EZEKIEL 24

The prophet is informed of the day when Nebuchadnezzar laid siege to Jerusalem, 1, 2. He is shown the miseries of the Jews, and the destruction of the city, by the parable of the boiling pot, 3-14. He is forbidden to mourn for the sudden death of his wife; to denote, that the calamities of the people should exceed all expressions of sorrow, 15-24. When tidings were brought him of these events, his mouth would be opened and he should be no more dumb, 25-27.

Note the measures taken to prevent the spread of the disease, including strict quarantine (Nu 31:15-24). Other physical symptoms of venereal diseases included baldness in women, Is 3:16, 24; evidence of congenital syphilis such as blindness, stunting, bone malformations dating from birth, Le 21:18-20; deformed stillbirths, Nu 12:12; crooked teeth in children because of the sins of their fathers, Je 31:29; perhaps alluded to in Ex 20:5. EZEKIEL 26

The ruin of Tyre, for insulting over Jerusalem, is foretold, 1-6. The siege and taking of that city by Nebuchadnezzar, 7-14; and the consternation occasioned by its fall, 15-21.

3. Behold. These verses (ver. 3-6) contain a summary prediction of what befell both the continental and insular Tyre, during a long succession of ages. The former was totally destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, after a siege of thirteen years, B.C. 573; and the latter, which arose out of its ruins, after seventy years recovered its ancient wealth and splendor, as foretold by Isaiah (Is 23:15-17). After it was taken and burnt by Alexander, B.C. 332, it speedily recovered its strength and dignity, and nineteen years afterwards withstood both the fleets and armies of Antigonus. Agreeably to the prophetic declarations (Ps 45:12. 72:10. Is 23:18. Zc 9:1-7), it was early converted to Christianity; and after being successively taken by the Saracens, Christians, Mamalukes, and Turks, in whose hands it still remains, it became "a place for the spreading of nets." I am against. The ruins of old Tyre contributed much to the taking of the new city; for with the stones, timber, and rubbish, Alexander built a bank, or causeway, from the continent to the island, thereby literally fulfilling the words of the prophet (Q. Curtius, l. iv. c. 2. Diodorus, l. xvii).

14. I will make. Old Tyre was never rebuilt after its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar; and there are no traces left to mark its site (see Pococke, vol. ii. b. i. c. 20). The new city, when visited by Maundrell, Bruce, and other travelers, was literally "a place for fishers to dry their nets on." Maundrell states "On the north side it has an old Turkish ungarrisoned castle: besides which you see nothing here, but a mere Babel of broken walls, pillars, vaults, and there being not so much as one entire house left: its present inhabitants are only a few poor wretches, harboring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon fishing, who seem to be preserved in this place by divine Providence, as a visible argument, how God has fulfilled his word concerning Tyre, viz. that 'it should be, as the top of a rock, a place for fishers to dry their nets on'" (Maundrell's Journal, quoted by Bp. Newton, cited by Scott). like. ver. 4, 5, 12. be built no more. ƒ108B. Idiom B827. "To build" is an idiom used for the restoration of anything to all its former glory. For another example of this figure see Ps 102:16. Dt 13:16. Jb 12:14. Ml 1:4. Even to this day the prophecy holds true; for an excellent modern discussion, see Peter W. 27. Thy riches. In these beautiful and expressive figures, Tyre is represented as a ship at sea, wrecked through the mistakes of her pilots and rowers; that is, destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, and afterwards by Alexander, in consequence of her rulers having pertinaciously resolved to withstand those haughty conquerors. This vast ship, laden with all kinds of valuable wares, being wrecked, all her valuables, sailors, officers, etc., went to the bottom. ver. 7-9, 12, 18, 19, 22, 24, 34. Ezk 26:12. Pr 11:4. When the king of Babylon took from the king of Egypt, in the days of Pharaoh-necho, all his dominions in Asia, one of his arms was broken. God now declared that he should never recover these territories, or gain any ascendancy in that part of the world; nay, that his other arm, which was now strong, should soon be broken, and rendered utterly useless. This was fulfilled when Hophra was dethroned and driven into Upper Egypt by Amasis; and then Nebuchadnezzar, taking advantage of this civil discord, invaded and conquered that kingdom, and enslaved, dispersed, and carried captive the Egyptians. I have. ver. 24. The fruitful lands of Assyria; the immense revenues he drew from vast multitudes in his extensive territories; his lucrative commerce, by the river Tigris, with the countries on the Indian ocean; and all the various sources of his wealth and prosperity, resembled the rivers and streams which cause the trees planted by them to grow and flourish exceedingly; and hence the empire and its head were exalted above all the kingdoms of the earth. That is, to the grave; and are buried in their armor, with their weapons lying by their sides, as was a very ancient practice in various nations. Sir J. Chardin, in a MS. note on this place, observes, "In Mingrelia they always sleep with their swords under their heads, and their other arms by their sides; and they inter them with their arms placed in the same manner." This practice seems to have arisen from the belief that they attended them into a future state of existence. Virgil (Aen. l. vi. 52) describes his heroes thus in the Elysian fields: "These pleasing cares the heroes felt alive, For chariots, studs, and arms, in death survive" (Pitt). Theologically the issue here is, does sheol ever represent the literal grave, or does it always represent the world of the unseen dead? Through an incomplete induction of Scripture evidence, some have mistakenly asserted that bodies are never placed in sheol, only in qeber (the grave). This passage appears to have been left unaccounted for, for here not only bodies but weapons are so placed. However, this is elevated Hebrew poetry, and the unusual use of sheol found here is not generally sustained elsewhere, but see the references. The context shows that this is not a theological description of the destinies of the saved or unsaved dead, but a description of the terror of military defeat, and the dishonor of being left unburied (ver. 19, 21). Those who would press this passage into service as a prooftext to prove that there is no conscious existence after death, and that sheol is an exact synonym for the grave, must not object if the reference at ver. 21 to the mighty speaking "out of the midst of hell" is taken equally literally by others to show that Scripture does indeed teach the conscious existence of the dead, the eternal conscious punishment of the wicked or unsaved dead, as taught clearly elsewhere (See on Ezk +*18:4n, 20n). There is a progress of doctrine to be seen in Scripture; although Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Ac 7:22), which people certainly believed in a conscious afterlife, Moses did not write a full account of the nature of the intermediate state. No doubt these matters were left unrevealed in part, because of the dreadful distortions of the truth found in the false religions of Israel's idolatrous neighbors. Rather, we are left with these matters relatively unrevealed (Dt 29:29) until "life and immortality" was brought to light at the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ (2 T 1:10). Jesus spoke more about hell than any other person in the New Testament, and warned us unmistakably that its punishment is conscious torment (Mk 9:43-46. Lk 16:24), and lasts forever (Mt +*25:46). with. T#1005‡, 1006‡. Ps 16:10. Am *9:2. their weapons of war. Heb. weapons of their war. Since the unsaved will go to hell to suffer eternal punishment (Ezk +*18:4n, 20n; Mt +25:46), while the saved upon death go immediately to be with Christ (2 C +5:8. Ph +1:23); since the unsaved will experience eternal torment (Lk 16:24), while the saved experience eternal life (Jn 11:25, 26. Re +*14:13), there is no middle ground (Jn √3:36). The sins of the saved person "shall not be mentioned unto him" (Ezk +*18:22), for Christ died for our sins (2 C √5:15, 17, 21), forever purged our sins by his shed blood (Ep 1:7. Re 1:5) by the forever complete and perfect sacrifice of himself just once (He 10:10-12) on the cross (1 P 2:24). In Christ we are a new creature (2 C *5:17), justified by faith (Ro 5:1), no longer under condemnation (Jn 3:18. 5:24. Ro 8:1), possessing the righteousness of Christ (Ph 3:9), ready to be presented faultless before God (Ju 24), on the basis of our placing faith in his finished work for us (Ep 2:8-10).

The shepherds of Israel are sharply rebuked and severely threatened, 1-10. The Lord promises to be the Shepherd of his scattered flock, and to feed and tend them in his pastures and fold, 11-16; to punish the powerful oppressors among the Jews, and to rescue the oppressed, 17-22. Figurative predictions of Christ and his kingdom, 23-31.

2. the shepherds. The shepherds of Israel, signify their kings and princes, priests and prophets; the flock, the whole of the people; the fat and wool, the tithes and offerings, taxes and imposts: these they exacted with great rigor, and even oppressed and destroyed the people to enrich themselves; but they bestowed no pains to provide for the welfare of the state, or for the souls of those entrusted to them. They knew nothing about their flock: it might be diseased, infirm, bruised, maimed, strayed, or lost, for they watched not over them. Ezk 33:24. Je 2:8. 3:15. 10:21. 12:10. Their country is now barren; and their cities, even Bozra and Petra, totally demolished and in ruins (See Prideaux's Connection, an. 129, Newton on the Prophecies, Dissert. iii., and Burckhardt's Trav. in Syria, etc.). 2 K 14:7n. Many would ascribe their wickedness to the tendency of their religion, which they abhorred, and not to their acting inconsistently with it; and regard their miseries, not as the punishment of their sins, but as proofs of God's inability to protect them. EZEKIEL 37

By a vision of the resurrection of dry bones, the restoration of Judah and Israel from their hopeless condition is prefigured and predicted, 1-14. The reunion of Judah and Israel is predicted, by the uniting of two sticks in the prophet's hand, 15-22. The blessings of their union under Christ their king, 23-28.

1. The hand. In this vision, the dry bones aptly represent the ruined and desperate state of both Israel and Judah; and the revivification of these bones signifies their restoration to their own land after their captivity, and also their recovery from their present long dispersion. Although this is the genuine scope of the vision, yet the doctrine of a general resurrection of the dead may justly be inferred from it; for "a simile of the resurrection," says Jerome, after Tertullian and others, "would never have been used to signify the restoration of the people of Israel, unless such a future resurrection had been believed and known; because no one attempts to confirm uncertain things by things which have no existence." This is a pointed allusion to the resurrection; under which figure Isaiah (Is +*26:19n) also describes the restoration of the house of Israel, when he says, "thy dead men shall live;" at which time their bones are said to flourish (Is *66:14), or to be restored to their former strength and vigor; and, in like manner, St. Paul (Ro *11:15) expresses their conversion by "life from the dead." In the land of their captivity, they seemed as absolutely deprived of their country as persons committed to the grave are cut off from the land of the living; but when Cyrus issued his proclamation, Jehovah, as it were, opened their graves, and when he stirred up their spirits to embrace the proffered liberty, he put his Spirit within them, that they might live; and their re-establishment in their own land evinced the truth of God in the prediction, and his power in its accomplishment. ver. 21. EZEKIEL 38

A prophecy of the formidable preparations of Gog and Magog, with their allies, to invade the land of Israel in the latter days, 1-17; and of the glorious power of God to be displayed in their destruction, 18-23.

1. the word. Ezk 37:15.

2. Son. ver. 14. Ezk 2:1. 39:1, 17. set. Ezk 6:2. 20:46. 25:2. 35:2, 3. Gog. i.e. mountain, in reference to the Caucasus mountains, chief seat of the Scythian people. Rather, "Gog (the prince) of the land of Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal." By Magog is most probably meant the Scythians or Tartars, called so by the Arabian and Syrian writers, and especially the Turks, who were originally natives of Tartary (inhabiting parts of Russia and central and western Siberia); and by Rosh, the Russians, descendants of the ancient inhabitants on the river Araxes or Rosh. Josephus concurs in identifying Magog with the Scythians (Ant. i. vi. 1). But compare "Og" (Dt 3:1-13). 1 Ch +5:4. Re 20:8, 9. Magog. Jerome identifies Magog as the "Scythian nations, fierce and innumerable, who live beyond the Caucasus and the Lake Maeotis, and near the Caspian Sea, and spread out even onward to India." Ge 10:2. 1 Ch 1:5. Compare "Agag," Nu 24:7. the chief prince of. or, prince of the chief of. Rather, prince of Rosh. The meaning is that Magog is the head of the three great Scythian tribes, of which "Rosh" is the first. Gesenius identifies Rosh with Russia. A P. Stanley remarks "This early Biblical notice of so great an empire is doubly interesting from its being a solitary instance. No other name of any modern nation occurs in the Scriptures, and the obliteration of it by the A.V. is one of the many remarkable variations of our version from the meaning of the sacred text of the Old Testament" (Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, vol. iv. p. 2752, 2753). ver. 2, 3. Additional evidence showing these events are not identical includes (1) the event in Re 20:7, 8, is clearly post-millennial, while these events are premillennial (Ezk 38:16n); (2) Here, Gog is from the north of Israel (ver. 6), whereas in Re 20:7, 8, Gog is brought from the four quarters of the earth. 2 S 24:1. 1 Ch 21:1. turn thee. 16. shalt come up against. Mi ✓5:6. as a cloud. ver. 9. it shall be. Though it is not generally agreed what people or transactions are here predicted, yet it seems evident that the prophecy is not yet accomplished. Nothing occurred in the wars of Cambyses, or Antiochus Epiphanes with the Jews, that answers to it; and the expression here used—in the latter days—plainly implies, that there should be a succession of many ages between the publication of the prediction and its accomplishment. It is therefore supposed, with much probability, that its fulfillment will be posterior to the conversion of the Jews and their restoration to their own land; and that the Turks, Tartars, or Scythians, from the northern parts of Asia, perhaps uniting with the inhabitants of some more southern regions, will make war upon the Jews, and be cut off in the manner here predicted.

Since the preceding note was written nearly two centuries have passed, and it seems possible that the fulfillment of this prophecy must take place after the regathering of the Jews to their own land, since they are now in their own land, but before the final and complete restoration (Is ✓11:11n). It is most probable that these events take place before the millennium, and are not those of Re 20:8. While some would identify these events with Re 20:8, there is nothing to recommend the identification except the name "Gog and Magog," all other attendant circumstances being totally different (see ver. 4n). Perhaps these events may take place before the Great Tribulation of Je 30:7. It is unlikely that the Jews could be burying the remains of the huge armies described here at any time during the tribulation. If the Millennium immediately follows the seven year tribulation period, this would argue for a pretribulation placement of these events, for there is no record or likelihood of this activity (which will take seven years, Ezk 39:9) taking place during the Millennium. The destruction of Russia and her allies by Israel may leave a power vacuum in the Middle East and lead to a one world government, perhaps headed at some point by the Antichrist. An agreement with Israel may allow it to exist in peace until the agreement is broken, and the events of the Great Tribulation take place, followed by the Second Advent of Christ, and the establishment of his millennial kingdom.

Students of Scripture greatly differ in the fine points of prophetic interpretation, and there is particular disagreement at this time in placing the rapture of the church. It appears that of the three positions—pretribulation, midtribulation, and posttribulation, the pretribulation rapture position holds a slight edge in probability because its proponents generally are more consistent in their interpretation of the Olivet discourse in Matthew chapter 24, and parallel passages in Mark and Luke. It is possible, but not certain, that these events of Ezk ch. 38 and 39 will precede the rapture of the church. They could take place during the time period between the rapture and the onset of the seven year Great Tribulation.

As to the three positions held regarding the millennium, the premillenial, postmillennial, or amillennial positions, only the premillennial position appears to agree with consistent Bible interpretation in taking into account the requirements for the fulfillment of prophecies connected with the Abrahamic, Davidic, and New covenants in their connection with the literal re-establishment of natural Israel in Palestine, and the setting up of the theocratic kingdom of Christ on the throne of David to rule over the nation Israel and the world from the capital city Jerusalem during his millennial reign, Is +*11:11n. ver. 8. EZEKIEL 40

EZEKIEL's vision of the model of a city; and of an angel, with a line and reed, measuring the temple, 1-5. A description of the east gate of the outer court, 6-19; of the north gate, 20-23; and of the south gate, 24-26; of the south gate of the inner court, 27-31; of the east gate, 32-34; and of the north gate, 35-38. The eight tables for sacrifice, 39-43. The chambers for the singers and for the priests, 44-47. The porch and pillars of the temple, 48, 49.

2. the visions. There can be little doubt, that the grand outlines of the description of the temple, in the following extraordinary vision, were taken from that of Solomon's, with all the additions made to it in after ages; and we may suppose that Zerubbabel and the other Jews had respect to it, as far as circumstances would permit, in rebuilding the temple after the captivity. There are, however, many circumstances which conclusively show, that something infinitely superior to either the first or second temple was intended; and that the external description must be considered as a figure and emblem of spiritual blessings. Probably the more immediate accomplishment of the prophecy will be subsequent to the conversion and restoration of the Jews, the destruction of Gog and Magog, and the pouring out of the Spirit, mentioned at the close of the last chapter, and continue through the thousand years, during which Satan will be chained up in the bottomless pit (Re 20:1-6). The explicit details of the temple construction recorded in the vision argue for a literal fulfillment (Is 60:13n). It appears from Zc 6:12, 13, that the builder of this Millennial Temple will be Messiah himself. Ezk 1:1. 8:3. Da 7:1, 7. The common cubit, termed the "cubit of a man" (Dt 3:11), was about 18 inches; but the cubit used by the angel was, as we learn from Ezk 43:13, "a cubit and a hand breadth," or about three inches more than the common cubit. Hence the measuring reed, which was "six cubits long, by the cubit and the hand breadth," ver. 5, must have been about 10 1/2 feet. 1 K 6:5, 6.

This place, where the legs and entrails of the sacrifices, especially of the burnt offerings, were washed, was just within the portico of the north entrance to the inner court, or court of the priests. An allusion to this is most probably made by the inspired apostle when writing his Epistle to the Hebrews, at the 10th chapter and 22nd verse. 40. at the side. Two tables were on each side, as you come into the porch of the gate; and two on each side of the inner part of the gate that looked towards the altar; in all eight tables, on which they slew and cut up the victims. It does not appear that any such tables were used either in the tabernacle or temple; and this seems to intimate the introduction of a new and more spiritual dispensation. Ezk 48:20. Re 21:16.

48. the porch. The length of the porch was twenty cubits, the same as the breadth of the temple, and the breadth eleven cubits, that is, one cubit more than in Solomon's temple. Two bivalve, or folding doors, each leaf of them being three cubits wide, seem to have formed the entrance; which, with five cubits, perhaps of brick or stone work, on each side, called "the post of the porch," amount to sixteen cubits; and the other four cubits may be supposed to have been the distance from these posts to the outside of the walls of the temple. 1 K *6:3. 2 Ch 3:4.

The posts, doors, walls, chambers, foundations, dimensions, divisions, and ornaments, of the temple itself, 1-26.

1. he brought. See on Ezk 40:2, 3, 17. to the temple. 1 K *6:2. Zc √6:12, 13. Ep 2:20-22. 1 P 2:5. Re 3:12. 11:1, 2. 21:3, 15. and measured. Ex 26:15, etc. the posts. These were probably a sort of door-case on each side of the entrance; and the tabernacle perhaps was a kind of covering to the door, of the same dimensions.

2. the door. or, the entrance. This was the door out of the porch into the sanctuary, which seems to have been wider than that from the court to the porch. Ex 26:36. 36:37. 1 K 6:31-35. 2 Ch 3:7. 29:7. Jn *10:7, 9. the length. 1 K 6:2, 17. 2 Ch 3:3. the breadth. 1 K 6:3.

6. one over another. Heb. side chamber over side chamber. thirty in order. or, three and thirty times, or feet. We find by Josephus (Ant. l. viii. c. 3. sec. 2), that around Solomon's temple were chambers three stories high, each story consisting of thirty chambers; which are supposed to have been on the north, south, and east sides of the temple. and they. 1 K 6:6, 10. have hold. Heb. be holden. 1 P 1:5. but. That is, the beams or supporters of the chambers were not let into the main wall of the temple; but rested on projections of the outer wall, which became a cubit narrower at every story, leaving a ledge of one cubit, to support the beams. Ne 13:4, 5.

7. there was, etc. Heb. it was made broader, and went round. 1 K *6:8. Mt 13:32. He 6:1. an enlarging. In the same proportion in which the thickness of the wall decreased, the chambers increased, so that the middle story was one cubit larger, and the upper story two cubits larger, than the lower rooms; and a winding staircase, which widened in the same manner as the rooms, ascended from the bottom to the top. increased. Ps 84:7.

8. a full. Ezk 40:5. 2 Ch 3:3. Re 21:16.

9. was five. ver. 5. that which. This appears to have been a walk, or gallery of communication between the chambers, five cubits broad, into which the doors opened. ver. 11. Ezk 42:1, 4.

10. the chambers. As the word rendered chambers is different from that used before, it is supposed there was another row of buildings, parallel with the side-chambers, with a passage of twenty cubits between.

13. he measured. These verses (ver. 13-15) seem to intimate, that all the buildings of the temple occupied an area of 100 square cubits.

22. altar. This must signify the altar of incense; which, both in the tabernacle and Solomon's temple, was covered with plates of gold. It is very remarkable, that in this temple described by Ezekiel, there is not the least mention of gold or silver, though there was such a profusion of these metals in the former; which may probably imply, that a glory of a more spiritual nature was intended under these emblems. Ex *30:1-3. 1 K *6:20, 22. 7:48. 2 Ch 4:19. Re 8:3. This is. The chambers within the wall of the court for the priests, 1-12. The use thereof, 13, 14. The dimensions of the ground, on which all these buildings stood, 15-20.

1. he brought. Ezk 40:2, 3, 24. 41:1. the utter court. Ezk 40:20. Re 11:2. chamber. Ezk 41:9, 12-15.

2. Before. Perhaps this means that the north door was 100 cubits from the entrance into the court; and that the doorway, or portico, was 50 cubits in length; or, that it faced one of the cloisters, the length of which was 100 cubits, and its breadth 50, which was the proportion of all the cloisters.

16. side. Heb. wind. ver. 17-20. Ezk 37:5. the measuring reed. Estimating the reed at 10 1/2 feet, 500 reeds will be nearly equal to a mile; so that from this statement we find the temple, with its outbuildings, was built on a square, nearly an English mile on each side, and four miles in circumference. This not only far exceeds the size of Solomon's temple, or that after the captivity, which was only 500 cubits, or a furlong, on each side, and exactly half a mile in circuit; but is nearly equal to the whole extent of Jerusalem itself, which, when greatest, was but 33 furlongs in circumference, somewhat less than 4 1/4 miles. Some take the LXX. reading of "cubit" for "reed" in order to accommodate the measures given here to those given for Solomon's temple, but the LXX. is unsupported by the Hebrew text. Some suggest that this points figuratively and mystically of the spiritual temple, the church under the gospel, and its spiritual glory, for the original temple mount is not large enough to contain the area described. But it may be that the literal dimensions are correct, that the area described merely encloses the entire temple grounds. Perhaps the geographical changes prophesied elsewhere (Ps *48:2. Is 35:7. Zc ✓14:4, 10) will render the area designated suitable for such a large temple compound. Ezk 40:3. Zc 2:1. Re 11:1, 2.

14. the lower settle. These settles were ledges by which the altar was narrowed towards the top; and the whole of it may be thus computed:

HEIGHT: Base (ver. 13), 1 cubit; To first ledge (ver. 14), 1 cubit; to upper ledge (ver. 14), 4 cubits; To hearth (ver. 15), 4 cubits; In all, 10 cubits.

BREADTH: Upper ledge (ver. 17), 14 cubits; For higher ledge (ver. 14), 2 cubits; For lower ledge (ver. 14), 2 cubits; For base (ver. 13), 2 cubits; In all, 20 cubits.

Hence, the upper part of the altar was only twelve cubits square (ver. 16), the upper settle, or ledge, being in all fourteen cubits (ver. 17), deducting two cubits from its dimension. Though this altar was the same in height and breadth with that of Solomon, yet it differed materially from it in having settles or ledges; on which the priests walked round the altar, to officiate in offering sacrifices.

It is probable that the prince mentioned here and elsewhere, does not mean the Messiah, but the ruler of the Jewish nation for the time being. For it is not only directed where he should sit in the temple, and eat his portion of the sacrifices, and when and how he should go out; but it is also ordered (Ezk 45:22), that at the passover he shall offer a bullock, a sin offering for himself and the people; and to guard him against any temptation of oppressing the people, he had a provision of land allotted to him (Ezk 45:8), out of which he is to give an inheritance for his sons (Ezk 46:18). These appear plainly to be political rules for common princes, and for a succession of them; but as no such rules were observed under the second temple, the fulfillment of it must still be future. The holy oblation for the land, for the sanctuary, and for the priests and Levites, 1-6. The portions of the prince and the people, 7, 8. Ordinances of justice to be observed by them, 9-12. Oblations to be presented in the beginning of the year, at the passover, and in the feast of tabernacles, 13-25.

1. shall divide by lot. Heb. cause the land to fall by lot. Ezk *47:21, 22. 48:29. Ge ◐24:44n. Nu *26:55, 56. 34:13. Jsh 13:6. +14:2n. Ps 16:5, 6. ye shall offer. ver. 2-7. That our translators rightly added the word reeds, is evident from the length and breadth of the sanctuary being exactly the same as before (compare ver. 2 with Ezk 42:16-19). Estimating the reed at 3 1/2 yards, this holy oblation would constitute a square of nearly fifty miles on every side. From the north side a portion of nearly twenty miles in width, and nearly fifty in length, was appointed for the priests; and in the midst of this portion, the area of the sanctuary, about a mile square, to be enclosed by a wall (ver. 1, 2). Next to this, on the south, was the Levites' portion, of the same dimensions as that of the priests (ver. 5); and south of this was the portion for the city, of the same length as those of the priests and Levites, but only half the width (ver. 6). These three formed the square of 25,000 reeds, or nearly fifty miles; and that set apart for the prince, the breadth of which is not mentioned, extended in length from north to south, along the east and west sides of the square. As Canaan would not admit of so large a portion for the sanctuary, etc., this was no doubt intended to intimate the large extent of the church in the glorious times predicted. Contrary to the last statement of the preceding note, it is possible to take these predictions literally since Israel will then possess all of the land originally promised to Abraham, and certain geographical changes will doubtless make a literal fulfillment of the prophecy entirely possible (See note on Ezk +42:16). five and twenty thousand. Ordinances for the prince in his worship, 1-8, and for the people, 9-15. Rules for the prince's disposal of his inheritance, 16-18. The places for boiling or baking the oblations, 19-24.

1. Thus saith. Whether the rules for public worship here laid down were designed to be observed in those things wherein they differed from the law of Moses, in the ministrations of the second temple, is not certain. In the latter history of the Jewish church, the law of Moses only was followed, except in the corruption of following the traditions of the fathers. The gate. The prophet had before observed that the east gate of the outer court was shut, and was told that it must only be opened for the prince; and now he is informed that the gate of the inner court on the east was also shut, and is to be opened only on the sabbath and new moons, till the evening. shall be shut. Ezk 44:1, 2. six working. Ge 3:19. The meat offering, under the law, was only three tenths of an epha to a bullock, two tenths for a ram, and one tenth for a lamb, with the fourth part of a hin of oil. Ezk 45:17. Nu 28:9, 10.

On these their families and friends feasted; and portions were sent to the poor, the widow, and the orphan; and thus the spirit of devotion preserved the spirit of mercy, charity, and benevolence, in the land. joined. or, made with chimneys. corners. Heb. cornered.

EZEKIEL 47

The prophet is shown waters springing from under the threshold of the temple, growing wider and deeper, and at length becoming an impassable river, which healed the desert, and the dead sea; abounded with fish; and had on each bank fruit trees filled with new fruit every month, the leaves of which served for medicine, 1-12. The borders of the land appointed, as to be divided among Israelites and sojourners, 13-23.

1. the door. Ezk 41:2, 23-26. waters issued. Solomon's temple and the second temple were doubtless well supplied with water, probably conveyed there by means of pipes; but these waters flowed from the temple, not as a common sewer, but as a fertilizing river. A fountain producing abundance of water was not in the temple, and could not be there on the top of such a hill; and consequently these waters, as well as those spoken of by Joel and Zechariah, must be understood figuratively and typically. These waters doubtless were an emblem of the "gospel preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven;" and their gradual rise beautifully represents its progress, from small beginnings to an immensely large increase; and the latter part of the representation may relate to the times when it shall fill the earth, and produce the most extensive and important effects on the state of mankind in every nation. The preceding note of nearly two centuries ago fails, however, to maintain a consistently literal interpretation. Surely there is no reason why, with the changes geologically and geographically predicted for these times (Ezk +*42:16n. 45:1n. Ps 46:2, 3. Zc 14:4, 10), and the supernatural character of the period predicted with the presence of the Messiah reigning from Jerusalem, that these predictions should not be literally fulfilled. Just as there is no justification for spiritualizing or allegorizing away the literal meaning and fulfillment of the predictions regarding the destruction of Jerusalem and the second advent of Christ, so there is no justification for disbelieving in the literal fulfillment of the predictions here. The Holy Land, as here described, extended from about 31 degrees to 35 degrees N. lat. and from 34 degrees to 37 degrees E. long.; being bounded on the north by a line drawn from the Mediterranean to Hamath; on the east by Damascus, Hauran, Gilead, and the land of Israel east of Jordan, unto the south of the Dead sea; on the south by Tamar and Kadesh, unto the river of Rhinocorura; and on the west by the Mediterranean sea, from the same point, northward, "till a man come over against Hamath;" and its length from north to south would be about 280 miles, and its breadth about 150 miles. The boundaries of the land are nearly the same as were marked out by Moses; except, that it does not appear, whether any part, or what part, of the country east of Jordan, is included within the eastern boundary. The ten tribes, as well as Judah and Benjamin, were to be admitted to a full share in this inheritance, which seems to imply that a future restoration to the promised

In this division of the Holy Land, a portion is laid out for each of the twelve tribes directly across the country, from east to west; and deducting the square of 25,000 reeds, or nearly fifty miles on each side, between Judah and Benjamin, for the priests, Levites, city, and temple, with the inheritance of the prince to the east and west (see on Ezk 45:1) from 280 miles, the length of the country from north to south, there will remain for each tribe a portion of less than twenty miles in width, and 150 in length. This division of the land entirely differs from that which was made in the days of Joshua, in which the tribes were not only differently placed, but confused and intermixed; while here distinct lots are assigned to each of the twelve tribes, in a regular mathematical form. Literally such a division never took place in the past, but will take place as described in the future Messianic kingdom reign of Christ during the Millennium. Manasseh. The holy oblation of 25,000 reeds, or near fifty square miles, was divided into three parts from north to south (see on Ezk 45:1): a portion on the north of 10,000 reeds in width, and 25,000 in length, for the priests, in the midst of which was the sanctuary or temple, surrounded by a wall 500 reeds square (ver. 9, 10. see on Ezk 42:15); next to this another portion of the same dimensions for the Levites (ver. 13, 14); and on the south another portion of the same length, but only 5000 reeds in breadth, for the city (ver. 15). The city was situated in the midst of this portion, being 4500 reeds, or about nine miles square (see on ver. 30), having a suburb of 250 reeds, or about half a mile on each side (ver. 17), leaving 10,000 reeds or nearly ten miles, on the east side, and the same on the west side, for the profit of those who serve the city out of all the tribes (ver. 18, 19). On the east and west sides of this square of 25,000 reeds, is the portion of the prince; each of which, estimating the breadth of the land at 150 miles, would form a square of fifty miles. Thus the whole plan of the division of the country, laying out of the city, temple, and all its appendages, is perfectly regular and uniform; and would therefore convey to the minds of the Jews the most complete idea they were capable of conceiving of the most perfect church, commonwealth, city, temple, and conveniences, on the largest and grandest scale for the Divine worship; and it doubtless ultimately points out the land of Immanuel, the city of the New Jerusalem, and his temple, the Christian church, the house of the living God. 1 T 3:15. Young notes that the number is not to be read as 504,000 but 4,500. DANIEL

Jehoiakim, with part of the sacred vessels, is carried captive, 1, 2. Nebuchadnezzar commits Daniel, and certain young Jews, to the master of the eunuchs, to be instructed in the Chaldee learning; allotting them a daily portion, and changing their names, 3-7. They refuse to eat of the king's meat; and, being permitted to live on pulse and water, they improve in vigor and comeliness, 8-16. God confers on them knowledge and wisdom; so that, being far superior to the wise men of Babylon, they are preferred by the king, 17-21.

Hence Athenaeus (l. iv. c. 10) calls the beasts served up at the tables of the Persian kings, ieria, victims. Daniel was therefore resolved not to defile himself with their viands; yet he did not rudely refuse what was intended as a kindness, but mildly and modestly requested the Nebuchadnezzar sets up a golden image, and commands all his ministers of state, and officers, when they hear all kinds of music, to fall down and worship it, on pain of being cast into a fiery furnace, 1-6. His orders are almost universally complied with, 7. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, are accused of disobedience, 8-12. The king vehemently threatens them, if they persist in refusal, defying any God to deliver them; but they answer calmly and resolutely, 13-18. They are cast into the furnace, the flame of which kills those who threw them in, 19-23. The king is astonished, at seeing them walk unhurt in the fire, with "a fourth like to the Son of God," 24, 25. They come forth; and all the immense company see that the fire has not touched them, 26, 27. Nebuchadnezzar blesses God, and decrees severe punishment on those who spake against him, 28, 29. The subsequent promotion of the three Jews, 30.

In Matthew's account of the temptation of Jesus by the devil (Mt 4:1-11), the word "devil" occurs four times (Mt 4:1, 5, 8, 11), "tempter" one time (Mt 4:3), and "satan" once (Mt 4:10), making six in all (Mt 4:1-11). In Luke's account of the temptation (Lk 4:1-13), "devil" occurs five times (Lk 4:2, 3, 5, 6, 13), and "satan" once (Lk 4:8), making six in all (Lk 4:1-13). Jesus was charged six times with having a devil: (1) Mt 12:24. Mk 3:22. (2) Jn 7:20. (3) Jn 8:48. (4) Jn 8:52. (5) Jn 10:20. (6) Lk 11:15. Nathaniel West in The Thousand Years states, regarding the symbolism of the number six: "Prophetic Numbers are indeed symbolical. No one denies this. We know that the sacred 7 is so, and lies at the basis of the Sacred Calendar of the Jews, and also the Civil Calendar of the Christians. It points to the 'Rest,' the 'Sabbath' of God. It symbolizes that Rest to which all believers come, even now, first in their souls by faith; a Rest to which they shall yet come, soul and body together, and the 'sign' of both which is the 7th day rest of the Christian Sabbath, now. The 6 is no less symbolical, just because literal. It is a secular number grounded in the 6 days' work of creation which preceded the 7th of rest, the 6 days commanded of God for man's toil, but in which the unbelieving and ungodly, still secular in soul, and pressed with worldly care, abide without a Sabbath. They remember not the 7th to keep it holy. They have no peace, no rest. Their souls have never ceased from their work, as God did from His. The 6 can never give the 7. The World can never bring, or give, God's rest. If the Kingdom of God and His Christ has 7 as its holy signature, the Kingdom of Satan and Antichrist has 6 as its signature; an earthly kingdom, carnal, restless, and unsabbatized; the rule of worldly-minded men, without a sign of sanctity, or covenant between themselves and God; a Godless, Christless kingdom, and a Godless, Christless nation, wherever found. It is the atheist's mark. It is the apostate's sign. It is the seal of anti-Christianity, in league with civil power; the 10-horned 'Beast,' who would blot the Heptad from the Calendar and put the Decade there, profane the 7 and consecrate the 6 and 10. We see the symbolism of it in Daniel 3:1, where the Golden Image of the Babylonian King was reared upon the plains of Dura, '66 cubits high.'—It means negation; no God, no Sabbath, no religion, save the world's religion; no Rest for man or beast; no heaven; no hope; no immortality" (pp. 99, 100). DANIEL 4

Nebuchadnezzar proclaims to all nations the dealings "of the most high God" with him, adding benevolent salutations and admiring praises, 1-3. He states that he had a dream which the magicians could not interpret, 4-7; and that he related it to Daniel, 8-18; who interpreted it, 19-27. The dream is fulfilled, in Nebuchadnezzar's loss of dignity, reason, and almost the human form, for a season, 28-33; but, being restored, he humbly and fervently adores and praises God, 34-37.

DANIEL 5

Belshazzar feasts with his lords, etc. they drink wine out of the sacred vessels of God, and join in praising their idols, 1-4. A hand is seen writing on the wall; and the astrologers being unable to read what was written, the king and his nobles are exceedingly terrified, 5-9. Daniel, by means of the queen, is brought in, 10-16. He rejects the king's proffered reward; and sharply reproves his pride, idolatry, and impiety, 17-24. He explains the handwriting, as denouncing the immediate death of the king, and the translation of his kingdom to the Medes and Persians, 25-28. The promised honors are ordered him, 29. That very night Belshazzar is slain, and Darius the Mede takes the kingdom, 30, 31.

He reigned seven years, during which time he was engaged in unsuccessful wars with the Medes and Persians; and at this very time was besieged by Cyrus. DANIEL 6

Daniel is highly preferred by Darius, and envied by his courtiers, who can find no occasion against him except concerning his religion, 1-5. Darius is prevailed on to sign a decree prohibiting everyone, during thirty days, to present any petition to either God or man, except to the king; under pain of being cast into the den of lions, 6-9. Daniel prays three times a day to God as usual; is accused before Darius; the execution of the sentence is urgently demanded; and Daniel is cast into the den of lions, 10-17. The king shows much grief: but Daniel is miraculously preserved; and his accusers are devoured by the lions, 18-24. Darius commands all his subjects to fear before the almighty God, whom Daniel serves, 25-27. Daniel's subsequent prosperity, 28.

DANIEL 7

Daniel has a vision of four great beasts arising out of the sea; the fourth having ten horns; among which a little horn comes up, 1-8; and of Messiah's kingdom, 9-14. An angel interprets the vision, of four kingdoms which would succeed each other: and shows the nature of the fourth kingdom, with the mischiefs done by the little horn, and the destruction of that kingdom, to make way for the kingdom of God, 11-28.

20. the ten horns. The ten kingdoms into which the western Roman empire was divided; which were primarily, according to Machiavel and Bp. Lloyd, (1)

The Huns in Hungary, A.D. 356. (2) The Ostrogoths in Maesia, 377. (3) The Visigoths in Pannonia, 378. (4) The Sueves and Alans in Gascoigne and Spain, 407. (5) The Vandals in Africa, 407. (6) The Franks in France, 407. (7) The Burgundians in Burgundy, 407. (8) The Heruli and Turingi in Italy, 476. (9) The Saxons and Angles in Britain, 476. (10) The Lombards, first upon the Danube, 526, and afterwards in Italy. Though the ten kingdoms differed from these in later periods, and were sometimes more or less, yet they were still known by that name. Prophetic interpretation and application has largely changed in viewpoint since the preceding note was written nearly two centuries ago. Since these kings are yet future (See notes on ver. 7 and on Ezk 38:16), the preceding identification may not be valid. Since the tribes did not exist at the same time and place, and are tribes, not personal kings, and since more than ten such tribes have been identified, their identification with the ten kings of Daniel is doubtful. Furthermore, ver. 24 states they were or are to be "out of this kingdom," that is, from within the kingdom, whereas the barbarian tribes were all from outside the Roman empire. Likewise, attempts to identify the ten kings with the nations of the European Common Market are not likely to be valid, for the extent of the European Common Market does not sufficiently include the eastern portion of the ancient Roman empire (The ancient Roman empire included a part of southern Europe, western Asia, and northern Africa), which is also in view in the prophetic Scriptures. If these ten kingdoms are to come into being after the events of Ezk ch. 38, 39, perhaps upon the establishment of a one-world government, then identification with the situation of today would be invalid. If the ten kings are to be identified with the ten toes of the image in Da 2:41, 42, 44, then they must be future, for the ten kings have not as yet been given their power (Re 17:12). This evidently points out the papal supremacy, in every respect diverse from the former, which from small beginnings thrust itself up among the ten kingdoms, till at length it successively eradicated three of them—the kingdom of the Heruli, of the Ostrogoths, and of the Lombards. Others, seeing these events as yet future, interpret this of the Antichrist. That it does not apply to the Pope of Rome is quite certain, for (1) the pope never uprooted three kings to establish himself; (2) the "little horn" follows, not precedes, the breakup of Rome; (3) the pope has never been a "king" in a sense parallel to that of the other "ten horns"; (4) the "little horn," if identical with the Antichrist, cannot be the pope, for the Antichrist must come from one of the four divisions of the Grecian Empire (Da 8:8, 9, 21-23): Greece, Turkey, Syria, Egypt; as the last king of the north is the king of Syria (Da 11:36-43), and is the Antichrist, Antichrist must be from Syria: but no pope has or will likely come from there. DANIEL 8

Daniel has a vision of a ram, and a he-goat that overcame the ram, 1-7. The horn of the goat is broken, and four horns come up in its stead, 8. A little horn springs from one of them, and becomes exceedingly great, and does much mischief, 9-12. The two thousand three hundred days of the suspension of the daily sacrifice, 13, 14. Gabriel shows Daniel that this vision related to the kingdom of the Medes and Persians as conquered by the Macedonians and to a power that would thence arise, and extensively, and for a long time, prevail against the saints, 15-25. The certainty and remote futurity of the events; and Daniel's grief, astonishment, and sickness, 26, 27.

That is, 2300 years, which, reckoned from the time Alexander invaded Asia, B.C. 334, will be A.D. 1966. Of course, the preceding note assumes that each day corresponds to a year (Nu 14:34. Ps 90:4. Ezk 4:5. 2 P 3:8), an interesting but apparently a mistaken identification here. Adventists used this text to predict the coming of Christ in 1843 or 1844 (calculating 2300 years from the start of the seventy weeks of Da 9:24, in 457 B.C.) which did not materialize, so subsequently was reinterpreted of Christ entering the holy of holies of the heavenly sanctuary to cleanse it, an interpretation at variance with ver. 13 above, for the heavenly sanctuary can hardly be "trodden." No doubt the reference is to 2300 literal days, probably a time period occurring in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes who reigned from 175 to 164 B.C., who prefigures the future Antichrist. Some interpret this 2300 days of the future Antichrist, noting that the time falls short 110 days of the three and one half years elsewhere mentioned in that connection (Da 9:27). See note on ver. 14, where the end of the 2300 years was thought to be A.D. 1966, but during that year the only event of prophetic significance, the "Six Day War" in Israel, whereby Israel regained control of all of Jerusalem, perhaps fulfilling Lk 21:24, does not seem to have any immediate relationship to the prophecies here. DANIEL 9

Daniel, being assured that the end of the captivity was near, fasts; humbles himself in confessing his sins and those of this people; and earnestly prays for the restoration of Jerusalem, 1-19. Gabriel is sent to inform him, that the city, being rebuilt, shall continue for sixty-nine weeks of years; after which the Messiah will be cut off, but not for himself, and the city and sanctuary will be destroyed, 20-26. Antichrist confirms a covenant for one week, but in the midst of the week terminates the temple sacrifices, desecrates the temple with his abominations, desolating judgments overwhelm the city and nation, and the judgment determined upon the desolator is rendered, 27.

Sir Robert Anderson has since given a detailed calculation regarding the seventy weeks, a period which begins March 14, B.C. 445, and for the sixty-ninth week, ends Sunday, April 6, A.D. 32, the day of the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem (Lk 19:28-40) in fulfillment of Zc 9:9 (Anderson, The Coming Prince, pp. vi., 128). As to the seventieth week, it is yet future. "A careful study of the Angel's words (Da 9:24) will show that not so much as one of them has been thus accomplished" (Anderson, p. 79). Le 25:8. (1) Seven weeks, or 49 years, for the restoration of Jerusalem. (2) Sixty-two weeks, or 434 years, from that time to the announcement of the Messiah by John the Baptist. Note however the more precise identification of Sir Robert Anderson given above at ver. 24. (3) One week, or seven years, for the ministry of John and of Christ himself to the crucifixion. Note however, that it is better to take this seven-year period as yet future, as the notes and references to verse 24 conclusively show. There seems no adequate basis to bring in the ministry of John the Baptist for this calculation, and no evidence that his ministry added to that of Christ total exactly seven years. One might wrongly but more plausibly suggest the seven years includes the continued offer of the Gospel to the Jewish nation after Pentecost until, clearly rejected by Israel, the apostle declared, "lo, we turn to the Gentiles" (Ac 13:46); such a view would be mistaken, however, for the apostles continued to bring the message "to the Jew first" (Ro 1:16) throughout the book of Acts even after this incident (Ac 14:1. 17:1, 10, 17. 18:4, 7, 19. 19:8. 28:23, 29-31). This week or period of seven years is best taken as the future time of the Great Tribulation during which Antichrist will be revealed. be built again. Heb. return and be builded. wall. or, breach, or, ditch. *S#2742h. For one thing, it is in the wrong time frame, the seventieth week of Daniel's prophecy. For another, Christ did not make any seven-year covenants which he then proceeded to break after three and one half years! This is the seven-year covenant made by Antichrist with the Jewish nation, which the Antichrist breaks in the middle of the tribulation. for one week. This is Daniel's seventieth week, a time period of seven years which is yet future, as careful consideration of events described in its connection will show. Ge 29:27. Re 11:7. cause the sacrifice. Mt 27:51. He 10:4-22. Amillenarians would probably favor the preceding original Treasury references, suggesting that Christ's death on the cross put an end to sacrifices and offerings, for He truly was the completion of all the Old Testament types, whose one sacrifice forever put away sin. More consistent with the immediate context however, which places this event during the future seventieth week, is the premillennial view which holds this to be a reference to the Antichrist forbidding the Jews the right to have sacrifices in their temple, much as did Antiochus in former times (see on Da 8:11). DANIEL 10

Daniel, after long mourning and fasting, has a vision, the glory of which overpowers him, 1-9. An angel comforts and strengthens him; and telling him of the opposition of the prince of Persia, the assistance he had from Michael, and the coming of the prince of Grecia, promises him further information, 10-21.

Newton observes, was now very far advanced in years; for the third year of Cyrus was the 73rd of his captivity; and being a youth when carried captive, he cannot be supposed to have been less than ninety. Old as he was, "he set his heart to understand" the former revelations which had been made to him, and particularly the vision of the ram and he-goat, as may be collected from the sequel; and for this purpose he prayed and fasted three weeks. His fasting and prayers had the desired effect, for an angel was sent to unfold to him those mysteries; and whoever would excel in divine knowledge, must imitate Daniel, and habituate himself to study, temperance, and devotion. ver. 2, 3. DANIEL 11

A prediction of the Persian empire being overthrown by the Grecian, and the Grecian divided into four parts, 1-4. A prophecy of leagues and conflicts between the kings of the south and of the north, 5-20. The exploits of one of the latter princes, 21-29, who, being checked in his progress by the ships of Chittim, shall turn his fury against the Holy Land, 30-35. An impious tyranny set up in the last days by the last king of the north, Antichrist, 36-39. Events that shall take place in the latter times involving the dominion, success, and destruction of powers hostile to the people of God, 40-45.

For the elucidation of the historical parts of Scripture, it is advantageous to notice the writings of heathen authors: light is thus thrown on many passages of Holy Writ, by showing the accomplishment of the prophecies therein contained, or customs elucidated, which, in the course of years, or in our more northern latitude, would be to us inexplicable. Antiochus defeated the army of Ptolemy Philometor, and in the next campaign made himself master of all Egypt, except Alexandria. While they had frequent conferences at the same table, they spoke lies to each other; and the former returned to Syria laden with riches.

Notice here that it is not the professionally trained theologians and clergy, but the ordinary people of God, those believers taught in the word who understand doctrine, who will be used to instruct, direct, and encourage the faith of other weaker believers during the time of tribulation and persecution. This proves (1) the perspicuity of Scripture, (2) the right of private judgment, (3) the validity and efficacy of informal Bible study and teaching, (4) the value of house fellowships and ongoing small group one-another ministry (1 P 4:10). This was fulfilled in the time of Antiochus by the Hasidaeans (1 Maccabees 2:42, 43), but as this whole prophecy is typical of what shall be in the time of the Antichrist, how richly suggestive this passage is concerning how believers will need to associate and teach informally in those difficult times of future tribulation. While some interpreters take the following verses to be a continued description of Antiochus Epiphanes, careful attention to the statements of the prophecy show that they apply more accurately, if not exclusively, to the future Antichrist. Note that the original notes of the Treasury retained below reflect the older view that the prophecy regards the Romans, Constantine, and finally the bishop of Rome. The correspondences or parallels drawn between these various individuals, Antiochus and Antichrist may be valid as types to portray the nature of the coming Antichrist.

The Hebrew word underlying "to and fro" (S#7751h) differs from another related Hebrew word only by the difference of "s" being read "sh." This word is defined by Gesenius "go" or "rove about," p. 1001b, and "go eagerly, quickly, to and fro," p. 1002a. If read "sh," the word would be S#7750h, for which Gesenius gives "swerve, fall away, ...apostatize," "those falling away to falsehood (Ps 40:5)," p. 962a. Thus, one reading might support the usual view that there would be increased travel in the latter days. The alternative reading would suggest that apostasy would be rampant. knowledge. An alternate reading suggests "calamities" or "wickedness" shall be increased, a reading supported by the LXX. The difference arises from the very slight difference between the Hebrew letters for "d" and "r," daleth and resh, which are often confused, in Hebrew a change from hadda'ath to hara'oth, as discussed in the CB margin. If "knowledge" is the correct reading, the reference might be either to the "knowledge explosion" of our day, or perhaps an increase of knowledge about Biblical prophecy. If the alternative readings "apostatize" and "wickedness" are correct, this passage becomes strikingly similar to the New Testament prophecies of Paul (2 Th √2:3, 7. 1 T 4:1. 2 T 3:1-5). HOSEA 1

An account of the prophet, and of the times when he lived, 1. At God's command, and to expose the idolatry of Israel, he takes a wife of whoredoms; and calls his children, by names expressive of the judgments which were coming on his people, 2-9. The increase and restoration of Judah and Israel, under one Head is predicted, 10, 11.

HOSEA 4

God denounces judgments on Israel, for their aggravated impieties and iniquities, 1-5. He exposes the ignorance and wickedness of the priests, and profligacy of the people, he will leave their wives and daughters to commit lewdness, without present punishment, 12-14. He warns Judah, not to imitate Israel's crimes, which are still further reproved, 15-19.

The Companion Bible margin suggests "they being joined (or yoked) (in cohabitation. Put for idolatries) together in committing idolatry." two. Pusey suggests (Minor Prophets, p. 104) the two transgressions may designate the two calves of Bethel and Dan, or the twofold guilt of fornication, spiritual, and in the body; the breach of both tables of God's law. Others suggest unfaithfulness towards Jehovah and devotedness to idols; Keil suggests (Minor Prophets, vol i, p. 133) apostasy from Jehovah and the royal house of David. Ho 3:5. 1 K 12:26-33. The noise they make in brousing on the trees and herbage may be heard at a great distance, and resembles that of an army in secret. Wherever their myriads spread, the verdure of the country disappears; trees and plants, stripped of their leaves and reduced to their naked boughs and stems, cause the dreary image of winter to succeed in an instant to the rich scenery of spring. When these clouds of locusts take their flight, to surmount any obstacles or to traverse more rapidly a desert soil, the heavens may literally be said to be obscured by them." ver. 10, 31. 28. And it shall. Zc 13:4. Ac ℙ2:17-21. afterward. Note carefully this time indicator. Had Israel responded to their Messiah at the first advent, or had they responded to the preaching of the apostles recorded in Acts (Ac 3:18-26), the "times of refreshing" would have immediately been ushered in (Ac +*3:19, 21), and the subsequent elements of this prophecy would then have come to pass. The context shows the promise is primarily to natural Israel (thus the command to go to the Jew first, Ac +*1:8. Ro +*1:16), to whom the apostles offered it, and will come to pass "afterwards," that is, after the events just predicted in the preceding passage: the full restoration (ver. 25) of Israel to their land, with God himself dwelling in their midst (ver. 27), upon their repentance and earnest calling upon Him (ver. 13). Since the church has never replaced natural Israel in the plan of God, because of the irrevocable promise of the "sure mercies of David" made exclusively to natural Israel (Is +*55:3), both the application and ultimate fulfillment of this prophecy are reserved until after the second advent of Christ, when the blessings of this promise will be made available to "all flesh" through Israel as the spiritual center of the earth (Ge 12:3. Re 18:10, 15, 16, 19. streets. lit. open places. Heb. rechob, *S#7339h. This word signifies a courtyard or square. It is applied to the broad open space adjacent to the gate of a town, where public business was transacted (Dt 13:16); to the court before the temple (Ezr 10:9) or before a palace (Est 4:6). When the word is used of a street, it often more properly refers to the idea of publicity rather than of width (Ge 19:2. Jg 19:15. 2 S 21:12). Ge 19:2. Dt 13:16. The term applies generally to what is outside the residence (Pr 7:12, without), and to other places than streets, as to a pasture-ground (Jb 5:10mg) or inheritance "in the land" (Jb 18:17). Broad and narrow streets are distinguished under the terms rechob and chuts in the following passages, though the point is frequently lost in the A.V. by rendering the latter term "abroad" or "without": Pr 5:16. 7:12. 22:13. Je 5:1. 9:21. Na 2:4. The same distinction is expressed by the terms rechob and shuk (S#7784h, Pr +7:8) in SS 3:2. In the light of these distinctions in Hebrew it is interesting to consider the New Testament expressions "highways and hedges" (Mt 22:9. Lk *14:23) and the "narrow" and "broad" way (Mt *7:13, 14). The familiar expression "highways and byways" does not occur as such in Scripture; the only reference to "byways" is in Jg 5:6 in the A.V. such. 2 Ch 35:25. Ec 12:5. Je *9:17-19. Mt 9:23. The contrast in this verse between hell and heaven shows that the unseen world, and not the grave, is here meant (Scott). This use of sheol shows it is a place, and that existence there is conscious, otherwise the statement would be nonsensical. Amos is not postulating that one could dig into a place of non-existence or annihilation, he is setting forth what is in fact impossible—digging into sheol—as though it were possible, to cut off all avenues of possible escape from God's threatened judgment. In this sentence both hell and heaven are regarded as inaccessible to mortal men, but if men could hide in hell, the living among the dead, even there they could not escape God's predicted judgment, for God would reach them. JONAH

JONAH 1

God commands Jonah to go and prophesy against Nineveh, 1, 2. Fleeing from the service, he attempts to sail to Tarshish; but is overtaken by a tempest, and discovered by lot, 3-10. The mariners reluctantly cast him into the sea; the storm abates, and they sacrifice to Jehovah, 11-16. Jonah is swallowed by a great fish; and continues in its belly three days, 17.

Jonah, at God's renewed command, goes to Nineveh, and denounces its destruction, 1-4. The Ninevites excited by the king, believe, fast, pray, reform, and trust in God's mercy, 5-9. The Lord repents him of the evil, 10.

2. Nineveh. Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, was situated on the eastern bank of the river Tigris, opposite the present Mosul, about 280 miles north of Babylon, and 400 miles N.E. of Damascus, in lat. 36 degrees 20 minutes N. long. 73 degrees 10 minutes E. It was not only a very ancient (Ge 10:11), but also a very great city. Strabo (l. xvi) says that it was much larger than Babylon, the circuit of which he estimates at 385 furlongs; and according to Diodorus Siculus (l. ii), it was an oblong parallelogram, extending 150 furlongs in length, 90 in breadth, and 480 in circumference, i.e. about 20 miles long, 12 broad, and 60 in compass. This agrees with the account given here of its being "an exceeding great city of three days' journey," i.e. in circuit; for 20 miles a day was the common computation for a pedestrian (See Herodotus, l. v. c. 35). It was surrounded by large walls 100 feet high, so broad that three chariots could drive abreast on them, and defended by 1500 towers 200 feet in height. When He hath said it, alter His decree?
Denounced judgment God doth oft prevent,
But neither changeth counsel nor intent;
The voice of heaven doth seldom threat perdition,

God's great concern and compassion for the city is revealed in the book of Jonah, and confirmed by the following reference passages, which show Christ's manner of sending his disciples into the city, his own ministry to cities and single individuals within cities, and his great compassion for Jerusalem. Evangelism began from a city, Jerusalem. Missionary activity began when missionaries were commissioned and sent forth from the church in the city of Antioch. Paul spent quality time teaching God's word in various cities, establishing adult men as permanent leaders and elders who would remain in the churches to continue the teaching after Paul went on to other places (compare Paul's own instructions to Timothy in this regard, 1 T +*4:16; 2 T +*2:2). Paul furnished converts a carefully balanced and sequenced spiritual diet, preserved most fully for us in the structure and sequence of the book of Romans. Paul first emphasized doctrine (Ro ch. 1-8), so believers would get the right perspective upon their own condition in the light of God's character (Mt ◐+*25:24n), essential motivation for Christian service. Paul next concentrated on prophecy, so believers would have a correct perspective on where God is leading in his total plan (Ro ch. 9-11), and how he is absolutely committed to keeping his covenants and fulfilling his promises (Ro 11:29. 15:8). After thorough doctrinal and prophetic teaching, believers were ready for instruction in the practical application of spiritual truth (Ro ch. 12-16), what Scripture calls the "meat of the word" (He 5:14). The structure of Romans constitutes a plan for in-depth discipleship, an investment in the lives of individuals, where the person who is thoroughly taught in the word teaches everything he knows to those he is discipling. Such instruction must not only be substantial in content, but must focus on teaching the disciple to be an independent, self-motivated student of Scripture, who knows how to feed upon, rightly interpret and apply the word of God (Da 11:33n. Ro 14:12. 2 P 1:20n). The goal in disciple-making is to teach oneself out of a job. Independence, not dependence, is the desired outcome of instruction. We must invest quality time with each person being discipled, and must not abandon new disciples after six months of instruction! Rather, we must continue to invest our life in their training for as long as they continue to desire spiritual growth, and for as long as the Lord enables us to be spiritually profitable to them, until they are equipped and are successful in discipling others. Greater attention needs to be paid to the need for worldwide urban evangelism. But a truly effective missionary thrust must be supported by a strong home base consisting of churches that are thoroughly taught and practiced in the principles and doctrines of God's word (2 T +✓3:15-17). The pastor's ministry must concentrate on systematically teaching the Bible. His goal must be to develop stable spiritual leadership in the congregation. To be more effective, churches need to be prepared to do unusual and unconventional ministry (something Jonah was not attitudinally and spiritually prepared for), to reach people where they are, at the times they are available. A teaching ministry conducted by means of home Bible studies is one method to reach people presently outside of the church (2 J +*10). See related notes (1 Th 3:5n. He 3:13n. 6:9n). Jon 1:2. 3:2, 3. MICAH 3

MICAH reproves the princes for their cruelty, and the prophets for their falsehoods and selfishness, 1-7. He declares himself inspired, emboldened, and authorized by the Spirit of God, to protest against the sins and presumption of the princes, priests, and prophets; and to denounce the desolations of the city and temple, 8-12.

Da +*11:33. 1 P *5:1-4. eight. As seven is the symbol of a sacred whole, so eight, when united with it, is something beyond it (Pusey). The spiritual significance of the number eight often includes the thought of a new beginning (for the first day of the week is the eighth day, a new beginning), resurrection, and regeneration. There are eight cases of individual resurrection from the dead apart from that of Christ: (1) 1 K 17:17-22. (2) 2 K 4:32-37. (3) 2 K 13:20, 21. (4) Lk 7:11-15. (5) Mk 5:35-42. Lk 8:49-55. Circumcision was performed on the eighth day (Ge 17:12), foreshadowing the "circumcision of Christ" connected with the new creation or regeneration of the individual (Col 2:11). The feast of Tabernacles (Le +*23:34, 39n, 42) lasted eight days (Le 23:36). It will be the principal feast during the Millennium (Ezk 45:18-25. Zc *14:16-19). Ec 11:2. principal men. MICAH 6

The Lord has a controversy with his people for their great ingratitude, 1-5. The vain attempts of alarmed sinners to obtain his favor, contrasted with his reasonable requirements and service, 6-8. His voice against the city should be attended to, 9. Reproofs of Israel's iniquity, injustice, and idolatry; with awful threatenings, 10-16.

Newcome, in ver. 1, 2, by calling a man to urge his plea in the face of all nature, and on the inanimate creation to hear the expostulation of Jehovah with his people, is truly awakening and magnificent. The words of Jehovah follow in ver. 3-5; and God's mercies having been set before the people, one of them is introduced in a beautiful manner, asking what his duty is towards so gracious a God, ver. 6, 7. HABAKKUK 3

The prophet prays that God would revive his work, and have mercy on his people, 1, 2. He commemorates the displays made of Jehovah's glory in his ancient works for Israel, as encouraging hope of future deliverance, 3-15. He shows how deeply he was affected by the prospect of the approaching judgments; but resolves to rejoice in God when all other comforts failed, 16-19.

ZEPHANIAH 3

Sharp rebukes of Jerusalem, for divers aggravated sins of idolatry, oppression, disobedience, failure to draw near to God, harboring false prophets, wresting the law, and failure to receive instruction from the judgment rendered to the heathen nations, 1-7. Gracious promises to the people of God; an exhortation to wait for the restoration of Israel, 8-13. An exhortation to rejoice for their salvation by God, their deliverance from captivity and dispersion, their glorious return to the land of Israel, and their new status among the people of the earth, 14-20.

HAGGAI 2

The prophet encourages the Jews, by assuring them that this temple, though far inferior to the former in magnificence, would be rendered more glorious by the presence of the Messiah, 1-9. By the law concerning things holy and unclean, he shows that their sins had deprived them of God's blessings, which from that time he would vouchsafe them, 10-19. He predicts the prosperity of Christ's kingdom, under that of Zerubbabel, his ancestor and type, 20-23.

In nothing, in fact, could the second temple excel the first in glory, except in the personal presence of "the Desire of all nations," He who is "the glory of the Lord," and the true temple, "in whom dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," and who was the true Shechinah, of which that of Solomon's temple was merely a type. And if it be admitted that the presence of the promised Messiah was intended, then it will follow that "Jesus of Nazareth" was He; for the second temple, in which as the "Prince of peace" he preached peace and reconciliation with God, has been utterly destroyed for upwards of seventeen hundred years. give. Ps *85:8, 9. 6. This is an ephah. "The meaning of this vision," says Abp. Newcome, "seems to be, that the Babylonish captivity had happened on account of the wickedness of the Jews, and that a like dispersion would befall them if they relapsed into like crimes." The woman who sat in the ephah was an emblem of the Jewish nation; the casting of the weight of lead on the mouth of the ephah seems to mean the condemnation of the Jews, after they had filled up the measure of their iniquities by crucifying the Messiah; the "two women, with wings like a stork, and the wind in their wings," seem emblematical of the Roman armies and the rapidity of their conquests; and their lifting up of the ephah and carrying it through the air, to build it a house in Shinar or Babylon, where it was fixed on its own basis, represents the taking of Jerusalem, the dispersion of the Jews, and the long continuance of that calamity, as a just punishment of their unbelief. ZECHARIAH 10

An exhortation to seek and expect rain, and other blessings from God; as the distresses of the people had arisen from idols, false teachers, and corrupt rulers, 1-3. Messiah represented by the cornerstone, tent peg, and battle bow, 4. Promises to the Jews of triumph over enemies, 5; extraordinary assistance, reflected in deliverance from world-wide dispersion, restoration to the land of Israel, and growth in number, 6-11; their ultimate spiritual restoration to the Lord, 12.

ZECHARIAH 11

The destruction of Jerusalem, the temple, and the Jewish rulers, 1-3. Under the type of Zechariah is shown Christ's care of his flock, and the people's hatred of him, 4-7. The rejection of the nation, for ingratitude and contempt of Christ, is denoted, by his breaking the two staves, called Beauty and Bands, 8-14. The emblem and curse of a foolish, or "idol shepherd," 15-17.

ZECHARIAH 12

Jerusalem shall be made a cup of trembling, and a burdensome stone, to all her enemies, 1-5. The Jews shall be marvelously strengthened, sanctified, and prospered, 6-8. "In that day," the pouring out of the Spirit of grace shall cause them to look, with deep repentance, on him whom they had pierced, 9-14.

"Against" is an inappropriate translation here, though supported by the Targum and the Vulgate, and followed by Luther and Calvin. The LXX. and the Syriac render properly "at" or "in," followed by Koehler, Hengstenberg, Keil, Pusey, and most competent modern Hebrew scholars. The correct rendering, following the Hebrew idiom, must be "in" or "at." The same idiom occurs at Ex 17:8, "at Rephidim;" Jg 5:19, "fought...in Taanach;" 2 Ch 35:22, "in the valley of Megiddo." Pusey explains (Minor Prophets, vol. ii. p. 454), "...when used of people, it always means 'fight against,' yet, of place, it as often, means 'fight in.'" "Against" is inappropriate here because it is not in accordance with this text or its context to suggest that Judah is to fight against Jerusalem; rather, Judah is fighting with Jerusalem against all nations gathered against her. and the. 2 K 7:6-18. 2 Ch 14:13-15. 20:25-27. The predictions contained in this chapter seem to relate to events which gradually extend from the death of Christ to the glorious days of the Millennium: —the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, whose armies were composed of many nations, which was "the day of the Lord," in which he came "to destroy those who would not that he should reign over them," ver. 1, 2; the subversion of the Roman empire, after being the executioners of the Divine vengeance on the Jews, by God's stirring up of the barbarous nations to invade them, ver. 3; the effusion of Divine knowledge from Jerusalem, by the promulgation of the Gospel, ver. 4-9; the rebuilding and replenishing of Jerusalem, ver. 10, 11; the destruction of the nations who shall fight against her, ver. 12-15; the conversion of the remnant of those nations to the Lord, ver. 16-19; and the peace and purity of the universal church in the latter days, ver. 20, 21. The preceding note, written nearly two centuries ago, goes astray in a number of points in the presentation and interpretation of prophecy, but is retained as an example of the view of prophecy held at that time. A more correct view may be learned by consulting the chapter headnotes and the references.

MALACHI

MALACHI 1

The love of God to Israel contrasted with his hatred of Edom, 1-5. God reproves the Jews, especially the priests, for ingratitude, and contempt of him and his ordinances; and foretells the calling of the Gentiles, 6-14.

2. I have. The prophet shows in these verses (ver. 2-5) how much Jacob and the Israelites were favored by Jehovah, more than Esau and the Edomites. Through every period of the history of Jacob's posterity, they could not deny that God had remarkably appeared on their behalf; but he had rendered the heritage of Esau's descendants, by wars and various other means, barren and waste forever. Note the reference to the Pentateuch. Other references to the Pentateuch in Malachi are at ver. 6, 7, 8, 13. Ml 2:2, 5, 15. 3:5, 6, 10, 16, 17. 4:4. See related note (Is +*1:2). The statement given here in Malachi regarding God's love for Jacob and hatred of Esau was given long after they were born, and applies not to them personally, but to their posterity, as the their histories in Scripture abundantly show (Ezk +35:5, 9n). hated. A prediction of the Messiah's forerunner; and of the Messiah himself, in the first advent, 1. The second advent of Messiah to cleanse and purge Israel, 2, 3. Israel will be restored, 4. The wicked will be judged for sorcery, adultery, false oaths, and the oppression of workers in their wages; justice will be rendered to the poor, 5, 6. The people are warned to repent, especially of their sacrilege and proud blasphemy, 7-15. A blessing is promised to such as feared God and spake together of him, when the righteous shall be separated from the wicked, 16-18.

10. all the tithes. Christians are often urged to tithe based upon a mistaken appeal to this Old Testament text, which is wrested out of its rightful context, when applied to such a purpose. Grounds for New Testament tithing must be placed on a different basis (Mt 23:23n). The storehouse is clearly the temple, not the church. The tithe constituted the Jewish income tax to support their national government, which was a theocracy. Reading further in the context (Ml 3:12), the time of application is particularly related to the yet future restoration of Israel (Is +*11:11n), not to the present church age. See related notes (Ge 14:20n. Mt 6:2n. *23:23n. Lk 11:41n, 42n. 2 C 8:12n). 2 Ch 31:4-10. Ne 10:33-39. Pr *3:9, 10. into the storehouse. The storehouse was part of the Jewish temple, and was used to store food grains for the Levites. Taken in context this passage lends no support whatsoever to the mistaken doctrine of "storehouse tithing," whereby Christians have been directed to restrict all their financial giving to their own denomination or local church, or as a variation, church members have been directed to pay the tithe to the local church, and restrict giving to outside organizations to amounts over and above the church tithe. 1 Ch 26:20. 2 Ch 31:11-19. THE NEW TREASURY OF SCRIPTURE KNOWLEDGE

NEW TESTAMENT

MATTHEW

MATTHEW 1

The geneology of Christ in the line of Joseph, from Abraham and David, 1-17. His miraculous conception, by the Holy Ghost, of the virgin Mary: and the doubts of Joseph, to whom she was espoused, removed by an angel; who directs him to take her home, and to call the Son born of her, Jesus, 18-21. This is shown to accord with the prediction of Isaiah, 22, 23. Joseph obeys, and Jesus is born, 24, 25.

Alford (in his Greek Testament, vol. 1, p. 6) notes that the reference is to the Holy Spirit, for it is well known usage to omit the articles after certain prepositions or when a word or expression came to bear a technical conventional meaning, as if it were a proper name. The Companion Bible suggests, however, that without the articles the expression refers to the gift given by the Holy Spirit, rather than to the Holy Spirit himself, the gift usually being specified in the context.

MATTHEW 2

Wise men from the east, guided by a star, come to Jerusalem, inquiring for "him, who was born King of the Jews," 1, 2. Herod, being alarmed, learns that Christ should be born at Bethlehem, and sends the wise men thither, 3-8. The star guides them to Jesus, whom they honor and worship; and, being warned by God, they return home another way, 9-12. Joseph is directed to go, with the child and his mother, into Egypt, 13-15. Herod murders the children at and near Bethlehem, 16-18. After Herod's death, Joseph returns from Egypt, with Jesus and Mary, and goes to dwell at Nazareth in Galilee, 19-23.

Here, we have "land of Judah" instead of Ephrathah, which was its ancient name (see Ge 35:16, 19. 48:7), as being better understood by Herod. Instead of the positive "art little," we have the negative, "art in no wise least," because, though little in the time of Micah, yet now, after the birth of the Messiah, it could no longer be so called, in view of the event which had given the city true greatness. Instead of "thousands," we have by Metonymy, properly translated, "princes," because Messiah was the Prince of princes. Instead of "be ruler," we have "be shepherd of" (A.V. rule, margin feed). This explanation brings in the next verse but one in Micah, "He shall stand and feed." Finally, the words of the prophet, "unto me," are omitted, because the emphasis is now on the fact rather than the purpose (though both were true); and hence the reason is given in the word "for," and the fact is added in the words, "my people" (B794). The Hebrew beth primarily means in, but also means by, among, at, upon, and with. It is a great mistake, therefore, always to translate en in, as is too frequently done in the New Testament. It must be taken with all the shades and breadth of meaning which the Hebrew beth has. For other instances of this idiom see Mt 7:2, 6. Mk 3:22. Lk 11:20. 22:49. Re 1:5. 5:9. water. Mk *1:8. Lk *3:16. Jn *1:33. Ac +*1:5. 2:33. *11:16. unto. Gr. eis. Note that the force and meaning of this preposition here is not "in order that," as is argued by some for the same preposition used in the same connection but rendered "for" at Ac +*2:38, "for the remission of sins," but is "because of." John did not urge his hearers to be baptized in order to repent, but to be baptized because of their repentance, which is the exact reverse. This preposition may also equally well be understood here to have the force of "as a sign or profession of," and has this force at Mt 28:19. 1 C 1:13. 10:2. repentance. ver. 2, 8. MATTHEW 4

Christ, being led by the Spirit into the wilderness, fasts forty days; is tempted by the devil; overcomes him by the word of God, and is ministered to by angels, 1-11. He dwells at Capernaum, and fulfills a prophecy of Isaiah, by preaching in Galilee, 12-17. He calls Peter, Andrew, James, and John, to follow him, 18-22. He teaches in the synagogues, and heals the diseased; so that, his fame being spread abroad, he is followed by great multitudes, 23-25.

MATTHEW 5

Christ's sermon on the mount, 1, 2. Christ shows who are blessed, 3-12. His disciples, as "the salt of the earth and the light of the world," and as resembling "a city set on a hill" and a candle in a room, must be right examples in good works, 13-16. He came not to destroy, but to fulfill and establish the law, 17-20. The sixth commandment, vindicated from corrupt glosses, and spiritually expounded and enforced, 21-26; and the seventh, 27-32; and the third, 33-37. Exhortations, to suffer wrong patiently, 38-42; to love our enemies, 43-47; and to aim at perfection, 48.

The repetition of divers negatives, a form of Synonymia, the synonyms being negatives of different kinds heaped together for a special purpose. Here, to express the certainty of Divine Truth. EWB notes that in Scripture, whenever man uses this strong asseveration, the result always contradicted what was denied (Mt 16:22. 26:35. MATTHEW 7

Cautions against rash judgment, 1-5. Things holy are not to be cast to dogs, 6. Encouragements to prayer, 7-11. The rule of doing as we would be done to, 12. The strait gate and narrow way, and the wide gate and broad way, 13, 14. A warning against false prophets, who may be known by their fruits, 15-20. No gifts or miracles will avail the workers of iniquity at the day of judgment, 21-23. The parable of the house built upon the rock, 24, 25; and that on the sand, 26, 27. Christ concludes, and the people are astonished at his doctrine, 28, 29.

MATTHEW 8

Christ cleanses a leper, 1-4; heals a Centurion's servant, and predicts the calling of the Gentiles and rejection of the Jews, 5-13; heals Peter's wife's mother, 14, 15, and many others, fulfilling a prophecy of Isaiah, 16, 17; shows in what spirit he ought to be followed, 18-22; calms the tempestuous sea by his word, 23-27; and casts out devils from two possessed men, suffering them to go into the swine, 28-32. The Gergesenes desire him to leave them, 33, 34.

Some are of the opinion that Gergasa was the country of the ancient Girgashites; but it is more probable that Gergesenes was introduced by Origen upon mere conjecture; as before him most copies seem to have read Gadarenes, agreeably to the Parallel Passages and the ancient Syriac version. Gadara, says Josephus (Bell. l. iv. c. 24), was the metropolis of Perea, or the region beyond Jordan; and he also observes that it was sixty furlongs, or about eight miles from Tiberias. It is therefore rightly placed opposite Tiberias, at the southeast end of the lake. Pliny (l. v. c. 18) says it was called Hippodion, was one of the cities of Decapolis, and had the river Hieromax, or Jarmouk, flowing before it. It was of heathen jurisdiction; whence perhaps it was destroyed by the Jews; but was rebuilt by Pompey, and joined to the province of Syria (Josephus, Ant. l. xiv. c. 8). Augustus afterwards gave it to Herod (Ant. l. xv. c. 11), on whose death it was again annexed to Syria. It is now called Om Keis: its ruins are in a very mutilated state, and when visited by Burckhardt it had not a single inhabitant. The remains of the sepulchral caverns in which the demoniacs abode are still to be seen (Travels in Syria, etc., pp. 270-273). Ge 10:16. 15:21. Dt 7:1. there met. Mt 5:1-20. MATTHEW 9

Jesus returning to Capernaum, 1, heals one sick of palsy, 2-8; calls Matthew from the receipt of custom, 9; justifies himself for eating with publicans and sinners, 10-13; and his disciples for not fasting like the Pharisees, 14-17; is entreated by a ruler to heal his daughter, 18, 19; heals a woman of an inveterate issue of blood, 20-22; raises the ruler's daughter, 23-26; gives sight to two blind men, 27-31; and casts a devil out of a dumb man, 32. The people wonder, but the Pharisees ascribe it to the prince of the devils, 33, 34. Jesus compassionates the multitudes, and preaches to them; and charges his disciples to pray, that laborers might be sent forth into the harvest, 35-38.

MATTHEW 10

Christ sends out twelve apostles, with power to work miracles, 1. Their names, 2-4. They must not go to Gentiles or Samaritans, but to Israel, 5, 6. He instructs them, both as to their preaching and conduct, 7-15. He forewarns them of persecutions, and suggests motives of comfort and constancy, 16-39. He promises blessings to those who should receive them, 40-42.

His apostolic labors were confined to Jerusalem and Judea, and in A.D. 44 he was beheaded by order of King Herod Agrippa, thus becoming the first martyr among the apostles. Ac 12:2. (2) James the Less, or the Little, was a son of Alpheus and Mary, Mk 15:40; Mt 10:3; Ac 1:13, and was also one of the twelve apostles. (3) James, "the brother of the Lord," Ga 1:19; compare Mt 13:55; Mk +*6:3, or simply James, Ac 12:17; 15:13, is identified by some with James the Less and regarded as a cousin of Jesus, while others distinguish between the two and take the designation "the brother of the Lord" in the strict sense of the words. Re 11:8. Gomorrha. i.e. bondage, ✱S#1116g. Ro 9:29. 2 P 2:6. Ju 7. in the day of judgment. That Scripture does not teach a single day of general judgment for all should be clear to anyone who will carefully compare the passages to see who is being judged, who is doing the judging, the basis upon which the judgment is rendered, when the judgment is said to take place, where the judgment takes place, and what the results of the judgment are said to be. In the study of Scripture, it is most important not only to compare things that are alike in some way (as judgment), but to note also the points of difference. Similarity and likeness do not establish identity when there are differences to be accounted for! Several judgments mentioned in Scripture include (1) the judgment of sin at the cross, Jn +12:31; (2) the believer's judgment of himself, 1 C +11:32; (3) the judgment seat of Christ, 2 C +5:10; (4) the judgment of the righteous living and dead at his appearing, 2 T +*4:1n; (5) the judgment of Israel, Ezk +20:35; (6) judgment of the nations, Mt 25:32; (7) the extended period of judgment and rule over his kingdom, 2 T +*4:1n; (8) judgment of angels, 2 P +2:4; (9) the great white throne judgment, Re +20:11. The immaterial, invisible, eternally conscious part of man, as in Ac 2:27, 31. 1 Th *5:23. He *4:12. For the other uses of psyche, see Mt +2:20n. It is evident that soul cannot mean here the "future life" or "opportunity for future life." The word psyche is never used when the future, eternal life is spoken of. Rather, a different word, zoe (Lk +10:25g), is used. It is equally clear that the soul here can not mean the physical life in the body or the body itself, for that can be killed by man, whereas here the soul cannot be killed. It is of no use to argue that in other passages the soul can be killed, for in such passages soul is used to mean person, without specific reference to the immaterial, invisible, eternally conscious part of man, which is what is in view here. This Greek word never means annihilate, but rather means to render unsuitable for the use originally intended. A "lost" coin is not annihilated; neither are the "lost sheep of the house of Israel," nor those Jesus came to seek and to save (Mt 18:11). In this very chapter (Mt 10:39), the loss or gain of psyche is spoken of as occurring in this present life, an impossibility if apollumi means annihilation. Note the order of statement in Luke 12:5. Follow carefully Paul's logic in 1 C 15:16-18, and note that "perished" in verse 18 is apollumi, the same word as here. Paul argues that if Christ has not truly been raised from the dead, then those that are asleep in Christ are perished; since Christ is raised from the dead, the dead in Christ are not perished. Nor are the dead who are not in Christ annihilated, for they shall yet be resurrected and judged (John 5:28, 29). To suggest that all persons who have died are non-existent until the resurrection, but are kept "alive" in God's memory, has not a shred of Biblical evidence to support it, and is contrary to Biblical teaching, for then upon resurrection it would not be the same person (note Christ's own emphatic statement of his personal bodily resurrection identity, Lk 24:39), but a reconstituted copy of the person. Since only bodies are resurrected, not spirits or souls, the whole materialist viewpoint is fallacious in positing a break in the continuity of conscious existence of the person. The materialist viewpoint was held even more consistently by the Sadducees, a viewpoint utterly demolished by our Lord's answer to them in Mt 22:23-32. ver. 6g. Mt 9:17. Jb 19:10. Ho 13:9, 10. Vincent states "The idea is that of confessing Christ out of a state of oneness with him. 'Abide in me, and being in me, confess me.' It implies identification of the confessor with the confessed, and thus takes confession out of the category of mere formal or verbal acknowledgment. 'Not every one that saith unto me, Lord! Lord! shall enter into the kingdom of heaven.' The true confessor of Christ is one whose faith rests in him. Observe that this gives great force to the corresponding clause, in which Christ places himself in a similar relation with those whom he confesses" (Word Pictures in the New Testament,

MATTHEW 11

Jesus continues to preach in the cities, 1. John the Baptist sends his disciples to inquire of him, whether he is the Messiah, or whether another were to be expected; whom Jesus refers to the miracles wrought by him, 2-6. His testimony to John, 7-15. The perverseness of the people concerning both John and Jesus illustrated, 16-19. He upbraids the impenitency of those who had witnessed most of his mighty works; and denounces woes against Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, 20-24. He adores the wise and holy sovereignty of the Father, in revealing his truth; and declares his own personal and mediatorial power and majesty, 25-27. He invites and instructs the weary to come unto him for rest, 28-30.

It does not mean that we are now greater than John the Baptist. Rather, this refers to the kingdom Christ will establish at the Second Advent, when we will be greater than John the Baptist was in Jesus' day. No doubt John the Baptist will, in that future time, be greater than ourselves (See Peters, Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 1, pp. 253, 254). Mt *13:16, 17, 43. Ps *16:11. 68:13. 89:15-17. *91:11. Grammatically this is a concessive clause; Burton (Moods and Tenses, p. 114, sec. 282) gives Lk 6:32, 33, 34; Jn 8:55, etc., as parallel examples of this grammatical structure, where the sense is simply "and if." Dana and Mantey (Manual Grammar, p. 292, sec. 278) cite this text under "Emphatic Concession," with the explanation "This type of clause expresses concession with the added thought that the supposed assumption has no likelihood of fulfillment," furnishing Ga 1:8 as an additional example. Robertson (Grammar, p. 1026) follows Burton, giving the additional examples of Mk 16:18 and Re 11:5, but in the same paragraph does state "With kai ei the supposition is considered improbable." A statement such as this argues strongly against absolute predestination, for our Lord himself states that had Sodom witnessed his mighty works, it would not have been destroyed, for it would have repented (ver. 21). Thus things could and would turn out in a different manner if different choices had been made. Clearly the will and decision of individual men is involved in the ultimate issue of events. MATTHEW 12

The disciples pluck ears of corn to eat, on the sabbath, 1. Christ vindicates them from the charge of breaking the sabbath, 2-8; heals the withered hand of one in the synagogue; and shows it lawful to do good on the sabbath, 9-13. The Pharisees seek to kill him; he withdraws, yet works miracles, and so fulfills a prophecy of Isaiah, 14-21. He casts out a devil from a dumb and blind man, 22, 23; confutes the charge of the Pharisees, of casting out devils by Beelzebub, 24-30; and shows the sin against the Holy Ghost to be unpardonable, and that every idle word must be accounted for, 31-37. He rebukes those who sought a sign, and will give none but that of Jonah, 38-40. The Ninevites, and the queen of the south, will condemn that generation, 41, 42. By a parable he shows their awful state, 43-45. His disciples are his most endeared relations, 46-50.

What the Holy Spirit did to prove the divinity of Christ's person and mission, the Pharisees turned into an argument to show that Christ was an impostor, and actuated by Satanic agency. Thus their sin consisted in the unreasonable and absurd rejection of the Son of God as the Savior of men, in opposition to the plain and unanswerable testimony of the Holy Spirit. This sin against the Holy Spirit is a rejection of the truth as it is revealed in the Divine Word, especially of that truth as it respects Christ and His salvation—this in disregard of many favorable opportunities to know the truth as it is in Christ and His Word—with severe and bitter feelings of aversion and hatred, peculiarly provoked by any distinct reference to the Holy Spirit and His work in either the inspired Word, or the Divine Savior whom it His office to honor (James Morgan, The Scripture Testimony to the Holy Spirit, pp. 144, 147). The sin against the Holy Ghost is unpardonable because of its own nature: it consists in the rejection of the way of salvation by Christ, in opposition to the fullest evidence, and the only evidence that shall ever be given (He 2:3). The sin against the Holy Spirit consists in continued impenitence and unbelief (He √10:26-29). It is not an act, but a habit. It is the calm, determined, and persevering rejection of Jesus Christ, as the Savior of men, in opposition to all the testimony of His word and Spirit. Consequently in its nature it is incapable of forgiveness. No one who is afraid of having committed this sin has done so; for its very nature is to have no fear on that account. It is committed and continued in delightedly and knowingly, where it is committed at all. Fear is incompatible with its nature. Yet we need to be on our guard against this sin, lest we be betrayed into it. The progress of sin is rapid and dangerous. We need to be watchful against both the sins of the life and the sins of the heart. Apostasy may be nearer to any of us than we imagine (Ro 11:20. He +*3:12. 1 J 3:24). Cherish a sense of dependence on both the teaching and support of the Spirit. Through Him cleave unto Christ and ye shall be safe (See Morgan, The Scripture Testimony to the Holy Spirit, pp. 148-151).

That the Holy Spirit can be the subject of blasphemy (by attributing his miraculous works to Satan) proves him to be as much a person as the Son; and it proves him to be divine, because it shows that he may be sinned against, and so sinned against that the blasphemer shall not be forgiven. A person he must be, or he could not be blasphemed: a divine person he must be to constitute this blasphemy a sin against him in the proper sense, and of so malignant a kind as to place it beyond the reach of mercy (Watson, Theological Institutes, vol. i. p. 629, cited in McClintock and Strong, vol. iv. p. 309, article "Holy Ghost"). "These passages (Mt 12:31, 32. Mk 3:28, 29. Lk 12:10) at least imply beyond cavil the personality of the Holy Spirit, for sin and blasphemy can only be committed against persons" (T. Jn 2:19. Son of man. Mt 8:20. three days and three nights. This is an idiom which, like the shorter expression, "three days," can refer to any part of three days. Had Christ been in the tomb for a full three days, or 72 hours, it could not be said of him that he arose on the third day, but the fourth, contrary to the repeated statements of Scripture (Mt 16:21. 17:23. 20:19. Lk 24:7, 21, 46. 1 C +*15:4). It is clear that the expression "after three days" was not understood by the Jews to be a reference to a fourth day, as is clear from Mt √27:63, 64. Compare Mt 16:21 w Mk 8:31. Mk 10:34 w Lk 9:22. The chronology provided in Luke 23:50—24:3 is unanswerable: there is only the time from late Friday afternoon when "the sabbath drew on" (Mt 27:62. Lk 23:54), "the day before the sabbath" (Mk 15:42) when Jesus was buried (Lk 23:54), the sabbath on which the women rested (Lk 23:56), and early Sunday morning when the women went to the tomb (Lk 24:1). The two disciples on the road to Emmaus state specifically "and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done" (Lk 24:21). Thus "three days and three nights" is an idiom (⌐108H12, Figure of Speech Idiom, 1 S +30:12n), perfectly understood as such by the Jews of that day (Mt √27:63, 64. When he is "cast out," he never returns; but when he "goes out," he comes back; and finds only a "reformed character," instead of the Holy Spirit indwelling in the one who is born again (B750). Had there been no reality in demoniacal possessions, as some have supposed, our Lord would scarcely have appealed to a case of this kind here, to point out the real state of the Jewish people, and their approaching desolation. Had this been only a vulgar error, of the nonsense of which the learned scribes and wise Pharisees must have been convinced, the case, not being in point, because not true, must have been treated with contempt by the very people for whose conviction it was designed. the unclean. Mk 3:30. To suggest that the Holy Spirit is not a person is to accord less to Him than is granted of angels, Satan, and wicked spirits. To suggest that a person cannot be said to indwell another person is contrary to the express language of Scripture: if Satan could "enter into" Judas (Lk 22:3) and "fill the heart" of Ananias (Ac 5:3), why cannot the Holy Spirit, as a Divine person, indwell believers? Leaven is always characterized as evil, the "leaven of malice and wickedness," the ferment of the lust of the flesh—the human will in revolt from God (F.W. Grant, Numerical Bible, vol. 1, p. 283, 284). It is inconceivable how the Jewish audience, well schooled in the Biblical use of this term, could take this term to mean otherwise without a direct word of explanation from the Savior. Mt 16:11, 12. Some understand leaven here to be representing the gospel, and its success and good influence in the world until the end of the age. Others understand leaven to be a type of evil, and here represents the spread of evil until the end of the age. This latter view appears to be more consistent with the prophecies and typology of Scripture. Practically every other mention of leaven in Scripture connects it with evil. Why would Jesus radically change the symbolism here without explanation? Furthermore, the fact that the leaven was hid, and at that by a woman, is taken as further evidence by some interpreters that leaven here represents a sinister influence. Others argue, in turn, that the "leaven" and the "hiding" and the "woman" are merely the backdrop to the parable, and each individual detail must not be overly pressed into service in an interpretation (see note on ver. 3), when the purpose of the detail is simply to lend coloring to the story. But perhaps this is an example among interpreters of avoiding the implications of Scripture, of skirting the clear teaching of a text by arbitrarily invoking, when convenient, a principle which allows them to gloss over the specific terms of Scripture.

MATTHEW 14

Herod supposes Jesus to be John the Baptist risen from the dead, 1, 2. An account of John's imprisonment and death, through the resentment of Herod, Herodias, and her daughter, 3-12. Jesus departs to a desert place, and miraculously feeds the multitudes, 13-21. He retires to a mountain to pray, having sent the disciples away in a ship, 22-24. He comes to them walking on the sea, 25-27. Peter obtains leave to come on the water, begins to sink, and is preserved, and rebuked, 28-31. Jesus enters the ship, the storm ceases, and the disciples worship him as the Son of God, 32, 33. Landing at Gennesaret, he heals all the sick, who touch the hem of his garment, 34-36.

1. Herod. This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great, by Malthace, and tetrarch of Galilee and Peraea, which produced a revenue of 200 talents a year (Josephus, Ant. l. xvii. c. 13, sec. 4). He married the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia, whom he divorced in order to marry Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip, who was still living. Aretas, to revenge the affront which Herod had offered his daughter, declared war against him, and vanquished him after an obstinate engagement. This defeat, Josephus assures us (Ant. l. xviii. c. 7), the Jews considered as a punishment for the death of John the Baptist. Having gone to Rome to solicit the title of king, he was accused by Agrippa of carrying on a correspondence with Artabanus king of Parthia, against the Romans, and was banished by the emperor Caius to Lyons, and thence to Spain, where he and Herodias died in exile. Nicephorus (l. i. c. 20) and Metaphrastes relate, that she accompanied her mother Herodias and Herod in their banishment; and when passing over a river that was frozen, the ice broke, and she sunk up to her neck, and the ice uniting, she suffered the same punishment she had caused to be inflicted on John the Baptist. If true, this was certainly a wonderful providence; but it must be confessed that it appears contrary to the account of Josephus, who says, that she first married Philip the Tetrarch, and then Herod the king of Chalcis, by whom she had three sons (Ant. l. xviii. c. 7).

Lk 12:38), and the fourth from three till six (Mt 14:25. Mk 6:48. 13:35, morning); so that it probably began to be daylight before our Lord came to his disciples. However, H. B. Swete states "The Lord reached the boat about 3 a.m." (Comm. on Mark, p. 137). Note that all four watches are named at Mk 13:35. For the Jewish division of daytime into twelve hours, see Jn 11:9n. MATTHEW 15

Jesus reproves the Scribes and Pharisees, for setting their traditions above God's commandments; and exposes their hypocrisy, 1-9. He warns the people against their doctrine, and shows the source and nature of defilement, 10-20. He tries the faith, and heals the daughter, of a woman of Canaan, 21-28; heals great numbers at the sea of Galilee, 29-31; and again feeds the multitude by miracle, 32-39.

Of the estimation in which these were held by the Jews, the following may serve as an example: "The words of the Scribes are lovely beyond the words of the law, for the words of the law are weighty and light, but the words of the Scribes are all weighty." ver. 3, 6. MATTHEW 16

Jesus rebukes the hypocrisy of the Pharisees and Sadducees, who required a sign from heaven; and refuses to give any but the sign of Jonas, 1-4. He warns the disciples against the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, explains his meaning, and reproves the disciples for unbelief and want of understanding, 5-12. The opinions of the people concerning him, 13, 14. Peter's confession of Christ commended, 15-17. The foundation of the church, and the power of the keys, 18-20. Jesus foretells his death and resurrection, and rebukes Peter for dissuading him from suffering, 21-23. He shows that his disciples must deny themselves, and suffer, in prospect of a future reward, 24-27. The speedy establishment of his kingdom, 28.

and added his own name to it, to distinguish it from another Caesarea on the coast of the Mediterranean. It was afterwards named Neronias by the young Agrippa, in honor of Nero; and, in the time of William of Tyre, it was called Belinas. It was, according to Josephus, a day's journey from Sidon, and 120 stadia from the lake of Phiala; and, according to Abulfeda, a journey of a day and a half from Damascus. Many have confounded it with Dan, or Leshem; but Eusebius and Jerome expressly affirm that Dan was four miles from Paneas, on the road to Tyre. It is now called Banias, and is described, by Seetzen, as a hamlet of about twenty miserable huts, inhabited by Mohammedans; but Burckhardt says it contains about 150 houses, inhabited by Turks, Greeks, etc. Whom. This important incident recorded most fully here in Matthew does not seem to be understood by the apostles as giving any primacy or special authority to Peter, for just a short time later they are arguing about who should be greatest in the Kingdom (Mt 18:1n. 20:21-24). upon. Greek grammar is against "rock" referring to Peter, for "Peter" is masculine gender, while "rock" is neuter gender. Some counter, however, that such nice distinctions in the Greek were not made in the Aramaic, the language which Jesus actually spoke. The fact that there are such nice distinctions in the Greek at numerous points as seen by the figure of speech Paronomasia (ƒ140, Ge +4:25), as at Mt 21:41; 22:3; 24:7; shows that Matthew was originally written in Greek, and is not a translation from the Aramaic. No less an authority than Nigel Turner cites this very distinction (Petros, petra) as evidence that Jesus on this occasion spoke in Greek, not Aramaic (Grammatical Insights, p. 181; Grammar of N.T. Greek, vol. iv. p. 38), and that Matthew's gospel was originally written in Greek, and is not a translation from the Aramaic. The "rock" may be the truth of Peter's confession, the faith which underlies the confession, or it may be a reference to Christ himself. The latter view seems to be favored by the reference passages. Mt *7:24-27. Is 28:16. 1 C 3:9-11. √10:4. Ep *2:20-22. Col 1:18. 1 P 2:4-6. Re 21:14. I will build. This verb is first person singular, future tense, active voice, indicative mood. Since the tense of this verb is future, some understand the founding of Christ's church as future to this time of his speaking. If this is the correct understanding, then the church of the New Testament is distinct from the church of the Old Testament. Others, however, believe that the church is one in both Testaments, though in the Old Testament the church is national, in the New Testament it is universal. In support of the latter view, the church in Mt 18:17 is spoken of as already existing, not future. Various titles and expressions in the New Testament show the church to be in both Testaments (Ac 7:38; Ro 11:17-21; 1 C 3:16, 17; 2 C 6:16; Ep 2:11-16, 21; Ga 4:26; He 12:22). Zc +*6:12, 13. 1 C 3:9. Gr. lelumenon, perfect passive participle, nominative singular neuter. In the Greek text some very fine shades of meaning are preserved which are not generally translated into the English versions. "Shall be loosed" is a rare construction in Greek called the "future passive periphrastic perfect indicative" (Robertson, Word Pictures, vol. 1, p. 149, on Mt 18:18), which more literally may be rendered "shall have been already loosed in heaven." The special point of using this tense is to show that the apostles would by their teaching and preaching "bind" and "loose" by the message of Christ what had already been bound and loosed in heaven, for Christ's words were not his own, but those of the Father who sent him (Jn 5:19, 30. 6:38. 8:26, 42. ✓12:49. ✓14:10. 17:8, 14). 27. the Son of man. ƒ144A3, Ge +11:5. The title "Son of man" designates Christ's human nature, as the title "Son of God" denotes his divine nature (Ac 8:37n). The use of "Son of man" here in reference to his second coming in glory shows unmistakably that this coming is personal, physical, and visible. Peters notes that this title serves particularly to identify Jesus Christ as the Messiah in fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant, noting "it is the peculiar, distinctive, predicted name of the Messiah given to Him in virtue of His covenanted relationship to the Kingdom" (Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 1, p. 566). This appears to refer to the mediatorial kingdom which our Lord was about to set up, by the destruction of the Jewish nation and polity, and the diffusion of the gospel throughout the world. The preceding original Comprehensive Bible note reflects a mistaken prophetic position still held by some Amillenarian interpreters, answered directly by Peters (Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, Proposition 153, Observation 4, Note 4, p. 562), who states "who urge the destruction of Jerusalem (which John only survived) as the fulfillment (of Mt 16:27, 28). How this can be reconciled with a coming in glory, with a coming of the Son of Man

(i.e. in His humanity), etc., we are not informed. More than this: this coming is specifically predicted, over against all such assertions, to be one, not for the destruction of Jerusalem but for its salvation, as e.g. Ps 102:16, "when the Lord shall build up Zion, He shall appear in His glory," with which compare Micah 3:12 in connection with following chapter; Zc ch. 14; Am 9:11, etc." In context, however, the experiences on the mount of transfiguration reported in chapter 17 may be the fulfillment of this prophecy. Peters also notes in connection with the transfiguration, that "the glorified condition of Christ, Moses, and Elias thus indicates...the futurity of the Kingdom.—a Kingdom not to be realized at the First Advent in humiliation, not during the absence of the Bridegroom, but at the Second Advent, when He and His saints come 'in glory.'" The transfiguration furnished "an earnest, actual reception of glory," and served as "a most direct proof that the covenant and prophets would yet be fulfilled." The transfiguration reveals the relationships of those who will be with Christ in his future eternal earthly kingdom. Peter, James, and John, represent unglorified, mortal men living on the earth, who personally witness and rejoice in the manifested glory of the Messiah. Jesus is personally present in this kingdom in His state of glory, as are Moses and Elias, who also appeared "in glory." Moses and Elias are purposely chosen as a correct exhibition of the two parties, forming one class, who shall appear in glory with Christ: (1) the dead saints, and (2) the living saints translated. Peters notes that the transfiguration "stands forth, pre-eminently, as a Divine confirmation of the Theocratic Kingship of Jesus, of the glory of His saints, and of the happiness of the nations who shall witness it—a fact so striking and corroborative of the ultimate Redemption of saints and of the race, that Peter seizes upon it as a grand proof that Jesus shall come unto so great Salvation" (Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, p. 561). Others see in this a reference to the experience of Pentecost of Acts ch. 2, for Christ promised "I will come to you" in the person of the Holy Spirit (Jn 14:18. Re 3:20). However, the parallel passages make it clear that this is a reference to the second advent of Christ, in full agreement with the position taken by Peters, noted above. MATTHEW 17

The transfiguration of Christ, who discourses with Moses and Elias before Peter, James, and John, 1-8. He charges them not to make it known; and instructs them concerning the coming of Elias, 9-13. He casts out an evil spirit, and reproves the unbelief of the people and of his disciples, 14-21. He foretells his death and resurrection, 22, 23; and pays tribute with money obtained by miracle, 24-27.

MATTHEW 18

Jesus teaches humility by the emblem of a little child, 1-4. He inculcates attention to his "little ones," and watchfulness against stumbling others, or falling ourselves, 5-10. He illustrates his care of his people, by the parable of a lost sheep, 11-14; shows how to act towards an offending brother, 15-17; assures the apostles that what they bind or loose shall be bound or loosed in heaven, 18; gives special promises to those who unite in prayer, or meet in his name, 19, 20; and enforces the constant forgiveness of injuries, by a parable of a king, and his dealings with a servant, who was deeply indebted to him; yet was not influenced by his readiness to forgive him, to forgive his fellow servant, 21-35.

That such a controversy as this could repeatedly occur shows both the humanity of the apostles, and most forcibly, that Peter was not understood by the rest of the apostles to have the primacy among them, for they obviously did not so understand our Lord's words to Peter in Mt 16:18, 19. greatest. ✓96E4, Mt +13:32. in. Mt 3:2. 5:19, 20. 7:21. Gr. dedemena, perfect passive participle, nominative plural neuter. The same unusual form is found in Matthew 16:19. Burton (New Testament Moods and Tenses, section 94, p. 45) also gives Lk 12:52 and He 2:13 as instances of what he terms the "periphrastic Future Perfect." It may be more literally rendered "shall (or must) already have been bound." ye shall loose. Gr. lusate, 2 person plural, 1 aorist active subjunctive. shall be. Gr. estai, 3 person singular, future middle indicative. loosed. Gr. lelumena, perfect passive participle, nominative plural neuter. More literally this may be rendered "shall (or must) already have been loosed." In the Greek text important distinctions in tenses are made here, so that the participles may be more literally rendered as indicated. The sense is that the apostles were to loose and bind what already had been permanently loosed (permitted) and bound (forbidden) in heaven; thus the apostles carried out their teaching in accordance with what was already taught by Christ, as the mandate of heaven; heaven did not merely ratify the earthly decisions of the apostles.

If the Jewish talent of silver be designed, which is estimated by the same learned writer at 450*l*., this sum amounts to 4,500,000*l*.; but if the gold talent is meant, which is equal to 7200*l*., then the amount is 72,000,000*l*. A talent is about $1000 in American money (A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures, vol. 1, p. 150). MATTHEW 19

Jesus journeys towards Judea, and heals the sick, 1, 2; answers the Pharisees concerning divorces, and his disciples on the expediency of marriage, 3-12; receives little children, 13-15; discourses with a rich young man concerning eternal life, and detects his love of wealth more than of God, 16-22; shows the difficulty of a rich man's salvation, 23-26; and makes gracious promises to those who renounce worldly objects for his sake, 27-30.

In context Jesus answered this question with a firm "no," but gives an exception in verse 9, "except it be for fornication." When divorce is based on fornication (the word is used in a non-technical sense, so it includes adultery), the divorce is justified. Nevertheless, divorce was often obtained on other grounds, and the question remains, is the divorced but truly innocent party permitted to remarry? Remarriage is clearly permitted in Scripture (a) if the first husband or wife has died (Ro 7:2); (b) if the Christian mate is divorced by an unbelieving mate for faith in Christ, or the unbelieving mate otherwise deserts the marriage, 1 C 7:15; (c) if the divorced person is the innocent victim of the divorce action of a licentious partner (Mt 5:28-30) who obtains a divorce to marry another woman; under Mosaic law, if the dismissed party were guilty of adultery, such a person was to be stoned (Dt 22:21), and there would be no basis for granting a bill of divorcement in accordance with Dt 24:1-4! Such innocently divorced persons are permitted the right to remarriage (1 C 7:28, "But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned"). Remarriage in such cases does not disqualify from church office; the text in 1 T 3:2, "A bishop must be the husband of one wife," is a reference to polygamy (having more than one wife at the same time), not divorce and remarriage, or remarriage after the death of a spouse.

The fact that this exception to the "no divorce" law is only recorded in Matthew does not diminish its authority, for there are no textual grounds for disputing its place here. Mark and Luke record the general rule; Matthew, in giving the fuller account, records the exception. To diminish or discount the authority of a Scripture statement because only mentioned once, or by one author, is as surely taking "away from the words of the book of this prophecy" (Re 22:19) as excising them in any other manner from the text would be. Likewise, diminishing the authority of a text because it occurs in an "admittedly obscure book of symbolism," as the book of Revelation is alleged to be, in an effort to discredit the teaching of the millennium, and two resurrections separated by the thousand years, falls under the same stern condemnation, and no one should so place themselves as mishandling and wresting the Scriptures to avoid the very texts of Scripture which serve to correct their mistaken viewpoint (2 C 4:2. 2 P 1:20n. *3:16). This is not to deny the validity of the hermeneutical rule that the obscure is to be interpreted in the light of the clear, not the clear by the obscure: but it is to caution against the arbitrary declaration of a text as obscure, when its teaching in context is very clear, in order to justify our dismissal of the text because it contradicts our position. While it is true that we must interpret Scripture harmoniously, and must not take one text in opposition to all the rest of Scripture teaching when it results in a contradiction, in this case what is asserted is an "exception," the very word used here, and an exception is not a contradiction. 2 Ch 21:11. MATTHEW 20

Jesus speaks a parable of laborers sent at different hours into a vineyard, and applies it, 1-16. He foretells his own death and resurrection, 17-19; rejects the request of the mother of James and John in behalf of her sons; and represses the indignation and ambition of the other apostles, 20-28; and gives sight to two blind men, 29-34.

MATTHEW 21

Jesus enters Jerusalem on an ass's colt, amidst the acclamations of the multitudes, 1-11. He drives the buyers and sellers out of the temple; heals the blind and lame; and answers the objections of the priests, 12-16. He causes the barren fig tree to wither; and shows the disciples the power of faith and prayer, 17-22. He silences those who demand by what authority he acted, 23-27; and exposes the wickedness, and predicts the doom, of the priests and rulers, by a parable of two sons, 28-32, and by that of a vineyard let out to husbandmen, 33-46.

This village is now small and poor, and the cultivation of the soil around it is much neglected; but it is a pleasant, romantic spot, shaded by the mount of Olives, and abounding in vines and long grass. It consists of from thirty to forty dwellings, inhabited by about 600 Mohammedans, for whose use there is a neat little mosque standing on an eminence. Here they show the ruins of a sort of castle as the house of Lazarus, and a grotto as his tomb; and the house of Simon the leper, of Mary Magdalene and of Martha, and the identical tree which our Lord cursed, are among the monkish curiosities of the place. MATTHEW 22

Jesus speaks the parable of the marriage-supper, and the wedding garment, 1-14. Jesus answers the Pharisees and Herodians about paying tribute to Caesar, 15-22; the Sadducees about the resurrection and future state, 23-33; and a lawyer concerning the chief commandment in the law, 34-40; and inquires how the Messiah could be David's Son, and yet his Lord, 41-46.

They held that "wherever the money of any king is current, there the inhabitants acknowledge that king for their lord" (Maimonides on Gezelah, c. 5). Now, by admitting that this was Caesar's coin, and by consenting to receive it as the current coin of their country, they in fact acknowledged their subjection to his government, and of course their obligation to pay the tribute demanded of them. This answer was full of consumate wisdom, and it completely defeated the insidious designs of his enemies. He avoided rendering himself odious to the Jewish people by opposing their notions of liberty, or appearing to pay court to the emperor, without exposing himself to the charge of sedition and disaffection to the Roman government. MATTHEW 23

Jesus exhorts the people to regard the scriptural instructions of the Scribes and Pharisees; but not to follow their bad examples and especially not to imitate their ambition, 1-12. He denounces divers woes on them, for their blindness, hypocrisy, and iniquity, 13-33. He predicts the destruction of Jerusalem, and the calamities of the Jews for their atrocious crimes, 34-39.

What he condemned was the neglect of the weightier matters of the law. Those who believe the practice of tithing is obligatory for New Testament Christians argue that 1) unless the reasons for a law no longer obtain, the law continues in force, where there is no explicit repeal of the law; (2) what passed away of the Old Testament economy was the symbolical and figurative, of which the tithe is neither, but a duty issuing from the moral law, which is of perpetual force; (3) since the law did not become obsolete, there is no reason to expect in the New Testament a formal re-enactment of the law. "Similarly there is no formal re-enactment of the Sabbath law; but Christians recognize the law respecting the seventh of time, and by a parity of reasoning should recognize the law respecting the tenth of substance" (Richard Duke, cited by Henry Lansdell in The Tithe in Scripture, footnote, p. 140). Like the sabbath, the tithe is a pre-Mosaic institution, part of the original system of worship established by God, and practiced by the Patriarchs. This being the case, neither tithing nor sabbath observance need be considered abrogated by virtue of Christ fulfilling the law of Moses (Jn 1:17. Ro 6:14. 10:4. Ep 2:15. Col 2:14). Lk ◐11:41n, 42n.

MATTHEW 24

Christ foretells the destruction of the temple, 1, 2; and the preceding signs and attendant calamities, intermixing counsels and warnings, 3-28; also the subsequent revolutions and miseries, in figurative language, which may be understood of the end of the world, 29-31. By the parable of a fig-tree, he shows the certainty of the prediction, 32-35. No man knows the day or hour, which shall come suddenly, 36-41. All ought to watch, as vigilant servants who expect their master, 42-51.

Zc ✓13:9; "shall be saved" is a reference to the deliverance prophesied for the Jews in the tribulation period: Jl +*2:31, 32. Ro +*11:26). ver. 14 (worldwide preaching of the gospel of the kingdom for a witness to all nations will be accomplished by Jewish evangelists during the tribulation period, Is +*27:6); ver. 15 (holy place, or temple); ver. 20 (flight on the sabbath day); ver. 21 (great tribulation, specifically pertaining to the Jews, as a time of "Jacob's trouble," Je +*30:7. Da +*12:1); ver. 28 (the carcass, possible reference to the great number of dead bodies in the holy land after the battle described in Ezk ch. 38, 39. Note especially Ezk 39:4); ver. 31 (angels gathering his elect from every land: not the rapture of the Church, for Christ comes alone at the rapture, 1 Th 4:16; this corresponds to the supernatural return of the Jews to their land at the final restoration of Israel, predicted in such texts as Is 27:12. 43:6. Je 31:8. Ezk 34:12. 38:8n. Am 9:9). Failure to notice that these references are Jewish has led many interpreters to apply to the Church what belongs to Israel, and has led to a woeful misunderstanding of Bible prophecy. It is on this point that the correctness of a prophetic system of interpretation stands or falls when measured against the total teaching of scripture (Ezk 38:16n). flee. Pr +*22:3. Is +*16:3, 4. In the context of this Olivet prophecy, it is probably best to take "elect" as a reference to Israel, particularly the believing remnant which is saved by the Deliverer at the second advent of Christ (Ro 11:26), in harmony with the rest of the Jewish imagery in this chapter (see ver. 16n). It is necessary not only to observe similarities, but to note differences, when comparing things which, though they have the same name (as "gathering") are really seen to be different as to time, place, and the persons involved. See note on Mt 10:15n. We must not lump all raptures, all gatherings, all trumpets, all resurrections, all elect, and all judgments into one, when Scripture clearly teaches there are several of each of these which must be distinguished. 27. oughtest. This statement should forever settle the question as to the lawfulness of charging, earning, and receiving interest: the servant was told that he should have invested the money, so that the lord would have received his own with interest. The Israelites were not allowed to charge interest on money lent to their brethren (Dt 23:19, 20; Is +*24:2), for in the Old Testament law provision was carefully made that no person, if the law were faithfully followed, would ever be reduced to penury. Unjust interest charges would quickly reduce the needy to poverty (Ne 5:1-13). Christ here commends productivity and the prudent investment of resources, and censures indolence. Lk *19:22, 23. MATTHEW 26

Jesus foretells his crucifixion after two days, 1, 2. The chief priests conspire against him, 3-5. A woman pours precious ointment on his head: the disciples censure, but Jesus commends her, 6-13. Judas bargains with the chief priests to betray him, 14-16. Jesus eats the passover, and marks out the traitor, 17-25. He institutes the Lord's supper, 26-29; and foretells that all his apostles would forsake him, and Peter deny him, 30-35. His agony and prayer in the garden, 36-46. He is betrayed and apprehended, 47-50. A disciple cuts off the high priest's servant's ear; but Jesus forbids all resistance, 51-56. He is arraigned before Caiaphas, falsely accused, condemned, and treated with insult and indignity, 57-68. Peter thrice denies him, with peculiar aggravations; but going out he weeps bitterly, 69-75.

Here it clearly expresses purpose, telling us Christ shed his blood for the purpose of the remission of our sins. Robertson states "But it by no means follows that the same idea is expressed by eis aphesin (for remission) in Mk 1:4 and Ac 2:38 (cf. Mt 10:41)," though in the abstract that may be true. It remains a matter for the interpreter to decide" (A. T. Robertson, A Grammar of the Greek New Testament, p. 595). The preposition eis in a number of other passages (Mt 10:41. √12:41. Mk +*1:4n. Ac +*2:38n) is better understood to mean the ground or basis (of repentance, remission, etc.). Mk 1:4mg. Lk 1:77mg. remission. Ro 3:25. He √9:22. sins. Le +=5:6.

MATTHEW 27

Jesus is delivered bound to Pilate, 1, 2. Judas, in remorse, restores the silver, and hangs himself, 3-5. The priests fulfill the scripture, in disposing of the money, 6-10. Christ is silent before Pilate, 11-14, who proposes to release him, according to the custom of the feast, 15-18. Pilate's wife, alarmed by a dream, warns him to desist, 19. He washes his hands, to clear himself; and, being urged by the people, with imprecations on themselves and their children, he releases Barabbas, and delivers Jesus to be crucified, 20-26. He is mocked, and crowned with thorns by the soldiers, 27-31; crucified between two thieves, 32-38; and reviled by the people and rulers, 39-44. The land is darkened, 45; Jesus calling on God expires, 46-50. The veil of the temple is rent, the earth quakes, the tombs burst open, and the centurion confesses him, as "the Son of God," 51-54. Certain women witness these scenes, 55, 56. Joseph of Arimathea asks his body and buries it, 57-61. His tomb is sealed by the chief priests, and a watch placed at it, 62-66.

The emperor was dead before he arrived; but it is an ancient tradition that he was banished to Vienne in Dauphiny, where he was reduced to such extremity that he killed himself with his own sword two years after (Eusebius, l. ii. c. 7. The Jews considered it was strictly forbidden by the Divine law to bring any filthy or iniquitous gain into the temple. For this reason they now refused to allow this money to be placed in the chest of the temple, amongst the former contributions for its repairs. In this they were right enough, but by the very act of refusing this money, they proved themselves to be gross perverters of the spirit of God's requirements: they saw not that it was much less lawful for them, who had hired Judas to this sordid action, to be employed in the service of the temple. Those that "bear the vessels of the Lord," ought to be holy. Thus our Lord's words, "Ye blind guides! ye strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel."

9. fulfilled. Mt 1:22. Lk +24:27. spoken. √106, Ge +31:7. by. Mt 24:15. Jeremy. The words here quoted are not found in Jeremiah, but in Zechariah; and a variety of conjectures have been formed, in order to reconcile the discrepancy. The most probable opinion seems to be, that the name of the prophet was originally omitted by the Evangelist, and that the name of Jeremiah was added by some subsequent copyist. It is omitted in two MSS. of the twelfth century, in the Syriac, later Persic, two of the Itala, and in some other Latin copies; and what renders it highly probable that the original reading was dia tou prophatou, by the prophet, is, that St. Matthew frequently omits the name of the prophet in his quotations. See Mt 1:22. 2:5, 15. 13:35. 21:4. This omission is approved of by Bengel, Dr. A. Clarke, and Horne. Nevertheless, the reading "Jeremy" is firmly established, being supported by numerous significant early manuscript witnesses, as well as later ones, and must be accepted as the correct reading (see a modern listing and brief discussion of this evidence in Bruce M. Metzger, A Textual Commentary on the Greek New Testament, p. 66). It is possible, as noted in the Companion Bible margin, and its Appendix 161, to understand that this prophecy was spoken by Jeremiah, not written, and to take the apparent citation of Zc 11:12, 13, as a parenthetical statement within words otherwise attributed to Jeremiah. More likely, this is a composite quotation from Zc 11:13, Je 18:18, and 32:6, etc., and the prophecy is referred to Jeremiah as the more prominent of the two. In Mark 1:2, etc., the composite quotation from Isaiah and Malachi is similarly referred to Isaiah (see A.T. Robertson, Word Pictures, vol. 1, p. 224). The Companion Bible margin identifies this as a Hebraism. But Nigel Turner states that the presence of the pronoun in Greek makes the statement emphatic: You have said. Jesus is non-committal, and in essence is suggesting, "Are you putting these words in my mouth? Are you making the claim for me that I am the Messiah? Jesus did not publicly announce his Messiahship before the crucifixion to his enemies. His answer means, "You are saying this, not me." This form of expression is found at Mt 26:25, 64. 27:11. Mk 15:2. Lk 23:3. There is some manuscript evidence that supports this construction as being the correct reading at Mk 14:62 also (see Nigel Turner's discussion in his Grammatical Insights, pp. 72-75). The conclusion is stated and one or both of the premises omitted. Here the fire, and feeling, and urgency of Pilate's wife is all the more forcible, in that she does not stop to formulate a tame, cold argument, but she omits the major premise; which is greatly emphasized by being left for Pilate to supply. The complete Syllogism would have been: (1) It is very wicked to punish a just or innocent man. (2) Jesus is a just man. (3) Have therefore nothing to do with punishing him. The conclusion thus contains the proof of each of the premises on which it rests. Thus is emphasized one of the four testimonies borne to the innocence of the Lord Jesus by Gentiles at the time of His condemnation: (1) Pilate's wife, Mt 27:19. (2) Pilate himself, Mt 27:24. Since they were Romans that said this, some think it evident that they meant to say that he was not only an innocent, but altogether a just man, as in Lk 23:47. But in fact that expression is explained by this; for, as Jesus was crucified by the Jews for saying that he was "the Son of God;" so if he were a righteous man, and unjustly condemned, he must be "the Son of God." Some render, "a son of a god," that is, according to the pagan notions, a hero, or demi-god, such as Hercules, Bacchus, etc. But in this, and in some other places, the article is omitted before uios, son, when it is used in the highest sense; and Bishop Middleton, on the Greek article, has shown, that theou uios, son of God, and uios tou theou, "the son of God," are used without any exact discrimination. "The centurion," as he observes, "could not fail to know the alleged blasphemy for which our Savior suffered; and had he intended, in heathen phraseology, to express his admiration of our Savior's conduct, he would not have called our Savior theou uios." For the same grammatical construction: "son of God," where "son" occurs without the article before an expressed verb: ver. 40, 54. Mt 4:3, 6. 14:33. Mk 15:39. Lk 4:3, 9. Jn 10:36. This is known more technically as the anarthrous predicate preceding the verb. "Son of God" occurs with the article following the verb: Mt 16:16. 26:63. Mk 3:11. Lk 4:41. 22:70. Jn 1:49. 11:27. 20:31. Ac 9:20. 1 J 4:15. 5:5. This is technically termed the arthrous predicate following the verb. A rule has been formulated by E. C. Colwell for this grammatical construction as follows: "A definite predicate nominative has the article when it follows the verb; it does not have the article when it precedes the verb" (Journal of Biblical Literature LII, 1933, p. 13; cited in Robert H. Countess, The Jehovah's Witness' New Testament, pp. 48, 49. See Nigel Turner, Grammar, vol. 3, p. 183). See the note on Jn 1:1 for the bearing on translation and doctrine of this grammatical construction. It must be carefully noted that the absence of the Greek article before a predicate noun occurring before the verb does not of itself make the noun indefinite or qualitative. The absence of the Greek article is sometimes occasioned by the fact that the noun or phrase has become a formal expression much like a proper name. Sometimes the Greek article is used to point out which noun is the subject of the expressed verb in a predicate nominative construction, to make the statement non-reversible (as in 1 J 4:16, "God is love," but not "love is God"). When both the subject and predicate nominative have the article, they are spoken of as identical and interchangeable (Mt 13:38, field, world; Jn 1:4, life, light; 11:25, the resurrection, the life; 1 C 15:56, the sting, the sin;

1 J 3:4, sin, transgression; Re 1:8, Alpha, Omega. See A. T. Robertson, A Grammar of the Greek New Testament, pp. 768, 769, where he cites the additional examples Mt 5:13. 6:22. 16:16. 19:17. 24:45. 26:26, 28. 27:11. Mk 1:11. 6:3. 12:7. 13:11. Jn 1:21. 3:10. 6:14, 50, 63. 8:12. 9:8. 10:7, 11. 14:6, 21. Ac 4:11. 8:10. 9:21. 21:28. 1 C 11:3. 2 C 3:17. Ep 2:14. Ph 3:3. Re 1:17. 3:17). The absence of the article, therefore, is no sure proof, in and of itself, that the noun must be indefinite or qualitative. Sometimes the article is introduced to point back to a previous mention of the same subject in either a near or remote context. This element of Greek style involves not using the article at the first mention of a subject, but using the article for each succeeding reference to the same subject. An example of the anaphoric use of the article in a near context is Galatians 3:23, where Paul literally says "before the coming of the faith," teen pistin, in reference to faith defined in ver. 22. "Faith" is articular in Galatians 3:25, for it refers to verse 22. James 2:14 affords another instance, where it is literally, "Can the faith save," the article referring to the kind just specified earlier in the verse, a faith which does not produce works. An example involving a more remote context is references to the "dragon" in Revelation. In Re 12:3, the Greek lacks an article when referring to "a great red dragon," but every subsequent mention has the article, showing that the dragon of chapter 20 and chapter 12 are identical. This grammatical feature is called the anaphoric use of the article. Perhaps there is in some contexts an interweaving of several of these factors taken together. An example of this may be seen in the absence or non-use of the Greek article in connection with the "holy spirit" or "Holy Spirit," where it is difficult to determine whether the reference is to the Person or his gifts. The first mention in a narrative would not usually have the article, but for doctrinal emphasis to show that the Person, not the gift is meant, the article is sometimes used (Ac *5:3. 7:51. 10:19. 11:12, 15, 28. *13:2. 15:8. 16:32. 21:11. These examples are discussed by Nigel Turner, Grammatical Insights into the New Testament, pp. 17-22).

MATTHEW 28

Early on the first day of the week, the women go to the sepulcre, 1. An earthquake, and an angel rolling away the stone, terrify the guard, 2-4. The angel declares the resurrection of Jesus to the women, and orders them to tell the disciples, 5-8. Jesus himself appears to them, 9, 10. The priests hire the soldiers to say, that the disciples had stolen the body while they slept, 11-15. Jesus appears to the disciples in Galilee, 16, 17. He sends them to preach the gospel, and baptize all nations; and promises his presence with his church to the end of the world, 18-20.

1. end of the sabbath. ƒ171T3. Synecdoche of the Part B655: the sabbath is sometimes put for the full week. For other instances of this figure see Lk *18:12. Ac *13:42mg. 1 C *16:1. The Hebrew word Schabbath, from which our English word is derived, signifies rest, and is applied to all solemn festivals, equally with that one day of every week devoted in the worship of God.—Ezk 20:21, "they polluted my sabbaths." Three evangelists say, the transaction recorded in this verse, occurred upon the first day in the week, early in the morning, about sun-rising, and John says, while it was yet dark. Opse sabbaton does not signify "in the evening of the sabbath," but "sabbaths." Hence, the great feast having been concluded, the term "end of the sabbaths" denotes the time very clearly. Again, it may be observed that the Jews, speaking of their passover, sometimes speak according to their civil computation, wherein they measured their days from sun-rising to sun-rising. Sometimes according to their sacred computation, which was from sun-set to sun-set. This reconciles Nu 28:18, which seems to make the fourteenth day of the first month, the first day of unleavened bread. Mk *16:1, 2. Lk 23:56. *24:1, 22. Jn *20:1, etc. began to dawn. The fact that this is a command to the eleven (ver. 16) disciples to baptize individuals proves that the baptism spoken of here is ritual baptism with water, not the real baptism by the Holy Spirit, for real baptism cannot be accomplished by means of human administrators (Ac +*2:38n). F. G. Hibbard argues: (1) The apostles were never commissioned to baptize with the Holy Ghost: this is accomplished directly by Christ (Jn 1:33. Ac 2:17). "Indeed, we recollect of but one individual in apostolic times that imbibed the dangerous error that any being but God could baptize with the Holy Spirit: This person was Simon Magus. Ac 8:18" (Hibbard, Christian Baptism, Part 2, p. 159). (2) The commission of the apostles to baptize would naturally have been understood by them of water baptism, unless special instruction had been given them to the contrary (pp. 160, 161). (3) The apostles did understand their commission as referring to water baptism, as is most clearly shown by their subsequent practice (Ac 8:36, 38. 10:47. 19:1-6). "Here, then, we are brought to a direct issue, and one of the following conclusions is irresistibly forced upon us; that either the apostles erred, and acted, not only without divine authority, but against that authority in a matter so vital as that which involved the spirituality and uncorruptness of the religion of Jesus; or, water baptism is a divinely instituted rite of the Christian religion. But if it be a divine institution, the duty of submission thereto needs no further argument. The proof is complete" (F. G. Hibbard, Christian Baptism, Part 2, p. 162). This, then, is an example of a verse respecting baptism which does not mention the element water, yet most certainly has reference to water baptism. Notice also that the command for baptizing is co-extensive with the command to go, and to teach. This proves the perpetuity of the ordinance: as long as men are to go, and to teach the gospel, just so long are they also to baptize. In this passage the ordinance of ritual water baptism is instituted by Christ himself after his resurrection without any hint of its temporary obligation. If he intended baptism to be temporary, he could not have associated baptism with other parts of ministerial duty intended to be of perpetual force. Were ritual water baptism only applicable to Jewish believers as a temporary and exclusively Jewish ordinance, applicable only to the pre-gospel dispensation as some ultra-dispensationalists teach, we must certainly have expected a clear word limiting the ordinance of the same or equal authority as these words establishing the ordinance, but this we do not find. This text clearly teaches the contrary, for the disciples were commanded to teach "all nations, baptizing them." Since all nations are to be baptized, it is absurd to insist that the command is exclusively Jewish. Contrary to the assertion that only Jewish believers were baptized in Acts, or that all baptisms were conducted by Jewish Christians, Cornelius was most certainly a Gentile, and he was water baptized (Ac 10:48) after receiving the Holy Spirit. It is not certain that the Ethiopian eunuch was a Jew (Ac 8:27), and it is most certain that the Philippian jailor was a Gentile, a Roman, in charge of the prison (Ac 16:27, 35, 36). Paul in his ministry was accompanied by Gentile converts who assisted in his work. These assistants most certainly conducted the majority of the ritual water baptisms that occurred under the ministry of Paul, for Paul asserts to the Corinthians that he had baptized none of them save Crispus and Gaius, the household of Stephanus, and he did not recall if he had baptized any others—yet there were enough baptized believers who received ritual water baptism under the ministry of Paul to form one of three contending parties at Corinth (1 C 1:12). Certainly when Paul writes "every one of you saith, I am of Paul" he does not mean to limit "every one of you" (1 C 1:12) to Crispus, Gaius, and the household of Stephanus. This proves, then, that others were baptized during Paul's ministry besides the very few he personally baptized. We are not explicitly told just who performed the ritual water baptisms under Paul's ministry, but as it is certain that Paul enjoyed the assistance of a number of non-Jewish fellowlaborers, there is no reason to suppose that they were not employed at times in this service. Who baptized Lydia (Ac 16:14n, 15n)? If she was not baptized by Paul, she must have been baptized by one of the brethren who accompanied Paul at this time (Ac 16:40n), among whom were Silas, Luke, and Timothy. Nothing is said of the family background of Silas, but his name suggests that he may have been a Hellenistic Jew, and from Acts 16:37 we know he was a Roman citizen. Both Luke and Titus were companions and fellowlaborers of Paul, and both were Gentile Christians. Considering the fact that Titus is directly stated to have been an uncircumcised Gentile (Ga 2:3), was sent by Paul to Corinth (2 C 8:6, 16. 12:18), who accompanied Paul and Barnabas at the time of the Jerusalem Council (Ac 15:2), and most probably was converted through the instrumentality of Paul himself (T 1:4), there is no reason to believe that Titus and other Gentile brethren were not entrusted with the performance of ritual water baptisms and other duties associated with founding, administrating, and establishing the new churches. These include eternity (3), omnipresence (6), omniscience (11), sovereignty (30), immutability (31), and immensity (32). Since only God can possess the incommunicable attributes, yet Scripture ascribes them to Jesus and to the Holy Spirit, all three persons must be God. MARK

The gospel is introduced by John the Baptist's ministry, 1-8. The baptism and temptation of Christ, 9-13. John being imprisoned, Jesus preaches in Galilee, and calls Simon and Andrew, James and John, to follow him, 14-20. He casts out an unclean spirit, 21-28; heals Peter's wife's mother, and many sick persons, 29-34; retires very early in the morning for prayer; preaches in the synagogues of Galilee; and cleanses a leper, 35-45.

It is unnecessary to suppose that in such a location conditions were suited to immersion, or that there was sufficient water for immersion. Note the phrase "in the wilderness." This is a phrase designating geographic locality, not the element into which baptism took place. The same is true for baptism "in Jordan" (ver. 9n), "in Aenon" (see Jn 3:23). of. ⁄181E, Ge +3:24. repentance. Lk √13:3. Ac +*3:19. for. or, unto. Gr. eis. Sometimes the preposition eis expresses purpose (Mt *26:28n. 1 C 2:7, for our glory), sometimes the ground or basis (as here, Mt 10:41. √12:41. Ac 2:38n), sometimes the notion of sphere or influence (1 C 10:2n), sometimes motion toward without entering in (Mt 17:27, to the sea. 18:29, at his feet. Mk 11:1, "nigh to Jerusalem," but still two miles away. Lk 10:30, "to Jericho," but he never got there. Jn 20:4, "came first to the sepulchre," etc.), and sometimes motion into or within (Jn 20:6n). Here, eis means "with reference to," in the sense that "baptism was on the basis of the repentance and confession of sin" (A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures, vol. 1, pp. 253, 254). Robertson notes "Certainly John did not mean that the baptism was the means of obtaining the forgiveness of their sins or necessary to the remission of sins" (p. 253). Mt ◐10:41. ◐26:28n. Ditzler points out that the river Jordan flows from the mountains to where it empties into the Dead Sea, down a steep of 3,000 feet. The direct length of the Jordan to the Dead Sea is sixty miles, by its windings it is two hundred miles. The water from the melting snow capped mountains is very cold, and falls fifteen feet to the mile (counting the windings), or sixty feet to the mile (as the crow flies). The fall of the Mississippi is a little over five inches to the mile, yet it runs from three to five miles an hour, much as it winds. The Jordan is so rapid a stream that even the best swimmer can not bathe in it without endangering his life. In the neighborhood of Jericho (there is where John baptized) the bathers are compelled to tie themselves together with ropes, to prevent their being swept away by the rapidity of the current. John the Baptist could not have baptised in the river under such conditions. The cold water would alone make this impossible. The tumultuous rush of the dangerous current would make it impossible to immerse the great numbers John baptized, for "while a man could take another and dip him by being very careful, it is not possible that one man could immerse great numbers in such a rapid stream, for the physical labor, the certainty of many being swept away from his hold and drowning, forbid. In a few minutes the limbs would become so numb in such a cold stream as to make the action of the lower limbs impossible" (J. Ditzler, Baptism, p. 40). Baptism in the river itself being out of the question, the expression "in the river" used here ought to be understood in the same sense of designating locality that "in Jordan" does in ver. 9. Mt 14:34), where Josephus (Bell. l. iii. c. 10. Sec. 8), places a spring of excellent water called Capernaum. Dr. Lightfoot places it between Tiberias and Tarichea, about two miles from the former; and Dr. Richardson, in passing through the plain of Gennasereth, was told by the natives that the ruins of Capernaum were quite near. The Arab station and ruins mentioned by Mr. Buckingham, said to have been formerly called Capharnaoom, situated on the edge of the lake, from nine to twelve miles N.N.E. of Tiberias, bearing the name of Talhewn, or as Burckhardt writes it, Tel Houm, appear too far north for its site. It was divided into Lower and Upper Galilee: Upper Galilee, so called from its being mountainous, was termed Galilee of the Gentiles (Mt 4:15), because inhabited, says Strabo (l. xvi.), by Egyptians, Arabians, and

Phoenicians, and comprehended the tribes of Asher and Naphtali; the Lower Galilee contained the tribes of Zebulun and Issachar, and was sometimes termed the Great Field. MARK 2

Jesus heals a paralytic, and shows his authority on earth to forgive sins, 1-12. He calls Matthew; and answers those who blamed him for eating with publicans and sinners, 13-17. He vindicates his disciples, when blamed for not fasting frequently, and accused of breaking the sabbath, 18-28.

The Jews believed that not only death but all disease was the consequence of sin. "There is no death without sin, nor any chastisement without iniquity" (Shabbath, c. 5. fol. 55. l.); and that "no diseased person could be healed of his disease till his sins were blotted out" (Nedarim, fol. 41.1). The two Greek words for "new," while generally synonymous, may be distinguished here: neos is new in the sense of brand new, new as opposed to old, referring to age; kainos is new in quality or condition, the sense of fresh, not yet used, but with no reference to age—the new wineskins conceivably could have remained unused for a long time. Perhaps this distinction holds at 2 P 3:13, where "new" heavens and a "new" earth may be understood as new in quality, not in time, for Scripture elsewhere states that the "earth abideth forever" (Ec +*1:4). For neos, ✻S#3501g: rendered (1) new: Mt 9:17, 17. Mk 2:22, 22, 22. Lk 5:37, 37, 38, 39. 1 C 5:7. He 12:24. (2) new man: Col 3:10. (3) young woman: T 2:4. Synonyms*, pp. 219-225) and Cremer (Biblico-Theological Lexicon of New Testament Greek, pp. 321, 740), suggest no such neat difference can be maintained (See Roy A. 26. Abiathar. It appears from the passage referred to here, that Ahimelech was then high priest at Nob; and from other passages, that Abiathar was his son. Various conjectures have been formed in order to solve this difficulty; and some, instead of untying, have cut the knot, by pronouncing it an interpolation. The most probable opinion seems to be, that both father and son had two names (for other examples of persons having two names see 2 Ch 34:20n. Ne 7:24n. 11:6n, 11n), the father being also called Abiathar; and this appears almost certain from 2 S 8:17. 1 Ch 18:16, where Ahimelech seems evidently termed Abiathar, while Abiathar is called Ahimelech or Abimelech (Compare 1 K 2:26, 27). 1 S 14:3, Ahiah. 1 S 21:1. 22:9, 11, 20-22. 23:6, 9. 2 S 8:17. 15:24, 29, 35. 20:25. 1 K 1:7. 2:22, 26, 27. 4:4. did eat. 1 S ⟩21:6. which is not lawful. MARK 3

Jesus restores a man's withered hand in the synagogue, on the sabbath, 1-5. The Pharisees conspire his death: he retires, is followed by multitudes, and heals many, 6-12. He chooses twelve apostles, 13-19. His friends look upon him as beside himself, 20, 21. He confutes the blasphemous absurdity of the scribes, who ascribe his casting out devils to the power of Beelzebub, 22-30. Those who do the will of God are regarded as his nearest relations, 31-35.

31. There came. Mt 12:46-48. Lk 8:19-21. his brethren. These are certainly his literal half-brothers, of which Scripture names four. Jesus also had at least three half-sisters (Mt 13:56 uses "all," not "both," indicating more than two). "Brethren" here mentioned in such close connection with Mary, Christ's mother, certainly points to their being his natural brothers, not cousins. Sons of another woman would not be following Mary around. While Jesus is Mary's firstborn son, this does not indicate she had no other children, for if that were the case, the word would have been monogenes, only begotten son (as in Lk 7:12. 8:42. 9:38), not "firstborn" (protokos, Mt 1:25. Lk 2:7. Ro 8:29. Col +*1:15n, 18. He 1:6. 11:28. 12:23. Re 1:5). The term firstborn does not imply that there are no others, for Christ is the firstborn from the dead (Re 1:5) that he may bring many sons into glory (He 2:10) by resurrection (1 C 15:20-23). It was foretold in prophecy that Jesus would have brothers, and his mother would have other children, Ps √69:8, 9. If his "brethren" were merely cousins, the term "sungenes," used of kin, kinsmen, and kinsfolk (Mk 6:4. Lk 1:36, 58. 2:44. 14:12. 21:16. 18:26. Ac 10:24. Ro 9:3. 16:7, 11, 21), and cousin (Lk 1:36, 58) was available to indicate this, but was not used. Note that "brethren" is distinguished from "kinsmen" at Lk 14:12 and Lk 21:16. Mk +*6:3. Mt +*13:55. MARK 5

Jesus casts out a legion of devils; and suffers them to enter and destroy a herd of swine, 1-13. The owners entreat him to depart; and the man, who had been possessed, desires to be with him; but is sent to declare what Jesus had done for him, 14-20. Jairus entreats Christ to heal his daughter, 21-24. By the way, he heals a woman of an inveterate issue of blood, 25-34. He raises Jairus's daughter to life, 35-43.

St. Matthew gives a brief account of two demoniacs who were dispossessed on this occasion; but Mark and Luke omit the mention of one (who was perhaps not so remarkable). That these wretched men were not merely mad, as some suppose, but really possessed of evil spirits, appears clearly from the language employed, as well as from the narrative itself. St. Matthew expressly affirms that they were "possessed with devils," or demoniacs, daimonidzomenoi; St. Mark says he had "an unclean spirit," i.e. a fallen spirit; and St. Luke asserts, that he "had devils (or demons) a long time," and was called Legion, "because many devils were entered into him." With supernatural strength the demons burst asunder the chains and fetters with which he was bound; they address Christ as the "Son of the most high God;" they beseech him to suffer them to enter into the swine; and when he had given them leave, they "went out and entered into the swine," etc. with. ver. 8. lem here: how could Jesus permit this destruction of the property of an innocent party? The objection against the action or inaction of Jesus is of no more force than the objection to the providence of God generally, for many things are permitted of God, such as the destruction of property and life by natural phenomenon (earthquakes, floods, tornadoes, pestilence), and this is no unanswerable objection to the goodness of God. Rather, our moral sensibilities ought to be outraged that the owners of the herd did not respond in repentance and faith at the miracle wrought in the lives of the demoniacs, but the owners rather desired Christ to leave the vicinity. 1 K 22:22. Jesus preaches and is despised in his own country, 1-6. He sends out the apostles to preach, with power over unclean spirits, 7-13. The opinions of Herod and others concerning Christ, 14-16. Herod imprisons and beheads John the Baptist, at the instigation of Herodias, 17-29. The apostles return to Jesus, 30-33. He teaches, and miraculously feeds, the multitudes, 34-44. He walks on the sea to his disciples, 45-52. They land at Gennesaret, and he heals the sick, who only touched the hem of his garment, 53-56.

As, however, we learn from Josephus (Ant. l. xviii. c. 5. sec. 1, 2), that Herod was at this very time engaged in war with Aretas, king of Arabia, in consequence of Herod's having divorced his daughter in order to marry Herodias, his brother Philip's wife; and as this event occurred at an entertainment given at the castle of Machaerus, while his army was on its march against his father-in-law; we are furnished with an additional reason why a speculator, or sentinel, should have been employed as an executioner; and are thus enabled to discover such a latent and undesigned coincidence as clearly evinces the truth of the evangelical narrative. See Bishop Marsh, Lectures, P. v. pp. 78-82, and Horne's Introduction, vol. I, pp. 101, 102 (page 94 of the seventh edition of 1834). See related notes on undesigned coincidence at Ac +*12:12n.

Some learned men, however, are of opinion that the Bethsaida mentioned in the gospels was a different place; and that it was situated on the western shore of the sea of Tiberias, in Galilee, near Chorazin and Capernaum, with which it is associated (Mt 11:21, 23. Jn 12:21); and Bishop Pococke mentions the ruins of a town or large village in the plain of Huttin, about two miles west of the lake, still bearing the name of Baitsida, which he thinks occupies its site. MARK 7

The Pharisees find fault with the disciples for eating with unwashen hands; and Jesus shows that their traditions "make void the law of God," 1-13. He teaches the source and nature of defilement, 14-23; heals the daughter of a Syrophenician woman, 24-30; and a man who was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech, 31-37.

The Jews laid great stress on these washings, or baptisms, baptismous, considering eating with unwashen hands no ordinary crime, and feigning that an evil spirit, called Shibta, has a right to sit on the food of him who thus eats, and render it hurtful. the tradition. ver. 7-10, 13. This clearly shows that among the Jews, ceremonial washings for cleansing were called "baptisms," and involved applying water to the object, not the immersion of the object or person in water (Ac 1:5n), for notice the inclusion of their beds or couches in the ceremony, which no doubt was accomplished by sprinkling. After every return from the market, and before every instance of eating or drinking, they could scarcely be supposed to have practiced immersion! This usage of the word baptizo proves that the word does not mean exclusively to immerse. Dr. Robert H. Countess has conclusively shown, reviewing carefully the works of James W. Dale, that (1) Dale's work stands up under careful scrutiny in the light of developments in the study of linguistics and lexicography which have occurred since his writing, studies which do not diminish but enhance the validity of Dale's findings; (2) Dale has established that baptizo is a word having not just a single or univocal meaning, but it is a word which is used with multiple meanings: (I) Primary use: (A) Intusposition, with influence. As the word "intusposition" is in no English dictionary which I can find—not even the unabridged thirteen volume Oxford English Dictionary or its recent (1987) Supplement, I have attempted to produce the following definition by a careful study of Dale (See Dale, Classic Baptism, pp. 126, 127, and index entry, p. 366): i.e. placement and continuance entirely within a fluid, such that an object baptized is completely invested by the baptizing element, whatever it may be, involving consequent, though only indirectly expressed, full influence, influence which varies according to object and element. (B) Intusposition for influence; (C) Influence with rhetorical figure; (D) Intusposition without influence. (II) Secondary use: (A) Controlling influence without intusposition in fact or by figure; (B) Controlling influence with or without intusposition: (1) Stupefaction; (2) Drunkenness; (3) Purification; (4) Class of persons thoroughly imbued. Dr. Countess illustrates, with the examples furnished by Dale's volumes, each of these uses of baptizo from the Greek classics, the Septuagint, the New Testament, and the Church Fathers. (3) Alexander Carson argued that baptizo had but one meaning, stating "My position is, that it always signifies to dip; never expressing anything but mode" (Baptism: Its Mode and Subjects, p. 55). Carson boldly states a self-evident canon, "A word that applies to two modes can designate neither" (Baptism, p. 90). For Carson's view this is a fatal admission. Dr. Countess observes, "Carson's self-contradiction continues to follow him wherever he goes, because he asserted that "It not only signifies to dip or immerse..." Since dipping is a clearly observable, univocal modal activity, and since immersing is not, Carson has unwittingly impaled his univocal definition upon two different (equivocal) horns of a dilemma" (Robert H. Countess, Development of an Instructional Model for Teaching Christian Baptism in the Military Chapel Environment, unpublished MS., page 10 of Chapter 6). Dr. Countess informs me that his MS. is to be published probably by Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Company, publishers of his other book, The Jehovah's Witnesses' New Testament, which I have cited in a note on Mt 27:54. Carson's statement, "Baptizo in the whole history of the Greek language has but one (meaning). It not only signifies to dip or immerse, but it never has any other meaning" is from page 19 of his work on baptism.

Even without Dale's elaborate classification scheme for the multiple meanings of baptizo, Carson's own statement betrays the equivocal use of the term, and invalidates Carson's whole argument. washing. This was clearly a symbolical action (2 K +13:17n); for these remedies evidently could not, by their natural efficacy, avail to produce so wonderful an effect. As the ears of the deaf appear closed, he applies his fingers to intimate that he would open them; and as the tongue of the dumb seems to be tied, or to cleave to the palate, he touches it, to intimate he would give loose and free motion to it. He accommodated himself to the weakness of those who might not indeed doubt his power, but fancy some external sign was requisite to healing. It was also thus made manifest, that this salutiferous (i.e. curative) power came from Himself, and that He who by one word, ephphatha, had healed the man, must be Divine. he spit. MARK 8

Jesus miraculously feeds the multitudes, 1-9; refuses the Pharisees a sign, 10-13; warns the disciples against their leaven, and that of Herod; and reproves them for dullness of understanding, 14-21; gives sight to a blind man at Bethsaida, 22-26; approves Peter's confession, predicts his own sufferings, and rebukes Peter for objecting to them, 27-33; and teaches self-denial and a willingness to suffer for his sake, 34-38.

MARK 9

The transfiguration of Christ, 1-10. He shows that John the Baptist is "Elias who was to come," 11-13. He casts out a dumb and deaf spirit, having rebuked the company, and the disciples, for their unbelief, 14-29. He foretells his own death and resurrection, 30-32; reproves the ambition of the disciples, 33-37; forbids them to hinder one, who cast out devils in his name, though he followed not with them, 38-41; shows the guilt of offending weak believers, 42; and warns his hearers to part with all occasions of sin however valued; showing the eternal doom of the wicked, especially of apostates, in most awful language, 43-50.

49. every one. Whitby supposes this to mean, "Every wicked man shall be seasoned with fire itself, so as to be inconsumable, and shall endure for ever to be tormented; and therefore may be said to be salted with fire, in allusion to that property of salt, which is to preserve things from corruption." Beza and Gilpin would read, "Every Christian is purified by the difficult and fiery trials of life, in the same manner as (kai for hos, as in Mk 10:12. Jn 14:20) every sacrifice with salt." Lightfoot and Doddridge, "He that is a true sacrifice to God shall be seasoned with the salt of grace to the incorruption of glory; and every victim to Divine justice shall be salted with fire to endure for ever." 2 C 2:16. salted. In this world ye may look for offences. Ye are to expect severe trials and temptations; but these are exercises of your Christian virtues, and are designed to make you to be acceptable sacrifices to God. The word rendered shall be salted appears to be used for the same reason as the word rendered fire, on account of its double sense. In the Old Testament the Hebrew word malah, to salt, is used (1) for cleansing, seasoning, and preserving (Le 2:13), and there spoken of sacrifices (compare Ezk 43:24). And so it is here appropriately applied to the fire of God's Spirit and of earthly trials, which are designed by God to season men, and render them acceptable sacrifices to Him; (2) salt is also used for what is perpetually barren and bituminous, and its effect on the earth is described by burning (Dt 29:23. Jb 39:6. Ps 107:34. Je 17:6. Ezk 47:11. Captive cities were sown with salt (Jg 9:45). The word malah is specially applied to the Dead Sea, which is called the Sea of Salt (Ge 14:3. Nu 34:12). Lot's wife became a pillar of salt (melah, Ge 19:26), a monument of an unbelieving soul. Our Lord's meaning therefore is, If men will not be seasoned by the refining fire of God's Spirit, and of this world's trials, they will be salted with the fire of Tophet, "the fire and brimstone" (Re 20:10), the Dead Sea, or Salt Sea, of Gehenna, the Lake of Fire (Re 21:8), that fire which has the property of salt, in that it does not consume but preserve its victims—even for evermore. Hence the ungodly are often spoken of as burnt sacrifices to God's justice, which is compared to fire (He 12:29. Is 66:15, 16. Je 12:3. 46:10. Ezk 21:9, 10. 39:6). St. John the Baptist said of Christ, He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire (Mt 3:11). Note Peter's reference to the fiery trial which is to try us (1 P 4:12), and the trial of our faith with fire (1 P 1:7. Compare Jb 23:10. Ps 66:10. Pr 17:3. Is 48:10. Je 23:29. Zc 13:9). Hence the sense of this passage is, that men are to be baptized in this world with the Holy Ghost and fire, that is, with the purifying flame of love and zeal, cleansing and smelting away the dross of worldly and carnal affections, and with the sanctifying illuminations of the Holy Ghost; and they are also tried in this world in the furnace of suffering, in order that they may be presented a living and holy sacrifice acceptable to God, as of a sweetsmelling savour (Ro 12:1. 2 C 2:15. Ep 5:2. 1 P 2:5). And if this is not the result of God's grace, and of the temporary fire of the trials of this life, they will be reserved for God's severe and righteous judgment, for everlasting fire, in the world to come (Wordsworth, Greek Testament, vol. 1. p. 136). 2 C 2:16. He 12:29. with fire. 1 C 3:13. 1 P 4:12. and every sacrifice. Le *2:13. Ezk *43:24. 1 C *3:15.

On account of the cleansing and purifying effect of salt, the Levitical sacrifices were to be seasoned with it (Le 2:13. Ezk 43:24); an emblem of that purity which is necessary to make a sacrifice acceptable to God. This spiritual salt is to be preserved in the heart, and to season the life and conversation (Col 4:6), so that nothing that is corrupt may proceed from the mouth (Ep 4:29); and so the disciples of Christ may be the salt of the earth (Wordsworth, Greek Testament, vol. 1, p. 136). MARK 10

Jesus teaches in Judea, 1; answers the Pharisees concerning divorce, 2-12; receives and blesses young children, 13-16; instructs and proves the rich young man; shows the danger of affluence; and makes gracious promises to those who forsake worldly objects for his sake, 17-31. He again predicts his own death and resurrection; reproves the ambition of James and John, and the other apostles, 32-45; and gives sight to blind Bartimeus, 46-52.

That a woman among the Jews could, in some cases, divorce her husband, appears from Bereshith Rabba, 18., and Ketuvoth, 7.9, cited by Wetstein; and it appears from Josephus, that it was done by some women of distinguished rank. They probably learnt this of the Romans, among whom it was practiced in the most scandalous manner (see Juvenal, Sat. vi. v. 222-230). Our Lord might judge it seasonable thus to check its progress; and St. Mark, writing to the Gentile Christians, would deem it very suitable to them. Mk 6:17. 1 C 7:11, 13. she committeth. MARK 11

Jesus enters Jerusalem, riding on an ass, amidst the acclamations of the multitude, 1-11. He curses a barren fig tree, 12-14; and drives the traders from the temple, 15-19. From the fig tree being dried up, he shows his disciples the power of faith, and directs them how to pray, 20-26. He silences the priests and scribes, who questioned his authority, 27-33.

The fig tree, sukea, is a genus of the polygamia triaecia class of plants, seldom rising above twelve feet, but sending off from the bottom many spreading branches. The leaves are of a dark green color, nearly a span long, smooth, and irregularly divided into from three to five deep rounded lobes; and the fruit grows on short and thick stalks, of a purplish color, and contains a soft, sweet, and fragrant pulp, intermixed with numerous small seeds. if. ⁄184A, 1 C +15:2. Dr. Campbell observes, that the declaration, "for the time of (ripe, Ed.) figs was not yet," is not the reason why our Lord did not find any fruit on the tree, because the fig is of that class of vegetables in which the fruit is formed in its immature state before the leaves are seen. But as the fruit is of a pulpy nature, the broad, thick leaves come out in profusion to protect it from the rays of the sun during the time it is ripening. If the words, "for the time," etc. however, are read as a parenthesis, they then become a reason why Jesus Christ should look for fruit, because the season for gathering not having fully come, it would remove all suspicion that the fruit had been gathered: while the presence of the leaves incontestably proved the advance of the tree to the state in which fruit is found. yet. ⁄63K, Ge +37:13. The Passover did not occur at the proper fig-season; but figs remained on the trees (dried) right through the winter. These, which could generally be found were called pag. The name is preserved in the word Bethphage (house of figs). At the time of the Passover, such figs might well have been looked for. The Lord went to see "if consequently he might find anything thereon." It was "if consequently," because "it was not the proper season of figs" (suka: not olunthoi, as the others were called, and for which he sought). We must also remember that in the East all fruit trees were enclosed in gardens, and had an owner. This tree, though, by the roadside (Mt 21:19) must have been enclosed, and as it grew over the wall, passers by might partake of the fruit (Dt 23:24). But the owner had probably shaken the fruit off, or gathered it himself, and hence deserved the judgment which came upon him (see Le 19:9, 10. 23:22. Dt 24:19-21). This is one of the two miracles of destruction wrought by Jesus: and we know that in the other case the owners of the swine were justly punished (B124).

MARK 12

The parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, 1-12. Jesus answers the Pharisees and Herodians about paying tribute to Caesar, 13-17; the Sadducees, concerning the resurrection, 18-27; and a Scribe, concerning the first commandment in the law, 28-34. He demands of the Scribes, whose Son the Messiah was to be, 35-37; warns the people against the ostentation and hypocrisy of the Scribes, 38-40; and commends a poor widow, who had cast two mites into the treasury, 41-44.

Here in the Greek the adjective "great" is put between the two nouns, thus: "Power, great, and glory," and it applies to both in a peculiar manner. This Zeugma calls our attention to the fact that the power will be great and the glory will be great: and this more effectually emphasizes the greatness of both, than if it had been stated in so many words. MARK 14

The chief priests and scribes conspire to put Jesus to death, 1, 2. A woman pours precious ointment on his head: with the circumstances attending her conduct, 3-9. Judas bargains with the chief priests to betray him, 10, 11. The disciples by the direction of Jesus prepare the passover, 12-16. He eats it with them, and points out the traitor, 17-21. He institutes the Lord's supper, 22-25. He foretells that all the disciples would forsake him, and that Peter would deny him, 26-31. His agony and prayer in the garden, and his warnings to the disciples, 32-42. He is betrayed, apprehended, and forsaken, 43-52. He is arraigned before Caiaphas, condemned, and treated with cruel indignity, 53-65. Peter thrice denies him, but repents, 66-72.

"It appears to me more probable," says Dr. Doddridge, "that Matthew and Mark should have introduced this story out of its place—that Lazarus, if he made this feast (which is not expressly said by John), should have made use of Simon's house, as more convenient—and that Mary should have poured this ointment on Christ's head and body, as well as on his feet,—than that, within the compass of four days, Christ should have been twice anointed with so costly a perfume; and that the same fault should be found with the action, and the same value set upon the ointment, and the same words used in defense of the woman, and all this in the presence of many of the same persons; all which improbable particulars must be admitted, if the stories be considered as different." The rebuke which Judas received from Christ at this unction determined him in his resolution to betray his Master: and therefore Christ's rebuke, and Judas' revenge, are united, as cause and effect, by Matthew and Mark. Compare Lk 7:45n. 1 Ch 28:2, 3. 29:1-17. 2 Ch 31:20, 21. 34:19-33. Andrews notes "That Mark should say, 'Before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice,' while the other Evangelists say, 'Before the cock crow thou shalt deny me thrice,' makes no real discrepancy. The latter speak generally of the cock-crowing as a period of time within which the three denials should take place; Mark more accurately says, that during this period the cock should not crow twice ere the denials were made" (The Life of Our Lord, p. 496). Webster and Wilkinson note that the expression "second crowing" "shows the accuracy of S. Mark, on the supposition that he wrote for the use of Christians at Rome. The Western world generally reckoned two cockcrowings, one at about 3 a.m. ("cockcrowing," Mk 13:35), the other at the dawn of day. This last was the only one reckoned in the East (Greek Testament, vol. 1, p. 221). Stuart Custer notes the fact that Matthew and Luke do not mention the cock's crowing twice is simply a case of their providing general information, whereas Mark, as the disciple of Peter, having been told the particulars more precisely, gives the more detailed account, incidentally proving the independent testimony of the four evangelists (Does Inspiration Demand Inerrancy?, p. 107). John W. Haley remarks, "The four evangelists agree as to the number of the denials; but Matthew, Luke, and John represent them as occurring before the crowing of the cock; Mark as occurring before the cock should crow 'twice.'" Haley further states, "Alford, Whitby, and many commentators note that cocks are accustomed to crow twice,—at or near midnight, and not far from day-break. Inasmuch as few persons hear the first crowing, the term generally denotes the second. All the evangelists refer to this latter; but Mark with greater precision designates it as the 'second crowing.' It seems probable that no one of the evangelists has mentioned all the denials by Peter during that sorrowful night. As the accusation was caught up, reiterated, and flung in his face by one and another of the servants and the guard, the terror-stricken man, in his agitation and in his anxiety to clear himself, would be likely to repeat the denial a considerable number of times, and in every variety of phrase. And, meanwhile, he would naturally be shifting about from place to place. This hypothesis accounts for the difficulty as to the persons who accosted him, and the places where he was when the denials were uttered" (An Examination of the Alleged Discrepancies of the Bible, pp. 424, 425). A careful reading of the four accounts lends support to the possibility that Jesus in Mk 14:30 predicted two series of three denials, three denials before each of two cockcrowings: (1) The first series of three. First denial: Jn 18:17, place, the door (thura) without; time, entering; the questioner, the porteress (thuroros). Second denial: Mt 26:70; Mk 14:68, place, the hall (aule); time, sitting; questioner, a certain maid. Lk 22:56-58 combines the same place and time, with the same maid, and another (heteros, masculine). Third denial: Mt 26:71, place, the gateway or porch (pulon). Time, an interval of an hour. Jn 18:25, 26 combines the same place and time, with another maid and bystanders, one of them being a relative of Malchus. A cock crew: Mk 14:68. Jn 18:27. (2) The second series of three. First denial: Mk 14:63, place, beneath the hall; time, shortly after; questioner, the maid again. Second denial: Mt 26:73; Mk 14:70, place, the gate (pulon); time, shortly after; questioners, the bystanders. Third denial: Lk 22:59, 60, place, the midst of the hall (aule, ver. 55); time, an hour after (ver. 59); questioner, a certain one (masculine). A cock crew: (Mt 26:74. Mk 14:72. Lk 22:61). We thus have a combined record in which there remains no difficulty, while each word retains its own true grammatical sense (Companion Bible, Appendix 160, pp. 183, 184. Compare Johnston M. Cheney, The Life of Christ in Stereo, Appendix III, pp. 222-224). George W. DeHoff cites Bishop Horne as stating "Pertness and ignorance may ask a question in three lines which it will cost learning and ingenuity thirty pages to answer; and when this is done, the same question shall be triumphantly asked again the next year, as if nothing had ever been written on the subject" (Alleged Bible Contradictions Explained, p. 39). DeHoff provides in his initial chapters and introduction valuable discussion of the sources, causes, value and proper manner of solving alleged discrepancies, noting "Frequently several possible solutions of a difficulty are given. It is not claimed that these are the only possible solutions, nor, indeed, the correct ones" (p. 10). Clearly, that an alleged difficulty can be reasonably explained by reverent scholarship is sufficient to remove the difficulty. One overly magnified (by infidelity) alleged source of difficulties is the multiplicity of various readings in the original manuscripts of the Bible. DeHoff cites Dr. Bently, who said "The real text of the sacred writers does not now (since the originals have been so long lost) lie in any single manuscript or edition, but is dispersed in them all. 'Tis competently exact indeed, even in the worst manuscript now extant; nor is one article of faith or moral precept either perverted or lost in them, choose as awkwardly as you can, choose the worst by design, out of the whole lump of readings" and "Make your thirty thousand (variations) as many more, if numbers of copies can ever reach that sum; all the better to a knowing and serious reader, who is thereby more richly furnished to select what he sees genuine. But even put them into the hands of a knave or a fool, and yet with the most sinistrous and absurd choice, he shall not extinguish the light of any one chapter, nor disguise Christianity but that every feature of it will be the same" (pp. 48, 49). ver. 68, 72. "Though this incident," observes Dr. Campell, "recorded by Mark, may not appear of great moment, it is, in my opinion, one of those circumstances we call picturesque, which, though in a manner unconnected with the story, enliven the narrative, and add to its credibility. It must have been late in the night, when, as has been very probably conjectured, some young man, whose house lay near the garden, being roused out of sleep by the noise of the soldiers and armed retinue passing by, got up, stimulated by curiosity, wrapt himself (as Casauron supposes) in the cloth in which he had been sleeping, and ran after them." Could it be that this account is of Mark himself, who would have been a young man at this time? The incident is not repeated in the other gospels, and it could be just such a detail which Mark could supply about himself. linen cloth. Mk 15:46. Jg 14:12. Pr 31:24.

From various examples produced by Lightfoot, and Schoetgen, it appears that the Galileans used a very corrupt dialect and pronunciation; interchanging the gutterals, and other letters, and so blending or dividing words as to render them unintelligible, or convey a contrary sense. Thus when a Galilean would have asked, "whose is this lamb," he pronounced the first word so confusedly that it could not be known whether he meant chamor, "an ass," chamar, "wine," amar, "wool," or immar, "a lamb." A certain woman intending to say to a judge, "My lord, I had a picture which they stole; and it was so great, that if you had been placed in it, your feet would not have touched the ground," so spoiled it by her pronunciation, that her words meant, "Sir slave, I had a beam, and they stole thee away; and it was so great, that if they had hung thee on it, thy feet would not have touched the ground." MARK 15

Jesus is bound, and delivered up unto Pilate; and when accused before him, and interrogated by him, he continues silent, 1-5. Pilate, induced by the priests and people, releases Barabbas, and delivers Jesus to be crucified, 6-15. The soldiers crown him with thorns, and cruelly mock him; and then lead him away to the place of crucifixion, 16-24. He is crucified between two thieves, and reviled by the people and the priests, 25-32. The sun is darkened; and Jesus, calling on God, expires, 33-37. The veil of the temple is rent; and the centurion confesses him to be "the Son of God," 38, 39. Certain women are spectators of his crucifixion, 40, 41. Joseph of Arimathea asks Pilate for the body, which having obtained he honorably inters, 42-47.

This is sufficiently evident; for he well knew why he was come unto that hour, nor could he be forsaken of God, in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. The Deity, however, might constrain so much of its consolatory support, as to leave the human nature fully sensible of all its sufferings; so that the consolations might not take off any part of the keen edge of his passion: and this was necessary to make his sufferings meritorious." why. 39. the centurion. The centurion was a military captain, and commander of a century, or 100 men. In order to have a proper notion of his office, it may be desirable to explain the construction and array of the Roman legion. Each legion was divided into ten cohorts, each cohort into three maniples, and each maniple into two centuries—so that there were thirty maniples, and sixty centuries in a legion, which, if the century had always, as the word imports, consisted of 100 soldiers, would have formed a combined phalanx of 6000 men. The number in a legion, however, varied at different periods; in the time of Polybius it was 4200. The order of battle was that of three lines—the hastati, or spearmen, occupied the front; the principes, the second line; the triarii (also called pilani, from their weapon, the pilam), the third. The centurions were appointed by the tribunes, and generally selected from the common soldiers according to their merit; although the office was sometimes obtained for money, or through the favor of the consuls. Their badge was a vine rod, or sapling. ver. 44. Mt 8:5-10. Ac 10:1, 2. 27:1-3, 43. ghost. Gr. pneuma, ⁄121A3, Mt +27:50. he said. Mt 27:43, 54. Lk *23:47, 48. the Son of God. Da ◐3:25. MARK 16

An angel informs the women that Jesus is risen, 1-8. He appears to Mary Magdalene, 9-11; to two disciples going into the country, 12, 13; and to the eleven; whom he upbraids for their unbelief, and commissions to preach the gospel to all the world, 14-18. He ascends into heaven, 19. The gospel is every where preached, and confirmed by miracles, 20.

2. very early. Mr. West supposes that the women made two different visits to the sepulchre, and, in consequence of that, two distinct reports to the disciples; that Mary Magdalene, with the other Mary and Salome, set out not only early, but very early in the morning, lian proi, i.e. before the time appointed to meet Joanna and the other women there (Lk 24:10). This interpretation, which is adopted by several eminent writers, is very probable, and reconciles the apparent discrepancy in the evangelists. Mt 28:1. Lk *24:1. The latter sat in the porch of the tomb, and had assumed a terrible appearance to overawe the guard (Mt 28:1); but this appeared as a young man, within the sepulchre, in the inner apartment. The two angels spoken of by St. John (Jn 20:11) appeared some time after these; but whether they were the same or different cannot be ascertained; nor whether the angels which manifested themselves to the second party of women, recorded by St. Luke (Lk 24:4), were the same or different. For each positive requirement for salvation, there is in Scripture a negative statement threatening loss of salvation if the requirement is not satisfied. That is, belief as a requirement for salvation is stated positively and negatively (Ac 16:31 w Jn 3:18); repentance is spoken of positively and negatively (Ac 17:30 w Lk 13:3). Although baptism is enjoined as a command, it is nowhere stated in the negative (i.e. "he that is not baptised is lost," or the equivalent), as all positive, essential requirements for salvation are. This passage comes closest to being such a negative statement, but it lacks the negative clause pertaining to baptism. Nor can such a clause be "supplied" as though its omission were a mere ellipsis, for in so essential a matter, we dare not add to what is expressly written (Pr √30:6. Re √22:18, 19). Therefore, the physical rite of water baptism cannot be shown from Scripture to be necessary to salvation. Mk 16:16 is not a command statement, nor is it in the subjunctive mood of a conditional clause, which would have to read "If one believes and is baptized he shall be saved." If it were so worded here or anywhere, then baptism would be a necessary condition with which one must comply in order to be saved. But Mark 16:16 is a mere declaration that the baptized believer shall be saved. Had the Bible said "He that is baptized, and takes the Lord's Supper, and pays tithes and offerings, and forsakes not the assembling of himself with other believers, and cares for widows and orphans, shall be saved," it would have been a declarative statement of general Bible truth. But that is not the same as saying "If a person does all these things he shall be saved." What one receives when he believes, he does not lose when he is baptized. Nowhere in the New Testament is baptism made a command or a condition essential to salvation. It never occurs as such in the imperative mood in a command statement, or in the subjunctive mood in a conditional clause, with the promise that by subscribing to such one shall receive salvation. There are four, perhaps five, conditions or terms of salvation, all of which are stated both positively and negatively: (1) one must hear the Word of God: positive, Ro 10:17. Jn 5:24. negative, Ac 3:23. (2) one must be convicted by the Holy Spirit: positively, Jn 6:44. 16:8-11. negatively, Ro 8:9. (3) repentance is a means by which one receives salvation: positively, Ac 11:18. *17:30, 31. 2 P *3:9. negatively, Lk +*13:3. 2 C 7:10. (4) belief in or on Jesus Christ as personal Savior and Lord: positively, Ac 10:43. *15:9. 16:31. Ro 1:16. Ga *3:26. Ep *2:8, 9. 1 J √5:1, 11-13. negatively, Jn 3:18. 8:24. (5) confession of Christ as Lord before men: positively, Ro √10:9, 10. negatively, Mt 10:32, 33. As with repentance, confession is not regarded in Scripture as an act which is separate from belief; it is concomitant. If not, then one who is dumb cannot be saved; nor could a person isolated from society be saved through the reading of the Word. All four or five conditions or terms of salvation are stated both positively and negatively; baptism is not one of these. Just as the verb "baptize" is never used in the entire New Testament in the subjunctive mode in a promise of salvation, neither is the noun "baptism" used in the instrumental, means, or agency case of prepositions so as to offer salvation, justification, or the new birth by or through baptism. In stating the conditions of salvation, Scripture does teach that (1) one receives a pure heart by faith in Christ, Ac 15:9; (2) one is justified by faith, Ro 5:1. Ac 13:39; (3) one is saved by grace through faith, Ep 2:8, 9; (4) one is said to be a child of God by faith in Christ Jesus (Ga 3:26. Ep 3:17), but one is never said to receive a pure heart, be justified, be saved, or to be a child of God by or through baptism (some of the preceding information I first learned when I heard Albert Garner debate in Gainesville, Florida, in 1974. Much of the information is also in his book, Defense of the Faith, Part 2, Chapter 2, "The Baptismal Regeneration Heresy," especially pp. 238-241, "Objections Answered, Mark 16:16"). The one word believe represents all a sinner can do and all a sinner must do to be saved. Hearing, conviction of the Holy Spirit, repentance, confession of sin, confession of Christ before others, are all concomitants of—things that accompany—true belief, not so many discrete requirements for salvation. A study of what the New Testament says regarding Abraham's faith (Ro 4:3-5, 10, 11, 24. Ga 3:6. He 11:17-19. Ja 2:21) will show that Abraham was declared righteous (Ge 15:6) chronologically before any act of obedience on his part, before the institution of circumcision, before the sacrifice of Isaac, and of course well before the establishment of the Mosaic law. This teaches us that no ordinance, no act of obedience, no obedience to law, and no "act of faith" precedes the imputation of righteousness—simply believing God.

The preface, and dedication to Theophilus, 1-4. An account of Zacharias and Elisabeth, 5-7. The angel Gabriel appears to Zacharias in the temple, and promises him a son in his old age, who would be singularly eminent and useful, 8-17. He is chastised for unbelief, by being struck dumb, 18-23. Elisabeth conceives, and hides herself, 24, 25. The angel appears to the virgin Mary; and assures her that she should become the mother of the Messiah, the King of Israel, by the power of the Holy Spirit, 26-33. Her humble faith and acquiescence, 34-38. She visits Elisabeth, and is saluted by her: she prophesies, and praises God, 39-56. The birth, circumcision, and naming of John the Baptist, 57-63. Zacharias, restored to the use of speech, prophetically praises God, 64-79. The manner in which John spent his youth, 80.

44. the babe. ver. 41. leaped. ver. 41. Lk 6:23. for joy. Scripture says much that bears upon the issue of abortion. (1) Note that Scripture here attributes emotion to an unborn child. (2) The fetus is formed by God, Jb 31:15mg. Je 1:5. (3) God planned the life before it took form, Je 1:5. (4) God delivers new life from the womb, Ps 71:6. Ga 1:15, 16. (5) Note the despondent wish for spontaneous abortion during a period of depression, Je 20:17. (6) An untimely birth preferable to living and dying in disrepute, Ec 6:3. (7) The majesty and marvel of life, Ps 139:14-16. (8) Life is sacred and precious, Ge 9:6. (9) Jesus warned not to offend one of these little ones, Mt 18:6. (10) Christ's concern and care seen in his blessing little ones, Lk 18:15-17. (11) Children are given by God, Ge 33:5. 48:9. Jsh 24:3. Ps +*113:9. +*127:3. Is 8:18. (12) Christ esteemed children highly, Mt 19:14. (13) Maternal love is normal, Ge 21:16. Ex 2:3. Logically, abortion does violence to maternal love. (14) If a woman injures a man's secret parts, her hand was to be cut off, Dt 25:11. If a man injured a pregnant woman, and (a) caused premature birth, but infant and mother otherwise were uninjured, he shall be punished by fine, Ex 21:22; (b) if the mother or child are injured or die, a corresponding severity of punishment, including the death penalty, was prescribed, Ex 21:23-25. Thus abortion, even accidentally induced, required the death penalty. (15) The supreme value of the individual utterly argues against any possible contrary justification for an abortion, Mt 10:31. 16:26. Mk 8:36, 37. Lk 12:7. (16) If God was utterly opposed to, and displeased with the religious sacrifice of children to Molech (2 K +21:6), the burning of which had never been commanded, authorized, or even entered into God's mind (Je 7:31), how much more must God be displeased with the destruction of the helpless unborn in the name of granting women the right to choice over their own bodies. (17) God sets great value on a child. Our response to a child is our response to God, Mt 18:1-6. Ja 1:27. (18) Conception, development in the womb, and birth are mentioned together at Ho 9:11. God has his hand in each of these stages of development, as the references show. Thus, it is unscriptural to suggest that the unborn child is not yet a person. (19) The unborn child responds to external stimuli, can hear, for the "babe leaped in her womb," Lk 1:41, 44. (20) Abortion constitutes injustice to the weak and helpless, and places one under God's curse, not his blessing, Dt 27:17, 19. (21) We are not to despise one of these little ones, Mt 18:10. (22) The virgin birth and incarnation began at the moment of the miraculous conception by the Holy Spirit in Mary's womb, Lk 1:35. Is 49:1. (23) The fact that the word "abortion" does not occur in the Bible (but see Jb 3:16) has no bearing upon the issue. "Cannibalism" is not mentioned by that term in the Bible either, and so for a host of other concepts such as millennium, rapture, trinity, infant baptism, believer's baptism, using musical instruments in New Testament worship. There is no express command or example for New Testament believers to tithe. There is no express command to worship God on Sunday, or to observe Sunday as the Sabbath. There is no express command or example in the New Testament of the baptism of adult believers that come from Christian homes. There appears to be no express command or incontrovertible example of the precise mode (i.e. immersion, pouring, or sprinkling) of Christian baptism in the New Testament. Neither is there command or example authorizing women to receive the sacrament of the Lord's supper. There is no express example or command authorizing the taking of the Lord's supper in the morning! The virgin birth is not mentioned in the Gospel of Mark. Repentance is not mentioned in the Gospel of John. The Gospel of John says nothing about Christ having cast out devils. We must use extreme caution whenever we base an argument on the alleged silence of Scripture (see 1 Ch 16:42n). Though abortion is not mentioned by name in Scripture, a prayerful and submissive, careful examination of the passages adduced above should lead to the firm conviction that abortion is not in harmony with the will of God at any time, for any reason. Yet, should a woman seek and obtain an abortion, this does not constitute the committing of the unforgivable sin (Mt 12:31n). God in his mercy is able to forgive even this sin, and welcome the truly repentant sinner to his fold (Jn 6:37. 2 C 7:10).

LUKE 2

Joseph and Mary go to Bethlehem, to be enrolled there, according to the decree of Augustus, 1-5. Jesus is there born and laid in a manger, 6, 7. An angel makes this known to shepherds; and the heavenly host praise God in their hearing, 8-14. The shepherds, finding it to be as the angel had said, report these transactions, and glorify God, 15-20. Jesus is circumcised, 21; and presented at the temple, with the accustomed sacrifice of the poor, for the purifying of Mary, 22-24. Simeon's prophecy concerning him, 25-35; and that of Anna, 36-38. He grows, and increases in wisdom, 39, 40. At twelve years of age he goes with his parents to Jerusalem, and hears and asks questions of the doctors in the temple, 41-50. He returns to Nazareth, and is subject to his parents, 51, 52.

The Holy Spirit is a person, for (1) designations proper to personality are given him. Jn 16:14, the masculine pronoun in Greek is used, in violation of Greek grammar, to emphasize He is a person. Some of the best manuscripts employ the masculine pronoun at Ep 1:14, see Tischendorf's 8th edition. (2) The title "comforter," "paraclete," cannot be taken as an abstract influence, as is evident in its use in reference to Christ in 1 J 2:1, where it is rendered "advocate." (3) The Holy Spirit is mentioned in the immediate connection with other persons, and in such a way as to imply his own personality. Mt 28:19. Jn 16:14. 17:4. Ac 15:28. 2 C 13:14. 1 P 1:1, 2. Ju 21. Ga 4:6. 2 P 1:21. (5) He is affected as a person by the acts of others. That which can be resisted, grieved, vexed, or blasphemed, must be a person, for only a person can perceive insult and be offended. The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost (Mt +*12:31n, 32n) cannot be merely blasphemy against a power or attribute of God, since in that case blasphemy against God would be a less crime than blasphemy against his power. That against which the unpardonable sin can be committed must be a person. Is 63:10. Mt 12:31. Ac 5:3, 4, 9. 7:51. Ro 8:26, 27. 15:30. Ep +√4:30. (6) References to the Holy Spirit as a person distinct from the Father and the Son cannot be explained as personification, for the personification is maintained consistently throughout Scripture, whether in prose or poetry. To suppose that the "Holy Spirit" is merely a reference to the influence or power of God, or some other attribute, will result in meaningless tautology when the terms which are wrongly held to be equivalents to the Holy Spirit are substituted in the text: Ac 10:38, "God anointed him (Jesus) with the Holy Spirit and with power"; does this mean anointed him with power and with power? So for Ro 15:13, 19. 1 C 2:4. Such a notion is contradicted by all those passages where the Holy Spirit is distinguished from his own gifts: Lk 1:35. 4:14. Ro 8:26. 1 C 12:4, 8, 11. descended. The real father of Joseph was Jacob (Mt 1:16); but having married the daughter of Heli, and being perhaps adopted by him, he was called his son, and as such was entereed in the public registers; Mary not being mentioned, because the Hebrews never permitted the name of a woman to enter their genealogical tables, but inserted her husband as the son of him who was, in reality, but his father-in-law. Hence it appears that St. Matthew, who wrote principally for the Jews, traces the pedigree of Jesus Christ from Abraham, through whom the promise was given to the Jews, to David, and from David, through the line of Solomon, to Jacob the father of Joseph, the reputed or legal father of Christ; and that St. Luke, who wrote for the Gentiles, extends his genealogy upwards from Heli the father of Mary, through the line of Nathan, to David, and from David to Abraham, and from Abraham to Adam, who was the immediate "son of God" by creation, and to whom the promise of the Savior was given in behalf of himself and all his posterity. The two branches of descent from David, by Solomon and Nathan, being thus united in the persons of Mary and Joseph, Jesus the son of Mary reunited in himself all the blood, privileges, and rights, of the whole family of David, in consequence of which he is emphatically called "the Son of David." Heli. i.e. ascending, *S#2242g. LUKE 4

Jesus fasts forty days, being tempted by the devil, and overcomes all his temptations, 1-13. He preaches in Galilee with great renown, 14, 15. He goes to Nazareth: and while his words excite admiration, the citizens are so offended, that they seek to kill him; but he avoids them by miracle, 16-30. He casts out an unclean spirit, 31-37; heals Peter's wife's mother, 38, 39; and works many other miracles, 40, 41. He preaches through the cities of Galilee, 42-44.

Wordsworth notes that "This term of three years and a half appears under that name as a type of suffering and persecution in Holy Writ. The famine in the days of Elias, when the Church of God was persecuted by Ahab and Jezebel, lasted for three years and a half (Lk 4:25). The times in which the ancient Church underwent persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes, was three years and a half (Josephus, B.J.v.9). The earthly ministry of the great head of the church, during which He endured rebuke and contradiction from the corrupt and degenerate teachers of his own people, lasted, it is probable, for three years and a half" (Greek Testament, vol. 4, p. 221). This period, equal to 1260 days or 42 months, represents "a chronological period of suffering" (Wordsworth, p. 34, on James 5:17).

Jesus teaches the people from Simon's ship, 1-3; who, by his direction and power, takes a large draught of fishes, 4-7. Simon, James, and John, follow him, 8-11. He cleanses a leper, 12-15; withdraws for prayer, 16; heals a paralytic, and silences the objections of the scribes and Pharisees against his forgiving sins, 17-26; calls Levi, and justifies his own eating with publicans and sinners, 27-32; and vindicates his disciples for not fasting, at present, after the manner of the Pharisees, and John's disciples, but foretells that they will fast after his ascension, 33-35. 2. the fishermen. This account of the calling of Peter and Andrew, James and John, will be found, as Dr. Townson observes, on a near inspection to tally marvellously with the preceding ones of Matthew and Mark; and is one of the evidences, that the Evangelists vary only in the number or choice of circumstances, and write from the same idea of the fact which they lay before us. Though St. Matthew and Mark do not exactly tell us that St. Peter was in the vessel when he was called by Christ, they signify as much in saying that he was casting a net into the sea; and though only St. Luke informs us that James and John assisted Peter in landing the fish, yet it is implied, for Mark says, that when Christ had gone a little further, he saw them mending their nets, which had been torn by the weight of fish hauled on shore. washing. The unstated premises are (1) anyone who can really forgive sins is God (implied in the rhetorical question); (2) Jesus is only a man and is not God (unstated). Therefore, claiming to be God, he is a blasphemer. The argument is valid in form, involving no fallacy, but the second premise is false, rendering the conclusion untrue. Lk 7:49. LUKE 6

Jesus vindicates his disciples from the charge of breaking the sabbath, 1-5. He shows it lawful to do good on the sabbath; and restores a withered hand, 6-10. His enemies are filled with madness, 11. He spends the night in prayer, 12; appoints the twelve apostles, 13-16; heals divers diseased persons, 17-19; pronounces blessings and woes, 20-26; and teaches love to enemies, meekness, liberality, mercy, and candor, 27-38. He shows, by parables, that knowledge is indispensably needful in teachers, and holiness in reformers, 39-42. The tree is known by his fruit, 43-45. The parable of the wise and the foolish builders, 46-49.

29. unto him. Pr ◐+*19:25. Mt +*5:39. Ro *12:17. 1 P *2:19-23. smiteth. While Jesus and the rest of Scripture certainly teaches us not to retaliate against those who have wronged us, that is not the lesson here. Jesus is not recommending for His followers an absolute policy of non-resistance. To properly understand and apply this text, it is necessary to remember the political conditions which existed in Israel at the time Jesus spoke these words. He is recommending to his hearers what was the most prudent response possible to the authority of Rome. They were to avoid bringing unnecessary suffering upon themselves, by cooperating with this foreign power in all matters which did not compromise their faith and obedience to God and his word. Jesus is hardly teaching Christians to let everyone else in the world walk all over them. He was encouraging them to make the best of a bad situation, where they could not hope to gain by resisting the occupying power. Lk 22:◐+*36, *64. 1 Ch +*12:32n. 2 Ch 18:23. Pr +*22:3. Is 50:6. The coat, kiton, was a tunic or undergarment, over which the Jews and other nations threw a cloak or gown, imation, when they went abroad or were not at work.

30. Give. This must be understood in the light of the historical situation then prevailing in Israel under Roman rule. It is not a universal command for all Christians to give away everything they own to anyone who happens to ask for it. Bertrand Russel (Why I Am Not a Christian, under the heading "The Character of Christ," p. 15) and other skeptics have taken related but similar passages (Mt 5:42. 19:21) out of context and asserted that they never met a Christian who obeyed this commandment of Christ. The writings of skeptics are full of such nonsense. Such assertions on their part serve more to show their willful ignorance than any defect in the teaching of Christ. ver. 38. LUKE 7

Jesus commends the faith, and heals the servant of a centurion, 1-10. He raises a widow's son at Nain, 11-17. He sends back the messengers of John the Baptist, with an account of his miracles, 18-23; bears testimony to John, 24-30; and exposes the perverseness of the people, respecting both John and himself, 31-35. He is entertained by a Pharisee, 36. A woman of previous bad character washes and anoints his feet, 37-39. He justifies to the Pharisee his conduct towards her by a parable, and shows that she loved much, and that her many sins were pardoned, 40-50.

We all have come short of the glory of God (Ro 3:23). Since all are sinners, we are all equally guilty before God. Being "forgiven little" must be a reference to our perception of guilt forgiven, not the actual quantity of guilt involved. In another sense, of course, just as there are degrees of reward in heaven, and degrees of punishment in hell based on differing degrees of guilt (Lk +*12:48), so here there is expressed degrees of difference of love to God based upon the amount forgiven. Notice in particular, however, the cause/effect relationship stated (Ps +✓9:10), and its bearing upon how to increase our love for God! We will increase our love to God as we increase our consciousness of the enormity of our sin. Ps 5:4. Is +*57:15. ✓64:6. Hab 1:13. Ro *3:10, 19, 23. Ga *3:22. Our Lord preaches, attended by his apostles, and by some women who ministered to him, 1-3. The parable of the sower with its interpretation, 4-15; and that of the lighted candle, 16-18. Christ's obedient disciples are his most beloved relations, 19-21. He calms a violent tempest, 22-25; and casts out the legion, 26-39. He heals the woman who had an issue of blood and raises Jairus's daughter, 40-56.

Jesus sends forth the twelve apostles, 1-6. Herod desires to see him, 7-9. The apostles return; Jesus retires with them, but the multitudes follow him, 10, 11. He feeds them by miracle, 12-17. The different opinions concerning him and Peter's confession, 18-21. He foretells his death, and warns his disciples to prepare for self-denial and sufferings, 22-27. His transfiguration, 28-36: he heals a demoniac, 37-42; again foretells his death, 43-45; checks the ambitious disputes of his disciples, 46-48; will not allow them to forbid any who "cast out devils in his name," 49, 50; reproves the fiery zeal of James and John against the Samaritans who would not receive them, 51-56; and answers some who were not disposed to follow him unreservedly and immediately, 57-62.

A "tetrarch," tetrarkees, from tetras, "four," and arkee, "government," properly signifies a prince, or ruler over a quarter of any region; and had its origin from Galatia, which was governed by four princes. In the New Testament, however, it denotes a prince, or king, who reigns over the fourth part of a former kingdom. By Herod's will his kingdom was thus divided among his sons: Archelaus had one-half, consisting of Idumea, Judea, and Samaria; Herod Antipas, one-fourth, consisting of Galilee and Perea; and Philip the remaining fourth, consisting of Batanea, Trachonitis, and Auranitis. he was perplexed. LUKE 10

Jesus sends out seventy disciples, to work miracles and preach: and pronounce a woe against Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, 1-16. The seventy return with joy at their success; and Christ instructs them in what they should rejoice, 17-20. He adores the Father, for revealing his gospel to the simple only; and declares his own personal and mediatorial authority and glory, 21, 22; and the happiness of his disciples, 23, 24. A lawyer inquires what he must do to inherit eternal life; and Jesus refers him to the law of God, 25-28; and shows him by the example of a good Samaritan, who is his neighbor, 29-37. He commends Mary's attention to his doctrine, and reproves Martha, who was "cumbered about much serving," 38-42.

Lk ◐18:31. ◐19:28. from Jerusalem. The whole way from Jericho to Jerusalem, says Josephus (Bel. l. iv. c. 8. sec. 2), is desert and rocky; and nothing can be more savage than the present aspect of these wild and gloomy solitudes; which have been so noted as the haunts of the most desperate bandits, as to obtain, in the time of Jerome, the appellation of the field of blood. Here, says Mr. Buckingham, pillage, wounds, and death, would be accompanied with double terror, from the frightful aspect of every thing around; here the unfeeling act of passing by a fellow creature in distress, strikes one with horror, as an act more than inhuman; and here too, the compassion of the good Samaritan is doubly virtuous, from the purity of the motive which must have led to it, in a spot where no eyes were fixed upon him, and from the bravery which was necessary to admit of a man's exposing himself, by such delay, to the risk of a similar fate. Jericho. Lk 18:35. 19:1. LUKE 11

Jesus teaches his disciples to pray, and encourages earnestness and importunity by two illustrations, 1-13. He casts out a devil, and exposes the absurdity and malice of those who ascribed the miracle to the power of Beelzebub, 14-26. He shows the blessedness of true piety above all external privileges, and warns the impenitent Jews, 27-36. Dining with a Pharisee, he exposes the ignorance, hypocrisy, and wickedness of the Scribes and Pharisees, 37-52; who eagerly endeavor to ensnare and accuse him, 53, 54.

Mt 6:1. of such things as ye have. or, as you are able. This is clearly the central principle underlying the New Testament standard of giving. The stress in the New Testament is upon giving as God has prospered (1 C 16:2), according to one's ability (Ac 11:29), with willingness and cheerfulness, not legalistic obligation (2 C 8:12. 9:7). We are to first take care of the needs of our own family (1 T +*5:8), and remain debt-free (Ro 13:8), though this is interpreted by some not as a stricture upon such debts as mortgages, but refers to our obligation to remain current in payments on debt. Such evidence as the New Testament furnishes shows that giving was not based on the tithe system, but on voluntary gifts and offerings for the support of those by whom they were taught (Ga 6:6. 1 T 5:17. He 13:16), in the giving of alms (Ac 9:36), and in the support of poorer brethren in the faith (Ro 12:8. 2 C 8:14. Ga 6:10). See further on ver. 42 and Mt ◐23:23n. Le 5:7. 14:30. 27:8. Dt *16:17. 42. woe. Mt 23:13, +*23n, 27. for ye tithe. Tithing is not taught in the New Testament as an obligation for the Christian under grace. It is popular, though probably not scriptural, to suggest that the Christian under grace should do more than the minimum required under law—forgetting that the Jews were obligated to pay more than one tithe, perhaps as many as three, which involved payments amounting to about one quarter of their income or more. Thus the application of the concept of "tithe" to the Christian, based upon the pattern set forth in the Old Testament, would appear to be an oversimplification of the evidence, and a misapplication of Old Testament principles. The Jewish tithes constituted their civil income tax during the theocracy. To mandate Christians of today to pay, in addition to income tax, a tithe to the church on either their gross or net earnings, is to lay upon them a burden too grievous to be borne, and is contrary to the very spirit of Christ's teaching in the parallel text (Mt +*23:4). Because we are not under law, but under grace, Christian giving must not be made a matter of legalistic obligation, lest we fall into the error of Galatianism. Paul's statement in Colossians 2:16-23 would appear to forever forbid the legalistic application of the Old Testament laws and rituals to the New Testament believer. The basis of appeal to New Testament believers under grace was in prospect of their eternal reward, what Jesus called "laying up treasure in heaven" (Mt 6:19-21. Ph +*4:17). The apostles never censured believers for their failure to pay tithes, and never commanded them to pay tithes to the New Testament church. Such a command to Jewish believers would have conflicted with their continuing obligation, while the Temple yet stood, to pay tithes to Israel. If they stopped paying tithes to the Temple, they could scarcely worship there in good standing. Would Jewish Christians be under obligation to pay tithes to both the Jewish and Christian church? LUKE 12

Jesus warns his disciples against hypocrisy, and the fear of man in confessing him. He shows the danger of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and teaches dependence on him, 1-12. He refuses to act as judge in temporal things, and warns his disciples against covetousness, by the parable of a rich man suddenly torn by death from all his purposed and expected enjoyments, 13-21. He cautions them against anxious cares and exhorts them to seek spiritual blessings, 22-34, and to be always ready for the coming of their Lord, 35-40. He instructs and warns his ministers by the parable of a faithful, and of a wicked steward, 41-48. He predicts the divisions which his gospel would occasion, 49-53; reproves those who knew not the signs of the times, 54-56; and counsels the people to seek reconciliation to God without delay, 57-59.

If hell is merely the grave, then what is the meaning of the statement God "hath power to cast into hell"? Clearly this passage is not affirming God's power to cast bodies into graves, but is stating his power to cast into hell (gehenna) after he hath killed. From the parallel passage (Mt 10:28) it is clear that "killed" has reference to the body, not the soul. "Casting into gehenna" must then refer to the soul or spirit, not the body, and proves that life and consciousness continue after the physical death of the body, otherwise what is there to fear? That body and soul are together in hell (Mt 10:28) proves that the resurrection is viewed as already in that case taken place, in order that they may be there together. Ja 4:12. power. Ps 9:17. Gr. analusee. A. B. Bruce notes "the figure is taken from sailors making the return voyage to the port whence they had sailed" (Expositor's Greek Testament, vol. 1, p. 560). M. R. Vincent states "The verb means, originally, to unloose: so of vessels, to unloose their moorings and go to sea. Of departing generally. This is its sense in the only other passage where it occurs, Philippians 1:23, "having a desire to depart, or break up; the metaphor being drawn from breaking up an encampment." Compare departure (analuseos), 2 T 4:6. The rendering return is a kind of inference from this: when he shall leave the wedding and return" (Word Studies in the New Testament, vol. 1, p. 370). The TDNT notes "In the NT its predominant meaning is 'to leave.' It is used euphemistically for death in kindly concealment of its terror, i.e., 'to depart' (Ph 1:23). 'analusis' accordingly means 'leaving,' 'departing' (2 T 4:6). The special sense of 'to return' occurs at Lk 12:36, though here, too, 'analusee' might mean leaving, with the thought of return only in the ensuing 'when he cometh and knocketh.' " In a footnote further reference is made to Wisdom 2:1; 2 Maccabees 8:25; 12:7, with the added comment "It is not clear how 'analuo' could come to mean 'to return'; perhaps it has something to do with the unyoking of draught animals" (vol. 4, p. 337). "The antithesis in this passage," observes Bp. Jebb (Sacred Literature, p. 201), "has prodigious moral depth: he who sins against knowledge, though his sins were only sins of omission, shall be beaten with many stripes; but he who sins without knowledge, though his sins were sins of commission, shall be beaten with only few stripes. Mere negligence against the light of conscience, shall be severely punished, while an offense, in itself comparatively heinous, if committed ignorantly, and without light, shall be mildly dealt with." The passage teaches degrees of punishment in the future life, and shows that those who have never heard the gospel will receive less a penalty than those who rejected its light. But both classes of servants will have their portion with the unbelievers (ver. 47), and whether they sinned "in the law" or "without law," shall perish without law (Ro 2:12). For the absolute justice of God (Ge +*18:25) to be effected, life after death, and conscious punishment of unbelievers is necessary (See Ezk 18:4n, 20n). ver. 40. Am ◐+*4:12. He +*9:27. shall. Jesus shows that calamities are no proof of peculiar guilt; and exhorts his hearers to repent, if they would escape impending ruin, 1-5. The parable of a barren fig tree, which was to be cut down, 6-9. Jesus heals a woman who had been long bowed down and silences the objection of the hypocritical ruler of the synagogue, 10-17; He compares the kingdom of God to a grain of mustard seed, 18, 19, and to leaven, 20, 21. Being asked whether few should be saved, he warns the people to "strive to enter in at the strait gate," before it was finally shut, 22-30. He will not be diverted from his course by the threatenings of Herod, 31-33. He predicts, and laments over, the approaching desolations of Jerusalem, 34, 35.

It is uncertain to what event our Lord refers; but it is probable that they were the followers of Judas Gaulonitis, who opposed paying tribute to Caesar and submitting to the Roman government. A party of them coming to Jerusalem during one of the great festivals, and presenting their oblations in the court of the temple, Pilate treacherously sent a company of soldiers, who slew them, and "mingled their blood with their sacrifices" (Josephus, Ant. l. xviii). Mt 12:2, 9-21. Mk 6:1-6. Jn 5:5, etc. 7:21, etc. 9:16. From these narratives we "find (1) That our Lord always honored and kept the Sabbath; (2) That He performed miracles of healing upon it, only when important occasions arose, and in order to confirm His doctrine, and ensure faith in His messiahship; (3) That these acts were never in violation, but entirely in accordance with the Mosaic law; (4) That they were especially designed to relieve the institution from the oppressive traditions of the Scribes and Pharisees; (5) That no objections were taken against them at first, and that the cavils afterwards raised were only pretences to cover their hatred to His divine mission; (6) That our Lord's defences of Himself and His disciples proceeded on what had ever been the real import of the fourth commandment, though misunderstood; and assumed that the Sabbath itself was of perpetual obligation; (7) That all this is confirmed by our Lord's caution concerning the flight of his disciples at the destruction of Jerusalem, Mt 24:20; and (8) By the conduct and doctrines of his inspired apostles at the first promulgation of the gospel—then it will be admitted that our Savior, so far from relaxing the fourth commandment, or abrogating the essential law of the Sabbath, vindicated it, established it, and left it in more than its original authority and glory" (Daniel Wilson, The Lord's Day, p. 70). Wilson argues "That nothing is abrogated under the Christian dispensation with respect to the Sabbath, but those temporary and figurative enactments which constituted the peculiarities of the Jewish age" (p. 80, 81). Wilson believes that the distinguishing promise of the New Covenant is the promise to write God's laws into our minds, and upon our hearts (He 8:10), taking "my laws" to be a reference to the decalogue. This is compared to 2 C 3:3, where Paul mentions "tables of stone" (taken to be the two tables of the ten commandments) and "fleshy tables of the heart." Wilson argues that in the transfer of these tables of the law to our hearts by the Holy Spirit, not one of the commandments is lost in the transfer (pp. 85-87). Ps 119:128. Is +*58:13n. Ro 7:22. 1 J 5:3. Yet, though Wilson alludes (on p. 83) to Col 2:14-17, he really skirts this one text which, above all others, seems clearly to remove the Sabbath commandment as an obligation to Christians, with the mere assertion that "nothing but the ceremonies and shadows connected with it are dispersed; the substance still remaining" (p. 84). Jesus, on the sabbath, heals a man who had the dropsy and justifies himself in so doing, 1-6. By parables he teaches humility, 7-11; and hospitality to the poor, 12-14. The parable of the great supper, 15-24. The necessity of self denial and renouncing the world, in order to be the disciples of Christ, inculcated, and illustrated by similes, 25-33. The worthlessness of salt which has lost its savor, 34, 35.

Similar admonitions to this of our Lord, also occur in the Rabbinical writers. Rabbi Akiba said, Go two or three seats lower than the place that belongs to thee, and sit there till they say unto thee, Go up higher; but do not take the uppermost seat, lest they say unto thee, Come down: for it is better they should say unto thee, Go up, go up, than they should say, Go down, go down. LUKE 16

The parable of the prudent response of the business manager to the unjust accusations of his wealthy employer, and the instructions deduced from it, 1-13. Jesus reproves the hypocrisy of the Pharisees who deride him, and speaks of the introduction of the gospel, 14-18. The account of the rich man and Lazarus, 19-31.

1. a certain. Mt 18:23, 24. 25:14, etc. a steward. Lk 8:3. *12:42. Ge 15:2. 43:19. 1 Ch 28:1. 1 C 4:1, 2. T 1:7. 1 P 4:10. rich man. Ja *2:6-9. +*5:1-6. accused. Gr. diaballo, *S#1225g, only here. The word means to bring charges with hostile intent against someone, whether falsely and slanderously or justly, but maliciously and insidiously. The word expresses "giving currency to a damaging insinuation" (Thayer, Lexicon, p. 340a). Here it is most probable that the charges were false and slanderous, and it is not the steward but the rich employer who is unjust. The employer's injustice involves malicious gossip to spread an unfounded and slanderous accusation of unfaithfulness, which is used as a pretext for justifying his dismissal of his accountant. This graphic portrayal shows our Lord's sensitivity to labor/management problems, and his firm stance for justice. Le +*19:15. Pr 17:4, 15. +*18:13. Jn +*7:24, 51. Ja *2:6-9. wasted. ver. 19. From this answer of Abraham we learn that the Sacred Writings contain such proofs of a divine origin, that though all the dead were to rise, the proofs could not be more evident, nor the conviction greater; and that to escape eternal perdition, and obtain eternal glory, a man is to receive the testimonies of God, and to walk according to their dictates. LUKE 17

Jesus teaches his disciples, carefully to avoid giving offences, 1, 2; and to forgive one another, 3, 4. Being asked by the apostles to increase their faith, he shows the power of faith, 5, 6; and man's best obedience has no merit with God, 7-10. He cleanses ten lepers; of whom one only, and he a Samaritan, returns to give thanks to God, 11-19. The spiritual nature of the kingdom of God, 20-22. Gr. parataresis, peculiar to Luke, and employed (as also tarasis) to denote medical observation of disease (see William K. Hobart, Medical Language of Luke, p. 153). There is no basis for understanding this word to mean "outward show." While the kindred term parateerein often in the New Testament occurs in a context implying hostility (Mk 3:2. Lk 6:7. 14:1. 20:20. Ac 9:24. Ga 4:10), yet the word itself does not possess this connotation, but "was employed in medical language to express close observation of the symptoms of an illness—the constitution of a patient, etc." (Hobart, p. 153). Robertson gives "watching either assiduously like the physician at the bedside or insidiously with evil intent" (Word Pictures, vol. 2, on Luke 6:7, p. 81). In context, Jesus is answering the question as to when the kingdom of God would come. The point Jesus makes here is that the time of the appearance of his kingdom cannot be discerned by watching for signs of its approach. The advent of the kingdom is as sudden and unexpected as the Second Coming of Christ, and is postponed until then. Only God knows the precise timing of these events (Mk +*13:32. Ac +*1:6, 7). ver. 23, 24. Lk 12:31, 32. 16:16n. Da 2:44. Zc *4:6. Jn *18:36. Ro *14:17. 1 C 4:20. Col 1:13. He 12:22, 23. Re 1:9.

This passage, especially the marginal reading "among you," has been the subject of much controversy. Those who favor the marginal reading argue that Christ could scarcely have said of the Pharisees he was addressing that the kingdom of God was within them. But Robertson cites authority for suggesting that there is no clear instance where entos means among. The only other N.T. occurrence of the word at Mt 23:26 necessarily requires the meaning "within" ("the inside of the cup"). Robertson comments "What Jesus says to the Pharisees is that they, as others, are to look for the kingdom of God within themselves, not in outward displays and supernatural manifestations. It is not a localized display 'Here' or 'There.' It is in this sense that in Luke 11:20 Jesus spoke of the kingdom of God as 'come upon you,' speaking to the Pharisees" (Word Pictures, vol. 2, p. 229). Lk √11:20. Mt 12:28. Jn 1:26. 12:35. More consistently with the teaching of Scripture, Peters states: "Surely He did not mean that the Pharisees who addressed Him and to whom He spoke, had the Kingdom within them individually, personally. The phrase 'within you' is susceptible of an easy and consistent solution" (Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, Proposition 110, Observation 2, p. 41). The kingdom is covenanted to the Jewish nation; it is an elect nation; the kingdom belonged so exclusively to them that the public ministry of John the Baptist, Jesus and the disciples, was confined to that nation. The kingdom was tendered to the Jewish nation; on its refusal (through its representative men) to repent, the kingdom is postponed, and those who are to receive it as an inheritance with Christ are grafted into that elect nation. These considerations show at once how this kingdom was "within" them. It was truly "within" the nation, it being the elect nation (Peters, Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, p. 42).

Whatever interpretation and application is made here of the term "body," must consistently apply equally to the term "carcass" used in Mt +*‖24:28. To suggest the body is that of Christ, or believers, or the nation Israel, does not harmonize with Scripture. Rather, suggesting that "body" and "carcass" refer to the defeated armies gathered against Jerusalem at the end of the tribulation described in Ezk 39:17-21, seems to fit precisely, and is no doubt the event Christ is alluding to, reinforced by the mention of "eagles" directly in this connection, for the "feathered fowl" are invited to feast upon the carnage after that great battle (Ezk 39:17). To suggest that eagles here represent the Romans is not supported by the context, for the Romans are not otherwise alluded to in this passage, and the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 is not the subject of this prophecy, for here these events take place at the second advent, when "the Son of man shall be revealed" (ver. 30). Neither is it necessary to regard the eagles as being angels, nor is it necessary to suggest that they are the saints (the position taken by Peters, Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, p. 320). They are literal eagles, birds of prey, gathered to feast literally upon the dead bodies left after the great battle of Ezk 39:4-6. Peters sees here the translation or rapture of the saints, which my notes (on ver. 34 and Mt 24:41) conclusively show to be a mistaken view. Peters further errs here when he takes the question "Where, Lord" to mean "i.e. when shall this be witnessed or made known" (vol. 2, p. 320, 321). But the question is not when, but where, and Peters' next statement that "the evidence of such a removal will be openly shown when these very ones shall be gathered together at the overthrow of Antichrist" (p. 321), citing Zc 14, Re 19, Jl 3, in "his efforts to crush the Jews at Jerusalem," in a "mighty confederation against the truth" (Peters, Theocratic Kingdom, vol. 2, p. 105), is correct in placing these events at Jerusalem, but incorrect in taking this to be the translation of the saints. "In comparing prophecy it is distinctly announced that he shall unite nations and armies into an expedition into Palestine and a siege against Jerusalem, Dan 11, last part and 12:1; Is 14:24-27; Jl 3; Zc 14; Re 14:20; Re 16:16; Ezk 38:8-19, and that he is to be destroyed by a revelation of Christ in Palestine, Ezk 38:21-23; 2 Th 2:8; Re 19:11-20, etc." (Peters, vol. 2, p. 105). This passage therefore answers the question where, not when, for Christ already informed them as to when these events would take place (ver. 30, at his advent). The eagles are not the saints, and there is not a reference here to the rapture or translation of the saints, for the rapture or translation of the saints logically must be prior to Christ's revelation in power and glory with his saints (Ps +*149:5-9. Zc +*14:5). the eagles. Dt ◐28:49. Jb *39:27-30. Pr 30:17. Is ◐+40:31. Ezk √39:17-21. Ho ◐8:1. Hab 1:8. Mt +‖24:28. Re ◐4:7. *19:17-21. be gathered together. 1 S √17:44, 46. Ezk √39:4, 17.

LUKE 18

The parable of the unjust judge and the importunate widow, showing that men should pray without fainting, 1-8. That of the Pharisee and the publican, 9-14. Jesus receives and blesses little children, showing that his disciples should be like them, 15-17. He detects the covetousness of a young ruler; shows the dangers of riches; and promises great rewards to those, who forsake things present for his sake, 18-30. He foretells his own sufferings, death, and resurrection, 31-34. He opens the eyes of a blind man, 35-43.

This is the reading of a few MSS. but it evidently appears to be a gloss. It was a common mode of expression among the Jews. Hence Rabbi Shesheth said to Rabbi Amram, who had advanced an absurdity, "Perhaps thou art one of the Pambidithians, who can make an elephant pass through the eye of a needle." Mt 23:24.

LUKE 19

The conversion of Zaccheus the publican, 1-10. The parable of a nobleman going to receive a kingdom, and entrusting money to his servants; with the account required of them; and the punishment of his enemies, 11-27. Jesus enters Jerusalem riding on an ass, amidst the acclamations of the multitude, 28-38. He answers the objections of the Pharisees, 39, 40; weeps over the city, and predicts its destruction, 41-44; drives the traders from the temple, 45, 46; and teaches daily there, while the rulers seek to kill him, 47, 48.

LUKE 20

Jesus answers those who demand by what authority he acts, 1-8; speaks the parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, 9-18; shows that tribute should be paid to Caesar, 19-26; confutes the Sadducees, concerning the resurrection of the dead; and puts all his adversaries to silence, 27-40; inquires how Christ was both David's Son, and David's Lord, 41-44; and warns the people against the ambitious and hypocritical Scribes, 45-47.

"They who lose their lives for the sake of God, live unto God, as do Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the rest of the patriarchs." Not less remarkable is a passage in Shemoth Rabba (fol. 159.1), "Why doth Moses say (Ex 32:13), Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob? R. Abin saith, The Lord said unto Moses, I look for ten men from thee, as I looked for that number in Sodom. Find me out ten righteous persons among the people, and I will not destroy thy people. Then saith Moses, Behold, here am I, and Aaron, Eleazar and Ithamar, Phinehas, and Caleb, and Joshua; but, saith God, there are but seven: where are the other three? When Moses knew not what to do, he saith, O Eternal God, do those live who are dead? Yes, saith God. Then saith Moses, If those that are dead do live, remember Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." LUKE 21

Christ prefers the widow's two mites to the large offerings of the rich, 1-4. He foretells the destruction of the temple, 5, 6; the signs and calamities which would precede and accompany it, giving suitable exhortations and promises, 7-19; and the destruction and continued desolations of Jerusalem, 20-24. The signs of his coming, 25-33. He exhorts to watchfulness and prayer, 34-36. He daily preaches at the temple, and retires at night to the mount of Olives, 37, 38.

21. flee. Accordingly, when Cestius Gallus came against Jerusalem, and unexpectedly raised the siege, Josephus (Bel. l. ii. c. 19) states that many of the noble Jews departed out of the city, as out of a sinking ship; and when Vespasian afterwards drew towards it, a great multitude fled to the mountains. And we learn from Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. l. iii. c. 5) and Epiphanius (Adver. Nazar. l. i. tom. 2), that at this juncture, all who believed in Christ left Jerusalem, and removed to Pella, and other places beyond Jordan; and so escaped the general shipwreck of their country, that we do not read of one who perished in Jerusalem. Those who perished in the siege were 1,100,000, besides vast numbers who were slain at other times and places; and nearly 100,000 more were taken and sold for slaves; and their nation has been dispersed in all countries for upwards of 1700 years, while their city has been trodden under foot of the Romans, Saracens, Mamalukes, Franks, and Turks, who possess it to this day. In 1948 Israel became a nation, and in 1967, after the "Six Day War," once again possessed Jerusalem, an event which may have prophetic significance in the light of this passage. LUKE 22

The priests and scribes determine to put Jesus to death, 1, 2. Judas bargains to betray him, 3-6. Two apostles prepare the passover, and Jesus eats it with the twelve, 7-18. He institutes the Lord's supper, 19, 20; points out the traitor, 21-23; checks the ambition of the disciples, and promises them an honorable station in his kingdom, 24-30. He shows Peter that Satan desired to sift him and his brethren; but that his faith should not fail, though he would thrice deny him, 31-34, and instructs his disciples about their approaching dangers, 35-38. His agony and prayer in the garden, and his warnings to the apostles, 39-46. He is betrayed and apprehended, 47-49; he heals him whose ear Peter cut off, 50-53; and is led to the high priest, 54. Peter thrice denies him, but bitterly repents, 55-62. Jesus is mocked, insulted, and condemned, 63-71.

Dr. Mead observes from Galen, "Cases sometimes happen, in which, through mental pressure, the pores may be so dilated that the blood may issue from them, so that there may be a bloody sweat;" and Bp. Pearce gives an instance from Thaunus, of an Italian gentleman being so distressed through the fear of death, that his body was covered with a bloody sweat. Our Lord was in the bloom of life, and in perfect health, and it is evident the fear of death could have no place in his mind; and consequently this must have been produced by a preternatural cause. William K. Hobart observes, "The medical language employed affords internal evidence of the authenticity of verses 43, 44 of Luke xxii., which are omitted in some MSS. (Medical Language of Luke, p. 85). Hobart notes that there is in Luke's account, whether parallel with the other synoptic gospels or not, "a class of words running through the Gospel of St. Luke which does not occur in other New Testament writings, but which is in common use in Greek medical language," even apart from those portions which record the miracles of healing (p. 85).

45. sleeping. Mt *26:40, 43. Mk 13:36. *14:37, 40, 41. for sorrow. Hobart notes this expression as a medical term employed exclusively in Luke's account, for only Luke assigns a cause for their sleepiness. The other evangelists merely say "their eyes were heavy," but Luke states that it arose from anxiety. It is evident that their condition was owing to their anxiety for their Lord, coupled with the want of their usual rest (Medical Language, p. 84).

One was before the Jewish Sanhedrin, whose proper province it was to try such as were accused as false prophets or blasphemers. This was a kind of ecclesiastical court. The other, with which the next chapter opens, was before Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea at that time; he principally took cognizance of criminal things, such especially as concerned the peace of the country, considered as part of the Roman empire. But heteros, as Weststein shows, may be, and is in innumerable instances applied to a female; and Matthew says, "she said to them that were there," and Mark, "she began to say to them that stood by." So that the maid gave the information to those around her, and some man charged Peter with it. LUKE 23

Jesus is accused before Pilate, who sends him to Herod, 1-7. He is silent before Herod, who mocks him and sends him back, 8-11. Pilate and Herod are made friends, 12. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jesus, is yet prevailed on by clamor to give him up to crucifixion, and to release Barabbas, 13-25. Jesus is led away, Simon of Cyrene bearing his cross, 26. To the women and others who bewailed him, he predicts the calamities coming on the Jews, 27-31. He is crucified between two thieves, and prays for his murderers, 32-34. The people, rulers, priests, and soldiers, and one of the thieves, scoff at him, 35-38. The other thief rebukes his companion, and confesses Christ, who promises that he shall "that day be with him in paradise," 39-43. The land is darkened, the veil of the temple rent, and Jesus, commending his spirit into the hand of his Father, expires, 44-46. The centurion confesses him; and the people with his acquaintance retire, smiting their breasts at what they had seen, 47-49. Joseph of Arimathea asks for the body and buries it, 50-54. The women prepare spices; but rest on the sabbath, according to the commandment, 55, 56.

Our Lord here refers to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the final desolation of the Jewish state; an evil associated with so many miseries, that sterility, which had otherwise been considered an approbrium, was accounted a circumstance most felicitous. No history can furnish us with a parallel to the calamities and miseries of the Jews; raping and murder, famine and pestilence, within; fire and sword, and all the terrors of war, without. Our Savior himself wept at the foresight of these calamities; and it is almost impossible for persons of any humanity to read the relation of them in Josephus without weeping also. He might justly affirm, "if the misfortunes of all, from the beginning of the world, were compared with those of the Jews, they would appear much inferior in the comparison" (Proem. sec. 4). "A common method of dealing with this text is by altering the punctuation. They would have us read the words, 'Verily I say unto thee today: thou shalt be with me in Paradise.' But the order of the words in the sentence is all against them. With the emphasis they give it, seemeron 'today' should precede the verb. As compare in the Greek, Mt 16:3; Mk 14:30; Lk 19:5, 9; Ac 13:33; He 3:7, 15. But, beside this, the Lord is answering a prayer in which a time wherein the thief sought to be remembered was expressed. He had said, 'Lord, remember me when Thou comest in Thy kingdom.' The Lord says virtually, 'You shall not wait for that: today you shall be with Me.' This is the simple, intelligible reason for the specification of time: 'Today,' not when I come merely, 'shalt thou be with me in Paradise' " (F. W. LUKE 24

Two angels inform the women at the sepulchre, that Jesus is risen, 1-7. They report it to the others, but are not believed, 8-11. Peter goes to the sepulchre, 12. Jesus appears, as a stranger, to two disciples when going to Emmaus; converses with them, explains the scriptures, and then discovers himself, but disappears, 13-32. They return, and report it to the eleven, who inform them that Jesus had appeared to Simon, 33-35. He joins the company; shows them his hands and his side, and eats with them, 36-43. He reminds them of his words concerning his suffering and resurrection, "opens their understandings," interprets the scriptures, and commissions them to preach his gospel to the nations, beginning at Jerusalem, 44-48. He promises the Holy Spirit, leads them forth to Bethany, blesses them, and ascends into heaven, 49-51. They worship him with joy, and praise God at the temple continually, 52, 53.

1. upon. Mt *28:1-8. Mk *16:1, 2. Jn *20:1, 2. first day. "The first day of the week is the day after the Sabbath, or Seventh Day, and is therefore the Eighth Day. Indeed, as the number Seven is the Sabbatical number, or number of Rest, in Holy Scripture, so Eight may be called the Dominical. Seven is expressive of rest in Christ; Eight is expressive of Resurrection to new life and glory in Him. In accordance with this principle, the Eighth Day was the Day of Circumcision (cp. Lk 1:59. Ph 3:5),—the type of Christian Baptism,—the Sacrament of Resurrection,—in which we rise from the death of sin to newness of Life in Him. Our Lord received the name Jesus on the eighth day (Lk 2:21); He as our Jesus, Joshua, Savior, brings us to the heavenly Canaan,—to the glory of the Resurrection. The Name Jesus, Savior, given to Him on the Eighth Day, makes in the universal language (Greek) the number eight in hundreds, tens, and units,—888. The great Day of the Feast of Tabernacles—the type of His Incarnation—was the Eighth (John 7:37). And in His Sermon on the Mount He pronounces eight Beatitudes describing the way that leads to the fruition of heavenly glory. Hence we also find, that the Transfiguration—which was a figure and a glimpse of the future glory of the bodies of the Saints after the Resurrection—is mentioned as having taken place eight days after our Lord had said, "There be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the kingdom of God" (Lk 9:27)" (Wordsworth, Greek Testament, vol. 1, p. 252). Ac 20:7. 1 C 16:2. Re 1:10. they came. ver. 10. Lk 8:2, 3. 23:55, 56. Mt 27:55, 56. Mk 15:40. bringing. To embalm the body of our Lord; which shows that they had no hope of his resurrection on the third day. Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea had done this before the body was laid in the tomb; but on account of the approach of the sabbath, it was probably hastily and imperfectly performed; and hence a second embalming would be deemed necessary, for which purpose the spices now brought by the women were intended. Mary Magdalene and the other Mary saw only one angel in white, sitting on the stone which he had rolled from the door of the sepulchre; but the women here mentioned saw no angel till they had entered the sepulchre, when two appeared to them in "garments shining like lightning," as the word imports. This, and several other variations, show there were two distinct companies of women, who went successively to the tomb on the morning of the resurrection; which renders the whole account clear and consistent (See Note on Mk 16:2). It has generally been confounded with Emmaus, a city of Judah, afterwards called Nicopolis; but Reland has satisfactorily shown that they were distinct places; the latter, according to the old Itinerary of Palestine, being situated 10 miles from Lydda, and 22 miles from Jerusalem. D'Arvieux (vol. vii. p. 259) states, that going from Jerusalem to Rama, he took the right from the high road to Rama, at some little distance from Jerusalem, and "travelled a good league over rocks and flint stones, to the end of the valley of terebinthine trees," until he reached Emmaus; which "seems, by the ruins which surround it, to have been formerly larger than it was in our Savior's time. The Christians, while masters of the Holy Land, re-established it a little, and built several churches. Emmaus was not worth the trouble of having come out of the way to see it."

That Jesus was unrecognized is perfectly understandable. I myself did not recognize my own father when I went to the airport to pick him up, though I had seen him just days before, and had to have it announced over the public address system where I was waiting to meet him—and I had walked right by where he was seated, and did not see him, nor did he see me. I saw my next door neighbor several times in the grocery store just yesterday, and did not recognize her until she started to talk to my wife. We often fail to recognize what we do not expect to see. Furthermore, Jesus evidently was not of such a singular appearance as to be instantly recognizable, as Peter apparently was (Lk 22:56), for the chief priests and scribes required Judas to identify him in the crowd. Even before his resurrection Jesus was unrecognized, on occasion, for he apparently was able to lose himself in the crowd, and so escape threatened destruction. Isaiah distinctly predicts that his appearance would not be remarkable. Therefore, it is not necessary to assume, as some do, that Christ "materialized" and "dematerialized" his body in order to be seen by men, and assumed different forms to different people after the resurrection, as though he did not have his own permanent resurrected and glorified body. Luke reports Christ emphatically declaring, ver. 39, in language which could not be stronger, that He himself was there before them in his own physical body. Lk +*4:30. Is +*53:2. Mt 26:48. From Mk 16:13, we learn that the apostles did not believe the testimony even of the two disciples from Emmaus, while it is here asserted they were saying, when they entered the room, "The Lord is risen," etc. This difficulty is removed by rendering interrogatively, "Has the Lord risen," etc.? Yet the presence of the word "indeed" indicates that this added evidence of the two disciples was the turning point which convinced the rest that the Lord was risen indeed. the Lord. JOHN

The Word who was in the beginning with God and was God, is the Creator of all things, has life in himself and is the Light of men, 1-5. John a witness to that true and only Light, which was unknown to the world which he made and not received by his own, except by such as were born of God, and these were adopted as his children, 6-13. The Word became flesh and displayed his glory as the only begotten of the Father, 14. John testifies to his superior dignity and fulness whence all receive; for grace and truth came by him, 15-17. He declares the invisible God to men, 18. Various testimonies of John to the Pharisees, concerning himself and Jesus, 19-28. John points him out as "the lamb of God" and "the Son of God" who "baptizeth with the Holy Ghost," 29-34. Two of John's disciples follow Jesus, 35-39. Andrew, one of them, brings Peter to him, whom he surnames Cephas, 40-42. Philip is called, who brings Nathanael, 43-45. Jesus declares him to be "an Israelite indeed:" and he confesses Jesus as "the Son of God and the King of Israel," 46-49. Jesus promises that he shall see still greater things, 50, 51.

By Hyperbaton, the subject, "the Word," being defined by the article which is prefixed to it, can be placed at the end of two of the clauses, and in each case we are to put the stress on "the Word." ℳ77, Ex +3:19. Bengel notes that "when the predicate precedes the subject, there is an epitasis (an emphatic enlargement of the subject)" as also in Jn 4:24 (New Testament Word Studies, vol. 1, p. 543). He *1:8-13. 2 P √1:1g. 1 J 5:7, 20. was God. Not "a god," for the lack of the Greek article here does not make "God" indefinite but determines which term ("Word" or "God") is to be the subject of the linking verb "was." Greek word order is somewhat more flexible than English, for in English statement sentences the predicate nominative always follows the linking verb. But the literal order of the Greek words here is "and God was the Word" (kai theos een o logos), the subject "Word" follows the verb and the predicate nominative "God" precedes the verb, the reverse of English word order. Since this clause uses a linking verb, both the subject and the predicate nominative are in the nominative case, so case endings do not serve to identify the subject in this construction; rather, the article "the" points out the subject of the clause. Greek uses the article "the" to accomplish what English does by word order. Thus, if John had placed the article "the" before "God," the meaning would be "God was the Word;" if he had placed the article "the" before both "Word" and "God," the meaning would be convertible or reversible: it would mean equally "God was the Word," and "The Word was God," but this John did not do. By placing the article "the" before "Word," "Word" must be the subject of the linking verb "was," and the statement can only be rendered "the Word was God." Just as mistaken is the rendering "the Word was divine," for "God," lacking the article, is not thereby an adjective, or rendered qualitative when it precedes a linking verb followed by a noun which does have the article. See the note on Mt 27:54 for scholarly documentation and an explanation of this construction known technically as the anarthrous noun. Translators and translations which choose to render this phrase "a god" or "divine" are motivated by theological, not grammatical, considerations. The phrase "a god" is particularly objectionable, because it makes Christ a lesser god, which is polytheism, and contrary to the express declaration of Scripture elsewhere (Dt 32:39). For clearly if Christ is "a god," then he must be either a "true god" or a "false god." If "true," we assert polytheism; if "false," he is unworthy of our credence. John's high view of Christ expressed throughout his gospel, climaxing in the testimony of Thomas, who addressed Christ as "my Lord and my God," is asserted from this opening statement, "the Word was God." There is no legitimate basis for understanding his declaration in any lesser sense than affirming the full deity of our Savior. Jn √5:18. 8:+*35, 58, 59. +*10:30, 33, ◐+34. 14:7. +√20:28. Dt +*32:39. Faith is always in motion towards Him" (From Eternity to Eternity, p. 45). Sauer notes the significance of other Greek prepositions and grammatical structure related to saving faith: (2) We believe in him (Col 1:4), Gr. en, denoting where, as a determined place, our faith is placed: we are in him, "in Christ" (Ro 8:1n). (3) We believe upon (Gr. epi) him, Ac 16:31. Ac 2:38n. (4) We believe him (2 T 1:12), "faith" in Greek is joined to the dative case of the person trusted, signifying "He is the person to whom our faith refers and in whom personally it centers" (From Eternity to Eternity, p. 46). his name. ƒ144A4, Ge +4:26. ƒ121T1, Dt +28:58. Scrivener in his Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament, vol. 2, pp. 358-360, discusses the MSS. evidence and favors the Received Text, "son." Dean Burgon attributes the reading God to the heretical Valentius, who denied the identity of the Word with the Son of God (J. W. Burgon, The Causes of the Corruption of the Traditional Text of the Holy Gospels, p. 215). Edward Miller comments that this text figured in the Arian controversy. Arius reads "God," while his opponents read "son." "It is curious that with this history admirers of the Vatican and Siniaticus MSS. should extol their reading over the traditional reading on the score of orthodoxy. Heresy had and still retains associations which cannot be ignored: in this instance some of the orthodox weakly played into the hands of heretics. The reading 'son' is established by unanswerable evidence. None may read Holy Scripture just as the idea strikes them" (Miller in Burgon, Causes, p. 217, 218). That this matter is still of contemporary interest may be seen in discussion of the reading in Metzger's Textual Commentary, p. 198. Note particularly the dissenting voice of Allen Wikgren, who indicates his doubt that John would have written "only begotten God." See the note in the NIV Study Bible, which favors, if not extols, the reading "only begotten God" as a clear statement of the deity of Christ. Clearly the Arians and their modern counterparts do not find any such significance in this textual reading. Ps 2:7. Pr 30:4. Is *9:6. 1 J *4:14. in the bosom. ƒ22A19, Ps 74:11. Jn 13:23. 14:6, 9. Here, this sentence is added to remind us of the fact that the Pharisees made a great point of baptism, which compelled them therefore to acknowledge the baptism of John to be a matter of great importance. JOHN 2

At a marriage in Cana, Jesus turns water into wine, 1-11. He goes to Capernaum, 12; and thence to Jerusalem, where he drives the buyers and sellers out of the temple, 13-17. He predicts his own death and resurrection as the proof of his authority, 18-22. Many believe in him because of his miracles, but he does not commit himself to them, as "knowing what was in man," 23-25.

6. six waterpots. Probably several were borrowed from friends or neighbors to make up this number to accommodate the guests at the wedding. In volume they are thought to have contained from 20 to 30 American gallons apiece. Thomas O. Summers remarks that they contained "enough for sprinkling purposes, but not for immersion" and were used to contain water for baptisms, which the Jews understood to mean purifications (Baptism, p. 84). These baptisms "were washings or purifications by water, poured or sprinkled on the hands, or entire persons, or on the furniture, for which ceremonial purposes vessels of water, containing two or three firkins apiece, were kept in the house, as St. John expresses it—'after the manner of purifying of the Jews.' And yet some talk about their effecting this 'purifying' by plunging—the word baptismos meaning nothing else—as if men, women, and children, cups, pots, brazen vessels, and beds, were, or could be, plunged into these waterpots!" JOHN 3

Nicodemus comes to Jesus by night, 1, 2. Jesus shows him the indispensable necessity of being born again, 3-11. He shows the difference between earthly and heavenly things, 12, 13, and speaks of his own death and of faith in him, 14, 15. The great love of God, in giving his only begotten Son to redeem the world, 16, 17. Unbelief is the great cause of men's condemnation, 18-21. Jesus baptizes in Judea and John at Aenon, 22-24. John instructs his disciples who were jealous for his honor, concerning the glory of Christ, the salvation of those who believe in him and the wrath of God abiding on unbelievers, 25-36.

This figure gives the meaning, "born of water, even the spirit." That only one thing is meant by the two words is clear from verses 6 and 8, where only the Spirit (the one thing) is mentioned. The figure may also be understood to mean "born of spiritual water," where the "spiritual water" is, by the figure metonymy, put for the Holy Spirit himself, as is clear from Jn 7:38, 39. The reference is to the real baptism by the Holy Spirit which is the one indispensable condition of entering the kingdom of God (Ro 8:9. 1 C 12:13), not to the water of ritual baptism (Ac 1:5n). of the. Jn *1:13. *6:63. Jn 5:28. 6:61-63. 1 J 3:13. Ye must. This absolute requirement for salvation is nowhere retracted in the pages of scripture and is nowhere limited to a particular favored group. To allege that this requirement applies only to a select few, the "little flock," who are the 144,000 (Re 7:4n), who alone can have a "heavenly hope" (Re +7:4n), in contrast with the rest of mankind who can only aspire to an "earthly hope" (Re +7:4n), is a human addition to the word of God which finds no support in the Bible. For any group to teach this viewpoint will certainly result in the loss of salvation for any who are led to believe this false doctrine. ver. √3. Jn 4:24. Jb *14:4. 15:14. Mt 13:33-35. Ac √4:12. Being "born of water" is taught in Ezk 36:25, "sprinkle clean water" and being "born of the spirit" is taught in Ezk 36:26, 27, "a new spirit will I put within you," both expressions in Ezekiel pertaining to the spiritual awakening required for Israel to be restored to God's favor in order to receive the promised theocratic kingdom in the land of Israel (Ezk 36:28). Since the three elements "water," "spirit," and promised "kingdom of God" appear together in both passages in precisely the same connection, it is unnecessary to look elsewhere for the proper explanation of Jesus's words. The departure of the spirit to God is never called ascension. This declaration of Jesus does not deny that Enoch and Elijah are in heaven (Ge 5:24. 2 K 2:11) or suggest that the thief on the cross could not be with him in paradise (Lk 23:43), or teach that believers upon their death do not now go immediately to heaven (2 C 5:8). The emphasis in context is that Christ at that time who was from heaven was the only available witness of the heavenly things about which he was speaking (ver. 12); they could appeal to no other. The ground of the title lies in the Davidic covenant (Is +*55:3. Ezk +*37:24). Jn *1:51n. 4:27. 5:27. 13:31. Ps *80:17. Da +*7:13. Mt +*16:27n. 19:28. 26:64. 25:31. Mk 8:38. 13:26. Some authorities omit this phrase, but its retention may be argued for on the ground that these words may have been dropped out of the text at an early date as superfluous or objectionable (Thomas Whitlaw, Commentary on John, p. 69). That this text is weighty and difficult, is on this very account the more certainly genuine (Scrivener, Introduction, vol. 2, p. 360). While missing from some MSS., it is attested to by the early versions. The text figured early in controversy, including the Apolinarian, and in some instances even the orthodox were reluctant to cite it. The modern counterparts of the ancient Socinian and Arian heresies seem to have a particular attraction to this text. Burgon has shown that it was cited many times by the church fathers. The manuscripts which omit this clause are convicted "of the deliberate suppression of one of the most mysterious, yet one of the most glorious, glimpses afforded to us in Scripture of the nature of the Savior, on the side of His Proper Divinity" (Scrivener, p. 361). Burgon, discussing this passage, notes it teaches that "Christ 'came down from heaven' when he became incarnate: and having become incarnate, is said to have 'ascended up to Heaven,' and 'to be in Heaven,' because 'the Son of Man,' who was not in heaven before, by virtue of the hypostatical union was thenceforward evermore 'in heaven' " (Causes of Corruption in the Traditional Text, p. 223). "Hypostatical union" is a term representing Christ as possessing two natures in one person, human and divine. George Hutcheson explains, "The Son of God hath assumed the human nature into so strict a personal union, that what is proper to either nature is ascribed unto the person under whatsoever name; for, saith he, 'the Son of man which is in heaven,' which is not to be understood, as if either his human nature came from heaven (for he is speaking of what still is there) or that his human nature were in every place, but that the same person who is the Son of man according to our nature is in heaven according to his divine nature, and yet but one person still" (Commentary, p. 46). God the Son possesses the incommunicable divine attribute of immensity (Ps 139:7n. Je *23:24n. Mt +*28:19n). Jn 1:18. *7:34. Ro *8:34. He 7:25. √9:24. 1 J 2:1.

Gr. monogenes, S#3439g, Lk +7:12. lit. the only one of a family, unique of its kind. Monogenes, applied to Jesus, expresses the unique and eternal relationship of the Son to the Father. As firstborn does not mean born first (Col 1:15n), neither does only begotten imply a begetting, birth, or origin in time. In His preexistence, Jesus was always uniquely the Son of God (Ps 2:7. Is −*9:6. He 1:8). When used of Christ, only begotten speaks of "unoriginated relationship." Only begotten "indicates that as the Son of God He was the sole representative of the Being and character of the One who sent Him" (Vine, Expository Dictionary, vol. 3, p. 140). It is a word picture which portrays the relationship of the Father to the Son in the terms of a Middle Eastern patriarchal family (Ge √21:12. 22:2, 12, 16. He 11:17). Isaac, termed Abraham's only begotten son (He 11:17), though Abraham had a prior son Ishmael by Hagar (Ge 16:15) and later sons by Keturah (Ge 25:1-4. 1 Ch 1:32, 33), sustains a unique relationship to Abraham as the son of promise (Ga 4:23). The same picture, portrayed in parable (Mt 21:37), emphasizes the unique authority of Jesus as sent by the Father (Jn 20:21. 1 J 4:9), and our responsibility to receive the truth declared by Him (Jn 1:14, 18. 3:18. Mt 17:5). 1 J ◐5:18. Son. ver. 35. Jn +5:25. Is +*9:6. that whosoever. ver. 15. Mt *9:13. 1 T *1:15, 16. Re 22:17. believeth. "In the New Testament, when belief is said to lead to eternal life, as is the case here, the tense expressing continuous action is always used while the tense expressing a single action is never used. The stress is thus placed on a continuous faith rather than on an isolated moment of faith. Never in these passages expressing belief in eternal life is one's eternal security said to be guaranteed by a single, isolated act of faith" (George Allen Turner and Julius R. Mantey, The Gospel According to John, p. 99, who for the final sentence, given as footnote 20, cite E. A. Mills, "Terms for Belief in John's Gospel"; thesis in Asbury Theological Seminary, 1952). The use of "should" confuses some English readers here because the English word "should" connotes a degree of doubtfulness, as if the text said "should not perish, but maybe he will." The Greek text contains no such connotation here; "should" has no directly corresponding equivalent word in the underlying Greek text, but is used in rendering the verb "perish," to represent the subjunctive mood (aorist tense, middle voice, third person singular) of the original. The subjunctive mood in Greek does not express, as in English, doubtfulness or "conditions contrary to fact," and can be used, in fact, in the strongest possible antithesis to doubtfulness in strong denial (subjunctive aorist with ou mee), as in He 13:5; Mt 5:18; Mk 14:25. JOHN 4

Jesus leaves Judea, 1-3. In the absence of his disciples, he discourses with a Samaritan woman concerning the water of life, 4-15; brings her sins to remembrance, 16-19; shows her the nature of acceptable worship, 20-24; and declares himself to be the Messiah, 25, 26. The disciples return and are surprised to see him thus employed, 27. The woman goes to inform her neighbors and induces them to come and hear him, 28-30. Jesus shows his disciples his delight in his Father's work and the blessed harvest about to be reaped by them, with reference to the Samaritans coming to him, 31-38. The Samaritans believe in him, and he continues among them for two days, 39-42. He returns to Cana and heals a nobleman's son who lies sick at Capernaum, 43-54.

He states that it is situated about one-third of an hour, or about a mile, east of Naplosa, the ancient Sychar; Mr. Buckingham says it is called Beer Samareea, or the well of Samaria, and "stands at the commencement of the round vale which is thought to be the parcel of ground bought by Jacob, and which, like the narrow valley east of Nablous, is rich and fertile. The mouth of the well itself had an arched or vaulted building over it; and the only passage down to it at this moment is by a small hole in the roof." From their appearance, and the number of them, it was quite evident that a practice of keeping water in large pots, each holding from eighteen to twenty-seven gallons, was once common in the country" (compare the account of the water pots, Jn 2:6). JOHN 5

Jesus goes up to Jerusalem, and at the pool of Bethesda on the Sabbath day heals one who had been diseased thirty-eight years; he orders him to carry his bed, 1-9. The Jews demand of the man, Who ordered him to carry his bed? Jesus finds him at the temple and warns him to sin no more; he informs the Jews that Jesus has healed him, 10-15. They persecute Jesus, 16. He defends himself, asserting his personal and mediatorial dignity and authority in the most explicit and energetic language, 17-32, appealing to the testimony of John, 33-35; to his own miracles, 36; to the testimony of God by a voice from heaven, 37, 38, and to the Scriptures, 39, 40. He exposes their unbelief, ambition, and ungodliness; and shows that in disbelieving him, they disbelieved Moses also, 41-47.

Maundrell states, that "it is 120 paces long, and forty broad, and at least eight deep, but void of water. At its west end it discovers some old arches, now dammed up. These some will have to be the porches, in which sat that multitude of lame, halt, and blind. But it is not likely, for instead of five, there are but three."

(4) It took place only at one particular time. (5) As the healing was effected by immersion, it must have been instantaneous; it was never failing in its effects. At no point does Jesus in the following discourse deny the inference drawn by the Jews but emphatically supports his claim to equality with God in his nature (ver. 18) by claiming equality in power and works (ver. 19, 20), in resurrection power (ver. 21), in judgment (ver. 22), in honor (ver. √23), in giving eternal life (ver. 24, 25), in self-existent life (ver. 26), in power over death and eternal destiny (ver. 28, 29), in absolute justice (ver. 30), supported by the witness of John (ver. 33), his own works (ver. 36), the Father (ver. 37, 38), and the Scriptures (ver. 39). Clearly their inference was correct, unlike modern day Arians who refuse to acknowledge what the words must mean. To suggest "John is describing what the unbelieving Jews incorrectly thought Jesus meant, that he was 'making himself equal with God,'" and that "This is evident from the fact that they also incorrectly accused Jesus of breaking the Sabbath" (The Watchtower, vol. 105, No. 3, February 1, 1984, p. 6) is to deduce from this passage the very opposite of what it says, in the effort to bolster the faulty argument "Why do we not find opposing Jews attacking the doctrine that to them would have been abhorrent?" The Jews, of course, did attack Jesus, seeking to kill him (Jn 5:18. 10:30-33) for this very doctrine. "For the Jews...it would have been blasphemous to suggest that Christ was equal to God as the second person of the Trinity" (The Watchtower, p. 6). In John 10:33, blasphemy is the very charge leveled at Jesus by the Jews: upon what other scriptural grounds could they justify stoning him? Clearly Jesus said what he meant, and the Jews correctly understood him. If not, why did not Jesus simply deny their accusation, and correct their alleged misunderstanding? Jn 10:33. 19:7. equal. Not "a son of man," for the lack of the Greek article before "son" does not make "son" indefinite or qualitative, but is an instance of the anarthrous construction whereby nouns or pronouns which occur before the verb do not have the article (see Note on Mt 27:54 and Jn 1:1). 39. Search. *S#2045g. Jn 5:39. 7:52. Ro 8:27. 1 C 2:10. 1 P 1:11. Re 2:23. The Greek form for "search" may be indicative, a statement of fact, and so rendered "Ye search," as in many modern translations, or it may be imperative, a command, as in the A.V., "Search." Robertson thinks the following words, "ye think," which are indicative, favor taking the verb as indicative, not imperative. Alford favors taking the verb as an imperative, because of the preceding context, and its initial position in the sentence. The Companion Bible notes that "the indicative never commences a sentence without the pronoun or some other word, while the imperative is so used." For the same Greek construction see Jn 14:11, "Believe me..."; Jn 15:20, "Remember the word..." This Greek word for "search" occurs in the Septuagint (LXX), the Greek translation of the Old Testament, in the following places: Ge 31:33, 35, 37. 44:12. Dt 13:14. Jg 6:29. 2 S 10:3. 1 K 20:6. 2 K 10:23. Pr 20:27. Je 27 (50):26. Jl 1:7. The word is defined "to seek out, trace; used of a lion who 'scours the plains and traces the footsteps of the man who had robbed him,' Homer, Iliad, xviii. 321; used of dogs tracing their game by the foot, Homer, Odyssey, xix. 436. Hence, to track, trace, investigate" (Bullinger, Critical Lexicon and Concordance, p. 672). The imperative should be adopted here; the Jews did not search, but merely read the Scriptures, as so many Christians today. Had they searched diligently, and believed, they would have accepted the claims of Jesus. Lessening the force of Christ's statement by taking it as an indicative rather than imperative seems to detract from the Bible's teaching regarding itself, that we are to search the Scriptures, not merely read them. Some modern translations appear to weaken the force of a number of texts which contain the Bible's teaching about itself at several critical points, particularly here, John 8:31, and 2 T 3:16. (A) Search the Scriptures, (B) For in them ye think ye have eternal life. (A) And they are they which testify of me: (B) And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. In the first and third members (A and A), we have the Scriptures; while in the second and fourth (B and B, the Epicrisis), we have the action and conduct of those who possessed them. in them. 1 C 15:2. 1 Th √2:13. 2 T √3:15. Ja *1:18. 1 P *1:23. ye think. Gr. dokeo, S#1380g, Mt 3:9. Robertson cites Bernard who believes this word in John "always indicates a mistaken opinion (Jn 5:45. 11:13, 31. 13:29. 16:20. 20:15)" (Word Pictures, vol. 5, p. 92). The analogy of Scripture, however, flatly contradicts this position and forbids taking this as the meaning here, however correct it may be for the other passages cited, for Scripture elsewhere teaches that we are born again through the instrumentality of the written word of God (2 T √3:15. Ja 1:18. 1 P 1:23). The Pharisees rightly believed that "in them" they had eternal life, but as Jesus elsewhere states, they knew not the Scriptures nor the power of God (Mk 12:24), made them void by their traditions (Mk 7:7-9), and failed to believe them (Jn 5:46. JOHN 6

Jesus feeds five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes, 1-14. He withdraws from the multitudes, who purpose to make him king, 15. His disciples put to sea without him and meet with a storm, but he comes to them walking on the sea, 16-21. Being followed to Capernaum by multitudes, he reproves their carnal motives even in their diligence about religion; and requires faith in him, 22-29. They demand a sign, like that of the manna, and he speaks copiously of himself as the Bread of Life and of living by faith in him, 30-59. Many are offended and forsake him, 60-66. Peter, in the name of the Twelve, professes steadfast faith in him as "the Son of God;" but Jesus pronounces one of them to be a devil, 67-71.

It is still called Tabaria, or Tabbareeah by the natives, is situated close to the edge of the lake, has tolerably high but ill-built walls on three of its sides, flanked with circular towers and is of nearly a quadrangular form, according to Pococke, containing a population estimated at from 2000 to 4000 souls. This is not a reference to the Lord's Supper, for that had not yet been instituted, and these words in their context could not possibly have been understood to have any reference to it by the original hearers. This is an idiom which signifies except we feed on Christ in our hearts and partake of his life (for the blood is the life), we have no life in us. Careful reference to verses 47 and 40 with verses 53 and 54 will show that believing on Christ is exactly the same thing as eating and drinking of his flesh and blood (B826, 827). ver. 51, 55. "Last day" is an idiom in John for "the age to come," that age when the Messiah will reign, including the Millennium and the eternal ages which follow. Scripture recognizes but two ages (not seven dispensations, helpful though such humanly devised distinctions may be): "this age," and "the age to come," Mt 12:32. Mk 10:30. Lk 18:30. Ro 8:38. 1 C 3:22. Ep 1:21. He 1:2. For "this age," see Jn 9:39. Mt 12:32. 13:22. Mk 4:19. 10:30. Lk 1:70. 16:8. 20:34. Ro 12:2. 1 C 1:20. 2:6, 8. 2 C 4:4. Ga 1:4. Ep 2:2. 1 T 6:17. 2 T 4:10. T 2:12. For "the age to come" see Mt 12:32. 13:39, 40, 49. +*24:3. 28:20. Mk 3:29. 10:30. Lk 18:30. 20:35. 1 C 15:23. T 2:13. He 2:5. 6:5. "This age" is sometimes represented, for rhetorical effect, as composed of a number of lesser ages or cycles (1 C 2:7. See also Ro 16:25. Ep 3:9. Col 1:26. T 1:2), using the plural form. The plural form is also used for "the age to come," Ro 1:25. 9:5. 11:36. 16:27. 2 C 11:31. Ph 4:20. Ga 1:5. 1 T 1:17. Re 1:6, 18. 4:9, 10. 5:13. 7:12, etc. Since the word aion, or age, in Scripture may denote either the present finite age, or the future endless age, to determine the meaning of aionios, "eternal," "for ever," "everlasting," it is necessary first to determine to which age, "this age," or "the age to come," the thing exists to which "everlasting" is applied. Onesimus, as a slave, existed in the world of time, and when he is called an aionion or "everlasting" servant (Phm 15), the term is used in a finite sense, which ends when the life in this world ends. God is a being which exists in the infinite aion and is therefore aionios (eternal) in the endless signification of the term. Since the spirits of angels and men exist in the future aion as well as the present one, they also are "eternal" in the infinite sense. If anything belongs solely to the present age, it is aionion or "everlasting" in the limited sense; if it belongs to the future age, or aion, it is aionion or "everlasting" in the infinite or unlimited sense. If, therefore, the punishment of the wicked occurs in the present aion, it is aionion in the sense of temporal; but if it occurs in the future aion, it is aionion in the sense of endless. The adjective "eternal" or "for ever" takes its meaning from its noun. The same distinction of two ages, "this age," which is finite, and "the age to come," which is infinite or endless, holds for the Old Testament. "For ever," applied to things of this age, has the sense of perpetual (Ex 21:6. Le 16:34. 1 S 27:12n. 1 Ch *28:4. Ps +*24:9n. Ec ?1:4), in the limited sense. But otherwise, and this constitutes the majority of instances, "for ever" is used in an unlimited sense, whenever it pertains to the "age to come" (see Shedd, The Doctrine of Endless Punishment, pp. 79-88). Consult the note at Mt 24:3 on "end," Gr. sunteleia, and it will be understood that the "end" of the world or age mentioned there corresponds to the end of this present finite age, and corresponds to the beginning of the infinite age, or "age to come," sunteleia signifying the conjunction of the two ages, the finite and the infinite.

JOHN 7

Jesus, when counselled by his unbelieving brethren to show himself at Jerusalem at the Feast of Tabernacles, assigning his reason, refuses to accompany them; but afterwards goes up privately, 1-10. The Jews seek him and form different opinions of him, 11-13. He teaches in the temple, declares that his doctrine is of God, and answers objections, 14-29. Some seek to take him, others believe, and Pharisees send officers to apprehend him, 30-32. He foretells his departure to the Father, when the Jews would in vain seek him, 33-36. He invites every one who is thirsty, to come to him and drink, referring to the Holy Spirit, which would be given to believers, 37-39. Divers opinions of him, 40-44. The officers, struck with his discourse, return without him, 45, 46. The Pharisees scornfully reproach them, the common people, and Nicodemus who took his part, 47-52. They are disconcerted, and separate, 53.

JOHN 8

Jesus teaches at the temple, 1, 2. The Pharisees lay a snare for him in respect of a woman taken in adultery, but he turns it to their confusion and warns the woman to sin no more, 3-11. He declares himself to be the Light of the world, 12; justifies his doctrine, shows that his Father bore witness to him, and predicts the doom of unbelievers, 13-29. Many believe, whom he exhorts "to continue in his word;" promising them liberty by the knowledge of the truth, 30-32. He refutes the cavils and detects the vain-confidence of the Jews who opposed him, showing that they are the slaves of sin and the children of the devil, 33-47. Being reviled, as a Samaritan and possessed, he refutes the charge, promises life to believers, asserts his dignity, and adds, "Before Abraham was, I AM," 48-58. He withdraws from those who attempt to stone him, 59.

3. scribes and Pharisees. ver. 13. Jn +1:24. brought. The genuineness of the passage contained in the first eleven verses of this chapter is much controverted, as it is wanting in several MSS. and ancient versions, and is found with considerable variations in those in which it is retained. It is found, however, in the greater part of the MSS. extant of various recensions; and the learned Mr. Nolan (On the integrity of the Greek Vulgate, p. 37) has shown it to be probable that it was omitted for certain reasons by Eusebius in that edition of the Greek Testament which he was commanded by Constantine to prepare for public use; likewise in subsequent editions under the influence of his name and authority. The subject of the story, says that eminent critic, forms as convincing a proof of its genuineness, as it does in the subversion of the contrary notion, that it is an interpolation. There could be no possible inducement for fabricating such a passage, while there is an obvious motive for removing it from the canon. It has, besides internal evidence of authenticity, in the testimony of the Vulgate, in which it is uniformly found; and external, in the express acknowledgement of its genuineness by St. Chrysostome, St. Jerome, St. Augustine, and St. Ambrose. St. Augustine has specified the reason of its having been withdrawn from the text of the Evangelist. Add to this, that the plain and simple style is that of the Evangelist; and that every circumstance is completely in character; exactly what might be expected from the scribes and Pharisees, and from our Lord; while his answer, though perfectly suited to the purpose, would scarcely have ever been thought of by human ingenuity. taken. Nu 5:13. in the midst. Mt 14:6. That our Lord by this expression asserted his divinity and eternal existence as the great I AM, appears evident from the use of the present tense, instead of the preter, from its being in answer to the Jews, who inquired whether he had seen Abraham, and from its being thus understood by the multitude, who were exasperated at it to such a degree that they took up stones to stone him. The ancient Jews not only believed that the Messiah was superior to and Lord of all the patriarchs, even of angels (see Yalkut Simeoni on Is 52:13. Bereshith Rabba on Ge 28:10. Zohar, Gen. fol. 88), but that his celestial nature existed with God, from whom it emanated before the Creation (Netzach Israel, c. 35, fol. 38), and that creation was effected by his ministry (Zohar, l. fol. 128, on Ge 49:11). JOHN 9

Jesus gives sight to one who was born blind, 1-7. The man shows his inquiring neighbors by what means his eyes were opened, 8-12. He is brought to the Pharisees, who strictly examine both him and his parents, 13-23. They are offended at him for contending that Jesus is a prophet and disdainfully excommunicate him, 24-34. Jesus makes himself known to him as "the Son of God;" he believes in him and worships him, 35-38. Christ declares the design of his coming to be that the blind might see and the seeing be made blind; with reference to the miracle and to the proud and willful blindness of the Pharisees, 39-41.

So in Bammidbar Rabba, sec. 15, fol. 229.1, "The Israelites said to God, O Lord of the universe, thou commandest us to light lamps to thee, yet thou art the light of the world." It was also a title of the Messiah (see Is 49:6. 60:1), and in a remarkable passage of Yalkut Rubeni, fol. 6, it is said on Ge 1:4, "From this we learn, that the holy and blessed God saw the light of the Messiah, and his works, before the world was created; and reserved it for the Messiah, and his generation, under the throne of his glory. Satan said to the holy and blessed God, For whom doest thou reserve that light which is under the throne of thy glory? God answered, For him who shall subdue thee, and overwhelm thee with confusion. Satan rejoined, Lord of the universe, show that person to me. God said, Come, and see him. This was the effect of well-directed surgery: that performed by Christ was wholly a miracle, effected by the power of God. The simple means employed could have had no effect in this case, and were merely employed as symbols (2 K +*13:17n. 20:7n). the world. Gr. aion, Mt +6:13. Jb 20:4. Is 64:4. Lk 1:70. Re 16:18.

True shepherds enter in by the door of the sheepfold, are acknowledged by the sheep, and go before them; being thus distinguished from dishonest and corrupt teachers, 1-8. Christ is the Door, and "the good Shepherd, who lays down his life for the sheep," 9-18. Divers opinions are held concerning him, 19-21. He proves his mission by his works; shows the character of his sheep, to whom "he gives eternal life, neither shall any pluck them out of his hands;" and that "he and the Father are one," 22-30. The Jews attempt to stone him as a blasphemer, but he justifies his doctrine and escapes from them, 31-39. He goes beyond Jordan, where many believe on him, 40-42.

The figure is used, when, by the addition of the time, something explanatory is given which helps to the understanding of what is said, supplies some important fact or implies some extra lesson. Here, this brief description of time is intended to convey to us a sense of the humiliation and rejection of the Lord Jesus. The next verse tells how he "walked in Solomon's porch," on the bleak summit of Mount Moriah, to keep himself warm; no one asking him to house or inviting him even into such of the temple chambers as had fires in them. Jn 18:18. For other instances of this figure see Mt 11:25, 26. Mk 6:48. Ac 2:15. 10:3, 9.

When Jesus asked upon what grounds they were about to stone him, their unequivocal answer was for blasphemy, explained in the very next verse, "because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God." As in the other two cases where the Jews were about to stone Jesus (Jn 5:18. 8:59), Jesus did not deny the correctness of their understanding of his claims. The Jews, therefore, correctly understood Christ's claim to be deity, and on this basis they charged him with blasphemy. This proves that Jesus himself asserted his own deity and equality with God the Father (see Jn 5:18n). At John 5:18 the assertion that Jesus made himself "equal with God" is John's own assertion under divine inspiration, not merely his report of the understanding of the Jews.

Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary, is sick, 1, 2. They send to Jesus, who, declaring his "sickness not unto death, but for the glory of God," abides two days where he is, 3-6. He informs the disciples that Lazarus is dead, and intimating that he would raise him to life, proposes going to him. The disciples, fearing the Jews, express their surprise but resolve to accompany him, 7-16. Jesus arrives at Bethany, after Lazarus has been dead four days, 17, 18. He assures Martha that her brother shall rise again and requires her to believe that he is the "Resurrection and the Life;" she confesses her faith in him as "the Christ, the Son of God," 19-27. She calls Mary, who comes with her, 28-31. Jesus, sympathizing with the mourners, "groans in spirit" and "weeps;" the remarks of the Jews on the occasion, 32-37. He comes to the grave, appeals to God as his Father who sent him, and calls Lazarus out of the grave, 38-44. Many Jews believe, but some inform the Pharisees, 45, 46. They hold a council; and concur with Caiaphas, who instigates them to put Jesus to death; while, as high priest, Caiaphas was led, beyond his intention, to prophesy concerning the gracious intention and extensive efficacy of his death, 47-53. Jesus retires from places of public resort, 54. Before the Passover, the Jews inquire about him, the rulers having given orders to apprehend him, 55-57.

1. Now. The raising of Lazarus from the dead, being a work of Christ beyond greatest measure, the most stupendous of all he had hitherto performed, and beyond all others calculated to evince his divine majesty, was therefore purposely recorded by the Evangelist John while it was omitted by the other Evangelists; probably, as Grotius supposes, because they wrote their histories during the life of Lazarus and did not mention him for fear of exciting the malice of the Jews against him. We find from Jn 12:10 that they sought to put him to death, that our Lord might not have such a monument of his power and goodness remaining in the land. was sick. ver. 3, 6. It is as though He had said, "I am the resurrection—yea, the one that is to eternal life; he that believeth on me, though he die, he shall live again; and everyone who thus liveth again in resurrection and believeth (again Hendiadys, every believer who lives again in resurrection), shall in no wise die again for ever" (Jn 11:25, 26). No! he shall rise again in the first resurrection, and shall by no means die "the second death." That shall have no power over such (EWB, Apocalypse, p. 621). the life. ƒ121E1, Ge +25:23. In reply to skeptical objections, it is sufficient to observe that he who could raise Lazarus from the dead could, with a much less exertion of power, have so loosened or removed the bandages of his feet and legs as to have rendered it practical for him to come forth. JOHN 12

Jesus is entertained at Bethany, 1, 2. Mary anoints his feet, 3; Judas, from dishonest motives, objects, but Jesus vindicates her, 4-8. The people resort to him on account of Lazarus, and the rulers consult about putting Lazarus also to death, 9-11. Jesus enters Jerusalem as in triumph, riding on an ass, to the extreme indignation of the Pharisees, 12-19. Certain Greeks desire to see him, 20-22. He predicts his own death and its blessed effects, 23-26. Being troubled in spirit, he resigns to the Father, prays, and is answered by a voice from heaven, 27, 28. He signifies the manner of his death, 29-34; and exhorts the people to improve their present advantages, 35, 36. The unbelief of the Jews shown to be a fulfilment of Isaiah's prophecy, 37-41. Many rulers believe but dare not confess him, 42, 43. He further warns the people not to reject him, 44-50.

The root is from three to twelve inches long, fibrous, sending up above the earth between thirty and forty ears or spikes, from which it has its name; stem, lower part perennial, upper part herbaceous, sub-erect, simple, from six to twelve inches long; leaves, entire, smooth, fourfold, the inner radical pair petioled and cordate, the rest sessile and lanceo-
