1 SAMUEL 3

The Lord reveals himself to the child Samuel, and informs him of his purposes against the house of Eli, 1-14. Samuel, adjured by Eli, tells him the vision; and Eli answers submissively, 15-18. Samuel is established to be a prophet of the Lord, 19-21.

7. Now Samuel. or, Thus did Samuel before he knew the Lord, and before the word of the Lord was revealed unto him. did not yet. Samuel was not destitute of the knowledge of God, in that sense which implies the total absence of true piety, as Eli's sons were; for he knew and worshipped the God of Israel: but he did not know him as communicating special revelations of his will to him, in the manner in which he made it known to the prophets. Je 9:24. Ac 19:2.

8. the third. Jb 33:14, 15. Although Samuel did not apprehend the way in which God reveals himself to his servants the prophets—by the "still small voice"—yet when this direct communication from the Almighty was made the third time, in a way altogether new and strange to him, it seems astonishing that he did not immediately apprehend. Perhaps he would have been sooner aware of a divine revelation, had it come in a dream or a vision. Those who have the greatest knowledge of divine things, should remember the time when they were as babes, unskilful in the works of righteousness. 1 C 13:11, 12. child. T#55. 2 Ch 34:1, 3. Observe, however, Samuel in his reply left out one word: he did not say, "Speak, Lord," but only, "Speak, for thy servant heareth; perhaps, as Bp. Patrick suggests, out of uncertainty, whether it was God who spake to him or not. However, by this answer way was made for the message he was now to receive, and Samuel was brought acquainted with the words of God and visions of the Almighty. Samuel. ℳ84, Ge +22:11.

The Philistines place the ark in the temple of Dagon at Ashdod, 1, 2. Dagon falls down before it and is

It was situated near the Mediterranean, between Askelon and Jamnia, thirty-four miles north of Gaza, according to Diodorus Siculus, and the Antonine and Jerusalem Itineraries. It is now called Shdood; and Dr. Richardson says they neither saw nor heard of any ruins there. "The ground," he observes, "around Ashdod is beautifully undulating, but not half stocked with cattle. The site of the town is on the summit of a grassy hill; and, if we are to believe historians, was anciently as strong as it was beautiful." Jsh 11:22. Ac 8:40, Azotus.

For she had the half of a woman, but from the thighs downwards a fish's tail." Diodorus (l. ii.) describing the same idol, as represented at Askelon, says "It had the head of a woman, but all the rest of the body a fish's." Probably Horace alludes to this idol, in *De Art. it is generally allowed that there is some corruption in the text, or that some explanatory word is omitted. The Hebrew is shivim ish, chamishim aileph ish, literally, "seventy men, fifty thousand men": so LXX. Vulgate, "70 (chief) men, and 50,000 (common) people." Targum, besabey amma, "of the elders of the people 70 men, ovekahala, and in the congregation 50,000 men." But the Syriac, chamsho alphin weshivin gavrin, "5000 and 70 men"; with which the Arabic agrees; while Josephus has only ebdomakonta, seventy men; and three reputable MSS. of Dr. Kennicott's also omit "50,000 men." Some learned men, however, would render, by supplying the Hebrew mem, "70 men; fifty out of a thousand"; which supposes about 1400 present, and that a twentieth part were slain. or, fifty chief men, as the original word eleph means in Mi +*5:2, compared with Mt 2:6; it was only a small village (Young). lamented. 1 SAMUEL 7

The ark is removed to Kirjath-jearim, and remains there a long time, 1, 2. At Samuel's exhortation the Israelites repent, and humble themselves before God at Mizpeh, 3-6. The Philistines prepare to assault them: but, while Samuel prays and sacrifices, the Lord discomfits them with thunder before Israel, 7-11. Samuel calls the place Ebenezer, and sets up a stone for a memorial, 12. The Philistines are subdued, and Samuel judges Israel, 13-17.

Samuel informs them what it was they desired; that, when they understood it, they might consider whether they would persist in their choice. If they would have a king splendidly attended, he tells them that he would take their sons for his chariots, etc.: if they would have him keep up constant forces, then he would appoint them for colonels and captains; and employ those in his wars who were accustomed to follow their family business; and since, after the manner of other kings, he must keep a stately court, they must be content that their daughters should serve in several offices, which the king would think below the dignity of his wives and daughters (ver. 13). "I mention this trifling circumstance," says Mr. B., "to show how essential to human and civil intercourse presents are considered to be in the East; whether it be dates, or whether it be diamonds, they are so much a part of their manners, that without them, an inferior will never be at peace in his own mind, or think that he has hold of his superior for protection. Samuel anoints Saul, and dismisses him with directions, and with tokens which came to pass accordingly, 1-13. Saul answers the inquiries of his uncle, but conceals the matter of the kingdom, 14-16. Samuel convenes the people at Mizpeh, where Saul is chosen king by lot, 17-25. A few honorably attend him, but others despise him, 26, 27.

The LXX., Syriac, and Arabic, however, instead of Bedan read Barak; and the two latter versions, instead of Samuel have Samson. But rain is hardly ever known in Palestine during that season, which commences about the end of June, or beginning of July. This fact is abundantly confirmed by modern travelers, and is demonstrative to every unprejudiced reader of the Holy Scriptures, that the thunder and rain, which at Samuel's invocation, was sent at this season of the year, was a miraculous interposition of the power of God; for we read in ver. 16, it was a "great thing which the Lord will do." Thus were the Israelites warned of their sin in having asked a king, and of the omnipotence of that God, whose gracious promises they virtually neglected by this act. 1 SAMUEL 13

Saul chooses a select band, and dismisses the people, 1, 2. Jonathan, his son, smites a garrison of the Philistines, and Saul summons the people to Gilgal, 3, 4. The Philistines gather a great army; and Israel is distressed and scattered, 5-7. Saul, weary of waiting for Samuel, sacrifices, 8, 9. Samuel comes and reproves him, and shows that God has rejected him; while Saul in vain excuses himself, 10-14. A small company attend Saul; and three bands of Philistines waste the land, 15-18. The policy of the Philistines, who suffer no smith in Israel, 19-23.

1 SAMUEL 14

Jonathan, attended only by his armor-bearer, smites the garrison of the Philistines, 1-14; who are seized with terror, and destroy one another, 15, 16. Saul, seeing the tumult, inquires of God: but without waiting for an answer, he assaults the Philistines; being joined by the Hebrews who had deserted or hid themselves, 17-23. His rash curse, against such as ate that day, hinders the completion of the victory; and Jonathan, not knowing what had passed, violates it, 24-30. The people fly upon the spoil, and are hardly restrained from eating with the blood, 31-34. Saul builds an altar; and asks counsel of God, but is not answered, 35-37. Jonathan, taken by lot and sentenced to die, is rescued by the people, 38-46. Saul's victories and family, 47-52.

God will in some way or other direct the steps of those who acknowledge him in all their ways, and seek unto him for direction with full purpose of heart. Finding that his son Jonathan and his armor-bearer were absent (ver. +17), Saul wished to consult the high-priest; but the tumult increasing, he says to him, 'Withdraw thine hand:' i.e. desist from consulting the ephod on the present occasion; and immediately hastened to make the best use he could of this astonishing victory. 1 S 4:3-5. 30:8. 1 SAMUEL 15

Saul is sent to destroy Amalek, 1-3. He gathers a large army, favors the Kenites, and smites the Amalekites, 4-7. He spares Agag and the best of the spoil, 8, 9. Samuel is sent to declare unto him, that God has rejected him for his disobedience; and Saul in vain attempts to excuse himself, 10-21. He is convicted of rebellion; and partially humbles himself, but cannot get the sentence reversed, 22-31. Samuel kills Agag, and finally leaves Saul, 32-35.

The Amalekites, a people of Arabia Petraea, who inhabited a tract of country on the frontiers of Egypt and Canaan, had acted with great cruelty towards the Israelites on their coming out of Egypt, and God then purposed that Amalek, as a nation, should be blotted out from under heaven; but it had been spared until it had filled up the measure of its iniquities, and now this purpose is carried into effect by Saul, upwards of 400 years afterwards! Nothing could justify such an exterminating decree but the absolute authority of God; and this was given: all the reasons of it we do not know; but this we know well, "the Judge of all the earth doeth right." 1 SAMUEL 16

God sends Samuel to Bethlehem, to anoint a king out of Jesse's sons, and directs him to conceal his business by a sacrifice, 1-5. Seven of Jesse's sons pass by, and are not approved, 6-10. David is called from the flock, and anointed, 11-13. An evil spirit troubles Saul; who, counselled by his servants, sends for David, and is relieved by his music, 14-23.

1 SAMUEL 17

The armies of Israel and of the Philistines are drawn out to battle, 1-3. Goliath challenges, defies, and dismays the Israelites, 4-11. David is sent to the army to visit his brethren, 12-19. He hears the challenge of Goliath and expresses indignation at it, 20-27. Eliab rebukes him, and he answers mildly, 28-30. He is brought before Saul, accepts the challenge, and states the grounds of his confidence, 31-37. He refuses Saul's armor; and takes only his staff, a sling, and stones, 38-40. Goliath disdains and curses him, 41-44. David answers, expressing his assured confidence in God, 45-47. He kills Goliath, and cuts off his head, 48-51. The Philistines are routed, 52, 53. David returns with Goliath's head in his hand; and answers Saul's inquiries concerning him, 54-58.

Cumberland's calculation, the height of Goliath was about eleven feet ten inches; but Parkhurst, estimating the ordinary cubit at seventeen inches and a half, calculates that he was nine feet six inches high. Few instances can be produced of men who can be compared with him. Pliny says, "The tallest man that hath been seen in our days was one named Gabara, who, in the days of Claudius, the late Emperor, was brought out of Arabia: he was nine feet nine inches." Josephus mentions a Jew, named Eleazar, whom Vitellius sent to Rome, who was seven cubits, or ten feet two inches, high. Becanus saw a man near ten feet, and a woman that was full ten feet. And, to mention no more, a man of the name of John Middleton, born at Hale, near Warrington, in Lancashire, in the reign of James the First, was more than nine feet high. Dr. Plott, in his history of Staffordshire, says, that "his hand, from the carpus to the end of his middle finger, was seventeen inches, his palms eight inches and a half broad, and his whole height was nine feet three inches; wanting but six inches of the height of Goliath of Gath."

He describes it as "a small valley, and the place of their encampment is pointed out where it narrows into a broad, deep ravine; part of it was in crop, and part of it was under the plow, which was drawn by a couple of oxen. A small stream, which had shrunk almost under its stony bed, passes through it from east to west, from which we are informed that David chose out five smooth stones, and hasted and ran to meet the haughty champion of Gath. A well of water under the bank, with a few olive trees above, on the north side of the valley, are said to mark the spot of the shepherd's triumph over his boasting antagonist. Saul and his men probably occupied the side of the valley which is nearest to Jerusalem, on which the ground is higher and more rugged than on the other side."

The preceding twenty verses, from the 12th to the 31st inclusive, the 41st, and from the 54th to the end of this chapter, with the five first verses and the 9th, 10th, 11th, 17th, 18th, and 19th of ch. 18, are all wanting in the Vatican copy of the LXX.; and they are supposed by Dr. Kennicott, and others, to be an interpolation. But, as Bp. Horsley observes, it appears, from many circumstances of the story, that David's combat with Goliath was many years prior to Saul's madness, and David's introduction to him as a musician. In the first place, David was quite a youth when he engaged with Goliath (ver. 33, 42): when introduced to Saul he was of full age, 1 S 16:18. Again, this combat was his first appearance in public life, and his first military exploit (ver. 36, 38, 39): when introduced as a musician, he was a man of established character, and a man of war (1 S 16:18). Now the just conclusion is, that the last ten verses of chapter 16 have been misplaced; their true place being between the ninth and tenth verses of chapter 18. Let them be removed there, and the whole apparent disorder will be removed.

50. So David prevailed. The tradition of the combat between David and Goliath, in which the latter was killed, is preserved among the Arabs; for he is mentioned in the Koran, where he is called Galut, or Jalut. The Arabs also call the dynasty of the Philistine kings, who reigned in Palestine when the Hebrews came there, Galutiah, or Jalutiah. Achmed Al Fassi says, "Those kings were as well known by the name of Jalaut, as the ancient kings of Egypt by that of Pharaoh. David killed the Jalaut who reigned in his time, and entirely rooted out the Philistines, the rest of whom fled into Africa, and from them descended the Brebers or Berbers, who inhabit the coast of Barbary." It is remarkable that the Berbers themselves should acknowledge their descent from the Philistines. "The name Goliath, which they pronounce Sghiatud, is very common among the Brebers, and the history of the champion of the Philistines is very well known to the Moors. When children quarrel, and the bigger one challenges the smaller to fight, the latter answers, "Who will fight with you? (Enta men ulid Sgialud). You are of the race of Goliath." The Jews who dwell among them, on the mountains, all call them Philistines" (Host's Account of Morroco and Fez, p. 133). 1 S 21:9. 23:21. 1 SAMUEL 18

Jonathan loves David, and covenants with him, 1-4. David gains favor with the people and the servants of Saul, 5. The praises bestowed on David excite Saul's envy, 6-9. Saul attempts to kill him, 10, 11. David's prudence and success make Saul afraid of him, 12-16. He offers to give him his elder daughter, hoping to ensnare him; but gives her to another, 17-19. He promises him Michal, his younger daughter, finding that she loved him; and David brings two hundred foreskins of the Philistines, being double the stipulated dowry, and marries her, 20-27. Saul's hatred and David's reputation increase, 28-30.

1. the soul. Heb. nephesh, Ge +34:3. of Jonathan. The modesty, piety, and courage of David were so congenial to the character of the amiable Jonathan, that they attracted his most cordial esteem and affection; so that the most intimate friendship subsisted between them from that time, and they loved each other with pure hearts fervently. Their friendship could not be affected by the common vicissitudes of life; and it exemplifies by fact what the ancients have written on the subject; "Friendship is an entire sameness, and one soul: a friend is another self." 1 S 14:1-14, 45. 1 SAMUEL 19

Saul orders David to be slain. Jonathan informs David; and, pleading for him with Saul, effects a reconciliation, 1-7. David's success in war renders Saul again jealous; he seeks to kill David, who escapes by flight, 8-10. Saul sends to kill him in his house; but Michal favors his escape, and deceives Saul by an image in the bed, 11-17. David goes to Samuel, 18. Saul sends messengers after him to Naioth; and then goes himself: but first his messengers are seized by the Spirit of prophecy, and afterwards he also, 19-24.

Saul's enmity now burst forth, in the avowed purpose of putting David to death; and nothing less than the especial interposition of Providence could have saved David's life, when every officer about the king's person, and every soldier, had positive orders to dispatch him. 1 S 18:8, 9. Rather, "the network of goats' hair at its (the Teraphim's) pillow;" for the kevir, (whence the Chaldee and Syriac kavreetho, a honeycomb, from its net-like form), seems to have been a kind of mosquito net, which, says Dr. Shaw, is "a close curtain of gauze, used all over the East, by people of fashion, to keep out the flies." That they had such anciently cannot be doubted. Thus when Judith had beheaded Holofernes in his bed (ch. 13:9, 15), "she pulled down the canopy (or the mosquito net, to konopeion, from konops, a gnat, or mosquito, whence our word canopy) wherein he did lie in his drunkenness, from the pillars." 2 K 8:15n.

16. And when. It is highly probable that David, when supposed to be sick, was thought to be hid in the harem or chamber of Michal. "The harems," says De La Motraye, "are sanctuaries, as sacred and inviolable, for persons pursued by justice for any crime, debt, etc. as the Roman Catholic churches in Italy, Spain, Portugal, etc." Thus we find, that to effect his purpose, Saul sent messengers to Michal, but they treated her harem with too much respect to enter it at first; but being authorized by Saul, they entered even into her chamber; and during the delay occasioned by respect for the privacy of Michal, David escaped. David consults with Jonathan how to provide for his safety, 1-10. They renew the covenant of friendship, and confirm it by oath, 11-17. They agree on a token, 18-23. This phrase, or the greater part of it, was frequently addressed to myself when coming into a circle of Persian acquaintances, after an absence of several days or weeks. It should be remembered that Saul was subject to a disease which weakened his mental powers; of which we need no stronger proof than that before us—his calling names. Mungo Park gives an instance of the prevalence of the same principles in Africa; and if we suppose king Saul, unable to vilify Jonathan to his own satisfaction by personal reproaches, had outstepped the ordinary abuse of his day, and proceeded to that which was designed to produce unusual vexation, we do little injury to his character or his general deportment. "Maternal affection," says Mr. Park (Travels in Africa, p. 264), "is everywhere conspicuous among the Africans, and creates a correspondent return of tenderness in the child. 'Strike me,' said my attendant, 'but do not curse my mother.' I found the same sentiment to prevail universally in all parts of Africa."

or, perhaps it was because his temper was more tender and his passions stronger. They referred each other to the covenant of friendship that was between them, both of them being comforted thereby in this very mournful separation: "We have sworn both of us in the name of the Lord, for ourselves and our heirs, that we and they will be faithful and kind to each other from generation to generation." ver. 23. 1 SAMUEL 21

David comes to Nob, and obtains from Ahimelech hallowed bread, 1-6. Doeg, an Edomite, is present, 7. David takes also Goliath's sword, 8, 9. He flees to Gath, and feigns himself mad, and is sent away, 10-15.

But the rabbins assert that Jerusalem might be seen from this town. The tabernacle resided some time at Nob; and after it was destroyed, it was removed to Gibeon; "and the days of Nob and Gibeon were fifty-seven years." It appears to have been the extreme boundary of the Philistine territory in one direction, as Ekron was on the other (1 S 7:14. 17:52), and lay near Mareshah (2 Ch 11:8. Mi 1:14), which agrees pretty well with the position assigned it by Jerome. 1 SAMUEL 22

David escapes to Adullam, whither his kindred and others resort to him, 1, 2. At Mizpeh he commends his parents to the protection of the king of Moab, 3, 4. Admonished by the prophet Gad, he returns to the land of Judah, 5. Saul complains that his servants are unfaithful, 6-8. Doeg accuses Ahimelech; who is sent for with the priests, and answers the charge, 9-16. Saul's soldiers refusing to slay the priests at his command, Doeg executes it; and destroys their city with their wives and children, 17-19. Abiathar escapes to David, who blames himself, and assures him of protection, 20-23.

1 SAMUEL 23

David, inquiring of God by Abiathar, defends Keilah and smites the Philistines, 1-6. Saul purposes to besiege him in Keilah; but the Lord showing David the treachery of the men of Keilah, he flees to Ziph, where Jonathan meets and comforts him, 7-18. The Ziphites inform Saul concerning him, who closely pursues him to Maon; but is called off by an invasion of the Philistines, 19-28. David dwells at En-gedi, 29.

2. enquired. In what way David made this enquiry we are not told; but it was probably by means of Abiathar; and therefore it would seem, that with Houbigant, we should read the sixth verse immediately after the first. This adventure was truly noble and patriotic. Had not David loved his country, and been above all motives of private and personal revenge, he would have rejoiced in this invasion of Judea, as producing a strong diversion in his favor, and embroiling his inveterate enemy. In most cases, a man with David's wrongs would have joined with the enemies of his country, and avenged himself on the author of his calamities; but he thinks of nothing but succouring Keilah, and using his power and influence in behalf of his brethren. ver. 4, 6, 9-12. 1 S 30:8. 29. strong holds. ver. 14, 19. The district around En-gedi, near the western coast of the Dead sea, is reported by travelers to be a mountainous territory, filled with caverns; and consequently, proper for David in his present circumstances. Dr. Lightfoot thinks this was the wilderness of Judah, in which David was when he penned the 63rd Psalm, which breathes as much pious and devout affection as almost any of his Psalms; for in all places and in all conditions he still kept up his communion with God. If Christians knew their privileges better, and acted up thereto, there would be less murmuring at the dark dispensations of Divine Providence. En-gedi. 1 S 24:1. Ge 14:7. There are two entrances into it; we went by the farthest, which leads by a narrow passage into a very large grotto, the rock being supported by natural pillars: the top of it rises in several places like domes; the grotto is perfectly dry. There is a tradition, that the people of the country, to the number of 30,000, retired into this grotto to avoid a bad air. This place is so strong, that one would imagine it to be one of the strong holds of En-gedi, to which David and his men fled from Saul: and possibly it may be that very cave in which he cut off Saul's skirt; for David and his men might, with good ease, lie hid there and not be seen by him" (Travels, vol. ii. David's men urged very plausibly, that God had brought his enemy into his power, in order to fulfil his promises to him: yet they were greatly mistaken; as in reality the Lord intended to give David an opportunity of exercising faith, patience, and generous kindness; of showing the tendency and efficacy of his religious principles, the tenderness of his conscience, and the stedfastness of his loyalty; for the confutation of his accusers, a rebuke to Saul, and an example to all who read it. 1 SAMUEL 25

Samuel dies, and is lamented and buried by all Israel; and David goes to Paran, 1. The character of Nabal, and of his wife Abigail, 2, 3. David sends to Nabal most respectfully requesting some provisions; but provoked by his answer, sets out to destroy him, 4-13. A servant warns Abigail, 14-17. She meets David with a present, and wisely pacifies him, 18-31. David blesses God for her interposition, and courteously dismisses her, 32-35. Nabal, hearing of the danger to which he had been exposed, is terrified, and dies, 36-38. David marries Abigail and also Ahinoam, 39-41. Michal is given to Phalit, 44.

1 SAMUEL 26

Saul, informed by the Ziphites, pursues David to Hachilah, 1-4. David by night comes to Saul's tent, with Abishai, whom he hinders from slaying Saul; but he takes away his spear and cruse, 5-12. David at a distance reproves Abner's negligence, protests his own innocency, and expostulates with Saul, 13-20. Saul owns his sin, and returns home, 21-25.

The word maugal never signifies a ditch or rampart, but a chariot or wagon way. Nor does it seem to denote a ring of carriages, as Buxtorf and others interpret the word; for it is not probable that Saul would encumber his army with baggage in so rapid a pursuit, nor that so mountainous a country was practicable for waggons. It appears simply to mean here, the circular encampment (from agal, round) which these troops formed, in the midst of which, as being the place of honor, Saul reposed. An Arab camp, D'Arvieux informs us, is always circular, when the disposition of the ground will permit, the prince being in the middle, and the troops at a respectful distance around him. Add to which, their lances are fixed near them in the ground all the day long, ready for action.

Yet he desired that Saul and all Israel should be informed of his conduct at this time. Abner and his soldiers, by neglecting to guard Saul when he slept, had exposed his life, and merited to be treated as his enemies, though he confided in them as friends; for, although their sound sleep was undoubtedly supernatural, yet there might be a neglect of placing sentinels, arising from contempt of David's small company. Saul also deemed David his enemy, though David had before spared and protected his life.

1 SAMUEL 27

David escapes to Gath, and is received by Achish, 1-3. Saul seeks him no more, 4. He asks Ziklag of Achish, 5-7. He invades the adjacent countries, and disingenuously leads Achish to suppose that he warred against Judah, 8-12.

David's answer, therefore, though not an absolute falsehood, was certainly an equivocation intended to deceive, and therefore incompatible with that sense of truth and honor which became him as a prince, and a professor of true religion. From these, and similar passages, we may observe the strict impartiality of the Sacred Scriptures. They present us with the most faithful delineation of human nature; they exhibit the frailties of kings, priests, and prophets, with equal truth; and examples of vice and frailty, as well as of piety and virtue, are held up, that we may guard against the errors to which the best men are exposed. the Jerahmeelites. ✻S#3397h. 1 S 30:29h. 1 Ch 2:9, 25. Kenites. 1 S 15:6. This circumstance also proves that this was a real appearance of Samuel, not a demonic imitation. This incident, though unique in Scripture, coupled with the decided belief in necromancy on the part of the Hebrews, and God's forthright commands against its practice, shows that the Hebrews believed that the dead have a conscious existence after death, and Saul's experience with Samuel clearly proves this belief is correct. But the whole coherence shows that it was but one. For Saul desired but one, ver. 11, and he inquires and the woman answers only of one, ver. 14 (Matthew Poole). The Hebrew term elohim is sometimes, as here, used of human judges (Ps 82:6n).

Dt 6:20mg. Jsh 4:6mg, 21mg. There is considerable diversity of opinion, both among learned and pious men, relative to this appearance to Saul. But the most probable opinion seems to be, that Samuel himself did actually appear to Saul, not by the power of enchantment, but by the appointment and especial mercy of God, to warn this infatuated monarch of his approaching end, that he might be reconciled with his Maker. There is not the smallest intimation of chicanery or satanic influence given in the text; but on the contrary, from the plain and obvious meaning of the language employed, it is perfectly evident that it was Samuel himself, (Shemooel hoo), as it is expressed in ver. 14. Indeed the very soul of Samuel seems to breathe in his expressions of displeasure against the disobedience and wickedness of Saul; while the awful prophetic denunciations which accordingly came to pass, were such as neither human nor diabolical wisdom could forsee, and which could only be known to God himself, and to those to whom he chose to reveal them. Had he fought for the Philistines, he would have fought against God and his country; and had he in the battle gone over to the Israelites, he would have deceived and become a traitor to the hospitable Achish. God therefore delivered him from such disgrace; and by the same kind Providence he was sent back to rescue his wives, and the wives and children of his people, from captivity. 1 S 14:21. 1 Ch 12:19. Scythopolis or Bethshan on the east to Mount Carmel on the west. Eusebius and Jerome inform us, that it was in their time a place of considerable consequence, lying between Scythopolis on the east and Legio on the west; and the latter (on Ho 1) informs us that it was pretty near Maximianopolis. The Jerusalem Itinerary places it ten miles west from Scythopolis; and William of Tyre says it was called Little Gerinum in his time, and that there was a fine fountain in it, whose waters fell into the Jordan near Scythopolis. 2 SAMUEL

2 SAMUEL 1

An Amalekite brings Saul's crown and bracelet to David, informs him of the event of the battle, and asserts that he slew Saul, 1-10. David rends his clothes, weeps, and orders the messenger to be put to death as a murderer, 11-16. His poetical lamentation for Saul and Jonathan, 17-27.

The story of this young man appears to be wholly a fiction, formed for the purpose of ingratiating himself with David, as the next probable successor to the crown. There is no fact in the case, except the bringing of the diadem and bracelets of Saul, as a sufficient evidence of his death, which, as he appears to have been a plunderer of the slain, he seems to have stripped from the dead body of the unfortunate monarch. It is remarkable, that Saul, who had forfeited his crown by his disobedience and ill-timed clemency with respect to the Amalekites, should now have the insignia of royalty stripped from his person by one of those very people. The princes of the East, in those days, as appears from the history of David, reposed on their couches till the cool of the evening: they therefore came in the heat of the day, when they knew their master would be resting on his bed; and as it was necessary to have the corn before it was needed, their coming at this time, though it might be earlier than

The word bechaim, rendered mulberry trees, is rendered by Aquila, apion, "pear-trees," as the LXX. also render it in 1 Ch 14:14, 15; and so the Vulgate in both places has pyrorum. The Rabbins, however, believe bacha signifies the mulberry tree: with whom Ursinus agrees. It more probably denotes a large shrub which the Arabs still call baca, from its distilling an odoriferous gum, from bachah, "to distill," as tears. Of this opinion is Celsius, who quotes a passage from Abulfadi, who describes it as a balsam shrub, having longish leaves, and bearing a large fruit with an acrid taste. M. Forskal mentions a tree by the name of baeca, with leaves rather ovated, smooth, entire: its berries are poisonous to the sheep. Robert Dick Wilson wrote of this term in his pamphlet, Is Higher Criticism Scholarly? He wrote, "You will have observed that the critics of the Bible who go to it in order to find fault have a most singular way of claiming to themselves all knowledge and all virtue and all love of truth. One of their favorite phrases is, 'all scholars agree.' When a man writes a book and seeks to gain a point by saying 'All scholars agree,' I wish to know who the scholars are and why they agree. Where do they get their evidence from to start with? I remember that some years ago I was investigating the word Baca, which you have in the English Bible—"Passing through the valley of Baca, make it a well" (Ps 84:6). I found in the Hebrew dictionary that there was a traveler named Burkhart, who said that Baca meant mulberry trees. That was not very enlightening. I could not see how mulberries had anything to do with water. I looked up all the authority of the scholars in Germany and England since Burkhart's time and found they had all quoted Burkhart. Just one scholar at the back of it! When I was traveling in the orient, I found that we had delicious water here and there. The water sprang up apparently out of the ground in the midst of the desert. I asked my brother who was a missionary where this water came from. He said, 'They bring this water from the mountains. It is an underground aqueduct. They cover it over to prevent it from evaporating.' Now the name of that underground aqueduct was Baca. My point is that you ought to be able to trace back this agreement among scholars to the original scholar who propounded the statement, and then find out whether what that scholar said is true. What was the foundation of his statement?" The valley of Rephaim has been connected by some with the valley of Baca mentioned in Ps 84:6. Thus John D. Davis in his A Dictionary of the Bible, notes "possibly the valley of Rephaim, where such trees were found (2 S 5:22, 23, R.V. margin). Perhaps, however, the expression is figurative, as the Greek and Syrian translators believed, like 'valley of the shadow of death,' and denotes any vale of tears." Though baca has been identified by many, as in Davis, as "a balsam tree, so named from its shedding, as it were, tears of gum; possibly also a noun meaning weeping," yet the identification is conjectural, as Willis J. Beecher notes in ISBE (1929 ed.), "Conjecturally the word is, by variant spelling, of the stem which denotes weeping." Wilson's correction of the identification of baca as an underground acqueduct is more probable than the admittedly conjectural identification with the balsam tree or mulberry tree, for it suits the context, since such an aqueduct is mentioned in ver. 8, by means of which David's men gained access to the previously unconquerable stronghold of the Jebusites, now Jerusalem. Furthermore, the valley of Rephaim was known for its good water (2 S 23:13, 15, 16).

24. sound. 2 K 7:6. 19:7. a going. or, a stepping. *S#6807h. 1 Ch 14:15. Is 3:20. Since "mulberry trees" should be an underground aqueduct, when they heard the sound of footsteps through the aqueduct, they would know that the Jebusite security had been breached successfully by ascending the shaft which ascended from the valley to the top of the hill of the Jebusite stronghold, and it was time to launch their attack. thou shalt bestir. Ex 11:7h. 2 SAMUEL 8

David subdues the Philistines and Moabites, 1, 2. He smites Hadadezer and the Syrians, 3-8. Toi, king of Hamath, sends his son to David with presents, which he dedicates to God, with the spoils that he had taken, 9-13. He puts garrisons in Edom, 14. He reigns in equity, 15. The names of his chief officers, 16-18.

In the parallel passage of Chronicles, we read, "David took Gath and her towns;" and it is probable that Gath and its districts were called Metheg-ammah in David's time; which, being unusual or becoming obsolete, in the time of the author of the Chronicles, led him thus to explain it.

Sir John Chardin understands those passages which speak of a right to eat at the royal table, as pointing out a right to a seat there, when the repast was public and solemn. So in a MS. Note on 1 K 2:7, he tells us that it was to be understood of the majilis, (the term for an assembly of lords, or a public feast), and not of the daily and ordinary repast. Hence, though Mephibosheth was to eat at all public times at the king's table, yet he would heed the produce of his lands for food at other times, which it was necessary for Ziba to understand. ver. 7, 11-13. 2 S 19:28. 1 K 2:7. 2 K 25:29. The beard is held in high respect and greatly valued in the East: the possessor considers it as his greatest ornament; often swears by it; and, in matters of great importance, pledges it; and nothing can be more secure than such a pledge; for its owner will redeem it at the hazard of his life. The beard was never cut off but in mourning, or as a sign of slavery. It is customary to shave the Ottoman princes, as a mark of their subjection to the reigning emperor (DelaMotraye, p. 247). The beard is a mark of authority and liberty among the Mohammedans. The Persians who clip the beard, and shave above the jaw, are reputed heretics. They who serve in the seraglios have their beards shaven, as a sign of servitude; nor are they allowed to let them grow till the sultan has set them at liberty. Among the Arabians, it is more infamous for anyone to appear with his beard cut off, than among us to be publicly whipped or branded; and many would prefer death to such a punishment (Niebuhr, ch. vii). Ye fight pro aris et focis; for every good, sacred and civil; for God, for your families, and for your countries. Such harangues, especially in very trying circumstances, are very natural, and may perhaps be found in the records of every nation. Several instances might be quoted from Roman and Grecian history; but few are more remarkable than that of Tyrtaeus, the lame Athenian poet, to whom the command of the army was given in one of the Messenian wars. The Spartans had at that time suffered great losses, and all their stratagems proved ineffectual, so that they began to despair of success; when the poet, by his lectures on honor and courage, delivered in moving verse to the army, ravished them to such a degree with the thoughts of dying for their country, that, rushing on with a furious transport to meet their enemies, they gave them an entire overthrow, and by one decisive battle brought the war to a happy conclusion (See Potter, vol ii. p. 76). The sacred historian seems to intimate that there was one particular time of the year to which military operations were limited; and Josephus informs us that this took place in the beginning of spring. In another part of his works he says that as soon as spring was begun, Adad levied and led forth his army against the Hebrews. Antiochus also prepared to invade Judea at the first appearance of spring; and Vespasian marched to Antipatris at the commencement of the same season. The kings and armies of the East, says Chardin, do not march except when there is grass and when they can encamp, which is in April. 2 SAMUEL 12

Nathan by a parable causes David to pass sentence on himself, 1-6. David, convicted by Nathan, confesses his guilt and is pardoned, but told that the child shall die, 7-14. The child is smitten and dies, though David fasted and prayed for him while he lived, 15-18. Finding that the child is dead, David worships God and takes comfort, 19-23. Solomon is born and named Jedidiah, 24, 25. David takes Rabbah and treats the Ammonites with severity, 26-31.

Is 57:17, 18. he came. Ps *51, title. There were. There is nothing in this parable which requires illustration. Its bent is evident; and it was wisely constructed, by not having too near a resemblance, to make David unwittingly pass sentence on himself. The parable was in David's hand what his own letter was in the hands of the brave Uriah. Nathan at length closed in with him in the application of it. In beginning with a parable he showed his prudence, and great need there is of prudence in giving reproof; but now he speaks as an ambassador from God. He reminds David of the great things God had designed and done for him, and then charges him with a high contempt of the divine authority, and threatens an entail of judgments upon his family for this sin. Those who despise the word and law of God, despise God himself, and will assuredly suffer for such contempt. 2 S 14:5-11. Jg 9:7-15. 1 K 20:35-41. Is 5:1-7. Mt 21:33-45. Lk 15:11, etc. 16:19, etc.

It is sometimes mentioned as belonging to Arabia, sometimes to Caelo-Syria; and was one of the cities of the Decapolis east of Jordan. Josephus extends the region of Perea as far as Philadelphia. It is now, says Burckhardt, called Amman, distant about 19 miles to the Southeast of Szalt, and lies along the banks of a river called Moiet Amman, which has its source in a pond at a few hundred paces from the southwestern end of the town, and empties itself into the Zerka, or Jabbok, about four hours to the north. This river runs in a valley bordered on both sides by barren hills of flint, which advance on the south side close to the edge of the stream. The edifices which still remain, though in a decaying state, from being built of a calcareous stone of moderate hardness, sufficiently attest the former greatness and splendor of this metropolis of the children of Ammon. Some therefore think that mishkelah should be taken for its value, not weight, which renders it perfectly plain. J. Finnis Dake in his Annotated Reference Bible suggests that the crown weighed 131 lbs. troy, valued at $29,085.00, adding "How a crown weighing this much could be worn by a man is hard to understand." The ancients mention several such large crowns, made more for sight than use. Athenaeus describes a crown of gold that was 24 feet in circumference; and mentions others that were two, some four, and others five feet deep. Pliny takes notice of some that were no less than eight pounds weight. Besides the crown usually worn, it was customary for kings, in some nations, to have such large ones as described either hung or supported over the throne, where they sat at their coronation or other solemn occasions. in great abundance. Heb. very great. ver. 2. 2 S 8:8. 2 SAMUEL 13

Amnon, David's son, loves his sister Tamar, 1, 2; and by Jonadab's advice he feigns sickness, that Tamar might wait on him; and taking that opportunity he ravishes her, 3-14. He hates her and drives her away, and she in grief and shame retires to Absalom, 15-

20. David is angry; but Absalom conceals his hatred, 21, 22. Absalom invites his brethren to a feast; where Amnon at his command is murdered, 23-29. David grieves vehemently, supposing that all his sons are slain; but is comforted by Jonadab and learns the truth, 30-36. Absalom flees to Geshur; but David longs after him, 37-39.

"They have a small place built with clay, between two and three feet high, having a hole at the bottom for the convenience of drawing out the ashes, something similar to that of a brick-kiln. The oven is usually about fifteeen inches wide at top, and gradually grows wider to the bottom. It is heated with wood; and when sufficiently hot, and perfectly clear from smoke, having nothing but clear embers at bottom, which continue to reflect great heat, they prepare the dough in a large bowl, and mould the cakes to the desired size on a board or stone placed near the oven. After they have kneaded the cake to a proper consistence, they pat it a little, then toss it about with great dexterity in one hand till it is as thin as they choose to make it. They then wet one side of it with water, at the same time wetting the hand and arm with which they put it into the oven."

2 SAMUEL 14

Joab instructs a woman of Tekoah and sends her to David, 1-3. With a feigned tale and artful management she induces him to recall Absalom, 4-20. Joab is sent to bring him to Jerusalem; yet he is not allowed to see the king, 21-24. Absalom's beauty, 25, 26. His children, 27. After two years, he prevails with Joab to introduce him to David, 28-33.

2. to Tekoah. i.e. a trumpet blast, *S#8620h. Tekoah was a city of Judah, situated, according to Eusebius and Jerome, twelve miles south of Jerusalem. Josephus says it was not far from the castle of Herodium; and Jerome (Prologue to Amos) says it stood on a hill six miles south from Bethlehem. Dr. Pococke places it at the same distance and says there are still considerable ruins on the top of a hill, which is about half a mile long and a furlong broad. 1 Ch 2:24. 4:5. 2 Ch 11:6. 20:20. It is very possible that the principal incidents mentioned here were real; and that Joab found a person whose circumstances bore a near resemblance to that which he wished to represent. She did not make the similitude too plain and visible, lest the king should see her intention before she had obtained a grant of pardon; and thus her circumstances, her mournful tale, her widow's dress, her aged person (for Josephus says she was advanced in years), and her impressive manner, all combined to make one united irresistible impression on the heart of the aged monarch. 2 S 12:1-3. real persuasion than we are apt to suppose. Sir John Chardin states that having found fault with the king of Persia's evaluation of a rich trinket, the grand master told him that if a Persian had dared to have done such a thing, it would have been as much as his life was worth. "Know," said he, "that the kings of Persia have a general and full knowledge of matters, as sure as it is extensive; and that, equally in the greatest and smallest things, there is nothing more just and sure than what they pronounce." ver. 20. 2 S 19:27. If the shekel be allowed to mean the common shekel, the amount will be utterly incredible; for Josephus says that "two hundred shekels make five minae:" and the mina, he says, "weighs two pounds and a half;" which calculation makes Absalom's hair weigh twelve pounds and a half! But it is probable that the king's shekel was that which Epiphanius and Hesychius say was the fourth part of an ounce, half a stater, or two drachms: the whole amount, therefore, of the 200 shekels is about 50 ounces, which make 4 lb. 2 oz. troy weight, or 3 lb. 2 oz. avoirdupois. This need not be accounted incredible, especially as abundance of oil and ointment was used by the ancients in dressing their heads. It forms part of a ridge of limestone hills, extending from north to south for about a mile; and it is described as having three, or, according to others, four summits; the central and highest of which overlooks the whole of the city, over whose streets and walls the eye roves as if in the survey of a model. and wept as he went up. It was an ancient custom, in those warm and arid countries, to lay the dust before a person of distinction by sprinkling the ground with water. Dr. Pococke and the consul were treated with this respect when they entered Cairo (vol. i. p. 17). The same custom is alluded to in the well known fable of Phaedrus, in which a slave is represented as going before Augustus and officiously laying the dust. To throw dust in the air while a person was passing was therefore an act of great disrespect; to do so before a sovereign prince, an indecent outrage. But it is probable that Shimei meant more than disrespect and outrage to this afflicted king. Sir John Chardin informs us, that in the East in general, those who demand justice against a criminal throw dust upon him, signifying that he ought to be put in the grave: hence the common imprecation among the Turks and Persians, "Be covered with earth," or, "Earth be upon thy head."

9. his head. Riding furiously under the thick boughs of a great oak, which hung low and had never been cropped, either the twisted branches or some low forked bough of the tree caught him by the neck, or, as some think, by the loops into which his long hair had been pinned, which had been so much his pride and was now justly made a halter for him. He may have hung so low from the bough, in consequence of the length of his hair, that he could not use his hands to help himself, or so entangled that his hands were bound, so that the more he struggled the more he was caught. This set him up as a fair mark to the servants of David; and although David would have spared his rebellious son, if his orders had been executed, yet he could not turn aside the sword of divine justice, in executing the just, righteous sentence of death on this traitorous son. ver. 14. 2 S 14:26. 17:23. The Arabs in general make use of no other monument than a heap of stones over a grave. Thus, in an Arabic poem it is related that Hatim, the father, and Adi the grandfather of Kais, having been murdered at a time before Kais was capable of reflection, his mother kept it a profound secret; and in order to guard him against having any suspicion, she collected a parcel of stones on two hillocks in the neighborhood, and told her son, that the one was the grave of his father, and the other of his grandfather. 2 SAMUEL 19

The people being greatly disappointed and discouraged by David's conduct, Joab, by rude expostulations, induces him to restrain his grief and come forth to them, 1-8. The men of Israel dispute about bringing back David; who sends to the priests to incite the men of Judah to take the lead in this; and they readily comply, 9-15. Shimei submitting is not punished, 16-23. Mephibosheth meets David; complains that Ziba had deceived and slandered him, and has half his land restored, 24-30. Barzillai attends David over Jordan, and his son is taken into the king's family, 31-40. The Israelites expostulate with the men of Judah for bringing back the king without them, 41-43.

5. Thou hast. Everyone must admit that David's immoderate grief for his rebellious son was imprudent, and that Joab's firm and sensible reproof was necessary to arouse him to a sense of his duty to his people: but, in his manner, Joab far exceeded the bounds of that reverence which a servant owes to his master, or a subject to his prince. saved. He shook off his grief, anointed his head, and washed his face, that he might not appear to men to mourn, and then made his appearance at the gate of the city, which was the public place of resort for the hearing of causes and giving judgment as well as a place to ratify special bargains. The people flocked to congratulate him on his and their safety, and that all was well. When we are convinced of a fault, we must amend, though we are told of it by our inferiors in a way which is peculiarly painful to our natural feelings (1 S ◐+*25:17. 2 K +*5:13). This ancient custom still exists in the East; for when Dr. Pococke returned from viewing the town of ancient Byblus, he says, "The sheik and the elders were sitting in the gate of the city, after the ancient manner, and I sat awhile with them" (Travels, vol. ii., p. 98). 2 S ◐15:2. 18:6-8. The nails of the toes of the mummies inspected in London in 1763, of which an account is given in the Philosophical Transactions for 1764, seem to have been tinted with some reddish color. 2 S 15:30. As he was too old either to enjoy the pleasures of a court or to be of any further service to the king, he finishes his affecting address to the aged monarch with the request that he would suffer him to enjoy what old men naturally desire, to "die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and my mother;" at the same time commending his son Chimham to his kind offices. I may die. This agrees with the situation of the Abela which Eusebius and Jerome place between Paneas, or Caesarea Philippi, and Damascus. Josephus (Ant. I. vii. c. 10) says it was a fortified city, and a metropolis of the Israelites; and (Ant. I. viii. c. 6) also that it belonged to the ten tribes, having been taken from the king of Damascus. A famine prevails for three years; as a judgment on the land for Saul's cruelty to the Gibeonites, who being asked, require seven of his descendants and hang them up before the Lord, 1-9. Rizpah watches their bodies: David buries their bones with those of Saul and Jonathan in the sepulchre of Kish; and the famine ceases, 10-14. In several battles with the Philistines four of David's mighty men slay four giants, 15-22.

2 SAMUEL 22

The introduction to David's psalm of thanksgiving, 1. He professes his confidence and joy in God, 2, 3. He states his trials and dangers and celebrates the praises of God for surprising deliverances, 4-20. He avows his integrity and shows the method of the Lord's dealings with men, 21-28. He ascribes to God all the glory of his victories, 29-36. He exults, with grateful praises, in the destruction or subjection of all his enemies, 37-44. He anticipates the submission of the nations and glories in the salvation of God and his mercies to him and to his Seed forever, 45-51.

Mountains are here spoken of as the "foundations of heaven" upon which the heavens appear to rest. This is a very significant feature of biblical language, which is not technical and scientific but expressed in the language of appearance, just as we commonly speak of the sun rising and setting, though we are not thereby denying a known contrary scientific fact by so speaking. Had the Scriptures been written in the language of God's absolute scientific knowledge, no doubt such language could not have been understood by the original audience, nor by us, even to this day. One of the amazing marks of the divine inspiration of Scripture is the things the Bible does not say, for it does not contain the many contemporary scientific misconceptions of the time and culture that produced the Bible. It can be safely asserted that, though the Bible is not a textbook of science, yet there are no proven scientific errors in its teaching. There are many things taught or commanded in the Bible which anticipated the findings of modern science and medicine, such as the dietary laws and requirements for purification found in the law of Moses. with propriety, that we have thirty-seven out of thirty; and besides, in the parallel place in 1 Chronicles, there are sixteen added!

David requires Joab to number the people, who very reluctantly complies, 1-8. Joab delivers the number to the king, 9. He repents after being warned by Gad the prophet, and obliged to choose one plague out of three proposed to him, he fixes on three days' pestilence, 10-14. After seventy thousand die in Israel, the angel is stayed from destroying Jerusalem in answer to David's prayer, 15-17. David, directed by God, purchases Araunah's threshing floor, builds an altar, and sacrifices; and the plague is stayed, 18-25.

1. A.M. 2987. B.C. 1017. An. Ex. Is. 474. And. ℳ107, Ge +10:5. again. 2 S 21:1, etc. he. That is, Satan, 1 Ch 21:1. ℳ63A1, Ge +14:20. This verse, when read without reference to any other part of the word of God is very difficult to understand, and has been used by those who desire to undermine the justice of God to show that he sought occasion to punish—that he incited David to sin; and when he had so incited him, gave the dreadful alternative of choosing one of three scourges by which his people were to be cut off. On the face of the passage these thoughts naturally arise, because "the Lord" is the antecedent to the pronoun "he,"—he moved David. But to those who "search the Scriptures," this exceedingly difficult passage receives a wonderful elucidation. By referring to 1 Ch 21:1, the reader will there find that Satan was the mover, and that the Lord most righteously punished David for the display of pride he had manifested. Oh, that Christians, who sometimes have their minds harassed with doubts, would remember the promise, that what they know not now they shall know hereafter (Jn 13:7); and if no other instance of elucidation than this passage occurred to them to remove their doubts, let this be a means of stirring them up to dig deeper than ever into the inexhaustible mines of the Inspired Word. Ja *1:13, 14. moved. 2 S 12:11. 16:10. Ge 45:5. 50:20. Ex *7:3. Dt +2:30. 1 S 26:19. 1 K 22:20-23. Ezk 14:9. 20:25. Ac 4:28. 2 Th 2:11. David's thought and purpose of numbering the people, sprang from his remaining depravity, excited by Satan's suggestions: and as this "was of the Lord," (in the same manner, that it was of him that the Canaanites should be hardened and that Ahab should be deceived), he withdrew every internal or external restraint, and left him to follow his own counsels (see the preceding Marginal References). Thus, by a manner of expression common in Scripture, the Lord is said to have "moved David against Israel;" for certainly this is the most natural construction of the words. But other passages prove that the sinful disposition and resolution could not be from God, though he both permitted and overruled them to accomplish his own wise and righteous purposes. This example throws light upon the doctrine of God's providential government of the world and suggests many practical instructions (Scott). See Note and References at 1 S 18:10n. 2 S 12:11n. Some think it was a contempt of the promise that the Israelites should be innumerable, and that they ought not to have been numbered without an express command, as in the days of Moses. Others suppose with Josephus that it was a kind of sacrilege in omitting to collect the half shekel apiece for the use of the sanctuary. It however would appear that pride, ambition, and a desire of conquest induced David to this measure, and rendered it so displeasing to God. that I may. Dt 8:13, 14. 2 Ch 32:25, 26, 31. Pr 29:23. Abishag is procured to cherish David, in his old age and sickness, 1-4. Adonijah gains over Joab and Abiathar, and aspires to the throne, 5-10. Nathan counsels Bathsheba, who speaks to David, and is seconded by Nathan, 11-27. David assures Bathsheba, by an oath, that Solomon shall succeed him; and gives orders that he should, that day, be anointed and proclaimed king, 28-37. Zadok, Benaiah, and Nathan zealously execute these orders, and the people rejoice, 38-40. Jonathan informs Adonijah and his company; and they hastily disperse, 41-49. Adonijah flees to the horns of the altar, and obtains from Solomon a conditional pardon, 50-53.

This was a fountain on the west of Jerusalem, (consequently in an opposite direction to En-rogel on the east, where Adonijah was proclaimed king), of which there were two pools, an upper and a lower (2 Ch 32:30). There is a large square cistern in the ravine west of the city, mentioned by Dr. Richardson as a little to the south of the Jaffa gate, which Dr. Pococke describes as a basin about 250 paces long and 100 broad. It is commonly called the pool of Bathsheba, but seems to be the lower pool of Gihon. "Nearly a mile to the N.N.W. is the pool of Gihon, which I suppose to be the upper pool. It is a very large basin, and, if I mistake not, is cut down about ten feet into the rock, there being a way down to it by steps. It was almost dry at that time, and seems designed to receive the rain waters which come from the hills about it. There is a canal from the pool to the city, which is uncovered part of the way, and, it is said, goes to the pool in the streets near the holy sepulchre. The fountain of Gihon arose either in the upper pool, or out of the high ground above it" (Travels, book i. ch. 6). See Note on 2 S 5:23. the city. ver. 40. 1 S 4:5. David charges Solomon to serve God; and directs him how to act towards Joab, the sons of Barzillai, and Shimei, 1-9. His death and the years of his reign, 10, 11. Solomon succeeds him, 12. Adonijah persuades Bath-sheba to ask Solomon to give him Abishag to be his wife; and is put to death, 13-25. Abiathar's life is spared, but he is deprived of the high priesthood, 26, 27. Joab, having fled to the altar, is there put to death, 28-34. Beniah succeeds Joab, and Zadok, Abiathar, 35. Shimei is, by Solomon, required to reside in Jerusalem, and engages by oath to do so: but breaking his engagement, he is put to death, 36-46.

Do not consider him as an innocent man; for, as thou art a wise man, and knowest how to treat such persons, treat him as he deserves; only, as I have sworn to him that I would not put him to death, "bring NOT his hoar head down to the grave with blood." So Solomon understood David; for, after he had commanded Joab to be slain, in obedience to his father, he sent for Shimei, and knowing he ought to be well watched, he confined him to Jerusalem for the rest of his life: and so it appears David should be understood; for the negative particle lo, in the former clause—"hold him not guiltless," should be repeated in the latter clause, though not expressed; instances of which frequently occur in the Hebrew Scriptures (See Jg 5:30. 1 S 2:3. Ps 1:5. 9:18. 38:1. 75:5. Pr 5:16. 24:12, etc.). This is the view taken of the subject by Dr. Kennicott, and it seems the best and most correct mode of interpreting the text. ℳ63I1C1, Ge +2:6. Solomon evidently considered the request of Adonijah in this light; and was convinced that he was still aiming to seize the crown, to which he considered this as one step. But it is very doubtful, how far the plea either of policy or state necessity can justify Solomon in thus embruing his hands in his brother's blood, whatever might have been his treasonable intentions or conduct. spoken. Ps 64:8. 140:9. These terms Shimei readily agreed to, and solemnly swore to observe them; and for three years he lived unmolested and in affluence. But growing secure, in contempt of Solomon's authority and of the oath of God, upon an unnecessary business he took a journey, which according to his own engagement forfeited his life. Thus the Lord left him to be infatuated, that due punishment might be inflicted upon him; in order that every ringleader of opposition to Solomon's kingdom might be crushed, and others be intimidated by their examples. Solomon's throne by the death of this man was established in peace, and became a type of the Redeemer's kingdom of peace and righteousness (Scott). 1 K 1:53. 2 S 14:24, 28.

Solomon marries Pharaoh's daughter, 1. The people sacrifice in high places, 2, 3. Solomon offers a thousand burnt-offerings at Gibeon, 4. God appears to him in a dream; and he asks and obtains from him wisdom, together with riches and honor, 5-15. His sagacious decision of a perplexing cause between two harlots renders him celebrated for wisdom, 16-28.

25. Divide. This was apparently a very strange decision; but Solomon saw that the only way to discover the real mother was by the affection and tenderness she would necessarily show to her offspring. The plan was tried, and succeeded; and it was a proof of his sound judgment, penetration, and acquaintance with the human heart, or rather, of his extraordinary and supernatural wisdom. See ver. 28. The two following instances are in some faint manner to be compared to Solomon's decision, inasmuch as they also work upon the human sympathies. Suetonius, in his Life of the emperor Claudian (c. xv.), tells us, that this emperor discovered a woman to be the real mother of a young man, whom she refused to acknowledge, by commanding her to marry him, the proofs being doubtful on both sides; for, rather than commit incest, she confessed the truth. Diodorus Siculus also informs us, that Ariopharnes, king of Thrace, being appointed to decide between three young men, each of whom professed to be the son of the deceased king of the Cimmerians, and claimed the succession, discovered the real son by ordering each to shoot an arrow into the dead body of the king: two of them did this without hesitation; but the real son of the deceased monarch refused. George N. H. Peters answers, "Some indeed (Horne's Intro. vol. 2, p. 12) think that in David's and Solomon's reign this was the extent, but others more accurately narrow their dominion in actual possession. Whatever may be the fact in reference to past fulfillment, three things are very evident, (a) that a portion was not held by the Jews, excepting by a precarious tributary arrangement; (b) that it was only thus possessed for a short time, and hence is in no way commensurate with the promise; (c) that the predictions relating to the future take it as a matter of course that at the future restoration this will be effected, seeing that all the covenant promises are then to be realized" (Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, p. 144). Dt 15:22. Tzevee, in Arabic zaby, Chaldee and Syriac tavya, denotes the gazelle or antelope, so called from its stately beauty, as the word imports. In size it is smaller than the roe, of an elegant form, and its motions are light and graceful. It bounds seemingly without effort, and runs with such swiftness that few creatures can exceed it (2 S 2:18). Its fine eyes are so much celebrated as even to become a proverb; and its flesh is much esteemed for food among eastern nations, having a sweet, musky taste, which is highly agreeable to their palates (1 K 4:23). If to these circumstances we add, that they are gregarious, and common all over the East, whereas the roe is either not known at all, or else very rare in these countries, little doubt can remain that the gazelle and not the roe is intended by the original word. fallow-deer. Yachmur, rendered bubalus by the Vulgate, probably the buffalo; and though "the flesh of a buffalo does not seem so well tasted as beef, being harder and more coarse," yet in our times, "persons of distinction, as well as the common people, and even the European merchants, eat a good deal of it, in the countries where that animal abounds" (Niebuhr, Descrip. de l'Arab. p. 146).

The cedar is a large and noble evergreen tree, and grows on the most elevated part of the mountain, is taller than the pine, and so thick that five men together could scarcely fathom one. It shoots out its branches at ten or twelve feet from the ground; they are large and distant from each other, and are perpetually green. The trunk is remarkably straight and lofty; and it is crowned at the top with a large tuft of spiring leaves, about four feet long, which never fall off, but always continue in the same flourishing verdure. The stalks are generally full of rugged knots, which are vestiges of decayed leaves: for the trunk of the tree is not solid, but its center is filled with pith, round which is a tough bark full of strong fibers when young, which when the tree becomes old, hardens and becomes ligneous. To this bark the leaves are closely joined, which in the center rise erect, but after they are advanced above the vagina which surrounds them, they expand very wide on every side of the stem, and as the older leaves decay, the stalk advances in height. The leaves, when the tree has grown to a size for bearing fruit, are six or eight feet long, and very broad when expanded. The fruit, called the date, grows below the leaves in clusters. 1 KINGS 7

Solomon builds himself an house, 1; and the house of the forest of Lebanon, 2-5; the porch of the pillars, 6; the porch of judgment, 7; the house of Pharaoh's daughter, 8. The costly materials of these structures, and of the great court, 9-12. Hiram, a skilful artificer, is fetched from Tyre, 13, 14. He casts two pillars of brass, 15-22; and the brazen sea; with ten bases, and ten lavers, and other vessels for the temple, 23-47. The furniture and sacred vessels of gold are made for the temple, 48-50. The dedicated treasures are brought into it, 51.

The magnitude of these stones was certainly extraordinary; but let us hear M. Volney, and our surprise will no longer be fixed on these stones, but be transferred from Solomon's house to the ruins of Balbec: "What is still more astonishing is the enormous stones which compose the sloping wall. To the west, the second layer is formed of stones which are from 28 to 35 feet long, by about 9 in height. Over this layer, at the north-west angle, there are three stones, which alone occupy a space of 175 feet and a half; viz. the first, 58 feet 7 inches: the second, 58 feet 11 inches; and the third, exactly 58 feet; and each of these is 12 feet thick. These stones are of white granite, with large shining flakes, like gypsum: there is a quarry of this kind of stone under the whole city, and another in the adjacent mountains, which is open in several places. On the right, as we approach the city, there is still lying there a stone hewn on three sides, which is 69 feet 2 inches long, 12 feet 10 inches broad, and 13 feet 3 inches in thickness" (Travels, vol. ii. p. 241).

That is, nearly thirty feet, English measure. But in the parallel place in Chronicles, these pillars are said to be thirty-five cubits high. Tremellius reconciles this difference by observing, that the common cubit was but one half of the cubit of the sanctuary; so that eighteen of the one would make thirty-six of the other; from which, if we deduct one cubit for the base, there will remain thirty-five. Notwithstanding the names of these pillars, they seem to have supported no part of the building, and appear to have been formed for ornament; and were no doubt also emblematical. The right pillar was called Jachin, which signifies, "He will establish;" while that on the left was named Boaz, "In it is strength." Some think they were intended for memorials of the pillar and cloud of fire, which led Israel through the wilderness; but Henry supposes them designed for memorandums to the priests and others that came to worship at God's door. 1st. To depend upon God only, and not upon any sufficiency of their own, for strength and establishment in all their religious exercises. 2nd. It was a memorandum to them of the strength and establishment of the temple of God among them. When the temple was destroyed, particular notice is taken of the breaking up and carrying away of these brazen pillars, 2 K 25:13, 17, which had been the tokens of its establishment, and would have been still so, if they had not forsaken God. eighteen cubits. 2 Ch 3:15. line. or, cord. Ditzler suggests it was eight feet, nine inches deep, stating it was "placed upon twelve molten oxen, which made it twenty-one feet from the level of the floor to the top of the laver" (Baptism, p. 62). Ditzler says "The water was brought in aqueducts under ground some four miles from a distant fountain, and made to rise up through the hollow pedestal into the basin, and then there were, first two, later twelve cocks at the basis out of which the water ran, at which the priests baptized. The laver was thus made twenty-one feet high to keep any unclean person from touching the water by which it would be defiled" (p. 62). Ditzler then notes that "If a person got into the vessel, then, he had, 1. To violate the express precept to 'wash out of it' (Ex 30:19, thereat. lit. out of it); 2. He would violate all the facts in Leviticus and Numbers cited about not using defiled water (Le 11:29-36. Nu 31:23, 24. 19:21, 22); 3. He would violate the repeated precepts of the rabbins, who taught it 'was better to die of thirst than disobey' the laws of rabbins. Lightfoot gives us many such facts. 4. He would have to leap twenty-one feet high to get to the top; 5. When in the vessel he would have to swim or drown, as it 'contained' the amount of water named in 2 Ch 4; 6. He would have to leap down twenty-one feet on the solid stone pavement; 7. The vessel would then have to be emptied of all its water, burnt out, and cleansed for seven days before it could be used. All this is involved in the immersion theory; 8. All this must be done in the presence of multitudes of men and women—of course the clothes retained on the person" (p. 62). Thus it is absurd to suppose that any one or any thing was ever immersed in the laver; rather, the priests washed their hands or feet at the spouts provided at the foot or base of the huge laver, this being done by means of sprinkling or pouring. The whole person is spoken of as being washed, anointed, etc., when only a given part of the person is literally washed (Nu 8:7, LXX. Jb 9:30. Mt 26:6-12. Jn 2:6. *13:5-10). This immense laver, called a sea from its magnitude, held, at a moderate computation, 16,000 gallons. Besides this great brazen laver, there were in the temple ten lavers of brass of a less size, which moved on wheels, and were ornamented with the figures of various animals, having, probably, always some relation to the cherubim. These lavers were to hold water for the use of the priests in their sacred office, particularly to wash the victims that were to be offered as a burnt offering, as we learn from 2 Ch 4:6; but the brazen sea was for the priests to wash in. The knops are supposed to have been in the form of an ox's head (2 Ch 4:3); and some think the water flowed out at their mouths. two thousand. ver. 38. 2 Ch *4:5n. Ezk 45:14.

Succoth we know was situated east of Jordan, in the tribe of Gad, and according to Jerome, in the district of Scythopolis: hence the "plain of Jordan," where Hiram cast the brazen vessels, must be the plain in which that river runs, Zarthan and Succoth being probably nearly opposite each other; but whether the precise spot of his operations was on this side or on the other side, is uncertain. Solomon assembles the elders and princes; and the priests carry the ark into the most holy place, 1-9. The glory of the Lord fills the house, 10, 11. Solomon blesses Israel; and praises God for performing his word to David, 12-21. He prays, that God would answer the supplications of Israel, and of strangers, in all ages, and in all cases, in which they should call upon him, towards this his holy temple, 22-53. He again praises God, and blesses the people, 54-61. He offers very numerous sacrifices, keeps the feast fourteen days; and dismisses the people, who return home joyful and thankful, 62-66.

46. If. Ge +4:7. they sin. The second clause of this verse, as it is here translated, renders this supposition entirely nugatory; for if there be no man that sinneth not, it is useless to say IF they sin: but this objection is removed by rendering the original "If they shall sin against thee (for there is no man that, lo yechetai, may not sin)"; i.e. there is no man impeccable or infallible; none that is not liable to transgress. 1 KINGS 11

Solomon, having taken very many wives and concubines, even strange women, is in his old age seduced by them into idolatry, 1-8. The Lord threatens to rend the greater part of the kingdom from his family, 9-13. Solomon finds an adversary in Hadad the Edomite, who had been entertained in Egypt, 14-22; and in Rezon, who reigned in Damascus, 23-25; and in Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah foretold that he should reign over ten tribes, and whom Solomon in vain attempts to kill, 26-40. Solomon dies and is buried, and Rehoboam succeeds him, 41-43.

the hills in the form of a triumphal arch, 136 miles north of Jerusalem, 195 miles south of Antioch, and 276 miles S.S.W. of Diarbekir. It is a city of the highest antiquity, being at least as ancient as the time of Abraham: it has been often captured, and several times demolished, but has always risen to splendor and dignity. The modern town is described by Maundrell as of a long, straight figure, its ends pointing nearly N.E. and S.W. It is very slender in the middle, but swells bigger at each end, especially at that to the N.E. According to Niebuhr, the walls are something less than a league and a half in circumference; and the population is estimated at from 100,000 to 150,000.

1 KINGS 12

The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to make Rehoboam king, with Jeroboam now returned from Egypt, demand redress of their grievances, 1-5. Rehoboam, rejecting the counsel of the old men, and following that of the young, answers them roughly, 6-15. Ten tribes revolt, stone Adoram, and make Jeroboam king, 16-20. Rehoboam raises an army to subdue them; but is forbidden by the prophet Shemaiah, 21-24. Jeroboam builds Shechem and Penuel, 25; and to establish his kingdom, he sets up the worship of the golden calves in Bethel and Dan, 26-33.

It says sibbah, (from savav, to "turn, change"), "the change or revolution was from the Lord;" which is consistent with all the preceding declarations. God stirred up the people to revolt from a man who had neither skill nor humanity to govern them. 1 KINGS 13

A man of God sent from Judah prophesies to Jeroboam, while burning incense, that Josiah of David's race should defile the altar at Bethel; and he gives him a sign, 1-3. Jeroboam's hand, stretched forth against him, withers; and the altar is rent, 4, 5. Jeroboam's hand is restored at the prophet's prayer, 6. He refuses entertainment and a reward, and leaves Bethel, 7-10. He is seduced, and brought back, by the lie of an old prophet, who afterwards denounces the judgment of God against him for his disobedience, 11-22. A lion kills him on his way home, 23-25. The old prophet fetches his body, buries it with lamentations, and confirms his prophecy, 26-32. Jeroboam persists in his evil ways, 33, 34.

Scripture by example and precept suggests several sources of true guidance: (1) The written word of God found in the Bible, Ps 119:105; Is +*8:20. (2) God speaking to us through our thoughts, 1 K 8:18; Pr +*4:23; ✓16:3, 9. Thoughts must be tested as to their source, 1 K 8:17, 18; *10:24; Je 23:16; Ac ◐5:3. Thoughts may be correct and good, 1 K *8:18; 2 Ch 31:20, 21; Da 1:8; Ac 7:60; 26:29. But thoughts may be evil, Dt 15:9; Pr 23:7; 1 T 4:1, 2; Ja 1:14, 15. Even diet may affect our judgment, Is 7:15, 22. (3) Circumstances, 1 S 14:15n; Pr *16:33. But care must be exercised in interpreting circumstances, 1 S 24:4n. (4) Steadfast, committed obedience to the already revealed will of God, Ro 12:1, 2; 2 C 6:14. (5) Our enlightened understanding as we study God's word, Ep 1:18, 19; 5:17; Col 1:9. (11) The peace of God, wrought by the Holy Spirit, Jn 14:27; Ro 15:13; Ph 4:6, 7; Col 3:15. But feelings are subjective, not objective, may be mistaken (whether by a misinformed conscience, a mistaken interpretation of Scripture, a misreading of apparently favorable circumstances, etc.) or counterfeited, affected by mood and temperament, and are based upon an "experience centered" rather than a Bible or Christ centered approach to the Christian life (Is 65:5n). Great caution must be exercised in evaluating any feeling of peace, lest one be misled by false peace, ver. 18n; Ezk +*13:10. (12) The voice of the church, Ac 13:1-3; 1 T +*4:16. He 13:7, 17. Scripture warns against the dangers of false guidance from various sources: (1) Careless handling, and incorrect understanding and application of God's written word, Jg 6:40n; 11:35n. Mk 9:43; 2 T 2:15n; 2 P 3:17. Do not seek for guidance by opening the Bible at random and hoping for a verse to speak to you, Ge 24:44n; Jn ◐+*5:39. (2) Itching ear syndrome: seeking guidance until you find the advice you wanted to hear, 1 K 12:9n; 2 T 4:3. (3) Wrong friends, 2 Ch *13:7; 1 C 15:33. (4) Inexperienced and unqualified individuals, often young, who lack the necessary discernment, 1 K +√12:10; 2 T 3:14; He 5:14; 13:7. (5) Requiring God to specially engineer circumstances or signs, Jg 6:40n. Be especially wary of looking to signs or circumstances to confirm guidance when what is sought is contrary to the written word of God, 2 C 6:14. (6) Basing our thinking on artificial categories either imposed upon Scripture or Christian experience, such as the distinction of sacred and secular, or of "called" and "voluntary" Christian service, distinctions not taught in the word of God, 2 T 2:15n. (7) Wrongly weighting factors in determining God's guidance. Certain factors are readily subject to misinterpretation, such as circumstances, 1 S 24:4n; 2 S 4:8. Others, such as the feeling of peace (ver. 9n. Ezk ◐+*13:10), are extremely subjective, and can be affected by our present physical state of health, Pr 17:22; Ro 15:13; 2 C 5:7. Guidance must be based upon wisdom and sound principles, properly weighted, and applied without haste, Pr 19:2; 28:22; Col 1:10; Ja 1:5. (8) Occult practices, Is *8:19. (9) Dreams, Je +*23:28n. (10) Exclusive reliance upon our own resources in understanding God's word without seeking the assistance of the godly, consecrated scholarship of other men available to us in books and Bible study tools, Ac 8:31n. (11) Resolutely holding to a favorite set of prooftexts from Scripture, rather than adhering to the whole counsel of God, 2 K 22:8n; Ac 2:38n; 1 J 2:19n; 2 P 1:20n. (12) In doctrinal matters, failing to genuinely accept the Bible as the sufficient, perspicuous, sole and final authority, Pr +*8:9; 18:1n; Is +*8:20n; Je +*23:28n; Ga 1:8n; 2 T +*3:15-17. (13) False teachers, false cults and religions, Je 14:14n; Ezk 14:10n. (14) Any plan or scheme that lacks wisdom, prudence, and good judgment (sanctified common sense), Pr +*22:3; Lk 14:28-32. (15) Guidance from an individual who falsely claims possession of a spiritual gift, or possesses a false gift, 1 K 13:18. (16) Guidance which conflicts with genuine guidance previously received, 1 K 13:18. It is wise to commit to writing a record of God's leading in our lives, recording the specific reasons which originally committed us to a given course of action or life direction. Then, should mixed signals, conflicting advice, or doubts later arise, we can return to that record for confirmation of the original guidance. This being the case, we are at liberty to consider the words of the Lord as delivered to the true prophet, thus brought back; and then the sentence is pronounced by God himself, calling to him out of heaven, as in Ge 22:11. And that this doom was thus pronounced by God, not by the false prophet, we are assured in ver. 26. The lion, though he had killed the man, yet, contrary to his nature, did not devour him, nor tear the ass, nor meddle with the travellers that passed by; while the ass stood quietly by, not fearing the lion, nor betaking himself to flight; both stood as guardians of the fallen prophet, till this extraordinary intelligence was carried into the city, which rendered the miracle the more illustrious, and plainly showed that this event did not happen by chance. This concatenation of miracles marked the death of the man of God as a Divine rebuke for his disobedience in eating bread at idolatrous Bethel; and here we see, as in various other cases, that "often judgment begins at the house of God." The true prophet, for suffering himself to be seduced by the old prophet, and for receiving that as a revelation from God which was opposed to the revelation which he himself had received, and which was confirmed by so many miracles, is slain by a lion, and his body deprived of the burial of his fathers; while the wicked king and the fallen prophet are both permitted to live. 1 K 17:4, 6. 1 KINGS 14

Jeroboam sends his wife, disguised, to Ahijah, the prophet, to inquire concerning his son Abijah, who was sick, 1-4. Ahijah, forwarned by God, denounces to her the destruction of Jeroboam's family, the death of her son, and the rejection of Israel, 5-16. Abijah dies and is buried, 17, 18. Jeroboam dies and is succeeded by Nadab, 19, 20. Rehoboam reigns over Judah; and they provoke the Lord by their wickedness, 21-24. Shishak carries away much treasure, and the golden shields, from Jerusalem, 25, 26. Rehoboam makes brazen shields in their stead, 27, 28. His acts, and wars with Jeroboam, 29, 30.

This was certainly not a present that proclaimed royalty; but it does not appear to have been, in the estimation of the East, a present only fit for a country woman to have made, as Bp. Dr. Kennicott observes that the name of this king of Judah is now expressed three ways; here, and in four other places, it is Abijam; in two others (2 Ch 13:20, 21) it is Abijahu; but in eleven others it is Abijah or Abiah, as it is expressed by St. Matthew, (ch. 1:7) "Abia;" and this is the reading of thirteen of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS., and of thirteen respectable editions of the Hebrew Bible. The Syriac is the same. The Septuagint in the London Polyglott has Abiou, "Abihu;" but in the Complutensian and Antwerp Polyglotts it has Abia, "Abiah:" and in the Editio Princeps of the Vulgate, some MSS. and the text in these two Polyglotts, instead of Abiam, have Abia.

1 KINGS 15

Baasha, he makes a league with Benhadad, king of Syria; compels Baasha to desist from building Ramah; and with the materials builds Geba and Mizpah, 16-22. He dies, and is succeeded by Jehoshaphat, 23, 24. Nadab's wicked reign over Israel, 25, 26. Baasha slays him, seizes the kingdom, and executes Ahijah's prophecy against Jeroboam's family, 27-32. That is, there was a constant spirit of hostility kept up between the two kingdoms, and no doubt frequent skirmishing between the bordering parties; but there was no open war till Baasha king of Israel began to build Ramah, which was, according to 2 Ch 15:19. 16:1, in the thirty-sixth year of Asa; but according to 1 K 16:8-10, his son was killed by Zimri in the twenty-sixth year of Asa, and consequently he could not make war upon him in the thirty-sixth year of his reign. Chronologers endeavor to reconcile this, by saying that the years should be reckoned, not from the beginning of Asa's reign, but from the separation of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah. We must either adopt this mode of solution, or admit that there is a mistake in some of the numbers, probably in the parallel places in Chronicles, but which we have no direct means of correcting. 1 KINGS 16

Jehu the prophet predicts the ruin of Baasha's family, 1-4. Baasha dies, and is succeeded by his son Elah, 5-7. Zimri slays Elah, succeeds him, and fulfils Jehu's prophecy, 8-14. Omri usurps the kingdom, and besieges Zimri in Tirzah, who burns himself in the palace, 15-20. Tibni opposes Omri, who prevails against him, 21, 22. Omri builds Samaria, reigns very wickedly, dies, and is succeeded by Ahab, 23-28. Ahab's excessive wickedness and idolatry, as instigated by his wife Jezebel, 29-33. Joshua's curse on him that should rebuild Jericho, is fulfilled on Hiel, 34.

8. A.M. 3075. B.C. 929. In the twenty and sixth year. ↗171T9. Synecdoche of the Part B656. In chronology a part of a time or period is sometimes put for the whole of such period: a part of a year is accounted a whole year. Baasha began to reign in the third year of Asa, and reigned 24 years; yet he died and was succeeded by Elah in the 26th year of Asa; and, in like manner, Elah, who began to reign in the 26th year of Asa, and was killed in the 27th, is said to have reigned two years. Thus it is evident that a part of a year is calculated as a whole year. In the Chinese annals, the whole year in which a king dies is ascribed to his reign, the years of the succeeding king being reckoned only from the beginning of the following year (Jackson's Chr. Ant. Vol. II. p. 443). 1 K 15:25. Compare the notes on 1 S 30:12n and Jsh 5:11n, where a part of a day is counted as a whole day. 1 KINGS 17

Elijah foretells to Ahab a long and excessive drought; and is sent by God to the brook Cherith, and fed by ravens, 1-7. He is afterwards sent to Zarephath, and sustained by a widow woman, whose barrel of meal and cruse of oil do not fail, 8-16. Her son dies, but is restored to life in answer to Elijah's prayer, whom she fully believes to be sent by God, 17-24.

Many learned men have raised doubts on those parts of the Inspired Word, which may, by the perverseness of their argument and the ingenuity of their surmises, be made to appear inconsistent with fact. In this case, they are not satisfied with being expressly told by God that the ravens supplied Elijah with food, while the brook gave him drink—but apparently to mystify a manifest miracle, they suggest whether these ravens might not be merchantmen, or the inhabitants of a neighboring town. Let any unprejudiced reader and lover of the Bible take the whole history of Elijah, and he will find that his life was almost a daily illustration of the power of God in his miraculous interpositions. Instance the supply of provision in the unwasting barrel of meal and cruse of oil, after the prophet had removed to Zarephath: the power communicated to him to raise the widow's son from death: the wonderful interposition of the Lord to prove the folly of Baal's worshippers, in sending down fire from heaven to consume Elijah's sacrifice and lick up the water, although the sacrifice had been saturated therewith, and the altar surrounded by a deep trench to prevent its running away. The prayer for rain is another instance; the sojourn in Horeb forty days and forty nights, after having eaten of the cake; the destruction of Ahaziah's messengers twice; the smiting of the waters at Jordan; the fall of the mantle on Elisha; and finally, in the closing scene of life, he was taken to glory without tasting the pains of death—the sting was taken away.

Some have thought that the prophet Elijah, instead of being fed by ravens, was supplied by merchants, or Arabians, or the inhabitants of the city Arbo. But, (1) orevim is never used singly to denote merchants; nor would God have said, generally, that he had commanded the merchants, but would have specified what merchants he had commanded. (2) The word is not read orevim but arevim when it signifies Arabs; nor is it likely that they should be found in that district. (3) The inhabitants of Arbo, or Orbo, if any city of that name then existed, must have been called, according to the genius of the Hebrew language, arboyim or arbonim, not orevim. (4) The solemn declaration of good Obadiah, that Ahab took an oath of every people, that he was not concealed among them, shows that his situation required the utmost privacy, even to solitude, and that it was impossible for him to remain concealed among the inhabitants of the country. (5) When the brook was dried up, the prophet was obliged to quit his asylum, which he needed not to have done had a people been his suppliers, as they could have brought him water as well as food. (6) Hence we may justly conclude, that these orevim were true ravens, as it is rendered in nearly every version. bread and flesh. ✓174, Ge +18:27. he drank. Ps 110:7.

1 KINGS 18

Elijah is sent to meet Ahab, 1, 2. Ahab and pious Obadiah go different ways, to search the land for pasture, 3-6. Elijah meets Obadiah and sends him to call Ahab, 7-16. Ahab, at Elijah's word, convenes Israel, with the prophets of Baal, at Carmel, 17-20. Elijah proposes to decide, whether JEHOVAH or Baal be God, by proving which would answer by fire, 21-24. Baal's prophets invoke him in vain, 25-29. Elijah prepares a sacrifice, causes much water to be poured upon it, and calls on JEHOVAH, who answers by fire consuming the altar with the sacrifice; the people are convinced that JEHOVAH is God; and at Elijah's word they slay Baal's prophets, 30-40. Elijah gives Ahab notice of abundant rain, which he obtains by prayer; and then he runs before Ahab's chariot to Jezreel, 41-46.

This form of expression, both in Hebrew and Latin, means "after the third year," i.e. some time between the third and fourth year. Hence this statement agrees with that of our Lord (Lk 4:25) and St. James (Ja 5:17), who say that the drought lasted three years and six months; and the fact itself is attested to by Menander, who, as cited by Josephus, says it happened in the time of Ithobalus, the father of Jezebel. 1 K 17:1, 7, 15. It is described as a flattened cone, about 2000 feet (some say 1500) in height, very rocky, its sides steep and rugged, and the soil neither deep nor rich. Captain Mangles says it is now quite barren, though at the northeastern foot of it there are some pretty olive grounds. ver. 42, 43. Jsh 19:26. 1 S 15:12. 2 K 2:25. Je 46:18. "Every morning, about nine, a small cloud, not above four feet broad, appears in the east, whirling violently round, as if upon an axis; but arrived near the zenith, it first abates its motion, then loses its form, and extends itself greatly, and seems to call up vapors from all opposite quarters. 1 KINGS 19

Ahab shows Jezebel, that Elijah had slain Baal's prophets, and she sends to Elijah, threatening to take away his life, 1, 2. He flees to the wilderness; is weary of living; but being twice strengthened with food brought by an angel, he fasts forty days, and arrives at Horeb, 3-8. There God meets him, preceded by a strong wind, an earthquake, and fire; and, speaking to him in a still small voice, commissions him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha, 9-17. Elijah is informed that seven thousand worshippers of JEHOVAH still remain in Israel, 18. Elijah casts his mantle on Elisha, who takes leave of his friends, and follows him, 19-21.

1 KINGS 20

Ben-hadad king of Syria, not satisfied with Ahab's submission, leads a powerful army against Samaria, and wars against it, 1-12. Ahab, directed by a prophet, gains a complete victory over him, 13-21. A prophet warns Ahab to prepare for another assault, 22. The Syrians come again, the next year, with very great preparations; and are opposed by a very small company, 23-27. A prophet assures Ahab of victory, because the Syrians thought JEHOVAH the God of the hills, but not of the valleys, 28. The Syrians are smitten with immense slaughter, and Ben-hadad flees and hides himself, 29, 30. He submissively sues to Ahab, who makes a league with him, 31-34. A prophet, by a parable, leads Ahab to condemn himself, and then denounces the judgment of God against him for his unseasonable lenity, 35-43.

The Syrians, the besiegers, had their directions from a drunken king, who gave orders over his cups while he was drinking at noon. Drunkenness is a sin which is most detestable in all, but more so in a king than in a private individual, inasmuch as the greater weight a man's situation carries, whether from accumulated riches, family connections, hereditary authority, or invested command, so is the influence which his vices must have on those around him. Perhaps it may be said, from past experience, that drunkenness, which is a most heinous sin in the sight of God, may be charged on those who indulge only now and then in that which may eventually lead them into drunkenness; for they shut their eyes against the most palpable facts, and rather than give up the paltry gratification of a debauch, involve thousands by their example to positive harm. Benhadad's drunkenness was the forerunner of his fall. Belshazzar also, we read, drank wine with his princes, his wives, and his concubines, and praised the gods of gold, silver, brass, iron, wood, and stone: and in the same hour came forth the finger of a man's hand and wrote his doom on the plaster of the wall. Those who fancy themselves perfectly secure, and above the possibility of falling, are commonly nearest their destruction: there is always an Ahab ready to take advantage of and improve the self-imposed imbecility.

They were doubtless seized with a supernatural fear, which the strongest mind could not reason down, nor the firmest heart resist. This fear the Greeks and other heathen nations called a panic; because Pan, one of their gods, was believed to be the author of it. Bacchus, in his Indian expedition, led his army into some defiles, where he was surrounded by his enemies, and reduced to the last extremity. By the advice of Pan, his lieutenant general, he made his army give a sudden shout, which struck the enemy with so great astonishment and terror, that they fled with the utmost precipitation. Hence it was ever afterwards called a panic, and supposed to come directly from heaven. It is thus expressed by Pindar: "When men are struck with divine terrors, even the children of the gods betake themselves to flight." escaped. 1 S 30:16, 17. 2 K 19:36.

One of the conditions of this covenant, we learn, was, that Ahab should have "streets (chutzoth) in Damascus;" a proposal better relished by Ahab than understood by the generality of commentators. This, however, is well illustrated by Mr. Harmer (Observations, ch. ix. Ob. 77) from William of Tyre (Gesta Dei, p. 791, 830, 831), the great historian of the Crusades; from whom it appears that it was customary to give those nations which were engaged in them, churches, streets, and great jurisdiction therein, in those places which they assisted to conquer. The Genoese and Venetians had each a street in Acon, or Acre, in which they had their own jurisdiction, with liberty to have an oven, mill, baths, weights and measures, etc. So Knolles, in his history of the Turks, relates, that in the treaty of peace granted by Bajazet, the Turkish emperor, to Emanuel, the Greek emperor, it was stipulated, that the latter should grant free liberty to the Turks to dwell together, in one street of Constantinople, with the free exercise of their own religion, laws, etc. ver. 42. 1 K 22:31. 2 Ch 18:30. 1 KINGS 21

Ahab covets Naboth's vineyard, and is greatly displeased because Naboth refuses to part with it, 1-4. Jezebel discovering this, by letters, in Ahab's name, to the elders of Jezreel, causes Naboth to be stoned, as a blasphemer, 5-14. She excites Ahab to take possession of his vineyard, 15, 16. Elijah is sent to meet Ahab, and to denounce the judgment of God against him, and his family, and Jezebel, 17-24. Ahab's enormous wickedness, 25, 26. He externally humbles himself before God, and the judgments on his family are deferred to his son's days, 27-29.

It is no unusual thing for a word to have opposite senses. However, this is one of the places affected by the emendations of the Sopherim (Ge +18:22), where the word gadaph meaning "to blaspheme" was replaced by berech, "to bless," in order to avoid having to pronounce the word "blaspheme" in connection with God. The same substitution was made at 2 S 12:14; 1 K 21:13; Jb 1:5, 11; 2:5, 9. Ps 10:3; and commentators, ignorant of the real fact of the emendations, have labored to prove that berech means both "to bless" and "to curse," which is not the case (See Bullinger's Figures of Speech Used in the Bible, p. 1021). Moab rebels against Israel, 1. Ahaziah, being sick, sends to inquire of Baal-zebub; and Elijah is sent by an angel to order the messengers to inform him, in the name of Jehovah, that he should surely die, 2-4. Ahaziah sends to apprehend Elijah, who twice calls down fire to consume those who came against him, 5-12. The captain of the third company sues for mercy; and Elijah, encouraged by an angel, goes to Ahaziah, and assures him that he would die at that time, 13-16. Ahaziah dies, and is succeeded by Jehoram, 17, 18.

Of the same kind, probably, was the lattice, or net, as the term shevacha seems to import, through which Ahaziah fell into the court. This incident proves the necessity of the law for the formation of battlements for the roof (Dt 22:8), which God graciously dictated from Sinai, which furnishes a beautiful example of his paternal care and goodness; for the terrace was a place where many offices of the family were performed, and business frequently transacted. 2 KINGS 2

Elijah when about to be translated, cannot induce Elisha not to attend him in his progress, 1-7. With his mantle he divides Jordan, and they pass over, 8. Elijah allows conditionally of Elisha's request of a double measure of the Spirit, and is taken to heaven in a fiery chariot, 9-11. Elisha takes up Elijah's mantle; smites and divides Jordan with it, and passes over; and is received as Elijah's successor, 12-15. The sons of the prophets in vain seek for Elijah, 16-18. Elisha heals with salt the bad waters of Jericho, 19-22. Bears destroy the children that mock him, 23-25.

Jehoram reigns wickedly, 1-3. Mesha king of Moab revolts, 4, 5. Jehoram, Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, march against him; and being greatly distressed for lack of water, they apply to Elisha, who sharply reproves Jehoram, but shows respect to Jehoshaphat, 6-14. He promises them water, and victory, 15-19. Plenty of water is sent; the Moabites are deceived by the appearance, and are entirely defeated, 20-24. The allied kings destroy the cities, spoil the country, and besiege Kir-haraseth, 25. The king of Moab, sacrificing his eldest son, causes them to raise the siege, 26, 27.

I. p. 223), speaking of a Persian supper, says, "Supper being now brought in, a servant presented a basin of water, and a napkin hung over his shoulders; he went to every one in the company, and poured water on their hands to wash." This text has an important bearing upon the mode of washing, for it shows that washing was accomplished by pouring water on the hands, not placing the hands into the water, as is our custom. Water was poured upon the hands by a servant, and the waste water was received by a basin, over which the hands were held. See related notes (Ex 30:19n. Is 44:3n. Lk 7:44n). Ge 18:4. This was frequent among the Phoenicians, Greeks, Romans, Scythians, Gauls, Africans, and others; and was the natural fruit of a religious system, which had for the objects of its worship cruel and merciless divinities. The king of Moab, in this case, sacrificed his son to obtain the favor of Chemosh, his god, who, being a devil, delighted in blood and murder, and the destruction of mankind. The dearer anything was to them, the more acceptable those idolaters thought the sacrifice, and therefore burnt their children in the fire to their honor. Ge 22:2, 13. Dt 12:31. Jg 11:31, 39. 2 KINGS 4

At Elisha's word the oil of a poor prophet's widow is increased, to enable her to pay her debt, 1-7. He is hospitably entertained by a woman of Shunem, who is rewarded by having a son in her old age, 8-17. The child dies, but is restored to life in answer to Elisha's prayer, 18-37. Elisha heals the pottage made with poisonous herbs, 38-41; and feeds a hundred men with twenty small barley loaves, 42-44.

Children, according to the Hebrew laws, were considered the property of their parents, who had a right to dispose of them for the payment of their debts. The Romans, Athenians, and Asiatics in general, had the same authority over their children: they sold them in time of poverty; and their creditors seized them as they would sheep or oxen, or household goods. The same laws still exist among the Georgians (Tavernier, l. III. c.9).

It ranks among vegetable poisons, as all intense bitters do; but, judiciously employed, it is of considerable use in medicine. It is said that the fruit, when ripe, is so full of wind that it bursts, and throws its liquor and seeds to a great distance: and if touched, before it breaks of itself, it flies open with an explosion, and discharges its fetid contents in the face of him who touched it (See Celsius, Hierobot. P. 2 KINGS 5

Naaman, captain of the host of Syria, is a leper, 1. By the report of a captive maid of Israel, concerning the prophet, he comes to the king of Israel at Samaria to be healed, 2-7. Elisha sends for him; Naaman goes to him, and is ordered to wash seven times in Jordan: he is angry; but, persuaded by his servants, he complies and is cleansed, 8-14. He acknowledges the true God; offers presents to Elisha, who refuses them; and is sent away in peace, resolving to worship the LORD alone, 15-19. Gehazi, by a lie, obtains presents from Naaman, and is punished by leprosy, entailed also on his descendants, 20-27.

Hibbard notes that the Hebrew rahats is rendered with some latitude into several Greek terms: louo, which denotes the washing of the body; nipto, used to denote washing of hands or feet; pluno, which denotes the washing of clothes; and once by cheo, which denotes "to flow, to pour forth, to shed." Furthermore, rahats "is never used as a synonym of bathe. It properly denotes wash. The washing, it is true, might be performed by bathing; but then it might be performed equally well without it, and where bathing might have been practiced it was not itself sufficient. The force of the word implies some effort made to cleanse, as by rubbing with the hand. And, as President Beecher has well said, bathing fulfilled the command, not because it was a bathing, but solely because it was a washing. Besides, in many cases, as in the washing of hands, the water was poured. At other times it was simply taken out of the vase or vessel by one hand, and applied to the body. This was washing, and this mode was included in the baptisms (baptismon) of He 9:10" (Christian Baptism, pp. 210-213). 2 K √3:11n. seven times. Le *14:7, 16, 51. *16:14, 19. Nu *19:4, 19. The Hebrew tabal is rendered by baptidzo by the Septuagint in this place only. "This passage contains the only instance of the use of the word baptidzo (as a rendering of tabal) in the canonical books of the Old Testament. This passage is of peculiar importance as the oldest Scriptural use of the word baptidzo" (Thomas Gallaher, Baptism, p. 70). Naaman's leprosy was local, ver. 11. Had his leprosy been over all his body, he would have been clean (Le 13:12, 13). The prophet Elisha commanded Naaman to do what the law of God required for the cleansing of leprosy, and that law required that the leper be sprinkled seven times (Le 14:7). The law did not require anything to be done seven times except the sprinkling; the "shaving, and washing his flesh with water," was done but once. Thus, the translators of the Septuagint chose to render tabal here alone by baptidzo, for in their mind the word baptidzo referred to ceremonial cleansing, which was accomplished by sprinkling (Nu 19:13n). Fairfield notes that the Hebrew word tabal which occurs here is used sixteen times in the Hebrew Scriptures. Fourteen times it is translated into Greek by the Septuagint translators by bapto, once by moluno (Ge 37:31, to defile or stain), once by baptidzo (Letters on Baptism, p. 54). The action "dipped" (Heb. tabal) in this verse answers to what Elisha commanded in the 10th verse by the use of the Hebrew rahats (Greek louo), "Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thou shalt be clean." "There is no necessity of supposing that Naaman plunged into the river, but, rather, made a sevenfold application of the water to his person" (Thomas O. Summers, Baptism, p. 224). seven times. 2 KINGS 6

The sons of the prophet prepare to enlarge their dwelling, and Elisha causes iron to swim, 1-7. He discloses to Jehoram the councils of the Syrian king, who sends troops to apprehend him, 8-14. Elisha's servant is terrified; but is encouraged by seeing horses and chariots of fire round his master, 15-17. The Syrians, at Elisha's prayer, are partially blinded; and he conducts them into Samaria, where they regain their sight, and by the prophet's proposal are entertained, and dismissed in peace, 18-23. Ben-hadad besieges Samaria, and reduces it to extreme famine, 24, 25. Women contest about eating their own children; and appeal to the king, who in a rage resolves to kill Elisha, 26-33.

2 KINGS 7

Elisha predicts great plenty in Samaria, and the death of an unbelieving lord, 1, 2. Four lepers venture into the Syrian camp, and bring word that it is entirely deserted, a terror from God having driven away the army, 3-11. Jehoram fears a stratagem, and sends messengers to examine, and finds the report true, 12-15. The people spoil the Syrian camp; the predicted plenty takes place; and the unbelieving lord, having charge of the gate, is trodden to death, 16-20.

So Mr. Morier (Journey through Persia, p. 189) observes: "In our rides we usually went out of the town at the Derwazeh Shah Abdul Azeem, or the gate leading to the village of Shah Abdul Azeem, where a market was held every morning, particularly of horses, mules, asses, and camels. At about sunrise, the owners of the animals assemble and exhibit them for sale. But besides, here were

This was a very natural conclusion; and in the History of the revolt of Ali Bey, we have an account of a stratagem very similar to that supposed to have been practiced by the Syrians. The pasha of Damascus having approached the sea of Tiberias, found sheik Daher encamped there; but the sheik, deferring the engagement till the next morning, during the night divided his army into three parts, and left the camp with great fires blazing, all sorts of provisions, and a large quantity of spiritous liquors. In the middle of the night the pasha, thinking to surprise the sheik, marched in silence to the camp, which, to his astonishment, he found entirely abandoned; and imagining the sheik had fled with so much precipitation that he could not carry off his baggage and stores, he stopped in the camp to refresh his soldiers. They soon fell to plunder, and drunk so freely of the liquors, that, overcome with the fatigue of the day's march, and the fumes of the spirits, they ere long sunk into profound repose. At that time, two sheiks, who were watching the enemy, came silently into the camp, and being rejoined by Daher, they all rushed into the camp, and fell upon the sleeping foe, 8000 of whom they butchered on the spot; and the pasha, with the remainder, escaped with much difficulty to Damascus, leaving all their baggage in the hands of the victorious Daher. 2 K 6:25-29. hide themselves. The Shunammite, by Elisha's advice, to avoid a famine of seven years, goes to sojourn in Philistia, 1, 2. On her return, she applies to the king, who is conversing with Gehazi on Elisha's miracles; and he restores her land, 3-6. Elisha goes to Damascus: Hazael is sent by Ben-hadad to inquire of him concerning his sickness: he predicts Hazael's cruelty to Israel, as destined to be king of Syria, 7-13. Hazael murders Ben-hadad and succeeds him, 14, 15. Jehoram reigns wickedly in Judah, 16-19. Edom and Libnah revolt, 20-22. Jehoram is succeeded by Ahaziah, who reigns wickedly, 23-27. He assists the king of Israel against Syria, and when wounded visits him at Jezreel, 28, 29.

As it appears not likely that the king would hold conversation with a leprous man; or, that, knowing Gehazi had been dismissed with the highest disgrace from the prophet's service, he would talk with him concerning his late master; some have supposed that this happened before the cleansing of Naaman. But it agrees better with the chronology to consider it as having taken place after that event; the king, probably, having an insatiable curiosity to know the private history of a man who had done such astonishing things. As to the circumstance of Gehazi's disease, he might overlook that, and converse with him, keeping a reasonable distance, as nothing but actual contact could defile. Gehazi. 2 K 5:20-27. 7:3, 10. Tell. Mt 2:8. 2 KINGS 9

A young prophet, by Elisha's orders, goes to Ramoth-gilead; anoints Jehu as king over Israel, and directs him to extirpate Ahab's family, 1-10. Jehu acquaints the captains, is proclaimed king, and marches in haste to Jezreel against Joram, 11-16. Joram sends messengers to Jehu, who detains them, 17-20. He and Ahaziah meet Jehu: who kills Joram, and casts him into the field of Naboth, 21-26. Ahaziah is slain at Gur and buried at Jerusalem, 27-29. Jezebel, by Jehu's orders, is thrown out of the window, and trampled under foot, 30-33. She is eaten by dogs, as Elijah had predicted, 34-37.

13. and took every. The spreading of garments in the street, before persons to whom it was intended to show particular honor, was an ancient and very general custom; the garments in these cases being used for carpets. In the Agamemnon of Aeschylus, the hypocritical Clytemnestra commands the maids to spread carpets before her returning husband, that on his descending from his chariot he may place his foot on "a purple-covered path." We also find this custom among the Romans. Plutarch relates, that when Cato of Utica left the Macedonian army, where he had become legionary tribune, the soldiers spread their clothes in the way. Mt 21:7, 8. Mk 11:7, 8. on the top. The ancient fortified cities were generally strengthened with a citadel (Jg 9:46, 51), commonly built on an eminence, to which they ascended by a flight of stairs (Ne 3:15). It is extremely probable, therefore, that Ramoth-gilead, being a frontier town of Israel and Syria, had a tower of this nature; and that Jehu was proclaimed king on the top of the stairs by which they ascended the hill on which the tower stood, i.e. in the area before the door of the tower, and consequently the most public place in the city. lit. 2 KINGS 10

Jehu, by letters to the elders, causes Ahab's seventy sons to be slain at Samaria, and their heads brought to Jezreel, 1-7. He shows this to be a fulfilment of Elijah's prophecy, and destroys all Ahab's kindred in Jezreel, 8-11. In his way to Samaria he slays forty-two of Ahaziah's brethren, 12-14. Attended by Jehonadab, he slays all that remained to Ahab in Samaria, 15-17. He assembles all the worshippers of Baal by stratagem; puts them to death, and breaks down Baal's images and temple, 18-28. He follows the sins of Jeroboam; yet the kingdom to the fourth generation is promised him, for destroying the house of Ahab, 29-31. Hazael smites Israel, 32, 33. Jehu dies, and Jehoahaz succeeds him, 34-36.

Jehu asked for the hand of Jehonadab not merely for the purpose of assisting him into the chariot, but that he might give him an assurance that he would assist him in the prosecution of his desires; for "giving the hand" is considered as a pledge of friendship and fidelity, or a form of entering into a contract, among all nations. Mr. Bruce relates (Travels, vol. I. p. 148), that when he entreated the protection of a sheikh, the great people who were assembled came, "and after joining hands, repeated a kind of prayer, of about two minutes long; by which they declared themselves and their children accursed, if ever they lifted their hands against me in the tell (or field), in the desert, or on the river; or, in case that I, or mine, should fly to them for refuge, if they did not protect us at the risk of their lives, their families, and their fortunes, or, as they emphatically expressed it, to the death of the last male child among them." Another striking instance occurs in Ockley's History of the Saracens (vol. i. p. 36). Telha, just before he died, asked one of Ali's men if he belonged to the emperor of the faithful; and being informed that he did, "Give me then," said he, "your hand, that I may put mine in it, and by this action renew the oath of fidelity which I have already made to Ali." seventh year, having taken proper measures, anoints and crowns him, 4-12. Athaliah, pressing into the temple, is seized and slain, 13-16. 2 KINGS 12

Jehoash reigns well so long as Jehoiada lives, 1-3. He gives orders that the temple should be repaired; yet the priests neglect the service; but he devises a plan for defraying the expense, and completes the work, 4-16. He gives the consecrated treasures to Hazael, to divert him from assaulting Jerusalem, 17, 18. He is slain by his servants, and succeeded by his son Amaziah, 19-21.

These are what are called in the East purses; each of which, as Maillet informs us, contains money to the amount of 1500 livres, or about 63 l of our money. The money thus collected for the reparation of the temple, seems, in like manner, to have been reckoned in bags of equal value to each other; as we can scarcely imagine the placing it in bags would otherwise have been mentioned. The value of a Jewish purse is unknown; but the bags mentioned in 2 K 5:23, amounted to a talent. and told. Ge 13:16.

This was a symbolical action, indicative of the deliverance of Israel from Syria. It was an ancient custom to shoot an arrow or cast a spear into a country before the commencement of hostilities. Virgil (Aen. l. ix. v.51) represents Turnus as giving the signal of attack by throwing a spear; upon which Servius shows that it was a custom to proclaim war in this way. The pater patratus, or chief of the Feciales, a sort of herald, went to the confines of the enemy's country; and, after some solemnities, said with a loud voice, "I wage war with you, for such and such reasons," and then threw a spear. 2 KINGS 14

Amaziah reigns well, yet not like David, 1-4. He justly punishes his father's murderers, 5, 6. He gains a victory over Edom, 7. He rashly challenges Jehoash king of Israel, and, obstinately persisting, is vanquished and taken prisoner by him; the wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the treasures of the temple spoiled, 8-14. Jehoash dies, and is succeeded by Jeroboam, 15, 16. Amaziah is slain by conspirators, 17-20. His son Azariah is made king, and builds Elath, 21, 22. Jeroboam's wicked reign, 23, 24. He restores the coast of Israel, 25-27. He dies and is succeeded by his son Zachariah, 28, 29.

Is 16:1h. Selah is generally supposed to be the same as Petra, which in Greek signifies a rock, the celebrated capital of Arabia Petraea. Strabo (l. xvi.) places it three or four days' journey from Jericho, and five days' journey from the forest of palm trees on the Red sea. Pliny (l. vi. c. 28) places it 600 miles from Gaza, and 125 from the Persian gulf; but Cellarius and Reland very justly consider that the numbers have been changed, and that we ought to read 125 miles from Gaza, and 600 from the Persian gulf. Eusebius places Beerothbene-jaakan 30 miles west from Petra, and Elath ten miles east; and Burckhardt (Travels in Syria, etc., pp. 429-433) discovered the ruins of this ancient city in a valley called Wady Mousa. Joktheel. Jsh 15:38. unto this day. 2 K 2:22. 8:22n. 16:6. There is a vast deal of insolent dignity in this remonstrance of Jehoash; but it has nothing conciliatory; no proposal of making amends for the injury his army had done to the unoffending inhabitants of Judah (2 Ch 25:10-13). The comparatively useless thorn, which may by chance lacerate the incautious passenger, is made the emblem of the house of Judah and David, while the house of Jehu is represented by the stately cedar.

Azariah's good reign, 1-4. He is smitten with leprosy, and Jotham his son governs for him, and succeeds him, 5-7. Zachariah, the last of Jehu's generation, reigns ill, and is slain by Shallum; and the fulfillment of the word of God to Jehu is noticed, 8-12. After one month, Shallum is slain, and succeeded by Menaham; who treats his opposers with savage cruelty; reigns wickedly; becomes tributary to Pul, king of Assyria; dies, and is succeeded by his son Pekahiah, 13-22. Pekahaiah reigns ill, and is slain and succeeded by Pekah, 23-26. Pekah imitates the sins of his predecessor; Tiglath-pileser of Assyria, carries captive part of Israel; and Hoshea kills and succeeds Pekah, 27-31. Jotham reigns well in Judah, 32-35. He dies, and is succeeded by his son Ahaz, 36-38.

Our oldest Hebrew MS. relieves us here, by reading truly, in verses 1, 6, 7, Uzziah, where the printed text is differently corrupted. This reading is called true, (1) Because it is supported by the Syriac and Arabic versions in these three verses. (2) Because the printed text itself has it so in ver. 32 and 34 of this very chapter. (3) Because it is so expressed in the parallel place in Chronicles; and (4) because it is not "Adzarias," Azarias, but "Odzias," Ozias (Uzziah) in St. Matthew's genealogy. they not written. 2 KINGS 16

Ahaz reigns very wickedly, 1-4. Rezin and Pekah war against him; and Rezin takes Elath, 5, 6. Ahaz hires Tiglath-pileser against them, who takes Damascus and slays Rezin, 7-9. Ahaz sends a pattern of an altar from Damascus; and Urijah, the high priest, makes one like it for burnt offerings; reserving the brazen altar for Ahaz to inquire by, 10-16. Ahaz robs and defaces the temple for the king of Assyria, 17, 18. He dies, and is succeeded by his son Hezekiah, 19, 20.

Two years after this, that is, the fourth of Ahaz and the 20th of Jotham, Hosea made himself master of a part of the kingdom, according to 2 K 15:30. The new inhabitants of the land imitated the idolatrous Israelites, by associating their idols with Jehovah, as the objects of worship. The remainder, however, of the verses seem to relate to the Israelites after they were carried captive. They still persevered in idolatry and disobedience; and not being purified, were left to be consumed in the furnace. It is said that the Israelites "did not fear the Lord," yet the heathens, who followed their example, are said "to have feared the Lord." The Israelites did not so much as fear the wrath of Almighty God; but, on the other hand, the poor pagans feared the power of his wrath, and to avert it paid some ignorant worship, according to the wretched instructions given them. As this was an external acknowledgment of his power and Godhead, and a homage paid to him, he was pleased in consequence to withdraw his judgments from them (Scott).

2 KINGS 18

Hezekiah reigns well, abolishes idolatry, and prospers, 1-8. In his time Samaria is taken, and Israel carried captive, 9-12. Sennacherib invades Judah, and Hezekiah pays him tribute, 13-16. Rabshakeh, sent by Sennacherib, in an insulting and blasphemous speech, aims to induce the people to revolt, 17-35. Hezekiah's servants hold their peace, and rend their clothes, 36, 37.

This is not at all impossible: and there are well-attested facts of men having children at as early a period, especially in eastern countries. A.M. 3278-3306. 2 KINGS 20

Hezekiah, when sick, is warned by Isaiah to prepare for death, 1; but praying, he receives the promise of fifteen years added to his life, and of deliverance from the Assyrians, 2-7. In confirmation, the shadow on Ahaz's dial goes back ten degrees, 8-11. The king of Babylon sends to congratulate Hezekiah, who shows the ambassadors all his treasures, 12, 13. Isaiah reproves him for this, and foretells the Babylonish captivity, 14-19. Hezekiah dies, and is succeeded by Manasseh, 20, 21.

The word shechin, from the Arabic sachana, to be hot, signifies an inflammatory tumor, or burning boil; and some think that Hezekiah's malady was a pleurisy; others, that it was the plague; and others, the elephantiasis, a species of leprosy, as one of the Hexapla versions renders in Job 2:7. A poultice of figs might be very proper to maturate a boil, or dismiss any obstinate inflammatory swelling, and the propriety of such an application is expressly mentioned by Pliny (l. xxii. c.25. l. xxiii. c.7), but we cannot discuss its propriety in this case, unless we were certain of the nature of the malady. It was, however, the natural means which God chose to bless for his recovery, as was the clay which Christ moistened to anoint the eyes of the blind man (Jn 9:6); for in both cases, without Divine interposition the cure would not have been effected.

What these degrees were, or how dials were then constructed, is wholly uncertain. It is probable that this miracle was effected by refraction, rather than by arresting the motion of the earth. There has been much speculation regarding this miracle. Many tie it to the long day of Joshua (Jsh 10:13), where the sun is said to have not gone down for "about a whole day;" the ten degrees here are then taken to be equivalent to fifteen minutes, and the two miracles account for a so-called "missing day" in alleged astronomical calculations. But the documentation for the apparently apocryphal story is shaky, and defies scholarly efforts to track it down. So while this speculation about the miracle is interesting, it is not true, and like the speculation about Charles Darwin repenting of his belief in evolution and turning to Christ for salvation upon his death bed, is apocryphal, and like similar speculation in prophetic sensationalism, does more harm than good to the cause of truth. That God performed the miracle is not questioned; how the miracle was effected is unrevealed.

The prophets were sent in the first place to teach them the knowledge of God, to remind them of their duty, and direct them in it: if they succeeded not in that, their next work was to reprove them for their sins, and to set them in view before them, that they might repent and reform, and return to their duty: if in this they prevailed not, their next work was to foretell the judgments of God, that the terror of them might awaken to repentance those who would not be made sensible of the obligations of his love; or else that the execution of them, in their season, might be a demonstration of the divine mission of the prophets who foretold them. They were made judges to those who would not hear and receive them as teachers (Henry).

Josiah reigns well, 1, 2. He provides for the repairs of the temple, 3-7. Hilkiah finds the book of the law, which is read to the king; who is alarmed by God's threatenings against backsliders, and sends to inquire of God by Huldah the prophetess, 8-14. She foretells the destruction of Jerusalem, but speaks peace to Josiah, 15-20.

8. I have found. This certainly was a genuine copy of the divine law, and probably the autograph of Moses, as it is said, in the parallel place of Chronicles (2 Ch *34:14mg), to be the book of the law of the Lord by Moses. It is not probable that this was the only copy of the law in the land, or that Josiah had never before seen the book of Moses; but the fact seems to be, that this was the original of the covenant renewed by Moses in the plains of Moab, and now being unexpectedly found, its antiquity, the occasion of its being made, the present circumstances of the people, the imperfect state in which the reformation was as yet, after all that had been done, would all concur to produce the effect here mentioned on the mind of the pious Josiah. Scott further suggests that it is highly probable, that copies of the law were at that time very scarce, through the idolatry of the former reigns, and the lamentable ungodliness of the people. It might also be reasonably conjectured, that the priests had made abstracts from it, of the outlines of their worship, without specifying particulars, or inserting the solemn sanctions annexed to each of them. This would spare them the trouble of transcribing, or studying, or reading to the people, the whole book; and, as these abstracts would come into common use, few people would look any further. But had not a universal traditional recollection of the law, and in general of its contents, prevailed in the nation; how could the book, when found, have obtained proper and implicit credit as the word of God by Moses? In the dark ages this was precisely the case: the liturgies and rituals contained a few selected portions of Scripture; and not only were the people kept in the dark as to the entire contents of the Bible, but few even of the priests had ever read it through, and numbers of these had never seen a complete copy of it. The same naturally becomes the case still, (notwithstanding the multiplication of copies of the Bible by the art of printing, and its public allowance in the vulgar tongue, and the commendable pains by pious persons to disperse them) whenever any set of men become strenuous for one part of religion in preference to the rest. They, who are the oracles of each party, insert in their writings those portions of Scripture, which are supposed to inculcate the doctrines for which they contend; but keep out of sight, perhaps without design, those passages which as strongly declare, what they undervalue, overlook, or are prejudiced against. And these writings form the religion of the zealous friends of that party, while the rest of Scripture is comparatively neglected or forgotten. Indeed we all are disposed to have favorite passages of Scripture, to which we are more attentive than to the rest; so that without great care we shall be led into this error.—And may it not be hinted with propriety, that some text-books, which were well designed, are yet capable of a dangerous abuse? I mean those books, which give a text of Scripture for every day, with pious observations upon it. Many read these in family worship, instead of the Bible itself; and others, it is likely, do the same in their closets: but numbers are thus undesignedly led to substitute a part for the whole; the abstract with an exposition, instead of the book of the law: whereas "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (2 T *3:16). The proper use of such books is to suggest subjects for pious meditations and ejaculations, in the intervals of conversation and business.—The scarcity of the written word did not excuse Israel's degeneracy and idolatry, because it was the effect of it; "the people loved to have it so" (Je 5:31); but the abundance of Bibles, with which this land is favored, will exceedingly aggravate the guilt of our national impiety, infidelity, and licentiousness: for what greater contempt of God can we show, than to refuse to read his word, when put into our hands; or, reading it, to refuse to believe and obey it? 2 K 14:6n. It is supposed that the portion, which was first read to Josiah, was the 28th and 29th chapters of Deuteronomy: and these were doubtless well suited to convince him, that the guilt and danger of his people was much greater than he had apprehended, and to induce the expressions of fear, sorrow, and humiliation, which he showed. It is probable his reformation had hitherto been conducted by such abstracts, as have been mentioned, or by traditional knowledge. If the kings of Judah had observed the rule of transcribing the law with their own hands, very salutary effects might have been produced; but it seems to have been entirely neglected, as well as the command to read the law publicly to the people, every year at the feast of tabernacles (Scott). "No revival is more to be desired than that of systematic, personal Bible study!" Dt 17:18. 31:9-13. During thy life, none of these calamities shall fall upon thee nor thy people; no adversary shall be permitted to disturb the peace of Judea; and thou shalt at last "be gathered into thy grave in peace." Now, though it is stated that Pharaoh-Necho slew him at Megiddo (2 Ch 35:22-24), yet the Assyrians and the Jews were at peace; and though Josiah might feel it his duty to oppose the Egyptian king's going against his friend and ally, and that, in his endeavors to oppose him, he was mortally wounded at Migiddo, yet certainly he was not killed there, but was brought to Jerusalem, where he died in peace. Young notes "his encounter with the king of Egypt was more a personal than a national act." Scott notes, "Though he was slain in battle, yet he died in peace with God, and went to glory. As he was not forty years old when he died, and the total destruction of Jerusalem took place within twenty-three years after, he might have lived to that time, according to the ordinary course of nature. But as his piety and zeal could not avail to prevent that catastrophe, he was mercifully 'taken away from the evil to come'" (Is 57:1). be gathered. 2 K 23:29, 30. Ps *37:37. Is *57:1, 2. 2 KINGS 23

Josiah reads the law in a solemn assembly gathered for that and similar purposes, 1, 2. He enters into covenant with God; and abolishes idolatry in Judah, 3-14. He burns men's bones on the altar at Bethel; fulfills the prediction of the prophet sent to Jeroboam, destroys the high places in Samaria, and slays the priests, 15-20. He celebrates a solemn passover, 21-23. He puts away wizards, etc., 24: and excels all his predecessors, 25. The wrath of God against Judah is yet unappeased, 26-28. Josiah is slain in battle by Pharaoh-necho, and succeeded by Jehoahaz, 29, 30; who reigns wickedly three months, is led away prisoner by Pharaoh into Egypt, and succeeded by Jehoiakim, 31-34; who taxes the land for Pharaoh's tribute, and reigns wickedly, 35-37.

As Jehoiakim was "buried with the burial of an ass," by being "drawn and cast forth beyond the gate of Jerusalem" (Je 22:19) without interment, the expression "slept with his fathers" can only mean that he died, without determining what became either of his soul or body. In the East, a body exposed during the night would be a prey to wild animals; if any of it were left (2 K 9:35) till the morning, the carnivorous birds would devour it. Notice also that "burial" is used without meaning actual interment, a fact fatal to the usual interpretation given to the term in Ro 6:4. 2 Ch 36:6, 8. 2 KINGS 25

Jerusalem is besieged and taken; Zedekiah flees, and is made prisoner; his sons are slain, his eyes are put out, and he is carried in chains to Babylon, 1-7. The temple, palaces, and city are burned, the walls are broken down, and the remnant of the people led captive, except a small number of the poor, 8-12. The residue of the sacred vessels and treasures are carried away, 13-17. The nobles are slain at Riblah, 18-21. Gedaliah, who is left governor, being treacherously slain, the rest flee into Egypt, 22-26. After many years, Evil-merodach shows great kindness to Jehoiachin, 27-30.

40. Alian. i.e. lofty, *S#5935h. Both these variations are also caused by the mutation of yood and wav. The former being written "Alvan," and "Alian;" and the latter, "Shepho," and "Shephi." Ge 36:23, Alvan, Shepho. Shephi. i.e. my bareness; my prominence, *S#8195h. Aiyah. Ge 36:24, Ajah.

41. The sons. ℳ171E13, Ge +46:7. Dishon. ver. +38. Ge 36:25. Amram. This variation is only caused by the mutation of a daleth and a raish; the original being in Genesis "Hemdan," and here "Hamran." Ge 36:26, Hemdan.

42. Zavan. i.e. disquiet, *S#2190h. Ge 36:27. The former of these is the same in the original, Zauvan, and the latter, is an error for weakan, "and Achan." Ge 36:27, Zaavan, Achan. Jakan. i.e. let him oppress them, *S#3292h. Uz. Ge +10:23. 36:28. La 4:21.

46. Hadad. Ge +36:35. Bedad. Ge +36:35. Midian. Ge +25:2. Avith. Ge +36:35.

47. Samlah. Ge +36:36. Masrekah. Ge +36:36.

48. Shaul. The original is uniformly "Shaul." Ge 36:37, Saul.

49. Baal-hanan. Ge +36:38. Achbor. Ge +36:38.

50. Hadad. This variation is occasioned simply by the mutation of raish, and daleth, being in Genesis "Hadar," and here, "Hadad." Ge 36:39, Hadar. Pai. i.e. sighing, *S#6464h. This simply depends on the interchange of yood and wav; being written in Genesis "Pau," and here, "Pai." Ge 36:39, Pau.

51. Aliah. i.e. moral perverseness, *S#5933h. This is another instance of the mutation of yood and wav; in the former instance being "Alvah," and here, "Aliah," though the Keri also reads "Alvah." Ge 36:40, Alvah.

52. Duke Aholibamah. Ge +36:41.

53. Kenaz. Ge +36:11. Teman. Ge +36:11. Mibzar. Ge +36:42.

54. Magdiel. Ge +36:43. These are. Ge 36:41-43.

As the sons of Jeconiah are enumerated in the succeeding verse, and as Zedekiah is no where else mentioned as the son of Jeconiah, but as the son of Josiah, it is highly probable that son here means successor. 2 K 24:17, being his uncle. Matthew Poole comments, "Not his natural son, for he was his uncle, 2 K 24:17; but his legal son, or his successor, upon whom the son's right was devolved by virtue of that law, Nu 27:8-10, and therefore it is not strange if he have the name of son with it." See 1 K +15:10n.

17. Assir. Ex +6:24. As Salathiel was not the son of Assir, but of Jeconiah, it is probable that the word assir, which signifies a prisoner, is an epithet applied to Jeconiah, who was a long time a prisoner at Babylon. Salathiel. i.e. asked of God. Ezr 3:2, 8. 5:2, Shealtiel. 19. the sons of Pedaiah. As St. Matthew states that Zerubbabel was the son of Salathiel, Houbigant thinks these words should be omitted; and Pedaiah is wanting in the Arabic and Syriac. But since the same Zerubbabel is called "the son of Pedaiah" here, but the son of Salathiel, Mt 1:12, the term son in Matthew is put for grandson, as is elsewhere the case: 1 K 15:10n. Zerubbabel. 28. firstborn. 1 Ch +5:1. Le +27:26. ℳ63A1, Ge +14:20. Here there is an ellipsis of the name of the firstborn, which the margin correctly supplies as Joel. The word Vashni when otherwise pointed means "second," so that the verse more properly reads "And the sons of Samuel; the firstborn (Joel) and the second Abiah." Vashni. i.e. Jah is strong; wherefore, sleep thou; changed; my year; second; liberal gift of the Lord, *S#2059h. It appears that Joel is here lost out of the text; and that washni, which signifies "and the second," and which refers to Abiah, is made into a proper name. The Syriac and Arabic read as in Samuel. The marginal references contain the variation in the names given to the same persons, in different parts of sacred history, as far as it can be ascertained; and nearly the whole, that is at present known concerning them, may be learned by carefully consulting them. ver. 33. 1 S *8:2, Joel.

(1) A man of Judah, family of Zerah, house of Ethan, 1 Ch 2:8. (2) A Levite, family of Kohath, line of Izhar, and an ancestor of Samuel the prophet and Heman the singer, 1 Ch 6:36; perhaps, 2 Ch 29:12. (3) One of Solomon's officials, son of the high priest Zadok, and brother of Ahimaaz, 1 K 4:2. (4) Grandson of Zadok and son of Ahimaaz, in the line of high-priestly succession, 1 Ch 6:9. (5) Son of Nathan, and hence probably Solomon's nephew (2 S 5:14), who was over Solomon's twelve tax-collectors, 1 K 4:5. (6) A prophet, son of Oded, who encouraged king Asa to persevere in national religious reformation, 2 Ch 15:1-8. (7) Two sons of king Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch 21:2. The recurrence of the same name in the family is surprising. It may be due to an early corruption of the text; or, if the text is correct, to a difference of mother, the two boys being half-brothers (Compare the Herods). It cannot be explained by the theory that the younger was named after a deceased elder brother, for the two seem to have been alive together and to have been put to death at the same time (Davis). (8) A man of Judah, family of Hezron, house of Jerahmeel, 1 Ch 2:38, 39. His grandfather was Obed (1 Ch 2:38); hence he was perhaps the captain Azariah, son of Obed, who assisted in overthrowing Athaliah and placing Joash on the throne, 2 Ch 23:1. (9). Another captain, son of Jeroham, who aided in overthrowing Athaliah, 2 Ch 23:1. (10) A prince of Ephraim, son of Johanan, who aided in persuading the soldiers of Pekah's army to release the captives of Judah, 2 Ch 28:12. (11) A king of Judah, called also Uzziah (B.C. 811-759). 2 K 14:21; 15:1 w 2 Ch 26:1; 2 Ch 22:6; 23:1. (12) A high priest, 1 Ch 6:10; probably he who rebuked Uzziah for encroaching on the priest's office, 2 Ch 26:17-20. (13) A high priest during Hezekiah's reign, possibly the same as (12), 2 Ch 31:10, 13. (14) A Levite, family of Merari, who assisted in purifying the temple in Hezekiah's reign, 2 Ch 29:12. (15) A high priest, son of Hilkiah and father of Seraiah, not long before the exile, 1 Ch 6:13, 14; perhaps 9:11. (16) A son of Hoshaiah and an opponent of the prophet Jeremiah, Je 43:2. (17) The Hebrew and original name of Abednego, Da 1:7. (18) Grandfather of Ezra, Ezr 7:1. (19) A prominent person, probably prince of Judah, who marched in the procession at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, Ne 12:32, 33. (20) A son of Maaseiah, who had a house at Jerusalem in Nehemiah's time, and repaired the wall in its immediate vicinity, Ne 3:23, 24. (21) A priest, doubtless head of a father's house, who in the days of Nehemiah sealed the covenant to keep separate from foreigners and observe the law of God, Ne 10:2. (22) A descendant of Hilkiah who was ruler of the house of God after the exile, 1 Ch 9:11; see, however, Seraiah, Ne 11:11. (23) A king of Israel (not Uzziah), called Azariah in 2 Ch 22:6, but this seems a copyist's error for Ahaziah, which is given in the next verse, 2 Ch 22:6, 7; compare 2 K 8:29 (adapted from Davis Dictionary of the Bible, pp. 66, 67). Zephaniah. Zp +1:1. While it is sufficiently evident that many of the variations of the names of persons have arisen from the carelessness of transcribers, or the inattention of translators, and others from a difference (probably dialectical) in the pronunciation (Jg 12:6n; 2 K +8:21n); it is also evident, that the same persons, as in these instances, must have had two or more totally distinct names. ver. 24, Shaul, Uzziah, Uriel.

It is evident, however, that many of these cities or their names have been changed since the time of Joshua; but as it has been well observed, Salop and Shrewsbury, Sarum and Salisbury, are as different names as any in these catalogs; yet those who live in their vicinity are not at all confused by them. 1 CHRONICLES 7

The sons of Issachar, 1-5; of Benjamin, 6-12; of Naphtali, 13; and of Manasseh, 14-19. The sons of Ephraim, of whom some were slain by the men of Gath, 20-22. His sons by Beriah, 23-27. Their habitations, 28, 29. The sons of Asher, 30-40.

Nu +34:20. valiant men. Jg +6:12. 2 S +2:7mg. whose number. This was probably the number returned by Joab and his assistants, when they made the census of the people with which God was so much displeased. We find that the effective men of Issachar amounted to 87,000 (ver. 5); 22,600 of whom descended from Tola his eldest son; but whether the 36,000 (ver. 4) were descendants of Tola by Uzzi, and the 22,600 his descendants by Tola's other sons; or whether another of Issachar's sons be intended, does not clearly appear; though the former seems the more obvious meaning. 1 Ch 21:1-5. 27:1, 23, 24. 2 S 24:1-9.

3. Izrahiah. i.e. whom Jehovah brought to light; whom Jah brings forth, *S#3156h. 1 Ch 7:3, 3. Ne 12:42. (1) Son of Uzzi, of Issachar, 1 Ch 7:3. (2) Overseer of singers at the dedication of the temple, written Jezrahiah, Ne 12:42. Michael. Da +12:1. Obadiah. (2) One of those who came to David at Ziklag, 1 Ch 12:6, Jesiah. (3) A Levite, descended from Moses, and head of the house of Rehabiah, 1 Ch 24:21; compare 23:14-17. (4) A Levite, family of Kohath, house of Uzziel, 1 Ch 23:20; 24:25. (5) Son of Harim, induced by Ezra to put away his foreign wife, Ezr 10:31, Ishijah.

4. with them. 1 Ch 12:32.

6. of Benjamin. In the parallel place of Genesis, ten sons of Benjamin are reckoned: Bela, Becher, Ashbel, Gera, Naaman, Ehi, Rosh, Muppim, Huppim, and Ard; and in Numbers, five only are mentioned: Bela, Ashbel, Ahiraim, Shupham, and Hupham; and Ard and Naaman are said to be the sons of Bela, and consequently Benjamin's grandsons. In the beginning of the following chapter, also, five are only mentioned: Bela, Ashbel, Aharah, Nohah, and Rapha; and Addar, Gera, Abihud, Abishua, Naaman, Ahoha, another Gera, Shephuphan, and Huram, are all represented as grandsons, not sons of Benjamin: hence we see that in many cases, grandsons are called sons, and both are often confounded in the genealogical tables. It seems also, that the persons mentioned in the following verses were neither sons nor grandsons of Bela and Becher, but distinguished persons among their descendants. See Note on 1 K +15:10n. 1 Ch 8:1, etc. Ge 46:21. Nu 26:38-41. Jediael. i.e. known of God, *S#3043h. 1 Ch 7:6, 10, 11. 11:45. 12:20. 26:2. i.e. a city, *S#5893. ver. 7, Iri. Hushim. Ge +46:23. the sons. ƒ171E13, Ge +46:7. Plural put for singular, for Hushim is mentioned as the only son of Dan, Ge 46:23, where the plural is likewise used. Poole notes that the term "another thing," the literal meaning of "Aher," is used by Hebrew writers to designate a detestable thing, which Dan was considered, because of its gross idolatry, Jg ch. 18; for which reason many interpreters conceive this tribe is omitted in the numbering of the sealed persons of Re 7. Aher. i.e. another; coming slowly, following, *S#313h. Aher signifies another, and it has been conjectured that these were Danites, "the sons of another tribe;" especially as Hushim is named as the only son of Dan, Ge 46:23. And they suppose that the name of Dan was not mentioned, because his descendants first established idolatry (Jg 18:30. 1 K 12:29, 30. 2 K 10:29. Am 8:14). But Zebulun, as well as Dan, is here omitted, perhaps because none of either of these tribes returned at first from Babylon. Though the Benjamites had been almost destroyed in the first days of the judges (Jg 20:35), they soon became numerous and powerful. 1 Ch 8:1, Aharah. Nu 26:38, Ahiram.

13. Jahziel. i.e. allotted of God, *S#3185h. Ge +46:24. Nu 26:48, Jahzeel. Guni. Ge +46:24. Jezer. Ge +46:24. Shallum. Ge +46:24. Nu 26:49, Shillem. 2 K +15:10. the sons of. Ge 30:3-8. 35:22. 46:25. i.e. the grandchildren; for Bilhah was Jacob's concubine, and mother both to Naphtali, the father of these last named persons, and to Dan (Matthew Poole). See 1 K +15:10n. Bilhah. Ge +29:29.

14. The sons of. Nu 26:29-33. i.e. grandchildren, as ver. 13. For both Ashriel and Zelophehad were the grandchildren of Machir son of Manasseh, Nu 26:29, etc.; 27:1. The text in these two verses seems to be strangely corrupted; and, as it stands, is scarcely intelligible. Probably it should be rendered "The sons of Manasseh were Ashriel, whom his Syrian concubine bore to him; and Machir the father of Gilead, whom (his wife) bore to him. Machir took for a wife Maachah, sister to Huppim and Shuppim." This is nearly the version of Dr. Geddes. Ashriel. i.e. I shall be prince of God; vow of, or bound of God, *S#844h. 1 Ch 7:14. Nu +26:31, Asriel. Jsh 17:2. concubine. 1 Ch +2:48. Aramitess. i.e. highlandress; exalted of Jah, *S#761h. Elsewhere rendered Syrian, Ge +25:20. Machir. 1 Ch 2:21-23. Ge +50:23. Nu 26:29-34. 27:1. 32:39-42. Dt 3:13-15. Jsh 13:31. 17:1-3. Jg 5:14. Gilead. Ge +31:23. A person so called, as is manifest from ver. 17; Nu 26:29.

15. the sister. ver. 16. Huppim. ver. 12. Maachah. 1 K +2:39. and the name. It is certain that Zelophehad was not a son, but a descendant of Manasseh's, three generations having intervened; for he was the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh. the second. Of the second son or grandson of Machir; for so Zelophehad was, Nu 26:29, etc. Or, Zelophehad is here called the second, because he was the younger brother of Ashriel, who was the eldest son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir. and Zelophehad. Nu +26:33. 27:1-11. 36:1-12. had daughters. 1 Ch 2:34.

(1) Grandson of Maachah, wife of Machir, 1 Ch 7:16. (2) A man of Benjamin, father of many valiant men, 1 Ch 8:39, 40. Rakem. i.e. embroidery; versicolor, *S#7552h. 1 Ch 2:+*43, 44. 7:16. Nu 31:8. Jsh 13:21.

17. Bedan. i.e. son of judgment; servile; fat, robust, *S#917h. 1 Ch 7:17. 1 S 12:11. (1) A judge of the Israelites whose name is not in the book of Judges, 1 S 12:11. It is probably a copyist's error for Barak. (2) A descendant of Machir, 1 Ch 7:17. These. That is, a reference to Ashriel and Zelophehad, named in ver. 14, 15; the relative pronoun here refers to the remoter antecedent, as is frequent in Hebrew (Matthew Poole).

18. Hammoleketh. i.e. queen, *S#4447h. Ishod. i.e. man of renown, *S#379h. Abiezer. Nu 26:30, Jeezer. Jsh +17:2. Jg 6:11, 24, 34. 8:2. Mahalah. i.e. disease, infirmity, sickness, *S#4244h. 1 Ch 7:18. Nu +26:33, Mahlah. 27:1. 36:11. Jsh 17:3. 21. Zabad. 1 Ch +2:36. Shuthelah. i.e. noise of breaking; freshly appointed; resembling rejuvenation, *S#7803h. 1 Ch 7:20, 21. Nu 26:35, 36. Ezer. S#5827h. 1 Ch ◐+4:4. Ge ◐+36:21. Elead. i.e. God is witness, *S#496h. Gath. Jsh +11:22. because they came. Or rather, "when (kee) they came down to take away their cattle;" for it does not appear that the sons of Ephraim were the aggressors, but the men of Gath, who appear to have been born in Egypt. This is the only place in the Sacred Writings where this piece of history is mentioned, and the transaction seems to have happened before the Israelites came out of Egypt; for it appears from the following verse, that Ephraim was alive when these children were slain.

22. mourned. Ge 37:34. and his brethren. 1 Ch +15:5. Jb 2:11. i.e. his kinsmen, as that word is frequently used (Matthew Poole).

23. Beriah. i.e. in evil; gift, or calamity, *S#1283h. 1 Ch 7:23, 30, 31. 8:13, 16. 23:10, 11. Ge 46:17, 17. Nu 26:44. (1) Fourth son of Asher, Ge 46:17; 1 Ch 7:30. (2) A son of Ephraim, 1 Ch 7:23. (3) A chief man of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:13. (4) Son of Shimei, a Gershonite, 1 Ch 23:10. because. Many similar instances of the naming of children from passing circumstances, occur throughout the sacred volume. See those of a similar character with this verse: (1) Ge 35:18, where Rachel, while dying, names her new-born son Ben-oni, or, the son of my sorrow. (2) So in 1 S 4:21, the wife of Phinehas, on being apprised of the death of Eli and her husband, and that the ark was taken by the Philistines, while in the pains of travail, and dying, named her son Ichobod, or, there is no glory. (3) So also in the 4th chapter of this book, ver. 9, we read that Jabez, or, sorrowful, had that name given to him, because his mother "bare him with sorrow." 2 S 23:5.

1 CHRONICLES 8

The sons and chief men of Benjamin, 1-32. The family of Saul and his descendants by Jonathan, 33-40.

1. Bela. 1 Ch 7:6-12. Ge +14:2. 46:21. his firstborn. Lℯ +27:26. Ashbel. Ge +46:21. the second. ver. +39. 1 Ch 7:15. Aharah. i.e. after his brother, *S#315h. Nu 26:38, Ahiram.

2. Nohah. i.e. quietude, *S#5119h. Rapha. i.e. he healed; the giant; the shrunken, *S#7498h. 1 Ch 8:2. 20:4, 6, 8. Also 2 S 21:16, 18, 20, 22. 1 Ch 8:37. (1) One of the sons of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:2. (2) A chief man of Benjamin, of the stock of Saul, 1 Ch 8:37. Called Rephaiah, 1 Ch +9:43. (3) An ancient giant, whose descendants were giants, 1 Ch 20:4.

3. Addar. i.e. mighty one; honorable, great, *S#146h. The variation in this name is occasioned simply by a transposition of daleth and raish, being in the parallel passage "Ard," and here, "Addar." Ge −46:21. Nu 26:40, Ard. Gera. Ge +46:21. Abihud. i.e. father of majesty; father of praise, *S#31h.

4. Abishua. 1 Ch +6:4. Naaman. Ge +46:21. Nu 26:40. Ahoah. i.e. brotherly; brother of the Lord; brother of rest, *S#265h. 2 S 23:28.

5. Gera. ver. 3. Ge +46:21. Jg 3:15. Shephuphan.

i.e. serpent-like; their sinuosity; their bareness, *S#8197h. 1 Ch 8:5. Also Nu 26:39. "Shuppim" seems to be merely a contracted form of "Shupham," or rather, "Shephupham," which, by the mutation of mem into noon, is here changed into "Shephuphan." 1 Ch 7:12, Shuppim. Nu 26:39, Shupham. Huram. i.e. noble, ingenuous; their liberty; their whiteness, *S#2361h. 1 Ch 8:5. 14:1. 2 Ch 2:3, 11, 12, 13. 4:11, 11, 16. 8:2, 18. 9:10, 21. (1) A Benjamite, perhaps a son of Bela, 1 Ch 8:5. (2) A king of Tyre, 2 Ch 2:3. (3) A Tyrian artificer, 2 Ch 4:11, 16. Huram appears to be an error for Hupham, in the parallel passage of Numbers +26:39, which, by contraction, is written Huppim.

6. Ehud. i.e. strong; undivided; union; joining together, *S#261. 1 Ch 7:10. Jg 3:20, etc. 4:1. (1) A son of Gera who slew Eglon and delivered the Israelites from the oppression of the Moabites. He was one of the judges in Israel, Jg 3:15, 16. (2) A grandson of Jediael, 1 Ch 7:10. (3) A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:6. May be the same as Number 1. Geba. 1 Ch 6:60. Jsh 18:24. 1 S +13:3. Manahath. 1 Ch 2:52, 54. Ge +36:23.

7. Naaman. ver. 4. Ahiah. i.e. brother, worshipper, or friend of Jehovah, *S#281h. (1) Son of Ehud, descendant of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:7. (2) A priest in the time of Saul, grandson of Phinehas, 1 S 14:3, 18. (3) A prince or scribe of Solomon's, 1 K 4:3. Gera. Ge +46:21. Uzza. 2 K +21:18. Ahihud. i.e. my brother is united, *S#284h.

8. Shaharaim. i.e. double-dawn; two dawns or mornings; morning and evening twilight, *S#7842h. in the. Ru 1:1. Hushim. Ge +46:23. Baara. i.e. brutish; kindling of the moon; she hath kindled, *S#1199h. after he had sent them away. Ge 25:6. Matthew Poole notes, Ehud or Gera last mentioned; others join these words with the former, and render the place thus, "after he had sent them (his sons) away, with Hushim and Baara his wives," i.e. as he also sent his wives away from him; which may be here mentioned as a brand upon him, to show that he was without natural affection to his wives and children. And it seems the more probable that he divorced them, because we find him married to another wife, ver. 9. Mt 19:3-9. 2 T 3:3. wives. 1 Ch 4:5. Ge +4:19.

9. Hodesh. i.e. the new moon, *S#2321h. In the preceding verse it is said that "Hushim and Baara were his wives;" and here it is said, "he begat of Hodesh his wife," etc.; and then in the eleventh verse, his children by Hushim are mentioned, but not a word of Baara. It is probable, therefore, that Hodesh was another name for Baara; and this is asserted by the Targumist: "And he begat of Baara, that is, Chodesh, his wife, so called because he espoused her anew." But it might be more probable to adopt Poole's view, given in the Note to verse 8, than to suppose Shaharaim divorced then remarried Baara after sending her away, accepting her back again, now giving her a new and more suitable name. Jobab. Ge +10:29. Zibia. i.e. a gazelle; honorable chief, *S#6644h. Mesha. i.e. waters of devastation; making to forget; equalizing; existing; retreat, removal, deliverance, *S#4331h, only here. (1) A king of Moab in the time of Ahab, 2 K 3:4. (2) A son of Caleb, 1 Ch 2:42. (3) A descendant of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:9. Malcham. i.e. most high king; their king, *S#4445h.

10. Jeuz. i.e. counselor; he will take counsel, *S#3263h. Shachia. i.e. captivation; captive of the Lord; the return of Jah, *S#7634h. Mirma. i.e. deceit, guile, fraud, *S#4821h.

11. Hushim. Ge +46:23. Abitub. i.e. good; father of goodness, *S#36h. Elpaal. i.e. God the maker; God the reward, *S#508h. ver. 12, 18.

12. Eber. Ge +10:24. Misham. i.e. their cleansing or regarding, *S#4936h. Shamed. i.e. destruction; exterminator; persecution; guardian, *S#8106h. A Benjamite, descended from Shaharaim through Elpaal; he was a rebuilder of Ono and Lod, with their dependent villages, 1 Ch 8:12. See on 1 Ch 6:46, Shamer, and 1 K 16:24, Shemer, for the other occurrences of S#8106h. Ono. Ono is stated by Reland to have been three miles from Lydda. Ezr +2:33. Ne 6:2. 7:37. 11:35. Lod. Lod or Lydda, was situated about four leagues from Joppa, and a day's journey, or about thirty-two miles, N.W. from Jerusalem; and, according to the Antoine Itinerary, twelve miles from Jamnia, eighteen from Eleutheropolis, and twenty-two from Bethar. Josephus says it was a village, not yielding to a city in greatness; and that it was one of three toparchies dismembered from Samaria, and given to the Jews. It was destroyed by Cestius in the Jewish war, and, when rebuilt, was called Diospolis. It is now called Loudd, and is a poor village, situated in a fine plain about a league to the E.N.E. of Ramla. N.; and, according to the best authorities, 136 miles S.W. of Damascus, 34 miles S. of Shechem or Nablous, 45 miles E. of Jaffa, 27 miles N. of Hebron, and about 20 miles W. of Jericho. The city of Jerusalem was built on hills, and encompassed with mountains (Ps 125:2), in a stony and barren soil, and was about sixteen furlongs in length, says Strabo. The ancient city of Jebus, taken by David from the Jebusites, was not large, and stood on a mountain south of that on which the temple was erected. Here David built a new city, called the city of David, wherein was the royal palace. Between these two mountains lay the valley of Millo, filled up by David and Solomon; and after the reign of Manasseh, another city is mentioned, called the second. The Maccabees considerably enlarged Jerusalem on the north, enclosing a third hill; and Josephus mentions a fourth hill, called Bezetha, which Agrippa joined to the former: this new city lay north of the temple, along the brook Kidron. Here is a case of a son being given a name which literally means "firstborn," but he was not born first, but second. This is another evidence that "firstborn" does not mean born first, but has primary reference to certain legal privileges pertaining to the birthright. The eldest son succeeded to his father's rank and position as head of the family or tribe, and as representative of its prerogatives. He also inherited a double portion of his father's property, a right guaranteed even when his mother was the less loved of two wives (Dt 21:17; 2 K 2:9). A birthright might be sold to a younger brother, as Esau sold his birthright to Jacob (Ge 25:29, 34; He 12:16). It might also be forfeited on account of misconduct (1 Ch +*5:1). 1 Ch +26:10. 18. Who hitherto waited. The original is weudhennah, which Houbigant and Dr. Geddes consider as a proper name, and render "And Adanah was over the eastern gate, called the king's;" i.e. the gate by which the kings of Judah went to the temple. The list is here nearly the same with those found in Ezra and Nehemiah, and contains those who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel: but the list in Nehemiah is more ample, probably because it contains those who came afterwards; the object of the sacred writer here being to give the names of those who came first, ver. 2. These consisted of men belonging not only to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but to many of the other tribes of Israel, who took advantage of the proclamation of Cyrus to return to Jerusalem. Properly speaking, the divisions mentioned here constituted the whole of the Israelitish people, who were divided into priests, Levites, common Israelites, and Nethinims. the king's. 1 K 10:5. 2 K 11:19. 15:35. 34. chief fathers. ver. 13. Ne 11:1-15. dwelt. Jn=15:4. =16:33. Jerusalem. We have already seen the situation and extent of this ancient city (Note on 1 Ch 8:28); but the Jerusalem of sacred history is no more. After having been successively destroyed by the Babylonians and Romans, and taken by the Saracens, Crusaders, and Turks, in the possession of the latter of whom it still continues, not a vestige remains of the capital of David and Solomon—not a monument of Jewish times is standing. The very course of the walls is changed, and the boundaries of the ancient city are become doubtful. The monks pretend to show the sites of the sacred places; but they have not the slightest pretensions to even a probable identity with the real places. The Jerusalem that now is, however, called by the Arabs El Kouds, or "the holy city," is still a respectable, good-looking town, of an irregular shape: it is surrounded by high embattled walls, enclosing an area not exceeding two miles and a half, and occupying two small hills, having the valley of Jehoshaphat on the east, the valley of Siloam and Gehinnom on the south, and the valley of Rephaim on the west; and containing a population variously estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000 souls. Since the writing of the preceding Note in the early 19th century, how much has taken place! The nation of Israel was restored to its own land in 1948, and the entire city of Jerusalem is now in the possession of the Jews, a fulfillment of prophecy (Lk 21:24) which took place during the "Six Day War" in 1967.

Figure of speech Aphaeresis; or, Front-cut: a figure of etymology which relates to the spelling of words, and is used of the cutting off of a letter or syllable from the beginning of a word. Examples in Scripture include Ephes-dammim being cut to Pas-dammim, and Jeconiah being cut to Coniah: compare 1 Ch 3:16, Jeconiah, with Je 22:24, Coniah. Also Je 37:1. 1 Ch 25:11n. The cutting off of the name corresponds with his being cut off from the throne, together with his sons, for not one of his seven sons (1 Ch 3:17, 18) sat upon his throne (see Je 22:30); only his grandson became governor after Coniah had died in Babylon, 2 K 25:29, 30. For other instances of this figure see 1 Ch 25:11n. 26:1n. Je 22:24. 37:1. a parcel. In Samuel it is, "a piece of ground full of lentiles," and there is probably a mistake of seorim, "barley," for adashim, "lentiles," or vice versa. Some, however, think there were both lentiles and barley in the field, which is not unlikely.

Shammah, Shammoth, and as it is in 1 Ch 27:8, Shamhuth, having all the same signification, appear to have been deemed perfectly interchangeable, and accordingly used indifferently. 2 S 23:25, Shammah the Harodite. Harorite. i.e. the mountaineer, *S#2033h. The variation "Harorite" for "Harodite," arises from the mutation of raish and daleth. Helez. 1 Ch +2:39. Pelonite. i.e. nameless; such an one; a certain unnamed one, *S#6397h. 1 Ch 11:27, 36. 27:10. In 2 S 23:+26 he is called a Paltite. (1) A name applied to Helez, one of David's valiant men, 1 Ch 11:27; 27:10. Called Paltite in 2 S 23:26. (2) Ahijah, another of David's valiant men, is called the Pelonite in 1 Ch 11:36.

Je 29:27. This variation springs simply from the points; the word being written "Anethothite" in Samuel, and here "Antothite."

29. Sibbecai. i.e. thicket of Jah; my thickets, *S#5444h. 1 Ch 11:29. 20:4. 27:11. 2 S 21:18. The reading of "Mebunnai," for "Sibbecai," seems to be occasioned by the mistake of a samech for a mem, and a noon for a caph; and a difference in the vowel points. 1 Ch 27:11. 2 S 23:+27, Mebunnai. Ilai. i.e. supreme; most high; my elevations; my sucklings, *S#5866h. 2 S 23:+28, Zalmon. Ahohite. ver. 12.

"Heleb" seems evidently a mistake for "Heled," which is essentially the same with "Heldai," the latter merely having a paragogic yood. 1 Ch 27:15, Heldai. 2 S 23:29, Heleb. Baanah. 2 S +4:5.

31. Ithai. i.e. there is; my sign; with me, *S#863h. *S#2833h. The variation of "Ithai" and "Ittai," simply arises from the elision of yood, which is compensated by the reduplication of the next letter. 2 S 23:29, Ittai (see on 2 S +15:19). Ribai. 2 S +23:29. Gibeah. Jg +19:12. Benaiah. i.e. built or son of Jah. 1 Ch +15:24. Pirathonite. Jg +12:15.

"Barhumhite" seems a mistake for "Baharumite," the letters cheth and raish being transposed. 2 S 23:+31, Barhumite. Eliahba. i.e. God hides. 2 S +23:32. Shaalbonite. 2 S +23:32.

34. Hashem. i.e. dull, sleepy; to make desolate, *S#2044h. 2 S 23:32, Jashen. Gizonite. i.e. shearer; quarryman; stone-quarrier, *S#1493h. Jonathan. i.e. Jah hath given. 1 S +13:2. Shage. i.e. wandering, erring; touching softly, *S#7681h. Hararite. 2 S +23:11.

(1) Father of one of David's mighty men, 2 S 23:33, Sharar; 1 Ch 11:35. (2) The fourth son of Obed-edom, and one of the porters, 1 Ch 26:4. Hararite. ver. 34. Eliphal. i.e. God is the judge; my God has judged, *S#465h. 2 S 23:34, Eliphelet. Ur. 2 S 23:34, Ahasbai.

1 CHRONICLES 12

The companies which came to David at Ziklag, 1-22. The armed troops that came to him at Hebron, 23-40.

1. these are. 1 S 27:2, 6. 2 S 1:1. 4:10. while he yet, etc. Heb. being yet shut up. Sometimes, in the East, when a successful prince endeavored to extirpate the preceding royal family, some of them escaped the slaughter, and secured themselves in an impregnable fortress, or in a place of great secrecy; while others have been known to seek an asylum in a foreign country, from whence they have occasioned, from time to time, great anxiety and great difficulties to the usurper of the crown. The expression shut up, so often applied to the extermination of eastern royal families (Dt 32:36. 1 K 14:10. 21:21. 2 K 9:8. 14:26), strictly speaking, refers to the two first of these cases; but the term may be used in a more extensive sense, for those who, by retiring into deserts, or foreign countries, preserve themselves from being slain by the men who usurp the dominions of their ancestors. Thus the term is here applied to David, though he did not shut himself up, strictly speaking, in Ziklag. It is described as a town in the country, and was probably an unwalled town; and it is certain that he did not confine himself to it, but, on the contrary, was continually making excursions from thence. Saul. 1 Ch 8:33. 9:39. the mighty men. 1 Ch 11:10, 19, 24, 25.

It is probable that they did not bring their companies with them; yet they both assured him of future assistance, and very seasonably helped him against the Amalekites who had spoiled Ziklag. 1 S 29:11. Adnah. i.e. resting forever; time or pleasure, *S#5734h. 1 Ch 12:20. The meaning of this expression may be inferred from that of a double heart in ver. 33. If a double heart be expressive of insincerity or duplicity, a perfect heart, which seems to be put in opposition to it, must signify a sincere, faithful, and entire attachment. 1 K 8:61. 11:4. 2 K +*20:3. The passage will then read "brought them on asses, on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, meat, meal, cakes of figs," etc. which renders the introduction of and unnecessary. In giving the law, also, even a beast which touched Sinai's mount was, by the Almighty's fiat, to be stoned or thrust through with a dart. And again we read (Nu 4:15), after special orders to Aaron and his son about covering the sanctuary and all the vessels previously to a removal, that the Kohathites, who were to carry them, "shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die." These were positive commands. May the sin of Uzza in touching the ark, warn Christians to take heed of rashness and irreverence in dealing about holy things: see ver. 9, 10. 15. when thou shalt hear. Some, taking the word bechaim, translated "mulberry trees," as a proper name, render, "when thou shalt hear a sound of going upon the summits of Bechaim;" others understanding rosh, "a top," in the sense of beginning or entrance, read, "when thou hearest a sound of footsteps at the entrance of the grove of mulberry trees;" and others think that a rustling among the leaves is intended. The Targumist reads, "When thou shalt hear the sound of the angels coming to thy assistance, then go out to battle; for an angel is sent from the presence of God, that he may render thy way prosperous." If there had not been an evident supernatural interference, David might have thought that the ruse de guerre (French, "strategem of war") which he had used, was the cause of his victory. Le 26:36. 2 K 7:6. 19:7. Ac 2:2. Taking the information from the note on 2 S 5:23n, where Robert Dick Wilson is cited to show that "baca" has reference, not to mulberry trees, but an underground acqueduct, and the hints given in the note above, very provisionally it might be suggested that the "sound of going in the mulberry trees" was either the sound of wind or rushing air flowing through the acqueduct, indicating either that it was now safe to enter and traverse, or that the top of it at some point had been opened which admitted fresh air, so making the sound, and indicating it was safe to enter. David's men then entered the acqueduct, crawled through it to the point where a well shaft went up into the city of Jebus inside the wall, ascended the shaft, and thus, gaining entrance to what had heretofore been an impregnable city, easy of defence, conquered it. Thus the references in the note above to "top," "summit," and "footsteps at the entrance," when taken in the light that what is referred to is an acquaduct, not a grove of mulberry trees, some semblance of an idea of David's actual strategem may be discerned. Perhaps hearing footsteps at the entrance was a signal for David to know to pursue his attack, as such a sound would indicate his men had successfully traversed the acqueduct and associated shafts. then thou. Jg 4:14. 7:9, 15. 1 S 14:9-22. Ph 2:12, 13. for God. Is 13:4. 45:1, 2. Mi 2:12, 13.

That musical instruments are to be used in the worship of God in the singing of hymns and psalms and spiritual songs cannot be denied on the basis of the silence of the New Testament as to this practice: the argument from silence is at best a very weak inference; and in the case of practices which are so common, so taken for granted, and therefore in need of no explanation or particular comment or additional instruction, such silence need not surprise us on a number of matters; such silence lends force to the argument that such practices continued unabated from the Old Testament era to the New Testament church, for had it been otherwise in each particular case, comment surely would have been made in the New Testament upon the matter (Jn 14:2. David subdues the Philistines, and makes the Moabites tributary, 1, 2. He smites Hadarezer and the Syrians, 3-8. Thirty-two thousand soldiers, exclusive of the thousand sent by the king of Maachah, are mentioned in the parallel passage (2 S 10:6); but of chariots or cavalry there is no mention; and the number of chariots stated here is prodigious, and beyond all credibility. But as the word raichev denotes not only a chariot, but a rider (see Is 21:7), it ought most probably to be rendered here, in a collective sense, cavalry; and then the number of troops will exactly agree with the passage of Samuel. It is probable that they were a kind of auxiliary troops who were usually mounted on horses, or in chariots, but who occasionally served as foot-soldiers. the king of Maachah. 1 CHRONICLES 21

David, tempted by Satan, requires Joab to number the people, 1-4. The number is returned to the king, 5, 6. God is displeased, and David owns his fault, 7, 8. The Lord, by Gad the prophet, proposes three judgments to David, who chooses three days' pestilence, 9-13. Seventy thousand are cut off and David, seeing the destroying angel, intercedes for the people, 14-17. Directed by Gad, he buys Ornan's threshingfloor; and sacrifices: fire consumes the oblation, and the plague is stayed, 18-27. He again sacrifices there, fearing to go to Gibeon by fear of the angel, 28-30.

In the time of Moses, the age was from thirty years to fifty: here this latter period is not mentioned, probably because the service was not so laborious now; for the ark being fixed, they had no longer any burdens to carry; and therefore even an old man might continue to serve. 1 CHRONICLES 26

The divisions of the porters, 1-12. The gates assigned to them by lot, 13-19. The Levites who had the charge of the treasures, 20-28. Those who were officers and judges, 29-32.

1. the divisions. There were four classes of these, each of which belonged to the four gates of the temple, which opened to the four cardinal points of heaven. The eastern gate fell to Shelemiah; the northern to Zechariah (ver. 15); the southern to Obed-edom (ver. 15); and the western to Shuppim and Hosah (ver. 16). These several persons were captains of these porter-bands, or doorkeepers, at the different gates. There were probably a thousand men under each of these captains; as we find, from 1 Ch 23:5, that their whole number was four thousand. the porters. 1 Ch 9:17-27. 15:18, 23, 24. 2 Ch 23:19. Korhites. Nu 26:9-11. Ps 44-49, titles. Meshelemiah. "Shelemiah" is merely an abbreviation of "Meshelemiah," by the aphaeresis of the letter mem. ℳ33. Aphaeresis, 1 Ch +11:13. ver. 14, Shelemiah. Kore. i.e. a partridge. 1 Ch +9:19. Asaph. This variation arises from the rejection of yood into aleph; being written in the parallel passages "Ebiasaph," and here, "Asaph." 1 Ch 6:37. 9:19, Ebiasaph.

2. Zechariah. i.e. remembered by Jah. Zc +1:1. Jediael. i.e. known of God. 1 Ch +7:6. Zebadiah. i.e. the gift of Jehovah; the Lord is my portion; given of the Lord; endowed of Jehovah, *S#2069h. 1 Ch 26:2. 2 Ch 17:8. 19:11. 6. mighty men of valor. They were not only porters, or door-keepers, in the ordinary sense of the word, but they were a military guard to the gate, as Dr. Delaney suggests that the word shoarim should be rendered here: and perhaps in this sense alone are we to understand their office, which appears to have been of considerable dignity, and conferred only on men of the first rank. They were appointed to attend the temple, to guard all the outer gates, and attend at them, not only for state but for service. They were also required to direct and instruct those who were going to worship in the courts of the sanctuary in the conduct they were to observe, to encourage those who were timid, to send back the strangers and unclean, and to guard against thieves and others who were enemies to the house of God. ver. 8. 1 Ch 12:28. Strong in the lexicon to his exhaustive concordance gives the definition for this name: "Jah has dipped." John Ritchie in his Scripture Proper Names gives "Immersed of God, (purified)." The Hebrew word tabal (*S#2881h, Ex 12:22) favors the definition "dip," often merely meaning to "moisten." Zechariah. i.e. remembered of Jah. Zc +1:1.

12. wards. That is, classes against each other. Ward formerly signified a class or division: we still apply the term to the different apartments in hospitals, and to the more extensive districts into which the city of London is divided. See on 1 Ch 25:8.

13. as well the small as the great. Heb. or, as well for the small as for the great. 1 Ch 24:31. *25:8.

Ec 12:11. Or, collections; probably the place where either the supplies of the porters, or the offerings made for the priests and Levites, were laid up. Obed-edom is said to have had the charge of the treasures, etc. in 2 Ch 25:24.

16. Shupphim. i.e. adders, serpents. 1 Ch +7:12. Hosah. ver. 10, 11. Shallecheth. i.e. casting forth; casting down, *S#7996h. 18. Parbar. i.e. the outside place; he annulled the corn; a quarter of Jerusalem (Strong), *S#6503h. 1 Ch 26:18. Also 2 K 23:11. Parbar is most probably the same as parwar, which denotes suburbs (2 K 23:11), in which sense it is often used in the Chaldee Targums; and consequently this may be considered as leading to the suburbs.

19. Kore. Kore, or rather, Korhi, is essentially the same with Korah, merely having a paragogic yood. Nu 16:11, Korah.

There were more Levites employed as judges with the two tribes and a half on the other side of Jordan, than with all the rest of the tribes—there were two thousand seven hundred, whereas on the west side of Jordan there were only one thousand seven hundred. Either those remote tribes were not so well furnished as the rest with judges of their own, or because they lay farthest from Jerusalem, on the borders of the neighboring nations, and were thus much in danger of being infected with idolatry, they most needed the help of Levites to prevent their running into the abominations of the idolaters.

1 CHRONICLES 27

David's twelve captains, one for each month, 1-15. The princes of the twelve tribes, 16-22. The numbering of the people was hindered, 23, 24. David's several officers and counsellors, 25-34.

1. the chief fathers. The patriarchs, chief generals, or generals of brigade. This enumeration is widely different from that of the preceding. In that, we have the order and courses of the priests and Levites, in their ecclesiastical ministrations: in this, we have the account of the order of the civil service, what related simply to the political state of the king and the kingdom. Twenty-four persons, chosen out of David's worthies, each of whom had a second, were placed over 24,000 men, who all served a month at a time, in turn; and this was the whole of their service during the year, after which they attended to their own affairs. Thus the king had always on foot a regular force of 24,000, who served without expense to him or the state, and were not oppressed by the service, which took up only a twelfth part of their time; and by this plan he could, at any time, bring into the field 12 times 24,000 or 288,000 fighting men, independently of the 12,000 officers, which made in the whole an effective force of 300,000 soldiers; and all these men were prepared, disciplined, and ready at a call, without the smallest expense to the state or the king. These were, properly speaking, the militia of the Israelitish kingdom. captains of thousands. 1 Ch 12:20. 13:1. 15:25. Ex *18:25. Dt 1:15. 1 S 8:12. Mi +*5:2. served. 1 Ch 28:1. 2 Ch 17:12-19. 26:11-13. any matter. 1 K 5:14. month. 1 K 4:7, 27.

2. first month. called Nisan or Abib. Jashobeam. i.e. sitting of the people. 1 Ch +11:11. 2 S 23:8, Adino the Eznite. Zabdiel. i.e. endowed of God. Ne +11:14.

Nu 7:12. 10:14.

4. second month. called Ziv or Ijar. Dodai. i.e. beloved of the Lord; amatory; my beloved, *S#1737h. 1 Ch 11:12. 2 S 23:9, Dodo. Mikloth. i.e. lots; sprouts; triflings; staves, *S#4732h. 1 Ch 8:32. 9:37, 38. 27:4. (1) A chief man of Benjamin, 1 Ch 8:32; 9:37, 38. (2) Ruler over the course of the second month under David, 1 Ch 27:4.

5. third month. called Sivan. Benaiah. i.e. built up by Jah. 1 Ch +15:24. Or, "Benaiah, the son of Jehoiada the chief priest:" it was Jehoiada, and not Benaiah, who was a priest. 1 Ch 18:17. 1 K 4:4. Jehoiada. i.e. Jah has known. 2 K +11:4. chief priest. or, principal officer. 8. fifth month. called Ab. Shamhuth. i.e. desolation, astonishment; exaltation; destruction, *S#8049h. If this person was the same as Shammoth the Hararite, or Shammah the Harodite, it is probable that he took the denomination Izrahite from one of his progenitors of the name of Izrah, and derived the other from the place of his residence. 1 Ch 11:27, Shammoth the Harorite. 26:29. 2 S 23:25, Shammah the Harodite. Izrahite. i.e. he will arise; he will be bright, *S#3155h.

11. eighth month. called Marchesvan or Bul. Sibbecai. i.e. my thicket. 1 Ch +11:29. 2 S 21:18. Zarhites. Nu 26:20.

16. Furthermore. These persons, called "princes of the tribes," in ver. 22, and 1 Ch 28:1, appear to have been civil rulers over their several tribes, and honorary men, without pay, not unlike the lords lieutenants of our counties. In this enumeration there is no mention of the tribes of Gad and Asher, probably because they were joined to the neighboring tribes; or, perhaps, the account of these has been lost from the register. Eliezar. i.e. my God is help. Ge +15:2. Shephatiah. i.e. judged of Jah. 2 S +3:4.

23. David took not. It seems probable, from this passage, that Joab began, by David's order, to number the children, as well as adults, but was prevented from finishing the account, probably because the plagues had begun. The numbering of the effective men might have been deemed a political expedient; but pride and ostentation alone could dictate the numbering of minors and infants, especially as God had pronounced the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, innumerable. from twenty. Nu 1:18. he would increase. Ge 15:5. 22:17. He 11:12. like. ⁄138B, Ge +13:16.

The Hebrew shikmim, Syriac shekmo, and Arabic jummeez, is the sukomoros, or sycomore, of the Greeks, so called from sukos, a fig tree, and muros, a mulberry tree, because it resembles the latter in its leaves, and the former in its fruit. "The sycamore," says Mr. Norden (Travels into Egypt and Nubia, vol. i. p. 79), "is of the height of a beech, and bears its fruit in a manner quite different from other trees: it has them on the trunk itself, which shoots out little sprigs, in form of grape stalks, at the end of which grow the fruit close to one another, almost like a cluster of grapes. The tree is always green, and bears fruit several times in the year, without observing any certain seasons; for I have seen some sycamores that have given fruit two months after others. The fruit has the figure and smell of real figs, but is inferior to them in the taste, having a disgustful sweetness. Its color is a yellow, inclining to an ochre, shadowed by a flesh color. In the inside it resembles the common figs, excepting that it has a blackish coloring with yellow spots. This sort of tree is pretty common in Egypt; the people, for the greater part, live on its fruit, and think themselves well regaled when they have a piece of bread, a couple of sycamore figs, and a pitcher of water." 1 K 20:27. Baal-hanan. i.e. master of grace or favor. Ge +36:38. Gederite. i.e. inhabitants of Geder or Gederah (i.e. a wall or fence, Jsh +12:13; +15:36), *S#1451h. Joash. 1 Ch +7:8.

1 CHRONICLES 28

David assembles the chiefs of Israel; shows them how his purpose of building a temple had been disallowed, and relates the LORD'S special favor to him; and his promises to Solomon, 1-8. He charges Solomon to know and serve God, and to build the temple, 9, 10. He gives a pattern for the form of the several parts (as God had showed it to him), and gold and silver for the materials, 11-19. He encourages Solomon with the assurance of help, both from God, and from his people, 20, 21.

1 CHRONICLES 29

David shows the princes and people what treasures he had prepared for the building and service of the temple, 1-5. After his example, and at his exhortation, they offer liberally, 6-9. He adores and blesses God, and prays for the people and for Solomon, 10-19. The people worship, sacrifice, and feast with joy; and then make Solomon king the second time, 20-22. He reigns in majesty and prosperity, 23-25. David's long and prosperous reign, and happy death, 26-30.

Antiquity gave both stones this name, because of their resemblance to the nail of the finger. Ge 2:12. Ex 28:17, 20. 39:6, 13. Jb 28:16. Is 54:11, 12. Horace l. I. Od. xix. v. 6). Josephus (Bell. l. v. c. 5, 2.) says that the temple was built of large blocks of white marble, beautifully polished, so as to produce a most splendid appearance.

Plant. v. 5) says that "the thyon or thya tree grows near the temple of Jupiter Ammon (in Africa), and in the Cyrenaica; that it resembles the cypress in its boughs, leaves, stalk, and fruit; and that its wood (from its close texture) never rots." The LXX. render here peukina; and Josephus calls it Xula peukina, "torch" or "pine trees;" but cautions us against supposing that the wood was like what was known in his time by that name; for these "were to the sight like the wood of the fig tree, but more white and shining." The Syriac version has kaiso dekeesotho, probably cypress wood; and Dr. Shaw supposes it denotes the cypress. Several critics understand it to mean gummy wood; and Celsius queries whether it may not be the sandal tree, as the Rabbins and Dr. Geddes suppose. 1 K 10:11, almug trees.

It is supposed, with much probability, that the first measure means the cubit used in the time of Moses, contradistinguished from that used in Babylon, and which the Israelites used after their return from captivity: and, as these Books were written after the captivity, it was necessary for the writer to make this remark, lest it should be thought that the measurement was by the Babylonish cubit, which was a palm or one-sixth shorter than the cubit of Moses; which may serve to reconcile some variations in the historical books, with respect to numbers when applied to measures.

4. the porch. Jn 10:23. Ac 3:11. 5:12. an hundred and twenty. As the height of the temple was only thirty cubits, 120 seems too great a height for the porch; but the Syriac, Arabic, and LXX. in the codex Alexandrinus, have only twenty, probably reading, instead of maiah weesrim, "one hundred and twenty," ammoth esrim, "twenty cubits," which brings it within the proportion of the other measures.

In the parallel passage of Kings, instead of bekarim, "oxen," we have pekaim, "knops," in the form of colocynths (See on 1 K 6:18, and 2 K 4:39); which last is supposed by able critics to be the reading which ought to be received here; bekarim, "oxen," being a mistake for pekaim, "knops." Houbigant, however, contends that the words in both places are right; but that bakar does not signify an ox here, but a large kind of grape, according to its meaning in Arabic. But Dr. A. Clarke states that bakar, or bakarat, has no such meaning in Arabic, though the phrase aino lbikri, or "ox eye," signifies a species of black grape, very large, and of incredible sweetness; that consequently the criticism of this great man is not solid; and that the likeliest method of reconciling the two places is supposing a change in the letters as above. round. In the parallel passage, it is said to hold only two thousand baths; which some think may be reconciled by supposing the quantity of water which was commonly in it was 2000 baths, but that, if filled up to the top, it would hold 3000. But, as we have already seen that the Babylonish cubit was less than that of the ancient Hebrews (2 Ch 3:4n), it might be the same with measures of capacity; so that 2000 of the ancient Jewish baths might have been equal to 3000 of those used after the captivity. 2 CHRONICLES 6

Solomon blesses the people, and praises God, 1-11. His prayer at the dedication of the temple, 12-39. He concludes by earnestly entreating the Lord's special presence and blessing, 40-42.

6. But I have chosen Jerusalem. This clause is also not found in Kings. of the Greeks, as we learn from Josephus Ant. l. viii. c. 6), a celebrated city of Syria, situated in an oasis, or fertile spot of land, surrounded on all sides by a vast sandy desert, like an island in the midst of an ocean; according to Pliny (l. v. c. 25), 337 miles from Seleucia and Tigrim, 203 from the nearest part of the Mediterranean, and 176 from Damascus; according to Josephus, one day's journey west of the Euphrates, and six from Babylon; and according to Ptolemy, in lat. 34 degrees north, or that of Tripoli, and about 4 degrees more easterly; and it is described by Mr. Wood as "situated under a barren ridge of hills to the west, and open on the other sides to the desert;" "about six days' journey from Aleppo, and as much from Damascus, and about twenty leagues west of the Euphrates." Palmyra attained the height of its splendor when the royal city of Zenobia was conquered by the emperor Aurelian; became a Roman colony after the victories of Trajan; and was probably reduced to its present miserable state in the wars of the Saracens. Its magnificent ruins, however, scattered over an extent of several miles, sufficiently attest its former splendor and riches.

Conjectures respecting the location of Ophir are endless. Some have placed it in Hispaniola; and Postel and others think it was Peru. Bp. Huet says it was Zanguebar, on the eastern coast of Africa, the name Ophir being more particularly applied to the small country of Sophala on the same coast; which opinion Mr. Bruce has labored to support by many ingenious arguments. Grotius conjectures it to be a part of Arabia called Aphar by Arrian; while Bochart and others have placed it in the island of Ceylon, the Taprobanes of the ancients. Calmet supposes it to have been situated in Armenia; but his late learned Editor places it at the head of the Indus. Josephus (Ant. l. viii. c. 3) says that Ophir is the Indies, called the Gold country; by which he is supposed to mean Chersonesus Aurea, now Malacca, opposite Sumatra; and Le Poivre observes that the inhabitants of these places call their gold mines ophirs. More recently, Merrill F. Unger in his Bible Dictionary suggests Ophir was located in what is now Yemen in south-west Arabia. took thence. 1 K 9:28. Ec 2:8.

Mr. Bruce has given us the history of her and her descendants from Abyssinian records; and Josephus says that Sheba was the ancient name of the city of Meroe (south of Egypt, and sometimes comprehended in Ethiopia), and that this princess came from thence. Those who think the princess came from Arabia, rely chiefly on the fact that gold, silver, spices, and precious stones, which were the presents she made to Solomon, are the natural products of that country; and that it may well be placed at the uttermost part of the earth, as it borders on the southern ocean, and formerly they knew no land beyond it.

Geog. Heb. Exter. p. 98, etc.) supposes that the fleet coasted along the shore of Africa, doubling the Cape of Good Hope, and came to Tartessus, in Spain, and thence back again the same way; that this accounts for their three years' voyage out and home; and that Spain and the coasts of Africa furnish all the commodities which they brought back. More recently it has been determined that "ships of Tarshish" or "Tarshish ships" were in Solomon's time ore-bearing ships, a refining fleet; that Solomon exchanged the copper mined in the Arabah and smelted at Ezion-geber, where Solomon had a copper smeltery set up by Phoenician craftsmen, for gold, silver, ivory, apes, baboons (1 K 9:26, 28. 10:22). When Solomon had violated this law, and multiplied horses to excess (1 K 4:26), it was soon attended with those fatal consequences that the law foretold: for this wisest of kings having likewise, in violation of another law, married Pharaoh's daughter (the early fruits of this commerce), and then, by a repetition of the same crime, but a transgression of another law, had espoused more strange women (1 K 4:26. 11:1), they first, in defiance of a fourth law, persuaded him to build them idol temples for their use; and afterwards, against a fifth law, brought him to erect other temples for his own." ver. 25. 2 Ch 1:16. 1 K 10:28. 2 CHRONICLES 10

The Israelites, at Shechem, make Rehoboam king; and with Jeroboam require him to lighten their yoke, 1-5. Rehoboam, rejecting the advice of his father's counselors, and consulting with the young men, answers very roughly, 6-15. The ten tribes revolt, kill Hadoram, and drive away Rehoboam, 16-19.

It was a custom in different countries to educate with the heir to the throne, young noblemen of nearly the same age. This, as Calmet observes, answered two great and important ends: (1) It excited the prince to emulation; that he might, as far as possible, surpass in all manly exercises, and in all acts of prudence and virtue, those whom one day he was to surpass in the elevation and dignity of his station; (2) That he might acquire a correct knowledge of the disposition and views of those who were likely to be, under him, the highest officers of the state, and consequently know the better how to trust and employ them. To the preceding note the observation ought to be added that in this case, such an education, involving as it did the segregation of the young from the old, resulted in his exercise of very poor, even disastrous, judgment. A Biblical education does not practice age segregation, but lets the younger learn from the older (1 T 5:1, 2, 10, 14. T *2:1-5. 1 P 5:5).

Asa makes a league with Benhadad against Baasha, who is hindered from building Ramah; and Asa with the stones of it builds Geba and Mizpah, 1-6. In these verses we have an account of a remarkable itinerant ministry established by Jehoshaphat, in which three classes of men were employed: (1) the Princes; (2) the Levites; (3) the Priests. We may presume that the Princes instructed the people in the nature of the civil law and constitution of the kingdom; that the Levites instructed them in every thing that appertained to the temple service, and ritual law; and that the Priests instructed them in the nature and design of their religion. Thus the nation became throughly instructed in their duty to God, to the king, and to each other: they therefore became as one man; and against a people thus united, on such principles, no enemy could be successful. 2 CHRONICLES 18

Jehoshaphat joins affinity with Ahab, and agrees to go with him against Ramoth-gilead, 1-3. The false prophets assure them of success, 4, 5. At Jehoshaphat's request Micaiah is sent for, who foretells Ahab's death, and shows that his prophets were instigated by a lying spirit, 6-22. He is reviled and sent back to prison, 23-27. Ahab goes in disguise to the battle; where Jehoshaphat, in imminent danger, calls on God, and is preserved, 28-32. Ahab is slain by an arrow shot at a venture, 33, 34.

This is called kirn ('keren), and is only worn in reviews, or parades after victory." Such, it may be supposed, were the horns of iron which Zedekiah (who appears to have acted the hero returning from a military triumph) made for himself, when he presumed, in the name of Jehovah, to flatter his prince with the promise of victory: "Thus saith the Lord, With these thou shalt push Syria, until they be consumed." This exactly corresponds with the idea of a "chamber within a chamber;" and it would appear that Michaiah predicted, that Zedekiah should fly for shelter to a Harem, which we have seen was deemed inviolate (See on 1 S 19:16n). 1 K 20:30mg. 22:25mg. 2 K 9:2mg. 2 CHRONICLES 20

Jehoshaphat, alarmed by an invasion of the Moabites, Ammonites, and others, proclaims a fast, 1-4. His prayer, 5-13. Jahaziel, the prophet, assures him of a signal deliverance, 14-17. Jehoshaphat and his people receive the promise with adoring thankfulness, 18, 19. He exhorts them to believe, and appoints singers to praise the Lord, 20, 21. The invaders destroy one another, and the people of Judah gather immense spoils, 22-25. They bless God at Berachah, return in triumph, and enjoy peace, 26-30. Jehoshaphat's good reign and acts, 31-34. He joins with Ahaziah in sending ships to Tharshish, which are wrecked, according to the prediction of Eliezer, 35-37.

"The current of the story at large is this," says Dr. Lightfoot (Works, vol. i. p. 88): "Jehu slayeth Joram in the field of Jezreel, as Ahaziah and Joram were together: Ahaziah seeing this, flies, and gets into Samaria, and hides himself there. Jehu marcheth to Jezreel, and makes Jezebel dog's meat: from thence sends to Samaria for the heads of Ahab's children and posterity; which are brought him by night, and showed to the people in the morning. Then he marcheth to Samaria, and, by the way, slayeth forty-two of Ahab's kinsmen, and findeth Jehonadab, the father of the Rechabites. Coming into Samaria, he maketh search for Ahaziah: they find him hid, bring him to Jehu, and he commands to carry him towards Gur, by Ibleam, and there to slay him. It is highly probable, therefore, that the arms of David which Jehoiada delivered to the captains of hundreds, "which were in the house of God," were laid up in the tabernacle by David when he resigned the command of his armies to his generals; and there is reason to believe that his conduct, in this respect, was followed by many of his companions in arms.

Joash reigns well during Jehoiada's life, and zealously repairs the temple, 1-14. Jehoiada dies, and is honorably buried, 15, 16. These words were prophetic, and not imprecatory; and should be rendered, as Houbigant proposes, in the future tense: "The Lord will look upon it, and avenge it." The event soon verified this prediction; for before the year was expired, the Syrians came up against Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people, and Joash himself was slain in his bed by his own servants. Many circumstances served to aggravate this barbarous act. Zechariah was a high priest and a prophet, upright and unblameable in the discharge of his high offices; this murder was perpetrated within the very precincts of the courts of the Lord; and this truly good man was by blood the nearest relative of Joash, and the son of the man who had saved him from being murdered, and raised him to the throne! 2 CHRONICLES 25

Amaziah at first reigns well, and justly punishes his father's murderers, 1-4. He gathers a great army, and hires, for a hundred talents, a hundred thousand Israelites against Edom: but, having paid the money, he dismisses them at the word of a prophet; and they depart in great anger, 5-10. He smites the Edomites, and exercises great cruelty towards the captives, 11, 12. The Israelites, on their return, spoil the cities of Judah, 13. Amaziah serves the gods of Edom, and rejects the admonitions of a prophet, 14-16. He challenges Joash, who in vain warns him; he is vanquished, and Jerusalem spoiled, 17-24. The rest of his reign, 25, 26. He is slain by a conspiracy, 27, 28.

No doubt those wicked men, Jozachar and Jehozabad, who murdered his father, had considerable power and influence; and therefore he found it dangerous to bring them to justice, till he was assured of the loyalty of his other officers: when this was clear, he called them to an account, and justly put them to death for treason and murder; for, if even these conspirators against Joash intended to avenge upon him the death of Zechariah, they acted without commission from that God "to whom vengeance belongeth."

The enmity between Israel and Edom seems to have been reciprocal and deeply malignant. The victorious king and his army considered every individual of Edom as a traitor and rebel; and so adjudged them to death, and acted on this judgment. But their conduct was wholly inexcusable, and could only perpetuate rancor to future generations, and provoke the surviving Edomites to cruel retaliations, whenever they had it in their power. the rock. 21. they saw one another. That is, "they fought against each other." To face an enemy, or to face one another, is still a common expression. The reason of this war was evidently the injury the army of Joash had done to the unoffending inhabitants of Judah. The ravages committed by them were totally unprovoked, base, and cowardly: they fell upon women, old men, and children, and butchered them in cold blood, when all the effective men were gone with their king against the Edomites. The quarrel of Amaziah was certainly just, yet he was put to the rout: he fell, and Judah with him, as Joash had said; and the reason was, because "it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hands of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom." This was the reason why the Israelites triumphed. ver. 17. Beth-shemesh. Jsh 21:16. 1 S 6:9, 19, 20. Je +43:13.

With respect to the towers which Uzziah built in the wilderness (ver. 10), Mr. Harmer appears to have given a truer view of the subject than commentators in general have done, who suppose that they were conveniences made only for sheltering the shepherds from bad weather, or to defend them from incursions of enemies; for they might rather be designed to keep the nations that pastured there in awe, and also to induce them quietly to pay the tribute to which the 8th verse seems to refer. 2 CHRONICLES 28

Ahaz reigns very wickedly, 1-4. He is defeated with terrible slaughter of his army by the kings of Syria and Israel, 5-7. The Israelites lead to Samaria an immense number of captives, 8. The people are induced, by the remonstrance of a prophet, and the interference of the princes, to treat them kindly and send them home, 9-15. Ahaz, attacked by the Edomites and the Philistines, sends to the king of Assyria, but receives no benefit from his assistance, 16-21. In his distress he adds to his idolatries, 22-25. He dies, and is succeeded by Hezekiah, 26, 27.

To this beautiful speech nothing can be added by the best comment: it is simple, humane, pious, and overwhelmingly convincing; and it is no wonder that it produced the effect here described. That there was much humanity, as well as firmness, in the heads of the children of Ephraim, who joined with the prophet of Jehovah on this occasion, their subsequent conduct, as detailed in the fifteenth verse, sufficiently proves. They did not barely dismiss these most unfortunate captives, but they took that very spoil which their victorious army had taken, and with it clothed, shod, fed, and anointed these distressed people, set the feeblest of them upon asses, and escorted them safely to Jericho! We can scarcely find a parallel to this in the universal history of wars which savage man has carried on against his fellows from the foundation of the world. The compliance also of the whole army, in leaving both the captives and spoil to the disposal of the princes, was really wonderful, and perhaps unparalleled in history. Both the princes and the army are worthy to be held up to the admiration and imitation of mankind. because the Lord God. ver. 5. Jg 3:8. Ps 69:26. Is 10:5-7. 47:6. Je 15:17, 18. 23. For he sacrificed. This passage, says Mr. Hallet, greatly surprised me; for the sacred historian himself is here represented as saying, "The gods of Damascus had smitten Ahaz." But it is impossible to suppose that an inspired author should say this; for the Scripture everywhere represents the heathen idols as nothing and vanity, and as incapable of doing either good or hurt. All difficulty is avoided if we follow the old Hebrew copies from which the Greek translation was made: "And king Ahaz said, I will seek to the gods of Damascus which have smitten me." 2 Ch 25:14. 2 K 16:12, 13. Damascus. Heb. qeber, Ge +23:4. the kings of Israel. Or, "the kings of Judah;" the name Israel being sometimes applied, by the writer of this book, in a general way, to Judah. The Hebrews were accustomed to honor the memory of those kings who had reigned well, by depositing their remains in the royal cemetery. On the contrary, those who died under the disapprobation of the people, as a mark of posthumous disgrace, were denied interment with their predecessors, and were buried in some other place in Jerusalem. So it was with Ahaz, who, though brought into the city, was not buried in the sepulchres of the kings of Judah. It was doubtless with a design to make a suitable impression on the minds of their kings while living, that such distinctions were observed. They might thus restrain them from evil, or excite them to good, according as they were fearful of being execrated, or desirous of being honored, when dead.

2 CHRONICLES 29

Hezekiah reigns well, opens the doors of the temple, and exhorts the priests and Levites to prepare everything for the worship of God, 1-11. They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the temple and its vessels, 12-19. Hezekiah offers solemn sacrifices; and the Levites show more zeal than the priests, 20-36.

Hezekiah proclaims a solemn passover to be kept in the second month, and calls on both Judah and Israel to unite in celebrating it, 1-5. Hezekiah prays for those who are not ceremonially clean, and is graciously answered, 17-20. They keep the feast fourteen days with great joy, 21-26. The priests bless the people, 27.

2 CHRONICLES 31

The people destroy the idols, and their temples and altars, through the cities of Judah and in Ephraim and Manasseh, 1. Hezekiah orders the courses of the priests and Levites, and provides for their maintenance, as well as for the stated sacrifices, 2-4. The people readily bring their firstfruits and tithes, 5-10. Hezekiah appoints officers to dispose of these oblations, 11-19. A high commendation of his zeal and integrity, 20, 21.

"This liquor," says Dr. Shaw (Travels, p. 143), "which has a more luscious sweetness than honey, is of the consistence of a thin syrup, but quickly grows tart and ropy, acquiring an intoxicating quality, and giving by distillation an agreeable spirit, or araky, according to the general name of these people for all hot liquors extracted by the alembic." 2 CHRONICLES 32

Sennacherib invades Judah; and Hezekiah fortifies Jerusalem, and encourages the people, 1-8. Sennacherib's blasphemous messages and letters, 9-19. Hezekiah and Isaiah pray for deliverance: an angel destroys the Assyrian army; and their king, when returned to Nineveh, is slain by his sons when worshipping his idol, 20, 21. Hezekiah prospers and is renowned, 22, 23. In his sickness he prays, and is miraculously recovered: his heart is lifted up, but he afterwards humbles himself, 24-26. His riches and works, 27-30. His misconduct in respect of the ambassadors from the king of Babylon, 31. He dies, his memory is honored; and Manasseh succeeds him, 32, 33.

incentives to idolatry. Amon's conduct is recorded as like his father Manasseh, in sacrificing to graven images; by which some think it is an evidence that Manasseh did not truly repent, but they forget how many good kings had wicked sons. In one point of view Manasseh was defective, although it cannot be supposed that it affected his eternal state; for when he cast out the images, he did not utterly deface and destroy them, according to the law in Dt 7:5, which required, moreover, that the graven images should be burnt with fire. How necessary that law was, this instance shows; for the carved images being only thrown aside, and not burnt, Amon knew where to find them, soon set them up, and sacrificed to them. 2 CHRONICLES 34

Josiah reigns well, and destroys idolatry both in Judah and Israel, 1-7. He provides for the repair of the temple, 8-13. Hilkiah finds the book of the law, and reads it before the king; who is greatly alarmed, and sends to inquire of God by the prophetess Huldah, 14-22. Huldah predicts the destruction of Jerusalem, but not till after Josiah's death, 23-28. He causes the law to be read in solemn assembly, and renews the covenant between God and the people, 29-33.

"These scriptures suffice to refute the assertion of some in our time that the book which Hilkiah found in the temple was of comparatively recent compilation, with the name of Moses attached to it to give it authority in the eyes of the king and his people. The assertion is as absurd as it is wicked. That which was brought to light once more was God's own revelation to His people, against which, unhappily they so frequently transgressed. In the stirring times of Josiah, when the Spirit of God was working to give Jehovah's poor fickle people one more opportunity, the rediscovery of the book of the law had tremendous effect upon the heart and conscience of the king; and, we may hope, upon the hearts and consciences of many of his subjects (W. 2 CHRONICLES 35

Josiah causes a solemn passover to be celebrated, 1-19. He is slain in battle against Pharaoh-necho, 20-24. Great lamentations are made for him, 25. His acts and goodness, 26, 27.

1. Josiah. The whole solemnity was performed with great exactness according to the law, and upon that account there was none like it since Samuel's time; for even in Hezekiah's passover there were several irregularities. Bp. Patrick observes, that in this also it exceeded the other passovers which preceding kings had kept, that though Josiah was by no means so rich as David, or Solomon, or Jehoshaphat, yet he furnished the whole congregation with beasts for sacrifice, both paschal and eucharistical, at his own proper cost and charge, which was more than any king ever did before. 2 Ch ch. 30. 2 K 23:21-23. the fourteenth. Ex 12:6. Nu 9:3. Dt 16:1-8. Ezr 6:19. Ezk 45:21. Josiah's solemnization of the passover, which is merely alluded to at 2 K 23:21, is very particularly related here—while the destruction of idolatry is largely related in the Kings, and here only touched upon. The feasts of the Lord God, appointed by the ceremonial law, were very numerous; but the passover was the chief. It was the first which was solemnized in the night wherein Israel came out of Egypt, and ushered in those which were afterwards instituted: and it was the last great feast which was held in the night wherein Christ was betrayed, before the vail of the temple was rent in twain. By means of this feast, both Josiah and Hezekiah revived religion in their day.

The regulations formed by David, and established by Solomon, concerning the courses of the priests and Levites, were committed to writing, and preserved, for them to refer to continually. Josiah, as well as Hezekiah, required the priests and Levites to attend to their several duties, and encouraged them therein, but he neither added, altered, nor retrenched any thing: he merely enforced what had been established in the law, and in the regulations made by David and the contemporary prophets: "the commandment of the king...was by the word of the Lord." 1 Ch ch. 23-26. and according. 2 Ch 8:14.

22. Nevertheless. Josiah's conduct in this affair has been treated with great severity; and he has been charged with engaging rashly in an unjust war, and disregarding the express command of God. But Scripture no where condemns him; and Pharaoh, in marching through Josiah's territories, against his will, certainly committed an act of hostility. It is evident that Josiah was in possession of the whole land of Israel (2 Ch 26:6); and probably he held the northern parts of it as a grant from the king of Babylon; and was not only in alliance with him, but bound to guard his frontiers against hostile invaders. He may, therefore, be fairly justified from the charge of unjustly meddling in a war that did not belong to him. It is true the ambassadors assured Josiah, that "God had commanded Pharaoh to make haste;" and he is therefore said not to have "hearkened to the words of Necho, from the mouth of God." But Necho produced no proof that he was a prophet of Jehovah; and the word he employed, elohim, may denote gods or idols (Ex 12:12; 20:23; 1 S 5:7; 1 K 11:5; Ps *96:5; *97:7); and critics have noticed that the expression, "from the mouth of God," is not used when the true God is meant. but disguised. 2 Ch 18:29. EZRA 1

Cyrus issues a proclamation, allowing the Jews to go up to Jerusalem and build the temple; and exhorting those who stayed behind to assist them, 1-4. Many prepare to return, and others contribute to the expense, 5, 6. Cyrus restores the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar, 7-11.

1. A.M. 3468. B.C. 536. Now in the. 2 Ch *36:22, 23. Cyrus. Cyrus is said to have been the son of Cambyses, king of Persia, and Mandane, daughter of Astyages, king of Media: he was born about 600 years before Christ, and died at the age of 70, after a reign of 30 years. He was mentioned by name, and his conquests foretold, by the prophet Isaiah, above a century before his birth. Josephus (Ant. l. ii. c. 2) accounts for the partiality he evinced towards the Jews, from the circumstance of these prophecies being shown him, probably by Daniel. by the mouth. Some of the vessels of the temple had been cut in pieces by the victors (2 K 24:13), but the most valuable had been providentially preserved through all the succeeding revolutions, and were now ordered by Cyrus to be restored to Sheshbazzar; and so were at last brought back to Jerusalem, and again employed in the service of the sanctuary. It is generally agreed that the ark was lost or destroyed (Je 3:16n) when the temple was burnt: and it is likely, that by the absence of it, and the visible glory, that "God would signify, he was withdrawing his presence from that house of stone, to dwell in the temple of Christ's body, who offered himself to God, and thereby put an end to these figurative sacrifices" (Bp. Patrick, cited by Scott). Je +*3:16n. Nebuchadnezzar. 2 K 24:13. 25:13-16. 2 Ch 36:7, 10, 18. Je 27:21, 22. 28:3-6. Da 1:2. 5:2, 3, 23.

IN ESDRAS: (1) gold cups, 1000; (2) silver cups, 1000; (3) silver censers, 29; (4) gold vials, 30; (5) silver vials, 2410; other vessels, 1000; total, 5469; surplus, 69. It is supposed that they actually amounted to 5400, but that only the chief of them were specified, the spoons, etc., being omitted. Young suggests that this number (5400) probably included those given in presents, ver. 6 above. captivity. Heb. transportation. Ezr 4:1mg. Mt 1:11, 12.

2. at Achmetha. or, Ecbatana, or, in a coffer. i.e. place of assemblage; brother of death; citadel, or summer house, *S#307h. Probably from the Persian kham, "a house for a summer residence," with a prefix aleph, and the Chaldee termination tha, most likely denotes Ecbatana, as the Vulgate and Josephus (Ant. l. xi. c. 4. sec. 6) read, the summer residence of the Persian monarchs (Xenophon, Cyrop. l. viii. c. 6, sec. 1). It was situated in a mountainous region at the foot of mount Orontes (Diodorus, l. ii. c. 1; Polybius, l. x.), or Jasonius, according to Ammianus (l. xxiii. c. 28), on the southern confines of Media and Persia, and according to Pliny (l. vi. c. 1. 13, 27), 750 miles from Seleucia the Great, 20 miles from the Caspian passes, 450 miles from Susa, and the same from Gazae Atropatene, and in lat. 37 deg. 45 min., long. 88 deg., according to Ptolemy. The building of the city is ascribed to Semiramis by Diodorus, but to Deioces by Eusebius (in Chron. l.1), and Herodotus (l. i. c. 98), who states that it was surrounded by seven walls, strong and ample, built in circles one within another, rising each above each by the height of their respective battlements; each being distinguished by a different color,—the first white, the second black, the third purple, the fourth blue, the fifth orange, the sixth plated with silver, and the seventh with gold. The largest of these was nearly the extent of Athens, i.e. 200 furlongs, according to Dion Chrysostom (Orat. vi.); but Diodorus Siculus states the circumference of Ecbatana to be 250 furlongs.—Within the inner circle stood the king's palace and the royal treasury, so much celebrated for its splendor and riches by Polybius. It is highly probable, as D'Anville and Major Rennel suppose, that the present Hamadan, whose ruins attest its former splendor, occupies the sight of Ecbatana. It is situated in Al Gebal, at the foot of the lofty mountain Alwend, about 80 leagues from Ispahan, and also from Bagdad. Medes. i.e. measure; abounding; garment; extended of the Lord, *S#4075h. These rivers were also called respectively, Anzabas and Zabas, the Caprus and Lycus of Ptolemy; the former of which he places, at its source, in long. 79 degrees, lat. 39 1/2 degrees, and at its junction with the Tigris, in long. 79 1/2 degrees, lat. 36 degrees, 6 minutes; and the latter, at its source, in long. 78 degrees, lat. 39 degrees; and where it falls into the Tigris, in long. 79 degrees, lat. 36 1/2 degrees. Sir J. Chardin, however, in a MS. note, cited by Harmer (ch. xi. Ob. 87), mentioned a factitious metal used in the East, and highly esteemed there, which might probably be of an origin as ancient as Ezra. He says, "I have heard some Dutch gentlemen speak of a metal in the island of Sumatra, and among the Macassars, much more esteemed than gold, which royal personages alone are privileged to wear. It is a mixture, if I remember right, of gold and steel, or copper and steel." He afterwards added, "calmbac is the name of this metal, which is composed of gold and copper." precious. According to a passage in Justin Martyr's Dialogue with Trypho, a Jew (sec. 72), Ezra offered a paschal lamb on this occasion, and addressed the people thus: "And Ezra said to the people, This passover is our Savior and our Refuge; and if ye will be persuaded of it, and let it enter into your hearts, that we are to humble to Him in a sign, and afterwards shall believe in Him, this place shall not be destroyed for ever, saith the Lord of hosts; but, if ye will not believe in Him, nor hearken to his preaching, ye shall be a laughing-stock to the Gentiles." This was probably a marginal note added by some early Christian.

To be in such a place of trust he must have been in the king's confidence; for no eastern potentate would have a cup-bearer to whom he could not trust his life, poison being often administered in that way. It was an office much desired, because it gave access to the king in those seasons of hilarity when men are most disposed to grant favors. Ne 2:1. Ge 40:2, 9-13, 21, 23. 41:9.

NEHEMIAH 2

Artaxerxes, observing Nehemiah sad before him, asks the cause, 1, 2. Nehemiah is afraid, assigns the reason, prays, petitions the king, and obtains authority to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, 3-8. He delivers the king's letters to the governors beyond the river; the enemies of the Jews are much grieved; and he arrives at Jerusalem, 9-11. He examines the state of the walls secretly by night, 12-16. He encourages the Jews to build, 17, 18. The scorn and menaces of their enemies, and his answer, 19, 20.

Probably the king spoke as if he had some suspicion that Nehemiah harbored some bad design, and that his face indicated some conceived treachery, or remorse; and, indeed, the words rendered sad, and sorrow of heart, might be rendered evil, and wickedness of heart.

Nehemiah both prayed to God, and asked the king's assistance, just as Jesus when on earth, though he was the creator of the worlds, asked assistance when he wanted a drink of water (Jn 4:7). So in the work of God, contrary to the opinion of some, it is not unspiritual or unscriptural to make needs, financial and otherwise, known to others, to obtain assistance for the work of God. If it please. When Nehemiah had prayed for the relief of his countrymen, and perhaps in David's words, Ps 51:18, he did not sit still and say, "Let God now do his own work, for I have no more to do;" but set himself to do what he could towards it; and here we find that the people were of one heart with Nehemiah. Our prayers must be seconded with our serious endeavors, or else we mock God. Nearly four months had passed, namely, from Chisleu to Nisan (November to March), before Nehemiah made his application to the king for leave to go to Jerusalem; either because the winter was not a proper time for such a journey, and he would not make a motion till he could pursue it, or because it was so long before his month of waiting upon the king came, and there was no coming into his presence until called for. Est 4:11. We are not thus limited to certain moments in our addresses to the King of kings, but have liberty of access to him at all times—to the throne of grace we never come unseasonably.

NEHEMIAH 3

The names and order of those who built the walls of Jerusalem, 1-32.

1. Eliashib. Ne 12:10. 13:28. the sheep gate. This gate is supposed to have immediately communicated with the temple, and to have been called the sheep gate, because the sheep intended for sacrifice passed through it. But, after all which learned men have written on this subject, which is but of little interest, we scarcely know any thing about these gates—what they were—why called by these names—or in what part of the wall they were situated, beyond what may be learned from the parallel passages. Dr. Pococke conjectures that the Mountains of the Franks, called also the Mount of Bethulia, from a village of that name near it, west-north-west of Tekoa, is the ancient Beth-haccerem; the position of which seems to agree with the citadel of Herodium, built by Herod, on a moderate-sized hill, sixty furlongs from Jerusalem (Josephus, Ant. l. xiv. c. 13, sec. 9. l. xv. c. 9. sec. 4). Matthew Poole notes that this is proverbial speech, such as is frequent amongst the Latins, as when they say of a man pretending kindness with evil design, "He carries bread in one hand, and a stone in another." NEHEMIAH 5

The poor Jews complain of the debts which they had unavoidably contracted, and which compelled them to mortgage their lands, and even sell their children, 1-5. Nehemiah rebukes the rich usurers, who oppress their brethren; and obliges them to engage by oath to make full restitution, 6-13. He refuses the governor's customary allowances, and maintains great hospitality at his own charge, 14-19.

Here the bey's twelve sheep are equal to Nehemiah's one ox and six choice sheep; and probably the mode of living between the two was nearly alike. 26. The men. The Septuagint reads here the same as in the parallel place, "The children of Bethlehem, one hundred twenty and three; the children of Netopha, fifty and six." The Alexandrian MS. of the Septuagint inserts here, "the children of Akoud, the children of Outa, the children of Ketar, the children of Agab," or Hagab: see the parallel passages. Shalmai. i.e. clothed; my garments; peace offering of the Lord, *S#8014h. In the parallel passage not only the Keri and Septuagint, but many of Dr. Kennicott's MSS. read Shalmai, as here. A more extensive collation of MSS. would doubtless tend still more to harmonize both the names and numbers. Ezr 2:46, Shamlai.

52. Meunim. i.e. a residence; habitations, *S#4586h. Ne 7:52. Ezr 2:50. The first of these variations is attributable to the translation, the original being uniformly "Meunim;" and the latter arises from the mutation of wav and yood, and insertion of sheen, though in the parallel passage the Kethiv is "Nephisim;" and here the Keri and many MSS. have "Nephishesim." Ezr 2:50, Mehunim, Nephusim. Nephishesim. i.e. expansions; we shall shake the spoilers; refreshed of spices, *S#5300h. Ne 7:52. Ezr 2:50.

58. Jaala. i.e. a wild goat, *S#3279h. Ne 7:58. Ezr 2:56. The variation of "Jaalah" and "Jaala" merely arises from the mutation of hay into aleph, according to the Chaldee dialect. Ezr 2:56, Jaalah.

59. Amon. i.e. architect; workman; artificer; to nourish; a multitude; to be faithful, *S#526h. Ne 7:59. 1 K 22:26. 2 K 21:18, 19, 23, 24, 25. 1 Ch 3:14. 2 Ch 18:25. 33:20, 21, 22, 23, 25. Instead of Amon, two of De Rossi's MSS. have Amin, and the LXX. have "Emim," which nearly approaches the Ami of Ezra. Ezr 2:57, Ami.

The first of these variations only exists in the translation; the original being uniformly "Tel-harsha:" the latter simply arises from the insertion of a wav; being written Addan, in the parallel passage, and "Addon" here. Ezr 2:59, Tel-harsa, Addan. Addon. i.e. foundation; depression; calamity, *S#114h. seed. or, pedigree.

69. Here Jerome adds, in the Vulgate, "Thus far do the words extend which were written in the register; what follows belongs to the history of Nehemiah." This addition is not found in the Hebrew, or any ancient version: it is also wanting in the Paris and Complutensian Polyglotts; but is found in the Editio Prima of the Vulgate. What follows, however, seems to relate to a distinct oblation from that recorded in Ezra; and was probably made after the people were registered by Nehemiah, who was the Tirshatha, or governor, at this time, as Zerubbabel had been at the first return of the Jews from captivity. Blessed be God that our faith and hope are not in names and numbers, genealogy and chronology, but on the great things of the law and gospel. Whatever is given to the work of God and his cause will surely be remembered by him (He 6:10).

NEHEMIAH 11

The rulers, with every tenth man taken by lot, and those who offered voluntarily, dwell at Jerusalem, 1, 2. Their names, 3-19. The rest dwell in other cities, 20-36.

1. the rulers. Ne 7:4, 5. Dt 17:8, 9. Ps 122:5. cast lots. Jerusalem certainly had many inhabitants at this time, but not sufficient to preserve the city, which was now encompassed with a wall, the building of which was going on fast. Nehemiah, therefore, obliged one tenth of the country people to come and dwell in it, that the population might be sufficient for the defense of the city. Some volunteered their services, which was at that time considered a sacrifice to patriotism; as Jerusalem then afforded very few advantages, and was a place of considerable danger: hence "the people blessed them that willingly offered themselves." NEHEMIAH 12

The priests and Levites who came up with Zerubbabel, 1-9. The succession of high priests after the captivity, 10, 11. The names of some chief priests, 12-21; and of some eminent Levites, 22-26. The solemnity of dedicating the wall, 27-43. The offices and portions of the priests and Levites, 44-47.

1. We have in this chapter a record of little more than the names of a great many priests and Levites, that were eminent in their day among the returned Jews. It is good to know what our godly ancestors and predecessors were, that we may learn thereby what we should be. the priests. Ne 7:7. Ezr 2:1, 2. Zerubbabel. 1 Ch 3:17-19. Ezr 3:8. 4:2. 5:2. (1) One who returned with Zerubbabel, Ezr 2:2. Called Nehum, Ne 7:7. (2) A Persian governor in Samaria, Ezr 4:8. (3) A Levite who helped build the wall, Ne 3:17. (4) One who sealed the covenant, Ne 10:25. (5) One of the priests who returned with Zerubbabel, Ne 12:3. Perhaps the same as Number 1. Meremoth. ver. 15, Meraioth.

4. Iddo. i.e. timely. Ezr +5:1. Ginnetho. i.e. gardener; his protection, *S#1599h. Instead of Ginnetho, many MSS. and Vulgate have Ginnethon. ver. 16, Ginnethon. Abijah. Lk 1:5, Abia.

ness; ornament of the Lord; adorned of Jah; shaken of Jah, *S#4573h. The variation between Modiah and Maadiah merely arises from the elision of wav; the LXX. however, in ver. 17, have "Moadai." ver. 17, Moadiah. Bilgah. i.e. cheerfulness; desistance; consolation, reviving, *S#1083h. Ne 12:5, 18. 1 Ch 24:14. (1) A descendant of Aaron, 1 Ch 24:14. (2) A chief of the priests who returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, Ne 12:5, 7. Compare Bilgai, Ne +10:8.

7. Sallu. i.e. elevation. 1 Ch +9:7. The variation of "Sallu" and "Sallai" is simply caused by the mutation of wav and yood. ver. 20, Sallai. Amok. i.e. to be deep; deep, unsearchable, *S#5987h. Ne 12:7, 20. the chief. "The chief of the priests" seem to have been the heads of the courses established by David, 1 Ch 24:18. of Jeshua. ver. 1. Ezr 3:2. Hg 1:1. Zc 3:1.

8. Jeshua. Ne 7:43. 9:4. 10:9-13. Mattaniah. Ne 11:17, 22. the thanksgiving. That is, The psalms of thanksgiving. or, confession. ver. 24. 1 Ch 9:33.

9. over against. Ps 134:1-3. watches. or, charges. Young notes, of which there were 24; see 1 Ch 23:6; 26:12.

10. Jeshua. i.e. a savior. ver. 26. 1 Ch 6:3-15. The high-priest. Joiakim. i.e. whom Jehovah sets up; Jehovah will establish, *S#3113h. Ne 12:10, 10, 12, 26. Joiada. i.e. whom Jehovah cares for; Jehovah-known, *S#3111h. Ne 3:6, Jehoiada. 12:10, 11, 22. 13:28. (1) A son of Paseah, who repaired a gate of Jerusalem, Ne 3:6, Jehoiada. (2) A high priest, great grandson of Jeshua, Ne 12:10. Eliashib. Ne 3:1. 13:4, 7, 28.

11. Jonathan. i.e. Jah hath given. 1 S +13:2. Jaddua. i.e. known; celebrated, *S#3037h. Ne 10:21. 12:11, 22. (1) One who sealed the covenant, Ne 10:21. (2) One of the high priests, Ne 12:11, 22. Jaddua is supposed to be Jaddus the high priest, who went in his pontifical robes to meet Alexander the Great, when advancing to destroy Jerusalem; who was so struck with his appearance, that he forbore all hostilities, and granted many privileges to the Jews (332 B.C.). According to Eusebius, he was high priest from A.M. 3665 to 3982. Died about the same time as Alexander, 323 B.C. (Josephus, Antiq. xi. viii. 4, 5, 7). It is evident that he was high priest long after the events which are mentioned at the close of this book, for Joiada then filled that office, Ne 13:28; and as "Darius the Persian" (ver. 22) is supposed to mean the last king of Persia, who was subdued by Alexander, about a hundred years after the principal transactions recorded in this book, this verse, and the twenty-second, must have been added by another hand after the death of Nehemiah (ver. 26).

12. the chief. ver. 22. 1 Ch 9:33, 34. 15:12. 24:6-31. Seraiah. i.e. head of Jah. ver. 1. 2 S +8:17. Meraiah. i.e. rebellion against Jah; lifted up of the Lord, *S#4811h.

14. Melicu. i.e. my reign or counsel; my royalty, *S#4409h. ver. 2, Malluch. In this passage the form "Malluchi," in itself an unessential variation, is probably due to dittography. The final letter of "Malluchi" is the initial letter of the following word, and moreover is not found in the Septuagint. The consonants of "Malluchi" are written in the Hebrew text, but were read "Melicu" (Davis Bible Dictionary). Shebaniah. Two MSS. and Vulgate in ver. 3, have Shebaniah; and here many MSS. have Shechaniah. ver. 3, Shechaniah.

15. Harim. ver. 3, Rehum. Meraioth. i.e. rebellious; rebellions. ver. 3, Meremoth. *S#4812h. Ne 11:11. 12:15. 1 Ch 6:6, 7, 52. 9:11. Ezr 7:3. (1) One in the line of priests before the captivity, 1 Ch 6:6, 7, 52; and a progenitor of Ezra, Ezr 7:3. (2) A priest of the line of Azariah, or Seraiah, 1 Ch 9:11; Ne 11:11. Jerusalem was the holy city, and the wall was built under the immediate superintendence and blessing of Jehovah: it was therefore proper that it should be dedicated to that God who was there worshipped by solemn praises, prayers, and sacrifices. The dedication seems to have consisted in processions of the most eminent persons around the walls, with thanksgivings to God, who had enabled them to bring the work to so happy a conclusion; and, no doubt, to all this were added a particular consecration of the city to God, and the most earnest invocation that he would take it under his guardianship, and defend it and its inhabitants against their enemies. NEHEMIAH 13

On reading the law, Israel separates from the mixed multitude, 1-3. Eliashib, having, during Nehemiah's absence, prepared a chamber at the temple for Tobiah, Nehemiah on his return, being grieved and indignant, causes the chambers to be cleansed, 4-9. He reforms abuses concerning tithes and offerings, 10-14. He prevents the profanation of the sabbath, 15-18. He shuts the gates, and sets a watch at them, 19-22. He opposes those who had married strange wives, and drives away the grandson of Eliashib, 23-28. His other services and prayers, 29-31.

Ahasuerus, king of Persia, makes a royal feast, 1-9. He sends for Vashti, his queen, who refuses to come, 10-12. By the advice of his counselors, he divorces her, and asserts, by a public decree, the authority of men over their wives, 13-22.

By advice of his servants, Ahaseurus causes fair virgins to be sought out in every province of his kingdom, that he may choose a queen, 1-4. Esther had been brought up by Mordecai, 5-7. She obtains favor with the keeper of the women, pleases the king; and is made queen, having observed Mordecai's directions, 8-20. Mordecai discovers a plot against the king; the criminals are punished; and his service is registered in the chronicles of the kingdom, 21-23.

Haman is advanced by the king, who commands his servants to bow down to him; but Mordecai refuses to do it, 1, 2. Haman, being informed, in revenge, purposes to destroy the whole Jewish nation, 3-6. By calumniating the Jews, he obtains a decree from the king to extirpate the nation, and publishes it through all the provinces, 8-15.

Plutarch tells us, that after Crassus had dedicated the tenth of all he had to Hercules, he entertained the Roman people at 10,000 tables, and distributed to every citizen as much corn as was sufficient for three months; and, after all these expenses, he had 7100 Roman talents left, which amount to more than 1,500,000l. The fact related in this verse was unquestionably the reason why Esther was raised to regal honors, by the overruling providence of God:—she was therefore bound in gratitude to do this service for God, else she would not have answered the end of her elevation: and she need not fear the miscarriage of the enterprise, for if God designed her for it, he would surely bear her through and give success. It appeared by the event that Mordecai spoke prophetically, when he modestly conjectured that Esther came to the kingdom that she might be the instrument of the Jew's deliverance. Mordecai thoroughly believed that it was a cause which one way or other would certainly be carried, and which, therefore, she might safely venture upon. Instruments might fail, but God's covenant cannot. There is a wise design in all the providences of God, which is unknown to us till it is accomplished; but it will prove in the issue that all is intended for and center in the good of those who trust in him.

ESTHER 5

ESTHER, venturing uncalled before the king, is graciously received; and, being encouraged to make her request, she invites the king and Haman to a banquet, 1-5 Being again asked what was her request, she invites them to another banquet the next day, 6-8. Haman, proud of this distinction, and elated by prosperity, is yet disquieted by Mordecai's neglect, and amidst his vain-glorying complains of it to his friends and his wife, 9-13. By their advice he erects a gallows for Mordecai's execution the next morning, 14.

With them was served up excellent Shiraz wine. After an hour's time, the sweetmeats were removed, to make way for the more substantial part of the entertainment, such as rice, boiled and roast mutton, etc. When the company had been at table an hour and a half, warm water was brought, in a ewer of gold, for washing, and grace being said, they began to retire without speaking a word, according to the custom of the country." ver. 8. On the day appointed, the Jews, aided by the rulers, slay their enemies; and among the rest are five hundred men in Shushan, and Haman's ten sons, 1-10. The king hearing this, at Esther's request, allows the Jews in Shushan to stand against their enemies on the day following, when three hundred more are slain; and he causes Haman's sons to be hanged on the gallows erected by Haman, 11-15. The Jews throughout the provinces slay seventy-five thousand men, 16. They rejoice with feasting on the two following days, 17-19. These days are appointed by Esther and Mordecai as an annual festival, in commemoration of this deliverance, and called the feast of Purim, 20-32.

The Chaldee paraphrast says that none appeared against the Jews but Amalekites only, who were infatuated, and had their hearts hardened, as Pharaoh's heart against Israel, to take up arms to their own destruction. Some had such an inveterate, implacable malice against the Jews, that Haman's fall and Mordecai's advancement, instead of convincing, seemed only to exasperate them the more. How have the most dreadful scourges ravaged a country, and yet the inhabitants are unmindful of the Almighty Disposer of events, and that the cause of his righteous displeasure is their continual provocation! Forty years long was he grieved with one generation, who learned not his ways, though daily fed and clothed by a miracle.

It does not appear that the Jews slew any person who did not rise up to destroy them: they stood for their lives; and gave full proof that they sought their own personal safety, and not the property of their enemies: though the decree in their favor gave them authority to take the property of all their adversaries. ver. 15, 16. Est 8:11. Ge 14:23. Ro *12:17. Ph *4:8.

11. was brought. Heb. came.

12. what is thy petition. Est 5:6. 7:2.

13. If it please the king. Esther had probably been informed by Mordecai, that there were still many enemies of the Jews who sought their destruction, who had escaped the preceding day; and therefore begged that the second day might be added to the former permission; and that the sons of Haman, who had already been slain, might be suspended on gibbets, as a terror to those who sought the destruction of the Jews. according unto. The eastern princes and people not only invite their friends to feasts, but it is their custom to send a portion of the banquet to those that cannot well attend, especially their relations, and those in a state of mourning. Thus, when the Grand Emir found that it incommoded M. D'Arvieux to eat with him, he desired him to take his own time for eating, and sent him from his kitchen what he liked best (Voy. dans la Palest. p. 20. Harmer, ch. iv. Ob. 56).

The word pur seems to be derived either from the Persian bahr and bar, a part, portion, lot, or pari, any thing which happens fortuitously or fortunately; whence the annual festival in commemoration of the wonderful deliverance of the Jews was called Purim, or in Arabic and Persian, Fuhr, or Lots; which has been observed by them, in all places of their dispersion, from that day to the present time, without any interruption. JOB

JOB 1

The uprightness, piety, prosperity, and numerous family of Job, and his religious concern for his children, 1-5. Satan appearing before God, accuses Job, and obtains leave to try him, 6-12. Job, receiving successive accounts of calamities, which deprived him of all his substance, and all his children, mourns with humble resignation, and worships God, 13-22.

Satan again appears before God, and obtains permission still further to try Job, 1-6. He smites him with sore boils from head to foot, 7, 8. JOB 7

Job excuses his desire of death, by representing the vanity, misery, and uselessness of his life, 1-6. He expostulates with God, in a mixture of complaints and petitions, that his life is as wind, and he was consumed out of this world and should appear in it no more, 7-10; therefore he will speak to God, 11, 12; he is tired out and weary of life, 12-16; man is unworthy of God's notice, 17-19; and concludes with confessing that he had sinned, and asking forgiveness before his death, 20, 21.

JOB 8

Bildad blames Job for reflecting on the justice of God, 1-3. He intimates that his children had been cast off for their sins; yet encourages Job to seek unto God, 4-7. He appeals to the ancients, to prove the certain doom of hypocrites, 8-19. He applies the argument to the case of Job, 20-22.

JOB 12

Job maintains himself against his friends that reprove him, censures their pretensions to superior knowledge, and complains of their wickedness, 1-4. The miserable always despised, though upright, 5. JOB 13

Job, confident of his knowledge, appeals to God; disdainfully and peevishly reproves his friends for pleading against him with false reasonings and partiality; and warns them to fear the judgment of God, 1-12. In extreme suffering and expectation of death, he professes confidence that God would justify him, 13-19. He craves respite and desires to know his sins and God's purpose in afflicting him, since God does not delight in our misery, 20-28.

JOB 14

Job pleads with God for relief, because of the shortness and misery of life and the sinfulness of human nature, 1-6. Viewing death as destructive to all earthly hopes, he yet desires to be hid in the grave and determines to wait the time appointed for his change, 7-15. He complains that God dealt severely with him; and shows that all things on earth, men especially, are subject to corruption, 16-22.

JOB 15

Eliphaz sharply reproves Job as arrogant and impious; his own mouth uttered his iniquity and should condemn him, 1-6. Job not the wisest of men, 7, 8; nor wiser than they who were elder than he, 9, 10. He despised the consolations of God and turned away his spirit against him, 11-13. He declares God's holiness and man's sinfulness: the angels not clean in God's sight, much less man, 14-16. He appeals to observation and tradition in proof that the wicked are miserable in this world, 17-35.

JOB 16

Job reproves his friends for their conduct towards him; and shows how he would have acted, if they had been afflicted as he was, 1-5. JOB 22

Eliphaz shows that man's goodness cannot profit God, 1-4. He accuses Job of various crimes, which he supposes had brought on him his calamities, 5-14. He contrasts the doom of sinners visited by divine judgments with the security of the righteous, 15-20. He exhorts Job to repent and encourages him to hope for mercy, 21-30.

JOB 34

Elihu calls on the wise to judge in the cause and charges Job with arraigning the divine justice, 1-9. He affirms that the all-powerful and all-perfect God cannot do iniquity and vindicates his dealings with men, 10-30. He shows Job that he ought to humble himself before God and sharply reproves his words, 31-37.

JOB 36

Elihu requires attention as with truth and knowledge he shows the justice of God in all his judgments, the designs of his chastisements, and the profit of making a right use of them: God is just in all his ways towards the wicked, 1-6; the godly, 7-11; the hypocrite, 12-14; the poor, 15. He reproves, warns, and counsels Job as to how his sins hinder God's blessings, 16-21. He reminds him that the power of God is uncontrollable and that his works and dispensations should be magnified, but cannot be comprehended, 22-33.

JOB 38

The Lord, out of the whirlwind, challenges Job to answer him, 1-3. By enumerating several of his mighty works in creation and providence, he convinces Job of ignorance: the foundation and measures of the earth, 4-6; the stars; the sea, and its bounds, 7-11; the morning, and its light, 12-15; the depth of the sea; the gates and shadow of death; the breadth of the earth, 16-18; the place of light and darkness; the treasures of snow and hail for battle, 19-23; the east wind, springs, and rain for the earth, 24-30; the planets, ordinances of heaven, and their dominion on the earth; clouds and lightning, 31-35. Wisdom and understanding in the heart of man, and in his works more than we can understand; he feedeth the lion and the raven; thus God convinces Job of weakness, 36-41.

Hence the attraction of the sun and moon and the gravitation of the sea to its own center, which prevent too great a flux on the one hand and too great reflux on the other, are some of those bars and doors by which "its proud waves are stayed," and prevented from coming farther. 26. To cause. It is well known that rain falls copiously in thunderstorms. The flash is first seen, the clap is next heard, and last the rain descends; though in fact they all take place at the same time. The lightning traverses all space in no perceivable succession of time. Sound is propagated at the rate of 1142 feet in a second. Rain travels still more slowly, and will be seen sooner or later according to the weight of the drops, and the distance of the cloud. Now as water is composed of two elastic airs or gases, called oxygen and hydrogen, in the proportion of 88 1/4 of the former and 11 3/4 of the latter in 100 parts, the electric spark, or matter of lightning, passing through the atmosphere, ignites and decomposes those gases, which explode; and the water falls down in the form of rain. This explosion, as well as the rushing in of the circumambient air to restore the equilibrium, will account for the clap and peal; and thus by the lightning of thunder God causes it to rain on the earth. on the wilderness. Ps 104:10-14. *107:35. 147:8, 9. Is 35:1, 2. 41:18, 19. *43:19, 20. Je 14:22. He 6:7, 8.

It is nearly as large as the elephant; its head is enormously large, its mouth very wide, the jaws extending upwards of two feet, armed with four cutting teeth, each twelve inches long. Its hide is so tough and so thick as to resist the strokes of a sabre and is thinly covered with hair of a lightish color; its legs are three feet long; though amphibious, its hoofs, which are quadrified, are unconnected; and its tail is naked, about a foot in length but exceedingly thick and strong. It inhabits the rivers of Africa, feeds on grass and other vegetables, moves slowly and heavily, swims dexterously, sleeps in reedy places, has a tremendous voice between the lowing of the ox, and the roar of the elephant, and when irritated will attack boats and men with fury. which. 7. Canst. The leviathan, described here, has been solidly proved by Bochart to denote the crocodile, and the description suits no other species of amphibious animals. It is a species of lizard with a two-edged tail, large oblong head, small but vivacious eyes, short legs, and triangular feet, the fore ones having four, and the hinder ones five toes, armed with strong, sharp claws. Its length is usually about twenty feet, and its circumference about five feet; it has, in proportion to its size, the largest mouth of all monsters; moves both its jaws equally, the upper of which is armed with not less than forty, and the under with thirty-eight sharp, strong, and massy teeth; its voice is a loud, hollow growling, of the most terrific description; and is furnished with a coat of mail, so scaly and callous as to resist the force of a musket ball in every part, except under the belly. It is a natural inhabitant of the Nile and other African and Asiatic rivers; is of enormous voracity and strength as well as fleetness in swimming; attacks mankind and the largest animals with the most daring impetuosity; and when taken by means of a powerful net, will often overturn the boats that surround it. Nothing that it once seizes can escape, and shaking its prey to pieces, it swallows without mastication. fish. ver. 26-29.

10. This verse furnishes an excellent, instructive illustration of two useful methods of practical Bible study and meditation. It is helpful, when meditating upon a passage of Scripture, to note what it states about "my responsibility," and what it states about "God's responsibility." The clauses of this verse are marked in the notes below to reflect this analysis. Since nearly every passage of Scripture opens up under this analysis, it is not necessary to furnish further examples, except to mention one additional particularly effective illustration for this method, Pr 3:5, 6.

It is also helpful to notice expressed or implied cause/effect relationships. The cause/effect relationships are noted below for each clause in this verse. The practical value of observing these relationships in study, teaching, and exhortation is discussed in the related note on exhortation (Ro 12:8n). Since texts of Scripture which display expressed or implied cause/effect relationships are not easy to find, the following list will furnish a number of such passages for further study. For other cause/effect relationships see Ps 33:21. 37:40. 67:5-7. 78:5-8 (correcting stubbornness and rebellion in children). 89:31, 32 (if/then). 106:12 (believed his word/sang his praises). *119:67, 71, 155, 171. Probably the theological presuppositions of E. W. Bullinger have influenced his categorization of "soul" here, for he was a materialist who did not believe that the soul was a separate, conscious entity in man, and therefore he denied the conscious existence of man after death. Other more appropriate categorizations of "soul" here, equally if not more defensible than that assigned by Bullinger, would be √ℳ171Q1, Ge +12:5, or ℳ171Q2, Nu +23:10. Other examples which should be carefully noted where the theology of the interpreter greatly influences the figure of speech categories assigned are discussed in the related notes (Ge 24:10n. Je 33:18n. Ph √1:23n). This materialist bias in the works of Bullinger necessitated considerable reorganization of the New Testament categories for "soul" (Mt +*2:20n) and "spirit" (Mt +*8:16n) presented in this edition of the Treasury, compared with Bullinger's original scheme presented in the otherwise helpful volume The Giver and His Gifts, Appendix I, "Classified List of Usages of Pneuma." hell. PSALM 18

David's psalm of thanksgiving for his manifold deliverances and singular prosperity: David professes his love to God, 1; and his confidence in his attributes, 2. He praises God for deliverance out of trouble, 3-5. His experience of God's hearing him in an awful manner, 6-31. He acknowledges God's help against his enemies, 32-50.

When he descended to the engagement, the very heavens bowed to render his descent more awful: his military tent was substantial darkness; the voice of his thunder was the warlike alarm which sounded to the battle; the chariot in which he rode was the thick clouds of heaven conducted by cherubs and carried on by the irresistible force and rapid wings of an impetuous tempest; and the darts and weapons he employed were thunderbolts, lightnings, fiery hail, deluging rains, and stormy winds! PSALM 22

David, prophetically speaking in the person of Christ, complains grievously that he was forsaken by his God and left to the insulting cruelty of his enemies; and he predicts many circumstances of the Messiah's sufferings, 1-21. He proclaims the name and praise of the Lord, calling on the people to trust and glorify him; and foretells the permanent success of the gospel, 22-31.

The textual reading is kaari, "as a lion my hands and my feet;" but several MSS. read karoo and others have karoo in the margin, which affords the reading adopted by our translators. So the LXX., so also the Vulgate, Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic; and as all the Evangelists so quote the passage and apply it to the crucifixion of Christ, there seems scarcely the shadow of a doubt that this is the genuine reading, especially when it is considered that the other contains no clear sense at all. PSALM 23

David rejoices in the compassionate care of the Lord his shepherd, 1-3. He exults in the assurance of being supported by him through life and death and of spending eternity in his presence, 4-6.

1. The Lord. Ge 22:14, Jehovah-roi. Ex +15:26. is. ⁄119, Ge +49:9. Here we have a metaphor, and in it a great and blessed truth is set forth by the representation of Jehovah as a shepherd. It is he who tends his people and does more for them than any earthly shepherd does for his sheep. All his titles and attributes are so bound up with this care that in this psalm we have the illustration of many of the Jehovah-titles (B737). my shepherd. ⁄22D2F. Anthropomorphism B891. Metonymy of the Effect: when the effect is put for the cause producing it; here, the thing for the organic cause of it, glory put for the tongue which gives it. For other instances of this figure, see Ge +49:6. John Laidlaw (Biblical Doctrine of Man, p. 71) cites or paraphrases Franz Delitzsch (A System of Biblical Psychology, p. 119), "In the Old Testament the soul is also called simply 'the glory' (Heb. Chavod, S#3519h), for the spirit is the image of the triune Godhead, but the soul is the copy of this image, and relates itself to the spirit as the 'seven spirits' (Re 4:5) are related to the Spirit of God." EWB (B563), while admitting "glory" may be put for the tongue which gives it, suggests an alternative: Since this verse corresponds, in the structure, with verse 4, "Sing to Jehovah, O ye saints of His," then "glory" in this verse may be understood to be put for the saints who give the glory. and not. Lk 19:40.
