PREFACE

I first learned of The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge in a vacation Bible school class on "How to Study the Bible" taught to senior high school students at the Highland Park Baptist Church by Miss Ellen Groh. Miss Groh was a student at the Detroit Bible College at the time and later went to the mission field. The pastor of Highland Park Baptist Church then was Dr. Lehman Strauss. That was the summer of 1955.

That Christmas my Aunt Ethel Sherwin sent me a Christmas card with a five-dollar bill. On December 24, 1955, I rode my bicycle four miles to the Grand Bible and Book Store in Highland Park and had Mr. Bob Humphries, the proprietor, locate a copy of the book for me. To this day I believe this Bible study tool was the best investment I have ever made for Bible study.

I was convinced that I needed to buy the book for myself when in Miss Groh's class I looked up the encouraging references at 2 Timothy 1:7. During the years immediately after high school graduation, I used the volume as many as three hours a day in Bible study.

Over the years I have marked my copy of the Treasury, underlining particularly clear references, and noting printing errors as I found them. I added references to those already given in the Treasury in the wide margins of my study Bibles, as I prepared weekly Sunday school lessons over the years.

In the main reading room of the library at Bob Jones University I first saw Scott's Commentary, and found this to be the primary source of the references in the Treasury. The Treasury has many additional references not found in Scott, though in some passages, such as Exodus 20, the reverse is true. I have since obtained several used editions of Scott's Commentary. Many variations from Scott's original references (over 4,000) and printing errors (nearly 1,000) present in the original edition of the Treasury have been corrected in this new edition by consulting this source.

This is the only new edition of The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge ever prepared. All previous editions are merely reprints of the original edition which first appeared about 1836. In my preparation of this new edition I have incorporated the results of my thirty years of personal Bible study using the original Treasury into this revised and expanded edition. I almost did not live to finish my editorial work on the New Treasury, for I was shot in the head by an unknown assailant on March 13, 1986, when I had typed the text only as far as 1 Samuel 3. The Lord miraculously spared my life. During my recovery I kept working on the book, often without income. This time away from teaching permitted a more thorough revision and expansion than I originally planned.

The most significant feature of the Treasury is its nearly exhaustive collection of cross-references. These references are the source of its enduring usefulness to every Bible student. Therefore it has been to the cross-references themselves that the greatest effort has been given in this new edition to make this excellent reference tool even more usable to the modern reader and student of the Bible. I have added over 100,000 new cross-references and supplied many more key words to the Bible text, making this the most complete collection of biblical cross-references ever published.

I am thankful to Miss Ellen Groh, Dr. Lehman Strauss, my Aunt Ethel, the proprietors of many Christian and secular bookstores, and to the present publisher for their encouragement to me in making this new volume possible. Of course, I must not neglect to mention the many hours of assistance in looking up cross-references, preparing and checking indexes, and proofreading provided by my wife, Susanne. In a volume of this size and magnitude it is impossible to produce an entirely error-free manuscript, I am sure, but every effort has been made to provide an accurate reference tool for personal Bible study.

INTRODUCTION

The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge has been designed for the ordinary Bible reader. As I have worked on the references and notes to this new edition, I have kept in mind several very ordinary Christian laymen and laywomen who helped me at the start of my Christian life. While this book is very simple to use, its contents are inexhaustible. It will provide the fullest help available on nearly every verse in the Bible. At several places I have provided notes of a more scholarly nature because the passage involved has been misunderstood by many interpreters or particular religious movements. It has been my purpose to help Bible students understand such verses at the verse where the difficulty arises. See, for example, the note on John 1:1.

The original Treasury was developed from the references in the Reverend Thomas Scott's Commentary, supplemented by the references in the center column of the English Polyglot Bible. The pages of the Treasury were designed to match the page content of editions of the Polyglot Bible in English published by Samuel Bagster and Sons of London. The effort to match the paging of this particular edition of the Bible led to what have been some unfortunate features in all former editions, most especially the tiny print in the Psalms and elsewhere, where the references are cramped into three columns on a page. In some portions of Scripture, where the number of cross-references to be adduced were few, the rest of the page was taken up with explanatory notes on the passages. Most of these notes have been retained. Additional notes have been provided where it was thought helpful, many from the Comprehensive Bible, the source of most of the original Treasury notes. Examples of these include notes at Genesis 38:21, Exodus 40:2, and Judges 9:54. I have modified a few of the original notes of the Treasury to reflect a more accurate understanding of Bible prophecy. Notes at Ezekiel 48:4, Daniel 2:44, and Micah 4:4 reflect such modification. I have written a number of new notes for this edition. These are identified under the Subject Index entry "Notes written for this edition." In this new edition, Roman numerals are no longer used, as they were in all former editions, to designate Bible chapter numbers.

The chapter headnotes have been expanded and given in greater detail. For the most part these were taken directly from Scott's Commentary, rarely supplemented by the headnotes in Matthew Poole's Commentary. I expanded the headnotes for Leviticus, chapter 19, and Deuteronomy, chapter 28. I modified the headnotes for several of the chapters of Zechariah to reflect a more accurate, consistent, literal view of prophetic interpretation. These headnotes are of much assistance in locating the subject matter of a chapter. Frequently I recall that a particular incident is mentioned in a book of the Bible, but I may not be able to think of a specific word used in the account, and therefore cannot use Strong's Concordance to locate the desired passage. The headnotes efficiently direct my attention to the passage sought.

Thomas Scott was the original compiler of the cross-references in The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge. I have adhered closely to Scott's original intent as expressed in the following quotes from his Preface Postscript:

"In numerous instances the references are entirely original, and in almost all many are so."

I have added many original references to those of the original Treasury, and still more from the Commentary Wholly Biblical, Robert Young's Concise Critical Comments, and The New Testament with Fuller References.

"In some of the original references, the Author's idea [i.e., Scott's] may not at once be perceived by the reader: but, if the several places referred to be consulted, it will generally appear."

I have remarked on this problem in the next section, "How to Use This Book."

"He has sometimes proceeded by way of contrast, that the reader, by comparing the opposite characters or conduct of the persons mentioned, may more clearly perceive the excellency or evil of the case in question."

I have extended this feature in some places (1 S 25:17; 2 K 5:13) with additional references, and have used a special symbol (◐) to indicate contrast.

"Or by comparing the different language of Scripture, used on the same subject, he may more readily see the true interpretation, especially on controverted subjects; or at least be better enabled to judge for himself."

I have attempted to advance the doctrine of private judgment (Ga 1:8n) and the perspicuity of Scripture (Is 8:20n) to this very purpose. Controversial subjects have not been shunned. Scripture evidence for valid alternative doctrinal or interpretative positions has been marshalled. The false doctrines held by those of Arian and Unitarian persuasion have been carefully addressed, particularly the doctrinal positions of the Jehovah's Witnesses.

"Some pains have likewise been taken, even on those parts of Scripture which chiefly consist of names, to point out other passages, in which the same persons or places are mentioned; and to mark the difference in spelling the same name, or the different names for the same person or place which occur in different parts, and the different places and persons called by the same name. Sometimes the unlearned reader is perplexed or misled by these variations; and this part of the references often contains all, which even the most learned know upon the subject, especially in the genealogies."

This feature of the original Treasury has been extended to the point that the Treasury is now exhaustively complete on these matters, with an accuracy surpassing, in some places, that of Strong's Concordance and other standard reference sources. The literal meaning of the original Hebrew and Greek names is given. The meanings were taken largely from Young's Concise Critical Comments, the tables of such names in volume three of The Commentary Wholly Biblical, supplemented by occasional reference to the definitions from several dictionaries of Bible names, particularly the dictionary revised and edited by Philip Schaff, "Comprehensive Bible Helps," in the Funk and Wagnalls edition of Wilmore's New Analytical Reference Bible (Copyright 1891, 1910, 1918). This information is readily accessed by means of the complete Index to the names in Scripture at the end of this volume.

"The meaning of scriptural phrases may also be often fixed, by comparing the several places where they are used. This is the intent of many sets of references; while others refer to the doctrine or promise inculcated in the passage, and tend to establish a scriptural interpretation."

Doctrinal topics have been carefully referenced, indexed, and expanded, utilizing the excellent material found in Charles Simmons' A Scripture Manual and other standard sources. Bible promises have been indexed and expanded, using Samuel Clark's Precious Bible Promises. Bible references to prayer have been expanded and indexed, using Philip Watters' work, The Prayers of the Bible. References to unfulfilled Bible prophecy have been made more complete by a thorough study of George N. H. Peters' The Theocratic Kingdom of our Lord Jesus, the Christ. The precise extent to which this is so may be determined by examining the subject index entries under this author's name. I have expanded the references which relate to prophetic subjects. Reference to Isaiah 55:3, Matthew 5:5, and Luke 21:36 will furnish a sampling of the extent to which this has been done.

On important themes of practical and contemporary interest, forward and backward referencing has been increased. Passages of practical (Hab 2:20, 1 C 15:55), prophetic (Am 9:14, 15, Lk 21:36), and doctrinal (Am 3:6, Mt 24:45, 28:19) significance have been so referenced. Thus, at Amos 3:6 will be found many references not supplied before to the other passages in Scripture which treat the same themes, which themselves (in the Treasury) contain a cross-reference to Amos 3:6.

Figures of speech are identified. I believe this edition of The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge contains the most comprehensive listing and identification of the figures of speech in the Bible ever produced in English.

The "Preface to the Treasury Bible" supplies the following important explanation not found in any current printings of The Treasury of Scripture Knowledge:

> "To preserve the distinction between the Various Readings [from the A.V.] and the editorial remarks and explanations which occur, the word "or" in the one case is printed in italics, with a small o; in the other in Roman, with a capital O: thus, Ge 4:13, "My punishment is greater than I can bear. or, Mine iniquity is greater than that it may be forgiven." In Ge 19:1, it is said, "And there came two angels. Or rather, 'the two angels came.' "

I have adhered to this principle as far as possible. When adding alternative translations not provided by the A.V. translators, such as those I have adduced from Young's Literal Translation and its accompanying Concise Critical Comments, I have introduced the alternative rendering by an unitalicized "or."

> "When the references illustrate the whole verse, the italic words are not printed, because not required."

This feature has been eliminated. All sets of reference passages in this new edition of the Treasury are keyed to the appropriate words of the text of the Authorized Version, eliminating the ambiguity present in the original system.

Thomas Scott used the words "see on" to indicate a passage where a more complete set of references was collected. I have restored many instances of this feature which were inadvertently deleted or inconsistently retained in the original editions of the Treasury. I have expanded this most helpful feature by using the symbol "+" in many more places. Thomas Scott's system is thus left intact. It may be distinguished from mine by the two different markings for essentially the same feature.

Cross-references have an advantage over chain references in that all the references are presented at one location, and with the new system of symbols introduced to this edition of the Treasury, the relative clarity, significance, or relationships of the references is presented at a single glance to the reader.

Studying all the references given for a text, then the references which that text can lead to, and so forth, will enable the careful student of Scripture to consider all the material in the Bible which relates to the subject or passage being studied.

Frequently in Bible study the student will want to know, "But what does the rest of Scripture have to say on this matter?" The only resource which can provide an answer will often be found to be the Treasury. No combination of additional Bible study tools quite duplicates the content of The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge. At many places in the Bible the Treasury will be found more complete. Almost always it will have far more cross-references than any other source or combination of sources.

Scott comments, "The degree of labor and attention, which has been used to render the printing of the references correct, cannot easily be conceived: yet probably some errors still remain." I have found five errors in Scott's London Edition that were corrected in the original Treasury; four errors in the London Edition that were corrected in the American edition; twenty-eight errors in the London edition, which I corrected in this new edition of the Treasury during my typing and proofreading of the manuscript. Something over 4,000 corrections involving unjustifiable changes and deletions from Scott's original references, and no less than 680 actual printing errors in the current edition of the original Treasury—459 from the Old Testament, 221 from the New Testament—have been found and corrected for this new edition of the Treasury. This new edition, therefore, is the most accurate collection of these extensive references available.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

The Bible is divided into separate books (such as Genesis, Exodus, or John). Each book is divided into chapters. Each chapter is divided into verses. This Bible study tool, The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge, is arranged just like a Bible. It is divided into the same Bible books, chapters, and verses. To find information about any verse in the Bible, simply look up the book of the Bible where it is found, the chapter, and the verse. Whenever a Bible reference is given, the abbreviated name of the book is given first, followed by the chapter number, a colon, and the verse number. The reference John 3:16 means the book of John, chapter 3, verse 16.

This Bible study tool is designed to be used with any edition or translation of the Bible. This book provides for nearly every verse in the Bible a selection of other verses which shed light upon, clarify, or explain the verse you are consulting. Such verses are commonly known as "cross-references." Many study Bibles contain cross-references in their center column, and you may already be familiar with these. This book provides a far more complete selection of cross-references than can be found in any other source. The great advantage of having such a complete selection of references is that the Bible is allowed to comment upon and explain itself—something which it does very well. The Bible explains itself even better, and in far greater detail, than people who are otherwise quite familiar with its contents might suppose.

Why should you study the Bible in this way? Careful students of the Bible are aware that this is the way which the Savior Himself studied and discussed Scripture (Luke 24:27,44; John 1:45; 5:39). It is the way which the apostle Paul used to expound and explain the Bible (Acts 17:2,3). Reflections of this method of studying Scripture can be seen in the way the apostle Paul quotes a series of texts of Scripture in his epistles (see especially Romans 3:9-18). So while there are many other valuable methods of Bible study, the method of comparing Scripture with Scripture (made possible by the cross-references gathered in this volume) is certainly a valid, if not the best, method of Bible study. It is a Scriptural method, used by Christ in his teaching (Lk 4:18), reflected by the frequent use of composite quotations from the Old Testament in the New (Mt 27:9), and commended by Paul in Acts 17:11: "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so."

The English text from the King James or Authorised Version of 1611 for 2 Timothy 1:7, a passage alluded to in the Preface, reads:

7. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

Here is an example of what The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge provides at 2 Timothy 1:7.

7. the spirit. Ac *20:24. 21:13. Ro *8:15. He 2:15. 1 J *4:18. but. Mi *3:8. Zc *4:6. Lk 10:19. *24:49. Ac *1:8. 6:8. 9:22. *10:38. 1 C *2:4. of love. Ro *5:5. Ga *5:22. Col 1:8. 1 P *1:22. a sound. Ps *119:80. Pr *2:7. *8:14. Lk *8:35. *15:17. Ac *26:11, 25. 2 C 5:13, 14.

Rather than print out all the words of a verse, only the first words or the key words of a phrase or clause are printed in bold typeface. Following the key word will be found a set of cross-references to the other Bible passages which are helpful in understanding the verse you are reading. The key words are based on the King James or Authorized Version of 1611, but you will almost always find that the wording of any other version of the Bible is close enough that you can use the references with no difficulty. The asterisked verses represent especially clear passages that may be profitably consulted by even a new user of this volume.

Consider the references given above for the phrase "sound mind": Ps *119:80. Pr *2:7. *8:14.

Lk *8:35. *15:17. Ac *26:11, 25. 2 C 5:13, 14. So that the nature of the help to be derived from consulting such a series of Bible references may be immediately seen by the reader, the text of these several references is printed out in full below:

Psalms *119:80. "Let my heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed."

Proverbs *2:7. "He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly."

Proverbs *8:14. "Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; I have strength."

Luke *8:35. "Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid."

Luke *15:17. "And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!"

Acts *26:11, 25. (11) "And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities." (25) "But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness."

2 C 5:13, 14. (13) "For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause." (14) "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead."

Notice the common thread of thought through these several verses as represented by the words "sound heart," "sound wisdom," "right mind," "came to himself," "not mad," "sober." These comforting and reassuring words furnish a biblical answer to the attempts of others bent on discouraging new-found interest in the Bible and spiritual things.

The cross-references do not furnish the same information that a concordance does. A Bible concordance is an alphabetical index to the words of the Bible. The cross-references given in the New Treasury are not merely to the same word, although this is sometimes the case, but to the same or a related thought, theme, doctrine, subject, concept, or literary motif, even when expressed in entirely different words, as can be seen from even the short example above.

For example, if you consult the cross-references given to Genesis 3:15, regarded as the first biblical prophecy of a coming Redeemer or Messiah, you will find over one hundred cross-references to other related messianic prophecies and the New Testament passages which show their fulfillment. Such a collection of references could not be found by means of a concordance alone. If the student will turn in the New Treasury to the clearest references given at Genesis 3:15, such as Genesis 49:10, even more references to messianic prophecy will be found. Used in this manner, the New Treasury can be used in an exhaustive study of any Bible subject, and will lead to more explanatory verses than any other study tool available.

Some readers may benefit by some suggestions as to the actual mechanics of using the volume. I have found it helpful to study at a well-lighted table, with the New Treasury open to the passage I am studying. I find it easiest to use two Bibles with good print. I keep the largest one with the clearest print open to the verse being studied. I use a smaller Bible to turn to the various references cited for the passage I am studying.

Whenever possible, it is best to consult all the references given. Frequently the relevance of earlier references cited becomes abundantly clear when all the references have been consulted. My own experience has taught me that when I do not understand the bearing or relevance of a particular reference given, the trouble is with me. I usually discover that as I learn more about the Bible passage, or the theme involved, the relevance of the passage becomes clear. When the subject is an important one, and I encounter what seems to be an obscure reference—one that does not seem to pertain to the passage I am trying to understand—I find that turning to that passage and looking up its references generally makes the intended relationship clear. But when time and interest would make this procedure impractical to the reader, an effort has been made in this edition to assist the reader by identifying the clearest texts, or the most crucial ones, for understanding the text being studied through the use of special symbols.

The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge probably has more cross-references than you could hope to consult in a lifetime of use. Yet that is the very heart of its advantage over other study tools—it is an inexhaustible study resource. Just how can a reader use this volume without becoming bogged down by the sheer quantity of cross-references?

In devotional reading, as I read a Bible chapter, I often come upon a verse that particularly strikes my interest, or meets a particular need. At that point, I open the New Treasury and consult the references for that verse. Sometimes discussing the Bible with others who have a totally different understanding of what it says will motivate me to look up the references on the verses pertaining to a disputed doctrine or interpretation. For Sunday school lesson preparation I will often study the lesson Scripture text, then select a particularly significant or relevant verse or two and consult the references to that passage. Then I share just the few clearest references with the class when that verse is discussed.

It is better to use the New Treasury in your personal study briefly and regularly, rather than to set up an overly ambitious program of extended study, only to give up for lack of time or discipline to put the program into effect. The book will do no good closed on the shelf, but it will prove to be a rich spiritual resource if used right along with your regular reading of the Bible.

Why should you study the Bible by consulting well-chosen cross-references? Those who are most familiar with the Bible know that the Bible is its own best commentary. It is most essential when arriving at an understanding of what the Bible teaches on any given theme that we first come to an understanding of what the Bible itself says. This can only be done when we consult all the Bible has to say on a subject. If we wish to arrive at the truth God has placed in His Word, we must make that Word our first authority, and it would be better if it were our only authority. We must not cite Bible texts in an arbitrary fashion with no regard to context, the culture which produced the text, and the statements elsewhere in the Bible which bear on the theme or doctrine being considered. Jesus said we are to "search the Scriptures" (Jn 5:39). Certainly The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge is a most essential Bible study tool which will enable you to do just that.

This book is intended to be an essential companion to your Bible reading and study. No matter how much or how little prior knowledge of the Bible you bring to this study tool, it will provide the needed assistance to understand the Bible more accurately and deeply. If your experience is similar to mine, you will find this book the most helpful aid to in-depth Bible study you have ever used.

Features of The New

The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge offers you truly inexhaustible resources for Bible study. At its heart is the most comprehensive listing available of cross-references from specific words of Scripture to other related Scripture portions. Many of these cross-references are marked with special symbols to indicate exactly what information they provide. This means that you can choose the specific references that will give you the information you want.

The many notes found through the book comment on the basic content of Bible chapters, on the meaning of words, on historical matters, and on practical and doctrinal teachings of Scripture. All of the notes in the original Treasury have been kept, and Jerome Smith has added many new ones.

Finally, much of the vast knowledge distributed throughout the whole book is made more

Ge +13:18. 14:13. and he sat. In these verses we have a delightful picture of genuine and primitive hospitality; a venerable father sits at the tent door, not only to enjoy the current of refreshing air, but that if he saw any weary and exhausted travelers, he might invite them to rest and refresh themselves during the heat of the day, and the same custom continues in the east. It was not the custom, nor was there any necessity, for strangers to knock at the door, or to speak first, but to stand till they were invited. heat. Ge ◐15:12. ◐19:1. 31:40. Mt 20:12. Lk 12:55. SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS

Below is an explanation of the symbols and abbreviations used in this edition of The New Treasury of Scripture Knowledge. (The extended back jacket flap lists all of these and, removed, may be used as a bookmark.)

*	placed before a cross-reference indicates an especially clear reference. These references should be looked up by the beginning user of this volume. As more experience is gained, all the references may be consulted.
✓	placed before a cross-reference indicates a critically clear, pertinent, significant reference.
+	A special "insight" reference, indicating where a fuller collection of references to this term are gathered.
+* or +✓	Additional references to this topic, or a fuller collection for this topic is given at the verse so indicated.
◐	Contrast. Identifies groups of references gathered on another aspect of the topic, or identifies cross references which explain an apparent or alleged contradiction or alternate doctrinal position.
=	Identifies a type or antitype.
≛	Type or antitype identified on biblical authority.
❵	Identifies quotations in the New Testament from the Old Testament, and at Old Testament passages the fact that they are quoted in the New Testament.
❵℘	Identifies quotations from the Pentateuch in the prophets.
✸	Identifies references which are the fulfillment of prophecy.
‖	Indicates a strict parallel passage, as in the gospels, or the books of Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles. These have not been noted exhaustively, but only selectively.
❋S#	placed before a Strong's number (❋S#2313h) indicates that all the occurrences of the original Hebrew or Greek word so marked are given here.
✣S#	placed before a Strong's number (✣S#2313g) indicates that all the occurrences to the Hebrew or Greek word which are relevant or similar to the use there are given.
( )	When a cross-reference in a figure–of–speech listing is placed in parentheses, this indicates that the figure is not apparent in English versions (KJV, Young's Literal Translation, or Rotherham) and so is not cross-referenced back to the explanation of the figure at the passage so listed.
( )	In a series of references to a Hebrew or Greek word identified by its Strong's number, the English translation is given in parentheses when the word is rendered differently in a particular reference.
( )	An English word in parentheses after a verse reference lets the reader know which word in that verse translates the same underlying Hebrew or Greek word.
( )	A word placed in parentheses in connection with the figure of speech Ellipsis indicates the word is not present in the original language, but is to be supplied in accordance with the figure of speech as indicated.

CB Companion Bible

F/L In the book of Isaiah, sets of references to "first" (Is ch. 1-39) and "last" (Is ch. 40-66) portions of Isaiah are given to demonstrate the unity of the book. Words alleged by some authorities to occur in only the first portion of the book are seen to be used in the latter portion, demonstrating that the book is the work of a single author.

f Figures of speech are identified with a reference number, such as *f*102, followed by the name of the figure of speech in the main entry, or a reference to where that figure is explained, and to where all the other instances of that particular figure, or a subset of that figure, can be found. This feature is an essential aid to Bible interpretation. This is the first time that such information has been made readily accessible to the ordinary Bible reader in one source. The Companion Bible identifies many of the figures of speech in its margins, and has a list with brief definitions in its Appendix 6. However, users of The Companion Bible who come across an important instance of the use of a figure of speech are not led in that volume to the other instances of its use. But to learn to identify a figure when it is used, one needs to see it in many contexts until one has developed a "feel" for the figure, and can learn its characteristics enough to be able to identify it wherever it occurs. Of course, one can consult E. W. Bullinger's Figures of Speech Used in the Bible, but there are many instances given in the margins of The Companion Bible which are not listed or discussed in that book, and many instances given in the book not given in The Companion Bible. This edition of the Treasury remedies that, and furnishes additional references to the figures not found in either of those two excellent sources.

The names of the figures of speech have been alphabetized and given reference numbers from 1 to 180. Often the reference number is followed by additional letters and numbers to clearly identify the specific category of the figure of speech. The full alphabetical list of the figures with the subcategories is given in the Figure of Speech Index at the end of this volume.

B B542 means a reference is made to page 542 of E. W. Bullinger's Figures of Speech Used in the Bible. All main figure of speech entries are so keyed to this volume.

g or h Indicates verbal references to the same Hebrew or Greek words when used after a cross-reference. After a Strong's number, indicates whether the number refers to the Hebrew or Greek lexicon at the end of Strong's Concordance.

ISBE International Standard Bible Encyclopedia

lit. Literally

mg A reference to the marginal reading found in the center column of many editions of the King James or Authorized Version of the Bible.

MM James Hope Moulton and George Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament.

n Placed after a cross reference (Ge 2:7n) means that there is a pertinent note at that reference about the subject of the reference. This new feature makes the many notes throughout the New Treasury far more accessible than in previous editions and provides a unique internal cross-referencing system for the notes.

or, Italicized "or," identifies a marginal reading supplied by the translators of the Authorized or King James Version.

or, Unitalicized "or," identifies alternate renderings supplied by this editor from Robert Young's Literal Translation and its accompanying Concise Critical Comments, and other sources.

S# There are selected references to the numbers of Strong's Concordance throughout this edition of the Treasury, so relating information in the Treasury with other published Bible study reference tools keyed to Strong's Concordance. Consult the Strong's Number Index at the end of this volume.

T# Topic numbers are for the first time furnished in this edition of the Treasury, together with an index to these topics, to give the New Treasury all the advantages of a topical Bible or topical arrangement of the Scriptures. Sometimes the full set of references for more than one topic is located at the same verse. To help the user rapidly identify the appropriate set of references, the topic numbers are given at each major collection of indexed topical references.

TDNT Theological Dictionary of the New Testament

w "with." This symbol is used whenever cross-references are listed out of their normal biblical sequence in order to show important relationships between passages, relationships which would be lost if all the references were always cited only in the biblical order. Normally, however, references are cited in their biblical order, excepting that references are first given to verses within the same biblical book. All other references are cited in turn in biblical order. It is a sound rule of interpretation to seek first to understand the meaning of the language of an author by reference to the use of the same or similar language in the same book.

‡ placed after a topic number indicates the topic provides a set of proof texts used to support a false doctrine. The importance of including selected references of this category cannot be overestimated, for this furnishes the Bible-believing Christian with a defense against false doctrines promulgated by what are sometimes known as "false cults." Thus, by means of these symbols you can learn the commonly cited proof texts used to support a mistaken interpretation, and by reference to the cross-references not so marked, and especially by reference to cross-references marked with a ◐ symbol, the reader can learn the biblical answer to many of the false positions of the cults. Such helpful sets of cross-references are now marked out for the reader more fully in the New Treasury than in any other single reference source available.

? or x placed before a cross-reference indicates doubtful validity of the reference, for it is a wrong identification of the source of a quotation, or it is a proof text underlying a mistaken doctrinal or prophetic interpretation, or it is a questionable identification of a figure of speech—questionable because it is misidentified, or arbitrarily supports a mistaken doctrinal viewpoint.

Note that Obadiah, Philemon, 2 John, 3 John, and Jude each contain only one chapter. Therefore, a reference to Ob 18 is to verse 18 of that book. But a reference to Nu ch. 7, 8, 10. would mean reference to the entire contents of chapters 7, 8, and 10 of the book of Numbers. A reference to Ge 3:15 means Genesis, the third chapter, verse fifteen. When the same verse numbers are repeated (Ge 3:15, 15, 16, 17, 17), this means that the word occurs as many times in the verse as the verse number is repeated. When references are to the first, second, or third occurrence of a word in the verse, this is indicated by placing an 'a,' 'b,' or 'c' after the verse reference (Jn 14:2b).

GENESIS

GENESIS 1

God creates heaven and earth, 1; forms the light, and the firmament, 2-8; separates the dry land from the waters, and produces the vegetable tribes, 9-13; forms the sun, moon, and stars, 14-19; causes the waters to produce fishes and fowls, and the earth to bring forth cattle, wild beasts, and creeping things, 20-25; creates man in his own image; blesses him; gives him dominion; grants the fruits of the earth for food; and pronounces the whole "very good," 26-31.

One of the two words expresses the thing referred to, and the other (which may be of synonymous or even different signification, and is not a second thing or idea) intensifies and emphasizes it. The second word, if a noun, becomes in effect an adjective of the superlative degree, which is, by this means, made especially emphatic. The two words are always of the same part of speech, such as two nouns or two verbs. They are always joined by the conjunction "and." When the figure employs nouns, the two nouns are always in the same case. Just because two words are joined by "and" does not mean the presence of Hendiadys. It may be, instead, the figure Epitheton (ℱ79, Ge +21:16). The very opposite of Hendiadys is Syntheton (ℱ174, Ge +18:27). Sometimes, even in an undoubted Hendiadys, the two words may be equally true when taken separately and severally, as when joined together in one (as Ph 1:11 "the glory and praise of God" may equally mean either a reference to two things, to the glory of God, and to the praise of God: or, by Hendiadys, it may mean just one, "unto the glorious praise of God"). Hendiadys is not present if the two words are opposed in any way in their signification, or when there is no real connection between them (as in Ph 1:25, "abide and continue" or "furtherance and joy"; likewise, there is no Hendiadys in Ro 15:4, "patience and comfort," for 'comforting' is not a proper qualification of patience). This figure of speech is one of the most important figures in the Bible, and is very frequently used in both the Old and New Testaments. About most of the examples cited there can be no doubt, but a few (such as Ge 2:9) may be open to question, and these are submitted for the judgment and consideration of the reader. Here, "image and likeness" by Hendiadys is "in the likeness of our image," thus one thing, not two. For Hendiadys of verbs, see Is +66:11. An examination of its lexical uses shows immediately that "nephesh" is used with a broader range of meaning than the more theological English term "soul." The 754 occurrences of the Hebrew word nephesh (most often rendered "soul") may be classified as to its lexical uses as follows. (1) Ge +2:19, used of lower creatures; (2) Ge +9:15, used alike of lower creatures and man, rendered "creature," "life" (Le 17:11), "soul" (Nu 31:28); (3) Ge +12:5, used of man as an individual person; (4) Ge +12:13, used of mortal man, as though the soul could die or be destroyed; also rendered "life" (Ge +44:30), "ghost," etc. (Nu +23:10); (5) Ge +17:14, used of man as being "cut off" by God; (6) Ge +27:31, used of man, exercising certain powers, or performing certain acts, often rendered by emphatic pronouns; (7) Ge +34:3, used of man, exercising mental faculties, rendered "soul," "mind" (Ge +23:8), "heart" (Ex +23:9), "lust," etc. (Ex +15:9); (8) Le +19:28, used of man actually dead; (9) Nu +11:6, used of man as possessing animal appetites and desires; (10) Jsh +10:28, used of man being slain or killed by man. (11) Ps +30:3, used of man as going to a place described by the word "grave," etc. Compare the classification of the corresponding New Testament term psyche at Mt 2:20n. Synecdoche is the exchange of one idea for another associated idea. The difference between metonymy and synecdoche lies in this: that in metonymy, the exchange is between two related nouns, while in synecdoche, the exchange is made between two associated ideas. Synecdoche of the species occurs when the species (or subclass) is put for the genus (class), or particulars are put for universals. Here, bread is put for all kinds of food. Complex introversion occurs when the parallel lines are so placed that the first line corresponds in subject with the last, the second line corresponds in subject with the next to the last, and so on. If letters are assigned to the corresponding words, propositions, or subjects, they would form the pattern ABCCBA, where the mention of subjects in the first half is reversed in order in the second half of the passage. This is done for emphasis, attention being called thereby particularly to the two central members of the series. In this passage the introversion is seen thus: A. End. "Till thou return unto the ground." B. Origin. "For out of it wast thou taken." B. Origin. "For dust thou art." A. End. "And unto dust shalt thou return." Clearly, he married either a sister or other female descendent (i.e., sister's daughter) of Adam and Eve, who are said here to have begotten sons and daughters. Of necessity this must have been the case. See Le 18:6n. Some interpreters suppose that the genetic deterioration resulting from the curse placed on man for sin may have taken some generations to take effect, so marrying a sister would not have posed the problem then that it does now. Laws pertaining to incest are first mentioned in Le 18:10, 11. 20:17. Dt 27:22.

Figure of speech Hyperbole; or, Exaggeration B423: when more is said than is literally meant, also called overstatement. Here, if the flood of Noah was local, then this passage exhibits clear hyperbole. Sometimes "all" means every last one without exception (Ec 7:20. Ro √3:23. Col √1:16, 17. He 2:8); sometimes it means every one or kind without distinction, but not without exception (See √ƒ171B, Synecdoche of the Genus, Ge +√24:10n; ƒ171.O.1, Synecdoche of the Whole, Jn +3:16; ƒ121J8, Metonomy of the Subject, Jn +3:16; ƒ142, Periphrasis, Jn +1:9. ◐ƒ171F, Synecdoche of the Species, where many is put for all, Is +53:12); sometimes it means "most" or the majority (Mk *1:33. Lk 3:12 w 7:30 w Mk 1:5); sometimes it means "all" in the purview of the author and his circumstances (Ge *41:56, 57. 1 K √18:10). Consideration of the context and related passages will usually clarify which sense is to be given to "all" and kindred expressions. GENESIS 13

Abram and Lot return with great riches from Egypt, 1-5. Strife arises between Abram's herdsmen and those of Lot, 6, 7. Abram meekly refers it to Lot, to choose his part in the country, 8, 9; and Lot goes to Sodom, 10-13. God renews his promises to Abram, 14-17; who goes to Hebron and builds an altar, 18.

GENESIS 14

War is waged by four kings against the king of Sodom and his allies, who are conquered and plundered, 1-11. Lot is taken prisoner, but is rescued by Abram, 12-16. Abram returns, and is met by Melchizedek king of Salem, to whom Abram gives tithes; and by the king of Sodom, to whom he restores the spoil, except the portion of his own confederates, 17-24.

This reference to tithing shows that tithing originated before the law of Moses, and thus can be considered a pre-Mosaic institution. Later, under Mosaic law, the obligation of the Jew in Israel involved the payment of several tithes amounting to about one quarter of his income. It appears that the first tithe was paid for the support of the Levites (Le 27:30-33. Nu 18:21-32). The second tithe was to be applied to festival purposes (Dt 12:5-7, 17. 14:22-29). The third tithe was established for the support of the poor (Dt 26:12-15). Scholars differ in their opinion as to whether the third tithe was a substitute for the second tithe every third year, or whether it constituted a tithe in addition to the first two. Also, it is not clear whether the second and third tithe was based on one tenth of the whole, or on one tenth of what remained after the payment of the first tithe. See related notes (Ml 3:10n. GENESIS 15

The Lord encourages Abram; who complains that he continues childless, but is assured of a numerous posterity, 1-5. He is justified by faith, 6. He requests a pledge to confirm his faith; and being directed to prepare a sacrifice, obeys, 7-11. He is favored with a vision, prophetic of the condition of his posterity till brought out of Egypt: and Canaan is ensured by a covenant to them, 12-21.

GENESIS 16

Sarai being barren gives Hagar to Abram, 1-3. Hagar despises Sarai, who complains to Abram; he gives up Hagar to her, and Hagar, being harshly treated, flees from her, 4-6. An Angel commands her to return and submit, promises her a son and a numerous posterity, and shows their character and condition, 7-12. Hagar gives a name to the place, and returns to Sarai, 13, 14. The birth of Ishmael, and the age of Abram, 15, 16.

GENESIS 18

The Lord again appears to Abraham, who entertains angels, 1-9. A son is promised to Sarah, at which she laughs, and her misconduct is rebuked, 9-15. The Lord discovers to Abraham his purpose of destroying Sodom, 16-22; who earnestly intercedes for the inhabitants, 23-33.

Ge +13:18. 14:13. and he sat. In these verses we have a delightful picture of genuine and primitive hospitality: a venerable father sits at the tent door, not only to enjoy the current of refreshing air, but that if he saw any weary and exhausted travelers, he might invite them to rest and refresh themselves during the heat of the day, and the same custom continues in the east. It was not the custom, nor was there any necessity, for strangers to knock at the door, or to speak first, but to stand till they were invited. heat. Ge ◐15:12. ◐19:1. 31:40. Mt 20:12. Lk 12:55. GENESIS 19

Lot entertains two angels, 1-3. The abandoned Sodomites are smitten with blindness, 4-11. Lot is warned, and in vain warns his sons-in-law, 12-14. He is directed to flee with his family to the mountain, but obtains leave to retire to Zoar, 15-23. Sodom and Gomorrah are destroyed; and Lot's wife, looking back, becomes a pillar of salt, 24-26. Abraham beholds the destruction of Sodom, 27-29. Lot retires from Zoar; and is betrayed into drunkenness and incest, 30-35. The birth of Moab and Ammon, 36-38.

1. And there came two angels. Or, rather, 'the two angels came,' referring to those mentioned in the preceding chapter, and there called 'men.' It seems (from Ge 18:22) that these two angels were sent to Sodom, while the third, who was the Lord or Jehovah, remained with Abraham. Ge 18:1-3, 16, 22. sat. Ps 1:1. Pr 1:14. She was therefore struck dead and petrified, and thus remained to afterages a visible monument of the divine displeasure; being punished as a warning to others through successive generations. GENESIS 20

Abraham sojourns in Gerar, and denies his wife; whom Abimelech takes, but is warned in a dream to restore, 1-7. Abimelech expostulates with Abraham, and restores Sarah with presents and a gentle reproof, 8-16. Abimelech and his family are healed, in answer to Abraham's prayer, 17, 18.

Gerar was a city of Arabia Petraea, under a king of the Philistines, 25 miles from Eleutheropolis beyond Daroma, in the south of Judah. From Ge 10:19, it appears to have been situated in the angle where the south and west sides of Canaan met, and to have been not far from Gaza. Jerome, in his Hebrew Traditions on Genesis, says, from Gerar to Jerusalem was three days' journey. There was a wood near Gerar, on which was a monastery, noticed by Sozomen. ver. 2. Here "seed" (zera) is in the singular sense, because of the word "Isaac," and because of the singular verb "it shall be called." Zera is a collective noun (like English sheep), but the context must determine whether it is singular or plural. It is to this verse Ga 3:16 refers; not to Ge 12:7, where it is indefinite; or Ge 17:7 where the verb and pronouns show it is plural. "Thy seed" is therefore "Christ." The difference of the 30 years comes in here: 430 to the Exodus (Ex 12:40) from Ge 12:4, when Abraham was 75: 25 thence to Isaac's birth: and now, 5 to his recognition as the seed= 30 years (Adapted from Companion Bible note, p. 29, at this place).

Arthur Carr, in the opening sentence of an intriguing essay titled "The Exclusion of Chance from the Bible," states that "There is, perhaps, no point more impressively dwelt upon by the Hebrew Prophets in their interpretation of history or of human life than the exclusion of chance as an element to be taken into account" (Horae Biblicae, p. 33. See related note, Is 65:11n). Carr states further that "The pervading prophetical interpretation of history and of men's lives is that events are ordered and determined by the divine will, and not by luck or chance or happy accident" (p. 34). "It is remarkable that neither tukee nor any other word signifying luck or chance or accident occurs in the New Testament....We meet with the same phenomenon in the Old Testament" (pp. 36, 37). Thus the Biblical worldview or philosophy of sacred history identifies purpose and result in the Hebrew mind, and leaves no place for chance or fortune in any theory of life or in religious terms. The expression 'was gathered to his people' does not relate to burial, for this was not so: Abraham's "people" dwelt at this time in Haran, and he was buried at Hebron. Besides which, the fact of burial is here, and in many other places, specified over and above (see Ge 15:15. 35:29. 1 K 2:10. 11:43, etc.). Nor is it a mere synonym for dying: for in many places, as here, it is specified over and above the fact, here repeatedly expressed, of death (see ver. 17. Ge 35:29. 49:33. Nu 20:26. Dt 32:50). The only assignable sense, therefore, is that of reference to a state of further personal existence beyond death: and the expression thus forms a remarkable testimony to the O.T. belief in a future state (Henry Alford, The Book of Genesis and Part of the Book of Exodus, p. 111-112).

This figure adds something to what is said by describing a place; or any peculiarity which marks the place, and throws light on what is being treated of. Topographia is such a description of a place as exhibits it to our view; as the description of Sheol, Is 14:9-12; 30:33. The New Heaven and Earth, Is 65:17, etc. Re 21:1, etc. The future glory of Jerusalem and the Land, Ps 46:5, 6. 60:6-9. Is 33:20, 21. 35:6-10. In Ps 89:12, the description shows that the points of the compass are always (excepting perhaps parts of Ezekiel written in Babylon) reckoned with reference to Jerusalem, "The north and the south thou hast created them: Tabor (in the west) and Hermon (in the east) shall rejoice in thy name." The "Sea" is frequently mentioned by way of description to show that the West is intended: the Mediterranean being on the West of the Land. See Nu 2:18h. Jsh 16:5, 6. Ezk 42:19h. In Ps 107:3, however, the Sea evidently denotes the Red Sea, and though the word "sea" is in the Hebrew, it is rendered "South." The emphasis put upon the wonderful Exodus is thus quietly but very powerfully introduced: "And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the sea!" because the deliverance from Egypt was through the sea. In Ps 72:8, "from sea to sea" means from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf. Compare Ex 23:31. Sometimes a description of place is added and thrown in to convey a lesson, e.g., Jn 4:10, "Now there was much grass in the place." Ac 8:26, "Which is desert," to show that it mattered not to the true servant whether he ministered in a city (ver. 5), and gave joy to crowds of people (ver. 8), or whether he ministered to one soul in the desert. GENESIS 26

Isaac, because of a famine, sojourns in Gerar, and the Lord instructs and blesses him, 1-5. He denies his wife, and is detected and reproved, 6-11. The Philistines envy his prosperity; he removes from them, and they fill up, or take from him, the wells which his father and he had dug, 12-17. He digs several other wells, 18-22. The Lord blesses him at Beer-sheba, 23-25. Abimelech covenants with him, 26-33. Esau marries two Canaanitish wives, to the grief of his parents, 34, 35.

GENESIS 27

Isaac when old sends Esau to take venison, intending to bless him, 1-4. Rebekah instructs Jacob how to secure the blessing, and over-rules his objections, 5-13. The strategem succeeds, and Isaac blesses Jacob, supposing him to be Esau, 14-29. Esau afterwards arrives, complains bitterly, and by importunity obtains a blessing, 30-40. Esau purposes to murder Jacob, who is sent away to Mesopotamia, 41-46.

Hag *2:7. 1 J 2:16. raiment. The Septuagint translates it a goodly robe, which was a long garment that great men used to wear (Lk 15:22. 20:46). The priest afterwards in the law had holy garments to minister in (Ex 28:2-4). Whether the firstborn before the law had such to minister in is not certain; for, had they been common garments, why did not Esau himself or his wives keep them? But being, in likelihood, holy robes, received from their ancestors, the mother of the family kept them in sweet chests, from moths and the like; whereupon it is said (ver. 27), 'Isaac smelled the smell of his garments.' "Goodly" (Heb. desirable) is put for things desired or coveted. Raiment marked the social rank and position of the wearer, which accounts for Jacob's desire here, and his act with Joseph (Ge 37:3). Being the garment of the firstborn it doubtless denoted also his official and priestly position. Here, Heb. beged (see Ex 28:2, 4. 35:19. Le 10:6. 21:10) used of sacred things. Not the word rendered "clothes" in Dt 29:5. Perhaps this adds meaning to He 12:16, where Esau is called "profane" for having sold this his birthright (some of this material adapted from CB margin at this place).

GENESIS 29

Jacob comes to the well of Haran and confers with some shepherds, 1-8. He becomes acquainted with Rachel, 9-12. Jacob is entertained by Laban, and serves seven years for Rachel, 13-20. He is deceived by Laban with Leah; he remonstrates, and Laban excuses himself; Jacob also marries Rachel, and serves other seven years for her, 21-30. Rachel is barren; but Leah bears Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, 31-35.

28. fulfilled her week. The public marriage feast made on this occasion (ver. 22), seems to have formed the regular method of recognizing the marriage, and lasted seven days: it would therefore have been improper to have broken off the solemnities to which all the men of the place had been invited (ver. 22) and probably Laban wished to keep the fraud from the public eye. GENESIS 30

Rachel envies Leah, and complains impatiently to Jacob, who sharply rebukes her; yet at her instance takes Bilhah to wife, who bears Dan and Naphtali, 1-8. Leah gives Zilpah to Jacob, and she bears Gad and Asher, 9-13. Leah purchases Jacob's company, of Rachel, by her son's mandrakes; and bears Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah, 14-21. Rachel bears Joseph, 22-24. Jacob desires to leave Laban, who agrees with him for his future services, 25-36. Jacob's policy, whereby he becomes rich, 37-43.

GENESIS 31

Jacob is envied by Laban and his sons, 1, 2. Being commanded by God to return to his kindred, he proposes it to his wives; explains the Lord's dealings with him; and, with their consent, privately departs, taking his family and substance, 3-21. Laban pursues him, but is warned in a dream not to injure him; he overtakes Jacob and expostulates with him, 22-32. Laban searches in vain for his images, which Rachel had stolen and concealed, 33-35. Jacob vindicates himself, and complains of Laban, 36-42; they enter into a covenant, and Laban returns home, 43-55.

It is a hamper, like a cradle, having a back, head, and sides, like a great chair. Moryson describes them as 'two long chairs like cradles, covered with red cloth, to hang on the two sides of the camel' (Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, 1596, p. 247). Hanway (Travels, Vol. i. p. 190) calls them kedgavays, which 'are a kind of covered chairs, which the Persians hang over their camels in the manner of panniers, and are big enough for one person to sit in.' Thevenot (vol. i. p. 177) who calls them counes, says that they lay over them a cover which keeps them both from the rain and sun; and Mailet (Lett. p. 230) describes them as covered cages, hanging on each side of a camel. (See Harmer, Obser. vol. i. p. 445.) GENESIS 32

Jacob has a vision of angels, 1, 2. He sends a message to Esau; and, alarmed by the report of his coming with four hundred men, prays for deliverance, 3-12. He prepares a present for Esau; instructs his servants, and passes the brook Jabbok, 13-23. He wrestles at Peniel; prevails, is blessed, and called Israel; yet goes away halting, 24-32.

The northwestern part was given to Dan. (4) The Kingdom of Judah embraced the territory of the tribe of Judah and also the greater part of that of Benjamin on the northeast, Dan on the northwest, and Simeon on the South. Edom, which was conquered by David, was faithful to Judah for a time. After the kingdom of Israel was divided, B.C. 975, Judah existed as a separate kingdom until B.C. 588. Jerusalem, its capital, was taken at that time by Nebuchadnezzar. 1 K 12:17. (5) The city of Judah is mentioned in 2 Ch 25:28, and is probably the city of David, a name of Mount Zion at Jerusalem. Polyonymia; or, Many Names B775: An application of Enigma to the names of persons or places. Here, Aholibama, elsewhere called the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite, is not the Aholibama of verse 25, who was her aunt (compare ver. 2 and 25). She was also called Judith, and in Ge 26:34 this Judith is said to be the daughter of Berri the Hittite. But there is no contradiction in this, for Anah appears to have been called Beeri, or the spring-man, because he discovered the hot springs (Ge 36:24), not mules, as in the A.V. GENESIS 37

Joseph is loved by Jacob, but hated by his brethren, 1-4. His dreams and the interpretation, 5-11. Jacob sends him to his brethren, who counsel to slay him, 12-20. At Reuben's desire they cast him into a pit, 21-24; and afterwards sell him to the Ishmaelites; while Reuben grieves at not finding him, 25-30. His coat, covered with blood, is sent to Jacob, who mourns inordinately, 31-35. Joseph is brought to Egypt and sold to Potiphar, 36.

Girdlestone suggests (Synonyms of the Old Testament, Chapter 24, "Destruction, Death, Hell") that the state which we call death, i.e., the condition consequent upon the act of dying, is to be viewed in three aspects. First, there is the tomb, or sepulchre, the local habitation of the physical frame, which is called qeber, Ge 50:5 (Ge +23:4). Secondly, there is the corruption whereby the body itself is dissolved, which is represented by the word shachath, Ge 6:13, 17. 9:11, 15, with reference both to the moral corruption and also to the physical destruction of all that was living on the earth; and of the earth itself, which, as Peter said, perished (2 P 3:6). In the N.T. the verb used here (2 P 3:6, apollumi) is applied to the waste of ointment (Mt 26:8), to the destruction of physical objects, e.g., wine-skins (Mt 9:17), gold (1 P 1:7), food (Jn 6:27), and the hair of the head (Lk 21:18). In these cases it is not annihilation that is spoken of, but such injury as makes the object practically useless for its original purpose. It is applied to the destruction of the world in 2 P 3:6 in exactly the same sense; for as the world was destroyed at the Deluge, so shall it be hereafter; it will be rendered useless as a habitation for man. Nevertheless, as after the first destruction it was restored, so it may be after the second. Again, the word is applied to the perishing or being destroyed from off the face of the earth in death, when the physical frame which is the temple of life becomes untenanted; and a contrast is drawn between the power of those who can bring about the death of the body, and of Him who can destroy both body and soul in gehenna. Death is spoken of in this sense in Matthew 2:13. 8:25. 12:14. 21:41. 22:7. 26:52. 27:20. and probably in Mt 18:14. Ro 2:12. 14:15. and 1 C 8:11. The destruction of the body is compared to the disintegration of the seed which falls into the ground and dies. It is dismemberment and dissolution, and renders the body useless for the time being, so far as its original purpose is concerned, but it is not annihilation. The use of the word in the argument in 1 C 15:18 is worthy of note; it here implies, that, physically speaking, the Christian has perished, if Christ be not risen. There is not a word here about annihilation of the person (which would continue in hades), but simply of the blotting out of existence in the body. See also, for the moral sense, such passages as Mt 18:11. Lk 15:32. Is 53:6. Jn 3:15, 16. 2 P 3:9. Thirdly, there is sheol, which represents the locality or condition of the departed. There is no reason to doubt that what the grave or pit is to the body, that sheol is to the soul. unto my son. As far as Jacob knew, Joseph had been devoured by a wild beast (ver. 33), and was not buried in a grave at all; even had he supposed Joseph perished in some pit, Jacob certainly did not expect his own body to be deposited in the same place: therefore, the use of sheol in the preceding clause, considering these factors in the case, shows that Jacob expected to meet Joseph in a conscious existence after the death of his own body. 2 S +*12:23. GENESIS 42

Jacob sends ten of his sons to Egypt to buy corn, 1-5. Joseph, who knows them but is unknown to them, imprisons them as spies, 6-17. They betray before Joseph remorse for their cruelty to him: he conceals his sympathy; retains Simeon, and sends the rest home, with provisions, requiring them to bring their younger brother, 18-25. They find their money in their sacks' mouths, and are alarmed: they report the matter to Jacob, who complains, laments, is affrighted, and refuses to send Benjamin, 26-38.

many evidences in this book that the Egyptians, Hebrews, Canaanites, and Syrians could understand each other in a general way; and it appears from several passages in this very chapter (particularly ver. 24) that Joseph and his brethren understood each others' language, as his brethren and Joseph's steward also did (Ge 43:19, etc.; compare Ge ch. 39, 49). It seems to denote an officer who is called in Abyssinia, according to Mr. Bruce, Kal Hatze, 'the voice or word of the king,' who always stands at the side of a lattice window of a balcony, within which the king sits; who is never seen, but who speaks through a hole in the side of it, covered in the inside with a curtain, to this officer, by whom he speaks to the persons present. GENESIS 43

Jacob at length is persuaded to send Benjamin, who goes with his brethren into Egypt, 1-15. They are brought into Joseph's house, and are greatly alarmed, but are encouraged by Joseph's steward, 16-25. Joseph is kind to them, inquires about their father, is affected at seeing Benjamin; and they do obeisance to him, 26-29. Joseph retires to weep, and then hospitably entertains them, 30-34.

Here, Chiasmus is displayed thusly: (A) Judah's words, "The man did solemnly protest," etc. (B) Jacob's act: "If thou wilt send." (B) Jacob's act: "But if thou wilt not send him." (A) Joseph's words: "For the man said unto us," etc. The figure consists of a series of words or topics, which are repeated in reverse order, which, if assigned letters for each member or topic, would appear as A, B, C, D, E, E, D, C, B, A. Generally there is intended great emphasis upon the central members of the Chiasmus. This figure has been noted by various authorities in the following passages: Le 14:51, 52. Nu 15:35, 36. Dt 32:1-43. Ps 3:7, etc. 6:3. 7:16. ch. 23. 58:6. 89:30-34. ch. 103. Is 55:8, 9. 60:1-3. Mt 3:10-12. 7:6. 9:17. 12:22. Mk 5:2-6. Jn 5:8-11. 5:21-29. 6:36-40. 10:14, 15. 12:23-32. The book of James, as outlined in the Companion Bible, is a striking example. Many more instances of Chiasmus are given in N. W. Lund, Chiasmus in the New Testament. A Study in Formgeshichte, N. Carolina, 1942. Lund wrote numerous journal articles which furnish yet more examples. Lund's work needs to be reprinted to make his research available today, for it has great significance for the study of the style of the writers of the New Testament, elucidates many obscure passages, and provides valuable assistance for textual criticism, for both the Hebrew and Greek text of Scripture. Only 500 copies of his book were ever printed, and they are exceedingly scarce today. Though his work is scholarly, it would certainly be understandable to most serious adult students of the Bible. did solemnly protest. Heb. protesting, protested. ⁄147B, Ge +2:16. GENESIS 44

Joseph directs his steward to put the money into the mouths of his brethren's sacks, and his silver cup into that of Benjamin, 1, 2; and afterwards to pursue them and accuse them of theft, 3-6. Their sacks are searched; the cup is found; and in deep distress they return to Joseph, 7-13. They humble themselves before him, 14-17; and Judah makes a most pathetic speech, concluding with a most generous request, 18-34.

GENESIS 45

Joseph makes himself known to his brethren, 1-3; encourages them by showing them the Lord's merciful purposes in these transactions, 4-8; orders them to fetch his father and family into Egypt; and cordially embraces them, 9-15. Pharaoh confirms the invitation, 16-20. Joseph furnishes his brethren for their journeys, and exhorts them to concord, 21-24. They report the whole to Jacob, who hardly believes the tidings, but is at length revived by them, 25-28.

GENESIS 48

Jacob being sick is visited by Joseph with his two sons, 1, 2. He adopts Joseph's sons as his own children; with an affectionate mention of Rachel's death, 3-8. He blesses Joseph and them, prophetically preferring the younger to the elder, 9-20. He predicts the return of his family to Canaan, and assigns a portion there to Joseph, 21, 22.

We learn from the Greek historians, that the time of mourning was while the body was with the embalmers, which Herodotus says was seventy days. During this time the body lay in nitre, the use of which was to dry up all its superfluous and noxious moisture: and when, in the space of 30 days, this was sufficiently effected, the remaining forty, the time mentioned by Diodorus, were employed in anointing it with gums and spices to preserve it, which was properly the embalming. This sufficiently explains the phraseology of the text. mourned. Heb. wept. threescore. Nu *20:29. Dt 21:13. *34:8.

Alford states "The word literally signifies two stones, but is applied in Je 18:3 to the wheels of a potter, which, though of wood, are similar to two mill-stones in form and motion. The similitude of creation, or birth, to the making of a potter's vessel is often found in Scripture (see above references). EXODUS 4

The Lord assures Moses of his effectual assistance, by miraculous signs and gracious promises, 1-12; and is angry at his backwardness to the service; yet appoints Aaron to assist him, 13-17. Moses leaves Jethro, and sets out on his journey; and is charged with a message to Pharaoh, 18-23. He is rebuked by the way; Zipporah circumcises her son: Aaron meets Moses, and they are welcomed by the Israelites, 24-31.

If Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, did not know the name Jehovah, then Moses must have used it in Genesis by prolepsis, or anticipation (ƒ151, Ge +1:28). This, however, is most unlikely, for Abraham called the place where Isaac was about to be sacrificed "Jehovah-jireh"; and God, speaking to Jacob in Bethel, said "I am Jehovah, the God of Abraham" (Ge 22:14. 28:13). Mr. Locke and others read it interrogatively, for the negative particle, lo, not, has frequently this power in Hebrew: "I appeared unto Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, and by my name Jehovah was I not also made known unto them?" name. Heb. dodatho, has been supposed to mean his cousin and not his aunt, on the authority of the LXX. and Vulgate, who render it his paternal cousin. But this construction was probably put on the original word to save the credit of Moses and Aaron, because the marriage of an aunt is afterwards forbidden (Le 18:12, 14); for the meaning of the word is fixed by another passage, where it is said, "The name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi, in Egypt" (Nu 26:59). Moses, then, is more impartial than his commentators. and the years. 24. there. ver. 21. Ps 78:45. 105:31. the land. How intolerable a plague of flies can prove, is evident from the fact that whole districts have been laid waste by them. Such was the fate of Myuns in Ionia (Pausan. l. vii) and of Alarnae. The inhabitants were forced to quit these cities, not being able to stand against the flies and gnats with which they were pestered. Trajan was obliged to raise the siege of a city in Arabia, before which he had sat down, being driven away by the swarms of these insects (Dion Cassius, l. lxviii. Aelian de Animal. l. xi. c. 28). Hence different people had deities whose office it was to defend them against flies. Among these may be reckoned Baalzebub, the fly-god of Ekron (2 K 1:16n); Hercules, muscarum abactor, Hercules the expeller of flies; and hence Jupiter had the titles of apomuios, muiagros, muiokoros, because he was supposed to expel flies, and especially clear his temples of these insects (See Bryant, pp. 54-56).

The plague of murrain predicted, and sent on the cattle of the Egyptians, while the cattle of Israel are exempted, 1-7. The plague of boils, 8-12. Moses expostulates with Pharaoh, and predicts the plague of hail, which is sent, and causes immense devastation, 13-26. Pharaoh confesses his wickedness, deprecates further judgments, and promises to let Israel go, 27, 28. Moses intercedes, the hail ceases, and Pharaoh continues hardened, 29-35.

EXODUS 12

The month of Israel's deliverance is appointed to be the first of their year, 1, 2. The institution of the passover, and the feast of unleavened bread, 3-28. The firstborn throughout Egypt are cut off at once, 29, 30; the Israelites are sent away in haste, 31-33; they spoil the Egyptians and march out, attended by a mixed multitude, 34-39. The term of their sojourning, and the fulfilment of God's promise to Abraham, 40-42. Further rules respecting the passover, 43-51.

The first instance of the occurrence of this word, which literally means an appointed meeting; it is rendered in the Common Version (AV) 121 times congregation, 13 times company, 9 times assembly, once multitude, once swarm, once people. It is applied to all Israel, to the followers of Korah, to a band of wicked men (Ps 22:17), and to a swarm of bees (Jg 14:8), Young. Newberry states it denotes to appoint, describes a general congregation, inclusive of all. Darby renders it assembly at this place, noting it means the congregation looked at as a moral whole, a corporate person before God: see Le 4:13; 8:3. ✽S#5712h. 40. The Samaritan Pentateuch reads, "Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, and of their fathers in the land of Canaan and in the land of Egypt, was 430 years." The Alexandrine copy of the LXX. has the same reading; and the same statement is made by the apostle Paul in Ga 3:17, who reckons from the promise made to Abraham to the giving of the law. That these three witnesses have the truth, the chronology itself proves; for it is evident that the descendants of Israel did not dwell 430 years in Egypt; while it is equally evident, that the period from Abraham's entry into Canaan to the Exodus, is exactly that number. Thus, from Abraham's entrance into the promised land to the birth of Isaac, was 25 years; Isaac was 60 at the birth of Jacob; Jacob was 130 at his going into Egypt; where he and his children continued 215 years more; making in the whole 430 years. EXODUS 13

The firstborn of man, and firstlings of cattle, are sanctified to God, 1, 2. The feast of unleavened bread is appointed to be kept annually as a memorial of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, 3-10. Their children must be instructed in the meaning of these observances, 11-16. The Lord guides forth the people, 17, 18; who take with them the bones of Joseph, 19; and, under the guidance of a pillar of cloud and of fire, arrive at Etham, 20-22.

Prophet of the Common Version (Ge 20:7) does not at all give the meaning of the Hebrew word Nabi; the one is now used in English invariably to express the individual who foretells future events; the Hebrew word rarely, if ever, expresses this, but simply the recipient of a divine influence, which may or may not concern future circumstances. At Ex 7:1, Young notes thy prophet. i.e. thy mouth-piece; as already remarked, the Hebrew idea of a prophet is not that of one who foretells future events, but one who receives a revelation of God's will, and proclaims it to others. Miriam (Nu 12:2), Deborah (Jg 4:4), Huldah (2 K 22:14; 2 Ch 34:22), Noadiah (Ne 6:14), are the only females thus denominated in Scripture; Isaiah's wife is called by the same name (Is 8:3), but whether it was simply because she was the wife of the prophet, or because she really received Divine revelations, it is impossible to say positively (Young). EXODUS 16

The Israelites come to the wilderness of Sin, and murmur for want of bread, 1-4. Manna and flesh is promised, and the people are rebuked, 5-12. Quail and manna are sent, 13-15. Manna is described, and rules are given for gathering it; the people disobey in hoarding it, and in seeking it on the sabbath day, 16-31. God commands that an omer of it should be preserved, 32-36.

22. on the sixth. What the substance called manna was, is utterly unknown; but, from the circumstances in the text, it is evident that it was not a natural production, but was miraculously sent by Jehovah. These circumstances the learned Abarbinel, a most judicious Jewish interpreter, has thus enumerated: The natural manna was never found in the desert where this fell; where the common manna does fall, it is only in the spring time, in March and April, whereas this fell throughout all the months in the year; the ordinary manna does not melt in the sun, as this did (ver. 21); it does not stink and breed worms, as this did, when kept till the morning (ver. 20); it cannot be ground, or beaten in a mortar, so as to make cakes, as this was; the common manna is medicinal and purgative, and cannot be used for food and nutriment, as this was; this fell in a double proportion on the sixth day, and not on the sabbath, as it certainly would have done had it fallen naturally; it followed them in all their journeys, wherever they pitched their tents; and it ceased at the very time of the year when the other falls, namely in March, when the Israelites were come to Gilgal. Whatever this substance was, it does not appear to have been common to the wilderness. From Dt 8:3, 16, it is evident that the Israelites never saw it before; and from a pot of it being preserved, it is certain that nothing of the kind ever appeared again. ver. 5, 16. "The language is not that of delivering a new precept, but restoring an old and well known, though neglected one" (Daniel Wilson, The Lord's Day, p. 22). "It is remarkable, that three miracles were wrought, every week, in honor of the sabbath, even before the promulgation of the Mosaic law. Double the quantity fell the day before; none fell on the sabbath day; nor did that stink, which they kept for that day. This confirms the opinion, that the institution of the sabbath was from the beginning. Indeed the whole narrative implies, that reference was made to an institution before known, but not properly remembered or regarded; and not to any new law given on the occasion. Neither the inquiry of the elders, nor the language of Moses, can be consistently interpreted of an entirely new institution" (Thomas Scott). See related notes (Ge 4:3n. 29:27n. Is +*58:13n).

In consequence of the term manna having been given to a drug which is now much used in England, many persons have ignorantly supposed it to be the same sort of thing as that miraculously sent for the sustenance of the children of Israel in the wilderness. The manna of commerce comes from Calabria and Sicily, where it oozes out of a kind of ash tree, from the end of June to the end of July, and is a thick, clammy, sweet juice, partly drawn from the tree by the rays of the sun, partly by the puncture of insects, and partly by artificial means. The European manna is not so good as the Oriental, which is gathered in Syria, Arabia, and Persia, from the Oriental oak, and from a shrub which is called in Persia teranjabin. and it was. The people want water, chide with Moses, and tempt the Lord, 1, 2. Moses expostulates with them, and complains to God; and, at his command, smites the rock in Horeb, which pours out water, 3-6; the place is named Massah, and Meribah, 7. Amalek assaults Israel, and is overcome by Joshua, while Moses holds up his hands with the rod of God, 8-13. Amalek is doomed to destruction, and Moses builds an altar, called Jehovah-nissi, 14-16.

Young (Concise Critical Comments) notes "The question does not imply ignorance of what was going on, but is simply a graceful way of opening up a conversation, in which he might find an opportunity of giving utterance to his sentiments." This is a much needed grace, whether in family, business, or spiritual affairs, and this is a fine example of its practice. Further insight on this grace is given in notes at Ps 9:10 and Ro 12:8, where we see that correction given regarding the root cause of a problem, rather than to the sensitive problem itself, may win a receptive audience. Here, Jethro and Moses both demonstrate valuable qualities: the ability to give advice, and the ability to receive and profit therefrom (2 K +*5:13. Pr *9:8, 9). Moses needed to learn the valuable skill of delegating authority, a skill valuable in application to both business and worship. There is the need to set priorities, and as often as possible, to limit ourselves to do the things which we can do (by training, gift, or position) that others cannot, lest, like Moses, we assume for ourselves too much of the burden. But contrast Young's comment here (Concise Critical Comments), "This advice, though excellent as a whole, was carrying the divisions too far; for 600,000 men there must have been, according to this plan, 60,000 heads of tens, 6000 heads of hundreds, 600 heads of thousands, in all 78,600 judges! It was apparently found unworkable, for at a later period seventy elders were chosen, and fitted to assist him." Yet reference to thousands throughout the rest of the Old Testament may suggest some form of this organization remained in place (Mi +*5:2). rulers of hundreds. Jg 7:16. 1 S 25:13. Ac 1:15. rulers of fifties. Ge 18:24, 26. Mk 6:40. Lk ◐10:1, 17. rulers of tens. As noted, by this system each magistrate, ruler, or leader would have the care of only ten men. Studies of small-group dynamics suggest that 10 or 12 is the maximum size for a group where effective listening to one another (Ro +12:5. 1 C 14:26. Ep 5:19-21. Ja 5:16) can occur, essential for effective nurturing (Ep 6:4), comfort (2 C 1:4), caring (1 T +*3:5), exhortation (He +*3:13), and fellowship (Ml 3:16) for spiritual growth and the discipling of new leadership (1 T 4:16. 2 T 2:2). It was prescribed in Jewish practice that ten men as heads of families were required to establish a local synagogue, or to conduct a service. Where a building for the purpose was not available, Edersheim notes "they might meet for worship in a private dwelling, a sort of 'Synagogue in the house' (Phm 2)" (The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, vol. 1, p. 433). Israel arrives at mount Sinai, and encamps there, 1, 2. Moses hears the message of God, and delivers it to the people; they engage to obey, and he reports it to the Lord, 3-8. Preparations are made, regulations prescribed, and the time set, for the giving of the law, 9-15. The tremendous introduction to that solemn transaction, 16-25.

EXODUS 20

The ten commandments are spoken in an audible voice, by Jehovah, to the whole congregation of Israel, 1-17. The people are alarmed, and confer with Moses, 18-20. Moses receives from God an additional prohibition of idolatry, and rules for erecting an altar, 21-26.

The future of the Indicative is by Hebrew idiom frequently used for the Imperative. Under this commandment A. C. Price observes "In one sense this Commandment would cover also breaches of all the other Commandments, for every violation of duty to God or man is really robbing them of what is their due, but the reference here is clearly to what we know as theft, i.e. the wrongful acquisition of the property of some other person. It is not however always recognized how much even in this narrower sense it involves. We are apt...to neglect...the perversion of character and moral blindness from which it springs, for thefts are included by Christ among the evil things which 'proceed from the heart' (Mk 7:21, 22)." "We forget also that law is only an imperfect embodiment of morality, and tend to regard all that is not punishable by law as morally justifiable. For the Christian at any rate the Commandment must be interpreted by the Law of Love (Mt 7:12), and the gist of it seems to be that he should himself be thoroughly honest in heart, that honesty should characterize all his dealings with others, and that to enrich himself by taking advantage of the weakness or necessities or ignorance of others is a sin in the sight of God." "...it is hard to see how the teaching of Christ can be made to square with such things as the confiscations that have been the scandal of most revolutions, ...the 'bearing' and 'bulling' on the Stock Exchange, ...the extortion of enormous rents when there is dearth of accommodation; nor how any nation is entitled to be called Christian in which inferior goods are foisted on poor or ignorant purchasers and caveat emptor is regarded as a legitimate basis for business transactions, or employees are 'sweated' by their employers, or workmen cannot be trusted to do their best unless under the eye of a master. As to the last point it may be noticed how stress is constantly laid in the Bible on diligence, both in religious matters (Ex +*15:26), and also generally (Pr +*10:4); and as to idleness (Pr +*18:9), to which we may add the parables of the Talents (Mt 25:14, etc.) and the Pounds (Lk 19:12, etc.), and the references to the continual work of God and Christ (Jn 5:17; 9:4) and to Paul's labor both religious and manual (Ac +*18:3)" (Biblical Studies, pp. 147, 148). steal. Young notes "The primary idea of the original word is, to do a thing secretly, as in Ge 31:27; 40:15; 2 S 15:6; 19:3, 41; Jb 4:12; 21:18; 27:20." ✻S#1589h: Ge 30:33. 31:19, 20, 26, 27, 30, 32, 39. 40:15. 44:8. There is difference of opinion and practice in counting and dividing the ten commandments. That there are expressly ten commandments (Heb. words) is stated at Ex 34:28; Dt 4:13; 10:4. This tenth commandment is sometimes made into two, the clause regarding coveting thy neighbor's wife being made the tenth. Some who arbitrarily choose to make the division here eliminate commandment number two, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," for the second commandment is an embarrassment to their own unscriptural practice of 'venerating' images in religious worship. Clearly, the first commandment forbids polytheism; the second forbids idolatry. This tenth commandment is never cited in the New Testament as two separate commandments. If one counts the separate prohibitions it contains, there are eight separate prohibitions, prohibitions against inordinate, unrestrained, desire for a neighbor's (1) house, (2) wife, (3) manservant, (4) maidservant, (5) ox, (6) ass, (7) anything else of his, (8) or (see Dt 5:21) his field. Why should a division be made for a separately enumerated commandment at the clause regarding coveting thy neighbor's wife? The first and second commandments are not cited as such in the New Testament. Their subject matter is not always considered separately, for the subject of polytheism is found at Mt 4:10 and Ac 17:23, 24, 25; 1 C 8:5, 6; the subject of idolatry is found at Ac 17:29; 1 C 8:4; 10:7, 14, 19, 20; 1 J 5:21. There does not appear in this listing any reason why the tenth commandment should be enumerated as two, and the second commandment combined with the first, as some have done, particularly when the probable motive for doing so is considered.

The true sense of this passage seems to be that assigned by Dr. Cudworth, from a MS. comment of a Karaite Jew. "It was a custom with the ancient heathens, when they had gathered in all their fruits, to take a kid, and boil it in the dam's milk; and then in a magical way, to go about and sprinkle all their trees, and fields, and gardens, and orchards with it, thinking by these means, that they should make them fruitful, and bring forth more abundantly in the following year. EXODUS 24

Moses, being called to go up to the mount, delivers the laws to Israel, and they consent to covenant with God, 1-3. An altar and twelve pillars are prepared, and the covenant is ratified, with sacrifices, and the sprinkling of blood, 4-8. Moses, Aaron, and his sons, and the elders of Israel, are favored with a vision of God, and feast before him, 9-11. Moses ascends the mount, Joshua at first accompanying him; he leaves Aaron and Hur to rule the people; and abides in the mount forty days and nights, 12-18.

Directions for making the ten curtains of the sanctuary, 1-6. The eleven curtains of goats' hair; and the coverings of rams' skins and badgers' skins, 7-14. The boards, sockets, and bars, 15-30. The veil and pillars to separate the most holy place, 31-33. The arrangement of the furniture in the sanctuary; and the hanging for the door, 34-37.

1. the tabernacle with ten curtains. The word mishcan, here rendered tabernacle, from shachan, to dwell, means simply a dwelling-place or habitation (*S#4908h, Ex +25:9n). "When God had brought the children of Israel out of Egypt," says the very learned Dr. Cudworth, "resolving to manifest himself in a peculiar manner present among them, he thought good to dwell amongst them in a visible and external manner; and therefore, while they were in the wilderness, and sojourned in tents, he would have a tent or tabernacle built, to sojourn with them also. Now, the tabernacle being thus a house for God to dwell in visibly, to make up the notion of dwelling or habitation complete, there must be all things suitable to a house belonging to it. Hence, in the holy place, there must be a table and a candlestick, because these were the ordinary furniture of a room. The table must have its dishes, and spoons, and bowls, and covers, belonging to it, though they were never used; and always be furnished with bread upon it. The candlestick must have its lamps continually burning," etc. Ex 16:16 (◐S#168h). 25:8, 9n. 27:21n. ◐33:7n. *36:8-19. 40:◐2n, 17-19, 33n. 1 Ch 17:1. 21:29. Jn=1:14. 2:21. He 8:2. 9:9, 23, 24. 21. the tabernacle of the congregation. Rather, tent of meeting. The Holy Spirit never speaks of the "tabernacle of the congregation," as the Hebrew ohel moheed is frequently but erroneously rendered. The tabernacle, Heb. mishkan (*S#4908h, Ex +25:9), is properly the dwelling place of God, containing the presence of Jehovah evidenced in the light of the Shekinah Glory, or cloud, in the Holy of Holies. Such was certainly not the place where the people gathered for worship! Thus the tent of meeting, or tent of meeting by appointment, or at appointed seasons, Heb. ohel moheed, is connected with the assembly of the people. For S#168h, ohel, tent, Ex +16:16. The lights and perfections; rendered by the LXX. manifestation and truth; and, by the Vulgate, doctrina et veritas, doctrine and truth. Among the various and contradictory opinions respecting the form and substance of these mysterious appendages, the most probable seems to be that of Josephus, Philo, Bp. Patrick, Parkhurst, and the Jewish writers generally; who state, that they were no other than the twelve precious stones of the high priest's breastplate. In support of this statement, it is observed, (1) That in the description of the high priest's breastplate, Ex 39:8, et seq., the Urim and Thummim are not mentioned, but only the rows of stones; and on the contrary, in Le 8:8, the Urim and Thummim are expressly mentioned, but not a word is said of the four rows of stones. (2) As Moses has given such a particular description of every thing relative to the high priest's dress, these would certainly have been described had they been different from what was previously mentioned. The wave offering and the heave offering are thus distinguished by the Jewish writers: the former was waved horizontally towards the four cardinal points, to signify that He to whom it was consecrated was the Lord of the whole earth; the latter was lifted perpendicularly upward and downward, in token of its being devoted to the God of heaven. Literally, the ram of filling; so called, according to some, because at the consecration of the priests, certain pieces of the sacrifice were put into their hands (ver. 24); on which account their consecration itself is called filling their hands (Ex 28:41). Rabbi Solomon gives a different reason for the ram being so called; because the sacrifice completed the consecration, and thereupon the priests were fully invested in their office. Accordingly, the LXX. render it by teleiosis, consummation. See He 7:28.

Baird pointedly asks, "will it be insisted that the priests as they came into the sanctuary at the appointed times of service, successively, climbed to the top of the laver and, balancing on its brim, immersed their hands and feet; and, then, in fulfillment of their official duties, immersed in the water thus fouled, the inwards, or bowels and intestines, and the pieces of the sacrifices, about to be offered to God? The supposition would be indecent and profane. And yet, this is the unavoidable result of demanding immersion, in this case. For, the same language is used in requiring the washing of the priests and of the sacrifices, and there was but one laver, to supply all demands for water at the sanctuary" (p. 132). Heb. ruach, Ge +41:38. Ruach Elohim, rather, "a spirit of God;" which is a usual Hebraism, signifying "an excellent spirit;" or, as we should now say, "a distinguished genius for the work he had to perform." No man, by course of reading or study, ever acquired a genius of any kind: we call it natural, and say it was "born with the man:" Moses teaches us to consider it divine. The prophet Isaiah (Is 28:24-29) pointedly refers to this sort of teaching as coming from God, even in the most common and less difficult arts of life. Dark as the heathens were, yet they acknowledged that all talents and the seeds of all arts came from God. workmanship. 1 C=3:10.

EXODUS 32

Aaron, at the people's instigation, makes a golden calf, and they worship it, 1-6. God informs Moses, who intercedes for Israel, and prevails, 7-14. He comes down from the mount, breaks the tables of the law, destroys the idol, and expostulates with Aaron, 15-24. He commissions the Levites, who slay three thousand of the criminals, 25-29. He again intercedes for the nation, 30-35.

EXODUS 33

The Lord orders Moses to Lead the people to Canaan, under the conduct of an angel, refusing himself to go with them, 1-3. The people express sorrow and humiliation, 4-6. Moses removes the tabernacle out of the camp; and the Lord there displays his glory, and communes with Moses, while the people worship at their tent doors, 7-11. Moses prevails with the Lord to accompany them, and desires to behold his glory, 12-23.

EXODUS 34

Moses is commanded to hew two tables of stone, and to ascend mount Sinai alone, 1-4. The Lord proclaims his name, and Moses worships, 5-9. The Lord renews his covenant with Israel, and repeats many laws before given, 10-27. Moses, after forty days' fasting, returns with the tables of the law: his face shines, and he covers it with a veil, 28-35.

18. The pins. These, as Dr. Wall observes, were not particularly mentioned. Josephus says, that to every board of the tabernacle, and to every pillar of the hangings of the court, there were ropes or cords, fastened at the top of the board or pillar, and that the other end of the rope was fastened to a passalaos, a nail, or pin, which at a good distance off, was driven into the ground up to the head, a cubit deep. This was to keep the tabernacle from being blown down by the wind. Dr. Shaw, describing the tents of the Bedouins, says, "These tents are kept firm and steady by bracing or stretching down their eaves with cords tied to wooden hooked pins, well pointed, which they drive into the ground with a mallet; one of these pins answering to the nail, as the mallet does to the hammer, which Jael used in fastening to the ground the temples of Sisera" (Jg 4:21). The first and lowermost was made of fine linen, richly embroidered with figures of cherubim, in shades of blue, purple, and scarlet (ver. 8-13). It is reasonable to suppose, that the right side of this curtain was undermost, and so it formed a beautiful ceiling on the inside of the tabernacle. The second covering, which lay over the embroidered one, was made of a sort of mohair (ver. 14-17), and the fourth, or uppermost one, which was to keep the others from the weather, was made of tachash, or badgers' skins. Ex ◐25:5n.

20. boards. See on Ex 26:15-25. 40:18, 19. shittim wood. Ex 25:5, 10. Nu 25:1. Dt 10:3.

21. The length. Each of these boards, taking the cubit at nearly twenty-two inches, was about eighteen feet long, and two feet nine inches broad. As these boards are said to be standing up (ver. 20), their length was consequently the height of the tabernacle; and as the two sides were composed of twenty of these, standing up (ver. 23, 25), and the west end of six, with two boards to project at the corners (ver. 27, 28), the tabernacle must therefore have been thirty cubits, or fifty-five feet long, and about ten cubits, or eighteen feet broad. These boards were fastened at the bottom by two tenons in each board (Ex 26:17), which fitted into two mortices in the foundation, at the top by links or hasps, and on the sides by the wooden bars, which ran through rings or staples in each of the boards. The boards and bars were all overlaid with gold; and their rings for the staves, and their hasps at top, were of the same metal. The foundation on which they stood consisted of about ninety-six solid blocks of silver, two under each board, about eighteen inches long, and of a suitable thickness; and each weighing about a talent, or about a hundredweight. Four blocks of silver formed the bases of the columns which supported the curtain that divided the inside of the tabernacle into two rooms.

35. a vail of blue. Parachoth, from parach, to separate, divide, make a distinction between somewhat, the inner vail, which divided the tabernacle into two, and separated, and made a distinction, between the Holy place and the Holy of Holies. This vail was made of the same rich materials as the inner covering of the tabernacle, and curiously embroidered with the cherubim and other ornaments. Though it does not appear from Scripture at what distance from either end of the tabernacle this vail was hung, yet it is reasonably conjectured, that it divided it in the same proportion in which the temple, built after this model, was divided; that is, two thirds of the whole length were allotted to the first room, and one third to the second; so that the room beyond the vail, the Holy of Holies, was exactly square, being ten cubits each way, and the first room, the sanctuary, was twice as long as it was broad. See on Ex 26:31-35. 30:6. 40:21. Mt 27:51. He 10:20.

36. pillars. Je 1:18.

37. an hanging. This vail was a fine embroidered curtain, of the same materials and of the same workmanship as the inner vail and inner covering of the tabernacle. The text does not say how low it hung. Philo makes it touch the ground; but Josephus will have it to come down but half way, so that the people might have a view of the inside of the tabernacle; but then he says there was another curtain over that, which came to the ground, to keep it from the weather, and was drawn aside on the sabbath and other festivals. EXODUS 40

The tabernacle is commanded to be reared, anointed, and consecrated, 1-12. Aaron and his sons to be sanctified, 13-15. Moses performs all things accordingly, 16-33. A cloud covers the tabernacle, 34-38.

2. the first month. ver. 17. Ex 12:1, 2. 13:4. Nu 7:1. tabernacle. ver. 6, 18, 19. Ex 26:1, 7, 30. 27:21. 30:36. 35:11. 36:18. The heathen temples were evident imitations of the tabernacle and temple. They consisted of, (1) the area, or porch; (2) the naos, or temple; (3) the adytum, or holy place, also called penetrale and sacrarium; (4) the apisthodomos, or inner temple, where they had their mysteria, and which answered to the Holy of Holies. One of the most complete imitations of the tabernacle and its whole service is found in the ancient temple of Hercules at Gades, now Cadiz, in Spain; in which the beams were so ancient that they were supposed to be incorruptible. Women were not permitted to enter, nor swine to come near it; the priests wore no parti-colored vests, but were clothed in fine linen, with bonnets of the same; they offered incense with their clothes ungirded (ch. 20:26); they wore a stud of purple on their vest; they ministered bare footed, kept the strictest continency, kept a perpetual fire on their altars; and had no image in their sacred place (See Silius Italicus, Punicor. l. iii. v. 77-31).

The tabernacle might either be called a house or a tent, because it had wooden walls and partitions like a house, and curtains and hangings like a tent; but as it externally resembled a common oblong tent, and the wooden walls were without a roof, and properly only supports for the many curtains and hangings spread over them, it is more properly called a tent. Even ordinary tents of the Arabs have at least two main divisions; the innermost for the women, and hence called sacred, i.e. cut off, inaccessible. In the tent of an emir the innermost space is accessible to himself only, or those whom he particularly honors; into the outer tent others may come. The furniture is costly, the floor covered with a rich carpet, and has a stand with a censer and coals, on which incense is strewed. Hence we have the simple idea after which this magnificent royal tent of the Hebrews, was made. hanging. Jn 10:9. 14:6. Ep 2:18. He 4:14-16. So Moses. Ex 39:32. 1 K 6:9. Zc 4:9. The law against eating the fat or eating the blood pertained to the blood contained in the larger veins and arteries, and the fat or suet within the animal, which exists in a separate or unmixed state (as the caul, mesentery, kidneys, and whatever else of the internal fat which was easily separable, together with the whole of the tail); for the blood which assumes the form of gravy, and the fat which is intermixed with the other flesh, might be eaten. The provision against eating blood has no bearing upon the modern day medical practice of blood transfusion, which was not in view; and, as it does not have anything to do with eating or digesting of the blood, has no possible legitimate connection with this law.

6. trespass offering. It is remarkable, that in this and the following verse, the sacrifice offered is indifferently called asham, a trespass offering, and chattath, a sin offering; yet the Marginal References show that these differ in several respects. Sin offerings were sometimes offered for the whole congregation; trespass offerings never, but only for particular persons. Bullocks were sometimes used for sin offerings, never for trespass offerings. The blood of the sin offerings was put on the horns of the altar, that of the trespass offerings was only sprinkled round the bottom of the altar. The sin offering seems to have been for the expiation of offences committed in matters of religion, from a mistake or inadvertency respecting the law; but the trespass offering was required for the casual deviations from the ritual law, when well known, or for crimes against moral precepts, implying injustice to man. LEVITICUS 9

The newly consecrated priests, directed by Moses, enter on their office with the first offerings of Aaron for himself and the people, 1-7. The sin offering, 8-11, and the burnt offering for himself, 12-14. The offerings for the people, 15-22. Moses and Aaron bless the people; and the glory of the Lord appears, 22, 23. 22. his hand. or, as the Greek has it, his hands. Menachem gives the reason why it is written hand, to signify the right hand, because that was lifted up higher than the left. The lifting up of the hand was a gesture used in speaking, and signifying any weighty thing, Is 49:22; and particularly in swearing, Ge 14:22; praying, Ps 28:2; and blessing, either of God, Ps 134:2, or of men, as in this place. Paul, speaking of prayer, uses the phrase, "lifting up holy hands," 1 T 2:8; as also David: "Let the lifting up of my hands be as the evening sacrifice," Ps 141:2. Ge 14:18-20. Nu 6:23-27. LEVITICUS 10

Nadab and Abihu, burning incense with strange fire, are consumed by fire from the Lord, 1, 2. Moses shows the reason of this judgment, and orders their burial; while Aaron holds his peace, 3-5. Aaron and his other sons are forbidden to mourn for them, 6, 7. The priests are forbidden wine, or strong drink, when going into the sanctuary, 8-11. Moses gives directions about eating the holy things, 12-15. A mistake is discovered about the people's sin offering; Moses reproves the priests, and Aaron excuses it, 16-20.

Jsh 13:1. I put the plague of leprosy. It was probably from this text, that the leprosy has been in general considered to be a supernatural disease, inflicted immediately by God himself; but it cannot be inferred from this expression, as it is well known, that in Scripture, God is frequently represented as doing what, in the course of his providence, he only permits to be done. Most understand it of the former, that if the person who had the issue rinsed his hands in water, just before he touched any one, he did not communicate any pollution; otherwise, he did. But the Syriac refers it to the person touched by him, though it seems strange that he should be cleansed by washing his hands, when perhaps some other part was touched. These laws were principally intended to impress the minds of the Israelites with reverence for the sanctuary; and, on the one hand, to show them what need they had for circumspection, and purity of heart and life, in order to worship the holy God with acceptance; and, on the other hand, that being sinners in a world full of temptations and defilements, they would continually need forgiveness, through the great atonement typified by all the sacrifices, and the sanctification of the Spirit, shadowed forth by all the purifications. While they were encamped in the desert, it would not be very burdensome to bring the prescribed oblations; but after they were settled in Canaan, many of them at a great distance from the tabernacle, this would become much more difficult. We may, however, observe, continues Mr. Scott, that many of these cases stated only required such washings as might any where be performed; and that those, respecting which sacrifices were appointed, would more rarely occur. We may also suppose, that provided these were brought, when the person who had been unclean first came to the sanctuary, it would suffice: though distance or other hindrances prevented its being done immediately, at the expiration of the seven days.

The man that took the scape goat into the wilderness, and they that burned the sin offering, were to be looked upon as ceremonially unclean, and must not come into the camp till they had washed their clothes and bathed their flesh in water, which signified the defiling nature of sin; even the sacrifice which was made sin, was defiling: also the imperfection of the legal sacrifices, they were so far from taking away sin, that they left some stain even upon those that touched them.

This phrase specifies where the washing took place. Samuel J. Baird notes "On the day of atonement, the high priest was required, at a certain time in the order of the observance for the day, being alone in the sanctuary, to 'wash his flesh with water in the holy place.' Here, at least, there is no room for controversy. The laver was outside the door of the tabernacle. The priest was within, 'in the holy place.' In it, there was no vessel in which an immersion could take place. Immersion was not only improbable.—It was impossible. The circumstances require us to accept the language of the place, just as it stands; and to believe that the high priest, on this occasion washed himself, and that he did so, as all washings of the person are performed, 'with water,' as an instrumental means; and that it was applied with his own hands to his own person" (A History of Bible Baptism, p. 132). Re 9:20. devils, Seirim, properly signifies hairy, or hairy ones; and hence is used not only for he-goats, but also for some fabulous beings or sylvan gods, to whom was ascribed the form of goats. Maimonides says that the Zabian idolaters worshipped demons under the form of goats; and that this custom being spread among other nations, gave occasion to this precept. He-goats, however, are probably intended here, which were objects of divine honor among the Egyptians under the name of Mendes. Herodotus says that all goats were worshipped in Egypt; but particularly he-goats. From these seem to have sprung Pan, Silenus, and the innumerable herd of those imaginary beings, fauns, satyrs, dryads, etc., all woodland gods, and held in veneration by the Greeks and Romans. gone a whoring. Though this phrase is equivalent, in Scripture, to that of committing idolatry, yet it is to be taken sometimes in a literal sense. Baalpeor and Ashtaroth were worshipped with obscene rites; and public prostitution formed a great part of the worship among the Egyptians, Moabites, Canaanites, Greeks, and Romans. Le 20:5. Ex 34:15. 22. lie with mankind. Homosexuality is not a legitimate alternative life style, it is a sin which in Israel merited the death penalty. In the New Testament it is a sin the practice of which disqualifies the individual from inheriting the kingdom of God (1 C √6:9, 10. Ga 5:21. Ep 5:5). No saved individuals practice this sin. Believers are to hate the sin, but love the sinner, and exercise compassion toward such lost individuals, seeking to win them to a saving knowledge of Christ (1 C 6:11. Ja 5:20. Ju 22, 23). The passage of human laws in an attempt to legitimatize the practice as a life style are directly contrary to the word of God, and will subject the offending nation to the wrath of God (ver. 24. Ps 9:17). Under no circumstances are Bible believing Christians to support financially or otherwise the activities of groups which support the practice of homosexuality or lesbianism, or which otherwise advocate the "rights" of those who practice these sins (2 Ch +*19:2. The Hebrews had several kinds of offerings, which they called corban (Le 1:2n. Mk 7:11n). Some were free-will offerings, and others were of obligation. The firstfruits, the tenths, and the sin offerings were of obligation; the peace offerings, vows, offerings of oil, wine, bread, and other things which were made to the temple, or to the ministers of the Lord, were offerings of devotion: these constituted the greater part. They indeed were a shadow of good things to come, which we enjoy in full fruition through the one great sacrifice, even Jesus Christ.

Need we wonder then, that God should have made laws of this nature, and appointed the punishment of death for these crimes? 5. not make baldness. This custom is also called 'rounding the corners of the head' (Le 19:27), and seems to have been performed in honor of some idol. Herodotus observes (l. iii. c. 8) that the Arabs shave, or cut their hair round, in honor of Bacchus, who, they say, had his hair cut in this way. He also says (l. iv. c. 175) that the Macians, a people of Lybia, cut their hair round, so as to leave a tuft on the top of the head. In this way the Chinese still cut their hair. The hair was much used in divination among the ancients: and for purposes of religious superstition among the Greeks (See Homer, Iliad, xxiii. v. 142. and Virgil, Aenead, iv. 698). Ge +17:21 (✱S#4150h). God appointed several festivals among the Jews. The Passover was celebrated on the 14th, or rather 15th day of the first month in the ecclesiastical year, which was the seventh of the civil year, and lasted seven days. The Pentecost was celebrated on the fiftieth day after the passover, in memory of the law's being given to Moses on Mount Sinai, fifty days, or seven weeks after the departure out of Egypt. The word is derived from the Greek word Pentakosta, which signifies the fiftieth. The Hebrews call it the feast of weeks, Ex 34:22. The feast of trumpets, celebrated on the first day of the civil year, when a trumpet was sounded, to proclaim its commencement, which was in the month Tisri, answering to our September, Le 23:24, 25. The new moons, or first days of every month, were, in some sort, a consequence of the feast of trumpets. God ordained that, by giving him the firstfruits of every month they should acknowledge him as the Lord of all their time, and own his providence, by which all times and seasons are ordered. The feast of expiation or atonement was kept on the tenth day of Tisri or September: the Hebrews call it Kippur, i.e. pardon, or expiation, because it was instituted for the expiation of all their sins. The feast of tents or tabernacles was so called, because the Israelites kept it under green tents or arbors, in memory of their dwelling in tents in their passage through the wilderness. It was celebrated on the 15th day of Tisri, and continued eight days: the first and last days were most solemn. Besides the feasts mentioned by Moses, we find the feast of lots, or Purim, which was celebrated among the Jews of Shushan on the 14th of Adar, which answers to our February. The feast of the dedication of the temple, or rather, of the restoration of the temple, which had been profaned by Antiochus Epiphanes, which is thought to be the feast mentioned in the gospel, Jn 10:22, was celebrated in the winter. feasts. Moadim, properly means assemblies, convened at an appointed time and place. ver. 4, 37. To the institution of the feast of pentecost is annexed a repetition of that law, by which they were required to leave the gleanings of their fields, and the corn that grew on the ends of the butts, for the poor. It may come in here as a thing which the priests must take occasion to remind the people of, when they brought their firstfruits, intimating to them, that to obey even in this small matter was better than sacrifice; and that unless they were obedient, their offerings should not be accepted. It also taught them that the joy of harvest should express itself in charity to the poor, who must have their due out of what we have, as well as God his. They that are truly sensible of the mercy they receive from God, will without grudging show mercy to the poor.

The month Tisri was not only anciently, but still is, reckoned by the Jews the first month of the year; and the feast of tabernacles, kept in this month, was said to be, as it is correctly rendered in the margin, "at the revolution of the year" (Ex 34:22); importing, that at this season the year had revolved, and was beginning anew. So that this feast was the new year's day, on which the people rejoiced in a grateful remembrance of God's benefits, and implored his blessing for the future year. Le 25:9. Nu 29:1-6. The Septuagint, which was made at least 250 years before Christ, renders it "Whosoever nameth the name of the Lord, let him die;" from which we see that the Jews at this time were accustomed to pronounce adonay, or Lord, instead of Jehovah; for in place of it the Septuagint always put o Kurios. Philo, who lived in the time of Christ, explains the passage, connecting it with the preceding verse, in the following terms: "Strange gods are not to be blasphemed, lest men should be accustomed to think meanly of the Deity. But if any one (I do not say blaspheme, for that is not here the question, but) even so much as utter unseasonably the name of the LORD of men and gods, he shall die" (Opera, Vol. II, p. 166). 11. A jubilee. Respecting the literal meaning of the word yobel, or yovel, critics are not agreed. Some derive it from Jubal, who was the inventor of musical instruments (Ge 4:21), because this year was one of mirth and joy, on which music is a common attendant, or else because it was ushered in by the musical sound of the trumpet. Others tell us that this year was so called because it was proclaimed with trumpets made of ram's horns. The most natural derivation, however, of the word seems to be from hovil, the Hiphil form of yaval, to recall, restore, or bring back, because this year restored all slaves to their liberty, and brought back all alienated estates to their primitive owners. Accordingly, the LXX. render it her aphesis, a remission; and Josephus says it signifies eleutherian, liberty. jubilee. Le 27:17. ye shall. ver. 5-7.

21. I will. As it is here graciously promised, that the sixth year was to bring forth fruits for three years, not merely for two, it is evident that both the sabbatical year and the year of jubilee were distinctly provided for. They were not to sow from the sixth year to the eighth year, omitting two seed times; nor reap from the sixth to the ninth, omitting two harvests. No legislator, unless conscious of being divinely commissioned, would have committed himself by enacting such a law as this; nor would any people have submitted to receive it, except in consequence of the fullest conviction that a divine authority had dictated it. It therefore stands as a proof that Moses acted by the express direction of the Almighty, and that the people were fully persuaded of the reality of his divine mission by the miracles he wrought. 29. house in. A very proper difference is here made between houses in a city and houses in the country. Houses in a city might be redeemed any time in the course of a year; but after that time could not be redeemed, or go out with the jubilee: houses in the country might be redeemed at any time; and if not redeemed must go out with the jubilee. The reason in both cases is sufficiently evident; the house in the city might be built merely for purposes of trade or traffic—the house in the country was much builded on, or attached to, the inheritance which God had divided to the respective families. It was therefore necessary that the same law should apply to the house as to the inheritance; which necessity did not exist with regard to the house in the city. And, as the house in the city might be purchased for the purpose of trade, it would be very inconvenient for the purchaser, when his business was established, to be obliged to remove. year. 50. reckon. ver. 27. price of his sale. This was a very equitable law, both to the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and to the Israelite who had been sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice or disadvantage of his master. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served, from that time till the jubilee; and then taking the current wages of a servant, per year, at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews hold that the kindred of such a person were bound, if in their power, to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; and we find (Ne 5:8) that this was done by the Jews on their return from the Babylonish captivity. according to the time. ver. 40, 53. Dt 15:18. Jb 7:1, 2. 14:6. Is 16:14. 21:16.

52. jubilee. The jubilee was a wonderful institution, and of great service to the religion, freedom, and independence of the Hebrews. It was calculated to prevent the rich from oppressing the poor, and reducing them to perpetual slavery; and to hinder their obtaining possession of all the lands by purchase, mortgage, or usurpation. It was further intended, that debts should not be multiplied too much, lest the poor should be entirely ruined; that slaves should not always continue in servitude; that personal liberty, equality of property, and the regular order of families might, as much as possible, be preserved; and that the people might thus be strongly attached to their country, lands, and inheritances. The Concise Bible Dictionary notes (p. 456) that "There is no record of the Sabbatical year and the year of Jubilee ever being kept. Lev. 26:34, 35 predicts what would happen if the Israelites did not let the land keep the sabbaths. It reads almost like a prophecy: the land should lie desolate 'because it did not rest in your sabbaths.' In Jer. 25:11, 12; 29:10; Dan 9:2 the actual desolation is said to be seventy years. And as the land was to have rested one year in every seven, it follows that the 70 answer to 70 X 7= 490 years. Now the kingdom began B.C. 1095, and Jerusalem was taken in 606, which is just 490 years, and seems to confirm the silence in the history of Israel as to their giving the land the prescribed sabbaths. Apparently in this, as in everything else, they failed to obey; but the Jubilee will be made good to them in grace when they own their Messiah." The jubilee is a type of the millennium. It speaks of a time, never yet celebrated, when Israel shall be restored to God's favor, and shall return to the undisturbed possession (Is 11:11; Am *9:15; Mi 4:6, 7) of her land, when the great jubilee trumpet will recall them to worship in Jerusalem (Is *27:12, 13). Others suppose that the 27th chapter was added after the book was finished; and, therefore, there is apparently a double conclusion, one at the end of this, and another at the end of the 27th chapter. He that maketh a singular vow must be the Lord's, 1, 2. The estimation of a person, 3-8; of a beast given by vow, 9-13; of a house, 14, 15; of a field, and the redemption thereof, 16-27. No devoted thing may be redeemed, 28, 29. The tithe may not be changed, 30-34.

A vow is a religious promise made to God, for the most part with prayer, and paid with thanksgiving. Vows were either of abstinence (Nu chs. 6, 30.), or the devoting of something to the Lord, as sacrifices (Le 7:16), or the value of persons, beasts, houses, or lands, concerning which the law is here given. A man might vow or devote himself, his children, his domestics, his cattle, his goods, etc.; and respecting the redemption of all these, rules are laid down in this chapter. But if, after consecrating these things, he refused to redeem them, they then became the Lord's property for ever. The persons continued all their lives devoted to the sanctuary; the goods were sold for the profit of the temple, or the priests; and the animals, if clean, were offered in sacrifice; and if not proper for sacrifice, were sold, and the proceeds devoted to sacred uses. This is a general view of the different laws relative to vows, mentioned in this chapter. Ec 5:4, 5. for the Lord. Sometimes a person in his zeal for the Lord might wish to devote himself, or some of his family to His service, but as this would have unduly increased the number of those employed in divine service, while they were allowed thus to devote themselves, they were required also to redeem themselves by paying an equivalent for the services in money. The generous spirit of self-dedication was thus cherished and yet restrained at the same time (Young). persons. Heb. nephesh, Ge +12:5. thy estimation. or, thy valuation. ver. 3, 4, *18. Le 5:15, 18. 6:6. Jb 28:13, 17. Ps 55:13. lit. arrangement, ordering; this was according to the probable value of the person's services and position, and was expressly defined to prevent an exorbitant overcharge on the one hand, or a rash vow on the other (Young).

A rich person might make a vow of some poorer person over whom he had authority, and this poor person might be unable to redeem himself by his poverty, and might claim a reduction thereupon, but the law here declares that the valuation is to be reckoned not by the ability of him who is vowed, but of him who is vowing (Young).

9. all...is holy. i.e. separated and devoted; it cannot be redeemed like a human being, a house, or a field (Young).

When we consider, that there was not less than 14 tons 266 pounds of metal employed in the tabernacle (see note on Ex 38:24), besides the immense weight of the skins, hangings, cords, boards, and posts, we shall find it was no easy matter to transport this movable temple from place to place. The Gershonites, who were 7500 in number, had to carry the tent, coverings, vail, hangings of the court, cords, etc. (ver. 25, 26); the Kohathites, who were 8600, the ark, table, candlestick, altars, and instruments of the sanctuary (ver. 31); and the Merarites, who were 6200, the boards, bars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins, and cords (ver. 36, 37; Nu 4:44n). the tabernacle and. The law prohibiting any person, except the high priest on one day in the year, to enter into the most holy place, must have admitted an exception while the Israelites were in the wilderness: that exception, therefore, is here expressly made; and the directions given respecting it must be religiously observed, or the service could not be safely performed. While the cloud rested on the tabernacle, the general rule was in force; but when it was removed, then the priests might enter, to prepare the sacred vessels for removal. ver. 15. 44. The family of Merari, though smaller than either of the other families of Levi, yet had a greater number of able men than any of them; for out of 6200 males of a month old and upwards, we find 3200 who were neither too young nor too old for the service of the sanctuary; which was more than one half of their whole number. In this the wisdom and providence of God appear most conspicuously; for the Merarites were charged with the heaviest part of the sanctuary, as the boards, bars, sockets, etc.; and though wagons were afterwards provided for them, yet the loading and unloading of the sockets, and other things of great weight, would require much strength, both bodily and numerical (compare ver. 36, 40, with Nu 3:22, 23, 24, *25n). Thus God ever manifests his wisdom, in fitting men for the work to which they are appointed, whether with respect to number or gifts: "For to one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another, the word of knowledge, by the same Spirit," etc., "...dividing to every man severally as he will" (See 1 C 12:8-11). three thousand and. The Nazarites were of two kinds: such as were devoted to God by their parents in their infancy, or even sometimes before they were born; and such as devoted themselves. The former were Nazarites for life; the latter commonly bound themselves to observe the laws of the Nazarites for a limited time. The Nazarites for life were not bound to the same strictness as the others, concerning whom the laws relate.

Therefore they had double the number of wagons to what the Gershonites had assigned them.

24. from twenty. In Nu 4:3, the Levites are appointed to the service of the tabernacle at the age of 30 years; and in 1 Ch 23:24, they are ordered to commence their work at 20 years of age. In order to reconcile this apparent discrepancy, it is to be observed, (1) At the time of which Moses speaks in Nu 4:3, the Levitical service was exceedingly severe, and consequently required full grown, robust men, to perform it: the age of 30 was therefore appointed as the period for commencing this service, the weightier part of which was probably intended. (2) In this place God seems to speak of the service in a general way, hence the age of 25 is fixed. (3) In David's time, and afterwards, in the fixed tabernacle and temple, the laboriousness of the service no longer existed, and hence 20 years was the age appointed. from twenty and five. This person is also called Reuel in Ex 2:18; but the Hebrew is the same in both places. The reason of this difference is, that the letter ayin is sometimes pronounced according to the vowel which is attached to it, and sometimes as a strong guttural, which scarcely any European can enunciate; therefore, as an approach to its sound, represented by g, gn, or ng. Most probably Reuel was the same person as Jethro, and that Hobab was his son. Ex 2:18. 3:1. 18:1, 27. the Midianite. ✻S#4084h. Nu 25:6, 14, 15, 17. 31:2. Ge 37:28. the Lord. 31. forasmuch. As the Israelites were under the immediate direction of God himself, and were guided by the pillar of cloud and fire, it might be supposed that they had no need of Hobab. But it should be remembered, that the cloud directed only their general journeys, not their particular excursions. Parties took several journeys while the grand army lay still (Nu ch. 13, 20, 31, 32); and, therefore, they needed such a person as Hobab, well acquainted with the desert, to direct these excursions; to point out the watering places, and where they might meet with fuel, etc. See some valuable observations on this subject in Harmer, ch. The people murmur at the news, and propose returning to Egypt, 1-5. The people threaten to stone Caleb and Joshua, while they in vain attempt to pacify them, 6-10. God threatens to destroy them at once, 11, 12. Moses intercedes, and prevails for their rescue, and obtains their pardon, 13-25. Yet that generation of murmurers is debarred from entering into the land, and doomed to fall in the wilderness, Caleb and Joshua excepted, 26-35. Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, openly rebel; and Moses falls down before God, 1-4. Moses remonstrates with Korah for seeking the priesthood; and sends for Dathan and Abiram, who refuse to come, 5-15. Korah and his company burn incense, and draw together the congregation. The glory of the Lord appears, 16-19. He threatens to consume them; but is stayed by the prayer of Moses and Aaron, 20-22. By divine command, Moses calls the people away from the tents of the rebels, and denounces their doom, 23-30. The earth opens and swallows up Korah, and a fire consumes those who burnt incense, 31-35. Their censers are reserved to cover the altar, for a memorial to posterity, 36-40. The rebellion is renewed; fourteen thousand and seven hundred are slain by a plague, for murmuring against Moses and Aaron, 41-45. The plague is stopped by Aaron burning incense, 46-48. So, also, because Jeremiah (1:10) was commissioned to foretell the desolation of nations, he is said to do it himself; and God, because he foretold (Ex 3:19) the obstinacy of Pharaoh, is said (in Ex 4:21) to have produced it. 2. the ordinance. Nu 31:21. He 9:10. commanded. ⁄144C1, Ge +21:1. a red heifer. The following curious particulars have been remarked in this ordinance: (1) A heifer was appointed for sacrifice, in opposition to the Egyptian superstition, which held these sacred, and worshipped their goddess Isis under this form; and this appears the more likely, because males only were chosen for sacrifice. So Herodotus says, they sacrifice males, both old and young; but it is not lawful for them to offer females. (2) It was to be a red heifer, because the Egyptians sacrificed red bulls to the evil demon Typhon. (3) It was to be without spot, having no mixture of any other color. Plutarch says, the Egyptians "sacrifice red bulls, and select them with such scrupulous attention, that if the animal has a single black or white hair, they reckon it athuton, unfit to be sacrificed." (4) Without blemish. This law is so founded on the nature of the thing itself, that it has been in force among all nations that sacrificed victims to their deities. (5) On which never came yoke: because an animal which had been used for a common purpose was deemed improper for sacrifice. ver. 6. Le 14:6. Is 1:18. Re 1:5. no blemish. See on Ex 12:5. When such a tub was used in connection with the bathing of the whole person, the bather used it simply for a receptacle of the water after it had been sprinkled or poured upon the body (Is 44:3). The water was then defiled and unfit for further use (Fairfield, Letters on Baptism, p. 106). Ge +26:19mg. Le 14:5, 6, 50-52. 15:13. SS +*4:15. Jn 4:10, 11. *7:38. Re 7:17. 22:1.

NUMBERS 20

The people come to Zin, where Miriam dies, 1. They murmur for water, 2-6. Moses speaks to the people in anger and unadvisedly, and smites the rock, instead of speaking to it, as ordered; water is given, but Moses and Aaron are doomed to die in the wilderness, 7-13. Edom refuses Israel a passage through their land, 14-21. At mount Hor, Aaron resigns his priesthood to Eleazar, and dies, 22-29.

1. A.M. 2552. B.C. 1452. Then. This was the first month of the fortieth year after the departure from Egypt. (Compare Nu 33:38 with ver. 28 of this chapter and Dt 1:3.) Israel is assaulted by a Canaanitish king, and utterly destroys him, his people, and his cities at Hormah, 1-3. The people murmur, and are punished with fiery serpents; but, confessing their sin, they are healed by means of a brazen serpent, 4-9. 14. in the book. Jsh 10:13. 2 S 1:18. 2 Ch 16:11. What he did. or, Vaheb in Suphah. Then sang Israel this song: Spring up, O well! Answer ye to it. The well, the princes digged it; even nobles of the people digged it, by a decree, upon their borders); and from the wilderness (or the well, as in LXX.) to Mattanah; and from Mattanah," etc. The whole of this, from ver. 14-20, is a fragment from "the book of the wars of Jehovah," probably a book of remembrances or directions written by Moses for the use of Joshua, and describes the several boundaries of the land of Moab. This rendering removes every obscurity, and obviates every difficulty.

Israel encamps in the plains of Moab, 1. Balak king of Moab sends for Balaam to curse the people, 2-7. He, forbidden by the Lord, refuses to go, 8-14. On a second message he extorts permission, and goes, 15-21. An angel opposes him, and he is rebuked by his ass, whose mouth God opens; he beholds the angel, and obtains leave to proceed, 22-35. Balak meets him, and sacrifices, 36-41.

NUMBERS 26

The people are numbered by divine command: the number of each tribe, and the sum total, 1-51. The law for the division of the promised land, 52-56. The Levites are numbered, 57-62. None left of those before numbered, but Caleb and Joshua, 63-65.

1. after the plague. Nu 25:9.

2. Take the sum. The plague having swept away the last of that devoted generation, which provoked the Lord to "swear in his wrath that they should not enter" Canaan; he now, after an interval of 38 years, commands another census of the Israelites to be made, to preserve the distinction of families, and to regulate the tribes previous to their entry into the promised land, as well as to ascertain the proportion of land which should be allotted to each tribe. For, though the whole was divided by lot, yet the portions were so disposed, that a numerous tribe did not draw where the lots assigned small inheritances, or the contrary. See on Nu 1:2, 3. It seems to be intimated in Nu 16:27, 31-33, that the sons and the little ones of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, were swallowed up; but the text here expressly affirms, that the children of Korah "died not"; and their descendants were famous even in David's time. On a close inspection, however, of ver. 27, we shall find, that "the sons and the little ones" of Dathan and Abiram alone are mentioned. Nu 16:5. Ex 6:24. 1 Ch 6:22-28. The daughters of Zelophehad ask for their father's inheritance, 1-5. The law of inheritance, 6-11. Moses is warned of his approaching death; and, in answer to his prayer, Joshua is appointed to succeed him, 12-23.

1. the daughters. In the orders for the division of the land, just given, no provision had been made for females, in the case of failure of male issue. The five daughters of Zelophehad, therefore, considered themselves as destitute, having neither father nor brother, and being themselves entirely overlooked; and they agreed to refer the case to Moses and the rulers, whether it were not equitable that they should inherit their father's portion. This led to the enactment of an additional law to the civil code of Israel, which satisfactorily ascertained and amply secured the right of succession in cases of inheritance. This law, which is as reasonable as it is just, stands thus: (1) On the demise of the father, the estate descends to the sons. (2) If there be no son, the daughters succeed. (3) If there be no daughter, the brothers of the deceased inherit. (4) If there be no brethren, or paternal uncles, the estate goes to the grand uncles, or brothers of his father. (5) If there be no grand uncles, then the nearest of kin succeeds to the inheritance. Beyond this fifth degree the law does not extend, because there must always have been some among the Israelites who could be called kinsmen. Zelophehad. Nu 26:33. 36:1-12. 16. the Lord. Yehowah elohey haroochoth lechol basar, "Jehovah, the God of the spirits of all flesh." This address sufficiently proves, that this holy man believed man to be compounded of flesh and spirit, and that these principles are perfectly distinct. Either the materiality of the soul is a human fable, or, if it be a true doctrine, Moses did not pray under the influence of the Divine Spirit. There is a similar form of expression in Nu 16:22: "O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh"; and in Jb 12:10, "In whose hand is the soul (nephesh) of all living; and the spirit (ruach) of all flesh of man." These seem decisive proofs, among many others, that the Old Testament teaches that there is an immortal spirit in man; for though ruach sometimes denotes breath or wind, yet it certainly has not that signification here, nor in the other passages cited. the God. 35. eighth day. Though this day was properly a distinct festival, and esteemed the chief or high day of the feast, yet fewer sacrifices are appointed for it than for any of the foregoing seven. On every one of them two rams and fourteen lambs were offered; but on this day there were but half as many; and whereas seven bullocks were the fewest that were offered on any of those days, on this there was only one. At this feast there was an extraordinary ceremony of which the rabbins inform us, namely, the drawing water out of the pool of Siloam, and pouring it, mixed with wine, on the sacrifice as it lay on the altar. This they are said to have done with such expressions of joy, that it became a common proverb, "He that never saw the rejoicing of drawing of water, never saw rejoicing in all his life" (Mishnah, "Succah," c. V. sec. I). The Jews pretend to ground this custom on the following passage of Isaiah (Is 12:3), "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation;" and to this ceremony Jesus is supposed to refer, when "in the last day, the great day of the feast, he stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, as the Scripture saith, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water" (Jn 7:37, 38): thereby calling off the people from their carnal mirth and festive and pompous ceremonies, to seek spiritual refreshment for their minds. 23. if ye will. Le 26:14, etc. Dt 28:15, etc. be sure your sin. If the persons concerned prevaricated, and so imposed on men, or if they afterwards refused to fulfill their engagement, God would most certainly detect and expose their wickedness, and inflict condign punishment upon them. Of all the ways, says Dr. South, to be taken for the prevention of that great plague of mankind, Sin, there is none so rational and efficacious as to confute and baffle those motives by which men are induced to embrace it; and among all such motives, the heart of man seems to be chiefly overpowered and prevailed upon by two, viz. secrecy in committing sin and impunity with respect to its consequences. Accordingly, Moses, in this chapter, having to deal with a company of men suspected of a base and fraudulent design, though couched under a very fair pretence, as most such designs are, endeavors to quash it in its very conception, by secretly applying himself to encounter those secret motives and arguments, which he knew were the most likely to encourage them in it. And this he does very briefly, but effectually, by assuring them, that how covertly and artificially soever they might carry on their dark project, yet their sin would infallibly find them out. Though the subject and occasion of these words are indeed particular, yet the design of them is manifestly of an universal import, as reaching the case of all transgressors, in their first entrance on any sinful act or course. will find. 17. are the names. It is worthy of remark, that Moses does not follow any order hitherto used in arranging the tribes, but places them exactly in the order in which they possessed the land, and according to their fraternal relationship. Judah is first, having the first lot, in the South (Jsh 15); and next him is Simeon, because his inheritance was "within the inheritance of the children of Judah" (Jsh 19:1). Benjamin, the third, had his portion between "Judah and the children of Joseph" (Jsh 18:11). Dan was the fourth, and his lot was westward of Benjamin (Jsh 19:40, 41). Manasseh and his brother Ephraim had their inheritances behind that of Benjamin (Jsh 16:7). Next these dwelt Zebulun and Issachar (Jsh 19:10-17); and then Asher and Naphtali (Jsh 19:24-32). Eleazar. Jsh 14:1. 19:51. Joshua. See on Nu 13:8, 16.

4. suburbs. Le 25:34. thousand cubits. i.e. nearly half a mile, or half a sabbath day's journey, according to Gill.

5. two thousand cubits. It is not easy to reconcile this verse with the preceding; it looks like an interpolation; some think the first thousand included in the 2000, others consider the whole suburb to have consisted of 3000 cubits. The explanation of Maimonides is the only one that is intelligible, and appears perfectly satisfactory. "The suburbs," says he, "of the cities are expressed in the law to be 3000 cubits on every side, from the wall of the city and outwards. The first 1000 cubits are the suburbs; and the 2000, which they measured without the suburbs, were for fields and vineyards." Thus the city is innermost, surrounded by the suburbs, and the whole surrounded by fields and vineyards. to them. Le 25:32-34.

26. But if. After the manslayer had been received into the city of refuge, the avenger of blood could only act as prosecutor; and the magistrates, in the presence of the people, were appointed to decide on the cause according to the rules here laid down. Probably the accused person was tried at or near the place where the deceased had been slain, and where evidence could most easily be brought: and in case he was acquitted by the decision of the judges, and with the approbation of the people, he was conveyed back to the city of refuge, where he was protected as a kind of prisoner at large, till the death of the high priest; when the public loss, and the grief occasioned by it, might be supposed to swallow up all personal regrets and resentments: and then he was permitted to return to his house and estate. But if, in the mean while, he ventured to leave the city, and the avenger met him and slew him, he was supposed to merit his doom by thus neglecting the appointment of God for his preservation, and the avenger must not be punished. This shows that in other cases, if the avenger slew an innocent man on surmise, he was liable to the punishment of a murderer; but if, by the testimony of two credible witnesses, the man who had fled to the city of refuge was adjudged guilty, he must without fail be put to death. come without. 1 K 2:42-46.

The region east of Jordan was nearly as long as that on the west, and therefore three cities were appointed in each division. One or other of these cities would be within half a day's journey of every part of the land; and as it would rarely happen that the avenger of blood would be on the spot, and none had a right to assault or detain the manslayer, at least if no malicious intention was manifest, the unhappy men would, therefore, get the start of their adversaries, and very few of them be overtaken before they gained the place of refuge. But then they must forsake their families, employments, most important interests, and dearest comforts; and they must neither loiter nor yield to weariness, nor regard difficulties, nor slacken their pace, till they had got safe within the walls of the city. The Jewish writers inform us, that, to afford every facility to those who thus fled for their life, the road to these cities was always preserved in good repair; and way-posts, upon which was inscribed "refuge," were placed wherever needful, that they might not so much as hesitate for a moment. To one division of the tribe of Manasseh, a portion had been assigned eastward of Jordan; but Zelophehad was of that division to which an inheritance was afterwards allotted west of Jordan; yet, expecting the promised land, the elders of the Manassites now propose a difficulty, upon the adjudged case of Zelophehad's daughters (Nu 27:1-11). If the females should inherit, in defect of male issue, and should intermarry with other tribes, they would diminish the interest and weaken the influence of their own tribes, and give occasion to future confusion, and perhaps contention. The Manassites therefore referred the case to Moses; and he, by the authority of God, annexed a clause, which would effectually keep the tribes and inheritances distinct, as long as it was observed. Heiresses were not allowed to marry out of their own tribe, though within those bounds they might consult their own inclinations. Nu 26:55, 56. 27:1-7. 33:54. Jsh 13:6. 14:1, 2. 17:3. to give. But, as this refers to the number of stars which appear to the naked eye, which only amount to about 3010 in both hemispheres, the number of the Israelites far exceeded this; for independently of women and children, at the last census, they amounted to more than 600,000. as the stars. ƒ138B, Ge +13:16.

If the Lord destroyed these gigantic people before the posterity of Lot and of Esau, what cause had the posterity of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, his chosen servants and friends, to fear the Anakims, or the Canaanites? especially as Israel acted by commission from God, and had his promise as their security of success, and the pledge of it in his presence, and the wonders which he had already wrought for them; and as they were the only nation of worshippers of the Lord, in the ordinances of his institution, which could be found on earth. This is so often repeated to possess the minds of the Israelites with a sense of God's providence, which rules every where; displacing one people, and placing another in their stead; and fixing their bounds also, which they cannot pass without his leave. ver. 22. DEUTERONOMY 4

Earnest exhortations to obedience, and dissuasives from idolatry, 1-24. Prophetical warnings of the consequences of disobedience, and promises of mercy to the penitent, 25-31. The Lord's special care of Israel, and his wonderful works for them, 32-40. Three cities of refuge appointed eastward of Jordan, 41-43. An introduction to the following exhortations, 44-49.

3. what the. Nu 25:1-9. 31:16. Jsh 22:17. Ps 106:28, 29. Ho 9:10. for all the men. It appears from this appeal, that the pestilence, as well as the sword of the magistrates, singled out the guilty persons and spared the rest (Ps 91:6-8). The legislator, in order to deter the Jews from idolatry, alludes to this fact, but he notices no circumstances but one, which, though in the original narrative was not stated, was infinitely the most important to advert to on this occasion; but which no persons, but spectators of the fact, and perfectly acquainted with every individual concerned in it, could possibly feel the truth of. The people had been often ready to conclude that Moses taught them by his own authority; but at the close of his life he solemnly assured them that he had instructed them exactly as the Lord had commanded him, neither more, nor less, nor otherwise. This is a most express declaration that he was divinely inspired, and utterly incompatible with his integrity of character, if he was not (Scott).

DEUTERONOMY 5

Moses shows that God made a covenant with Israel at Horeb, 1-5. He sets the ten commandments before them, 6-21. He relates how, at the people's request, he had received the law from God for them, 22-31. He exhorts them to obedience, 32, 33.

9. shalt not. See on Ex 20:4-6. the Lord. On the import of the word yehowah, which we translate Lord, see Note on Ex 3:15. The word elohim, which is rendered God, in the singular eloah, and in Arabic allah, is derived from the Arabic alaha, he worshipped, adored, was struck with astonishment, fear or terror: and hence, he adored with sacred horror and veneration: it also signifies, he succoured, liberated, kept in safety, or defended. Hence we learn that elohim denotes the sole object of adoration; the perfections of whose nature must astonish all who contemplate them, and fill with horror all who rebel against him; that consequently he must be worshipped with reverence and religious fear; and that every sincere worshipper may expect help in all his weaknesses, etc., freedom from the power, guilt, and consequences of sin, and support and defence to the uttermost. a jealous God. See on Ex 34:14. visiting. Ex +20:5. 34:7. Our Savior quotes these words thus: "And him only (auto mono) shalt thou serve;" from which it would appear, that the word levaddo was anciently in the Hebrew text, as it was in the Septuagint, Coptic, Vulgate (illi soli), and Anglo-Saxon. Dr. Kennicott argues that without the word only, the text would not have been conclusive for the purpose for which our Lord advanced it. It is proper, however, to observe, that the word levaddo is not found in any MS. yet collated, though retained in the above versions. shalt swear. Dt 10:20. Le 19:12. Jsh 2:12. Ps *15:4. 63:11. These promises of temporal blessings were given for the nation as a whole; for though godliness often secures the most solid temporal advantages, yet temporal blessings were not, even among them, uniformly dispensed to individuals according to their obedience; but they were to the nation, with an exactness which is not observed towards any other people. This principle of promises applying to the group as a whole, but not necessarily infallibly to every individual in the group, is seen throughout Scripture. In the New Testament this principle is often seen by noting that personal pronouns, which in English translation are ambiguous as to whether they are singular or plural (especially the second person "you"), are most frequently in the Bible languages plural. This principle has important doctrinal bearing on passages pertaining to the security of the believer versus the possibility of apostasy. will put none. Dt 28:27, 60. Ex 9:11. *15:26. +*23:25. DEUTERONOMY 9

Israel assured of victory, not for their righteousness, but through the wickedness of their enemies, 1-6; reminded of their rebellions, and of the Lord's mercies, 7-29.

1. to pass. Dt 3:18. 11:31. 27:2. Jsh 1:11. 3:6, 14, 16. 4:5, 19. this day. ℳ121I2, Ge +2:17. The Hebrew hyyom, this day, frequently denotes, as here, this time. They had come, 38 years before this, nearly to the verge of the promised land, but were not permitted, because of their unbelief and rebellion, at that day or time, to enter; but this time they shall certainly pass over. This was spoken in the eleventh month of the fortieth year of their journeying; and it was on the first month of the following year they passed over: and during this interval Moses died. The time was so short (less than two months), that it is regarded as if today. See Dt 1:3. Jsh 4:19. Jn 8:56. 1 C 4:5. Re 16:14. nations. See on Dt 4:38. 7:1. 11:23. ℳ121K1. 5. Not for. Though the Canaanites were expelled for their wickedness, it does not follow, that the Israelites were established in their room on account of any distinguished virtue, or because they deserved it. On many occasions, it may be seen in the history of the world, that God punishes the wicked by the instrumentality of other men, who are as wicked as themselves. 10. wateredst it with thy foot. Rain seldom falls in Egypt; the land being chiefly watered by the inundations of the Nile. In order to water the grounds where the inundations do not extend, water is collected in ponds, and directed in streamlets to the different parts of the field where irrigation is necessary. It is no unusual thing in the East to see a man, with a small mattock, making a little trench for the water to run into; and, as he opens the passage, the water following, he uses his foot to raise up the mould against the side of this little channel, to prevent the water from being shed unnecessarily, before it reaches the place of its destination. Hence, he may justly be said to "water the ground with his foot." Ps 1:3. Pr *21:1. Is 19:7. 37:25. 43:19. Je 17:8. Zc 14:18.

Enticers to idolatry must be put to death, 1-5. Even the nearest relations must accuse them, 6-8; and lead the way in stoning them, 9-11. Idolatrous cities are not to be spared, but must be utterly destroyed, 12-18.

their support, the Levites had: (1) The tenth of all the productions of the land. (2) Forty-eight cities, each forming a square of 4000 cubits. (3) Two thousand cubits of ground round each city; total of land, 53,000 acres. (4) The firstfruits, and certain parts of all the animals killed in the land. But though this was a very small proportion for a whole tribe that had consented to annihilate its political existence, that it might wait upon the service of God, yet, let it be considered, that what they possessed was the best of the land: and while it was a slender remuneration for their services, yet their portion was such as rendered them independent, and kept them comfortable; so that they could wait on God, and labor in his work, without distraction.

DEUTERONOMY 15

On the seventh year the debts of the poor must be remitted, 1-6. Nevertheless the people must give and lend liberally, 7-11. Hebrew servants must be released in the seventh year, unless unwilling to depart, 12-18. All firstling males of the cattle are to be sanctified unto the Lord, 19-23.

DEUTERONOMY 16

The laws concerning the three great annual feasts recapitulated: the feast of the passover, 1-7, and to eat unleavened bread, 8. The seven weeks or pentecost, and their feasts, 9-12. The feast of tabernacles to be observed by them and their family seven days, 13-15. All the males to appear before the Lord three times a year, and at these three feasts, with an injunction that every one should then offer according to his ability 16, 17. Judges and officers are appointed, 18-20, and are prohibited to set up groves and images, 21, 22.

This word comes from the Hebrew verb pasach, to pass, to leap or skip over. The destroying angel passed over the houses marked with the blood of the paschal lamb, so the wrath of God passes over those whose souls are sprinkled with the blood of Christ, 1 C 5:7. As the paschal lamb was killed before Israel was delivered, so by the death of Christ, we have redemption through his blood, Ep 1:7. It was killed before the tables of the law were delivered to Moses, or Aaron's sacrifices were enjoined; thus deliverance comes to men, not by the works of the law, but by the only true passover, the Lamb of God, Jn 1:29. Ro 3:25. He 9:14. It was killed the first month of the year, which prefigured that Christ should suffer death in that month, Jn 18:28. 1 C +15:4. It was killed in the evening, Ex 12:6. Christ suffered at that time of day, Mt 27:46. Lk 23:44n. He 1:2. At even the sun sets; at Christ's passion, universal darkness was upon the whole earth. The passover was roasted with fire, denoting the sharp and dreadful pains that Christ should suffer, not only from men, but from God also. It was to be eaten with bitter herbs, Ex 12:8; not only to put them in remembrance of their bitter bondage in Egypt, but also to testify our mortification to sin, and readiness to undergo afflictions for Christ, Col 1:24; and likewise to teach us the absolute necessity of true repentance in all that would profitably feed by faith on Christ, the true paschal lamb. for in. 14. shalt not remove. Before the extensive use of fences, landed property was marked out by stones or posts, set up so as to ascertain the divisions of family estates. It was easy to remove one of these landmarks, and set it in a different place; and thus a dishonest man might enlarge his own estate by contracting that of his neighbor. Hence it was a matter of considerable importance to prevent this crime among the Israelites; among whom, removing them would be equivalent to forging, altering, destroying, or concealing the title-deeds of an estate among us. Accordingly, by the Mosaic law, it was not only prohibited in the commandment against covetousness, but we find a particular curse expressly annexed to it in Dt 27:17. Josephus considers this law a general prohibition, intended not only to protect private property, but also to preserve the boundaries of kingdoms and countries inviolable. Dt *27:17. Jb 24:2. It was customary among the Jews to contract matrimony, espouse, or betroth, and for a considerable time to leave the parties in the houses of their respective parents; and when the bridegroom had made proper preparations, then the bride was brought home to his house, and the marriage consumated. The provisions in this verse refer to a case of this kind; though the Jews extend it to him who had newly consummated his marriage, and even to him who had married his brother's wife. It was deemed a peculiar hardship for a person to be obliged to go to battle, who had left a house unfinished, newly purchased land half tilled, or a wife with whom he had just contracted marriage. As the word nachal signifies both a torrent and the valley or glen through which it flows, nachal aithan may be rendered a "rapid torrent." Many torrents in Judea are dry during a great part of the year; when not only their banks but their beds may be plowed, and yield a crop. Hence there is no impropriety in specifying that such a place should be one that "is neither eared nor sown;" while the circumstance that the elders were to wash their hands over the heifer, whose head had been struck off into the stream, confirms this interpretation. The spot of ground where this sacrifice was made must be uncultivated, because it was considered as a sacrifice for the atonement of murder, and consequently, would pollute the land. shall strike. or, break. ver. 6. This gives them a deep yellow, which is greatly admired by Eastern nations. The color lasts for three or four weeks before there is occasion to renew it. We have the examples of Rechab and Baanah, who, for murdering Ishbosheth, were slain by David's commandment, their hands and feet cut off, and then hanged up. 2 S 4:12. See also Jsh 8:29. 10:26. So Nu 25:4, we read, "And the Lord said unto Moses, Take all the heads (chief men) of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel." Among the Romans, in after ages, they hanged, or rather fastened to the tree ALIVE; and such was the cruel death of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Dt 19:6. 22:26. 1 S 26:16. Mt 26:66. They that see him thus hanging between heaven and earth, will conclude him abandoned of both, and unworthy of either. Bp. Patrick observes, that this passage is applied to the death of Christ; not only because he bare our sins and was exposed to shame, as these malefactors were that were accursed of God, but because he was in the evening taken down from the cursed tree and buried (and that by the particular care of the Jews, with an eye to this law, Jn 19:31), in token, that now the guilt being removed, the law was satisfied, as it was when the malefactors had hanged till sunset: it demanded no more. Then he, and those that are his, ceased to be a curse. And as the land of Israel was pure and clean when the body was buried, so the church is washed and cleansed by the complete satisfaction which Christ thus made. thy land. Le 18:25. This prohibition was no doubt intended to exclude the idolatrous customs of the heathen, as well as to prevent the evil which would be produced by the introduction of such customs. Nothing was more common among idolaters, than for men, in the worship of several of their gods, to put on the garments worn by women; particularly in the worship of Venus, to which that of Ashtaroth among the Canaanites bore a striking resemblance, the women were accustomed to appear in armor before her, and the men in women's apparel. But independently of this, the practice has produced the greatest confusion in society, and has been productive of the grossest crimes. Hence Clodius, who dressed himself as a woman, that he might mingle with the Roman ladies in the feast of the Bona dea, was universally justly execrated. Je +10:2. abomination. See on Dt 18:12.

Palestine is situated in a climate producing poisonous snakes and scorpions, and between deserts and mountains, from which it would be inundated by them, as well as with immense swarms of flies, locusts, and mice, if the birds which feed upon them were extirpated. In a moral point of view, it may have been intended to inculcate a spirit of mercy and kindness, and to prevent the exercise of cruelty even towards a sparrow; for he who is guilty of such cruelty will, if circumstances be favorable, be cruel to his fellow creatures. Le *22:24. 1 S 5:4. shall not enter. It is evident that this law was not meant to exclude mutilated Israelites, either from the common benefits of civil society, or any essential religious advantages; but merely to lay them under a disgraceful distinction. This would tend to discourage parents from thus mutilating their children; a practice which was exceedingly common in those ages and countries. To this they might often be induced by the custom which prevailed, of employing eunuchs in the houses of the great and the courts of princes: so that they often rose to the highest posts of honor and authority (2 K 20:17, 18. Da 1:3-7). Some expositors therefore consider the phrase, "shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord," as meaning, that they should be incapable of bearing any office in that government, which was placed over the people of God, who must thus enter a protest against this custom, and deliver selfish parents from this temptation. But others think, that the persons intended might not enter the inner court of the sanctuary, or join in celebrating the sacred feasts, as in full communion with the congregation of the Lord; but must be contented to worship without, as uncircumcised Gentiles were allowed to do. Indeed it is probable that the exclusion related to both these particulars: for, as the blemished priests might not officiate at the altar (Le 21:17, 23), it is reasonable to conclude, that the blemished Israelite must neither enter the inner court of the sanctuary, nor fill up any public office in the congregation; in order that the people and ordinances of God might be preserved in purity and honor. shall not. ver. 2, 3, 8. Mooney argues, "Usury exacted from the foreigner does not imply that usury is not inherently evil, just as the carrying out of the death penalty does not imply that killing is not inherently evil. The command to execute a murderer is not to be taken as an 'exception' to, or 'qualification' of the commandment 'you shall not kill.'" In the same way, usury is an inherent evil that is not 'qualified' by permission to practice on foreigners" (Usury: Destroyer of Nations, p. 151). Mooney cites Erskine and Fisher's commentary on the Westminster Shorter Catechism, "Q. How do you prove from Scripture, that moderate usury, or common interest, is not oppression in itself? A. From the express command laid upon the Israelites not to oppress a stranger, Ex 23:9; and yet their being allowed to take usury from him, Dt 23:20; which they would not have been permitted to do, if there had been an intrinsic evil in the thing itself" (Mooney, p. 149). Mooney argues that this argument, though it sounds conclusive, "ignores the distinction that is evident in the Hebrew between the Ger in Ex 23:9 and the Nokri in Dt 23:20" (Mooney, p. 149). A command to set up stones for a remembrance on mount Ebal, and to write the law upon them, 1-4. They must build the altar of the Lord with whole stones, 5-8. Israel urged to obedience, 9, 10. Six tribes are directed to stand to bless on mount Gerizim, and six to curse, on mount Ebal, 11-13. Curses to be pronounced by the Levites, and confirmed by the people, 14-26.

It was such an imprecation upon themselves, as strongly obliged them to have nothing to do with those evil practices on which the curse is entailed. We read of those who entered into a curse "to walk in God's law" (Ne 10:29). All the people, by saying this Amen, became bound one for another, that they would observe God's laws, by which every man was obliged, as far as he could, to prevent his neighbor from breaking these laws, and to reprove those that had offended, lest they should bear sin and the curse for them (Le 19:17).

Here, probably, the "basket" is put for the seed, and "kneading trough" for the meal; the beginning and end of their labors. Mr. Harmer thinks that taine, in this place, means their traveling baskets; and mishaireth (store), their leather bags (Dt +23:24. 1 S 17:40); in both of which they were wont to carry things in traveling; and that, "understood in this manner, the passage promises Israel success in their commerce, as the next verse (the 6th) promises them personal safety in their going out and in their return. In this view, the passage appears with due distinctness, and a noble extent" (Observations, vol. 2, p 178n). By "basket" may be understood the olive-gathering and vintage, in which it was employed; and by the "store" or "remainder" all laid up for future use, or prepared for present consumption. store. or, dough, or kneading troughs. ver. 17. The same variety of expression is used in these terrible curses, as in the preceding blessings, to intimate every kind of prosperity or adversity, personal, relative, and public. The succeeding history of the Israelites shows, that as long as they adhered to the service of God, they were uniformly prosperous; but when disobedient, these awful curses have "overtaken them," even to the present day. Consulting the marginal references will generally lead to the best exposition of the terms employed; and will frequently point out the fulfillment of the promises and threatenings. While these blessings and curses are specifically addressed to national Israel, the principles they are designed to inculcate are undoubtedly valid for all nations and individuals (Ps +*9:17. This is an allusion to the solemn ceremony used by several ancient nations, when they entered into a covenant with each other. The victims, slain as a sacrifice on this occasion, were divided, and the parts laid asunder: the contracting parties then passed between them, imprecating, as a curse on those who violated the sacred compact, that they might in like manner be cut asunder (Ge 15:10). Thus Homer says, "They cut the quarters and cover them with the fat: dividing them into two, they place the raw flesh upon them." St. Cyril, in his work against Julian, shows that "passing between the divided parts of a victim" was used also among the Chaldeans, and other people. into his oath. ver. 14. 2 Ch 15:12-15. DEUTERONOMY 31

Moses declares to the people his approaching death, and encourages them, 1-6. He encourages Joshua, 7, 8. He delivers the law to the priests, and orders it to be publicly read every seventh year, 9-13. The Lord informs Moses and Joshua of the future apostasy and calamities of Israel; and orders a song to be made to testify against them, 14-22. Moses gives Joshua a charge, 23. Moses finishes the book of the law, 24. Moses delivers the book of the law to the Levites to keep beside the ark of the covenant, 24-27. The elders convened and the congregation assembled to hear the song, 28-30.

2. I am an. The life of Moses, the great prophet of Jehovah and lawgiver of the Jews, was exactly the same in length as the time Noah employed in preaching righteousness to the antediluvian world. These one hundred and twenty years were divided into three remarkable periods. Forty years he lived in Egypt, in the court of Pharaoh, acquiring all the learning and wisdom of the Egyptians (Ac 7:20, 23); forty years he sojourned in Midian, in a state of preparation for his great and important mission (Ac 7:29, 30); and forty years he guided, led, and governed the Israelites under the express direction and authority of God: in all 120 years. Things of great importance and general concern, were, among the ancients, put into verse; as this was found not only attractive and agreeable, but the best method of fixing and retaining them in the memory; especially in those early times, when writing was but little practiced. For this purpose, Jehovah was pleased to adapt his instructions. A sacred song, containing the substance of the preceding addresses, was appointed to be composed by Moses, doubtless under divine inspiration; which the people were required to learn, and teach to their children from generation to generation. This song would, when its predictions were verified, testify that they had been sufficiently warned; bear witness to the justice of God; and form a powerful call to repentance. testify. ⁄155F, Ge +4:7. against. DEUTERONOMY 32

The song of Moses, contrasting the perfections of God, and his special goodness to Israel, with Israel's ingratitude and apostasy, 1-18. God's wrath and future judgments on them for their sins, 19-26. Yet the idolatrous nations to be destroyed, and they at last to be enlarged in mercy, 27-43. Moses exhorts them to set their hearts on these words for their good, 44-47. The Lord orders him to go up to mount Nebo, to view the promised land, and die, 48-52.

As the word paira signifies the "hair of the head," both in Hebrew and in Arabic, Mr. Parkhurst and others render mairosh paroth, "from the hairy head;" but to have this sense, the words should rather have been mipparoth rosh, according to the Hebrew idiom. The word faron, in Arabic, however, denotes a prince or chief; and the words may be literally rendered, with the LXX, "from the head of the chiefs of the enemies." The hyperbaton (ℳ101. Though the word zonah generally denotes a prostitute, yet many very learned men are of opinion that it should be here rendered an innkeeper, or hostess, from zoon, to furnish or provide food. In this sense it was understood by the Targumist, who renders it ittetha pundekeetha, "a woman, a tavern-keeper," and so St. Chrysostome, in his second sermon on Repentance, calls her pandokeutria. The Greek porna, by which the LXX. render it, and which is adopted by the Apostles, is derived from pernao, "to sell," and is also supposed to denote a tavern keeper. Among the ancients, women generally kept houses of entertainment. Herodotus says, "Among the Egyptians, the women carry on all commercial concerns, and keep taverns, while the men continue at home and weave" (Euterp. c. 35). The same custom prevailed among the Greeks. Jsh 6:17, 25. Jg 11:1n. 16:1n. 1 K 3:16n. Mt 1:5, Rachab. 21:31. He 11:31. Ja 2:25. Rahab. i.e. spacious, wide; breadth, *S#7343h. ver. 3. Israel arrives at Jordan, 1. The officers give orders concerning the passage: and Joshua directs both priests and people, 2-6. The Lord encourages and instructs Joshua, 7-9. Joshua encourages the people, assuring them that the waters would be divided before the ark, 10-13. The waters are divided, and Israel passes the river, while the priests bearing the ark stand in the midst of it, 14-17.

It has, however, two banks; the first, or inner one, is that of the river in its natural state, and the second, or outer one, about a furlong distant, is that of its overflowings, which it does when the summer's sun has melted the snow on mount Lebanon and Hermon, in the months of March and April. These words might be written by Joshua at the close of his life, or perhaps be added by some later prophet. It seems from this verse, that there were two sorts of stones erected as a memorial of this great event: twelve at Gilgal (ver. 20), and twelve in the bed of the Jordan; which last might have been placed on a base of strong stone work, so high as always to be visible, and serve to mark the very spot where the priests stood with the ark. Drs. Kennicott and Shuckford, however, would read here with the Syriac, mittoch, "from the midst," instead of bethoch, "in the midst;" and render, "And Joshua took up the twelve stones (taken) from the midst of Jordan," etc. But this reading is unsupported by any MS. yet collated; and it appears wholly unnecessary. unto this day. This makes it abundantly evident, that the miraculous change which had been given to the river was not from any secret natural cause, but solely by the power of God, and for the sake of his chosen people; for when Israel's hosts had passed through, and the token of his presence was removed, immediately the waters went forward again:—so that if it be asked, "What ailed thee, O Jordan, that thou wast driven back?" it must be answered, it was in obedience to the God of Israel, and in kindness to the Israel of God. (3) It is apparently agreed among the authorities of the present day that there was a place called Gilgal near the sea, a little to the north of Joppa, and to this reference is supposed to be made in Jsh 9:6; 10:6, 7, 9, 15, 43. The Amorites and Canaanites hear of the miraculous crossing of Jordan, and are afraid, 1. Joshua, at God's command, circumcises the males born in the wilderness, 2-8. The place is called Gilgal, 9. The passover is kept at Gilgal, 10. They eat of the corn of the land, and the manna ceases, 11, 12. One appears to Joshua, calling himself "The Captain of the Lord's host," in form of a man of war; Joshua worships him; the place of his presence holy ground, 13-15.

And even when iron became more common, stone knives seem to have been preferred for making incisions in the human body. The Egyptians used such to open the bodies for embalming; and the tribe of Alajab in Ethiopia, to follow the Mosaic institution, perform the rite of circumcision, according to Ludolf, cultris lapidibus, with knives made of stone. circumcise. Le *23:10, +*11n, 14. i.e. on the sixteenth day; for the passover was killed between the two evenings of the fourteenth day, and was eaten in that evening or night, which, according to the Jewish computation, whereby they begin their days at the evening, was a part of the fifteenth day, all which was the feast of the passover; and so the morrow of the sixteenth day was "the morrow after the passover," when they were obliged to offer unto God the first sheaf, and then were allowed to eat of the rest (Matthew Poole). unleavened cakes. Many persons have been puzzled to know what was intended by this extraordinary appearance of the angel to Joshua, because they supposed that the whole business ends with the chapter; whereas it is continued in the succeeding one, the first verse of which is a mere parenthesis (ℳ137, Parenthesis. Ge +13:13), simply relating to the state of Jericho at the time when Joshua was favored with this encouraging vision; by which he was shown that their help came from God alone, and that it was not by human might or power, but by the Lord of hosts they were to obtain the victory.

JOSHUA 6

Jericho is shut up by the Israelites, 1. The Lord instructs Joshua how to conduct the siege, 2-5. Joshua directs the priests to carry the ark round the city, preceded by other priests, sounding with trumpets, and attended by the people, 6, 7. They thus march around the city daily for six days, and seven times on the seventh day, 8-16. The city and all in it (except Rahab and those with her) are devoted to destruction, 17-19. The people shout, the walls fall down, and the city is taken and destroyed; but Rahab is preserved, 20-25. A curse is pronounced on him who should rebuild Jericho, 26. Joshua becomes renowned, 27.

Rending the clothes, beating the breast, tearing the hair, throwing dust upon the head, and falling prostrate, were usual signs of deep affliction and distress among the ancient Israelites. In illustration of this custom, see 1 S 4:12, when the messenger brought tidings to Eli of the discomfiture of the armies of Israel by the Philistines; again, in the case of Tamar, 2 S 13:19, and in Ne 9:1, when a whole nation "assembled with fasting, and with sackcloth, and earth upon them." See also the case of Mordecai, Est 4:1, and Job, Jb 2:12, where his friends abased themselves to comfort him; refer also to Ezk 27:30. Jon 3:6. Mi 1:10. In each of these instances it is worthy of remark, that putting dust on the head generally follows rending the clothes, and was the usual mode of evincing poignant sorrow.

It may denote a short spear, javelin, or lance; for it is evident that it signifies neither the larger spear nor the shield, because it is distinguished from both, 1 S 17:6, 41, 45. Jb 39:23. Joshua seems to have been not only the general but the standard-bearer of the army (ver. 18); and continued in this employment, by holding up or extending his spear, during the whole of the battle; and did not slacken from the pursuit till the forces of Ai were utterly discomfited. Some commentators, however, understand this action in a figurative sense, like the holding up of Moses' hands (Ex 17:11), as if it implied that Joshua continued in prayer for the success of his troops, nor ceased till the armies of Ai were annihilated, and the city taken and destroyed. drew not. ver. 18. JOSHUA 9

The kings of Canaan hear of Joshua's exploits; consult together, and conclude to fight against Israel, 1, 2. The Gibeonites, feigning themselves to be of a far country, obtain a league, 3-15. The fraud is detected: yet their lives are spared on account of the oath sworn to them, and the promise which was confirmed with an oath remains firm, 16-20. But for a punishment they are condemned to perpetual slavery, and willingly submit, 21-27.

In the East, collecting wood for fuel, and carrying water, are the peculiar employment of females. The Arab women of Barbary, and the daughters of the Turcomans, are thus employed. Hence Mr. Harmer concludes, that the bitterness of the doom of the Gibeonites does not seem to have consisted in the laboriousness of the service enjoined them, but its disgracing them from the characteristic employment of men, that of bearing arms, and condemning them and their posterity forever to the employment of females. Compare 2 S 3:29n. ver. 21, 27.

JOSHUA 10

Five of the kings of Canaan, afraid of Joshua, are angry with the Gibeonites, and wage war against them, 1-5. At the request of the Gibeonites, Joshua goes to assist them; and being encouraged by God, he routes the enemy with great slaughter, 6-9. God casts down hailstones upon the enemy, 10, 11. Joshua prays to God, and commands the sun to stand still, which it does for about the space of a day, 12-15. The five kings are discovered in a cave, and shut up there, 16-21. At length they are brought forth, 22, 23; scornfully used, 24, 25; and hanged, 26, 27. Seven kings more are conquered, 28-42. The army returns to Gilgal, 43.

12. Sun. Joshua doubtless acted, on this occasion, by an immediate impulse upon his mind by the Spirit of God. The terms here employed to record the miracle, agree with the accustomed manner in which the motions of the earth and sun are described in our own day. The sun apparently moves, but really is stationary; while the diurnal movement of the earth on its axis is by us unnoticed, and would not have been known except by astronomical science. The sun appeared to the Israelites over Gibeon, and the moon over the valley of Ajalon, and there they stayed in their course for "about a whole day." Many vain enquiries have been made concerning the way in which this miracle was wrought, and many difficulties and objections have been urged against understanding it literally. But the fact is authenticated by the Divine testimony; and the manner in which it was accomplished lies entirely out of our province, because beyond our comprehension. See on ver. *13. And the care Joshua took to secure them there, as it is an instance of his policy and presence of mind, even in the heat of action; so, in the success of their project, it shows how they who think to hide themselves from God (He ◐11:38. Here, nephesh is used of man being slain or killed by man. In this use nephesh may be rendered everyone, individuals, persons, person, as it has no essential reference to soul as a separate, immaterial, conscious constituent part of man which survives the dissolution of the body (Mt +✓10:28). ver. 30, 32, 35, 37, 37, 39. JOSHUA 13

God makes known to Joshua the bounds of the land not yet conquered, 1-6. Joshua is directed to divide the whole by lot, 7. The inheritance of the two tribes and a half on the other side of Jordan, 8-13. The Lord and his sacrifices are the inheritance of Levi, 14. The borders of Reuben, 15-23; of Gad, 24-28; of the half tribe of Manasseh, 29-32. No inheritance assigned to Levi, 33.

2. lot. Though God had sufficiently pointed out by the predictions of Jacob and Moses what portions he designed for each tribe, yet we readily discern an admirable proof of His wisdom, in the orders he gave to decide them by lot. By this means, the false interpretations which might have been given to the words of Jacob and Moses were prevented; and by striking at the root of whatever might occasion jealousies and disputes among the tribes, he evidently secured the honesty of those appointed to distribute the conquered lands of Canaan. Besides, the success of this method gave a fresh proof of the divinity of the Jewish religion, and the truth of its oracles. Each tribe finding itself placed by lot exactly in the spot where Jacob and Moses foretold, it was evident that Providence had equally directed both the predictions and that lot; and it would be the greatest insolence and stupidity not to acknowledge the inspiration of God in the words of Jacob and Moses; the direction of his hand in the lot, and his providence in the event. JOSHUA 15

The boundaries of the lot of Judah, 1-12. Caleb takes Hebron, drives thence the three sons of Anak, 13-15. Caleb promises to give his daughter in marriage to him who should smite Kirjath-sepher; which Othniel does, and obtains her, 16, 17. She requests of her father some land for a dowry, which he grants, 13-19. The cities in the lot of Judah, 20-62. The Jebusites could not be conquered by them, retain Jerusalem, 63.

1. A.M. 2561. B.C. 1443. An. Ex. Is. 48. This then was the lot. The geography of the sacred writings presents many difficulties, occasioned by the changes which Canaan has undergone, especially for the last 2000 years. Many of the ancient towns and villages have had their names so totally changed that their former appellations are no longer discernible; several lie buried under their own ruins, and others have been so long destroyed that not a vistage of them remains. On these accounts it is very difficult to ascertain the precise situation of many places mentioned in these chapters; but this cannot in any measure affect the truth of the narrative. Jsh 14:2. It may seem hence, and from Dt 33:12; Jsh 18:28; Jg 1:21, that Jerusalem, properly, or at least principally, belonged to Benjamin; and yet it is ascribed to Judah also here, ver. 63, and elsewhere, either because a part of the city was allotted to Judah; or because the Benjamites needed or desired the help and conjunction of this powerful tribe of Judah, for the getting and keeping of this most important place. And when the Benjamites had in vain attempted to drive out the Jebusites, this work was at last done by the tribe of Judah, who therefore had an interest in it by the right of war; as Ziklag, which belonged to the tribe of Simeon, being gotten from the Philistines by David, was adjoined by him to his tribe of Judah, 1 S 27:6 (Matthew Poole). valley of the giants. 7. Asher. i.e. happy. A city not mentioned elsewhere. Eusebius says this was a town in his time not far from Neapolis, towards Scythopolis or Bethshan; between which towns it is also placed by the old Jerusalem Itinerary. Michmethah. i.e. a hiding place; the poverty of the dead; the poverty of the reward; concealment. Jsh 16:6. Situated, probably, east of Shechem; though its precise situation, as well as that of many others, cannot, at this distance of time, be ascertained. Many of these towns were small, and we may rationally conclude, slightly built; and consequently have perished more than two thousand years ago. It would therefore be useless now to look for such places; though in many instances, their ancient names have been preserved, and their sites identified. The tabernacle is set up at Shiloh, 1. The remainder of the land described, and divided into seven parts, for the seven tribes which as yet had no inheritance, 2-9. Joshua casts the lot at Shiloh for the distribution of the land, 10. The first comes out for Benjamin, whose borders are described, 11-20. The cities of Benjamin, 21-28.

1. assembled. Dt 12:5. Shiloh. Shiloh was situated on a hill in the tribe of Ephraim, though near the borders of Benjamin, about fifteen miles north of Jerusalem, and, according to Eusebius, twelve, or according to Jerome, ten miles south from Shechem or Nablous. It was but a little north from Bethel or Ai, and near the road from Shechem to Jerusalem (Jg 21:19). In Jerome's time, Shiloh was ruined; and nothing remarkable was extant, but the foundations of the altar of burnt offerings which had been erected when the tabernacle stood there. The Egyptians, from the situation of their fields, as annually overflowed by the Nile, acquired great skill in mensuration and land surveying; and some of the Israelites had, no doubt, learned these from them, without a knowledge of which they could not properly have divided the land. This is probably the first act of surveying on record. into seven. Ac 13:19. in a book. or, on a book. Jsh 10:13. Dt 17:18. 31:24. 1 P 1:4.

The borders of this tribe on the north were the same as those of Ephraim on the south, and his southern boundaries the same as the northern borders of Judah; but drawn from west to east, instead of from east to west (Jsh 15:1-12. ch. 16). As the inheritance of Benjamin did not extend to the Mediterranean sea, and no other sea or lake is known to have been in those parts, perhaps this expression, "compassed the corner of the sea southward" (ver. 14), should be rendered, "made a circuit on the side next the sea towards the south"; for it seems to connect the northern border, in the preceding verses, with the southern which follows.

20. Rabbith. i.e. multitude, ✻S#7245h. Kishion. i.e. sharpness or hardness, ✻S#7191h. Jsh 21:28. Abez. i.e. tin, ✻S#77h.

21. Remeth. i.e. a high place, ✻S#7432h, only here. Jsh 21:29. 1 Ch 6:73. En-gannim. i.e. fountain of gardens, ✻S#5873h. Jsh 15:34. 21:29. Different from that in Jsh 15:34. En-haddah. i.e. fountain of sharpness, ✻S#5876h. Beth-pazzez. i.e. house of dispersion, ✻S#1048h.

22. Tabor. i.e. thou wilt purge; stone quarry; choice; separated; purity. ver. 12. Jg 4:6. 8:18. 1 Ch 6:77. Ps 89:12. Je 46:18. Ho 5:1. Shahazimah. i.e. to strut proudly, *S#7831h. Beth-shemesh. i.e. house of the sun. ver. 38. Jsh 21:16. 1 S 6:9, etc. 1 K 4:9. 2 K 14:11-13. Je 43:13.

24. The lot of Asher lay upon the coast of the great sea. We read of only one remarkable person of this tribe, and that was Anna, the prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day. Lk 2:36-38.

25. Helkath. i.e. a portion, field, *S#2520h. Jsh 21:31. 2 S 2:16. Hali. i.e. ornament, *S#2482h. Beten. i.e. belly or womb; valley, *S#991h. Probably the same as Bebeten or Batnai, mentioned by Eusebius, eight miles from Ptolemais; and perhaps the Ecbatana which Pliny places not far from Ptolemais. Achsaph. i.e. enchantment; sorcery. Jsh 11:1. 12:20.

26. Alammelech. i.e. the king's oak, *S#487h. Amad. i.e. people of old; eternal people, *S#6008h. Misheal. i.e. a request, *S#4861h. Situated, according to Eusebius, near mount Carmel, on the sea coast. Jsh 21:30h. 1 Ch 6:74, Mashal. Carmel. i.e. a fruitful place. Different from that in Jsh 15:55. 1 S 15:12. 25:2. 1 K 18:19, 20, 42. 2 K 2:25. 4:25. SS 7:5. Is 33:9. 35:2. 37:24. Je 46:18. 50:19. Am 1:2. Mi 7:14. Na 1:4. Shihor-libnath. i.e. blackness of whiteness, *S#7884h.

27. Beth-dagon. Jsh 15:41. 1 S 5:2. Zebulun. i.e. wished for dwelling. Situated on the sea coast, near Ptolemais. valley of. ver. 14. Beth-emek. i.e. house of the valley, *S#1025h. Neiel. i.e. motion of God; we shall be shaken of God; the moving of God, *S#5272h. Cabul. i.e. sandy; a border, *S#3521h. Supposed to be the same town which Josephus calls Xoboulo, and which he says was situated near the sea side, near Ptolemais. 1 K 9:13. (1) A border city of Asher, Jsh 19:27. (2) The name given by Hiram to the land containing twenty cities of Galilee which Solomon gave him, 1 K 9:13.

28. Hebron. i.e. one who has crossed. Not the same as Jsh 15:54; identified with Abdon in Jsh 21:30. 1 Ch 6:74. Rehob. i.e. broad place; square, plaza. See on ver. 30. Hammon. i.e. warm, sunny; hot spring, *S#2540h. 1 Ch 6:76. Different from that in 1 Ch 6:76. (1) A town of Asher, Jsh 19:28. (2) A city of Naphtali which was assigned to the Levites, 1 Ch 6:76, probably the same as Hammath and Hamoth-dor. Kanah. i.e. place of reeds; he has purchased. This seems a different Cana from that in Lower Galilee; and to be that which is placed in some maps east of Tyre, between Libanus and Antilibanus, and south of the river Cassimer, or Leitani. Jn 2:1, 11. 4:46, Cana. great. Jsh 11:8. Jg 1:31. Is 23:2, 4, 12. great Zidon. i.e. a hunting; fishery; ship of judgment. So called because of its great size and importance in those days. Jsh 11:8. Jg 1:31. Is 23:2, 4. Zc 9:2.

29. Ramah. i.e. the high place. Different from that in ver. 36. Probably the Rama mentioned by Theodoret as a city of Syria; and placed in some maps between Sarepta and Sidon, eastward, near Lebanon. strong city. or, fenced city. Nu 13:19. 2 S *24:7. Tyre. Heb. Tzor. i.e. a rock. 2 S 5:11. 24:7. 1 K 5:1. 7:13. 9:11, 12. 1 Ch 14:1, 2. 2 Ch 2:3, 11. Ps 45:12. 83:7. Is ch. 23. Ezk ch. 26-28. Some think it another place of the same name. Hosah. i.e. a refuge. Achzib. i.e. a lie. As in Jg 1:31. Different from Jsh 15:44; Mi 1:14. Ge 38:5.

30. Ummah. i.e. over against, near; association, *S#5981h. Aphek. i.e. strength. Jsh 12:18. 13:4. 1 S 4:1. 1 K 20:30. Rehob. ver. 28. Jsh 21:31. Nu 13:21. Jg 1:31. 2 S 10:6, 8. 1 Ch 6:71, 74, 75.

31. the inheritance. Ge 49:20. Dt 33:24, 25.

33. Heleph. i.e. an exchange, *S#2501h. Allon. i.e. an oak. Zaanannim. i.e. removings; wanderings, *S#6815h. Jg 4:11, Zaanaim. Adami. i.e. human. Different from Adam of Jsh 3:16. Nekeb. i.e. a cavern, *S#5346h. Jabneel. i.e. God builds. Different from that in Jsh 15:11. Lakum. i.e. the rising up; stopping by the way; fortified place, *S#3946h.

34. turneth. Dt 33:23. Aznoth-tabor. i.e. ears (summits) of Tabor, *S#243h. Apparently the same as Azanoth, which Eusebius places in the plain not far from Diocaesarea or Sephoris. ver. 12, 22. Hukkok. i.e. things decreed; appointed portion, *S#2712h. Jsh 21:31, Helkath. 1 Ch 6:75. south side. Dt 33:23. Judah. As it is certain that the tribe of Naphtali did not border upon that of Judah, there being several tribes between, we should probably omit Judah, with the Septuagint; though it may have been a town so called.

35. Ziddim. i.e. the sides, *S#6661h. Zer. i.e. strait; flint, *S#6863h. Hammath. i.e. warm baths; warm springs, *S#2575h. 1 Ch 2:55h. For other places with the same name see Jsh 19:35. 21:32. Ge 10:18. Nu 13:21. 34:8. 1 K 8:65, Hamath. Rakkath. i.e. a shore or river bank; leanness; her spitting; empty; vain, *S#7557h. Chinnereth. i.e. a harp. Jsh 11:2, Chinneroth. 12:3n. 13:27. Nu 34:11. Dt 3:17. Ezk 47:18, the east sea. In the New Testament called sea of Tiberias (Jn 6:1, 23. 21:1), and sea of Gennesaret (Mt 14:34. Mk 6:53. Lk 5:1).

36. Adamah. i.e. earth, *S#128h. Different from Adami in ver. 33. Ramah. i.e. the high place. Different from that in ver. 13. Hazor. i.e. village, hamlet. Jsh 11:1, 10, 13. 12:19. Jg 4:2. 1 K 9:15. 2 K 15:29.

37. Kedesh. i.e. a place set apart; a sanctuary; consecrated. Jsh 12:22. 20:7. 21:32. Jg 4:6, 9, 10. 1 Ch 6:76. Not the same as Jsh 15:23. Edrei. i.e. strong. Not the same place mentioned in Nu 21:23. En-hazor. i.e. fountain of the village, *S#5877h.

38. Iron. i.e. the little fearful one, *S#3375h. Migdal-el. i.e. tower of God, *S#4027h. Probably the Magdala of Mt 15:39. Horem. i.e. devoted; banned; separated; dedication, *S#2765h. Beth-anath. i.e. the house of answers, responses, replies, echoes, *S#1043h. Jg 1:33, 33. Not the same place as Jsh 15:59. Eusebius mentions a town of the name of Batanaian, fifteen miles from Caesarea (Diocaesarea or Sephoris, probably). Beth-shemesh. i.e. house of the sun. Different place from that in ver. 22. Jsh 21:16. Jg 1:33.

40. Dan. Dt 33:22.

41. Zorah. i.e. leprosy, *S#6881h. Situated on the frontiers of Dan and Judah, ten miles north from Eleutheropolis, towards Nicopolis, according to Eusebius, not far from Caphar-Sorek. Jsh 15:33, Zoreah. Jg 13:2, 25. 16:31. 18:2, 8, 11. 1 Ch ❶2:53. 2 Ch 11:10. Ne 11:29. Eshtaol. Jsh 15:33. Ir-shemesh. i.e. city of the sun, *S#5905h. Supposed by some to be the same as Beth-shemesh in the tribe of Judah; but this latter city is evidently distinguished from it by being assigned by the tribe of Judah to the Levites (Jsh 21:16). Ir-shemesh, rendered polis Sammaus by the LXX., seems to be the same as Emmaus or Nicopolis, 22 miles southeast from Lydda, according to the Old Jerusalem Itinerary.

42. Shaalabbin. i.e. place of foxes, *S#8169h. Jg 1:35, Shaalbim. 1 K 4:9, Shaalbim. Eusebius calls it Salaba, and places it in Samaria: and Jerome calls it Salebi (Ezk 48), and joins it to Ajalon and Emmaus. Ajalon. i.e. little hind. This appears to be the Ajalon which Jerome places two miles from Nicopolis or Emmaus, in the road to Jerusalem. Jsh *10:12. 21:24. Jg 1:35. 1 S 14:31. 1 Ch 6:69. Jethlah. i.e. lofty place, *S#3494h.

Jg 4:6. Kedesh, called Cadesa, or Caidesa, by Josephus, was situated in Upper Galilee, twenty miles southeast from Tyre, according to Eusebius. The cities of refuge were distributed through the land at proper distances from each other, that they might be convenient to every part of the land; and it is said they were situated on eminences, that they might be easily seen at a distance; the roads leading to them being broad, even, and always kept in good repair; and way posts (Nu 35:32n. Dt 27:8. Is 35:8. Je 31:21. Hab *2:2), upon which was inscribed "refuge," were placed wherever needful, that they might not so much as hesitate for a moment (Nu 35:32n). Kedesh and Hebron were at the two extremities of the land—the former being Galilee, and the latter in Judah, both in mountainous districts, and Shechem was in mount Ephraim, nearly in the center. Bezer was east of Jordan, in the eastern part of the plain opposite Jericho; Ramoth was about the midst of the country of the two tribes and a half, being about the middle of the mountains of Gilead; and Golan, the capital of Gaulonitis, was situated in the tribe of Manasseh, in the land of Bashan. As this institution is considered as a type of Christ (He 6:18-20), some expositors observe a significancy in the names of these cities with application to Him as our Refuge. Kedesh signifies "holy," and our refuge is in the holy Jesus (Lk +*1:35). Shechem, "a shoulder," "and the government shall be upon his shoulder" (Is 9:6). Hebron, "fellowship," and believers are called into the fellowship of Christ Jesus our Lord (1 C 1:9. 1 J 1:3).

Bezer, "a fortification," for he is a stronghold to those who trust in him (He 6:18-20). Ramoth, "high," or "exalted," for him hath God exalted with his own right hand (Ac 2:33. *5:31. Ph 2:9). Golan, "joy," or "exultation," for in him all the saints are justified, and shall glory (Lk 1:47. Ac 10:43. *13:39. Ga 6:14). Jsh 21:32. 1 Ch 6:76. Galilee. i.e. a circuit, *S#1551h. These tribes furnished more habitations to the Levites, in proportion, than any of the other tribes, because they possessed a more extensive inheritance, agreeably to what Moses commanded (Nu 35:8). It is worthy of remark, that the principal part of this tribe, whose business was to minister at the sanctuary, which sanctuary was afterwards established at Jerusalem, had their appointment nearest to that city; so that they were always within reach of the sacred work which God had appointed them.

Some Amillennialists cite this text (as well as Jsh 23:14. 1 K 4:21. 2 Ch 9:26. He 11:10) to prove that the promise of God to Abraham of the land has thus been completely fulfilled (See, e.g., R. Bradley Jones, What, Where, and When Is the Millennium? pp. 47, 48). But the question is not, did Israel possess the land, but did Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the promise was personally given and confirmed, personally receive or experience the fulfillment? The answer to this question is absolutely not, as Scripture plainly declares (Ac +*7:5. He √11:13, 39). Fulfillment must take place, therefore, in the future, in the land of Israel, upon their resurrection from the dead (Mt +*8:11). JOSHUA 22

Joshua dismisses Reuben, Gad, and Manasseh, with his commendation, counsel, strict charge to fear the Lord, and blessing; and with a large booty, 1-9. They build an altar of testimony at the brink of Jordan, 10. The other tribes are offended, and assemble to wage war against them, 11, 12. They first send Phinehas and ten princes ambassadors to reprove them, 13-20. They explain and vindicate their conduct, to the satisfaction of their brethren, 21-33. The name of the altar or the inscription on it, 34.

1. Joshua. See on Nu 32:18-33. Dt 29:7, 8. Reubenites. Jsh 1:12-15. We have already seen, that a detachment of 40,000 men, of the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, had passed over Jordan armed, with their brethren, according to their agreement with Moses. The war now being concluded, the land divided, and their brethren settled, Joshua assembles these warriors; and with commendations for their services and fidelity, he dismisses them, having first given them the most pious and suitable instructions. They had now been about seven years absent from their respective families; and though there was only the river Jordan between the camp at Gilgal and their own inheritance, yet it does not appear that they had, during that time, ever revisited their home, which they might have done at any time of the year, except the harvest, as the river was at other times easily fordable.

It would appear, that when they came to the river, they formed the purpose of building the altar; and when they crossed it they put that purpose into execution. It is evident that they did not build it west of Jordan, for that was not in their territories, and the next verse expressly says that it was "built over against the land of Canaan." built. ver. 25-28. The word witness, or testimony, is not found here in the common editions of the Hebrew Bible; and is supplied in italics by our venerable translators, at least in our modern copies; for in the first edition of this translation (the Authorized or King James Version), it stands in the text without any note of this kind; but it is found in several of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS., and also in the Syriac and Arabic. Several also of the early printed editions of the Hebrew Bible have the word ed, either in the text or in the margin; and it must be allowed to be necessary to complete the sense. It is very probable that an inscription was put on this altar, signifying the purpose for which it was erected. Thus was this affair most happily terminated. ver. 27. Jsh 24:27. 1 K 18:39. Is 43:10. JOSHUA 23

Joshua, now grown old, convenes the elders of Israel, 1, 2 He exhorts them by the mercies of God, 3, 4; and the prospects of future blessings, to be steadfast in his service, 5-10. He warns them against connections with idolaters; and protests, that the threatenings of God, in case of their disobedience, would as certainly be fulfilled, as his promises had been, 11-16.

JOSHUA 24

Joshua assembles the tribes at Shechem, 1. He lays before them a brief history of the Lord's kindness to their ancestors from the days of Terah, and exhorts them faithfully to serve the true God, 2-13. He renews the covenant between them and God, promising for himself and his house to choose the service of God, the people likewise promising for themselves, 14-25. He writes this in the book of the law, and sets up a stone for a witness, 26-28. Joshua's age, death, and burial, 29-30. Israel serves the Lord till some time after Joshua's death, 31. Joseph's bones are buried, 32. Eleazar dies, 33.

1. Joshua. This must have been a different assembly from that mentioned in the preceding chapter, though probably held not long after the former. Shechem. As it is immediately added, that "they presented themselves before God," which is supposed to mean at the tabernacle; some are of opinion that Joshua caused it to be conveyed from Shiloh to Shechem on this occasion, to give the greater solemnity to his last meeting with the people. The Vatican and Alexandrian copies of the Septuagint, however, read Shiloh, both here and in verse 25; which many suppose to have been the original reading. Dr. Shuckford supposes that the covenant was made at Shechem, and that the people went to Shiloh to confirm it. But the most probable opinion seems to be that of Dr. Kennicott, that when all the tribes were assembled at Shechem, Joshua called the chiefs to him on that mount, which had before been consecrated by the law, and by the altar which he had erected. 7. their thumbs. Heb. the thumbs of their hands and of their feet. ver. 6. This was not an unusual act of cruelty in ancient times towards enemies. Aelian informs us, that in after ages "the Athenians, at the instigation of Cleon, son of Cleaenetus, made a decree that all the inhabitants of the island of Aegina should have the thumb cut off from the right hand, so that they might ever after be disabled from holding a spear, yet might handle an oar." It was a custom among those Romans who did not like a military life, to cut off their thumbs, that they might be incapable of serving in the army; and for the same reason, parents sometimes cut off the thumbs of their children. gathered. or, gleaned. The nations which were left to prove Israel, 1-4. The people are seduced into idolatry by marrying their daughters and serving their gods, 5-7. The people are sold into the hand of Chushan-rishathaim, king of Mesopotamia, but delivered by Othniel, 8-11. Continuing to do evil, they are again punished and oppressed by Eglan, the king of the Moabites, but are delivered by Ehud, 12-30. They are afterwards delivered from the Philistines by Shamgar, who slays six hundred Philistines with an ox-goad, 31.

There is a door of communication from them into the gallery of the house; besides another, which opens immediately from a private staircase, down into the porch or street, without giving the least disturbance to the house. In these back houses strangers are usually lodged and entertained; and to them likewise the men are wont to retire from the noise and hurry of their families, to be more at leisure for meditation or diversions. or, upper chamber. ver. 23, 24, 25. The song of Deborah and Barak introduced, 1. A call to kings and people to consider this and other works of God for Israel, 2-5. The sin and misery of Israel shown, 6-8. Praises rendered to God, 9-13. commendations bestowed on some Israelites who went forth willingly to this battle, and censures on the unwilling who tarried at home, 14-18. The victory described in all its circumstances, 19-22. Meroz cursed for not coming to their assistance, 23. The conduct of Jael celebrated, 24-27. The disappointment of Sisera's mother represented, 28-30. A prayer added for victory to the people of God, and ruin to their enemies, 31.

1. sang Deborah. This verse briefly recites the subject of this inspired song, which consists of eight stanzas: The first opens with a devout thanksgiving. The second describes the magnificent scenes at Mount Sinai, etc. The third states the apostasy and consequent punishment of the Israelites. The fourth contrasts their present happy state. The fifth censures the recreant tribes of Reuben, Gad, etc. The sixth records the defeat of the confederate kings of Canaan. The seventh contains a panegyric on Jael. And the eighth describes the fond anticipations and disappointment of the mother of Sisera. Ex 15:1, 21. Nu 21:17. 1 S 2:1. 2 Ch 20:21, 27. Jb 38:7. Ps 18, title. Is 12:1-6. 25:1. 26:1. Israel, relapsing into sin, is oppressed by Midian, 1-7. A prophet rebukes them, 8-10. The Angel of the Lord appoints Gideon to deliver them, 11-16. The angel confirms his commission by consuming his oblation with fire, 17-21. Gideon knows who the Angel is, and is alarmed; but when encouraged, he builds an altar, and calls it Jehovah Shalom, 22-24. By divine command Gideon destroys Baal's altar and grove, and offers a sacrifice to Jehovah, 25-27. His citizens purpose to put him to death, but his father defends him, and calls him Jerubbaal, 28-32. Gideon raises an army, 33-35. Gideon is encouraged by a twofold sign involving fleece and dew, 36-40.

May we not suppose, says Mr. Harmer, that Gideon presented some slight refreshment to the supposed prophet, according to the present Arab mode, and desired him to stay till he could provide something more substantial; that he immediately killed a kid, seethed a part of it, and when ready brought the stewed meat in a pot, with unleavened cakes of bread, which he had baked; and the other part, the kab-ab, in a basket, for him to carry with him for some after repast in his journey? 40. did so. To satisfy the soul of his servant who trusted in him (Young). Nowhere else in Scripture is there an example of what is popularly called "putting out the fleece" as a means of discerning God's guidance. It would be especially wrong to specify to God that if a certain thing happens in a particular way, that would be His indication that a particular course of action is in accordance with His will. As Scripture nowhere else recommends this procedure to obtain a knowledge of God's direction in a matter, it would be foolhardy—though many godly sincere persons have testified to God's leading them by this means—to do so. Such a procedure violates the whole tenor of the rest of Scripture. Guidance is to be sought from God's written word (Ps 119:105. 2 T 3:16, 17), which provides basic principles for making wise decisions (Pr 1:4. 3:5, 6. Je 10:23), not the caprice of circumstance (Ge 24:44n), however contrived (Ro 10:17. 2 C *5:7). See related notes (2 K 12:7n, 10n. 13:9n, 18n).

JUDGES 7

Gideon's army of thirty-two thousand is tried by divine directions, and reduced to three hundred men, 1-8. He is sent into the enemy's camp by night, and encouraged by hearing a dream interpreted, 9-15. He divides his army into three companies, giving each man a trumpet, and a lamp in a pitcher, 16-18. The Midianites are thrown into confusion and put to flight, 19-22. The Israelites intercept their flight, and take their princes Oreb and Zeeb, whom they put to death, 23-25.

Gideon was certainly not at mount Gilead, east of Jordan, at this time; but rather near mount Gilboa, west of Jordan. 1 S 31:1. 2 S 1:21. Calmet thinks there must either have been two Gileads, which does not appear from Scripture to have been the case, or that the Hebrew text is corrupt, and that for Gilead we should read Gilboa. This reading, though adopted by Houbigant, is not confirmed by any MS. or version. Dr. Hales endeavors to reconcile the whole, by the supposition that in Gideon's army there were many eastern Manassites from mount Gilead, near the Midianites; and therefore proposes to read "Whosoever from mount Gilead is fearful and afraid, let him return (home) and depart early." twenty. It appears that it is not unusual for the Arabs to drink water out of the palms of their hands; and, from this account, we learn that the Israelites did so occasionally. From the letters of Busbequius we learn, that the Eastern people are not in the habit of drinking standing. The 300 men, who satisfied their thirst in the most expeditious manner, by this sufficiently indicated their spirit, and alacrity to follow Gideon in his dangerous enterprise; while the rest showed their love of ease, self-indulgence, effeminacy, and want of courage. The Ephraimites take offence, but are pacified by Gideon, 1-3. He pursues the Midianites: the men of Succoth and Penuel insolently refuse relief to his company: he threatens to chastise them; which he does, after he has taken Zebah and Zalmunna, 4-17. He puts Zebah and Zalmunna to death, because they had slain his brethren, 13-21. He refuses the government offered him: but asks the earrings out of the spoil, and of these he makes an ephod, which proves an occasion of idolatry, 22-27. Midian is subdued, 28. Gideon's family and death; and Israel's idolatry and ingratitude, 29-35.

Salt in small quantities renders land extremely fertile; but too much destroys vegetation. Every place, says Pliny, in which salt is found is barren, and produces nothing. Hence the sowing of a place with salt was a custom in different nations to express permanent desolation. Sigonius observes, that when Milan was taken, A.D. 1162, the walls were razed, and it was sown with salt. And Brantome informs us, that it was an ancient custom in France, to sow the house of a man with salt, who had been declared a traitor to his king. Charles IX, king of France, the most base and perfidious of human beings, caused the house of Admiral Coligni (whom he and the Duke of Guise caused to be murdered, with thousands more of Protestants, on the eve of St. Bartholomew, 1572), to be sown with salt!

"All to," observes Dr. Johnson, "is a particle of mere enforcement." The original is wattaritz eth gulgalto, which is simply, as the LXX. render, kai eklase to kranion auton, "and she brake his skull." Plutarch relates, that Pyrrhus was killed at the siege of Thebes, by a piece of a tile, which a woman threw upon his head. brake. S#7533h. Jg 10:8mg. Dt +28:33.

54. Draw thy. 1 S 31:4, 5. And his young man. It was a disgrace to be killed by a woman (compare Jg 8:21n). On this account, Seneca, the Tragedian, thus deplores the death of Hercules: "O turpe fatum! foemina Herculeae necis autor feritur"; "O dishonorable fate! a woman is reported to have been the author of the death of Hercules." Abimelech might also have been afraid, that if he fell thus mortally wounded into the hands of his enemies, they might treat him with cruelty and insult.

This is the argument a fortiori, "with stronger reason, more conclusively"); in which Jephthah argues on the principles recognized by the King of Ammon. As if he had said, "You suppose that the land which you possess was given you by your god Chemosh; and therefore will not relinquish what you believe you hold by a divine right. Ps 68:13, 14. and I will. or, or I will, etc. Wehaaleetheehoo olah, rather, as Dr. Randolph and others contend, "and I will offer Him (or to Him, i.e. Jehovah) a burnt offering;" for hoo may with much more propriety be referred to the person to whom the sacrifice was to be made, than to the thing to be sacrificed. Unless understood in this way, or as the marginal reading, it must have been a vow of a heathen or a madman. If a dog, or other unclean animal had met him, he could not have made it a burnt offering; or if his neighbor's wife, sons, etc., his vow gave him no right over them. Nevertheless, the context may support the view that Jephthah's vow was rash (Nu 30:2n), and that he, though apparently well acquainted with Scripture (ver. 16n), mistakenly believed that he must fulfill its demands, not being able to redeem his daughter by the provisions given in Le 27:2-5, but required to fulfill the vow by what is written in Le 27:28, 29. Such misunderstandings of the text of Scripture (2 P 3:16) are not unheard of in our own day, witness news accounts of self-mutilation by individuals who misunderstand the words of Mt 5:29. Le 6:3, 5. 2 S 2:19, etc.; yet it is not to be so considered without necessity, which seems not to be in this place; nor is it very proper to distinguish two sentences in this manner, where the one is more general, and the other being more special, is comprehended in it, which is the case here; for it "shall surely be the Lord's," is the general; and its being "offered up for a burnt offering," is the particular way or manner how it was to be the Lord's; therefore, in all the alleged instances where "and" is properly put for "or," they are two distinct persons or things, and not one comprehended within the other, as Ex 21:17, "father or mother"; 2 S 2:19, "right hand or left" (adapted from Matthew Poole).

39. did with. That Jephthah did not sacrifice his daughter, but consecrated her to the service of God in the tabernacle, in a state of celibacy, may be argued as evident from the following considerations: (1) Human sacrifices were ever an abomination to Jehovah, of which Jephthah could not be ignorant; and consequently he would neither have made such a vow, nor carried it into execution. (2) We are expressly told (ver. 29) that Jephthah was under the influence of the Spirit of God, which would effectually prevent him from embruing his hands in the blood of his own child. (3) He had it in his power to redeem his daughter (Le 27:4); and surely his only child must have been of more value than thirty shekels. (4) Besides, who was to perform the horrid rite? Not Jephthah himself, who was no priest, and in whom it would have been most unnatural and inhuman; and the priests would certainly have dissuaded him from it. (5) The sacred historian informs us that "she bewailed her virginity," that "she knew no man," and that the Israelite women went yearly to comfort or lament with her, ver. 40mg. It may be argued to the contrary, however, that: (1) Though human sacrifices are an abomination, yet this seems to have been a time of spiritual darkness (Jg 10:6), and though they seem now to have repented and forsaken their idols (Jg 10:16), there seems to have been retained part of the old leaven, for though they were not to offer human sacrifices to Molech, as they had done, yet here it appears they did so to the Lord. Perhaps such misconception of the will of God led to a change in the priesthood (1 S 2:35, 36). (2) Though Jephthah was under the influence of the Spirit of God, yet with him, as in our own day, it is possible to grieve the Holy Spirit by the intrusion of our own fleshly will, expressed here by the rashness of his vow, despite such provisions that God has made in his Word to discourage such vows (Nu 30:2n). The Spirit was not given to Jephthah to impart to him spiritual wisdom and discernment, but to empower him to be a man of valor (ver. 1), and make possible his victory over the Ammonites. (3) Though Jephthah had it in his power to redeem his daughter by the gracious provision of the law (Le 27:4), yet here again he may have been influenced by a misinterpretation and misapplication of Le 27:28, 29, as explained above, ver. 31n, just as there are those today who misinterpret such a passage as Mt 5:29. (4) As to who would perform the rite, if the priest was under the same misconception as Jephthah, the question is answered. (5) That the sacred historian informs us that she bewailed her virginity is no argument against the specific provisions of the vow in verse 31; rather, it would have been inappropriate to bewail her death since she so generously and cheerfully accepted, because attended and occasioned by the public good, and her father's honor and happiness, ver. 36; the mention that "she knew no man" is plainly distinguished from the execution of her father's vow, which is here mentioned before; and this is added, not as an explication of the vow, but as an aggravating circumstance. Furthermore, there is no example in all the Scripture of any woman that was obliged to perpetual virginity by any vow of her own, much less by the vow of her parents; the express words of the vow (ver. 31) mention nothing of her virginity, but only that she should "surely be the Lord's," i.e. devoted to the service of the Lord, which might be without any obligation to perpetual virginity; for even Samuel, who was as fully devoted to the Lord by his parents as she could be, 1 S 1:11; and Samson, who was devoted not only by his parents but by God himself, and that in the highest degree, even to be a perpetual Nazarite, Jg 13:5, 7; yet were not prohibited marriage. Therefore, if she were not offered up as a burnt offering, but was only consecrated to God, there was no occasion to bewail her virginity, which, for anything that appears, she was not tied to (adapted chiefly from Matthew Poole). ver. 31. Samson desires a woman of the Philistines to wife, 1-4. Going to see her he slays a lion; and afterwards finds honey in its carcass, 5-9. At his marriage feast he proposes a riddle, which the guests explain by means of his wife, 10-18. He kills thirty Philistines, gives their spoil to those who explained the riddle, and departs in anger, 19. His wife is given to his companion, 20.

It was a place of great strength and importance; and successively belonged to the Philistines, Hebrews, Chaldeans, and Persians; which latter defended it for two months against Alexander the great, who finally took and destroyed it. It was afterwards rebuilt, and alternately possessed by the Egyptians, Syrians, and Jews. Dr. Kennicott very judiciously observes, that the omission, for such it appears to be, begins and ends with the same word; and that the same word occurring in different places, is a very common cause of omission in Hebrew manuscripts. This form of omission is called Homoeoteleuton, of which another example given by EWB in B1004 is 1 K 8:16, "I chose (Jerusalem that my name might be there, and I chose) David to be over my people Israel."

The Danites send five men to seek an inheritance for them, 1, 2. Meeting with Micah's Levite, they consult him, and are encouraged to proceed, 3-6. They search Laish, and bring back an encouraging report, 7-10. Six hundred men are sent to surprise the place, 11, 12. They rob Micah of his idols, and entice away his priest, 13-21. Micah pursues them, but is frightened back by threats, 22-26. They take Laish, and call it Dan, 27-29. They set up idolatry; and Micah's Levite, who was called Jonathan, and his sons after him, become the priests, 30, 31.

Burckhardt says, that the source of the river El Dhan, or Jordan, is at an hour's distance from Banias, which agrees with Eusebius.

God had graciously performed his promise in putting these Danites in possession of that which fell to their lot, obliging them thereby to be faithful to him who had been so to them; they inherited the labor of the people, that they might observe his statutes, Ps 105:44, 45. But the first thing they do after they are settled is to break his laws by setting up the graven image, attributing their success to that idol, which, if God had not been infinitely patient, would have been their ruin. Thus a prosperous idolater goes on to offend, imputing this his power unto his God. Instead of Manasseh, some would read Moses; as it is found in some MSS., in the Vulgate, and in the concessions of the most intelligent Jews. But Bp. Patrick takes this to be an idle conceit of the Rabbins, and supposes this Jonathan to be of some other family of the Levites. Gershom. Ex 2:21, 22. until. Jg 13:1. 1 S 4:2, 3, 10, 11. This conjecture is the more likely, as the next verse tells us, that Micah's graven image continued at Dan "all the time that the house of God was at Shiloh;" which was till the ark was taken by the Philistines.

(1) A town in the hill country of Judah, Jsh 15:57. (2) Gibeah of Benjamin, 1 S 13:2. The tribe of Benjamin was nearly destroyed by a dreadful crime of some of its people. See Jg ch. 19-21. This town is generally considered to be the same as Gibeah of Saul. (3) Gibeah of Saul, 1 S 10:26; 11:4, the home of Saul, is held by many authorities to be the same as Gibeah of Benjamin. (4) Gibeah in Kirjath-jearim; doubtless a hill in that city, 2 S 6:3, 4. (5) Gibeah in the field, Jg 20:31. It was probably the same as Geba. (6) Gibeah-haaraloth, in the marginal notes, Jsh 5:3. See Gilgal.

That a similar custom prevailed in ancient times is evident from 1 S 11:7. It had an inhuman appearance, thus to mangle the corpse of this unhappy woman; but it was intended to excite a keener resentment against so horrible a crime, which called for a punishment proportionably severe. JUDGES 20

Israel assembles at Mizpeh, and the Levite states his wrong, 1-7. The assembly resolve to punish the men of Gibeah, 8-11. The Benjamites, when required, refuse to deliver them up, and prepare for war, 12-17. By divine direction Judah goes first to fight with them; yet the Israelites are defeated twice with great loss, 18-25. They humble themselves before God, with fasting and sacrifices, and are promised success, 26-28. They employ a stratagem, and destroy all the tribe of Benjamin, except six hundred men, who flee to the rock Rimmon, 29-48.

It does not appear that the Israelites on this occasion, were summoned by the authority of any common head; but they came together by the consent and agreement, as it were, of one common heart, fired with a holy zeal for the honor of God and Israel. The place of their meeting was Mizpeh; they gathered together unto the Lord there; for Mizpeh was so very near to Shiloh, that their encampment might very well be supposed to reach from Mizpeh to Shiloh. Shiloh was a small town, and therefore, when there was a general meeting of the people to present themselves before God, they chose Mizpeh for their head quarters, which was the next adjoining city of note; perhaps, because they were not willing to give that trouble to Shiloh, which so great an assembly would occasion; it being the residence of the priests that attended the tabernacle.

However, the refusal of the Benjamites, and their protection of those who had committed this horrible wickedness, because they were of their own tribe, prove them to have been deeply corrupted, and (all their advantages considered) as ripe for divine vengeance as the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah had been. Confiding in their own valor and military skill, they seem to have first prepared for battle in this unequal contest with such superior numbers.

Jg 3:15n. Ge +48:13. 1 Ch 12:2. sling stones. The sling was a very ancient warlike instrument; and, in the hands of those who were skilled in the use of it, produced astonishing effects. The inhabitants of the islands of Baleares, now Majorca and Minorca, were the most celebrated slingers of antiquity. They did not permit their children to break their fast, till they had struck down the bread they had to eat from the top of a pole, or some distant eminence. When they "went to the house of God" (ver. 18), it was not to enquire concerning the expediency of the war, nor of its success, but which of the tribes should begin the attack: and here the question is, "Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother?" Having so much right on their side, they had no doubt of the justice of their cause, and the propriety of their conduct; and having such a superiority of numbers, they had no doubt of success. 32. Let us flee. This was done, not only because they had placed an ambuscade behind Gibeah, which was to enter and burn the city as soon as the Benjamites left it; but it would seem, that the slingers, by being within the city and its fortifications, had great advantage over the Israelites by their slings, when they could not come among them with their swords, unless they got them in the country. It is probable however, that it was near, and took its name from, the village Remmon, mentioned by Eusebius, fifteen miles north from Jerusalem. It appears that rocks are still resorted to in the East, as places of security; and some of them are even capable of sustaining a siege. De La Roque says, that "The Grand Seignior, wishing to seize the person of the emir (Fakr-eddin, prince of the Druzes), gave orders to the pacha to take him prisoner: he accordingly came in search of him, with a new army, in the district of Chouf, which is part of mount Lebanon, wherein is the village of Gesin, and close to it, the rock which served for a retreat to the emir. It is named in Arabic, Magara Gesin, i.e. the cavern of Gesin, by which name it is famous. The pacha pressed the emir so closely, that this unfortunate prince was obliged to shut himself up in the cleft of a great rock, with a small number of officers. The pacha besieged him there several months; and was going to blow up the rock by a mine, when the emir capitulated."

The people lament over Benjamin, are in difficulty, having sworn not to give a wife to any of that tribe; and inquire after such as had not joined them, having sworn also to put them to death, 1-7. On that account they destroy the inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead, except four hundred virgins, whom they give to that number of the remaining Benjamites, 8-15. The elders consult, how to find wives for the rest consistently with their oath; and by their advice they carry off the virgins who danced at Shiloh, 16-23. The people separate and return home, 24, 25.

A city in Gilead, and in the tribe of Manasseh, east of Jordan. Eusebius and Jerome say it was a great town in their time, standing upon a hill, six miles south from Pella, in the way to Gerasa, now Djerash. The Wady Yabes, mentioned by Burckhardt, which empties itself into the Jordan, in the neighborhood of Bisan, or Bethshan (see 1 S 31:11), and upon which Pella was situated (celebrated by Pliny, l. v. c. 18, for its fine waters), seems to have taken its name from Jabesh. Near this spot, we must therefore look for its site; and the place called Kalaat Rabbad seems to correspond, very nearly, to the spot; though it probably still retains among the Arabs its ancient name.

10. go and smite. As they had sworn to destroy those who would not assist in the war (ver. 5), they determined to destroy the men of Jabesh, and to leave none except the virgins; and to give these to the 600 Benjamites who had escaped to the rock of Rimmon. The whole account is dreadful. The crime of the men of Gibeah was of the deepest dye; the punishment involving both the guilty and the innocent, was extended to the most criminal excess; and their mode of remedying the evil they had occasioned was equally abominable. ver. 5. It is eight hours, or about 24 miles, from Jerusalem, according to Dr. Richardson.

21. daughters of Shiloh come. Poole notes that these may be not only the settled inhabitants of the region, but all the women who came to the feast, for though only the men were obliged to attend, the devout women usually came upon special reasons or occasions: see 1 S 1:7, 21, 22, 24; 1 Ch 15:20n. It appears that the Benjamites acted in the most honorable way to the women they had thus violently carried off, and we may rest assured, that they took them to an inheritance more than equal to their own. But this transaction, as well as the indiscriminate massacre of the people of Jabesh-gilead, as Dr. Gray observes, was certainly stamped with injustice and cruelty; and must be condemned on those principles which the Scriptures elsewhere furnish. repaired. RUTH

Elimelech induced by famine to sojourn in Moab dies there, 1-3. His two sons, having married women of Moab, die without children; and Naomi, Elimelech's widow, prepares to return to Israel, 4-6. Orpah and Ruth, her daughters-in-law, propose to accompany her; she dissuades them, and Orpah returns back, 7-14. Ruth determines to go with her, 15-18. They arrive at Bethlehem, and Naomi answers the inquiries of her neighbors, 19-22.

RUTH 3

By Naomi's instruction, 1-4, Ruth lies down in the night at the feet of Boaz, 5-7. He acknowledges that he owes the duty of a kinsman, but shows that another has a prior claim, 8-13. He sends her away in the morning with six measures of barley, and she confers with Naomi, 14-18.

It is probable that the winnowing of grain was effected by taking up a portion of the corn in a sieve, and letting it down slowly in the wind; thus the grain would, by its own weight, fall in one place, while the chaff, etc., would be carried to a distance by the wind. It is said here that this was done at night; probably what was threshed out in the day was winnowed in the evening, when the sea breeze set in, which was common in Palestine. The word mitpachath has been variously rendered. The LXX. translate it peridzoma, an apron, and Vulgate, pallium, a cloak. By the circumstances of the story, it must have been of a considerable size; and accordingly Dr. Shaw thinks it was no other than the hyke, the finer sort of which, such as are still worn by ladies and persons of distinction among the Arabs, he takes to answer to the peplos, or robe, of the ancient Greeks. he measured. Is 32:8. Ga 6:10. six measures. The quantity of this barley is uncertain. The Targum renders it shith sein, six seahs. A seah contained about two gallons and a half, six of which must have been a very heavy load for a woman; and so the Targumist thought, for he adds, "And she received strength from the Lord to carry it."

RUTH 4

Do thou redeem it, for thou hast no wife; which hinders me from redeeming it." mar. or, destroy. By bringing in additional heirs and claimants to his property (Young).

7. in former time. This shows that the composition of this narrative was considerably after the occurrence of the events (Young). changing. Le 27:10, 13. a man plucked off. This custom does not refer to the law about refusing to marry a brother's widow (Dt 25:9), but was usual in the transfer of inheritances: for this relative was not a brother, but simply a kinsman; and the shoe was not pulled off by Ruth, but by the kinsman himself. The Targumist, instead of "his shoe," renders "his right hand glove," it probably being the custom, in his time, to give that instead of a shoe. Jarchi says, "When we purchase any thing new, it is customary to give, instead of a shoe, a handkerchief or veil." Dt 25:7-10. Ps 60:8. testimony. Is 8:16, *20.

1 SAMUEL 1

Elkanah a Levite has two wives, 1, 2. He goes yearly to worship at Shiloh, 3. He favors and comforts Hannah, when insulted by Peninnah on account of her barrenness, 4-8. Hannah in grief prays for a son, and vows to devote him to God as a perpetual Nazarite, 9-11. Eli through mistake at first rebukes, but afterwards blesses her, 12-18. She bears Samuel, stays till he is weaned, and then presents him to God, according to her vow, 19-23.

1. Ramathaim-zophim. i.e. the two high places of the watchers, *S#7436h. This ancient town, now called Ramla, is, according to Phocas, about thirty-six miles west of Jerusalem, and, according to modern travelers, about nine miles from Joppa and a league from Lydda, between which it is situated. It is built on a rising ground, on a rich plain, and contains about two thousand families. ver. 19. Jsh +*18:25. Mt 27:57, Arimathea. mount Ephraim.
