4 Whatever happens to you, accept it, and in the uncertainties of your humble state, be patient, — Rm 5:3 5 since gold is tested in the fire, — Jm 1:2–4 and the chosen in the furnace of humiliation.
6 Trust him and he will uphold you, — Pr 3:5–6 follow a straight path and hope in him.
7 You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy;
do not turn aside, for fear you fall.
8 You who fear the Lord, trust him,
and you will not be robbed of your reward.
9 You who fear the Lord, hope for those good gifts of his,
everlasting joy and mercy.
11 10 Look at the generations of old and see:
who ever trusted in the Lord and was put to shame? — Jb 4:7 12 Or who ever, steadfastly fearing him, was forsaken? — Ps 22:4–5; 37:25
Or who ever called to him and was ignored?
13 11 For the Lord is compassionate and merciful, — Ex 34:6–7 he forgives sins and saves in the time of distress. — Ps 145:8seq.
14 12 Woe to faint hearts and listless hands, [b] and to the sinner who treads two paths.
15 13 Woe to the listless heart that has no faith, for such will have no protection.
16 14 Woe to you who have lost the strength to endure;
17 what will you do at the Lord's visitation?

c. 'the depth of the abyss', Lat. see also Syr.; 'the abyss and wisdom' Gk.

d. The numbering of the verses was originally done on a Latin text, which was longer than the Gk one, hence the absence in this translation of certain vv. which were later additions to the book. These vv. are also found in a group of Gk MSS (which we indicate by the abbreviation: Gk 248). Additional v. 5: 'The source of wisdom is the word of God in heaven; her modes of progression are the eternal laws.'

e. Gk 248, Syr. Hex. and Lat. add [7]: 'To whom has the knowledge of wisdom been manifested? And who has understood the abundance of her ways?'

f. The author emphasises the uniqueness and sublimity of God. Wisdom is an attribute to God, the hallmark of his creation, the gift of God to human beings; though frequently personified in wisdom literature, Pr 8:22e, here it is a created thing and cannot be identified with God.

g. Lat. adds 'in the Holy Spirit', which is a Christian interpolation.

h. The fear of the Lord, for a Jew, merely means religion or piety. The original idea of physical fear, of terror before the fearful power of Yahweh, has at this point practically disappeared from Jewish theology.

i. Here Lat. adds [14] 'The love of God is a wisdom worthy of honour, [15], but those to whom he has appeared love him by contemplating him and by proclaiming his great works.'

j. Gk 248 and Syr. Hex. add [21] 'The fear of the Lord takes sin away, he who perseveres turns away retribution,' and Lat. [26]: 'The fear of the Lord is piety in knowledge, [27] but wisdom is abhorred by sinners. The fear of the Lord chases sin away.'

k. 'the rage of the wicked' conj.; 'wicked rage' Gk.

l. For Ben Sira wisdom and observance of the Law go together, 19:20. Cf. Qo 12:13. Here, wisdom is the reward of observance.

m. lit. 'before human beings' MSS, versions; 'in the mouth (of the world)' Gk.

2 a. A recurrent OT theme, particularly in the Ps.

b. The author is seemingly commending resistance under persecution; he is condemning apostasy, even if only outward, vv. 12[b], 15, cf. 2 M 6:21–28.

Those who fear the Lord do not disdain his words, 15 18
Jn 14:15, 21, 23 and those who love him keep his ways.
Those who fear the Lord do their best to please him, 16 19 and those who love him will find satisfaction in the Law. [c]
Those who fear the Lord keep their hearts prepared 17 20 and humble themselves in his presence. 21 2 S 24:14 Let us fall into the hands of the Lord, not into any human clutches; 18 22b for as his majesty is, so too is his mercy.

Ex 20:12+ Ep 6:1–3 Duties towards parents

3 Children, listen to me for I am your father: 1 2 do what I tell you, and so be safe; for the Lord honours the father above his children 2 3 and upholds the rights of a mother over her sons.
Whoever respects a father expiates sins, 3 4 whoever honours a mother is like someone amassing a fortune. 4 3 Whoever respects a father will in turn be happy with children, 5 6
the day he prays for help, he will be heard.
Long life comes to anyone who honours a father, 6 7 whoever obeys the Lord makes a mother happy. [a]
Such a one serves parents as also the Lord. [b] 7 8b Mt 21:28–31 Respect your father in deed as well as word, 8 9 so that blessing may come on you from him; 10 Gn 27:27seq.; 48:15–20; 49:3–27 pDt 33:1–25 since a father's blessing makes his children's house firm, 9 11
while a mother's curse tears up its foundations.
Do not make a boast of disgrace overtaking your father, 10 12 your father's disgrace reflects no honour on you; Pr 17:6 for a person's own honour derives from the respect shown to his father, 11 13 and a mother held in dishonour is a reproach to her children.
Pr 19:26 Mt 15:4–6 My child, support your father in his old age, 12 14 do not grieve him during his life.
Even if his mind should fail, show him sympathy, 13 15 do not despise him in your health and strength; for kindness to a father will not be forgotten 14 but will serve as reparation for your sins. 17
On your own day of ordeal God will remember you: 15 like frost in sunshine, your sins will melt away.
Ex 21:17+ Pr 19:26;30:17 Whoever deserts a father is no better than a blasphemer, 16 18 and whoever distresses a mother is accursed of the Lord.

Humility

My child, be gentle in carrying out your business, 17 19 and you will be better loved than a lavish giver. [c] Mt 20:26–28 Ph 2:5–8 The greater you are, the more humbly you should behave, 18 20 and then you will find favour with the Lord; [d] for great though the power of the Lord is, 20 21 Pr 3:34 Zp 2:3d he accepts the homage of the humble. [e]
Do not try to understand things that are too difficult for you, 21 22
Ps 131:1 or try to discover what is beyond your powers. [f] Concentrate on what has been assigned you, 22 23 you have no need to worry over mysteries.
Do not meddle with matters that are beyond you; [g] 23 24 what you have been taught already exceeds the scope of the human 25 mind.
For many have been misled by their own notions, [h] 24 26 wicked presumption having warped their judgement. [i]

Pride

27 26 A stubborn heart will come to a bad end, Pr 28:14 and whoever dallies with danger will perish in it.[j] Rm 2:5 28 27 A stubborn heart is weighed down with troubles, the sinner heaps sin on sin. 5:5 29 28 For the disease of the proud there is no cure, Is 30:1 30 since an evil growth has taken root there.
31 29 The heart of the sensible will reflect on parables, an attentive ear is the sage's dream.

Charity to the poor

7:32–36;29:8–13
Dt 15:7–11
33 30 Water puts out a blazing fire, almsgiving expiates sins. Tb 12:9 34 31 Whoever gives favours[k] in return is mindful of the future; 1 P 4:8
at the moment of falling, such a person will find support.
1 4 My child, do not refuse the poor a livelihood, do not tantalise the needy.
2 Do not add to the sufferings of the hungry, do not bait anyone in distress.
3 Do not aggravate a heart already angry, nor keep the destitute waiting for your alms. Pr 3:27–28,28c 4 Do not repulse a hard-pressed beggar, nor turn your face from the poor. Tb 4:7 5 Do not avert your eyes from the needy give no one occasion to curse you; 6 for if someone curses you in distress, his Maker will give ear to the imprecation. Ex 22:22
Dt 15:9
7 Gain the love of the community in the presence of the great bow your head.
8 To the poor lend an ear, and courteously return the greeting.
9 Save the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor, Jb 29:12,17 and do not be mean-spirited in your judgements.
10 Be like a father to the fatherless Ex 22:21 and as good as a husband to their mothers.[a] 11 And you will be like a child to the Most High, Ps 41:1–3
Is 49:15
who will love you more than your own mother does. Lk 6:35 Jn 14:21,23

Wisdom as educator[b]

12 11 Wisdom brings up her own children and cares for those who seek her. 6:27–28

c. Ben Sira does not oppose love to obedience; he identifies them. Love is disinterested; hope of reward is merely a secondary consideration. The attitude is characteristic of Ben Sira but is found elsewhere in Jewish thought. See, for example, Pirke Abot, 1:3: 'Do not be like slaves who serve their master for the sake of reward. Be like slaves who serve their master without looking for reward.'

3 a. Gk 248 and Lat. add 7[a] 'He who fears the Lord honours his father.'

b. 'his Lord' conj.; 'masters' Gk.

c. 'lavish giver', lit. 'giver of presents' Hebr.; 'agreeable' Gk.

d. Gk 248 and Syr. add [19]'Many are the arrogant and renowned, but the humble are those to whom he reveals his secrets.'

e. The emphasis here is on God's condescension in putting himself within the reach of the humblest. But Hebr. 'for great is the mercy of God, he reveals his secrets to the humble' expresses an idea much more frequent in the OT: God showers his favours on those who behave with humility, Ps 25:14; Pr 3:34; cf. Mt 11:25; Lk 1:52.

f. Against curiosity (vv. 21–24): the Law is a sufficient study for the wise.

g. 'with matters that are beyond you' Hebr.; 'with your unnecessary works' Gk.

h. Hebr. 'For human thoughts are many.'

i. Gk 248 adds [25]'For lack of eyes you want for light; if you are without knowledge do not attempt to convince.'

j. Hebr. 'and whoever loves happiness will be led by it.'

k. The text does not make clear whether this means returning good for good (see Hebr.) or good for evil.

4 a. But the Hebr. 'widows' may be preferable to 'their mothers', widows and orphans being typical of those to whom charity is enjoined, see Dt 10:18; 14:29; 24:19; etc.; Ps 68:5; 146:9; Ezk 22:7.

b. Here, Wisdom is personified as in Pr 1:23–25; 8:12–21; 9:1–6. Her 'children' are those who pursue wisdom and put it into practice, see Lk 7:35.

Whoever loves her loves life, 12 13 those who seek her early will be filled with joy.
Whoever possesses her will inherit honour, 13 14 and wherever he walks the Lord will bless him.
Those who serve her minister to the Holy One, 14 15 and the Lord loves those who love her.
Whoever obeys her rules the nations, 15 16 whoever pays attention to her dwells secure.
If he trusts himself to her he will inherit her, 16 17 and his descendants will remain in possession of her;
for though she takes him at first through winding ways, 17 18 bringing fear and faintness on him, 19 trying him out with her discipline till she can trust him, and testing him with her ordeals, she then comes back to him on the straight road, makes him happy 18 20 and reveals her secrets to him. 21
If he goes astray, however, she abandons him 19 22 and leaves him to his own destruction. [e]

Modesty and deference to others [d]

Take circumstances into account and beware of evil, 20 23 and have no cause to be ashamed of yourself; 24 for there is a shame that leads to sin 21 25 and a shame that is honourable and gracious.
Do not be too severe on yourself, 22 26 do not let shame lead you to ruin. 27
Do not refrain from speaking when it will do good, 23 28 and do not hide your wisdom; [e] for your wisdom is made known by what you say, 24 29 your erudition by the words you utter.
Do not contradict the truth, 25 30 rather blush for your own ignorance.
Do not be ashamed to confess your sins, 26 31a do not struggle against the current of the river. [f] 32b Do not grovel to the foolish, 27 31b do not show partiality to the influential. 32a Fight to the death for truth, 28 33 and the Lord God will war on your side.
Do not be bold of tongue, 29 34
yet idle and slack in deed;
do not be like a lion [g] at home, 30 35 or cowardly towards your servants.
Do not let your hands be outstretched to receive, 31 36 yet tight-fisted when the time comes to give back.

Wealth and presumption

5 Do not put your confidence in your money 1 or say, 'With this I am self-sufficient.'
Do not be led by your appetites and energy 2 to follow the passions of your heart.
And do not say, 'Who has authority over me?' [a] 3 for the Lord will certainly give you your deserts.
Do not say, 'I have sinned, but what harm has befallen me?' [b] 4 for the Lord's forbearance is long.
Do not be so sure of forgiveness 5 that you add sin to sin.

6 And do not say, 'His compassion is great,
he will forgive me my many sins';
7 for with him are both mercy and retribution, 16:11 Ex 20:5–6 and his anger does not pass from sinners.
8 7 Do not delay your return to the Lord, Is 55:6–7 do not put it off day after day; 9 for suddenly the Lord's wrath will blaze out, Lk 12:35–40 and on the day of punishment you will be utterly destroyed.
10 8 Do not set your heart on ill-gotten gains, Pr 10:2
they will be of no use to you on the day of disaster.

Straightforwardness and self-possession

11 9 Do not winnow in every wind, or walk along every by-way (as the double-talking sinner does).
12 10 Be steady in your convictions, and be a person of your word. Mt 5:37 Jm 5:12 13 11 Be quick to listen, ↗Jm 1:19 and deliberate in giving an answer.
14 12 If you understand the matter, give your neighbour an answer, if not, keep your hand over your mouth. Pr 30:32 Ws 8:12e 15 13 Both honour and disgrace come from talking, the tongue is its owner's downfall. Pr 18:21 Jm 3:6 16 14 Do not get a name for scandal-mongering, do not set traps with your tongue; 17 for as shame lies in store for the thief, so harsh condemnation awaits the deceitful.
18 15 Avoid offences[c] in great as in small matters, and do not exchange friendship for enmity, 1 6 for a bad name will earn you shame and reproach, as happens to the double-talking sinner.
2 Do not get carried aloft on the wings of passion, for fear your strength tear itself apart like a bull, 3 and you devour your own foliage and destroy your own fruit and end by making yourself like a piece of dried-up wood. Jn 15:5–6 4 An evil temper destroys the person who has it and makes him the laughing-stock of his enemies.

Friendship 37:1–6

5 A kindly turn of speech attracts new friends, Pr 15:1
a courteous tongue invites many a friendly response.
6 Let your acquaintances[a] be many,
but for advisers choose one out of a thousand.
7 If you want to make a friend, take him on trial, 37:7–15 and do not be in a hurry to trust him; 12:8–9 Pr 17:17

c. In Hebr. vv. 15–19, in the first person singular, are presented as a 'discourse by Wisdom', in imitation of Pr 1:22seq.; 8:1seq.

d. The following passage probably alludes to the temptation to which Jews were exposed under the impact of Hellenism, to dissimulate their faith and observances, see 1 M 1:12–15; 2 M 4:11–16.

e. 'when it will do good', lit. 'at the time of salvation', meaning uncertain (Hebr. 'in its time'). • 'and do not hide your wisdom' Hebr., Gk 248, Lat. (which add 'for beauty'); omitted by Gk.

f. It would be easier to stop it than to conceal one's sins from God. The confession of sins was not unknown in Judaism, Lv 5:5; Nb 5:7; 2 S 12:13; 1 K 21:27; Ps 38:1,4–5; 51:5.

g. var. (Hebr. and Syr.) 'a dog', which would make the two lines synonymous instead of antithetical.

5 a. Like the 'fool' who, even if he does not deny the existence of God, at least denies his providence, Ps 53:1.

b. The sceptic defies divine justice when it is apparently inactive.

c. 'avoid offences' following Hebr.; 'do not be ignorant' Gk.

6 a. lit. 'those who are at peace with you', or possibly 'those who wish peace to you'. Compare Hebr. 'the men of your greeting'.

Pr 25:9–10 and a third kind of friend will share your table, 10 but not stand by you in your day of trouble:
Pr 19:4,7 when you are doing well he will be your second self, 11 ordering your servants about; [b] but, if disaster befalls you, he will recoil from you 12 and keep out of your way.
Keep well clear of your enemies, 13
Jr 9:3 and be wary of your friends.
Pr 18:19 Qo 4:9–12 A loyal friend is a powerful defence: 14

A loyal friend is something beyond price, 15
there is no measuring his worth.
Pr 17:17;18:24 A loyal friend is the elixir of life, 16 and those who fear the Lord will find one.
Whoever fears the Lord makes true friends, 17 for as a person is, so is his friend too. [c]

Apprenticeship to wisdom

Pr 22:6 My child, from your earliest youth choose instruction, 18 and till your hair is white you will keep finding wisdom.
Like ploughman and sower, cultivate her [d] 19
Pr 8:18–19 Ws 7:14 and wait for her fine harvest, for in tilling her you will toil a little while, 20
but very soon you will be eating her crops.
How very harsh she is to the undisciplined! 20 21
The senseless does not stay with her for long:
she will weigh as heavily on the senseless as a touchstone 21 22 and such a person will lose no time in throwing her off; for Wisdom is true to her name, 22 23 she is not accessible to many.
Listen, my child, and take my advice, 23 24
do not reject my counsel: put your feet into her fetters, 24 25
Mt 11:29 and your neck into her collar; offer your shoulder to her burden, 25 26
do not be impatient of her bonds; Dt 6:5 court her with all your soul, 26 27 and with all your might keep in her ways; search for her, track her down: she will reveal herself; 27 28 once you hold her, do not let her go.
4:11–12 Jr 6:16 Mt 11:29 For in the end you will find rest in her 28 29 and she will take the form of joy for you:
her fetters you will find a mighty defence, 29 30
Pr 1:9 her collars, a precious necklace.
Her yoke [e] will be a golden ornament, 30 31 and her bonds be purple ribbons;
you will wear her like a robe of honour, 31 32
Pr 4:9 you will put her on like a crown of joy.
If you wish it, my child, you can be taught; 32 33 8:8 Pr 13:20 apply yourself, and you will become intelligent.
If you love listening, you will learn, 33 34
if you pay attention, you will become wise.

35 34 Attend the gathering of elders;
if there is a wise man there, attach yourself to him.
35 Listen willingly to any discourse coming from God, do not let wise proverbs escape you.
36 If you see a man of understanding, visit him early, let your feet wear out his doorstep.
37 Reflect on the injunctions of the Lord, Ps 1:2
busy yourself at all times with his commandments.
He will strengthen your mind,
and the wisdom you desire will be granted you.

Miscellaneous advice

1 7 Do no evil, and evil will not befall you; Gn 4:7
2 shun wrong, and it will avoid you.
3 My child, do not sow in the furrows of wickedness, Gn 4:15,24 Jb 4:8 Pr 22:8 Ga 6:7–8 for fear you have to reap them seven times over.
4 Do not ask the Lord for the highest place, 13:9–10 Gn 3:12seq.;4:9 Pr 25:6–7 •Lk 18:11 or the king for a seat of honour.
5 Do not parade your uprightness before the Lord, or your wisdom before the king.
6 Do not scheme to be appointed judge, for fear you should not be strong enough to stamp out injustice, for fear of being swayed by someone influential Lv 19:15 and so of risking the loss of your integrity.
7 Do not wrong the general body of citizens and so lower yourself in popular esteem.
8 Do not be drawn to sin twice over,
for you will not go unpunished even once.
11 9 Do not say, 'God will be impressed by my numerous offerings; Pr 21:27 Am 5:21n when I sacrifice to God Most High, he is bound to accept.'
9 10 Do not be hesitant in prayer; Jm 1:6 10 do not neglect to give alms. 3:30+ 12 11 Do not laugh at someone who is sad of heart, for he who brings low can lift up high. 1 S 2:7 Lk 1:52 13 12 Do not make up lies against your brother, nor against a friend either.
14 13 Mind you tell no lies, for no good can come of it. [a] 15 14 Do not talk too much at the gathering of elders, and do not repeat yourself at your prayers. Mt 6:7 16 15 Do not shirk tiring jobs or farm work, ordained by the Most High. Gn 3:17–19 Pr 24:27 17 16 Do not swell the ranks of sinners, 18 remember that the retribution will not delay. 5:7 19 17 Be very humble, since the recompense for the godless is fire and worms. [b] Jdt 16:17 Is 66:24 Mk 9:48

b. Hebr. 'in your misfortune he leaves you'.

c. Usually interpreted 'for his friend is as dear to him as himself.' But equally probable is 'for his friend will be inevitably like himself, godfearing.' True piety is the guarantee of friendship.

d. 'cultivate her', lit. 'approach her'.

e. 'her yoke' following Hebr.; 'on her' Gk: probably a misreading on the part of the original translator ('aleah instead of 'ullah).

7 a. lit. 'its continuity (?) is not for good'. Meaning uncertain but confirmed by Hebr. 'the result is not agreeable'.

b. Hebr., possibly inspired by Jb 25:6, only mentions worms. Worms and fire occur together in Is 66:24 (repeated later by Mk 9:48) and in Jdt 16:17.

Do not barter a friend away for the sake of profit, 18 20 nor a true brother for the gold of Ophir.
Do not turn against a wise and good wife;[c] 19 21 her gracious presence is worth more than gold.
3:25–33 Dt 24:14–15 Do not ill-treat a slave who is an honest worker, 20 22 or a wage-earner who is devoted to you.
Love an intelligent slave with all your heart,[d] 21 23
Ex 21:2 Dt 15:12–15 and do not deny such a slave his freedom.

Children

Pr 27:23 Have you cattle? Look after them; 22 24 if they are making you a profit, keep them.
30:1–13 Pr 13:24+ Have you children? Educate them, 23 25 from childhood make them bow the neck.[e] 42:9–11 Have you daughters? Take care of their bodies, 24 26 but do not be over-indulgent.
1 Co 7:36–38 Marry a daughter off, and you have finished a great work; 25 27 but give her to a man of sense.
Have you a wife to your liking? Do not turn her out; 26 28 but if you do not love her, never trust her.

Parents

Ex 20:12 Tb 4:4 With all your heart honour your father, 27 29 never forget the birthpangs of your mother.
Remember that you owe your birth to them; 28 30 how can you repay them for what they have done for you?[f]

Priests

With all your soul, fear the Lord 29 31 and revere his priests.[g]
With all your might love him who made you, 30 32 and do not abandon his ministers.
Fear the Lord and honour the priest 31 33 and give him the portion enjoined on you: 34 first-fruits, sacrifice of reparation, shoulder-gift, sanctification sacrifice, first-fruits of the holy things. 35

3:30–4:10; 29:8–13 The poor and afflicted

And also give generously to the poor, 32 36
Dt 14:29 Ps 41:1 so that your blessing[h] may lack nothing.
Let your generosity extend to all the living, 33 37 do not withhold it even from the dead.[i] 37:12 Rm 12:15 Mt 25:35 Do not turn your back on those who weep, 34 38 but share the grief of the grief-stricken.
Do not shrink from visiting the sick; 35 39
in this way you will make yourself loved.
In everything you do, remember your end, 36 40 and you will never sin.[j]

Prudence and commonsense

8 Do not try conclusions with anyone influential, 1 in case you later fall into his clutches.
Pr 10:15 Do not quarrel with anyone rich, 2 in case he puts his weight against you;
for gold has destroyed many, 3 and has swayed the hearts of kings.

4 3 Do not argue with anyone argumentative, do not pile wood on that fire.
5 4 Do not joke with anyone uncouth, for fear of hearing your ancestors insulted. [a]

6 5 Do not revile a repentant sinner; Lv 19:32 remember that we all are guilty. [b] Mt 7:1–5par.
7 6 Do not despise anyone in old age; Rm 3:9–20 after all, some of us too are growing old. 1 Jn 1:8–10 8 7 Do not gloat over anyone's death;
remember that we all have to die.

Tradition [c]

9 8 Do not scorn the discourse of the wise, Pr 13:20 but make yourself familiar with their maxims, 10 since from these you will learn the theory and the art of serving the great. Pr 14:35; 16:13seq.
11 9 Do not dismiss what the old men have to say, for they too were taught by their fathers; [d] 12 from them you will learn how to think, and the art of the timely answer. Col 4:6

Prudence

13 10 Do not kindle the coals of the sinner, in case you scorch yourself in his blaze.
14 11 Refuse to be provoked by the insolent, for fear that such a one try to trap you in your words.

14 12 Do not lend to anyone who is stronger than you are—
if you do lend, resign yourself to loss. 29:4

16 13 Do not stand surety beyond your means;
if you do stand surety, be prepared to pay up. 29:14–20 Pr 6:1a

17 14 Do not go to law with a judge, since judgement will be given in his favour.

18 15 Do not go travelling with a rash man, for fear he becomes burdensome to you; Pr 22:24–25
he will act as the whim takes him,
and you will both be ruined by his folly.
19 16 Do not argue with a quick-tempered man, Pr 15:18 do not go with him where there are no other people,

c. Or possibly 'Do not hesitate to marry a wise and good wife,' see v. 26.

d. lit. 'let your soul love': the translator seems to have misunderstood the Hebr. 'love as your soul', that is, 'love like yourself'.

e. Hebr. 'and betroth them from childhood'.

f. Hebr. omits these two vv.

g. Ben Sira reveres the liturgy and its ministers, see ch. 50. Here, reverence for the priest is juxtaposed with worship of the Lord in the same spirit as those texts to which v. 31 alludes: Ex 29:27; Lv 5:6 (sacrifices of reparation, or 'for sin'); 7:32; Nb 18:11–18 (first-fruits); Dt 18:3 (the shoulder-gift). The 'sacrifice of sanctification' (Hebr. 'of right behaviour') is probably the oblation of Lv 2:1–16.

h. The blessing given by God.

i. On the duty of giving decent burial to the dead, see 2 S 21:10–14; Tb 1:17–18; 12:12; Is 34:3; Jr 22:19. At a later period prayers and sacrifices were also offered for them, 2 M 12:38–46. But the Law seems to have forbidden certain non-Jewish rites connected with the dead, Dt 26:14, cf. Si 30:18; Ba 6:26. Ben Sira does not go into details.

j. 'do' Hebr; 'say' Gk. • Even if Ben Sira does not yet have a sure and clear idea of retribution after death, he several times stresses the importance of the hour of death, see 11:26–28. There could also be an advance in the Gk translation over the Hebr: the Hebr merely says 'in everything you do consider the end', that is, be careful of the consequences of your actions. By the more precise 'your end' the Gk clearly envisages the last things.

8 a. By the type of curse so common in the East.

b. 'guilty' Hebr.; 'in chastisements' Gk.

c. Ben Sira is aware that wisdom is a traditional matter and that in earlier days in Israel as in Egypt it had been the qualification for being a government official, being 'the art of serving the great'.

d. The rabbis think highly of tradition which they call 'the oral law'. See Dt 4:9; 11:19; Jb 8:8; 12:12; Ps 44:1; 78:3seq. Most books of the Bible formed part of the oral tradition before being committed to writing. This is notably true of the proverbs and maxims of the sages.

since blood counts for nothing in his eyes, and where no help is to be had, he will strike you down.

Do not ask a fool for advice, 17 20
since he will not be able to keep a confidence.
In a stranger's presence do nothing that should be kept secret, 18 21 since you cannot tell what use the stranger will make of it.
Do not open your heart to all comers, 19 22 nor lay claim to their good offices. [e]

Women

Nb 5:14–15 9 Do not be jealous of the wife you love, 1 do not teach her lessons in how to harm you.
Jg 16:4–21 Do not put yourself in a woman's hands 2 1 K 11:1–4 Pr 31:3 or she may come to dominate you completely.
Do not keep company with a prostitute, 3
Pr 23:27;29:3 in case you get entangled in her snares.
Do not dally with a singing girl, 4
Pr 7:6–27 in case you get caught by her wiles.
Jb 31:1 Do not stare at a pretty girl, 5
Mt 5:28 in case you and she incur the same punishment.
Pr 29:3 Do not give your heart to whores, 6
Lk 15:13 or you will ruin your inheritance.
Keep your eyes to yourself in the streets of a town, 7 do not prowl about its unfrequented quarters.
41:22–23 Turn your eyes away from a handsome woman, 8
Pr 2:16 do not stare at a beauty belonging to someone else.
Because of a woman's beauty, many have been undone; 9 this makes passion flare up like a fire.
Pr 5:2a Never sit down with a married woman, 9 12 or sit at table with her drinking wine, 13 in case you let your heart succumb to her and you lose all self-control and slide to disaster.

Relations with people

Do not desert an old friend; 10 14 the new one will not be his match.
New friend, new wine; 15
when it grows old, you drink it with pleasure.

Ps 37:73 Do not envy the sinner his success; 11 16 you do not know how that will end.
Do not take pleasure in what pleases the godless; 12 17 remember they will not go unpunished here below. [a]

Keep your distance from the man who has the power to put to death, 13 18 and you will not be haunted by the fear of dying.
If you do approach him, make no false move, 19 or he may take your life.
Realise that you are treading among trip-lines, 20 that you are strolling on the battlements. [b]

Cultivate your neighbours to the best of your ability, 14 21 37:7–15 and consult with the wise.
For conversation seek the intelligent, 15 22
let all your discussions bear on the law of the Most High.
Have the upright for your table companions, 16 23
1:11;10:22 and let your pride be in fearing the Lord.

24 17 Work from skilled hands will earn its praise, but a leader of the people must be skilful in words. [c] 25 18 A chatterbox is a terror to his town, 37:20 a loose talker is detested.

Government

1 10 A sagacious ruler educates his people, and he makes his subjects understand order.
2 As the magistrate is, so will his officials be,
as the governor is, so will be the inhabitants of his city.
3 An undisciplined king will be the ruin of his people, a city owes its prosperity to the intelligence of its leading men.
4 The government of the earth is in the hands of the Lord, Jr 27:5
he sets the right leader over it at the right time. Pr 8:15–16 Is 11:2–5 5 Human success is in the hands of the Lord.
He invests the scribe with honour. Rm 13:1

Against pride

6 Do not resent your neighbour's every offence, Lv 19:18 Mt 5:21–24; 18:21–22 and never act in a fit of passion.

7 Pride is hateful to God and humanity, and injustice is abhorrent to both.

8 Sovereignty passes from nation to nation because of injustice, arrogance and money.

9 What has dust and ashes to pride itself on? 17:32 Gn 2:7;18:27
10b Even in life its entrails are repellent. [a] 12 10 A long illness makes a fool of the doctor;
a king today is a corpse tomorrow. [b] 13 11 For in death the portion of all alike will be insects, wild animals and worms. Jb 17:14 Is 14:11

14 12 The first stage of pride is to desert the Lord Dt 8:14
14 and to turn one's heart away from one's Maker.
13 Since the first stage of pride is sin, whoever clings to it will pour forth filth.
16 This is why the Lord inflicts unexpected punishments on such people, utterly destroying them.
17 14 The Lord has turned mighty princes off their thrones 1 S 2:4–8 Lk 1:52 and seated the humble there instead.
18 15 The Lord has plucked up the proud [c] by the roots, 33:12 Dn 2:35 and planted the lowly in their place.
19 16 The Lord has overthrown the lands of the nations Ws 11:21–22 Is 40:15–17 and destroyed them to the very foundations of the earth.
20 17 Sometimes he has taken them away and destroyed them 21 and blotted out their memory from the earth.

e. Hebr. 'and do not turn happiness away'.

9 a. 'here below', lit. 'to Sheol'. On the problem of earthly retribution, see pp. 750–1.
b. And thus a target for the arrows of the enemy. But the text is uncertain. Hebr. 'on nets'.
c. This maxim draws a parallel between the workman, whose social value lies in his manual dexterity, and a head of State, who enforces his wishes by his eloquence. But the text is uncertain. Hebr. 'Right is obscured by skilful people and the leader of the people is skilful in speaking.'

10 a. Text emended following Syr. Hex. and commentaries; Gk is obscure ('a being who, living, throws (?) his intestines'); Hebr. corrupt and unintelligible.
b. The text seems to mean that it is useless for people to try to keep other people alive, death being inevitable, but cf. ch. 38.
c. 'the proud' conj.; 'the nations' Gk (both words look very similar in written Hebr. in which v. 15 is missing); 'the proud nations' Lat.

Pride was not created for human beings, 18 22 nor furious rage for those born of woman.

Persons deserving honour

Jr 9:22–23
1 Co 1:26–31
2 Co 10:17
Jm 1:9seq.
What race deserves honour? The human race. 19 23
What race deserves honour? Those who fear the Lord.
What race deserves contempt? The human race.
What race deserves contempt? Those who break the Law.
A leader is honoured by his brothers, 20 24 and those who fear the Lord are honoured by him. [d]
The rich, the noble, the poor, 22 25 9.16 let them pride themselves on fearing the Lord.
It is not right to despise one who is poor but intelligent, 23 26 and it is not good to honour one who is a sinner.
Magnate, magistrate, potentate, all are to be honoured, 24 27
but none is greater than the one who fears the Lord.
Pr 17:2 A wise slave will have free men waiting on him, 25 28 and the enlightened will not complain. [e]

Frankness and humility

Lk 17:10 Do not try to be smart when you do your work, 26 29 do not put on airs when you are in difficulties.
Better the hardworking who has plenty of everything, 27 30
Pr 12:9 than the pretentious at a loss for a meal.
Jr 9:22
Rm 12:3
1 Co 1:31
My child, be modest in your self-esteem, 28 31 and value yourself at your proper worth.
Who can justify one who inflicts injuries on himself, 29 32 or respect one who is full of self-contempt?
11:1 The poor is honoured for wit, 30 33
and the rich for wealth.
Honoured in poverty, how much the more in wealth! 31 34
Dishonoured in wealth, how much the more in poverty!

The deceptiveness of appearances

11 Wisdom enables the poor to stand erect, 1 and gives to the poor a place with the great.

1 S 16:7
2 Co 10:10–11
Do not praise anyone for good looks, 2 nor dislike anyone for mere appearance.

Small among winged creatures is the bee 3 but her produce is the sweetest of the sweet.

[a]Do not grow proud when people honour you; 4 for the works of the Lord are wonderful but hidden from human beings. [b] 10:14

Qo 4:14;
10:6–7
Many monarchs have been made to sit on the ground, [c] 5 and the person nobody thought of has worn the crown.
Many influential people have been utterly disgraced, 6 and prominent people have fallen into the power of others.

Deliberation and reflection

Do not find fault before making thorough enquiry; 7 first reflect, then give a reprimand.
Pr 18:13 Listen before you answer, 8 and do not interrupt a speech before it is finished.

9 Do not wrangle about something that does not concern you, do not interfere in the quarrels of sinners.

10 My child, do not take on a great amount of business; 38:24
if you multiply your interests, you are bound to suffer for it; hurry as fast as you can, yet you will never arrive, [d] nor will you escape by running away.
11 Some people work very hard at top speed, Ps 127:1–2 only to find themselves falling further behind. Pr 11:24;21:5

Trust in God alone

12 Or there is the slow kind of person, needing help, poor in possessions and rich in poverty; Zp 2:3d and the Lord turns a favourable eye on him, lifts him out of his wretched condition, 13 and enables him to hold his head high, thus causing general astonishment.
14 Good and bad, life and death, Jb 1:21;2:10 poverty and wealth, all come from the Lord. [e] Is 45:7 17 To the devout [f] the Lord's gift remains constant, and his favour will be there to lead them for ever.
18 Others grow rich by pinching and scraping, Jb 27:16–23
Ps 49:17–18
and here is the reward they receive for it: Qo 2:21–23 19 although they say, 'Now I can sit back Lk 12:16–21 and enjoy the benefit of what I have got,' 20 they do not know how long this will last;
they will have to leave their goods to others and die. [g] 21 20 Stick to your job, work hard at it [h] and grow old at your work.
22 21 Do not admire the achievements of sinners, 9:11
Pr 3:31; 23:17
trust the Lord and mind your own business; 23 since it is a trifle in the eyes of the Lord, in a moment, suddenly to make the poor rich.
24 22 The blessing of the Lord is the reward of the devout, in a moment God brings his blessing to flower.
25 23 Do not say, 'What are my needs, Mt 6:25–26 how much shall I have in the future?'
26 24 And do not say, 'I am self-sufficient, 5:1
Lk 12:15–21
what disaster can affect me now?'
27 25 In prosperous times, disasters are forgotten 18:25
Jn 16:21
and in times of disaster, no one remembers prosperity. [i] 28 26 Yet it is a trifle for the Lord on the day someone dies to repay him as his conduct deserves.

d. Gk 248 adds [21] 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of advancement, but the beginning of rejection is stubbornness and pride.'

e. Cf. Paul's remarks on slavery, Ga 3:28; Col 3:11; Phm 16.

11 a. Hebr. 'Do not jeer at anyone in rags, do not mock anyone who is in trouble.'

b. i.e. unseen and unforeseeable. One turn of the wheel and all conditions are reversed. Cf. 1 S 2:8; Jb 12:17–19; Ps 113:7. This is exemplified in the sayings that follow.

c. Or 'have been put on the pavement' (having reigned); which would give an antithetic parallel, but the Hebr. 'many humbled persons have ascended thrones' supports the reading adopted here.

d. Hebr. 'if you do not run you will not achieve, if you do not seek, you will not find.'

e. Hebr., Gk 248, Lat. and Syr. add [15] 'Wisdom, understanding, and knowledge of the Law come from the Lord, charity and the doing of good works come from him . [16]Folly and darkness were created for sinners; for those who take pleasure in evil, evil grows old.'

f. 'devout' Gk; 'upright' Hebr., as also v. 22; 12:2; 13:17.

g. Possibly this v. was the inspiration for the parable in Lk 12:16–21 (note particularly v. 19). The idea is exactly the same: the uselessness of possessions painfully amassed and of which the owner will be stripped on the day he dies.

h. 'your job' Hebr.; 'your contract' Gk. • 'work hard at it' var.; 'be happy at it' Hebr., cf. Qo 2:24; 3:13.

i. Or perhaps 'Disasters (to come) are forgotten . . . no one remembers (the possibility of future) prosperity.' Envisaging the future, the v. would be more congruent with the context, but the translation would be somewhat forced.

A moment's adversity, and pleasures are forgotten; 27 29 1:13 in a person's last hour his deeds will stand revealed.
Call no one fortunate before his death; 28 30 it is by his end that someone will be known. [j]

Distrust the wicked

Do not bring everyone home with you, 29 31 for many are the traps of the crafty.
Like a captive partridge in a cage, so is the heart of the proud: 30 32 like a spy he watches for your downfall, [k] ever on the look-out, turning good into bad 31 33 and finding fault with what is praiseworthy.
A hearthful of glowing coals starts from a single spark, 32 34
Pr 1:11 and the sinner lurks for the chance to spill blood.
Beware of a scoundrel and his evil contrivances, 33 35
in case he puts a smear on you for ever.
Give a home to a stranger and he will start trouble 34 36 and estrange you from your own family.

Mt 5:43–48
Lk 14:12–14 ### Rules for doing good

12 If you mean to do a kindness, choose the right person, 1 then your good deeds will not be wasted.
Do good to someone devout, and you will be rewarded, 2
Dt 14:29 if not by that person, then certainly by the Most High.
No good will come to one who persists in evil, 3 or who refuses to give alms. [a] Give to the devout, 4
do not go to the help of a sinner. [b]
Do good to the humble, 5 give nothing to the godless.
Refuse him bread, do not give him any,
it might make him stronger than you are;
then you would be repaid evil twice over for all the good you had done him.
Mt 5:45
Lk 6:35 For the Most High himself detests sinners, 6 and will repay the wicked with what they deserve.
Give to the good, 7
and do not go to the help of a sinner.

6:5–17 ### True and false friends

In prosperity you cannot always tell a true friend, 8
Pr 17:17;19:4 but in adversity you cannot mistake an enemy.
When someone is doing well that person's enemies are sad, [c] 9 when someone is doing badly, even a friend will keep at a distance.
Pr 26:24–26 Do not ever trust an enemy; 10
as bronze tarnishes, so does an enemy's malice.
Even if he behaves humbly and comes bowing and scraping, 11 maintain your reserve and be on your guard against him.
Behave towards him as if you were polishing a mirror, you will find that his tarnish cannot last. [d]
Do not stand him beside you 12 in case he thrusts you out and takes your place.
Do not seat him on your right, or he will be after your position, and then you will remember what I have said and sadly admit that I was right.

13 Who feels sorry for a snake-charmer bitten by a snake, or for those who take risks with savage animals?— 13b 14 just so for one who consorts with a sinner, and becomes an accomplice in his sins.
14 15 He will stay with you for a while, but if you once give way he will press his advantage.
15 16 An enemy may have sweetness on his lips, Pr 26:24–26 and in his heart a scheme to throw you into the ditch. Jr 9:7 16 An enemy may have tears in his eyes, but if he gets a chance there can never be too much blood for him.
17 17 If you meet with misfortune, you will find him there before you, and, pretending to help you, he will trip you up.
19 18 He will wag his head and clap his hands, [e] he will whisper a lot and his expression will change.

Mix with your equals

1 13 Whoever touches pitch will be defiled, and anyone who associates with the proud will come to be like them.
2 Do not try to carry a burden too heavy for you, do not associate with someone more powerful and wealthy than yourself.
3 Why put the clay pot next to the iron cauldron?
It will only break when they bang against each other. [a] 3 3 The rich does wrong and takes a high line; Pr 18:23
the poor is wronged and has to beg for pardon.
5 4 If you are useful the rich will exploit you, if you go bankrupt he will desert you.
6 5 Are you well off?—he will live with you,
he will clean you out without a single qualm.
7 6 Does he need you?—he will hoodwink you, smile at you and raise your hopes;
he will speak politely to you and say, 'Is there anything you need?'
8 7 He will make you feel small at his dinner-parties Pr 23:1–3 and, having cleaned you out two or three times over, will end by laughing at you.
Afterwards, when he sees you, he will avoid you and shake his head about you.

11 8 Take care you are not hoodwinked and thus humiliated through your own stupidity. [b] 12 9 When an influential person invites you, show reluctance, and he will press his invitation all the more.

j. 'by his end' Hebr.; 'in his children' Gk. • These three vv. (see 7:36) express the author's conviction that when a man dies, his merits and faults will be revealed by a special judgement. He does not, however, expatiate on the form that retribution will take, nor say whether or not it will be eternal.

k. Hebr. 'he is in ambush to rend him like a wolf.' Like a decoy bird placed in a trap, the heart of the proud lures his fellow into the snares of sin.

12 a. Hebr. 'No profit for the one who does a kindness to the wicked; he has not even done a good action.'

b. Lat. adds 'for on the godless and the sinful, he (God) will inflict a punishment, reserving them for the day of punishment. [5]Give to the man who is good and do not receive the sinner.' In contrast, see Mt 5:43–48; Lk 6:27–36; Rm 12:20. St Augustine, embarrassed by this injunction, attempted to soften it by commenting: 'Do not give to the sinner as sinner, give to him as man.'

c. Hebr. 'even the man who hates him is his friend' is more apt for the parallelism.

d. Hebr. 'behave towards him as (towards) someone who reveals a secret; he will not be able to hurt you, and remember the consequences of jealousy.'

e. Wagging the head: a gesture of derision, Jb 16:4; Ps 22:7; 109:25; see Mt 27:39. For 'clapping hands' see Lm 2:15; Ezk 25:6; Na 3:19.

13 a. Classic comparison, found earlier in Aesop.

b. 'through your own stupidity' Lat., Syr.; 'through your own enjoyment' Gk, Hebr. 'Beware of being too insolent (?), do not imitate fools.'

Do not thrust yourself forward, in case you are pushed aside, 10 13 but do not stand aloof, or you will be overlooked. [c]
Do not affect to treat him as an equal, 11 14 do not trust his flow of words;
since all this talking is expressly meant to test you, under cover of geniality he will be weighing you up.

Pitiless is anyone who retails gossip; 12 15
he will not spare you either blows or chains.
Be wary, take very great care, 13 16 because you are walking with your own downfall. [d]

Every living thing loves its own sort, 15 18 and every man his fellow.
Every creature mixes with its kind, 16 19 and human beings stick to their own sort.
2 Co 6:14–15 How can wolf and lamb agree?— 17 21
Just so with sinner and devout.
What peace can there be between hyena and dog? 18 22
And what peace between rich and poor? [e] Wild desert donkeys are the prey of lions; 19 23 so too, the poor is the quarry of the rich.
The proud thinks humility abhorrent; 20 24 so too, the rich abominates the poor.
Pr 19:4,7 When the rich stumbles he is supported by friends; 21 25 when the poor falls, his friends push him away. [f] Pr 14:20 When the rich slips, there are many hands to catch him, 22 26 if he talks nonsense he is congratulated.
The poor slips, and is blamed for it, 27
he may talk good sense, but no room is made for him.
The rich speaks and everyone stops talking, 23 28 and then they praise his discourse to the skies.
The poor speaks and people say, 'Who is this?' 29 and if he stumbles, they trip him up yet more.

Wealth is good where there is no sin, 24 30 poverty is evil, the godless say. [g]

Pr 15:13 A person's heart moulds his expression 25 31 whether for better or worse.
Happy heart, cheerful expression; 26 32 but wearisome work, inventing proverbs. [h]

True happiness

19:16;25:8 14 Blessed is anyone who has not sinned [a] in speech 1 and who needs feel no remorse for sins.
Blessed is anyone whose conscience does not reproach him 2 and who has never given up hope.

Qo 5:9;6:2 Envy and greed

Wealth is not the right thing for the niggardly, 3 and what use are possessions to the covetous?
Jb 27:16–17 Whoever hoards by stinting himself is hoarding for others, 4 Pr 13:22 and others will live sumptuously on his riches.
Lk 12:16–21

If someone is mean to himself, whom does he benefit? 5
He does not even enjoy what is his own.

6 No one is meaner than the person who is mean to himself, Pr 11:17 this is how his wickedness repays him.
7 If he does any good, he does it unintentionally, and in the end he himself reveals his wickedness.
8 Wicked the person who has an envious eye, averting his face, [b] and careless of others' lives.

9 The eye of the grasping is not content with what he has, Ws 6:23 greed [c] shrivels up the soul.

10 The miser is grudging of bread, there is famine at his table.

11 My child, treat yourself as well as you can afford, and bring worthy offerings to the Lord.
12 Remember that death will not delay, and that you have never seen Sheol's contract. [d] Nb 16:33 13 Be kind to your friend before you die, treat him as generously as you can afford.
14 Do not refuse yourself the good things of today, Qo 2:24 do not let your share of what is lawfully desired pass you by.
15 Will you not have to leave your fortune to another, and the fruit of your labour to be divided by lot?
16 Give and receive, enjoy yourself—
17 there are no pleasures to be found in Sheol. Qo 9:10 18 17 Like clothes, every body will wear out, the age-old law is, 'Everyone must die.' 19 18 Like foliage growing on a bushy tree, some leaves falling, others growing, 20 so are the generations of flesh and blood: Qo 1:4
one dies, another is born.
21 19 Every achievement rots away and perishes, Qo 9:6 ↗Rv 14:13 and with it goes its author. [e]

The happiness of the sage

22 20 Blessed is anyone who meditates on wisdom Pr 8:32–35 and reasons with intelligence, 23 21 who studies her ways in his heart and ponders her secrets. [f]

c. A good example of Ben Sira's moderation and irony. The words of Jesus in Lk 14:8–10, though at first sight very similar, are neither saying the same thing, nor are they saying it for the same reason.

d. Gk 248 adds [14a]'When you hear that in your sleep, wake up; love the Lord throughout your life and pray to him for your salvation.'

e. For Ben Sira, the precept to frequent only one's equals is an extension of the harmony of nature, and therefore congruent with the divine will. His condemnation of wealth is not absolute, see v. 24; his intention is to prevent the poor from being led astray by the wealthy and thus incurring the risk of being crushed.

f. This v. is presumably to be understood metaphorically; 'stumbles' can mean 'say silly things' (Hebr. 'speaks') cf. 14:1, and what follows shows that talking is the topic in hand.

g. Or perhaps 'is commensurate with impiety' (Hebr. 'is commensurate with insolence'). Wealth is not in itself bad, but merely dangerous.

h. It is not easy to see the connection between this line and the previous one, but the text is uncertain. Hebr. 'meditations and preoccupations: sad thoughts'.

14 a. lit. 'has not slipped'. Many Psalms similarly celebrate the happiness of the pure in heart, Ps 1; 32; 119; of the wise, Ps 41; of the devout, Ps 128, as opposed to those who are happy' by the world's standards. The passage anticipates the Beatitudes in the Sermon on the Mount, Mt 5:1–12.

b. From those who need his help.

c. 'greed', lit. 'the evil eye' conj.; 'bad iniquity' Gk (confusion between 'ayin and 'awon, but the Hebr. text we know is different).

d. Probably the decree assigning the date of death, cf. Is 28:15,18.

e. Hebr. 'All men's deeds are destined to perish and the works of his hands will follow him,' i.e. into corruption. Rv 14:13 transforms this notion: a person's works follow him into the glory of a new life. Whereas Qoheleth finds this perplexing and even outrageous, Ben Sira treats it as a lesson in detachment.

f. Cf. Ps 119, especially vv. 15,23,148, on the happiness derived from meditating on the Law. Here the object of study is wisdom, which is to be found notably in the proverbs and maxims of the sages.

He pursues her like a hunter 22 and lies in wait by her path; he peeps in at her windows 23 24
and listens at her doors;
he lodges close to her house 24 25 and fixes his peg in her walls: [a] he pitches his tent at her side 25 and lodges in an excellent lodging; he sets his children in her shade 26 and camps beneath her branches;
he is sheltered by her from the heat 27 and in her glory [b] he makes his home.

15 Whoever fears the Lord will act like this, 1 and whoever grasps the Law [a] will obtain wisdom.
She will come to meet him like a mother, 2
Ws 8:2 and receive him like a virgin bride.
She will give him the bread of understanding to eat 3 24:19–22 Pr 9:5 and the water of wisdom to drink.
Jn 4:1a He will lean on her and will not fall, 4 he will rely on her and not be put to shame.
Ws 8:10–15 She will raise him high above his neighbours, 5 and in full assembly she will open his mouth.
He will find happiness and a crown of joy, 6
he will inherit an everlasting name.
Fools will not gain possession of her, 7 nor will sinners set eyes on her.
Pr 8:13 She stands remote from pride, 8 and liars cannot call her to mind.
Praise is unseemly in a sinner's mouth, 9 since it has not been put there by the Lord.
For praise should be uttered only in wisdom, 10 and the Lord himself then prompts it.

Freedom of choice

Gn 3:12 ↗Jm 1:13–15 Do not say, 'The Lord was responsible for my sinning,' 11 for he does not do [b] what he hates.
Gn 3:13 Do not say, 'It was he who led me astray,' 12 for he has no use for a sinner.
The Lord hates all that is foul, 13 and no one who fears him will love it either.
He himself made human beings in the beginning, 14 and then left them free to make their own decisions. [c]
If you choose, you will keep the commandments 15 16 and so be faithful to his will.
Dt 11:26–28 He has set fire and water before you; 16 17 put out your hand to whichever you prefer.
Dt 30:15–20 Jr 21:8 A human being has life and death before him; 17 18 whichever he prefers will be given him.
For vast is the wisdom of the Lord; 18 19
Ps 33:13–18 he is almighty and all-seeing.
Ps 34:15 His eyes are on those who fear him, 19 20
he notes every human action.
He never commanded anyone to be godless, 20 21
he has given no one permission to sin.

The fate of the obstinate

1 16 Do not long for a brood of worthless children, Pr 17:21;19:13 and do not take pleasure in godless sons.
2 However many you have, take no pleasure in them, unless the fear of the Lord lives among them.
3 Do not count on their having long life, do not put too much faith in their number; 4 for better have one than a thousand, better die childless than have children who are godless. [a] Ws 4:1 5 4 One person of sense can populate a city, but a race of lawless people will be destroyed. Ws 3:19 6 5 My eyes have seen many such things, my ears have heard things even more impressive.
7 6 Fire is kindled in a sinful society, Nb 11:1; 16:1–30 Retribution blazes in a rebellious nation.
8 7 God did not pardon the giants of old Gn 6:1–7 who, confident in their strength, had rebelled.
9 8 He did not spare the people with whom Lot lived; Gn 19:1–29 he abhorred them, rather, for their pride.
10 9 He was pitiless to the nation of perdition [b]— those people who gloried in their sins—11 10 as also to the six hundred thousand men on the march, 46:8 Ex 12:37 who had banded together in their obstinacy. [c] 12 11 And had there been only one man stubborn, it would have been amazing had he escaped unpunished, since mercy and wrath alike belong to the Lord 5:6 Ex 34:6–7 who is mighty to forgive and to pour out wrath.
13 12 As great as his mercy, so is his severity;
he judges each person as his deeds deserve: 14 13 the sinner will not escape with his ill-gotten gains nor the patience of the devout go for nothing.
15 14 He takes note of every charitable action, [d] and everyone is treated as he deserves. [e]

Certainty of retribution

16 17 Do not say, 'I shall hide from the Lord; Ps 139:7–12 Jr 23:24 Am 9:2–3 who is going to remember me up there?
17 I shall not be noticed among so many people;
what am I in the immensity of creation?' [f]

g. To pitch his tent there. Several images are used here for the search for Wisdom: the hunter who pursues her, the spy who tries to overhear what she is saying, the nomad who camps in her shadow.

h. This 'glory' (Hebr. 'refuge') possibly refers to the cloud which manifested the presence of Yahweh, cf. Ex 16:10; 24:16f, the shekinah ('presence') of the rabbinical writings.

15 a. Jr 2:8 speaks of four official functions: priest, lawyer, prince, prophet. The man who 'grasps the Law' belongs to the second of these classes: he is the 'scribe' or 'doctor of the Law' who became increasingly important in Judaism, see Ezr 7:6c.

b. 'he does not do' Hebr. and one Gk MS; 'do not do' Gk.

c. This v. is often quoted in support of the doctrine of free will. The Hebr. '. . . he has handed him over to his enemy and left him to his own devices' seems more applicable, however, to the origin of evil. V. 15, on the other hand, really does affirm the freedom of the will.

16 a. After 'number', Hebr. adds 'for they will not have a happy future', and after 'one': 'doing the will of God'.

b. The former population of Canaan.

c. Recalling Ex 12:37 or Nb 11:21. These men died in the desert and did not reach Canaan, Nb 14:20–33.

d. Hebr. 'There is a wage for everyone who practises virtue.'

e. Gk 248, Hebr. and Syr. add [15] 'God made Pharaoh obstinate so that he did not acknowledge him, to make his works known under heaven. [16] His mercy shows itself to all creation, he divided his light and his darkness among men' (cf. 12:6 and Mt 5:45).

f. As Adam and Cain tried to hide from the sight of God, Gn 3:10; 4:9.

For see, the sky and the heavens above the sky, 18
the abyss and the earth shake at his visitation.
Jb 37:1–7 Ps 18:7 The mountains and earth's foundations alike 19 quail and tremble when he looks at them.
But to all this no one gives thought. 20
Who keeps his movements in mind?
The storm wind itself is invisible, 21
Rm 11:33 and most of what he does goes undetected. [g]
'Who will report whether justice has been done? 22
Who will be watching? The covenant is remote!' [h] Such are the thoughts of the person of little sense, 23 stupid, misguided, cherishing his folly.

Human beings in the creation

Listen to me, my child, and learn knowledge, 24
Pr 1:23 and give your whole mind to my words. [i] I shall expound discipline methodically 25 and proclaim knowledge with precision.

Gn 1 When God created [j] his works in the beginning, 26
he assigned them their places as soon as they were made.
42:21 He determined his works for all time, 27 from their origins to their distant generations.
They know neither hunger nor weariness, and they never desert their duties.
Not one has ever got in the way of another, 28 and they will never disobey his word. [k] 29
And afterwards the Lord looked at the earth, 29 30 and filled it with his good things.
Gn 1:24–25 He covered its surface with every kind of animal, 30 31
Gn 3:19 Ps 104:29 and to it they will return.

Gn 2:7 Qo 3:20;12:7 17 The Lord fashioned human beings from the earth, [a] 1 to consign them back to it.
Gn 6:3 He gave them so many days and so much time, 2
Gn 1:28+ Ws 9:2–3 he gave them authority over everything on earth.
He clothed them in strength, like himself, 3 Gn 1:27 and made them in his own image.
Gn 9:2 Ps 8:6–8 He filled all living things with dread of human beings, 4 making them masters over beasts and birds. [b]
He made them a tongue, eyes and ears, 6 5 and gave them a heart to think with. [c]
He filled them with knowledge and intelligence, 7 6
Gn 2:17 and showed them what was good and what evil.
He put his own light in their hearts 8 7 Ws 13:1 Rm 1:19–20 to show them the magnificence of his works, [d] so that they would praise his holy name 10 8 as they told of his magnificent works.
He set knowledge before them, 11 9
he endowed them with the law of life.
DT 5:2–3 Ps 147:19 He established an eternal covenant with them, 12 10 Dt 30:15–20 and revealed his judgements [e] to them.
Ex 34:10seq. Their eyes saw the majesty of his glory, 13 11
Dt 4:11–12 and their ears heard the glory of his voice.
He said to them, 'Beware of all wrong-doing'; 14
Ex 20:12–17 he gave each a commandment concerning his neighbour. 12

The divine judge

13 15 Their ways are always under his eye, they cannot be hidden from his sight. [f] 14 17 Over each nation he has set a governor, 15 but Israel is the Lord's own portion. [g] Dt 7:6b 16 19 Their actions are all as plain as the sun to him, and his eyes rest constantly on their conduct.
17 20 Their iniquities are not hidden from him, all their sins are before the Lord. [h] 18 22 Almsgiving is like a signet ring to him, he cherishes generosity in a person like the pupil of an eye. [i] 19 23 One day he will rise and reward them, he will repay their deserts on their own heads. [j] 20 24 But to those who repent he permits return, and he encourages those who have lost hope.

Exhortation to repentance

21 25 Return to the Lord and renounce your sins, 22 plead before his face, stop offending him.
23 26 Come back to the Most High, turn away from iniquity [k] Ps 34:14 and hold all that is foul in abhorrence.
26 27 Who is going to praise the Most High in Sheol Ps 6:5;115:17
if we do not glorify him while we are alive?
27 28 The dead can praise no more than those who do not exist, only those with life and health can praise the Lord.
28 29 How great is the mercy of the Lord, Ps 111:4 his pardon for those who turn to him!
29 30 For we cannot have everything, human beings are not immortal.
30 31 What is brighter than the sun? And yet it fades.
Flesh and blood think of nothing but evil. Gn 6:5;8:21 Jb 15:14–16 31 32 He surveys the armies of the lofty sky, [l] and all of us are only dust and ashes. 10:9 Gn 18:27

The greatness of God

1 2 18 He who lives for ever has created the sum of things.
The Lord alone will be found just. [a] Ps 51:4 Rm 3:4

g. Hebr. [20] 'Nor does he take notice of me; who is concerned about my ways? [21] Should I sin, no eye sees me, if I tell a hidden lie, who knows of it?' The discourse of the sinner continues on these lines to v. 22, vv. 18 and 19 being parenthetical.

h. The objection seems to be that retribution delays and is not certain. On the meaning of 'covenant' here, see 14:2d. • Hebr. for this line has 'What hope is there, for the decree is far away?'

i. The scribe is speaking here, not Wisdom personified.

j. '(God) created' en ktisei conj. following Hebr.; Gk en krisei 'in the judgement'.

k. Ben Sira is referring to the regular motions of the heavenly bodies.

17 a. The author follows the order of Gn 1: creation of stars, plants and animals, human beings.

b. Gk 248 adds [5] 'They received the use of the five powers from the Lord, a share of intelligence was given to them as a sixth, and as a seventh, reason—interpreter of his powers.' This appears to be a gloss of Stoic origin.

c. 'he made them' wayyitzer conj.; Gk diaboulion = weyetzer (Hebr.) 'council'. The Israelites believed the heart to be the seat of reason.

d. 'light', lit. 'eye'. • At the end, Gk 248 adds [9] 'and privileged them to proclaim his marvels for ever'.

e. The Mosaic Law: the following verses refer to the revelation on Sinai.

f. Gk 248 adds [16] 'From childhood their ways lead to evil and they cannot change that heart of stone for a heart of flesh [17] for in dividing the nations of the whole earth . . .' Possibly a gloss derived from Ezk 11:19; 36:26, and asserting human inability to do good. The text itself seems less pessimistic.

g. Gk 248 adds [18] 'His first-born whom he rears with discipline, bestowing on him the light of his love, not deserting him'. • In the days of Ben Sira, Israel had no king. Furthermore, opposition to monarchical government, already marked in ancient times (1 S 8), had all the more grounds for existence at the time of the Maccabaean revival.

h. Gk 248 adds [21] 'But the Lord is good and knows his creatures, he does not destroy or desert them, but rather spares them.'

i. Gk 248 adds 'granting repentance to his sons and daughters'.

j. When and what the retribution will be is not clear.

k. Gk 248 adds 'for he will bring you out of darkness to lead you to the light of salvation.'

l. Probably the stars, cf. 16:26–29; Is 24:21.

18 a. Gk 248 adds 'and there are no others but him.' [3] 'He guides the world with a turn of the hand, all things obey his will; for he is king of all and by his power separates sacred things from profane.'

He has given no one the power to proclaim his works to the end, 4 and who can fathom his magnificent deeds?
Who can assess his magnificent strength, 5 and who can go further and tell all of his mercies?
42:21 Nothing can be added to them, nothing subtracted, 6 it is impossible to fathom the marvels of the Lord.
Ps 139:17seq. When someone finishes he is only beginning, 7 6c and when he stops he is as puzzled as ever. [b]

The nothingness of human beings

Ps 8:4 What is a human being, what purpose does he serve? 8 7
What is good and what is bad for him?
17:2 The length of his life: a hundred years at most. 9 8 Ps 90:10 Like a drop of water from the sea, or a grain of sand, 10 such are these few years compared with eternity.
This is why the Lord is patient with them 11 9 and pours out his mercy on them.
He sees and recognises how wretched their end is, 12 10 and so he makes his forgiveness the greater. 11 Human compassion extends to neighbours, 13 12 but the Lord's compassion extends to everyone; rebuking, correcting and teaching, 13 bringing them back as a shepherd brings his flock. [c] He has compassion on those who accept correction, 14 and who fervently search for his judgements.

The art of giving [d]

My child, do not temper your favours with blame 15 nor any of your gifts with words that hurt.
Does not dew relieve the heat? 16
In the same way a word is worth more than a gift.
Why surely, a word is better than a good present, 17
but a generous person is ready with both.
A fool will offer nothing but insult, 18 and a grudging gift makes the eyes smart.

Reflection and foresight

Learn before you speak, 19 take care of yourself before you fall ill.
Examine yourself before judgement comes, 20 and on the day of visitation you will be acquitted.
Humble yourself before you fall ill, [e] 21 repent as soon as the sin is committed.
Dt 23:22–24 Let nothing prevent your discharging a vow in good time, 22
Qo 5:3 and do not wait till death to set matters right.
Pr 20:25 Prepare yourself before making a vow, 23
Qo 5:1–6 and do not be like someone who tempts the Lord.
Bear in mind the retribution of the last days, 24
the time of vengeance when God averts his face. [f] In a time of plenty remember times of famine, 25 think of poverty and want when you are rich.
The time slips by between dawn and dusk, 26 everything passes quickly for the Lord.
The wise will be cautious in everything, 27
in sinful times [g] will take care not to offend.

28 Every person of sense recognises wisdom and will respect anyone who has found her.
29 Those who understand sayings have toiled for their wisdom and have poured out accurate maxims. [h]

Self-control

30 Do not be governed by your passions, restrain your desires.
31 If you allow yourself to satisfy your desires,
this will make you the laughing-stock of your enemies.
32 Do not indulge in luxurious living, do not get involved in such society. [i] 33 Do not beggar yourself by banqueting on credit Pr 23:20–21 when there is nothing in your pocket.
1 19 A drunken workman will never grow rich, and one who makes light of small matters will gradually sink.
2 Wine and women corrupt intelligent men, Pr 31:3–5
Ho 4:11
the customer of whores loses all sense of shame.
3 Grubs and worms will have him as their legacy, Pr 5:5;7: 26seq.; 9:18
and the man who knows no shame will lose his life. [a]

Against loose talk

4 Being too ready to trust shows shallowness of mind, and sinning harms the sinner.
5 Taking pleasure in evil [b] earns condemnation;
6 by hating gossip one avoids evil.
7 Never repeat what you are told and you will come to no harm;
8 whether to friend or foe, do not talk about it, Pr 25:9–10 unless it would be sinful not to, do not reveal it; 9 you would be heard out, then mistrusted, and in due course you would be hated.
10 Have you heard something? Let it die with you.
Courage! It will not burst you!
11 A fool will suffer birthpangs over a piece of news, like a woman labouring with child.
12 Like an arrow stuck in the flesh of the thigh, so is a piece of news inside a fool.

Do not trust everything you hear 13 Question your friend, he may have done nothing at all;

and if he has done anything, he will not do it again.

b. When a human being has exhausted his efforts to know God and his wonders, he has not even started to understand. These observations recall those of Qo, but the conclusion drawn is entirely different; for Ben Sira, the weakness of a human being serves only to emphasise the greatness of God.

c. Cf. 2 M 6:13–16; Ws 12:19–22. Later Judaism was concerned to justify instances of divine punishment. God's all-embracing mercy in its instructive aspect, emphasised here (13[c.d]), appears for the first time in the OT at this point.

d. At this point the discourse on good behaviour is resumed. The disquisition on the magnanimity of God introduces a first collection of maxims dealing with human generosity.

e. Sickness is often represented as punishment for sin, amendment and repentance as a means of preventing sickness.

f. The day of death, cf. 1:13, rather than the day of judgement. Ben Sira is not much preoccupied with eschatology.

g. i.e. days when sin appeals even to the wise.

h. Allusion to wisdom collections, such as Pr. • At the end of the v., Gk 248 adds 'of life. Better, confidence in the one Lord than attach dead hearts to dead men.'

i. Hebr. 'Do not rejoice in a valueless well-being (?), for fear of becoming twice as poor.'

19 a. i.e. premature death will be his punishment.

b. 'in evil' Gk MSS including Sinaiticus; 'in his heart' Text. rec. Gk 248 adds 'and he who resists pleasures crowns his own life;[6] he who holds his tongue will live in peace.'

Question your neighbour, he may have said nothing at all; 14 and if he has said anything, he will not say it again.
Question your friend, for slander is very common, 15 16
Qo 7:21 do not believe all you hear.
People sometimes make a slip, without meaning what they say; 16 17 and which of us has never sinned by speech?
Question your neighbour before you threaten him, 17 18
Lv 19:17 and defer to the Law of the Most High. [c]

True and false wisdom

Wisdom consists entirely in fearing the Lord, 20 and wisdom is entirely constituted by the fulfilling of the Law. [d] Being learned in evil, however, is not wisdom, 22 19 there is no prudence in the advice of sinners.
There is a cleverness that is detestable; 23 20 whoever has no wisdom is a fool.
Better be short of sense and full of fear, 24 21 than abound in shrewdness and violate the Law. [e]
There is a wickedness which is scrupulous but nonetheless dishonest, 25 22 and there are those who misuse kindness to win their case. 23
There is the person who will walk [f] bowed down with grief, 26 when inwardly this is nothing but deceit:
he hides his face and pretends to be deaf, 27 24
if he is not unmasked, he will take advantage of you.
There is the person who is prevented from sinning by lack of strength, 28 25 yet he will do wrong when he gets the chance.
You can tell a person by his appearance, 29 26 you can tell a thinker by the look on his face.
The way a person dresses, the way he laughs, 30 27 the way he walks, tell you what he is.

Silence and speech

20 There is the rebuke that is untimely, 1 28 and there is the person who keeps quiet, and he is the shrewd one.
But how much better to rebuke than to fume! 2 20:1
The person who acknowledges a fault wards off punishment. 3

30:20 Like a eunuch trying to take a girl's virginity 4 2 is someone who tries to impose justice by force.

Pr 17:28 There is the person who keeps quiet and is considered wise, 5 3 another incurs hatred for talking too much.

There is the person who keeps quiet, not knowing how to answer, 6 another keeps quiet, knowing when to speak.

The wise will keep quiet till the right moment, 7 but a garrulous fool will always misjudge it.

Someone who talks too much will earn dislike, 8 and someone who usurps authority will earn hatred.

Paradoxes

There is the person who finds misfortune a boon, 9 and the piece of luck that turns to loss.

There is the gift that affords you no profit, 10 and the gift that repays you double.

There is the honour that leads to humiliation, and there are people in a low state who raise their heads. [a] Lk 1:52

There is the person who buys much for little, yet pays for it seven times over.

The wise wins love with words, while fools may shower favours in vain.
The gift of the stupid will bring you no advantage, his eyes look for seven times as much in return. [b]
He gives little and reviles much,
he opens his mouth like the town crier,
he lends today and demands payment tomorrow;
he is a detestable fellow.
The fool will say, 'I have no friends,
I get no gratitude for my good deeds;
those who eat my bread have malicious tongues.'
How often he will be laughed at, and by how many! [c]

Inappropriate talk

Better a slip on the pavement than a slip of the tongue;
this is how ruin takes the wicked by surprise.

A coarse-grained person is like an indiscreet story endlessly retold by the ignorant. [d]

A maxim is rejected when coming from a fool, since the fool does not utter it on the apt occasion. Pr 26:7,9

There is a person who is prevented from sinning by poverty;
no qualms of conscience disturb that person's rest.

There is a person who courts destruction out of false shame, 4:21 courts destruction for the sake of a fool's opinion.

There is a person who out of false shame makes promises to a friend, and so makes an enemy for nothing.

Lying

Lying is an ugly blot on anyone, Pr 13:5
and ever on the lips of the undisciplined.

A thief is preferable to an inveterate liar, but both are heading for ruin.

Lying is an abominable habit, Pr 12:22
the liar's disgrace lasts for ever.

c. Gk 248 adds 'who is without anger. [18] The fear of the Lord is the beginning of his clemency and wisdom wins his affection.[19] The knowledge of the Lord's commandments is life-giving discipline, those who do what pleases him gather from the tree of immortality.'

d. Cf. 1:16,18; etc.; Jb 28:28; Ps 111:10; Pr 1:7; 9:10; 15:33. At the end, Gk 248 adds 'and the knowledge of his omnipotence. [21] The servant who says to his master: I will not do what you want, even if he does it later, angers the man who feeds him' cf. Mt 21:28–32.

e. Not all intelligence is wisdom: there is vitiated intellect and sinister shrewdness.

f. 'will walk' some MSS; 'does evil' Text. rec.

20 a. Meaning uncertain, but this interpretation seems to fit the context and expounds the reciprocity of opposites: honour produces humiliation, abasement produces exaltation, cf. the Magnificat: 'He has pulled down princes from their thrones and raised up the lowly.'

b. Following Syr. and Lat.; 'for he has many eyes instead of one' Gk.

c. Gk 248 and Lat. add 'He accepts neither wealth in a right spirit, nor the absence of wealth with indifference.'

d. Text and translation both uncertain. Perhaps Syr. is preferable: 'Like a fat sheep's tail eaten without salt, so is an unseasonable word.'

Wisdom

The wise gains advancement by words, 27 29
the shrewd wins favour from the great. [e]

Whoever tills the soil will have a full harvest, 28 30
Pr 14:35 whoever wins favour from the great will secure pardon for offences.

Ex 23:8 Presents and gifts blind the eyes of the wise 29 31
Pr 17:8;18:16; 21:14 and stifle rebukes like a muzzle on the mouth.

=41:14–15 Wisdom concealed, and treasure undiscovered, 30 32
Mt 5:14–16 what use is either of these?
Better one who conceals his folly 31 33 than one who conceals his wisdom. [f]

Various sins

21 My child, have you sinned? Do so no more, 1 and ask forgiveness for your previous faults.
Flee from sin as from a snake, 2
if you approach it, it will bite you;
its teeth are lion's teeth, 13
they take human life away.
Pr 5:4 All law-breaking is like a two-edged sword, 3 4 the wounds it inflicts are beyond cure.

Terror and violence make havoc of riches, 4 5 similarly, desolation overtakes the houses of the proud.
A plea from the mouth of the poor goes straight to the ear of God, 5 6 whose judgement comes without delay.

Pr 12:1 Whoever resents reproof walks in the sinner's footsteps; 6 7 whoever fears the Lord is repentant of heart.

The glib speaker is known far and wide, 7 8 but the wary detects every slip.

To build your house with other people's money 8 9 is like collecting stones for your own tomb. [a]

16:6 A meeting of the lawless is like a heap of tow; 9 10 they will end in a blazing fire.

Mt 7:13 The sinner's road is smoothly paved, 10 11 but it ends at the pit of Sheol. [b]

The wise and the foolish

Gn 4:7 Whoever keeps the Law will master his instincts; [c] 11 12 the fear of the Lord is made perfect in wisdom. 13

No one who lacks aptitude can be taught, 12 14 but certain aptitudes give rise to bitterness. 15

The sage's knowledge is as rich as the abyss 13 16 and his advice is like a living spring.
Pr 13:14;18:4 The heart of a fool is like a broken jar, 14 17
it will not hold any knowledge.
If the educated hears a wise saying, 15 18
he praises it and caps it with another;
if a debauchee hears it, he does not like it and tosses it behind his back.

19 16 The talk of a fool is like a load on a journey, but it is a pleasure to listen to the intelligent.
20 17 The utterance of the shrewd will be eagerly awaited in the assembly, what he says will be given serious consideration.

21 18 The wisdom of a fool is like the wreckage of a house, the knowledge of a dolt is incoherent talk.

22 19 To the senseless fellow instruction is like fetters on the feet, like manacles on the right hand.

23 20 A fool laughs at the top of his voice, but the intelligent quietly smiles.

24 21 To the shrewd instruction is like a golden ornament, like a bracelet on the right arm. [d]

25 22 The step of a fool goes straight into a house, but a person of much experience has a respectful approach; [e] 26 23 the stupid peeps inside through the door, a well-bred person waits outside.
27 24 Listening at doors is a sign of bad upbringing, the perceptive would be ashamed to do so.

28 25 The lips of gossips repeat the words of others, [f]
the words of the wise are carefully weighed.

29 26 The heart of fools is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wise is in their heart.

30 27 When the godless curses Satan, [g] he is cursing himself.
31 28 The scandal-monger sullies himself and earns the hatred of the neighbourhood.

The idler

1 22 An idler is like a stone covered in filth, everyone whistles at his disgrace.
2 An idler is like a lump of dung, anyone picking it up shakes it off his hand.

Degenerate children

3 It is a disgrace to have fathered a badly brought-up son, but the birth of any daughter is a loss; 4 a sensible daughter will find a husband, but a shameless one is a grief to her father.
5 A brazen daughter puts father and mother to shame, and will be disowned by both.

e. The scribe's wisdom is primarily a knowledge of how to get on in life, especially through winning the favour of the influential.

f. Wisdom was created to shine and to enlighten people; to conceal her is to fall short of one's calling. Gk 248 adds 'Better inflexible perseverance in the search for the Lord than the anarchic agitation of one's own life.'

21 a. 'for one's own tomb' Gk 248, Syr.; 'for the winter' (instead of wood to keep warm with?) Gk.

b. These two vv. express a clear belief in retribution, with a strong suggestion of hell-fire to follow (cf. also Is 50:11; 66:24). Lat. adopts a similar interpretation: 'but the end will be hell, darkness and torments.'

c. 'his instincts' Syr.; 'his understanding (of the Law)' Gk.

d. This v. is the parallel to v. 19; v. 20, coming in between, is misplaced.

e. 'has a respectful approach' corr. following Hebr.; 'is abashed before a face' Gk.

f. Thus, Gk 248; 'the lips of strangers are grieved at them' Text. rec.

g. The author identifies Satan (the tempter, see Jb 1–2 and particularly 1:6g) with an individual's own bad instincts. In cursing some being external to himself, the individual is in fact cursing his own wicked nature and impulses.

An untimely remonstrance is like music at a funeral, 6 but a thrashing and correction are wisdom at all times. [a]

Wisdom and folly

Teaching a fool is like gluing bits of pottery together— 9 7 you are rousing someone who is besotted with sleep. 8
You might as well talk to someone sound asleep, 10 9 when you have finished the fool will say, 'What's up?'

Shed tears for the dead, who has left the light behind; 11 10 shed tears for the fool, [b] who has left his wits behind.
Shed quieter tears for the dead who is at rest, 11 for the fool life is worse than death. 12 Mourning for the dead lasts seven days, 12 13 for the foolish and ungodly all the days of their lives.

Do not waste many words on the stupid, 13 14 do not go near a dolt.

Beware of him, or you will have trouble 15 and be soiled by contact with him; keep away from him, and you will have peace of mind 16 and not be exasperated by his folly.

What is heavier than lead, 14 17 and what is its name if not 'fool'?
Pr 27:3 Sand and salt and a lump of iron 15 18 are a lighter burden than a dolt.

A tie-beam bonded into a building 16 19 will not be dislodged by an earthquake; so too, a heart resolved after due reflection 20 will not flinch at the critical moment.

A heart founded on intelligent reflection 17 is like a stucco [c] decoration on a smooth wall.

Pebbles [d] placed on top of a wall 18 21 will not stand up to the wind; no more can the heart of a fool frightened at his own thoughts 22 stand up to fear.

Friendship

Prick an eye and you will draw a tear, 19 24 prick a heart and you reveal its feelings.

Throw stones at birds and you scare them away, 20 25 reproach a friend and you destroy a friendship.

19:13–17 If you have drawn your sword on a friend, 21 26 do not despair; there is a way back.
If you have opened your mouth against your friend, 22 27
do not worry; there is hope for reconciliation; Pr 11:13; 20:19;25:9 but insult, arrogance, betrayal of secrets, and the stab in the back—in these cases any friend is lost.

Win your neighbour's confidence when he is poor, 23 28 so that you may enjoy his later good fortune with him; stand by him in times of trouble, 29
in order to have your share when he comes into a legacy.

30 24 Fire is heralded by the reek of the furnace and smoke, so too, bloodshed by insults.

31 25 I shall not be ashamed to shelter a friend nor shall I hide away from him, 32 26 and if evil comes to me through him, everyone who hears about it will beware of him.

Vigilance [c]

3 27 Who will set a guard on my mouth, Ps 141:3
and an efficient seal on my lips, to keep me from falling,
and my tongue from causing my ruin?

1 23 Lord, father and master of my life, do not abandon me to their whims,
do not let me fall because of them.
2 Who will lay whips to my thoughts, and the discipline of wisdom to my heart, to be merciless to my errors Ps 141:5
and not let my sins go unchecked, 3 for fear my errors should multiply and my sins then abound and I fall before my adversaries, and my enemy gloat over me?
4 Lord, father and God of my life, do not let my eyes be proud, Ps 131:1 5 turn envy away from me,
6 do not let lechery and lust grip me, Rm 13:13 do not leave me a prey to shameless desire.

Swearing

7 Children, listen to what I teach, no one who keeps it will be caught out.
8 The sinner is ensnared by [a] his own lips, both the abusive and the proud are tripped by them.
9 Do not get into the habit of swearing,
(10) do not make a habit of naming the Holy One; Mt 5:34seq.; 23:20seq.
11 10 for just as a slave who is constantly overseen Jm 5:12 will never be without bruises, [b] so someone who is always swearing and uttering the Name will not be exempt from sin.
12 11 A man forever swearing is full of iniquity, and the scourge will not depart from his house.
13 If he offends, [c] his sin will be on him, if he did it unheedingly, he has doubly sinned; 14 if he swears a false oath, he will not be treated as innocent, for his house will be filled with calamities.

22 a. The sages advocate corporal punishment in education, Pr 13:24; 19:18; 22:15; 23:13–14; 29:15,17; it is always effective, whereas the time for verbal rebuke must be carefully chosen. Gk 248 adds [7] 'Children who live a good life, without shortcomings, make one forget their parents' humble origin. [8] Supercilious, badly brought-up and arrogant children bring shame on their family's noble blood.'

b. The 'fool' is someone not simply without wits but obstinate, sceptical, licentious.

c. lit. 'decoration of sand'. Meaning uncertain.

d. 'Pebbles' Gk MSS; 'Stakes' Text. rec. Perhaps an allusion to the Palestinian practice of putting loose stones on the tops of walls surrounding vineyards. Jackals, scrambling over, dislodge the stones and the consequent noise alerts the watchman.

e. Note the deeply religious quality of the passage: each good resolution concludes with a prayer.

23 a. 'ensnared by' Gk MSS; 'abandoned to' Text. rec.

b. Translation uncertain. It could also mean 'a servant for ever questioned under torture will inevitably show the effects of this.'

c. By not fulfilling his oath. The author envisages three cases in order of increasing gravity: a sincere oath unfulfilled, an oath lightly sworn, an insincere oath.

Foul language [d]

One way of talking is like death. 12 15 let it not be found in the heritage of Jacob since devout people have nothing to do with that: 16 they will not wallow in sin.
Do not get into the habit of using coarse and foul language 13 17 since this involves sinful words.
Remember your father and mother 14 18 when you are sitting with the great, for fear you forget yourself in their presence [e] 19
and behave like a fool, and then wish you had not been born and curse the day of your birth.
No one in the habit of using shameful language 15 20 will break himself of it as long as he lives.

Lechery

There are two types of people who commit sin after sin [f] 16 21 and a third who attracts retribution—desire, blazing like a furnace, 17 22 will not die down until it has been sated—the man who lusts after members of his own family 23 is not going to stop until he is quite burnt out; every food is sweet to the promiscuous, 24 and he will not desist until he dies;
and the man who sins against the marriage bed 18 25
Jb 24:15 and says to himself, 'Who can see me?
There is darkness all round me, the walls hide me, 26
no one can see me, why should I worry?
The Most High will not remember my sins.'
What he fears are human eyes. 19 27
Pr 15:3,11; 17:3;24:12 he does not realise that the eyes of the Lord 28 are ten thousand times brighter than the sun, observing every aspect of human behaviour, seeing into the most secret corners.
Pr 8:22seq. All things were known to him before they were created, [g] 20 29 and are still, now that they are finished. [h]
This man will be punished in view of the whole town, 21 30 and will be seized when he least expects it.

Pr 2:16;5:2–20; 6:24–35;7:5 The adulteress

Similarly the woman unfaithful to her husband, 22 32 who provides him with an heir by another man:
first, she has disobeyed the Law of the Most High; 23 33 secondly, she has been false to her husband; and thirdly, she has gone whoring in adultery and conceived children by another man. 24 34
She will be led before the assembly, an enquiry will be held about her children.
Her children will strike no root, 25 35 her branches will bear no fruit.
She will leave an accursed memory behind her, 26 36 her shame will never be wiped out.
And those who survive her will recognise 27 37 that nothing is better than fearing the Lord, and nothing sweeter than adherence to the Lord's commandments. [i]

Discourse of Wisdom [a]

Jb 28
Pr 1:20–33; 8:1–36; 9:1–6
Ba 3:9–4:4

1 24 Wisdom speaks her own praises, in the midst of her people she glories in herself.
2 She opens her mouth in the assembly of the Most High, she glories in herself in the presence of the Mighty One:
5 3 'I came forth from the mouth of the Most High,
6 and I covered the earth like mist. Gn 1:2 7 4 I had my tent in the heights, and my throne was a pillar of cloud. [b] Ex 13:21–22 8 5 Alone, I have made the circuit of the heavens Jb 22:14 and walked through the depths of the abyss. Pr 8:27 9 6 Over the waves of the sea and over the whole earth, 10 and over every people and nation I have held sway. [c] 11 7 Among all these I searched for rest, and looked to see in whose territory I might pitch camp. Ps 132:8,13–14 12 8 Then the Creator of all things instructed me and he who created me fixed a place for my tent.
13 He said, "Pitch your tent in Jacob, make Israel your inheritance." 14 9 From eternity, in the beginning, he created me, Pr 8:23 and for eternity I shall remain.
10 In the holy tent I ministered before him [d]
15 and thus became established in Zion.
11 In the beloved city he has given me rest, and in Jerusalem I wield my authority.
16 12 I have taken root in a privileged people, in the Lord's property, in his inheritance.
17 13 I have grown tall as a cedar on Lebanon, as a cypress on Mount Hermon; 18 14 I have grown tall as a palm in En-Gedi, [e] as the rose bushes of Jericho; 19 as a fine olive in the plain,
as a plane tree, I have grown tall.
20 15 Like cinnamon and acanthus, I have yielded a perfume, like choice myrrh, have breathed out a scent, 21 like galbanum, onycha, labdanum, like the smoke of incense in the tent. [f] Ex 30:7seq., 34seq.

d. The context shows that the reference is to impurity in speech, but the text itself is vague and the precise sin uncertain.

e. 'when' conj.; 'because' Gk. • 'you forget yourself' Syr.; 'you forget (him)' Gk; 'God forgets you' Lat.

f. Numerical proverb, see Pr 30:15e, distinguishing three types of lechery: incest (?), v. 17[c,d], promiscuity, v. 17[e,f], and adultery, vv. 18–19. The structure is somewhat overburdened by v. 17[a,b], which in content form a sort of sub-title.

g. This knowledge of God, antecedent to creation, is divine wisdom itself, Pr 8:22f.

h. God, having created the world, continues to take care of it.

i. Gk 248 and Lat. add [28] 'To follow God is a great honour and to be acceptable to him is to lengthen one's days.'

24 a. This passage should be compared with the other discourses of personified Wisdom (Pr 1:20–33; 8:1–36; 9:1–6) and eulogies of Wisdom (Jb 28; Ba 3:9–4:4). This is the pivotal chapter of the book, summing up the whole doctrine of Wisdom, frequently echoing earlier biblical literature, in which the author offers his own interpretation of the past. Even more than in Proverbs, there are turns of phrase foreshadowing a trinitarian theology: Wisdom is closely united to God and yet distinct from him, characteristics which will later be applied to the person of the Word or to the Spirit. The passage seems to have been one of the principal sources of inspiration for the prologue to the Fourth Gospel, in which several of Wisdom's activities and attributes are ascribed to the Logos.

b. The pillar of cloud in the desert, which, in the oldest texts, was regarded as a manifestation of Yahweh's presence.

c. 'I have held sway' one Gk MS, Syr., Lat.; 'I have acquired' Gk.

d. For Ben Sira the Temple worship in Jerusalem is one more achievement of Wisdom, either because it expresses the divine perfection in the same way as the order of the universe does, or else because this worship is laid down in detail in the Law which itself, 24:23seq., is Wisdom.

e. 'En-Gedi' two Gk MSS; 'on the shores' Text. rec.

f. Wisdom plays her part in the temple services, 24:10d. Having listed various natural perfumes, Ben Sira now makes a comparison between Wisdom and the incense used in the liturgy. • Galbanum and labdanum are aromatic, resinous gums like myrrh; onycha is the secretion of a type of shell-fish, also used in making incense.

I have spread my branches like a terebinth, 16 22 and my branches are glorious and graceful.
Jn 15:1a I am like a vine putting out graceful shoots, 17 23
Pr 8:19 my blossoms bear the fruit of glory and wealth. [g] Approach me, you who desire me, 19 26 and take your fill of my fruits.
Ps 19:10 for memories of me are sweeter than honey, 20 27 inheriting me is sweeter than the honeycomb. 28 Jn 6:35j They who eat me will hunger for more, 21 29
Jn 4:13–14 they who drink me will thirst for more.
No one who obeys me will ever have to blush, 22 30 no one who acts as I dictate will ever sin.'

Wisdom and the Law [h]

Ex 19:1a All this is no other than the Book of the Covenant of the 23 32 Dt 33:4 Most High God,
the Law that Moses enjoined on us, 33 an inheritance for the communities of Jacob. [i] Gn 2:11 This is what makes wisdom brim over like the Pishon, [j] 25 35 like the Tigris in the season of fruit, what makes intelligence overflow like the Euphrates, 26 36 Jos 3:15 like the Jordan at harvest time;
and makes discipline flow like the Nile, [k] 27 37
Gn 2:13 like the Gihon when the grapes are harvested.
Jr 2:8 The first man did not finish discovering about her, 28 38 nor has the most recent tracked her down; for her thoughts are wider than the sea, 29 39 and her designs more profound than the abyss.
Is 58:11 And I, [l] like a conduit from a river, 30 40
Jn 4:14 like a watercourse running into a garden, 41
I said, 'I am going to water my orchard, 31 42
I intend to irrigate my flower beds.'
Is 11:9 And see, my conduit has grown into a river, 43
Ezk 47:1–12 and my river has grown into a sea. [m] Jn 7:38 Making discipline shine forth from daybreak, 32 34
I shall send its light far and wide.
I shall pour out teaching like prophecy, 33 46
as a legacy to all future generations.
33:18 And note, I have been working not merely for myself, 34 47 but for all who are seeking wisdom.

Proverbs

25 There are three things my soul delights in, 1 and which are delightful to God and to all people: [a] concord between brothers, friendship between neighbours, 2 and a wife and husband who live happily together.

There are three sorts of people my soul hates, 2 3 and whose existence I consider an outrage:
the poor swollen with pride, the rich who is a liar and an adulterous old man who has no sense. 4

The aged

If you have gathered nothing in your youth, 3 5 how can you find anything in your old age?

How fine a thing: sound judgement with grey hairs, and for greybeards to know how to advise!
How fine a thing: wisdom in the aged, Ws 4:8–9 and considered advice coming from people of distinction!
The crown of the aged is ripe experience, their glory, the fear of the Lord.

Numerical proverbs

There are nine things I can think of which strike me as happy, and a tenth which is now on my tongue:
the man who can be proud of his children,
he who lives to see the downfall of his enemies;
happy is he who keeps house with a sensible wife;
he who does not toil with ox and donkey; [b] he who has never sinned with his tongue; 14:1
he who does not serve a man less worthy than himself;
happy is he who has acquired good sense and can find attentive ears for what he has to say;
how great is he who has acquired wisdom;
but unsurpassed is one who fears the Lord.
The fear of the Lord surpasses everything;
what can compare with someone who has mastered that? [c]

Women

Any wound rather than a wound of the heart!
Any spite rather than the spite of woman!
Any evil rather than an evil caused by an enemy!
Any vengeance rather than the vengeance of a foe!
There is no poison [d] worse than the poison of a snake, there is no fury worse than the fury of an enemy.
I would sooner keep house with a lion or a dragon Pr 21:9,19; 25:24;27:15 than keep house with a spiteful wife.

A woman's spite changes her appearance and makes her face as grim as a bear's. [e]
When her husband goes out to dinner with his neighbours, he cannot help [f] heaving bitter sighs.

g. Gk 248 and Lat. add [18] 'I am the mother of pure love, of fear, of knowledge and of worthy hope,' and Gk 248 'I am bestowed on all my children, from all eternity on those appointed by him.' In place of the last phrase the Latin reads 'In me is all grace of way and of truth, in me all hope of life and of strength,' a Christian gloss alluding to Jn 14:6 and based on the identification of Wisdom with Christ.

h. Wisdom's discourse finishes at this point. The author now develops his thesis on the identity of Wisdom with the Law.

i. Gk 248 adds [24] 'Do not cease to be strong in the Lord, cling to him that he may strengthen you. The Lord Almighty alone is God and there is no Saviour other than he.'

j. Throughout, the author is thinking of the earthly Paradise and its four rivers, Gn 2:10seq., symbolic of fertility.

k. 'flow like the Nile' following Syr.; Gk (Hebr. 'or) 'shine like a light'.

l. The author himself is speaking now, elaborating the imagery of the preceding vv. While Wisdom is a vast river, watering all Israel, he for his part is a canal, flowing from that river, and watering his own modest garden.

m. By the Lord's favour, the waters grow more and more abundant. The author is now transformed into a prophet, addressing his words to all generations to come, v. 33. He is probably drawing his inspiration from similar material in Is 11:9; Ezk 47:1–12. • Lat. applies the whole passage to personified Wisdom, consistently identifying that with Christ, and adds 'I shall penetrate the deepest recesses of the earth, I shall visit all those who are asleep, I shall illuminate all those who hope in the Lord.'

25 a. Following Syr. and Lat.; Gk 'In three things I was pre-eminent, and pre-eminent I remained before God'—making this a discourse delivered by Wisdom.

b. Either in the literal sense, cf. Lv 19:19; Dt 22:10, or, more probably, in the metaphorical one (cf. 2 Co 6:14) of an ill-assorted couple. The line, omitted by Gk, has been restored following Syr., with some support from Hebr. (incomplete).

c. Gk 248 and Lat. add [12] 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of loving him but it is by faith that a man begins to cling to him.'

d. 'poison' Syr.; 'head' Gk and Lat. (the Hebr. word ro'sh means both 'head' and 'poison').

e. Hebr. 'changes her husband's expression and makes him look like a bear'.

f. lit. 'in spite of himself' one Gk MS, Hebr., Syr.; 'he sighs bitterly as he listens to them' Text. rec.

No spite can approach the spite of a woman, 19 26 may a sinner's lot be hers!

Like the climbing of a sandhill for elderly feet, 20 27 such is a garrulous wife for a quiet husband.
Do not be taken in by a woman's beauty, 21 28 never lose your head over a woman.

Bad temper, insolence and shame hold sway 22 29 where the wife supports the husband.
Low spirits, gloomy face, stricken heart: 23 31
such is a spiteful wife.
Slack hands and sagging knees: 32 such is the wife who does not make her husband happy.

Gn 3:1–6
Rm 5:12
1 Co 15:22
1 Tm 2:14
Sin began with a woman, 24 33 and thanks to her we must all die. [g]

Do not let water find a leak, 25 34 nor a spiteful woman give free rein to her tongue.
If she will not do as you tell her, 26 35 get rid of her. [h] 36

Pr 31:10seq.
26
How blessed is the husband of a really good wife; 1
the number of his days will be doubled.
Pr 12:4
A perfect wife is the joy of her husband, 2
he will live out the years of his life in peace.
A good wife is the best of portions, 3 reserved for those who fear the Lord; rich or poor, their hearts will be glad, 4 their faces cheerful, whatever the season.

There are three things that I dread, 5 and a fourth which terrifies me: [a] slander by a whole town, the gathering of a mob, 6 and a false accusation—these are all worse than death; 7 but a woman jealous of a woman means heartbreak and sorrow, 6 8, 9 and all this is the scourge of the tongue. [b]

A bad wife is a badly fitting ox-yoke, [c] 7 10 trying to master her is like grasping a scorpion.
A drunken wife will goad anyone to fury, 8 11 she cannot conceal her own degradation.

A woman's wantonness shows in her wide-eyed look, 9 12
Pr 6:25
her eyelashes leave no doubt.
42:11
Keep a headstrong daughter under firm control, 10 13 or, feeling free, she will take advantage of it.
Keep a strict watch on her shameless eye, 11 14 do not be surprised if she disgraces you.
Like a thirsty traveller she will open her mouth 12 15 and drink any water she comes across;
she will sit down in front of every tent-peg and open her quiver to any arrow.

The grace of a wife will charm her husband, 13 16 her understanding will make him the stronger. [d] 17
A silent wife is a gift from the Lord, 14 18 no price can be put on a well-trained character.

19 15 A modest wife is a boon twice over, 20 a chaste character cannot be over-valued.
21 16 Like the sun rising over the mountains of the Lord, such is the beauty of a good wife in a well-run house.
22 17 Like a lamp shining on the sacred lamp-stand, such is a beautiful face on a well-proportioned body. [e] 23 18 Like golden pillars on a silver base, such are shapely legs on firm-set heels. [f]

Depressing things

24 28 There are two things which grieve my heart and a third arouses my anger: 25 a warrior wasting away through poverty, the intelligent treated with contempt, 27 someone turning back from virtue to sin—
the Lord marks out such a person for a violent death.

Commerce

28 29 It is difficult for a merchant to avoid doing wrong and for a trader not to incur sin.
1 27 Many have sinned for the sake of profit, [a] one who hopes to be rich must turn a blind eye. [b] 2 A peg will stick in the joint between two stones, and sin will wedge itself [c] between selling and buying.
4 3 Whoever does not firmly hold to the fear of the Lord, his house will soon be overthrown.

Speech

5 4 In a shaken sieve the rubbish is left behind, so too the defects of a person appear in speech.
6 5 The kiln tests the work of the potter, the test of a person is in conversation.
7 6 The orchard where the tree grows is judged by its fruit, Mt 7:16 similarly words betray what a person feels. [d] 7 Do not praise anyone who has not yet spoken, 8 since this is where people are tested.

g. Alluding to the first sin. Paul also recalls the guilt of Eve, 2 Co 11:3; 1 Tm 2:14, but see Rm 5:12.

h. lit. 'if she will not walk according to your hand, separate her from your flesh', cf. Gn 2:24; Ep 5:31. The Mosaic Law, Dt 24:1–4, allowed divorce, see Mt 19:3–9par.

26 a. 'and a fourth which terrifies me' Gk MSS, Lat., see also Syr.: 'and faced with a fourth I fall to praying' or 'and at a fourth I have been betrayed' Text. rec.

b. 'and all this . . . tongue' Syr.; 'and the scourge of the tongue which affects everyone' Gk.

c. Which rubs and slips back and forth on the creature's neck, causing galls and pain.

d. lit. 'fatten his bones'.

e. Probably alluding to the seven-branched lampstand, 1 M 4:49,50.

f. 'on firm-set heels' S., see Lat.; 'on the bosom of a well-built (woman)' Gk. Gk 248 and Syr. add:

19 My son, preserve the bloom of your youth and do not waste your strength on strangers (cf. Pr 5:9–10).
20 Search the whole plain for a fertile field, sow your own seed there, trusting in your own good stock.
21 Thus your offspring will survive, they will grow great, confident of their breeding.
22 A woman for hire is not worth spitting at,
but a lawful wife is as strong as a tower (of death?).
23 A godless wife is assigned to a transgressor as his fate, but a devout wife given to the man who fears the Lord.
24 A shameless wife takes pleasure in disgracing herself, a modest wife is diffident even with her husband.
25 A headstrong wife is no more respected than a dog, but one with a sense of shame fears the Lord.
26 A wife who respects her husband will be acknowledged wise by all, but one who proudly despises him will be known by all as wicked.
Happy the husband of a good wife, for the number of his days will be doubled (= 26:1).
27 A loud-mouthed, gossiping wife is like a trumpet sounding the charge, and any man saddled with one spends his life in the turmoil of war.

27 a. 'for the sake of profit' S.; var. 'for a trifle' Text. rec.

b. lit. 'averts his eyes', that is to say, refuses to help; cf. Pr 28:27.

c. 'wedge itself' sunthlibesetai conj.; Gk suntribesetai 'is crushed'.

d. Text emended; Gk 'so the word comes from the feeling in the human heart'.

Virtue

If you pursue virtue, you will attain it 8 9
Jb 29:14 and put it on like a festal gown.
Birds consort with their kind, 9 10 truth comes home to those who practise it.
The lion lies in wait for its prey, 10 11 so does sin for those who do wrong.

The conversation of the devout is wisdom at all times, 11 12 but the fool is as changeable as the moon.

When visiting stupid people, choose the right moment,[e] 12 13 but among the thoughtful take your time.

The conversation of fools is disgusting, 13 14
Qo 7:3–6 raucous their laughter in their sinful pleasures.

The talk of hard-swearing people makes your hair stand on end, 14 15 their brawling makes you stop your ears.

A quarrel between the proud leads to bloodshed, 15 16 and their insults are embarrassing to hear.

Secrets

22:22 A betrayer of secrets forfeits all trust 16 17 and will never find the kind of friend he wants.
Be fond of a friend and keep faith with him, 17 18 but if you have betrayed his secrets, do not go after him any more; 19 for, as one destroys a person by killing him, 18 20 so you have killed your neighbour's friendship, and as you let a bird slip through your fingers, 19 21
so you have let your friend go, and will not catch him.
Do not go after him—he is far away, 20 22
he has fled like a gazelle from the snare.
For a wound can be bandaged and abuse forgiven, 21 23 but for the betrayer of a secret there is no hope. 24

Hypocrisy

Ps 35:19 Someone with a sly wink is plotting mischief, 22 25
Pr 6:13;10:10 no one can dissuade him from it.
Honey-tongued to your face, 23 26
he is lost in admiration at your words;
but behind your back he has other things to say,
and turns your words into a stumbling-block.
I have found many things to hate, but nothing as much as him, 24 27 and the Lord hates him too.

Whoever throws a stone in the air, throws it on to his own head; 25 28
a treacherous blow cuts both ways.[f]
Ps 7:15;9:15 The man who digs a pit falls into it, 26 29
Pr 26:27 whoever sets a snare will be caught by it.
Qo 10:8 On anyone who does evil, evil will recoil, 27 30 without his knowing where it comes from.

Sarcasm and abuse are the mark of the arrogant, 28 31 but vengeance lies in wait like a lion for such a one.
The trap will close on all who rejoice in the downfall of the devout, 29 32 and pain will eat them up before they die.[g]

Resentment

33 30 Resentment and anger, these are foul things too, and a sinner is a master at them both.

1 28 Whoever exacts vengeance will experience the vengeance of the Lord, who keeps strict account of sin.

2 Pardon your neighbour any wrongs done to you, Mt 5:23–24; 6:12par., 14–15 and when you pray, your sins will be forgiven.

3 If anyone nurses anger against another, Mt 18:23–35 can one then demand compassion from the Lord?

4 Showing no pity for someone like oneself, can one then plead for one's own sins?

5 Mere creature of flesh, yet cherishing resentment!— who will forgive one one's sins?

6 Remember the last things, and stop hating, 7:36;38:20

7 corruption and death, and be faithful to the commandments.

8 7 Remember the commandments, and do not bear your fellow ill-will, Lv 19:17–18

9 remember the covenant of the Most High, and ignore the offence. Ex 23:4–5

Quarrels

10 8 Avoid quarrelling and you will sin less; Pr 15:18

11 for the hot-tempered provokes quarrels,

9 a sinner sows trouble between friends, introducing discord among the peaceful.

12 10 The way a fire burns depends on its fuel, Pr 26:20–21
a quarrel spreads in proportion to its violence;
a man's rage depends on his strength,
his fury grows fiercer in proportion to his wealth.

13 11 A sudden quarrel kindles fire, a hasty dispute leads to bloodshed.

14 12 Blow on a spark and up it flares, spit on it and out it goes;
both are the effects of your mouth.

The tongue ↗Jm 3:1–12

15 13 A curse on the scandal-monger and double-talker, Pr 16:28 such a person has ruined many who lived in concord.

16 14 That third tongue has shattered the peace of many[a]
and driven them from nation to nation;

17 it has pulled down fortified cities, and overthrown the houses of the great.

19 15 The third tongue has had upright wives divorced, depriving them of reward for their hard work.

20 16 No one who listens to it will ever know peace of mind, will ever live in peace again.

21 17 A stroke of the whip raises a weal, but a stroke of the tongue breaks bones. Pr 25:15

22 18 Many have fallen by the edge of the sword, but many more have fallen by the tongue.

23 19 Blessed is anyone who has been sheltered from it, Ps 31:20 and has not experienced its fury,

e. Translation uncertain; it could also mean 'Among stupid people, look out for the moment', i.e. be on your guard.

f. lit. 'and a treacherous blow distributes wounds'.

g. Temporal retribution as maintained by the traditional view, cf. Jb 21:20–21.

28 a. Either the third tongue that interferes in a quarrel, or the tongue that makes three victims: the slanderer himself, the listener, the person slandered (thus the Talmud).

who has not dragged its yoke about, or been bound in its chains;
for its yoke is an iron yoke, 20 24 its chains are bronze chains;
the death it inflicts is a miserable death, 21 25
Sheol is preferable to it.
It cannot gain a hold over the devout, 22 26
they are not burnt by its flames. [b]
Those who desert the Lord will fall into it, 23 27 it will flare up inextinguishably among them, it will be let loose against them like a lion,
it will tear them like a leopard.
Be sure you put a thorn-hedge round your property, 24 28 lock away your silver and gold;
then make scales and weights for your words, 25 29 22:27 and put a door with bolts across your mouth.
Pr 13:3
Take care you take no false step through it, 26 30 in case you fall a prey to him who lies in wait.

Loans [a]

29 Making your neighbour a loan is an act of mercy, [b] 1 to lend him a helping hand is to keep the commandments.
Lend to your neighbour in his time of need, 2 and in your turn repay your neighbour on time.
Be as good as your word and keep faith with him, 3 and you will find your needs met every time.
8:12 Many treat a loan as a windfall, [c] 4 and embarrass those who have come to their rescue.
Until he gets something, a man will kiss his neighbour's hand, 5 and refer diffidently to his wealth; but when the loan falls due, he puts this off, 6
he repays with offhand words, and pleads the inconvenience of the time.
Even if he can be made to pay, his creditor will recover barely half, 6 7 and consider even that a windfall.
But otherwise he will be cheated of his money, 8 and undeservedly [d] gain himself an enemy; the man will pay him back in curses and abuse, 9 and with insults instead of honour.
Many, not out of malice, [e] refuse to lend; 7 10
they are merely anxious not to be cheated for nothing.

3:30–4:10; 7:32–36 Dt 15:11 Tb 12:8–9 Mt 6:19–21; 19:21

Almsgiving

Nevertheless, be patient with those who are badly off, 8 11 do not keep them waiting on your generosity.
In obedience to the commandment, help the poor; 9 12 do not turn the poor away empty-handed in their need.
Spend your money on your brother or your friend, 10 13 do not leave it under a stone to rust away.
Mt 6:19–21 Jm 5:3
Use your wealth as the Most High has decreed; 11 14 you will find that more profitable than gold.
Tb 4:9–11 Mt 6:19–20 Lk 16:9
Stock your store-rooms with almsgiving; 12 15 this will save you from all misfortune.
Better than sturdy shield or weighty spear, 13 16 this will fight for you against the enemy.

Guarantees

8:13
Pr 6:1a

19 14 A good man will go surety for his neighbour; only a shameless wretch would desert him.
20 15 Do not forget the favour your guarantor has done you;
he has given his life for you.
22 16 A sinner is careless of his guarantor's prosperity, the ungrateful forgets his deliverer.
24 17 Going surety has ruined many who were prosperous, tossing them about in a heavy sea.
25 18 It has driven the powerful from home to wander among foreign nations.
26 19 A wicked man in a hurry to stand guarantor in the hope of profit, is hurrying to be sentenced.
27 20 Come to your neighbour's help as far as you can,
but take care not to fall into the same plight.

Staying in other people's houses

28 21 The first thing in life is water, and bread, and clothing, 39:26 and a house for the sake of privacy.
29 22 Better the life of the poor under a roof of planks, than lavish fare in somebody else's house.
30 23 Whether you have little or much, be content with it, and you will not hear your household complaining.[f] 31 24 It is a miserable life, going from house to house; Pr 27:8 wherever you stay, you dare not open your mouth, 32 25 you do not belong, you receive no thanks for the drink you pour out and hear embittering words into the bargain: 33 26 'Come along, stranger, lay the table, what have you got ready? give me something to eat!' 34 27 'Go away, stranger, make room for someone important;
my brother is coming to stay, I need the house.' 35 28 It is hard for the reasonable to be begrudged hospitality[g] to be shamed like a debtor.

Bringing up children

Pr 13:24;
23:13–14;
29:15

1 30 Whoever loves his son will beat him frequently so that in after years the son may be his comfort.

2 Whoever is strict with his son will reap the benefit, and be able to boast of him to his acquaintances.

3 Whoever educates his son will be the envy of his enemy, and will be proud of him among his friends.

4 Even when the father dies, he might well not be dead, Tb 4:17 since he leaves his likeness behind him.

b. The comparison between the tongue and a fire is found again in Jm 3:5–6. But it may be asked whether Ben Sira, having launched into a description of personified Calumny, may not have lost the thread of his argument in his censures of the tongue as universal enemy.

29 a. Lending (without interest) to Israelites is enjoined in the Law, Ex 22:24; Lv 25:35–37; Dt 15:7–11, cf. Ps 37:21,26; Mt 5:42.

b. Following Syr.; Gk 'He who shows mercy will make loans to his neighbour.'

c. lit. 'as something found'.

d. 'undeservedly' Gk MSS, Syr., Lat.; 'needlessly' Text. rec.

e. 'not out of malice' Gk MSS, Syr., Lat.; 'because of the wickedness (of those who borrow)' Text. rec.

f. Lat. var. 'and do not let yourself be treated as a stranger'.

g. lit. 'to hear himself reproached as not belonging' Lat.; 'to hear the house reproach him' Gk.

In life he has had the joy of his company, 5 dying, he has no anxieties.
He leaves an avenger against his enemies[a] 6 and a rewarder of favours for his friends.

Whoever coddles his son will bandage his wounds,[b] 7 his heart will turn over at every cry.
A badly broken-in horse turns out stubborn, 8 a son left to himself turns out headstrong.
Pamper your child and he will terrorise you, 9 play along with him and he will bring you sorrow.

Do not laugh with him, or one day you will weep with him 10 and end up gnashing your teeth.
While he is young, do not allow him his freedom 11 and do not wink at his mistakes.
Bend his neck in youth, 12 bruise his ribs while he is a child, or else he will grow stubborn and disobedient, and hurt you very deeply.[c]
Be strict with your son, and persevere with him, 13 or you will rue his insolence.

Health

Better be poor if healthy and fit 14 than rich if tormented in body.
Health and strength are better than any gold, 15
a robust body than untold wealth.
No riches can outweigh bodily health, 16
no enjoyment surpass a cheerful heart.
Better death than a wretched life, 17
and everlasting rest than chronic illness.
Good things lavished on a closed mouth 18 are like food offerings put on a grave.[d] Dt 4:28 Ps 115:4–7 Is 40:19–20+ What use is an offering to an idol 19 which can neither eat nor smell?
How describe someone pursued by the Lord's displeasure?[e] 20
He looks and sighs 20 21 20:4 like a eunuch embracing a pretty girl—how he sighs!

Happiness

Do not abandon yourself to sorrow, 21 22 do not torment yourself with brooding.
Gladness of heart is life to anyone, 22 23 joy is what gives length of days.
Give your cares the slip,[f] console your heart, 23 24
chase sorrow far away;
for sorrow has been the ruin of many, 25
and is no use to anybody.
Jealousy and anger shorten your days, 24 26 and worry brings premature old age.[g] Pr 15:15 A genial heart makes a good trencherman, 25 27 someone who enjoys a good meal.[h]

Riches

31 The sleeplessness brought by wealth makes a person lose weight, 1 the worry it causes drives away sleep.

The worries of the daytime prevent you from sleeping,[a] like a serious illness, they keep sleep at bay.
The rich forever toils, piling up money,
and then, leaving off, he is gorged with luxuries;
the poor forever toils, barely making a living,
and then, leaving off, is poorer than ever.

No one who loves money can easily avoid sinning, Pr 28:20 whoever pursues profit will be corrupted by it.[b] Gold has been the ruin of many;
their coming destruction was self-evident,[c] since it is a snare[d] for those who sacrifice to it and stupid people all get caught in it.
Happy the rich who is found to be blameless and does not go chasing after gold.[e]
Who is he, so that we can congratulate him, for he has achieved marvels among his fellows?
Who has been through this test and emerged perfect?
He may well be proud of that!
Who has had the chance to sin and has not sinned, had the chance to do wrong and has not done it?
His fortune will be firmly based and the assembly will acclaim his generosity.[f]

Dinner parties

Pr 23:1–3,6–8

If you are sitting down to a lavish table,
do not display your greed,
do not say, 'What a lot to eat!'
Remember, it is bad to have a greedy eye.
Is any creature more wicked than the eye?
—That is why it is always[g] weeping!
Do not reach out for anything your host has his eye on,
do not jostle him at the dish.
Judge your fellow-guest's needs by your own,
be thoughtful in every way.[h] Eat what is offered you like a well brought-up[i] person, Pr 13:25 do not wolf your food or you will earn dislike.
For politeness' sake be the first to stop;
do not act the glutton, or you will give offence,
and if you are sitting with a large party,
do not help yourself before the others do.

30 a. In the Hebrew sense of someone who has a right of redemption (go'el) (see Rt 2:20g; 4:4), but also of someone who is the defender of the oppressed.

b. Meaning uncertain: either the wounds that the child sustains in the course of an ill-disciplined life, or the wounds the father sustains from his ungrateful child.

c. vv. 11^{b}–12^{a}, 12^{d}, omitted by Gk, have been restored following Gk 248, Hebr. and Lat. (+ Syr. for 12^{a}).

d. 'on a grave'; Hebr. var. 'in front of an idol'.

e. i.e. the sick who can take no food, cf. Hebr. 'Thus it is with someone who has a fortune and cannot enjoy it', but the text is probably corrupt.

f. 'Beguile your cares' S., Hebr., Syr.; 'Love your soul' Text. rec.

g. All the Gk MSS put 33:16—36:10 before 30:25—33:16. The Syr. and Lat. versions preserve the original order which is also attested by the Hebr. fragments.

h. Hebr. 'The sleep of the heart serves as its food.'

31 a. 'prevent (from sleeping)' Hebr. 'summon (sleep)' Gk.

b. Thus Hebr. 'he who pursues corruption will be filled with it' Gk.

c. Hebr. 'They have put their trust in pearls, they have not succeeded in escaping from disaster, nor in being saved on the day of retribution.'

d. lit. 'a stumbling-block'. Grammatically, this refers back to gold, but the author is perhaps thinking of an idol, which would justify the reading 'sacrifice' in two MSS and Lat. (Text. rec. 'those who are mad'); Hebr. 'it is a trap for a stupid man.'

e. In Hebr. 'riches', mammon, a word of Aramaic origin often used in rabbinical literature, and see Mt 6:24; Lk 16:9, 11,13.

f. Probably an allusion to the practice of proclaiming the names of benefactors to the community, in the synagogue. Lat. 'the entire assembly (ecclesia) of holy people will publish his good works.'

g. 'always' Hebr.; 'on every face' Gk.

h. Hebr. 'and think of what you yourself dislike.'

i. 'well brought-up' Hebr.; omitted by Gk.

A little is quite enough for a well-bred person; 19 22 his breathing is easy when he lies in bed.
A moderate diet ensures sound sleep, 20 24
one gets up early, in the best of spirits.
Sleeplessness, biliousness and gripe 23 are what the glutton has to endure.
If you are forced to eat too much, 21 25 get up, go and vomit,[j] and you will feel better.
Listen to me, my child, do not disregard me, 22 26 eventually you will see the force of my words.
Be moderate[k] in all your activities 27 and illness will never overtake you.

People praise the person who keeps a splendid table, 23 28 and their opinion of his munificence is sound.
But a niggardly host provokes universal resentment 24 29 and people will retail instances of his meanness.

Pr 20:1; 23:20–21,29–35;31:4–7 Is 5:22;28:1–4

Wine

Do not play the valiant at your wine, 25 30 for wine has been the undoing of many.
The furnace proves the temper of steel, 26 31 and wine proves hearts in the drinking bouts of braggarts.
Wine gives life 27 32
if drunk in moderation.
What is life worth without wine? 33
Ps 104:15 It came into being to make people happy. 35
Jg 9:13 1 Tm 5:23 Drunk at the right time and in the right amount, 28 36 wine makes for a glad heart and a cheerful mind. 37 Pr 20:1 Bitterness of soul comes of wine drunk to excess 29 39 out of temper or bravado.[l] Drunkenness excites the stupid to a fury to his own harm, 30 40 it reduces his strength while leading to blows.
Do not provoke your fellow-guest at a wine feast, 31 41 do not make fun of him when he is enjoying himself, do not take him to task 42 or annoy him by reclaiming money owed.

Banquets

32 Have they made you the presider?[a] Do not let it go to your head, 1 behave like everyone else in the party, see that they are happy and then sit down yourself.
Having discharged your duties, take your place 2
so that your joy may be through theirs, and you may receive the crown for your competence.[b] 3

Speak, old man—it is proper that you should— 3 4 but with discretion: do not spoil the music.[c] 5
If someone is singing, do not ramble on 4 6 and do not play the sage at the wrong moment.
An amber seal on a precious stone, 5 7 such is a concert of music at a wine feast.
An emerald seal in a golden setting, 6 8 such are strains of music with a vintage wine.

Speak, young man, when you must, 7 9 but twice at most, and then only if questioned.

8 Keep to the point, say much in few words;
give the impression of knowing but not wanting to speak.
13 9 Among eminent people do not behave as though you were their equal;
do not make frivolous remarks when someone else is speaking.
14 10 Lightning comes before the thunder, favour goes ahead of a modest person. Pr 15:33;18:12 15 11 Leave in good time, do not bring up the rear, and hurry home without loitering.
16 12 There amuse yourself, and do what you have a mind to,
but do not sin by arrogant talk. [d] 17 13 And for all this bless your Creator, who intoxicates you with his favours.

The fear of God

18 14 Whoever fears the Lord will accept his correction; those who look for him will win his favour.
19 15 Whoever seeks the Law will be nourished by it,
the hypocrite will find it a stumbling-block.
20 16 Those who fear the Lord win his approval, their good deeds shining like a light. [e]

21 17 The sinner waves reproof aside, he finds an excuse for headstrong behaviour. [f] 22 18 A sensible person never scorns a warning; foreigners and the proud do not know about fear. [g]

24 19 Never act without reflection, and you will not regret your actions. [h] 25 20 Do not venture on a rough road, for fear of stumbling over the stones.
21 Do not be over-confident on an even road 26 22 and beware of your own children.
27 23 Watch yourself [i] in everything you do; Dt 4:9 Pr 13:3;16:17; 22:5
this is also the way to keep the commandments.

28 24 Anyone who trusts in the Law, obeys its precepts, no one who has confidence in the Lord will come to harm. Ps 23:3seq. Pr 19:16

1 33 No evil will befall one who fears the Lord, Jb 5:19 Ps 1;91 Pr 12:21;24:16 such a one will be rescued even in the ordeal.
2 No one who hates the Law is wise, [a] one who is hypocritical about it is like a storm-tossed ship.
3 An intelligent person will put faith in the Law, [b] for such a one the Law is as dependable as a prophecy.

j. 'go and vomit' Gk MSS, Hebr.; 'in the middle of the meal (?)' Text. rec.
k. 'moderate' Hebr.; 'industrious' Gk.
l. 'out of bravado' Hebr. (translation uncertain); 'by a false step (?)' Gk.

32 a. The custom of holding elaborate banquets with an organising chairman chosen by vote or by lot (see 2 M 2:27; Jn 2:8) seems to have become fashionable in Palestine under the influence either of the Greeks or of the Romans. The rabbis were later to warn devout Jews against these customs. Ben Sira, however, is merely urging good manners.
b. On festal crowns, see Ws 2:8; Is 28:1–4.
c. Term for music, singing or any artistic performance: recited poetry, dramatic interlude.

f. Hebr. 'does violence to the Law'.
g. Hebr. 'The wise does not conceal wisdom; the proud and the godless do not keep the Law.'
h. Or 'do not change your mind once you are actually doing something.'
i. 'Watch yourself' following Hebr.; 'rely on yourself' Gk.

33 a. With Hebr.; 'No one wise hates the Law' Gk.
b. Hebr. 'understand the word of Yahweh'.

Prepare what you have to say and you will get a hearing,[c] 4 marshal your information before you answer.
The feelings of a fool are like a cart-wheel, 5 a fool's thought revolves like a turning axle.
A rutting stallion is like a sarcastic friend; 6 he neighs, whoever rides him.

Inequality

Why is one day better than another,[d] 7 though the sun gives the same daylight throughout the year?
They have been differentiated in the mind of the Lord, 8 who has diversified the seasons and feasts; some he has made more important and has hallowed, 9 others he has made ordinary days.
Human beings come from the ground, 10
Adam himself was formed out of earth;
in the fullness of his wisdom[e] 11
the Lord has made distinctions between them, and diversified their conditions.
10:14–15 Some of them he has blessed, 12
Is 2:6–8 hallowing and setting them near him;
Lk 1:51–53 others he has cursed and humiliated by degrading them from their positions.
Is 29:16g Like clay in the hands of the potter 13
Rm 9:21 to mould as[f] it pleases him, so are human beings in the hands of their Maker to reward as he judges right.
Opposite evil stands good, 14 opposite death, life;
so too opposite the devout stands the sinner.[g] Contemplate all the works of the Most High, 15 42:24–25 you will find they go in pairs, by opposites.
Qo 3:1–8

Although the last to come, I have kept my eyes open 16
Is 24:13 like a man picking up what the grape-pickers have left.
Jb 49:9 By the blessing of the Lord I have come in first, 17
Ps 5:2;63:3 and like a true grape-picker have filled my winepress.
Mt 21:33 And note, I have not been working merely for myself, 18 24:34 but for all who seek instruction.

Listen to me, important public figures, 19 presidents of the assembly,[h] give ear!

Independence

Neither to son nor wife, brother nor friend, 20 give power over yourself during your own lifetime.
And do not give your property to anyone else, in case you regret it and have to ask for it back.
As long as you live and there is breath in your body, 21 do not yield power over yourself to anyone; better for your children to come begging to you, 22 than for you to have to go begging to them.
In all you do be the master, 23 and leave a reputation unstained.
The day your life draws to a close, 24 at the hour of death, then distribute your heritage.

Slaves [i] Pr 26:3

25 Fodder, the stick and burdens for a donkey, bread, discipline and work for a slave.
26 Work your slave hard, and you will have peace of mind, leave his hands idle,[j] and he will be asking for his freedom.
27 Yoke and harness will bow the neck,
for a bad servant, torments and the rack.
28 Set him to work, so that he will not be idle;[k] idleness teaches every kind of mischief.
29 Keep him at his duties, where he should be,
if he is disobedient, clap him in irons. Pr 29:19 30 But do not be over-exacting with anyone, and do nothing contrary to justice.

31 You have only one slave? Treat him like yourself, 7:20 since you have acquired him with blood.[l] 32 You have only one slave? Treat him as a brother, since you need him as you need yourself.
33 If you ill-treat him and he runs away, which way will you go to look for him?

Dreams [a]

1 34 Vain and deceptive hopes are for the foolish, and dreams lend wings to fools.
2 As well clutch at shadows and chase the wind as put any faith in dreams.
3 Dreams are no different from mirrors;
confronting a face, the reflection of that face.[b] 4 What can be cleansed by uncleanness, Jb 14:4 what can be verified by falsehood?
5 Divinations, auguries and dreams are nonsense, Qo 5:6 like the fantasies of a pregnant woman.[c] 6 Unless sent as emissaries from the Most High, do not give them a thought;
7 for dreams have led many astray, and those who relied on them have come to grief.
8 Fulfilling the Law requires no such falsehood, and wisdom is perfected in veracity.[d]

Travelling

9 A much travelled man knows many things, and a man of great experience will talk sound sense.

c. Hebr. 'and then you will act'.

d. Not, apparently, a cosmological question about the variable length of daylight but a religious one about the differing dignity of feast days and ordinary days, see v. 9.

e. 'wisdom' Hebr.; 'knowledge' Gk.

f. 'to mould as' one Gk MS, Lat.; 'all his ways (are) as' Gk.

g. Hebr. and Syr. add 'so, too, opposite light stands darkness.'

h. The synagogue where devout Jews assembled to be taught.

i. On the strict treatment of slaves, see Ex 21:20–21; and Mt 18:34; Lk 12:46. Nevertheless, slaves were not entirely at the mercy of their masters: their rights were laid down in detail by the Law; Ex 21:1–6,26–27; Lv 25:46; Dt 15:12–18, see vv. 30,31–33 of our passage, cf. the attitude of Paul, Ep 6:5–9; Col 4:1; Phm 16.

j. 'you will have peace of mind'; Hebr. var. 'lest he demand rest'. • 'leave his hands idle'; Hebr. 'if he raises his head'.

k. Hebr. 'lest he rebel'.

l. i.e. you have bought him with your hard-earned money. But the text is uncertain.

34 a. In the OT God sometimes uses dreams to carry his instructions to human beings, Gn 28:10–17; 31:10–13,24; 37:5–11; 41:1–36; etc. cf. Nb 12:6. See also Mt 1:20–23; 2:13,22. But recourse to dreams as an ordinary method of divination is censured by Law and Prophets: Lv 19:26; Dt 13:2–6; 18:9–14; Qo 5:6; Jr 29:8, as also by Ben Sira, though he admits the possibility of dreams of authentically divine origin, v. 6.

b. 'Dreams are no different from mirrors' conj. (see what follows); 'Visions of dreams are no different' Gk. The dream, like the mirror, only presents an image; or: the dream reflects only what someone already has in his mind, adding nothing nor providing any assurance, cf. v. 5.

c. lit. 'thus the heart of a woman in labour fancies'.

d. Ben Sira contrasts dreams which deceive with the Law and Wisdom that do not.

Someone who has never had his trials knows little; 10 but the travelled man is master of every situation.
I have seen many things on my travels, 11 12
I have understood more than I can put into words.
I have often been in danger of death, 12 13
but I have been spared, and this is why:
the spirit of those who fear the Lord can survive, 13 14 for their hope is in someone with power to save them. 15
No one who fears the Lord need ever hesitate, 14 16 or ever be daunted, since the Lord is his hope.
Happy the soul of one who fears the Lord. 15 17
On whom does he rely? Who supports him? 18 15:19 Ps 33:18; 34:15 The eyes of the Lord watch over those who love him, 16 19 he is their powerful protection and their strong support, their screen from the desert wind, their shelter from the midday sun, 20
a guard against stumbling, an assurance against a fall.
He revives the spirit and brightens the eyes, 17
he gives health, life and blessing.

35:1a Sacrifices

The sacrifice of an offering unjustly acquired is a mockery; 18 21 the gifts of the impious are unacceptable.
The Most High takes no pleasure in offerings from the godless, 19 23 Am 5:21n multiplying sacrifices will not gain pardon for sin.
Offering sacrifice from the property of the poor 20 24 is as bad as slaughtering a son before his father's eyes.
A meagre diet is the very life of the poor, 21 25 to deprive them of it is to commit murder.
To take away a fellow-man's livelihood is to kill him, 22 26
Lv 19:13 to deprive an employee of his wages is to shed blood. 27
Dt 24:14–15 Jr 22:13 If one person builds while another pulls down, 23 28 what will they get out of it but trouble?
If one person prays and another calls down a curse, 24 29 to which one's voice is the Master going to listen?
Nb 19:11 If someone washes after touching a corpse, and then touches it again, 25 30 what is the good of his washing?
Just so with someone who fasts for sin, 26 31 and then goes and commits it again.
Who is going to hear that person's prayer?
What is the good of the self-abasement?

The Law and sacrifices [a]

Lv 3:1a 35 One who keeps the Law multiplies offerings; 1 one who follows the commandments offers communion sacrifices. 2, 3 Lv 2:1a Proof of gratitude is an offering of fine flour, 2 4 Lv 7:11a,12 almsgiving a sacrifice of praise.
To abandon wickedness is what pleases the Lord, 3 5
Lv 16:1a to give up wrong-doing is an expiatory sacrifice.
Do not appear empty-handed in the Lord's presence; 4 6 for all these things are due under the commandment. 7
The offering of the upright graces the altar, [b] 5 8
Ex 29:18d and its savour rises before the Most High.
The sacrifice of the upright is acceptable, 6 9
Lv 2:1–3 its memorial will not be forgotten.
Pr 3:9 Honour the Lord with generosity, 7 10
Dt 26:1a,2 do not stint the first-fruits you bring.

11 8 Add a smiling face to all your gifts, 2 Co 9:7 and be cheerful as you dedicate your tithes. Dt 14:22d 12 9 Give to the Most High as he has given to you, [c] Dt 12:6;14:23; 26:12–15 as generously as your means can afford; 13 10 for the Lord is a good rewarder, he will reward you seven times over.

Divine justice

14 11 Do not try to bribe him with presents, he will not accept them, 15 do not put your faith in wrongly motivated sacrifices; 12 for the Lord is a judge who is utterly impartial. Dt 10:7 16 13 He never shows partiality to the detriment of the poor, Jb 34:19 Pr 24:23e he listens to the plea of the injured party.
17 14 He does not ignore the orphan's supplication, Ex 22:21–23 nor the widow's as she pours out her complaint. Pr 23:10–11 18 15 Do the widow's tears not run down her cheeks, 19 as she accuses the man who is the cause of them?
20 16 Whoever wholeheartedly serves God [d] will be accepted, his petitions will carry to the clouds.
21 17 The prayer of the humble pierces the clouds: [e] Lm 3:44 and until it does, he is not to be consoled, [f] Lk 18:7 18 nor will he desist until the Most High takes notice of him, acquits the upright and delivers judgement.
19 And the Lord will not be slow, 2 P 3:9
nor will he be dilatory on their behalf, 20 until he has crushed the loins of the merciless and exacted vengeance on the nations, 21 until he has eliminated the hordes of the arrogant and broken the sceptres of the wicked, 24 22 until he has repaid all people as their deeds deserve and human actions as their intentions merit, 25 23 until he has judged the case of his people and made them rejoice in his mercy.
26 24 Mercy is welcome in time of trouble, like rain clouds in time of drought.

Prayer for the deliverance and restoration of Israel [a] Ps 79

1 36 Take pity on us, Master, Lord of the universe, look at us, 2 spread fear of yourself throughout all other nations. Ps 79:6 Jr 10:25 3 2 Raise your hand against the foreign nations and let them see your might.
4 3 As, in their sight, you have proved yourself holy to us, so now, in our sight, prove yourself great to them.
5 4 Let them acknowledge you, just as we have acknowledged Dt 32:19 1 K 8:43 that there is no God but you, Lord. 1 Ch 17:20 6 5 Send new portents, do fresh wonders, Is 45:14
7 win glory for your hand and your right arm.

35 a. Ben Sira is both a firm supporter of liturgical worship and a moralist who insists on the Law's precepts of justice and charity. These two enthusiasms unite at this point: Ben Sira maintains that the observance of the Law is itself a fulfilment of ritual worship.

b. lit. 'greases the altar'.

c. Hebr. adds in margin 'He who gives to the poor, lends to God; who will repay him, if not He?', cf. Pr 19:17.

d. Or 'who does a service (for his neighbour)'.

e. Where God dwells, see Ps 68:34; 104:3.

f. lit. 'he is not consoled'; Hebr. var. 'it does not pause'.

36 a. This prayer reveals the sentiments of pious Jews about the year 190 just before the Maccabaean revolt. A messianic note, rare in Si, is struck here, as also in the psalm with which the Hebr. text ends, 51:12d.

Ps 79:6 Rouse your fury, pour out your rage, 6 8 destroy the opponent, annihilate the enemy. 9 Hasten the day, remember the oath, 7 10 and let people tell of your mighty deeds. [b] Let fiery wrath swallow up the survivor, 8 11 and destruction overtake those who oppress your people.
Ps 68:21;110:6 Crush the heads of hostile rulers 9 12 who say, 'There is no one else but us!' Gather together all the tribes of Jacob, 10 13 restore them their heritage as at the beginning. [c] Ex 4:22 Dt 7:6b Take pity, Lord, on the people called by your name, 11 14 on Israel whom you have made as a first-born.
Have compassion on your holy city, 12 15
2 S 5:9f on Jerusalem, the place where you rest.
Fill Zion with your praises 13 16 and your sanctuary with your glory. [d] Vindicate those whom you created first, [e] 14 17 fulfil what has been prophesied in your name.
Give those who wait for you their reward, 15 18 let your prophets be proved true.
Grant, Lord, the prayer of your servants, [f] 16
Nb 6:22–27 in the terms of Aaron's blessing on your people, so that all the earth's inhabitants may acknowledge 17 19 that you are the Lord, the everlasting God.

Discrimination

The stomach takes in all kinds of food, 18 20 but some foods are better than others.
As the palate discerns the flavour of game, 19 21
so a shrewd listener detects lying words.
A perverse character causes depression in others; 20 22 it needs experience to know how to repay such a one.

Pr 5:15b Choosing a wife

A woman will accept any husband, 21 23 but some daughters are better than others. [g] A woman's beauty delights the beholder, 22 24 a man likes nothing better.
Pr 15:4 If her tongue is kind and gentle, 23 25 her husband is the happiest of men.
The man who takes a wife has the makings of a fortune, 24 26
Gn 2:18 a helper to match himself, [h] a pillar of support.
When property has no fence, it is open to plunder, 25 27 when a man has no wife, he is aimless and querulous.
Will anyone trust an armed thief 26 28 who flits from town to town?
So it is with the man who has no nest, 27 and lodges wherever night overtakes him.

6:5–17 False friends

Pr 20:6 37 Any friend will say, 'I am your friend too,' 1 but some friends are friends only in name.
Is it not a deadly sorrow 2
when a comrade or a friend turns enemy?
17:31;21:11 Gn 3:22;4:7 O evil inclination, why were you created, [a] 3 to cover the earth with deceit?

4 One kind of comrade congratulates a friend in prosperity but in time of trouble appears on the other side. [b] 5 One kind of comrade genuinely feels for a friend [c] and when it comes to a fight, springs to arms.
6 Do not forget the genuine friend, Pr 27:10 do not push him out of mind once you are rich.

Advisers

8 7 Any adviser will offer advice, 6:6
but some are governed by self-interest.
9 8 Beware of someone who offers advice;
first find out what he wants himself—since his advice coincides with his own interest—10 in case he has designs on you [d]
11 9 and tells you, 'You are on the right road,' but stands well clear to see what will happen to you.
12 10 Do not consult anyone who looks at you askance, conceal your plans from people jealous of you.
11 Do not consult a woman about her rival, [e] or a coward about war, a merchant about prices, Pr 20:14
or a buyer about selling, anyone mean about gratitude, 13 or anyone selfish about kindness,
a lazy fellow about any sort of work, 14 or a casual worker about finishing a job, an idle servant about a major undertaking—do not rely on these for any advice.
15 12 But have constant recourse to some devout person, [f] 9:15 whom you know to be a keeper of the commandments, 16 whose soul matches your own,
and who, if you go wrong, will be sympathetic.
17 13 Finally, stick to the advice your own heart gives you, no one can be truer to you than that;
18 14 since a person's soul often gives a clearer warning than seven watchmen perched on a watchtower.
19 15 And besides all this beg the Most High Pr 16:9
to guide your steps into the truth.

b. Hebr. 'Hasten the end, remember the appointed time. For who is going to say to you: What are you doing?'

c. The hope of 'ingathering', particularly strong during the Exile, remained a characteristic of Judaism long after the exiles had returned. The Jews always regarded their dispersion abroad as a passing and unfortunate phase, to which the coming of the Messiah would put an end.

d. 'with your praises'; Hebr. var. 'with your majesty'. • 'your sanctuary' (naon) with Hebr.; Gk laon 'your people'.

e. The exact sense is uncertain. The author may be meaning Israel as a whole, or the patriarchs, who according to an ancient midrash were among the seven things created before the world, or else created wisdom, the first-fruit of creation (Pr 8:22). Or perhaps he believes that the Messiah or the messianic kingdom 'created before all things' is shortly to appear on earth?

f. 'your servants' Gk MSS, Hebr.; 'those who pray to you' Text. rec.

g. To restore a hypothetical parallelism here, the alternative reading has been proposed: 'a husband can take any woman, but . . .' Hebr., however, gives the same construction as the Gk. As the text stands, it is apparently emphasising the man's advantage in being able to choose his wife, whereas the latter has no choice in the matter of a husband.

h. Hebr. 'a fortified town'.

37 a. 'created', lit. 'rolled' (in something); the word, whether badly transcribed or emended for theological considerations, is interpreted in accordance with the Hebr.: 'Woe to the wicked man who says, "Why have I been created?" ' • The 'evil inclination' leading human beings to sin is an important element of rabbinical theology.

b. Hebr. 'Evil is the friend who takes advantage of your table and in time of adversity keeps his distance.'

c. lit. 'out of concern for his stomach'. vv. 4–5 contrast two kinds of friend: in danger one runs away, the other remains loyal. In Hebr. v. 5 makes the contrast clearer: 'The good friend fights the enemy and takes up arms against foes.'

d. Text uncertain; Hebr. 'why does that happen?'

e. The following passage provides illustrations of vv. 7–8 by listing advisers who have a personal interest in the advice they give.

f. Hebr. 'he who is in the fear (of God)', cf. Pr 1:7a. For Ben Sira, fear of God is superior to all profane wisdom.

True and false wisdom

Reason [g] should be the basis for every activity, 16 20 reflection must come before any undertaking.
Thoughts are rooted in the heart, 17 21 and this sends out four branches: [h] Pr 18:21 good and evil, life and death, 18 and mistress of them always is the tongue.
One kind of person is clever at teaching others, 19 22 yet is no good whatever to himself; 9:18 another, very eloquent, is detested 20 23 and ends by starving to death, [i] not having won the favour of the Lord, 21 24 and being destitute of all wisdom.
Another considers himself wise 22 25 and proclaims his intellectual conclusions as certainties. [j]
But the truly wise instructs his people 23 26 and his intellectual conclusions are certainties. [k]
The wise is showered with blessings, 24 27 and all who see him will call him happy.
Human life lasts a number of days, 25 28
but the days of Israel are beyond counting.
The wise will earn confidence among the people, 26 29 his name will live for ever.

Moderation

During your life, my child, see what suits your constitution, 27 30 do not give it what you find disagrees with it; 1 Co 3:2;6:12; 10:23 Heb 5:12 for not everything is good for everybody, 28 31 nor does everybody like everything.
Do not be insatiable for any delicacy, 29 32
do not be greedy for food, for over-eating leads to illness 30 33 and excess leads to liver-attacks.
Many people have died from over-eating; 31 34 control yourself, and so prolong your life.

Medicine and illness [a]

38 Treat the doctor with the honour that is his due, [b] 1 in consideration of his services;
for he too has been created by the Lord.
Healing itself comes from the Most High, 2 like a gift received from a king. [c]
The doctor's learning keeps his head high, 3 and the great regard him with awe.
The Lord has brought forth medicinal herbs from the ground, 4 and no one sensible will despise them.
Ex 15:23–25 Did not a piece of wood once sweeten the water, 5 thus giving proof of its power? [d]
He has also given some people the knowledge, 6 so that they may draw credit from his mighty works.
He uses these [e] for healing and relieving pain; 7
the druggist makes up a mixture from them.
Thus, there is no end to his activities; [f] 8
thanks to him, well-being exists throughout the world.

My child, when you are ill, do not rebel,
but pray to the Lord and he will heal you.
Renounce your faults, keep your hands unsoiled, and cleanse your heart from all sin.
Offer incense and a memorial of fine flour, make as rich an offering as you can afford. [g] 35:2–5 Then let the doctor take over—the Lord created him too—do not let him leave you, for you need him.
There are times when good health depends on doctors.
For they, in their turn, will pray the Lord to grant them the grace to relieve and to heal, and so prolong your life. [h] Whoever sins in the eyes of his Maker, let such a one come under the care of the doctor! [i]

Mourning [j]

My child, shed tears over the dead, lament for the dead to show your sorrow, then bury the body with due ceremony and do not fail to honour the grave. [k] Weep bitterly, beat your breast, [l] observe the mourning the dead deserves for a day or two, [m] to avoid censorious comment, and then be comforted in your sorrow;
for grief can lead to death,
a grief-stricken heart loses all energy.
In affliction sorrow persists,
a life of grief [n] is hard to bear.
Do not abandon your heart to grief, 30:21 drive it away, bear your own end in mind. [o] 7:36;28:6
Do not forget, there is no coming back;
you cannot help the dead, and you will harm yourself.
'Remember my doom, [p] since it will be yours too;
I yesterday, you today!' [q]
Once the dead are laid to rest, let their memory rest, do not fret for them, once their spirit departs.

g. Or 'the word' (logos), but in this context the word is the expression of creative wisdom.

h. Following Hebr.; Gk 'as token of change of heart, four parts appear.'

i. Hebr. 19 'Another is wise, acting wisely for others, but as regards himself is a fool. 20 Another is wise and disliked for what he says, he will be deprived of all agreeable food.'

j. Hebr. 'for his body'.

k. Hebr. 'A truly wise man is wise for the people of his nation, and the fruits of his intellect are theirs.'

38 a. Possibly some devout Jews thought consulting the doctor showed lack of faith in God. Cf. 2 Ch 16:12. Ben Sira corrects this view.

b. The 'honour' is perhaps the 'honorarium'. Hebr. 'Be friendly with a doctor'.

c. lit. 'which he receives'; it is not clear whether this means the sick person, or the doctor (v. 1) as intermediary. Hebr. 'The doctor has his art from God, and receives presents from the king.'

d. The Greek suggests that the author is giving a natural explanation of the miracle at Marah. For 'its power' Hebr. has 'his (God's) power'.

e. The herbs, already mentioned in v. 4 (vv. 5–6 are a parenthesis).

f. The activities of God do not cease with creation; to human beings and things he gives a share of his power, thus diffusing benefits to the whole world.

g. lit. 'according to your means' Hebr.; 'as not being (?)' Gk.

h. This passage may have inspired Jm 5:14seq., but the advice given in that letter has a different end in view.

i. i.e. may he fall sick. This does not seem to imply any insult to doctors; moreover it is possible that Hebr. should be preferred: 'A man sins in the eyes of his Maker if he defies the doctor.'

j. With the Jews, as with Orientals generally, the funeral rites were spectacular and governed by detailed rules. For various features, see Jr 9:17,18; Ezk 24:15–24; Am 5:16; Mt 9:23; Mk 5:38.

k. Hebr. 'and do not make yourself scarce when he expires'.

l. lit. 'make the blow burn': beating the breast was one of the signs of mourning. Hebr. 'carry out the mourning rites'.

m. Seven days, according to 22:12; but there may have been various grades of funeral solemnity.

n. 'a life of grief' conj.; 'a poor man's life' Gk.

o. Or merely 'Think of the future'. The expression ta eschata, 7:36; 48:24, is hard to translate.

p. 'my doom' (the dead person speaking), or 'the doom', S., or 'his doom', Vaticanus, Hebr. But whatever the reading adopted, it is the doom that condemns all human beings to die, Gn 2:17; 3:3–4.

q. That is to say: I was alive yesterday, as you are today. Hebr. 'he yesterday'.

Trades and crafts [r]

Leisure gives the scribe the chance to acquire wisdom; 24 25 a man with few commitments can grow wise.
How can the ploughman become wise, 25 26 whose sole ambition is to wield the goad, driving his oxen, engrossed in their work,
his conversation limited to bullocks, his thoughts absorbed in the furrows he traces 26 27 and his long evenings spent in fattening heifers?
Similarly with all workmen and craftsmen, 27 28 toiling day and night;
those who engrave seals,
for ever trying to think of a new design, concentrating on catching a good likeness and staying up late to get the work done.
Similarly with the blacksmith sitting by his anvil; 28 29
he considers what to do with the pig-iron,
the breath of the fire scorches his skin,
as he contends with the heat of the furnace;
the noise of the hammer deafens him, [s] 30
his eyes are fixed on the pattern;
he concentrates on getting the job done well 31
and stays up late to apply the finishing touches.
Similarly with the potter, sitting at his work, 29 32 turning the wheel with his feet;
constantly on the alert over his work, each flick of the finger premeditated; [t] he pummels the clay with his arm, 30 33 and with his feet he kneads it; 34 he concentrates on applying the glaze right and stays up late to clean the kiln.
All these people rely on their hands 31 35 and each is skilled [u] at his own craft.
A town could not be inhabited without them, 32 36
there would be no settling, no travelling. 37
But you will not find them in the parliament, 33
they do not hold high rank in the assembly.
They do not sit on the judicial bench, 38 and they do not meditate on the Law. [v]
They are not remarkable for their culture or judgement, 34 nor are they found frequenting the philosophers. [w]
They sustain the structure of the world, 39 and their prayer is concerned with their trade.

Ps 1:2 The scribe

39 Not so with one who concentrates his mind 1 and his meditation on the Law of the Most High.
He researches into the wisdom of all the Ancients, 1 he occupies his time with the prophecies. [a] He preserves the discourses of famous men, 2 he is at home with the niceties of parables. [b]
He researches into the hidden sense of proverbs, 3 he ponders the obscurities of parables.
He enters the service of princes, 4
he is seen in the presence of rulers.

He travels in foreign countries, [c] he has experienced human good and human evil.
At dawn and with all his heart
he turns to the Lord his Creator;
he pleads in the presence of the Most High,
he opens his mouth in prayer and makes entreaty for his sins. 2 S 12:20–30+
If such be the will of the great Lord, he will be filled with the spirit of intelligence, Is 11:2
he will shower forth words of wisdom, and in prayer give thanks to the Lord.
He will grow upright in purpose and learning,
he will ponder the Lord's hidden mysteries.
He will display the instruction he has received, taking his pride in the Law of the Lord's covenant.
Many will praise his intelligence and it will never be forgotten.
His memory will not disappear, generation after generation his name will live.
Nations will proclaim his wisdom, =44:15
the assembly will celebrate his praises.
If he lives long, his name will be more glorious than a thousand others, and if he dies, that will satisfy him just as well. [d]

Invitation to praise God

And here are some more of my reflections:
yes, I am as full as the moon at the full!
Listen to me, devout children, and blossom like the rose that grows on the bank of a watercourse. Ps 1:3 Give off a sweet smell like incense, flower like the lily, spread your fragrance abroad, sing a song of praise blessing the Lord for all his works.
Declare the greatness of his name, proclaim his praise
with song and with lyre,
and this is how you must sing his praises:
'How wonderful, the actions of the Lord! Ps 104:24 Whatever he orders is done at the proper time!' Ps 33:9
You must not say, 'What is this? Why is that?' Qo 3:11
There is a proper time for every question. [e]

r. This passage is not unlike an ancient Egyptian text known as the Satire on Trades. Ben Sira limits his catalogue to trades typically Palestinian.

s. 'pig-iron' Vaticanus; 'the work of iron' Text. rec. • 'deafens' conj. assuming the Hebr. yeherash, read by the Gk translator as yehaddesh (frequent confusion of resh and dalet) 'renews'.

t. Translation uncertain; lit. 'his activity is counted' or 'numbered', perhaps because he has to turn out a fixed number of articles by the end of the day.

u. lit. 'wise'. Craftsmanship is an elementary form of wisdom, see Ex 35:30–36:1; 1 K 5:20; 7:13–14. Such 'wisdom', however, cannot be compared with that of the scribe, see 39:1–11.

v. lit. 'the covenant of the judgement', cf. 45:17.

w. lit. 'inventors of maxims' conj.; 'maxims' Gk.

39 a. The terms 'law', 'wisdom', 'prophecies', apparently refer to the three sections of the scriptures, see Translator's Foreword, 1,8–10,24–25.

b. The scribe is primarily the custodian of the scriptures, but he also has the duty of explaining them to the people, see Ezr 7:6c. On the parable or mashal, see p. 751.

c. The scribe is often a court official, minister, or ambassador.

d. lit. 'that is enough for him' ekpoiei conj.; Gk. empoiei 'he produces for himself (?)'. Difficult text; it seems to mean that if the scribe dies before achieving renown he ought not to regret the work he has done.

e. These two lines, found only in the Gk, are in part a doublet of v. 21. It apparently means that premature enquiries about the ordering of this world are idle. Some day either by reward or punishment God will demonstrate the purpose of hitherto uncomprehended phenomena, vv. 21,34. Thus the sage who studies will understand 'at the proper time'. This passage may have been intended to refute certain pessimistic propositions put forward by Qohelet.

At his word, the water stops and piles up high, 17 22 at his voice, the watery reservoirs take shape,[f] at his command, whatever he wants is done, 18 23 1 S 14:6 no one can stop him, if he intends to save.
He can see whatever human beings are doing, 19 24
Ws 1:7–8 nothing can be hidden from his eye;
his gaze stretches from eternity to eternity, 20 25 and nothing can astonish him.
You must not say, 'What is this? Why is that?' 21 26 for everything has been made for a purpose.

As his blessing covers the dry land like a river[g] 22 27 and soaks it like a flood, 28 so retribution is his legacy to the nations, 23 29 just as he has turned fresh waters to salt.
His ways are as smooth for the devout, 24
as they are full of obstacles for the wicked.
33:14–15 Good things were created from the beginning for good people, 25 30 as bad ones[h] were for sinners.
The prime needs of human beings for living 26 31 are water and fire, iron and salt, wheat-flour, milk and honey,
the juice of the grape, oil and clothing.
All these are good for those who are good, 27 32
but turn out bad for sinners.

Some winds have been created for punishing, 28 33 in his fury, he uses them as scourges;[i] on the day of doom, they unleash their violence 34 and appease the wrath of their Creator.
Fire and hail, famine and death, 29 35 have all been created for punishing.[j] Wild animals' fangs, scorpions, vipers, 30 36 the avenging sword for the ruin of the godless:
all of them exult in discharging his orders, 31 37 ready on earth whenever the need arises and, when their time comes, not falling short of his word.

That is why I was determined from the outset, 32 38
why I have pondered and why I have written,[k]
'The works of the Lord are all good, 33 39 when the time is right, he gives whatever is needed.
You must not say, "This is worse than that," 34 40 for, sooner or later, everything proves its worth.
Ps 145:21 So now, sing with all your heart and voice, 35 41 and bless the name of the Lord!'

Human wretchedness[a]

Gn 3:16–19 Jb 1:21+; 7:1 seq.;14:1–21a Jb 1:21+ 40 A hard lot has been created for human beings, 1 a heavy yoke lies on the children of Adam from the day they come out of their mother's womb, till the day they return[b] to the mother of them all.
What fills them with foreboding and their hearts with fear 2 is dread of the day of death.
From the one who sits on a glorious throne 3 to the wretch in dust and ashes, from the one who wears purple and a crown to the one dressed in sacking, all is fury and jealousy, turmoil and unrest, fear of death, rivalry, strife.

And even at night while he rests on his bed his sleep only gives a new twist to his worries: [c] — Dt 28:65–67 Jb 7:4 scarcely has he lain down to rest, — Qo 2:23;8:16 when in his sleep, as if in broad daylight, [d]
he is troubled with nightmares, like one who has escaped from a battle,
and at the moment of rescue he wakes up, amazed that there was nothing to be afraid of!
For all creatures, human and animal—and seven times more for sinners—there is death and blood and strife and the sword, disasters, famine, affliction, plague.
These things were all created for the wicked, — 39:25,29 and the Flood came because of them.
All that comes from the earth returns to the earth, — =41:10 Gn 3:19 Ps 146:4 Qo 1:7
and what comes from the water returns to the sea. [e]

Various maxims

All bribery and injustice will be blotted out, but good faith will stand for ever.
Ill-gotten wealth will vanish like a torrent,
like the single thunder-clap that heralds rain.
When he opens his hand, he rejoices, [f]
by the same token, sinners come to ruin.
The sprigs of the godless will not make many branches, — 23:25 Ws 4:3
tainted roots find only hard rock.
The reed that grows by every lake and river's edge — Jb 8:11–12 is the first plant to be uprooted. [g] Charity is a very paradise of blessing — 40:27 and almsgiving endures for ever. [h]
For a person of private means and one who works hard, life is pleasant,
better off than either, one who finds a treasure.
Children and the founding of a city perpetuate a name:
more esteemed than either, a perfect wife. [i]

f. Alluding to the numerous miracles connected with water: creation, Gn 1:9, the Flood, Gn 7,11–12, the crossing of the Red Sea, Ex 14:21–22, and of the Jordan, Jos 3:16, and possibly also to the mystery of the clouds as inexhaustible reservoirs of water, see Ps 104:6–13.

g. The author is thinking of the beneficial inundations of the Nile. Hebr. has 'like a Nile'.

h. 'bad ones'; Hebr. var. 'good or evil'.

i. Following Gk 248 and Syr.; 'in their fury, they establish scourges'. Text. rec.

j. Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs 'It (the lower heaven) holds fire, snow, and ice ready for the Day of Judgement, in the just punishment of God. For it is there that the spirits of vengeance are, for the punishment of men' (Lv 3:2). Ben Sira, also, sees these scourges as held in reserve but he does not seem to be thinking in terms of eschatology.

k. Solemn preface to the optimistic conclusion: all is willed by God for a specific purpose; all is under control and human beings have no reason to complain; if they suffer, it is because they deserve it.

40 a. This passage on the wretchedness of the human state contrasts with the preceding chapter; but there is no inconsistency in the thought: misery has its explanation—it is the consequence of sin, v. 10.

c. The Hebr. (uncertain) and the context suggest that sleep brings thoughts no less painful. Cf. Qo 2:22,23.

d. 'as if in broad daylight' conj.; 'as if on the day of watching' Gk.

e. Hebr. 'and what comes from above returns above', cf. Qo 12:7.

f. Difficult text; possibly referring to the virtuous whose generosity spreads joy all around.

g. lit. 'before any plant'; Hebr. 'before any rain'.

h. Hebr. 'Piety will never be shaken and virtue remains for ever.'

i. Hebr. adds between the two lines 'better than either, the discovery of wisdom. Cattle plantation makes you well known.'

Wine and music cheer the heart; 20 better than either, the love of wisdom.[j] Flute and harp add sweetness to a song; 21 better than either, a melodious voice.
The eye longs for grace and beauty; 22 better than either, the green of spring corn.
Friend or comrade—it is always well met; 23 better than either, a wife and husband.
Pr 17:17 29:8+ Brothers and allies are good in times of trouble; 24 better than either, almsgiving to the rescue.
Gold and silver will steady your feet; 25 more esteemed than either, good advice.
Money and strength make a confident heart; 26 better than either, the fear of the Lord.
40:17 With fear of the Lord, nothing is lacking: 27 no need to seek for other help.
Fear of the Lord is a paradise of blessing, 27 28 protecting better than the highest reputation.

Sponging

My child, do not live by sponging off others, 28 29 better be dead than be a sponger.
A life spent in eyeing someone else's table 29 30 cannot be accounted a life at all.
Other people's food defiles the gullet;
a wise, well-brought-up person will beware of doing this.[k] 31 Jb 20:12–14 What a sponger says may sound very sweet 30 32 but in his belly there burns a fire.

Death

Jb 14:1-2a 41 O death, how bitter it is to remember you 1 for someone peacefully living with his possessions, for someone with no worries and everything going well 2 and who can still enjoy his food![a]

Jb 3:20seq. O death, your sentence is welcome 2 3 to one in want, whose strength is failing, to one worn out with age and a thousand worries, 4 resentful and impatient!

Do not dread death's sentence; 3 5 remember those who came before you and those who will come after.
Gn 3:19;6:3 This is the sentence passed on all living creatures by the Lord, 4 6 so why object to what seems good to the Most High?
Qo 6:6;9:10 Whether your life lasts ten or a hundred or a thousand years, 7 its length will not be held against you in Sheol.[b]

The fate of the wicked

Hateful brats, such are the children of sinners, 5 8 who foregather in the haunts of the godless.
Ps 21:10 The inheritance of sinners' children is doomed to perish, 6 9 their posterity will endure lasting reproach.
A godless father will be blamed by his children 7 10 for the reproach he has brought on them.
A bad outlook for you, godless people, 8 11 who have forsaken the Law of God Most High.

12 9 When you were born, you were born to be accursed, [c] Ws 12:11 and when you die, that curse will be your portion.
13 10 All that comes from the earth returns to the earth, =40:11 so too the wicked proceed from curse to destruction.
14 11 Mourning concerns only the bodies of the dead, but the worthless name of sinners will be blotted out. [d]

15 12 Be careful of your reputation, for it will last you longer Pr 22:1 than a thousand great hoards of gold. Qo 7:1 16 13 A good life lasts a certain number of days, but a good reputation lasts for ever.

Sense of shame

17 14 Keep my instructions and be at peace, my children.

Wisdom hidden away and treasure undisplayed, =20:30–31 what use is either of these? Mt 5:14–16 18 15 Better someone who hides his folly than one who hides his wisdom.
19 16 Preserve a sense of shame in the following matters, 20 for not every kind of shame is right to harbour, nor is every situation correctly appraised by all.
21 17 Be ashamed, before father and mother, of depraved behaviour, and before prince or potentate of telling lies; 22 18 of wrong-doing before judge or magistrate, and of impiety before the assembly of the people; 23 19 of sharp practice before your companion and your friend, 24 and of theft before the neighbourhood you live in.
20 Before the truth and covenant of God, be ashamed of leaning elbows on the table, [e] 21 of being ungracious when giving or receiving, 25 of ignoring those who greet you,
22 of gazing at a loose woman,
26 of repulsing your fellow-countryman,
23 of misappropriating another's portion or gift, 27 of paying court to another man's wife, 9:8–9 24 of making advances to his servant-girl
—do not go near her bed—28 25 of saying disagreeable things to friends
—do not follow up a gift with a taunt—42:1 26 of repeating everything you hear and of betraying confidences.
27 Then you will know what true shame is,
and you will find yourself in everyone's graces.

1 42 The following things you should not be ashamed of, [a]
and do not sin from fear of what others think:
2 of the Law of the Most High or of the covenant, of a verdict that acquits the godless, [b]

j. Hebr. 'Wine and drinks put joy into the heart, but more than these two things, love.'
k. Hebr. 'It is inward torture for the intelligent.'

41 a. 'food'; Hebr. var. 'pleasure'.
b. Where the longest of lives has come to an end and therefore ceased to be matter for envy.
c. Between the two lines, Hebr. adds 'If you beget children, it is for affliction, if you stumble, it is for everlasting joy' (where presumably the Syr. reading should be adopted: 'if you stumble, you give delight to others').
d. Hebr. 'physically speaking, human beings are futile, but a reputation for goodness is not to be blotted out.'
e. 'on the table', lit. 'on the bits of bread': if this is only a matter of etiquette, it accords ill with the context. Hebr. offers little light: 'to violate oath and covenant, to stretch your elbows over (towards) the bread (?)'

42 a. Ben Sira shows how certain actions frowned on by public opinion or by prejudice are nevertheless permissible.
b. The 'godless' are perhaps foreigners; they should be treated as justly as Israelites.

of keeping accounts with a travelling companion, [c] 3 of settling property on your friends, of being accurate over scales and weights, 4 of making small and large profits, of gaining from commercial transactions, [d] 5 30:1 of disciplining your children strictly,
33:25,27 of lashing a wicked slave till you draw blood.
With an interfering wife, it is as well to use your seal, 6 and where there are many hands, lock things up.
Whatever stores you issue, do it by number and weight, 7 spendings and takings, put everything in writing.
Pr 10:13; 19:25,29; 26:3 Do not be ashamed to correct a stupid person or a fool, 8 or an old dotard who bickers with young people. [e] Then you will show yourself really educated and win the approval of everyone.

Worries of a father with a daughter

Unknown to her, a daughter keeps her father awake, [f] 9 the worry she gives him drives away his sleep:
in her youth, in case she never marries, married, in case she should be disliked, as a virgin, in case she should be defiled 10 and found with child in her father's house, having a husband, in case she goes astray,
Dt 24:1 married, in case she should be sterile!
26:10 Your daughter is headstrong? Keep a sharp look-out 11 that she does not make you the laughing-stock of your enemies, the talk of the town, the object of common gossip,
and put you to public shame.

Women

Do not stare at any man for his good looks, 12 do not sit down with the women; [g] for moth comes out of clothes, 13 and woman's spite out of woman.
Qo 7:26–28 Better a man's spite than a woman's kindness: 14 women give rise to shame and reproach. [h]

II: THE GLORY OF GOD

A: IN NATURE

Next, I shall remind you of the works of the Lord, 15 and tell of what I have seen.
Gn 1:3 seq. By the words [i] of the Lord his works come into being and all creation obeys his will. [j]
The shining sun looks down on all things, 16 and the work of the Lord is full of his glory.
The Lord has not granted the Holy Ones [k] the power 17 to tell of all his marvels which the Almighty Lord has solidly constructed for the universe to stand firm in his glory. [l] Pr 15:11 He has fathomed both the abyss and the human heart 18 and seen into their devious ways;

for the Most High knows all there is to know and sees the signs of the times. [m] 19 He declares what is past and what will be,
and reveals the trend of hidden things.
20 Not a thought escapes him, Ps 139:1–4 not a single word is hidden from him.
21 He has embellished the magnificent works of his wisdom, he is from everlasting to everlasting, 22 nothing can be added to him, nothing taken away, 18:6 Qo 3:14
he needs no one's advice.
23 22 How lovely, all his works, 16:24–29
how dazzling to the eye!
24 23 They all live and last for ever,
and, whatever the circumstances, all obey.
25 24 All things go in pairs, by opposites, 33:14–15 Qo 3:1–8 he has not made anything imperfect: [n] 26 25 one thing complements the excellence of another.
Who could ever grow tired of gazing at his glory?

The sun [a] Ps 19:1–6

1 43 Pride of the heights, a clear vault of the sky— Gn 1:14–18 Ps 8:3
such is the beauty of the heavens, a glorious sight.
2 The sun, as he emerges, proclaims at his rising,
'How wonderful a thing, the work of the Most High!'
3 At his zenith, he parches the ground, who can withstand his blaze?
4 We have to blow the furnace to produce any heat, the sun burns the mountains three times as much;
breathing out blasts of fire,
flashing his rays, he dazzles the eyes.
5 Great is the Lord who created him and whose word speeds him on his course.

The moon

6 And then the moon, ever punctual Ps 89:39; 104:19 to mark the times, an everlasting sign: 7 It is the moon that signals the feasts, a luminary that wanes after being full. [b] 8 The month derives its name from hers, [c] she waxes wonderfully in her phases,

c. 'keeping accounts' (logismou instead of logou) following the Hebr. 'travelling companion' conj.; 'a companion and travellers' Gk.

d. Cf., on the other hand, 26:29 and 27:2. Business dealings are lawful but full of temptation.

e. Hebr. 'who sins by fornication'.

f. Hebr. 'a daughter is a deceptive treasure for her father.'

g. Hebr. 'let her not show her beauty to any man, let her not gossip with women.'

h. Ben Sira is stricter than Pr, itself severe on women, cf. Pr 5:15b. Even when taking the paradox into account, it should be noted that later rabbinical teaching took the same line.

i. Hebr. 'word'. One of the earliest appearances of the doctrine of the creative Word, cf. 43:26; Gn 1; Ps 33:6; Ws 9:1,2; Jn 1:1a. In wisdom literature as a whole it is rather Wisdom that is spoken of as creative, see Pr 8:22f.

j. Line translated following Sin., Hebr. and Syr.; omitted by Gk.

k. i.e. the angels, Jb 5:1a.

l. Hebr. (for 17[c,d]) 'The Lord has given his armies the strength to subsist before his glory.'

m. The stars are 'signs of the times' not only because they distinguish the seasons, 43:6; Gn 1:14–18, but also because, according to a widespread belief, the future was already written in the heavens, Jr 10:2. Here there may be a more specific reference to the extraordinary signs expected to announce the coming of the Messiah, Mt 24:29–31.

n. Hebr. 'All things are different from one another, and nothing has been made in vain.'

43 a. Compare this lyrical passage with those of Dn 3:52–90 and Ps 19:4seq.; 136; 145; 148. The text is difficult, and the Hebr., being very different, is little help.

b. The two great Jewish feasts, Passover and Shelters, see Ex 23:14d, began on the day of full moon (14th of the month) and lasted for 8 days.

c. Either because the same Hebr. word (yerah) means 'moon' and 'month', or because the alternative word for 'month' (hodesh) means 'newness' (new moon).

banner of the hosts on high, 9 shining in the vault of heaven.

Ba 3:33–35 The stars

The glory of the stars makes the beauty of the sky, 9 10 a brilliant adornment of the Lord on High.
At the words of the Holy One they stand as he decrees, 10 11 and never grow slack at their watch.

The rainbow

50:7 Gn 9:13 Ezk 1:28 See the rainbow and praise its Maker, 11 12 so superbly beautiful in its splendour.
Across the sky it forms a glorious arc 12 13 drawn by the hands of the Most High.

The wonders of nature

Jb 38:22seq. Ps 147:16–18 By his command he sends the snow, 13 14 he speeds the lightning by his command.
In the same way, his treasuries open 14 15 and the clouds fly out like birds.
His great power solidifies the clouds, 15 16
then pulverises them into hail.
Ps 29:8 At the roar of his thunder, the earth writhes in labour, 17a 18a at the sight of him, the mountains quake. 16 17a
At his will the south wind blows, 17b or the storm from the north and the whirlwind.[d] 17b 18b
He sprinkles snow like birds alighting, 18 19 it comes down like locusts settling.
The eye marvels at the beauty of its whiteness, 20
and the mind is amazed at its falling.
Over the earth, like salt, he also pours hoarfrost, 19 21 which, when it freezes, bristles like thorns.
The cold wind blows from the north, 20 22
and ice forms on the water;
it forms on every piece of standing water, covering it like a breastplate.
The wind swallows up the mountains and scorches the desert, 21 23 like a fire it consumes the vegetation.
But cloud brings swift healing, 22 24 and dew brings joy after the heat.

Jb 7:12f Ps 104:5seq. By his own resourcefulness he has tamed the abyss, 23 25 and planted it with islands.
Those who sail the sea tell of its dangers, 24 26 their accounts fill our ears with amazement:
for there too exist strange and wonderful works, 25 27
Ps 104:25seq.; 107:23seq. animals of every kind and huge sea creatures.
Thanks to God, his messenger reaches port, 26 28 everything works out according to his word.

We could say much more and still fall short; 27 29 to put it concisely, 'He is all.'[e] Ps 96:4;145:3 Where shall we find sufficient power to glorify him, 28 30 since he is the Great One, above all his works, the awe-inspiring Lord, stupendously great, 29 31 and wonderful in his power?

32 30 Exalt the Lord in your praises
33 as high as you may—still he surpasses you.
34 Exert all your strength when you exalt him, do not grow tired—you will never come to the end.
35 31 Who has ever seen him to describe him?
Who can glorify him as he deserves? Jn 1:18;5:57; 6:46 36 32 Many mysteries remain even greater than these, for we have seen only a few of his works, Jb 26:14 37 33 the Lord himself having created all things and given wisdom to those who are devout. 1:9–10;42:17

B: IN HISTORY

1 M 2:51–64
Heb 11

Eulogy of the ancestors [a]

1 44 Next let us praise illustrious men, [b] our ancestors in their successive generations.
2 The Lord has created an abundance of glory, [c] and displayed his greatness from earliest times.
3 Some wielded authority as kings and were renowned for their strength; others were intelligent advisers and uttered prophetic sayings.
4 Others directed the people by their advice, by their understanding of the popular mind, and by the wise words of their teaching; [d] 5 others composed musical melodies and set down ballads;
6 others were rich and powerful,
living peacefully in their homes.
7 All these were honoured by their contemporaries and were the glory of their day.
8 Some of them left a name behind them, so that their praises are still sung.
9 While others have left no memory and disappeared as though they had not existed.
They are now as though they had never been,
and so too, their children after them.

10 But here is a list of illustrious men whose good works have not been forgotten. [e] 11 In their descendants they find a rich inheritance, their posterity.
12 Their descendants stand by the commandments 39:9
and, thanks to them, so do their children's children.

d. Following Hebr. order.

e. Not of course in the pantheistic sense. For Ben Sira, everything comes from God, whose transcendence he constantly asserts (see, in this passage, v. 28) and everything belongs to him.

44 a. This eulogy shows how a devout Jew of the 2nd century before Christ thought of the history of his people, cf. 1 M 2:51–64.

b. See 44:10, where in Hebr. the same expression occurs: man of piety (hesed) giving rise to the term 'Hasidaeans' (hasidim), see 1 M 2:42; 7:13, those Jews who at the time of the Maccabaean revolt were remarkable for their loyalty to God and the Law. That the Gk translator has not given a strictly accurate rendering of the term may be because, at the time of writing, the connotations of the word were rather too precise.

c. Vv. 2–9 may be either a description of 'human glory' as known outside Israel, with which the author contrasts (vv. 1 and 10seq.) that of the ancestors of the Jews, or else a general survey of the glories of Israel preceding the more detailed account.

d. Hebr. 'rulers of nations in their planning, civil servants in their profound thoughts, learned sages in their books, preceptors in their traditions'.

e. Hebr. 'their hope will not cease', a reading which seems to imply a hope of immortality, which does not figure in the Gk.

Their offspring will last for ever, 13 their glory will not fade.
Their bodies have been buried in peace, 14
and their name lives on for all generations.
=39:10 The peoples will proclaim their wisdom, 15
the assembly will celebrate their praises.

Enoch

Gn 5:24 LXX
Heb 11:5 Enoch pleased the Lord and was transferred to heaven, 16 an example for the conversion[f] of all generations.

Noah

Gn 6:9 Noah was found perfectly upright, 17
Is 6:13 in the time of retribution he became the heir:
↗1 P 3:20
↗2 P 2:5 because of him a remnant was preserved for the earth[g] 18 at the coming of the Flood.[h]
Gn 8:21–22;
9:9d Everlasting covenants[i] were made with him 18 19 that never again should every living creature perish by flood.

Abraham

Gn 12:2;17:4seq.
Rm 4:1,13–18 Abraham, the great ancestor of a host of nations, 19 20 no one was ever his equal in glory.[j]
He observed the Law of the Most High, 20 and entered into a covenant with him.
Gn 17:10d He confirmed the covenant in his own flesh, 21
Gn 22:1–19
1 M 2:52
Heb 11:17 and proved himself faithful under ordeal.[k]
The Lord therefore promised him on oath 21 22 to bless the nations through his descendants,
Gn 22:18;12:3;
15:5 to multiply him like the dust on the ground,
Ac 3:25 to exalt his descendants like the stars, 23
Ga 3:8–9 and to give them the land as their heritage, from one sea to the other,
Gn 15:18
Jg 20:1a from the River to the ends of the earth.

Isaac and Jacob

Gn 17:19;
26:3–5 To Isaac too, for the sake of Abraham his father, 22 24
Gn 28:14 he assured ·the blessing of all humanity; 23 25
he caused the covenant to rest on the head of Jacob.
He confirmed him in his blessings[l] 26 and gave him the land as his inheritance;
he divided it into portions,
and shared it out among the twelve tribes.

Moses

45 From Jacob's stock he produced a generous man 1 27 who found favour in the eyes of all humanity,[a] beloved by God and people, 45:1
Moses, of blessed memory.
42:17k He made him the equal of the holy ones in glory 2 and made him strong, to the terror of his enemies.
Ex 8:8seq.,26
seq.;9:33;
10:18seq. By the word of Moses, he made prodigies cease 3 and raised him high in the respect of kings;
Ex 19:1seq.;
33:20i he gave him commandments for his people,
and showed him something of his glory.
Nb 12:3 For his loyalty and gentleness he sanctified him, 4 choosing him alone out of all human beings;

he allowed him to hear his voice, Ex 19:19seq.
and led him into the darkness; Ex 20:21;24:18 he gave him the commandments face to face, Ex 20:1seq., 22seq.; the law of life and knowledge, Dt 4:6–8;32:47 to teach Jacob his ordinances and Israel his decrees.

Aaron

He raised up Aaron, a holy man like Moses, his brother, of the tribe of Levi.
He made an everlasting covenant with him,
and gave him the priesthood of the people.
He adorned him with impressive vestments, he dressed him in a robe of glory. [b]
He clothed him in glorious perfection and invested him with rich ornaments, Ex 28:6–12,31–35,42
the breeches, the long robe, the ephod.
To surround the robe he gave him pomegranates, and many gold bells all round Ex 28:33–34
to chime at every step, for their sound to be heard in the Temple as a reminder to the children of his people; and a sacred vestment of gold and aquamarine Ex 28:2–5 and scarlet, the work of an embroiderer;
the pectoral of judgement, the urim and thummim, [c] Ex 28:6a of plaited crimson, the work of a craftsman; 1 S 14:41r precious stones cut like seals Ex 28:17–21 mounted in gold, the work of a jeweller, as a reminder with their engraved inscriptions of the number of the tribes of Israel; and a golden diadem on his turban, Ex 28:36–39 engraved with the seal of consecration; Ws 18:24+ superb ornamentation, magnificent work, adornment to delight the eye.
There had never been such lovely things before him,
and no one else has ever put them on,
but only his own sons,
and his descendants for all time.
His sacrifices were to be burnt entirely, twice each day and for ever.
Moses consecrated him Lv 8:1–13 and anointed him with holy oil;
and this was an everlasting covenant for him, and for his descendants as long as the heavens endure, [d]

f. lit. 'a reason for conversion'. The Hebr. reading, 'an example of understanding' possibly alludes to the mysteries which Enoch witnessed and revealed to mankind (Book of the Secrets of Enoch). Lat. 'to bring conversion to the nations'.

g. 'heir' following Hebr. (rendering uncertain); 'exchange' Gk; 'reconciliation' Lat. • The prophetic doctrine of the 'remnant' from which salvation will come after disaster (see Is 4:3c) is applied by Ben Sira to the story of Noah.

h. Hebr. 'because of his covenant the Flood ceased'.

i. The Noachic covenants of the priestly code. But the Hebr. only speaks of an 'everlasting sign' (the rainbow, Gn 9:12–13).

j. Hebr. 'no one will inflict a stain on his glory.'

k. On Abraham's faith, see Gn 12:1; 15:6c; 22:1; Rm 4:1–25; Ga 3:6–14.

l. Hebr. 'on the head of Israel', cf. Gn 32:28. A marginal gloss replaces the word 'blessing' (berakah) by 'birthright' (bekorah), see Gn 25:29seq.; 1 Ch 5:1 (where the word 'birthright' in the Hebr. is read 'blessing' by Gk).

45 a. As preserved in this context, these two vv. apply very well to Moses, but there is a possibility that originally they may have referred to Joseph, who is not otherwise mentioned except in the summing up of the eulogy, 49:15. If so, part of the original eulogy must have disappeared.

b. Ben Sira's love of liturgical pomp has already been noted, see 35:1–10; 50:1–21.

c. lit. 'the lots of truth', which is more or less how LXX translates urim and thummim in Ex 28:30. But Hebr. 'the ephod and the belt' seems more appropriate, cf. following line.

d. 'as long as the heavens endure' Hebr.; 'in the days of the sky' Gk.

that he should preside over worship, act as priest, and bless the people in the name of the Lord.
Lv 2:2,9,16 He chose him out of all the living 16 20 to offer sacrifices to the Lord, incense and perfume as a memorial to make expiation for the people.
Lv 16:1a He entrusted him with his commandments, 17 21 committed to him the statutes of the Law[c] for him to teach Jacob his decrees and enlighten Israel on his Law.
Nb 16:1–17:15 Others plotted against him, 18 22
they were jealous of him in the desert, Dathan and Abiram and their men,
Korah and his crew in fury and rage.
The Lord saw it and was displeased, 19 23 his raging fury made an end of them;
he worked miracles on them, 24 consuming them by his flaming fire.
And he added to Aaron's glory, 20 25
he gave him an inheritance;
Nb 18:12–13 he allotted him the offerings of the first-fruits, before all else, as much bread as he could want. 26 Ex 29:28,31seq. Lv 6:9–11; 7:9–10,32–36 Thus they eat the sacrifices of the Lord 21 which he gave to him and his posterity.
But of the people's territory he inherits nothing, 22 27
Nb 18:20 he alone of all the people has no share, Ps 16:5+ 'For I myself am your share and heritage.'

Phinehas

Phinehas son of Eleazar is third in glory 23 28 because of his zeal in the fear of the Lord, Nb 25:7seq. because he stood firm when the people revolted, 29 with a staunch and courageous heart;
and in this way made expiation for Israel.
Nb 25:11–13 Hence a covenant of peace was sealed with him, 24 30 making him governor of both sanctuary[f] and people, and securing to him and his descendants
the high priestly dignity for ever.
There was also a covenant with David 25 31 son of Jesse, of the tribe of Judah, a royal succession by exclusively linear descent,[g]
but the succession of Aaron passes to all his descendants.
May God endow your hearts with wisdom[h] 26 to judge his people uprightly, so that the virtues of your ancestors may never fade,
and their glory may pass to all their descendants!

Joshua

Jos 1:1b 46 Mighty in war was Joshua son of Nun, 1 successor to Moses[a] in the prophetic office, who well deserved his name,[b] and was a great saviour of the chosen people, 2 wreaking vengeance on the enemies who opposed him, and so bringing Israel into its inheritance.
How splendid he was when, arms uplifted, 2 3 he brandished his sword against cities!

43 Who had ever shown such determination as his?
He himself led the battles of the Lord. [c] 54 Was not the sun held back by his hand, Jos 10:13 and one day drawn out into two?
65 He called on the Most High, the Mighty One, [d] while pressing the enemies from all directions, and the great Lord answered him with hard and violent hailstones.
76 He fell on that enemy nation, [e] and at the Descent destroyed all resistance Jos 10:10–15 8 to make the nations acknowledge his warlike prowess and that he was waging war on behalf of the Lord. [f]

Caleb

7 For he was a follower of the Mighty One, 9 in the time of Moses showing his devotion, he and Caleb son of Jephunneh, Nb 14:6–10
by opposing the whole community, by preventing the people from sinning, [g]
and by silencing the mutters of rebellion.
10 8 Hence these two alone were preserved out of six hundred thousand men on the march, 16:10c and brought into their inheritance, into a land where milk and honey flow.
11 9 And the Lord conferred strength on Caleb too, Jos 14:10–11 which stayed by him into old age, so that he could invest the highlands of the country Nb 14:24 which his descendants kept as their inheritance, Jos 14:12–15 12 10 so that every Israelite might see that it is good to follow the Lord.

The Judges

13 11 The Judges too, each when he was called,
all men whose hearts were never disloyal, who never turned their backs on the Lord—14 may their memory be blessed!
15 12 May their bones flourish again [h] from the tomb, and may the names of those illustrious men be worthily borne by their sons!

e. lit. 'the covenants of judgement'. For the translator of Si the 'covenants' always connote the 'statutes'. The high priest evidently had to be an authority on the Law, see Lv 10:11; Dt 33:10.

f. 'of the sanctuary' Hebr.; 'of the holy ones' Gk.

g. Text obscure: lit. 'succession of the king, of the son only from the son', but the following v. seems to indicate this translation.

h. Aspiration addressed to the contemporary descendants of Aaron. The Hebr. for this v. is very different: 'And now bless Yahweh who is good, who crowns you with glory: may he give you wisdom of the heart, so that your good deeds and high achievements may not be forgotten for generations to come.'

46 a. 'Joshua son of Nun'; Gk has 'Jesus son of Nave' conforming to the tradition of LXX, see Jos 1:1. 'successor'; Hebr. 'servant', see Ex 33:11.

b. Yehoshua' (=Joshua) means 'Yahweh-saves'. Hebr. has 'who has fashioned to be in his time a great salvation for his chosen ones'.

c. 'He himself led' Gk 248 and Hebr.; 'for the Lord himself delivered the enemies' Text. rec.

d. This is the translation of Hebr. 'elyon or 'el 'elyon, which occurs fourteen times in Si, from chapter 41 onwards. Throughout the first part of the book, the titles 'God' and 'Yahweh', in Gk Kyrios, occur.

e. Text emended following Lat.; Gk 'he unleashed war against the nation'. Possibly an allusion to the victory over the Amorites at Gibeon, Jos 10:10–15, cf. the 'slope' or the 'descent' of Beth-Horon, Jos 10:10–11.

f. var. (Venetus) 'their war (was against the Lord)'; Lat. 'that it is not easy to struggle against the Lord'.

g. Hebr. 'averting wrath from the assembly'.

h. lit. 'send out (shoots)', cf. 49:10; Is 66:14. Not so much an explicit witness to the doctrine of the resurrection as an aspiration that the judges may have worthy successors in the days of Ben Sira, who was writing shortly before the Maccabaean revolt.

Samuel

Samuel was the beloved of his Lord; 13 16 prophet of the Lord, he instituted the kingdom,[i] 1 S 10:1;16:13 and anointed rulers over his people.
By the Law of the Lord he judged the assembly, 14 17 and the Lord watched over Jacob.
By his loyalty he was recognised as a prophet, 15 18
by his words he was known to be a trustworthy seer.
46:5;47:5 He called on the Lord, the Mighty One, 16 1 S 7:9–10 when his enemies pressed in from all directions, 19 by offering a sucking lamb.
And the Lord thundered from heaven, 17 1 S 7:7–13 and made his voice heard in a rolling peal; 20 he massacred the leaders of the enemy,[j] 18 and all the rulers of the Philistines. 21
Before the time of his everlasting rest 19
1 S 12 he bore witness to the Lord and his anointed, 22
'Of no property, not even a pair of sandals, have I ever deprived a soul.'
Nor did anyone accuse him.
1 S 28:6–25 And, having fallen asleep, he prophesied again, 20 23 warning the king of his end; he spoke from the depths of the earth in prophecy,
to blot out the wickedness of the people.

Nathan

2 S 7:12 47 After him arose Nathan, 1 to prophesy in the time of David.

David

Lv 4:8 As the fat is set apart from the communion sacrifice, 2 so was David chosen out of the Israelites.
1 S 17:34–37 He played with lions as though with kids, 3 and with bears as though with lambs.
1 S 17 While still a boy, did he not slay the giant 4 and take away the people's shame, by hurling a stone from his sling 5 and cutting short the boasting of Goliath?
For he called on the Lord Most High, 5 6 who gave strength to his right arm to put a mighty warrior to death and assert the strength[a] of his own people.
1 S 18:7 Hence they gave him credit for ten thousand, 6 7 and praised him while they blessed the Lord, 2 S 5:1–3 by offering him a crown of glory.
For he destroyed the enemies on every front, 7 he annihilated his foes, the Philistines, 8 and crushed their strength for ever.[b]
In all his activities he gave thanks 8 9 2 S 23:1 to the Holy One Most High in words of glory;[c] he put all his heart into his songs 10 1 Ch 16:4seq. out of love for his Creator.
He placed singers before the altar, 9 11
melodiously to sing;

he gave the feasts their splendour,
the festivals their solemn pomp, causing the Lord's holy name to be praised and the sanctuary to resound from dawn.
The Lord took away his sins, 2 S 12:13, 24–25 making his strength ever greater;
he gave him a royal [d] covenant, 2 S 7:1a and a glorious throne in Israel.

Solomon

A wise son succeeded him, who lived content, thanks to him. [e] Solomon reigned in a time of peace, and God gave him peace all round 1 K 5:17–19 so that he could raise a house to his name 1 K 6 and prepare an everlasting sanctuary.
How wise you were despite your youth, 1 K 3:4–28; 5:9–14 like a river, brimming over with intelligence!
Your mind ranged the earth,
you filled it with mysterious sayings.
Your name reached the distant islands, and you were loved for your peace. [f]
Your songs, your proverbs, your sayings and your answers [g] were the wonder of the world. 1 K 10:1–10
In the name of the Lord God, [h] of him who is called the God of Israel, you amassed gold like so much tin, 1 K 10:11seq.,27 and made silver as common as lead.
You abandoned your body to women, 1 K 11:1–13 you became the slave of your appetites.
You stained your honour,
you profaned your stock,
so bringing retribution on your children and affliction for your folly: [i] the empire split in two, 1 K 12 from Ephraim arose a rebel kingdom.
But the Lord never goes back on his mercy, 2 S 7:1a; Ps 89:30–37 never cancels any of his words, will neither deny offspring to his elect nor stamp out the line of the man who loved him.
And hence, he has granted a remnant to Jacob Is 4:3c and to David a root sprung from him.

i. Hebr. 'Beloved by the people and pleasing to his Creator was he who was dedicated from his mother's womb, a nazirite of Yahweh in the prophetic function. Samuel judge and priest; by the word of Yahweh he instituted the kingdom.'

j. 'of the enemy' Hebr.; 'of Tyre' Gk (confusion between tzar and tzor).

47 a. lit. 'the horn', common biblical metaphor (especially in the Psalms) to express physical or moral power.

b. Hebr. 'Therefore the girls replied to him and surnamed him with the name of "Ten Thousand". When he had assumed the crown, he fought and on all fronts subdued the enemy. He set up towns among the Philistines and, to this very day, he broke their horn.'

c. The Psalms, see 2 S 23:1.

d. 'royal' Gk 248, Hebr., Lat.; 'of kings' Text. rec.

e. Solomon benefited from the temporal achievements of David; but, on the religious level, it is also to be understood that God favoured Solomon for the sake of David, cf. vv. 20,22; 1 K 11:12.

f. Allusion to the name of Solomon ('the peaceful one'), as v. 13.

g. 'Your songs': Sg. On the wisdom and literary activity of Solomon, see 1 K 5:9–14. For the 'answers', see 1 K 10:1–10 (the Queen of Sheba).

h. Hebr. 'You were called by the glorious name invoked on Israel' perhaps alludes to the name given to Solomon at his birth: Jedidiah 'beloved-of-Yahweh', 2 S 12:25.

i. Hebr. 'affliction on your bed', i.e. your posterity.

Rehoboam

1 K 12 Solomon rested with his ancestors, 23 26 leaving one of his stock as his successor, 27 the stupidest member of the nation, 28 brainless Rehoboam, who drove the people to rebel.[j]

Jeroboam

1 K 12:26–33 Next, Jeroboam son of Nebat, who made Israel sin, 24 29 and set Ephraim on the way of evil;
1 K 13:33–34 from then on their sins multiplied so excessively 2 K 17:21–23 as to drive them out of their country; 30 for they tried out every kind of wickedness, 25 31 until vengeance overtook them.

Elijah

48 Then the prophet Elijah arose like a fire, 1 his word flaring like a torch.
1 K 17:1;18:2 It was he who brought famine on them 2
1 K 19:10,14 and decimated them in his zeal.
By the word of the Lord he shut up the heavens, 3 1 K 18:36seq. three times also he brought down fire.
2 K 1:10,12
How glorious you were in your miracles, Elijah! 4
Has anyone reason to boast as you have?—
1 K 17:17–24 rousing a corpse from death, 5 from Sheol, by the word of the Most High;
1 K 21:17–24 dragging kings down to destruction, 6
2 K 1:16 and high dignitaries from their beds;
1 K 19:9–18 hearing a rebuke[a] on Sinai 7 and decrees of punishment on Horeb; anointing kings as avengers, 8 and prophets to succeed you;
2 K 2:1–11 taken up in the whirlwind of fire, 9
in a chariot with fiery horses; designated in the prophecies of doom 10
to allay God's wrath before the fury breaks, Ml 3:24 to turn the hearts of fathers towards their children,
Lk 1:17 and to restore the tribes of Jacob.
2 K 2: 10–12 Blessed, those who will see you, 11 1 Th 4:5 and those who have fallen asleep in love; for we too shall certainly have life.[b] 12

Elisha

Such was Elijah, who was enveloped in a whirlwind; 12 13 2 K 2:9seq. and Elisha was filled with his spirit; throughout his life no ruler could shake him,
and no one could subdue him.
No task was too hard for him, 13 14 and even in death his body prophesied.[c]
In his lifetime he performed wonders, 14 15 and in death his works were marvellous.

Infidelity and punishment

Despite all this the people did not repent, 15 16 nor did they give up their sins, until they were herded out of their country — 2 K 18:11–12 and scattered all over the earth; 17 16 only a few of the people were left, with a ruler of the House of David.

18 Some of them did what pleased the Lord, others piled sin on sin.

Hezekiah

19 17 Hezekiah fortified his city — 2 K 20:20k and laid on a water-supply inside it; — 2 Ch 32:5,30 with iron he tunnelled through the rock — Is 22:11 and constructed storage-tanks.
20 18 In his days Sennacherib invaded — 2 K 18:13h; and sent Rabshakeh;[d] — 19:35+
he lifted his hand against Zion — Is 36–37 and boasted loudly in his arrogance.
21 19 Then their hearts and hands trembled, they felt the pangs of a woman in labour, 22 20 but they called on the merciful Lord, stretching out their hands towards him.
Swiftly the Holy One heard them from heaven 23 and delivered them by the agency of Isaiah; 24 21 he struck the camp of the Assyrians and his Angel annihilated them.

Isaiah

25 22 For Hezekiah did what is pleasing to the Lord — 2 K 18:3
and was steadfast[e] in the ways of David his father, enjoined on him by the prophet Isaiah,
a great man trustworthy in his vision.
26 23 In his days the sun moved back; — 2 K 20:4–11 he prolonged the life of the king. — Is 38:4–8 27 24 In the power of the spirit he saw the last things, he comforted the mourners of Zion, 28 25 he revealed the future to the end of time, and hidden things long before they happened.[f]

Josiah

1 49 The memory of Josiah is like blended incense prepared by the perfumer's art; 2 it is as sweet as honey to all mouths, and like music at a wine feast.
3 2 He took the right course, of converting the people,[a] — 2 K 22–23
he rooted out the iniquitous abominations,

j. Hebr. 'wide of folly, short of intelligence'. There may be a play on words here, using the constituent syllables of the name Rehoboam, rahab 'wide' and 'am 'people'. The Gk and Hebr. readings seem each to have preserved one element of this etymology.

48 a. The 'rebuke' is perhaps implicit in the vision of 1 K 19:9–14.

b. Text uncertain. Having eulogised the prophet, the author asserts that those who will see Elijah when he returns, as also those who have died 'in love' (in the love of God?), will live for ever. This is a clear expression of the hope of immortality. The Hebr., however, unfortunately defective here ('blessed he who sees you') is perhaps only alluding to Elisha who saw Elijah disappear, 2 K 2:10,12. If so, the v. merely marks a transition to the next section, vv. 12–14.

c. After dying the prophet raised a dead man to life, 2 K 13:20–21. But the text is overloaded. Hebr. 'beneath him his body was created'.

d. Ben Sira's translator has made a proper name out of rab shakeh (the 'chief cupbearer'). • Gk here adds 'and departed'.

e. Play on the name Hezekiah ('Yahweh-makes-strong').

f. Possibly the prophecies on the end of the Exile, Is 40–55, or those of ch. 24–27, or of ch. 61.

49 a. Hebr. 'he was afflicted by our perversion'.

he set his heart on the Lord, 3 4 in godless times he upheld the cause of religion.

The last kings and prophets

Apart from David, Hezekiah and Josiah, 4 5 they all heaped wrong on wrong, they abandoned the Law of the Most High: 6
the kings of Judah disappeared; for they handed their power over to others [b] 5 7 and their honour to a foreign nation.
Lm 1:4;2:3 The holy, chosen city was burnt down, 6 8 her streets were left deserted, as Jeremiah had predicted; [c] for they had ill-treated him, 7 9 Jr 1:5 though consecrated a prophet in his mother's womb, Jr 1:10 to tear up and afflict and destroy,
but also to build up and to plant.
Ezk 1–3;9–10 Ezekiel saw a vision of glory 8 10 which God showed to him above the chariot of the great winged creatures, for he mentioned the enemies in the downpour [d] 9 11
to the advantage of those who follow the right way.
As for the twelve prophets, [e] 10 46:12h may their bones flower again from the tomb, since they have comforted Jacob 12 and redeemed him in faith and hope.

Zerubbabel and Joshua

How shall we extol Zerubbabel? 11 13
Hg 2:23 He was like a signet ring on the right hand, so too was Joshua son of Jozadak; 12 14 they who in their days built the Temple and raised a sanctuary sacred to the Lord, destined to everlasting glory.

Nehemiah

Great too is the memory of Nehemiah, 13 15 who rebuilt our walls which lay in ruins, erected the bolted gates and rebuilt our houses.

Retrospect

44:16 No one else has ever been created on earth to equal Enoch, 14 16 for he was taken up from earth.
And no one else ever born has been like Joseph, 15 17
the leader of his brothers, the prop of his people;
Gn 50:25–26 his bones received a visitation. 18
Shem and Seth were the most honoured of men, 16 19 but above every living creature is Adam. [f]

Simon the high priest

50 It was the High Priest Simon son of Onias [a] 1 who repaired the Temple during his lifetime and in his day fortified the sanctuary.
He laid the foundations of double depth, 2
the high buttresses of the Temple precincts. [b]

3 In his day the pool was excavated, [c] a reservoir as huge as the sea.
4 Anxious to save the people from ruin, he fortified the city against siege.
5 How splendid he was with the people thronging round him, when he emerged from the curtained shrine, [d] Lv 16 6 like the morning star among the clouds, Lv 16:13 like the moon at the full, [e] Rv 2:28+ 7 like the sun shining on the Temple of the Most High, [f]
8 like the rainbow gleaming against brilliant clouds, 8 like a rose in springtime, [g]
like a lily by a spring,
like a branch of the incense tree in summer, 9 9 like fire and incense in the censer, [h] 10 like a massive golden vessel encrusted with every kind of precious stone, 11 10 like an olive tree loaded with fruit, like a cypress soaring to the clouds; 11 when he took his ceremonial robe and put on his magnificent ornaments, 12 when he went up to the holy altar and filled the sanctuary precincts with his grandeur; 13 12 when he received the portions from the hands of the priests, himself standing by the altar hearth, crowned with the circle of his brothers,
as a cedar of Lebanon is by its foliage, 14 as though surrounded by the trunks of palm trees.
13 When all the sons of Aaron in their glory, 15 with the offerings of the Lord in their hands, stood before the whole assembly of Israel, 14 while he completed the rites at the altars, nobly presenting the offerings to the Almighty, Most High!
16 15 He would reach out his hand to the cup [i]
and pour a libation of wine, 17 pouring it at the foot of the altar,
a fragrance pleasing to the Most High, King of All, 18 16 then the sons of Aaron would shout 45:9 and blow their metal trumpets, Nb 20:2–10 making a mighty sound ring out as a reminder before the Most High; 19 17 and immediately the people all together would fall on their faces to the ground,

b. Either by relying on foreign alliances or, more simply, by provoking the exile as punishment for their sins, cf. Hebr. 'He (God) handed over', instead of 'they handed over'.

c. lit. 'by the hand of Jeremiah'.

d. Possibly an allusion to the prophecy against Gog, Ezk 38–39 (see especially 38:22), but the text is uncertain and the mention of the 'enemies' may be due to confusion between Hebr. 'iyob ('Job') and 'oyeb ('enemy'). Hebr. [8] 'Ezekiel saw a vision, he revealed the features of the chariot; [9] and he also mentioned Job who accomplished all the straight ways,' cf. Ezk 14:14,20.

e. The twelve Minor Prophets who, according to the order of the Hebrew canon, follow the three major ones. As regards the prophetic books, Ben Sira's Bible was already complete.

f. After 'living', 'in the creation' has been omitted.

50 a. The reference is to Simon II, son of Onias III, about 220–195.

b. The 'double depth' and the 'high buttresses' cannot be identified with any certainty. Hebr. 'In his time were built the wall and the dwelling-corners at the king's palace.' No other biblical text mentions these improvements, but Josephus states that Antiochus III (223–187) gave money for the upkeep of the Temple, which would seem to confirm what Ben Sira says.

c. 'was excavated' Hebr.; 'was reduced' Gk.

d. lit. 'from the house of the curtain', i.e. the Debir or Holy of Holies, separated from the Hekal by a curtain, Ex 36:35–38. Here the author is describing the ceremonies of the day of Expiation, Lv 16.

e. Hebr. adds 'on feast days'.

f. 'on the Temple of the Most High'; Hebr. 'on the royal palace'.

g. Hebr. 'like the flower on the bough at festal times'.

h. 'in the censer'; Hebr. var. 'for the oblation'.

i. Reference to a libation-rite not described in Lv. Cf. Ex 29:12; Lv 8:15, where blood is used.

in adoration of their Lord,
the Almighty, God Most High, and with the cantors chanting their hymns of praise. 18 20
Sweet was the melody of all these voices, as the people pleaded with the Lord Most High 19 21 and prayed in the presence of the Merciful, until the service[j] of the Lord was completed and the ceremony at an end.
Lv 9:22 Then he would come down and raise his hands 20 22 over the whole assembly of the Israelites, Nb 6:23–27 to give them the Lord's blessing from his lips, being privileged to pronounce his name;[k]
and once again the people would bow low 21 23 to receive the blessing of the Most High.

Exhortation

And now bless the God of all things,[l] 22 24
the doer of great deeds everywhere, who has exalted our days from the womb
and has acted mercifully towards us.
May he grant us cheerful hearts 23 25 and bring peace in our time,
in Israel for ages on ages.
May his mercy be faithfully with us, 24 26 may he redeem us in our own times![m]

Pr 30:15e Numerical proverb

There are two nations that my soul detests, 25 27 the third is not a nation at all:
the inhabitants of Mount Seir,[n] the Philistines, 26 28 and the stupid people living at Shechem.[o]

Conclusion

Instruction in wisdom and knowledge 27 29 is what has been written in this book by Jesus son of Sira Eleazar of Jerusalem,[p] who has poured a rain of wisdom from his heart.
Blessed is he who devotes his time to these 28 30 and grows wise by taking them to heart!
If he practises them he will be strong enough for anything, 29 31 since the light of the Lord is his path.[q]

APPENDICES

Hymn of thanksgiving

51 I shall give thanks to you, Lord and King, 1 and praise you, God my Saviour, I give thanks to your name; 2
for you have been my guard and support 2
Ex 15:2 and redeemed my body from destruction,[a] 3 Ps 120:2 from the snare of the lying tongue, from lips that fabricate falsehood;
in the presence of my assailants, you were on my side;
you have been my support, you have redeemed me,

4 3 true to your abounding kindness — Ex 34:6 Ps 103:8
—and the greatness of your name—you liberated me from the fangs of those seeking to devour me, — Ps 35:4 5 from the clutches of those seeking my life, from the many ordeals which I have endured, 6 4 from the stifling heat which hemmed me in,
from the heart of a fire which I had not kindled, 5 from deep in the belly of Sheol, — Nb 16:33f
6 treacherous denunciations to the king.
8 My soul has been close to death, — Ps 88:3
my life had gone down to the brink of Sheol.
10 7 I was completely surrounded, there was no one to help me;
I looked for someone to help me, there was no one.
11 8 Then I remembered your mercy, Lord, and your deeds from earliest times, 12 how you deliver those who wait for you patiently, and save them from the clutches of their enemies.
13 9 And I sent up my plea from the earth, [b]
I begged to be delivered from death.
14 10 I called on the Lord, the father of my Lord, [c]
'Do not desert me in the days of ordeal, in the days of the proud, when we are helpless.
15 I shall praise your name unceasingly and gratefully sing its praises.'
11 And my plea was heard, 16 for you saved me from destruction, you delivered me from that time of evil.
17 12 And therefore I shall thank you and praise you, and bless the name of the Lord. [d]

Poem on the quest for wisdom [e] in my prayers I asked outright for wisdom.

j. 'service' Hebr.; 'adornment' Gk.

k. The Day of Expiation was the only occasion on which the sacrosanct name could be pronounced over the people, as a form of blessing.

l. Hebr. 'Yahweh, God of Israel'.

m. Hebr. 'May his mercy be faithfully with Simon, may he fulfil in him the covenant of Phinehas, may it not be withdrawn from him or from his posterity as long as the heavens endure.'

n. 'Seir' Hebr., Lat.; 'Samaria' Gk.

o. The Samaritans. Hence the reading 'Seir', i.e. the Edomites, in the previous line, and not 'Samaria' which would be repetitious.

p. Hebr. 'Wise instruction and well-thought-out proverbs of Simeon, son of Jesus son of Eleazar, son of Sira.'

q. Hebr. 'for the fear of Yahweh is life'. • Gk 248 adds 'and to the devout he gives wisdom. Blessed be the Lord for ever. Amen. Amen.'

51 a. Hebr. 'Stronghold of my life, for you have delivered my soul from death, you have saved my flesh from the pit, you have kept my foot from Sheol, you have protected me from the slander of the people . . .'

b. Hebr. 'and I prayed from the gates of Sheol'

c. This expression may suggest a Christian interpretation intruded into the Gk text; possibly, however, it is simply an imaginative translation of a corrupt text. But cf. Ps 2:7; 110:1 (LXX). Hebr. 'I proclaimed: Yahweh, you are my father, for you are the champion of my salvation.'

d. The Hebr. here inserts a psalm of praise which resembles Ps 136 and the shemoneh 'esreh (the 'eighteen' prayers recited daily by Jews), cf. also Si 36:1–17:

'Praise Yahweh, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the God of praise, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the keeper of Israel, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the Creator of the universe, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who redeems Israel, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who gathers the dispersed of Israel, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who built his city and his Temple, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who makes the horn of the House of David flourish, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who has chosen the children of Zadok as his priests, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the buckler of Abraham, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the rock of Israel, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the Mighty One of Jacob, for his love is everlasting.
Praise him who has chosen Zion, for his love is everlasting.
Praise the king of kings of kings, for his love is everlasting.
He raises the horn of his people and the praise of all his faithful, the sons of Israel, the people close to him.
Alleluia.'

e. In Hebr. this is an alphabetical poem, see Pr 31:10f, but the text is poorly preserved.

Outside the sanctuary I would pray for her, 14 19

From her blossoming to the ripening of her grape 15 my heart has taken its delight in her. 20

Thanks to her I have advanced; 17 glory be to him who has given me wisdom![f] 23
For I was determined to put her into practice, 18 24 have earnestly pursued the good, and shall not be put to shame.[g]
My soul has fought to possess her, 19 25
I have been scrupulous in keeping the Law;
I have stretched out my hands to heaven 26

I have now acquired a good possession.
In reward the Lord has given me a tongue 22 30 take your place in my school. 32

Why complain about lacking these things 24
Am 8:11 when your souls are so thirsty for them?
I have opened my mouth, I have said: 25 33
Pr 4:5,7 'Buy her without money, 34

Pr 16:16 Buy instruction with a large sum of silver,[k] 28
Mt 13:44–46 thanks to her you will gain much gold.
May your souls rejoice in the mercy of the Lord, 29 37 may you never be ashamed of praising him.
Do your work before the appointed time 30 38 and at the appointed time he will give you your reward.[l]

h. Hebr. 'My soul has embraced her and I have not turned my face away from her. My hand opened her gates, I . . . and I gazed at her.'

i. Hebr. 'and so I shall not desert her'.

j. Hebr. lit. 'the burden' instead of 'instruction', adding at the end 'and he who applies himself to this, will find her.'

k. This v. is in apparent contradiction with v. 25, and the sages took pride in giving free instruction.

l. Hebr. adds 'Blessed be Yahweh for ever, and may his name be praised from generation to generation.'

m. Hebr. 'Thus far the words of Simeon son of Jesus called Ben Sira. Wisdom of Simeon son of Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sira. May the name of Yahweh be blessed from now and for ever.'

THE PROPHETS

INTRODUCTION TO
THE PROPHETS

§1 The Hebrew Bible groups the Books of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the collection of the Twelve Minor prophets under the title of 'Later Prophets'; this it puts after the Joshua-Kings group which it entitles 'Earlier Prophets'. The Greek Bible puts the prophetic books after the Psalms and the Wisdom Books (the 'Writings' or 'Hagiographa') arranging them differently from the Hebrew and adding to them Lamentations and Daniel (which the Hebrew Bible places towards the end of its catalogue); it also contains additional material not written, or not preserved, in Hebrew, including the Book of Baruch (after Jeremiah), the Letter of Jeremiah (after Lamentations), and the additions to the Book of Daniel. In the Latin Church the Vulgate substantially adopted this arrangement but followed the Hebrew in putting the minor after the four major prophets, and appended the Letter of Jeremiah to the Book of Baruch which was placed after Lamentations.

§2 The nature of prophecy

To a greater or lesser degree and in varying forms, the great religions of antiquity always had their 'inspired' speakers who claimed to pronounce in the name of the god. This was particularly true of Israel's neighbours: a case of prophetic ecstasy is reported at Byblos in the ninth century BC, seers and prophets are attested at Hama on the Orontes in the eighth century, and several times at Mari on the Euphrates in the eighteenth century BC. In form and content, their messages, addressed to the king, resemble those of the earliest prophets of Israel mentioned in the Bible, in which we also read of the seer Balaam, summoned from Aram by the king of Moab, Nb 22–24, and of the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal summoned by Jezebel, a native of Tyre, and discomfited by Elijah on Mt Carmel, 1 K 18:19–40; and the Bible goes on to speak of the four hundred prophets consulted by Ahab, 1 K 22:5–12. Like Jezebel's prophets, these were a group of wild ecstatics, though they claimed to speak in the name of Yahweh. The claim was false, but evidently contemporary Yahwism recognised that such an institution was not in itself illegitimate. We find groups of 'inspired' men in company with Samuel, 1 S 10:5; 19:20, and in the time of Elijah, 1 K 18:4, prophetic confraternities were in touch with Elisha, 2 K 2:3–18; 4:38seq.; 6:1seq.; 9:1; this is the last we hear of them save for the allusion in Am 7:14. Under the influence of music, 1 S 10:5, they would either go into a collective ecstasy that also affected their audience, 1 S 10:10; 19:20–24, or perform symbolic mimes, 1 K 22:11.

Elisha himself on one occasion resorted to music before prophesying, 2 K 3:15. More common with the prophets was the symbolic action; thus Ahijah of Shiloh, 1 K 11:29seq., but also Isaiah, Is 20:2–4, frequently Jeremiah, Jr 13:1seq.; 19:1seq.; 27:2seq., notably Ezekiel, 4:1–5:4; 12:17,18; 21:23seq.; 37:15seq. During these performances, or on other occasions, their behaviour was at times extravagant and their psychological states abnormal, but these things were only incidental to the proper mission of those prophets whose actions and words the Bible preserves for us. In this they are sharply distinguished from the ecstatics of the ancient prophetic confraternities.

Nevertheless, they are called by the same name, nabi. Doubtless the derived verb sometimes means 'to be beside oneself', 1 S 18:10 and elsewhere, from the way in which certain 'prophets' behaved, but this secondary use does not affect the original meaning of the noun itself. It is more probable that this noun is connected with a root that means 'to call', 'to proclaim'. The nabi is therefore either 'he who is called' or 'he who proclaims'; these two meanings together describe the essence of prophecy in Israel. The prophet is the bearer and interpreter of the word of God. This is succinctly expressed in two parallel passages: in Ex 4:15–16, Aaron is the interpreter of Moses, Aaron the 'mouth' of Moses, Moses 'the god who inspired him'; in Ex 7:1, Moses is to be 'a god for Pharaoh', and Aaron his 'prophet' (nabi). We are reminded of the words of Yahweh to Jeremiah, 'I have put my words into your mouth', Jr 1:9. The prophets are aware that their message is from God, introducing it with the words 'Yahweh declares', 'Word of Yahweh', 'Prophecy of Yahweh'.

This word compels them and they must speak it, 'The Lord Yahweh has spoken: who will not prophesy?' Amos cries, Am 3:8, and Jeremiah struggles vainly in its grip, Jr 20:7–10.

At some point in their lives each received an irresistible divine call, Am 7:15; Is 6, see especially Jr 1:4–10, and was chosen as God's envoy, Is 6:8; the price of attempting to elude this vocation is stated in the early part of the story of Jonah. These men were sent to proclaim God's demands and to be 'signs' of this divine will in their own persons. For it is not only the words they speak and the actions they perform that tell of God, but their whole lives. Hosea's unhappy marriage is a symbol, Ho 1–3; Isaiah walks naked for a portent, Is 20:3, and he with his children are 'signs and portents', Is 8:18; the life of Jeremiah is itself a lesson, Jr 16; Ezekiel is 'a sign for the House of Israel' when he carries out the strange commands of God, Ezk 4:3; 12:6,11; 24:24.

The divine message comes to them in various ways: by vision as in Is 6, Ezk 1,2,8, Dn 8–12, Zc 1–6 (but rarely by night, see Nb 12:6; cf. Dn 7; Zc 1:8seq.), by hearing, but most often by internal inspiration (in this sense we are usually to understand the formulae: 'The word of Yahweh came to me', 'Word of Yahweh to . . .'), sometimes unexpectedly, sometimes occasioned by some quite ordinary circumstance like the sight of an almond branch, Jr 1:11, of two baskets of figs, Jr 24, or a visit to the potter's workshop, Jr 18:1–4. Equally various are the methods the prophets use to convey their message: lyrical fragments, prose narratives, in parable or direct speech, curt oracular style or the various literary forms of exhortation, diatribe, sermon, proverb, formal psalms, love songs, satire, funeral lament, etc.

This variety in both reception and transmission of the divine message is in large part a result of the individual temperament and natural talents of each prophet. Yet beneath this variety there is something all have in common: the genuine prophet is fully aware that he is a mouthpiece, no more; his words, though his own, are not his own. He has no doubt that the word of God has come to him and that he must pass it on to others. The source of this conviction is a mysterious, we may call it mystical, experience of a direct contact with God. As we have said, the divine seizure often provokes 'abnormal' manifestations but, as with the great mystics, these are incidental. It is important to notice that the prophet, like the mystic, is raised to a 'supranormal' psychological state by this divine intervention. To deny this would be to reduce the prophet to the rank of poet or to credit him with the illusions of misguided visionaries.

§3 The prophet rarely addresses his message to a single person, Is 22:15seq., or, if he does so, it is with others in view, Jr 20:6; Am 7:17. The king, responsible for the whole nation, is an exception. Thus Nathan in the case of David, Elijah in that of Ahab, Isaiah of Ahaz and Hezekiah, Jeremiah of Zedekiah; after the return from exile the high priest, leader of the community, is also the recipient of the prophetic message, Zc 3. But, these exceptions apart, what distinguishes the great prophets whose works have been preserved to us from their predecessors in Israel and analogous figures in the Middle East, is that their message is addressed to the whole nation. In every description of a prophet's call, it is made clear that his mission is to the nation, Is 6:9; Ezk 2:3; Am 7:15, or, in the case of Jeremiah, to all the nations.

The prophet's message relates to both present and future. His mission is to the men of his own time; to them he communicates the will of God. But in so far as he declares the mind of God he stands beyond time, and his preaching is supported and continued by the fulfilment of the predictions he makes. At times he foretells some event in the near future, the realisation of which will vindicate his words and his divine mission, 1 S 10:1seq.; Is 7:14; Jr 28:15seq.; 44:29–30; at times he tells of punishment to come in retribution for the crimes against which he thunders, or of prosperity in reward for the repentance for which he pleads. Prophets of the later period look still further ahead to the final triumph of God, though here too there is always a lesson for the present. Since the prophet, however, is an instrument of God and no more, his message may exceed the bounds of its historical context and even of his own appreciation; the message may remain veiled in mystery until the future explains its significance by fulfilling it.

There are two aspects to the message: threat and consolation. Jeremiah was sent 'to uproot and to knock down, to build up and to plant'. And indeed the message often makes bitter hearing, a tissue of menaces and reproaches, so much so that severity comes to be a sign that a prophet is genuine, Jr 28:8–9, see also 1 K 22:8; Jr 26:16–19. This is because the true prophet is haunted by the idea of sin, the obstacle to the will of God. The prospects of salvation, however, are never forgotten. The Book of Consolation, Is 40–55, is a peak of prophecy; nor is there any justification for questioning the authenticity of passages in the older prophets which speak of future happiness, passages such as we find in Ho 2:16–25; 11:8–11; 14:2–9; Am 9:8–15. In God's dealings with his people, pardon and punishment are complementary.

Though the prophet is sent to the people of Israel, his vision, like the strong arm of God which is his theme, reaches more distant horizons. In the major prophets there are groups of proclamations against the nations, Is 13–23; Jr 46–51; Ezk 25–32; the Book of Amos opens with sentence pronounced on Israel's neighbours; Obadiah delivers a proclamation against Edom; Nahum is one long proclamation against Nineveh.

The prophet himself knows that he speaks in God's name, but what of his hearers? Spurious prophets appear more than once in the Bible. Such prophets may be sincere but deluded, or they may be deliberate frauds; they are not distinguished from the true prophet by their behaviour. They succeed in duping the people, and the genuine prophets are forced to denounce them: thus Micaiah ben Imlah denounces the prophets of Ahab, 1 K 22:8seq., Jeremiah attacks Hananiah, Jr 28, and all spurious prophets in general, Jr 23, Ezekiel condemns prophets and prophetesses in Israel, Ezk 13. How can one know if a message is from God? How recognise the genuine prophet? The Old Testament offers two criteria: the fulfilment of a prophecy, Dt 18:22; Jr 28:9, and see 1 S 10:1seq.; Is 7:14; Jr 28:15seq.; 44:29–30, but also, and of more importance, the agreement of the prophet's teaching with Yahwistic doctrine, Dt 13:1–6; Jr 23:22.

The texts we have quoted from Deuteronomy show that prophecy was an officially recognised institution of Israelite religion. The prophets were on occasion associated with the priests, Jr 8:1; 23:11; 26:7seq.; Zc 7:3, and Jeremiah tells us that in the Temple at Jerusalem there was a room 'of Ben-Johanan, a man of God', probably a prophet. From these indications and from similarities between some prophetic messages and liturgical compositions, certain recent scholars have inferred that the prophets, even the most notable among them, were attached to the Temple and played an official part in its worship. This hypothesis goes far beyond the evidence of the texts on which it is built; these are sufficiently explained by some looser connection between the prophets and the main centres of Israelite worship, as also by the influence of the liturgy on certain of the prophets' proclamations, in particular those of Habakkuk, Zechariah and Joel.

The nature of the prophetic function has to be deduced from a variety of facts and of texts, but from these emerges this fundamental idea: the prophet is one who has an immediate experience of God; he is one to whom the holiness and will of God have been revealed; he contemplates present and future through the eyes of God; he is sent to remind men of their duty to God and to bring them back to obedience and love. Prophecy thus understood, and despite the similarities which may be traced with phenomena characteristic of other religions and among neighbouring peoples, is a thing peculiar to Israel, a providential instrument of God for the guidance of his chosen people.

Given this definition of the prophet's nature and function, it is not surprising that Moses is accounted the father of them all, Dt 18:5,18, and their most distinguished representative, Nb 12:6–8; Dt 34:10–12, for he spoke with God face to face and conveyed his Law to the chosen people. His privileges did not die with him and 'the spirit dwells' in Joshua, his successor, Nb 27:18, cf. Dt 34:9. In the period of the Judges we meet Deborah the prophetess, Jg 4–5, and the unnamed prophet of Jg 6:8, and later Samuel himself, prophet and seer, 1 S 3:20; 9:9; cf. 2 Ch 35:18. Subsequently the prophetic spirit is found diffused among the groups of visionaries whose eccentric behaviour has already been mentioned, 1 S 10:5; 19:20, after whom come the more sober brotherhoods, the 'sons of the prophets', 2 K 2; these brotherhoods disappear later, but even after the return from exile we still hear of 'prophets' spoken of in the plural, Zc 7:3. Nothing is known of the influence of these brotherhoods on the religious life of the nation, but other prophets appear, not of their number, whose influence is considerable: thus Gad, prophet of David, 1 S 22:5; 2 S 24:11, and Nathan, under the same king, 2 S 7:2seq.; 12:1seq.; 1 K 1:11seq.; so also Ahijah under Jeroboam, 1 K 11:29seq.; 14:2seq., Jehu son of Hanani under Baasha, 1 K 16:7, Elijah and Elisha under Ahab and his successors, 1 K 17 to 2 K 13 passim, Jonah under Jeroboam II, 2 K 14:25, the prophetess Huldah under Josiah, 2 K 22:14seq., Uriah under Jehoiakim, Jr 26:20. To this list the Books of Chronicles add Shemaiah under Rehoboam, 2 Ch 12:5seq., Iddo under Rehoboam and under Abijah, 2 Ch 12:15; 13:22, Azariah under Asa, 2 Ch 15:1seq., Oded under Ahaz, 2 Ch 28:9seq., and a few others whose names are not given.

Most of these prophets are barely more than just mentioned, but we know a little more about a few of them. Nathan is the prophet who assures David of the permanence of his divinely favoured dynasty, the first link in the increasingly precise chain of prophecies on the Messiah, son of David, 2 S 7:1–17. This same prophet reproves David for his adultery with Bathsheba but, on his repentance, assures him of God's forgiveness, 2 S 12:1–25. Elijah and Elisha we know relatively well, thanks to the narratives in the Books of Kings. Elijah appears as the champion of the true God at a time when imported gentile cults are threatening the religion of Yahweh; on the summit of Carmel he wins a signal victory over the prophets of Baal, 1 K 18. His meeting with God at Horeb, the mountain of the covenant, shows how closely his own work is related to that of Moses, 1 K 19. He is the champion of the true faith primarily but also of sound morals; he sternly pronounces God's judgement on Ahab who has murdered Naboth for the sake of his vineyard, 1 K 21. An aura surrounds this figure whose disappearance is so mysteriously described, 2 K 2:1–18, and in Jewish tradition Elijah has grown more important with the passage of time. Unlike him, Elisha the hermit-prophet, plays a prominent part in contemporary affairs: in the Moabite war, 2 K 3, in the wars against the Syrians, 2 K 6–7, in Hazael's usurpation at Damascus, 2 K 8:7–15, and Jehu's usurpation in Israel, 2 K 9:1–3. He is consulted by the powerful, by Joash of Israel, 2 K 13:14–19, Ben-Hadad of Damascus, 2 K 8:7–8, Naaman the Syrian, 2 K 5. He is also connected with the 'brotherhoods of prophets', who related marvellous tales about him, 2 K 4:1–7,38–44; 6:1–7.

Not unnaturally most of our information is about the prophets in the scriptural canon. Each of these will be treated separately when the books bearing their names are discussed; suffice it here to note their place in the prophetic movement and to point out in what their originality consisted with regard to the previous period. The prophets intervene in those times of crisis preceding or accompanying the major turning-points of the nation's history: the threat of Assyria and the ruin of the Northern Kingdom, the ruin of the Kingdom of Judah and the departure for exile, the end of the exile and the return. Their message is not for the king but for the people, and since their message has this general import it is written down and thus continues to exert a general influence. The ministry of the first of these prophets, Amos, is dated in the mid-eighth century, about fifty years after the death of Elisha, and the great age of prophecy (less than two centuries) continues until the Exile; the period is dominated by the two great figures of Isaiah and Jeremiah, though to the same epoch belong Hosea, Micah, Nahum, Zephaniah and Habakkuk. The end of the ministry of Jeremiah coincides with the beginning of that of Ezekiel, the prophet of the Exile. But with Ezekiel the atmosphere changes: spontaneity and verve decline, the visions are on the grand scale and very involved, their description is meticulous, and interest in the 'final days' increases; in short, apocalyptic literary form is beginning to make its appearance. In this period, even so, the great Isaian tradition is continued, with elaborations, in Is 40–55 (the 'Book of Consolation'). Haggai and Zechariah, the prophets of the Return, are more restricted in their outlook: they are entirely concerned with the rebuilding of the Temple. After these comes Malachi to point out the defects of the newly established community. The short Book of Jonah follows; adapting the ancient and sacred texts to teach its new lesson, it heralds the literary form called 'midrash'. In Joel and in the second part of Zechariah we re-encounter the apocalyptic literary fashion set by Ezekiel; so too in Daniel, where images of past and future come together in one great vision that transcends time, a vision of the destruction of evil and of the coming of the kingdom of God. At this point, it seems, the high inspiration of the prophets is exhausted and we begin to hear of the 'prophets of old', Dn 9:6,10, and cf., even before, Zc 7:7,12, while Zc 13:2–6 foresees the end of a prophetic office discredited by prophets who have proved spurious. But an outpouring of the Spirit is promised for messianic times in Jl 3:1–5, and the promise is fulfilled at Pentecost, see Ac 2:16seq.; this was the true beginning of the new age initiated by the preaching of the Baptist, the last of the prophets of the old Law, 'a prophet and more than a prophet', Mt 11:9; Lk 7:26.

§5 The teaching of the prophets

The prophets played an important part in the religious development of Israel. They strove to keep the nation faithful to the true religion of Yahweh but, additionally, were the instruments especially chosen by God to further divine revelation. In this multiple activity each prophet made his own characteristic contribution to the doctrinal structure. These contributions were complementary, continuing to assert the three dominant features of Old Testament theology: monotheism, morality and future salvation.

Monotheism: Israel took many centuries to reach a philosophical definition of monotheism: the affirmation of the existence of one unique God, the denial of the existence of any other god. For many centuries it was accepted that other nations had their own gods who were no concern of Israel: Israel acknowledged only Yahweh, who was the most powerful of all gods and demanded exclusive honours. The transition from this conception and practice to an abstract definition was effected by the preaching of the prophets. When Amos, earliest of the canonical prophets, describes Yahweh as God, the Lord of nature and master of persons and events, he is only recalling old truths in strong support of his threats. But the teaching and implications of this ancient faith emerge ever more clearly. Because the revelation of the God of Sinai had been associated with the idea of choice and covenant, Yahweh might well appear as a God exclusive to Israel, tied to the land and its shrines. The prophets do indeed insist on the bond between Yahweh and his chosen people, but they also show how the fortunes of other nations are in his hands, Am 9:7. He sits as judge over smallest states as over widest empires, Am 1–2 (see also all the 'prophecies against the nations'), he grants them power and withdraws it, Jr 27:5–8, he uses them as instruments and weapons of his vengeance, Am 6:11; Is 7:18–19; 10:6; Jr 5:15–17, but drops them when he pleases, Is 10:12. The land of Israel is Yahweh's possession, Jr 7:7, the Temple his home, Is 6; Jr 7:10–11; but the prophets foretell destruction for the Temple, Jr 7:12–14; Mi 3:12, and Ezekiel foresees the glory of Yahweh deserting Jerusalem, Ezk 10:18–22; 11:22–23.

By the side of Yahweh, Lord of all the earth, there is no room for any other gods. When foreign cults, and compromises with them, threaten the faith of Israel, the prophets assert the impotence of false gods and the worthlessness of idols, Jr 2:5–13,27–28; 5:7; 16:20; Ho 2:7–15. During the Exile, when the hopes of the nation collapse and the power of Yahweh may have seemed defeated, the indictment of idols becomes more biting and better reasoned in Deutero-Isaiah, Is 40:19–20; 41:6–7,21–24; 44:9–20; 46:17; see also Jr 10:1–16, and at a later date the Letter of Jeremiah, Ba 6, and Dn 14, while the assertion of monotheism becomes absolute, Is 44:6–8; 46:1–7,9.

This God is transcendent, an attribute for which the favourite expression of the prophets is 'holy'; this is a recurrent theme in the preaching of Isaiah (Is 6 and passim: 1:4; 5:19,24; 10:17,20), but also see Is 40:25; 41:14,16,20, Jr 50:29,51:5; Ho 11:9; Hab 1:12,3:3. He is wrapped in mystery, Is 6; Ezk 1, and is infinitely above the 'children of men' (Ezekiel's continually recurring phrase emphasising the distance between the prophet and the God who speaks to him). And yet he is near; his kindness makes him so; and it is more than kindness, for Hosea and Jeremiah present it in allegory as wedded love between Yahweh and Israel, Ho 2; Jr 2:2–7; 3:6–8, an allegory which Ezekiel draws out at length, Ezk 16 and 23.

Morality: God is pure holiness, human beings are unclean, Is 6:5, a conviction which gives the prophets a sharp appreciation of sin. This moral outlook is not an innovation; it is implicit in the ancient Decalogue, it lies behind Nathan's rebuke of David, 2 S 12, and Elijah's rebuke of Ahab, 1 K 21. But in our canonical prophets it becomes a repeated theme: sin is what divides humanity from God, Is 59:2, since sin is an offence against the God of Saving Justice (Amos), the God of Love (Hosea), the God of Holiness (Isaiah). It may be said that sin is central to the vision of Jeremiah; it infects the entire nation, corrupting it, as it seems, beyond hope, Jr 13:23. Wickedness is rife and invites the vengeance of God, the great judgement of 'the Day of Yahweh', Is 2:6–22; 5:18–20; Ho 5:9–14; Jl 2:1–2; Zp 1:14–18, so surely that for Jeremiah a criterion of genuine prophecy is that it should foretell disaster, Jr 28:8–9. As the sin is national and collective, so too must be the punishment; even so, the idea of individual punishment also makes its appearance in Jr 31:29–30 (cf. Dt 24:16) and is confirmed in Ezk 18, cf. 33:10–20.

But what is known as the 'ethical monotheism' of the prophets is not a form of anti-legalism. Their morality is based on the law enunciated by God but all too often misunderstood or broken, cf. for example the discourse in Jr 7:5–10 and how it is related to the Decalogue.

Parallel with this runs a deepening appreciation of what religion demands. Anyone who is to escape punishment for sins must 'seek God', Jr 50:4; Am 5:4; Zp 2:3, and this means, as Zephaniah explains, observing God's commandments, pursuing what is right, practising humility, see Is 1:17; Ho 10:12; Am 5:24; Mi 6:8. God asks for a religion of the heart, and Jeremiah declares this to be a condition of the covenant that is to come, Jr 31:31–34. Religion and external worship must live by this spirit; the prophets attack all ritual practice not related to moral conduct, Is 1:11–17; Jr 6:20; Ho 6:6; Mi 6:6–8. But it is wrong to represent them as hostile to liturgical practices as such; public worship and the Temple were ruling preoccupations with Ezekiel, Haggai and Zechariah.

Future salvation: Punishment is not, however, God's last word. He does not want his people to perish utterly; they may repeatedly betray him—he still does not forsake his promise. A 'remnant' will be allowed to survive, Is 4:3c. This idea makes its appearance in Am 5:15; in the subsequent prophets it is developed and further defined. There is in the prophetic mind no perspective to distinguish God's imminent punitive intervention from his remote and final judgement; hence the 'remnant' is at one and the same time those who survive the immediate peril and those who are to win final salvation. The course of history itself makes the distinction clear. Crisis succeeds crisis and the survivors of each successive crisis are the 'remnant': they are the population of Israel suffered to remain after the fall of Samaria, Am 5:15, or of Judah after Sennacherib's invasion, Is 37:31–32; they are the exiles in Babylon after the fall of Jerusalem Jr 24:8; they are also those who return to Palestine after the Exile, Ezr 9:8,13–15; Zc 8:6,11,12. But whatever the crisis, these survivors are always considered as the promising shoot, the nucleus, of a sacred nation, divinely assured of its great future, Is 11:10; 37:31; Ezk 37:12–14; Mi 4:7; 5:6–7; Zc 8:11–13.

In this future age there will be such happiness as the chosen people have never known; those of Israel and of Judah who have been scattered among the nations will return to a Land of Promise, Is 11:12–13; Jr 30–31, astonishingly fertile, Is 30:23–26; 32:15–17, and the people of God will take vengeance on their enemies, Mi 4:11–13; 5:6–8. Material prosperity and power do not, however, lie at the heart of prophetic hope; they are only concomitants of the realisation of the kingship of God, for this, the essential hope, implies a profoundly spiritual outlook: virtue and holiness, Is 29:19–24, a new mode of life and divine forgiveness, Jr 31:31–34, true knowledge of God, Is 2:3; 11:9; Jr 31:34, peace and joy, Is 2:4; 9:6; 11:6–8; 29:19.

To establish and govern this ideal kingdom, King Yahweh would have his earthly representative, who would be at once his adopted son and loyal vassal: in a word, an ideal earthly ruler. He would be known as Yahweh's 'Anointed One' (in Hebrew, messiah)—it is a prophet, Nathan, who, by promising David a permanent dynasty, 2 S 7, gives the first expression of that royal messianism echoed by certain Psalms. Thus, despite disappointments and the bad behaviour of most of David's successors, we find the hopes of the prophets Isaiah, Micah and Jeremiah still centred on an individual king, in the near or in the distant future. The Messiah (for at this point in history, the capital letter is appropriate) would be of Davidic descent, Is 11:1; Jr 23:5 = 33:15; like David himself, he will come from Bethlehem-Ephrathah, Mi 5:1, the noblest titles conceivable will be his, Is 9:5, and the spirit of Yahweh with all its accompanying gifts will rest on him, Is 11:1–5. For Isaiah, he is immanuel ('God with us'), Is 7:14; for Jeremiah, yahweh zidqenu ('Yahweh-is-our-saving-justice'), Jr 23:6: two titles which between them sum up the messianic ideal at its purest.

This hope survived the collapse of pretensions to political domination and the hard lesson of the Exile. Despite the fleeting hopes attached to Zerubbabel, who was of Davidic descent, by Haggai and Zechariah, royal messianism went into eclipse: there was no descendant of David on the throne, nor was there any throne, and Israel had been incorporated into an alien world-empire. Ezekiel, it is true, looks forward to the coming of a new David but calls him 'prince' and not 'king', describing him as a mediator and shepherd rather than as a mighty monarch, Ezk 34:23–24; 37:24–25; Zechariah foretells the coming of a king, but he will be humble and pacific, Zc 9:9–10. For Second Isaiah, Yahweh's Anointed One is not a Davidic king but the King of Persia, Cyrus, Is 45:1, God's instrument for liberating his people; but the same prophet describes another kind of saviour, the servant of Yahweh, who will be the teacher of his people and the light of all nations, preaching the law of God in all humility, despised and rejected by his own, yet winning their salvation at the price of his own life, Is 42:1–7; 49:1–9; 50:4–9, and especially 52:13 – 53:12. Nevertheless, there was a resurgence of the older theme: just before the beginning of the Christian era hope for a king Messiah was widespread, though others hoped for a priestly Messiah, while yet others set their hopes in a supernatural one.

The early Christian community applied all these prophetic texts to Jesus, however mutually contradictory they might seem at first sight. He was Jesus (= Joshua, i.e. Saviour), the Christ (= Messiah, i.e. the Anointed One), of Davidic descent, born in Bethlehem, Zechariah's pacific king, Second Isaiah's 'suffering servant', the child Immanuel foretold by Isaiah, as also the Son of man of heavenly origin seen by Daniel. But these references to ancient prediction should not be allowed to obscure the originality of this Christian messianism, which has its basis in the person and life of Jesus. If he fulfilled the prophecies, he did so by transcending them, and he himself repudiated the traditional political notion of messianic world-ruler.

§6 The books of the prophets

The prophets after whom the canonical books are named are commonly called 'writing prophets'. The term is unfortunate. From what has been said of the prophetic function it is evident that the prophet was not a writer; he was first and foremost a speaker, a preacher. His message was originally a spoken one, and the question arises: how did it become a written book?

The contents of these books are of three different kinds: 1 There are the 'prophetic sayings': these are utterances, spoken either by God or by the prophet in God's name or else they are poetic passages conveying some teaching, prediction, threat, promise, etc. 2 Narratives told in the first person: here the prophet relates his own experiences, and principally his own vocation. 3 Narratives in the third person: these recount events in the prophet's life or the conditions in which he worked. These three types of literary composition are not mutually exclusive; indeed, narrative sections frequently include either prophecy or discourse.

The passages in the third person point to an author other than the prophet. There is clear proof of this in the Book of Jeremiah. The prophet dictated to Baruch, Jr 36:4, all the words that he uttered in God's name over a period of twenty-three years, see Jr 25:3. When this collection was burned by King Jehoiakim, Jr 36:23, a fresh scroll was written by the same Baruch himself: to him we must also attribute the biographical narratives that follow, Jr 37–44, though they close with a message of comfort for Baruch from Jeremiah, Jr 45:1–5. A remark is also made to the effect that Baruch's second scroll, Jr 36:32, contained 'many similar words in addition' (added by Baruch or by others).

Similar circumstances may lie behind the composition of other prophetic books. Probably the prophets themselves either wrote or dictated a part of their prophecies or an account of their experiences, see Is 8:1; 30:8; Jr 30:2; 51:60; Ezk 43:11; Hab 2:2. Some part of this prophetic legacy may have been faithfully preserved by the oral tradition of the prophets' followers or by disciples of these latter (that Isaiah had disciples would appear from Is 8:16). These same groups would have treasured recollections of the prophet's life as well as of his prophecies: thus, for example, the traditions about Isaiah incorporated in the Books of Kings, 2 K 18–20, and carried over from there into the Book of Isaiah, Is 36–39; so also the account of the conflict between Amos and Amaziah, Am 7:10–17.

From these various units collections were formed: related prophecies and passages either dealing with the same subject (e.g. the passages against the nations in Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel) or else weighing threat of punishment against promise of salvation (as in Micah) were drawn together. All these became the subject of reading and meditation and helped to keep alive for new generations the spirit of the prophets who had gone before. Thus Jeremiah's contemporaries quote one of the prophecies of Micah, Jr 26:17–18, and reference is often made to the former prophets, Jr 28:8, a reference that becomes a recurrent formula in Jr 7:25; 25:4; 26:5; and see Ezr 9:11; Dn 9:6; 10; Zc 1:4–6; 7:7, 12. The books of the prophets were kept alive by groups of the devout who found in them the food for their faith and devotion; indeed, as in the case of Baruch's scroll, Jr 36:32, 'many similar words were added', under divine inspiration either to adapt the books to the spiritual needs of a new generation or to improve them. Sometimes, as we shall see when we deal with the Books of Isaiah and Zechariah, these additions could be considerable. By making such alterations, the heirs of the prophets considered that they were at once preserving and maturing the treasure received from their masters.

§7 In the Hebrew Bible and in the Greek and Latin versions, as in this edition, the books of the four major prophets appear in chronological order. The arrangement of the twelve minor prophets is more arbitrary, but we shall discuss them here in order of composition, in so far as this can be established.

§8 Isaiah

The prophet Isaiah was born in about 765 BC. In the year of King Uzziah's death, 740, he received his prophetic vocation while in the Temple of Jerusalem: his mission was to proclaim the fall of Israel and of Judah as punishment for the nation's infidelity, 6:1–13. He exercised his ministry for forty years, which were dominated by the growing threat presented to Israel and Judah by Assyria. There are four periods to which the prophet's utterances can be more or less accurately attributed: 1 The first belong to the few years between his prophetic call and the accession of Ahaz in 736 BC. Isaiah was then preoccupied mainly with the moral corruption resulting from the prosperity of Judah, 1–5. 2 Razon, king of Damascus, and Pekah, king of Israel, tried to persuade the young king of Judah to join an alliance against Tiglath-Pileser III, king of Assyria. When he refused, they attacked him and he appealed to Assyria for help. Isaiah then intervened, trying in vain to discourage this policy based on human expediency. From this period date the 'Book of Immanuel', 7:1—11:9 for the most part, but also 5:26–29 (?); 17:1–6; 28:1–4. After the failure of his mission to Ahaz, Isaiah withdrew from public affairs, see 8:16–18. 3 The appeal of Ahaz to Tiglath-Pileser put Judah under Assyrian protection and hastened the fall of the Northern Kingdom, part of the territory of which was annexed by Assyria in 734; by 721 Samaria itself had fallen. In Judah Hezekiah, who succeeded Ahaz in 716, was a devout king, bent on reform. There was a resumption, however, of political intrigue, this time for Egyptian support against Assyria. Isaiah, true to his principles, pleaded for trust in God, not in a military alliance. To the beginning of Hezekiah's reign are attributed 14:28–32; 18; 20; 28:2–22; 29:1–14; 30:8–17. The city-state of Ashdod, having risen in revolt against the Assyrian overlord, was reduced by Sargon in 711, Is 20, after which Isaiah relapsed into silence. 4 He began prophesying again in 705 when Hezekiah allowed himself to be drawn into rebellion against Assyria. Sennacherib ravaged Palestine in 701. The king of Judah resolved to defend Jerusalem; Isaiah supported him in his resistance, assuring him of God's help, and the capital was in fact saved. From this last period date at least the prophecies of 1:4–9 (?); 10:5–15, 27[b]–32; 14:24–27, and those passages in ch. 28–32 not already attributed to the preceding period. We know nothing about Isaiah's career after 700. According to Jewish tradition, he was martyred under Manasseh.

The prominent part played by Isaiah in his country's affairs made him a national figure, but he was also a poet of genius. Brilliance of style and freshness of imagery make his work pre-eminent in the literature of the Bible; he wrote a concise, majestic and harmonious prose unsurpassed by any of the biblical writers who were to follow him. But his greatness lies above all in the religious order. The vision in the Temple at the time of his vocation, a revelation of the transcendence of God and human unworthiness, left a lasting mark on the prophet. His concept of God has a note of exultation in it but also of awe: God is the Holy, the Strong, the Mighty One, the King. Human beings are creatures defiled by sin for which God demands reparation. For God insists on justice among people and sincerity in divine worship. God looks for faithfulness and Isaiah is the prophet of faith; in times of crisis all he prescribes is trust in God and in no one else; by this alone will salvation be won. He knows clearly how hard the test will be, but his hope is that a 'remnant' will be spared, with the Messiah for its king. Isaiah is the greatest of the messianic prophets. The Messiah he foretells is a descendant of David who will establish peace and justice on earth and propagate the knowledge of God, 2:1–5; 7:10–17; 9:1–6; 11:1–9; 28:16–17.

A religious genius of this quality inevitably made an impression on his period and produced a school of disciples, who preserved his sayings and added to them. The book which bears his name is the result of a long process of composition, all the stages of which it is impossible now to reconstruct. The final arrangement is similar to that of Jeremiah (Greek version) and of Ezekiel: sayings against Jerusalem and Judah, ch. 1–12; sayings against the nations, ch. 13–23; promises, ch. 24–35. But the arrangement is by no means rigid and the foregoing analysis has already shown that the chronology of the book only imperfectly corresponds to that of Isaiah's career. The book has been put together from various collections of sayings. Certain groupings go back to the prophet himself, see 8:16; 30:8. His immediate or remote disciples made other collections, sometimes glossing their master's words and sometimes adding to them. The sayings against the nations, grouped together in ch. 13–23, have attracted later material, particularly ch. 13–14 against Babylon (exilic). More extensive additions are: 'the Apocalypse of Isaiah', ch. 24–27, which from literary type and doctrinal content cannot be dated earlier than the fifth century BC; a post-exilic prophetic liturgy, 33; a 'little Apocalypse', ch. 34–35, influenced by Second Isaiah. Lastly, by way of appendix, the account of Isaiah's behaviour during Sennacherib's campaign, 36–39, has been added from 2 K 18–19, with a thanksgiving psalm attributed to Hezekiah, 38:9–20.

§9 The book has, however, received even weightier additions. On linguistic grounds alone, ch. 40–55 cannot be the work of the prophet of the eighth century. Not only is his name never mentioned in this section, but the historical setting is about two centuries later: Jerusalem has been captured, the people are captives in Babylon, Cyrus has already made his appearance and is about to be the instrument of their deliverance. It would not, of course, be impossible for God in his omnipotence to transport a prophet into the distant future, cut him off from the present and change his thoughts and images. But this would presuppose a split in his personality and a disregard of the contemporaries to whom he had been sent which would be unique in the Bible, and contrary to the very nature of prophecy which touches the future only in function of the present. These chapters contain the teaching of an anonymous upholder of the Isaian tradition, a great prophet like Isaiah himself and whom for want of a better name we call Deutero-Isaiah or Second Isaiah. He preached in Babylon between the early victories of Cyrus in 550 BC presaging the collapse of the Babylonian Empire, and the liberating edict of 538 allowing the first group of Jews to return to their homeland. The collection, though not strictly speaking an ordered whole, has more unity than ch. 1–39. It begins with the equivalent of a prophetic vocation-narrative, 40:1–11, and ends with a definite conclusion, 55:6–13. From its opening words, 'Console my people, console them', 40:1, it has become known as the 'Book of the Consolation of Israel'.

And that indeed is its principal theme. Whereas the prophecies of ch. 1–39 were for the most part threatening and full of allusions to events in the reigns of Ahaz and Hezekiah, those of ch. 40–55 are remote from this historical context and convey a message of comfort. Judgement has been fulfilled by the ruin of Jerusalem, the time of restoration is at hand. And this will be a complete renewal, an aspect emphasised by the importance given to the joint themes of God the Creator and God the Saviour. A new Exodus, more marvellous than the first, is about to bring the people home to a new Jerusalem, more beautiful than the first. This distinction between two eras, that of 'things past' and that of 'things to come' marks the beginning of literary eschatology. In comparison with First Isaiah, the thought shows greater theological development. Monotheism is dogmatically affirmed and the fatuity of belief in other gods is demonstrated by their impotence to act. Emphasis is laid on the fathomless wisdom and providence of God. Religious universalism receives clear expression for the first time. These truths are presented in an exalted style and urgent rhythm, emphasising the imminence of salvation.

Embedded in the book are four lyrical passages, the 'Songs of the Servant of Yahweh', 42:1–4 (possibly 5–9); 49:1–6; 50:4–9 (possibly 10–11); 52:13 – 53:12. They depict a perfect servant of Yahweh—re-gatherer of his people and light of the nations—one who preaches the true faith, who expiates the people's sins by his own death and is glorified by God. These passages rank among the most closely studied texts in the Old Testament, and agreement has not yet been reached either over their origin or over their significance. The attribution of the first three songs to Second Isaiah seems valid enough; the fourth is possibly the work of one of his disciples. The identity of the servant is much disputed, being regarded by many as a personification of the community of Israel, to which other passages in Second Isaiah certainly apply the title 'servant'. The characteristics of the servant are, however, very strongly drawn; hence other exegetes, today the majority, consider the servant to be a historical person, either of the past or of the Second Isaiah's own times. From this point of view, the most attractive suggestion is to identify the servant with Second Isaiah himself and to suppose that the fourth song was added after his death. A third theory synthesises both these interpretations by holding that the servant was indeed an individual who in some way embodies the destiny of his people.

Be that as it may, an interpretation limited to the past or to the sixth century takes insufficient account of the texts themselves. The servant is the mediator of salvation yet to come, a justification for the messianic interpretation which one strain of Jewish tradition has put on these passages, the aspect of suffering always excluded. By contrast, the texts about the servant's sufferings and vicarious expiation were the very ones which Jesus emphasised, applying them to himself and his mission, Mk 10:45; Lk 22:19–20,37, while earliest Christian preaching identified him as the perfect Servant foretold by Second Isaiah, Mt 12:17–21; Jn 1:29.

§10 The last part of the book, ch. 56–66, was at one time thought to be the work of yet a third prophet, called for convenience Trito-Isaiah or Third-Isaiah. It is generally regarded today as being a composite collection. The psalm in 63:7 – 64:11 seems to be earlier than the end of the Exile; the saying in 66:1–4 is contemporary with the rebuilding of the Temple in 520 BC. Ch. 60–62 are very closely related to Second Isaiah both in thought and style. Ch. 56–59, generally speaking, seem to date from the fifth century BC. Ch. 65–66 (excluding 66:1–4) with their strongly apocalyptic flavour are ascribed by some exegetes to the Hellenistic period, although others date them to shortly after the return from Exile. Taken as a whole, this last part of the book seems to be the work of Second Isaiah's disciples. It has also been considered to be a deliberate re-interpretation of the work of Second Isaiah, composed some time after the return from exile. In any case it is the final product of the Isaian tradition, active from the days of the great eighth-century prophet himself.

A complete manuscript of the Book of Isaiah has recently been discovered in a cave near the Dead Sea. It appears to date from the second century BC. It differs from the Massoretic text in its system of spelling and has a number of variants, some of which have been used to establish the present text. These are indicated in the notes by the abbreviation $1QIs^a$.

In about 646 BC, just over a century after Isaiah, Jeremiah was born of a priestly family living in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem. His life and character are better known to us than those of any other prophet, thanks to the biographical narratives in the third person scattered throughout his book, the chronological sequence of which is as follows: 19:1–20:6; 26; 36; 45; 28–29; 51:59–64; 34:8–22; 37–44. The 'Confessions of Jeremiah', 11:18–12:6; 15:10–21; 17:14–18; 18:18–23; 20:7–18, come from the prophet himself. They do not constitute an autobiography but form a moving witness to the inner crises which he experienced, describing them in the style of the 'psalms of lamentation'. Called by God as a young man in 626–627 BC, the thirteenth year of Josiah, 1:2, he lived through the tragic years preceding and succeeding the ruin of the kingdom of Judah. Hopes had been raised by Josiah's religious reforms and his rallying of the nation, but these were destroyed by the death of the king at Megiddo in 609 and the disruption of the balance of power in that ancient world by the fall of Nineveh in 612 and the expansion of the Chaldaean empire. From 605 onwards Nebuchadnezzar imposed his will on Palestine; Judah rebelled, encouraged by the persistent intrigues of Egypt, and in 597 Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and deported part of its population. A second revolt brought back the Chaldaean armies and in 587 Jerusalem was again captured, its Temple burnt and more of its inhabitants deported. Jeremiah lived throughout these catastrophic events, preaching, threatening, prophesying disaster, vainly admonishing the incompetent Davidic kings one after the other; by the war party he was dubbed a defeatist, persecuted and imprisoned. When Jerusalem fell, Jeremiah remained in Palestine with his friend Gedaliah whom the Chaldaeans had appointed governor; the prophet could see, however, that all hopes for the future lay in those who had been exiled. When Gedaliah was assassinated, a party of Jews, fearing reprisals, fled to Egypt, taking Jeremiah with them. It is probable that he died there.

The prophet's own inner conflicts were as dramatic as the events in which he played a part. Of an affectionate and gentle disposition, he was nevertheless called 'to uproot and to knock down, to destroy and to overthrow', 1:10, and disaster was the keynote of his message, 20:8. This man of peace was for ever at war, with his own people, with kings, priests, false prophets, the nation itself, 'a man of strife and of dissension for the whole country', 15:10. He was tortured by a duty he could not refuse, 20:9. In prayer he referred to his anguish repeatedly: 'Why is my suffering continual?', 15:18; see also the passage that anticipates Job's 'a curse on the day when I was born', 20:14seq.

All this suffering purified his soul of everything unworthy and made it open to God. Before expressing it in his prophecy of the new covenant, 31:31–34, Jeremiah practised a really inward and heartfelt religion; this is what makes him near and dear to Christians. This personal religion led him to rethink traditional teaching: God examines the heart, 11:20, and rewards each according to his works, 31:29–30; friendship with God, 2:2, is broken by sin which is the consequence of a perverted will, 4:4; 17:9; 18:12. His warm religion makes Jeremiah not unlike Hosea, who influenced him; his conception of the Law as an 'inward' force, his respect for the function of love in true religion, his concern for the person as an individual, show affinities with Deuteronomy. Jeremiah certainly approved of the reforms inspired by Deuteronomy and undertaken by Josiah, but was cruelly disappointed to see how ineffective these reforms were in changing the nation's moral and religious life for the better.

During his lifetime Jeremiah was a failure; after his death he grew steadily in stature. His doctrine of a new covenant written in the heart made him the father of all that was best in Judaism. His influence may be seen in Ezekiel, in Deutero-Isaiah and in several of the Psalms. In the Maccabaean period he was considered a protector of the nation, 2 M 2:1–8; 15:12–16. By maintaining the primacy of the things of the spirit and by showing how intimate human contact with God must be, Jeremiah paved the way for the new covenant of Christian times; his life of renunciation and of suffering in the service of God, which may well have contributed to the portrait of the servant in Is 53, makes Jeremiah an antetype of Christ.

That Jeremiah's influence persisted shows that his words must often have been studied, meditated and interpreted. This contribution of the prophet's spiritual children can be seen in the construction of the book. This clearly was not written at one sitting. Besides the poetic utterances and biographical passages, it contains prose sermons in a style very like that of Deuteronomy. The authenticity of these has been contested; they have been attributed to deuteronomic editors after the Exile. In fact, however, their style is that of Judaean prose in the seventh and early sixth centuries BC, while their theology is characteristic of a religious movement to which Jeremiah and the Deuteronomist both belonged. They are the authentic echo of Jeremiah's preaching, set down and collected by his admirers. All this material has not come down to us in a single form. The Greek version is considerably shorter (by one-eighth) than the Massoretic text and often differs in detail; discoveries at Qumran show that both these recensions existed in Hebrew. Furthermore, the Greek puts the sayings against the nations after 25:13 and in a different order from the Hebrew, which positions them at the very end of the book, ch. 46–51. Originally these prophecies perhaps formed a separate collection; they are not all the work of Jeremiah. Even if by him, the sayings against Moab and Edom have been extensively rewritten; the long saying against Babylon, 50–51, dates from the end of the Exile. Ch. 52 is included as an historical appendix; it is parallel to 2 K 24:18–25:30. Other, shorter, supplementary passages have also been inserted into the body of the book; they witness to the use made of it by the exiles in Babylon and the post-exilic community, and to the respect in which it was then held. The many duplicate passages are also proofs of editorial activity. Lastly, the numerous indications of time are not in sequence. The book as we have it now is in a state of disorder, the outcome of a protracted compilation, the stages of which are very hard to sort out.

Ch. 36, however, gives some very useful data: in 605 Jeremiah dictated to Baruch the sayings he had made, 36:2, since the beginning of his ministry in 626. This scroll, burnt by Jehoiakim, was rewritten and supplemented, 36:32. We can do no more than conjecture what this collection contained. It appears to have had 25:1–12 for introduction, and it assembled the pre-605 passages which are now in ch. 1–18; but, according to 36:2, it also contained certain ancient prophecies against the nations referred to in 25:13–38. In the same sections, the supplements later added are passages dating from after 605 and further sayings against the nations. Into those were inserted the pages of 'Confessions' (described in detail above). Two small booklets were added, one on the kings, 21:11–23:8, the other on the prophets, 23:9–40, which may originally have been distinct.

In this way we are able to identify two sections of the book: one containing threats against Judah and Jerusalem, 1:1–25:13, the other containing prophecies against the nations, 25:13–38 and ch. 46–51. Ch. 26–35 make up a third section; this is a collection, out of order, of rather more cheerful passages. Nearly all of these are in prose and are mostly drawn from a biography of Jeremiah for which, it is supposed, Baruch was responsible.

Exception must be made of ch. 30–31, a small book of consolation, written in verse form. The fourth section, ch. 36–44, is in prose; it continues the biography of Jeremiah and describes his sufferings during and after the siege of Jerusalem. It ends with 45:1–5 which may be regarded as Baruch's signature.

§12 Lamentations

The Hebrew Bible groups this short book with the 'Writings' (Hagiographa) and counts it as one of the five megillot, the 'rolls' or 'scrolls' read on major feast-days. The Greek Bible and the Vulgate put it immediately after Jeremiah, entitling it 'The Lamentations of Jeremiah'. This tradition of authorship is based on 2 Ch 35:25 and supported by the poems themselves, the subject-matter of which reflects the times of the prophet. Even so, it is difficult to credit Jeremiah with the book. The Jeremiah we know from his authentic pronouncements could never have said that the voice of prophecy was silenced, 2:9; nor could he have praised Zedekiah, 4:20, or put his trust in Egyptian help, 4:17. His spontaneity would have burst through the artificial literary curbs we find in these alphabetical poems: in the first four, each strophe begins with a different letter, and in the fifth, each of the twenty-two verses.

Ch. 1, 2 and 4 are written in the form of a dirge for the dead, ch. 3 is an individual lament, ch. 5 ('Prayer of Jeremiah' in the Vulgate) a collective one. They were probably written in Palestine after the fall of Jerusalem in 587. They are apparently the work of a single author, who with great pathos describes the mourning of city and people; but from this darkness shines a ray of unconquerable trust in God and of wholehearted repentance, which makes the short book of lasting value. The Jews chant it on the great fast commemorating the destruction of the Temple.

§13 Baruch

The Book of Baruch is one of the deutero-canonical books not found in the Hebrew Bible. The Greek Bible puts it between Jeremiah and Lamentations; the Vulgate immediately after Lamentations. According to its introduction, 1:1–14, it was written in Babylon by Baruch, Jeremiah's secretary, after the deportation and sent to Jerusalem to be read at liturgical gatherings. It contains: a prayer acknowledging guilt but expressing hope, 1:15–3:8; a 'wisdom' poem, 3:9–4:4, in which Wisdom is identified with the Law; a prophetic passage, 4:5–5:9, in which a personified Jerusalem speaks to the exiles and the prophet consoles her with a reminder of messianic hopes.

The introduction was written in Greek; the prayer, 1:15–3:8, clearly goes back to a Hebrew original, as may the other two parts. The most probable date of composition is the middle of the first century BC.

In the Greek Bible, Lamentations separates the Letter of Jeremiah from Baruch, but the Vulgate adds the Letter (with a separate title) to Baruch, ch. 6. The Letter is an apologetic argument against idolatry; its style undistinguished, it develops themes already used in Is 44:9–20; Jr 10:1–16. The idolatry here attacked is late Babylonian. The Letter, apparently written in Hebrew, is of the Greek period; more precise dating is not possible. It is alluded to, seemingly, in 2 M 2:1–3.

A small fragment of the Greek text, discovered at Qumran, can be dated on palaeographical evidence to c. 100 BC.

This collection, grouped under the name of Baruch, gives us valuable information about the Jewish communities in the Dispersion and the ways by which their religious life was sustained: contact with Jerusalem, prayer, devotion to the Law, thirst for retribution, messianic hope. Like Lamentations, it also testifies to the enduring reputation of Jeremiah, both short books being assigned to the prophet and his disciple. Baruch's reputation continued to grow: from the second century AD, two apocalypses written under his name have been preserved, one in Greek, the other in Syriac (with Greek fragments).

The Book of Ezekiel, unlike that of Jeremiah, appears to be a well-constructed whole. After the introduction, ch. 1–3, in which the prophet receives his mission from God, the body of the book is divided clearly into four sections: 1 Ch. 4–24, consisting almost exclusively of reproaches and threats addressed to the Israelites before the siege of Jerusalem. 2 Ch. 25–32, of proclamations against the nations, in which the prophet widens his anathema to include those who have influenced the faithless Israelites and urged them on. 3 Ch. 33–39, of comfort for the Israelites during and after the siege, with a promise of a brighter future. 4 Ch. 40–48, of provisions for the political and religious constitution of the future community, once it is re-established in Palestine.

Beneath this systematic arrangement nevertheless there are noteworthy irregularities. There are numerous duplicate passages, e.g. 3:17–21 = 33:7–9; 18:25–29 = 33:17–20. References to Ezekiel's being struck dumb by God, 3:26; 24:27; 33:22g, are separated by protracted discourses. The vision of the chariot of God, 1:4–3:15, is interrupted by the vision of the book, 2:1–3:9. In the same way, the description of the sins of Jerusalem, 11:1–21, is a continuation of ch. 8 and clearly interrupts the account of the chariot's departure which begins at 10:18–22 and continues in 11:22. Nor are the dates of ch. 26–33 in sequence. An author writing the book as one consistent whole could hardly be responsible for these irregularities; it is much more likely that they are the result of disciples' combining and supplementing the documents or recollections at their disposal. To some extent, therefore, the Book of Ezekiel has undergone the same treatment as other prophetic books. The consistency both of style and of teaching, however, is proof of the fidelity of the prophet's disciples to his own mind and, for the most part, to his actual words. Their editorial activity is particularly noticeable in the final part of the book, ch. 40–48, though the basic material still comes from Ezekiel himself.

The question, however, arises, whether the disciples' editorial work has not changed the perspective of the book in one important respect. As the text stands, Ezekiel's whole ministry is among the exiles in Babylon between 593 and 571, the first and last dates indicated, 1:2 and 29:17. In these circumstances, it is surprising that the sayings of the first section seem to be addressed to people living in Jerusalem, and that Ezekiel at times gives the impression that he is actually present in the capital, see especially 11:13. Hence the hypothesis of a twofold ministry: Ezekiel remaining in Palestine and preaching there until the fall of Jerusalem in 587 and joining the Babylonian exiles only after this event. The vision of the scroll in 2:1–3:9 would indicate the prophet's divine vocation in Palestine, and that of the chariot, 1:4–28 and 3:10–15, would indicate his arrival among the exiles. The transfer of this vision of the chariot to the beginning of the book from its third section has thus, it is maintained, altered the whole focus. This hypothesis helps to solve some difficulties but creates others. It demands substantial rearrangements of text; it has to be postulated that even during his 'Palestinian' ministry Ezekiel usually lived outside Jerusalem, since he is 'transported' thither in 8:3; finally, it would be odd for neither Ezekiel nor Jeremiah to refer to each other's activity if they were preaching together in the capital. Moreover, the objections against the traditional view should not be exaggerated; reproaches addressed to the people of Jerusalem were useful lessons for the exiles; and as far as Ezekiel's apparent presence in Jerusalem is concerned, he was transported thither, 'in visions' as the text expressly says, 8:3, and thence 'in vision' brought back, 11:24. The hypothesis of a twofold ministry no longer commands much support.

In either case, the same imposing figure emerges from the book. Ezekiel was a priest, 1:3. The Temple was his ruling interest; whether the Temple of the present defiled by impure rites, ch. 8, and deserted by the glory of Yahweh, ch. 10, or the Temple of the future, the plan of which he describes in meticulous detail, ch. 40–42, and to which he sees God returning, ch. 43. He holds the Law in veneration, and the accusation of 'profaning the Sabbaths' is the constant refrain of his indictment of Israel, ch. 20. He detests legal impurity, 4:14; 44:7, and is scrupulous in distinguishing the sacred from the profane, 45:1–6; 48:9seq. As a priest he was responsible for deciding cases of law and morals, hence the casuistic tendency of his teaching, ch. 18. His outlook and vocabulary are akin to the Law of Holiness, Lv 17–26. Yet it can be demonstrated neither that he was inspired by it nor that the Law of Holiness in any way depended on him; the most remarkable similarities occur in those passages—the responsibility of the editors. All that can be said is that both works were handed down by people with very similar preoccupations. Ezekiel's work belongs to the Priestly tradition just as that of Jeremiah belongs to the deuteronomic.

But this priest is also a prophet of action. More than any other he resorts to symbolic gestures. He mimes the siege of Jerusalem, 4:1–5:4, the departure of the exiles, 12:1–7, the king of Babylon at the parting of the ways, 21:23seq. the union of Judah and Israel, 37:15seq. Even in his own personal trials sent him by God he is a 'sign' to Israel, 24:24, as Hosea and Isaiah and Jeremiah had been. The elaborateness of his symbolic actions is in marked contrast to the simplicity of those of his predecessors.

Ezekiel is primarily a visionary. His book contains only four formal visions but these occupy a substantial part of it: ch. 1–3; 8–11; 37; 40–48. They admit us to a fantastic world: the four living creatures of Yahweh's chariot, the monstrous performance of worship in the Temple with its swarms of beasts and of idols, the dry bones that come to life, the blueprint of a future temple from which an imaginary river flows through a geographic Utopia. This lively imagination he applied also to his allegories: Oholah and Oholibah, ch. 23; the Shipwreck of Tyre, ch. 27; Pharaoh the Crocodile, ch. 29 and 32; the Giant Tree, ch. 31; the Descent into Hell, ch. 32.

In contrast to this gift of pictorial imagination, and possibly as the price paid for it (as though the eye had robbed the tongue of power), Ezekiel's style is monotonous and without colour, frigid, feeble, astonishingly poor when compared with the classics of prophecy, the strong simplicity of Isaiah and the compelling warmth of Jeremiah. The art of Ezekiel excels by its evocation of size and depth, projecting an atmosphere of awe before the mysteries of God.

Ezekiel, therefore, though having much in common with his predecessors, breaks new ground. This is also true of his doctrine. He makes no appeal to the past history of his people. Recalls to the promises made to the patriarchs and to the Sinaitic covenant occur occasionally, but even if God has so far preserved a nation that was defiled from birth, 16:3seq., this is not to fulfil the promises but to vindicate the honour of his name, ch. 20. Similarly, the substitution of an everlasting covenant for the old one, 16:60; 37:26seq., is described not as a reward for the people's 'return' to God but rather as an act of pure benevolence; it is after this, not before, that repentance comes, 16:62–63. The Messiah of Ezekiel, of whom little is said, is no longer a glorious king; true, he is to be a new David but only the 'shepherd' of his people, 34:24; 37:24, a 'prince', 34:24, and no longer a king, for whom there would be no room in Ezekiel's vision of a future where God is king, 45:7seq. The prophet breaks with tradition also when he asserts the principle of individual and not collective retribution, ch. 18, see also 33. This theological solution to the problem of sin will prove to be a temporary one, and will yield eventually to the pressure of facts and gradually lead to the idea of retribution in another world. Ezekiel breaks too, as Jeremiah does, with the tradition that God is inseparable from his Temple—this despite Ezekiel's own priesthood and affection for the sanctuary. Priest and prophet, often divided in Israel, are united in him; ritual remains, but derives its value from the dispositions of the participants. Ezekiel's entire teaching centres on inner conversion: men must achieve a new heart and a new spirit, 18:31, or rather God will himself bestow 'another', a 'new' heart, and infuse a 'new' spirit, 11:19; 36:26. Here, as with the free divine gift that precedes repentance, we are very near to the theology of grace later developed by John and Paul.

The elements of Israelite religion are thus all raised to a high spiritual level; this is Ezekiel's great contribution. He is called 'the father of Judaism', often only with reference to his separation of sacred from profane, to his concern for legal purity and for ritual detail, which anticipates Pharisaism. This is quite unjust. Like Jeremiah, yet in his own way, Ezekiel initiates a tradition of unworldy spirituality persisting through Judaism and emerging in the New Testament. Jesus is the Good Shepherd foretold by Ezekiel, and the founder of the worship 'in spirit' which Ezekiel had preached.

Ezekiel, in another mood, stands at the source of the apocalyptic tradition. His elaborate visions prepare us for those of Daniel, and it is not surprising that his influence is so often perceptible in the Book of Revelation.

In subject-matter the Book of Daniel falls into two parts. Ch. 1–6 are narratives: 1 Daniel and his three companions in the service of Nebuchadnezzar. 2 Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the composite statue. 3 Adoration of the golden effigy, and Daniel's three friends in the furnace. 4 Nebuchadnezzar's madness. 5 Belshazzar's banquet. 6 Daniel in the lions' den. From all these trials, in which the reputation and even the life of Daniel or of his companions is at stake, they emerge victorious, and the idolaters glorify God for having saved them. The action takes place in Babylon in the reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, of his 'son' Belshazzar, and of 'Darius the Mede', Belshazzar's successor. Ch. 7–12 are visions granted to Daniel. 7 the Four Beasts. 8 The Goat and the Ram. 9 The Seventy Weeks. 10–12 The great vision of the Time of Retribution and of the End. They are assigned to the reigns of Belshazzar, Darius the Mede and Cyrus king of Persia, and located in Babylonia.

From the existence of these two sections some have deduced two distinct documents of different periods combined by an editor. But there are other indications which are against such a distinction. The narratives are indeed in the third person, while the visions are described by Daniel himself; but the first vision, ch. 7, has its introduction and conclusion in the third person. The beginning of the book is in Hebrew, but in 2:4 there is a sudden change to Aramaic which continues to the end of ch. 7 and so into the vision section; the remaining chapters are in Hebrew. Many explanations of this duality of language have been offered, none satisfactory. There is no correspondence, therefore, between the division established by subject-matter (narratives, visions) and the division on grounds of style (first and third person) or of language (Hebrew, Aramaic). On the other hand ch. 7 has its commentary in ch. 8, but is parallel to ch. 2; its Aramaic is indeed the same as in 2–4, but certain of its stylistic characteristics recur in 8–12, though these chapters are in Hebrew. This ch. 7, therefore, links the book's two sections and proves that it is in fact an integral composition. Also, Belshazzar and Darius the Mede both appear in each section of the book, so the historical problem is present as much in one section as in the other. Lastly, the literary devices and habits of thought are consistent throughout the book, which is the strongest argument for its unity.

The date of composition is decided by clear evidence given in ch. 11. The wars between the Seleucids and Ptolemies and a portion of the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes are described with a wealth of detail quite unnecessary for the author's purpose. This account bears no resemblance to any of the Old Testament prophecies and, despite its prophetic style, refers to events already past. But from 11:40 onwards the tone changes and the 'Time of the End' is foretold in a way that is reminiscent of the other prophets. The book must therefore have been written during the persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes and before his death, even before the success of the Maccabaean revolt; that is to say between 167 and 164.

There is nothing in the rest of the book to contradict this dating. The narratives of the first section are set in the Chaldaean period, but there are indications that the author is writing a long time after the events. Belshazzar was the son of Nabonidus and not, as the book says, of Nebuchadnezzar; nor was he ever king. Darius the Mede is unknown to historians, nor is there room for him between the last Chaldaean king and Cyrus the Persian who had already conquered the Medes. The neo-Babylonian background is described in words of Persian origin; the instruments in Nebuchadnezzar's orchestra are given names transliterated from the Greek. The dates given in the book agree neither among themselves nor with history as we know it, and they seem to have been placed at the chapter heads without much care for chronology. The author has made use of oral and written traditions still current in his own times. The Dead Sea manuscripts contain fragments of a Daniel cycle related to the canonical book, notably a prayer of Nabonidus reminiscent of Dn 3:31–4:34, in which the name Nebuchadnezzar replaces that of Nabonidus. The author, or his sources, made the hero of these pious tales a certain Daniel or Danel whom Ezk 14:14–20; 28:3 mentions as a righteous man and sage of antiquity. Danel also figures in the Ras Shamra poems of the fourteenth century BC.

The late composition of the book explains its position in the Hebrew Bible. It was admitted after the canon of the Prophets had already been fixed, and placed between Esther and Ezra among the varied group of 'other writings' forming the last section of the Hebrew canon. The Greek and Latin Bibles put it among the Prophets and add certain deutero-canonical sections, namely, the Psalm of Azariah and the Canticle of the Three Youths, 3:24–90; the story of Susanna illustrating the shrewdness of the young Daniel, ch. 13; and the stories of Bel and the sacred serpent, which are satires on idolatry, ch. 14. The Greek translation of the Septuagint (LXX) differs considerably from that of Theodotion (Theod.), the latter being very close to the Massoretic text (MT).

The aim of the book was to sustain faith and hope among the Jews persecuted by Antiochus Epiphanes. Daniel and his companions had been similarly tempted to desert the Law, ch. 1, and to commit idolatry, ch. 3 and 6. From these trials they emerged victorious, and the persecutors were forced to acknowledge the power of the true God. The contemporary persecutor is painted in darker colours, but when the wrath of God is satisfied, 8:19; 11:36, the time of the end will come, 8:17; 11:40, when the persecutor will be destroyed, 8:25; 11:45. This will mean the end of sorrows and of sin and the coming of the kingdom of the saints, ruled over by a 'Son of man' whose reign will endure for ever, ch 7.

This expectation of the end, this hope of the kingdom, runs through the whole book, 2:44; 3:33 (100); 4:31; 7:14. God will bring it to fulfilment after a lapse of time fixed by him, but long enough to embrace the whole of human history. The various stages of the world's history become stages in the operation of God's eternal purpose, so that these world-stages, past, present, future, are themselves prophetic since all are contemplated through the eyes of God 'who controls times and seasons', 2:21. By this double vision, at once in time and transcending time, the author reveals the prophetic significance of history. This secret, known only to God, 2:18, etc.; 4:6, is revealed by mysterious intermediaries who are the messengers and agents of the Most High. The doctrine of angels is asserted in the Book of Daniel, as in Ezekiel and particularly in Tobit. The revelation concerns the hidden plan of God for his people and for the nations. It concerns both peoples and individuals. An important passage on the resurrection proclaims the rising of the dead either to eternal life or to eternal punishment, 12:2. The expected kingdom will include all nations, 7:14, and will have no end; it will be a kingdom of saints, 7:18, the kingdom of God, 3:33 (100); 4:31, the kingdom of the Son of man to whom all power is given, 7:13–14.

The mysterious Son of man, whom 7:18,21–27 identify with the community of the Saints, is also its head, the ruler of the eschatological kingdom, but he is not the Davidic Messiah. Jewish tradition came to regard the Son of man as a person, rather than as a personification, and the title was perhaps adopted in the New Testament to emphasise the transcendental and spiritual nature of Jesus' messiahship, Mt 8:20h.

The Book of Daniel is no longer part of the true prophetic tradition. It does not contain the preaching of a prophet commissioned by God with a message for his contemporaries, but was composed and committed to writing by an author who concealed his identity under a pseudonym, as was the case in the earlier Book of Jonah. The edifying stories in the first part of the book have affinities with a type of wisdom literature, of which an early example is the story of Joseph in Genesis, and a later one the Book of Tobit, written shortly before Daniel. The visions in the second part unfold the revelation of a divine secret, explained by angels and concerning the future, in a deliberately enigmatic style; this 'sealed book', 12:4, is the first mature apocalypse, a literary form found already developing in Ezekiel and later to flower in Jewish literature. The New Testament counterpart to the Book of Daniel is the Book of Revelation, but in this the seals of the closed book are broken, Rv 5–6, its words are secret no longer since 'the time is close', Rv 22:10, and the coming of the Lord is expected, 1 Co 16:22; Rv 22:20.

§16 The Twelve Minor Prophets

The last book in the Hebrew canon of the Prophets is simply called 'The Twelve', being a collection of twelve short books attributed to different prophets. Its title in the Greek Bible is 'Dodekapropheton'. The Church knows it as 'The Minor Prophets', not because the collection is of less importance than the 'major' prophets but because the books are shorter. These books already formed a collection when Ecclesiasticus was being written, Si 49:10. The Hebrew Bible, followed by the Vulgate, arranges these short books in the historical order assigned to them by tradition. The order is somewhat different in the Greek Bible which, moreover, places them before the major prophets.

In this edition the books will be found in the traditional order stemming from the Hebrew, but in this Introduction they will be treated in what is more probably their true historical order.

§17 Amos

Amos was a sheep-farmer of Tekoa on the edge of the Desert of Judaea, 1:1; belonging to no prophetic brotherhood, he was called from his flocks by Yahweh and sent to prophesy to Israel, 7:14. After a brief ministry mainly at the schismatic shrine of Bethel, 7:10seq., but also probably in Samaria, see 3:9; 4:1; 6:1, he was expelled from Israel and returned to his former occupation.

He preached under Jeroboam II, 783–743, by material standards a glorious reign during which the Northern Kingdom expanded and grew wealthy, but during which the rich exploited the poor, and fine liturgical show disguised the lack of sound religion. A true son of the countryside, rough, direct, proud, rich in the imagery of country-dwellers, Amos in the name of God condemned corrupt city life, social injustice, the deceitful consolations of insincere ceremonial, 5:21–22. Yahweh, sovereign lord of all the world, punisher of nations, ch. 1–2, would severely punish Israel, who, being chosen by God, should practise a morality stricter than that of others, 3:2. The 'Day of Yahweh' (the phrase occurs here for the first time in the Bible) will be one of darkness and not light, 5:18seq.; to wreak his dreadful vengeance, 6:8seq., God summons a nation, 6:14, Assyria, which, though not named, is always in the prophet's mind. Yet Amos kindles a spark of hope; he looks forward to the salvation of the House of Jacob, 9:8, for the 'remnant' of Joseph, 5:15 (the first use of this expression by a prophet). This profound doctrine of God, all-powerful and universal lord, eternally just, is formulated without the slightest hesitation; the prophet never once gives the impression of innovating: his originality lies in the forcefulness with which he restates the demands of pure Yahwism.

The book has reached us in some disorder; the prose narrative, 7:10–17, in particular, separating two visions, would be better placed at the end of the prophecies. Certain short passages leave us in doubt about their authorship. The doxologies, 4:13; 5:8–9; 9:5–6, may have been added for liturgical recitation. The short sayings against Tyre, Edom, 1:9–12, and Judah, 2:4–5, seem to date from the Exile. Further doubts have been raised by $9:8^{b}$–10 and especially by 9:11–15. There are no solid grounds for suspecting the former, but it is possible that 9:11–15 are an addition. No argument should be based on the promises of salvation which the latter passage contains, since from early times such promises had always been features of the prophets' preaching, see Amos in 5:15 and his contemporary Hosea. But the references to the collapsing hut of David, to vengeance on Edom and to a return and re-establishment of Israel, indicate the period of the Exile and may be attributed, with later modifications here and there, to a deuteronomic editing of the book.

§18 Hosea

Hosea, a native of the Northern Kingdom, was a contemporary of Amos, since his ministry began under Jeroboam II. It continued through the reigns of his successors, but Hosea does not seem to have lived to see the fall of Samaria in 721. It was a sombre period for Israel with the victorious advance of Assyria, 734–732, internal rebellions, four kings being assassinated in fifteen years, and increasing religious and moral corruption.

Of Hosea's life during those turbulent times we know nothing beyond his own domestic troubles, ch. 1–3, but these were to condition his ministry as a prophet. The interpretation of these opening chapters is much disputed, but the following seems most probable: Hosea has married a wife whom he loves but who deserts him; his love remains, however, and, having put her to the test, he takes her back. The prophet's painful experience becomes a symbol of Yahweh's dealings with his people. Hosea's awareness of this symbolism has perhaps influenced his presentation of the facts. Ch. 2 draws the moral and at the same time provides the key to the whole book. Israel, the bride of God, has become a faithless harlot, has aroused the anger and jealousy of her divine husband. God's love remains; he will punish her, but only to bring her back and restore her to the joys of their first love.

For the first time, God's relationship with Israel is described in terms of marriage, a figure most boldly chosen and passionately expressed by a prophet at once affectionate and fiery. The underlying theme of all his preaching is divine love misunderstood by the people on whom it is lavished. Once the short golden period in the desert was over, Israel played false to her loving God. Hosea indicts the ruling classes sternly. The kings, chosen in defiance of God's will, have toyed with human policies, degrading God's chosen people to the level of the other nations. The priests, ignorant and avaricious, are leading the people to their ruin. Like Amos, Hosea attacks injustice and violence, but he is more insistent on the evils of apostasy. The worship of Yahweh at Bethel is idolatrous worship; Yahweh is coupled with Baal and Astarte in the licentious rites of the high places. Now Yahweh is a jealous God, demanding an undivided heart, 'What I want is love, not sacrifice; knowledge of God, not burnt offerings,' 6:6. Punishment is therefore sure to come; yet God punishes only to save. Israel stripped and shamed will come to remember the days of her faithfulness; Yahweh will welcome his repentant people back; happiness and peace will return.

Critics at one time supposed all prophecies of happiness and everything concerning Judah to be additional to the original book. More sober conclusions prevail today. Hosea's message would be completely distorted were he to be represented as a prophet only of disaster, and it is only natural that his attention should also embrace the neighbouring kingdom of Judah. It must, however, be admitted that Hosea's prophecies, though collected in Israel, received their final form in Judah after one or two revisions. Traces of this editorial work appear in the title, 1:1, as also in the text, see for example 1:7; 5:5; 6:11; 12:3. The final verse of the book, 14:10, is the reflection of an exilic or post-exilic sage summing up the moral of the book. Exegetical problems in Hosea are made worse by the deplorable state of the Hebrew text, which is one of the least well preserved in the whole Old Testament.

The Book of Hosea has had a profound influence on the Old Testament; there are echoes of Hosea in the exhortations of later prophets to a religion of the heart, with God's love as its motive force. Jeremiah was deeply influenced by Hosea. It is not surprising that the New Testament quotes Hosea or, not infrequently, draws upon him. The wedding imagery of God's love for his people is taken up by Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the second part of Isaiah. The New Testament and the early Christian community apply it to the union between Christ and his Church. Christian mysticism has extended the application to the individual soul.

The prophet Micah (not to be confused with Micaiah ben Imlah who lived in the reign of Ahab, 1 K 22) was a Judaean, a native of Moresheth to the west of Hebron. He exercised his ministry under the kings Ahaz and Hezekiah, that is to say, before and after the fall of Samaria in 721, and possibly until Sennacherib's invasion in 701. He was therefore a contemporary of Hosea and, for a longer period, of Isaiah. Being of peasant extraction he has much in common with Amos: suspicion of city life, concrete and at times coarse expression, a taste for swift strokes of imagery and for play on words.

The book falls into four parts, threat alternating with promise: 1:2–3:12, arraignment of Israel; 4:1–5:14, promises to Zion; 6:1–7:7, Israel arraigned for the second time; 7:8–20, hopes. The contrast between the promises to Zion and the threats that precede and follow is altogether too violent, and this symmetrical arrangement must be due to editorial work. It is hard to determine the extent of this editorial adjustment, performed by those who cherished the prophet's memory. Scholars are agreed that 7:8–20 clearly belongs to the period of return from exile. To this period also are best assigned the prophecy of 2:12–13, out of place among the threats, and the prophecies of 4:6–7; 5:6–7. But 4:1–5 is found almost identically in Is 2:2–5 and in neither context does it seem original. These additions do not, however, justify the excision of all promises for the future from the authentic message of Micah. The collection of prophecies in ch. 4–5 was made during or after the Exile, but contains authentic material and, more particularly, there is no compelling reason to deny Micah the messianic prophecy of 5:1–5, which harmonises so well with Isaiah's own expectations at the same period, Is 9:1seq.; 11:1seq.

Of the life of Micah and the circumstances of his call we know nothing. He was, however, keenly aware that God had called him to the office of prophet, and this makes him fearless in prophesying disaster, as the false prophets are not, 2:6–11; 3:5–8. He is the bearer of God's message, which is in the first instance a message of condemnation. Yahweh arraigns his people, 1:2; 6:1seq., and finds them guilty; their religion and above all their morals are corrupt. Micah scourges the moneyed capitalist, the inexorable usurer, the swindling tradesman, families divided by rivalry, avaricious priests and prophets, tyrants, venal judges. These are the very antithesis of the divine ideal: 'to do what is right, to love loyally, to walk humbly with God', 6:8, an admirable formula summing up the spiritual demands of the prophets, and most particularly Hosea. God has decreed punishment: he will come to judge and punish his people in a world upheaval, 1:3–4; Samaria will be destroyed, 1:6–7, as will the towns of the lowlands where Micah lives, 1:8–15; even Jerusalem itself will become a heap of ruins, 3:12.

But the prophet is not without hope, 7:7. He elaborates Amos' teaching about the remnant and foretells the birth in Ephrathah of a pacific king who will pasture Yahweh's flock, 5:1–5.

The influence of Micah was persistent; the contemporaries of Jeremiah knew and quoted one of his proclamations against Jerusalem, Jr 26:18. The

New Testament particularly seizes on Micah's text concerning the birth of the Messiah in Bethlehem-Ephrathah, Mt 2:6; Jn 7:42.

§20 Zephaniah

According to the title of his book, the prophet Zephaniah worked in the reign of Josiah, 640–609. His attacks on alien manners, 1:8, and on the worship of false gods, 1:4–5, his rebuke of court officials, 1:8, his silence about the king, all point to a period before the religious reform, during the minority of Josiah, between 640 and 630, thus immediately before the beginning of the ministry of Jeremiah. Judah, robbed of part of its territory by Sennacherib, has experienced Assyrian rule, and the wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon have favoured religious disorders. The increasing weakness of Assyria now raises hopes of national recovery accompanied by religious reform.

The book falls into four short sections: the Day of Yahweh, 1:2–2:3; prophecies against the nations 2:4–15; against Jerusalem, 3:1–8; promises, 3:9–20. Unjustifiable attempts have been made to exclude certain prophecies against the nations and all the promises of the fourth section. Like all the prophetic books, however, Zephaniah has been retouched here and there and had additions made to it, though in this case not many: notably the predictions of the conversion of the nations, 2:11 and 3:9–10, both alien to their contexts, and inspired by Deutero-Isaiah; the authenticity of the little psalms 3:14–15 and 16–18[a] is disputed; and the concluding verses, 3:18[b]–20, are generally agreed to date from the time of the Exile.

Zephaniah's message is, in brief, a prophecy of the Day of Yahweh (cf. Amos), of a catastrophe affecting not only Judah but also the nations. Judah is condemned for religious and moral corruption springing from pride and rebelliousness, 3:1,11. Zephaniah has a deep appreciation of sin (an anticipation of Jeremiah); it is an offence against the person of the living God. The punishing of the nations should serve as a warning, 3:7, to reduce God's people to obedience and humility, 2:3; salvation is promised to only a humble and submissive 'remnant', 3:12–13. This is as far as Zephaniah's messianism goes, but it is enough to reveal the spiritual nature of the promises he makes.

The short book of Zephaniah has had a restricted influence and is only once used in the New Testament, Mt 13:41. But the description of the Day of Yahweh, 1:14–18, inspired the description by Joel, and, in the Middle Ages, the opening words of the Dies Irae.

§21 Nahum

The Book of Nahum opens with a psalm on the retribution of Yahweh against the wicked and with short prophetic passages contrasting the punishment of Assyria with the salvation of Judah, 1:2–2:3. But its main theme, stated in the heading of the book, is the destruction of Nineveh, which Nahum foretells and describes with a power that reveals him as one of the great poets of Israel, 2:4–3:19. There is no reason to deny him the authorship of the opening psalm and prophecies, which form an excellent prologue to this terrifying picture. It has been maintained, though without convincing proof, that this introduction (or indeed the whole book) had a liturgical origin or had at least been used in the Temple liturgy.

The prophecy dates from a little before the fall of Nineveh in 612 BC. It pulsates with Israel's hatred for the people of Assyria, the traditional enemy, and also with the hopes that the fall of Assyria arouses. But through this violent nationalism, where there is no anticipation of the gospel whatever, or even of the worldwide outlook of the second part of Isaiah, run the ideals of justice and faith; the fall of Nineveh is a judgement of God, who punishes those who oppose his holy purpose, 1:11; 2:1, the oppressors of Israel, 1:12–13, and of all the nations, 3:1–7.

The Book of Nahum must have raised the human hopes of Israel in 612, but the joy was short lived: the fall of Jerusalem followed close on the fall of Nineveh. After this, the scope of the message grows wider and deeper; Is 52:7 borrows the image of Na 2:1 to apply it to a universal and more spiritual salvation. Fragments of a commentary on Nahum discovered at Qumran arbitrarily apply the prophet's sayings to the enemies of the Qumran community.

The short Book of Habakkuk is very carefully constructed. It opens with a dialogue between the prophet and his God; twice the prophet complains, twice the divine proclamation answers, 1:2–2:4. The second proclamation calls down five curses on the wicked oppressor, 2:5–20. Next, in a psalm, the prophet celebrates the final triumph of God, ch. 3. The authorship of this last chapter has been disputed, but without it the composition would lose its symmetry. The musical instructions that precede, punctuate and follow the psalm merely prove that it was used liturgically. That the whole book was so used is doubtful; the liturgical quality of its style was probably more imitative than functional. Hence, arguments that Habakkuk was a cultic prophet, a member of the Temple personnel, fail to convince. A commentary on Habakkuk found at Qumran does not go beyond ch. 2, but this has no bearing on the authenticity of ch. 3.

The historical context of the prophecy and the identification of the oppressor are both doubtful. The Assyrians, the Chaldaeans, and even Jehoiakim king of Judah have been suggested. The last hypothesis cannot be maintained; each of the other two commands support. Given that the oppressors are the Assyrians, God's instrument against them would be the Chaldaeans, 1:5–11, and the date of the prophecy would be shortly after the fall of Nineveh in 612. If, however, the book refers throughout to the Chaldaeans, named in 1:6, God has made use of them to punish his people, but they in their turn will be punished for their excessive cruelty, since Yahweh is on the march to save his people; the prophet awaits this intervention with an anxiety that finally gives way to joy. If this interpretation is correct, the book should be dated between the battle of Carchemish in 605 (which made Nebuchadnezzar master of the Middle East) and the first siege of Jerusalem in 597. Thus Habakkuk would be slightly later than Nahum and, like him, a contemporary of Jeremiah.

Habakkuk sounds a note new to the teaching of the prophets; he has the temerity to demand an account from God of his ordering of the world. Judah indeed has sinned, but why should a God of holiness, 1:12, with eyes too pure to look at evil, 1:13, choose the savage Chaldaeans to wreak his vengeance? Why must the bad be punished by the worse? Why should he appear to strengthen the arm of injustice? This is the problem of evil posed at international level and Habakkuk's dismay is felt by many people today. To them as to him comes the divine answer: by paradoxical ways Almighty God prepares the final triumph of uprightness; trusting in God, the life of the upright will be secure, see 2:4, a precious maxim of Habakkuk's which Paul was to incorporate into his teaching on faith, Rm 1:17; Ga 3:11; Heb 10:38.

§23 Haggai

The last, the post-exilic, period of prophecy opens with Haggai. The change is striking. Before the Exile the watchword of the prophets was Punishment. During the Exile it became Consolation. Now it is Restoration. Haggai appears at a critical moment in the development of Judaism; the birth of the new Palestinian community. His short exhortations are precisely dated from the end of August to the middle of December 520 BC. The first Jews to return from Babylonia to rebuild the Temple were quickly discouraged. The prophets Haggai and Zechariah stirred them to new efforts and urged Zerubbabel the governor and the High Priest Joshua to resume work on the Temple; this was done in September 520, 1:15; see Ezr 5:1.

The four brief discourses composing this book are entirely concerned with this. Since the Temple is still in ruins and neglected, Yahweh has frustrated the misplaced efforts of the farmers; its rebuilding, however, will usher in an age of prosperity. However unimposing, this new Temple will dim the glory of the old; and power is promised to Zerubbabel as God's chosen viceroy.

The coming of Yahweh and the setting up of his kingdom are represented as being conditional on the rebuilding of the Temple; the age of eschatological salvation is about to dawn. Temple and Davidic descendant thus become the focus of a messianic hope to be more clearly expressed by Zechariah.

§24 Zechariah

The Book of Zechariah consists of two distinct parts: ch. 1–8; 9–14. The introduction is dated October–November 520, two months after the first prophecy of Haggai. The body of the first part of the book contains eight of the prophet's visions beginning in February 519,1:7–6:8; these are followed by the symbolic coronation of Zerubbabel (editors later substituted the name of the High Priest Joshua when hopes placed in Zerubbabel had evaporated and all political power had passed to the priesthood), 6:9–14. Ch. 7 is a brief survey of the history of Israel, while ch. 8 looks forward to the messianic age; both originate over a question asked in November 518 BC about the duty of fasting.

Well dated and consistent in thought, this first section is certainly authentic; it does, however, show signs of having been revised, either by Zechariah himself or by his disciples. The universalist prophecies of 8:20–23, for instance, have been added after 8:18–19, which was the original conclusion.

Like Haggai, Zechariah was preoccupied with the rebuilding of the Temple. But he lays more stress on national restoration and the irreproachable moral conduct that this demands; and his eschatological expectation is more urgent. The restoration is expected to inaugurate a messianic era in which the priesthood, represented by Joshua, will be held in great honour, 3:1–7, but sovereign power will be wielded by the 'Branch', 3:8, a messianic title which 6:12 applies to Zerubbabel. The two Anointed Ones, 4:14, will rule in perfect harmony, 6:13. In this way Zechariah revives the royal messianism of earlier days but combines it with the priestly interests of Ezekiel, whose influence is discernible in many other ways: the prominent part played by visions, the apocalyptic approach, the concern for purity. These, and the intervention of angels, anticipate the Book of Daniel.

The second part, ch. 9–14, which in any case begins with a new title, 9:1, is entirely different. Its sections are without date or name. We hear no more of Zechariah, of Joshua, of Zerubbabel or of the building of the Temple. The style is different and use is frequently made of earlier books, particularly of Jeremiah and Ezekiel. The historical background is different too: Assyria and Egypt appear as names symbolic of all oppressors.

These chapters were almost certainly composed in the final decades of the fourth century BC, after Alexander the Great's conquest of the Middle East. Despite recently renewed efforts to prove that these chapters are homogeneous, it now has to be admitted that they are not. Two distinct sections can be discerned, each with its own title, ch. 9–11 and ch. 12–14; the first is almost entirely in verse, the second almost entirely in prose. A Deutero-Zechariah and Trito-Zechariah have been postulated, but the fact of the matter is that these two sections are themselves composite. The first possibly uses ancient pre-exilic pieces of poetry and refers to historical events which are difficult to identify (application of 9:1–8 to Alexander's conquest seems the most tenable). The second part, ch. 12–14, describes, in apocalyptic terms, the ordeals and triumphs of Jerusalem in the last days. Eschatology, however, is also present in the first part, and some themes are found in both, for instance that of the 'shepherds' of the people, 10:2–3; 11:4–14; 13:7–9.

This part of the book is of particular interest for its messianic teaching which, however, is not presented systematically: the recovery of the House of David, ch. 12 passim, the expectation of a humble and pacific messianic King, 9:9–10, but also an obscure prophecy about someone who is 'pierced', 12:10; and an armed theocracy, 10:3–11:3, which nevertheless is a liturgical community as in Ezekiel. These elements are reconciled in the person of Christ, and the New Testament often quotes these chapters of Zechariah or at least alludes to them, Mt 21:4–5; 27:9 (Zechariah combined with Jeremiah); Mt 26:31 = Mk 14:27; Jn 19:37.

This book is probably anonymous, since 'Malachi' means 'my messenger' and seems to have been taken from 3:1. It is composed of six passages similar in construction: Yahweh, or his prophet, makes a statement; this is disputed by priests or people, then developed in a discourse in which threat and promise of salvation appear side by side. There are two main themes: the failures of priests, 1:6–2:9, and of people, 3:6–12, in their religious duties; the scandal of mixed marriage and divorce, 2:10–16. The prophet foretells the Day of Yahweh which will purify the priesthood, consume the wicked, and secure the triumph of the upright, 3:1–5,13–21; vv. 22–23 of ch. 3 are additional, as are perhaps $2:11^{b}$–13^{a}.

The contents of this book make it possible to date it; it is later than the renewal of worship in the new Temple, 516, and earlier than the prohibition of mixed marriage under Nehemiah, 445, probably fairly near this second date. The enthusiasm aroused by Haggai and Zechariah has subsided, and the community is content to drift. Inspired by Deuteronomy and Ezekiel, the prophet expects the advent of the Angel of the Covenant heralded by a mysterious messenger, 3:1, in whom Mk 1:2 (cf. Mt 11:10; Lk 7:27) sees John the Baptist, the precursor. In this messianic era the moral order will be restored, 3:5, as also true religion, 3:4, culminating in a perfect sacrifice offered to God by all nations, 1:11.

§26 Obadiah

This shortest (21 verses) of the prophetic books is full of problems; interpreters dispute its unity, its literary form, its date (some putting it as early as the ninth century BC, others as late as the Greek period). To add to the difficulty, nearly half the book, vv. 2–10, has a doublet in Jr 49:7–22, but in a different order and as additions to a saying, the attribution of which to Jeremiah is itself disputed. The prophecy of Obadiah is devoted to two themes: the punishment of Edom foretold in several short sayings, vv. 1^{b}–14, with v. 15^{b} as its conclusion; the Day of Yahweh when Israel will take its revenge on Edom, vv. 15^{a}, 16–18, with its conclusion, 'Yahweh has spoken'. The eschatological promises in vv. 19–21 are additions. The book forms part of the anti-Edomite polemic current after 587 BC, cf. Ps 137:7; Jr 49:7seq. already mentioned; Lm 4:21–22; Ezk 25:12seq.; 35:1seq.; Ml 1:2seq. The Edomites had taken advantage of the destruction of Jerusalem to invade southern Judaea. The memory of these events was still very much alive and the prophecy seems to have been composed in Judah before the return from Exile. There is no need to attribute the passage on the Day of Yahweh to a later date or another author; only the concluding verses seem to be a post-exilic addition.

This passionate appeal for national vengeance is in sharp contrast to the internationalism of the second part of Isaiah, for instance. But it is also a tribute to the terrible justice and power of Yahweh, the defender of the right, and must not be isolated from the whole prophetic movement, of which it represents no more than a fleeting moment.

§27 Joel

The Book of Joel falls naturally into two parts. In the first, an invasion of locusts lays Judah waste; this calls for a religious ceremony of lamentation and prayer; to this Yahweh replies by promising the cessation of the plague and the return of prosperity, 1:2–2:27. The second part describes in apocalyptic style the judgement on the nations and the final triumph of Yahweh and of Israel, ch. 3–4. The unity of the two parts is maintained by reference to the Day of Yahweh, the actual theme of ch. 3–4 but already mentioned in 1:15; 2:1–2,10–11. The locusts are Yahweh's army, sent to execute his sentence, a Day of Yahweh from which repentance and prayer offer the means of deliverance; the plague becomes a figure of the great, last judgement, the Day of Yahweh to usher in the eschatological age. There is no evidence for postulating two authors or two periods of composition. Some modern critics date the book to the end of the monarchy; the majority, however, opt for the post-exilic period on the following grounds: the absence of any reference to a king, the allusions to the Exile and also to the Temple as already rebuilt, and the affinities with Deuteronomy and the later prophets, Ezekiel, Zephaniah, Malachi, and Obadiah who is quoted in 3:5. The book was probably written in about 400 BC.

Its links with public worship are obvious. Ch. 1–2 have the characteristics of a penitential liturgy, ending with the prophetic promise of divine forgiveness. Hence, the theory has been advanced that Joel was a cultic prophet, attached to the ministry of the Temple. These characteristics may, however, be accounted for as a literary imitation of liturgical forms. The book is not a transcript of a sermon given in the Temple, but a written composition intended to be read. It marks the end of the prophetic movement.

The outpouring of the spirit of prophecy on all God's people in the eschatological age, 3:1–5, is the answer to Moses' prayer in Nb 11:29. The New Testament considers this prophecy to have been fulfilled by the coming of the Spirit on Christ's apostles, and Peter quotes the entire passage, Ac 2:16–21; Joel is the prophet of Pentecost. He is also the prophet of repentance, and his exhortations to fasting and prayer, whether borrowed from the Temple ceremonial or modelled on it, later found a natural place in the Lenten liturgy of the Church.

§28 Jonah

Unlike the other prophetic books, this short work is entirely narrative. It tells the story of a disobedient prophet who first struggles to evade his divine mission and then complains to God that his mission has, against his expectations, been successful. The hero of this droll adventure is a prophet mentioned in 2 K 14:25, who lived in the reign of Jeroboam II. The book, however, does not claim to be his work and certainly cannot be by him. The 'great city' of Nineveh, destroyed in 612, is no more than a distant memory; thought and phrase are borrowed from Jeremiah and Ezekiel; the language of the book is late. All points to a date after the Exile, somewhere in the fourth century. The psalm, 2:3–10, which is of a different literary form, and which has no connection either with the plight of Jonah or with the doctrine of the book, was added later.

This late date is warning enough against any interpretation of the book as history. This is excluded by other arguments as well. There is no trace in Assyrian or biblical documents of a conversion of the king of Nineveh with all his people to the God of Israel. And, though God is indeed master of nature, the successive prodigies here narrated read like a succession of practical jokes played by God on his prophet: the sudden storm, the choice of Jonah by lot, the great fish, the plant growing in a night and withering in an hour; while the whole story is told with undisguised irony quite alien to the writing of history.

The book is intended to amuse and instruct; it is a didactic tale, and its doctrine marks one of the peaks of the Old Testament. It rejects a too rigid interpretation of prophecy, asserting that even the most uncompromising of threats is an expression of the merciful will of God, who pardons at the first sign of repentance. If Jonah's prophecy fails to come true, this is because decrees of destruction are always conditional. What God wants is conversion; this being achieved, the prophet's mission is completely successful, cf. Jr 18:7–8.

Rejecting the narrow racialism into which the post-exilic community was tempted to withdraw, the book proclaims an astonishingly broadminded catholicity. All the characters in the story are likeable, the foreign sailors, the king, the populace, even the animals of Nineveh, all except the only Israelite on the stage—and he a prophet! God is indulgent to his rebellious prophet but, more remarkably, his mercy extends even to Israel's most detested enemy.

We are on the threshold of the New Testament: God is not only the God of the Jews, he is also the God of the gentiles, for there is only one God, Rm 3:29–30. In Mt 12:41 and Lk 11:29–32 Jesus was to cite the conversion of the Ninevites as an example of repentance, and Mt 12:40 sees Jonah inside the great fish as a prefiguring of Christ in the tomb. This use of the story of Jonah should not be invoked as a proof of its historicity. Jesus employs the Old Testament story as Christian preachers use the New Testament parables; the intention is the same: to teach by means of well-known illustrations, without implying any opinion as to the historical reality of the facts.

1 a. The title gives the chronological framework for the prophet's entire activity, but it is difficult to decide whether it introduces the whole book in its final form, ch. 1–66, or only ch. 1–39, or even only ch. 1–12. Be that as it may, 'Judah and Jerusalem' is to be taken not in a geographical sense but as a designation for the chosen people for whose instruction all the prophecies are uttered, even those concerning the Northern Kingdom and foreign peoples.

b. Heaven and earth are summoned as witnesses in God's lawsuit against his people, see Dt 4:26; 30:19; 32:1; Ps 50:4. The following poem refers to the devastation of the country and the siege of Jerusalem, either by Sennacherib in 701 BC, see 36:1seq.; 2 K 18:13seq., or during the Syro-Ephraimite War of 735 BC, see 7:1–2; 2 K 16:5–9.

c. Isaiah's favourite way of referring to Yahweh, see 6:3g.

d. These vv., which in their literal sense refer to the people of Judah punished for their sins, have been applied to the passion of Christ, as also the analogous texts about the suffering servant, 53:3seq.

e. Thus Hebr., but the line adds nothing to what has gone before and the Hebr. term translated as 'devastation' invariably designates the punishment suffered by Sodom and Gomorrah, referred to in vv. 9–10 and 3:9. Hence the frequent emendation of 'by foreigners' zarim to 'of Sodom' sedom; none of the versions supports this, however.

f. Personification of the city of Jerusalem, 10:32; 16:1; etc., or of its population, 37:22; Lm 4:22; Zp 3:14. 'Zion' was the name of the Jebusite citadel which later became the 'City of David', see 2 S 5:9f.

g. The prophecy probably dates from the first period of Isaiah's ministry, before 735 BC. Like Am 5:21–27, the prophet castigates ceremonies divorced from inner spirituality; he recurs to this in 29:13–14, in terms which Jesus was later to apply to the Pharisees, Mt 15:8–9.

h. Of sacrificial victims, but also of innocent people.

i. Orphans and widows, being economically weak, are protected by the law, Ex 22:21–22; Dt 10:18; 14:29; 27:19; etc., and the prophets frequently plead their cause, Jr 7:6; 22:3. See by way of contrast, Is 1:23; 9:16; Jr 49:10–11; Ezk 22:7.

j. Like judgement, Ps 9:7–8, forgiveness of sins is a divine prerogative, Ex 34:6c; Ho 11:8–9. God in his mercy puts an end to sin, thus restoring humanity to its true relationship with his Creator. No sin is too extreme to exhaust divine forgiveness, Ps 130. The condition on which God insists is avowal of the sin and repentance, 57:15; Ps 19:12; 25:11,18; 32:5; 51:17–18; etc., and the inner conversion which this implies, Jr 3:14; Ezk 18:30–32; 33:11; cf. Is 30:18; Lm 5:21. Forgiveness of sins is also a feature of the messianic kingdom, Jr 31:31*l*; cf. Ezk 36:25–26, a prerogative exercised by Jesus, Mk 2:5–11par.

k. The 'sword', that is to say, the invasion with all its attendant disasters is still only a threat, which may be removed by submitting to God, v. 19.

l. The beginning of this poem is in the qinah (lament) rhythm which has uneven lines (3+2 stresses or 4+3).

m. 'Zion' Gk and Vet. Lat.; Hebr. omits. • The theme of Jerusalem as a prostitute is reminiscent of the preaching of Hosea and anticipates the allegories of Jr 3:6–13; Ezk 16; 23. Her fall contrasts with her original fidelity, which she will recover when she has once been purged by punishment, v. 26.

All of them greedy for presents and eager for bribes,
they show no justice to the orphan,
and the widow's cause never reaches them.

Hence, the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth, 24 the Mighty One of Israel, says this,
'Disaster, I shall get the better of my enemies,
I shall avenge myself on my foes.

'I shall turn my hand against you, 25
I shall purge your dross as though with potash,
I shall remove all your alloy.

'And I shall restore your judges as at first, 26 your counsellors as in bygone days, 1:21 Zc 8:3 after which you will be called City of Saving Justice, Faithful City.' [n]

Zion will be redeemed by fair judgement, 27 and those who return, by saving justice.
Rebels and sinners alike will be destroyed, 28 and those who abandon Yahweh will perish. [o]

Against sacred trees [p]

How ashamed you will be of the terebinths 29 which gave you such delight;
and how you will blush for the gardens which you chose!
For you will be like a terebinth with faded leaves, 30 like a garden without water;
the strong will become like tinder, his work like the spark; 31 both will go up in flames together, with no one to put them out.

many peoples will come to it and say, 3
'Come, let us go up to the mountain of Yahweh, to the house of the God of Jacob that he may teach us his ways so that we may walk in his paths.'
Lk 24:47 Jn 4:22 For the Law will issue from Zion

The brilliance of Yahweh's majesty [d]

6 You have rejected your people, the House of Jacob, for it has long been full of sorcerers — Dt 18:14 like the Philistines, [e]
and is overrun with foreigners.
7 The country is full of silver and gold and treasures unlimited, the country is full of horses, its chariots are unlimited; — Dt 17:16–17 8 the country is full of idols. — Ps 20:7

when he arises to make the earth quake. [f]

11 Human pride will lower its eyes, human arrogance will be humbled,
and Yahweh alone will be exalted, on that day.
12 That will be a day for Yahweh Sabaoth, [g] for all who are majestic and haughty, for all who are proud, to be brought low, 13 for all the cedars of Lebanon, high and proud, and for all the oaks of Bashan; 14 for all the high mountains and for all the proud hills; 15 for every lofty tower and for every towering wall; 16 for all the ships of Tarshish — Ps 48:7c and for everything held precious. [h]

17 Human pride will be humbled, human arrogance brought low,
and Yahweh alone will be exalted, on that day.

n. A proper name defines the nature of the being that bears it, and fixes its destiny, cf. the names of Jacob, Gn 25:26; 27:36, and of his sons, Gn 29:31–30:24, etc. A change of name signifies a change of vocation, cf. Abraham, Gn 17:5; Israel, Gn 32:29; etc. The names the prophets give people are efficacious signs, viz. Isaiah, 7:3 (cf. 10:21); 7:14; 8:1–3 (cf. 8:18), and Hosea, 1:4,6,9; 2:1–3,25. The Jerusalem of the future was to receive other prophetic names, Is 60:14; 62:4,12; Ezk 48:35. Here Jerusalem's new names, referring back to v. 21, are 'faithfulness' and 'saving justice'. For Isaiah, as for Amos, saving justice is primarily judicial equity but in a deeper sense means participating in God's saving justice, by which he reveals his holiness, see 5:16f.

o. These two vv., forming a somewhat prosaic commentary on the foregoing, have perhaps been added by one of Isaiah's disciples.

p. Isaiah rarely attacks heathen customs, though see also 2:6–8. The trees in question were not in themselves cult-objects but sheltered religious practices borrowed from the Canaanites, see Dt 12:2b, where the examples quoted show that these abuses were to be found not only in the kingdom of Israel but in that of Judah too.

2 a. Substantially, this prophecy also occurs in Mi 4:1–3. Its origin is disputed. The most likely opinion is that here Mi depends on Is; the arguments against Isaian authorship of the text (in particular, its universalism) are not conclusive.

b. This new title introduces the small collection of prophecies comprising ch. 2–5.

c. Yahweh.

d. This poem, the unity of which is attested by the repetition of the same phrases (vv. 9,11,17 and 10,19,21), dates from the first period of Isaiah's activity when Judah was enjoying a long period of prosperity under Uzziah and Jotham; but it could also apply to Samaria which had not at this point fallen into the anarchy and decadence which it was soon to experience. The prophet foretells a devastating intervention on the part of Yahweh.

e. The frequent emendation of 'long' miqqedem to 'of diviners' qosemim or 'of divination' miqsam, is not supported by the versions; it does, however, justify the 'and' occurring in the text before 'sorcerers', which we perforce omit. Divination was widely practised in the ancient Middle East, Israel being no exception, 8:19; 1 S 28:3seq., despite being condemned in Ex 22:17; Lv 19:31; 20:27; Dt 18:10–11,14. Nothing is known about divination among the Philistines, but their diviners are mentioned in 1 S 6:2.

f. 'when he . . . quake' Gk; Hebr. omits. The whole v. and the concluding, possibly corrupt, words of v. 9 are missing in 1QIs[a]. The v. is repeated in vv. 19 and 21.

g. On the 'Day of Yahweh' see Am 5:18m. Here, Yahweh's intervention is described as an earthquake, Is 2:10,19,21.

h. Text uncertain; frequently emended to 'for boats', which yields a good parallelism.

Jr 10:11.15 When the idols all disappear, 18 2:10+ they will go into the caverns of the rocks 19 and into the fissures of the earth
in terror of Yahweh, at the brilliance of his majesty,
when he arises to make the earth quake.

31:7 That day, people will fling to moles and bats the silver idols and golden idols 20 which have been made for them to worship, and go into the crevices of the rocks 21

and the clefts in the cliffs,
in terror of Yahweh, at the brilliance of his majesty,
when he arises to make the earth quake.

Anarchy in Jerusalem [a]

3 Now the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth 1 is about to deprive Jerusalem and Judah of resources and provisions—all reserves of food, all reserves of water—of hero, warrior, judge, prophet, 2 diviner, elder, ·captain, dignitary, 3 counsellor, architect, soothsayer.
Qo 10:16 'I shall give them boys for princes, 4 raw lads [b] to rule over them.'
People will be ill-treated by one another, 5 each by his neighbour;
the young will insult the aged,
and the low, the respected.
Yes, a man will catch hold of his brother 6
in their father's house, to say,
'You have a cloak, so.you be leader, and rule this heap of ruins.'
And, that day, the other will protest, 7
'I am no healer;
in my house there is neither food nor clothing;
do not make me leader of the people.'
For Jerusalem has collapsed 8 and Judah has fallen, because their words and deeds affront Yahweh and insult his glorious gaze.
Their complacency bears witness against them, 9
Gn 13:13c; 18:20–21; 19:4–11 they parade their sin like Sodom;
they do not conceal it, all the worse for them,
for they have hatched their own downfall.
Say, 'Blessed the upright, 10
for he will feed on the fruit of his deeds; woe to the wicked, it will go ill with him, 11
for he will be treated as his actions deserve.' [c] O my people, their oppressors pillage them 12 and extortioners rule over them! [d] O my people, your rulers mislead you and efface the paths you ought to follow!
Ho 4:1–5 Yahweh has risen to accuse, 13 is standing to pass judgement on the people. ▶Mi 6:1–5 14 Yahweh is about to try the elders and the princes of his people,

'You are the ones who have ravaged the vineyard, 5:1–7
the spoils of the poor are in your houses.
15 By what right do you crush my people and grind the faces of the poor?' Am 2:7
says the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.

The women of Jerusalem

16 Yahweh says:

Because Zion's daughters are proud 32:9–14 and walk with heads held high Am 4:1–3 and enticing eyes—with mincing steps they go, jingling the bangles on their feet—
17 the Lord will give Zion's daughters scabby heads, Am 8:10 Yahweh will lay their foreheads bare.

18 That day the Lord will take away the ornamental chains, medallions, crescents, 19, 20 pendants, bracelets, trinkets, ·diadems, ankle-chains, necklaces, scent bottles, 21, 22 amulets, ·finger-rings, nose-rings, ·party dresses, cloaks, scarves, purses, mirrors, 23 linen clothes, turbans and mantillas. [e] instead of gorgeous clothes, sacking round the waist, [f] and brand marks instead of beauty.

Misery in Jerusalem

25 Your men will fall by the sword, your warriors in battle, 26 and her gates will moan and mourn;
she will sit on the ground, deserted.

1 4 That day, seven women will catch hold of one man and say, 'We will eat our own food, and wear our own clothing, but just let us bear your name. Take our disgrace away.' [a]

Yahweh's seedling [b]

2 That day, Yahweh's seedling will turn to beauty and glory, Jr 23:5–6 what the earth brings forth will turn to the pride and ornament Zc 3:8;6:12 of Israel's survivors. 52:1;60:21

i. v. 22, missing from Gk and alien to the context, is probably a gloss.

3 a. This poem is assigned to the beginning of the reign of Ahaz, about 735 BC. With an immature king and threatened with foreign intervention, see 2 K 15:37, the country was in danger of foundering in anarchy. The text seems to be composed of two originally independent pieces, vv. 1–9[a] and 12–15; vv. 9[b]–11 are additional.

b. Alternatively, this may be construed as a plural of abstraction, hence: '(governing) as the fancy takes them'.

c. Vv. 10–11, proverbial in character, interrupt the description of anarchy; v. 10 is very different in Gk.

d. 'pillage' conj.; Hebr. has singular. • 'extortioners' versions; 'women' Hebr.

e. The catalogue of trinkets, vv. 18–23, is possibly additional. The exact meaning of a number of terms is uncertain.

f. In Hebr. saq, coarse material from which sacks were made, Gn 42:25, etc., but also a penitential or mourning garment, worn round the otherwise naked body, Is 20:2; Gn 37:34; 1 K 20:31; 21:27; Am 8:10; etc.

4 a. In the city, where the male population has been decimated by war, 3:25–26, several women will ask the same man if they can 'bear his name', that is to say, if he will be their master in the Hebr. sense of the expression. The proud women of Jerusalem will become concubines.

b. The 'seedling' and 'what the earth brings forth' designate either the Messiah, Jr 23:5 = 33:15; Zc 3:8; 6:12, or the 'remnant' of Israel (see following note), compared to a tree reburgeoning in the soil of Palestine. Vv. 2–6 or at least vv. 4–6 are generally thought to be a post-exilic composition.

My beloved had a vineyard

He dug it, cleared it of stones, 2

In the middle he built a tower, he hewed a press there too.
He expected it to yield fine grapes:
wild grapes were all it yielded.

And now, citizens of Jerusalem and people of Judah, 3
Mi 6:1–5 I ask you to judge between me and my vineyard.
Jr 2:4–7 What more could I have done for my vineyard 4 that I have not done?
Why, when I expected it to yield fine grapes, has it yielded wild ones?

Very well, I shall tell you what I am going to do to my vineyard: 5
I shall take away its hedge, for it to be grazed on,
and knock down its wall, for it to be trampled on.
I shall let it go to waste, unpruned, undug, 6

2 S 1:21 and I shall command the clouds to rain no rain on it.
Now, the vineyard of Yahweh Sabaoth is the House of Israel, 7

c. Faithless Israel will be punished, but because God loves his people a small 'remnant' will escape the invader's sword. This idea, already familiar to Amos, 3:12; 5:15; 9:8–10, is taken up by Isaiah, 6:13; 7:3c and 10:19–21; 28:5–6; 37:4 (= 2 K 19:4); 37:31–32, cf. Jr 3:14; 5:18; Ezk 5:3; 9; Mi 4:7; 5:2; Zp 2:7,9; 3:12–13. This purified and henceforth faithful remnant left in Jerusalem will once again become a powerful nation. After the disaster of 587 a new conception appears: the remnant will be found among the exiles, Ba 2:13; Ezk 12:16; in exile they will turn to God, Ezk 6:8–10; cf. Dt 30:1–2, and God will then re-assemble them for the messianic restoration, Is 11:11,16; Jr 23:3; 31:7; 50:20; Ezk 20:37; Mi 2:12–13. Back from exile this remnant, again unfaithful, will be further reduced in number and purified, Ob v.17 = Jl 3:5; Hg 1:12; Zc 1:3; 8:11; 13:8–9; 14:2. In the event, Christ proves to be the true 'Seedling' of the new and sanctified Israel, 11:1,10; cf. 4:2; Jr 23:3–6. • Unlike Israel, the non-Yahwist nations will have no 'remnant', 14:22,30; 15:9; 16:14; Ezk 21:37; Am 1:8; Ob v. 18.

d. Evocation of the column of cloud or fire which guided the Israelites during their exodus from Egypt. The allusion to the Exodus confirms the late date of the poem, cf. 10:26, which is an addition, 11:15–16, which is exilic, and the presentation of the return from exile as a second exodus in Second Isaiah, 40:3e.

5 a. A poem composed by Isaiah at the beginning of his ministry, perhaps based on a grape-harvest song. The theme of Israel as a vine, chosen and afterwards rejected, had been broached by Hosea, 10:1, and was to be taken up by Jeremiah, 2:21; 5:10; 6:9; 12:10, and Ezekiel, 15:1–8; 17:3–10; 19:10–14; cf. Ps 80:8–18; Is 27:2–5. Jesus was later to give it a new twist in the parable of the wicked husbandmen, Mt 21:33–44 and par. (see also the barren fig tree, Mt 21:18–19 and par.). In Jn 15:1–2 he unfolds the mystery of the 'true' vine. Other aspects of the vine theme appear in Dt 32:32–33 and Si 24:17.

b. In Hebr. soreq, the name of a high-quality plant, 16:8; Jr 2:21, cf. Gn 49:11, designated by the colour of its fruit.

c. These curses also date from the beginning of Isaiah's ministry, but were perhaps not all uttered on a single occasion. To the six curses of 5:2–24, it is sometimes suggested that a seventh should be added, 10:1–4, which may have been accidentally displaced. The curse is one of the literary forms of prophetic preaching, see marginal references. Here Isaiah is very close to Amos.

d. 'barrel . . . bushel', lit. 'only one bath, a homer of seed will yield only one ephah'.

e. Vv. 14–16 seem to be out of context and possibly belong to the poem in 2:6–22, the refrain of which, vv. 9 and 11, recurs here, v. 15.

f. God's 'holiness', see 6:3g, 'separates' him from all created things: since he transcends them, they cannot contaminate him. But this transcendent sanctity of God is apparent in his dealings with human beings in its aspect as 'justice' (1:26n), thereby emphasising its moral nature: God rewards good and punishes evil; this is God's 'judgement'. God's faithful love does not clash with his 'justice', on the contrary it is part of it, since God's kindness in forgiving Israel and the repentant sinner comes from his faithfulness to what he has promised, Ps 51:14; Mi 7:9. Justice is to be the overriding characteristic of the messianic kingdom, when God has transmitted some of his holiness to his people, 1:26; 4:3; cf. Mt 5:48.

g. 'kids' Gk; 'foreigners' Hebr.

h. A reference to the 'Day of Yahweh', foretold by the prophet in 2:12, and which the sceptics are drawing down on themselves by their insolence.

Woe to those whose might lies in wine bibbing, 22 their heroism in mixing strong drinks, who acquit the guilty for a bribe 23 and deny justice to the upright.[i] Yes, as the flame devours the stubble, 24 as the straw flares up and disappears, their root will be like decay and their shoot be carried off like dust, for having rejected the law of Yahweh Sabaoth, for having despised the word of the Holy One of Israel.

Yahweh's anger[j]

This is why Yahweh's anger has blazed out against his people; 25 and he has raised his hand against them to strike them;
why the mountains have shuddered and why corpses are lying like dung in the streets.
After all this, his anger is not spent.
9:11,16,20;10:4 No, his hand is still raised!

Yahweh summons the invaders[k]

Jr 5:15–17; 6:22–30 He hoists a signal for a distant nation,[l] 26 he whistles them up from the ends of the earth;
and see how swift, how fleet they come!

None of them tired, none of them stumbling, 27 none of them asleep or drowsy, none of them with belt unfastened, none of them with broken sandal-strap.

Their arrows are sharpened, 28
their bows all strung,
their horses' hoofs you would think were flint and their wheels, a whirlwind!

Ho 5:14 Am 3:12 Their roar is like that of a lioness, 29 like fierce young lions they roar, growling they seize their prey and carry it off, with no one to prevent it, growling at it,[m] that day, 30 like the growling of the sea.

Only look at the country: darkness and distress,
8:20–23 and the light turned to darkness by the clouds.[n]

B: THE BOOK OF IMMANUEL

The call of Isaiah[a]

1 K 22:19 Rv 4:2 Ezk 1:1;10:21 6 In the year of King Uzziah's death[b] I saw the Lord seated on a high and lofty 1 throne; his train filled the sanctuary.[c] ·Above him stood seraphs,[d] each one 2 with six wings: two to cover its face,[e] two to cover its feet[f] and two for flying; ·and 3 they were shouting these words to each other:

↗Rv 4:8 Nb 14:21 Holy, holy, holy[g] is Yahweh Sabaoth.
His glory fills the whole earth.

The door-posts shook at the sound of their shouting, and the Temple was full of 4
Ex 19:16g; smoke.[h] ·Then I said: 5

'Woe is me! I am lost, for I am a man of unclean lips and I live among a people of unclean lips, and my eyes have seen the King, Yahweh Sabaoth.'

Ex 33:20i

6 Then one of the seraphs flew to me, holding in its hand a live coal which it
7 had taken from the altar with a pair of tongs. ·With this it touched my mouth and said:

Jr 1:9
Dn 10:16

'Look, this has touched your lips,[i] your guilt has been removed and your sin forgiven.'

8 I then heard the voice of the Lord saying:

'Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?'

9 And I said, 'Here am I, send me.'[j] ·He said:

Ex 4:10–13
Jr 1:6

'Go, and say to this people,
"Listen and listen, but never understand!
Look and look, but never perceive!"
10 Make this people's heart coarse, make their ears dull, shut their eyes tight, or they will use their eyes to see,
use their ears to hear,
use their heart to understand, and change their ways and be healed.'[k]

11 I then said, 'Until when, Lord?'[l] He replied, 'Until towns are in ruins and 12 deserted, houses untenanted and a great desolation reigns in the land, ·and Yahweh has driven the people away and the country is totally abandoned.
13 And suppose one-tenth of them are left in it, that will be stripped again, like the terebinth, like the oak, cut back to the stock; their stock is a holy seed.'[m]

i. 'the upright' (sing.) Gk; Hebr. has plural.

j. The fragment vv. 25–30 probably belongs to the poem in 9:7–20, the refrain of which also occurs here.

k. This poem may refer to one of the great Assyrian invasions in the days of Isaiah: those of Tiglath-Pileser III in 735 or 732, of Shalmaneser in 722, of Sargon in 711, or of Sennacherib in 701. But the invader is not named, and the subject may be of general application: God summons a powerful nation as the instrument of his vengeance, see 10:5a, Dt 28:49–52.

l. 'nation' conj., from context; Hebr. has plural.

m. i.e. at the country of Judah, cf. remainder of v.

n. The darkness of the 'Day of Yahweh', cf. Am 5:18,20.

6 a. The more natural place for the vision would have been at the beginning of the book, but the book, see Introduction to Prophets, pp. 1168–9, is composed of independent collections of material. The vision aptly introduces the 'Book of Immanuel' which assembles the prophecies relating to the Syro-Ephraimite war when the threats of vv. 11–13 came true.

b. Probably in 740 BC.

c. The Hekal, the chamber leading into the Debir or 'Holy of Holies', see 1 K 6:1–38.

d. Etymologically, the 'burning ones', but apart from the name these winged beings have nothing in common with the fiery serpents of Nb 21:6,8; cf. Dt 8:15, or the flying ones of Is 14:29; 30:6. These were figures of human shape but equipped with six wings, they were of a type with the mysterious beings who carry Yahweh's chariot in Ezk 1 and 10, like the analogous figures attached to the ark, Ex 25:18i. Later tradition gave the names 'seraphs' and 'cherubim' to two orders of angels.

e. For fear of seeing Yahweh, see Ex 33:20i.

f. Euphemism for sexual organs.

g. God's holiness is a central theme of Isaiah's preaching; he frequently calls Yahweh 'the Holy One of Israel', 1:4; 5:19,24; 10:17,20; 41:14,16,20; etc. This divine sanctity requires people to be sanctified, i.e. separated from everything profane, Lv 17:1c, purified from sin, Is 6:5–7, sharing in the 'justice' of God, see Is 1:26n; 5:16f.

h. The sign of God's presence on Sinai, Ex 19:16g, in the Tent in the desert, Ex 40:34–35, and in the Temple in Jerusalem, 1 K 8:10–12; Ezk 10:4.

i. The prophet is the bearer of the word of God; he is his 'mouth', cf. Ex 4:16. Similarly, Yahweh touches Jeremiah's mouth, Jr 1:9, and Ezekiel eats the scroll containing the word of God, Ezk 3:1–3. All fire purifies, Jr 6:29, see Mt 3:11i; much more so the fire from the altar.

j. The readiness of Isaiah recalls the faith of Abraham, Gn 12:1–4, and is in contrast to the hesitation of Moses, Ex 4:10–12, and especially of Jeremiah, Jr 1:6.

k. The prophet's preaching will be met by incomprehension on the part of his audience. The imperatives used in vv. 9 and 10 should not mislead since they have the force of the indicative, cf. 29:9: God does not desire this incomprehension, he foresees it and incorporates it into his designs. It reveals sin lodged in the heart and precipitates judgement; compare the hardening of Pharaoh's heart, Ex 4:21; 7:3; etc. This passage in Isaiah is quoted several times in the NT, Mt 13:14–15par.; Jn 12:40; Ac 28:26–27, with special reference to the parables, Mt 13:13.

l. The prophet does not want to accept the condemnation as final. Without confounding his hope, God's reply stresses the gravity of the ordeals which will precede salvation.

m. A difficult v. The final phrase is missing in Gk, but should be retained: from the truncated stock, a new tree will grow, see 4:2–3c.

Isaiah intervenes

2 K 16:5–9 7 In the reign of Ahaz son of Jotham, son of Uzziah king of Judah, Razon [a] king 1 of Aram advanced on Jerusalem with Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, to attack it; but he was unable to attack it. [b] ·The House of David was informed: 2 'Aram has halted in Ephraimite territory.' At this, his heart and his people's hearts shook like forest trees shaking in the wind.

Yahweh then said to Isaiah, 'Go out with your son Shear-Jashub, [c] and meet 3 2 K 20:20k Ahaz at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, on the road to the Fuller's Field, and say to him, "Pay attention and keep calm. Do not be frightened or demoral- 4 ised by these two smouldering sticks of firewood, by the fierce anger of Razon, Aram and the son of Remaliah, ·or because Aram, Ephraim and the son of 5
Remaliah have been plotting against you and saying: ·Let us mount an attack on 6 Judah, destroy it, force it onto our side and install the son of Tabeel [d] there as king.

"Lord Yahweh says this: 7

This will not happen, it will never occur, for the head of Aram is Damascus, 8 and the head of Damascus is Razon;
another sixty-five years,
and Ephraim will cease to be a people.
The head of Ephraim is Samaria, 9 and the head of Samaria is the son of Remaliah.
If you will not take your stand on me 28:16;30:15 2 Ch 20:20 you will not stand firm." ' [e]

Isaiah intervenes again

Yahweh spoke to Ahaz again and said: 10

Ask Yahweh your God for a sign, 11 either in the depths of Sheol or in the heights above.

Dt 6:16 But Ahaz said, 'I will not ask. I will not put Yahweh to the test.' 12
He then said: 13

Listen now, House of David:
are you not satisfied with trying human patience that you should try my God's patience too?
The Lord will give you a sign in any case: [f] 14 Mi 5:2 ↗Mt 1:23 It is this: the young woman [g] is with child and will give birth to a son 9:5b whom she will call Immanuel.
7:22 On curds and honey will he feed 15 until he knows how to refuse the bad and choose the good.
Dt 1:39 1 K 3:9 Before the child knows how to refuse the bad and choose the good, 16
the lands whose two kings are frightening you [h] will be deserted.
Yahweh will bring times for you, 17 your people and your ancestral House, such as have not been seen since Ephraim broke away from Judah [i] (the king of Assyria).

Prediction of an invasion [j]

When that day comes, 18
Yahweh will whistle up mosquitoes from the distant streams of Egypt and bees from the land of Assyria, and they will all come and settle 19 on the streams in the gullies, in the holes in the rocks, on all the thorn-bushes and on all the water-points.

20 That day the Lord will shave, with a razor hired from the other side of the River (with the king of Assyria), the head and the hair of the leg,
and take off the beard, too.
21 When that day comes, each man will raise one heifer and two sheep, 22 and because of the abundant milk they give,
(on curds will he feed) all who are left in the country will feed on curds and honey.
23 When that day comes, wherever there used to be a thousand vines 5:10 worth a thousand pieces of silver, all will be brambles and thorn-bushes; 24 to be ventured into only with arrows and bow, for the country will be nothing but brambles and thorn-bushes.
25 No more will you venture on any hillside formerly under the hoe for fear of the brambles and thorn-bushes;
it will be fit only for pasturing the cattle, 5:17
a tramping-ground for sheep.

7 a. 'Razon' Gk and Assyrian inscriptions; 'Rezin' Hebr.

b. This was the Syro-Ephraimite War: the king of Aram and king of Israel hoped to force Judah into a coalition against Assyria. In spite of Isaiah's warnings, Ahaz appealed for help to Tiglath-Pileser III, who attacked Damascus and Samaria, at the same time reducing Judah to vassalage, Ahaz having put his own country at Assyria's mercy, see 2 K 16:5–16.

c. This prophetic name, see 1:26n, means 'A remnant will return', i.e. will be converted to Yahweh and thus escape punishment, see 4:3c; 10:20–23.

d. Probably an Aramaean of the Damascus court. The name means 'God is good' but MT revocalises it to mean 'good for nothing'.

e. Difficult text. Some textual critics propose the repositioning of v. 8^b after v. 9^a and the emending of '65 years' to '5 or 6 years'. Samaria in fact fell in 722 or 721 BC. As the text stands, it implies an unwritten contrast between Judah, the capital of which is Jerusalem and the true 'head' of which is Yahweh, and its less privileged enemies. Furthermore, the prophet foretells the disappearance of the Northern Kingdom but makes this contingent on an act of faith in God. For the prophets, faith is not so much a theoretical belief in the existence and uniqueness of God as an attitude of confidence based on God's choice of Israel: he has chosen Israel, he is Israel's God, Dt 7:6b, he alone has the power to save his people. This unconditional trust, a guarantee of salvation, 28:16, excludes all reliance not only on human beings but still more on false gods, 30:15; Ps 52:7; Jr 17:5.

f. The sign which King Ahaz refuses to ask for is given him by God nonetheless. It is the birth of a child whose name, Immanuel, meaning 'God with us', cf. 8:8,10, is prophetic, see 1:26n, and proclaims that God is about to protect and bless Judah. In other passages, 9:1–6; 11:1–9, Isaiah gives a more precise description of some of the aspects of the salvation brought by this child. These prophecies are an expression of the royal messianism already outlined by the prophet Nathan, 2 S 7, and later to be developed by Ezk 34:23; Mi 4:14–5:1; Hg 2:23; cf. Ps 2,45,72, 110. By means of a king and heir of David, God will give salvation to his people; the hopes of Yahweh's devotees lie in the permanence of the Davidic succession. Even if Isaiah had the birth of a son to Ahaz, for instance Hezekiah, immediately in mind (as seems likely, uncertainties about chronology notwithstanding, and as Gk seems to have understood it, reading 'whom you will call . . .'), we may sense from the solemnity of the prophetic saying and the emphatic meaning of the symbolic name given to the child that Isaiah saw more in this royal birth than immediate circumstances, namely a decisive intervention by God, towards the final establishment of the messianic kingdom. Thus the prophecy of Immanuel goes beyond its immediate realisation, and the evangelists, Mt 1:23 quoting Is 7:14, Mt 4:15–16 quoting Is 8:23–9:1, cf. Jn 1:5, followed by the whole Christian tradition, have understood it as a prophecy of the birth of Christ.

g. Gk reads 'the virgin', being more explicit than the Hebr. which uses 'almah, meaning either a young girl or a young, recently married woman. This LXX reading is, however, an important witness to an early Jewish interpretation, later adopted by the evangelist: Mt 1:23 understands the text to be a prophecy of the virginal conception of Jesus.

h. Like the previous prophecy, 7:7–9, this one foretells reverses about to overtake the kingdoms of Samaria and Damascus as God's promised method of avenging the kingdom of Judah now under threat.

i. i.e. a period of prosperity and glory such as Israel experienced in the reigns of David and Solomon. The second episode of the prophecy of Immanuel ends on this vision of hope. • 'the king of Assyria' is a gloss based on a misinterpretation.

j. The following passage has nothing to do with the Syro-Ephraimite War, but concerns Egypt and Assyria. It is not a prophetic utterance of blessing but the prediction of a devastation of the country by Assyria. It would seem to date from some time later, during Isaiah's final years of activity, before Sennacherib's invasion. It was probably inserted here because of the mention of curds and honey, v. 22, echoing v. 15. But whereas in v. 15 this food was a sign of heavenly favour, cf. Ex 3:8,17; etc.; Dt 6:3; 11:9; etc., in v. 22 it is the only food to be found in a devastated country which has reverted to elementary pastoralism.

The birth of a son to Isaiah [a]

8 Yahweh said to me, 'Take a large tablet and on it with an ordinary stylus write, 1
2 K 16:10–16;18:2 "Maher-Shalal-Hash-Baz". ·And take [b] reliable witnesses, the priest Uriah 2 and Zechariah son of Jeberechiah.'
I then had intercourse with the prophetess, who then conceived and gave birth 3 to a son. Yahweh said to me, 'Call him Maher-Shalal-Hash-Baz, ·for before the 4 7:16 child knows how to say "mother" or "father", the wealth of Damascus and the booty of Samaria will be carried away while the king of Assyria looks on.'

Shiloah and the Euphrates [c]

Jn 9:7 Yahweh spoke to me again and said, ·'Since this people has rejected the waters of 5, 6 7:1–2 Shiloah which flow smoothly, and has trembled before [d] Razon and the son of Rv 12:15j Remaliah, ·now, against it, the Lord will bring the mighty, swelling waters of the 7 River (the king of Assyria and all his glory); the River will flood up all its channels and overflow all its banks; ·it will flow into Judah, flooding everything and passing 8 on; it will reach right up to the neck, and the spreading of its wings will cover the whole extent of your country, Immanuel! [e]

7:14 Realise [f] this, peoples, and be afraid, 9

Arm yourselves yet be afraid!
Arm yourselves yet be afraid!
Devise plans as you may: they will come to nothing! 10
Make what pronouncements you like; it will not come about!

Isaiah's mission [g]

For this was how Yahweh spoke to me when his hand seized hold of me 11 and he taught me not to follow the path of this people, saying,
'Do not call conspiracy all that this people calls conspiracy; 12 and hence there will be no dawn for them. [i]

Wandering in darkness [j]

Oppressed and starving he will wander the country; 21 and, once starving, he will become frenzied

22 then down to earth, there will be only anguish, gloom, the confusion of night, swirling darkness.

8 a. Despite the parallelism with 7:16, this short prophetic saying is quite different in scope from the one about Immanuel and has nothing to do with royal messianism. The prophetic name of Isaiah's second son is a sign and portent, see 1:26n; 7:3; 8:18; it means 'Speedy-spoil-quick-booty' and foretells the imminent sack of Damascus and Samaria by the Assyrians. Compare the symbolic names of Hosea's children, Ho 1:4,6,9.

b. 'take' Gk; 'let me take' Hebr.

c. The waters of Shiloah, v. 6, cf. 7:3, symbolise God's protection, to which the people prefers the help of Assyria ('the River', v. 7, i.e. the Euphrates), which will turn to its disadvantage, see 7:1b.

d. 'trembled (lit. melted) before' conj.; Hebr. 'exultation' (?) makes no sense, unless related to the verb of the same root 'to rejoice' and taken to refer to a pro-Syrian party active in Judah. The versions read 'have chosen (as king)', which is historically impossible.

e. The use of this prophetic name, cf. 7:14, here and, undisguised in v. 10, underlines the unity of this group of prophetic sayings; the punishments foretold are preparing the way for the fulfilment of the promises.

f. 'Realise this' Gk; 'Were you going' (?) Hebr.

g. Here, Isaiah seems to be explaining the reason for his attitude, for the benefit of his disciples, v. 16. Yahweh himself has taught him to oppose the people of Judah and put his trust in no one but God—a difficult attitude to adopt in circumstances so ambiguous, vv. 14–15, and destined to make true fidelity the more apparent.

h. Instead of 'sanctuary' miqdash, Targ. reads 'trap' moqesh as at end of v. The present text seems to be either a mistake or a scribal correction.

i. vv. 19–20, possibly misplaced, are very obscure. Isaiah is reporting the words of his opponents who claim that the people has the right to practise divination, see 2:6e. The answer, v. 19b, is probably ironic, and the prophet seems to conclude, v. 20, by saying that this kind of talk leads to a dead-end. But the text is uncertain and the meaning is in doubt.

j. Here again we seem to have a misplaced prophetic fragment. In principle, it seems to be about someone travelling through the ravaged country and giving vent to his distress. But it is not clear what connection this short poem has with its immediate context. It ought perhaps to be attached to 5:26–30, to which it would make an appropriate continuation.

k. This v., foretelling a glorious future in contrast to the humiliating past for the northern parts of Palestine, apparently alludes to Tiglath-Pileser III's campaign in Galilee and the deportation of 732 BC, see 2 K 15:29. In the following prophetic saying, Isaiah foretells a 'Day of Yahweh' which will bring deliverance to the deportees; at the same time, he foretells the peaceful reign of a child of royal race, the Immanuel of 7:14.

9 a. lit. 'footgear of clangour'. • The destruction of warlike equipment heralds an age of peace, symbolically described in 11:6–9, see earlier 2:4.

b. These titles are similar to those found in coronation rescripts of the Egyptian pharaohs. The royal child will possess the wisdom of Solomon, the valour and piety of David, the great virtues of Moses and the patriarchs, cf. 11:2. Christian tradition and the Christmas liturgy apply these titles to Christ, presenting him as the true Immanuel.

Lk 1:32–33 From this time onwards and for ever, the jealous love of Yahweh Sabaoth will do this. [c]

The ordeals of the Northern Kingdom [d]

55:10–11 The Lord has launched a word at Jacob 7 8 and it has fallen on Israel; and the people will all soon know it, 8 9 Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria, who say in the pride of their arrogant hearts,
'The bricks have fallen down but we shall rebuild with dressed stone; 9 10 the sycamores have been felled but we shall replace them with cedars.'
But, against them, Yahweh has raised their foe Razon, [e] 10 11
he has whipped up their enemies,
Aram to the east, Philistines to the west, 11 12
Pr 30:14 to devour Israel with gaping jaws. [f]
Jr 10:25 After all this, his anger is not spent.
Mi 3:3 No, his hand is still raised!
Hab 1:13

5:25j But the people would not come back to him who struck them, 12 13
Jr 5:3–6 they would not seek out Yahweh Sabaoth;
Ho 7:10–15 hence Yahweh has topped and tailed Israel, 13 14
Am 4:6–11,6f cutting off palm and reed in a single day. [g]
(The 'top' is the elder and the man of rank; 14 15 the 'tail' is the prophet teaching lies.) This people's leaders have led them astray, 15 16 and those who are led by them are swallowed up. [h] Hence the Lord will no longer take delight in their young people, 16 17 or pity on their orphans and widows, since all of them are godless and evil,
and everything they say is madness.
After all this, his anger is not spent.
No, his hand is still raised!

Yes, wickedness has been burning like a fire, 17 devouring bramble and thorn-bush, 18 setting the forest thickets ablaze—up they go in billowing smoke!
The country has been set on fire [i] 18 19
by the fury of Yahweh Sabaoth, and the people are like food for the flames.
No one spares a thought for his brother.
They have sliced to the right and are still hungry, 19 20 they have eaten to the left and are not satisfied;
each devours the flesh of his own arm.
Manasseh devours Ephraim, Ephraim Manasseh, 20 together they turn against Judah.
After all this, his anger is not spent. 21
No, his hand is still raised!

10 Woe to those who enact unjust decrees, 1 who compose oppressive legislation to deny justice to the weak 2 1:17,23; 3:14; 5:23 and to cheat the humblest of my people of fair judgement, Ex 22:20–21+ to make widows their prey and to rob the orphan.
Jr 5:31 What will you do on the day of punishment, 3 when disaster comes from far away?

To whom will you run for help and where will you leave your riches, 4 to avoid squatting among the captives or falling among the slain?
After all this, his anger is not spent.
No, his hand is still raised!

Against the king of Assyria [a]

5 Woe to Assyria, rod of my anger, 14:24–27 the club in their hands is my fury!
6 I was sending him against a godless nation, 47:6 commissioning him against the people who enraged me, Zc 1:15 to pillage and plunder at will and trample on them like the mud in the streets.
7 But this was not his intention nor did his heart plan it so,
for he dreamed of putting an end to them,
of liquidating nations without number!
8 For he thought, 'Are not my officers all kings? 36:18–20 9 Is not Calno like Carchemish, Hamath like Arpad,
Samaria like Damascus? [b]
10 As my hand has found the kingdoms of the false gods, [c] where there were more images than in Jerusalem and Samaria, 11 as I have treated Samaria and her false gods shall I not treat Jerusalem and her statues too?'

12 When the Lord has completed all his work on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, he will punish [d] the fruit of the king of Assyria's boastful heart and the insolence of his haughty looks.
13 For he thinks:

'By the strength of my own arm I have done this Dt 8:17+ and by my own wisdom: how intelligent I have been!
I have abolished the frontiers between peoples,
I have plundered their treasures,
like a hero, I have subjugated their inhabitants.
14 My hand has found, as though a bird's nest,
the riches of the peoples.

c. Yahweh's jealous love for his people prompts him both to punish their unfaithfulness, see Ex 20:5; Dt 4:24, and to procure their well-being.

d. This poem, with refrain, vv. 11[b],16.20[b]; 10:4[b], cf. 5:25, was uttered against the Northern Kingdom during a time of hostility between Israel and Judah, either in 739 BC, during the preparations for the war against Ahaz, 2 K 15:37, or in 734 BC, when the war was over and the Northern Kingdom was dominated by Assyria, 2 K 15:29.

e. 'their foe Razon' conj.; 'the foes of Razon' Hebr., making no sense.

f. The combined hostility of Philistines and Aramaeans may have been a fact, but is not attested elsewhere.

g. 'top and tail, palm and reed' seem to mean rulers and ruled, cf. 19:15; Dt 28:13,44. The following v. is probably an explanatory gloss.

h. Perhaps 5:25, probably misplaced, ought to be inserted here.

i. 'set on fire' Gk; Hebr. not clear.

10 a. This seems to refer to Sennacherib and the invasion of 701 BC. Compare vv. 8–11 with 36:18–20. Without knowing it, the king of Assyria is the instrument executing God's judgement on a rebellious people, see 5:26; 7:18; 8:7; 13:5. For Jeremiah, similarly, Nebuchadnezzar was to be a scourge in God's hand, Jr 50:23; 51:20, being in fact his servant, Jr 25:9; 27:6; 43:10. But the mission, of which the invader is unaware, does not relieve him of responsibility. His pride and cruelty will be punished on a day chosen by God, v. 12.

b. Isaiah cites the powerful cities which have been ravaged by the Assyrians in previous campaigns: Calno in northern Syria, captured by Tiglath-Pileser III in 738; Carchemish, on the Euphrates, taken by Sargon in 717; Hamath, on the Orontes, captured by Sargon in 720; Arpad near Aleppo, already besieged and captured by Tiglath-Pilesar before the Syro-Ephraimite War; Samaria, which fell in 721, and Damascus, in 732.

c. Isaiah makes the Assyrian king talk like a good Yahwist for whom foreign gods were 'nothings-whatever', 'elilim, a term often used by Isaiah for idols.

d. 'he will' Gk; 'I shall' Hebr. • This whole prose v. has been interpolated.

Like someone collecting deserted eggs,
I have collected the whole world while no one has fluttered a wing or opened a beak to squawk.'

45:9 Rm 9:20–21
Does the axe claim more credit than the man who wields it, 15 or the saw more strength than the man who handles it?
As though a staff controlled those who raise it, or the club could raise what is not made of wood!
That is why Yahweh Sabaoth is going to inflict 16
leanness on his stout men, and beneath his glory kindle a fever burning like a fire.
The light of Israel will become a fire 17 37:36 and its Holy One a flame burning and devouring
his thorn-bushes and brambles in a day.
He will consume his luxuriant forest and productive ground, 18
he will ravage body and soul:
it will be like a consumptive wasting away;
and what remain of the trees of his forest 19 will be so few that a child could write their number.[e]

The little remnant[f]

When that day comes, 20
the remnant of Israel and the survivors of the House of Jacob will stop relying on the man who strikes them and will truly rely on Yahweh, the Holy One of Israel.
4:3c A remnant will return, the remnant of Jacob, 21 to the mighty God.
↗Rm 9:27 Israel, though your people are like the sand of the sea, 22 only a remnant of them will return:
a destruction has been decreed Rm 5:20–21 which will make justice overflow, for, throughout the country, 23
the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth will enforce the destruction now decreed.

14:24–27; 30:27–33; 31:4–9; 37:22–29 Trust in God[g]

That is why the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth says this: 24

My people who live in Zion, do not be afraid of Assyria!
He may strike you with the rod,
he may raise the club against you (on the way from Egypt),[h] but in a very short time 25
the retribution will come to an end, and my anger will destroy them.
Yahweh Sabaoth will brandish a whip at him 26 9:3 Jg 7:25 Ex 14:16 as he struck Midian at Oreb's Rock, will brandish his rod at the Sea as he raised it on the way from Egypt.[i]
When that day comes, 27
his burden will fall from your shoulder, and his yoke from your neck,
and the yoke will be destroyed . . .[j]

the hill of Jerusalem.
33 See how the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth violently lops off the foliage!
The ones standing highest are cut down, the proudest are laid low!
34 The forest thickets fall beneath the axe, and the Lebanon falls to the blows of a Mighty One.

e. Some think that vv. 16–19 are about Judah, rather than the king of Assyria.

f. This short prophetic saying seems to be a commentary on the name given by Isaiah to his eldest son Shear-Jashub, 'a remnant will return', see 7:3. The theology of the 'remnant', dear to Isaiah, see 4:3c, is resumed here under its two aspects of: prediction of an exemplary punishment leaving only a small remnant surviving, vv. 22–23; and promise, for this remnant, of a conversion (yashub, 'it will return'), accompanied by forgiveness and new blessings, vv. 20–21.

g. This prophetic saying seems to have been uttered shortly before Sennacherib's attack in 701 BC.

h. Gloss taken from v. 26.

i. The whole v. is additional, interrupting the development of the poem, see 4:5d.

j. The last words of the v. are not clear (lit. 'before the fat'). Some suggest attaching 'will be destroyed' to the previous phrase and then emending to read: 'he has advanced on Samaria', making this the beginning of the following passage.

k. vv. 28–32 describe the invader's advance. If the passage applies to Sennacherib, see v. 5, this was not the route taken by his army, see 2 K 18:17, but a conventional description of an invasion coming from the north, cf. Is 14:31. The towns have not all been identified; the last, Nob, was on Mount Scopus, overlooking Jerusalem.

11 a. A messianic poem describing in some detail the salient characteristics of the coming Messiah: of Davidic stock: v. 1, he will be filled with the spirit of the prophets, v. 2, will establish in society that 'integrity' which is the reflection of God's sanctity on earth, vv. 3seq., see 1:26n; 5:16f; he will restore the peace of Eden, vv. 6–8, which is the fruit of knowledge of God, v. 9.

b. Father of David, 1 S 16:1seq., see Rt 4:22, ancestor of all the kings of Judah and the Messiah, cf. Mt 1:6–16.

c. The 'Spirit of Yahweh' or 'holy Spirit of Yahweh', 42:1; 61:1seq.; 63:10–13; Ps 51:12; Ws 1:5; 9:17, his 'breath' ('breath' and 'spirit' translate the same word, ruah), is found active throughout biblical history. Before creation it rests on the abyss, Gn 1:2, and to it all creatures owe life, Gn 2:7; Ps 33:6; 104:29–30, cf. Ezk 37:5–6,9–10. It inspires the Judges, Jg 3:10; 6:34; 11:29, and Saul, 1 S 11:6. It gives craftsmen their skill, Ex 31:3; 35:31, judges their discretion, Nb 11:17, Joseph his wisdom, Gn 41:38. But especially it inspires the prophets, 48:16; 61:1; Nb 11:17 (Moses), 25–26; 24:2; 1 S 10:6,10; 19:20; 2 S 23:2 (David); 2 K 2:9 (Elijah); 2 Ch 15:1; 20:14; 24:20; Mi 3:8; Zc 7:12, whereas false prophets follow their own spirit, Ezk 13:3, see also Dn 4:5,15; 5:11–12,14. This text teaches that this spirit of the prophets will be bestowed on the Messiah; Jl 3:1–2 later foretells that in the messianic era it will be poured out on all people, see Ac 2:16–17. Like the doctrine of wisdom, see Pr 8:22e; Ws 7:22i, the doctrine of the Spirit is to achieve its perfect expression in the New Testament, see Jn 1:33x; 14:16i, 26r; Ac 1:8j; 2:4,24u; Rm 5:5d.

d. The prophetic spirit confers on the Messiah the outstanding virtues of his great ancestors: the wisdom and insight of Solomon, the heroism and prudence of David, the knowledge and fear of God characteristic of patriarch and prophet, of Moses, Jacob and Abraham. Cf. 9:5. The list of these qualities, as given in LXX and Vulg. (these add 'piety', a repetition of the 'fear of Yahweh'), has become the Christian 'seven gifts of the Holy Spirit'.

C: PROCLAMATIONS ABOUT FOREIGN NATIONS [a]

Against Babylon [b]

21:1–10;
47:1–15
Jr 50–51
Rv 17–18

1 13 Proclamation about Babylon, seen by Isaiah son of Amoz.

2 On a bare hill hoist a signal, shout for them,
beckon them to come
to the Nobles' Gate.
3 I have issued orders
to my sacred warriors, [c]
I have summoned my heroes to serve my anger, my proud champions.
4 The noise of a great crowd in the mountains,
like an immense people,
the tumultuous sound of kingdoms,
of nations mustering:
it is Yahweh Sabaoth
marshalling the troops for battle.

e. Humanity's rebellion against God, Gn 3, had broken the harmony between humanity and nature, Gn 3:17–19, and between one human being and another Gn 4. The prophets foretell war and oppression as the punishment for the sins of Israel. The messianic era, however, with its forgiveness of sin, its reconciliation with God, its reign of justice, will establish the peace that results from these: it will pay to till the land, Ho 2:20,23–24; Am 9:13–14; weapons of war will all be set aside, Is 2:4; 9:4; Mi 4:3–4; 5:9–10; Zc 9:10; there will be lasting peace, Is 9:6; 32:17; 60:17–18; Jl 4:17; Zp 3:13; Zc 3:10. The new covenant is a covenant of peace, Ezk 34:25; 37:26. The messianic kingdom is a kingdom of peace, Ps 72:3,7; Zc 9:8–10. And this peace will extend to the animal kingdom, and even to the snake which was responsible for the first fault. Here the messianic age is symbolically described as a return to the peace of Eden.

f. This poem, dating from the end of exile in Babylon, has been inserted here on the strength of its mentioning the root of Jesse, v. 10, see v. 1.

g. List of countries to which the Jews had been dispersed at the period of the Exile: Pathros in Upper Egypt, Ethiopia (Cush), Persia (Elam), Babylonia (Shinar), Hamath in Syria; the 'islands of the sea' (i.e. coastal towns) are Greece and more distant settlements round the Mediterranean.

h. In the messianic context, the prophets often foretell the end of the schism between, and the reconciliation of, Israel and Judah, Jr 3:18; 23:5–6; 31:1; Ezk 37:15–27; Ho 2:2; Mi 2:12; Zc 9:10.

i. 'will dry up' versions; 'will vow to destruction' Hebr. The 'River' is the Euphrates, see v. 16.

j. The miracles predicted are a repetition of those of Moses and Joshua, the crossing of the Sea and the crossing of the Jordan. The return of the exiles is described as a new Exodus, see 40:3d.

12 a. This psalm, of uncertain date and origin, has been inserted here as conclusion to the Book of Immanuel. It is the thanksgiving hymn of someone in distress whom God has helped and rescued. The second part, more lyrical in tone, extols Yahweh's glory.

b. Thus Gk, 1QIs[a], cf. Ex 15:2; 'and the song and Yah (is) Yahweh' MT.

13 a. Ch. 13–23 consist of proclamations about foreign nations, grouped together as in Jr 46–51 and Ezk 25–32. The collection contains pieces later than Isaiah, in particular the proclamations about Babylon in ch. 13–14.

b. This poem dates from the end of the Exile: Babylon, still in its splendour, v. 19, is about to fall to the onslaught of the Medes, v. 17, see v. 5. It is in the form of a 'lamentation' or qina, see 1:21*l*.

c. lit. 'my sanctified ones'; cf. Jr 51:27–28 (against Babylon); Jr 6:4; 22:7; Jl 4:9 (against Jerusalem). Consecration of the warriors is one of the aspects of holy war, Jos 3:5. But these new wars of Yahweh are no longer waged on behalf of Israel, and may even be waged against it.

They come from a distant country, from the far horizons, 5
Yahweh and the instruments of his fury

Hg 2:6 This is why I am going to shake the heavens, 13 why the earth will reel on its foundations, under the wrath of Yahweh Sabaoth,
the day when his anger ignites.
Then like a hunted gazelle, like sheep that nobody gathers in, 14 everyone will head back to his people, everyone will flee to his native land.
Jr 51:20–23 All those who are found will be stabbed, 15
all those captured will fall by the sword, Ho 10:14l their babies dashed to pieces before their eyes, 16 who care nothing for silver, who set no value by gold.

they will have no pity for the fruit of the womb, or mercy in their eyes for children.
And Babylon, that pearl of kingdoms, 19 that splendid jewel of the Chaldaeans, will, like Sodom and Gomorrah, be overthrown by God.
34:10–17 Never again will anyone live there or reside there 20 for all generations to come.
Never again will the Arab pitch his tent there, or the shepherds bring their flocks to nest.
But beasts of the desert will make their haunt there 21

d. Indo-European warrior-tribes, first allied with Babylon against Assyria, but later, having been united with the Persians under Cyrus, causing the ruin of Babylon in 539 BC.

e. 'towers' Vulg.; 'widows' Hebr.

14 a. This prediction of the return of the exiles and the conversion of the nations is out of place in this collection of proclamations about foreign peoples. It is similar in thought to 49:22; 66:20, see 45:14h.

b. This satire (mashal) on a fallen tyrant is directed against a king of Babylon, presumably either Nebuchadnezzar or Nabonidus, and therefore belongs with the prophecies of the Exile. It is possible, however, that the original poem may have been composed earlier with a king of Assyria, Sargon II or Sennacherib, in mind and then adapted to fit the exilic period.

c. 'arrogance' versions and 1QIs[a]; MT corrupt.

d. The kings of Assyria and Babylon exploited the forests of the Lebanon for their buildings.

e. vv. 12–15 seem to be based on a Phoenician model. At all events, they display several points of contact with the Ras-Shamra poems: Daystar and Dawn were two divinities; the 'mount of Assembly' was where the gods used to meet, like Mount Olympus in Greek mythology. The Fathers identified the fall of the Morning Star (Vulg. 'Lucifer') with that of the prince of the demons.

How did you come to be thrown to the ground,

32:18–32
Dn 10:13b into the depths of the abyss!

'When they see you, they will scrutinise you 16 and consider what you have become,
"Is this the man who made the world tremble,
who overthrew kingdoms?
He made the world a desert, 17
he levelled cities
and never freed his prisoners to go home."
All other kings of nations, all of them, 18 lie honourably, each in his own tomb;
but you have been thrown away, unburied, 19 like a loathsome branch,[f] covered with heaps of the slain pierced by the sword who fall on the rocks of the abyss Jr 22:19 like trampled carrion.

'You will not rejoin them in the grave, 20 for you have brought your country to ruin and destroyed your people.
The offspring of the wicked leave no name behind them.
Prepare the slaughter for his sons 21
for the guilt of their father!
Never again must they rise to conquer the world and cover the face of the earth with their cities.

'I will rise against them, declares Yahweh Sabaoth, and deprive Babylon of 22 4:3c name, remnant, offspring and posterity, declares Yahweh. ·I shall turn it into the 23 haunt of hedgehogs, a swamp. I shall sweep it with the broom of destruction, declares Yahweh Sabaoth.'[g]

10:24+ Against Assyria[h]

Yahweh Sabaoth has sworn it, 24
'Yes, what I have planned will take place, what I have decided will be so:

'I shall break Assyria in my country, 25
I shall trample on him on my mountains.
9:3 Then his yoke will slip off them, his burden will slip from their shoulders.'

This is the decision taken in defiance of the whole world; 26 this, the hand outstretched in defiance of all nations.

Once Yahweh Sabaoth has decided, who will stop him? 27
Once he stretches out his hand, who can withdraw it?

Against the Philistines

28 In the year Ahaz died [i] came this proclamation:

29 All Philistia, do not rejoice because the rod which used to beat you is now broken, for the serpent stock will produce a viper, its offspring will be a flying dragon.

30 While the first-born of the poor are grazing and the destitute are resting in safety, I shall make your stock die of hunger and then slaughter [j] what remains of you.

31 Howl, gate! Shriek, city!
Totter, all Philistia!
For a smoke is coming from the north, [k] 20:1 Jr 1:13seq.
and there are no deserters in those battalions.

32 What reply will be given then to the messengers of that nation? [l]— That Yahweh founded Zion and there the poor of his people will find refuge.

On Moab [a]

1 15 Proclamation about Moab: ‖Jr 48 Ezk 25:8–11 Am 2:1–3

Laid waste in a night, [b] Ar-Moab lies silent;
Laid waste in a night,
Kir-Moab lies silent.

2 The daughter of Dibon has climbed [c]
to the high places to weep;
on Nebo and in Medeba Moab laments.

Every head shaven, ‖Jr 48:37–38
every beard cut off, 3 they wear sackcloth in their streets;
on their roofs and in their squares, everyone is lamenting
and collapsing in tears.

f. 'branch', in Hebr. netzer, alluding to the name Nebuchadnezzar. • To be deprived of burial was the worst of curses, see 1 K 13:21–22; Jr 22:19.

g. These two vv. in prose seem to have been added to give emphasis to the end of the poem.

h. Prophecy of Isaiah probably delivered in 701, at the time of Sennacherib's invasion, cf. 10:24–27; 30:27–33; 31:4–9; 37:22–29.

i. This prophecy possibly dates from the years preceding Sennacherib's invasion. The 'rod which used to beat' Philistia would in that case have been Sargon II who invaded Philistia on several occasions, the last being in 711 BC, see 20:1seq. Sargon died in 705, but his successor Sennacherib, 'viper' or 'flying dragon', was to prove an even more redoubtable enemy. If this interpretation is correct, the reference to the death of Ahaz in the title must be an addition. Alternatively, perhaps the 'viper' and the 'flying dragon' were identified as Hezekiah son of Ahaz who, according to 2 K 18:8, devastated Philistia.

j. '(I shall) kill' Vulg. and 1QIs^{a}; 'he will kill' Hebr.

k. The Assyrian and Babylonian invasions came from the north, see Jr 1:3; 4:6; 6:1,27; Ezk 26:7.

l. Perhaps messengers sent by the Philistines to draw Judah into an anti-Assyrian coalition; but the text is uncertain. Be that as it may, the answer affirms the impregnability of Zion under Yahweh's protection.

15 a. Isaian authorship of the long poem on Moab in ch. 15–16 is disputed. Some consider the prophecies to pre-date Isaiah, who adapted them to his own times, see the prose conclusion, 16:13–14. Others date the poems, or part of them, to a period later than Isaiah. There are numerous parallels in them with the prophecy on Moab in Jr 48.

b. Devastation has overtaken the whole of Moab, the principal towns of which are mentioned in vv. 1–4, going roughly from south to north, from Kir (Kerak) to Heshbon and Elealeh, north of Nebo and Medeba. Vv. 5–9 describe the flight of the inhabitants southwards: Zoar (see Gn 19:22) and the Ravine of the Willows, the southern frontier of Moab.

c. 'The daughter of Dibon has climbed' conj.; following Targ. and Syr.; 'He climbs to the temple of Dibon' Hebr.

Heshbon and Elealeh are crying out in distress, 4
Nb 21:23 ‖Jr 48:34 their voices can be heard as far as Jahaz.
That is why the warriors of Moab are shivering, his soul trembles at the sound.
‖Jr 48:36 Gn 19:22 His heart cries out in distress for Moab, 5 whose fugitives are already at Zoar, nearly at Eglath-Shelishiyah. [d]

They climb the slope of Luhith, weeping as they go;
on the road to Horonaim
they utter heart-rending cries.

The Waters of Nimrim 6
have become a waste land,
the grass dried up, the plants withered away,
nothing green any more.

That is why they are carrying 7 what they could save of their stores across the Ravine of the Willows.

For the cry for help re-echoes 8 round the territory of Moab;
their wailing, right to Eglaim,
to Beer-Elim, their wailing;

Dimon's [e] waters are swollen with blood, 9 and I have worse in store for Dimon:
a lion for those of Moab who survive,
for those left on its soil.

The Moabites' petition

16 Send the lamb to the ruler of the land, 1 from Sela by the desert, to the mountain of the daughter of Zion, [a] for soon, like a fluttered bird, 2 like nestlings cast out, will be the women of Moab at the fords of the Arnon.

Hold a council, make a decision. [b] 3
At noon spread your shadow as if it were night.
Hide those who have been driven out,
do not betray the fugitive, let those who have been driven out of Moab 4 come and live with you;
be their refuge in the face of the devastator.
Once the oppression is past, [c] and the devastation has stopped and those now trampling on the country have gone away, the throne will be made secure in faithful love, 5 and on it will sit in constancy within the tent of David a judge seeking fair judgement and pursuing uprightness.

We have heard about Moab's pride, 6 about how very proud it is,
about its arrogance, its pride, its rage, its bravado, which will come to nothing! [d]

Moab's lament ||Jr 48:29–33

7 And so Moab is wailing for Moab, wailing, every one of them.
For the raisin cakes of Kir-Hareseth [e] you mourn, stricken with grief.
8 For Heshbon's vineyards are withering, the vine of Sibmah
whose red grapes used to overcome the overlords of the nations.
It used to reach to Jazer, had wound its way into the desert, its shoots grew so numerous they spread across the sea.
9 And so I weep, as Jazer weeps, for the vine of Sibmah.
I water you with my tears,
Heshbon and Elealeh.
For over your harvest and vintage the cheering has died away;[f] 10 joy and gladness
have vanished from the orchards.
No more revelry in the vineyards,
no more happy shouting;
no more the treader treads wine in the presses,
the cheering has ceased.
11 That is why my whole being quivers like harp strings for Moab, my very heart, for Kir-Heres.
12 Moab will be seen,
wearing itself out on the high places and going to its temple to pray, but it will accomplish nothing.

13, 14 Such was the word which Yahweh spoke about Moab in the past. •And now Yahweh has spoken in these terms, 'Within three years, as a hired worker reckons them, the glory of Moab will be humbled, despite its teeming population. It will be reduced to nothing, an insignificant remnant.' [g] 4:3c

Against Damascus and Israel Jr 49:23–27 Am 1:3–5

1 17 Proclamation about Damascus: [a]

d. 'his heart' Gk, Targ.; 'my heart' Hebr. • 'its fugitives' 1QIs[a]; 'its bolts' Hebr.

e. 'Dimon' is perhaps a dialect variant of 'Dibon', see v. 2, chosen as evoking the idea of blood, Hebr. dam.

16 a. Difficult text, variously translated. Apparently the Moabites, threatened by the invasion, are trying to put themselves under the protection of the king of Judah or take refuge in his territory. The lamb sent would presumably be a token of submission, cf. 2 K 3:4. • Sela (the Rock) has sometimes been identified with modern Petra situated in Edom, but there must have been other 'Rocks' in Moab or the adjacent desert.

b. Vv. 3–4[a] contain the Moabite fugitives' petition to be granted asylum in Judah. To support their request, they express their confidence, vv. 4[b]–5, in the future of Judah, especially in the stability of the Davidic throne, founded on the premises frequently proclaimed by Isaiah.

c. It is tempting to translate: 'until the oppression . . .' and to link this phrase to the preceding one, but no textual witness supports this.

d. V. 6 seems to give Judah's answer to the Moabites.

e. Kir-Hareseth, as also Kir-Heresh in v. 11, is the same place as Kir-Moab (Kerak), 15:1, see 2 K 3:25. The subsequent place-names, from Heshbon to Elealeh, are grouped in the northern part of Moab, suitable for viticulture.

f. lit. 'the shout has fallen', i.e. the joyful shout of the grape-harvesters. Others translate: 'the (war) cry has rung out (over)', but parallelism with the following vv. favours the former interpretation.

g. This prose addition may be the confirmation of an earlier prophecy now very shortly to be fulfilled, see 15:1a. The hired worker's year was very strictly computed.

17 a. Despite the title, Damascus is the subject only of the first strophe and even then in parallel with Israel, which forms the subject of the following strophes. The prophecy perhaps dates from about 735 BC, when Damascus and Israel were allied against Judah, see 7:1b. Damascus was taken by Tiglath-Pilesar in 732, and Samaria by Sargon in 721.

Damascus will soon cease to be a city,
it will become a heap of ruins.
Its [b] towns, abandoned for ever, 2
will be pastures for flocks;
there they will rest with no one to disturb them.
Ephraim will be stripped of its defences 3 and Damascus of its sovereignty; 4:3c and the remnant of Aram will be treated like the glory of the Israelites—declares Yahweh Sabaoth.

When that day comes, Jacob's glory will diminish, 4 from being fat he will grow lean; as when a reaper [c] gathers in the standing corn 5 harvesting the ears of corn with his arm, Jos 15:8;18:16 or when they glean the ears in the Valley of Rephaim, nothing will remain but pickings, 6 as when an olive tree is beaten;
two or three berries left on the topmost bough, four or five berries on the branches of the tree—declares Yahweh, God of Israel.

That day, a man will look to his Creator and his eyes will turn to the Holy One of 7
Israel. ·He will no longer look to altars, his own handiwork, or to what his own 8
Ex 34:13e fingers have made: the sacred poles and incense-altars. [d]

That day, its cities of refuge will be abandoned 9 as were the woods and heaths at the Israelites' advance: [e]
there will be desolation.
Since you have forgotten the God of your salvation, 10 48:8 and failed to keep the Rock, your refuge, in mind, Dt 32:4 you plant pleasure-gardens, [f]
you sow exotic seeds;
the day you plant them, you get them to sprout, 11
and, next morning, your seedlings are in flower; but the harvest will vanish on the day of disease and incurable pain.

Disaster! The thunder of vast hordes, [g] 12
a thunder like the thunder of the seas, the roar of nations roaring like the roar of mighty floods, of nations roaring like the roar of ocean! 13
He rebukes them and far away they flee, driven like chaff on the mountains before the wind,
like an eddy of dust before the storm.
At evening all is terror, 14
by morning all have disappeared.
Such will be the lot of those who plunder us, such, the fate of our despoilers.

Against Cush [a]

18 Disaster! Land of the whirring locust 1 beyond the rivers of Cush, who send ambassadors by sea, 2
in little reed-boats across the waters!
Go, swift messengers [b]

to a nation tall and bronzed, to a people feared far and near,
a mighty and masterful nation whose country is criss-crossed with rivers.
3 All you who inhabit the world,
you who people the earth,
when the signal is hoisted on the mountains, you will see, when the ram's-horn is sounded, you will hear. ‖Jl 2:1b 4 For this is what Yahweh has told me, [c]
'I shall sit here quietly looking down, like the burning heat in the daytime, like a dewy mist in the heat of harvest.' 5 For, before the harvest, once the flowering is over and blossom turns into ripening grape, the branches will be cut off with pruning knives, Jn 15:2 and the shoots taken off, cut away.
6 All has been abandoned to the mountain birds of prey and the wild animals:
the birds of prey will summer on them,
and all the wild animals winter on them.

7 Then, an offering will be brought to Yahweh Sabaoth on behalf of a people tall and bronzed, on behalf of a people feared far and near, on behalf of a mighty and masterful nation whose country is criss-crossed with rivers: to the place where the name of Yahweh Sabaoth resides, Mount Zion. [d] 56:4–7 Zp 3:10 Ac 8:27seq.

Against Egypt

Jr 46 Ezk 29–32

1 19 Proclamation about Egypt: [a]

Look! Yahweh, riding a swift cloud, Ps 68:4+ is coming to Egypt.
The false gods of Egypt totter before him and Egypt's heart quails within her.
2 I shall stir up Egypt against Egypt, they will fight one another,
brother against brother, friend against friend,
city against city, kingdom against kingdom.
3 Egypt's spirit will fail within her and I shall confound her deliberations.
They will consult false gods and wizards, ghosts and sorcerers.

b. Following Gk. Instead of 'Its towns, abandoned for ever', Hebr. reads: 'The towns of Aroer (will be) abandoned'; but only two Aroers are known: one in Moab on the Arnon and the other in the territory of Gad and hence a great distance from Damascus.

c. 'reaper' conj.; 'harvest' Hebr.

d. Vv. 7–8, predicting conversion, are a later addition to this prophecy of woe.

e. Instead of woods and heaths, Gk has Amorites and Hivites, overcome by the Israelites at the conquest of Canaan. This may indeed have been the original text, but in any case the imminent invasion is contrasted with the glorious conquest of the country under Joshua.

f. Allusion to 'Adonis-gardens', ephemeral creations grown in honour of the god of vegetation, Adonis-Tammuz, see Ezk 8:14.

g. vv. 12–14 apparently refer to Sennacherib's invasion and the deliverance of Jerusalem in 701 BC, see 29:5–7; 37:36.

18 a. Cush, the ancient name of Ethiopia, here indicates Egypt which in the days of Isaiah was governed by an Ethiopian dynasty.

b. Pharaoh's envoys whom the prophet invites to go home and stop intriguing for an anti-Assyrian alliance.

c. The prophet predicts that Egypt is to be ravaged by invasion. Egypt was in fact invaded, pillaged and subjugated by Esarhaddon and Ashurbanipal in the first half of the seventh century.

d. Prose conclusion predicting the conversion of Ethiopia which, laid low by these events, will send its offerings to the Temple in Jerusalem.

19 a. Isaiah was opposed to any alliance with Egypt, see 30:1seq.; 31:1seq. He describes Egypt here as torn with dissension, liable to lead to despotism or foreign domination, v. 4. Nothing was to be gained from that quarter.

And I shall hand Egypt over 4 to the clutches of a cruel master, a ruthless king will rule them—
declares Yahweh Sabaoth.

The waters will ebb from the sea,[b] 5
the river will dry up and run low.
the streams will become foul, 6
the rivers of Egypt sink and dry up.
Rush and reed will turn black, the Nile-plants on the banks of the Nile; 7 all the vegetation of the Nile will wither, blow away and be no more.
The fishermen will groan, it will be mourning 8 for all who cast hook in the Nile;
those who spread nets on the waters will lose heart.
The workers of carded flax 9 and the weavers of white cloth will be confounded,
the weavers dismayed, 10
all the workmen dejected.
Yes, the princes of Zoan[c] are fools, 11
Pharaoh's wisest councillors make up a stupid council.
How dare you say to Pharaoh,
'I am descended from sages, I am descended from bygone kings'?
Where are these sages of yours? 12
Let them tell you, so that all may know, the plans Yahweh Sabaoth has made against Egypt!
The princes of Zoan are fools, 13
the princes of Noph,[d] self-deceivers, the top men of her provinces have led Egypt astray.
29:10 Yahweh has infused them 14
1 S 16:14e
1 K 22:19–23 with a giddy spirit;
they have led Egypt astray in all she undertakes like a drunkard straying about as he vomits.
Nowadays no one does for Egypt 15 9:13 what top and tail, palm and reed used to do.

The conversion of Egypt[e]

Jr 51:30 That day Egypt will be like women, trembling and terrified at the threatening hand 16
Na 3:13 of Yahweh Sabaoth, when he raises it against her. ·The land of Judah will become 17 Egypt's shame; whenever she is reminded of it, she will be terrified, because of the plan which Yahweh Sabaoth has laid against her. ·That day in Egypt there will be 18 five towns speaking the language of Canaan and pledging themselves to Yahweh Sabaoth; one of them will be called City of the Sun. ·That day there will be an altar 19 dedicated to Yahweh in the centre of Egypt and, close to the frontier, a pillar dedicated to Yahweh, ·and this will be a sign and a witness to Yahweh Sabaoth in 20 Egypt. When they cry to Yahweh for help because of oppressors, he will send them a Saviour and leader to deliver them. ·Yahweh will reveal himself to Egypt, and 21 the Egyptians will acknowledge Yahweh that day and will offer sacrifices and cereal offerings, and will make vows to Yahweh and perform them. ·And if 22 Yahweh strikes Egypt, having struck he will heal, and they will turn to Yahweh who will hear their prayers and heal them. ·That day there will be a highway from 23 Egypt to Assyria. Assyria will have access to Egypt and Egypt have access to Assyria. Egypt will serve with Assyria.

24 That day Israel will make a third with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing at the centre
25 of the world, ·and Yahweh Sabaoth will bless them in the words, 'Blessed be my people Egypt, Assyria my creation, and Israel my heritage.'

Relating to the capture of Ashdod [a]

1 20 The year the general-in-chief, sent by Sargon king of Assyria, came to 2 K 18:17
2 Ashdod and stormed and captured it; ·at that time Yahweh spoke through Isaiah son of Amoz and said, 'Go, undo the sackcloth round your waist and take the sandals off your feet.' And he did so, and walked about, naked and barefoot. [b]
3 Yahweh then said, 'As my servant Isaiah has been walking about naked and 4 barefoot for the last three years as a sign and portent for Egypt and Cush, ·so the king of Assyria will lead the captives of Egypt and the exiles of Cush, young and 5 old, naked and barefoot, their buttocks bared, to the shame of Egypt. ·Then they 2 S 10:4
6 will be afraid and ashamed of Cush their hope and Egypt their pride, ·and the 30:3–7 inhabitants of this coast [c] will say on that day, "Look what has happened to our hope, to those to whom we fled for help, to escape from the king of Assyria. How are we going to escape?" '

The fall of Babylon [a] 13–14;47:1–15

Jr 50–51
Rv 17–18

1 21 Proclamation about the coastal desert: [b]

As whirlwinds sweeping over the Negeb, he comes from the desert, from a fearsome country.
2 A harsh vision has been shown me, ↗Rv 17:3
'The traitor betrays and the despoiler despoils.
Advance, Elam, lay siege, Media!' [c]
I have cut short all groaning.
3 This is why my loins are racked with pain, why I am seized with pangs like the pangs of a woman in labour;
I am too distressed to hear, too afraid to look.
4 My heart is bewildered, dread overwhelms me,
the twilight I longed for has become my horror.
5 They lay the table, spread the cloth, Dn 5
they eat, they drink. [d]
Up, princes, grease the shield!

6 For this is what the Lord has told me,
'Go, post a look-out, let him report what he sees. Hab 2:1a 7 He will see cavalry, horsemen two by two, men mounted on donkeys, men mounted on camels; [e]

b. vv. 5–10 foretell a new plague for Egypt: the drying up of the Nile, on which the country's wealth depends.

c. Tanis, a city in the Delta.

d. Memphis, near Cairo, capital of Lower Egypt.

e. This prose passage is late and pre-supposes a Jewish settlement in Egypt, vv. 18–19, see Jr 44:1. It foretells the conversion of Egypt and its reconciliation with Assyria and Israel; the three peoples will be blessed by Yahweh, and Egypt and Assyria will enjoy the same privileges as Israel. Such wide universalism is not to be found again before Second Isaiah.

20 a. Ashdod, a Philistine town, was captured by Sargon II in 711 BC. The town having risen in revolt at the instigation of Egypt, this seems to have inspired Isaiah to predict an Assyrian victory over Egypt. This passage is a tradition about Isaiah, as are ch. 36–39, but is not to be found in 2 K.

b. The only prophecy portrayed in action attributed to Isaiah. Jeremiah and Ezekiel, however, often used this means of preaching, see pp. 1158, 1175. • On sackcloth as mourning costume, see 3:24f.

c. The Philistines and Israelites, who were always tempted to rely on Egypt and form coalitions with it against Assyria.

21 a. This prophecy, like those of ch. 13–14, foretells the destruction of Babylon, v. 9, by the Persians and Medes under Cyrus in 539 BC, see v. 2. It may possibly be a reworking of an earlier poem directed against Assyria, in which case it would refer to the fall of Nineveh in 612 under the combined onslaught of the Medes and Babylonians; the poem could not then be by Isaiah even in its original form.

b. The expression is possibly a translation of Assyrian mat tamti, 'maritime country', designating southern Babylonia.

c. Elam, situated to the east of Mesopotamia, was the homeland of the Medes and Persians, who overthrew the Babylonian Empire in the sixth century.

d. According to a tradition found in Dn 5 and in Herodotus, on the night when Babylon fell to the Persians an orgy was taking place there.

e. Not the invading army but the hurrying messengers, and later the caravans, coming to announce the news, see v. 9.

let him watch alertly, be very alert indeed!'
Then the look-out[f] shouted, 8
'On the watchtower, Lord, I stay all day
and at my post
I stand all night.
Now the cavalry is coming, horsemen two by two.' 9
He shouted again and said, ↗Rv 14:8;18:2 'Babylon has fallen, has fallen, and all the images of her gods he has shattered to the ground!'
Am 1:3h You whom I have threshed, grain of my threshing-floor,[g] 10 what I have heard from Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, I am telling you now.

On Edom[h]

Proclamation about Dumah: 11

From Seir, someone shouts to me,
'Watchman, what time of night?
Watchman, what time of night?'

The watchman answers, 12
'Morning is coming, then night again.
If you want to ask, ask!
Come back! Come here!'

Against the Arabs

Proclamation about the wastelands:[i] 13

In the thickets, on the wastelands, you spend the night, Gn 10:7;25:3 Jr 49:8 you caravans of Dedanites.
Bring water for the thirsty! 14
The inhabitants of Tema went with bread to greet the fugitive.
For these have fled before the sword, 15
the naked sword and the bent bow, the press of battle.

For this is what the Lord has told me, 16 16:14 'In one year's time as a hired worker reckons it, all the glory of Kedar will be Jr 49:28seq. finished ·and, of the valiant archers, the Kedarites, hardly any will be left, for 17
Yahweh, God of Israel, has spoken.'

Against rejoicing in Jerusalem[a]

22 Prophecy on the Valley of Vision:[b] 1

Now what is the matter with you for you all to be up on the housetops, full of excitement, boisterous town, joyful city? 2 Your slain have not fallen to the sword nor died in battle.
Your leaders have all fled together, 3 captured without a bow between them, all who could be found have been captured at a blow, far though they had fled.
That is why I said, 'Turn your eyes away from me, 4
let me weep bitterly;
Jr 31:15 do not try to comfort me over the ruin of the daughter of my people.'

For this is a day of rout, panic and confusion, the work of the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth in the Valley of Vision.
The wall is sapped,
cries for help ring out to the mountains.
6 Elam has picked up his quiver, with manned chariots and horsemen, and Kir has bared his shield. [c] 7 Your fairest valleys are full of chariots and the horsemen take up positions at the gates; 8 thus falls the defence of Judah.

That day you turned your gaze to the weapons in the House of the Forest. 1 K 7:2–5 9 You saw how many breaches there were in the City of David. 2 S 5:9f
You collected the waters of the lower pool. 2 K 20:20k 10 You surveyed the houses in Jerusalem and pulled houses down to strengthen the wall.
11 Between the two walls you made a reservoir for the waters of the old pool. [d]
But you did not look to the Creator of these things, you did not look to the One who fashioned them long ago.

12 That day the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth called on you to weep and mourn,
to shave your heads, to put on sackcloth.
13 But instead there is joy and merriment, killing of oxen, slaughtering of sheep, eating of meat, drinking of wine,
'Let us eat and drink, 5:11+ Ws 2:6–9 for tomorrow we shall be dead.' ↗1 Co 15:32 14 Then Yahweh Sabaoth revealed this to my ears,
'This guilt will never be forgiven you, until you are dead,'
says the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.

Against Shebna [e] 36:3,11,22 2 K 18:18,26,37

15 The Lord Yahweh Sabaoth says this:

f. 'the look-out', lit. 'the one who looks' haro'eh 1QIs[a]; MT 'aryeh 'the lion'.

g. lit. 'my crushed one, son of my threshing-floor', meaning the Israelites exiled to Babylon whose deliverance is near.

h. It is doubtful if this short proclamation about Seir = Edom is by Isaiah. • To the question asked, no clear answer is given: the end may be a call to conversion. The mention of Dumah is puzzling: it was an oasis in northern Arabia, outside Edom; the name also appears among the sons of Ishmael, Gn 25:14. It means 'fortress' but may also be vocalised to mean 'silence' and therefore be an allusion to the prophecy's obscurity, compare the titles of prophecies in vv. 1 and 13.

i. The title 'on the wastelands' given to this prophecy is merely taken from its first v. It is concerned with Arab tribes who have been the victims of an invasion evidently coming from the north. The inhabitants of Tema (modern Teima), Gn 25:15; Jr 25:23, are exhorted to welcome the fugitives from Dedan (the oasis now known as el-Ela), Gn 10:17; Jr 49:8; Ezk 25:13; 27:20. Kedar is a less specific name for the same regions, Gn 25:13; Jr 49:28; Ezk 27:21. In 715 BC, Sargon was to advance into north-western Arabia after his campaign in Transjordan; Judah may well have felt threatened.

22 a. This prophecy dates from the deliverance of Jerusalem in 701 BC, which put an end to Sennacherib's hitherto victorious campaign, 36:1seq.; 37:8seq.; 2 K 18:13h; 19:9e. Isaiah, having already foretold this deliverance, now protests against the exaggerated joy to which it has given rise, and insists that punishment is still imminent.

b. The title is taken from v. 5, cf. 21:11. No valley of this name is known in the environs of Jerusalem. Some emend to 'valley of Hinnom' (Gehenna), but the versions lend no support to this.

c. The Elamites and Aramaeans (? Kir, cf. Am 1:5; 9:7) are possibly mentioned here as allied to, or mercenaries of, Sennacherib.

d. Works undertaken by Hezekiah in anticipation of Sennacherib's attack or between his two campaigns. • On the 'House of the Forest', see 1 K 7:2b; on repairs to the city walls, see 2 K 20:20; on the reservoir, see 2 K 20:20; Si 48:17.

e. Isaiah's only prophecy about a private individual. Shebna was a jack-in-office, possibly a foreigner, who had climbed to the highest dignity of state, that of master of Hezekiah's palace. Isaiah alone mentions his deprivation and his replacement by Eliakim, but 2 K gives the result of this measure: where Eliakim is master of the palace and Shebna has been demoted to secretary, 2 K 18:26,37; 19:2 = Is 36:3,11,22; 37:2. What may have been his tomb has been discovered at Siloam, in one of the cemeteries of Jerusalem.

Go and find that steward, Shebna, the master of the palace:
'What do you own here, who gave you the right 16 for you to hew yourself a tomb here?'
He is hewing himself a tomb, is digging a resting-place for himself in the rock.
But Yahweh will throw you away, strong as you are, 17 will grasp you in his grip, will screw you up into a ball, 18
a ball thrown into a vast space.
There you will die, with your splendid chariots, disgrace to your master's palace!
I shall hound you from your office, 19
I shall snatch you[f] from your post and, when that day comes, 20
I shall summon my servant
36:3,11,22 2 K 18:18,26,37 Eliakim son of Hilkiah.
I shall dress him in your tunic, 21
I shall put your sash round his waist,
I shall invest him with your authority;
and he will be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and to the House of Judah.
Mt 16:19 ↗Rv 3:7 I shall place the key of David's palace on his shoulder; 22 when he opens, no one will close, when he closes, no one will open.[g]
I shall drive him like a nail into a firm place; 23 and he will become a throne of glory for his family.

'On him will depend all the glory of his family, the descendants and offspring, all 24 the vessels of small capacity too, from cups to pitchers. •That day declares Yahweh 25
Sabaoth, the nail driven into a firm place will give way, will be torn out and fall.
And the whole load hanging on it will be lost. For Yahweh has spoken.'[h]

Against Tyre

23 Proclamation about Tyre:[a] 1

2:16h Howl, ships of Tarshish, for all has been destroyed—no more houses, no way of getting in:
the news has reached them from Kittim.[b] Be struck dumb, inhabitants of the coast, 2
you merchants of Sidon, whose messengers[c] cross the sea to the wide ocean. 3
The grain of the Canal, the harvest of the Nile, formed her revenue.
She was the market for the nations.
Blush, Sidon (citadel of the seas),[d] 4 for this is what the sea has said,
'I have felt no birth-pangs, never given birth, never reared boys nor brought up girls.'

When the news reaches Egypt, 5
they will tremble to hear Tyre's fate.
1 K 10:22 Ps 48:7c Cross to Tarshish, howl, inhabitants of the coast. 6

Is this your proud city 7 founded far back in the past, whose steps led her far afield to found her colonies?

8 Who took this decision against Tyre, who used to hand out crowns, whose traders were princes, ↗Rv 18:23 whose merchants, men honoured in the city?
9 Yahweh Sabaoth took this decision to wither the pride of all beauty and humiliate those honoured in the city.
10 Cultivate your country like the Delta, daughter of Tarshish,[e] for your marine docks are no more.
11 He has raised his hand against the sea,
he has shaken kingdoms, Yahweh has ordained the destruction of the fortresses of Canaan.

12 He has said, 'Exult no more, ill-treated virgin daughter of Sidon!
Get up, cross to Kittim,
no respite for you there, either.' 13 Look at the land of the Chaldaeans, a people who used not to exist!
Assyria assigned it to the creatures of the wilds;
they raised their siege-towers against it, demolished its bastions, reduced it to ruin.[f]
14 Howl, ships of Tarshish, for your fortress has been destroyed.

15 When that day comes, Tyre will be forgotten for seventy years, the length of one king's life. But when the seventy years are over, Tyre will become like the whore in Jr 25:11–12 the song:

16 'Take your harp, walk the town, whore whom men have forgotten!
Play sweetly, song after song,
to make them remember you.'

17 At the end of the seventy years Yahweh will visit Tyre. She will receive her pay again and play the whore with all the kingdoms of the world on the surface of the 18 earth. •But her profits and wages will be dedicated to Yahweh. They will not be stored or hoarded, but her profits will go to those who live in Yahweh's presence, for them to have as much food as they want and splendid clothes.[g]

f. 'I shall snatch' versions; 'he will snatch' Hebr.

g. Opening and closing the doors of 'the king's palace' was one of the functions of the Egyptian chief minister, to whom the master of the palace corresponded in Judah.

h. This prose supplement refers to the disgrace of Eliakim himself; his whole family, which had profited by his rise to power, was dragged down with him.

23 a. A difficult prophecy announcing the unexpected and spectacular ruin of the impregnable city of Tyre and describing the effects produced by this event. Built on an island close to the coast, Tyre was attacked or besieged by world-conquerors, Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar (siege lasting 11 years!), see Ezk 26–28. It was destroyed by Alexander in 332 BC. It is hard to say what precise event the prophet has in mind here. The mention of Sidon, vv. 2,4,12, does not necessarily mean that two prophecies have been combined; the name Sidon can also mean Phoenicia in general, see 1 K 16:31c.

b. The island of Cyprus, where there were Phoenician colonies. • On Tarshish, see 1 K 10:22f.

c. 'whose messengers' mal'akayk 1QIs[a]; MT mil'uk 'used to fill you'.

d. Gloss on Sidon but accidentally misplaced in Hebr. after 'the sea'.

e. 'till' Gk, 1QIs[a]; 'cross' MT. • 'daughter of Tarshish' is difficult to explain: 'daughter of Tyre' would seem more apposite, in parallel with 'daughter of Sidon', v. 12.

f. The whole v. seems to be corrupt; trans. uncertain.

g. The prose vv. (excluding the song quoted in v. 16) are a late addition, comparable to those of 18:7 and 19:16–25. Tyre will recover its prosperity; the fruits of its trade, of its 'whorings', formerly offered to false gods, will henceforth be consecrated to Yahweh.

D: APOCALYPSE [a]

Yahweh's judgement

24 See how Yahweh lays the earth waste, 1 makes it a desert, buckles its surface, scatters its inhabitants, priest and people alike, master and slave, 2 mistress and maid, seller and buyer, lender and borrower, creditor and debtor.
Ravaged, ravaged the earth will be, 3 despoiled, despoiled,
for Yahweh has uttered this word.
Ho 4:3a The earth is mourning, pining away, 4
the pick of earth's people [b] are withering away.
The earth is defiled 5
by the feet of its inhabitants,
for they have transgressed the laws,
Gn 9:16 violated the decree, broken the everlasting covenant. [c]
That is why the curse has consumed the earth 6 and its inhabitants pay the penalty, that is why the inhabitants of the earth have been burnt up and few people are left.

Song about the ruined city [d]

The new wine is mourning, the vine is withering away, 7 the once merry-hearted are sighing.
The cheerful sound of tambourines is silent, 8 Jr 7:34;16:9; 25:10 Ezk 26:13 Rv 18:22 the sound of revelling is over, the cheerful sound of the harp is silent.
No more will they sing over their wine, 9 liquor will taste bitter to the drinker.
The city of nothingness is in ruins, 10 every house is shut, no one can enter.
People shout in the streets to try to get wine; 11
all joy has vanished,
happiness has been banished from the country.
Nothing but rubble in the city, 12
the gate has collapsed in ruins.
For at the heart of earth's life, among the peoples, 13 17:6 it is as at the beating of the olive trees, as at the gleaning of the grapes
when the grape harvest is over.
They raise their voices, shouting for joy, 14
in Yahweh's honour they shout from the west.
'Yes, in the east, give glory to Yahweh, 15 in the islands of the sea, to the name of Yahweh, God of Israel!'
We have heard psalms from the remotest parts of earth, 16
'Glory to the Upright One!'

The last battle [e]

But I thought, 'What an ordeal, what an ordeal! What misery for me!'
The traitors have betrayed, the traitors have acted most treacherously.

17 Fear, the pit and the snare for you, ‖Jr 48:43–44 inhabitants of the city!
18 And whoever flees from the cry of fear will fall into the pit,
and whoever climbs out of the pit
will be caught in the snare.
Yes, the sluice-gates above are open, 2:10+ Gn 7:11
the foundations of the earth are quaking. Am 8:9h 19 A cracking, the earth cracks open, a jolting, the earth gives a jolt,
a lurching, the earth lurches backwards and forwards.
20 The earth will reel to and fro like a drunkard, it will be shaken like a shanty;
so heavy will be its sin on it,
it will fall, never to rise again.
21 When that day comes, Yahweh will punish the armies of the sky above and on earth the kings of the earth; 22 they will be herded together, herded together like prisoners in a dungeon and shut up in gaol,
and, after long years, punished.
23 The moon will be confused and the sun ashamed, for Yahweh Sabaoth is king Ps 47:1a on Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and the Glory will radiate on their elders. Ex 24:9–11,16f ↗Rv 4:4,10–11

A hymn of thanksgiving [a]

1 25 Yahweh, you are my God, Ps 31:14
I shall praise you to the heights, I shall praise your name; for you have accomplished marvels, plans long-conceived, faithfully, firmly.
2 For you have made the town a heap of stones,
the fortified city a ruin.
The foreigners' citadel is a city no longer,
it will never be rebuilt.
3 Hence mighty peoples will honour you,
the city of pitiless nations hold you in awe; 4 For you have been a refuge for the weak,
a refuge for the needy in distress, a shelter from the storm, 4:5–6 Rv 7:15–16
shade from the heat;

24 a. Ch. 24–27 see beyond the immediate events to God's final judgement; of this they give a poetic description interspersed with supplicatory and thanksgiving psalms. Though not all the distinctive qualities are present, these ch. anticipate apocalyptic literature as found in Dn, Zc 9–14, and the apocryphal Book of Enoch. This is certainly one of the latest parts of Is, and cannot be dated earlier than the fifth century.

b. lit. 'the elevation of earth's people' Hebr.; 'the earth's great men' Gk.

c. Not, it seems, the covenant with Abraham or the Mosaic covenant, but God's covenant with the entire human race analogous to the covenant with Noah according to the Priestly tradition in Gn 9:9–17. Once this covenant is violated, judgement overtakes the entire world, v. 6.

d. The destruction of 'the city of nothingness', v. 10, constitutes the occasion for this apocalypse, see 25:2; 26:5; 27:10–11. It is evidently a pagan city hostile to Jerusalem, 26:1–6, and its destruction comes to symbolise divine judgement. It has been identified with Babylon, destroyed by Xerxes I in 485 BC, or with Tyre, destroyed by Alexander in 332 BC, or even with Samaria, destroyed by John Hyrcanus in 110 BC. Nonetheless, the explicit mention of Moab in 25:10, the quotation at 24:17–18 of Jr 48:43–44 about Moab, as well as the allusion to the vineyards, 24:7–9, recalling the vineyards of Moab in 16:7–10, give grounds for thinking that it may refer to the ruin of a Moabite city, possibly the capital, at some indeterminate time.

e. Resumption of the description of Judgement, interrupted by the song about the ruined city.

25 a. This hymn refers to the events previously related: the destruction of the city, v. 2; 24:10; the conversion of distant peoples, v. 3; 24:15; and victory over the proud, vv. 2.4; 24:21–22.

for the breath of the pitiless is like a winter [b] storm.
Like heat in a dry land 5
you calm the foreigners' tumult;
as heat under the shadow of a cloud,
so the song of the pitiless dies away.

Mt 8:11 The divine banquet [c]

On this mountain, for all peoples, 6 Yahweh Sabaoth is preparing Jn 6:51,54 a banquet of rich food, a banquet of fine wines, of succulent food, of well-strained wines.
On this mountain, he has destroyed 7
the veil which used to veil all peoples, the pall enveloping all nations;
35:10 he has destroyed death for ever. 8
Ho 13:14
1 Co 15:26
↗Rv 7:17;
↗21:4;35:10 Lord Yahweh has wiped away the tears from every cheek;
he has taken his people's shame away everywhere on earth, for Yahweh has spoken.

And on that day, it will be said, 9
'Look, this is our God,
in him we put our hope that he should save us,
this is Yahweh, we put our hope in him.
Let us exult and rejoice since he has saved us.'
For Yahweh's hand will rest on this mountain, 10 and Moab [d] will be trodden under his feet as straw is trodden into the dung-heap.
He may stretch his hands wide on the mountain 11 like a swimmer stretching out his hands to swim.
But he will humble his pride despite what his hands may attempt.
And the impregnable fortress of your walls, 12
he has overthrown, laid low, flung to the ground, in the dust.

A hymn of thanksgiving

26 That day, this song will be sung in Judah: 1 60:18 'We have a fortress city, [a] the walls and ramparts provide safety.
Ps 118:19–20 Open the gates! Let the upright nation come in, 2 the nation that keeps faith!
This is the plan decreed: you will guarantee peace, 3
the peace entrusted to you.
Trust in Yahweh for ever, 4
Dt 32:4 for Yahweh is a rock for ever.
Ps 62:7 He has brought low the dwellers on the heights, 5
the lofty citadel;
he lays it low, brings it to the ground,
flings it down in the dust.
It will be trodden under foot, 6 by the feet of the needy, the steps of the weak.'

A psalm [b]

The path of the Upright One is honesty; 7 you smooth the honest way of the upright.

8 Following the path of your judgements, Yahweh, we set our hopes in you,
your name, your memory are all our soul desires.
9 At night my soul longs for you Ps 42:1
and my spirit within me seeks you out;
for when your judgements appear on earth the inhabitants of the world learn what saving justice is.
10 If pity is shown to the wicked without his learning what saving justice is,
he will act wrongly in the land of right conduct and not see the majesty of Yahweh.
11 Yahweh, your hand is raised but they do not see!
The antagonists of your people will look and grow pale;
with your fiery wrath you will devour your enemies.

12 Yahweh, you will grant us peace, having completed all our undertakings for us.
13 Yahweh our God, other lords than you have ruled us but, loyal to you alone, we invoke your name.
14 The dead will not come back to life,
the shadows will not rise again,
for you have punished them, annihilated them, wiping out their very memory.
15 You have made the nation larger, Yahweh, made the nation larger and won yourself glory,
you have rolled back the frontiers of the country.

16 Yahweh, in distress they had recourse to you, they expended themselves in prayer, [c] since your punishment was on them.
17 As a pregnant woman near her time of delivery 13:8+;37:3 Ho 13:13 writhes and cries out in her pangs, so have we been, Yahweh, in your eyes: 18 we have been pregnant, we have writhed, but we have given birth only to wind:
we have not given salvation to the earth,
no inhabitants for the world have been brought to birth.
19 Your dead will come back to life, your corpses will rise again. Ezk 37:1–14,11e Wake up and sing, you dwellers in the dust, Ho 13:14 Mt 11:5 Ep 5:14 for your dew will be a radiant dew, but the earth will give birth to the shades.

The Lord's judgement [d]

20 Go, my people, go to your private room, ↗Mt 6:6 shut yourselves in.
Hide yourselves a little while Jb 14:13–15
until the retribution has passed.

b. 'winter' qor conj.; Hebr. qir 'wall'.

c. Using and amplifying universalist concepts already found in earlier prophets, 2:2–3; 56:6–8; 60:11–14; Zc 8:20; 14:16; etc., the author describes the flooding in of foreign nations to Jerusalem as an immense banquet. On the strength of this text, the idea of a messianic banquet became current in Judaism and appears in the NT: Mt 22:2–10; Lk 14:14,16–24.

d. See 24:7d. Even so, the mention of Moab is surprising, since this is the only proper name in the poem, where the name 'Moab' has been omitted in the quotation from Jr 24:17–18; hence the suggested emendation to 'enemy' 'oyeb, but this has no textual support.

26 a. Jerusalem, fortified by Yahweh and serving as refuge for the upright, is contrasted with the 'lofty citadel', v. 5, the ruined city of ch. 24–25, see 24:7d.

b. Yahweh's judgement, being just, vv. 7–10, assures the deliverance and glory of his people, vv. 11–15; the present ordeals prepare for the rebirth, vv. 16–19. The pangs of child-bearing became a conventional image for the tribulations inevitably preceding the coming of the Messiah, see Mt 24:8; Mk 13:8; Jn 16:20–22.

c. Meaning uncertain.

d. Yahweh's people are invited to take shelter while he executes his sentence on the wicked.

Mi 1:3
↗Rv 3:10;6:10
For see, Yahweh emerges from his dwelling 21 to punish the inhabitants of earth for their guilt; and the earth will reveal the blood shed on it and no longer hide its slain.

27 That day Yahweh will punish, 1 with his unyielding sword, massive and strong, Leviathan the fleeing serpent,
Jb 3:8e; 40:25seq.
Leviathan the coiling serpent;
he will kill the dragon that lives in the sea. [a]

5:1–7,1b Yahweh's vineyard [b]

That day 2
sing of the splendid [c] vineyard!
I, Yahweh, am its guardian, 3
from time to time I water it;
so that no harm befall it,
I guard it night and day.

—I do not have a wall. 4
Who can reduce me to brambles and thorn-bushes? [d] —I shall make war and trample on it and at the same time burn it.

Or should they beg for my protection, 5 let them make their peace with me, peace let them make with me.

Pardon and punishment [e]

In days to come, Jacob will take root, 6 Israel will bud and blossom and the surface of the world be one vast harvest.
Has he struck him as he was struck by those who struck him? 7
Has he murdered him as he was murdered by those who murdered him?
By expelling, by excluding him, you have executed a sentence, 8 he has blown him away with a breath as rough as the east wind.
For that is how Jacob's guilt will be forgiven, 9 such will be the result of renouncing his sin, when all the altar-stones have been smashed to pieces like lumps of chalk,
17:8
Ex 34:13e
when the sacred poles and incense-altars stand no longer.
For the fortified city is abandoned now, 10 deserted, forsaken as a desert where calves browse, where they lie down, destroying its branches.
When boughs go dry, they get burnt, 11 women come and use them for firewood.
Now, this is a people that does not understand,
and so its Maker will not take pity on it,
he who formed it will not show it any mercy.

The Israelites return [f]

Yahweh will start his threshing from the course of the River to the Torrent of Egypt, and you will be gathered one by one, Israelites!
When that day comes, 13

and those lost in Assyria will come,
and those banished to Egypt, and they will worship Yahweh on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

E: POEMS ON ISRAEL AND JUDAH

Against Samaria [a]

1 28 Woe to the haughty crown of Ephraim's drunkards, 5:11–13+ to the fading flower of its proud splendour sited at the head of the lush valley, to those prostrated by wine!
2 See, a strong and mighty man in the Lord's service, like a storm of hail, a destroying tempest, like immense flood-waters overflowing,
with his hand he throws them to the ground.
3 They will be trampled underfoot, the haughty crown of Ephraim's drunkards, 4 and the faded flower of its proud splendour
sited at the head of the lush valley.
Like a fig ripe before summer comes:
whoever spots it forthwith picks and swallows it.

5 That day [b] Yahweh Sabaoth will be a crown of splendour and a proud diadem
for the remnant of his people, 4:3c 6 a spirit of fair judgement 11:2–4.2c for him who sits in judgement, and the strength of those who repel the assault on the gate.

Against false prophets [c]

7 These too have been confused by wine, 5:11–13+ have gone astray owing to liquor.
Priest and prophet have become confused by liquor, are sodden with wine, have strayed owing to liquor, have become confused in their visions, have strayed in their decisions.

27 a. On Leviathan, see Jb 3:8e. The text here is influenced by one of the Ras-Shamra poems (14th century BC) which reads: 'You will crush Leviathan the fleeing serpent, you will consume the twisting serpent, the mighty one with seven heads.'

b. As in 5:1–7, Israel is depicted as a vineyard, lovingly tended by God, if recourse is had to him.

c. 'splendid' hemed conj.; Hebr. hemer 'unfermented wine'.

d. 'wall' (homah) conj.; Hebr. hemah 'fury'. • 'who . . . thorn-bushes' conj. MT divides the lines differently and, translated literally, would give: 'who will give me brambles and thorn-bushes in (by?) war?'; the text is far from clear. Apparently this half-verse represents the words of the vineyard speaking in person.

e. Owing to the apparent disorder and corrupt state of the text, the sense of this passage is obscure. vv. 7–8,10–11 seem to be about Israel's oppressors, identified with the 'fortified city' of this apocalypse, v. 10. vv. 6 and 9, being a promise to Israel whose guilt has been atoned for, may have been the introduction to the prophecy in ch. 12–13.

f. This 'prophecy', placed here as a conclusion, predicts the return of all the scattered Israelites to Jerusalem.

g. The ram's-horn, having a number of uses, Jl 2:1b, here sounds the gathering for Judgement Day.

28 a. Prophecy delivered some time before the fall of Samaria (721). The city of Samaria, built on a hill, is compared to a crown of flowers, such as adorned the heads of guests at feasts in antiquity. Other prophets, Ho 7:5–7; Am 3:9,15, etc., refer to the wealth and corruption of Samaria.

b. With the faded crown of Samaria, vv. 5–6 contrast the glory which Yahweh himself will be for the rest of his people. The mention of the 'remnant' suggests that this passage is later, see 4:3c; the similarity of imagery may account for its having been placed next to the previous prophecy.

c. The prophecies of vv. 7–22 date from slightly before Sennacherib's campaign of 701, when Hezekiah was considering taking part in an anti-Assyrian coalition. The first prophecy is directed against people taking part in religious banquets in the Temple, who treated Isaiah's words as the unintelligible babbling of a child. They would not find the language of the Assyrian soldiers soon to be unleashed on them by Yahweh any easier to understand.

Yes, every table is covered in filthy vomit, 8

But they refused to listen.
Now Yahweh is going to say this to them, 13
'Sav lasav, sav lasav,
kav lakav, kav lakav,

So that when they walk they will fall over backwards and so be broken, trapped and taken captive.

a granite stone, a precious corner-stone,
a firm foundation-stone:
no one who relies on this will stumble.
And I will make fair judgement the measure, 17

28:15
But hail will sweep away the refuge of lies and floods wash away the hiding-place; your treaty with Death will be broken[g] 18 and your pact with Sheol will not hold.
When the scourging flood comes over,
you will be trodden down by it;
every time it comes over, it will seize on you, 19
for it will come over, morning after morning, day by day and night by night.
Nothing but fear will make you understand what you hear.
For the bed is too short to stretch in, 20
the blanket too narrow for covering.[h]
2 S 5:17–25
Yes, as on Mount Perazim, Yahweh will rise, 21 as in the Valley of Gibeon, he will storm to do his work, his mysterious work, to do his deed, his extraordinary deed.

22 Stop scoffing, then,
or your bonds will be tightened further, for I have heard it: it has been irrevocably decided as regards the whole country by the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth.

A parable [i]

23 Listen closely to my words, be attentive, understand what I am saying.
24 Does the ploughman plough all day to sow, breaking up and harrowing his ground?
25 Once he has levelled its surface, does he not scatter fennel, sow cummin?
Then he puts in wheat, millet, barley (. . .) [j]
and, round the edges, spelt, 26 for his God has taught him this rule and instructed him.
27 Fennel must not be crushed with a sledge, [k] nor cart-wheels driven over cummin; fennel must be beaten with a stick,
and cummin with a flail.
28 When you are threshing wheat, you do not waste time crushing it;
you get the horse and cart-wheel moving,
but you do not grind it fine.
29 All this is a gift from Yahweh Sabaoth, marvellous advice leading to great achievements.

On Jerusalem [a] 36:1–2; 37:33–37

1 29 Woe, Ariel, Ariel, 33:7 city where David encamped.
Let year after year pass,
let the feasts make their full round, 2 then I shall inflict trouble on Ariel, and there will be sighing and sobbing, and I shall make it truly Ariel.
3 I shall encamp all round you,
I shall lay siege to you and mount siege-works against you. ↗Lk 19:43 4 You will be laid low, will speak from the underworld, your words will rise like a murmur from the dust.

d. lit. 'order on order, order on order, rule on rule, rule on rule, a little here, a little there.' But there is no point in translating the words since they are chosen merely for their sound.

e. The alliance against Assyria recommended by the nation's rulers, would be an alliance with death and Hell.

f. vv. 16–17[a] form a brief prophecy interrupting the development of the poem. The divine architect of the New Jerusalem lays a foundation-stone of justice and uprightness, possibly inscribed with the name: 'No one who relies on this will stumble', compare the symbolic names, 'City of Saving Justice, Faithful City' in 1:26.

g. 'broken' tuphar Targ.; Hebr. kuppar 'covered'.

h. The prophet seems to be quoting a popular proverb.

i. The wisdom of the countryman, who plants his seeds and threshes each kind differently, is an emanation of Yahweh's wisdom in the way he treats his people.

j. After 'barley' Hebr. adds an unknown word, possibly the name of another cereal.

k. The sledge with sharp wheels or stones for threshing wheat.

29 a. This prophecy may be dated from the period preceding the siege of Jerusalem in 701 BC. The symbolic name Ariel, designating Jerusalem here and at 33:7 (emended), can be explained in several ways. Usually, it is considered to be related to the name har'el or 'ari'eyl (upper part of the altar or altar hearth), given by Ezekiel (Ezk 43:15) to the upper part of the altar, the hearth, on which the sacrificial victims were burnt: this would express the sacred character of the city. This interpretation would seem to be confirmed by the reference to the regular Temple-cult in Jerusalem at the end of v. 1.

Your voice from the earth will be like a ghost's, it will whisper as though coming from the dust.

The horde of your enemies will be like fine dust, 5
the horde of the warriors like flying chaff.
And suddenly, in an instant,
you will be visited by Yahweh Sabaoth 6 Ex 13:22h; 19:16+ with thunder, earthquake, mighty din, hurricane, tempest, flame of devouring fire.
It will be like a dream, like a vision at night: 7
the horde of all the nations at war with Ariel, all those fighting, besieging and troubling it.
It will be like the dream of a hungry man: 8
he eats, then wakes up with an empty belly;
or like the dream of a thirsty man:
he drinks, then wakes up exhausted with a parched throat.
So will it be with the horde of all the nations making war on Mount Zion.

Be stupefied and stunned, [b] 9 go blind, unseeing,
drunk but not on wine,
staggering but not through liquor.
19:14 For Yahweh has infused you with a spirit of lethargy, 10 1 S 16:14e he has closed your eyes (the prophets), ↗Rm 11:8 he has veiled your heads (the seers). [c]

Rv 5:1–3 For to you every vision has become like the words of a sealed book. You give it 11 to someone able to read and say, 'Read that.' He replies, 'I cannot, because it is sealed.' ·You then give the book to someone who cannot read, and say, 'Read 12 that.' He replies, 'I cannot read.' [d]

Against the embassy to Egypt[a]

1 30 Woe to the rebellious children—declares Yahweh—who make plans which do not come from me and make alliances not inspired by me, — Jr 2:18 and so add sin to sin!
2 They are leaving for Egypt, without consulting me,
to take refuge in Pharaoh's protection,
to shelter in Egypt's shadow.
3 Pharaoh's protection will be your shame, — 36:5–9
the shelter of Egypt's shadow your confounding.
4 For his princes have gone to Zoan and his messengers have reached Hanes.[b] 5 Everyone has been disappointed by a people who cannot help, who bring neither aid nor profit, only disappointment and confusion.

b. The translation seeks to render the alliteration of Hebr., which subordinates the precise meaning of the first verb, 'to linger', to this effect.

c. The words in parenthesis are glosses explaining the metaphors.

d. Vv. 11–12 are possibly additional, in an attempt to make vv. 9–10 clearer.

e. Prophecy difficult to date. The prophet attacks hypocritical religion, as in 1:10–20.

f. Yahweh's gaze penetrates the plans of the wicked, vv. 15–16. He will deliver the humble from their enemies and establish the rule of justice, vv. 17–21. Vv. 22–24 seem to be additional. It is not characteristic of Isaiah to talk of the 'House of Jacob' or to refer to the past, here Abraham.

g. The ancient story of creation, Gn 2:7, had already pictured Yahweh as a potter, shaping man from the earth. The prophets after Isaiah frequently use this figure to show that human beings are dependent and fragile in the hands of God; so also Paul.

h. 'his children' possibly a gloss on the words following.

30 a. Prophecy delivered when an embassy from Hezekiah was leaving to ask the Pharaoh for Egyptian help against the Assyrians (about 703–702).

b. Zoan was Tanis; Hanes was the Anusis of Herodotus and the Heracleopolis Magna of the Romans, two cities in the Delta.

Another prophecy against an embassy [c]

Proclamation about the beasts of the Negeb: 6

Nb 21:4–9
Dt 8:14–15
Into the land of distress and of anguish, of lioness and roaring [d] lion, 14:29 of viper and flying dragon, they bear their riches on donkeys' backs, their treasures on camels' humps,
to a nation that cannot help:
Egypt, whose help is vain and futile; 7 and so I call her 'Rahab-the-collapsed'. [e]

Testament [f]

Now go, inscribe this on a tablet, 8 write it on a scroll,
so that it may serve for time to come for ever and for ever.
1:2–4 This is a rebellious people, they are lying children, 9 children who will not listen to Yahweh's Law.
To the seers they say, 'See nothing!' 10
1 K 22:8–27
Jr 11:21
Am 2:12;7:13
To the prophets, 'Do not prophesy the truth to us;
tell us flattering things; have illusory visions;
turn aside from the way, leave the path, 11 rid us of the Holy One of Israel.'

So the Holy One of Israel says this, 12
Ps 62:10 'Since you have rejected this word and put your trust in fraud and disloyalty and rely on these,
for you this guilt will prove to be 13
a breach opening up,
a bulge at the top of a wall which suddenly and all at once comes crashing down.
He will shatter it like an earthenware pot, 14 ruthlessly knocking it to pieces, so that of the fragments not one shard can be found with which to take up fire from the hearth or scoop water from the storage-well.'

6:3g For Lord Yahweh, the Holy One of Israel, says this, 15
'Your salvation lay in conversion and tranquillity, 7:9e your strength in serenity and trust and you would have none of it. [g]
Ho 1:7+ "No," you said, "we shall flee on horses." 16
And so flee you will!
And again, "We shall ride on swift ones."
And so your pursuers will be swift!
Dt 32:30 A thousand will quake [h] at the threat of one 17 and when five threaten you will flee, until what is left of you will be like a flagstaff on a mountain top, like a signal on a hill.'

God will forgive [i]

But Yahweh is waiting to be gracious to you, 18 54:8 the Exalted One, to take pity on you, for Yahweh is a God of fair judgement; blessed are all who hope in him. Ps 2:12

19 Yes, people of Zion living in Jerusalem, you will weep no more.
He will be gracious to you when your cry for help rings out;
as soon as he hears it, he will answer you.
20 When the Lord has given you the bread of suffering and the water of distress, he who is your teacher will hide no longer,
and you will see your teacher with your own eyes.
21 Your ears will hear these words behind you,
'This is the way, keep to it,'
whether you turn to right or left.
22 You will hold unclean the silverplating of your idols and the goldplating of your images.
You will throw them away like the polluted things they are, shouting after them, 'Good riddance!' 23 He will send rain for the seed you sow in the ground, and the bread that the ground provides will be rich and nourishing.
That day, your cattle will graze in wide pastures.
24 Oxen and donkeys that work the land will eat for fodder wild sorrel, spread by the shovel-load and fork-load.
25 On every lofty mountain, on every high hill there will be streams and water-courses, on the day of the great slaughter Jl 4:18 when the strongholds fall.
26 Then moonlight will be bright as sunlight and sunlight itself be seven times brighter —like the light of seven days in one—on the day Yahweh dresses his people's wound and heals the scars of the blows they have received.

Against Assyria[j]

27 See, the name of Yahweh comes from afar, blazing his anger, heavy his threat.
His lips are brimming over with fury,
his tongue is like a devouring fire.
28 His breath is like a river in spate Ws 5:23 coming up to the neck,
to sift the nations with the sieve of destruction,

c. Probably the same embassy as the subject of the previous prophecy. Its title is taken from the opening words of the prophecy, as in 21:13i. The prophet contrasts the hardships and dangers of the journey with the futility of its results.

d. 'roaring' nohem conj.; mehem Hebr. 'of them'.

e. 'collapsed' hammoshbat conj.; Hebr. hemshebet unintelligible. • Rahab, like Leviathan, see 27:1, was a monster of primordial chaos, 51:9; Jb 2:6; 12:13, cf. 9:13; Ps 89:11. Here and in Ps 87:4, it stands for Egypt. Maintaining the same emendation, one might also translate: 'Rahab-the-tamed': the monster has been rendered harmless, cf. Jb 40:25–26 in connection with Leviathan, the crocodile of Egypt.

f. Vv. 9–17 of the poem date from the beginning of the reign of Hezekiah. They comprise three quite distinct prophecies, vv. 9–11; 12–14; 15–17, repeating Isaiah's complaints against his contemporaries. These having refused to listen, the prophet puts his threats into writing: the future will prove him right, v. 8. This seems to mark the beginning of a period of silence, from which the prophet emerged before Sennacherib's invasion. Another period of silence was perhaps marked by 8:16–18, after the Syro-Ephraimite War, see p. 1167.

g. What God demanded, as earlier at the time of the Syro-Ephraimite War, see 7:9, was trust in him, see 28:16, instead of recourse to a foreign alliance, in this case with Egypt.

h. 'quake' yeherad conj.; Hebr. 'ehad 'one'.

i. A section, apart from v. 18, in uncertain rhythm. Its weakness of form is matched by its content, being a compilation of themes occurring in the second and third parts of Is, cf. for instance 44:9; 60:20; 65:10. It is later than the Exile and v. 18 acts as a link with the authentic prophecies preceding it.

j. Prophecy probably delivered when Sennacherib was threatening Jerusalem. The terrifying nature of Yahweh's intervention is expressed here with unrivalled force.

to harness the peoples in a bridle, that will lead them astray.
Your song will be like that on a festal night, 29 and there will be joy in your hearts as when to the sound of the flute people make a pilgrimage to the mountain of Yahweh, the Rock of Israel.
Ex 19:16g Ps 29:1a Yahweh will make his majestic voice ring out, 30 he will show the weight of his arm in the heat of his anger, with a devouring fire, with thunderbolt, downpour and hailstones.
Yes, at Yahweh's voice Assyria will be terrified, 31
he will strike him with his rod;
each time he goes by, will fall the punishing rod [k] 32 that Yahweh will lay on him, to the sound of tambourines and harps, in the battles which he will wage against him with uplifted hand.
Yes, Topheth has been ready for a long time now, [l] 33 that too is ready for the king, deep and wide his pyre,
fire and wood in plenty.
Yahweh's breath, like a stream of brimstone, will set fire to it.

Against the Egyptian alliance [a]

30:1–7 31 Woe to those going down to Egypt 1 for help,
Ho 1:7+ who put their trust in horses, who rely on the quantity of chariots,
and on great strength of cavalrymen, 6:3g but do not look to the Holy One of Israel or consult Yahweh.
Yet he too is wise and can bring disaster 2
and he will not go back on his word;
he will rise against the breed of evil-doers and against those who protect wrong-doers.
Ezk 28:9 The Egyptian is human, not divine, 3 his horses are flesh, not spirit; Ezk 14:26 Yahweh will stretch out his hand:
the protector will stumble,
the protected will fall
and all will perish together.

Against Assyria [b]

Yes, this is what Yahweh has said to me: 4
As a lion or lion cub growls over its prey,
when scores of shepherds
are summoned to drive it off, without being frightened by their shouting or cowed by the noise they make,
just so will Yahweh Sabaoth descend to fight for Mount Zion and for its hill. [c] Dt 32:11 Ps 36:7; Like hovering birds, 5 so will Yahweh Sabaoth protect Jerusalem;
by protecting it, he will save it,
by supporting it, he will deliver it.
Come back to the one whom the Israelites have so deeply betrayed! 6 7 For, that day, each of you will throw away 2:20 the false gods of silver and the false gods of gold which your own sinful hands have made.

8 Assyria will fall by the sword, not that of a man, will be devoured by the sword, of no human being,
he will flee before the sword and his young warriors will be enslaved.
9 In his terror he will abandon his rock, and his panic-stricken officers desert the standard—declares Yahweh, whose fire is in Zion, whose furnace, in Jerusalem.

A good king [a]

1 32 There will be a king who reigns uprightly 11:3–4 Jr 23:5–6 and princes [b] who rule with fair judgement; 2 each will be like a shelter from the wind,
a refuge from the storm,
like streams on arid ground,
like the shade of a solid rock in a desolate land.
3 The eyes of seers will no longer be closed, 6:10;30:10+
the ears of hearers will be alert, 4 the heart of the hasty will learn to think things over,
and the tongue of stammerers will speak promptly and clearly.
5 The fool will no longer be called generous, 5:20 nor the rascal be styled bountiful.

Niggard and noble [c]

6 For the fool speaks folly Ps 14:1 Qo 10:13 and his heart is set on villainy;
he is godless in his actions and his words ascribe error to Yahweh;
he starves the hungry of their food and refuses drink to the thirsty.
7 Everything to do with the rascal is evil, he devises infamous plans to ruin the poor with lying words Ps 10:2,7–11 even when the needy has right on his side; 8 but the noble person plans only noble things, noble his every move.

Against the women of Jerusalem [d]

9 Stand up, you haughty women, listen to my words; 3:16–24 Am 4:1–3 you over-confident daughters, pay attention to what I say.

k. 'punishing' some MSS; 'foundation' Hebr. • The end of the v. is problematic. One may also translate lit. 'and in battles of raised hand he will fight against him'. The word translated 'raised hand' elsewhere means the swaying gesture of the hands with which the priest dedicated offerings, but in 19:16 it is a threatening gesture.

l. 'Topheth', which can mean 'burner', was the place in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom where children were offered as burnt sacrifices to 'Molech', see Lv 18:21h, to which the 'king' (melek) may allude in the next line, if it does not refer to the king of Assyria.

31 a. Prophecy probably delivered in the same circumstances as those of 30:1–5,6–7.

b. Probably at the time of Sennacherib's attack.

c. Alternative translation: 'against Mount Zion and against its hill', in which case this would be an independent prophecy against Jerusalem. What follows, see v. 5, however, favours the translation adopted.

32 a. A description of ideal government, given in messianic terms, cf. 29:18; 35:5, though less pointedly than in 9:1–6; 11:1–9.

b. 'princes' conj.; 'for princes' Hebr.

c. The description has much in common with passages in Pr. It may have been composed by a sage and introduced here as a commentary on v. 5 which mentions fool and rascal.

d. A warning for the women in the style of 3:16–24, but possibly later. The time-indicator in v. 10 is reminiscent of 29:1; here perhaps too, it should be understood in a fairly general sense.

Within one year and a few days 10 you will tremble, you over-confident women;
grape-harvesting will be finished, gathering will never happen again.

Shudder, you haughty women, 11 tremble, you over-confident women;
strip, undress, put sackcloth round your waists.

Beat your breasts for the pleasant fields, 12
for the fruitful vine,
for my people's soil where the bramble-bush will be growing 13 and for all the happy houses, for the rejoicing city.

For the citadel will be abandoned 14 and the thronged city deserted, Ophel and the Keep [e] will be denuded for ever, the playground of wild donkeys and the pasture of flocks,

11:2–9 Outpouring of the spirit [f]

Jl 3:1 until the spirit is poured out on us from above, 15 and the desert becomes productive ground, so productive you might take it for a forest.

Fair judgement will fix its home in the desert, 16 and uprightness live in the productive ground, 11:6e and the product of uprightness will be peace, 17
the effect of uprightness being quiet and security for ever.

My people will live in a peaceful home, 18
in peaceful houses, tranquil dwellings.
And should the forest be totally destroyed [g] 19
and the city gravely humiliated, you will be happy to sow wherever there is water 20
and to let the ox and donkey roam free.

The expected deliverance [a]

33 Woe to you, destroying though not yourself destroyed, 1 betraying though not yourself betrayed;
when you have finished destroying, you will be destroyed, when you have stopped [b] betraying, you will be betrayed.
Ps 32:10;33:22 Yahweh, show us your mercy, 2
we hope in you.
Be our arm [c] every morning
Ps 46:1 and our salvation in time of distress.
At the sound of tumult the peoples flee, 3
Nb 10:35 when you stand up the nations scatter.
Ps 46:6;48:4–7;68:1 Your spoil is gathered in as a grasshopper gathers in, 4 like a swarm of locusts people descend on it.
Ps 57:5;83:18;97:9 Yahweh is exalted, for he is enthroned above, 5 he has filled Zion with fair judgement and saving justice.

You can count on this all your days: 6 wisdom and knowledge are the riches that save, the fear of Yahweh is his treasure.

29:1 Look, Ariel [d] is lamenting in the streets, 7
the ambassadors of peace are weeping bitterly.

8 The highways are deserted, no travellers any more on the roads.
Agreements are broken, witnesses[e] held in contempt,
there is respect for no one.
9 The land pines away in mourning, Am 1:2
the Lebanon is withering with shame, Sharon has become like the wasteland, 35:2
Bashan and Carmel are shuddering.
10 'Now I shall stand up,' says Yahweh, Ps 12:5
'now I shall rise, now draw myself up.
11 You conceive chaff, you give birth to straw:
like fire, my breath[f] will devour you.
12 The peoples will be burnt up as though by quicklime, like cut thorns they will be burnt on the fire.
13 You who are far away, listen to what I have done, and you who are near, realise my strength.' 14 The sinners in Zion are panic-stricken and fear seizes on the godless,
'Which of us can survive the devouring fire, Dt 4:24 which of us survive everlasting burning?' ↗Heb 12:29 15 The one who acts uprightly and speaks honestly, Ps 15 who scorns to get rich by extortion, who rejects bribes out of hand,

and shuts his eyes rather than countenance crime:

the craggy rocks will be his refuge, he will be fed, he will not want for water.[g]

The return to Jerusalem

17 Your eyes will gaze on the king in his beauty, they will look on a country stretching far and wide.
18 Your heart will meditate on past terrors,
'Where is the man who did the counting? ↗1 Co 1:20
Where is the man who did the weighing?
Where is the man who counted off the towers?'
19 No more will you see that insolent people, that people of unintelligible speech, of barbarous and meaningless tongue. 28:11 20 Gaze at Zion, city of our feasts; your eyes will see Jerusalem as a home that is secure, 54:2
a tent not to be moved,
none of its tent-pegs ever to be pulled out,
none of its guy-ropes ever to be broken.

e. Ophel was the site of ancient Jerusalem, south of the Temple, see 2 Ch 27:3; Ne 3:27. The 'Keep' (uncertain trans. of a word occurring only once) probably corresponded to the great tower of Ne 3:26–27.

f. A post-exilic poem adding the prediction of the coming of the Spirit to the threats contained in the previous prophecy, cf. Jl 3:1–2. A coincidence of vocabulary between vv. 9–11 and 18 was perhaps responsible for its being inserted here.

g. 'destroyed' weyarad conj.; Hebr. ubarad 'it will hail'.

33 a. Despite many references to Isaian themes, the style and vocabulary of this whole ch. forbid its attribution to the prophet. Frequent parallels with Ps suggest that this is a post-exilic prophetic liturgy. Absence of proper names and clear allusions make it impossible to date it precisely.

b. 'have stopped' 1QIs[a]; MT unintelligible.

c. 'our arm' versions; 'their arm' Hebr.

d. 'Ariel' conj., cf. 29:1; Hebr. 'er 'ellam unintelligible.

• The recital of the woes of Jerusalem is a common theme in supplicatory psalms.

e. 'witnesses' 1QIs[a]; 'towns' Hebr.

f. 'my' Targ.; 'your' Hebr.

g. Vv. 14–16, with their question and answering catalogue of virtues required for drawing near to God, take the form of a dialogue-liturgy of type similar to Ps 15; 24:3–5.

There it is that Yahweh shows us his power, 21 like a place of rivers and very wide canals on which will row no galley, over which will pass no majestic ship. [b]
(For Yahweh is our judge, Yahweh our lawgiver, 22 Yahweh is our king and our Saviour.)
Your tackle has given way, 23 it cannot support the mast,
it cannot hoist the pennon.
And so there is much booty to be shared out;
the lame fall to plundering, and no one living there will say, 'I am sickly'; 24
the people living there will find their guilt forgiven.

63:1–6 Jr 49:7–22 The sentence on Edom [a]

34 Come near and listen, you nations, 1 pay attention, you peoples.
Dt 32:1 Let the earth and its contents listen,
the world and its entire population.
Ezk 25:12 Am 1:11 For Yahweh is angry with all the nations, 2 enraged with all their hordes.
He has vowed them to destruction, handed them over to slaughter.
Their dead will be thrown away, 3
the stench will rise from their corpses, the mountains will run with their blood,
the entire array of heaven will fall apart. 4 Mt 24:29*o* 2 P 3:12 ↗Rv 6:14 The heavens will be rolled up like a scroll and all their array will fade away, as fade the leaves falling from the vine,
as fade those falling from the fig tree.

For my sword has drunk deep in the heavens: 5 see how it now falls on Edom, [b] on the people vowed to destruction, to punish them.
Yahweh's sword is gorged with blood, 6
it is greasy with fat,
with the blood of lambs and goats,
with the fat of the kidneys of rams.
63:1 For Yahweh has a sacrifice in Bozrah, a great slaughter in the land of Edom.
The wild oxen will fall with them, 7
the bullocks with the bulls;
their land will be drenched with blood and their dust will be greasy with fat.
For this will be Yahweh's day of vengeance, 8
the year of retribution in Zion's lawsuit.

over it Yahweh will stretch the measuring line of chaos 2 K 21:13 Lm 2:8 and the plumb-line of emptiness.

12 There will be no more nobles Rv 18:2
to proclaim the royal authority;
there will be an end of all its princes.
13 Brambles will grow in its bastions, nettles and thorn-bushes in its fortresses, it will be the lair of jackals, Ps 44:19
an enclosure for ostriches.
14 Wild cats will meet hyenas there, satyr will call to satyr, 13:21 Lv 17:7c there Lilith too will lurk [c] and find somewhere to rest.
15 The snake will nest and lay eggs there, will hatch and gather its young into the shade;
and there the vultures will assemble, Mt 24:28
each one with its mate.
16 Search in Yahweh's book, [d] and read, not one of these will be missing,
not one of them lacking a mate;
for thus his mouth [e] has ordained it,
and his spirit has brought them together.
17 He has thrown the lot for each,
his hand has measured out their share;
they will possess it for ever,
and live there age after age. [f]

The triumph of Jerusalem [a]

1 35 Let the desert and the dry lands be glad,
let the wasteland rejoice and bloom; 41:19 2 like the asphodel, •let it burst into flower, let it rejoice and sing for joy.
The glory of Lebanon is bestowed on it, 60:13
the splendour of Carmel and Sharon; 33:9 then they will see the glory of Yahweh, 40:5
the splendour of our God.
3 Strengthen all weary hands, 40:29–31 ↗Heb 12:12

h. The passage may either be taken to mean that Yahweh himself will be a substitute for the rivers which in Egypt and Assyria assure the wealth and safety of the country; or that Yahweh will give Israel itself a river-system as a source of blessings, but that these watercourses will not be used by hostile shipping. • The imagery of v. 21 is continued in v. 23; v. 22 is apparently additional.

34 a. Ch. 34–35 are sometimes known as the Little Apocalypse; they contain a description of the final terrible battles to be waged by Yahweh against the nations in general and against Edom in particular, ch. 34, followed by a prediction of the Last Judgement, which will re-establish Jerusalem in all its glory. The intention and style of this section, which is dependent on Second Isaiah, are similar to those of ch. 24–27 (the 'Apocalypse of Isaiah') and belong like them to the book's last phase of composition.

b. At the time of the fall of Jerusalem in 587 BC, the Edomites showed themselves particularly hostile to the kingdom of Judah and took advantage of its misfortunes. Hence, the later prophets and writers adopt a severe attitude towards Edom, see 63:1; Ps 137:7; Lm 4:21–22; Ezk 25:12; 35:15; Ob 10–16. Here the ruin of Edom illustrates Yahweh's general sentence on the nations. Cf. the 'city of emptiness' (city of Moab) in the apocalypse of ch. 24–27; see 24:7d,10.

c. 'satyrs' or 'he-goats', cf. 13:21, but the parallel makes mythological beings preferable here, see Lv 17:7c. Lilith was a female demon who haunted ruins.

d. Some have seen this as a reference to Isaiah's own book or to a collection of prophecies attributed to him; the wild animals are indeed almost the same as in 13:20–22. Alternatively, the reference may be to Yahweh's book of decrees concerning his creation, vv. 16b–17, cf. Ps 139:16.

e. 'his mouth' 1QIs[a]; 'my mouth' MT.

f. The wild animals of vv. 11seq. The devastated territory of Edom, v. 11, will be partitioned for them as their heritage, just as the Promised Land had been for the Israelites.

35 a. In contrast to the sentence pronounced on Edom, there now follow the blessings in store for Jerusalem. Contacts with Second Isaiah are particularly numerous here.

APPENDICES[a]

‖37:10seq. ‖2 K 18:13–37 Sennacherib's invasion

36 In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib king of Assyria 1 advanced on all the fortified towns of Judah and captured them. ·From 2 Lachish the king of Assyria sent the cupbearer-in-chief with a large force to King Si 48:18 Hezekiah in Jerusalem. The cupbearer-in-chief took up position near the conduit 7:3 of the upper pool on the road to the Fuller's Field. ·The master of the palace, 3 22:20seq. Eliakim son of Hilkiah, Shebna the secretary and the herald Joah son of Asaph went out to him. ·The cupbearer-in-chief said to them, 'Say to Hezekiah, "The 4 great king, the king of Assyria, says this: What makes you so confident? ·Do you 5 think[b] empty words are as good as strategy and military strength? Who are you 30:3 relying on, to dare to rebel against me? ·There you are, relying on that broken 6 reed, Egypt, which pricks and pierces the hand of the person who leans on it. That is what Pharaoh king of Egypt is like to all who rely on him. ·You may say to me: 7
We rely on Yahweh our God. But haven't his high places and altars been suppressed by Hezekiah, who told Judah and Jerusalem: This is the altar before which you must worship? ·Very well, then, make a wager with my lord the king of 8 Assyria: I will give you two thousand horses if you can find horsemen to ride them.
·How could you repulse a single one[c] of the least of my master's soldiers? And yet 9 you have relied on Egypt for chariots and horsemen. ·And lastly, have I marched 10 on this country to lay it waste without warrant from Yahweh? Yahweh himself said to me: March on this country and lay it waste." ' 11 Eliakim, Shebna and Joah said to the cupbearer-in-chief, 'Please speak to your servants in Aramaic, for we understand it; do not speak to us in the Judaean 12 language within earshot of the people on the ramparts.' ·But the cupbearer-in-chief said, 'Do you think my lord sent me here to say these things to your master or to you? On the contrary, it was to the people sitting on the ramparts who, like you, are doomed to eat their own dung and drink their own urine.'

13 The cupbearer-in-chief then drew himself up and shouted loudly in the Judaean 14 language, 'Listen to the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. ·The king says 15 this, "Do not let Hezekiah delude you! He will be powerless to save you. ·Do not let Hezekiah persuade you to rely on Yahweh by saying: Yahweh is sure to save us;
16 this city will not fall into the king of Assyria's clutches. ·Do not listen to Hezekiah, 17 for the king of Assyria says this: Make peace with me, ·surrender to me, and every one of you will be free to eat the fruit of his own vine and of his own fig tree and to drink the water of his own storage-well until I come and take you away to a country
18 like your own, a land of corn and good wine, a land of bread and vineyards. ·Do not let Hezekiah delude you by saying: Yahweh will save us. Has any god of any 19 nation been able to save his country from the king of Assyria's clutches? ·Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where 10:9
20 are the national gods of Samaria? [d] Did they save Samaria from my clutches? ·Of all the national gods, which ones have saved their countries from my clutches, that Yahweh should be able to save Jerusalem from my clutches?" ' 21 They, however, kept quiet and said nothing in reply, since the king had given the 22 order, 'You are not to answer him.' ·The master of the palace, Eliakim son of Hilkiah, Shebna the secretary and the herald Joah son of Asaph, with their clothes torn, went to Hezekiah and reported what the cupbearer-in-chief had said.

The prophet Isaiah is consulted

‖2 K 19:1–7

1 37 On hearing this, King Hezekiah tore his clothes, put on sackcloth and went
2 to the Temple of Yahweh. ·He sent Eliakim master of the palace, Shebna the secretary and the elders of the priests, wearing sackcloth, to the prophet Isaiah
3 son of Amoz. ·They said to him, 'This is what Hezekiah says, "Today is a day of suffering, of punishment, of disgrace. Children come to birth and there is no
4 strength to bring them forth. ·May Yahweh your God hear the words of the Ho 13:13h cupbearer-in-chief whom his master, the king of Assyria, has sent to insult the living God, and may Yahweh your God punish the words he has heard! Offer your prayer for the remnant still left." ' 4:3c
5, 6 When King Hezekiah's ministers came to Isaiah, ·he said to them, 'Say to your master, "Yahweh says this: Do not be afraid of the words which you have heard or the blasphemies which the king of Assyria's minions have uttered against me.
7 Look, I am going to put a spirit in him and, on the strength of a rumour, he will go back to his own country, and in that country I shall make him fall by the sword." '

The ch. have been borrowed from 2 K and put at the end of the first part of Is to complete the collection of traditions relating to the prophet. In ch. 36–37, the editor has combined two sources: 36:1–37:9[a], 37–38, as also ch. 38–39, come from prophetic circles, possibly from a biography of Isaiah; a parallel account, 37:9[b]–36 emphasises Hezekiah's piety and Isaiah's intervention, attributing several prophecies to the prophet which, if authentic, have been to some degree retouched by his disciples, from whom this account is apparently derived. It ends on a note of the supernatural, 37:36.

‖2 K 19:9–19 Second account of Sennacherib's activities

Sennacherib again [a] sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, ·'Tell Hezekiah king of 10 Judah this, "Do not let your God on whom you are relying deceive you with the promise: Jerusalem will not fall into the king of Assyria's clutches. ·You have 11 learnt by now what the kings of Assyria have done to all the other countries, putting them under the curse of destruction. Are you likely to be saved? ·Did the 12 gods of the nations whom my ancestors devastated save them—Gozan, Haran, Rezeph and the Edenites who were in Tel Basar? [b] ·Where is the king of Hamath, 13 the king of Arpad, the king of Lair, [c] of Sepharvaim, of Hena, of Ivvah?" '

Hezekiah took the letter from the messengers' hands and read it; he then went 14 up to the Temple of Yahweh and spread it out before Yahweh. ·Hezekiah said this 15 prayer in the presence of Yahweh, ·'Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, enthroned 16 on the winged creatures, you alone are God of all the kingdoms of the world, you made heaven and earth. ·Give ear, Yahweh, and listen; open your eyes, Yahweh, 17 and see! Hear the words of Sennacherib, who has sent to insult the living God. ·It 18 is true, Yahweh, that the kings of Assyria have destroyed all the nations (and their countries); ·they have thrown their gods on the fire, for these were not gods but 19 human artefacts—wood and stone—and hence they have destroyed them. ·But 20 now, Yahweh our God, save us from his clutches, I beg you, and let all the kingdoms of the world know that you alone are God, Yahweh.'

‖2 K 19:20–28 Isaiah intervenes

Isaiah son of Amoz then sent the following message to Hezekiah, 'Yahweh, God 21 of Israel, says this, "In answer to the prayer which you have addressed to me about Sennacherib king of Assyria. ·Here is the pronouncement which Yahweh has made 22 about him:

She despises you, she scorns you,
the virgin daughter of Zion;
she tosses her head at you,
the daughter of Jerusalem!
Whom have you insulted, whom did you blaspheme? 23 Against whom raised your voice and lifted your haughty eyes?
Against the Holy One of Israel.
Through your minions you have insulted the Lord, 24 thinking: With my many chariots
I have climbed the mountain-tops, the utmost peaks of Lebanon.
I have felled its mighty cedars,
its finest cypresses,
have reached its furthest peak,
its forest garden.
Yes, I have dug and drunk 25 of foreign waters; [d]
under the soles of my feet
I have dried up all Egypt's rivers.

Do you hear? Long ago 26
I prepared this,
from days of old I actually planned it,
now I carry it out.
You were to lay walled cities
in heaps of ruins;

27 that was why their inhabitants, feeble of hand,
were dismayed and discomfited,
were weak as grass,
were frail as plants,
were like grass of housetop and meadow under the east wind.[e] 28 But whether you stand up or sit down, Ps 139:2
whether you go out or come in, I know it (and how you rave against me).[f] 29 Because you have raved against me and your arrogance has reached my ears, I shall put a hook through your nostrils and a muzzle on your lips, and make you return by the road
by which you came.

A sign for Hezekiah ‖2 K 19:29–31

30 And this will be the sign for you:
This year will be eaten the self-sown grain,
next year what sprouts in the fallow;
but in the third year sow and reap, plant vineyards and eat their fruit.
31 The surviving remnant of the House of Judah will bring forth 4:3c new roots below and fruits above; 32 for a remnant will issue from Jerusalem, and survivors from Mount Zion.
Yahweh Sabaoth's jealous love will accomplish this." '

A prophecy on Assyria ‖2 K 19:32–34

33 'This, then, is what Yahweh says about the king of Assyria:

He will not enter this city,
will shoot no arrow at it, confront it with no shield,
throw up no earthwork against it.
34 By the road by which he came, by that he will return;
he will not enter this city, declares Yahweh.
35 I shall protect this city and save it for my sake and my servant David's sake.'

Sennacherib is punished ‖2 K 19:35–37

36 That same night[g] the angel of Yahweh went out and struck down a hundred and eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp. In the early morning when it was time to get up, there they lay, so many corpses.
37 Sennacherib struck camp and left; he returned home and stayed in Nineveh.
38 One day when he was worshipping in the temple of his god Nisroch, his sons Adrammelech and Sharezer struck him down with the sword and escaped into the territory of Ararat. His son Esarhaddon succeeded him.

d. 'foreign' 2 K 19:24; Hebr. omits.
e. 'under the east wind' 1QIs[a]; MT has 'before growing' (?) and omits 'whether you stand up' from beginning of next v.

g. 'That same night' 2 K 19:35; Hebr. omits.

‖2 K 20:1–11 The illness and cure of Hezekiah

38 About then, Hezekiah fell ill and was at the point of death. The prophet 1 Isaiah son of Amoz came and said to him, 'Yahweh says this, "Put your affairs in order, for you are going to die, you will not live." ' ·Hezekiah turned his 2 face to the wall and addressed this prayer to Yahweh, ·'Ah, Yahweh, remember, 3 I beg you, that I have behaved faithfully and with sincerity of heart in your presence and done what you regard as right.' And Hezekiah shed many tears.

Then the word of Yahweh came to Isaiah, ·'Go and say to Hezekiah, "Yahweh, 4, 5 the God of your ancestor David, says this: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I shall cure you: in three days' time you will go up to the Temple of Yahweh. [a]
I shall add fifteen years to your life. ·I shall save you and this city from the king of 6 Assyria's clutches and defend this city for my sake and my servant David's sake." '

[b]'Bring a fig poultice,' Isaiah said, 'apply it to the ulcer and he will recover.' 21
Hezekiah said, 'What is the sign to tell me that I shall be going up to the Temple of 22 Yahweh?' ·'Here', Isaiah replied, [c] 'is the sign from Yahweh that he will do what 7 he has said. ·Look, I shall make the shadow cast by the declining sun [d] on the 8 steps—the steps to Ahaz's roof-room—go back ten steps.' And the sun went back the ten steps by which it had declined.

The Babylonian embassy ‖2 K 20:12–19

1 39 At that time, the king of Babylon, Merodach-Baladan son of Baladan, sent letters and a gift to Hezekiah, for he had heard of his illness and his 2 recovery. ·Hezekiah was delighted at this and showed the ambassadors his entire treasury, the silver, gold, spices, precious oil, his armoury too, and everything to be seen in his storehouses. There was nothing in his palace or in his whole domain that Hezekiah did not show them.
3 The prophet Isaiah then came to King Hezekiah and asked him, 'What have these men said, and where have they come to you from?' Hezekiah answered, 4 'They have come from a distant country, from Babylon.' ·Isaiah said, 'What have they seen in your palace?' 'They have seen everything in my palace,' Hezekiah answered. 'There is nothing in my storehouses that I have not shown them.' 5, 6 Then Isaiah said to Hezekiah, 'Listen to the word of Yahweh Sabaoth, ·"The days are coming when everything in your palace, everything that your ancestors have amassed until now, will be carried off to Babylon. Not a thing will be left," 7 Yahweh says. ·"Sons sprung from you, sons begotten by you, will be abducted to 8 be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon." ' ·Hezekiah said to Isaiah, 'This word of Yahweh that you announce is reassuring,' for he was thinking, 'There is going to be peace and security during my lifetime.'

b. The book opens with a cantata for several voices: the nation's servitude is over and a new Exodus is about to take place under God's leadership. The theme, found throughout the book, is restated at the end, 55:12–13.

c. Jerusalem has been forced into 'service' like a mercenary or slave; she had paid for her offence twice over, like a thief, cf. Ex 22.

d. The identity of the voice, obeying the order in v. 2, has been deliberately left mysterious by the prophet. The evangelists, see Mt 3:3; Jn 1:23, quote this text in its LXX form: 'A voice of one who cries in the desert'.

e. Babylonian texts speak in similar terms of processional or triumphal ways prepared for a god or victorious king. Here it is the road by which Yahweh will lead his people through the desert in a new Exodus. The wonders of the Exodus had already been recalled by Isaiah, 10:25–27, as an earnest of God's protection. The prophets of the Exile elaborate this theme. As of old, God will come and save his people, 46:3–4 and 63:9 (repeating Ex 19:4); Jr 16:14–15; 31:2. The miracles of the first Exodus, Mi 7:14–15, the crossing of the Sea of Reeds, 11:15–16j; 43:16–21; 51:10; 63:11–13, the water from the rock, 48:21, the bright cloud, 52:12, see also 4:5–6, the journey through the desert, 40:3seq., see also Ba 5:7–9, become both type and guarantee of the second, from Babylon to Jerusalem. On the theme of the Exodus see also Ho 2:16p.

f. The celestial voice replaces the theophanies attendant on the prophetic call, 6:8–13; Jr 1:4–10; Ezk 1–2, perhaps indicating a more lively awareness of God's transcendence. Here as in the cases noted above, the prophet asks for and receives clear directions for the mission entrusted to him.

g. The theme of the good shepherd, stated by Jr 23:1–6, elaborated by Ezk 34 and further developed by Jesus, Mt 18:12–14par.; Jn 10:11–18.

h. The contrast between God's greatness and human weakness is a frequent theme in wisdom literature, Jb 28; 38–39; Pr 8:22seq.; 30:4. But the wisdom books more explicitly ascribe all this creative and regulative activity to divine Wisdom, Jb 28:23–27; Pr 8:22–31; Si 1:1–3.

i. 'the water of the sea' 1QIs[a]; 'the waters' MT.

j. The 'islands', frequently mentioned in the Book of Consolation, are the archipelagoes and distant coasts of the Mediterranean, and in this sense the word is often put in parallel with 'the nations'.

k. 'as nothingness' 1QIs[a]; 'less than nothingness' (?) MT.

l. The v. expresses the incomparability of the true God, cf. 25:1, which forms the basis for the prohibition of images in the Decalogue and after. Vv. 19–20 have been inserted later and are continued at 41:6–7, concerning the making of idols (cf. the long addition of 44:9–20). Nonetheless, polemics against non-Yahwist gods form a common theme in the second part of Is, cf. 41:21i; 42:8,17; 45:16,20; 46:5–7; see also Ps 115:3–8; Ws 13:11–15; Jr 10:1–6; 51:15–19; Ba 6.

m. Trans. uncertain, but we take the line to be in contrast to the previous v.

n. Second Isaiah adopts the same title, see 41:14, etc, by which Isaiah chose to refer to the God of Israel, see 6:3g.

o. The stars, forming 'the army' or 'array of heaven', cf. 34:4; Dt 17:3; 2 K 17:16; Jr 8:2; etc. In Babylon, where this proclamation was written, they were regarded as divinities.

p. Jacob-Israel represents the chosen people, here the Babylonian exiles, wondering whether Yahweh has forgotten his people, cf. earlier Ezk 37:11.

41 a. In response to the people's doubts, see 40:27, this great poem foretells the coming of a liberator. He is Cyrus, who is not named until 44:28, but was readily identifiable to Second Isaiah's contemporaries, cf. vv. 2–3 and 25. The poem was composed at the moment when Cyrus' thunderous advance made the fall of Babylon a predictable conclusion. Yahweh had raised him up, not to chastise like Sennacherib or Nebuchadnezzar, but to deliver.

b. The Hebr. word here rendered as 'saving justice' implies a restoration of the order willed by Yahweh and may also have the sense of 'victory', see also v. 10; 54:17.

c. 'scarcely touching', lit. 'with his feet he does not tread' yabus conj.; Hebr. yabo' 'he does not come'. • The image suggests the speed of Cyrus' advance.

d. For further use of this expression for the eternal nature of Yahweh, see Rv 1:8,17; 21:6; 22:13.

e. vv. 6–7 are an interpolation belonging to 40:19–20. See 40:18*l*.

f. This is the first appearance of the theme of 'the servant', occupying a prominent place in Second Isaiah's preaching; this theme is linked to that of Yahweh's choice, see 43:10–20; 44:1–2; 45:4, and the latter goes back to the calling of Abraham. Israel-Jacob, 'descendant of Abraham', has been chosen to be Yahweh's witness, 43:10; though the nation has been unfaithful, 42:19, God will forgive and save it, 44:1–5; 48:20. Rather than the relationship between master and slave, the notion of 'servant' here implies a relationship of trust and love. • On the 'songs of the servant', see Introduction to the Prophets, §9, pp. 1169–70.

g. The 'redeemer', go'el, is primarily the nearest male relative, the avenger of blood, Nb 35:19c, who pays off a debt and frees the debtor from prison and whose duty it is to protect the widow, Rt 2:20i. Hence the word is used of God as protector of the oppressed and liberator of his people. In this sense it is very frequent in Ps, Ps 19:14g, and in the second part of Is, 43:14; 44:6,24; 47:4; 48:17; 59:20; see Jr 50:34. The NT and Christian theology were later to take up the same idea and apply it to Jesus, he too being the 'redeemer'.

h. As Moses in the past had brought forth water from the rock to quench his people's thirst, Ex 17:1–7, so, during the coming return from exile, rivers will flow down from the mountains and make the desert into a fertile plain. Through the wonders attending the return from exile, the prophet foresees features of the Messianic age, see 11:6; Ezk 47:1–12.

The fatuity of idols [i]

43:8–13; 44:7–11
'Present your case,' says Yahweh, 21
'Produce your arguments,' says Jacob's king.
'Let them produce and reveal to us 22
what is going to happen.
What happened in the past?
Reveal it so that we can consider it and know what the outcome will be.
Or tell us about the future, reveal what is to happen next, 23
and then we shall know that you are gods.
At least, do something, be it good or bad,
so that we may feel alarm and fear.
41:29 Look, you are less than nothingness, 24 and what you do is less than nothing;[j] to choose you is an outrage.'
I have raised him from the north and he has come, 25 from the east he has been summoned by name.[k] and in the past for us to say, 'That is right'?

No one in fact revealed it, no one proclaimed it,
no one has heard you speak.
First-fruits of Zion, look, here they come! 27 their statues, wind and emptiness.

↗Mt 12:18–21 First song of the servant [a]

42 Here is my servant whom I uphold, 1 11:1–10 Mt 3:16n Jn 1:32–34 my chosen one in whom my soul delights.
I have sent my spirit upon him,[b]
he will bring fair judgement to the nations.
He does not cry out or raise his voice, 2 his voice is not heard in the street;
he does not break the crushed reed 3
or snuff the faltering wick.
14:6 Jn 8:45 Faithfully he presents fair judgement;
he will not grow faint, he will not be crushed[c] 4 until he has established fair judgement on earth, and the coasts and islands are waiting for his instruction.
Thus says God, Yahweh, 5 who created the heavens and spread them out, who hammered into shape the earth and what comes from it,
who gave breath to the people on it,
and spirit to those who walk on it:

6 I, Yahweh, have called you in saving justice,
I have grasped you by the hand and shaped you;[d]
I have made you a covenant of the people and light to the nations, Jn 8:12b 7 to open the eyes of the blind, Lk 7:22 Jn 9 to free captives from prison, and those who live in darkness from the dungeon. Ps 107:10 Lk 1:79 8 I am Yahweh, that is my name![e] Jn 8:32
I shall not yield my glory to another, nor my honour to idols. 48:11

before they appear I tell you of them.

Song of victory

10 Sing a new song to Yahweh![f] Ps 96:1 Rv 5:9
Let his praise be sung from remotest parts of the earth by those who sail the sea and by everything in it, by the coasts and islands and those who inhabit them.
11 Let the desert and its cities raise their voices, the encampments where Kedar lives.
Let the inhabitants of the Rock cry aloud for joy[g]
and shout from the mountain tops.
12 Let them give glory to Yahweh and, in the coasts and islands, let them voice his praise.
13 Yahweh advances like a hero, Nb 10:35 Jg 5:4
like a warrior he rouses his fire. Zp 1:14
He shouts, he raises the war cry, he shows his might against his foes.
14 'From long ago I have been silent,
I have kept quiet, held myself in check, groaning like a woman in labour, panting and gasping for air.
15 I shall ravage mountain and hill,

i. As Yahweh had put the nations on trial, v. 1, so now he summons the false gods to appear before him. Their inability to predict the future and to act on world events is the proof of their vacuity. Second Isaiah contains the first explicit expression of absolute monotheism, see 43:8–13; 44:6–8; 45:5, the way for which is prepared by the practical type of monotheism represented by exclusive worship of Yahweh, God of Israel, see 42:8e and p. 1169. On polemic against idols, see 40:18*l*.

j. 'nothing' 'ephes conj.; Hebr. 'apa' unintelligible.

k. 'he has been summoned by name' conj., cf. 45:3; 'he calls (or proclaims) my name' Hebr. The formula means the selection of someone for a particular mission, Ex 31:2; Nb 1:17, at the same time expressing a privileged relationship between Yahweh and the person whom 'he calls by name', see 43:1; 45:3–4.

l. 'tramples on' yabus conj.; Hebr. yabo' 'he walks'.

m. lit. trans. of possibly corrupt text. This is presumably, as in v. 25, an allusion to Yahweh's announcement of deliverance by Cyrus, while the false gods remain dumb, v. 28.

n. 'nothingness' 1QIs[a], Targ.; 'misfortune' MT.

42 a. This is the first of the four 'songs of the servant' (42:1–4 (5–9); 49:1–6; 50:4–9 (10–11); 52:13–53:12), on which see Introduction to the Prophets, §9. Some consider that this first song ends at v. 7, others even at v. 4. In this poem, the servant is presented as a prophet, the object of a mission and a divine destiny, v. 6, cf. v. 4; Jr 1:5, quickened by the Spirit, Is 42:1, to teach the entire world, vv. 1 and 3, discreetly and firmly, vv. 2–4, in spite of opposition. But his mission transcends that of other prophets, since he is himself both covenant and light, v. 6, and performs a task of liberation and salvation, v. 7.

b. The choosing of the servant is accompanied by an outpouring of the Spirit as for the charismatic leaders of old time, the Judges, see Jg 3:10, and the early kings, Saul, 1 S 9:17, see Is 10:9–10, and David, 1 S 16:12–13; see Is 11:1–2. • By specifying 'Jacob, my servant, . . . Israel, my chosen one', the Gk version bears witness, as does the gloss on 49:3, to a Jewish tradition identifying the servant with the community of Israel, thus designated in other passages of Second Isaiah, see 41:8f.

c. 'will not be crushed' Gk, Targ.; 'will not run' Hebr.

d. In Hebr. the same word as in Gn 2:7 to describe Yahweh, 'modelling' the body of the first man.

e. The name revealed to Moses, Ex 3:13g,14, of the one who alone exists. There is no other God, cf. 40:25; 43:10–12; 44:6–8; 45:3,5–6,14–15,18,20–22; 46:5,9; 48:11; cf. 41:21–29. He is the Creator of all things, 40:12seq., 21seq., 28; 42:5; 43:1; 44:24; 45:9–12; 48:13; 51:13; 54:5, eternal, 41:4; 44:6; 48:12. He 'will not yield his glory to another', here and at 48:11. The exultant monotheism of the Book of Consolation thus resumes the earlier theme of Yahweh's 'jealousy', Dt 4:24f; cf. Ex 20:3, reinforcing it with an explicit assertion of the transcendence of God.

f. This 'new song', v. 10, cf. Ps 96:1; 98:1; 149:1, is a lyrical celebration of Yahweh's victory, in which the whole world is invited to take part.

g. Kedar: a nomadic tribe, cf. 21:16–17. The Rock (Hebr. Sela): a desert city in Edom, cf. 16:1; 2 K 14:7.

and the quagmires into solid ground.
This I shall do—without fail.'
Those who trust in idols will recoil, 17 they will blush for shame, who say to metal images,
'You are our gods.'

6:9–10 Israel's blindness [i]

Listen, you deaf! 18
Look and see, you blind!
41:8f Mt 13:9–15 Who so blind as my servant, 19 so deaf as the messenger I send?
(Who so blind as the friend I have taken to myself, so deaf as Yahweh's servant?) [j]
You have seen many things but not observed them; 20 your ears are open but you do not hear. [k] Yahweh wished, because of his saving justice, 21 to make the Law great and glorious.
Yet here is a people pillaged and plundered, 22
all of them shut up in caves, imprisoned in dungeons.
They have been pillaged, with no one to rescue them, plundered, with no one to say, 'Give it back!'
Which of you will listen to this, 23 who pay attention and listen in future?
Who surrendered Jacob to the plunderer 24 and Israel to the pillagers?
Was it not Yahweh, against whom we had sinned, in whose ways they would not walk and whose Law they would not obey?
On him he poured out his blazing anger 25
and the fury of war;
9:17–18 Am 4:6f it enveloped him in flames and yet he did not understand;
it burned him up, but he did not learn a lesson.

God, Israel's protector and liberator [a] 44:2 43 And now, thus says Yahweh, 1

he who created you, Jacob, who formed you, Israel:
41:14g Do not be afraid, for I have redeemed you;
41:8 I have called you by your name, you are mine.
Ps 91 Should you pass through the waters, I shall be with you; 2 or through rivers, they will not swallow you up.
↗1 Co 3:15 Should you walk through fire, you will not suffer, and the flame will not burn you.
For I am Yahweh, your God, 3 the Holy One of Israel, your Saviour.
I have given Egypt for your ransom,
1 K 10:1a Cush and Seba in exchange for you. [b]
Since I regard you as precious, 4 since you are honoured and I love you,

I therefore give people in exchange for you,
and nations in return for your life.
5 Do not be afraid, for I am with you. 8:10+
I shall bring your offspring from the east, and gather you from the west.
6 To the north I shall say, 'Give them up!'
and to the south, 'Do not hold them back!'
Bring back my sons from far away and my daughters from the remotest part of the earth, 7 everyone who bears my name, whom I have created for my glory, whom I have formed, whom I have made.

Yahweh alone is God [c] 41:21–29; 42:18i

8 Bring forward the people that is blind, yet has eyes, 44:7–11 that is deaf and yet has ears.
9 Let all the nations assemble, let the peoples gather here!

and revealed things to us in the past?
Let them bring their witnesses to justify themselves, let others hear and say, 'It is true.'
10 You yourselves are my witnesses, declares Yahweh, Ac 1:8j so that you may know and believe me and understand that it is I. Jn 8:24,28i

Against Babylon

14 Thus says Yahweh,
your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: 41:14g
For your sake I have sent to Babylon, I shall knock down all the prison bars,

h. lit. 'into islands'. v. 15 is in antithetical parallelism with 41:18, but is not a threat; it expresses Yahweh's absolute sovereignty over nature.

i. It is not God who, deaf and blind to Israel's fate, draws down disaster on him, but Israel who is deaf and blind; he understands neither what is happening to him nor why it happens to him. This prophecy is parallel to the instructions given to Isaiah at the time of his calling, see 6:10k. • vv. 21 and 24[b] seem to be additional.

j. 'the friend I have taken to myself' trans. conj.; elsewhere the Hebr. word means 'repaid' but it can be understood in the sense of 'received into friendship'. 'deaf' Sym. and 2 Hebr. MSS; Hebr. repeats 'blind'. • This entire repetition of v. 19[a] is probably a gloss.

k. 'you do not' conj.; 'he does not' Hebr.

43 a. Prophecy of salvation, parallel to that in 41:8–20. Israel has nothing to fear, vv. 1 and 5, since the choice by Yahweh long ago is a guarantee of approaching deliverance.

b. Cush and Seba (as distinct from Saba in northern Arabia) are two regions in Africa, south of Egypt, see 45:14. This is not a precise historical reference, merely an evocation of far-away peoples. Yahweh is supreme master of all nations and Israel's approaching deliverance is part of his universal design.

c. Israel, though deaf and blind to the events of its own history, see 42:18i, serves by this very history as witness to Yahweh against the nations and their gods: a further demonstration of monotheism from the impotence of the false gods, see 41:21i.

d. 'from eternity' versions; 'from today' Hebr. This short prophecy is perhaps the continuation of 43:1–7.

Thus says Yahweh, 16
who made a way through the sea,
a path in the raging waters, who led out chariot and horse 17 together with an army of picked troops:
they lay down never to rise again,
they were snuffed out, put out like a wick.

Israel's ingratitude [g]

But, Jacob, you have not invoked me; 22
no, Israel, you have grown weary of me.
You have not brought me lambs as your burnt offerings 23
and have not honoured me with your sacrifices.
I have not subjected you to cereal offering,
I have not wearied you by demanding incense.
You have not bought expensive reed for me [h] 24 or sated me with the fat of your sacrifices.
Instead you have subjected me with your sins,
you have wearied me with your crimes,
I, I it is who blot out your acts of revolt for my own sake 25 and shall not call your sins to mind.
Remind me, and we will judge this together; 26 state your own case and justify yourself.

The fatuity of idols [d] Jr 2:26–28;10:1–16

9 The makers of idols are all nothingness; the works they delight in serve no purpose.
And these are the witness against them: they see nothing, they know nothing; and 10 so they will be put to shame. •Who ever fashioned a god or cast an image without 11 hope of gain? •Watch how all its devotees will be put to shame, and the men who made it too, who are only human. Let them all assemble, let them stand forward and feel both fear and shame!
12 The blacksmith makes an axe over the charcoal, beats it into shape with a hammer, works on it with his strong arm. Then he feels hungry and his strength deserts him; having drunk no water, he is exhausted.
13 The wood carver takes his measurements, outlines the image with chalk, executes it with the chisel, following the outline with a compass. He makes it look like a human being, with human standards of beauty, so that it can reside in a house.
14 He has cut down cedars, has selected an oak and a terebinth which he has grown for himself among the trees in the forest and has planted a pine tree which the rain having kindled it, he bakes bread. But he also makes a god and worships it; he

f. The prodigies of the past, the crossing of the Sea and the destruction of the Egyptian army, will be eclipsed by the even greater wonders which God is about to perform in the new Exodus.

g. This prophecy of blame, exceptional in Second Isaiah, plays on the words 'to make weary' and 'to subject'. Whereas God might have wearied and subjected Israel by cultic obligations, Israel instead has made a servant of God and wearied him by its sins. But God will forgive this if Israel admits its wrong-doing, vv. 25–26.

h. An aromatic reed prized for its scent, in secular and religious use, Sg 4:14; Ezk 27:19.

i. This is clearly Jacob, see v. 22, regarded unfavourably here, following a tradition alien to Gn but found in Ho 12:3–4.

j. The prophets, see for instance 1 K 13:11–32; 19:2–4, and the false prophets to whom the people listened.

44 a. A poetic name for Israel, found elsewhere only in Dt 32:15; 33:5 and 26 and Si 37:25 (Hebr.), is of uncertain meaning: perhaps 'loyal' from yashar 'honest', 'upright', as opposed to Jacob 'he who supplants'.

b. A sign of belonging to Yahweh, like the name of the Beast marked on its devotees in Rv 13:16–17, or the tattooing practised in Hellenistic cults. The passage refers to converts to Yahwism who are integrated into Jacob-Israel. • In 49:16, Yahweh engraves Zion on the palms of his hands, so as not to forget her.

c. 'let him say' added as in 1QIs[a]. The last two lines are uncertain.

d. This satire on the makers of idols, in which neither God nor Israel is mentioned, is an addition from the same hand as 42:6–7. See Jr 10:1–16, which is similarly inauthentic.

makes an idol from it and bows down before it. ·Half of it he burns on the fire, over 16 this half he roasts meat, eats it[e] and is replete; at the same time he warms himself and says, 'Ah, how warm I am, watching the flames!' ·With the remainder he 17 makes a god, his idol, bows down before it, worships it and prays to it. 'Save me,' he says, 'for you are my god.'[f]

They know nothing, they understand nothing, since their eyes are incapable of 18 seeing and their hearts of reflecting. ·Not one of them looks into his heart, not one 19 of them has the knowledge and wit to think, 'I burned half of it on the fire and cooked food over the embers. Am I right to make something disgusting out of what is left? Am I right to bow down before a block of wood?'

He hankers after ashes, his deluded heart has led him astray; he will not save 20 himself, he will not think, 'What I have in my hand is nothing but a lie!'

Loyalty to Yahweh[g]

46:8 Remember these things, Jacob, 21 and Israel, since you are my servant.
41:8f I formed you, you are my servant;
49:14–16 Israel, I shall not forget you.
I have dispelled your acts of revolt like a cloud 22 and your sins like a mist.
Come back to me, for I have redeemed you.
Heavens, shout for joy, for Yahweh has acted! 23
Underworld, shout aloud!
Shout for joy, you mountains, forests and all your trees!
41:14g For Yahweh has redeemed Jacob and displayed his glory in Israel.

God, Creator of the world and lord of history[h]

Thus says Yahweh, your redeemer, 24
he who formed you in the womb:
I, Yahweh, have made all things,
42:5 I alone spread out the heavens.
When I hammered the earth into shape, who was with me?
I, who foil the omens of soothsayers 25 1 Co 1:20 and make fools of diviners, who confound sages
turning their knowledge into folly, who confirm the word of my servant 26
and make the plans of my envoys succeed; who say to Jerusalem, 'You will be inhabited,' and to the towns of Judah, 'You will be rebuilt and I shall restore the ruins of Jerusalem'; 42:15; who say to the ocean, 'Dry up! 27
I shall make your rivers run dry'; who say to Cyrus, 'My shepherd.' 28
He will perform my entire will by saying to Jerusalem, 'You will be rebuilt,' and to the Temple, 'You will be refounded.'[i]

41:1–5 Cyrus, the instrument of God[a]

45 Thus says Yahweh to his anointed one, 1 to Cyrus whom, he says, I have grasped by his right hand, to make the nations bow before him and to disarm kings,[b]
to open gateways before him so that their gates be closed no more:

2 I myself shall go before you, 40:4
I shall level the heights,
I shall shatter the bronze gateways,
I shall smash the iron bars. Ps 107:16 3 I shall give you secret treasures and hidden hoards of wealth, so that you will know that I am Yahweh, who call you by your name, 43:1
the God of Israel.
4 It is for the sake of my servant Jacob 41:8f and of Israel my chosen one, that I have called you by your name, have given you a title though you do not know me.
5 I am Yahweh, and there is no other, 40:25;44:6+
there is no other God except me. 2 S 7:22

9 Woe to anyone who argues with his Maker, 29:16g one earthenware pot among many! Rm 9:20
Does the clay say to its potter, 'What are you doing?
Your work has no hands!' [e]
10 Woe to anyone who asks a father, 'Why are you begetting?'
and a woman, 'Why are you giving birth?'

e. 'he roasts meat, eats it' Gk, see v. 19; Hebr. inverts the two verbs.

f. As well as Ws 13:11seq., a parallel is to be found in Horace, Sat. I, 8, 1seq.

g. vv. 21–23 follow on from vv. 1–8, before the insertion of vv. 9–20. v. 23 perhaps forms the conclusion to the section beginning at 42:10.

h. Resumption of the theme of God's omnipotence about to be manifested most particularly in the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the part to be played by Cyrus, explicitly named for the first time in v. 28, cf. 41:1–5, to whom the prophecy of 45:1–7 will be addressed.

i. The second part of the v. is perhaps an addition; it repeats v. 26[c] and mentions the rebuilding of the Temple which does not occur elsewhere in Second Isaiah. But the addition is an ancient one and the versions have been confused by the attribution of these words to Cyrus, instead rendering v. 28[c]: 'I it is who say,' cf. v. 26.

45 a. This is a royal enthronement prophecy like those in Ps 2 and 110: Cyrus is summoned 'by name', Is 45:3–4, see 41:25k, and receives the title of 'Yahweh's anointed one' which used to be reserved for the kings of Israel and became the title of the awaited saviour-king, see Introduction to the Prophets, §5. The paradox is that the title is here conferred on a foreign ruler who does not know Yahweh, vv. 4–5. The prophecy is curiously similar to a Babylonian text, the 'Cyrus Cylinder', in which Marduk, who was not a Persian god, 'named the name of Cyrus and summoned him to rule the whole world.' The latter text, drawn up by the priests of Babylon, was written, like Second Isaiah's prophecy, at the moment of Cyrus' victorious advance, in 539 BC.

b. lit. 'I shall ungird the loins of kings', cf. 1 K 20:11 and the inverse formula 'gird the loins', 'buckle on the sword'.

c. This prayer (Lat. Rorate coeli desuper . . .) is immediately concerned with the deliverance and 'saving justice' that Cyrus is shortly to bring, but which are Yahweh's creation, see 41:2b. By substituting 'upright one' and 'Saviour' for the abstract terms of the Hebr., St Jerome emphasised the messianic import of the prophecy.

d. First Isaiah already compared the messianic prince to a new shoot bursting from the stock of David, 4:2; 6:13; 11:1, see Jr 23:5 = 33:15. In Zc 3:8, the word 'branch' becomes a messianic title.

e. i.e. perhaps, 'is incomplete' or 'is useless'. The image of the potter, inspired by 29:16, cf. Jr 18:1–12; 19:1–11, is used again by Paul, Rm 9:20–21.

Thus says Yahweh, 11
the Holy One of Israel and his Maker:
I am asked for signs regarding my sons,[f]
I am given orders about the work I do.
It was I who made the earth 12 and I created human beings on it, mine were the hands that spread out the heavens and I have given the orders to all their array.
I myself have raised him[g] in saving justice 13 and I shall make all paths level for him.
He will rebuild my city and bring my exiles home without ransom or indemnity, says Yahweh Sabaoth.

The conversion of the nations[h]

Thus says Yahweh: 14
The produce of Egypt, the commerce of Cush
Si 36:4 and the men of Seba, tall of stature, 1 K 10:1 will come over to you and belong to you.
They will follow you, walking in chains,
they will bow before you,
they will pray to you,
'With you alone is God, and there is no other!
The gods do not exist.'
Truly, you are a God who conceals himself, 15
God of Israel, Saviour![i]
They are shamed and humbled, every one of them, 16 humiliated they go, the makers of idols.
Israel will be saved by Yahweh, 17 saved everlastingly.
You will never be ashamed or humiliated for ever and ever.
For thus says Yahweh, the Creator of the heavens— 18
he is God, who shaped the earth and made it,
who set it firm;
he did not create it to be chaos,
he formed it to be lived in:
I am Yahweh, and there is no other.
Dt 30:11–14 I have not spoken in secret, 19
Jn 18:20 in some dark corner of the underworld.
Ac 26:26 I did not say, 'Offspring of Jacob, search for me in chaos!'
I am Yahweh: I proclaim saving justice,
I say what is true.

God, lord of the whole universe[j]

Assemble, come, all of you gather round, survivors of the nations. 20
They have no knowledge, those who parade their wooden idols and pray to a god
that cannot save.
Speak up, present your case, 21
let them put their heads together!
41:22;43:9–12; 48:5 Who foretold this in the past, who revealed it long ago?
Ps 18:31 Was it not I, Yahweh?

There is no other god except me, no saving God, no Saviour except me!
22 Turn to me and you will be saved,
all you ends of the earth,
for I am God, and there is no other.
23 By my own self I swear it;
what comes from my mouth is saving justice,
it is an irrevocable word:
All shall bend the knee to me, ↗Rm 14:11 Ph 2:10–11
by me every tongue shall swear, 24 saying, 'In Yahweh alone [k] are saving justice and strength,' until all those who used to rage at him 41:11 come to him in shame.
25 In Yahweh the whole race of Israel finds justice and glory.

so that it never moves from the spot.
You may cry out to it in distress, it never replies, it never saves anyone in trouble.

f. 'his creator', lit. 'his fashioner', cf. Gn 2:7–8. • 'signs' 'otot conj.; Hebr. 'otiyyot 'things to come'.

g. Cyrus, as before, cf. 41:2.

h. This universalism, foreseeing a future gathering of the nations round Jerusalem to worship the God of Israel, is also found in 2:2–4 (= Mi 4:1–3); Jr 12:15–16; 16:19–21; Zp 3:9–10. It is one of the key ideas of the Book of Consolation, 42:1–4,6; 45:14–16,20–25; 49:6; 55:3–5; see also 60. It reappears after the Exile, see Zc 2:15; 8:20–23; 14:9,16. See also Ps 87 and Jon.

i. This isolated v. points a theological lesson: Yahweh no longer acts directly in history as formerly, he hides behind his instruments (Cyrus); but, for his people, he still remains the Saviour whose omnipotence is patently manifest in his creative work, vv. 18–19.

j. The polemic against false gods, already encountered several times in Second Isaiah (see 40:12–31,18*l*), here attains a universalism not so clearly expressed heretofore, see v. 14 above.

k. 'saying, In Yahweh alone' Gk; 'in Yahweh alone, he told me' Hebr.

46 a. The prophet foresees the capture of Babylon by Cyrus. The gods of the Assyro-Babylonian pantheon, Bel, god of the sky, and Nebo, god of wisdom, are crushed. The Babylonians flee, carrying their gods, i.e. the idols representing them.

b. Unlike the idolaters carrying their gods as they flee, Yahweh has carried Israel from the beginning.

c. The contrast between the conquered Babylonian gods and Yahweh the triumphant God of Israel leads the prophet to resume his theme of the true God's incomparable power, cf. 41:21–29; 42:8; 43:8–13; 44:7.

d. 'scales', lit. 'reed', i.e. the arm of the balance.

44:21 Remember this and stand firm; [e] 8 rebels, look into your hearts.
Remember the things that happened long ago, 9
for I am God, and there is no other,
God, and there is none like me.
41:26–27; 45:21+ From the beginning I revealed the future, 10 in advance, what has not yet occurred.
Ps 33:11 I say: My purpose will come about, Ep 1:11 I shall do whatever I please;

my man predestined, from a distant land.
What I have said, I shall do, what I have planned, I shall perform.
Listen to me, you hard-hearted people 12 51:5 far removed from saving justice:
I am bringing my justice nearer, 13
it is not far away,
my salvation will not delay.
I shall place my salvation in Zion

47 Step down! Sit in the dust, 1 virgin daughter of Babylon. [b] 3:26 Sit on the ground, no throne, daughter of the Chaldaeans,
for never again will you be called tender and delicate.
Take the grinding mill, crush up the meal. 2 Remove your veil,
tie up your skirt, bare your legs,
cross the rivers.
Jr 13:22 Ho 2:5i Let your nakedness be displayed 3 and your shame exposed.
I am going to take vengeance and no one will stand in my way. [c]

41:14g Our redeemer, Yahweh Sabaoth is his name, 4 the Holy One of Israel, says: [d] Sit in silence, bury yourself in darkness, 5
daughter of the Chaldaeans,
for never again will you be called
the mistress of kingdoms.
10:6 Zc 1:15 Being angry with my people, 6
I rejected my heritage, surrendering them into your clutches.
You showed them no mercy,
you made your yoke very heavy on the aged.
You thought, 'I shall be a queen forever.' 7
You did not reflect on these matters or think about the future.

Now listen to this, voluptuous woman, 8 ‖Zp 2:15 ↗Rv 18:7–8 lolling at ease and thinking to yourself,
'I am the only one who matters. [e]

I shall never be widowed, never know bereavement.'
9 Yet both these things will befall you, suddenly, in one day.
Bereavement and widowhood will suddenly befall you in spite of all your witchcraft and the potency of your spells.
10 Confident in your wickedness, you thought, 'No one can see me.'
Your wishes and your knowledge were what deluded you,
as you thought to yourself,
'I am the only one who matters.'
11 Hence, disaster will befall you which you will not know how to charm away, calamity overtake you
which you will not be able to avert, ruination will suddenly befall you,
such as you have never known.
12 Keep to your spells then ↗Rv 18:23
and all your sorceries, at which you have worked so hard since you were young.
Perhaps you will succeed,
perhaps you will strike terror!
13 You have had many tiring consultations:
let the astrologers come forward now and save you,
the star-gazers
who announce month by month
what will happen to you next.
14 Look, they are like wisps of straw,
the fire will burn them up.
They will not save their lives from the power of the flame.
No embers these, for keeping warm, no fire to sit beside!
15 Such will your wizards prove to be for you,[f] for whom you have worked so hard since you were young;
each wandering his own way,
none of them can save you.

Yahweh has foretold everything[a]

1 48 Listen to this, House of Jacob, you who are called by the name of Israel

e. Meaning uncertain: sometimes emended to 'be confused', but Gk 'be firm' seems to support the proposed trans.

f. i.e. Cyrus, who swoops on his enemies like a bird of prey. The term is not pejorative.

47 a. The poem is a qinah, or lament with uneven lines. It is the only example in Second Isaiah of such 'prophecies against the nations' as are found in the other prophets; its style is reminiscent of prophecies of punishment directed against Jerusalem.

b. Expression commonly used for a personified town or country, see 23:12 (Sidon); 37:22 = 2 K 19:21; Jr 14:17 ('my people'); 46:11 (Egypt); Lm 1:15 (Judah); 2:13 (Zion).

c. 'no one will' conj.; 'I shall not' Hebr.

d. In Hebr. the v. has no verb and is possibly a gloss; Gk, followed here, has 'says'.

e. Babylon is apparently trying to rival Yahweh, cf. 42:8; 45:14; 46:9. She will be punished for her pride.

f. 'wizards': the term normally means 'merchants' (etymologically: 'those who come and go'?) but, in the light of an identical word in Accadian, it can be taken to mean 'wizard', 'magician', see vv. 9.12–13.

48 a. Long beforehand, God had predicted 'things past' to his incredulous and rebellious people, v. 3, i.e. the earlier events of salvation-history. Now he announces 'new things', v. 6, i.e. the deliverance which he is in the act of performing for the honour of his name. The severe tone of the prophecy is surprising in the prophet of Consolation.

Listen to me, Jacob, 12
Israel whom I have called:
44:6+ I, and none else, am the first,
I am also the last.
My hand laid the foundations of earth 13
and my right hand spread out the heavens.
Rm 4:17 I summon them
and they all present themselves together.
Assemble, all of you, and listen; 14 which of them has revealed this?
Yahweh loves him; he will do his pleasure on Babylon and the race of the Chaldaeans; [f]
I, I have spoken, yes, I have summoned him, 15
I have brought him, and he will succeed.

Israel's destiny

Come near and listen to this: [g] 16 45:19 from the first, I never spoke obscurely;

when it happened, I was there,
and now Lord Yahweh has sent me with his spirit.
17 Thus says Yahweh, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: 41:14g
I am Yahweh your God and teach you for your own good,
I lead you in the way you ought to go.
18 If only you had listened to my commandments!
Your prosperity would have been like a river and your saving justice like the waves of the sea.
19 Your descendants would have been numbered like the sand, Gn 15:5; 22:17 your offspring as many as its grains.
Their name would never be cancelled or blotted out from my presence.

The end of the Exile [h]

20 Come out from Babylon! Flee from the Chaldaeans! Jr 50:8;51:6.45 Rv 18:4 Declare this with cries of joy, proclaim it, carry it to the remotest parts of earth, say, 'Yahweh has redeemed his servant Jacob.' 41:8f 21 Those he led through the arid country never went thirsty; 40:3c Ps 78:15–16 he made water flow for them from the rock, he split the rock and out streamed the water. Ex 17:1–7 22 There is no peace, says Yahweh, for the wicked. 57:21

Second song of the servant [a] 42:1a

1 49 Coasts and islands, listen to me, 41:1a pay attention, distant peoples.
Yahweh called me when I was in the womb, Ps 2:7 Jr 1:5
before my birth he had pronounced my name. [b] Ga 1:15 2 He made my mouth like a sharp sword, Heb 4:12 Rv 1:16; 19:15
he hid me in the shadow of his hand.
He made me into a sharpened arrow and concealed me in his quiver.
3 He said to me, 'Israel, [c] you are my servant, ↗Mt 3:17n through whom I shall manifest my glory.'
4 But I said, 'My toil has been futile, 53:10–12

b. Obscure imagery. The Targum understands it as 'of the seed of Judah'. Gk has merely 'issued from Judah'.

c. Israel's obstinacy is a familiar theme of the prophets and the historical books. Israel has 'stiffened his neck', Ex 32:9; Dt 9:13; 2 K 17:14; Jr 7:26, has made himself blind and deaf, Is 6:9–10; 42:19–20; 43:8, by refusing to serve God, by breaking the yoke of his Law, Jr 2:20; 5:5. His punishment is to bend his neck to the yoke of a foreign nation, Dt 28:48; cf. Is 9:3; 10:27; Jr 27:8,11,12; 30:8. But Yahweh has not rejected his people, vv. 9–11, and the revelation of his salvation will triumph over the blindness of the rebels, 42:7,16,18; 43:8–12.

d. 'purchased' Gk; 'purified' Hebr. It would be tempting to read: 'I have purified you . . . I have tested you in the furnace . . .' (with 1QIs[a]), but this would require the emending of 'not for silver' to 'like silver', which is not attested by any witness.

e. 'my name' added, following Gk and Lat.; Hebr. only has 'why should it be profaned?'—possibly a reader's gloss.

f. 'the race of the Chaldaeans' Gk; 'his arm (are) the Chaldaeans' Hebr. • Yahweh's beloved is either Israel or Cyrus who is certainly referred to in the following v. But the text is perhaps corrupt.

g. Apparently the prophet intervenes at this point to utter a new prophecy, vv. 17–19, a meditation on what the destiny of Israel would have been, if Israel had been faithful. The promises are those made by Yahweh to Abraham, Gn 13:16; 17:6seq.; 22:17, and echoed throughout the Bible, especially in Dt and in the sayings of the prophets, see 1 K 4:20; Ho 2:1.

h. The day of deliverance has come. This triumph-song concludes the section 47–48.

49 a. Scholars disagree over the length of this song, some believing that it ends at v. 6, while others include vv. 7–9. This second song takes up the same theme as the first (42:1–8), while emphasising certain aspects of the servant's mission: predestination, vv. 1 and 5, a mission not merely extending to Israel whom he is to re-gather, v. 5, but also to the nations, to whom he must bring light, v. 6, new and striking teaching, v. 2, bringing light and salvation, v. 6. To this it adds mention of a failure, vv. 4 and 7[a], of his trust in God alone, vv. 4 and 5, and of a final triumph, v. 7. The third and fourth songs, 50:4–9 (10–11); 52:13–53:12, add further details about the person and mission of the servant.

b. The prophet has been predestined, like Jeremiah, see Jr 1:5.

c. 'Israel' is generally considered to be a gloss inspired by 44:21 and incompatible with vv. 5–6 which make a distinction between the servant and Jacob/Israel. The word, however, appears in all witnesses to the text. It can be justified perhaps by the ambivalence of the figure of the servant, who is sometimes Israel and sometimes Israel's leader and Saviour.

I have exhausted myself for nothing, to no purpose.'
Yet all the while my cause was with Yahweh and my reward with my God.
And now Yahweh has spoken, 5 who formed me in the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob back to him and to re-unite Israel to him;[d] Jn 17:5 —I shall be honoured in Yahweh's eyes, Ph 2:8–11 and my God has been my strength.—
He said, 'It is not enough for you to be my servant, 6 to restore the tribes of Jacob and bring back the survivors of Israel; ↗Lk 2:32 I shall make you a light to the nations
↗Ac 13:47 so that my salvation may reach the remotest parts of earth.'
Thus says Yahweh, 7
41:14g the redeemer, the Holy One of Israel,[e] to the one who is despised, detested by the nation,[f]
to the slave of despots: 60:10 Kings will stand up when they see, princes will see and bow low,
because of Yahweh who is faithful,
the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.

The joyful homecoming

Thus says Yahweh: 8
↗2 Co 6:2 At the time of my favour I have answered you, on the day of salvation I have helped you.
= 42:6 I have formed you and have appointed you to be the covenant for a people,
to restore the land,
to return ravaged properties, 42:7 to say to prisoners, 'Come out,' 9 to those who are in darkness, 'Show yourselves.'
Along the roadway they will graze, and any bare height will be their pasture.[g] 4:5–6;25:4–5 They will never hunger or thirst, 10 ↗Rv 7:16 scorching wind and sun will never plague them;
for he who pities them will lead them,
Jn 4:1a will guide them to springs of water.
11:6j;40:3–4 I shall turn all my mountains into a road 11 and my highways will be raised aloft.
Look! Here they come from far away, 12 look, these from the north and the west, those from the land of Sinim.[h]

Shout for joy, you heavens; earth, exult! 13
Mountains, break into joyful cries!
For Yahweh has consoled his people,
40:1 is taking pity on his afflicted ones.
40:27;54:8c Zion was saying, 'Yahweh has abandoned me, 14
Ps 22:1–2 the Lord has forgotten me.'
Ho 11:8–9
Can a woman forget her baby at the breast, 15 feel no pity for the child she has borne?
Even if these were to forget,
44:21 I shall not forget you.[i]
Jr 31:20
Look, I have engraved you on the palms of my hands, 16 60:10 your ramparts are ever before me.

17 Your rebuilders are hurrying,[j] your destroyers and despoilers will soon go away.

18 Raise your eyes and look around you: =60:4
all are assembling, coming to you.
By my life, declares Yahweh, you will put them all on like jewels, like a bride, you will fasten them on.
19 For your desolate places and your ruins and your devastated country from now on will be too cramped for your inhabitants,[k] and your devourers will be far away.
20 Once more they will say in your hearing, the children of whom you were bereft,
'The place is too cramped for me, 54:1–3 make room for me to live.'
21 Then you will think to yourself, 'Who has borne me these? 65:23 Jr 31:27 Zc 2:8
I was bereft and barren, exiled, turned out of my home;
who has reared these?
I was left all alone,
so where have these come from?'

22 Thus says Lord Yahweh: Look, I am beckoning to the nations and hoisting a signal to the peoples: 11:12 they will bring your sons in their arms[l] 60:4,9 Ba 5:6
and your daughters will be carried on their shoulders.
23 Kings will be your foster-fathers and their princesses, your foster-mothers. 60:16
They will fall prostrate before you, faces to the ground, 60:14 and lick the dust at your feet.
And you will know that I am Yahweh;
those who hope in me will not be disappointed. 30:18 24 Can the body be snatched from the warrior, Ex 25:3 can the tyrant's captive be set free?[m] Jr 31:11 Lk 11:21–22par.
25 But thus says Yahweh:
The warrior's captive will indeed be snatched away and the tyrant's booty will indeed be set free;
I myself shall fight those who fight you and I myself shall save your children.
26 I shall make your oppressors eat their own flesh, 9:19 they will be as drunk on their own blood as on new wine. Rv 16:6
And all humanity will know 60:16 that I am Yahweh, your Saviour, your redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob. 41:14g

d. 'be re-united to him' versions, 1QIs[a]; 'not be re-united' MT.

e. If this v. is still part of the second servant-song (see 49:1a), it is a prediction of his humiliations and glorification, described at greater length in the fourth song. If, however, the v. is to be attached to the section following, it refers to Israel humiliated by forty years of exile and about to be marvellously re-established by God.

f. 'despised' and 'detested', reading passive participles with the versions and 1QIs[a]; MT has active participles.

g. Vv. 9–11 resume the theme of the marvellous highway of the Return, see 35:5–10; 41:17–20; 43:19–20.

h. Probably Syene, known as Elephantine to the Greeks, the modern Aswan, where there was a Jewish colony.

i. Vv. reminiscent of the message of Hosea, Jeremiah and the Deuteronomist, see 54:8c.

j. 'your rebuilders' 1QIs[a], versions; 'your sons' MT.

k. 'will be too cramped' versions; 'you are too cramped' Hebr. The people of the Return will be far more numerous than the original population, their numbers being increased by all those who join them, vv. 22–23.

l. lit. 'on their breast', a particularly affectionate way of carrying children.

m. 'tyrant' Syr.; 'upright man' Hebr. The liberation appears impossible, but God will accomplish it, cf. v. 22.

Israel's punishment [a]

50 Thus says Yahweh: 1
Dt 24:1–4 Jr 3:6–8 Ho 2:4–9 Where is your mother's writ of divorce by which I repudiated her?
Or to which of my creditors
52:3 Ba 4:6 have I sold you? [b]
Look, you have been sold for your own misdeeds, your mother was repudiated for your acts of rebellion.
Rv 3:20 Why was there no one there when I came? 2 65:12;66:4 Why did no one answer when I called?
Nb 11:23 Is my hand too short to redeem?
Have I not strength to save?
Ps 106:9;107:33 Na 1:4 Look, with a threat I can dry the sea, and turn rivers to desert;
the fish in them go rotten for want of water and die of thirst.
I dress the heavens in black, 3
I cover them in sackcloth. [c]

42:1a Third song of the servant [d]

Jn 3:11e Lord Yahweh has given me a disciple's tongue, 4 for me to know how to give a word of comfort to the weary.
Morning by morning he makes my ear alert to listen like a disciple.
Lord Yahweh has opened my ear 5 52:13–53:12 and I have not resisted,
I have not turned away.
I have offered my back to those who struck me, 6
my cheeks to those who plucked my beard;
I have not turned my face away
Mt 26:67; 27:30par. from insult and spitting. [e] Lord Yahweh comes to my help, 7
this is why insult has not touched me, Ezk 3:8–9 this is why I have set my face like flint Ps 25:3 and know that I shall not be put to shame.
↗Rm 8:31–33 He who grants me saving justice is near! Who will bring a case against me? 8
Let us appear in court together!
Who has a case against me?
Let him approach me!
Look, Lord Yahweh is coming to my help! 9
Who dares condemn me?
51:8 Look at them, all falling apart
Jb 13:28 Ho 5:12 like moth-eaten clothes!
Which of you fears Yahweh 10
Ex 23:20–21 Jn 3:11e and listens to his servant's voice?
42:16 Which of you walks in darkness and sees no light?
Let him trust in the name of Yahweh and lean on his God! [f] Ps 7:13 Look, all you who light a fire 11 and arm yourselves with firebrands, [g] walk by the light of your fire and the firebrands you have kindled!
This is what you will get from me:
you will lie down in torment!

The blessings in store for the chosen people [a]

1 51 Listen to me, you who pursue saving justice, ↗Mt 5:6;6:33 you who seek Yahweh.
Consider the rock from which you were hewn,
the quarry from which you were dug.
2 Consider Abraham your father and Sarah who gave you birth.
When I called him he was the only one Gn 12:1–3 but I blessed him and made him numerous. Ezk 33:24 3 Yes, Yahweh has pity on Zion, has pity on all her ruins;
he will turn her desert into an Eden Gn 2:8–17 and her wastelands into the garden of Yahweh. Ezk 36:35 Joy and gladness will be found in her, Rv 2:7;22:1–2 thanksgiving and the sound of music.

God's reign of saving justice [b]

4 Pay attention to me, my people, listen to me, my nation,
for a law will come from me,
and I shall make my saving justice the light of peoples.
5 My justice is suddenly approaching, my salvation appears,
my arm is about to judge the peoples.
The coasts and islands will put their hope in me and put their trust in my arm.
6 Raise your eyes to the heavens, look down at the earth;
for the heavens will vanish like smoke, ‖Ps 102:25–26
the earth wear out like clothing Mt 24:35par.
and its inhabitants die like vermin, 2 P 3:7–12 but my salvation will last for ever Rv 20:11 and my saving justice remain inviolable. 56:1

7 Listen to me, you who know what saving justice means, a people who take my laws to heart:
do not fear people's taunts,
do not be alarmed by their insults,

50 a. A difficult and perhaps incomplete poem. It is not clear whether or not it is a continuation of the previous one, though it seems to be on the same theme as 49:24–26; it is a reply to those Israelites who refuse to believe in the coming deliverance.

b. Both questions call for an answer in the negative: it cannot be proved that God has repudiated Israel, cf. Dt 24:1–4 and the imagery of Ho 2:4–9, or sold his children, Ex 21:7. God is still faithful. The Israelites themselves are responsible, see remainder of v. This is a special instance of the use of the theme of the unfaithful wife, Jr 3:1; Ezk 16; Ho 2:4–9.

c. A desolated countryside, cf. 42:15; 44:27, and stormy sky, cf. Ex 13:22; 19:16, announce God's coming to judge mankind.

d. In this third song, the servant appears less like a prophet and more like a sage, a faithful disciple of Yahweh, vv. 4–5, charged in his turn to teach the 'God-fearers', that is to say, all pious Jews, v. 10, but also the strays or infidels who 'walk in darkness'. Thanks to his courage and God's help, vv. 7–9, he will endure persecution, vv. 5–6, until God grants him final triumph, vv. 9–11. The servant speaks up to and including v. 9.

e. The description of the servant's sufferings is further developed in the fourth song, 52:13–53:12, cf. Mt 26:67; 27:30par.

f. At this point the prophet speaks again, inviting the Israelites and perhaps the unenlightened nations (those who 'walk in darkness'), cf. 49:6, to put their hope in God; he then condemns those who 'stoke the fire', v. 11, perhaps the sowers of discord.

g. 'arm yourselves', lit. 'who dress': the heads of fire-arrows used to be dressed with wisps of tow. Trans. uncertain.

51 a. The beginning of a long poem on the restoration of Zion, ending at 52:12. It may have been composed as one unit or be a collection of short songs linked together by the same theme of salvation and the same exhortations to 'listen', 51:1,4,7, and to 'awake', 51:9,17; 52:1. The first section recalls the blessings of time past, notably the blessing granted to Abraham, Gn 12:1–3, cf. also Ezk 33:24, in which lay the origin of the gift of the Promised Land where the exiled people is shortly to be re-established.

b. It is difficult not to see a connection between this programme and the work attributed to the servant, particularly in the first two songs. The servant too will be the light of nations, v. 4, cf. 49:6, he will establish law and salvation, vv. 4–6, cf. 42:1,4; 49:6, in short, it will be the servant who establishes the kingship of God on earth.

50:9 Jb 13:28
for the moth will eat them like clothing, 8
the grub will devour them like wool, but my saving justice will last for ever and my salvation for all generations.

The awakening of Yahweh [c]

Awake, awake! Clothe yourself in strength, 9 arm of Yahweh.
Awake, as in the olden days, generations long ago!
30:7e Jb 3:8e;7:12f
Was it not you who split Rahab in half, who pierced the Dragon through?
Was it not you who dried up the sea, 10
the waters of the great Abyss; [d] 63:13;40:3e Ex 14:5–31
who made the sea-bed into a road for the redeemed to go across?
35:10
This is why those whom Yahweh has ransomed will return, 11
they will enter Zion shouting for joy, their heads crowned with a joy unending;
joy and gladness will escort them and sorrow and sighing will take flight. [e]

Yahweh, the consoler [f]

I, I am your consoler. 12
Why then should you be afraid of mortal human beings, of a child of man, 40:7+;66:13
whose fate is that of the grass?
Dt 32:5.15
You forget about Yahweh your Creator 13 who spread out the heavens and laid the earth's foundations, and have never stopped trembling all day long before the fury of the oppressor when he was bent on destruction.
Where is the oppressor's fury now?
The despairing captive is soon to be set free; 14
he will not die in the dungeon, nor will his food run out.
‖Jr 31:35
I am Yahweh your God who stirs up the sea, making its waves roar— 15
Yahweh Sabaoth is my name.
59:21+
I put my words into your mouth, 16
I hid you in the shadow of my hand, to spread out the heavens and lay the earth's foundations [g]
and say to Zion, 'You are my people.'

The awakening of Jerusalem [h]

52:1
Awake, awake! 17
To your feet, Jerusalem!
You who from Yahweh's hand have drunk the cup of his wrath.
Mt 20:22d Rv 14:8
The chalice, the stupefying cup,
you have drained to the dregs.
There is no one to guide her 18 of all the children she has borne, no one to grasp her hand
of all the children she has reared.
Double disaster has befallen you [i]— 19
Jr 15:5
who is there to sympathise?

Pillage and ruin, famine and sword—who is there to console you?[j] Na 3:7 20 Your children are lying helpless at the end of every street like an antelope trapped in a net;
they are filled to the brim with Yahweh's wrath, with the rebuke of your God.
21 So listen to this, afflicted one, drunk, though not with wine.
22 Thus says your Lord Yahweh, your God, defender of your people:
Look, I am taking
the stupefying cup from your hand,
the chalice, the cup of my wrath,
you will not have to drink again.
23 I shall hand it to your tormentors who used to say to you,
'On the ground! So that we can walk over you!'
And you would flatten your back like the ground,[k] like a street for them to walk on.

The liberation of Jerusalem[a]

1 52 Awake, awake! 51:9
Clothe yourself in strength, Zion.
Put on your finest clothes, Jerusalem, Holy City;
for the uncircumcised and the unclean ↗Rv 21:27 will enter you no more.
2 Shake off your dust; get up, captive Jerusalem![b]
The chains have fallen from your neck, captive daughter of Jerusalem!

3 For Yahweh says this,
'You were sold for nothing;
you will be redeemed without money.' 45:13 4 For the Lord Yahweh says this,
'Long ago my people went to Egypt and settled there as aliens;
finally Assyria oppressed them for no reason.

c. Yahweh is called on to renew the wonders of the past, his victory over the powers of primordial chaos and the crossing of the Sea, to bring the exiles back to Zion.

d. Middle Eastern cosmologies represented the creation as the victory of the creator-god over the monsters of chaos, called Rahab, Jb 9:13; 26:12; Ps 89:10, the Dragon (Tannin or Leviathan), Is 27:1; Jb 7:12; Ps 74:14; Ezk 29:3, and the Abyss (Tehom, with which may be compared Tiamath of Babylonian cosmology), cf. Gn 1:2; Ps 104:7–9; Hab 3:10. By the times of Second Isaiah, these mythological names were no more than poetic devices.

e. This v. exactly reproduces 35:10 but is re-used here as the climax to vv. 9–10.

f. Yahweh speaks again, to comfort Israel, cf. 40:1. The latter need fear no mortal, however strong, since Yahweh, the lord of creation, protects his people.

g. 'spread out' Syr., cf. v. 13; 'planted' Hebr.

h. Jerusalem, prostrate with grief, is invited to stand up, as Babylon had been ordered to sit in the dust, 47:1. But the prophet first reminds Jerusalem of the depth of her distress. The imagery of the 'cup of wrath' to be handed to the persecutors, v. 22, is also found in Ps 75:8; Jr 13:13; 25:15–18; 48:26; 49:12; 51:7; Lm 4:21; Ezk 23:32–34; Ob v. 16; Hab 2:15–16; Zc 12:2.

i. Either in the sense of exceptional punishment, or the plagues in the second half of the v., taken two by two.

j. 'who . . . console you?' versions, 1QIs[a]; 'who I shall console you' (?) MT.

k. A humiliation often imposed on the conquered.

52 a. The opening words repeat those of 51:9, but the prophet is now addressing Jerusalem, whose captivity is about to end. vv. 3–6 are often regarded as a prose addition, but the thought is certainly that of Second Isaiah.

b. 'captive' shebiyah conj.; Hebr. shebi 'captivity'. • 'the chains have fallen' Hebr. ketib, 1QIs[a]; 'drop the chains' qere, versions.

So now what is to be done,' [c] 5
declares Yahweh,
'since my people have been carried off for nothing, their masters howl in triumph,'
declares Yahweh,
Ezk 36:20–22 'and my name is held in contempt all day, every day?
↗Rm 2:24 Because of this my people will know my name, 6 because of this they will know when the day comes, that it is I saying, Here I am!'

A prediction of salvation [d]

How beautiful on the mountains, 7
Na 2:1 are the feet of the messenger announcing peace, ↗Rm 10:15 of the messenger of good news,

The voices of your watchmen! 8
Now they raise their voices, shouting for joy together,
Ex 33:20i for with their own eyes they have seen Ezk 43:1–5 Yahweh returning to Zion.
Break into shouts together, 9 shouts of joy, you ruins of Jerusalem;
for Yahweh has consoled his people,
he has redeemed Jerusalem.
Yahweh has bared his holy arm 10
for all the nations to see, and all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.
Jr 51:45 Go away, go away, leave that place, 11 ↗2 Co 6:17 do not touch anything unclean.
Rv 18:4 Get out of her, purify yourselves, you who carry Yahweh's vessels!
Ex 12:31–34.39 For you are not to hurry away, 12
you are not to leave like fugitives.
Ex 13:21;14:19 No, Yahweh marches at your head and the God of Israel is your rearguard. [e]

42:1a Fourth song of the servant [f]
Ps 22

He had no form or charm to attract us,
no beauty to win our hearts;

3 he was despised, the lowest of men, Ps 22:6–7 a man of sorrows, familiar with suffering, one from whom, as it were, we averted our gaze, despised, for whom we had no regard.
4 Yet ours were the sufferings he was bearing, ↗Mt 8:17 ours the sorrows he was carrying,
while we thought of him as someone being punished and struck with affliction by God; Heb 2:10 5 whereas he was being wounded for our rebellions, 2 Co 5:21 Rm 4:25 Ga 3:13 crushed because of our guilt;
the punishment reconciling us fell on him, and we have been healed by his bruises. ↗1 P 2:24 6 We had all gone astray like sheep, Ezk 34 ↗1 P 2:25 each taking his own way, and Yahweh brought the acts of rebellion 2 Co 5:21
of all of us to bear on him.
7 Ill-treated and afflicted, ↗Mt 26:63 1 P 2:23
he never opened his mouth, like a lamb led to the slaughter-house,[c] Jr 11:19 Mt 27:14 Jn 1:29v like a sheep dumb before its shearers ↗Ac 8:32–33
he never opened his mouth.

8 Forcibly, after sentence, he was taken.
Which of his contemporaries was concerned[d] at his having been cut off from the land of the living, at his having been struck dead for his people's rebellion?[e] 9 He was given a grave with the wicked, ↗Mt 27:38par.
and his tomb is with the rich,[f] ↗Mt 27:60
although he had done no violence, had spoken no deceit. 1 P 2:22

c. Or, following ketib, 'who is on my side here?' In either case there is doubt over what is meant. It seems that God is insisting on the gratuitousness of the salvation which he is bringing to his people. The latter have drawn no profit from their ordeal and have not been converted, hence their oppressors are triumphant and Yahweh's name is dishonoured, v. 5, cf. 48:11; Ezk 20:9,14; 36:20. By freely granting salvation, however, Yahweh will lead Israel to being converted and so save the honour of his name, v. 6.

d. The Book of Consolation is a 'Gospel', it announces Good News, see 40:9. The messengers running to the country and the watchmen who see them coming announce joy, that is to say, the inauguration of Yahweh's personal reign in Zion. His reign, which will replace that of earthly kings, has long since been announced by the prophets, see 43:15; Jr 3:17; 8:19; Ezk 20:33; 34:11–16; Mi 2:13; 4:7; Zp 3:15. It is also celebrated in the 'psalms of the reign of Yahweh', Ps 47; 93; 96; 97; 98; 99; 145; 146.

e. The new Exodus takes place under God's protection, like the first, Ex 14:19. But this time it will not be a hasty departure, Ex 12:11, a flight, 14:5. It will be a procession in which are carried, not the jewels seized from the Egyptians, but the sacred vessels of the Temple, given back by Cyrus.

f. The fourth song of the servant again takes up the theme of suffering, compare Ps 22. The persecutions which the servant will very patiently endure, 53:7, scandalise the spectators, 52:14–15; 53:2–3,7–9, but are in fact an intercession and an expiation of sins, 53:4,6,8,10–12. The song appears to be in dialogue form: Yahweh utters a prophecy, vv. 13–15; the kings or the peoples then reply, 53:1–10, describing the sufferings of the servant and possibly excusing themselves for not having understood their meaning; finally, God proclaims an outcome favourable to the servant, 53:11–12.

g. lit. 'his appearance (was) disfigurement (to the point of) no longer being a man.' The expression is awkward, but the sense is confirmed by the parallelism. • 'at him' Targ., Syr.; 'at you' Hebr.

h. 'will be astonished' Gk; 'he will sprinkle' (?) Hebr.

53 a. The community speaks, announcing the fate of the servant: a new and almost incredible revelation. But the initial surprise and incomprehension, vv. 3^b,4^b,6,8, later give way to a better understanding: these sufferings are undergone exclusively for the good of the many, vv. 11–12.

b. In 11:1,10, the images of sapling and root accompanied the joyful prediction of the Davidic Messiah. Here, however, they evoke only the humble and wretched aspect of the servant's existence.

c. John the Baptist was probably alluding to this v. combined with v. 4, when he declared Jesus to be 'the lamb of God that takes away the sins of the world,' Jn 1:29. In Aramaic, the same word talya' means both lamb and servant. Perhaps the Forerunner used this word intentionally, but the Evangelist, writing in Greek, was obliged to choose one of the two possible meanings.

d. 'contemporaries': the Hebr. word means 'generation' in the sense of life-span, and by extension those who are alive during this period. It never means birth or origin, and the meaning suggested by Gk and Lat. ('Who can relate his generation?') and applied by the Fathers to the eternal generation of the Word or to Jesus' miraculous conception, is not an accurate translation of the Hebr. Emendation of the text has been proposed, but the present text is supported by all witnesses.

e. 'been struck' nugga' conj.; Hebr. nega' 'a stroke'. • 'his people' 1QIs^a; 'my people' MT.

f. 'his tomb' bomato 1QIs^a; MT. bemotaw 'in his death'. Christian preaching interpreted this as a prophecy of the burial of Jesus in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathaea, 'a rich man', 'ashir Mt 27:57–60. The text is difficult, however, and many emend 'rich' 'ashir to 'evil-doers' 'ose ra'.

It was Yahweh's good pleasure to crush him with pain; 10
if he gives his life as a sin offering, [g]
he will see his offspring and prolong his life, and through him Yahweh's good pleasure will be done.

After the ordeal he has endured, 11
he will see the light and be content. [h]

Final invitation [a]

1 55 Oh, come to the water all you who are thirsty; — Si 51:25 Jn 4:1a

5 Look, you will summon a nation unknown to you,

g. 'if he gives' Vulg.; 'if you give' or 'if (his soul) gives (a sacrifice)' Hebr.

h. 'the light' Gk, 1QIs[a]; Hebr. omits. Here Yahweh speaks to explain the mystery of the sufferings of the 'upright servant'; he is not suffering for any guilt of his own but takes the rebellious acts of the many on himself and intercedes for them.

54 a. To describe the contrasts between Jerusalem's past ordeals and approaching re-establishment, the prophet uses traditional imagery: of the barren wife who becomes fertile, cf. 1 S 2:5; Ps 113:9; and of the repudiated wife who is taken back, cf. Ho 1:16–17; but he emphasises that she will be returned to favour, whereas earlier prophets had principally seen punishments in store, cf. Jr 3:1,6–12; Ezk 16; 23; Ho 1–3.

b. 'extend!' versions; 'be extended' Hebr.

c. Yahweh's 'everlasting love' for his people, see 43:4; Dt 4:37; 7:8; 10:15; Jr 31:3; Zp 3:17; Ml 1:2, like the love of a father for his children. Is 1:2; 49:14–16; Jr 31:20; Ho 2:25; 11:1seq., or of a husband for his wife, Is 62:4–5; Jr 2:2; 31:21–22; Ezk 16:8,60; Ho 2:16–17,21–22; 3:1, is described here as a free gift.

d. Unlike the realistic description of Ezk 40–48, the prophet offers a vision symbolising future splendours, a theme further developed in the last part of the book, 60; 62; 65:16–25.

55 a. Final invitation to participate in the benefits of the new covenant, vv. 1–5, and to be converted while there is still time, vv. 6–11. vv. 1–2 are reminiscent of the invitation to Wisdom's banquet, Pr 9:1–6.

b. On this everlasting covenant, 59:21; 61:8, which is also the new covenant, see Jr 31:31*l*. This reminder of the promises made to David is unique in Second Isaiah, where no restoration of the monarchy is ever envisaged.

Conclusion [d]

Yes, you will go out with joy 12
and be led away in safety.
Mountains and hills will break into joyful cries before you and all the trees of the countryside clap their hands.

And this will be fame for Yahweh, an eternal monument never to be effaced.

III: THIRD PART OF THE BOOK OF ISAIAH [a]

Promises to foreigners [b]

56 Thus says Yahweh: 1
46:13;51:6,8
Make fair judgement your concern, act with justice, for soon my salvation will come and my saving justice be manifest.
Blessed is anyone who does this, 2 anyone who clings to it, 58:13seq. Ex 20:8f
observing the Sabbath, not profaning it, and abstaining from every evil deed.
Ex 12:48o
No foreigner adhering to Yahweh should say, 3
'Yahweh will utterly exclude me from his people.'
No eunuch should say,
'Look, I am a dried-up tree.' Ws 3:14–15
For Yahweh says this: To the eunuchs who observe my Sabbaths 4 and choose to do my good pleasure
and cling to my covenant,
I shall give them in my house and within my walls 5
1 S 1:8
a monument and a name better than sons and daughters;

I shall give them an everlasting name that will never be effaced. [c] 6 As for foreigners who adhere to Yahweh to serve him, to love Yahweh's name and become his servants,
all who observe the Sabbath, not profaning it,
and cling to my covenant:
7 these I shall lead to my holy mountain and make them joyful in my house of prayer.
Their burnt offerings and sacrifices will be accepted on my altar, for my house will be called a house of prayer for all peoples. [d]

8 Lord Yahweh who gathers the exiles of Israel declares:
There are others I shall gather besides those already gathered. [e] 9 Come and gorge, all you wild beasts, all you beasts of the forest!

The unworthiness of the nation's leaders [f]

10 Its watchmen are all blind, they know nothing.
Dumb watchdogs all, unable to bark,
they dream, lie down, and love to sleep.
11 Greedy dogs, never satisfied, such are the shepherds, who understand nothing;
they all go their own way,
each to the last man after his own interest.
12 'Come, let me fetch wine;
we will get drunk on strong drink, tomorrow will be just as wonderful as today and even more so!'

1 57 The upright person perishes and no one cares.
The faithful is taken off
and no one takes it to heart.
Yes, because of the evil times
the upright is taken off; 2 he will enter peace,
and those who follow the right way [a] will find rest on their beds.

c. The word of Yahweh is like a messenger who does not return until he has discharged his mission. Here it is personified, as is Wisdom elsewhere, Pr 8:22f; Ws 7:22i, or the Spirit, Is 11:2c.

d. Conclusion to the Book of Consolation, reverting to the theme of the new Exodus: the joy of home-coming and the transformation of the desert into fertile soil, cf. 43:19; 44:3–4.

56 a. See p. 1170.

b. Prophecy in rhythmical prose, probably composed after the return from exile. Faithful to the traditions of several great prophets, see 45:14i, the author predicts that foreign proselytes will soon be admitted to Judaism, on condition that they 'cling to the covenant', vv. 4,6, which necessarily includes circumcision as the sign of the covenant. The restrictions laid down in Dt 23:2–9 are abolished, especially those involving eunuchs, see Is 56:3–4.

c. 'I shall give' 1QIs[a], versions; 'I shall give him' MT.

d. This saying announces a double novelty: prayer is more important than sacrifices, even in the Temple, and all peoples are invited to take part.

e. The short prophecy contained in this v. is a confirmation of the previous one: the 'others' are the proselytes and eunuchs, rather than the members of the non-Babylonian dispersion.

f. The prophet seems to be drawing a distinction here between the national leaders (the 'shepherds' who are like lazy dogs) and their subalterns (the 'dogs' who are like real shepherds, but greedy and selfish). This prophecy, possibly pre-exilic, enlarges on a favourite theme of Jeremiah, 2:8,26–27; 5:4–5,31; 10:21; 23:1–2,11seq., and of Ezekiel, 8:11seq.; 34, namely, the unworthiness of the leaders of Judah in the years before the Exile.

57 a. 'those who follow' conj.; Hebr. has sing.

b. This prophecy, like the foregoing, perhaps dates from the last days of the monarchy, when idolatrous practices were rife in Jerusalem. But they persisted in Palestine during and after the Exile, 66:3–4,17. The poem is in the vigorous style of the 7th- and 6th-century prophets (Jr 1:16; 7:8, cf. Is 2:6–8; Ezk 8). Some of the allusions to specific idolatrous rites are obscure.

adulterous race prostituting yourselves!
At whom are you jeering, 4 at whom are you making faces [c] and sticking out your tongue?
Are you not the spawn of rebellion,
a lying race?
Dt 12:2b Jr 2:20 Lusting among the terebinths, 5
and under every spreading tree, Lv 18:21h sacrificing children in the ravines, below the clefts in the rocks. [d]
The smooth stones of the ravines will be your portion, 6 yes, these will be your lot.
To these you have poured libations, have brought your cereal offering.
Can all this appease me?
On a mountain high and lofty 7
you have put your bed.
Thither, too, you have climbed Dt 23:19f to offer sacrifice. [e] Behind door and doorpost 8
you have set your reminder. [f] Ezk 16:15seq. Yes, far from me, you exposed yourself, climbed on to your bed,
and made the most of it.
You struck a profitable bargain with those whose bed you love, whoring with them often,
with your eyes on the sacred symbol.
You went to Molech [g] with oil, 9 you were prodigal with your perfumes;
you sent your envoys far afield,
down to Sheol itself.
Though tired by so much travelling, 10
you never said, 'It is no use.'
Finding your strength revive,
you never gave up.
Who was it you dreaded, and feared, 11
that you should betray me, no longer remember me
and not spare a thought for me?
Was I not silent for a long time?
So you cannot have been afraid of me.
Now I shall expose this uprightness of yours, 12 and little good it did you.
When you cry for help, 13
let those thronging round you save you!
The wind will carry them all away,
one puff will take them off.
56:7;60:21;65:9; Ps 25:13c;37:9 But whoever trusts in me will inherit the country, he will own my holy mountain.

Salvation for the weak [h]

11:16j Ps 68:4+ Then it will be said: 14
Level up, level up, clear the way, remove the obstacle from my people's way, for thus says the High and Exalted One who lives eternally and whose name is holy, Lv 17:1a

'I live in the holy heights
but I am with the contrite and humble, to revive the spirit of the humble, Ps 51:18
to revive the heart of the contrite.

16 'For I do not want to be forever accusing Ps 103:3 nor always to be angry,
or the spirit would fail under my onslaught,
the souls that I myself have made.

17 'Angered by his wicked cupidity,
I hid[f] and struck him in anger, 54:8c but he rebelliously went the way of his choice.

18 'I saw how he behaved, but I shall heal him, Ex 15:26
I shall lead him, fill him with consolation, him and those who mourn for him,
19 bringing praise to their lips.
Peace, peace to far and near, Yahweh says, ↗Ep 2:17 and I shall heal him.'
20 The wicked, however, are like the restless sea Jude 13 that cannot be still,
whose waters throw up mud and dirt.
21 'No peace', says Yahweh, 'for the wicked.' 48:22

Fasting pleasing to God[a]

1 58 Shout for all you are worth, do not hold back, raise your voice like a trumpet.
To my people proclaim their rebellious acts,
to the House of Jacob, their sins.
2 They seek for me day after day,
they long to know my ways,
like a nation that has acted uprightly and not forsaken the law of its God.
They ask me for laws that are upright,
they long to be near God:
3 'Why have we fasted, if you do not see,[b] Ml 3:14 why mortify ourselves if you never notice?' Mt 6:18 Look, you seek your own pleasure on your fastdays and you exploit all your workmen; 4 look, the only purpose of your fasting is to quarrel and squabble and strike viciously with your fist.

c. lit. 'At whom are you opening your mouth wide?' The parallelism suggests mockery rather than greed.

d. It is uncertain whether or not these child-sacrifices were identical with the sacrifices to Molech, on which see Lv 18:21h.

e. Allusion to sacred prostitution as practised in Canaanite nature cults, Nb 25, and sometimes practised in Israel as well, 1 K 14:24; 22:47; 2 K 23:7; Ho 4:14, although forbidden, Dt 23:18–19. The prophets, however, used the vocabulary of prostitution in their invective against idolatry, to symbolise Israel's infidelity to its God and also to give a realistic description of Canaanite cultic activities.

f. This 'reminder' or 'monument' (end of v.) seems to have been a cult-symbol, but the sense of the entire v. is obscure.

g. 'The King', a title given to many Semitic deities; here perhaps Melkart of Tyre, god of the underworld, see end of v.

h. A post-exilic poem showing Yahweh as caring for the poor and oppressed. On the spirituality of 'Yahweh's poor', see Zp 2:3d.

i. That is to say, either 'hid my face', an expression of divine disapproval, or 'did not intervene'.

58 a. Post-exilic prophecy in the spirit of the great prophets, insisting that inward religion must accompany outward observance, see 1:10g; Am 5:21n. Here the subject is fasting, the nucleus of the prophecy being vv. 5–7.

b. The only fast prescribed by the Law was for the Day of Expiation, Lv 23:26–32, but at various periods a number of fasts were added either to commemorate national disasters, Zc 7:1–5; 8:18–19, or to implore God's mercy, Jr 36:6,9; Jon 3:5; cf. 1 K 21:9,12.

Fasting like yours today will never make your voice heard on high.
Is that the sort of fast that pleases me, 5 a day when a person inflicts pain on himself?
Hanging your head like a reed, spreading out sackcloth and ashes?
Is that what you call fasting,
a day acceptable to Yahweh?
Jr 34:8–9 Is not this the sort of fast that pleases me: 6
Am 5:21n
Mt 25:34–40 to break unjust fetters, to undo the thongs of the yoke.
to let the oppressed go free,
and to break all yokes?
Is it not sharing your food with the hungry, 7 and sheltering the homeless poor;
if you see someone lacking clothes, to clothe him,
and not to turn away from your own kin?
Then your light will blaze out like the dawn 8 and your wound be quickly healed over.
52:12 Saving justice for you will go ahead and Yahweh's glory come behind you.
Then you will cry for help and Yahweh will answer; 9 you will call and he will say, 'I am here.'
If you do away with the yoke, the clenched fist and malicious words,
if you deprive yourself for the hungry 10 and satisfy the needs of the afflicted,[c] Jn 8:12b your light will rise in the darkness, and your darkest hour will be like noon.
Yahweh will always guide you, 11 will satisfy your needs in the scorched land;
he will give strength to your bones[d]
Jr 31:12 and you will be like a watered garden, Jn 4:14 like a flowing spring whose waters never run dry.
61:4 Your ancient ruins will be rebuilt; 12
Ne 3seq. you will build on age-old foundations.
You will be called 'Breach-mender',
'Restorer of streets to be lived in'.[e]

The Sabbath[f]

56:2+ If you refrain from breaking the Sabbath, 13 from taking your own pleasure on my holy day, if you call the Sabbath 'Delightful', and the day sacred to Yahweh 'Honourable',
if you honour it by abstaining from travel,
from seeking your own pleasure and from too much talk, then you will find true happiness in Yahweh, 14
Dt 32:13 and I shall lead you in triumph over the heights of the land.
I shall feed you on the heritage of your father Jacob, 1:20;40:5 for the mouth of Yahweh has spoken.

Penitential psalm[a]

50:2+ 59 No, the arm of Yahweh is not too short to save, 1 crush one and a viper emerges.

6 Their webs are useless for clothing, their deeds are useless for wearing;
their deeds are deeds of guilt, violence fills their hands.
7 Their feet run to do evil; — ↗Pr 1:16 ↗Rm 3:15–17 they are quick to shed innocent blood.
Their thoughts are thoughts of guilt, wherever they go there is havoc and ruin.
8 They do not know the way of peace,
there is no fair judgement in their course,
they have made their own crooked paths,
and no one treading them knows any peace.

9 Thus fair judgement is remote from us nor can uprightness overtake us.
We looked for light and all is darkness, — Jr 8:15 Am 5:18–20 for brightness and we walk in gloom. [b] — Jn 8:12b 10 Like the blind we feel our way along walls, we grope our way like people without eyes.
We stumble as though noon were twilight, — Dt 28:29 among the robust [c] we are like the dead.
11 We growl, all of us, like bears, like doves we make no sound but moaning, waiting for the fair judgement that never comes,
for salvation, but that is far away.

12 How often we have rebelled against you — Jr 14:7
and our sins bear witness against us.
Our rebellious acts are indeed with us, — Ps 51:3
we are well aware of our guilt: 13 rebellion and denial of Yahweh,

c. lit. 'if you give your soul to the hungry (Gk: the bread of your soul) and satisfy the soul of the afflicted'. But the word nephesh normally translated as 'soul' also means 'desire', 'appetite', hence several shades of meaning are possible here, between which it is hard to choose.

d. Meaning uncertain: the verb used here, halatz, seems to be related to the noun 'warrior', halutz, but there are other possibilities, not to mention suggested emendations.

e. The passage dates from the beginning of the restoration in the Persian period, certainly before Nehemiah had rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem and perhaps even before the rebuilding of the Temple, which is not mentioned.

f. The lines on the Sabbath seem to have been added to the foregoing prophecy. On the Sabbath, see Ex 20:8f.

59 a. A penitential liturgy in the same spirit as the previous ch. and possibly dating from the same period: the promised salvation is slow in coming; not God but human sins are to blame. Vv. 1–2 state this explicitly and the rest of the poem elaborates the theme, beginning with an indictment, vv. 3–8.

b. Following the prophet's accusation comes the community's confession, becoming more specific from v. 12 to v. 15[a].

c. Meaning uncertain. The word translated as 'robust' seems to be derived from the word shemen, 'fat', but many translators prefer to emend the text. Gk omits the word.

turning our back on our God,

Fair judgement is driven away 14 and saving justice stands aloof, for good faith has stumbled in the street and sincerity cannot enter.
Good faith has vanished; 15
anyone abstaining from evil is victimised.

Yahweh saw this and was displeased that there was no fair judgement. [d]
He saw there was no one 16 and wondered there was no one to intervene.

his own saving justice his support.

to the coasts and islands he will repay their due.

45:14h Rv 21:9–27 The splendour of Jerusalem [a]

60 Arise, shine out, for your light has come, 1 and the glory of Yahweh has risen on you.
Look! though night still covers the earth 2 9:1+ and darkness the peoples, on you Yahweh is rising and over you his glory can be seen.
Ex 24:16f The nations will come to your light 3 ↗Rv 21:24 and kings to your dawning brightness.
Lift up your eyes and look around: 4 49:18–22 Ba 5:5–6 all are assembling and coming towards you, your sons coming from far away and your daughters being carried on the hip.
At this sight you will grow radiant, 5 your heart will throb and dilate, Ps 72:10 since the riches of the sea will flow to you,
the wealth of the nations come to you;
camels in throngs will fill your streets, 6
the young camels of Midian and Ephah;

everyone in Saba will come,
bringing gold and incense and proclaiming Yahweh's praises. [b] 7 All the flocks of Kedar will gather inside you, the rams of Nebaioth will be at your service [c] as acceptable victims on my altar, and I shall glorify my glorious house.

8 Who are these flying like a cloud, like doves to their dovecote?
9 Why, the coasts and islands put their hope in me [d] and the vessels of Tarshish take the lead in bringing your children from far away, and their silver and gold with them,
for the sake of the name of Yahweh your God, of the Holy One of Israel who has made you glorious.
10 Foreigners will rebuild your walls and their kings will serve you.
For though I struck you in anger,
in mercy I have pitied you.
11 Your gates will always be open, [e] never closed, either day or night, for the riches of the nations to be brought you and their kings to be let in.

12 For the nation and kingdom that will not serve you will perish, and the nations will be utterly destroyed. [f]

13 The glory of the Lebanon [g] will come to you, cypress, plane-tree, box-tree, one and all,
to adorn the site of my sanctuary,
for me to honour the place where I stand.
14 Your oppressors' children will humbly approach you, at your feet all who despised you will fall addressing you as 'City of Yahweh',
'Zion of the Holy One of Israel'. [h] 15 Instead of your being forsaken and hated, avoided by everyone,
I will make you an object of eternal pride,
a source of joy from age to age.

you will suck the wealth [i] of kings,

d. In vv. 15b–20, Yahweh comes as judge and redeemer. The passage has elements in common with the apocalypse of ch. 24–27.

e. A prose prophecy announcing the eternal nature of Yahweh's covenant with Israel, characterised by the outpouring of the Spirit and prophetic activity, cf. 40:7–8; 51:16; 61:1; Jr 1:9. Coming after the concluding formula of v. 20, it is an addition.

60 a. Ch. 60–62 form a whole in style and content and are related to ch. 40–55. If not composed by Second Isaiah, they are at least the work of one of his disciples, re-telling the Master's message of consolation to the post-exilic community whose hopes and faith require support.

b. The riches of the sea come by Phoenician and Greek ships from the west. The riches of the East and of Egypt come by caravans across the deserts of Syria and Sinai. Midian, Ephah and Sheba are peoples of Arabia, cf. 45:14; Gn 25:1–4.

c. For Kedar, see 21:13i,16–17. Nebaioth, an Arabian people, see Gn 25:13; 28:9; 36:3.

d. Or, by emendation, 'the ships are assembling' (tziyyim yiqqawu instead of 'iyyim yeqawu), which would improve the parallelism with the following line. Gk, however, also reads 'the coasts and islands'.

e. 'will be open' versions; 'open (your gates)' Hebr.

f. V. 12, interrupting the continuity, is very probably additional.

g. The cedars. These will be used to build the new Jerusalem as previously they had been used to build the Temple of Solomon, 1 K 5:15seq.

h. A new name and, like the ones given to Jerusalem by Isaiah, 1:26n, a symbolic one. Equally symbolic are the names which follow: of walls and gates, v. 18, of Zion and its territory, 62:4, of city and inhabitants, 62:12.

i. lit. 'the breasts.' Gk already interprets this bold metaphor as 'wealth': it is uncertain if this was based on the same text or a different one.

49:26 and you will know that I, Yahweh, am your Saviour, that your redeemer is the Mighty One of Jacob.
For bronze I shall bring gold 17 and for iron I shall bring silver, and for wood, bronze,
and for stone, iron;
1:26 I shall make Peace your administration and Saving Justice your government.
Violence will no longer be heard of in your country, 18
nor devastation and ruin within your frontiers.
You will call your walls 'Salvation' Rv 21:12,14 and your gates 'Praise'.[j]

↗Rv 21:23;22:5 No more will the sun give you daylight, 19 nor moonlight shine on you,
but Yahweh will be your everlasting light,
your God will be your splendour.
Your sun will set no more 20
nor will your moon wane, for Yahweh will be your everlasting light
Rv 21:4 and your days of mourning will be over.
57:13 Your people, all of them upright, 21 will possess the country for ever, the shoot I myself have planted,[k]
my handiwork, for my own glory.
The smallest will grow into a thousand, 22
the weakest one into a mighty nation.
When the time is ripe, I, Yahweh, shall quickly bring it about.

A prophet's mission[a]

11:2;42:1 Mt 11:5d;3:16n ↗Lk 4:18–19; 7:22 61 The spirit of Lord Yahweh is on me 1 for Yahweh has anointed me.
He has sent me to bring the news[b] to the afflicted, to soothe the broken-hearted, Lv 25:10n to proclaim liberty to captives. 2 release to those in prison, to proclaim a year of favour from Yahweh and a day of vengeance for our God, Mt 5:5 to comfort all who mourn, (to give to Zion's mourners), 3 to give them for ashes a garland, for mourning-dress, the oil of gladness, for despondency, festal attire;
and they will be called 'terebinths of saving justice', planted by Yahweh to glorify him.[c] 58:12 Am 9:14 They will rebuild the ancient ruins, 4 they will raise what has long lain waste, they will restore the ruined cities,
all that has lain waste for ages past.
14:2 Strangers will come forward to feed your flocks, 5 foreigners be your ploughmen and vinedressers; Ex 19:3–6c ↗Rv 1:6 but you will be called 'priests of Yahweh' 6 and be addressed as 'ministers of our God'.
You will feed on the wealth of nations,
you will supplant them in their glory.

7 To make up for your shame, you will receive double;[d] instead of disgrace, shouts of joy will be their lot;
yes, they will have a double portion in their country and everlasting joy will be theirs.
8 For I am Yahweh: I love fair judgement,
I hate robbery and wrong-doing,[e] and I shall reward them faithfully and make an everlasting covenant with them. 55:3+ 9 Their race will be famous throughout the nations and their offspring throughout the peoples.
All who see them will admit that they are a race whom Yahweh has blessed. Gn 12:3b

Thanksgiving

10 I exult for joy in Yahweh, 1 S 2:1
my soul rejoices in my God, Hab 3:18 for he has clothed me in garments of salvation, Lk 1:46seq.
he has wrapped me in a cloak of saving justice, like a bridegroom wearing his garland,[f] like a bride adorned in her jewels. Rv 19:8;21:2 11 For as the earth sends up its shoots and a garden makes seeds sprout, so Lord Yahweh makes saving justice and praise 45:8 spring up in the sight of all nations.

The splendour of Jerusalem[a]

1 62 About Zion I will not be silent, about Jerusalem I shall not rest until saving justice dawns for her like a bright light and her salvation like a blazing torch.
2 The nations will then see your saving justice, and all kings your glory, and you will be called a new name 56:5c;65:15 which Yahweh's mouth will reveal.
3 You will be a crown of splendour in Yahweh's hand, a princely diadem in the hand of your God.
4 No more will you be known as 'Forsaken' 60:15+ or your country be known as 'Desolation'; Ho 2:25 instead, you will be called 'My Delight is in her' 1:26n and your country 'The Wedded';[b] for Yahweh will take delight in you and your country will have its wedding.

j. The walls and gates of Jerusalem had names, see Ne 2:13–15. Here new names are given; they are symbolic, see v. 14; 1:26n.

k. 'I have planted' qere, versions; 'he has planted' ketib; 'Yahweh has planted' 1QIs[a].

61 a. The prophet, very probably the author of ch. 60 and 62, announces that he has received a message of consolation from God, vv. 1–3: all will be rebuilt, v. 4; foreigners will assure the material needs of Israel, now a nation of priests and crowned with glory, vv. 5–7; God speaks to institute an everlasting covenant, vv. 8–9. Vv. 10–11 are the prophet's thanksgiving, spoken on Zion's behalf. The poem echoes the themes of the servant songs, see 42:1; 42:7; 49:9, also 50:4–11 where the servant speaks in person, as here.

b. Although the word used does not explicitly say so, the news is evidently good news, the glad tidings of God's imminent intervention, cf. 11:2; 42:1.

c. This line, apparently a doublet of 60:21[b], seems to have been introduced as an explanatory gloss.

d. Or, according to another interpretation, a 'double shame', corresponding to the 'double portion' and echoing the 'double punishment' of 40:2; but the text is uncertain.

e. 'wrong-doing' versions; 'burnt offerings' Hebr. (different vowel arrangement).

f. 'wearing his garland' yakin conj.; Hebr. yekahen 'doing duty as a priest'.

62 a. Another poem on the glory of Jerusalem, cf. 60, but here the theme of marriage plays a greater part: the triumph of Jerusalem and the country in which it stands is to become Yahweh's bride, cf. 50:1; 54:6–7.

b. 'Forsaken' ('azubah), 'My Delight is in her' (hephtzibah): these names, conferred on Jerusalem and Judah because of their meaning, are real names attested elsewhere in the Bible, see 1 K 22:42; 2 K 21: 1. In this conferring of new names we recognise the prophetic usage instituted by Ho 2:25, cf. Is 1:26; 60:14; 62:12.

Like a young man marrying a virgin, 5 your rebuilder will wed you, [c] 65:19 and as the bridegroom rejoices in his bride, so will your God rejoice in you.

52:8 On your walls, Jerusalem, I have posted watchmen; 6 they will never fall silent, day or night.
No peace for you, as you keep Yahweh's attention!
And give him no peace either 7 until he restores Jerusalem and makes her the pride of the world!
Yahweh has sworn by his right hand 8
and by his mighty arm:
Dt 28:30–33 Never again shall I give your grain to feed your enemies.
Never again will foreigners drink the wine for which you have toiled.
No, the reapers will eat it and praise Yahweh, 9 the harvesters will drink it in my sacred courts!

Conclusion [d]

11:16j Pass through, pass through the gates. 10
Clear a way for my people!
Level up, level up the highway, remove the stones!
49:22 Hoist a signal to the peoples!
This is what Yahweh has proclaimed 11 to the remotest part of earth:
↗Mt 21:5 Say to the daughter of Zion, 'Look, your salvation is coming;
=40:10 with him comes his reward, his achievement precedes him!'

1:26n; 60:14g They will be called 'The Holy People', 12
'Yahweh's Redeemed', while you will be called 'Sought-after',
'City-not-forsaken'.

Judgement of the nations [a]

Dt 2:5c 63 Who is this coming from Edom, 1 34:1–17 from Bozrah in crimson garments, ↗Rv 19:13 so magnificently dressed, marching [b] so full of strength?
—It is I, whose word is saving justice, whose power is to save.
—Why are your garments red, 2
your clothes like someone treading the winepress?
Jl 4:13 —I have trodden the winepress alone; 3 of my people, not one was with me. [c] ↗Rv 14:19–20; 19:15 So I trod them down in my anger,
I trampled on them in my wrath.
Their blood [d] squirted over my garments and all my clothes are stained.
For I have decided on a day of vengeance, 4 my year of retribution has come.
I looked: there was no one to help me; 5
I was appalled but could find no supporter!
59:16 Then my own arm came to my rescue and my own fury supported me.

6 I crushed the peoples in my anger,
I shattered [e] them in my fury and sent their blood streaming to the ground.

Meditation on the history of Israel [f]

7 I shall recount Yahweh's acts of faithful love, Ps 89:1 Yahweh's praises,
in return for all that Yahweh has done for us,
for his great kindness to the House of Israel,
for all that he has done in his mercy,
for the abundance of his acts of faithful love.

8 For he said, 'Truly they are my people, children who will not betray me,' Dt 32:5 and he became their Saviour.
9 In all their troubles,
it was no messenger [g] or angel but his presence that saved them.
In his love and pity
he himself redeemed them, lifted them up and carried them 46:3seq. Ex 19:4+ throughout the days of old.
10 But they rebelled Dt 32:15 Ac 7:51 and vexed his holy Spirit. Ep 4:30 Then he became their enemy and himself waged war on them.
11 But he called the past to mind,
Moses his servant. [h]
Where is he who saved them from the sea, Ex 2:1–10 the Shepherd of his flock? Heb 13:20 Where was he who put Nb 11:17 Ne 9:20 his holy Spirit among them, 12 whose glorious arm led the way
by Moses' right hand?
Who divided the waters before them Ex 14:5–31 to win himself everlasting renown, Ps 135:13 13 who led them through the depths 51:10 as easily as a horse through the desert?
They stumbled as little 14 as cattle going down to the plain.
Yahweh's Spirit led them to rest.
This was how you guided your people Ps 77:20 to win yourself glorious renown. [i]

c. 'your rebuilder will wed you' yib'alek bonek conj., from context and see 54:5; MT yib 'aluk banayk 'your sons will wed you'.

d. This short poem seems to serve as conclusion to the unit 60–62. It resumes a number of themes in the Book of Consolation, cf. 40:3–5,10; 49:22; 57:14.

63 a. This fine fragment of apocalyptic poetry is written in the form of a dialogue between Yahweh and the prophet. Yahweh appears like a grape-harvester whose clothes are stained with juice. What he has been trampling in the wine-press, however, are Israel's traditional enemies, of whom Edom stands as type, see 34:1–7. Some emend 'Edom' and 'Bozrah' and translate 'Who is this that comes all in red, in crimson garments like a wine-harvester?'; hence the application of the passage to the suffering Messiah.

b. 'marching' tzo 'ed conj.; Hebr. tzo'eh 'bowing'.

c. '(not) a man of my people' 1QIs[a]; 'of the peoples' Hebr.

d. lit. 'Their juice', extending the metaphor of the grapes. Note, by a contrary image, that the juice is often called 'the blood' of the grape.

e. 'I shattered them' we'ashabberam Hebr. MSS; MT. we'ashakkeram 'I made them drunk'.

f. The long poem, 63:7–64:11 is in the form of a collective, supplicatory psalm, cf. particularly Ps 44, 89 and Lamentations. The references at 63:18 and 64:9–10 to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple in 587 BC show that the memory of the catastrophe was still very fresh. The poem dates from the beginning of the Exile. Its appeal to past history, 63:7–14, conforms to Deuteronomic theology: God punishes his rebellious people, then rescues them.

g. 'messenger' tzir Gk; Hebr. tzar 'anguish'.

h. 'his servant' Syr. MSS; 'his people' Hebr.

i. Vv. 11–14 evoke God's first great saving act, the deliverance from Egypt, as the earnest of salvation to come.

64:7–11 Look down from heaven and see[j] 15 from your holy and glorious dwelling.
Where is your zeal and your might?
Ho 11:8 Are your deepest feelings, your mercy to me, to be restrained?
Dt 1:31+ Tb 13:4 After all, you are our Father. 16
If Abraham will not own us, if Israel will not acknowledge us,
you, Yahweh, are our Father, 41:14g 'Our Redeemer' is your name from of old.
Why, Yahweh, do you let us wander from your ways 17 and let our hearts grow too hard to fear you?
Return, for the sake of your servants,
Dt 32:9 the tribes of your heritage.
Your holy people have owned it for so short a time, 18 our enemies have trampled on your sanctuary.
We have long been like those you do not rule, 19 people who do not bear your name.

Oh, that you would tear the heavens open and come down[k] 64:1
Ps 144:5 Rv 19:11 —in your presence the mountains would quake, 2 Ps 18:7seq.;50:3 64 as fire sets brushwood alight, 1 as fire makes water boil—
to make your name known to your foes;
the nations would tremble at your presence, at the unexpected miracles you would do. 2 3 (Oh, that you would come down, in your presence the mountains would quake!)[a]

↗1 Co 2:9 Never has anyone heard, 3 4 no ear has heard, no eye has seen[b] any god but you act like this for the sake of those who trust him.
You come to meet those 4 5 who are happy to act uprightly;
keeping your ways reminds them of you.
Yes, you have been angry and we have been sinners;
now we persist in your ways[c] and we shall be saved.
We have all been like unclean things 5 6
Lv 15:19–24 and our upright deeds like filthy rags.
We wither,[d] all of us, like leaves,
and all our misdeeds carry us off like the wind.
There is no one to invoke your name, 6 7 to rouse himself to hold fast to you, for you have hidden your face from us and given us up[e] to the power of our misdeeds.
And yet, Yahweh, you are our Father; 7 8
we the clay and you our potter, 29:16g all of us are the work of your hands.
Yahweh, do not let your anger go too far 8 9 and do not remember guilt for ever.
Look, please, we are all your people;
your holy cities have become a desert, 9 10
Zion has become a desert,
Jerusalem a wasteland.
Our holy and glorious Temple, 10 11
in which our ancestors used to praise you, has been burnt to the ground;

all our delight lies in ruins.
12 11 Yahweh, can you restrain yourself at all this?
Will you stay silent and afflict us beyond endurance?

The coming judgement [a]

1 65 I have let myself be approached by those who did not consult me, ↗Rm 10:20
I have let myself be found by those who did not seek me.
I said, 'Here I am, here I am!'
to a nation that did not invoke my name. [b] 2 Each day I stretched out my hands ↗Rm 10:21 to a rebellious people who follow a way which is not good,
as the fancy takes them;
3 a people constantly provoking me to my face Dt 32:21
by sacrificing in gardens, burning incense on bricks, 4 living in tombs,
spending the night in dark corners,
eating the meat of pigs,
putting unclean foods [c] on their plates.
5 'Keep your distance,' they say,
'do not touch me, lest my sanctity come near you!' [d] Such words are like stifling smoke to me, an ever-burning fire.
6 Look, it is inscribed before me:
I shall not be silent until I have repaid them, repaid them in full, [e]
7 punished your guilt and your ancestors' guilt together,
Yahweh declares.
For having burnt incense on the mountains and insulted me on the hills,
I shall pay them back in full for what they have done.

8 Yahweh says this:
As when a bunch of grapes is found still to have juice in it, people say, 'Do not destroy it,
for it contains a blessing,' so I shall act for my servants' sake, I shall not destroy them all. 4:3c

j. The actual supplication begins here, framed by the two invocations of v. 15 and 64:11, corresponding to each other. Between them, themes normal to supplications follow in no particular order. Note the insistance on the fatherhood of God, v. 16; 64:7.

k. The sentence continues at 64:1[b]. The appeal for Yahweh to come is interrupted by the mention of features characteristic of theophanies, cf. Ps 18:7–8; 144:5.

64 a. Gloss repeating 63:19.

b. Paul, 1 Co 2:9, seems to be quoting this formula in more rhythmical form: 'no eye has seen, no ear has heard . . .' It is hard to tell whether he is quoting freely or whether he had a different text of Is from ours.

c. lit. 'we are in them for ever', which may refer to the 'ways' earlier in the v. Others however construe very differently: 'We persist in our misdeeds – are we likely to be saved?' The passage would then be a cry of discouragement. The matter is in doubt and the text may be corrupt.

d. 'we wither' Gk; Hebr. uncertain.

e. 'you have given us up' versions; 'you have made us tremble' (?) Hebr.

65 a. Ch. 65–66 form an apocalyptic collection, dating, for the most part, from the post-exilic period. The rhythm is sometimes uncertain, giving grounds for thinking that some passages were written in prose.

b. 'that did not invoke my name' versions; 'that was not called by my name' Hebr.

c. lit. 'scraps (collective) of unclean foods' or, following qere and 1QIs[a], 'juice of unclean foods'. As in 66:17, cf. Ezk 8:7–13, the reference is to non-Yahwist ceremonies practised secretly in Jerusalem during the Exile, which the community had to fight against on its return. They are, however, not yet the mystery religions of the Hellenistic period.

d. Words put into the mouths of initiates, supposedly endowed with a 'holiness' which might be transferred by accidental contact.

e. lit. 'into their bosom', cf. Ps 7:12; Jr 32:18. The folds of the cloak served as a food-bag, see Rt 3:15; 2 K 4:39; Lk 6:38. The expression recurs at the end of v. 7.

I shall produce descendants from Jacob 9 and heirs to my mountains from Judah, 57:13 my chosen ones will own them and my servants will live there.
Sharon will be a pasture for flocks, 10
Jos 7:24,26 the Valley of Achor a feeding ground for cattle, for those of my people who have sought me.
But as for those of you who abandon Yahweh, 11 who forget my holy mountain, who lay the table for Gad, who fill cups of mixed wine for Meni,[f] you I shall destine to the sword 12 and all of you will stoop to be slaughtered, 50:2;66:4 Jr 7:13 because I called and you would not answer,
I spoke and you would not listen;
you have done what I consider evil,
you chose to do what displeases me.
Therefore Lord Yahweh says this: 13 Lk 6:20–26 You will see my servants eating while you go hungry;
you will see my servants drinking while you go thirsty;
you will see my servants rejoicing
while you are put to shame;
you will hear my servants shouting for joy of heart, 14 while you shriek for sorrow of heart and howl with a broken spirit.
And you will leave your name behind as a curse for my chosen ones, 15
'May Lord Yahweh strike you dead!'[g]
1:26n;56:5; 62:2 But to his servants he will give another name.
Rv 2:17;3:12j Whoever blesses himself on earth will bless himself by the God of truth, 16 and whoever swears an oath on earth will swear by the God of truth, for past troubles will be forgotten and hidden from my eyes.
51:6;66:22 ↗Rv 21:1 For look, I am going to create new heavens and a new earth,[h] 17 43:18 and the past will not be remembered and will come no more to mind.
Rather be joyful, be glad for ever 18
at what I am creating,
1:26n;60:14g for look, I am creating Jerusalem to be 'Joy' and my people to be 'Gladness'.
62:5 I shall be joyful in Jerusalem 19 and I shall rejoice in my people.
↗Rv 21:4 No more will the sound of weeping be heard there, nor the sound of a shriek;
never again will there be an infant there who lives 20
only a few days,
Zc 8:4 nor an old man who does not run his full course;
for the youngest will die at a hundred,
and at a hundred the sinner will be accursed.
62:8 Dt 28:30–33 Jr 31:5 Am 9:14 They will build houses and live in them, 21 they will plant vineyards and eat their fruit.
They will not build for others to live in, 22 or plant for others to eat;
for the days of my people will be like the days of a tree, and my chosen ones will themselves use what they have made.

23 They will not toil in vain, nor bear children destined to disaster, for they are the race of Yahweh's blessed ones and so are their offspring.
24 Thus, before they call I shall answer, before they stop speaking I shall have heard.
25 The wolf and the young lamb will feed together, the lion will eat hay like the ox, 11:7 and dust be the serpent's food. Gn 3:14 No hurt, no harm will be done on all my holy mountain, 11:9
Yahweh says.

Prophecy on the Temple [a]

1 66 Thus says Yahweh:
With heaven my throne Mt 5:34seq. ↗Ac 7:49–55
and earth my footstool, what house could you build me, 1 K 8:27
what place for me to rest, 2 when all these things were made by me Ps 24:1–2 and all belong [b] to me?—declares Yahweh.
But my eyes are drawn to the person of humbled and contrite spirit, who trembles at my word.

3 Some slaughter a bull, some kill a human being, [c] some sacrifice a lamb, some strangle a dog, some present an offering of pig's blood,
some burn memorial incense, a revolting blessing;
all these people have chosen their own ways and take delight in their disgusting practices.
4 I too take delight in making fools of them, [d]
I shall bring what they most fear down on them because I have called and no one would answer, 50:2;65:12
I spoke and no one listened.
They have done what I regard as evil, have chosen what displeases me.

Judgement on Jerusalem [e]

5 Listen to the word of Yahweh, you who tremble at his word.

f. Gad, the Aramaean god of luck. Meni, unknown: possibly a god of fate. Hebr. seems to be punning on this name and the first word of the following v., maniti, 'I shall destine'.

g. Understood: 'like these wicked people'.

h. In the early prophets, the messianic happiness prophesied for the future was described more or less as a return to paradise, see 11:6e. But in apocalyptic literature, though not entirely repudiating earlier forms, see v. 25, quoting 11:7,9, the prophet envisages a complete renewal. A new world is foretold and described throughout all apocalyptic literature, 2 P 3:13; Rv 21:1.

66 a. This prophecy has no relation to its context. It condemns the Temple, the rebuilding of which had been undertaken after the Jews' return from exile, as Nathan had condemned it under David, 2 S 7:5–7, and as Stephen was to condemn it, Ac 7:48seq., quoting this passage. It rejects a too materialistic form of religion in favour of the religion of 'the poor', v. 2[b], see Zp 2:3d.

b. 'belong' Gk, Syr.; 'belonged' Hebr.

c. The passage sets out four lawful acts of worship and four Canaanite acts of worship in parallel: human sacrifices, the killing of dogs, the eating of pork, the veneration of idols. This does not mean that someone who slaughters a bull is no better than someone who sacrifices a human, etc. So radical a condemnation of formal religion is nowhere found in the OT. What it does mean is that the people who perform these lawful acts of worship also practise Canaanite rites. Thus the passage is a condemnation of the syncretism practised in the same circles as those envisaged in v. 17; 65:3–5.

d. Text uncertain. The word is the same as in 3:4 ('raw lads'), see 3:4b. Gk translates by 'mockery', which fits the context well, but some modern translators prefer 'ill-treatment', 'misfortune'.

e. Apparently the continuation of the apocalypse of ch. 65, but with a new theme expressing the hopes of God's people.

Your brothers, who hate and reject you because of my name, have said.
'Let Yahweh show his glory,[f] let us witness your joy!'
But they will be put to shame.

Listen! An uproar from the city! 6
Rv 16:17 A voice from the Temple!
The voice of Yahweh bringing retribution on his enemies.

Before being in labour she has given birth. 7
Rv 12:5 Before the birth pangs came, she has been delivered of a child.[g]

Who ever heard of such a thing, 8 who ever saw anything like this?
Can a country be born in one day?
Can a nation be brought forth all at once?
For Zion, scarcely in labour, has brought forth her children!

Shall I open the womb and not bring to birth? 9 says Yahweh.
Shall I, who bring to birth, close the womb?
says your God.

Rejoice with Jerusalem, 10
be glad for her, all you who love her!
Jn 16:20 Rejoice, rejoice with her,
all you who mourned her!

So that you may be suckled and satisfied 11
from her consoling breast, so that you may drink deep with delight from her generous nipple.

For Yahweh says this: 12
Look, I am going to send peace flowing over her like a river, and like a stream in spate
the glory of the nations.

You will be suckled, carried on her hip and fondled in her lap.
As a mother comforts a child, 13
so I shall comfort you;
you will be comforted in Jerusalem.

Jn 16:22 At the sight your heart will rejoice, 14 and your limbs regain vigour like the grass.
To his servants Yahweh will reveal his hand,
but to his enemies his fury.

2 Th 1:8b For see how Yahweh comes in fire, 15 his chariots like the whirlwind, to assuage his anger with burning,
his rebukes with flaming fire.

For by fire will Yahweh execute fair judgement, 16 and by his sword, on all people;
and Yahweh's victims will be many.

17 As for those who sanctify themselves and purify themselves to enter the gardens, [h] following the one in the centre, who eat the flesh of pigs, revolting things and rats:
their deeds and their thoughts will perish together, [i]
declares Yahweh.

An eschatological discourse [j]

18 I am coming to gather every nation and every language. They will come to witness Ezk 34:13
19 my glory. •I shall give them a sign and send some of their survivors [k] to the nations: Mt 24:31;25:32 to Tarshish, Put, Lud, Meshech, Tubal and Javan, [l] to the distant coasts and islands that have never heard of me or seen my glory. They will proclaim my glory to the 20 nations, •and from all the nations they will bring all your brothers as an offering to Yahweh, on horses, in chariots, in litters, on mules and on camels, to my holy mountain, Jerusalem, Yahweh says, like Israelites bringing offerings in clean 21 vessels to Yahweh's house. •And some of them I shall make into priests and Ps 87:7e Levites, Yahweh says. [m]
22 For as the new heavens and the new earth I am making will endure before me, 65:17 declares Yahweh, so will your race and your name endure. 2 P3:13

23 From New Moon to New Moon, from Sabbath to Sabbath,
all humanity will come and bow in my presence, Yahweh says.
24 And on their way out they will see the corpses of those who rebelled against me;
for their worm will never die Jdt 16:17 nor their fire be put out, Si 7:17 and they will be held in horror by all humanity. [n] ↗Mk 9:48

f. 'manifest his glory' Gk; 'glorify' Hebr.

g. Imagery expressing the sudden and miraculous advent of the new world; cf. 26:17–18 where the same imagery of child-birth is found, with a somewhat different application.

h. The v. is isolated from its context and perhaps ought to be joined to 65:3–5. It alludes to acts of a secret cult, presided over by a priest (or priestess, if we read the feminine with qere and 1QIs[a]), cf. Ezk 8:11. This parallel shows that the text can be explained without reference to later Hellenistic mystery religions.

i. 'revolting things', cf. Lv 7:21; 11:10–42. There is no point in emending the word to get 'reptiles' from it (sheretz instead of sheqetz, see Gn 1:20). • 'their deeds and their thoughts' is taken from the beginning of v. 18 (faulty verse-division).

j. vv. 18–24 were probably added as a conclusion to ch. 40–66 or even to the whole book. The whole passage seems originally to have been in verse but has been distorted by the insertion of the list of nations, v. 19, and the list of means of transport, v. 20. The nations will all be converted and will restore the dispersed Jews to Jerusalem as an offering to God; nonetheless, Israel is the recipient of the divine promises. Nowhere else in the OT are universalism and particularism so pointedly juxtaposed.

k. The 'survivors' of the nations, cf. 45:20–25, are the converts, who are sent to preach the faith to the most distant parts of the world. It is remarkable that these earliest 'missionaries', for such they are, should be converts from paganism.

l. The list is an addition, borrowing its elements from Ezk 27:10–13. The probable identifications are: Tarshish, Spain; Put (thus Gk; 'Pul' Hebr.), Lybia; Lud, Lydia; Meshech (thus Gk; Hebr. moshqe' qeshet 'the archers'), Phrygia; Tubal, Cilicia; Javan, the Ionians and more generally the Greeks.

m. Some converts will actually be admitted to the sacred ministry. Same remarkable open-mindedness as in v. 19.

n. As contrast to the perpetual worship offered by Yahweh's devotees, vv. 22–23, follows the endless punishment which will overtake his enemies, v. 24. Rather than finish the reading of the book on this terrible note of warning, it was the custom of the Synagogue to end by repeating the promise of v. 23.

JEREMIAH

Title

1 K 2:26–27
Zp 1:1

1 The words of Jeremiah son of Hilkiah, one of the priests living at Anathoth [a] in the territory of Benjamin. 2 The word of Yahweh came to him in the days of Josiah son of Amon, king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign; 3 then in the days of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, until the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of Judah, until the deportation of Jerusalem, in the fifth month. [b]

I: PROPHECIES AGAINST JUDAH AND JERUSALEM

A: IN THE REIGN OF JOSIAH

The call of Jeremiah

The word of Yahweh came to me, saying: 4

Is 49:1,5
Lk 1:15
Rm 8:29
↗Ga 1:15

'Before I formed you in the womb I knew you; 5 before you came to birth I consecrated you; [c] I appointed you as prophet to the nations.'

Ex 4:10
Is 6:8j

I then said, 'Ah, ah, ah, Lord Yahweh; you see, I do not know how to speak: I am only a child!' 6

But Yahweh replied, 7
'Do not say, "I am only a child," for you must go to all to whom I send you and say whatever I command you.
Ezk 2:6 Do not be afraid of confronting them, 8 for I am with you to rescue you,
Yahweh declares.'

Is 6:6–7
Ezk 3:1–3

Then Yahweh stretched out his hand and touched my mouth, and Yahweh said to me: 9

2 S 23:2
Is 59:21

'There! I have put my words into your mouth.
Look, today I have set you 10 over the nations and kingdoms, 18:7;31:28;
45:4
Si 49:7
Ho 6:5
to uproot and to knock down, to destroy and to overthrow,
to build and to plant.'

The word of Yahweh came to me, asking, 'Jeremiah, what do you see?' I answered, 'I see a branch of the Watchful Tree.' 11 12 Then Yahweh said, 'Well seen,
Is 55:10–11
Ezk 12:28
Dn 9:14
for I am watching [d] over my word to perform it.'

A second time the word of Yahweh came to me, asking, 'What do you see?' I answered, 'I see a cooking pot on the boil, with its mouth tilting from the north.' [e] 13 4:5–31
Then Yahweh said: 14

'From the north disaster will come boiling over 4:6;61:1,22 on all who live in the country, 15 for I am now summoning all the families of the kingdoms of the north,
Yahweh declares.
They will come, and each will set his throne in front of the gates of Jerusalem, all round, against its walls and against all the towns of Judah.
16 I shall pronounce my judgements on them because of all their wickedness, since they have abandoned me, offering incense to other gods and worshipping what their own hands have made.

17 'As for you, prepare yourself for action.
Stand up and tell them 1:7–8
all I command you.
Have no fear of them
and in their presence I will make you fearless.
18 For look, today I have made you 15:20 into a fortified city,
a pillar of iron,
a wall of bronze
to stand against the whole country:
the kings of Judah, its princes, its priests and the people of the country.
19 They will fight against you
but will not overcome you,
for I am with you,
Yahweh declares,
to rescue you.'

The earliest preaching of Jeremiah: [a] the infidelity of Israel

1, 2 2 The word of Yahweh came to me, saying, ·'Go and shout this in Jerusalem's ears:

'Yahweh says this:
"I remember your faithful love, [b] 11:15
the affection of your bridal days, Ex 13:17d when you followed me through the desert, Ho 2:16–17,16p through a land unsown. Rv 14:4e 3 Israel was sacred to Yahweh; Ex 19:6+ the first-fruits of his harvest;
all who ate this incurred guilt,
disaster befell them,
Yahweh declares." '

1 a. Modern Anata, a village about 4 miles (6 km) north east of Jerusalem, to which the priest Abiathar was exiled by Solomon, see 1 K 2:26.

b. vv. 2–3 refer to a period from about 608 BC to July 587. They do not therefore apply to ch. 40–44. (For the chronology of the period, see Chronological Table.)

c. To 'know', when said of God, means to choose and predestine, see Am 3:2; Rm 8:29. To 'consecrate' means not so much inward sanctification as a setting apart for the prophetic ministry.

d. 'Watchful' (sheqed) is the Hebrew name for the almond tree, watching for the spring to be the first to blossom; here it suggests the Vigilant One (shoqed), God ever-wakeful.

e. lit. 'its face from the face of the north'. Alternative trans.: 'its contents (lit. 'its surface') tilting from the north'.

2 a. With the exception of a few passages, ch. 2–6 contain Jeremiah's earliest preaching, before the reform under Josiah (621). With the relapse into idolatry and the threat of Nebuchadnezzar in the reign of Jehoiakim, these passages were to gain a new relevance.

b. The word hesed, see Ho 2:21u, stands for the intimacy between the Israelite nation and God its Husband, within the covenant.

Ho 4:1–3
Listen to Yahweh's word, House of Jacob 4 and all the families of the House of Israel.
Yahweh says this, 5
'What did your ancestors find wrong in me
2 K 17:15 for them to have deserted me so far Ps 115:8 as to follow Futility[c] Ho 9:10 and become futile themselves?
They never said, "Where is Yahweh, 6 Dt 8:14–16; 32:10–12 who brought us out of Egypt and led us through the desert, through a land of plains and ravines,
through a land of drought, of shadow dark as death,
a land through which no one passes and where no human being lives?"
Ex 3:8e I brought you to a country of plenty,[d] 7 Dt 8:7–10 to enjoy its produce and good things;
but when you entered you defiled my country and made my heritage loathsome.
The priests never asked, "Where is Yahweh?" 8 8:8 Those skilled in the Law did not know me, Ezk 34:1a the shepherds too rebelled against me and the prophets prophesied by Baal and followed the Useless Ones.[e]
So I must state my case against you once more, 9
Yahweh declares,
and state my case against your children's children:
Cross to the isles of the Kittim and look, 10 18:13–16 send to Kedar and carefully observe,[f] see if anything like this has happened before!
Does a nation change its gods? 11
—and these are not gods at all!
Yet my people have exchanged their Glory[g]
Ex 24:16f for the Useless One!
Ps 106:20
↗Rm 1:23 You heavens, stand aghast at this, 12 horrified, utterly appalled,
Yahweh declares.
For my people have committed two crimes: 13
they have abandoned me, Jn 4:1a the fountain of living water,
and dug water-tanks for themselves, cracked water-tanks
that hold no water.

'Is Israel a slave? 14
Was he born into serfdom, for him to be preyed on like this?
Lions have roared at him, 15
they have made their voices heard.
They have left this country a desert,
his towns lie burnt and uninhabited.
The people of Noph and Tahpanhes 16
Is 3:17;7:20 have shaved your skull![h] 4:18;6:19 Have you not brought this on yourself, 17 by abandoning Yahweh your God, when he was guiding you on your way?
Is 30:1–3 What is the good of going to Egypt now 18 to drink the water of the Nile?

What is the good of going to Assyria to drink the water of the River? [i] 19 Your wickedness will bring its own punishment, your infidelities will bring you to book, so give thought and see how evil and bitter it is to abandon Yahweh your God and not to stand in awe of me,
the Lord Yahweh Sabaoth declares.

20 'It is long ago now since you broke your yoke, Mt 11:28–30 burst your bonds and said, "I will not serve!"
Yet on every high hill Dt 12:2b;23:19f and under every green tree 1 K 14:23+ you have sprawled and played the whore. [j] Ezk 16:16 21 Yet I had planted you, a red vine 5:10;6:9;8:13 of completely sound stock. Is 5:1a How is it you have turned into seedlings of a vine that is alien to me?
22 Even though you scrub yourself with soda and put in quantities of soap, the stain of your guilt would still be visible to me,
the Lord Yahweh declares.
23 How dare you say, "I am not defiled,
I have not run after the Baals?"
Look at your behaviour in the Valley, [k] realise what you have done.
24 A wild she-donkey, at home in the desert, snuffing the breeze in desire;
who can control her when she is on heat?
Males need not trouble to look for her,
they will find her in her month.
25 Beware! Your own foot will go unshod, your own throat grow dry!
But you said, "It is no use! No!
For I love the Strangers Ho 2:7
and they are the ones I shall follow." Am 2:4

26 'Like a thief ashamed at being caught, so will the House of Israel be:
they, their kings, their chief men,
their priests and their prophets, 27 who say to a piece of wood, "You are my father," and to a stone, "You gave birth to me."

c. Here an idol, as in 10:15; 16:19; 51:18. Those who worship it become like it, cf. Ho 9:10.

d. In Hebrew karmel: the name of Mount Carmel.

e. The idols, as before, followed by even the responsible members of the nation, including the 'shepherds', the people's political and religious leaders.

f. Kittim: the inhabitants of Kition in Cyprus, Gn 10:4; Nb 24:24; here, in a general sense, the islanders of the western Mediterranean. The word later came to mean the Romans, see Dn 11:30. • Kedar: a tribe of Transjordanian nomads, Gn 25:13; Is 21:16.

g. i.e. their God, Yahweh. 'their Glory' is a scribal correction (tiqqun sopherim) for 'my Glory' which apparently was too offensive.

h. 'have shaved' ye'aruk conj.; 'have grazed on' yir'uk Hebr. Noph (or Moph, Ho 9:6) is Memphis, capital of Lower Egypt. Tahpanhes, or Daphne, modern Tell Defneh, is a town to the east of the Delta. • Jeremiah alludes to the Egyptian intervention of 608–605.

i. 'Nile', lit. 'Shihor', a branch of the Nile; 'the River' is the Euphrates. These metaphors stand for the policy of appealing to the great powers; the prophets unanimously opposed this.

j. Refusing to serve God, Israel becomes enslaved to idols. Prostitution is a metaphor for idolatry, see Ho 1:2b, no doubt linked here to sacred prostitution, cf. Dt 23:19.

k. Probably the Valley of Ben-Hinnom or Gehenna where Topheth was, see 7:31; Lv 18:21h.

For they turn to me their backs, never their faces;
yet when trouble comes they shout,
"Get up! Save us!"
Dt 32:37–38 Where are your gods you made for yourself? 28
Let them get up if they can save you when trouble comes!
For you have as many gods =11:13 as you have towns, Judah! l
Why make out a case against me? 29
You have all rebelled against me,
Yahweh declares.
Am 4:6f In vain I have struck your children, 30
they have not accepted correction; Mt 23:27 your own sword has devoured your prophets like a marauding lion.
Now you of this generation, listen to what Yahweh says: 31
Have I been a desert for Israel, or a land of gloom?
Why do my people say,
2:23 "We are our own masters,
we will come to you no more"?
Does a girl forget her ornaments, 32
a bride her sash?
And yet my people have forgotten me,
days beyond number.

'How well you set your course 33
in pursuit of love!
And so you have schooled your ways
to wicked deeds.
The very skirts of your robe are stained 34
Is 1:15 with the blood of the poor, of innocent men you never caught breaking and entering! m
And in spite of all this,
you say, "I am innocent, 35 let his anger turn from me!"
Now I pass sentence on you for saying, "I have not sinned."

'How frivolously n you undertake 36
a change of course!
But you will be disappointed by Egypt
just as you were by Assyria.
You will have to leave there too 37 with your hands on your head, for Yahweh has rejected those that you rely on,
you will come to no good with them.'

Conversion a

3 'If a man divorces his wife 1 and she leaves him
and becomes someone else's, Dt 24:1–4 has he the right to go back to her? b
Has not that piece of land been totally polluted?

And you, having played the whore with many lovers,
you claim the right to come back to me!
Yahweh demands.

2 'Lift your eyes to the bare heights and look! 2:20
Where have you not offered your sex! Dt 12:2b You waited by the roadside for them like an Arab in the desert.
You have polluted the country with your prostitution and your vices:
3 this is why the showers have been withheld, 5:24;14:4
the late rains have not come. Lv 26:19

'But you maintained a prostitute's bold front, with no trace of a blush.
4 From now on, do not cry out at me, "My father!
My beloved ever since I was young!
5 Will he keep up his anger for ever, maintain his wrath to the end?"
You say this but still go on sinning, being so obstinate.'

The Northern Kingdom urged to repent [c]

6 In the days of King Josiah, Yahweh said to me, 'Have you seen what disloyal Israel Ezk 16:1a; ↗23 has done? How she has made her way up every high hill and to every green tree, Dt 12:2b 7 and played the whore there? •I thought, "After doing all this she will come back to 8 me." But she did not come back. Her faithless sister Judah saw this. •She also saw [d] that I had repudiated disloyal Israel for all her adulteries and given her her divorce Dt 24:1 papers. Her faithless sister Judah, however, was not afraid: she too went and 9 played the whore. •And with her shameless whoring, she polluted the country; she 10 committed adultery with stones and pieces of wood. •Worse than all this: Judah, her faithless sister, has come back to me not in sincerity, but only in pretence,
Yahweh declares.'
11 And Yahweh said to me, 'Disloyal Israel is upright, compared with faithless 12 Judah. •So go and shout words towards the north, and say:

"Come back, disloyal Israel,
Yahweh declares,
I shall frown on you no more,
since I am merciful,
Yahweh declares.
I shall not keep my anger for ever.
13 Only acknowledge your guilt:
how you have rebelled against Yahweh your God, how you have prostituted yourself with the Strangers [e] under every green tree
and have not listened to my voice,
Yahweh declares.

l. Here Gk and Vet. Lat. add: 'and as many altars for Baal as Jerusalem has streets', cf. 11:13.

m. The only permissible form of homicide was of a housebreaker caught in the act, Ex 22:1.

n. By minor changes of vowels, as with versions. MT lit. 'how much you go' (?), which might at a pinch be understood to mean: 'Why have you gone so far before changing course?'

3 a. Two passages, 3:6–13 and 3:14–18, interrupt the poem, which is continued in 3:19–4:4. • At the beginning of v. 1, we omit 'saying', with Gk and Syr.

b. Dt 24:1–4 forbids such remarriage. Israel, though not repudiated by God, has been so unfaithful that her return and reconciliation would be a miracle of grace, see vv. 19seq; 31:23; Ho 1–3.

c. This section dates from the reign of Josiah and is to be assigned to the period following the reform of 622. It attests Jeremiah's consistent hope for the Northern Kingdom, cf. 30:1–31:22. It seems to have inspired Ezk 23.

d. Following one Hebr. MS, some Gk MSS and Syr.; Hebr. 'I saw'.

e. The false gods, as before. Allusion to the syncretic cult in the reigns of Manasseh and Amon.

Zion in the messianic age [f]

"Come back, disloyal children, Yahweh declares, for I alone am your Master, and 14
Is 4:3c I will take you, one from a town, two from a family, and bring you to Zion. ·I shall 15 23:4 Ezk 34:1a give you shepherds after my own heart, who will pasture you wisely and discreetly.
Then, when you have increased and grown numerous in the country, Yahweh 16
Ex 25:8d declares, no one will ever again say: The ark of the covenant of Yahweh! It will not enter their minds, they will not remember it or miss it, nor will another one be
Is 1:26n Ezk 48:35 made. [g] ·When that time comes, Jerusalem will be called: The Throne of Yahweh, 17
Is 45:14h and all the nations will converge on her, on Yahweh's name, on Jerusalem, and will no longer follow their own stubborn and wicked inclinations.

"When those days come, the House of Judah will join the House of Israel; 18 Gn 13:14–15 together they will come from the land of the north to the country I gave your ancestors as their heritage." [h]

Continuation of the poem on conversion [i]

'And I was thinking: 19
How am I to rank you as my children?
Dt 1:31+ I shall give you a country of delights, the fairest heritage of all the nations!
Ps 89:28 I thought: You will call me Father and will never cease to follow me.
But like a woman betraying her lover, 20
House of Israel, you have betrayed me,'
Yahweh declares.

A noise is heard on the bare heights: [j] 21
the weeping and entreaty of the Israelites, for they have gone wildly astray, have forgotten Yahweh their God.
'Come back, disloyal sons, 22
I want to cure your disloyalty.'
'We are here, we are coming to you, for you are Yahweh our God.
Ps 75:7;121:1–2 Is 2:12–18 The hills are a delusion after all, 23
so is the tumult of the mountains. [k] Yahweh our God is, after all, the saving of Israel.
Shame [l] has devoured what our ancestors worked for 24 ever since we were young,
their flocks and herds, their sons and their daughters.
Let us lie down in our shame, 25
let our confusion cover us,
for we have sinned against Yahweh our God,
we and our ancestors, from our youth until today, and have not listened to the voice of Yahweh our God.'

4 'If you come back, Israel, 1
Yahweh declares,
if you come back to me,
if you take your Horrors out of my sight,
if you go roving no more,
if you swear, "As Yahweh lives!" 2 truthfully, justly, uprightly, Gn 12:3b then the nations will bless themselves by him and glory in him.

'For Yahweh says this 3

to the men of Judah and Jerusalem,
"Clear the ground that lies neglected, Ho 10:12 do not sow among thorns. Mt 13:22par.
4 Circumcise yourselves for Yahweh, [a] Dt 10:16 apply circumcision to your hearts, men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem, or my wrath will leap out like a fire =21:12
and burn with no one to quench it, in return for the wickedness of your deeds." '

Invasion from the north [b] 1:13–15

5 Announce it in Judah, proclaim it in Jerusalem, say,
'Sound the trumpet in the countryside, Jl 2:1b shout the message aloud:
Mobilise! =8:14
Take to the fortified towns!
6 Signpost the way to Zion!
Run! Do not delay!
For I am bringing disaster from the north,
an immense calamity.
7 The lion is up from his thicket, the destroyer of nations is on his way,
he has come from his home
to reduce your land to a desert;
your towns will be in ruins, uninhabited.
8 So wrap yourselves in sackcloth, lament and wail,
since Yahweh's burning anger has not turned away from us.

9 'That day,' Yahweh declares,
'the king's heart will fail him,
the princes' hearts will fail them too,
the priests will stand aghast,
the prophets stupefied.'
10 Then I said, 'Ah, Lord Yahweh, how sadly you deceived this people and Jerusalem when you used to say, [c] "You will have peace," 14:13 whereas the sword is now at our throats!
11 When that time comes, this will be said to this people and to Jerusalem:
The scorching wind from the desert heights

f. This passage presupposes the events of 587.

g. Evidently the ark had been destroyed with the Temple by the Chaldaeans in 587. Jerusalem itself is to become 'the throne of Yahweh' as the ark had formerly been, Ex 25:10e; 2 S 6:7.

h. For messianic days the prophets foretell a kingdom united as in the time of David and Solomon, 23:5–6; 31:1; Is 11:13–14; Ezk 37:15–27; Ho 2:2; Mi 2:12; Zc 9:10.

i. Continued from v. 5. What law did not permit, v. 1, grace makes possible.

j. Contrasting with 3:2.

k. Following Gk, Syr.; Hebr. corrupt, lit. 'for the delusion from the hills tumult of the mountains.'

l. i.e. Baal, cf. 11:13; the following lines refer to the sacrifices offered to him.

4 a. For Israel, circumcision, Gn 17:10d, was the symbol of the covenant. For Jeremiah the symbol is meaningless without inward devotion, 'circumcision of the heart', see Dt 10:16. Israel refuses to listen to God, he has 'uncircumcised ears, 6:10; he refuses to repent, he has an 'uncircumcised heart', 9:24–25, cf. Lv 26:41, Yahweh himself, by converting Israel, will circumcise its heart, Dt 30:6. Foreigners are said to be uncircumcised in heart and flesh, Ezk 44:7. The NT uses the same metaphor, Ac 7:51, and Paul teaches that true circumcision, the circumcision which is the mark of the true Israel, is that of the heart, Rm 2:25–29, cf. 1 Co 7:19; Ga 5:6; 6:15; Ph 3:3; Col 2:11; 3:11.

b. Here as in 1:15, the enemy from the north is not any nation in particular. Jeremiah possibly has in mind both the Scythians (who, between 630 and 625, are found on the Syria-Palestine frontier) and the Assyrians. In 605, when the Chaldaean invasion threatened, this prophecy would have alarming relevance.

c. Allusion to the promises of the false prophets, 14:13; 23:17; cf. 28:8–9.

comes towards the daughter of my people 51:2 —and not to winnow or to cleanse!
A gale of wind comes to me from over there. 12
Now I myself shall pass sentence on them!'

Look, he is advancing like the clouds, 13 his chariots like a hurricane,
his horses swifter than eagles.
Disaster for us! We are lost!
Wash your heart clean of wickedness, Jerusalem, 14 and so be saved.
How long will you go on harbouring your pernicious thoughts?
For a voice from Dan shouts the news, 15 proclaims disaster from the highlands of Ephraim. [d] Report it to the nations, 16 proclaim it to Jerusalem,
'Enemies are coming from a distant country, [e] shouting their war cry against the towns of Judah;
they surround her like watchmen round a field 17 because she has rebelled against me,' Yahweh declares.
'Your own behaviour and actions 18 have brought this on yourself.
Your wickedness, how bitter, has stabbed you to the heart!'

10:19 In the pit of my stomach how great my agony! [f] 19
Walls of my heart!
My heart is throbbing!
I cannot keep quiet,
for I have heard the trumpet call,
the battle cry.
Ruin on ruin is the news: 20
the whole land is laid waste, 10:20 my tents are suddenly destroyed, in one moment all that sheltered me.
How long must I see the standard 21 and hear the trumpet call?

Dt 32:6,28 'This is because my people are stupid, [g] 22
they do not know me,
they are slow-witted children,
they have no understanding,
Mi 7:3 they are clever enough at doing wrong, but do not know how to do right.'

I looked to the earth—it was a formless waste; 23 to the heavens, and their light had gone.
I looked to the mountains—they were quaking 24 and all the hills rocking to and fro.
I looked—there was no one at all, 25
the very birds of heaven had all fled.
I looked—the fruitful land was a desert, 26 all its towns in ruins
before Yahweh,
before his burning anger.

27 Yes, Yahweh has said this,
'The whole country will be laid waste, though I shall not annihilate it completely. 5:18 28 For this, the earth will go into mourning and the heavens above grow dark. Ho 4:3a
For I have spoken, I have decided,
I shall not change my mind or go back on it.'

29 At the din of horseman and archer the entire city takes to flight:
some plunge into the thickets,
others scale the rocks;
every town is abandoned, [h]
not a single person is left there.
30 And, once despoiled, what are you going to do?
You may dress yourself in scarlet, Is 3:16-24
Ezk 23:40
put on ornaments of gold, enlarge your eyes with paint
but you make yourself pretty in vain.
Your former lovers disdain you, Ezk 16:37-40; 23:22-29
your life is what they are seeking.
31 Yes, I hear screams like those of a woman in labour, anguish like that of a woman giving birth to her first child; 6:24;13:21; 22:23;50:43
they are the screams of the daughter of Zion, gasping, Ps 48:6
Is 13:8+
hands outstretched,
'Unhappy me! I am dying, the murderers have killed me!'

Reasons for the invasion [a]

1 5 Rove the streets of Jerusalem, now look and enquire,
see in her squares
if you can find an individual, Ps 14:1-3 Mi 7:2
one individual who does right and seeks the truth, and I will pardon her, Gn 18:16-33
Ezk 14:12d
Yahweh says. [b]
2 Although they say, 'As Yahweh lives,' they are, in fact, swearing a false oath.
3 Yahweh, do your eyes not look for truth?
You have struck them; they have not felt it. Am 4:6f
You have annihilated them, for they ignored the lesson.
They have set their faces harder than rock, they have refused to repent. Rv 16:9,11 4 I thought, 'These are only the poor!
They behave stupidly
since they do not know Yahweh's way or the ruling of their God.

d. Dan: on the north frontier of Palestine, Gn 14:14; Jos 19:47; Jg 18:29; 20:1a. Ephraim: here the mountainous area between Shechem and Bethel settled by descendants of the tribe of Ephraim son of Joseph, Jos 16:1seq; 17:15; 1 S 1:1.

e. 'enemies' tzarim conj.; Hebr. notzrim 'watchers'.

f. Jeremiah identifies himself with his suffering country.

g. Yahweh is the speaker.

h. 'every town' Gk; Hebr. repeats 'the entire city'.

5 a. To the principal indictment against the idolatrous contamination of Yahwistic worship, Jeremiah adds practical atheism, and obduracy, vv. 3, 12–13, sensuality, vv. 7–8, exploitation of the poor, vv. 26–29, the blame for which he throws on the ruling classes, vv. 4–5, the priests and the prophets, v. 31:

b. 'Yahweh says' Gk; Hebr. omits.

I shall approach the great men 5
and speak to them,
for these will know Yahweh's way and the ruling of their God.'
2:20 But these, too, have broken the yoke, Mt 11:28–30 have burst the bonds.
And so, a lion from the forest will slaughter them, 6 a wolf from the plains will despoil them,
a leopard will be lurking round their towns:
anyone who goes out will be torn to pieces—because of their many crimes, their countless infidelities.

'Why should I pardon you? 7
Your sons have abandoned me, to swear by gods that are not gods at all. [c] Dt 32:15 I fed them full, and they became adulterers, they hurried to the brothel.
They are well-fed, roving stallions, 8 each neighing for his neighbour's wife.
=5:29;9:8 Shall I fail to punish this, 9
Yahweh demands,
or on such a nation
to exact vengeance?
Scale her terraces! Destroy! 10
But do not annihilate her completely!
2:21+ Strip off her branches, for Yahweh does not own them!
How treacherously they have treated me, 11
the House of Israel and the House of Judah! [d]
Yahweh declares.

'They have denied Yahweh, 12
Ps 14:1 they have said, "He is nothing; [e] Zp 1:12 no evil will overtake us,
Is 28:15 we shall not see sword or famine.
Am 9:10 And the prophets? Nothing but wind; 13
the word is not in them;
let those very things happen to them!" '
Because of this, 14
Yahweh, God Sabaoth, says this,
'Since you have said such things, 23:29 now I shall make my words
Ho 6:5 a fire in your mouth Rv 11:5 and make this people wood for the fire to devour.
Dt 28:49–52 Now I shall bring on you 15
a nation from afar, House of Israel,
Yahweh declares,
an enduring nation,
an ancient nation,
Is 28:11 a nation whose language you do not know, nor can you grasp what they say.
Their quiver a gaping tomb, 16
they are all of them fighters.
They will devour your harvest and your food, 17 devour your sons and daughters, devour your flocks and herds, devour your vines and fig trees, and demolish your fortified towns in which you trust—with the sword!'[f]

Lesson to be drawn from the punishment

18 'Yet even in those days, Yahweh declares, I shall not annihilate you completely. Is 4:3c 19 'And when you ask, "Why has Yahweh our God done all this to us?" you will 16:10seq.; 22:8seq.
give them this answer, "As you abandon me to serve alien gods in your own Dt 29:23–24 country, so you must serve aliens in a country not your own." •Dt 28:47–48

In a time of famine (?) 8:18–23;14

20 'Announce this in the House of Jacob, proclaim it in Judah, and say, 21 "Now listen to this,
stupid, brainless people[g]
who have eyes and do not see, Dt 29:3+ who have ears and do not hear! Is 6:10
Ezk 12:2
22 Have you no fear of me? Mt 13:13e
Yahweh demands.
Will you not tremble before me who set the sand as limit to the sea, as an everlasting barrier it cannot pass? Jb 38:8–11
Ps 104:9
Its waves may toss but not prevail, they may roar but cannot pass beyond.
23 But this people
has a rebellious, unruly heart;
they have rebelled and gone!
24 Nor do they say to themselves:
Now we ought to fear Yahweh our God who gives the rain, of autumn 3:3;14:22 and of spring, at the right season, Dt 11:14 and reserves us
the weeks appointed for harvest. 1 S 12:17i 25 Your misdeeds have upset all this,
your sins have deprived you of these blessings." '

Resumption of the theme of the invasion

26 Yes, there are wicked men among my people who watch like fowlers on the alert;[h] they set traps
and they catch human beings.
27 Like a cage full of birds so are their houses full of loot;
they have grown rich and powerful because of it, 28 they are fat, they are sleek,
in wickedness they go to any lengths:
they have no respect for rights,

c. Whereas they say of the true God, 'He is nothing!', v. 12.

d. 'House of Israel' here perhaps denotes the Southern Kingdom, see ch. 2, and 'House of Judah' may be a gloss. The term meant different things at different times: originally it applied to the twelve tribes of the people of the covenant, Jos 24, and later, in a secular sense, was used to denote the Northern Kingdom, 2 S 5:5. Its religious significance was not forgotten, however, and Isaiah speaks of the 'two Houses of Israel', Is 8:14. After the fall of the Kingdom of Samaria (721 BC), the name was used for the Southern Kingdom, Is 5:7; Ezk 4:3; 5:4; Mi 2:1.

e. lit. 'Not he'. This is a denial not of God's existence but of his intervention, see Ps 14:1a. An alternative interpretation is '(We want) none of him.'

f. The prophecy continues at v. 26.

g. lit. 'heartless', see Gn 8:21c; Ho 7:11.

h. Plural for the sake of the context; Hebr. has sing. • 'like fowlers on the alert' trans. uncertain: the verb normally means 'to abase oneself', hence perhaps 'to bend, to crouch' (on the alert).

for orphans' rights, and yet they succeed!
They have not upheld the cause of the needy.
=5:9 Shall I fail to punish this, 29
Yahweh demands,
or on such a nation
to exact vengeance?
Horrible, disgusting things 30
are happening in the land:
14:14 the prophets prophesy falsely 31 and the priests exploit the people.[i]
And my people love it!
Is 10:3 But when the end comes, what will you do?

More about the invasion

6 Flee in a body, Benjaminites, 1 right away from Jerusalem!
Sound the trumpet in Tekoa!
Jl 2:1b Light the beacon on Beth-ha-Cherem![a] 1:13–15 For disaster lowers from the north,
an immense calamity.
Beautiful, delicate as she is, 2
I shall destroy the daughter of Zion!
12:10 Shepherds are advancing on her 3 with their flocks.
They have pitched their tents all round her,
each grazes his part.
Prepare for holy war against her![b] 4
To arms! We shall attack at noon!
Disaster for us! The light is fading, the evening shadows lengthen.
To arms! We shall attack at night 5 and destroy her palaces.
For Yahweh Sabaoth says this, 6
'Cut down trees,
Lk 19:43 throw up an earthwork outside Jerusalem:
this is the city to be punished,[c] with nothing but oppression in her.
As a well keeps its water fresh 7 so she keeps her wickedness fresh.
Violence and ruin are what you hear in her,
wounds and blows always forced on my attention.
Reform, Jerusalem, 8 or I shall turn my attention away from you and reduce you to a desert, a land without people.'
Yahweh Sabaoth says this, 9
'They will glean, glean what is left of Israel[d] 2:21+ like a vine.
Like a grape-picker, pass your hand again over the branches!'
To whom should I speak, whom warn,[e] 10 for them to hear?
Look, their ears are uncircumcised,
they cannot listen.
4:4a Look, for them Yahweh's word is something to sneer at,
they have no taste for it.
So I am full of Yahweh's wrath, 11

I am weary of holding it in.
Then pour it on the children in the streets, and on the bands of youths as well,
for husband and wife will both be taken,
the greybeard and the man weighed down with years.
12 Their houses will pass to other men, =8:10–12 so will their fields and wives.
Yes, I shall stretch my hand over those living in this country,
Yahweh declares.
13 For, from the least to greatest,
they are all greedy for gain;
prophet no less than priest, 23:11
all of them practise fraud.
14 Without concern they dress my people's wound, saying, 'Peace! Peace!'
whereas there is no peace.[f]
15 They should be ashamed of their loathsome deeds.
Not they! They feel no shame,
they do not even know how to blush.
And so as others fall, they too will fall,
will be thrown down when I come and punish them, Yahweh says.

16 Yahweh says this,
'Stand at the crossroads and look,
ask for the ancient paths:[g] 18:15 which was the good way? Take it and you will find rest for yourselves. ↗Mt 11:29
But they have said, "We will not take it."
17 I posted look-outs on your behalf: Ezk 3:17
Listen to the sound of the trumpet! Ho 9:8+
But they said, "We will not listen." 18 Then hear, you nations, and know, assembly,
what is going to happen to them!
19 Listen, earth!
Watch, I shall bring disaster
on this people:
it is the fruit of the way they think, Pr 1:29–30 since they have not listened to my words nor to my law, but have rejected it.

i. lit. 'take into their hands', with the verb radah II used in Jg 14:9, rather than 'govern' (radah I) for their hands, i.e. for their own advantage.

6 a. The Benjaminites living in northern Judah are perhaps imagined as having taken refuge in Jerusalem. • Tekoa: home of the prophet Amos, 5 miles (8 km) south of Bethlehem. Beth-ha-Cherem: cf. Ne 3:14, site unknown, possibly Ramath Rahel, about 3 miles (5 km) south of Jerusalem.

b. lit. 'sanctify the war against her', war in those days being considered a sacred duty, see also 22:7. But, despite the vocabulary, this is the reverse of the ideal of the holy war in which Yahweh fights with his people, see Dt 1:30; 20:4; Is 31:4, or at least against its enemies, Is 13:3–4. For Jeremiah, war is no longer a religious act, since Yahweh has deserted the camp of Israel, whom he has decided to punish, cf. 21:5; 34:22.

c. lit. 'visited' (by God). Divine visitations might be to rescue, 15:15; Ex 3:16; Lk 1:68, or to punish, Jr 6:15; 8:12; 9:24, cf. Is 10:3.

d. Here, as in 8:3, the expression is not yet technical. It becomes so in 23:3; 31:7 (there translated 'remnant'), indicating the faithful Israel, heir to the blessings to come, see Is 4:3c.

e. Jeremiah, instructed to collect a few who will listen to him, says, vv. 10–11 [a], that no one will pay attention. God's answer follows.

f. Allusion to the lying promises of the false prophets, 4:10; 14:13; 23:16–17; 28:8–9, of whom Jeremiah is to make bitter enemies by his forecasts of disaster. They foretell 'peace', shalom, which means not merely the absence of external danger (a primary preoccupation in the times of Jeremiah) but an ideal state of happiness in which individual and nation prosper in right relations with God and social harmony: the 'peace' characterising the messianic age, see Is 11:6e.

g. Sometimes those of their sinful ancestors, Jb 22:15, sometimes, as here, those of their faithful ones, cf. 18:15; Ps 139:14,

1 K 10:1a
What do I care about incense 20 imported from Sheba, [h] or fragrant cane

Am 5:21n
Your burnt offerings are not acceptable, your sacrifices do not please me.
And so, Yahweh says this, 21
'In front of this people I shall now lay obstacles for them to stumble over;
father and son alike,
neighbour and friend will perish.'

Yahweh says this, 22
=50:41–43
'Look, a people is coming from the land of the north, from the far ends of the earth a great nation is rising;
they are armed with bow and spear, 23
they are cruel and pitiless;
their noise is like the roaring of the sea;
they are riding horses,
they are ready to fight against you as one man, against you, daughter of Zion.
We have heard the news, 24
our hands fall limp,
anguish has gripped us, 4:31+
pain like that of a woman in labour.
Do not go out into the countryside, 25
do not venture onto the roads, for the enemy's sword is there, 20:10b
terror on every side.
Put on sackcloth, daughter of my people, 26 roll in ashes;
Am 8:10
Zc 12:10
mourn as for an only son,
a very bitter dirge.
For on us suddenly
the destroyer is coming.

'I have appointed you as tester of my people, [i] 27 to learn and to test how they behave.
All of them are total rebels 28
peddlers of slander,
hard as bronze and iron, [j]
all agents of corruption.

Is 1:22
Ezk 22:18,20
to make the fire burn away the lead. [k] Ml 3:2–3
In vain the smelter does his work, for the dross is not purged out.
"Silver-reject", men call them, 30 and indeed Yahweh has rejected them!'

7 a. The following discourses, placed together because of their common concern with religious observance, date from the reign of Jehoiakim.

b. That the Temple was sanctified by the presence of Yahweh, 1 K 8:10seq, see Dt 4:7b, might make it seem indestructible, and Sennacherib's setback outside the very walls of Jerusalem in 701 had shown how Yahweh protected his holy city, 2 K 19:32–34; Is 37:33–35. The conclusion was too readily drawn that this protection would be effective a second time. Jeremiah is about to shock his countrymen, ch. 26, by asserting, like Micah before him, Mi 3:12, that their confidence is illusory: that God may well desert his Temple. Ezekiel similarly was to see the Glory of Yahweh abandoning the sanctuary, Ezk 11:23. Ch. 26 narrates the events that prompted this tirade delivered in the early days of Jehoiakim (608).

c. The shrine at Shiloh, although the residence of the ark, had been destroyed by the Philistines, 1 S 4. The Jews were chary of mentioning this national disaster; Ps 78:60 is the only text to mention it, after Jeremiah. Shiloh is about 25 miles (40 km) north of Jerusalem.

d. Ishtar (Astarte), goddess of fertility in the Mesopotamian pantheon; she was identified with the planet Venus. The form of the word 'queen' is unusual and found only in Jr, cf. 44:17–25.

e. Jeremiah is right in saying that the Decalogue, the charter of the covenant, contains no ritual ordinances. He does not merely, however, have animal sacrifices in mind, cf. 33:11, but is at one here with a prophetic tradition maintaining that ritual worship is not the essential part of religion, see Ho 6:6; Am 5:21n; Mi 6:6–8.

Threats, laments, advice.
Israel's perversity[c]

'You are to tell them, "Yahweh says this: 4
If someone falls, can he not stand up again?
If people stray, can they not turn back?
Why does this people persist in acts of infidelity, 5
why does Jerusalem persist in continuous infidelity?
They cling to illusion,
they refuse to turn back.
I have listened attentively: 6 they have never said anything like that.
Not one repents of wickedness saying: What have I done?
Each one keeps returning to the course like a horse charging into battle.

But my people do not know

The Law as administered by the priests since we have Yahweh's Law?'

Look how it has been falsified

What price their wisdom now?

Repetition of an earlier threat[e]

10 So I shall give their wives to other men, their fields to new masters,
for, from the least to greatest,
they are all greedy for gain;
prophet no less than priest,
all of them practise fraud.
11 Without concern they dress the wound of the daughter of my people, saying, 'Peace! Peace!'
whereas there is no peace.
12 They should be ashamed of their loathsome deeds.
Not they! They feel no shame,
they do not even know how to blush.
And so as others fall, they too will fall, will be thrown down when the time for punishing them comes,
Yahweh says.

b. Hebr. repeats 'the survivors'; Gk and Syr. omit.

c. This section, 8:4–10:25, is a collection of prophecies delivered early in the reign of Jehoiakim, about 605 BC. The three poems, 8:4–7, 13–17; 9:1–8, continue and expand the reproaches against Israel. The lament, 9:9–21, is continued in 10:17–22 and ends with the prayer of Jeremiah in 10:23–24. Other poems of Jeremiah have then been added, 8:8–9; 8:10–12; 8:18–23; 9:22–23; 9:24–25. The fragment 10:1–16 seems to be by another hand.

d. In this case the priests, guardians of the tradition preserved in the texts. The 'word', v. 9, presumably means the teaching of the prophets and the law, in oral form and perhaps in part committed to writing.

e. This fragment, duplicating 6:12–15, is omitted by Gk.

f. The same Hebr. verb means 'to mobilise' and 'to put an end to'.

5:20–25;14 A lament of the prophet during a famine

Incurable sorrow overtakes me, [h] 18 my heart fails me.
Hark, from the daughter of my people the cry for help, 19 ringing far and wide throughout the land!
'Is Yahweh no longer in Zion, her King no longer there?' (Why have they provoked me with their idols, with their futile foreign gods?)
'Harvest is over, summer at an end, 20 and we have not been saved!'
The wound of the daughter of my people wounds me too, 21 all looks dark to me, terror grips me.
Is there no balm in Gilead any more? [i] 22
Is no doctor there?
Then why is there no progress in the cure of the daughter of my people?
Who will turn my head into a fountain, 23 9:1
and my eyes into a spring of tears, that I can weep day and night over the slain of the daughter of my people?

The moral corruption of Judah

9 Who will find me a wayfarer's shelter 1 2 in the desert,
for me to quit my people,
and leave them far behind?
For all of them are adulterers,
a conspiracy of traitors.
Ps 12:1–4; 116:11 They bend their tongues like a bow; 2 3 not truth but falsehood holds sway in the land; [a] yes, they go from crime to crime, but me they do not know,
Yahweh declares.
12:6 Mi 7:5 Let each be on his guard against his friend; 3 4 do not trust a brother, Gn 27:36 Ho 12:4 for every brother aims but to supplant, [b] and every friend is a peddler of slander.
Each one cheats his friend, 4 5 never telling the truth;
they have trained their tongues to lie and devote all their energies to doing wrong.
You live in a world of bad faith! 5 6
Out of bad faith, they refuse to know me,
Yahweh declares.
And, so, Yahweh Sabaoth declares, 6 7

now I shall purge them and test them, 6:29k no other way to treat the daughter of my people!
8 7 Their tongue is a deadly arrow, their words are in bad faith;
with his mouth each wishes his neighbour peace,
while in his heart plotting a trap for him.
9 8 Shall I fail to punish them for this, 5:9
Yahweh demands,
or on such a nation
fail to exact vengeance?

Sorrow in Zion

10 9 I raise the wail and lament for the mountains, the dirge for the desert pastures,
for they have been burnt: [c] no one passes there,
the sound of flocks is heard no more.
Birds of the sky and animals, Ho 4:3a all have fled, all are gone.
11 10 I shall make Jerusalem a heap of ruins, a lair for jackals,
and the towns of Judah
an uninhabited wasteland. 34:22

12 11 Who is wise enough to understand this? To whom has Yahweh's mouth spoken to explain it?

Why is the country annihilated, burnt like the desert where no one passes?

13 12 Yahweh says, 'This is because they have forsaken my Law which I gave them Ex 19:5 14 13 and have not listened to my voice or followed it, ·but have followed their own 15 14 stubborn hearts, have followed the Baals as their ancestors taught them.' ·So 7:24 Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, 'Now I shall give this people =23:15 nations unknown to their ancestors or to them; and I shall pursue them with the Dt 4:27; 28: 36.64 sword until I have annihilated them.' Rv 8:11

17 16 Yahweh Sabaoth says this,
'Prepare to call for the mourning women!
Send for those who are best at it!
18 17 Let them lose no time in raising the lament over us!
Let our eyes rain tears,
our eyelids run with weeping!
19 18 A lament makes itself heard in Zion,
"What ruin is ours,
what utter shame!
For we must leave the country,
our homes have been knocked down!" '

let your ears take in the word his own mouth speaks.

True wisdom

Yahweh says this, 22 23
↗1 Co 1:31 'Let the sage not boast of wisdom,
↗2 Co 10:17 nor the valiant of valour, ↗Jm 1:9 nor the wealthy of riches!
But let anyone who wants to boast, boast of this: 23 24 of understanding and knowing me. [d]
For I am Yahweh, who acts with faithful love, [e] justice, and uprightness on earth:
yes, these are what please me,'
Yahweh declares.

4:4a Circumcision, a false guarantee

'Look, the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when I shall punish all who are 24 25 Rm 2:25 circumcised only in the flesh: ·Egypt, Judah, Edom, the Ammonites, Moab, and 25 all the men with shaven temples [f] who live in the desert. For all those nations, [g] and

Ps 115:4–8 Idols and the true God [a] 10 Listen, House of Israel, to the word that Yahweh addresses to you. Yahweh 1 says this:

'Do not learn the ways of the nations 2 or take alarm at the heavenly signs, alarmed though the nations may be at them.
Yes, the customs [b] of the peoples are quite futile: 3 wood, nothing more, cut out of a forest, worked with a blade by a carver's hand, then embellished with silver and gold, 4 then fastened with hammer and nails to keep it from moving.
Like scarecrows in a melon patch, they cannot talk, 5

All of them are brutish and stupid: 8

the Futile Ones' teaching is but wood, then dressed up in violet and purple,

all the work of skilled men.
10 But Yahweh is the true God.
He is the living God,
the everlasting King.
The earth quakes when he is wrathful, the nations cannot endure his fury.

The text is overloaded: vv. 6–8, 10 are absent from Gk, in which the order is different; v. 11 is an Aramaic gloss on v. 12. Vv 12–16 are repeated in 51:15–19.

Ophir, an unidentified place on the west coast of Arabia, was the land of gold, Gn 10:29; 1 K 9:28. For Tarshish, which attempts have been made to identify with Tartessos in southern Spain, see 1 K 10:22f.

d. The personified Israelite nation is apostrophised again; the danger appears more imminent than in 9:9–21.

e. 'find me' conj.; 'find' Hebr. A change in the vowels would give the reading 'for them to be found', i.e. caught by their enemies; but the theme of the return to God as a result of suffering is frequent among the prophets, see 29:12–13; 31:16–19; Is 17:4–7; 30:20; Ba 2:30–32; Ho 5:14–15; Mi 4:10–11; Zc 10:9. See also Dt 4:29.

22 'Do not prophesy in the name of Yahweh or you will die at our hands!' •Yahweh Is 30:10 says this, 'I am about to punish them. Their young people will die by the sword, Am 2:12
23 their sons and daughters by famine. •Not one will be left when I bring disaster on the people of Anathoth, when the year for punishing them comes.'

11 a. In 622 BC, King Josiah undertook a religious reform, 2 K 22:3–23:27, supported by the Priestly and prophetic parties. Apparently Jeremiah took an active part in it, as this passage records. It contains many phrases characteristic of Dt, the discovery of which, 2 K 22:8, prompted the reform. The nucleus of the passage, vv. 6, 8[b], 9–12, is to be ascribed to Jeremiah; the remainder is composed of secondary additions. Vv. 7–8 are absent from Gk.

b. Proclamation probably delivered in the Temple at the same period as those in ch. 7 • V. 17 is the continuation of 11:1–14.

c. 'my beloved', fem. Gk; masc. Hebr. • 'vows' Gk; 'many' Hebr. 'turn disaster from you' (lit. 'make your disaster pass from under you') Gk; 'pass from under you, for your disaster' Hebr.

d. By championing the reform, and thus the suppression of the local shrines, Dt 12:5, cf. 2 K 23, Jeremiah earned the hatred of his fellow townsfolk.

e. 'in its strength' beleho conj.; 'in its bread' belahmo Hebr.; 'we shall put wood (that is, according to Targ., poison) in his bread' Gk. • The Christian liturgy applies this v. to the Passion of Christ.

f. 'me' Gk; 'you' Hebr. (perhaps a clumsy piece of direct speech).

Jb 21
Ps 49;73

The prosperity of the wicked [a] 12 Your uprightness is too great, Yahweh, 1 for me to dispute with you.

But I should like to discuss some points of justice with you:
Why is it that the way of the wicked prospers?
Why do all treacherous people thrive?
You plant them, they take root, 2 they flourish, yes, and bear fruit.
You are on their lips,
yet far from their heart.
You know me, Yahweh, you see me, 3 you probe my heart, which is close to yours.
11:19 Drag them off like sheep for the slaughterhouse, Ps 5:10c reserve them for the day of butchery.

5:20–25; 8:18–23;14; Ho 4:3a (How long will the land be in mourning, and the grass wither all over the 4 countryside? The animals and birds are dying as a result of the wickedness of the inhabitants.)

For they say,
'God does not see our fate.' [b]

'If you find it exhausting to race against me on foot, 5
how will you compete against horses?
In a country at peace you feel secure, but how will you fare in the thickets [c] of the Jordan?

'For even your brothers and your own family will betray you. They will pursue 6 you in full cry. Put no faith in them when they speak you fair!'

Yahweh laments his ravaged inheritance

7:14 I have abandoned my house, 7 left my heritage,
I have delivered what I dearly loved into the clutches of its enemies.
To me, my heritage has behaved 8 like a lion in the forest, it roared at me ferociously:
so I now hate it.
I see my heritage as a brightly-coloured bird of prey 9 attacked by birds of prey on every side! [d] Go, assemble all the wild animals, make them come and dine!
6:3 Many shepherds have laid my vineyard waste, 10 have trampled over my plot of land, the plot of land which was my joy, reducing my favourite estate
to a deserted wilderness.
They have made it a waste; [e] 11 wasted, it mourns before me.
The whole country has been devastated
and no one takes it to heart.
The devastators have arrived 12 on all the bare heights of the desert (for Yahweh wields a devouring sword); from one end of the country to the other,
there is no peace for any living thing.

13 Wheat they have sown, thorns they reap:
they have worn themselves out, to no profit.
They are disappointed in their harvests,[f]
because of Yahweh's burning anger.

The neighbouring peoples: their judgement and salvation

14 Yahweh says this, 'As regards all my evil neighbours who have laid hands on the heritage I granted my people Israel, look, I shall uproot them from their soil, 15 (though I shall uproot the House of Judah from among them). ·But having uprooted them, I shall take pity on them again and bring them back each to its own 16 heritage, each to its own country, ·and if they carefully learn my people's ways and 4:2 Is 45:14h swear by my name, "As Yahweh lives", as they have taught my people to swear by 17 Baal, then they will be re-established among my people. ·But if any nation refuses to listen, I shall uproot it for ever and destroy it, Yahweh declares.'

The useless waistcloth[a]

1 13 Yahweh said this to me, 'Go and buy a linen waistcloth and put it round
2 your waist. But do not dip it in water.' ·And so, as Yahweh had ordered, I 3 bought a waistcloth and put it round my waist. ·A second time the word of Yahweh
4 came to me, ·'Take the waistcloth that you have bought and are wearing round 5 your waist. Up, go to the Euphrates and hide it there in a hole in the rock.' ·So I 6 went and hid it by the Euphrates as Yahweh had ordered me. ·A long time later, Yahweh said to me, 'Up, go to the Euphrates and fetch the waistcloth I ordered 7 you to hide there.' ·So I went to the Euphrates, and I searched, and I took the waistcloth from the place where I had hidden it. And there was the waistcloth 8 ruined, no use for anything. ·Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as 9 follows, ·'Yahweh says this, "In the same way I shall ruin the pride of Judah, the 10 immense pride of Jerusalem. ·This evil people, these people who refuse to listen to my words, who follow their own stubborn inclinations and run after other gods, serving and worshipping them—this people will become like this waistcloth, no 11 good for anything. ·For just as a waistcloth clings to a man's waist, so I made the Ps 76:10e; 109:19 whole House of Israel and the whole House of Judah cling to me, Yahweh declares, to be my people, my glory, my honour and my pride. But they have not listened."

The wine jugs smashed together

12 'You will also say this to them, "Yahweh, God of Israel, says this: Any jug can be filled with wine." And if they answer you,[b] "Do you think we do not know that any 13 jug can be filled with wine?" ·you are to say, "Yahweh says this: Look, I shall fill all the inhabitants of this country, the kings who occupy the throne of David, the 14 priests, the prophets and all the citizens of Jerusalem, with drunkenness. ·Then I Is 51:17h shall smash them one against the other, parents and children all together, Yahweh declares. Mercilessly, relentlessly, pitilessly, I shall destroy them." '

A vision of exile

15 Listen and pay attention, do not be proud:
Yahweh is speaking!

12 a. This is the first time that this problem is posed in the OT. See pp. 750–1.
b. 'God' Gk; 'he' Hebr.
c. lit. 'the height', i.e. the steep banks, covered in vegetation and therefore dangerous since the haunts of all sorts of wild animals. Alternative trans. 'the flood' (lit. 'the swelling') but cf. 49:19; 50:44. • Far from granting the prophet's plea for revenge, Yahweh's answer predicts further persecutions for him; far from answering his question, it leaves the problem of retribution still a mystery, cf. Jb 38:1seq; 40:1–5; 42:1–6.
d. An allusion to the incursions of Moabites, Ammonites and Edomites into Palestine after 602 BC, 2 K 24:1–2.
e. 'They have' versions; 'He has' Hebr.
f. 'their' conj.; 'your' Hebr.

13 a. A symbolic action, see 18:1a; Is 20; Ezk 4; 12; 24:15seq. Unless it is to be interpreted as a vision, the action would seem to take place at the Wadi Fara, about 4 miles (6 km) north of Anathoth (compare the town of Parah, Jos 18:23), the name of which evokes that of the Euphrates (Hebr. perat). The meaning is plain: Israel whom Yahweh had fastened as close to himself as a waistcloth round his waist, see Ps 76:10, has broken away and contracted the corruption of Babylonian idolatry.
b. 'if they answer' Gk; 'they will answer' Hebr.

Give glory to Yahweh your God 16 Jn 12:35–36 before the darkness comes,
before your feet stumble will change it to blackness.

If you do not listen to this warning, 17
I shall weep in secret for your pride;
my eyes will weep bitterly

for Yahweh's flock is being led into captivity.

Jehoiachin threatened [c]

Tell the king and the queen mother, 18
'Sit in a lower place,
since your glorious crown

An admonition to impenitent Jerusalem

now coming from the north.
Where is the flock once entrusted to you,
the flock which was your pride?
4:30+ What will you say when they come and punish you, 21 you yourself having taught them?
Against you, in the lead, will come your friends.
4:31+ Then will not anguish grip you as it grips a woman in labour?
And should you ask yourself, 22

it is because of your great guilt Is 47:2–3 Ho 2:5i that your skirts have been pulled up being so accustomed to wrong?

'I shall scatter you like chaff [g] 24
on the desert wind.
This is your share, the part allotted you, 25
from me, Yahweh declares, because you have forgotten me and put your trust in Delusion.
I am the one who pulls your skirts up over your face 26 to let your shame be seen.
2:20j Oh! Your adulteries, your shrieks of pleasure, 27 your vile prostitution!
On the hills, in the fields,
I have seen your Horrors. [h]
Jerusalem, disaster is coming for you!
How much longer till you are made clean?'

The great drought [a]

5:20–25; 8:18–23

1 14 The word of Yahweh that came to Jeremiah on the occasion of the drought. Ho 4:3a Am 4:7

2 'Judah is in mourning,
her towns [b] are pining, sinking to the ground;
a cry goes up from Jerusalem.
3 The nobles send their servants for water, they come to the water-tanks,
find no water,
and return with their pitchers empty.
Dismayed and bewildered,
they cover their heads.
4 Because the soil is all cracked since the country has had no rain;
the farmers are dismayed,
they cover their heads.
5 Even the doe in the countryside giving birth abandons her young,
for there is no grass;
6 the wild donkeys standing on the bare heights gasp for air like jackals:
their eyes grow dim
for lack of pasture.'

Lm 1:4

Lv 26:18–20

3:3

7 Although our sins witness against us,
Yahweh, for your name's sake, intervene!
Yes, our acts of infidelity have been many,
we have sinned against you!
8 Yahweh, hope of Israel, [c] its Saviour in time of distress, why are you like a stranger in this country,
like a traveller staying only for one night?
9 Why are you like someone bemused, like a warrior who has no power to rescue?
And yet, Yahweh, you are among us, we are called by your name.
Do not desert us!

17:13

7:30;15:15 Dt 28:10

10 Yahweh says this about this people, 'They take such pleasure in darting hither and thither, they cannot restrain their feet! But Yahweh takes pleasure in them no longer; now he will keep their guilt in mind and punish their sins.'

‖Ho 8:13

11, 12 Yahweh then said to me, 'Do not intercede for this people or their welfare. •If they fast, I will not listen to their plea; if they offer burnt offerings and cereal offerings I will not accept them. Rather, I shall make an end of them by sword, famine and plague.'

7:16

c. Jehoiachin reigned for only 3 months; he and his mother were exiled to Babylon in 598 BC.

d. Presumably by the Edomites, whose raids had been almost continuous since 602 BC.

e. With Gk, which adds 'Jerusalem'; Hebr. ketib has sing. for both verbs; qere has plural.

f. lit. 'your heels have been ravished'; euphemism.

g. 'you' conj.; 'them' Hebr.

h. 'Delusion', v. 25, and 'Horrors': the false gods, as before.

14 a. Probably in the reign of Jehoiakim (609–598). This dialogue between the prophet and Yahweh has features borrowed from a liturgical lament (cf. Ps 74;79; Jl 1–2): description of the famine, vv. 14:2–6; lament of the people, vv. 7–9; reply of Yahweh, vv. 10–12; complaint of Jeremiah, vv. 13–16; second description of the famine, vv. 17–18; second lament of the people, vv. 19–22; second reply of Yahweh; 15:1–4. But to the collective confession of the people, as to the pleading of Jeremiah, Yahweh returns a negative answer, and to the threat of famine adds that of invasion.

b. lit. 'her gates', cf. Dt 12:17; 16:5.

c. 'Yahweh' 13 Gk MSS, Vet. Lat.; MT omits.

23 & notes 'Ah, Lord Yahweh,' I answered, 'here are the prophets telling them, "You 13 will not see the sword, famine will not touch you; I promise you true peace in this place." '
5:31;27:10; 29:9 Then Yahweh said to me, 'The prophets are prophesying lies in my name; I have 14 not sent them, I gave them no orders, I never spoke to them. Delusive visions, hollow predictions, daydreams of their own, that is what they prophesy to you.
Therefore, Yahweh says this: The prophets who prophesy in my name when I 15 have not sent them, and tell you there will be no sword or famine in this country, these same prophets will meet their end by sword and famine. ·And as for the 16 people to whom they prophesy, they will be tossed into the streets of Jerusalem, victims of famine and the sword, with not a soul to bury them: neither them nor their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters. I shall pour their own wickedness down on them.

'So say this word to them: [d] 17
May my eyes shed tears night and day, unceasingly, since the daughter of my people has sustained a fearsome wound,
a crippling injury.
If I go into the countryside, 18
there lie those killed by the sword;
if I go into the city,
I see people tortured with hunger;
even prophets and priests roam the country at their wits' end.'

Have you rejected Judah altogether? 19
Does your very soul revolt at Zion?
Why have you struck us down without hope of cure?
=8:15;13:16 Am 5:18 We were hoping for peace—no good came of it!
For the moment of cure—nothing but terror!
Yahweh, we acknowledge our wickedness 20
and our ancestors' guilt:
we have indeed sinned against you.
For your name's sake do not reject us, 21
do not dishonour the throne of your glory. [e] Remember us; do not break your covenant with us.
Ps 147:8 Can any of the nations' Futile Ones make it rain? 22
Can the heavens of their own accord give showers?
Are you not the one, Yahweh our God?
In you is our hope,
since you make all these things.

Ex 32:11e Ps 99:6 15 Yahweh said to me, 'Even if Moses and Samuel [a] pleaded before me, I could 1 not sympathise with this people! Drive them out of my sight; away with them! ·And if they ask you, "Where shall we go?" tell them this, "Yahweh 2 says this:

=43:11 ↗Rv 13:10 Those for the plague, to the plague;
those for the sword, to the sword;
those for famine, to famine;
those for captivity, to captivity!

"I shall consign them to four kinds of thing, Yahweh declares: the sword to kill, 3 the dogs to drag away, the birds of heaven and wild animals of earth to devour and to destroy. ·I shall make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the 4 earth, because of Manasseh [b] son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, and what he did in Jerusalem."

The horrors of war [c]

Who is there to pity you, Jerusalem, who to grieve for you,
who to go out of his way
and ask how you are?
'You yourself have rejected me, Yahweh declares, you have turned your back on me;
so I have stretched my hand over you and destroyed you.
Tired of relenting,
I have winnowed them with a winnow
at the country's gates.
They have been bereft, I have destroyed my people,
but they refuse to leave their ways.
I have made their widows outnumber the sand of the sea.
On the mother of young warriors
I bring the destroyer in broad daylight.
Suddenly I bring anguish and terror down on her.
The mother of seven sons grows faint and gasps for breath.
It is still day, but already her sun has set,
she is dismayed and distracted;
and the rest of them I shall consign to the sword, to their enemies, Yahweh declares.'

The call of Jeremiah renewed [d]

1:4–10,17–19

A disaster for me, mother, that you bore me to be a man of strife and dissension for the whole country.
I neither lend nor borrow,
yet all of them curse me.
Have I not genuinely done my best to serve you, Yahweh?
Have I not interceded with you in time of disaster and distress! [e]

d. Editorial link clumsily introducing what follows.
e. Zion.

15 a. The great intercessors, see Ex 32:11e; 1 S 7:8–12; Ps 99:6. To these, later tradition adds Jeremiah himself, 2 M 15:14e.

b. The man chiefly responsible for the idolatry infecting Yahwism for nearly three-quarters of a century, 2 K 21.

c. This poem was probably pronounced just before the siege of 596 BC.

d. Another dialogue between God and Jeremiah, see 11:18–12:5. It reveals a spiritual crisis of the prophet halfway through his ministry. Here, as in 12:5, God, far from soothing Jeremiah's distress, condemns it as 'despicable' and demands of him a new 'conversion', which he sanctions by renewing, in almost identical terms, the commands and promises of Jeremiah's original call, vv. 19–20, cf. 1:9, 17–19. On these 'confessions of Jeremiah' see 11:18–12:5; 15:10–21; 17:14–18; 18:18–23; 20:7–18, and pp. 1170–1.

e. 'To be honest' 'amen Gk; '(Yahweh) said' 'amar Hebr. • 'serve(d)' sherattika conj.; 'fortified sharatika Hebr. ketib; 'freed' sheritika qere. • At the end of the v., Hebr. adds 'the enemy', possibly a gloss explaining the time of disaster'. • The v. is very obscure. Following Gk, we assign the words to Jeremiah, which best fits the context. Hebr., with some strain, can be translated: 'Yahweh said, "Have I not rescued you for your own good? Have I not made the enemy come and plead with you in time of disaster and distress?" ' In this case, v. 12 should presumably not be taken as a threat against Israel, linking it with what follows, but as a promise to make Jeremiah as solid as bronze (cf. v. 20; 1:18), linking it with v. 11.

f. Vv. 12–14 (or vv. 13–14, see previous note) largely duplicate 17:3–4 and are out of context here.

g. Thus several Hebr. MSS, Gk, Syr. and Vet. Lat., and corresponding to 17:4; 'I shall make your enemies pass' Hebr.

Yahweh, God Sabaoth.
16:8 I never sat in the company of scoffers [i] 17 amusing myself;
with your hands on me I held myself aloof,
since you had filled me with indignation.
Why is my suffering continual, 18
my wound incurable, refusing to be healed?
Truly, for me you are a deceptive stream with uncertain waters!

To which Yahweh replied, 19
'If you repent, I shall restore you [j]
to plead before me.
If you distinguish between the precious and the base,
1:9 you shall be as my own mouth.
They will come back to you,
but you must not go back to them.
1:18–19 As far as these people are concerned, I shall make you 20 a fortified wall of bronze.
They will fight against you
but will not overcome you, because I am with you
to save you and rescue you,
Yahweh declares.
I shall rescue you from the clutches of the wicked 21 and redeem you from the grasp of the violent.'

The prophet's life is itself symbolic [a]

16 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows: 1
'You are not to marry or have sons and daughters in this place. ·For 2, 3 Yahweh says this regarding the sons and daughters to be born in this place, about the mothers who give birth to them, and about the fathers who beget them in this 8:2 land, ·"They will die of deadly diseases, unlamented and unburied; they will be 4 like dung spread on the ground; they will meet their end by sword and famine, and their corpses will be food for the birds of the sky and the beasts of earth." [b]

'Yes, Yahweh says this, "Go into no house where there is mourning, do not go 5 and lament or grieve with them; for I have withdrawn my peace from this people, Yahweh declares, and faithful love and pity too. ·High or low, they will die in this 6 country, without burial or lament; there will be no gashing, no shaving of the head for them. [c] ·No bread will be broken for the mourner to comfort him for the dead; 7 no cup of consolation will be offered him for his father or his mother. [d]

"And do not enter a house where there is feasting, to sit with them and eat and 8 drink. ·For Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: In this place, before 9 7:34;25:10 your eyes, in your own days, I will silence the shouts of rejoicing and mirth and the voices of bridegroom and bride.

10 "When you tell these people this and they ask you: Why has Yahweh decreed 5:19+ such complete and total disaster for us? What have we done wrong? What sin have 11 we committed against Yahweh our God? ·then you are to answer: It is because your ancestors abandoned me, Yahweh declares, and followed other gods, and Dt 29:24 served and worshipped them. They abandoned me and did not keep my Law.
12 And you for your part have behaved even worse than your ancestors. Look, each of you follows his own stubborn and wicked inclinations, without listening to me.
13 And so, I shall eject you from this country into a country unknown to you or to your ancestors, and there you can serve other gods, [e] day and night, for I shall show you no more favour."

The return of the scattered Israelites =23:7–8

14 'Look, the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when people will no longer say, "As 15 Yahweh lives who brought the Israelites out of Egypt!" ·but, "As Yahweh lives Ex 20:2 who brought the Israelites back from the land of the north and all the countries to which he had driven them." I shall bring them back to the very soil I gave their ancestors.'

The invasion foretold [f]

16 'Watch, I shall send for many fishermen, Yahweh declares, and these will fish them up; next, I shall send for many huntsmen, and these will hunt them out of every 17 mountain, every hill, and out of the holes in the rocks. ·For my eyes watch all Jb 34:21
Heb 4:13
their ways, these are not hidden from me, and their guilt does not escape my gaze.
18 I shall requite their guilt and their sin twice over, since they have polluted my ↗Rv 18:6 country with the carcases of their Horrors, and filled my heritage with their Abominations.' [g]

The conversion of the nations [h]

19 Yahweh, my strength, my stronghold, my refuge in time of distress!
To you the nations will come Is 45:14h from the remotest parts of the earth and say,
'Our fathers inherited nothing but Delusion, Futility of no use whatever.

These are not gods at all!'
21 'Now listen, I will make them acknowledge,

h. Expression used with regard to the Temple, 7:10seq. cf. 1 K 8:43.

i. The scoffers, the rich and the arrogant go together and are condemned as a single category in the Psalms, Wisdom books and gospels, Mt 5:3seq.; Lk 6:25.

j. An expression typical of Jeremiah's style, cf. 17:14; 20:7. The prophet thus underlines the very close link between human and divine action. Alternative trans. 'If you return, I shall return you', cf. also 1:17, containing the same idea but with sharper emphasis on human co-operation which makes it possible for God to act. Conversely, human beings must realise that they are powerless, if God does not act on them, cf. 31:18.

16 a. The prophets often use symbolic actions to reinforce their preaching, see 18:1a, but sometimes their very lives become symbol and sign, see Is 8:18; Ezk 24:15–24; Ho 1;3.

b. Absence of funeral rites or burial was regarded as a frightful curse, 22:18–19; 1 K 14:11; Ezk 29:5.

c. Such funeral rites, though forbidden by the Law, Lv 19:27–28; Dt 14:1, were practised in Israel, Jr 7:29; 41:5.

d. 'bread' Gk. • 'for them' Hebr. 'for the mourner' Vulg.; 'for mourning' Hebr. '(offered) him' Gk; 'them' Hebr. This refers to a funeral meal.

e. 'To serve other gods' is an ancient expression for living in exile (1 S 26:19 cf. 2 K 5:17) outside Palestine, which was thought to be Yahweh's only possession.

f. Prophecy uttered before 598 BC.

g. Horrors and Abominations: false gods polluting the Holy Land like so many corpses, see Lv 18:25seq.; 26:30.

for my fiery anger kindled by you will burn for ever. [f]

A group of wisdom sayings

Yahweh says this, 5
Ps 146:3–4 'Accursed be anyone who trusts in human beings, who relies on human strength and whose heart turns from Yahweh.
Such a person is like scrub in the wastelands: 6 when good comes, it does not affect him [g] since he lives in the parched places of the desert, uninhabited, salt land.

‖Ps 40:4 'Blessed is anyone who trusts in Yahweh, 7 with Yahweh for his reliance.
Ps 1:3 He is like a tree by the waterside 8 Ezk 47:12 that thrusts its roots to the stream:
when the heat comes it has nothing to fear,
its foliage stays green;
untroubled in a year of drought,
it never stops bearing fruit.

'The heart is more devious than any other thing, 9 Mk 7:21 and is depraved; who can pierce its secrets?
11:20+ I, Yahweh, search the heart, 10
Pr 17:3 test the motives,
32:9 to give each person what his conduct Ps 62:13 and his actions deserve.
↗Mt 16:27

'The partridge will hatch eggs it has not laid. 11
No different is the person who gets riches unjustly:
his days half done, they will desert him and he prove a fool after all.'

Confidence in the Temple and in Yahweh [h]

A glorious throne, sublime from the beginning, 12 such is our Holy Place.
14:8 Yahweh, hope of Israel, 13
all who abandon you will be put to shame, those who turn from you will be registered in the underworld, [i] 2:13+ since they have abandoned Yahweh, the fountain of living water.

A prayer for vengeance 15:10d

14 Heal me, Yahweh, and I shall be healed, Ps 6:2–3 save me, and I shall be saved, for you are my praise.
15 Look, they keep saying to me,
'Where is Yahweh's word? Let it come true then!'[j] 16 Yet I have never urged you to send disaster,[k]
I never desired the fatal day,
this you know;
what came from my lips was not concealed from you.
17 Do not be a terror to me,
you, my refuge in time of disaster. Ps 5:10c 18 Let my persecutors be confounded, not me, let them, not me, be terrified.
On them bring the day of disaster, destroy them, destroy them twice over!

Observance of the Sabbath[l] Ex 20:8f

19 Yahweh said this to me, 'Go and stand at the Gate of the Sons of the People by 20 which the kings of Judah go in and out—and at all the gates of Jerusalem. •Say to them, "Listen to the word of Yahweh, you kings of Judah, all you people of Judah 21 too, and all you inhabitants of Jerusalem who pass through the gates. •Yahweh says this: As you value your lives, on no account carry a burden on the Sabbath day 22 or bring it in through the gates of Jerusalem. •Bring no burden out of your houses on the Sabbath day, and do no work. Keep the Sabbath day holy, as I ordered your 23 ancestors. •They would not hear, would not pay attention; they deliberately 7:26;19:15 24 refused to listen or accept instruction. •But if you listen carefully to me, Yahweh Dt 9:13+ •22:4–5 declares, and bring no burden in through the gates of this city on the Sabbath day, 25 if you keep the Sabbath holy and do no work on that day, •then, through the gates of this city, kings and princes occupying the throne of David will continue to make their entry, riding in chariots or on horseback, they, their chief men, the people of Zc 9:9h Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And this city will be inhabited for ever. Ezk 37:25 Jl 4:20 26 They will come from the towns of Judah, from the districts round Jerusalem, from the territory of Benjamin, from the lowlands, from the highlands, from the Negeb, to offer burnt offering and sacrifice, and cereal offering and incense, to offer 27 thanksgiving sacrifices in the Temple of Yahweh. •But if you do not listen to me to keep the Sabbath day holy, and to refrain from entering the gates of Jerusalem with burdens on the Sabbath day, then I shall set fire to its gates; it will devour the palaces of Jerusalem and not be quenched." '

Jeremiah visits the potter[a]

1, 2 18 The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh as follows, •'Get up and make your way down to the potter's house, and there I shall tell you what I 3 have to say.' •So I went down to the potter's house; and there he was, working at

b. 'their altars' Vulg.; 'the altars' Hebr.

c. lit. 'their asherahs', see Ex 34:13e; Jg 2:13i.

d. Cf. 15:13. We transpose 'because of the sin of' before 'your high places'; Hebr. inverts.

e. 'relinquish', lit. 'relax your hand', yadeka conj.; 'relax and by you' ubeka Hebr.

f. A variation on 15:14.

g. lit. 'he does not see it', a verb very similar when written to the one used in parallel v. 8, 'it has nothing to fear' and giving rise to faulty vowels.

h. These two vv. do not seem to be by Jeremiah, cf. 7:1–15.

i. 'from you' conj.; 'from me' Hebr. 'registered in the underworld', i.e. in Sheol among the dead.

j. The threats of Jeremiah have not materialised. The time is therefore before 598 BC.

k. 'I never urged you to send disaster', lit. 'I did not hurry behind you for disaster' (lera'ah) conj.; 'I hurried no more than a shepherd (mero'eh) behind you' Hebr.

l. Most commentators deny the authenticity of this passage on the grounds of the importance it attributes to the Sabbath, unusual in Jeremiah.

18 a. The time of this enacted parable is before 598, since the great disaster has not yet taken place, see v. 12. Symbolic gesture had accompanied the preaching of the earliest prophets, of Samuel for example, 1 S 15:27–28, of Ahijah of Shiloh, 1 K 11:29–39, and of the false prophet Zedekiah, 1 K 22:11–12. This procedure was not simply a dramatisathe wheel.[b] ·But the vessel he was making came out wrong, as may happen with 4 clay[c] when a potter is at work. So he began again and shaped it into another vessel, as he thought fit. ·Then the word of Yahweh came to me as follows, ·"House of 5.6

Israel, can I not do to you what this potter does? Yahweh demands. Yes, like clay Is 29:16g in the potter's hand, so you are in mine, House of Israel. ·Sometimes I announce 7 1:10 that I shall uproot, break down and destroy a certain nation or kingdom, ·but 8 should the nation I have threatened abandon its wickedness, I then change my Ezk 18:21–24 mind about the disaster which I had intended to inflict on it. Sometimes I announce 9
Jon 3:10
·1:10 that I shall build up and plant a certain nation or kingdom, but should that nation 10 do what displeases me and refuse to listen to my voice, I then change my mind about the good which I was intending to confer on it. ·So now, say this to the 11 people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, "Yahweh says this: Listen, I am preparing a disaster for you, I am working out a plan against you. So now, each one of you, turn back from your evil ways, amend your conduct and actions."
2:25 They, however, will say, "It is no use! We shall follow our own plans; each of us 12 will act on his own wicked inclinations." '

About Israel's repudiation of Yahweh[d]

Therefore, Yahweh says this, 13 2:10–12 'Ask, please, among the nations if anyone has heard anything like this.
The Virgin of Israel has done a very horrible thing.
Does the snow of Lebanon 14 ever leave the rocks of its slopes?
Do the rivers of foreign lands, their cold flowing waters, ever run dry?[e]
2:32 And yet my people have forgotten me! 15
They burn incense to a Nothing!
They have been made to stumble in their ways,[f]
the ancient paths,
to walk in paths,
on an unmade road,
19:8 to make their country an object of horror, 16
1 K 9:8
Jb 16:4 everlastingly derided:
Lm 2:15–16 every passer-by will be appalled at it Mt 27:39p and shake his head.
Like the east wind, I shall scatter them 17 before the enemy.
I shall show them my back, not my face,[g]
the day they are ruined.'

15:10d A plot against Jeremiah

'Come on,' they said, 'let us concoct a plot against Jeremiah, for the Law will not 18 perish for lack of priests, nor advice for lack of wise men, nor the word for lack of prophets. Come on, let us slander him and pay no attention to anything he says.'[h]

Pay attention to me, Yahweh, 19 hear what my adversaries are saying.
Ps 35:7.12 Should evil be returned for good? 20
Now they are digging a pit for me.
Remember how I pleaded before you
and spoke good of them,
to turn your retribution away from them.
Ps 5:10c So, hand their sons over to famine, 21 abandon them to the edge of the sword.

Let their wives become childless and widowed.
Let their husbands die of plague, their young men be cut down by the sword in battle.
22 Let cries re-echo from their houses as you bring raiders suddenly on them. 12:9d For they have dug a pit to catch me, 2 K 24:2–4 they have laid snares to trap my feet.
23 But you, Yahweh, know all about their murderous plot against me.
Do not forgive their guilt, Ne 3:37
do not efface their sin from your sight.
Let them be hurled down before you, deal with them while you are angry!

The broken jug and the altercation with Pashhur [a]

1 19 Then Yahweh said to Jeremiah, 'Go and buy a potter's earthenware jug.
Take some of the people's elders and some of the senior priests with you. [b]
2 Go out towards the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, just outside the Gate of the Pot-3 sherds. [c] There proclaim the words I shall say to you. •You must say, "Kings of Judah, inhabitants of Jerusalem! Listen to the word of Yahweh! Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: I am about to bring such a disaster on this place that 4 the ears of every one who hears of it will ring. •For they have abandoned me and 1 S 3:11 have made this place unrecognisable, and offered incense here to other gods which 2 K 21:12 neither they nor their ancestors nor the kings of Judah ever knew before. They 5 have filled this place with the blood of the innocent; •for they have built high places 7:31–33 for Baal to burn their sons as burnt offerings to Baal, a thing I never ordered, never Lv 18:21h 6 mentioned, that had never entered my thoughts. •So now the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when people will no longer call this place Topheth, or Valley of tion of the spoken prophecy: it was a pre-enactment of the event threatened or promised, in such a way that the event itself became as inevitable as the gesture was irrevocable. The same phenomenon recurs among the 'writing' prophets. Hosea's whole mission is inextricable from a symbolic action which in turn is his private predicament, Ho 1–3. With Isaiah the symbolic gesture is found less frequently, though see Is 20 and the symbolic names he gives to his children, Is 7:3 (see 10:21); 8:1–4, 18, see Is 1:26n. Jeremiah performs, or interprets, many symbolic actions: the almond tree and the pot, 1:11–14; the waistcloth hidden by the Euphrates, 13:1–11 (though this may have been enacted only in vision); the potter, 18:1–12; the jug, ch. 19; the figs, ch. 24; the yoke, ch. 27–28; the buying of the field, ch. 32. To which we may add that his life itself is a symbol, 16:1–8, and that his sufferings (though he gives this no emphasis) identify him in advance with the nation itself about to suffer, and make him pre-figure the suffering servant, see Is 42:1a. Later, Ezekiel was to perform more symbolic actions: the brick 'besieged', Ezk 4:1–3; the rationed food, 4:9–19; the hair, ch. 5; the mime of the exile, 12:1–20; the pot, 24:3–14; the two sticks 37:15–28; and he too, like Hosea, interprets his personal experiences symbolically: his illness, 4:4–8; his wife's death, 24:15–24; his dumbness and recovery, 24:27; 33:22. Symbolism of this kind is also found in the NT, see the fig tree cursed by Jesus, Mt 21:18–19 and par., the prophecy of Agabus, Ac 21:10–14.

b. lit. 'at the two wheels': the mechanism consisted of two circular plates, mounted on a vertical spindle and moved by the potter's feet.

c. 'as (may happen with) clay' kahomer, with some MSS; 'with clay' bahomer, MT.

d. By way of commentary on 18:12, the editor has inserted this passage characteristic of the early preaching of Jeremiah, cf. 2:10–32, but very timely under Jehoiakim with the recrudescence of idolatry.

e. 'run dry' 'im yinnashetu conj.; 'are torn away' 'im yinnateshu Hebr. • The text of the whole v. is uncertain and various emendations have been suggested; instead of 'the field' sadai, Aquila reads 'the Almighty' shaddai; instead of 'the rivers of foreign lands (lit. 'foreign waters'), sweet', it is sometimes proposed, by slight emendation, to read 'the springs of Egypt', though this is mere conjecture unsupported by any ancient witness to the text. • The 'foreign waters' would appear to be the great rivers of Mesopotamia and Egypt.

f. i.e. the leaders of the people have led them astray; unless the Gk reading is preferred: 'they (the members of the nation) have stumbled.'

g. lit. 'I shall make them see', versions; 'I shall see them' Hebr.

h. The work of these three classes of spiritual leaders will still go on, none the worse for the disappearance of the trouble-maker.

19 a. This passage appears to be composite. It comprises: 1 A symbolic action taking place before a few witnesses near the Gate of the Potsherds and interpreted subsequently in the Temple, thus provoking the animosity of Pashhur: 19:1, 2^{bc}, 10–11^{a} 14–15; 20:1–6. The incident presumably occurred in about 605 BC, before the events narrated in ch. 36. 2 A discourse delivered at Topheth, addressed to the kings of Judah and the people of Jerusalem: $19:2^{a}$, 3–9, 11^{b}–13; it repeats earlier Jeremian themes which had acquired a new relevance under Jehoiakim; it refers back to the jug incident, v. 7.

b. 'Then' Gk; 'Thus' Hebr. • 'to Jeremiah' conj.; 'to me' Gk; Hebr. omits. • 'Take with you', Syr., Targ.; Hebr. omits.

c. The Gate of the Potsherds, or Pottery Gate, cannot be sited with any certainty. The direction given (Gehennah) suggests that it may have stood to the east of the Dung Gate, not far perhaps from 'the king's garden', see 39:4, but some people think that Pottery Gate and Dung Gate were two names for the same place.

Ben-Hinnom, but Valley of Slaughter. ·Because of this place, I shall empty [d] Judah and Jerusalem of sound advice; I shall make them fall by the sword before their enemies, by the hand of those determined to kill them; I shall give their corpses as food to the birds of the sky and the animals of earth. ·And I shall make this city an 8 18:16 object of horror and derision; every passer-by will be appalled at it and whistle at the sight of all the wounds it has sustained. ·I shall make them eat the flesh of their 9 Dt 28:53–57 own sons and daughters: they will eat one another during the siege, in the shortage
2 K 6:28–29
Ezk 5:10+ to which their enemies, and those determined to kill them, will reduce them."

'You must break this jug in front of the men who are with you, ·and say to 10, 11 them, "Yahweh Sabaoth says this: I am going to break this people and this city just Ps 2:9 as one breaks a potter's pot, so that it can never be mended again.
Is 30:14 "Topheth will become a burial ground, for lack of other burial space. ·That is 12 how I shall treat this place, Yahweh declares, and its inhabitants, by making this city like Topheth. ·The houses of Jerusalem and those of the kings of Judah, all the 13 houses on the roofs of which they offered incense to the whole array of heaven and poured libations to other gods, will be unclean, like this place Topheth." '[e]

Jeremiah then came back from Topheth where Yahweh had sent him to pro- 14 phesy, and stood in the court of the Temple of Yahweh and said to all the people, 'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, "Yes, on this city, and on all the 15 towns belonging to it, I shall bring all the disaster which I had decreed for it, since 7:26 they have stubbornly refused to listen to my words." '
Dt 9:13

20 Now the priest Pashhur son of Immer, who was the chief of police in the 1 Temple of Yahweh, heard Jeremiah making this prophecy. ·Pashhur struck 2 the prophet Jeremiah and then put him in the stocks, in the Upper Benjamin Gate leading into the Temple of Yahweh. ·Next day, Pashhur had Jeremiah taken out 3 of the stocks; Jeremiah then said to him, 'Not Pashhur but Terror-on-every-Side is Yahweh's name for you. ·For Yahweh says this, "I am going to hand you over to 4 terror, you and all your friends; they will fall by the sword of their enemies, your own eyes will see it. The whole of Judah, too, I shall hand over to the king of Babylon; he will carry them off captive to Babylon and put them to the sword.
And all the wealth of this city, all its stores, all its valuables, all the treasures of 5 the kings of Judah, I shall hand over to their enemies who will plunder them, round them up and carry them off to Babylon. ·As for you, Pashhur, and your whole 6 household, you will go into captivity; you will go to Babylon; there you will die, and there be buried, you and all your friends to whom you have prophesied lies." '

15:10d Selections from the 'Confessions' of Jeremiah

You have seduced me, Yahweh, and I have let myself be seduced; 7 you have overpowered me: you were the stronger. [a] I am a laughing-stock all day long, they all make fun of me.
For whenever I speak, I have to howl 8 and proclaim, 'Violence and ruin!'
For me, Yahweh's word has been the cause of insult and derision all day long.
I would say to myself, 'I will not think about him, 9
I will not speak in his name any more,' 23:29 but then there seemed to be a fire burning in my heart, imprisoned in my bones.
Jb 32:19–20 The effort to restrain it wearied me, Ps 39:3 I could not do it.
‖Ps 31:13 I heard so many disparaging me, 10
'Terror on every side! [b]
Denounce him! Let us denounce him!'
All those who were on good terms with me watched for my downfall,

'Perhaps he will be seduced into error.
Then we shall get the better of him and take our revenge!'
11 But Yahweh is at my side like a mighty hero;
my opponents will stumble, vanquished, confounded by their failure;
everlasting, unforgettable disgrace will be theirs.
12 Yahweh Sabaoth, you who test the upright, [c] =11:20+ observer of motives and thoughts, I shall see your vengeance on them, for I have revealed my cause to you.
13 Sing to Yahweh,
praise Yahweh,
for he has delivered the soul of one in need [d]
from the clutches of evil doers.

14 A curse on the day when I was born!
May the day my mother bore me be unblessed! [e]
15 A curse on the man who brought my father the news, 1:5;15:10 ↗Jb 3
'A son, a boy has been born to you!'
making him overjoyed.
16 May this man be like the towns Gn 19:24-25 that Yahweh overthrew without mercy; may he hear the warning-cry at dawn and the shout of battle at high noon, 17 for not killing me in the womb;
my mother would have been my grave and her womb pregnant for ever.
18 Why ever did I come out of the womb to see toil and sorrow
and end my days in shame?

C: PROPHECIES MAINLY LATER THAN THE REIGN OF JEHOIAKIM

Jeremiah answers the envoys of Zedekiah [a]

1 21 The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh when King Zedekiah sent Pashhur son of Malchiah to him, with the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah, 2 to say this, •'Please consult Yahweh for us, since Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon is making war on us: perhaps Yahweh will work one of his many miracles for us 3 and force him to withdraw.' •Jeremiah said to them, 'Take this answer to Zedekiah, 4 "Yahweh, God of Israel, says this: I shall bring back the weapons of war which 34:1-7 you are now carrying, and with which you are fighting the king of Babylon and the Chaldaeans now besieging you; from outside the walls, I shall stack them in the 5 centre of this city. •And I shall fight against you myself with outstretched hand and 6 mighty arm, in anger, fury and great wrath. •I shall strike down the inhabitants of

d. A play on words between baqaq 'to empty' and baqbuq 'jug'.

e. The pollution is due to the corpses, see Lv 21:1seq.; 26:30.

20 a. Imagery of seduction and struggle characterises Yahweh's ascendancy over the prophet. Here the prophet seems to rebel against a God whom he regards as responsible for his misfortune. Such despair is rarely expressed in the Bible (but see Jb 3:1seq.; Ps 88). Jeremiah, however, remains convinced that Yahweh is the God of Grace and, even in the depths of his anguish, utters a cry of hope, vv. 11-13.

b. The enemies of Jeremiah mock him with his own familiar expression, see v. 3; 20:3; 46:5; 49:29.

c. Or 'aright' with 2 Hebr. MSS, Syr. and Arab; cf. 11:20.

d. The needy one 'ebion, or the poor 'anaw, cf. 22:16, used in a religious sense here: ill-treated by people but confident in God. 'Yahweh's poor', see Zp 2:3d, were to be Jeremiah's spiritual children.

e. Called from his mother's womb, 1:5, Jeremiah curses the day of his birth. This curse, later repeated in Jb 3, marks the climax of his spiritual suffering.

21 a. The time is the siege of Jerusalem in 588 BC; the passage is perhaps placed here to point the contrast between the Pashhur of v. 1 and the Pashhur of 20:1. The Gk omits several words of this passage.

this city, human and animal; they will die of a great plague. ·Then, Yahweh 7 declares, I shall deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, his officials, the people and those of this city who have escaped the plague, the sword, or the famine, into the clutches of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, into the clutches of their enemies and into the clutches of those determined to kill them; mercilessly, relentlessly, pitilessly, he will put them to the sword."
'And you must say to this people, "Yahweh says this: Look, I offer you a choice 8
Dt 30:15 between the way of life and the way of death. ·Anyone who stays in this city will 9 =38:2 die by sword, by famine, or by plague; but anyone who leaves it and surrenders to 39:18;45:5 the Chaldaeans now besieging you will live; he will escape with his life. ·For I am 10 determined on disaster, and not prosperity, for this city, Yahweh declares. It will be handed over to the king of Babylon, and he will burn it down." '

Address to the royal family of Judah

To the royal House of Judah. [b] Listen to the word of Yahweh, ·House of David! 11, 12
Yahweh says this:

Each morning give fair judgement, rescue anyone who has been wronged from the hands of his oppressor, =4:4 or else my wrath will leap out like a fire, it will burn and no one will be able to quench it,
because of the wickedness of your actions.
My quarrel is with you, resident of the valley, 13
Rock-in-the-Plain, [c]
Yahweh declares,
with you that say, 'Who would dare attack us and enter our lairs?'
I shall punish you as your actions deserve, 14
Yahweh declares,
=50:32 I shall set fire to its forest and it will devour all around it.

22 Yahweh said this, 'Go down [a] to the palace of the king of Judah and there 1 say this word, ·"Listen to the word of Yahweh, king of Judah now occupying 2 the throne of David, you, your officials and your people who go through these gates. ·Yahweh says this: Act uprightly and justly; rescue from the hands of the 3 oppressor anyone who has been wronged, do not exploit or ill-treat the stranger, 17:24–25 the orphan, the widow; shed no innocent blood in this place. ·For if you are 4 scrupulous in obeying this command, then kings occupying the throne of David will continue to make their entry through the gates of this palace riding in chariots or on horseback, they, their officials and their people. ·But if you do not listen to these 5 words, then I swear by myself, Yahweh declares, this palace shall become a ruin!
"Yes, this is what Yahweh says about the palace of the king of Judah: 6

You are like Gilead to me, 22:23 like a peak of Lebanon.
Ezk 17:3 All the same, I will reduce you to a desert, to uninhabited towns.
I dedicate men to destroy you, [b] 7
each man with his weapons; 21:13+ they will cut down your finest cedars and throw them on the fire.

5:19+ "And when many nations pass this city, they will say to one another: Why has 8 1 K 9:7–9 Yahweh treated this great city like this? ·And the answer will be: Because they 9 abandoned the covenant of Yahweh their God to worship other gods and serve them." '

Prophecies against various kings: against Jehoahaz

Do not weep for the man who is dead, 2 K 23:29–30 do not raise the dirge for him.
Weep rather for the one who has gone away, since he will never come back, never see his native land again.[c] 2 K 23:34

For this is what Yahweh has said about Shallum son of Josiah, king of Judah, who succeeded Josiah his father and was forced to leave this place, 'He will never come back to it ·but will die in the place to which he has been taken captive; and he will never see this country again.

Against Jehoiakim

'Disaster for the man who builds his house without uprightness, Am 6:8 Hab 2:9,12 his upstairs rooms without fair judgement, who makes his fellow-man work for nothing, Dt 24:15 without paying him his wages, who says, "I shall build myself a spacious palace with airy upstairs rooms," who makes windows in it, panels it with cedar, and paints it vermilion.
Are you more of a king
because of your passion for cedar?
Did your father go hungry or thirsty?
But he did what is just and upright,
so all went well for him.
He used to examine the cases of poor and needy,
then all went well.
Is not that what it means to know me? Yahweh demands. 9:23d
You on the other hand have eyes and heart for nothing but your own interests, for shedding innocent blood and perpetrating violence and oppression.'

That is why Yahweh says this about Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah:

'No lamenting for him,
"My poor brother! My poor sister!" 34:5 1 K 13:30
No lamenting for him,
"His poor lordship! His poor majesty!"
He will have a donkey's funeral 36:30 Is 14:18–19 —dragged away and thrown out of the gates of Jerusalem.' 2 Ch 36:5–6

Against Jehoiachin[d]

'Climb the Lebanon range and shriek, raise your voice in Bashan, shriek from the Abarim,[e]

for all your lovers have been ruined![f]
I spoke to you in your prosperity. 21
2:25,31: but you said, "I will not listen!"
3:25;7:23seq.; 11:7seq. From your youth this has been how you behaved, refusing to listen to my voice.
The wind will shepherd all your shepherds away 22 and your lovers will go into captivity.
Then you will certainly blush with shame at the thought of all your wickedness.
You who have made the Lebanon your home 23 21:13;22:6 and made your nest among the cedars, how you will groan[g] when anguish overtakes you, 4:31+ pangs like those of a woman in labour!

'As I live, Yahweh declares, even if Coniah[h] son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, 24 Hg 2:23 were the signet ring on my right hand, I would still wrench you off! ·I shall hand 25 you over to those determined to kill you, to those you dread, to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, to the Chaldaeans. ·I shall hurl you and the mother who bore 26 you into another country; you were not born there but you will both die there.
They will not return to the country to which they desperately long to return.' 27

Is he a shoddy broken pot, 28 this man Coniah,
a crock that no one wants?
Why are he and his offspring ejected, hurled into a country
they know nothing of?
O land, land, land, 29
listen to the word of Yahweh!
Yahweh says this, 30
'List this man as : Childless;[i] a man who made a failure of his life, since none of his offspring will succeed in occupying the throne of David,[j] or ruling in Judah again.'

A tract against the false prophets 14:13–16 Dt 13:2–6 Ezk 13:1

9 On the prophets.[d]

My heart[e] is broken within me,
I tremble in all my bones;
I am like a drunken man,
like a man overcome with wine,
because of Yahweh and his holy words:

10 'For the country is full of adulterers;
yes, because of a curse, the country is in mourning and the pasturage in the desert has dried up;
they are prompt to do wrong,
make no effort to do right.
11 Yes, even prophet and priest are godless, 6:13
I have detected their wickedness in my own House,
Yahweh declares.
12 Because of this, their way will prove treacherous going for them;
in the darkness where they are driven,
there they will fall.
For I shall bring disaster on them, when the year for punishing them comes,
Yahweh declares.

13 'In the prophets of Samaria
I have seen insanity:
they prophesied in the name of Baal 2:8;5:31
and led my people Israel astray.
14 But in the prophets of Jerusalem
I have seen something horrible:
adultery, persistent lying,
such abetting of the wicked that no one renounces his wickedness.
To me they are all like Sodom Gn 19 and its inhabitants are like Gomorrah.
15 So this is what Yahweh Sabaoth says about the prophets,
"Now I shall give them wormwood to eat =9:14 and make them drink poisoned water, since from the prophets of Jerusalem godlessness has spread throughout the land."

f. Here not the false gods, see 3:13, nor the allies of Judah, see 4: 30, but the kings and leading men of Judah, see v. 22.

g. Following Gk, Syr., Hebr. has the passive (unused) form of the verb 'to pardon', which might at a pinch be translated 'how pitiable you will be.'

h. Another name for Jehoiachin.

i. In the royal genealogical registers; see Is 4:3.

j. Zerubbabel, Jehoiachin's grandson, was governor of Judah only after the return from exile.

23 a. 'Branch' was later to become a proper noun and messianic title, Zc 3:8; 6:12.

b. This symbolic name, see Is 1:26n, given to the Messiah, is contrasted with the name Zedekiah which means 'Yahweh-is-my-Saving-Justice'.

c. 'he' Gk; 'I' Hebr.

d. The title (as in 21:11) of a composite booklet, its text overloaded, vv. 9–40. The first section, vv. 9–12, in which Jeremiah apparently for the first time becomes aware of the wickedness of the false prophets, may date from the time of Josiah. The subsequent sections could equally well reflect the situation under Jehoiakim or under Zedekiah. On this polemic against the false prophets, see pp. 1159–60.

e. Jeremiah is the speaker here, but Yahweh himself speaks at vv. 10–12.

'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, 16
"Do not listen to what those prophets prophesy to you;
they are deluding you,
they retail visions of their own,
and not what comes from Yahweh's mouth.
To those who despise me, they keep saying: 17
Yahweh has spoken: you will have peace!
and to all who follow their own stubborn inclinations:
No disaster will touch you."

1 Co 2:16 But who has been present in Yahweh's council and seen, and heard his word? 18
Who has paid attention to his word and listened to it?[f]

=30:23–24 Look, Yahweh's hurricane, his wrath, bursts out, 19 a fearsome hurricane,
to burst on the heads of the wicked;
Yahweh's anger will not withdraw 20
until he has performed, has carried out,
what he has in mind.
In the final days, you will understand this clearly,
'I did not send these prophets, 21
yet they ran!
I did not speak to them,
yet they prophesied!
Had they been present in my council, 22 28:9c they could have proclaimed my words to my people and turned them from their evil way and from the wickedness of their deeds![g]

'Am I a God when near, Yahweh demands, 23 and not a God when far away?
Ps 139:7–12 Can anyone hide somewhere secret 24
Si 16:17 without my seeing him? Yahweh demands.
Am 9:2–3 Do I not fill heaven and earth?
Ws 1:7 Yahweh demands.

'I have heard what the prophets say who make their lying prophecies in my 25 name. "I have had a dream," they say, "I have had a dream!"[h] ·How long are 26 there to be those among the prophets who prophesy lies and are in fact prophets of their own delusions? ·They are doing their best, by means of the dreams that they 27 keep telling each other, to make my people forget my name, just as their ancestors forgot my name in favour of Baal. ·Let the prophet who has had a dream tell it for 28 a dream! And let him who receives a word from me, deliver my word accurately!

'What have straw and wheat in common?
Yahweh demands.
5:14;20:9 Is my word not like fire, 29
Yahweh demands,
is it not like a hammer shattering a rock?

'So, then, I have a quarrel with the prophets, Yahweh declares, that steal my 30 words from one another. ·I have a quarrel with the prophets, Yahweh declares, 31 who wag their tongues to utter prophecies. ·I have a quarrel with the prophets who 32 make prophecies out of lying dreams, Yahweh declares, who recount them, and lead my people astray by their lies and their bragging. I certainly never sent them or commissioned them, and they serve no good purpose for this people, Yahweh declares.

'And when this people, or a prophet, or a priest, asks you, "What is Yahweh's 33 burden?" you must answer, "You are the burden, and I shall get rid of you, Yahweh declares!" [i]

34 'As for the prophet, the priest, or anyone else, who says, "Yahweh's burden", I 35 shall punish that man, and his household too. ·This is what you must say to one another, among yourselves, "What answer has Yahweh given?" or "What has 36 Yahweh said?" ·But stop using the expression "Yahweh's burden", for what each man says will be his own responsibility. And you twist the words of the living God, 37 of Yahweh Sabaoth, our God. ·This is the way to speak to a prophet, "What 38 answer has Yahweh given?" or "What has Yahweh said?" ·But if you say, "Yahweh's burden", then Yahweh says this, "Since you use the expression
'Yahweh's burden', when I have warned you to stop saying, 'Yahweh's burden', 39 believe me, I shall pick you up[j] and fling you from my presence, you and the city I 40 gave to you and to your ancestors. ·I shall bring down everlasting shame on you, everlasting and unforgettable disgrace." '

The two baskets of figs [a]

29:1–20
Mt 21:18–19par.

1 24 Yahweh gave me a vision: set out in front of the Temple of Yahweh [b] were two baskets of figs. This was after Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had led 2 K 24:12–16 Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, away into exile from Jerusalem, with the chief men of Judah, the blacksmiths and metalworkers, and had taken them to 2 Babylon. ·One basket contained excellent figs, like those that ripen first; the other 3 contained very bad figs, so bad they were uneatable. ·Yahweh said to me, 'What do you see, Jeremiah?' 'Figs,' I answered, 'the good ones excellent, the bad ones 4 very bad, so bad as to be uneatable.' ·Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to 5 me, ·"Yahweh, the God of Israel, says this, "As these figs are good, so I mean to Ezk 11:14–21 concern myself with the welfare of the exiles of Judah whom I have sent from this 6 place to the country of the Chaldaeans. ·My eyes will watch over them for their good, to bring them back to this country, to build them up and not to break them 1:10 7 down, to plant them and not to uproot them. ·I shall give them a heart to 4:4a;31:31l, 33,34;32:39 ↗1 Jn 5:20 acknowledge that I am Yahweh. They will be my people and I shall be their God, 8 for they will return to me with all their heart. ·As for the bad figs, the figs so bad as to be uneatable—yes, Yahweh says this—that is how I shall treat Zedekiah king of Judah, his chief men and what is left of Jerusalem: those who remain in this country 9 and those living in Egypt. [c] ·I shall make them an object of horror, a disaster, to all 15:4;26:6; 29:18;42:18; 44:12 the kingdoms of the earth, a thing of shame, a byword, a laughing-stock, a curse, 10 wherever I shall drive them. ·Sword, famine and plague I shall send against them until they have vanished from the soil I gave to them and to their ancestors." '

D: BABYLON THE SCOURGE OF YAHWEH [a]

1 25 The word that was addressed to Jeremiah about all the people of Judah in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah (that is to say the

f. The v. is perhaps a clumsily inserted gloss on v. 22.

g. On the criteria of genuine prophecy, see pp. 1159–60.

h. God may indeed use dreams to convey a message, Nb 12:6, but the message and its origin need discernment.

i. lit. 'You are the burden' Gk; 'What burden' Hebr. (faulty provision of vowels and word division). • Jeremiah rejects the normal sense of the word massa', 'burden' and, in the figurative sense, 'prophecy' (weighing someone down) 'response', see Is 13:1; 14:28; 19:1; Zc 9:1; 12:1; Ml 1:1.

j. Following versions and 5 Hebr. MSS. The verb (na-sa' from which massa' derives) continues the play on the word 'burden'. MT reads the verb nasha' 'to forget', or 'to lend against a pledge'.

24 a. This vision, cf. 13:1a, is reminiscent of Am (8:1–2). It may be assigned to the reign of Zedekiah, about 593 BC. The verdict given by Jeremiah (see also 29:1–23) is matched by that of Ezk (11:14–21): from the exiles God will recruit a people devoted to him, see Is 4:3c.

b. 'set out' Gk; 'appointed' Hebr. • The country people used to bring the first-fruits of their crops to the Temple.

c. Perhaps those who shared the captivity of Jehoahaz, 2 K 23:34, perhaps Israelite refugees in Egypt.

25 a. This passage recapitulates the activity of the prophet Jeremiah from his call, and proclaims the imminence of the Chaldaean danger, thus giving new urgency to all the earlier threats. It may be regarded as a summary, see v. 13, of the scroll first dictated by Jeremiah to Baruch first year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon). ·The prophet Jeremiah proclaimed 2 it before all the people of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem:

'For twenty-three years, from the thirteenth year of Josiah son of Amon, king of 3 Judah, until today, the word of Yahweh has been addressed to me and I have never 7:25f tired of speaking to you (but you have not listened. ·Furthermore, Yahweh has 4 untiringly sent you all his servants the prophets, but you have not listened or paid attention). ·The message was this, "Turn back, each one of you, from your evil 5 behaviour and your evil actions, and you will go on living on the soil Yahweh long ago gave to you and your ancestors for ever. ·(And do not follow other gods to 6 serve and worship them, do not provoke me with things you yourselves have made, and then I shall not harm you.) ·But you have not listened to me (Yahweh declares, 7 so that you have now provoked me with things you yourselves have made, and thus harmed yourselves)."

'So—this is what Yahweh Sabaoth says, "Since you have not listened to my 8 words, ·I shall now send for all the families of the north (Yahweh declares, that is, 9 for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, my servant) [b] and bring them down on this Jos 6:17b country and its inhabitants (and on all these surrounding nations); I shall curse them with utter destruction and make them an object of horror, of scorn, and ruin 7:34;16:9 Ezk 26:13 ↗Rv 18:22 them for ever. ·From them I shall banish the shouts of rejoicing and mirth, the 10 voices of bridegroom and bride, the sound of the handmill and the light of the lamp; ·and this whole country will be reduced to ruin and desolation, and these 11 27:7;29:10 2 Ch 36:21–22 Is 23:15 ↗Dn 9:2seq. nations will be enslaved to the king of Babylon for seventy years. [c] ·(But when the 12 seventy years are over, I shall punish the king of Babylon and that nation, Yahweh declares, for the wrong they have done, that is, the country of the Chaldaeans, and make it desolate for ever), ·and against that country I shall perform all the words 13 with which I have threatened it, that is, everything written in this book." '

II: INTRODUCTION TO THE PROPHECIES AGAINST THE NATIONS

The vision of the cup [d]

What Jeremiah prophesied against all the nations.

LXX 32:13–38 ('For these in their turn are to be enslaved [e] to powerful nations and great kings, 14 and I shall pay them back as their deeds and handiwork deserve.')

Is 51:17h Rv 14:8–16, 8i;16 For Yahweh, the God of Israel, said this to me, 'Take this cup of the wine of 15 wrath and make all the nations to whom I send you drink it; ·they will drink and 16 reel and lose their wits, because of the sword I am sending among them.' ·I took 17 the cup from Yahweh's hand and made all the nations to whom Yahweh sent me drink it [f] ·(Jerusalem and the towns of Judah, its kings and its chief men, to make 18 them a ruin, an object of horror and derision and a curse, as is the case today): Pharaoh king of Egypt, his officials, his chief men and all his people, ·with the 19, 20 whole conglomeration of peoples there (all the kings of the country of Uz); [g] all the kings of the country of the Philistines, Ashkelon, Gaza, Ekron and what is still left of Ashdod; ·Edom, Moab and the Ammonites; ·(all) the kings of Tyre, (all) the 21, 22 kings of Sidon, the kings of the island across the sea; [h] ·Dedan, Tema, Buz, all the 23 people with shaven temples; [i] ·all the kings of Arabia (and all the kings of 24 the conglomeration of peoples) who live in the desert ·(all the kings of Zimri), [j] 25 all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of Media; ·all the kings of the north, near 26 and far, one after another: in short, all the kingdoms on the face of the earth. (As for the king of Sheshak, [k] he will drink last of all.)

'You will say to them, "Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Drink! 27 Get drunk! Vomit! Fall, never to rise again, before the sword that I am sending among you!" ·If they refuse to take the cup from your hand and drink, you will 28 ↗1 P 4:17 say to them, "Yahweh Sabaoth says this: You must drink! ·Look, for a start, 29
I am bringing disaster on the city that bears my name, so are you likely to go unpunished? You certainly will not go unpunished, for next I shall summon a sword against all the inhabitants of the land, Yahweh declares."

30 'For your part, you are to prophesy all these words to them. Say to them:

"Yahweh roars from on high, Am 1:2+ he thunders from his holy dwelling-place, loudly he roars at his own fold, shouts aloud like those who tread the grape Is 63:3–6 at all the inhabitants of the land.
31 The noise resounds to the remotest parts of the earth.
For Yahweh is indicting the nations, arraigning all humanity for judgement;
the wicked he assigns to the sword, Yahweh declares. l
32 Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
Look, disaster is spreading from nation to nation,
a mighty tempest is rising
from the far ends of the earth.

33 "Those slaughtered by Yahweh that day will be scattered across the world from end to end. No dirge will be raised for them; no one will gather them or bury them; =8:2 they will stay lying on the surface like dung.

34 "Howl, shepherds, shriek, roll on the ground, you lords of the flock, for your days have come to be slaughtered and to be scattered,
and like a choice vase you will fall.
35 No refuge then for the shepherds, no escape for the lords of the flock!
36 Listen! A shriek from the shepherds, a howl from the lords of the flock!
For Yahweh has laid their pasture waste, 37 the peaceful sheepfolds are reduced to silence owing to Yahweh's furious anger.
38 The lion has left his lair m and their country is a wasteland now, owing to the devastating fury, owing to his furious anger." ' in 605 BC, see 36:2, then rewritten and completed, 36:32, see p. 1172. • There are considerable divergences between Hebr. and Gk; with occasional exceptions we follow Hebr. Brackets indicate passages that appear not to be original (several are absent from Gk).

b. According to the religious conception of history shared by the prophets, even idolaters were in God's service, see 42:9; Is 10:5a.

c. Round number for the years of exile, repeated in 29:10 and, in another form, in 27:7. The figure is also found in 2 Ch 36:21 and is the basis for the calculation in Dn 9.

d. This is a sort of preface to the prophecies against the nations, ch. 46–51, the earliest of which must have formed part of the scroll dictated in 605 BC. Gk puts these prophecies immediately after ch. 25; Hebr. places them at the end of the book. • Again, in this section, Hebr. and Gk show differences.

e. 'are to be enslaved' conj.; 'were enslaved' Hebr.

f. The peoples threatened fall into four groups, here named in the order in which they appear in ch. 46–51: 1 Egypt. 2 The Philistines on the west. 3 Edom, Moab, Ammon on the east. 4 Dedan, Tema, Buz to the south-east. Vv. 18–29 were expanded, while the collection of prophecies was taking its present shape, by the addition of the Phoenicians, see 47:4, Elam, see 49:34, and Babylon, see 50–51. • Apparent additions to the text, not found in Gk, are printed in brackets.

g. Uz: between north-western Arabia and Edom, see Gn 36:28; Jb 1:1.

h. Cyprus, but the other Phoenician colonies perhaps as well.

i. Dedan: a North Arabian tribe on the borders of Edom, see 49:8; Is 21:13. Tema: a related clan, Is 21:14. Buz: also in the north-western part of the Arabian peninsula, and related to Uz, Gn 22:21. The 'people with shaven temples' were other Arabs, cf. 9:25.

j. Or perhaps Zimki, which would be a cryptogram for Elam, though, this form of writing being posterior to Jeremiah, the words would be a gloss. If, however, one were to read 'Gimri' as a generic formed from Gomer son of Japheth, Gn 10:2–3, the Cimmerians would be intended.

k. Cryptogram for Babylon.

l. Vv. 30–31, which describe the universal judgement, like Is 66, are perhaps post-exilic.

m. 'The lion' conj.; 'Like the lion' Hebr. The lion may be Yahweh, cf. Is 31:4, or the enemy (Nebuchadnezzar) ready to ravage the country, cf. Jr 2:15. Alternative reading: 'Like the lion, one quits one's lair, since their country . . .' but the abrupt change from sing. to plur. does not favour this.

III: PROPHECIES OF HAPPINESS

A: INTRODUCTION: JEREMIAH THE TRUE PROPHET

Mt 24;26: 59–66 Lk 19:41–44 LXX 33 7:1–15

Arrest and trial of Jeremiah [a]

26 At the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah [b] from Yahweh, 2 'Yahweh says this, "Stand in the court of the Temple of Yahweh. To all the people from the towns of Judah who come to worship in the Temple of Yahweh you will say everything I have ordered Jon 3:10 you to say, not omitting one syllable. 3 Perhaps they will listen and each turn from his evil way: if so, I shall relent and not bring the disaster on them which I intend 44:10,23 Dt 28:15 because of their misdeeds." 4 Say to them, "Yahweh says this: If you will not listen to me and follow my Law which I have given you, 5 and pay attention to the words 7:25–26;11:7–8 of my servants the prophets whom I have never tired of sending to you, although 7:12c you never have paid attention, 6 I shall treat this Temple as I treated Shiloh, and make this city a curse for all the nations of the world." '

The priests and prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah say these words in the Temple of Yahweh. 8 When Jeremiah had finished saying everything that Yahweh had ordered him to say to all the people, the priests and prophets and all the people seized hold of him and said, 'You will die for this! 9 Why have you made this prophecy in Yahweh's name, "This Temple will become like Shiloh, and this city become an uninhabited ruin"?' And the people all crowded in on Jeremiah in the Temple of Yahweh. 10 Hearing of this, the chief men of Judah came up from the royal palace to the Temple of Yahweh and took their seats at the entry of the New Gate of the Temple of Yahweh. [c]

The priests and prophets then said to the chief men and all the people, 'This man Mt 26:65–66par. deserves to die, since he has prophesied against this city, as you have heard with your own ears.' 12 Jeremiah, however, replied to all the chief men and all the people as follows, 'Yahweh himself sent me to prophesy against this Temple and this city all the things you have heard. 13 So now amend your behaviour and actions, listen to the voice of Yahweh your God, and Yahweh will relent about the disaster that he has decreed for you. 14 For myself, I am, as you see, in your hands. Do whatever you please or think right with me. 15 But be sure of this, that if you put me to death, you Mt 27:24–25 will be bringing innocent blood on yourselves, on this city and on its inhabitants, since Yahweh has truly sent me to you to say all this for you to hear.'

The chief men and all the people then said to the priests and prophets, 'This man does not deserve to die: he has spoken to us in the name of Yahweh our God.' 17 And some of the country's elders rose to address all the assembled people. 18 'Micah of Moresheth,' they said, 'who prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, had this to say to all the people of Judah, "Yahweh Sabaoth says this:

Zion will become ploughland, Jerusalem a heap of rubble and the Temple Mount a wooded height." [d]

'Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him to death for this? Did they not rather, fearing Yahweh, plead with him, to such effect that Yahweh relented about the disaster which he had decreed for them? Are we now to burden our souls with such a crime?'

There was another man, too, who used to prophesy in Yahweh's name, Uriah son of Shemaiah, from Kiriath-Jearim. He prophesied exactly the same things against this city and this country as Jeremiah. 21 When King Jehoiakim with all his officers and all the chief men heard what he said, the king was determined to put him to death. On hearing this, Uriah took fright and, fleeing, escaped to Egypt. King Jehoiakim, however, sent [e] Elnathan son of Achbor to Egypt with others, 23 who brought Uriah back from Egypt and took him to King Jehoiakim, who had 24 him put to the sword and his body thrown into the common burial ground. ·But Jeremiah had a protector in Ahikam son of Shaphan,[f] so he was not handed over to the people to be put to death.

B: THE PAMPHLET FOR THE EXILES[a]

The symbolic yoke and the message to the neighbouring kings

18:1a

1 27 (At the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah[b] son of Josiah, king of Judah, LXX 34 2 this word came to Jeremiah from Yahweh:) ·Yahweh said this to me, 'Make 3 yourself thongs and yokes and put them on your neck. ·Then send them to the king of Edom, the king of Moab, the king of the Ammonites, the king of Tyre, and the king of Sidon, through their envoys accredited to Zedekiah king of Judah[c] in 4 Jerusalem. ·Give them the following message for their masters, "Yahweh Sabaoth, 5 God of Israel, says this: You must tell your masters this: ·I by my great power and outstretched arm made the earth, the human beings and the animals that are on 6 earth, and I give them to whom I please. ·For the present, I have handed all these Lk 4:5–6 Rm 13:1 Rv 13:2.4 countries over to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, my servant; I have even put 7 the wild animals at his service. ·(All the nations will serve him, his son and his Jdt 11:7 Ba 3:16–17 your prophets, your diviners, dreamers,[e] magicians and sorcerers, who tell you: 14:14;28:8–9 result of which will be that you will be banished from your soil, that I shall drive 11 you out, and you will perish. ·The nation, however, that is prepared to bend its neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon and serve him, I shall leave in peace on its own soil, Yahweh declares, to farm it and stay on it." ' 12 To Zedekiah king of Judah I spoke in exactly the same terms. 'Bend your necks', I told him, 'to the yoke of the king of Babylon; serve him and his people and you sent them, Yahweh declares, they prophesy untruths to you in my name. The result will be that I shall drive you out, you will perish, and so will the prophets who prophesy to you.'

16 I also spoke to the priests and to all this people as follows, 'Yahweh says this,
"Do not listen to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you as follows:
Look, the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh will very shortly be brought back from 17 Babylon. They prophesy lies to you. ·(Do not listen to them; serve the king of

b. 'to Jeremiah' Syr. and Vet. Lat.; Hebr. and Gk omit.

c. 'the New Gate of the Temple of Yahweh' MSS, versions; 'Yahweh's gate' Hebr. It was a formal trial conducted by royal officials.

e. After 'sent', Hebr. adds; 'people to Egypt.'

f. The king's scribe who had supported the reform under Josiah, 2 K 22:8seq. The family of Shaphan was always well disposed to Jeremiah; Gedaliah grandson of Shaphan, was also to prove the prophet's protector, Jr 40:5–6.

b. 'Zedekiah' conj. following vv. 3, 12 and 28:1; 'Jehoiakim' Hebr.

c. The accession of Psammeticus II in Egypt resulted in an anti-Babylonian coalition (593–592 BC) of these smaller powers; Judah joined them.

remaining in the Temple of Yahweh, in the palace of the king of Judah and elsewhere in Jerusalem: ·They will be carried off to Babylon (and stay there until 22 the day I punish them), Yahweh declares. (Then I shall bring them back and restore them to this place.)" '

14:13–16;23; 9–40 The dispute with Hananiah [a]

LXX 35 28 That same year, at the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in 1 the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Hananiah son of Azzur, a Gibeonite, spoke as follows to Jeremiah [b] in the Temple of Yahweh in the presence of the priests and of all the people, ·"Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, 2
"I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. ·In exactly two years' time I shall 3 bring back all the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from here and carried off to Babylon. ·And I shall also bring 4 back Jeconiah son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah and all the exiles of Judah who have gone to Babylon, Yahweh declares, for I shall break the yoke of the king of Babylon." '

The prophet Jeremiah then replied to the prophet Hananiah in front of the 5 priests and all the people present in the Temple of Yahweh. ·"So be it!' the prophet 6 Jeremiah said, 'May Yahweh do so! May he fulfil the words that you have prophesied and bring all the vessels of the Temple of Yahweh and all the exiles back to this place from Babylon. ·Listen carefully, however, to this word that I am now going 7 to say for you and all the people to hear: ·From remote times, the prophets who 8 preceded you and me prophesied war, disaster and plague for many countries and for great kingdoms; ·the prophet who prophesies peace can be recognised as one 9 Dt 18:21–22 Ezk 2:5;33:33 truly sent by Yahweh only when his word comes true.' [c]

The prophet Hananiah then snatched the yoke off the neck of the prophet 10 Jeremiah and broke it. ·In front of all the people Hananiah then said, 'Yahweh 11 says this, "This is how, in exactly two years' time, I shall break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and take it off the necks of all the nations." ' At this, the prophet Jeremiah went away.

After the prophet Hananiah had broken the yoke he had snatched off the 12 prophet Jeremiah's neck, the word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah, ·"Go to Hananiah 13 and tell him this, "Yahweh says this: You have broken the wooden yokes only to make iron yokes to replace them! ·For Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says 14 this: An iron yoke is what I now lay on the necks of all these nations to enslave them to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. (They will be enslaved to him; I have =27:6 even given him the wild animals.)" '

The prophet Jeremiah said to the prophet Hananiah, 'Listen carefully, Hanan- 15 iah: Yahweh has not sent you; and thanks to you this people is now relying on what is false. ·And so, Yahweh says this, "I am going to send you off the face of the 16 Dt 13:6 earth: you will die this year (since you have preached rebellion against Yahweh)." '

The prophet Hananiah died the same year, in the seventh month. [d] 17

The letter to the exiles

LXX 36 29 This is the text of the letter that the prophet Jeremiah sent from Jerusalem 1 to those who were left of the elders in exile, to the priests, the prophets and all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had deported from Jerusalem to Babylon.

This was after King Jeconiah had left Jerusalem with the queen mother, the eunuchs, the chief men of Judah and Jerusalem, and the blacksmiths and metal-workers. •The letter was entrusted to Elasah son of Shaphan and to Gemariah son of Hilkiah, whom Zedekiah king of Judah had sent to Babylon, to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. [a] The letter said: 2 K 24:12–16

'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this to all the exiles deported from Jerusalem to Babylon: •Build houses, settle down; plant gardens and eat what they produce; •marry and have sons and daughters; choose wives for your sons, find husbands for your daughters so that these can bear sons and daughters in their turn; you must increase there and not decrease. •Work for the good of the city to which I have exiled you; pray to Yahweh on its behalf, since on its welfare yours depends. •For Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Do not be deceived by the prophets who are with you or by your diviners; do not listen to the dreams you have, •since they prophesy lies to you in my name. I have not sent them, Yahweh declares. •For Yahweh says this: When the seventy years granted to Babylon are over, I shall intervene on your behalf and fulfil my favourable promise to you by bringing you back to this place. •Yes, I know what plans I have in mind for you, Yahweh declares, plans for peace, not for disaster, to give you a future and a hope. •When you call to me and come and pray to me, I shall listen to you. •When you search for me, you will find me; when you search wholeheartedly for me, •I shall let you find me (Yahweh declares. I shall restore your fortunes and gather you in from all the nations and wherever I have driven you, Yahweh declares. I shall bring you back to the place from which I exiled you). 25:11c; Dt 4:29–31,30h; 2 Ch 15:2–4; Ws 6:12–13; Is 55:6–9; Am 5:4c

'Since you say: Yahweh has raised up prophets for us in Babylon—•this is what Yahweh says [b] about the king now occupying the throne of David and all the people living in this city, your brothers who did not go with you into exile: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: I am now going to send them sword, famine and plague; I shall make them like rotten figs, so bad as to be uneatable. •I shall pursue them with sword, famine and plague. I shall make them an object of terror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a curse, a thing of horror, scorn and derision to all the nations where I have driven them, •because they have refused to listen to my words, Yahweh declares, although I have persistently sent them all my servants the prophets; but they [c] would not listen, Yahweh declares. But all you exiles, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon, listen to Yahweh's word! 14:14+; 24 =15:4; 7:25–26+

'This is what Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says about Ahab son of Kolaiah, and Zedekiah son of Maaseiah, who prophesy lies to you in my name: I shall hand them over now to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon who will put them to death before your very eyes. •This curse, based on their fate, will be used by all the exiles of Judah in Babylon: May Yahweh treat you like Zedekiah and Ahab, roasted alive by the king of Babylon, •because they have done a scandalous thing in Israel, committing adultery with their neighbour's wives and speaking lying words in my name without orders from me. I know all the same and am witness to it, Yahweh declares.'

28 a. Another biographical chapter relating events contemporaneous with those of the preceding chapter. The year is 593 BC.

b. 'to Jeremiah' conj. demanded by context; 'to me' Hebr.

c. In stating that the prophet foretells disaster, Jeremiah implicitly refers to the sinful conduct of the nation, always condemned by the true prophets. On the criteria of genuine prophecy, see pp. 1159–60.

d. The fulfilment of a short-term prophecy was a sign that the prophet's ministry was from God, cf. 20:6; 29:32; 44:29–30; 45:5; Dt 18:21f.

29 a. Possibly the same mission as in 51:59.

b. Vv. 16–20, missing in Gk, are additional, all the more obviously so since the sentence begun in v. 15 finishes in v. 21.

c. 'they' conj. demanded by context; 'you' Hebr.

Prophecy against Shemaiah

'And to Shemaiah of Nehelam you will speak as follows: ·Yahweh Sabaoth, God 24, 25 of Israel, says this: Since you, on your own initiative, have sent a letter to all the people in Jerusalem, to the priest Zephaniah son of Maaseiah (and to all the priests), saying: ·Yahweh has appointed you priest in place of the priest Jehoiada 26 to keep order in the Temple of Yahweh, to put any crazy fellow posing as a prophet in the stocks and collar, ·why then have you not disciplined Jeremiah of 27 Anathoth, now posing as a prophet to you? ·Why, he has even sent us a message 28 in Babylon, saying: It will be a long time. Build houses, settle down; plant gardens and eat what they produce.'. . .[d]

(Now, after the priest Zephaniah had read this letter to the prophet Jeremiah), 29 the word of Yahweh came then to Jeremiah as follows, ·'Send this message to 30, 31 all the exiles, "This is what Yahweh says about Shemaiah of Nehelam: Since Shemaiah has prophesied to you without my sending him, and since he has caused you to rely on what is false ·for that reason, Yahweh declares, I shall punish 32 Shemaiah of Nehelam and his descendants; no male member of his family will survive among this people to see the happiness that I will bestow on my people =28:16 Dt 13:6 (Yahweh declares, since he has preached rebellion against Yahweh)." '

C: THE BOOK OF CONSOLATION

Promise of recovery for Israel[a]

LXX 37 30 The word which came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, as follows, ·'Yahweh, 1, 2 God of Israel, says this, "Write for yourself in a book all the words I have spoken to you. ·For look, the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when I shall 3 bring back the captives of my people Israel (and Judah), Yahweh says. I shall make them come back and take possession of the country I gave to their ancestors." ' These are the words Yahweh spoke about Israel (and Judah): 4

Yahweh says this: 5
We have heard a cry of panic,
of terror, not of peace.
Now ask and see: 6
can a man bear children?
Then why do I see each man
4:31+ with his hands on his loins like a woman in labour?
Why has every face grown pale?
Disaster! This is the great day, 7 no other like it:
a time of distress for Jacob,
though he will be saved from it.

Is 9:3+ (That day, Yahweh Sabaoth declares, I shall break the yoke now on your neck 8 5:19 and snap your chains; and foreigners will enslave you no more, ·but Israel 9 Ho 3:5 and Judah will serve Yahweh their God, and David their king whom I shall raise up for them.)[b]

=46:27-28 Is 41:8f So do not be afraid, my servant Jacob, 10
Yahweh declares,
Israel, do not be alarmed:
for look, I shall rescue you from distant countries and your descendants from the country where they are captive.
Mi 4:4 Jacob will return and be at peace, secure, with no one to trouble him.

11 For I am with you to save you,
Yahweh declares,
I shall make an end of all the nations
where I have driven you,
but I shall not make an end of you,
only discipline you in moderation, not to let you go quite unpunished.

12 Yes, Yahweh says this:
Your wound is incurable,
your injury past healing.
13 There is no one to plead your cause; for an ulcer there are remedies, Is 1:5–6 but for you no cure at all.
14 All your lovers [c] have forgotten you, 4:30 Lm 1:2
they look for you no more.
Yes, I have struck you as an enemy strikes, with cruel punishment
(because of your great guilt and countless sins).
15 Why cry out about your wound?
Your pain is incurable!
Because of your great guilt and countless sins,
I have treated you like this.
16 But [d] all those who devoured you will be devoured, all your enemies, all, go into captivity, those who despoiled you will be despoiled, Is 33:1
and all who pillaged you be pillaged.
17 For I shall restore you to health and heal your wounds, Yahweh declares, you who used to be called 'Outcast', Is 62:4
'Zion for whom no one cares'. [e]

18 Yahweh says this:
Look, I shall restore the tents of Jacob Is 54:1–3 and take pity on his dwellings:
the town will be rebuilt on its mound, Ps 51:18i
the stronghold where it ought to stand.
19 From them will come thanksgiving and shouts of joy.
I shall make them increase, they will not decrease;
I shall make them honoured, no more to be humbled.

d. The sentence beginning 'Since' in v. 25 is left in suspense. Vv. 24–25 seem to have been tampered with. Gk, which is very different, seems to have found the text embarrassing but is just as unsatisfactory.

30 a. The greater part of the 'Book of Consolation', 30:1–31:22, was written between the reform of 622 BC and the death of Josiah (609 BC). The deuteronomic reform, see 2 K 22:3–23:24, had both stimulated the cult of Yahweh by breaking with the religious syncretism introduced by Manasseh, and revived national aspirations: the decline of Assyria had allowed Josiah to undertake the reconquest of Samaria and Galilee, 2 K 23:15, 19; 2 Ch 35:18. This gave rise to the hope that the exiles of 721 BC might return to a restored kingdom of David. The poems that follow express this hope. Yahweh still loves the Israel of the north, 31:3, 15–20, cf. Ho 11:8–9; he will bring the exiles back to their homes, v. 3; 31:2–14, cf. Ho 10:11; religious unity will be restored with Zion as its centre, 31:6, cf. Is 11:10–16. Later, this promise of return was extended to Judah, conquered and exiled in its turn. Subsequent prophecies, vv. 8–9; 31:1, 23–26, 27–28, with glosses in vv. 3, 4; 31:31, associate Judah with Israel, thus giving the 'Book of Consolation' its final, messianic scope: Israel and Judah will unite, see 3:18h, to serve 'Yahweh their God and David their king', v. 9. This gathering of scattered Israel becomes a major theme of the exilic, Is 43:5seq.; 49:5–6, 12, 18–23; etc.; Ezk 11:17; 20:34; 28:25; 34:12–13; etc. and post-exilic prophets, Zc 10:6–12; see also Jn 11:52.

b. 'the yoke' Gk and Vet. Lat.; 'his yoke' Hebr. • 'enslave you' conj.; 'enslave it' Hebr,; 'enslave them' Gk (which reads: 'their neck . . . their chains'). 'Israel and Judah' supplied; in Hebr. the subject is understood. • These 2 vv. are an addition which, like the words 'and Judah' of vv. 2, 4, was designed to extend the messianic promises to the entire nation (see also the reference to a new David).

c. Here, the nations on whom Israel relied for support, see Ezk 16; 23.

d. 'But' conj.; 'Therefore' Hebr.

e. lit. 'This Zion, she for . . .'; apparently an adaptation, making the Israel of this ch. into the whole community of God's people, and not merely the Northern Kingdom. • Gk 'your booty', presumably for 'our booty', may reflect the original reading (tzadenu, emended to tziyon).

Their sons will be as once they were, 20

a roaring hurricane,
to burst on the heads of the wicked;
Yahweh's burning anger will not turn aside 24
until he has performed, has carried out,
what he has in mind.
In the final days, you will understand this.

LXX 38 3:18h 31 When that time comes, Yahweh declares, I shall be the God of all the 1 families of Israel, and they will be my people.

Yahweh says this: 2

Yes, a day will come when the watchmen shout 6 on the mountains of Ephraim,
'Up! Let us go up to Zion, to Yahweh our God!'[b]

For Yahweh says this: 7
Shout with joy for Jacob!
Hail the chief of nations!
Proclaim! Praise! Shout,
'Yahweh has saved his people,[c]
Is 4:3c the remnant of Israel!'

Watch, I shall bring them back 8

With them, the blind and the lame, all together: a mighty throng will return here!

Ps 126:5–6 Is 40:3d In tears they will return, 9 in prayer I shall lead them.[d] Jn 4:1a I shall guide them to streams of water, by a smooth path where they will not stumble.

lamenting and weeping bitterly:
it is Rachel weeping for her children, [e] 1 S 10:2b refusing to be comforted for her children, because they are no more. [f]
16 Yahweh says this:
Stop your lamenting
dry your eyes,
for your labour will have a reward,
Yahweh declares,
and they will return from the enemy's country.
17 There is hope for your future after all,
Yahweh declares,
your children will return to their homeland.
18 I have indeed heard Ephraim's grieving,

b. Religious unity recovered round the sanctuary of Zion.

c. 'has saved his' Gk, Targ.; 'save thy' Hebr.

d. The text is unexpected and it is tempting to emend, as Gk, to read: 'In tears they went away, consoled I shall bring them back', cf. Ps 126:5–6, though this is probably a correction merely to make an easier text. The tears in question would seem to be tears of repentance.

e. Rachel, wife of Jacob and mother of Joseph, who was himself the father of Ephraim and Manasseh. Her tomb was at Ramah, 1 S 10:2, the modern Er-Ram, 6 miles (10 km) north of Jerusalem, not far from Ephrathah, see Gn 35:19, on the borders of Benjamin, Jos 18:25. Bethlehem, having a clan of Ephrathites, also acquired the name Ephrathah, Mi 5:1, whence the tradition siting Rachel's tomb near Bethlehem (see the gloss on Gn 35:19).

f. 'they are no more' versions; 'we are no more' or 'he is no more' Hebr.

g. lit. 'the thigh', gesture of vexation, sadness, sorrow or remorse, cf. Ezk 21:17.

Promise of restoration to Judah [i]

Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this, 'In the country of Judah and in its 23 towns, they will use these words once more, when I bring their captives home:

"Yahweh bless you,
home of saving justice,
Is 11:9 holy mountain!"

Ps 23:2–3 'And in this country, Judah and all its towns, the ploughmen and those who wander 24 with their flocks, will live together, •for I shall give the weary all they need and 25 satisfy all those whose strength has gone.'

At this, I awoke and saw 26 that my sleep had been sweet to me. [j]

Zc 14:11
↗Rv 22:3

h. A resumption of the loving relationship between Israel and her Husband, Yahweh, see Ho 1:2b. The text has the same messianic scope as Is 54:5seq.

i. This and the following prophecy were pronounced in about 587 BC. See 30:1a.

j. A comment by the prophet, perhaps quoting lines from a popular song.

k. Here Jeremiah refutes a common saying (also refuted by Ezekiel, 18:2), expressing the old principle of collective responsibility: in this context the penalty contracted by all the members of a family for the fault of one. He foretells that a new principle will be applied in the future—Ezekiel was to declare that the time had come already—namely that sinners will be punished individually, see Ezk 14:12d; 18.

l. In vv. 31–34 Jr reaches its highest peak of spirituality. The old covenant has been violated, v. 32, Ezk 16:59, and the attempted reform under Josiah has been short lived: it is evident now that God has other plans. A disaster will ensue, leaving only a 'remnant' of the nation, Is 4:3c, and then an everlasting covenant will be made, v. 31, as in the days of Noah, Is 54:9–10. The former covenantal terms remain; obedience to the Law, and the divine presence bestowing peace and material prosperity, Ezk 36:29–30, this ideal being summed up in the formula: 'I shall be your God and you will be my people', v. 33; 7:23; 11:4; 30:22; 31:1; 32:38; Ezk 11:20; 36:28; 37:27; Zc 8:8; see also Dt 7:6b. But the covenant is 'new' in three respects: 1 God's spontaneous forgiveness of sin, v. 34; Ps 51:1–2, 7; Ezk 36:25, 29. 2 Individual responsibility and retribution, v. 29, see Ezk 14:12d. 3 Interiorisation of religion: the Law is to be no longer a code regulating external activity but an inspiration working on the human heart, v. 33; 24:7; 32:39, under the influence of the Spirit of God, who gives a new heart, Ps 51:10 Ezk 36:26–27, cf. Jr 4:4a, capable of 'knowing' God, Ho 2:22. This new and eternal covenant, proclaimed again by Ezekiel, Ezk 36:25–28, by the closing chapters of Is, Is 55:3; 59:21; 61:8, cf. Ba 2:35, and operative in Ps 51, will be inaugurated by the sacrifice of Christ, Mt 26:28 and par.—and the apostles will proclaim its fulfilment, Rm 11:27; 2 Co 3:6; Heb 8: 6–13; 9:15seq.; 1 Jn 5:20i.

m. 'regulates' hoqeq conj.; 'the laws of' huqqot Hebr.

n. The ruins left by the Babylonians would be rebuilt: the Tower of Hananel on the north-eastern part of the city walls, Ne 3:1; the Corner Gate, on the north-west, 2 K 14:13; the Horse Gate, on the south-east, Ne 3:28. Gareb is not otherwise known; Goah, also appearing only here, may have been situated at the junction of the three valleys: Gehenna, the Tyropoean and the Kidron; the valley of corpses and ashes (lit. 'fatty ashes' of the sacrificial victims, see Lv 1:16; 4:12; 6:3–4) being Gehenna, Jr 7:31; 19:6, which lay south west of Jerusalem, while the Kidron lay to the east. This account of a reconstructed Jerusalem anticipates Ezekiel.

o. 'beside' 'al conj.; 'as far as' 'ad Hebr.

D: ADDITIONS TO THE BOOK OF CONSOLATION

18:1a Jeremiah buys a field in token of future prosperity [a]

LXX 39 32 The word that came to Jeremiah from Yahweh in the tenth year of Zedekiah 1 king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar. ·The 2 army of the king of Babylon was then besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremiah was confined in the Court of the Guard in the king of Judah's palace, where Zedekiah king of Judah had confined him, saying, 'Why do you keep 3 prophesying like this, "Yahweh says this: I am going to hand this city over to the king of Babylon and he will capture it; ·and Zedekiah king of Judah will not escape 4 39:7;52:11 the clutches of the Chaldaeans, but will certainly be handed over to the king of Babylon, speak to him personally and see him face to face. ·He will take Zedekiah 5 away to Babylon and there he will stay (until I attend to him, Yahweh declares. If you fight the Chaldaeans you will not succeed!)" '

Jeremiah said, 'The word of Yahweh has been addressed to me as follows, 6
"Look, Hanamel the son of your uncle Shallum will come to you and say: Buy my 7 field at Anathoth, for you have the right of redemption to purchase it." ·And, as 8 Yahweh had said, my cousin Hanamel came to me, in the Court of the Guard and said, "Buy my field at Anathoth in the territory of Benjamin, for you have the right Nb 35:19c of inheritance and right of redemption; buy it." I knew then that this was Yahweh's order. ·Accordingly, I bought the field from my cousin Hanamel of Anathoth and 9 weighed him out the money: seventeen silver shekels. ·I drew up the deeds and 10 sealed it, called in witnesses and weighed out the money on the scales. ·I then took 11 both the sealed deed of purchase (with its stipulations and clauses) and its open copy ·and handed over the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, son of 12 Mahseiah, in the presence of my cousin [b] Hanamel, of the witnesses who had signed the deed of purchase, and of all the Judaeans who then happened to be in the Court of the Guard. ·In their presence I gave Baruch this order, ·"Yahweh Sabaoth, God 13, 14 of Israel, says this: Take these deeds, the sealed deed of purchase and its open copy, and put them in an earthenware pot, so that they may be preserved for a long time. ·For Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: Houses, fields and vineyards 15 will again be bought in this country."

'After I had entrusted the deed of purchase to Baruch son of Neriah, I prayed to 16 Yahweh as follows, ·"Ah, Lord Yahweh, you made the heavens and the earth by 17 your great power and outstretched arm. To you nothing is impossible. ·You show 18 Ex 34:6–7,6c faithful love to thousands but repay the fathers' guilt in full [c] to their children after them. Great and mighty God, whose name is Yahweh Sabaoth, ·great in purpose, 19 17:10 mighty in deed, whose eyes are open on all human ways, rewarding every individual Ps 33:13–15 as that person's ways and actions deserve! ·You performed signs and 20 wonders in Egypt, as you still do in Israel and among humanity today. You have won the name for yourself which is yours today. ·You brought your people Israel 21 Dt 4:34 out of Egypt with signs and wonders, with mighty hand and outstretched arm and fearsome terror. ·Then you gave them this country which you had promised on 22
Ex 3:8c oath to their ancestors, a country flowing with milk and honey. ·They then entered 23 26:4 it, taking possession of it, but they would not listen to your voice nor follow your Law: they would do nothing you ordered them to do; and so you made this total disaster befall them. ·Look! The earthworks are already in place to take the city 24 and, by means of sword, famine and plague, the city is now within the clutches of the Chaldaeans attacking it. What you said has now come true, as you see. ·Yet 25 you yourself, Lord Yahweh, told me: Buy the field, pay for it, have it witnessed although the city is already in the Chaldaeans' clutches." '

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me [d] as follows, ·'Look, I am Yahweh, 26, 27 32:17 God of all humanity. Is anything impossible to me?
Zc 8:6
Lk 1:37 'So, Yahweh says this, "I shall hand this city over to the Chaldaeans and to 28

29 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and he will capture it; •the Chaldaeans attacking this city will enter it, fire it and burn it to the ground, with the houses on whose roofs incense has been offered to Baal and libations poured to other gods, to 30 provoke my anger. •For the people of Israel and Judah alike have done nothing but what displeases me since they were young. (The people of Israel in fact have 31 done nothing but provoke my anger by their actions, Yahweh declares.) •Yes, from the day when this city was built until today, it has been such cause of anger 32 and wrath to me that I mean to remove it from my sight, •on account of all the wickedness the people of Israel and the people of Judah have done to provoke my anger; they, their kings, their chief men, their priests, their prophets, the people of 33 Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. •They turned to me their backs, never their faces; and though I taught them[e] so urgently, so untiringly, they would not 34 listen and accept correction. •Instead, they set up their Horrors in the Temple that =7:30–31
35 bears my name to defile it, •and built the high places of Baal in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, to burn their sons and daughters alive in honour of Molech: a thing I have Lv 18:21h never ordered, that had never entered my thoughts—that they would cause Judah to sin by anything so loathsome!

36 "So now, this is what Yahweh, God of Israel, says about this city of which you now say:[f] By means of sword, famine and plague, it is already within the king of 37 Babylon's clutches: •Look, I shall gather them in from all the countries where I have driven them in my anger, my fury and great wrath. I shall bring them back to 38 this place and make them live in safety. •Then they will be my people, and I shall 39 be their God. •I shall give them singleness of heart and singleness of conduct so 24:7 that they will always fear me, for their own good and that of their children after 40 them. •I shall make an everlasting covenant with them, never to cease in my efforts 31:31*l*
Dt 30:9
for their welfare, and I shall put respect for me in their hearts, so that they will 41 never turn away from me again. •My joy will lie in them and in doing them good, 42 and I shall plant them firmly in this country, with all my heart and soul. •For Yahweh says this: Just as I have brought this complete and total disaster on this 43 people, so I shall bring them all the good things I have promised them. •Fields will again be bought in this country of which you now say: It is a wasteland without 44 human or animal, already in the clutches of the Chaldaeans. •People will buy fields, pay money, draw up deeds, seal them and have them witnessed in the territory of Benjamin, in the districts round Jerusalem, in the towns of Judah, of the highlands, of the lowlands and of the Negeb. For I shall bring back their captives, Yahweh declares." '

Another promise of recovery[a]

1 33 Jeremiah was still confined to the Court of the Guard when the word of LXX 40 2 Yahweh came to him a second time, as follows, •'Yahweh who made the 3 earth,[b] who formed it and set it firm—Yahweh is his name—says this, •"Call to 29:12 me and I will answer you; I will tell you great secrets of which you know nothing.
4 For this is what Yahweh, God of Israel, says about the houses of this city and the palaces of the kings of Judah which are about to be destroyed by means of the 5 earthworks and the sword; •about those now fighting the Chaldaeans, only to fill the city[c] with corpses, those whom I have slaughtered in my furious anger, those 32 a. The incident, which is given a symbolic interpretation, see 18:1a, took place in 587 BC, when the siege foretold in 34:21–22 had been resumed, vv. 2, 24. The purchase of the field is doubtless connected with the distribution of property for which Jeremiah wanted to go to Anathoth, 37:12. The original, autobiographical text, vv. 6[b]-17[a], 24–29[a], 42–44, seems to have been expanded by an introduction, vv. 1–6[a] a prayer, vv. 17[b]–23 (reminiscent of Ne 9), and a messianic passage, vv. 29[b]-41, resuming themes characteristic of Jeremiah.

b. 'my cousin' (lit. 'the son of my uncle') Gk MSS, Syr., see vv. 7–9; 'my uncle' Hebr. • Baruch was Jeremiah's secretary, see 36:32.

c. lit. 'into the breast'; apparently the expression refers to the custom of carrying provisions in the fold of the gown, Rt 3:15; 2 K 4:39, cf. Is 65:6e. Alternative translation: 'straight to the heart'.

d. 'me' Gk, Vet. Lat., cf. v. 16; 'Jeremiah' Hebr.

e. 'I taught them' versions; 'of teaching' Hebr.

f. 'you' (singular) Gk; 'you' (plural) Hebr. So also in v. 43.

33 a. This prophecy dates from the same period as that of ch. 32.

b. 'who made the earth' Gk; 'who made it; Yahweh' Hebr.

c. 'to fill the city' following Gk ('to fill it'); 'to fill them' Hebr.

whose wickedness has made me hide my face from this city: •Look, I shall bring 6 them [d] remedy and cure; I shall cure them and reveal a new order of peace and loyalty to them. •I shall bring back the captives of Judah and the captives of Israel 7 31:31f and shall rebuild them as before. •I shall cleanse them of all their guilt, by which 8 Ezk 36:25 they have offended me, I shall forgive all their guilty actions, by which they have offended me and rebelled against me. •And, for me, Jerusalem [e] will become a 9 name of joy and praise and pride for all the nations on earth to see; when they hear of all the prosperity that I shall give, they will be seized with fear and trembling at all the prosperity and the peace that I provide for it."

'Yahweh says this, "In this place of which you now say: It is a ruin, without 10 human or animal, in the towns of Judah and desolate streets of Jerusalem where 25:10 there is neither human nor animal, once more will be heard •shouts of rejoicing 11 and mirth, the voices of bridegroom and bride, and the singing of those who bring 1 Ch 16:34 thanksgiving sacrifices to the Temple of Yahweh: Give thanks to Yahweh Sabaoth, Ps 100:5b; 106:1;107:1 for Yahweh is good, for his faithful love is everlasting. For I shall bring back the Ezk 3:11 country's captives, as before, Yahweh says."

[f]'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "In this ruinous place, without human or animal, in 12 all its towns, once again there will be pastures for the shepherds to rest their flocks.
In the towns of the highlands, of the lowlands and the Negeb, in the territory of 13 Benjamin, in the districts round Jerusalem and in the towns of Judah, once again the flocks shall pass under the hand of someone who counts them, Yahweh says.

The institutions of the future [g]

"Look, the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when I shall fulfil the promise of 14 happiness I made to the House of Israel and the House of Judah:

=23:5–6 In those days and at that time, 15
Is 4:2b I shall make an upright Branch grow for David, who will do what is just and upright in the country.
In those days Judah will triumph 16 and Israel live in safety.
And this is the name the city will be called:
Yahweh-is-our-Saving-Justice." [h]

2 S 7:1a 'For Yahweh says this, "David will never lack a male descendant to occupy the 17
Lk 1:32–33 Zc 4:14f throne of the House of Israel, •nor will the levitical priests ever lack male descen- 18
Heb 7:17 1 P 2:5–6 dants to stand before me and offer the burnt offering, to burn the cereal offering Rv 1:6 and offer sacrifice every day." '

31:35–36 The word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah as follows, •'Yahweh says this, "If you 19, 20
Ps 89:33–37 could break my covenant with the day and my covenant with the night so that day 2 S 7:1a and night do not come at their due time, •then my covenant with David my servant 21 might also be broken and he would have no son to reign on his throne, and so also might my covenant with the levitical priests, who are my ministers. •As surely as 22 Gn 15:5 the array of heaven cannot be counted, nor the sand of the sea be measured, so surely shall I increase the heirs of David my servant and the Levites who minister to me." '

The word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah as follows, •'Have you not noticed what 23, 24 these people say, "The two families which Yahweh chose he has now rejected"?
So they despise my people, whom they no longer think of as a nation. •Yahweh 25 says this, "If I have not created day [i] and night and fixed the laws governing heaven and earth, •why, then I shall reject the descendants of Jacob and of David my 26 servant and cease to choose rulers from his descendants for the heirs of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob! For I shall bring back their captives and take pity on them." '

E: MISCELLANEOUS PROPHECIES

The fate of Zedekiah [a]

21:1-7;32:1-5

34 The word came to Jeremiah from Yahweh when Nebuchadnezzar king of Lxx 41 Babylon and his whole army, with all the kingdoms of the earth under his dominion and all the peoples, were waging war on Jerusalem and all its towns, 2 'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah and tell him, Yahweh says this: I am going to hand this city over to the power of the 3 king of Babylon, and he will burn it down. ·And you yourself will not escape his clutches but will certainly be captured and handed over to him. You will see the king of Babylon face to face and speak to him personally. Then you will go to 4 Babylon. ·Even so, listen to the word of Yahweh, Zedekiah king of Judah! This is 5 what Yahweh says about you: You will not die by the sword; ·you will die in peace.
And as spices were burnt for your ancestors, the kings who in times past preceded you, so spices will be burnt for you and a dirge sung for you: Alas for his highness! 22:18
I have spoken, Yahweh declares." ' 6 The prophet Jeremiah repeated all these words to Zedekiah king of Judah in 7 Jerusalem, ·while the army of the king of Babylon was attacking Jerusalem and all such towns of Judah as still held out, namely Lachish and Azekah, these being the only fortified towns of Judah remaining. [b]

The episode of the liberated slaves [c]

8 The word came to Jeremiah from Yahweh after King Zedekiah had made a covenant [d] with all the people in Jerusalem to issue a proclamation freeing their 9 slaves: ·each man was to free his Hebrew slaves, men and women, no one was any 10 longer to keep a brother Judaean in slavery. ·All the chief men and all the people who had entered into the covenant had agreed that everyone should free his slaves, men or women, and no longer keep them as slaves: they had agreed on this and set 11 them free. ·Afterwards, however, they changed their minds, recovered the slaves, men and women, whom they had set free, and reduced them to slavery again.
12, 13 'The word of Yahweh came then to Jeremiah as follows, ·'Yahweh, God of Israel, says this, "I made a covenant with your ancestors when I brought them out of 14 Egypt, out of the house of slavery; it said: ·At the end of seven years each one of Dt 15:12-13 you is to free his brother Hebrew who has sold himself to you: he may be your slave for six years, then you must send him away free. But your ancestors did not 15 listen to me and would not pay attention. ·Now, today you repented and did what pleases me by proclaiming freedom for your neighbour; you made a covenant 16 before me in the Temple that bears my name. ·And then you changed your minds and, profaning my name, each of you has recovered his slaves, men and women, whom you had sent away free to live their own lives, and has forced them to become your slaves again."

d. 'bring them' versions; 'bring it (to the city)' Hebr.
e. lit. 'it'.
f. Vv. 14–26 are absent from Gk.
g. The passage, which is not by Jeremiah, describes the administration of the messianic community as in Zc 4:1–14; 6:13. In the messianic age the functions of king and priest will be closely associated.
h. 'the name' Theod., Hebr. omits (5 MSS excepted). • Vv. 15–16 are a repetition of 23:5–6, but the last couplet glorifies Jerusalem. On the messianic name of Jerusalem, see Is 1:26n; Ezk 48:35.
i. 'created day' bara'ti yom conj.; 'my covenant with day' beriti yomam Hebr.

34 a. This incident must belong to the opening months of the siege, 588–587 BC, when Nebuchadnezzar had not yet concentrated his forces on Jerusalem but was still fighting in the south and south-east, v. 7; Zedekiah still has time to avert the catastrophe by surrendering, like Jehoiakim in 605 BC.
b. Azekah, located at Tell Zakariyeh, about 19 miles (30 km) south west of Jerusalem, and Lachish, Tell ed-Duweir, 12.5 miles (20 km) south west of Azekah, were indeed the two fortified towns to resist Nebuchadnezzar longest. An ostrakon of the period found at Tell ed-Duweir testifies to the resistance.
c. The incident took place during the suspension of the siege, vv. 21–22.
d. Or better, a 'pact' or 'agreement', but the same Hebr. word berit is used for any agreement between two parties, see for instance 2 K 11:4; Jb 31:1, as for the covenant between God and his people, used to point the contrast here at v. 13.
e. Hebr. adds 'from Yahweh'; Gk and Syr. omit.

'So Yahweh says this: "You have disobeyed me, by failing to grant freedom to 17 brother and neighbour. Very well, I in my turn, Yahweh declares, shall leave 29:18 sword, famine and plague free to deal with you and I shall make you an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth. ·As for the people who have broken my 18 covenant, who have not observed the terms of the covenant which they made before me, I shall treat them like the calf that people cut in two to pass between its pieces.[f] ·The chief men of Judah and Jerusalem, the eunuchs, the priests, and all 19 the country people who have passed between the pieces of the calf, ·I shall hand 20 7:33 over to their enemies and those determined to kill them, and their corpses will be food for the birds of the sky and the animals of earth. ·As for Zedekiah king of 21 Judah and his chief men, I shall hand them to their enemies, to those determined to kill them, and to the army of the king of Babylon which has just withdrawn.
Listen, I shall give the order, Yahweh declares, and bring them back to this city to 22 9:10 attack it and capture it and burn it down. And I shall make an uninhabited waste of the towns of Judah." '

The example of the Rechabites[a]

LXX 42 35 The word which came to Jeremiah from Yahweh in the days of Jehoiakim 1 son of Josiah, king of Judah, ·'Go to the clan of the Rechabites and speak 2 to them; bring them into one of the rooms of the Temple of Yahweh and offer them wine to drink.' ·So I took Jaazaniah son of Jeremiah, son of Habazziniah, 3 with his brothers and all his sons, the whole Rechabite clan, ·and brought them to 4 the Temple of Yahweh into the room of Ben-Johanan[b] son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was next to that of the chief men, above the room of Maaseiah son of Shallum, guardian of the threshold. ·I then set pitchers full of wine, and some cups, 5 before the members of the Rechabite clan and said, 'Drink some wine.'
2 K 10:15 But they replied, 'We do not drink wine, because our ancestor Jonadab son of 6 Rechab gave us this order, "You must not drink wine, neither you nor your sons for ever; ·nor must you build houses, sow seed, plant vineyards or own them, but 7 must live in tents all your lives, so that you may live long on the soil to which you are alien." ·We have punctiliously obeyed the orders of our ancestor, Jonadab son 8 of Rechab, never drinking wine ourselves, nor our wives, our sons or our daughters, ·not building houses to live in, owning neither vineyard nor field nor seed, 9 living in tents.[c] We have obeyed the orders of our ancestor Jonadab, respecting 10 them in every particular. ·However, when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon 11 invaded this country, we decided, "We must get away! We will go to Jerusalem to escape the armies of the Chaldaeans and Aramaeans." So that is why we are living in Jerusalem.'

Then the word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah as follows, ·'Yahweh Sabaoth, the 12, 13 God of Israel, says this, "Go and say to the people of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: Will you never learn the lesson and listen to my words, Yahweh demands? ·The words of Jonadab son of Rechab, ordering his sons to drink no 14 wine, have been observed; obedient to their ancestors' command, they drink none even today . But to me, who spoke to you so urgently, so untiringly, you have not 7:13;25:4–7 listened. ·I have urgently and untiringly sent you all my servants the prophets to 15 say: Turn back, each one of you, from your evil behaviour and amend your actions, do not follow other gods to serve them, and you will go on living on the soil I gave to you and your ancestors. But you have not paid attention or listened to me.
Thus the sons of Jonadab son of Rechab have kept the command their ancestor 16 gave them, but this people has not listened to me. ·And so, Yahweh, God 17 Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: Look, on Judah and the citizens of Jerusalem I am going to bring all the disaster which I have decreed for them, because I spoke to them and they would not listen, called to them and they would not answer." '

Then Jeremiah said to the Rechabite clan, 'Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, 18 says this, "Because you have obeyed the orders of your ancestors Jonadab and observed all his rules and done everything he ordered you to do, ·therefore, 19

Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Jonadab son of Rechab will never lack a male descendant to stand before me [d] for ever." '

IV: THE SUFFERINGS OF JEREMIAH

The scroll written in 605–604 BC [a]

36 In the fourth year of Jehoiakim [b] son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word LXX 43 came to Jeremiah from Yahweh, •'Take a scroll and on it write all the words I have spoken to you about Israel, Judah and all the nations, from the day I first spoke to you, in the time of Josiah, until today. •Perhaps when the House of Judah hears about all the disaster I intend to inflict on them, they will turn, each one of then, from their evil behaviour, so that I can forgive their sinful guilt.' Jeremiah then summoned Baruch son of Neriah, who at his dictation wrote down on the scroll all the words Yahweh had spoken to him. [c] Jeremiah then gave Baruch this order, 'As I am prevented from entering the 20:1–2 Temple of Yahweh, •you yourself must go and, from the scroll you wrote at my dictation, read all Yahweh's words to the people in his Temple on the day of the fast, and in this way you can read them in the hearing also of all the Judaeans who come in from their towns. •Perhaps their prayers will move Yahweh and they will turn one and all from their evil behaviour, for great is the furious anger with which Yahweh has threatened this people.' •Baruch son of Neriah duly carried out the order that the prophet Jeremiah had given him, to read all Yahweh's words from the book in his Temple.
Now, in the fifth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah, in the ninth month, [d] all the people of Jerusalem and all the people who could get to Jerusalem from the towns of Judah were summoned to a fast before Yahweh. •Baruch then read Jeremiah's words from the book; this happened in the room of Gemariah son of the scribe Shaphan, in the upper court at the entry of the New Gate of the 26:24f Temple of Yahweh, where all the people could hear.
Micaiah son of Gemariah, son of Shaphan, having heard all Yahweh's words read from the book, •went down to the royal palace, to the scribe's room. All the chief men were in session: the scribe Elishama, Delaiah son of Shemaiah, Elnathan son of Achbor, Gemariah son of Shaphan, Zedekiah son of Hananiah and all the other chief men; •and to them Micaiah reported all the words he heard as Baruch was reading the book aloud to the people. •The chief men then by common consent sent Jehudi son of Netaniah to Baruch, with Shelemiah [e] son of Cushi, to say, 'Come, and bring the scroll with you which you have been reading to the people.'
Bringing the scroll with him, Baruch son of Neriah appeared before them. 'Sit down,' they said, 'and read it out.' So Baruch read it to them. •Having heard all the words they turned to one another in alarm and said to Baruch, 'We must certainly inform the king of this.' •They then questioned Baruch, 'Tell us', they said, 'how you came to write all these words.' [f] •'Jeremiah dictated them all [g] to me,' Baruch replied, 'and I wrote them down in ink in this book.' •The chief men said to Baruch, 19

'You and Jeremiah had better go into hiding; and do not tell anyone where you are.' •Whereupon they went off to the king in the palace court, depositing the 20 scroll in the room of the scribe Elishama. They then informed the king of the whole affair.

The king sent Jehudi for the scroll, and he brought it from the room of the scribe 21
Elishama and read it to the king and all the chief men standing round the king.
The king was sitting in his winter apartments—it was the ninth month—with a 22 fire burning in a brazier [h] in front of him. •Each time Jehudi had read three or four 23 columns, the king cut them off with a scribe's knife and threw them into the fire in the brazier until the whole of the scroll had been burnt in the brazier fire. •But in 24 spite of hearing all these words, neither the king nor any of his courtiers took alarm or tore their clothes; •and although Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had urged 25 the king not to burn the scroll he would not listen to them, •but ordered the king's 26 son [i] Jerahmeel and Seraiah son of Azriel and Shelemiah son of Abdeel to arrest the scribe Baruch and the prophet Jeremiah. But Yahweh had hidden them.

Then the word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah, after the king had burnt the scroll 27 containing the words Baruch had written at Jeremiah's dictation, •'Take another 28 scroll and write down all the words that were written on the first scroll burnt by Jehoiakim king of Judah. •And as regards Jehoiakim king of Judah, you are to say, 29
"Yahweh says this: You have burnt that scroll, saying: Why have you written down: The king of Babylon will certainly come and lay this country waste and leave it without human or animal? •So, this is what Yahweh says about Jehoiakim king 30 of Judah: He will have no one to occupy the throne of David, and his corpse will be tossed out to the heat of the day and the frost of the night. •I shall punish him, 31 his offspring and his courtiers for their guilt; on them, on the citizens of Jerusalem and on the people of Judah I shall bring the total disaster which I had decreed for them but to which they have paid no attention." '

Jeremiah then took another scroll and gave it to the scribe Baruch son of Neriah, 32 who in it at Jeremiah's dictation wrote all the words of the book that Jehoiakim king of Judah had burnt, with many similar words in addition.

A verdict on Zedekiah

LXX 44 13:18–19; 22:20–30

37 Zedekiah son of Josiah became king, succeeding Coniah son of Jehoiakim. 1 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had made him king of Judah. •But neither 2 he nor his courtiers nor the people of the country paid any attention to the words Yahweh spoke through the prophet Jeremiah.

Zedekiah consults Jeremiah during the respite of 588 BC

King Zedekiah sent Jehucal son of Shelemiah and the priest Zephaniah son of 3 42:2b Maaseiah to the prophet Jeremiah with this message, 'Intercede for us with Yahweh our God.' •Now Jeremiah was still moving freely among the people: he 4 had not yet been put in prison. •Meanwhile Pharaoh's army was on the move from 5 Egypt and the Chaldaeans besieging Jerusalem had raised the siege when they heard the news.

Then the word of Yahweh came to the prophet Jeremiah as follows, •'Yahweh, 6, 7 God of Israel, says this, "To the king of Judah who sent you to consult me make this reply: Is Pharaoh's army marching to your aid? It will withdraw to its own country, Egypt. •The Chaldaeans will return to attack this city; they will capture it 8 and burn it down. •Yahweh says this: Do not cheer yourselves up by thinking: The 9 Chaldaeans are leaving us for good. They are not leaving. •Even if you cut to pieces 10 the whole Chaldaean army now fighting against you until there were only the wounded left, they would stand up again, each man in his tent, to burn this city down." '

The arrest of Jeremiah. Improvement in his treatment

11 At the time when the Chaldaean army, threatened by Pharaoh's [a] army, had raised 12 the siege of Jerusalem, ·Jeremiah set out from Jerusalem for the territory of 32:1a 13 Benjamin to see about a piece of his property among the people there. [b] ·He was at the Benjamin Gate when the guard commander there, a certain Irijah son of Shelemiah, son of Hananiah, arrested the prophet Jeremiah, shouting, 'You are 14 deserting to the Chaldaeans!' ·'It is a lie!' Jeremiah answered. 'I am not deserting to the Chaldaeans.' But Irijah would not listen to Jeremiah and took him under 15 arrest to the chief men. ·And the chief men, furious with Jeremiah, had him beaten and shut up in the house of the scribe Jonathan, which had been turned into a 16 prison. ·Thus Jeremiah found himself in an underground vault. And there for a long time he stayed.
17 Later, King Zedekiah had him sent for, and the king questioned him privately in his palace. 'Is there any word from Yahweh?' he asked. 'There is,' Jeremiah 18 answered, and added, 'you will be handed over to the king of Babylon.' ·Jeremiah then said to King Zedekiah, 'What wrong have I done you, or your courtiers or this 19 people, for you to have put me in prison? ·Where are your prophets now who 20 prophesied, "The king of Babylon will not attack you or this country"? ·So now I beg you to hear me, my lord king! I beg you to approve my request! Do not have 21 me taken back to the house of the scribe Jonathan, or I shall die there.' ·King Zedekiah then gave an order, and Jeremiah was confined in the Court of the Guard and given a loaf of bread a day from the Street of the Bakers as long as there was bread left in the city. So Jeremiah stayed in the Court of the Guard.

Jeremiah is thrown into the storage-well. Ebed-Melech intervenes

1 38 But Shephatiah son of Mattan, Gedaliah son of Pashhur, Jucal son of LXX 45
Shelemiah and Pashhur son of Malchiah heard the words which Jeremiah 2 was saying to all the people, ·'Yahweh says this, "Anyone who stays in this city will =21:9 die by sword, famine or plague; but anyone who leaves it and surrenders to 3 the Chaldaeans will live; he will escape with his life. ·Yahweh says this: This city 39:18;45:5 will certainly be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon, and he will capture it." '
4 The chief men then said to the king, 'You must have this man put to death: he is unquestionably disheartening the remaining soldiers in the city, and all the people too, by talking like this. This man is seeking not the welfare of the people but their 5 ruin.' ·'He is in your hands as you know,' King Zedekiah answered, 'for the king is 6 powerless to oppose you.' [a] ·So they took Jeremiah and put him into the storage-well of the king's son Malchiah in the Court of the Guard, letting him down with ropes. There was no water in the storage-well, only mud, and into the mud Jeremiah sank.
7 But Ebed-Melech the Cushite, [b] a eunuch attached to the palace, heard that Jeremiah had been put into the storage-well. As the king was sitting in the 8 Benjamin Gate, ·Ebed-Melech came out from the palace and spoke to the king.
9 'My lord king,' he said, 'these men have done a wicked thing by treating the prophet Jeremiah like this: they have thrown him into the storage-well. He will 10 starve to death there, since there is no more food in the city.' ·At this the king gave Ebed-Melech the Cushite the following order: 'Take thirty men with you from here and pull the prophet Jeremiah out of the storage-well before he dies.' 11 Ebed-Melech took the men with him and went into the palace to the Treasury

Jeremiah did this. ·Then they hauled Jeremiah up with the ropes and pulled him 13

The last conversation between Jeremiah and Zedekiah

King Zedekiah had the prophet Jeremiah summoned to him at the third entrance 14 to the Temple of Yahweh. 'I want to ask you for a word,' the king said to Jeremiah, 'keep nothing back from me.' ·Jeremiah answered Zedekiah, 'If I do proclaim it to 15 you, are you not sure to have me put to death? And if I give you advice, you will not listen to me.' ·King Zedekiah then secretly swore this oath to Jeremiah, 'As 16 Yahweh lives, giver of this life of ours, I will have you neither put to death nor handed over to these men who are determined to kill you.' ·Jeremiah then said to 17 Zedekiah, 'Yahweh, God Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this, "If you go out and surrender to the king of Babylon's generals, your life will be safe and this city will not be burnt down; you and your family will survive. ·But if you do not go out and 18 surrender to the king of Babylon's generals, this city will be handed over to the Chaldaeans and they will burn it down; nor will you yourself escape their clutches." ' ·King Zedekiah then said to Jeremiah, 'I am afraid of the Judaeans 19 who have already gone over to the Chaldaeans: I might be handed over to them and they would ill-treat me.' ·'You will not be handed over to them,' Jeremiah 20 replied. 'Please listen to Yahweh's voice as I have relayed it to you, and then all will go well with you and your life will be safe. ·But if you refuse to surrender, this 21 is what Yahweh has shown me: ·the sight of all the women left in the king of 22 Judah's palace being led off to the king of Babylon's generals and saying:

"They have misled you, they have triumphed over you,
those friends of yours![d]
Your feet have sunk in the mud!
They are up and away!"

'Yes, all your wives and children will be led off to the Chaldaeans, and you yourself 23 will not escape their clutches but will be a prisoner in the clutches of the king of Babylon. And as for this city, it will be burnt down.'[e]

Zedekiah then said to Jeremiah, 'Do not let anyone else hear these words or you 24 will die. ·If the chief men hear that I have been talking to you, and come and say, 25
"Tell us what you said to the king and what the king said to you;[f] keep nothing back from us, or we shall put you to death," ·you must reply, "I presented this 26 request to the king: that he would not have me sent back to Jonathan's house to die." '

And in fact all the chief men came to Jeremiah and questioned him. He told 27 them exactly what the king had ordered him to say. They then left him in peace, since the conversation had not been overheard. ·And Jeremiah stayed in the Court 28 of the Guard until the day Jerusalem was captured. And he was there when Jerusalem actually was captured.

The fall of Jerusalem and what happened to Jeremiah[a]

LXX 46 52:4seq. 2 K 25:1–21

39 In the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month,[b] Nebu- 1 chadnezzar king of Babylon advanced on Jerusalem with his entire army, and they laid siege to it. ·In the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month,[c] 2 a breach was made in the city wall.

The king of Babylon's officials, all having made their entry, took their seats 3 in the Middle Gate: Nergal-Sharezer, Samgar-Nebo, Sar-Sechim a high dignitary of state, Nergal-Sharezer the chief astrologer, and all the king of Babylon's other officials . . .[d]

4 On seeing them, Zedekiah king of Judah and all the fighting men fled, leaving the city under cover of dark, by way of the king's garden through the gate between 5 the two walls, and made their way towards the Arabah.[e] ·But the Chaldaean troops pursued them and caught up with Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. They captured him and took him to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon at Riblah in the 6 territory of Hamath,[f] where he passed sentence on him. ·The king of Babylon had Zedekiah's sons slaughtered before his eyes at Riblah; the king of Babylon also 7 had all the leading men of Judah put to death. ·He then put out Zedekiah's eyes 8 and, loading him with chains, carried him off to Babylon. ·The Chaldaeans burnt down the royal palace and the private houses,[g] and demolished the walls of 9 Jerusalem. ·Nebuzaradan commander of the guard deported the remainder of the population left behind in the city, the deserters who had gone over to him, and the 10 rest of the artisans[h] to Babylon. ·But Nebuzaradan commander of the guard left some of the poor people behind in the country of Judah, those who had nothing, at the same time giving them vineyards and fields.
11 With regard to Jeremiah, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had given the follow-12 ing orders to Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, ·'Take him, look after him; do him no harm, but treat him as he may ask you.' 13 He entrusted this mission[i] to (Nebuzaradan commander of the guard,) Nebush-azban the high dignitary of state, Nergal-Sharezer the chief astrologer and all the king of Babylon's other officials.
14 These despatched men to take Jeremiah from the Court of the Guard and turned him over to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan for safe conduct home. So he remained among the people.

A prophecy assuring the safety of Ebed-Melech[j]

45:1–5

15 While Jeremiah was confined in the Court of the Guard, the word of Yahweh came 16 to him as follows, ·'Go and say to Ebed-Melech the Cushite, "Yahweh, God of Israel says this: Look, I am about to perform my words about this city for its ruin 17 and not for its prosperity. That day they will come true before your eyes. ·But I shall rescue you that day, Yahweh declares, and you will not be handed over to the 18 hands of the men you fear. ·Yes, I shall certainly rescue you: you will not fall to the 21:9;38:2 sword; you will escape with your life, because you have put your trust in me, Yahweh declares." '

39 a. The text of this section is composed of disparate, ill-assorted elements. The Greek version lacks 38:28[b] and 39:4–13. Apparently, to the original biographical elements relating to Jeremiah, 38:28[b]; 39:3, 14, were added, first, 39:1–2, the account of the siege from the start to the opening of the breach, as in 2 K 25:1–4[a] (Jr 52:4–7[a]) which exists also in Gk; next, 39:4–10, an account of the end of the siege and of what followed it, which is an abridgement of 2 K 25:4[b]–7, 9–12 (Jr 52:7[b]–16); and finally, 39:11–13 with its information on the prophet's release.

b. December 589–January 588 BC, at the end of the 9th year of Zedekiah's reign.

c. June–July 587 BC.

d. Difficult v.: the text seems to be confused. The repetition of the name Nergal-Sharezer is suspect; the 'high dignitary of state' (lit. 'chief eunuch,' though the term often has the wider sense of court official) is called Nebushazban in v. 13. Furthermore, the names Samgar-Nebo and Sar-Sekim are dubious and appear only here. Some suggest emending samgar to 'prince of Sin-Magir' (appearing on a Babylonian list) and nebo to Nebushazban,' also suppressing sar-sekim (which may be a title and doublet of 'high dignitary of state') and one mention of Nergal-Sharezer. But these emendations, which would indeed make the whole passage more coherent, have no textual support.

e. '(they) made' Syr., cf. 52:7; '(he) made' Hebr. • The king's garden was near the pool of Siloam, see 2 K 25:4d; Ne 3:15, south east of Jerusalem. The Arabah (lit. 'plain') is that part of the Jordan depression between the south end of the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba; here, in a more general sense, the area, 'wastelands' or 'plain', near the Dead Sea, see v. 5.

f. Modern Rableh, 47 miles (75 km) south of Hamath, modern Hama, a town in Syria on the River Orontes.

g. lit. 'the houses of the people' Syr.; 'the house of the people' Hebr.; perhaps the reading ought to be 'the House (of Yahweh and the houses) of the people,' corresponding to 52:13 and 2 K 25:9.

h. 'artisans' conj., cf. 52:15; 'people' Hebr., which adds 'who were left'.

i. Trans. uncertain: lit. 'he despatched', but perhaps it should be understood as 'Nebuzaradan . . . Nebushazban . . . despatched (men)'. This seems to be due to a clumsy joining of the v. to v. 14, which originally seems to have followed v. 3. • Nebuzaradan did not in fact enter Jerusalem until a month after the city had fallen, see 2 K 25:8.

j. This passage continues the narrative of 38:7–13.

Further details about the treatment of Jeremiah

LXX 47 40 The word which came to Jeremiah from Yahweh after Nebuzaradan com- 1 mander of the guard had released him from Ramah, where he had found him in chains with all the other captives from Jerusalem and Judah who were being deported to Babylon: [a]

The commander of the guard took Jeremiah and said to him, 'Yahweh your God 2 foretold calamity for this country, ·and now he has brought it. He has done what 3 he threatened to do, because you had sinned against Yahweh and would not listen to his voice; so all this has happened to you. ·Look, today I am having your hands 4 unchained. If you like to come with me to Babylon, come: I shall look after you. If you do not want to come with me to Babylon, do not. Look, you have the whole country before you: go wherever you think it best and most suitable to go.' ·And 5 before Jeremiah retired, he added, 'You can go back to Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon has appointed governor of the towns of Judah, and stay with him among the people, or go anywhere else you think suitable.' With that, the commander of the guard gave him provisions and a present, and dismissed him. ·Jeremiah went to Mizpah, to Gedaliah [b] son of 6 Ahikam and stayed with him, among those people still left in the country.

‖2 K 25:22–26 Gedaliah the governor; his assassination

When the military leaders who with their men were still in the field, all heard that 7 the king of Babylon had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam as governor of the country, making him responsible for the men, women and children, and those of the poor country people who had not been deported to Babylon, ·they came to 8 Gedaliah at Mizpah: Ishmael son of Nethaniah, Johanan and Jonathan sons of Kareah, Seraiah son of Tanhumeth, the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, Jezaniah son of the Maacathite, they and their men. ·To them and to their men Gedaliah 9 son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, swore an oath. 'Do not be afraid', he said, 'of serving the Chaldaeans, stay in the country, serve the king of Babylon, and all will go well with you. ·I for my part, as the man answerable to the Chaldaeans when 10 they come to us, shall stay here at Mizpah, whereas you can harvest the wine, summer fruit and oil, fill your storage jars and settle in the towns which you have seized.'

Similarly, when all the Judaeans living in Moab, with the Ammonites, in Edom 11 Is 4:3c and elsewhere, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Judah and had appointed Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan as their governor, ·the Ju- 12 daeans all came back from wherever they had been driven. On their return to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah at Mizpah, they harvested an immense quantity of wine and summer fruit.

Now Johanan son of Kareah and all the military leaders still in the field, came to 13
Gedaliah at Mizpah ·and said to him, 'Are you aware that Baalis king of the 14 Ammonites has sent Ishmael son of Nethaniah to assassinate you?' [c] But Gedaliah son of Ahikam would not believe them. ·Johanan son of Kareah then spoke in 15 secret to Gedaliah at Mizpah, as follows: 'Please let me go and kill Ishmael son of Nethaniah, and no one will be any the wiser. Why should he assassinate you and cause the dispersal of all the Judaeans who have rallied round you. Why should the remnant of Judah perish?' ·But Gedaliah son of Ahikam replied to Johanan son of 16 Kareah, 'You will do no such thing, for what you say about Ishmael is false.'

LXX 48 41 In the seventh month, however, Ishmael son of Nethaniah son of Elishama, 1 who was of royal descent, came with officers of the king and ten men to Gedaliah son of Ahikam at Mizpah. And as they were taking their meal together, there at Mizpah, ·Ishmael son of Nethaniah stood up with his ten men, and 2 attacking Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, with their swords, they killed the man whom the king of Babylon had made governor of the country. ·And all 3 the Judaeans who were with him, that is with Gedaliah at Mizpah, and the Chaldaean soldiers who happened to be there, Ishmael killed too. [a]

4 On the day after the murder of Gedaliah, before the news had become known, 5 eighty men arrived from Shechem, Shiloh and Samaria, with their beards shaved off, their clothing torn, and covered in self-inflicted gashes; they were bringing cereal offerings and incense with them to present to the Temple of Yahweh.[b] 6 Ishmael son of Nethaniah went out of Mizpah to meet them, weeping as he went.
7 When he met them he said, 'Come to Gedaliah son of Ahikam.' ·But once they were well inside the town, Ishmael son of Nethaniah slaughtered them, with the 8 help of his men, and had them thrown into the storage-well.[c] ·There were ten of them, however, who said to Ishmael, 'Do not kill us: we have stocks of wheat and barley, oil and honey, hidden away in the fields.' So he spared them and did not kill 9 them with their brothers. ·The storage-well into which Ishmael threw the corpses of all the men he had killed was a large one,[d] the one which King Asa had built as 1 K 15:16–22 a precaution against Baasha king of Israel. Ishmael son of Nethaniah filled it with 10 the murdered men. ·Ishmael then took all the rest of the people prisoner who were at Mizpah, the king's daughters and all the remaining people in Mizpah, whom Nebuzaradan, commander of the guard, had entrusted to Gedaliah son of Ahikam.
Ishmael son of Nethaniah took them prisoner and set out, intending to cross over to the Ammonites.
11 When Johanan son of Kareah and all the military leaders who were with him 12 heard about all the crimes committed by Ishmael son of Nethaniah, ·they mustered all their men and set out to attack Ishmael son of Nethaniah. They caught up with 13 him at the great Pool of Gibeon.[e] ·At the sight of Johanan son of Kareah and all 14 the military leaders with him, all the people with Ishmael were delighted. ·All the people whom Ishmael had taken as prisoners from Mizpah turned about, went 15 back and joined Johanan son of Kareah. ·Ishmael son of Nethaniah, however, 16 escaped from Johanan with eight of his men and fled to the Ammonites. ·Johanan son of Kareah and all the military leaders with him then rallied all the remaining people whom Ishmael son of Nethaniah had taken as prisoners[f] from Mizpah after killing Gedaliah son of Ahikam: men—fighting men—women, children and eu-17 nuchs, whom they brought back from Gibeon. ·Setting off, they made a halt at 18 Khan Kimham near Bethlehem, intending to go on to Egypt, ·to get away from the 2 K 25:26 Chaldaeans. They were now terrified of them, since Ishmael son of Nethaniah had killed Gedaliah son of Ahikam whom the king of Babylon had made governor of the country.

The flight to Egypt

1 42 Then all the military leaders, in particular Johanan son of Kareah and LXX 49
Azariah[a] son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from least to greatest, ap-2 proached ·the prophet Jeremiah and said, 'Please hear our petition and intercede[b] with Yahweh your God for us and for all this remnant—and how few of us are left Is 4:3c 3 out of many, your own eyes can see—·so that Yahweh your God may show us the 4 way we are to go and what we must do.' ·The prophet Jeremiah replied, 'I hear you; I will indeed pray to Yahweh your God as you ask; and whatever answer 40 a. There are evident gaps in the group of biographical narratives about Jeremiah. He was released in Jerusalem, 39:14, but here we find him among the captives at Ramah, see 31:15e. This second account must follow 39:11–12.

b. Mizpah, probably modern Tell en-Nasbah, 8 miles (13 km) north of Jerusalem, and a former Israelite sanctuary, see Jg 20:1; 1 S 7:5; 10:17. • Gedaliah came of a family of a high Judaean officials who were well-disposed towards Jeremiah, 26:24f.

c. Baalis was still holding out against Nebuchadnezzar and presumably felt further threatened by Gedaliah's submissiveness. • Ishmael, an army officer of Davidic descent, v. 8, no doubt regarded Gedaliah as a political upstart.

41 a. The anniversary of this event (September 587) was celebrated in subsequent years, see Zc 7:5; 8:19.

b. Evidently Jerusalem was still regarded as the religious centre by many Israelites of the Northern Kingdom, or at least had regained this status since the reform under Josiah, 2 K 23:19–20. The fall of Jerusalem has not put an end to Temple worship.

c. 'had them thrown' Syr.; Hebr. omits, but see v. 9. • The motive for the massacre is not clear: possibly theft, see v. 8, or concealment of Gedaliah's assassination.

d. lit. 'a large storage-well' Gk; 'by the hand of Gedaliah' Hebr.

e. Modern El-Jib, about 6 miles (10 km) north west of Jerusalem.

f. 'whom (Ishmael) had taken as prisoners' 'asher shabah 'otam conj., see v. 10seq., 'whom he (Johanan) had recovered from (Ishmael)' 'asher heshib me'et Hebr.

42 a. 'Azariah' Gk and 43:2; (Jezaniah) Hebr.; but perhaps he should be identified with the Jezaniah of 40:8.

b. Jeremiah here, and cf. 15:11; 2 M 15:14, plays the part of intercessor like Moses, Ex 32:11.

Yahweh your God gives you, I will tell you, keeping nothing back from you.'
They in their turn said to Jeremiah, 'May Yahweh be a true and faithful witness 5 against us, if we do not follow the instructions that Yahweh your God sends us through you. ·Whether we like it or not, we shall obey the voice of Yahweh our 6 God to whom we are sending you, so that we may prosper by obeying the voice of Yahweh our God.'

Ten days later the word of Yahweh came to Jeremiah. ·He then summoned 7, 8 Johanan son of Kareah and all the military leaders who were with him, and all the people from least to greatest, ·and said, 'Yahweh, God of Israel, to whom you 9 deputed me to present your petition says this, ·"If you will only stay[c] in this 10 1:10 country, I shall build you and not overthrow you; I shall plant you and not uproot you, for I am sorry about the disaster I have inflicted on you. ·Do not be afraid of 11 the king of Babylon, whom you fear now; do not fear him, Yahweh declares, for I am with you to save you and rescue you from his clutches. ·I shall take pity on 12 you, so that he pities you and lets you return to your native soil. ·But if you say: 13
We will not stay in this country; if you disobey the voice of Yahweh your God, and say: No, Egypt is where we shall go, where we shall not see war or hear the 14 trumpet-call or go short of food; that is where we want to live; ·in that case, 15 remnant of Judah, listen to Yahweh's word: Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: If you are determined to go to Egypt, and if you do go and settle there, ·the 16 sword you fear will overtake you there in Egypt, and there you will die. ·Yes, all 17 those who are determined to go to Egypt and settle there, will die by sword, famine and plague: not a single one of them will survive or escape the disaster I shall inflict on them. ·Yes, Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this: Just as my furious 18 anger was poured out on the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so will my fury be poured 24:9 out on you if you go to Egypt: you will become an object of execration and horror, a curse, a laughing-stock; and you will never see this place again." ·[d]Remnant of 19 Judah, Yahweh has told you, "Do not go into Egypt." Understand clearly that today I have given you a solemn warning. ·You were not being sincere when you 20 sent me to Yahweh your God and said, "Intercede for us with Yahweh our God; tell us exactly what Yahweh our God says and we will do it." ·Today I have told 21 you, but you have not obeyed the voice of Yahweh your God or any part of the message he sent me to give you. ·So understand this clearly: you will die by sword, 22 famine and plague in the place where you want to go and settle.'

LXX 50 43 When Jeremiah had finished telling all the people all the words of Yahweh 1 their God, which Yahweh their God had sent him to tell them—all the words quoted above—·Azariah son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan son of Kareah, and 2 all those arrogant men, said to Jeremiah, 'You are lying. Yahweh our God did not send you to say, "Do not go to Egypt and settle there." ·It was Baruch son of 3 Neriah, who keeps inciting you against us, to hand us over to the Chaldaeans so that they can put us to death or deport us to Babylon.'

So neither Johanan nor any of the military leaders nor any of the people obeyed 4 the voice of Yahweh by staying in the country of Judah. ·Instead, Johanan son of 5 Kareah and all the military leaders led off the entire remnant of Judah, those who had come back from all the nations where they had been driven to live in the country of Judah: ·men, women, children, the royal princesses too, and every 6 single person that Nebuzaradan commander of the guard had left with Gedaliah son of Ahikam, son of Shaphan, including the prophet Jeremiah and Baruch son of Neriah. ·And so, in disobedience to the voice of Yahweh, they reached Egypt and 7 arrived at Tahpanhes.[a]

Jeremiah foretells the invasion of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar

At Tahpanhes the word of Yahweh was addressed to Jeremiah as follows, ·'Take 8, 9 some large stones and bury them in the cement on the terrace outside the entrance of Pharaoh's palace in Tahpanhes, where the Judaeans can see you.[b] ·Then say to 10 them, "Yahweh, God of Israel, says this: Look, I shall send for my servant

Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and he [c] will place his throne on these stones I 25:9;27:6 11 have buried, and spread his canopy above them. ·When he comes, he will defeat Egypt:

Those for the plague, to the plague; =15:2
those for captivity, to captivity;
those for the sword, to the sword!

12 "He will set fire [d] to the temples of the gods of Egypt; he will burn these gods or take them prisoner; like a shepherd wrapping his cloak round him, so he will wrap 13 Egypt round him, and then leave without anyone laying hands on him. ·He will break the obelisks of the temple of the Sun in Egypt, [e] and burn down the temples of the gods of Egypt." '

The last episode of Jeremiah's ministry:
the Judaeans in Egypt and the Queen of Heaven

1 44 The word that came to Jeremiah for all the Judaeans living in Egypt, those, LXX 51:1–30 that is, living in Migdol, Tahpanhes, Noph and the territory of Pathros. [a] 2 'Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this, "You have seen all the disaster I have brought on Jerusalem and all the towns of Judah; today they lie in ruins and 3 uninhabited. ·This was because of the wicked deeds they committed to provoke my anger, by going and offering incense and serving other gods whom neither they, 4 nor you, nor your ancestors knew anything about, ·although I urgently and untiringly sent you all my servants the prophets to say: You must not do this 7:25–26+ 5 loathsome thing, which I hate. ·But they would not listen or pay attention, and 6 turn from their wickedness and stop offering incense to other gods. ·And so my furious anger overflowed, burning down the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, which were reduced to ruins and wasteland, as they still are today.
7 And now, Yahweh, God Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: Why bring complete disaster on yourselves by cutting yourselves off from Judah—your men, women, 8 children and babes in arms—so as to leave yourselves no remnant, ·by provoking Is 4:3c my wrath by your actions, offering incense to other gods in Egypt where you have come to settle, as though bent on your own destruction and on becoming a curse 42:18 9 and a laughing-stock for all the nations of the earth? ·Have you forgotten the wicked deeds of your ancestors, of the kings of Judah and of your princes, [b] your own wicked deeds and those of your wives, committed in the country of Judah and 10 in the streets of Jerusalem? ·To this day they have felt neither contrition nor fear; they have not observed my Law or my statutes, which I prescribed for you, as for 11 your ancestors. ·So, Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: Look, I have 12 determined on disaster and shall destroy Judah completely. ·I shall take the remnant of Judah who were determined to come to Egypt and settle there, and in Egypt they will perish; they will fall to the sword or perish of famine, from least to greatest; by sword and famine they will die and be an object of execration and 13 horror, a curse, a laughing-stock. ·I shall punish those who live in Egypt just as I 14 punished Jerusalem: by sword, famine and plague. ·Of the remnant of Judah which has come to settle in Egypt, not a single one will escape or survive to return to the country of Judah where they long to return and live. For none of them will return, except a few refugees." '

c. lit. 'if you stay to stay' Gk, Targ.; 'if you stay once more' Hebr.

d. Vv. 19–22 seem more appropriately placed after 43:3 (supposing a link 'Jeremiah replied' and translating the first word of v. 4 as 'but' which would be more usual) but no textual witness favours the transposition.

43 a. A frontier town, east of the Nile delta, see 2:16h.

b. Jeremiah symbolically, see 18:1a, lays the foundations for Nebuchadnezzar's throne.

c. 'he' Gk and Syr., 'I' Hebr.

d. 'He' versions; 'I' Hebr. • This successful expedition took place in 568–567 BC, under the pharaoh Amasis.

e. Here Gk reads 'which is at On' (Gn 41:45, 50; 46:20). The Egyptian name On appears in Greek as 'Heliopolis', the 'City of the Sun', now part of Cairo. There was a temple of Ra the Sun there.

44 a. Migdol lies east of Tahpanhes, 43:7[a]. Noph is the same as Memphis, 2:16h. Pathros stands for the Egyptian term 'Land of the South', i.e. Upper Egypt. This introduction thus represents Jeremiah's discourse as addressed to the whole Jewish Diaspora in Egypt (Elephantine, one of the islands in the Nile just below Aswan, in Upper Egypt already had a Jewish colony, see 2 M 1:1b).

b. 'your princes' Gk; 'his wives' Hebr.

At this, all the men who knew that their wives offered incense to other gods, and 15 all the women who were standing there, a great crowd (and all the people living in Egypt, in Pathros), answered Jeremiah as follows, •'We have no intention of 16 listening to the word you have just spoken to us in Yahweh's name, •but intend to 17 7:18d go on doing all we have vowed to do: offering incense to the Queen of Heaven[c] and pouring libations in her honour, as we used to do, we and our ancestors, our kings and our chief men, in the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem: we Ho 2:7 had food in plenty then, we lived well, we suffered no disasters. •But since we gave 18 up offering incense to the Queen of Heaven and pouring libations in her honour, we have been destitute and have perished either by sword or by famine. •Besides,[d] 19 when we offer incense to the Queen of Heaven and pour libations in her honour, do you think we make cakes for her with her features on them, and pour libations to her, without our husbands' knowledge?'

To all the people, men and women, all those who had made this answer, 20
Jeremiah retorted, •'The incense you offered in the towns of Judah and the streets 21 of Jerusalem, you, your ancestors, your kings, your chief men and the people at large—was this not what Yahweh kept remembering, and found so repellent that •Yahweh could not endure your misdeeds and your loathsome practices any 22 longer, with the result that your country has become the uninhabited ruin, the object of horror and cursing it is today? •Because you offered incense, because you 23 26:4 sinned against Yahweh, refusing to listen to the voice of Yahweh, or to observe his Law, his statutes and his decrees—that is why the present disaster has overtaken you.'

Further, Jeremiah said to all the people, and particularly to all the women, 24
'Listen to the word of Yahweh, all you Judaeans in Egypt, •Yahweh Sabaoth, God 25 of Israel, says this, "You and your wives, what your mouths promised, your hands have indeed performed! You said: We shall punctiliously fulfil the vows we have made and offer incense to the Queen of Heaven and pour libations in her honour.
Very well, keep your vows, perform them punctiliously! •But listen to the word of 26 Yahweh, all you Judaeans living in Egypt: I swear by my great name, Yahweh says, that my name will no longer be uttered by any man of Judah throughout Egypt; no one will say: As Lord Yahweh lives.[e] •No, I am going to keep my eye on them for 27 disaster, not for prosperity, and all the Judaeans in Egypt will perish either by the sword or by famine until they are wiped out. •Yet, though few in number, those 28 who escape the sword will return to the country of Judah from Egypt. Then the entire remnant of Judah which has come and settled in Egypt will know whose word comes true, mine or theirs.

"And here is the sign for you, Yahweh declares, that I shall punish you in this 29 place: so that you will know that the words with which I threaten you will come true: •Yahweh says this: Look, I shall hand Pharaoh Hophra[f] king of Egypt, over 30 to his enemies and to those determined to kill him, just as I handed Zedekiah king of Judah over to his enemy Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, who was determined to kill him." '

39:15–18 A prophecy of comfort for Baruch[a]

Lxx 51:31–35 45 The word that the prophet Jeremiah addressed to Baruch son of Neriah 1 when the latter wrote these words down in a book at Jeremiah's dictation in the fourth year of Jehoiakim[b] son of Josiah, king of Judah, •'This is what Yahweh 2 God of Israel says about you, Baruch! •"You have been thinking: what disaster for 3 me, and Yahweh has added further grief to my troubles! I am worn out with groaning, and find no relief!" •Say to him as follows, "[a]Yahweh says this: Now I 4 1:10 am knocking down what I have built, am uprooting what I have planted, over the whole country! •And you ask for special treatment! Do not ask, for I am now going 5 21:9;38:2; 39:18 to bring disaster on all humanity, Yahweh declares, but you I shall allow to escape with your life, wherever you may go." '

V: PROPHECIES AGAINST THE NATIONS[a]

1 46 The words of Yahweh that were addressed to the prophet Jeremiah against the nations.

Prophecies against Egypt. The defeat at Carchemish

Is 19
Ezk 29:1
Zp 2:12h
LXX 26

2 On Egypt.

Against the army of Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt, which was at Carchemish[b] on the River Euphrates when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon defeated it in the fourth year of Jehoiakim son of Josiah, king of Judah.

3 Buckler and shield at the ready!
Onward to battle!
4 Harness the horses:
into the saddle, horsemen!
To your ranks! On with your helmets!
Sharpen your spears,
put on your breastplates!
5 Why do I see them
retreating, panic-stricken?
Their heroes, beaten back, Am 2:14–16 are fleeing headlong,
with not a look behind.
Terror on every side,
Yahweh declares!
6 No flight for the swift,
no escape for the strong!
Up in the north on the River Euphrates, they have collapsed, have fallen.

7 Who was it rose like the Nile, Is 8:7–8 his waters foaming like a torrent?
8 Why, Egypt rose like the Nile,
his waters foaming like a torrent.
'I shall rise', he said, 'and drown the earth;
sweep away town and its inhabitants!
9 Charge, horses!
Forward, chariots!
Let the warriors advance,
men from Cush and Put with shield in hand, men from Lud who bend the bow!'[c] 10 For this is the Day of Lord Yahweh Sabaoth, a day of vengeance when he takes revenge on his foes: Am 5:18m

c. Ishtar, 7:18d; the cakes made in her honour, v. 19, represented the naked goddess.

d. The women speak at this point.

e. The worshippers of Ishtar also made a show of invoking Yahweh.

f. In Gk, Apries (589–569 BC), see 37:7; he succeeded Necho and was later killed by Amasis, prince of Libya. Jeremiah makes this short-term prophecy, offering its fulfilment as a sign, see 28:17d, commending his prediction of a more distant event, namely invasion by Nebuchadnezzar in 568–567 BC, see 43:12d.

45 a This passage, preserving a prophecy addressed personally to Jeremiah's secretary, stands as it were for Baruch's signature; presumably he was also the author of the biographical fragments in ch. 26–44.

b. In 605 BC, see 36:1.

46 a. The Hebr. text places the prophecies against the nations at the end of the book, ch. 46–51. In the Gk version, however, they retain their original position and follow their introductory ch. 25, which seems to have been expanded in the light of subsequent events, see 25:17f.

b. The modern Syrian township of Jerablus, north east of Aleppo on the Euphrates. Situated on a ford leading from Syria to Mesopotamia, the town was the scene of battle in 605 BC, between Necho (609–594) attempting to shore up the collapsing Assyrian empire (who, in the course of his advance, had killed Josiah at Megiddo, 2 Ch 35:19–25; see Jr 22:10), and Nebuchadnezzar (605–562). The victory of the latter made him master of Syria and Palestine, see 2 K 24:7d.

c. Before 'who bend' Hebr. inserts 'who carry', probably a dittography. • Cush was Ethiopia; Put, Somali; Lud, an African people associated with Put in most biblical passages, Is 66:19; Ezk 27:10; 30:5.

the sword will devour until gorged, until drunk with their blood,
for Lord Yahweh Sabaoth is holding a sacrificial feast in the land of the north, on the River Euphrates.
8:22 Go up to Gilead and fetch balm, 11 virgin daughter of Egypt!
You multiply remedies in vain,
nothing can cure you!
The nations have heard of your shame, 12 your wailing fills the world, for warrior has stumbled against warrior,
and both have fallen together.

42:15–22; 43:8–13 The invasion of Egypt [d]

The word that came from Yahweh to the prophet Jeremiah when Nebuchadnezzar 13 king of Babylon advanced to attack Egypt.

44:1 Publish it in Egypt, 14 proclaim it in Migdol, proclaim it in Noph and Tahpanhes!
Say, 'Stand your ground, be prepared, for the sword is devouring all round you!'
Is 46:1–2 Why has Apis fled? 15
Why has your Mighty One not stood firm? [e] Why, Yahweh has overturned him, he has caused many to fall! 16 Falling over one another,
they say, 'Up, and back to our own people,
to the country where we were born,
away from the devastating sword!'
They have given Pharaoh king of Egypt the nickname, [f] 17
'Much-noise-but-he-lets-the-chance-slip-by'!
As I live, the King declares, 18
whose name is Yahweh Sabaoth,
he is coming, a very Tabor among mountains,
a Carmel high above the sea!

Get your bundle ready for exile, 19 fair inhabitant of Egypt!
Noph will be reduced to a desert, [g] desolate, uninhabited.
Egypt was a splendid heifer, 20
but a gadfly from the north has settled on her.
The mercenaries she had with her, these too 21 were like fattened calves:
but they too have taken to their heels, have all run away, not held their ground,
for their day of disaster has overtaken them,
their time for being punished.

Hear her hissing like a snake [h] 22
as they advance in force to fall on her with their axes, like woodcutters,
they will fell her forest, Yahweh declares, 23 however impenetrable it was for they are more numerous than locusts,

There is no counting them.
24 The daughter of Egypt is put to shame, handed over to a people from the north.

25 Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, has said, 'Look, I shall punish Amon of No,[i] Pharaoh, Egypt, its gods, its kings, Pharaoh and those who put their trust in him.
26 I shall hand him over to those who are determined to kill him, to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, to his generals. But afterwards, Egypt will be inhabited again as in the past, Yahweh declares.[j]

27 But do not be afraid, my servant Jacob, =30:10–11 Israel, do not be alarmed:[k] for look, I shall rescue you from afar
and your descendants from the country where they are captive.
Jacob will return and be at peace,
secure, with no one to trouble him.
28 Do not be afraid, my servant Jacob, Yahweh declares, for I am with you:
I shall make an end of all the nations
where I have driven you,
but I shall not make an end of you,
I shall discipline you only as you deserve, not leaving you quite unpunished.

Prophecy against the Philistines

1 47 The word of Yahweh that came to Jeremiah about the Philistines before LXX 29
2 Pharaoh attacked Gaza.[a] •'Yahweh says this: •Jos 13:2b Ezk 25:15–17
Am 1:6–8
Zp 2:4–7

Look, the waters are rising from the north to become an overwhelming flood, overwhelming the country and all in it,
the town and its inhabitants!
People cry for help, and there is wailing from all the country's inhabitants 3 at the thunder of his chargers' hoofs, the crash of his chariots, the grinding of his wheels.
Fathers forget about their children, their hands fall limp
4 because the day has come for all the Philistines to be destroyed, for Tyre and Sidon to be stripped to the last of their allies.
Yes, Yahweh is destroying the Philistines, the remnant from the Isle of Caphtor.[b] Jos 13:2b

d. This prophecy was uttered later than the foregoing. The invasion in question took place in 568–567 BC, during the reign of the pharaoh Amasis, see 43:12d.

e. 'has Apis fled' Gk; 'has he been overthrown' Hebr. 'your Mighty One' singular with 65 Hebr. MSS, Gk; MT has plural. • The Apis bull, the incarnation of the god Ptah, was the protector of Memphis; while alive, it was fed in a temple; once dead, it became an Osiris-Apis, or Osar-Api, whence the name Serapeum, the necropolis where it was embalmed and buried. As against this totem, the One True God was indeed 'the Mighty One of Jacob', see Gn 49:24; Ps 132:2, Is 1:24; 49:26; 60:16.

f. lit. 'they have called by this name' Gk; 'they have called there' Hebr. The pharaoh was Hophra, who raised Zedekiah's hopes in 588 BC only to disappoint them, ch. 37.

g. Memphis, see 2:16h; 44:1.

h. 'hissing' Gk; 'advancing' (see next line) Hebr.

i. Amon, the ram-headed god of Thebes; No, the Egyptian name for Thebes, see Ezk 30:14–16; Na 3:8.

j. For similar prophecies of recovery for nations punished by Yahweh, see 48:47; 49:6, 39; Is 19:21seq.

k. The prophecy of recovery for Egypt in v. 26 is matched by the promise to Israel in vv. 27–28. These last verses repeat 30:10–11. Here, however, 'Jacob' and 'Israel' no longer mean the Northern Kingdom but, in the spirit of the second part of Is, all Yahweh's people.

47 a. Either Pharaoh Necho, according to Herodotus (History II, 159, in which Magdolos would then correspond to Megiddo and Cadytis to Gaza); or Pharaoh Hophra who, also according to Herodotus (II, 161), made war on Tyre and Sidon, possibly attacking their Philistine allies at the same time.

b. Crete, the traditional homeland of the Philistines, Dt 2:23; Am 9:7. On the Philistine cities, see 25:20.

Baldness has befallen Gaza, 5
Ashkelon has been reduced to silence.
You who remain in the valley,
how long will you gash yourselves? [c] Oh, sword of Yahweh, 6
how long before you rest?
Back into your scabbard,
stop, keep still!
Yet how can it rest [d] 7
when Yahweh has given it an order, Ashkelon and the sea coast,
the targets assigned to it?

Prophecies against Moab [e]

LXX 31
Nb 22:36h
2 K 3:46
‖Is 15–16
Ezk 25:8–11
Am 2:1–3
Zp 2:8–11

48 On Moab. [b] Yahweh, God of Israel, says this: 1

Wretched Nebo, for it has been ravaged, Kiriathaim has been shamed and taken,
shame and distraction on the citadel, the pride of Moab is no more! 2
At Heshbon they plotted her downfall,
'Come, let us put an end to her as a nation!'
And you too, inhabitants of Madmen, will be silenced, the sword will be after you.

A cry of agony goes up from Horonaim, 3 'Devastation! Dire calamity.
Moab has been shattered,' 4
the agonised cries of her little ones ring out.
‖Is 15:5 Up the slope of Luhith, 5 weeping they go. [c]
On the road down to Horonaim is heard the shriek of disaster,
'Away! Flee for your lives 6 like the wild donkey into the desert!' [d] Yes, since you relied on your deeds and your wealth, 7
you will be captured too.
Chemosh [e] will go into exile,
with all his priests and princes.
The despoiler will descend on every town, 8 not one will escape;
the Valley will be ravaged, the Plain be plundered as Yahweh has said.
Give Moab wings [f] 9
so that she can fly away,
for her towns will be laid in ruins where no one will ever live again.

(Accursed be he who does Yahweh's work negligently! Accursed be he who deprives his sword of blood!) 10

From his youth Moab lived at ease, 11
he settled on his lees, never having been decanted,
never having gone into exile:
and so he kept his own flavour,
his aroma was unchanged. [g]

12 And so the days are coming, Yahweh declares, when I shall send him decanters to 13 decant him; they will empty his pitchers and break his wine jars to bits. ·Moab will be shamed by Chemosh then, as the House of Israel was shamed by Bethel[h] in 1 K 12:29 Am 5:5 Ho 10:5 which they put their trust.

14 How can you say, 'We are heroes, sturdy fighting men'?
15 Moab has been ravaged, his cities scaled,
the flower of his youth goes down to the slaughter, declares the King, whose name is Yahweh Sabaoth.
16 Moab's ruin is coming soon, his downfall comes at top speed.
17 Grieve for him, all you living near him,
all you who knew his name.
Say, 'How shattered it is, that mighty rod, 22:18+
that splendid sceptre!'

18 Come down from your glory, sit on the parched ground,[i] daughter of Dibon,
for the despoiler of Moab has advanced on you,
he has destroyed your strongholds.
19 Stand by the roadside, keep watch, daughter of Aroer.
Question fugitive and runaway,
ask, 'What has happened?'[j] 20 'Moab has been shattered and shamed.
Wail and shriek!
Shout along the Arnon,
Moab has been laid waste!'

21, 22 Judgement has also come on the Plain, on Holon, Jahzah, Mephaath, ·Dibon, Nb 33:46 Jos 13:17–19 23, 24 Nebo, Beth-Diblathaim, ·Kiriathaim, Beth-Gamul, Beth-Meon, ·Kerioth,

c. For 'who remain in the valley', a minor emendation would give the reading, as in Gk: 'of the Anakim', cf. Jos 11:22. • Shaven head and self-inflicted wounds were signs of mourning, see Lv 21:5; Mi 1:16.

d. 'it rest' versions, see remainder of v.; 'you rest' Hebr.

48 a. It is difficult to identify the original nucleus of this prophecy, the text of which incorporates several biblical passages of earlier date: Nb 21:27–30; 24:17; Is 15–16. It may have been delivered shortly after 605 BC, see 25:21, or 593 BC, see 27:3, or 587 BC, see also Ezk 25:8–11.

b. Moab lay south of Ammon, in Transjordan; the place-names mentioned here are: Mount Nebo (Dt 34:1); Kiriathaim, perhaps modern Khirbet al-Quraiyat, south west of Medeba; Heshbon, modern Hesban, 7.5 miles (12 km) north of Medeba and forming a play on words with hashab 'to plot'; Madmen, modern Khirbet Dimna, 7.5 miles (12 km) north of Kerak and forming a play on words with damam 'to be silenced'; Horonaim, apparently in the eastern part of the country, on the edge of the desert; Luhith, unidentified, on the other hand, seems to have been in the west. If, furthermore, at v. 4[b] following Gk, we read 'proclaim it as far away as Zoar' (south of the Dead Sea, see Gn 14:2, 8), it becomes clear that the terror caused by the invasion convulsed the country from end to end.

c. lit. 'they climb it' bo conj., cf. Is 15:5; Hebr. repeats 'weeping' beke.

d. 'wild donkey' (Hebr. 'arod) Gk; 'Aroer' Hebr.

e. National god of the Moabites, vv. 13, 46; cf. Nb 21:29; 1 K 11:7, 33.

f. The Hebr. word (sis) normally means 'flower'; here we may perhaps have an unusual meaning for the word, unless it should be emended to nosah 'plumage', 'wings', see Jb 39:13; Ezk 17:3. Gk reads tziyun 'tomb' and translates: 'give Moab a tomb, for she has been devastated.'

g. Moab, a land of vineyards, see vv. 32–33, was famous for its wine.

h. The name of an important sanctuary in northern Israel, which after the schism became the rival of Jerusalem, see 1 K 12:29; Am 7:13, but also the name of a god in the heterodox religion of the Jewish colony of Elephantine.

i. lit. 'sit down in thirst'. • Dibon, modern Diban, about 3 miles (5 km) north west of Aroer, v. 19, modern Arair, on the River Arnon. Diban was the site of the discovery of the stele of Mesha king of Moab, otherwise known as the Moabite Stone: 2 K 3:4b.

j. 'runaway' masc., versions; fem. Hebr. • The answer is given in vv. 20, 25 (where 'Yahweh declares', omitted by Gk, is possibly an addition) and v. 28; the prose passages are commentaries.

k. Many of the towns mentioned here have not been identified with any certainty, but the whole point of the list is to emphasise the scale of the disaster.

you? Was he caught red-handed with the thieves, for you to shake your head whenever you mention him?

Leave the towns, make the rocks your home, 28 inhabitants of Moab.
Learn from the dove that makes its nest in the walls of the gaping gorge.

‖Is 16:6 We have heard about Moab's pride, 29
so very proud!
What arrogance! What pride! What conceit!
What a haughty heart!
—I know all about his presumption, Yahweh declares, 30
his empty boasting,
those empty deeds of his!
‖Is 16:7 —and so I lament for Moab, 31 for all Moab I raise my cry and mourn for the people of Kir-Heres.
More than for Jazer I weep for you, 32 vineyard of Sibmah! l
your shoots stretched beyond the sea, they reached all the way to Jazer.
On your harvest and vintage
the despoiler has descended.
Is 16:10 Gladness and joy have vanished 33
from the orchards of Moab.
I have dried up the wine in the presses, the treader of grapes treads no more,
the joyful shouting has ceased. m

Is 15:4–5 The cries of Heshbon and Elealeh can be heard as far as Jahaz. The shrieks 34 resound from Zoar to Horonaim and Eglath-Shelishiyah, for even the Waters of Nimrim have become a wasteland. n
Is 15:5 And in Moab I shall make an end, Yahweh declares, of anyone offering sacrifice 35 on the high places and anyone offering incense to his gods.
That is why my heart sobs like a flute for Moab, sobs like a flute for the people of 36
47:5 Kir-Heres, since the wealth he had acquired is lost. ·Yes, every head is shaved, 37
Lv 21:5 Is 15:2–3 every beard cut off, gashes are on every hand, sackcloth round every waist. ·On 38 all the housetops of Moab and in all its squares there is nothing but lamenting, for I have broken Moab like an unwanted pot, Yahweh declares. ·How shattered he 39 is! Wail! Moab so shamefully in retreat! Moab has become a laughing-stock, a thing of horror to all his neighbours.

For Yahweh says this: 40
=49:22 (Look, like an eagle, he will hover, spreading his wings over Moab.)
The towns have been captured, 41
the strongholds seized.
(And the heart of Moab's warriors, that day, will be like that of a woman in labour pains.)
Moab will be destroyed, no longer a people, 42 for setting itself up against Yahweh.
‖Is 24:17–18 Terror, the pit and the snare for you, 43 inhabitant of Moab,
Yahweh declares.

And anyone who escapes from terror 44
will fall into the pit,

and anyone who climbs out of the pit
will be caught in the snare.
Yes, I shall bring all this on Moab [o] when the year comes for punishing them,
Yahweh declares.

45 In the shelter of Heshbon the fugitives have paused, exhausted.
But fire will burst from Heshbon, Nb 21:28–29
a flame from the palace of Sihon, [p] consuming the brows of Moab, Nb 24:17
the head of a turbulent brood.
46 Disaster for you, Moab!
The people of Chemosh are lost!
For your sons have been taken into exile and your daughters into captivity.

47 But I shall bring back Moab's captives 46:26j in the final days, Yahweh declares.

Thus far the judgement on Moab. [q]

Prophecy against Ammon [a]

1 49 To the Ammonites. LXX 30
Dt 2:19e
Ezk 25:1–7
Am 1:13–15
Zp 2:8–11

Yahweh says this:
Has Israel no sons?
Has he no heir?
Why should Milcom have inherited Gad and his people have settled in its towns? [b] 2 And so the days are coming,
Yahweh declares,
when I shall make the war cry ring out for Rabbah-of-the-Ammonites.
She will become a desolate mound and her daughter towns will be burnt down.
Then Israel will inherit from his heirs,
Yahweh says.
3 Wail, Heshbon, for Ar has been laid waste! [c] Nb 20:21–22+
Shriek, daughters of Rabbah!
Wrap yourself in sackcloth, raise the dirge, run to and fro among the sheep-pens!
For Milcom is going into exile,
with all his priests and princes.

l. Kir-Heres, 'wall of potsherds', is used here as a nickname for Kir-Moab, the ancient Moabite capital, modern Kerak, Jazer, probably Khirbet Yazzir, in the northern part of Moab. Sibmah, between Heshbon, v. 2 and Nebo; the sea to which the vineyard is said to have extended was the Dead Sea, on the west.

m. 'the treader' versions, see Is 16:10; 'the cheering' Hebr., dittography. • 'has ceased', lit. 'rings out (no more)' herim or yehuddad, assuming an unattested form of the word 'cheering' hedad, repeated in Hebr.

n. 'The cries' conj.; 'Because of the cries' Hebr. • 'and Elealeh' conj., see Is 15:4; 'as far as Elealeh' Hebr. • Only Zoar in the south, and Heshbon and Elealeh a few km from each other in the north, see v. 1b, have been convincingly identified. The 'Waters of Nimrim' were probably situated north of the Dead Sea, although the Wadi Numeira, to the south east, has also been suggested.

o. 'all this' Gk and Syr.; 'on her' Hebr.

p. 'from the palace' mibbet, 3 Hebr. MSS; 'from the middle' mibben MT. • Sihon was the Amorite king who had Heshbon as his capital city, Nb 21:27–28; Dt 2:26–37.

q. A scribal note, cf. 51:64.

49 a. The prophecy is authentic, except for v. 2, a later addition.

b. The territory of the Ammonites, lying to the north of Moab in Transjordan, had its capital at Rabbah, v. 2, or Rabbath-Ammon, modern Amman. At the conquest of Palestine by the twelve tribes, this territory was allotted to the tribe of Gad, see Nb 32; Jos 13:24–28; by taking it away from the Israelites after 734 BC, and then again in 721, the Ammonites and with them Milcom, their national god, had acted as usurpers. • Here and at v. 3, we read 'Milcom' with versions and 1 K 11:5, 7, 33; 2 K 23:13, rather than malkam, 'their king' Hebr.

c. 'in your Valley', conj.; 'of valleys, your valley flows' Hebr. The principal valley in Ammon is that of the River Jabbok.

How you used to glory in your Valley,[d] 4 rebellious daughter,
confident in your resources,
'Who will dare to attack me?'
Look, I shall bring terror on you. 5
Lord Yahweh Sabaoth declares,
from all directions;
you shall be driven away, everyone for himself,
with no one to rally the fugitives.

Prophecy against Edom[e]

To Edom. 7

Yahweh says this:
Ba 3:22 Is there no wisdom left in Teman?
Have the shrewd run out of commonsense,[f] has their wisdom vanished?
Away! Take to your heels! Go into hiding, 8 inhabitants of Dedan, Ml 1:2–5 for I shall bring ruin on Esau[g]
when the time comes for me to punish him.
‖Ob 5–6 If grape-pickers were to come to you, 9 would they not leave a few gleanings?
If robbers came during the night,
would they not steal only as much as they wanted?
But I for my part have stripped Esau, 10 have laid his hiding places bare:
he can hide no longer.
His race is destroyed,
so are his brothers and neighbours; he is no more!
Leave your orphans, I shall support them, 11 and let your widows rely on me!

25:28–29
Is 51:17h
For Yahweh says this, 'Look, those who would not have had to drink the cup 12 will have to drink it all the same; so why should you go unpunished? You will not go unpunished, but will certainly have to drink. ·For by my own self I have sworn, 13 Yahweh declares, that Bozrah[h] will become an object of horror, a laughing-stock, a desert, a curse, and all its towns ruins for ever.'

‖Ob 1–4 I have received a message from Yahweh, 14
a herald has been sent throughout the nations,
'Muster! March against this people!
Prepare for battle!'
For look, I shall reduce you to the smallest of nations, 15 to the most despised of people.
Your reputation for ferocity, 16
your proud heart has misled you.
You whose home is in the crannies of the Rock,[i] who cling to the top of the peak!
51:53
Hab 2:9 Though you make your nest as high as the eagle's,
I shall bring you down from there, Yahweh declares.

Edom will become an object of horror; everyone going near will be appalled, 17 =50:40 and whistle at the sight of all her wounds. ·As at the overthrow of Sodom and 18 Gomorrah and their neighbouring towns, no one will live there any more, Yahweh says, no human being settle there again.

19 Look, like a lion he climbs from the thickets of the Jordan =50:44–46
to the perennial pasture!
In a flash, I shall make them run away,
and there appoint someone I shall choose.
For who is there like me?
Who can hale me into court? Jb 9:19 Name me the shepherd Ws 12:12
who can stand up to me.
20 So now hear the plan
that Yahweh has laid against Edom,
the schemes he has in mind
against the inhabitants of Teman:
they will certainly be dragged away
like the smallest of the flock!
Their pastures will certainly be sacked before their eyes!
21 The earth quakes at the sound of their downfall, the sound of it echoes to the Sea of Reeds.[j] 22 Look, like an eagle, he will soar and hover, =48:40 spreading his wings over Bozrah.
And the heart of Edom's warriors, that day, will be like that of a woman in labour pains. Ob 9

Prophecy against the towns of Syria[k]

23 To Damascus.

Hamath and Arpad are shamed, Is 17:1–3 for they have heard bad news. Am 1:3–5
They are convulsed with anxiety like the sea that cannot be calmed.[l] 24 Damascus is aghast, she prepares for flight, she is seized with trembling (anguish and sorrow have laid hold on her as on a woman in labour). 4:31+ 25 What now! That famous town deserted, that city of gaiety?[m]

26 And so in her squares her young men will fall, and all her fighting men will perish, that day, Yahweh Sabaoth declares. =50:30

27 I shall light a fire inside the walls of Damascus, to devour the palaces of Ben-Hadad.[n] Am 1:4–5

Prophecy against the Arab tribes 25:23–24 Is 21:13–17

28 To Kedar and the kingdoms of Hazor,[o] which were conquered by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. Yahweh says this:

d. Heshbon in Moab, see 48:1b, probably conquered by the Ammonites. • 'Ar' (in Transjordan see Nb 21:28) conj.; Heb. has 'Ai', but this is in Cisjordan.

e. This prophecy was delivered in about 605 BC. Note the parallel with Ob vv. 1–9.

f. 'shrewd' Gk; 'sons' Hebr. (incorrect arrangement of vowels). Edom was famous for its sages, see 1 K 5:10–11; Jb 2:11d; Ba 3:11–23.

g. Dedan: the oasis of El-Ela in Arabia. In Ezk 25:13, Teman (perhaps modern Tawilan, near Petra) and Dedan seem to represent the extremities (north and south) of Edom. • On Esau or Edom, see Gn 36:8.

h. Bozrah, capital of Edom (as opposed to Bozrah in Moab, 48:24) is modern El-Buseirah, about 25 miles (40 km) south of the Dead Sea.

i. The 'Rock' of Edom, see 2 K 14:7; Is 16:1, long identified with the city of Petra, may well have been situated further north, in the area of Bozrah.

j. Hebr. repeats 'the sound of it'; Gk omits. • The 'Sea of Reeds', modern Red Sea.

k. This saying on Damascus, a city not mentioned in the introductory list of 25:20–26, perhaps refers to the panic in Syria, then under Egyptian suzerainty, when Egypt was defeated at Carchemish in 605 BC, see 46:2b

l. 'like the sea' kayyam, conj.; 'in the sea' bayyam Hebr. • Hamath, see 39:5. Arpad, modern Tell Erfad, north of Aleppo.

m. 'city of gaiety' Syr., 'city of my joy" Hebr.

n. Ben-Hadad III, son of Hazael and king in Damascus about 840 BC, see 2 K 13:24; Am 1:4.

o. Hazor, a collective name designating the semi-sedentary Arabs as opposed to the Bedouin of the desert; 'kingdom' is to be understood in a loose sense, a group of people under the authority of a tribal chieftain.

Up! March on Kedar, destroy the sons of the east!
Let their tents and their flocks be captured, 29 their tent-cloths and all their gear;
let their camels be seized and the shout go up, 'Terror on every side!' Away! Get into hiding as fast as you can, 30 inhabitants of Hazor, Yahweh declares, for Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon has made a plan against you,
he has a scheme in mind against you,
Up! March on a nation at its ease, 31 living secure, Yahweh declares, that has no gates, no bars,
that lives in a remote place!
Their camels will be the plunder, 32 their countless sheep the spoil.
I shall scatter them to the winds,
those Crop-Heads,
and bring ruin on them from every side,
Yahweh declares.
Hazor will become the lair of jackals, 33 desolate for ever.
No one will live there any more,
no human being settle there again.

Prophecy against Elam [p]

LXX 25:14–20 The word of Yahweh that came to the prophet Jeremiah about Elam, at the 34 beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah. ·'Yahweh Sabaoth says this: 35

Look, I shall break Elam's bow, the source of his might.
I shall bring four winds on Elam 36 from the four corners of the sky, and I shall scatter them to all these winds:
there will not be a single nation to which people expelled from Elam do not go.

I shall make the Elamites tremble before their enemies, 37 before those determined to kill them.
I shall bring disaster on them,
my burning anger, Yahweh declares.
I shall pursue them with the sword until I have destroyed them all.
I shall set up my throne in Elam, 38 uprooting its king and princes,
Yahweh declares.

46:26j In the final days, I shall bring Elam's captives back, Yahweh declares. 39

LXX 27 Prophecy against Babylon [q]
Is 13;14;21:1;47 Rv 18

50 The word that Yahweh spoke against Babylon, against the country of the 1 Chaldaeans, through the prophet Jeremiah.

Is 46:1 The fall of Babylon and the liberation of Israel

Announce it to the nations, proclaim it, 2 hoist a signal and proclaim it, making no secret of it, say,

'Babylon is captured, Bel disgraced, Marduk shattered. [b]
(Her idols are disgraced, her Obscenities shattered.)' 3 For a nation is marching on her from the north, to turn her country into a desert:
no one will live there any more;
human and animal have fled and gone.

4 In those days and at that time
the people of Israel will return (they and the people of Judah); [c] they will come weeping
in search of Yahweh their God.
5 They will ask the way to Zion and turn their faces towards her,
'Come, let us bind ourselves to Yahweh [d]
by an everlasting covenant never to be forgotten!'

6 Lost sheep, such were my people; Ezk 34:1a Mt 9:36o their shepherds led them astray, the mountains misled them; from mountain to hill they went,
forgetful of their fold.
7 Whoever came across them devoured them, their enemies said, 'We are not to blame, since they have sinned against Yahweh, the Home of Justice, against Yahweh, the Hope of their ancestors.' 8 Escape from Babylon, 51:6,45 Is 48:20;52:11 Rv 18:4 leave the country of the Chaldaeans. [e]
Be like he-goats, leading the sheep!
9 For look, I shall raise a league of mighty nations to attack Babylon, from the land of the north.
They will take up position against her;
by them she will be taken.
Their arrows, like an experienced soldier's,
never return in vain.
10 Chaldaea will be plundered,
all her plunderers will be satisfied, Yahweh declares.

11 Rejoice! Have your triumph, you plunderers of my heritage!
Be playful like a heifer let out to grass! [f]
Neigh like stallions!
12 But your mother is covered with shame, disgraced is the woman who bore you;
she is the least of nations now;
a desert, a parched land, a wasteland.

p. Elam was the name for the high plains lying east of Mesopotamia, from which the Median and Persian invasions were later to come. As early as 597 BC, Jeremiah may have foreseen the conquest of Elam by the Persians.

50 a. In the following prophecies two dominant themes recur: the fall of Babylon and the return from exile, both expected by Jeremiah, though not in the immediate future, see 27:7; 29:10, 28. Here, as in the second part of Is, the fall of Babylon (539 BC) is treated as if it were about to occur.

b. Bel, 'the Master' (compare Baal), the usual name for Marduk (or Merodach), the chief god of Babylon, see 51:44; Is 46:1; Ba 6:40; Dn 14.

c. Here, as in v. 33 and 51:5, glossators seem to have been responsible for adding Judah alongside Israel, cf. similarly, 31:31. In point of fact, these glosses serve no purpose, since here 'Israel' stands for the totality of God's people.

d. 'let us bind ourselves to' Syr.; 'and they will be bound to' Hebr.

e. 'leave' qere, versions; 'they will leave' ketib.

f. lit. 'in the grass' baddeshe', see Gk ('calves in the grass'); 'treading' dashah Hebr.

Because of Yahweh's anger, 13
no one will live there any more,
she will become a total solitude.
All who pass by Babylon will be appalled and whistle at the sight of all her wounds.

Take position against Babylon, surround her, 14
all you who bend the bow.
Shoot at her! Do not spare your arrows, for she has sinned against Yahweh!
Raise the war cry against her from all sides. 15
She surrenders! Her bastions fall!
Her walls collapse!
51:6 Is 59:18 This is Yahweh's vengeance! Take revenge on her.
Treat her as she has treated others.
Deprive Babylon of the man who sows, 16
of the man who wields the sickle at harvest.
Away from the devastating sword,
let everyone return to his own people, let everyone flee to his own country!

Israel was a straying sheep 17 pursued by lions.

51:34 First, the king of Assyria devoured him, and latterly Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon crunched his bones. ·So Yahweh Sabaoth, God of Israel, says this: Look, 18
I shall punish the king of Babylon and his country as I punished the king of Assyria.

I will bring Israel back to his pastures 19 to browse on Carmel and in Bashan, on the highlands of Ephraim and in Gilead,[g]
and he will be satisfied.
In those days and at that time, Yahweh declares, 20
you may look for Israel's guilt, it will not be there, for Judah's sins, you will not find them,
Is 4:3c for I shall pardon the remnant that I leave.

The fall of Babylon proclaimed to Jerusalem

March on the country of Merathaim, 21 march on it
and on the inhabitants of Pekod;[h] slaughter and curse with destruction every last one of them,[i] Yahweh declares,
carry out my orders to the letter!
The din of battle fills the country, 22 immense destruction.

How utterly shattered 23
51:8,20 Is 14:4–6 =51:41 that hammer of the whole world!
What a thing of horror Babylon has become
throughout the nations!
I set a snare for you, Babylon; you were caught 24 before you knew it.
You have been found and overpowered for having defied Yahweh.

Yahweh has opened his armoury 25 and taken out the weapons of his fury.

For Lord Yahweh Sabaoth has work to do in the country of the Chaldaeans.
26 Fall on her from every side,[j] open her granaries, pile her in heaps, curse her with destruction, Jos 6:17c until nothing is left of her.

27 Slaughter all her bulls, down to the slaughterhouse with them!
Disaster on them, their day has come,
their time for being punished.

28 Listen! Fugitives and runaways from the country of Babylon arrive in Zion and proclaim the revenge of Yahweh our God, revenge for his Temple!

The sin of arrogance[k]

29 Call up the archers against Babylon!
All you who bend the bow,
invest her on all sides,
leave her no way of escape.
Repay her as her deeds deserve; Ex 21:25f treat her as she has treated others, Ps 28:4 for she was arrogant to Yahweh, Is 14:13–14 to the Holy One of Israel. Rv 18:6

30 And so in her squares her young men will fall, and all her fighting men will =49:26 perish, that day, Yahweh declares.

31 My quarrel is with you, 'Arrogance!'
Lord Yahweh Sabaoth declares,
your day has come,
the time for me to punish you.
32 'Arrogance' will stumble, she will fall,
no one will lift her up:
I shall set fire to her towns
and it will devour all around it.

Yahweh the redeemer of Israel Is 41:14g

33 Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
The people of Israel are oppressed (and the people of Judah too), all their captors hold them fast,
they will not let them go.
34 But their redeemer is strong:
Yahweh Sabaoth is his name.
He will take up their cause, 51:10,36 to give our country rest but make the inhabitants of Babylon tremble.

g. Gilead and Bashan, in Transjordan, were famous for their pasturage, see Nb 32; Am 4:1a; Mi 7:14. Carmel (meaning 'orchard') and the wooded hills of Ephraim (see Jos 17:18) also presumably evoked the picture of a fertile and welcoming country to these exiles.

h. The orders are addressed to those who are to attack Babylon. Merathaim, equivalent to the Babylonian word maratu, 'lagoons', designates the region where the Tigris and Euphrates flow into the Persian Gulf. Pekod, Ezk 23:23, was the name of a people to the east of Babylon.

i. lit. 'their last' 'aharitam Targ.; 'behind them' 'aharehem Hebr.

j. 'from every side'; meaning uncertain. The word usually means 'end', 'extremity', but may on occasion mean a whole, a totality ('without exception', 'from all directions').

k. The sin of over-weening pride (hubris in Gk), cf. Gn 3; 11:1-9; Is 14:12–13; Ezk 28; Am 4.

A sword against the Chaldaeans, Yahweh declares, 35 against the inhabitants of Babylon, against her princes and her sages!
A sword against her diviners: may they lose their wits! 36
A sword against her warriors: may they panic!
A sword against her horses, her chariots 37 and the conglomeration of people inside her:
51:30 may they be like women!
51:13 A sword against her treasures: may they be plundered!
51:36 Drought on her waters: may they dry up! 38
For it is a country of idols, and they are mad about those bogeys of theirs!

↗Rv 18:2 Hence wild cats and jackals will live there, 39 and ostriches make their home there.
She will never again be inhabited, for ever,
but remain uninhabited age after age.
=49:18 As when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, 40 and their neighbouring towns,
Yahweh declares,
51:26,37 no one will live there any more,
no human being settle there again.

The enemy from the north and the lion of Jordan l

=6:22–23 Look, a people is coming from the north, 41
a mighty nation;
from the far ends of the earth
many kings are stirring.
They are armed with bow and spear, 42
they are cruel and pitiless;
their noise is like the roaring of the sea;
they ride horses,
ready as one man to fight you,
daughter of Babylon!
The king of Babylon has heard the news, 43 =6:24 his hands fall limp, anguish has seized him,
pain like that of a woman in labour.

=49:19–21 Look, like a lion he climbs the thickets of the Jordan 44
to the perennial pasture!
In a flash I shall make them run away
and there appoint someone I shall choose.
For who is there like me?
Who can hale me into court?
Name me the shepherd
who can stand up to me.
So now hear the plan 45
that Yahweh has laid against Babylon,
the schemes he has in mind
against the country of the Chaldaeans:
they will certainly be dragged away
like the smallest in the flock!
Their pastures will certainly be sacked before their eyes!
The earth quakes at the sound of Babylon's capture, 46 and the shouting echoes through the nations.

Yahweh makes war on Babylon

1 51 Yahweh says this: LXX 28 Against Babylon and the inhabitants of Leb-Kamai [a]
I shall rouse a destructive wind.
2 I shall send winnowers [b] to Babylon to winnow her 4:11 Mt 3:12 and leave her country bare, for she will be beleaguered on all sides,
on the day of disaster.
3 Let no archer bend his bow!
Let no man swagger in his breastplate! [c]
—No quarter for her young men!
Curse her whole army with destruction! Jos 6:17c 4 In the country of the Chaldaeans the slaughtered will fall, in the streets of Babylon, those run through by the sword.
5 For Israel and Judah have not been bereft of their God, Yahweh Sabaoth, although their country was full of sin
against the Holy One of Israel.

6 Escape from Babylon 50:8 Rv 18:4
(save your lives, each one of you);
do not perish for her guilt, for now is the time for Yahweh's vengeance: 50:15
he will pay her her reward!
7 Babylon was a golden cup in Yahweh's hand, 25:15–29 Is 51:17h she made the whole world drunk, ↗Rv 18:3 the nations drank her wine and then went mad. [d]
8 Babylon has suddenly fallen, is broken: 50:23 ↗Rv 18:2 wail for her!
Fetch balm for her wounds,
perhaps she can be cured!
9 —'We tried to cure Babylon; she has got no better.
Leave her alone and let us each go to his own country.' 50:16
—Yes, her sentence reaches to the sky, rises to the very clouds.
10 Yahweh has shown the uprightness of our cause. 50:34 Come, let us tell in Zion what Yahweh our God has done.

11 Sharpen the arrows,
fill the quivers!

Yahweh has roused the spirit of the kings of the Medes, [e] because he has a plan Is 13:17 against Babylon to destroy it; this is Yahweh's revenge, revenge for his Temple.

12 Against the walls of Babylon raise the standard!
Strengthen the guard!
Post the sentries!
Take up concealed positions!

l. This prophecy re-applies to Babylon the threat of an enemy coming from the north, originally uttered against Judah, 6:22–24, and the prophecy against Edom, 49:19–21.

51 a. A cryptogram for Kashdim (Chaldaeans); see also 25:25–6 ('Sheshak' for Babel?).
b. 'winnowers' Aq., Symm., 'foreigners' Hebr.
c. The two negative commands 'al . . . 'al), read with 15 Hebr. MSS and versions (MT: 'el . . . 'el 'towards . . . towards'), is addressed to the besieged. The following lines are addressed to the besiegers. • Hebr. (ketib) repeats 'bend', a dittography omitted by qere and versions.
d. Hebr. repeats 'the nations'; versions omit.
e. The poem originally spoke of an enemy from the north, 50:3, 9, 41; 51:48. The prose gloss says more specifically the Medes (identified here, as in Is 13:17, with the Persians).

For Yahweh has both planned and done what he promised he would to the inhabitants of Babylon.

50:37–38 ↗Rv 17:1,15
Enthroned beside abundant waters, 13
rich in treasures,
you now meet your end,
the finish of your pillaging.[f]
By his own self Yahweh Sabaoth has sworn: 14
I shall fill you with men as though with grasshoppers, and over you they will raise the triumph-shout.

=10:12–16
By his power he made the earth, 15
by his wisdom set the world firm, by his discernment spread out the heavens.
When he thunders 16
there is a roaring of waters in heaven; ‖Ps 135:7 he raises clouds from the furthest limits of the earth, makes the lightning flash for the downpour,
and brings the wind from his storehouse.
At this everyone stands stupefied, uncomprehending, 17 every goldsmith blushes for his idols;
his castings are but delusion,
with no breath in them.
They are futile, a laughable production, 18
when the time comes for them to be punished, they will vanish.
The Heritage of Jacob is not like these, 19 for he is the maker of everything, and Israel is the tribe that is his heritage;[g]
His name is Yahweh Sabaoth.

Yahweh's hammer and the giant mountain

50:23
You were my mace, 20
a weapon of war.
With you I crushed nations, struck kingdoms down,
with you crushed horse and rider, 21 with you crushed chariot and charioteer, with you crushed man and woman, 22 with you crushed old man and young, with you crushed young man and girl, with you crushed shepherd and flock, 23 with you crushed ploughman and team, with you crushed governors and magistrates, and I shall repay Babylon and the inhabitants of Chaldaea, before your eyes, for all the wrongs they have done to Zion, Yahweh declares. 24

I am setting myself against you, 25 mountain of destruction,
Yahweh declares,
destroyer of the whole world!
I shall reach out my hand for you and send you tumbling from the crags and make you a burnt-out mountain.
No corner-stone will be taken from you again 26
and no foundation-stone, for you will be a desert for ever,

Yahweh declares. 50:40

The end of Babylon is imminent

27 Raise the standard throughout the world, sound the trumpet among the nations!
Consecrate nations to make war on her;
summon kingdoms against her:
Ararat, Minni, Ashkenaz;[h] appoint a recruiting-officer for her enemies, bring up the cavalry, bristling like locusts.

28 Consecrate nations to make war on her: the kings of Media, her governors, all her magistrates and the whole territory under their rule.

29 Then the earth trembled and writhed, for Yahweh's plan against Babylon was being executed:
to change the country of Babylon into an unpopulated desert.

30 The warriors of Babylon have done with fighting, they have stayed inside their fortresses;
their courage exhausted, they are now like women. 50:37 Is 19:16 Na 3:13
Her houses are on fire,
her gates are shattered.
31 Courier follows close on courier, messenger on messenger,
to tell the king of Babylon that his city has been taken from all sides, 32 the fords occupied,
the bastions burnt down
and the fighting men seized with panic.
33 For Yahweh Sabaoth, the God of Israel, says this:
the daughter of Babylon is like a threshing-floor when it is being trodden:
a little while, and then the time for harvesting her will come.

Yahweh's vengeance

34 He devoured me, consumed me, 50:17 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, left me like an empty dish,
like the Dragon he has swallowed me whole, filled his belly with my titbits[i]
and threw me out.
35 'On Babylon be the wounds I suffered!'[j]
the daughter of Zion will say.
'On the inhabitants of Chaldaea be my blood!'
Jerusalem will say.

f. 'the finish' (lit. 'are finished') wetam conj.; 'the measure' 'ammat Hebr.

g. 'Israel' Targ., cf. 10:16; Hebr. omits.

h. Northern peoples living in the general area of Armenia: Ararat or Urartu; Minni, round Lake Van; Ashkenaz or the Scythians.

i. 'with my titbits' ma'adannay conj.; 'away from my delights' me'adanay Hebr. Rearranging vowels and redividing some of the words, one might also translate: 'he has driven me out of my Eden.' Jerusalem is the speaker.

j. lit. 'my violence, my broken flesh'.

So, Yahweh says this: 36
50:34 Look, I am taking up your cause to make sure you are avenged.
I shall dry her river up,
make her springs run dry.
Babylon will become a heap of stones, 37 50:39 the lair of jackals,
a thing of horror and of scorn, 50:40 with no one living in it.
Like lions they roar together, 38
they growl like lions' whelps.
Are they feverish? I will prepare them a drink 39 =51:57 Ps 76:5 and make them drink until they are tipsy and fall into an everlasting sleep, never to wake again,
Yahweh declares.
I will drag them away to the slaughterhouse like lambs, 40 like rams and goats.

A dirge for Babylon

25:26 What! Has Sheshak been taken, 41 been conquered, the pride of the whole world?
=50:23 What a thing of horror Babylon has become
throughout the nations!
The sea has risen over Babylon, 42
she sinks beneath its boisterous waves.
Her towns have been turned into wasteland, 43
a parched land, a desert, a country where no one lives and where nobody goes.

Yahweh punishes the idols

50:2b I shall punish Bel in Babylon 44 and make him disgorge what he has swallowed.
In future the nations
will stream to him no more.
The very walls of Babylon will fall.
50:8;51:6 Get out of her, my people; 45
save your lives, each one of you,
from Yahweh's furious anger.

Mt 24:6seq. But do not be faint-hearted! Do not take fright at rumours hawked round the 46 country: one rumour spreads one year, next year another follows; violence rules on earth and one tyrant succeeds another.

So look, the days are coming 47
when I shall punish the idols of Babylon.
Her entire country will be humbled, with all her slaughtered lying on home-soil.
↗Rv 18:20; 19:1–2 The heaven and earth and all within them 48 will shout for joy over Babylon, for the destroyers from the north are coming to her, Yahweh declares.
Babylon in her turn must fall, 49
you slaughtered ones of Israel, just as through Babylon there fell men slaughtered all over the world.

50 You who have escaped her sword, leave her, do not wait!
Remember Yahweh from afar, let Jerusalem come into your mind. Ps 137:5 51 —'We were ashamed when we heard of the outrage, we were covered in confusion because foreigners had entered Ps 74:3–8 Lm 1:10
the Temple of Yahweh's holy places.'
52 —So look, the days are coming,
Yahweh declares,
when I shall punish her idols,
and the wounded will groan throughout her country.

53 Were Babylon to scale the heavens 49:16 Is 14:13 or reinforce her towering citadel, destroyers would still come to her on my orders,
Yahweh declares.
54 The din of shouting from Babylon, of immense destruction, from the country of the Chaldaeans!
55 Yes, Yahweh is laying Babylon waste and silencing her monstrous din, whose waves used to roar like the ocean and their tumultuous voices rang out.
56 For the destroyer has fallen on Babylon, her warriors are captured, their bows are broken.
Yes, Yahweh is a God of retribution,
he never fails to repay.
57 I shall make her princes and her sages drink, 51:39 her governors, her magistrates, her warriors; they will fall into an everlasting sleep,
never to wake again,
declares the King,
whose name is Yahweh Sabaoth.

Babylon rased to the ground

58 Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
The walls of Babylon the Great will be rased to the ground and her lofty gates
will be burnt down.
Thus peoples toil for nothing ||Hab 2:13
and nations wear themselves out, for the flames.

The written prophecy thrown into the Euphrates [k]

59 This is the order that the prophet Jeremiah gave to Seraiah son of Neriah, son of Mahseiah when Seraiah left for Babylon with Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth 60 year of his reign. Seraiah was lord chamberlain. ·Now, on one sheet, Jeremiah had written down the entire disaster that was to befall Babylon, that is, all these words 61 recorded here against Babylon. ·Jeremiah then said to Seraiah, 'When you reach 62 Babylon, see to it that you read all these words aloud. ·Then say, "You, Yahweh, have promised to destroy this place, so that no one will live here ever again, neither 63 human nor animal, and it will be desolate for ever." ·Then, when you have finished 51:26 reading this sheet, tie a stone to it and throw it into the middle of the Euphrates, k. This symbolic gesture, see 18:1a, which was to be kept secret, took place in about 593 BC. It demonstrates the faith of the prophet in the irrevocability of God's word, and also his complete lucidity of mind: at the very moment when Jeremiah was preaching submission to Babylon, he made no bones about admitting the crimes of the Babylonians.

↗Rv 18:21 with the words, "So shall Babylon sink, never to rise again from the disaster which I am going to bring on her." ' 64

Thus far the words of Jeremiah. [i]

VI: APPENDIX [a]

‖2 K 24:18–25:30 The destruction of Jerusalem and the pardon of Jehoiachin

52 Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he came to the throne, and he reigned for eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamital daughter of Jeremiah, of Libnah. [b] 1
·He did what is displeasing to Yahweh, just as Jehoiakim had done. 2
·That this should happen to Jerusalem and Judah was due to Yahweh's anger, resulting in his casting them away from his presence. 3

=39:1–10 Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. 4
·In the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, [c] on the tenth day of the month, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon advanced on Jerusalem with his entire army; he pitched camp in front of the city and threw up earthworks round it. 5
·The city lay under siege till the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. 6
·In the fourth month, [d] on the ninth day of the month, when famine was raging in the city and there was no food for the populace, 7
·a breach was made in the city wall. The king [e] and all the fighting men then fled, leaving the city under cover of dark, by way of the gate between the two walls, which is near the king's 39:4e garden—the Chaldaeans had surrounded the city—and made his way towards the Arabah. 8
·The Chaldaean troops pursued the king and caught up with Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho, where all his troops deserted. 9
·But the Chaldaeans captured the king and took him to the king of Babylon at Riblah in the territory of Hamath, where he passed sentence on him. 10
·He had Zedekiah's sons slaughtered before his eyes; he also had all the chief men of Judah put to death at Riblah. 11
·He then put
Ezk 12:13 out Zedekiah's eyes and, loading him with chains, the king of Babylon carried him off to Babylon where he kept him prisoner until his dying day.

In the fifth month, [f] on the tenth day of the month—it was in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon—Nebuzaradan commander of the guard, a member of the king of Babylon's staff, entered Jerusalem. 12
·He burnt down the Temple of Yahweh, the royal palace and all the houses in Jerusalem. [g] 13
·The Chaldaean troops who accompanied the commander of the guard demolished all the walls surrounding Jerusalem. 14

Nebuzaradan commander of the guard deported (some of the poor people and) [h] the remainder of the population left in the city, the deserters who had gone over to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the artisans. 15
·But Nebuzaradan commander of the guard left some of the poor country-people behind as vineyard workers and ploughmen. 16

The Chaldaeans broke up the bronze pillars from the Temple of Yahweh, the wheeled stands and the bronze Sea, which were in the Temple of Yahweh, and took all the bronze away to Babylon. 17
·They also took the ash containers, the scoops, the knives, the sprinkling bowls, the incense bowls, and all the bronze furnishings used in worship. 18
·The commander of the guard also took the bowls, the censers, the sprinkling bowls, the ash containers, the lamp-stands, the goblets and the saucers: everything that was made of gold and everything made of silver. 19
As regards the two pillars, the one Sea, the twelve bronze oxen supporting the Sea, [i] and the wheeled stands, which King Solomon had made for the Temple of Yahweh, there was no reckoning the weight of bronze in all these objects. 20
·As regards the pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits, its circumference was twelve cubits, it was four fingers thick, and hollow inside; 21
·on it stood a capital of bronze, the height of the capital being five cubits; round the capital were filigree and pomegranates, all in bronze. So also for the second pillar. [j] 22
·There were ninety-six pomegranates round the sides, [k] making a hundred pomegranates round the filigree in all. 23

24 The commander of the guard took prisoner Seraiah the chief priest, Zephaniah
25 the priest next in rank, and the three guardians of the threshold. ·In the city he took prisoner an official who was in command of the fighting men, seven of the king's personal friends who were discovered in the city, the secretary to the army commander responsible for military conscription, and sixty men of distinction
26 discovered in the city. ·Nebuzaradan commander of the guard took these men and 27 brought them to the king of Babylon at Riblah, ·and at Riblah, in the territory of Hamath, the king of Babylon had them put to death. Thus Judah was deported from its country.

28 The number of people deported by Nebuchadnezzar was as follows.[l] In the 29 seventh year: three thousand and twenty-three Judaeans; ·in the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, eight hundred and thirty-two persons were deported from 30 Jerusalem; ·in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzaradan commander of the guard deported seven hundred and forty-five Judaeans. In all: four thousand six hundred persons.[m]

31 But in the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fifth day of the month, Evil-Merodach king of Babylon, in the year he came to the throne,[n] pardoned Jehoiachin king of Judah
32 and released him from prison. ·He treated him kindly and allotted him a seat 33 above those of the other kings who were with him in Babylon. ·So Jehoiachin laid aside his prisoner's garb and for the rest of his life always ate at the king's table.
34 And his upkeep was permanently ensured by the king, day after day, for the rest of his life until the day he died.[o]

l. This colophon, absent from Gk, must originally have followed v. 58. It is preceded by the final verb of v. 58, 'wear themselves out', repeated here accidentally.

52 a. This chapter is a repetition, with some complementary material, of 2 K 24:18–25:30 (see notes), and is in part parallel with Jr 39:1–10; the three passages draw on the one source. It has been added to Jr as Is 36–39 were added to Is. It shows how the prophet's threats came true and ends, like 2 K, by offering a hope for the future, such as Jeremiah too had entertained.

b. Libnah, a town belonging to the tribe of Judah, Jos 15:42, was probably modern Tell es-Safi, north of the Philistine town of Gath.

c. End of December, 589 BC.

d. June–July, 587 BC.

e. 'The king' conj., cf. 39:4 and v. 8; Hebr. omits.

f. July–August, 587 BC.

g. Here and at 2 K 25:9, a gloss adds, 'he also burnt the house of every important person.'

h. The words printed in brackets are missing from 39:5; 2 K 25:11, and perhaps come from v. 16.

i. 'the twelve . . . Sea' are not found in 2 K 25:16; the bronze oxen had already been taken, in the reign of Ahaz, 2 K 16:17.

j. Hebr. adds 'and the pomegranates'.

k. Meaning uncertain. The word comes from the root meaning 'wind', 'breath'. Alternative translations, therefore: 'which hung free' or 'in relief' (lit. 'in the air'), but the 'winds' can also mean 'sides', Ezk 42:20 (cf. Ezk 37:9, about the four cardinal points, the four 'sides' of the world).

l. This short list, vv. 28–30, peculiar to Jr, seems to have been borrowed from a Babylonian source and apparently takes account only of adults. The regnal years are calculated in the Babylonian fashion which does not count the incomplete year of accession.

m. The dates of these three deportations are thus 598, 597 and lastly 587 BC. The final one may have been prompted by the rebellion of Ammon and Moab, which possibly had supporters in Judah.

n. In 561 BC.

o. Jr ends with Jehoiachin's pardon, symbolising the end of the captivity.

LAMENTATIONS

FIRST LAMENTATION [a]

1 Aleph

How deserted she sits, 1
the city once thronged with people!
Once the greatest of nations,
Ba 4:12 she is now like a widow.
Once the princess of states,
she is now put to forced labour.

2:18 Jr 9:17 Bet

All night long she is weeping, 2 tears running down her cheeks.
Ps 69:20 Jr 30:14 Not one of all her lovers [b] remains to comfort her.
Jn 13:18 Her friends have all betrayed her and become her enemies.

Gimel

Judah has gone into exile [c] 3
after much pain and toil.
Living among the nations
she finds no respite;
her persecutors all overtake her where there is no way out.

Jr 14:2 Dalet

The roads to Zion are in mourning; 4 no one comes to her festivals now.
Is 3:26 Her gateways are all deserted;
her priests groan;
her young girls are grief-stricken;
she suffers bitterly.

2:17 Dt 28:25 Ps 89:42 He

Her foes now have the upper hand, 5 her enemies prosper,
for Yahweh has made her suffer
for her many, many crimes;
her children have gone away into captivity driven in front of the oppressor.

Ezk 10:18seq.; 11:22seq. Waw

And from the daughter of Zion 6 all her splendour has departed.
Her princes were like stags which could find no pasture, exhausted, as they flee
before the hunter.

Zain

Jerusalem remembers 7
her days of misery and distress; [d] when her people fell into the enemy's clutches there was no one to help her.

Her enemies looked on and laughed at her downfall.

8 Het
Jerusalem has sinned so gravely that she has become a thing unclean.
All who used to honour her despise her, having seen her nakedness; Is 47:3 Ezk 16:37
she herself groans aloud and turns her face away.

9 Tet
Her filth befouls her skirts—she never thought to end like this,
and hence her astonishing fall with no one to comfort her. 1:2
'Yahweh, look at my misery, for the enemy is triumphant!'

10 Yod
The enemy stretched out his hand for everything she treasured;[e] 2 K 24:13 she saw the heathen
enter her sanctuary, Dt 23:4 Jr 51:51 whom you had forbidden Ezk 44:7–9 to enter your Assembly. Ac 21:28

11 Kaph
All her people are groaning, looking for something to eat; Dt 28:51seq.
they have bartered their treasures for food,
to keep themselves alive.
'Look, Yahweh, and consider how despised I am!

12 Lamed
'All you[f] who pass this way,
look and see:
is any sorrow like the sorrow Dn 9:12;12:1 Mt 24:21
inflicted on me,
with which Yahweh struck me on the day of his burning anger?

13 Mem
'He sent fire from on high deep into my bones;
he stretched a net for my feet,
he pulled me back;
he left me shattered,
sick all day long.

14 Nun
'He has watched out for my offences, with his hand he enmeshes me, his yoke is on my neck, Dt 28:48
he has deprived me of strength.

1 a. The poet describes the pitiable plight of Jerusalem. Personified Zion speaks in v. 9 and v. 11, to utter a complaint, vv. 12–16, then a prayer, vv. 18seq., which is simultaneously a confession, an aspiration and an imprecation. • Gk inserts the introduction 'When Israel had been taken into captivity and Jerusalem had become a desert, it happened that the prophet Jeremiah sat down in tears: he uttered this lamentation over Jerusalem, he said . . .'

b. The former allies of Judah, cf. Jr 4:30; 30:14; Ezk 16:37–40; 23:22–29.

c. Contrary to normal practice, Judah is personified here in the feminine.

d. Hebr. adds 'all her precious things existing from the days of old', a gloss breaking the rhythm.

e. The treasures of the Temple, cf. Jos 6:24; 1 K 14:26; 2 K 24:13, but also no doubt the possessions of private persons deposited there, see also 2 M 4:3seq.

f. 'You' Vulg.; 'Not for you' Hebr.

The Lord has put me into clutches which I am helpless to resist. [g]

Samek 15 'The Lord has rejected all my warriors within my walls, he has summoned a host against me
to crush my young men;
Is 63:3 Jl 4:13 in the winepress the Lord trampled the young daughter of Judah.

1:2 Ain 16 'And that is why I weep;
my eyes stream with water, [h] since a comforter who could revive me is far away.
My children are shattered,
for the enemy has proved too strong.'

Pe 17 Zion stretches out her hands,
with no one to comfort her.
Yahweh has commanded Jacob's enemies to surround him;
1:8 they treat Jerusalem
as though she were unclean.

Zade 18 'Yahweh is in the right,
for I rebelled against his command.
Listen, all you peoples,
and see my sorrow.
My young girls and my young men have gone into captivity.

1:2 Qoph 19 'I called to my lovers;
they failed me.
My priests and my elders expired in the city, 1:11 as they searched for food
to keep themselves alive.

Resh 20 'Look, Yahweh. I am in distress!
Jr 4:19 My inmost being is in ferment;
my heart turns over inside me—how rebellious I have been!
Dt 32:25 Jr 9:20 Outside, the sword bereaves;
inside it is like death.

Shin 21 'Listen, for I am groaning, with no one to comfort me.
All my enemies have heard of my disaster,
they are glad about what you have done.
Am 5:18m Bring the Day you once foretold, so that they may be like me! [i]

Jr 51:35 Taw 22 'Let all their wickedness come before you, and treat them
as you have treated me
for all my crimes;
numberless are my groans,
and I am sick at heart.'

SECOND LAMENTATION[a]

1 2 Aleph
In his anger, with what darkness has the Lord enveloped the daughter of Zion!
He has flung the beauty of Israel from heaven to the ground, without regard for his footstool[b] — Ezk 43:7 on the day of his anger.

2 Bet
The Lord pitilessly engulfed
all the homes of Jacob;
in his fury he tore down the fortresses of the daughter of Judah; — Dt 28:52 he threw to the ground, he desecrated the kingdom and its princes.

3 Gimel
In his burning anger
he broke all the might of Israel, — Ps 75:4c withdrew his protecting right hand at the coming of the enemy, and blazed against Jacob like a fire — 4:11 that burns up everything near it.

4 Dalet
Like an enemy he bent his bow, and his right hand held firm;[c] — Jr 21:5–6 like a foe he slaughtered all those who were a delight to see;
on the tent of the daughter of Zion
he poured out his fury like fire.

5 He
The Lord behaved like an enemy;
he engulfed Israel,
he engulfed all its citadels, he destroyed its fortresses and for the daughter of Judah multiplied weeping on wailing.

6 Waw
He wrecked his domain like a garden,[d] destroyed his assembly-points, — 2 Ch 36:19 Jr 52:13 Yahweh erased the memory of festivals and Sabbaths in Zion; — 1:4 Is 1:13 Ho 2:13 Zp 3:18 in the heat of his anger he treated king and priest with contempt.

7 Zain
The Lord has rejected his altar, — Ezk 24:21 he has come to loathe his sanctuary

g. V. reconstructed in line with Gk-Luc. and Syr., Hebr. disordered, reads literally, 'It is bound, the yoke of my sins, in his hand they are entangled, they have risen on to my neck, he has deprived me of strength, the Lord has put me into clutches, I can resist no more.' • Here and elsewhere below, 'the Lord' represents the Massoretic reading of the sacred name 'Yahweh' (pronounced adonai, lit. 'my Lord'), which passed into the written text instead of the name itself. The original word, YHWH, is preserved in a few MSS.

h. lit. 'my eye, my eye'; the repetition could be merely stylistic, cf. 3:20, but could also express the plural.

i. 'Listen' Syr.; 'They have listened' Hebr. • 'Bring' Syr.; 'You have brought' Hebr. • Disastrous for Israel in pre-exilic thought, see Am 5:18; Zp 1:14, the Day of Yahweh was later to bode disaster for the nations, see Jl 3:14.

2 a. In vv. 1–12 the poet describes the wretched fate of kings, priests, prophets, elders, children; then, addressing Zion, vv. 13–17, he reminds her how the false prophets have lied, and urges her to bewail her fate before God, vv. 18–22.

b. Yahweh's footstool was the Temple, see Ps 99:5; 132:7; Ezk 43:7.

c. As in Jr 12:7; 30:14, Yahweh is presented, tragically, as his people's enemy.

d. Instead of 'like a garden' (gan), the original reading may have been 'like a thief' (gannab), changed later out of respect for God.

and has given her palace walls into the clutches of the enemy;
from the uproar they made in Yahweh's temple
it might have been a festival day![e]

Jr 5:10 Het Yahweh has resolved to destroy 8
the walls of the daughter of Zion, 2 K 21:13 Is 34:11 stretching out the line, not staying his hand until he has engulfed everything, thus bringing mourning on wall and rampart;
alike they crumbled.

Tet Her gates have sunk into the ground; 9
he has broken and shattered their bars.
Dt 4:6,8; 28:36 2 K 25:7 Ps 74:9 Ezk 7:26 Her king and her princes are among the gentiles, there is no instruction, furthermore her prophets cannot find any vision from Yahweh.

Yod Mute, they sit on the ground, 10 Jr 6:26 the elders of the daughter of Zion;
they have put dust on their heads and wrapped themselves in sackcloth.
The young girls of Jerusalem bow their heads to the ground.

Kaph My eyes are worn out with weeping, 11 my inmost being is in ferment, my heart plummets
at the destruction of my young people, as the children and babies grow faint
in the streets of the city.

Lamed They keep saying to their mothers, 12 1:11 'Where is some food?'
as they faint like wounded men
in the streets of the city, as they breathe their last on their mothers' breasts.

1:12 Mem To what can I compare or liken you, 13 daughter of Jerusalem?
Who can rescue and comfort you,[f]
young daughter of Zion?
For huge as the sea is your ruin:
Jr 30:12 who can heal you?

Jr 5:31;29:8 Ezk 13:10 Nun The visions your prophets had for you 14 were deceptive whitewash;
they did not lay bare your guilt so as to change your fortunes: the visions they told you were deceptive.[g]

Samek All who pass your way 15
Jr 19:8 Mt 27:39par. clap their hands at the sight; they whistle and shake their heads over the daughter of Jerusalem,

'Is this the city they call Perfection of Beauty,
the joy of the whole world?' Ezk 16:14

16 Pe
Your enemies open their mouths
in chorus against you;
they whistle and grind their teeth;
they say, 'We have swallowed her up.
This is the day we were waiting for; Am 5:18
at last we have seen it!'

17 Ain
Yahweh has done what he planned, has carried out his threat,
as he ordained long ago: Dt 28:15
he has destroyed without pity, increasing the might of your foes—
and letting your foes get the credit.

18 Zade
Cry then to the Lord, rampart of the daughter of Zion;[h] let your tears flow like a torrent, 1:2
day and night;
allow yourself no respite,
give your eyes no rest!

19 Qoph
Up, cry out in the night-time as each watch begins!
Pour your heart out like water in Yahweh's presence!
Raise your hands to him
for the lives of your children (who faint with hunger at the end of every street)![i]

20 Resh
'Look, Yahweh, and consider:
whom have you ever treated like this?
Should women eat their little ones, 4:10 the children they have nursed? Dt 28:53 Jr 19:9 Should priest and prophet be slaughtered Ba 2:3 in the Lord's sanctuary?

21 Shin
'Children and old people are lying on the ground in the streets;
my young men and young girls have fallen by the sword;
you have killed them, on the day of your anger,
you have slaughtered them pitilessly.

22 Taw
'As though to a festival you called together terrors from all sides,[j] Jr 20:10b so that, on the day of Yahweh's anger, none escaped and none survived.

e. But it was the enemy's war cry.

f. 'compare' Vulg.; 'testify' Hebr. • 'Who . . . comfort you' Gk; 'To what can I liken you to comfort you' Hebr.

g. 'whitewash', an allusion to Ezk 13:10. • 'to change your fortunes', a frequent expression in Jr, also meaning 'to bring back the captives'. • 'they gave you', lit. 'they saw for you'.

h. 'Cry then' tza'aqi lak conj.; Hebr. tza'aq libbam 'their heart cries'. • The image of the rampart later in the v. does not make the best of sense, and some read 'groan, daughter of Zion' hemi instead of homat; but this conj. has no textual support.

i. The last couplet breaks the rhythm and is additional, inspired by vv. 11–12; it also appears in Gk.

j. 'terrors' conj.; 'my terrors' Hebr.

Those whom I had nursed and reared, my enemy has annihilated them all.'

THIRD LAMENTATION[a]

3 Aleph

I am the man familiar with misery 1 under the rod of his fury.
He has led and guided me 2
Jn 8:12b into darkness, not light.
Against none but me does he turn his hand, 3 again and again, all day.

Jb 30:30 Bet

He has wasted my flesh and skin away, 4 has broken my bones.
He has besieged me and made hardship 5
a circlet round my head.[b] Ps 143:3 He has forced me to dwell where all is dark, 6 like those long-dead in their everlasting home.

Jb 3:23; 19:8 Gimel

He has walled me in so that I cannot escape; 7
he has weighed me down with chains; even when I shout for help, 8
he shuts out my prayer.
He has closed my way with blocks of stone, 9
he has obstructed my paths.

Dalet

For me he is a lurking bear, 10
Jb 10:16 a lion in hiding.
Heading me off, he has torn me apart, 11 leaving me shattered.
Jb 16:12–13 He has bent his bow and used me 12 as a target for his arrows.

He

He has shot deep into me 13 with shafts from his quiver.
Dt 28:37 Jb 30:9 Ps 69:11seq. Jr 20:7 I have become a joke to all my own people,[c] 14 their refrain all day long.
He has given me my fill of bitterness, 15
Ps 69:21 Jr 23:15 he has made me drunk with wormwood.

Waw

He has broken my teeth with gravel, 16
he has fed me on ashes.[d]
Jr 16:5 I have been deprived of peace,[e] 17
I have forgotten what happiness is Jb 17:15 and thought, 'My lasting hope 18 in Yahweh is lost.'

Zain

Bring to mind my misery and anguish; 19
it is wormwood and gall!
My heart dwells on this continually 20
and sinks within me.
This is what I shall keep in mind 21
and so regain some hope:

Het

Surely Yahweh's mercies are not over, 22
Ex 34:6–7 his deeds of faithful love not exhausted; every morning they are renewed; 23 great is his faithfulness![f]

24 'Yahweh is all I have,' I say to myself, Ps 16:5;73:26
'and so I shall put my hope in him.'

25 Tet Yahweh is good to those who trust him, to all who search for him.
26 It is good to wait in silence Ps 40:1 for Yahweh to save. Is 30:18 27 It is good for someone to bear the yoke from a young age,

28 Yod to sit in solitude and silence Jr 15:17
when it weighs heavy, 29 to lay one's head in the dust—maybe there is hope—30 to offer one's cheek to the striker, Is 50:6 to have one's fill of disgrace! Mt 5:39

31 Kaph For the Lord will not reject anyone for ever.
32 If he brings grief, he will have pity Is 54:8–9 out of the fullness of his faithful love, 33 for it is not for his own pleasure Ezk 33:11 that he torments and grieves the human race.

34 Lamed When all the prisoners in a country are crushed underfoot, 35 when human rights are overridden in defiance of the Most High, 36 when someone is cheated of justice,
does not the Lord see it?

37 Mem Who has only to speak and it is so done? Gn 1
Who commands, if not the Lord? Ps 33:9 38 From where, if not from the mouth of the Most High, do evil and good come? Is 45:7 39 Why then should anyone complain?
Better to be bold against one's sins. [g]

40 Nun Let us examine our path, let us ponder it and return to Yahweh. Is 55:7 41 Let us raise our hearts and hands [h] to God in heaven.
42 We are the ones who have sinned, who have rebelled, and you have not forgiven.

43 Samek You have enveloped us in anger, pursuing us, slaughtering without pity.
44 You have wrapped yourself in a cloud too thick for prayer to pierce. 3:8 45 You have reduced us to rubbish Dt 28:37 and refuse among the nations. 1 Co 4:13

3 a. Here, as in several Psalms, the complaint of an individual expands (in vv. 40–47) into a collective lament. The generalities in vv. 22–39 are representative of themes common in wisdom literature.

b. 'hardship a circlet round my head' roshi tela'ah conj.; Hebr. rosh utela'ah 'with gall and hardship'. • A difficult verse. The image of illness is apparently immediately followed by the imagery of a siege, but the text is uncertain.

c. Some Hebr. MSS and Syr. read 'a joke to all nations', indicating that the man of v.1 had later come to be identified with Israel.

d. 'fed me on ashes' Gk; 'overturned me in ashes' Hebr.

e. 'I was deprived' Syr; 'you deprived' Hebr.

f. 'his faithfulness' conj.; 'your faithfulness' Hebr. • Vv. 22–24 are missing in Gk.

g. 'to be bold' reading yehi geber, lit. 'to be a man', instead of hay geber, whose first word Hebr. attaches to the previous line.

h. 'and our hands' Vulg.; 'towards our hands' Hebr.

Pe

Our enemies open their mouths 46
in chorus against us.
Terror and pitfall have been our lot, 47
ravage and ruin.
My eyes dissolve in torrents of tears 48
at the ruin of my beloved people.

Ain

My eyes will weep ceaselessly, 49 without relief,
Is 63:15 until Yahweh looks down 50
and sees from heaven.
My eyes have grown sore 51 over all the daughters of my city.

Zade

Unprovoked, my enemies 52
Ps 35:19; 69:4 hunted me down like a bird.
They shut me finally in a pit, 53
they closed me in with a stone.
The waters rose over my head; 54
I thought, 'I am lost!'

Qoph

Yahweh, I called on your name 55
from the deep pit.
Ps 130:2 You heard my voice, do not close your ear 56 to my prayer, to my cry.
You are near when I call to you. 57
You said, 'Do not be afraid!'

Resh

Lord, you defended my cause, 58
you have redeemed my life.[f] Yahweh, you have seen the wrong done to me, 59 grant me redress.
You have seen their vindictiveness, 60
all their plots against me.

Shin

You have heard their insults, Yahweh, 61
all their plots against me,
the whispering and murmuring of my enemies 62 against me all day long.
Look, whether they sit or stand, 63 3:14 I am their refrain.

Jr 51:56 Taw

Yahweh, repay them 64
as their deeds deserve.
Lay hardness of heart 65
as your curse on them.
Angrily pursue them, root them out 66 from under your heavens![k]

FOURTH LAMENTATION

Jr 6:27–30 4 Aleph

How the gold has tarnished, 1 how the fine gold has changed!
The sacred stones lie scattered at the corner of every street.[a]

Bet

The children of Zion, 2
as precious as finest gold—

to think that they should now be reckoned like crockery made by a potter! Jr 19:11

3 Gimel The very jackals give the breast, and suckle their young:
but the daughter of my people is as cruel as the ostriches of the desert. Jb 39:13–17

4 Dalet The tongue of the baby at the breast sticks to its palate for thirst; little children ask for bread, 2:11–12
no one gives them any.

5 He Those who used to eat only the best,
now lie dying in the streets;
those who were reared in the purple claw at the rubbish heaps,

6 Waw for the wickedness of the daughter of my people exceeded the sins of Sodom, which was overthrown in a moment Gn 19 without a hand's being laid on it.

7 Zain Once her young people were brighter than snow, whiter than milk;
rosier than coral their bodies,
their hue like sapphire. [b]

8 Het Now their faces are blacker than soot, they are not recognised in the streets,
the skin has shrunk over their bones,
as dry as a stick.

9 Tet Happier those killed by the sword than those killed by famine:
they waste away, sunken for lack of the fruits of the earth. [c]

10 Yod With their own hands, kindly women 2:20 cooked their children;
this was their food
when the daughter of my people was ruined.

11 Kaph Yahweh indulged his fury, he vented his fierce anger,
he lit a fire in Zion 2:3
which devoured her foundations.

12 Lamed The kings of the earth never believed, nor did any of the inhabitants of the world, that foe or enemy would ever penetrate the gates of Jerusalem.

13 Mem Owing to the sins of her prophets Jr 6:13 and the crimes of her priests,

i. 'to my prayer' Gk (which omits the following word, probably a gloss); 'to my liberation' Hebr.

j. God is the go'el of those who trust in him, see Rt 2:20i; Is 41:14g.

k. 'your heavens' Gk MSS, Syr.; 'Yahweh's heavens' Hebr.

4 a. The gold and sacred stones symbolise the population of Jerusalem.

b. 'her young people' ne'areka conj.; Hebr. nezireka 'her Nazirites', 'their hue' following Syro-Hex . and Origen; the Hebr. gizerah (from a root meaning 'to cut', 'to separate') remains unexplained in this passage.

c. lit. 'they flow away, pierced' perhaps in the sense 'made transparent by famine'.

Ezk 7:23

who had shed the blood of the upright,
in the heart of the city,

Nun

Nb 35:32–33

they wandered blindly through the streets, 14 polluted with blood, so that no one dared
to touch their clothes.

Lv 13:45

Samek

'Keep away! Unclean!' people shouted, 15
'Keep away! Keep away! Don't touch!'
If they left and fled to the nations, they were not allowed to stay there either. [d]

Pe

The face of Yahweh destroyed them, 16
he will look on them no more.
There was no respect for the priests,
no deference for the elders.

Ain

Continually we were wearing out our eyes, 17 watching for help—in vain.
From our towers we watched for a nation which could not save us anyway. [e]

Jr 37:7
Ezk 29:6

Zade

Men dogged our steps, 18
to keep us out of our streets.
Our end was near, our days were done,
our end had come.

Qoph

Our pursuers were swifter 19
than eagles in the sky;
they hounded our steps through the mountains,
they lay in ambush for us in the wilds.

Resh

The breath of our nostrils, Yahweh's anointed, [f] 20 was caught in their traps,

2 K 25:5–6

he of whom we said, 'In his shadow we shall live among the nations.'

Shin

Rejoice, exult, daughter of Edom, 21 you who reside in Uz! [g]

Gn 9:21
Is 51:17h
Jr 25:16
Hab 2:15seq.

To you in turn the cup will pass;
you will get drunk and strip yourself naked!

Is 40:2

Taw

Your wickedness is atoned for, daughter of Zion, 22 he will never banish you again.

Ps 137:7

But your wickedness, daughter of Edom, will he punish,
your sins he will lay bare!

FIFTH LAMENTATION [a]

5 Yahweh, remember what has happened to us; 1 consider, and see our degradation.

Our heritage has passed to strangers, 2
our homes to foreigners.

We are orphans, we are fatherless; 3 our mothers are like widows.

We have to buy our own water to drink, 4 our own wood we can get only at a price.

5 The yoke is on our necks; we are persecuted; [b] exhausted we are, allowed no rest.

6 We made a pact with Egypt, Jr 2:18 with Assyria, to have plenty of food. [c]

7 Our ancestors sinned; they are no more, and we bear the weight of their guilt. [d] Ezk 18:2

8 Slaves rule us; [e]
there is no one to rescue us from their clutches.

9 At peril of our lives we earn our bread, by risking the sword of the desert.

10 Our skin is as hot as an oven, [f] from the scorch of famine.

11 The women in Zion have been raped, the young girls in the towns of Judah.

12 Princes have been hanged by their hands;
the face of the old has won no respect.

13 Youths have been put to the mill, boys stagger under loads of wood.

14 The elders have deserted the gateway;
the young have given up their music.

15 Joy has vanished from our hearts;
our dancing has turned to mourning.

16 The crown has fallen from our heads.
Alas that ever we sinned!

17 This is why our hearts are sick;
this is why our eyes are dim:

18 because Mount Zion is desolate; jackals roam to and fro on it. Is 34:13–15

19 Yet you, Yahweh, rule from eternity; your throne endures from age to age. [g] Ps 102:12; 145:13; 146:10

20 Why do you never remember us? Ps 13:1
Why do you abandon us so long?

21 Make us come back to you, Yahweh, and we will come back. Jr 31:18 Restore us as we were before!

22 Unless you have utterly rejected us,
in an anger which knows no limit.

d. The guilty were treated like lepers. • After 'fled', Hebr. adds 'they said'. An alternative translation would therefore be, 'The nations, for their part, said, "They cannot stay here."'

e. The nation was Egypt, Judah's ally in the previous war.

f. Zedekiah, see 2 K 25:6. • 'The breath of our nostrils', i.e. our very life.

g. For Uz, see Gn 36:28; Jb 1:1. Far from helping conquered Judah, the neighbouring peoples of Moab, Ammon and particularly Edom, took advantage of her defeat, see Is 34:5b, hence the frequent anathemas against Edom in post-exilic prophetic literature, see Is 34; Ezk 25.

5 a. Entitled 'The Prayer of Jeremiah' in the Vulg.

b. Restoring 'the yoke' 'ol which has fallen from the text by haplography before 'on' 'al.

c. Israel is now at the mercy of its traditional enemies for its very existence. 'Assyria' is a conventional expression, here designating Babylon, see Jr 2:18.

d. The author sees the present disaster in terms of collective retribution; this has not yet yielded to the principle of individual retribution, see Ezk 14:12d.

e. The Chaldaean officials. The technical term for officers of the king ('servants') is used here in an insulting sense.

f. 'is' Gk; 'are' Hebr.

g. Despite the ruin of his earthly Temple, Yahweh, ever glorious and mighty, reigns in heaven.

THE BOOK OF BARUCH

INTRODUCTION

Baruch and the Jews in Babylon [a]

Jr 32:12; 36:4

1 This is the text of the book written in Babylon by Baruch son of Neraiah, son of Mahseiah, son of Zedekiah, son of Hasadiah, son of Hilkiah, ·in the fifth year, [b] on the seventh day of the month, at the time when the Chaldaeans had captured Jerusalem and burned it down.

Jr 22:24–30

Baruch read the text of this book aloud to Jeconiah [c] son of Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and to all the people who had come to hear the reading, ·to the nobles and the sons of the king, [d] and to the elders; to the whole people, that is, to the least no less than to the greatest, to all who lived in Babylon beside the river Sud. ·On hearing it they wept, fasted and prayed before the Lord; ·and they collected as much money as each could afford ·and sent it to Jerusalem to the priest Jehoiakim [e] son of Hilkiah, son of Shallum, and the other priests, and all the people who were with him in Jerusalem. ·Also on the tenth day of Sivan he was given the utensils of the house of the Lord, which had been removed from the Temple, to take them back [f] to the land of Judah; these were silver utensils which Zedekiah son of Josiah, king of Judah, had had made ·after Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had deported Jeconiah from Jerusalem to Babylon, together with the princes, the metalworkers, [g] the nobles and the common people.

Now, they wrote, we are sending you money to pay for burnt offerings, offerings for sin, and incense. Prepare oblations and offer them on the altar of the Lord our

God; ·and pray for the long life of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and of his son Belshazzar, that they may endure on earth as long as the heavens endure; and that the Lord may give us strength and enlighten our eyes, so that we may lead our lives under the protection of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and of his son Belshazzar, and that we may serve them for a long time and win their favour. Also pray to the Lord our God for us, because we have sinned against him, and the anger, the fury of the Lord, has still not turned away from us. ·Lastly, you must read the booklet which we are sending you, publicly in the house of the Lord on the feastday [h] and appropriate days. ·You must say:

b. The year 582, probably in the 5th month, anniversary of the fall of Jerusalem, which was doubtless commemorated among the exiles as it was in Palestine, see Zc 7:3; hence the gathering referred to in vv. 3–4.

c. Called also Jehoiachin.

d. i.e. officials, courtiers, cf. Jr 36:26; 38:6.

e. Evidently the priest next senior in rank, see 2 K 25:18, still living at the half-ruined sanctuary in Jerusalem, where public worship continued to be held, Jr 41:5, although the high priest Jehozadak had been carried off into exile, 1 Ch 5:41. The genealogy ascribed to Jehoiachin is that of the high-priestly line, 1 Ch 5:39, but no high priest of this name is attested until about a century later, Ne 12:10, 12, 26.

i. 'we have been disloyal' restored in line with Dn 9:5 (maradnu) a corruption of which (miharnu) 'we have been hasty' seems to have given rise to the Gk 'we have acted hastily (or unreflectingly)'.

2 a. This passage refers to the religion of 'the poor', to whom salvation is promised, see Zp 2:3d.

Jr 27:12 Lord says this: Bend your necks and serve the king of Babylon, and you will remain in the country which I gave to your ancestors. ·But if you do not listen to the voice 22
Jr 7:34 of the Lord and serve the king of Babylon ·then I shall silence the shouts of rejoicing 23 and mirth and the voices of bridegroom and bride in the towns of Judah and the streets of Jerusalem, and the whole country will be reduced to desert, with no inhabitants.' ·But we would not listen to your voice and serve the king of Babylon, 24 and so you carried out what you had threatened through your servants the Jr 8:1–2 prophets: that the bones of our kings and of our ancestors would be dragged from Jr 36:30 their resting places. ·They were indeed tossed out to the heat of the day and the frost 25
Jr 14:12 of the night. And people died in dreadful agony, from famine, sword and plague.
And so, because of the wickedness of the House of Israel and the House of Judah, 26 you have made this House, that bears your name, what it is today.

And yet, Lord our God, you have treated us in a way worthy of all your goodness 27 and boundless tenderness, ·just as you had promised through your servant Moses, 28 Lv 26:39 the day you told him to write your Law in the presence of the Israelites, and said,
'If you do not listen to my voice, this great and innumerable multitude will 29 certainly be reduced to a tiny few among the nations where I shall scatter them—

Jr 4:4a am the Lord their God. I shall give them a heart and an attentive ear, ·and they 32 they will stop being obstinate and, remembering what became of their ancestors 33 Dt 30:1,9seq. who sinned before the Lord, will turn from their evil deeds. ·Then I shall bring 34 them back to the country which I promised on oath to their ancestors Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and make them masters in it. I shall make their numbers grow; Jr 31:31 they will not dwindle again. ·And I shall make an everlasting covenant with them; 35 so that I am their God and they are my people. And never again shall I drive my people Israel out of the country which I have given them.'

2:18 3 Almighty Lord, God of Israel, a soul in anguish, a troubled heart now cries to 1
Ps 29:10 Lm 5:9 you: ·Listen and have pity, Lord, for we have sinned before you. ·You sit 2, 3
Ps 44:22 enthroned for ever, while we are perishing for ever. ·Almighty Lord, God of 4 Israel, hear the prayer of the dead of Israel,[a] of the children of those who have sinned against you and have not listened to the voice of the Lord their God; hence the disasters which dog us. ·Do not call to mind the misdeeds of our ancestors, but 5 remember instead your power and your name. ·You are indeed the Lord our God 6 Jr 31:33 and we will praise you, Lord, ·since you have put respect for you in our hearts to 7 encourage us to call on your name. We long to praise you in our exile, for we have rid our hearts of the wickedness of our ancestors who sinned against you. ·Look, 8 2:4 today we are still in exile where you have scattered us as something contemptible, accursed, condemned, for all the misdeeds of our ancestors who had abandoned the Lord our God.

II: WISDOM, THE PREROGATIVE OF ISRAEL

Pr 4:20–22 Listen, Israel, to commands that bring life; 9 hear, and learn what knowledge means.
Why, Israel, why are you in the country of your enemies, 10 growing older and older in an alien land, defiling yourselves with the dead,[b] 11 reckoned with those who go to Sheol?
Si 1:5 Jr 2:13 It is because you have forsaken the fountain of wisdom! 12
Had you walked in the way of God, 13
Is 48:18 you would be living in peace for ever.
Learn where knowledge is, where strength, 14 where understanding, and so learn where length of days is, where life, where the light of the eyes and where peace.

15 But who has found out where she lives, Jb 28:12,20 who has entered her treasure house? [c] 16 Where now are the leaders of the nations and those who ruled even the beasts of earth, Jr 27:6 17 those who sported with the birds of heaven, those who accumulated silver and gold on which all people rely,
and whose possessions had no end, 18 those who worked so carefully in silver
—but of whose works no trace is to be found?
19 They have vanished, gone down to Sheol.
Others have risen to their places, 20 more recent generations have seen the day and peopled the earth in their turn, but the way of knowledge they have not found; 21 they have not recognised the paths she treads.
Nor have their children had any grasp of her, remaining far from her way. [d] 22 Nothing has been heard of her in Canaan, Jb 2:11d nothing has been seen of her in Teman; 23 the children of Hagar in search of worldly wisdom, Gn 25:12
the merchants of Midian and Teman, [e] Ex 2:15e
the tale-spinners and the philosophers have none of them found the way to wisdom or remembered the paths she treads.

24 How great, Israel, is the house of God, [f] how wide his domain, 25 immeasurably wide,
infinitely lofty!
26 In it were born the giants, famous from the beginning, Gn 6:4 immensely tall, expert in war; Dt 1:28g 27 God's choice did not fall on these, 1 S 16:7
he did not show them the way of knowledge; 28 they perished for lack of wisdom, perished by their own folly.
29 Who has ever climbed the sky and seized her Dt 30:11a to bring her down from the clouds? Ws 9:4 Si 24:4
30 Who has ever crossed the ocean and found her to bring her back in exchange for the finest gold?
31 No one can learn the way to her, Jb 28:13–14 no one can understand the path she treads.

32 But the One who knows all discovers her, Jb 28:23
he has grasped her with his own intellect, he has set the earth firm for evermore and filled it with four-footed beasts, 33 he sends the light—and it goes, Gn 1:14
he recalls it—and trembling it obeys;

c. As in Jb 28:13–28, this question is first answered negatively: no one can achieve wisdom unaided, Ba 3:16–31; the positive answer follows: wisdom is God's possession, he has enriched Israel with it by his gift of the Law, Ba 3:24–4:4.

III: THE COMPLAINTS AND HOPES OF JERUSALEM [a]

Take courage, my people, 5 memorial of Israel! [b] Is 50:1;52:3 You were sold to the nations, 6 but not for extermination.
You provoked God;
and so were delivered to your enemies, since you had angered your Creator 7
Dt 32:17 by offering sacrifices to demons, and not to God.
Dt 32:5,10,15 You had forgotten the eternal God who reared you. 8
Is 1:2 You had also grieved Jerusalem who nursed you, for when she saw God's anger 9 falling on you, she said:

Listen, you neighbours of Zion:
God has sent me great sorrow.
I have seen my sons and daughters taken into captivity, 10
which the Eternal brought down on them.
I had reared them joyfully; 11
in tears, in sorrow, I watched them go away.
Do not, any of you, exult over me, 12
Lm 1:1–2 a widow, deserted by so many;
I am bereaved because of the sins of my children, who turned away from the Law of God, who did not want to know his precepts 13 and would not follow the ways of his commandments or tread the paths of discipline as his justice directed.
Come here, neighbours of Zion! 14
Remember my sons' and daughters' captivity,
which the Eternal brought down on them.
Dt 28:49–50 How he brought a distant nation down on them, 15
Jr 5:15;6:22,23 a ruthless nation speaking a foreign language, they showed neither respect for the aged,

nor pity for the child; 16 they carried off the widow's cherished sons, they left her quite alone, bereft of her daughters.
17 For my part, how could I help you?
18 He who brought those disasters down on you,
is the one to deliver you from your enemies' clutches.
19 Go, my children, go your way!
I must stay bereft and lonely;
20 I have taken off the clothes of peace and put on the sackcloth of entreaty;
all my life I shall cry to the Eternal.

21 Take courage, my children, call on God:
he will deliver you from tyranny, from the clutches of your enemies; 22 for I look to the Eternal for your rescue, and joy has come to me from the Holy One at the mercy soon to reach you from your Saviour, the Eternal.
23 In sorrow and tears I watched you go away, but God will give you back to me in joy and gladness for ever. Jr 31:12–13 24 As the neighbours of Zion have now witnessed your captivity, so will they soon see your rescue by God, which will come upon you with great glory and splendour of the Eternal. Is 60:1–3 25 My children, patiently bear the anger brought on you by God.
Your enemy has persecuted you, but soon you will witness his destruction and set your foot on his neck. Is 51:23 26 My favourite children have travelled by rough roads, Lm 2:22 carried off like a flock by a marauding enemy.
27 Take courage, my children, call on God:
he who brought this on you will remember you.
28 As by your will you first strayed from God, so now turn back and search for him ten times harder; 29 for as he has been bringing down those disasters on you, so will he rescue you and give you eternal joy.
30 Take courage, Jerusalem:
he who gave you your name [c] will console you.
31 Disaster will come to all who have ill-treated you and gloated over your fall.
32 Disaster will come to the cities where your children were slaves; disaster to whichever one received your children, 33 for just as she rejoiced at your fall and was happy to see you ruined, so will she grieve over her own desolation.
34 I shall deprive her of the joy of a populous city,
and her insolence will turn to mourning;
35 fire from the Eternal will befall her for many a day, Is 34:9–10,14 and demons will dwell in her for ages. Lv 16:8b;17:7d 36 Jerusalem, turn your eyes to the east, Is 60:4–5 see the joy that is coming to you from God.
37 Look, the children you watched go away are on their way home; reassembled from east and west, they are on their way home at the Holy One's command, rejoicing in God's glory.

5 Jerusalem, take off your dress of sorrow and distress, 1
Is 52:1 put on the beauty of God's glory for evermore, Is 61:10 wrap the cloak of God's saving justice around you, 2 put the diadem of the Eternal One's glory on your head, for God means to show your splendour to every nation under heaven, 3 and the name God gives you for evermore will be, 4
'Peace-through-Justice, and Glory-through-Devotion'. [a] Arise, Jerusalem, stand on the heights 5 and turn your eyes to the east:
see your children reassembled from west and east
at the Holy One's command, rejoicing because God has remembered.
Though they left you on foot 6 driven by enemies,
Is 49:22; 60:4 now God brings them back to you, carried gloriously, like a royal throne. [b]
Is 40:3–4 For God has decreed the flattening 7 of each high mountain, of the everlasting hills, the filling of the valleys to make the ground level
Is 40:5;42:16 so that Israel can walk safely in God's glory.
Is 41:19 And the forests and every fragrant tree will provide shade 8 for Israel, at God's command; for God will guide Israel in joy by the light of his glory, 9 with the mercy and saving justice which come from him.

IV: THE LETTER OF JEREMIAH

Jr 29:1 A copy of the letter which Jeremiah sent to those about to be led captive to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to tell them what he had been commanded by God:

6 'Because of the sins which you have committed before God you are to 1 be deported to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar king of the Babylonians. •Once 2 you have reached Babylon you will stay there for many years, as long as seven generations; after which I shall bring you home in peace. •Now in Babylon 3 Is 40:20 Jr 10:1–16 you will see gods made of silver, of gold, of wood, being carried shoulder-high, [a] and filling the gentiles with fear. •Be on your guard! Do not imitate the 4 foreigners, do not have any fear of their gods •as you see their worshippers 5 prostrating themselves before and behind them. Instead, say in your hearts, Ex 23:20i "Master, it is you that we must worship." •For my angel is with you; your lives 6 will be in his care.

Ps 115:4–5; 135:17 Jr 10:14 Hab 2:19 'Overlaid with gold and silver, their tongues polished smooth by a craftsman, 7 they are counterfeit and have no power to speak. •As though for a girl fond of 8 finery, these people take gold and make crowns for the heads of their gods.
And sometimes, the priests filch gold and silver from their gods to spend on 9 themselves, even giving some of it to the prostitutes on the terrace. [b] •They 10 dress up these gods of silver, gold and wood, in clothes, like human beings; on their own they cannot protect themselves from either tarnish or woodworm; when they have been dressed in purple cloaks, their faces have to be dusted, 11 because of the temple dust which settles thick on them. •One holds a sceptre 12 like the governor of a province, yet is powerless to put to death anyone who offends him; •another holds sword and mace in his right hand, yet is 13 powerless to defend himself against war or thieves. •From this it is evident that 14 they are not gods; do not be afraid of them.

15 'Just as a pot in common use becomes useless once it is broken, so are these 16 gods enshrined inside their temples. ·Their eyes are full of dust raised by the 17 feet of those who enter. ·Just as the doors are locked on all sides on someone who has offended a king and is under sentence of death, so the priests secure the temples of these gods with gates and bolts and bars for fear of burglary.
18 They light more lamps for them than they do for themselves, and the gods 19 see none of them. ·They are like one of the temple beams, which are said v. 6.18 to be gnawed away from within; the termites creep out of the ground and eat 20 them and their clothes too, and they feel nothing. ·Their faces are blackened 21 by the smoke that rises from the temple. ·Bats, swallows, birds of every kind 22 perch on their bodies and heads, and so do cats. ·From this, you can see for yourselves that they are not gods; do not be afraid of them.
23 'The gold with which they are parading their futility before the world is supposed to make them look beautiful, but if someone does not rub off the tarnish, these gods will not be shining much on their own, and even while they 24 were being cast, they felt nothing. ·However much was paid for them, there is 25 still no breath of life in them. ·Being unable to walk, they have to be carried on men's shoulders, which shows how futile they are. It is humiliating Is 46:7 for their worshippers, too, who have to stand them up again if they fall over. Ws 13:16 26 Once they have been stood up, they cannot move on their own; if they tilt askew, they cannot right themselves; offerings made to them might as 27 well be made to the dead. ·Whatever is sacrificed to them, the priests re-sell and pocket the profit; while their wives salt down part of it, but give nothing to the poor or to the helpless. As to the sacrifices themselves, why, women during their periods and women in childbed are not afraid Lv 12:4;15:19 seq.;20:18 28 to touch them! ·From all this you can tell that they are not gods; do not be afraid of them.
29 'Indeed, how can they even be called gods, when women do the offering[c] to 30 these gods of silver, gold and wood? ·In their temples, the priests stay sitting down, their garments torn, heads and beard shaved and heads un-31 covered; ·they roar and shriek before their gods as people do at funeral feasts.[d] 32 The priests take robes from the gods to clothe their own wives and 33 children. ·Whether these gods are treated badly or well, they are incapable of paying back either treatment; as incapable too of making or unmaking kings, 34 equally incapable of distributing wealth or money. If anyone fails to honour a 35 vow he has made to them, they cannot call him to account. ·They can neither 36 save anyone from death nor rescue the weak from the strong, ·nor restore sight to Ps 68:5;146:7–8 37 the blind, nor save anyone in trouble, ·nor take pity on a widow, nor be 38 generous to an orphan. ·These wooden gods overlaid with gold and silver are about as much use as rocks cut out of the mountain side. Their worship-39 pers will be confounded! ·So how can anyone think or say that they are gods?
40 'The Chaldaeans themselves do them no honour; if they find someone who is dumb and cannot speak, they present him to Bel, entreating him for the 41 gift of speech, as though he could perceive it! ·And they are incapable of drawing the conclusion and abandoning those gods—such is their lack of per-42 ception. ·Women with strings round their waists sit in the streets, burning bran 43 like incense; ·when one of these has been picked up by a passer-by and been to bed with him, she then gloats over her neighbour for not having been thought 44 as worthy as herself and for not having had her string broken.[e] ·Whatever is done for them is spurious. So how can anyone think or say that they are gods?

5 a. For other messianic names given to Jerusalem, see Is 1:26, 60:14n; Jr 33:16; Ezk 48:35.
b. For the theme of the New Exodus, see Is 40:3e.

6 a. Here and at v. 5, an allusion to Babylonian processions, in which the statues of the gods were carried out of the temples.
b. The sacred prostitutes of Babylonian temples.
c. This was forbidden by Jewish Law.
d. Allusion to cults celebrating the annual death and resurrection of certain gods.
e. This custom was associated with sacred prostitution. Fumigations with bran seem to have been a magical practice with aphrodisiac intent.

'Made by woodworkers and goldsmiths, they are only what those work- 45 men decide to make them. ·Their makers have not long to live themselves, so 46 how can the things they make be gods? ·Their legacy to their descendants is 47 nothing but delusion and dishonour. ·If war or disasters befall them, the 48 priests discuss where best to hide themselves and these gods; ·how can any- 49 one fail to realise that they are not gods, if they cannot save themselves from war or from disasters? ·And since they are only made of wood overlaid with 50 gold or silver, it will later become apparent that they are spurious; it will be obvious to everyone, to nations as to kings, that they are not gods but the work of human hands, and that there is no divine activity in them. ·Does anyone 51 still need convincing that they are not gods?

'They can neither appoint a king over a country, nor give rain to human- 52 kind, ·nor regulate their own affairs, nor rescue anyone who suffers a wrong; 53 they are as helpless as crows between sky and ground. ·If fire falls on the temple 54 of these wooden gods overlaid with gold or silver, their priests fly to safety while they for their part stay there like beams, to be burnt. ·They cannot 55 put up any resistance to a king or to enemies. ·So how can anyone think 56 or say that they are gods?

'These wooden gods overlaid with gold or silver cannot evade thieves or 57 marauders; strong men may rob them of their gold and silver and make off with the robes they are dressed in; yet they are powerless to help even themselves. ·Better to be a king displaying his prowess, a household pot of use 58 to its owner, than to be these counterfeit gods; or merely the door of a house, protecting what is inside, than these counterfeit gods; or a wooden pillar in a palace than these counterfeit gods. ·The sun, the moon and the stars, which 59 shine and have been given work to do, are obedient; ·similarly, the lightning, as 60 it flashes, is a fine sight; in the same way, the wind blows across every country, the clouds execute the order God gives them to pass over the whole earth, 61 and the fire, sent from above to consume mountain and forest, carries out its orders. ·Now these gods are not their equals, either in beauty or in 62 power. ·So, no one can think or say that they are gods, powerless as they 63 are to administer justice or to do anyone any good. ·Therefore, knowing that 64
they are not gods, do not be afraid of them.

'For they can neither curse nor bless kings, ·nor produce signs in heaven for 65, 66 the nations, nor shine like the sun, nor shed light like the moon. ·The 67 animals are better off than they are, being able to look after themselves by making for cover. ·There is not the slightest shred of evidence that they are 68 gods; so do not be afraid of them!

'Their wooden gods overlaid with gold and silver are like a scarecrow in a 69 field of cucumbers—protecting nothing. ·Or again, their wooden gods 70 overlaid with gold and silver are like a thorn-bush in a garden—any kind of bird may perch on it—or like a corpse thrown out into the dark. ·From the purple 71 and linen[f] rotting on their backs you can tell that they are not gods; and in the end, eaten away, they will be the dishonour of the country. ·Better, then, 72 someone upright who has no idols; dishonour will never come near him.'

f. Gk 'marble', probably translating the Hebr. word normally meaning 'linen', though also 'alabaster'.

EZEKIEL

INTRODUCTION

1 In the thirtieth year, on the fifth day of the fourth month, as I was among the 2 exiles by the River Chebar, heaven opened and I saw visions from God. ·On 3 the fifth of the month—it was the fifth year of exile for King Jehoiachin—·the word of Yahweh was addressed to the priest Ezekiel son of Buzi, in Chaldaea by the River Chebar. [a] There the hand of Yahweh came on him. [b]

The vision of the Chariot of Yahweh [c]

10 Rv 4

4 I looked; a stormy wind blew from the north, a great cloud with flashing fire and brilliant light round it, and in the middle, in the heart of the fire, a brilliance like 5 that of amber, ·and in the middle what seemed to be four living creatures. They 10:8–22 Ex 25:18i
6 looked like this: They were of human form. ·Each had four faces, each had four ↗Rv 4:6–8 7 wings. ·Their legs were straight; they had hooves like calves, glittering like 8 polished brass. ·Below their wings, they had human hands on all four sides 9 corresponding to their four faces and four wings. ·They touched one another with Is 6:2 their wings; they did not turn as they moved; each one moved straight forward.
10 As to the appearance of their faces, all four had a human face, and a lion's face to the right, and all four had a bull's face to the left, and all four had an eagle's 11 face. [d] ·Their wings [e] were spread upwards, each had one pair touching its neigh-12 bour's, and the other pair covering its body. ·And each one moved straight forward; they went where the spirit urged them, they did not turn as they moved.
13 Between these living creatures were what looked like [f] blazing coals, like torches, darting backwards and forwards between the living creatures; the fire gave a 14 brilliant light, and lightning flashed from the fire, ·and the living creatures kept Ex 19:18 disappearing and reappearing like flashes of lightning. [g] Ps 104:4 15 Now, as I looked at the living creatures, I saw a wheel touching the ground 16 beside each of the four-faced living creatures. ·The appearance and structure of 10:9–13 the wheels were like glittering chrysolite. All four looked alike, and their appearance and structure were such that each wheel seemed to have another wheel inside

1 a. Vv. 1–3 appear to juxtapose two distinct introductions. One, vv. 2–3[a], speaks of Ezekiel in the third person and serves as introduction to the whole book, dating the prophet's first vision to the 5th year of Jehoiachin's exile, 593–592. The other, v.1, may have introduced the vision of the Chariot of Yahweh before this occupied its present position, see pp. 1174–5. If so, the date ('the thirtieth year') is difficult to interpret, unless we amend it to 'thirteenth year' (of Jehoiachin's exile), i.e. summer of 585.

b. A phrase commonly used by Ezekiel to indicate ecstasy, see 3:22; 8:1; 33:22; 37:1; 40:1. The versions read 'on me' instead of 'on him', requiring v.3[b] to be read with v. 4.

c. This vision is clearly meant for the exiles. Though some details are obscure, its general sense is clear, namely Yahweh's transcendence of place: he is not tied to the Temple of Jerusalem but can follow his people to their place of exile.

d. These strange creatures are reminiscent of the Assyrian karibu (a name akin to that of the great winged creatures over the ark, see Ex 25:18i), creatures with a human head, the body of a lion, the hooves of a bull and the wings of an eagle; their effigies stood guard outside the palaces of Babylon. These servants of the gods are here shown harnessed to the chariot of the God of Israel, a vivid illustration of Yahweh's transcendence. The characteristics of these creatures were later used to describe the 'four living beings' in Rv (4:7–8 etc.). In Christian tradition they have become symbolic of the four evangelists.

e. 'Their wings' Gk; 'Their faces and their wings' Hebr.

f. 'Between' versions; 'the likeness of' Hebr. • 'what looked like', lit. 'an appearance of' Gk; 'their appearance' Hebr.

g. lit. 'ran (?) and returned'. v. found only in Hebr., possibly a gloss.

they moved. ·Their circumference was of awe-inspiring size, and the rims of all 18

Ex 24:10 ↗Rv 4:6 over their heads, above them,[l] ·and under the solid surface, their wings were 23 spread out straight, touching one another, and each had a pair covering its body.[m] 10:5 I also heard the noise of their wings; when they moved, it was like the noise of 24 Gn 17:1b flood-waters, like the voice of Shaddai, like the noise of a storm, like the noise of an armed camp; and when they halted, they lowered their wings; ·there was a 25 noise too.[n]

Beyond the solid surface above their heads, there was what seemed like a 26 ↗Rv 4:2–3 sapphire, in the form of a throne. High above on the form of a throne was a form with the appearance of a human being.

8:2 I saw a brilliance like amber, like fire, radiating from what appeared to be the 27 someone speaking to me.

The vision of the scroll[a]

Dn 10:11 2 He said, 'Son of man,[b] get to your feet; I will speak to you.' ·As he said these 1, 2 3:24 words the spirit came into me and put me on my feet, and I heard him speaking Dt 9:7,24 to me. ·He said, 'Son of man, I am sending you to the Israelites, to the rebels[c] who 3 have rebelled against me. They and their ancestors have been in revolt against me up to the present day. ·Because they are stubborn and obstinate[d] children, I am 4 sending you to them, to say, "Lord Yahweh says this." ·Whether they listen or 5 12:2;33:33 not, this tribe of rebels will know there is a prophet among them. ·And you, son of 6 Jr 1:8,17 man, do not be afraid of them or of what they say, though you find yourself surrounded with brambles and sitting on scorpions. Do not be afraid of their words or alarmed by their looks, for they are a tribe of rebels. ·You are to deliver my 7

When I looked, there was a hand stretching out to me, holding a scroll. ·He 9, 10 ↗Rv 5:1;10:2 unrolled it in front of me; it was written on, front and back; on it[f] was written 'Lamentations, dirges and cries of grief'.

3 He then said, 'Son of man, eat what you see; eat this scroll, then go and speak 1
Ps 19:10 Jr 15:16 to the House of Israel.' ·I opened my mouth; he gave me the scroll to eat ·and 2, 3 ↗Rv 10:8–11 then said, 'Son of man, feed on this scroll which I am giving you and eat your fill.'
So I ate it, and it tasted sweet as honey.[g] am making your resolution as hard as a diamond, harder than flint. So do not be afraid of them, do not be overawed by them, for they are a tribe of rebels.'

Then he said, 'Son of man, take to heart everything I say to you, listen carefully, 10

11 then go to your exiled countrymen and talk to them. Say to them, "Lord Yahweh says this," whether they listen or not.'

12 The spirit lifted me up, and behind me I heard a great vibrating sound, 'Blessed 1 K 18:12c creatures' wings beating against each other, and the sound of the wheels beside 14 them: a great vibrating sound. ·The spirit lifted me up and took me, and I went, 15 bitter and angry, and the hand of Yahweh lay heavy on me. ·I came to Tel Abib, to the exiles beside the River Chebar where they were living, and there I stayed with them in a stupor for seven days.

The prophet as watchman [b]

16, 17 After seven days the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, I have appointed you as watchman for the House of Israel. When you hear a 33:1–9 18 word from my mouth, warn them from me. ·If I say to someone wicked, "You will Is 21:6,8,11 die," and you do not warn this person; if you do not speak to warn someone wicked to renounce evil and so save his life, it is the wicked person who will die for the 19 guilt, but I shall hold you responsible for that death. ·If, however, you do warn someone wicked who then fails to renounce wickedness and evil ways, the wicked 20 person will die for the guilt, but you yourself will have saved your life. ·When 18:24; 33:12–13 someone upright renounces uprightness to do evil and I set a trap for him, it is he 2 P 2:21 who will die; since you failed to warn him, he will die for his guilt, and the uprightness he practised will no longer be remembered; but I shall hold you 21 responsible for his death. ·If, however, you warn someone upright not to sin and this person does not sin, such a one will live, thanks to your warning, and you too will have saved your life.'

I: BEFORE THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM

Ezekiel is struck dumb

22 While I was there the hand of Yahweh came on me; he said, 'Get up, go out into 23 the valley, and there I shall speak to you.' ·I got up and went out into the valley; the glory of Yahweh was resting there, like the glory I had seen by the River 1:28 24 Chebar, and I fell to the ground. ·The spirit of Yahweh then entered me and put 2:2
me on my feet and spoke to me.

25 He said, 'Go and shut yourself in your house. ·Son of man, you are about to be 26 tied and bound, [c] and unable to mix with other people. ·I am going to make your tongue stick to the roof of your mouth; you will be dumb, and no longer able to 27 reprove them, for they are a tribe of rebels. ·When I speak to you, however, I shall

i. lit. 'had eyes', but the word must be understood in its figurative sense of 'sparkle' vv. 4, 7, 16, 22, 27; 8:2, 10:9. The mention of these reflections is perhaps a gloss inspired by 10:12.

j. after 'moved' Hebr. adds 'for the spirit to go forward.'

k. After 'crystal', Hebr. adds 'awe-inspiring'; Gk omits.

l. The throne of Yahweh is therefore supported, rather than drawn along, by the living creatures. Compare the ark of the covenant, Ex 25:10e; there Yahweh is 'enthroned on the winged creatures', 1 S 4:4, etc.

m. Hebr. repeats, 'each had a pair covering it', a dittography missing from MSS and Gk.

n. Hebr. adds, 'above the platform over their heads when they halted and lowered their wings', dittography.

o. The Israelites were afraid of seeing Yahweh's face, and in theophanies Yahweh normally allowed them to see only 'his glory', that is, the exterior signs surrounding and revealing his presence, Ex 33:18, 22. The glory usually took the form of a bright cloud, Ex 16:10; for the glory see also 43:1.5. Here the cloud is accompanied by a brilliant, luminous silhouette in human shape.

2 a. The vision of the chariot of Yahweh is continued later, 3:12. It is interrupted here by the vision of the scroll, which was probably Ezekiel's first vision (in 593) in which he received his prophetic call, see p. 1174.

b. The expression 'son of man' used by God of his prophet is peculiar to Ezk (Dn 8:17 excepted), see Mt 8:20h.

c. 'to the rebels' Gk; 'to the nations, the rebels' Hebr.

d. lit. 'hard of face and stiff of heart'.

e. 'set of rebels' Gk, Syr. and MSS; 'rebels' Hebr.

f. 'on it (was written)' 'aleha conj.; Hebr. 'eleha 'to it'.

3 a. The mouth of Isaiah had been touched by a seraph, Is 6:5–7, that of Jeremiah by Yahweh himself who 'put his words into the prophet's mouth', Jr 1:9, an idea which Ezekiel expresses even more realistically.

b. In 33:1–9 the same theme is developed more coherently; it may have been reproduced, barely modified, here, since it outlines the programme of the prophet's future career. Ezekiel stresses the individual responsibility of his hearers, see 14:12d.

c. Some understand a paralysis of some kind, cf. 4:4seq, the physical ordeal acquiring, by revelation, a symbolic meaning incorporating it into the prophetic message, see Jr 18:1a.

24:27;29:21; 33:22 open your mouth and then you will say to them, "Lord Yahweh says this: Let anyone prepared to listen, listen; let anyone who refuses, refuse!"—for they are a tribe of rebels.'

Jr 18:1a The siege of Jerusalem foretold

4 'For your part, son of man, take a brick and lay it in front of you; on it scratch 1 a city, Jerusalem. ·You are then to besiege it,[a] trench round it, build earth- 2 works, pitch camps and bring up battering-rams all round. ·Then take an iron pan 3 and place it as though it were an iron wall between you and the city. Then fix your gaze on it; it is being besieged and you are besieging it. This is a sign for the House of Israel.

'Lie down on your left side and take the guilt of the House of Israel on yourself.[b] 4
You will bear their guilt for as many days as you lie on that side. ·Allowing one day 5 for every year of their guilt, I ordain that you bear it for three hundred and ninety days; this is how you will bear the House of Israel's guilt. ·And when you have 6 finished doing this, you are to lie down again, on your right side, and bear the guilt of the House of Judah for forty days. I have set the length for you as one day for one year.[c] ·Then fix your gaze on the siege of Jerusalem, raise your bared arm and 7 3:25 prophesy against her. ·Look, I am going to tie you up and you will not be able to 8 turn over from one side to the other until the period of your seclusion is over.

'Now take wheat, barley, beans, lentils, millet and spelt; put them all in the same 9 pot and make them into bread for yourself. You are to eat it for as many days as you are lying on your side—three hundred and ninety days. ·Of this food, you are 10 to weigh out a daily portion of twenty shekels and eat it a little piece at a time. And you are to ration the water you drink—a sixth of a hin—drinking that a little 11 at a time.[d] ·You are to eat this in the form of a barley cake baked where they can 12 see you, on human dung.' ·And Yahweh said, 'This is how the Israelites will have 13 to eat their defiled food, wherever I disperse them among the nations.' ·I then said, 14 Ex 22:30 Lv 17:15 Dt 14:3–21 Ac 10:14 'Lord Yahweh, my soul is not defiled. From my childhood until now, I have never eaten an animal that has died a natural death or been savaged; no tainted meat has ever entered my mouth.' ·'Very well,' he said, 'I grant you cow-dung[e] instead of 15 human dung; you are to bake your bread on that.' ·He then said, 'Son of man, I am 16 12:18–19 Lv 26:26 Ps 105:16 going to cut off Jerusalem's food supply;[f] in their extremity, the food they eat will be weighed out; to their horror, the water they drink will be rationed, ·until there 17
Lv 26:39 is no food or water left, and they fall into a stupor and waste away because of their guilt.'

5 'Son of man, take a sharp sword, use it like a barber's razor and run it over 1 your head and beard. Then take scales and divide the hair you have cut off. Burn one-third inside the city, while the days of the siege are working themselves 2 21 out. Then take another third and chop it up with the sword all round the city. The last third you are to scatter to the wind, while I unsheathe the sword behind them.[a] Also take a few hairs[b] and tie them up in the folds of your cloak; ·and of these 3, 4 again take a few, and throw them on the fire and burn them. From them fire will come on the whole House of Israel.[c]

'The Lord Yahweh says this, "This is Jerusalem, which I have placed in the 5 38:12 middle of the nations, surrounded with foreign countries. ·She has rebelled more 6 perversely against my observances than the nations have, and against my laws than the surrounding countries have; for they have rejected my observances and not kept my laws."

'Therefore, the Lord Yahweh says this, "Because your disorders are worse than 7 those of the nations round you, since you do not keep my laws or respect my observances, and since you do not respect even the observances of the surrounding nations, ·very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: I, too, am against you and shall 8 Jr 1:16 execute my judgements[d] on you for the nations to see. ·Because of all your 9 loathsome practices I shall do such things as I have never done before, nor shall Dt 28:53+ ever do again. ·Those of you who are parents will eat their children, and children 10 will eat their parents. I shall execute judgement on you and disperse what remains Lv 26:33 11 of you to the winds. •For, as I live—declares Lord Yahweh—as sure as you have defiled my sanctuary with all your horrors and all your loathsome practices, so I 12 too shall reject [e] you without a glance of pity, I shall not spare you. •A third of your 7:4;8:18; 9:10; 24:14 citizens will die of plague or starve to death inside you; a third will fall by the sword round you; and a third I shall scatter to the winds, unsheathing the sword behind 13 them. [f] •I shall sate my anger and bring my fury to rest on them until I am avenged; and when I have sated my fury on them, then they will know that I, Yahweh, spoke 14 out of jealousy for you. •Yes, I shall reduce you to a ruin, an object of derision to 15 the surrounding nations, in the eyes of all who pass by. •You will be an object of derision and insults, an example, an object of amazement to the surrounding Lv 26:32 nations, when I execute judgement on you in furious anger and furious punish-16 ments. I, Yahweh, have spoken. •On them I shall send the deadly arrows of famine, which will destroy you—for I shall send them to destroy you; then I 17 shall make the famine worse and cut off your food supply. •I shall 4:16 send famine and wild animals on you to rob you of your children; plague and bloodshed will sweep through you, and I shall bring the sword down on you. I, Yahweh, have spoken." '

Against the mountains of Israel

1, 2 6 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, turn 3 towards the mountains of Israel and prophesy against them. [a] •Say, "Mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Yahweh. The Lord Yahweh says this to mountains and hills and ravines and valleys: Look, I am going to summon the 4 sword against you and destroy your high places. •Your altars will be wrecked, and Lv 26:30–31 your incense burners smashed; I shall fling your butchered inhabitants down in 5 front of your foul idols; [b] •I shall lay the corpses of the Israelites in front of their 6 foul idols and scatter their bones all round your altars. •Wherever you live, the Jr 8:1–2 towns will be destroyed and the high places wrecked, to the ruin and wrecking [c] of your altars, the shattering and abolition of your foul idols, the smashing of your Is 2:18 Jr 10:14–15 7 incense burners and the utter destruction of all your works. •As the butchered fall Mi 1:7 about you, you will know that I am Yahweh. [d]

8 "But I shall spare some of you to escape the sword among the nations, when you Is 4:3c 9 have been dispersed in their lands; •and your survivors will remember me among Lv 26:40–41 Dt 30:1–2 the nations where they are held captive, since I shall have broken [e] their adulterous hearts for having deserted me, and destroyed their eyes for having turned adulter- 16:23 ously towards their foul idols. They will loathe themselves for all the wrong they 4 a. Ezekiel is commanded to mime the forthcoming siege of Jerusalem (the brick 'besieged', the motionless prophet, the poor food meagrely rationed, the hair burnt or scattered to the winds). For similar symbolic gestures, particularly elaborate with Ezekiel, see Jr 18:1a.

b. 'on yourself' conj.; 'on it' Hebr.

c. Unsuccessful attempts have been made to put a strict interpretation on these figures as prophecies of the duration of the respective exiles of Israel and Judah. Presumably they are to be taken only as the prophecy of a siege, the duration of which has not been revealed, designed as punishment for the protracted infidelity of the two kingdoms.

d. About 0.5 lb (227 gr.) of bread and 2 pints (1 litre) of water.

e. Dried dung is used as fuel in the East.

f. lit. 'staff of bread', for bread was stored on a stick, see 5:16; 14:13; Lv 26:26; Ps 105:16.

5 a. The siege will end in massacre; the meaning of the prophet's mime is unmistakable.

b. The 'remnant' that is spared and, after further ordeal, saved, see Is 4:3c.

c. Meaning obscure. Possibly a gloss suggested by 19:14.

d. 'I shall execute my judgements' ('asiti mishpatim) is frequently emended to 'I shall do justice' ('asiti shepatim), a frequent expression in Ezk. But the Hebr. word also means 'customs' and is used in that sense in the previous v. ('observances'). Possibly then a play on words is intended: You have not observed my customs (lit. 'executed my mishpatim'), very well, I shall execute my judgements on you.

e. 'reject' versions; 'shave' Hebr.

f. This catalogue of disaster: sword, famine and plague, very common in Jr (14:12; 21:7, 9; 24:10; 27:8, 13; 29:17, 18; 32:24, 36; 34:17; 38:2; 42:17, 22; 44:13) frequently recurs with variations in Ezk (6:11–12; 7:15; 12:16; 14:21, see also 33:27).

6 a. 'against' 'al conj.; Hebr., 'el 'towards' but the use of these prepositions is fairly lax in Ezk, a trace perhaps of popular dialect.

b. In Hebr. gillulim. The word seems to have been invented by Ezekiel (who uses it 38 times), possibly on analogy with shiqqutzim 'horrors', used earlier by Jeremiah, and influenced by 'elilim 'false gods', 'nothings', used by Isaiah. It is related to the root galal 'to roll' and the noun gelal 'dirt', 'filth', presumably indicating the disgusting nature of the idols.

c. 'wrecking' versions; 'guilt' Hebr.

d. 'you will know that I am Yahweh', a recurrent expression in Ezekiel. Yahweh's deeds force people, however ill-disposed, to acknowledge his omnipotence, see Is 42:8e.

e. 'I shall have broken' versions; 'I shall have been broken (because of)' Hebr.

have caused by their loathsome practices. ·Then they will know that I am Yahweh 10 and that I was not talking lightly when I said that I would inflict these disasters on them."

The sins of Israel

25:6 'The Lord Yahweh says this, "Clap your hands, stamp your feet, and say: Alas for 11 all the loathsome sins of the House of Israel, which is about to fall by sword, famine and plague! ·Far off, they will die by plague; near at hand they will fall by the 12 sword; and any who survive or are spared will die of famine. This is how I shall sate my fury on them. ·Then you will know that I am Yahweh, when their butchered 13 Dt 12:2b corpses lie among their foul idols, all round their altars, on every high hill, on every mountain top, under every green tree, under every leafy oak, wherever they offer Ex 29:18d a smell pleasing to all their idols. ·I shall point my finger at them and reduce the 14 2 K 23:33;25:6 country to an empty wasteland from the desert to Riblah,[f] everywhere they live, and they will know that I am Yahweh." '

Am 5:18m The end is near

7 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, say,[g] 1, 2
"Lord Yahweh says this to the land of Israel: Finished! The end is coming for =7:8–9 the four corners of the country. ·This is the end for you; I shall unleash my anger 3 on you, and judge you as your conduct deserves and call you to account for all your 5:11e loathsome practices. ·I shall show you no pity, I shall not spare you; I shall repay 4 you for your conduct and for the loathsome practices in which you persist. Then you will know that I am Yahweh.
↗Rv 8:13;9:12; 11:14 "The Lord Yahweh says this: Disaster, a unique disaster, is coming. ·The end is 5, 6 coming, the end is coming, it is on the move towards you, it is coming now. ·Now 7 it is your turn,[h] you who dwell in this country. Doom is coming, the day is near;[i] =7:3–4 no joy now, only tumult, on the mountains. ·Now I shall soon vent my fury on you 8 and sate my anger on you: I shall judge you as your conduct deserves and repay you for all your loathsome practices. ·I shall show neither pity nor mercy, but shall 9 repay you for your conduct and the loathsome practices in which you persist. Then you will know that I am Yahweh and that I strike.
"Now is the day, your turn has come, it has come, it appears, the sceptre has 10 blossomed,[j] pride is at its peak. ·Violence has risen to become the scourge of 11 wickedness . . .[k] ·Doom is coming, the day is near. Neither should buyer rejoice, 12 nor seller regret, for the fury rests on everyone alike.[l] ·The seller will not be able 13 to go back on his bargain;[m] each persists in his sins; they take no defensive measures. ·The trumpet sounds, all is ready, but no one goes into battle, since my 14 fury rests on all alike.

The sins of Israel

↗Mt 24:16–18 "Outside, the sword; inside, plague and famine. Whoever is living in the country- 15 side will die by the sword; whoever is living in the city will be devoured by famine and plague. ·And those who escape will escape to the mountains and there, like 16 21:12 doves of the valleys, I shall slaughter them all,[n] each one for his sin. ·Every hand 17 will grow limp, every knee turn to water. ·They will put on sackcloth, each one 18 Am 8:10 trembling. Every face will be ashamed and every head be shaved.[o] ·They will throw 19 Pr 11:4 their silver away in the streets and their gold they will regard as a pollution; neither their silver nor their gold will be able to save them on the day of Yahweh's fury.
Never again will they have enough to eat, never again will they fill their bellies, since that was the occasion for their guilt. ·They used to pride themselves on the 20 beauty of their jewellery, out of which they made their loathsome images, their horrors; so now I have made it pollute them. ·I shall hand it[p] over as plunder to 21 foreigners, as loot to the most evil people on earth. They will profane it. ·I shall 22 turn my face away from them, while my treasure-house is profaned and robbers will force their way in and profane it.

23 "Forge yourself a chain; [k] for the country is full of bloody executions and the city 24 full of deeds of violence, •so I shall bring the cruellest of the nations to seize their houses. I shall put an end to the pride of their élite, and their sanctuary will be 25 profaned. •Terror is on the way: they will look for peace and there will be none.

them as their own verdicts merit. Then they will know that I am Yahweh!" '

A vision of the sins of Jerusalem

1 8 In the sixth year, on the fifth day of the sixth month, [a] I was sitting at home and 14:1;20:1
the elders of Judah were sitting with me, when suddenly the hand of the Lord 1:3b Yahweh fell on me there.
2 I looked, and there was a form with the appearance of a human being. [b] Down- 1:26–28 wards from what seemed to be the waist there was fire; and upwards from the waist 3 there was a brilliance like the glitter of amber. [c] •Something like a hand was stretched out and it took me by a lock of my hair; and the spirit lifted me between Dn 14:36 3:12 heaven and earth and, in visions from God, [d] took me to Jerusalem, to the entrance 4 of the inner north gate, where stands the idol that provokes jealousy. [e] •There was Dt 32:21
5 the glory of the God of Israel; it looked like what I had seen in the valley. •He said, •1:28;3:22seq. Ex 24:16f 'Son of man, raise your eyes to the north.' I raised my eyes to the north, and there, 6 to the north of the altar gate, stood this statue of jealousy at the entrance. •He said, 'Son of man, do you see what they are doing, the monstrous, loathsome things that the House of Israel is practising here, to drive me out of my sanctuary?
And you will see practices more loathsome still.'
7 He next took me to the entrance to the court. I looked; there was a hole in the 8 wall. •He said, 'Son of man, bore through the wall.' I bored through the wall, until 9 I had made an opening. •He said, 'Go in and look at the loathsome things they are 10 doing inside.' •I went in and looked and there was every kind of reptile and repulsive animal, and all the foul idols of the House of Israel, carved all round the 11 walls. •Seventy elders of the House of Israel were worshipping the idols—among them Jaazaniah son of Shaphan—each one with his censer in his hand, from which 12 rose a fragrant cloud of incense. •He said, 'Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the House of Israel do in the dark, each in his personal image-shrine? Lv 26:1 13 They say, "Yahweh cannot see us; Yahweh has abandoned the country." ' •He 9:9 Is 29:15 said, 'You will see them at practices more loathsome still.'
14 He next took me to the entrance of the north gate of the Temple of Yahweh

f. 'from the desert to Riblah' MSS; 'the desert of Diblatha' Hebr. Riblah, see 2 K 23:33; 25:6*seq*, here stands for the most northerly point of Palestine, and 'the desert' is its southern boundary, see Jg 20:1a.

7 a. 'say' Gk, Syr.; Hebr. omits.
b. Trans. uncertain, lit. 'the crown is coming towards you', as also in v. 10.
c. The 'Day of Yahweh', see Am 5:18m.
d. Text very obscure. We have tried to give a translation consistent with v.7; literally, the Hebr. would give 'the crown has come, has come out, the rod has blossomed'.
e. The end of this verse is unintelligible, lit. 'not (coming) from them, nor from their multitude, nor from their tumult, and they are worthless'. The Gk interprets the whole verse 'He will break the prop of the wicked, without tumult, without haste.'
f. lit. 'against all its (Jerusalem's?) multitude'. So also in v.14.
g. Hebr. adds 'even if their living being is still alive, for the vision destined for its entire multitude will not be revoked (?)'; Gk omits.
h. 'I shall slaughter them all' Gk; 'all moaning' Hebr.
i. Sign of disgrace.
j. Perhaps the city of Jerusalem.
k. Perhaps alluding to the coming deportation; but the text is doubtful.
l. These words, absent from Gk, seem to be a later addition inspired by the reference to 'the prince'. Ezekiel does not use the term 'king' for the human ruler of Israel; for him, God alone is king of Israel, 20:23, the ruler is referred to as 'the prince', 12:12.

8 a. September–October 592 BC.
b. 'like a human being' Gk; 'like fire' Hebr.
c. As in 1:26–28, Yahweh himself appears to the prophet. In v.4 it is only the 'glory of Yahweh', see also 1:28.
d. These are to show the prophet the guilt of Jerusalem, not for past sins or for any collective identification with sinners who disregard the Law, but for present and positive faults calling for immediate punishment, see 14:12d.
e. The jealousy of Yahweh aroused by any form of idolatry. The 'idol of idolatry' is perhaps the statue of Astarte set up in the Temple of Manasseh, 2 K 21:7.

where women were sitting, weeping for Tammuz.[f] •He said, 'Son of man, do you 15 see that? You will see even more loathsome things than that.'

He then led me to the inner court of the Temple of Yahweh. And there, at the 16 entrance to Yahweh's sanctuary, between the portico and the altar, there were about twenty-five men, with their backs to Yahweh's sanctuary and their faces turned towards the east. They were prostrating themselves to the east, before the rising sun. •He said to me, 'Son of man, do you see that? Is it not bad enough for 17 the House of Judah to be doing the loathsome things they are doing here? But they fill the country with violence and provoke my anger further; look at them now 5:11e putting that branch to their nostrils.[g] •And so I shall react in fury; I shall show 18 Jr 11:11+ neither pity nor mercy. They may cry as loudly as they like to me; I will not listen.'

The punishment[a]

9 Then he shouted loudly for me to hear, 'The scourges of the city are approach- 1
Tb 5:4b ing, each carrying his weapon of destruction!' •Immediately six men advanced 2 from the upper north gate, each holding a deadly weapon. Among them was a man dressed in linen, with a scribe's ink-horn in his belt. They came in and halted in 1:28o front of the bronze altar. •The glory of the God of Israel rose from above the 3 Ex 25:18i winged creature where it had been, towards the threshold of the Temple. He called to the man dressed in linen with a scribe's ink-horn in his belt •and Yahweh said to 4 Ex 12:7,13 him, 'Go all through the city, all through Jerusalem, and mark a cross[b] on the ↗Rv 7:2,3 foreheads of all who grieve and lament over all the loathsome practices in it.' •I 5 heard him say to the others, 'Follow him through the city and strike. Not one Ex 32:27 glance of pity; show no mercy; •old men, young men, girls, children, women, kill 6
Nb 25:5,8 and exterminate them all. But do not touch anyone with a cross on his forehead.
↗Rv 9:4 Begin at my sanctuary.' So they began with the old men who were in the Temple.
He said to them, 'Defile the Temple; fill the courts with corpses; then go out!' They 7 went out and hacked their way through the city.

While they were hacking them down, I was left alone; I fell on my face, crying 8 11:13 out, 'Ah, Lord Yahweh, are you going to annihilate all that is left of Israel by

8:12 they say, "Yahweh has abandoned the country, Yahweh cannot see." •Then, I too 10 Ps 10:11+ shall neither give one glance of pity nor show any mercy. I shall repay them for what they have done.' •The man dressed in linen with the scribe's ink-horn in his 11 belt then came back and made his report, 'I have carried out your orders.'

1:22 10 Then, in vision I saw[a] that above the solid surface over the heads of the 1 1:26 winged creatures there was above them something like sapphire, which ↗Rv 4:3 seemed to be like a throne. •He then said to the man dressed in linen, 'Go in 2 between the wheels below the winged creatures; take a handful of burning Gn 19:24 coal from between the winged creatures and scatter it over the city.' He went in ↗Rv 8:5 as I watched.

The winged creatures were on the right of the Temple as the man went in, and 3 1:28o the cloud filled the inner court. •The glory of Yahweh rose from above the winged 4
Ex 24:16f; 40:34–35 creatures, towards the threshold of the Temple; the Temple was filled by the cloud
1 K 8:10–11 and the court was full of the brightness of the glory of Yahweh. •The noise of the 5 •1:24 winged creatures' wings could be heard even in the outer court, like the voice of Ex 19:19 Ps 29:30 God Almighty when he speaks.

When he had given the order to the man dressed in linen, 'Take the fire from 6 between the wheels, between the winged creatures,' the man went in and stood by one of the wheels. •One of the winged creatures then reached his hand out towards 7 the fire between the winged creatures, took some of it and put it into the hands of the man dressed in linen, who took it and came out again.

There appeared to be what looked like a human hand under the winged crea- 8 1:5–21 tures' wings. •And I looked, and there were four wheels beside the winged 9 creatures, one wheel beside each winged creature, and the appearance of the 10 wheels was like the sparkle of chrysolite. ·In appearance, all four looked alike, as though each wheel had another wheel inside it.

11 In whichever of the four directions they moved, they did not need to turn as they moved, but whichever way the head was facing there they followed; they did not 12 turn as they moved, ·and their entire bodies, their backs, their hands, their wings, 13 as well as the wheels, had eyes all the way round (the wheels of all four). ·In my Rv 4:8 14 hearing, these wheels were called 'galgal'. [b] ·Each had four faces; the first was a winged creature's face, the second a human face, [c] the third a lion's face and the Rv 4:7 15 fourth an eagle's face. ·The winged creatures rose; this was the being I had seen by 16 the River Chebar. ·When the winged creatures moved, the wheels moved beside them; and when the winged creatures raised their wings to leave the ground, the 17 wheels did not turn beside them. ·When the former halted the latter halted; when the former rose, the latter rose with them, since they shared the same living spirit.

The glory of Yahweh leaves the Temple 1:28*o* Ex 24:16f

18 The glory of Yahweh then came out over the Temple threshold and paused over 19 the winged creatures. ·These raised their wings and rose from the ground as I watched, and the wheels were beside them. They paused at the entrance to the east gate [d] of the Temple of Yahweh, with the glory of the God of Israel over them, 43:2seq.
20 above. ·This was the winged creature I had seen beneath the God of Israel by the 21 River Chebar; I knew that they were winged creatures. ·Each had four faces and 22 four wings and what seemed to be human hands under their wings. ·Their faces were like those I had seen by the River Chebar. [e] Each one moved straight forward.

The sins of Jerusalem (continued) [a]

1 11 The spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the Temple of 3:12 Yahweh, the gate that looks eastwards. There at the entrance to the gate stood twenty-five men, among whom I saw Jaazaniah son of Azzur and Pelatiah 8:16 son of Benaiah, leaders of the people.
2 He [b] said to me, 'Son of man, these are the wicked schemers who are spreading
3 their bad advice through this city. ·They say, "There will be no house-building yet
4 awhile. The city is the cooking pot and we are the meat." [c] ·So prophesy against 24:1–14 5 them, prophesy, son of man!' ·The spirit of Yahweh fell on me, and he said to me, 'Say, "Yahweh says this: I know what you are saying, House of Israel, I know how 6 insolent you are. ·You have filled this city with more and more of your victims; you 7 have strewn its streets with victims. ·And so the Lord Yahweh says this: Your victims, whom you have put in it, are the meat, and the city is the cooking pot; but

f. Assyro-Babylonian deity of popular origin, known in Mediterranean mythology as Adonis ('My Lord'). Mourning was held for him every year in the month of Tammuz (June–July) to commemorate the period of his stay in the underworld.

g. The ceremony referred to here cannot be identified with any certainty.

9 a. The vision reveals that the punishment will not strike indiscriminately; it will spare the innocent, see 14:12d.

b. lit. 'a taw', as the Vulg. translates. In the ancient script this letter was cruciform.

10 a. After the massacre of the inhabitants, the destruction of the city itself.

b. Precise connotation here and at vv. 2 and 6 uncertain, but basically something that revolves or whirls.

c. 'the first face', 'the second face' Syr.; 'the face of the first', 'the face of the second' Hebr.

d. 'they paused' versions; 'he paused' Hebr. The east gate overlooked the Kidron valley towards the Mount of Olives, cf. 11:23.

e. Hebr. adds 'their appearance and them (?)'; Gk omits.

11 a. This passage, 11:1–21, should be attached to ch. 8 (prior to the destruction of the city) unless it is a doublet, cf. 8:7seq. The vision of the departure of Yahweh, cf. 10:18–22, should have its normal continuation in 11:22–23.

b. Yahweh, as Gk and Syr. make clear.

c. The import of these evil counsellors' advice is by no means clear. According to the Gk, which reads the first sentence as a question, Ezekiel seems to be denouncing the sense of false security indulged in by those who think they have escaped the calamity and now propose to settle down in Jerusalem. The image of the meat in the pot, resumed and developed at 24:1–4 would also seem to refer to the false security of those who now think themselves safe, as the meat is protected by the pot from the flames. The MT, however, which we follow, seems to show Ezekiel denouncing an extreme form of defeatism, with the image of the pot elaborating on this pessimism by foretelling the dire results of such a lack of confidence, v.8. Possibly, however, the prophet is denouncing the selfish reactions of those who hope to take advantage of the situation caused by the first deportation, there being no point in building houses when there were so many left untenanted, and no point in worrying any more, since disaster would not strike the survivors in Jerusalem a second time. Be that as it may, Ezekiel insists that the danger has not gone away.

I shall take you out of it.[d] •You are afraid of the sword and I shall bring the sword 8 down on you—declares the Lord Yahweh—•and I shall take you out of it and hand 9 you over to foreigners and bring you to justice; •you will fall by the sword on the 10 soil of Israel; I shall execute justice on you, and you will know that I am Yahweh.
This city will be no cooking pot for you, nor will you be the meat inside; I shall 11 execute justice on you on the soil of Israel; •and you will know that I am Yahweh, 12 whose laws you have not obeyed and whose judgements you have not kept; Dt 12:29–30 instead, you have adopted the customs of the nations round you." '

Now as I was prophesying, Pelatiah son of Benaiah dropped dead. I fell to the 13 9:8+ ground and cried out, 'Ah, Lord Yahweh, are you going to annihilate the remnant of Israel?'

Jr 24 The new covenant promised to the exiles

The word of Yahweh was then addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, to your 14, 15 brothers one and all, to your kinsfolk and to the whole House of Israel, the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, "Keep well away from Yahweh. This country 33:24 has now been made over to us!"[e] •So say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: Yes, I 16 36:19 have sent them far away among the nations and I have dispersed them to foreign countries; and for a while I have been a sanctuary for them in the country to which 36:24–25 they have gone." •So say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I shall gather you back 17 Dt 30:3–5 from the peoples, I shall collect you in from the countries where you have been scattered and give you the land of Israel. •When they come back, they will purge it 18 18:31;36:26 of all its horrors and loathsome practices. •I shall give them a single heart and I 19
Ps 51:12–14
36:27f;44:7 shall put a new spirit in them;[f] I shall remove the heart of stone from their bodies
Dt 30:6–8
Jr 4:4a and give them a heart of flesh, •so that they can keep my laws and respect my 20 Jr 31:31f judgements and put them into practice. Then they will be my people and I shall be their God. •But those whose hearts[g] are set on their horrors and loathsome 21 practices I shall repay for their conduct—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

1:28o The glory of Yahweh leaves Jerusalem
Ex 24:16f

The winged creatures then raised their wings and the wheels moved with them, 22 with the glory of the God of Israel over them, above. •And the glory of Yahweh 23 rose from the centre of the city and halted on the mountain to the east of the city.
3:12 Then the spirit lifted me up and took me, in vision, in the spirit of God, to the 24 exiles in Chaldaea,[h] and the vision which I had seen faded. •I then told the exiles 25 everything that Yahweh had shown me.

Jr 18:1a The mime of the exile[a] 12 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, you are 1, 2 living among a tribe of rebels who have eyes and never see, they have ears 2:5–7 and never hear, because they are a tribe of rebels. •So, son of man, pack an exile's 3

Is 6:10
Jr 5:21 bundle and set off for exile by daylight while they watch. You will leave your home and go somewhere else while they watch. Then perhaps they will see that they are a tribe of rebels. •You will pack your baggage like an exile's bundle, by daylight, 4 while they watch, and leave like an exile in the evening, while they watch. •While 5 they watch, make a hole in the wall, and go out through it. •While they watch, you 6 will shoulder your pack and go out into the dark; you will cover your face so that Is 8:18+ you cannot see the ground, since I have made you an omen for the House of Israel.'
Jr 18:1a

I did as I had been told. I packed my baggage like an exile's bundle, by daylight; 7 and in the evening I made a hole through the wall with my hands; then I went out into the dark and shouldered my pack while they watched.

Next morning the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of 8, 9 man, did not the House of Israel, did not that tribe of rebels, ask you, "What are you doing?" •Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: This prophecy concerns Jerusa- 10 lem and the whole House of Israel who live there." •Say, "I am an omen for you; 11 as I have done, so will be done to them; they will be deported into exile. •Their 12 prince will shoulder his pack in the dark and go out through the wall; a hole will be 13 made to let him out; he will cover his face, so that he cannot see the country. •I shall throw my net over him and catch him in my mesh; I shall take him to Babylon, =17:20 to the land of the Chaldaeans, though he will not see it; and there he will die.

14 And all those in attendance on him, his army and all his troops, I shall scatter to Lv 26:33 15 all the winds and unsheathe the sword behind them. •Then they will know that I am Yahweh, when I scatter them throughout the nations and disperse them in 16 foreign countries. •But I shall let a few of them escape the sword, famine and Is 4:3c plague, to describe all their loathsome practices to the peoples among whom they will go, so that these too may know that I am Yahweh." ' 17, 18 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, you are to 4:16 tremble as you eat your food and shudder apprehensively as you drink your water, 19 and you are to say to the people of the country, "The Lord Yahweh says this to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. They will shudder apprehensively as they eat their food, and drink their water in fear, so that the country and its population may be 20 freed from the violence of its inhabitants.[b] •When the populous cities have been destroyed and the country has been reduced to desert, then you will know that I am Yahweh." '

Popular proverbs

21, 22 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, what do you understand by the saying pronounced over the land of Israel, "Days go by and 2 P 3:3–4 visions fade"?[c]
23 'Very well, tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I shall put an end to this saying; it will never be used in Israel again." Instead, tell them: 24 "The days are coming when every vision will come true, •for there will be no 25 more futile visions or deceptive prophecy in the House of Israel, •since I, Yahweh, shall speak. And what I shall say will come true without delay; for what I shall say, Is 55:11
I shall perform in your own lifetime, you tribe of rebels—declares the Lord Yahweh." '
26, 27 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, the House of Israel is now saying, "The vision that this man sees concerns the distant future; 28 he is prophesying for times far ahead." •Very well, tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this: There will be no further delay in the fulfilling of any of my words. What ↗Rv 10:6
I have said shall be done now—declares the Lord Yahweh." ' Jr 1:11–12

Against the false prophets

Jr 14:13–16; 23:9–40; 27:9–10, 16–18; 28

1, 2 13 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel; prophesy.[a] and say to those who 3 make up prophecies out of their own heads, "Hear what Yahweh says: •The Lord Yahweh says this: Disaster is in store for the foolish prophets who follow their own 4 spirit and have seen nothing! •Your prophets, Israel, are like ruin-haunting jackals!

d. 'I shall' versions; 'he will' Hebr.

e. The inhabitants of Jerusalem, spared from deportation, considered themselves the chosen ones of the nation. Jeremiah had already attacked this assumption, prophesying, Jr 24, that Yahweh would ultimately prefer the exiles. Ezekiel adds that possession of the Temple is of little importance since Yahweh can be a 'sanctuary' for his people in a foreign country, see 1:3c.

f. 'a single heart', or perhaps 'another heart' (Gk) or 'a new heart' (Syr.) see 18:31; Jr 4:4a. • 'in them' versions; 'in you' Hebr.

g. 'whose hearts' Targ.; 'and to the heart which' Hebr.

h. Vv. 24–25 correspond to 8:3: the prophet, having been transported to Jerusalem to see the visions of ch. 8–11, is returned by the spirit to his place of exile.

12 a. This new symbolic action, mimed in dumb-show, foretells the approaching deportation of the population of Jerusalem.

b. This translation follows the Gk.

c. People had evidently refused to believe Ezekiel's prophecies of disaster; he now turns their own words against them: punishment is imminent.

13 a. 'prophesy' Gk; 'who prophesied' Hebr.

you see been futile, have not the predictions you make been false, although you say: A prophecy of Yahweh, when I have not spoken?

"Very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: Because of your futile words and false 8 predictions, I am now against you—declares Lord Yahweh. ·My hand will be 9 against the prophets who have futile visions and give false predictions; they will not be admitted to the council of my people, their names will not be entered in the roll of the House of Israel, they will not set foot on the soil of Israel; and they will know that I am the Lord Yahweh. ·This is because they have misled my people by 10 Jr 6:14f saying Peace! when there is no peace. [b] When my people were repairing a wall, 22:28 these men came and plastered it over! [c] ·Tell these plasterers: [d] It will rain hard, it 11 will hail, [e] it will blow a gale, ·and down will come the wall! Will not people ask 12 you: What has become of the plaster you slapped on it? ·Well then, the Lord 13 Yahweh says this: I am going to unleash a stormy wind in my fury, torrential rain in my anger, hailstones in my destructive fury, ·and I shall shatter the wall you 14 plastered and knock it down and lay its foundations bare. It will fall and you will perish under it; then you will know that I am Yahweh."

'When I have sated my anger on the wall and those who plastered it, I shall say 15 to you, "The wall is gone, and so are those who plastered over it, ·the prophets of 16 Israel who prophesy about Jerusalem and have visions of peace for her when there is no peace—declares the Lord Yahweh."

Against false prophetesses

'Also, son of man, turn to the women of your people who make up prophecies out 17 of their own heads; prophesy against them. [f] ·Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: 18 Disaster is in store for women who sew ribbons round each wrist [g] and make head-cloths for people of all sizes, in their hunt for souls! Are you to hunt the souls of my people and keep your own souls safe? ·You dishonour me in front of my people for 19 1 S 9:7d a few handfuls of barley, a few bits of bread, killing those who ought not to die and sparing those who ought not to live, lying to my people who love listening to lies.

"Very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: Look, I am now against your ribbons, 20 with which you hunt souls like birds, [h] and I shall tear them off your arms and free those souls whom you hunt like birds. ·I shall tear your head-cloths to pieces and 21 rescue my people from your clutches; no longer will they be fair game for you to ensnare. Then you will know that I am Yahweh.

"For having intimidated with lies the heart of the upright whom I had done 22 nothing to alarm, and for having encouraged the wicked not to give up wicked ways and so be saved, ·very well, you will have no more futile visions and make no more 23 predictions, for I shall rescue my people from your clutches, and you will know that I am Yahweh." '

Against idolatry

20:1–4 14 Next, some elders of Israel visited me and while they were sitting with me, 1 the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, these 2, 3 men have enshrined their foul idols in their hearts and placed the cause of their sinning right before their eyes. Why should I let myself be consulted by them? ·So 4 speak to them; tell them this, "Lord Yahweh says this: Every member of the House of Israel who enshrines his foul idols in his heart and places the cause of his sinning right before his eyes, and who then approaches the prophet, will get this answer from me, Yahweh, as the multiplicity of his idols deserves, ·and in this way I hope 5 to win back the hearts of the House of Israel who have all been estranged from me by their foul idols."

'So say to the House of Israel, "The Lord Yahweh says this: Come back, turn 6 away from your foul idols, turn your backs on all your loathsome practices; ·for if 7 any member of the House of Israel—or any foreigner living in Israel [a]—deserts me to enshrine his foul idols in his heart and places the cause of his sinning right before his eyes and then approaches a prophet to consult me through him, he will get his

8 answer from me, Yahweh. [b] ·I shall set my face against that person; I shall make him an example and a byword; I shall rid my people of him, and you will know that 9 I am Yahweh. ·And if the prophet is seduced into saying something, I, Yahweh, shall have seduced that prophet; [c] I shall point my finger at him and rid my people 10 Israel of him. ·Both will be punished for their guilt; the prophet's punishment will 11 be the same as that of the person who consults him, ·so that the House of Israel will never stray from me again or defile themselves again with these crimes, but be my people and I their God—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

Individual responsibility [d] 18;33:10–20

12, 13 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me: ·"Son of man, when a country sins against me by being unfaithful and I point my finger at it and destroy its supply of 14 food, inflicting famine on it and denuding it of human and animal, ·even if the three men, Noah, Danel and Job, [e] were living in it, they would save no one but Gn 18:22–23 15 themselves by their uprightness—declares the Lord Yahweh. ·Were I to unleash wild beasts on that country to rob it of its children and reduce it to a desert which 16 no one would dare to cross because of the animals, ·even if these three men were living there, as I live—declares the Lord Yahweh—they would not be able to save either son or daughter; they alone would be saved, and the country would become 17 a desert. ·Were I to bring the sword down on that country and say, "Sword, cross 18 the country!" so as to denude it of human and animal, ·even if these three men were living there, as I live—declares the Lord Yahweh—they would not be able to 19 save either son or daughter; they alone would be saved. ·If I were to send the plague on that country and vent my fury on it by bloodshed, so as to denude it of 20 human and animal, ·even if Noah and Danel and Job were living there, as I live—declares the Lord Yahweh—they would be able to save neither son nor daughter, only themselves by their uprightness.

b. The word 'peace' means not merely the absence of danger from abroad but prosperity and harmony within the community, see Jr 6:14f.

c. Ezekiel denounces the false prophets for their misleading optimism. Jerusalem is like a house threatened by the unruly elements; although the structure needs serious repair, the prophets are content to plaster over the cracks.

d. Hebr. adds 'and it will fall', dittography.

e. After 'hail', Hebr. adds 'I sent (?)'.

f. Next, the prophet denounces practitioners of the black arts.

g. 'each wrist' versions; 'all my wrists' Hebr.

h. 'like birds' (as also at end of v.) uncertain, though possibly, as the Aramaic suggests, connected with flying. In Gk, the word is missing the first time and rendered 'for the dispersion' at end of v. Before the second 'like birds', we omit 'souls' (an unusual form of the word and probably a dittography).

14 a. In the legislation of Ezk, the foreigner settling in Israel, see Ex 12:48*o*, has the same legal status as an Israelite, Ezk 47:22.

b. Yahweh refuses to give an answer through his prophet when the apostate Israelites consult him. He will answer them himself by punishing them.

c. i.e. 'if the prophet lets himself be seduced into giving an answer, I shall have allowed this to happen, because I have decided to destroy him.'

d. With ch. 18 and 33:10–20, this text marks a decisive advance in the development of moral teaching in the OT. Early texts were concerned with the individual mainly as an integral part of family, tribe and, later, nation. Not only Noah but his relations too are saved, Gn 6:18; Abraham is called by God but his whole clan accompanies him to Canaan, Gn 12. This outlook also conditioned concepts of responsibility and of retribution. When Abraham intercedes for Sodom, Gn 18:22–23, he is asking not that the good be isolated and spared but that, by virtue of a solidarity that can work both ways, the good should earn immunity for the wicked. It had been taken for granted that a city or a nation would be punished as one entity, upright and sinner alike, and also that the fate of the children would correspond to the behaviour of their parents, Ex 20:5; Dt 5:9; 7:10; cf. Jr 31:29 = Ezk 18:2. But the prophets were later to lay stress on the individual and thus correct the emphasis of the earlier teaching. Jeremiah may see the break with this solidarity in sin and punishment between the generations as something still to come, Jr 31:29–30, but the Deuteronomist has already protested against the punishment of the children for the sins of the parents, Dt 24:16, cf. 2 K 14:6. Ezekiel, convinced by the vision of ch. 8–10 that the imminent punishment of Jerusalem is a result of her present sins, becomes the champion and exponent of the principle of individual responsibility. A person's salvation or ruin does not depend on ancestor or associates; not even on his own past life. Yahweh is concerned only with his present dispositions. These radical assertions of individualism will in their turn be qualified by the principle of solidarity as expressed in the fourth song of the servant of Yahweh, Is 52:13–53: 12, see Is 42:1a. These assertions, however, if strictly and exclusively applied to human life in this world, are contradicted by everyday experience (see Job), and this contradiction calls for further doctrinal development, effected by the revelation of sanctions beyond the grave (see Introduction to Wisdom Books, §3). In the end, the NT (and especially Paul) resolves the tension between the individualism of Ezekiel and the principle of collective solidarity by showing how Christian hope is based on faith in the risen Christ in union with whom humanity, created and saved by God, is united in redemption as it previously was in sin.

e. Three popular heroes well known to Israelite tradition; Noah, whose story is preserved in Gn 6–9; Job, whose legend was to inspire one of the finest poetic compositions in the Bible; and Danel, not otherwise mentioned in the Bible (except in Ezk 28:3), whose wisdom and uprightness was celebrated by the poets of Ras-Shamra.

Is 5:1a A parable of the vine

15 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows: 1

Son of man, how is the wood of the vine better 2 than wood from the branch of a forest tree?
Is its wood used for making anything? 3
Are pegs on which to hang things made from it?
There it is, thrown on the fire for fuel. 4
The fire burns off both ends;
the middle is charred; can it be kept for anything now? [a] While it was intact, you could make nothing with it; 5 burned and charred, is it any more useful now?

So, the Lord Yahweh says this: 6

As the wood of the vine among the forest trees, which I have thrown on the fire for fuel,
so shall I treat the inhabitants of Jerusalem.
I shall set my face against them. 7
They have escaped one fire, but fire will devour them yet.
And you will know that I am Yahweh, when I set my face against them.
I shall reduce the country to a desert, because of their infidelity— 8
declares the Lord Yahweh.

An allegorical history of Jerusalem [a]

16 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, confront 1, 2 Jerusalem with her loathsome practices! •Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: 3
By origin and birth you belong to the land of Canaan. Your father was an Amorite and your mother a Hittite. •At birth, the very day you were born, there was no one 4 to cut your navel-string, or wash you in water to clean you, or rub you with salt, or wrap you in swaddling clothes. •No one looked at you with pity enough to do any 5 of these things out of sympathy for you. You were exposed in the open fields in your own dirt on the day you were born.

"I saw you kicking on the ground in your blood as I was passing, and I said to 6 you as you lay in your blood: Live! [b] •and I made you grow like the grass of the 7 fields. You developed, you grew, you reached marriageable age. [c] Your breasts Ho 2:5 became firm and your hair grew richly, but you were stark naked. •Then I saw you 8 Dt 23:1a Rt 3:9 Ex 19:1a as I was passing. Your time had come, the time for love. I spread my cloak over you and covered your nakedness; I gave you my oath, I made a covenant with you—declares the Lord Yahweh—and you became mine. •I bathed you in water, 9 I washed the blood off you, I anointed you with oil. •I gave you embroidered 10 dresses, fine leather shoes, a linen headband and a cloak of silk. •I loaded you with 11 jewels, gave you bracelets for your wrists and a necklace for your throat. •I gave 12 you nose-ring and earrings; I put a beautiful diadem on your head. •You were 13 loaded with gold and silver and dressed in linen and silk and brocade. Your food Dt 32:13 was the finest flour, honey and oil. You grew more and more beautiful; and you rose to be queen. •The fame of your beauty spread through the nations, since it 14 was perfect, because I had clothed you with my own splendour—declares the Lord Yahweh.

Dt 31:16 Is 57:8 "But you became infatuated with your own beauty and used your fame to play 15

16 the whore, lavishing your debauchery on all comers.[d] •You took some of your clothes to make for yourself high places bright with colours[e] and there you played 17 the whore.[f] •You also took your jewellery, made with my gold and silver which I Ex 32:2seq.
18 had given you, and made yourself male images to serve your whorings. •You took Ho 2:10 your embroidered clothes and used these to dress them up, and you offered them 19 my oil and my incense. •And the bread I gave you, the finest flour, the oil and honey with which I fed you, you offered them as a pleasing smell.

20 "What is more—declares the Lord Yahweh—•you took the sons and daughters Lv 18:21h you had borne me and sacrificed them as food to the images. Was not your whoring 21 enough in itself, •for you to slaughter my children and hand them over to be burnt 22 in their honour?•And in all your loathsome practices and your whorings you never called your early days to mind, when you were stark naked, kicking on the ground in your own blood.

23 "To crown your wickedness—disaster upon you, disaster! declares the Lord 24 Yahweh—•you built yourself a mound and made yourself a high place in every Dt 12:2b 25 open space. •At the entry to every alley you made yourself a high place, defiling your beauty and opening your legs to all comers in countless acts of fornication.
26 You have also fornicated with your big-membered neighbours, the Egyptians, Is 30:31 27 provoking my anger with further acts of fornication. •So now I have raised my hand against you, I have cut down on your food, I have put you at the mercy of your 28 enemies, the Philistine women,[g] who blush at your lewd behaviour. •Still unsatisfied, you prostituted yourself to the Assyrians; you played the whore with them, 2 K 21:1–18 29 but were not satisfied even then.[h] •You committed further acts of fornication in 2 Ch 33:1–10 the country of merchants, with the Chaldaeans, and these did not satisfy you either.

30 "How simple-minded[i] you are!—declares the Lord Yahweh—for although you 31 do all the things that a professional prostitute would, •in building a mound[j] and making yourself a high place in every street, you do not act like a proper prostitute 32 because you disdain to take a fee. •An adulteress welcomes strangers instead of 33 her husband. •All prostitutes accept presents, but you give presents to all your Ho 8:9h 34 lovers, you bribe them to come from all over the place to fornicate with you! •In fornicating, you are the opposite of other women, since no one runs after you to fornicate with you; since you give the fee and do not get one, you are the very opposite!

35, 36 "Very well, whore, hear the word of Yahweh!' •The Lord Yahweh says this:
For having squandered your money[k] and let yourself be seen naked while whoring

15 a. If the comparison is to be urged, Israel has been deprived of the territory of Samaria in 720 and of Judah in 597. Jerusalem itself (the middle) is no longer 'intact' since it already suffered one siege and deportation.

16 a. Israel, faithless wife of Yahweh, 'whore' of alien gods: a familiar image in prophetic literature from Ho onwards, see Ho 1:2b. Ezekiel elaborates the theme into a long allegory (continued in another form in ch. 23) about Jerusalem, the religious and political capital of the country. As in Ho, the allegory ends, vv. 60–63, with a free pardon from the husband who establishes a new covenant, thus prefiguring the marriage of God with his people in messianic days, a theme to be further developed in the NT.

b. Hebr. repeats 'and I said . . . Live!', dittography. The child is left befouled by blood and grows quite wild till the covenant on Sinai, described under the image of a marriage.

c. 'I made you grow', lit. 'I made you into a multitude'. • 'marriageable age' be'et 'iddim conj.; ba'adi 'adayim Hebr. 'with the finest jewels'.

d. Hebr. adds 'he was to him (?)', omitted by some Gk MSS and Syr.

e. Possibly this means 'tents on the high places'.

f. We omit four unintelligible words, lit. 'they (fem.) do not come and it will not be so.'

g. The cities of the Philistine coast profited from Judah's reversals under Ahaz, 2 Ch 28:18, under Hezekiah in 701 according to the Annals of Sennacherib (in reprisal for an alliance with Egypt), and perhaps after the first deportation, Jr 13:19, and here Ezk 25:15–17.

h. Especially in the reign of Manasseh when subservience to Assyria encouraged idolatry.

i. Trans. conj., Hebr. libbah is here understood as rare form of leb or lebah, 'heart'; but it could be understood from an Assyro-Babylonian root, as 'anger'. The translation would then be 'I am filled with anger.'

j. 'setting up' bibenotek versions; Hebr. bibenotayik 'in your daughters'.

k. 'squandered your money', lit. 'poured out your bronze', alluding to the presents to the lovers. Other commentators think the text corrupt.

with your lovers and all the foul idols of your loathsome practices and for giving ↗Rv 17:5,6 them your children's blood[l]—•for all this, I shall assemble all the lovers to whom 37 you have given pleasure, all the ones you liked and also all the ones you disliked; Ho 2:12 yes, I shall assemble them round you and strip you naked in front of them, and let ↗Rv 17:16 them see you naked from head to foot. •I shall pass on you the sentence that 38 adulteresses and murderesses receive; I shall hand you over to their jealous fury;[m] I shall hand you over to them; they will destroy your mound and pull down your 39 high place; they will tear off your clothes, take away your jewels and leave you Ho 2:5i stark naked. •Then they will call an assembly of citizens to deal with you, who will 40 stone you to death and hack you to pieces with their swords, •and burn down your 41 premises and execute justice on you, while many other women look on; and I shall put an end to your whoring: no more paid lovers for you! •Once my fury is 42 exhausted with you, then my jealousy will leave you; I shall be calm and not angry any more. •Since you never called to mind your early days and have done nothing 43 but provoke me, now I in my turn shall bring your conduct down on your own head—declares the Lord Yahweh!

"Have you not added this lewd behaviour to your other loathsome practices?
So now all dealers in proverbs will apply this one to you: Like mother, like 44 daughter. •Yes; you are a true daughter of your mother, who hated her husband 45 and her children; you are a true sister of your sisters,[n] who hated their husbands 16:3 and their children. Your mother was a Hittite and your father an Amorite. •Your 46 elder sister is Samaria, who lives to the north of you with her daughters. Your younger sister is Sodom, who lives to the south of you with her daughters.
You never failed to imitate their behaviour and copy their loathsome practices,[o] 47 and soon your behaviour was more corrupt than theirs was. •As I live—declares 48 the Lord Yahweh—your sister Sodom and her daughters never did what you and your daughters have done. •The crime of your sister Sodom was pride, gluttony, 49 calm complacency; such were hers and her daughters' crimes. They never helped the poor and needy; •they were proud, and engaged in loathsome practices before 50 Gn 19 me, and so I swept them away as you have seen.[p] •And yet Samaria never 51 committed half the crimes that you have.

"You have done more loathsome things than they have. By all your loathsome practices you have made your sisters seem innocent, •and now you bear the shame 52 of which you have freed your sisters; since the sins which you have committed are more revolting than theirs, they are more upright than you are. So now, bear the disgrace and shame of having put your sisters in the right.

"I shall restore their fortunes, I shall restore Sodom and her daughters, I shall 53 restore Samaria and her daughters, and then I shall restore your fortune with theirs, •so that you can bear your shame and disgrace for all you have done, and 54 so console them. •When your sisters, Sodom and her daughters, are restored to 55 what they were, and Samaria and her daughters are restored to what they were, then you too and your daughters will be restored to what you were. •Did you not 56 gloat over your sister Sodom when you were so proud, •before you were stripped 57 naked? Like her, you are now the laughing-stock of the women of Edom,[q] of all the women round, of the women of Philistia, who pour out their contempt upon you. •You have brought this on yourself, with your lewdness and your loathsome 58 practices—declares the Lord Yahweh.

"For the Lord Yahweh says this: I shall treat you as you have deserved for 59 36:31 making light of an oath and breaking a covenant, •but I shall remember my 60
Jr 31:3,31–34
Ho 2:16–25 covenant with you when you were a girl and shall conclude a covenant with you that will last for ever. •And you for your part will remember your behaviour and 61 feel ashamed of it when you receive your elder and younger sisters and I make them your daughters, although this is not included in my covenant with you. •I 62 shall renew my covenant with you;[r] and you will know that I am Yahweh, •and so 63 remember and feel ashamed and in your confusion be reduced to silence, when I forgive you for everything you have done—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

The allegory of the eagle

1, 2 17 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, put a 3 riddle, propound a parable to the House of Israel. •Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

A great eagle [a] with great wings,
long-pinioned,
rich with many-coloured plumage,
came to the Lebanon.
4 He took the top of the cedar tree, he plucked off the top branch, he carried it off to the country of merchants and set it down in a city of shopkeepers.
5 Next, he took one of the country's seeds and put it in a fertile field;
by the side of a generous stream, [b]
like a willow tree, he placed it.
6 It grew and became a fruitful vine — Is 5:1a of modest size,
grew up towards the eagle,
its roots grew downwards.
So it became a vine,
branching out and sprouting new shoots.

7 But there was another great eagle [c] with great wings and thick plumage.
And now the vine twisted its roots towards him and stretched its branches towards him, for him to water it
away from the bed where it was planted.
8 It was in a fertile field, by the side of a wide stream that the vine had been planted, to branch out and bear fruit and become a noble vine."

9 Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this:
Will it succeed? [d]
Will the eagle not tear out its roots and strip off its fruit, so that all the new leaves it puts out will wither, and no great strength is needed nor many people to pull it up by the roots?
10 Planted it may be—will it succeed?
Will it not shrivel up when the east wind blows?
It will wither in the bed where it was growing!" ' repeating this proverb in the land of Israel:

'But if he has a son prone to violence and bloodshed, who commits one of these [c] 10 misdeeds—•even though the father never has—a son who dares to eat on the mountains, who defiles his neighbour's wife, •who oppresses the poor and needy, robs, fails to return pledges, raises his eyes to foul idols, engages in loathsome practices, •lends for profit, or charges interest, such a person will by no means live;[d] having committed all these appalling crimes he will die, and his blood be on his own head.

'But if he in turn has a son who, in spite of seeing all the sins that his father has committed, does not imitate him, •does not eat on the mountains or raise his eyes to the foul idols of the House of Israel, does not defile his neighbour's wife, oppresses no one, takes no pledges, does not rob, gives his own food to the hungry, his clothes to those who lack clothing, •abstains from evil,[e] does not lend for profit or charge interest, respects my judgements and keeps my laws, he will not die for his father's sins: he will most certainly live. •But his father, because he was violent, robbed others[f] and never did good among his people, will most certainly die in his guilt.

'Now, you say, "Why doesn't the son bear his father's guilt?" If the son has been law-abiding and upright, has kept all my laws and followed them, most certainly he will live. •The one who has sinned is the one who must die; a son is not to bear his father's guilt, nor a father his son's guilt. The upright will be credited with his uprightness, and the wicked with his wickedness. =18:4 Dt 24:16

'If the wicked, however, renounces all the sins he has committed, respects my laws and is law-abiding and upright, he will most certainly live; he will not die.[g] None of the crimes he committed will be remembered against him from then on; he will most certainly live because of his upright actions. •Would I take pleasure in the death of the wicked—declares the Lord Yahweh—and not prefer to see him renounce his wickedness and live? 'But if the upright abandons uprightness and does wrong by copying all the loathsome practices of the wicked, is he to live? All his upright actions will be forgotten from then on; for the infidelity of which he is guilty and the sin which he has committed, he will most certainly die.

'Now, you say, "What the Lord does is unjust." Now listen, House of Israel: is what I do unjust? Is it not what you do that is unjust? •When the upright abandons uprightness and does wrong and dies,[h] he dies because of the wrong which he himself has done. •Similarly, when the wicked abandons wickedness to become law-abiding and upright, he saves his own life. •Having chosen to renounce all his previous crimes, he will most certainly live: he will not die. •And yet the House of Israel says, "What the Lord does is unjust." Is what I do unjust, House of Israel? Is it not what you do that is unjust? •So in future, House of Israel, I shall judge each of you by what that person does—declares the Lord Yahweh. Repent, renounce all your crimes, avoid all occasions for guilt. •Shake off all the crimes you have committed, and make yourselves a new heart and a new spirit! Why die, House of Israel? •I take no pleasure in the death of anyone—declares the Lord Yahweh—so repent and live!' =33:20 Mt 16:27 11:19f Jr 4:4a 33:11;18:23 Ws 1:13 •Mt 3:2c

Her expectation thwarted, 5 and seeing her hope dashed, she took another of her whelps

He prowled among the lions, 6
he grew into a young lion, he learnt to tear his prey;
he became a man-eater.
He tore down their palaces, [c] 7
he destroyed their cities;
the land and all its inhabitants were appalled
by the sound of his roars.
The nations marched out against him 8

they spread their net over him;
he was caught in their pit.
They shackled him with hooks, 9 planted beside the water, 47:12+ Ps 1:3 fruitful and leafy,

Rv 22:1–2 because the water flowed so full.
She had stout stems 11
which became kingly sceptres;
she grew higher and higher,
up into the clouds;
she was admired for her height and the number of her branches.
But she was furiously uprooted 12
and thrown on the ground;
the east wind dried up her fruit,
she was broken to pieces;
Jn 15:6 her stout stem dried up, [f]
the fire devoured it.
Now she has been transplanted to the desert, 13 to a dry and thirsty land.

devouring her branches and fruit.
No more stout stem for her,
no more kingly sceptre.'

This is a lament; it was used as such.

An account of Israel's infidelities 16:1a

20 In the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month,[a] some of the elders 14:1–5 of Israel came to consult Yahweh and were sitting with me, ·when the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, speak to the elders of Israel. Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: Have you come to consult me? As I live, I will not be consulted by you—declares the Lord Yahweh."
'Are you ready to judge them? Are you ready to judge them, son of man? 22:2;23:36 Confront them with the loathsome practices of their ancestors. ·Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: On the day when I chose Israel, when I pledged my word[b] to the Dt 7:6b House of Jacob, I made myself known to them in Egypt; I pledged my word to them and said: I am Yahweh your God. ·That day I pledged them my word that I Ex 3:13–14g would bring them out of Egypt to a country which I had reconnoitred for them, a country flowing with milk and honey, and the loveliest of them all. ·And I said to =20:15 them: Each of you must reject the horrors which attract you; do not pollute Ex 3:8e yourselves with the foul idols of Egypt; I am Yahweh your God. ·But they rebelled Lv 18:3 against me and would not listen to me. Not one of them rejected the horrors which attracted them; they did not give up the foul idols of Egypt. I then resolved to vent my fury on them, to sate my anger on them in Egypt; ·But respect for my own =20:14;36:22 name kept me from letting it be profaned in the eyes of the nations among whom they were living,[c] and before whom I had made myself known to them and promised to bring them out of Egypt. ·So I brought them out of Egypt and led them into the desert. ·I gave them my laws and taught them my judgements, in Lv 18:5+ whose observance people find life. ·And I also gave them my Sabbaths as a sign Ex 20:8f;31:13 between me and them, so that they might know that I, Yahweh, am the one who sanctifies them. ·The House of Israel, however, rebelled against me in the desert; Ex 14:11+ they refused to keep my laws, they scorned my judgements, in whose observance people find life, and they grossly profaned my Sabbaths. I then resolved to vent my fury on them in the desert and destroy them. ·But respect for my own name kept =20:9
me from letting it be profaned in the eyes of the nations, before whom I had Ex 32:12+ brought them out. ·Even so, I pledged them my word in the desert that I would not =20:6+ lead them to the country which I had given them, a country flowing with milk and Nb 14:28–30 honey, and the loveliest of them all, ·since they had scorned my judgements, had Dt 1:34,35 refused to keep my laws and had profaned my Sabbaths, their hearts being attached Ps 95:11 to foul idols. ·In spite of this, I took pity on them; I refrained from destroying them and did not make an end of them in the desert.
"I said to their children in the desert: Do not follow the laws of your ancestors, do not practise their judgements, do not defile yourselves with their foul idols. ·I am Yahweh your God. Keep my laws, respect my judgements and practise them.
Keep my Sabbaths holy; let them be a sign between me and you, so that people may know that I am Yahweh your God. ·Their children, however, rebelled against 19 a. This poem is a qinah, i.e. a lament characterised rhythmically by an inequality of the lines within each couplet. Cf. 26:17–18; 27:3–9, 25–36. It is a political allegory, but it is not easy to interpret all its elements. The lioness is Israel, whose kings are the whelps.

b. King Jehoahaz, deposed and taken away to Egypt by Necho in 609.

c. 'tore down their palaces' wayyaroa' 'armenotayw versions; Hebr. wayyeda' 'almenotayw 'knew their widows'. Probably an allusion to Jehoiachin carried off to Babylon in 597. The prophet does not mention Jehoiakim (609–598) who died a natural death and therefore furnished no lesson for Zedekiah and his contemporaries.

d. 'into a fortress', Gk; 'into traps' Hebr.

e. 'like' Targ.; 'in your blood' Hebr. Another allegory, the vine is the nation once prosperous but soon to be destroyed.

f. 'she was broken . . . (it) dried up' Gk; 'they were broken . . . (they) dried up' Hebr.

20 a. July–August 591.

b. lit. 'raised my hand towards', a gesture used in taking oaths.

c. The sole reason for Yahweh's forbearance with his people, despite their apostasy, is the honour of his name.

me; they refused to keep my laws, they did not respect or practise my judgements, Lv 18:5 which must be practised by all who want to live; they profaned my Sabbaths. I then resolved to vent my fury on them, to sate my anger on them in the desert. ·But I 22 20:14 restrained my hand; respect for my own name kept me from letting it be profaned in the eyes of the nations, before whom I had brought them out. ·Once again, 23 however, I pledged them my word that I would scatter them throughout the nations and disperse them in foreign countries, ·because they had not followed my judge- 24 ments but had rejected my laws and profaned my Sabbaths, their eyes being fastened on the foul idols of their ancestors. ·And for this reason I gave them laws 25 that were not good and judgements by which they could never live; [d] ·and I polluted 26 Lv 18:21h them with their own offerings, making them sacrifice every first-born son in order to fill them with revulsion, so that they would know that I am Yahweh."

'For this reason, son of man, speak to the House of Israel. Say to them, "The 27 Lord Yahweh says this: Here is another way by which your ancestors outraged me by their infidelity. ·Once I had brought them into the country which I had pledged 28 Dt 12:2b my word to give them, they then saw all sorts of high hills, all kinds of leafy trees, and there they performed their sacrifices and made offerings that provoked my anger; there they set out their pleasing smell and poured their libations. ·I then 29 said to them: What is this high place where you go? And they gave, and still give it, the name of Bamah." [e]

'So, say to the House of Israel, "The Lord Yahweh says this: If you are polluting 30 yourselves as your ancestors did by fornicating with their horrors—·for by offer- 31 ing your gifts and by burning your children as sacrifices, you have been polluting yourselves with all your foul idols to this very day—shall I let myself be consulted by you, House of Israel? As I live—declares Lord Yahweh—I shall not let myself be consulted by you. ·And what you sometimes imagine will never be so, 32 when you say: We shall be like the peoples, the tribes of foreign lands, worshipping wood and stone. ·As I live I swear it—declares the Lord Yahweh—I am the one 33 who will reign over you, with a strong hand and outstretched arm, once my fury is sated. · With a strong hand and outstretched arm, once my fury is sated, I shall 34 bring you back from the peoples and gather you again from the countries throughout which you have been scattered. ·I shall lead you into the desert of the nations [f] 35 and there I shall judge you face to face. ·As I judged your ancestors in the desert of 36 Egypt, so will I judge you—declares the Lord Yahweh. ·I shall make you pass 37 under the crook, [g] bring you to respect the covenant ·and rid you of the rebels who 38 have revolted against me; I shall bring them out of the country where they are staying, but they will not enter the country of Israel, and you will know that I am 16:59–63,62r Yahweh.' ·House of Israel, Lord Yahweh says this: Go on, all of you, worship your 39
36:20;43:8 foul idols, but later we shall see if you don't listen to me! Then you will stop Lv 17:1a profaning my holy name with your offerings and your foul idols. ·For on my holy 40 17:23 mountain, on the high mountain of Israel—declares the Lord Yahweh—is where the whole House of Israel, everyone in the country, will worship me. There I shall accept and there expect your presents, your choicest offering and all your consecrated gifts. ·I shall welcome you like a pleasing smell when I bring you back from 41 the peoples and gather you from the countries throughout which you have been scattered, and through you I shall display my holiness for all the nations to see; and you will know that I am Yahweh, when I bring you back to the soil of Israel, 42 to the country which I pledged my word to give to your ancestors. ·There you will 43 remember your past behaviour and all the actions by which you have defiled yourselves, and you will loathe yourselves for all the wrongs which you have 20:14 committed. ·And you will know that I am Yahweh, when I treat you as respect 44 for my own name requires, and not as your wicked behaviour and corrupt actions deserve, House of Israel—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

The sword of Yahweh

1, 2 45, 46 21 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, turn to the right; utter your word towards the south, prophesy against the forest 16:46+ 47 3 land of the Negeb. •Say to the forest of Negeb, "Hear the word of Yahweh! The Lord Yahweh says this: Listen; I am about to kindle a fire in you which will burn up 17:24 Ps 83:14 Is 9:17;10: 17–19 Jr 21:14 Lk 23:31 every green tree in you as well as every dry one; it will be an unquenchable blaze 48 4 and every face will be scorched by it from the Negeb to the north. •All humanity 49 5 will see that it was I, Yahweh, who kindled it, and it will not be extinguished." ' •I said, 'Lord Yahweh, they say of me, "He does nothing but speak in riddles!" '

6, 7 21:1, 2 Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, turn towards Jerusalem, utter your word towards the sanctuary[a] and prophesy against 3 8 the land of Israel. •Say to the land of Israel, "Yahweh says this: Now I am against you; I am about to unsheathe my sword and rid you of the upright and the wicked
4 9 alike.[b] •Since I am going to rid you of upright and wicked alike, I shall unsheathe
5 10 my sword against everyone alive, from the Negeb to the north, •so that everyone alive will know that I, Yahweh, am the one who has unsheathed my sword; it will not go back again."

6 11 'Son of man, groan as though your heart were breaking. Utter your bitter groans 7 12 where they can see you. •And if they say, "Why these groans?" reply, "Because of the news which is about to come, all hearts will sink, all hands grow weak, all spirits 7:17 grow faint and all knees turn to water. It is coming now, it is here!—declares Lord Yahweh." '

13, 14 8, 9 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, prophesy. Say, "The Lord says this. Say:[c]

Lv 26:25
The sword, the sword
has been sharpened and polished, 10 15 sharpened for slaughter, polished to flash like lightning . . .[d]

11 this sword sharpened and polished to put in the slaughterer's hand!

d. Primitive theology ascribed to Yahweh customs and practices which were purely human in origin. Here Ezekiel seems to have in mind the commandment to offer the newly born (Ex 22:28–29), often so grossly misconstrued by the Israelites, see Lv 18:21h.

e. Play on the word bamah: 'high place' = habbamah: '(where) you go' = habba'im.

f. The expression indicates the Syrian Desert.

g. As the shepherd makes the sheep file past him to count them, see Lv 27: 32. See also Ezk. 34:1a.

21 a. Plural form as in 7:24.

b. Ezekiel again enunciates the ancient principle of collective punishment, though elsewhere, 14:12d; 18, he advances that of individual responsibility.

c. A poem, in urgent rhythm, on the sword of Yahweh given into the hands of the 'slaughterer', i.e. the Babylonians, to execute God's judgement. The text is badly preserved; many details are difficult to interpret.

d. The remainder of the v. is unintelligible and the versions offer no light. Hebr. 'or we shall rejoice. The sceptre of my son defies all wood.' Gk 'ready to liberate (?), slaughters, defies, rejects all wood.'

e. lit. 'slap your thigh', gesture of mourning and pain.

f. Remainder of v. unintelligible, lit. 'and what would happen if there were not also a defiant sceptre?' The mention of the 'defiant sceptre' apparently alludes to the equally obscure end of v. 15.

g. Trans. conj. of apparently corrupt text. The 'great victim' would seem to allude to Zedekiah, denounced for breaking his oath of allegiance in vv. 30–32.

I have posted the slaughtering sword at every gate to flash like lightning, polished for slaughter. [h] Be sharp, [i] on the right, be ready on the left, 21 16 whichever way your blade is needed!
I too shall clap my hands 22 17
and sate my fury!
I, Yahweh, have spoken." '

The king of Babylon at the crossroads

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, mark out two 23, 24 18, 19 roads for the sword of the king of Babylon to come along, making both of them begin from the same country. Then put up a signpost, put it where the road leaves for the city, •trace the route which the sword should take for Rabbah-of-the- 25 20 Ammonites, and for Judah, to the fortress of Jerusalem. •For the king of Babylon 26 21 has halted at the fork where these two roads diverge, to take the omens. He has shaken the arrows, questioned the household gods, inspected the liver. •The lot 27 22 marked 'Jerusalem' is in his right hand: there to set up battering-rams, give the 4:2,3 word for slaughter, raise the war cry, level battering-rams against the gates, cast up earthworks, build entrenchments. [j] •The inhabitants will believe that these omens 28 23 are idle, for they have received sworn guarantees, but he will bring their guilt to mind and capture them. •And so the Lord Yahweh says this, "Since you have 29 24 brought your guilt to mind by parading your misdeeds and flaunting your sins in everything you do: because you have drawn attention to yourselves, you will be captured. •As for you, impious and wicked prince of Israel, whose doom is 30 25 approaching to put an end to your crimes, •the Lord Yahweh says this: They will 31 26

The punishment of Ammon [l]

'Son of man, prophesy and say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: In reply to the 33 28 Ammonites and their jeers, say: The sword, the sword is drawn for slaughter, polished to devour, to flash like lightning—•while you have empty visions and 34 29 to put an end to their crimes. •Put it back in the scabbard. The place where you 35 30 were created, the land of your origin, will be where I judge you. •I shall vent my 36 31 fury on you, breathe the fire of my rage against you and hand you over to barbarous men whose trade is destruction. •You will be fuel for the fire, your blood will flow 37 32 through the country, you will leave no memory behind you; for I, Yahweh, have spoken!" '

h. 'the slaughtering sword' Gk; Hebr. doubtful. • 'polished' merutah Targ.; Hebr. me'uttah makes no sense.

i. 'Be sharp' Gk; 'Be unique' Hebr.

j. The first mention of battering-rams is probably faulty, though also found in the versions. By marching against Jerusalem, rather than against Rabbah, capital of Ammon (modern Amman), Nebuchadnezzar was not obeying an 'idle omen', but reacting to Israel's offence, the latter having rebelled against him and appealed to Egypt, see v. 28.

k. 'such as never was before', lit. 'even that was not.' 'bestow it', i.e. the crown, but who the 'rightful ruler' may be is (perhaps intentionally) left in doubt: whether Jehoiachin, previously dethroned, or a future messiah. • The concluding words of the v. are reminiscent of Jacob's prophecy over Judah, Gn 49: 10, sometimes emended to read 'the sceptre will not depart from Judah, nor the baton of command from between his feet until he comes to whom it belongs'; but this text is corrupt and by no means clear.

l. The lot having fallen on Jerusalem, v. 27, the Ammonites may think they have escaped, but they too will be punished.

m. lit. 'to put on the throat' conj.; 'to put you on the throat' Hebr. The next two words are grammatically incorrect.

22 a. The theme is that of ch. 16, 20, 23. Here, however, the prophet does not speak in parable, nor does he refer to the sins of past generations but to those of the present, listed in vv. 1–12.

b. lit. 'each according to his arm'.

c. 'your own fault', lit. 'through yourself'. Others emend to 'I shall be profaned (or dishonoured) by you,' following Gk, but the Gk translator has not understood properly and has derived the verb halal (to profane) from the root nahal (to inherit).

d. Hebr. adds 'of silver', perhaps an accidental misplacement, see v. 20. Already used by Isaiah (1:21, 25) and Jeremiah (6:28 seq.), the image is more fully developed here as a metaphor for the invasion and siege of Jerusalem.

e. The pronouncement may have been made when the people of Judah were crowding into Jerusalem to take refuge there, shortly before the siege of 589–587.

f. This third section of the pronouncement was perhaps written after the city had fallen.

g. 'has not received rain' Gk; 'has not been cleaned' Hebr.

h. 'the princes' Gk; 'the conspiracy of her prophets' Hebr.

16:1a Jr 3:6–13 An allegorical history of Jerusalem and Samaria [a]

20:7–8 23 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, 1, 2
·"Son of man, there were once two women, daughters of the same mother. 3
·They played the whore in Egypt; they played the whore when they were still girls. There their nipples were handled, there their virgin breasts were first fondled. 4
·Their names were: Oholah the elder, Oholibah her sister. [b] They belonged to me and bore sons and daughters. As regards their names, Samaria is Oholah, Jerusalem Oholibah. Now Oholah played the whore, although she belonged to me; she lusted after her 5 lovers, her neighbours the Assyrians, 6 ·dressed in purple, governors and magistrates, all of them young and desirable, and skilful horsemen. 7
·She played the whore with all of them, the pick of Assyria, and defiled herself with all the foul idols of all those with whom she was in love, 8 ·nor did she give up the whoring begun in Egypt, where men had slept with her from her girlhood, fondling her virgin breasts, debauching her over and over again.

'That is why I have handed her over to her lovers, to the Assyrians with whom 9
she was in love. 10
·They stripped her naked, seized her sons and daughters and put her to the sword. She became notorious among women for the justice done on her.

'Her sister Oholibah saw all this, but she was even more depraved, and her 11 whorings were worse than her sister's. 12
·She fell in love with her neighbours the Assyrians, governors and magistrates, dressed in sumptuous clothes, skilful horseman, all young and desirable. 13
·Then I saw that she had defiled herself, that both sisters were equally bad. 14
·She began whoring worse than ever; no sooner had she seen wall-carvings of men, pictures of Chaldaeans coloured vermilion, 15
·men with sashes round their waists and elaborate turbans on their heads, all so lordly of bearing, depicting the Babylonians, natives of Chaldaea, 16 ·than she fell in love with
2 K 20:12–19 them at first sight and sent messengers to them in Chaldaea. [c] 17
·The Babylonians came to her, shared her love-bed and defiled her with their whoring. Once defiled by them, she withdrew her affection from them. 18
·Thus she flaunted her whoring, exposing her body, until I withdrew my affection from her as I had withdrawn it from her sister. 19
·But she began whoring worse than ever, remembering her girlhood, when she had played the whore in Egypt, 20
·when she had been in love with their profligates, big-membered as donkeys, ejaculating as violently as stallions.

'You were hankering for the debauchery of your girlhood, when they used to 21 handle your nipples in Egypt and fondle your young breasts. [d] 22 ·And so, Oholibah, Lord Yahweh says this, "I shall set all your lovers against you, from whom you have withdrawn your affection, and bring them to assault you from all directions: the Babylonians and all the Chaldaeans, the men of Pekod and Shoa and Koa, [e] 23 and all the Assyrians with them, young and desirable, all governors and magistrates, all famous lords and skilful horsemen. 24
·From the north, [f] they will advance on you with chariots and wagons and an international army and beset you with shield, buckler and helmet on all sides. I shall charge them to pass sentence on you and they will pass sentence on you as they think fit. 25
·I shall direct my jealousy against you; they will treat you with fury; they will cut off your nose and ears, and what is left of your family will fall by the sword; they will seize your sons and daughters, and what is left will be burnt. 26
·They will strip off your garments and rob you of your jewels. 27
·I shall put an end to your debauchery and to the whorings you
Ex 16:3;17:3 began in Egypt; you will not look to the Egyptians any more, you will never think of them again. 28
·For the Lord Yahweh says this: Now, I shall hand you over to those you hate, to those for whom you no longer feel affection. 29
·They will treat you with hatred, they will rob you of the entire fruit of your labours and leave you stark naked. And thus your shameful whorings will be exposed, your debauchery and your whorings. 30
·This will happen to you because you have played the whore with the nations and have defiled yourself with their foul idols. 31
·Since you have copied

32 your sister's behaviour, I shall put her cup in your hand." ·The Lord Yahweh says this: Ps 75:8+ Is 51:17i Jr 25:15–18

You will drink your sister's cup,[g] a cup both deep and wide, leading to laughter and mockery,
so ample the draught it holds.
33 You will be filled with drunkenness and sorrow.
Cup of affliction and devastation,
the cup of your sister Samaria, 34 you will drink it, you will drain it; then you will break it in pieces and lacerate your own breasts.

For I have spoken—declared the Lord Yahweh.

35 "And so, the Lord Yahweh says this: Since you have forgotten me and have turned your back on me, you too will have to bear the weight of your debauchery 36 and whorings." ' ·And Yahweh said to me, 'Son of man, are you ready to judge 20:4;22:2
37 Oholah and Oholibah and charge them with their loathsome practices? ·They have been adulteresses, their hands are dripping with blood, they have committed adultery with their foul idols. As for the children they had borne me, they have 38 offered them as burnt sacrifices to feed them.[h] ·And here is something else they Lv 18:21h have done to me: they have defiled my sanctuary today and have profaned my 39 Sabbaths. ·The same day as sacrificing their children to their idols, they have been to my sanctuary and profaned it. Yes, this is what they have done in my Lv 19:30 own house.

40 'Worse still,[i] they summoned men from far away, invited by messenger, and 41 they came. For them you bathed, you painted your eyes, put on your jewels ·and sat on a sumptuous bed, by which a table was laid out. On this you had put my 42 incense and my oil. ·The noise of the carefree company resounded, made by the crowd of men brought in from the desert;[j] they put bracelets on the women's arms 43 and magnificent crowns on their heads. ·I thought, "That woman, worn out with 44 adultery! Are they going to fornicate with her too?"[k] ·Yet they visit her like any common prostitute, just as they visited those profligate women Oholah and Oho-45 libah. ·All the same, there are upright men who will judge them as adulteresses Lv 20:10 Dt 22:21–22 and murderesses are judged, since they are adulteresses and their hands are dripping with blood."

46 'The Lord Yahweh says this, "Summon an assembly to deal with them, and hand 47 them over to terror and pillage; ·let the assembly stone them and dispatch them with their swords; let their sons and daughters be slaughtered and their houses set 48 on fire. ·This is how I shall purge the country of debauchery, so that all women will 49 be taught the lesson never to ape your debauchery again. ·Your debauchery will recoil on yourselves, and you will bear the weight of the sins committed with your foul idols and you will know that I am the Lord Yahweh." '

23 a. The allegory of Israel's history, see 16:1a, is resumed here and elaborated by the comparison between Samaria and Jerusalem.

b. Oholah: 'her-tent'. Oholibah: 'my-tent-(is-)in-her'. The etymology of the words seems to contrast the schismatic cult of Samaria with the authentic cult of Jerusalem. They may, however, allude to events or practices unknown to us. Possibly there is reference to the tents pitched on the 'high places'.

c. Possibly an allusion to the friendly relations between Hezekiah and Merodach-Baladan, see Is 39.

d. 'handle' be'assot conj., see v. 3; Hebr. ba'asot 'make'. • 'in Egypt' versions; 'of Egypt' Hebr. • 'fondle' uma'ek conj., see v. 3; Hebr. lema'an 'in order to'.

e. Pekod, already mentioned in Jr 50:21, was an Aramaean tribe to the east of Babylonia. Both are mentioned in cuneiform inscriptions. Shoa, possibly identifiable with the Sutu, has not been located.

f. 'from the north' Gk; Hebr. has unknown word.

g. This short poem is probably a popular song or a satirical epigram which Ezekiel applies to Jerusalem. The image of the cup had been current since Jeremiah, see also Ps 16; 75.

h. Gk and Syr.; 'for them' Hebr. • On the theme of child-sacrifice, see 20:25–26; Jr 7:31; 19:5; 32:35. Also Lv 18:21h.

i. The prophet now addresses his contemporaries directly and blames them for their recent sins; hence the use of the second person. The passage no doubt contains a number of allusions to recent specific political events, but the text is corrupt and not easily understood.

j. Text corrupt; trans. conj. After 'company' we omit 'and to men'.

k. Text uncertain.

Announcement of the siege of Jerusalem

24 In the ninth year, on the tenth day of the tenth month, [a] the word of Yahweh 1 was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, write down today's date, yes, 2 today's, for this very day the king of Babylon began his attack on Jerusalem. [b] ·So 3 pronounce a parable for this tribe of rebels. Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

11:3–12

Put the pot on the fire;
put it on; pour the water in! [c]
Now put the cuts of meat all in together, 4 all the best cuts, leg and shoulder.
Fill it with the best bones.
Take the best of the flock, 5 then heap wood [d] underneath;
boil it thoroughly
until even the bones are cooked.

"For the Lord Yahweh says this: 6

Disaster is in store for the bloody city, for that rusty cooking pot whose rust will not come off!
Empty it, bit by bit,
not bothering to draw lots;
for she is still full of bloodshed, 7
she has put blood on the naked rock;
she did not pour it on the ground
so as to cover it with dust.
To make anger rise, to exact vengeance, 8
Jb 16:18f I have put her blood on the naked rock, so that it should not be covered:

"So, the Lord Yahweh says this: 9

Disaster is in store for the bloody city!
I too plan to build a great fire.
Heap on the wood, light it, 10 cook the meat, prepare the seasoning let the bones burn!
Put the empty pot on the coals 11 to make it hot,
until the bronze glows,
the filth inside melts
and the rust is burnt away!

"'But all that rust would not come off in the fire. ·Your filth [f] is infamous. Since 12, 13
I have tried to purge you and you would not let yourself be purged of your filth, so now you will never be purged of your filth until I have sated my anger on you. ·I, 14 Yahweh, have spoken; this will happen; I shall act and not relent; I shall show no 5:11e pity, no compassion. You will be judged as your conduct and actions deserve—
declares the Lord Yahweh." '

Jr 18:1a Ordeals for the prophet

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, at a blow I am 15, 16
Si 36:22 about to deprive you of the delight of your eyes. [g] But you are not to lament, not to Jr 16:5–7,6c weep, not to let your tears run down. ·Groan in silence, do not go into mourning 17 for the dead, knot your turban round your head, put your sandals on your feet, do not cover your beard, do not eat the usual food.' [h] ·I told this to the people in the 18 morning, and my wife died in the evening, and the next morning I did as I had been 19 ordered. ·The people then said to me, 'Will you not explain what meaning these 20 actions have for us?' ·I replied, 'The word of Yahweh has been addressed to me as 21 follows, ·"Say to the House of Israel, the Lord Yahweh says this: I am about to profane my sanctuary, the pride of your strength, the delight of your eyes, the joy Jr 7:1–5 Lm 2:7 of your hearts. Your sons and daughters whom you have left behind will fall by the 22 sword. ·Then you will do as I have done: [i] you will not cover your beards or eat the 23 usual food; ·you will keep your turbans on your heads and your sandals on your feet; you will not lament or weep but will waste away for your crimes, groaning 24 among yourselves. ·Thus Ezekiel is a sign for you. You will do exactly what he has 12:6+ done. And when this happens, you will know that I am Lord Yahweh! " 25 'And, son of man, the day that I deprive them of their strength, their crowning joy, the delight of their eyes, the joy of their hearts, their sons and daughters, 26, 27 that day a survivor will bring you the news. ·That day your mouth will be 3:26;33:22 opened to speak to the survivor; you will speak and no longer be dumb; you will be a sign for them, and they will know that I am Yahweh.'

II: PROPHECIES AGAINST THE NATIONS [a]

Against the Ammonites [b]

21:33–37 Dt 2:19e Am 1:13–15 Jr 49:1–6

1, 2 25 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, turn
3 towards the Ammonites and prophesy against them. ·Say to the Ammonites, "Hear the word of the Lord Yahweh. The Lord Yahweh says this:
"Since you [c] gloated over my sanctuary when it was profaned, and over the land of Israel when it was ravaged, and over the House of Judah when it went into exile, 4 I shall let the sons of the East [d] take possession of you; they will pitch their camps Nb 24:21k inside you, they will make their home in you. They will be the ones to eat your 5 produce and drink your milk. ·I shall turn Rabbah into a camel yard and the towns [e] of Ammon into sheepfolds. And so you will know that I am Yahweh.
6 "The Lord Yahweh says this: Since you have clapped your hands and danced for 6:11 7 joy, full of malicious delight at Israel's fate, ·my hand will be against you for this; I shall hand you over to be looted by the peoples, obliterate you as a nation and wipe you out as a country. I shall reduce you to nothing, and you will know that I am Yahweh.

Against Moab

Nb 22:36n Jr 48 Am 2:1–3 Zp 2:8–11

8 "The Lord Yahweh says this:
"Since Moab and Seir [f] have said: Look at the House of Judah; it is no different 24 a. December 589–January 588.

b. Hence, from the data of 2 K 25:1; Jr 52:4 (cf. 39:1), the beginning of the siege of Jerusalem. If the prophet is now in Babylonia, this date, which he sets down in writing, will later serve to verify the accuracy of his revelations.
c. A symbolic action. The prophet ironically mimes the boast of 11:3 claiming the impregnability of Jerusalem. The details are not all easy to interpret but the general sense is clear: the city is so corrupt that nothing can save it. A transitory ordeal would not be enough; the city must be destroyed. The walls will not protect its people, who will be driven out and scattered.
d. 'wood' ha'etzim conj., cf. v. 10; Hebr. ha'atzamin 'bones'.
e. At the beginning of v., Hebr. reads 'She has wearied me (with) her labours' (?); Gk omits. • At the end of v., we omit the word 'rust', accidentally repeated.
f. 'Your filth' conj.; 'In your filth' Hebr.
g. Term of affection, here designating the prophet's wife, v. 18.
h. lit. 'bread of men'. These are mourning ceremonies, but the exact allusion escapes us.
i. Not that the citizens of Jerusalem are forbidden to lament their sins, but that there will be no time for doing so; the catastrophe will be too sudden and too sharp.

25 a. As in Is 13–23; Jr 47–51; Am 1–2, Ezekiel's pronouncements against the nations are grouped together, ch. 25–32. Ch. 25–28 are concerned with Israel's immediate neighbours, Ammon, Moab, Edom and the Philistines, ch. 25, Tyre and Sidon, ch. 26–28, then Egypt, ch. 29–32. The dates given in 26:1; 29:1; 30:20; 31:1; 32:1, 17 range from BC 587 to BC 585, during and after the siege of Jerusalem. The same historical background obtains in ch. 24 and 33, which form a setting for these sayings. The brief saying against Tyre, 29:17–21, dated 571, is a later addition to the collection.
b. The Ammonites, Dt 2:19e, had taken part in the various rebellions against Nebuchadnezzar. Later they deserted their allies and profited from Jerusalem's misfortune.
c. Addressed to Ammon, here personified; the pronoun is in the singular.
d. Nomadic Arabs, cf. Nb 24:21k; Is 11:14; Jr 49:28.
e. 'towns' conj.; 'sons' Hebr.
f. Seir designates the mountainous plateau south east of the Dead Sea in Edomite territory (but see Dt 2:1); the name is often used as a synonym for Edom, 35:2; Gn 32:4; Nb 24:18; Jg 5:4. It is surprising to find it here since the next saying is devoted to Edom. The word is absent from Gk and is perhaps a gloss.

from any other nation; ·very well, I shall expose Moab's heights; its cities will no 9 longer be cities [g] throughout the land—the jewels of the country, Beth-Jeshimoth, Baal-Meon and Kiriathaim. ·I shall let the sons of the East and the Ammonites 10 take possession of them, so that they will no longer be remembered by the nations.
I shall bring Moab to justice, and they will know that I am Yahweh. 11

35 Against Edom

Dt 2:1a
Ps 137:7
Is 34
Jr 49:7–22
Am 1:11–12

"The Lord Yahweh says this: 12
"Since Edom has taken revenge on the House of Judah and committed great crimes in doing so, ·very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: My hand will be against 13 Is 21:13–14 Edom and denude it of human and animal. I shall lay it waste, from Teman as far as Dedan [h] they will be put to the sword. ·I shall take vengeance on Edom by means 14 of my people Israel. They will treat Edom as my anger and fury dictate, and they will know this is my vengeance—declares the Lord Yahweh.

Jos 13:2b
Zp 2:4–7

Against the Philistines

"The Lord Yahweh says this, 15
"Since the Philistines have acted in revenge and, motivated by malice, have taken revenge, doing their best to destroy because of their long-standing hatred, very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: My hand will be against the Philistines; I 16 shall exterminate the Cherethites [i] and destroy the rest of the coastal peoples. ·I 17 shall perform frightful acts of vengeance and inflict furious punishments on them; and they will know that I am Yahweh, when I exact my vengeance on them." '

Is 23

Against Tyre [a]

26 In the eleventh year, on the first of the month, [b] the word of Yahweh was 1 addressed to me as follows,
'Son of man, since Tyre has said of Jerusalem: 2 25:3

"Aha! She is shattered, the Gateway to the Nations;
she now gives way to me.
Her riches are ruined!" [c]
Very well, the Lord Yahweh says this, 3
"Now, Tyre, I am against you, I shall raise many nations against you 4
as the sea raises its waves.
They will destroy the walls of Tyre,
they will demolish her towers;
I shall sweep the dust of her away and reduce her to a naked rock. [d]
She will be a drying-ground out to sea for fishing-nets. 5
For I have spoken—declares Lord Yahweh.
She will be the prey of the nations.
As for her daughters on the mainland, 6 these will be put to the sword,
and they will know that I am Yahweh."

29:17–21

'For the Lord Yahweh says this, "From the north, I shall bring Nebuchadnezzar, 7 king of Babylon, king of kings, down on Tyre with horses, chariots, cavalry and an enormous army. [e]

He will put your daughters 8
on the mainland to the sword.
4:1–3 He will build siege-works against you, cast up a siege-ramp against you,
raise a screen against you;
he will pound your walls with his battering-rams, 9 and demolish your towers with his siege-engines.

10 His horses are so many that their dust will hide you.
The noise of his horsemen and his chariot-wheels will make your walls tremble as he enters your gates as though storming into a city through the breach.
11 With his horses' hoofs he will trample through all your streets;
he will put your people to the sword,
and throw your massive pillars to the ground.
12 Your wealth will be seized, your merchandise looted, your walls rased, your luxurious houses shattered, your stones, your timbers, your very dust, thrown into the sea.
13 I shall put an end to the sound of your songs; Is 24:8–9 the sound of your harps will not be heard again. Jr 25:10 Rv 18:22 14 I shall reduce you to a naked rock, and make you into a drying-ground for fishing-nets, never to be rebuilt;
for I, Yahweh, have spoken
—declares the Lord Yahweh."

Lament over Tyre

15 'The Lord Yahweh says this to Tyre, "Will not the islands[f] quake at the sound of 16 your fall, while the wounded groan and the slaughter takes place inside you? ·All the princes of the sea will leave their thrones, lay aside their cloaks, take off their Jon 3:6 embroidered robes. Dressed in terror they will sit on the ground trembling incessantly, stunned at your fate.
17 "They will raise the lament[g] for you as follows: Rv 18:9–19

You are destroyed then, vanished from the seas, famous city, former sea-power,
who with her citizens,
used to spread terror
all over the mainland![h] 18 Now the islands are trembling on the day of your fall;
the islands of the sea are terrified by your end.

19 "For the Lord Yahweh says this:
"When I make you a ruined city like other deserted cities, when I raise the deep 20 against you and the ocean covers you, ·when I fling you down with those who go 32:18–32 down into the abyss, with the people of long ago, and put you deep in the underworld, in the ruins of long ago with those who sink into oblivion, so that you 21 can never come back or be restored to the land of the living,' ·I will make you an object of terror; you will not exist. People will look for you but never find you Rv 18:21 again—declares the Lord Yahweh!" '

g. 'its cities', conj.; 'from its cities' Hebr.; but the whole v. is obscure and the translation uncertain.

h. Teman was a southerly part of Edom, but the two names are often used synonymously, see Jr 49:20; Dedan, the modern oasis of El-Ela, was an Arab country south east of Edom, cf. Is 21:13; Jr 49:8.

i. Neighbours of, see Jos 13:2b, and related to the Philistines, see 2 S 8:18*l*. Here the two names are virtually synonymous.

26 a. Tyre at the beginning of the sixth century was a great commercial city. It played a leading part in all the anti-Babylonian activities before 587, but deserted its ally, Jerusalem, and rejoiced in its downfall.

b. The year 587–586. The Gk reads 'twelfth year' and 'first month', i.e. April 586.

c. 'her riches' conj., 'I shall grow rich' Hebr.

d. Tyre, tzor, was built on a rock, tzur, lying off the coast.

e. The siege of Tyre, begun by Nebuchadnezzar, lasted 13 years and ended without much advantage to the victor, 29:17–21. The radical destruction prophesied here was accomplished only later, by Alexander the Great.

f. The term 'islands' means the Phoenician trade-counters all round the Mediterranean and beyond.

g. A qinah, see 19:1a.

h. 'You are destroyed' Hebr.; 'she is destroyed' conj. 'vanished' versions, rearrangement of vowels of MT 'inhabited'. • 'the mainland' hayyabashah Syr.; Hebr. yoshebeha 'her inhabitants'.

i. The 'abyss' synonymous with 'Sheol', is the underworld, inhabited by the souls of the dead, see Nb 16:33f. • 'come back tashubi, conj.; Hebr. teshebi 'live'. • 'and be restored' versions; 'for me to give beauty' Hebr.

Second lament over the fall of Tyre [a]

27 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, 2 'Son of man, raise 1, 2 the lament for Tyre. 3 Say to Tyre, "City enthroned at the gateway of the 3 sea, agent between the peoples and the many islands, Lord Yahweh says this:

Tyre, you used to say: I am a ship [b] perfect in beauty.
Your frontiers were far out to sea; 4 those who built you
made you perfect in beauty.
Cypress from Senir [c] they used 5 for all your planking.
They took a cedar from Lebanon to make a mast above you.
From oaks of Bashan 6
they made your oars.
They built you a deck of cedar inlaid with ivory from the Kittim [d] isles.
Embroidered linen from Egypt was used for your sail 7 and for your flag.
Purple and scarlet from the Elishah islands formed your deck-tent.
The people of Sidon and Arvad [e] 8 were your oarsmen.
The sages of Tyre were aboard,
serving as sailors.
The elders and craftsmen of Gebal [f] were there 9 to caulk your seams.

"Every sea-going ship [g] and crew frequented you to guarantee your trade. 10 Jr 46:9c 10 Men from Persia, Lud and Put served as warriors in your army; hanging up shield and helmet in you, they displayed your splendour. 11 The sons of Arvad with their army 11 manned your walls all round, while the Gammadians manned your towers; hanging Is 23:1a their shields all round your walls, they completed your beauty. 12 Tarshish traded 12 with you because of your abundant resources and exchanged your merchandise for 38:2 silver, iron, tin and lead. 13 Javan, Tubal and Meshech [h] traded with you. For your 13
38:2b merchandise they traded slaves and bronze artefacts. 14 The people of Beth-Togar- 14 25:13 mah [i] traded your horses, chargers, mules. 15 The people of Dedan traded with you; 15 many islands were your customers and paid you in ivory tusks and ebony. 16 Edom [j] 16 traded with you for the sake of your many manufactured goods, exchanging garnets, purple, embroideries, fine linen, coral and rubies for your goods. 17 Judah 17 Jg 11:33 and the land of Israel also traded with you, bringing corn from Minnith, pannag, honey, oil and balm. [k] 18 Damascus traded with you, for quantities of your manufac- 18
Ho 14:8 tured goods and other goods of all kinds, furnishing you with wine from Helbon Gn 10:27 and wool from Zahar. [l] 19 Dan and Javan, from Uzal onwards, [m] supplied you with 19 25:13 wrought iron, cassia and reeds in exchange for your goods. 20 Dedan traded with 20 you in saddle-cloths. 21 Arabia and all the sheikhs of Kedar were your customers; 21 Gn 10:7 1 K 10:1a they paid in lambs, rams and he-goats. 22 The merchants of Sheba and Raamah 22 traded with you; they supplied you with the finest spices, precious stones and gold Gn 11:31;12:5 for your merchandise. 23 Haran, Canneh and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur 23 and Chilmad [n] traded with you. 24 They traded rich clothes, embroidered and purple 24 cloaks, multi-coloured materials and strong plaited cords for your markets.

Ships of Tarshish sailed on your business; 25 you were full and heavily loaded [o]
far out to sea.

Out to the open sea
your oarsmen rowed you.
The east wind has wrecked you
far out to sea.
Your riches, your goods, your cargo,
your seamen, your sailors,
your caulkers, your commercial agents,
all the warriors you carry,
and all the passengers who are aboard will founder far out to sea on the day of your shipwreck.

When they hear the cries of your sailors the coasts will tremble.
Then the oarsmen will all desert their ships.
The sailors and seafaring people will stay ashore.
They will raise their voices for you ↗Rv 18:19
and weep bitterly.
They will throw dust on their heads and roll in ashes;
they will shave their heads for you and put sackcloth round their waists.
With heartfelt bitterness they will weep for you, bitterly wail.
Wailing, they will raise the lament for you,
they will lament over you:

Who is like Tyre,[p] ↗Rv 18:18
far out to sea?
When you unloaded your goods to satisfy so many peoples, you enriched the kings of the earth with your excess of wealth and goods. ↗Rv 18:19 Now you have been wrecked by the waves, by the depths of the sea.
Your cargo and all your passengers have foundered with you.

27 a. This allegorical description of a shipwreck uses technical terms the meaning of which is not always clear.

b. 'I am a ship' 'oniyyah 'ani conj.; Hebr. 'ani 'I am'.

c. The Amorite name for Hermon, cf. Dt 3:9.

d. 'of cedar inlaid with' bite 'ashurim Targ.; Hebr. bat 'ashurim 'daughter of the Assyrians'. • Kittim here means not only the people of Cyprus but those of other islands and parts of the Mediterranean coastline, see 26:15f.

e. These two towns of the Phoenician coast more or less recognised the economic suzerainty of Tyre.

f. i.e. Byblos, another Phoenician city.

g. The poem is here interrupted by a detailed list of the commercial interests of Tyre, not forming part of the original saying.

h. Javan, i.e. Ionia, indicates the Greek or even the western peoples in general. On Tubal and Meshech, see 38:6.

i. Probably Armenia, see 38:2b.

j. 'Edom' versions; 'Aram' Hebr.

k. 'pannag', unknown word, possibly a kind of cake. Others suppose millet (following Syr.) or balm (Vulg.). • Minnith was a region in Ammon.

l. The wine of Helbon, north of Damascus, was famous and is mentioned in Assyrian documents. • Zahar is unknown and perhaps is not a place-name; some suggest 'unbleached wool'.

m. An Arab tribe like Sheba and Raamah, v. 22–23; Gn 10:27; 1 K 10:1a, though possibly a region is intended here. Dan and Javan seem out of place here: Javan has already appeared in v. 13, while Dan has no cause to be mentioned, see v. 17. Perhaps these are otherwise unknown Arab tribes near Uzal. But the text may be corrupt. Suppressing Dan (which is missing from Gk), some emend yavan to yayin '(they will furnish you) . . . with wine (from Uzal)'.

n. Haran is on the upper Euphrates. Canneh and Eden probably correspond to the Kannu and Bit Adini of Assyrian texts, towns on the middle Euphrates. For Sheba, see 1 K 10:1a. Chilmad is an unknown town, probably near Asshur.

o. Or 'rich and glorious'; but the prophet seems simultaneously to be suggesting the weight of cargo carried in this magnificent ship and its imminent shipwreck.

p. 'comparable (to Tyre)' versions, '(like Tyre) the silent one' (?) Hebr.

All those who live in the islands 35 will be stunned at your fate.
Their kings will quake with horror,
with downcast expressions.
The merchants of the nations 36 will whistle at your fate.
You will be an object of terror,
gone for ever." '

Against the king of Tyre

28 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, say to 1, 2 the ruler of Tyre, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

Because your heart has grown proud,
Gn 3:5 2 Th 2:4 Is 14:13 you thought: I am a god;
I am divinely enthroned
far out to sea.
Though you are human, not divine,
you have allowed yourself to think like God.
14:14 So, you are wiser than Danel; 3 no sage [a] as wise as you!
By your wisdom and your intelligence 4 you have made yourself a fortune, you have put gold and silver into your treasuries.
Such is your skill in trading, 5 your fortune has continued to increase, and your fortune has made your heart grow prouder.

"And so, the Lord Yahweh says this: 6

Since you have allowed yourself to think like God, very well, I am going to bring foreigners against you, 7
the most barbarous of the nations.
They will draw sword against your fine wisdom,
they will desecrate your splendour, they will throw you down into the grave 8 and you will die a violent death
far out to sea.
Will you still think: I am a god, 9
when your slaughterers confront you?
Is 31:3 But you will be human, not divine,
in the clutches of the ones who strike you down!
You will die like the uncircumcised 10
at the hand of foreigners.

The fall of the king of Tyre [b]

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, raise a lament [c] 11, 12 for the king of Tyre. Say to him, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

You used to be a model of perfection, [d]
full of wisdom,
perfect in beauty;
you were in Eden, in the garden of God. 13
All kinds of gem formed your mantle:
sard, topaz, diamond, chrysolite, onyx, jasper, sapphire, garnet, emerald, and your ear-pendants and spangles[e] were made of gold;

all was ready on the day you were created.
14 I made you a living creature with outstretched wings, as guardian,[f] Gn 3:24 you were on the holy mountain of God; Is 14:13 you walked amid red-hot coals. 10:2 15 Your behaviour was exemplary from the day you were created until guilt first appeared in you, 16 because your busy trading has filled you with violence and sin.
I have thrown you down from the mountain of God and destroyed you, guardian winged creature, amid the coals. 10:2,7 17 Your heart has grown proud because of your beauty, your wisdom has been corrupted by your splendour.
I have thrown you to the ground;
I have made you a spectacle for kings.
18 By the immense number of your crimes, by the dishonesty of your trading,
you have defiled your sanctuary.
So I have brought fire out of you to devour you;
I have reduced you to ashes on the ground
before the eyes of all who saw you.
19 Of the nations, all who know you are stunned at your fate.
You are an object of terror;
gone for ever." '

Against Sidon[g]

20, 21 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, turn towards 22 Sidon and prophesy against her. •Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this:

I am against you, Sidon,
I will show my glory in you!
They will know I am Yahweh, once I execute sentence on her and display my holiness in her.
23 For I shall send her the plague, and there will be blood in her streets, and in her the dead will fall under the sword raised against her from all sides,
and they will know that I am Yahweh.

Israel delivered from the nations

24 "No more, for the House of Israel, shall any of the hostile nations surrounding them be a thorn that wounds or a briar that tears; and they will know that I am Yahweh.

e. 'ear-pendants' and 'spangles': trans. conj. The first term normally means 'lyre', the second, an unusual form (unique example of a noun formed from the root normally meaning 'to dig' or 'pierce'), is possibly a technical term used by goldsmiths.

f. 'outstretched wings' Vulg.; Hebr. hitherto unidentified. These verses seem to contain reminiscences not only of the biblical tradition of the garden of Eden but also of elements of eastern mythologies: the mountain of the gods, situated in the farthest north, see Ps 48:1–2; Is 14:13, the allusion to the guardian karibu, see Gn 3:24, and to the burning coals, Ezk 10:2, to the fall and annihilation Ezk 28:16. Some details, however, remain obscure.

g. Sidon, one of the principal towns of Phoenicia, but before the Persian period less important than Tyre. According to Jr 27:3, Sidon was party to the policy leading to the ruin of Judah; hence Ezekiel's hostility.

Is 19 Jr 46 Against Egypt

29 In the tenth year, on the twelfth day of the tenth month,[a] the word of 1 Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·'Son of man, turn towards 2 Pharaoh king of Egypt[b] and prophesy against him and against the whole of Egypt.
Speak and say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: 3

Look, I am against you, Pharaoh king of Egypt—32 Jb 40:25–41:26 the great crocodile wallowing in his Niles who thought: My Nile is mine, I made it.[c] I shall put hooks through your jaws, 4 make your Nile fish stick to your scales, and pull you out of your Niles with all your Nile fish sticking to your scales.
I shall drop you in the desert, with all your Nile fish. 5
You will fall in the wilds Jr 25:33 and not be taken up or buried.[d] I shall give you as food to the wild animals and the birds of heaven, and all the inhabitants of Egypt will know that I am Yahweh, 6 2 K 18:21 Is 36:6 for they have given no more support than a reed to the House of Israel.
Wherever they grasped you, you broke in their hands 7 and cut their hands all over.
Whenever they leaned on you, you broke, making all their limbs give way.[e]

"So, the Lord Yahweh says this: I shall send the sword against you to denude 8 you of human and animal. ·Egypt will become a desolate waste, and they will know 9 that I am Yahweh. Because he thought: The Nile is mine, I made it, ·very well, I 10 am against you and your Niles. I shall make Egypt a waste[f] and a desolation, from Migdol to Syene and beyond to the frontiers of Ethiopia. ·No human foot will pass 11 through it, no animal foot will pass through it. For forty years it will remain uninhabited. ·I shall make Egypt the most desolate of countries; for forty years its 12 cities will be the most desolate of wasted cities. And I shall scatter the Egyptians among the nations and disperse them among the countries.' ·The Lord Yahweh, 13 however, says this: After forty years have passed, I shall gather the Egyptians back from the nations where they were dispersed.[g] ·I shall bring the Egyptian captives 14 back and re-install them in the land of Pathros,[h] in the country of their origin.
There they will constitute a modest kingdom. ·Egypt will be the most modest of 15 kingdoms and no longer dominate other nations; for I shall reduce it, so that it will not rule other nations ever again. ·It will no longer be anything for the House of 16 Israel to trust in, but will be a reminder of the guilt which lay in turning to it for help. And they will know that I am Lord Yahweh." '

In the twenty-seventh year, on the first day of the first month,[i] the word of 17
Yahweh was addressed to me as follows:

'Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon has taken his army in a great 18 expedition against Tyre. Their heads have all gone bald, their shoulders are all chafed, but even so he has derived no profit, either for himself or for his army, from the expedition mounted against Tyre. ·Since this is so, the Lord Yahweh 19 30:10,24; 32:11seq. says this, "Look, I shall hand Egypt over to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. He will carry off its riches, loot it, put it to the sack; that will be the wages for his army.

20 As wages for the trouble he has taken, I am giving him Egypt instead (for they Jr 43:10;44:30; 46:26 have been working for me)—declares the Lord Yahweh.
21 "That day, I shall raise up a new stock[j] for the House of Israel and allow you to open your mouth among them.[k] And they will know that I am Yahweh." '

Against Egypt: the day of Yahweh

1, 2 30 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows,[a] ·'Son of man, 3 prophesy and say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: Howl: Disaster day! ·For Am 5:18m the day is near, the day of Yahweh is near; it will be a day dark with cloud, a time of doom for the nations.
4 "The sword will come on Egypt, and anguish on the country of Cush when the slaughtered fall in Egypt, when her riches are carried away and her foundations 5 are destroyed. ·Cush, Put and Lud, all Arabia, Cub[b] and the children of the Jr 46:9c country of the covenant will fall by the sword with them.
6 "Yahweh says this:
"The supports of Egypt will fall; the pride of her strength will crumble; they will fall by the sword from Migdol to Syene—declares the Lord Yahweh. 29:10 7 "They will be the most desolate of desolate countries, and its cities the most 8 ruined of cities. ·And they will know that I am Yahweh when I set fire to Egypt and all its supports are shattered.
9 "That day, I shall send messengers by ship to terrify the carefree Cushites, and 10 anguish will overtake them on the day of Egypt—it is coming now! ·The Lord Yahweh says this: I shall destroy the huge population of Egypt at the hand of 11 Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. ·He and his people, the most barbarous of nations, will be brought to ravage the country. They will draw the sword against 29:11–12 12 Egypt and fill the country with corpses. ·I shall dry up the courses of the Nile and sell the country to the wicked. I shall lay the whole country waste and everything in it, at the hand of foreigners. I, Yahweh, have spoken.
13 "The Lord Yahweh says this: I shall destroy the foul idols and take the false gods away from Noph.[c] Egypt will be left without a ruler. I shall spread fear through 14 Egypt. ·I shall lay Pathros waste, set Zoan on fire, inflict my punishments on No. 29:14h 15 I shall vent my fury on Sin, the bastion of Egypt; I shall wipe out the throngs of 16 No. ·I shall set fire to Egypt; Sin will be seized with convulsions; a breach will be 17 opened at No and the waters flood out.[d] ·The young men of On and Pi-Beseth will 18 fall by the sword and the cities themselves go into captivity. ·At Tahpanhes day will turn to darkness when I shatter the sceptres of Egypt there, when the pride of her strength ceases. A cloud will cover Egypt itself, and its daughters will go into 19 captivity. ·Such will be the punishments I inflict on Egypt. And they will know that I am Yahweh." '

The cedar tree

31 In the eleventh year, on the first day of the third month,[a] the word of 1 Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, ·"Son of man, say to Pharaoh king 2 of Egypt and his throng of subjects:[b]

"What can compare with you for greatness?
I know: a cedar tree in the Lebanon[c] 3 with noble branches, dense foliage, lofty height.
Its top pierces the clouds.
The waters have made it grow, the deep has made it tall, 4 pouring its rivers round the place where it is planted, sending rivulets to all the wild trees.
This is why its height was greater than that of other wild trees, 5 its branches increased in number, its boughs stretched wide, because of the plentiful waters making it grow.[d] 17:23 All the birds of heaven nested in its branches; 6 under its boughs all wild animals dropped their young;
in its shade sat many, many people.
It was beautiful in its size, in the span of its boughs; 7 for its roots were in plentiful waters.
There was no cedar like it in the garden of God, 8 no cypress had branches such as these,
no plane tree could match its boughs, no tree in the garden of God could rival its beauty.
I had made it so lovely with its many branches 9
Gn 2:8 that it was the envy of every tree in Eden, in the garden of God.

"Very well, the Lord Yahweh says this: 10

"Since it has raised itself to its full height, has lifted its top into the clouds, and has grown arrogant about its height, ·I have handed it over to the prince of the 11 nations,[e] for him to treat as its wickedness deserves; I have rejected it.
Foreigners, the most barbarous of nations, have cut it down and deserted it. On 12 the mountains, in all the valleys, lie its branches; its broken boughs are in every ravine throughout the country; everybody in the country has fled[f] its shade and deserted it. ·On its wreckage perch all the birds of heaven; all the wild animals 13 have advanced on its branches.

"So in future let no tree rear its height beside the waters, none push its top into 14 the clouds, no watered tree stretch its height towards them. For all of them are doomed to death, to the depths of the underworld, with the common run of humanity, with those who sink into oblivion.

Nb 16:33f "The Lord Yahweh says this: The day it went down to Sheol, I imposed 15 mourning, I closed the deep over it. I stopped its rivers and the plentiful waters dried up; I made Lebanon dark because of it, and all the wild trees wilted because 16 of it. •With the noise when it fell I made the nations quake, as I hurled it down to Sheol, with those who sink into oblivion. In the depths of the underworld all the 32:18–31 trees of Eden took comfort, the pick of the loveliest trees of the Lebanon, all Is 14:15 17 irrigated by the waters. •And its offspring[g] among the nations, once living in its shade, went down to Sheol with it, to those who have been slaughtered by the sword.[h]

18 "Which of the trees of Eden compares with you for glory and greatness? Yet you have been hurled down with the trees of Eden, to the depths of the underworld, among the uncircumcised, and there you lie with those who have been slaughtered by the sword. So much for Pharaoh and all his throng—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

The crocodile

1 32 In the twelfth year, on the first day of the twelfth month,[a] the word of 2 Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, raise a lament for Pharaoh king of Egypt. Say to him:

"Young lion of nations, you are destroyed!
Once you were like a crocodile in the lagoons; 29:3–5 emerging from your rivers, Jb 40:25–41:26 you churned up the water with your trampling and fouled their streams.

3 "The Lord Yahweh says this: 31:12–16

I shall throw my net over you in a great concourse of nations;
and they will trawl you up in my net.
Then I shall leave you high and dry, 4 I shall throw you out into the wilds and make all the birds of heaven settle on you, and glut all the beasts of the earth with you.
5 I shall strew your flesh on your mountains and fill the valleys with your corruption; 6 I shall water the country with what flows from you,
with your blood, on the mountainsides, and you will fill the ravines.
7 When I extinguish you I shall cover the skies Am 8:9h and darken the stars. Mt 24:29
I shall cover the sun with clouds and the moon will not give its light.
8 I shall dim every luminary in heaven because of you and cover your country in darkness
—declares the Lord Yahweh.

Pharaoh goes down to Sheol

In the twelfth year, on the fifteenth day of the first month,[c] the word of Yahweh 17 was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, lament over the throng of Egypt, for 18 down she must go with the daughters of majestic nations[d] to the depths of the underworld with those who sink into oblivion.

"'Whom do you surpass in beauty? Down with you, make your bed with the 19 uncircumcised, •with those who have been slaughtered by the sword. (The sword 20 has been given, it has been drawn.) She and all her throngs[f] have fallen. •From 21 the depths of Sheol, the mightiest heroes, her allies, will say to her, "They have come down, they have lain down, uncircumcised, slaughtered by the sword."[g]

'Assyria is there and all her hordes, with their graves all round her; all of them 22 slaughtered, fallen by the sword; •their graves have been made in the deepest part 23

'Elan is there and all her throng round her grave, all of them slaughtered, fallen 24 by the sword; they have gone down uncircumcised to the depths of the underworld, who once spread terror throughout the world of the living. They have borne their shame with those who sink into oblivion. •Among the slaughtered, they have put a 25 who went down to Sheol fully armed, who had their swords laid under their heads and their shields[h] put under their bones, since the heroes inspired the world of the living with terror. •But you will be broken with the uncircumcised and lie with 28

'Pharaoh will see them and take comfort at the sight of all this throng slaughtered 31 by the sword—Pharaoh and all his throng—declares the Lord Yahweh. • For having 32 spread terror through the world of the living, he will be laid with the uncircumcised, with those slaughtered by the sword, Pharaoh and all his throng—declares the Lord Yahweh.'

III: DURING AND AFTER THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM[a]

The prophet as watchman

3:17–21

1, 2 33 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows,[b] •'Son of man, speak to the people of your country. Say to them, "When I send the sword against the people of that country, take one of their number and post him as a watchman;
3 if he sees the sword coming against the country, he must sound his horn to warn Jl 2:1b 4 the people. •If someone hears the sound of the horn but pays no attention and the sword overtakes him and destroys him, he will have been responsible for his own 5 death. •He has heard the sound of the horn and paid no attention; his death will be his own responsibility. But the life of someone who pays attention will be secure.
6 "If, however, the watchman has seen the sword coming but has not blown his horn, and so the people are not alerted and the sword overtakes them and destroys a single one of them, that person will indeed die for his guilt, but I shall hold the watchman responsible for his death."
7 'Son of man I have appointed you as watchman for the House of Israel. When =3:17–19 8 you hear a word from my mouth, warn them from me. •If I say to someone wicked, "Evil-doer, you are to die," and you do not speak to warn the wicked person to renounce such ways, the wicked person will die for this guilt, but I shall hold you 9 responsible for the death. •If, however, you do warn someone wicked to renounce such ways and repent, and that person does not repent, then the culprit will die for this guilt, but you yourself will have saved your life.

Conversion and perversity

14:12–20,12d; 18:21–30,21g

10 'Son of man, say to the House of Israel, "You are continually saying: Our crimes and sins weigh heavily on us; we are wasting away because of them. How are we to 11 go on living?"[c] •Say to them, "As I live—declares the Lord Yahweh—I do not take pleasure in the death of the wicked but in the conversion of the wicked who 18:23 changes his ways and saves his life. Repent, turn back from your evil ways. Why Ws 1:13n Lk 15:7,10,32 die, House of Israel?"
12 'Son of man, say to the members of your nation, "The uprightness of an upright person will not save him once he takes to wrong-doing; the wickedness of a wicked person will not ruin him once he renounces his wickedness. No one upright will be 13 able to live on the strength of uprightness, having once taken to sinning. •If I say to someone upright: You are to live,[d] and then, trusting in this uprightness, he does wrong, none of the uprightness will be remembered; because of the wrong-doing, 14 he will die. •If, however, I say to someone wicked: You are to die, and he turns 15 back from sin and does what is lawful and upright, •if he[e] returns pledges, restores what he has stolen, keeps the laws that give life and no longer does wrong, he will Ne 9:29 16 live and will not die. •None of his previous sins will be remembered against him; =18:22 having done what is lawful and upright, he will live.
17 "But the members of your nation say: What the Lord does is unjust. But it is =18:29

f. Trans. conj. of very obscure text. Instead of 'He and (all) his (throngs)' Hebr. has two feminine pronouns without antecedents. Others suppress 'the sword', following versions, and read: 'She (Egypt) has been handed over; they will drag her away with all her throng.'

g. Pharaoh is welcomed into Sheol by all the kings of the nations killed in battle before him.

h. 'long ago' versions; 'among the uncircumcised' Heb. • 'their shields' tzinnotam conj.; Hebr. 'awonotam 'their guilt'.

i. '(he) having spread' Targ.; 'I have spread' Hebr.

33 a. The third section of the book contains the prophecies uttered after Nebuchadnezzar's invasion of Palestine (others are found in the second section: the poems against the nations).

b. At the beginning of a new period in this ministry, the prophet receives the same mission as that received after his inaugural vision, 3:17–21, in almost identical words.

c. The discouraged nation feels crushed under the weight of its sins and unable to escape from them. Ezekiel offers the possibility of conversion, developing in vv. 10–20, the theme already treated in 18:21–31.

d. 'You are to live' versions; 'He is to live' Hebr.

e. Hebr. adds 'the wicked man'; versions omit.

The taking of the city

24:26–27 In the twelfth year of our captivity, on the fifth day of the tenth month,[f] a fugitive 21 arrived from Jerusalem and said to me, 'The city has been taken.' •Now the hand 22 3:26–27 of the Lord had been on me the evening before the fugitive arrived; he had opened my mouth before the fugitive came to me the next morning; my mouth had been opened and I was dumb no longer.[g]

The ravaging of the country

The word of Yahweh was then addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, the 23, 24 Is 51:2 people living in those ruins on the soil of Israel say this, "Abraham was alone when he was given possession of this country. But we are many; the country has been 11:15 given us as our heritage."[h] Lv 1:5e;17; 10–14 'Very well, tell them, "The Lord Yahweh says this: You eat blood,[i] you raise 25 your eyes to your foul idols, you shed blood; are you to own the country? •You rely 26 Lv 18:20 on your swords, you engage in loathsome practices, each of you defiles his neighbour's wife; are you to own the country?" •Tell them this, "The Lord Yahweh says 27 this: As I live, I swear it, those in the ruins will fall to the sword, those in the countryside I shall give to the wild animals for them to eat, and those among the crags and in caves will die of plague. •I shall make the country a desolate waste, 28 and the pride of its strength will be at an end. The mountains of Israel will be deserted and no one will pass that way again. •Then they will know that I am 29 Yahweh, when I make the country a desolate waste because of all the filthy things they have done."

The results of the preaching

'Son of man, the members of your nation are talking about you on the ramparts 30 and in doorways. They keep saying to one another, "Come and hear the word that has come from Yahweh." •They throng towards you; my people sit down in front 31 the lie[j] in their mouths, and their hearts are set on dishonest gain. •As far as they 32 accompaniment. They listen to your words, but no one acts on them. •When the 33 prophet among them.'

34 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, 1, 2

f. December 586–January 585, but this date is suspect: the capture of the city took place in the fourth month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah, 2 K 25:3; Jr 39:2. The news would thus have taken seventeen months to reach Ezekiel, though a caravan took about four months to make the journey, see Ezr 7:9; 8:31. The correct reading has perhaps been preserved in some Hebr. and Gk MSS, and Syr., which read: 'the eleventh year'.

g. Ezekiel had been deprived of speech by 'the hand of Yahweh', cf. 3:24–27; 24:27.

h. The observation shows the people's affection for their country but also, even after the disaster of 587, a presumptuous confidence in their future.

i. Translation doubtful, lit. 'you eat on the blood.' Possibly emend to 'You eat on the mountains,' cf. 18:6.

j. 'the lie' kezabim conj.; Hebr. 'agabim 'passion'. Word used in subsequent v. meaning 'love (song)'.

34 a. The image of the king-shepherd is deeply rooted in Eastern literary tradition. Jeremiah used it of the kings of Israel to rebuke their slackness in office, Jr 2:8; 10:21; 23:1–3, and to proclaim that God would give his people new shepherds who would pasture them with integrity, Jr 3:15; 23:4, and that from these shepherds would come a 'Branch', Jr 23:5–6, i.e. the Messiah. Ezekiel takes up the theme from Jr 23:1–6, later to be resumed in Zc 11:4–17; 13:7. For their wickedness he rebukes the shepherds, here the kings and lay leaders of the people, vv. 1–10. Yahweh will take from them the flock they have ill-treated and himself become the shepherd of his people (cf. Gn 48:15; Ps 23; 80:1; Is 40:11); this is in effect the proclamation of a theocracy, vv. 11–16; and in point of fact the monarchy was not restored after the return from exile. But the time was to come when Yahweh would give his people a shepherd of his own choice, vv. 23–24, a 'prince' (see 45:7–8;46:8–10,16–18), another David. The terms in which this prince's reign is described, vv. 25–31, and the name 'David' by which he is called (see 2 S 7:1a; compare with Is 11:1a; Jr 23:5) suggest a messianic age in which God himself, by means of his Messiah, rules his people in justice and peace. In this text of Ezekiel we discern the outline of the parable of the Lost Sheep, Mt 18:12–14; Lk 15:4–7, but more especially of the allegory of the Good Shepherd, Jn 10:11–18, which by virtue of its original context here is seen to be a claim to messiahship on the part of Jesus.

b. 'Shepherds' Syr., cf. v. 9; 'To the shepherds' Hebr.

c. 'milk' Gk; 'fat' Hebr. (different vowel arrangement).

d. Probably alluding to worship on the 'high places'.

e. 'I shall watch over' versions; 'I shall destroy' Hebr.

f. Following Gk, Hebr. reads 'of her and the surroundings of my hill I shall make a blessing.' The hill is Zion.

wild animals of the country devour them. They will live secure, with no one to frighten them. •I shall make splendid vegetation grow for them; no more will they 29 suffer from famine in the country; no more will they have to bear the insults of other nations. •So they will know that I, their God, am with them and that 30

25:12–14+ Dt 2:1b Against the mountains of Edom [a]

35 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •"Son of man, turn 1, 2 towards Mount Seir and prophesy against it. •Say to it, "The Lord Yahweh 3 says this: Look, I am against you, Mount Seir; I shall stretch out my hand against you; I shall make you a desolate waste; •I shall lay your towns in ruins. You will 4 become a waste and you will know that I am Yahweh. •Since, following a long- 5 standing hatred, you betrayed the Israelites to the sword on the day of their distress, on the day when an end came for their guilt, •very well, as I live—declares 6 ↗Rv 16:6 the Lord Yahweh—I destine you to bloodshed, and bloodshed will pursue you. I swear it; you have incurred guilt by shedding blood, [b] and bloodshed will pursue you. •I shall make Mount Seir a desolate waste and denude it of anyone travelling 7 to and fro. •I shall fill its mountains with its slaughtered; on your hills, in your 8 valleys and in all your ravines, those slaughtered by the sword will fall. •I shall 9 make you a perpetual waste, your towns will never be inhabited again, and you will know that I am Yahweh.

"Since you said: The two nations and the two countries will be mine; we are 10 going to take possession of it, although Yahweh was there, [c] •very well, as I live— 11 declares the Lord Yahweh—I shall act with the same anger and jealousy as you acted in your hatred for them. I shall make myself known for their sake, when I punish you, •and you will know that I, Yahweh, have heard all the blasphemies 12 which you have uttered against the mountains of Israel, such as: They have been laid waste, they have been given to us for us to devour. •Great was your insolence 13 towards me, many your speeches against me; I have heard! •Lord Yahweh says 14 this: To the joy of the whole world, I shall make you a waste. •Since you rejoiced 15 because the heritage of the House of Israel had been laid waste, I shall do the same to you, Mount Seir; and you will become a waste, and so will the whole of Edom; and they will know that I am Yahweh.' "

Prophecy about the mountains of Israel [a] 36 'Son of man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel. Say, "Mountains of 1 Israel, hear the word of Yahweh. •The Lord Yahweh says this: Since the 2 enemy has gloated over you by saying: Aha! These eternal heights are owned by us now, •very well, prophesy! Say: The Lord Yahweh says this: Since you have been 3 ravaged and seized on from all sides, and have become the property of the rest of the nations, and become the subject of people's talk and gossip, •very well, 4 mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Yahweh! The Lord Yahweh says this to the mountains and hills, to the ravines and valleys, to the devastated ruins and abandoned cities which have been put to the sack and have become a laughing-stock to the rest of the nations all round; •very well, the Lord Yahweh 5 says this: I swear it in the heat of my jealousy; I am speaking to the rest of the nations and to the whole of Edom who so exultantly and contemptuously took possession of my country to despoil its pastureland."

'Because of this, prophesy about the land of Israel. Say to the mountains and 6 hills, to the ravines and valleys, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I am speaking in my jealousy and rage; because you are enduring the insults of the nations, •very well, 7 the Lord Yahweh says this: I raise my hand and I swear that the nations all around you shall have their own insults to bear.

"Mountains of Israel, you will grow branches and bear fruit for my people Israel, 8 who will soon return.[b] •Yes, I am coming to you, I shall turn to you; you will be tilled and sown. •I shall increase your population, the whole House of Israel, yes, all. The cities will be inhabited and the ruins rebuilt. •I shall increase your population, both human and animal; they will be fertile and reproduce. I shall repopulate you as you were before; I shall make you more prosperous than you were before, and you will know that I am Yahweh. •Thanks to me, men will tread your soil again, my people Israel; they will own you and you will be their heritage, and never again will you rob them of their children.

"The Lord Yahweh says this: Since people have said of you: You are a man-eater, you have robbed your nation of its children,[c] •very well, you will eat no more men, never rob your nation of its children again[d]—declares the Lord Yahweh. •I shall never again let you hear the insults of the nations, you will never again have to bear the taunts of the peoples, you will never again rob the nation of its children—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

16, 17 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, the members of the House of Israel used to live in their own territory, but they defiled it by their conduct and actions; to me their conduct was as unclean as a woman's menstruation. •I then vented my fury on them because of the blood they shed in Lv 15:19–27 the country and the foul idols with which they defiled it. •I scattered them among the nations and they were dispersed throughout the countries. I sentenced them as their conduct and actions deserved. • 'They have profaned my holy name among 20:39+ the nations where they have gone, so that people say of them, "These are the ↗Rm 2:24 people of Yahweh; they have been exiled from his land." •But I have been concerned about my holy name, which the House of Israel has profaned among the nations where they have gone. •And so, say to the House of Israel, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I am acting not for your sake, House of Israel, but for the sake 16:60–63 of my holy name, which you have profaned among the nations where you have Ps 115:1

gone. •I am going to display the holiness of my great name, which has been Mt 6:9 profaned among the nations, which you have profaned among them. And the nations will know that I am Yahweh—declares the Lord Yahweh—when in you I display my holiness before their eyes. •For I shall take you from among the nations and gather you back from all the countries, and bring you home to your own country. •I shall pour clean water over you and you will be cleansed; I shall cleanse Jn 3:5;4:1a you of all your filth and of all your foul idols. •I shall give you a new heart, and put 11:19f
Jr 4:4a
a new spirit in you; I shall remove the heart of stone from your bodies and give you a heart of flesh instead. •I shall put my spirit in you, and make you keep my laws, Jr 31:31*l* and respect and practise my judgements.[f] •You will live in the country which I gave 1 Jn 3:23–24

35 a. This prophecy against 'Mount Seir,' i.e. Edom, would find a more natural place among the 'Prophecies against the nations', but is evidently placed here to balance the subsequent prophecy addressed to the mountains of Israel.

b. 'you have incurred guilt by shedding blood' Gk, cf. 22:4; 'you have hated blood' Hebr.

c. After 587, Edom occupied only southern Judah (Idumaea), and, episodic raids notwithstanding, never attempted to invade all Judah and Israel, the 'two countries', cf. 37:22. But the exiles interpreted the news of the Edomite invasion as a threat to Yahweh's entire domain.

36 a. This prophecy foretells the revenge of the mountains of Israel on the mountains of Edom, the subject of the previous prophecy. It was probably uttered shortly after 587, when the neighbouring peoples were making incursions into the Holy Land, see v.6.

b. Such faith in a home-coming in the near future is striking at this time of shock and discouragement, cf. ch. 37 and Is 40–55.

c. Referring either to the poor soil of Palestine which is to be made wonderfully rich, v. 30, or to the practice of child-sacrifice, Lv 18:21h. Possibly both are in the prophet's mind.

d. 'you will never rob (your nation) of its children again' lo' teshakkeli MSS, versions; Hebr. lo' tekashsheli '(and your nations) you will never stumble again'. The same conj. emendation has been made in v. 15.

e. At beginning of v., we omit 'He has come.'

f. The spirit (breath) of God, which creates and gives life, Gn 1:2; 2:7e; 6:17f, lays hold on people to endow them with superhuman power, Gn 41:38; Ex 31:2; 1 S 16:13, particularly the prophets, Jg 3:10. The characteristic of the messianic age is to be an extraordinary outpouring of the Spirit, Zc 4:6[b]; 6:8, on all people, endowing them with special graces, Nb 11:29; Jl 3:1–2; Ac 2:16–21, 17k. But, more mysteriously, for each recipient the Spirit will be the principle of an inward renewal making possible a faithful observance of the law of God, 11:19; 36:26–27; 37:14; Ps 51:12–15; Is 32:15–19; Zc 12:10; thus the Spirit will be the principle inspiring the new covenant, Jr 31:31*l*; cf. 2 Co 3:6d; like life-giving water it will nourish fruits of integrity and holiness, Is 44:3; Jn 4:1a, which in turn will guarantee the favour and protection of God for humanity, Ezk 37:24; 39:29. This effusion of the Spirit will be effected through the Messiah who will be the first recipient of it, to be able to accomplish his saving work, Is 11:1–3; 42:1; 61:1; see also Mt 3:16n.

your ancestors. You will be my people and I shall be your God. •I shall save you 29 from everything that defiles you, I shall summon the wheat and make it plentiful and impose no more famines on you. •I shall increase the yield of tree and field, so 30 that you will never again bear the ignominy of famine among the nations. •Then 31 16:61–63 you will remember your evil conduct and actions. You will loathe yourselves for your guilt and your loathsome practices. •I assure you that I am not doing this for 32 your sake—declares the Lord Yahweh. Be ashamed and blush for your conduct, House of Israel.

"The Lord Yahweh says this: On the day I cleanse you from all your guilt, I shall 33 repopulate the cities and cause the ruins to be rebuilt. •Waste land, once desolate 34 for every passer-by to see, will now be farmed again. •And people will say: This 35 Is 51:3 land, so recently a waste, is now like a garden of Eden, and the ruined cities once abandoned and levelled to the ground are now strongholds with people living in them. •And the nations left round you will know that I, Yahweh, have rebuilt 36 what was levelled and replanted what was ruined. I, Yahweh, have spoken and shall do it.

"The Lord Yahweh says this: As a further mark of favour, I shall let myself be 37 consulted by the House of Israel; I shall increase their numbers like a human flock, like a flock of sacrificial animals, like the flock in Jerusalem on her solemn feasts. 38
So your ruined cities will be filled with human flocks, and they will know that I am Yahweh." '

The dry bones

3:12 37 The hand of Yahweh was on me; he carried me away by the spirit of Yahweh 1 and set me down in the middle of the valley,[a] a valley full of bones. •He 2 made me walk up and down and all around among them. There were vast quantities of these bones on the floor of the valley; and they were completely dry. •He said to 3 me, 'Son of man, can these bones live?' I said, 'You know, Lord Yahweh.' •He 4 said, 'Prophesy over these bones. Say, "Dry bones, hear the word of Yahweh.

was covering them, yet there was no breath in them. •He said to me, 'Prophesy to 9

↗Rv 11:11; 20:4d came to life and stood up on their feet, a great, an immense army.[d] •Dn 12:2+ Then he said, 'Son of man, these bones are the whole House of Israel. They keep 11 saying, "Our bones are dry, our hope has gone; we are done for."[e] •So, prophesy. 12

And you will know that I am Yahweh, when I open your graves and raise you 13 from your graves, my people, •and put my spirit in you, and you revive, and I 14 resettle you on your own soil. Then you will know that I, Yahweh, have spoken and done this—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

Judah and Israel in one kingdom

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, take a stick 15, 16 and write on it, "Judah and those Israelites[f] loyal to him." Take another stick and write on it, "Joseph (Ephraim's wood) and all the House of Israel loyal to him."[g]

'Join one to the other to make a single piece of wood, a single stick in your hand. 17
And when the members of your nation say, "Will you not tell us what you mean?" 18 say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I am taking the stick of Joseph (now in 19 Ephraim's hand) and those tribes of Israel loyal to him and shall join them to the stick of Judah. I shall make one stick out of the two, a single stick in my hand." Zc 11:7,14

20 'When the pieces of wood you have written on are in your hand in full sight of 21 them, •say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: I shall take the Israelites from the nations where they have gone. I shall gather them together from everywhere and bring 22 them home to their own soil. •I shall make them into one nation in the country, on the mountains of Israel, and one king is to be king of them all; they will no longer
23 form two nations, nor be two separate kingdoms. •They will no longer defile Jr 3:18h themselves with their foul idols, their horrors and any of their crimes. I shall save them from the acts of infidelity[h] which they have committed and shall cleanse

Against Gog, king of Magog[a] ↗Rv 20:7–10

1, 2 38 The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Son of man, turn towards Gog, to the country of Magog, towards the paramount prince of 3 Meshech and Tubal,[b] and prophesy against him. •Say, "The Lord Yahweh says Gn 10:2

b. In Hebr. the one word ruah means 'spirit', 'breath', 'wind'.

c. lit. 'the bones came towards one another' Gk; 'you made the bones come . . . ' Hebr.

d. Here, as in Is 26:19; Ho 6:2; 13:14, God announces, vv. Ezk 37:11–14, the messianic restoration of Israel after the sufferings of the Exile, see also Rv 20:4a. But also, by the imagery chosen, he is already preparing minds for the idea of an individual resurrection of the body, glimpsed in Jb 19:25 see Jb 19:26g and explicitly stated in 2 M 7:9–14, 23–36; 12:43–46; Dn 12:2; see 2 M 7:9c. For the NT, see Mt 22:29–32 and especially 1 Co 15.

e. This remark suggests that the vision takes place in Babylon, among the discouraged exiles.

f. Here the term is not used in antithesis to Judaeans, but means the whole population of the Southern Kingdom.

g. i.e. the whole Northern Kingdom which vanished after the fall of Samaria and the deportation of 721.

h. 'acts of infidelity' meshubot MSS, Syr.; Hebr. moshebot 'dwellings'.

38 a. Though not a pure apocalypse, this poem already shows a number of apocalyptic features. While the earlier prophets were in the main concerned with contemporary morality and only occasionally looked ahead to a more glorious future, the purpose of an apocalypse, whether written or spoken, is usually to console by the visions the prophet has seen. These visions reveal a future that will eclipse present misery. Often, too, they reveal the forthcoming triumphs of divine judgement and, opening eschatological vistas, unveil mysteries of the world to come. Although this form of literature was particularly cultivated in later Judaism, the Bible contains several examples of its earlier stages of development, see pp. 1162, 1178–9. Ezk 38–39 marks the earliest stage. Further examples occur in Is 24–27; Dn 7–12; Zc 9–14. The most vigorous period of development was the second century BC (the Book of Enoch, etc.). It is represented in the NT by the apocalypse of John (Rv).

b. Meshech and Tubal are countries in Asia Minor, 27:13, Is 66:19*l*. The 'country of Magog', here and Ezk 39:6 only, is an invented name, meaning 'country of Gog'. It seems useless to try to identify Gog. Doubtless deriving features from several contemporary personalities, he figures here as the type of victorious barbarian who in an unspecified distant future will inflict the final ordeals on Israel.

c. Yahweh seizes Gog and will enforce obedience on him.

d. Probably the Cimmerians, also from the north.

e. 'at my service' Gk; 'at their service' Hebr.

f. Hence long after the return to Palestine.

"The Lord Yahweh says this: That day, a thought will enter your mind and you 10 will form a sinister plan.[g] ·You will think: I shall attack this undefended country 11 and march on this peaceful nation living secure, all living in towns without walls or bars or gates. ·You will come to plunder and loot and turn your might against the 12 ruins they live in, against this people gathered back from the nations, these stock-25:13h breeders and traders who live at the Navel of the World.[h] ·Sheba and Dedan, the 13 1 K 10:1a merchants and all the magnates[i] of Tarshish will ask you: Have you come for plunder? Are you massing your troops with a view to looting? To make off with gold and silver, seize cattle and goods, and come away with unlimited spoil?"

'So, son of man, prophesy. Say to Gog, "The Lord Yahweh says this: Is it not 14 true that you will set out[j] at a time when my people Israel is living secure?
You will leave your home in the far north, you and many nations with you, a great 15 army of countless troops all mounted. ·You will invade Israel, my people. You will 16 be like a cloud covering the country. In the final days, I myself shall bring you to Ex 14:4 attack my country, so that the nations will know who I am, when I display my holiness to them, by means of you, Gog.

"The Lord Yahweh says this: It was of you[k] that I spoke in the past through my 17 servants the prophets of Israel, who prophesied in those days, foretelling your invasion.[l] ·The day Gog attacks the land of Israel—declares the Lord Yahweh— 18 my furious wrath will boil up.[m] In my anger, ·in my jealousy, in the heat of my fury 19
I say it: That day, I swear, there will be such a huge earthquake in the land of Israel, ·that the fish in the sea and the birds of heaven, the wild beasts, all the 20 reptiles creeping along the ground, and all people on the surface of the earth will Am 8:9h quake before me. Mountains will fall, cliffs crumble, all walls collapse, and ·I shall 21 summon every kind of sword[n] against him—declares the Lord Yahweh—and each will turn his sword against his comrade. ·I shall punish him with plague and 22 bloodshed, and rain down torrential rain, hailstones, fire and brimstone on him, on his troops and on the many nations with him. ·I shall display my greatness and 23 Ex 14:4 holiness and bring the many nations to acknowledge me; and they will know that I am Yahweh." '

39 [o]"So, son of man, prophesy against Gog. Say, "The Lord Yahweh says this: 1 38:3–4 Look, I am against you, Gog, paramount prince of Meshech and Tubal. ·I 2 shall turn you about, lead you on, and bring you from the farthest north against the mountains of Israel. ·I shall break the bow in your left hand and dash the arrows 3 out of your right. ·You will fall on the mountains of Israel, you, all your troops and 4 the nations with you. I shall make you food for every kind of bird of prey and wild animals. ·You will fall in the wilds, for I have spoken—declares the Lord Yahweh. 5
I shall send down fire on Magog and on those living undisturbed in the islands, and 6 38:23 they will know that I am Yahweh. ·I shall see that my holy name is acknowledged 7 by my people Israel, and no longer allow my holy name to be profaned; and the nations will know that I am Yahweh, holy in Israel.[b] "All this is to happen, all this is to take place—declares the Lord Yahweh. This 8 is the day I predicted.

"The inhabitants of the towns of Israel will go out and set fire to and burn the 9 weapons, the shields and bucklers, bows and arrows, javelins and spears. They will burn these for seven years ·and not fetch wood from the countryside or cut it 10 in the forests, since they will be burning the weapons. They will plunder those who plundered them, and despoil those who despoiled them—declares the Lord Yahweh.

"That day, I shall give Gog a famous spot in Israel for his grave, the valley of the 11 Obarim, east of the Sea—the valley that halts the traveller[c]—and there Gog and his whole throng will be buried, and it will be called the Valley of Hamon-Gog.[d]
The House of Israel will take seven months to bury them and cleanse the country. 12
All the people of the country will dig their graves, thus winning themselves 13 renown, the day when I display my glory—declares the Lord Yahweh. ·And men 14 will be detailed to the permanent duty of going through the country and burying those left above ground and cleansing it. They will begin their search once the 15 seven months are over,[e] •and as they go through the country, if one of them sees any human bones, he will set up a marker beside them until the gravediggers have 16 buried them in the valley of Hamon-Gog •(and Hamonah is also the name of a Nb 19:16 Dt 21:23 town)[f] and have cleansed the country."

17 'Son of man, the Lord Yahweh says this, "Say to the birds of every kind and to all the wild animals: Muster, come, gather from everywhere around for the sacrifice Rv 19:17–18
I am making for you, a great sacrifice on the mountains of Israel, so that you can 18 eat flesh and drink blood. •You will eat the flesh of heroes, you will drink the blood of the princes of the world. They are all rams and lambs, goats and fat bulls of 19 Bashan. •You will glut yourselves on fat and drink yourselves drunk on blood 20 at this sacrifice I am making for you. •You will glut yourselves at my table on horses and chargers, on heroes and every kind of warrior—declares the Lord Yahweh."

Conclusion[g]

21 'I shall display my glory to the nations, and all nations will see my sentence when I Ex 14:4
22 inflict it and my hand when I strike them. •The House of Israel will know that I am 23 Yahweh their God, from that day forward for ever. •The nations too will know that the House of Israel were exiled for their guilt; because they were unfaithful to me, I hid my face from them and put them into the clutches of their enemies, so 24 that they all fell by the sword. •I treated them as their loathsome acts of infidelity deserved and hid my face from them.

25 'So, the Lord Yahweh says this, "Now I shall bring Jacob's captives back and take pity on the whole House of Israel and show myself jealous for my holy name.
26 They will forget their disgrace and all the acts of infidelity which they committed against me when they were living safely in their own country, with no one to disturb 27 them. •When I bring them home from the peoples, when I gather them back from the countries of their enemies, when I display my holiness in them for many nations 28 to see, •they will know that I am Yahweh their God who, having sent them into exile among the nations, have reunited them in their own country, not leaving a 29 single one behind. •I shall never hide my face from them again, since I shall pour 11:19+;37:14 out my spirit on the House of Israel—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

h. Jerusalem, centre of the world, see Jg 9:37*l*.

i. lit. 'fierce lions', animal metaphor for rapacity.

j. 'you will set out' Gk; 'you will know it' Hebr.

k. 'It was of you' versions; 'Was it of you?' Hebr.

l. After 'in those days', Hebr. adds 'years'; Gk omits. Allusions to a future invasion are found in the earlier prophets, see for example Jr 3–6, but Ezekiel here seems to be thinking of prophets earlier than Jeremiah.

m. So far, Gog has been the instrument of Yahweh who now, however, turns on him to inflict a terrible defeat.

n. 'every kind of sword' lekol hereb conj.; Hebr. lekol haray hereb 'all my mountains, the sword'.

39 a. Ch. 39 is not a doublet of ch. 38 but a development of its closing verses—a detailed account of the defeat of Gog and its consequences.

b. Or possibly, with the versions and some Hebr. MSS, 'the Holy One of Israel,' an expression very common in Is, but nonetheless suspect here.

c. 'famous' versions; 'there' Hebr. • Instead of 'valley of the Obarim' or 'valley of the Travellers', one might read, with Coptic, 'valley of the Abarim', the play on words in the remainder of the v. having given rise to mistaken placing of vowels. The Abarim range is in Moab, Nb 27:12; the valley 'that halts the traveller' is perhaps that of the River Arnon, a deep and rocky gorge.

d. i.e. 'of the horde of Gog'.

e. After 'burying', Hebr. adds 'the travellers'; Gk omits. • There will be so many corpses that it will take seven months to bury them, v. 12, and only after these seven months have elapsed will a task-force be detailed to see that there are no further corpses to be buried, since only one would be enough to pollute the country.

The outer wall

Now, the Temple was surrounded on all sides by an outer wall. The man was holding a measuring rod six cubits long, each cubit a forearm and a handsbreadth.[e] He measured the thickness of this construction—one rod; and its height—one rod.

5 Ex 27:9–19; 38:9–20 2 Ch 3:3;4:5

The east gate[f]

He went to the east gate, climbed the steps and measured its threshold: one rod deep.[g] •Each guardroom one rod by one rod; and the piers[h] between the guardrooms five cubits thick, and the threshold of the gate inwards from the porch of the gate: one rod.[i] •He measured the porch of the gate: eight cubits; its piers: two cubits; the porch of the gate was at the inner end. •There were three guardrooms on each side of the east gate, all three of the same size; the piers between them all of the same thickness each side. •He measured the width of the entrance: ten cubits; and the width all down the gateway: thirteen cubits. •There was a rail in front of the guardrooms; each rail on either side was one cubit. And the guardrooms on either side were six cubits square. •He measured the width of the gate from the back wall of one guardroom to the back wall of the other;[j] it was twenty-five cubits across, the openings being opposite each other. •He measured the porch: twenty cubits: the court surrounded the gate on all sides.[k] •From the front of the entrance gate, to the far end of the porch of the inner gate: fifty cubits. All round inside the gate there were trellised windows[l] in the guardrooms and in their piers; similarly, in the porch there were windows all round and palm trees on the piers.[m]

The outer court

He then took me to the outer court, which had rooms and a paved terrace going all the way round; there were thirty rooms on this terrace. •This terrace, which came up to the sides of the gates and matched their depth, was the Lower Terrace. He measured the width of the court,[n] •from the front of the lower gate to the façade of the inner court, outside: a hundred cubits (on the east and on the north).

17 18 19

The north gate

He measured the length and breadth of the north gate of the outer court. •It had three guardrooms on each side; its piers and porch were of the same size as those of the first gate: fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. •Its windows, its porch and its palm trees were of the same size as those of the east gate. There were seven steps up to it, and its porch was at the inner end.[o] •In the inner court there was, opposite the north gate, a gate like the one opposite the east gate.[p] He measured the distance from one gate to the other: a hundred cubits.

20, 21 22 23

The south gate

He took me to the south side where there was a south gate; he measured its guardrooms,[q] piers and porch; they were of the same size as the others. •The gateway, as well as its porch, had windows all round, like the windows of the others; it was fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide, •and it had seven steps up to it; its porch was at the inner end and had palm trees on its piers, one on either

27 side. •The inner court had a south gate; he measured the distance southwards from one gate to the other: a hundred cubits.

The inner court. The south gate

28 He then took me into the inner court by the south gate; he measured the south gate 29 which was of the same size as the others. •Its guardrooms, piers and porch were of 30 the same size as the others. •The gateway, as well as its porch, had windows all 31 round; it was fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide.[r] •The porch gave on to the outer court. It had palm trees on its piers and eight steps leading up to it.

The east gate

32 He took me to the eastern part[s] of the inner court and measured the gate. It was of 33 the same size as the others. •Its guardrooms, piers and porch were of the same size as the others. The gateway, as well as its porch, had windows all round; it was fifty 34 cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. •Its porch gave on to the outer court.
There were palm trees on its piers on either side and eight steps leading up to it.

The north gate

35, 36 He then took me to the north gate and measured it. •Its guardrooms, piers[t] and porch were of the same size as the others. The gateway had windows all round; it 37 was fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. •Its porch gave on to the outer court. There were palm trees on its piers on either side and eight steps leading up to it.[u]

Subsidiary buildings at the gate

38 There was a room, the entrance to which was in the porch of the gateway,[v] where 39 they washed the burnt offerings. •And inside the porch of the gateway were slabs, Lv 1:9 2 Ch 4:6 two on either side, for slaughtering the burnt offerings, the sacrifice for sin and the 40 sacrifice of reparation. •Outside, at the approach to the entrance of the north gate, were two slabs, and on the other side, at the porch end of the gate were two slabs.

knowledge of past history, but he does his best to adapt the earlier legislation to new conditions, and take advantage of recent experience to preserve Israel from the temptations and apostasies which have led the nation to ruin. Henceforth Ezekiel assumes the role of organiser intent on realising long-foreseen and long-desired reforms. His earlier promises of restoration and of a covenant animated by the Spirit presupposed a reorganisation of the community. Living at a time when the whole structure of Israel needed to be rebuilt, Ezekiel was able to draw up a founding charter for what was shortly to emerge as Judaism, and to provide a basis for all future efforts and aspirations from Ezra to the heavenly Jerusalem of the apocalypse of John. In all this, the Christian reader will admire the high ideal of holiness, 43:7; 44:23, and the sense of the presence of God, 48:35, later to be shared by the Church.

b. September–October 573: the religious year began in spring, but the beginning of the civil year coincided with the first month of autumn.

c. Jerusalem evidently, though a Jerusalem expanded and idealised.

d. The 'man', clearly an angel, explains the prophet's vision to him. Angelic interpreters are a feature of late prophetic literature, see Dn 8:16; 9:21seq; 10:5seq; Zc 1:8seq; 2:2; Rv 1:1; 10:1–11.

e. There seem to have been two cubits: the common cubit of 6 palms, (18 in, 45cm), or handsbreadth, and the older 'great cubit' of 7 palms (21in, 53cm). Ezekiel makes it clear that he uses the latter, which measures 'one (common) cubit and a palm.' Further information concerning ancient weights and measures will be found in the Tables of measures and money.

f. The three gates of the outer court are alike; only the east gate is described in detail, though this is not entirely clear, the text being poorly preserved. The basic design, however, is that of the fortified gates of Megiddo, Hazor and Gezer, built by Solomon and his successors. It is thus a visual memory of pre-exilic Jerusalem.

g. Hebr. repeats 'and the threshold: one rod deep', dittography; Gk omits.

h. 'the pilasters' Gk; Hebr. omits.

i. We omit v. 8: 'He measured the porch of the gate, on the inside: one rod,' dittography; versions omit.

j. 'from the back wall of one guardroom to the back wall of the other' miggaw . . . legaw conj.; Hebr. miggag . . . legaggo 'from the roof of one guardroom to its roof'.

k. This v. is unintelligible in Hebr.; we emend 'He measured' wayyammad instead of 'He made; wayya'as the remainder follows Gk, but makes little sense.

l. Trans. conj.; lit. 'blocked windows'.

m. These elaborate gates, the only openings in the surrounding wall, were to allow strict watch to be kept over the entrances. Ezekiel insists that the Temple should be kept pure from foreigners and sinners.

n. 'of the court' Gk; Hebr. omits.

o. 'at the inner end' Gk; 'opposite them' Hebr., as also in v. 26.

p. 'like the one opposite the east gate' Gk; 'and at the eastern' Hebr.

q. 'the guardrooms' Gk; Hebr. omits.

r. Gk, lit. 'and its porches all round, twenty-five cubits long and five wide'.

s. Or, with Gk: 'He took me to the east gate'; either way, the general meaning is clear.

t. Plural with qere and Gk; sing. Hebr. ketib.

u. 'Its porch' Gk; 'Its pilaster' Hebr. The vv. between vv. 37 and 47 are additional: vv. 38–43, the accommodation for preparing the sacrificial victims, near the north gate just described, vv. 35–37; and vv. 44–46, the sacristies at the north and south gates.

v. 'in the porch of the gateway' Gk; 'in the pilasters, the gateways' Hebr.

There were four slabs on one side and four slabs on the other side of the gateway, 41 eight slabs in all, on which the slaughtering was done. ·There were also four slabs 42 of dressed stone for the burnt offerings, a cubit and a half long, a cubit and a half wide and a cubit high, on which the instruments for slaughtering the burnt offerings and sacrifice were placed; ·runnels a handsbreadth wide went all round the top, 43 and on these slabs was put the sacrificial flesh.

Then he took me into the inner court; there were two rooms in the inner court, 44 one on the side of the north gate, facing south, the other on the side of the south Nb 3:27–32 gate, facing north.* ·He told me, 'The room looking south is for the priests 45 responsible for the service of the Temple, ·and the room looking north is for the 46 44:15b priests responsible for the service of the altar. These are the sons of Zadok, those of the sons of Levi who approach Yahweh to serve him.'

The inner court

He measured the court; it was a hundred cubits long and a hundred cubits wide, a 47 square with the altar standing in front of the Temple.

1 K 6:3 2 Ch 3:4 ### The Temple.[x] The Ulam

He took me to the Ulam of the Temple and measured the piers of the Ulam:[y] five 48 cubits either side; and the width of the entrance was three cubits either side. ·The 49 length of the Ulam was twenty cubits and its width twelve cubits. There were ten 1 K 7:21 2 Ch 3:15–17 steps leading up to it,[z] and there were columns by the piers, one on either side.

1 K 6:3 2 Ch 3:5–7 ### The Hekal

41 He took me to the Hekal and measured its piers: six cubits wide on the one 1 side, six cubits wide on the other.[a] ·The width of the entrance was 2 ten cubits, and the returns[b] of the entrance were five cubits on the one side and five cubits on the other. He measured its length: forty cubits; and its width:
twenty cubits.

1 K 6:20 2 Ch 3:8–9 ### The Debir

He then went inside and measured the pier at the entrance: two cubits; then the 3 entrance; six cubits; and the returns of the entrance: seven cubits. ·He measured 4 its length; twenty cubits; and its width against the Hekal: twenty cubits. He then Ex 26:33–34 said to me, 'This is the Holy of Holies.'

1 K 6:5–6 ### The side cells[c]

He then measured the wall of the Temple: six cubits. The width of the lateral 5 structure was four cubits, all round the Temple. ·The cells were one above the 6 other in three tiers of thirty cells each.[d] The cells were recessed into the wall, the wall of the structure comprising the cells, all round, forming offsets; but there were no offsets in the wall of the Temple itself. ·The width of the cells increased, storey 7 by storey, corresponding to the amount taken in from the wall from one storey to the next, all round the Temple.[e]

Then I saw that there was a paved terrace all round the Temple. The height of 8 this, which formed the base of the side cells, was one complete rod of six cubits.[f]
The outer wall of the side cells was five cubits thick. There was a passage between 9 the cells of the Temple ·and the rooms, twenty cubits wide, all round the Temple. 10
As a way in to the lateral cells on the passage there was one entrance on the 11 north side and one entrance on the south side. The width of the passage was five cubits right round.

The building on the west side[g]

The building on the west side of the court was seventy cubits wide, the wall of the 12 building was five cubits thick all round and its length was ninety cubits. ·He 13 measured the length of the Temple: a hundred cubits. ·The length of the court plus 14

the building and its walls: a hundred cubits. •He measured the length of the building, along the court, at the back, and its galleries on either side: a hundred cubits.

Particulars of the Temple itself

1 K 6:15–18

The inside of the Hekal and the porches of the court, •the thresholds, the windows, the galleries on three sides, facing the threshold, were panelled with wood all round from floor to windows,[h] and the windows were screened with latticework. •From the door to the inner part of the Temple, as well as outside, and on the wall all round, both inside and out,[i] •were carved great winged creatures and palm trees, one palm tree between two winged creatures; each winged creature had two faces: •a human face turned towards the palm tree on one side and the face of a lion towards the palm tree on the other side, throughout the Temple, all round. •Winged creatures and palm trees were carved on the wall[j] from the floor to above the entrance. •The door-posts of the Temple were square.

1 K 6:29–30

The wooden altar

Ex 30:1–3
1 K 6:20–21

In front of the sanctuary there was something like •a wooden altar, three cubits high and two cubits square.[k] Its corners, base and sides were of wood. He said to me, 'This is the table in the presence of Yahweh.'

The doors

1 K 6:31–35

The Hekal had double doors and the sanctuary •double doors. These doors had two hinged leaves, two leaves for the one door, two leaves for the other. •On them (on the doors of the Hekal), were carved great winged creatures and palm trees like those carved on the walls. There was a wooden porch roof on the front of the Ulam on the outside, •and windows with flanking palm trees on the sides of the Ulam, the cells to the side of the Temple and the porch-roofs.[l]

Subsidiary buildings of the Temple[a]

42 He then took me out into the outer court on the north side and led me to the room facing the court, that is to say, to the front of the building on the north side.[b] •Along the front, it was a hundred cubits long on the north side and fifty cubits wide. •Facing the gateways[c] of the inner court and facing the paving of the outer court was a gallery in front of the triple gallery, •and in front of the rooms

b. 'the returns' Gk; 'the width' Hebr.

c. Similar cells existed in the Temple of Solomon; 1 K 6:5–6. Here, however, their disposition is obscure and their purpose unstated. It has been suggested that they were the 'treasury' of the Temple. • Difference in style suggests that vv. 5–15[a] may be additional, though they seem a necessary contribution to the description of the Temple.

d. Hebr. is very obscure, lit. 'the cells, cells on cells, three and thirty times.' We translate with the help of the versions.

e. 'increased' conj.; 'turned' Hebr. • 'corresponding to . . . wall' following Gk; 'for they surrounded the Temple' Hebr., which adds, lit. 'that is why the width of the Temple towards the top, and so, the lower part went up towards the top by way of the middle (?).' The Hebr. perhaps conceals a reference to a spiral stair linking the various floors, but is too obscure to translate. The general idea is that the outer wall of the cell building got narrower from floor to floor on the inside, and the cells grew proportionately wider.

f. Hebr. adds an incomprehensible word.

g. Apparently a great roofless hall; its purpose is not known. There seems to have been no such building in the Temple of Solomon. See, however, 2 K 23:11 and 1 Ch 26:18, where reference is made to something on the west side.

h. 'on three sides' trans. conj.; lit. 'to of them'. • 'from floor' conj.; 'and the floor' Hebr.

i. Hebr. adds an unintelligible word.

j. 'on the wall' conj., see v. 25; 'and the wall of the Hekal' Hebr. ketib; 'Hekal' is marked as not intended to be read aloud.

k. 'two cubits (3ft, 91cm) square' Gk; Hebr. omits.

l. We rely on Gk for the whole of this passage, the style being compressed and the text probably corrupt.

42 a. Vv. 1–14 are a collection of disparate elements emanating from priestly circles during the Exile, to complete Ezekiel's description. The text is poorly preserved and some vv. are hard to understand. • Vv. 15–20 complete the measuring of the Temple begun in ch. 40.

b. 'on the north side' Gk; 'the north gate' Hebr.

c. 'the gateways' Gk; 'the twenty' Hebr.

was a walk, ten cubits measured inwards and a hundred cubits long;[d] their doors looked north. ·The top-floor rooms were narrow because the galleries took up part 5 of the width, being narrower than those on the ground floor or those on the middle floor of the building; ·these were divided into three storeys and had no columns 6 such as the court had. Hence they were narrower than the ground floor ones or the middle-floor ones (below them). ·The outer wall parallel to the rooms, facing them 7 and giving onto the outer court, was fifty cubits long, ·the length of the rooms 8 facing the outer court being fifty cubits, while for those facing the hall of the Temple it was a hundred cubits. ·Beneath the rooms there was an entrance from 9 the east, leading in from the outer court.

In the thickness of the wall of the court, on the south side[e] fronting the court and 10 the building, were rooms. ·A walk ran in front of them, as with the rooms built on 11 the north side; they were of the same length and breadth, and were of similar design with similar doors in and out. ·Before[f] the rooms on the south side there 12 was an entrance at the end of each walk, opposite the corresponding wall on the east side, at their entries. ·He said to me, 'The northern and southern rooms giving 13 onto the court are the rooms of the sanctuary, in which the priests who approach Lv 2:3b Yahweh will eat the most holy things. In them will be placed the most holy things: the oblation, the sacrifice for sin and the sacrifice of reparation, since this is a holy place. ·Once the priests have entered, they will not go out of the holy place into the 14 outer court without leaving their liturgical vestments there, since these vestments Lv 17:1a are holy; they will put on other clothes before going near places assigned to the people.'

45:2 Measurements of the court

When he had finished measuring the inside of the Temple, he took me out to the 15 east gate and measured it right round the sides. ·He measured the east side with 16 his measuring rod: a total of five hundred cubits[g] by the measuring rod. ·He then 17 measured the north side: a total of five hundred cubits by the measuring rod. ·He 18 then measured the south side: five hundred cubits by the measuring rod ·was the 19 total. On the west side he measured five hundred cubits by the measuring rod. He measured the entire enclosing wall on all four sides: length five hundred, 20 breadth five hundred, separating the sacred from the profane.

The return of Yahweh[a]

43 He took me to the gate, the one facing east. ·I saw the glory of the God of 1, 2 Israel approaching from the east. A sound came with him like the sound of 10:18–19;11: 22–23 the ocean, and the earth shone with his glory. ·This vision was like the one I had 3
1 seen when I had come for the destruction of the city, and like the one I had seen by the River Chebar. Then I fell to the ground.

The glory of Yahweh arrived at the Temple by the east gate. ·The Spirit lifted 4, 5
1 K 8:10–11 me up and brought me into the inner court; I saw the glory of Yahweh fill the Temple. ·And I heard someone speaking to me from the Temple[b] while the man 6 37:26–27+ Ex 25:8d Rv 21:3 stood beside me. ·He said, 'Son of man, this is the dais of my throne, the step on 7 which I rest my feet. I shall live here among the Israelites for ever; and the House of Israel, they and their kings,[c] will never again defile my holy name with their whorings and the corpses of their kings, ·by putting their threshold beside my 8
Ex 19:12e threshold and their door-posts beside my door-posts, with a party wall shared by them and me.[d] They used to defile my holy name by their loathsome practices, and this is why I put an end to them in my anger. ·From now on they will banish their 9 whorings and the corpses of their kings from my presence and I shall live among them for ever.

'Son of man, describe this Temple to the House of Israel, to shame them out of 10 their loathsome practices. (Let them draw up the plan of it.) ·And, if they are 11 ashamed of their behaviour, show them the design and plan of the Temple, its exits and entrances, its shape, how all of it is arranged, the entire design and all its principles. Give them all this in writing so that they can see and take note of its 12 design and the way it is all arranged and carry it out. ·This is the charter of the Temple: all the surrounding space on the mountain top is an especially holy area.

(Such is the charter of the Temple.)'

The altar [c]

Ex 27:1–8
1 K 8:64
2 Ch 4:1;7:7

13 These were the dimensions of the altar, in cubits each of a cubit plus a hands-breadth. The base: one cubit high and one cubit wide; the space by the runnel, all 14 round the edge of the altar, one handsbreadth. ·From the ground level of the base up to the lower plinth, two cubits high and one cubit wide; from the lesser plinth to 15 the greater plinth, four cubits high and one cubit wide. ·The altar hearth: four 16 cubits high, with four horns projecting from the hearth, ·the hearth was four-17 square: twelve cubits by twelve cubits; ·and the square plinth: fourteen cubits by fourteen cubits; and the ledge all round: half a cubit; and the base: one cubit all round. The steps were on the east side.

The consecration of the altar

Ex 29:36–37
Lv 8:10–16
1 M 4:52–56

18 He said to me, 'Son of man, the Lord Yahweh says this, "As regards the altar, this is how things must be done when it has been built for the sacrifice of the burnt 19 offering and for the pouring of blood. ·To the levitical priests—those of the race of Zadok—who approach me to serve me—declares the Lord Yahweh—you must 20 give a young bull as a sacrifice for sin. ·You must take some of its blood and put it on the four horns, on the four corners of the plinth and on the surrounding ledge.
21 In this way you will purify it and make expiation on it. ·Then take the bull of the sacrifice for sin and burn it in that part of the Temple which is cut off from the 22 sanctuary. ·On the second day, you must offer an unblemished he-goat as the sacrifice for sin, and the altar must be purified again as was done with the 23 bull. ·When you have finished the purification, you must offer a young, unblem-24 ished bull and an unblemished ram from the flock. ·You must present them before Yahweh, and the priests will sprinkle salt on them and offer them as burnt offerings 25 to Yahweh. ·As a sacrifice for sin, every day for seven days you must offer a he-26 goat, a bull and an unblemished ram from the flock. ·In this way the altar will be 27 expiated and will be purified and inaugurated. ·At the end of that time, on the eighth day and afterwards, the priest will offer your burnt offerings and your communion sacrifices on the altar, and I shall look favourably on you—declares the Lord Yahweh." '

The use of the east gate

1 44 He brought me back to the outer east gate of the sanctuary. It was shut.
2 Yahweh said to me, 'This gate will be kept shut. No one may open it or go through it, since Yahweh, God of Israel, has been through it. And so it must be 3 kept shut. ·The prince himself, however, may sit there to take his meal in the presence of Yahweh. [e] He must enter and leave through the porch of the gate.'

b. Yahweh himself, not the angel accompanying Ezekiel.

c. Hebr. adds 'their high places'; 'with them' Gk.

d. The previous Temple adjoined the palace of David, 1 K 7:8. Ezekiel relegates the palace to another part of the city, reserving the entire eastern height of Jerusalem for the Temple.

e. Vv. 13–27 are two subsequent additions about the structure and dedication of the altar. They do not imply that Zerubbabel's altar had already been erected.

Yahweh said to me, 'Son of man, pay attention, look carefully and listen closely to 5 everything I explain; these are all the arrangements of the Temple of Yahweh and from the sanctuary.[b] ·And say to the rebels of the House of Israel, "The Lord 6 living among the Israelites.[f]

The Levites

"As regards the Levites who abandoned me when Israel strayed far from me by 10 following its idols,[g] they must bear the weight of their own sin. ·They must be 11 servants in my sanctuary, responsible for guarding the Temple gates and serving the Temple. They will kill the burnt offerings and the sacrifice for the people, and hold themselves at the service of the people. ·Since they used to be at their service 12 in front of their idols and were an occasion of guilt for the House of Israel, very well, I stretch out my hand against them—declares the Lord Yahweh—they will bear the weight of their guilt. ·They may never approach me again to perform the 13 Lv 2:3b priestly office in my presence, nor touch my holy things and my most holy things; they must bear the disgrace of their loathsome practices. ·I shall give them the 14 responsibility of serving the Temple; I shall make them responsible for serving it and for everything to be done in it.

Nb 18:1–19 The priests

"As regards the levitical priests, the sons of Zadok,[h] who maintained the service 15 of my sanctuary when the Israelites strayed far from me, they will approach me to serve me; they will stand in my presence to offer me the fat and blood—declares the Lord Yahweh. ·They will enter my sanctuary and approach my table to serve 16 me; they will maintain my service. ·Once they enter the gates of the inner court, 17 they must wear linen vestments; they must wear no wool when they serve inside the gates of the inner court and in the Temple. ·They must wear linen caps on their 18 Lv 6:3–4 heads and linen breeches on their loins; they may not wear anything round their waists that makes them sweat.[i] ·When they go out to the people in the outer 19 court,[j] they must remove the vestments in which they have performed the liturgy and leave them in the rooms of the Holy Place, and put on other clothes, so as not Lv 21:5 to hallow the people with their vestments.[k] ·They may neither shave their heads 20
Lv 10:9 nor let their hair grow long,[l] but must cut their hair carefully. ·No priest may drink 21
Lv 21:7,14 wine on the day he enters the inner court. ·They may not marry widows or divorced 22 women, but only virgins of the race of Israel; they may, however, marry a widow, if she is the widow of a priest. ·They must teach my people the difference between 23 what is sacred and what is profane and make them understand the difference between what is clean and what is unclean. ·They must be judges in law-suits; they 24 20:11–12,16, 19–20 must judge in the spirit of my judgements; they must follow my laws and ordinances Lv 21:1–5 at all my feasts and keep my Sabbaths holy. ·They may not go near[m] a dead person, 25 in case they become unclean, except in these permissible cases, that is, for father, mother, daughter, son, brother or unmarried sister. ·After one of them has been 26 purified, seven days must elapse; ·then, the day he enters the Holy Place in the 27 inner court to minister in the Holy Place, he must offer his sacrifice for sin—died a natural death or been savaged, be it bird or animal." ' [o]

The division of the country.[a] The portion for Yahweh 48:8–20

1 45 ' "When you draw lots to divide the country by heritage, you must set a sacred portion of the country aside for Yahweh: twenty-five thousand cubits 2 long and twenty thousand wide. The whole of this land must be sacred, •and of this an area five hundred by five hundred cubits[b] must be for the sanctuary, with a 42:15–20 3 boundary fifty cubits wide right round. •Out of this area you must also measure a section twenty-five thousand by ten thousand cubits, in which will be the sanctuary, 4 the Holy of Holies. •This will be the sacred portion of the country, belonging to the priests who officiate in the sanctuary and approach Yahweh to serve him. It will 5 contain room for their houses and room for the sanctuary. •A portion twenty-five thousand by ten thousand cubits will be owned by the Levites serving the Temple, 6 with towns for them to live in.[c] •You must give the city possession of an area five thousand by twenty-five thousand cubits, near the land belonging to the sanctuary; this must be for the whole House of Israel.

The portion for the prince

7 "The prince must have a territory either side of the sacred portion and of the property of the city, adjacent to the sacred portion and the property of the city, stretching westwards from the west and eastwards from the east, its size equal to 8 one of the portions between the west and the east frontiers •of the country. This will be his property in Israel. Then my princes will no longer oppress my people; they must leave the rest of the country for the House of Israel, for its tribes.
9 "The Lord Yahweh says this: Enough, princes of Israel! Give up your violence Jr 22:3–5 and plundering, do what is upright and just, stop crushing my people with taxa-

the ephah and bat be equal, let the bat hold one-tenth of a homer and the ephah 12 one-tenth of a homer. Let the measures be based on the homer.[d] •The shekel must be twenty gerah. Twenty shekels, twenty-five shekels and fifteen shekels must make one mina.

b. Trans. uncertain, lit. 'at the entrance to the Temple and at all the exits from the sanctuary'.

c. Vv. 6–31 on the clergy of the Temple are additional but very possibly date from before the end of the Exile; they institutionalise the actual distinction which had arisen since the deuteronomic reform, between the old Levites of the provincial sanctuaries who were relegated to inferior status, and the Zadokite Priests who formed the clergy of Jerusalem. This explained why the Levites, cf. Ezr 2:40, as opposed to the priests, were reluctant to return from the Exile, Ezr 8:15–19.

d. lit. 'you broke' versions; 'they broke' Hebr.

e. An allusion to the employment of more or less assimilated aliens, cf. Dt 29:10; Jos 9:27, in the service of the Temple of Jerusalem.

f. In the Temple of Herod in the days of Jesus, the following notice, cut in Greek, was still to be seen. 'Let no alien pass beyond the balustrade and wall surrounding the sanctuary. Whoever is caught doing so will have only himself to blame for the death which will be his penalty.' Several of these stone inscriptions have been unearthed.

g. The Levites were frequently employed at the 'high places'. When these shrines were abolished by Dt and the reform under Josiah, these Levites lost their official standing and were forced to live on charity, Dt 12:12, 18, or else to reaffiliate themselves to the sanctuary in Jerusalem, Dt 18:6–8. Ezekiel approves the latter course but assigns them a subordinate status; they are to take over the duties of the aliens expelled from the Temple service.

h. The levitical priests, see Dt 18:1–5, are those who remained loyal to the service of the sanctuary in Jerusalem. They were of the line of Zadok, the priest appointed by Solomon after the deprivation of Abiathar, 1 K 2:27–35.

i. lit. 'not to belt themselves with sweat'. Sweat was apparently regarded as unclean, unless the word here means something else which we do not know about.

j. Hebr. repeats 'in the outer court'; versions omit.

k. The laity were forbidden to touch consecrated objects; they run the risk of being 'hallowed' or 'sanctified', see Lv 17a:1.

l. Long, unkempt hair symbolised either a vow, Nb 6:5, or mourning, cf. Ezk 24:17, 23.

m. 'They are not to go near' versions; sing. Hebr.

n. 'They are to have no heritage' Vulg.; 'it is to be their heritage' Hebr.

o. According to Lv 7:24, the prohibition applied to all Israelites.

45 a. Ch. 45–46 belong to the final editing of the book and consist of a series of additions, loosely connected. The first, vv. 1–8, on the portions of territory assigned to Yahweh and the prince, anticipates 48:8–22 but is placed here on the strength of the dues (same word in Hebr.) set aside as the portion of the priests, mentioned in 44:30.

b. These are the dimensions of the Temple.

c. 'with towns to live in' Gk; 'twenty rooms' Hebr.

d. The ephah (1.25 bushels, 45 litres) is a solid, the bat (10 gallons UK, 12 USA, 45 litres) is a liquid measure. The homer and kor (v. 14) are the same. For the modern equivalents of ancient measures see Tables of measures and money.

Ex 30:13–16 Mt 23:23

Offerings for worship

"This is the offering that you must levy: the sixth of an ephah for every homer of 13

the House of Israel.

Ex 12:1a

The feast of the Passover

"The Lord Yahweh says this: On the first day of the first month, you must take a 18 from the sacrifice for sin and put it on the doorposts of the Temple, on the four corners of the altar plinth and on the doorposts of the gates [f] of the inner court.

You must do the same on the seventh of the month, on behalf of anyone who has 20 sinned through inadvertence or ignorance. This is how you must make expiation for the Temple. ·On the fourteenth day of the first month, you must celebrate the 21 feast of the Passover. For seven days everyone must eat unleavened loaves. ·On 22 that day, the prince must offer a bull as a sacrifice for sin, for himself and all the people of the country. ·For the seven days of the feast, he must offer Yahweh burnt 23 offerings of seven bulls and seven rams without blemish, daily for a week, and one he-goat daily as a sacrifice for sin, ·and as an oblation, one ephah for each bull and 24 one ephah for each ram, and a hin of oil for every ephah.

Ex 23:14d

The feast of Shelters

Miscellaneous regulations [g]

45:17 Ex 20:8f Nb 28:9–14

' "The Lord Yahweh says this: The east gate of the inner court must be kept 1 46 shut for the six working days. On the Sabbath day, however, it must be opened, as also on the day of the New Moon; ·and the prince must go in through 2 the porch of the outer gate and take his position by the doorposts of the gate. The priests must then offer his burnt offerings and his communion sacrifice. He must prostrate himself on the threshold of the gate and go out, and the gate must not be shut again until the evening. ·The people of the country must prostrate themselves 3 in the presence of Yahweh at the entrance to the gate on Sabbaths and days of the New Moon. ·The burnt offering offered to Yahweh by the prince on the Sabbath 4 day must consist of six unblemished lambs and one unblemished ram, ·with an 5 oblation of one ephah for the ram, and such oblation as he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for every ephah. ·On the day of the New Moon it must consist of an 6 unblemished young bull, six unblemished lambs and one unblemished ram, ·when 7 he must make an oblation of one ephah for the bull and one ephah for the ram, and what he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for every ephah.

Ex 23:14–17 Yahweh at the solemn festivals, those who have come in by the north gate to prostrate themselves must go out by the south gate, and those who have come in by the south gate must go out by the north gate; no one must turn back to leave

10 through the gate by which he entered but must go out on the opposite side. ·The prince will be with them, coming in like them and going out like them.
11 "On feast days and solemn festivals the oblation must be one ephah for every bull, one ephah for every ram, what he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for 12 every ephah. ·When the prince offers Yahweh voluntary burnt offerings or a voluntary communion sacrifice, the east gate must be opened for him, and he must offer his burnt offerings and his communion sacrifice as he does on the Sabbath 13 day; when he has gone out, the gate must be shut after him. ·Every day he must offer [b] an unblemished lamb one year old as a burnt offering to Yahweh; he must Lv 7:16;22:23 Ex 29:39seq.

one-sixth of an ephah and one-third of a hin of oil, for mixing with the flour. This is 15 the oblation to Yahweh, a perpetual decree, fixed for ever. ·The lamb, the oblation and the oil must be offered morning after morning for ever. [c] 16 "Lord Yahweh says this: If the prince presents part of his hereditary portion to one of his sons, the gift must pass into the ownership of his sons and become their 17 hereditary property. ·If, however, he presents part of his hereditary portion to one of his slaves, it will belong to the man only until the year of liberation and then 18 must revert to the prince. [d] Only his sons may retain his hereditary portion. ·The prince may not take any part of the people's hereditary portion, thus robbing them of what is theirs; he must provide the patrimony of his sons out of his own property, so that no member of my people is robbed of what is his!" '
19 ·He took me through the entrance at the side of the north gate that leads to the 42:1–9 rooms of the Holy Place set apart for the priests. And there before us, to the west, 20 was a space at the end. ·He said to me, 'This is where the priests must boil the Lv 4–5 slaughtered animals for the sacrifice for sin and the sacrifice of reparation, and where they must bake the oblation, without having to carry them into the outer Lv 2 •44:19 21 court and so run the risk of hallowing the people.' ·He then took me into the outer court and led me to each of its four corners; in each corner of the outer court 22 was a compound; ·in other words, the four corners of the court contained four 23 small compounds, forty cubits by thirty, all four being the same size. [f] ·All four 24 were enclosed by a wall, with hearths all round the bottom of the wall. ·He said, 'These are the kitchens where the Temple servants must boil the sacrifices offered by the people.'

Distribution of the Holy Land[a]

48 ' "This is the list of the tribes. One portion in the far north by way of 1 Hethlon to the Pass of Hamath, to Hazer-Enon, with the territory of Damascus to the north, and marching with Hamath,[b] from the eastern limit to the western limit: Dan. ·One portion bordering Dan, from the eastern limit to 2 the western limit: Asher. ·One portion bordering Asher, from the eastern limit 3 to the western limit: Naphtali. ·One portion bordering Naphtali, from the eastern 4 limit to the western limit: Manasseh. ·One portion bordering Manasseh, from the 5 eastern limit to the western limit: Ephraim. ·One portion bordering Ephraim, 6 from the eastern limit to the western limit: Reuben. ·One portion bordering 7 Reuben, from the eastern limit to the western limit: Judah. ·One portion bordering 8 Judah, from the eastern limit to the western limit, is the portion which you must set aside, twenty-five thousand cubits wide, and as long as each of the other portions from the eastern limit to the western limit. The sanctuary will be in the centre of it.

"The portion which you must set aside for Yahweh must be twenty-five thousand 9 45:1–6 cubits long and ten thousand cubits wide. ·This sacred portion must belong to the 10 priests, being, on the north side, twenty-five thousand cubits; on the west side ten thousand cubits wide, on the east side ten thousand cubits wide and on the south side twenty-five thousand cubits long; the sanctuary of Yahweh will be in the centre of it. ·This will be for the consecrated priests, those of the sons of Zadok who 44:15–16 maintained my liturgy and did not go astray with the straying Israelites, as the Levites went astray. ·And so their portion must be taken out of the especially holy portion of the land, near the territory of the Levites. ·The territory of the Levites, Nb 35 like the territory of the priests, must be twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide—the whole length being twenty-five thousand and the width ten thousand. ·It will be illegal for them to sell or exchange any part of it, and the domain can never be alienated, since it is consecrated to Yahweh. ·As regards the remainder, an area of five thousand cubits by twenty-five thousand, this must be for the common use of the city, for houses and pastures. In the middle will be the city. ·These will be its dimensions: on the north side, four thousand five hundred ↗Rv 21:15–17 cubits; on the south side, four thousand five hundred cubits; on the east side, four thousand five hundred cubits; on the west side, four thousand five hundred cubits.

The pasture land of the city must extend two hundred and fifty cubits to the north, two hundred and fifty to the south, two hundred and fifty to the east, two hundred and fifty to the west. ·One strip, contiguous to the sacred portion, must be left over, consisting of ten thousand cubits to eastward and ten thousand to westward, marching with the sacred portion; this will bring in a revenue for feeding the municipal workmen. ·And the municipal workmen, drawn from all the tribes of Israel, will farm it. ·The portion must have a total area of twenty-five thousand cubits by twenty-five thousand. You must allocate a square area from the sacred portion to constitute the city. ·What is left over will be for the prince, on either side of the sacred portion and of the property of the city, marching with the twenty-five thousand cubits to eastward[c] to the eastern frontier, and marching with the twenty-five thousand cubits to westward to the western frontier—running parallel with the other portions and belonging to the prince. In the centre will be the sacred portion and the sanctuary of the Temple. ·Thus, apart from the property of the Levites and the property of the city which lie in the middle of the prince's portion, everything between the borders of Judah and the borders of Benjamin must belong to the prince.

"As regards the rest of the tribes: One portion from the eastern limit to the western limit: Benjamin. ·One portion bordering Benjamin, from the eastern limit to the western limit: Simeon. ·One portion bordering Simeon, from the eastern limit to the western limit: Issachar. ·One portion bordering Issachar, from the eastern limit to the western limit: Zebulun. ·One portion bordering Zebulun, from the eastern limit to the western limit: Gad. ·On the southern border of Gad, on the south side, the border will run from Tamar to the Waters of Meribah in Kadesh, to the Wadi and the Great Sea. ·This is how you must distribute the country to the tribes of Israel as their heritage, and these must be their portions—
declares the Lord Yahweh.

b. Here the term means the deep depression of the River Jordan. The sea is the Dead Sea whose bitter waters are to be sweetened.

c. 'the river' versions; 'the two rivers' Hebr.

d. The Mediterranean.

e. This description of the Promised Land belongs to the same tradition as Nb 34:1–12, see also 34:1a. Some of the place-names are difficult to site, but the northern frontier was apparently to pass north of Tripoli and include the territory of Damascus, vv. 15–16; 48:1—a purely imaginary arrangement. The River Jordan marks the eastern frontier, v. 18.

f. 'This will be'; lit. 'Behold' versions; Hebr. uncertain. 'two portions' Targ. 'portions' Hebr. The two portions were for Ephraim and Manasseh, the sons of Joseph, to make up the twelve territorial tribes of Israel, separate provision having already been made for the tribe of Levi, 45:1–6.

g. 'Hamath' transposed from v. 16, with Gk.

h. 'that' Syr; 'and' Hebr., as also in v. 18.

i. 'as far as Tamar' Syr., cf. v. 19; Hebr. uncertain. • The Eastern Sea was the Dead Sea.

48 a. The ch. is the most unrealistic part of Ezekiel's blueprint. He divides the country into parallel strips running from the eastern frontier to the Mediterranean, without reference to geographical or demographical factors. In conformity with the boundaries set to the Promised Land in ch. 47, the Transjordanian tribes are resettled to the west of the River Jordan. There are seven tribes to the north and five tribes to the south of the sacred territory, which is Yahweh's portion and where Jerusalem is situated. This reserved portion is subdivided between the priests (with the Temple) and the Levites, and what is left over is assigned to the city as common land; the territory of the prince stretches to east and west of this sacred portion, vv. 9–22 used again in 45: 1–8.

b. After 'marching with Hamath', we omit 'they will belong to him'. • 'from the eastern limit to the western limit' Gk, cf. v.3seq; 'from the east side, the sea (?)' Hebr.

c. 'to eastward' qedimah conj., Hebr. terumah 'portion'; Gk omits.

The gates of Jerusalem [d]

DANIEL

INTRODUCTION: THE YOUNG HEBREWS AT THE COURT OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR

1 In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar king 2 of Babylon marched on Jerusalem and besieged it. ·The Lord let Jehoiakim king of Judah fall into his power, as well as some of the vessels belonging to the Temple of God. These he took away to Shinar,[a] putting the vessels into the treasury of his own gods.

2 K 24:1seq.
1 Ch 36:5–7
Gn 10:10

3 From the Israelites, the king ordered Ashpenaz, his chief eunuch, to bring a 4 certain number of boys of royal or noble descent; ·they had to be without any physical defect, of good appearance, versed in every branch of wisdom, well-informed, discerning,[b] suitable for service at the royal court. Ashpenaz was to 5 teach them to speak and write the language of the Chaldaeans. ·The king assigned them a daily allowance of food and wine from the royal table. They were to receive an education lasting for three years, after which they would enter the royal service. 6, 7 Among them were the Judaeans Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. ·The chief eunuch gave them other names, calling Daniel Belteshazzar, Hananiah Shadrach, Mishael Meshach, and Azariah Abed-Nego.[c]

2 K 25:29–30

8 Daniel, who was determined not to incur pollution by food and wine from the 9 royal table, begged the chief eunuch to spare him this defilement.[d] ·God allowed 10 Daniel to receive faithful love and sympathy from the chief eunuch. ·But the eunuch warned Daniel, 'I am afraid of my lord the king: he has assigned you food and drink, and if he sees you looking thinner in the face than the other boys of your 11 age, my head will be in danger with the king because of you.' ·To the guard assigned to Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah by the chief eunuch, Daniel 12 then said, ·'Please allow your servants a ten days' trial, during which we are given 13 only vegetables to eat and water to drink. ·You can then compare our looks with those of the boys who eat the king's food; go by what you see, and treat your 14 servants accordingly.' ·The man agreed to do what they asked and put them on ten 15 days' trial. ·When the ten days were over, they looked better and fatter than any of 16 the boys who had eaten their allowance from the royal table; ·so the guard withdrew their allowance of food and the wine they were to drink, and gave them 17 vegetables. ·To these four boys God gave knowledge and skill in every aspect of literature and learning; Daniel also had the gift of interpreting every kind of vision and dream.

b. Not therefore to be trained merely as pages. In eastern courts those destined for the career of 'letters' (scribes, translators, archivists, scholars, astrologers, etc.) were trained from childhood.

c. Probably the copyist has deliberately changed the gentile name Abed Nebu, 'servant of Nabu'. The name of this god forms the theophoric element in the name Nebuchadnezzar. Compare similar treatment of the name Baal in such forenames as Ishbaal, Meribbaal, transformed into Ishbosheth, Mephibosheth, 2 S 2:8; 4:4.

d. In the days of enforced hellenisation under Antiochus Epiphanes, a breach of the dietary law was the equivalent of apostasy, see 2 M 6:18–7:42.

1 K 10:3–4 and Azariah. So they became members of the king's court, ·and on whatever point 20 of wisdom or understanding he might question them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and soothsayers in his entire kingdom. Daniel remained there until the first year of King Cyrus.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM: THE COMPOSITE STATUE

The king questions his soothsayers

2 In the second year of his reign, Nebuchadnezzar had a series of dreams;[a] he 1 was perturbed by this and sleep deserted him. ·The king then had magicians 2 and soothsayers, sorcerers and Chaldaeans[b] summoned to tell him what his dreams meant. They arrived and stood in the king's presence. ·The king said to them, 'I 3 have had a dream, and my mind is troubled by a wish to understand it.' ·The 4 Chaldaeans answered the king:

(Aramaic) 'May your majesty live for ever![c] Tell your servants the dream, and we shall reveal its meaning for you.' ·The king answered the Chaldaeans, 'This is my firm 5 resolve: if you cannot tell me what I dreamt and what it means, I shall have you torn limb from limb and your houses turned into dunghills. ·If, on the other hand, 6 5:17 you can tell me what I dreamt and what it means, I shall give you presents, rewards and high honour. So tell me what I dreamt and what it means.' ·A second time they 7 said, 'Let the king tell his dream to his servants, and we shall reveal its meaning.'
But the king retorted, 'It is plain to me that you are trying to gain time, knowing 8 my proclaimed resolve. ·If you do not interpret my dream for me, there will be but 9 one sentence passed on you all; you have agreed among yourselves to make me misleading and tortuous speeches while the time goes by. So tell me what my dream was, and then I shall know whether you can interpret it.' ·The Chaldaeans 10 answered the king, 'Nobody in the world could explain the king's problem; what is more, no other king, governor or chief would think of putting such a question to any magician, soothsayer or Chaldaean. ·The question the king asks is difficult, 11 Gn 41:16 and no one can find the king an answer to it, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with mortals.' ·At this the king flew into a rage and ordered all the Babylonian 12 sages to be put to death. ·On publication of the decree to have the sages killed, 13 search was made for Daniel and his companions to have them put to death.

Daniel intervenes

Then, with shrewd and cautious words, Daniel approached Arioch, the king's chief 14 executioner, when he was on his way to kill the Babylonian sages. ·To this royal 15 official Arioch he said, 'Why has the king issued such a harsh decree?' Arioch explained matters to Daniel, ·and Daniel went off to ask the king for a stay of 16 execution to give him the opportunity of revealing his interpretation to the king.
Daniel then went home and told his friends Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah 17
Gn 24:7 what had happened, ·urging them to beg the God of heaven[d] to show his mercy 18 and explain the mysterious secret,[e] so that Daniel and his friends might be spared the fate of the other Babylonian sages. ·The mystery was then revealed to Daniel 19 in a night-vision, and Daniel blessed[f] the God of heaven. ·This is what 20 Daniel said:

Ne 9:5
Ps 41:13 May the name of God
be blessed for ever and ever,
Jb 12:13
Rv 5:12 since wisdom and power are his alone.
It is he who controls the procession of times and seasons, 21 ↗Ac 1:7i who makes and unmakes kings, Rm 13:1 who confers wisdom on the wise, and knowledge on those with discernment, 22 who uncovers depths and mysteries, Pr 2:6+ Jb 12:22 Ps 139:11seq.

who knows what lies in darkness;
and light dwells with him. [g] 23 To you, God of my fathers, I give thanks and praise for having given me wisdom and strength:
to me you have explained what we asked you,
to us you have explained the king's problem.

24 So Daniel went to see Arioch, whom the king had made responsible for putting the Babylonian sages to death. Going in, he said, 'Do not put the Babylonian sages to death. Take me into the king's presence and I will reveal the meaning to the 25 king.' •Arioch lost no time in bringing Daniel to the king. 'Among the exiles from Judah,' he said, 'I have discovered a man who can reveal the meaning to the king.'
26 The king said to Daniel (who had been given the name Belteshazzar), 'Can you 27 tell me what I dreamt and what it means?' •Facing the king, Daniel replied, 'None of the sages, soothsayers, magicians or exorcists has been able to tell the 28 king the truth of the mystery which the king has propounded; •but there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries and who has shown King Nebuchadnezzar what is to take place in the final days. These, then, are the dream and the visions that passed through your head as you lay in bed: [h] 1 Co 2:10–11 ↗Rv 1:1,19;4:1

29 'Your Majesty, on your bed your thoughts turned to what would happen in the 30 future, and the Revealer of Mysteries disclosed to you what is to take place. •This mystery has been revealed to me, not that I am wiser than anyone else, but for this sole purpose: that the king should learn what it means, and that you should understand your inmost thoughts.

31 'You have had a vision, Your Majesty; this is what you saw: a statue, a great 32 statue of extreme brightness, stood before you, terrible to see. •The head of this statue was of fine gold, its chest and arms were of silver, its belly and thighs of 33, 34 bronze, •its legs of iron, its feet part iron, part clay. •While you were gazing, a stone broke away, untouched by any hand, [i] and struck the statue, struck its feet of iron
35 and clay and shattered them. •Then, iron and clay, bronze, silver and gold, all broke into pieces as fine as chaff on the threshing-floor in summer. The wind blew Ps 1:4 them away, leaving not a trace behind. And the stone that had struck the statue 36 grew into a great mountain, filling the whole world. •This was the dream; we shall now explain to the king what it means.

37 'You, Your Majesty, king of kings, to whom the God of heaven has given 38 sovereignty, power, strength and honour [j]—•human beings, wild animals, birds Jdt 11:7 Jr 27:6

2 a. Supernatural dreams are a means of communication between God and humanity, see chapters 4 and 7. Cf. the dreams of Abraham, Gn 15:12; Abimelech, Gn 20:3; Jacob, Gn 28:10–22. See also Gn 37:5d; Mt 1:20h.

b. 'Chaldaean' here means all those practising divination, an art commonly believed to have originated in Chaldaea. The various terms used in the lists of 2:2,10,27; 4:4; 5:7,11,15 have no precise technical significance.

c. The greeting is often found in Accadian texts and was used in the Persian court until the Islamic period.

d. Expression to designate the God of the Jews, when Jews and non-Jews are conversing, 2:37,44; Ezr 5:11; 6:9,10; Ne 1:4; 2:4,20; Tb 7:12; Jdt 5:8; similarly 'Lord of heaven', Dn 5:23; Tb 7:11; 'King of heaven', Dn 4:34; 'the Great God', Dn 2:44; Ezr 5:8.

e. raz, mystery, is a word of Persian origin; its biblical use is confined to Dn, but it is found in the Qumran scrolls: its primary meaning is 'secret', but it seems already to possess something of the profundity of the Greek mysterion as used by Paul, see Rm 16:25*l*.

f. The Jewish 'blessing' begins with an invocation to God or to his name, followed by a commemoration of his favours. When used liturgically it ends with a repetition of the initial eulogy, mentioning in abbreviated form the particular favour obtained.

g. The OT describes God as surrounded by light, Ex 24:17; Ezk 1:27; Hab 3:4, and as light itself, Ws 7:26; Is 60:19–20. The NT expresses this idea more clearly still, see for example 1 Tm 6:16; Jm 1:17; 1 Jn 1:5–7; but compare Jn 8:12b. Some early Jewish commentators cite this verse to vindicate the title 'Light' for the expected Messiah.

h. The allegories in Dn, of which this is the first, are veiled descriptions of the great successive empires of history: Neo-Babylonian, Median, Persian, Greek (Alexander's Asiatic kingdom governed by his successors). The allegory is here borrowed from ancient speculations on the ages of the world, the symbolism being used of metals in descending scale of value. Last of all comes the messianic kingdom. The empires of earth collapse and give place to a new kingdom which, being founded by God, is everlasting; the 'kingdom' of Heaven, see Mt 4:17f. • Jesus will later call himself 'Son of man', see Dn 7:13k and Mt 8:20h; he will also refer to himself, see Mt 21:42–44; Lk 20:17–18, as the corner-stone formerly rejected, Ps 118:22, and as the foundation stone of Is 28:16, with a clear allusion to the stone which breaks away from the mountain and crushes him on whom it falls, Dn 2:34,44–45.

i. lit. 'without hands', cf. Is 31:8.

j. Nebuchadnezzar's power comes to him from God, and not from the divine nature which he himself claims, see 3; Jdt 3:8; 6:2; 11:7.

of the air, wherever they live, he has entrusted to your rule, making you king of them all—you are the golden head. ·And, after you, another kingdom will rise, 39 not as great as yours, and then a third, of bronze, which will rule the whole world.
7:7;8:5; 21;11:3 There will be a fourth kingdom, hard as iron, as iron that pulverises and crushes 40
all. Like iron that breaks everything to pieces, it will crush and break all the earlier kingdoms. ·The feet [k] you saw, part earthenware, part iron, are a kingdom which 41 will be split in two, but which will retain something of the strength of iron, just as you saw the iron and the clay of the earthenware mixed together. ·The feet were 42 part iron, part potter's clay: the kingdom will be partly strong and partly brittle.
And just as you saw the iron and the clay of the earthenware mixed together, so 43 the two will be mixed together in human seed; [l] but they will not hold together any more than iron will blend with clay. ·In the days of those kings, the God of heaven 44 3:33/100; 4:31;7:14 will set up a kingdom which will never be destroyed, and this kingdom will not pass into the hands of another race: it will shatter and absorb all the previous kingdoms
2 S 7:16 Lk 1:33 and itself last for ever—·just as you saw a stone, untouched by hand, break away 45
Mt 21:42–44par. from the mountain and reduce iron, bronze, earthenware, silver and gold to powder. The Great God has shown the king what is to take place. The dream is true, the interpretation exact.'

The king's profession of faith

At this, King Nebuchadnezzar fell prostrate before Daniel; he gave orders for 46
Lv 2:1a;6:8 Daniel to be offered an oblation and a fragrant sacrifice. ·The king said to Daniel, 47 3:90;11:36 Dt 10:17 'Your god is indeed the God of gods, the Master of kings, and the Revealer of Mysteries, since you have been able to reveal this mystery.' ·The king then 48 conferred high rank on Daniel and gave him many handsome presents. He also made him governor of the whole province of Babylon and head of all the sages of Babylon. ·At Daniel's request, the king entrusted the affairs of the province of 49 Babylon to Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego; Daniel himself remained in attendance on the king.

THE ADORATION OF THE GOLDEN STATUE

Nebuchadnezzar sets up a golden statue

3 King Nebuchadnezzar had a golden statue made, [a] sixty cubits high and six 1 cubits wide, which he set up on the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.
King Nebuchadnezzar then summoned the satraps, magistrates, governors, 2 counsellors, treasurers, judges, lawyers, and all the provincial authorities to assemble and attend the dedication of the statue set up by King Nebuchadnezzar.
Satraps, magistrates, governors, counsellors, treasurers, judges, lawyers and all 3 the provincial authorities then assembled for the dedication of the statue set up by King Nebuchadnezzar and stood in front of the statue which King Nebuchadnezzar ↗Rv 5:9;7:9; 13:7;14:6; 17:15 had set up. ·A herald then loudly proclaimed: 'Peoples, nations, languages! Thus 4 are you commanded: ·the moment you hear the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, zither, 5 harp, bagpipe and every other kind of instrument, [b] you will prostrate yourselves and worship the golden statue set up by King Nebuchadnezzar. ·Anyone who 6 ↗Rv 13:14–15 does not prostrate himself and worship will immediately be thrown into the burning fiery furnace.' ·And so, the instant all the peoples heard the sound of 7 horn, pipe, lyre, zither, harp, bagpipe and all the other instruments, all the peoples, nations and languages prostrated themselves and worshipped the statue set up by King Nebuchadnezzar.

The denunciation and condemnation of the Jews

Some Chaldaeans then came forward and maliciously accused the Jews. ·They 8, 9 said to King Nebuchadnezzar, 'May Your Majesty live for ever! ·You have issued 10 a decree, Your Majesty, to the effect that everyone on hearing the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, zither, harp, bagpipe and every other kind of instrument is to pros-11 trate himself and worship the golden statue; ·and that anyone who does not 12 prostrate himself and worship is to be thrown into the burning fiery furnace. ·Now, there are certain Jews to whom you have entrusted the affairs of the province of Babylon: Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego; these men have ignored your command, Your Majesty; they do not serve your gods, and refuse to worship the 13 golden statue you have set up.' ·Shaking with fury, Nebuchadnezzar sent for Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego. The men were immediately brought before 14 the king. ·Nebuchadnezzar addressed them, 'Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego, is it true that you do not serve my gods, and that you refuse to worship the golden 15 statue I have set up? ·When you hear the sound of horn, pipe, lyre, zither, harp, bagpipe and every other kind of instrument, are you prepared to prostrate yourselves and worship the statue I have made? If you refuse to worship it, you will be thrown forthwith into the burning fiery furnace; then which of the gods could save 16 you from my power?' ·Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego replied to King Nebu-17 chadnezzar, 'Your question needs no answer from us: ·if our God, the one we serve, is able to save us from the burning fiery furnace and from your power, Your Ps 37:39–40 18 Majesty, he will save us; ·and even if he does not, then you must know, Your 19 Majesty, that we will not serve your god or worship the statue you have set up.' ·This infuriated King Nebuchadnezzar; his expression was changed now as he looked at Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego. He gave orders for the furnace to be made 20 seven times hotter than usual ·and commanded certain stalwarts from his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego and throw them into the burning fiery 21 furnace. ·They were then bound in their cloaks, trousers, headgear and other 22 garments, and thrown into the burning fiery furnace. ·The king's command was so urgent and the heat of the furnace was so fierce, that the men carrying Shadrach, 23 Meshach and Abed-Nego were burnt to death by the flames from the fire; ·the three men, Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego fell, bound, into the burning fiery furnace.

The song of Azariah in the furnace [c] 9:3–19 and notes Ezr 9:6–15

24 And they walked in the heart of the flames, praising God and blessing the Lord.
25 Azariah stood in the heart of the fire, praying aloud thus:

26 May you be blessed and revered, Lord, God of our ancestors, 4:34 1 Ch 29:10,20 may your name be held glorious for ever.

and on Jerusalem, the holy city of our ancestors, for you have treated us rightly and truly,
as our sins deserve.

29 Yes, we have sinned and committed a crime by deserting you, 9:5–8 yes, we have greatly sinned;
we have not listened to your commandments, Ne 1:7 Is 59:12–13 Ba 1:17seq.

k. Aram. adds 'and toe-nails'. Similarly, in v. 42, 'toes' has been corrected to 'feet'.

l. Probably alluding to the intermarriage of Seleucids and Ptolemies which failed, however, to cement any union between these successors of Alexander.

3 a. LXX and Theod. add 'in his eighteenth year'; LXX further adds 'having subdued towns and provinces and all the inhabitants of the world from India to Ethiopia'.

b. This 'zither' or 'trigon' was a triangle with four strings and the harp a type of guitar.

c. There is little doubt that the long italicised passage that follows (vv. 24–90) is from an Aramaic original; it is preserved only in the Greek and Syr. versions. We follow Theod.; LXX has some variant readings and occasional differences in order. In the Aramaic text v. 24 corresponds to Greek v. 91.

The king acknowledges the miracle

King Nebuchadnezzar sprang to his feet in amazement. He said to his advisers, 24 91 'Did we not have these three men thrown bound into the fire?' They answered the king, 'Certainly, Your Majesty'. ·'But', he went on, 'I can see four men walking 25 92 free in the heart of the fire and quite unharmed! And the fourth looks like a child of the gods!'[g] ·Nebuchadnezzar approached the mouth of the burning fiery furnace 26 93 and said, 'Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego, servants of God Most High,[h] come out, come here!' And from the heart of the fire out came Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego. ·The satraps, magistrates, governors, and advisers of the king 27 94 crowded round the three men to examine them: the fire had had no effect on their bodies: not a hair of their heads had been singed, their cloaks were not scorched, no smell of burning hung about them. Nebuchadnezzar said, ·'Blessed be the God 28 95 of Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego: he has sent his angel to rescue his servants who, putting their trust in him, defied the order of the king, and preferred to forfeit 29 their bodies[i] rather than serve or worship any god but their God. •I therefore decree as follows, "Peoples, nations, and languages! Let any of you speak disres- 6:27 pectfully of the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego, and I shall have him torn limb from limb and his house turned into a dunghill; for there is no other god who can save like this." '

97 30 The king then showered favours on Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-Nego in the province of Babylon.

THE WARNING DREAM AND THE MADNESS OF NEBUCHADNEZZAR

Nebuchadnezzar's proclamation

98 31 'King Nebuchadnezzar, to all peoples, nations and languages dwelling throughout the world: may you prosper more and more!
99 32 'It is my pleasure to make known the signs and wonders with which the Most High God has favoured me.

100 33 How great his signs, how mighty his wonders!
His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, 2:44;4:31 his empire endures age after age!'

Nebuchadnezzar describes his dream

1 4 'I, Nebuchadnezzar,[a] was living comfortably in my house, prosperously in 2 my palace. •I had a dream; it appalled me. Dread assailed me as I lay in bed;
3 the visions that passed through my head tormented me. •So I decreed that all the sages of Babylon be summoned to explain to me what the dream meant.
4 Magicians, soothsayers, Chaldaeans and exorcists came, and I told them what 5 I had dreamt, but they could not interpret it for me. •Daniel, renamed Belteshazzar after my own god,[b] and in whom the spirit of the holy gods[c] 5:11,14;13:45 resides, then came into my presence. I told him my dream:
6 ' "Belteshazzar, chief of magicians," I said, "I know that the spirit of the holy gods resides in you and that no mystery puts you at a loss. This is[d] the dream I have had; tell me what it means.
7 ' "The visions that passed through my head as I lay in bed were these:

I saw a tree[e] Ezk 31:3–14
in the middle of the world;
it was very tall.
8 The tree grew taller and stronger, until its top reached the sky and it could be seen from the very ends of the earth.
9 Its foliage was beautiful, its fruit abundant, Ezk 17:23 in it was food for all.

g. The protecting angel, see v. 28 (95).
h. The title is found in Ps, but elsewhere only on the lips of non-Jews, see Gn 14:18; Nb 24:16; Is 14:14.
i. Theod. adds 'to the fire', a reading used by Paul, 1 Co 13:3.

4 a. Gk is more detailed: 'In the seventeenth year of his reign, Nebuchadnezzar said'. • In LXX, despite some omissions, this chapter is a quarter as long again as in the Massoretic text.
b. The god Bel, also the theophoric element in Belshazzar, see 5:1a.
c. The same divine inspiration as the pharaoh, for instance, discerns in Joseph from the wisdom of his advice, Gn 41:38; but see Is 11:2c; 63:10. • The Aram. plural should not be corrected to the singular (compare Theod.): Nebuchadnezzar talks like the gentile he still is; but contrast 4:34. Similarly, Belshazzar at 5:11,14.
d. 'This is' hazi conj.; Aram. hezwe 'the visions of (my dream)'.
e. For the tree as a symbol of a nation's growing power, cf. Ezk 17:1–10 and 22–24 and especially 31:3–14; also Is 10:33–11:1.

For the wild animals it provided shade, ↗Mt 13:31-32 the birds of heaven nested in its branches, all living creatures found their food on it.

' "I watched the visions passing through my head as I lay in bed: 10

Next, a Watchful One,[f] a holy one, came down from heaven.
At the top of his voice he shouted: 11
Cut the tree down, lop off its branches, strip off its leaves, throw away its fruit;
let the animals flee from its shelter and the birds from its branches.
But leave the stump with its roots in the ground, 12 bound with hoops of iron and bronze, in the grass of the countryside.
Let it be drenched by the dew of heaven and have its lot with the animals, eating grass!
Let it cease to have a human heart,[g] 13 and be given the heart of a beast, and seven times[h] shall pass over it!

Such is the sentence proclaimed by the Watchers, 14
the verdict announced by the holy ones[i]— so that every living thing may learn 2:28h Jb 36:7 Jr 27:5 that the Most High rules over human sovereignty; he confers it on whom he pleases,
and raises the lowest of humankind.

' "This was the dream I had—I, Nebuchadnezzar the king. Now it is for you, 15 Belteshazzar, to pronounce on its meaning, since not one of the sages in my kingdom has been able to interpret it for me; you, however, can do so, since the spirit of the holy gods resides in you." '

Daniel interprets the dream

Daniel, known as Belteshazzar, was confused for a time and upset. 16

The king said, 'Belteshazzar, do not be upset at the dream and its meaning.' Belteshazzar answered, 'My lord, may the dream apply to those who hate you, and its meaning to your foes! ·The tree you saw, so large and strong and tall that it 17 reached the sky and could be seen throughout the world, ·the tree with beautiful 18 foliage and abundant fruit, with food for all in it, providing shade for the wild animals, with the birds of heaven nesting in its branches: ·that tree is yourself, 19
Your Majesty, for you have grown great and strong; your stature is now so great that it reaches the sky, and your empire extends to the ends of the earth.

'And the Watchful one seen by the king, the holy one coming down from heaven 20 and saying, "Cut the tree down and destroy it, but leave stump and roots in the ground, bound with hoops of iron and bronze in the grass of the countryside; let it be drenched by the dew and have its lot with the wild animals until seven times have passed over it": ·the meaning of this, Your Majesty, the verdict of the Most 21 High passed on my lord the king, is this:

You will be driven from human society 22
and will make your home with the wild animals,
you will feed on grass, as oxen do,
you will be drenched by the dew of heaven;
seven times will pass over you until you have learnt
that the Most High rules over human sovereignty and confers it on whom he pleases.

23 'And the order, "Leave the stump and roots of the tree", means that your kingdom will be kept for you until you come to understand that Heaven rules all.
24 May it please the king to accept my advice: by upright actions break with your sins, break with [j] your crimes by showing mercy to the poor, and so live long and peacefully.' Tb 12:9 Si 3:30

The dream comes true

25, 26 This all happened to King Nebuchadnezzar. •At the end of twelve months, while 27 strolling on the roof of the royal palace in Babylon, •the king was saying, 'Great Babylon! Was it not built by me as a royal residence, by the force of my might and 28 for the majesty of my glory?' [k] •The words were not out of his mouth when a voice came down from heaven:

'Of you, King Nebuchadnezzar, it is decreed:
the empire has been taken from you, 29 you will be driven from human society
and will make your home with the wild animals;
you will feed on grass, as oxen do,
and seven times will pass over you
until you have learnt
that the Most High rules over human sovereignty and gives it to whom he pleases.'

30 The words were immediately fulfilled: Nebuchadnezzar was driven from human society and ate grass as oxen do; he was drenched by the dew of heaven; his hair grew like an eagle's feathers, and his nails became like a bird's talons.
31 'When the time was over, [l] I, Nebuchadnezzar, raised my eyes to heaven: my reason returned. And I blessed the Most High, praising and glorifying him who lives for ever, 12:7 Si 18:1

for his empire is an everlasting empire, his kingship endures, age after age. 2:28h,44+ 32 All who dwell on earth count for nothing; Is 40:22–24 as he thinks fit, he disposes the army of heaven Mt 6:10 and those who dwell on earth.
No one can arrest his hand or ask him, "What have you done?" Jb 9:12 Qo 8:4 Is 45:9

33 'At that moment my reason returned and, for the honour of my royal state, my glory and splendour returned too. My counsellors and noblemen acclaimed me; I 34 was restored to my throne, and to my past greatness even more was added. •And now I, Nebuchadnezzar, Rm 9:20 praise, extol and glorify the King of heaven, all of whose deeds are true,

f. An angel, always alert to carry out the commands of God. Compare the wheels 'with eyes (or: reflections) all round' in Ezk 1:18, and the 'eyes of the Lord' in Zc 4:10[b]. The use of the term 'Watchful One', which in the Bible is confined to Dn, is very common in apocryphal works, notably the Book of Enoch, the Book of Jubilees, the Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, and the Damascus Document: it designates the archangels, not infrequently the fallen archangels. In later tradition the 'Watchful Ones' are guardian angels.

g. Or possibly 'Let his heart cease to be a human heart'.

h. Here the 'times', or indeterminate periods, are probably years.

i. The Watchers, or holy ones, merely proclaim what God has determined.

j. From the verb here translated as 'break with' is derived an Aramaic noun meaning 'salvation, redemption'; it is possible, therefore, to translate 'expiate your sins'. The 'upright actions' refer here to all that is upright ('just') in human relationships with God; such uprightness goes far beyond legal justice or purely human justice. In its narrow sense the word means 'good works', particularly almsgiving, as in Tb 12:9; 14:11.

k. Babylon was one of the wonders of the ancient world. Its name later became a symbol for imposing, though unstable, human achievements: it then came to symbolise human and demonic arrogance, the antithesis of the heavenly Jerusalem which is the city of God. Cf. Rv 14:8; 16:19; 17:5; 18:2,10,21, drawing on the prophetic tradition, see Is 21:9; etc. The whole of Dn 4 is intended to show how such arrogance is humbled: Nebuchadnezzar recovers his wits only when he acknowledges the true God.

l. In LXX, the king's recovery is due to his repentance and prayer: an angel appears to him in a dream and tells him that his kingdom will be restored to him.

3:27 Dt 32:4 all of whose ways are right, and who can humble those who walk in pride.'

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

5 King Belshazzar[a] gave a great banquet for his noblemen, a thousand of them, 1 and, in the presence of this thousand, he drank his wine. ·Having tasted the 2 wine, Belshazzar gave orders for the gold and silver vessels to be brought which his 1:2 father Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the sanctuary in Jerusalem, so that the king, his noblemen, his wives and the women who sang for him could drink out of them. ·The gold and silver vessels taken from the sanctuary of the Temple of God 3 in Jerusalem were brought in, and the king, his noblemen, his wives and the women who sang for him drank out of them. ·They drank their wine and praised their 4 ↗Rv 9:20 idols of gold and silver,[b] of bronze and iron, of wood and stone. ·Suddenly, the 5 fingers of a human hand appeared and began to write on the plaster of the palace wall, directly behind the lamp-stand; and the king could see the hand as it wrote.
The king turned pale with alarm: his hip-joints went slack and his knees began to 6 knock. ·He shouted for his soothsayers, Chaldaeans, and exorcists. And the king 7 said to the Babylonian sages, 'Anyone who can read this writing and tell me what 5:16.29 Est 8:15 it means shall be dressed in purple, and have a chain of gold put round his neck, and be one of the three men who govern the kingdom.'[c] ·The king's sages all 8 crowded forward, but they could neither read the writing nor explain to the king what it meant. ·Greatly alarmed, King Belshazzar turned even paler, and his 9 noblemen were equally disturbed. ·Then the queen, attracted by the noise made 10 by the king and his noblemen, came into the banqueting hall. 'May Your Majesty live for ever!' said the queen. 'Do not be alarmed, do not look so pale. ·In your 11 4:5 kingdom there is a man in whom lives the spirit of the holy gods. In your father's days he was known for a perception, intelligence and wisdom comparable to that of the gods. King Nebuchadnezzar, your father, made him head of the magicians, soothsayers, Chaldaeans and exorcists.[d] ·Since this man Daniel, whom the king 12 had renamed Belteshazzar, is filled with such a marvellous spirit and such knowledge and intelligence in interpreting dreams, solving enigmas and unravelling difficult problems, send for him; he will be able to tell you what this means.'

Daniel was brought into the king's presence; the king said to Daniel, 'Are you 13 the Daniel who was one of the Judaean exiles brought by my father the king from Judah? ·I am told that the spirit of the gods lives in you, and that you are known for 14 your perception, intelligence and marvellous wisdom. ·The sages and soothsayers 15 have already been brought to me to read this writing and tell me what it means, but they have been unable to reveal its meaning. ·I am told that you are able to give 16 interpretations and to unravel difficult problems, so if you can read the writing and tell me what it means, you shall be dressed in purple, and have a chain of gold put round your neck, and be one of the three men who govern the kingdom.'

Then Daniel spoke up in the presence of the king. 'Keep your gifts for yourself,' 17 2:6 he said, 'and give your rewards to others! I can certainly read the writing to the king and tell him what it means. ·Your Majesty, the Most High God gave 18 Nebuchadnezzar your father sovereignty, greatness, majesty and glory.[e] ·He 19 made him so great that all peoples, nations and languages shook with dread before him: he killed whom he pleased, spared whom he pleased, promoted whom he pleased, degraded whom he pleased. ·But because his heart grew swollen with 20 pride, and his spirit stiff with arrogance, he was deposed from his sovereign throne and stripped of his glory. ·He was driven from human society, his heart was more 21 like an animal's than a man's; he lived with the wild donkeys; he fed on grass like oxen; his body was drenched by the dew of heaven, until he had learnt that the Most High rules over human sovereignty and appoints whom he pleases to rule it.
But you, Belshazzar, who are his son, you have not humbled your heart, in spite 22 of knowing all this. •You have defied the Lord of heaven, you have had the vessels from his Temple brought to you, and you, your noblemen, your wives and the women singing for you have drunk your wine out of them. You have praised gods of gold and silver, of bronze and iron, of wood and stone, which can neither see, hear nor understand; but you have given no glory to the God in whose hands are your breath itself and all your fortunes. •That is why he has sent the hand which has written these words. •The writing reads: mene, mene, teqel and parsin.[f] The meaning of the words is this: mene: God has measured your sovereignty and put an end to it; •teqel: you have been weighed in the balance and found wanting; parsin: your kingdom has been divided and given to the Medes and the Persians.'

5:4 Jb 12:10 Ps 135:15–17 Is 40:19-20+

At Belshazzar's order Daniel was dressed in purple, a chain of gold was put round his neck and he was proclaimed as one of the three men who governed the kingdom.

That same night, the Chaldaean king Belshazzar was murdered, and Darius the Mede received the kingdom, at the age of sixty-two.[a]

DANIEL IN THE LION PIT

The satraps resent Daniel's promotion

It pleased Darius to appoint a hundred and twenty satraps over his kingdom for the various parts, •and over them three presidents—of whom Daniel was one—to whom the satraps were to be responsible. This was to safeguard the king's interests. This Daniel, by virtue of the marvellous spirit residing in him, was so evidently superior to the other presidents and satraps that the king considered appointing him to rule the whole kingdom. •The presidents and satraps, in consequence, started hunting for some affair of state by which they could discredit Daniel; but they could find nothing to his discredit, and no case of negligence; he was so punctilious that they could not find a single instance of maladministration or neglect. •These men then thought, 'We shall never find a way of discrediting Daniel unless we try something to do with the law of his God.' •The presidents and satraps then went in a body to the king. 'King Darius,' they said, 'live for ever! •We are all agreed, presidents of the realm, magistrates, satraps, councillors and governors, that the king should issue an edict enforcing the following regulation: Whoever within the next thirty days prays to anyone, divine or human, other than to yourself, Your Majesty, is to be thrown into the lions' den. •Your Majesty, ratify the edict at once by signing this document, making it unalterable, as befits the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked.' •King Darius accordingly signed the document embodying the edict.

5:7,16,29 Est 1:19k

5 a. The Babylonian form is Bel-shar-usur, 'May-Bel-protect-the-king'. The historical personage bearing this name is the son, not of Nebuchadnezzar, but of Nabonidus; he did not bear the title of 'king', see p. 1178.

b. 'and silver' Theod.; omitted by Aram.

c. The title 'second' to the King certainly existed in Babylon, there is never mention of a 'third'. The expression, obscure in Aram., probably means here, as in 5:29 and 6:3, that Daniel will hold office in a ministerial triumvirate, and not that he will rank third in the kingdom after the monarch.

d. Aram. adds 'your father, O King', omitted by versions.

e. Daniel summarises what has already been narrated in ch. 4.

f. The Aramaic repeats mene (unlike LXX, Theod., Vulg., Josephus; and vv. 26–28 also apparently presume three oracular words, not four). Aram. also reads parsin (not phares as in the textual witnesses just enumerated). These mysterious words may conceal the names of three oriental measures of weight, or coins: a mina, a shekel, and a half-mina (paratz), thus lending themselves to the successive play on words in vv. 26–28: mene suggesting the verb mana, to measure, teqel the verb shaqal, to weigh out, parsin suggesting both the verb paras, to divide, and the Persians. The interpretation of the sequence of terms is disputed: allusion to the decreasing influence of the three successive empires (of the Babylonians, 'Medes', and Persians); or of the three kings, Nebuchadnezzar, Evil-Merodach and Belshazzar; or else of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and the kings of the 'Medes and Persians'.

6 a. 'Darius the Mede' is unknown to history, and the Persian Cyrus had already conquered Media before he captured Babylon. See p. 1178.

Daniel continues to pray

When Daniel heard that the document had been signed, he retired to his house. 11 10 1 K 8:44,48 Tb 3:11 Ps 5:7;28:2; 55:17;138:2 The windows of his upstairs room faced towards Jerusalem. [b] Three times each day, he went down on his knees, praying and giving praise to God as he had always done. ·These men came along in a body and found Daniel praying and pleading 12 11 with God. ·They then went to the king and reminded him of the royal edict, 'Have 13 12 you not signed an edict forbidding anyone for the next thirty days to pray to anyone, divine or human, other than to yourself, Your Majesty, on pain of being thrown into the lions' den?' 'The decision stands', the king replied, 'as befits the law of the Medes and the Persians, which cannot be revoked.' ·They then said to 14 13 the king, 'Your Majesty, this man Daniel, one of the exiles from Judah, disregards both you and the edict which you have signed: he is at his prayers three times each day.' ·When the king heard these words he was deeply distressed and determined 15 14 to save Daniel; he racked his brains until sunset to find some way to save him. ·But 16 15 the men kept pressing the king, 'Your Majesty, remember that in conformity with the law of the Medes and the Persians, no edict or decree can be altered when once issued by the king.'

Daniel is thrown to the lions

The king then ordered Daniel to be brought and thrown into the lion pit. The king 17 16 said to Daniel, 'Your God, whom you have served so faithfully, will have to save you.' ·A stone was then brought and laid over the mouth of the pit; and the king 18 17 sealed it with his own signet and with that of his noblemen, so that there could be no going back on the original decision about Daniel. ·The king returned to his 19 18 palace, spent the night in fasting and refused to receive any of his concubines. [c] Sleep eluded him, ·and at the first sign of dawn he got up and hurried to the lion 20 19 pit. ·As he approached the pit he called in anguished tones to Daniel, 'Daniel, 21 20 servant of the living God! Has your God, whom you serve so faithfully, been able to save you from the lions?' ·Daniel answered the king, 'May Your Majesty live for 22 21 3:49 Tb 5:4b Heb 11:33 ever! ·My God sent his angel who sealed the lions' jaws; they did me no harm, 23 22 since in his sight I am blameless; neither have I ever done you any wrong, Your Majesty.' ·The king was overjoyed and ordered Daniel to be released from the pit. 24 23 Daniel was released from the pit and found to be quite unhurt, because he had trusted in his God. ·The king then sent for the men who had accused Daniel and 25 24 had them thrown into the lion pit, and their wives and children too; and before they reached the floor of the pit the lions had seized them and crushed their bones to pieces.

The king's profession of faith

King Darius then wrote to all nations, peoples and languages dwelling throughout 26 25
the world:

3:29/96 'May you prosper more and more! ·This is my decree: Throughout every 27 26 dominion of my realm, let all tremble with fear before the God of Daniel:

4:31 He is the living God, he endures for ever, his kingdom will never be destroyed and his empire never come to an end.
3:32seq./99seq. He saves, sets free, and works signs and wonders 28 in the heavens and on earth;
he has saved Daniel from the power of the lions.'

This Daniel flourished in the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus the Persian. [d] 29 28

DANIEL'S DREAM: THE FOUR BEASTS

The vision of the beasts,[a] the One most venerable and the son of man

2 ↗Rv 13

1 7 In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and visions that passed through his head as he lay in bed. He wrote the dream down, and 2 this is how the narrative began: ·Daniel said, 'I have been seeing visions in the 3 night. I saw that the four winds of heaven were stirring up the Great Sea; ·four 4 great beasts emerged from the sea, each different from the others. ·The first[b] was like a lion with eagle's wings and, as I looked, its wings were torn off, and it was lifted off the ground and set standing on its feet like a human; and it was given a 5 human heart. ·And there before me was a second beast,[c] like a bear, rearing up on one side, with three ribs in its mouth, between its teeth. "Up!" came the command 6 "Eat quantities of flesh!" ·After this I looked; and there before me was another beast,[d] like a leopard, and with four bird's wings on its flanks; it had four heads 7 and was granted authority. ·Next, in the visions of the night, I saw another vision:
there before me was a fourth beast,[e] fearful, terrifying, very strong; it had great iron teeth, and it ate its victims, crushed them, and trampled their remains underfoot. It was different from the previous beasts and had ten horns.

8 'While I was looking at these horns, I saw another horn sprouting among them, Zc 2:2 a little one;[f] three of the original horns were pulled out by the roots to make way for it; and in this horn I saw eyes like human eyes, and a mouth full of boasting.[g] ↗Rv 13:5

9 While I was watching, thrones were set in place[h] ↗Rv 20:4
and one most venerable took his seat.
His robe was white as snow, Mk 9:3
the hair of his head as pure as wool. ↗Rv 1:14
His throne was a blaze of flames, its wheels were a burning fire.
10 A stream of fire poured out, Ps 50:3 issuing from his presence.
A thousand thousand waited on him, ↗Rv 5:11 ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him.
The court was in session Jn 5:22 and the books lay open.[i] ↗Rv 20:12

11 'I went on watching: then, because of the noise made by the boastings of the horn, as I watched, the beast was put to death, and its body destroyed and ↗Rv 19:20 12 committed to the flames. ·The other beasts were deprived of their empire, but received a lease of life[j] for a season and a time.

b. The custom of praying with the face towards Jerusalem dates at least from the Exile.

c. Translation conj.; others favour 'musical instruments'.

d. 'flourished' Aram.; 'was placed over the kingdom' LXX. • In LXX the chapter ends with the death of Darius and the accession of Cyrus the Persian.

7 a. The vision corresponds to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar in ch. 2; the four metals (the kingdoms) of the dream, shattered by the stone, 2:28h, are now four beasts succeeded by the Son of man. The eschatological significance underlying this vision of human history is even more clearly brought out in Rv 13.

b. The Babylonian empire.

c. The kingdom of the Medes: the author sees the Medes as immediate successors to the Babylonians, see 6:1a.

d. The Persian empire.

e. The empire of Alexander (d. 323) and his successors, cf. 2:40; 8:5; 11:3. The ten horns are kings of the Seleucid dynasty. The 'horn' is frequently used as a symbol of physical strength and/or political power, Dt 33:17; 1 K 22:11; Ps 75:5; 92:10.

f. Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175–164) who came to power only after getting rid of several rival claimants.

g. Referring to the eloquent blasphemies of Antiochus, v. 25; 11:36; 1 M 1:21,24,45 and Rv 13:5.

h. For judges. The holy ones of God are privileged to sit in judgement at his side according to ancient Jewish tradition (the Book of Enoch), and the promises of Jesus are even more explicit, Mt 19:28; Lk 22:30; Rv 3:21; 20:4. The wheeled and blazing throne of God recalls the divine chariot described in Ezk 1.

i. The book in which human actions, good and bad, are recorded, Jr 17:1; Ps 40:8; 56:8; Ml 3:16; Lk 10:20; Rv 20:12i. On the Book of Life, see 12:1a.

j. That the other empires should survive—for an indeterminate period—offers no further danger to the faith, once the People of God cease to be subject to them.

I was gazing into the visions of the night, 13 ↗Mt 8:20h; 24:30;26:64par. ↗Rv 1:7;14:14 when I saw, coming on the clouds of heaven, as it were a son of man. [k]
He came to the One most venerable and was led into his presence.
On him was conferred rule, 14 honour and kingship,
and all peoples, nations and languages became his servants.
2:28h,44+ Ps 110:1–2,2a Mt 4:17f His rule is an everlasting rule which will never pass away, and his kingship will never come to an end.

The interpretation of the vision

'I, Daniel, was deeply disturbed and the visions that passed through my head 15 alarmed me. [l] •So I approached one of those who were standing by and asked him 16 about all this. And in reply he revealed to me what these things meant. •"These 17 four great beasts are four kings who will rise up from the earth. •Those who receive 18 Ac 9:13g royal power are the holy ones [m] of the Most High, and kingship will be theirs for ever, for ever and ever." •Then I asked about the fourth beast, different from all 19 the rest, very terrifying, with iron teeth and bronze claws; it ate its victims, crushed them, and trampled their remains underfoot; •and about the ten horns on its 20 head—and why the other horn sprouted and the three original horns fell, and why this horn had eyes and a mouth full of boasting, and why it looked more impressive ↗Rv 11:7;13:7 than its fellows. •This was the horn I had watched making war on the holy ones and 21 proving the stronger, •until the coming of the One most venerable who gave 22 ↗Rv 20:4 •Mk 1:15 judgement in favour of the holy ones [n] of the Most High, when the time came for the holy ones to assume kingship. •This is what he said: 23

"The fourth beast
is to be a fourth kingdom on earth, different from all other kingdoms.
It will devour the whole world, trample it underfoot and crush it.
↗Rv 17:12 As for the ten horns: from this kingdom 24 will rise ten kings, and another after them;
this one will be different from the previous ones and will bring down three kings; 11:36 he will insult the Most High 25 and torment the holy ones of the Most High.
He will plan to alter the seasons and the Law, [o]
and the Saints will be handed over to him 8:14;12:7 ↗Rv 12:14 for a time, two times, and half a time. [p]
But the court will sit, and he will be stripped of his royal authority 26 which will be finally destroyed and reduced to nothing.
And kingship and rule 27 and the splendours of all the kingdoms under heaven will be given to the people of the holy ones of the Most High, 2 S 7:16 whose royal power is an eternal power, whom every empire will serve and obey."

'Here the narrative ends. 28

'I, Daniel, was greatly disturbed in mind, and I grew pale; but I kept these things to myself.'

DANIEL'S VISION: THE RAM AND THE HE-GOAT

The vision

8 In the third year of King Belshazzar [a] a vision appeared to me, Daniel, after the one that had originally appeared to me. [b] ·I gazed at the vision, and as I gazed I found myself in Susa, [c] the citadel in the province of Elam; gazing at the vision, I found myself at the Ulai Gate. [d] ·I raised my eyes to look, and I saw a ram [e] standing in front of the gate. It had two horns; both were tall, but one taller than the other, and the one that rose the higher was the second. [f] ·I saw the ram butting westwards, northwards and southwards. No animal could stand up to it, nothing could escape its power. It did as it pleased and became strong. (Hebrew)

This is what I observed: a he-goat [g] from the west, encroaching over the entire surface of the world though never touching the ground, and between its eyes the goat had one majestic horn. [h] ·It advanced on the two-horned ram, which I had seen standing in front of the gate, and charged at it in the full force of its fury. ·I saw it reach the ram; it was enraged with the ram and struck it, breaking both its horns, so that the ram was not strong enough to hold its ground; it threw it to the ground and trampled it underfoot; no one was there to rescue the ram. ·The he-goat then grew more powerful than ever; but at the height of its strength the great horn snapped, and in its place sprouted four majestic horns, pointing to the four winds of heaven. [i]

From one of these, the small one, sprang a horn which grew to great size towards south and east and towards the Land of Splendour. [j] ·It grew right up to the armies of heaven and flung armies and stars [k] to the ground, and trampled them underfoot. 11:16,41 Zc 7:14 ↗Rv 12:4

It even challenged the power of the Prince of the army; [l] it abolished the perpetual sacrifice and overthrew the foundation of his sanctuary, ·and the army too; over the sacrifice it installed iniquity [m] and flung truth to the ground; the horn was active and successful. 11:31

I heard a holy one [n] speaking, and another holy one say to the speaker, [o] 'How long is this vision to be—of perpetual sacrifice, [p] of horrifying iniquity, of sanctuary 12:6 ↗Rv 6:10

k. Like the Hebr. ben 'adam, the Aram. bar nasha' used here, has the primary meaning 'man', cf. Ps 8:4. In Ezk, God addresses the prophet thus. But here in Dn the expression allusively signifies something further. That it indicates an individual is attested by early Jewish apocryphal writings (Enoch, 2 Esd) inspired by this passage, as also by rabbinical tradition from the 2nd to the 9th centuries. Jesus also uses the expression himself, see Mt 8:20h. That it has a collective sense also is deduced from v. 18 (and v. 22) where the 'son of man' and 'the holy ones of the Most High' seem more or less identified. But the collective (and equally messianic) sense is an extension of the individual sense: the 'son of man' being leader, representative and exemplar of the 'holy ones of the Most High'.

l. After 'Daniel', two incomprehensible Aramaic words are omitted here, as in LXX.

m. 'the holy ones' are the holy people of God, as in 8:24; Is 4:3; see Ex 19:6c; Nb 16:3.

n. Or possibly 'delegated judgement to the holy ones'.

o. Allusion to the hellenising policy of Antiochus Epiphanes, and in particular to his ban on observance of the Sabbath and feastdays, cf. 1 M 1:41–53.

p. See 4:13h. Three and a half years (the half-week of years of 9:27) correspond approximately to the duration of the persecution under Antiochus. This figure (also expressed as 42 months each of 30 days—or as 1260 days) is adopted in Rv 11:2–3; 12:14; 13:5 for the duration of the Roman persecution; see also Lk 4:25 and Jm 5:17. In all these texts, as throughout Dn, the figure stands for a period of distress permitted by God for a limited time, after which there will be relief for the faithful.

8 a. Hebrew text begins again at 8:1. On Belshazzar see 5:1a.

b. The vision of ch. 7, of which the prophecies are presented under a different form in ch. 8.

c. One of the royal residences of the Achmenid dynasty. It is not clear whether Daniel should be understood as actually being in Susa, or if that is part of the vision.

d. The River Ulai flows through Susa. • 'Gate' is the conj. translation, supported by versions, of a word which occurs only here and in vv. 3 and 6. Others translate 'bank' or 'torrent'.

e. On the symbolism of rams and he-goats, see Ezk 34:17seq. and Zc 10:3.

f. The taller horn represents the power of the Persians triumphing over the power of the Medes, then succeeding and absorbing it, v. 20.

g. Alexander, cf. v. 21 and 2:40; 7:7; 11:3.

h. Trans. conj.; perhaps merely 'protuberance'.

i. Death of Alexander and division of his empire. Of his heirs, only the Seleucids are considered here, as in 7:7; but in this passage, unlike 7:7, only Antiochus Epiphanes is mentioned (v. 9), not his predecessors.

j. Palestine.

k. The stars symbolise the People of God, 12:3 (see also Mt 13:43).

l. God himself.

m. The Hebr. is obscure and the translation approximate. It may mean either that 'iniquity' (i.e. 'the appalling abomination') has been substituted for the sacrifice in the Temple, or else that the persecutor has decided that sacrifice is henceforth to be reckoned a crime.

n. Probably an angel, see 4:10f.

o. lit. 'to a certain one who spoke'. The questions over which the seer is pondering are presented as part of a mysterious dialogue; for this device see also Zc 1:8–17.

p. LXX adds 'abolished'.

The angel Gabriel interprets the vision

As I, Daniel, gazed at the vision and tried to understand it, I saw someone standing 15 in front of me who looked like a man. ·I heard a human voice cry over[t] the Ulai, 16 9:21–23 Lk 1:19.26 'Gabriel, tell him the meaning of the vision!' ·He approached the place where I 17 10:15–19 Ezk 2:1 Rv 1:17 was standing; as he approached, I was seized with terror and fell prostrate on the ground. 'Son of man,' he said to me, 'understand this: the vision shows the time of the End.' ·He was still speaking, when I fainted, face downwards on the ground. 18
He touched me, however, and raised me to my feet. ·'Come,' he said, 'I shall tell 19 Am 5:18m you what is going to happen when the Retribution[u] is over, about the final times.
11:2a As for the ram which you saw, its two horns are the kings of Media and of Persia. 20
The hairy he-goat is the king of Greece, the large horn between its eyes is the first 21 king. ·The horn which snapped and the four horns which sprouted in its place are 22 four kingdoms rising from his nation but not having his strength.

'And at the end of their reign, when the measure of their sins is full,[v] 23
a king will arise, a proud-faced, ingenious-minded man.
His power will grow greater and greater, 24 though not through any power of his own;[w] he will plot[x] incredible schemes.
he will succeed in whatever he undertakes,
he will destroy powerful men 7:18 and the holy ones, God's people.
Such will be his resourcefulness of mind 25 that all his treacherous activities will succeed.
He will grow arrogant of heart and destroy many people by taking them unawares.
He will challenge the power of the Prince of princes 2:34 but, without any human intervention,[y] he will be broken.
↗Rv 19:9; 21:5;22:6 The vision of the evenings and the mornings which has been revealed 26 is true,
12:4,9–13 ↗Rv 10:4 but you must keep the vision secret, for there are still many days to go.'[z]

At this I, Daniel, lost consciousness; I was ill for several days. Then I got up to 27 discharge my duties in the king's service, keeping the vision a secret and still not understanding what it meant.

r. That is to say, either 2300 days, or 1150 days. If the expression refers to the two daily sacrifices suspended throughout the persecution, as may be the case, the period would be not 2300 days but 1150. But either figure is remote from the three and a half years (1260 days) of 7:25, and the meaning remains obscure.

w. The persecutor is the instrument of God's retribution.

x. 'plot' conj.; 'destroy' Hebr.

y. Possibly a dual allusion here: no one killed Antiochus, who is said to have died of melancholy, 1 M 6:8–16; 2 M 9. The death of persecutors, like their triumph, v. 24, is in the hands of God alone; cf. 2:34.

z. Unlike the two prophecies of Ezk 12:21–28 which are fulfilled almost immediately, Daniel's visions are to be realised only after a period the duration of which is not made clear, cf. 12:4.9–13.

9 a. See 6:1a and 7:5c.

b. The prayer that follows includes many biblical reminiscences. It has affinities with that of Azariah, 3:24–45; Ba 1 and 2 are modelled on it.

c. lit. 'the judges who judged us'.

d. In Jr 1:11–12, cf. 31:28; 44:27, the symbol of the almond tree (sheqed) introduces the prophecy of Yahweh who watches (shoqed) for the moment to make his word come true, whether for good or evil.

e. i.e. in the name of the retributive justice manifest in the actions by which you have rescued your people in the past.

f. Cf. 1 K 8:28; Ne 1:6,11; Ps 130:2.

g. 'your own sake' following Theod. and v. 19; 'because of my Lord' Hebr.

h. lit. 'flying in flight touched me'.

i. 'He came' LXX and Syr.; 'He told me' Hebr.

THE GREAT VISION

THE TIME OF RETRIBUTION

The vision of the man dressed in linen

10 In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia, a revelation was made to Daniel 1 known as Belteshazzar, a true revelation of a great conflict.[a] He grasped 9:23 the meaning of the revelation; what it meant was disclosed to him in a vision.
9:3 At that time, I, Daniel, was doing a three-week penance; •I ate no agreeable 2, 3 food, touched no meat or wine, and did not anoint myself, until these three weeks were over. •On the twenty-fourth day of the first month, as I stood on the bank of 4 8:2 that great river, the Tigris, •I raised my eyes to look about me, and this is what I 5 saw:

↗Rv 1:13–15 Ezk 1 Mt 28:3 A man dressed in linen, with a belt of pure gold round his waist:
his body was like beryl, 6 his face looked like lightning, his eyes were like fiery torches, his arms and his face had the gleam of burnished bronze, Ezk 1:24 the sound of his voice was like the roar of a multitude.

Ac 9:7 I, Daniel, alone saw the apparition; the men who were with me did not see the 7 vision, but so great a trembling overtook them that they fled to hide. •I was left 8 alone, gazing on this great vision; I was powerless, my appearance was changed and contorted; my strength deserted me.

The apparition of the angel

9 I heard a voice speaking, and at the sound of the voice I fell fainting, face 8:16–18
10 downwards on the ground. ·I felt a hand touching me, setting my knees and my 9:21–23 11 hands trembling. ·He said, 'Daniel, you are a man specially chosen; understand ↗Rv 1:17 the words that I am about to say; stand up; I have been sent to you now.' He said 9:23;10:19 12 this, and I stood up trembling. ·He then said, 'Daniel, do not be afraid: from that first day when, the better to understand, you resolved to mortify yourself before God, your words have been heard; and your words are the reason why I have 13 come. ·The Prince of the kingdom of Persia has been resisting me for twenty-one days, but Michael,[b] one of the Chief Princes, came to my assistance. I have left Jude 9 14 him[c] confronting the kings of Persia ·and have come to tell you what will happen to Rv 12:7 your people in the final days. For here is a new vision about those days.' Gn 49:1

15 When he had said these things to me, I prostrated myself on the ground, without 16 saying a word; ·then someone looking like a man touched my lips. I opened my 7:13 mouth to speak, and I said to the person standing in front of me, 'My lord, anguish Is 6:7 17 overcomes me at this vision, and my strength deserts me. ·How can your servant Jr 1:9
18 speak to my lord now that I have no strength left and my breath fails me?' ·Once 19 again, the person like a man touched me; he gave me strength. ·'Do not be afraid,' he said, 'you are a man specially chosen; peace be with you; play the man, be strong!' And as he spoke to me I felt strong again and said, 'Let my lord speak, you have given me strength.'

The prelude to the prophecy[d]

20a, 21a He then said, 'Do you know why I have come to you? ·It is to tell you what is 20b written in the Book of Truth. ·I must go back to fight the Prince of Persia; when I 21b have overcome him, the Prince of Javan[e] will come next. ·In all this, there is no one to lend me support except Michael your Prince,

1, 2 11 on whom I rely to give me support and to reinforce me. ·And now I shall tell you the truth about these things.

j. The word 'man' is not in the text, but see 10:11,19.

k. As in the adjacent chapters, the following prophecy refers to the persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes, but here the style is allusive and enigmatic (no proper names are mentioned, and the figures given are conventional and approximate). This suggests that the text has a reference beyond the immediate historical one.

l. The 'weeks' are 'weeks of years'; the number 70 implies completion. The period is computed from the date of the revelation made to Jeremiah, see v. 25, to the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the return of the exiles, an event which 2 Ch 36:22–23 (= Ezr 1:1–2) sees as the realisation of Jeremiah's prophecy, brought about by the liberating decree of Cyrus in 538 BC.

m. 'To seal' means sometimes 'to put an end to', sometimes 'to guarantee'; here it has the comprehensive sense of 'fulfilling'.

n. Either the altar, or the Temple, or the high priest, see 1 Ch 23:13: the re-establishment of the priesthood coincides with the restoration of altar and Temple; in this prophecy, no distinction is made.

o. Messiah or 'Anointed One', see Ex 30:22d; 1 S 9:26n; Is 45:1.

p. Reconstruction of Jerusalem in the Persian period.

q. This Anointed One may, following Theod., be identified with the high priest Onias III, cf. 2 M 4:30–38; deposed c. 175 and assassinated by the followers of Antiochus Epiphanes; he could also be the Prince of the Covenant in 11:22.

r. A word seems to be missing from the text. Theod. supplies 'fault'. Others suggest 'successor'.

s. i.e. by God, see 8:25y.

t. The hellenising faction among the Jews, see 11:32; 1 M 1:43; 2 M 4:10. Those who supported foreign ideas and ways were to be the bane of the orthodox throughout the Maccabaean period.

u. The parallel passages show that this is the work of the blasphemers: it does not mean therefore the substitution of the sacrifice of the new covenant for that of the old.

v. 'of the Temple' is not in the Hebr., but the sense is clear.

w. lit. 'desolating' or 'horrifying abomination'. The phrase (shiqqutzim meshomem) evokes firstly the idols or 'Baals' of antiquity, the worship of which by Israel was condemned by the prophets (shiqqutz, 'abomination' being a contemptuous designation of Baal, and shomem a malicious pun of the Phoenician title baal shamen 'king of the heavens'); secondly, Zeus Olympios to whom the Temple of Jerusalem was dedicated by the persecutor, see 2 M 6:2.

10 a. lit. 'great legion (or: army)'. The reference is apparently to the war waged by the angels, see vv. 12–21.

b. The angel of Yahweh who confronts Satan in Zc 3:1–2, is called Michael ('Who-is-like-God?') in Jude 9, where he leaves Satan's condemnation to God. The same conflict is described in Rv 12:7–12. Michael is the guardian angel of the people of God (v. 21 and 12:1), see Ex 23:20i. The Prince of Persia is apparently one of the guardian angels of the nations hostile to Israel. This mysterious conflict between the angels emphasises that the fate of nations is a secret from these protectors, until God chooses to reveal it.

c. 'I have left him' Gk; 'I was left' Hebr., but the verb form is unusual.

d. The order of the following verses is doubtful. In 11:1[a] we omit 'And as for me, in the first year of Darius the Mede' Hebr.

e. Javan (Ionia) stands for Greece.

Early struggles between Seleucids and Ptolemies

'Three more kings[a] are going to rise in Persia; a fourth will come and be richer than all the others, and when, thanks to his wealth, he has grown powerful, he will make war on all the kingdoms of Greece. ·A mighty king will rise and govern a vast 3 empire and do whatever he pleases. ·But once he has come to power, his empire 4 will be broken up and parcelled out to the four winds of heaven, though not to his descendants: [b] it will not be ruled as he ruled it, for his sovereignty will be uprooted and will pass to others than his own descendants.

'The king of the south will grow powerful, but one of his princes will grow more 5 powerful still, with an empire greater than his own.[c] ·Some years later, these will 6 conclude a treaty[d] and, to ratify the agreement, the daughter of the king of the south will go to the king of the north. Her arm will not, however, retain its strength, nor his posterity endure: she will be handed over, she, her escorts and her child,[e] and he who has had authority over her.[f] In due time ·a sprig from her roots will rise 7 in his place, will march on the defences, force the stronghold of the king of the north, and succeed in overcoming them.[g] ·He will even carry off all their gods, 8 their statues, their precious gold and silver vessels as booty to Egypt.[h] For some years he will leave the king of the north in peace, ·but the latter will invade the 9 kingdom of the king of the south, then retire to his own country. ·His sons[i] will 10 next be on the march, mustering a host of powerful forces; and he[j] will advance, deploy, break through and march on the southern stronghold once again. ·The 11 king of the south will fly into a rage and set out to give battle to the king of the north, who will have an immense army on his side, but this army will be defeated by him. ·The army will be annihilated; he will be triumphant; he will overthrow 12 tens of thousands; yet he will have no enduring strength. ·The king of the north 13 will come back, having recruited an even larger army than before, and finally, after some years, he will advance a second time with a great army and plentiful supplies.
At that time, many will take up arms against the king of the south, and the more 14 violent of your own people will rebel in the hope of realising the vision; but they will fail. ·The king of the north will then come and throw up siege-works to capture 15 a strongly fortified city. The forces of the south will not stand their ground; the pick of the people will not be strong enough to resist. ·The invader will do as he 16 8:9j pleases, no one will be able to resist him: he will take his stand in the Land of Splendour, destruction in his hands. ·He will set about conquering his entire 17 kingdom, but will then make a treaty with him and, to overthrow the kingdom,[k] give him a woman's hand;[l] but this will not last or be to his advantage. ·He will 18 next turn to the coasts and islands[m] and conquer many of them, but a magistrate will put a stop to his outrages in such a way that he will be unable to repay outrage for outrage.

'He will then turn on the strongholds of his own country, but will stumble, fall, 19 and never be seen again.[n] ·In his place there will rise a man[o] who will send an 20 extortioner to despoil the royal splendour; in a few days he will be shattered, though neither publicly nor in battle.[p]

Antiochus Epiphanes

'In his place will rise a wretch:[q] royal honours will not be given to him, but rather 21 he will insinuate himself into them at his pleasure and will gain possession of the kingdom by intrigue. ·Armies will be utterly routed and crushed by him, the Prince 22 of the covenant[r] too. ·Through his alliances he will act treacherously and, despite 23 the smallness of his following, grow ever stronger. ·At his pleasure, he will invade 24 rich provinces, acting as his fathers or his fathers' fathers never acted, distributing among them plunder, spoil and wealth,[s] plotting his stratagems against the fortresses—for a time.

'He will summon up his might and courage against the king of the south[t] with a 25 great army. The king of the south will march to war with a huge and powerful 26 army but will not succeed, since he will be outwitted by trickery. ·Those who shared his food will ruin him; his army will be swept away, many will fall in the slaughter.

27 'The two kings, seated at one table, hearts bent on evil, will tell their lies; but 28 they will not have their way, for the appointed time is still to come. ·Then the wretch will return greatly enriched to his own country, his heart set against the 29 holy covenant; he will take action and then return to his own country. ·In due time, he will make his way southwards again,[u] but this time the outcome will not be as 30 before. ·The ships of the Kittim[v] will oppose him, and he will be worsted. He will retire and take furious action against the holy covenant and, as before, will favour 2 M 5:11 those who forsake that holy covenant.[w] 31 'Forces of his will come and profane the Citadel-Sanctuary;[x] they will abolish 8:11
32 the perpetual sacrifice and install the appalling abomination there. ·Those who 9:27w break the covenant he will seduce[y] by his blandishments, but the people who know 33 their God will stand firm and take action. ·Those of the people who are wise 12:3 leaders will instruct many; for some days, however, they will stumble[z] from sword 34 and flame, captivity and pillage. ·And thus stumbling, little help will they receive, 35 though many will be scheming in their support.[aa] ·Of the wise leaders some will

11 a. Evidently three Persian kings. 'Darius the Mede' being excluded. The 'fourth' is less probably the last of the Achaemenids (Darius III Codomannus, 336–330, defeated by Alexander), more probably Xerxes the Great, 486–465, whose expedition against Greece took place in 480.

b. After Alexander's death, his empire was shared out, not among his sons but among his generals (the Diadochoi or 'successors'), see 2:40seq.; 7:7; 8:8.

c. 'than his own', lit. 'than his empire' conj.; 'his empire' Hebr. • The 'King of the south' is Ptolemy I Soter (323–285), the first sovereign of the hellenistic dynasty in Egypt. The 'prince' is Seleucus I Nicator (305/4–281) who initially supported Ptolemy I to defeat Antigonus (the battle of Gaza, 312, from which dates the Seleucid era), and subsequently founded his own huge Asiatic empire.

d. Antiochus II Theos (261–246) having made an alliance with Ptolemy II Philadelphos (285–246) married Ptolemy's daughter Berenice, in about 253. Laodice (wife and half-sister of Antiochus) was then divorced, but being later taken back, poisoned her husband and Berenice, as well as the latter's son by Antiochus, and members of their entourage. Seleucus II Callinicus (246–226), Laodice's son, was soon attacked by Ptolemy III Euergetes (246–221) who returned to Egypt loaded with booty but did not press his victory home. Reference is made in v. 9 to a counter-offensive by Seleucus for which there is little evidence in historical sources.

e. 'his posterity' Theod., Symm., 'his arm' Hebr. • 'her child' hayyaledah conj.; Hebr. hayyoledah 'her parent'; Syr. 'her children'.

f. Her husband.

g. lit. 'he will deal with them and will prevail'.

h. The first explicit mention of 'Egypt' in the Hebr., hitherto called 'the south'; for 'the south', LXX reads 'Egypt' throughout.

i. Seleucus III Ceraunus (226–223) and Antiochus III the Great (223–187).

j. The following verses recount the triumphs of Antiochus the Great, 'the King of the north'. In 220, he undertook the conquest of Palestine; Ptolemy IV Philopator (221–205) immediately raised an army of mercenaries and Egyptian troops and marched to the frontier where he inflicted heavy losses on Antiochus (the battle of Raphia, v. 11), but the victory was not pressed home, v. 12, and for 8 years Antiochus waged unrelenting war for the recovery of his Asiatic empire. He mounted an attack in force, v. 13, when Ptolemy V Epiphanes (204–180) came to the throne; this time he was reinforced by an alliance with Philip V of Macedon and by internal revolt in Egypt. The prolonged siege of Gaza is referred to in v. 15. An Egyptian counter-offensive in Judaea only slightly delayed the entry of Antiochus into Jerusalem, vv. 15–16.

k. 'will make a treaty with him' conj.; Hebr. corrupt. 'the kingdom', lit. 'her', as also 'she will not last nor will she be to his advantage'; but it is impossible to understand this as referring to Cleopatra: the concluding words of this obscure verse must allude to the renewed outbreak of hostilities owing to the well-founded mistrust on the Egyptian side.

l. lit. 'the daughter of women'. Antiochus, foreseeing intervention from Rome, decided on an alliance with Egypt, becoming betrothed to Cleopatra, Ptolemy's daughter: the marriage took place at Raphia in 193.

m. The towns of the seaboard: taking advantage of the Egyptian treaty, Antiochus made his way back to Asia Minor and, defying Roman threats, occupied Greek and Egyptian towns. But in 189 he suffered an overwhelming defeat at the hands of the consul Lucius Cornelius Scipio (the 'magistrate' of v. 18) at Magnesia.

n. To pay the huge war-debt imposed on him, Antiochus undertook an expedition to Elymais to plunder one of the temples of Bel, in the course of which he met his death in 187.

o. Seleucus IV Philopator (187–175), son of Antiochus the Great; he commissioned Heliodorus, one of his ministers, to confiscate the treasures of the Jerusalem Temple: the supernatural vision which thwarted this plan is described in 2 M 3. • The end of the phrase is uncertain and the translation conjectural.

p. Heliodorus had him assassinated.

q. Antiochus IV Epiphanes (175–164) who seized the throne by supplanting Demetrius, the young son of his brother Seleucus IV.

r. The high priest Onias III, see 9:26q.

s. Text adds 'among them', i.e. his own supporters.

t. The first campaign of Antiochus against Ptolemy VI Philometor of Egypt (son of his sister Cleopatra); Ptolemy, misled by his advisers, was captured by Antiochus who simulated friendship but plundered Egypt. On the way back, Antiochus savagely ill-treated the Jews, v. 28.

u. The second Egyptian campaign of Antiochus was to end in ignominy. The Roman consul Gaius Popilius Laenas arrived at Alexandria and informed Antiochus of the Senate's order to withdraw.

v. The Vulg. translates 'Romans', and this is certainly the meaning here. Originally the term 'Kittim' meant Cyprus, but the Bible uses it also of the regions bordering the Mediterranean, particularly in the West, cf. Gn 10:4; Nb 24:24; Is 23:1.12; Jr 2:10; Ezk 27:6 (Vulg. 'Italia').

w. The renegade Jews won over to the hellenistic way of life; see 1 M 1:11–15,43,52.

x. Cf. the 'citadel of the Temple' in Ne 2:8, see also 1 M 1:31,33.

y. lit. 'make hypocrites of'.

z. Play on words in Hebr. between 'stumble' ksl and 'learned' skl, as also in v. 35.

aa. Possibly referring to the early successes of Judas Maccabaeus in rallying those who remained staunch to Judaism.

12:10 stumble, and so a number of them will be purged, purified and made clean—until the time of the End, for the appointed time is still to come.

'The king will do as he pleases, growing more and more arrogant, considering 36 himself greater than all the gods; [bb] he will utter incredible blasphemies against the 2:47+;8:19 God of gods, and he will thrive until the wrath reaches bursting point; for what has
↗2 Th 2:4 been decreed will certainly be fulfilled. ·Heedless of his fathers' gods, heedless of 37
Rv 13:5 the god whom women love, heedless of any god whatever, he will consider himself greatest of all. [cc] ·Instead of them, he will honour the god of fortresses, will honour 38 a god unknown to his ancestors with gold and silver, precious stones and valuable presents. ·He will use the people of an alien god [dd] to defend the fortresses; he will 39 confer great honours on those whom he acknowledges, by giving them wide authority and by parcelling the country out for rent. [ee]

THE TIME OF THE END

The end of the persecutor

'When the time comes for the End, the king of the south will try conclusions with 40 him; but the king of the north will come storming down on him with chariots, cavalry, and a large fleet. He will invade countries, overrun them and drive on.
8:9j He will invade the Land of Splendour, and many will fall; but Edom, Moab, and 41 what remains [ff] of the sons of Ammon will escape him.

'He will reach out to attack countries: Egypt will not escape him. ·The gold and 42, 43 silver treasures and all the valuables of Egypt will lie in his power. Libyans and Cushites [gg] will be at his feet: ·but reports coming from the East and the north will 44 worry him, and in great fury he will set out to bring ruin and complete destruction to many. ·He will pitch the tents of his royal headquarters between the sea and the 45 mountains of the Holy Splendour. Yet he will come to his end [hh]—there will be no help for him.'

10:13b 12 'At that time Michael will arise—the great Prince, defender of your people. 1

The sealed prophecy

I, Daniel, then looked and saw two other people standing, one on the near bank of 5 10:5 the river, the other on the far. ·One of them said to the man dressed in linen who 6 was standing further up the stream, 'How long until these wonders take place?' ·I 7 then said, 'My lord, what is to be the outcome?' ·'Go, Daniel,' he said. 'These 9 words are to remain secret and sealed until the time of the End. ·Many will be 10 and you will rise for your reward at the end of time.'[g]

SUSANNA AND THE JUDGEMENT OF DANIEL[a]

1, 2 13 In Babylon there lived a man named Joakim. ·He was married to a woman called Susanna daughter of Hilkiah, a woman of great beauty; and she was 3 God-fearing, for ·her parents were worthy people and had instructed their daugh-4 ter in the Law of Moses. ·Joakim was a very rich man and had a garden by his house; he used to be visited by a considerable number of the Jews, since he was 5 held in greater respect than any other man. ·Two elderly men had been selected from the people, that year, to act as judges. Of such the Lord had said, 'Wickedness has come to Babylon through the elders and judges posing as guides to the people.'[b] 6 These men were often at Joakim's house, and all who were engaged in litigation
7 used to come to them. ·At midday, when the people had gone away, Susanna
8 would take a walk in her husband's garden. ·The two elders, who used to watch 9 her every day as she came in to take her walk, gradually began to desire her. ·They threw reason aside, making no effort to turn their eyes to Heaven, and forgetting 10 the demands of virtue. ·Both were inflamed by passion for her, but they hid their 11 desire from each other, ·for they were ashamed to admit the longing to sleep with 12, 13 her, ·but they made sure of watching her every day. ·One day, having parted with the words, 'Let us go home, then, it is time for the midday meal,' they went off in 14 different directions, ·only to retrace their steps and find themselves face to face again. Obliged then to explain, they admitted their desire and agreed to look for 15 an opportunity of surprising her alone. ·So they waited for a favourable moment; and one day Susanna came as usual, accompanied only by two young maidservants.
16 The day was hot and she wanted to bathe in the garden. ·There was no one about 17 except the two elders, spying on her from their hiding place. ·She said to the servants, 'Bring me some oil and balsam and shut the garden door while I bathe.' 18 They did as they were told, shutting the garden door and going back to the house by a side entrance to fetch what she had asked for; they knew nothing about the elders, for they had concealed themselves.
19 Hardly were the maids gone than the two elders sprang up and rushed upon her.
20 'Look,' they said, 'the garden door is shut, no one can see us. We want to have 21 you, so give in and let us! ·Refuse, and we shall both give evidence that a young 22 man was with you and that this was why you sent your maids away.' ·Susanna

bb. Like Alexander, 8:4 and 11:3, and Antiochus the Great, 11:16, but unlike the Achaemenids who in their inscriptions consistently ascribe their success to the will of Ahura Mazda. Antiochus in his old age had himself represented on his coins with the features of Zeus Olympios.

cc. The successors of Seleucus I honoured Apollo as their principal deity; Antiochus Epiphanes was a devotee also of Zeus Olympios, cf. v. 36, whom he identified with Jupiter Capitolinus, v. 38. The 'god whom women love' is Adonis (Tammuz), see Ezk 8:14.

Lv 20:10 Dt 22:22 Jn 8:4–5 sighed. 'I am trapped,' she said, 'whatever I do. If I agree, it means death for me;[c] if I resist, I cannot get away from you. 23 But I prefer to fall innocent into your power than to sin in the eyes of the Lord.' 24 She then cried out as loud as she could. The two elders began shouting too, putting the blame on her, 25 and one of them ran to open the garden door. 26 The household, hearing the shouting in the garden, rushed out by the side entrance to see what had happened to her. 27 Once the elders had told their story, the servants were thoroughly taken aback, since nothing of this sort had ever been said of Susanna.

28 Next day a meeting was held at the house of her husband Joakim. The two elders arrived, full of their wicked plea against Susanna, to have her put to death. 29 They Nb 5:18–22 addressed the company, 'Summon Susanna daughter of Hilkiah and wife of Joakim.' She was sent for, 30 and came accompanied by her parents, her children and all her relations. 31, 32 Susanna was very graceful and beautiful to look at; she was veiled, so the wretches made her unveil in order to feast their eyes on her beauty. 33, 34 All her own people were weeping, and so were all the others who saw her. The Lv 24:14 two elders stood up, with all the people round them, and laid their hands on her head.[d] 35 Tearfully she turned her eyes to Heaven, her heart confident in God. The elders then spoke, 'While we were walking by ourselves in the garden, this 36 woman arrived with two maids. She shut the garden door and then dismissed the servants. 37 A young man, who had been hiding, went over to her and they lay together. 38 From the end of the garden where we were, we saw this crime taking place and hurried towards them. 39 Though we saw them together, we were unable to catch the man: he was too strong for us; he opened the door and took to his heels. 40 We did, however, catch this woman and ask her who the young man was. She refused to tell us. That is our evidence.' 41

Since they were elders of the people and judges, the assembly accepted their word: Susanna was condemned to death. 42 She cried out as loud as she could, Ps 33:13–15 Pr 15:11 Heb 4:13 'Eternal God, you know all secrets and everything before it happens; 43 you know that they have given false evidence against me. And now I must die, innocent as I am of everything their malice has invented against me!'

44, 45 The Lord heard her cry and, as she was being led away to die, he roused the 4:5;5:11,14 holy spirit residing in a young boy called Daniel 46 who began to shout, 'I am innocent of this woman's death!' 47 At this all the people turned to him and asked, 'What do you mean by that?' 48 Standing in the middle of the crowd, he replied, 'Are you so stupid, children of Israel, as to condemn a daughter of Israel unheard, and without troubling to find out the truth? 49 Go back to the scene of the trial: these men have given false evidence against her.'

50 All the people hurried back, and the elders said to Daniel, 'Come and sit with us Ws 4:8–9 and tell us what you mean, since God has given you the gifts that elders have.' Daniel said, 'Keep the men well apart from each other, for I want to question 51 them.' 52 When the men had been separated, Daniel had one of them brought to him. 'You have grown old in wickedness,' he said, 'and now the sins of your earlier days have overtaken you, 53 you with your unjust judgements, your condemnation Ex 23:7 of the innocent, your acquittal of the guilty, although the Lord has said, "You must not put the innocent and upright to death." 54 Now then, since you saw her so clearly, tell me what sort of tree you saw them lying under.' He replied, 'Under an acacia tree.'[e] 55 Daniel said, 'Indeed! Your lie recoils on your own head: the angel of God has already received from him your sentence and will cut you in half.' 56 He dismissed the man, ordered the other to be brought and said to him, 'Son of Canaan, not of Judah, beauty has seduced you, lust has led your heart astray! This is how you have been behaving with the daughters of Israel, and they have 57 been too frightened to resist; but here is a daughter of Judah who could not stomach your wickedness! 58 Now then, tell me what sort of tree you surprised them under.' He replied, 'Under an aspen tree.' 59 Daniel said, 'Indeed! Your lie recoils on your own head: the angel of God is waiting with a sword to rend you in half, and destroy the pair of you.'

60 Then the whole assembly shouted, blessing God, the Saviour of those who trust 61 in him. ·And they turned on the two elders whom Daniel had convicted of false 62 evidence out of their own mouths. ·As the Law of Moses prescribes, they were Dt 19:16-21 given the same punishment as they had schemed to inflict on their neighbour. They 63 were put to death. And thus, that day, an innocent life was saved. ·Hilkiah and his wife gave thanks to God for their daughter Susanna, and so did her husband Joakim and all his relations, because she had been acquitted of anything dishonourable.
64 From that day onwards, Daniel's reputation stood high with the people.

BEL AND THE DRAGON[a]

Daniel and the priests of Bel

1 14 [b]When King Astyages joined his ancestors, Cyrus of Persia succeeded him.
2 Daniel was very close to the king, who respected him more than any of his 3 other friends.[c] ·Now, in Babylon there was an idol called Bel,[d] to which twelve bushels of the finest flour, forty sheep and six measures of wine were offered every 4 day. ·The king venerated this idol and used to go and worship it every day. Daniel, 5 however, worshipped his own God. ·'Why do you not worship Bel?' the king asked Daniel. 'I do not worship idols made by human hand,' Daniel replied, 'I worship the living God who made heaven and earth and who is lord over all living creatures.'
6 'Do you not believe, then,' said the king, 'that Bel is a living god? Can you not see 7 how much he eats and drinks each day?' ·Daniel laughed. 'Your Majesty,' he said,
'do not be taken in; he is clay inside, and bronze outside, and has never eaten or 8 drunk anything.' ·This made the king angry; he summoned his priests, 'Tell me who eats all this food,' he said, 'or die.[e] Prove to me that Bel really eats it, and I 9 will have Daniel put to death for blaspheming him.' ·Daniel said to the king, 'Let it be as you say.'
10 There were seventy of these priests, to say nothing of their wives and children.
11 The king went to the temple of Bel, taking Daniel with him.[f] ·The priests of Bel said to him, 'We shall now go out, and you, Your Majesty, will lay out the meal and mix the wine and set it out. Then, lock the door and seal it with your personal seal. If, when you return in the morning, you do not find that everything has been 12 eaten by Bel, let us be put to death; otherwise let Daniel, that slanderer!' ·They were thinking—hence their confidence—of a secret entrance which they had made under the table, and by which they came in regularly and took the offerings away.
13, 14 When the priests had gone and the king had set out the food for Bel, ·Daniel made his servants bring ashes and spread them all over the temple floor, with no other witness than the king. They then left the building, shut the door and, sealing 15 it with the king's seal, went away. ·That night, as usual, the priests came with their wives and children; they ate and drank everything.
16, 17 The king was up very early next morning, and Daniel with him. ·'Daniel,' said 18 the king, 'are the seals intact?' 'They are intact, Your Majesty,' he replied. ·The king then opened the door and, taking one look at the table, exclaimed, 'You are 19 great, O Bel! There is no deception in you!' ·But Daniel laughed; and, restraining the king from going in any further, he said, 'Look at the floor and take note whose footmarks these are!' ·'I can see the footmarks of men, of women and of children,' 20 said the king, ·and angrily ordered the priests to be arrested, with their wives and 21 children. They then showed him the secret door through which they used to come and take what was on the table. ·The king had them put to death and handed Bel 22 over to Daniel who destroyed both the idol and its temple.

Daniel kills the dragon

There was a great dragon which the Babylonians worshipped too.[g] ·The king said 23, 24 to Daniel, 'Are you going to tell me that this is made of bronze? Look, it is alive; it eats and drinks; you cannot deny that this is a living god; worship it, then.' ·Daniel 25 replied, 'I will worship the Lord my God; he is the living God. With your permission, Your Majesty, without using either sword or club, I shall kill this dragon.'
'You have my permission,' said the king. ·Whereupon, Daniel took some pitch, 26, 27 some fat and some hair and boiled them up together, rolled the mixture into balls and fed them to the dragon; the dragon swallowed them and burst. Daniel said, 'Now look at the sort of thing you worship!' ·The Babylonians were furious when 28 they heard about this and rose against the king. 'The king has turned Jew,' they said, 'he has allowed Bel to be overthrown, and the dragon to be killed, and he has put the priests to death.' ·So they went to the king and said, 'Hand Daniel over to 29 us or else we shall kill you and your family.' ·They pressed him so hard that the 30 king found himself forced to hand Daniel over to them.

Daniel in the lion pit[h]

They threw Daniel into the lion pit, and there he stayed for six days. ·In the pit 31, 32 were seven lions, which were given two human bodies and two sheep every day; but for this period they were not given anything, to make sure they would eat Daniel.

Now, the prophet Habakkuk was in Judaea: he had been making a stew and 33 breaking up bread into a basket. He was on his way to the fields, taking this to the harvesters, ·when the angel of the Lord spoke to him, 'Take the meal you are 34 carrying to Babylon, and give it to Daniel in the lion pit,' ·'Lord,' replied Habak- 35 kuk, 'I have not even seen Babylon and know nothing about this pit.' ·The angel 36 of the Lord took hold of his head and carried him off by the hair to Babylon where, with a great blast of his breath, he set Habakkuk down on the edge of the pit.
'Daniel, Daniel,' Habakkuk shouted, 'take the meal that God has sent you.' 37
And Daniel said, 'You have kept me in mind, O God; you have not deserted 38 those who love you.' ·Rising to his feet, he ate the meal, while the angel of God 39 carried Habakkuk back in a moment to his own country.

On the seventh day, the king came to lament over Daniel; on reaching the pit he 40 looked inside, and there sat Daniel. ·'You are great, O Lord, God of Daniel,' he 41 exclaimed, 'there is no god but you!' ·He then had Daniel released from the pit 42 and the plotters of Daniel's ruin thrown in instead, where they were instantly eaten before his eyes.

g. Nothing is known of a dragon-god in ancient Babylon. This story was familiar to early Jewish writers who refer to it when commenting on Jr 51:44.

h. A parallel narrative to that of ch. 6. The means of Habakkuk's transportation may have been suggested by Ezk 8:3.

HOSEA

Title

1 1 The word of Yahweh which came to Hosea son of Beeri during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah kings of Judah, and of Jeroboam son of Joash, king of Israel. [a]

I: THE MARRIAGE OF HOSEA AND ITS SYMBOLISM [b]

Hosea's marriage: his three children

2 The beginning of what Yahweh said through Hosea: Yahweh said to Hosea, 'Go, marry a whore, [c] and get children with a whore; [d] for the country itself has become nothing but a whore by abandoning Yahweh.'
3 So he went and married Gomer daughter of Diblaim, who conceived and bore 4 him a son. ·Yahweh then said to him, 'Call him [e] Jezreel, for in a little while I shall 1 K 18:45r punish the House of Jehu for the bloodshed at Jezreel [f] and put an end to the 2 K 9:1–10; 10:1–17; 17:2–6 5 sovereignty of the House of Israel. ·When that day comes, I shall break the bow of Israel in the Valley of Jezreel.' [g] 6 She conceived a second time and gave birth to a daughter. Yahweh then said to him, 'Call her Lo-Ruhamah, for I shall show no more pity for the House of Israel, 1 P 2:10 7 I shall never forgive them again. [h] ·(Instead, I shall take pity on the House of Judah 14:4 and shall save them, not by bow or sword or force of arms, not by horses or Ps 20:7 horsemen, but by Yahweh their God.)' [i] Pr 21:31
Is 30:16; 31:1
Mi 5:9
Zc 4:6

1 a. And under Jeroboam II's successors until the Northern Kingdom came to an end.

b. The prophets often performed symbolic actions, Jr 18:1a, but here Hosea's very life is symbolic of God's mysterious designs. Hosea has loved and still loves a wife whose only response has been to betray him. Similarly, Yahweh still loves his faithless wife Israel and, having disciplined her, will love her as before and make her own love constant and unshakeable, ch. 1–3. The fertility religion of the Canaanites, on account of its attendant custom of sacred prostitution, was probably known pejoratively as 'prostitution' long before the days of Hosea, Ex 34:15; by imitating Canaanite practices, Israel was said to have committed prostitution, Ex 34:16. Hosea, however, is the first to use the imagery of a marriage to describe Yahweh's relationship with his people since the covenant on Sinai, and to call Israel's lapses into idolatry not only prostitution but adultery. The theme is then taken up by other prophets, Is 1:21; Jr 2:2; 3:1; 3:6–12. Ezekiel elaborates the theme in two great allegories, ch. 16 and 23. Second Isaiah presents the restoration of Israel as the reconciliation of an unfaithful wife, Is 50:1; 54:6–7, cf. 62:4–5. Perhaps we should see the relationship of Yahweh to Israel in the marriage imagery of the Song of Songs and Ps 45. In the NT, Jesus represents the messianic age as a wedding, Mt 22:1–14; 25:1–13 and speaks of himself as the bridegroom, Mt 9:15, cf. Jn 3:29, thus teaching that the marriage alliance between Yahweh and his people is fulfilled in his own person. Paul also treats of this theme, 2 Co 11:2; Ep 5:25–33; see also 1 Co 6:15–17, and so, finally, does the Book of Revelation, 21:2. • Ch. 1–3 form a complete entity composed of three sections, each concerned in part with Hosea's own time, when God reprimands Israel for infidelity, and in part with predictions of reconciliation and salvation, 1 1:2–9; 2:1–3. 2 2:4–15; 2:16–25. 3 3:1–4;3:5.

c. lit. 'a wife of prostitution', cf. 4:12; 5:4; either because Gomer was known as such from the beginning or because she showed herself to be one later.

d. Not that the children are to be born of an adulterous union but that they take after their unfaithful mother: like mother, like children, Ezk 16:44; Si 41:5.

e. The names of Hosea's children are prophetic, see Is 1:26n.

f. Jezreel ('God sows', see 2:24–26) was one of the residences of the kings of Israel. There Jehu massacred the wife and children of Ahab, 2 K 9:15–10:14. Unlike the author of 2 K 10:30, Hosea condemns this action.

g. The Valley of Jezreel and in particular Megiddo, where the valley broadens out after leaving the coast, lay on the normal route between Egypt and Assyria and was the principal battle-ground of the Holy Land, see Jg 4:12–16; 6:33; 1 S 28:4; 2 K 23:29. It figures as the eschatological battle-ground in Zc 12:11; Rv 16:16. At the same time, its very name ('God sows') indicates its fertility and evokes the promises of the birth of a new people, 2:24–25. Hence 'the Day of Jezreel', 2:2.

h. Or 'I shall remove them completely.' • The name Lo-Ruhamah means 'Unpitied'.

i. The v. was probably added by disciples of Hosea who had taken refuge in Judah after the fall of Samaria, to suit the message to their adoptive homeland.

After weaning Lo-Ruhamah, she conceived and gave birth to a son. •Yahweh 8, 9 said, 'Call him Lo-Ammi,[j] for you are not my people and I do not exist for you.'[k]

you will call me, 'My husband', no more will you call me, 'My Baal'. [r] 17 19 I shall banish the names of the Baals from her lips and their name will be mentioned no more.

18 20 When that day comes I shall make a treaty for them with the wild animals, Gn 9:8seq, Ez 34:25 Jb 5:23

j. The name means 'Not-my-people'. The three children are named in ascending order of Yahweh's severity. With the last, Yahweh's rejection is complete.

k. lit. 'And I, not "I am" for you', allusion to the meaning of Yahweh's name, Ex 3:14. Hosea evidently understands the divine name to imply the protective and benevolent presence of the God of the covenant.

2 a. Repetition of the ancient promise attested by Elohistic, Gn 22:17, and Yahwistic, Gn 32:13, traditions.

b. Jezreel, the symbolic location of the Day of Yahweh, see Am 5:18m, here deliberately called the Day of Jezreel (v. 2), see 1:5.

c. Sense not clear. Others understand 'they will overrun the country', 'they will come from their countries' (of exile).

d. New symbolic names in contrast to those of 1:6,9. No name is substituted for Jezreel, Hosea's eldest son, since the name is both inauspicious and auspicious, see 1:5g.

e. Yahweh speaks as a wronged husband seeking to bring his unfaithful wife back to him, if necessary by severe correction; if he succeeds, he will test her repentance and then welcome her with all the fervour of his first love and shower gifts on her.

f. The divine lawsuit is a common literary theme in the OT, see 4:1; Ps 50; Is 3:13; Jr 2:9; Mi 6:1, in which God himself presents the evidence against his unfaithful people. Here, however, the children, who are as guilty as their mother, 1:2; 2:6, are urged to give evidence against her and thus dissociate themselves from her wickedness.

g. A divorce formula presumably used in Israel and certainly attested in Mesopotamia.

h. By 'whorings' and 'adulteries' should probably be understood the amulets, tattooings and other signs distinctive of the prostitute, see Gn 38:15; Pr 7:10.

i. The legal penalty of stripping a guilty wife, see Is 47:2–3; Jr 13:22; Ezk 16:37–39; Na 3:5; Rv 17:16, is attested elsewhere in the Middle East.

j. Transition from the wife to the country. The agricultural wealth of Canaan which has seduced Israel into worshipping Baal, 10:1; 13:6, is to be suppressed, 4:3; 5:7; 9:6; 13:15.

k. i.e. the various fertility gods of Canaan, local manifestations of Baal, vv. 15,19.

l. 'her way' Gk and Syr.; 'your way' Hebr.

m. To make objects for the cult of Baal.

n. Vine and fig tree are traditional symbols for the peace and comfort characterising the reign of Solomon, 1 K 5:5, and the messianic age, Mi 4:4; Zc 3:10. Here this very prosperity has seduced the nation from Yahweh, see Dt 8:11–20, and encouraged them to worship the fertility gods whom they mistakenly suppose to be responsible for it, vv. 7–14.

o. The word is a strong one, meaning to seduce someone from the course which he ought to have followed, cf. Jg 14:15. The same word is used of a man who seduces a virgin, Ex 22:15.

p. For Hosea, 12:10, as for Amos, Am 5:25, the desert life of the Exodus represents a lost ideal; Israel was still a child, 11:1–4, knew nothing about foreign gods and followed Yahweh faithfully, 2:16–17. On the theme of the Exodus in the Prophets, see Is 40:3e.

q. A valley near Jericho giving access to the interior of the country and traditionally the scene of an act of disloyalty severely punished by Yahweh, Jos 7:24–26. The name means valley of misfortune, according to Jos 7:26j. It will become the gateway of hope, giving access to a land restored to favour.

r. The name baal ('master') was also used of husbands. From ancient times it had formed an element in many proper names, see 1 S 14:49v; 2 S 2:8; 1 Ch 8:33; 9:39,40, without any idolatrous significance. Yahweh being the 'master' to whom the bearer of the name was thus dedicated. Later, however, the association of the word with the Canaanite divinities made its use disreputable; hence Hosea forbids it, v. 19. The transition from 'my master' to 'my husband' hints that the emphasis will henceforth be on marital intimacy rather than on the subordination of wife to husband, cf. Jn 15:15.

I shall betroth you in uprightness and justice, and faithful love [u] and tenderness.
Yes, I shall betroth you to myself in loyalty 22 20 and in the knowledge of Yahweh. [v]
When that day comes, I shall respond 23 21
—declares Yahweh—
I shall respond to the heavens and they will respond to the earth and the earth will respond to the grain, the new wine and oil, 24 22 1:4–9 and they will respond [w] to Jezreel.
I shall sow her in the country to be mine, [x] 25 23
I shall take pity on Lo-Ruhamah, Is 62:4c ↗Rm 9:25 ↗1 P 2:10 I shall tell Lo-Ammi, 'You are my people,' and he will say, 'You are my God.' [y]

Second account of Hosea's marriage

3 Yahweh said to me, 'Go again, love a woman who loves [a] another man, an 1 adulteress, and love her as Yahweh loves the Israelites although they turn to Jr 7:18 other gods and love raisin cakes.' [b] •So I bought her for fifteen shekels of silver, a 2 homer of barley and a skin of wine, [c] •and I said to her, 'You will have to spend a 3 long time waiting for me [d] without playing the whore and without giving yourself to any man, and I will behave in the same way towards you.'

The explanation

Dn 3:38 For the Israelites will have to spend a long time without king or leader, without 4
2:9;6:1;14:2 Ex 23:24k;28:6a 1 S 15:22d Jr 30:9 sacrifice or sacred pillar, without ephod or domestic images; •but after that, the 5 Israelites will return and again seek Yahweh their God and David their king, [e] and turn trembling to Yahweh for his bounty in the final days.

II: THE CRIMES AND PUNISHMENT OF ISRAEL

General corruption

4 Israelites, hear what Yahweh says, 1 2:4f Is 3:13–15 Jr 25:31 Mi 6:1–5; 2:21–22, 22v Jr 7:9 for Yahweh indicts the citizens of the country:
there is no loyalty, no faithful love, no knowledge of God in the country, only perjury and lying, murder, theft, 2 adultery and violence, bloodshed after bloodshed.
Is 24:4 Jr 4:28; 12:4 Zp 1:3 This is why the country is in mourning 3 and all its citizens pining away, the wild animals also and birds of the sky, even the fish in the sea will disappear. [a]

Against the priests

But let no one denounce, no one rebuke; 4 it is you, priest, that I denounce. [b] Priest, you will stumble in broad daylight, 5 and the prophet will stumble with you in the dark, and I will make your mother perish. [c] 6 My people perish for want of knowledge. Jr 5:4 Since you yourself have rejected knowledge, [d] so I shall reject you from my priesthood; Mi 2:1–9 since you have forgotten the teaching of your God,

I in my turn shall forget your children.

7 The more of them there have been,
the more they have sinned against me;
they have bartered their Glory for Shame. [e] Jr 2:11g 8 They feed on the sin of my people, they are greedy for their iniquity. [f] 9 But as with the people, so with the priest,
I shall punish them for their conduct,
I shall pay them back for their deeds.
10 They will eat but never be satisfied, Mi 6:14 they will play the whore but not grow more prolific, [g] since they have deserted Yahweh 11 to give themselves up ·to whoring.

s. Once the faithless country comes to its senses, Yahweh will show that he and not Baal is the true provider and protector of Israel, vv. 20–25. God will then come back to dwell among his people and shower his blessings on them, cf. Lv 26:3–13; Dt 28:1–14. The sky will give rain in due time and the earth its fruit in plenty, Is 30:23–26; 49:10; Jr 31:12,14; Ezk 34:26–27,29; 36:29–30; Ho 2 23–24; 14:8–9; Jl 2:19,22–24; 4:18; Am 9:13; Zc 8:12. There will be no fear of others' gaining possession of the country, Is 32:17–18; Jr 46:27; Jl 2:20; Mi 5:4, see Is 4:5–6 (explained by 25:4–5); God will make a pact for it with the wild beasts, Ezk 34:25,28; Ho 2:20. Peace will spread to all peoples, Is 2:4 = Mi 4:3, see Is 11:6–8e; 65:25, under the guidance of the royal Messiah, Is 9:5–6; Zc 9:10. Death itself will disappear, Is 25:7–8, and joy will replace suffering and tears, Is 65:18–19; Jr 31:13; Ba 4:23,29, cf. Rv 21:4.

t. This verb is used in the Bible only with reference to a young virgin. Thus God abolishes Israel's adulterous past. His new marriage is, as it were, with a new creature whose dispositions are as constant as his own, a theme to be developed by Jeremiah and Ezekiel: the new, eternal covenant, the law inscribed in the heart, the new heart, the new spirit, Jr 31:31–34; Ezk 36:26–27f.

u. The primary meaning of this expression (hesed) is that of a bond, or contract. When used of human relationships it comes to mean friendship, union, loyalty, especially when these are the outcome of a treaty. Used of God, the term means his faithfulness to his covenant and the kindness he therefore shows his chosen people (in Ex 34:6). Used by Hosea in the context of married love, the word assumes and from then on retains a still warmer significance: it means the tender love God has for his people, Ps 136; Jr 31:3, etc., and the benefits deriving from it, Ex 20:6; Dt 5:10; 2 S 22:51; Ps 18:50; Jr 32:18. But this divine hesed calls for corresponding hesed among human beings, 6:6, consisting of self-giving, loving trust, abandonment, deep affection, 'piety', a love (in short) which is a joyful submission to the will of God and an active charity to one's fellows, 6:6. This ideal, expressed in many of the Psalms, will later be that of the hasidim, or 'Hasidaeans', see 1 M 2:42i.

v. For Hosea, 'knowledge of Yahweh' and hesed go together 2:21–22; 4:2; 6:6; this 'knowledge' is therefore not merely intellectual, God 'makes himself known' to human beings when he engages himself to them by covenant and shows his love (hesed) for them by the benefits he confers; similarly, human beings 'know God' when they loyally observe God's covenant, show gratitude for God's gifts, and return love for love. Pr 2:5; Is 11:2; 58:2. In wisdom literature, 'knowledge' and 'wisdom' are practically synonymous.

w. Note the repetition of the word 'respond': God will respond to the waiting creation, and creation will respond to what people, in accordance with God's plan, expect from it. This reverses the present condition of disorder due to sin, see 4:3; Gn 3:17seq.; Is 11:6e; Rm 8:19j.

x. 'I shall sow' play on the meaning of Jezreel, see 1:5g. • 'her', Israel/dutiful wife—a poetic conceit.

y. The ominous names are abolished and the disasters which they presaged are averted by the mutual love of God and his people.

3 a. 'who loves' Gk, Syr.; 'loved by' Hebr. Surely Gomer again, whom Hosea loved and still loves, but who has been, and continues to be, unfaithful to him. The generosity of the prophet towards disloyalty is the symbol of the unflagging love of Yahweh for his people.

b. or 'other gods who love raisin-cakes', see Dn 14:5–8.

c. Hosea redeems Gomer from her master or from the sanctuary where she has become a sacred prostitute. The total price is about that for the redemption of a slave, Ex 21:32; Lv 27:4. One homer equals 12.5 bushels (99 gal, 450 litres) and for further information concerning ancient weights and measures see Tables of measures and money.

d. A period of trial, as v. 4 explains, before the covenant is renewed between Yahweh and Israel, cf. 2:8–9,16.

e. Jr 30:9; Ezk 34:23. • 'and David their king' is almost certainly a Judaean addition, see 1:7i.

4 a. Hosea contrasts the situation as it actually is with the ideal situation of the renewed people, 2:21–25; there is neither sincerity nor love nor knowledge of God, v. 1, compare 2:21seq. Instead of harmony between person and environment, 2:20, 23seq., there are corruption and death, 4:3, compare 2:24w.

b. Line emended: Hebr. 'Your people resemble those who denounce the priest.' The priesthood as a whole is attacked for ignorance, neglect, greed and even, 6:9, violence. For other attacks, see Jr 2:8; 6:13; Mi 3:11; Zp 3:4, and especially Ml 1:6–2:9.

c. The principle of individual responsibility will not emerge till a century later, see Gn 18:24f; Ezk 14:12d. On unworthy prophets, see Jr 23:13–22; Mi 3:5,11.

d. Knowledge of the Law in which the priests should have instructed the people, Dt 33:10; Ml 2:5–8.

e. 'they have bartered their Glory (i.e. Yahweh) for Shame (i.e. the Baals)' Targ. and Syr.; 'I will change their Glory into Shame' Hebr.

f. The priest received a substantial part of the victim offered at sin sacrifices, Lv 6:19–22, and at expiation sacrifices, Lv 7:7; in this way the people's sins were to his advantage, see 1 S 2:12–17.

g. Probably the sacred prostitution of the Canaanite fertility cults.

Worship in Israel is idolatrous and debauched

Old wine and new wine addle my people's wits, [h]
Jr 2:27 they consult their block of wood, 12 and their stick explains what they should do. [i] 1:2;2:6 For an urge to go whoring has led them astray and whoring they go and desert their God; Dt 12:2b they offer sacrifice on the mountain tops, 13
they burn incense on the hills, under oak and poplar and terebinth,
for pleasant is their shade.
So, although your daughters play the whore and your daughters-in-law commit adultery, I shall not punish your daughters for playing the whore 14 nor your daughters-in-law for committing adultery, [j] Dt 23:19f when the men themselves are wandering off with whores and offering sacrifice with sacred prostitutes, for a people with no understanding is doomed.

A warning to Judah and Israel

Though you, Israel, play the whore, 15 there is no need for Judah to sin too.
5:8 Do not go to Gilgal,
Jos 4:19b;7:2b
Am 4:4c;5:8 do not go up to Beth-Aven [k]
Am 8:14 do not swear oaths 'by Yahweh's life', Jr 31:18 for Israel is as stubborn 16
as a stubborn heifer;
so is Yahweh likely to pasture him like a lamb in a broad meadow?
14:9 Ephraim has made a pact with idols—let him alone! 17 Am 2:8;6:4–6 Their drunken orgy over, 18 they do nothing but play the whore, 4:7 preferring Shame to their Pride; [l]
Jr 4:11–13
Am 1:14 the wind with its wings will carry them off 19 and their sacrifices will bring them nothing but disgrace.

Against the priests and royal family

5 Hear this, you priests, 1 listen, House of Israel, pay attention, royal House,
for it is you who have justice in your care, but you have been a snare at Mizpah and a net outspread on Tabor. [a]
They have dug the ditch deep at Shittim [b] 2 and so I am going to punish them all.

The effects of obduracy

Ephraim have I known, 3 Israel is not hidden from me;
and yet, Ephraim, you have played the whore,
Israel is befouled.
Jr 13:23+ Their deeds do not allow them to return to their God, 4 1:2 since an urge to play the whore possesses them and they no longer know Yahweh.
Am 6:8 Israel's arrogance is his accuser, 5

the guilt of Israel and Ephraim is their undoing, 14:2 Judah too will be undone with them.
6 Though they go in search of Yahweh with their sheep and cattle, Pr 1:28; Is 55:6; Am 5:4c,8: 11–12; Jn 7:34;8:21 they will not find him;
he has withdrawn from them.
7 They have betrayed Yahweh because they have fathered bastards; 2:6
now the new moon [e] will devour them and their fields.

Brother wars against brother [d]

8 Sound the horn in Gibeah, the trumpet in Ramah, Jl 2:1b raise the war cry in Beth-Aven, 4:15k
'We are behind you, [e] Benjamin!' 9 When the day of punishment comes, Ephraim will be a wasteland; on the tribes of Israel I have pronounced certain doom. [f] 10 The rulers of Judah act like men who move the boundary stone; [g] Dt 19:14; 27:17
I shall pour my wrath out on them like a flood.
11 Ephraim is oppressed, crushed by the sentence, [h] for having deliberately followed a Lie. [i] 12 Because of this, I shall be like ringworm for Ephraim Is 50:9+ and like gangrene for the House of Judah.

The folly of foreign alliances

13 Once Ephraim realised that he was sick 7:11;8:9; 12:2 and Judah that he had an ulcer, 2 K 15:19;16: 7–9 Ephraim then went to Assyria, he sent messengers to the Great King; [j] but he has no power to cure you or to heal you of your sore; 14 for I shall be like a lion to Ephraim, 13:7; Is 5:29; Am 3:12 like a young lion to the House of Judah;
I myself shall rend them, then go my way, shall carry them off, beyond hope of rescue. 2:12

15 I shall go back to my place until they confess their guilt [k] and seek me, Dt 4:29–31,30h; Jr 29:13 6:1 seek me eagerly in their distress. Am 5:4c

h. Not a superficial statement about the effects of wine but a reproach to Israel for having an insensitive religious attitude in their desire for a good harvest, cf. 7:14.

i. Divination with the help of wooden objects.

j. Their guilt is less since they are given a bad example by their husbands and fathers.

k. Beth-Aven ('house of sin'), an insulting nickname for Bethel (Beth-el: 'house of God').

l. 'pride', i.e. Yahweh, conj.; vowel rearrangement of MT 'shields', cf. v. 7[b].

5 a. Several places so named are mentioned in the Bible, and it is difficult to know which is meant here. Like Tabor, Mizpah was probably a cult-place whose ministers had led the people astray by encouraging idolatry. Alternative translation: 'for sentence has been passed against you, but you have been . . .', but compare the parallel of Mi 3:1.

b. Text uncertain. On Shittim see Jos 2:1b. There is here perhaps an illusion to the episode of Baal-Peor, 9:10; see Nb 25.

c. Either the feast-day is turned into a day of punishment, or a warning to mark its imminence (at the next new moon) is given.

d. Vv. 8–14, and perhaps as far as 6:6, apparently refer to the Syro-Ephraimite War (735–734 BC), see 2 K 16:5b.

e. Word uncertain; perhaps it should be corrected according to the context to read 'On guard!'

f. i.e. exile, dismemberment of the kingdom, 2 K 15:29, the fall of Samaria and the loss of Israel's independence, 2 K 17:5–6.

g. Alluding to the advance of the Judaean army into Israelite territory, perhaps also to earlier encroachments by Judah, 1 K 15:16–22. The Deuteronomic Code, Dt 19:14, see also 27:17, condemns those who displace boundary marks. The boundaries of the tribal territories in the Holy Land were considered to be established on God's own instructions, Jos 13:6seq.

h. Following Hebr. but the implications are not clear. Gk reads 'Ephraim is an oppressor, he tramples on justice,' referring to the alliance with Damascus and the invasion of the related kingdom of Judah in the Syro-Ephraimite war.

i. 'a Lie' shawe' conj.; Hebr. tzaw unintelligible.

j. 'to the Great King' 'el melek conj., as also at 10:6; Hebr. 'el melek yareb 'to King Jareb' or 'to an avenging king'. Probably a reference to the pro-Assyrian kings of Israel, Menahem who paid tribute to Tiglath-Pileser III in 738, and Pekahiah who followed the same policy, and to Ahaz of Judah who appealed for help to the same Assyrian king in 735, see 2 K 16:7–9.

k. Or 'until they have expiated their guilt'.

The Israelites reply [a]

6 Come, let us return to Yahweh. 1
He has rent us and he will heal us;
he has struck us and he will bind up our wounds; 2 after two days he will revive us, 2 3 Ezk 37 on the third day he will raise us up [b] and we shall live in his presence.
Let us know, let us strive to know Yahweh; 3 that he will come is as certain as the dawn.
Dt 11:14 Ps 63:1; 72:6;143:6 He will come to us like a shower, like the rain of springtime to the earth.

What am I to do with you, Ephraim? 4
What am I to do with you, Judah?
=13:3 For your love is like morning mist, like the dew that quickly disappears.
12:11 Jr 1:10;5:14 This is why I have hacked them to pieces by means of the prophets, [c] 5
why I have killed them with words from my mouth, why my sentence will blaze forth like the dawn— [d] 2:21–22,21u 1 S 15:22 Am 5:21n ↗Mt 9:13;12:7 for faithful love is what pleases me, not sacrifice; 6 knowledge of God, not burnt offerings. [e]

Disorders in Israel

8:1 But they have broken the covenant at Adam, [f] 7 there they have betrayed me.
Gilead [g] is a city of evil-doers, 8 full of bloody footprints.
Like so many robbers in ambush, 9 a gang of priests commits murder on the road to Shechem—what infamous behaviour!
At Bethel [h] I have seen a horrible thing; 10
there Ephraim plays the whore,
Israel is befouled.
For you too, Judah, a harvest is in store, [i] 11
when I restore my people's fortunes.

7 Whenever I would heal Israel, 1
I am confronted by the guilt of Ephraim and the evil-doings of Samaria;
for deceit is their principle of behaviour;
the thief breaks into the house, [a] marauders raid in the open;
and they never pause to consider 2 that I remember all their wicked deeds; and now their own deeds hem them in Ps 90:8 Mi 3:16 and stare me in the face.

Conspiracy the order of the day in Israel

They amuse the king with their wickedness 3 and the chief men with their lies. [b] They are all adulterers, hot as an oven 4 which the baker need not stoke from the time he has kneaded the dough until it rises.
At the holiday for our king, [c] 5
the ministers become inflamed with wine, while he accepts the homage of people ·who laugh at him. 6 Their hearts are like an oven as they plot, all night their passion slumbers, then in the morning it bursts into flame;[d] 7 yes, all of them as hot as ovens, they consume their rulers.

All their kings have fallen thus,
not one of them has ever called on me.

Israel ruined by relying on foreign powers

8 Ephraim mixes with the nations.
Ephraim is a half-baked cake.[e] 9 Foreigners have eaten his strength away
but he is unconscious of it;
even his hair is turning grey 5:12 Rv 3:17
but he is unconscious of it.
10 (Israel's arrogance is his own accuser; but they do not come back to Yahweh their God Am 4:6–11,6f or seek him, despite all this.) 11 Ephraim is like a silly,[f] witless pigeon calling on Egypt, turning to Assyria. 5:13j 12 Wherever[g] they turn, I shall spread my net over them,
I shall bring them down like the birds of the sky,
I shall punish them for their perversity.[h]

The ingratitude and punishment of Israel

13 Woe to them for having fled from me!
Ruin seize them for having wronged me!
I have rescued them again and again and they have only told lies about me. 7:1 14 Theirs is no heartfelt cry to me when they lament on their beds;[i] when they gash themselves over the grain and new wine,[j] they are still rebelling against me.

6 a. The prophet imagines a penitential liturgy, perhaps borrowing terms from some expiation ceremony, 1 K 8:31–53; Ps 85; Jr 3:21–25; Jl 1–2. The people, frightened by the threat of punishment and abandonment by Yahweh, 5:14–15, call for a return to him, vv. 1–3. But the return is ephemeral and devoid of inner conversion, vv. 4–6.

b. The expression 'after two days . . . on the third day' (see Am 1:3f) means a short lapse of time; Christian tradition since Tertullian has applied this text to the resurrection of Christ on the third day. But it is never quoted in the NT, nor is the period Jonah spent in the belly of the fish (Jon 2:1 = Mt 12:40) thus used. But it is possible that the mention of the resurrection on the third day 'according to the scriptures' (1 Co 15:4, see Lk 24:46) in the early preaching and creeds refers to our text, interpreted according to the exegetical canons of the time.

c. The word of God transmitted by the prophets produces what it predicts (here, punishment).

d. Vowels rearranged in this line; 'your judgements, a light comes forth' MT.

e. Hosea asserts that the only valid sacrifice is a sincere conversion, see 2:21–22u,v; 1 S 15:22; Ps 40:6–8; Am 5:21p.

f. 'at Adam' conj.; 'like a man' or 'like Adam' Hebr. The allusion is enigmatic. Perhaps there was an idolatrous sanctuary at Adam (near the mouth of the Jabbok). Perhaps the text means that Israel's infidelity goes back to the very origins of the settlement in Palestine, cf. Jos 3:16. For this idea see 9:10. The alliance is that of Sinai.

g. Gilead on the plateau of the same name in Transjordan, see Gn 31:46–48.

h. 'At Bethel' conj.; Hebr. bebet yisra'el 'in the House of Israel'.

i. Probably a later addition, see 1:7i.

7 a. 'into the house' following Gk; Hebr. omits.

b. From the inception of the Northern Kingdom to the year 737 (assassination of Pekahiah) seven of its kings were murdered. The prophet here draws a picture of a conspiracy in which the traitors, after feigning loyalty, assassinate the king and chief men as they lie drunk after a night of revelling. Elah died thus, 1 K 16:9–10.

c. An annual celebration in the king's honour.

d. The beginning of v. 6 is attached to what precedes, to give some sense to an extremely difficult passage whose text seems to be corrupt. 'their passion' 'appehem conj.; Hebr. 'aphehem 'their baker'.

e. lit. 'a cake not turned', i.e. useless, because burnt on one side and underdone on the other.

f. 'silly', lit. 'allowing itself to be seduced' (same word as in 2:16*o*), i.e. here yielding to the seduction of foreign alliance, thinking thereby to escape the punishment which the prophet depicts as a fowler's net wielded by God.

g. Or 'However often' or 'Even if'.

h. 'for their perversity' lera'atam, following Gk; Hebr. le'adatam 'according to their assembly'. Before this word, keshema' 'according to hearsay' has been left untranslated. Perhaps it should be understood 'when I hear they have assembled', the comparison with birds continuing to the end of the v. In this case it would be a gloss, for the word 'edah is late.

i. Either beds properly so called or rugs on which they prostrated themselves for prayer, cf. Ps 4:4; 149:5.

j. 'they gash themselves' yitgodadu conj.; Hebr. yitgoraru 'they live as strangers'. On these ritual self-mutilations see 1 K 18:28; Jr 16:6; 41:5. • 'They are rebelling' yasoru conj.; Hebr. yasuru 'they turn away'.

Though I supported and gave strength to their arms, 15 they plan how to hurt me.
They turn to what does not exist,[k] 16
Ps 78:57 they are like a faulty bow.
Their leaders will fall by the sword because of their arrogant talk;
how they will be laughed at in Egypt!

An omen

5:8 Jl 2:1b 8 Put the trumpet to your lips! 1
Like an eagle, disaster is swooping on Yahweh's home![a] 6:7 Because they have violated my covenant and been unfaithful to my Law,[b] 6:1–3 Jr 14:8–9 Mt 7:21–23 in vain will they cry, 'My God!' 2
In vain, 'We, Israel, know you!'
Israel has rejected the good, 3
the enemy[c] will pursue them.
1 S 8:1a; 11:12g They have set up kings, but without my consent, 4 and appointed princes, but without my knowledge.[d] With their silver and gold, they have made themselves idols, but only to be destroyed.
1 K 12:28,32 I spurn[e] your calf, Samaria! 5
My anger blazes against them!
How long will it be before they recover their innocence?
For it is the product of Israel— 6 Ex 20:4;34:17 a craftsman made the thing, it is no god at all![f]
The calf of Samaria will be broken to pieces!
10:13 Jb 4:8 Pr 22:8 Ga 6:7 Since they sow the wind, they will reap the whirlwind; 7 stalk without ear, it will never yield flour—or if it does, foreigners will swallow it.

Israel ruined by relying on foreign powers[g]

Israel has himself been swallowed; 8 now they are lost among the nations like something no one wants, 5:13j for having made approaches to Assyria— 9 like a wild donkey, all alone.
Ezk 16:32–34 Ephraim has rented lovers[h] and because he has rented them from the nations 10
I am now going to round them up;[i] soon they will feel the weight of the king of princes![j]

Against the outward show of worship

Ephraim keeps building altars for his sins, 11 these very altars are themselves a sin.
However much of my Law I write for him, 12
Ephraim regards it as alien to him.
They offer sacrifices to me and eat the meat,[k] 13 6:6 Am 5:22 •=9:9 they do not win Yahweh's favour.
On the contrary, he will remember their guilt and punish their sins;
they will have to go back to Egypt.
9:3;11:5 Dt 28:68c; 32:15,18+ Israel has forgotten his Maker 14 and has built palaces,
while Judah keeps on building fortified towns;

but I shall send fire down on his cities to devour their citadels. Am 2:5

The sorrows of exile [a]

1 9 No merrymaking, Israel, for you, no rejoicing [b] like other peoples,
for you have deserted your God to play the whore, you have loved the fee of prostitution on every threshing-floor. [c] 2 The threshing-floor and wine-press will not feed them; they will be disappointed of new wine. [d] 2:11 3 No more will they live in Yahweh's country; Ephraim will have to go back to Egypt 8:13+ and eat polluted food in Assyria. [e] 4 No more will they pour libations of wine to Yahweh, and their sacrifices will not win his favour but will be like funeral fare for them: [f] Dt 26:14 whoever eats them will be polluted;
for their food will be for themselves alone, not being offered in Yahweh's home. [g] 5 What will you do on the solemn feast-day, on the day of Yahweh's festival? [h] 6 What a scene of devastastion they have left!
Egypt will round them up, Memphis will bury them, nettles will inherit their fields and thorn-bushes invade their homesteads.

Persecution, the prophet's reward for foretelling punishment

7 The days of punishment have come, [i] Am 3:2+
the days of retribution are here; Israel knows it!
'The prophet is mad and the inspired man a fool!' Jn 10:20 Great has been your guilt—
all the greater then the hostility!
8 The watchman of Ephraim is with my God:
it is the prophet—

k. Follows Gk; '. . .not above' Hebr.

8 a. 'disaster is swooping' supplied for clarity. The eagle is a symbol of disaster, see Jr 48:40; 49:22. • Yahweh's home is here not the Temple but the Holy Land, Yahweh's property, cf. 9:15.

b. This strict, synonymous parallelism between covenant and Law is characteristic of the Elohistic (Ex 24:8), Deuteronomic (Dt 4:13) and 'Priestly' traditions (Lv 26:15). Hosea belonged to circles imbued with the Deuteronomic tradition.

c. Assyria.

d. Hosea is condemning the political anarchy of the kingdom in which rulers were assassinated and replaced without regard to religious considerations.

e. 'I spurn' conj.; 'he spurns' Hebr.

f. This attack on idols is followed by many another in the prophetic books, see Is 40:20m; 41:21i.

g. This passage seems to be later than the deportation following the Syro-Ephraimite war (734), 2 K 15:29. The alternation of singular and plural is a poetic device, see 2:8*l*.

h. Allusion to the tribute paid to the kings of Assyria, 5:13; 7:11, possibly also to gifts sent to Egypt, 12:2. Here the lovers are not the Canaanite gods of ch. 1–3 but foreign powers. Nonetheless, treaties with foreign powers are also regarded as adulterous in relation to the covenant, since they favour the cults of the foreigners in question and show a lack of faith in Yahweh as sole Saviour of Israel, see Is 30:1–5; 31:1–3.

i. To deport them.

j. The king of Assyria.

k. Uncertain translation of a difficult, possibly corrupt, text.

9 a. A group of sayings perhaps pronounced at the Autumn Festival.

b. 'no rejoicing' Gk; 'towards rejoicing' Hebr.

c. Since Israel thinks the harvest is to be given by Baal, the fruits of the earth may be termed the pay for prostitution, see 2:7,14n.

d. The following vv. explain why: they will not be there to enjoy them, having been deported; other people will get them, 8:7. • 'they' Gk, Syr., Targ.; 'he' Hebr.

e. Foreign countries are polluted by virtue of the idols in them, see 1 S 26:19; Am 7:17. In exile there will be no possibility of abstaining from polluted food.

f. Food prepared or eaten in the presence of the dead was considered polluted. In exile, the Israelites would be in permanent mourning.

g. Exile would make it impossible for them to offer the first-fruits in the shrines of the Holy Land.

h. The harvest festival or feast of Shelters, which could not be celebrated in exile, since it involved gathering at one of Yahweh's shrines, Ex 23:16seq.

i. Vv. 7–8 are very obscure and the trans. largely conjectural.

and a fowler's trap is placed on all his paths;
Jr 20:1–6 Am 7:10–17 and in the shrine of his God there is enmity towards him.[j]
They have become deeply corrupt 9 Jg 19 =8:13 as in the days of Gibeah;
he will remember their guilt,
he will punish their sins.

Punishment for the crime at Baal-Peor

2:16p Dt 32:10 It was like finding grapes in the desert when I found Israel, 10 like seeing early fruit on a fig tree when I saw your ancestors;
Nb 25:1–5 but when they reached Baal-Peor[k] they devoted themselves to Shame[l]
Jr 2:5c and became as loathsome as the thing they loved.
The glory of Ephraim will fly away like a bird: 11
Dt 28:18 no giving birth, no pregnancy, no conceiving.
9:16 Dt 32:25 If they rear their children, I shall take them away 12 before they grow up!
Woe to them indeed when I leave them!
Ephraim looked to me like Tyre, planted in a meadow,[m] 13
so Ephraim will present his children to the slaughterer.
Give them, Yahweh—what are you to give?— 14
Lk 23:29 give them wombs that miscarry and dried-up breasts.

Gilgal

4:15 Their wickedness appeared in full at Gilgal, 15
there I came to hate them.
Because of the wickedness of their deeds
8:1a I shall drive them from my home, 1:6 I shall love them no longer;
all their princes are rebels.[n]
Ephraim is blasted, 16
Am 2:9 Mt 21:19par. their root has dried out, they will bear no more fruit.
9:12 And even if they do bear children
I shall slaughter the darlings of their womb.
Dt 28:64–65 Because they have not listened to him, my God will cast them off 17
Gn 4:14 and they will become wanderers among the nations.

The destruction of Israel's cultic objects

Is 5:1a 10 Israel was a luxuriant vine 1 yielding plenty of fruit.
Dt 32:15;2:7, 14;4:10seq. The more his fruit increased, the more altars he built;
the richer his land became,
Ex 23:24k the richer he made the sacred pillars.
Theirs is a divided heart;[a] 2
now they will have to pay for it.
He himself will hack down their altars and wreck their sacred pillars.
Then they will say, 3
'We have no king[b]
because we have not feared Yahweh, but what could the king do for us?'
Speeches are made, oaths sworn to no purpose, 4 agreements concluded,
Am 6:12 and so-called justice spreads like a poisonous weed[c] along the furrows of the fields!

Samaria's citizens will tremble for the calf[d] of Beth-Aven; 4:15k;8:5
the people there will mourn for it,
so will its idol-priests,
as they exult in its glory once it has been carried away! Rv 18:14 6 It will be carried off to Assyria as tribute to the Great King.[e] Ephraim will reap the shame, and Israel blush for his intentions.
7 Samaria has had her day.
Her king is like a straw drifting on the water.
8 The high places of Aven, the sin of Israel, 4:13 will be destroyed; 2 K 23:15seq.
thorns and thistles will grow over their altars.
Then they will say to the mountains, 'Cover us!' Is 2:10 and to the hills, 'Fall on us!'[f] ↗Lk 23:30 ↗Rv 6:16

9 Since the days of Gibeah, Israel, you have sinned. 9:9+
There they have taken their stand, and will not war overtake the guilty at Gibeah?[g] 10 I am coming[h] to punish them; nations will muster against them to punish them for their two crimes.[i]

Israel has disappointed Yahweh's hope[j]

11 Ephraim is a well-trained heifer 4:16 that loves to tread the grain.
But I have laid a yoke on her fine neck, Jr 2:20;5:5
I shall put Ephraim into harness, Mt 11:29–30
Judah will have to plough, Jacob must draw the harrow.

12 Sow saving justice for yourselves, reap a harvest of faithful love; 2:21–22,21u break up your fallow ground: Jr 4:3
it is time to seek out Yahweh Mi 6:8
until he comes to rain saving justice down on you.

13 You have ploughed wickedness,
you have reaped iniquity,
you have eaten the fruit of falsehood.
Because you have trusted in your chariots,[k] Is 31:1

j. The text is very obscure, probably corrupt, but various proposed emendations have not been satisfactory.

k. The incident, related in Nb 25, had occurred on the plain east of the Jordan, see Nb 25:1; Jos 2:1a, at the very gates of the Promised Land, and had disfigured its history ever since.

l. Hebr. boshet, a disparaging name for Baal, see 2 S 4:4b.

m. A very difficult, probably corrupt v.; lit. 'Ephraim, as I see for Tyre, planted in a meadow'. Perhaps the prophet means to compare the splendour of Ephraim to that of Tyre, cf. Is 23:7seq.; Ezk 27, but the word is uncertain. The Gk read tzaid 'game' instead of tzor 'Tyre'.

n. Probably Saul's disobedience at Gilgal, 1 S 13:7–14; 15:12–33, prolonged by the rebellion of the leading men.

10 a. Divided between Yahweh and Baal.

b. Assyrian tutelage and the instability of the throne have brought effective government to a standstill.

c. Ironical; what prospers is the poisonous perversion of justice, cf. Am 6:12.

d. 'calf' Gk and Syr.; 'calves' Hebr.

e. 'Great King' conj.; 'King Jareb' or 'King Avenger' Hebr.; see 5:13j.

f. The scope of the disaster will be so terrible that they will lose all desire to live, cf. Lk 23:30; Rv 6:16.

g. Hosea sees a continuity between the crime at Gibeah in antiquity, see Jg 19, and the crimes of the present day. He predicts the same continuity of punishment.

h. 'I am coming' Gk; 'in my desire' Hebr.

i. Obscure: perhaps it means the monarchy (proclaimed near Gibeah, 1 S 10:23–24) and the crime of Jg 19; perhaps only the crime of Gibeah, double by its enormity.

j. Vv. 11–12 refer to the plan Yahweh had for Ephraim: a mission was given to him expressed in terms of the metaphor of sowing and reaping. But the reality is of a different order: to establish the rule of justice and love, and to seek Yahweh. In fact Ephraim did the reverse.

k. 'your chariots' Gk; 'your way' Hebr.

in your great numbers of warriors, turmoil is going to break out among your people, 14
and all your fortresses will be laid waste.
As Shalman [l] laid Beth-Arbel waste on the day of battle, 14:1 dashing mothers to pieces on their children, [m] so it shall be done to you, Bethel, 15 because of your great wickedness;
at dawn, the king of Israel will be no more. [n]

God's love despised: his vengeance [a]

Jr 2:1-9
↗Mt 2:15 11 When Israel was a child I loved him, 1 and I called my son [b] out of Egypt.
But the more I called, the further they went away from me; [c] 2 they offered sacrifice to Baal and burnt incense to idols.
Dt 1:31+ I myself taught Ephraim to walk, 3
I myself took them by the arm, but they did not know that I was the one caring for them, that I was leading them with human ties, 4 with leading-strings of love, that, with them, I was like someone lifting an infant [d] to his cheek, Dt 8:16 and that I bent down to feed him. [e]

8:13k He will not have to go back to Egypt, [f] 5
Assyria will be his king instead!
Since he has refused to come back to me,
the sword will rage through his cities, 6 destroying the bars of his gates, devouring them because of their plots.

God's love stronger than his vengeance

My people are bent on disregarding me; 7 if they are summoned to come up, not one of them makes a move. [g]

Ephraim, how could I part with you? 8
Israel, how could I give you up?
How could I make you like Admah or treat you like Zeboiim? [h]
Dt 32:36
Is 54:8
Jr 31:20 My heart within me is overwhelmed, [i] fever grips my inmost being.
I will not give rein to my fierce anger, 9
I will not destroy Ephraim again,
Nb 23:19+ for I am God, not man, the Holy One in your midst, [j]
and I shall not come to you in anger.

The return from exile [k]

They will follow Yahweh; 10
Jr 25:30
Am 1:2+ he will roar like a lion, and when he roars,
his children will come fluttering from the west, fluttering like sparrows from Egypt, 11
like pigeons from Assyria, and I shall settle them in their homes
—declares Yahweh.

Political and religious perversity of Israel [a]

11:12 1 12 Ephraim besieges me with lying,
the House of Israel with duplicity.
(But Judah still is on God's side, he is faithful to the Holy One.) [b] 12:1 2 Ephraim feeds himself on wind, all day he chases the wind from the East, [c] he heaps up cheating and violence;
they make a treaty with Assyria, 5:13j at the same time sending oil to Egypt. Is 30:1seq.; 31:1seq.

Against Jacob and Ephraim

2 3 Yahweh has a case against Judah, [d] 4:1
he will punish Jacob as his conduct merits, 3 he will repay him as his deeds deserve.
4 In the very womb he overreached his brother, Gn 25:26g in maturity he wrestled against God. [e] Is 43:27i 5 He wrestled with the angel and beat him, Gn 32:24–28 he wept and pleaded with him. [f] He met him at Bethel Gn 28:10–22 and there God spoke to us— [g] 6 yes, Yahweh, God Sabaoth, Yahweh is his title! Am 4:13+ 6 7 So turn back with God's help, maintain faithful love and loyalty
7 and always put your trust in your God. [h]
8 Merchants use fraudulent scales. Dt 25:13+
To defraud is his delight. [i]

l. Possibly Salamanu, a Moabite prince and contemporary of Tiglath-Pileser III (745–727), on the occasion of a raid on Beth-Arbel (Irbid) in Gilead.

m. Or 'with their children'. Atrocities of this kind were usual when towns were captured, see 14:1; 2 K 8:12; Ps 137:9; Is 13:16; Na 3:10.

n. Dawn was usually the time chosen for a surprise attack, Jg 9:33–37; Ps 46:5; Is 17:14, hence the moment when God awarded victory or punished by defeat.

11 a. In subject-matter, this ch. is a pendant to ch. 1–3. After the allegory of conjugal love thwarted, we now have that of paternal love rejected. The children who figured in ch. 1–3 were closely associated with their mother. God's love for and frustrated rage with them have already been indicated at 2:1,6.

b. This is the first instance in the OT of the theme of God's love as cause of his choosing Israel to be his people, a doctrine much elaborated by the Deuteronomist, Dt 4:37; 7:7–9; 10:15. For Hosea, the history of Israel really begins with the Exodus. This whole passage describes the golden age of the desert journey, see 2:16*o*. Hosea seems only to have known, or to have remembered, the less creditable incidents of the patriarchal period, 12:4–5,13.

c. 'the more I . . . from me' Gk; 'they called them, so they went away from them' Hebr.

d. 'infant' 'ul conj.; Hebr. 'ol 'yoke'. • 'to feed him' conj.; 'him' (lo) must have disappeared by haplography before lo', the first word of v. 5.

e. For the theme of Yahweh as educator of the infant Israel, see Dt 8:5–6.

f. But the situation will be the same. The contradiction of 8:13 is thus more apparent than real.

g. Line obscure; trans. conj.

h. Admah and Zeboiim were two of the five towns of the Pentapolis, Gn 10:19; 14:2,8; Dt 29:22: in the Elohistic tradition they presumably took the place of the Sodom and Gomorrah of the Yahwistic tradition, Is 1:9–10.

i. 'overwhelmed', a very strong word, used also of the destruction of the wicked cities, Gn 19:25; Dt 29:22. Hosea sees the threatened punishment as already experienced in God's heart. • Cf. David's lament over the death of Absalom, 2 S 19:1.

j. God's transcendence is strongly emphasised. But unlike other more ancient texts (Ex 19:2b; 2 S 6:6–8) or more recent ones (Is 6:3g), here it is divested of all terrifying aspects and is expressed in terms of love. God's holiness manifests itself in compassion and forgiveness, whereas it is human to give free rein to anger.

k. Vv. 10–11, elaborating on the ideas in vv. 8–9, are probably a later addition dating from the Babylonian captivity.

12 a. A difficult chapter in which are intermingled references to contemporary events and to episodes in the life of the patriarchs. For the prophet and his contemporaries all generations sprung from the patriarchs formed a single whole. The patriarch in some way lived on in his descendants, and they were already present in him, see Heb 7:9.

b. A later addition or adaptation, see 1:7i. • After 'still', Hebr. reads 'roams with God' but the sense of this is not clear. Perhaps the Gk should be followed: 'But Judah is still known to God.'

c. The scorching wind from the desert, here symbolising Assyria, cf. 13:15; Jr 18:17; Ezk 17:10.

d. Instead of 'Judah' the primitive reading was surely 'Israel'. The change is the result of a desire to apply the prophecy of Hosea in the Southern Kingdom, see 1:7i.

e. Ambition and arrogance innate and persistent. Hosea interprets these episodes unfavourably, see vv. 13–14. A sinner from his mother's womb, Jacob so continued in later life.

f. Gn 32:24–28 does not speak of tears and entreaties: Hosea is probably hinting at some trick on Jacob's part.

g. 'to us' Hebr. is sometimes unjustifiably emended to 'to him' in line with Gn 35:15; Hosea makes what was said to Jacob apply to himself and his contemporaries, the descendants of Jacob, cf. v. 7.

h. Still the same perspective: these words of God to Jacob are addressed also to all his descendants.

i. Canaan was cursed by Yahweh, Gn 9:25. The name came to be synonymous for merchant, Is 23:8; Ezk 17:4; Zc 14:21, owing to Canaanite skill at commerce.

Lk 12:16–21
↗Rv 3:17–18
'How rich I have become!' says Ephraim, 9
'I have made a fortune.'
But of all his gains he will keep nothing because of the sin of which he is guilty.[j]

Reconciliation

2:16p; =13:4
Ex 20:2
But I have been Yahweh your God since your days in Egypt 10 and will make you live in tents again as in the days of Meeting.[k]
I will speak through prophets, 11 10
I will give vision after vision 6:5 and through the ministry of prophets will speak in parables.[l]

New threats

6:8 Is Gilead a sink of iniquity? 12
Yes, they are a worthless lot!
4:15;9:15 At Gilgal they sacrifice to bulls,[m] that is why their altars are like heaps of stones in a ploughed field.
Jacob fled to the countryside of Aram, 13 12
Gn 29 Israel slaved to win a wife, to win a wife he looked after sheep.
11:1b
Ex 3:7–10
Dt 18:15,18
Ps 77:20
By a prophet Yahweh brought Israel out of Egypt 14 and by a prophet Israel was preserved.
Ephraim gave bitter provocation— 15 14
Yahweh will bring his bloodshed down on him, his Lord will repay him for his insult.

Idolatry punished

13 When Ephraim used to speak, all trembled; 1 he was a power in Israel;[a] but once he had incurred guilt with Baal, he died.
And now they compound their sins 2 by casting images for themselves out of their silver, idols of their own invention,
the work of craftsmen, all of it!
1 K 12:27,32 'Sacrifice to them,' they say![b]
1 K 19:18 Men bestow kisses to calves![c]
That is why they will be like morning mist, 3 =6:4 like the dew that quickly disappears,
Ps 1:4
Is 17:13;41:16
Zp 2:2
like the chaff whirled from the threshing-floor, like smoke escaping through the window.

The punishment for ingratitude

=12:10 But I have been Yahweh your God since your days in Egypt[d] 4 Ex 20:2seq.
Dt 5:6seq.
Is 43:11+
when you knew no god but me,
since you had no one else to save you.
I cared for you in the desert, 5
in the land of dreadful drought.
I pastured them,[e] and they were satisfied; 6 once satisfied, their hearts grew proud, Dt 32:15+ and therefore they forgot me.
5:14+ So now I shall be like a lion to them, 7 like a leopard I shall lurk beside the road, 2 S 17:8
Pr 17:12
like a bear robbed of her cubs I shall meet them 8 and rend the membrane of their heart, and there like a lioness I shall eat them, like a wild beast tear them to shreds.

The end of the monarchy

9 Israel, you have destroyed yourself though in me lies your help.[f] 10 Your king, where is he now, to save you,[g] or the governors in all your cities?— whom you once pleaded for, saying,
'Give me a king and princes!' 1 S 8:5 11 In my anger I gave you a king 1 S 8:7,22 and in my wrath I have taken him away. 10:15

The inevitability of ruin

12 Ephraim's guilt is packed away, Dt 32:34–35 his sin is locked up.
13 Pangs as of childbirth overtake him, Is 26:17–18 and a stupid child he is;
his time is due, but he does not leave the womb.[h] Is 37:3 14 Shall I save them from the clutches of Sheol?
Shall I buy them back from Death?
Where are your plagues, Death? 6:2
Where are your scourges, Sheol?[i] Ezk 37:1–14,10d Compassion will be banished from my sight! Is 25:8+
↗1 Co 15:55
15 Though Ephraim bears more fruit than his brothers,[j] the wind from the East[k] will come, 12:2c Yahweh's breath blowing up from the desert to dry his spring, to dry up his fountain, to strip his treasury
of everything worth having.
1 14 Samaria will pay the penalty for having rebelled against her God. 7:1
They will fall by the sword, their little children will be dashed to pieces and their pregnant women disembowelled. 10:14m
Am 1:13+

j. Following Gk; Hebr. obscure, lit. 'all my gains, guilt for sin will not be found in me (?)'.

k. Here the reference is either to 'the tent of Meeting', Ex 33:7, or to the stay at Sinai where God had fixed a meeting with his people, Ex 3:12.

l. Further signs of Yahweh's patient solicitude, cf. v. 14; their absence is a sign of God's disfavour, Ps 74:9; Lm 2:9.

m. 'to bulls' conj.; 'bulls' Hebr.

13 a. On the ancient political importance of Ephraim see Jos 24:30; Jg 8:1–3; 12:1–6.

b. 'sacrifice to them' conj.; 'those who sacrifice' Hebr.

c. An act of homage, see 1 K 19:18.

d. For this line the Greek has 'I am the Lord your God who set the heavens firm and keep the earth steady; my hands have created the whole array of heaven, but I have not shown these to you for you to follow them. I it was who brought you up out of Egypt.' • When the calf-idols of Dan and Bethel were installed, Jeroboam said, 'Here are your gods, Israel, these brought you up out of Egypt,' 1 K 12:28.

e. 'I pastured them' conj.; 'according to their pasture' Hebr.

f. Translation uncertain; lit. 'your destruction, Israel; for (or, but) in me for 'your help'.

g. Perhaps an ironical allusion to King Hosea (732–724) whose name means 'Yahweh saves'.

h. The metaphor of the pangs of childbirth is here used for the first time to describe the catastrophe hanging over the nation, cf. Is 26:17; 66:6–7; Jr 6:24. Here the metaphor implies that the catastrophe is designed by God to produce conversion and hence be the source of new life, i.e. the birth of the child. Ephraim, however, refuses to be born and is therefore doomed.

i. The context demands that v. 14 be interpreted as a threat. The two first questions expect a negative answer, and the next two are an invitation to death and Sheol to send their scourges on a rebellious people. Paul quotes this text to proclaim that death is conquered, 1 Co 15:55; but he interprets it according to the current practice by which it was perfectly acceptable to take a phrase entirely out of its context.

j. 'Ephraim' is not in the text, which has simply 'he'. But it is hinted at by 'bear fruit' (yapheri') which corresponds to the explanation of the name given in Gn 41:52.

k. The east wind stands for Assyria.

III: THE REPENTANCE AND RECONCILIATION OF ISRAEL [a]

The sincere conversion of Israel to Yahweh

Israel, come back to Yahweh your God 2 5:5 your guilt was the cause of your downfall.
Provide yourself with words [b] 3 and come back to Yahweh.
Say to him, 'Take all guilt away
Ps 32:1+;50:14+ and give us what is good, Heb 13:15 instead of bulls we will dedicate to you our lips.
7:11;12:2 Is 31:1 Assyria cannot save us, 4
we will not ride horses any more, 2:18–19 or say, "Our God!" to our own handiwork, [c] for you are the one in whom orphans find compassion.'

I shall cure them of their disloyalty, 5 1:6;9:15;2:16–25 I shall love them with all my heart, for my anger has turned away from them.
Is 26:19 I shall fall like dew on Israel, 6
he will bloom like the lily and thrust out roots like the cedar of Lebanon; [d] Is 27:6 he will put out new shoots, 7 he will have the beauty of the olive tree and the fragrance of Lebanon.
They will come back to live in my shade; [e] 8
they will grow wheat again,
they will make the vine flourish, their wine will be as famous as Lebanon's.
4:17 2 Co 6:16 What has Ephraim to do with idols any more [f] 9 when I hear him and watch over him?
I am like an evergreen cypress, you owe your fruitfulness to me. [g]

Concluding admonition [h]

Ps 107:43 Pr 4:7 Let the wise understand these words, 10 let the intelligent grasp their meaning, Dt 32:4 for Yahweh's ways are straight and the upright will walk in them, but sinners will stumble.

14 a. The prophecy ends on a note of hope, already heard in 2:16–25; 3:5; 11:8–11; 12:10. A liturgical prayer expressing sincere repentance, corresponding to 6:1–6, is followed by a firm promise of God's blessing.

b. With words of true repentance and not with sacrifices, see 6:6.

c. The rejection of idols also implies the rejection of those forms of idolatry inherent in trusting to foreign alliances (Assyria) and to military strength (horses, i.e. chariotry) rather than to Yahweh as sole Saviour, see 8:9h; Ps 20:7–8; Is 30:1–5; 31:1–3.

d. 'the cedar of' supplied; Hebr. omits.

e. 'my' conj.; 'They will come back and live in his shade' Gk; 'Those who live in his shade will come back' Hebr.

f. 'What has Ephraim to do' conj.; 'Ephraim, what have I to do' Hebr.

g. A second pun on the name Ephraim, see 13:15j. • The evergreen cypress is the symbol of life, of which Yahweh is the sole source. Having condemned fertility ceremonies held under sacred trees, 4:13, Yahweh makes it clear that he himself is the reality, of which fertility cults are a caricature.

h. Addition in the Wisdom style.

Lament over the ruin of the country

2 Listen to this, you elders;
everybody in the country, attend!
Has anything like this ever happened in your day,
or in your ancestors' days?
3 Tell your children about it and let your children tell their children, and their children the next generation!

4 What the nibbler has left, the grown locust has eaten, — Dt 28:38 Am 4:9;7:1seq. Ml 3:11 what the grown locust has left, the hopper has eaten, and what the hopper has left, the shearer has eaten. [a] — Ps 105:34–35

5 Wake up, you drunkards, and weep! — Is 5:11+
All you wine-bibbers, lament for the new wine: it has been snatched from your lips. — Dt 28:39 6 For a nation has invaded my country, mighty and innumerable, — Jr 46:23 with teeth like a lion's teeth, — ↗Rv 9:8 with the fangs of a lioness.
7 It has reduced my vines to a desolation — Is 5:1+ Na 2:3
and my fig trees to splinters, stripped them and broken them down, [b] leaving their branches white.

8 Mourn, [c] as a virgin-bride in sackcloth — Jr 3:4 for the bridegroom of her youth! [d] 9 Cereal offering and libation [e] are lost to Yahweh's Temple.
The priests, the ministers of Yahweh, are in mourning.
10 The fields are ruined, — Ho 4:3a

1 a. An invasion of locusts has devastated the country. Of the four terms used here for the insect, 'arbeh, or 'destroyer', (translated 'grown locust' here) is the commonest, indicating the species as a whole. The exact meanings of the other three are disputed. Either they designate various sub-species, or more probably successive stages of growth: yeleq ('hopper'), hasil ('shearer'), gazam ('nibbler').

b. Text corrected; Hebr. 'he will certainly strip them and break them down'.

c. The prophet is addressing the community.

d. 'sackcloth' to symbolise grief and repentance.

e. The daily oblation, see Lv 2, and libation were offerings from the produce of the soil: flour, wine and oil, see Ex 29:38–42; Nb 28:3–8.

the land is in mourning, for the grain has been ruined,
the new wine has failed,
of olive oil only a trickle.

Stand dismayed, you farmers, 11
wail, you vinedressers,
for the wheat, for the barley!
The harvest of the fields has been lost!
The vine has withered, 12
the fig tree wilts away;
pomegranate, palm tree, apple tree,
Am 4:7–9 every tree in the countryside is dry, Is 16:10 Jr 25:10 and for human beings joy has run dry too.

A call to repentance and prayer

1:8d Priests, put on sackcloth and lament! 13
You ministers of the altar, wail!
Come here,[f] lie in sackcloth all night long,
you ministers of my God!
For the Temple of your God has been deprived of cereal offering and libation.
2:15 Order[g] a fast, 14 proclaim a solemn assembly;
you elders, summon
everybody in the country to the Temple of Yahweh your God.
Cry out to Yahweh:
Is 13:6 Ezk 30:2–3 'Alas for the day! 15
For the Day of Yahweh is near,
coming as destruction from Shaddai.'[h]

Has not the food disappeared 16 before our very eyes?
Have not joy and gladness vanished from the Temple of our God?
The seeds shrivel 17
under their clods;[i]
the granaries are deserted,
the barns are in ruins,
because the harvest has dried out.
Loudly the cattle groan! 18
The herds of oxen are bewildered because they have no pasture.
Ho 4:3a The flocks of sheep bear the punishment too.

Yahweh, to you I cry: 19
for fire[j] has devoured the desert pastures, flame has burnt up all the trees in the countryside.
Even the wild animals pant loudly for you, 20
for the watercourses have run dry, and fire has devoured the desert pastures.

Am 5:18m A warning about the Day of Yahweh[a]

2 Blow the ram's-horn[b] in Zion, 1 sound the alarm on my holy mountain!

Let everybody in the country tremble, for the Day of Yahweh is coming,
yes, it is near. 1:15

2 Day of darkness and gloom, ‖Zp 1:15
Day of cloud and blackness.[c] Jn 8:12b Like the dawn, across the mountains spreads a vast and mighty people,[d] 1:6
such as has never been before, such as will never be again to the remotest ages.

The invasion of locusts

3 In their van a fire devours, 1:19 in their rear a flame consumes.
The country is like a garden of Eden ahead of them Gn 2:8
and a desert waste behind them.
Nothing escapes them.
4 They look like horses, ↗Rv 9:7,9 like chargers they gallop on,[e] 5 with a racket like that of chariots they spring over the mountain tops, with a crackling like a blazing fire devouring the stubble,
a mighty army in battle array.

6 At the sight of them, people are appalled Is 13:8 and every face grows pale. Na 2:11 7 Like fighting men they press forward, like warriors they scale the walls,
each marching straight ahead,
not turning from his path;[f] 8 they never jostle each other,
each marches straight ahead:
arrows fly, they still press forward, never breaking ranks.
9 They hurl themselves at the city, they leap on to the walls,
swarm up the houses,
getting in through the windows like thieves.

f. Into the Temple, see 2:17.

g. lit. 'sanctify'. Similar exhortations to repentance and prayer recur in 2:12–13,15–17; see also Jon 3:5–9. The interest that Joel displays in formal observances and the liturgy, 1:9,13,16; 2:14, contrasts markedly with the attitude of Amos, Hosea, Micah, and Jeremiah, see Am 5:21n; but Joel, too, insists on the need for inward conversion, 2:13.

h. There is a play on the words shod (devastation) and Shaddai (a name of God, see Gn 17:1b). The plague of locusts heralds the 'Day of Yahweh', which is a day of terror, see 2:1–2,11; Am 5:18m, even though, in the context of Jl 3–4 (but see Ob 15), it brings the ultimate triumph of Israel.

i. Sense uncertain; three out of the four Hebr. words in the sentence occur here and nowhere else.

j. Fire, cf. 2:3, and flame are symbolic of the drought following the depredations of the locusts, see Am 7:4.

2 a. The invasion of locusts is described in vv. 1–11 as the attack of an irresistible army, this time as an aspect of the Day of Yahweh, 1:15.

b. A warning of imminent danger, Ezk 33:3,6; Ho 5:8; Am 3:6, the sound of trumpet or horn heralds the punishment of Israel, Is 18:3; Jr 4:5; 6:1; Ho 8:1, and the coming of the Day of retribution, 2:1; Zp 1:16, cf. Rv 8:6–9:21. It is also used to summon Israel to religious gatherings, 2:15; Nb 10:2–10; hence it is to be the signal for the gathering of all the elect on the last day, Is 27:13; 1 Th 4:16–17; 1 Co 15:52.

c. These images correspond to the approach of the cloud of locusts which darken the sky, cf. Rv 9:2. The comparison is either with the speed of the invasion of locusts or with the yellowish gleam of the sun on their bodies.

d. 'Like the dawn, . . . spreads' Gk; 'As the dawn spreads' Hebr.

e. The comparison of locusts with horses is not uncommon. Here, vv. 4–9, it is elaborated into a description of the advancing locusts in terms of an invading army; see Na 2:4–7,11; 3:2–3,15–17, where the context is apocalyptic.

f. 'turning from' Gk; 'entangling' Hebr.

B: YAHWEH'S ANSWER

Dt 4:24f Then, becoming jealous over his country, 18
Yahweh took pity on his people.

The plague stops

Yahweh said in answer to his people, 19
'Now I shall send you Dt 11:14 wheat, wine and olive oil until you have enough.

Never again will I expose you to the contempt of the nations.
20 I shall take the northerner far away from you[g]
and drive him into an arid, desolate land, his vanguard to the eastern sea,
his rearguard to the western sea.
He will give off a stench,
he will give off a foul stink — Is 34:3 Am 4:10 (for what he made bold to do).'

A vision of plenty

21 Land, do not be afraid;
be glad, rejoice,
for Yahweh has done great things. — Ps 126:2,3 22 Wild animals, do not be afraid;
the desert pastures are green again,
the trees bear fruit,
vine and fig tree yield their richness.

23 Sons of Zion, be glad, rejoice in Yahweh your God;
for he has given you
autumn rain as justice[m] demands, and he will send the rains down for you,
the autumn and spring rain as of old. — Dt 11:14 24 The threshing-floors will be full of grain, the vats overflow with wine and oil.

25 'I will make up to you for the years devoured by grown locust and hopper, — 1:4a by shearer and young locust, my great army
which I sent to invade you.

26 'You will eat to your heart's content, and praise the name of Yahweh your God who has treated you so wonderfully.
(My people will never be humiliated again!)

27 'And you will know that I am among you in Israel, — Ho 11:9
I, Yahweh your God, and no one else. — Is 42:8e; 44:6+
My people will never be humiliated again!'

g. Cosmic phenomena mark the Day of Yahweh, see Am 8:9h.

h. The thunder, see 4:16; Ex 19:16g; Jb 37:4,5; Ps 18:13; 29:3–9; Am 1:2. The locusts are the 'troops'.

i. Good harvests, see Dt 7:13–14; 16:10,15,17; Hg 2:15–19, making sacred offerings possible again, see Jl 1:9.

j. 'Order' and 'summon': lit. 'sanctify', see 1:14.

k. In the courtyard to the east of the sanctuary, see 1 K 6:3; Ezk 40:48–49, between the portico (ulam) and the altar of burnt offering, 1 K 8:64; 2 Ch 8:12. The priests pray facing the sanctuary.

l. The army of locusts, vv. 1–11, is now assimilated to the enemy coming from the north to execute Yahweh's judgements, a consistent theme in prophetic literature, Jr 1:13–15,13e; Ezk 26:7.

m. Meaning uncertain: 'as justice demands', lit. 'for justice', perhaps a gloss: Yahweh gives the repentant people rain 'according to his justice', that is his loyalty towards the people in view of the covenant; or 'in due measure' or again 'in view of justice', as a sign of the return of the people to uprightness. The Vulg. has given this text a messianic meaning by translating 'the teacher of uprightness', see Ho 10:12 Hebr., and Jr 23:6; 33:15. This title recurs to denote the principal personality of the Covenant Sect in the Qumran texts.

II: THE NEW AGE AND THE DAY OF YAHWEH

B: THE JUDGEMENT OF THE NATIONS[a]

The judgement announced

4 'For in those days and at that time, 1
Zc 12 when I restore the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem,[b] Zc 14:2 I shall gather all the nations together 2 ↗Rv 16:13–16 and take them down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat;[c] there I shall put them on trial as regards Israel, my people and my heritage,[d] for having scattered them among the nations and having divided my land among themselves.[e] They drew lots for my people, 3 bartering a boy for a whore and selling a girl for wine to drink.

Am 1:6–10 Charges against the Phoenicians and Philistines[f]

and all you regions of Philistia?
Can you take revenge on me?
If you take revenge on me,
I shall quickly, instantly, make your revenge recoil on your own heads[g] for having taken my silver and gold away 5 and carried off my valuable treasures to your temples, Ezk 27:13 and for having sold 6
the children of Judah and Jerusalem to the Ionians,[h] to be taken far away from their own frontiers.
Look, I shall rouse them from the places to which you have sold them; 7
I shall make your actions recoil on your own heads by selling your sons and daughters 8 who in turn will sell them to the Sabaeans,[i]

to a nation far away—

A summons to the nations[j] Ezk 38–39 Zc 14:2

9 Proclaim this among the nations.
Prepare for war![k]
Rouse the champions!
All you troops, advance,
march!
10 Hammer your ploughshares into swords, Is 2:4 Mi 4:3

let the weakling say, 'I am tough!' 11 Hurry and come,

and assemble there!
(Yahweh, send down your champions!)[m] 12 'Let the nations rouse themselves and march to the Valley of Jehoshaphat, for there I shall sit in judgement on all the nations around.
13 Ply the sickle, Is 17:5; 63:1–6 Mt 13:39 Mk 4:29 Jn 4:35*l* ↗Rv 14:14–20 for the harvest is ripe;
come and tread,
for the winepress is full;
the vats are overflowing,
so great is their wickedness!' 14 Multitude on multitude Is 17:12 in the Valley of Decision![n] 4:2c
For the Day of Yahweh is near
in the Valley of the Verdict!

3 a. We follow the traditional Hebrew chapter divisions. In the Gk OT, 3:1 = 2:28 and 4:1 = 3:1. The prophecy of vv. 1–3, the fulfilment of which is assigned by vv. 4–5 to the Day of Yahweh, promises an outpouring of the spirit when that day comes, see Ezk 36:27f. Peter's discourse in Ac 2:16–21, 17k identifies the miracle of Pentecost as the fulfilment of this prophecy.

b. God's spirit will be poured out on all, regardless of social standing, in accordance with Moses' prayer, Nb 11:29. It is both spirit of prophecy, characterised here by dreams and visions, see Nb 12:6, and cause of inward renewal, see Ezk 11:19–20; 36:26–27.

c. Heralding the final judgement on the Day of Yahweh, 1:15; 2:1–2,10; Am 8:9h.

d. 'in Jerusalem' transposed from the 2nd line of v. • 'a remnant' conj.; 'among the remnant' Hebr.

4 a. The restoration of Israel involves the punishment of the oppressor-nations, cf. Ob 15–21. The Day of Yahweh here becomes full of menace for the enemy nations. • As in previous chapters, the words of Yahweh, vv. 1–8,12–13,17 (21^{a}?), are intermingled with those of the prophet, 9–11,14–16,18–20,21^{b}.

b. Alternatively: 'when I bring back the captives of Judah and Jerusalem'.

c. Jehoshaphat (lit. 'Yahweh judges'), also v. 12, is the symbolic name for the place where Yahweh is to judge the nations, see Is 66:16; Jr 25:31, called 'the Valley of Decision' in v. 14. vv. 11 and 16 suggest that it is near Jerusalem, though it is unnecessary to identify it with the present 'Valley of Jehoshaphat' (the valley of the Kidron to the south east of the Temple), a name traceable only to the fourth century AD.

d. Here Israel is not the Northern Kingdom but all the people of Yahweh, cf. 2:23,27; 4:1.

e. Alluding to the deportations of 597 and 586, and to the treatment of the country and its capital by the Chaldaeans and Judah's neighbouring states, cf. Ezk 21:23–37; 25; Ob 11–14; Na 3:10.

f. Unlike the peoples in the previous prophecy, vv. 1–2, these two are mentioned by name and charged with plundering, v. 5, and for trafficking in Jewish slaves (possibly victims of the disasters of 597 and 586). See Am 1:6–10 (vv. probably dating from the Exile), where the same charges are brought against the same peoples.

g. In accordance with the lex talionis (Ex 21:25f) applied in vv. 5–8, cf. Ps 7:14–16; Ob 15.

h. The Greeks.

i. A mercantile people in the south of Arabia, see 1 K 10:1a; Jb 6:19; Jr 6:20.

j. Resumption of the theme of judgement, vv. 1–3. The nations may declare war on Yahweh and march on Zion, cf. Zc 12:3–4; 14:2, but there in the Valley of Decision, vv. 11–14, they will meet their judgement and final defeat, vv. 15–17.

k. lit. 'sanctify war'; war was regarded as a sacred undertaking, cf. 2:16; Is 13:3; Jr 6:4; 22:7.

l. Reversal of the paradisal conditions, Is 2:4; 11:6e, reinstituted after the judgement, vv. 18 and 21.

m. 'Hurry' hushu conj.; Hebr. 'ushu unknown. • 'assemble' Gk; 'they will assemble' Hebr. The last line is probably a gloss. • The 'champions' or 'heroes' of the heavenly army are the angels (the 'holy ones' of Zc 14:5).

n. Verdict and decision that settle a matter. The word can also mean the sledge underset with sharp stones used for threshing, cf. Is 28:27; 41:15; Am 1:3; the figure is suggested by the 'harvest' in v. 13; in which case, 'Valley of the Sledge'.

The Day of Yahweh

o. Inviolable, see Is 51:23; 52:1; Jr 31:40; Ob 17; Na 2:1; Zc 9:8; 14:21.

p. Location uncertain in the apocalyptic context of a renewed Holy Land.

q. Following Gk and Syr.; 'I shall leave their blood unpunished'; 'I shall not leave unpunished' Hebr. • This verse is meant to be a gloss on the end of v. 19.

AMOS

Title

1 1 Words of Amos one of the shepherds of Tekoa. [a] The visions he had about Israel, in the time of Uzziah king of Judah and Jeroboam [b] son of Joash, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake. [c] 8:8;9:5 Zc 14:5

Introduction

2 He said:

Yahweh roars from Zion [d] 11:10 ‖Jr 25:30 ‖Jl 4:16
and makes himself heard from Jerusalem;
the shepherds' pastures mourn, and the crown of Carmel dries up. Is 33:9 Na 1:4

I: JUDGEMENT ON THE NEIGHBOURING NATIONS AND ON ISRAEL ITSELF [e]

Damascus Is 17:1–3 Jr 49:23–27

3 Yahweh says this:

For the three crimes, the four crimes [f] of Damascus,
I have made my decree and will not relent: [g] because they have threshed Gilead with iron threshing-sledges, [h] 2 K 8:12; 10:32–33; 4 I shall send fire down on the House of Hazael 13:3,7 to devour the palaces of Ben-Hadad; [i] 5 I shall break the gate-bar of Damascus,
I shall destroy the inhabitant of Bikath-Aven, the holder of the sceptre in Beth-Eden, [j] and the people of Aram will be deported to Kir, [k] 2 K 16:9
Yahweh says.

1 a. Sheep farmers, cf. 2 K 3:4, rather than a mere shepherd. • Tekoa is a village in Judah, about 5 miles (8 km) south east of Bethlehem.

b. Uzziah of Judah, 781–740; Jeroboam II of Israel, 783–743 BC.

c. The earthquake in question is possibly attested by archaeological excavations at Hazor in Upper Galilee; it seems to have occurred in the middle of the eighth century BC. As a result of it, see Zc 14:5 (LXX), valleys became blocked. This is not merely a method of dating; the editors responsible for the note almost certainly regarded the earthquake as a divine manifestation confirming Amos' prophecy, cf. 9:5; Ps 75:3; Mi 1:4.

d. Whether these are Amos' own words or a later Judaean adjustment, see Ho 1:7i, the passage asserts that despite the schism Jerusalem, where Yahweh resides, is the unifying centre of God's people.

e. This section assembles prophecies pronounced at various times against seven nations (an added prophecy against Judah is probably of later date). The structure of these prophecies is the same throughout and the same stereotyped formulae recur. They stress that Yahweh will leave no injustice unpunished among the nations. Israel is dealt with last, to show that the punishment it so little expects will strike Israel no less than other nations, and this will be the supreme manifestation of divine justice.

f. These two numbers together indicate an indefinite number, large or small according to context, cf. 4:8; Is 17:6; Jr 36:23 and the 'numerical proverbs', Pr 30:15e.

g. lit. 'I shall not reverse it', the pronoun 'it' standing for the divinely ordained penalty.

h. Weighted sledges used for threshing grain in the Middle East. The image is often used for the destruction of the vanquished, Is 21:10; 41:15; Mi 4:12seq., see also Elisha's prophecy, 2 K 8:12.

i. Hazael and his son Ben-Hadad III kings of Aram were bitter enemies of Israel.

j. Bikath-Aven ('Valley of Wickedness') and Beth-Eden ('House of Pleasure'), otherwise unidentified, are probably symbolic names for Damascus.

k. Back to their place of origin, according to 9:7. According to 2 K 16:9, the prophecy was fulfilled as a result of Tiglath-Pileser III's campaign in 733–732 BC. Kir is perhaps somewhere near Elam, Is 22:6.

Jos 13:2b Jr 47 Jl 4:4f Zp 2:4–7,4e
Gaza and Philistia

Yahweh says this: 6

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Gaza,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
2 Ch 21:16–17 because they have deported entire nations as slaves to Edom,
I shall send fire down on the walls of Gaza 7
to devour its palaces;
2 Ch 26:6 I shall destroy the inhabitant of Ashdod, 8
the holder of the sceptre in Ashkelon;
I shall turn my hand against Ekron [l] and the remnant [m] of the Philistines will perish, says the Lord Yahweh.

Is 23 Ezk 26–28
Tyre and Phoenicia

Yahweh says this: 9

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Tyre,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
because they have handed hosts of captives over to Edom, 1 K 5:26; 9:11–14 heedless of a covenant of brotherhood, [n]
I shall send fire down on the walls of Tyre 10
to devour its palaces.

Dt 2:1b Is 34 Jr 49:7–22 Ezk 25:12–14;35
Edom

Yahweh says this: 11

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Edom,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
Gn 27:41 Nb 20:14–21 because he has pursued his brother [o] with the sword, because he has stifled any sense of pity, and perpetually nursed his anger [p]
and constantly cherished his rage, I shall send fire down on Teman [q] 12 to devour the palaces of Bozrah.

Dt 2:19e Jr 49:1–6 Ezk 25:1–7 Zp 2:8–11
Ammon

Yahweh says this: 13

For the three crimes, the four crimes of the Ammonites,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
2 K 8:12; 15:16 Ho 14:1 because they have disembowelled the pregnant women of Gilead in order to extend their own frontiers, I shall light a fire against the walls of Rabbah [r] 14
to devour its palaces
amid war cries on the day of battle, Is 28:2 in a whirlwind on the day of storm, and their king shall go into captivity, 15 he and his chief men with him,
says Yahweh.

Nb 22:36h Is 15–16 Jr 48 Ezk 25:8–11 Zp 2:8–11
Moab

2 Yahweh says this: 1

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Moab,
I have made my decree and will not relent:

because they have burnt the bones of the king [a] of Edom to ash, 2 I shall send fire down into Moab to devour the palaces of Kerioth, and Moab will die in the tumult, amid war cries and the blare of trumpets;
3 I shall destroy the ruler there and slaughter all the chief men there with him, says Yahweh. [b]

Judah [c]

4 Yahweh says this:

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Judah,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
because they have despised Yahweh's law — Lv 26:14–15 Is 5:24 Jr 7:28 and not kept his commandments, since their Falsehoods, [d] which their ancestors followed,
have led them astray,
5 I shall send fire down on Judah — Jr 17:27 Ho 8:14 to devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

Israel [e]

6 Yahweh says this:

For the three crimes, the four crimes of Israel,
I have made my decree and will not relent:
because they have sold the upright for silver and the poor for a pair of sandals, [f] — =8:6 7 because they have crushed the heads of the weak into the dust [g] — Is 3:15 and thrust the rights of the oppressed to one side, father and son sleeping with the same girl [h] — Dt 27:20;23:19 and thus profaning my holy name, 8 lying down beside every altar — Dt 24:12–13 on clothes acquired as pledges, and drinking the wine of the people they have fined in the house of their god. [i]

l. Gath, the fifth Philistine town, is not mentioned; it had already been destroyed by Hazael, 2 K 12:18; cf. Am 6:2.

m. A word later to acquire strong theological overtones, see Is 4:3c but here used in its primary sense of the survivors of a group decimated by catastrophe.

n. This suggests that the victims of the slave-trade were Israelites captured during the campaigns of Hazael and Ben-Hadad III, notwithstanding the friendly relations existing between Tyre and Israel since the days of Solomon (1 K 5; 9:11–14) and reinforced by Ahab's marriage to Jezebel (1 K 16:31), daughter of Ethbaal king of Tyre and Sidon.

o. Israel, 'brother' of Edom, Gn 25:21–24,29–30.

p. 'nursing his anger' Syr.; 'his anger rends' Hebr.

q. A poetic name for Edom, see Jr 49:7,20; Ob 9.

r. Capital of Ammon, now Amman, see 2 S 11–12.

2 a. Incineration would prevent the dead man's happiness in the after-life, and was regarded by the Semites as a detestable crime.

b. Yahweh reproaches Moab for its conduct towards a gentile. Israel had no connection with this crime. We may deduce that in the other prophecies also criminal conduct is condemned as such, not because Israel is the victim. For Amos the moral law binds all humanity.

c. This prophecy in the style of Dt is probably a Judaean insertion, see Ho 1:7i. Many scholars think the prophecies against Tyre and Edom are also additional.

d. i.e. their idols.

e. Pronouncements against the nations are a normal element of prophetic preaching, Is 13–23; Jr 46–51; Ezk 25–32. By including Israel among these idolaters, Amos must have astounded and enraged his listeners.

f. The prophets often protest against legal corruption, 5:7; 6:12; Is 1:23; Mi 3:1–3,9–11; 7:1–3.

g. 'crushing' assumes that the root sha'ap is a form (in fact well attested) of the root shup, rather than of the more frequent root sha'ap 'eager for', 'panting for'. • Before 'the heads' Hebr. has 'with' or 'by', left untranslated. 'into the dust' is perhaps additional. The line is obscure. • On the greed of the mighty, another prophetic theme, see 8:5–6; Is 1:17.23; 3:14; Jr 2:34; Ezk 22:29; Mi 2:1–2,8–11; 3:9–11; 6:9–12; Zp 1:9.

h. This does not refer to a religious prostitute, but to a domestic servant used as an object of pleasure by both father and son. This is condemned less for its incestuous aspect than for the degradation inflicted on a human being. This outrage to human dignity is an outrage to God.

i. At the sacred banquets which followed the sacrifices. • 'their god': this is certainly Yahweh, but they debase him to the rank of an idol when honouring him by feasting on goods exacted from the unfortunate under an appearance of legality, whether by fine or, in the case of insolvency, confiscation, cf. Si 34:20. Clothes taken in pledge from the poor had to be returned by nightfall, Dt 24:12–13.

Dt 7:1a;9:1-2 Yet it was I who destroyed the Amorite before them, 9 he who was as tall as the cedars, as strong as the oaks;
Jb 18:16 Ho 9:16 I who destroyed his fruit above ground and his roots below.[j]
It was I who brought you up from Egypt 10 Dt 2:7 and for forty years led you through the desert to take possession of the Amorite's country;
Dt 18:18e I who raised up prophets from your sons 11
Nb 6:1a and Nazirites from your young men.
Israelites, is this not true?
—declares Yahweh!

But you have made the Nazirite drink wine 12 7:12–13 1 K 22:8,27 Is 30:10 Jr 11:21 and given orders to the prophets,
'Do not prophesy.'[k]
Very well! Like a cart overloaded with sheaves 13 1:3h I shall crush you where you stand; flight will be cut off for the swift, 14
the strong will have no chance to exert his strength 9:1 Ps 33:16 nor the warrior be able to save his life;
the archer will not stand his ground, 15
Jr 46:5 the swift of foot will not escape, nor will the horseman save his life;
even the bravest of warriors 16 Mk 14:52; 3:18o will jettison his arms and run away, that day!
—declares Yahweh!

II: ISRAEL WARNED AND THREATENED

Election and punishment

3 Listen, Israelites, to this prophecy which Yahweh pronounces against you, 1 against the whole family which I brought up from Egypt:[a]

Dt 7:6b You alone have I intimately known[b] of all the families of earth, 2
Mt 11:20–24par. that is why I shall punish you for all your wrong-doings.

The prophetic call cannot be resisted[c]

Do two people travel together 3 unless they have agreed to do so?[d] Does the lion roar in the forest 4 if it has no prey?
Does the young lion growl in his lair
if it has caught nothing?
Does a bird fall on the ground in a net 5 unless a trap[e] has been set for it?
Will the net spring up from the ground without catching something?
Jl 2:1b Is 45:7 Does the trumpet sound in the city 6 without the people being alarmed?
Does misfortune come to a city
if Yahweh has not caused it?

No indeed, Lord Yahweh does nothing 7
Gn 18:17 Jr 7:25 without revealing his secret to his servants the prophets.[f]

8 The lion roars: who is not afraid?
Lord Yahweh has spoken: who will not prophesy? — Rv 10:3; 7:14–15; Jr 20:7–9; Ac 4:20; 1 Co 9:16

Samaria will perish for her corruption

9 From the palace roofs of Assyria and from the palace roofs of Egypt,[g] proclaim aloud,
'Assemble on the hills of Samaria — Zp 3:8
and observe the grave disorders inside her and the acts of oppression there!' — 2:6–8 10 Little they know of right conduct
—declares Yahweh—
who cram their palaces with violence and extortion.
11 This is why—Lord Yahweh says this—an enemy will soon besiege the land,[h] — 2 K 17:3–6 he will bring down your strength and your palaces will be looted.

12 Yahweh says this:
As the shepherd rescues two legs or the tip of an ear — Gn 31:39; Ex 22:12
from the lion's mouth,
so will the children of Israel be salvaged[i] who now loll in Samaria in the corners of their beds, on their divans of Damascus.[j]

Against Bethel and domestic luxury

13 Listen and testify against the House of Jacob —declares the Lord Yahweh, God Sabaoth— — 1 S 1:3c 14 the day when I punish Israel for his crimes
I shall also punish the altars of Bethel;[k] — 1 K 12:29–30,29e; 13:1–5 •Ex 27:2b the horns of the altar will be hacked off and will fall to the ground.
15 I shall blast winter house with summer house, ivory houses[l] will be destroyed — 2 K 22:19 and many mansions cease to be
—declares Yahweh.

j. Metaphor of total destruction.

k. Throughout this saying of Yahweh, the Israelites' behaviour is condemned not only as a breach of the laws, but also and primarily as deliberate opposition to God's concern for them as his chosen people.

3 a. In the last part of the v. the prophet seems to be addressing the twelve tribes. This may be a Judaean adaptation intended, the Northern Kingdom having disappeared, to apply Amos' message to the kingdom of Judah, see 2:4seq.

b. 'known' in the biblical sense of chosen, loved: Gn 18:19; Dt 9:24; Ws 10:5; Jr 1:5; Ho 13:4. Israel's being chosen is not, in Amos' eyes, a privilege, 9:7g, but a responsibility which the nation has to discharge by faithfulness and right conduct.

c. In all this passage the prophet is justifying his intervention. There is neither effect without cause, vv. 3–5[b], nor cause without effect, vv. 5[c]–6,8[a]. If the prophet exercises his office, it is because Yahweh has spoken; if God speaks, the prophet cannot but prophesy, vv. 7–8[b]. The images chosen suggest that the message will be one of disaster.

d. Or 'without having met'; Gk 'without knowing each other'.

e. Or 'bait', or 'sling'.

f. A prose gloss.

g. 'Assyria' Gk; 'Ashdod' Hebr. • Israel's two great hostile neighbours are summoned as witnesses to her crimes, as heaven and earth are summoned in Is 1:2, cf. Dt 30:19.

h. Yesobeb conj.; Hebr. usebib 'all around'. • Though never specified, the enemy is Assyria, the threat of which pervades Amos' entire prophecy.

i. The shepherd discharged his liability for a missing sheep by producing the fragments left by a predator. Far from promising that an Israelite remnant will survive, Amos prophesies that nothing but scraps will be salvaged to attest the honesty of the shepherd, that is Yahweh, and his prophet, see Ex 22:12.

j. lit. 'on the Damascus of a divan'. The word 'Damascus' perhaps designated a luxurious material as the derived English word 'damask' does today.

k. On Bethel, see 4:4c.

l. Houses in which the furniture or walls were overlaid with ivory. Such decorations have been discovered in the course of excavation in Samaria.

Is 3:16–24; 32:9–14

Against the women of Samaria

4 Listen to this saying, you cows of Bashan [a] 1 living on the hill of Samaria, exploiting the weak and ill-treating the poor, saying to your husbands, 'Bring us something to drink!'
Lv 17:1a Ps 89:35 The Lord God has sworn by his holiness: 2
Look, the days will soon be on you when he will use hooks to drag you away Is 5:11–12+ and fish-hooks for the very last of you; through the breaches in the wall you will leave, 3
each one straight ahead, and be herded away towards Hermon [b]
—declares Yahweh.

The self-deception, obstinacy and punishment of Israel

Go to Bethel, and sin, 4
2 K 2:1a to Gilgal, and sin even harder! [c]
Bring your sacrifices each morning, your tithes every third day, [d] burn your thank-offering of leaven 5 Lv 7:11a Mt 6:2;23:5par. and widely publicise your free-will offerings, for this, children of Israel, is what makes you happy [e]
—declares the Lord Yahweh.

Lv 26:14–39 Ws 12:2,10 I even [f] gave you clean teeth [g] in all your towns 6 and a shortage of food in all your villages and still you would not come back to me
—declares Yahweh.

Jr 14:1–6 Jl 1:12 I even withheld the rain from you 7 full three months before harvest-time;
I caused rain to fall in one town and caused no rain to fall in another; one field was rained on
and the next for want of rain dried up; two towns, three towns went tottering 8 to one town for water to drink but went unsatisfied,
and still you would not come back to me
—declares Yahweh.

Dt 28:22 1 K 8:37 I struck you with blight and mildew, 9
I dried up [h] your gardens and vineyards;
the locust devoured your fig trees and olive trees
and still you would not come back to me
—declares Yahweh.

Ex 9:1–7 Dt 7:15 I sent plague on you like Egypt's plague, 10
I slaughtered your young men with the sword and at the same time your horses were captured; Is 34:2–3 I filled your nostrils with the stench of your camps
and still you would not come back to me
—declares Yahweh.

Gn 19:1a Zc 3:2 I overturned you as God overturned Sodom and Gomorrah; [i] 11 you were like a brand snatched from the blaze
and still you would not come back to me
—declares Yahweh.

12 So this, Israel, is what I plan to do to you.
Because I am going to do this to you,
Israel, prepare to meet your God![j] Mi 3:1-2

Doxology[k]

13 For look, he it is who forges the mountains, creates the wind, who reveals his mind to humankind,[l] 3:7 changes the dawn into darkness[m] and strides on the heights of the world:[n] Yahweh, God Sabaoth, is his name. 5:8,27;9:6 Jr 32:18 Ho 12:6

Lament for Israel

1 5 Listen to this word which I utter against you, it is a dirge, House of Israel:
2 She has fallen down, never to rise again, the virgin Israel.[a]
There she lies on her own soil, with no one to lift her up.

3 For Lord Yahweh says this:
The town which used to put a thousand in the field will be left with a hundred, and the one which used to put a hundred will be left with ten, to fight for the House of Israel.[b]

No salvation without repentance

4 For Yahweh says this to the House of Israel:
Seek me out and you will survive,[c] 2 Ch 15:2 Ho 5:6+;10:12 5 but do not seek out Bethel,
do not go to Gilgal,

4 a. Bashan in Transjordan was famous for its pasture lands and cattle. In Ps 22:12 'bulls of Bashan' symbolise frightening power; here the 'cows' symbolise the reckless luxury of the women of Samaria.

b. 'be herded' Gk; 'herd' Hebr. • 'Towards Hermon', i.e. towards Assyria.

c. The sin does not consist simply in frequenting shrines where true religion is contaminated by idolatrous practices but in deliberately disobeying God while showing such enthusiasm in public worship, 5:21n. • On Bethel, see Gn 12:8; 1 K 12:28–13:10. On Gilgal, see Jos 4:19b.

d. The prophet is sarcastically exaggerating about the rites performed. Alternative trans.: 'on the third day' (after the worshipper's arrival at the shrine). The offering of tithe, Dt 14:22d, was a very ancient religious custom, at Bethel supposedly dating back to the patriarch Jacob, Gn 28:22.

e. The prophet's insistence on 'your' sacrifices, 'your' offerings, what makes 'you' happy, is to point out that the pilgrims to the shrine are more concerned with their own inclinations than they are with honouring God.

f. The following passage, vv. 6–12, is a short poem with a refrain indicating the lesson God wanted the people to learn from these events. As a father punishes his child, Dt 8:5a, so God wants to bring back his people to himself (here the seven strokes of his rod are listed in crescendo, vv. 6–11; Lv 26:14–39; Dt 28:15–68); but all in vain, Is 9:12; 42:25; Jr 2:30; 5:3; Ho 7:10; Zp 3:2,7; Hg 2:17, cf. Ex 7–11; Rv 9:20–21; 16:9–11. Israel is hardened in sin and God is about to take vengeance.

g. Metaphor for having nothing to eat, e.g. famine conditions.

h. 'I dried up' heherabeti conj.; Hebr. harebbot 'to increase'.

i. Probably alluding to an earthquake, see 1:1, affecting only part of the country.

j. Enigmatic announcement of the final punishment. 'Because . . . you' is perhaps a gloss.

k. A hymnal fragment, cf. 5:8–9; 9:5–6, added later, probably for liturgical use. In its present context it makes the threat more impressive by emphasising God's power over the elements, hence over all life.

l. Or 'who reveals the thoughts of humankind', cf. 2 K 5:25–26; Ps 94:11; Jr 11:20.

m. An allusion either to eclipse or to morning thunderclouds, unless the Greek text should be followed, 'who makes dawn and darkness'.

n. Either an allusion to the storm, Ps 18:7–15 or, more likely, an expression symbolising the omnipotence of God, Dt 32:13; Jb 9:8; Ps 18:33; Is 58:14; Mi 1:3–6.

5 a. The nation is compared to a girl carried off by death in the flower of youth before fulfilling herself by marriage and child-bearing, cf. Jg 11:39.

b. 'to fight' supplied. The disaster will be great. If a remnant survives, it indicates the scope of the disaster, see 1:8m; 3:12i, rather than the hope of rescue, see Is 4:3c, which is not envisaged here, see Am 5:2.

c. Visiting shrines may indeed be called 'resorting to' or 'seeking out' God, cf. v. 5; Dt 12:5; 2 Ch 1:5. But Amos asserts that the only authentic quest for God is the one that seeks out good and flees evil. This is what ensures survival, v. 6. In other OT passages, people 'seek out' God or 'consult' him (verb darash) by questioning him, see 1 S 14:41r, through a man of God, Gn 25:22; Ex 18:15; 1 S 9:9; 1 K 22:8, or again by 'seeking out the word', 1 K 22:5; cf. 14:5, either in a book, Is 34:16, or through the mediation of a prophet, 1 K 22:7. A similar expression (the verb being normally biqqesh) means rather to seek the face, i.e. the presence, of Yahweh, 2 S 21:1; 1 Ch 16:11 (= Ps 105:4); Ps 24:6; 27:8; Ho 5:15 and (probably in the same sense) Ex 33:7e; Ho 3:5; Zp 1:6; etc. But the two expressions are related: someone seeks 'the face' of Yahweh in order to learn his will, whose presence is often manifested by way of prophecies. In the OT this 'seeking Yahweh' is an imperative necessity of religious life; in the NT the equivalent is to 'seek the kingdom', Mt 6:33.

4:4c;8:14 Ho 4:15 do not journey to Beersheba, [d] for Gilgal is going into captivity and Bethel will be brought to nothing. [e] Seek out Yahweh and you will survive 6 or else he will sweep like fire upon the House of Joseph and burn it down, with no one at Bethel able to quench the flames.
Mi 3:9 They turn justice into wormwood 7 and throw uprightness to the ground. [f]

4:13k Doxology

Jb 9:9;38:31 He it is who makes the Pleiades and Orion, 8 who turns shadow dark as death into morning and day to darkest night, =9:6 who summons the waters of the sea and pours them over the surface of the land. [g] Yahweh is his name.
He brings destruction on the strong 9 and ruin comes on the fortress. [h]

Threats

6:12 They hate the man who teaches justice at the city gate 10 and detest anyone who declares the truth.
For trampling on the poor man 11
and for extorting levies on his wheat: Dt 28:30–33+ Zc 5:3–4 although you have built houses of dressed stone, you will not live in them;
Mi 6:15 Zp 1:13 although you have planted pleasant vineyards, you will not drink wine from them:
for I know how many your crimes are 12
and how outrageous your sins, you oppressors of the upright, who hold people to ransom and thrust the poor aside at the gates.
That is why anyone prudent keeps silent now, 13 ‖Mi 2:3 since the time is evil. [i]

Exhortation

5:4c Ps 34:12–14; 37:27 Seek good and not evil 14
so that you may survive, and Yahweh, God Sabaoth, be with you as you claim [j] he is.
Hate evil, love good, 15
let justice reign at the city gate:
Jl 2:14 Jn 3:9 •Is 4:3c it may be that Yahweh, God Sabaoth, will take pity on the remnant of Joseph. [k]

Impending punishment

Therefore Yahweh Sabaoth, the Lord, says this: 16
In every public square there will be lamentation, in every street they will cry out, 'Alas! Alas!'
The farmer will be called on to mourn, the professional mourners to lament, [l] and there will be wailing in every vineyard, 17 4:12 Ex 12:12 Ml 3:1–2 for I mean to pass through among you, Yahweh says.

The Day of Yahweh

18 Disaster for you who long for the Day of Yahweh! [m]
What will the Day of Yahweh mean for you?
It will mean darkness, not light, 19 as when someone runs away from a lion, only to meet a bear;
he goes into his house and puts his hand on the wall,
only for a snake to bite him.
20 Will not the Day of Yahweh be darkness, not light, totally dark, without a ray of light?

Against formalism in religion

21 I hate, I scorn your festivals, [n]
I take no pleasure in your solemn assemblies.
22 When you bring me burnt offerings . . . [o] your oblations, I do not accept them and I do not look at your communion sacrifices of fat cattle.
23 Spare me the din of your chanting, let me hear none of your strumming on lyres, [p] 24 but let justice flow like water, and uprightness like a never-failing stream!
25 Did you bring me sacrifices and oblations those forty years in the desert, House of Israel? [q] 26 Now you must shoulder Sakkuth your king and the star of your God, Kaiwan,

Ps 50:9–13; 51:16
Is 1:11+
Ho 8:13
Lv 3:1

↗Ac 7:42–43

d. Renowned as a shrine used by the patriarchs, Gn 21:31–33; 26:23–25.

e. Alliteration links Gilgal and the fate in store for it ('is going into captivity' galoh yigeleh) and there is a play on words between Bethel (meaning 'house of God') and 'house of nothing', cf. Ho 4:15.

f. Perhaps the text should be corrected so that for 'They turn' it reads 'Disaster on those who turn', cf. 5:18 and 6:1. In any case the doxology of vv. 8–9 (added a little later, perhaps for a liturgical purpose, a fragment of a hymn like 4:13 and 9:5–6) awkwardly separates the originally consecutive vv. 7 and 10.

g. Either to flood the earth, Jb 12:15, and return it to its primitive condition, Ps 104:5–9, or to impart to it a fertile rain, Jb 36:27–28.

h. Text uncertain, but the theme of bringing low the powerful is clear, cf. 1 S 2:4, 7; Lk 1:51–52.

i. To avoid being persecuted by unscrupulous rulers. This verse is perhaps a scribal gloss.

j. Relying on its special place as the chosen people, Israel has been counting on Yahweh's unconditional protection, v. 18; 9:10; Mi 3:11.

k. i.e. on the Northern Kingdom depleted by successive punishments from Yahweh, 4:6–11, with more to come, 5:3. Though the first prophetic statement of the theme of the 'surviving remnant', see Is 4:3c, Amos' words are tentative, sarcastic and sceptical at best. For a more positive approach, see 9:8–9.

l. Word order confused in Hebr., lit. 'lamentations to the professional mourners'.

m. Confident in its privileged relationship with God, Dt 7:6b, Israel counts on his favourable intervention. To this expected 'Day of Yahweh' Amos opposes the prophetic concept of the Day of Yahweh as a day of retribution, Lm 2:22; Ezk 22:24; Zp 1:15, against an Israel hardened in sin; a day of darkness, tears, massacre, terror, 2:13–16; 5:18–20; 8:9–10,13; Is 2:6–21; Jr 30:5–7; Zp 1:4–18, see also Jl 1:15–20; 2:1–11. All these texts contain threats of a disastrous invasion (Assyrian or Chaldaean). During the Exile, the Day of Yahweh becomes an object of hope; the retribution of God will now turn against Israel's oppressors, Ob 15; Babylon, Is 13:6,9; Jr 50:27; 51:2; Egypt, Is 19:16; Jr 46:10,21; Ezk 30:4; Philistia, Jr 47:4; Edom, Is 34:6; 63:1. This Day, therefore, is to bring Israel's recovery, a sense found even in 9:11 and also in Is 11:11; 12:1; 30:26; see also Jl 3:4; 4:1. After the Exile, the 'Day of Yahweh' becomes more and more a day of 'judgement' ensuring the triumph of the virtuous and the destruction of sinners, Jb 21:30; Pr 11:4; Ml 3:19–23, with the whole world for its theatre, Is 26:20–27:1; 33:10–16. See also Mt 24:1a. • On the cosmic signs that are to accompany the Day of Yahweh, see 8:9h.

n. The prophets often inveigh against religious hypocrisy, and against the conviction that provided external forms like sacrifice and fasting are observed, all is well, even though the most elementary principles of social justice and neighbourly love are neglected, 1 S 15:22; Is 1:10–16; 29:13–14; 58:1–8; Jr 6:20; Ho 6:6; Jl 2:13; Mi 6:5–8; Zc 7:4–6; see also Ps 40:6–8; 50:5–15; 51:16–17. The Psalmists lay emphasis on the inner dispositions that must lie behind acceptable sacrifice: obedience, gratitude, contrition; the Chronicler, too, insists on the part played in sacrificial worship by the liturgical chant as an expression of inward sentiments; these authors all protest against a religion of mere form. The NT will formulate the distinction definitely, Mt 7:21; Lk 11:41–42; Jn 4:21–24.

o. Either a line is missing or the beginning of v. 22 is an incomplete gloss.

p. Religious ceremonies were accompanied by vocal and instrumental music, 1 S 10:5; 2 S 6:5,15.

q. Amos, like Hosea, Ho 2:16–17; 9:10, and Jeremiah, Jr 2:2–3, regarded the period in the desert as a time of perfect union between Yahweh and his people, see Ho 2:16p. The material circumstances and rudimentary laws of a nomadic people gave small opportunity for elaborate ritual, see Jr 7:22. Yahweh could therefore be pleased with worship which, though simple, was sincere.

those idols you made for yourselves; [r] for I am about to drive you into captivity beyond Damascus, [s] 27 4:13+ Yahweh says—God Sabaoth is his name.

Against the self-indulgent and their false sense of security

Jr 5:12–13 Lk 6:24 6 Disaster for those so comfortable in Zion [a] 1 and for those so confident on the hill of Samaria, the notables of this first of nations,
those to whom the House of Israel has recourse! [b] Travel to Calneh and look, 2 go on from there to Hamath the great, then go down to Gath in Philistia.
Are they more powerful than these kingdoms?
Is their territory larger than yours? [c] Thinking to defer the evil day, 3 you are hastening the reign of violence. [d]

3:15 Lying on ivory beds 4 and sprawling on their divans, they dine on lambs from the flock,
and stall-fattened veal;
1 Ch 23:5 Ne 12:36 they bawl [e] to the sound of the lyre 5 and, like David, they invent musical instruments; they drink wine by the bowlful, 6 and lard themselves with the finest oils, but for the ruin of Joseph [f] they care nothing.
That is why they will now go into captivity, 7 heading the column of captives.
Rv 18:14 The sprawlers' revelry is over.

The punishment: plague, earthquake, invasion

4:2 Lord Yahweh has sworn by his own self 8
—declares Yahweh, God Sabaoth:
Is 28:1 I detest the pride of Jacob,
I hate his palaces,
I shall hand over the city and all in it.
2:14–16 If ten people are left in a single house, 9 they will die
and a few will be left [g] to carry 10
the bones from the house,
and they will say to anyone deep inside the house,
'Any more there?' and he will answer, 'No.'
Hab 2:20 Zp 1:7 Zc 2:17 Then he will say, 'Hush!—
Yahweh's name must not be mentioned.' [h]
For look, Yahweh gives the command: 11 as he strikes, the great house falls to pieces and the small house is in fragments.

Can horses gallop over rocks? 12
Can the sea be ploughed with oxen? [i]
Yet you have changed justice into poison, 5:7 and the fruit of uprightness into wormwood, while rejoicing over Lo-Debar 13 Dt 8:17+ and saying, 'Wasn't it by our own strength that we captured Karnaim?' [j]
But look, House of Israel, against you 14
—declares Yahweh, God Sabaoth—

I am raising a nation to oppress you [k] from the Pass of Hamath to the Gorge of the Arabah. [l]

III: THE VISIONS

First vision: the locusts

1 7 This is what Lord Yahweh showed me:
there was a swarm of locusts when the second crop was sprouting, full-grown locusts, after the king's hay had been cut. [a] 2 When they had eaten all the grass in the land,
I said, 'Lord Yahweh, forgive, I beg you. [b]
How can Jacob survive, being so small?'
3 Then Yahweh relented; [c]
'It will not happen,' said Yahweh.

Dt 28:38
Jl 1:4–7;2:3–9

Second vision: the drought

4 This is what Lord Yahweh showed me:
Lord Yahweh summoning fire in punishment; [d] it had devoured the great Abyss [e] and was encroaching on the land, 5 when I said, 'Lord Yahweh, stop, I beg you.
How can Jacob survive, being so small?'
6 Then Yahweh relented;
'This will not happen either,' said the Lord Yahweh.

Third vision: the plumb-line

7 This is what he showed me:
the Lord standing by a wall,

r. 'Sakkuth' and 'Kaiwan' conj.; 'Sikkuth' and 'Kiyyun' Hebr., which also inserts 'the star of your god' after 'those idols'. It could be a maladroit gloss. The inhabitants of the kingdom will take with them into exile the statues of the gods which they have venerated, cf. Is 46:1; Jr 48:7; 49:3. Sakkuth and Kaiwan are probably Babylonian gods. As their worship does not seem to be attested for Israel in the eighth century, and, further, since Amos never accuses his listeners of idolatry, the text is perhaps an addition, sarcastically linking the cult of Israelites contemporary with Amos to that of the pagan nations installed in Samaria to replace them after 721, cf. 2 K 17:29–31.

s. i.e. to Assyria.

6 a. 'in Zion' is perhaps a Judaean adjustment to the text, see 3:1a; Ho 1:7i.

b. i.e. recourse by the people of Israel to their leaders for paying homage, seeking counsel, and asking for justice.

c. Interpreting the v. as spoken by the notables of Samaria to those who come to consult them: 'you are more powerful than these kingdoms and have nothing to fear.' But the text is uncertain, and the last two lines can be corrected to read 'Are you more powerful than these kingdoms? Is your territory larger than theirs?', so that the collapse of these kingdoms serves as a sign to Israel. But Calneh, cf. Is 10:9, north of Aleppo, was taken by the Assyrians only in 738, Hamath on the River Orontes in 720 and Gath in Philistia in 711.

d. i.e. of enemy occupation.

e. Meaning uncertain but probably pejorative.

f. The impending collapse of the kingdom of Israel.

g. Following the Gk; Hebr. unintelligible.

h. Out of religious respect, or perhaps from fear at the disaster for which Yahweh is responsible. The passage is obscure but the general sense is clear: it describes the catastrophe which descends on the city and the dead who choke the houses, and also the terror which grips the little group of survivors who have to deal with the corpses.

i. Text slightly corrected (separating the words differently and changing the vowels). MT: 'does one plough with oxen?' (plural instead of collective singular).

j. Play on words and place-names: Lo-Debar, 2 S 9:4, meaning 'nothing' and Karnaim, 1 M 5:26, meaning 'horns', a common metaphor for 'strength'. Both towns were in northern Transjordan and had probably been reconquered by Joash or his son Jeroboam II, see 2 K 13:23; 14:25.

k. Assyria.

l. i.e. the northern and southern frontiers of the Northern Kingdom as established by the conquests of Jeroboam II. The Gorge of the Arabah is to be differentiated from the torrent of Egypt, which designates the southern boundary of the Promised Land, 1 K 8:65. It is one of the gorges which open into the lower valley of the Jordan (the 'Arabah') near the Dead Sea.

7 a. 'a swarm' Gk; 'he was forming' Hebr. • 'full-grown locusts' Gk; 'the second growth' Hebr. • Presumably the king requisitioned part of the first growth for his cavalry.

b. Intercession was one of the functions appropriate to the prophetic office, Gn 20:7. See also 2 M 15:14; Jr 15:1,11; 18:20; Ezk 9:8; Dn 9:15–19; on the intercession of Moses, see Ex 32:11e. But when the people persist in their sin, God no longer accepts the prophet's intercession, cf. Jr 14:7–11. Here Amos intercedes only in the first two visions, in the last three he says nothing.

c. i.e. agreed not to carry out his intention.

d. 'summoning fire in punishment' conj.; 'calling in order to punish by fire' Hebr. The 'fire' is drought, 1:2; 4:6–8, that devours everything, cf. Jl 1:19–20; 2:3. Others translate 'he called for a judgement by fire', i.e. fire from heaven such as destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, Gn 19:24–25,28.

e. The subterranean ocean, from which the seas are supplied.

with a plumb-line in his hand.[f]
'What do you see, Amos?' Yahweh asked me. 8
'A plumb-line,' I said.
Then the Lord said,
'Look, I am going to put a plumb-line
in among my people Israel;
never again will I overlook their offences.[g] Dt 12:2b The high places of Isaac will be ruined 9 and the sanctuaries of Israel laid waste, 2 K 15:8–10 and, sword in hand, I will attack the House of Jeroboam.'

Amaziah challenges Amos' right to prophesy[h]

Amaziah the priest of Bethel then sent word to Jeroboam king of Israel as follows, 10
'Amos is plotting against you in the heart of the House of Israel; the country cannot tolerate his speeches. ·For this is what Amos says, "Jeroboam is going to die by the 11 5:27; 6:7; 7:9; 9:4 sword, and Israel will go into captivity far from its native land." ' ·To Amos 12 himself Amaziah said, 'Go away, seer,[i] take yourself off to Judah, earn your living 2:12k there, and there you can prophesy! ·But never again will you prophesy at 13
1 K 12:29 ·3:3–8,3c Bethel, for this is a royal sanctuary, a national temple.'[j] ·'I am not a prophet,' 14
2 S 7:8 Ps 78:70–71 Amos replied to Amaziah, 'nor do I belong to a prophetic brotherhood. I am merely a herdsman and dresser of sycamore-figs.[k] ·But Yahweh took me as I 15 2:12+ followed the flock, and Yahweh said to me, "Go and prophesy to my people Israel." ·So now listen to what Yahweh says: 16

"You say: Do not prophesy against Israel, do not foretell doom on the House of Isaac!"
Very well, this is what Yahweh says, 17
"Your wife will become a prostitute in the streets, your sons and daughters will fall by the sword, Dt 28:30–33 2 K 17:24 Ho 9:3 your land will be parcelled out by measuring line, and you yourself will die on polluted soil[l] and Israel will go into captivity far from its own land!" '

Fourth vision:[a] the basket of ripe fruit

7:7–9 8 This is what Lord Yahweh showed me: 1
A basket of ripe fruit.
'What do you see, Amos?' he asked. 2
'A basket of ripe fruit,' I said.
Then Yahweh said,
Rv 14:15–18 'The time is ripe[b] for my people Israel;
I will not continue to overlook their offences.
That day, the palace songs will turn to howls, 3
—declares the Lord Yahweh—
the corpses will be many that are thrown down everywhere.
6:10h Keep silent!'[c]

2:6–8;4:1 Against swindlers and exploiters[d]

Listen to this, you who crush the needy 4 and reduce the oppressed to nothing, you who say, 'When will New Moon be over[e] 5
so that we can sell our corn, and Sabbath, so that we can market our wheat?
Dt 25:13+ Ho 12:8 Then, we can make the bushel-measure smaller Mi 6:10–11 and the shekel-weight bigger by fraudulently tampering with the scales.

6 We can buy up the weak for silver and the poor for a pair of sandals, and even get a price for the sweepings of the wheat.' =2:6 7 Yahweh has sworn by the pride of Jacob,[f]
'Never will I forget anything they have done.'

8 Will not the earth tremble for this 1:1
and all who live on it lament, =9:5
as it all rises together like the Nile in Egypt, it swells and then subsides like the Egyptian Nile?[g]

Prediction of punishment: darkness and mourning

9 'On that Day—declares the Lord Yahweh—I shall make the sun go down at noon and darken the earth in broad daylight.[h] 10 I shall turn your festivals into mourning ↗Tb 2:6 and all your singing into lamentation; 1 M 9:41
I shall make you all wear sacking round your waists Is 3:24 and have all your heads shaved.[i] Ho 2:13
I shall make it like the mourning for an only child, Jr 26 and it will end like the bitterest of days. Zc 12:10

Famine and drought of the word of God

11 'The days are coming—declares the Lord Yahweh— 4:2
when I shall send a famine on the country, not hunger for food, not thirst for water, Dt 8:3b
but famine for hearing Yahweh's word.[j] Mt 5:6 12 People will stagger from sea to sea, will wander from the north to the east, searching for Yahweh's word, Ho 5:6+
but will not find it.

f. After 'wall', Hebr. adds 'of a plumb-line'. This is the only occurrence of the word 'anak (trans. 'plumb-line') in the Bible and although the word from the same root in Accadian, Syriac and Arabic means 'tin' or 'lead', the exact meaning here is uncertain. A plumb-line establishes a vertical or (with a set-square) a horizontal position. The latter operation seems to be meant here: Yahweh intends to rase everything to the ground, cf. 2 K 21:13; Is 34:11; Lm 2:8. But the sense of the vision is still uncertain.

g. 'offences' supplied, cf. Mi 7:18. This new refrain, cf. 8:2, replacing the one of the first two visions, 7:3,6, implies a hardening in sin not stated explicitly in the text.

h. This prose passage, originating with the prophet's disciples and inserted between the third and fourth vision, immediately follows the prophecy against the royal house, 7:9, and describes the reactions to which it gave rise.

i. Here the term is possibly contemptuous ('visionary').

j. Amaziah speaks as if Amos were one of the professional prophets for whom prophecy was a livelihood, see 1 S 9:7d, but he does not accuse him of being a false prophet. On the contrary, by intervening and accusing him of conspiracy (v. 10), he shows his alarm at the possible consequences of his prediction, this being regarded as the efficacious and direct cause of the disasters which it foretells.

k. On prophetic brotherhoods, see 2 K 2:3c. • 'herdsman', rare word but unusually meaning someone who looks after large animals rather than sheep, see 1:1 (where a different term is used). • Dressing sycamore-figs involved pinching thin stalks, which helped them to ripen.

l. All foreign countries are polluted on account of their idols, Ho 9:3–4; the land of Israel where Yahweh resides, Jr 12:7; Ho 8:1; Zc 9:8, is pure, 2 K 5:17, and 'holy', Ex 19:12e; 2 M 1:7; Zc 2:16.

8 a. Despite the interruption of the Bethel episode, 7:10–17, this fourth vision is connected with the third, 7:7–9, to which it is similar in structure and idea.

b. lit. 'the end has come'. Hebr. contains a play on the words, qaitz ripe fruit, lit. 'summer fruit' and qetz (end).

c. The implications of the end of the v. are not clear.

d. The following sayings explain, justify and elaborate the prophecy of the end contained in the fourth vision and increase the dramatic tension before the climactic fifth.

e. The New Moon, Lv 23:24d, like the Sabbath, Ex 20:8f, halted business.

f. From the context, see 4:2; 6:8a, here 'the Pride of Jacob' could be a divine title, cf. 1 S 15:29; or, as in 6:8, the arrogance of Israel, so firm that it can be used as a basis for an oath, or again the land of Yahweh, Palestine, Ps 47:5.

g. The prophet compares the trembling of the earth, see 1:1c, to the rise and fall of the Nile. In this comparison and description there is more poetic imagination than observation, 'like the Nile' versions: 'like a light' Hebr, cf. 9:5.

h. The Day of Yahweh, 5:18m, is accompanied by cosmic signs; earthquake, 8:8; Is 2:10; Jr 4:24, solar eclipse, 8:9; Jr 4:23: Later prophets enlarge on this, using conventional imagery which should not be taken literally, Is 13:10,13; 34:4; Ezk 32:7–8; Jl 2:10–11; 3:3–4; 4:15–16; Hab 3:6; Zp 1:15; cf. Mt 24:29; Rv 6:12–14, and see Mt 24:1a.

i. Sign of affliction and mourning throughout the ancient Middle East, Is 15:2; Jr 7:29; Mi 1:16.

j. 'word' Gk; 'words' Hebr. • The prophet is not predicting a conversion as a result of which people are hungry to hear God's word so that they can obey him, but a punishment. Tired of speaking without being listened to, God says nothing and sends no more prophets.

Fresh prediction of punishment

Zc 9:17 'That Day, fine girls and stalwart youths 13 will faint from thirst.
The people who swear by the Sin of Samaria, [k] 14 who say, "Long live your god, Dan!" [l] and "Hurrah for the pilgrimage to Beersheba!" will all fall, never to rise again.'

Fifth vision: the fall of the sanctuary [a]

9 I saw the Lord standing by the altar, [b] and he said, 1
'Strike the top of the pillar so that the thresholds shake!
Smash their heads in, one and all! [c]
And I shall put any survivors to the sword; 2:13–16; 6:9–10 whoever runs away will not run far, whoever escapes will not make good his escape.
Jb 14:13 Ps 139:7–12 Jr 23.23–24 Should they burrow into Sheol, 2
my hand will haul them out;
Jb 20:6a Mt 11:23 should they climb to heaven,
I shall bring them down.
Should they hide on the top of Carmel, 3
I shall track them down and catch them;
Ps 135:6 should they hide from me on the sea bed, Jb 3:8e; 7:12f I shall order the Serpent there to bite them;
if their enemies herd them into captivity, 4
I shall order the sword to kill them there, and I shall fix my eyes on them for evil and not for good.'

4:13;5:8 Doxology

Lord Yahweh Sabaoth— [d] 5
he touches the earth and it melts, =8:8 and all living things on it lament, as all rises together like the Nile in Egypt and then subsides like the Egyptian Nile.
Ps 104:3 He who builds his mansions in the heavens, [e] 6 supporting his vault on the earth;
=5:8 who summons the waters of the sea
and pours them over the surface of the land:
4:13+ Yahweh is his name.

Sinners will all perish

Are not you and the Cushites [f] all the same to me, 7 children of Israel?—declares Yahweh.
Did I not bring Israel up from Egypt
Jos 13:2b and the Philistines from Caphtor, and the Aramaeans from Kir? [g]
Look, Lord Yahweh's eyes are on the sinful kingdom, 8
I shall wipe it off the face of the earth, 3:12i Is 4:3c although I shall not destroy the House of Jacob completely —declares Yahweh. [h]
For look, I shall give the command 9 and shall shake out the House of Israel among all nations [i] Lk 22:31 as a sieve is shaken out without one grain [j] falling on the ground.
6:1–6 Is 28:15 Jr 5:12 All the sinners of my people will perish by the sword, [k] who say, 10
'Disaster will never approach or overtake us.' [l]

IV: PROSPECTS OF RESTORATION AND OF IDYLLIC PROSPERITY[m]

11 On that Day, I shall rebuild the tottering hut of David, ↗Ac 15:16–17 make good the gaps in it, restore its ruins and rebuild it as it was in the days of old, 12 for them to be master of what is left of Edom Gn 22:17 Nb 24:18 and of all the nations once called mine[n] Ob 19
—Yahweh declares, and he will perform it.

13 The days are coming—declares Yahweh— 5:11 Lv 26:5
when the ploughman will tread on the heels of the reaper, and the treader of grapes on the heels of the sower of seed, and the mountains will run with new wine and the hills all flow with it. ↗Jl 4:18 14 I shall restore the fortunes of my people Israel;[o] 5:11 Is 65:21–22 Jr 31:5 Ho 14:8
they will rebuild the ruined cities and live in them, they will plant vineyards and drink their wine,
they will lay out gardens and eat their produce.
15 And I shall plant them in their own soil and they will never be uprooted again from the country which I have given them, declares Yahweh, your God.

k. Seemingly a play on words between 'Ashimah', the name of a goddess, 2 K 17:30, possibly worshipped in Samaria as Yahweh's consort, and 'ashema ('sin'), see Dt 9:21, where Aaron calls the golden calf 'your sin'.

l. Where one of Jeroboam's two golden calves was, 1 K 12:30.

9 a. Probably the shrine at Bethel, but the absence of any precise indication shows that Amos has the other shrines of the kingdom in mind as well.

b. Or 'on the altar'.

c. Perhaps the order is given to an angel.

d. V. 5a (the first three words) of the hymnal fragment, see 4:13*l*, is apparently a gloss defining the subject of the sentence.

e. 'mansions' 'alliyyataw conj.; Hebr. ketib ma'aloto 'his staircase'; Hebr. qere ma'alotaw 'his staircases'.

f. The people of Ethiopia, remote and exotic. Israel is wrong to consider itself as the 'first of nations', 6:1.

g. The Israelites are not to presume on their position as the chosen people, see Dt 7:6b. It is not a privilege but a responsibility, 3:2b, and God is concerned equally for the welfare of other nations, cf. Is 19:22–25.

h. The survival of a 'remnant' is explicitly promised here, though previously hinted at in 5:15.

i. This prophecy possibly dates from the time of the first Israelite deportation in 734 BC; see 2 K 15:29.

j. The grains of corn (the upright) are left in the sieve while the dust of the chaff falls through. Or perhaps the sieve keeps the pebbles (sinners) and lets the grain (the upright) through.

k. Amos positively asserts that the sinners will be punished and the upright saved. The subsequent catastrophe in fact spared neither group and proved him over-optimistic. Six centuries later this played its part in arousing a belief in retribution after death, see Dn 12:2–3.

l. We follow Gk; 'you will not hasten the disaster or make it affect us' Hebr.

m. These promises include the restoration of the Davidic kingdom, vv. 11–12; material prosperity, vv. 13–14; the homeland recovered for ever, v. 15. On the happiness of messianic days, see Ho 2:20*s*. This passage is apparently of a later date, see p. 1180, it pre-supposes that the Davidic kings have ceased to reign (587 BC) and was perhaps added in the times of Zerubbabel, 520–515 BC, when hopes of a Davidic restoration ran high.

n. lit. 'over whom my name has been pronounced', as in 2 S 12:28, evidently those nations once forming part of the Davidic empire. LXX interprets the words in a more universal sense, hence the version quoted in Ac 15:16–17.

o. Or 'I mean to bring back those of my people Israel who have been held captive.'

OBADIAH

Title

Dt 2:1a Vision of Obadiah: about Edom. [a] 1

Prologue

‖Jr 49:14 I have received a message [b] from Yahweh, 1c a herald has been sent throughout the nations: [c] 'Up! Let us march against this people.
Into battle!'

Sentence pronounced on Edom [d]

The Lord Yahweh says this: 1b ‖Jr 49:15–16 Look, I have reduced you to the smallest of nations, 2 you are now beneath contempt.

Is 14:13seq. Your proud heart has misled you, 3 you whose home is in the crannies of the Rock, [e] who make the heights [f] your dwelling, who think to yourself,
'Who can bring me down to earth?'
Though you soar like an eagle, 4
Hab 2:9 though you set [g] your nest among the stars,
I shall bring you down from there!—declares Yahweh.

The annihilation of Edom

If thieves were to come to you 5 (or robbers during the night) surely they would steal only as much as they wanted?
‖Jr 49:9 If grape-pickers were to come to you, surely they would leave a few gleanings?

But how you have been pillaged! [h] ‖Jr 49:10 How Esau has been looted, 6 his hidden treasures routed out!
Your allies all pursued you right to the frontier, 7
Jr 38:22 your confederates kept you in suspense, then got the better of you, Ps 41:9 your own guests laid a trap for you,
'He has quite lost his wits.' [i]

When that day comes [j]—declares Yahweh— 8
Is 19:11–15; 29:14 shall I not eliminate sages from Edom
Jr 8:8–9;49:7 and intelligence from Mount Esau? [k]

‖Jr 49:22 Your warriors, Teman, will be so demoralised [l] 9 that the people of Mount Esau will be massacred to the last one.

The guilt of Edom [m]

10 For the slaughter, ·for the violence — Am 1:11-12 done to your brother Jacob,[n] — Jl 4:19 shame will cover you
and you will be annihilated for ever.

11 On the day,[o] when you stood aloof while strangers carried off his riches, while foreigners passed through his gate and cast lots for Jerusalem, you were as bad as the rest of them. — Ps 137:7

12 Do not feast your eyes on your brother[p] on the day of his misfortune.
Do not gloat over the children of Judah on the day of their ruin.
Do not play the braggart
on the day of distress.

13 Do not enter my people's gate
on their day of calamity.
Do not, you especially, feast your eyes on their suffering
on their day of calamity.
Do not touch their possessions
on their day of calamity.

14 Do not wait at the crossroads to annihilate their fugitives.
Do not hand over their survivors
on the day of distress.

15 For the Day of Yahweh is near
for all the nations.
As you have done, so will it be done to you:
your deeds will recoil on your own head.[q]

a. v. 1[b] has been transposed to the beginning of v. 2 where the words of Yahweh begin.

b. lit. 'I have heard (Gk and Jr 49:14; 'We have heard' Hebr.) what is heard.'

c. Metaphorical description of a confederacy in process of formation against Edom; cf. Jr 4:5; 50:2.

d. The time will come when Edom in turn will be despised, vv. 2 and 10, for having gloated over Israel, v. 12; collapse will be the punishment for arrogance. On this doctrine of pride and fall, see Pr 16:18; 29:23 and (applied to nations) Is 14; Jr 50–51; Ezk 26–28; 29–32; Zc 10:11.

e. The 'rock' (sela') in which Edom is ensconced is a term probably chosen to suggest the name of the capital of Edom, Ha-Sela, 'The Rock', see 2 K 14:7; Petra, the Greek name for it, preserves the same sense.

f. 'heights' versions; 'height' Hebr.

g. 'you set' Gk; 'to set (?)' Hebr.

h. This is explained by vv. 6–7: Edom has been despoiled more thoroughly than by common brigands, who would leave something behind, or by 'grape-pickers' who would leave a few grapes for the gleaner, see Dt 24:21. In Hebr. this line follows 'or robbers during the night'; a gloss to harmonise the v. with Jr 49:9.

i. Although the Edomites were proverbial for their wisdom, their false friends make this sarcastic comment after Edom's military disaster. • 'Your own guests' (lit. 'those who ate your bread') is absent from the Heb. but is inserted, in line with Ps 41:9. • 'Trap', an uncertain translation of a rare word (mazor) that occurs only here. Some emend to another Heb. word meaning a (hunter's) snare (matzod).

j. The day of judgement for Edom, as one aspect of the Day of Yahweh, v. 15, see Am 5:18m, when God will punish Edom and the other nations, vv. 16–17, but rescues and restores Israel, vv. 17–21.

k. Here and in vv. 9,19,21, a term for the mountainous country of Edom, also called 'Mount Seir', cf. Gn 32:4; 33:14,16; 36:8–9; Dt 2:4,5,12. The territory referred to is south Transjordan.

l. The northern part of Edom, but here and elsewhere designating the whole country.

m. The behaviour of Edom at the time of the fall of Jerusalem rankled deeply in biblical tradition, Ps 137:7; Lm 4:21–22; Ezk 25:12–14. From Ezk 35:5–12 and 36:2,5 it would seem that at that time Edom occupied Judah, at least partially. For similar complaints against the Ammonites see Ezk 25:1–7, cf. 21:23–27, and against the Philistines see Ezk 25:15–17.

n. On the relationship and discord between Edom and Israel see Gn 25:22–28; 27:27–29; 32:4–33:16; Nb 20:22f,23; Dt 23:8. 'Jacob' designates the land of Judah, see v. 18u; Jl 4:19.

o. The 'day of Jerusalem', Ps 137:7, was that on which the Chaldaeans entered the city, 2 K 25:3–4, or else that of the burning of the Temple, 2 K 25:8–9, in 587 BC.

p. 'your brother' conj.; 'the day of your brother' Hebr.

q. The lex talionis, Ex 21:25f, is applied here to Edom. The same retribution is called down on Babylon, Jr 50:15,29, cf. Rv 18:6–7, on the enemies of Jerusalem, Lm 3:64, and on Tyre, Sidon and the Philistines, Jl 4:4,7.

The Day of Yahweh. Israel revenged on Edom [r]

Just as you have drunk on my holy mountain, 16
Lm 4:21 so will all the nations drink continually, [s] they will drink, will drink greedily, but they will be as though they had never been!

↗Jl 3:5 But on Mount Zion will be those who have escaped [t] 17
—it will be a sanctuary—and the House of Jacob will recover what is rightfully theirs.

Zc 12:6 Then the House of Jacob will be a fire, 18
the House of Joseph [u] a flame, and the House of Esau like stubble.
They will set it alight and burn it up,
and no one of the House of Esau will survive.
Yahweh has spoken.

The new Israel

Am 9:12 People from the Negeb will occupy the Mount of Esau, 19 people from the lowlands the country of the Philistines; [v] they will occupy Ephraim and Samaria, and Benjamin will occupy Gilead.
The exiles of this army, the sons of Israel, 20 will have the Canaanites' land [w] as far as Zarephthah, while the exiles from Jerusalem now in Sepharad will have the cities of the Negeb.

Mi 4:7 Victorious, [x] they will climb Mount Zion 21 to rule over Mount Esau, ‖Ps 22:28 and sovereignty will be Yahweh's! [y]

r. The perspective broadens: on 'the Day of Yahweh' who will judge all the nations, see Am 5:18m, Zion hitherto oppressed will become the place of salvation and centre of political power. The hostile nations will be defeated and among them Edom will be ruined for ever. From now on, the prophet addresses the Israelites.

s. From the cup of the wrath of God, see Is 51:17h. • 'drink greedily' sense uncertain; others emend to 'totter', cf. Is 24:20; 29:9.

t. Text cited in Jl 3:5 as a 'word of Yahweh'. For the preserved 'remnant' of Judah, see Is 4:3c, the Day of Yahweh no longer holds any terror, but gives assurance of salvation on Mount Zion, an inviolable sanctuary through which 'no alien will ever pass again', Jl 4:17.

u. The 'House of Jacob', see v. 10n, is Judah, 'the House of Joseph' the Northern Kingdom, see Am 5:6; Zc 10:6, associated with Judah at the time of final salvation, see Jr 3:18h. The two kingdoms are to reconquer, vv. 19–20, the empire of David, here defined in ideal rather than geographical terms, cf. 1 K 8:65; 2 K 14:25.

v. Translation supported by the Gk; Hebr. could also be understood: 'They will take possession of the Negeb, Mount Esau and the Philistine lowlands.'

w. 'will have' yireshu conj.; cf. the rest of the v. Hebr. 'asher 'who'. • 'the Canaanites' land', lit. 'the Canaanites', i.e. Phoenicia; Zarephthah, between Tyre and Sidon, is to mark the northern frontier of the new kingdom. Sepharad is unknown.

x. 'Victorious', lit. 'The saved' conj.; 'The saviours' Hebr.

y. The triumphal slogan of Israelite eschatology, Ps 22:27; 103:19; 145:11–13; cf. Ps 10:16; 47:7; 93:1; 97:1; 99:1. The rule of Israel is the rule of Yahweh and the fulfilment of history.

JONAH

Jonah rebels against his mission

1, 2 1 The word of Yahweh was addressed to Jonah son of Amittai: ·'Up!' he said, 'Go to Nineveh, the great city, and proclaim to them that their wickedness has 3 forced itself upon me.' ·Jonah set about running away from Yahweh, and going to Ps 139:7seq.
Tarshish. [a] He went down to Jaffa and found a ship bound for Tarshish; he paid his 4 fare and boarded it, to go with them to Tarshish, to get away from Yahweh. ·But Yahweh threw a hurricane at the sea, and there was such a great storm at sea that Ps 107:23–30 5 the ship threatened to break up. ·The sailors took fright, and each of them called on his own god, [b] and to lighten the ship they threw the cargo overboard. Jonah, Ac 27:18 6 however, had gone below, had lain down in the hold and was fast asleep, ·when Mt 8:24–25par.
the boatswain went up to him and said, 'What do you mean by sleeping? Get up!
Call on your god! Perhaps he will spare us a thought and not leave us to die.'
7 Then they said to each other, 'Come on, let us draw lots to find out who is to blame for bringing us this bad luck.' So they cast lots, and the lot pointed to Jonah. [c] 8 Then they said to him, 'Tell us, [d] what is your business? Where do you come 9 from? What is your country? What is your nationality?' ·He replied, 'I am a Hebrew, and I worship Yahweh, God of Heaven, who made both sea and dry 10 land.' ·The sailors were seized with terror at this and said, 'Why ever did you do this?' since they knew that he was trying to escape from Yahweh, because he had 1:3 11 told them so. ·They then said, 'What are we to do with you, to make the sea calm 12 down for us?' For the sea was growing rougher and rougher. ·He replied, 'Take me and throw me into the sea, and then it will calm down for you. I know it is my fault 13 that this great storm has struck you.' ·The sailors rowed hard in an effort to reach 14 the shore, but in vain, since the sea was growing rougher and rougher. ·So at last they called on Yahweh and said, 'O, Yahweh, do not let us perish for the sake of this man's life, and do not hold us responsible for causing an innocent man's death; Jr 26:15 15 for you, Yahweh, have acted as you saw fit.' ·And taking hold of Jonah they 16 threw him into the sea; and the sea stopped raging. ·At this, the men were seized with dread of Yahweh; they offered a sacrifice to Yahweh and made vows to him. [e]

Jonah is saved

1 2 Now Yahweh ordained that a great fish should swallow Jonah; and Jonah
2 remained in the belly of the fish for three days and three nights. [a] ·From the ↗Mt 12:40;16:4 belly of the fish, Jonah prayed to Yahweh, his God; he said: [b]

1 a. Tarshish, see 1 K 10:1a; Ps 48:7c, stood for the Hebrews for the furthest end of the world.

b. The sailors are from different countries: each has his own god but believes in the power of other gods as well.

c. The belief that a ship was endangered by having a guilty person on board is found elsewhere in antiquity.

d. After 'Tell us', Hebr. adds 'who is to blame for bringing us this bad luck', a gloss taken from the previous v. Gk omits. • 'your business', i.e. 'your job' or 'the purpose of your journey'.

e. The author emphasises the piety of the gentile sailors: they are shocked that Jonah should have disobeyed Yahweh, v. 10. They are equally anxious not to incur Yahweh's anger either by protecting Jonah or by throwing him to the waves, v. 14, and offer sacrifice to Jonah's God whose power they recognise, v. 16.

2 a. On this fish and the other prodigies, of which the author is fond, see pp. 1188–9.

b. This poem is a mosaic of Psalm-texts and is constructed on the conventional pattern of thanksgiving psalms: description of sufferings undergone, account of deliverance from them. For the psalmists, grave danger is a 'death' and deliverance a 'resurrection'; see here vv. 6,7,8. The sea,

Ps 120:1;130:1 Out of my distress I cried to Yahweh 3 and he answered me, Lm 3:55 from the belly of Sheol I cried out;
you heard my voice!

For you threw me into the deep, 4 into the heart of the seas, and the floods closed round me.
||Ps 42:7 All your waves and billows passed over me;
Ps 31:22 then I thought, 'I am banished from your sight; 5
Ps 5:7 how shall I ever see your holy Temple again?' [c]

Ps 69:1 The waters round me rose to my neck, 6
the deep was closing round me, seaweed twining round my head.
To the roots of the mountains, [d] 7
I sank into the underworld, and its bars closed round me for ever.

Ps 30:3;16:10 But you raised my life from the Pit, Yahweh my God!
When my soul was growing ever weaker, 8 Yahweh, I remembered you,
and my prayer reached you in your holy Temple.

Some abandon their faithful love 9
by worshipping false gods, but I shall sacrifice to you 10
with songs of praise.
Ps 22:25 The vow I have made I shall fulfil!
||Ps 3:8 Salvation comes from Yahweh!

Yahweh spoke to the fish, which then vomited Jonah onto the dry land. 11

The conversion of Nineveh and God's pardon

3 The word of Yahweh was addressed to Jonah a second time. •'Up!' he said, 1, 2
'Go to Nineveh, the great city, and preach to it as I shall tell you.' •Jonah set 3 out and went to Nineveh in obedience to the word of Yahweh. Now Nineveh was a city great beyond compare; [a] to cross it took three days. •Jonah began by going a 4 day's journey into the city and then proclaimed, 'Only forty days more [b] and ↗Mt 12:41 ↗Lk 11:30,32 Nineveh will be overthrown.' •And the people of Nineveh believed in God; they 5 Ezk 26:16 proclaimed a fast and put on sackcloth, from the greatest to the least. [c] •When the 6 news reached the king of Nineveh, he rose from his throne, took off his robe, put on sackcloth and sat down in ashes. [d] •He then had it proclaimed throughout 7 Nineveh, by decree of the king and his nobles, as follows: 'No person or animal, herd or flock, may eat anything; they may not graze, they may not drink any water.
Jdt 4:10 Ezk 27:30–31 •All [e] must put on sackcloth and call on God with all their might; and let everyone 8 renounce his evil ways and violent behaviour. •Who knows? Perhaps God will 9 Jl 2:14 Am 5:15 change his mind and relent and renounce his burning wrath, so that we shall not perish.' •God saw their efforts to renounce their evil ways. And God relented 10
Gn 6:6d Jr 26:3 about the disaster which he had threatened to bring on them, and did not bring it.

The grievance of the prophet and God's answer

Lk 15:28 4 This made Jonah very indignant; he fell into a rage. •He prayed to Yahweh and 1, 2 said, 'Please, Yahweh, isn't this what I said would happen when I was still in 1:3 my own country? That was why I first tried to flee to Tarshish, since I knew you Ex 34:6–7+ were a tender, compassionate God, slow to anger, rich in faithful love, who relents about inflicting disaster. •So now Yahweh, please take my life, for I might as well 1 K 19:4

be dead as go on living.' •Yahweh replied, 'Are you right to be angry?'
Jonah then left the city and sat down to the east of the city. There he made himself a shelter and sat under it in the shade, to see what would happen to the city. •Yahweh God then ordained that a castor-oil plant should grow up over Jonah to give shade for his head and soothe his ill-humour; Jonah was delighted with the castor-oil plant. •But at dawn the next day, God ordained that a worm should attack the castor-oil plant—and it withered. •Next, when the sun rose, God ordained that there should be a scorching east wind; [a] the sun beat down so hard on Jonah's head that he was overcome and begged for death, saying, 'I might as well be dead as go on living.' •God said to Jonah, 'Are you right to be angry about the castor-oil plant?' He replied, 'I have every right to be angry, mortally angry!' Yahweh replied, 'You are concerned for the castor-oil plant which has not cost you any effort and which you did not grow, which came up in a night and has perished in a night. •So why should I not be concerned for Nineveh, the great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand people who cannot tell their right hand from their left, to say nothing of all the animals?' [b]

God's primordial 'enemy', see Jb 7:12f, is seen either as the kingdom of death itself or at least as the way leading to it. Hence the dramatic quality of the poem, and why Jonah's adventure was used by Jesus, Mt 12:40; Lk 11:30, as a figure of his own three-days' stay 'in the heart of the earth' (Sheol rather than the tomb, cf. Jon 2:2–3). The kingdom of death is depicted as a greedy monster which cannot hold Jesus and has to let him go (the resurrection). The analogy between Christian baptism and the resurrection of Christ has led to the use of the figure of Jonah in baptismal typology.

c. 'How shall I ever see . . .' conj.; 'yet I shall see . . .' Hebr.

d. The 'roots of the' mountains presumably denote the bottom of the sea (on which the earth was thought to rest).

3 a. lit. 'great before God', the strongest form of the superlative in Hebr.; there is a similar hyperbole in the 'it took three days to cross it', to evoke the fabulous size of Nineveh.

b. The 'forty days' suggest the 40 days of the Flood or the 40 years of Israel in the desert; see also 1 K 19:8. Gk reads 'Only three days more', cf. 2:1.

c. The exemplary conversion of the Ninevites was to be recalled in the gospels, Mt 12:41; Lk 11:32. Here, as in the gospels, this is contrasted with the incredulity of the Jews.

d. This whole description of repentance and conversion is the antithesis of Jr 36, see pp. 1188–9; it is furthermore full of phrases characteristic of Jeremiah.

e. This omits 'person and animal', which is strictly in the Hebr. but is to be regarded as repeated in error from the previous verse.

4 a. 'scorching' Gk; Hebr. uncertain.

b. Ch. 4 underlines the universality of God's compassion. God takes pity on Jonah in the sea, 2:7, on repentant Nineveh, 3:10, on the prophet in his self-pity, 4:6. And finally, 4:10–11, he explains with gentle irony how his solicitude extends even to the animals; how much more then to men, women and children, 'who cannot tell their right hand from their left'. The whole book thus prepares the way for the gospel revelation: God is love.

MICAH

Is 1:1 1 The word of Yahweh which came to Micah of Moresheth during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah kings of Judah. His visions about Samaria and Jerusalem. 1

I: ISRAEL ON TRIAL

THREAT AND CONDEMNATION

Is 28:1–4 The judgement of Samaria [a]

Ps 49:1
Is 1:2 Listen, all you peoples, 2 attend, earth and everyone on it!
Yahweh [b] intends to give evidence against you,
the Lord, from his holy temple.

Is 26:21 For look, Yahweh is leaving his home, 3 Am 4:13 down he comes, he treads the heights of earth.

Ps 97:5
Zc 14:4 Beneath him, the mountains melt, 4 and valleys are torn open,
like wax near a fire,
like water pouring down a slope.

All this is because of the crime of Jacob, 5
the sin of the House of Israel.
What is the crime of Jacob?
Is it not Samaria?
What is the sin of the House of Judah? [c]
Is it not Jerusalem?

3:12 So I shall make Samaria a ruin in the open country, 6 a place for planting vines.
I shall send her stones rolling into the valley, until I have laid her foundations bare.
All her images will be shattered, 7 all her earnings [d] consumed by fire.
I shall leave all her idols derelict—they were amassed [e] out of prostitutes' earnings and prostitutes' earnings once more they will be.

Lament for Jerusalem and the lowland towns [f]

This is why I shall howl and wail, 8 2 S 15:30
Is 20:2–4
Ezk 24:17–23 why I shall go barefoot and naked, why I shall howl like the jackals, why I shall shriek like the owls; for there is no cure for the wounds that Yahweh inflicts: 9
the blow falls on Judah,

it falls on the gateway of my people, [g]
on Jerusalem itself.
10 Do not announce it in Gath, [h] 2 S 1:20
in . . . shed no tears!
In Beth-Leaphrah
roll in the dust! Jr 25:34 11 Sound the horn,
inhabitant of Shaphir!
She has not left her city,
she who lives in Zaanan. Jos 15:37 Beth-Ezel is torn from its foundations, from its strong supports. [i] 12 What hope has she of happiness, [j] she who lives in Maroth? Rt 1:20 Instead Yahweh sent down disaster on the gateway of Jerusalem itself!
13 Harness the horse to the chariot, you inhabitant of Lachish! Jos 15:39
That is where the sin of the daughter of Zion began; 2 K 14:19
the crimes of Israel can be traced to you!
14 And so you must provide a dowry for Moresheth-Gath.
Beth-Achzib [k] will prove a disappointment Jos 15:44
for the kings of Israel.
15 The plunderer will come [l] to you again, you citizen of Mareshah! Jos 15:44
And into Adullam will vanish 1 S 22:1
the glory of Israel. [m] 2 S 23:13

16 Off with your hair, shave your head, Jr 7:29 for the children that were your joy.
Make yourselves bald like the vulture, Is 22:12 for they have left you for exile.

Against land-grabbers

1 2 Disaster for those who plot evil, Ps 36:4 who lie in bed planning mischief!
No sooner is it dawn than they do it, since they have the power to do so.

1 a. This prophecy against Samaria, uttered before the fall of the city in 721, has been subsequently applied to Jerusalem.

b. 'Yahweh' some Gk MSS; 'the Lord Yahweh' Hebr.

c. 'the sin of the House of Judah' Gk, Targ.; 'the high places of Judah' Hebr.

d. The earnings of sacred prostitutes attached to the cult of Samaria, Ho 4:14; Am 2:7–8; see Dt 23:19f; for Micah the whole of Samaria is a prostitute, as Israel is for Hosea, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, see Ho 1:2b.

e. 'they were amassed' Gk, Syr.; 'she amassed' Hebr.

f. Foretelling disaster for twelve towns in Philistia and south-western Judah. Seven of these are known: Gath, Moresheth-Gath, Zaanan, Lachish, Achzib, Mareshah, Adullam, cf. Jos 15:35–44; the name of one town has been lost, v. 10; the remaining four must have been in the same region. The general meaning is clear: an invasion affecting the prophet's native place serves here as a warning for Jerusalem. The reference is evidently to Sennacherib's invasion of Philistia and Judah in 701.

g. 'the wounds Yahweh inflicts' conj.; Hebr. 'her wounds'.

h. As in Is 10:28–32, the text plays on the names of the twelve towns. The assonances are: Gath and tagiddu 'announce', Beth-Leaphrah and 'aphar 'dust', (possibly Shaphir and shophar 'horn'), Zaanan and yatzeah 'she has left', Lachish and rekesh 'steed'. Maroth means 'bitterness'. The name Moresheth (the prophet's home, v. 1) suggests the betrothed, me'orashah: the town with its marriage gifts is to be handed over to its new master. Achzib plays on 'akzib 'disappointment'; Mareshah on yoresh 'he who takes possession'. • The second line is defective: only one letter of the original place-name remains.

i. 'sound the horn' shophar he'ebiru conj. (adding shophar as alliteration with Shaphir); Hebr. 'ibri lakem 'pass for you(?)'. • 'her town' me'irah conj.; see Gk; Hebr. 'eryah boshet 'nakedness, shame'. • 'is torn' Gk, Targ.; Hebr. 'will tear'. • 'from its foundations' misodo conj.; Hebr. mispad 'mourning'. • 'from its supports' mimmekon conj.; Hebr. mikkem 'from you'.

j. lit 'could she hope?' ki yihaleh conj.; cf. Targ.; Hebr. ki halah 'for she is tortured with desire'.

k. 'Beth-Achzib' conj.; Hebr. batte 'akzib 'The houses of Achzib'.

l. 'will come again' conj.; 'I shall bring (?)' Hebr.

m. David took refuge in Adullam, 1 S 22:1. An emendation would give the reading 'For ever from Adullam the glory of Israel will depart,' i.e. Yahweh will abandon the very place that saw the beginnings of the Davidic dynasty.

Is 5:8 Seizing the fields that they covet, 2 they take over houses as well, owner and house they seize alike,
the man himself as well as his inheritance. [a]
So Yahweh says this: 3
Look, I am now plotting a disaster for this breed from which you will not extricate your necks; you will not hold your heads up then,
‖Am 5:13 for the times will be disastrous indeed.
That day they will make a satire on you, 4
they will strike up a dirge and say, Dt 28:30–33 'We have been stripped of everything;
my people's land has been divided up,
no one else can restore it to them,
our fields have been awarded to our despoiler.' [b]

Because of this, you will have no one 5 to measure out a share in Yahweh's community. [c]

The prophet of misfortune [d]

Is 30:10 Am 2:12 'Do not drivel,' they drivel, 6
'do not drivel like this!
Disgrace will not overtake us! [e]

'Can the House of Jacob be accursed? 7
Has Yahweh grown short-tempered?
Is that his way of going to work?
His prophecies can only be favourable for his people Israel!' [f]
But you are the ones who play the enemy 8 to my people.
Dt 24:12–13 From the inoffensive man you snatch his cloak, on those who feel safe you inflict the damage of war. [g] My people's women you evict 9 from the homes they love and deprive the children 2 K 4:1 of my glory for ever, [h] saying, 'Up and off with you! You can't stay here!' 10
For a worthless thing you exact
Ex 22:25 an extortionate pledge. [i] Jr 5:31 If a man of the spirit came and invented this lie, 11
'I prophesy wine and liquor for you,'
he would be the prophet for a people like this. [j]

Promises of restoration [k]

Jr 3:18h I shall assemble the whole of Jacob, 12
Is 4:3c I shall gather the remnant of Israel, Ex 34:1a; 37:15–28 I shall gather them together like sheep in an enclosure.
And like a flock within their fold, they will bleat far away from anyone, their leader will break out first, 13
then all break out through the gate and escape, Jn 10:4 with their king leading the way and with Yahweh at their head.

Against the rulers who oppress the people

1 3 Then I said,
'Kindly listen, you leaders of the House of Jacob,[a]
you princes of the House of Israel.
Surely you are the ones who ought to know what is right, 2 and yet you hate what is good and love what is evil, Is 5:20,23 skinning people alive, pulling the flesh off their bones, 3 eating my people's flesh, stripping off their skin, breaking up their bones, chopping them up small like flesh[b] for the pot, like meat in the stew-pan?' 4 Then they will call to Yahweh, Jr 11:11+
but he will not answer them.
When the time comes he will hide his face from them Dt 31:17 because of the crimes they have committed.

Against venal prophets[c]

5 Yahweh says this against the prophets who lead my people astray:
So long as they have something to eat they cry 'Peace'. Jr 23:13,32 Ezk 13:10 But on anyone who puts nothing into their mouths they declare war.
6 And so, for you, night will be without vision and for you the darkness without divination.
The sun will set for the prophets,
the daylight will go black above them.
7 Then the seers will be covered with shame,
the diviners with confusion;
they will all put their hands over their mouths because there is no answer from God.
8 Not so with me, I am full of strength (full of Yahweh's spirit), of the sense of right, of energy to accuse Jacob of his crime and Israel of his sin.

To the rulers: prophecy of the ruin of Zion

9 Kindly listen to this, you leaders of the House of Jacob, you princes of the House of Israel,
who detest justice,

2 a. Confiscation for debt, of which the creditors take advantage to enlarge their estates.

b. Following Gk; Hebr. corrupt. • The punishment, inflicted by a foreign invader, affects the whole nation. • There is assonance between 'our fields' (sadenu), 'our despoiler' (shobenu), and 'we have been stripped' (neshaddunu).

c. The words are addressed to the land-grabbers, who will be excluded from the division of the land in the restored kingdom.

d. The prophet's listeners object, on the strength of the covenant, to his threats, vv. 6–7. Micah retorts, vv. 8–10, that this covenant has been violated by the very ones who hypocritically appeal to it and who ask their prophets to promise them material prosperity, v. 11.

e. The verb here rendered 'drivel', and, in v. 11, 'prophesy', means literally 'to cause to flow, to dribble', usually in a pejorative sense. • 'Disgrace will not overtake us!' conj.; Hebr. uncertain.

f. 'accursed' 'arur conj.; Hebr. 'amur 'said'. • 'his prophecies' Gk; Hebr. 'my prophecies'. • 'his people Israel' 'ammo yisra'el conj.; Hebr. holek 'with a just person on the way'.

g. Reconstruction based on Gk. Hebr.: 'And yesterday my people played the enemy; from in front, you took the precious garment from those returned from battle who pass by trustingly.'

h. The honour of free status in Israel.

i. 'a worthless thing (a nothing) meumah' conj.; Hebr. tameah 'impurity'. • 'you exact a pledge' tahbelu habol conj.; Hebr. tehabbel wehebel 'you destroy and grief'.

j. The impostor's prophecy also plays on the double meaning of the verb: 'prophesy' and 'cause to flow', see v. 6e.

k. The attribution to Micah of these promises of reunion and deliverance is debated. They seem to date from the Exile and may have been added here to mitigate the terrible prophecies before and after them.

3 a. 'the house of Jacob' Gk and v. 9; 'Jacob' Hebr.

b. 'like flesh' Gk, Syr.; 'as' Hebr.

c. On gifts to prophets, see 1 S 9:7–8; 1 K 14:3; 2 K 4:42; 5:15,22; 8:8–9; Am 7:12. • Micah is not contesting their inspiration but accusing them of being mercenary.

II: PROMISES TO ZION

The future reign of Yahweh in Zion

‖Is 2:2–4+ 4 But in days to come [a] 1 Yahweh's Temple Mountain will tower above the mountains, rise higher than the hills.
Then the peoples will stream to it, 2 then many nations will come and say,
'Come, we will go up to Yahweh's mountain, to the Temple of the God of Jacob, so that he may teach us his ways and we may walk in his paths;
for the Law issues from Zion and Yahweh's word from Jerusalem.'
He will judge between many peoples 3 and arbitrate between mighty nations. [b] Jl 4:10 They will hammer their swords into ploughshares and their spears into bill-hooks.
Nation will not lift sword against nation or ever again be trained to make war.
But each man will sit under his vine and fig tree 4 with no one to trouble him.
‖Is 1:20 The mouth of Yahweh Sabaoth has spoken.

For all peoples go forward, each in the name of its god, 5 Is 2:5 while we go forward in the name of Yahweh our God for ever and ever. [c]

The scattered flock is gathered to Zion [d]

That day—declares Yahweh— 6
Ezk 34:1a I shall gather in the lame Zp 3:19 and bring together the strays and those whom I have treated harshly.
Is 4:3c From the footsore I shall make a remnant, 7 and from the far-flung a mighty nation.
And Yahweh will reign over them on Mount Zion thenceforth and for ever.

And to you, Tower of the Flock, 8 Ophel of the daughter of Zion, [e]

to you your former sovereignty will return, the royal power of the daughter of Jerusalem.

The siege, exile and liberation of Zion[f]

9 Why are you crying out now?
Have you no king? Ps 2:6 Jr 8:19
Has your counsellor perished, for pangs to grip you like those of a woman in labour?
10 Writhe in pain and cry aloud,[g] daughter of Zion, like a woman in labour, for now you must leave the city and camp in the open country;
to Babylon you must go,
and there you will be rescued;
there Yahweh will ransom you from the clutches of your enemies.

Her enemies to be crushed on the threshing-floor

11 Now many nations[h]
have mustered against you.
They say, 'Let us desecrate her,
let us gloat over Zion!'
12 But they do not know Yahweh's thoughts, Is 55:8–9 they do not understand his design:
he has collected them like sheaves on the threshing-floor.
13 Start your threshing, daughter of Zion, for I shall make your horn like iron,
I shall make your hooves like bronze,
so that you can crush many peoples.
And you will devote what they have stolen to Yahweh, their wealth to the Lord of the whole earth. Jos 3:11;6:19 Zc 4:14;6:5

The distress and glory of the Davidic dynasty[i]

5:1 14 Now look to your fortifications, Fortress![j]
They have laid siege to us;
the ruler of Israel will be struck on the cheek with a rod.

d. 'wresting' conj.; Hebr. 'they wrest'.

e. '(you) who build' versions; 'build!' Hebr. •Faced with the imposing buildings of the capital, Micah's mind turns first to the underlying extortion which paid for their construction (see also Jr 22:13–15; Am 3:10,15; 5:11; 6:8).

f. Referring to the decisions of the priests (torot), cf. Ex 22:8; Dt 17:8–13; Jr 18:18; Ezk 7:26; Hg 2:11–14; Ml 2:7.

4 a. The origin of this prophecy, found also in Is 2:2–4, is uncertain. As Is 60, it describes the coming of converted nations to Jerusalem, see Is 45:14h. This theme is foreign to the thought of Micah, or at least to those sayings which are certainly his.

b. Hebr. adds 'far off', missing from Is 2:4.

c. A liturgical addition (as in Is 2:5).

d. Under the image of the good Shepherd, see Ezk 34:1a, a promise of the restoration of Israel in Zion, after punishment, vv. 6–7 are very similar to 2:12–13 and probably have the same origin.

e. 'Tower of the Flock', in Hebr. Migdal-Eder; this ancient place-name, cf. Gn 35:21, here indicates Jerusalem, comparing it to a sheepfold. Ophel was the palace quarter, 2 Ch 27:1–3; Is 32:14.

f. This prophecy predicts the deportation. The mention of Babylon in v. 10 envisages the Exile of 587.

g. 'cry aloud' wehegi conj.; Hebr. wahogi 'give birth'.

h. This prophecy, unlike the preceding one, describes the liberation of Zion itself, besieged by the nations. Isaiah, the prophet's contemporary, made similar prophecies, Is 10:24–27,32–34; 14:24–27; 29:1–8; 30:27–33; 31:4–9. In all these prophecies the reference is probably to Sennacherib's invasion in 701 and its mysterious failure. At a later date the nations' assault on Jerusalem (and their final defeat) becomes a notable feature of eschatological literature, Ezk 38–39; Jl 4; Zc 14.

i. The prophecy contrasts the king, 'the ruler of Israel', now humiliated (by Sennacherib: 2 K 18:13–16), with a future king whose birth will inaugurate a new era of glory and peace (as in Is 9:5). Micah represents this messiah in the way traditional to the prophets of Judah, as a king triumphing in Zion, thus Gn 49:10–12; Nb 24:15–19; Ps 110; Is 9:1–6; 11:1–9; 32:1.

j. 'look to your fortifications, Fortress' following Gk; 'gash yourself, daughter of the troop' Hebr. •'Fortress', Hebr. Beth-Gader (lit. 'house of the rampart'), applied to Zion, is a name similar to 'Tower of the Flock' in v. 8. The prophet contrasts the pride of the fortified capital with the humble state of Ephrathah from which salvation is to come.

↗Mt 2:6
↗Jn 7:42 5 But you (Bethlehem) Ephrathah, 1 2
the least [a] of the clans of Judah, from you will come for me a future ruler of Israel whose origins go back to the distant past, to the days of old. [b]
Hence Yahweh [c] will abandon them 2 3
Is 7:14 only until she who is in labour gives birth, [d] and then those who survive of his race will be reunited to the Israelites.
Is 40:11 He will take his stand and he will shepherd them 3 4 with the power of Yahweh, with the majesty of the name of his God, and they will be secure, for his greatness will extend henceforth to the most distant parts of the country.

The future conqueror of Assyria [e]

Jg 6:24
Ep 2:14 He himself will be peace! 4
Should the Assyrian invade our country, should he set foot in our land, [f] Am 1:3f we shall raise seven shepherds against him, eight leaders of men;
Ps 2:9LXX they will shepherd Assyria with the sword, 5
the country of Nimrod with naked blade. [g]
He will save us from the Assyrian, should he invade our country,
should he set foot inside our frontiers.

The future role of the remnant [h]

Is 4:3c Then what is left of Jacob, 6 surrounded by many peoples, Ho 14:6 will be like a dew from Yahweh, like showers on the grass, which do not depend on human agency and are beyond human control.

Then what is left of Jacob, [i] 7 8
surrounded by many peoples,
will be like a lion among the forest beasts, like a fierce lion among flocks of sheep trampling as he goes,
mangling his prey which no one takes from him.

Yahweh will destroy all temptations [j]

You will be victorious over your foes 8 9 and all your enemies will be torn to pieces.
When that day comes—declares Yahweh— 9 10
I shall tear your horses away from you,
Ho 14:4
Zc 9:10 I shall destroy your chariots;
I shall tear the cities from your country, 10 11
I shall overthrow all your fortresses;
I shall tear the spells out of your hands 11 12 and you will have no more soothsayers;
I shall tear away your images 12 13 and your sacred pillars from among you, and no longer will you worship things which your own hands have made!

13 I shall uproot your sacred poles — Ex 23:24k; 34:13a and shall destroy your cities!

15 14 In furious anger I shall wreak vengeance on the nations who have disobeyed me!

III: ISRAEL AGAIN ON TRIAL

REPROACHES AND THREATS

Yahweh's case against Israel [a]

1 6 Now listen to what Yahweh says:
'Stand up, state your case to the mountains — Is 3:13–15; 5:3–4 and let the hills hear what you have to say!' [b] — Ho 4:1–5 2 Listen, mountains, to the case as Yahweh puts it, give ear, you foundations of the earth, [c] for Yahweh has a case against his people and he will argue it with Israel.
3 'My people, what have I done to you, how have I made you tired of me? Answer me!
4 For I brought you up from Egypt, [d] — Dt 5:6;7:8
I ransomed you from the place of slave-labour and sent Moses, Aaron and Miriam — 1 S 12:6 to lead you.
5 My people, please remember:
what was Balak king of Moab's plan and how did Balaam son of Beor answer him? — Nb 22–24
. . . from Shittim to Gilgal, for you to know Yahweh's saving justice. [e]

6 'With what shall I enter Yahweh's presence and bow down before God All-high?

5 a. 'the least' Gk; 'little' Hebr.

b. Ephrathah (to which Micah apparently attaches the etymological meaning of 'fruitful', connecting it with the birth of the liberator) originally indicated a clan related to Caleb, 1 Ch 2:19,24,50, and settled in the district of Bethlehem, Rt 1:2; 1 S 17:12; the name later came to be used of the town itself, Gn 35:19; 48:7; Jos 15:59; Rt 4:11, hence the gloss in the text. Micah is thinking of the ancient origin of the dynasty of David, Rt 4:11,17,18–22; 1 S 17:12. The evangelists later interpreted this passage as a prophecy of Christ's birthplace.

c. lit. 'he'.

d. Reference to the mother of the Messiah. Micah is perhaps thinking of the famous prophecy of the 'alma, delivered by Isaiah some 30 years previously, Is 7:14g.

e. This fragment announces a future victory over Assyria. It is attributed to the descendant of David (beginning of v. 4, end of v. 5) and to the chieftains of Judah (vv. 4^b–5^a, an old fragment re-used).

f. 'in our land' Gk, Syr.; 'in our palaces' Hebr.

g. 'with naked blade' one Gk MS and Lat.; 'in its entrances' Hebr.

h. This saying, in two symmetrical strophes, announces the function of the 'remnant' in the salvation of the peoples (cf. vv. 1–4; 7:12) and in their punishment (4:13; 5:8,14). The first theme, occurring only at the end of the Exile, suggests a date later than Micah.

i. Hebr. adds 'among the nations'.

j. The prophecy of vv. 9–13 declares that Yahweh will tear (lit. 'cut off') from his people all their spurious human supports (cf. Is 2:7–8; 30:1–3,15–16; 31:1–3; Ho 3:4; 8:14; 14:4): military power, apparatus of divination and of the cult on the 'high places'. But the threat also implies an era of peace and of true faith. This prophecy is applied by vv. 8 and 14, to the nations, enemies of Yahweh; it is a subsequent adjustment.

6 a. After Yahweh's indictment in which he recalls his goodness to Israel, vv. 3–5, his repentant worshipper enquires what his God demands of him, vv. 6–7. The prophet replies, v. 8.

b. The mountains are God's favourite place of meeting with his people (Sinai, Nebo, Ebal and Gerizim, Zion, Carmel). They are changeless witnesses and often personified, Gn 49:26; 2 S 1:21; Ps 68:15–16; Ezk 35–36.

c. 'give ear' weha'azinu conj.; Hebr. weha' etanim 'you solid ones'.

d. 'have I been a burden to you' (hele'etika) and 'I brought you up' (he'elitika) are similar in sound. • In response to Israel's complaint that God has abandoned them, Yahweh recalls his past kindnesses.

e. There is a lacuna in the Hebr. text. The reference is to the crossing of the Jordan. • 'you to know' versions; 'knowledge of' Hebr. Yahweh's 'saving justice' are those great events of sacred history by which Yahweh demonstrated his loyalty to the covenantal promises. Since the covenant itself was the issue of a divine initiative, God's 'saving justice' is freely bestowed, not in any sense deserved.

Shall I enter with burnt offerings, with calves one year old?
Will he be pleased with rams by the thousand, 7 with ten thousand streams of oil?
Lv 18:21g Shall I offer my eldest son for my wrong-doing, the child of my own body for my sin?[f]

Is 7:9;30:15 and to walk humbly with your God.'

Against tricksters in the city

Yahweh's voice! He thunders to the city, 9
'Listen, tribe of assembled citizens![h] Am 8:5+ Can I overlook the false measure,[i] 10 that abomination, the short bushel?
Can I connive[j] at rigged scales 11
and at the bag of fraudulent weights?
[k]For the rich there are steeped in violence, 12 and the citizens there are habitual liars.

'I myself have therefore begun[l] to strike you down, 13 to bring you to ruin for your sins.
Ho 4:10 You will eat but not be satisfied;[m] 14
you will store up but never keep safe;
what you do keep safe I shall hand over to the sword; Dt 28:30–33+ Am 5:11 you will sow but will not reap, 15 press the olive but will not rub yourself with oil, Zp 1:13 tread the grape but will not drink the wine.

The example of Samaria

'For you keep the laws of Omri; 16
what the House of Ahab did, you have done;
by modelling yourselves on their standards, you force me to make an appalling example of you and reduce your citizens to a laughing-stock;
hence you will endure the scorn of other peoples.'[n]

Universal injustice

7 How wretched I am, 1
a harvester in summer time,
like a gleaner at the vintage:
not a single cluster to eat,[a] none of those early figs I love!
Ps 14:1–3 Jr 5:1 The faithful have vanished from the land: 2 there is no one honest left.
All of them are on the alert for blood,
every man hunting his brother with a net.
Jr 4:22 Their hands are adept at wrong-doing:[b] 3

the judge gives judgement for a bribe, the man in power pronounces as he pleases.[c]
The best of them is like a briar, 4 the most honest of them like a thorn-hedge.[d]
Now from the north their punishment approaches![e]

That will be when they are confounded!
5 Trust no neighbour, Jr 9:3;12:6 put no confidence in a friend;
do not open your mouth
to the wife who shares your bed.
6 For son insults father, Ezk 22:7 daughter rebels against mother, ↗Mt 10:35–36par.
daughter-in-law against mother-in-law;
a person's enemies come from within the household itself.

7 But I shall look to Yahweh, my hope is in the God who will save me; Ps 130:5
my God will hear me.[f]

IV: HOPE FOR THE FUTURE

Zion insulted by enemies

8 Do not gloat over me, my enemy:[g] though I have fallen, I shall rise; though I live in darkness, Jn 8:12b Yahweh is my light.
9 I must endure Yahweh's anger for I have sinned against him, until he takes up my cause and rights my wrongs;
he will bring me out into the light,
and then I shall contemplate his saving justice. 6:5e 10 When my enemy sees this,
she will be covered with shame, having sneered, 'Where is Yahweh your God?' Ps 42:3,10 Jl 2:17
This time, I shall be watching as she is trampled underfoot like mud in the streets.

A prophecy of restoration[h]

11 That will be the day for rebuilding your walls!
The day for expanding your frontiers!

f. In answer to Yahweh's complaint against his people, the worshipper now replies, revealing the personal nature of the prophet's religion. For offers of more and more drastic types of sacrifice, the prophet substitutes a religion of the spirit, the demands of which have already been made known namely, decent behaviour (Amos), love (Hosea), humility before God (Isaiah).

g. 'you have already been told' Gk; 'he has told you' Hebr.; 'I will tell you' Syr.

h. Before 'Listen', Hebr. reads 'success will see your name (?)'. • 'assembly of citizens' Gk and Targ.; Hebr. obscure.

i. 'Can I overlook false measure?' ha'essah bat rasha' conj.; Hebr. ha'ish bet rasha' 'otzerot resha'. 'Is there a house of the wicked, treasures of wickedness (?)'.

j. 'can I connive' Vulg.; 'will I be pure' Hebr.

k. Some transfer this v. after v. 9 to improve the continuity. The last line of the v. is perhaps a gloss.

l. 'begun' versions; 'made sick' Hebr.

m. Hebr. adds two words of which the former is unknown. Perhaps 'and hunger (or filth) will stay in you'.

n. 'you keep' versions; 'he keeps himself' Hebr. • 'your (citizens)' conj.; 'its' Hebr. • 'of peoples' Gk; 'of my people' Hebr. The reference is perhaps to Baal-worship, more probably to social injustice and the luxury of the upper classes.

7 a. 'a harvester' Gk; 'the harvest' Hebr. 'a gleaner' conj.; 'gleanings' Hebr. •'cluster' ('eshkol) and 'to eat' ('ekol); note the assonance.

b. Restored following Gk; 'Against evil, hands to prosper' Hebr.

c. 'gives judgement' conj.; Hebr. omits. • At end of v. Hebr. adds 'so they wrap it up', sense uncertain.

d. lit. 'the most honest like a hedge' Symm.; 'an honest man outside a hedge' Hebr. 'a thorn-hedge' (mesukah) and 'confounded' (mebukah) are similar in sound.

e. 'from the north' conj.; 'of your watchmen' Hebr. • Invaders from Mesopotamia approached Palestine from the north, Jr 1:13–14.

f. This verse, in which the prophet proclaims his confidence in God's power to save, may have been the conclusion of his book; it presented a suitable opportunity for the addition of the poems of hope that follow, vv. 8–12 probably dating from exilic times and vv. 14–17 from the return.

g. The identity of the enemy is not clear, though more probably Edom, Ps 137:7–9; Is 34:5–8; Ezk 25:12–14; 35; Ob 10–15, than Babylon.

h. This prophecy, which may be dated to the Persian era (after 538) announces the restoration of the ramparts of Jerusalem and the expansion of its boundaries to hold a great number of people, either Israelites of the Diaspora or convert gentiles.

The day when others come to you 12
all the way from Assyria, from Egypt, from Tyre and all the way from the Euphrates, from sea to sea, from the mountains to the mountains![i]
The earth will become a desert 13 by reason of its inhabitants, in return for what they have done.[j]

A prayer for the confusion of Zion's enemies

Ps 23:1–2,4; 95:7 Ezk 34:1a
With shepherd's crook lead your people to pasture, 14 the flock that is your heritage, living confined in a forest with meadow land all round.[k] Let them graze in Bashan and Gilead as in the days of old!
Is 40:3e
As in the days when you came out of Egypt, 15 grant us to see wonders![l]
Is 26:11
The nations will see and be confounded 16
in spite of all their power;
they will put their hands over their mouths,
their ears will be deafened.
They will lick the dust like snakes, 17 like reptiles that crawl on the earth.
They will creep trembling out of their lairs,[m] in terror before you.

A plea for God's forgiveness[n]

Jr 50:20
What god can compare with you 18
for pardoning guilt
Ex 34:6–7 Ps 103:9
and for overlooking crime?[o]
He does not harbour anger for ever, since he delights in showing faithful love.
Once more have pity on us, 19 tread down our faults;
throw all our sins[p]
to the bottom of the sea.
Is 38:17
Grant Jacob your faithfulness, 20 and Abraham your faithful love, Gn 22:16–18; 28:13–15. ↗Lk 1:73
as you swore to our ancestors from the days of long ago.[q]

i. Following Gk; Hebr. uncertain.

j. Originally, this v. may have been a threat aimed at Judah, but in its present context applies to the hostile nations, especially perhaps 'the people of the country' surrounding the Jews on their return from exile.

k. The nation is isolated on unproductive land—the situation of the Jews in the region of Jerusalem after their return from exile.

l. 'grant us to see' conj.; 'I shall grant him to see' Hebr.

m. The Hebr. adds 'to Yahweh our God'.

n. Another short psalm, of which similar examples occur in the prophetic books, Is 12; 25:1–5; 26:1–6,7–15,16–19; 63:7–64:11.

o. Hebr. adds 'for the remnant of your heritage', a gloss which limits the range of God's pardon.

p. In Hebr. the first two verbs of this verse are in the third person. • 'our sins' versions; 'their sins' Hebr.

q. The salvation of Israel is the fulfilment of the covenant and of the Promise, the foundations of hope and the focus of faith for the people of God.

NAHUM

1 1 Prophecy about Nineveh. Book of the vision of Nahum of Elkosh.

PRELUDE

Psalm. The wrath of Yahweh [a]

2 Aleph Yahweh is a jealous and vengeful God, Yahweh takes vengeance, he is rich in wrath; Ex 20:5–6 Dt 4:24f Yahweh takes vengeance on his foes, he stores up fury for his enemies.
3 Yahweh is slow to anger but great in power, Ex 34:6–7+
Yahweh never lets evil go unpunished. [b] Bet In storm and whirlwind he takes his way, the clouds are the dust stirred up by his feet.
4 Gimel He rebukes the sea, dries it up, and makes all the rivers run dry. Ps 106:9 Is 50:2 Dalet . . . Bashan and Carmel wither, [c] the greenery of the Lebanon withers too.
5 He The mountains tremble before him, the hills reel; Jr 4:24
Waw the earth collapses before him,
the world and all who live in it. [d] 6 Zain His fury—who can withstand it?
Who can endure his burning wrath? ↗Rv 6:17 Het His anger pours out like fire and the rocks break apart before him.
7 Tet Yahweh is better than a fortress in time of distress;
Yod he recognises those who trust in him
8 even when the flood rushes on; [e] Gn 6:7seq.;8:1 Kaph he will make an end once and for all of those who defy him, [f] and pursue his foes into darkness.

Prophetic judgement on Judah and Assyria

9 What are your thoughts about Yahweh? [g] 1 S 2:6
He it is who makes a final end:

1 a. This alphabetical psalm, see Pr 31:10e (cf. Ps 25,34,37, though here the alphabetic series is incomplete) develops the traditional theme of the wrath of Yahweh (Nb 11:33; 2 S 6:7; 21:14; Ps 2:12; 60:1; 79:5; 110:5) and is therefore an apt prelude to the prophecy against Nineveh.

b. The last four lines of this first section, which are not part of the alphabetic series, are apparently a later commentary on v. 2a, intended to forestall misunderstanding of the nature of God's anger.

c. The beginning of the verse is missing (dalet).

d. 'collapses' wattasah conj.; Hebr. wattissa' 'rises'. The psalm combines familiar themes from ancient cosmogonies (the creation, divine victory over the waters, Jb 7:12f) with those from sacred history (Crossing of the Sea and Sinai, Ps 114:3–8; Is 51:10; etc.)

e. Probably an allusion to the Flood (Noah was, like Nahum, a consoler, according to Gn 5:29). The wrath of God has a meaning, vv. 7–8; it is not unleashed blindly, but judges between believers and the impious.

f. 'those who defy him' Gk; 'her place' Hebr.

g. Alternative translations: 'What picture have you of Yahweh?' or 'How you should count on Yahweh!'

his adversaries will not rise up a second time;
like a thicket of tangled brambles, [h] 10 like dry straw, they will be burnt up completely.

To Assyria From you has emerged 11 someone plotting evil against Yahweh, Dt 13:14b Ps 18:4 one of Belial's counsellors. [i]

To Judah Yahweh says this: 12 2 K 19:35–36 Unopposed and many though they be,
they will be cut down and pass away.
Though I have made you suffer,
I shall make you suffer no more,
Is 9:3 for now I shall break his yoke which presses hard on you 13 and snap your chains.

To the king of Nineveh As for you, this is Yahweh's decree: 14
You will have no heirs to your name, from the temple of your gods I shall remove carved image and cast image,
Is 14:19–21 Jr 8:1–2 and I shall devastate [j] your tomb, for you are accursed!

Is 52:7–10 2 To Judah See on the mountains the feet of the herald! 1 15
'Peace!' he proclaims.
Judah, celebrate your feasts,
carry out your vows,
1:11i for Belial will never pass through you again;
he has been utterly destroyed.

THE FALL OF NINEVEH

The assault

Is 5:26–30 Jr 5:15–17; 6:22–30 The destroyer has advanced on you, 2 guarding the siege-works, watching the road, bracing himself, mustering great strength!

and his lairs with spoil?
13 14 Look, I am against you!—declares Yahweh Sabaoth[j]— =3:5
I shall send your chariots up in smoke, and the sword will devour your whelps;
I shall cut short your depredations on earth, and the voices of your envoys will be heard no more.

Sentence passed on Nineveh the harlot

1 3 Disaster to the city of blood, packed throughout with lies,
stuffed with booty,
where plundering has no end!
2 The crack of the whip!
The rumble of wheels!
Galloping horse,
jolting chariot,
3 charging cavalry,
flashing swords,
gleaming spears,
a mass of wounded,
hosts of dead, Ezk 39:11–16
countless corpses;
they stumble over corpses—

h. 'like a thicket' keya'ar conj.; Hebr. ki'ad 'for until'. Hebr. adds 'and like drunkards of their drink (?)', perhaps a distorted repetition of the two preceding words.

i. This sacrilegious personage, emerging from Nineveh, could be Sennacherib, see 2 K 18–19.

j. 'devastate' 'ashshim conj.; Hebr. 'asim 'place'.

2 a. This v., seemingly interrupting the sequence of ideas in vv. 2 and 4, is sometimes repositioned by critics after v. 1 on which it is an apt commentary. It alludes to the poem of Is 5:1–7.

b. 'vine' gephen conj.; Hebr. ge'on 'magnificence'.

c. 'horsemen' Gk; 'fir trees' Hebr.

d. 'are called out' Gk; 'are remembered' Hebr.

e. A shelter to protect the besiegers attacking the wall.

f. 'Beauty' hatztzebi conj.; Hebr. wehutztzab 'is placed'. • Either the statue of the goddess Ishtar, patroness of Nineveh, or perhaps the ornamental pedestal. The goddess was served by sacred prostitutes.

g. 'whose waters' Gk; 'since her day, and they' Hebr.

h. Assonance: buqah, umebuqah, umebullaqah.

i. 'cave' me'arah conj.; Hebr. mire'eh 'pasture'.

j. 'you' fem. sing., Nineveh. A new picture of Nineveh's ruin unfolds, with the judgement on the sins which have provoked it. Nahum is less concerned with Nineveh's idolatry (Nineveh, unlike Israel, is not Yahweh's wife) than with the greed and cunning with which she has established her power over all peoples to despoil them.

Rv 17–18 because of the countless whorings of the harlot, 4
the graceful beauty, the cunning witch, who enslaved [a] nations by her harlotries and tribes by her spells.

=2:14 Look, I am against you!—declares Yahweh Sabaoth— 5
I shall lift your skirts as high as your face Ho 2:5i and show your nakedness to the nations, your shame to the kingdoms.
I shall pelt you with filth, 6
I shall shame you and put you in the pillory. [b]
Then all who look at you 7 will shrink from you and say,
'Nineveh has been ruined!'
Is 51:19 Jr 15:5 Who will mourn for her?
Where would I find people to comfort you?

The lesson of Thebes

Are you better off than No-Amon [c] 8 situated among rivers,
her defences the seas,
her rampart the waters? [d]
In Ethiopia and Egypt 9 lay her strength, and it was boundless;
Jr 46:9c Put and the Libyans served in her [e] army.
But she too went into exile, 10
into captivity;
Ho 10:14m her little ones too were dashed to pieces
at every crossroad;
Jl 4:3 lots were drawn for her nobles,
all her great men were put in chains.

You too will become drunk, 11
you will go into hiding;
you too will have to search for a refuge from the enemy.

Nineveh's preparations useless [f]

Your fortifications are all fig trees, 12 with early ripening figs:
as soon as they are shaken,
they fall into the mouth of the eater.
Look at your people: 13
Is 3:12;19:16 Jr 50:37;51:30 you are a nation of women!
The gates of your country
gape open to your enemies;
fire has devoured their bars!
Draw yourselves water for the siege, 14 strengthen your fortifications!
Into the mud with you, puddle the clay, repair the brick-kiln!
There the fire will burn you up, 15
the sword will cut you down. [g]

The locusts fly away [h]

Make yourselves as numerous as locusts, make yourselves as numerous as the hoppers,

16a let your commercial agents outnumber the stars of heaven,[i]

A funeral lament

18 Alas,[j] •your shepherds are asleep, king of Assyria,
your bravest men slumber;[k] your people are scattered on the mountains 1 K 22:17 with no one to gather them.
19 There is no remedy for your wound, your injury is past healing.
All who hear the news of you clap their hands at your downfall.
For who has not felt
your unrelenting cruelty?

3 a. 'enslaved', lit. 'sold', the antithesis of 'buying back', meaning redemption or liberation.

b. Nineveh will be punished as an adulteress, Ezk 16:36–43; 23:25–30; Ho 2:5.

c. The 'city of Amon', Thebes in Upper Egypt; it was sacked by the armies of Ashurbanipal in 663.

d. 'her defences' 4Qp Nahum (commentary on Nahum discovered at Qumran); MT omits. • 'the waters' mayim 4Qp Nahum; MT miyyam 'the sea'. This poetic description of a moated city beside the Nile has been unimaginatively glossed 'surrounded by water'.

e. 'her' Gk, Syr.; 'your' Hebr.

f. This prophecy appears to allude to reverses already suffered by the Assyrian armies (capture of Tarbis and of Assur in 614?).

g. Hebr. adds 'it will devour you like the locust', a gloss inspired by what follows.

h. The Assyrians' swarming as traders, soldiers and officials, into the occupied countries is compared to that of myriads of locusts. The same image is used to prophesy their sudden and complete disappearance.

i. 'let outnumber' conj.; 'you outnumber' Hebr. v. 16^b is transposed to the middle of v. 17.

j. 'Alas' 'oy mah conj. following Gk; Hebr. 'ayyam 'Where are they?'

k. 'slumber' Gk, Syr.; 'remain' Hebr.

HABAKKUK

Title

1 The charge [a] that Habakkuk the prophet received in a vision. 1

I: DIALOGUE BETWEEN THE PROPHET AND HIS GOD

First complaint of the prophet: lawlessness prevails [b]

How long, Yahweh, am I to cry for help 2 while you will not listen;
Jb 19:7 to cry, 'Violence!' in your ear
Ps 18:41 Jr 14:9 while you will not save?

Why do you make me see wrong-doing, 3
Ps 55:9–11 Jr 6:7;9:2seq. Am 3:9–10 why do you countenance oppression?
Plundering and violence confront me, contention and discord flourish.

And so the law loses its grip 4
and justice never emerges, Is 59:14 Mi 7:2–3 since the wicked outwits the upright and so justice comes out perverted.

First answer: the Chaldaeans as instrument of God's justice [c]

↗Ac 13:41 Is 29:9 Cast your eyes over the nations, look, 5 and be amazed, astounded.
For I am doing something in your own days [d] which you will not believe if you are told of it.
For look, I am stirring up the Chaldaeans, 6 that fierce and fiery nation [e] who march miles across country to seize the homes of others.
They are dreadful and awesome, 7 a law and authority to themselves. [f]

Their horses are swifter than leopards, 8 Zp 3:3 fiercer than wolves at night;
their horsemen gallop on,
their horsemen advance from afar, swooping like an eagle anxious to feed.

They are all bent on violence, 9 their faces scorching like an east wind; [g] they scoop up prisoners like sand.

They scoff at kings, 10
they despise princes.

They make light of all fortresses:
they heap up earth and take them. [h]

11 Then the wind changes and is gone . . . [i] Guilty is he who makes his strength his god. 1:7 Is 10:13

Second complaint of the prophet: the tyranny of the conqueror [j]

12 Surely you, Yahweh, are from ancient times, [k] Lv 17:1a Dt 33:27 Ps 90:1–2 my holy God, who never dies! [l] Yahweh, you have appointed him to execute judgement;
O Rock, you have set him [m] firm to punish.

13 Your eyes are too pure to rest on evil, 1:3 Ps 5:4–5 you cannot look on at oppression.
Why do you look on at those who play the traitor, why say nothing while the wicked swallows someone more Ps 35:22seq.
upright than himself?
14 Why treat people like fish of the sea, Jr 16:16 Ezk 12:13;17: 20;29:4seq.; 32:3
like gliding creatures who have no leader?
15 They haul them all up on their hook, they catch them in their net,
they sweep them up in their dragnet and then make merry and rejoice.

16 And so they offer a sacrifice to their net, and burn incense to their dragnet, for by these they get a rich living and live off the fat of the land.

17 Are they to go on emptying their net unceasingly, [n] slaughtering the nations without pity?

Second answer: the upright will live through faithfulness

1 2 I shall stand at my post, Nb 23:1–6
I shall station myself on my watch-tower,

1 a. lit. 'burden', cf. Is 13:1, etc., and Jr 23:33–40.

b. Speaking in the name of his people, cf. Is 59:9–14; Jr 10:23–25; 14:2–9,19–22, the prophet complains to Yahweh about the miseries they suffer. This passage, similar to the laments in Ps and in Jr, could refer, if taken by itself, to internal dissension; but there is no doubt that, given the context of vv. 12–17, it relates to the tyranny of the Chaldaeans. Why do the saving justice and kindness of Yahweh (and his holiness, v. 13) allow the wicked to triumph? After all, Judah, though sinful, is still on the side of 'uprightness' since knowing the true God; yet God permits the idolater to triumph. Yahweh must give an answer, see 2:1.

c. First answer. The Chaldaean scourge is the present instrument of God's justice, cf. Dt 28:47seq.; 2 K 24:2–4; Is 10:5–27; Jr 5:14–19; 25:1–13; 27:6–22; 51:20–23; Am 3:11. But cf. also Nebuchadnezzar, 'my servant', Jr 25:9; 27:6; 43:10.

d. Following Gk; Hebr. could also be translated '(a deed) is being done'.

e. The dramatic images in this description of invasion occur frequently in the prophetic books, see Is 5:26–29; 13:17–18; Jr 4:5–7,13,16–17; 5:15–17; 6:22–24; Ezk 23:22–26; 28:7–10; Na 3:2–3.

f. The Chaldaeans acknowledge no human or divine power as master; they attribute their victories to their own valour; see v. 11[b].

g. Text uncertain. 'their faces scorching' conj.; 'the scorching (or: eagerness) of their faces' Hebr. 'an east wind' with 1 QpHab (the commentary on Habakkuk discovered at Qumran in 1947) • 'to the east' MT. The scorching wind from the eastern desert sometimes symbolises invasions from the east, cf. Jr 18:17; Ezk 17:10seq.; Ho 12:2; 13:15.

h. Ramps or earthworks used in sieges.

i. The invasion comes like a storm and passes on, leaving ruin behind. Others interpret 'Then the spirit passes by and is gone' (referring to the passing of a period of prophetic inspiration), or 'Then he (the invader) changes his mind, having exceeded (his mission?)'.

j. This passage resumes the complaint of vv. 2–4; if it is true that the Chaldaean triumph is ultimately due to Yahweh, vv. 5–6, this only moves the problem back to Yahweh himself who must give the answer. How is it that a just and holy God, the custodian of justice, vv. 12[a.b], 13, can treat nations thus, v. 14, and the chosen people in particular? Will he allow the wicked to engulf the upright, v. 13, cf. v. 4 and vv.15–17?

k. Those of the Exodus, recalled in ch. 3. For Habakkuk this constitutes the grounds for hope.

l. 'who never dies' lo'tamut conj.; Hebr. lo'namut 'we shall not die', the result of a scribal correction.

m. 'him': the Chaldaeans, roused for a mission of justice beyond which they must not go, see 1:5c. Others interpret of Israel, who was to judge the peoples; or of Jehoiakim king of Judah, who was unfaithful to his mission; 1:2–4,12–17 and 2:6–19 would then be aimed at him.

n. 'unceasingly' 1 QpHab; 'unceasingly slaughtering' MT.

watching to see what he will say to me, what answer he will make to my complaints. [a]

Then Yahweh answered me and said, 2
Is 8:1 'Write the vision down,
Jr 30:2 inscribe it on tablets
Rv 1:19 to be easily read.
For the vision is for its appointed time, [b] 3 it hastens towards its end and it will not lie; [c]
Nb 23:19 although it may take some time, wait for it, 2 P 3:4–10 for come it certainly will before too long.

'You see, anyone whose heart is not upright will succumb, [d] 4 ↗Rm 1:17 but the upright will live through faithfulness.' [e]
↗Ga 3:11
↗Heb 10:38

II: CURSES ON THE OPPRESSOR

Prelude

Now, surely, wealth is treacherous! [f] 5
He is arrogant, for ever on the move,
Pr 27:20 with appetite as large as Sheol
Is 5:14 and as insatiable as Death, gathering in all the nations,
and making a harvest of all peoples.
Is 14:4 Are not the peoples all bound to satirise 6
Mi 2:4 and make up cryptic riddles about him? [g]
As for instance:

Five imprecations

I

Is 5:8c Disaster to anyone who amasses goods not his [h]
Lk 6:24–26 (for how long?)
Rv 8:13+ and to anyone who weighs himself down with goods taken in pledge!

Will not your creditors suddenly stand up, 7 will not those who make you shiver wake up, and you will fall a prey to them?

Is 33:1 Since you have plundered many nations, 8
all the nations that remain will plunder you, =2:17 because of the bloodshed and violence done to the country, to the city and to all who live in it.

II

Jr 22:13–17 Disaster to anyone who amasses ill-gotten gains for his house, [i] 9
Is 14:13+ so as to fix his nest on high Jr 49:16 and so evade the reach of misfortune!
Ob 4

You have conspired to bring shame on your house: 10 1:17 by overthrowing many peoples [j]
Is 14:20 you have worked your own ruin.

Lk 19:40 For the very stone will protest from the wall, 11 and the beam will respond from the framework. [k]

III

12 Disaster to anyone who builds a town with bloodshed[l] Jr 22:13 and founds a city on wrong-doing! Mi 3:10

13 Is it not thanks to Yahweh Sabaoth that the peoples' toil is fuel for the fire,[m] ‖Jr 51:58 and the nations' labour came to nothing? Si 14:19

14 But the earth will be full of the knowledge of the glory of Yahweh Nb 14:21+ as the waters cover the depths of the sea. Is 11:9

IV

15 Disaster to anyone who makes his neighbours drink,[n] Gn 9:20–25 pouring out his poison until they are drunk,[o] so that he can see them naked!
16 You are full of shame, not glory!

Your turn now to drink and show your foreskin.[p] Lm 4:21
The cup in Yahweh's right hand comes round to you, Ps 75:8+ and disgrace will overshadow your glory. Is 51:17h

17 For the violence done to the Lebanon will overwhelm you and the massacre of animals will terrify you,[q]
because of the bloodshed and violence done to the country, =2:8
to the city and to all who live in it.[r]

V

19 Disaster to anyone who says to the log, 'Wake up!',[s] Is 40:19–20+ to the dumb stone, 'On your feet!'
(This is the prophecy!)[t]

2 a. 'my watch-tower' 1 QpHab; 'the watch-tower' MT. • 'he will make' yashib conj.; following Peshitta; Hebr. 'ashib 'I shall make' MT. • The prophet keeps watch like a sentry on behalf of his people, cf. Ps 5:3; Is 21:6–12; Jr 6:17; Ezk 3:17; 33:1–9; Ho 9:8.

b. Hence the command to write it down. The vision will be fulfilled 'at the appointed time', cf. Dn 8:19,26; 10:14; 11:27,35; the written document pledges Yahweh's word to fulfil it at this appointed time, cf. 2 P 3:2, and will later stand as a witness to its veracity; cf. Is 8:1,3; 30:8.

c. The vision has an energy of its own, since it is the expression of a divine word moving to fulfilment, cf. Is 55:10–11.

d. 'anyone whose heart is not upright will succumb' (reading 'ullaph zu) conj.; Hebr. 'his soul within him is inflated ('uppelah), it is not upright'; Gk 'if he defects, my soul will not be pleased with him, but the upright will have life for his faith in me.'

e. This maxim, of universal application, see Is 3:10–11, here sums up the content of the vision. Being faithful to God (cf. Jr 5:1–3; 7:28; 9:2; Ho 2:22), i.e. to his word and to his will, is characteristic of the 'upright', and assures him security and life here on earth (cf. Ps 37:3; Pr 10:25; Is 33:6). The wicked, who does not have this 'uprightness', runs to ruin. The upright and the wicked in this context (1:2–4,12–17; 2:5–18) are respectively Judah and the Chaldaeans; the former will live, the others perish. In the LXX text, where 'faithfulness' is rendered 'faith', Paul finds the doctrine of justification by faith.

f. 'wealth is treacherous' 1 QpHab; 'wine is a traitor' Hebr.

g. 'make up cryptic riddles' umelitzah yahudu conj.; Hebr. umelitzah hidot 'and a cryptic riddle, a puzzle'. 'For instance', lit. 'they will say' 1 QpHab and Gk; 'he will say' MT. • The satire, mashal, is a mocking couplet using metaphor. The cryptic riddle, melisah, is one requiring interpretation. The two words describe the literary form of the five imprecations following, prophesying ruin to the oppressor in enigmatic terms.

h. An attack on the cupidity of the conqueror. There is an ironical change of situation: the Chaldaeans become debtors to the nations whom they have plundered and the prey of these same nations now their creditors—an application of the lex talionis, Ex 21:25f.

i. The conqueror's fate will be that of someone who gets rich by crime; he will end with nothing.

j. 'by overthrowing' versions; 'to overthrow' Hebr.

k. The Chaldaean dynasty or 'House' paid for by extortion: its stone and wood call down vengeance on the occupier.

l. These verses denounce rule by violence.

m. 'Is it not' versions; 'Behold' Hebr.; formula prefacing a quotation, cf. 2 Ch 25:26; here introducing a word of Yahweh in the following lines.

n. The cynicism of the conqueror is like that of someone who encourages others to get drunk, to degrade them; their shame will soon be his. Nineveh is said to do this in Na 3:4–7, and Babylon in Jr 51:7.

o. 'his neighbours' 1 QpHab; 'his neighbour' MT. • 'pouring' meaning uncertain. • 'his poison' (cf. Dt 32:24,33; Ps 58:4; 140:3; or 'his anger') QpHab, Symm.; 'your poison' MT.

p. The uncircumcised and debauched Chaldaean is himself made drunk and disgraced.

q. Lebanon despoiled, cf. Is 37:24; its cedars felled by Nebuchadnezzar for building purposes, cf. Is 14:8, may also symbolise Israel, cf. Is 33:9; Jr 21:14; 22:6,7,20–23.

r. We read v. 18 after v. 19, as the sense seems to require.

s. These verses denounce the conqueror's idolatry.

t. Possibly a gloss inspired by v. 18[b].

Look, he is encased in gold and silver,
—but not a breath of life inside it!

What use is a sculpted image that a sculptor should make it? 18
Ho 3:4 Zc 10:2 Ezk 21:26 —a metal image, a lying instructor!
And why does the image-maker put his trust in it,
that he should make dumb idols?

Ps 11:4 But Yahweh is in his holy Temple: [u] 20
Zp 1:7 Zc 2:17 Rv 8:1 let the whole earth be silent before him. [v]

III: PLEA TO YAHWEH FOR DELIVERANCE

Title

3 A prayer [a] of the prophet Habakkuk; [b] tone as for dirges. 1

Prayer

Dt 2:25 Ps 8:1,9;76:2 Yahweh, I have heard of your renown; [c] 2 your work, Yahweh, inspires me with dread. [d] Is 51:9 Make it live again in our time, Is 54:8 make it known in our time; [e] in wrath remember mercy.

Theophany: Yahweh's approach

Eloah comes from Teman, 3
Dt 33:2 Jg 5:4 and the Holy One from Mount Paran. [f] Pause
His majesty covers the heavens,
Nb 14:21+ Ps 72:19 and his glory fills the earth.

His brightness is like the day, 4 rays flash from his hands, [g] that is where his power lies hidden.

Rv 6:8 Pestilence goes before him 5 and Plague follows close behind. [h]

Ps 104:32 Ex 15:14–16 When he stands up, he makes the earth tremble, 6 with his glance he makes the nations quake.
And the eternal mountains are dislodged, the everlasting hills sink down, [i] his pathway from of old.

I saw the tents of Cushan in trouble, 7
the tent-curtains of Midian shuddering. [j]

Yahweh's battle

Yahweh, are you enraged with the rivers, [k] 8 are you angry with the sea, [l] Dt 33:26+ Ps 68:17j that you should mount your chargers, your rescuing chariots?

You uncover your bow, 9 and give the string its fill of arrows. [m] Pause

You trench the soil with torrents; [n] the mountains see you and tremble, 10 great floods sweep by,

the abyss roars aloud,
lifting high its waves. [o]

11 Sun and moon stay inside their dwellings, they flee at the light of your arrows,
at the flash of your lightning-spear.

12 In rage you stride across the land, in anger you trample the nations.

13 You marched to save your people, to save your anointed one; [p] you wounded the head of the house of the wicked, 2:9–11 laid bare the foundation to the rock. Pause

14 With your shafts you pierced the leader of his warriors who stormed out with shouts of joy to scatter us, [q] as if they meant to devour some poor wretch in their lair. Ps 10:7–9; 17:12

15 With your horses you trampled through the sea, Ps 77:19 through the surging abyss! Is 43:16–17

Conclusion: human fear and faith in God

16 When I heard, I trembled to the core, [r] Jr 4:19 my lips quivered at the sound;
my bones became disjointed and my legs gave way beneath me. [s]

u. The Temple in Jerusalem, but primarily the heavenly palace from which he will shortly emerge, cf. 3:3seq.

v. This silence preludes the theophany of 3:3–15, cf. Ps 76:8–9; Is 41:1.

3 a. As in many of the Psalms, this prayer combines supplication with a hymn to the omnipotence of God. The word 'Pause' and the final note of v. 19[d] show that it was used in the liturgy. • This entire chapter is absent from the Commentary on Hab discovered at Qumran, see p. 1184.

b. As in Ps, the inscription may indicate not the author of the prayer but the fact that it belongs to a collection, in this case Hab.

c. lit. 'what you make heard'.

d. All Yahweh's exploits in primeval (1:12) and Mosaic times, Dt 11:7; Jg 2:7; Ps 44:1–8; 77:11–12; 95:9.

e. 'in our time', lit. 'in the midst of years'. • For these last two lines, Gk reads, 'Between two animals you will make yourself known; when the years draw near, you will be recognised; when the time comes, you will appear', a text which, in conjunction with Is 1:3, gave rise to the tradition of the two animals by the crib at Bethlehem.

f. 'Eloah', an ancient name for God. Teman, a northern district of Edom, Paran, a mountain in Edom. • The theophany, see Ex 19:16g, now begins; it describes the coming, vv. 3–7, and battle, vv. 8–15, of Yahweh. Several details in this epic vision suggest the victorious march of Yahweh at the head of his people during the Exodus, a type, see Is 40:3d, of the deliverance to come. Yahweh ('the Holy One', cf. Dt 33:3; Is 6:3g) advances from Sinai, cf. Ex 24:9–11, towards Canaan, cf. Nb 20:14seq., through the region south-south-east of Palestine from which the storms also come. His coming is described, vv. 3seq.; in terms of an advancing storm cloud, cf. Ps 18:7seq.; 29. The expressions refer sometimes to the cloud, sometimes to Yahweh who is present in it.

g. 'His brightness' versions; 'The brightness' Hebr. 'rays', lit. 'horns', but cf. Ex 34:29–30,35.

h. resheph: the word is derived from the name of the Phoenician god of lightning and means thunderbolt, hailstone, calamity and, here (being parallel with 'pestilence', and cf. Dt 32:24) plague.

i. 'eternal mountains' and 'everlasting hills' have a cosmic sense here, cf. Jb 15:7; Ps 90:2; Pr 8:25; in Gn 49:26; Dt 33:15 they indicate the mythical home of the patriarchs.

j. Midian, see Ex 2:15e. Cushan is apparently an ancient name for the same region.

k. Hebr. adds 'or with the rivers', dittography.

l. As in Jg 5:4–5; Ps 77:16–19; 114:3–7, cosmic disturbances accompany an intervention of Yahweh, see Am 8:9h. (Use is perhaps made here of ancient traditions of the creation conceived as a struggle between God and the rebellious elements, the Abyss, the Sea, the River, etc.), see Jb 7:12f. Here the struggle ends in defeat for 'the head of the House of the Wicked' and his invading force, that is, the Chaldeans, vv. 13–14.

m. Text corrected, following a Gk MS; the Hebr. is unintelligible (lit. 'the oaths are arrows of the word'). The shafts are the flashes of lightning, vv. 4,11; Ps 29:7; 77:17. • For Yahweh as bowman, see Ezk 5:16; Dt 32:23. For the bow as symbol of strength, see Gn 49:24; Jb 29:20.

n. The torrential rain accompanying the storm, cf. Jg 5:4; Ps 77:16–18.

o. 'waves', lit. 'hands'. The abyss under the earth, the primordial ocean, which unites its waters with the rain from above.

p. Here indicates the people, cf. Ex 19:6; Ps 28:8, rather than the king. • 'to save' Gk; Hebr. 'the help'. • The remainder of the v. is very difficult and the translation uncertain: 'to the rock' 'ad tzur conj.; Hebr. 'ad tzawwa'r 'to the neck'.

q. Text uncertain. 'your shafts' conj.; 'his shafts' Hebr. • 'his warriors' Vulg.; 'princes' Gk; Hebr. has an unknown word. • 'scatter us' conj.; 'scatter me' Hebr.

r. See v. 2 and Is 21:3–4; Jr 23:9; Dn 8:18,27; 10:8. The supernatural awe and the anguish of the prophet, as he watches the battle of Yahweh and the concurrent calamities, vv. 16–17, are replaced by joy in the rescue and security coming from Yahweh, vv. 18–19 but cf. 16[c].

s. 'my legs gave way' conj. yirgezu 'ashuri following Gk; 'I give way who' 'ergaz 'asher Hebr. • The end of the v. is uncertain; others translate 'to attack a people who assails it' or 'when they attack a people to assail it'.

Calmly I await the day of anguish which is dawning on the people now attacking us.

Jr 5:17
Ho 9:2
(For the fig tree is not to blossom, 17 nor will the vines bear fruit, the olive crop will disappoint and the fields will yield no food;
the sheep will vanish from the fold;
no cattle in the stalls.)[t]

But I shall rejoice in Yahweh, 18
↗Lk 1:47
I shall exult in God my Saviour.

Yahweh my Lord is my strength, 19
Ps 18:33
he will make my feet as light as a doe's, Dt 32:13
Is 58:14
and set my steps on the heights.[u]

For the choirmaster; on stringed instruments.[v]

t. This v. which, despite a context of cosmic struggle, paints a picture of agricultural depression, may well be a gloss (to emphasise the lesson of trust in Yahweh); possibly, however, it is meant to describe the effects of the war as felt in Judah.

u. 'the heights' Gk; 'my heights' Hebr.

v. 'on' conj.; 'my' Hebr. Indications of this kind usually appear at the beginning of Psalms.

ZEPHANIAH

1 The word of Yahweh which was addressed to Zephaniah son of Cushi, son of Gedaliah, son of Amariah, son of Hezekiah, in the days of Josiah son of Amon king of Judah.

I: THE DAY OF YAHWEH FOR JUDAH

Prelude: judgement on all creation

2 I shall sweep away everything off the face of the earth,
declares Yahweh.
3 I shall sweep away humans and animals, the birds of the air and the fish of the sea, Ho 4:3a
I shall topple the wicked [a] and wipe all people off the face of the earth
—declares Yahweh.

Against the worshippers of alien gods

4 I shall raise my hand against Judah and against all who live in Jerusalem, and from this place I will wipe out Baal's remnant, 2 K 23:4seq.,12
the very name of his priests, [b] 5 and those who prostrate themselves on the roofs Dt 4:19 before the array of heaven, 2 K 21:3–5 and those who prostrate themselves [c] before Yahweh but swear by Milcom, [d] 1 K 11:7,33 6 and those who have turned their back on Yahweh, 2 K 23:13 who do not seek Yahweh
and do not consult him.

7 Silence before Lord Yahweh, Hab 2:20 for the Day of Yahweh is near! Zc 2:17 Yahweh has prepared a sacrifice, Rv 8:1
he has consecrated his guests. [e]

Against the courtiers [f]

8 On the Day of Yahweh's sacrifice,

1 a. 'I shall topple' wehikshalti conj.; Hebr. wehammakshelot 'the stumbling-blocks'.

b. The word is used only of the priesthood of idols. Hebr. adds 'and the priests', a gloss.

c. Hebr. adds 'and who swear', dittography.

d. 'Milcom' some Gk MSS, Syr.; 'their king' Hebr. • Zephaniah denounces the vestiges of Canaanite religion, v. 4, the star worship of Assyria, and finally the combination of Yahwism with the worship of neighbouring gods (Milcom, god of the Ammonites).

e. 'Silence before Lord Yahweh' is a liturgical command, the Day of Yahweh being represented as a sacrificial banquet, Is 34:6; Jr 46:10; Ezk 39:17, at which the people of Judah are the victims. The guests are 'consecrated' for slaughter, as in Jr 12:3.

f. The prophecy seems to have been uttered during the early years of Josiah's reign when Judah was being governed by regents in the Assyrian interest. • 'Those who go up the Step' (clearly the steps of the throne) are those who approach the king.

Ex 3:16h I shall punish the courtiers, the royal princes
and all who dress
in outlandish clothes.
On that day I shall punish 9
all who go up the Step
and fill the Temple of their lords, with violence and deceit. [g]

Against the merchants of Jerusalem

On that Day—declares Yahweh— 10
Ne 3:3 uproar will be heard from the Fish Gate, wailing from the New Quarter and a great crash from the hills.
Wail, you who live in the Hollow, [h] 11 for it is all over with the merchants, all the money-bags have been wiped out!

Against unbelievers

When that time comes 12
I shall search Jerusalem by lamplight and punish the men
Jr 48:1 stagnating over the remains of their wine, [i] who say in their hearts, Ps 10:4;14:1 'Yahweh can do nothing,
Jr 5:12e either good or bad.'
For this, their wealth will be looted 13 and their houses laid in ruins;
Dt 28:30–33+ they will build houses but not live in them,
Am 5:11 •Mi 6:15 they will plant vineyards but not drink their wine.

The Day of Yahweh [j]

Am 5:18m The great Day of Yahweh is near, 14 near, and coming with great speed.
How bitter the sound of the Day of Yahweh,
Nb 10:5a the Day when the warrior shouts his cry of war. [k]
Is 42:13 That Day is a day of retribution, 15 a day of distress and tribulation, a day of ruin and of devastation, ‖Jl 2:2 a day of darkness and gloom,
a day of cloud and thick fog, Jl 2:1b a day of trumpet blast and battle cry 16 against fortified town
and high corner-tower.
I shall bring such distress on humanity 17 that they will grope their way like the blind for having sinned against Yahweh.
Their blood will be poured out like mud,
Jr 9:21 yes, their corpses like dung; Ezk 7:19 nor will their silver or gold 18 be able to save them.
On the Day of Yahweh's anger,
Dt 4:24f by the fire of his jealousy,
Am 8:9h the whole earth will be consumed.
For he will destroy, yes, annihilate everyone living on earth.

Conclusion: a call to conversion [a]

2 1 Gather together, gather together, [b] nations without shame,
2 before you are dispersed [c] like chaff — Ho 13:3
which disappears in a day;
before Yahweh's burning anger overtakes you (before the Day of Yahweh's anger overtakes you).
3 Seek Yahweh, — Am 5:4c
all you humble of the earth, [d] who obey his commands.
Seek uprightness,
seek humility: — Is 57:15
you may perhaps find shelter
on the Day of Yahweh's anger.

II: AGAINST THE NATIONS

The enemy to the west: the Philistines [e] — Jos 13:2b; Is 14:28–32; Jr 47; Ezk 25:15–17; Am 1:6–8

4 For Gaza will be abandoned and Ashkelon reduced to ruins; Ashdod will be driven out in broad daylight and Ekron uprooted.
5 Disaster to the members of the coastal league, to the nation of the Cherethites! — Dt 2:23; Jr 47:4; Am 9:7
This is the word of Yahweh against you:
I shall subdue you, land of the Philistines,
I shall destroy you till there are no inhabitants left;
6 and the coastal league will be reduced to pasture land, to grazing grounds for shepherds and folds for sheep;
7 and the league will belong to the remnant of the House of Judah;
they will pasture their flocks there,
at night they will rest in the houses of Ashkelon;
for, when Yahweh their God has punished them,
he will restore their fortunes.

g. The word here translated 'punishment' can mean any special intervention of Yahweh, favourable as well as unfavourable.

h. The Hollow: an unidentified but presumably low-lying quarter of Jerusalem; see Pr 31:24; Is 23:8; Ho 12:8.

i. lit. 'congealing' like wine which is not drawn.

j. As with Isaiah, Is 2:6–22, and Amos, Am 5:18–20, 18m, the Day is a terrifying manifestation of the power of Yahweh. God is represented as a warrior (cf. Ex 15:3; 2 S 5:24; Ps 18:7–14), but here he fights against his own people. This poem inspired Joel, Jl 2:1–11, and the medieval author of the Dies Irae.

k. Or 'even the warrior cries out in terror'.

2 a. The threat of the Day of Yahweh does not preclude hope of conversion. Salvation is promised to the 'humble' (or the 'poor'), v. 3.

b. Rare verb, variously interpreted 'gather', 'return to yourselves', 'humble yourselves'. The similiarity with the word meaning 'straw' suggests the image of heaping straw on the threshing-floor, cf. v. 2.

c. 'you are dispersed lo' tiddahqu conj.; Hebr. ledet hoq 'birth of a decree' • 'chaff' Gk; Hebr. 'the flower'.

d. The 'humble' or 'afflicted', 'anawim in Hebr. These play a large part in the Bible. Though wisdom literature sometimes looks on poverty, resh, as the result of idleness, Pr 10:4 (but cf. Pr 14:21; 18:12), the prophets are aware that the poor are usually the oppressed, 'aniyyim; they demand justice for the weak and lowly, dallim, and for those in need, 'ebionim, Is 10:2; Am 2:6seq.; cf. Jb 34:28seq.; Si 4:1seq.; Jm 2:2seq. The humane legislation of Dt 24:10seq., based on Ex 22:20–26; 23:6, shows the same attitude of mind. With Zephaniah, 'poverty' assumes a moral and eschatological significance. 3:11seq., but cf. Ps 22:26; 34:2seq.; 37:11seq.; 69:33; 74:19; 149:4; Is 49:13; 57:14–21; 66:2, and see Mt 5:3d; Lk 1:52; 6:20; 7:22. In short, the 'anawim are those Israelites who submit to the will of God. In the LXX period, the word 'anaw (or 'ani) comes to mean becoming poor and humble for the sake of others, Zc 9:9; see Mt 11:29; 21:5, and the victim of oppression, Is 53:4.

e. The Philistine cities of the coastal league are listed with the exception of Gath (probably already in ruins). Following the precedent of Is 10:29–31 and Mi 1:10–15, Zephaniah plays on the names 'Gaza' and 'Ekron', making them omens of disaster.

Nb 22:36h Dt 2:19e Is 15–16 Jr 48:1–49:6 Ezk 25:1–11 Am 1:13–2:3

The enemies to the east: Moab and Ammon

I have heard the taunt of Moab 8 and the insults of the Ammonites, as they taunted my people
and boasted of their own domains.
For this, as I live—declares Yahweh Sabaoth, 9
God of Israel—
Gn 19:1a Moab will become like Sodom and the Ammonites like Gomorrah:[f] a realm of nettles, a heap of salt, a desolation for ever.
Is 14:2 Zc 2:13 What is left of my people will plunder them,
the survivors of my nation will take their heritage.
This will be the price of their pride 10 for having taunted and boasted over the people of Yahweh Sabaoth.
Yahweh will be fearsome to them, 11
for he will scatter all the gods of the earth, and they will bow down to him,
each from his own place—
all the islands of the nations.[g]

Is 18–20 Jr 46 Ezk 29–32

The enemy to the south: Ethiopia

You Ethiopians too[h] 12 will be run through by my sword.

The enemy to the north: Assyria[i]

He will raise his hand against the north 13 and bring Assyria down in ruins;
he will make Nineveh a waste,
as dry as a desert.
Flocks will rest inside there, 14
so will wild animals;
pelican and porcupine
will nest round her cornices at night;
the owl will hoot at the window and the raven croak on the doorstep—for the cedar has been torn down.[j]
This is what the city will be like, 15 once living happy and carefree and thinking to itself,
||Is 47:8,10 'I have no rival—not I!'
And what will it be now? A ruin, a lair for wild beasts to rest in,
and everyone who passes by Jr 18:16; 19:8;49:17 will whistle and throw up his hands.

III: AGAINST JERUSALEM

Against the rulers of Judah

3 Disaster to the rebellious, the befouled, 1
the tyrannical city!
She has not listened to the call, 2 Am 4:6seq. she has not bowed to correction, she has not trusted in Yahweh,

she has not drawn near to her God.
3 The rulers she has — Ezk 22:25–26 are roaring lions,
her judges are wolves of the wastelands which leave nothing over for the morning, 4 her prophets are braggarts, impostors,
her priests have profaned what is holy and violated the Law.

5 Yahweh the Upright is in her, — Dt 32:4
he does no wrong;
morning by morning he gives judgement, — Ps 101:8d
each dawn unfailingly (but the wrong-doer knows no shame).

The example of the nations

6 I have exterminated the nations, their corner-towers lie in ruins;
I have emptied their streets,
no one walks through them;
their cities have been destroyed and are now deserted and unpeopled.
7 I thought, 'At least you will fear me, at least you will bow to correction,' — Am 4:6seq.
and none of the punishments I brought on them will disappear from their view. [a] But no, it only made them more anxious to do whatever was corrupt.

8 So wait for me—declares Yahweh—for the day when I rise as accuser, for I am determined to gather the nations, — Jl 4:2
to assemble the kingdoms, and on you to vent my fury,
the whole heat of my anger (for the whole earth will be devoured by the fire of my jealousy [b]).

IV: PROMISES

Conversion of the nations

9 Yes, then I shall purge
the lips of the peoples, so that all may invoke the name of Yahweh — Ml 1:11 and serve him shoulder to shoulder.

f. According to Gn 19:30–38, Lot became father of Ammon and Moab after his escape from Sodom.

g. This promise of the conversion of the 'islands', which does not include Moab or Ammon, is likely to be an addition which seems to depend on Is 41:1,5; 42:4,10; 49:1; 51:5.

h. Ethiopia here denotes Egypt, where an Ethiopian dynasty was in power shortly before Zephaniah (XXV Dynasty, 715–663). The saying seems incomplete.

i. The great enemy and oppressor of Judah for nearly a century.

j. 'the owl' kos conj.; Hebr. qol 'a voice'. • 'the raven' Gk; 'ruin' Hebr. • the cedar has been torn down' conj.; 'he has torn down the cedar' Hebr.

3 a. 'their view' Gk, Syr.; 'their home' Hebr.

b. 'as accuser' Gk, Syr.; 'for plunder' (or 'for ever') Hebr. • 'on you' conj.; 'on them' Hebr. • The original text seems to have ended vv. 6–7 by announcing punishment for Judah at the hands of the nations, as in Am 3:9–11. As it now stands, the Hebr. text predicts the punishment of the nations themselves. The end of v. 8 adapts 1:18 as an introduction to vv. 9–20.

Ps 68:31
Is 18:7
From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, 10 my suppliants will bring me tribute. [c]

2:3d The humble remnant of Israel [d]

When that Day comes 11
you will never again be ashamed of all the deeds with which you once rebelled against me, for I shall rid you
of those who exult in your pride; never again will you strut
on my holy mountain.
But in you I shall leave surviving 12
a humble and lowly people, and those who are left in Israel 13 will take refuge in the name of Yahweh.
They will do no wrong,
Is 53:9
↗Rv 14:5
will tell no lies;
nor will a deceitful tongue
be found in their mouths.
But they will be able to graze and rest with no one to alarm them.

Psalms of joy in Zion [e]

Is 12:6;54:1
Zc 2:14;9:9
Shout for joy, daughter of Zion, 14
Israel, shout aloud!
Rejoice, exult with all your heart,
daughter of Jerusalem!
Is 40:2
Yahweh has repealed your sentence; 15
he has turned your enemy away.
Yahweh is king among you, Israel,
you have nothing more to fear.

When that Day comes, the message for Jerusalem will be: 16
Zion, have no fear,
do not let your hands fall limp.
Yahweh your God is there with you, 17
the warrior-Saviour.
Is 62:5
He will rejoice over you with happy song,
he will renew you [f] by his love,
he will dance with shouts of joy for you,
as on a day of festival [g] 18

Return of the exiles [h]

I have taken away your misfortune, no longer need you bear the disgrace of it. [i] I am taking action here and now 19 against your oppressors.
When that time comes I will rescue the lame,
and gather the strays,
and I will win them praise and renown
when I restore their fortunes. [j]

At that time I shall be your guide, 20
Mi 4:6–7
at the time when I gather you in,
I shall give you praise and renown among all the peoples of the earth when I restore your fortunes under your own eyes,
declares Yahweh.

c. After 'my suppliants', Hebr., adds 'my Dispersion'. This promise of the conversion of Ethiopia, cf. Is 18:7; 19:18–25; 45:14, is probably not authentic but post-exilic. The gloss turns it into a promise to the Jews in exile.

d. This pronouncement prophesies that the ideal proposed in 2:3 will become a reality, and is one of the most perfect descriptions of 'the spirit of poverty' in the OT.

e. These two psalms (vv. 14–18[a]), or at least the second, were probably added to form the conclusion of the book.

f. 'renew you' Gk, Syr.; 'he will be silent' Hebr.

g. 'as on a day of festival' Gk, Syr.; Hebr. 'afflicted from a festival'.

h. v. 20 is a variant of v. 19, the latter being based on Mi 4:6. These prophecies probably date from the exilic period.

i. 'misfortune' hawwah conj.; Hebr. hayu 'they were'. • 'no longer need you bear' following Gk, Syr., Targ.; 'a burden on her' Hebr.

j. 'when I restore their fortunes' beshub 'et shebutehem corr.; Hebr. boshetam 'their shame'.

HAGGAI

The summons to rebuild the Temple

1 In the second year of King Darius, on the first day of the sixth month,[a] the Zc 4:6–10 word of Yahweh was addressed through the prophet Haggai to Zerubbabel son Zc 3:1–9 of Shealtiel governor of Judah and to Joshua son of Jehozadak the high priest as follows, ·'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "This people says: The time has not yet come[b] to rebuild the Temple of Yahweh." ' ·(And the word of Yahweh was 2 S 7:2 addressed through the prophet Haggai, as follows,) ·'Is this a time for you to live in your panelled houses, when this House lies in ruins? ·So now, Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "Think carefully about your behaviour. ·You have sown much and Ho 4:10 harvested little; you eat but never have enough, drink but never have your fill, put on clothes but feel no warmth. The wage-earner gets his wages only to put them in a bag with a hole in it." ·Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "Think carefully about your behaviour.[c] ·Go up into the hills,[d] fetch timber and rebuild the House; and I shall take pleasure in it and manifest my glory there—Yahweh says. ·The abundance you expected proved to be little. When you brought the harvest in, I blasted it.
And why?—Yahweh Sabaoth declares. Because while my House lies in ruins, each Lv 26:19–20 of you is busy with his own house. ·That is why the sky has withheld the rain[e] and the earth withheld its yield. ·I have called down drought on land and hills, on grain, on new wine, on olive oil and on all the produce of the ground, on humans and animals and all your labours." '

Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel, Joshua son of Jehozadak the high priest and the entire remnant[f] of the people, paid attention to the voice of Yahweh their God and to the words of the prophet Haggai, which Yahweh their God had sent him to deliver. And the people were filled with fear before Yahweh. ·Haggai, the messenger of Yahweh, then passed on Yahweh's message to the people, 'I am with you—Ezr 1:5 declares Yahweh.' ·And Yahweh roused the spirit of Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel governor of Judah, the spirit of Joshua son of Jehozadak the high priest and the spirit of the entire remnant of the people; they came and set to work in the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth, their God. ·This was on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month.

The future glory of the Temple

In the second year of King Darius,

2 on the twenty-first day of the seventh month,[a] the word of Yahweh was addressed through the prophet Haggai, as follows, ·'You are to speak to Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel governor of Judah, to Joshua son of Jehozadak the Ezr 3:10–13 high priest and to the remnant of the people. Say this, ·"Is there anyone left among you who saw this Temple in its former glory? And how does it look to you now?
Does it not seem as though there is nothing there? ·But take courage now, Zerubbabel!—Yahweh declares. Courage, Joshua son of Jehozadak high priest!
Courage, all you people of the country!—Yahweh declares. To work! I am with you—Yahweh Sabaoth declares—·[b] and my spirit is present among you. Do not be ↗Heb 12:26 afraid! ·For Yahweh Sabaoth says this: A little while now, and I shall shake the heavens and the earth, the sea and the dry land.[c] ·I shall shake all the nations, and the treasures of all the nations will flow in,[d] and I shall fill this Temple with glory, Is 60:7–11 8 says Yahweh Sabaoth. ·Mine is the silver, mine the gold!—Yahweh Sabaoth 9 declares. ·The glory of this new Temple will surpass that of the old, says Yahweh 1 K 8:11 Sabaoth, and in this place I shall give peace—Yahweh Sabaoth declares." '[e]

Haggai consults the priests

10 On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius,[f] the 11 word of Yahweh was addressed to the prophet Haggai as follows, ·'Yahweh
12 Sabaoth says this, "Ask the priests to give a ruling on this: ·If someone is carrying consecrated meat in the fold of his gown and allows the fold to touch bread, broth, wine, oil or food of any kind, will that become holy?" ' The priests replied, 'No.'
13 Haggai then said, 'If anyone rendered unclean by contact with a corpse touches any of these things, will that become unclean?' The priests replied, 'It will become 14 unclean.'[g] ·Haggai then spoke out. 'It is the same with this people,' he said, 'the Lv 22:4–7 same with this nation, in my view—Yahweh declares—the same with everything they turn their hands to;[h] and whatever they offer here is unclean.[i]

A promise of agricultural prosperity[j]

15 'So now think carefully, today and henceforth: before one stone had been laid on 16 another in the sanctuary of Yahweh, ·what state were you in? You would come to a twenty-measure heap and find only ten; you would come to a vat to draw fifty Ho 4:3a
17 measures and find only twenty.[k] ·Everything you turned your hands to, I struck[l] with wind-blast, mildew and hail, and still you would not return to me—Yahweh 18 declares. ·So think carefully, today and henceforth (from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, from the day the foundation of the sanctuary of Yahweh was laid, 19 think carefully)[m] ·if seed-corn is still short in the barn, and if vine and fig tree, pomegranate and olive tree still bear no fruit.[n]

'From today onwards I intend to bless you.'

The promise to Zerubbabel

20 On the twenty-fourth day of the month the word of Yahweh was addressed a 21 second time to Haggai, as follows, ·'Speak to Zerubbabel governor of Judah. Say 22 this, "I am going to shake the heavens and the earth. ·I shall overturn the thrones of kingdoms and destroy the power of the kings[o] of the nations. I shall overthrow the chariots and their crews; horses and their riders will fall, every one to the sword

1 a. August 520.
b. 'has not yet come' Gk; Hebr. corrupt.
c. This v. is perhaps misplaced. vv. 1–11 possibly contain two distinct units, both authentic; vv. 1–6,8 and vv. 7,9–11.
d. Presumably the hill country of Judah.
e. 'the rain' Targ.; 'the dew' Hebr., which adds 'on you'.
f. In Hg and Zc 'the remnant of the people' means the faithful grouped round Jerusalem. See Is 4:3c.

2 a. October 520, the last day of the feast of Shelters.
b. Hebr. here inserts a gloss, absent from Gk: 'This is the covenant (reading berit instead of dabar 'word') which I made with you when you came out of Egypt.'
c. For Haggai, God is the sole master of history. While the prophet is foretelling the disaster, see Am 5:18m; 8:9h, which is to introduce the new era, the world is at peace under the rule of Darius. The imminent worldwide catastrophe and the rebuilding of the Temple will herald the messianic age.
d. 'treasures', lit. 'what is precious', 'what is desired' (sing. in collective sense).
e. The Temple, see 2 S 7:14e, has become a focal point of the messianic hope, as for Ezekiel. And in fact it was in this second Temple, restored by Herod, that Christ taught. • Gk adds 'and peace of soul, to save all those who laid the foundations for the rebuilding of this Temple'.
f. December 520.
g. 'Uncleanness' is more contagious than 'holiness'—a ritualistic view.
h. i.e. the harvests, cf. Dt 24:19; 28:12; 30:9, where the same phrase about the work of human hands is used.
i. Worship continued on the site of the Temple, where the altar of burnt offerings had been rebuilt since 538. Haggai points the lesson from the ruling of v. 13: the nation is unclean, and its sacrificial offerings are too. This accusation, contrasting with 2:1–9 in its severity, may possibly be directed against the Samaritans, cf. Ezr 4:1–5. • Gk adds: 'because of their quickly won gains, they will suffer for their labours, and you hated those dispensing justice at the city gate.'
j. This passage, completing 1:1–15, should perhaps be read after 1:15[a].
k. 'what state were you in' Gk; 'of your existence' Hebr. • 'you would come' (indefinite) Gk; 'he would come' Hebr. • After 'vat' Hebr. adds 'press', a gloss on 'vat', absent from Gk.
l. 'I struck' conj.; 'I struck you' Hebr., cf. Am 4:6.
m. A partly inaccurate gloss.
n. 'is short' conj.; Hebr. omits. • 'and if still' Gk; 'and until' Hebr. • 'fruit' Gk; Hebr. omits.

you, Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel my servant—Yahweh declares—and make you like a signet ring.[q] For I have chosen you—Yahweh Sabaoth declares." '

p. The expression implies election to a notable function in the history of salvation. Thus Yahweh 'takes' Abraham, Jos 24:3, the Levites, Nb 3:12, David, 2 S 7:8. Zerubbabel, a successor of David, is now associated with traditional royal messianism, see 2 S 7:1a; Is 7:14f, and the messianic expectation takes shape about his person, see Zc 6:12.

q. The signet ring, used for the sealing of documents or letters, 1 K 21:8, was kept carefully hung from the neck, Gn 38:18, or worn on the finger, Jr 22:24, where King Jehoiachin is compared to a discarded signet ring.

ZECHARIAH

FIRST PART

A summons to conversion

1 In the second year of Darius, in the eighth month,[a] the word of Yahweh was addressed to the prophet Zechariah (son of Berechiah),[b] son of Iddo, as
2, 3 follows, •"Yahweh was deeply angry with your ancestors. •So say this to them, "Yahweh Sabaoth says this: Return to me—Yahweh Sabaoth declares—and I will ‖Ml 3:7
4 return to you, says Yahweh Sabaoth. •Do not be like your ancestors when the prophets in the past cried to them: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: Turn back from your Is 55:7
evil ways and evil deeds—they would not listen or pay attention to me—Yahweh Lk 15:20 5 declares. •Where are your ancestors now? And the prophets, do they live for ever?
6 But did not my words and statutes, with which I had charged my servants the 7:7–14 prophets, overtake your ancestors just the same?" '[c]

So they repented and said, 'Yahweh Sabaoth has treated us as he resolved to do, and as our ways and deeds deserved.'

First vision: the horsemen

Rv 6:1–9

7 On the twenty-fourth day of the eleventh month (the month of Shebat), in the second year of Darius,[d] the word of Yahweh was addressed to the prophet Zechar-
8 iah (son of Berechiah), son of Iddo, as follows, •"I had a vision during the night. There was a man riding a red horse standing among the deep-rooted myrtles; 9 behind him were other horses—red, chestnut and white.[e] •I said, "What are these, my lord?" And the angel who was talking to me said, "I will show you what they 10 are." •The man standing among the myrtles then replied, "Those are they whom 11 Yahweh has sent to patrol the world." •They reported to the angel of Yahweh[f] as ↗Rv 5:6
he stood among the myrtles, "We have been patrolling the world, and indeed the 12 whole world is still and at peace."[g] •The angel of Yahweh then spoke and said, "Yahweh Sabaoth, how long will you wait before taking pity on Jerusalem and the Rv 6:10 cities of Judah, on which you have inflicted your anger for the past seventy years?"
13 Yahweh then replied with kind and comforting words to the angel who was talking 14 to me. •The angel who was talking to me then said to me, "Make this proclamation: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: I am burning with jealousy for Jerusalem and Zion 8:2
15 but am deeply angry with the nations now at ease; before, I was only mildly angry, Is 47:6 16 but they contributed to the disaster.[h] •So now Yahweh says this: In compassion I have returned to Jerusalem; my Temple will be rebuilt there—Yahweh Sabaoth Is 54:6–10

1 a. October–November 520, two months after the first prophecy of Haggai.

b. A gloss suggested by Is 8:2. According to Ezr 5:1; 6:14; Ne 12:16, Zechariah was the son of Iddo.

c. Human beings die but the word of God remains (here personified as in Ps 147:15; Ws 18:14–15; Is 55:11), cf. Is 40:7–8.

d. The middle of February 519.

e. The vision uses certain mythological elements. The myrtle trees appear to have their roots in the depths of the abyss. The standing man is the angel of Yahweh. The horses, a symbol representing the angels who have the world under their surveillance, probably from four groups, see 6:2seq. (perhaps 'black' should be added to the list, following Gk), associated with the four points of the compass or the four winds; according to v. 11, they have riders.

f. In the ancient texts, see Gn 16:7c, the 'angel of Yahweh' was Yahweh himself in visible form; subsequently this 'angel' became, as here, a separate individual to whom humans and angels must have recourse for access to God.

g. In February 519, under the rule of Darius, there was worldwide peace. Israel found this peace disquieting since great disturbances, see Hg 2:6c, were expected to announce the new age.

h. The nations concerned were principally Israel's neighbours.

2:5-9 declares—and the measuring line will be stretched over Jerusalem. ·Make this 17 proclamation too: Yahweh Sabaoth says this: My cities are once more to be very prosperous. Yahweh will comfort Zion once again, and again make Jerusalem 2:15;13:9 his choice." '

Second vision: the horns and the smiths

2 Then, raising my eyes, I had a vision. It was this: There were four horns.[a] ·I 1, 2 said to the angel who was talking to me, 'What are these?' He said to me, Dt 33:17 'These are the horns which scattered Judah (Israel) and Jerusalem.'[b] ·Yahweh 3 Dn 7:8 then showed me four smiths.[c] ·And I said, 'What are these coming to do?' He said 4 to me, '(Those horns scattered Judah so completely that no one dared to raise his Jr 48:25 head; but) these have come to terrify them, to throw down the horns of the nations who raised their horns over the land of Judah to scatter it.'

Third vision: the measurer

Jr 31:38–39 Then, raising my eyes, I had a vision. There was a man with a measuring line in his 5 2:1
Ezk 41:13
Rv 11:1;21:15 hand. ·I asked him, 'Where are you going?' He said, 'To measure Jerusalem, to 6 calculate her width and length.'[d] ·And then, while the angel who was talking to me 7 3 walked away, another angel came out to meet him. ·He said to him, 'Run, and tell 8 4

Fourth vision: the investiture of Joshua

3 He[a] then showed me the high priest Joshua, standing before the angel 1
Jb 1:6g of Yahweh, with Satan standing on his right to accuse him.[b] ·The angel of 2

Yahweh[c] said to Satan, 'May Yahweh rebuke you, Satan! May Yahweh rebuke you, since he has made Jerusalem his choice. Is not this man a brand snatched from 3 the fire?'[d] ·Now Joshua was dressed in dirty clothes[e] as he stood before the angel.
4a The latter then spoke as follows to those who were standing before him, 'Take off 4c, 5 his dirty clothes ·and dress him[f] in splendid robes ·and put a clean turban on his head.' So they put a clean turban on his head and dressed him in clean clothes,[g]
4b while the angel of Yahweh stood by ·and said, 'You see, I have taken your guilt
7 away.' ·The angel of Yahweh then made this declaration to Joshua, ·'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "If you walk in my ways and keep my ordinances, you shall govern my house, you shall watch over my courts, and I will give you free access 9a among those in attendance here.[h] ·For this is the stone which I have put before Joshua, a stone on which are seven eyes; and I myself shall cut the inscription on it—Yahweh Sabaoth declares."[i]

Fifth vision: the lamp-stand and the olive trees

1 4 The angel who was talking to me came back and roused me as though rousing 2 someone who was asleep. ·And he asked me, 'What do you see?' I replied,[a] 'As I look, there is a lamp-stand entirely of gold with a bowl at the top of it; it holds 3 seven lamps, with seven openings for the lamps on it. ·By it are two olive trees, one 4 to the right[b] and the other to the left.' ·I then said to the angel who was talking to 5 me, 'What are those things, my lord?' ·The angel who was talking to me replied, 6a 'Do you not know what they are?' I said, 'No, my lord.' ·He then gave me this 10b answer,[c] ·'These seven are the eyes of Yahweh,[d] which range over the whole 11 world.' ·Then I went on to ask him, 'What is the meaning of these two olive trees, 12 to right and left of the lamp-stand?' ·(And I went on to ask him further, 'What is the meaning of the two olive branches discharging oil[e] through the two golden 13 openings?') ·He replied, 'Do you not know what they are?' I said, 'No, my lord.'

2 a. The horns, symbolic of strength, Ps 75:4c, are the nations hostile to Judah. The number four symbolises their universality.
b. 'Israel' seems to be an addition, cf. v. 4.
c. Symbolising the angelic powers.
d. As in Ezk 41:13, the measurements are taken with a view to rebuilding. The measurer is an angel.
e. The angel with the measuring line.
f. The messianic Jerusalem will be defended by Yahweh himself, having returned to his Temple, see Ezk 43:1seq.
g. Zion here means the exiles, as in Is 51:16.
h. Hebr. reads 'his eye', a scribal correction to eliminate the anthropomorphism of the original text, here restored.
i. 'his' Gk; 'my' Hebr. 'they will' Gk; 'I shall' Hebr. • Here the covenant is extended to all the nations: Jerusalem is to be the religious centre of the whole world, see Is 45:14h.
j. The first occurrence of this expression in biblical literature, cf. 2 M 1:7.

3 a. Yahweh.
b. At the gate of heaven the angel of Yahweh presides over a court of justice. At the right hand of the High Priest Joshua stands a malevolent angel, Satan (lit. 'the satan', i.e. 'the accuser'), who is the enemy of humanity, see Jb 1:6g.
c. 'The angel of Yahweh' Syr.; 'Yahweh' Hebr.
d. Joshua represents the Jewish people.
e. A sign of mourning, either for one dead or for a national calamity; in the latter case it implies admission of guilt, see v. 4[b].
f. 'dress him' Gk; 'I shall dress you' Hebr. The text is confused; we restore the logical order.
g. With Gk, omitting 'And I said to you' from beginning of v. • 'clean clothes' Syr.; 'clothes' Hebr. • The period of national mourning, lasting from 587 BC is now over.
h. Here Joshua is no longer addressed as the representative of the people: the promise is made to Joshua personally and to a future priesthood which he portends, see 3:8, and which will share in the mediating function of the angels, cf. Ml 2:7. • v. 8 is repositioned between v. 9[a] and 9[b].
i. This stone presumably stands for the Temple. The seven eyes are symbolic of the watchful presence of Yahweh, 4:10. The inscription, perhaps 'Sacred to Yahweh', cf. 14:21–22, has not yet been cut: the building is not finished.
j. This messianic title, see Jr 23:5a, does not yet seem to be applied to Zerubbabel, as it is in Zc 6:12. • For 'Branch', Gk reads 'rising Sun', cf. Lk 1:78.

4 a. 'I replied' Gk and qere; 'he replied' ketib.
b. Hebr. adds 'of the bowl'.
c. Vv. 6[b]–10[a] are read after v. 14.
d. Symbol of the omniscience and watchfulness of God.
e. 'oil' conj.; 'gold' Hebr.

Three sayings about Zerubbabel

Ho 1:7+ This is the word of Yahweh with regard to Zerubbabel, 'Not by might and not by power, but by my spirit'—says Yahweh Sabaoth. 6b

'What are you, great mountain?[g] Beside Zerubbabel you shall become a plain! He will bring out the keystone while it is cheered with Hurrah! Hurrah!' 7

The word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this Temple; his hands will finish it. (Then you will know that Yahweh Sabaoth has sent me to you.) •A day of little things, no doubt, but who would dare despise it?[h] How they will rejoice when they see the chosen stone[i] in the hands of Zerubbabel!' 8, 9 10a

Sixth vision: the flying scroll

5 Again raising my eyes, I had a vision. There was a flying scroll. •The angel who was talking to me[a] said, 'What do you see?' I replied, 'I see a flying scroll; it is twenty cubits long and ten cubits wide.'[b] •He then said to me, 'This is God's curse sweeping across the face of the whole country; for, according to what it says on one side, every thief will be banished and, according to what it says on the other, everyone who commits perjury in my name will be banished from it.[c] •I am going to release it[d]—Yahweh Sabaoth declares—for it to enter the house of the thief and of anyone who commits perjury in my name, for it to settle deep within his house and consume it, timber, stone and all.' 1, 2 3 4

Seventh vision: the woman in the bushel measure

The angel who was talking to me appeared and said to me, 'Raise your eyes, and see what this is, going along.' •I said, 'What is it?' He said, 'It is a bushel[e] measure going along.' He went on, 'This is their guilt[f] throughout the country.' •At this, a disc of lead was raised, and I saw a woman sitting inside the barrel. •He said, 'This is Wickedness.' And he rammed her back into the barrel and jammed its mouth shut with the mass of lead. •I raised my eyes, and there were two women appearing. The wind caught their wings—they had wings like a stork's; they raised the barrel midway between earth and heaven. •I then said to the angel who was talking to me, 'Where are they taking the barrel?' •He replied, 'To build a temple for it in the land of Shinar and make a pedestal on which to put it.'[g] 5 6 7 8 9 10 11

↗Rv 6:2–8 Eighth vision: the chariots

6 Again I raised my eyes, and this is what I saw: four chariots coming out between two mountains, and the mountains were mountains of bronze.[a] •The first chariot had red horses, the second chariot had black horses, •the third chariot had white horses and the fourth chariot had vigorous, piebald horses. •I asked the angel who was talking to me, 'What are these, my lord?' •The angel replied, 'They are the four winds of heaven now leaving, after attending the Lord of the whole world. •The black horses are leaving for the land of the north; the white are following them, and the piebald are leaving for the land of the south.'[b] •They came out vigorously, eager to patrol the world. He said to them, 'Go and patrol the world.' And they patrolled the world. •He called to me and said, 'Look, the ones going to the land of the north brought my spirit[c] to rest on the land of the north.'[d] 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8

The votive crown

Then the word of Yahweh was addressed to me as follows, •'Collect silver and gold from the exiles, from Heldai, Tobijah and Jedaiah, then (you yourself go the same day) go to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah, who has arrived from Babylon.[e] Then, taking the silver and gold, make a crown[f] and place it on the head of the high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak. •And say this to him, "Yahweh Sabaoth says 9, 10 11 12

Yahweh's sanctuary; he will wear the royal insignia and sit on his throne and

14 And the crown will serve Heldai, Tobijah, Jedaiah and the son of Zephaniah as a 15 memorial of favour in Yahweh's sanctuary. [i] •And those now far away will come and work on the building of Yahweh's sanctuary."

'Then you will know that Yahweh Sabaoth has sent me to you. It will happen if you diligently obey the voice of Yahweh your God.' Dt 28:1

A question about fasting

1 7 In the fourth year of King Darius, the word of Yahweh was addressed to Zechariah on the fourth day of the ninth month, the month of Chislev. [a] 2, 3 Bethel sent Sharezer with a deputation [b] to entreat Yahweh's favour •and to ask the priests in the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth and the prophets, 'Ought I to go on mourning and fasting in the fifth month as I have been doing for so many years past?' [c]

A survey of the nation's past [d]

4, 5 Then the word of Yahweh Sabaoth was addressed to me as follows, •'Say to all the people of the country and to the priests, "While you have been fasting and mourning in the fifth and seventh months for the past seventy years, have you 6 really been fasting for my sake? •And when you were eating and drinking, were Am 5:21n 7 you not eating and drinking for your own sake? [e] •Do you not know the words which Yahweh proclaimed through the prophets in the past, when Jerusalem was inhabited and secure, as were her surrounding towns, and when the Negeb and the 8 lowlands were inhabited?" ' (•The word of Yahweh was addressed to Zechariah as 9 follows, •'Yahweh Sabaoth says this.) He said, "Apply the law fairly, and show Is 1:17

f. Human beings are frequently compared to trees, Jb 29:19; Ps 1:3; Jr 11:19; Ezk 31. The two anointed ones (lit. 'sons of the oil') are Joshua and Zerubbabel, representing the spiritual and temporal power respectively. Joshua is anointed to the priesthood, Lv 4:3,5,16, and Zerubbabel, it is hoped, will be anointed king. This will fulfil Jr 33:14–18: the spiritual and the temporal power are to be closely associated in the messianic age.

g. Possibly the mountain of debris from which the keystone of the old Temple was to be recovered, see vv. 9–10.

h. The day Zerubbabel re-lays the foundations, Hg 2:3, Zerubbabel will also complete the building by placing the stone of Zc 4:7.

i. 'chosen', hammabedil lit. 'separated', conj.; Hebr. habbedil 'the lead'. Some interpret this as meaning the plummet.

5 a. 'The angel who was talking to me' conj., cf. 4:1,5; 5:5; Hebr. omits.

b. The scroll is of immense size: its measurements are those of the portico of Solomon's Temple, 1 K 6:3.

c. 'perjures . . . name' expanded in line with v. 4; 'swears' Hebr. The curse is conceived as having a force of its own. It overtakes all sinners, of whom the Holy Land will be free in the messianic age.

d. 'going to release' Gk; 'have released' Hebr.

e. lit. 'an ephah'. But here it is much larger than the common ephah. See Table of measures and money.

f. 'guilt' Gk; 'eyes' Hebr.

g. Following Gk; Hebr. 'once that is ready, to put it on a pedestal there'. • In the messianic age the Holy Land will be rid of Wickedness (impiety personified). Wickedness now becomes a false goddess for whom a temple is built in Shinar (Babylon), which here symbolises the centre of the gentile world.

6 a. The image is borrowed from Babylonian mythology; these mountains flanked the approach to the abode of the gods.

b. It is tempting to read 'are leaving for the land of the west' instead of Hebr. 'following them', and to add 'and the red horses are leaving for the land of the east', thus completing the picture of 'the four winds of heaven', but no version bears this out.

c. Yahweh himself is speaking.

d. Where the exiles are. Impelled by the spirit of Yahweh, these will return and rebuild the Temple, see v. 15, which some translators prefer to reposition here.

e. 'has arrived' Gk; 'have arrived' Hebr. • These people are otherwise unknown.

f. 'a crown' conj.; 'crowns' Hebr., but what follows is in the sing., as in v. 14. • It is evident from vv. 12–13 that the original text read 'Zerubbabel', and 'the high priest Joshua son of Jehozadak' was substituted at a later period when the high priest had become head of the community.

g. Playing on the messianic title, 'Branch', Jr 23:5a, and promising successors to Zerubbabel who is now associated with the dynastic messianism of 2 S 7, but see Hg 2:23p. The prophet foresees the future of the Royal House and presumably of the Temple.

h. 'on his right' Gk; 'on his throne' Hebr.

i. 'crown' Gk; 'crowns' Hebr. • 'Heldai' Syr., see v. 10; 'Helem' Hebr. 'son of . . . favour' conj.; Hebr. ambiguous.

7 a. November 518.

b. After 'Sharezer' 'Regem-Melech' (which could indicate the official's title) is omitted.

c. The destruction of Jerusalem and of the Temple in June–July 587 was commemorated by a fast in the month of July. Now that the rebuilding has begun fasting seems out of place, hence the question put to the authorities in Jerusalem. The answer is apparently not given until 8:18–19.

d. This prophecy has been arbitrarily attached to the incident of the deputation because of the mention of fasting, v. 5. The September fast commemorated the murder of Gedaliah, 2 K 25:25; Jr 41:1seq.

e. Whether fasting or feasting they were motivated by self-interest.

Ex 22:20–21+ Mi 2:1 Ex 32:9+ Is 48:4 Ezk 11:19 Dt 4:27

Jr 32:27

Yahweh Sabaoth says this:
Look, I shall rescue my people from the countries of the east and from the countries of the west.
I shall bring them back to live in the heart of Jerusalem, and they will be my people and I shall be their God, faithful and just. [b]

13:9 Jr 31:31*f*

'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "Take heart, you who today hear these promises uttered by the prophets since the day [c] when the foundations of the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth were laid, that the sanctuary would indeed be rebuilt. ·For up to now, men were not paid their wages and nothing was paid for the animals either; and it has not been safe for anyone to come and go, because of the enemy, since I had set [d] each one against everyone else. ·But from now on, I shall not treat the remnant of this people as I have treated them in time past—declares Yahweh Sabaoth. ·Now they will sow in peace; the vine will give its fruit, the soil will give its produce and heaven will give its dew. I shall bestow all these on the remnant of

House of Israel, so now I shall save you, and you will be a blessing. Do not be Gn 12:3b Ps 72:17 afraid. Take heart!"
14 'For Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "Just as I resolved to ill-treat you when your 15 ancestors provoked me to anger and did not relent—says Yahweh Sabaoth—•so now I have changed my mind and intend to treat Jerusalem and the House of Judah well. Do not be afraid!
16 "These are the things that you must do. Speak the truth to one another; at your Ep 4:25 17 gates, administer fair judgement conducive to peace; •do not secretly plot evil Mt 5:9 against one another; do not love perjury; since I hate all this—Yahweh declares." '

The answer to the question on fasting 7:1–3

18 The word of Yahweh Sabaoth was addressed to me as follows:
19 'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "The fast of the fourth month, the fast of the fifth, the fast of the seventh and the fast of the tenth are to become glad, joyful, happy Is 35:10 Jr 31:13 festivals for the House of Judah. [e] So love truth and peace!" ' Mt 9:14–15

A prospect of salvation

20 'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "In the future, peoples and citizens of many cities will 1 K 8:43 21 come; •and citizens of one city will go to the next and say: We must certainly go to entreat Yahweh's favour and seek out Yahweh Sabaoth; I am going myself.
22 Yes, many peoples and great nations will seek out Yahweh Sabaoth in Jerusalem and entreat Yahweh's favour." 23 'Yahweh Sabaoth says this, "In those days, ten men from nations of every Tb 13:11+ language will take a Jew by the sleeve and say: We want to go with you, since we have learnt that God is with you." '

SECOND PART

1 9 A proclamation.

The new promised land [a]

The word of Yahweh is against Hadrach, it has come to rest on Damascus, for the source of Aram [b] belongs to Yahweh no less than all the tribes of Israel; 2 on Hamath too, which borders on it, and on (Tyre and) Sidon, despite her acumen.
3 Tyre has built herself a fortress, has heaped up silver like dust and gold like the dirt of the streets.
4 And now the Lord is going to dispossess her;
at sea he will break her power,
and she herself will go up in flames.
5 Seeing this, Ashkelon will be terrified,

8 a. This ch. is a collection of short independent prophecies. With the exception of vv. 16–17, an instruction, they all deal with the messianic age, described as an age of simple, peaceful happiness under the blessing of Yahweh, present in Zion. The perspective becomes universal in vv. 20seq.

b. Not, as in 2:10seq., the exiles from Babylon only, but the Jews scattered throughout the world. Their return will be followed by a renewal of the covenant, see Jr 31:31*ll*.

c. 'since the day' Gk; 'on the day' Hebr.

d. 'had set' conj.; 'shall set' Hebr.

e. To the fasts of the 5th and 7th months, see 7:3,5, there are here added those of the 4th and 10th which commemorated the breaching of the walls of Jerusalem, 2 K 25:1,4, and the beginning of the siege.

9 a. The Promised Land will embrace not only Israelite territory, see Jg 20:1a, but Aramaean, Phoenician and Philistine cities. The prophecy alludes to a conquering advance, interpreted as an act of Yahweh, heralding the messianic age. Alexander's activities after the Battle of Issus (333 BC) seem to have inspired this passage.

b. 'source of Aram' 'en 'aram conj.; Hebr. 'en 'adam 'the eye of man'. It could perhaps also mean 'Yahweh has his eye on men', cf. v. 8 and 12:4.

Gaza too, and writhe with grief, Ekron too, at the ruin of her prospects;
the king will vanish from Gaza and Ashkelon be unpeopled, while a half-breed will live in Ashdod! [c] 6
Yes, I shall destroy the pride of the Philistine;
I shall snatch his blood from his mouth, [d] 7 his abominations from between his teeth.
Is 4:3c But his remnant too will belong to our God, becoming like a clan in Judah, and Ekron will become like a Jebusite. [e] I shall stand guard before my home 8 to defend it [f] against all comers, and no oppressor will overrun them ever again,
for now I am on the alert.

The Royal Saviour

Rejoice heart and soul, daughter of Zion! 9
Shout for joy, daughter of Jerusalem!

↗Mt 21:5 humble and riding on a donkey,
Mt 11:29 on a colt, the foal of a donkey. [h] Mi 5:9 He will banish chariots from Ephraim [i] 10 and horses from Jerusalem;
Is 2:4; 11:6b the bow of war will be banished.'
Ho 2:20
Ep 2:17 He will proclaim peace to the nations, •Ps 85:13 his empire will stretch from sea to sea,

The restoration of Israel

Ex 24:4–8 As for you, because of the blood of your covenant [k] 11
Mt 26:28
Heb 13:20 I have released your prisoners from the pit in which there is no water. [l] Come back to the fortress, 12 you prisoners waiting in hope.
This very day, I vow,
I shall make it up to you twice over.
For I have strung Judah as a bow for myself, 13 laid Ephraim on the string as an arrow, have roused your sons, Zion, against your sons, Javan, [m]
and have made you like a warrior's sword.
Dt 33:2 Then Yahweh will appear above them 14
Ps 18:14
Hab 3:4 and his arrow will flash out like lightning.
(The Lord) Yahweh will sound the trumpet and advance in the storm-winds of the south.
Yahweh Sabaoth will protect them! 15
They will devour, will trample on the sling-stones, they will drink blood like wine, [n]
Ex 27:2b awash like bowls, like the corners of the altar.
Yahweh their God will give them victory 16
when that day comes,
Ezk 34:1a like the sheep who are his people;
yes, the stones of a diadem will sparkle over his country. [o]

17 How fine, how splendid that will be, with wheat to make the young men flourish, Jr 31:12–13 and new wine the maidens!

Faithfulness to Yahweh

1 10 Ask Yahweh for rain in autumn Dt 11:14 and at the time of the spring rains.
Yahweh is the one to make the storm-clouds. Ps 135:7
He will give them showers of rain;
to each, grass in his field.
2 Since the domestic idols have talked nonsense, 1 S 15:22d and the diviners have seen false signs, [a] and dreams have purveyed delusions, affording empty comfort, that is why they have strayed like sheep, Ezk 34:5 Mt 9:36
in distress for want of a shepherd.

Israel's deliverance and return [b]

3 My anger has been roused by the shepherds, Ezk 34:2 and I shall vent it on the he-goats. [c]

When Yahweh Sabaoth comes to visit his flock, the House of Judah,
he will make it his royal war-horse.
4 From it will emerge Cornerstone and Tent-peg, from it, Bow-ready-for-Battle, [d]
from it, every type of leader.
5 Together they will be like warriors trampling the dirt of the streets in battle;
when they fight, because Yahweh is with them,
they will put mounted men to rout.

6 Then I shall make the House of Judah mighty 10:12;12:5 and the House of Joseph victorious.
I shall restore them, because I have taken pity on them, and they will be as though I had never cast them off, for I am Yahweh their God and shall answer their prayer. Is 41:17

c. A mixed population resulting from forced colonisation.

d. An allusion to the non-Jewish usage of eating meat with blood in it, see Lv 1:5, and of eating forbidden meat such as pork, cf. Is 65:4; 66:17.

e. i.e. incorporated into Israel like the Jebusites of antiquity.

f. 'home', lit. 'house', but here meaning the whole country, cf. 14:20; Jr 12:7seq.; Ho 8:1; 9:15. • 'I shall stand guard' lit. 'like a post' matztzebah conj.; Hebr. mitztzabah 'before an army'.

g. 'vindicated', lit. 'upright' or 'just', not in the sense that he dispenses justice, see Is 11:3–5, but that he is the recipient of God's saving justice, that is, his vindication and powerful protection, see Is 45:21–25.

h. The Messiah is to be 'humble' ('ani), a characteristic attributed in Zp 3:12 to the future people of God, see Zp 2:3d. Renouncing the panoply of the historic kings, Jr 17:25; 22:4, the messianic king will ride the traditional mount of princes, Gn 49:11; Jg 5:10; 10:4; 12:14. Compare also 1 K 1:38 with 1 K 1:5. Jesus fulfilled this prophecy when he entered Jerusalem riding on a donkey.

i. 'he will' Gk; 'I shall' Hebr. The northern tribes will be reunited to Judah in the messianic kingdom, see Jr 3:18h.

j. i.e. from the Mediterranean to the Gulf of Aqaba and from the Euphrates indefinitely eastwards, but see Ps 72:8g.

k. Allusion either to the ceremony at Sinai, Ex 24:5seq., or to the sacrifices offered in the temple.

l. A dry storage-well serves as a gaol; here it is a symbol of Babylon.

m. The Greeks. The Persian Empire was then crumbling under the blows of Alexander.

n. 'blood' dam Gk. MSS; Hebr. hamu 'they will make a noise'. It can also be understood, 'they will drink and will make a noise as though (under the influence) of drink,' which might suggest the sound of a flock, cf. Ezk 34:36–38; Mi 2:12.

o. Text obscure; trans. conj.

10 a. The domestic idols and diviners also occur in juxtaposition in 1 S 15:23. Here the idols are instruments of divination, cf. Ezk 21:26. For the practice of divination after the Exile, see Ml 3:5, compare Lv 19:31; 20:6.

b. This difficult passage joins together in a strange fashion passages where Yahweh is speaking (3[a],6,8–11) and others where he is spoken of in the third person (3[b]–5,7,12,11:1–3).

c. 'vent it on' or 'visit' (paqad), as in the next line, where the visit will be a favourable one. Foreign monarchs are ruling Yahweh's people. The term 'shepherd' is applied to them in Jr 25:34seq.; Na 3:18 (see also Is 44:28); similarly 'he-goat' in Dn 8:5seq. The first visit is punitive, the second favourable.

d. Symbolic epithets for the leaders who will eventually rise from the people.

Ephraim will be like a warrior. 7
Ps 104:15 Their hearts will be cheered as though by wine.
Their children will see this and rejoice, their hearts will exult in Yahweh.

I shall whistle to them and gather them in, 8
for I have redeemed them;
they will be as numerous as they used to be.
I shall scatter them among the peoples 9
but in distant countries they will remember me, Dt 30:1–3 they will instruct their children and then return. [e]
Ba 2:30–32
Lk 15:17 I shall bring them home from Egypt 10 and gather them back from Assyria;
I shall lead them into Gilead and the Lebanon, and even that will not be large enough for them. [f]

They will cross the sea of Egypt [g] 11 (and the waves of the sea will be struck);
all the depths of the River will be dried up.
The arrogance of Assyria will be cast down and the sceptre of Egypt taken away.
10:6;12:5 I shall make them mighty in Yahweh, 12 and they will march in my name
—Yahweh declares.

A taunt against enemies

11 Open your gateways, Lebanon, 1 and the fire shall burn down your cedar trees! [a] Wail, juniper, 2
for the cedar tree has fallen,
the majestic ones have been ravaged!
Wail, oaks of Bashan,
for the impenetrable forest has been felled!
The sound of the wailing of shepherds! 3
Their majesty has been ravaged.
The sound of the roaring of young lions!
The pride of the Jordan has been ravaged.

Ezk 34:1a The two shepherds [b]

Jr 12:3 Yahweh my God says this, 'Pasture the sheep for slaughter, •whose buyers kill 4, 5 them and go unpunished, whose sellers say of them, "Blessed be Yahweh; now I am rich!" and whose own shepherds show them no pity. [c] •For I shall show no 6 further pity for the inhabitants of the country—Yahweh declares! Instead, I shall put everyone into the clutches of a neighbour, into the clutches of the king. They will crush the country and I shall not rescue anyone from their clutches.' [d]

Then I pastured for slaughter the sheep belonging to the sheep-dealers. [e] I took 7 two staves: the one I called 'Goodwill', the other 'Couplers'; and I pastured the sheep myself, •getting rid of three shepherds in one month. [f] But I lost patience 8 with them, and they equally detested me. •I then said, 'I am not going to pasture 9 you any more; the one doomed to die can die; the one doomed to perish can perish; and the rest can devour one another.' •I then took my staff, 'Goodwill', and broke 10 it in half, to break my covenant, which I had made with all the peoples. •When it 11 was broken, that day the sheep-dealers, who were watching me, realised that this had been a word of Yahweh. •I then said to them, 'If you see fit, give me my wages; 12 Mt 27:3–10 if not, never mind.' So they weighed out my wages: thirty shekels of silver. [g] Yahweh said to me, 'Throw it to the smelter, this princely sum at which they have 13 valued me!' Taking the thirty shekels of silver, I threw them into the Temple of 14 Yahweh, for the smelter. •I then broke my second staff, 'Couplers,' in half, to rupture the brotherly relationship between Judah and Israel. [h] 2 K 12:11;22:4

15 Next, Yahweh said to me, 'This time, take the gear of a good-for-nothing Ezk 34:2–4
16 shepherd. •For I am now going to raise a shepherd in this country, who will not bother about the lost, who will not go in search of the stray, who will not heal the injured, who will not support the swollen, [i] but who will eat the meat of the fat ones, tearing off their very hoofs. Is 42:3 Mt 12:20

17 Disaster to the shepherd Jr 23:1 ↗Jn 10:12–13 who deserts his flock!
May the sword attack his arm and his right eye!
May his arm shrivel completely and his right eye be totally blinded!'

The deliverance and restoration of Jerusalem

1 12 A proclamation.
2b The word of Yahweh about Israel (•and also about Judah [a]). Yahweh, who spread out the heaven and founded the earth and formed the human spirit within, declares: [b] Gn 2:7 Is 42:5
2a 'Look, I shall make Jerusalem a cup to set all the surrounding peoples reeling. Is 51:17h
(That will be at the time of the siege of Jerusalem.)
3 'When that day comes, I shall make Jerusalem a stone too heavy for all the peoples to lift; all those who try to lift it will hurt themselves severely, although all 4 the nations of the world will be massed against her. •When that day comes—declares Yahweh—I shall strike all the horses with panic and their riders with madness. And I shall strike all the peoples with blindness. (But I shall keep watch
5 over Judah.) [c] •Then the rulers of Judah will say to themselves, "The strength of 10:6,12
6 the inhabitants of Jerusalem lies in Yahweh Sabaoth their God." [d] •When that day comes, I shall make the rulers of Judah like a brazier burning in a pile of wood, like a torch flaming in a sheaf; and they will devour all the peoples round them to right

e. 'instruct' wehawwu conj.; Hebr. wehayu 'live (with)'; Gk suggests wehiyyu 'rear'.

f. Assyria and Egypt here represent oppressors in general. Gilead was the first territory to be conquered after the Exodus, see Is 40:3e. The Lebanon was to supplement the original territory; the envisaged expansion did not, however, occur.

g. 'they will cross' Gk; Hebr. 'he will cross'. • 'of Egypt' mitzrayim conj.; using the rest of the v.; Hebr. tzarah 'of distress'.

11 a. Symbols of the great powers, cf. Is 10:33seq.; Ezk 31, or of their kings. The junipers of v. 2 represent the smaller fry in power politics.

b. This section on the shepherds, see Ezk 34:1a, ends with a messianic prophecy, in Zc 13:7–9. Here, in vv. 4–14, recent events are reviewed allegorically and Providence is vindicated. The prophet acts the part of Yahweh, whose sovereign pastoral charge he has, as it were, taken on himself. But Israel has not understood the benefits God wanted to confer; Yahweh will therefore impose a wicked shepherd, whom the prophet is ordered to mime, vv. 15–17, prefiguring the return to former infidelities.

c. 'say', 'show pity' conj.; Hebr. reads the singular. The buyers and sellers are the Jewish ruling classes; money and intrigue give them control over the 'shepherds' of the people.

d. v. 6 is often regarded as a gloss inspired by the words 'show pity' in vv. 4–5 but alien to the context. Some, however, see it as an allusion to events recorded in 1 K 12:19 and 24, the whole passage alluding to the early days of the monarchy, and the three rejected shepherds of v. 8 representing Solomon, guilty of idolatry, Rehoboam who provoked the schism, and Jeroboam who instituted a heterodox cult. But see v. 8f.

e. 'dealers', lit. 'Canaanites', Gk; 'the poorest' Hebr., as also in v. 11.

f. As an alternative to three guilty kings, see v. 6c, the 'shepherds' may perhaps be a succession of high priests whom Yahweh, in the person of his prophet, expelled from office. Not long after the Exile, the priests became the rulers of the Jewish community. • The 'month' symbolises the time of God's favour, of which the people have failed to take advantage.

g. A ruler has a right to remuneration, see Ne 5:15. In this allegory the wages given by the ruling classes to the prophet (who represents Yahweh) are insultingly small—the price of a slave, Ex 21:32. In brief, they are laughing at Yahweh. • Mt 27:3–10 applies Zc 11:12–13 to Jesus, whom the prophet (playing the part of Yahweh) seems to prefigure.

h. This passage may be the earliest evidence we have of the Samaritan schism. According to Josephus, it was in about the year 328 that the Samaritans built a rival temple on Mount Gerizim. If so, the breaking of the staves symbolises the recrudescence of foreign oppression (v. 10) and the definitive schism at home.

i. 'the stray', meaning of Hebr. word uncertain, though possibly connected with 'bleating (for help)'. 'swollen', from the root tzabah in Nb 5:22,27. Alternative trans.: 'he will not bother about the one in good health (lit. on its feet).'

12 a. Gloss, better read here than after 'all the surrounding peoples', where it makes no sense. • The end of v. 2 is also very probably a gloss.

b. Title similar to that in Ml 1:1 and imitating Is 42:5.

c. We invert the last two phrases, as the sense seems to require, and omit 'the horses' before 'the peoples'. • The end of the v. may be a gloss.

d. 'of the inhabitants' conj.; 'of me, the inhabitants' Hebr.

=14:10 and left. And Jerusalem will be full of people as before, where she stands (in Jerusalem). •Yahweh will first save the tents of Judah, so that the glory of the 7
House of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not increase at Judah's expense. •When that day comes, Yahweh will protect the inhabitants of 8
Jerusalem; and the frailest of them will be like David when that day comes, and the House of David will be like God, like the angel of Yahweh, at their head. [e] 14:3 'When that day comes, I shall set about destroying all the nations who advance 9 against Jerusalem. •But over the House of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem 10 Am 8:10 Jn 3:14i,16; 19:37 I shall pour out a spirit of grace and prayer, and they will look to me. They will mourn for the one whom they have pierced[f] as though for an only child, and weep Col 1:15,18 ↗Rv 1:7 for him as people weep for a first-born child. •When that day comes, the mourning 11 in Jerusalem will be as great as the mourning for Hadad Rimmon in the Plain of Megiddo. •And the country will mourn clan by clan: 12

The clan of the House of David by itself,
and their women by themselves;
the clan of the House of Nathan by itself,[g]
and their women by themselves;
the clan of the House of Levi by itself, 13
and their women by themselves;
the clan of the House of Shimei by itself,[h]
and their women by themselves;
all the rest of the clans, every clan by itself, 14
and their women by themselves.'

Ezk 47:1a; 36:25 Jn 7:38seq., 19:34 13 'When that day comes, a fountain will be opened for the House of David 1 and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, to wash sin and impurity away. [a]
'When that day comes—Yahweh declares—I shall cut off the names of the idols 2 from the country, and they will never be remembered again; I shall also rid the country of the prophets,[b] and of the spirit of impurity. •Then, if anyone still goes 3 on prophesying, his parents, his own father and mother will say to him, "You shall not live, since you utter lies in Yahweh's name." And even while he is prophesying, his parents, his own father and mother will pierce him through. •When that day 4 comes, the prophets will all be ashamed to relate their visions when they prophesy 2 K 1:8c Mt 3:4 and no longer put on their hair cloaks with intent to deceive. •Instead, they will 5 Am 7:14 say, "I am no prophet. I am a man who tills the soil, for the land has been my living 1 K 18:28 since I was a boy."[c] •And if anyone asks him, "What are those gashes on your 6 chest?" he will reply, "I got them when I was with my friends." '[d] e. In the messianic age the Davidic dynasty will be restored.

f. We preserve the MT reading by making a clear break after 'to me'. Theodotion understood 'to the one whom they have pierced', and this reading is followed by John (Jn 19:37). The death of the Pierced One occurs in an eschatological context: the raising of the siege of Jerusalem, national mourning, vv. 10–14, the opening of a fountain of salvation, 13:1. The messianic age thus depends on a passion and a mysterious death, parallel, though in reduced and nationalistic terms, to the fate of the servant in Is 52:13–53:12; see also Ps 69:26; Ezk 37. Jn 19:37 interprets the passage as a prophecy of Jesus' passion.

g. i.e. Nathan son of David, 2 S 5:14seq.

h. i.e. Shimei, a descendant of Gershon son of Levi, Nb 3:21.

13 a. 'to wash away' supplied for clarity. On the fountain or spring which will water Jerusalem in the messianic age, see Is 12:3; Ezk 47:1. Here, unlike 14:8, its purpose is to purify the people, see Ezk 36:25.

b. Prophecy as an institution is to cease, the false prophets having discredited it by their abuses, see Jr 23:9seq.; Ezk 13.

c. 'the land has been my living' 'adamah qinyani conj.: Hebr. 'adam hiqnani 'a man has bought me'.

d. 'on your chest', lit. 'between your hands'. The prophets of antiquity used to gash their bodies, cf. 1 K 18:28; the man who bears such scars is accused of being a prophet; he defends himself by claiming that the wounds were inflicted in a brawl with friends.

e. A messianic poem, possibly independent. The 'shepherd' here is neither the good shepherd of 11:4–14 nor the bad one of 11:15–16, but, without further definition, the leader of the people, the viceregent of Yahweh. The sword which is about to strike him will hand the whole nation over to the final ordeal which must precede the messianic age. This ordeal is described in the traditional imagery of the sheep without a shepherd, Ezk 34:5, the 'remnant', Is 4:3c, the 'one-third', Ezk 5:1–4, the refining fire, Jr 6:29–30. The nation will then be ready for the new covenant, see Jr 31:31*l*.

f. 'I shall say' Gk; 'I said' Hebr.

14 a. Ch. 14 foretells the cosmic repercussions which monotheism will produce, by unifying times (one continuous day) and transforming places (levelling of the Holy Land), by abolishing the occasions for and even the memory of idolatry and divination (stars and seasons, Gehenna and Tophet, Mount of Scandal, etc.), and also by unifying religion and its Israelite and foreign devotees: God will be all in all. The descriptions of the eschatological battle (vv. 1–5,12–15) are interrupted or complemented by descriptions of the new state of things which will succeed it.

b. Following Gk; Hebr. obscure, lit.: 'You will flee from the valley of my mountain, for the valley of my mountain will reach Asel; you will flee as you have fled.' Jasul, possibly on the Wadi Jasul, a tributary of the Kidron. Am 1:1 also refers to the earthquake in the time of Uzziah (mentioned by Flavius Josephus).

c. 'with him' Gk; 'with me' Hebr.

d. 'cold and frost' versions; Hebr. obscure.

e. Repetition for the sake of solemnity: the 'name' of Yahweh is Yahweh himself. The adoption of monotheism by all the nations of the world is one of the characteristics of the messianic age, cf. Ml 1:11.

f. 'to Rimmon in the Negeb, but Jerusalem will stand high' conj.; 'to Rimmon, to the Negeb (south) of Jerusalem, but she will stand high' Hebr. • 'and from the Tower' conj.; 'of the Tower' Hebr. Geba lay on the northern frontier of the kingdom of Judah, in Benjaminite territory. Rimmon is presumably Um er-Rammamin, 9 miles (about 15 km) northeast of Beersheba.

g. v. 15 is placed after v. 12, as the sense seems to require.

animals in those armies will be the same. •When that Day comes, a great terror will 13 Ezk 38:21 fall on them from Yahweh; each man will grab his neighbour's hand and they will fall to fighting among themselves. •Even Judah will fight against Jerusalem. The 14 wealth of all the surrounding nations will be heaped together: gold, silver, clothing, in vast quantity.

After this, all the survivors of all the nations which have attacked Jerusalem will 16 come up year after year to worship the King, Yahweh Sabaoth, and to keep the Ex 23:14d feast of Shelters.[h] •Should one of the races of the world fail to come up to Jerusalem 17
Jn 2:16 to worship the King, Yahweh Sabaoth, there will be no rain for that one. •Should 18 the race of Egypt fail to come up and pay its visit, on it will[i] fall the plague which Yahweh will inflict on each of those nations which fail to come up to keep the feast of Shelters. •Such will be the punishment for Egypt and the punishment for all the 19 nations which fail to come up to keep the feast of Shelters.

When that Day comes, the very bells on the horses will be inscribed with the 20 words, 'Sacred to Yahweh', and the cooking pots of the house of Yahweh will be as holy as the sprinkling bowls before the altar. •Yes, every cooking pot in Jerusalem 21 and in Judah shall be sacred to Yahweh Sabaoth, and all who come to offer sacrifice will help themselves and do their cooking in them, and there will be no more traders in the Temple of Yahweh Sabaoth, when that Day comes.[j]

h. The feast of Shelters was presumably chosen because it celebrated Yahweh's sovereignty.

i. 'will' Gk; 'will not' Hebr.

j. The author, remembering Ezekiel, foresees the sanctification of everything in Israel in the messianic age.

MALACHI

1 A message.
1 The word of Yahweh to Israel through Malachi. [a]

The love of Yahweh for Israel

2 'I have loved you, says Yahweh. But you ask, "How have you shown your love?" Dt 4:37;7:7seq. Is 54:8c Ezk 16 Ho 11:1
3 Was not Esau [b] Jacob's brother? declares Yahweh; even so, I loved Jacob ·but I hated Esau. I turned his mountains into a desert and his heritage into dwellings in ·Gn 25:23

5 for-ever. ·You will see this yourselves and you will say: Yahweh is mighty beyond the borders of Israel."

An indictment of the priests

6 'The son honours his father, the slave stands in awe of his master. [c] But if I am Ex 4:22;20:12 ·Dt 1:31;32:6
indeed father, where is the honour due to me? And if I am indeed master, where is Is 29:13 the awe due to me? says Yahweh Sabaoth to you priests who despise my name.
7 You ask, "How have we despised your name?" ·By putting polluted food on my them to your governor, see if he is pleased with them [d] or receives you graciously, 9 says Yahweh Sabaoth. ·In that case, try pleading with God to take pity on us (that 10 is what you have done), and will he take any notice? says Yahweh Sabaoth. ·Why does one of you not close the doors and so stop the pointless lighting of fires on my altar? I am not pleased with you, says Yahweh Sabaoth; from your hands I find no 11 offerings acceptable. ·But from farthest east to farthest west my name is great Jr 6:20 Am 5:21n among the nations, and everywhere incense and a pure gift are offered to my name, [e] since my name is great among the nations, says Yahweh Sabaoth. Zp 3:9 12 'But you have profaned it [f] by saying, "The table of the Lord is polluted, hence 13 the food offered on it deserves no respect." ·You say, "How tiresome it all is!" and sniff disdainfully at me, says Yahweh Sabaoth. You bring a stolen, lame or diseased Lv 22:18–25

14 Sabaoth. ·Cursed be the rogue who has a male in his flock but pays his vow by sacrificing a blemished animal to me! [h] For I am a great king, says Yahweh Sabaoth, Ps 47:2
and among the nations my name inspires awe.'

1 a. 'Malachi' means 'my messenger', see 3:1, which is how the Gk translates it, adding, 'Lay (this) therefore to your hearts.' Targ. reads: 'my messenger, whose name is Ezra the scribe'.

b. Esau is the eponymous ancestor of Edom, see Gn 36:1; Dt 2:1a,5c.

c. 'stands in awe of' Gk; Hebr. omits.

d. 'them' Gk; 'you' Hebr.

e. The form of worship of which the prophet speaks here as addressed to Yahweh is not so much the widespread cult in the Persian empire (see Ezr 1:2c) of the 'God of heaven' (Ezr 1:2; 5:11seq.; 6:9seq.; 7:12,21,23; Ne 1:4seq.; 2:4,20; Dn 2:18; 4:34; 5:23), as the perfect sacrifice of the messianic age.

f. Instead of 'you have profaned it', the original text probably read 'you have profaned me', later corrected by the scribes out of respect for God's majesty; similarly in v. 13 where we restore 'at me', where Hebr. now reads 'at it'. For another example of scribal correction (tiqqun sopherim), see Zc 2:12h. After 'food', we omit 'and its produce'.

g. 'bring that as an offering' conj.; 'bring the offering' Hebr. • 'Sabaoth' Gk; Hebr. omits.

h. 'me' conj.; 'the Lord' Hebr.

2 'And now, priests, this commandment is for you. ·If you will not listen, if you 1.2

Yahweh Sabaoth's messenger. ·But you yourselves have turned aside from the 8 way; you have caused many to lapse by your teaching. Since you have destroyed the covenant of Levi, says Yahweh Sabaoth, ·so I in my turn have made you 9 contemptible and vile to the whole people, for not having kept my ways and for being partial in applying the law.

Mixed marriage and divorce

Judah has profaned Yahweh's beloved sanctuary; [d] he has married the daughter of an alien god. [e] ·May Yahweh deprive such an offender of witness and advocate in 12 the tents of Jacob among those who present offerings to Yahweh Sabaoth! [f]

'And here is something else you do: you cover the altar of Yahweh with tears, 13 with weeping and wailing, because he now refuses to consider the offering or to accept it from you. ·And you ask, "Why?" Because Yahweh stands as witness 14 though she was your partner and your wife by covenant. ·Did he not create a single 15 respect for your own life then, and do not break faith.

The Day of Yahweh

'You have wearied Yahweh with your talk. You ask, "How have we wearied him?" 17

Yahweh Sabaoth.

Temple tithes [d]

Nb 23:19+ 'No; I, Yahweh, do not change; and you have not ceased to be children of Jacob! [e] 6

The triumph of the upright on the Day of Yahweh

15 In fact, we now call the proud the happy ones; the evil-doers are the ones who prosper; they put God to the test, yet come to no harm!" '
16 Then those who feared Yahweh talked to one another about this, and Yahweh took note and listened; and a book of remembrance was written in his presence Dn 7:10
17 recording those who feared him and kept his name in mind. ·'On the day when I act, says Yahweh Sabaoth, they will be my most prized possession, and I shall Ex 19:5

b. 'break your arm' Gk; 'rebuke your descendants' Hebr. • '(I shall) sweep you away with it' Syr.; 'he will sweep you away to him' Hebr.

c. A distinction is possibly being drawn between the unsatisfactory priests of vv. 1–3,7–9, and the more conscientious Levites of vv. 5–6, a clue perhaps to the prophet's own affiliations.

d. The sins of the people defile the Temple.

e. 'Judah', hitherto understood collectively, is now used in the distributive sense: individual members of Judah marry the 'daughters' of an alien god, i.e. idolatresses.

3 a. The precursor of Yahweh, already spoken of in Is 40:3, will be identified with Elijah, 3:23. Mt 11:10 applies this text to John the Baptist, the new Elijah, Mt 11:14g; Mk 1:2; Lk 1:17,76.

b. The angel of the new covenant is not the precursor spoken of above, since his arrival at the Temple is simultaneous with that of Yahweh. It is most probably an enigmatic designation of Yahweh himself, derived from Ex 3:2; 23:20, see Gn 16:7c. Mt 11:10 implies its application to Jesus.

c. Hebr. adds 'of silver', probably a gloss.

d. This passage should perhaps be linked with 1:2–5, in which case it would provide the answer to the sceptical question of 1:2.

e. True to their ancestor who supplanted and cheated his brother, see v. 8.

f. 'cheat' (three times and v. 9), Gk, preserving the original reading of the text, 'aqab, a play on the name Jacob. Scribal correction (1:12f), this time out of deference to the patriarch, transposed the consonants to read qaba' 'rob' in MT, thus suppressing the allusion.

g. On tithes see Dt 14:22d. According to the Priestly writings, Lv 27:30seq.; Nb 18:21–31, they were a tax imposed for the upkeep of the clergy centralised at the unique sanctuary; see also Ne 10:36seq.; 12:44.

k. Elijah, taken up to heaven, 2 K 2:11–13, will return. This return, predicted in this passage, was to remain an important feature of Jewish eschatology, see the Book of Enoch. Jesus explained that Elijah had indeed come—in the person of John the Baptist, Mt 11:14; 17:10–13e; Mk 9:11–13.

THE NEW TESTAMENT

THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

INTRODUCTION TO
THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

§1 Of the four canonical books that record the 'good news' (evangelium, gospel) brought by Jesus Christ, the first three are so alike that they can, in many passages, be placed side by side and viewed as it were at a glance: for this reason they are called 'synoptic' ('at one glance').

Tradition dating from the second century assigns them respectively to St Matthew, St Mark and St Luke. According to the same ecclesiastical tradition Matthew the tax collector, himself one of the apostles (Mt 9:9; 10:3), was the first to write; he wrote his Gospel in Palestine for Christians converted from Judaism. His work, composed in 'the Hebrew idiom', which probably means in Aramaic, was then translated into Greek. John Mark, a disciple from Jerusalem (Ac 12:12) who assisted Paul in his apostolic work (Ac 12:25; 13:5,13; Phm 24; 2 Tm 4:11), and Barnabas his cousin (Ac 15:37,39; Col 4:10) and Peter (1 P 5:13), whose 'interpreter' he was, put Peter's preaching down in writing at Rome. Another disciple, Luke, a medical man (Col 4:14) and, unlike Matthew and Mark, of gentile origin (Col 4:10–14), born at Antioch according to some authorities, accompanied Paul on the latter's second (Ac 16:10seq.) and third (Ac 20:5seq.) missionary journeys and was with him during his two Roman captivities (Ac 27:1seq.; 2 Tm 4:11). For this reason his Gospel, the third to be written, could claim the authority of Paul (see perhaps 2 Co 8:18) as that of Mark could claim the authority of Peter. Luke composed also a second work—the 'Acts of the Apostles'. The original language of the second and third Gospels is Greek.

These traditions, though hallowed by age, are not in any way definitive. Their accuracy is disputed by a number of scholars, both Protestant and Catholic. Acceptance of the gospels as authoritative documents, inspired by the Holy Spirit, is not dependent on acceptance that these particular writers were primarily responsible for them. Many would hold that Matthew the tax collector did not write the gospel which bears his name, though he may well have played some part in the formation of the traditions which it incorporates. It is also widely maintained that the tradition radically oversimplifies the relationship of Mark's Gospel to Peter's preaching; at most the connection is remote and tenuous. A third point of doubt is whether the author of the third Gospel and of the Acts of the Apostles was in fact a companion of Paul. But before going on with this, it is necessary to say something about the problem of the literary relations between these gospels, i.e. the 'Synoptic Problem'.

§2 All the many solutions offered so far prove inadequate if taken separately, though each contributes an element of truth to the complete solution. A common oral tradition is inherently probable, if not certain; it would have been written down independently, and consequently with variations, by each of the three Synoptists. But by itself this tradition would never have been able to account for the many striking similarities which exist not only between details in the text but also in the sequence of passages, resemblances which cannot be explained even by the extraordinary memory of people in the ancient Middle East. A written tradition, in one or many forms, would be a better explanation. But the theory that the three evangelists merely drew independently on some such written source or sources could never explain passages where these likenesses and divergencies show that the evangelists were aware of one another, as is obvious from the fact that at times they copy or correct one another. There must have been some direct interdependence and it is clear that Luke depends on Mark for most of his direct narrative. But it is much less obvious that, as has long been held, Mark depends on Matthew, for many indications point in the opposite direction. As for the relationship between Matthew and Luke, no direct dependence in either direction can be considered probable, and the non-Markan passages common to these two probably have their common source or sources outside the second Gospel.

Starting from these textual considerations critics have worked out a 'Two-Source Theory' according to which these sources are: 1 Mark, on whom Matthew and Luke depend for their narrative sections. 2 A source, the existence of which is inferred purely from the textual evidence, and which is called 'Q' (initial of the German word Quelle, source). From Q, both the first and third Gospels draw the 'Sayings' or discourses of Jesus ('Logia'), which in Mark are barely represented. In spite of its simplicity, or rather because of it, this very widely accepted theory fails to resolve all problems. Neither Mark in its present form, nor Q as it is commonly reconstructed, can suffice to play the part which is attributed to it.

It is true that Mark generally appears to be more primitive than Matthew and Luke. But contrary instances can be found. Mark sometimes betrays comparatively late traits, such as Paulinisms and adaptations to readers of the Graeco-Roman world, while Matthew and Luke retain some more archaic features such as Semitisms and details of Palestinian origin. The suggestion has been made that Matthew and Luke may have drawn their material from a Mark in an earlier state.

This suggestion is strengthened by another factor. In some places Matthew and Luke present points of agreement against Mark in a way which argues against their common dependence on that Gospel. These agreements are frequent and sometimes striking. Attempts have been made to account for them in a way which leaves the basic theory intact, either as harmonisations by copyists which should be removed by textual criticism, or as corrections by the evangelists themselves who spontaneously and independently refashioned passages of Mark which they considered unsatisfactory. Acceptable as these explanations may be for certain cases, they will not suffice to explain the phenomenon as a whole. All in all the explanation already suggested above is preferable, namely that Matthew and Luke knew and used an earlier version of the Gospel of Mark. The last revision of Mark must have been made after they had already made use of it. This would account for the features which appear late and the cases where Matthew and Luke agree against Mark: they would both reflect an earlier version of his text.

No more satisfactory, at least in the form commonly proposed, is the hypothesis of the source Q. The document suggested is reconstructed by different scholars in ways too diverse for it to have any definable or even intelligible form. Even the idea that it is a single source is disputed. In fact the sayings from which it is made up occur in Matthew and Luke in a way which suggests two sources rather than one, those in the middle (often called 'Peraean') section of Luke (9:51–18:14) contrasting with the other sayings in his Gospel. Although both have equivalents in Matthew, those in the latter category occur in the two gospels in series largely parallel, while those in the former category are grouped in Luke and scattered in Matthew. Everything indicates that Matthew and Luke drew the sayings from two different sources: 1 A collection, called S(ource) by some which Luke has substantially adopted for his Peraean section, while Matthew scattered the elements throughout his discourses, and 2 The Gospel of Matthew in an earlier form.

It seems, indeed, necessary to postulate for Matthew and even for Luke, no less than for Mark, an earlier form than those we now have. Analyses which cannot be reproduced here suggest three stages, at least for Mark and Matthew: a basic document, a first revision and a final revision, which is what we now have. Between these different stages there were interactions in various directions, bringing with them the literary relationships of similarity and difference which we now find in the gospels. Thus, for example, the first revision of Mark will have been influenced by the document which is at the source of Matthew, but in its turn will have exerted an influence on the final revision of Matthew. This lattice-work of interlocking influences, complex though it may seem, is the only solution which adequately explains a complex situation. Any claim to a simple solution of the synoptic problem is illusory.

It is now possible to describe the steps in the formation of the first three gospels, although profound differences remain between scholars on many points. The present hypothesis claims only to be one likely solution to the problem.

At the heart of the oral preaching of the apostles lies the kerygma proclaiming the redemptive death and resurrection of the Lord. Peter's discourses in the Acts of the Apostles provide us with typical summaries of this apostolic preaching which would in practice have included more detailed narratives: principally the story of the Passion which must have assumed its stereotyped pattern very early, as the close similarity of the four gospel accounts shows, but also many anecdotes taken from the Master's life, and throwing light on his person, his mission and his power, or else illustrating his teaching by means of some well-remembered episode, saying, miracle, pronouncement or parable etc. In addition to the apostles themselves there were professional narrators like the evangelists (those who enjoyed a special charisma not limited to the writers of our four gospels; see Ac 21:8; Ep 4:11; 2 Tm 4:5), who tended to stereotype the anecdotes by constant repetition. Soon, and particularly when the witnesses who had been in touch with the events themselves began to disappear, measures would have been taken to commit this oral tradition to writing. Episodes originally narrated separately and independently of one another would naturally be grouped together either chronologically (e.g. Mk 1:16–39, the Day at Capernaum) or logically (e.g. Mk 2:1–3:6, the Five Disputes); the groupings would be small at first, but would later grow into more extensive collections. This was the stage at which an author intervened who, according to tradition which there is no reason to doubt, was Matthew the apostle. He was the first to compose a 'gospel' which drew together Christ's deeds and words into a continuous narrative covering the earthly ministry of Jesus from baptism to resurrection. Shortly afterwards a 'Collection', S, of unknown authorship, appeared side by side with this early gospel; its purpose was to preserve other sayings of the Lord, or the same sayings in a different form. This early gospel and this Collection, both written in Aramaic, were soon put into Greek, and eventually various forms of these translations came to exist.

The needs of adaptation to Christians of gentile origin will have led to a new form of that very first Gospel which we have just attributed to Matthew, and this new form constituted a new document on which the Markan tradition was based. Add to these two primitive forms of the Gospel derived respectively from Matthew and the Collection S, another ancient gospel, which can be divined as the source of the accounts of the Passion and Resurrection in Luke and John, and we have four basic documents for the first of the three stages which have already been suggested.

At a second stage these documents were taken up and combined in various ways. From the primitive Matthaean Gospel and its various adaptations, especially the one addressed to Christians of gentile origin, the Markan tradition made a more organised and more complete revision, which was not, however, the final version which we know today. It is this intermediate form of Mark which was known and used by the editors of the canonical Gospels of Matthew and Luke. The Matthaean tradition, for its part, combined the primitive Gospel of Matthew with the Collection S to produce a new revision.

The editor who achieved this combination did so with great delicacy, dividing up the sayings grouped in S to distribute them in the Gospel and thus construct the great discourses. Soon afterwards, an editor of the Gospel of Luke began his work. Having sought out diligently everything which had been written before him (Lk 1:1–4), he used, in a first stage of his work which may be called Proto-Luke, both the document with gentile-Christian tendencies which had formed a basis for Mark and the Gospel of Matthew into which S had already been incorporated; but he also knew S at first hand, and preferred to insert the sayings in large blocks into his middle section, instead of following Matthew who had divided them up. Finally he used, especially in the accounts of the Passion and resurrection, an ancient document used also by the fourth Gospel. This accounts for the numerous contacts of Luke and John against Matthew and Mark in this part of the Gospel. Proto-Luke had no knowledge of Mark, even in its intermediary form; it was only later that he utilised it to complete his Gospel. This brings us to the third stage.

In this final stage the Gospel of the Matthaean tradition was thoroughly remoulded with the help of Mark, though this Mark was not of course in the final state in which we know it, but in the more primitive form which we have assigned to the second stage of the evolution. By a curious criss-crossing, the Gospel of Mark was itself revised in view of the intermediate form of Matthew and perhaps also of Proto-Luke, not without some Pauline influence. As for Luke, this found its final form by the use of Mark in its intermediate form, in the same way as Matthew. Into the course of its first edition (Proto-Luke) were inserted three 'Markan sections' (4:31–6:19; 8:4–9:50; 18:15–21:38). That these insertions occurred only at a late stage of the work is proved by the omission of those Markan elements which he had already adopted in a different literary form from the sources Matthew or S. These latter had been used earlier. It should also be noted that Luke, in the same way as Matthew but to a greater extent, had recourse to special sources discovered by his diligent research (1:3). To these he owes not only his Gospel of the infancy but also many of the fine passages which make his Gospel the indispensable complement of the other two (the good Samaritan, Martha and Mary, the prodigal son, the Pharisee and the tax collector).

§3 The literary process just outlined respects and makes use of the broad data from tradition but is able to fill in details. It does not, however, make it possible, any more than tradition does, to assign an exact date to each of the Synoptics with complete certainty: at a guess, though, the interval required for the development of the oral tradition would make it probable that the primitive Gospel and later the Collection S were composed between the years 40 and 50. This early date would be definite if it could be proved that Paul's Letters to the Thessalonians, written about 51–2, made use of the first Gospel's Apocalyptic Discourse. If Mark wrote towards the end of Peter's life (as Clement of Alexandria says) or shortly after Peter's death (as Irenaeus says) the date of his Gospel would be c. 64; in any case it should be dated before 70 as it does not seem from this Gospel that Jerusalem has yet been destroyed. Greek Matthew and Luke are later than Mark but their precise date is more difficult to determine. The existence of Luke's Gospel is presupposed by Acts (Ac 1:1) but the date of Acts itself uncertain (see p. 1794) can provide no criterion. It is true that neither Greek Matthew nor Luke suggests that the destruction of Jerusalem has already taken place (not even Lk 19:42–44; 21:20–24 which employ clichés from the prophetic books to describe an event that cannot have been hard to foresee) but this is not decisive. If neither of them knew of the destruction, then they would have to be put before 70, but if they deliberately aimed at scrupulously preserving the archaic quality of their respective literary sources, then their works might quite well have been composed after the destruction, say about AD 80.

In any case, the apostolic origin, direct or indirect, together with their involved literary formation confirm the historical value of the Synoptics, and not only that but at the same time help us to understand the nature of that historical value; since the gospels stem from an oral preaching that goes back to the beginnings of the primitive community, their guarantee in this way would ultimately rest on eye-witness. Neither the apostles themselves, however, nor any of the other preachers of the gospel message and tellers of the gospel story ever aimed at writing or teaching history in the modern technical sense of that word; their concern was missionary and theological: they preached to convert and edify, to infuse faith, to enlighten it and defend it against its opponents. For this purpose they could and did appeal to solid evidence that could be checked, and this appeal was demanded quite as much by their own sincerity as by their anxiety not to leave any loopholes for hostile argument. Those who finally composed the gospels, collecting the evidence and putting it into writing, had the same objective fidelity and equal respect for their sources of information; this is clear from the simple and archaic quality of their work. In this there are no theological developments characteristic of subsequent decades (compare Paul for example); much less is there any trace of the sort of extravagant legends that are frequent in the apocryphal gospels. The three Synoptics may not be history books, but they do set out to give us historical fact.

This does not mean that each of the events or discourses which they record corresponds exactly to what in fact took place. The laws governing witnesses and the spread of evidence warn us against looking for that material sort of precision. Obvious examples can be found in the gospels themselves, where the same events or the same discourses are sometimes recorded in different ways. This is not only true of the content of some episodes, but it is even truer of the order in which these episodes are arranged, which is not the same order in each gospel. This is only to be expected in view of their complex origins. Their component parts, which at first existed separately, were only gradually collected together into groups; and these groups were later joined together or split up, more for reasons of logic or neatness than for anything to do with chronology. In this way many of the gospel events or sayings have been shifted from their original time or place. For this reason it is often impossible to take editorial connective phrases like 'then', 'after this', 'on that day', 'at that time', etc. at their face value.

§4 This process of editing itself took place under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, who directed the community and its spokesmen both in the preservation and in the selection and arrangement of the material. The evangelists are genuine human authors, and the guidance of the Spirit did not override but rather heightened their theological and literary abilities, enabling each to stress different aspects of the rich tradition of the message of Jesus.

§5 The Gospel according to Mark

The plan Mark follows is the least complex of the Synoptics. The preaching of John the Baptist plus the baptism and temptation of Jesus make up his prelude (1:1–13); next comes a period of ministry which, according to occasional hints, took place in Galilee (1:14–7:23), then a journey by Jesus and his apostles to the district of Tyre and Sidon, the Decapolis, the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi and back to Galilee (7:24–9:50); then the Transfiguration (9:2–8) and the final journey through Peraea and Jericho to Jerusalem where the Passion and Resurrection take place (10:1–16:8). Apart from individual sequences of fact, this broad outline itself is possibly artificial since it is likely, and to judge by the fourth Gospel fairly certain, that Jesus visited Jerusalem several times before the last Passover of his life. All the same, this outline, broad as it is, does trace for us an important development which is both factually and theologically significant. The general public received Jesus warmly at first but their enthusiasm waned as they found that his gentle and other-worldly conception of the Messiah did not fulfil their hopes. As a result, Jesus left Galilee to devote himself to the instruction of a small group of faithful followers, and the profession of faith at Caesarea Philippi showed that he had secured their faith. This was a decisive turning-point: after it Jerusalem became the focus of attention, and it was there that further opposition continued mounting, only to end in the drama of the Passion and in the final triumph of the resurrection.

This paradox provides the central interest of this Gospel, i.e. how Jesus, while remaining misunderstood and rejected was at the same time God's triumphant envoy. The Gospel is not particularly concerned with elaborating the Master's teaching, and it records few of his sayings: the real point of its message is the manifestation of the crucified Messiah. On the one hand Jesus is the Son of God, acknowledged as such by the Father (1:11; 9:7), by evil spirits (1:24; 3:11; 5:7) and even by men (15:39); he is the Messiah claiming divine rank (14:62), higher than the angels (13:32), taking on himself the forgiveness of sin (2:10), vindicating his power and his mission by miracle (1:31; 4:41; etc.) and by exorcism (1:27; 3:23seq.). On the other hand the Gospel puts great emphasis on his apparent frustration at the hands of many: the mockery or refusal of the public (5:40; 6:2seq.), the antagonism of the religious leaders (2:1–3:6), the lack of understanding even on his disciples' part (4:13b)—all the hostile activities that were to lead to the shame of the cross. It is this 'scandal', this refusal, that the Gospel is intent on explaining. It does this not merely by contrasting the cross with the crowning triumph of the resurrection but also by showing that the hostility was itself an integral part of God's mysterious plan. It was necessary that Christ should suffer and so redeem the human race (10:45; 14:24), since this had been foretold by the scriptures (9:12; 14:21,49). Both for himself (8:31; 9:31; 10:33seq.) and for his own followers (8:34seq.; 9:35; 10:15,24seq., 29seq., 39; 13:9–13) Jesus laid down a way of humility and submission; but the Jews, expecting a victorious warrior-Messiah, were ill-prepared for this answer to their hope; the reason why Jesus wanted silence about his miracles (5:43) and his identity (7:24; 9:30) was to avoid an enthusiasm which would have been as ill-advised as it would have been mistaken. Rather than call himself Messiah, 8:29seq., he used the modest and mysterious expression 'Son of man' (2:10; compare Mt 8:20h). This cautionary measure is what is called 'the messianic secret' (1:34m) and is a basic idea of Mark's Gospel. It was not something Mark invented; it corresponded to that underlying reality in Christ's life of suffering which, in the light of a faith finally and fully established by the Easter event, the evangelist was able to perceive and to place before us for our understanding.

§6 The Gospel according to Matthew

The same light of faith and the same broad outline of Christ's life naturally occur in Matthew as well as in Mark, but with quite a different emphasis. To begin with, the plan is not the same and is much more elaborate: Matthew is divided into five books, each consisting of a discourse introduced and prepared by narrative matter; these five books, plus the stories of the infancy and of the Passion, are combined to form a well-knit whole of seven sections. It is possible that this arrangement, which is so clear in Matthew, goes back to the Aramaic gospel; in any case, in Greek Matthew it is unmistakable. As we have already seen, Matthew used his sources with great freedom in order to achieve his carefully mapped-out ensemble. The fact that this Gospel also reports Christ's teaching much more fully than Mark's, and stresses especially the theme of the kingdom of Heaven (4:17f), makes it a dramatic account in seven acts of the coming of the kingdom of Heaven. These acts are as follows: 1 The preparation of the kingdom in the person of the child-Messiah, ch. 1–2. 2 The formal proclamation of the charter of the kingdom to the disciples and the public, i.e. the Sermon on the Mount, ch. 5–8. 3 The preaching of the kingdom by missionaries whose credentials (the 'signs', which are to confirm the word) are now hinted at by several miracles done by Jesus himself; the missionaries receive their instructions, ch. 8–10. 4 The obstacles which the kingdom will meet, and which are part of God's design that the kingdom should come without show, as illustrated in the parables of the concluding instruction, 11:1–13:52. 5 Its embryonic existence in the group of disciples with Peter at their head; the rules for this Church in the making are outlined in the concluding instruction on the community, 13:53–18:35. 6 The crisis, provoked by the increasing hostility of the Jewish leaders, which is to prepare the way for the definitive coming of the kingdom and which is the subject of the concluding eschatological instruction, ch. 19–25. 7 Lastly, the coming itself, a coming effected through suffering and triumph, through the Passion and Resurrection, ch. 26–28.

The kingdom of God (of 'the Heavens' in Matthew) is the reassertion that the Law and prophets are 'fulfilled'—a phrase which means that their hopes have been not only realised but also perfected. Matthew applies this to the person of Jesus: he appeals to Old Testament texts for his Davidic descent (1:1–17), for his virgin birth (1:23) at Bethlehem (2:6), for his stay in Egypt and his settling at Capernaum (4:14–16), for his messianic progress into Jerusalem (21:5,16); Matthew applies it also to the work of Jesus: he appeals to Old Testament texts to explain Jesus' cures (11:4–5); and finally he applies it to the teaching of Jesus: this 'fulfils' the Law (5:17) while raising it to further heights (5:21–48; 19:3–9,16–21). Matthew asserts equally strongly that the scriptures are fulfilled also in the lowliness of Jesus' person and in what humanly seems to be the frustration of his work. In this way God's plan contains, and the Old Testament foretells: the massacre of the Innocents (2:17seq.), the hidden life at Nazareth (2:23), the gentle compassion of the 'servant of God' (12:17–21; cf. 8:17; 11:29; 12:7), the disciples' desertion (26:31), the paltry price of betrayal (27:9–10), the arrest (26:54) and the three days' burial (12:40); in this way too the Old Testament foretold the unbelief of the Jews (13:13–15), too tenacious of their man-made traditions (15:7–9), who could be approached only by teaching through the veil of parables (13:14–15,35); Matthew is not the only one of the three Synoptists to make use of arguments from the Old Testament, but he relies so heavily on this argument that he has made it one of the chief characteristics of his Gospel. Matthew's is the most semitic of the gospels: not only does it show great interest in and often refers to the details of Jewish observance, with its Sabbath, phylacteries, tithes and purifications, but also it frequently makes use of the Jewish technique of midrash and other rabbinic methods of argument. Characteristically Jewish also is the preoccupation with the final judgement and retribution and its apocalyptic scenario. This Jewishness accounts for Matthew's concern to show that the new Law of Christ fulfils the old and that the new people of God form the successors to the Israel of the old covenant who were first invited to the messianic feast but refused the invitation (23:34–38, compare 10:5–6, 23; 15:24). In keeping with his concern with fulfilment Matthew often represents Jesus as the new Moses, repeating in his life the story of Moses and the lawgiver of the new covenant. But beyond this, Jesus is somehow endowed with majesty even in his earthly life; he is recognised as God's Son (14:33; 16:16; 22:2; 27:40,43) as well as son of David. From the first announcement of his conception he is known as 'God-with-us'. Another dimension of Matthew's Gospel is that of the community, for one of the discourse chapters (18) is devoted to behaviour within the community, and Matthew stresses the importance of Peter as the foundation-stone of the new Israel (16:18), and of the disciples, consistently toning down or omitting the rebukes to them from Jesus reported by Mark.

§7 The Gospel according to Luke

The third Gospel's distinguishing quality results from the attractive personality of its author which shines through all his work. Luke is at once a most gifted writer and a man of marked sensibility. He set to work in his own way with an eye to exact information and orderly narrative (1:3), but respect for his sources, together with his method of editing them did not lead Luke, any more than Matthew or Mark, to follow a chronological plan. He follows Mark, with some alterations (3:19–20; 4:16–30; 5:1–11; 6:12–19; 22:31–34). Some of these are made in the interests of clarity and logical sequence, some under the influence of other streams of tradition including a tradition traceable also in the fourth Gospel. Other episodes are omitted altogether for various reasons: they were not interesting for Luke's non-Jewish readers (Mk 9:11–13), or they were already to be found in the Collection S (Mk 12:28–34; see Lk 10:25–28), or above all (as in the case of Luke's great omission of Mk 6:45–8:26) because Luke regarded it as unnecessarily repetitive. Luke's most obvious difference from Mark is his great intercalation (see 9:51–18:14) which, as has been seen, combines Logia or Sayings from the Collection S with information he had found out for himself. This central section uses a journey to Jerusalem for its framework (see the reiterated indications, elaborating the datum of Mk 10:1, in Lk 9:51; 13:22; 17:11). But it is not a reminiscence of an actual journey; it is rather a device by which Luke is able to bring out one of his chief theological notions: namely that the Holy City is the predestined stage for the drama of salvation (9:31; 13:33; 18:31; 19:11). Because it is from Jerusalem that the evangelisation of the world must begin (24:47; Ac 1:8), his Gospel had to start there (1:5seq.) and there he will have to bring it to a close (24:52seq.)—the post-resurrection appearances and conversations recorded by Luke do not take place in Galilee (see 24:13–51 and compare 24:6 with Mk 16:7; Mt 28:7,16–20).

§8 From a comparison of Luke with his two sources, (a) Mark, the best known, and (b) the sources behind the Matthean passages which are paralleled in Luke, it becomes apparent that Luke has carefully moulded the material he has received. His changes are slight, but through them he gives his work a character peculiarly his own. He avoids or whittles down anything his readers might find offensive (8:43, compare Mk 5:26; he omits Mk 9:43–48; 13:32) or anything they could not be expected to understand (he omits Mt 5:21seq.,33seq.; Mk 15:34; etc.). He omits anything derogatory to the dignity of the apostles (Mk 4:13; 8:32seq.; 9:28seq.; 14:50) and makes excuses for them (Lk 9:45; 18:34; 22:45). He explains obscure phrases (6:15) and clears up points of topography (4:31; 19:28seq.,37; 23:51), etc. One of the most attractive features of Luke is his picture of the gentleness of Christ. He is anxious to stress his Master's love of sinners (15:1seq.,7,10); to record his acts of forgiveness (7:36–50; 15:11–32; 19:1–10; 23:34,39–43); and to contrast his tenderness for the lowly and the poor with his severity towards the proud and towards those who abuse their wealth (1:51–53; 6:20–26; 12:13–21; 14:7–11; 16:15,19–31; 18:9–14). But in spite of this severity, the wicked, however deserving of punishment, will not be condemned till the period set aside for mercy has come to an end (13:6–9; cf. Mk 11:12–14). The one thing necessary is repentance, abdication of self, and on this the gentle, tolerant Luke takes a firm stand, insisting on unflinching and complete detachment (14:25–34), especially from riches (6:34seq.; 12:33; 14:12–14; 16:9–13). Another group of passages which are also found only in the third Gospel is on the necessity of prayer (11:1–8; 18:1–8), of which Jesus sets the example (3:21; 5:16; 6:12; 9:28). Finally, Luke is the only one of the Synoptists to give the Holy Spirit the prominence we find in Paul and in Acts (Lk 1:15,35,41,67; 2:25–27; 4:1,14,18; 10:21; 11:13; 24:49). These qualities, combined with that joy in God and that gratitude to him for his gifts which fill the third Gospel (2:14; 5:26; 10:17; 13:17; 18:43; 19:37; 24:51seq.), are the ones that go to make Luke's achievement such a warm and human work.

§9 Style

Mark's Greek is rough, strongly redolent of Aramaic, and often faulty; but it is fresh, lively and appealing. Matthew's Greek is also rather marked by Aramaic but smoother than Mark's as well as less picturesque and more correct. Luke's is mixed: when writing independently, his Greek is excellent, but out of respect for his sources he incorporates their imperfections—after polishing them a little. Occasionally he goes out of his way to give a good imitation of Septuagint Greek.

§10 This translation

As far as possible this translation preserves stylistic nuances and aims at reproducing the detailed similarities and differences between the three Synoptics, which betray their literary relationships.

1 a. Matthew, though stressing the foreign element on the female side, vv. 3,5,6, limits his genealogy to Jesus' Israelitic descent. Its aim is to show how Jesus is connected with the leading recipients of the messianic promises, i.e. with Abraham and David and with the latter's royal line. Luke's genealogy is universal in scope and goes back to Adam, head of the human race. The two lists, from David down to Joseph, have only two names in common. In Mt, moreover, the schematic nature of the genealogy is brought out by the division of Jesus' ancestors into three series of 2 × 7 names (see 6:9d), a device which forces the omission of three kings between Joram and Uzziah. It also compels the double reckoning of Jechoniah (vv. 11–12); this is made possible by the fact that the same Greek name can translate the two similar Hebr. names Jehoiakim and Jehoiachin. The lists of both Mt and Lk end with Joseph who was Jesus' legal father only; the reason is that according to ancient mentality legal paternity (adoption, levirate etc.) is sufficient, by itself, to confer all hereditary rights; the rights here are those of the messianic line. The main purpose of this first incident in Mt is to show how Jesus came to be a member of the royal line of David, namely through adoption by Joseph at the prompting of the angel's message.

Joseph adopts Jesus as his son

Lk 1:27;2:5 This is how Jesus Christ came to be born. His mother Mary was betrothed to 18
Joseph; [e] but before they came to live together she was found to be with child through the Holy Spirit. ·Her husband Joseph, being an upright man and wanting 19 to spare her disgrace, decided to divorce her informally. [f] ·He had made up his 20 Gn 16:7c Ac 7:38k mind to do this when suddenly the angel of the Lord [g] appeared to him in a dream [h] and said, 'Joseph son of David, do not be afraid to take Mary home as your wife, Lk 1:35 because she has conceived what is in her by the Holy Spirit. ·She will give birth to 21
Ps 130:8 Si 46:1 Lk 1:31 a son and you must name him Jesus, because he is the one who is to save [i] his people from their sins.' ·Now all this took place to fulfil what the Lord had spoken through 22
Ac 3:16*l*;4:12 the prophet: [j]

Is 7:14 Look! the virgin is with child and will give birth to a son 23 whom they will call Immanuel, a name which means 'God-is-with-us'. ·When Joseph woke up he did what the 24 angel of the Lord had told him to do: he took his wife to his home; ·he had not had 25 Lk 2:7 intercourse with her when she gave birth [k] to a son; and he named him Jesus.

The visit of the Magi

Lk 2:1–7 2 [a] After Jesus had been born at Bethlehem in Judaea during the reign of King 1
Herod, [b] suddenly some wise men came to Jerusalem from the east [c] ·asking, 2 Nb 24:17 'Where is the infant king of the Jews? We saw his star as it rose and have come to do him homage.' ·When King Herod heard this he was perturbed, and so was the 3 whole of Jerusalem. ·He called together all the chief priests and the scribes of the 4 people, [d] and enquired of them where the Christ was to be born. ·They told him, 5 Jn 7:42 'At Bethlehem in Judaea, for this is what the prophet wrote:

Mi 5:1 And you, Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, 6 you are by no means the least among the leaders of Judah, for from you will come a leader who will shepherd my people Israel.'

Then Herod summoned the wise men to see him privately. He asked them the 7 exact date on which the star had appeared ·and sent them on to Bethlehem with 8 the words, 'Go and find out all about the child, and when you have found him, let me know, so that I too may go and do him homage.' 9 •Having listened to what the king had to say, they set out. And suddenly the star they had seen rising went forward and halted over the place where the child was. [e] 10 •The sight of the star filled them with delight, 11 •and going into the house they saw the child with his mother Mary, and falling to their knees they did him homage. Then, opening their trea- Ps 72:10–11,15 given a warning in a dream not to go back to Herod, and returned to their own country by a different way. 1 K 13:9seq.

The flight into Egypt. The massacre of the Innocents

After they had left, suddenly the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream 1:20i and said, 'Get up, take the child and his mother with you, and escape into Egypt, 1 K 11:17,40 and stay there until I tell you, because Herod intends to search for the child and do 2 K 25:26 away with him.' 14 •So Joseph got up and, taking the child and his mother with him, Jr 26:21;43 left that night for Egypt, 15 •where he stayed until Herod was dead. This was to fulfil what the Lord had spoken through the prophet:

I called my son out of Egypt. [g] Nb 23:22

Herod was furious on realising that he had been fooled by the wise men, [h] and in Bethlehem and its surrounding district he had all the male children killed who were two years old or less, reckoning by the date he had been careful to ask the wise men. 17 •Then were fulfilled the words spoken through the prophet Jeremiah: [i]

d. Several Gk and Lat. authorities, more explicitly, 'Joseph, to whom was betrothed the Virgin Mary who gave birth to Jesus'. It is probably as a result of a misunderstanding of this reading that Syr. Sin. has this text 'Joseph, to whom was betrothed the Virgin Mary, fathered Jesus.'

e. The force of Jewish betrothal was such that the fiancé was already called 'husband' and could release himself from the engagement only by an act of repudiation, v. 19.

f. lit. 'to put her away from him privately'. It is perhaps because Joseph is upright that he does not want to name as his own a child of an unknown father. Another explanation is that he is deterred from proceeding with the marriage by reverence for the mystery of Mary's motherhood and has to be persuaded by means of the angelic message that it is still God's will that he should take her to wife.

g. The 'angel of the Lord' in the early texts (Gn 16:7c) means Yahweh himself. With the development of the doctrine of angels (see Tb 5:4b) their distinction from God becomes clearer; they retain their function as heavenly messengers and often appear as such in the narratives of the infancy (Mt 1:20,24; 2:13,19; Lk 1:11; 2:9; see also Mt 28:2; Jn 5:4; Ac 5:19; 8:26; 12:7,23).

h. As in the OT, Si 34:1a, God makes his intention known in a dream: Mt 2:12,13,19,22; 27:19; cf. Ac 16:9; 18:9; 23:11; 27:23; and the parallel visions of Ac 9:10seq.; 10:3seq., 11seq.

i. 'Jesus' (Hebr. Jehoshua) means 'Yahweh saves'.

j. This and similar formulae will be frequent in Mt: 2:15,17,23; 8:17; 12:17; 13:35; 21:4; 26:54,56; 27:9; see also 3:3; 11:10; 13:14. Already in the OT one of the criteria of a true prophet was that his words were fulfilled, Dt 18:20–22f. In Jesus' view and that of his disciples God had announced his plan either by words or by deeds, and in accordance with the principles of Jewish exegesis of the time, the NT seeks to show that God's plan is fulfilled in Jesus, by pointing out minute and literal correspondence between the life of Jesus and the text of the OT, Jn 2:22; 20:9; Ac 2:23*o*, 31,34–35; 3:24*s*; Rm 15:4; 1 Co 10:11; 15:3–4; 2 Co 1:20; 3:14–16.

k. The text is not concerned with the period that followed and, taken by itself, does not assert Mary's perpetual virginity. This is assumed by the remainder of the Gospel and by the tradition of the Church. By naming the child, Joseph accepts it as his own. On the 'brothers' of Jesus, see 12:46*o*.

2 a. In Ch. 1 Mt introduced the person of Jesus, son of David and son of God; now in Ch. 2 he gives a foretaste of his mission to offer salvation to the gentiles, whose wise men are attracted to his light, vv. 1–12, and to re-live in his own person the suffering undergone by his people: the first exile in Egypt, vv. 13–15, the second captivity, vv. 16–18, the humble return of the little Remnant, vv. 19–23 (see v. 23*l*). These midrashic stories, in which the events of Jesus' infancy are recounted in terms which recall the infancy of Moses, use events to teach what Lk teaches by means of the prophetic words of Simeon, see Lk 2:34*l*.

b. About 5 or 4 BC. Herod was king of Judaea, Idumaea and Samaria from 37 to 4 BC, see Lk 2:2b.

c. A story of this kind demands that the term be left vague and general—the prime place of origin of wise astrologers such as these wise men.

d. Also called 'doctors of the Law', Lk 5:17; Ac 5:34, or 'lawyers', Lk 7:30; 10:25; etc., their function was to interpret the scriptures, especially the Law of Moses, to draw out of it the rules of conduct for Jewish life, see Ezr 7:6c; Si 39:2b. This role gained them prestige and influence among the people. Their numbers were drawn primarily but not exclusively from the Pharisees, 3:7f. With the high priests and the elders they constituted the Great Sanhedrin.

e. Obviously the evangelist is thinking of a miraculous star; it is futile to look for a natural explanation, cf. Nb 24:17. The appearance of a star is recorded also at the birth of other great men.

f. The wealth and perfumes of Arabia (Jr 6:20; Ezk 27:22). The Fathers see in them symbols of the royalty (gold), divinity (incense), Passion (myrrh) of Jesus. The adoration of the Magi fulfils the prophecies of the homage paid by the nations to the God of Israel, cf. Nb 24:17; Ps 72:10–15; Is 49:23; 60:5seq., which were accepted as messianic. This recognition of the Messiah by the gentiles stands in contrast to his rejection by the Jews in the person of Herod.

g. Israel, therefore, the 'son' of the prophet's text, prefigured the Messiah.

h. There is an earlier parallel to this story told about Moses in rabbinic literature: after the news of the birth of the child is received, either from visions or from magicians, the Pharaoh has all the new-born male children killed.

i. In its original setting this text means that Rachel, their ancestress, weeps for the people of Ephraim, Manasseh and Benjamin, massacred or deported by the Assyrians. Matthew's application was perhaps suggested to him by a tradition which localised Rachel's tomb in the neighbourhood of Bethlehem (Gn 35:19seq.).

Jr 31:15

A voice is heard in Ramah, 18
lamenting and weeping bitterly:
it is Rachel weeping for her children, refusing to be comforted
because they are no more.

From Egypt to Nazareth

Ex 4:19–20

After Herod's death, suddenly the angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph 19 in Egypt •and said, 'Get up, take the child and his mother with you and go back to 20 the land of Israel, for those who wanted to kill the child are dead.' •So Joseph got 21 up and, taking the child and his mother with him, went back to the land of Israel.
But when he learnt that Archelaus[j] had succeeded his father Herod as ruler of 22 Judaea he was afraid to go there, and being warned in a dream he withdrew to the region of Galilee.[k] •There he settled in a town called Nazareth. In this way the 23 words spoken through the prophets were to be fulfilled:

He will be called a Nazarene.[l]

Then Jesus appeared: he came from Galilee to the Jordan to be baptised by John. 13
John tried to dissuade him, with the words, 'It is I who need baptism from you, and 14 yet you come to me!' •But Jesus replied, 'Leave it like this for the time being; it is 15

j. Son of Herod by Malthace (like Herod Antipas); ethnarch of Judaea from 4 BC to AD 6.

k. Territory of Herod Antipas, see Lk 3:1c.

l. Nazoraios: this is the form used by Mt, Jn and Ac (translated 'Nazarene' throughout this version). Nazarenos ('of Nazareth' in this version) is used by Mk. Lk uses both forms. These two synonyms were current transcriptions of an Aramaic adjective (nasraya) itself derived from the name of the town 'Nazareth' (Nasrat). Applied to Jesus, whose origin it indicated (26:69.71), and later to his followers (Ac 24:5), the term became common in the semitic world for the disciples of Jesus; the name 'Christian' (Ac 11:26) prevailed in the Graeco-Roman world. • It is not clear which prophecies Mt alludes to; possibly to the nazir of Jg 13:5,7.

3 a. lit. 'in those days'. Stereotyped expression, merely a formula of transition.

b. A desolate hilly region stretching from the central ridge of Palestine to the Jordan Valley and the Red Sea.

c. Metanoia or change of heart means a renunciation of sin, repentance. This regret for past conduct is normally accompanied by a 'conversion' by which a person turns back to God and enters upon a new life. The words used for these two complementary aspects of the same movement of heart are often the same, see Ac 2:38x; 3:19n. Repentance and conversion are the necessary condition for receiving the salvation which the kingdom of God brings. John the Baptist's call to repentance, cf. Ac 13:24; 19:4, will be taken up by Jesus, Mt 4:17 and par.; Lk 5:32; 13:3,5, by his disciples, Mk 6:12; Lk 24:47, and by Paul, Ac 20:21; 26:20.

d. Instead of 'kingdom of God', see 4:17f. The phrase is proper to Mt and reflects the Jewish scruple which substituted metaphor for the divine name.

e. The rite of immersion, symbolic of purification or of renewal, was familiar to ancient religions and to Judaism (baptism of proselytes, Essene purifications). John's baptism, though suggested by these practices, is distinct from them for three main reasons: it is directed to moral, not ritual, purification (3:2,6,8,11; Lk 3:10–14); it takes place once only and for this reason appears as a ceremony of initiation; it has an eschatological value in so far as it enrols its recipients among the number of those who professedly and actively prepare themselves for the imminent coming of the Messiah and who are, therefore, the messianic community in anticipation (3:2,11; Jn 1:19–34). Jesus alone, and not John, will baptise 'in the Holy Spirit' (3:7,10–12). John's baptism continued to be administered by the disciples of Jesus (Jn 4:1–2) until it was absorbed by the new rite which he had instituted (Mt 28:19; Ac 1:5f; Rm 6:4a).

f. A Jewish sect, rigid observers of the Law; but their undue attachment to the oral tradition of their teachers could lead to a conscientious but over-elaborate casuistry. Jesus' independent attitude with regard to the Law and his association with sinners inevitably provoked their opposition, and there are numerous echoes of this in the gospels, especially Mt; see 9:11 and par.; 12:2 and par., 14 and par., 24; 15:1 and par.; 16:1 and par., 6 and par.; 19:3 and par.; 21:45; 22:15 and par., 34,41; 23 and par.; Lk 5:21; 6:7; 15:2; 16:14seq.; 18:10seq.; Jn 7:32; 8:13; 9:13seq.; 11:47seq. Nevertheless with certain individuals among them Jesus had friendly relationships, Lk 7:36f; Jn 3:1. His disciples found in them allies against the Sadducees, Ac 23:6–10. It is impossible to deny their zeal, cf. Rm 10:2, or even their uprightness, Ac 5:34seq. Paul himself is proud of his former life as a Pharisee, Ac 23:6; 26:5; Ph 3:5.

g. In opposition to the outlook of the Pharisees, these rejected all tradition not contained in the written Law, see Ac 23:8c. They came for the most part from the great priestly families. They were less devout than the Pharisees and more politically minded. They too came into conflict with Jesus, 16:1,6; 22:23seq., and his disciples, Ac 4:1a; 5:17.

h. The retribution of the Day of Yahweh (Am 5:18m), which was to inaugurate the messianic era.

i. In the OT fire, a purifying element more refined and efficacious than water, was already a symbol of God's supreme intervention in history and of his Spirit which comes to purify hearts, see Si 2:5; Is 1:25; Zc 13:9; Ml 3:2–3.

j. The fire of Gehenna which for ever goes on consuming what has defied purification (Jdt 16:17; Ps 21:9; Si 7:17; Is 66:24; Zp 1:18).

k. The Baptist's question shows that Jesus' baptism was problematical for the first Christians, because in it the superior is seen to submit himself to the inferior. Jesus' answer shows that it was necessary in order to fulfil God's saving justice, perhaps because by it the Messiah himself enters into the eschatological community, see 1:22j; 3:6e.

m. The spirit which hovered over the waters at the first creation (Gn 1:2) now appears at the beginning of the new creation. It anoints Jesus for his messianic mission (Ac 10:38) which it is to guide (Mt 4:1seq.; 12:18,28; Lk 4:14,18; 10:21). While in Mk the vision of the dove and the voice from heaven can be understood as an interior personal experience of Jesus, in Mt it must be understood as a public scene: the voice is addressed to the bystanders.

n. The immediate purpose of this sentence is to declare that Jesus is in truth the servant foretold by Isaiah, but the substitution of 'Son' for 'servant' (made possible by the double sense of the Greek word pais) underlines the relationship of Jesus with the Father which is that of anointed Son, see 4:3d. In Jewish literature a voice from heaven is a means of showing the God-given authority of a teacher.

4 a. Jesus is led into the desert to be put to the test here for forty days, as Israel was for forty years, Dt 8:2,4; see also Nb 14:34. There, as the quotations show, he undergoes three similar temptations: seeking nourishment apart from God, Dt 8:3; cf. Ex 16; testing God for the sake of self-indulgence, Dt 6:16; cf. Ex 17:1–7; denying God to follow false gods who serve the powers of this world, Dt 6:13; cf. Dt 6:10–15; Ex 23:23–33. As did Moses, Jesus fasts for forty days and nights, Dt 9:18; see Ex 34:28; Dt 9:9. As did Moses, he sees 'all the earth' from a high mountain, Dt 34:1–4. God helps him through his angels, v. 11, as he promised the upright, Ps 91:11–12, and, according to Mk 1:13, protects him from wild beasts, as he does the upright, Ps 91:13, and Israel, Dt 8:15. By means of these biblical allusions Jesus is seen as the new Moses (see already 2:16g, 20 and Ex 4:19), who leads the new Exodus, cf. Heb 3:1–4:11; that is the Messiah, as the devil here hints ('if you are the Son of God . . .'), who opens the true way of salvation, not of self-reliance and ease but of obedience to God and self-denial. But in spite of the biblical manner of presentation the episode can have a historical background. Even though free from sin, Jesus can have known external temptations, see 16:23. It was necessary that he should be put to the test in order to become our leader, see 26:36–46 and par; Heb 2:10,17–18; 4:15; 5:2,7–9. He had to give up the thought of a glorious, political role as Messiah in favour of a spiritual role in total obedience to God, see Heb 12:2.

b. The Holy Spirit, 'breath' and creative energy of God, who guided the prophets, Is 11:2c, will guide Jesus himself in the fulfilment of his mission, see 3:16n; Lk 4:1b, as he will later guide the beginning and development of the Church, Ac 1:8j.

c. This name, which means Accuser, Calumniator, since his task is to put human beings in the wrong, sometimes translates the Hebr. satan (Adversary), Jb 1:6g; see Ws 2:24t. The bearer of this name is held responsible for everything which cuts across the work of God and of Christ, 13:39seq.; Jn 8:44; 13:2; Ac 10:38; Ep 6:11; 1 Jn 3:8. His defeat will be the sign of the final victory of God, 25:41; Heb 2:14; Rv 12:9,12; 20:2,10.

The devil then took him to the holy city and set him on the parapet of the Temple. 5
'If you are Son of God,' he said, 'throw yourself down; for scripture says: 6

Ps 91:10–12 He has given his angels orders about you,
and they will carry you in their arms

Jesus said to him, 'Scripture also says: 7

3 How blessed [c] are the poor in spirit: [d]
the kingdom of Heaven is theirs.

d. The biblical title 'Son of God' does not necessarily mean natural sonship but may imply a sonship which is merely adoptive, i.e. which as a result of God's deliberate choice sets up a very intimate relationship between God and his creature. In this sense the title is given to angels (Jb 1:6), to the chosen people (Ex 4:22; Ws 18:13), to individual Israelites (Dt 14:1; Ho 2:1; cf. Mt 5:9,45), to their leaders (Ps 2:7). Where, therefore, it is attributed to the royal Messiah (1 Ch 17:13; Ps 2:7; 89:26) it does not necessarily imply that he is more than human; nor need we suppose that it has any deeper significance when used by Satan (4:3,6) or by the possessed (Mk 3:11; 5:7–8; Lk 4:41), still less when used by the centurion (Mk 15:39; cf. Lk 23:47). By itself the sentence at the baptism (3:17) and at the transfiguration (17:5) suggests no more than the divine predilection for the Messiah-servant, and in all probability the high priest's question (26:63) concerns messiahship only. Nevertheless the title 'Son of God' can bear a further, more profound meaning of sonship. Jesus clearly insinuated this meaning when he spoke of himself as 'the Son' (21:37), ranked above the angels (24:36), having God for his 'Father' in a way others had not (Jn 20:17, and compare 'my Father' in Mt 7:21), enjoying with the Father an altogether singular relationship of knowledge and love (Mt 11:27). These assertions coupled with others that speak of the Messiah's divine rank (22:42–46), of the heavenly origin of the 'Son of man' (8:20h), assertions finally confirmed by the triumph of the resurrection, have endowed the expression 'Son of God' with that strictly divine significance which will later be found, e.g. in Paul (Rm 9:5d). During the lifetime of Jesus, it is true, his disciples had no clear conception of his divinity—the texts of 14:33 and 16:16 which add the title 'Son of God' to the more primitive text of Mk reflect, in all probability, a later stage in the faith's development. The faith that they acquired by the help of the Holy Spirit after Pentecost nevertheless rests on the historical words of the Master, who expressed his consciousness of being the unique Son of the Father.

e. nazara. A very rare form attested by excellent authorities, B. Z. Origen k, see Lk 4:16; the great majority of witnesses fall back on the common form 'Nazareth'.

f. The sovereignty of God over the chosen people, and through them over the world, is at the heart of Jesus' preaching as it was of the theocratic ideal of the OT. It implies a kingdom of 'saints' where God will be truly King because they will acknowledge his royal rights by knowing and loving him. This sovereignty, jeopardised by rebellious sin, is to be reasserted by an act of supreme intervention on the part of God and of his Messiah (Dn 2:28h). This is the intervention which Jesus, following John the Baptist (3:2), declares imminent (4:17,23; Lk 4:43). It is to take the form not, as was commonly expected, of a successful nationalist rising (Mk 11:10; Lk 19:11; Ac 1:6) but of a purely spiritual movement (Mk 1:34m; Jn 18:36). The redemptive work of Jesus as 'Son of man' (8:20h) and as 'servant' (8:17f; 20:28g; 26:28i) sets human beings free from Satan's rule which opposes God's (4:8; 8:29k; 12:25–26). Before it achieves its final eschatological realisation when the elect will be with the Father in the joy of the heavenly banquet (8:11c; 13:43; 26:29), the kingdom makes an unimpressive entrance (13:31–33). Its modest beginning is mysterious (13:11) and arouses opposition (13:24–30), it has come unnoticed (12:28; Lk 17:20–21); the development of the kingdom on earth is slow (Mk 4:26–29) and is effected through the community founded by Jesus (Mt 16:18g). By the judgement of God that falls on Jerusalem it is established with power as the kingdom of Christ (16:28; Lk 21:31) and is preached throughout the world by apostolic missionaries (Mt 10:7; 24:14; Ac 1:3d). When the time comes for the final Judgement (13:37–43,47–50; 25:31–46) the return of Christ in glory (16:27; 25:31) will be the final act that establishes the kingdom which Christ will then present to the Father (1 Co 15:24). Until that time the kingdom appears as a free gift of God (20:1–16; 22:9–10; Lk 12:32) accepted by the humble (Mt 5:3; 18:3–4; 19:14,23–24) and the generous (13:44–46; 19:12; Mk 9:47; Lk 9:62; 18:29seq.), refused by the proud and selfish (Mt 21:31–32,43; 22:2–8; 23:13). There is no entering it without the wedding garment which is the new life (22:11–13; Jn 3:3,5) and not everyone is admitted (Mt 8:12; 1 Co 6:9–10; Ga 5:21). One must stay awake so as to be ready when it comes unexpectedly (25:1–13). On Matthew's treatment of the kingdom as the guiding idea of his arrangement, see p. 1606.

g. Miraculous cures are the distinctive sign that the messianic age has dawned, see 10:1,7seq.; 11:4seq.

h. The word is not used here in a precise sense and in fact means Galilee with its surrounding districts, cf. Mk 1:28.

i. The Decapolis was a loose federation of ten free towns with their surrounding territories, scattered for the most part on the east side of Jordan and far enough north-east to include Damascus.

5 a. The new spirit of the kingdom of God, 4:17f, is explained in an inaugural sermon absent from Mk. Lk has a different inaugural sermon, 6:20–49, which does not contain the elements concerning Jewish laws and practices, Mt 5:17–6:18, which would be of less interest to his readers. Mt has joined together sayings pronounced on various occasions in order to make a complete picture. In the resulting composite discourse five principal subjects are handled: 1 The spirit in which the children of the kingdom should live, 5:3–48. 2 The way in which they should 'fulfil' the laws and practices of Judaism, 6:1–18. 3 Detachment from wealth, 6:19–34. 4 Attitudes to the neighbour, 7:1–12. 5 Entry to the kingdom by means of a firm decision expressed in action, 7:13–27.

b. One of the hills near Capernaum.

c. The OT employed formulas of congratulation like these occasionally in relation to piety, wisdom, prosperity, Ps 1:1–2; 33:12; 127:5–6; Pr 3:3; Si 31:8. In the spirit of the prophets Jesus here recalls that the poor, too, have a share in these blessings. The first three beatitudes, 5:3–5; Lk 6:20–21, declare that people normally considered wretched and unfortunate are fortunate, since they are fit to receive the blessing of the kingdom. The subsequent beatitudes are concerned more directly with moral attitudes. There are other gospel beatitudes in. 11:6; 13:16; 24:46; Lk 11:27–28. See also Lk 1:45; Rv 1:3; 14:13.

d. The word 'poor' is used with the moral connotations already found in Zephaniah, see Zp 2:3d, made explicit by 'in spirit', which is lacking in Lk. Defenceless and oppressed, the 'poor' or the 'lowly' are open to the kingdom, and such is the theme of Mt's beatitudes, cf. Lk 4:18; 7:22 = Mt 11:5; Lk 14:13; Jm 2:5. 'Poverty' goes hand in hand with 'spiritual childhood' required for entrance into the kingdom, 18:1f = Mk 9:33seq.; cf. Mt 11:25seq., and par.; 19:13seq., and par.; Lk 9:46seq.—the mystery revealed to 'little ones', nepioi, cf. Lk 12:32; 1 Co 1:26seq. They are the 'poor', ptochoi, the 'lowly', tapeinoi (18:4; 23:12; Lk 1:48,52; 14:11; 18:14) and both are the 'last' as opposed to the 'first' (Mk 9:35), the 'little ones' as opposed to the 'great' (Lk 9:48; see Mt 19:30 and par.; 20:26 and par.; Lk 17:10). Although the formula of 5:3 stresses the spirit of poverty for the rich as for the poor, Jesus usually has in mind actual poverty, especially for his disciples (6:19seq.; cf. 4:18seq., and par.; 6:25 and par.; Lk 12:33seq.; cf. Lk 5:1seq.) Mt 9:9 and par.; 19:21 and par., 27; cf. Mk 10:28 and par.; see also Ac 2:44seq.; 4:32seq. He himself sets the example of poverty (8:20 and par.; Lk 2:7) and of lowliness (Mt 11:29; 20:28 and par.; 21:5; Jn 13:12seq.; cf. 2 Co 8:9; Ph 2:7seq.). He identifies himself with the little ones and the wretched (25:45; cf. 18:5seq., and par.).

e. Or 'the afflicted'; the word is taken from the LXX version of Psalm 37 and the sense is 'unassuming, undemanding'. v. 4 is possibly only a gloss on v. 3; its omission would reduce the number of 'beatitudes' to 7. see 6:9d.

f. The disciples are the successors of the prophets, cf. 10:41; 13:17; 23:34.

g. lit. 'bushel measure'. In the ancient world a measure was a small receptacle on legs. So it is a question here of hiding the lamp under this receptacle, rather like the bed of Mk 4:21seq., not of extinguishing it by putting the lid on.

h. Jesus comes neither to destroy the Law, Dt 4:8, nor to consecrate it as untouchable, but by his teaching and way of acting to give it a new and definitive form, by which the goal of the Law is fully realised. see Mt 1:22j; Mk 1:15e. This is especially true of uprightness, v. 20, cf. 3:15; Lv 19:15; Rm 1:16i, of which vv. Mt 5:21–48 give several characteristic examples. The old command becomes interior and penetrates right to the secret desires, cf 12:34; 23:25–28. No detail of the Law may be omitted unless it has been brought to fulfilment in this way, vv. 18–19; cf. 13:52. It is less a question of making it lighter than of making it deeper, 11:28. Love, in which the old Law was already summed up, 7:12; 22:34–40 and par., becomes Jesus' new commandment, Jn 13:34, and fulfils the whole Law, Rm 13:8–10; Ga 5:14; cf. Col 3:14.

i. The amen which introduces certain sayings, Ps 41:13f; Rm 1:25p, underlines their authority: Mt 6:2,5,16; Jn 1:51.

j. The tradition was taught orally, especially in the synagogues.

k. The Aramaic word raqa, transliterated in Mt, translated here, means: 'empty-head', 'nitwit'.

l. Here the Great Sanhedrin which met in Jerusalem, as opposed to the minor courts (vv. 21–22) of the country districts.

m. To the first meaning ('worthless person') of the Greek word, Jewish usage added the much more contemptuous one of 'apostate'.

n. Marriage within the prohibited degrees. See 19:9b.

o. This seemingly well-known formula, see 2 Co 1:17; Jm 5:12, can be understood in various ways: 1 Truthfulness: if something is the case, say it is; if it is not, say it is not. 2 Sincerity: let yes (or no) on the lips correspond to yes (or no) in the heart. 3 Solemnity: the repetition of 'yes' or 'no' as a solemn affirmation or negation so strong that it avoids an oath which invokes the divinity.

p. The examples of vv. 39–40 show that it is harm done to oneself which is at issue. Resistance by way of vengeance (the Jewish law of retribution, v. 38; cf. Ex 21:25; Ps 5:10c) is excluded. The gospel does not forbid reasonable defence against unjust aggression, see Jn 18:22seq., still less opposition to evil in the world.

q. As a surety, cf. Ex 22:25seq.; Dt 24:12seq. It is clear that the sentence is deliberately hyperbolic, cf. 19:24.

r. The second part of this commandment is not found in the law. It is the brusque expression of a language (the original Aramaic) which has few half-tones and is equivalent to, 'There is no obligation to love one's enemy,' cf. Lk 14:26 with its parallel Mt 10:37. Incidentally Si 12:4–7 and the scrolls from Qumran (1 QS 1:10) show a detestation of sinners not far removed from hate, and perhaps Jesus was thinking of this.

s. add. 'do good to those who hate you'.

t. add. 'and for those who treat you badly', cf. Lk 6:27seq.

u. They were employed by the occupying power, and this earned them popular contempt, cf. 9:10.

Ps 127
‖Lk 12:22–31

25 'That is why I am telling you not to worry about your life and what you are to eat, nor about your body and what you are to wear. Surely life is more than food, 26 and the body more than clothing! ·Look at the birds in the sky. They do not sow or reap or gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not 27 worth much more than they are? ·Can any of you, however much you worry, add

29 the flowers growing in the fields; they never have to work or spin; ·yet I assure you that not even Solomon in all his royal robes was clothed like one of these. 1 K 10:1–29
30 Now if that is how God clothes the wild flowers growing in the field which are there today and thrown into the furnace tomorrow, will he not much more look 31 after you, you who have so little faith? ·So do not worry; do not say, "What are 32 we to eat? What are we to drink? What are we to wear?" ·It is the gentiles who set Is 51:1 their hearts on all these things. Your heavenly Father knows you need them all.
33 Set your hearts on his kingdom first, and on God's saving justice, and all these 34 other things will be given you as well. ·So do not worry about tomorrow: tomorrow Jm 4:13–14 will take care of itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own.'

5 Hypocrite! Take the log out of your own eye first, and then you will see clearly enough to take the splinter out of your brother's eye.

Do not profane sacred things

6 'Do not give dogs what is holy; [b] and do not throw your pearls in front of pigs, or Pr 23:9
Si 22:9–10 they may trample them and then turn on you and tear you to pieces.

6 a. lit. 'perform your uprightness' (var. 'perform almsgiving'), i.e. perform good works which make someone upright in the sight of God. For the Jews these works were principally: almsgiving (vv. 2–4), prayer (vv. 5–6), fasting (vv. 16–18).

b. This epithet suggests the false devotees of an artificial and showy piety; in the gospels it applies especially to the Pharisees, cf. 15:7; 22:18; 23:13–15.

c. By his example, 14:23, as well as his introduction Jesus taught his disciples the duty and manner of praying. Prayer should be humble before God, Lk 18:10–14, and before people, Mt 6:5–6; Mk 12:40 and par. It should come from the heart rather than the lips, 6:7, trusting in God's goodness, 6:8; 7:7–11 and par., and insistent to the point of perseverance, Lk 11:5,8; 18:1–8. Prayer is heard if it is made with faith, 21:22 and par., in the name of Jesus, 18:19–20; Jn 14:13–14; 15:7,16; 16:23–27, asks what is good, 7:11, for instance the Holy Spirit, Lk 11:13, forgiveness, Mk 11:25, the good of persecutors, 5:44 and par.; cf. Lk 23:34, and above all the coming of the kingdom of God and deliverance at the time of the final crisis, 24:20 and par.; 26:41 and par.; Lk 21:36; see Lk 22:31–32; this is the substance of the model prayer taught by Jesus himself, Mt 6:9–15 and par.

d. The Lord's Prayer in its Matthaean form has 7 petitions. The number is a favourite of Matthew's: 2 × 7 generations in the Genealogy (1:17), 7 beatitudes (5:4e), 7 parables (13:3b), forgiveness not 7 but 77 times (18:22), 7 diatribes against the Pharisees (23:13h), 7 sections into which the Gospel is divided (see pp. 1605–6).

e. The Greek word is obscure; this traditional rendering is a probable one. Other possibilities: 'necessary for subsistence' or 'for tomorrow'. Whatever the exact translation, the sense is that we must ask God for the sustenance we need in this life but for no more—not for wealth or luxury.

f. Or 'from evil'. • Add. 'For yours is the kingdom and the power and the glory for ever. Amen' (a reading introduced into the text through liturgical influence).

g. According as the eye is clear or diseased it gives or refuses material light; to this light the spiritual light is compared; if this light is itself dimmed the blindness is much worse than physical.

7 a. Do not judge others, in order that you may not be judged by God. Similarly in the next verse, cf. Jm 4:12.

b. Consecrated meat from animals sacrificed in the Temple, see Ex 22:30; Lv 22:14. Similarly the precious teaching of the kingdom must not be set before those who, incapable of receiving it with profit, may even abuse it. The text does not detail who they are: hostile Jews or gentiles (cf. 15:26)?

Ps 6:8

'Therefore, everyone who listens to these words of mine and acts on them will be 24 like a sensible man who built his house on rock. •Rain came down, floods rose, 25 gales blew and hurled themselves against that house, and it did not fall: it was founded on rock. •But everyone who listens to these words of mine and does 26 not act on them will be like a stupid man who built his house on sand. •Rain 27 came down, floods rose, gales blew and struck that house, and it fell; and what a fall it had!'

III: THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS PROCLAIMED

A: NARRATIVE SECTION: TEN MIRACLES

‖Mk 1:40–45
‖Lk 5:12–16

Cure of a man with skin-disease

8 After he had come down from the mountain large crowds followed him. 1 Suddenly a man with a virulent skin-disease came up and bowed low in front 2 of him, saying, 'Lord, if you are willing, you can cleanse me.' •Jesus stretched out 3 his hand and touched him saying, 'I am willing. Be cleansed.' And his skin-disease

4 was cleansed at once.[a] •Then Jesus said to him, 'Mind you tell no one, but go and show yourself to the priest and make the offering prescribed by Moses, as evidence to them.' Mk 1:34m Lv 14:1–32

Cure of the centurion's servant

‖Lk 7:1–10 ‖Jn 4:46–53

5, 6 When he went into Capernaum a centurion came up and pleaded with him. •'Sir,' 7 he said, 'my servant is lying at home paralysed and in great pain.' •Jesus said to 8 him, 'I will come myself and cure him.' •The centurion replied, 'Sir, I am not worthy to have you under my roof; just give the word and my servant will be cured. Lk 5:8 Ps 33:9;107:20 9 For I am under authority myself and have soldiers under me; and I say to one man, "Go," and he goes; to another, "Come here," and he comes; to my servant,
10 "Do this," and he does it.' •When Jesus heard this he was astonished and said to those following him, 'In truth I tell you, in no one in Israel have I found faith[b] as 11 great as this. •And I tell you that many will come from east and west and sit down 12 with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob at the feast[c] in the kingdom of Heaven; •but the children of the kingdom[d] will be thrown out into the darkness outside, where 13 there will be weeping and grinding of teeth.'[e] •And to the centurion Jesus said, 'Go back, then; let this be done for you, as your faith demands.' And the servant was cured at that moment. Ba 3:33–35 ‖Lk 13:28–29 Rm 11:11 Jn 8:12b 13:42,50; 22:13;24:51; 25:30

Cure of Peter's mother-in-law

‖Mk 1:29–31 ‖Lk 4:38–39

14 And going into Peter's house Jesus found Peter's mother-in-law in bed and 15 feverish. •He touched her hand and the fever left her, and she got up and began to serve him. 9:25par. Mk 9:27 Ac 3:7

c. This maxim was well known in the ancient world, especially among the Jews, see Tb 4:15, but in a negative form: Do not to another what you would not have done to yourself. The positive form in which Jesus, and after him Christian literature, puts it, is considerably more demanding.

d. The doctrine of the two ways, good and bad, between which people must choose, is a theme old and widespread in Judaism, see Dt 30:15–20; Ps 1; Pr 4:18–19; 12:28; 15:24; Si 15:17; 33:14. It is expressed in a little treatise on morals which has come down to us via the Didache and its Latin translation the Doctrina Apostolorum. Its influence has been discerned in 5:14–18; 7:12–14; 19:16–26; 22:34–40 and Rm 12:16–21; 13:8–12.

e. var. 'the gate that leads to perdition is wide, and the road spacious.'

f. Lying teachers who charm the public by their show of piety while pursuing their own selfish ends, see 24:4seq., 24.

g. The Day of Judgement.

h. These always sought support for their teaching in the 'tradition' of the ancients. Add. 'and the Pharisees'.

8 a. By his miracles Jesus shows his power over nature (8:23–27; 14:22–33 and par.), especially over sickness (8:1–4,5–13,14–15; 9:1–8,20–22,27–31; 14:14,36; 15:30; 20:29–34 and par.; Mk 7:32–37; 8:22–26; Lk 14:1–6; 17:11–19; Jn 5:1–16; 9:1–41), over death (Mt 9:23–26 and par.; Lk 7:11–17; Jn 11:1–44), over devils (Mt 8:29k). Jesus' miracles are not elaborate: in this they differ from the fantastic prodigies reported of the hellenistic world and from those attributed to the Jewish rabbis, but they are different most notably by reason of the spiritual and symbolic significance that Jesus attaches to them. They declare the judgements of the messianic age (21:18–22 and par.) as also the privileges it brings (11:5d; 14:13–21; 15:32–39 and par.; Lk 5:4–11; Jn 2:1–11; 21:4–14); they are the first signs of the triumph of the Spirit over Satan's empire (8:29k) and over all the powers of evil, whether sin (9:2b) or disease (8:17f). The motive is sometimes compassion (20:34; Mk 1:41; Lk 7:13) but they are directed principally to the rousing and strengthening of faith (Mt 8:10b; Jn 2:11f). Thus it is only with great deliberation that Jesus works any miracles at all, demanding secrecy for any he does agree to work (Mk 1:34m), and leaving the arousing of faith to be done by his Father in heaven and not by 'flesh and blood' (Mt 16:17). When he sent his apostles to preach the kingdom he gave them his own healing power (10:1,8 and par.) and for this reason Matthew recounts before the Missionary Discourse (ch. 10) a series of ten miracles (ch. 8–9) as signs accrediting the missionary (Mk 16:17seq.; Ac 2:22; see 1:8j).

b. The faith that Jesus asks for from the outset of his public life (Mk 1:15) and throughout his subsequent career, is that act of trust and of self-abandonment by which people no longer rely on their own strength and policies but commit themselves to the power and guiding word of him in whom they believe (21:25p,32; Lk 1:20,45). Jesus asks for this faith especially when he works his miracles (8:13; 9:2 and par., 22 and par., 28–29; 15–28; Mk 5:36 and par.; 10:52 and par.; Lk 17:19) which are not merely acts of mercy but also signs attesting his mission and witnessing to the kingdom (Mt 8:3a, see Jn 2:11f); hence he cannot work miracles unless he finds the faith without which the miracles lose their true significance (Mt 12:38–39; 13:58 and par.; 16:1–4). Since faith demands the sacrifice of the whole person, mind and heart, it is not an easy act of humility to perform; many decline it, particularly in Israel (8:10 and par.; 15:28; 27:42 and par.; Lk 18:8), or are half-hearted (Mk 9:24; Lk 8:13). Even the disciples are slow to believe (8:26 and par.; 14:31; 16:8; 17:20 and par.) and are still reluctant after the resurrection (28:17; Mk 16:11–14; Lk 24:11,25,41). When faith is strong it works wonders (17:20 and par.; 21:21 and par.; Mk 16:17) and its appeal is never refused (21:22 and par.; Mk 9:23) especially when it asks for forgiveness of sin (9:2 and par.; Lk 7:50) and for that salvation of which it is the necessary condition (Mk 16:16; Lk 8:12, see Ac 3:16*l*).

c. Basing their idea on Is 25:6, the Jews often described the joyous messianic era as a banquet (see Mt 22:2–14; 26:29 and par.; Lk 14:15; Rv 3:20; 19:9).

d. That is to say the Jews, natural heirs of the promises. Their place will be taken by the gentiles, who are more worthy.

e. Scriptural image for the dismay and frustration of the wicked at seeing the virtuous rewarded, see Jb 16:9; Ps 37:12; 112:10. In Mt it is used as a description of damnation.

A number of cures

That evening they brought him many who were possessed by devils. He drove out 16 the spirits with a command and cured all who were sick. ·This was to fulfil what was 17 spoken by the prophet Isaiah:

Is 53:4 Jn 1:29
He himself bore our sicknesses away and carried our diseases.[f]

‖Lk 9:57–60
Unconditional commitment

When Jesus saw the crowd all about him he gave orders to leave for the other side.[g] 18
One of the scribes then came up and said to him, 'Master, I will follow you 19
Ps 84:3 wherever you go.' ·Jesus said, 'Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, 20
2 Co 8:9 but the Son of man[h] has nowhere to lay his head.'
Gn 50:5 Tb 4:3 ·4:20,22; 10:37par. Another man, one of the disciples, said to him, 'Lord, let me go and bury my 21

The calming of the storm

Jon 1:4seq. Then he got into the boat followed by his disciples. ·Suddenly a storm broke over 23, 24 the lake, so violent that the boat was being swamped by the waves. But he was asleep. ·So they went to him and woke him saying, 'Save us, Lord, we are lost!' 25 6:30;8:10b And he said to them, 'Why are you so frightened, you who have so little faith?' 26 Ps 65:7+ And then he stood up and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. ·They were astounded and said, 'Whatever kind of man is this, that even the 27 winds and the sea obey him?'

‖Mk 5:1–20 ‖Lk 8:26–29
The demoniacs of Gadara

When he reached the territory of the Gadarenes[i] on the other side, two demoniacs 28 came[j] towards him out of the tombs—they were so dangerously violent that nobody could use that path. ·Suddenly they shouted, 'What do you want with us, 29 4:3d Son of God? Have you come here to torture us before the time?'[k] ·Now some 30 distance away there was a large herd of pigs feeding, ·and the devils pleaded with 31 Jesus, 'If you drive us out, send us into the herd of pigs.' ·And he said to them, 'Go 32 then,' and they came out and made for the pigs; and at that the whole herd charged down the cliff into the lake and perished in the water. ·The herdsmen ran off and 33 made for the city, where they told the whole story, including what had happened to the demoniacs. ·Suddenly the whole city set out to meet Jesus; and as soon as they 34 saw him they implored him to leave their neighbourhood.

‖Mk 2:1–12 ‖Lk 5:17–26
Cure of a paralytic

9 He got back in the boat, crossed the water and came to his home town.[a] ·And 1, 2 suddenly some people brought him a paralytic stretched out on a bed. Seeing 8:10b; ·Lk 7:48 their faith, Jesus said to the paralytic, 'Take comfort, my child, your sins are Jn 10:33–36 forgiven.'[b] ·And now some scribes said to themselves, 'This man is being blas- 3 12:25 Lk 6:8 phemous.' ·Knowing what was in their minds Jesus said, 'Why do you have such 4
Jn 1:48dd wicked thoughts in your hearts? ·Now, which of these is easier: to say, "Your sins 5 Dn 7:14 Jn 5:27 are forgiven," or to say, "Get up and walk"? ·But to prove to you that the Son of 6 Jn 5:8 man has authority on earth to forgive sins,'—then he said to the paralytic—'get up, pick up your bed and go off home.' ·And the man got up and went home. ·A 7, 8 8:3a feeling of awe came over the crowd when they saw this, and they praised God for having given such authority to human beings.[c]

The call of Matthew

As Jesus was walking on from there he saw a man named Matthew[d] sitting at the 9 4:19 tax office, and he said to him, 'Follow me.' And he got up and followed him.

‖Mk 2:15–17 ‖Lk 5:29–32
Eating with sinners

Lk 15:1–2; 19:1–10 Now while he was at table in the house it happened that a number of tax collectors 10

11 and sinners[e] came to sit at the table with Jesus and his disciples. ·When the Pharisees saw this, they said to his disciples, 'Why does your master eat with tax 3:7+ 12 collectors and sinners?' ·When he heard this he replied, 'It is not the healthy who 1 Tm 1:15
13 need the doctor, but the sick. ·Go and learn the meaning of the words: Mercy is =12:7 what pleases me, not sacrifice.[f] And indeed I came to call not the upright, but Ho 6:6 sinners.' Lk 19:10

A discussion on fasting

‖Mk 2:18–22
‖Lk 5:33–39

14 Then John's[g] disciples came to him and said, 'Why is it that we and the Pharisees 15 fast, but your disciples do not?' ·Jesus replied, 'Surely the bridegroom's attendants Jn 3:29p cannot mourn as long as the bridegroom[h] is still with them? But the time will come 16 when the bridegroom is taken away[i] from them, and then they will fast. ·No one puts a piece of unshrunken cloth onto an old cloak, because the patch pulls away 2 Co 5:17 him.

20 Then suddenly from behind him came a woman, who had been suffering from a 21 haemorrhage for twelve years, and she touched the fringe of his cloak, ·for she was 23:5b
22 thinking, 'If only I can touch his cloak I shall be saved.' ·Jesus turned round and 14:36
Ac 19:12

f. As described by Is, the servant 'took' our sorrows on himself in the sense that his own suffering was expiatory. Matthew takes the phrase to mean that Jesus 'took away' these sorrows by his healing miracles. This interpretation, at first sight forced, is in fact profoundly theological. It was to take on himself the expiation of sin that Jesus, the 'servant', came on earth; that is why he could take away the bodily ills which are the consequence and the penalty of sin.

g. The east bank of Lake Tiberias.

h. With the exception of Ac 7:56; Rv 1:13; 14:14 this expression appears in the NT only in the gospels. There is no doubt that Jesus used it as his favourite self-designation. The Aramaic phrase which lies behind it originally meant 'man', compare Ezk 2:1b, but it seems that at the time of Jesus it was frequently used by a speaker to indicate himself, especially to soften a statement which might otherwise seem extravagant or shocking. But in Dn 7:13k the expression is used of a glorious figure who was to receive from God the eschatological kingdom, and this usage occurs also later in the apocalyptic Book of Enoch. The evangelists seem to have understood the expression as a title in this sense, 26:64u.

i. The district got its name from the town of Gadara to the southeast of the lake. The var. 'Gerasenes' (Mk, Lk and Vulg. Mt) derives from the name of another town (Gerasa or possibly Chorsia); the var. 'Gergesenes' is the result of a conjecture of Origen, made because both Gadara and Gerasa are several miles from the lake.

j. In accounts of miracles and cures, the doubling of persons appears to be characteristic of Mt's style: two demoniacs here, where the parallels in Mk and Lk have one; two blind men at Jericho, 20:30; two blind men at Bethsaida, in an incident which appears to be a doublet, 9:27.

k. By his power over demons Jesus destroys the empire of Satan, 12:28 and par.; Lk 10:17–19; cf. Lk 4:6; Jn 12:31i, and inaugurates the messianic kingdom characterised by the Holy Spirit, Is 11:2c; Jl 3:1seq. Demonic possession, 12:43–45,43n, is often accompanied by illness, further evidence of Satan's power, 9:2b, Lk 13:16. Thus the exorcisms of the gospels, which as here often occur as pure exorcisms, see 15:21–28 and par.; Mk 1:23–28 and par.; Lk 8:2, appear frequently also as cures, Mt 9:32–34; 12:22–24 and par.; 17:14–18; Lk 13:10,17. Even if Israel refuses to recognise Jesus, 12:24–32, demons have no doubt about him, here and Mk 1:24 and par.; 3:11 and par.; Lk 4:41; Ac 16:17; 19:15. This power of exorcism is communicated by Jesus to his disciples at the same time as the power of miraculous cures, 10:1,8 and par., which is linked to it, 8:3a; 4:24; 8:16 and par.; Lk 13:32.

9 a. Capernaum, see 4:13.

b. Jesus envisages primarily spiritual healing and effects physical healing only with this in view. Nevertheless his words in this verse contain a promise of physical healing since sickness was regarded as the result of a sin committed either by the sufferer or by his parents, see 8:29k; Jn 5:14; 9:2.

c. The power to forgive sins is entrusted to the community, see 18:18, but the plural here may indicate that Matthew is thinking of the ministers who exercise this power.

d. Called Levi by Mk and Lk.

e. Those whose moral conduct or disreputable profession, see 5:46u, rendered them 'unclean' and socially outcast. They were particularly suspect for not observing the numerous culinary laws, whence the problems about eating together, Mk 7:3–4,14–23seq.; Ac 10:15e; 15:20t; Ga 2:12; see also Rm 14; 1 Co 8–9.

f. To the exact performance of the Law's external demands God prefers the inward quality of genuine compassion. It is a favourite theme of the prophets, Am 5:21n.

g. John the Baptist. Like the Pharisees, John's disciples used to observe fasts not prescribed by the Law in the hope that their devotion would hasten the coming of the Day of the Lord.

h. The bridegroom is Jesus. His companions cannot fast because, with his coming, the messianic age has dawned.

i. Jesus' death clearly foretold.

j. The old garment and the old wineskins stand for the elements in Judaism which are to pass away. The new cloth and the new wine represent the new spirit of the kingdom of God. The additional devotional practices of John's disciples and of the Pharisees, intended to give new life to the old order, in fact are only leading to its downfall. Jesus declines either to add or to patch: his purpose is to produce something quite new—even the spirit of the Law is to be raised to a new plane.

k. The head of the synagogue; called Jairus in Mk and Lk.

8:10b saw her; and he said to her, 'Courage, my daughter, your faith has saved you.' And from that moment the woman was saved.
When Jesus reached the official's house and saw the flute-players, with the crowd 23
Jn 11:11–13 making a commotion, [l] he said, •'Get out of here; the little girl is not dead; she is 24 asleep.' And they ridiculed him. •But when the people had been turned out he 25 8:15+;8:3a went inside and took her by the hand; and she stood up. •And the news of this 26 spread all round the countryside.

20:29–34 Cure of two blind men

As Jesus went on his way two blind men followed him shouting, 'Take pity on us, 27 son of David.' [m] •And when Jesus reached the house the blind men came up with 28 8:10b him and he said to them, 'Do you believe I can do this?' They said, 'Lord, we do.'
Then he touched their eyes saying, 'According to your faith, let it be done to 29 you.' •And their sight returned. Then Jesus sternly warned them, 'Take care that 30 Mk 1:34m no one learns about this.' •But when they had gone away, they talked about him all 31 over the countryside.

=12:22–24 ‖Lk 11:14–15 Cure of a dumb demoniac

They had only just left when suddenly a man was brought to him, a dumb 32 8:29k demoniac. •And when the devil was driven out, the dumb man spoke and the 33 people were amazed and said, 'Nothing like this has ever been seen in Israel.'
10:25 But the Pharisees said, 'It is through the prince of devils that he drives out devils.' [n] 34

The distress of the crowds

=4:23 Jesus made a tour through all the towns and villages, teaching in their synagogues, 35 Mk 1:1a proclaiming the good news of the kingdom and curing all kinds of disease and all kinds of illness.
Mk 6:34 And when he saw the crowds he felt sorry for them because they were harassed 36 and dejected, like sheep without a shepherd. [o] •Then he said to his disciples, 'The 37 ‖Lk 10:2 Jn 4:35–38 harvest is rich but the labourers are few, so ask the Lord of the harvest to send out labourers to his harvest.'

B: INSTRUCTION FOR APOSTLES

The mission of the Twelve

‖Mk 3:14–15; 6:7 ‖Lk 9:1 •8:29k 10 He summoned his twelve disciples [a] and gave them authority over unclean 1 spirits with power to drive them out and to cure all kinds of disease and all

Alphaeus, and Thaddaeus; •Simon the Zealot and Judas Iscariot, who was also his 4 6:26

l. The loud wailing of the oriental mourner.

m. Messianic title, 2 S 7:1a; cf. Lk 1:32; Ac 2:30; Rm 1:3. It was familiar as such to the Jews, Mk 12:35; Jn 7:42, and Matthew in particular emphasises its application to Jesus (Mt 1:1; 12:23; 15:22; 20:30 and par.; 21:9,15) who was hesitant towards the title because it involved a purely human notion of the Messiah, 22:41–46; see also Mk 1:34m. He preferred the more obscure expression 'Son of man', 8:20h.

n. Verse omitted by representatives of the Western Text.

o. Familiar biblical metaphor: Nb 27:17; 1 K 22:17; Jdt 11:19; Ezk 34:5.

10 a. Matthew supposes that the reader already knows about the choice of the Twelve; Mark and Luke mention it expressly and distinguish the choice from the mission.

b. The list of the twelve apostles is found in four versions, in Mk, Lk, Mt and Ac. It is normally three groups of four names each, and the groups are headed respectively by Peter, Philip and James the son of Alphaeus. Inside each group, the order varies. In the first group, of the disciples closest to Jesus, Mt and Lk have the order: Peter, Andrew, James, John; but in Mk and Ac, Andrew is given the fourth place as Peter, James and John are seen as equally the intimates of the Lord, see Mk 5:37d. Still later, in Ac, James son of Zebedee is put after his younger brother John who has become more important, see Ac 1:13; 12:2, and already Lk 8:51f; 9:28. In the second group, which seems to have special links with non-Jews, Matthew sinks to last place in the lists of Mt and Ac; only in Mt is he called 'the tax collector'. In the third group, those who are the most tenacious of Jewish customs, if Thaddaeus (var. Lebbaeus) in Mt and Mk is the same as Jude (son) of James in Lk and Ac, he moves down in the latter texts from second to third place. Simon the Zealot of Lk and Ac is simply the Gk translation of the Aramaic Simon qan'ana of Mt and Mk. Judas Iscariot the traitor figures always in last place. His name is often interpreted as 'man of Kerioth', cf. Jos 15:25, but it could also derive from the Aramaic sheqarya, 'liar, hypocrite'.

c. Hebraism common in the Bible: the people of Israel. As heirs to the Choice and the Promise, the Jews are to be the first to receive the offer of the Messiah's saving work; but see Ac 8:5; 13:5e.

d. The oriental greeting is a wish of peace. In v. 13 this wish is treated in concrete fashion as an entity which, if it fails to secure its effect, nevertheless remains in being and returns to its original owner.

e. The phrase is Jewish in origin. The dust of any country other than the Holy Land is reckoned unclean; in this passage the impurity attaches to any place that refuses the Word.

f. The instructions of vv. 17–39 clearly suppose a horizon wider than that of this first mission of the Twelve: they must originate at a later date (note their situation in Mk and Lk). Matthew puts them here to complete his missionary's handbook.

g. The small provincial sanhedrins and also the Great Sanhedrin of Jerusalem; cf. 5:21–22.

h. om. 'and if . . . another'.

i. The coming foretold here is not concerned with the world at large but with Israel: it took place at the moment •when God 'visited' his now unfaithful people and brought the OT era to an end by the destruction of Jerusalem and of its Temple in c. AD 70, see 24:1a.

j. Jesus' instruction to the crowds was not successful and he turned to instructing his disciples in private. Later on it will be the duty of his disciples to deliver the message in its entirety and without fear. These same words are found in Lk but with an entirely different meaning: the disciples are not to imitate Pharisaic hypocrisy; whatever they may try to hide will certainly come to light eventually; they must therefore speak openly.

‖Lk 12:8–9 Rv 3:5 'So if anyone declares himself for me in the presence of human beings, I will 32 declare myself for him in the presence of my Father in heaven. [k] •But the one who 33 ‖Mk 8:38 ‖Lk 9:26 2 Tm 2:12 disowns me in the presence of human beings, I will disown in the presence of my Father in heaven.

‖Lk 12:51–53 Jesus, the cause of dissension [l]

Lk 2:34;22:36 •Mi 7:6 come to bring, but a sword. •For I have come to set son against father, daughter 35 against mother, daughter-in-law against mother-in-law; •a person's enemies will be 36 the members of his own household.

Renouncing self to follow Jesus

Dt 33:9 ‖Lk 14:26–27 16:24–25 ‖Mk 8:34–35 ‖Lk 9:23–24; 17:33 Jn 12:25 'No one who prefers father or mother to me is worthy of me. No one who prefers 37 son or daughter to me is worthy of me. •Anyone who does not take his cross and 38 follow in my footsteps is not worthy of me. •Anyone who finds his life will lose it; 39 anyone who loses his life for my sake will find it. [m]

Conclusion of the Instruction

=18:5 ‖Mk 9:37 ‖Lk 9:48;‖10:16 ‖Jn 12:44–45; 13:20 'Anyone who welcomes you welcomes me; and anyone who welcomes me wel- 40

IV: THE MYSTERY OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

A: NARRATIVE SECTION

11 When Jesus had finished instructing his twelve disciples he moved on from 1 there to teach and preach in their towns. [a]

‖Lk 7:18–28 The Baptist's question. Jesus commends him

Now John had heard in prison what Christ was doing and he sent his disciples [b] to 2
Dt 18:15 Jn 1:21t ask him, •'Are you the one who is to come, or are we to expect someone else?' [c] 3 8:3a Is 26:19;29:18 seq.;35:5seq.; 61:1 13:57 Jn 6:61 Jesus answered, 'Go back and tell John what you hear and see; •the blind see 4, 5 again, and the lame walk, those suffering from virulent skin-diseases are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised to life and the good news is proclaimed to the poor; [d] •and blessed is anyone who does not find me a cause of falling.' 6

3:1,5–6 As the men were leaving, Jesus began to talk to the people about John, 'What 7 did you go out into the desert to see? A reed swaying in the breeze? No? •Then 8 what did you go out to see? A man wearing fine clothes? Look, those who wear fine clothes are to be found in palaces. •Then what did you go out for? To see a 9 16:14c Lk 1:76–79 prophet? Yes, I tell you, and much more than a prophet: •he is the one of whom 10 scripture says:

Ml 3:1 Ac 13:24–25

> Look, I am going to send my messenger in front of you > to prepare your way before you.

'In truth I tell you, of all the children born to women, there has never been 11 anyone greater than John the Baptist; yet the least in the kingdom of Heaven is ‖Lk 16:16 greater than he. [e] •Since John the Baptist came, up to this present time, the 12 kingdom of Heaven has been subjected to violence and the violent are taking it by 13 storm.[f] •Because it was towards John that all the prophecies of the prophets and of 14 the Law were leading; •and he, if you will believe me, is the Elijah who was to 17:11–13 Ml 3:23 15 return.[g] •Anyone who has ears should listen!

Jesus condemns his contemporaries Lk 7:31–35

16 'What comparison can I find for this generation? It is like children shouting to each other as they sit in the market place:

17 We played the pipes for you, and you wouldn't dance;
we sang dirges,
and you wouldn't be mourners.

18 'For John came, neither eating nor drinking, and they say, "He is possessed." 3:4 Lk 1:15
19 The Son of man came, eating and drinking, and they say, "Look, a glutton and a 8:20h drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners." Yet wisdom is justified by her 9:10–11 Jn 6:35k deeds.'[h]

Lament over the lake-towns ‖Lk 10:13–15

20 Then he began to reproach the towns in which most of his miracles had been 13:58 Jn 15:24;12:37 worked, because they refused to repent.

21 'Alas for you, Chorazin! Alas for you, Bethsaida! For if the miracles done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon,[i] they would have repented long ago in sackcloth Dn 9:3 Jon 3:6
22 and ashes. •Still, I tell you that it will be more bearable for Tyre and Sidon on 23 Judgement Day than for you. •And as for you, Capernaum, did you want to be raised as high as heaven? You shall be flung down to hell. For if the miracles done in Is 14:13,15
24 you had been done in Sodom, it would have been standing yet. •Still, I tell you that it will be more bearable for Sodom on Judgement Day than for you.' =10:15

The good news revealed to the simple. The Father and the Son ‖Lk 10:21–22

25 At that time Jesus exclaimed, 'I bless you, Father, Lord of heaven and of earth, for hiding these things[j] from the learned and the clever and revealing them to little 13:11 Jn 7:48–49
26, 27 children. •Yes, Father, for that is what it pleased you to do. •Everything has been 1 Co 1:26–29

k. At the Last Judgement, when the Son will hand over the elect to his Father, see 25:34.

l. Jesus is a 'sign that is rejected', Lk 2:34; his aim is not to provoke dissension, but this becomes inevitable as a result of the demands of the decision he provokes.

m. In Mt this dictum is given in a more archaic form than in Mk or Lk: 'find' covers the idea of 'winning', 'securing for oneself', cf. Gn 26:12; Pr 3:13; 21:21; Ho 12:9. See also 16:25*l*.

n. 'Prophet' and 'holy (or 'upright') person', see also 13:17 and 23:29, are a familiar biblical pair; here they serve to indicate the missionary and the ordinary Christian.

o. The apostles whom Jesus is sending on their mission, cf. 18:1–6,10,14 and Mk 9:41.

11 a. 'their', i.e. the Jews'.

b. var. 'two of his disciples'.

c. John has been expecting a Messiah who will be the agent of God's 'wrath' or retribution, 3:8,10,12.

d. By this allusion to the prophecies of Isaiah, Jesus shows John that his works do indeed inaugurate the messianic era, but by way of beneficent and saving miracles, not violence and retribution, cf. Lk 4:17–21.

e. Simply because he is a member of the kingdom, whereas John, as the Forerunner, remains at its gates. The sentence contrasts epochs rather than persons. There is no personal slight to John; it is simply that the epoch of the kingdom wholly transcends that which preceded it.

f. Various interpretations have been offered. The 'violence' may be: 1 The praiseworthy violence, the bitter self-sacrifice, of those who would take possession of the kingdom. 2 The misguided violence of those who would establish the kingdom by force (the Zealots). 3 The tyrannical violence of the powers of evil, or of their agents on earth, who seek to maintain their dominion in this world and to thwart the advance of the kingdom of God. 4 A possible translation 'the kingdom of Heaven clears a way for itself by violence,' i.e. is powerfully establishing itself despite all obstacles.

g. John brings the OT era to its close: he carries on where Malachi, the last of the prophets, left off, and fulfils Malachi's last prediction, Ml 3;23.

h. var. 'by her children', see Lk 7:35. Like petulant children who will play none of the games suggested (in this case weddings and funerals) the Jewish leaders reject all God's advances, whether made through the stern penance of John or through the gentle courtesy of Jesus. The different approaches are explained by the different relationships of John and Jesus to the messianic era, cf. 9:14–15; 11:11–13. In spite of human lack of goodwill, God's wise design is justified by the conduct of the Baptist and Jesus. Jesus' 'works' especially, that is, his miracles, either convince or condemn, vv. 6 and 20–24. Jesus is compared to Wisdom also in 11:28–30; 12:42; 23:24 and par.; Jn 6:35k; 1 Co 1:24. Others see here only a proverb which proclaims that the false wisdom of unbelievers, cf. v. 25, will reap its fruit of divine punishment, vv. 20–24.

i. The threats of the prophets had made these towns archetypes of impiety, Is 23; Ezk 26–28; Am 1:9–10; Zc 9:2–4.

j. Vv. 25–27 are not closely connected with the context in which Matthew has placed the passage (compare its different position in Lk). Hence, 'these things' refers not to what precedes but to the 'mysteries of the kingdom', 13:11, which are revealed to the 'little ones'—i.e. to the disciples, cf. 10:42—but hidden from the 'wise'—i.e. from the members and teachers of the Pharisee group.

entrusted to me by my Father; and no one knows the Son except the Father, just as 4:3d;16:17 Ws 2:13 Jn 1:18;3:11f; 3:35t;10:15 no one knows the Father except the Son and those to whom the Son chooses to reveal him. [k]

Picking corn on the Sabbath

•Ac 15:10 Ga 5:1 •‖Mk 2:23–28 ‖Lk 6:1–5 Ex 20:8f Dt 23:26 12 At that time Jesus went through the cornfields one Sabbath day. His 1 disciples were hungry and began to pick ears of corn and eat them. ·The 2 Pharisees noticed it and said to him, 'Look, your disciples are doing something that is forbidden on the Sabbath.' [a] ·But he said to them, 'Have you not read what 3

Ex 25:23j God and they ate the loaves of the offering although neither he nor his followers were permitted to eat them, but only the priests? ·Or again, have you not read in 5 Nb 28:9 the Law that on the Sabbath day the Temple priests break the Sabbath without pleases me, not sacrifice, you would not have condemned the blameless. ·For the 8 Jn 5:16–17 Son of man is master of the Sabbath.' [c]

Cure of the man with a withered hand

‖Mk 3:1–6 ‖Lk 6:6–11
He moved on from there and went to their synagogue; ·now a man was there with 9, 10 a withered hand. They asked him, 'Is it permitted to cure somebody on the Sabbath Lk 20:20 Jn 8:6 day?' hoping for something to charge him with. ·But he said to them, 'If any one of 11 ‖Lk 14:5 you here had only one sheep and it fell down a hole on the Sabbath day, would he Qo 3:19 not get hold of it and lift it out? ·Now a man is far more important than a sheep, so 12
Ex 20:8f it follows that it is permitted on the Sabbath day to do good.' ·Then he said to the 13 man, 'Stretch out your hand.' He stretched it out and his hand was restored, as Jn 5:18;11:53 sound as the other one. ·At this the Pharisees went out and began to plot against 14 him, discussing how to destroy him.

Jesus the 'servant of Yahweh'

Mk 3:7 Jesus knew this and withdrew from the district. Many followed him and he cured 15 Mk 1:34m;‖3:12 them all ·but warned them not to make him known. ·This [d] was to fulfil what was 16, 17 spoken by the prophet Isaiah:

Is 42:1–4
Look! My servant whom I have chosen, 18 my beloved, in whom my soul delights, 3:16m I will send my Spirit upon him, and he will present judgement [e] to the nations;
he will not brawl or cry out, 19
his voice is not heard in the streets, he will not break the crushed reed, 20
or snuff the faltering wick, until he has made judgement victorious; 21
in him the nations will put their hope.

Jesus and Beelzebul

8:29k;=9:32–34 ‖Lk 11:14–15 Then they brought to him a blind and dumb demoniac; and he cured him, so that 22 the dumb man could speak and see. ·All the people were astounded and said, 'Can 23 9:27m this be the son of David?' ·But when the Pharisees heard this they said, 'The man 24 drives out devils only through Beelzebul, [f] the chief of the devils.' ‖Mk 3:23–30 ‖Lk 11:17–23 Knowing what was in their minds he said to them, 'Every kingdom divided 25 against itself is heading for ruin; and no town, no household divided against itself 26 can last. •Now if Satan drives out Satan, he is divided against himself; so how can Jb 1:6g

30 'Anyone who is not with me is against me, and anyone who does not gather in Mk 9:40

Words betray the heart =7:16–20 ‖Lk 6:43–45

33 'Make a tree sound and its fruit will be sound; make a tree rotten and its fruit will 34 be rotten. For the tree can be told by its fruit. •You brood of vipers, how can your 3:7;23:33

37 word people utter they will answer on Judgement Day, •since it is by your words Jm 3:1–6 you will be justified, and by your words condemned.'

The sign of Jonah ‖Mk 8:11–12 ‖Lk 11:29–32

38 Then some of the scribes and Pharisees spoke up. 'Master,' they said, 'we should 39 like to see a sign[j] from you.' •He replied, 'It is an evil and unfaithful[k] generation =16:1–4 1 Co 1:22 that asks for a sign! The only sign it will be given is the sign of the prophet Jonah.[l]

k. The claim of an intimate connection with God, vv. 26–27, and the call to discipleship, vv. 28–30, recall a number of passages in the Wisdom literature, Pr 8:22–36; Ws 8:3–4; 9:9–18; Si 24:3–9,19–20. Jesus therefore claims the role of Wisdom, see 11:19h, no longer as a personification but as a person, 'the Son', par excellence, of 'the Father', cf. 4:3. With its Johannine flavour, see Jn 1:18; 3:11,35; 6:46; 10:15, this passage expresses, in the most primitive stratum of the synoptic tradition, the same clear awareness in Jesus of his divine sonship as is found in Jn.

l. The burden of the Law and of the additional Pharisaic observances. The 'yoke of the Law' is a current rabbinic metaphor; see also Si 51:26; Jr 2:20; 5:5; Lm 3:27; Zp 3:9 (LXX); cf. Is 14:25.

m. Classic descriptions of the 'Poor' of the OT, see Dn 3:87; Zp 2:3d. Jesus makes their religious attitude his own, and on these grounds claims to be their master in wisdom, as was prophesied of the 'servant', Is 61:1–2; Lk 4:18; see also Mt 12:18–21; 21:5. This attitude to poverty is expressed in the beatitudes and in many other passages of the gospels.

12 a. The disciples' offence is not picking someone else's corn while passing by (Dt 23:26 allowed it) but doing this on the Sabbath. Casuists saw in this a 'work' prohibited by the Law, Ex 34:21.

b. Far from stopping, the work of the priests actually increased on the Sabbath.

c. On this occasion and when he cures on the Sabbath, 12:9–14 and par.; Lk 13:10–17; 14:1–6; Jn 5:1–18; 7:19–24; 9, Jesus affirms that even a custom of divine institution has no absolute value, but must yield to the demands of necessity or love, and that he himself has the right to interpret the Law of Moses authoritatively, see 5:17h; 15:1–7 and par.; 19:1–9 and par. This right he has because he proclaims the messianic kingdom, 8:20h, whose new economy, 9:17f, he has the task of establishing already, 9:6. The rabbis did admit of dispensations from the Sabbath law, but only within very scrupulous limits.

d. i.e. his avoidance of publicity for his work of healing.

e. This gives a meaning of the Hebr. term mishpat (and of its LXX translation krisis), often rendered 'judgement', which signifies the divine statute governing the relationship of God with humanity in so far as it is known through revelation and the religion founded on it.

f. Canaanite divinity. The name means 'Baal the Prince' (not 'Baal of the dunghill' as is sometimes asserted), and so orthodox monotheism naturally interpreted it as 'Prince of devils'. The form 'Beelzebub' (Syr. and Vulg.) is a contemptuous play on words (already found in 2 K 1:2seq.) which makes the name mean 'Baal (Lord) of the flies'.

g. lit. 'your children', a semitism.

h. Not to recognise the Messiah may be excusable, since he is appearing as an ordinary 'son of man', 8:20h; but it is a positive perversity to witness the manifest good works of the Holy Spirit and declare them evil (as in v. 24). By doing this, a person is openly refusing to respond to God; he has 'closed his heart', and so put himself outside the range of forgiveness.

i. i.e. a calumny.

j. A miracle that would prove Jesus had authority and show what sort of authority it was, cf. Is 7:11seq.; Jn 2:11f. No other sign will be given but the decisive one which is the resurrection, here obscurely foretold.

k. lit. 'adulterous': a common figurative use in the OT, see Ho 1:2c.

l. In 16:4 Mt does not define, as he does in v. 40 here, the sense of this 'sign of Jonah', and Lk 11:29seq. understands it as being Jesus' preaching, which is a sign for his contemporaries just as Jonah's was for the men of Nineveh—a sense which lurks beneath v. 41 here. It is, however, less probable, for Jesus' preaching is already taking place and so cannot be announced as still in the future. Further, and more important, Jonah was known in the Jewish tradition for his miraculous deliverance rather than for his preaching to the gentiles, which was not well looked upon. Therefore even if Mt's interpretation in v. 40 is later than Lk's, it reflects Jesus' thought better, for it is a veiled prediction of his final triumph.

8:29k ‖Lk 11:24–26 The return of the unclean spirit

'When an unclean spirit goes out of someone it wanders through waterless country 43 looking for a place to rest, [n] and cannot find one. ·Then it says, "I will return to 44 the home I came from." But on arrival, finding it unoccupied, swept and tidied, Mk 5:9 Lk 8:2 it then goes off and collects seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they 45
Jn 5:14 go in and set up house there, and so that person ends up worse off than before.
2 P 2:20 That is what will happen to this wicked generation.'

‖Mk 3:31–35 ‖Lk 8:19–21 Dt 33:9 Jn 7:3seq. The true kinsfolk of Jesus

He was still speaking to the crowds when suddenly his mother and his brothers [o] 46

Lk 2:49–50 man who told him this Jesus replied, 'Who is my mother? Who are my brothers?'

B: DISCOURSE OF PARABLES

‖Mk 4:1–2 ‖Lk 8:4 Introduction

13 That same day, [a] Jesus left the house and sat by the lakeside, ·but such large 1, 2 crowds gathered round him that he got into a boat and sat there. The people ‖Mk 4:3–9 ‖Lk 8:5–8 Parable of the sower

He said, 'Listen, a sower went out to sow. ·As he sowed, some seeds fell on the 4 edge of the path, and the birds came and ate them up. ·Others fell on patches of 5 rock where they found little soil and sprang up at once, because there was no depth of earth; ·but as soon as the sun came up they were scorched and, not having any 6

The parable of the sower explained

‖Mk 4:13–20
‖Lk 8:11–15

18, 19 'So pay attention to the parable of the sower. •When anyone hears the word of the kingdom without understanding, the Evil One comes and carries off what was 20 sown[g] in his heart: this is the seed sown on the edge of the path. •The seed sown on patches of rock is someone who hears the word and welcomes it at once with joy.
21 But such a person has no root deep down and does not last; should some trial 22 come, or some persecution on account of the word, at once he falls away. •The seed sown in thorns is someone who hears the word, but the worry of the world and
23 the lure of riches choke the word and so it produces nothing. •And the seed sown in rich soil is someone who hears the word and understands it; this is the one who yields a harvest and produces now a hundredfold, now sixty, now thirty.'

27 wheat sprouted and ripened, then the darnel appeared as well. •The owner's labourers went to him and said, "Sir, was it not good seed that you sowed in your 28 field? If so, where does the darnel come from?" •He said to them, "Some enemy has done this." And the labourers said, "Do you want us to go and weed it out?"
29 But he said, "No, because when you weed out the darnel you might pull up the

m. A ready-made expression borrowed from Jon 2:1 and only approximately indicating the space of time between Jesus' death and resurrection.

n. The ancients thought of desert places as inhabited by demons, see 8:28; Lv 16:8b; 17:7d; Is 13:21; 34:14c; Ba 4:35; Rv 18:2. Nevertheless, the devils much prefer to live in human beings, 8:29k.

o. Not necessarily Mary's children but possibly near relations, cousins perhaps, which both Hebr. and Aramaic style 'brothers', see Gn 13:8; 14:16; 29:15; Lv 10:4; 1 Ch 23:22seq.

p. V. 47 ('Someone said to him: Your mother and brothers are standing outside and want to speak to you') is omitted by some important textual witnesses. It is probably a restatement of v. 46 modelled on Mk and Lk.

q. The ties of physical relationship yield to those of spiritual relationship, see 8:21seq.; 10:37; 19:29.

13 a. A merely transitional cliché of no chronological significance.

b. Making a total of seven, see 6:9d, Mt adds five parables to the two he shares with Mk.

c. add. 'to hear'. Similarly 11:15; 13:43.

d. For those of good will, what they have learnt from the old covenant will be added to and perfected by the new, cf. 5:17,20. The ill-disposed will lose even what they have, namely, that Jewish Law which, without the perfection Jesus brings to it, is destined to become obsolete.

e. A deliberate and culpable insensibility which is both the cause and the explanation of the withdrawal of grace. The preceding narratives, all of which throw light on this 'hardening', 11:16–19,20–24; 12:7,14,24–32,34,39,45, prepare the way for the parable discourse. By the use of symbols and images, therefore, Jesus challenges them to reflect and themselves seek to penetrate more deeply into the understanding of the kingdom.

f. The prophets and holy men of the OT. Paul speaks more than once of the time when the 'mystery' was not revealed: Rm 16:25; Ep 3:4–5; Col 1:26; see also 1 P 1:11–12.

g. This strange expression is the result of a certain ambiguity in the interpretation of the parable, which identifies human beings sometimes with the ground which receives the Word, sometimes with the seed itself.

He told them another parable, 'The kingdom of Heaven is like the yeast a woman took and mixed in with three measures of flour till it was leavened all through.' [h] 33

‖ Mk 4:33–34 The people are taught only in parables

In all this Jesus spoke to the crowds in parables; indeed, he would never speak to them except in parables. 34 ·This was to fulfil what was spoken by the prophet: 35

Ps 78:2 I will speak to you in parables, unfold what has been hidden since the foundation of the world. [i]

The parable of the darnel explained

Then, leaving the crowds, he went to the house; and his disciples came to him and said, 'Explain to us the parable about the darnel in the field.' 36 ·He said in reply, 37 'The sower of the good seed is the Son of man. 38 ·The field is the world; the good seed is the subjects of the kingdom; the darnel, the subjects of the Evil One; [j] 39 ·the enemy who sowed it, the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; the reapers are the angels. 40 ·Well then, just as the darnel is gathered up and burnt in the fire, so it will be at the end of time. 41 ·The Son of man will send his angels and they will gather out of his kingdom all causes of falling and all who do evil, 42 ·and throw them into the blazing furnace, where there will be weeping and grinding of teeth. 43 ·Then the upright will shine like the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Conclusion

John the Baptist beheaded

3 Now it was Herod who had arrested John, chained him up and put him in prison ‖Mk 6:17–29
4 because of Herodias, his brother Philip's[a] wife. ·For John had told him, 'It is ‖Lk 3:19–20

Herod's birthday, the daughter of Herodias[b] danced before the company and so 7 delighted Herod ·that he promised on oath to give her anything she asked.
8 Prompted by her mother she said, 'Give me John the Baptist's head, here, on a

m. The Jewish teacher who becomes a disciple of Christ has at his disposal all the wealth of the Old Testament as well as its completion in the New, v. 12. This picture of a 'scribe who becomes a disciple' sums up the whole ideal of Matthew the evangelist and may well be a self-portrait.

n. Nazareth, where he lived as a child, see 2:23.

14 a. om. (Latin text) 'Philip'; the omission is due to the difficulty the name seemed to create. But in fact this Philip is not the tetrarch of Ituraea and Trachonitis, Lk 3:1; he is another son of Herod the Great by Mariamne II and therefore half-brother of Antipas; Josephus himself calls him Herod. Antipas' fault lay not so much in having married his niece as in having taken her from his brother who was still living; moreover, he had repudiated his first wife.

b. According to Josephus, the girl's name was Salome.

c. While Lk 9:10–17 and Jn 6:1–13 have only one multiplication of loaves, Mt 14:13–21; 15:32–39 and Mk 6:30–44; 8:1–10 have two. This duplication, certainly very ancient, see 16:9seq., presents the same incident according to two different traditions. The first, more ancient, and of Palestinian origin, seems to situate the incident on the western shore of the lake (see next note) and speaks of twelve baskets, the number of the tribes of Israel and of the apostles, see Mk 3:14c. The second, derived from Christians in a gentile milieu, situates it on the eastern, gentile, shore of the lake, see Mk 7:31, and speaks of seven baskets, the number of the gentile nations of Canaan, Ac 13:19, and of the hellenist deacons, Ac 6:5; 21:8. Both traditions depict the event in the light of OT precedents, especially the multiplication of oil and bread by Elisha, 2 K 4:1–7,42–44, and the episode of manna and quails, Ex 16; Nb 11. The act of Jesus repeats these gifts of heavenly nourishment with an even greater power. It was, as the earliest tradition already saw, a preparation for the eschatological nourishment of the Eucharist. This aspect is underlined by the literary presentation in the synoptics, see 14:19; 15:36 and 26:26, and the discourse on the bread of life, Jn 6.

d. This does not necessarily indicate the eastern shore of the lake. Jesus could have gone along the western shore from north to south or vice versa and so reach 'the other side', v. 22, of the curve made by this shore.

e. On shore the crowd hurried to the place the boat was making for.

And at once he made the disciples get into the boat and go on ahead to the other 22 side while he sent the crowds away. ·After sending the crowds away he went up 23 Jn 6:15 into the hills by himself to pray.[f] When evening came, he was there alone, ·while 24 the boat, by now some furlongs from land,[g] was hard pressed by rough waves, for there was a head-wind. ·In the fourth watch of the night[h] he came towards them, 25 walking on the sea, ·and when the disciples saw him walking on the sea they were 26 terrified. 'It is a ghost,' they said, and cried out in fear. ·But at once Jesus called 27 out to them, saying, 'Courage! It's me! Don't be afraid.' ·It was Peter[i] who 28 answered. 'Lord,' he said, 'if it is you, tell me to come to you across the water.'
Jesus said, 'Come.' Then Peter got out of the boat and started walking towards 29
Jesus across the water, ·but then noticing the wind, he took fright and began to 30 8:25–26 sink. 'Lord,' he cried, 'save me!' ·Jesus put out his hand at once and held him. 31 8:10b 'You have so little faith,' he said, 'why did you doubt?' ·And as they got into the 32 boat the wind dropped. ·The men in the boat bowed down before him and said, 33 4:3d;16:16d 'Truly, you are the Son of God.'

‖Mk 6:53–56 Cures at Gennesaret

Having made the crossing, they came to land at Gennesaret. ·When the local 34, 35 people recognised him they spread the news through the whole neighbourhood 9:20–22 and took all that were sick to him, ·begging him just to let them touch the fringe of 36

15 Then Pharisees and scribes from Jerusalem came to Jesus and said, ·'Why 1, 2 Lk 11:38 do your disciples break away from the tradition of the elders?[a] They eat
Ga 1:14 Col 2:8 without washing their hands.'[b] ·He answered, 'And why do you break away from 3 19:19 the commandment of God for the sake of your tradition? ·For God said, "Honour[c] 4

Lk 18:20 put to death." ·But you say, "If anyone says to his father or mother: Anything I 5 might have used to help you is dedicated to God, ·he is rid of his 6 when he said:

Ps 78:36seq. Is 29:13
> This people honours me only with lip-service, 8
> while their hearts are far from me.
> Their reverence of me is worthless; 9
> the lessons they teach are nothing but human commandments.'

‖Mk 7:14–23 On clean and unclean[e]

He called the people to him and said, 'Listen, and understand. ·What goes into the 10, 11 12:34 mouth does not make anyone unclean; it is what comes out of the mouth that makes someone unclean.'

Then the disciples came to him and said, 'Do you know that the Pharisees were 12
Jn 15:2b Ac 5:38 shocked when they heard what you said?' ·He replied, 'Any plant my heavenly 13
Father has not planted will be pulled up by the roots. ·Leave them alone. They are 14 23:16,19 ‖Lk 6:39 blind leaders of the blind; and if one blind person leads another, both will fall into a pit.'

At this, Peter said to him, 'Explain the parable for us.' ·Jesus replied, 'Even 15, 16
Mk 4:13c you—don't you yet understand? ·Can't you see that whatever goes into the mouth 17

18 passes through the stomach and is discharged into the sewer? ·But whatever comes out of the mouth comes from the heart, and it is this that makes someone unclean.
19 For from the heart come evil intentions: murder, adultery, fornication, theft, Ga 5:19–21 20 perjury, slander. ·These are the things that make a person unclean. But eating with unwashed hands does not make anyone unclean.'

The daughter of the Canaanite woman healed ‖Mk 7:24–30

21, 22 Jesus left that place and withdrew to the region of Tyre and Sidon. ·And suddenly out came a Canaanite woman from that district[f] and started shouting, 'Lord, Son 23 of David, take pity on me. My daughter is tormented by a devil.' ·But he said not 9:27m ·8:29k a word in answer to her. And his disciples went and pleaded with him, saying, 24 'Give her what she wants,[g] because she keeps shouting after us.' ·He said in reply, Lk 11:8
25 'I was sent only to the lost sheep of the House of Israel.' ·But the woman had 10:6
26 come up and was bowing low before him. 'Lord,' she said, 'help me.' ·He replied, 27 'It is not fair to take the children's food and throw it to little dogs.'[h] ·She retorted, 7:6b
'Ah yes, Lord; but even little dogs eat the scraps that fall from their masters' table.' 28 Then Jesus answered her, 'Woman, you have great faith. Let your desire be 8:10b granted.' And from that moment her daughter was well again.

Cures near the lake

29 Jesus went on from there and reached the shores of the Lake of Galilee, and he Mk 7:31 30 went up onto the mountain. He took his seat, ·and large crowds came to him bringing the lame, the crippled, the blind, the dumb and many others; these they 31 put down at his feet, and he cured them. ·The crowds were astonished to see the 8:3a Mk 7:37 their sight, and they praised the God of Israel.

Second miracle of the loaves 8:3a;14:13–21par.; ‖Mk 8:1–10

32 But Jesus called his disciples to him and said, 'I feel sorry for all these people; they have been with me for three days now and have nothing to eat. I do not want to 33 send them off hungry, or they might collapse on the way.' ·The disciples said to him, 'Where in a deserted place could we get sufficient bread for such a large crowd 2 K 4:43 34 to have enough to eat?' ·Jesus said to them, 'How many loaves have you?' They 35 said, 'Seven, and a few small fish.' ·Then he instructed the crowd to sit down on 36 the ground, ·and he took the seven loaves and the fish, and after giving thanks he broke them and began handing them to the disciples, who gave them to the crowds.

f. The evangelists, especially Lk, often note that Jesus prays, in solitude or at night, 14:23 and par.; Mk 1:35; Lk 5:16, at mealtimes, Mt 14:19 and par.; 15:36 and par.; 26:26–27 and par., at the time of important events: at the Baptism, Lk 3:21, before the choice of the Twelve, Lk 6:12, the teaching of the Lord's Prayer, Lk 11:1, see Mt 6:5c, the profession of faith at Caesarea, Lk 9:18, the Transfiguration, Lk 9:28–29, in Gethsemane, Mt 26:36–44, on the cross, Mt 27:46 and par.; Lk 23:46. He prays for his executioners, Lk 23:34; for Peter, Lk 22:32, for his disciples and those who will come after them, Jn 17:9–24. He prays also for himself, 26:39 and par., cf. Jn 17:1–5; Heb 5:7. These prayers show that he is in permanent touch with the Father, 11:25–27 and par., who never leaves him on his own, Jn 8:29, and always hears his prayer, Jn 11:22,42; cf. Mt 26:53. Both by this example and by his teaching, Jesus bore in upon his disciples the need and the way to pray, 6:5c. Now in glory he continues to intercede for his own, Rm 8:34; Heb 7:25; 1 Jn 2:1, as he promised, Jn 14:16.

g. Cf. Jn 6:19; var. 'far out on the sea'; cf. Mk 6:47.

h. 3 to 6 am.

i. Matthew deliberately punctuates the narrative section of his 'ecclesiastical book' (13:53–18:35) with three episodes featuring Peter: this passage, 16:16–20 and 17:24–27.

15 a. Oral tradition which, to safeguard the observance of the written Law, made many additions to it. It was held by the rabbis that these additions, being implicit in the Law, were part of the tradition going back through 'the elders' to Moses himself.

b. lit. 'eat bread'.

c. Implying a reverence shown in practical ways.

d. Because property thus made over by vow assumes a sacred character which precludes all claims made by the parents. Such a vow was in fact only a legal fiction involving no sacrifice of ownership; it was no more than a despicable way of escaping the duty of filial piety. Though the rabbis acknowledged its impiety they sustained its validity.

e. The Pharisees had objected to eating with unpurified hands, v. 2, but Jesus passes to the larger question of the legal impurity of certain foods, Lv 11. Legal impurity, he teaches, is secondary to moral, which is the only impurity that really matters, Ac 10:9–16,28; Rm 14:14seq.

f. It is significant that the gentile has to leave gentile territory and come onto the soil of Israel for the cure.

g. Not 'send her away' simply: the Greek verb here means 'let her go with her request granted', as in 18:27; 27:15.

h. Jesus' vocation is primarily to bring salvation to the Jews, 'children' of God and of the promises, before caring for the gentiles who were in the eyes of the Jews, only 'dogs'. The conventional nature of this expression and the diminutive form used lessen the insult of it in Jesus' mouth.

i. om. 'the cripples whole again'.

Ps 78:29 They all ate as much as they wanted, and they collected what was left of the 37 scraps, seven baskets full. ·Now four thousand men had eaten, to say nothing of 38 women and children. ·And when he had sent the crowds away he got into the boat 39 and went to the territory of Magadan.

Peter's profession of faith; his pre-eminence

When Jesus came to the region of Caesarea Philippi he put this question to his 13
8:20h disciples, 'Who do people say the Son of man is?' ·And they said, 'Some say John 14
14:2 the Baptist, some Elijah, and others Jeremiah or one of the prophets.'[c] ·'But 15
Jn 6:69 you,' he said, 'who do you say I am?' ·Then Simon Peter spoke up and said, 'You 16
14:28*i* are the Christ, the Son of the living God.'[d] ·Jesus replied, 'Simon son of Jonah, 17
4:3*d* you are a blessed man! Because it was no human agency[e] that revealed this to you Rm 7:5c but my Father in heaven. ·So I now say to you: You are Peter[f] and on this rock I 18

From then onwards[j] Jesus began to make it clear to his disciples that he was 21

The transfiguration [a]

‖Mk 9:2–8
‖Lk 9:28–36
2 P 1:16–18

1 17 Six days later, Jesus took with him Peter and James and his brother John 2 and led them up a high mountain [b] by themselves. •There in their presence he was transfigured: his face shone like the sun and his clothes became as dazzling 28:3 3 as light. [c] •And suddenly Moses and Elijah appeared to them; they were talking 16 a. om. 'In the evening . . . of the times'. The 'times' are the messianic age; the 'signs' are the miracles worked by Jesus; cf. 11:3–5; 12:38.

b. As leaven ferments the dough, 13:33, but can also make it go bad, cf. 1 Co 5:6; Ga 5:9, so the false doctrine of the Jewish leaders threatens to misguide those for whom they are responsible, cf. Mt 15:14.

c. Jesus claimed this title of 'prophet' only in a veiled and indirect way, 13:57 and par.; Lk 13:33, but the crowds gave it to him clearly, Mt 16:14 and par.; 21:11,46; Mk 6:15 and par.; Lk 7:16,39; 24:19; Jn 4:19; 9:17. The title had messianic overtones, for the spirit of prophecy, extinct since Malachi, was according to Jewish expectation to return as a sign of the messianic era, either in the person of Elijah, 17:10–11 and par., or in the form of a general outpouring of the Spirit, Ac 2:17–18,33. In fact in Jesus' time there were many (false) prophets, 24:11,24 and par. John the Baptist was truly a prophet, 11:9 and par.; 14:5; 21:26 and par.; Lk 1:76, but as a herald in the spirit of Elijah, Mt 11:10 and par., 14; 17:12 and par. He denied (Jn 1:21) that he was 'the Prophet' foretold by Moses, Dt 18:15, and it is in Jesus alone that Christian faith has recognised this Prophet, Jn 6:14; 7:40; Ac 3:22–26,26s. After Pentecost the spirit of prophecy spread throughout the Church, Ac 11:27m, and this title of Jesus soon yielded to other more specific christological titles.

d. In Mt Peter acknowledges not only that Jesus is the Messiah but also that he is Son of God; this second title is not found in Mk and Lk; compare 14:33 with Mk 6:51seq., see 4:3e.

e. lit. 'flesh and blood'. The expression indicates humanity, emphasising a material, limited nature as opposed to that of the spirit world, Si 14:18; Rm 7:5c; 1 Co 15:50; Ga 1:16; Ep 6:12; Heb 2:14; cf. Jn 1:13.

f. Neither the Greek word petros nor even, as it seems, its Aramaic equivalent kepha ('rock') was used as a personal name before Jesus conferred it on the apostles' leader to symbolise the part he was to play in the foundation of his community. This change of name had possibly been made earlier, see Mk 3:16; Lk 6:14; Jn 1:42.

g. The Hebr. qahal which the Gk renders ekklesia means 'an assembly called together'; it is used frequently in the OT to indicate the community of the chosen people, especially the community of the desert period, cf. Ac 7:38. Certain Jewish groups (among them the Essenes of Qumran) regarded themselves as the chosen remnant of Israel (Is 4:3c) which was to survive in 'the latter days'. These had also used the term that is now adopted to indicate the messianic community, the community of the 'new alliance' sealed with the blood of Jesus, 26:28f; Ep 5:25. By using the term 'community' side by side with that of 'kingdom of Heaven', 4:17f, Jesus shows that this eschatological community (community of the 'end-times') is to have its beginnings here on earth in the form of an organised society whose leader he now appoints; see Ac 5:11b; 1 Co 1:2a.

h. Gk: Hades; Hebrew: sheol, the dwelling-place of the dead, see Nb 16:33f. Here, its personified 'gates' suggest the powers of evil which first lead people into that death which is sin and then imprison them once for all in eternal death. The Church's task will be to rescue the elect from death's dominion, from the death of the body and above all from eternal death, so that it may lead them into the kingdom of Heaven, see 1 Co 15:26; Col 1:13; Rv 6:8; 20:13. In this the Church follows its Master who died, descended into the underworld, see 1 P 3:19h, and rose again, Ac 2:27,31.

i. The City of God, like the City of Death, has its gates too; they grant entrance only to those who are worthy of it. Peter has the keys. It is his function, therefore, to open or close to all who would come to the kingdom of Heaven through the Christian community. • 'bind' and 'loose' are technical rabbinic terms; primarily they have a disciplinary reference; one is 'bound' (condemned to) or 'loosed' (absolved from) excommunication. Their secondary usage is connected with doctrinal or juridical decisions: an opinion is 'bound' (forbidden) or 'loosed' (allowed). Of the household of God Peter is controller (the keys symbolise this, cf. Is 22:22). In that capacity he is to exercise the disciplinary power of admitting or excluding those he thinks fit; he will also, in his administration of the community, make necessary doctrinal and juridical decisions. The verdicts he delivers and the pronouncements he makes will be ratified by God in heaven. Catholic exegetes maintain that these enduring promises hold good not only for Peter himself but also for Peter's successors. This inference, not explicitly drawn in the text, is considered legitimate because Jesus plainly intends to provide for the future of his community by establishing a structure that will not collapse with Peter's death. • Two other texts, Lk 22:31seq. and Jn 21:15seq., on Peter's primacy emphasise that its operation is to be in the domain of faith; they also indicate that this makes him head not only of the Church after the death of Jesus but of the apostolic group then and there.

j. Jesus has just elicited from his disciples the first explicit profession of faith in him as Messiah. At this crucial moment he tells them for the first time of his coming Passion: he is not only the glorious Messiah, he is also the suffering servant. Within the next few days this teaching method will be pursued in a similar situation: the glorious transfiguration will be followed by an injunction to silence and a prediction of the Passion, 17:1–12. It is Jesus' way of bracing the disciples' faith for the approaching crisis of death and resurrection.

k. By blocking the Messiah's appointed way, Peter becomes an 'obstacle' (primary sense of the Greek skandalon) to Christ and becomes, though unwittingly, the tool of Satan, cf. 4:1–10.

l. Paradox. This dictum and those immediately following oscillate between two senses of human 'life': its present stage and its future. The Greek psyche, here equivalent to the Hebr. nephesh, contains all three senses of 'life', 'soul', 'person'.

m. 'his behaviour'; var. 'his works'.

n. In vv. 27–28 two sayings of Jesus, each dealing with a different event, have been joined together because they have a common reference to the coming of the kingdom of God: v. 27, the kingdom of the Father; v. 28, the kingdom of Christ, see 24:1a.

17 a. In Mt's presentation, which differs from those of Mk 9:2 and Lk 9:28f, Jesus appears in his transfiguration above all as the new Moses, see Mt 4:1a, meeting God on a new Sinai in the cloud, Mt 17:5; Ex 24:15–18, with his face shining, Mt 17:2; Ex 34:29–35, cf. 2 Co 3:7–4:6, accompanied by two personalities of the OT who received revelations on Sinai, Ex 19:33–34; 1 K 19:9–13, and personify the Law and the Prophets which Jesus came to bring to perfection, Mt 5:17. opinion? From whom do earthly kings take toll or tribute? From their sons[i] or from foreigners?' ·And when he replied, 'From foreigners,' Jesus said, 'Well then, 26 the sons are exempt. ·However, so that we shall not be the downfall of others, go 27

VI: THE APPROACHING ADVENT OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

A: NARRATIVE SECTION

‖Mk 10:1–12 The question about divorce

Lk 9:51 19 Jesus had now finished what he wanted to say, and he left Galilee and came 1 into the territory of Judaea on the far side of the Jordan. ·Large crowds 2 followed him and he healed them there.

16:1 Lk 11:54 Jn 8:6 Some Pharisees approached him, and to put him to the test they said, 'Is it 3 against the Law for a man to divorce his wife on any pretext whatever?' ·He 4 Gn 1:27 answered, 'Have you not read that the Creator from the beginning made them male Gn 2:24 Ep 5:31 and female ·and that he said: This is why a man leaves his father and mother and 5 becomes attached to his wife, and the two become one flesh? ·They are no longer 6 1 Co 6:16; 7:10–11 two, therefore, but one flesh. So then, what God has united, human beings must not divide.' [o]

Dt 24:1 They said to him, 'Then why did Moses command that a writ of dismissal should 7 be given in cases of divorce?' ·He said to them, 'It was because you were so hard- 8 hearted, that Moses allowed you to divorce your wives, but it was not like this from the beginning. ·Now I say this to you: anyone who divorces his wife—I am not 9 =5:32 ‖Lk 16:18 speaking of an illicit marriage [p]—and marries another, is guilty of adultery.'

Continence

The disciples said to him, 'If that is how things are between husband and wife, it is 10 advisable not to marry.' 11 But he replied, 'It is not everyone who can accept what I have said, but only those to whom it is granted. 12 There are eunuchs born so from their mother's womb, there are eunuchs made so by human agency and there are eunuchs who have made themselves so for the sake of the kingdom of Heaven.[c] 1 Co 7:1,7–8, 32–34 commandments.' 18 He said, 'Which ones?' Jesus replied, 'These: You shall not kill.

You shall not commit adultery. You shall not steal. You shall not give false witness.
19 Honour your father and your mother. You shall love your neighbour as yourself.'
20 The young man said to him, 'I have kept all these.[f] What more do I need to do?'

k. Imitating God and Jesus, Lk 23:34k, and following the example of the Israelites, Lv 19:18–19; see Ex 21:25f, Christians must forgive each other, 5:39; 6:12 and par. (cf. 7:2); 2 Co 2:7; Ep 4:32; Col 3:13. But the 'neighbour' includes everyone, even those to whom one must return good for evil, 5:44–45; Rm 12:17–21; 1 Th 5:15; 1 P 3:9; see Ps 5:10c. Love covers over a great number of sins, Pr 10:12, quoted by Jm 5:20; 1 P 4:8.

l. Others render 'seventy-times-seven times', see 6:9d. Mt illustrates the lesson by a parable. Many of the parables proper to Mt are concerned with human relationships, illustrated by contrasting characters, see 20:1a; 21:28; 22:1a; 24:45w; 25:1a, 31e; Lk 15:11a.

m. Over $60,000,000: the amount is deliberately fantastic.

n. Less than $200.

19 a. Uncompromising assertion of the indissolubility of marriage.

b. In view of the absolute prohibition of the parallel passages, Mk 10:11seq.; Lk 16:18 and 1 Co 7:10seq., it is unlikely that all three have omitted an exceptive clause by Jesus, and more probable that one of the last editors of Mt should have added it in response to a rabbinic problem (a discussion between Hillel and Shammai of the reasons which make divorce legitimate) suggested also by the context, v. 3, which could have concerned the Judaeo-Christian circles for which he was writing. In this case we would have here an ecclesiastical decision of temporary and local application, like the Decree of Jerusalem concerning the district of Antioch, Ac 15:23–29. The meaning of porneia points in the same direction. Some take it to mean fornication within marriage, that is adultery, and consider it permissible to divorce in such cases; thus Orthodox and Protestant Churches. But for this sense one would expect another term, moicheia. By contrast porneia in this context seems to have the technical sense which zenut or 'prostitution' has in the rabbinic writings when used of a union incestuous because within the degrees forbidden by the Law, Lv 18. Such unions contracted legally between gentiles or tolerated by the Jews themselves between proselytes must have made difficulties in legalistic Judaeo-Christian circles like that of Mt, when people were converted; hence the instruction to break off such irregular unions which were no true marriages. • Another solution envisages that the freedom granted by the exceptive clause is not to divorce but to separate without remarriage. Such a situation was unknown in Judaism, but on occasion the demands of Jesus did lead to new situations, and this one is clearly presupposed by 1 Co 7:11.

c. Christ invites to perpetual continence as an expression of total consecration to the kingdom of God.

d. var. 'Good Master', see Mk and Lk.

e. i.e. God (explicit in Mk and Lk and Vulg. Mt). Another reading, borrowed from Mk and Lk, is 'Why do you call me good? None is good but God alone.'

f. add. 'from my earliest days', see Mk and Lk.

g. Jesus is not founding a new order of 'perfect disciples', superior to ordinary Christians. The 'perfection' envisaged is that of the new dispensation, which surpasses the old by completing it, see 5:17h. All are called to it equally, see 5:48. But, in order to establish the kingdom, Jesus needs fellow-workers who are especially available; it is from these that he asks radical renunciation of the cares of family life, 18:12, and possessions, 8:19–20.

Parable of the labourers in the vineyard [a] 20 'Now the kingdom of Heaven is like a landowner going out at daybreak to 1 hire workers for his vineyard. •He made an agreement with the workers for 2 one denarius a day and sent them to his vineyard. •Going out at about the third 3 hour he saw others standing idle in the market place •and said to them, "You go to 4 my vineyard too and I will give you a fair wage." •So they went. At about the sixth 5 hour and again at about the ninth hour, he went out and did the same. •Then at 6 about the eleventh hour he went out and found more men standing around, and he said to them, "Why have you been standing here idle all day?" •"Because no one 7 has hired us," they answered. He said to them, "You go into my vineyard too."

received one denarius each. •They took it, but grumbled at the landowner saying, 11
"The men who came last have done only one hour, and you have treated them 12 the same as us, though we have done a heavy day's work in all the heat." •He 13

The Messiah enters Jerusalem

‖Mk 11:1–11 ‖Lk 19:28–38 ‖Jn 12:12–16

1 2 21 When they were near Jerusalem and had come to Bethphage on the Mount of Olives, then Jesus sent two disciples, •saying to them, 'Go to the village facing you, and you will at once find a tethered donkey and a colt with her. Untie 3 them and bring them to me. •If anyone says anything to you, you are to say, "The 4 Master needs them and will send them back at once." ' •This was to fulfil what was spoken by the prophet:

5 Say to the daughter of Zion:
Look, your king is approaching, humble and riding on a donkey and on a colt, the foal of a beast of burden.[a]

Is 62:11 Zc 9:9h 11:29 Gn 49:11

6, 7 So the disciples went and did as Jesus had told them. •They brought the donkey and the colt, then they laid their cloaks on their backs and he took his seat on them.
8 Great crowds of people spread their cloaks on the road, while others were cutting 9 branches from the trees and spreading them in his path. •The crowds who went in front of him and those who followed were all shouting:

1 K 1:33 2 K 9:13

Hosanna[b] to the son of David!
Blessed is he who is coming in the name of the Lord!
Hosanna in the highest heavens!

9:27m Ps 118:25–26 Ac 2:33t

h. The reference is to the messianic 'renewal of all things' which is to be revealed when the world ends but which, on the spiritual plane, will already have begun when Christ rises from the dead as Kyrios in the Church.

i. In the OT sense of 'governors'. The 'twelve tribes' may be regarded as the new Israel, the Church.

j. add. 'wife'.

20 a. The owner of the vineyard goes on into the evening hiring workmen and yet gives all a full day's pay. He is generous to some without being unjust to the others. So God acts. Into his kingdom he brings late-comers—sinners and gentiles. Those who were called first (the Jewish people who, from Abraham's time, had been privileged with the covenant) have no right to be offended.

b. add. 'For many are called, but few are chosen', probably borrowed from 22:14.

c. The apostles expect Jesus' kingdom to be manifested very shortly and in all its glory, but this is reserved for Christ's second coming, see 4:17f; Ac 1:6h.

d. Biblical metaphor for suffering, see Is 51:17, here referring to the approaching Passion.

e. James son of Zebedee was put to death by Herod Agrippa about the year 44, Ac 12:2. His brother John may not indeed have suffered martyrdom but he had no less a share in his Master's sufferings.

f. Jesus' mission on earth is not to apportion human rewards but to suffer for human salvation, see Jn 3:17; 12:47.

g. By sin human beings incur, as a debt to the divine justice, the punishment of death demanded by the Law, see Rm 8:3–4; 1 Co 15:56; 2 Co 3:7,9; Ga 3:13, with notes. To ransom them from this slavery of sin and death, Rm 3:24j, Jesus is to pay the ransom and discharge the debt with the price of his blood, 1 Co 6:20; 7:23; Ga 3:13; 4:5, with notes. By thus dying in place of the guilty, he fulfils the prophesied function of the 'servant of Yahweh' (Is 53). The Hebr. word translated 'many', Is 53:11seq., 11h, contrasts the enormous crowd of the redeemed with the one Redeemer: it does not imply that the number of redeemed is limited, Rm 5:6–21, see also Mt 26:28i.

h. At this point some authorities insert the following passage, derived probably from some apocryphal gospel 'But as for you, from littleness you seek to grow great and from greatness you make yourselves small. When you are invited to a banquet do not take one of the places of honour, because someone more important than you may arrive and then the steward will have to say, "Move down lower," and you would be covered with confusion. Take the lowest place, and then if someone less important than you comes in, the steward will say to you, "Move up higher," and that will be to your advantage.' Cf. Lk 14:8–10.

21 a. In thus describing the messianic king's humble mount the prophet had in mind the unpretentious, unwarlike nature of his rule. Jesus, by performing this action, deliberately took to himself both the words of the prophecy and their deeper meaning.

b. A word of Hebr. origin; its first meaning is 'Please, save' but it became a mere shout of acclamation.

And when he entered Jerusalem, the whole city was in turmoil as people 10 16:14c asked, 'Who is this?' ·and the crowds answered, 'This is the prophet Jesus from 11 ask you a question, just one; if you tell me the answer to it, then I will tell you my authority for acting like this. ·John's baptism, what was its origin, heavenly or 25 Jn 3:27 21:32 human?' And they argued this way among themselves, 'If we say heavenly, he will retort to us, "Then why did you refuse to believe him?"; ·but if we say human, we 26 14:5;16:14c have the people to fear, for they all hold that John was a prophet.' ·So their reply 27 to Jesus was, 'We do not know.' And he retorted to them, 'Nor will I tell you my Parable of the wedding feast a 8:11c Pr 9:1–6 ‖Lk 14:16–24

1, 2 22 Jesus began to speak to them in parables once again, •'The kingdom of Heaven may be compared to a king who gave a feast for his son's wedding. Ezk 16:1a
3 He sent his servants to call those who had been invited, but they would not come. 21:34 4 Next he sent some more servants with the words, "Tell those who have been

c. They provided pilgrims with the coinage and sacrificial victims necessary for oblations: a practice which, however legitimate, lent itself to abuse. Or the expulsion of the traders may simply be seen as part of the messianic gesture of cleansing the Temple and insisting on the primitive purity of its worship.

d. 'It was not the season for figs,' Mk says. But Jesus meant to perform a symbolic action, see Jr 18:1a, in which the fig tree represents Israel punished for its fruitlessness.

e. The unusual events that Jesus has just allowed to take place in the very precincts of the Temple: the messianic ovation, expulsion of the merchants, miraculous cures.

f. An OT expression: John practised and preached that conformity to the will of God makes a person 'upright'.

g. More exactly an 'allegory' because every detail of the story has its own significance: the proprietor is God; the vineyard the chosen people, Israel, see Is 5:1a; the servants the prophets; the son Jesus, put to death outside the walls of Jerusalem; the murderous farmers the faithless Jews; the nation to which the vineyard will be entrusted, the gentiles. Not all these allegorical features are present in Mk's version (e.g. the son's body is thrown out only after his death), but Mt does need to allegorise.

h. add. v. 44 'Anyone who falls on this stone will be dashed to pieces; anyone it falls on will be crushed,' probably a gloss taken from Lk 20:18.

22 a. A parable with allegorical features; in this, as in the lesson it teaches, it resembles the one that precedes it. The king is God; the wedding feast is the happiness of the messianic age and the king's son the Messiah; those sent with invitations are the prophets and the apostles; the invited who ignore them or do them violence are the Jews; those called in from the street are the sinners and the gentiles; the burning of the city is the destruction of Jerusalem. At v. 11 the scene changes to that of the Last Judgement. Matthew, it seems, has combined two parables; one akin to Lk 14:16–24 and another whose concluding verses are found in vv. 11f; these verses explain that the man who accepted the invitation should have been dressed for the occasion—in other words, good works must go with faith, cf. 3:8; 5:20; 7:21seq.; 13:47seq.; 21:28seq.

b. This sentence appears to refer to the first part of the parable rather than to the second. It is a question not of the elect as a whole but of the Jews, the first to be invited. The parable (of vv. 1–10) neither asserts nor denies that some (a 'few') of the Jewish people have accepted the invitation and are 'chosen', see 24:22k.

c. Supporters of the Herodian dynasty, Mk 3:6a, the most suitable people to report to the Roman authorities what they hoped to induce Jesus to say against Caesar.

d. In practice they acknowledge the authority and accept the benefits of Roman government of which this coin is a symbol. Hence it is permissible, indeed it is a duty, for them to pay to that government the tribute of their obedience and of their property so long as this does not encroach on what they owe to the overriding authority of God.

e. This sect, 3:7g, adhered rigidly to the written tradition, especially as contained in the Pentateuch; its members were confident that the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, see 2 M 7:9c, was not to be found in that tradition. On this point the Pharisees were opposed to the Sadducees. See Ac 4:1a; 23:8c.

f. When God adopts a person (or a people) into that relationship which is called becoming 'his' God, that relationship cannot be so incomplete or so transient that it will allow the person to fall away into nothingness. The necessarily eternal character of God's love was not understood in the earlier ages of the long revelation unfolded in the Bible and the belief continued in 'Sheol', an underworld of shades from which there was no resurrection, Is 38:10–20; Ps 6:5; 88:10–12. To this belief the conservative traditionalism of the Sadducees, Ac 23:8c, claimed to remain faithful. But the progress of Revelation gradually brought a deeper understanding, Ps 16:10–11; 49:15; 73:24, proclaiming a renewal of life, Ws 3:1–9, for everyone; salvation extends even to the body, 2 M 7:9seq.; 12:43–46; 14:46; Dn 12:2–3. It is this last stage of revelation which Jesus approves by showing that in God's plan it was already contained within the old formula of Ex 3:6.

g. add. 'a lawyer', probably borrowed from Lk 10:25.

h. These two commandments of love of God and the neighbour are also associated in the Didache 1:2, which could be drawing on a Jewish work on the Two Ways, see 7:13d.

i. The appropriate answer would have been that, though tracing his human origin back to David, see 1:1–17, there would be something divine about the Messiah to set him above David.

23 a. In so far, no doubt, as they hand on the traditional doctrine that goes back to Moses. Jesus in this does not speak of their own interpretations; he has shown elsewhere how these are to be assessed, see 15:1–20; 16:6; 19:3–9.

b. The phylactery is a small receptacle containing the most important words of the Law; the Jews attach it to arm or forehead, carrying out the injunction of Ex 13:9,16; Dt 6:8; 11:18 literally. The four tassels were sewn one at each corner of the cloak, see Nb 15:38c.

c. Aramaic word meaning 'my master', the usual title of the Jewish teacher. Jesus himself was thus addressed by his disciples, 26:25,49.

d. Vv. 8–12, addressed to the disciples only, probably did not belong originally to this discourse.

e. Abba in Aramaic; another title of honour.

f. Perhaps an allusion to the religious leader of the community of Qumran, the 'Teacher of Righteousness'.

g. The exacting casuistry of the rabbis made observance of the Law impossible.

h. add. v. 14 'Alas for you, scribes and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You who devour the property of widows, though you make a show of lengthy prayers. The more severe will be the sentence you receive'—this is an interpolation taken from Mk 12:40; Lk 20:47 and making eight maledictions instead of the deliberate total of seven, see 6:9d.

i. A gentile convert to Judaism. Jewish propaganda was extremely active in the Graeco-Roman world.

j. To release people from injudicious oaths the rabbis used to invoke tortuous reasoning.

k. The Mosaic Law levied tithes on agricultural produce; the rabbis piously applied the precept to the most insignificant of garden herbs.

l. var. 'inside you are full'. • 'intemperance': var. 'iniquity', 'impurity', 'cupidity'.

m. Allusion to Jesus' own death soon to take place, cf. 21:38seq.

n. Terms of Jewish origin but here applied to Christian missionaries, cf. 10:41; 13:52.

o. The one referred to is probably the Zechariah of 2 Ch 24:20–22. His murder is the last one to be described in the Bible (2 Ch being the last book of the Jewish Canon) while Abel's, Gn 4:8, is the first. It is possible that 'son of Berechiah' is the result of confusion with another Zechariah, see Is 8:2 (LXX); Zc 1:1. Alternatively, the words may be a copyist's gloss.

p. See 1 K 19:10,14; 2 Ch 24:20–22; Jr 26:20–23; Ac 7:52; 1 Th 2:15; Heb 11:37; and Jewish apocryphal legends.

q. Allusion to repeated visits to Jerusalem on which the Synoptics are silent but which are reported by Jn.

r. In a little while Jesus will be with them no longer, he is to be rejected by his own people; so also will God abandon Jerusalem and its Temple.

s. In Lk 13:35 Jesus seems to mean that the Jews will not see him again until the entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday (Lk 19:28seq.). In Mt's context the words probably refer to a later coming than this, perhaps the triumphant coming at the end of time: the reconciled Jews will acclaim this return, cf. Rm 11:25seq.

24 a. According to the most probable interpretation, this eschatological discourse of Mt combines the announcement of the destruction of Jerusalem with that of the end of the world. Therefore the discourse of Mk, which is concerned only with the former event, is supplemented in three ways: 1 The addition of vv. 26–28,37–41, taken from a discourse on the Day of the Son of man, which Lk also uses, Lk 17:22–37. 2 Alterations which introduce the themes of the parousia, vv. 3,27,37,39 (never elsewhere in the gospels, see 24:3b; 1 Co 15:23n), of the 'End of the World', v. 3; cf. 13:39,40,49, and of the 'sign of the Son of man' which affects all nations of the world, v. 30. 3 The addition at the end of the discourse of several parables on watchfulness, 24:42–25:30, which prepare for the return of Jesus and the great final judgement, 25:31–46. Their fusion in this way is a theological expression of truth: though separated in time, these two are inseparable in the sense that the first is the inevitable forerunner and prefiguration of the second. The destruction of Jerusalem marks the end of the old covenant—Christ has thus manifestly returned to inaugurate his kingly rule. Such a decisive intervention in the history of salvation will not occur again until the end of time when God will judge the whole human race, now chosen in Christ, with the same judgement he pronounced (in AD 70) upon the first chosen people.

b. The Greek word is parousia; it means 'presence' and in the Graeco-Roman world was used for official visits by royalty. The Christian adopted it as a technical term for the glorious coming of Christ, see 1 Co 15:23n. It is not inevitably linked up with Christ's final coming; it can also refer to the power he will display when he comes to establish his messianic kingdom (the Church); see 16:27–28. In this passage Matthew clearly implies that he has combined the two themes.

c. Before the year 70 several impostors posed as messiahs.

d. add. 'plagues', cf. Lk 21:11.

e. Cf. 2 Ch 15:6; Is 8:21seq.; 13:13; 19:2; Jr 21:9; 34:17; Ezk 5:12; Am 4:6–11.

f. Cf. Is 13:8; 26:17; 66:7; Jr 6:24; 13:21; Ho 13:13; Mi 4:9–10. Jewish literature uses this metaphor to describe the coming of the messianic kingdom.

g. The 'inhabited world' (oikoumene), i.e. the Graeco-Roman world. All the Jews of the empire are destined to hear the good news before punishment comes to Israel, see Rm 10:18. The earliest 'witness' will be directed against those Jews who refuse to believe, cf. 10:18. Before AD 70 the gospel had already reached the main parts of the Roman empire, cf. Rm 1:5,8; Col 1:6,23; 1 Th 1:8.

h. The fall of Jerusalem.

i. Daniel probably refers to the statue of Zeus set up in Jerusalem by Antiochus Epiphanes (in 167 BC; see 1 M 1:54r). The prophecy is here applied to the siege and capture of the holy city by the gentile armies from Rome, cf. Lk 21:20.

j. Cf. Ex 10:14; 11:6; 1 M 9:27; Jr 30:7; Ba 2:2; Dn 12:1; Jl 2:2; Rv 16:18.

k. Those among the Jews who are called to enter the kingdom of God: the 'remnant', see Is 4:3c; Rm 11:5–7.

Parable of the talents [c] Lk 19:12–27

l. The coming of the Messiah will be as unmistakable as lightning. Lightning is a characteristic phenomenon that goes with divine judgement, see Ps 97:4; Is 29:6; 30:30; Zc 9:14.

m. Perhaps a proverb expressing the same idea of unmistakable manifestation: a corpse, even hidden in the desert, is immediately indicated by the circling vultures.

n. Join with v. 25; vv. 26–28 are a digression.

o. Cf. Jr 4:23–26; Ezk 32:7seq.; Jl 2:10; 3:4; 4:15; Am 8:9; Mi 1:3–4 and especially Is 13:9–10; 34:4; the text repeats the phrases of the last two references. The 'powers of heaven' are the stars and all the other celestial forces.

p. It would be a mistake to look for too exact an interpretation of this sign. The whole passage expresses in highly allusive apocalyptic imagery the certainty that the kingdom will reach its goal in spite of all persecutions and adversity.

q. In these words Daniel foretold the establishment of the messianic kingdom by a Son of man coming on the clouds. The cloud is the usual accompaniment of both OT and NT theophanies: Ex 13:22h; 19:16g; 34:5; Lv 16:2; 1 K 8:10–11; 2 M 2:8; Ps 18:11; 97:2; 104:3; Is 19:1; Jr 4:13; Ezk 1:4; 10:3seq. Ne 1:9 and Ezk 37:9. See also Is 27:13. Here, therefore, as in vv. 22 and 24, the 'chosen' are those Jews that Yahweh will rescue from the ruin of their nation in order to admit them, along with the gentiles, into his kingdom, v. 30.

t. The Son of man coming to establish his kingdom.

u. This statement refers to the destruction of Jerusalem and not to the end of the world. In the course of his preaching Jesus probably made the distinction between these two things clearer, see 16:28n and 24:1a.

v. om. (many MSS) 'nor the Son'; no doubt for the sake of theological scruples. As man Jesus had no clear knowledge of the details of future history. The evangelists often read back into the lifetime of Jesus the knowledge and understanding of his significance which the disciples later received by the full light of the Holy Spirit, see Jn 1:48dd; Mt 8:20h; 16:16d, and this shows itself in a tendency to make more explicit the details of his predictions of the future, cf. the three formal and detailed prophecies of the Passion and Resurrection, Mk 8:31; 9:31–32; 10:32–34 par., which show a state of knowledge which makes both Jesus' own agony at his approaching Passion, Mk 14:33 par., and the disciples' fear and desertion, Mk 14:50 par.; Mt 26:31*l*, difficult to understand. Nevertheless the full humanity of Jesus, Ph 2:7g, included the human experiences of learning, Lk 2:52, and of ignorance, compare 26:39*o*.

w. After the discourse foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem and the visible coming of the messianic reign, Matthew adds three parables dealing with the ultimate fate of individuals. The first presents one of Christ's servants who, like the apostles, is given a task to perform; he is judged on the way he performs it.

x. A word of uncertain meaning; probably to be taken metaphorically: 'he will cut him off', a sort of 'excommunication', cf. 18:17.

25 a. The wedding attendants (lit. 'virgins') represent Christians waiting for Christ. Even if he is slow to come, they must be watchful, i.e. keep their lamps ready.

b. add. 'and the bride'.

c. Christians are servants expected by Jesus, their master, to make full use of any gifts he has given them so that his kingdom may grow on earth; they must give an account of this administration. The parable of the pounds, Lk 19:12–27, has a similar form but a rather different moral.

d. The happiness of the heavenly banquet, 8:11c. • 'I will trust you with greater things' implies an active sharing with Christ in his reign.

VII: PASSION AND RESURRECTION

‖Mk 14:1–2 ‖Lk 22:1–2 ### The conspiracy against Jesus

26 Jesus had now finished all he wanted to say, and he told his disciples, •'It 1, 2 will be Passover, as you know, in two days' time, and the Son of man will be handed over to be crucified.'

Ps 2:1–2;31:13 Jn 11:47–53 Ac 4:25–27 Then the chief priests and the elders of the people assembled in the palace of the 3 high priest, whose name was Caiaphas, •and made plans to arrest Jesus by some 4 trick and have him put to death. •They said, however, 'It must not be during the 5 festivities; there must be no disturbance among the people.'

‖Mk 14:3–9 ‖Jn 12:1–8 ### The anointing at Bethany[a]

Jesus was at Bethany in the house of Simon, a man who had suffered from a 6 virulent skin-disease, when •a woman came to him with an alabaster jar of very 7 expensive ointment, and poured it on his head as he was at table. •When they saw 8 this, the disciples said indignantly, 'Why this waste? •This could have been sold 9 for a high price and the money given the poor.' •But Jesus noticed this and said, 10

'Why are you upsetting the woman? What she has done for me is indeed a good has done will be told as well, in remembrance of her.'

disciples did what Jesus told them and prepared the Passover.

e. The perspective changes: it is now a question of Christ's last coming at the end of the world.

f. Every human being of every period of history. The resurrection of the dead does not need to be mentioned, cf. 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:41seq.

g. Christ, the Messiah-King, ushers the elect from his own kingdom into that of his Father, 13:43k.

h. People are judged by their works of mercy (here described in OT terms, cf. Jb 22:6seq.; Si 7:32seq.; Is 58:7) not by their occasional exploits, cf. 7:22seq. In addition to these meritorious acts we find in 10:32seq. the profession of faith.

26 a. In Jn, the woman of this episode is named as Mary, the sister of Lazarus; the event described in Lk 7:36–50 is not the same.

b. The Jews divided 'good works' into 'almsgiving' and 'charitable deeds'; the latter were reckoned superior and included, among other pious acts, the burial of the dead. The woman, therefore, by making provision for Jesus' burial, has performed a 'work' greater than almsgiving. Jesus seems to suggest, v. 12, that some loving instinct has given her a presentiment of the real significance of her action.

c. Thirty shekels—and not thirty denarii as is commonly said. It was the price the Law fixed for a slave's life, Ex 21:32.

d. The 'first day' of the week during which unleavened loaves (azymes) were eaten, see Ex 12:1a; 23:14d, was normally that which followed the Passover supper, i.e. the 15th of Nisan; the Synoptics, however, give this title to the preceding day, thus attesting a wider use of the term. Further, if we take account of Jn 18:28 and of other details connected with the Passion, it seems fairly certain that in this particular year the Passover supper was celebrated on the evening of the Friday (or 'Preparation Day', 27:62; see Jn 19:14,31,42). Christ's Last Supper, which the Synoptics put on the day before, i.e. on the Thursday evening, must therefore be explained in one of two ways: either a whole section of the Jewish people thus anticipated the rite, or (and this is preferable) Christ anticipated it on his own initiative. In this second hypothesis Jesus, unable to celebrate the Passover on the Friday (though, indeed, he celebrated it in his own person on the cross, Jn 19:36u; 1 Co 5:7), instituted his new rite in the course of a supper which, in consequence, became endowed with the characteristics of the old Passover. Nisan 14th (the day of the Passover supper) fell on a Friday in AD 30 and 33; interpreters therefore take one or other of these years as the date of Christ's death according as they assign his baptism to 28 or to 29 and reckon a longer or shorter public ministry.

e. The first course; it preceded the Passover supper properly so called.

f. They have come to the Passover supper itself. The rubrics for this solemn blessing of bread and wine are laid down exactly; onto this ceremony Jesus grafts the sacramental rites of the new religious order of things which he institutes.

g. 'Returned thanks' represents the Greek verb eucharisto, the noun from which has been adopted as a name for the whole action which re-creates the Last Supper.

h. add. (some MSS and versions) 'new', cf. Lk 22:20; 1 Co 11:25.

And suddenly while he was still speaking, Judas, one of the Twelve, appeared, and 47

And suddenly, one of the followers of Jesus grasped his sword and drew it; he 51

Now all this happened to fulfil the prophecies in scripture. Then all the disciples 56 deserted him and ran away.

i. As at Sinai, the blood of victims sealed the covenant of Yahweh with his people, Ex 24:4–8c, so on the cross the blood of Jesus, the perfect victim, is about to seal the 'new' covenant, cf. Lk 22:20, between God and humanity—the covenant foretold by the prophets, Jr 31:31l. Jesus takes on himself the task of universal redemption that Isaiah assigns to the 'servant of Yahweh', Is 42:6; 49:6; 53:12, see 41:8f; cf. Heb 8:8; 9:15; 12:24. The idea of a new covenant comes also in Paul in a number of contexts quite apart from 1 Co 11:25, which shows its great importance, 2 Co 3:4–6; Ga 3:15–20; 4:24.

j. Allusion to the eschatological banquet, cf. 8:11; 22:1seq. Jesus and his disciples will never meet at table again.

k. The psalms of the Hallel, Ps 113–18, with which the Passover meal closed.

l. lit. 'be brought down'; it will be an obstacle for their faith when they see the one they believe to be Messiah, 16:16, and whose approaching triumph they expect, 20:21seq., passively yield to his enemies. For a time it will make them lose courage and even faith, cf. Lk 22:31–32.

m. The name means 'oilpress'. It lies in the Kidron valley at the foot of the Mt of Olives.

n. The turn of phrase recalls Ps 42:5 and Jon 4:9.

o. Jesus feels the full force of the human fear of death; he feels the instinctive urge to escape, gives expression to it and then stifles it by his acceptance of the Father's will, see 4:1a.

p. Gently ironical reproach: The hour you should have stayed awake with me has slipped by. Now the testing-time has begun and Jesus must go through it alone; the disciples may go on sleeping if they wish.

q. lit. 'Friend, for what you are here.' Instead of a question ('Why are you here?') or a reproach ('For what purpose are you here!') one may prefer to see in this a stereotyped phrase meaning 'do what you are here for', 'to your work!' Jesus cuts short the empty show of greeting: it is time for action, cf. Jn 13:27.

r. The accounts of Luke and of John enable us to distinguish: a preliminary hearing before Annas, at night time, and a solemn session of the Sanhedrin on the following morning, 27:1. Matthew and Mark describe the night episode in terms of the morning one which was the only formal and decisive meeting. But for an alternative chronology, see 26:17d.

s. Central to Jesus' message was the provisional nature of the Jewish cult, which was to be perfected by his own new covenant. As Jn 2:22*i* makes clear, the full significance of his statement became clear only after his resurrection. A new Temple was to be substituted for the old one, and this was to be, in the first place, his own body risen after three days, 16:21; 17:23; 20:19; Jn 2:19–22, but beyond that, it was to be the Church, Mt 16:18.

t. var. Some versions present this as one question 'Do you make no answer to the evidence these men are bringing against you?'

u. 'The Power' is equivalent to 'Yahweh', see 3:2d. The Gospel shows Jesus at this critical moment abandoning his policy of the messianic secret, see Mk 1:34m, and unequivocally accepting the title of Messiah, although making clear that he is Messiah not in the traditional sense of a political liberator, but in the sense of the glorious personage whom Daniel had seen in vision, Dn 7:13k. With this allusion to Dn is combined reference to Ps 110:1, which features so largely in the apostolic preaching, see Ac 2:33t. Since this understanding of the expression 'Son of man' stems probably from the evangelists rather than from Jesus himself, see 8:20h, it is probable also that the evangelists are responsible for this underlining of the significance of this scene: Jesus was rejected and condemned as a messianic claimant although he in fact avoided the title because of its political overtones. It is only in the apostolic preaching after Pentecost that Jesus' disciples explicitly acknowledge him as Messiah.

v. It is difficult to decide precisely what the blasphemy was: not the claim to be Messiah; perhaps the claim to be Son of God though under arrest.

w. Mt's editing is awkward, for, not being blindfolded as in Lk 22:63, Jesus can easily indicate who hit him. The central point is that he is mocked as 'prophet' because of his saying about the Temple, and perhaps more precisely as 'Prophet-Messiah' (this address to Jesus as 'Christ' is unique in the gospel), that is as claimant to be the eschatological High Priest who proposes to found a new Temple.

x. Nazoraios; var. Nazarenos.

y. The Galilean accent.

26:34 Peter remembered what Jesus had said, 'Before the cock crows you will have disowned me three times.' And he went outside and wept bitterly.

When he found that Jesus had been condemned, then Judas, his betrayer, was filled with remorse and took the thirty silver pieces back to the chief priests and elders •saying, 'I have sinned. That is your concern.' •And flinging down the silver pieces in the sanctuary he made off, and went and hanged himself. •The chief priests picked up the silver pieces and said, 'It is against the Law to put this into the treasury; it is blood-money.' •So they discussed the matter and with it bought the potter's field as a graveyard for foreigners, •and this is why the field is still called the Field of Blood.[c] •The word spoken through the prophet Jeremiah[d] was then fulfilled: And they took the thirty silver pieces, the sum at which the precious One was priced by the children of Israel, •and they gave them for the potter's field, just as the Lord directed me.[e]

Jesus, then, was brought before the governor, and the governor put to him this question, 'Are you the king of the Jews?' Jesus replied, 'It is you who say it.'[f] •But when he was accused by the chief priests and the elders he refused to answer at all. Pilate then said to him, 'Do you not hear how many charges they have made against you?' •But to the governor's amazement, he offered not a word in answer to any of the charges.

Jn 18:39 At festival time it was the governor's practice to release a prisoner for the people, anyone they chose. •Now there was then a notorious prisoner whose name was Barabbas.[g] •So when the crowd gathered, Pilate said to them, 'Which do you want me to release for you: Barabbas, or Jesus who is called Christ?' •For Pilate knew it was out of jealousy that they had handed him over.

Now as he was seated in the chair of judgement, his wife sent him a message, 'Have nothing to do with that upright man; I have been extremely upset today by a dream that I had about him.'

The chief priests and the elders, however, had persuaded the crowd to demand the release of Barabbas and the execution of Jesus. •So when the governor spoke and asked them, 'Which of the two do you want me to release for you?' they said, 'Barabbas.' •Pilate said to them, 'But in that case, what am I to do with Jesus who is called Christ?' They all said, 'Let him be crucified!' •He asked, 'But what harm has he done?' But they shouted all the louder, 'Let him be crucified!' •Then Pilate saw that he was making no impression, that in fact a riot was imminent. So he took some water, washed his hands[h] in front of the crowd and said, 'I am innocent of this man's blood.[i] It is your concern.' •And the people, every one of them, shouted back, 'Let his blood be on us and on our children!'[j] •Then he released Barabbas for them. After having Jesus scourged[k] he handed him over to be crucified.

‖Mk 15:16–20 ‖Jn 19:2–3
Jesus is crowned with thorns

Then the governor's soldiers took Jesus with them into the Praetorium[l] and collected the whole cohort round him. •And they stripped him and put a scarlet cloak round him,[m] •and having twisted some thorns into a crown they put this on his head and placed a reed in his right hand. To make fun of him they knelt to him saying, 'Hail, king of the Jews!'[n] •And they spat on him and took the reed and struck him on the head with it. •And when they had finished making fun of him, they took off the cloak and dressed him in his own clothes and led him away to crucifixion.

Ps 22:1

27 a. var. 'Pontius Pilate', see Lk 3:1b. • In Judaea, as in all the provinces of the Empire, Rome reserved to itself power of life and death; the Jews had to approach this magistrate to gain any legal standing for the decision they had made; they themselves could not pronounce sentence.

b. var. 'upright' blood', cf. 23:35.

c. In Aramaic hakeldama (cf. Ac 1:19). A very ancient tradition locates it in the Valley of Gehinnom.

d. om. 'Jeremiah'. Actually this is a free quotation from Zc 11:12–13 combined with the idea of the purchase of a field, an idea suggested by Jr 32:6–15. This, plus the fact that Jeremiah speaks of potters (Jr 18:2seq.) who lived in the Hakeldama district (Jr 19:1seq.), explains how the whole text could by approximation be attributed to Jeremiah.

e. Yahweh complained that, in the person of his prophet Zechariah, he had received from the Israelites a wage that was nothing but an insult. The sale of Jesus for the same paltry sum appeals to Matthew as a fulfilment of this saying of the prophet.

f. By these words Jesus acknowledges as correct, at least in a sense, what he would never have said on his own initiative. See above 26:25,64; and cf. Jn 18:33–37.

g. Here and in v. 17, var. 'Jesus Barabbas', which would give peculiar point to Pilate's question but appears to have its origin in an apocryphal tradition.

h. The significance of this gesture must have been well understood by the Jews, see Dt 21:6seq.; Ps 26:6; 73:13.

i. var. 'of the blood of this righteous man'.

j. Traditional OT phrase, 2 S 1:16; 3:28–9, cf. Ac 18:6, by which they accept responsibility for the death they demand.

k. In Roman practice the normal prelude to crucifixion.

l. The Praetorium, or residence of the praetor, was probably the former palace of King Herod the Great in which the procurator used to reside whenever he went up from Caesarea to Jerusalem. This palace, situated in the west quarter of the city, was not the family residence of the Hasmonaeans: this was near the Temple and in it Herod Antipas probably received Jesus, sent to him by Pilate, Lk 23:7–12. Some commentators think that the Praetorium was in the fortress called Antonia, to the north of the Temple. But this accords neither with the custom of the procurators as it is known to us from the ancient texts, nor with the usage of the word 'praetorium' which cannot move around like this, nor with the movements of Pilate and the Jewish crowd in the gospel narratives of the Passion, especially that of Jn.

m. The Roman soldier's cloak (sagum); being red it suggested the imperial purple to the mocking soldiery.

n. The Jews had mocked Jesus as 'Prophet', 26:68seq.; the Romans mock him as 'King'. These two scenes well reflect the two aspects, religious and political, of the trial of Jesus.

o. Approximate transliteration of the Aramaic word gulgoltha, 'a place of the skull', in Lat. Calvaria (whence 'Calvary').

p. A narcotic which compassionate Jewish women used to offer the condemned to diminish their sufferings. The wine was mixed with 'myrrh' (cf. Mk 15:23) rather than with 'gall'. The 'gall' in Mt (like the correction of 'wine' to 'vinegar' in the Antiochene recension) is due to a reminiscence of Ps 69:21. Jesus refuses the palliative.

q. add. 'that the saying of the prophet might be fulfilled: they divided my garments between them and for my robe they cast lots' (Ps 22:18), a gloss taken from Jn 19:24.

r. From noon until three in the afternoon.

s. A cry of real distress but not of despair: this lament which Jesus takes from the scriptures is a prayer to God and is followed in the Psalm by an expression of joyful confidence in final victory.

t. Malicious play on words based on the expectation of Elijah as the Messiah's precursor, see 17:10–13e, or on the Jewish belief that he would come to help the upright in their hour of need.

Ps 69:21 ‖Lk 23:36 ‖Jn 19:29 and one of them quickly ran to get a sponge which he filled with vinegar[u] and, 48 putting it on a reed, gave it him to drink. ·But the rest of them said, 'Wait! And see 49 if Elijah will come to save him.' ·But Jesus, again crying out in a loud voice, yielded 50 up his spirit.

And suddenly, the veil of the Sanctuary[v] was torn in two from top to bottom, the 51 1 P 3:19h earth quaked, the rocks were split,[w] ·the tombs opened and the bodies of many 52 holy people rose from the dead, ·and these, after his resurrection, came out of the 53 tombs, entered the holy city and appeared to a number of people.[x] ·The centurion, 54 together with the others guarding Jesus, had seen the earthquake and all that was taking place, and they were terrified and said, 'In truth this man was 4:3d Mk 15:39g Lk 8:2–3 Jn 19:25j 13:55 son of God.'

And many women were there, watching from a distance, the same women 55 who had followed Jesus from Galilee and looked after him. ·Among them were 56 Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of Zebedee's sons.

‖Mk 15:42–47 ‖Lk 23:50–55 ‖Jn 19:38–42 The burial

When it was evening, there came a rich man of Arimathaea, called Joseph, who 57 had himself become a disciple of Jesus. ·This man went to Pilate and asked for the 58 body of Jesus. Then Pilate ordered it to be handed over. ·So Joseph took the body, 59 Is 53:9f wrapped it in a clean shroud ·and put it in his own new[y] tomb which he had hewn 60 out of the rock. He then rolled a large stone across the entrance of the tomb and went away. ·Now Mary of Magdala and the other Mary were there, sitting opposite 61 the sepulchre.

The guard at the tomb

Next day, that is, when Preparation Day[z] was over, the chief priests and the 62
Pharisees went in a body to Pilate ·and said to him, 'Your Excellency, we recall 63 16:21 Ac 10:40n that this impostor said, while he was still alive, "After three days I shall rise again."
Therefore give the order to have the sepulchre kept secure until the third day, 64 for fear his disciples come and steal him away and tell the people, "He has risen from the dead." This last piece of fraud would be worse than what went before.' Pilate said to them, 'You may have your guard;[aa] go and make all as secure as 65 you know how.' ·So they went and made the sepulchre secure, putting seals on the 66 stone and mounting a guard.

‖Mk 16:1–8 ‖Lk 24:1–10 Jn 20:1 The empty tomb. The angel's message

28 After the Sabbath,[a] and towards dawn on the first day of the week, Mary of 1
Magdala and the other Mary[b] went to visit the sepulchre.[c] ·And suddenly 2 27:54x 1:20g there was a violent earthquake, for an angel of the Lord, descending from heaven, 17:2 Dn 10:6 came and rolled away the stone and sat on it. ·His face was like lightning, his robe 3 white as snow. ·The guards were so shaken by fear of him that they were like dead 4 men. ·But the angel spoke; and he said to the women, 'There is no need for you to 5 be afraid. I know you are looking for Jesus, who was crucified. ·He is not here, for 6 he has risen, as he said he would. Come and see the place where he[d] lay, ·then go 7 quickly and tell his disciples, "He has risen from the dead and now he is going 26:32 ahead of you to Galilee; that is where you will see him." Look! I have told you.'
Filled with awe and great joy the women came quickly away from the tomb[e] and 8 ran to tell his disciples.

Jn 20:14seq. Appearance to the women

And suddenly, coming to meet them, was Jesus. 'Greetings,' he said. And the 9 women came up to him and, clasping his feet, they did him homage. ·Then Jesus 10 said to them, 'Do not be afraid; go and tell my brothers that they must leave for Galilee; there they will see me.'[f]

Precautions taken by the leaders of the people

11 Now while they were on their way, some of the guards went off into the city to tell 12 the chief priests all that had happened. •These held a meeting with the elders and, 13 after some discussion, handed a considerable sum of money to the soldiers •with these instructions, 'This is what you must say, "His disciples came during the night 14 and stole him away while we were asleep." •And should the governor come to hear of this, we undertake to put things right with him ourselves and to see that you do 15 not get into trouble.' •So they took the money and carried out their instructions, and to this day that is the story among the Jews.

Appearance in Galilee. The mission to the world

16 Meanwhile the eleven disciples set out for Galilee, to the mountain where Jesus 17 had arranged to meet them. •When they saw him they fell down before him, though 18 some hesitated.[g] •Jesus came up and spoke to them.[h] He said, 'All authority in 19 heaven and on earth has been given to me. •Go, therefore, make disciples of all nations; baptise them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy 20 Spirit,[i] •and teach them to observe all the commands I gave you. And look, I am with you always; yes, to the end of time.'

8:10b •Dn 7:14 Jn 3:35t Mk 16:15–16 Lk 24:47 Ac 2:38y 1:8k Jn 14:18–21

u. Sour drink of the Roman soldier. Probably the gesture was sympathetic, cf. Jn 19:28seq.; the Synoptics regard it as malevolent (Lk 23:36) and describe it in terms that recall Ps 69:21.

v. Either the curtain which hung in front of the Holy Place or, more probably, the one which divided the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies, see Ex 26:31seq. Following Heb 9:12; 10:20, Christian tradition saw in this tearing of the veil the abrogation of the old Mosaic cult and the way opened up by Christ into the messianic sanctuary.

w. The evangelist deliberately describes the circumstances surrounding the crucifixion in terms drawn from prophetic descriptions of the 'Day of Yahweh', see Am 8:9h.

x. This resurrection of the upright is in the OT a sign of the eschatological era (Is 26:19; Ezk 37; Dn 12:2). Freed from Hades by the death of Jesus, see Mt 16:18h, they wait for his resurrection to enter with him the Holy City, that is the Heavenly Jerusalem (Rv 21:2,10; 22:19); this was how the early Fathers understood it. This is the first expression of faith in the liberation of the dead by Christ's descent into hell, see 1 P 3:19h.

y. The fact that the shroud was 'clean' and the tomb 'new' stress that the burial was an act of piety. The latter feature also shows how the burial was possible, for the corpse of an executed man could not be placed in a tomb already in use, where it would have defiled the bones of the upright.

z. Greek paraskeue ('preparation') meaning Friday, i.e. the day when preparations were made for the Sabbath.

aa. i.e. either 'Use your own guard', see Lk 22:4c, or 'I put a guard at your disposal', cf. Jn 18:3.

28 a. And not 'On the Sabbath evening (Vulg.). Since the Sabbath was the day of rest, the 'first day of the (Jewish) week' corresponds to our Sunday (Rv 1:10), dies dominica, or the 'day of the Lord' so named in memory of the resurrection. See Ac 20:7k; 1 Co 16:2.

b. 'Mary, mother of James', Mk 16:1; Lk 24:10; cf. Mt 27:56 and 61.

c. In Mt, the tomb is sealed and guarded; the women therefore have not come to anoint the body of Jesus, as in Mk and Lk, but only to 'visit' the tomb.

d. 'he'; var. 'the Lord'.

e. var. 'came quickly out of the tomb', see Mk 16:8.

f. Though they agree in recording the initial apparition of an angel (or angels) to the women (28:5–7; Mk 16:5–7; Lk 24:4–7; Jn 20:12–13), the four gospels show divergencies when it comes to the appearances of Christ. Setting Mark aside (his abrupt conclusion presents a special problem, see Mk 16:8b, and his 'longer ending' recapitulates the data of the other gospels) all the gospels make a clear distinction, both literary and doctrinal, between: 1 Appearances to individuals that help to prove the fact of the resurrection; to Mary Magdalen, either alone (Jn 20:14–17; cf. Mk 16:9), or accompanied (Mt 28:9–10); to the disciples on the road to Emmaus (Lk 24:13–32; cf. Mk 16:12); to Simon (Lk 24:34); to Thomas (Jn 20:26–29). 2 A collective appearance that is coupled with an apostolic mission (28:16–20; Lk 24:36–49; Jn 20:19–23; see also Mk 16:14–18). As well as this distinction there are two traditions as to where the appearances took place: 1 All in Galilee (28:10,16–20; Mk 16:7). 2 All in Judaea (Lk and Jn 20). By way of appendix, Jn 21 adds an appearance in Galilee which, though it bears the character of an appearance to individuals (it is for Peter and John predominantly), is nevertheless coupled with an apostolic mission (given to Peter). The primitive apostolic preaching that Paul reproduces in 1 Co 15:3–7 lists five appearances (apart from the appearance to Paul himself) which are not easily harmonised with the gospel accounts; in particular he mentions an appearance to James of which the Gospel to the Hebrews also speaks. All this gives the impression that different groups, which cannot now be easily identified, have given rise to different strands of tradition. But these very divergencies of tradition are far better witnesses than any artificial or contrived uniformity to the antiquity of the evidence and the historical quality of all these manifestations of the risen Christ.

g. An alternative translation with less grammatical support: 'those who had hesitated'. On the doubts Mt mentions here, cf. Mk 16:11,14; Lk 24:11,41; Jn 20:24–29.

h. In these last instructions of Jesus, with the ensuing promise, is contained the apostolic mission of the Church. The glorified Christ wields power on earth just as in heaven, 6:10; cf. Jn 17:2; Ph 2:10; Rv 12:10, limitless power, Mt 7:29; 9:6; 21:23, received from his Father, see Jn 3:35t. His disciples 'therefore' wield this power in his name by baptising and forming Christians. Their mission is universal: after having first been proclaimed to the people of Israel, 10:5f; 15:24, as the divine plan demanded, salvation must then be offered to all nations, 8:11; 21:41; 22:8–10; 24:14,30seq.; 25:32; 26:13; see Ac 1:8i; 13:5e; Rm 1:16h. In this work of universal conversion, however long and laborious, the risen Lord will be present and active with his own.

i. This formula is probably a reflection of the liturgical usage established later in the primitive community. It will be remembered that Ac speaks of baptising 'in the name of Jesus', see Ac 1:5f. The attachment of the baptised person to all three persons of the Trinity will have been made explicit only later. But whatever the variation in formula, the underlying reality remains the same. Baptism attaches a person to Jesus the Saviour; all his work of salvation proceeds from the Father's love and reaches its completion in the outpouring of the Spirit.

I: PRELUDE TO THE PUBLIC MINISTRY OF JESUS

‖Mt 3:1–12
‖Lk 3:1–18

The proclamation of John the Baptist

1 The beginning of the gospel [a] about Jesus Christ, the Son of God. [b] •It is written 1, 2 in the prophet Isaiah:

make his paths straight.

Mt 3:6c John the Baptist was in the desert, proclaiming a baptism of repentance for the 4 forgiveness of sins. •All Judaea and all the people of Jerusalem made their way to 5 him, and as they were baptised by him in the river Jordan they confessed their sins.
John wore a garment of camel-skin, [c] and he lived on locusts and wild honey. •In 6, 7

II: THE GALILEAN MINISTRY

‖Mt 4:12–17
‖Lk 4:14–15

Jesus begins to proclaim the message

After John had been arrested, Jesus went into Galilee. There he proclaimed the 14 Rm 1:1 gospel from God saying, •'The time is fulfilled, [e] and the kingdom of God is close at 15
•Dn 7:22
Mt 3:2c;8:10b hand. Repent, and believe the gospel.'

‖Mt 4:18–22
‖Lk 5:1–11

The first four disciples are called

As he was walking along by the Lake of Galilee he saw Simon and Simon's brother 16
Andrew casting a net in the lake—for they were fishermen. •And Jesus said to 17

18 them, 'Come after me[f] and I will make you into fishers of people.' ·And at once they left their nets and followed him.
19 Going on a little further, he saw James son of Zebedee and his brother John; 20 they too were in their boat, mending the nets. ·At once he called them and, leaving their father Zebedee in the boat with the men he employed, they went after him.

Jesus teaches in Capernaum and cures a demoniac ‖Lk 4:31–37

21 They went as far as Capernaum, and at once on the Sabbath he went into the 22 synagogue and began to teach. ·And his teaching made a deep impression on them Mt 7:28seq.
because, unlike the scribes, he taught them with authority.
23 And at once in their synagogue there was a man with an unclean spirit,[g] and he Mt 8:29k 24 shouted, ·'What do you want with us,[h] Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come[i] to Mt 2:23*l*
25 destroy us? I know who you are: the Holy One of God.'[j] ·But Jesus rebuked it Ac 3:14i 26 saying, 'Be quiet! Come out of him!' ·And the unclean spirit threw the man into 1:34m 27 convulsions and with a loud cry went out of him. ·The people were so astonished that they started asking one another what it all meant, saying, 'Here is a teaching that is new, and with authority behind it: he gives orders even to unclean spirits[k] 4:41 28 and they obey him.' ·And his reputation at once spread everywhere, through all Mt 8:29k the surrounding Galilean countryside.

Cure of Simon's mother-in-law ‖Mt 8:14–15
‖Lk 4:38–39

29 And at once on leaving the synagogue, he went[l] with James and John straight to 30 the house of Simon and Andrew. ·Now Simon's mother-in-law was in bed and 13:3 31 feverish, and at once they told him about her. ·He went in to her, took her by the 5:41 hand and helped her up. And the fever left her and she began to serve them.

A number of cures ‖Mt 8:16
‖Lk 4:40–41

32 That evening, after sunset, they brought to him all who were sick and those who 33, 34 were possessed by devils. ·The whole town came crowding round the door, ·and he cured many who were sick with diseases of one kind or another; he also drove out many devils, but he would not allow them to speak, because they knew 3:12 who he was.[m]

1 a. lit. 'good news', Old English 'god-spel', Gk euaggelion, is the coming of the kingdom of God, see Mt 4:17f. It was prepared for in the OT, Is 40:9; 52:7; 61:1, and is announced by Jesus who 'proclaims' the good news, 1:14 and par.; Mt 4:23; 9:35; Lk 4:43; 8:1; cf. Mk 16:15, and calls for belief in it, Mk 1:15; see Mt 8:10b; Rm 1:16h. In his person this kingdom has come, Mt 11:5seq.; Lk 4:18,21. After him, his disciples will bring the good news to the whole world, 16:15; Mt 24:14seq.; 26:13seq.; Ac 5:42q; Ga 2:7. This good news was first proclaimed, then gradually written down, until it took a fixed form in our four canonical gospels, see pp. 1601–3. • The noun, which Lk does not use at all, has always in Mk (and in Mt 26:13) the force of a technical term, used in an absolute sense, and is best translated 'gospel'. Elsewhere in Mt and always in Lk, who uses the derived verb, Lk 1:19n, the translation 'good news' is preferable.

b. om. 'Son of God'.

c. var. 'John wore a garment of camel-hair with a leather belt round his waist,' cf. Mt 3:4.

d. Mark omits or ignores the detail of the three temptations which Matthew and Luke derive from some other source. The mention of the wild beasts evokes the messianic ideal, announced by the prophets, of a return to the heavenly peace, see Is 11:6–9, 6e, associated with the theme of the retreat into the desert, see Ho 2:16p. The ministration of the angels expresses the divine protection, cf. Ps 91:11–13, a text made use of by Mt 4:6 and par.

e. Fulfilment implies a continuity between the stages of God's plan, 1 K 8:24; Ws 8:8; Ac 1:7i. When the last of these stages begins, Rm 3:26m; Heb 1:2a, the time is 'fulfilled', Ga 4:4c; cf. 1 Co 10:11; God brings to completion not only the scriptures, Mt 1:22j, and the Law, Mt 5:17h, but also the whole purpose of the old covenant, Mt 9:17; 26:28h; Rm 10:4; 2 Co 3:14–15; Heb 10:1,14. At the end of this last period of history, 1 Co 10:11; 1 Tm 4:1; 1 P 1:5,20; 1 Jn 2:18, which is the 'end of the last age', Heb 9:26, will come another end, the 'end of time', Mt 13:40,49; 24:3; 28:20. This is the Day, 1 Co 15:23n, the Day when he is revealed, 1 Co 1:7c, the Day of his Judgement, Rm 2:6b.

f. Those whom Jesus calls to follow him, 1:20; 2:14seq.; Mt 19:21p, 27–28; Lk 9:57–62; see also Dt 13:3,5; 1 K 14:8; 19:20, in order to have a share with him must leave all, Mk 10:21,28 and par.; cf. Jn 12:24–26. For those disciples who will not know the earthly Jesus the same ideas are expressed in terms of 'fellowship', Ph 3:10; 1 Jn 1:3b, or of 'imitation', 2 Th 3:7.

g. This was the name given by Judaism, see Zc 13:2, to demons, foreign and even hostile to the religious and moral purity demanded by the service of God; see also 3:11,30; Mt 10:1; 12:43; Lk 4:33,36.

h. lit. 'What is there for us and for you?', see Jn 2:4d.

i. var. 'You have come'.

j. God is the unique 'Holy One', and all that belongs to him is holy, Lv 17:1a,44f; 19:2; Is 6:3; this is pre-eminently true of Jesus who is God's Son and his chosen Messiah, Mk 1:10seq., the appointed head of 'the nation of saints', Dn 7:18m, i.e. of the company of the elect, the Christian community, Ac 9:13g; cf. Lk 1:35; 4:34; Jn 6:69u; Ac 2:27; 3:14u; 4:17,30; Rv 3:7.

k. Or punctuate 'Here is a teaching that is new; with authority he gives orders even to unclean spirits.'

l. var. 'they went'.

m. Jesus forbids the news that he is the Messiah to be spread by the devils, 1;25,34;3:12, by those he cures, 1:44;

‖Lk 4:42–44 Jesus quietly leaves Capernaum and travels through Galilee

In the morning, long before dawn, he got up and left the house and went off to a 35
Mt 14:23par.; 26:36par. Lk 3:21j lonely place and prayed there. 36 Simon and his companions set out in search of him, 36 and when they found him they said, 'Everybody is looking for you.' 37, 38 He answered, 'Let us go elsewhere, to the neighbouring country towns, so that I can proclaim the Jn 18:37 message there too, because that is why I came.' [n] 39 And he went all through Galilee, preaching in their synagogues and driving out devils.

‖Mt 8:2–4 ‖Lk 5:12–16 Cure of a man suffering from a virulent skin-disease

A man suffering from a virulent skin-disease came to him and pleaded on his knees 40 saying, 'If you are willing, you can cleanse me.' 41 Feeling sorry for him, Jesus 5:30b stretched out his hand, touched him and said to him, 'I am willing. Be cleansed.'
And at once the skin-disease left him and he was cleansed. 42, 43 And at once Jesus 1:34m sternly sent him away and said to him, 44 'Mind you tell no one anything, but go and Lv 14:1–32 show yourself to the priest, and make the offering for your cleansing prescribed by Moses as evidence to them.' 45 The man went away, but then started freely proclaiming and telling the story everywhere, so that Jesus could no longer go openly into any town, but stayed outside in deserted places. Even so, people from all around kept coming to him.

‖Mt 9:1–8 ‖Lk 5:17–26 Cure of a paralytic

2 When he returned to Capernaum, some time later word went round that he 1 3:20 was in the house; 2 and so many people collected that there was no room left, even in front of the door. He was preaching the word to them 3 when some people came bringing him a paralytic carried by four men, 4 but as they could not get the man to him through the crowd, they stripped the roof over the place where Jesus was; and when they had made an opening, they lowered the stretcher on which the Mt 8:10b paralytic lay. 5 Seeing their faith, Jesus said to the paralytic, 'My child, your sins are forgiven.' [o] 6 Now some scribes were sitting there, and they thought to themselves, Ps 32:5 Is 43:25 7 'How can this man talk like that? He is being blasphemous. Who but God can forgive sins?' 8 And at once, Jesus, inwardly aware that this is what they were thinking, said to them, 'Why do you have these thoughts in your hearts? 9 Which of these is easier to say to the paralytic, "Your sins are forgiven" or to say, "Get up, pick up your stretcher and walk"? 10 But to prove to you that the Son of man has authority to forgive sins on earth'—11 he said to the paralytic—'I order you: get up, pick up your stretcher, and go off home.' 12 And the man got up, and at once picked up his stretcher and walked out in front of everyone, so that they were all aston-Mt 9:33 ished and praised God saying, 'We have never seen anything like this.'

‖Mt 9:9 ‖Lk 5:27–28 The call of Levi

He went out again to the shore of the lake; [p] and all the people came to him, and he 13 taught them. 14 As he was walking along he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting at the tax office, and he said to him, 'Follow me.' And he got up and followed him.

‖Mt 9:10–13 ‖Lk 5:29–32 Eating with sinners

When Jesus was at dinner in his house, a number of tax collectors and sinners were 15 also sitting at table with Jesus and his disciples; for there were many of them among his followers. 16 When the scribes of the Pharisee party saw him eating with sinners and tax collectors, they said to his disciples, 'Why does he eat with tax collectors and sinners?' 17 When Jesus heard this he said to them, 'It is not the healthy who need the doctor, but the sick. I came to call not the upright, but sinners.'

‖Mt 9:14–17 ‖Lk 5:33–39 A discussion on fasting

John's disciples and the Pharisees were keeping a fast, when some people came to 18 him and said to him, 'Why is it that John's disciples and the disciples of the 19 Pharisees fast, but your disciples do not?' ·Jesus replied, 'Surely the bridegroom's attendants cannot fast while the bridegroom is still with them? As long as they have 20 the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast. ·But the time will come when the 21 bridegroom is taken away from them, and then, on that day, they will fast. ·No one sews a piece of unshrunken cloth on an old cloak; otherwise, the patch pulls away 22 from it, the new from the old, and the tear gets worse. ·And nobody puts new wine into old wineskins; otherwise, the wine will burst the skins, and the wine is lost and the skins too. No! New wine into fresh skins!'

Picking corn on the Sabbath

‖Mt 12:1–8
‖Lk 6:1–5

23 It happened that one Sabbath day he was taking a walk through the cornfields, and 24 his disciples began to make a path by plucking ears of corn.[c] ·And the Pharisees Dt 23:26 said to him, 'Look, why are they doing something on the Sabbath day that is 25 forbidden?' ·And he replied, 'Have you never read what David did in his time of 26 need when he and his followers were hungry—·how he went into the house of God when Abiathar[d] was high priest, and ate the loaves of the offering which only 1 S 21:2–7 the priests are allowed to eat, and how he also gave some to the men with him?' Ex 25:23j 27 And he said to them, 'The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath;[e] Dt 5:14
28 so the Son of man is master even of the Sabbath.'

Cure of the man with a withered hand

‖Mt 12:9–14
‖Lk 6:6–11

1 3 Another time he went into the synagogue, and there was a man present whose
2 hand was withered. ·And they were watching him to see if he would cure him
3 on the Sabbath day, hoping for something to charge him with. ·He said to the man 4 with the withered hand, 'Get up and stand in the middle!' ·Then he said to them,
'Is it permitted on the Sabbath day to do good, or to do evil; to save life, or to kill?'
5 But they said nothing. ·Then he looked angrily round at them, grieved to find them Lk 14:4
so obstinate, and said to the man, 'Stretch out your hand.' He stretched it out and Ep 4:18 6 his hand was restored. ·The Pharisees went out and began at once to plot with the Herodians[a] against him, discussing how to destroy him.

The crowds follow Jesus

‖Mt 12:15–16

7 Jesus withdrew with his disciples to the lakeside, and great crowds from Galilee ‖Mt 4:25 8 followed him. From Judaea,[b] ·and from Jerusalem, and from Idumaea and Trans- ‖Lk 6:17–19 jordan and the region of Tyre and Sidon, great numbers who had heard of all he 5:43; 7:36; 8:26, even by the apostles, 8:30; 9:9. The silence is not to be broken until after his death, Mt 10:27j. Since the prevailing idea of the Messiah was nationalistic and warlike, in sharp contrast with his own ideal, Jesus had to be very careful, at least on Israelite soil, see 5:19, to avoid giving a false and dangerous impression of his mission, see Mt 13:13e; Jn 6:15. Some have claimed that this command of silence ('the messianic secret') is an invention of Mark. But it may well have been Jesus' own, to which Mark has given special prominence. With the exception of Mt 9:30, Mt and Lk record the injunction to silence only in passages which are parallel with Mk, frequently omitting it even in those cases.

n. lit. 'came out', i.e. from Capernaum, v. 35. This is the primary sense, but it is possible that another lies behind it, namely the 'coming forth' of Jesus from God, Jn 8:42; 13:3; 16:27seq., 30; cf. Lk 4:43.

2 a. Jesus here claims the divine power to forgive sins, Is 1:18j, which he will exercise frequently in the course of his ministry. He himself connects this power with his death, Mt 20:28g, and with the blood of the covenant, Mt 26:28h. The Christian communities will in their turn attribute this divine power to the risen Christ, e.g. Ac 2:38; 3:19; 10:43; 13:38; Rm 3:21–26,24i; 5:6–9; Ep 1:7; 4:32; Col 1:14; 3:13; Heb 9:26; 1 Jn 1:7; 2:12; Rv 1:5. But Jesus also entrusts this power to his disciples, promising that God will ratify their decisions, Mt 16:19; 18:18; Jn 20:23.

b. The Sea of Galilee ('Lake of Tiberias').

c. In Mt and Lk the disciples' fault is to pick ears of corn to appease their hunger, but in Mk it is to tear them up in order to make a path. This would have been more intelligible to readers unfamiliar with Jewish casuistry. While it was far from clear that picking ears of corn amounted to 'harvesting', it was obvious that one should not devastate a field in order to cross it! This version sits awkwardly to the rest of the story.

d. The high priest of 1 S 21:1–7 was in fact Ahimelech. Either his son Abiathar is named here because, as high priest in David's reign, 2 S 20:25, he was the better known, or else Mk is following a different tradition according to which Abiathar was Ahimelech's father (2 S 8:17 Hebr.).

e. This verse, lacking in Mt and Lk, must have been added by Mk when the new spirit of Christianity had already reduced the importance of the Sabbath obligation, see Lk 5:39f.

3 a. The term signifies not officials of the court of Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee, see Lk 3:1c, but politically minded Jews actively supporting his dynasty and enjoying his favour, cf. Mt 22:11c.

b. Punctuation uncertain. 'From Judaea . . . Sidon' may be read with what precedes or with what follows.

‖Mt 12:24–32 ‖Lk 11:15–23; 12:10 Allegations of the scribes

The scribes who had come down from Jerusalem were saying, 'Beelzebul [f] is in 22 him,' and, 'It is through the prince of devils that he drives devils out.' ·So he called 23 them to him and spoke to them in parables, ·'How can Satan drive out Satan? If a 24 kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot last. ·And if a household is 25 divided against itself, that household can never last. ·Now if Satan has rebelled 26 against himself and is divided, he cannot last either—it is the end of him.
But no one can make his way into a strong man's house and plunder his property 27 unless he has first tied up the strong man. Only then can he plunder his house.
'In truth I tell you, all human sins will be forgiven, and all the blasphemies ever 28 uttered; ·but anyone who blasphemes against the Holy Spirit will never be for- 29 given, but is guilty of an eternal sin.' ·This was because they were saying, 'There is 30 an unclean spirit in him.'

The true kinsmen of Jesus

‖Mt 12:46–50 ‖Lk 8:19–21 Now his mother and his brothers arrived and, standing outside, sent in a message 31 asking for him. ·A crowd was sitting round him at the time the message was passed 32 to him, 'Look, your mother and brothers and sisters are outside asking for you.'
He replied, 'Who are my mother and my brothers?' ·And looking at those sit- 33, 34 ting in a circle round him, he said, 'Here are my mother and my brothers.
Anyone who does the will of God, that person is my brother and sister and mother.' 35

Parable of the sower

‖Mt 13:1–9 ‖Lk 8:4–8 4 Again he began to teach them by the lakeside, but such a huge crowd gathered 1 round him that he got into a boat on the water and sat there. The whole crowd 2:13 were at the lakeside on land. ·He taught them many things in parables, and in the 2 course of his teaching he said to them, ·'Listen! Imagine a sower going out to sow. 3 Now it happened that, as he sowed, some of the seed fell on the edge of the path, 4 and the birds came and ate it up. ·Some seed fell on rocky ground where it found 5 little soil and at once sprang up, because there was no depth of earth; ·and when 6 the sun came up it was scorched and, not having any roots, it withered away.
Some seed fell into thorns, and the thorns grew up and choked it, and it produced 7 no crop. ·And some seeds fell into rich soil, grew tall and strong, and produced a 8 good crop; the yield was thirty, sixty, even a hundredfold.' ·And he said, 'Anyone 9 who has ears for listening should listen!'

Why Jesus spoke in parables

||Mt 13:10–15
||Lk 8:9–10

10 When he was alone, the Twelve, together with the others who formed his company, 11 asked what the parables meant. ·He told them, 'To you is granted the secret of the kingdom of God, but to those who are outside everything comes in parables,

Rm 16:25*l*
Col 4:3
Col 4:5

12 so that [a] they may look and look, but never perceive;
listen and listen, but never understand;
to avoid changing their ways and being healed.'

Is 6:9–10,10k

The parable of the sower explained

||Mt 13:18–23
||Lk 8:11–15

13 He said to them, 'Do you not understand this parable? Then how will you under-14, 15 stand any of the parables? [b] ·What the sower is sowing is the word. ·Those on the edge of the path where the word is sown are people who have no sooner heard it than Satan at once comes and carries away the word that was sown in them.
16 Similarly, those who are sown on patches of rock are people who, when first they 17 hear the word, welcome it at once with joy. ·But they have no root deep down and do not last; should some trial come, or some persecution on account of the 18 word, at once they fall away. ·Then there are others who are sown in thorns. Jr 4:3–4 19 These have heard the word, ·but the worries of the world, the lure of riches and all the other passions come in to choke the word, and so it produces nothing.
20 And there are those who have been sown in rich soil; they hear the word and accept it and yield a harvest, thirty and sixty and a hundredfold.'

Receiving and handing on the teaching of Jesus [c]

||Mt 5:15
||Lk 8:16; =11:33

21 He also said to them, 'Is a lamp brought in to be put under a tub or under the bed?
22 Surely to be put on the lamp-stand? ·For there is nothing hidden, but it must be ||Mt 10:26
23 disclosed, nothing kept secret except to be brought to light. ·Anyone who has ears ||Lk 8:17; =12:2 for listening should listen!'

Parable of the measure

24 He also said to them, 'Take notice of what you are hearing. The standard you use ||Lk 8:18[a]
25 will be used for you—and you will receive more besides; ·anyone who has, will be ||Mt 7:2
given more; anyone who has not, will be deprived even of what he has.' ||Lk 6:38
||Mt 25:29
||Lk 8:18[b]; 19:26

Parable of the seed growing by itself

26 He also said, 'This is what the kingdom of God is like. A man scatters seed on the Jm 5:7 27 land. ·Night and day, while he sleeps, when he is awake, the seed is sprouting and 28 growing; how, he does not know. ·Of its own accord the land produces first the 29 shoot, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear. ·And when the crop is ready, at once he starts to reap because the harvest has come.' [d]

Jl 4:13
Rv 14:15–16

c. The new leaders of the chosen people have to be twelve in number, as the tribes of Israel had been. This number is to be re-instituted after Judas' defection, Ac 1:26, to be preserved for ever in heaven, Mt 19:28 and par.; Rv 21:12–14j.

d. Mk has here no discourse like the one given at this point in Mt 5–7 and Lk 6:20–49. The details of Jesus' teaching in relation to the Jewish law would doubtless be seen as less necessary for the readers of the gospel than a record of what Jesus was and did. ..

e. lit. 'because they said'. Others translate 'because it was told (them)'.

f. To attribute to the Evil One what in fact is the work of the Holy Spirit amounts to shutting oneself off from divine grace and the forgiveness that flows from it. In its very nature such an attitude makes salvation impossible. But grace can change this attitude, so that a return to salvation remains possible, see 1:23g.

4 a. The conjunction (Mt avoids it) is equivalent to 'in order that the scripture might be fulfilled that says . . .'.

b. The apostles' incomprehension of Jesus' works and words is a recurrent theme of Mk: 6:52; 7:18; 8:17–18,21,33; 9:10,32; 10:38. With the exception of certain parallel places (Mt 15:16; 16:9,23; 20:22; Lk 9:45) and of Lk 18:34; 24:25,45, Mt and Lk often pass over such remarks in silence, or even amend them; compare Mt 14:33 with Mk 6:51–52, and cf. Mt 13:51, see Jn 14:26r.

c. Mk, followed by Lk, has collected here, vv. 21–25, four little parables which can be interpreted differently according to the contexts in which they are used; see the applications made by Lk's reduplications and Mt's parallels. In the present context they can all be understood of the teaching of Jesus, a light which must shine out, and for which the recipients are in some way responsible.

d. The kingdom will achieve its full development by virtue of its own hidden intrinsic power.

‖Mt 13:31–32 ‖Lk 13:18–19
Parable of the mustard seed

He also said, 'What can we say that the kingdom is like? What parable can we find 30 for it? ·It is like a mustard seed which, at the time of its sowing, is the smallest of all 31 the seeds on earth. ·Yet once it is sown it grows into the biggest shrub of them all 32
Dn 4:9,18 and puts out big branches so that the birds of the air can shelter in its shade.'

‖Mt 13:34–35
The use of parables

Using many parables like these, he spoke the word to them, so far as they were 33 capable of understanding it. ·He would not speak to them except in parables, but 34 he explained everything to his disciples when they were by themselves.

‖Mt 8:18,23–27 ‖Lk 8:22–25
The calming of the storm

With the coming of evening that same day, he said to them, 'Let us cross over to 35 the other side.' ·And leaving the crowd behind they took him, just as he was, in the 36 boat; and there were other boats with him. ·Then it began to blow a great gale and 37 the waves were breaking into the boat so that it was almost swamped. ·But he was 38 in the stern, his head on the cushion, asleep. ·They woke him and said to him, 39 'Master, do you not care? We are lost!' And he woke up and rebuked the wind and said to the sea, 'Quiet now! Be calm!' And the wind dropped, and there followed a great calm. ·Then he said to them, 'Why are you so frightened? Have you still no 40 Mt 8:10b faith?'[e] ·They were overcome with awe and said to one another, 'Who can this be? 41 1:27 Even the wind and the sea obey him.'

‖Mt 8:28–34 ‖Lk 8:26–39
The Gerasene demoniac

5 They reached the territory of the Gerasenes[a] on the other side of the lake, 1 and when he disembarked, a man with an unclean spirit at once came out 2 from the tombs towards him. ·The man lived in the tombs and no one could secure 3 him any more, even with a chain, ·because he had often been secured with fetters 4 and chains but had snapped the chains and broken the fetters, and no one had the strength to control him. ·All night and all day, among the tombs and in the 5 mountains, he would howl and gash himself with stones. ·Catching sight of Jesus 6 from a distance, he ran up and fell at his feet ·and shouted at the top of his voice, 7
'What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God? In God's name do not torture me!' ·For Jesus had been saying to him, 'Come out of the man, unclean 8 spirit.' ·Then he asked, 'What is your name?' He answered, 'My name is Legion, 9 Lk 8:2,11:26 for there are many of us.' ·And he begged him earnestly not to send them out of 10 the district. ·Now on the mountainside there was a great herd of pigs feeding, 11 and the unclean spirits begged him, 'Send us to the pigs, let us go into them.' 12
So he gave them leave. With that, the unclean spirits came out and went into the 13 pigs, and the herd of about two thousand pigs charged down the cliff into the lake, and there they were drowned. ·The men looking after them ran off and told their 14 story in the city and in the country round about; and the people came to see what had really happened. ·They came to Jesus and saw the demoniac sitting there—the 15 man who had had the legion in him—properly dressed and in his full senses, and they were afraid. ·And those who had witnessed it reported what had happened to 16 the demoniac and what had become of the pigs. ·Then they began to implore Jesus 17 to leave their neighbourhood. ·As he was getting into the boat, the man who had 18 been possessed begged to be allowed to stay with him. ·Jesus would not let him but 19 1:34m said to him, 'Go home to your people and tell them all that the Lord in his mercy Mt 4:25i has done for you.' ·So the man went off and proceeded to proclaim in the Decapolis 20 all that Jesus had done for him. And everyone was amazed.

Cure of the woman with a haemorrhage. The daughter of Jairus raised to life

When Jesus had crossed again in the boat to the other side, a large crowd gathered 21
2:13 round him and he stayed by the lake. ·Then the president of the synagogue came 22

23 up, named Jairus, and seeing him, fell at his feet ·and begged him earnestly, saying,
'My little daughter is desperately sick. Do come and lay your hands on her that she 24 may be saved and may live.' ·Jesus went with him and a large crowd followed him; they were pressing all round him.
25 Now there was a woman who had suffered from a haemorrhage for twelve years; 26 after long and painful treatment under various doctors, she had spent all she had 27 without being any the better for it; in fact, she was getting worse. ·She had heard Tb 2:10 about Jesus, and she came up through the crowd and touched his cloak from 28, 29 behind, thinking, ·'If I can just touch his clothes, I shall be saved.' ·And at once the source of the bleeding dried up, and she felt in herself that she was cured of her 30 complaint. ·And at once aware of the power that had gone out from him, [b] Jesus 31 turned round in the crowd and said, 'Who touched my clothes?' ·His disciples said to him, 'You see how the crowd is pressing round you; how can you ask, "Who 32 touched me?" ' ·But he continued to look all round to see who had done it.
33 Then the woman came forward, frightened and trembling [c] because she knew what had happened to her, and she fell at his feet and told him the whole truth.
34 'My daughter,' he said, 'your faith has restored you to health; go in peace and be Mt 8:10b free of your complaint.'
35 While he was still speaking some people arrived from the house of the president of the synagogue to say, 'Your daughter is dead; why put the Master to any further 36 trouble?' ·But Jesus overheard what they said and he said to the president of the 37 synagogue, 'Do not be afraid; only have faith.' ·And he allowed no one to go with 38 him except Peter and James and John the brother of James. [d] ·So they came to the house of the president of the synagogue, and Jesus noticed all the commotion, with 39 people weeping and wailing unrestrainedly. ·He went in and said to them, 'Why all 40 this commotion and crying? The child is not dead, but asleep.' ·But they ridiculed him. So he turned them all out and, taking with him the child's father and mother Ac 9:40 41 and his own companions, he went into the place where the child lay. ·And taking 9:27 the child by the hand he said to her, 'Talitha kum!' [e] which means, 'Little girl, I tell 42 you to get up.' ·The little girl got up at once and began to walk about, for she was 43 twelve years old. At once they were overcome with astonishment, ·and he gave them strict orders not to let anyone know about it, and told them to give her 1:34m something to eat.

A visit to Nazareth

‖Mt 13:53–58
‖Lk 4:16–30

1 6 Leaving that district, he went to his home town, and his disciples accompanied 2 him. ·With the coming of the Sabbath he began teaching in the synagogue, and most of them were astonished when they heard him. They said, 'Where did the man get all this? What is this wisdom that has been granted him, and these miracles 3 that are worked through him? ·This is the carpenter, [a] surely, the son of Mary, the brother of James and Joset [b] and Jude and Simon? His sisters, too, are they not Mt 12:46o 4 here with us?' And they would not accept him. ·And Jesus said to them, 'A prophet is despised only in his own country, among his own relations and in his own house'; 5 and he could work no miracle there, except that he cured a few sick people by 6 laying his hands on them. ·He was amazed at their lack of faith. 7:32

Herod and Jesus

King Herod had heard about him, since by now his name was well known. Some 14 were saying,[d] 'John the Baptist has risen from the dead, and that is why miraculous powers are at work in him.' ·Others said, 'He is Elijah,' others again, 'He is a 15 Mt 16:14c prophet, like the prophets we used to have.' ·But when Herod heard this he said, 16
'It is John whose head I cut off; he has risen from the dead.'

John the Baptist beheaded

Now it was this same Herod who had sent to have John arrested, and had had him 17 chained up in prison because of Herodias, his brother Philip's wife whom he had Lv 18:16 married. ·For John had told Herod, 'It is against the law for you to have your 18 brother's wife.' ·As for Herodias, she was furious with him and wanted to kill him, 19 but she was not able to do so, ·because Herod was in awe of John, knowing him to 20 be a good and upright man, and gave him his protection. When he had heard him speak he was greatly perplexed,[e] and yet he liked to listen to him.

An opportunity came on Herod's birthday when he gave a banquet for the 21 nobles of his court, for his army officers and for the leading figures in Galilee.
When the daughter of this same Herodias came in and danced, she delighted 22 Est 5:3+ Herod and his guests; so the king said to the girl, 'Ask me anything you like and I will give it you.' ·And he swore her an oath, 'I will give you anything you ask, 23 even half my kingdom.' ·She went out and said to her mother, 'What shall I ask 24 for?' She replied, 'The head of John the Baptist.' ·The girl at once rushed back to 25 the king and made her request, 'I want you to give me John the Baptist's head, immediately, on a dish.' ·The king was deeply distressed but, thinking of the 26 oaths he had sworn and of his guests, he was reluctant to break his word to her.
At once the king sent one of the bodyguard with orders to bring John's head. 27
The man went off and beheaded him in the prison; then he brought the head on 28 a dish and gave it to the girl, and the girl gave it to her mother. ·When John's 29 disciples heard about this, they came and took his body and laid it in a tomb.

First miracle of the loaves

The apostles rejoined Jesus and told him all they had done and taught. ·and he said 30, 31 to them, 'Come away to some lonely place all by yourselves and rest for a while';
2:2 for there were so many coming and going that there was no time for them even to 3:20 eat. ·So they went off in the boat to a lonely place where they could be by 32 themselves. ·But people saw them going, and many recognised them; and from 33 every town they all hurried to the place on foot and reached it before them. ·So as 34 Mt 9:36 he stepped ashore he saw a large crowd; and he took pity on them because they were like sheep without a shepherd, and he set himself to teach them at some length. ·By now it was getting very late, and his disciples came up to him and said, 35
'This is a lonely place and it is getting very late, ·so send them away, and they can 36 go to the farms and villages round about, to buy themselves something to eat.' ·He 37 replied, 'Give them something to eat yourselves.' They answered, 'Are we to go and spend two hundred denarii on bread for them to eat?' ·He asked, 'How many 38 loaves have you? Go and see.' And when they had found out they said, 'Five, and two fish.' ·Then he ordered them to get all the people to sit down in groups on the 39 green grass, ·and they sat down on the ground in squares of hundreds and fifties. 40
Then he took the five loaves and the two fish, raised his eyes to heaven and said the 41 blessing; then he broke the loaves and began handing them to his disciples to distribute among the people. He also shared out the two fish among them all.

42, 43 They all ate as much as they wanted. 43 They collected twelve basketfuls of scraps of 44 bread and pieces of fish. 44 Those who had eaten the loaves numbered five thousand men.

Jesus walks on the water

45 And at once he made his disciples get into the boat and go on ahead to the other 46 side near Bethsaida,[f] while he himself sent the crowd away. 46 After saying good-47 bye to them he went off into the hills to pray. 47 When evening came, the boat was 48 far out on the sea, and he was alone on the land. 48 He could see that they were hard pressed in their rowing, for the wind was against them; and about the fourth watch of the night he came towards them, walking on the sea. He was going to pass them 49 by, 49 but when they saw him walking on the sea they thought it was a ghost and 50 cried out; 50 for they had all seen him and were terrified. But at once he spoke to 51 them and said, 'Courage! It's me! Don't be afraid.' 51 Then he got into the boat with them and the wind dropped. They were utterly and completely dumbfounded, 52 because they had not seen what the miracle of the loaves meant; their minds 4:13b were closed.

Cures at Gennesaret

‖Mt 14:34–36

53 Having made the crossing, they came to land at Gennesaret and moored there.
54, 55 When they disembarked people at once recognised him, 55 and started hurrying all through the countryside and brought the sick on stretchers to wherever they heard 56 he was. 56 And wherever he went, to village or town or farm, they laid down the sick 5:27–28 Ac 5:15 in the open spaces, begging him to let them touch even the fringe of his cloak. And all those who touched him were saved.

The traditions of the Pharisees

‖Mt 15:1–9

1 7 The Pharisees and some of the scribes who had come from Jerusalem gathered 2 round him, 2 and they noticed that some of his disciples were eating with 3 unclean hands, that is, without washing them. 3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, Lk 11:38 keep the tradition of the elders[a] and never eat without washing their arms as far as
4 the elbow; 4 and on returning from the market place they never eat without first sprinkling[b] themselves. There are also many other observances which have been handed down to them to keep, concerning the washing of cups and pots and bronze
5 dishes. 5 So the Pharisees and scribes asked him, 'Why do your disciples not respect
6 the tradition of the elders but eat their food with unclean hands?' 6 He answered, 'How rightly Isaiah prophesied about you hypocrites in the passage of scripture:

> This people honours me only with lip-service,
> while their hearts are far from me. Is 29:13 > 7 Their reverence of me is worthless;
> the lessons they teach are nothing but human commandments.

8, 9 You put aside the commandment of God to observe human traditions.' 9 And he said to them, 'How ingeniously you get round the commandment of God in order to 10 preserve your own tradition! 10 For Moses said: Honour your father and your mother, 11 and, Anyone who curses father or mother must be put to death. 11 But you say, "If a Ex 20:12 Dt 5:16 man says to his father or mother: Anything I have that I might have used to help Ex 21:17 Lv 20:9

moment to do anything for his father or mother. ·In this way you make God's word 13 ineffective for the sake of your tradition which you have handed down. And you do many other things like this.'

‖Mt 15:10–20 On clean and unclean

He called the people to him again and said, 'Listen to me, all of you, and 14 understand. ·Nothing that goes into someone from outside can make that person 15 unclean; it is the things that come out of someone that make that person unclean.
Anyone who has ears for listening should listen!'[d] 16

4:10 When he had gone into the house, away from the crowd, his disciples questioned 17
4:13b him about the parable.[e] ·He said to them, 'Even you—don't you understand? 18 Can't you see that nothing that goes into someone from outside can make that person unclean, ·because it goes not into the heart but into the stomach and 19
Ac 10:9–16 Rm 14 passes into the sewer?' (Thus he pronounced all foods clean.)[f] ·And he went on, 20
Col 2:16,21–22 Rm 1:29q 'It is what comes out of someone that makes that person unclean. ·For it is from 21 within, from the heart, that evil intentions emerge: fornication, theft, murder, adultery, avarice, malice, deceit, indecency, envy, slander, pride, folly. ·All 22, 23 these evil things come from within and make a person unclean.'

III: JOURNEYS OUTSIDE GALILEE

‖Mt 15:21–28 The daughter of the Syro-Phoenician woman healed

1:29;2:15; 9:33;10:10 He left that place and set out for the territory of Tyre.[g] There he went into a house 24 and did not want anyone to know he was there; but he could not pass unrecognised.
At once a woman whose little daughter had an unclean spirit heard about him 25 and came and fell at his feet. ·Now this woman was a gentile,[h] by birth a Syro- 26 Mt 8:29k Phoenician, and she begged him to drive the devil out of her daughter. ·And 27 he said to her, 'The children should be fed first, because it is not fair to take the Mt 7:6b children's food and throw it to the little dogs.' ·But she spoke up. 'Ah yes, sir,' she 28 replied, 'but little dogs under the table eat the scraps from the children.' ·And he 29 said to her, 'For saying this you may go home happy; the devil has gone out of your daughter.' ·So she went off home and found the child lying on the bed and the devil 30 gone.

Healing of the deaf man

Returning from the territory of Tyre, he went by way of Sidon towards the Lake of 31 5:20 Galilee, right through the Decapolis territory. ·And they brought him a deaf man 32 who had an impediment in his speech; and they asked him to lay his hand on him.
6:5 1 Tm 4:14e He took him aside to be by themselves, away from the crowd, put his fingers into 33 the man's ears and touched his tongue with spittle. ·Then looking up to heaven he 34 sighed; and he said to him, 'Ephphatha,' that is, 'Be opened.' ·And his ears were 35 Mt 8:3a opened, and at once the impediment of his tongue was loosened and he spoke 1:34m clearly. ·And Jesus ordered them to tell no one about it, but the more he insisted, 36 the more widely they proclaimed it. ·Their admiration was unbounded, and they 37 9:25 said, 'Everything he does is good, he makes the deaf hear and the dumb speak.'

‖Mt 15:32–39 Second miracle of the loaves

6:30–44 8 And now once again a great crowd had gathered, and they had nothing to eat. 1
So he called his disciples to him and said to them, ·'I feel sorry for all these 2 people; they have been with me for three days now and have nothing to eat. ·If I 3 send them off home hungry they will collapse on the way; some have come a great distance.' ·His disciples replied, 'Where could anyone get these people enough 4 bread to eat in a deserted place?' ·He asked them, 'How many loaves have you?' 5 6 And they said to him, 'Seven.' ·Then he instructed the crowd to sit down on the ground, and he took the seven loaves, and after giving thanks he broke them and began handing them to his disciples to distribute; and they distributed them among 7 the crowd. ·They had a few small fishes as well, and over these he said a blessing 8 and ordered them to be distributed too. ·They ate as much as they wanted, and 9 they collected seven basketfuls of the scraps left over. ·Now there had been about 10 four thousand people. He sent them away ·and at once, getting into the boat with his disciples, went to the region of Dalmanutha. [a]

The Pharisees ask for a sign from heaven ‖Mt 16:1–4

11 The Pharisees came up and started a discussion with him; they demanded of him a 12 sign from heaven, to put him to the test. ·And with a profound sigh he said, 'Why does this generation demand a sign? In truth I tell you, no sign shall be given to this 13 generation.' [b] ·And, leaving them again, he re-embarked and went away to the other side.

The yeast of the Pharisees and of Herod ‖Mt 16:5–12

14 The disciples had forgotten to take any bread and they had only one loaf with them 15 in the boat. ·Then he gave them this warning, 'Keep your eyes open; look out for 16 the yeast of the Pharisees and the yeast of Herod.' ·And they said to one another, 17 'It is because we have no bread.' ·And Jesus knew it, and he said to them, 'Why are you talking about having no bread? Do you still not understand, still not 4:13b 18 realise? Are your minds closed? ·Have you eyes and do not see, ears and do not Jr 5:21
19 hear? Or do you not remember? ·When I broke the five loaves for the five Ezk 12:2 thousand, how many baskets full of scraps did you collect?' They answered, 6:43–44 20 'Twelve.' ·'And when I broke the seven loaves for the four thousand, how many 21 baskets full of scraps did you collect?' And they answered, 'Seven.' ·Then he said to them, 'Do you still not realise?' [c] 4:13b
