si 1:18; 19:20; 25:10–11; 40:26–27, of an essentially religious type of wisdom, encouraging a personal relationship with the God of the covenant, in which fear and love, submission and confidence, coincide. see Ps 25:12–14; 112:1; 128:1; Qo 12:13; Si 1:27–28; 2:7–9,15–18; etc.

b. This v. is missing from the best Gk MSS and is generally thought to be a gloss borrowed from Is 59:7.

c. The meaning is, apparently, that as the bird avoids the net if it has seen the hunter spread it, so the youth duly admonished will know how to avoid the pitfalls of life.

d. 'through the streets' Gk; 'outside' Hebr.

e. Like the prophets, see Jr 5:1; 7:2, Wisdom personified, see 8:22f, goes walking through the city streets, waylaying the inhabitants to press her teaching on them, denouncing their heedlessness and false sense of security, see Am 6:1; 9:10; Zp 1:12.

f. lit. 'at the top of the noisy (street)'; but the text is uncertain. Gk 'on top of the walls'.

2 a. All wisdom comes from God, v. 6, but the dispositions needed for receiving it are an enquiring mind, vv. 3–4, and a willingness to learn from the teaching of one's elders, vv. 1–2; etc.

yes, if your plea is for clear perception, 3
if you cry out for understanding,
3:14;8:19; 16:16 Mt 13:44–46 if you look for it as though for silver, 4 search for it as though for buried treasure, then you will understand what the fear of Yahweh is, 5
and discover the knowledge of God.
Jb 32:8 Ws 9:10 Si 1:1 For Yahweh himself is giver of wisdom, 6 from his mouth issue knowledge and understanding.
He reserves his advice for the honest, 7
a shield to those whose ways are sound;
he stands guard over the paths of equity, 8
he keeps watch over the way of those faithful to him.
Then you will understand uprightness, equity and fair dealing, 9
the paths that lead to happiness.
When wisdom comes into your heart 10
and knowledge fills your soul with delight, then prudence will be there to watch over you, 11
and understanding will be your guardian to keep you from the way that is evil, 12
from those whose speech is deceitful, from those who leave the paths of honesty 13
to walk the roads of darkness:
10:23 those who find their joy in doing wrong, 14
and their delight in deceitfulness, whose tracks are twisted, 15
and the paths that they tread crooked.
5:2–20; 6:24–7:27 Si 9:9 To keep you, too, from the woman who belongs to another,[b] 16 from the stranger, with her wheedling words;
she has left the partner of her younger days, 17
Ex 20:14 she has forgotten the covenant of her God;
her house is tilting towards Death, 18
down to the Shades go her paths.
Of those who go to her not one returns, 19
they never regain the paths of life.

Thus you will tread the way of good people, 20
persisting in the paths of the upright.
Ps 37:9,29 Mt 5:4 For the land will be for the honest to live in, 21
the innocent will have it for their home;
10:30 while the wicked will be cut off from the land, 22
and the faithless rooted out of it.

How to acquire wisdom acknowledge him in every course you take, 6 and he will see that your paths are smooth. 16:3 Si 2:6

7 Do not congratulate yourself on your own wisdom, fear Yahweh and turn your back on evil: Ps 34:9, 14 ↗Rm 12:16 relief to your bones.

9 Honour Yahweh with what goods you have Ex 23:19 Si 7:31 Ml 3:10–12 and with the first-fruits of all your produce; •Dt 26:1a

10 then your barns will be filled with corn, [b] •Dt 28:8 Ps 4:7
your vats overflowing with new wine.

11 My child, do not scorn correction from Yahweh, Jb 5:17 ↗Heb 12:5–6 do not resent his reproof; Dt 8:5

12 for Yahweh reproves those he loves, Rv 3:19
as a father the child whom he loves.

The joys of wisdom

13 Blessed are those who have discovered wisdom,
those who have acquired understanding!

14 Gaining her is more rewarding than silver, 2:4+
her yield is more valuable than gold.

15 She is beyond the price of pearls, 8:11
nothing you could covet is her equal.

16 In her right hand is length of days; Si 4:12
in her left hand, riches and honour. 8:18

17 Her ways are filled with delight,
her paths all lead to contentment.

18 She is a tree of life for those who hold her fast, 11:30 Gn 2:9;3:22 those who cling to her live happy lives. Rv 2:7

19 In wisdom, Yahweh laid the earth's foundations, 8:22–31
in understanding, he spread out the heavens.

20 Through his knowledge the depths were cleft open,
and the clouds distil the dew.

21 My child, hold to sound advice and prudence, never let them out of sight; 4:21

22 they will give life to your soul and beauty to your neck. 1:9

23 You will go on your way in safety, 4:12;6:22 Ps 91:12
your feet will not stumble.

24 When you go to bed, you will not be afraid;
once in bed, your sleep will be sweet. Ps 3:6

25 Have no fear either of sudden terror Ps 91:5
or of attack mounted by wicked men,

26 since Yahweh will be your guarantor, Jb 5:19–27
he will keep your steps from the snare.

27 Refuse no kindness to those who have a right to it, Si 4:3 Mt 7:12
if it is in your power to perform it.

b. i.e. another man's wife. This first section of Pr, the last to be added to the collection, often warns against adultery, 2:16–19; 5:2–23; 6:24–7:27. Adultery is identified, 2:17, with apostasy from the covenant of God, see also 5:15b; it leads to Sheol, 2:18; 5:5,6; 7:26–27. In these passages there is only one allusion to prostitution, 6:26, which the older proverbs identify with adultery, see 23:27; 31:3, cf. 29:3, since both corrupt kings and rob warriors of their vigour.

3 a. 'to your body' versions, cf. 4:22; 'to your stomach' Hebr.

b. 'with corn', Gk; 'to repletion', Hebr. The offering of the first-fruits, Dt 26:1a, is the sole cultic observance explicitly commanded by the Proverbs, but there is frequent mention of prayer.

Lk 10:25–37

Do not say to your neighbour, ‘Go away! Come another time! 28
I will give it you tomorrow,’ if you can do it now.
Do not plot harm against your neighbour 29
who is living unsuspecting beside you.
Do not pick a groundless quarrel with anyone 30 who has done you no harm.

23:17
Ps 37:1
Si 11:21

Do not envy the man of violence,[d] 31 never model your conduct on his;
for the wilful wrong-doer is abhorrent to Yahweh, 32
who confides only in the honest.
Yahweh's curse lies on the house of the wicked, 33
but he blesses the home of the upright.

Si 3:18.20

↗1 P 5:5

He mocks those who mock, 34

On choosing wisdom

4 Listen, my children, to a father's instruction; 1 pay attention, and learn what understanding is.
What I am offering you is sound doctrine: 2
do not forsake my teaching.
I too was once a child with a father, 3
in my mother's eyes a tender child, unique.
This was what he used to teach me, 4

=7:2;8:35

‘Let your heart treasure what I have to say,
keep my principles and you will live;
acquire wisdom, acquire understanding, 5
never forget her, never deviate from my words.
Do not desert her, she will keep you safe; 6
love her, she will watch over you.
The first principle of wisdom is: acquire wisdom;[a] 7

Mt 13:44–46

at the cost of all you have, acquire understanding!
Hold her close,[b] and she will make you great; 8 embrace her, and she will be your pride;

1:9
Ws 5:16

she will provide a graceful garland for your head, 9 bestow a crown of honour on you.’

3:1–2

Listen, my child, take my words to heart, 10
and the years of your life will be multiplied.
I have educated you in the ways of wisdom, 11

Ps 23:3

I have guided you along the path of honesty.

3:23+

When you walk, your going will be unhindered, 12
if you run, you will not stumble.
Hold fast to discipline, never let her go, 13
keep your eyes on her, she is your life.
Do not follow the path of the wicked, 14
do not walk the way that the evil go.
Avoid it, do not take it, 15
turn your back on it, pass it by.
For they cannot sleep unless they have first done wrong, 16 they miss their sleep if they have not made someone stumble;
for the bread of wickedness is what they eat, 17
and the wine of violence is what they drink.

Ps 1:1a
Jn 8:12b

The path of the upright is like the light of dawn, 18
its brightness growing to the fullness of day;

19 the way of the wicked is as dark as night,
they cannot tell the obstacles they stumble over.

20 My child, pay attention to what I am telling you, 3:21
listen carefully to my words;
21 do not let them out of your sight,
keep them deep in your heart.
22 For they are life to those who find them
and health to all humanity.
23 More than all else, keep watch over your heart,
since here are the wellsprings of life.
24 Turn your back on the mouth that misleads,
keep your distance from lips that deceive.
25 Let your eyes be fixed ahead,
your gaze be straight before you.
26 Let the path you tread be level and all your ways be firm.
27 Turn neither to right nor to left, Dt 5:32;28:14
keep your foot clear of evil.

Against adultery. Where the wise man's love should be

1 5 My son, pay attention to my wisdom, listen carefully to what I know;
2 so that you may preserve discretion
and your lips may guard knowledge.
Take no notice of a loose-living woman,[a] 2:16b
3 for the lips of the adulteress drip with honey,
her palate is more unctuous than oil,
4 but in the end she is bitter as wormwood, Qo 7:26
sharp as a two-edged sword.
5 Her feet go down to death, 7:27
Sheol the goal of her steps; Nb 16:33f 6 far from following the path of life,
her course is uncertain and she does not know it.

7 And now, son, listen to me,
never deviate from what I say:
8 set your course as far from her as possible,
go nowhere near the door of her house, 9 or she will hand over your honour to others,
the years of your life to a man without pity, 10 and strangers will batten on your property, and your produce go to the house of a stranger, 29:3 11 and, at your ending,
your body and flesh having been consumed, 12 you will groan and exclaim,
'Alas, I hated discipline,
my heart spurned all correction;

c. 'Neighbour' originally meant companion, friend, associate, i.e. one with whom someone had a specific relationship. But in Pr the word has a wider sense of 'fellow-human being', see 6:1,3,29; 25:9; 27:17. This is the first step towards the broadening of the precept of charity, Lv 19:18, which will reach its final form in the command of Jesus 'love your enemies', Mt 5:43seq.

d. The seeming prosperity of the godless ('the violent', 'the perverse', 'wicked', 'mockers', 'fools', various terms for the enemies of Yahweh) had always been a threat to the constancy of the Israelites, see 24:1,19; Ps 73, and later became a serious theological problem, Jb 21:7; Jr 12:1; etc.

e. 'inherit' morishim conj.; Hebr. merim 'raising' (singular).

4 a. i.e. to win wisdom one must first realise how essential it is and that it demands self-sacrifice.

b. Meaning uncertain; it could also mean 'exalt her'; Gk: 'surround her with a palisade' (to protect her).

5 a. Following Gk; line omitted in Hebr.

I would not attend to the voice of my masters, 13
I would not listen to those who tried to teach me.
Now I have come to nearly every kind of misery, 14
Si 1:30 in the assembly and in the community.'

31:10seq. Drink the water from your own storage-well, 15 fresh water from your own spring. [b]
Even if your fountains overflow outside, 16
your streams of water in the public squares:
let them be for you alone, 17
and not for strangers with you.
May your fountain-head be blessed! 18

Qo 9:9 Find joy with the wife you married in your youth, fair as a hind, graceful as a fawn: 19
hers the breasts that ever fill you with delight, hers the love that ever holds you captive.
Why be seduced, my son, by someone else's wife, 20
and fondle the breast of a woman who belongs to another?
For the eyes of Yahweh observe human ways, 21
and survey all human paths.
The wicked is snared in his own misdeeds, 22
is caught in the meshes of his own sin.
For want of discipline, he dies, 23
led astray by his own excessive folly. [c]

11:15;17:18; 20:16;22: 26–27;=27:13 Si 29:14–20 On surety rashly offered [a]

if you have guaranteed the bond of a stranger, if you have committed yourself with your lips, 2
if through words of yours you have been entrapped, do this, my child, to extricate yourself— 3
since you have put yourself in the power of your neighbour:
go, humble yourself, plead with your neighbour,
give your eyes no sleep, 4
your eyelids no rest,
break free like a gazelle from the trap, [b] 5
like a bird from the fowler's clutches.

20:4,13;22:13; 24:30–34; 30:24–25 The idler and the ant

Idler, go to the ant; 6
ponder her ways and grow wise: [c] no one gives her orders, 7
no overseer, no master,
yet all through the summer she gets her food ready, 8
and gathers her supplies at harvest time. [d]
How long do you intend to lie there, idler? 9
When are you going to rise from your sleep?
=24:33–34 A little sleep, a little drowsiness, 10
a little folding of the arms to lie back,
and poverty comes like a vagrant 11
and, like a beggar, [e] dearth.

Ps 36:1–4 Portrait of a scoundrel

A scoundrel, a vicious man, 12
he goes with a leer on his lips,

13 winking his eye, shuffling his foot, 10:10 Si 27:22
beckoning with his finger.
14 Trickery in his heart, always scheming evil,
he sows dissension.
15 Disaster will overtake him sharply for this,
suddenly, irretrievably, he will be broken.

Seven things abhorrent to God[f]

16 There are six things that Yahweh hates, seven that he abhors:
17 a haughty look, a lying tongue,
hands that shed innocent blood, 18 a heart that weaves wicked plots,
feet that hurry to do evil, 1:16 19 a false witness who lies with every breath,
and one who sows dissension among brothers.

More fatherly advice

20 Keep your father's precept, my child, =1:8
do not spurn your mother's teaching.
21 Bind them ever to your heart, =3:3
tie them round your neck.
22 While you are active, they will guide you, 3:23–24
when you fall asleep, they will watch over you,
when you wake up, they will converse with you.

23 For the precept is a lamp, Ps 119:105
the teaching is a light;
correction and discipline are the way to life, 10:17 2:16–19; 5:2–20 •Mt 5:28 24 preserving you from the woman of bad character, from the wheedling talk of a woman who belongs to another.
25 Do not covet her beauty in your heart or let her captivate you with the play of her eyes; 26 a prostitute can be bought for a hunk of bread,
but a married woman aims to snare a precious life.[g] 27 Can a man carry fire inside his shirt without setting his clothes alight?
28 Can you walk on red-hot coals
without burning your feet?
29 Just so, the man who makes love to his neighbour's wife:
no one who touches her will get off unpunished.
30 People attach but little blame to a thief who steals only to satisfy his hunger;

b. Metaphors for the lawful wife. The condemnation of adultery, 2:16b, is now complemented by this eulogy of marital fidelity and of the lawful wife, vv. 15–18[a] and vv. 18[b]–19. For further passages in praise of the ideal wife, a gift from God and the consolation of her husband, see 18:22; 19:14 (see by contrast, 11:22; 19:13; 21:9,19; 25:24; 27:15; 31:3) and particularly the enthusiastic commendation of the perfect wife with which the book ends, 31:10–31. Perhaps here too, as in 31:10seq., behind the characteristics of the lawful wife we should see a symbolic portrait of Wisdom personified. In the context of ch. 1–9, adultery and married fidelity would, according to the prophetic tradition, see Ho 1:2b, stand respectively for religious apostasy and faithfulness to God and his Law as the source of wisdom.

c. The four recommendations that follow, 6:1–5,6–11,12–15,16–19, interrupt the sage's discourse, which resumes at 6:20.

6 a. Surety was practised in Israel from ancient times. The earliest proverbs contain warnings against its abuse, though the later Si commends it as a charitable work.

b. 'from the trap' Gk; 'from the hand' Hebr.

c. A knowledge of nature is part of the sage's intellectual equipment, see 30:24–31; 1 K 5:13; etc.

d. Gk adds 'or go to the bee and see how diligent she is and how considerable the work she does. Kings and commoners take what she yields for their health; she is sought after and revered by all; her strength may be feeble, but because she does homage to wisdom she wins respect.'

e. 'beggar', lit. 'man hoping for a tip' 'ish maggan conj.; Hebr. 'ish magen 'armed man'.

f. Numerical proverb, see 30:15e.

g. The adulterous woman is more dangerous than the prostitute: the latter is content with a cash payment, the former demands a man's whole life.

Ex 22:1–8 yet even he, if caught, will have to repay sevenfold 31
and hand over all his family resources. [h]
But the adulterer has no sense; 32
he works his own destruction.
All he will get is blows and contempt, 33
and dishonour never to be blotted out.
27:4 For jealousy inflames the husband 34
who will show no mercy when the day comes for revenge;
he will not consider any compensation; 35
lavish what gifts you may, he will not be placated.

7 My child, keep my words, 1
and treasure my precepts,
4:4;8:35 keep my precepts and you will live, 2
keep my teaching as the apple of your eye.
Dt 6:8 Bind these to your fingers, 3
=3:3 write them on the tablet of your heart.
6:20 Say to Wisdom, 'You are my sister!' 4
Call Understanding your relation,
=2:16b to save yourself from the woman that belongs to another, 5 from the stranger, with her seductive words.

While I was at the window of my house, 6
I was looking out through the lattice and I saw, among the callow youths, 7
I noticed among the lads,
one boy who had no sense.
Going along the lane, near the corner where she lives, 8
he reaches the path to her house, at twilight when day is declining, 9
at dead of night and in the dark.
Gn 38:19 And look, a woman is coming to meet him, 10
dressed like a prostitute, false of heart.
She is loud and brazen; 11
5:6 her feet cannot rest at home.
Once in the street, once in the square, 12
23:27–28 she lurks at every corner.
She catches hold of him, she kisses him, 13
5:3 the bold-faced creature says to him,
'I had to offer a communion sacrifice, 14
I have discharged my vows today;
that is why I came out to meet you, 15
Sg 3:2seq. to look for you, and now I have found you.
I have spread coverlets over my divan, 16
embroidered stuff, Egyptian material,
I have sprinkled my bed with myrrh, 17
with aloes and cinnamon.
Come on, we'll make love as much as we like, till morning. 18
Let us enjoy the delights of love!
For my husband is not at home, 19
he has gone on a very long journey, taking his moneybags with him; 20
he will not be back till the moon is full.'
With her persistent coaxing she overcomes him, 21
lures him on with her wheedling patter.
Forthwith he follows her, 22
like an ox on its way to the slaughterhouse,

like a madman on his way to the stocks, [a] 23 until an arrow pierces him to the liver, like the bird that dashes into the net Qo 7:26;9:12
without realising that its life is at stake.
24 And now, son, listen to me,
pay attention to the words I have to say:
25 do not let your heart stray into her ways,
or wander into her paths;
26 she has done so many to death,
and the strongest have all been her victims.
27 Her house is the way to Sheol,
the descent to the courts of death.

Wisdom speaks again [a] 1:20–33

1 8 Is not Wisdom calling?
Is not Understanding raising her voice?
2 On the heights overlooking the road,
at the crossways, she takes her stand;
3 by the gates, at the entrance to the city, on the access-roads, she cries out, [b] Jn 7:37 4 'I am calling to you, all people,
my words are addressed to all humanity.
5 Simpletons, learn how to behave, fools, come to your senses. [c]
6 Listen, I have something important to tell you,
when I speak, my words are right.
7 My mouth proclaims the truth,
for evil is abhorrent to my lips.
8 All the words from my mouth are upright,
nothing false there, nothing crooked, 9 everything plain, if you can understand, straight, if you have acquired knowledge.
10 Accept my discipline rather than silver, 3:14;16:16

h. Though excused by hunger, the thief must restore with interest. Ex 22:1–8 prescribes double restitution. Here sevenfold is an arbitrary figure to emphasise how costly restitution can be.

7 a. Uncertain line. Gk reads: (22c) 'like a dog caught in a noose, (23a) like a stag with an arrow stuck in its liver'.

8 a. Ch 8–9 mark the height of the teaching of Proverbs on wisdom, see 8:22e. The same theme is developed in later books: Si 1:1–20; 24; Ws 6–9 (see also Jb 28).

b. Perhaps like a travelling salesman, who attracts custom by boasting of the quality of his wares.

c. lit. 'understand the heart', i.e. 'intellect'; 'has no sense', lit. 'has no heart'.

d. v. 17 is sometimes read before v. 15 to improve the logic of the argument.

Be open with the wise, he grows wiser still,
teach the upright, he will gain yet more.
The first principle of wisdom is the fear of Yahweh,
What God's holy ones know—this is understanding.
For by me your days will be multiplied,
and your years of life increased.
Are you wise? You are wise to your own good.
A mocker? The burden is yours alone.

A silly woman apes Wisdom [c]

9:1–6

A silly woman acts on impulse,
is foolish and knows nothing.
She sits at the door of her house,
on a throne high up in the city,
calling to the passers-by,
who are walking straight past on their way,
'Who is simple? Turn aside, come over here.'
To the fool she says,
'Stolen waters are sweet,
and bread tastes better when eaten in secret.'

e. The concept of a personified wisdom, a mere literary device in Pr 14:1, was further developed in the post-exilic period, when polytheism was no longer a threat to true religion. In Jb 28 and Ba 3:9–4:4 wisdom is represented as a thing distinct from God or human beings, desirable in itself; in Pr 1:20–23; 3:16–19 and 8–9 it is represented as a person. Here Wisdom herself reveals her origin (created before all other creatures, vv. 22–26), her active part in the creation, vv. 27–30, and the function she discharges among human beings in leading them to God, vv. 35–36. This doctrine will be further developed in Si; Si 1:1–10 recalls Jb 28, but Si 4:11–19; 14:20–15:10 and especially 24:1–29 (see Si 24:1a) are in line with Pr 8. Wisdom is personified in all these texts but, as in the case of the Word and the Spirit, it is hard to discern how much is poetic device, how much the expression of older forms of religious thought, how much the appreciation of newly revealed truths. Finally, Ws 7:22–8:1 gives the impression that wisdom, an 'outpouring of God's glory', has a share in the divine nature, although the abstract terms used may apply equally well to a divine attribute as to a distinct personality. The doctrine of wisdom, thus outlined in the OT, will be resumed in the NT which will give it new and decisive completion by applying it to the person of Christ. Jesus is referred to as Wisdom itself, the Wisdom of God, Mt 11:19 par.; Lk 11:49, cf. Mt 23:34–36; 1 Co 1:24–30; like Wisdom, he participates in the creation and preservation of the world, Col 1:16–17, and the protection of Israel, 1 Co 10:4, cf. Ws 10:17seq. Finally, John in his prologue attributes the characteristics of creative Wisdom to the Word, and his Gospel throughout represents Christ as the Wisdom of God. See Jn 6:35t. Hence, Christian tradition from St Justin onwards sees in the Wisdom of the OT the person of Christ himself.

f. The Hebr. verb (qanani) is translated 'has created me' by Gk, Syr., Targ., cf. Si 1:4,9; 24:8,9. The translation 'acquired me' or 'possessed me' (Aquila, Symm., Theod.) was adopted by Jerome (Vulg.), probably with an eye to the heretic Arius who maintained that the Word (= Wisdom) was a created being. The expression 'first-fruits of his fashioning' (lit. 'first-fruits of his way' or 'of his ways', according to the versions) is linked to the title 'first born of every creature' given to Christ by Paul, Col 1:15, and to the title 'principle of God's creation', Rv 3:14.

g. 'anointed' according to one possible sense of nasak. Some prefer the usual meaning 'pour', 'found' (as of metal). Others correct it, to derive the word from the root sakak and understand 'I was hidden' or 'held in reserve'.

h. The watery abyss on which rest both the earth's disc and the canopy of heaven, see Gn 1; Jb 38; Ps 104.

i. A rare Hebr. word. The meaning 'artisan, artist' (whence 'master craftsman') is attested by Jr 52:15; Sg 7:2, and confirmed by the Gk. Wisdom collaborates with the Creator, cf. Ws 7:22. Another translation, based on a slight correction, makes Wisdom the 'beloved child' or 'faithful disciple' of the Creator.

9 a. Indications of a wealthy household with interior courtyard. The number seven here is symbolic of perfection.

b. Aphorisms subsequently inserted as a commentary on v. 6.

c. Folly is now personified in her turn, and her activities contrasted with those of wisdom, 9:1–6. The meaning of the parable is plain; there are two ways open to human beings, of virtue or of vice (4:18–19; Dt 30:15–20; Ps 1; see also Didache, Pseudo-Barnabas, and Qumran MSS); there are two invitations offered to human beings, two banquets they may attend. They must choose for themselves, cf. Rm 12:21; 2 Co 6:14seq.; Tt 1:15.

But the fool does not know that this is where the Shades are 18

II: THE MAJOR COLLECTION ATTRIBUTED TO SOLOMON[a]

10 The proverbs of Solomon. 1

=15:20; 17:25;19:13 A wise child is a father's joy,
a foolish child a mother's grief.

=11:4;12:28 Si 5:8 Treasures wickedly come by give no benefit, 2
but uprightness brings delivery from death.

Ps 34:9 Yahweh does not let the upright go hungry, 3
but he thwarts the greed of the wicked.

15:19;19:15 A slack hand brings poverty, 4
but the hand of the diligent brings wealth.

20:4 Reaping at harvest-time is the mark of the prudent, 5 6:9–11 sleeping at harvest-time is the sign of the worthless.

what the honest say keeps them safe. 14:3

7 Once thrown down, the wicked are no more, Mt 7:24–27
but the house of the upright stands firm.

8 A person is praised for prudence,
anyone of tortuous heart incurs contempt.

9 Better a common fellow who has a slave than someone who gives himself airs and has nothing to eat. Si 10:27

10 The upright has compassion on his animals, 27:23
but the heart of the wicked is ruthless.

11 Whoever works his land shall have bread and to spare, =28:19
but anyone who chases fantasies has no sense.

12 The godless delights in the snare of the wicked,
but the root of the upright bears fruit.

13 In the sin of the lips lies a disastrous trap, 10:19;18:7
but the upright finds a way out of misfortune. 24:16

14 Abundance of good things is the fruit of the lips; 13:2;18:20 labour brings its own return. Lk 6:37–38

15 Fools think the way they go is straight,
the wise listens to advice.

16 The fool shows anger straightaway,
the discreet conceals dislike. 2 S 13:20seq., 32

17 To tell the truth is to further justice, 14:25
a false witness is nothing but deceit.

11 a. Gk reads 'A gracious woman does honour to her husband, she who scorns virtue is a throne of dishonour. Indolent people lack resources, violent people acquire riches.'

b. 'he who establishes' kan conj.; Hebr. ken 'thus'.

c. 'Be sure of it', lit. 'hand for hand': perhaps an allusion to shaking hands on a bargain.

d. The favour of Yahweh who rewards the upright, cf. 12:2.

e. Gk, possibly embarrassed by an alternative meaning: 'the wise take life away', reads 'the wicked will be prematurely carried off'.

15:4 Thoughtless words can pierce like a sword, 18
but the tongue of the wise brings healing.

Sincere lips endure for ever, 19
the lying tongue lasts only a moment.

Deceit is in the heart of the schemer, 20
Mt 5:9 joy with those who give counsels of peace.

11:21 Ps 91:10 No harm can come to the upright, 21
but the wicked are swamped by misfortunes.

11:20 Lying lips are abhorrent to Yahweh; 22
dear to him those who make truth their way of life.

10:19;13:16 The discreet keeps knowledge hidden, 23
the heart of fools proclaims their folly.

For the diligent hand, authority; 24
for the slack hand, forced labour.

15:13 Worry makes a heart heavy, 25
a kindly word makes it glad.

The upright shows the way to a friend; [a] 26
the way of the wicked leads them astray.

The idle has no game to roast; [b] 27
diligence is anyone's most precious possession.

10:16 Rm 6:21–23 In the way of uprightness is life, 28
the ways of the vengeful lead to death.

13 A wise child listens [a] to a father's discipline, 1 a cynic will not listen to reproof.

12:14;18:20 The fruit of the mouth provides a good meal, 2
but the soul of the treacherous feeds on violence.

21:23 Si 28:25–26 Jm 3:2–12 A guard on the mouth makes life secure, [b] 3 whoever talks too much is lost.

6:6–11 The idler hungers but has no food; 4 hard workers get their fill.

The upright hates a lying word, 5
but the wicked slanders and defames.

Uprightness stands guard over one whose way is honest, 6 sin causes the ruin of the wicked. [c]

Rv 3:17 Lk 12:21,33 There are some who, on nothing, pretend to be rich, 7 some, with great wealth, pretend to be poor.

15:16 The ransom for life is a person's wealth; 8
but the poor will not hear the reproof.

Ps 97:11 The light of the upright is joyful, 9
the lamp of the wicked goes out.

Insolence breeds only disputes, 10 =11:2 wisdom lies with those who take advice.

20:21 A sudden [d] fortune will dwindle away, 11
accumulation little by little is the way to riches.

12 Hope deferred makes the heart sick, desire fulfilled is a tree of life. 3:28 13:19

13 Contempt for the word is self-destructive, respect for the commandment wins salvation.

14 The teaching of the wise is a life-giving fountain
for eluding the snares of death. =14:27

15 Good sense wins favour,
but the way of the treacherous is hard.

16 Anyone of discretion acts by the light of knowledge, the fool parades his folly. 12:23 Qo 10:3

17 A bad messenger falls[e] into misfortune,
a trusty messenger brings healing. 25:13

18 Whoever rejects discipline wins poverty and scorn; 12:1
for anyone who accepts correction: honour.

19 Desire fulfilled is sweet to the soul; 13:12
fools are loth to turn—from evil.[f] 29:27

20 Whoever walks with the wise becomes wise, Si 6:33–34
whoever mixes with fools will be ruined. 14:7

21 Evil will pursue the sinner,
but good will reward the upright.

22 The good bequeaths a heritage to children's children, the wealth of the sinner is stored away for the upright. 28:8 Jb 27:16–17

23 Though the farms of the poor yield much food, Qo 2:26h
some perish for lack of justice.[g]

24 Whoever fails to use the stick hates his child; 3:12+;22:15; 23:13–14; 29:15–17
whoever is free with correction loves him. Ep 6:4

25 The upright eats to the full,
the belly of the wicked goes empty.

1 14 Wisdom builds herself a house;[a] 8:22e;9:1;24:3
with her own hands Folly pulls it down.

2 Whoever keeps to an honest course fears Yahweh, whoever deserts his paths shows contempt for him.

Pride sprouts in the mouth of the fool,
the lips of the wise keep them safe.[b]

4 No oxen, empty manger;
strong bull, much cash.

12 a. 'shows the way': meaning uncertain. The particular verb-form occurs only once, but it is generally thought to be derived from the verb 'to explore'.
b. Since he has not caught anything.

13 a. 'listens' restored to harmonise with the second line.
b. Possibly a play on words: the term translated here as 'life' can also mean 'throat' and 'soul'.
c. 'the wicked' conj.; 'wickedness' Hebr.
d. 'sudden' Gk; '(product) of futility' Hebr.
e. Unless we should emend to mean 'causes to fall', as the following line might imply. The Gk, however, favours the MT: 'A headstrong king will come to grief.'
f. There is no very obvious connection between the two parts of the v. Text perhaps corrupt, or incomplete.
g. Here too the text seems to be corrupt. Gk: 'the upright live to enjoy their wealth for many a year, the wicked come to a sudden end.'

14 a. lit. 'Wisdom' conj.; 'The wisest people', Hebr., though the verb is in the singular.
b. Text uncertain.

The truthful witness tells no lies, 5
the false witness lies with every breath. [c]

In vain the mocker looks for wisdom, 6 knowledge comes easy to the intelligent.

13:20 Keep well clear of the fool, 7
you will not find wise lips there.

With people of discretion, wisdom keeps a watch over their conduct, 8 but the folly of fools leads them astray.

Fools mock at the sacrifice for sin, 9
but favour resides among the honest.

The heart knows its own grief best, 10
nor can a stranger share its joy.

Jb 8:22 The house of the wicked will be destroyed, 11
the tent of the honest will prosper.

=16:25 There are ways that some think straight, 12
but they lead in the end to death.

Qo 2:1–2; 7:2–6 Lk 6:25 Even in laughter the heart finds sadness, 13 and joy makes way for sorrow.

The miscreant will reap the reward of his conduct, 14
and the good the reward of his deeds. [d]

The simpleton believes any message, 15
a person of discretion treads a careful path.

The wise fears evil and avoids it, 16
the fool is insolent and conceited.

14:29;29:22 A quick-tempered person commits rash acts, 17
but a schemer is detestable.

Simpletons have folly for their portion, 18 14:24 people of discretion knowledge for their crown.

The evil bow down before the good, 19
the wicked, at the gates of the upright.

19:4–7 Si 6:8–12 The poor is detestable even to a friend, 20
but many are they who love someone rich.

11:12 One who despises the needy is at fault, 21
Ps 41:1 one who takes pity on the poor is blessed.

Plan evil—isn't this to go astray? 22
Those who plan for good can earn faithful love and constancy.

Hard work always yields its profit, 23
idle talk brings only want.

14:18 The crown of the wise is their riches; 24
the folly of fools is folly.

12:17 A truthful witness saves lives, 25
whoever utters lies is a deceiver. [e]

19:23 In the fear of Yahweh is powerful security; 26
for his children he is a refuge.

27 The fear of Yahweh is a life-giving spring
for eluding the snares of death. =13:14

28 Large population, monarch's glory;
dwindling population, ruler's ruin.

29 Mastery of temper is high proof of intelligence, 14:17;15:18; 19:11 a quick temper makes folly worse than ever.

30 The life of the body is a tranquil heart, 17:22
but envy is a cancer in the bones.

31 To oppress the weak insults the Creator, 17:5
kindness to the needy honours the Creator.

32 For evil-doing, the wicked will be flung headlong,
but in integrity[f] the upright will find refuge.

33 Wisdom resides in an understanding heart;
she is not to be found in the hearts of fools.[g]

34 Uprightness makes a nation great,
by sin whole races are disgraced.

35 A king shows favour to a wise minister, Gn 41:37–44 Si 8:8 Mt 24:45 but anger to one who shames him.

1 15 A mild answer turns away wrath, 1 S 25:32–33 1 K 12:12–19 sharp words stir up anger.

2 The tongue of the wise makes knowledge welcome, Qo 10:12
the mouth of a fool spews folly.

3 The eyes of Yahweh are everywhere: 5:21;15:11;16:2 Ps 7:9;139:1seq. Zc 4:10 12:18 observing the wicked and the good.

4 The tongue that soothes is a tree of life;
the perverse tongue, a breaker of hearts.[a]

5 Whoever spurns a father's discipline is a fool, 12:1;13:8
whoever accepts correction is discreet.

6 In the house of the upright there is no lack of treasure,
the earnings of the wicked are fraught with anxiety.

7 The lips of the wise spread knowledge,
not so the hearts of fools.

8 The sacrifice of the wicked is abhorrent to Yahweh, =21:27 1 S 15:22d
dear to him is the prayer of the honest.

9 The conduct of the wicked is abhorrent to Yahweh, 11:20;12:22
but he loves the person whose goal is uprightness.

10 Correction is severe for one who leaves the way;
whoever hates being reprimanded will die. 12:1;15:32

11 Sheol and Perdition lie open to Yahweh;
how much more the human heart! 11:20+ Jn 2:25

15 a. lit. 'perversity in her is breaking of spirit'.

9:8 The mocker does not care to be reprimanded, 12
and will not choose the wise as companions.

12:25 Glad heart means happy face, 13
Si 13:25 where the heart is sad the spirit is broken.

18:15 The heart of the wise seeks knowledge, 14
a fool's mouth feeds on folly.

For the poor every day is evil, 15
Si 30:25 for the joyous heart it is always festival time.

13:8;16:8;17:1 Better to have little and with it fear of Yahweh 16
Ps 37:16 than immense wealth and with it anxiety.

17:1 Better a dish of herbs when love is there 17
than a fattened ox and hatred to go with it.

14:29;28:25; The hot-headed provokes disputes, 18
Mt 5:9 the equable allays dissension.

The way of the lazy is like a thorny hedge, 19
the path of the honest is a broad highway.

=10:1;17:25; A wise child is a father's joy; 20
23:22 only a brute despises his mother.

Folly appeals to someone without sense, 21
a person of understanding goes straight forward.

11:14 Without deliberation plans come to nothing. 22
Plans succeed where counsellors are many.

Upright lips are welcome to a king,
he loves someone of honest words. — 14:35;22:11

The king's wrath is the herald of death,
but the wise will appease it. — 19:12;20:2

When the king's face brightens it spells life, his favour is like the rain in spring. — Ps 4:6d 19:12

Better gain wisdom than gold, choose understanding in preference to silver. — 3:14;8:19

To turn from evil is the way of the honest;
whoever watches the path keeps life safe.

Pride goes before destruction,
a haughty spirit before a fall. — 11:2;15:33

Better be humble with the poor than share the booty with the proud. — Is 57:15

Whoever listens closely to the word finds happiness;
whoever trusts Yahweh is blessed. — 13:13 Ps 2:12;40:4

b. The expressions 'upwards' and 'below', omitted by Gk, could be late glosses. The 'path of life' seems to mean prolongation of earthly life as opposed to death or descent to Sheol. Later it was understood as 'the path which leads to heavenly blessedness', but such a notion did not enter into the theology of that period.

16 a. Man proposes, God disposes.

b. The wicked has been created to be an object-lesson in the working of divine justice.

c. Since the king pronounces judgement in the name of God, see 2 S 14:18–20; 1 K 3:4–28; vv. 10–15 (except v. 11) are royal proverbs.

12 Like the roaring of a lion, the anger of a king, 16:14–15; =20:2
but like dew on the grass his favour.

13 A foolish child is a disaster for the father, 17:25
the bickerings of a wife are like an ever-dripping gutter. =27:15

14 From fathers comes inheritance of house and wealth, from Yahweh a wife who is discreet. 18:22;31:10seq.

15 Idleness lulls to sleep, 10:4
the feckless soul will go hungry.

16 Keeping the commandment is self-preservation, Lk 10:28;11:28 but whoever despises these ways [b] will die.

18 a. Text uncertain: solitude commended or condemned?
b. Probably not a pessimistic view of justice but a reference to the 'judgement of God', cf. 16:33.
c. Text uncertain. Gk is very different: 'A brother helped by his brother is a high and fortified city, he is as strong as a royal rampart.'
d. 'There are' yesh conj.; Hebr. 'ish 'a man'.

19 a. Fragmentary proverb, probably lacking first line.
b. Either whoever does not watch over his own conduct, or whoever does not walk in the way indicated by 'the commandment' (16[a]).

28:27
↗Mt 25:40
Whoever is kind to the poor is lending to Yahweh 17
who will repay him the kindness done.

Dt 21:18–21
While there is hope for him, chastise your child, 18
but do not get so angry as to kill him. [c]

The violent lays himself open to a penalty; 19 spare him, and you aggravate his crime. [d]

15:32
Listen to advice, accept correction, 20
to be the wiser in the time to come.

16:1,9
Ps 33:11
Many are the plans in the human heart, 21
but the purpose of Yahweh—that stands firm.

Faithful love is what people look for in a person; 22
they prefer the poor to a liar.

14:27
The fear of Yahweh leads to life, 23
it brings food and shelter, without fear of evil.

=26:15
Into the dish the idler dips his hand, 24
but bring it back to his mouth he cannot.

Strike a cynic, and simpletons will be more wary; 25 9:8
reprove the intelligent and he will understand your meaning.

20:20;23:22;
30:17
Ex 21:17+
He who ill-treats his father and drives out his mother 26
is a child both worthless and depraved.

Give up listening to instruction, my child, 27
if you mean to stray from words of knowledge. [e]

A perjured witness holds the law in scorn; 28 =15:28
the mouth of the wicked feasts on evil-doing.

Punishments were made for mockers, 29 10:13
and beating for the backs of fools.

23:29–35
20 Wine is reckless, liquor rowdy; 1 unwise is anyone whom it seduces.

=19:12
Like the roaring of a lion is the fury of a king; 2
whoever provokes him sins against himself.

It is praiseworthy to stop short of a law-suit; 3 14:17,29
only a fool flies into a rage. [a]

In autumn the idler does not plough, 4 at harvest time he looks—nothing there!

18:4
The resources of the human heart are like deep waters: 5
an understanding person has only to draw on them.

27:2
Mt 6:2,5,16
Many describe themselves as people of faithful love, 6
but who can find someone really to be trusted?

The upright whose ways are blameless— 7 blessed the children who come after!

16:10
Jb 4:17+
Ps 51
1 Jn 1:8–10
A king enthroned on the judgement seat 8
with one look scatters [b] all that is evil.

Who can say, 'I have cleansed my heart, 9
I am purified of my sin'?

10 One weight here, another there; here one measure, there another: 11:1+
both alike are abhorrent to Yahweh.

11 A young man's character appears in what he does,
if his behaviour is pure and straight.

12 Ear that hears, eye that sees, Ex 4:11
Yahweh has made both of these. Ps 94:9

13 Do not love sleep or you will know poverty;
keep your eyes open and have your fill of food.

14 'No good, no good!' says the buyer,
but he goes off congratulating himself.

15 There are gold and jewels of every type, 3:13–15
but a priceless ornament is speech informed by knowledge.

16 Take the man's clothes! He has gone surety for a stranger. 6:1a;=27:13
Take a pledge from him to the profit of persons unknown!

17 Bread is sweet when it is got by fraud, Jb 20:12–14
but later the mouth is full of grit.

18 Plans are matured by consultation;
take wise advice when waging war. 24:6

19 The bearer of gossip lets out secrets; 11:13+
do not mingle with chatterers.

20 Whoever curses father or mother 19:26+ will have his lamp put out in the deepest darkness. Ex 20:12; 21:17+

21 Property quickly come by at first 13:11
will not be blessed in the end.

22 Do not say, 'I shall repay evil'; 25:22+ put your hope in Yahweh and he will keep you safe. Rm 12:17
1 Th 5:15

23 One weight here, another there: this is abhorrent to Yahweh, 11:1+ false scales are not good.

24 Yahweh guides human steps: 16:9;19:21
how could anyone discern the way to go? ‖Ps 37:23

25 Anyone is trapped who cries 'Dedicated!' Dt 23:22seq.
and begins to reflect only after the vow. Qo 5:3–5
Mt 15:5par.

26 A wise king winnows the wicked and makes the wheel pass over them. [c]

27 The human spirit [d] is the lamp of Yahweh— Mt 6:22
searching the deepest self. ↗1 Co 2:11

28 Faithful love and loyalty mount guard over the king, Ps 61:7
his throne is founded on saving justice. Is 16:5

c. This proverb either shows a tempering of the legal code, see Dt 21:18–21, or is merely warning against over-hasty punishment.

d. Text very uncertain. The idea seems to be that by neglecting to punish the violent, you only make their condition worse.

e. Meaning uncertain. Gk reads, 'A son who stops paying attention to what his father teaches him will soon be thinking of bad words.'

20 a. lit. 'but every fool breaks out'.

b. Or 'winnows', 'sifts', (by distinguishing between just and unjust suits) cf. 20:26.

c. Reference to threshing grain, for which a sort of sledge, sometimes on wheels, was and is still used, see Is 28:28.

d. The 'spirit', the life principle which God breathes into a human being after forming the body, see Gn 2:7.

16:31 The pride of the young is their strength, 29
the ornament of the old, grey hairs.

Wounding strokes are good medicine for evil, 30
blows have an effect on the inmost self. [c]

21 Like flowing water is a king's heart in Yahweh's hand; 1 he directs it wherever he pleases.

=16:2 All actions are straight in the doer's own eyes, 2
Lk 16:15; 18:9–14 but it is Yahweh who weighs hearts.

1 S 15:22d Am 5:21–24, 21n To do what is upright and just 3 is more pleasing to Yahweh than sacrifice. [a]

Haughty eye, proud heart, 4
lamp of the wicked, nothing but sin. [b]

19:2 The hardworking is thoughtful, and all is gain; 5 too much haste, and all that comes of it is want.

To make a fortune with the help of a lying tongue: 6
such is the idle fantasy of those who look for death.

The violence of the wicked proves their ruin, 7
for they refuse to do what is right.

The way of the felon is devious, 8
the conduct of the innocent straight.

19:13;21:19; =25:24 Si 25:16 Better the corner of a roof to live on 9 than a house shared with a quarrelsome woman.

The soul of the wicked is intent on evil, 10
to such a person no neighbour can ever do right.

=19:25 When a cynic is punished, simpletons grow wiser, 11
but someone of understanding acquires knowledge by instruction.

The Upright One [c] watches the house of the wicked; 12
he hurls the wicked to destruction.

Mt 6:15 Jm 2:13 Whoever refuses to listen to the cry of the weak, 13 will in turn plead and not be heard.

17:8,23f Anger is mollified by a covert gift, 14
raging fury by a present under cover of the cloak.

Doing what is right fills the upright with joy 15
but evil-doers with terror.

Whoever strays far from the way of prudence 16
will rest in the assembly of shadows.

23:20–21 Pleasure-lovers stay poor, 17
no one will grow rich who loves wine and good living. [d]

The wicked is a ransom for the upright; 18
and the law-breaker for the honest. [c]

21:9+ Better to live in a desert land 19
than with a quarrelsome and irritable woman.

The wise has valuables and oil at home, 20
but a fool soon runs through both.

21 Whoever pursues uprightness and faithful love will find life, uprightness and honour. Mt 5:6

22 A sage can scale a garrisoned city and shatter the rampart on which it relied. Qo 9:13–15

23 Watch kept over mouth and tongue keeps the watcher safe from disaster. 13:3

24 Insolent, haughty—the name is 'Cynic';
overweening pride marks such behaviour.

25 The idler's desires are the death of him, since his hands will do no work. 13:4;20:4

26 All day long the godless is racked by desire,[f]
the upright gives without ever refusing. Lk 6:30,34–35

27 The sacrifice of the wicked is abhorrent,[g] above all if it is offered for bad motives. =15:8 Si 7:9

28 The false witness will perish, but no one who knows how to listen will ever be silenced. 19:5,9 29 The wicked man's strength shows on his face,

but the honest it is whose steps are firm.

30 No wisdom, no understanding, no advice is worth anything before Yahweh.[h] Is 8:10

31 Fit out the cavalry for the day of battle, but the victory is Yahweh's. Ps 20:7 Ho 1:7+

1 22 Fame is preferable to great wealth, favour, to silver and gold. Qo 7:1 Si 41:12

2 Rich and poor rub shoulders,
Yahweh has made them both. =29:13 Jb 31:15 Ws 6:7 Mt 5:45

3 The discreet sees danger and takes shelter,
simpletons go ahead and pay the penalty. =27:12

4 The reward of humility is the fear of Yahweh,
and riches, honour and life.

5 Thorns and snares line the path of the wilful,
whoever values life will stay at a distance.

6 Give a lad a training suitable to his character[a] and, even when old, he will not go back on it. Si 6:18

7 The rich lords it over the poor,
the borrower is the lender's slave.

e. This seems to be a commendation of corporal punishment, but the text of this proverb is uncertain.

21 a. This insistence on sincerity of heart as the necessary condition of all ritual observance recurs throughout the OT. See Is 1:11f; Jr 7:21–23; Ho 6:6; Am 5:22seq.

b. lit. 'the torch (ner) of the wicked is sin' conj.; 'the labour (nir) of the wicked is sin' Hebr., but the text is uncertain.

c. i.e. Yahweh, if the text is not corrupt.

d. lit. 'wine and oil'.

e. Cf. 11:8. The proverb apparently assumes that there must be a certain quota of misery in this world from which, however, God shields the upright and to which he condemns the wicked.

f. 'The godless is racked by desire' Gk; 'he covets covetousness' Hebr.

g. The Gk reads 'abhorrent to Yahweh' as in 15:8.

h. i.e. 'do not exist in his presence' or 'cannot prevail against him'.

22 a. lit. 'on the mouth (the entrance) of his way'. Some interpret as 'from his earliest steps'. Gk omits the whole v.

12:14 Jb 4:8
Whoever sows injustice reaps disaster, 8
and the rod of such anger will disappear. [b]

19:17;28:27 Ps 112:9 Lk 14:13–14
A kindly eye will earn a blessing, 9
such a person shares out food with the poor.

26:20
Expel the mocker and strife goes too, 10
law-suits and dislike die down.

↗Mt 5:8 16:13
Whoever loves the pure of heart 11
and is gracious of speech has the king for a friend.

Yahweh's eyes protect knowledge, 12
but he confounds deceitful speeches.

=26:13
'There is a lion outside,' says the idler, 13
'I shall be killed in the street!'

5:2+
The mouth of an adulterous woman is a deep pit, 14
into it falls the man whom Yahweh rebukes.

Folly is anchored in the heart of a youth, 15
13:24;29:15,17 the whip of instruction will rid him of it.

Harsh treatment enriches the poor, 16
but a gift impoverishes the rich. [c]

III: A SELECTION FROM THE SAGES

Give ear, listen to the sayings of the sages, 17
and apply your heart to what I know, for it will be a delight to keep them deep within you 18
to have them all ready on your lips.
So that your trust may be in Yahweh, 19
it is you whom I wish to instruct today.

Have I not written for you thirty chapters [d] 20
of advice and knowledge,
to make you know the certainty of true sayings, 21
so that you can return with sound answers to those who sent you?

Do not despoil the weak, for he is weak, 22
Ex 23:6 and do not oppress the poor at the gate, [e]
23:11 for Yahweh takes up their cause, 23
Is 33:1 and extorts the life of their extortioners.

Do not make friends with one who gives way to anger, 24
Si 8:15 make no one quick-tempered a companion of yours, for fear you learn such behaviour 25
and in it find a snare for yourself.

6:1a
Do not be one of those who go guarantor, 26
who go surety for debts:
if you have no means of paying 27
your bed will be taken [f] from under you.

15:25+; =23:10 Dt 19:14
Do not displace the ancient boundary-stone 28
set by your ancestors.

You see someone alert at his business? 29

His aim will be to serve kings;
not for him the service of the obscure.

23 If you take your seat at a great man's table,
take careful note of what you have before you;
if you have a big appetite
put a knife to your throat.[a]
Do not hanker for his delicacies, =23:6
for they are deceptive food.[b]

Do not wear yourself out in quest of wealth, stop applying your mind to this.
Fix your gaze on it, and it is there no longer,
for it is able to sprout wings
like an eagle that flies off to the sky.

Do not eat the food of anyone whose eye is jealous,
do not hanker for his delicacies. 23:3
For what he is really thinking about is himself:
'Eat and drink,' he tells you, but his heart is not with you.[c]
You will spit out whatever you have eaten and find your compliments wasted.

Do not waste words on a fool, Mt 7:6
who will not appreciate the shrewdness of your remarks.

Do not displace the ancient boundary-stone,[d] =22:28+
or encroach on orphans' lands, for they have a powerful avenger,[e] Ex 22:21–23
and he will take up their cause against you. 22:23

Apply your heart to discipline and your ears to instructive sayings.

Do not be chary of correcting a child, 19:18 a stroke of the cane is not likely to be fatal. Si 30:1–13
Give him a stroke of the cane,
you will save his soul from Sheol.

My child, if your heart is wise,
then my own heart is glad,
and my inmost self rejoices
when from your lips come honest words.

Do not let your heart be envious of sinners 3:31;=24:14 but remain steady every day in the fear of Yahweh; Ps 37:1–4;73:3
for there is a future,
and your hope will not come to nothing.

b. Meaning uncertain. Gk: 'and he will pay the penalty of his deeds'.

c. This proverb expresses either a natural law by which hardship alone stimulates effort and procures success, or a religious faith in the justice of Yahweh who will reverse the situations of rich and poor.

d. 'thirty (sheloshim) chapters': 'chapters' is supplied and 'thirty' emended; Hebr. has 'day before yesterday' shileshom or, with vowel emendation, shalishim, which has no sense. The reference to thirty chapters presumably comes from the Wisdom of Amenemophis, on which this whole passage is modelled: 'Consider these thirty chapters, they give pleasure, they instruct.'

e. At the city gate, where justice was administered and public business transacted, see 24:7.

f. 'will be taken' Gk; 'why should he take?' Hebr.

23 a. Presumably 'set bounds to your gluttony'. Others interpret 'To be a glutton is to put a knife to your throat' (i.e. to endanger your life).

b. Two very similar texts, one by Ptah-hotep and the other by Amenemophis, show that this was a common theme of Egyptian etiquette, see also Gn 43:34.

c. The first line is obscure, lit. 'as he thinks in his soul, so he is'. A contrast seems to be intended between real and expressed feelings.

d. 'The ancient boundary-stone' ('olam) should perhaps be corrected to 'the boundary-stone of the widow' ('almanah), see 15:25.

e. The avenger (go'el), see Nb 35:19c, in this case is Yahweh, cf. Pr 22:23; Jr 50:34.

Listen, my child, and be wise, 19
and guide your heart in the way.

Do not be one of those forever tippling wine 20
nor one of those who gorge themselves with meat;
21:17 for the drunkard and glutton impoverish themselves, 21 and sleepiness is clothed in rags.

19:26 Dt 21:18–21 Listen to your father from whom you are sprung, 22
do not despise your mother in her old age.
Purchase truth—never sell it— 23
wisdom, discipline, and discernment.
10:1 The father of the upright will rejoice indeed, 24
he who fathers a wise child will have joy of it.
17:25 Your father and mother will be happy, 25
and she who bore you joyful.

My child, pay attention to me, 26
let your eyes take pleasure in my way:
22:14 a prostitute is a deep pit, 27
a narrow well, the woman who belongs to another.
7:12 Yes, like a brigand, she lies in wait, 28
increasing the number of law-breakers.

For whom is pity, for whom contempt, 29
for whom is strife, for whom complaint, for whom blows struck at random,
for whom the clouded eye?
For those who linger over wine too long, 30
ever on the look-out for the blended liquors.
Ep 5:18–19 Do not gaze at wine, how red it is, 31
how it sparkles in the cup!
How smoothly it slips down the throat!
In the end its bite is like a serpent's, 32
its sting as sharp as an adder's.
Your eyes will see peculiar things, 33
you will talk nonsense from your heart.
Ps 107:26–27 You will be like someone sleeping in mid-ocean, 34 like one asleep at the mast-head.
'Struck me, have they? But I'm not hurt. 35 Beaten me? I don't feel anything.
When shall I wake up? . .
I'll ask for more of it!'

23:17 24 Do not be envious of the wicked 1
or wish for their company, for their hearts are scheming violence, 2
their lips talking of mischief.

14:1 By wisdom a house is built, 3
by understanding it is made strong;
by knowledge its storerooms are filled 4
with riches of every kind, rare and desirable.

1 S 16:7 Anyone wise is mighty in force, 5 knowledge confirms someone's strength;
Lk 14:31 for it is by strategy that you wage war, 6 =11:14 and victory depends on having many counsellors.

7 For a fool wisdom is an inaccessible fortress: [a]
at the city gate he does not open his mouth.

8 Whoever is intent on evil-doing is known as a master in cunning.

9 Folly dreams of nothing but sin,
the mocker is abhorrent.

10 If you lose heart when things go wrong, Jb 4:5
your strength is not worth much. [b]

11 Save those being dragged towards death, but can you rescue those on their way to execution? [c] 12 If you say, 'But look, we did not know,' will the Weigher of the heart pay no attention? 16:2
Will not the Guardian of your soul be aware and repay you as your deeds deserve?

13 Eat honey, my child, since it is good;
honey that drips from the comb is sweet to the taste: Ps 19:10 14 and so, for sure, will wisdom be to your soul:
find it and you will have a future =23:18
and your hope will not be cut short.

15 Do not lurk, wicked man, round the upright man's dwelling, do not despoil his house.
16 For though the upright falls seven times, he gets up again; Jb 5:19
the wicked are the ones who stumble in adversity.

17 Should your enemy fall, do not rejoice, Jb 31:29
when he stumbles do not let your heart exult:
18 for fear that Yahweh will be displeased at the sight
and turn his anger away from him.

19 Do not be indignant about the wicked, Ps 37:1
do not be envious of the evil, 20 for there is no future for the evil,
the lamp of the wicked will go out.

21 Fear Yahweh, my child, and fear the king; ↗1 P 2:17
do not ally yourself with innovators; 22 for suddenly disaster will loom for them, and who knows what ruin will seize them and their friends? [d]

IV: A FURTHER SELECTION FROM THE SAGES

23 The following are also taken from the sages:

24 a. Difficult expression. Others read 'of coral', cf. Jb 28:18; Ezk 27:16, a rare and delicate commodity which a fool would not appreciate.

b. lit. 'narrow', tzar, punning on 'wrong', tzarah.

c. A verse variously interpreted, perhaps a reference to innocent men unjustly condemned.

d. After this maxim, Gk adds five vv., apparently developing vv. 21–22:

22[a] A son who obeys the word will escape destruction, he having accepted it with good will. (?) 22[b] Let nothing untruthful be said to the king, and nothing untruthful will issue from his mouth.
22[c] The tongue of a king is a sword, not an organ of flesh, whoever falls into its power is crushed.
22[d] For once his wrath is aroused,
he destroys people, sinews and all,
22[e] he devours people's very bones and, like a flame, burns them up so that even eagles' young could not eat them.

The Gk then inserts 30:1–14.

18:5;28:21; 31:5 To show partiality in judgement is not good. [e]
Whoever tells the wicked, 'You are upright,' 24 peoples curse him, nations revile him;
but those who correct him, come out of it well, 25
on them will come a happy blessing.

Whoever returns an honest answer 26
plants a kiss on the lips.

Si 7:15 Plan what you want on the open ground, 27
make your preparation in the field;
then go and build your house.

Do not bear witness lightly against your neighbour, [f] 28
nor deceive with your lips.

Mt 6:12, 14–15 Do not say, 'I will treat my neighbour as my neighbour treated me; 29
I will repay everyone what each has earned.'

26:13–16 By the idler's field I was passing, 30
by the vineyard of a man who had no sense, there it all lay, deep in thorns, 31
entirely overgrown with weeds,
and its stone wall broken down.
And as I gazed I pondered, 32
I drew this lesson from the sight,
=6:10–11 'A little sleep, a little drowsiness, 33
a little folding of the arms to lie back
and poverty comes like a vagrant, 34
and, like a beggar, [g] dearth.'

V: THE SECOND COLLECTION ATTRIBUTED TO SOLOMON

25 Here are some more of Solomon's proverbs, transcribed at the court of 1
Hezekiah king of Judah:

Dt 29:28
Tb 12:7
Rm 11:33 To conceal a matter, this is the glory of God, 2
to sift it thoroughly, the glory of kings.
The heavens for height and the earth for depth, 3 unfathomable, as are the hearts of kings.

From silver remove the dross 4 and it emerges wholly purified; [a] from the king's presence remove the wicked 5 16:12;29:14 and on uprightness his throne is founded.

Si 7:4;13:9–10
↗Lk 14:7–11 In the presence of the king do not give yourself airs, 6 do not take a place among the great;
better to be invited, 'Come up here', 7
than be humiliated in the presence of the prince.

What your eyes have witnessed [b] 8
do not produce too quickly at the trial, for what are you to do at the end
should your neighbour confute you?

Mt 18:15 Have the quarrel out with your neighbour. 9
but do not disclose another's secret,

10 for fear your listener put you to shame,
and the loss of repute be irremediable. [e]

11 Like apples of gold inlaid with silver is a word that is aptly spoken.
12 A golden ring, an ornament of finest gold,
is a wise rebuke to an attentive ear. 15:31

13 The coolness of snow in harvest time, 25:25
such is a trustworthy messenger to those who send him: 13:17
he revives the soul of his master.

14 Clouds and wind, but no rain: Jude 12 such is anyone whose promises are princely but never kept. [d]

15 With patience a judge may be cajoled: Lk 18:1–8
a soft tongue breaks bones.

16 Eat to your satisfaction what honey you may find, 25:27;27:7
but not to excess or you will bring it up again.

17 Do not set foot too often in your neighbour's house, for fear the neighbour tire of you and come to hate you.

18 A mace, [e] a sword, a piercing arrow, such is anyone who bears false witness against a companion.

19 Decaying tooth, lame foot,
such is the fickle when trusted in time of trouble:
20 as well take off your coat in bitter weather.

You are pouring vinegar on a wound
when you sing songs to a sorrowing heart.

21 If your enemy is hungry, give him something to eat; Ex 23:4–5+
if thirsty, something to drink. Mt 5:44seq.; 20:22 22 By this you will be heaping red-hot coals on his head, ↗Rm 12:20 and Yahweh will reward you.

23 The north wind begets the rain,
and a backbiting tongue, black looks.

24 Better the corner of a roof to live on =21:9
than a house shared with a quarrelsome woman.

25 Cold water to a thirsty throat; 25:13
such is good news from a distant land.

26 A churned-up spring, a fountain fouled;
such is the upright person trembling before the wicked.

27 It is not good to eat too much honey, 25:16
nor to seek for glory on top of glory. [f]

e. The Law forbids the judge to be a respecter of persons, Lv 19:15; Dt 1:17; 16:19. The prophets similarly insist, though in different terms, on this same duty. Is 10:2; Jr 5:28; Ezk 22:12; Am 2:6; 5:7,10; Mi 3:9,11. The Messiah will judge impartially, Ps 72:4,12,14, Is 11:3–5; Jr 23:5–6, like God himself, see Ga 2:6.

f. The Gk interprets this: 'Do not be a lying witness against your fellow-countryman.'

g. 'a beggar' conj., cf. 6:11.

25 a. 'wholly purified' Gk; 'a vessel for the smith' Hebr.

b. 'What' versions; 'which' (linking what went before) Hebr., which continues 'do not come out' instead of 'do not produce it', lit. 'do not make it come out'—an emendation of vowels.

c. Difficult v. 'loss of repute': either what you have done to your neighbour, or what your enemy has done to you.

d. lit. 'who boasts of a lying gift'.

e. 'mace' Gk; Hebr. corrupt.

f. 'glory on top of glory' kabod mikkabod conj.; Hebr. kebodam kabod 'their glory is glory'.

16:32 An open town, and without defences: 28
such is anyone who lacks self-control.

26 Snow no more befits the summer, nor rain the harvest-time, 1 than honours befit a fool.

As the sparrow escapes, and the swallow flies away, 2
Nb 23:8 Dt 23:5seq. so the undeserved curse will never hit its mark.

A whip for the horse, a bridle for the donkey, 3 10:13;19:29 and for the backs of fools, a stick.

Do not answer a fool in the terms of his folly 4
for fear you grow like him yourself.

Answer a fool in the terms of his folly 5
for fear he imagine himself wise. [a]

He wounds himself, he takes violence for his drink, 6 who sends a message by a fool.

Unreliable [b] as the legs of the lame, 7 =26:9 so is a proverb in the mouth of fools.

As well tie the stone to the sling [c] 8
as pay honour to a fool.

A thorn branch in a drunkard's hand, 9 =26:7 such is a proverb in the mouth of fools.

An archer wounding everyone, 10
such is he who hires the passing fool and drunkard. [d]

↗2 P 2:22 As a dog returns to its vomit, 11
so a fool reverts to his folly.

3:7 You see someone who thinks himself wise? 12
=29:20 More to be hoped for from a fool than from him!

=22:13 'A wild beast on the road!' says the idler, 13
'a lion in the streets!'

The door turns on its hinges, 14
the idler on his bed.

=19:24 Into the dish the idler dips his hand, 15
but is too tired to bring it back to his mouth.

The idler thinks himself wiser 16
than seven people who answer with discretion.

He takes a stray dog by the ears, 17
who meddles in someone else's quarrel.

Like a madman hurling firebrands, 18
arrows and death,
so is anyone who lies to a companion 19
and then says, 'Aren't I amusing?'

No wood, and the fire goes out; 20 22:10 no slanderer, and quarrelling dies down.

Charcoal for live embers, wood for fire, 21
and the quarrelsome for kindling strife.

22 The words of a slanderer are tasty morsels that go right down into the belly. =18:8

23 Base silver-plate on top of clay:

Jm 4:13–14

2 Let someone else sing your praises, but not your own mouth, 2 Co 10:12–13
a stranger, but not your own lips.

3 Heavy is the stone, weighty is the sand;
heavier than both—a grudge borne by a fool.

4 Cruel is wrath, overwhelming is anger;
but jealousy, who can withstand that? 6:34–35

5 Better open reproof than feigned love.

6 Trustworthy are blows from a friend, deceitful are kisses from a foe. [a] 26:24–26
Mt 26:49

7 The gorged throat revolts at honey, 25:16
the hungry throat finds all bitterness sweet. Lk 15:16

8 Like a bird that strays from its nest, Si 29:21–28
so is anyone who strays from his native land.

9 Oil and perfume gladden the heart, and the sweetness of friendship rather than self-reliance.

10 Do not give up your friend or your father's friend; Si 37:6
when trouble comes, do not go off to your brother's house, better a near neighbour than a distant brother. 18:24

11 Learn to be wise, my child, and gladden my heart, that I may have an answer for anyone who insults me.

12 The discreet sees danger and takes shelter, =22:3
simpletons go ahead and pay the penalty.

26 a. The contradiction between this and the preceding proverb is deliberate and plays on the two meanings of the phrase 'in the terms of his folly'.
b. lit. 'feeble' dallu conj.; 'draw (as of water)' (?) dalyu Hebr.
c. Fixed too securely in the sling and therefore likely to recoil on the slinger.
d. The text of this v. is corrupt. The literal translation of the Hebrew would read 'An archer (?) wounding everyone, and he who hires a fool, and he who hires passers-by'. We emend the second 'and who hires' (wesoker) to 'and the drunkard' (weshikkor), and restore 'such is'.

27 a. Translation uncertain. The word rendered by 'deceitful' is often translated 'abundant'. Some emend to read 'displeasing', 'bad'. The notion of falseness is supported by the antithetic parallelism.

6:1a;=20:16 Take the man's clothes! He has gone surety for a stranger. 13
Take a pledge from him, for persons unknown. [b]

Whoever at dawn loudly blesses his neighbour— 14
it will be reckoned to him as a curse. [c]

19:13 The dripping of a gutter on a rainy day 15
and a quarrelsome woman are alike;
whoever can restrain her, can restrain the wind, 16
and take a firm hold on grease.

Iron is sharpened by iron, 17
one person is sharpened by contact with another.

Whoever tends the fig tree eats its figs, 18
whoever looks after his master will be honoured.

As water reflects face back to face, 19
so one human heart reflects another. [d]

30:15–16 Qo 1:8;6:7 Sheol and Perdition are never satisfied, 20 insatiable, too, are human eyes. [e]

=17:3 A furnace for silver, a foundry for gold: 21
a person is worth what his reputation is worth.

Pound a fool in a mortar 22
among grain with a pestle,
his folly will not leave him.

12:10 Si 7:22 Know your flocks' condition well, 23
take good care of your herds;
for riches do not last for ever, 24
crowns do not hand themselves on from age to age. [f]
The grass once gone, the aftergrowth appearing, 25
the hay gathered in from the mountains, you should have lambs to clothe you, 26
goats to buy you a field,
goat's milk sufficient to feed you, 27
to feed your household and provide for your serving girls.

Lv 26:17,36 Ps 118:6 28 The wicked flees when no one is pursuing, 1 the upright is bold as a lion.

A country in revolt throws up many leaders: 2 with one person wise and experienced, you have stability. [a]

The wicked [b] oppresses the weak: 3 here is a devastating rain—and farewell, bread!

Those who forsake the law sing the praises of the wicked, 4
those who observe the law are angered by them.

Ws 3:9 Jn 10:26m 1 Co 2:14 The wicked do not know what justice means, 5
those who seek Yahweh understand everything.

=19:1 Better someone poor living an honest life 6 than someone of devious ways however rich.

23:19–22 An intelligent child is one who keeps the Law; 7
an associate of profligates brings shame on his father.

8 Whoever increases wealth by usury and interest — Ex 22:24+
amasses it for someone else who will bestow it on the poor. [c] — 13:22

9 Whoever refuses to listen to the Law, such a one's very prayer is an abomination. — 15:8

10 Whoever seduces the honest to evil ways will fall into his own pit. — 26:27+
The blameless are the heirs to happiness.

11 The rich may think himself wise,
but the intelligent poor will unmask him.

12 When the upright triumph, there is great exultation: — 11:10;29:2;
when the wicked are in the ascendant, people take cover. — =28:28

13 No one who conceals his sins will prosper, — Si 4:26
whoever confesses [d] and renounces them will find mercy. — Lk 18:9–14; 1 Jn 1:9

14 Blessed the person who is never without fear, — Si 3:26 whoever hardens his heart will fall into distress.

15 Like a roaring lion or a springing bear is a wicked ruler of a powerless people.

16 An unenlightened ruler is rich in rapacity,
one who hates greed will lengthen his days.

17 A man guilty of murder will flee till he reaches his tomb:
let no one halt him!

18 Whoever lives an honest life will be safe, — 10:9
whoever wavers between two ways falls down in one of them.

19 Whoever works his land shall have bread and to spare, — =12:11
whoever chases fantasies has no sense. [e]

20 A trustworthy person will be overwhelmed with blessings, but no one who tries to get rich quickly will go unpunished.

21 It is not good to show partiality, — 24:23
but people will do wrong for a mouthful of bread. — Dt 16:19+

22 The person of greedy eye chases after wealth, not knowing that want will be the result.

23 Anyone who reproves another will enjoy more favour in the end than the flatterer. — 27:5–6

24 Whoever robs father and mother saying, 'Nothing wrong in that!'
is comrade for a brigand.

b. 'persons unknown' nokrim conj., cf. 20:16; Hebr. nokriyyah 'a foreign woman'.

c. The Talmud forbids greetings before morning prayer.

d. The interpretation of this v. is uncertain. It apparently means that someone sees his own feelings in others, just as a face sees its own reflection; but the Gk understands it in a contrary sense: 'As no face is like another, so no two human hearts are the same.'

e. The eyes are the seat of envy.

f. 'crowns do not hand themselves on' Gk; 'is a crown handed down?' Hebr.

28 a. The Gk interprets this differently: 'When the violent revolt, disputes arise; intelligent people know how to extinguish them.'

b. 'wicked' Gk; 'poor' Hebr.

c. Ill-gotten gains give no lasting profit and in the end revert to the poor.

d. Allusion to the confession of sins, cf. Lv 5:5; Nb 5:7; Ps 32:5; Is 1:16–18; Ho 14:2–4.

e. 'fantasies' or 'futile things', for the author of these proverbs, perhaps mean commercial activities. Many proverbs retained their association with the agricultural ideal of antiquity.

The covetous provokes disputes, 25
15:18 whoever trusts in Yahweh will prosper.

3:5–6 1 Co 3:18 Whoever trusts his own wit is a fool, 26
anyone whose ways are wise will be safe.

11:25;19:17; 22:9 No one who gives to the poor will ever go short, 27 but whoever closes his eyes will have curses in plenty.

=28:12 When the wicked are in the ascendant, people take cover, 28
but when they perish, the upright multiply.

29 Whoever is stiff-necked under reproof 1
will be suddenly and irremediably broken.

11:10;28:12,28 When the upright are on the increase, the people rejoice; 2 when the wicked are in power, the people groan.

5:10;10:1;6:26 Si 9:6 Lk 15:13 The lover of Wisdom makes his father glad, 3 but the patron of prostitutes fritters his wealth away.

14:34 Is 11:4–5 A king gives a country stability by justice, 4 an extortioner brings it to ruin.

11:9 Whoever flatters his companion 5 spreads a net for his feet.

Jb 18:7–10 In the sin of the wicked lies a snare, 6
but the upright exults and rejoices.

Jb 29:16 The upright understands the cause of the weak, 7
the wicked has not the wit to understand it. [a]

Scoffers set a city in ferment, 8
but the wise moderate anger.

Let someone wise argue with a fool, 9
anger and good humour alike will be wasted.

The bloodthirsty hate the honest, 10
but the upright seek them out.

12:16 The fool blurts out every angry feeling, 11
but the wise subdues and restrains them.

When a ruler listens to false reports, 12
all his ministers will be scoundrels.

=22:2 Mt 5:45 Poor and oppressor are found together, 13
Yahweh gives light to the eyes of both.

16:12;20:28 The king who judges the weak with equity 14 sees his throne set firm for ever.

10:1;22:15 The stick and the reprimand bestow wisdom, 15
a young man left to himself brings shame on his mother.

When the wicked are on the increase, sin multiplies, 16
but the upright will witness their downfall.

13:24;19:18 Correct your child, and he will give you peace of mind; 17
he will delight your soul.

Where there is no vision the people get out of hand; 18
happy are they who keep the law. [b]

19 Not by words is a slave corrected: Si 33:25–30
even if he understands, he will take no notice.

20 You see someone too ready of speech? =26:12
There is more to be hoped for from a fool!

21 If a slave is pampered from childhood,
he will prove ungrateful [c] in the end.

22 The hot-head provokes disputes, 14:17 Si 1:22
someone in a rage commits all sorts of sins.

23 Pride brings humiliation, ↗Mt 23:12par.
whoever humbles himself will win honour.

24 To hear the curse [d] and disclose nothing is to share with the thief and to hate oneself.

25 To be afraid of human beings is a snare,
whoever trusts in Yahweh is secure. 16:20;18:10

26 Many people seek a ruler's favour,
but the rights of each come from Yahweh.

27 Abhorrent to the upright is the sinful, abhorrent to the wicked is one whose way is straight.

VI: THE SAYINGS OF AGUR 31:1

1 30 The sayings of Agur son of Jakeh, of Massa. [a] Prophecy of this man for Ithiel, for Ithiel and for Ucal. [b]

2 I am myself the stupidest of people,
bereft of human intelligence,
3 I have not learnt wisdom,
and I lack the knowledge of the holy ones. [c]
4 Who has mounted to the heavens, then come down again? Jn 3:13
Who has gathered the wind in the clasp of his hand?
Who has wrapped the waters in his cloak? Jb 38–39 Si 1:2–3
Who has set all the ends of the earth firm?
What is his name?
What is his child's name?
Do you know?

5 Every word of God is unalloyed, ‖2 S 22:31 =Ps 18:30
a shield to those who take refuge in him.
6 To his words make no addition,
lest he reprove you
and account you a liar.

7 Two things I beg of you,
do not grudge me them before I die:

29 a. lit. 'does not understand knowledge'.
b. The 'vision' seems to be an allusion to the activities of the prophets. The word translated 'law' (torah) can also mean 'teaching': here, of the prophets.
c. Translation uncertain: the word occurs only here.
d. The curse pronounced on the unidentified criminal or on witnesses who refuse to come forward. Cf. Lv 5:1; Jg 17:2.

30 a. 'Massa' hammassa'i conj.; Hebr. hammassa' 'the prophecy'. On Massa see 31:1a. • In the Gk text 30:1–14 has been inserted between 24:22 and 24:23, and 30:15–31:9 follows 24:34.
b. Doubtful interpretation of a probably corrupt text. Others by emending the vowels read 'I am weary, oh God, I am weary and exhausted.' The old versions show the same indecision: Vulg. 'Vision told by the man with whom God is and who, God being with him, has been consoled'. Gk 'This is what the man says to those who trust in God, and I cease.'
c. i.e. of the sages, or 'of the Holy One' (with plural of majesty), i.e. of God.

Ps 119:29 keep falsehood and lies far from me, 8
give me neither poverty nor riches,
Mt 6:11 grant me only my share of food,
Dt 6:12;32:15 for fear that, surrounded by plenty, I should fall away 9
and say, 'Yahweh—who is Yahweh?'
Lv 5:21 or else, in destitution, take to stealing and profane the name of my God.

Phm 8–20 Do not blacken a slave's name to his master, 10
lest he curse you, and you suffer for it.

Ex 21:17 There is a breed of person that curses his father 11 and does not bless his mother;
a breed that, laying claim to purity, 12
has not yet been cleansed of its filth;
a breed haughty of eye, 13
with disdain in every glance;
a breed with swords for teeth, 14
with knives for jaws,
Jb 19:22 devouring the oppressed from the earth
Is 9:11 and the needy from the land. [d]

VII: NUMERICAL PROVERBS [e]

The leech has two daughters: 'Give! Give!' 15
There are three insatiable things,
four, indeed, that never say, 'Enough!'
27:20 Sheol, the barren womb, 16
Gn 30:1
Nb 16:33f earth which can never have its fill of water, fire which never says, 'Enough!'

19:26+ The eye which looks jeeringly on a father, 17
and scorns the obedience due to a mother, will be pecked out by the ravens of the valley,
and eaten by the vultures.

There are three things beyond my comprehension, 18
four, indeed, that I do not understand:
the way of an eagle through the skies, 19
Ws 5:10–12 the way of a snake over the rock,
the way of a ship in mid-ocean,
the way of a man with a girl. [f]

This is how an adulteress behaves: 20
she eats, then wipes her mouth and says,
'I have done nothing wrong!' [g]

Qo 10:5–7 There are three things at which the earth trembles, 21 four, indeed, which it cannot endure:
19:10 a slave become king, 22
a brute gorged with food,
a hateful woman wed at last, 23
Gn 16:3–6 a servant girl inheriting from her mistress.

There are four creatures little on the earth, 24
though they are wisest of the wise: [h] 6:6–8 ants, a race with no strength, 25
yet in the summer they make sure of their food;

26 the coneys,[i] a race without defences,
yet they make their home in the rocks;
27 locusts, which have no king,
yet they all march in good order;
28 lizards, which you can catch in your hand,
yet they frequent the palaces of kings.

29 There are three things of stately tread,
four, indeed, of stately walk:
30 the lion, bravest of beasts,
he will draw back from nothing;
31 a vigorous cock, a he-goat,
and the king when he harangues his people.[j]

32 If you have been foolish enough to fly into a passion and now have second thoughts, lay your hand on your lips.
33 For by churning the milk you produce butter,
by wringing the nose you produce blood,
and by whipping up anger you produce strife.

VIII: THE SAYINGS OF LEMUEL

1 31 The sayings of Lemuel king of Massa,[a] taught him by his mother:

2 What, my son! What, son of my womb! 5:1–14
What, son of my vows!
3 Do not expend your energy on women 1 K 11:1–4
nor your wealth on those who ruin kings.[b] Si 9:2

4 Not for kings, O Lemuel, Qo 10:16–17
not for kings the drinking of wine,[c]
not for princes the love of[d] liquor, 5 for fear that in liquor they forget what they have decreed and pervert the course of justice against all the poor.

6 Procure strong drink for someone about to die, Mt 27:34 wine for him whose heart is heavy:
7 let him drink and forget his misfortune,
and remember his misery no more.

8 Make your views heard, on behalf of the dumb, Ps 72:2–4, 12–14 on behalf of all the unwanted;
9 make your views heard, pronounce an upright verdict, defend the cause of the poor and the wretched.

d. It is not clear whether this description should be applied to a specific category, nation or social class.

e. The 'numerical proverb' has in it an element of maxim, of riddle, of comparison. This literary device is already found earlier in an undeveloped form, in Hebr. prophetic literature, Is 17:6; Am 1:3,6,9,11,13; Mi 5:4; cf. Ps 62:11seq., and recurs throughout the Wisdom books, Pr 6:16seq.; 30:15–33; Jb 5:19; 40:5; Qo 4:12(?); 11:2; Si 23:16seq.; 25:7; 26:5–7,28; 50:25; cf. 25:1,2. This small collection, 30:15–33, betrays a special interest in the wonders of nature and in the habits of animals.

f. Not his manoeuvres to win her, but the mystery of marriage and procreation.

g. This v. seems to be an inappropriate gloss on the two vv. foregoing.

h. 'of the wise' versions; 'created wise' Hebr.

i. A small mammal like the marmot which lives in rocks and makes itself very inaccessible; see Lv 11:5; Ps 104:18.

j. Following Gk, Hebr. 'and a king (having) his army (?) with him'. The beginning of the v. is equally uncertain; instead of 'cock' (following the Arabic), other suggestions are 'cricket' (from Accadian) or even 'horse', 'zebra', 'greyhound', etc.

31 a. 'king of Massa' by linking the two words; 'king; prophecy' Hebr., cf. 30:1. Massa is the name of an Ishmaelite tribe in north Arabia, Gn 25:14. The wisdom of 'the sons of the East', Nb 24:21k, was renowned, see 1 K 5:10; Jb 2:11d; Jr 49:7.

b. 'those who ruin' conj.; 'to ruin' Hebr. in place of 'your wealth', a slight correction would allow the reading 'your loins'.

c. Insistence on the dangers of wine is a characteristic of 'desert' morality (cf. the Rechabites, Jr 35, and the modern Arabs).

d. 'the love of' conj.; Hebr. 'o ketib, 'e qere 'or'.

IX: THE PERFECT HOUSEWIFE[e]

Aleph The truly capable woman[f]—who can find her? 10
She is far beyond the price of pearls.

Bet Her husband's heart has confidence in her, 11
from her he will derive no little profit.

Gimel Advantage and not hurt she brings him 12
all the days of her life.

Dalet She selects wool and flax, 13
she does her work with eager hands.

He She is like those merchant vessels, 14 bringing her food from far away.

Waw She gets up while it is still dark 15 giving her household their food, giving orders to her serving girls.[g]

Zain She sets her mind on a field, then she buys it; 16 with what her hands have earned she plants a vineyard.

Het She puts her back into her work 17
and shows how strong her arms can be.

Tet She knows that her affairs are going well; 18
her lamp does not go out at night.

Yod She sets her hands to the distaff, 19
her fingers grasp the spindle.

Kaph She holds out her hands to the poor, 20
she opens her arms to the needy.

Lamed Snow may come, she has no fears for her household, 21 with all her servants warmly clothed.

Mem She makes her own quilts, 22
she is dressed in fine linen and purple.

24:7 Nun Her husband is respected at the city gates, 23 taking his seat among the elders of the land.

Samek She weaves materials and sells them, 24
she supplies the merchant with sashes.

Ain She is clothed in strength and dignity, 25
she can laugh at the day to come.[h]

Pe When she opens her mouth, she does so wisely; 26
on her tongue is kindly instruction.

Zade She keeps good watch on the conduct of her household, 27 no bread of idleness for her.

Qoph Her children stand up and proclaim her blessed, 28
her husband, too, sings her praises:

Resh 'Many women have done admirable things, 29
but you surpass them all!'

30 Shin Charm is deceitful, and beauty empty;
the woman who fears Yahweh is the one to praise.[i]

31 Taw Give her a share in what her hands have worked for,
and let her works tell her praises at the city gates.

e. Alphabetical poem (cf. Ps 9–10; 25; 34; 37; 111; 112; 119; 145; Lm 1–4; Si 51:13–29 (Hebr.); Na 1:2–8; each verse (in other examples, each strophe) begins with a consecutive letter of the Hebr. alphabet. On the interpretation of this poem see v. 30i and 5:15b. Cf. 11:16; 12:4; 18:22; 19:14 and Si 7:19.

f. The Hebrew expression, translated literally by Gk as 'strong woman', implies both efficiency and virtue: in a word, the perfect mistress of the house.

g. Probably a gloss, it interrupts the rhythm.

h. She looks confidently to the future, whether to the bright fortunes of her family or to the reward God will one day give her for her diligence.

i. This eulogy of the perfect wife may have been understood as an allegorical description of personified Wisdom, see 8:22e, as an amplification in Gk seems to suggest ('A wise woman will be praised—the fear of Yahweh, this is what must be extolled.'); and this would explain why this poem, a very fine one in any case, finds its place as the conclusion to this book.

INTRODUCTION TO ECCLESIASTES

§1 The title of this short book reads: 'The Words of Qoheleth, son of David, king in Jerusalem'. 'Qoheleth', see 1:2 and 12; 7:27; 12:8–10, is not a proper name but a common noun, sometimes preceded by the definite article; though feminine in form it is treated as a masculine. The most likely explanation is that Qoheleth indicates the function of one who speaks in the assembly (qahal; in Greek ekklesia, hence the book's Latin and English title transliterated from the Greek Bible); it could therefore be rendered: the Preacher. This Preacher is called 'son of David, king in Jerusalem', and there is no doubt that he is identified with Solomon to whom the text makes clear reference, 1:16 (cf. 1 K 3:12; 5:10–11; 10:7) and 2:7–9 (cf. 1 K 3:13; 10:23), though the name is not mentioned. This, however, is no more than a conventional literary device; the author commends his thoughts to the public under the name of the greatest sage in Israel. The book's vocabulary and style, as also its doctrine (of which we shall speak later), make it impossible to date it before the Exile. It has often been maintained that the author is not one but many, that two, three, four or even eight hands can be detected. But there is a growing dislike for any such dismemberment, which misconceives the thought and literary form of the book and which is discountenanced by its unity of style and vocabulary. There is, however, a fairly clear break between the first six and the last six chapters. The book as a whole has been edited by one of the writer's disciples, who added the concluding verses, 12:9–14.

As with the other Wisdom Books such as Job and Ecclesiasticus, not to mention the composite Book of Proverbs, the theme progresses fitfully: the idea is stated, repeated, amended. There is no defined plan here, rather variations on a single theme, the futility of things human, which is enunciated at the beginning of the book, 1:2, and at the end, 12:8. Knowledge, wealth, love, life itself, all these things are illusory. Life is no more than a succession of unrelated and meaningless events, 3:1–11, ending in senility, 12:1–7, and death befalling wise and foolish, rich and poor, human and animal alike, 3:18–20. Qoheleth's problem is the same as Job's: do virtue and vice get their deserts on this earth? Both Qoheleth and Job answer: No. Experience gives the lie to the conventional answer, 7:25–8:14. But, unlike Job who seeks a meaning for his sufferings, Qoheleth enjoys good health yet discovers that happiness itself is an empty thing and consoles himself with the limited joys that life has to offer, 3:12–13; 8:15; 9:7–9. Or rather, he tries to console himself, for indeed his failure is as evident at the end as at the beginning.

He taxes his brain over the problem of a future life, but in vain, 3:21; 9:10; 12:7. And yet he has faith in God: the ways of God to human beings may dismay him, but God, he says, does not need to justify them, 3:11,14; 7:13, while human beings for their part must resign themselves to accepting the sorrows and joys that God sends, 7:14; they must keep the commandments and fear God, 12:13.

Clearly, this doctrine is far from being coherent. But rather than explain the self-corrections and self-contradictions by recourse to a plurality of authors, it would seem preferable to attribute them to the oscillation of one man's mind confronted with a mystery of mysteries and lacking the data for a solution. No answer could satisfy either Qoheleth or Job but that of reward and punishment beyond the grave, see p. 751.

§2. This book has the characteristics of a period of transition. The old conventional convictions have been shaken and as yet nothing has taken their place. Hebrew thought is here at the crossroads and foreign influence on Qoheleth's thinking has been the object of recent study. But we can rule out the often suggested links with the philosophic thought of the Stoics, Epicureans and Cynics, with which Qoheleth might have been familiar as mediated through Hellenistic Egypt; none of the apparent similarities is conclusive, and the mentality of the author is remote from that of the Greek philosophers. More valid parallels, however, have been established with such Egyptian compositions as the Dialogue of a Despairing Man with his Soul or the Songs of the Harpist and, more recently, with Mesopotamian wisdom literature and with the Epic of Gilgamesh. But no direct influence can be pin-pointed from any of these works. What all have in common are their themes, often very ancient, and already the stock-in-trade of oriental wisdom. Qoheleth in turn brought his own mind to bear on this heritage of the past, as indeed his editor states, 12:9.

Qoheleth is a Palestinian Jew, probably a citizen of Jerusalem. He writes a late Hebrew, peppered with Aramaisms, and uses two words from Persian. This indicates a date well after the Exile, but before the beginning of the second century BC, when Ben Sira made use of the book; palaeography situates fragments of Qo found in the caves of Qumran at about 150 BC. The third century BC is therefore the most likely date of composition. Palestine was then ruled by the Ptolemies and affected by humanistic influences and had not yet experienced the upsurge of faith and hope of the Maccabean period.

Qoheleth represents only one stage in the religious development of Israel; it cannot be assessed in isolation from what has gone before and what will follow. By underlining the inadequacies of earlier notions and by compelling reconsideration of the human enigma, it exposes the need of a new revelation. It warns against attachment to the goods of this world and, by denying that the rich are happy, prepares the world for hearing 'blessed are the poor', Lk 6:20.

PART ONE

Prologue [c]

12:8 Sheer futility, [d] Qoheleth says. Sheer futility: everything is futile! 2, 3
Ps 62:9;94:11; 144:4 What profit can we show for all our toil, [e] toiling under the sun? 4
Rm 8:20 A generation goes, a generation comes, 4
Ps 104:5 yet the earth stands firm for ever. 5
Si 14:18 The sun rises, the sun sets; then to its place it speeds and there it rises. 5, 6
Southward goes the wind, then turns to the north; it turns and turns again; then back to its circling goes the wind. 6, 7
Si 40:11 Into the sea go all the rivers, and yet the sea is never filled, and still to their goal the rivers go. 7
Pr 27:20 All things are wearisome. No one can say that eyes have not had enough of seeing, ears their fill of hearing. [f] 8

2:12;3:15;6:10 What was, will be again, 9
what has been done, will be done again,
and there is nothing new under the sun!

Take anything which people acclaim as being new: it existed in the centuries 10
2:16 Ws 2:4 preceding us. 11
No memory remains of the past, and so it will be for the centuries to come—they will not be remembered by their successors.

Life of Solomon [g]

I, Qoheleth, have reigned over Israel in Jerusalem. 12, 13
3:10 Gn 3:17–19 Ho 12:2 Wisely I have applied myself to investigation and exploration of everything that happens under heaven. What a wearisome task [h] God has given humanity to keep us busy! 14
I have seen everything that is done under the sun: how futile it all is, mere chasing after the wind! [i]

What is twisted cannot be straightened, 15
what is not there cannot be counted.

1 K 3:12;5: 9–10;10:1–13 Si 47:14–18 I thought to myself: I have acquired a greater stock of wisdom than anyone 16 before me in Jerusalem. I myself have mastered every kind of wisdom and science.
I have applied myself to understanding philosophy and science, stupidity [j] and 17
folly, and I now realise that all this too is chasing after the wind.

Much wisdom, much grief; 18
the more knowledge, the more sorrow.

2 Pr 14:13 I thought to myself, 'Very well, I will try pleasure and see what enjoyment has 1 to offer.' And this was futile too. 2
This laughter, I reflected, is a madness, this pleasure no use at all. 2
I decided to hand my body over to drinking wine, [a] my mind still guiding me in wisdom; I resolved to embrace folly, to discover the best way for 3
1 K 7:1–12 people to spend their days under the sun. 4
1 Ch 27:27seq. I worked on a grand scale: built myself palaces, planted vineyards; 4, 5 made myself gardens and orchards, planting every 5

kind of fruit tree in them; ·had pools made for watering the young trees of my plantations. ·I bought slaves, male and female, had home-born slaves as well; herds and flocks I had too, more than anyone in Jerusalem before me. ·I amassed 1 K 9:28;10 silver and gold, the treasures of kings and provinces; acquired singers, men and women, and every human luxury, chest upon chest [b] of it. ·So I grew great, greater 1 K 11:1–3 than anyone in Jerusalem before me; nor did my wisdom leave me. ·I denied my 1 K 10:23 eyes nothing that they desired, refused my heart no pleasure, for I found all my hard work a pleasure, such was the return for all my efforts. ·I then reflected on all that my hands had achieved and all the effort I had put into its achieving. What futility it all was, what chasing after the wind! There is nothing to be gained under the sun.

My reflections then turned to wisdom, stupidity and folly. For instance, what can the successor of a king do? What has been done already. [c] ·More is to be gained 1:9 from wisdom than from folly, just as one gains more from light than from darkness;
this, of course, I see:

> The wise have their eyes open, [d] 10:2
> the fool walks in the dark. Jn 8:12b
> 1 Jn 2:10–11

No doubt! But I know, too, that one fate awaits them both. ·'Since the fool's fate', 6:8
I thought to myself, 'will be my fate too, what is the point of my having been wise?'
I realised that this too is futile. ·For there is no lasting memory for the wise or the 1:11 fool, and in the days to come both will be forgotten; the wise, no less than the fool, Ps 49:10 must die. ·Life I have come to hate, for what is done under the sun disgusts me, Ws 2:4
since all is futility and chasing after the wind. ·All I have toiled for under the sun Si 44:8–15 and now bequeath to my successor I have come to hate; ·who knows whether he will be wise or a fool? Yet he will be master of all the work into which I have put my efforts and wisdom under the sun. That is futile too. ·I have come to despair of all Ps 39:6
the efforts I have expended under the sun. ·For here is one who has laboured wisely, skilfully and successfully and must leave what is his own to someone who has not toiled for it at all. This is futile too, and grossly unjust; ·for what does he gain for all the toil and strain that he has undergone under the sun—·since his days Si 11:18seq.
are full of sorrow, his work is full of stress and even at night he has no peace of Jb 7:2
mind? This is futile too.

There is no happiness except in eating and drinking, and in enjoying one's 3:12–13,22;
achievements; [e] and I see that this too comes from God's hand; ·for who would get 5:17;8:15;
anything to eat or drink, unless all this came from him? [f] ·Wisdom, knowledge and 9:7–8 joy, God gives to those who please him, but on the sinner he lays the task of Si 1:10
Lk 12:19
Jb 27:16–17
Pr 13:22

1 a. 'Qoheleth' or 'Ecclesiastes': the personage of the assembly (Hebr. qahal, Gk ekklesia), i.e. the President or Preacher; or possibly the spokesman for the assembly, personification of the Public which, wearied of conventional teaching, is now itself going to claim a hearing.

b. Literary fiction identifying the author with Solomon, model of sages, 1 K 5:9–14.

c. The determinism of the cosmos, forming the unchanging setting for human existence, inspires Qoheleth with world-weariness, unlike Job (Jb 38–40) and the author of Ps 104, in whom it inspires wonder and adoration.

d. The primary meaning of the term rendered here as 'futility' is 'mist', 'breath', and is part of the gamut of imagery (water, shadow, smoke, etc.) which Hebrew poetry uses to describe the transitory nature of all that is human. In Qo, the word, having lost its concrete sense, means the illusory nature of things and hence the disappointment inherent in them for human beings.

e. In Hebrew 'amal, usually carrying the sense of hard work, such as is performed by slaves (see Dt 26:7), whence labour and suffering. The word occurs very often in Qo: as a noun, twenty times; as a verb, thirteen times.

f. Or 'Everything is (more) wearisome (than) one can describe. The eye is not content with what it can see, nor the ear satisfied by what it has heard.'

g. Even Solomon himself, for all his luxury, 1 K 10:4seq., and despite his wisdom, was not happy.

h. 'Task', in Hebrew 'inyan: the word occurs only in this book, where it usually carries a pejorative sense: work, seen as a source of worry and fatigue.

i. i.e. useless effort, waste of time.

j. 'Stupidity' MSS, cf. 10:13; 'stupid actions' Hebr.

2 a. Instead of reading limeshok, lit. 'draw', 'drag' (whence 'hand over'), some correct to lisemok and translate 'I sustained my body with wine.'

b. The meaning of the word in post-biblical Hebrew. Others interpret 'a princess, princesses' or 'a concubine, concubines', seeing an allusion to Solomon's harem.

c. 'what can do' conj.; 'who' Hebr. 'what has been done (already)' conj. • 'what people have (already) done to him' Hebr. • Wisdom procures no advantage, not even that of a lasting memorial; nonetheless, it is preferable to stupidity, just as day is preferable to night.

d. lit. 'has eyes in his head'.

e. This maxim, epicurean in flavour, is a polemical argument. Although the author makes use of it as a refrain, 3:12–13; 5:17; 8:15; 9:7, it does not represent his whole view of life: he does not recommend pleasure, as the ultimate motive for human action, to the exclusion of all sense of duty.

f. 'drink' versions; Hebr. 'hurry'. • 'did not all this come from him' (lit. 'apart from him') MSS, versions; Hebr. 'apart from me'.

gathering and storing up for someone else who is pleasing to him.[g] This too is futility and chasing after the wind.

Death[a]

3 There is a season for everything, a time for every occupation under heaven: 1

A time for giving birth, 2
a time for dying;
a time for planting,
a time for uprooting what has been planted.
A time for killing, 3
a time for healing;
a time for knocking down,
a time for building.
A time for tears, 4
a time for laughter;
a time for mourning,
a time for dancing.
A time for throwing stones away, 5
a time for gathering them;
a time for embracing,
a time to refrain from embracing.
A time for searching, 6
a time for losing;
a time for keeping,
a time for discarding.
A time for tearing, 7
a time for sewing;
a time for keeping silent,
a time for speaking.
A time for loving, 8
a time for hating;
a time for war,
a time for peace.

What do people gain from the efforts they make? 9. I contemplate the task that 9, 10
God gives humanity to labour at. 10. All that he does is apt for its time; but although 11 8:17;11:5 Ps 139:17 Si 11:4;18:6 Is 55:8–9 Rm 11:33 he has given us an awareness of the passage of time,[b] we can grasp neither the beginning nor the end of what God does.
I know there is no happiness for a human being[c] except in pleasure and enjoy- 12
2:24e ment through life. 13. And when we eat and drink and find happiness in all our 13 achievements, this is a gift from God.
Ps 33:11 Si 3:14;18:6 I know that whatever God does will be for ever.[d] 14

To this there is nothing to add,
from this there is nothing to subtract,
and the way God acts inspires dread.

1:9 What is, has been already, 15
what will be, is already;
God seeks out anyone who is persecuted.[e]

Again I observe under the sun: 16 4:1;5:7 crime is where justice should be,
the criminal is where the upright[f] should be.

And I think to myself: the upright and the criminal will both be judged by God, 17 since there is a time for every thing and every action here.

18 I think to myself: where human beings are concerned, this is so that God can test
19 them and show them [g] that they are animals. •For the fate of human and the fate of Ps 49:12,20 animal is the same: as the one dies, so the other dies; both have the selfsame breath. Human is in no way better off than animal—since all is futile. Mt 12:12

20 Everything goes to the same place, 12:7
everything comes from the dust, Gn 2:7;3:19 everything returns to the dust. Jb 14:10;34:15
Ps 104:29
Pr 15:24
21 Who knows if the human spirit mounts upward or if the animal spirit goes Si 16:29–30
downward to the earth? [h]
22 I see there is no contentment for a human being except happiness in achieve- 2:24e
ment; such is the lot of a human beings. No one can tell us what will happen after 6:12
we are gone. Si 16:29,30

Society [a]

1 4 Then again, I contemplate all the oppression that is committed under the sun. 3:16 Take for instance the tears of the oppressed. No one to comfort them! The 2 power their oppressors wield. No one to comfort them! •So, rather than the living who still have lives to live, I congratulate the dead who have already met death; Jb 3:11–23; 10:18–22
3 happier than both of these are those who are yet unborn and have not seen the 6:3
4 evil things that are done under the sun. •I see that all effort and all achievement Jr 20:17–18 •3:16 spring from mutual jealousy. This too is futility and chasing after the wind.

5 The fool folds his arms Pr 6:9–11
and eats his own flesh away.

6 Better one hand full of repose than two hands full of achievements to chase after the wind. [b]

7, 8 And something else futile I observe under the sun: •a person is quite alone—no child, no brother; and yet there is no end to his efforts, his eyes can never have their fill of riches. For whom, then, do I work so hard and grudge myself pleasure?
This too is futile, a sorry business.
9, 10 Better two than one alone, since thus their work is really rewarding. •If one Lk 10:1
should fall, the other helps him up; but what of the person with no one to help him 11 up when he falls? •Again: if two sleep together they keep warm, but how can 12 anyone keep warm alone? •Where one alone would be overcome, two will put up resistance; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken. [c]

g. This was how sages explained the moral problem raised by the prosperity of the wicked. see Jb 27:16seq.; Pr 11:8; 13:22. Qoheleth makes his own sarcastic comment on the inadequacy of their teaching.

3 a. Half human occupations are ill-omened, half human activities have to do with sorrow. Death casts its shadow on life, which is a series of contradictory acts, vv. 1–8, without any other goal, vv. 9–13, than death, itself meaningless, vv. 14–22.

b. Or 'God has set eternity in their heart.' This phrase, however, is not to be taken in the Christian sense; it means simply: God has given the human heart (mind) awareness of 'duration', he has endowed it with the power of reflecting on the sequence of events and thus of controlling the present. But, the author adds, this awareness is deceptive; it does not reveal the meaning of life.

c. 'for a human being' ba'adam, cf. 2:24, Hebr. bam 'for them'.

d. In the conventional theory of retribution, death is the punishment of sin. For Qoheleth death is no more than the common lot; moral considerations are irrelevant. The fates of human and animal are identical. Even in the realm of justice, might is the criterion of right, vv. 16.18, though God himself shows preference for the weak, v. 15[b].

e. 'persecuted' as the word, lit. 'pursued', is interpreted in the midrash Qoheleth Rabba.

f. 'upright' Gk, Targ.; 'uprightness' Hebr.

g. 'and show them' Gk, Syr.; 'and that they see' Hebr. At the end of the v., Hebr. adds two words, lit. 'them, for them', which could be translated 'to each other'. But the context hardly favours this: as appears later, the comparison with the animals is concerned not with wickedness, but with the inevitability of death.

h. This passing doubt is enough to invest death with terror. The end of the book is less radically pessimistic: human life returns to God who gave it, 12:7.

4 a. Life in the social group: brute force and the dangers facing the friendless, 4:1–12, political anomalies, 4:13–16, mechanical religion and the abuse of vows, 4:17–5:6; tyranny, 5:7–8.

b. 'to chase after the wind' conj.: 'and chasing after the wind' Hebr.

c. The image of the threefold cord is also found in a Sumerian text of the Gilgamesh cycle, again illustrating the advantage of being two rather than alone.

Better a youngster poor and wise 13
than a monarch old and silly
who will no longer take advice—
Si 11:5 even though stepping from prison to the throne, 14
even though born a beggar in that kingdom. [d]

I observe that all who live and move under the sun support the young newcomer 15 who takes over. [e] ·He takes his place at the head of innumerable subjects; but his 16 successors will not think the more kindly of him for that. This too is futile and chasing after the wind.

Watch your step when you go to the House of God: drawing near to listen is 17 better than the offering of a sacrifice by fools, though they do not know that they are doing wrong. [f]

Pr 20:25
Pr 10:19
Si 7:14
Mt 6:7
5 Be in no hurry to speak; do not hastily declare yourself before God; for God is 1 in heaven, you on earth. Be sparing, then, of speech:

From too much worrying comes illusion, 2
from too much talking, the accents of folly.

Lv 27:1a
Nb 30:3
Dt 23:22–24
If you make a vow to God, discharge it without delay, for God has no love for 3 fools. Discharge your vow. ·Better a vow unmade than made and not discharged. 4
Do not allow your mouth to make a sinner of you, and do not say to the 5 messenger [a] that it was a mistake. Why give God occasion to be angry with you and ruin all the work that you have done?

Si 34:1–5
From too many illusions 6
come futility and too much talk. [b]

12:13 Therefore, fear God.

3:16;4:1
If in a province you see the poor oppressed, fair judgement and justice violated, 7 do not be surprised, for over every official there watches a higher official, and over these, higher officials still. ·But what the land yields is for the benefit of all, a king 8 is served by the fields. [c]

Si 14:3–9
Money [d]

No one who loves money ever has enough, 9
no one who loves luxury has any income;

this, too, is futile.

Pr 19:6
Si 13:6
Where goods abound, parasites abound: 10

where is the owner's profit, apart from feasting his eyes?

Pr 13:8
The labourer's sleep is sweet, whether he has eaten little or much, but the surfeit 11 of the rich will not let him sleep at all.

Something grossly unjust I observe under the sun: riches stored and turning to 12 loss for their owner. ·An unlucky venture, and those riches are lost; a son is born 13
Jb 1:21
1 Tm 6:7
to him, and he has nothing to leave him. ·Naked from his mother's womb he came; 14 as naked as he came will he depart; not one of his achievements can he take with him. ·And something else grossly unjust: that as [e] he came, so must he go; what 15 profit can he show after toiling to earn the wind, ·as he spends the rest of his days in 16 darkness, mourning, [f] many sorrows, sickness and exasperation.

2:24e
So my conclusion is this: true happiness lies in eating and drinking and enjoying 17 whatever has been achieved under the sun, throughout the life given by God: for this is the lot of humanity. ·And whenever God gives someone riches and property, 18 with the ability to enjoy them and to find contentment in work, this is a gift from God. ·For such a person will hardly notice the passing of time, so long as God 19 keeps his heart occupied with joy.

1, 2 6 I see another evil under the sun, which goes hard with people: ·suppose someone has received from God riches, property, honours—nothing at all left to wish for; but God does not give the chance to enjoy them, and some stranger 2:18–19 Lk 12:20 3 enjoys them. This is futile, and grievous suffering too. ·Or take someone who has had a hundred children and lived for many years, and, having reached old age, has never enjoyed the good things of life and has not even got a tomb; it seems to me, a still-born child is happier. Jb 3:11

4 In futility it came, into darkness it departs, and in darkness will its name be buried.

5 It has never so much as seen or known the sun; all the same, it will rest more easily 6 than that person, ·who would never have known the good things of life, even by living a thousand years twice over. Do we not all go to the same place in the end?

7 All toil is for the mouth,
yet the appetite is never satisfied.

8 What advantage has the wise over the fool? 2:15
And what of the pauper who knows how to behave in society? [a] Pr 13:7

9 Better the object seen than the sting of desire: [b] for the latter too is futile and chasing after the wind.

10 What has been is already defined—we know what people are: 1:9–11
They cannot bring to justice one who is stronger than themselves.

11 The more we say, the more futile it is: what good can we derive from it?
12 And who knows what is best for someone during life, during the days of futile life which are spent like a shadow? Who can tell anyone what will happen after him Jb 8:9;14:2 Ps 39:6;90:10; 102:11;109:23 under the sun?

PART TWO

Prologue [a]

1 7 Better a good name than costly oil, Pr 22:1
the day of death than the day of birth.
2 Better go to the house of mourning
than to the house of feasting;
for to this end everyone comes,
let the living take this to heart.

d. Conjectural translation of obscure text.

e. Or simply 'the successor', lit. 'the man who replaces him'.

f. Or 'since they know nothing, except how to do wrong'. The whole v. is obscure.

5 a. The 'messenger' may be the angel before whom excuses must be made, since one of the functions of the angels was to keep a register of good works, see Tb 12:12b; Ac 10:4, or alternatively the priest who assists at the fulfilment of a vow, see Ml 2:7. The LXX correct to 'God'. • On sins committed inadvertently see Lv 4; Nb 15:22seq.

b. This little proverb (lit. 'from too many delusions: futilities and too much talking') is probably mutilated. Some correct in line with v. 2 and read 'from too much worrying come illusions, and from too much talking, futility'—or again 'from too many illusions comes futility, a great deal of talk, dissipation of spirit.' But these conjectural readings have no support in ancient versions.

c. Literal translation of a very obscure v., possibly alluding to acts of injustice excused on the grounds of having been committed in obedience to a higher authority, but which result in depriving the poor of the income from their land and ultimately in harming even the rulers.

d. A satire not (as in Pr) on the wicked plutocrat but on money itself, ill or well acquired, ill or well used. Money secures neither life nor happiness. This evaluation prepares the ground for the gospel teaching on detachment, Mt 6:19–21,24,25–34. The sequence of ideas is as follows: money is badly distributed, 5:9, squandered, 5:10, hard to come by, 5:11, painful to lose, 5:12–16. Therefore, it is as well to spend money as it comes, 5:17–19. Three examples of all this: wealth that goes to another, 6:1–2; the rich without a tomb, 6:3–6, poverty aping plenty, 6:7–11. Conclusion: 6:12.

e. 'as' Gk, Syr.; Hebr. corrupt.

f. 'in darkness, mourning' Gk; 'he eats in darkness, mourning' Hebr.

6 a. Meaning uncertain, but possibly a wry comparison between the sage and the person who knows how to keep up appearances.

b. In Hebr nephesh, which usually means 'soul', but whose primary sense is 'throat' or 'appetite', whence 'desire', cf. v. 7.

7 a. The first prologue was on boredom, the second on laughter; but it is no less austere.

Better sadness than laughter: 3
a joyful heart may be concealed behind sad looks.
The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, 4
the heart of fools in the house of gaiety.
Better attend to the reprimand of the wise 5
than listen to a song [b] sung by a fool.
For like the crackling of thorns under the cauldron 6
is the laughter of fools:
and that too is futile.
But being oppressed drives a sage mad, 7
and a present corrupts the heart. [c]

Warnings [d]

Better the end of a matter than its beginning, 8 better patience than ambition.

Pr 22:24 Jm 1:19 Do not be too easily exasperated, for exasperation dwells in the heart of fools. 9
Si 39:16,33seq. Do not ask why the past was better than the present, for this is not a question prompted by wisdom. 10

Wisdom is as good as a legacy, 11 profitable to those who enjoy the light of the sun.
For as money protects, so does wisdom, 12
and the advantage of knowledge is this:
that wisdom bestows life on those who possess her.
Consider God's creation: 13
1:15 who, for instance, can straighten what God has bent?
When things are going well, enjoy yourself, 14
and when they are going badly, consider this:
God has designed the one no less than the other
so that we should take nothing for granted. [e]
In my futile life, I have seen everything: 15 8:14 the upright person perishing in uprightness and the wicked person surviving in wickedness.
Do not be upright to excess 16
and do not make yourself unduly wise:
why should you destroy yourself?
Do not be wicked to excess, 17
and do not be a fool:
Pr 10:27 why die before your time?
It is wise to hold on to one and not let go of the other, 18 since the godfearing will find [f] both.

9:16seq. Pr 21:22 Wisdom makes the wise stronger than a dozen governors in a city. 19
Jb 14:4c 1 Jn 1:8–9 No one on earth is sufficiently upright to do good without ever sinning. 20
Again, do not listen to all that people say, then you will not hear your servant abusing you. 21
For often, as you very well know, you have abused others. 22
Thanks to wisdom, I have found all this to be true; I resolved to be wise, but this was beyond my reach! 23

The past is out of reach, 24
buried deep—who can discover it?

But I have reached the point where, having learnt, explored and investigated wisdom and reflection, I recognise evil as being a form of madness, and folly as something stupid. [g] 25

And I find woman more bitter than Death, Pr 5:3–4
she is a snare,
her heart is a net, and her arms are chains. Jg 16
The man who is pleasing to God eludes her,
but the sinner is captured by her.
This is what I think, says Qoheleth, having examined one thing after another to draw some conclusion,
which I am still looking for, although unsuccessfully:
one man in a thousand, I may find,
but a woman better than other women—never.
This alone is my conclusion:
God has created man straightforward,
and human artifices are human inventions.

8 Who compares with the sage?
Who else knows how to explain things?
Wisdom lights up the face,
enlivening a grim expression.
Obey the king's command and, because of the divine promise, Rm 13:1seq.
be in no hurry to depart from it; [a]
do not be obstinate in a bad cause, since the king will do as he likes in any case.
Since the word of a king is sovereign,
what is the point of saying, 'Why do that?'
One who obeys the command will come to no harm;
the heart of the sage knows the right moment and verdict, for there is a right moment and verdict for everything;
but misfortune lies heavy upon anyone who does not know what the outcome will be, [b] 10:14
no one is going to say how things will turn out.
No one can control the wind and stop it from blowing, no one can control the day of death. Ws 2:1
From war there is no escape, no more can wickedness save the person who commits it. [c]

I have seen all this to be so, having carefully studied everything taking place under the sun, while one person tyrannises over another to the former's detriment.
And again, I have observed the wicked carried [d] to their graves, and people

b. 'a song' here possibly means 'praise'.

c. Obscure v., but the various corrections suggested are unsatisfactory. Possibly Qoheleth means only to indicate the weakness of the sage himself, whose serenity cannot withstand either misfortune or excessive favour.

d. The Law had enunciated the principle of collective retribution: for Israel, prosperity was contingent on fidelity, see Lv 26; Dt 7:12seq.; 11:26–28; 28:1–68. The sages had applied this principle to the individual: God renders to each as his works deserve, Jb 34:11; Ps 62:12; Pr 24:12. From this they inferred that a person's present condition was proportionate to his deserts. When experience contradicted this, their answer was: the prosperity of the wicked and the misfortunes of the virtuous are neither of them lasting. This is the thesis of Ps 37 and of the friends of Job. Qoheleth refutes it. He counters the conventional solution with scepticism, 7:9–12. Life must be taken as it comes, without seeking explanations, 7:13–15. If life and death are so capriciously ordained, 7:15, there is no point in making superhuman efforts, 7:16–18. Reputation means nothing, 7:19–22. The world of the senses is inexplicable. Reality is a fathomless mystery, 7:23seq. (with a parenthesis directed against women, 7:25–28). Fate is blind, pitiless (not sparing kings, 8:1–9) and even perverse, 8:10–14. Conclusion: 8:15.

e. lit. 'so that man should find nothing behind him'. Or it may mean 'so that man should discover nothing of what is to come'.

f. 'will find' yimetza' conj.; Hebr. yetze' 'will come out'. Possibly we should understand the meaning to be 'will bring to a good end' hotzi'.

g. 'I have reached the point', lit. 'I have come in my heart', MSS, Targ.; 'and my heart' Hebr. • 'something stupid' conj., cf. 10:13; 'stupid things' Hebr.

8 a. Before 'Obey' Hebr adds 'I'. The 'divine promise' may be the promise given by God to the king, 2 S 7; Ps 89, or else the oath sworn to God either by the king or by his subjects.

b. We take this to mean that what happens to a person seems to him worse because he cannot foresee the outcome. Others understand: 'man's great disadvantage is that he does not know . . .'

c. Some correct 'wickedness' (resha') to 'wealth' ('osher) and translate 'no more can wealth save its possessor'.

d. 'carried' Gk, Syr.; 'and they go' Hebr. The Gk reads 'and, in the city, people will praise the way they used to behave', see Jb 21:32–33; but this is beside the point, since the theme of universal equality, for the good and the bad, in death and oblivion, is an important part of Qoheleth's thinking.

leaving the holy place and, once out in the city, forgetting how the wicked used to behave; how futile this is too!

Because the sentence on the evil-doer is not carried out on the instant, people's 11 hearts are full of desire to do wrong. ·The sinner who does wrong a hundred 12 times lives on. But this too I know, that there is good in store for people who fear God, because they fear him, ·but there is no good in store for the wicked because 13 6:12+ he does not fear God, and so, like a shadow, he will not prolong his days.
Ps 73 Another futile thing that happens on earth: upright people being treated as though 14
Jr 12:1seq. they were wicked and wicked people being treated as though they were upright. To me this is one more example of futility.

2:24e And therefore I praise joy, since human happiness lies only in eating and 15 drinking and in taking pleasure; this comes from what someone achieves during the days of life that God gives under the sun.

Having applied myself to acquiring wisdom and to observing the activity taking 16 place in the world—for day and night our eyes enjoy no rest—·I have scrutinised 17 3:11b God's whole creation: you cannot get to the bottom of everything taking place under the sun; you may wear yourself out in the search, but you will never find it. Not even a sage can get to the bottom of it, even if he says that he has done so.

Destiny

9 Yes, I have applied myself to all this and experienced all this to be so: that 1
Dt 33:3 is to say, that the upright and the wise, with their activities, are in the
Pr 16:1
Ws 7:16 hands of God. [a]

We do not understand either love or hate, [b]
where we are concerned, both of them are ·futile. 2 7:15;8:14 And for all of us is reserved a common fate,
for the upright and for the wicked,
for the good and for the bad; [c]
whether we are ritually pure or not,
whether we offer sacrifice or not:
it is the same for the good and for the sinner,
for someone who takes a vow, as for someone who fears to do so.

This is another evil among those occurring under the sun: that there should be 3 the same fate for everyone. The human heart, however, is full of wickedness; folly lurks in our hearts throughout our lives, until we end [d] among the dead.

But there is hope for someone still linked [e] to the rest of the living: 4 better be a live dog than a dead lion.

The living are at least aware that they are going to die, but the dead know 5 nothing whatever. No more wages for them, since their memory is forgotten. Their love, their hate, their jealousy, have perished long since, and they will never 6 have any further part in what goes on under the sun. [f]

2:24e So, eat your bread in joy, 7 drink your wine with a glad heart,
since God has already approved your actions.
At all times, dress in white 8
and keep your head well scented.
Pr 5:15b Spend your life with the woman you love, 9
all the days of futile life God gives you under the sun, throughout your futile days,
since this is your lot in life
and in the effort you expend under the sun.
Whatever work you find to do, 10
do it with all your might,

for there is neither achievement, nor planning, nor science, nor wisdom in Sheol where you are going. Si 14:16

11 Another thing I have observed under the sun:
that the race is not won by the speediest,
nor the battle by the champions;
it is not the wise who get food,
nor the intelligent wealth,
nor the learned favour:
chance and mischance befall them all.

12 We do not know when our time will come:
like fish caught in the treacherous net,
like birds caught in the snare,
just so are we all trapped by misfortune
when it suddenly overtakes us. Lk 12:20

Wisdom and folly

13 Here is another example of the wisdom I have acquired under the sun and it strikes me as important:

14 There was once a small town, with only a few inhabitants; a mighty king made 15 war on it, laying siege to it and building great siege-works[g] round it. •But there was in that town a poverty-stricken sage who by his wisdom saved the town. No one 16 remembered this poor man afterwards. •So I say:

Wisdom is more effective than brute force, 7:19
but the wisdom of a poor man is not valued: Pr 21:22;24:5
no one listens to what he has to say.

17 The calm words of the wise make themselves heard above the shouts of someone commanding an army of fools.

18 Wisdom is worth more than weapons of war,
but a single sin[h] undoes a deal of good.

1 10 One dead fly[a] can spoil the scent-maker's oil:
a grain of stupidity outweighs wisdom and glory. Ga 5:9

2 The sage's heart leads him aright, 2:14
the fool's leads him astray.[b]

3 A fool walks down the road, he has no wit—and everyone remarks, 'How silly he is!'

4 If the anger of the ruler rises against you, do not leave your post; composure mitigates grave offences.

5 One evil I observe under the sun: the sort of misjudgement to which rulers are 6, 7 prone—•folly promoted to the top and the rich taking the lowest place. •I see slaves Pr 19:10;30:22 riding on horses and princes on foot like slaves.

8 He who digs a pit falls into it, Ps 7:15
Pr 26:27
Si 27:26–27

9 a. 'I have applied myself' conj., cf. 1:13,17; 'I have put towards my heart' (?) Hebr.; perhaps we should suppress the first 'all this' and read 'I have applied my mind to experiencing all this.' • 'their activities' conj. 'abadehem is a suspect Aramaic word; elsewhere it is always ma'aseh; perhaps it should be corrected to 'ahabehem 'their desires'.

b. Though human beings experience these feelings, they remain a mystery to us. Like death, like fate, love is blind and inexorable.

c. 'futile' versions; 'all' Hebr., dittography. • 'the bad' versions; omitted by Hebr.

d. lit. 'their end' 'aharitam Sym.; Hebr. 'aharayw 'after them'.

e. 'linked' qere and versions; 'chosen' Hebr. ketib.

f. The inevitability of death modifies the following invitation to enjoy life, vv. 7–8 (see 2:24e), with its advice to remain faithful to one's lifelong love until the final separation, for which no consolation is foreseen.

g. 'siege-works' (or 'terracings') versions; 'snare' (or 'trap') Hebr.

h. 'sin' Syr.; 'sinner' Hebr.

10 a. 'dead fly' zebub met conj.; zebube mawet 'flies of death'. • Heb. adds 'infect' after 'spoil', probably a dittography.

b. lit. 'The wise man's heart is on the right, the fool's is on the left'.

he who undermines a wall gets bitten by a snake,
he who quarries stones gets hurt by them, 9
he who chops wood takes a risk from it.

If, for want of sharpening, the blade is blunt, you have to work twice as hard; but 10
it is the outcome that makes wisdom rewarding.

If, for want of charming, the snake bites, 11
the snake-charmer gets nothing out of it.

The sayings of a sage give pleasure, 12
Pr 10:32;15:2; 18:7 what a fool says procures his own ruin:
his words have their origin in stupidity 13
and their ending in treacherous folly.
A fool talks a great deal, 14
8:7 but none of us in fact can tell the future;
what will happen after us, who can tell?

A fool [c] finds hard work very tiring, 15
he cannot even find his own way into town.

Pr 31:4–7 Is 3:4 Woe to you, country with a lad for king, 16 and where princes start feasting in the morning!
Happy the land whose king is nobly born, 17
where princes eat at a respectable hour
to keep themselves strong and not merely to revel!

Thanks to idleness, the roof-tree gives way, 18
thanks to carelessness, the house lets in the rain.

Jg 9:13 Ps 104:15 We give parties to enjoy ourselves, 19
wine makes us cheerful
and money has an answer for everything.

Ex 22:27 Do not abuse the king, even in thought, 20
do not abuse a rich man, even in your bedroom, Lk 12:2–3 for a bird of the air might carry the news,
a winged messenger might repeat what you have said.

11 Cast your bread on the water, 1 eventually you will recover it. [a] Offer a share to seven or to eight people, 2
you can never tell what disaster may occur.
When clouds are full of rain, 3
they will shed it on the earth.
If a tree falls, whether south or north,
where it falls, there it will lie.
Jn 3:8 Keep watching the wind and you will never sow, 4
keep staring at the clouds and you will never reap.
You do not understand how the wind blows, 5
Ps 139:14–16 or how the embryo grows in a woman's womb: [b]
3:11b no more can you understand the work of God, the Creator of all.
In the morning, sow your seed, 6
until evening, do not cease from labour, for of any two things you do not know which will succeed,
or which of the two is the better.

Old Age [c]

How sweet light is, 7
how delightful it is to see the sun!

8 However many years you live,
enjoy them all,
but remember, the days of darkness will be many:
futility awaits you at the end.

9 Young man, enjoy yourself while you are young,
make the most of the days of your youth,
follow the prompting and desire of heart and eye, [d]
but remember, God will call you to account for everything.
10 Rid your heart of indignation, keep your body clear of suffering,
though youth and the age of black hair are both futile.

1 12 [a]Remember your Creator while you are still young,
before the bad days come,
before the years come which, you will say, give you no pleasure;
2 before the sun and the light grow dim
and the moon and stars,
before the clouds return after the rain;
3 the time when your watchmen become shaky,
when strong men are bent double,
when the women, one by one, quit grinding, [b] and, as they look out of the window, find their sight growing dim.
4 When the street-door is kept shut,
when the sound of grinding fades away,
when the first cry of a bird wakes you up,
when all the singing has stopped; [c] 5 when going uphill is an ordeal and you are frightened at every step you take—yet the almond tree is in flower Sg 2:11+ and the grasshopper is weighed down and the caper-bush loses its tang; [d] while you are on the way to your everlasting home Ps 49:11 and the mourners are assembling in the street;
6 before the silver thread snaps, [e]
or the golden bowl is cracked,
or the pitcher shattered at the fountain,
or the pulley broken at the well-head:

c. 'fool' Gk, Targ., MSS; 'fools' Hebr.

11 a. Some take this to mean bait thrown in the water by the fisherman and recovered in the form of his catch; others interpret 'bread' as merchandise, shipped abroad and bringing home a profit. This passage on taking chances throws light on the attitude Qoheleth wishes to instil into his disciple. He wishes not to discourage him for discouragement's sake, but to rob him of his illusions and thus save him from error. After all, risks do have to be taken.

b. lit. 'and similarly, the bones in a pregnant woman's womb'.

c. Long life was the reward promised to the Israelites in the discourses of Dt (5:16.33; 11:9.21; 22:7; etc.), and was the greatest happiness the sages had to offer the virtuous. For Qoheleth, old age brings not happiness but fear of death, 11:7, regrets for youth, 11:8–12:2, slowing-down of life, 12:3–5[b], a waiting for the irremediable, 12:5[c]–7.

d. lit. 'what your eyes see'. Perhaps a popular saying about youth, to which Qoheleth adds a prudent reminder of youth's brevity.

12 a. This very fine poem, instinct with emotion and nostalgia, conjures up old age in more or less metaphorical terms; but it is not always easy to grasp exactly what the metaphors imply. In accordance with one current of rabbinical interpretation, some would see the composition to correspond to the various parts of the body (see particularly v. 3, arms, teeth, eyes), but this interpretation is not convincing. It can also be read as a description of old age as the winter of life, but a winter which, unlike the seasonal winter, does not give place to spring.

b. 'the women' lit. 'those women who grind . . . cease'. • 'one by one' or '(because they are) too few'.

c. lit. 'songs have stopped' weyeheshu conj.: Hebr. weyishahu 'have been humiliated'. • The allusion to the light sleep of the aged (previous line) seems out of place here; lit. 'you get up at the cry of the bird'; for 'you get up', wayyaqum, some propose the correction 'you stop' weyiddom.

d. 'loses its tang', uncertain translation, based on substituting the passive (wetuppar) for an unattested form (wetiphereh). It can also mean 'is without effect'; sometimes also corrected to 'gives its fruit', thus continuing the image of the return of spring: life departing at the very moment when nature itself revives. The grasshopper is 'weighed down' either because it is full fed (another image of spring) or because, on the contrary, the slightest weight is a burden for the elderly.

e. 'gives way' yinnateq conj. following Syr. and Symmachus; Hebr. yeraheq 'been taken away'.

3:20–21.21h the dust returns to the earth from which it came, 7 and the spirit returns to God who gave it.[f]

1:2 Sheer futility, Qoheleth says, everything is futile.[g] 8

Epilogue[h]

Besides being a sage, Qoheleth taught the people what he himself knew, having 9 weighed, studied and emended many proverbs. ·Qoheleth took pains to write in 10 an attractive style and by it to convey truths.

The sayings of a sage are like goads, like pegs positioned by shepherds: the 11 same shepherd finds a use for both.[i]

Furthermore, my child, you must realise that writing books involves endless 12 hard work, and that much study wearies the body.

5:6 To sum up the whole matter: fear God and keep his commandments, for that 13
Si 1:13
11:9 is the duty[j] of everyone. ·For God will call all our deeds to judgement, all 14 that is hidden, be it good or bad.

f. The earthly part of a person returns to earth. But since nothing on this earth can satisfy a human being, the whole person does not originate from earth, and that which is of God, returns to God.

g. The book ends as it began, but has covered much ground in between. It has taught the reader his wretchedness but also his greatness, by showing that this world is not worthy of him. It incites the reader to disinterested religion and to that kind of prayer in which a creature, aware of its nothingness, adores the mystery of God, cf. Ps 39.

h. The appendix is not by the same hand as the rest of the book. It is perhaps the work of one of Qoheleth's disciples, being a eulogy of Qoheleth, composed in the same style (see vv. 12–14).

i. The goad to urge the animals forward, and the pegs to keep them tied up, are both used by the shepherd when he sees fit, not as his own caprice, but as the good of his flock dictates. The shepherd may, according to some, be an allusion to Moses, according to others, to Solomon or to God; but the text is perhaps corrupt.

j. 'duty' conj.; missing in Hebr.

INTRODUCTION TO
THE SONG OF SONGS

§1 The Song of Songs, that is to say, the greatest of all songs, the loveliest song of all, consists of a series of poems celebrating the mutual love of a Lover and a Beloved, now meeting, now parting, now seeking and now finding each other. The Lover is called 'king', 1:4 and 12, and 'Solomon', 3:7 and 9; the Beloved is called 'the girl of Shulam', 7:1, a name variously thought to be related to the name Solomon, or to refer to Abishag of Shunem, who figures in the story of David and Solomon, 1 K 1:3; 2:21–22. That Solomon was a writer of songs Hebrew tradition was aware, 1 K 5:12; for this reason 'the greatest of all songs' was attributed to him (hence the title, Sg 1:1); in the same way as Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Wisdom were credited to Solomon in his capacity of sage. This titular attribution caused the Song to be placed among the Wisdom Books, after Ecclesiastes in the Greek Bible, between Ecclesiastes and Wisdom (two 'Solomonic' books) in the Vulgate. In the Hebrew Bible the Song is placed among the 'writings', which form the third and most recent part of the Jewish canon.

People have found it surprising that a book that makes no mention of God and whose vocabulary is so passionate should figure in the sacred canon. The doubts in Jewish circles of the first century AD were, however, settled by an appeal to tradition. On these same grounds the Christian Church has always accepted the Song as part of holy scripture.

No book of the Old Testament has been subjected to more diverse interpretations. The latest of these proposes an origin for the Song in the cult of Ishtar and Tammuz, and in the 'divine marriage' ceremonies which, it is thought, the king performed as substitute for the god. A rite of this sort, borrowed from the Canaanites, may, it is suggested, have been practised in ancient times as part of the cult of Yahweh, and the Song could in this case be the revised and expurgated libretto for this ceremony. The cultic, mythological theory cannot be proved and is unconvincing. Nor is it easy to imagine a faithful Israelite editing the hymns of a fertility-cult merely to produce a suite of love-songs from them. Whatever the similarities of expression between the hymns to Ishtar and Tammuz on the one hand and the poems of the Song on the other, these are attributable to the fact that both use the language of love.

The allegorical interpretation is much more ancient. It became current among the Jews from the second century AD onwards: the love of God for Israel and the love of Israel for God are conveyed under the imagery of a relationship between husband and wife: in a word, the marriage theme, developed by the Prophets from Hosea onwards. Christian authors, principally influenced by Origen, the individual opposition of Theodore of Mopsuestia notwithstanding, have followed the same line as the Jewish exegetes; only, for Christian commentators, the Song became an allegory of the marriage between Christ and his Church, or of the mystical union of the soul with God. This allegorical interpretation under various forms still has its exponents, whether holding to the general theme of Yahweh as husband of Israel, or seeking to relate the varying moods of the Song to the conversions, disillusionments and hopes of the chosen people. The inspired and canonical status of the Song leads these commentators to suppose that it must be celebrating something other than profane love. But the exegetic justifications advanced in favour of the allegorical meaning—based on an accumulation of verbal parallels from the other books of the Bible—seem forced and artificial.

In consequence, a literal interpretation is now very widely accepted. And this is supported by the most ancient tradition of all: there is no sign of allegorical interpretation of the Song before the Christian era, and the writings of Qumran give no hint of any such thing; the New Testament, whatever may have been said in the past, does not lend any support to it; the Jews of the first century used to sing the Song at marriage-feasts, and went on doing so despite the prohibition of Rabbi Aqiba. And the Song, for its part, betrays no allegorical intention, unlike the Prophets who, when they resort to allegory, clearly say so and explain their meaning, Is 5:7; Ezk 16:2; 17:12; 23:4; 31:2; 32:2; etc. Nothing indicates that a key is needed for decoding the Song or that anything should be read into it other than the natural meaning of the text: it is a collection of songs celebrating the loyal and mutual love that leads to marriage. The Song proclaims the lawfulness and exalts the value of human love; and the subject is not merely profane, since God has blessed marriage, which is here understood not so much as a means of procreation as the affectionate and stable association of man and woman, Gn 2. Under the influence of Yahwism, sexual life, which the surrounding Canaanites thought of in terms of relationships between fertility-deities, is here demythologised and treated with a wholesome realism. Human love also figures as a topic in other Old Testament books, as for instance in the ancient stories in Genesis, in the story of David, in Proverbs and in Ecclesiasticus, where it is treated in the same way and sometimes in words very like those of the Song; its wholesomeness justifies the use the Prophets made of it in depicting the relationship between Yahweh and Israel. There can be no objection to the inclusion in the Canon of Scripture of a book consecrated to such a theme. We have no right to set a limit to God's inspiration.

§2 The origin of the Song may be sought in the festivities taking place at weddings, cf. Ps 45; Jr 7:34; 16:9, and useful comparisons have been made with the ceremonies and wedding-songs of the Syrian and Palestinian Arabs. But the Song is not a collection of popular songs. Whatever ancient models the author of the Song may have known, he was an original poet and an able man of letters. The closest parallels are to be found in the love-songs of ancient Egypt, which are also literary compositions; but he cannot be shown to have borrowed his poetic ideas from these. Israel, like the surrounding peoples, must have had its own love-poetry and, in a similar environment, the language of love would have employed similar images and similarly extravagant metaphors.

The Song does not follow any definite plan. It is a collection of songs united only by their common theme of love. The 'poems' into which this translation has been divided merely suggest the possible grouping of shorter entities and, although a progression of passion may be detectable from first to last, it is useless to look for any marked progression of thought or action from one to the next. Surviving collections of Egyptian songs are set out in much the same way, offering a choice according to circumstance or audience; and this explains why the compositions ring the changes on the same themes and why there are so many doublets in them—since they were not intended all to be sung or recited at one sitting.

Once the allegorical interpretation of the Song has been abandoned, and with it the supposed allusions to historical events, the dating of the book becomes more difficult to establish. Some scholars assign it to a date as early as the reign of Solomon, but the Aramaic features of the language, and the borrowing of one word from Persian, 4:13, and of another from Greek, 3:9, indicate a date after the Exile, in the fifth or fourth centuries BC. The place of composition was certainly Palestine.

Apart from the old attribution to the great sage Solomon, the literal interpretation of the book still justifies its place among the Wisdom Books. Like them, it deals with human nature, and in fact treats of one of its most vital aspects. In its own way, it teaches the excellence and dignity of the love that draws man and woman together, it exorcises the myths attaching to love in those remote times and presents a love as free of puritanical restraint as it is of licentious excess. Over and above this literal meaning, it is perfectly permissible to apply the Song to the relationship between Christ and his Church (which, however, Paul was not doing in Ep 5) or to the union of individuals with the God of Love, thus vindicating the way in which the Song has been used by such mystics as St John of the Cross.

1 Solomon's Song of Songs. [a] 1

BELOVED: [b] Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth, 2 for your love-making is sweeter than wine;
1:12;4:10 delicate is the fragrance of your perfume, 3
your name is an oil poured out, [c] 6:8 and that is why girls love you.

FIRST POEM

Draw me in your footsteps, let us run. 4
The king [d] has brought me into his rooms;
you will be our joy and our gladness.
We shall praise your love more than wine;
how right it is to love you.

DIALOGUE OF THE LOVERS

BELOVED: I am black [e] but lovely, daughters of Jerusalem, [f] 5
like the tents of Kedar,
like the pavilions of Salmah. [g]
Take no notice of my dark colouring, 6
it is the sun that has burnt me.
My mother's sons turned their anger on me,
they made me look after the vineyards.
Is 5:1a My own vineyard I had not looked after! [h]

Tell me then, sweetheart, 7
Gn 37:16 where will you lead your flock to graze, [i]
Ps 23:1–3 where will you rest it at noon?
Ezk 34:1a That I may no more wander like a vagabond
Jn 10:1–16 beside the flocks of your companions.

CHORUS: If you do not know this, O loveliest of women, 8
Jr 31:21 follow the tracks of the flock, and take your kids to graze
close by the shepherds' tents.

LOVER: I compare you, my love, [j] 9
to my mare harnessed to Pharaoh's chariot.
Your cheeks show fair between their pendants 10
and your neck within its necklaces.

We shall make you golden earrings
and beads of silver.

Duo: [k] —While the king rests in his own room [l]
my nard yields its perfume. 1:3c
My love is a sachet of myrrh lying between my breasts.
My love is a cluster of henna flowers
among the vines of En-Gedi. [m]

—How beautiful you are, my beloved,
how beautiful you are!
Your eyes are doves.

—How beautiful you are, my love,
and how you delight me!
Our bed is the greensward.

—The beams of our house are cedar trees,
its panelling the cypress.

2 —I am the rose of Sharon,
the lily of the valleys.

—As a lily among the thistles,
so is my beloved among girls. [a]

—As an apple tree among the trees of the wood, 8:5
so is my love among young men.
In his delightful shade I sit,
and his fruit is sweet to my taste.
He has taken me to his cellar, [b] and his banner over me is love.
Feed me with raisin cakes,

1 a. On the attribution to Solomon, see Introduction.

b. vv. 2–4 serve as prologue, announcing the general theme of the poems to follow, and striking the key-note of passionate tenderness which dominates the whole collection. Abrupt transitions from third to second person are characteristic also of Egyptian love-songs. The Lover is absent, yet present in the heart of his Beloved, with whom her companions associate themselves, v. 4[b]; these are the daughters of Jerusalem, v. 5. The prologue offers parallels with the royal marriage-song of Ps 45:8–9,15–16.

c. Alliterative play on the words shem, 'name', and shemen, 'oil', oil being suggested by the perfumes of the previous line.

d. This king is not Yahweh, as the allegorical interpretation would have it, nor Solomon in the original poem. Engaged couples are called 'king' and 'queen' in Syrian marriage-songs. Possibly the line is simply a reminiscence of Ps 45:15.

e. Her sunburnt complexion comes from the farm-work she has been forced to do, v. 6; she compares herself to the black tents, woven from goat-hair, of the Bedouin Arabs. The ancient Arabic poets contrast the pale complexion of well-born girls (here, the daughters of Jerusalem) with that of slaves and servant-girls who had to work out of doors.

f. The daughters of Jerusalem, or the daughters of Zion, 3:11, represent an audience, whom the lovers invoke here and at 2:7; 3:5,11; 5:8,16; 8:4, or who intervene to introduce or accelerate the development of the poem, v. 8; 5:9; 6:1; 7:1.

g. 'Salmah' conj.; 'Solomon' Hebr.—Salmah and Kedar are two nomadic Arab tribes.

h. She has given her heart to the man whom she loves.

i. Perhaps a reminiscence of Gn 37:16. In the literature of love, the theme of separation and search is probably even commoner than that of presence and happy possession. In the Song, it recurs at 3:1–4; 4:8; 5:2–8; 6:1. Here, the setting is that of a pastoral idyll, cf. Jacob and Rachel, Gn 29:1–12; it will be different in Sg 5:2; the situations are not real ones.

j. Comparison of the Beloved to a mare, worthy of a royal comparison, may seem quaint, but was a high compliment to feminine beauty among the ancient Arabic poets, as also with Theocritus.

k. The lovers are together; the rare and heady perfumes, nard, myrrh, henna-flowers, symbolise the pleasures of their meeting, vv. 12–14. There follows a battle of compliments, vv. 15–16; 2:1–3. The meeting-place is ill-defined: a bed of greenery, v. 16, a palace, v. 17, a cellar, 2:4, but see note 2b. Contrastingly, however, the outcome of the meeting is clear: the lovers are enfolded in each other's arms, 2:6, and the man begs that no one shall disturb his Beloved, 2:7; this will be taken up as a refrain in 3:5 and 8:3–4. This is perfectly fitting if the Song is considered as a collection of marriage-songs and if no attempt is made to find a continuous development from one poem to another, see Introduction.

l. See v. 4.

m. The 'Goat's Spring', on the west bank of the Dead Sea with a fertile oasis where, according to other texts, there grew balm and palm trees.

2 a. The Beloved compares herself to the rose and the lily; the Lover embroiders on this: she is a lily among thorns, he loves no one but her. Here, as in 4:13–14, it would be wrong to smother the poetry under the weight of botanical notes.

b. lit. 'house of wine': also to be translated 'banqueting hall', Est 7:8; Qo 7:2, and, following Jr 16:8–9, a reference to marriage-feasts.

restore me with apples,
for I am sick with love. [c]

=8:3 His left arm is under my head, 6
his right embraces me.

=3:5;5:8=8:4 —I charge you, 7
daughters of Jerusalem,
by all gazelles and wild does, [d]
5:2;8:5 do not rouse, do not wake my beloved
before she pleases.

SECOND POEM

BELOVED: [e] I hear my love. 8 See how he comes
leaping on the mountains,
bounding over the hills.
My love is like a gazelle, 9
like a young stag.

See where he stands behind our wall.
He looks in at the window,
he peers through the opening.

My love lifts up his voice, 10
he says to me,
'Come then, my beloved,
my lovely one, come.
6:11;7:13–14 Qo 12:5 For see, winter is past, 11
the rains are over and gone.

'Flowers are appearing on the earth. 12
The season of glad songs has come,
the cooing of the turtledove is heard in our land.
The fig tree is forming its first figs 13
and the blossoming vines give out their fragrance.
Come then, my beloved,
my lovely one, come.

'My dove, hiding in the clefts of the rock, 14
in the coverts of the cliff,
show me your face,
let me hear your voice;
for your voice is sweet and your face is lovely.'
Catch the foxes for us, 15
the little foxes
that make havoc of the vineyards,
for our vineyards are in fruit. [f]

=6:3 My love is mine and I am his. [g] 16
2:1 He pastures his flock among the lilies.

Before the day-breeze rises, 17
before the shadows flee, [h] return! Be, my love,

like a gazelle, like a young stag, 8:14
on the mountains of Bether. [i]

1 3 On my bed at night I sought the man who is my sweetheart: [a]
I sought but could not find him! 5:6
2 So I shall get up and go through the city; Jn 7:34n;20:13 in the streets and in the squares,
I shall seek my sweetheart.
I sought but could not find him!

3 I came upon the watchmen— 5:7
those who go on their rounds in the city: [b]
'Have you seen my sweetheart?'

4 Barely had I passed them
when I found my sweetheart.
I caught him, would not let him go, Jn 20:17
not till I had brought him to my mother's house, 8:2,5
to the room where she conceived me!

5 LOVER: I charge you, =2:7;8:4
daughters of Jerusalem,
by gazelles and wild does,
do not rouse, do not wake my beloved
before she pleases.

THIRD POEM

6 POET: [c] What is this coming up from the desert 6:10;8:5
like a column of smoke,

c. Amnon was love-sick for Tamar, 2 S 13:2, the sole biblical parallel, but there are others to be found in Egyptian songs.

d. A pastoral note, as in vv. 9 and 17. It is unlikely that tzebaot 'gazelles', and 'ayyalot, 'does' (in this order) are a cryptogram for 'elohe tzabaot, the God of Israel, to avoid pronouncing his name in these secular songs.

e. Change of scene. The Beloved is living with her parents in the city. The Lover comes in from the country and appears at the window, vv. 8–9, cf. 5:2seq. Egyptian and Greek poetry contain complaints of lovers faced with a closed door; here the Lover invites his Beloved to join him, by singing to her of the delights of springtime, season of flowers, of birds, and of love, vv. 10–14. The feeling for nature, the freshness, the modernity, of this are unequalled throughout the Old Testament.

f. Independent poetic fragment, probably inserted here under the influence of v. 13 with its mention of vines in flower. Here, the vines are a metaphor for the charms of girls who wish to be rid of their admirers, the little foxes.

g. This affirmation of mutual possession recurs in almost identical terms in 6:3 and 7:11 and in each case is made in the absence of the Lover, thus indicating the stability of love. But love, for its part, yearns for a presence and in each case confidence in the Lover is linked to an appeal or to a delay, here v. 17 and 6:1; 7:12.

h. The day-breeze, see Gn 3:8, in Palestine blows in the evening, when the lengthening shadows seem to 'flee'. This is when the Lover will come back from the country, and so we return to the beginning of the poem, v. 8, the end of v. 17 more or less repeating the words of vv. 8–9[a].

i. All explanations of this word as a common noun are forced and it is probably a place-name, either of a real place, Bether to the west of Jerusalem, Jos 15:59, or of a semi-legendary one; parallels in Sg 4:6 and 8:14 speak of mountains of myrrh and balm. Bether may have been the Palestinian equivalent of Punt, the land of spices in Egyptian tradition. An Egyptian love-song says: 'When his arms enfold me, it is like being in the land of Punt.'

3 a. vv. 1–4 form a complete unit, to which is added a similar refrain, v. 5, as in 2:7; 8:4. Though the theme is again the search, as in 1:7–8; 5:2–8, this time the setting is the city and the time is night. The title could be 'The lover lost and found again'. For a girl to go out at night and take her sweetheart to her mother's house is so contrary to Jewish custom that some commentators have supposed this to be a dream-sequence. But poets and lovers delight in imagining unlikely situations. The audacity of the pursuit and the longing never more to let the lover part are proofs of passionate love.

b. The night-watchmen, see Ps 127:1; Is 21:11–12, recur in Sg 5:7, and were probably typical figures in popular poetry, like the watchman and policeman of our own medieval and modern songs.

c. The poem of vv. 6–11 is not about love, is not put into the mouth of either of the two partners, and is not recited by the 'daughters of Zion', since they themselves are invoked at v. 11. The poet himself is speaking now, and describes a royal procession, which v. 11 associates with wedding-festivities. For a similar celebration, see 1 M 9:37–39. Similar customs are still observed by the Syrian and Palestinian Arabs and go back to ancient times, Ps 45:15–16. Vv. 6–10 describe the escort and the finery sent by the bridegroom to meet the bride: their meeting is evoked in v. 11. This short poem makes a good introduction to the eulogy of the Beloved in ch. 4. The description is high-flown, the bridegroom is a 'king', cf. 1:4,12, a 'Solomon'.

breathing of myrrh and frankincense and every exotic perfume?

Here comes Solomon's litter. 7
Around it are sixty champions,
the flower of the warriors of Israel;
all of them skilled swordsmen, 8
expert in war.
Each man has his sword at his side,
against alarms by night.

King Solomon 9
has had a palanquin made [d]
1:17 of wood from Lebanon.
He has had the posts made of silver, 10
the canopy of gold,
the seat of purple;
the centre is inlaid with ebony. [e]

Daughters of Zion, 11
come and see King Solomon, wearing the diadem with which his mother crowned him on his wedding day, [f]
on the day of his heart's joy.

4 LOVER: [a] How beautiful you are, my beloved, 1
how beautiful you are!
Your eyes are doves,
4:3;6:7 behind your veil; [b]
=6:5–7 your hair is like a flock of goats
surging down Mount Gilead.
Your teeth, a flock of sheep to be shorn 2
when they come up from the washing. [c]
Each one has its twin,
not one unpaired with another.
Your lips are a scarlet thread 3
and your words enchanting.
Your cheeks, behind your veil,
are halves of pomegranate.
Your neck is the Tower of David 4
built on layers,
Ezk 27:10–11 hung round with a thousand bucklers,
and each the shield of a hero.
=7:4 Your two breasts are two fawns, 5
twins of a gazelle,
that feed among the lilies.

Before the day-breeze rises, 6
before the shadows flee,
I shall go to the mountain of myrrh,
to the hill of frankincense. [d]

You are wholly beautiful, my beloved, 7
and without a blemish. [e]

Come [f] from Lebanon, my promised bride, [g] 8
come from Lebanon, come on your way.
Look down from the heights of Amanus,
from the crests of Senir and Hermon,

the haunt of lions,
the mountains of leopards. [h]

9 You ravish my heart,
my sister, [i] my promised bride,
you ravish my heart
with a single one of your glances,
with a single link of your necklace.
10 What spells lie in your love, 1:2,4
my sister, my promised bride!
How delicious is your love, more delicious than wine!
How fragrant your perfumes,
more fragrant than all spices!
11 Your lips, my promised bride, Pr 5:3
distil wild honey.
Honey and milk
are under your tongue;
and the scent of your garments
is like the scent of Lebanon. [j] Ho 14:7

12 She is a garden enclosed, [k] 6:2
my sister, my promised bride;
a garden [l] enclosed,
a sealed fountain. Pr 5:16
13 Your shoots form an orchard [m] of pomegranate trees, bearing most exquisite fruit: [n] 14 nard and saffron,
calamus and cinnamon,
with all the incense-bearing trees;
myrrh and aloes,
with the subtlest odours. [o] Pr 5:15–16 15 Fountain of the garden,

d. The word 'appiryon occurs only once in Hebr. and is probably borrowed from the Gk phoreion, 'litter'.

e. 'ebony' hobnim conj.; Hebr. 'ahabah 'love'. Hebr. adds 'of the daughters of Jerusalem', which can be linked to the beginning of v. 11, if we suppress 'daughters of Zion', not found in the Gk and possibly a gloss.

f. The only other mention of a bridegroom's crown occurs in Is 61:10, where a different word is used.

4 a. The short poem, vv. 1–7, is a eulogy of the physical charms of the Beloved and is partly repeated in 6:5–7; there is another eulogy in 7:2–10, and a eulogy of the physical charms of the Lover occurs in 5:10–16. The portrait of the perfect housewife in Pr 31:10–31 might be a sage's reaction to this type of composition, which was widespread. The Genesis Apocryphon found at Qumran inserts an undistinguished eulogy of the beauty of Sarah into Gn 12:15. Egyptian love-songs contain similar eulogies, which are also a stock-in-trade of Arabic poetry, wasf, 'description'. Taken literally, these descriptions would offer a grotesque image of the Beloved or of the Lover. Equally unlikely is the allegorical interpretation which sees in them descriptions of the Holy Land and the Temple. But in fact they do not 'describe', they juxtapose metaphors borrowed from the entire natural world, physical, animal, vegetable, to conjure up, by associated impressions of touch, sight and smell, the sense of admiration, joy and pleasure induced by the presence of the Beloved.

b. The bride was veiled when presented to her husband, Gn 24:65.

c. White as sheep, washed before being shorn.

d. The v. is a repetition of 2:17, perhaps only secondary, evoked by the last words of v. 5, reminiscent of the end of 2:16.

e. Compare the eulogy of Absalom, 2 S 14:25.

f. 'Come' 'eti versions; Hebr. 'itti 'with me', as also in the following line.

g. The girl is called 'promised bride' only in this part of the poem, 4:8–5:1, where the word occurs six times.

h. The strophe is hard to explain, and is possibly a fragment of some longer poem. In conjunction with the following strophes, to which it is linked by the keywords 'promised bride' (five times) and 'Lebanon', vv. 11,15, it might be read as an appeal to the Beloved to leave a difficult and dangerous country, to join her Lover.

i. Also in vv. 10,12; 5:1,2. The expression may have been borrowed from Egyptian love-poetry, where it is common. But Egyptian poems use 'brother' to mean the lover, which Sg never does, see in contrast 8:1.

j. The Lover is carried away by the looks of his Beloved, v. 9, by the taste of her kisses, v. 11, by the scent of her clothes, vv. 10,11.

k. Like the vineyards of 1:6; 2:15, the garden with its spring and choice flowers, a 'paradise', v. 13, cf. Gn 2:9–10, is a metaphor for the charms of the Beloved. The theme of the 'pretty Gardening-Girl' or of 'Love's Orchard', are found in Egyptian poetry. But the garden is enclosed, v. 12, until the moment when the bride opens it for her Lover, v. 16, on their marriage-night, 5:1. Compare Pr 5:15–20 on conjugal love.

l. 'garden' gan versions; Hebr. gal 'wave', in any case always in the plural; a copyist's error.

m. In Hebr. pardes, as Ne 2:8; Qo 2:5, Persian word meaning 'park', from which our 'paradise'.

n. Hebr. adds 'henna-flowers and nards'.

o. The plants of vv. 13–14 do not grow together and, except for the pomegranate, are not found in Palestine. The garden is imaginary, containing the rarest aromatic plants in existence: a common poetic theme, 1:2–3,12–14; 3:6; 5:5,13. Compare Wisdom in Si 24:12–21.

well of living water, streams flowing down from Lebanon!

BELOVED: Awake, north wind, 16
come, wind of the south!
Breathe over my garden,
to spread its sweet smell around.
Let my love come into his garden,
let him taste its most exquisite fruits.

5 LOVER: I come into my garden, 1
my sister, my promised bride,
I pick my myrrh and balsam,
I eat my honey and my honeycomb,
I drink my wine and my milk.

Is 55:1–2 POET: Eat, friends, and drink, drink deep, my dearest friends. [a]

FOURTH POEM

2:7d BELOVED: [b] I sleep, but my heart is awake. 2
Rv 3:20 I hear my love knocking.
'Open to me, my sister, my beloved,
my dove, my perfect one,
for my head is wet with dew,
my hair with the drops of night.'

—'I have taken off my tunic, 3
am I to put it on again?
I have washed my feet,
am I to dirty them again?'
My love thrust his hand 4
through the hole in the door; [c]
I trembled to the core of my being.
Then I got up 5
to open to my love,
myrrh ran off my hands,
pure myrrh off my fingers,
on to the handle of the bolt. [d]

I opened to my love, 6
but he had turned and gone.
My soul failed at his flight, [e]
3:1a I sought but could not find him,
I called, but he did not answer.

3:3b The watchmen met me, 7
those who go on their rounds in the city.
They beat me, they wounded me,
they took my cloak away from me:
those guardians of the ramparts! [f]

=2:7;3:5 I charge you, 8
daughters of Jerusalem,
if you should find my love,
what are you to tell him?
—That I am sick with love!

9 CHORUS: What makes your lover better than other lovers,
O loveliest of women?
What makes your lover better than other lovers,
to put us under such an oath?

10 BELOVED:[g] My love is fresh and ruddy,
to be known among ten thousand.
11 His head is golden, purest gold,
his locks are palm fronds
and black as the raven.
12 His eyes are like doves
beside the water-courses,
bathing themselves in milk,
perching on a fountain-rim.
13 His cheeks[h] are beds of spices, Ps 133:2
banks sweetly scented.
His lips are lilies,
distilling pure myrrh.
14 His hands are golden, rounded, set with jewels of Tarshish.
His belly a block of ivory covered with sapphires.
15 His legs are alabaster columns set in sockets of pure gold.
His appearance is that of Lebanon,
unrivalled as the cedars.
16 His conversation is sweetness itself,
he is altogether lovable.
Such is my love, such is my friend,
O daughters of Jerusalem.

1 6 CHORUS:[a] Where did your lover go,
O loveliest of women?
Which way did your lover turn
so that we can help you seek him?

2 BELOVED: My love went down to his garden, 4:12–16
to the beds of spices,
to pasture his flock on the grass and gather lilies.

3 I belong to my love, and my love to me. =2:16
He pastures his flock among the lilies.

5 a. The poet's exhortation to the wedding-guests.

b. This delightful scene has the same setting as 3:1–4: night, the search through the city, the watchmen—but there is a reversal of roles: this time, the Lover is outside, wanting to come in, cf. 2:9, while the Beloved teases him, making futile excuses which in fact belie her eagerness to open the door. And when she does so, it is too late.

c. The Lover tries to get in by raising the latch, which from outside had to be done with a wooden key, Jg 3:25; Is 22:22.

d. Either the Beloved has scented herself, or the Lover has left this trace of his attempt and this is all she finds of him!

e. 'his flight' bedobro conj.; Hebr. bedabbero 'his word'.

f. The watchmen, as in 3:3, but in another role: they mistake the girl for a prostitute, see Pr 7:11–12.

g. On the literary form, see 4:1a. Some have seen here a description of the Temple at Jerusalem, especially because of vv. 11,14–15. A more plausible model would be one of the chryselephantine (ivory and gold) statues of classical and oriental antiquity. This is a pictorial description of ideal masculine beauty: tall stature, luxuriant hair, good complexion and charm of manner, cf. Saul, 1 S 9:2; 10:23–24, David, 1 S 16:12, Absalom, 2 S 14:25–26. Hyperbole is the rule for this literary form, see the description of the High Priest Simon in Si 50:5–12.

h. The lower part of the face, where the beard grows, which was scented, see Ps 133:2.

6 a. Intervention by the Chorus, to prepare for the conclusion in vv. 2–3: but there is no point in looking for the Lover, since he is present in the heart of his Beloved, she being his 'garden', see 4:12k. The security of mutual love is expressed, v. 3, in terms much the same as 2:16.

FIFTH POEM

LOVER: [b]

You are fair as Tirzah, my beloved, 4 enchanting as Jerusalem, [c] formidable as an army! [d]
Turn your eyes away from me, 5
they take me by assault! [e]
=4:1-3 Your hair is like a flock of goats
surging down the slopes of Gilead.
Your teeth are like a flock of ewes 6
as they come up from being washed.
Each one has its twin,
not one unpaired with another.
Your cheeks, behind your veil, 7
are halves of pomegranate.

There are sixty queens 8
and eighty concubines
(and countless girls). [f]
My dove is my only one, 9
perfect and mine.
Pr 4:3 She is the darling of her mother,
the favourite of the one who bore her.
Pr 31:28 Girls have seen her and proclaimed her blessed,
queens and concubines have sung her praises,
3:6 'Who is this arising like the dawn, 10
Rv 12:1 fair as the moon,
resplendent as the sun, [g]
4:4 formidable as an army?'

4:12k I went down to the nut orchard 11
2:11+;7:13–14 to see the fresh shoots in the valley, to see if the vines were budding
and the pomegranate trees in flower.
Before I knew . . . my desire had hurled me 12 onto the chariots of Amminadib! [h]

7 CHORUS: [a] Come back, come back, girl from Shulam, [b] 1 come back, come back, where we can look at you!
Why are you looking at the girl from Shulam,
dancing between two lines of dancers? [c]

LOVER: How beautiful are your feet in their sandals, [d] 2
O prince's daughter!
The curve of your thighs is like the curve of a necklace,
work of a master hand.
Your navel is a bowl well rounded 3
with no lack of wine,
your belly a heap of wheat
surrounded with lilies.
=4:5 Your two breasts are two fawns, 4
twins of a gazelle.
Your neck is an ivory tower. 5
Your eyes, the pools of Heshbon,
by the gate of Bath-Rabbim.
Your nose, the Tower of Lebanon,
sentinel facing Damascus.

Your head is held high like Carmel,
and its hair is as dark as purple;
a king is held captive in your tresses.[e]

How beautiful you are, how charming,
my love, my delight![f]
In stature like the palm tree,[g]
its fruit-clusters your breasts.
I have decided, 'I shall climb the palm tree,
I shall seize its clusters of dates!'
May your breasts be clusters of grapes,
your breath sweet-scented as apples,
and your palate like sweet wine.

BELOVED:[h] Flowing down the throat of my love, as it runs on the lips of those who sleep.[i]
I belong to my love,
and his desire is for me.[j] Gn 3:16

Come, my love,
let us go to the fields.[k]
We will spend the night in the villages, and in the early morning we will go to the vineyards.
We will see if the vines are budding,
if their blossoms are opening,
if the pomegranate trees are in flower. 2:10–14
Then I shall give you Gn 30:14a
the gift of my love.[l]
The mandrakes yield their fragrance,
the most exquisite fruits are at our doors;
the new as well as the old,
I have stored them for you, my love.

b. Vv. 4–10 form a short poem, the beginning and end of which are indicated by the repetition of the same words at the end of v. 4 and v. 10. Vv. 5[b]–7 are a partial repeat of 4:1–2,3[b] and may be an addition. The Lover proclaims that his Beloved is the only girl for him, meaning more to him than a royal harem, v. 8, cf. 1 K 11:3; 2 Ch 11:21; 13:21.

c. Jerusalem is 'loveliest of all, joy of the universe', Lm 2:15. Tirzah, early capital of the Northern Kingdom, 1 K 14:17, is put in apposition since the name means 'agreeable, pleasant'.

d. Meaning uncertain.

e. Compare Shakespeare: 'For shame, lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.'

f. Probably a gloss.

g. Compare the eulogy of a wife in Si 26:16–18. The High Priest Simon is compared to the moon and sun, Si 50:6–7. An Egyptian love-song compares the beloved, unique and peerless, cf. here v. 9, to Sirius, the brightest of the stars.

h. Vv. 11–12 are independent of the foregoing poem and are difficult to explain. It is not clear whether the Lover or the Beloved is speaking: the Lover, if the garden of v. 11 represents his Beloved, as in 4:12,16; 5:1, but the Beloved, if we suppose the second part of the v. to be said by her as 7:13. V. 12 is the obscurest in the Song and defies all explanation. • Probably Amminadib is the Palestinian equivalent of 'Prince Mehi', who figures in Egyptian songs as riding in a chariot and interfering in other people's love-affairs.

7 a. The Chorus calls and the Poet (rather than the Lover) intervenes to introduce a new description of the Beloved, vv. 2–6. This balances the description in 4:1–6, using some of the same elements: twin fawns, tower, though in reverse order and more sensually. The images of comparison are disparate: necklace, bowl, wheat, fawns, tower, followed by geographical features.

b. The name appears only here and remains unexplained. Reference has been suggested to the Shulamite who warmed David and whose beauty is extolled in 1 K 1:2–4, or to a feminine form derived from the name Solomon, 'she who belongs to Solomon', i.e. belonging to the Lover, cf. Sg 3:7–11.

c. The girl from Shulam is imagined as dancing between two choruses, who mark the rhythm of her steps by repeated shouts of 'Come back'—a well-known type of eastern dance by no means confined to weddings: hence the subsequent description begins with the dancer's feet. The text may have been recited by the Chorus, rather than by the Lover who speaks for certain only at vv. 7–10 following.

d. See also the corresponding description in 4:1–5.

e. Translation uncertain: if right, compare an Egyptian love-song: 'With her hair, she has thrown her nets over me.' • On the 'king' of this v. and the 'prince's daughter' of v. 2, see 1:4,12.

f. lit. 'daughter of delights' Syr. and Aquila; 'in the delights' Hebr. • vv. 7–10 express passionate desire for physical possession of the Beloved.

g. Three women in the Bible, Gn 38:6; 2 S 13:1; 14:27, are called Tamar, 'palm tree', a symbol of feminine beauty.

h. The Beloved takes up the Lover's last word (wine) to show how much she loves him in return.

i. Text and meaning uncertain. Gk has 'on my lips and teeth'.

j. Allusion to Gn 3:16 where the same very rare word means the attraction exerted by a man over his wife.

k. Evocation of spring as in 2:10–14, but here the invitation comes from the Beloved. Gardens form a favourite setting for Egyptian love-scenes.

l. Here the word requires its most realistic meaning, developed in the next line: mandrakes were believed to excite love and to promote fertility, see Gn 30:14–16. The fruits reserved for the Lover no longer evoke springtime but autumn after love has been consummated.

Ah, why are you not my brother, 1 nursed at my mother's breast! [a]
Then if I met you out of doors, I could kiss you without people thinking ill of me.
I should lead you, I should take you into my mother's 2
house, and you would teach me!
I should give you spiced wine to drink,
juice of my pomegranates.

=2:6 His left arm is under my head 3
and his right embraces me.

=2:7;=3:5 LOVER: I charge you, 4
daughters of Jerusalem,
do not rouse, do not wake my beloved,
before she pleases!

EPILOGUE [b]

3:6 Who is this coming up from the desert 5 leaning on her lover?

2:7;3:5; 5:2;8:4 I awakened you under the apple tree,
where your mother conceived you,
where she who bore you conceived you.

Dt 4:24;6:6,8; 11:18 Pr 3:3 Jr 31:33 BELOVED: [c] Set me like a seal on your heart, [d] 6 like a seal on your arm.
For love is strong as Death,
passion [e] as relentless as Sheol. [f]
The flash of it is a flash of fire,
a flame of Yahweh himself. [g]

Is 43:2 Love no flood can quench, 7
no torrents drown.
Were a man to offer all his family wealth
to buy love,
contempt is all that he would gain.

APPENDICES

Two epigrams [h]

Our sister is little: her breasts are not yet formed. What shall we do for our sister 8 on the day she is spoken for? [i] ·If she is a rampart, on the crest we shall build a 9 battlement of silver; if she is a door, we shall board her up [j] with planks of cedar.

I am a wall, and my breasts represent its towers. And under their [k] eyes I have 10 found true peace.

Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-Hamon. [l] He entrusted it to overseers, and each 11
one was to pay him the value of its produce, a thousand shekels of silver. ·But I 12 tend my own vineyard myself. You, Solomon, may have your thousand shekels, and those who oversee its produce their two hundred.

Final additions [m]

You who dwell in the gardens, my companions [n] listen for your voice; let 13 me hear it.

14 Haste away, my love,
be like a gazelle,
a young stag,
on the spice-laden mountains. 2:17

8 a. Beginning of another short poem, with a different setting, and a more intense and hyperbolical flight of fancy—of a love beginning in the cradle. The 'wine' and the 'juice' of v. 2 are the equivalents of the 'fruits' of the preceding poem. The piece ends with the refrain of 2:6–7.

b. The couplet and triplet of v. 5 are not connected either with each other or with what follows. They seem to be the opening lines of two poems which have not in fact been transcribed, as does also v. 13 below. This lack of context makes impossible any attempt at interpretation. The pronominal suffixes of v. 5^b are masculine in the Hebr., and have been corrected to feminine after the Syr.

c. Nowhere up to this point has the Song defined what love is. The Beloved now does so in the strongest, finest terms, proclaiming its invincible strength, its ineluctable nature and its priceless value. What follows v. 7 is additional material.

d. The seal, representative and sign of the owner's authority, was worn hanging from the neck, Gn 38:18,25, and resting on the chest (here, the heart), or else on the finger, Jr 22:24; Hg 2:23 (Hebr. 'arm' used here includes hand). An Egyptian song says: 'Would I were the seal that she wears on her finger!'

e. Not 'jealousy'; the term is parallel to 'love' in the previous line. What is meant here is passionate love.

f. The subterranean dwelling of the dead: here the equivalent of 'death' in the previous line.

g. Love consumes like the fire of heaven, like the thunderbolt, Jb 1:16.

h. These two pieces have no direct relation with the Song as regards either characters or subject matter. In the first, vv. 8–10, brothers are considering when they should marry off their young sister; the latter retorts that she is old enough to look after herself. The allusion to marriage accounts for its having been attached to the Song. In the second, vv. 11–12, an owner prefers his own vineyard to Solomon's vineyard and great wealth; Naboth's vineyard, 1 K 21:1–3, comes to mind. The vineyard or the garden as metaphors for the Beloved in 1:6; 2:15; 4:12seq., and the mention of Solomon, led the piece to be regarded as a love-song, hence its inclusion here.

i. For marriage.

j. 'board up' natztzib conj.; Hebr. natzur 'besiege'.

k. 'his' Hebr.; 'their' Gk.

l. Unknown place.

m. V. 13 is probably the beginning of a poem that has not been preserved, to which someone has added a verse inspired by 2:17.

n. 'my companions' conj.; 'the companions' Hebr.

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOK OF WISDOM

§1 The Greek book of Wisdom is one of the deutero-canonical books. It was used by the Fathers of the Church from the second century AD, and despite some hesitation and opposition, notably from St Jerome, was recognised as being inspired in just the same way as the books of the Hebrew canon.

In its opening section, the book, entitled Liber Sapientiae in the Vulgate, explains the function of Wisdom in human destiny and compares the fate of the good and the bad during life and after, ch. 1–5. The second section, ch. 6–9, treats of the origin and nature of Wisdom and of how it is to be won. The last section, ch. 10–19, celebrates the part played by Wisdom and by God in the history of the chosen people and, concentrating, apart from a brief introduction, on one single but critical event in that history, the deliverance from Egypt. This third section contains also a long and exhaustive digression on idolatry, ch. 13–15.

The author is supposed to be Solomon who, though not named, is clearly indicated in 9:7–8,12, and the book is called Wisdom of Solomon in Greek. The author writes as though he were a king, 7:5; 8:9–15, addressing his fellow kings, 1:1; 6:1–11,21. It is evident, however, that this is a literary device; as with Ecclesiastes and the Song of Songs, this Wisdom book is published under the nominal patronage of Israel's greatest sage. And indeed the entire book was written in Greek (including the first section, ch. 1–5, wrongly supposed by some scholars to have been originally written in Hebrew). The unity of authorship is apparent in the closely knit composition of the book and also in the consistency of a literary style which is supple and expressive and, when need arises, rhetorical.

There is no doubt that the author is a Jew: he is devoted to 'the God of our ancestors', 9:1, and proud to belong to 'a holy people, a blameless race', 10:15. But he is a hellenised Jew. That he dwells on the events of the Exodus, contrasts Egyptians with Israelites and attacks animal worship, shows that he lived in Alexandria, chief city of the hellenistic world under the Ptolemies and home of so many Jews of the Dispersion. When the author quotes Scripture it is from the Septuagint, the Greek version that came from these circles. He lived, therefore, after this version was made but before Philo of Alexandria (20 BC–AD 54) of whose work he knows nothing. The Greek philosopher, for his part, never seems to have drawn on the Book of Wisdom. There are, however, many points of contact between the thought of the two writers, living as they did in the same environment at very much the same time. The use of the Book of Wisdom by New Testament writers cannot be conclusively demonstrated, but it seems likely that Paul was influenced by its literary style and that John borrowed some of its ideas to express his own theology of the Word. The book was probably written in the second half of the first century BC and is the most recent of the books of the Old Testament.

§2 The author is writing primarily for his fellow-Jews whose faith is shaken by the attraction of the cultural life of Alexandria, its imposing philosophical systems, its advances in the physical sciences, its fascinating mystery religions, astrology, Hermetic doctrines, its seductive popular cults. Nevertheless, he has the gentiles in mind too, hoping to lead them to God, the lover of all men; certain remarks and turns of phrase betray this intention. But the intention remains a secondary one; the book is very much more concerned with safeguarding Jews than with conciliating gentiles.

Given the author's circumstances, his culture and his purpose, it is not surprising that his work has multiple contacts with Greek thought. The significance of these, however, must not be exaggerated. His hellenistic education provided him with a range of abstract terms and an easy familiarity with processes of argument beyond the capacity of the Hebrew vocabulary and syntax. To this same education he owes several philosophical terms, categories of classification and academic topics. But this restricted and superficial dependence does not mean intellectual commitment: the author borrows only to give expression to ideas deriving from the Old Testament itself. Of the various schools of philosophy and of astrological speculations he probably knew no more than the average cultured man of his own place and time.

§3 The author is neither a philosopher nor a theologian; he is a typical sage of Israel. Like the Wisdom writers before him he commends Wisdom, born of God, obtained by prayer, mainspring of all uprightness, source of every good. But he outstrips his predecessors, adding to the sum of this Wisdom the most recent achievements of human knowledge, 7:17–21; 8:8. The problem of retribution, for so long the study of the sages, see Introduction to the Wisdom Books §3, finds its solution in this book. The author makes use of the Platonic distinction of body from soul, see 9:15, and of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, to proclaim that God has made the human race for immortality, 2:23, and that incorruption is the reward of Wisdom and the way to God, 6:18–19. This life is only a preparation for another in which the upright live with God and the wicked are punished, 3:9–10. The author makes no allusion to a bodily resurrection. He does, however, seem to admit the possibility of a resurrection of bodies in a spiritualised form, in an attempt hereby to reconcile the Greek notion of immortality with biblical doctrines which were tending towards a bodily resurrection (Daniel).

His doctrine of God's attribute, Wisdom, is traditional. Wisdom was active in the whole work of creation and Wisdom carries history to its goal. The qualities assigned to Wisdom are from ch. 11 onwards attributed to God himself, but this is because Wisdom and God in his function of world-ruler are the same thing. Wisdom, however, is an 'emanation of the glory of the Almighty . . . a reflection of the eternal light . . . an image of his goodness' 7:25–26, and is therefore distinguished from God, but, at the same time, is the radiance of God's nature. The author, it seems, goes no further than the other Wisdom writers here, see Introduction to the Wisdom Books §2: it does not appear that he gives Wisdom an existence of its own; but the whole passage on the nature of Wisdom, 7:22–8:8, is a step forward in the expression of the traditional ideas and a deeper perception of them.

The author was not the first to make a survey of Israel's history. Ben Sira had gone before him, Si 44–50, cf. also Ps 78,105,106,135,136; but his originality emerges in two ways. In the first place he looks for explanations of the facts and outlines a religious philosophy of history behind which lies a fresh interpretation of the texts; so, for example, his disquisition on the moderation that God exercised towards Egypt and Canaan, 11:15–12:27. Secondly, and more significantly, he manipulates the biblical narrative in the interests of his thesis. In ch. 16–19, a sustained contrast between the fortunes of Egyptian and Israelite, the author fills out the narrative with imaginative elements, draws together episodes which in effect were disconnected, makes the facts more than lifesize. All this is an excellent example of midrash, the exegetical method practised later by the rabbis.

Tastes have changed and the Book of Wisdom has lost its original impact, but its first two sections, ch. 1–9, have much to offer the Christian mind, and the liturgy has made generous use of them.

The text of the Book of Wisdom is preserved in four major MSS: B [Vaticanus, fourth century], S [Sinaiticus, fourth century], A [Alexandrinus, fifth century] and C [Codex Ephraemi rescriptus, fifth century], and in a number of secondary MSS. The best MS is B, which has been used as the basis for this translation and which we describe as Textus receptus. The abbreviation Lat. indicates the Itala version [Latin], incorporated into the Vulgate but not revised by St Jerome.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM

I: WISDOM AND HUMAN DESTINY

On seeking God and rejecting evil

1 1 Love uprightness [a] you who are rulers on earth, [b] — Mt 6:33 be properly disposed towards the Lord and seek him in simplicity of heart; [c] — 2 Ch 15:2 2 for he will be found by those who do not put him to the test, — Pr 8:17 revealing himself to those who do not mistrust him. [d] 3 Perverse thoughts, however, separate people from God, and power, when put to the test, confounds the stupid. [e] 4 Wisdom will never enter the soul of a wrong-doer, nor dwell in a body enslaved to sin; [f] — Rm 7:24;8:2 5 for the holy spirit of instruction [g] flees deceitfulness, — Rm 8:14 recoils from unintelligent thoughts, is thwarted [h] by the onset of vice.

6 Wisdom is a spirit friendly to humanity, — 7:23 though she will not let a blasphemer's words go unpunished; — Pr 8:31 since God observes the very soul [i] — Tt 3:4
and accurately surveys the heart, — Jr 11:20
listening to every word.
7 For the spirit of the Lord fills the world, [j] — Ps 139:7–12 and that which holds everything together [k] knows every word said. [l] — Pr 22:12 8 No one who speaks what is wrong will go undetected, — Si 39:10 nor will avenging Justice pass by such a one. — ↗Ac 2:4 11:20

1 a. Same Gk formula in 1 Ch 29:17 and Ps 45:7. By uprightness is to be understood perfect accord of mind and act with the divine will as manifested in the precepts of the Law and the injunctions of conscience.

b. Cf. Ps 2:10. The author, who, by a literary fiction, will later infer that he is Solomon, 7:7–11; 9:7–8,12, purports to be addressing his fellow-kings (see 6:1–11). In fact, however, he is admonishing the Jews threatened by their gentile surroundings.

c. 'seeking God' in order to 'find him' is a recurrent admonition in prophetic and wisdom literature, see Am 5:4c, but the influence of 1 Ch 28:9 seems more direct. • On 'simplicity of heart', see 1 Ch 29:17; Ep 6:5; Col 3:22.

d. Same Gk expression in Is 65:1 and Jr 29 (LXX 36):13–14.

e. The power of God working in the world, which the author will identify indiscriminately with the Spirit and with Wisdom.

f. The body is not evil in itself but may become the instrument of sin and thus dominate the soul. John, 8:34, and Paul, Rm 7:14–24, give definitive expression to this idea.

g. 'of instruction'. var. 'of wisdom'. Israelite education, traditionally dispensed by the sages, is placed under the influence of a 'holy spirit', cf. Ps 51:11; Is 63:10–11; certain earlier texts had already represented the Holy Spirit as having been Israel's guide in the past, Ne 9:20,30; Is 63:10–11, or as an inner force, Ps 51:11; Ezk 11:19; 36:26–27; Wisdom, too, on occasion, assumed the function of the sages, Pr 1–9, or tended to become identified with the Spirit, see Ws 1:6–7; 7:22; 9:17.

h. Text obscure.

i. lit. 'kidneys'; considered the centre of the emotions and of instinctive impulse, Jb 19:27; Ps 16:7; 73:21; Pr 23:16; in the 'heart' is localised conscious activity of intellect and of will, Gn 8:21c. 'heart' and 'kidneys' are frequently associated, Ps 7:9; 26:2; Jr 11:20; 17:10; 20:12; Rv 2:23, to signify human inner forces.

j. The omnipresence of God, affirmed in Jr 23:24 (see also 1 K 8:27; Am 9:2–3); is understood in terms of his Spirit in Ps 139:7 and its universal, life-giving activity, Jdt 16:14; Jb 34:14–15; Ps 104:30.

k. The term translated by this expression is borrowed from the vocabulary of the Stoics, very emphatically showing the function of the Spirit of the Lord. The only biblical parallel (distant) seems to be Gn 1:2. Transposed, the term means the effective power of a transcendent God.

l. The Spirit links everything so intimately together that it is immediately aware of every word uttered. By accommodation, the liturgy of Pentecost applies this text to the 'gift of tongues', Ac 2:2–4.

For the schemes of the godless will be examined, 9 and a report of his words will reach the Lord to convict him of his crimes.
Dt 29:19 There is a jealous ear that overhears everything, 10 not even a murmur of complaint escapes it.
Ex 15:24i So beware of uttering frivolous complaints, 11
Ps 78:19 restrain your tongue from finding fault; [m]
even what is said in secret has repercussions,
and a lying mouth deals death to the soul.

Pr 8:36 Do not court death by the errors of your ways, 12
nor invite destruction through the work of your hands.
2:23–24; 11:23–12:1 For God did not make Death, [n] 13
Ezk 18:32;33:11 he takes no pleasure in destroying the living.
To exist—for this he created all things; [o] 14
the creatures of the world have health in them,
in them is no fatal poison,
and Hades [p] has no power over the world:
3:4c for uprightness is immortal. [q] 15

Life as the godless see it

But the godless [r] call for Death with deed and word, 16
Pr 8:36 counting him friend, they wear themselves out for him;
Si 14:12 Is 28:15 with him they make a pact, worthy as they are to belong to him. [s]

2 And this is the false argument they use, 1
Jb 7:9; 14: 1–2, 1a Qo 8:8 'Our life is short and dreary, [a]
there is no remedy when our end comes,
no one is known to have come back [b] from Hades.
We came into being by chance [c] 2
and afterwards shall be as though we had never been.
Ps 102:3 The breath in our nostrils is a puff of smoke, reason a spark from the beating of our hearts;
extinguish this and the body turns to ashes, 3
and the spirit melts away like the yielding air.
Jb 7:9;18:17–19 Qo 1:11; 2:16;9:5seq. In time, our name will be forgotten, [d] 4 nobody will remember what we have done;
Jm 4:14 our life will pass away like wisps of cloud, dissolving like the mist
that the sun's rays drive away
and that its heat dispels.
1 Ch 29:15 Jb 8:9;14:2 Ps 39:6;144:4 Qo 6:12;8:13 For our days are the passing of a shadow, 5 our end is without return,
the seal is affixed and nobody comes back. [e]

Is 22:13 1 Co 15:32 'Come then, let us enjoy the good things of today, 6
Is 56:12 let us use created things with the zest of youth:
take our fill of the dearest wines and perfumes, 7
on no account forgo the flowers of spring [f]
but crown ourselves with rosebuds before they wither, 8
no meadow [g] excluded from our orgy; 9
let us leave the signs of our revelry everywhere,
1:16 Is 57:6 since this is our portion, this our lot!

Ex 22:20–21+ Lv 25:35–37 'As for the upright man who is poor, [h] let us oppress him; 10
let us not spare the widow, nor respect old age, white-haired with many years. [i] Lv 19:32 11 Let our might be the yardstick of right, [j]

since weakness argues its own futility.
12 Let us lay traps for the upright man, since he annoys us [k] Jr 11:19; 20:10–13 and opposes our way of life, Mt 23;26:3–4 reproaches us for our sins against the Law, Jn 5:16,18
and accuses us of sins against our upbringing.
13 He claims to have knowledge of God, [l] Mt 11:27
and calls himself a child of the Lord. 5:5 14 We see him as a reproof to our way of thinking, Lk 22:70
the very sight of him weighs our spirits down; 15 for his kind of life is not like other people's, Est 3:8,13[d,e]
and his ways are quite different. [m] 16 In his opinion we are counterfeit;
he avoids our ways as he would filth;
he proclaims the final end of the upright as blessed [n] Mt 5:11 and boasts of having God for his father. Jn 5:18 17 Let us see if what he says is true, and test him to see what sort of end he will have. [o]
18 For if the upright man is God's son, [p] God will help him Ps 22:8
and rescue him from the clutches of his enemies. ↗Mt 27:43 19 Let us test him with cruelty and with torture,

m. With God and his providence.

n. The author is thinking simultaneously of physical and of spiritual death which are interconnected; sin is the cause of death, and physical death for the sinner is also spiritual and eternal death. The author refers here to the account in Gn 2–3 to comment on the Creator's intentions: human beings were made for immortality. Nothing within the creation can thwart the divine will; on the contrary, 'creatures' help towards human salvation. Paul, Rm 5:12–21, 12g, will later develop this doctrine of death introduced by sin, by contrasting the first sinner Adam and the second Adam, the Saviour.

o. God, 'He who is', Ex 3:13g, created all things to 'be', to have a real, substantial and durable life.

p. 'Hades', the Hebr. Sheol, Nb 16:33f, here represents not the dwelling-place of the dead but the power of personified Death, cf. Mt 16:18; Rv 6:8; 20:14.

q. Anyone who practises 'uprightness', see 1:1a, is assured of immortality. Some Latin MSS add 'but vice is the acquisition of death'. This ill-supported addition is not likely to represent the original Gk text.

r. The 'godless' here are primarily renegade, cynical and self-indulgent Jews who even go so far as to persecute their fellow-Jews and to defy God. The materialistic gentiles, to whom they have become assimilated and whose attitudes of mind they have adopted, are included too.

s. The wicked belong to death, as Israel belongs to God, Dt 32:9; 2 M 1:26; Zc 2:16, and as God belongs to his faithful, Ps 16:5; 73:26; 142:5.

2 a. This pessimistic view of life is found elsewhere in the Bible, see Gn 47:9; Jb 14:1–2; Ps 39:4–6; 90:9–10; Qo 2:23; Si 40:1–2, and is also to be found in Greek literature, where the tone is even more melancholy and disenchanted.

b. Or perhaps 'to have given release'. Hades here, as in Rv 1:18, means the abode of the dead, Nb 16:33f, from which there is no return, Jb 7:9e, and not the power of personified Death as in Ws 1:14 above. The godless do not even believe in its existence, denying this on experiential grounds.

c. The fortuitous agglomeration of elements or of atoms accounts for the origin of each individual, and the agglomeration disperses totally in death. The breath of life is attributed to the phenomenon of the heating and combustion of air, and thought is attributed to a spark generated by 'the beating of the heart'. This mechanistic explanation reinforces various Gk theories hostile to the reality of the soul, at the same time countering biblical doctrines with its ironic image of the 'breath in the nostrils', Gn 2:7; Jb 27:3.

d. In the Bible, this forgetfulness is often regarded as the punishment of the godless, see Dt 9:14; Jb 18:17; Ps 9:5–7; Si 44:9; etc., but some texts apply it to all the dead without distinction, Ps 31:12; Qo 2:16; 9:5.

e. Or 'does not bring back'.

f. 'of spring' Gk MSS, Syr. Hex., Arm.; 'of the air' Text. rec. and Syr.

g. 'no meadow' conj., following the Lat.; 'none of us' Gk.

h. Sarcasm: the 'upright' is 'poor' notwithstanding the explicit promises of Scripture, Ps 37:25; 112:3; Pr 3:9–10; 12:21.

i. The very people who Scripture teaches should be respected and protected.

j. This attitude with its automatic contempt for the weak is to supplant the Law guaranteeing justice for all. The Bible is familiar with the primacy of force, Jb 12:6; Hab 1:7,11, and often shows it in action; certain Gk theories supported the notion that 'might is right' by analogy with the laws of nature.

k. Literary influence of Is 3:10 (LXX), unless the influence is in the opposite direction.

l. Knowledge, not only of the one God, but of his wishes, Rm 2:17–20, put into practice, perhaps also of his mysterious designs for humanity (cf. Ws 2:22).

m. The godless repeat the accusations often levelled against the Jewish people, whose beliefs and practices set them apart from the rest of humanity.

n. Possibly an allusion to the story of Job, 42:12–15, if only temporal retribution is envisaged. But the expression may perhaps imply the assurance of a reward for the upright in the hereafter, the scope of which the godless deliberately misrepresent.

o. Lat. adds 'and we shall know what his final lot will be': a second translation of the Gk text.

p. In the Bible, the expression 'child of God' often means Israel or the Israelites, Ex 4:22–23; Dt 14:1; Is 1:2; Ho 11:1. But there is a gradual tendency to reserve it for the upright or to the nation of the future, see already Ho 2:1. It is occasionally applied to individuals, 2 S 7:14; Ps 2:7; Si 4:10. Although, however, on occasion, an Israelite may invoke God as father, Si 23:1,4; 51:10, see also Ps 89:26, no Israelite ever calls himself 'his child'. Throughout the rest of the book, the title is applied to the Israelites of the past as members of a holy people, 9:7; 10:15,17; 12:19,21; 16:26; 18:4.

Is 53:7 Mt 26:67–68; 27:12seq.

since God will rescue him—or so he claims.' [q]

Error of the godless

This is the way they reason, but they are misled, 21
Rm 1:21 Ep 4:18 since their malice makes them blind.
They do not know the hidden things of God, [r] 22
they do not hope for the reward of holiness,
they do not believe in a reward for blameless souls.
1:13n;3:4c For God created human beings to be immortal, 23
Gn 1:26m Ps 8:5 he made them as an image of his own nature; [s]
2 P 1:4 •Gn 3 ↗Rm 5:12 Death came into the world only through the Devil's envy, [t] 24

Destinies of the good and bad compared

Dt 33:3 Ps 89:21 Is 51:16 Jn 10:29 4:17
3 But the souls of the upright are in the hands of God, [a] 1 and no torment can touch them.
To the unenlightened, they appeared to die, 2
their departure was regarded as a disaster, their leaving us like an annihilation; 3
Is 57:2 but they are at peace. [b]
If, as it seemed to us, they suffered punishment, 4
1:15;2:23s their hope was rich with immortality; [c]
Rm 8:18 2 Co 4:17 Jb 23:10 Ps 17:3; 26,28 Pr 17:2 slight was their correction, great will their blessings be. 5
God was putting them to the test [d]
and has proved them worthy to be with him;
he has tested them like gold in a furnace, 6
and accepted them as a perfect burnt offering.
Dn 12:3 Mt 13:43 At their time of visitation, [e] they will shine out; 7
as sparks run through the stubble, so will they. [f] Ps 49:14; 149:7seq. Dn 7:27 1 Co 6:2 Rv 5:10;20:4–6 They will judge nations, rule over peoples, 8 and the Lord will be their king for ever.
Those who trust in him will understand the truth, [g] 9
•Pr 28:5 1 Co 13:12 1 Jn 3:2 •4:15 those who are faithful will live with him in love; [h] for grace and mercy await his holy ones,
and he intervenes on behalf of his chosen.

But the godless will be duly punished for their reasoning, 10 for having neglected the upright [i] and deserted the Lord.
Yes, wretched are they who scorn wisdom and discipline: [j] 11
their hope is void,
their toil unavailing,
their achievements unprofitable;
their wives are reckless, 12
Ps 109:9–10 Si 41:5–6 their children depraved,

Better be sterile than have godless children

4:1 Is 54:1 Heb 13:4
Blessed the sterile woman [k] if she be blameless, 13
and has not known an unlawful bed, [l]
for she will have fruit at the visitation of souls. [m]
Is 56:3–4 Blessed, too, the eunuch [n] whose hand commits no crime, 14
and who harbours no resentment against the Lord:
a special favour will be granted to him for his loyalty, a most desirable portion in the temple of the Lord. [o] Ps 16:5–6 15 For the fruit of honest labours is glorious, and the root of understanding [p] does not decay. 1:15;2:23 16 But the children of adulterers [q] will not reach maturity,

the offspring of an unlawful bed will disappear.
17 Even if they live long, they will count for nothing, their old age will go unhonoured at the last;
18 while if they die early, they have neither hope nor comfort on the day of judgement,
19 for the end of a race of evil-doers is harsh. [r] Si 16:4

1 4 Better to have no children yet to have virtue, [a] Si 16:3
since immortality perpetuates its memory; [b] Pr 10:7
for God and human beings both recognise it.
2 Present, we imitate it,
absent, we long for it;

q. lit. 'there will be a visitation (of God) for him'. On this visitation, see 3:7e. • The points of resemblance to the Passion of Christ, condemned to a 'shameful death' for claiming to be 'Son of God', impressed the first generations of Christians, see Mt 27:43, and a number of Fathers of the Church considered this passage to be prophetic. In immediate view the author has the faithful Jews of Alexandria, mocked and persecuted by the renegades and their gentile allies. At the same time, he has described an ideal or typical persecution. Hence, his text eminently applies to the Upright Man of all time, Heb 12:3.

r. The secret designs of God as regards the immortal human destiny.

s. lit. 'of his own property'; var. 'of his own eternity' or 'of his own likeness'. The author adapts the theme of the creation of man in the image of God, Gn 1:26 and uses the allusion apparently to emphasise the eternal nature of God.

t. 'Devil' in the LXX renders the Hebr. 'Satan', see Jb 1:6g. Here the author is interpreting Gn 3, cf. Rv 12:9; 20:2. The death introduced by the devil is spiritual, with physical death as its consequence, see 1:13; Rm 5:12seq.

3 a. i.e. under his protection, cf. Dt 33:3; Is 51:16; Jn 10:28–29, and dependent on him, cf. Jb 12:10.

b. 'Peace' means not only the absence of all evil, Jb 3:17–18; Is 57:2, but a state of security or of happiness under the protection of (v. 1) or in intimacy with (v. 9) God.

c. Hope, Rm 5:2c, has a pre-eminent role in the life of the upright; the object of hope is immortality, athanasia. This word, hitherto unused in the OT, but familiar to the Greeks, could mean either the immortality of remembrance, cf. 8:13, or the immortality of the soul. The author uses it here in the second sense, more specifically to mean the blessed immortality in the companionship of God, as reward for uprightness, 1:15; 2:23. He thus develops the hopes of the Psalmist, who could not reconcile himself to losing the intimacy of God by dying, Ps 16:10g.

d. 'To the test', touchstone and means of purifying the upright, cf. Gn 22:1; Tb 12:13; Jb 1:12; Ps 66:10; 1 P 1:6–7.

e. This word, see Ex 3:16, here means a favourable intervention by God, possibly coinciding with a general or partial judgement. The expression itself, literally reproducing Jr 6:15; 10:15 (LXX), see also Is 24:22, implies a later phase in the condition of upright souls. The verb following presumably means their final glorification; if the notion of 'shining out' does in fact apply to the resurrected elect, Dn 12:3; Mt 13:43, this doctrine of a bodily resurrection is nowhere explicitly mentioned in the book.

f. In many biblical passages, see Is 1:31; 5:24; Ob 18; Na 1:10; Zc 12:6; Ml 3:19, the image symbolises the effects of God's avenging anger or of Israel's revenge on its enemies. Here it is used slightly differently, perhaps to mean the participation of the glorified upright in the extermination of evil, preceding the establishing of the kingdom of God, with which they are associated (v. 8).

g. A 'truth' which will vindicate their trust and reveal the full scope of God's design to them.

h. Or, by dividing the phrase differently: 'and those who are faithful in love will dwell with him'. Whichever translation is adopted, the happiness of the elect consists of knowledge and love.

i. Or 'what is upright'.

j. Expression borrowed from Pr 1:7. The word 'wisdom' means the practical wisdom enabling one to live uprightly; the word 'discipline', translated elsewhere as 'instruction', 1:5; 6:17; 7:14, and 'upbringing', 2:12, comprehends the means necessary for acquiring it.

k. Sterility was regarded as a disgrace or as a punishment; fertility was a sign of God's blessing. To the sterile but faithful wife, the author attributes spiritual fertility.

l. lit. 'who has not known the bed in infidelity'. The author is thinking of a faithful Jewess, married to a faithful Jew, in conformity with the prescriptions of the Law. He thus rules out not only adultery and fornication, cf. Heb 13:4, but also conjugal relations within mixed marriages, Dt 7:3; Ezr 9:1–2.

m. var. in many Latin MSS 'of their souls' or 'of holy souls'. This visitation is probably the same as in v. 7.

n. Eunuchs were excluded from the religious assembly of Israel, Dt 23:2, but Is 56:3–5 had announced their rehabilitation in the messianic age, if they faithfully obeyed the Law of God. The author elaborates and adapts the latter text.

o. i.e. in heaven, Ps 11:4; 18:9; Mi 1:2–3; Rv 3:12; 7:15, where the upright enjoy the presence of God.

p. 'understanding' means the wise discernment of true values conducive to an upright life and assuring conformity to God's will, cf. 4:9; 6:15; 7:7; 8:6,18,21. This root is stable, Pr 12:3, and fertile, bearing fruit for eternity, Ws 1:15; 2:23.

q. In biblical usage, the term 'adulterer' is applied to Israel or to Israelites when unfaithful to God, see Is 57:3; Jr 9:1; Ezk 23:37; Ho 3:1. It can therefore also include apostate Jews, or Jews who have contracted marriage with gentile women, see v. 13*l*, and not merely adulterers in the primary sense of the word; see also 4:3,6.

r. In this passage (see also v. 12 above) on the wretched lot of a godless lineage, the author repeats ancient biblical themes: the parents are punished in their children and the latter, identified with them in guilt and punishment (see, however, Ezk 18:14–20), will die prematurely or never know honourable old age (see, however, Jb 21:7–33). The prospect of severe judgement, v. 18, when God takes a final decision, makes the picture gloomier still; cf. 4:3–5.

4 a. For this line, most Latin MSS read 'Oh, how beautiful the chaste and radiant race!' This cannot be the original translation, but witnesses to a tendency to read the Greek text as a eulogy of chastity; an ancient patristic tradition understands it as a eulogy of virginity. This interpretation is not convincing, since the author goes on apparently with his antithesis between virtuous sterility (see 3:13) and godless fecundity.

b. Immortality in human memory and personal immortality conferred by God, see 3:4c.

5:16 crowned, it holds triumph through eternity, having striven for untainted prizes and emerged the victor. [c]

But the offspring of the godless come to nothing, however prolific, 3 Si 23:25;40:15 sprung from a bastard stock, they will never strike deep roots, never put down firm foundations.
They may branch out for a time, 4
Ps 58:9 but, on unsteady foundations, they will be rocked by the wind and uprooted by the force of the storm;
their branches, yet unformed, will be snapped off, 5
their fruit be useless,
too unripe to eat,
fit for nothing.
For children begotten of unlawful bed 6
witness, when put on trial, [d] to their parents' wickedness.

The premature death of the upright [e]

3:3b The upright, though he die before his time, will find rest. 7
Is 57:1–2
Si 25:4–6 Length of days is not what makes age honourable, 8
nor number of years the true measure of life;
Pr 16:31 understanding, this is grey hairs, 9
untarnished life, this is ripe old age.
Having won God's favour, he has been loved 10
Gn 5:34 and, as he was living among sinners, has been taken away. [f]
Si 44:16
Heb 11:5 He has been carried off so that evil may not warp 11 his understanding or deceitfulness seduce his soul;
for the fascination of evil throws good things into the shade, 12 and the whirlwind of desire corrupts a simple heart.
Having come to perfection so soon, he has lived long; 13
his soul being pleasing to the Lord, 14
he has hurried away [g] from the wickedness around him.

Is 57:1 Yet people [h] look on, uncomprehending;
and it does not enter their heads
3:9 that grace and mercy await his chosen ones 15 and that he intervenes on behalf of his holy ones.
The upright who dies condemns the godless who survive, 16
and youth quickly perfected condemns the lengthy old age of the wicked.
3:2 These people see the end of the wise 17
without understanding what the Lord has in store or why he has taken such a one to safety;
they look on and sneer, 18
Ps 37:13;59:8 but the Lord will laugh at them.
Pr 1:26
Soon they will be corpses without honour, 19 objects of horror among the dead for ever. [i]
Ac 1:18 For he will shatter them and fling them headlong and dumbfounded.
He will shake them from their foundations;
they will be utterly laid waste,
a prey to grief,
and their memory will perish.

The godless called to judgement [j]

When the count of their sins has been drawn up, in terror they will come, 20 and their crimes, confronting them, will accuse them.
Mt 13:43 5 Then the upright [a] will stand up boldly 1 2:10–20 to face those who had oppressed him

and had thought so little of his sufferings.
2 And, seeing him, they will be seized with terrible fear, amazed that he should have been so unexpectedly saved.
3 Stricken with remorse, they will say to one another with groans [b] and labouring breath, 4 'This is the one whom we used to mock, making him the butt of our insults, fools that we were!
His life we regarded as madness, 2:15
his ending as without honour. 2:20 5 How has he come to be counted as one of the children of God 2:13 and to have his lot among the holy ones? [c] Col 1:12 6 Clearly we have strayed from the way of truth; Pr 21:16
the light of justice has not shone for us, Ps 119:105
the sun has not risen for us. Ml 3:20 7 We have left no path of lawlessness or ruin unexplored, we have crossed deserts where there was no track,
but the way of the Lord is one we have never known.
8 What good has arrogance been to us?
What has been the purpose of our riches and boastfulness?
9 All those things have passed like a shadow, 2:5
passed like a fleeting rumour. Jb 9:25–26 10 Like a ship that cuts through heaving waves— Pr 30:19 leaving no trace to show where it has passed,
no wake from its keel in the waves.
11 Or like a bird flying through the air—leaving no proof of its passing;
it whips the light air with the stroke of its pinions,
tears it apart in its whirring rush,
drives its way onward with sweeping wing,
and afterwards no sign is seen of its passage.
12 Or like an arrow shot at a mark,
the pierced air closing so quickly on itself,
there is no knowing which way the arrow has passed.
13 So with us: scarcely born, we disappear; [d]
of virtue not a trace have we to show,
we have spent ourselves in our own wickedness!' [e]

c. Or 'in a competition of untainted struggles'. The image is borrowed from the Gk athletic games, in which the victor received a crown and an escort of honour; cf. 1 Co 9:24.

d. lit. 'at their trial', that is, at the judgement, cf. 1:9; 3:18, which the children will have to undergo; but 'their', grammatically speaking, can equally well refer to the 'parents'.

e. Long life was to be the lot of the upright on earth, see Dt 4:40; 5:16; Jb 5:26; Ps 91:16; Pr 3:2,16; 4:10; Si 1:12,20, the godless being doomed to a sudden or violent death, Jb 15:20–23; 18:5–20; Ps 37; 73:18–20, but such assertions were often belied by the facts, see 2 K 23:29; Jb 21:7; Qo 8:12–14. The author is envisaging an extreme case, the death of the upright in youth (see v. 16[b]) and identifies long life with the inner maturity that attains the true end of human existence and predisposes the soul for blessed immortality.

f. The expression is inspired by the story of the translation of Enoch, Gn 5:24; Si 44:16; Heb 11:5.

g. Or 'she (the soul) has hurried away'; or 'he has hurriedly withdrawn her'.

h. lit. 'the peoples'; var. 'others'. This word, taken up later by 'the godless' is slightly surprising. The construction of the sentence in further complicated by an anacoluthon.

i. Not having received the honours of burial, this being regarded as a frightful punishment, see Is 14:19; Jr 22:19; 36:30; Ezk 29:5.

j. A judgement scene, in which God 'will draw up the count' of sins or when sins will have to 'be accounted for'. This judgement, however, concerns only the godless, since the upright have already been admitted to the presence of God, cf. 5:4–5. The author is less interested in the pronouncing of the sentence than in the state of mind of the sinners, tortured by a guilty conscience, cf. 17:10. Their confession, 5:4–13, is to be contrasted with their earlier words, 2:1–20.

5 a. The term seems to have the same scope as in 2:12seq., see also 2:20q, though possibly even more generalised. Some critics, however, claim to detect a relationship with the servant, Is 53, and even with the Teacher of Righteousness in the Qumran texts. The treatment indeed suggests a typical figure, representing all who endure similar ordeals.

b. 'with groans' Lat., Coptic; 'they will groan' Gk.

c. 'children of God' and 'holy ones' can mean the angels: cf. on the one hand Jb 1:6; Ps 29:1; 82:1; 89:6, and on the other Jb 5:1; 15:15; Ps 89:5,7; Si 42:17; Dn 4:14; Zc 14:5. On the strength of 2:18, however, it seems preferable to identify the 'children of God' with the elect who enjoy God's intimacy in heaven and who may equally well be called 'holy ones', see Ps 16:3; 34:9; Is 4:3; Dn 7:18,21,22; 8:24.

d. Between these two extremes, nothing of durable value has marked their existence.

e. Most Latin MSS add 'This is what those who have sinned say in hell.'

Ps 1:4 Is 29:5 — For the hope of the godless is like chaff carried on the wind,[f] 14 like fine spray[g] driven by the storm;
Ps 37:20;68:3 — it disperses like smoke before the wind, goes away like the memory of a one-day guest.

Glorious destiny of the upright and punishment of the godless[h]

But the upright live for ever,[i] 15
Is 62:11 — their recompense is with the Lord,[j]
and the Most High takes care of them.
4:2 Pr 4:9 Is 28:5 1 Co 9:25+ 19:8 Ps 7:10 — So they will receive the glorious crown 16
and the diadem of beauty from the Lord's hand;
for he will shelter them with his right hand
and with his arm he will shield them.

Is 59:16–17+ — For armour[k] he will take his jealous love, 17
16:24;19:6 — he will arm creation to punish his enemies;
Ep 6:15 1 Th 5:8 — he will put on justice as a breastplate, 18
and for helmet wear his forthright judgement;
Lv 17:1a — he will take up invincible holiness for shield, 19
of his pitiless wrath he will forge a sword,[l] 20 16:17 — and the universe will march with him to fight the reckless.[m] Ps 7:12–13; 18:14 — Bolts truly aimed, the shafts of lightning will leap,[n] 21 and from the clouds, as from a full-drawn bow, fly to their mark; and the catapult will hurl hailstones[o] charged with fury. 22
The waters of the sea will rage against them,
the rivers engulf them without pity,[p]
Is 30:27–28; — a mighty gale will rise against them 23
and winnow them like a hurricane.
Thus wickedness will lay the whole earth waste and evil-doing bring down the thrones of the mighty.

II: SOLOMON AND THE QUEST FOR WISDOM

Kings should seek Wisdom

1:1 Ps 2:10 Si 33:19 Pr 8:15–16 — 6 [a]Listen then, kings, and understand;[b] 1 rulers of remotest lands, take warning;
hear this, you who govern great populations, 2
taking pride in your hosts of subject nations!
1 Ch 29:12 Dn 2:21,37 Jn 19:11 Rm 13:1 — For sovereignty is given to you by the Lord 3
and power by the Most High,[c] who will himself probe your acts and scrutinise your intentions.

If therefore, as servants of his kingdom,[d] you have not ruled justly 4 5
nor observed the law,[e]
nor followed the will of God,
he will fall on you swiftly and terribly. 5 6
On the highly placed a ruthless judgement falls; 7
the lowly are pardoned, out of pity, 6
but the mighty will be mightily tormented.
Jb 34:17–19 Si 35:12seq. — For the Lord of all does not cower before anyone, 7
he does not stand in awe of greatness, Jb 31:15 Pr 22:2 — since he himself has made small and great and provides for all alike;
but a searching trial awaits those who wield power. 8 9
So, monarchs, my words are meant for you, 9 10

so that you may learn wisdom and not fall into error;
10 for those who in holiness observe holy things will be adjudged holy,[f] 5:5
and, accepting instruction from them, will find their defence in them.
12 11 Set your heart, therefore, on what I have to say, listen with a will, and you will be instructed.

Wisdom sought is Wisdom found[g]

13 12 Wisdom is brilliant, she never fades.
By those who love her, she is readily seen, Pr 8:17
by those who seek her, she is readily found. Si 6:27
Mt 7:7–11par.
14 13 She anticipates those who desire her by making herself known first. Jn 14:21
14 Whoever gets up early to seek her will have no trouble Si 6:36;39:5
but will find her sitting at the door.
16 15 Meditating on her is understanding in its perfect form, and anyone keeping awake for her will soon be free from care.
16 For she herself searches everywhere for those who are worthy of her, Pr 1:20–21; 8:2–3 benevolently appearing to them on their ways, Si 15:2
anticipating their every thought.[h] Is 65:1–2,24 18 17 [i]For Wisdom begins with the sincere desire for instruction,[j] 1 Jn 4:10 Pr 4:7
care for instruction means loving her, 19 18 loving her means keeping her laws,[k]
attention to her laws guarantees incorruptibility,[l] 3:4c 20 19 and incorruptibility brings us near to God;
20 the desire for Wisdom thus leads to sovereignty. 3:7–8;5:16
22 21 If then thrones and sceptres delight you, monarchs of the nations, honour Wisdom, so that you may reign for ever.[m]

f. The author ends this confession of the damned with further images: the godless sees his hope of happiness (cf. 3:11) frustrated for ever, since he has been attached to transitory things.

g. 'spray' Lat., Syr.; 'hoarfrost' Gk (except a few MSS which read 'spider's web').

h. The author contrasts the life of the upright, sure of their eternal reward, vv. 15–16[ab], under the protection of God, v. 16[cd], with the plagues unleashed for the final punishment of the godless, vv. 17–23, a punishment described in the apocalyptic terms of a great battle, Is 24–26; Ezk 38–39, and cosmic convulsions, Am 8:8–9h. This section is perhaps referring to a specific eschatological event.

i. The true life of intimacy with God. Though begun on earth, this life has no end.

j. Or 'their recompense is in the Lord'; cf. Ps 16:5–6; 73:26.

k. This 'armour', inspired by Is 59:16–17, symbolises the attributes of the God of Saving Justice, who puts his sentence into execution by unleashing the elements.

l. On the divine 'sword' see Dt 32:41; Is 66:16; Ezk 21.

m. In the Bible, God often uses nature to execute his judgements. Here the author lays stress on this concept and emphasises it even more when he reviews the events of the Exodus (see particularly, ch. 16 and 19). The following description makes use of various ancient themes, transposing them into an eschatological context.

n. The storm is the traditional image of divine intervention, see Ex 19:16g. On the 'shafts of lightning', see Ps 18:14; Hab 3:11; Zc 9:14.

o. As in the time of the Exodus, Ex 9:23–25, and of Joshua, Jos 10:11, and as in the judgements of God foretold by the prophets, Is 28:17; Ezk 13:13; 38:22; see also Rv 8:7; 11:19; 16:21.

p. As the Sea of Reeds swallowed the Egyptians, Ex 14:26seq., and as the Kishon washed away the corpses of Sisera's soldiers, Jg 5:21. The unleashing of the waters is the symbol of great catastrophes, Ps 18:4e.

6 a. The Latin begins the chapter with an addition, evidently a title: 'wisdom is better than force and a prudent man than a strong one.' This counts as v. 1 in the Vulg.

b. Unlike 1:1, attention is now concentrated on monarchs and their responsibilities, and the scope is universal.

c. The doctrine of the divine origin of power had already been variously asserted in Scripture, notably in 1 Ch 29:12; Pr 8:15–16; Si 10:4; Dn 2:37. The author tightens its application (see also Jn 19:11; Rm 13:1) and extends it to include all rulers whatsoever as 'servants' of God's sovereignty.

d. Or 'of his sovereignty'.

e. First of all, the natural law interpreted by conscience, cf. Rm 2:14, but also doubtless the various legal codes defining it, which gentile kings must observe if they wish to be distinguishable from tyrants.

f. i.e. those who religiously obey the will of God and who will be recognised as 'holy ones' (5:5) at the judgement.

g. Here the word 'wisdom' means, not only a doctrine (v. 9), but divine truth shining through that doctrine and appealing to the human soul, v. 13; cf., however, Jn 6:44; Ph 2:13; 1 Jn 4:19.

h. Or 'by all sorts of inventions'.

i. vv. 17–20 are a free imitation of the Gk style of 'chain-argument', in which the attribute of each proposition becomes the subject of the next, and the conclusion (v. 20) links the initial subject (here 'the desire for Wisdom') with the last but one attribute (here being 'near to God', picked up by 'sovereignty').

j. Or 'her sincere beginning is the desire for instruction'.

k. Love implies obedience, Ex 20:6; Dt 5:10; 11:1; Si 2:15; Jn 14:15; etc. The 'laws' of Wisdom are the great religious and moral obligations contained in the divine revelation; possibly also those unwritten laws dictated by conscience and illuminated by the Wisdom of God.

l. The word is used here in a legal sense. Concentration on observing the laws of Wisdom does not in itself confer incorruptibility, but rather gives rise to a real and incontestable claim to receive blessed incorruptibility or immortality from God, cf. 2:23; 3:4.

m. Many Latin MSS add 'love the light of Wisdom, all you who are leaders of peoples.' This supplementary v. in the Vulg. (v. 23) is either a gloss or a doublet.

Solomon proposes to describe Wisdom

What Wisdom is and how she was born, I shall now explain; 22 24
Jb 28 I shall hide no mysteries from you, [n]
but shall follow her steps from the outset of her origin, setting out what we know of her in full light,
without departing from the truth.
Si 51:23seq. Blighting envy is not the companion for me, 23 for envy has nothing in common with Wisdom.
In the greatest number of wise men lies the world's salvation, 24 26
Pr 29:4 Si 10:1–3 in a sagacious king the stability of a people.
Learn, therefore, from my words; the gain will be yours. 25

Solomon a man like other men

7 I too am mortal [a] like everyone else, 1
Gn 2:7 Jb 10:10c a descendant of the first man formed from the earth.
Ps 139:13–16 Si 17:1 I was modelled in flesh inside a mother's womb, where, for ten months, [b] in blood I acquired substance— 2
the result of virile seed and pleasure, sleep's companion.
I too, when I was born, drew in the common air, 3
I fell on the same ground that bears us all,
and crying was the first sound I made, like everyone else.
I was nurtured in swaddling clothes, with every care. 4
No king has known any other beginning of existence; 5
1 K 2:2 Jb 1:21 for there is only one way into life, and one way out of it. 6

Solomon's respect for Wisdom

9 And so I prayed, and understanding was given me; 7
1 K 3:6–9,12; 5:9–14 Si 47:12–17 I entreated, and the spirit of Wisdom came to me.
I esteemed her more than sceptres and thrones; [c] 8
compared with her, I held riches as nothing.
I reckoned no precious stone to be her equal, 9
for compared with her, all gold is a pinch of sand,
and beside her silver ranks as mud.
I loved her more than health or beauty, 10
preferred her to the light,
Is 60:19–20 since her radiance never sleeps.
1 K 3:13;10: 21seq. Si 47:18 Mt 6:33 In her company all good things came to me, 11 and at her hands incalculable wealth.
All these delighted me, since Wisdom brings them, [d] 12
7:21;8:5–6 though I did not then realise that she was their mother. [e]
What I learned diligently, I shall pass on liberally, 13 6:22 I shall not conceal how rich she is.
Lk 12:33 For she is to human beings an inexhaustible treasure, 14 and those who acquire this [f] win God's friendship, commended to him by the gifts of instruction.

His appeal for divine inspiration

May God grant me to speak as he would wish 15 and conceive thoughts worthy of the gifts I have received, since he is both guide to Wisdom and director of sages;
Jb 12:10 Ps 31:15 Si 10:5 for we are in his hand, yes, ourselves and our sayings, 16
and all intellectual and all practical knowledge.
He it was who gave me sure knowledge of what exists, 17 to understand the structure of the world and the action of the elements, the beginning, end and middle of the times, 18

the alternation of the solstices and the succession of the seasons, 19 the cycles of the year[g] and the position of the stars, 20 the natures of animals and the instincts of wild beasts, 1 K 5:13
the powers of spirits and human mental processes,
the varieties of plants and the medical properties of roots.
21 And now I understand everything, hidden or visible,[h] for Wisdom, the designer of all things, has instructed me. 8:4–6,9:9;14:2 Pr 8:22–31,22e

Eulogy of Wisdom[i]

22 For within her is a spirit intelligent, holy, Jm 3:17 unique, manifold, subtle,
mobile, incisive, unsullied,
lucid, invulnerable, benevolent, shrewd, 23 irresistible, beneficent, friendly to human beings,
steadfast, dependable, unperturbed,
almighty, all-surveying, 1:6–10
penetrating all intelligent, pure and most subtle spirits.
24 For Wisdom is quicker to move than any motion;
she is so pure, she pervades and permeates all things.
25 She is a breath of the power of God, Si 24:3
pure emanation of the glory of the Almighty; Ex 24:16f
so nothing impure can find its way into her.
26 For she is a reflection of the eternal light,[j] ↗Jn 1:9 ↗Heb 1:3
untarnished mirror of God's active power, and image of his goodness. ↗Col 1:15

27 Although she is alone, she can do everything; herself unchanging, she renews the world, Ps 102:27; 104:30 and, generation after generation, passing into holy souls, she makes them into God's friends[k] and prophets;[l]
28 for God loves only those who dwell with Wisdom.
29 She is indeed more splendid than the sun,
she outshines all the constellations;

n. Allusion to the jealously guarded secrets of mystery religions and esoteric doctrines of the day, in which the revelation was revealed only to initiates.

7 a. 'a human being' omitted by two of the principal MSS (Vat. and Sin.).

b. Ten lunar months. On the way in which the embryo was thought to develop, see Jb 10:10c.

c. This elaboration rests on 1 K 3:9–10 and on those texts exalting Wisdom as the most precious of precious things, Jb 28:15–19; Pr 3:14–15; 8:10–11,19. To these, the author adds qualities held in esteem by the Greeks (v. 10): health, cf., however, Si 1:18; 30:14–16, beauty, cf. Ps 45:2; Si 26:16–17; 36:22, and daylight, see Qo 11:7.

d. Or 'commands them as mistress', by governing their use.

e. 'mother' Gk MSS, Lat.; 'origin' Text. rec.

f. 'acquire this' Gk MSS, Syr.; 'use this' Text. rec., Lat. (The underlying image is of presents offered to a highly placed person to attract his friendship. These presents 'are conferred by instruction', see 3:11j; 6:17, that is to say, by a true moral and religious education governing every aspect of life.)

g. 'of the year' Gk MSS, Lat.; 'of the years' Text. rec.

h. Bringing 1 K 5:9–14 up to date, the author endows Solomon with the kind of knowledge prized in the Hellenistic culture of his own day. In this context, God is represented as the source of all truth, and the human sciences as dependent on his wisdom.

i. Here the author contributes his own original elaboration of earlier personifications of Wisdom, see Pr 8:22g. As he has already promised, 6:22, he describes both its nature and its origin, first of all by listing the characteristics of the divine Spirit possessed by Wisdom, which themselves help to explain her nature, vv. 22–24—there are 21 attributes, and the figure 3 × 7 is apparently designed to indicate absolute perfection; then by explaining the relationship between Wisdom and God, vv. 25–26, by a choice of images conveying both origin and intimate participation. Borrowing freely from the vocabulary of Gk philosophy, the author next points out the various characteristics of Wisdom and concludes by identifying it with divine providence, 8:1. This eulogy of Wisdom as partaking in intimacy with God, 8:3, as possessing his power, 7:23,25,27, and as collaborating in his creative acts, 7:12,22; 8:4,6, anticipates an entire theology of the Spirit to which it is assimilated, 9:17, and whose traditional functions it assumes, see Is 11:2c, and above all the Christology, notably of John but also of the Pauline corpus (see Ep and Col) and of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

j. The 'eternal light' is God. Some earlier texts already hinted at the concept of a transcendent light emanating from God, Hab 3:4, illuminating the faithful or his nation, Ps 18:28–29; Is 2:5, being the radiance of his glory, Is 60:1,19–20; Ba 5:9, or residing with him, Dn 2:22g. But only 1 Jn 1:5 will later say explicitly that 'God is light'.

k. Like Abraham, 2 Ch 20:7; Is 41:8; Jm 2:23, and Moses, Ex 33:11.

l. Not only the great prophets and inspired scribes (Si 24:33), but all who, by their holy life and intimacy with God, penetrate into the knowledge of his will and his mysteries, and so become his authorised 'interpreters' to enlighten their fellows.

compared with light, she takes first place, for light must yield to night, 30
↗Jn 1:5;16:33 but against Wisdom evil cannot prevail.
8 Strongly she reaches from one end of the world to the other 1 and she governs the whole world for its good.

Solomon's love for Wisdom

6:12–16 Wisdom I loved and searched for from my youth; 2
Si 15:2 I resolved to have her as my bride,
I fell in love with her beauty.
She enhances her noble birth by sharing God's life, [a] 3
for the Master of All has always loved her.
Indeed, she shares the secrets of God's knowledge, 4
Pr 8:27,30 and she chooses what he will do.
If in this life wealth is a desirable possession, 5
7:21h what is more wealthy than Wisdom whose work is everywhere?
Or if it be the intellect that is at work, 6
who, more than she, designs whatever exists?
Or if it be uprightness you love, 7
why, virtues are the fruit of her labours, [b]
since it is she who teaches temperance and prudence,
justice and fortitude;
nothing in life is more useful for human beings.
Or if you are eager for wide experience, 8
she knows the past, she forecasts the future;
she knows how to turn maxims, and solve riddles; [c]
she has foreknowledge of signs and wonders, and of the unfolding of the ages and the times. [d]

Wisdom indispensable to rulers

I therefore determined to take her to share my life, 9
knowing that she would be my counsellor in prosperity and comfort me in cares and sorrow.
'Thanks to her, I shall be admired by the masses 10
1 K 3:7seq. and honoured, though young, by the elders.
1 K 3:16–18 I shall be reckoned shrewd as a judge, 11
1 K 5:14,21; 10:4–9 and the great will be amazed at me.
They will wait on my silences, 12
and pay attention when I speak;
if I speak at some length, they will lay their hand on their lips. [e]
By means of her, immortality will be mine, 13
Ps 112:6 Si 39:9 I shall leave an everlasting memory to my successors.
1 K 5:1 I shall govern peoples, and nations will be subject to me; 14 at the sound of my name fearsome despots will be afraid; 15
I shall show myself kind to the people and valiant in battle.

'When I go home I shall take my ease with her, 16
for nothing is bitter in her company,
Qo 1:18 when life is shared with her there is no pain,
Pr 3:17–18 nothing but pleasure and joy.'

Solomon prepares to ask for Wisdom

Having meditated on all this, 17 and having come to the conclusion that immortality resides in kinship with Wisdom, [f]
noble contentment in her friendship, 18

inexhaustible riches in her activities, understanding in cultivating her society,
and renown in conversing with her,
I went all ways, seeking how to get her.
19 I was a boy of happy disposition,
I had received a good soul as my lot,
20 or rather, being good, I had entered an undefiled body; [g]
21 but, realising that I could never possess Wisdom — Si 1:1
unless God gave her to me,
—a sign of intelligence in itself, to know in whose gift she lay—
I prayed to the Lord and entreated him,
and with all my heart I said:

Solomon's prayer for Wisdom [a] — 1 K 3:6–9

1 9 'God of our ancestors, Lord of mercy, [b] who by your word have made the universe, — Si 42:15i
2 and in your wisdom have fitted human beings to rule the creatures that you have made, — Gn 1:28+ 3 to govern the world in holiness and saving justice and in honesty of soul to dispense fair judgement, 4 grant me Wisdom, consort of your throne, — Pr 8:27,30 Si 1:1
and do not reject me from the number of your children.
5 For I am your servant, son of your serving maid, — Ps 86:16; 116:16
a feeble man, with little time to live,
with small understanding of justice and the laws.
6 Indeed, were anyone perfect among the sons of men,
if he lacked the Wisdom that comes from you,
he would still count for nothing.

7 'You have chosen me [c] to be king over your people,
to be judge of your sons and daughters.
8 You have bidden me build a temple on your holy mountain, — 2 S 7:13 1 K 5:19 Si 47:13 and an altar in the city where you have pitched your tent, a copy of the holy Tent [d] which you prepared at the beginning.
9 With you is Wisdom, she who knows your works, — 8:4;9:4

8 a. The youthful Solomon envisages Wisdom as an ideal wife, possessing not only beauty (v. 2), but a divine nobility, then (vv. 4–8) as the source of knowledge, wealth, efficiency, uprightness and experience.

b. The author perhaps takes up an allegorical interpretation of Pr 31:10–31, applied to Wisdom (see Pr 31:30i). He then lists the four great virtues of the Greek philosophers, later to become the 'cardinal virtues' of Christian theology.

c. Or 'to interpret'. 'Maxims' and 'riddles' mean moral reflections expressed in deliberately obscure terms, cf. Jg 14:12; Pr 1:6; Si 39:2–3; Ezk 17:2. Solomon excelled at this, 1 K 5:12; 10:1–3; Qo 12:9; Si 47:15–17. The associated 'signs' and 'wonders' refer above all to the miracles of the Exodus, see 10:16, although in Gk usage they would be more likely to mean abnormal, natural phenomena, not easily predictable.

d. Or 'the results, the outcomes'. The text, therefore, is dealing either with the unfolding of history, or with times favourable to human actions and undertakings, cf. Qo 3:1–8. This description of the scope of Wisdom completes the picture in 7:17–21.

e. Gesture indicating silence, Pr 30:32; Si 5:12, caused either by astonishment or confusion, Jb 21:5; 40:4; Mi 7:16, or by admiration, Jb 29:9.

f. Kinship or relationship conferred by grace (cf. v. 21). The resulting immortality is first of all one of memory (see v. 13), but also certainly personal immortality (see 4:1), since Wisdom is to communicate what she herself possesses by nature.

g. This text does not assert the pre-existence of the soul as it might seem to do if isolated from its context; it amends the phrasing of v. 19, which seemed to give pre-eminence to the body, and emphasises the superiority of the soul.

9 a. This prayer is modelled on the one in 1 K 3:6–9 and 2 Ch 1:8–10. In it Solomon evokes aspects of his own historical life, vv. 5[c],7–8,12, but the outlook is broadened to embrace the whole human condition in which Solomon participates, vv. 1–3,5[b],6,13–17. The prayer falls into three sections (vv. 1–6; 7–12; 13–18), each echoing the others and each mentioning the sending of Wisdom (4,10,17).

b. 'of mercy' MSS, versions; 'of your mercy' Text. rec. • The 'ancestors' are all the ancestors of Israel, especially the Patriarchs, Gn 32:10; 2 Ch 20:6, and not omitting David, 1 K 3:6; 1 Ch 28:9; 2 Ch 1:9.

c. In preference to Adonijah and his other brothers, 1 K 1; 1 Ch 28:5–6.

d. The word 'copy' refers at once to the Temple and to the altar (that is, the altar of burnt offering, visible to everyone, 1 K 8:22,54,62–64). The 'holy Tent', prepared by God himself, is variously to be understood as the heavenly temple of God, Ps 18:7; 96:6; Heb 8:2; 9:11; Rv 3:12. (for a heavenly altar, see Rv 6:9; 8:3–4; 14:18), or as the heavenly model of the Temple in Jerusalem, Ex 15:17; 1 Ch 28:19, or as the sanctuary of the Exodus, Si 24:10, designed according to specifications dictated by God, Ex 25:9,40; Ac 7:44; Heb 8:5.

7:21 Pr 8:22–31,22e
she who was present when you made the world;
she understands what is pleasing in your eyes
and what agrees with your commandments.
Despatch her from the holy heavens, 10 send her forth from your throne of glory to help me and to toil with me
and teach me what is pleasing to you;
7:23 since she knows and understands everything 11
she will guide me prudently in my actions
Ex 24:16f and will protect me with her glory. [e]
Then all I do will be acceptable. 12
I shall govern your people justly and be worthy of my father's throne.

Rm 11:34 1 Co 2:16 'What human being indeed can know the intentions of God? 13
And who can comprehend the will of the Lord?
For the reasoning of mortals is inadequate, 14
our attitudes of mind unstable;
Jb 4:19 Is 38:12 for a perishable body presses down the soul, 15
Rm 7:14–25 and notes and this tent of clay weighs down the mind with its many cares. [f]
It is hard enough for us to work out what is on earth, 16
Dt 30:11a laborious to know what lies within our reach;
Is 55:9 Jn 3:12 who, then, can discover what is in the heavens?
Mt 11:27 And who could ever have known your will, had you not given Wisdom 17 and sent your holy Spirit from above?
Thus have the paths of those on earth been straightened 18
Ba 4:4 and people have been taught what pleases you, and have been saved, by Wisdom.' [g]

III: WISDOM AT WORK IN HISTORY

From Adam to Moses

10 It was Wisdom who protected the first man to be fashioned, 1 the father of the world, who had been created all alone, [a]
she it was who rescued him from his fall [b]
9:2 Gn 1:26,28 and gave him the strength to subjugate all things. 2
But when in his wrath a wicked man [c] deserted her, 3
Gn 4:8–13 he perished in his fratricidal fury.

Gn 7–8 1 P 3:20–21 When because of him the earth was drowned, 4
it was Wisdom again who saved it, 14:6–7 Gn 6:9 piloting the upright man [d] on valueless timber.
Again, when, concurring in wickedness, 5
Gn 11:1–9 the nations had been thrown into confusion,
Gn 12:1–3 she singled out the upright man, [e] preserved him blameless before God
Gn 22:1–19 and fortified him against pity for his child.
Gn 19 2 P 2:6–8 She it was who, while the godless perished, saved the upright man [f] 6
as he fled from the fire raining down on the Five Cities, in witness against whose evil ways 7
a desolate land still smokes,
Dt 32:32 where plants bear fruit that never ripens
and where, monument to an unbelieving soul,
Gn 19:26 there stands a pillar of salt.
For, by ignoring the path of Wisdom, 8
not only did they suffer the loss of not knowing the good,

but they left the world a memorial to their folly, so that their offences could not pass unnoticed. Gn 19:1a

9 But Wisdom delivered her servants from their ordeals.
10 The upright man,[g] fleeing from the anger of his brother, Gn 27:43 was led by her along straight paths.
She showed him the kingdom of God Gn 28:10–22
and taught him the knowledge of holy things.[h]
She brought him success in his labours Gn 29:1;31:16
and gave him full return for all his efforts; 11 she stood by him against grasping and oppressive men
and she made him rich.
12 She preserved him from his enemies Gn 31:23–29; 32–33
and saved him from the traps they set for him.
In an arduous struggle she awarded him the prize, Gn 32:25–31 Ho 12:4–5 to teach him that piety is stronger than all.[i] 1 Tm 4:8

13 She did not forsake the upright man when he was sold,[j] Gn 37–39
but snatched him away from sin;
14 she accompanied him down into the pit, nor did she abandon him in his chains Ps 105:17–22
until she had brought him the sceptre of a kingdom Gn 41:40–44 and authority over his despotic masters,
thus exposing as liars those who had traduced him,
and giving him honour everlasting.

The Exodus

15 It was Wisdom who delivered a holy people,[k] 18:1 Ex 19:6+ a blameless race, from a nation of oppressors.
16 She entered the soul of a servant of the Lord, and withstood fearsome kings[l] with wonders and signs. Ex 7–12; Ps 135:9–10 17 To the holy people she gave the wages of their labours;
she guided them by a marvellous road,
herself their shelter by day—[m] and their starlight through the night. Ex 13:21–22,22h

e. By her power, cf. Rm 6:4. Or 'she will guard me in her glory' while guiding me by her light, cf. Is 60:1–3; Ba 5:7,9, or while enveloping me like a protective cloud, cf. Si 14:27.

f. The expressions used in this v. are reminiscent of the Greek philosophic antithesis between the body and the soul or spirit, see Rm 7:25m, although the author himself does not in fact subscribe to this notion. In the OT, the image of the 'tent' evokes the precariousness of human existence, Jb 4:21; Is 33:20; 38:12; 'of clay', lit. 'of earth', may be a reference to Gn 2:7; Jb 4:19. See in the NT 2 Co 4:7; 5:1–4; 2 P 1:13–14, and also the antithesis in Rm 7:14–15; Ga 5:17.

g. In temporal and spiritual dangers. The saving activity of Wisdom is illustrated in the passage following, which introduces the third section of the book. Many Lat. MSS add here 'all those, Lord, who have pleased you since the beginning'.

10 a. Adam, alone in the world, as God is alone in heaven.

b. Some Lat. MSS read 'and she drew him out of the slime of the earth, and snatched him from his fault.' The reading seems to be an explanatory gloss on 'the first to be fashioned'. The theme of the repentance and rehabilitation of Adam (a Jewish notion often adopted by the Fathers of the Church) is related to the compassionate influence of Wisdom, allowing Adam, after his sin, to retain his lordship over the world and giving him the strength to exercise it.

c. Cain, see Gn 4:8–13. By the murder of Abel, either he condemned himself to a wretched existence (and tragic end, according to Jewish legend) or he was responsible for the destruction of his posterity by the flood. v. 4, or he gave himself up voluntarily to death, cf. 1:11[d]–12,16.

d. Noah, see Gn 6:9.

e. Abraham, see Gn 22.

f. Lot, see Gn 19.

g. Jacob, see Gn 27:41–45; 28:5–6.

h. Or 'of the holy ones', that is, the angels, Gn 28:12. The 'holy things' may mean either revelations concerning the court of heaven, or the promises made to Jacob, Gn 28:13–15.

i. Jacob, in his 'struggle with God', would seem to have won, not by physical strength, but by force of piety. This alone can constrain God and win the assurance of his blessing. The incident is thus here interpreted in the sense of spiritual experience.

j. Joseph, see Gn 37; 39–41.

k. The people of the Exodus are 'holy' and 'blameless' because of their vocation, Ex 19:6; Lv 19:2, and the religious values that they represent. The author is, however, idealising the past and will continue to do so throughout the third part of the book. He has a threefold aim: to illustrate historically the different treatments meted out to the upright and the ungodly; to exalt the religious and moral superiority of Judaism; and finally to show that the past prefigures the apocalyptic future.

l. Rhetorical exaggeration: the reference is to Pharaoh.

m. The author attributes to Wisdom what Ex says of God present in the mysterious cloud.

Ex 14:21–29 She brought them across the Red Sea, 18
leading them through an immensity of water, whereas she drowned their enemies, 19
then spat them out from the depths of the abyss.
So the upright despoiled the godless; [n] 20
Lord, they extolled your holy name,
Ex 15 and with one accord praised your protecting hand;
for Wisdom opened the mouths of the dumb 21
Ps 8:2 Mt 21:16 and made eloquent the tongues of babes. [o]
Dt 18:15,18; 34:10 Ho 12:14 11 She made their actions successful, by means of a holy prophet. [a] 1
They journeyed through an unpeopled desert 2
and pitched their tents in inaccessible places.
They stood firm against their enemies, fought off their foes. [b] 3

First antithesis: [c] miracle of the water

On you they called when they were thirsty, 4
Ex 17:1–7 Nb 20:2–13 and from the rocky cliff water was given them, from hard stone a remedy for their thirst.
Thus, what had served to punish their enemies 5 6 became a benefit for them in their difficulties.
Whereas their enemies had only the ever-flowing source 6
Ex 7:17–21 of a river fouled with mingled blood and mud,
Ex 1:15–16 to punish them for their decree of infanticide, [d] 7
Ex 17:3–6 you gave your people, against all hope, water in abundance, once you had shown by the thirst that they were experiencing 8 9
how severely you were punishing their enemies.
Dt 8:2–5 From their own ordeals, [e] which were only loving correction, 9 they realised how an angry sentence was tormenting the godless; 12:22 Dt 8:5+ for you had tested your own as a father admonishes, 10 but the others you had punished as a pitiless king condemns, and, whether far or near, they were equally afflicted. 11 12
For a double sorrow seized on them, 12 13 and a groaning at the memory of the past; [f]
when they learned that the punishments they were receiving 13 14 were beneficial to the others, [g] they realised it was the Lord,' [h] Ex 1:22;2:3 while for the man whom long before they had exposed 14 and later mockingly rebuffed, [i] they felt only admiration when all was done, having suffered a thirst so different from that of the upright.

God's forbearance with Egypt

12:24–25; Rm 1:21 For their foolish and wicked notions which led them astray 15 into worshipping mindless reptiles and contemptible beetles, [j] you sent a horde of mindless animals [k] to punish them and to teach them that the agent of sin is the agent of punishment. [l] 16 17
And indeed your all-powerful hand which created 17 18
the world from formless matter, [m] did not lack means

n. According to Jewish tradition, the Israelites despoiled the dead Egyptians of their weapons.

o. Previously, God had loosened the tongue of Moses, so that he could reason with Pharaoh, Ex 4:10; 6:12,30. Now he intervenes so that all the Israelites, without exception, can praise him. The author is following a Jewish tradition, later to be elaborated by the rabbis.

11 a. Moses, Nb 12:7d; Dt 18:15.

b. The long march through the desert is evoked in a few phrases to prepare the way for a new development. Wisdom is not mentioned any more, except in 14:2,5, and the author now addresses God in a meditation on the events of the Exodus. Throughout, though with long digressions (12:2–22; 13:1–15:13), he will be contrasting the treatment meted out to the Israelites, regarded as a nation of upright people, see 10:15, with that received by the Egyptians, symbolising irreligious obstinacy. The liberties taken with earlier biblical sources make this part of the book similar to midrash or rabbinical commentary on Scripture.

c. Starting with the miracle of the water in the desert, the author is about to elaborate a complex comparison, the basis of which is stated in v. 5. At the same time, he intends to justify the punishments endured by means of a sort of 'divine retaliation' propounded in v. 16. Other antitheses follow, see 16:1,5,15; 17:1; 18:5; 19:1, but opinions are divided on exactly how many there are and on when and where they begin and end.

d. According to Ex 7:14–25 Yahweh turned the waters of the Nile into blood to constrain Pharaoh to let the Israelites go. The author, however, represents the miracle as a punishment for the decree of Ex 1:15seq.

e. Thirst, and perhaps the other sufferings endured by the Israelites in the desert, were intended to make them understand how the Egyptians were punished.

f. 'the memory of the past' corr. following some MSS; 'of past memories' Text. rec.

g. Water, withheld from the Egyptians, was miraculously supplied to the Israelites, 11:4.

h. Many Lat. MSS add 'full of admiration at the outcome of the events', an addition derived from v. 4.

i. Moses, exposed on the waters, Ex 1:22; 2:3, rebuffed by Pharaoh, Ex 5:2–5; 7:13,22.

j. The cult of animals: 'reptiles' (crocodile, snake, lizard, frog), 'contemptible beetles' (the scarab) enjoyed great esteem in Ptolemaic Egypt.

k. Frogs, Ex 8:1–2, mosquitoes, 8:13–14, horseflies, 8:20, locusts, 10:12–15.

l. See 12:23; 16:1; 18:4 and Gn 9:6; Jg 1:6–7; 1 S 15:23; 2 M 4:26; 13:8; Pr 5:22.

m. Philosophic expression inspired partly by Plato (Timaeus 51A) and already current in the author's times to designate the undifferentiated state of matter, thought to be eternal. The author has no reason to exempt matter from the creative activity of God and is presumably thinking of how the world was organised from chaos, Gn 1.

n. 'stinking smoke', lit. 'a stench of smoke'; 'stench' MSS; versions; 'growling' Text. rec.

o. Or 'that does not even tip the scales'.

p. The thought in vv. 23seq. was not new in Israel, but never before had the universality of God's compassion for sinners (see Jon 3–4), and the decisive role of love in the creation and preservation of beings been expressed with such force or in dialectical form.

12 a. That is to say, the breath of life infused by God into creatures, Gn 2:7; 6:3; Jb 27:3; 34:14–15; Ps 104:29–30. The author is not alluding to the spirit of Stoic philosophy or to the world-soul. The Vulg. and many other Latin MSS translate (wrongly): 'how good and sweet, Lord, your spirit in all beings'.

b. A list is given in Dt 7:1, but the author has principally the Canaanites in mind.

c. 'eaters of entrails' Lat.; '(banquet) at which entrails are eaten' Text. rec. 'initiates of secret brotherhoods' several MSS; in the Text. rec. the expression is corrupt and meaningless. Evidence of cannibalism has not been found in Canaan, though practised by other peoples in antiquity. The author is borrowing features from the hellenistic mystery religions and alluding to the ill-reputed rites of some of them.

those murderous parents of defenceless beings, 6
Nb 33:51–56 Dt 20:16–18 you determined to destroy at our ancestors' hands, Dt 11:12 so that this land, dearer to you than any other, 7 might receive a worthy colony of God's children.

6:7;11:23p Ps 78:39; 103:14 •Ex 23:28+ Even so, since these were human, you treated them leniently,[d] 8 sending hornets as forerunners of your army, to exterminate them little by little.[e]
Not that you were unable to hand the godless over to the upright 9
in pitched battle
11:17–19 or destroy them at once by savage beasts or one harsh word;
12:2 but, by carrying out your sentences gradually, 10
you gave them a chance to repent,
although you knew that they were inherently evil,
innately wicked,
and fixed in their cast of mind;[f] 11
3:12,19 Gn 9:25 for they were a race accursed from the beginning.

This forbearance explained

Nor was it from awe of anyone that you let their sins go unpunished.
For who is there to ask, 'What have you done?' 12
Jb 9:12 Rm 9:19–23 Or who is there to disagree with your sentence?
Jb 9:19 Who to arraign you for destroying nations which you have created?
Who to confront you by championing the wicked?
Dt 32:39 Jb 34:13d For there is no god, other than you, who cares for every one, 13 to whom you have to prove that your sentences have been just.
No more could any king or despot challenge you 14
over those whom you have punished.
Gn 18:25 For, being upright yourself, you rule the universe uprightly, 15 and hold it as incompatible with your power to condemn anyone who has not deserved to be punished.[g]
For your strength is the basis of your saving justice,[h] 16 and your sovereignty over all makes you lenient to all.
You show your strength 17
when people will not believe in your absolute power,
and you confound any insolence in those who do know it.
But you, controlling your strength, are mild in judgement, 18
and govern us with great lenience,[i] Ps 115:3;135:6 for you have only to will, and your power is there.

God's lessons for Israel

By acting thus, you have taught your people 19
that the upright must be kindly to his fellows,[j]
and you have given your children the good hope 11:23 that after sins you will grant repentance.
Rm 9:22–23 For, if with such care and indulgence[k] you have punished 20 your children's enemies, though doomed to death, and have given them time and place to be rid of their wickedness,[l]
with what exact attention have you not judged your children, 21
Gn 12:7+ to whose ancestors, by oaths and covenants,
you made such generous promises?
11:10 Thus, you instruct us, when you punish our enemies in moderation,[m] 22
Mt 5:7;7:2 that we should reflect on your kindness when we judge, and, when we are judged, we should look for mercy.

Progressive punishment of the Egyptians

23 And this is why people leading foolish and wicked lives were tortured by you with their own abominations; [a] 11:16 24 for they had strayed too far on the paths of error by taking the vilest and most despicable of animals [o] for gods, 11:15 Rm 1:23 being deluded like silly little children.
25 So, as to children with no sense,
you gave them a sentence making fools of them.
26 Those, however, who would not take warning from a mocking reproof were soon to endure a sentence worthy of God.
27 The creatures that made them suffer and against which they protested, those very creatures that they had taken for gods 11:15
and by which they were punished they saw in their true light;
and he whom hitherto they had refused to know,
they realised was true God.
And this is why the final condemnation fell on them. [p]

Indictment of idolatry: the deification of nature [a]

1 13 Yes, naturally stupid are all who are unaware of God, and who, from good things seen,
have not been able to discover Him-who-is, Ex 3:13–14, 14g or, by studying the works, have not recognised the Artificer. [b] Si 17:8 Ac 14:17 2 Fire, however, or wind, or the swift air, Rm 1:19–20
the sphere of the stars, impetuous water, heaven's lamps, are what they have held to be the gods who govern the world. Dt 4:19;17:3 Jb 31:26–28 3 If, charmed by their beauty, they have taken these for gods, let them know how much the Master of these excels them, since it was the very source of beauty that created them. [c] 4 And if they have been impressed by their power and energy,

d. The emphasis here is not so much on human fragility, Gn 8:21; Ps 78:39; 103:14–15, as on human dignity, Gn 1:26–27; Ps 8:5, which authorises a privileged relationship with divine Wisdom, Pr 8:31. This dignity was also recognised by the Stoics, but with particular insistence on the notion of kindliness.

e. The author changes the meaning given to the episode of the 'horseflies', Ex 23:28; Dt 7:20, by ancient texts, in the attempt to explain the delays attending the extermination of the Canaanites. Instead of thinking exclusively about Israel, God was also exercising his mercy on the sinful Canaanites.

f. Not because of any positive predestination to evil, but because of their refusal to repent. God knew that, like Pharaoh, they would be obstinate, hence the reference to the curse on Canaan, Gn 9:25, here transposed to the moral plane, cf. Ws 3:12,19; 4:3–6.

g. Owing to an early corruption of the verb 'to condemn' and an unlucky tear, almost all the Lat. MSS read 'him too who ought not to be punished, you condemn'.

h. Since God possesses absolute power and has no reason for abusing it (cf. by way of contrast 2:11), he dispenses saving justice with complete impartiality and freedom; by the same token, his sovereign mastery over all beings allows and invites him to be lenient to all.

i. The author either identifies himself with the human race at large, or is beginning to develop (see vv. 21–22) the notion of special favour reserved for the Israelites.

j. Following Wisdom's example, 1:6; 7:23, an attitude corresponding to the universalism characteristic of wisdom-writings and to be given new form and content in the NT, see Mt 5:43–48.

k. 'with indulgence' some of the MSS; 'with prayer' Text. rec., Syr.; 'you have saved' some MSS, Lat., Arm.; others omit.

l. See 12:2. The notion that God tries to tear his people away from sin by means of ordeals and punishments is common in the OT, see Am 4:6f. The author deliberately extends it to all sinners, cf. already Jb 33:14–22; 34:29–32; Jon 3–4.

m. 'in moderation' en metrioteti conj.; 'with ten thousand (blows)' en murioteti Text. rec.

n. Biblical expression for false gods and idols, see Dt 7:26; 27:15; etc. The author has the cult of animals in mind, as he resumes the theme of 11:15–16.

o. 'the vilest and most despicable of animals', lit. 'those which even among animals are looked down on among the vile'; 'among the vile' MSS; 'among the animals of enemies' or 'among the hostile' Text. rec.

p. Pharaoh eventually acknowledged the action of God, Ex 12:31–32, having long refused to do so, Ex 7–11, but nonetheless continued to defy him.

13 a. Having reverted to animal cults, 12:23–27, the author now presents a general indictment of idolatry in its three major manifestations: divinisation of natural forces and heavenly bodies, 13:1–9; worship of man-made idols, 13:10–15:17; worship of animals, 15:18–19. He apparently adopts a schematic arrangement already current, since similar classifications are found elsewhere in the writings of hellenised Judaism, particularly in Philo. His thought, however, is original, as is his treatment of navigation, 14:1–7, the origins of idolatry, 14:12–21, its evil consequences, 14:22–31, and the privileged state of the Jewish people, 15:1–5.

b. The spectacle and study of nature ought to raise the human spirit to a transcendent God, universal Creator.

c. A Gk touch, cf. vv. 5,7; Si 43:9–12. The OT had often praised the majesty and power of God as manifested in the creation, Jb 36:22–26; Ps 19:1–2; Is 40:12–14 but never the beauty of the world seen as a work of art reflecting its author.

let them deduce from these how much mightier
is he that has formed them, since through the grandeur and beauty of the creatures 5 13:1a we may, by analogy, contemplate their Author.

Small [d] blame, however, attaches to them, 6
for perhaps they go astray
Ac 17:27 only in their search for God and their eagerness to find him;
familiar with his works, they investigate them 7
and fall victim to appearances, seeing so much beauty.
But even so, they have no excuse: 8
if they are capable of acquiring enough knowledge 9
to be able to investigate the world,
how have they been so slow to find its Master?

The cults of idols [e]

But wretched are they, with their hopes set on dead things, 10
Dt 4:28 2 K 19:18 Is 40:18–20 who have given the title of gods to human artefacts, gold or silver, skilfully worked,

The bits left over from his work 12
he uses for cooking his food, then eats his fill.
There is still a good-for-nothing bit left over, 13
a gnarled and knotted billet:
he takes it and whittles it with the concentration of his leisure hours,
he shapes it with the skill of experience,
he gives it a human shape
or perhaps he makes it into some vile animal, 14
smears it with ochre, paints its surface red,
coats over all its blemishes.
He next makes a worthy home for it, 15
Is 46:7 lets it into the wall, fixes it with an iron clamp.

he asks skill from something whose hands have no skill whatever.

14 Or someone else, taking ship to cross the wild waves, 1 loudly invokes a piece of wood [a] frailer than the vessel that bears him.
Agreed, the ship is the product of a craving for gain, 2
its building embodies the wisdom [b] of the shipwright;
but your providence, [c] Father, is what steers it, 3
Ps 77:19 Is 43:16 you having opened a pathway even through the sea, and a safe way over the waves,[d]

so that, even without experience, someone may put to sea.
5 It is not your will that the works of your Wisdom should be sterile, so people entrust their lives to the smallest piece of wood,

Origin of the cult of idols

12 The idea of making idols was the origin of fornication, Ex 34:16
Dt 31:16
their discovery corrupted life.[i] 13 They did not exist at the beginning, they will not exist for ever;
14 human vanity brought them[j] into the world, and a quick end is therefore reserved for them. 14:11 15 A father afflicted by untimely mourning[k]
has an image made of his child so soon carried off, and now pays divine honours to what yesterday was only a corpse,
handing on mysteries and ceremonies to his people;
16 time passes, the custom hardens and is observed as law.
17 Rulers were the ones who ordered that statues should be worshipped:
people who could not honour them in person,
because they lived too far away,
would have a portrait made of their distant countenance,
to have an image that they could see of the king whom they honoured;
meaning, by such zeal, to flatter the absent as if he were present.
18 Even people who did not know him were stimulated into spreading his cult by the artist's enthusiasm; 19 for the latter, doubtless wishing to please his ruler,

d. Or 'least', as compared with the idolaters of v. 10.

e. Polemics against idols, current in Gk philosophy, were a commonplace in biblical writings, cf. especially Is 44:9–20; Jr 10:1–16; Ba 6.

f. Description calculated to make the idol appear ridiculous: the wood is of no special value, the worker an uncultured woodcutter, and the result will not stand up.

14 a. The effigy of a tutelary god at the prow or on the poop, cf. Ac 28:11.

b. The technical skill of the artisan, fruit of Wisdom, 8:6; cf. Ex 31:3; 35:31.

c. The term, appearing for the first time here in LXX, is borrowed from Greek philosophy and literature; the idea, however, is biblical, Jb 10:12; Ps 145:8seq. 147:9.

d. Alluding to two texts on the crossing of the Sea of Reeds Ps 77:19; Is 43:16, the author illustrates God's sovereignty over the sea and his complete protective power over seafarers.

e. The giants play an important part in Jewish tradition and legend, see Gn 6:4; Si 16:7; Ba 3:26 and in Gk legends.

f. Noah's ark, see 10:4.

g. By serving the accomplishment of God's intention.

h. lit. 'the thing made by hand', i.e. human hand, but the expression often means idols in LXX.

i. 'Fornication' is to be understood here as religious infidelity, see Ho 1:2b, but the intellectual error leads on to corruption of morals, see Rm 1:24–32; Ep 4:17–19.

j. Several good MSS have 'that death made its entry', under the influence of 2:24. Our author holds that monotheism preceded polytheism. Gn takes the same view.

k. Two examples are now adduced of how human vanity brought idols into existence, each emphasising the idolatrous worship paid to deified human beings, rather than the deification itself. The first example relates to the Gk custom of raising dead children to the rank of 'protective heroes', a custom recalled and followed, for example, by Cicero after the death of his daughter Tullia.

exerted all his skill to surpass the reality, and the crowd, attracted by the beauty of the work, 20
Dn 3:1–7 mistook for a god someone whom recently they had honoured as a man.
And this became a snare for life: 21
that people, whether enslaved by misfortune or by tyranny, Ex 3:13–14, 14g should have conferred the ineffable Name [l] on sticks and stones.

Rm 1:24–32 The consequences of idolatry

It is not enough, however, for them 22
to have such misconceptions about God;
for, living in the fierce warfare of ignorance, [m]
they call these terrible evils peace.
12:5 With their child-murdering rites, their occult mysteries, 23
Lv 18:21h
Rm 1:28–31+ or their furious orgies with outlandish customs, [n] they no longer retain any purity in their lives or their marriages, 24 one treacherously murdering another or wronging him by adultery.
Everywhere a welter of blood and murder, theft and fraud, 25 corruption, treachery, riot, perjury, disturbance of decent people, forgetfulness of favours, 26 pollution of souls, sins against nature, [o]
disorder in marriage, adultery and debauchery. [p]
For the worship of idols with no name [q] 27
is the beginning, cause, and end of every evil.
For these people either carry their merrymaking to the point of frenzy, 28 14:23 or they prophesy what is not true, or they live wicked lives, or they perjure themselves without hesitation;
since they put their trust in lifeless idols 29
they do not reckon their false oaths can harm them.

But they will be justly punished for this double crime: 30 for degrading the concept of God by adhering to idols;
and for wickedly perjuring themselves in contempt for what is holy.
For it is not the power of the things by which they swear 31
but the punishment reserved for sinners
that always follows the offences of wicked people.

Israel not idolatrous

Ex 34:6–7+ 15 But you, our God, are kind and true, 1
slow to anger, governing the universe with mercy.
Even if we sin, we are yours, since we acknowledge your power, [a] 2
but we will not sin, knowing we count as yours.
Jn 17:3 To know you is indeed the perfect virtue, 3
1:15;2:23 and to know your power is the root of immortality. [b]
We have not been duped by inventions of misapplied human skill, 4 or by the sterile work of painters, 13:14 by figures daubed with assorted colours,
the sight of which sets fools yearning 5
and hankering for the lifeless form of an unbreathing image.
13:10 Lovers of evil and worthy of such hopes 6
are those who make them, those who want them
and those who worship them.

13:10–19 The makers of idols are fools [c]

Take a potter, now, laboriously working the soft earth, 7 shaping each object for us to use.
Rm 9:21 Out of the self-same clay,

he models vessels intended for a noble use and those for a contrary purpose, all alike:
but which of these two uses each will have
is for the potter himself to decide. Is 29:16g 8 Then—ill-spent effort!—from the same clay he models a futile god, although so recently made out of earth himself Gn 2:7e and shortly to return to what he was taken from, Gn 3:19
when asked to give back the soul that has been lent to him.

9 Even so, he does not worry about having to die or about the shortness of his life,[d]
but strives to outdo the goldsmiths and silversmiths, imitates the bronzeworkers,
and prides himself on modelling counterfeits.
10 Ashes, his heart; Is 44:20
more vile than earth, his hope;
more wretched than clay, his life!
11 For he has misconceived the One who has modelled him, Dt 32:15 who breathed an active soul into him Gn 2:7
and inspired a living spirit.[e] 12 What is more, he looks on this life of ours as a kind of game, and our time here like a fair, full of bargains. Ac 19:24
'However foul the means,' he says, 'a man must make a living.'
13 He, more than any other, knows he is sinning, he who from one earthy stuff makes both brittle pots and idols.

The folly of the Egyptians: their indiscriminate idolatry

14 But most foolish, more pitiable even than the soul of a little child,[f] are the enemies who once played the tyrant with your people,[g] 15 and have taken all the idols of the heathen for gods;
these can use neither their eyes for seeing 13:18
nor their nostrils for breathing the air Ps 115:4–7
nor their ears for hearing
nor the fingers on their hands for handling nor their feet for walking.
16 They have been made, you see, by a human being, modelled by a being whose own breath is borrowed. Gn 2:7
No man can model a god to resemble himself; Ps 104:29–30 17 subject to death, his impious hands can produce only something dead.

p. Society, shaken to its foundations by disrespect for life and the rights of others, by the devaluation of marriage, by the collapse of trust, and above all by the constant breaking of oaths (see vv. 29–31). These disorders are due, not to misconceptions about the true God, but to idolatrous cults; cf. Rm 1:26–31, possibly inspired by this passage.

15 a. Though sinners, the Israelites do not stop belonging to God, since they know that he exerts his power over all things with kindness and compassion, offering the possibility of repentance, 11:23–12:2; 12:16–18; they continue to acknowledge him as unique Lord, who has made solemn promises to the ancestors and remained faithful to them, 12:19,21–22; 15:1.

b. A living knowledge, that is to say, cf. Jr 9:23–24, a knowledge which is the basis of true uprightness. The idea of immortality, with the image of the root, see 3:15, complements that of uprightness, see 1:1,15; 3:1–9. For the whole concept, see Jn 17:3.

c. Next, the author attacks the makers of idols and satirises a maker of pottery figurines, a craft common enough in the hellenistic world. The description is a parallel to that of the woodcutter, 13:11–19.

d. Instead of thinking of his end, of which the clay he uses ought to remind him, Gn 3:19, the potter makes himself ridiculous by trying to vie with artists working in nobler materials.

e. 'Active soul' and 'living spirit' are synonymous.

f. Since even more easily deceived.

g. The Egyptians, oppressors of Israel before the Exodus and again under the rule of the Ptolemies. The author returns to them (cf. 12:23–27) perhaps by the implicit transition of thought: the potter makes statuettes of the divinities favoured in the syncretistic religion of contemporary Egypt (v. 15).

He himself is worthier than the things he worships;
he will at least have lived, but never they.
11:15 And they worship even the most loathsome of animals, 18 worse than the rest in their degree of stupidity, without a trace of beauty—if that is what is attractive in animals— 19 and excluded from God's praises and blessing. [h]

Second antithesis: frogs and quails [a]

11:16;12:23,27 16 Thus they were appropriately punished by similar creatures 1 and tormented by swarms of vermin.
In contrast to this punishment, you did your people a kindness 2 and, to satisfy their sharp appetite,
Ex 16:9–13 Nb 11:10–32 provided quails—a luscious rarity—for them to eat.
Thus the Egyptians, 3
at the repulsive sight of the creatures sent against them, were to find that, though they longed for food,
they had lost their natural appetite;
whereas your own people, after a short privation,
were to have a rare relish for their portion.
Inevitable that relentless want should seize on the former oppressors; 4 11:8–9 enough for your people to be shown how their enemies were being tortured.

Third antithesis: locusts and bronze serpent

Even when the fearful rage of wild animals overtook them 5
Nb 21:4–9 and they were perishing from the bites of writhing snakes, your retribution did not continue to the end.
Affliction struck them briefly, by way of warning, 6
Nb 21:9+ and they had a saving token [b] to remind them of the commandment of your Law,
Jn 3:14–17 for whoever turned to it was saved, not by what he looked at, 7
Is 45:14h but by you, the Saviour of all. [c]
And by such means you proved to our enemies 8 that you are the one who delivers from every evil; [d]
Ex 8:16–20; 10:4–15 for them, the bites of locusts and flies proved fatal 9 and no remedy could be found to save their lives, 11:15–16 since they deserved to be punished by such creatures. [e]

But your children, 10
not even the fangs of poisonous snakes could bring them down;
for your mercy came to their help and cured them.
One sting—how quickly healed!— 11
to remind them of your pronouncements rather than that, by sinking into deep forgetfulness, they should be cut off from your kindness. [f]
No herb, no poultice cured them, 12
Ps 107:20 Is 55:10–11 but your all-healing word, Lord.

Dt 32:39 Yes, you are the one with power over life and death, 13
1 S 2:6 Rv 1:18q bringing to the gates of Hades and back again. [g]
A human being out of malice may put to death, 14
but cannot bring the departed spirit back or free the soul that Hades has once received. [h]

Fourth antithesis: hail and manna

It is not possible to escape your hand. 15

16 The godless who refused to acknowledge you were scourged by the strength of your arm, pursued by no ordinary rains, hail and unrelenting downpours, Ex 9:24–25 Ps 78:47–49
and consumed by fire. [i] 17 Even more wonderful, in the water—which quenches all—the fire raged fiercer than ever;
for the elements fight for the upright. 5:17,20 18 At one moment, the fire would die down, to avoid consuming the animals sent against the godless [j]
and to make clear to them by that sight,
that the sentence of God was pursuing them;
19 at another, in the very heart of the water,
it would burn more fiercely than fire
to ruin the produce of a wicked land.
20 How differently with your people! You gave them the food of angels, Ex 16 Ps 78:25; 105:40 from heaven untiringly providing [k] them bread already prepared, containing every delight, to satisfy every taste. [l] 21 And the substance you gave showed your sweetness towards your children,
for, conforming to the taste of whoever ate it,
it transformed itself into what each eater wished.
22 Snow and ice [m] endured the fire, without melting;
this was to show them that, to destroy the harvests of their enemies, fire would burn even in hail and flare in falling rain, 16:19 23 whereas, on the other hand, it would even forget its own strength in the service of feeding the upright.

24 For the creation, being at the service of you, its Creator, 5:17;19:6
tautens to punish the wicked [n]
and slackens for the benefit of those who trust in you.
25 And this is why, by changing into all things, [o] 19:18
it obediently served your all-nourishing bounty, Ps 104:27,28; 136:25;145:16
conforming to the wishes of those who were in need; [p]

h. At the dawn of creation, God had blessed whatever he had endowed with life, Gn 1:22,28; 2:3. After the fall, he laid his curse on the snake, Gn 3:14–15. The animal gods of the Egyptians deserve the same condemnation.

16 a. After this long digression on idolatry (ch. 3–15), the end of the book, 16–19, resumes the contrast between Egyptians and Israelites, see 11:4c. The second antithesis has been anticipated by general references to plagues, see 11:15–16; 12:23–27. The author continues to elaborate on the ancient biblical narratives (e.g. v. 3), giving them a free interpretation in the midrashic manner.

b. Instead of 'token', a number of important MSS read 'adviser'.

c. The author puts a merciful interpretation on Nb 21:4–9 and also states that the bronze snake had no power of itself. He sees the incident as a recall to the Law and the sign of universal salvation offered by God; this is not apparent in the ancient story. Bronze snake and plan of universal salvation appear in a similar context in Jn 3:13–17.

d. The enemies are imagined to be aware of these events, cf. 11:13, unless the author has his own times in mind.

e. With the plague of locusts, Ex 10:4–15, the author seems to be associating the horseflies, Ex 8:16–20, and mosquitoes, Ex 8:12–15, though the term he uses is vague. The idea of making them death-dealing seems to be an elaboration of Ex 10 ('death-dealing plague') and of Ps 78:45 ('devouring horseflies'); for an apocalyptic transposition of the plagues, see Rv 9:3–12.

f. Or 'they should not become insensible to your benefits'.

g. Here the author teaches that God has absolute power over life and death, not only in the sense that he can rescue anyone he pleases from imminent death, see Ps 9:13; 107:17–19; Is 38:10–17, but also apparently in the profounder sense that he can bring a soul that has gone to Sheol back to physical life, see 1 K 17:17–23; 2 K 4:33–35; 13:21.

h. 'Hades' is not expressed (lit. 'the soul that has been received') but the meaning is not in doubt.

i. All the features of this catalogue refer to the plague of hail, Ex 9:13–35, but the author, in true midrashic manner, exploits all the possibilities: for the 'rains', see Ex 9:29 (LXX), 33,34; for the 'fire', see Ex 9:23–24; Ps 78:47–49; 105:32 (where there is 'rain' as well).

j. The author seems to think that the earlier plagues are still going on when the seventh, the plague of hail, breaks over Egypt, cf. Ex 9:13–35.

k. var. in some good MSS 'sending them'.

l. Manna, 'bread of angels', Ps 78:25, or 'bread of heaven', Ps 105:40, which 'tasted like a honey-cake', Ex 16:31, is represented here as adapting itself to all tastes and assuming every sort of delectable flavour, and is thus symbolic of the goodness of God (v. 21). This characteristic is reflected in rabbinic texts, bearing witness to an already established Jewish legend.

m. i.e. the manna, which Ex 16:14 compares to dew, and Nb 11:7 (LXX) to ice, see 19:21.

n. 'tautens . . . slackens', metaphor borrowed from stringed musical instruments, cf. 19:18.

o. The author tries to explain this peculiarity of manna, see vv. 20[c], 21[c], in terms of the physics of the day, by a mutation of its elements or an exchange of properties, but puts less emphasis on this extraordinary phenomenon than on the teaching that flows from it.

p. Or 'of those who were asking' or 'praying'.

so that your beloved children, Lord, might learn 26
that the various crops are not what provide nourishment, Dt 8:3b but your word which preserves all who believe in you.
For that which fire could not destroy 27
Ex 16:21 melted in the heat of a single fleeting sunbeam, to show that, to give you thanks, we must rise before the sun 28
Ps 5:3 Si 39:5 and meet you at the dawning of the day; [q]
whereas the hope of the ungrateful melts like winter frost 29
Ps 58:7 and flows away like water running to waste.

Fifth antithesis: darkness and pillar of fire [a]

Ps 92:5–6 Rm 11:33–35 17 Yes, your judgements are great and impenetrable, 1 which is why uninstructed souls have gone astray.
While the wicked supposed they had a holy nation in their power, 2
Ex 10:21–23 they themselves lay prisoners of the dark, in the fetters of long night, 14:3 confined under their own roofs, banished from eternal providence.
While they thought to remain unnoticed with their secret sins, 3 curtained by dark forgetfulness,
they were scattered in fearful dismay,
terrified by apparitions. [b]
The hiding place sheltering them could not ward off their fear; 4 terrifying noises echoed round them;
and gloomy, grim-faced spectres haunted them.
No fire had power enough to give them light, 5
nor could the brightly blazing stars illuminate that dreadful night.
The only light for them was a great, spontaneous blaze— 6
a fearful sight to see!
And in their terror, once that sight had vanished,
they thought what they had seen more terrible than ever.
Their magical illusions were powerless now, [c] 7
and their claims to intelligence were ignominiously confounded;
for those who promised to drive out fears and disorders from sick souls 8 were now themselves sick with ludicrous fright.
Even when there was nothing frightful to scare them, 9
the vermin creeping past and the hissing of reptiles filled them with panic;
they died convulsed with fright, 10
refusing even to look at empty air, which cannot be eluded anyhow!
Wickedness is confessedly very cowardly, and it condemns itself; 11
under pressure from conscience it always assumes the worst. [d]
Fear, indeed, is nothing other 12 than the failure of the aids offered by reason;
the less you rely within yourself on these, 13
the more alarming it is not to know the cause of your suffering.
And they, all locked in the same sleep, 14
while that darkness lasted—which was in fact quite powerless and had issued from the depths of equally powerless Hades—were now chased by monstrous spectres, 15
now paralysed by the fainting of their souls;
for a sudden, unexpected terror had attacked them. [e]

And thus, whoever it might be that fell there 16
stayed clamped to the spot in this prison without bars.
Whether he was ploughman or shepherd, 17
or somebody at work in the desert.

he was still overtaken and suffered the inevitable fate,
for all had been bound by the one same chain of darkness.
18 The soughing of the wind,
the tuneful noise of birds in the spreading branches,
the measured beat of water in its powerful course,
the headlong din of rocks cascading down, 19 the unseen course of bounding animals,
the roaring of the most savage of wild beasts,
the echo rebounding from the clefts in the mountains,
all held them paralysed with fear. Lv 26:36 20 For the whole world shone with the light of day
and, unhindered, went about its work;
21 over them alone there spread a heavy darkness,
image of the dark that would receive them.
But heavier than the darkness was the burden they were to themselves.

1 18 For your holy ones, however, there was a very great light. Ex 10:23
The Egyptians, who could hear them but not see them, [a] called them fortunate because they had not suffered too; [b] 2 they thanked them for doing no injury in return for previous wrongs and asked forgiveness for their past ill-will. [c] 3 In contrast to the darkness, you gave your people a pillar of blazing fire 10:17 Ex 13:21–22,22h Ps 121:6
to guide them on their unknown journey,
a mild sun for their ambitious migration.
4 But well those others deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned in darkness, 11:16
for they had kept in captivity your children, by whom the incorruptible light of the Law was to be given to the world. Is 2:3,5

Sixth antithesis: night of bereavement and night of deliverance [d]

5 As they had resolved to kill the infants of the holy ones, and as of those exposed only one child had been saved, Ex 1:22–2:10
you punished them by carrying off their horde of children [e] Ex 12:29–30 and by destroying them all in the wild water. [f] Ex 14:26–28 6 That night had been known in advance to our ancestors, [g] so that, well knowing him in whom they had put their trust, they would be sure of his promises.
7 Your people thus were waiting both for the rescue of the upright and for the ruin of the enemy;

q. The lesson, based on a very free interpretation of Ex 16:21, alludes to the practice of offering morning prayer at dawn or first light.

17 a. To the plague of darkness, Ex 10:21–23, the author opposes the daylight that continued to light the world at large and the Israelites, v. 18 and 18:1, and later the light of the Law, 18:4, but the true antithesis is with the 'pillar of fire', 18:3.

b. A remarkable dramatisation of the plague of darkness: the description elaborates on the biblical account and is related to hellenistic midrash, possibly drawing on Jewish legend or rabbinical speculation found also in Philo of Alexandria. Note also the apocalyptic quality of the whole passage: the Egyptian darkness anticipates or typifies the darkness of hell, see especially vv. 14,20.

c. Though temporarily successful, Ex 7:11,22; 8:3, they had failed, Ex 8:14, and even brought disaster on their operators, Ex 9:11. Through Pharaoh's magicians, the author is probably attacking those of his own day.

d. First mention of 'conscience' in the Gk Bible, see Ac 23:1a; here the word means the moral conscience reproving for sins committed. Reason eliminates imaginary causes of fear, but the burdened conscience confuses reason and prevents it from discharging its proper function.

e. 'had attacked' MSS; 'had befallen' Text. rec.

18 a. The Israelites and Egyptians are imagined as living together, see Ex 11:4–7; 12:12–13,29–36.

b. 'because they had not' MSS, Lat.; 'although they (themselves) were suffering' Text. rec.

c. Or 'pleaded with them to leave', see Ex 10:24; 11:8; 12:33.

d. Adducing a further example of the correspondence between crime and punishment, cf. 11:16, the author evokes the massacre of the first-born and the catastrophe in the Red Sea (v. 5), but concentrates on the former.

e. The connection is perhaps based on Ex 4:22–23. Previously, the infanticidal decree, 11:6–7, was used to justify the plague of the Nile turned to blood.

f. The massacre of the first-born and the drowning of the Pharaonic army are linked also in the Book of Jubilees (48:14) and in a rabbinical commentary.

g. Either the Israelites on the eve of the Exodus, Ex 11:4–7, or more probably the Patriarchs, to whom God had promised to deliver their descendants from bondage in Egypt, Gn 15:13–14; 46:3–4.

for by the very vengeance that you exacted on our adversaries, 8
you glorified us by calling us to you. [h]
So the holy children of the good offered sacrifice in secret [i] 9 and with one accord enacted this holy law:
that the holy ones should share good things and dangers alike;
and forthwith they chanted the hymns of the ancestors. [j]

Ex 11:6;12:30 In echo came the discordant cries of their enemies, 10 and the pitiful wails of people mourning for their children could be heard from far away.
Ex 11:5;12:29 One and the same punishment had struck slave and master alike, 11 and now commoner and king had the same sufferings to endure.
Struck by the same death, all had innumerable dead. 12
Nb 33:4 There were not enough living left to bury them, for, at one stroke, the flower of their offspring had perished.
Those whose spells had made them completely incredulous, 13
when faced with the destruction of their first-born,
Ex 4:22 Dt 1:31+ Ho 11:1 acknowledged this people to be child of God. [k]

When peaceful silence lay over all, 14
Ex 11:4;12:29 and night had run the half of her swift course, Rv 19:11–13 down from the heavens, from the royal throne, 15
leapt your all-powerful Word like a pitiless warrior into the heart of a land doomed to destruction. [l] Heb 4:12 Rv 19:15 Carrying your unambiguous command like a sharp sword, it stood, and filled the universe with death; 16
though standing on the earth, it touched the sky.
Jb 4:13–15 Immediately, [m] dreams and gruesome visions 17 overwhelmed them with terror, unexpected fears assailed them.
Hurled down, some here, some there, half dead, 18
they were able to say why they were dying;
for the dreams that had troubled them 19
had warned them why beforehand,
so that they should not perish
without knowing why they were being afflicted.

Threat of annihilation in the desert

Experience of death, however, touched the upright too, [n] 20
Nb 17:6–15 1 Co 10:8 and a great many were struck down in the desert.
But the Retribution did not last long,
for a blameless [o] man hurried to their defence. 21
Wielding the weapons of his sacred office,
Nb 17:11–12 prayer and expiating incense, [p]
he confronted Retribution and put an end to the plague,
thus showing that he was your servant.
He overcame Hostility, [q] not by physical strength, 22
nor by force of arms;
but by word [r] he prevailed over the Punisher,
Ex 32:11–13 by recalling the oaths made to the Fathers, and the covenants.
Already the corpses lay piled in heaps, 23
when he interposed and beat Retribution back and cut off its approach to the living.
For the whole world was on his flowing robe, 24
Ex 28:17–21,29 •Ex 28:36 the glorious names of the Fathers engraved on the four rows of stones, and your Majesty on the diadem on his head. [s]

25 From these the Destroyer recoiled, he was afraid of these.[r]
This one experience of Retribution was enough.

Seventh antithesis: the Red Sea[a]

1 19 But the godless were assailed by merciless anger to the very end, for he knew beforehand what they would do, 2 how, after letting his people leave and hastening their departure,[b] they would change their minds and give chase. Ex 11:1a; 14:5–9 3 They were actually still conducting their mourning rites 18:12 and lamenting at the tombs of their dead, when another mad scheme came into their heads and they set out to pursue, as though runaways,
the people whom they had expelled and begged to go.
4 A well-deserved fate[c] urged them to this extreme and made them forget what had already happened, so that they would add to their torments
the one punishment outstanding[d] 5 and, while your people were experiencing a journey 18:3
contrary to all expectations,
would themselves meet an extraordinary death.

6 For the whole creation, submissive to your commands, 5:17;16:24 had its very nature re-created,[e]
so that your children should be preserved from harm.
7 Overshadowing the camp there was the cloud; Ex 14:19–22 where there had been water, dry land was seen to rise;
the Red Sea became an unimpeded way,

h. The annihilation of the Egyptian first-born, celebration of the Passover, and Exodus, finally designated the Israelites as the people of God, see Dt 7:6b.

i. i.e. descended from good stock, of holy lineage; it could also be translated 'the holy children of good things', meaning heirs to the good things promised to the ancestors. The Passover is called a sacrifice, Ex 12:27; Dt 16:2,5. The sacrifice is called 'secret' because celebrated inside their houses, Ex 12:46.

j. The author represents the first Passover in terms of later ones at which the Hallel was chanted, Ps 113–118.

k. Relying on their spells, the Egyptians hoped till this moment that their magicians would be able to beat Moses, (see Ex 7:11–13; 8:3,14; 9:11), who they thought was practising a rival magic. But this time, God strikes directly.

l. The massacre of the first-born, attributed to God himself by Ex 11:4; 12:12,23,27,29, accompanied by the Destroyer, Ex 12:23, here becomes the work of the divine Word. The latter had already been represented as executing God's sentences by Is 11:4; 55:11; Jr 23:29; Ho 6:5. This dramatic passage draws its inspiration from v. 16 of 1 Ch 21:15–27 and possibly also from Homer (Iliad IV, 443). In apocalyptic terms, the Word of Judgement prefigures, not the Incarnation of the Word (despite the use of this text in the liturgy), but the dreadful aspect of his Second Coming; see 1 Th 5:2–4; Rv 19:11–21.

m. What follows has no basis in the narrative of the Exodus.

n. As penalty for the revolt following the punishment of Korah, Dathan and Abiram, Nb 17:6–15. The passage is parenthetic to the series of antitheses.

o. Aaron, 'blameless' because, having been chosen by Yahweh, he remained faithful to him.

p. lit. 'the expiation sacrifice of incense'. By adding 'prayer', not mentioned in the biblical narrative, the author transforms the high priest into an intercessor, cf. 2 M 3:31; 15:12; Ps 99:6; Heb 7:25.

q. 'Hostility' conj.; 'the crowd' Text. rec.

r. Either the 'prayer' of v. 21, or a word of command disarming the agent of punishment, later called the Destroyer, v. 25.

s. The author represents Aaron as wearing a robe down to his heels, with the ephod and the pectoral with its twelve jewels engraved with the name of the 'ancestors' (the twelve sons of Jacob), see Ex 28:17seq.; 39:6seq.; and on his head the golden flower of the 'diadem' bearing the inscription 'consecrated to Yahweh', Ex 28:36seq.; 39:30seq. The insignia of the high priest are given a cosmic symbolism here, as was already customary in hellenised Jewry.

t. Possibly an angel like the one in 1 Ch 21:15–16; cf. Ex 12:23. • 'he was afraid' MSS, versions; 'they were afraid' Text. rec.

19 a. After preparatory considerations on the final obstinacy of the godless who are hence handed over to pitiless vengeance, the antithesis becomes explicit at v. 5. The author then emphasises the miraculous crossing of the Red Sea by the Israelites, vv. 6–9, freely elaborating on ancient tradition, see Ex 14:15a.

b. 'after letting' numerous MSS; 'after deciding' Text. rec., Lat., Syr. • 'leave' MSS; 'be absent' Text. rec. 'hastening their departure', lit. 'having packed them off in a hurry'.

c. lit. 'a worthy necessity'. The author uses a Greek expression to explain that Pharaoh's intractability, Ex 14:4,8, though not dictated by blind and pitiless Fate, is a deserved punishment, itself entailing further punishment.

d. The theme of a tally pre-ordained by God—in fact, that space of time allowed by his patience or his compassion—is common in apocalyptic writings.

e. Meaning obscure. The author is apparently referring to the original creation, Gn 1, and means that, to facilitate the crossing of the Red Sea, the natural creation was reorganised or changed. Initially, 'darkness shrouded the abyss' and the earth had risen from the water, Gn 1:1–6: a similar phenomenon is now witnessed, but this time the extraordinary behaviour of air, land and water violates the order established by the Creator. It is not clear whether the author means a transmutation of the elements or a transposition of their properties, cf. 16:25 and 19:18.

the tempestuous waves, a green plain:[f] 5:16 sheltered by your hand, the whole nation passed across, 8 gazing at these amazing prodigies.
Is 63:13–14 Ml 3:20 They were like horses at pasture, 9
they skipped like lambs,
Ex 15 singing your praises, Lord, their deliverer.
For they still remembered the events of their exile, 10
Ex 8:12–15 how the land had bred mosquitoes instead of animals
Ex 8:2 and the River had disgorged millions of frogs instead of fish.
Nb 11:31 Later they were to see a new way for birds to come into being, 11
when, goaded by greed, they demanded something tasty, Ex 16:13 and quails came up out of the sea to satisfy them.[g] 12

Egypt guiltier than Sodom

On the sinners, however, punishments rained down 13
not without violent thunder as early warning;[h] and they suffered what their own crimes had justly deserved since they had shown such bitter hatred to foreigners.
Others,[i] indeed, had failed to welcome strangers who came to them, 14
but the Egyptians had enslaved their own guests and benefactors.
The sinners, moreover, will certainly be punished for it,[j] 15 since they gave the foreigners a hostile welcome;
but the latter, having given a festive reception 16
Gn 45:17–20; 47:1–12 to people who already shared the same rights as themselves,[k]
Ex 1:8–14; 5:4–18 later overwhelmed them with terrible labours.
Hence they were struck with blindness,[l] 17
like the sinners at the gate of the upright,[m]
when, yawning darkness all around them,
Gn 19:11 each had to grope his way through his own door.

16:17–22 A new harmony in nature[n]

A new attuning of the elements occurred, 18
as on a harp the notes may change their rhythm,
though all the while preserving the same tone;
and this is just what happened:
land animals became aquatic,[o] 19
swimming ones took to the land,[p]
fire reinforced its strength in water, 20
and water forgot the power of extinguishing it; 16:18 flames, on the other hand, did not char the flesh 21
of delicate animals that ventured into them; 16:22 nor did they melt the heavenly food resembling ice and as easily melted.

Conclusion

Is 45:17.25 Yes, Lord, in every way you have made your people great and glorious; 22 you have never failed to help them at any time or place.

f. Is 63:14 also speaks of a level place ('valley'), but only by way of comparison. The Palestinian midrash speaks, not only of abundant grass, but of fruit trees lining the road opened through the waters. The 'prodigies' mentioned in the next v. derive from the same idealising process. Later rabbinical tradition enumerates ten miracles attending the crossing of the Red Sea.

g. The author takes Nb 11:31 literally; the quails came out of the sea (as the mosquitoes came out of the earth and the frogs out of the River Nile).

h. This additional touch to the biblical story is suggested either by Ps 77:17–18, or by an ancient interpretation of Ex 14:24, as found in the Targums.

i. The inhabitants of Sodom, proverbially regarded as the worst of criminals. The author will show that the Egyptians violated the laws of hospitality even more gravely.

j. Difficult text, susceptible of different punctuation. As set out here, the sentence construction is incomplete. The author is either going on with his exculpation of the Sodomites, or meaning that they too can expect a punitive 'visitation' (cf. 14:11) and one might translate 'and certainly they will be made to pay'. The punishment perhaps affects the Egyptians too.

k. Probably an allusion to a contemporary grievance of the Alexandrian Jews.

l. Rhetorical description of the plague of darkness.

m. Lot, 10:6; cf. Gn 19:11.

n. Gk writings frequently use musical metaphors for the inter-play of the elements composing the universe. Using a similar comparison, the author applies it to the principal miracles of the Exodus to suggest an explanation for them: either by a change of rhythm in the elements (cf. 16:24) or by some different combination of their properties. The created world is entirely at the service of the people of God, see v. 6.

o. The Israelites and their cattle while crossing the Red Sea.

p. The frogs, Ex 8:2.

INTRODUCTION TO
ECCLESIASTICUS

§1 This book forms part of the Greek Bible though it does not appear in the Jewish Canon; it is therefore one of the deuterocanonical books accepted by the Church. The book is named 'Ecclesiasticus' in this edition, though in references the abbreviation for it is 'Si' for Sirach or 'Ben Sira' (see below). It was written in Hebrew; St Jerome and the rabbis (who quote from it) knew the book in its original language. About two-thirds of this Hebrew text was discovered in 1896 in fragments of several medieval manuscripts coming from an old synagogue in Cairo. More recently still, small fragments were found in a cave at Qumran and, in 1964, a long text was discovered at Massada, containing 39:27–44:17 in a hand dating from the beginning of the first century BC. The way these versions vary among themselves, as also the way they vary from the Greek and Syriac translations, show that several recensions of the book were in circulation at a very early date.

The Greek text is the only one recognised by the Church as canonical, and it is from this that the present translation has been made (more exactly, from the three principal manuscripts, Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus and Vaticanus, which together form what is called the Textus receptus), with a number of Hebrew variants being given in the notes.

The Latin title Ecclesiasticus (liber) is relatively recent (St Cyprian); it probably calls attention to the fact that the Church adopted it for her official use although the Synagogue did not. In Greek, see the subscriptio of 51:30, the book was called 'Wisdom of Jesus Ben Sirach' and the author is again named in 50:27. Nowadays he is referred to as Ben Sira or Siracides (from the Greek form: Sirach). In a foreword, vv. 1–35, the grandson of the author tells how he translated the book when he went to settle in Egypt in the 38th year of King Euergetes, v. 27. This can only be Ptolemy VII Euergetes (170–117 BC), and the date corresponds to 132 BC. Ben Sira himself presumably lived and wrote some sixty years before his grandson, about 190–180 BC. A passage in the book confirms this date: Ben Sira's eulogy of the High Priest Simon, 50:1–21, is based on personal reminiscence. This was Simon II, who died shortly after 200 BC.

At this period Palestine had just come under the dominion of the Seleucids (198). Hellenisation, that is to say the imitation of Greek manners, was supported by a section of the ruling class; and soon afterwards Antiochus Epiphanes (175–164) was to attempt to impose it by force. Against these dangerous innovations Ben Sira marshals all the forces of tradition. He is a scribe in whom the pursuit of wisdom is coupled with zeal for the Law. He is devoted to the Temple with its liturgy and has a high regard for the priestly office; but the sacred books, too, are his spiritual nourishment; he has studied the Prophets and above all the Wisdom writings. He in his turn undertakes to teach wisdom to all who are eager for it, 33:18; 50:27, cf. the translator's foreword, vv. 7–14.

In form, the book resembles its predecessors and models. Apart from the section hymning the glory of God in nature, 42:15–43:33, and in history, 44:1–50:29, the book is no more systematically put together than Proverbs or Ecclesiastes. The most diverse topics are dealt with, in no order and with some repetition; the topics are presented in small groups of loosely connected maxims. Two appendices are attached to the end of the book: a hymn of thanksgiving, 51:1–12, and a poem on the search for wisdom, 51:13–30. The Hebrew text of the latter piece was discovered at Qumran, inserted into a manuscript of the Psalter, which confirms that the poem originally existed as an independent entity before being attached to Ecclesiasticus.

The doctrine of the book is as traditional as its form. The wisdom which Ben Sira commends comes from God; it is rooted in the fear of the Lord; it forms the youthful character and brings happiness. On human destiny and the problem of retribution Ben Sira shares the same uncertainty as Job and Ecclesiastes. He believes in retribution, he is aware of the tragic importance of the hour of death, but he does not yet see how God can reward everyone as their activities deserve, see Introduction to Wisdom Books, §3. On the nature of divine wisdom, 24:1–22, he elaborates the notions of Proverbs and Job, see Introduction to Wisdom Books, §3, pp. 750–1.

But Ben Sira's original contribution is to identify Wisdom with the Law of Moses, 24:23–24 (the wisdom poem in Baruch 3:9–4:4 does the same). Unlike his predecessors, he integrates wisdom into the tradition of reverence for the Law. Further, he identifies observance of the Law with a punctilious performance of religious duties, 35:1–10; he is a firm supporter of liturgical worship.

§2 In contrast with earlier sages, Ben Sira meditates on the history of salvation, 44:1–49:16. He reviews the great personalities of the Old Testament from Enoch to Nehemiah. On three of them, Solomon (even though he was the model of sages), Rehoboam and Jeroboam, his verdict is as severe as that passed by deuteronomic historians, and like them he condemns all the kings en bloc except David, Hezekiah and Josiah. But he is proud of his people's past, and dwells especially on the saintly figures of the Old Testament and on the wonders God worked through them. He tells how God made a covenant with Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, Phinehas and David, embracing the whole nation but especially ensuring lasting privileges to certain families, and the priestly families in particular. For the author holds the deepest respect for the priesthood: Aaron and Phinehas take leading places in his gallery of ancestors, and his eulogy concludes with a long and enthusiastic tribute to Simon, the reigning high priest. He looks back on the departed glories with a certain sadness, as he thinks of the present, and he prays as he thinks of judges and prophets 'that their bones may flower again from the tomb', 46:12; 49:10, and that they may have successors. He wrote on the eve of the Maccabaean revolt; he may perhaps have lived to see it end and to think that his prayer had been heard.

§3 Though in this history of salvation Ben Sira gives prominence to the doctrine of the covenant, it is fairly correct to say that he does not look forward to a messianic deliverance. True, in his prayer of 36:1–17 he reminds God of his promises, begging him to take pity on Zion and reassemble the tribes of Jacob. This expression of prophetic nationalism, however, is unusual for Ben Sira. Like a true sage, he seems to have accepted the situation—humiliating but peaceful—to which his people had been reduced. He is confident that deliverance will come, but it will be the reward for fidelity to the Law, and not the work of a messianic Saviour.

Ben Sira is the last canonical representation of Jewish wisdom in Palestine. He is an outstanding example of those hasidim (the 'devout') of Judaism, see 1 M 2:42i, who were soon to defend their faith against the persecutions of Antiochus Epiphanes and preserve little islands of faith in Israel, in which the teaching of Christ could later take root. Though Ecclesiasticus was not accepted into the Hebrew Canon, it is frequently quoted in the rabbinical writings; in the New Testament, the Epistle of James borrows many expressions from it, the Gospel of Matthew refers to it a number of times and, even today, the liturgy still echoes this ancient tradition of wisdom.

ECCLESIASTICUS

TRANSLATOR'S FOREWORD [a]

1, 2 The Law, the Prophets, ·and the other writers succeeding them [b] have passed on to
3 us great lessons, ·in consequence of which Israel must be commended for learning
4 and wisdom. ·Furthermore, it is a duty, not only to acquire learning by reading,
5, 6 but also, once having acquired it, to make oneself of use to people outside ·by 7 what one can say or write. ·My grandfather Jesus, having long devoted himself to 8, 9, 10, 11 the reading ·of the Law, ·the Prophets ·and other books of the Fathers ·and having 12 become very learned in them, ·himself decided to write something on the subjects
13 of learning and wisdom, ·so that people who wanted to learn might, by themselves
14 accepting these disciplines, ·learn how better to live according to the Law.
15, 16, 17 You are therefore asked ·to read this book ·with good will and attention 18, 19 and to show indulgence ·in those places where, notwithstanding our efforts at 20 interpretation, we may seem ·to have failed to give an adequate rendering of this 21, 22 or that expression; ·the fact is that there is no equivalent for things originally written in Hebrew when it is a question of translating them into another language;
23, 24, 25, 26 what is more, ·the Law itself, the Prophets ·and the other books ·differ considerably in translation from what appears in the original text.
27, 28 It was in the thirty-eighth year of the late King Euergetes [c] ·that, coming to 29 Egypt and spending some time here, ·and finding life here consistent with [d] a high 30 degree of wisdom, ·I became convinced of an immediate duty to apply myself in 31 my turn with pains and diligence to the translation of the book that follows; ·and I 32, 33 spent much time and learning on it ·in the course of this period, ·to complete the 34 work and to publish the book ·for the benefit of those too who, domiciled abroad, 35 wish to study, ·to reform their behaviour, and to live as the Law requires.

I: A COLLECTION OF MAXIMS

The origin of wisdom [a]

1 1 All wisdom comes from the Lord, [b] Pr 2:6
she is with him for ever.
2 The sands of the sea, the drops of rain, Ws 9:4
the days of eternity—who can count them?

F a. This foreword by the Greek translator is not strictly a part of Si and is not usually considered canonical.

b. The three-part division of the Hebr. Bible, see 1 M 12:9c and p. xi. So also vv. 8–10, 24–25. But it is not certain whether at the time of writing (end of second century BC) the three parts contained exactly what they do today, especially as regards the third.

c. Probably Ptolemy VII Euergetes Physcon (170–117). The date would therefore be 132 BC.

d. 'finding life consistent with', lit. 'a copy of': translation uncertain. Other possible translations: 'I found that the (religious) instruction was far from equalling (our own)'; or 'I found a copy containing no mean instruction.' According to the interpretation adopted here, Ben Sira, in offering his grandfather's book to the Greek public, intends to please a community already cultivated and worthy of this enrichment.

1 a. This first chapter is a series of variations on the themes enunciated at the beginning of Pr.

b. The term 'Lord' (Kyrios) is commonly used in LXX to render the name 'Yahweh'. Ben Sira's translator uses it very frequently, even to render the other divine names.

The height of the sky, the breadth of the earth, 3
the depth of the abyss [c]—who can explore them?
24:8–9 Pr 8:22e Wisdom was created before everything, 4 prudent understanding subsists from remotest ages. [d]
Ba 3:20–22 Jb 28:12–23 For whom has the root of wisdom ever been uncovered? 6
Her resourceful ways, who knows them? [e]
One only is wise, terrible indeed, 8
seated on his throne, the Lord. [f] 9
Jb 28:27 It was he who created, [g] inspected and weighed her up, Qo 2:26 Jl 3:1–2 and then poured her out on all his works—
Ac 2:17seq.;33 as much to each living creature as he chose— 10 bestowing her on those who love him.

The fear of God [h]

9:16 The fear of the Lord is glory and pride, 11 happiness and a crown of joyfulness.
The fear of the Lord gladdens the heart, 12
Pr 1:20;2:40 giving happiness, joy and long life.
For those who fear the Lord, all will end well: 13
11:27 on their dying day they will be blessed. [i] Pr 1:7a The basis of wisdom is to fear the Lord; 14
she was created with the faithful in their mothers' womb;
she has made a home in the human race, an age-old foundation, 15 19 and to their descendants will she faithfully cling.
The fullness of wisdom is to fear the Lord; 16 20
Pr 8:18–19 she intoxicates them with her fruits;
Ws 7:11 she fills their entire house with treasures 17 21
and their storerooms with her produce.
The crown of wisdom is to fear the Lord: 18 22
she makes peace and health flourish.
Jb 28:27 The Lord has seen and assessed her, 19 23
he has showered down knowledge and intelligence, 24
he has exalted the renown of those who possess her.
The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord, 20 25
1:12 and her branches are long life. [j]

Patience and self-control

Pr 29:22 The rage of the wicked [k] cannot put him in the right, 22 28 for the weight of his rage is his downfall.
A patient person puts up with things until the right time comes: 23 29
but his joy will break out in the end.
Till the time comes he keeps his thoughts to himself, 24 30 and many a lip will affirm how wise he is.

Wisdom and uprightness

Wisdom's treasuries contain the maxims of knowledge, 25 31
the sinner, however, holds piety in abhorrence. 32
If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments, [l] 26 33
and the Lord will bestow it on you.
Pr 15:33 For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and instruction, 27 34
and what pleases him is faithfulness and gentleness. 35
Do not stand out against fear of the Lord, 28 36
do not practise it with a double heart.
2:12;5:9 Jm 1:6–8 Do not act a part in public, [m] 29 37
keep watch over your lips.

38 30 Do not grow too high and mighty, for fear you fall — Mt 23:12 and cover yourself in disgrace;
39 for the Lord would then reveal your secrets and overthrow you before the whole community — Pr 5:14 40 for not having practised fear of the Lord
and for having a heart full of deceit.

The fear of God in time of ordeal [a]

1 2 My child, if you aspire to serve the Lord, prepare yourself for an ordeal. — Jm 1:2–4 2 Be sincere of heart, be steadfast, — 1 P 4:12 and do not be alarmed when disaster comes. — Rv 2:10 3 Cling to him and do not leave him, so that you may be honoured at the end of your days. — Rv 3:21
